xxvi. Hymns. The hymns found in the Supplement at the end of the Psalms in the old Prayer Books, although often called “the Prayer Book hymns,” are, strictly speaking, not so. These hymns are noted under New Version, and Old Version in Various.

The whole Prayer Book was rendered into Latin Verse by Randolph Gilpin, as:—

Liturgica Sacra; curru Thesbitus, zeli inculpabilis vehiculo deportata et viâ devotivis Regiâ deducta à Rand. Gilpin Sacerd. vel, opsonia Spiritualitybus omnibus verè Christianis etiâ pueris degustanda. Anno Dom. 1657.

Another work which deals with every portion of the Prayer Book from the “Sentences” to “The Fifth of November,” is:—

A Companion to the Book of Common Prayer, Being a Compilation of Psalms and Hymns on the Collects, Epistles, Gospels; and on the Fasts, Festivals, and Rites of the United Church of England and Ireland, London: Smith, Elder & Co. 1832.

This work was compiled by a lady, and contains about 400 hymns. [J. J.]

Prayer is the breath of God in man. B. Beddome. [Prayer.] This appeared in Robert Hall’s posthumous ed. of Beddome’s Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 405, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed “Importance of Prayer.” It was added to the 27th ed. of Rippon’s Sel., 1827, No. 353 (Pt. i.), and from thence has passed into several collections, sometimes dated 1787 (Rippon’s 1st ed.) in error, and at other times with the opening line changed to “Prayer is the Spirit of our God.” The hymn “When God inclines the heart to pray;” in Spurgeon’s O. O. H. Bk., 1866, is composed of st. iv., v. of the original. [J. J.]

Prayer is the soul’s sincere desire. J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] This hymn was written in 1818, at the request of the Rev. E. Bickersteth, for his Treatise on Prayer. It was first printed in 1818, together with three other hymns by Montgomery on Prayer (“Thou, God, art a consuming fire,” “Lord, teach us how to pray aright,” and “What shall we ask of God in prayer?”), on a broadsheet, for use in the Sunday Schools of Sheffield (Winco-bank Hall Library). In 1819 it was published simultaneously in Bickersteth’s Treatise on Prayer and the 8th ed. of Cotterill’s Sel., No. 278. Cotterill’s text is that of the broadsheet, whilst Bickersteth’s is slightly different, as in st. v. l. 4, “And cry ‘Behold,’” &c., changed to “And say ‘Behold,’” &c., and st. vi., which reads in each:—

Cotterill. “In prayer on earth the saints are one,
 In word, and deed, and mind;
 When with the Father and His Son
 Sweet fellowship they find.”

Bickersteth. “The saints in prayer appear as one,
 In word, and deed, and mind,
 When, with the Father, and the Son,
 Their fellowship they find.”

In his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 480, Montgomery repeated the text as in Bickersteth, with the change in st. vii. l. 4 of “For sinners intercedes,” into “For mourners intercedes.” In his private copy of the Christian Psalmist Montgomery marked st. iv. and v. to be transposed in case of a reprint, and this was carried into effect in his Original Hys., 1853, No. 62. The altered line, st. vii. l. 4, is also restored to read “For sinners intercedes.” In addition to the extensive use of the hymn in its full form, it is also abbreviated. Sometimes the abbreviated texts begin with the first stanza, and at other times with “Prayer is the Christian’s vital breath,” or with “Prayer is the contrite sinner’s voice.” [J. J.]

Precious Bible! what a treasure. J. Newton. [Holy Scriptures.] Pub. in his Twenty Six Letters, &c. By Omicron, 1774, in 6 st. of 6 l., and headed, “The Word of God more precious than Gold.” It was repeated in R. Conyers’s Coll., 1774, No. 276, and again in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 63. It is found in a few modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Precious promise God hath given. N. Niles. [The Divine Guide.] Concerning this hymn and its writer, S. W. Duffield says in his English Hymns, 1886, p. 461:—

“This well-known ‘Moody and Sankey’ hymn was written by Mr. Nathaniel Niles, a resident of Morristown, New Jersey, and, at that time, a lawyer in New York City. Mr. Niles was born at South Kingston, Rhode Island, September 15th, 1835. He composed these verses on the margin of a newspaper in the railway car while on his way to business.”

The hymn was pub. in The Episcopalian; and again in P. Bliss’s Gospel Songs, 1874, with music by Bliss. The text and music in I. D. Sankey’s Sacred S. and Solos, are from the Gospel Songs. [J. J.]

Preis, Lob, Ehr, Ruhm, Dank, Kraft und Macht. [Glory to the Lamb.] In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 591, in 7 st. of 6 l., repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1028. It is tr. as, “Thanksgiving, honour, praise and might,” as No. 628 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, and No. 653 in the ed. of 1886. [J. M.]

Preiswerk, Samuel, s. of Alexander Preiswerk, pastor at Rümelingen, in the canton of Basel, was b. at Rümelingen, Sept. 19, 1799. After studying at the Universities of Basel, Tübingen, and Erlangen, he was for some time curate in charge at Benken, in the canton of Basel. In 1824 he was appointed preacher at the Basel Orphanage, and in 1829 tutor of Hebrew at the Basel mission house. In 1830 he was chosen as pastor of Muttentz, near Basel, but on the outbreak of the Revolution of 1832 had to leave. After being from 1834 to 1837 professor of Old Testament Exegesis and Oriental languages in the Evangelical Theological Institution at Geneva, he returned to Basel, where he was instituted, in 1843, as pastor of St. Leonard’s church, and in 1859 as antistes, or highest dignity in the Cathedral. He d. at Basel, Jan. 13, 1871

(O. Kraus, 1879, p. 400; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxvi. 552, &c.).

Preiswerk was a distinguished preacher. He was one of the editors of the Basel G. B., 1854. His hymns were written at various times, generally to be used at Mission and other meetings in which he was to take part. Sixteen were included in a collection edited by two of his friends and pub. at Basel, 1844, as the Evangelischer Lieder Kranz (271 hymns old and new). Nine of his hymns are in Knapp's Ev. L. S., ed. 1850. The only one tr. into English is:—

Das ist der Gemeine Stärke. Missions. In 1844, as above, No. 98, p. 124, in 5 st. of 4 l. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 1160 (1865, No. 1200). Tr. as:—

Hark, the Church proclaims her honour. In full by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd ser., 1858, p. 59, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 104 (she misquotes the first line as Dies ist der Gemeinde Stärke). Repeated in the Ps. & Hys., Bedford, 1859, and the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. [J. M.]

Prentiss, Elizabeth, née Payson, youngest daughter of Dr. Edward Payson, was b. at Portland, Maine, Oct. 26, 1818; married to George Lewis Prentiss, D.D., then at Bedford, Massachusetts, April, 1845; and d. at Dorset, Vermont, Aug. 13, 1878. Her Life and Letters by her husband appeared some time after. Dr. Prentiss removed from Bedford to New York in 1851, and was appointed Professor of Pastoral Theology at Union Seminary, New York, 1873. Mrs. Prentiss's works include The Flower of the Family; Stepping Heavenward, 1869; and Religious Poems, 1873. Of her hymns the two following are most widely known:—

1. As on a vast eternal shore. Thanksgiving. Contributed to Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

2. More love to Thee, O Christ. More Love to Christ desired. Written in 1869, and first printed on a fly-sheet; then in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872. [F. M. B.]

Presbyterian Hymnody, English.

Presbyterianism in England presents in its history four distinct and sharply defined periods, and in all of these it has been directly associated with English hymnody.

i. It was the form of religion "as by law established" in England from 1647 to 1652, a period of five years. It was originally intended to institute a Synod in each county, and a General Assembly for the whole kingdom. The usurpation of Cromwell, however, and the interference of the army in ecclesiastical as well as in civil affairs, prevented the execution of this design, and it was only in London and Lancashire that Synods were formed. In Lancashire there were nine Presbyteries, and several must have been formed in the neighbouring counties. The Presbyteries of Manchester and Newcastle-on-Tyne were established in 1646 and 1648, under the ordinance of Parliament; and the first meeting of the Synod of Lancashire was held in 1649.

The Metrical Psalms, which were in use in the Presbyterian Churches during this period were those of Francis Rous (q.v.), Speaker of the House of Commons, and one of the lay deputies to the Westminster Assembly. [See Psalters, English, § XI.]

ii. The overthrow of Presbyterianism was followed by a general decline. Having ceased to meet in Presbytery, many of the ministers, in the face of the Calvinism of the Westminster standards, became tinged with Arianism which ultimately developed into Socinianism. A considerable number of congregations in various parts of the country, especially in the north, adhered to the doctrine formulated in those documents; others became Congregationalists; but a considerable number also were influenced by their Arian pastors. Thus in the course of 150 years the once rigidly orthodox Church became openly Unitarian.

During this period, the Scottish Psalter of 1650 was in use amongst the congregations throughout England.

iii. In 1836 a new era dawned. A convention of ministers and elders of the remaining orthodox Presbyterians was held at Manchester, when they agreed to form themselves into a Synod, in accordance with the recommendation of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and styled the same "The Presbyterian Church in England." For forty years its progress was rapid and encouraging. The Home Mission Committee succeeded in establishing preaching stations in many of the leading towns and cities, especially in Liverpool, Newcastle, Manchester, and London, which became self-supporting. Great activity was also shown in Foreign Mission work, especially in China and India.

For a few years the reconstructed body used the Psalter of 1650 as before; but in 1847 a committee was appointed to prepare a hymn-book for its use, which was pub. as Paraphrases & Hys., &c., 1857. In 1867 the late Rev. Dr. Hamilton, of Regent Square Church, London, laid upon the table of the Synod Psalms and Hymns for Divine Worship. This book consisted of 521 hymns and versions of Psalms, together with paraphrases of Scripture. It was carefully edited, and set to music of a high order, the latter being edited by Dr. Rimbault. It was accompanied by a Preface setting forth its scope and design, and embodying an explanation of its contents. As a hymnal it soon took a foremost position, and was almost universally adopted by the congregations of the body in England, and also by many congregations of Presbyterians in the British Colonies, especially in Australia, New Zealand, and at the Cape.

iv. In 1876 a great impetus was given to Presbyterianism in England by the union which then took place between the Presbyterian Church in England, and nearly 100 congregations belonging to the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, located throughout England, and many of which date their origin from the 18th century. This united body is now known as the "Presbyterian Church of England."

At the Union in 1876 the United Presbyterian section continued to use the hymnal which had been recently introduced by the Mother Church in Scotland—The Presbyterian Hymnal. [See Scottish Hymnody], and the Presbyterian Church in England congregations, mainly, the Psalms and Hymns for Divine Worship of 1867. A feeling, however, arose that the time had come when a new hymnal, enriched with the fruits of more recent hymnody, should be prepared. A committee was accordingly appointed by the Synod of 1880, with instructions to consider what should be done with a view not only to enrich the materials for the service of song in the sanctuary, but to bring the congregations of the Church, as far as possible, into unison in the matter. Under the convenership of the Rev. W. Rigby Murray, Brunswick Street Church, Manchester, that committee produced in 1882 the present hymnal of the "Presbyterian Church of England," Church Praise. (Lond., Nisbet & Co.). It contains 535 hymns and 19 doxologies, arranged in 15 sections, as i. "The Holy Trinity"; ii. "The Lord Jesus Christ"; iii. "The Holy Spirit"; iv. "The Gospel," &c. In the text of the hymns the originals have been followed in every instance except where a divergence seemed to exist in doctrine from that of the Presbyterian Church. The section for the young forms a prominent feature, 63 hymns being supplied for the purpose of adapting the collection for Sunday Schools and Children's Services. The music has been revised by Dr. E. J. Hopkins, and is of a high order. The expression marks throughout the collection are by the Rev. W. Rigby Murray.

v. Great progress has been made in Psalmody in the Presbyterian Church of England within the past twenty years. The use of instrumental music, strictly forbidden till 1870, has become general. The practice of chanting and the use of anthems in public worship, are also spreading rapidly. Sir Herbert Oakeley's Bible Psalter is in use in a considerable number of congregations; and the Rev. W. Rigby Murray (Editor of Church Praise, and School Praise), has published (1886) The Revised Psalter, being the first attempt to adapt the Revised Version of the Holy Scriptures to chant music.

vi. The only hymn-writer of note belonging to the Presbyterian Church of England is the late J. D. Burns, M.A., sometime minister at Hampstead, who died in 1864. [See Burns, J. D.] [W. R. M.]

Prichard, Vicard, M.A., younger brother of Rhys Prichard, was an eminent Welsh poet and the author of the well-known book called Canwyll y Cymry. He was b. at Llanymddyfn, Carmarthenshire, about 1579. His father was the owner of large property in the neighbourhood. He was educated at Jesus College, Oxford, where he took his degree in June, 1602, having been previously ordained Priest on the 25th of April in that year by John, Suffragan Bishop of Colchester. In the same year he was presented to the Vicarage of Llandingat, his native parish, in which the town of Llandovery is situated, and whence he was called Vicar of Llandovery. As a preacher he was one of the first of his day, and such was his popularity that when he came to keep residence at St. David's, of which Cathedral he was a Prebendary, he was obliged to keep a moveable pulpit, which was placed in the churchyard, the Cathedral being too small for his congregations. Perceiving the people to be very ignorant, and also much addicted to singing, he turned the substance of his sermons into verse which he gave to his parishioners, and thus originated most of those hymns which had so great an influence over his countrymen. He d. at Llandovery in 1644. When the pious Bishop Bull, who was so charmed with Prichard's character and the unspeakable good done in Wales by his poems, wished to be buried near him, his grave could not be found. [W. G. T.]

Primers and Offices for the Laity.

i. Introduction.—1. The term Primer, in its ritual sense, designates a series of devotional books for the laity, marked by certain general characteristics. The word is found thus as early as Piers Ploughman (before 1360). The earliest known copy is a ms. of the end of the 14th cent. The earliest printed Primer, according to the Sarum Use, is of the year 1494. Its contents are:—

(1) The Kalendar. (2) Sundry Prayers. (3) Matyns of our lady, with pryme and the houres, the houres of the passyon of our lorde, and of the compassyon of our lady. (4) De Profundis for all Crysten soules. (5) Sundry prayers. (6) The fifteen houres of the passyon. (7) Prayers to the Saints. (8) The seven psalmes, fifteen psalmes with the letanye and suffrages. (9) Placcho, dirige and commendacyon. (10) Psalmes of the passyon. (11) The fifteen Oos in Englysche. (12) Sundry prayers.

From this period to 1545 a number of editions of the Sarum Primer are extant. Additions are made to the contents of the volume, which attains its greatest development in the editions of Regnault at Paris, 1526-34 (Rev. Ed. Hoskins). From 1545 there is a break in the Sarum series, but it is resumed in 1551, and in Mary's reign (1554-8). These Sarum Primers are of great interest in regard to the provision of vernacular devotions for the laity in the Roman Church.

2. The Reformation produced another series, which may be divided into three stages: (1) The illicit Primers of the Gospellers, commencing as early as 1530. The earliest extant edition is that known as Marshall's Primer (1534-5). The basis of these is still the Sarum book, but with alterations, omissions (e.g. in some editions, of the Litany and Dirige or Office for the Dead), and explanations in the Reformed sense. (2) The Primers of Henry VIII. and Edward VI. (3) The Revised editions of these, with the Orarium, of Elizabeth.

3. Finally, The 17th cent. (1599-1706) produced a series founded no longer on the Sarum but on the Roman Breviary, for the use of English Roman Catholics.

4. For the purposes of this Dictionary, these groups, with their numerous members, can only be considered with reference to the trs. of the Latin hymns, which they exhibit. As they extend over a lengthened period, they present a variety of renderings, changing with the change of poetical fashion, and are thus well worth attentive study with a view to securing the best representation of the Latin hymns for purposes of worship. They seem, except in a few cases, of which an echo remains in the trs. of this century, to have passed almost into oblivion, even among Roman Catholics.

ii. Sarum Primers.—1. The ms. Primer of Sarum (c. 1400), printed in Mr. Maskell's Monumenta Ritualia (vol. iii.), has prose renderings of the hymns. A ms. at Cambridge (c. 1430) has the memories of the hours in metre. In the Sarum Primers, 1538-41, and 1555-8, not only the hymns for the hours and the memories, but portions of the Dirige (the Office for the Dead), are versified in a rude fashion; more, apparently, as an indication of metre in the original than for singing. Such a verse as this could never have been sung to the tune of "Veni Creator":

"Come holy Goost o Creatour eternal
In our mindes to make visitation:
And fulfil! Thou wyth grace supernall
Our hartes that be of thy creation."

iii. Unauthorized Primers of the Reformation.—Of the early and illicit primers of the Reformation, the primer known as Marshall's, 1535 (reprinted in Three Primers set forth in the reign of Henry VIII., Clarendon Press), is a good type. The hymns for the hours are versified. In metre they are more regular than those of the Sarum series, and more conformed to Latin types. The Latin originals of the Sarum series are rejected; and all hymns to the B. V. M. are omitted. The "Veni Creator" is translated in part, and probably many of the hymns have some Latin source of inspiration, but the feeling and the doctrinal cast is that of Coverdale's Goostly Psalmes and the Gospellers. Bp. Hilsey's Primer (1539), which was drawn up at Thos. Cromwell's command, is based far more on the Sarum series, is similar to it in irregularity of metre, and retains with little modification the addresses to the B. V. M.

iv. Authorized Primers, 1545-1559.—1. The Primer of Henry VIII. (1545), which was reprinted frequently, with increasing modification of the worship of the B. V. M. up to 1553, and then revised under Elizabeth, in 1559, chooses from the Sarum Breviary an entirely new set of hymns, "Jam lucis"; "Ales diei nuntius"; "Consorts paterni luminis"; "Remunerator"; "Aeterna coeli gloria"; "Saluator mundi"; and in two cases, apparently, joins centos from two Latin hymns so as to form a new piece. They are chosen partly for allusions to the hours for which they are fixed, and partly as expressions of sober piety. The trs. are evidently intended to reproduce Latin measures, and are either trochaic or L.M. (The sacred use of L.M. for our hymns springs from the Reformation Primer, as a representative of the Iambic Latin.) The versification is a great advance on the Sarum Primers, and the trs. contain some good verses. The following may serve as a specimen of the sort of verse which might be still enshrined in the Prayer Book if the Latin hymns had then been made part of Matins and Evensong.

"Quench the flames of our debate:
Foul and noisome heat abate;
Grant unto our body health,
To our hearts true peace and wealth."

In the sanction if not the production of this book, Cranmer must have had a hand, and a letter of his (Oct. 7, 1544, Works, p. 412, Parker Society) shows that he had it in his mind to translate the Latin hymns. But the Prayer Book of 1549 has no hymns, except the "Veni Creator" (C.M.), in the Ordinal; nor has that of 1552. And as if the omission in both cases was the result of some change of view, perhaps connected with Calvin's restriction of praise to the Metrical Psalter, the Primer of 1553, which has very little of the distinctive features of the other primers, and is based on the Book of Common Prayer, has no hymns whatever.

2. In connexion with the Primer of Elizabeth, or more accurately with the Orarium (1560), should be mentioned a book called The Hours of Prayer, &c., 1627, by Bp. Cosin; and John Austin's Devotions in the Antient Way of Offices, 1668 [Austin, J.]. Both are framed on the model of the Primers, and have some Latin translations, but most of the pieces are original English hymns [English Hymnody, Early, § III. 10].

v. Roman Primers, 1599-1706. It is probable that some Primer was issued by the Church of Rome in the earlier part of Elizabeth's reign; but for the present an edition of 1599 (Lambeth Lib.) published at Antwerp, with a preface signed R. V. (probably Robert Verstegan) must be considered the first of a new series, founded no longer on the Sarum but on the Roman Breviary. The members of it are the Primer of 1599, reprinted 1604, 1650 and 1658, all at Antwerp; the Primer of 1615, Mechlin (Brit. Mus.), reprinted at St. Omer, 1619, and again (place not given) 1632 (Brit. Mus.); that of 1684, Rouen; 1685, Antwerp; 1687, printed by Henry Hills, London; 1706, no place of publication or name of printer; reprinted in 1717 and 1732.

So far as the general contents of these editions are concerned, it must suffice to say, that they add to the Hours of B. V. M. and the general outline of the Sarum books the Hours of the Cross, and the office of the Holy Ghost. The Antwerp editions are alike in general arrangement; but the 1685 edition adds with other pieces the Rosary "as said in Her Majesty's Chapel at St. James," and the Litany of Our Lady of Loretto. The Rouen book has a different arrangement and six offices, as well as other new matter, not found in the Antwerp editions. The London edition (1687, Savoy Chapel and Brit. Museum) is of great interest as having been published, by the "printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty for his Household and Chapel," at the zenith of James's power. It adds to the contents of the Antwerp books, the Vespers on Sundays and Holydays, the Ordinary of the Mass, and several other devotions. The 1706 edition is similar in contents and arrangement to the Antwerp, 1685.

2. The hymns in this series have lately attracted well-deserved attention. One of the new features of these primers is a selection of "Hymns throughout the year." The Latin originals chosen for translation remain constant in all the edd. (speaking generally), and are, until 1706, Vesper hymns; in 1706, the whole of the Breviary hymns are translated. In the case of the Vesper hymns and those that are incorporated in the offices (say 40) there are consequently four sets of translations from the same originals, changing by easy steps from the Elizabethan freshness of 1599 to the Drydenesque rhetoric of 1706. (The change is the more gradual from the fact, that with some exceptions, especially in 1706, the metres remain the same. In the preface to the reprint of 1604 it is said that "the hymns are so turned into English meeter that they may be soong unto the tunes in Latin;" and these metres, with the exception of the Sapphics, approved themselves in later editions.) A good selection from these trs., printed side by side in pairs, for comparison, in Mr. Orby Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, has made some of these hymns easy of access. One other hymn of 1604 should have been added, the beautiful translation of "Veni Sancte Spiritus" ("Come unto us, Holy Ghost"), of which Mr. Shipley has published the revision of 1685. It is singularly like Caswall's translation, "Holy Spirit, Lord of Light," and the H. A. & M. translation, "Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come," in treatment, and here and there in actual lines.

3. The Primer of 1615 is examined under Drummond, 18 of its hymns being included in the 1711 ed. of Drummond's poetical works.

Mr. Orby Shipley, in the Annus Sanctus, strongly disputes Drummond's claim. (See also Saturday Review, Aug. 23, 1884.) Mr. W. T. Brooke, however, still upholds Drummond's authorship. In the preface to the 1st ed., 1615, the trs. are said to have been the work of "one most skilful in English poëtie."

4. The next known Primer is that of 1684. But in a little book, examined by Mr. W. T. Brooke, entitled Prison Pietie, by Samuel Speed, 1677, there are renderings of "Christe sanctorum decus," in c.m., and the "Dies Irae," and 7 trs. which reappear in the Primer of 1685, relics apparently of some lost Primer. The Primer of 1684 (Rouen) is independent in arrangement of the 1615 (Mechlin) and 1599 (Antwerp), and has additional devotions. The hymns are generally the same as in 1615. But in the additional offices of "The Name of Jesus," and "The Immaculate Conception," there are new hymns. The hymns in the office of the "Blessed Trinity," and of "The Holy Ghost," are also new. In the first of these offices is a good tr. of "Jesu dulcis memoria" (part), in l.m. couplets (Jesu, the very thought of Thee), which is repeated and furnished with additional stanzas, so as to represent the entire hymn, in 1685. The Primer of 1685 has, as has been said, 7 pieces (trs. of "Te Deum"; "Veni Sancte Spiritus"; "Memento salutis Aucto"; "Jesu dulcis memoria"; "Salutis humane Sator"; "Creator alme siderum"; "Salvete Flores"), found in Speed's Prison Pietie, 1677. As Speed's book is quite as much a compilation as an original (e.g. containing pieces from Austin, Quarles, and a variation of Cosin's "Veni Creator"), these pieces are probably copied from some earlier Primer now lost. The "Te Deum" is in the Primer for the first time in metre. The hymns for the office of "The Holy Ghost" are identical with those of 1684. The "Veni Sancte Spiritus," which had come down from 1599, is revised (see Annus Sanctus, Appendix, p. 33, "Come unto us, Holy Ghost"). A few hymns for Holy Days (Martina, St. Joseph, Hermenegild, Venantius, Teresa) are added. The Latin originals are throughout those of the Reformed Roman Breviary of 1632, and the trs. are new. In this Primer the new manner of the Restoration poetry makes itself distinctly felt. The trs. are sometimes unequal, but there are stanzas and some whole pieces of great nervousness and vigour, and its excellence is attested by the large use made of its trs. in the English offices of the 18th cent. The tr. of "Coelestis urbs" ("Jerusalem, celestial place") is a fine one. The Primer of 1687 (London) is, so far as its hymns are concerned, a revision of 1685, with the addition of a few new hymns. The revision extends to the substitution of new stanzas in some cases. Among the new hymns is a tr. of "Dies Irae" ("Day of wrath, that dreadful day"), which appears in this same year (1687) in The Great Sacrifice of the New Law, 8th edition, by James Dymock, but is probably only quoted by him, either from this Primer or some unknown earlier source. The new tr. of "Stabat Mater" ("Under the world-redeeming rood"), is notable as occurring again in the succeeding Primer of 1706, and later Office Books.

5. The Primer of 1706 demands somewhat closer attention. Its place of publication is not stated. In arrangement and contents it recalls the Antwerp series, not the London Primer of 1687. The number of translations it contains is a great advance on preceding Primers. Not the Vesper hymns only but those for Matins and Lauds are translated in the series of hymns for the year; the Breviary hymns are translated entire, together with the "Dies Irae," and "Jesu dulcis memoria;" in all 120 pieces. Of these, the tr. of "Stabat Mater" is from 1687. The "Dies Irae" ("The day of wrath, that dreadful day") was first published in a text that varies from this, in Tate's Miscellanea Sacra (1696, 2nd edition, 1698), and was there ascribed to Lord Roscommon. The tr. of "Veni Creator" ("Creator Spirit, by whose aid") is Dryden's. So also is the tr. of "Ut queant laxis" ("O sylvan Prophet"), the hymn for evensong on St. John Baptist's Day; and the tr. of the "Te Deum" ("Thee, Sovereign God, our grateful accents praise"); both of which were printed by Scott in his Life of Dryden, 1808. These two latter translations are in metres that had not occurred in previous Primers. The tr. "O sylvan Prophet," is one of 11 pieces, chiefly representing the Sapphic originals, which preceding Primers had always dealt with awkwardly, from an attempt to produce some syllabic equivalent of the Latin. The tr. of the "Te Deum" is one of a series of 8 pieces in heroic metre. A third new metre (c.m.) occurs in the tr. of "Ave maris stella," and "Jesu dulcis memoria," which is not found in any known Primer previously, though there are two c.m. trs. in Speed's Prison Pietie, which may belong to some lost edition. A very full selection from this Primer is given in Mr. Orby Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884; and it demands closer analysis than the rest, because both Mr. W. T. Brooke and Mr. Shipley claim a very large proportion of these translations as the work of Dryden. The special question of Dryden's authorship is dealt with under Dryden, John, but one or two general remarks may be best given here.

The claim of Dryden will in great measure depend on the evidence of unity of hand. The natural presumption in the several successive editions of the Primers is that each new set of translations is by a single hand; and in the case of the edition of 1615 this is positively asserted in the preface. But it is not always safe to assume it. Thus the pieces in Speed's Prison Pietie may possibly be older than the other pieces combined with them in 1685. The "Veni Sancte Spiritus" tr. of 1599 is an instance of a piece of older date reproduced (1615) among later ones. More strongly still suggestive of caution is the fact that the trs. of "Stabat Mater" and "Dies Irae," in this edition (1706) had both appeared before; the latter, notwithstanding Mr. Shipley's impeachment, being with little doubt by Lord Roscommon. It may be added that the free way in which the translators of the Primers use up the lines and phrases of their predecessors shows that the idea of plagiarism was not a restraining force with them. (The beautiful tr. of "Jesu dulcis memoria" ("Jesu, the only thought of Thee") is a striking instance of this: it is often simply a reproduction in c.m. of the lines and phrases of the 8-syllable tr. of 1685.) But a very strong presumption of unity of hand arises out of a close study of the Glorias of 1706. Large groups of the Latin originals have an identical Gloria: and this identity is faithfully reproduced in the English Glorias. The Latin Glorias have affinities with each other, and these affinities are constantly maintained in English by reproductions of the same phrases. The English Glorias have also affinities of their own, not found in the Latin. In style they are very like one another; they are quite in keeping in their grandiose phrases with the hymns they close; and certain mannerisms recur (e.g. the use of "equal"). The repetition of common lines, the slight variations of phrase accompanying large repetition, and other economies, are such as a man would naturally practise in the use of his own material, and point very strongly to a common author. The number of pieces, which the Glorias that bear clear family likeness touch, comprises the great bulk of the book; and links, of varying strength, connect most of the remainder with them.

The style of the Primer of 1706 is by no means always superior to that of 1685. It is often less nervous, too rhetorical and too florid. The translations of 1685-7 have consequently remained in at least equal circulation with those during the 18th cent. But as pieces of devotional poetry, the translations of 1706 are often of great merit; and the bold handling, the brilliance of single lines, and the frequent beauty of cadence, look far more like the work of a poet coming fresh to the task, than of a routine translator.

vi. Manual of Prayers, and The Garden of the Soul. Two other devotional books for the laity, which passed through many editions, contain translations of the Latin hymns, viz.: the Manual of Prayers, and The Garden of the Soul; but perhaps in no instance are they independent trs., but transcripts from the Primers or English Offices current at the time of publication. An edition of The Manual, circa 1596, has no hymns: perhaps the Primer of 1599 was the first to introduce translations of the Latin hymns. An edition of 1613 reprints 22 of the translations of the Primer of 1599. Another of 1688 by Henry Hills reprints from the Primer of 1687. Another of 1699 reprints, sometimes revising, from Primers of 1685-7. That of 1733 retains the same Latin originals (28) as 1699, but adopts the translations of the 1706 Primer. The same thing occurs in the ed. of 1750 (Shipley).

The hymns in the various editions of the Garden of the Soul apparently follow the same law, taking their Latin translations from the current edition of the Primer, or in the latter part of the 18th cent. from the editions of Vespers or The Divine Office. This fact is important in its bearing on the question of Dryden's authorship of the 1706 Primer. Under the impression that Bp. Challoner (who improved both the Manual and The Garden of the Soul) selected hymns by Dryden from the editions of 1737 (Garden) and 1750 (Manual), Mr. Shipley has advanced these editions as proofs of Dryden's authorship. But all that Bp. Challoner did, supposing there are editions which he superintended, was to substitute the newest trs. for the previous ones. This, in the case of the Manual, had been done as early as 1733. Dryden's authorship did not determine the choice, and is not attested by it.

vii. Conclusion. The needs of the laity, which were supplied in the 17th cent. by the Primers and The Manual, produced in the 18th translations of the Vesper Office, of the entire Breviary, and of the Missal. But they do not supply many fresh translations of the Latin hymns. The eds. of the Primers of 1685, 1687, and 1706, are drawn on in equal proportions. Sometimes the 1706 in one edition of the Evening Office will make way for the 1687 translations in the next. Sometimes stanzas from 1706 are mixed with stanzas of 1685 (Exx. will be found in the pieces from the Evening Office of 1710 in the Annus Sanctus). Sometimes lines and phrases are freely used up in re-manufactured translations (see Evening Office of 1760); prose translations are substituted for metre; and the old pieces are revised. A few new translations are found (e.g. in the Evening Office of 1748, and in the Divine Office, 4 vols., 1763, which requires translations of the entire Breviary). The Missals do not supply much material; the Latin hymns are sometimes only printed in the original (e.g. in Missal for the Laity, 1803). [H. L. B.]

Primitive Methodist Hymnody. [Methodist Hymnody, § iv.]

Primo Deus coeli globum. The Venerable Bede. [The Creation.] A poem of 112 lines, given by Mone, No. 1, from a ms. of the beginning of the 9th cent., now at Darmstadt, and written in an Irish hand. The title in Mone is "A hymn of the blessed Bede the priest on the work of the six days at the beginning, and on the six ages of the world." Also in Thomasius, ii. p. 429; Migne, vol. 94, p. 621, &c. So far as we can ascertain the full hymn has not been tr. into English; but a cento therefrom, beginning with line 65, "Post facta celsa conditor," was tr. as "God ended all the world's array," by J. M. Neale, and given in the Hymnal N., 1854. This was repeated, abridged, and beginning, "Christ's servants while they dwell below," in Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1864. [W. A. S.]

Primo dierum omnium. St. Gregory the Great. [Sunday. Morning.] This is one of the eight hymns which the Benedictine editors assign to St. Gregory (Opera, Paris, 1705, iii. col. 878). Mone gives it as No. 271, in 8 st. of 4 l., and at i. p. 372, cites it as in a ms. of the 8th cent. at Trier. Daniel gives the text in 8 st. of 4 l., at i. No. 145, and at iv. p. 35, cites it as in a 10th cent. Rheinau ms. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 3; Jul. A. vi. f. 19; Harl. 2961, f. 218), in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30851, f. 172 b.), an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848, f. 67), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 227); in three mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413, 414; and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 2 b.). In the Roman Breviary, 1632, it was recast, beginning, "Primo die quo Trinitas."

The original form is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478) Sarum, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries. In the Fork Brev., 1493, it is in two parts, part ii. beginning with st. v., "Jam nunc Paterna claritas." Its universal use was on Sundays at Nocturns or Matins; sometimes throughout the year or else from the Octave of the Epiphany to Lent, and also from the Sunday nearest to the Kalends of October up to Advent. The original text is also found in Wackernagel, i. No. 89, the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 31. The text of the Roman Brev. 1632, is in recent eds. of that Brev., and also in Daniel, i. No. 145, Königsfeld, i. p. 78, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Both texts of this hymn have been tr. into English as follows:—

i. Primo dierum omnium. The trs. of this text are:—

1. On this the day that saw the earth. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1852. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, it was altered to "On this blest day when first the light." This form of the tr. passed into other collections, as also has the original translation.

2. On this the day when days began. By J. Ellerton, made for and 1st pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871.

Other trs. are:—

1. This is the day when first of all, Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.

2. Hail! primal! day, of days the first. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

3. First day of days! wherein were made. J. D. Chambers. 1852.

4. First day of days wherein arrayed. J. D. Chambers. 1854.

5. On this first day, when earth stands forth. J. W. Hewitt. 1859.

6. This glorious morn, time's eldest born, Wherein was, &c. J. Keble. 1869. Based on Copeland's tr. from the Rom. Brev. (See below.)

7. Welcome! thou chiefest of all days. D. T. Morgan. 1871.

ii. Primo die quo Trinitas. The trs. of this text are:—

1. This day the glorious Trinity. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1843, p. 3, and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 3. In a few collections it is given without any change in the text, but in the Hymnary, 1872, where it begins, "This day the Blessed Trinity," the alterations are very numerous.

Other trs. are:—

1. The happy day will soon disclose. Primer, 1706.

2. On this first day when heaven and earth. Bp. R. Mant. 1837.

3. This glorious morn, time's eldest-born, When God, &c. W. J. Copeland. 1848. (See also J. Keble, above.)

4. Blest morn, when earth's Creator spoke. R. Campbell. 1850.

5. This day when the eternal Three. J. Wallace. 1874.

6. To-day the Blessed Three in One. Card. Newman. 1838 and 1868. [J. J.]

Probus, a nom de plume of W. Shrubsole, jun., in the Christian Observer, 1813.

Procter, Adelaide Anne, daughter of Bryan Waller Procter (Barry Cornwall), was b. in Bedford Square, London, Oct. 30, 1825. In 1851 she entered the Roman communion, and d. in London, Feb. 2, 1864. Miss Procter displayed more than usual intellectual powers at an early age. In later years she was skilled in music and languages. Her poetical gifts have been widely appreciated. Her Legends and Lyrics, A Book of Verse, was pub. in 1858. Of this an enlarged edition was pub. in 1862. Her hymns in C. U. from these two editions are:—

1. I do not ask, O Lord, that life may be. Resignation. In her Legends, &c., 1862. It is one of the most widely used of Miss Procter's hymns.

2. I thank Thee, O my God, Who made. Thankfulness. In her Legends, &c., 1858, p. 207, in 6 st. of 6 l. In several collections, including the H. Comp., it begins in an altered form, "My God, I thank Thee, Who hast made;" and in others, "Our God, we thank Thee, Who hast made." Bp. Bickersteth in his note on this hymn in the H. Comp., 1876, says, "This most beautiful hymn by A. A. Procter (1858), touches the chord of thankfulness in trial, as perhaps no other hymn does, and is thus most useful for the visitation of the sick."

3. One by one the sands ~~are~~ going [flowing]. The Links of Life. In her Legends, &c., 1858, p. 20, in 8 st. of 4 l.

4. Rise, for the day is passing. Redeem the Time. In her Legends, &c., 1858. Sometimes given as "Arise, for the day is passing," as in Holy Song, 1869.

5. Strive; yet I do not promise. Strive, Wait, Pray. In her Legends, &c., 1858, p. 103, in 3 st. of 8 l.

6. The way is long and dreary. Life a Pilgrimage. In her Legends, &c., 1858, p. 136, in 3 st. of 8 l. and ~~is~~ refrain.

7. The shadows of the evening hours. Evening. In her Legends, &c., 1862.

8. We ask for peace, O Lord. Peace with God. In her Legends, &c., 1858, p. 214, in 4 st of 9 l. [J. J.]

Prome vocem, mens, canoram. Claude de Santeuil. [The Five Wounds of Christ, or, Passiontide.] This hymn appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1680; Chronic Breviary, 1686, p. 414, and again in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and later French Breviaries, and is given in the Office of the Five Wounds of Christ. The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 67, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Now, my soul, thy voice upraising, Sing aloud, &c. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 75, and again in his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 41, in 8.7.8.7.4.7. It is found unaltered in a few collections, and also altered as: (1) "Now, my soul, thy voice upraising, Sing the Cross," &c., in 8.7.8.7.4.7. in Murray's Hymnal, 1852. This was repeated in other collections. In the Sarum, 1868, it was altered to 5 st. of 6 l. in 8.7 metre. (2) "Sing we now, our voice upraising," in Kennedy, 1863, is the same text as Sarum with slight variations.

2. Slow and mournful be our tone. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, and a few collections of a later date.

3. Now, my soul, thy voice upraising, Tell in sweet, &c. By Sir H. W. Baker. This tr. is based upon the above by J. Chandler, more specially in the first and last stanzas. It is in 6 sts. of 8.7. Its first appearance was in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and then in the 1st ed., 1861. It is in several hymn-books, and sometimes with slight alterations.

4. Lift, my soul, thy voice harmonious. This was given in Mercer's Church Ps. & H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, No. 180, and is probably by the Editor.

5. Now, my soul, thy voice upraising, Sing in sweet, &c. This cento in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 243, in 6 sts. of 8.7. metre, is somewhat peculiarly constructed. St. i. is by Chandler and the Editors; ii. is by Sir H. W. Baker and the Editors; iii. is by Chandler and the Editors; iv. is by Sir H. W. Baker and the Editors; and v. is by the Editors alone. The result is not good.

Other trs. are:—

1. Draw out, sad heart, thy melody. I. Williams. 1839.

2. Soul, draw forth thy voice, deep-sounding. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

3. O my soul! thy lamentation. J. D. Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

Promittis, et servas datam. C. Coffin. [Wednesday.] This is the hymn on Wednesday at Lauds in the Paris Breviary, 1736. It is also in C. Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 20; J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 24; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. A faithful promise Thou hast made. J. Chandler.
1837.
2. Thy promise, Lord, is our sure stay. I. Williams.
1839.
3. Thou, Lord, dost promise; firm and sure. J. D. Chambers. 1857.
4. Thy truth, O God, stands firm in heaven. D. T. Morgan. 1880. [J. J.]

Prose. A synonym for Sequence (q.v.), referring to the character of the composition, while 'sequence' refers to the position in the service. A Prose was originally in prose of a rhythmical character, but not in strict metre, while the word Sequence was used when the Prose assumed the form of a metrical Hymn. But a single quotation from a mediæval writer will suffice to show that the two words were used indifferently, and at the same time tells us on what festal days Proses or Sequences were appointed to be sung in the Missal of the Cluniac Order.

"Prosa, vel quod alii sequentiæm vocant, non cantatur nisi in quatuor festis principalibus, in Epiphania, in Ascensione Domini, in translatione S. Benedicti, et in Nativitate S. Mauritii."—Udabricus de antiq. Consuet. Monast. Cluniac. Lib. 1, cap. xi.

The Sequences or Hymns sung in processions before High Mass and at other times were usually termed Proses in the mediæval Office Books of the English Church. (Sarum Processional, ed. by Dr. W. G. Henderson, 1882, pp. 13, 20, 93, 124, 134. York Processional, also ed. by Dr. Henderson, Surtees Soc., vol. 63, 1875.) [F. E. W.]

Πρόσεχε οὐρανὸν καὶ λαλήσω. St. Andrew of Crete. [Midnight.] St. Andrew's Midnight hymn commonly known as τὸ ἀπόδειπνον, from his works, and given in Daniel, iii. p. 48, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is tr. by Dr. Bonar in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 2nd series, 1861, as, "Attend, ye heavens," in 4 st. of 6 l. [See p. 67, i., and 463, ii.] [J. J.]

Protestant Methodist Hymnody.
[Methodist Hymnody, § v.]

Πρώτος νόμον εὐρόμαν. Synesius, Bp. of Ptolemæis. [Christmas: Epiphany.] A Christmas and Epiphany hymn, being No. vii. of the ten hymns which he wrote during various periods of his life. The full Greek text, dating 375-430, is given in the Anth. Graeca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 20, in 42 lines. From this Mr. Chatfield made his tr., "I first invented in Thy praise," and pub. the same in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 78, in 50 lines. A. Stevenson's tr. in his Ten Hys. of Synesius, &c., 1865, is "Jesus of Solyma! God's Son." [Greek Hymnody, § v.] [J. J.]

Prudentius, Aurelius Clemens, with the occasional prefix of Marcus (cf. Migne, vol. lix. p. 593, and Dressel, p. ii. n), is the name of the most prominent and most prolific author of sacred Latin poetry in its earliest days. Of the writer himself we know nothing, or next to nothing, beyond what he has himself told us in a short introduction in verse to his works. From that source we learn that he was a Spaniard, of good family evidently, and that he was b. A.D. 348 somewhere in the north of Spain, either at Saragossa, Tarragona, or Calahorra, but at which is left uncertain, by his applying the same expression to all, which if applied only to one would have fixed his place of birth. After receiving a good education befitting his social status he applied himself for some years to practising as a pleader in the local courts of law, until he received promotion to a judgeship in two cities successively:—

" Bis legum moderamine
Frenos nobilium reximus urbium
Jus civile bonis reddidimus, terrumus reos; " and afterwards to a post of still higher authority:

" Tandem militiæ gradu Evectum pietas principis extulit. "

Archbp. Trench considers this last to have been "a high military appointment at court," and such the poet's own words would seem to describe; but it may well be doubted whether a civilian and a lawyer would be eligible for such employment, in which case we may adopt the solution of the difficulty offered in the Prolegomena to our author's works (Migne, vol. lix. p. 601):—

" Evectus inde est ad superiorem militiæ gradum, nimirum militiæ civilis, palatinæ, aut præsidialis, non bellicæ, castrensis, aut cohortalis; nam si qui officii jure consultorum præsidium, rectorum et similium funguntur, vulgo in cod. Theod. militare et ad superiores militiæ ascendere dicuntur. "

It was after this lengthened experience at a comparatively early age of positions of trust and power that Prudentius, conscience-smitten on account of the follies and worldliness that had marked his youth and earlier manhood, determined to throw up all his secular employments, and devote the remainder of his life to advancing the interests of Christ's Church by the power of his pen rather than that of his purse and personal position. Accordingly we find that he retired in his 57th year into poverty and private life, and began that remarkable succession of sacred poems upon which his fame now entirely rests. We have no reason however to regard him as another St. Augustine, rescued from the "wretchedness of most unclean living" by this flight from the temptations and engrossing cares of official life into the calm seclusion of a wholly devotional leisure. He had probably rather learnt from sad experience the emptiness and vanity for an immortal soul of the surroundings of even the high places of this world. As he himself expresses it:—

" Numquid talia proderunt
Carnis post obitum vel bona, vel mala, Cum jam, quicquid id est, quod fueram, mors aboleverit? " and sought, at the cost of all that the world holds dear, those good things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. Beyond the fact of his retirement from the world in this way, and the fruits which it produced in the shape of his voluminous contributions to sacred poetry, we have no further information about our author. To judge from the amount he wrote, his life must have been extended many years after he began his new career, but how long his life was or where he d. we are not told. Probably he d. circa 413. His works are:—

(1) Liber Cathemerinon. "Christian Day, as we may call it" (W. S. Lilly, "Chapters in European History," vol. i. p. 208).

(2) Liber Peristephanon. "Martyrs' Garland" (id.).
(3) Apotheosis. A work on the Divine Nature, or the Deification of Human Nature in Christ.

(4) Hamartigenia. A treatise on the Origin of Sin, directed against the Marcionites.

(5) Psychomachia = Ψυχομαχία, or "The Spiritual Combat"—an allegorical work.

(6) Libri contra Symmachum. A controversial work against the restoration in the Senate House at Rome of the altar of Victory which Gratian had removed. Symmachus had petitioned Valentinian II. for its restoration in 384, but the influence of St. Ambrose had prevailed against him at that time. In 392 the altar was restored, but removed again by Theodosius in 394. After the death of the latter the attempt to restore it was renewed by Arcadius and Honorius, and it was at that time that Prudentius wrote his first book. The second (for there are two) was written in 405. Faguet considers that the first may date in 395.

(7) The Dittochæon = the double food or double Testament, is a worthy collection of 49 sets of four verses each, on Old and New Testament scenes.

Of these different works the most important are the first two, and it is from them that the Liturgical hymns enumerated below have been chiefly compiled. The general character of Prudentius's writings it is not easy fairly to estimate, and to judge by the wholesale laudation he obtains from some of his critics, and the equally unsparing censure of others, his judges have so found it. In venturing upon any opinion upon such a subject, the reader must bear in mind the peculiar position in which the period at which he was writing found the poet. The poetry of classical Rome in all its exact beauty of form had long passed its meridian, and was being replaced by a style which was yet in its infancy, but which burst forth into new life and beauty in the hands of the Mediaeval hymnologists. Prudentius wrote before rhyming Latin verse was thought of, but after attention had ceased to be given to quantities. Under such circumstances it were vain to look for very finished work from him, and such certainly we do not find. But amidst a good deal of what one must confess is tasteless verbiage or clumsy rhetorical ornament—however varied the metres he employs, numbering some 17—there are also passages to be found, not infrequently, of dramatic vigour and noble expression, which may well hold their own with the more musical utterances of a later date. He writes as a man intensely in earnest, and we may gather much from his writings concerning the points of conduct which were deemed the most important in Christian living at a time when a great portion of mankind were still the victims or slaves of a morality which, heathen at the best, was lowered and corrupted the more as the universality of its influence was more and more successfully challenged by the spread of the Gospel of Christ. If, therefore, we can scarcely go as far in our author's praise as Barth—much given to lavish commendation—who describes him as "Poeta eximius eruditissimus et sanctissimus scriptor; nemo divinius de rebus Christianis unquam scripsit"; or as Bentley—not given to praise—who calls him the "Horace and Virgil of the Christians," we shall be as loath, considering under what circumstances he wrote, to carp at his style as not being formed on the best ancient models but as confessedly impure; feeling with Archbishop Trench that it is his merit that "whether consciously or unconsciously, he acted on the principle that the new life claimed new forms in which to manifest itself; that he did not shrink from helping forward that great transformation of the Latin language, which it needed to undergo, now that it should be the vehicle of truths which were altogether novel to it." (Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1874, p. 121.)

The reader will find so exhaustive an account of the various writings of Prudentius in the account given of him and them in Smith and Wace's Dict. of Christian Biography, and Smith's Dict. of Greek and Roman Biography, that it is only necessary in this work to refer very briefly to them as above. The poems have been constantly reprinted and re-edited, till the editor who produced the best edition we have of them, Albert Dressel (Leipzig, 1860), is able to say that his is the sixty-third.

The use made of Prudentius's poems in the ancient Breviaries and Hymnaries was very extensive. In the form of centos stanzas and lines were compiled and used as hymns; and it is mainly from these centos, and not from the original poems, that the translations into English were made. Daniel, i., Nos. 103-115, gives 13 genuine hymns as having been in use for "Morning," "Christmas," "Epiphany," "Lent," "Easter," "Transfiguration," "Burial," &c., in the older Breviaries. A reference to the article Latin, Trs. from the, p. 655, i., will show that almost as many more which were used in like manner have been translated into English. When to these are added the hymns which are annotated in this Dictionary under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), and those which have not been translated into English, we realise the position and power of Prudentius in the hymnody of the Church.*

Frynne, George Rundle, M.A., s. of John Allen Frynne, was b. at West Looe, Cornwall, Aug. 23, 1818, and educated at St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, B.A., 1839; M.A. 1861. He took Holy Orders in 1841, and became Vicar of St. Peter's, Plymouth, in 1848. He has pub. Parochial Sermons, 1846; Plain Parochial Sermons, 1856; another series, 1876; The Dying Soldier's Visions, and Other Poems and Hymns, 1881, &c. He also pub. Hymnal suited for the Services of the Church, 1858. His most popular hymn is "Jesus, meek and gentle," p. 591, ii. His hymns "The day is done; O God the Son" (Evening); and "Thy glory fills the heavens" (The Glory of the Father), have also been included in a few collections. He d. Mar. 25, 1903. [J. J.]

Prys, Edmund, Prys or Price, a learned Welsh divine and eminent poet, was b. about 1541 in the parish of Llandcewyn, Merionethshire, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he took his degree of M.A. He was appointed Archdeacon of Merioneth in 1576, and Canon of St. Asaph in 1602. He was one of the best Welsh poets of his time, and a great many of his compositions are preserved, mostly in manuscript. He is the author of the Welsh metrical version of the Psalms, which is still in use. He assisted

* The earliest and best ms. of Prudentius is one in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (Lat. 8084), written about the end of the 5th cent. The Principal Librarian, M. Leopold Delisle, has kindly supplied references to this ms. in the case of those poems from which centos, now in C.U. in English, have been taken.

Dr. Morgan, Bishop of St. Asaph, to translate the Bible into Welsh. The latest of his compositions, preserved, is a copy of elegant Latin verses in commendation of Dr. John Davies's Welsh Grammar. He was then 80 years of age. This Latin copy bears the date of 1621. He d. in 1624, and was buried at Maentwrog Church. [See Welsh Hymnody.] [W. G. T.]

Psalters, American. [American Hymnody.]

Psalters, English. I. Introduction. A glance at the long list appended to this article will apprise many for the first time of the enormous number of efforts made to versify the Psalms. Among the authors will be found Queen Elizabeth, Lord Bacon, Fairfax, and many of our poets and theologians. The Psalter has been subjected to a great variety of experiments. Literal translation, paraphrase, evangelical expansion, the development of portions as themes, have been successively attempted. The change of metrical and poetical expression is reflected in the history. In the Puritan period the versification of the Psalms even touches the history of the nation. But notwithstanding all this, partly from extreme reverence for the letter of Holy Writ, partly from the fact that the bulk of the translators were hampered by the secondary object of turning the Psalter into a hymnal, and most of all from the impossibility of representing Hebrew parallelism in English metres, no version approaches in merit such translations as Lord Derby's Homer or Conington's Virgil. With but few exceptions the succeeding pages are a comparison of mediocrities.

II. Curious examples.

Some experiments are very eccentric, such as Abraham Fraunce's hexameters (1581), Pike's lyrics without rhyme (1751), Wheatland and Sylvester's heroics (1754), Dennis's blank verse (1808). The strangest is Psalterium Americanum by Cotton Mather (1718), printed like prose, but in reality simply the Authorized Version thrown into unrhymed c.m. for singing.

III. Pre-Reformation Psalters.

Metrical Psalters existed in England at a very early date. Bp. Aldhelm of Sherborne (died A.D. 709) is said to have composed one (Bede): and Archdeacon Churton (see Preface to the Cleveland Psalter) ascribes to him the Anglo-Saxon Version edited by Thorpe (1835). Thorpe himself, however, assigns it to a later date. A Latin Psalter, with interlinear Anglo-Saxon gloss, and a translation into Middle English has been published by the Surtees Society. T. Brampton's Seven Penitential Psalms (1414) have been printed by the Percy Society; and Holland (Psalms of Britain, 1842) mentions a translation of St. Jerome's Gallican Psalter into English of the date of Henry II. or Richard I.

IV. Importance of Psalm-singing at the Reformation.

The practice of versifying the Psalms assumed a larger significance among the Reformers. The Psalm Versions of Luther and Justus Jonas, combined with their translations of the Latin Hymns and their original compositions, stirred the heart of Germany: the Psalms of Marot became the badge of the French Huguenot in court and camp; and, completed by Beza, became the sole hymnal of Geneva: while in England and Scotland, following the Genevan precedent, the metrical Psalms alone were long exclusively used in public worship. Consecrated by the long tradition of the Church in their Latin form, set at first to ballad tunes and then to special music of their own by the leaders of the Reformation, the Psalms became endeared to the people, not merely by their sublimity, their Messianic import, and their wide interpretation of human emotions, but specially by their living trust in God as a hiding place in peril, and even by their terrible denunciations of His enemies. They seemed, in the wonder aroused by a new-found Bible, the supreme, divinely ordained vehicle of human praise; and the metrical form was at the same time a necessity for singing, and, according to the ideas of that day concerning the structure of Hebrew poetry, was accounted a truer representative of the original than prose. This last point is argued, with references to Hebrew treatises of that day, in the Preface to the English Psalter, published at Geneva in 1556 (see p. 857, ii.), a revised ed. of Sternhold's 37 Psalms, and 7 by Hopkins, to which 7 fresh ones are added by Whittingham.

V. German influence on Gospellers.

The introduction of Psalm-singing into England probably sprang from the intercourse of the Gospellers with Luther and Melancthon, and their familiarity with their writings. Three of these fathers of the Reformation, Wisdom, Becon, and Coverdale, have left us Psalm versions bearing a strong family likeness. Those of Wisdom and Becon were incorporated in Sternhold and Hopkins [see Old Version] and may possibly be the oldest pieces in that book, though not found in the earliest editions. The Goostly Psalmes by Miles Coverdale contains fifteen psalms, besides hymns and paraphrases (see English Hymnody, Early, III., iv.). The German originals of this book have been carefully traced out by Mr. Mearns, All the Psalm versions, except Pss. 2, 132, 146, and all the paraphrases and hymns, except two, have been identified as German. The metre of the unidentified Psalms, except the 132nd, is also German, and Coverdale's 46th is in the same metre as Luther's "Ein Feste Burg." [For details see Goostly Psalmes, The.]

VI. Ballad Metres of Edward VI.'s reign.

In the Act, which authorized the First Prayer Book of Edward VI. (1549), there was a proviso "That it be lawful . . . in churches . . . chapels or oratories or other places to use openly any Psalme or prayer taken out of the Bible . . . not letting or omitting thereby the service or any part thereof mentioned in the said book."

It has been generally held, by Strype, Burnet and others, that this proviso covered the legality of Psalm-singing (see § VIII., where Psalms and godly prayers are synonymous); and some have thought that the partiality of the king for Sternhold's essays then published (see Old Version, § II.) dictated it. It is at least certain that several small attempts at versification of the Psalms appear at this period, among which may be mentioned Sir

Thos. Wyatt's Seven Penitential Psalms (1549). The whole Psalter was also now versified by Robert Crowley, sometime Vicar of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, in c.m., and set to a harmonized chant (1549). The German influence now ceases, and the irregular metres of Wisdom and Becon, which are akin to some in the early English Primers, give way to the ballad measure of Chevy Chase, which from this time receives its consecration. Sternhold's aim was to supplant the "amorous and obscene songs" (Wood) of the court and people; and he probably sang his psalms to well-known ballad tunes. A discussion of the nature and character of his work and that of his coadjutors, as represented in the Old Version of Sternhold and Hopkins, is, however, too elaborate for this section of our work. It is fully treated elsewhere. [Old Version.]

VII. Genevan Influence on the Marian Exiles.

The public singing of psalms ceased of course under Mary. But the movement gained new force and new ideas among the exiles. Parker solaced himself by versifying the entire Psalter (Absolvi Psalterium versum metricè lingua vulgari, Parker's Diary, 1557). At Geneva the psalms of Marot were part of the authorized service; and it is from this period that the metres, the tunes, and the structural features of the Genevan Psalter begin to affect that of England, and more largely, of Scotland. [For details see Old Version, § III.]

VIII. Psalm-singing at the accession of Elizabeth.

On the accession of Elizabeth nothing so roused the enthusiasm of the people as the practice "brought from abroad by the exiles" of singing Psalms (Strype). They were sung at St. Paul's Cross after the sermons of bishops; Jewel speaks of six thousand people as present on one occasion. Psalms were introduced at St. Antholin's and spread to other churches in London. The authorities not merely "connived" (Heylin) at the fashion, but encouraged it.

Jewel, for instance, who was one of the Visitors for the execution of the Queen's Injunctions, favoured it. The attitude of Parker is shewn by a curious set of documents in Wilkins's Conclia, Dec. 1559. Certain men and women from London had sung psalms in the Cathedral at Exeter at 6 a.m., disturbing matins. On being prohibited by the Dean and Chapter, they appealed to the Queen's Visitors, Jewel and others, who thereon reprimanded the Dean and Chapter. Upon this the case was carried to Abp. Parker, who ratified the sentence of the Visitors, and bade the Cathedral authorities "permit and suffer" congregations to "sing or say the godly prayers set forth and permitted in this Church of England." The use of the word "godly prayers," equivalent to psalms, is curious. See above, § VI.

Permission to use psalms publicly in worship was implicitly granted by the 49th injunction of Elizabeth (June 1559), which is wider and yet more defined than the proviso of 1549; guarding more carefully the Morning and Evening Prayer from interference, and yet at the same time withdrawing the stipulation that the composition was to be taken out of Holy Scripture:—

"For the comforting of such as delight in music, it may be permitted that in the beginning or end of Common Prayer either at Morning or Evening, there may be sung an hymn or such like song to the praise of Almighty God in the best melody and music that may be devised, having respect that the sentence of the hymn may be understood and perceived."

IX. Renderings by Abp. Parker, Sir Philip Sidney, the Davisons, and Spenser.

Partial translations of Psalms at this period are very numerous. The two most notable complete versions are dealt with elsewhere. (See Old Version and Scottish Hymnody.) A third, entitled The whole Psalter, translated into English metre, with an argument and collect to each Psalm: John Daye, London, n.d., is only to be found in the great libraries [there is a perfect copy also at Lincoln Cathedral]. It is the work of Abp. Parker, alluded to above, written in exile; but the marked similarity of the book, in its introductions, extracts from the Fathers, and apparatus of appended Canticles, to the work of Sternhold and Hopkins makes it probable that these, and perhaps the metrical arguments at the head of each psalm and the appended collects were added after 1562. It is composed with scholarly care, and, not only as a metrical version, but for the value of the collects, should be reprinted. Besides the three usual metres (c.m., l.m., s.m.) he makes use of stanzas of 8's, and one or two curious measures; and he supplies a doxology in each metre. The metrical Introduction "Ad Lectorem," is a quaint apology for offering a new version. There are eight tunes to it by Tallis; one being Tallis's "Canon." His c.m. has often a double rhyme in the third line; and, even where this is not the case, the rhythm and stresses of the measure are entirely distinct from that of Sternhold, and the feet strictly regular, so as to facilitate singing. An example of his unrhymed c.m. may be seen in his tr. of "Veni Creator" (q.v.), which is apparently simply the text of the first Prayer Book of Edw. viith, 1549, regulated into uniform feet. The authorship of this book is given in Bp. Barlow's copy to John Keeper of the Cathedral of Wells. But Parker's authorship is established by external and internal evidence. In Bp. Kennet's copy it is said that the Archbishop permitted Margaret, his wife, to present his Psalter to some of the nobility; and the copy at Lambeth has in a hand of that time, "To the virtuous and honorable Lady the Countesse of Shrewsbury from your lovinge friende, Margaret Parker." Apart from the presumption raised by this coincidence in favour of Parker, it makes Keeper's authorship unlikely, as he would only have been twenty-four at Mrs. Parker's death (1570) (Dibdin's Ames). But the conclusive evidence is the acrostic "Mattheus Parkerus" on which the metrical argument to Ps. 119 is formed.

Of a different order from these is the Version commenced by Sir Philip Sidney (Pss. 1-43) and completed by his sister, the Countess of Pembroke (pub. 1823). The metres are "more rare and excellent for method and variety,"—the fantastic and capricious measures of the lighter Elizabethan style; not intended probably for congregational use. They have frequent freshness and spirit; and now that a higher music no longer chains us wholly to routine metres, a composer fond of the Elizabethan poetry would find the 84th, 92nd, and the more regular 96th full of grace and charm. The same description may be given of Divers Selected Psalms of David in verse, of a different composure from those used in the church: the work of Francis and Christopher Davison and others, found in a Harleian ms. of the British Museum. Full selections from both these versions may be seen in Farr's Select Poetry (Parker Society). To these may be added a lost version of the Seven Penitential Psalms by Edmund Spenser.

X. Partial translations, Bacon, Herbert, &c. Versions by Dod, Wither, Sandys.

Among the versifiers of "Selected Psalms" are found the eminent names of Donne, Dean of St. Paul's (1633), Phineas Fletcher (1633), George Herbert (1632), and R. Crashaw (1648). The first ten Psalms were rendered clearly and naturally by Bishop Hall (1607), and a few by Lord Bacon (1625), (see Fuller Worthies Library by Grosart), dedicated to George Herbert. The complete version of Henry Dod (1603-20) is utterly valueless, and according to Wither was burnt by the hangman; the preface however shews the early dissatisfaction felt with Sternhold and Hopkins, and there is appended to it a ludicrous versification, intended apparently to be sung, of the Act of Parliament passed after the Gunpowder Plot! The so-called Version of King James (1631) is described elsewhere. (See Scottish Hymnody, i. § 3.) The version by George Wither (1619-32) was a far more serious rival of the Old Version. He obtained a privilege from the King, which ordered it to be bound up with every copy of the Bible, and authorized Wither to seize every Bible in which it was not found. But it met with the same fate as a similar privilege of Wither's for his Hymns and Spiritual Songs of the Church. (See English Hymnody, Early, § VIII.) The resistance to the privilege on the part of the Stationers' Company, who owned the Old Version, ended in the withdrawal of this monopoly by the Privy Council (1633). (See Preface to Wither's Hymns and Spiritual Songs, by E. Farr in Library of Old Authors.) The metres of this book are more varied than those of the Old Version, and yet more regular and even than those of Sidney, and tunes are set to them by Orlando Gibbons. The author of Anthologia Davidica, a compilation of Psalms from many sources (1846), considers this the best version he knew for fidelity, harmony, and simplicity of expression. Judged, however, by his copious extracts (the book itself is rare) there is a want of force and spirit. The 137th, "As nigh Babel's streams we sat," is gracefully rendered; the best is the 150th, "Come praise the Lord, come praise Him" (S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hys., Ps. cl.). The version by George Sandys (1636), son of the Abp. of York, is of far greater literary merit. Though set to music by Henry Lawes, it was intended only for private devotion, and perhaps never used otherwise. Baxter laments that Sandys's "seraphic strain" was useless to the vulgar because not composed in the ordinary metres; but its poetical grace exercised a considerable influence on translators. The longer Psalms are often in L. M. couplets; some of his most graceful pieces are in couplets of 7's, as Ps. 150, "Praise the Lord enthroned on high" (S. P. C. K. Ps. and H., Ps. cl.), and Ps. 148, "You who dwell above the skies" (Wes. H. Bk. 639). The book is prefaced by an eulogy by his friend Lord Falkland. In the opinion of Burney, Montgomery, Conder, and Holland, it is the best metrical version. See, however, Keble, below, § XVIII.

XI. Puritan Versions; Rous, Barton, Milton.

To the psalm-loving Puritan the perfection of the metrical version was a matter of supreme moment. The first book pub. in America (Cambridge, N.E., 1640) was The New England Psalter, often called The Bay Psalter (p. 119, i.), the editors of which bound themselves by the most rigorous literalism. In the same year in England the Committee of Peers, lay and spiritual, recommended in their Report on Religion that "The meeter in the Psalms should be corrected and allowed of publicly." The first ed. (1641) of Francis Rous, afterwards Provost of Eton under the Commonwealth, was an attempt to satisfy this recommendation by amendment of the old version. Further changes were made in his second ed. (1643), which was ordered to be printed by the House of Commons. The establishment of the Directory (1645), in which "every one that can read" was ordered to "have a psalm-book," made revision more urgent. Rous's third edition (1646), was ordered to be printed on the recommendation of the Assembly of Divines; and later in the year this Version "and none other" was ordered by the House of Commons "to be sung in all churches and chapels within the kingdom." There was an earnest desire at this time on both sides of the border to agree on a version which might be a bond of uniformity in religion. But it was frustrated by two causes. The House of Lords inclined to a rival versifier, William Barton, minister of St. Martin's, Leicester (1st ed., 1644; 2nd, 1645); and they submitted his 3rd ed. (1646) to the Assembly of Divines, who, however, declined to authorise it. When Rous's version came up from the Commons, they referred it to a Committee, but never apparently sanctioned it. The Scots also were discontented with Rous, whom they suspected of heterodoxy, as an adherent of Cromwell, and introduced considerable variations, derived from other versions, in their new Scottish Psalter (1650). [See Scottish Hymnody.] Confidence in Rous was short-lived in England. It may have been dissatisfaction with it which made Milton in 1648 attempt Ps. 80-8, which had a special significance to him at that crisis of the war (Masson). His versions are translated direct from the Hebrew. Hebrew words are printed in the margin; and every word not in the original is printed in italics. No better illustration of the literal principle of the Puritan translations can be given; and no one can say it was successful. He made another essay in 1653, without this assertion of exceeding literalism, and in various metres, not easy to be sung; but the result is no better. Portions of Pss. 82, 85, 86, formed into a cento, "The Lord will come and not be slow," and part of Ps. 84, "How lovely are Thy dwellings fair," are found in some of our hymn-books; but the only one of real note is the 136th, "Let us with a glad some mind," which he wrote at the age of fifteen. In 1651 Bp. King of Chichester, in the preface to his version, sneers, from the churchman's stand-point, at the failure of one of our "pretended Reformers" (probably Rous). And in 1654 appeared a new edition of Barton, which bore on its title-page a license for publication from Cromwell. A version by Thomas Lord Fairfax is mentioned in the preface to Cotton's Editions of the Bible; he quotes the 137th Psalm in stanzas of four long lines. It was never published.

XII. Baxter, Miles Smyth, Denham, Patrick.

From Sternhold to Rous the prevailing principle of translation was literal exactness; but the dreariness of all these efforts, and in some measure the grace of Sandys, now produced a demand for some literary excellence. In the preface to his version (written probably about this time, though not published till 1692), Richard Baxter says, after reviewing preceding versions, "The ear desireth greater melody, than strict versions will allow." And in their measure the versions that followed the Restoration were an attempt in this direction. Examples may be seen in S. Woodford's verbose and pompous Psalter (1667); in Miles Smyth's, which is often smooth and melodious (1668); in Luke Milbourne (1698), who tried to adapt his metres to the music of Playford, who had recently edited Sternhold and Hopkins, and to that of Henry Lawes, found in Sandys's Psalter; and in the stately though monotonous L.M. of Sir John Denham (written at this time, though only published in 1715). But the difficulty lay in the decay of music, by which metres were more than ever restricted. Baxter adopted a plan of bracketed words, by which L.M. could be sung as C.M., or C.M. as S.M., for the use of ignorant congregations, but scarcely in the interest of literary success. A Century of Psalms was published by John Patrick, Preacher to the Charterhouse, brother of the Bishop, in 1679; and a complete version in 1691-2, which attained considerable success for its fidelity. It was not however exactly a literal version. It adopted a mode of evangelical interpretation, of which the germ exists in Parker, and which will be discussed at large under Watts. See § xv.

XIII. The New Version.

(1.) History.—The first instalment of Tate and Brady's Psalter is a sheet and a half, without date (Bodleian); the next is "The first XX. Psalms by N. Brady and N. Tate" (Bodleian) published as a specimen (1695). The complete version followed (1696), entitled A New Version of the Psalms of David, Fitted to the Tunes Used in Churches, By N. Tate and N. Brady (Brit. Mus.), and dedicated to William III. This edition was apparently subjected to criticism and revised; and in its settled form, which differs from each of the preceding essays in some of the metres and expressions, it was "allowed" by the King in Council, and "permitted to be used in all churches, &c., as shall think fit to receive them," Dec. 3, 1696. This second edition was not published till 1698 (Brit. Mus.). [See New Version.] The Supplement thereto was authorised, in the same terms as the Psalter, by the Queen in Council, July 30, 1703.

(2.) Value of Authorisation.—So far as license to print was concerned, the royal "allowance" was not strictly necessary, as the Licensing Act had recently expired; but it was extremely politic. (See it again under § xvi.) The "permission" to use it in churches, &c., which is a distinct matter from the "allowance," whether actually necessary or not in order to legalise its adoption, was of great value. Under the sanction of the sovereign, and recommended by the Abp. of Canterbury and Compton, Bishop of London, The New Version presented itself as a settlement of the long dissatisfaction with Sternhold and Hopkins. Its success was not however universal. Beveridge (1710) wrote a vigorous protest against it, and in favour of the Old Version. He calls it a "New Version in deed," "fine and modish," "flourished with wit and fancy," "gay and fashionable." He dilates on the inconvenience of two versions; calls it a breach of uniformity; "in time we might have one secundum usum London, another secundum usum Richmond (see Brady below), another secundum usum Sarum." He records the protests of congregations: one vestry had cast it out, after its introduction by the clergyman. It was then only used in a few churches in London.

(3.) Character and Merits.—The material of the New Version may be thrown into three groups: 1. Psalms of an ornate character, with occasional vigour of rhythm, written mostly in L.M. and P.M. The best is 139th, "Thou, Lord, by strictest search hast known." 2. A large quantity of very spiritless C.M., as poor in language as the literal versions. 3. A few examples of sweet and simple verse, such as the 34th, "Through all the changing scenes of life;" 42nd, "As pants the hart;" 51st, "Have mercy, Lord, on me;" and 84th, "Oh, God of hosts, the mighty Lord," which retain their hold on our hymn-books. There is nothing to shew certainly how the work was divided between Tate and Brady: both were poets; it is plausible to attribute the ornate work, in which some have even suggested an occasional aid from his patron Dryden, to Tate. Another theory makes Brady the theological, Tate the poetical workman throughout. Beveridge's epithets suggest the general impression of the book. The artificial style of that period is applied to the Psalms; and in the hands of men of genius—far less in those of mere versifiers—so alien a form could not have succeeded. "Tate's poor page" (Pope) has been abused as roundly as The Old Version. And yet one condemned to tread the waste of metrical Psalters will consider it an advance on its predecessors, suffering more from its own success than comparison with them. And this merit is fairly theirs: they asserted successfully, and with an emphasis scarcely known before, literary and poetical excellence (according to their light) as a principle of translation, and the precedent thus set was seldom ignored afterwards. It has been gravely censured for want of fidelity by Keble and others. Traces of political allusion have also been pointed out. The curious reader may like to trace them in Ps. 18, 37-43, in the courtly complexion given to Ps. 101, 2-7, in a possible allusion to the queen, Ps. 45, 16, and in Ps. 107, 40 ("The prince, who slights what God commands, exposed to scorn must quit his throne").

(4.) Authors.—The New Version was the work of two Irishmen. Nahum Tate was the son of Faithful Teate, an Irish clergyman, author of some religious verses. He was b. in Dublin (1652), and educated at Trinity College. He wrote, under Dryden's superintendence, the second part of Absalom and Achitophel with the exception of about two hundred lines. He succeeded Shadwell as Poet Laureate. Among his works are Characters of Virtue and Vice (1691), Miscellanea Sacra, a selection from various writers (1696-8), and Panacea, a Poem on Tea. He is said to have been a man of intemperate and improvident life. He wrote a reply to Beveridge, defending the style of the version on literary grounds. (Essay on Psalmody, 1710.) He d. in London in 1715. Nicholas Brady was born at Bandon (1659). He was educated at Westminster, and went afterwards to Christ Church, Oxford, and to Trinity College, Dublin. From the latter he received the degree of D.D. for services to the Protestant cause. He was a Prebendary of Cork. In the Irish war he was an active adherent of William; and three times saved his native town from burning. Coming from Bandon with a petition to William, he remained in London, and was appointed Chaplain to the King; and afterwards (1702-5) Incumbent of Stratford-on-Avon. He had previously been minister of St. Catherine Cree's, and Lecturer of St. Michael's, Wood Street; probably holding some or all of these appointments in plurality. Notwithstanding the income derived from his appointments, his extravagance obliged him to keep a school, while incumbent of Richmond (1710). He died in 1726. Besides several volumes of sermons, he published a tragedy called The Rape, or the Innocent Impostors, and a poetical translation of the Aeneid of Virgil in four vols.

XIV. J. Addison.

In the Spectator of 1712, were published the well-known paraphrases of the 19th Ps., "The spacious firmament on high," and the 23rd Ps., "The Lord my pasture shall prepare." They have been attributed to Marvell, but (see Addison, J., p. 16, ii.) are Addison's. They are found in many collections, and have been admired by good judges. The style is more florid than the New Version. The fault in both is, that the sense of God's Presence, which is so vivid in the original, is subordinated to the somewhat unreal description of landscape.

XV. Watts's Version.

The versification of the Psalms engaged the attention of Isaac Watts in his early days; a translation of Ps. 137, not included in his complete Psalter, is found in Reliquiæ Juveniles. Paraphrases on Ps. 148 were published in the Horæ Lyricæ (1705); and at least half of the Psalms had been versified at the date of the publication of his Hymns (1707-9). Ps. 114 was published in the Spectator (1712); and the complete version (so far as his theory of completeness extended) in 1719; entitled, The Psalms of David imitated in the language of the New Testament, &c. Taken as a whole it is not better than Tate and Brady. There is a want of restraining reverence about it; and the turgid epithets and gaudy ornament dishonour the simple grandeur of the original. Yet it contains some of his choicest pieces, such as Ps. 84, "Lord of the worlds above;" the noble Ps. 90, "Our God, our help in ages past;" Ps. 136, "Give to our God immortal praise;" and one or two more. The Psalter is not really complete. Watts saw and was bold enough to say, that there were parts of the Psalter which could never be sung, and which were therefore useless as hymns. His renderings are paraphrases rather than translations. He breaks up the Psalms into different portions; sometimes, especially in Ps. 119, he selects and groups verses so as to produce a new hymn, and adds little prefatory stanzas. He utilized lines from his predecessors; some from Tate and Brady, more from Denham, most of all from Patrick. From Patrick also he borrowed the new principle, used long before by Luther, and by Parker, which he worked out elaborately—evangelical interpretation of the Psalms. To this, which is the really notable characteristic of the book, he devoted great pains, embodying in his verse the New Testament expositions of our Lord and the Apostles, exhibiting the Messianic Psalms in the light of the life of Christ, and expanding adumbration, type and prophecy, into their fulfillments. Such a mode of treatment was of course a new divergence from literalism, but a legitimate and fruitful one. No principle has such promise of future usefulness in the adaptation of the Psalter to the purposes of hymnology. The tender modern hymn by Sir H. W. Baker, "The King of Love my Shepherd is" (H. A. & M., 197) is an illustration; and Watts's version of Ps. 72, "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun," is a beautiful example of the principle and of his best style. At the same time it requires extreme caution and reverence, if it is to be kept from error. When he tried to push it beyond the guidance of Scripture, Watts was betrayed into such vulgarity as the substitution of Britain for Israel, &c. A full exhibition of Watts's Psalter will be found in the New Cong. H. Bk.

XVI. Blackmore, Wesley, Smart, Merrick, Basil Woodd, Dwight.

In 1721 appeared a Version by Sir Richard Blackmore, which was dedicated to George I., and on the recommendation of both the archbishops and fifteen bishops "allowed and permitted to be used in all churches, &c.," by order in Council, in precisely the same terms as The New Version. It is rather a reaction in the direction of naked literalism, and it made no way, notwithstanding its lofty patrons. In Anne Steele's Poems (1760) there are forty-seven renderings of Psalms. C. Wesley at one time or other translated nearly the whole Psalter. Some were published in 1738 and 1743; again in the Arminian Magazine, 1798-1801; and the whole are included in the Poetical Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72. They are naturally expressed in the refined and cultivated language which was habitual to C. Wesley, but they are not of high poetical excellence. The best are Ps. 23, "Jesus The Good Shepherd is"; Ps. 121, "To the hills I lift mine eyes"; and especially Ps. 131, "Lord, if Thou Thy grace impart." Charles Wesley adopts freely Watts's system of evangelical interpretation. Christopher Smart published a version (1765), in which the introduction of New Testament matter is so great, that the characteristics of the Psalms are erased. In this book there is also a great variety of new metres, and among the rest that of Cowper's Alexander Selkirk, found in Charles Wesley, and in Shenstone. James Merrick published a Psalter (1765) which attracted attention from the known learning of the author. It bears signs of the influence of Bp. Lowth's theories of Hebrew poetry, and was also approved by Secker. It is written in continuous lines, but was divided into stanzas for congregational use by Tattershall (1797), who added a prose paraphrase. It is weak and full of epithets. Montgomery calls it "immeasurable verbiage." Basil Woodd published a few psalms in 1794; other editions followed. The final one (1821) contained his own, with alternative renderings selected from Watts and Tate and Brady, &c. Timothy Dwight, the American theologian, published a revised edition of Watts (1800). A Version of a few Psalms by William Mason appeared in 1797, and with additions in 1811; and another in the same year (1811) by William Goode. A partial Version by Richard Cumberland (1801) may be mentioned for the sake of the author, not of the book.

XVII. Montgomery, Mant, Harriet Auber, Lyte.

James Montgomery's Songs of Zion (1822) contain nearly half of the Psalter. The sombre and plaintive verse of Ps. 39, "Lord, let me know mine end"; and Ps. 63, "Oh God, Thou art my God alone"; are fine examples of lonely and sorrowful trust. The 131st, "Lord, for ever at Thy side," is of a tenderer character. Ps. 91, "Call Jehovah thy Salvation"; and Ps. 103, "Oh my soul, with all thy powers," are soft and musical. Far the finest is the rich and splendid Messianic hymn which few perhaps recognise as a Paraphrase of Ps. 72, "Hail to the Lord's Anointed." Bishop Mant published a version (1824) composed with great care, and founded much on Lowth's Lectures. But the language is cold, and the Psalms assume the form of stiff and stately odes. Harriet Auber's Spirit of the Psalms was published anonymously (1829), edited by a clergyman. She uses evangelical interpretation freely. Several renderings are full of gentle melody, such as Ps. 45, "With hearts in love abounding"; Ps. 73, "Whom have we, Lord, in heaven but Thee"; and Ps. 78, "Oh praise our great and gracious Lord." A book with the same title, The Spirit of the Psalms, was published (1834) by H. F. Lyte. Though it touches nearly the whole Psalter, and though there are a few among the best that have a joyous tone, such as the sunny rendering of Ps. 84, "Pleasant are Thy courts above," still it is with the tenderness and tearfulness of the Psalms that he is most deeply penetrated. His renderings are seldom close translations; they are either free paraphrases, or the expansion of a few verses, as a theme, with free interweaving of his own thoughts and metaphors, and perhaps for this reason they are less known than they deserve. Ps. 55, "Oh had I, my Saviour, the wings of a dove," a successful treatment of an undignified metre, illustrates his habit of isolating the sad part of a psalm. Ps. 91, "There is a safe and secret place," is good; and "Far from my heavenly home," exactly represents his method and his tenderness. Few probably are aware that it is founded on Ps. 137, "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down; yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion."

XVIII. John Keble.

The Psalter or Psalms of David in English verse, by a member of the University of Oxford (1839) is the work of the revered John Keble. That he should have deemed such a thing worth doing, is, in some sort, a measure of the advance of the last forty years in the matter of church music. There was "small hope," he thought, that the custom of chanting the psalms would come in; and therefore, despite his conviction that the Hebrew was intended for chanting, not singing, and that success was "impossible," because the form and tone of English metre and Hebrew parallelism were irreconcilable, he set himself to improve the Metrical Version, "adhering reverentially to the meaning of the original." He submitted the work to Dr. Pusey. The adverse criticism which has been given had been anticipated by Keble himself. The close adherence to the terseness and the images of the Hebrew has produced some constraint and obscurity. But in the judgment of the present writer no other version has such refinement of diction, sustained merit, lyric force and fire, and flashes of imaginative energy. There are occasional traces of the influence of Scott's chivalrous phrases. Ps. 93, "God the Lord a king remaineth," is one of the finest. Ps. 46, "God our Hope and Strength abiding," is of the same order, but less chastened; the trochaic, Ps. 96, "Sing the song unheard before," is good; as also Ps. 135, "Sound high Jehovah's Name"; Ps. 136, "Praise the Lord, for He is Love"; and Ps. 148, "Praise ye the Lord from heaven."

XIX. Churton, Sir R. Grant, Conder, Hookham Frere, Trower, &c.

The Cleveland Psalter, by Archdeacon Churton (1854), is one of the best versions. It is written in firm, equal, and melodious verse, and though inferior to Keble in spirit and freshness, and high imagination, avoids his abruptness and compression by a slightly looser texture, and greater liberty of translation. Though thoroughly an original work, it adopts ideas and lines from the ancient Anglo-Saxon Version which Churton attributes to Aldhelm (see § III), from Wyatt, Sidney, Sandys, Miles Smyth and Keble. Portions of Ps. 16, "Lord keep me, for I trust in Thee"; Ps. 37, "Vex not thy soul for men of pride," are in S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hys.: Ps. 67, "God of grace, oh let Thy light," is in H. A. & M. (364). Ps. 64, "Lord, to my sad voice attending"; and Ps. 131, "Lord, my heart is with the lowly," are like Herbert.

The best is Ps. 96, "Raise the psalm; let earth adoring" in Kennedy, 1863, and the Wes. H. Bk. (604), 1875. A smooth, fairly-sustained Version, but deficient in spirit, had been published (1831) by Bp. Trower (revised in 1875). Sir Robert Grant had published some renderings early in the century, among which is the fine ornamentation of the old 104th, "Oh worship the King." J. Conder's Ps. 113, "Hallelujah, raise oh raise," is a lyric of great brightness and jubilation. A Selection of Psalms by Hookham Frere was privately printed, see his Poetical Works (1872). The Symmetrical Psalter by W. Vernon Harcourt appeared in 1856, and The Cambridge Psalter by Dr. Kennedy in 1860 (revised 1876).

XX. Recent Versions.

The reader of this sketch will have observed that in one aspect it is the history of the long tenacious struggle of the Metrical Psalter against the growing power of original hymns as the material of praise. This conflict has been now long ended, and the task of versifying the Psalms greatly simplified by enfranchisement from the routine metres. But fresh efforts are still made under these freer conditions. A version of considerable freshness, freedom, and spirit appeared in 1863, with an irregular structure of verse, by Mr. A. Malet. The Companion Psalter, by Rev. T. R. Birks (1874), is a valuable compilation of the choicest pieces of preceding versions, and contains several of his own developments of the meditative psalms. His lyric measures are often soft and melodious: he introduces freely Evangelical ideas; but they are not always the legitimate unfolding of the psalm, and sometimes the groundwork is scarcely perceptible. Ps. 19, "The heavens declare Thy glory"; Ps. 20, "O Christ, whose intercession"; Ps. 80, "Oh King of Mercy"; and Ps. 89, "O comfort of the weary"; are good specimens. The Marquess of Lorne published alternate renderings of the Scottish Version (1877). The late Dr. Irons promised a complete version, written with special attention to Hebrew parallelisms; an instalment of it appeared in 1875. The latest versions are by Digby Seymour (1882), and Digby S. Wrangham (1885).

Among the efforts to make the Psalter compete with original hymns may be noted Matthew Henry's Family Hymns (really selected Psalms, 1695); Dorrington's Devotions in Psalms and Hymns and Spiritual Songs, arranged as a hymnbook for Sundays, &c.; Select Psalms and Hymns for the use of St. James's Westminster (1697). The most interesting is an arrangement by Romaine (1775), to which is prefixed an essay in defence of the Old Version, a strenuous protest against the growing power of Wesley's hymns.

XXI. Conclusion.

The quotations in the foregoing sketch shew that metrical psalms still contribute largely to our hymnals. The least successful renderings have been those of the Messianic psalms. Nor have the penitential psalms yielded much for Lenten use. In one or two instances the dauntless trust of the Psalmists has been nobly reproduced. And for the worship of the masses certain grand and simple psalms are unequalled. The indirect influence of the long tutelage of the Psalter must not be lost sight of. It gave to our earlier hymns a severity, a breadth, an objective tone, and a wide and deep base in natural religion. Nowhere is the glory of God in his works so magnificently exhibited as in the Psalms, and the strength of the presentation is grounded on the whole power of the works in themselves, not on some single and perhaps sentimental aspect of the works. Nowhere is the jubilation of praise, unchecked by the chilling and irrelevant thought—true and sad as it is—of the sinfulness and inadequacy of our utterance, so majestic. These characteristics are impressed deeply on Watts; and they are of abiding value, as a counterpoise to the morbid emotion, effeminate, self-consciousness, and anatomy of motives, which make some modern hymns so sickly. The influence of the Psalter on English hymns is by no means worked out. It may take new forms, select and develop more freely from the ideas, but it is impossible that the Psalms can cease to inspire many of the deepest, tenderest, most intense utterances in future hymns. [H. L. B.]

Psalms, English. Minor Versifiers.

Biographical articles of the greater versifiers of the Psalms named in the foregoing catalogue, are given under their respective names in this Dictionary. In the notes given below the writers of less importance, either in themselves or in the work which they have done in paraphrasing the Psalms in metre, are grouped together in alphabetical order; and a reference number is added to aid in tracing out each person's work in the article on Psalms, Versions in English, p. 926.

Bartholomew, Alfred. From his Sacred Lyrics, 1831, we gather that he was an architect. B. 1801, d. 1845. [No. 227.]

Beaumont, John. From his Original Psalms, 1834, the following have been transferred to Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866:—(1) "I'll bless my Saviour, God." Ps. cxli. (2) "Lord, I daily call on Thee." Ps. cxli. (3) "Many times since days of youth." Ps. cxvii. (4) "Praise ye Jehovah, shout and sing." Ps. cxlviii. [No. 243.]

Bird, Charles Smith, was the author of Ever and Ever and other Poems, Liverpool, 1833. [No. 234.]

Blackall, Elizabeth, author of Psalms and Hymns and Spiritual Songs, pub. in Dublin, 1835, which contained, along with other poems, versions of twelve Psalms. Her intention was "to complete the paraphrase of the Psalms," as she states in her Preface. This, however, so far as can be gathered, was never carried out. [No. 244.]

Bowring, Edgar Alfred, was b. in 1826, and was M.P. for Exeter, 1868. According to Glass (p. 183) he has also "translated two small volumes of German hymns, selected by the Queen, and privately printed for her Majesty's use." [No. 292.]

Boyse, Samuel, s. of a dissenting minister, was b. in 1708. He received the rudiments of his education in Dublin, and then passed on to the University of Glasgow. As a poet and man of letters he was well known and esteemed; but his manners were of the lowest, and his life most wretched. He d. in Shoe Lane, London, in obscure lodgings, in May, 1747, and was buried by the parish. [No. 133.]

Brampton, Thomas, was one of the earliest translators of the Psalms into English metre. Nothing is known of him, save what is recorded on the ms. copy of the Seven Penitential Psalms, which is preserved in the British Museum. At the beginning of this ms. is written—"Frater Thomas Brampton Sacrae Theologiae Doctor fr' minore pauperib' confesso' de Latino in Anglia Anno Dom. 1414, ad Dei honorem et incrementum devotionis." This little work is written on beautiful vellum, and in an old curious mixture of Anglo-Saxon characters, and old English words, which tends to show that it was made at a time when the language was in a state of change. [No. 1.]

Brathwaite, Richard, b. 1588, d. 1673, 'at one time Deputy-Lieutenant of the county of Westmoreland, was the author of several metrical works. Hazlewood, the editor of Brathwaite's Barnabee's Journal, is of opinion that No. 63 by "R. B." is his work.

Bryan, Joseph, one of the "other gentlemen" referred to in No. 51. Concerning him we know nothing except that his name is prefixed to the Introduction to the ms. named, and that he wrote some of the versions therein. See Davidson, C., below.

Byrd, William, one of the "Gentlemen of the Queen's honourable Chappell," s. of Thomas Byrd, was b. circa 1538, and d. in London, July 4, 1623. He was a chorister in St. Paul's Cathedral; Organist of Lincoln Cathedral, 1563-1569; and Gentleman of the Chapel Royal, 1569. He was the composer of several well-known anthems. [No. 32.]

Carey, Thomas. A gentleman attached to the court of King Charles I. See Davidson, C., below.

Cayley, C. B., B.A., translator of Dante's Divine Comedy, author of Pysche's Interludes, &c. [No. 296.]

Chamberlayne, James, composed a few poems that he might "not trifle away too much of his time," and pub. a selection therefrom as:—A Sacred Poem on the Birth, Miracles, Death, Sepulture, Resurrection, and Ascension of the Most Holy Jesus. 1680. To this were added 18 Psalm Versions, the Lamentations of Jeremiah in verse, &c. [No. 93.]

Cobb, Samuel, M.A., sometime Master of Christ's Hospital, pub. in 1707, Poems on Several Occasions. He d. in 1713. [No. 113.]

Cole, Benjamin Thomas Halcott, M.A., sometime Fellow of Magdalen College, Cambridge, and Rector of Warbleton, Sussex, B.A. 1803, M.A. 1807. [No. 278.]

Coleraine, Henry Hare, second Baron (Irish Peerage), d. at Tottenham in 1708. In addition to his paraphrases from the Italian, &c., he was the author of a History of Tottenham. [No. 85.]

Coldwell, William, sometime resident in Sheffield as an architect and surveyor, was a local preacher in the Methodist New Connexion body. He pub. (1) Fables and Moral Poems, Halifax 1818; (2) Hebrew Harmonies and Allusions, 1820; and (3) The Bk. of Praises, &c. [No. 204.]

Colman, George, the younger, s. of George Colman, a dramatic writer, and for some time the Lord Chamberlain's Examiner of Plays, was b. at London, Oct. 21, 1762, and d. in 1836. [No. 177.]

Coney, Thomas, D.D., sometime Rector of Chedzoy, Somersetshire, and Prebendary of Wells. [No. 123.]

Cosowarth, Michael. This versifier's history is unknown to us. His Version of Some Select Psalms is in the British Museum (Hart. 6906). [No. 37.]

Craddock, Thomas, a native of Staffordshire, and sometime Rector of St. Thomas's Church, Baltimore County, Maryland, pub. his paraphrase of the Psalms as below. He d. in 1760. [No. 144.]

Cumberland, Henry Clifford, Earl of, was b. in 1591, and d. at York, Dec., 1643. "In the dissensions which arose between Charles the First and his Parliament the Earl is said to have 'distinguished himself more by his fidelity to the King's cause, than by his activity or skill': his character will be found in Clarendon's History, where he is called 'a man of great honour and integrity;' and Dr. Bliss has introduced a brief memoir of him into his edition of Wood's Athenae Oxonienses" (Holland). [No. 53.]

Cumberland, Richard, dramatic and miscellaneous writer, was b. at Cambridge, 1732, and d. at Tunbridge, 1811. He was for some time Secretary to the Board of Trade; but during the latter part of his life he devoted himself entirely to literature. [No. 188.]

Daniel, Richard, D.D., sometime Dean of Armagh and Chaplain to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. [No. 122.]

Darby, Charles, M.A., was for some time Rector of Kedington, Suffolk. Beyond this we have no details. [No. 111.]

Davies, Sir John (Davis), b. in 1570, d. Dec. 7th, 1626. His works make 3 vols. in Dr. Grosart's Fuller Worthies' Library, 1876. [No. 38.]

Davison, Christopher, second s. of William Davison and brother of Francis Davison (see below), was a member of Gray's Inn. We cannot ascertain the dates of his birth or death. He is one of the "other gentlemen" referred to in No. 51.

Davison, Francis, eldest s. of William Davison, Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, and brother of the above, was b. circa 1575, and was a member of Gray's Inn. He d. circa 1621. His Poetical Rhapsodie was pub. in 1602. [No. 51.]

The Hart. MS. referred to in No. 51 is one of three mss. which are thus referred to by W. T. Brooke in his ed. of Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory and Triumph, &c., Lond., Griffith, Farran, &c., 1888, p. 242.—"No complete edition of the psalms of Francis and Christopher Davison has hitherto appeared; and for the first time (with the hitherto unknown Introduction of Francis Davison himself) they are here completely given. It is probable that Davison's death interrupted the plan of the collection, and it remained unfinished. At least three mss. of it have survived [i.] the apparently original ms. in the Harleian Collection; [ii.] a transcript by Ralph Crane with additional poems [referred to by Farr in his Select Poetry, &c., 1845, p. xxx., under T. Carey, whose version of Ps. 91 is therein; and [iii.] the anonymous ms., formerly Archdeacon Cotton's and the late Alexander Gardyne's, from which we print. Of the fellow-workers of the Davisons—Joseph Bryan, Richard Gippes, and Thomas Carey—little is known. Bryan contributed twenty-two psalms to the collection; Francis Davison eighteen; Christopher Davison and Richard Gippes each two; and T. Carey a single psalm." Mr. Brooke reprints about one half of the mss., all of Bryan's but one being omitted.

Dennis, Thomas. Concerning this author our information is limited to the titlepage of his version. [No. 191.]

Dickson, Thomas, a schoolmaster at Chirnside, Berwickshire. [No. 242.]

Dod, Henry, is called by G. Wither "Dod the silkman." Beyond this, and that his "late ridiculous translations of the Psalms was, by authority, worthily condemned to the fire" (i.e. burnt by the common hangman), and that he turned the Act of Parliament enjoining a Public Thanksgiving on the Fifth of November, into metre to be sung in church, we know nothing of him. [No. 40.]

Donald, Robert, an illiterate person of Woking, Surrey, was persuaded in his own mind that he had a divine call to prepare a new version of the Psalms, and when done had to get the assistance of a friend to correct the grammar. [No. 196.]

Ducarel, P. J. Our knowledge of this versifier is confined to the details on the titlepage of No. 236.

Eden, John, B.D., b. circa 1770, and d. in 1840, was for 41 years Vicar of St. Nicholas and St. Leonard's, Bristol. His version of the Psalms was pub. posthumously with Memoir. [No. 267.]

Fairfax, Thomas, Lord, eldest s. of Ferdinand, Lord Fairfax, was b. at Denton, Yorkshire, in 1611, and d. at New Appleton, Yorkshire, in 1671. He is well known in history as a general of the Parliamentary Army during the Civil War. [No. 80.]

Farr, Edward. Of this versifier we know nothing beyond the information on the title page of No. 249.

Fenwick, George, B.D., b. in 1689, was rector of Hallaton, Uppingham, for 37 years, and d. April 10, 1760. [No. 154.]

Feilde, Edward, M.A., b. in 1795, and educated at Cambridge. He was for some time a master in a large school at Ealing, and curate of Plaistow. Whilst at Plaistow he pub. Church of England Psalmody; or, Portions of the New Version adapted to every Day of the Month, and to the Services or Circumstances of every Sunday throughout the Year. Lond., Rivingtons, 1831. The Preface is signed "E. F." He was incumbent of Rock and Rennington from 1834 to 1848, and it was during his residence there that he pub. his Ps. of David. He is said by those who knew him to have been a learned man and a devoted parish priest. He d. at Harrogate, Jan. 25, 1851. [No. 273.]

Fleming, Robert, s. of Robert Fleming, a Scottish Presbyterian minister, was b. at Cambuslang, and studied at Leyden and Utrecht. He was for a time minister of an English congregation at Leyden, and then at Amsterdam. Eventually he became pastor of the Scottish Church in Lothbury, and was also lecturer at Salters' Hall. He d. May 21, 1716. He was the author of Christology, in 3 vols., and of the Rise and Fall of Rome Papal, 1701. [No. 101.]

Psalms, French. The French Psalms, in common with the English, the German, and others, require a distinct history from the hymnody of the same nation.

i. Clément Marot.

1. Very few trs. of the Psalms have been found prior to the great Psalter of Marot and Beza. The germ of this work was Ps. 6, attached to the Miroir de tres chrestienne Princesse Marguerite de la France Roynie de Navarre, Duchesse d'Alençon (1533). At least 13 others must have been tr. by 1539 (§ 2). In 1540 the psalms which Marot had then written and circulated in ms., were in the highest favour with Francis I., Catherine de Médicis, the Dauphin, and the court. They were sung to ballad tunes. Charles V. rewarded Marot with 200 golden doubloons for his present of 30 Psalms, and asked him to versify for him "Confitemini Domino" (prob. Ps. 18).

2. The earliest printed psalms by Marot emanated from the Protestant party of the Reformation, and it is not clear from what source Calvin obtained them. The text also of these early psalms differs from the first edition afterwards pub. by Marot himself. In an unique book in the library at Munich, entitled Aulcuns Pseaumes et Cantiques mys en chant, Strasbourg, 1539—the earliest effort of Calvin to introduce singing into public worship at Strasbourg—there are 18 psalms, together with the Song of Simeon, the Creed, and Ten Commandments. There are melodies to each piece.

Of these psalms 13 are, in a form varied from his own subsequent ed. of 1542, by Marot. (Pss. 1, 2, 3, 15, 19, 32, 51, 103, 114, 115, 130, 137, 143.) Of the other pieces, two (Ps. 113 and the Creed) are in prose. The other pieces (Pss. 25, 36, 46, 91, 138, The Song of Simeon, and The Ten Commandments) are strongly marked off from Marot's pieces by their inversions, want of feminine rhymes, and German melodies. They are probably by Calvin himself.

3. In 1541 appeared Psalms de David, translatez de plusieurs auteurs, et principalement de Cle. Marot, veu, recongneu et corrigé par les theologiens, nommeement par M. F. Pierre Alexandre, concioneateur ordinaire de la Roynie de Hongrie. Anvers. (An unique copy is in the possession of M. Henri Lutteroth.) The contents of this volume are 30 psalms by Marot, and 15 by ten or eleven different authors. Some of these latter are alternative versions of the same psalm. Tunes of the day are named for one of Marot's psalms and nine of the others. The text of the 30 psalms of Marot, though, in the 13 Pss. named above, identical with that found in the Strasbourg edition, differs from that of Marot's own edition (1542) of these same 30 psalms. Pierre Alexandre may have received Marot's psalms from the Queen of Hungary, who may herself have obtained them from her brother Charles V. Alexandre was inclined to the Huguenot doctrines, and at a later period (1555) became pastor of the Reformed congregation at Strasbourg.

4. A very curious Liturgy (of which there is an unique copy in M. Gaiffe's possession) appeared in 1542.

La maniere de faire prieres aux eglises francoyses . . . ensemble pseaumes et cantiques francoyses qu'on chante aus dictes eglises . . . (the title is of great length). At the end of the psalms there is the following note: "Imprimé à Rome par le commandement du Pape, par Théodore Brusz Alleman, son imprimeur ordinaire." The Psalms in this edition comprise all the psalms by Marot and others in the Strasbourg ed. (1539); the other 17 psalms of Marot contained in the Antwerp ed., and 4 others from the same book (43rd signed "C. D.," 120th anon, 130th signed "A.," 142nd signed "D."). To these are added the Song of Simeon, Creed, and Ten Commandments of the Strasbourg book, and Marot's Pater Noster from the Miroir. The 21 melodies of the Strasbourg book are re-printed, together with 8 new ones. The pretended imprimatur of the Pope was a pious fraud, of which there is a similar example in one of the works of Lefèvre d'Étaples, the first translator of the Bible in French. The real place of printing seems identified as Strasbourg by a letter of Pierre, the pastor of Strasbourg, 25th May, 1542 (Opera Calvini vi. 15), addressed to the chief magistrate at Metz, in which he says that a new ed. of the Liturgy and the psalms had been made, the previous one being exhausted; and begs him to recover 600 copies of it, which had been seized at Metz on account of an inconsiderate addition of the printer "Imprimé à Rome avec privileges du Pape." The internal evidence afforded by a comparison of the liturgical portions with subsequent liturgies at Geneva (1542) and Strasburg (1545) is consistent with this assumption. The printer was very probably Jehan Knobloch. Pierre Brully, the pastor, was perhaps the editor.

5. In the library at Stuttgart there is an unique copy of Calvin's first Liturgy pub. at Geneva, entitled

"La forme des prieres et chantz ecclésiastiques avec la maniere d'administrer les Sacremens, et consacrer le mariage, selon la coutume de l'Eglise Ancienne, 1542."

There is no name of place or printer; but the device of an olive branch, ending in an ornamental "G.," is known to be the mark of Jean Gérard or Girard, a Genevan printer. The liturgical contents of this volume are of great interest; but the only portion of them that concerns our subject is the preface, which exhibits Calvin's sentiments on the use of music in public worship.

The Psalms are a reprint of those in the last-mentioned ed., known as the Pseudo-Roman, with the omission of the prose 113th Ps., and the 4 by various authors (43, 120, 130, 142). The other pieces of the Pseudo-Roman are also reprinted, with the exception of the prose Creed, which is exchanged for Marot's Creed, pub. in the Miroir. Some slight alterations are made in the text of the Psalms. But considerable alteration is made in the melodies. Only 17 are common to this and the Pseudo-Roman ed., and modifications which lessen their German character are made in these. There are 22 new melodies, 14 as substitutes for rejected tunes of the earlier edition, 8 set to psalms, which previously had no melodies attached to them. This musical contribution is probably the work of Louis Bourgeois.

A second ed. of this book, probably only a reprint with no material alteration, is known to have been pub. later in the year. These several editions show plainly that for nearly three years the psalms of Marot were in favour alike in the Catholic court and the Huguenot worship.

6. In 1542, Marot himself pub. his 30 Psalms. The title of the book is—

Trente Pseaumes de David, mis en francoys par Clement Marot, valet de chambre du Roy, avec privilege. Imprimé a Paris, s. d. (An unique copy is in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.)

It contains the privilege from the King, dated Nov. 30th, 1541; an epistle dedicatory to Francis I., not without evidences of real religious feeling, in which Marot contrasts the true inspiration of David with the fabled muse of Greece and Rome; and the 30 Pss. of the other editions (1-15, 19, 22, 24, 32, 37, 38, 51, 103, 104, 113, 114, 115, 130, 137, 143). At the head of some of the Psalms are short indications of the nature of the metre, but no suggestions of melodies, and no music. The text of this ed. varies, as has been said, greatly from that in the editions noticed in the last section. Whether both texts are by Marot himself, or whether the editions of 1539 and 1541 represent a text revised by other hands than his, it is difficult to decide.

M. Douen has printed the principal variations in the first 8 Psalms, and pronounces that the Paris text is infinitely superior in elegance and rhyme; that in only 4 places (of these 8 Pss.) are the variations in the other editions more literal than in Marot's; and that of these 4 Marot himself adopted 3 in his ed. of 1543. On the ground of its superiority, and of the phrases on the Antwerp title-page ("recongneu et corrigé"), which indicate revision in that ed., he decides that the Paris ed. for the first time prints Marot's genuine text, and that the others exhibit a text that has been altered by Pierre Alexandre and the Theologians. To this verdict however the 13 Pss. in the Strasburg ed. (1539) which are identical in text with those of Pierre Alexandre's book (1541) are a considerable objection. The imprimatur of Pierre Alexandre also in the Antwerp ed., does not seem necessarily to indicate extensive alteration, for he says, "nec in ipso reperi quod possit pius aures offendere;" and the other 14 psalms by various authors would share the revision with the 30 of Marot.

7. The publication of the 30 Psalms drove Marot from France to Geneva. Though the privilege for it had been signed by three doctors of theology, the book was condemned by the Sorbonne, and Marot was only saved from arrest by flight. In August, 1543, he pub., evidently at Geneva, Cinqvante Pseaumes en francois par Clement Marot. Item vne Epistre par luy nagueres enuoyée aux dames de France.

The contents of this book are:—

An Epistle to the Ladies of France; an Epistle to the King; the 30 psalms already pub., revised and corrected; 20 fresh psalms (the Song of Simeon counting as one); the Commandments, the Articles of the Faith (the Creed); and the Lord's Prayer; the Angelic Salutation; and two prayers, one before, one after meals. The Epistle to the King is very brief. It contains an allusion to the fact that Francis had commanded him to continue the work of translation. The Epistle to the Ladies of France is in the courtier vein. He bids them quit their love-songs to Cupid to sing Him, Who is love indeed, "O bien heureux qui voir pourra, Fleurir le temps que l'on oira Le labourer à sa charrue, Le charretier parmi la rue, Et l'artisan en sa boutique Aueques un Pseaume ou Cantique En son labour se soulager." The new psalms are Pss. 18, 23, 25, 33, 36, 43, 45, 46, 50, 72, 79, 86, 91, 101, 107, 110, 118, 123, 138. There is no music to this ed. A few months later however an ed. (now lost) of these Fifty Psalms, with music, was pub. along with the Liturgy and Catechism by Calvin. The 5 psalms, generally assigned to Calvin, which had hitherto come down from the Strasburg ed. (1539) were in this ed. replaced by Marot's.

8. Marot's death (1544) arrested the progress of the Genevan Psalter. But his psalms were utilised in other quarters. Editions of them appeared in Paris, Lyons, Strasburg, and Geneva; 16 of which are extant. The Strasburg ed. of 1545, printed 10 of the new psalms, together with the psalms and pieces of Marot and others in the Pseudo-Roman ed., the Commandments by Marot, and a hymn, "Salutation à Jésus-Christ," beginning "Je Te salue, mon certain Rédempteur" (p. 579 i.) Louis Bourgeois pub. a harmonised ed. of the Cinqvante Pseaumes in 1547. A compilation of Marot's psalms, 29 by Gilles d'Aurigny, 42 by Robert Brinceel, 31 by "C. R." and "Cl. B.," forming an entire Psalter, was pub. in Paris (1550). And Poitevin's 100 psalms (Poitiers 1550) were bound up, in later editions, with Marot's 50 as a complete Psalter.

ii. Completion of the Psalter by Beza.

1. The Genevan Psalter was completed by Théodore de Beze, at the request of Calvin, who had found on his table a tr. of Ps. 16. The first instalment of them was principally written at Lausanne. On March 24, 1551, he requested from the Council of Geneva permission to print "the rest (le reste) of the Psalms of David," which he "has had set to music," and asked for a privilege of exclusive sale. They were however very far from being completed at that date; and on June 24 Calvin wrote to Viret asking Beza to send what psalms he had, without waiting for the versification of their companions. Accordingly before the year closed there appeared:—

Trente quatre psaumes de David nouvellement mis en rime françoise au plus pres de l'Hebreu, par Th. de Beze de Veselay, en Bourgogne. Geneue. 1551.

This volume contains a dedicatory epistle, "A l'Église de nostre Seigneur," and the new psalms by Beza.

The Psalms are: 16, 17, 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 34, 35, 39, 40, 41, 42, 44, 47, 73, 90, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 129, 131, 132, 133, 134. The dedicatory epistle is justly eulogised by MM. Douen and Bovet. It illustrates the difference of standpoint and temper between the two poets. In place of the lighter grace, the classical and mythological allusions, and the courtier vein of Marot's addresses to the King and the Ladies of France, we have the strong firm tone, the contempt of worldly poetry, the sense of endurance, hardness, even scorn, left by persecution, which marks the Huguenot theologian. The Church to which he dedicates his work is the "petit troupeau," which, despite its lowliness is the treasure of the earth, the kings he honours are not Francis the king of flatterers, but the champions of the Reformation in Germany and Edward VI. of England. There is however a high eulogium of Marot, "Las! tu es mort sans auoir auancé Que le seul tiers de l'œuvre commencé, Et qui pis est, n'ayant laissé au monde, Docte poète homme, qui te seconde Voila, pour quelz quand la mort te rait, Auecques toy se tent aussi Dauld."

2. In 1554, 6 new psalms (52, 57, 63, 64, 65, 111), 4 of them without melodies, the other 2 set to previous tunes, were added as an appendix to the combined ed. of Marot and Beza which had been pub. under the title of Psaumes Octante trois in 1552. In an ed. without date, Ps. 67, the Song of Moses, the Song of Simeon, and the Ten Commandments are added.

3. The various volumes extant show no further increase of pieces until 1562, when the complete Psalter appeared, entitled Les Psaumes mis en rime françoise par Clément Marot et Théodore de Beze.

The privilege for this ed., obtained from Charles IX. (1), is dated Dec. 26, 1561. It was printed for Antoine Vincent at Geneva, Paris, Lyons, Caen, and other places, in 24 editions at least of that year. There are 60 new psalms, and 40 new melodies; the total of melodies is raised to 125. The Pater Noster and the Creed are no longer included; the Song of Simeon and the Ten Commandments are alone appended.

4. The music of the Psalter is beyond our scope. It is treated fully in M. Douen's work, in a series of articles in The Musical Times (1881), and in several articles of The Dictionary of Music. The melodies in the Strasburg ed. (1539) are of German descent. The editor of the Genevan psalters (1542-5 probably, 1545-57 certainly) was Louis Bourgeois. Only 11 of the Strasburg melodies are retained in the complete Psalter, most of them in a modified form; 74, the finest in the Psalter, are by Bourgeois; the 40 of 1562 are by an unknown hand. Side by side with the work of Bourgeois, Guillaume Franc, cantor at Lausanne, wrote in 1551 melodies for the psalms then recently translated by Beza, and obtained a licence to print them at Geneva, together with the original melodies to Marot's psalms. Nothing further however, as far as is known, was done until 1565, when a psalter was printed at Geneva for use at Lausanne. The bulk of the tunes in this psalter were derived from that of Geneva, 4 melodies by Bourgeois, and 15 by the unknown editor of 1562. The new tunes introduced by Franc were 46 in number, of which 26 were by himself, one from the first Genevan psalter of 1542, and afterwards omitted, with 19 from other sources. Harmonised editions, though never admitted for public worship, were printed from the first. Among these may be named 50 Psalms by Bourgeois in 5 parts (1545); 31 Psalms by Pierre Certon (1546) for the Sainte Chapelle, at Paris (1); Goudimel's three celebrated editions (1564, 1565, 1566), the latest of great elaboration; Claude Le Jeune's (pub. posthumously in 1601). The immense popularity of the music contributed largely to the wide spread of the Psalter in translations, the melodies necessitating the adoption of the French metres.

5. The fortunes of the Genevan Psalter, thus completed, were brilliant and singular. Its use even among Catholics did not cease for awhile. It was among the books which Francis I. cherished on his deathbed. Henry II. used one of Beza's psalms as a hunting song (1). Among the Huguenots, psalm-singing became universal. Catholic troops, wishing to disguise their identity, would raise a psalm. Crowds sang psalms in the streets. At the Pré aux Clercs, multitudes, among whom were the King and Queen of Navarre, sang them enthusiastically. In Poitou the Catholic curé mixed psalms with the Latin hymns. Florimond de Rémond, a contemporary author, dates the foundation of the Huguenot Church by the practice of psalm-singing. The necessity of conciliating the Huguenot power accounts for the singular fact that Charles IX., and Charles V. (probably really the Duchess of Parma, acting as his Vicegerent) in the Low Countries, granted a privilege for the sale of the book. MM. Douen and Bovet have collected together the glorious and touching records of its use on the battle-field and at the stake in the days of Coligny, and in the dragonnades after, the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The 65th was the psalm of battles. The 51st, the Song of Simeon and others, were sung in the flames. The number of editions of the book is enormous. The splendid bibliography of M. Douen gives 1400 editions of French metrical psalters, far the largest share of which is composed of Marot and Beza's psalms. The influence of this book extended far beyond France. In German, 50 of these psalms were translated by Melissus of Heidelberg, at the command of the Elector Palatine Frederick II. (1572). A complete version, following the text, metres, and melodies of the French, presented (1565) to Albert of Brandenburg, was pub. by Ambrosius Lobwasser, a Lutheran (1573), with Goudimel's harmonies. Though never accepted by the Lutherans, it became the recognised Psalter of Germany and German Switzerland, and was frequently revised in the 17th and 18th cents. Serving as an original, it was re-translated in several dialects of the Grisons (among others in Italian) and in Danish. The Dutch version of Dathenus (1566) became the universal Dutch Psalter of the Low Countries; 30 revisions of it, all preserving the French metres and melodies, were made before its displacement by a new version (1773). To these may be added trs. from the French into Italian, Spanish, Bohemian, Polish, Latin, and even Hebrew. In England a volume entitled All the French Psalm Tunes with English Words (1632) is in the British Museum, Lambeth and Lincoln Cathedral libraries. At the end of a French tr. of the Liturgy of the Church of England, dedicated to George I. (1719, London), perhaps for the Savoy Church, the psalms of Marot and Beza are printed. In England's Hallelujah, by John Vicars (1631), are Divers of David's Psalmes according to the French forms and metre. The influence of the French on the O. V. of England and Scotland is only perceptible in a few French tunes and metres; 30 of the Scottish, and a smaller number of the English melodies are French. Pss. 50, 104, 120, 121, 124, 127, 129, in the English, and Pss. 102, 107, 110, 118 in the Scottish version are identical in melody with the corresponding French Psalms.

6. The general verdict of critics from the time of Voltaire to that of Sainte-Beuve has been severe. MM. Bovet and Douen are more kindly. Yet the former speaks strongly of the wearisomeness, diffuseness, inversions, obscurity, and vulgar, even gross, expressions in the work of Beza, and the prosy commonplace, inversion and coarseness in the far better verse of Marot. The judgment of the 16th and 17th cents., when the antiquated language was current, and the coarseness less perceptible, was full of eulogy. Out of the wide variety of subject matter, emotions and poetical style which the Psalter exhibits, the simplicity, plaintiveness, lyric grace, and subjective meditation are those best reproduced in Marot's choicest pieces, descending through him into the body of French hymns. The striking variety of metre evidently impressed Kethe and Whittingham, and an imitation of it was ineffectually attempted by them, as a relief to the humdrum monotony of the English and Scottish versions. The solidity, the breadth, the celebration of God in nature, on the other hand, which passed from our Old Version into the work of Watts, has no counterpart in the French Psalter, or the hymns that succeeded it. The contrast is due doubtless to deeper differences in the genius of the nations. The merit of fidelity has been generally conceded. The work of Marot was based on the direct translation from the Hebrew by Vatable, and perhaps other Hebrew studies. Beza was a deep student of the Psalms, as well as a theologian.

iii. The Revised Psalters of the Reformed Church and Intermediate Versions.

1. The version of Marot and Beza was the psalm-book of the Reformed Church. The French Lutheran Church, which from the first used hymns in worship, felt less the necessity of a complete Psalter. The Frankfurt Pseaumes, Hymnes, et Cantiques (1612) contains 35 psalms by Matthieu Barthol. M. Douen also mentions in his bibliography Les Pseaumes de David, avec les hymnes de D. M. Luther et autres docteurs de l'Eglise mis en vers françois selon la rime et composition allemande. Montbeliard, 1618. More than 50 versions were pub. in the interval that preceded the revision of Marot and Beza. Two—a poor one by the Abbe Philippe Des Portes (1591), and that by Godeau, bishop of Grasse (1644), to which Louis XIII. contributed four tunes, and which was interdicted, because the Huguenots, forbidden for the time to sing their own psalms, adopted it—were efforts within the Roman Church. Those of Baif (1587), J. B. Chassignet (1613), Racan (1631), Desmarests de Saint-Sorlin (1680), were not intended for music. Louis des Mazures (1557), Cardinal du Perron (1589), Malherbe (1630), Corneille, Racine, and his son Louis, have left partial translations. In the Reformed Church Charles de Navières, of the suite of the Prince of Orange, pub. (1580) a version, as an improvement in versification on Marot and Beza. Diodati's Psalter (1646) testifies to the growing unpopularity ("attiedissemens et desgoutemens") of the French old version, but was not designed for public use.

2. The great change in the French language towards the close of the 16th cent. made the old version grotesque and antiquated. "People feared," says M. Bovet, "that the passage of time would gradually make the Psalms unintelligible, and that the reproach of being written in a dead language would be as true of them as of the Latin." The general decision of the synods was for a revision, preserving the metres, and departing as little as possible from the old version. The author of it was Valentine Conrart, the eminent founder of the French Academy. The first ed. is entitled—

Le Livre des Psaumes en vers françois. Par Cl. Marot et Th. de Beze. Retouchez par feu Monsieur Conrart, Conseiller Secretaire du Roy . . . Première partie, 1677.

It contained only 51 psalms, which are admitted to be the work of Conrart alone. The complete version—was to some extent perfected by La Bastide, to whom Conrart had entrusted his mss. Gilbert's Psalter asserts in the preface that La Bastide had made such large changes in Conrart's text, that the 99 new psalms are only nominally his. But M. Bovet's examination of the evidence decides—on the ground of the expressions in the preface to the ed. of 1677, and the universal ascription of the version to Conrart alone, without mention of La Bastide, in letters and acts of synods of the time—that La Bastide's alterations were probably trifling. Conrart's Psalter, though called a revision, and preserving here and there some phrases, and throughout the metres of the old version, is in reality The French New Version. When allowance is made for the difficult conditions of production, M. Bovet pronounces it, though unequal and sometimes deficient in spirit, a remarkable work; recalling in parts the naive simplicity and lyric movement of Marot, in others the noble solemnity of the classic language of the 17th cent.

3. The distressed condition of the French Huguenots under Louis XIV. preventing the authorization of this book in France, the French exiles at Zurich appealed to the Church of Geneva as the chief of the French Reformed Churches, to take up the matter. In reply the Venerable Company of Pastors appointed three of their body, Benedict Pictet, De la Rive, and Calandrin to review the version, adding as special instruction, that they should remove all phrases that savoured of Jewish imprecations against their enemies. The work was principally done by Pictet. Saurin, an avoué of Nismes, also assisted the editors. Completed in 1693, pub. in 1695, the title of this edition seems to have been ;

Les Psaumes de David mis en Vers françois. Révisés de nouveau sur les précédents éditions, et approuvés par les Pasteurs et Professeurs de l'Église et de l'Académie de Genève. (Title of 3rd ed. 1701. The 1st ed. is lost.)

The text of Conrart is for the most part retained, with occasional reversions to the language of the Old Version, and occasional excision of phrases of it, which Conrart had spared. First used in public worship at Geneva in 1698, it was sent (1699) by the Venerable Company to the other Reformed Churches, and generally adopted by the French refugees in Switzerland, and the national Churches of Erguel and Neuchâtel. The Church of Berlin reserved to itself the right to make a few alterations, which were carried out by Beausobre, whom Frederick the Great called "the best pen in Berlin," and his subsequent colleague in the translation of the New Testament, Lenfant. The title of this version is Les Pseaumes de David en vers. Nouv. Éd. retouchée une dernière fois sur toutes celles qui ont précédé, 1702.

The Church of the United Provinces, under the leadership of Jurieu, resenting the assumption of primacy by Geneva, made a longer resistance. Bitter recriminations passed, and the adoption of the new version was stigmatised as an act of schism. An unsuccessful attempt was made to produce a version of their own, and they fell back on the old version. After Jurieu's death, Conrart's version was made the base of a new revision, which is entitled:—

Les Pseaumes de David mis en vers françois et révisés par ordre du Synode Walon des Provinces-Unies. 1720.

It was authorized by the States General in 1727.

4. The era of Conrart and Pictet marks the beginning of decline. The new versions never attained the popularity of the old. The unsuitability for singing, not only of the imprecations, but of other portions more plainly showed itself. They ceased to be sung as a whole; and the selection in actual use continually narrowed. Voltaire expended his ridicule on them. Even the music began to give way to new melodies. (The earliest substitution is by De Camus (1760), who abuses the old music roundly.) Hymns pushed out the Psalms more and more at the close of the 18th century. The collections of St. Gall (1771) and Berlin (1791) have only from 50 to 60 Psalms. The Walloon Collection retained the whole Psalter, with a Supplement of hymns (1802). The ed. of Bourrit, resulting from several commissions of the Churches of France and Geneva (1823), contained the whole Psalter in an abbreviated form, with several new melodies and alterations of the old ones. That of Gallot of Neuchâtel (1830) was made on the same principle. Wilhem (1840) pub. a complete Psalter, with changes in the music, alteration of antiquated expressions and softening of the imprecations. The Recueil des Psaumes et Cantiques, Paris, 1859, has only 70 psalms: some of these fragments.

5. A few among the 130 names in M. Douen's list of persons in the 18th and 19th centuries, who have dealt with the psalter, must be added. Lefranc de Pompignan, Père Manuel, and the Abbé Pellegrin are known also as writers of hymns. Gabriel Gilbert, Resident of Queen Christina of Sweden at Paris, wrote a version (1680). Several versions by Pierre Symond, Jennet, Rivasson, and Joncourt appeared in the United Provinces during Jurieu's opposition to the Genevese revision. The seventeen odes of J. B. Rousseau, founded on the Psalms (1721), have been greatly admired. That on Ps. 18, "Les cieux instruisent" is in C.U. The Psautier Évangélique of Daniel Zacharie Chatelain (1781) is an example of that treatment of the Psalms, which was common among the followers of Luther, and which Watts elaborated—expansion of the Psalms, in the light of their evangelical fulfilment. César Malan (q.v.) pub. Les Chants de Sion (50 psalms) in 1824, and a complete psalter, Les Chants d'Israel, in 1835. The version and the music are new. Among recent editions may be named a Roman Catholic version, approved by Morlot, Abp. of Tours, Les Psaumes mis en Quatrains par un ancien Magistrat (Fey), 1844; that by Hector de St. Maur (1866), commended by M. Bovet; and that of De la Jugie (1863), esteemed by M. Douen the best of modern versions.

Public School Hymn-Books, English. Introduction.—One or two relics of the use of the Latin Hymns in our Public and Grammar Schools have been discovered and preserved in a small volume, edited by Rev. J. W. Hewett, and entitled Sacra Academica. A Collection of Latin Prayers now or lately used in certain Colleges and Schools in England, 1865. At Winchester a metrical Latin rendering of Psalm 130, "Te de profundis, Summe Rex," was sometimes sung after grace. The hymn "Jam lucis orto sidere," used to be sung on certain days, while the boys walked in procession round Chamber Court. In The Psalms, Hymns, Prayers, Graces and Dulce Domum used by the Scholars of Winchester College, 1845, it is described as "Hymnus Matutinus die Recessionis ante Festum Pentecostis." The use of this hymn may have been the germ from which Ken's "A wake, my soul" originally sprung. It is still occasionally used in Chapel. At Eton, as late as the close of Dr. Keate's Headmastership, 1830-3, the hymn "Salvator mundi, Domine" formed part of the Evening Office. "Jesu Redemptor omnium" was used in 1575 at the Thame Grammar School among the prayers before leaving school. These are in all probability survivals of a very general if not universal use of the Latin hymns at our old foundations.

The hymn-books of the English Public Schools are part of the modern hymn movement, and scarcely connected with this use of Latin hymns. Taking the hymn-books in chronological order, the Schools represented are:—

i. Rugby.—The earliest of our modern Public School Hymn-Books is Psalms and Hymns for the Use of Rugby School Chapel. It was in use in 1837. There were perhaps two editions during Arnold's lifetime; the text in this book of the hymn by J. H. Gurney, "We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread" (q.v.), is said to be a revision of Gurney's original by Buckoll. The earliest accessible edition (1850) of this book contains ■ hymn, which could not have been added until after Arnold's death. Small as it is (18 Pss. 68 Hys.), and merely providing hymns for such Christian seasons as occur during the school period, this little book contained very few pieces that are devoid of merit. The Psalms are the best specimens of the Old and New Versions, with some from Watts, Montgomery, and Henry Vaughan: the hymns are for the most part standard hymns at the present day, drawn from the Latin and German, from the Wesleys, Ken, Keble, Heber, and others. The hymns that are peculiar to it are those, partly original, partly trs. from German and Latin, by Rev. H. J. Buckoll, who is believed to have edited the book. Two hymns of his—"for the first Sunday of the half year" ("Lord, behold us with Thy blessing"), and "for the last Sunday of the half year" ("Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing")—are found in every Public School hymnal. Shortly after Dr. Goulburn's entrance on the Headmastership, he issued (1857), with Mr. Buckoll's assistance, the Psalms and Hymns for the Use of the Congregation of Rugby School Chapel. All the pieces of the original book, except 4, are retained; 10 new Psalm versions—from Milton, Keble, Trower and others; 33 hymns—from Isaac Williams, Neale, Caswall, Trench, and older sources; and an Appendix, containing a Latin Version of Ps. 117, "O omnes gentes undique" (taken from the Communion Office in the Liber precum, Ch. Ch., Oxford, 1726), with a tr. "O all ye nations, praise the Lord," and a Selection of Psalms (Latin titles only) for chanting between the Litany and the Communion Service (really the Introits from the 1st Prayer Book of Edw. VI.) are added: the object being to increase the hymns for the Festivals and give a more decided Church tone to the hymnal.

In 1876, Hymns for the Use of Rugby School were published, edited by Dr. Jex-Blake, the Head Master, assisted by a Committee of Masters. The division of the book into Psalms and Hymns was discarded, 14 pieces from the previous edition were omitted, and the total of psalms and hymns together raised to 339. The names of the authors were given in the index of first lines. The new pieces are chiefly from modern sources, and most of them the accepted hymns of our general collections. Some of the pieces are more of the class of devotional poetry than of hymns; two or three of the Latin hymns are given in the original. The tone of the book is pure and high: the hymns of praise full; but there is a dejection in some of those on Prayer, Faith, and Hope, which seems more adapted to older stages of Christian experience than that of the boy.

ii. Harrow.—The next Public School to compile a Hymn-book for its own use was Harrow. Hymns for the Chapel of Harrow School were 1st pub. in 1855, edited by Dr. Vaughan (then Head Master). It is a far larger collection than either of the two prior Rugby hymn-books (240 hymns). The sources from which it is drawn are chiefly Watts and Doddridge, Cowper and Newton, the Wesleys, Heber and Milman, Ken, Keble, and the Metrical Psalms. It belongs to the older type of Church hymn-books; full of simple piety, with no great effort at relation with the Prayer Book; often losing its directness of address to God in reflection. The number of hymns on death seems out of proportion in a school collection. A few hymns (e.g. Buckoll's hymns for the opening and ending of the Half-year) are apparently taken from the Rugby Collection. The 3rd ed. of this book (1866), edited by Dr. Butler (then Head Master), retained all the hymns of Dr. Vaughan's book, and raised the number to 351. Several of the new pieces are common to the newer series of hymnals, of which H. A. & M. is the type; others are from less obvious sources. The book in its present shape might be considerably reduced without the loss of really good hymns: a pure ideal, an ardent thirst for holiness, and a vivid faith in the Unseen God are its leading ideas. Some of the pieces are too reflective to be suitable for direct worship, though useful for private meditation.

iii. Marlborough.—The Marlborough Series of hymn-books commenced in 1856, with Psalms and Hymns for Use in the Chapel of Marlborough College. About half of its 100 hymns are from the Rugby prior editions; of the other hymns three demand special notice, as having rightly been included in most subsequent Public School Collections; a hymn of Bp. Cotton's (apparently, from the description of scenery, written at Marlborough), deeply imbued with the sense of the beauty of creation, "We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth"; ■ beautiful hymn by Dr. Jex-Blake (then Assistant Master at Marlborough), on the gladness, fulness, buoyancy of human life, which is so vivid to the boy, "Lord, we thank Thee for the pleasure that our happy lifetime gives"; and one for the Anniversary of the Consecration of The Chapel (St. Michael and All Angels) by Archdeacon Farrar, "Father, before Thy throne of light, the guardian angels bend." These three hymns are an excellent illustration of a principle that runs through the numerous editions that followed under the successive Head Masters of Marlborough (see below)—the production of a book, not only good in itself, and reproducing the hymns endeared by the associations of home, but specially meeting the needs and aspirations of a Public School community. On the side of boyhood, this aim reaches its fullest achievement in the edition of 1869: it may be traced in the simplicity and clear reality, with which the Christian ideas of faith, penitence, frailty, dependence, and the stainlessness of heaven are presented, in the absence of morbid longings for death, in hymns of fortitude and endeavour, in jubilation and thanksgiving, and in celebration of God's glory in nature. The edition of 1869, and still more that of 1878 (which adds several rarer pieces, especially from the German, and has greatly enhanced the effect of the general hymns by massing them more broadly, under the headings of Praise, Prayer, Faith, and Hope), recognize the further fact, that the atmosphere of culture at a Public School permits and demands a higher literary and poetical standard, careful editing, and such full indication of sources and authors, as may encourage and suggest study of the history of hymns. Among the more choice pieces are some by Dean Stanley and F. T. Palgrave. The names of authors are given at the foot of each hymn, as well as in an index. The edition of 1869 has in an Appendix some beautiful selections of devotional poetry, from the Christian Year and other sources. Very little use is made of translations from the Latin.

iv. Cheltenham. See § xiii. Bibliography.

v. Repton.—The Repton Series of hymn-books began in 1859. The 103 hymns of the 1st ed. were reprinted in the 2nd ed., 1864 (141 pieces), and in the 3rd ed., 1869 (154 pieces). These three editions were compiled in Dr. Pears's Headmastership. The 4th ed., 1874 (211 pieces), and the 5th ed., 1881 (246 pieces), were compiled under Dr. Huckin's Headmastership. All but 20 from the original editions are retained in that of 1881; several of them are of no particular merit, and might well be omitted in any new edition: and the alphabetical arrangement, nowhere so ineffective as in a Church hymn-book, should be abandoned. This series shows no special connection with other Public School hymn-books, and has no very salient features.

vi. Wellington.—The 1st ed. of The Hymn-book for the Use of Wellington College, appeared in 1860. The three editions published during Dr. Benson's Headmastership only add about 20 pieces to those of the 1st edition (162 pieces), which is always substantially retained. In the psalm versions by Montgomery and Keble, and other pieces, and in the reproduction of the Psalms (quoted by their Latin headings only) from the 1st Prayer Book of Edw. VI., the book has affinities with the Rugby edition of 1850. But the sources from which the hymns are drawn are far wider. The hymns and trs. from the Latin, by I. Williams, Chandler, Caswall, and others, which reproduce the spirit of the Breviary, are largely used. Pieces by our older poets, by the Wesleys, Cowper and Newton, Heber and Milman, Keble and Newman, Professor Bright and Bp. Wordsworth, are combined with the familiar hymns of our general books. The principal pieces that are peculiar to the volume are the hymns and trs. from the Latin by Archbishop Benson himself. The special characteristic of the book is however by no means indicated by the range and judiciousness of selection. The order in which the hymns are to be used is fixed beforehand with elaborate care; so that morning, and night, each day of the week, each season of the year, each Holy Day, each Festival, each Sunday, by its own never varied cycle of hymns enforcing the great teaching of the Prayer Book Offices or the changes of nature, may have its distinctive familiar illustration. The idea at the root of this arrangement is evidently that prescription of hymns, as an integral part of the offices and an illustration of them, which the Breviary exhibits, and which our Prayer Book would have retained, if the Latin hymns, as well as the other parts of the offices, had been translated by the Reformers. The book is intended to reproduce this harmonious impression of hymn and office, and this power of association through stated repetition, while pressing into service the accumulated wealth of our subsequent English hymns, and the best attainable representations of the great Latin hymns themselves. It has thus a value beyond that of a Public School hymn-book; and it illustrates the gains, as well as the losses, of the omission at the Reformation. Under the present Head Master (Rev. E. C. Wickham) an Appendix, which in the 5th edition of the book contains 74 hymns, and Intros, has been added. It is a great enrichment to the book, and composed of hymns, which are in general use, with the addition of 4 Latin hymns in the original. Many of them are allotted to special Seasons and Festivals; and the book could easily be re-cast on its original principle, admitting the new hymns as alternatives: or the appendix might be classified.

vii. Clifton.—The Clifton Series began in 1863, with Psalms and Hymns for the Use of Clifton College (23 Ps., 145 Hys). It is evidently in very large measure a reproduction of the Marlborough edition of 1862, and has few hymns from any other source. The 2nd (1872) and 3rd (1885) editions have very little in common with the 1st, except pieces which are in universal use. The total in the 3rd ed. only reaches 114 pieces (68 of the 1st ed., 46 new ones). The 100 pieces that have been rejected were for the most part inferior ones: of the few good ones, Bp. Cotton's hymn, "We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth," and Dr. Jex-Blake's "Lord, we thank Thee for the pleasure," are the most surprising exclusions. In its present shape, the Clifton book is a small collection of good hymns, of pure and healthy tone, drawn chiefly from modern sources, the more special hymns being trs. by T. E. Brown from the German; it has no very salient features as a Public School hymnal. The names of the authors and composers are given at the foot of each piece, as well as in a separate index. The music of this book has been prepared with great care.

viii. Sherborne and Uppingham.—The Sherborne Psalms and Hymns, 1867, are of the Rugby and Marlborough type, and apparently borrow greatly from those hymn-books. The Hymn-book for the Use of Uppingham and Sherborne Schools, 1874, reprints the bulk of the Sherborne book, omitting the Anthems. It is enlarged to 254 pieces by the addition of good general hymns, in common use, and a number of original pieces by the Rev. E. Thring, the Head Master, and the Rev. Godfrey Thring, and translations from the German. The latter are characterised by a higher standard of metrical and poetical expression, for which German music is largely used. This appeal to a more cultured taste is further encouraged by an appendix of devotional poetry, containing some poems of singular beauty. The whole book is set to music, and contains music for the Canticles and Responses. Some of the tunes are by Mr. P. David. In 1888 the Head Master of Sherborne, the Rev. E. M. Young, pub. Hymns for the Use of Sherborne School. It is a choice selection, is well edited, and has been brought down to the latest date.

ix. Rossall.—Hymns for Use in the Chapel of Rossall School, 1880, is one of the best Public School hymn-books. It is mainly founded on the Marlborough edition of 1878, and draws largely from the same sources—Watts and Doddridge, the Wesleys, Montgomery, Heber, Kehle, Mrs. Alexander, Dr. Bonar, and Miss Winkworth. Among the rarer pieces are some by Professor Bright, Bp. Walsham How, Mr. F. T. Palgrave, Dean Stanley, Dean Plumtre, Miss Procter, the Rev. John Ellerton, and the Rev. H. A. Martin. The book is designed to express “the hopes and fears, the difficulties, trials and temptations of school-boys,” and it largely achieves its object by the full and buoyant praise, the sense of the gladness of life, and the glory of nature, and the bright Christianity it presents. Some of the pieces are more of the order of devotional poetry than hymns; but good pieces of this kind have more justification in a school hymn-book than elsewhere. Hymns “of which the burden is the weariness of earth and the longing for death,” have been specially excluded. The book is carefully edited, as regards text, indices, and indication of the authors at the foot of each hymn.

x. New Hymn-Books.—New hymnals are in course of preparation at Westminster and Merchant Taylors' Schools. The first, following the lead of the Abbey hymnal, will enshrine hymns of old Westminsters as one of its distinctive characters. The latter will pay some attention to Latin hymns.

xi. Appendices.—It may be noted that an analogy exists between the various Appendices in these books for private use, and the often forgotten catena of hymns for private devotion, of which the Sarum and Reformation Primers exhibit early examples, and the Primers of the 17th cent. Besides these there are Ken's great hymns for the use of the Winchester scholars; a book dedicated to Etonians by Randolph Gilpin, Liturgia sacra curru Theobitico . . . vel opsonia spiritualia . . . etiam pueris degustanda, 1657; and the Latin hymns attached to the edition of Herbert's Church Porch with Notes, by Canon Lowe, and others. (Parkers, 1867.)

xii. Conclusion.—Some of the aims and difficulties of the task of compiling a School hymn-book can be easily gathered from this review of the books. It should have some relation to childhood, so far as the child's devotion remains true and touching to the boy and even the man. It should express as fully as possible those spiritual moods—such as, on the one hand, the sense of dependence and frailty, young sorrow and penitence for falls, purity and the high vision of heaven, and on the other, steadfastness, resolve, the facing of odds, the warrior and chivalrous aspect of the cross, the thrilling memory of prophet and apostle, saint, hero and martyr—which vibrate in the boy's soul and conscience. It should be rich in praise and jubilation, penetrated with the majesty of God's creation, and the God-given beauty of human life. Its two greatest dangers are puerility and unreality. To the first, boys, especially in the higher forms, are intensely opposed; the second, by placing in their mouths expressions that are untrue to their nature (such as a longing for death), turns worship into something little removed from acting. As designed for a community, drawn from the higher ranks, and through its masters and older boys, full of culture, it should not only be thoroughly edited, in the matter of purity of text, exact indication of the source and authorship of each piece, effective grouping of the general hymns under declared headings and full indices, but it should aim at a higher mark of imagination and poetical form; and in schools of the Church of England, the hymn-book should be in the fullest sense the hand-maid of the Prayer Book, enhancing, not crossing her utterance of doctrine, illuminating her festivals, and through the Latin hymns (sometimes even in the original) attesting her deep root in the Catholic past.

xiii. Bibliography. The following is a full list of the hymn-books of the English Public Schools:—

At Charter House: City of London; Dulwich; Eton; Shrewsbury; St. Paul's; and others, there are no special hymn-books, H. A. & M. being that commonly in use.

[H. L. B.]

Puchta, Christian Rudolph Heinrich, s. of W. H. Puchta, then residing as Justizrath at Kadolzburg, near Nürnberg, was b. at Kadolzburg, Aug. 19, 1808. He matriculated at the University of Erlangen, in 1826, and completed his theological course at Berlin. In 1832 he was appointed Stadtvicar (general assistant preacher) at Munich, where he became acquainted with many men of light and leading; and in 1837 became re-petent in theology at Erlangen. In 1839 he was appointed professor of Philosophy and Religion in the newly organised Lyceum at Speyer (Spire), but his nervous system broke down in 1841, and he had to be confined in the lunatic asylum of Winenthal, Württemberg. After a year he was able to take charge of the parish of Eyb, near Ansbach, and then became, in 1852, second pastor, and in 1856, first pastor of St. James's Church, in Augsburg. He d. at Augsburg, Sept. 12, 1858 (Koch, vii. 277; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxvi. 687, &c.).

Puchta had a genuine poetic faculty, and a mastery of style. His early poems were secular; his later were mostly hymns. His hymns were mainly meant for private use, and appeared principally in his Morgen- und Abend-Andachten am Christlichen Hausaltar in Gesängen, Erlangen, 1843 (2nd ed. 1867, 3rd 1868). Besides these, 38—including 11 trs. from the Latin—were given in Knapp's Christotierpe, 1837-1852. A few others, with selection of his poems, edited by Knapp, appeared in his posthumous Gedichte, Stuttgart, 1860. Knapp in his Ev. L. S., 1850, included 30 hymns by Puchta, and in his edition of 1865 no less than 42. Puchta was also one of the editors of the Bavarian G. B., 1854. Those of his hymns which have passed into English (all from his Hausaltar, 1843) are:—

i. Ein neues Jahr ist angefangen. New Year. In 1843, p. 173, as above, in 6 st., entitled, "New Year's Morning." In Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 2104. Tr. as, "Another year we now have enter'd," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, January, 1866, p. 200, and Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

ii. Herr des Himmels, Gott der Gnade. Sunday. In 1843, p. 3, as above, in 6 st., entitled "Sunday Morning." In Knapp, 1850, No. 1171. Tr. as, "God of grace and Lord of heaven," in L. Rehfuess's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 88.

iii. Herr ein ganzer Leidenstag. For the Sick. In 1843, p. 227, as above, in 6 st., entitled, "In sickness. First evening." In Knapp, 1850, No. 2639. Tr. as, "Lord, a whole long day of pain," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 81. Her st. i.-iv. are No. 263 in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860.

Puer natus in Bethlehem. [Christ-mas.] A beautiful and simple Christmas carol on the adoration of the Chi'd by the ox and ass, and the visit to Him by the Magi—so equally appropriate for the Epiphany. It became a great favourite in Germany, and is found in many varying forms. The oldest text known is given by G. M. Dreves, in his Cantiones Bohemicæ, 1886, No. 178, from a Benedictine Processional of the beginning of the 14th cent., formerly belonging to the monastery of St. Georg at Hradisch, near Olmütz, and now in the University Library at Prag. Here it has 9 st., viz:—

ii. Assumpsit carnem filius; iii. Per Gabrielem nuntium; iv. Tanquam sponsus de thalamo; v. Ponitur in praesepe; vi. Cognovit bos et asinus; vii. Reges de Saba veniunt; viii. Intrans domum invicem; ix. Trino unisempiterno. From the Cantional of Jistebnicz, c. 1420, he adds, x. Sit benedicta Trinitas.

This text, in 10 st., is also found in the Hereford Brev. of 1505, where it is appointed for the Epiphany. Wackernagel, i., Nos. 309-318, gives 10 forms of varying length, the oldest being from a Munich ms. of the 15th cent. This has 6 stanzas, viz., 1, 5 (reading "Hic jacet"), 6, 7, 8 of the above text, and a 6th st., "Ergo nostra concio."

The text, which passed into the German Lutheran hymn-books and survives, e.g. in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 393 (each st. being followed by a German tr.), appeared in V. Babst's G. B., Leipzig, 1545, and is Wackernagel's No. 310. It has 10 st., viz. 1, 5 (reading "Hic jacet"), 6, 7, 10 (reading "Laudetur sancta"), and

v. De matre natus virgine; vi. Sine serpentis vulnere; vii. In carne nobis similis; viii. Ut redderet nos homines; ix. In hoc natali gaudio.

These intercalated stanzas seem to be of later origin (if not Post-Reformation), and to have been added to give the hymn a more theological ring. The text of 1545 is in Daniel, i., No. 480; and also in Trench ed. 1864, with the stanza "Intrans domum invicem" added. Tr. are:—

1. The Child is born in Bethlehem. By Elizabeth Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 173, in 11 st. of 2 l. When repeated in the People's H., 1867, it was slightly altered, and the refrain "Alleluia" was added to each stanza.

2. Infant born in Bethlehem, Born to save Jerusalem. Anonymous in Mrs. Carey Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

Other trs. are:—

1. A Babe in Bethlehem is born. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

2. A Child is born in Bethlehem, Rejoice, rejoice, Jerusalem. J. W. Hewett, 1859.

3. A Child is born in Bethlehem, And joyful is Jerusalem. R. F. Littledale, in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 69.

4. A Child is born in Bethlehem, Rejoice and sing, &c. P. Schaff, in his Christ in Song, N.Y., 1869.

5. A Child is born in Bethlehem; Exult for joy, &c. (together with the Latin). H. M. Macgill. 1876.

6. A Boy is born in Bethlehem. H. J. D. Ryder, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

7. A Child is born in Bethlehem, And joy is in Jerusalem. P. S. Worsley, in his Poems, &c. 1875.

This hymn has been very frequently tr. into German, the versions ranging from that by Heinrich of Laufenberg in 1439 down to recent times. The version in German Protestant hymn-books is generally that in V. Babst's G. B., 1545, which begins, "Ein Kind geborn zu Bethlehem," and is in 10 st. of Latin, with interlaced German versions of all save ii. (thence in Wackernagel, ii. p. 701). In later books, e.g. Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, trs. of st. ii., x., are added, from the text of V. Schumann's G. B., Leipzig, 1539. In the Roman Catholic hymn-books it is found in a great variety of forms, but all, or almost all, beginning "Ein Kind geborn zu Bethlehem."

The text used by Miss Huppuss is that in the St. Gall Katholisches G. B., 1863. The trs. from the German are (1) "A Child is born in Bethlehem, There's joy in all Jerusalem." By Dr. H. Harbaugh in the German Reformed Guardian, Dec. 1866, p. 310. (2) "A Child is born in Bethlehem, Therefore is glad Jerusalem." By Miss Huppuss, as No. 304 in E. Paxton Hood's Children's Choir, 1870.

Pugnate, Christi milites. [All Saints.] This hymn, in common with "Coelestis O Jerusalem" (p. 240, ii.), is usually given as being in the Paris Breviary of 1736. This is however not the case. It is found in the Brev. of Chalons-sur-Marne, 1736 (Hiemalis, p. 148), appointed for Saturday; in the Amiens Brev. of 1746; the Paris Brev. of 1822, and other French Brevs. Also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Soldiers who to Christ belong. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 256, in 5 st. of unequal lines. This was rewritten for the Hymnary, 1872, and repeated from the Hymnary in Thring's Coll., 1882.

2. Soldiers who are Christ's below. By J. H. Clark, written at Marston, Montgomery, on Palm Sunday, 1865, and pub. in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M. Also in the revised edition, 1875.

Another tr. is:—

Soldiers of Christ, fight manfully. A. J. B. Hope. 1844. [J. J.]

Pullain, John. [Old Version, § ix. 4.]

Pulsum supernis sedibus. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Annunciation of B. V. M.] Appeared in the Cluniac Breviary, 1686, p. 949; in Santeuil's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 3 (ed. 1698, p. 88), and in the Paris Breviary, 1736, where it is appointed for the Feast of the Annunciation at Lauds. The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and H. M. Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed & Life, 1876. Tr. as:— Long time the fallen human race. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 100. This is given in several collections, and sometimes with alterations. In the Hymnary, 1872, it begins "Far from their home, our fallen race." The alterations in this case are somewhat numerous.

Other trs. are:—

1. Driven from their home, their pathway lost. I. Williams. 1839.
2. Exil'd from Paradise and Heaven. W. Palmer. 1845, p. 59.
3. Poor wanderers, banished from their home. R. Campbell. 1850.
4. Cast out from Eden's happy home. In the Scottish Episcopal Coll. of Hymns, &c. 1858.
5. Down from the realms of glory driven. H. M. Macgill. 1876. [J. J.]

Punshon, William Morley, LL.D. This greatly and justly honoured name of recent Wesleyan Methodism finds a tiny niche in this work from a thin poetic vein, which gave him much enjoyment, if its working out must be confessed to have yielded nothing of permanent value for hymnody, or at all comparable with his splendid service to the Christian Church as preacher and lecturer. His contributions to J. Lyth's Wild Flowers, or, Selection of Original Poetry (1843) [see Lyth, J., p. 707 i.], though reprinted in 1846, speedily withered as "flowers" in a hortus siccus. His Lays of Hope (1853) was no advance on the Wild Flowers. His Sabbath Chimes, or, Meditations in Verse for the Sundays of a Year (1867), suggested inevitable comparisons with Keble's classic of the Christian Year. Throughout, the thinking is bewilderingly meagre, the sentiment commonplace, the workmanship clumsy and poor. Ease and inspiration are absent. His Life has been amply and lovingly written by F. W. Macdonald and A. H. Reynar (1887); and it is a noble and beautiful story. He was b. at Doncaster on 29th May, 1824, only child of John Punshon and Elizabeth Morley. The latter was of a good family. He lost his parents in boyhood. Through maternal relationship, young Punshon was introduced to commercial life in Yorkshire, Hull, &c. He marked 29th November, 1838, as the day of his spiritual birth. In 1842 he began to be heard of locally as a preacher, being still in business. In 1844 he proceeded to the Methodist Theological Institute at Richmond; but remained there only a few months. He preferred evangelizing to stated preaching. He leapt into popularity at a bound, probably not to his gain, either intellectually or morally, though his diary breathes an admirable humility. In 1854 he made his advent as a lecturer by his Prophet of Horeb. The impression made by it was amazing. Then followed others, with ever deepening and widening impression. Contemporaneous with his abundant, over-abundant preaching and platform speaking, was such quantity and quality of effective work and service in raising large sums of money for Christian and other missionary and educational work as astounds a reader of his Life. He was five times President of the Canadian Methodist Conference (1868-72), and once of the English Conference (1875). His degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by the Victoria University, Cobourg, Canada, in 1873. Throughout, in private and public, he was a large-souled, whole-hearted, true man of God. "Weakened by the way" on the continent, he slowly worked his way home, and after a brief final illness, fell gently and softly asleep on April 14, 1881. His hymns in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, are:—

1. Listen! the Master beseecheth. Go, work in the Vineyard.
2. Sweet is the sunlight after rain. Sunday Morning.
3. We woke to-day with anthems sweet. Sunday Evening.

No. 1 is in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879; and 2 and 3 are from the Sabbath Chimes, 1867.

Pure spirit, O where art thou now? Anna L. Barbauld, nee Aikin. [Death and Burial.] Pub. in The Works of Anna Letitia Barbauld, with a Memoir, 1825, vol. i. p. 224, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Dirge. Written November 1808." From the Memoir we gather (p. xlv.) that the occasion was the death of her husband, "whose latter days were oppressed by a morbid affection of his spirits, in a great degree hereditary, which came gradually upon him, and closed the scene of his earthly usefulness" (p. xlix.). The "Dirge" was repeated in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, No. 623. In the same Hymns, 1840, No. 404, is arranged from this poem, and begins with st. ii., altered to "Not for the pious dead we weep," sometimes given elsewhere as "Not for the dead in Christ we weep." The original poem only is repeated in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873. [J. J.]

Pusey, Edward Bouverie, D.D., s. of Mr. Philip Pusey, was b. Aug. 22, 1800, and educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated in first class honours in 1822. Subsequently he became a Fellow of Oriel, a Canon of Christ Church, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Oxford. He d. Sept. 16, 1882. Dr. Pusey's prose writings and trs. are very numerous. Amongst the latter was his tr. of a part of Horst's Paradisus Animæ Christianæ, pub. in 1847 as The Paradise of the Christian Soul. In this work there are several metrical trs. of hymns which in the early pages of this Dictionary we have attributed to Dr. Pusey. We have Dr. Liddon's authority for stating that the hymns were not translated by Dr. Pusey. Some were tr. by W. J. Copeland, and others probably by J. Keble. [J. J.]

Pusey, Philip, eldest s. of Mr. Philip Pusey, and brother of Dr. Pusey, was b. June 25, 1799, and d. July 9, 1855. His father, a son of the first Viscount Folkestone, had assumed the name of Pusey instead of that of Bouverie. [G. A. C.]

Pye, Henry John, M.A., s. of H. J. Pye, of Clifton Hall, Staffordshire, was b. circa 1825, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. (B.A. 1848, M.A. 1852.) Taking Holy Orders in 1850, he was presented by his father in 1851 to the Rectory of Clifton-Campville, Staffordshire. In 1868 he, together with his wife (only daughter of Bishop S. Wilberforce), joined the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Pye pub. Two Lectures on the Church, 1852; Short Ecclesiastical History, 1854; and various Sermons. He also compiled a book of Hymns for use at Clifton-Campville in 1851. To that collection he contributed a few hymns, including:—

1. In His temple now behold Him. Purification of B. V. M. This hymn was repeated, in a slightly altered form and an additional stanza (iv.), by Canon W. Cooke in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853; the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; and many later collections. It is sometimes given with the fourth stanza as in the Sarum, 1868; Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, &c. The full Pye-Cooke text of 1853 is in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882 (slightly altered); and others. This hymn is sometimes given as a tr. from Angelus Silesius (Scheffler), but in error.

2. O praise ye the Lord. Ye nations rejoice. Annunciation. This hymn was also repeated in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, No. 169. [Wm. C.]

Quae dixit, egit, pertulit. [St. John the Evangelist.] Included in the Cluniac Breviary, Paris, 1686, p. 187, in 5 st. and a doxology, as the hymn at Matins on the Festival of St. John the Evangelist; in the Orleans Brev., 1693, it is assigned to Lauds. Tr. as:—

The life which God's Incarnate Word. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 287, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 194, in 6 st. of 4 l. It passed into Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and the Scottish Episco. Hymns, 1858, each with alterations peculiar to itself. In H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, st. v. is omitted; st. ii. and vi. are rewritten, and st. iii. is altered. This text, again slightly altered, is in Kennedy, 1863, and the Hymnary, 1872. In Rorison's Hys. & Anthems, 1851, it begins, "Three holy Gospels tell in turn." [J. M.]

Quae gloriosum tanta coelis evocat. Guillaume de la Brunetière. [Conversion of St. Paul.] Appeared in the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. 920, and the Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn at Lauds on the feast of the Conversion of St. Paul. It is also in several modern French Breviaries, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

Why, Saviour, dost Thou come? By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 85; and the 1860 Appendix to the Hymnal N. Another tr., by I. Williams in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 180, is, "Lord, from out Thy glorious skies." [W. A. S.]

Quae stella sole pulchrior. C. Coffin. [Epiphany.] Included in the Paris Breviary, 1736; and, again, in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 38. It is also in several modern French Breviaries as the hymn at first Vespers at the feast of the Epiphany; in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 53; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. What star is this with beams = bright, Which shames the sun, &c. By J. Chandler in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 59. It passed into Murray's Hymnal, 1852; The English Hyl., 1856; Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; H. A. & M., 1861; Kennedy, 1863, and several others. In each hymn-book the text is altered, and no two books agree upon the same alterations. H. A. & M. is the worst. In the whole hymn four lines only remain unaltered. In some of these collections, including Kennedy, 1863, it begins, "What star is this so strangely bright?"

2. How lovely in the eastern sky. By J. Chandler, another tr. in his Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, &c., 1841, No. 31. It was given in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, and again in Alford's Year of Praise, as "Behold the long predicted sign."

3. Hail the day when in the sky. Anon. in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, and Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, No. 46.

4. What star is this that beams = bright, The sun eclipsing, &c. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868. In the revised ed. of 1871 it reads, "What star is this that beams so bright, And dims the sun," &c.

5. What star is this—more glorious far. Edward Thring. Appeared in G. Thring's Coll., 1880, and again in 1882. The 4th st. is from J. Chandler and others.

Other trs. =:—

1. What is that which shines afar? J. Williams, in the British Magazine, 1835, p. 35; and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839.

2. What beauteous sun surpassing star. R. Campbell, 1850.

3. What star is this that beams abroad. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

4. What star is this, whose orb of flame? J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Quae te pro populi criminibus nova.

Claude de Santeuil. [Passiontide.] This hymn is given for Lauds on the feast of the Five Wounds of Christ, in the Paris Breviary, 1680, the Narbonne Brev., 1709, the Paris Brev., 1736, and in other and later French Breviaries. Text also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

O wondrous love, that rends in twain. By H. Kynaston, made for and included in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. Say, what strange love works Thee this sad unrest. I. Williams, 1839.

2. O Christ! what peerless love. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

3. O Thou Who, though High Priest, art Victim made. J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Quam nos potenter allicis. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Transfiguration.] Pub. in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 11 (ed. 1698, p. 138); and, again, in the Paris Breviary, 1736. Text also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. In the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. 1035, it begins "Quibus modis nos excitas." Tr. as:—

1. How tenderly, how patiently. By W. Palmer, in his Short Poems, 1845, p. 68, and in Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1864.

2. O Christ, how potent is Thy grace. By C. S. Calverley, made for and first pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Another tr. is:—

How strongly and how sweetly still. I. Williams, 1839. [J. J.]

Quando noctis medium. [Sunday.] A poem of 65 lines given by Mone, No. 29, from a Stuttgart ms. of the 14th cent., and entitled "On the life of Christ." Tr. as:—

When in silence and in shade. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1854, and the Hymnary, 1872. [W. A. S.]

Quarles, Francis. The life of this "fine old English gentleman" and charming essayist and quaint singer, will be found in full in the present writer's collective and complete edition of his works in verse and prose (3 vols. 4^o, 1880-81, Chertsey Worthies' Library). His father was James Quarles, of Stewards, Esq., and his mother Joan Dalton. He was their 3rd son and child. In the registers of Romford, Essex, is this entry, "1592, May 8. Baptizatus fuit Franciscus filius magistræ Jacobi Quarritus." He lost his father in 1599. His first school was Romford and his first tutor William Tichbourne, chaplain of Romford. He lost his mother in 1606. He proceeded to Christ's College, Cambridge, and later was of Exeter College, Oxford. It is to be regretted that the College registers furnish no exact data. He passed from the University to Lincoln's Inn, where his widow-biographer tells us—

"He studied the laws of England; not so much out of desire to benefit himself thereby, as his friends and neighbours (showing therein his continual inclination to peace) by composing suits and differences amongst them."

Some years advance us from 1608 (at Lincoln's Inn) to probably 1612-13, or his 21st year. His widow continues,

"After he came to maturity he was not desirous to put himself into the world, otherwise he might have had greater preferments than he had. He was neither so unfit for Court preferment, or so ill-beloved there, but that he might have raised his fortunes thereby if he had had any inclination that way. But his mind was chiefly set upon his devotion and study; yet not altogether so much but that he faithfully discharged the place of cup-bearer to the Queen of Bohemia" (p. 2).

How long Quarles continued with the Queen is unknown. He accompanied Frederick and Elizabeth to Germany. He married Ursely [= Ursula] Woodgate, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, on May 28, 1618. In 1620 appeared the first and most characteristic of his poems, entitled, after the odd phrasing of the period, A Feast for Worms. In the epistle he says, "Wonder not at the title, for it is a Song of Mercy: what greater Feast than Mercy? and what are men but worms" (vol. ii. p. 5). Kindred with the Feast followed Hadassa, or the History of Queene Esther. In 1621 he was in Dublin. He dated his Argalus and Parthenia, "Dublin, 4th March, 1621." He filled the office of Secretary to the illustrious Ussher, on whose death John Quarles composed a memorable elegy. Ussher wrote to Vossius highly laudatory of our Quarles. His successive books are practically the only landmarks of his remaining years. (The reader is referred to our Life and the Works, ut supra.) The Emblems appeared in 1634-35, and his Hieroglyphics in 1637. In 1639 he was appointed "Chronologer" of the City of London, an office which he held till his death. From 1639 his various prose books were written, and became as popular as his poems. They are all in fine English. He was an out and out loyalist, and was with the king at Oxford. He had a numerous family. He d. Sept. 8, 1644, and was buried in St. Olave's, Silver Street, London, "11 Sep. 1644." His title to a place in this work rests mainly on his versified Psalms. These appear in the famous Bay Psalter. [See Bay Psalter, p. 119, l.] Quarles's are Psalms xvi., xxv., li., lxxxviii., cxliii., cxxxvii. They were reclaimed by us for Quarles on the authority of John Josse-lyn's Account of Two Voyages to New England (1674). In the year 1638 he says, on his arrival in Massachusetts Bay,

"Having refreshed myself for a day or two at Noodles Island, I crossed the bay in a small boat to Boston, which then was rather a village than a town, there not being above twenty or thirty houses, and presented myself to Mr. Winthorpe, the Governor, and to Mr. Cotton, the teacher of Boston Church, to whom I delivered from Mr. Francis Quarles, the poet, the translations of Nos. 16, 25, 51, 88, 113 and 137 Psalms into English metre for his approbation," &c.

These "Psalms" are more curious than successful. But besides them the poetry of Francis Quarles is a virgin field for the capable hymnologist. It is a mystery and a sorrow that few only have been adapted and adopted. There are many of his verse-Emblems that fittingly married to music would be solemn and searching, and nobly displace accepted pious inanities. No. xii. of Book iii. of Emblems (vol. iii. pp. 75, 76), "Oh that Thou wouldst hide me in the grave," deserves a supreme effort of highest genius to mate it worthily. In delightful contrast in its vividness and sweetness is his "Like to the damask rose you see" (vol. iii. p. 285). Equally noticeable are his "Backsliding" (ibid. p. 66, xiv.), "Vain Physicians" (ibid. p. 189, iv.), "Waste not Life" (ibid. p. 194, xi.), "A Little While" (ibid. p. 196, xiv.). (See Critical Essay in Works as above.) [A. B. G.]

Quarles, John, s. of the above, was b. in Essex in 1624, and was educated at Exeter College, Oxford. He bore arms within the garrison at Oxford on behalf of Charles I. and subsequently (it is said) he was raised to the rank of captain in the King's service. On the downfall of the King, Quarles retired to London, and devoted himself to literature for a livelihood. He d. there during the great Plague, 1665. He pub. several works including (1) Jeremiah's Lamentations Paraphrased, with Divine Meditations, 1648; and (2) Divine Meditations upon Several Subjects whereunto is annexed God's Love to Man's Unworthiness, with several Divine Ejaculations. Lond. 1655 (Wood's Athenæ Oxon.). From the Ejaculations, Mr. Darling adapted two hymns for his Hys. for the Church of England. In the 1889 ed. these are:—"O King of kings, before Whose Throne" (Holy Trinity); and "O Thou Who sitt'st in heaven and seest" (Visitation of Sick). [J. J.]

Quem misit in terras Deus. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Commemoration of Apostles.] Appeared in the Cluniac Breviary, 1686, p. vi.; Santeuil's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 191 (ed. 1698, p. 237); the Paris Brev., 1736; J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 88; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. He whom the Father sent to die. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, June, 1836; and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 275.

2. He whom the Father sent to earth. By T. I. Ball, in the 5th ed., 1873, of the Appendix to the Hymnal N., No. 361.

Another tr. is:—

His only Son the Father gave. J. Chandler, 1837.

Quem terra, pontus, aethera [sidera]. [Purification of the B. V. M.] This has been frequently ascribed to V. H. C. Fortunatus, and is included by F. Leo in his ed. of Fortunatus's Opera Poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 385, but among the hymns falsely attributed to him. It is found in four mss. of the 11th cent., in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 38 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 61 b; Harl. 2961 f. 231; Add. 30848 f. 55 b); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 74, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 22). It is also in the St. Gall ms., No. 387, of the 11th cent. Mone, No. 419, cites it as in a ms. of the 9th cent. at Admont. The second portion, "O gloriosa femina, Excelsa super sidera," is often given as a separate hymn, sometimes beginning "O gloriosa Domina," as in a 12th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2928 f. 120 b); in Mone, No. 420, and in G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 38, from a 10th cent. ms. In the Roman Breviary, 1632, the first part begins Quem terra, pontus, sidera, and the second part O gloriosa virginum. The original, and the Roman Breviary texts, will be found in Daniel, i., No. 144, with readings at ii. p. 382, iv. p. 135, from a Munich ms. of the 9th or 10th cent., a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent., &c. The hymn, in whole or in part, has been used in various Breviaries (Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Roman, &c.) for almost all the Festivals of the B. V. M., including the Conception, Nativity, Annunciation, Visitation, and the Assumption. [J. M.]

The full original form of this hymn has not been translated. We have the following forms in English.

i. Quem terra, pontus, aethera. This, the oldest form of the text, in the Sarum and other Breviaries in 4 st. and a doxology, has been tr. thus:—

The God, Whom earth, and sea, and sky Adore and laud, &c. J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1854; H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875; the People's H., 1867; the Hymnary, 1872, and others, and sometimes with alterations. It is more extensively used than any other tr. of this hymn.

Other trs. are:—

1. The gouvernour of the tryple engyn. Sarum Prymer, Paris, 1538.

2. Whome earth, and sea, and eke the skyes. Primer, 1604.

3. He whome the earth, the sea, and skie. Primer, 1615.

4. Lo, He Whom Earth, and Sea, and Sky. J. D. Chambers, 1852.

5. Whom earth, and sea, and air. W. J. Blew, 1852 and 1855.

6. The God whom earth and sea and sky Revere, adore, &c. J. D. Chambers, 1866.

ii. Quem terra, pontus, sidera. The only difference between this Roman Brev. text and the above is in the first line. The trs. are:—

1. Him Whom the skies, the earth, the sea. By Bp. Mant, in his Ancient Hymns, 1837, p. 48. It is given in several collections, including the English Hymnal, 1852, and as "Whom earth, and sea, and sky," in the 1861 ed. of the same.

2. The Lord, Whom earth, and sea, and sky. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 199; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 106. In a few collections.

Other trs. are:—

1. He Whom the Land, the Sea, the Sky. Primer, 1685.

2. The Sov'raign God Whose hands sustain. Primer, 1706.

3. Whom earth, and sea, and stars, and light. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

4. Whom earth, and seas, and heaven's high frame. R. Campbell, 1850.

5. Him we sing, Whose wondrous story. H. N. Owenham, 1854.

6. The earth, the sky, the mighty ocean. J. Wallace, 1874.

iii. O gloriosa femina. This, which is composed of 3 st. and a doxology, is tr. as:—

1. O glorious Virgin, ever blest. By F. R. Littledale, pub. in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "F. R."

2. O glorious Lady, throned in high. In the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

Other trs. are:—

1. Glorious Lady, stellyfyed. Sarum Prymer, Paris, 1538.

2. O Lady set in glorie great. Primer, 1604.

3. O glorious Lady, Queene of might. Primer, 1615.

4. How glorious, Lady! is thy fame. J. D. Chambers, 1866.

iv. O gloriosa virginum. This text differs from the above in several instances. It is tr. as:—

O Queen of all the virgin choir. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 200; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 106. In the 1863 ed. of the Appendix to the Hymnal N., it is altered to "Most glorious of the virgin choirs."

Other trs. are:—

1. O Glorious Virgin, thron'd on high. Primer, 1635.
2. O Mary! whilst thy Maker blest. Primer, 1706.
3. Eternal glory of the skies. Bp. Mant., 1837.
4. O Mary, how great is thy glory. J. Wallace, 1874.

v. O gloriosa domina, De cuius virgo genere. This is a recast of the third form above, adapted to St. Anne. It is given by G. M. Dreves in his Liturgische Hymnen, 1888, p. 79, from a ms. Antiphony of the 16th cent. This text is tr. by E. Caswall in his Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 327, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 189, as "O Lady, high in glory, Whose daughter ever blest." [J. J.]

Qui procedis ab utroque. Adam of St. Victor. [Whitsuntide.] A fine sequence, expanding the thoughts of the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" (q.v.). Gautier in his ed. of Adam's Œuvres poetiques, 1881, p. 56, gives it from the Limoges Sequentiary of the 12th cent. (Bibl. Nat. Paris, No. 1139), a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (B. N., No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N., No. 15615), and other sources. It is in an early 14th cent. Paris Missal in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 178). The use of St. Victor was for the Tuesday, of Paris for the Friday, in Whitsun week. The printed text is also in Trench, ed. 1864, p. 187; Daniel, ii. p. 73; Kehrein, No. 130; Wrangham, 1881, i. p. 100. [J. M.]

Translation in C. U.:—

Spirit of grace and union. By E. Caswall, in Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 283; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 136, in 13 st. of 6 l., and headed, "Praises of the Paraclete." It is in C. U. as:—

1. O Holy Ghost, Who with the Son. This is No. 418 in the Hymnary, 1872, and is composed of st. i. by the Editors, and the rest from Caswall.
2. O Holy Ghost, Who ever One. No. 575 in the Hymnary, 1872, is compiled with alterations from st. i., vi., ix., x. of Caswall's tr.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. From Both proceeding, as from One. In Dr. Pusey's tr. of Horst's Paradisus Animæ Christianæ, 1847; and again in Canon Oakeley's tr. of the same, 1850.
2. Thou from Father, Son proceeding. P. S. Worcester, 1863, and Lyra Mystica, 1865.
3. O Comforter, All-blessed one. D. T. Morgan, 1880.
4. Comforter, from both together. D. S. Wrangham, 1881. [J. J.]

Qui regis scepra forti dextra solus cuncta. [Advent.] This sequence is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775 f. 168 b), written c. 1000; and a ms. of the 11th cent. (Douce, 222 f. 82 b.); in a Winchester book of the 11th cent., now in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (No. 473); in a 12th cent. Gradual (Reg. 2 B. iv. f. 62 b), and a ms. circa 1199 (Calig. A. xiv. f. 43 b), in the Brit. Mus., &c. Among Missals it is in an early 14th cent. Paris, and a 14th cent. Sens, in the British Museum; in a Scarum, c. 1370; a Hereford, c. 1870; and a York, c. 1390,—all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrews, and various French Missals. In the English Missals it is the Sequence for the third S. in Advent. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 7; Daniel, v. p. 173; and Kehrein, No. 4. [J. M.]

Translation in C. U.:—

Thou God, 'mid Cherubim on high. By E. A. Dayman, made for and included in the Hymnary, 1872. Mr. Dayman, in rendering the Sequence for the 3rd S. in Advent, prefaced it with a stanza taken from the Gradual "Qui sedes Domine super Cherubim, excita potentiam tuam et veni," &c. The hymn is a very free paraphrase, rather than a translation; and Mr. Dayman has drawn out at some length the allusions which the Sequence seems to make to certain passages and personages of Holy Scripture.

Other trs. are:—

1. Thou Who rulest earthly sceptres. C. B. Pearson, 1868.
2. Thou Who dost each earthly throne. C. B. Pearson, 1871. [W. M. C.]

Qui sacris hodie sistitur aris. C. Coffin. [Purification of the B. V. M.] Given in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 68. It is also found in some modern French Breviaries, and in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

Who now in helpless infancy. This tr. was given in I. Williams's Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 185, as "by a Friend" (see Preface thereto). It was repeated unaltered in some collections, and then as "Jesus, in helpless infancy," in the Hymnary, 1872. [J. J.]

Quicunque certum quaeritis. [Lent. The Sacred Heart of Jesus.] This hymn is probably of the 18th cent. It is the hymn at Vespers in the Office of the "Most Sacred Heart of our Lord Jesus Christ," which in the Roman Breviary, Lisbon, 1786, pars Estiv. p. 447, is marked as a festival of the Second Class, and appointed for the Sixth Day after the Octave of Corpus Christi. It is repeated in some more recent eds. of the Breviary, e.g. Bologna, 1827; but in other eds. the alternative Office for the same festival (a greater double by decree "Urbis et orbis," 23 Aug. 1856), with the hymns "Auctor beate saeculi," and "Cor, area legem continens," is preferred. Text in Biggs's Annotated H. A. & M., 1867, p. 198. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. All ye who seek a certain cure. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 121; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 68, but altered to "All ye who seek a comfort sure." This tr. is in extensive use, and with several changes, especially in the first line, as follows:—

(1) All ye who seek a certain cure. This is the original as above.

(2) All ye a certain cure who seek. This is in W. J. Blew's Church Hym. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870. In this st. i.-iii. are by Caswall, and iv.-vi. are by Blew.

(3) All ye who seek for sure relief. This is the H. A. & M. text, 1861 and 1875. In it a few alterations are made, and st. iv. is omitted. This text is in several collections.

(4) All ye who seek a sure relief. In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866.

(5) All ye who seek a comfort sure. This is Caswall's text in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, and is found in a few collections.

(6) All ye who seek a refuge sure. In the 1870 Appendix to the Hyl. for the use of S. John the Evangelist's, &c., Aberdeen.

2. All ye who seek for sure relief, In every time, &c. By R. F. Littledale, made for and pub. in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "A. L. P."

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. All ye who seek = solace sure. J. Wallace, 1874.
2. Haste, all who 'mid life's thorny ways. T. J. Potter. in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Quicumque Christum quaeritis. Epiphany. This is the 12th and last poem in his Cathemerinon, and in its full form consists of 208 lines. It is found in a ms. of the 5th cent. in the Bibliothéque Nationale, Paris (8048, f. 39b), and is included in all eds. of his Opera: e.g. Halle, 1703, p. 75; and Aurelii Prudentii Clementis V. C. Opera Omnia. . . (Delphin and Variorum Classics), London, 1824, vol. i. pp. 150–163. Though one of the finest poems of Prudentius, it was comparatively little used in the services of the Church until the revision of the Roman Breviary after the Council of Trent. In the ed. of that Breviary pub. at Rome, 1570, there are the following centos:—

- i. Quicumque Christum quaeritis. Transfiguration.
- ii. O sola magnarum urbium. Epiphany.
- iii. Audit tyrannus anxius. Holy Innocents, at Matins.
- iv. Salvete flores martyrum. Holy Innocents, at Lauds.

These centos are repeated in later eds. of the Roman Breviary, and also in Daniel, i., Nos. 107, 108, 112, and iv. p. 121. The earliest and most beautiful cento is the Salvete flores martyrum, which is found in the St. Gall ms., No. 413, of the 11th cent., in a 12th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Add. 18301, f. 113), &c. [J. M.]

These centos have been translated into English as follows:—

i. Quicumque Christum quaeritis. The Transfiguration. This begins with the first line of the poem. The Roman Brev. text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. All ye who seek in hope and love. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 167; and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 90. This is repeated in several collections, and is usually given in an unaltered form. In J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1852, it begins, "Ye who for Christ are seeking, raise."
2. O ye, who Christ are seeking, raise. In J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1856, based upon Caswall.

Other trs. are:—

1. Whoso you be that Christe do seek. Primer, 1604.
2. All you that seeke Christ, let your sight. Primer, 1615.
3. All that seek Christ, your eyes erect. Primer, 1685.
4. O All, who seek with Christ to rise. Primer, 1706.
5. All that desire with Christ to rise. Cento from Primers, 1706, 1748, 1763.
6. O ye who seek the Lord. Card. Newman, in Tracts for the Times, No. 75, 1836.
7. Ye who Messiah seek. Bp. R. Mant, 1837.
8. O you who truly seek your Lord. F. C. Husenbeth, 1841.
9. Ye, whoe'er for Christ are seeking. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
10. O ye the truly wise. R. Campbell, 1850.
11. Who seek the Christ must look above. W. J. Blew, 1852–55.
12. O ye who seek the Christ. H. Kynaston, 1862.

13. All ye who seek the Lord of love, Lift up, &c., H. M. Macgill, 1876. This is a different cento, although beginning with the same stanza.

14. All ye who seek the Lord of love. T. J. Potter, in the Catholic Psalmist.

15. All ye who seek our Lord to know. J. Wallace, 1874.

16. O ye, who search for Jesus, raise. W. C. Dix, in Church Times, Jan. 7, 1887.

ii. O sola magnarum urbium. Epiphany. This cento begins with line 77 of the poem. The Roman Brev. text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Bethlehem! of noblest cities. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 55; and with slight alterations in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 30. This tr. is not only in C. U. in its original form, but also sometimes slightly, and at other times greatly, altered. In addition to altered texts which begin with the original first line, there are also:—

(1) Earth has many a noble city. This is the H. A. & M. text, 1861 and 1875, and is repeated in a few collections.

(2) Bethlehem! earth's noblest cities. In the Parish Hymnal, 1863 and 1875.

(3) Beth'hem, not the least of cities. In the Hymnary, 1872.

In these various forms Caswall's tr. is more extensively used than all other trs. put together.

2. Than mightiest cities mightier far. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 71. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, it was given as, "Thou Bethlehem, with thy crowning star."

3. Fair queen of cities, star of earth. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk. 1852–55, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

4. Of noblest cities thou art queen. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868; and again, after revision, in the 2nd ed., 1872.

5. Earth hath many a mighty city. By C. E. Malden and W. Quennell, in the Church of England S. S. H. Bk., revised ed., 1879.

Other trs. are:—

1. Let other cities strive, which most. Primer, 1706.
2. Than greatest cities greater far. A. J. B. Hope, 1844.
3. Chief 'mongst the cities of the plain. Bp. J. Williams, 1845.
4. O Bethlehem, of cities blest. In Stretton's Church Hys., 1850.
5. Small amongst cities, Bethlehem. Mrs. Charles, 1858.
6. The noblest cities upon earth. H. Trend, in Lyra Messianica, 1864.
7. O Bethlehem! thou dost surpass. J. Wallace, 1874.
8. Of all the cities of renown. H. M. Macgill, 1876. This is a different cento from the Latin, although it begins with the same stanza.

iii. Audit tyrannus anxius. Holy Innocents. This cento begins with line 93 of the poem. The Roman Brev. text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. The jealous tyrant saw with fear. Primer, 1706.
2. With boding fears, the tyrant hears. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
3. When it reached the tyrant's ear. E. Caswall, 1849.
4. The tyrant hears, and not in vain. J. Wallace, 1874.
5. Aghast the tyrant racked with care. H. M. Macgill, 1876. Another cento from the Latin beginning with the same stanza.

iv. Salvete flores martyrum. Holy Innocents. This cento begins with line 125 of the poem. The Roman Brev. text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, in 3 stanzas. The Hymni Ecclesiae has also the Paris Brev. text in 6 stanzas. See also J. Chandler, 1837, No. 46. There are also centos, each beginning with the same stanza. Tr. as:—

1. Hail, flowrets of Christ's martyr-crown. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 68. This is in several of the older collections.

2. All hail, ye infant martyr flowers. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1852, No. 16. The Hymnary, 1872, and the Hymner, 1882, have each an additional stanza.

3. All hail, ye martyr blooms as bright. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868. This is a paraphrase only.

Other trs. are :—

1. All hail to you, ye Martyrs flow'rs. Primer, 1604.
2. Hail you that are the flowers. Primer, 1615.
3. Hail, holy Flow'rs of Martyrs, you. Primer, 1685.
4. Hail martyrs, blossoms early blown. Primer, 1706.
5. All hail, ye flowers of martyrdom. A. J. B. Hope, 1844.
6. Flowers of martyrdom, all hail. E. Caswall, 1849.
7. Hail, flowerets of the martyr-train. H. N. Ozennham, 1854.
8. Sweet Martyr flowers, fresh from your early dawn. D. T. Morgan, 1871 and 1880.

(ii.) Paris Breviary tr.

1. Little flowers of martyrdom. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, 1835, p. 655; and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 72. In a few collections. In the Parish Hymnal, 1863 and 1875, it begins, "Hail, ye flowers of martyrdom."

2. Hail, infant martyrs, new-born victims, hail. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 52; and Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869. In Chandler's Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, &c., 1841, No. 28, it is rewritten as "Hail, flowerets of the martyr wreath."

3. Hail, ye firstling martyr flowers. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, and again in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

4. Sweet flowerets of the martyr band. By Sir H. W. Baker, in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875. Two stanzas are omitted.

Other trs. are :—

1. Ye flowers, ye buds of martyrs, hail. J. R. Beste, 1849.
2. Sweetest flowers of early spring. R. Campbell, 1850.
3. Hail, martyr flowers, in childhood's dawn. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
4. Ye flow'rets of the martyrs, hail. J. W. Hewett, 1859.
5. Hail, garland of martyrs. G. S. Hodges, 1876.

1. Hail, martyr sweets deflower'd. H. Kynaston, 1862.
2. Hail, ye flowers of martyrs bright. H. M. Macgill, 1876.

Dr. H. M. Macgill's tr. of this poem in his Songs of Christian Creed and Life, &c., 1876, is broken up into the following parts :—

1. "Quicumque Christum quaseritis." See above.
2. "En Persici ex orbis sinu." Tr. as: "Lo! far from under Persic skies."
3. "Sed verticem pueri supra." Tr. as: "Behold! the sign has ceased to move."
4. "O sola magnarum urbium." See above.
5. "Audit tyrannus anxius." See above.
6. "Salvete flores Martyrum." See above.
7. "Sic stulta Pharaonis mali." Tr. as: "So Moses Israel's destined guide."
8. "Jure ergo se Judae ducem." Tr. as: "Well had those wise men from afar."

In addition Dr. Kynaston has a cento in the Lyra Messianica, 1864, beginning, "En Persici ex orbis sinu," which he has tr. as "From day-light's portals, burning."

The use which has been and still is made of this fine poem is extensive both in Latin and English. [J. J.]

Quiet, Lord, my froward heart. J. Newton. [Resignation.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 65, in 4 st. of 6 l., and headed "The Child." It has passed into a large number of hymn-books. In some it begins "Jesus, make my froward heart," but this form of the text is not popular. [J. J.]

Quis te canat mortalium? Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [The Annunciation of the B. V. M.] Appeared in the Clunian Breviary, 1686, p. 1073. It is also in the Orleans Brev. 1693, both for the Conception and for the Nativity of the B. V. M. In Santeuil's Hymni Sacri, 1689, p. 30 (ed. 1698, p. 20), it begins, "Quis ore digno te canat," and in this form it is in the Narbonne Brev., 1709, and later French Brevs. Tr. as :—

What mortal tongue can sing thy praise? By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 268; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 170. It is in C. U. in Roman Catholic collections for missions and schools. [J. M.]

Quisquis valet numerare. [Eternal Life.] A fine poem "on the glory of the heavenly Jerusalem" given by Mone, No. 303, from a Karlsruhe ms. of the 15th cent., and in 16 st. of 6 l. In some copies of the Hymnal N., 1854, the first line reads "Si quis valet numerare." The tr. is usually given for All Saints. Tr. as :—

1. If there be that skills to reckon. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1854, in 7 st. of 6 l., including a doxology, being a part only of the hymn. This has been repeated in whole or in part in Kennedy, 1863; in the Hymnary, 1872; and as "Who of men hath skill to reckon?" in the Sarum, 1868. In Dr. Neale's Hys. . . . on the Joys and Glories of Paradise, 1865, the Latin text of 9 st. is given, together with a tr. of which 6 st. are from the H. Noted. This tr. is divided in the St. Margaret's Hyl., 1875 (East Grinstead), into two parts, pt. ii. being "O what splendour, O what beauty."

2. Is there man could ever reckon? By J. A. Johnston, in his Eng. Hymnal, 1861.

3. Who the multitudes can number. By T. B. Pollock, in the 1889 Suppl. Hymns to H. A. & M.

[J. J.]

Quo sanctus ardor te rapit. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Visitation of the B. V. M.] Appeared in the Clunian Breviary, 1686, p. 997; and his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 32 (ed. 1698, p. 110). Also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as :—

Whither thus in holy rapture? By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 270; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 171. It was included in the 2nd ed., 1863, of the Appendix to the Hymnal Noted. [W. A. S.]

Quo vos Magistri gloria quo salus. C. Coffin. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736; and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri of the same year. The text is also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as :—

1. Where thy Master's glory Calls thee forth abroad. J. Williams, 1839.

2. Go where your Master's glory. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

3. Heralds of your God! Haste, where every nation. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

[J. J.]

Quod chorus vaturn venerandus olim. St. Hrabanus Maurus (?) [Purification of the B. V. M.] Included in Brower's ed. of his Poemata, Mainz, 1617, p. 74, but not in E. Dümmler's ed. of his Carmina. It is found in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 44b; Jul. A. vi.

f. 38; Harl. 2961, f. 231; Add. 30848, f. 58), and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 54, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 16). It is in the Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries. The printed text is also in Wackernagel, i. No. 132. Daniel, i. No. 222, gives st. i., and at iv. p. 371, cites it as in a 10th cent. ms. at Bern. G. M. Dreves prints it in his Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 39, from a 10th cent. ms. Tr. as:—

That which of old the reverend choir of prophets. By T. I. Ball, in the 2nd ed., 1863, of the Appendix to the Hymnal Noted.

Other trs. are:—

1. What they of old, the reverend choir of prophets. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
2. Lo, what the reverend prophet seers of old. J. D. Chambers, 1854.
3. That which the Prophets reverend Assembly. Antiphoner and Grail, 1890. [J. M.]

Quod lex adumbravit vetus. (See Ex more docti mystico, p. 359.) Additional trs. are:—

1. The law He came not to destroy. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.
2. The fact that in the ancient law. By R. Campbell (from his mss.), and J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

In Blew's Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, Lent No. 2, there is another tr. beginning with st. iv. Omnes ad aram cernuo, tr. as "In prayer all prostrate let us fall." We must also note that the form of J. Chandler's tr., "With fast and prayer for sinful man" (p. 359, ii.), found in Kennedy, 1863, and others, appeared in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 37. [J. J.]

Quos in hostes, Saule, tendis. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Conversion of St. Paul.] Included in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 52, where it begins "Saule, tendis quos in hostes." In the Paris Breviary, 1736, it begins "Quos in hostes." It is also in the Lyons and other modern French Breviaries; in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 84; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. 'Gainst what foemen art thou rushing, Saul, what madness, &c. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 95. It was repeated, with several alterations, in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, the 1861 ed. of H. A. & M., and others. In Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1864, No. 175, st. iv., ii., iii., v., are given as: "Christ, Thy power is man's salvation."

2. 'Gainst what foeman art thou rushing, Saul, what frenzy, &c. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868 and 1872.

Another tr. is:—

Whither, Saul, this raging sense. I. Williams, 1839.

Ῥάβδος ἐκ τῆς ῥίξης. [Χριστὸς γεν-

Raffles, Thomas, D.D., LL.D., s. of Mr. W. Raffles, solicitor, was b. in Princes Street, Spitalfields, London, May 17, 1788. In 1803 he became a clerk in Doctors' Commons, but shortly after retired, and through the influence of Dr. Collyer (p. 243, ii.), of whose church at Peckham he was for some time a member, he entered Homerton College in 1805. His stated ministry began at Hammersmith, where he was ordained as a Congregational minister on June 22, 1809. In 1812 he removed to Liverpool, where he succeeded the Rev. T. Spencer, and remained for 49 years the honoured pastor of the Great George Street Congregational Church. He d. at Liverpool, Aug. 18, 1863. For upwards of fifty years Dr. Raffles was one of the most prominent ministers of the Congregational body. His labours outside of his own congregation were very great, his aid as a preacher on behalf of missions and other religious works, being eagerly sought after. The Lancashire Independent College owes its existence mainly to him; and to many religious works in Liverpool he gave great personal attention. His degree of LL.D. was conferred by the University of Aberdeen in Dec. 1820, and that of D.D. by Union College, Connecticut, in July 1830. His works include Memoirs of the Life and Ministry of the Rev. Thomas Spencer, 1813; A Tour on the Continent, 1817; and several Sermons, &c. He also edited the 1815 ed. of Brown's Self-Interpreting Bible; was joint author with J. B. Brown and J. H. Wiffen, of Poems by Three Friends; and joint editor with Dr. Collyer and Dr. J. B. Brown, of the Investigator, a London quarterly. As early as March 8, 1813, he says, in a letter to his friend, Mr. Brown, "I am about to put to press a collection of hymns for the use of my chapel:" but this intention was not carried out until 1853, when he pub. his Supplement to Dr. Watts's Ps. & Hys. His son's history of this Supplement is:—

"Early in January, 1853, he published his long-expected Supplement to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, which he had in hand for many years. He would never have published it at all, but, in common with other Independent Ministers, would have used the Congregational Hymn-book [J. Conder's 1836 and 1842] had that book contained a fair share of his own hymns. In its original form, however, it did not contain one [yes, one, but given as Anon.]; and Dr. Raffles might, without vanity—seeing that numerous hymn-books of modern date contained one or more of his hymns—have expected that they would not have been wholly omitted from the hymn-book emphatically of his own denomination. But so it was, and he never would introduce it, though, with the greatest readiness, when the improved edition was contemplated [the New Cong. H. Bk., 1859], under the editorship of the Rev. Dr. G. Smith, Dr. Raffles contributed some of his hymns to its pages. His own collection is very good, but limited in extent; the hymns are selected with considerable judgment; and the true versions, as written by the respective authors, are given, wherever the original source could be reached."—Memoirs, 1864, p. 419.

Dr. Raffles contributed, in 1812, 8 hymns under the signature "T. R." to the Coll. of his old friend and former pastor, Dr. Collyer. Gradually other hymns came into notice. These, with others to the number of 46, were included in his Supplement, 1853. His hymns at present in C. U. include:—

1. Blest hour, when mortal ■■■ retires. Prayer. In the "r. ms." this is headed "The Hour of Prayer," and at the foot is written by Dr. Raffles, "Printed in the Amulet for 1829, and thence copied into the Christian Observer." It is dated "Jan'y. 26, 1823," and is in 6 st. of 4 l.

2. Cause of all causes, and the Source. Hymn to the Deity. Contributed to Dr. Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 914, in 5 st. of 6 l.

3. Come, heavenly peace of mind. Peace of Mind. Pub. in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 915, in 3 st. of 10 l. In the "r. ms." this, in a revised and expanded form of 10 st. of 6 l., is undated; but underneath Dr. Raffles has written "Printed in the American Atian Keepsake for 1838."

4. Eternal Father, throned above. Doxology. In the "r. ms." this is in 1 st. of 8 l., and headed "Doxology." It is undated, and underneath is written by Dr. Raffles at a later date (the change in the ink proving this) "Published anonymously in the Congregational Hymn Book," i.e., J. Conder's 1836 and 1842.

5. Father of mercies, God of love, O hear a humble, &c. Lent. Appeared in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 909, in 6 st. of 6 l., and headed "The Penitent's Prayer."

6. Go, preach the Gospel to the poor. Home Missions. In the "r. ms." in 7 st. of 4 l., headed "To the Agents of the Liverpool town mission," and dated "May 1849." At the foot is written "Printed at the Printing Office of the Liverpool Town Mission Bazaar, Lycaum, Bold Street."

7. High in yonder realms of light. Heaven. Contributed to Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 911, in 6 st. of 8 l. It was sung at Dr. Raffles's funeral, Aug. 24, 1863. It is the most widely known of his hymns, but is usually given in an abbreviated form.

8. Lord, like a publican I stand. Lent. Dated in the "r. ms." "Seacombe, Oct. 4th, 1831," and headed, "The Publican, Luke xviii. 13." It is in 5 st. of 4 l., and is in several collections.

9. No night shall be in heaven! No gathering gloom. Heaven. In 8 st. of 4 double lines, headed "And there shall be no night there," Rev. xxii. 5, and dated "April 4, 1857." ("r. ms. own.")

10. O God of families, ■■■. Family Worship. In the "r. ms." in 5 st. of 4 l., entitled "The God of the families of Israel," and dated, "Jan'y. 15th, 1823." It appeared in the New Song, 1859.

11. Rapid flows the stream of time. New Year. The last but one of his New Year's hymns, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled "Hymn for New Year's Morning," and dated, "Jan'y. 1st, 1861." ("r. ms.")

12. Saviour, let Thy sanction rest. Holy Matrimony. In the "r. ms." in 6 st. of 6 l. entitled "The Marriage Feast," and dated "November 3rd, 1852. On occasion of the marriage of the Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Guenet." Included in the New Cong., 1859, with the omission of st. v., vi.

13. Sovereign Ruler, Lord of all. Lent. No. 813 in Collyer's Coll., 1812, in 6 st. of 4 l.

14. The cup which my Father hath given. In Affliction. In the "r. ms." in 2 st. of 8 l., but without date. In the Memoirs, 1864, p. 272, the history of the hymn from Dr. Raffles's Diary is this:—

"Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 16th [Oct., 1823.] I preached to an immense congregation last night at Nottingham, and slept at Mr. Gilbert's. Mr. Rawson [of Nottingham Castle], a fine young man, and but recently married, has broken a blood-vessel, and with his wife and mother, and father and sister, set out yesterday for Devonshire, to pass the winter. Mrs. Rawson sent me her album, and begged me to insert something appropriate. As I dressed in the morning I composed the following lines, which I sent her just before they set out: 'The cup, &c.'"

Mrs. Rawson, soon left a widow, resided at Winco-bank Hall, near Sheffield, nearly 60 years, and died there in 1887.

15. Thou art my Hiding-place, O Lord. The Hiding-place. In the "r. ms." in 4 st. of 8 l., and dated "Burnley, June 23rd, 1833."

16. What is life! A rapid stream. Life. In the "r. ms." in 6 st. of 4 l., and dated in pencil 1838. At the foot is written by Dr. Raffles "Originally published in the Investigator, and, anonymously, in Affection's Gift, a poetical selection published by Simpkin and Marshall, Hamilton, &c., London."

The "Raffles ms.," from which we have annotated these hymns, was kindly lent by Mr. T. S. Raffles, B.A., Stipendiary Magistrate of Liverpool. Mr. Raffles is the author of his father's Memoirs, 1864, and of hymn 25 in his father's Supplement. Dr. Raffles's original Hymns were pub. in 1868, with a Preface by J. Baldwin Brown. [J. J.]

Raise the psalm, let Earth adoring. E. Churton. [Ps. xcvi.] 1st pub. in his Cleveland Psalter, 1854, in 13 st. of 4 l., with the refrain, "Hallelujah, Amen." In 1863 Dr. Kennedy embodied in his Hymn. Christ. st. i., ii., viii.—xiii., as a hymn, of 2 st. of 16 l., each st. ending with "Hallelujah, Amen." This successful arrangement was repeated in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 604, but divided into 4 st. of 8 l., and with the omission of the refrain. This rendering is one of the author's best and most vigorous versions of the Psalms, and is worthy of more extended use than is accorded to it. [Psalters, English, § XIX.] [J. J.]

Raise thee, my soul, fly up and run. I. Watts. [Heavenly Joys.] Appeared in his Hys. and Sac. Songs, 1707 (ed. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 33), in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "The blessed Society in Heaven." It is in C. U. in its full, and also in an abridged form. In some American collections, including The Baptist Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, it begins "Arise, my soul, fly up and run," and st. ii. and vi. are also omitted. [J. J.]

Raise your triumphant songs. I. Watts. [The Love and Work of Christ.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1707, Bk. ii., No. 104, in 6 st. of 4 l., as the second of two hymns on "Christ's Commission. John iii. 16, 17." It was extensively adopted by the older compilers, including G. Whitefield, M. Madan, A. M. Toplady, and others. Bickersteth (1833), Elliott (1835), the Leeds H. Bk. (1853), &c., followed; and modern editors in G. Britain and America have, in very many instances, also included it in their collections. Notwithstanding this popularity it does not rank with the best of Watts's hymns. [J. J.]

Rambach, August Jakob, s. of Johann Jakob Rambach (then pastor of St. Nicholas's Church, at Quedlinburg, and, after 1780, chief pastor of St. Michael's Church, at Hamburg), was b. at Quedlinburg, May 28, 1777. He entered the University of Halle in 1796, passed his final theological examination in Nov. 1799, was appointed diaconus of St. James's Church at Hamburg, in May 1802, and on March 16, 1819, preached his first sermon as chief pastor of St. Michael's, in succession to his father. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Marburg, on the occasion of its tercentenary, Nov. 12, 1827; and became senior of the Hamburg clergy in 1834. After 1844 the burden of infirmities made him resign his public offices one after another. He finally resigned his pastorate in the beginning of 1851, and retired to Ottensen, near Hamburg, where he d. Sept. 7, 1851. (Die Familie Rambach. By Dr. T. Hansen, Gotha, 1875, p. 237; Allg. Deutsche Biog., xviii. 193, &c.)

A. J. Rambach is better known ■ a hymnologist than as a hymn-writer. His earliest work, entitled, Ueber D. Martin Luthers Verdienst um den Kirchengesang, Hamburg, 1813, is an essay on Luther as a hymn-writer musician, &c. His greatest work is his Anthologie christlicher Gesänge aus allen Jahrhunderten der Kirche, Altona & Leipzig, vols. I., II., 1817; III., 1819; IV., 1822; V., 1832; VI., 1833 (vols. V., VI. also pub. separately, as Der heilige Gesang der Deutschen . . . seit Gellerts und Klopstocks Zeit). Though this is now to a considerable extent antiquated, and is really of value only for the period 1600-1830, it still is of much use for the biographical notes on many of the more obscure writers, and for the exceptional accuracy of the references to the sources from which the hymns are taken. (It is occasionally referred to in this Dictionary as Rambach's Anthologie.) During its compilation he gradually gathered together an extensive and valuable hymnological library, over 2000 volumes of which are now a part of the Hamburg Town Library. He was also the principal editor of the Hamburg G. B. of 1842, and in 1843 pub. a small volume of biographical notices thereto (Kurzgefasste Nachricht von den Verfassern der Lieder im Hamburgischen Gesangbuche).

Rambach does not seem to have pub. any original hymns. His trs. are given in vol. I. of his Anthologie, as above, and five are included in the Hamburg G. B., 1842. The only one which has passed into English C. U. is noted at p. 227, i. [J. M.]

Rambach, Johann Jakob, D.D., s. of Hans Jakob Rambach, cabinet maker at Halle on the Saale, was b. at Halle, Feb. 24, 1693. In 1706 he left school and entered his father's workshop, but, in the autumn of 1707, he dislocated his ankle. During his illness he turned again to his schoolbooks; the desire for learning reawoke; and on his recovery, early in 1708, he entered the Latin school of the Orphanage at Halle (Glaucha). On Oct. 27, 1712, he matriculated at the University of Halle as a student of medicine, but soon turned his attention to theology. He became specially interested in the study of the Old Testament under J. H. Michaelis. In May 1715 he became one of Michaelis's assistants in preparing his ed. of the Hebrew Bible, for which he wrote the commentary on Ruth, Esther, Nehemiah, &c. His health began to suffer in the spring of 1719, and he gladly accepted the invitation of Count von Henkel to stay at Pözig, near Ronneburg, where he spent several months. By August he had quite recovered, and went to pay a visit to Jena, where a number of the students asked him to lecture to them. For this purpose he settled at Jena in Oct., 1719, and lived in the house of Professor Buddeus (J. F. Budde). He graduated M.A. in March 1720. In 1723 he was appointed adjunct of the Theological Faculty at Halle, as also inspector of the Orphanage; in 1726 extraordinary professor of theology; and in 1727, after A. H. Francke's death, ordinary professor as well as preacher at the Schulkirche. Here he was very popular, both as preacher and professor, but the jealousy of his colleagues induced him to accept an offer from the Landgrave Ernst Ludwig of Hesse, who, in 1731, invited him to Giessen as superintendent and first professor of theology (before leaving Halle he graduated D.D., June 28, 1731), and in Aug., 1732, appointed him also director of the Paedagogium at Giessen. In 1734 he was, for various reasons, greatly inclined to accept the offer of the first professorship of theology in the newly-founded University of Göttingen, but eventually, at the earnest request of the Landgrave, remained in Giessen, where he d. of fever, April 19, 1735 (Die Familie Rambach. By Dr. T. Hausen, Götha, 1875: Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxvii. 196; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1883, pp. 113, 129, 145, 163, 186; 1884, p. 20; 1885, p. 13, &c.)

Rambach was a voluminous author in various departments of practical theology, e.g. his Institutiones hermeneuticæ sacræ, Jena, 1724, which passed through 4 eds. in his lifetime; his Erbauliches Handbüchlein für Kinder, 1734 (see below), which reached an 8th ed. in 1736, and a 14th in 1766; his various volumes of sermons, &c. He justly earned his popularity by the thoroughness of his researches, and the clear and concise way in which he set forth the results of his investigations. It is however as a hymn-writer that his name is likely to be best known. While not entitled to rank with the best hymn-writers of the 16th and 17th centuries, he yet takes a high place among his contemporaries, and deserves to be remembered as much as almost any of the 18th cent. hymn-writers. His style is good and dignified; his thought is profound yet clearly expressed. While his hymns are often sufficiently didactic, they are generally scriptural and churchly in tone, and are characterised by lyric force, lively imagination, and earnest, sober piety. Of hymns, in the strict sense, he wrote over 180, a large number of which passed into the German hymn-books of the 18th cent. (e.g. the Hannover G. B., 1740, and Lüneburg G. B., 1767, contains 52 by him), and a good many are still found in modern hymn-books. Of these Dr. J. I. Pasig gives 165 in his ed. of Rambach's Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1844, and the rest are printed by Hansen as above, while the first lines of the whole are given in the Blätter as above. Four are recasts (practically originals), made for the 11th ed., 1719, of Freylinghausen's G. B., to replace similar hymns in the ed. of 1705. The rest principally appeared in the following works by Rambach, viz.: (1) Geistliche Poesien, Halle, 1720 [Brit. Mus.] The first part contains 72 cantatas on the Gospels for Sundays and festivals; the second part includes 20 hymns, mostly written at Pözig in 1719. (2) Poetische Fest-Gedanken. Jena and Leipzig, 1723 [Royal Lib., Berlin]. Included are 15 pieces which may be called hymns. The 2nd ed. of 1727 [Brit. Mus.] has 28 new hymns; and the 3rd ed., 1729 [Göttingen Library], has 22 more. (3) Erbauliches Handbüchlein für Kinder, Giessen, 1734 [Hamburg Library]. The 3rd part contains 8 new hymns. (4) Geistreiches Haus-Gesang-Buch, Frankfurt and Leipzig, 1735 [Hamburg Library], with a preface dated April 10, 1735. This contains 112 hymns by Rambach, of which 58 are practically new, 11 of these, however, being recasts of his own earlier hymns. (5) Wunder der bis zum Tode des Kreuzes erniedrigten Liebe, Giessen, 1750 [Berlin Library]. This includes 27 new hymns.

One of Rambach's hymns is noted at p. 560, i. The others which have passed into English are:—

i. Auf! Seele, schicke dich. Holy Communion. Written, by request for the 11th ed., 1719, of Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, as No. 229, in 16 st. of 6 l., in order to replace the hymn "Auf, Seele, sey gerüst."

This hymn, by George Heine, was included in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 433. In the 2nd ed., 1771, of the complete book formed by the fusion of pt. I., 1704, and its suppl. of 1705 with pt. II., 1714, of Freylinghausen's G. B., both hymns are given, Heine's as No. 524, and Rambach's as No. 522, both marked as being No. 229 in pt. I., 1704.

Rambach's hymn is in his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 369; the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 471, &c. In Pasig's ed. of his Geistl. Lieder, 1844, p. 112, entitled "Before the reception of Holy Communion." It has been tr. as:—

My soul prepare to meet. Omitting st. i., ll. 4-6; ii., ll. 4-6; vii., xiv., as No. 570 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 966). In the ed. of 1886, No. 979 begins with st. iv., "How should I, slaughtered Lamb"; and No. 1012 with st. xi., "Lord, of Thy wondrous love."

ii. Mein Jesu, der du vor dem Scheiden. Holy Communion. Appeared in Freylinghausen's G. B., 11th ed., 1719, as No. 238, in 9 st. of 6 l. It was written to replace the hymn "Mein Jesu, hier sind deine Brüder" (Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 363), in the 1st ed. of Freylinghausen's G. B. It is in his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 365; the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1601; and in Pasig, 1844, p. 110, entitled, "On the treasures of Grace in Holy Communion." The trs. are:—

i. Lord Jesus, Who before Thy passion. Omitting st. ix., this is No. 1181 in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 963).

2. O Lord, Who — that last sad eve. A good tr., omitting st. ix., by Miss Cox, contributed to Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 15, and repeated in her Hys. from the Ger., 1864, p. 75. Included, omitting st. iii., in G. S. Jellicoe's Coll., 1867.

iii. O Lehrer, dem kein Andrer gleich. Christ our Prophet. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 107, in 8 st. of 6 l., entitled, "On the prophetic office of Jesus Christ." Repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 118, and in Pasig, 1844, p. 51. Tr. as:—

Surely none like Thee can teach. By Miss Fry, in 102 lines, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 126. A recast in 3 st. of 8 l., beginning, "Saviour, none like Thee can teach," was included in J. Whitemore's Suppl. to all H. Bks., 1860, No. 263, and repeated in the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863, No. 62.

iv. Wie herrlich ist ein Schäfein Christi werden. Joy in Believing. In his Poetische Fest-Gedanken, 2nd ed. 1727, p. 131, in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled, "The Blessedness of the Sheep of Christ. John x. 28, 'I give my sheep eternal life.'" In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 325; the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 645; and Pasig, 1844, p. 139. Tr. as:—

How great the bliss to be a sheep of Jesus. A tr. of st. i., ii., v., by C. J. Latrobe, as No. 293, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 385).

Hymns not in English C. U.:—

v. Allwissender, vollkommner Geist. The Omniscent One. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 12, in 6 st.; the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863; and in Pasig, p. 8. Tr. as, "Thou Spirit, perfect and allwise." By Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 17.

vi. Frommes Lamm, von was für Hunden. Passiontide. In his Poetische Fest-Gedanken, 2nd ed., 1727, p. 49, in 8 st. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 151, it begins, "Frommes Lamm, durch dessen Wunden." Also in Pasig, p. 67. Tr. as, "Great Thy sorrows, injur'd Jesus." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 297).

vii. Gesetz und Evangelium. Law and Gospel. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 356, in 10 st.; the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863; and Pasig, p. 105. Tr. as, "The holy law and gospel, both." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 27.)

viii. Herr, du hast nach dem Fall. Before Work. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 565, in 4 st.; and Pasig, p. 150. In the Berlin G. B., 1765, No. 206, it is altered (probably by J. S. Diterich), and begins "Du hast uns, Herr die Pflicht." This is tr. as, "Lord, Thou hast bid us labour, bid us toil." By Miss Warner, 1858, p. 230.

ix. Hier bin ich Herr, du rufest mir. Christian Work. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 269, in 6 st.; the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 306; and Pasig, p. 119. The trs. are (1) "Here am I, Lord, Thou callest me, Thou drawest me." By Miss Warner, 1853, p. 209. (2) "Here am I, Lord, Thou callest me, Thou drawest and." By Mrs. Findlater, in H. L. B., 4th series, 1862.

x. Höchste Vollkommenheit, reineste Sonne. God's Majesty. Written for the 11th ed., 1719, of Freylinghausen's G. B., No. 170 (in 20 st.), to replace an anonymous hymn in the 1st ed., 1704, which began "Höchste Vollkommenheit, alles in Einem." In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 8, Rambach reduced it to 12 st., and rewrote it to an easier metre, so as to begin "Höchstes Wesen, reineste Sonne." Both forms are in Pasig, pp. 3-6. Tr. as "If Heav'n and Earths there were innumerable," a tr. of st. iii., viii., xi., xv., xvii., xix., xx., as No. 672, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

xi. O grosser Geist, dess Wesen Alles füllet. The Omnipresent One. In his Geistliche Poesien, 1720, p. 330, in 9 st.; his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 13; the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 44; and Pasig, p. 7. Tr. as, "Eternal God, Thy dwelling-place." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 73.

xii. O grosser Geist! O Ursprung aller Dinge. God's Holiness. In his Geistliche Poesien, 1720, p. 327, in 9 st.; his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 19; and Pasig, p. 15. Tr. as, "O mighty Spirit! Source whence all things sprung." By Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 153.

xiii. Verklärte Majestät, anbetungs-würdigst Wesen. God's Majesty. Founded on 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16. In his Geistliche Poesien, 1720, p. 303, in 11 st.; his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 7; and Pasig, p. 2. The form tr. is "Anbetungswürdiger Gott," a recast (probably by J. S. Diterich), which is No. 1 in the Berlin G. B., 1765, and No. 5 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as, "Dread Majesty above." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 8).

xiv. Wirf, blöder Sinn, den Kummer hin. Christ-mas. In his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 129, in 6 st. (founded on Rom. viii. 31, 32). In Pasig, p. 6, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 60. Tr. as, "Throw, soul, I say, thy fears away." By Miss Manington, 1864, p. 28.

Ῥανάτωσαν ἡμῖν ἄνωθεν. [Ἀνάστης τριήμερος.]

Randall, Thomas, M.A., was b. in 1711, and studied at the University of Edinburgh, where he graduated M.A. in 1730. In 1739 he became parish minister of Inchture, Perthshire, and in 1770 minister of the East Church, Stirling. He d. at Stirling, July 21, 1780. He was one of those added in 1744 to the Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland which compiled the Translations and Paraphrases of 1745. To him is ascribed No. 11 in the collection of 1745, No. 49 in that of 1781. See Scottish Translations and Paraphrases. [J. M.]

Randolph, Anson Davis Fete, was b. at Woodbridge, New Jersey, Oct. 18, 1820, and subsequently became a publisher and bookseller in New York. His Hopefully Waiting and other Verses were pub. in 1867. His hymn "Weary, Lord, of struggling here" (Desiring to Depart), was written in 1849, and first printed in the New York Independent. It was repeated in his Hopefully Waiting, &c., 1867, and is in a few collections. [F. M. B.]

Rands, William Brighty, was b. in Chelsea in 1826 and d. at Dulwich on April 23rd, 1882. He was a considerable contributor to literature, but published his works under various names—e.g. "Matthew Browne," "Henry Holbeach," "Lilliput Levee," &c. One hymn by him of great force and originality has found its way into recent hymnals, "One Lord there is all Lords above" (God a consuming fire to sin). It appeared originally in his "Lilliput Lectures," 1872. It has been included in Horder's Congregational Hymns, 1884, and in the Congregational Church Hymnal, 1887. [W. G. H.]

Rankin, Jeremiah Eames, D.D., was b. at Thornton, New Haven, Jan. 2, 1828, and educated at Middleburg College, Vermont, and at Andover. For two years he resided at Potsdam, U.S. Subsequently he held pastoral charges as a Congregational Minister at New York, St. Albans, Charlestown, Washington (District of Columbia), &c. In 1878 he edited the Gospel Temperance Hymnal, and later the Gospel Bells. His hymns appeared in these collections, and in D. E. Jones's Songs of the New Life, 1869. His best known hymn is "Labouring and heavy laden" (Seeking Christ). This was "written [in 1855] for sister who was an inquirer," was first printed in the Boston Recorder, and then included in Nason's Cong. H. Bk., 1857. Another of his hymns is "Rest, rest, rest, brother rest." He d. in 1904. [F. M. B.]

Rawson, George, was b. June 5, 1807, at Leeds, in which town he practised for many years as a solicitor. In 1853 he assisted the Congregational ministers of Leeds in the compilation of Psalms, Hymns, and Passages of Scripture for Christian Worship, a vol. commonly known as the Leeds Hymn-book. Mr. Rawson was a member of the Congregational body. In 1858 he also assisted Rev. Dr. Green and other Baptist ministers in the preparation of Psalms and Hymns for the use of the Baptist Denomination. A number of Mr. Rawson's own compositions first appeared in this and in the Leeds H. Bk. In 1876 he pub. his Hymns, Verses and Chants (Hodder and Stoughton, London), including his previously published hymns, and containing (exclusive of chants) 80 original pieces. In 1885 most of these, with several additional hymns, were pub. by the R. T. S. under the title Songs of Spiritual Thought. Mr. Rawson d. March 25, 1889. His hymns are distinguished by refinement of thought, and delicacy and propriety of language; and if they do not attain the first rank among the songs of the Christian Church, many are of great excellence. The most widely known are, "By Christ redeemed, in Christ restored," "Come to our poor nature's night," "Father in high heaven dwelling;" "In the dark and cloudy day;" and "Reaper, behold the fields are white." In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, there are also several recasts of and additions to the hymns of other writers. These are noted in this Dictionary, and may be gathered from the Index of Authors and Translators. In addition to Mr. Rawson's hymns which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following are also in C. U.:—

i. From the Leeds H. Bk., 1853.

1. Captain and Saviour of the host. Burial.
2. Give dust to dust: and here we leave. Burial.
3. God the Lord is King—before him. Ps. xcix.
4. In the dark and cloudy day. Consolation.
5. Soul, thy week of toil is ended. Saturday Evening.
6. Though the night be very long. Resignation.

ii. From the Baptist Psalms & Hymns, 1858.

7. Beautiful, desired, and dear. Public Worship.
8. Blessed are they who have not seen. Faith.
9. Blessed is the faithful heart. Faithfulness.
10. Christ to heaven is gone before. Ascension.
11. God the Father, be Thou near. Evening.
12. He fell asleep in Christ the Lord. Burial.
13. Immersed beneath the closing wave. Holy Baptism.
14. Lord, we bless Thee, Who hast given. Holy Communion.
15. My Father God, with filial awe. Abiding in God.
16. Our eyes we lift up to the hills. The Lord the Pastor's Keeper.
17. Reaper, behold the fields are ripe [white]. Missions.
18. Rise, heart, thy Lord arose. Sunday.
19. Upon the holy mountains high. Security of the Church.

iii. From the Leeds Sunday S. H. Bk., 1858.

20. And will [How shall] the mighty God. The Holy Ghost.
21. Jesus, the Lord, our Righteousness. Jesus, the children's Friend.

22. O Thou Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd.

iv. From Dr. Allon's Supplemental Hymns, 1868.

23. My Father, it is good for me. Trust.
24. Thou Who hast known the careworn breast. Evening.

25. Walking with Thee, my God. Walking with God.
v. From Mr. Rawson's Hymns, Verses, &c., 1876.

26. God is our Refuge; God our Strength. Ps. xvi.
27. Lo, a voice from heaven hath said. Burial.
28. Lord, let me pray. I know not how. The Holy Spirit desired.
29. O pallid, gentle, grief-worn face. Easter Eve.
30. Out of the depths, the gulfs, the night. Ps. cxxx.
31. This, the old world's day of rest. Saturday Evening. [1854-7.]
32. Thou who Thyself didst sanctify. Ordination. [1854-7.]
33. Voices of the deep blue night. The Heavenly Call.
34. With gladness we worship. Public Worship.

When to these 34 hymns are added those which are annotated under their respective first lines, and the recasts which are mainly Mr. Rawson's own composition, he is represented by about 50 hymns in the collections of the present day. It must be noted that in the Hymns, &c., 1876, and in the Songs, &c., 1885, the texts of the hymns have been revised by the author, and in several instances been weakened thereby. [W. R. S.]

Raymond, William Sterne, M.A., was b. in 1832, and educated at Magdalene College, Cambridge, B.A. 1854. Taking holy orders, he was for sometime Curate of Tedstone-Delamere, Herefordshire. Subsequently he became a Fellow of St. Nicholas College, Lancing, Sussex. He d. in 1863. His hymn for Easter Eve, "Weeping as they go their way," was pub. in I. G. Smith's H. Bk. for the Services of the Church, &c., 1855, and is found in several collections. [J. J.]

Rebus creatis nil egens. C. Coffin, [Septuagesima.] Pub. in the Paris Breviary, 1736; and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 45. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Our God, in His celestial seat. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 63; and, again, in his Hys. of the Church mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 34. It was repeated in the People's H., 1867, and others. There are also altered versions of Chandler—as (1) "Blest in Thyself, created thing," in Johnston's English Hyl., 1852 and 1861; and (2) "O Lord, who art enthroned on high," in the Hymnary, 1872.

2. Thou dost not need creation's aid. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 61; and, again, in a few collections.

3. Of creation nought Thou needest. By W. J. Blew, in his Church H. & Tune Bk., 1852-55; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

4. O Christ, in Thine all-blissful state. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 121. This was rewritten by the Compilers of H. A. & M., 1861, as, "O Lord, in perfect bliss above" (omitted from H. A. & M. in 1875); and this, again, altered in the Rev. F. Pott's Hymns, 1861, as, "Thou, Who art All in All above."

5. O God, the joy of heav'n above. By the Compilers of H. A. & M. in their Suppl. Hymns, 1889.

Other trs. are :—

1. Thou that lack'st no created thing. A. J. B. Hope. 1844.
2. Thou of the things created nothing needing. J. Williams. 1839. [J. J.]

Recordare sanctæ crucis. St. Bonaventura. [Passiontide. Holy Cross.] Included as his "Laudismus de sancta cruce," in a collection of his tractates pub. at Paris c. 1510 (Brit. Mus. 3558 a). The text, in 90 lines, is also in his Opera, Mainz, 1609, vol. vi. p. 423. F. W. E. Roth, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1887, gives a long form in 77 st. of 3 l. from a ms. of the 15th cent. at Darmstadt. A selection of stanzas beginning with the first, is given by Rambach, i. p. 315; Daniel, ii. p. 101; Kehrein, No. 62, and others. Trench, ed. 1864, p. 143, gives a selection of stanzas from the second part of the poem beginning, "Quam despectus, quam dejectus." [J. M.]

Both of these selections from the original have been tr. either in full or in part, thus:—

i. Recordare sanctæ crucis. This, from Daniel's text, st. 1.-viii., xv., as:—

Ponder thou the Cross all holy. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, was made by Dr. E. A. Washburn, of N. York. In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 37, is compiled, with slight alterations, from this tr., together with the addition of the last stanza.

Other trs. are :—

1. Make the Cross your meditation. Dr. H. Harbaugh in the American Mercersburg Review, 1858, p. 481.
2. Jesus' holy Cross and dying. Dr. J. W. Alexander, in his The Breaking Crucible, &c., 1861, and Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.
3. In the holy Cross delight. D. T. Morgan, 1871 and 1880.

ii. Quam despectus, quam dejectus. This from st. i.-iv., as in Trench, is tr. as:—

1. Son of Man, and Man of sorrows. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Hymns, 1862, No. 43.
2. O what shame and desolation. By P. S. Worsley, in his Poems and Trs., 1863, p. 183; and in Lyra Messianica, 1864.

iii. Qui hæc audis, ingemisce. This from the remaining sts. of Trench, is tr. as:—

Thou that hearest, with His groaning, also by H. Kynaston, in his Occasional H., No. 43, Pt. ii.

From these two parts in Kynaston, No. 36, in the Hymnary, 1872, is compiled. [J. J.]

Rector potens, verax Deus. St. Ambrose? [Noon.] This hymn has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, and is certainly ancient, but is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors. Daniel, i., No. 41, gives the original (and the text of the Roman Brev., 1632), in 2 st. of 4 l., and at iv. p. 44, cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent.: while at iv. p. 43 he expresses the opinion that the hymn "Bis ternas horas" (q. v.) is more probably that written by St. Ambrose for the Sixth Hour. In all the ancient Breviaries it is the hymn at Sext, as in the Ambrosian of 1539, the Roman (Venice, 1478 and the revision of 1632), Mozarabic of 1502, Sarum, York, &c. It is suggested by Hosea vii. 4, Ps. xci. 6, and James iv. 1. As the sixth hour was the time for the mid-day meal (Acts x. 9), it may have been meant for use as a prayer against the temptations of the flesh. [W. A. S.]

Mone, i. p. 372, cites it as in two mss. of the 8th cent. at Darmstadt and at Trier, both assigning it to Sext. It is also in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 8 b; Jul. A. 6 f. 22; Harl. 2961 f. 220); in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 230); in the St. Gall ms., No. 413, of the 11th cent., &c. In the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtess Society), 1861, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 4). [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. O God, the Lord of place and time. Card. Newman, in Tracts for the Times, 1836, No. 75, p. 68. In his Verses, &c., 1853 and 1868, it begins, "O God, Who canst not change nor fail." It is in several modern collections, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hys. 1871 (1853 text), Hys. for the Use of the University of Oxford, 1872, &c.

2. O God of truth, Almighty Lord. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 6. It was rewritten for the English Hyl., 1852, as "Unchanging God, all-powerful Lord." It is also slightly altered in the Hymnary, 1872.

3. Lord of eternal truth and might. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 11; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 7. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and others.

4. Eternal Truth, eternal Might. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 40: the Scottish Episco. Hymns, 1858, &c.

5. O God of truth, O Lord of might. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1852, No. 6, and later editions. In the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, sts. i., ii., were considerably altered, and a new doxology was substituted for that by Dr. Neale. It was again altered by the Compilers of H. A. & M., 1861, and others. Mercer's text, in his Church Ps. & H. Bk., Oxford ed., is that of H. A. & M. again altered. It begins, "Thou God of truth, Thou Lord of might."

6. Thou Mighty Ruler, God of truth. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 137, and the People's H., 1867. In Chambers's Laudæ Syon, 1857, p. 37, it was altered to "Almighty Ruler, God of truth."

10. O God of truth and Lord of might. J. Wallace. 1874. [J. J.]

Redeemed offender, hail the day. A. M. Toplady. [Passiontide.] 1st pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, &c., 1759, in 8 st. of 4 l. It was not included in his Ps. and Hys., 1776, but is republished in D. Sedgwick's reprint of his Hymns, 1860, p. 124. In its full form it is not in common use, but a cento therefrom, "For me vouchsaf'd th' unspotted Lamb," is given in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 285. It is composed of st. iii., iv., and viii. unaltered. [J. J.]

Reed, Andrew, D.D., son of Andrew Reed, was b. in London on Nov. 27, 1787, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Hackney College, London. He was first the pastor of the New Road Chapel, St. George's-in-the-East, and then of the Wycliffe Chapel, which was built through his exertions in 1830.

His degree was conferred by Yale College, America. He d. Feb. 25, 1862. As the founder of "The London Orphan Asylum," "The Asylum for Fatherless Children," "The Asylum for Idiots," "The Infant Orphan Asylum," and "The Hospital for Incurables," Dr. Reed is more fully known, and will be longer remembered than by his literary publications. His Hymn Book was the growth of years. The preparation began in 1817, when he pub. a Supplement to Watts, in which were a few originals. This was enlarged in 1825; and entirely superseded by his collection The Hymn Book, prepared from Dr. Watts's Ps. & Hys. and Other Authors, with some Originals, in 1842 (Preface). His hymns, mostly of a plain and practical character, numbering 21, were contributed to these various editions, and were republished with those of his wife (see below) in the Wycliffe Supplement, 1872. The best known are "Ah Jesus, let me hear Thy voice," and "Spirit Divine, attend our prayer." All Dr. and Mrs. Reed's hymns are anonymous in The Hymn Book, 1842, but are given with their names in the Wycliffe Suppl., 1872. His hymns now in C. U. include, in addition to those annotated under their respective first lines:—

1. Come, let us strike our harps afresh. Praise.
2. Come, my Redeemer, come. Desiring Christ's Presence.
3. Gentle Saviour, look on me. Christ's protection Desired.
4. Gracious Lord, as Thou hast taught us. Public Worship.
5. Hark, hark, the notes of joy. Missions.
6. Holy Ghost, with light divine (1817). Prayer to the Holy Spirit. Sometimes given as "Holy Ghost, Thou light divine;" and again as "Holy Spirit, Light divine."
7. Listen, sinner, mercy hails you. Invitation. Generally given as "Hear, O Sinner, mercy hails you."
8. Rich are the joys of solitude. Retirement. Sometimes given as "How deep and tranquil is the joy."
9. There [comes] is an hour when I must part. Death anticipated.
10. Ye saints your music bring. Praise of the Cross.

Reed, Eliza, née Holmes, was b. in London, March 4, 1794; married to the Rev. Andrew Reed (see above) in 1816; and d. July 4, 1867. Mrs. Reed entered fully and earnestly into her husband's extensive charitable works. Her publications include Original Tales for Children; and The Mother's Manual for the Training of her Children, 1865. Her hymns, 20 in all, were contributed to her husband's collection, and were republished with his in the Wycliffe Chapel Supplement, 1872. They are only of average merit, and have not attained to a marked position. They include:—

1. Gracious Lord, as Thou hast bidden. Holy Baptism.
2. I would be Thine, O take my heart. Dedication of Self to Christ.
3. O do not let the word depart. The Accepted Time.
4. O that I could for ever dwell. Communion with God Desired.

Regina coeli laetare. [B. V. M.] Anselm Schubiger, in his Musikalische Spicelegien, Berlin, 1876, p. 57, cites it as in a ms. of 1372, now at Engelberg in Switzerland. It is given as an Easter antiphon in the Roman Brev., Modena, 1480, f. 512. Repeated in later eds. of the Roman Brev., and also in Daniel, ii. p. 319. Tr. as:—

Joy to thee, O queen of heaven. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 39; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 23. Repeated in a few Roman Catholic hymn-books for schools and missions.

Other trs. are:—

1. Rejoyce, thow Queen of heaven. Primer. 1604.
2. O Queene of heaven, rejoyce. Primer. 1615.
3. Rejoyce, chast Queen of angels, and apply. J. Austin, in his Devotions, &c. 1668.
4. Triumph, O Queen of heaven, to see. Primer. 1706.
5. Rejoice, O Queen of heaven. Card. Newman, in Tracts for the Times, 1836, No. 75, p. 24.
6. Queen of heaven, now rejoice. J. Wallace. 1874.

Regnantem sempiterna per saecula susceptura. [Advent.] This Sequence is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775, f. 168), written c. 1000; and another circa 1070 (Douce, 222 f. 82 b); in a Winchester book of the 11th cent. now in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (No. 473); in a 12th cent. Gradual in the British Museum (Reg. 2 B. iv. f. 59 b), &c. Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris, and a 14th cent. Sens, in the British Museum; in a Sarum, c. 1370; a Hereford, c. 1370, and a York, c. 1390, all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrew's and various French Missals. In the English Missals it is the Sequence for the second S. in Advent. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiae, 1852, p. 5; in Daniel, v. p. 172, and Kehrein, No. 2. Tr. as:—

Christ that ever reigneth. By E. A. Dayman, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. Him Who ruleth creation. J. D. Chambers. 1866.
2. To welcome Him Who shall for ever reign. J. W. Hewett, in Lyra Messianica, 1864.
3. Reception giving to the King eternal. C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868.
4. Let the choir devoutly bring. C. B. Fearson, in his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871. [J. M.]

Regnator orbis summus et arbiter.

Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [St. Michael and All Angels.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1680; the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. 1092; the author's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 43 (ed. 1698, p. 184); the Paris Brev., 1736; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

Where the angelic hosts adore Thee. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 255. In the Hymnary it begins, "Where the angel-hosts adore Thee." It is also altered in W. J. Blew's Church H. and Tune Bk., 1852-1855.

Another tr. is:—

Omnipotent, infinite Lord. E. Caswall. 1858.

Reinmar, sometimes called Reinmar der Alte, or Reinmar von Hagenau, seems to have been b. at Strassburg, about 1160. He lived principally at the court of Duke Leopold VI. of Austria, seems to have taken part with him in the Crusade of 1190, and wrote one of his finest pieces as an elegy on his death in 1194. Reinmar d. about 1207 (K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. i., 1884, p. 52, &c.). He was one of the most important of the Minnesingers, and is said to have been the inventor of most of the forms of lyric used by the later Minnesingers. This is strengthened by the fact that their pieces are in great measure variations on themes which were first employed by him. His pieces are principally love songs, and songs of the Crusades. The only one tr. into English is:—

Des Tages do ich daz Kriuz nam. Crusader's Song. On Unruly Thoughts. F. H. v. der Hagen, in his Minnesinger, vol. i., 1838, p. 187, gives this from the Maness ms. (14th cent.) of the Minnesinger, now in the Bibliothèque Nationale, at Paris. Also in Wackernagel, ii, p. 59, in 4 st. of 10 l. Tr. as:—"E'er since the day this Cross was mine." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 44.

[J. M.]

Reissner, Adam, was b. in 1496 at Mündelsheim (now Mindelheim) in Swabian Bavaria. He first studied at Wittenberg, and then, about 1521, he learned Hebrew and Greek under Johann Reuchlin. He then became private secretary to Georg von Frundsberg (who d. Aug. 20, 1528), and accompanied him during the campaign in Italy, 1526-27. After the capture of Rome in 1527 he went back to Germany, and spent some time at Strassburg, where he became a friend and adherent of Caspar Schwenckfeldt. He seems to have been living at Frankfurt-am-Main in 1563, but thereafter returned to Mindelheim, where he was still living in 1572. He appears to have d. there about 1575. (Koch, ii, 156; Preface to his Historia Herrn Georgen und Herrn Casparn von Frundsberg's [d. Aug. 31, 1536] Vatters und Sons . . . Kriegesthaten, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1568. The Brit. Museum copy is unmistakably dated on title 1568, but the preface is dated Jan. 31, 1572.)

Three of Reissner's earlier hymns are in Zwick's G. B., 1536-40. His later hymns, including a tr. of the hymns of Prudentius, are collected in two mss., both dated 1596 (see Wackernagel, i, pp. 590, 594). That now at Wolfenbüttel is entitled Teglich's Gesangbuch . . . durch Adam Reussner, and contains over 40 hymns which may be regarded as by Reissner, the rest being by other writers of the school of Schwenckfeldt. Wackernagel, vol. iii., gives Nos. 170-194 under his name.

The only hymn by Reissner tr. into English is:—

In dich hab ich gehoffet, Herr. Ps. xxxi. 1st pub. in the Form und Ordnung Gaystlicher Gesang und Psalmen, Augsburg, 1533, and thence in Wackernagel, iii, p. 133, in 7 st. of 6 l. It was included in V. Babst's G. B., 1545, and repeated in almost all the German hymn-books up to the period of Rationalism. It is one of the best Psalm-versions of the Reformation period. Included in the Uno. L. S., 1851, No. 629. The tr. in C. U. is:—

In Thee, Lord, have I put my trust. A good tr., omitting st. vii., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 120.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Lord, let me never be confoundit." In the Guide and Godly Ballates, ed. 1568, f. 82; ed. 1868, p. 141. (2) "Great God! in Thee I put my Trust." By J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 33 (1732, p. 116). Repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. 1, No. 118. (3) "Lord, I have trusted in Thy name." By Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 171. (4) "On Thee, O Lord, my hopes I lean." By N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 263. [J. M.]

Rejoice and be glad, the Redeemer has come. H. Bonar. [Praise of Jesus.] Written for I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, circa 1875. From that collection it has passed into a large number of Sunday School hymn-books, and others. [J. J.]

Rejoice, rejoice, ye fallen race. C. Wesley. [Whitsuntide.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1742, p. 165, in 12 st. of 4 l., and headed "Hymn for the Day of Pentecost." (P. Works, ii, p. 227.) The following centos are in part, or in full from this hymn:—

1. Our Jesus is gone up on high. Composed of st. ii.-ix. in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875.
2. Lord, we believe to us and ours. Composed of st. v., vii.-ix., xi., and given as a Hymn for Ember Days in Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864.
3. Come, Holy Spirit, raise our songs. This cento is composed of st. i.-iii. from R. C. Brackenbury's Sac.

Poems & Hys., 1792: and the rest from this hymn by C. Wesley. It was given in this form in the Wes. H. Bk., 1830, but omitted in 1875. [J. J.]

Rejoice, the Lord is King. C. Wesley. [Easter or Ascension.] This is No. viii. of 16 hymns printed in 1746 as Hys. for Our Lord's Resurrection. It is in 6 st. of 6 l. It had previously appeared in J. Wesley's Moral and Sacred Poems, 1744. (P. Works, iv, p. 140.) It has been included, either in full or in part, in most hymn-books of any moment from Whitefield's, in 1753, to Thring's, in 1882, with the result that it is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries. Curiously enough, however, it was not given in the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. of 1875. A cento for harvest beginning with the first stanza is found in some Unitarian hymn-books both old and new, including Ellen Courtauld's Ps., Hys. and Anthems, 1860. It is in 5 st., the first stanza and ll. 5, 6, of each of the others being from this hymn, whilst the rest are by John Taylor in Enfield's Norwich Sel. of Hys., 1795. [See Taylor, John.] In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, st. i., ii., iv., vi., slightly altered, are rendered into Latin as, "Rex est Dominus! Lætantes." [J. J.]

Rejoice to-day with one accord. Sir H. W. Baker. [General Thanksgiving.] Contributed to the 1st ed. of H. A. & M., 1861, and continued in the revised ed. of 1875. It is also repeated in a large number of hymn-books both at home and abroad. It is justly regarded as a good example of the author's jubilant style. [J. J.]

Religion is the chief concern. J. Fawcett. [Pure Religion desired.] Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1782, No. 68, in 8 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Nature and Necessity of inward Religion." It is in C. U. in an abbreviated form, under the original opening line, and also as, "O may my heart, by grace renew'd." [J. J.]

Remark, my soul, the narrow bounds. P. Doddridge. [New Year.] 1st pub. in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 52, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 65. In each case it is headed "Reflections on our waste of years, Psal. xc. 9. For New Year's Day." It is in C. U. in the following forms:—

1. Remark, my soul, the narrow bounds. The original form in several collections both old and new.
2. Remark with awe the narrow bounds. In Stowell's Manchester Ps. & Hys., 1831 and 1877, &c.
3. Behold, my soul, the narrow bounds. H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855. [J. J.]

Reprouches, The. [Popule meus quid feci tibi.]

Rerum Creator omnium. C. Coffin. [Saturday.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736; and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 30. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Eccl., 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Creator of mankind. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 30. It is in this form in a few collections; and also as, "O Saviour of mankind," in Kennedy, 1863.
2. Maker of all things, aid our hands. By I.

Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 39. Given in a few collections without alterations; and, in others, including the Sarum, 1868, and the Hymnary, 1872, as, "Creator of the world, do Thou."

Other trs. are:—

1. O Thou by Whom the worlds were made. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
2. Maker of all, vouchsafe to bless. D. T. Morgan, 1880. [J. J.]

Rerum Creator optime. St. Gregory the Great? [Wednesday Morning.] Mone, No. 275, gives this as probably by St. Gregory (it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors), and at i. p. 372, cites it as in an 8th cent. ms. at Trier. Daniel gives the text at i., No. 44; and at iv. p. 37, cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent., and ranks it as a hymn of the 7th or 8th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 17 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 26; Harl. 2961 f. 222 b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30851 f. 178); an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848 f. 76), &c. It is in an 11th cent. ms. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 234); in three mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413, 414; and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 7). It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries; uniformly for Wednesday at Nocturns or at Matins. The text is also in Wackernagel, i., No. 92; Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 49; Königsfeld, i. p. 10; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and G. M. Drevess's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. Tr. as:—

1. O Creator, most benigne. Sarum Primer, 1545.
2. O God, Whose power did all create. Primer, 1706.
3. Dread Maker of what'er we see. T. Doubleday's Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.
4. Creator, ever good and kind. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
5. O blest Creator of the world. E. Caswall, 1849.
6. Creator, Lord of all. R. Campbell, 1850.
7. Creator of all worlds, look down. J. D. Chambers, 1852. In 1857 it reads: "Creator of the world, look down."
8. Who madest all, and dost control. Card. Newman, 1838.
9. O great Creator of the orb. J. Wallace, 1874.
10. Let us keep steadfast guard. American Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1878.
11. Maker of all things, God of Love. Hymner, 1882. [J. M.]

Rerum Deus tenax vigor. St. Ambrose? [The Ninth Hour.] This hymn is given by Biraghi as one of the Inni sinceri e Carmi di Sant' Ambrogio, 1862; but it is not one of the twelve received as genuine by the Benedictine editors of St. Ambrose. Daniel gives the text at i., No. 42, and at iv. p. 45, cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent., and ranks it as a hymn of the 7th or 8th cent. Mone, i. p. 372, cites it as in mss. of the 8th cent. at Darmstadt and Trier; and Thomasius, ii. 418, as in a Vatican ms. of the 8th cent. It is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church now in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 9; Jul. A. vi. f. 22; Harl. 2961 f. 220); in an 11th cent. ms. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 230); in the St. Gall ms. No. 413, of the 11th cent.; and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon

Church (Surtees Soc.), 1851, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 4 b). It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries, uniformly for None. The text is also in Wackernagel, i., No. 8; Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 41; Königsfeld, ii. p. 24; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. O God, unchangeable and true. By Card. Newman, in Tracts for the Times, 1836, No. 75, p. 72, and his Verses, &c., 1853 and 1868. In Thring's Coll. 1882.
2. Almighty God, Thy Throne above. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 7. Repeated in the Hymnary, 1872, and other collections.
3. God, of all the Strength and Stay. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848: the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, &c.
4. O Thou, true Life of all that live. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 12; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 8. It was repeated, with alterations, in Murray's Hymnal, 1853; and, again, in later collections, usually without any change.
5. O God, creator's secret Force. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1852, No. 7, and later editions of the same.
6. O God, of all the Strength and Stay. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 144, and his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 39. This is the most popular of the trs. of this hymn, and is found in several hymn-books, including the Parish H. Bk., 1863; People's H., 1867; Sarum, 1868; Thring's Coll., 1882, &c.
7. O God, of all the Strength and Power. This tr. was given in H. A. & M., 1861. In the Index of the revised ed. 1875, it is said to be by "Rev. J. M. Neale, D.D., and compilers: from the Latin." The rendering, however, is much nearer those of Caswall and Chambers than that of Neale. It is in a limited number of hymn-books.
8. O Strength and Stay, upholding all creation. This popular tr. appeared in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, and is by J. Ellerton and F. J. A. Hort. It is repeated in several collections. In H. A. & M., 1875, and Thring's Coll., 1882, it is given with the addition of a doxology, by Mr. Ellerton. This tr. bids fair to supersede that by Mr. Chambers in popularity. Its metre is greatly in its favour. It is in Mr. Ellerton's Hymns, 1888.
9. O God, the Light of all that live. This cento, in J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1856, and the American Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, is thus composed: sts. i., ii., Caswall; st. iii., Card. Newman.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. O God, the Energy of things. Primer, 1706.
2. Nature's God, all-ruling Power. Bp. R. Mant, 1837.
3. Thou of the universe the Stay. J. Doubleday's Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.
4. Great God, o'er all things ever reigning. Bp. J. Williams, 1845.
5. Strength of the everlasting hills. R. Campbell, 1850.
6. Thou God of all, unmoved and strong. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
7. God of heaven and earth, Whose Might. H. Bonar, Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1867.
8. O God, th' enduring Might of things. J. Keble, Miscell. Poems, 1869.
9. Creator, whose almighty power. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Rest from thy labour, rest. J. Montgomery. [Death and Burial of a Minister.] Montgomery was received into the Moravian communion as a member of that Society by the Rev. Christian Ramftler. Mr. Ramftler died at Bristol on Oct. 25, 1832. In the letter which conveyed to him the sad intelligence, Montgomery was requested to write a suitable hymn for the approaching Lovefeast at Bristol. The response was this hymn, which was first sung in public at Bristol (Memoirs, v. 66). It was included in Montgomery's Original Hys., 1853, No. 307, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "On the death of a Minister." On Jan. 22, 1851, Montgomery wrote a hymn on the death of the Rev. Dr. Sutton, Vicar of Sheffield, which began with the same opening stanza. This hymn is not in the Original Hys., nor in C. U. The original is in a large number of hymn-books. In 1849 st. iii.-v. were given in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., No. 494, and have been repeated in several later collections as "Lord Christ, into Thy hands." The early date of this cento suggests that the hymn was published before it appeared in the Original Hys., 1853, and possibly in a magazine, but it has not been traced to any work of the kind. [J. J.]

Rest in the Lord; from harps above. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Holy Matrimony.] Bp. Bickersteth says in his Notes to his H. Comp., 1870, that "This hymn was written by the Editor for this hymnal, and is especially designed to follow the air from Mendelssohn's Elijah, 'Rest in the Lord,' which is so often played at the solemnization of holy matrimony." In addition to the H. Comp. this hymn appeared in Bp. Bickersteth's The Two Brothers, &c., 1871, p. 242, and in several hymn-books. [J. J.]

Rest, weary heart [soul]: The penalty is borne, the ransom paid. Jane Borthwick. [Passiontide.] Pub. in her Thoughts for Thoughtful Hours, 1859, p. 33, in 4 st. of 7 l. It has passed into several collections, and sometimes as "Rest weary soul: The penalty," &c. It is a beautiful hymn, but better adapted for private devotion than for public worship. [J. J.]

Restore, O Father, to our times restore. Maria Popple. [Christian Unity desired.] Contributed to Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hys., 1837, No. 304, in 3 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Christian Unity." It is signed "Miriam." It has passed into a few collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Retire, vain world, awhile retire. [Home Missions.] This is found in the 1828-1829 ed. of the American (Old Presbyterian) Ps. & Hys. . . of the Presb. Church, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in later collections. In most cases it is attributed to I. Watts, but we have failed to trace it to any of his works. Two centos therefrom are also in C. U., both beginning with st. ii., "Blest Jesu, come Thou gently down." The first is in the Presby. Ps. & Hys. for the Worship of God, Richmond, U. S. A., 1867, composed of st. ii., iv.-vi.; and the second, in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, composed of st. ii., iii., vi., vii. It is usually given for Revival Services and Prayer Meetings. [J. J.]

Return, O wanderer, return. W. B. Collyer. [Call to Repentance.] Appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, May 1806, and in his Hymns, &c., 1812, No. 928, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Backslider." It is in use in its original form; as "Return, my wandering soul, return And seek an injured," &c., in the Philadelphia Bap. H. & Tune Bk., 1871; and as "Wanderer from God, return, return," in a few of the American collections. [J. J.]

Reusner, Adam. [Reissner, A.]

Reusner, Christoph, was a bookseller and bookbinder in Stockholm, and was probably born there, but date of birth is unknown. In 1675 he printed, and seems also to have edited, a collection of hymns for the German congregation at Stockholm, entitled Gottselige Haus- und Kirchen-Andacht, zu Dienst der Gemeinde der Deutschen Kirche in Stockholm. This work contains a number of hymns signed "R," which have been ascribed to Reusner. By others this "R" has been taken to mean Regina, i.e. the Queen of Sweden [Ulrike Eleonore, dau. of King Frederick III. of Denmark, b. at Copenhagen, Sept. 11, 1656; became Queen of Sweden by her marriage with Charles XI. in 1680; d. at Carlberg, July 26, 1693], but this ascription seems quite improbable. One of these hymns has passed into English, viz. :—

Bin ich allein ein Fremdling auf der Erden. Cross and Consolation. 1st pub. 1675 as above. A copy of this work is in the Royal Library at Stockholm, and Dr. G. E. Klemming, the librarian, has kindly informed me that the hymn in question is No. 441, and is in 13 st. and signed "R." He adds that in the ed. of 1683 it has 15 st. (st. xi., xii. being additional), and that in the Geistliches Handbuch, Stockholm, Wankjiff, 1682, it has 17 st. (xi.-xiv. being additional). As the German hymn-books copied from Stockholm, there is the same variety in them, e.g. the Frankfurt ed., 1678, of Crüger's Praxis, No. 827, has the 13 st. of 1675; while the liga G. B., 1680 (Andachts-Flamme), the 17 st. of 1682, and so in Freylinghausen's Neues Geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 440. Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, No. 881, follows the 1675, but omits st. iii., v. The tr. in C. U. is:—
Am I a stranger here, on earth alone. In full from Bunsen, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 57. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 43, the trs. of st. v., vii., viii., x. are omitted, and it is given altered in metre as "Am I on earth a lone and friendless stranger." [J. M.]

Revive Thy work, O Lord, Thy mighty arm make bare. A. Midlane. [Home Missions.] 1st pub. in the British Messenger, Oct. 1858, again in the Evangelical H. Bk., 1860, and again in a large number of hymnals in G. Britain and America. The original text is usually given with the change of st. v. l. 2, "Give pentecostal showers," to "And give refreshing showers," as in the H. Comp., No. 150. It is one of the most popular of Mr. Midlane's hymns. [J. J.]

Rex aeterne Domine. [Eastertide.] This hymn is certainly ancient, being mentioned in the Rule of Aurelianus of Arles (d. 555), and by the Venerable Bede (d. 735) in his De arte metrica. It is found in a ms. c. 700, in the British Museum (Vesp. A. i. f. 153); in a ms. c. 890, in the Bodleian (Junius 25 f. 116 b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary, in the British Museum (Add. 30848 f. 131 b); in a ms. of the 8th cent. at St. Gall, No. 2; and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtees Society), 1851.

is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 9 b).

The original text has 16 stanzas and a doxology. This form is in Daniel, i., No. 80 (for metrical reasons but without any authority Daniel reads, O Rex aeternae); Wachernagel, i., No. 64; the Hymnarius Sarisb., 1851, p. 95; and in G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. In the older Roman Breviary (e.g. Venice, 1478), st. i.-vii. were given as a hymn for Matins on Low Sunday. At the revision of 1568 it was altered to Rex sempiternae Domine, and at the revision of 1632 to Rex sempiternae coelium. The text of 1632 (appointed for Sunday Matins, "Tempore Paschali," i.e. during Eastertide), is in recent eds. of the revised Roman Brev.; in Daniel, i., No. 80; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

This hymn has been tr. as follows:—

i. Rex aeternae Domine. Of the full text there is one tr., that by J. D. Chambers in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 90, "O king Eternal, Lord of grace," and in his Lauda Syon, 1857, altered to, "Eternal Monarch, Lord of all."

ii. Rex sempiternae coelium. This Roman Breviary text in G st. has been tr. thus:—

1. O Thou, the heaven's eternal King. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 96; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 54. In a full or in an abbreviated form it has passed into several hymnals.

2. O Christ, the heaven's eternal King. By the Compilers of H. A. & M., 1861, "based on former translations." It was repeated in Kennedy, 1863.

3. Eternal King of heaven, Whose word. By G. Moultrie, in his Hys. and Lyrics, 1867, p. 125; and thence into the People's H., 1867.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. Eternal King, whose equal Reign. Primer, 1706.
2. Thou, Whom their Maker heaven and earth. Bp. R. Mant, 1837.
3. Of heaven's high host, eternal Lord. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
4. Eternal King of all the spheres. J. Wallace, 1874.

iii. Qui pastor aeternus gregem. This, beginning with st. v. of the Roman Brev. text, is tr. by W. J. Blew, in his Church H. and Tune Bk., 1852-5, as "Shepherd of life, Who dost Thy flock." [J. J.]

Rex angelorum praepotens. [Passiontide.] This is found in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961 f. 239). Daniel, i., No. 224, gives st. i. only as a hymn "on the Invention or Exaltation of the Cross." Tr. as:—

O King of Angels! Lord of power. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 85, and altered to "O King, by angel-hosts obeyed," in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 147, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875, and in Chope's Hymnal, 1864, it is given, with alterations and the omission of st. ii., as, "O King of angels, Lord of grace." [J. M.]

Rex Christe, factor omnium. St. Gregory the Great. [Passiontide.] This is one of the eight hymns accepted in the Benedictine ed. of Gregory's Opera (Paris, 1705, vol. iii. col. 879), as his genuine productions. It is found in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961 f. 240); in a ms. of the 12th cent. in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc. 297 f. 309); in three mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall (Nos. 387, 313, 314), and others. In mediaeval times it was often used at the Tenebrae service on Good Friday, but does not seem to have been received into the more important Breviaries. It long survived in its original form in the Lutheran Church, and is e.g. in the Dresden G. B., 1748, p. 991, as one of "Certain Latin hymns as they are sung from time to time at week-day sermons in the Holy Cross Church, at the beginning of Divine service." The text is found in Daniel, i., No. 151; Büssler, No. 58; Königsfeld, i. p. 72, and others. Tr. as:—

O Christ! our King, Creator, Lord. By Ray Palmer, in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 336.

Other trs. are:—

1. O Christ our King, Who all hast made. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
2. O Christ our King, by Whom were framed. J. D. Chambers, 1852 and 1857.
3. Thou King anointed, at Whose word. Rev. James Inglis, N. York, 1868, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.
4. O Thou by Whom the worlds were made. D. T. Morgan, 1880. [J. M.]

Rex gloriose martyrum. [Common of Martyrs.] Probably of the 6th cent. Included in the Bern ms. 455 of the 10th cent.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 273); and in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 106; Jul. A. vi. f. 64 b; Harl. 2961 f. 248; Add. 30851 f. 152 b); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 38 b). Also in an 11th cent. ms. at St. Gall, No. 414; and in the Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 732; Daniel, i., No. 237, and iv. p. 139; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms., &c. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. O Thou, the Martyr's glorious King Of Confessors, &c. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 214; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 113. In a few collections only.

2. Glorious King of martyrs. By T. I. Ball, in the 1860 Appendix to the Hymnal N.

3. O glorious King of martyr hosts. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, under the signature of "B. T.": and, again, in the Hymner, 1882.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. O King of Martirs glorious. Primer, 1604.
2. O Thou the Martyrs glorious King, The Crowne, &c. Primer, 1615.
3. Bright King of Martyrs and the Crown. Primer, 1685.
4. O Christ, thy Martyrs' glorious King. Primer, 1706.
5. Glorious King of martyrs Thou. R. Campbell, 1850.
6. O glorious King of martyrs. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
7. All glorious King of martyrs Thou. J. D. Chambers 1854.
8. Jesus, the glorious martyrs' King. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Rex omnipotens die hodierna. Hermannus Contractus (?). [Ascension.] This is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775 f. 145), written c. 1000, as a Sequence "on the Ascension of the Lord," and in another ms., in the same Library, of circa 1070 (Douce, 222, f. 101); in a Winchester book of the 11th cent. now in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (No. 473); in a ms. of the 11th cent. (Harl. 2961 f. 254), and another of the 11th or 12th cent. (Reg. 8 C. xiii. f. 22), both in the British Museum, &c. Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris and a 14th cent. Sens in the British Museum; in a Sarum, c. 1370, a Hereford, c. 1370, and a York, c. 1390, all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrew's, and various French Missals, its use being uniformly for the Ascension. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 58; Daniel, v. p. 66, and Kehrein, No. 116 (see also p. 967, ii.). Tr. as:—

1. Lord of all power and might, Mankind redeemed, &c. By C. S. Calverley, in the 1871 ed. of the Hymnary, No. 305, and in his Literary Remains, 1885.

2. To the throne He left, victorious. By E. H. Plumtre, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 305, in the place of the above No. 1.

3. The almighty King, victorious, on this day. By C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868, and his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871.

Rhodes, Benjamin, b. at Mexborough, Yorkshire, in 1743, was brought under the influence of religion by the preaching of George Whitefield in 1766. He was the son of a schoolmaster, and received the elements of a good education in his youth. He was for many years a Wesleyan Minister, having been sent forth to preach by John Wesley. He d. at Margate Oct. 13, 1815. To Joseph Benson's Hys. for Children and Young Persons, 1806, and his Hymns for Children selected chiefly from the publications of the Rev. John and Charles Wesley, and Dr. Watts, &c., 1814 (an additional volume to the first, and sometimes bound up with it), he contributed several hymns. Very few of these are now in C. U. They include "Children, your parents' will obey" (Duty towards Parents), "Come, let us join our God to praise" (Praise), and "Thou shalt not steal thy neighbour's right" (Against Stealing.) His best known hymn is "My heart and voice I raise" (The Kingdom of Christ). It appeared as st. i. of his poem Messiah, 1787, pt. ii. being "Jerusalem divine." Each part is in use as a separate hymn.

[J. J.]

Rhys, Morgan, a famous Welsh hymn-writer of the last century. He published several collections of hymns under quaint titles. Gohwg o ben Nebo ar wlad yr Addeuid (A View of the land of promise from the top of Mt. Nebo). Fruyd Ysbyrdal (The Spiritual Warfare). Graddfanan y Credadyn, &c. (The Groanings of the Believer). He d. in 1776, and was buried at Llanfynydd Church, in Caermarthenshire.

[W. G. T.]

Richards, George, born near Newport, Rhode Island, circa 1755. For some years he was Purser and Chaplain in the United States Navy, and also taught a school in Boston. In 1789 he became an Universalist preacher, ministered at Portsmouth, New Haven, 1793-1809, and from 1809 in Philadelphia, where, his mind having given way under trouble, he d. by his own hand, March 16, 1816. With S. Lane he edited the Universalist Hymn Book, pub. at Boston, 1792. This was one of the earliest collections of that body. It contained 49 of Richards's hymns. In 1801 he pub. A Coll. of Hys., Dover, New Hampshire, which contained 6 additional hymns by himself, and in 1806, also at Dover, a second ed. of the same, greatly enlarged, with another 26 hymns.

Of these the following are in C. U. at the present time:—

1. O Christ, what gracious words. The Gospel

Message. This hymn appeared in the Boston Coll., 1792, and is the best of the early Universalist hymns. In the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, it is given as "Saviour, what gracious words." In this form and also in the original, it is found in several collections.

2. Long as the darkening cloud abode. Easter. This hymn in modern collections, as the Songs of the Sanctuary, 1865, No. 687, is composed thus: st. i. and ii., ll. 1-4, are from Richards, and the rest of the hymn, 3 st. of 8 l. in all, is anonymous.

Additional hymns by Richards, from both the Boston and the Dover collections, are in modern Universalist hymn-books. [F. M. B.]

Richardson, James, s. of the Hon. James Richardson, of Dedham, Massachusetts, was b. in that town May 25, 1817, and graduated at Harvard College, 1837. After being engaged, first as a clerk of the county courts, and then in teaching, he entered the Divinity School at Cambridge, where he graduated in theology in 1845. Subsequently he was Unitarian Pastor at Southington, Connecticut, and then of the Unitarian Society in Haverhill, Massachusetts. Ill-health compelled him to retire from his pastoral work to Dedham. During the war he joined himself to the hospitals at Washington, where he d. Nov. 10, 1863. Mr. Richardson was well known as an Essayist, Poet, and Preacher. Two of his hymns, from Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hys., 1848, are still in C. U.: "From Zion's holy hill there rose" (One in Christ), and "How glad the tone when summer's sun" (Summer). We are indebted to Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U. S. A., 1875, for these details.

Richter, Anne, née Rigby, was the third daughter of the Rev. Robert Rigby, Vicar of St. Mary's, Beverley, Yorkshire, from 1791 to 1823, and married the Rev. W. H. Richter, sometime Chaplain of the County Gaol at Kirton Lindsey, Lincolnshire, and then Rector of St. Paul's, Lincoln. Mrs. Richter d. at 23 Minster Yard, Lincoln, in 1857. She contributed to various magazines, and pub. The Nun and Other Poems, Hull, 1841. Her intimate literary acquaintances included Mrs. Hemans. Mrs. Richter was descended from the celebrated John Bradshaw, whose name is the first in the list of the signatures on the death warrant of Charles I. Her hymn, "We have not seen Thy footsteps tread," in its altered form as "We saw Thee not when Thou didst come," is widely used in G. Britain and America.

[J. J.]

Richter, Christian Friedrich, s. of Sigismund Richter, Rath and Chancellor to Count von Promnitz at Sorau, in Brandenburg, was born at Sorau, Oct. 5, 1676. At the University of Halle he was first a student of medicine and then of theology. In 1698, A. H. Francke appointed him Inspector of the Paedagogium, and then made him, in 1699, physician in general to all his Institutions. In company with his younger brother, Dr. Christian Sigismund Richter, he made many chemical experiments, for which he prepared himself by special prayer; and invented many compounds which came into extensive use under the name of the "Halle Medicines," the most famous being the Essentia dulcis, which was a preparation of gold. He d. at Halle, Oct. 5, 1711 (Koch, iv. 354, &c.).

Richter was one of the most important hymn-writers among the Pietists of the earlier Halle school; and his hymns possess the defects as well as the excellences of his school. They are emotional, and develop the idea of the spiritual union with Christ as the Bridegroom of the soul, with a minuteness that is hardly reverent (e.g. No. xi. below). They are also frequently not clearly thought out, and consequently somewhat obscure. Various of them are in unusual metres, and were wedded to tunes not very devotional in character. Apart from these defects there are various of his hymns worthy of note for their genuine, fervent piety, their childlike spirit of love to God, and the depth of Christian experience embodied in them. They appeared principally in the various Pietistic hymn-books of the period, especially in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704 and 1714, and were collected and appended (as his Geistliche Lieder) to an essay edited by his brother (named above) and pub. at Halle, in 1718, as Erbauliche Betrachtungen vom Ursprung und Adel der Seelen.

Two of Richter's hymns are noted separately—see p. 354, i. and p. 521, i. The others which have passed into English are:—

i. Gott den ich als Liebe kenne. For the Sick. Included in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 647, in 7 st. of 8 l., repeated, 1718, as above, p. 420, entitled, "Hymn in Sickness." According to Ehmman, in his ed. of Gottfried Arnold, 1856, p. xii. (see p. 81, ii.), it had previously appeared in Arnold's Heilsamer Rath und Unterricht für Kranke und Sterbende, 2nd ed., 1709. It is in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 603. Tr. as:—

God! whom I—love have known. A full and very good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 236. Repeated, abridged, in L. Rehfuess's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 53. A cento, in 5 st. of 4 l., taken from st. v., vi., iii., and beginning, "Let my soul beneath her load," is No. 398, in the Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S. A., 1864.

Another tr. is:—"O God, Whose attributes shine forth in turn." By Miss Cox, 1864, p. 191.

ii. Meine Armuth macht mich schreien. Supplication, or Longing for Christ. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 662, in 7 st. of 6 l. Repeated, 1718, as above, p. 381, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 769. Tr. as:—

Unto Him my spirit crieth. A good tr. of st. i., ii., vi., by A. T. Russell, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

iii. Stilles Lamm und Friedefürst. Sanctification. A hymn on the Following of Christ the Lamb of God, and founded on Rev. xiv. 4. In Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 432, in 8 st. of 5 l. Repeated in 1718, as above, p. 364, entitled, "On the name Agneta, which may be derived from Agnus, which in German is called a Lamb." In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 922. Tr. as:—

Thou Lamb of God, Thou Prince of Peace. A free tr., omitting st. iii., vii., by J. Wesley, in his Ps. & Hys., Charlestown, 1736-7, p. 51, and Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, i., p. 129). Included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 329 (1875, No. 338), and recently in the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863, Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., 1857 and 1864, Holy Song, 1869, the Amer. Meth. Epis. H. Bk., 1849, and others.

Another tr. is:—"Holy Lamb and Prince of Peace." By J. Gambold, as No. 38 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1886, No. 486).

Eight others of his hymns have been tr. into English, viz:—

iv. Die sanfte Bewegung, die liebliche Kraft. Whitsuntide. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 454, in 9 st.; and in 1718 as above, p. 393, entitled, "Of the Joy in the Holy Ghost." Tr. as:—"This Impulse so gentle, this Movement so sweet," as No. 551, in pt. i., of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

v. Es glänzet der Christen inwendigem Leben. The Life of Faith. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 615, in 8 st.; and in 1718, as above, p. 398, entitled, "On the hidden life of believers." Repeated in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 410. It is Richter's finest hymn, and was (says Koch, viii. 249) a great favourite with Dr. F. Schleiermacher. It is founded on Col. iii. 3, 4, and gives a picture of what the inner life of a Christian should be: described from Richter's own experience. The trs. are: (1) "The Christian's Life inward displays its bright splendour." As No. 620, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "All fair within those children of the light." By Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 26.

vi. Hüter! wird die Nacht der Sünden. Morning. A fine hymn, for use especially in Advent, and founded on Isaiah xxi. 11. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 599, in 9 st.; 1718, as above, p. 401, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 460. Tr. as: (1) "Watchman! is the Night retiring." By H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 45. (2) "O Watchman, will the night of sin." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 1. Repeated in Miss Warner's Hys. of the Ch. Militant, 1858, the Gilman-Schaff Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1881, &c.

vii. Jesu, gib mir deine Fülle. Supplication. A prayer to Christ as the Great Physician. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 66, in 7 st., st. vii. being entitled "Answer." In 1718, as above, p. 406, entitled, "On Patience." In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 289. Tr. as:—"Jesus grant Thou me Thy Fullness." In the Suppl. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 47.

viii. Jesus ist das schönste Licht. Love to Christ. On St. John xii. 36. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 349, in 9 st.; and in 1718, as above, p. 379, entitled, "On Desire towards God and Christ." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 808. Tr. as:—"Jesus is my light most fair," as No. 630, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1886, No. 450).

ix. Mein Salomo dein freundliches Regieren. Peace in Believing. A fine hymn, founded on St. John i. 14. In Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 612, in 11 st. In 1718, as above, p. 416; and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 424. Tr. as:—(1) "My Solomon! thy kind and gracious Sceptre," as No. 622, in pt. i., of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In 1789, altered to "Jesus, my King, Thy kind and gracious sceptre" (1886, No. 384). (2) "Jesus, my King! Thy mild and kind control." By Dr. Bomberger, in Schaff's Kirchenfreund, 1849, p. 337.

x. Liebe die den Himmel hat zerissen. Christmas. In Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 34, in 9 st.; and in 1718, as above, p. 414, entitled, "On the Incarnation of the Son of God." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 52. Tr. as:—"Oh! love that did the heavens rend asunder." By Miss Marington, 1864, p. 35.

xi. O wie selig sind die Seelen. Love to Christ. Founded on Hosea ii. 19, 20, and Eph. v. 25. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 512, in 10 st.; and in 1718, as above, p. 396, entitled, "On the high dignity of believers." In Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 412. It was (says Koch, viii. 297) originated by a dream Richter had about 1700, that in the hospital at Halle he would find a truly Christ-like soul. After searching all the wards he found an old neglected patient in a garret, with whom he conversed, and whom he found to be the person he was seeking. Inspired by her relations of her inner experience, he embodied her thoughts in this fine hymn. Tr. as:—"O what joy for them is stored." By Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 63. [J. M.]

Richter, Gregorius, s. of Gregorius Richter, then diaconus at Görlitz, was b. at Görlitz, March 4, 1598. He studied at the University of Leipzig, became in 1619 fourth master in the gymnasium at Görlitz, was ordained as diaconus there in 1624, and d. at Görlitz, Sept. 5, 1633 (K. G. Dietmann's Priesterschaft in den . . . Oberlausitz, 1777, p. 261; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1887, p. 71, &c.; the latter dating his death Sept. 4). Two hymns have been ascribed to him, one of which has passed into English, viz:—

Steh doch, Seele, steh doch stille. Confirmation. This is a hymn on self examination and renunciation of the world, and is founded on 1 John ii. 15-17. It appeared in D. Wülffer's zwölf Andachten, Nürnberg, 1648, p. 542, in 16 st., entitled "To the soul that longs after the world," and is signed Gregorius Richter. It has sometimes been ascribed to the father [b. at Görlitz, Feb. 1, 1560, pastor primarius there, 1606, and d. there Aug. 14, 1624. See also Dietmann, p. 174, and G. F. Otto's Lezicon . . . oberlausitzischer Schriftsteller iii. p. 60], but is more probably by the son. In many hymn-books, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 343, st. iv. is omitted. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Now from earth retire, my heart. A good tr. of st. i., ix.-xii. by A. T. Russell, as No. 180 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. [J. M.]

Rickards, Samuel, s. of Thomas Rickards, was b. in 1796, and educated at Oriol College, Oxford, B.A. 1817, M.A. 1820. He was the Newdigate Prizeman in 1815, and took second class Classical Honours in 1817. From 1819 to 1823 he was a Fellow of his College, and contemporary with Keble, Newman, and other men of note. He was Curate of Ulcombe in 1825, and became Rector of Stowlangtoft, Ely, in 1832, and d. Aug. 24, 1865. His published works included The Christian Householder, or Book of Family Prayers; A Parish Prayer-Book; Short Sermons, &c. His Hys. for Private Devotion for the Sundays and Saints' Days throughout the Year, were pub. in 1825 (Lond. Hatchards). Very few of these hymns have come into C. U. That for Christmas Day, "Though rude winds usher thee, sweet day," has supplied two centos, one beginning with st. i. and the second with st. ii., "Bright is the day when Christ was born." Another hymn, For Holiness, "O God, from Whom alone proceeds," is No. 1175 in Kennedy, 1863. [J. J.]

Ride on, ride on in majesty. H. H. Milman. [Palm Sunday.] Pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 58, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in Milman's Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1837, No. i., for Palm Sunday. The opening stanza, which reads:—

"Ride on! ride on in majesty!
Hark! all the tribes Hosanna cry!
Thine humble best pursues thy road,
With palms and scatter'd garments strew'd," has failed to be acceptable to most editors. Murray, in his Hymnal, 1852, endeavoured to soften down the third line by making it read:—

"O Saviour meek, pursue Thy road."

This was adopted by H. A. & M., and others. In 1855 Mercer tried another change:—

"With joyous throngs pursue Thy road," but this has received but little attention. Several hymnals follow the example of Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835, and omit st. i. These include the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871. Original text in Book of Praise, 1862-67. This hymn ranks with the best of the author's lyrics, and is the most popular hymn for Palm Sunday in the English language. [J. J.]

Ringwaldt, Bartholomäus (Ringwalt, Ringwald), was b. Nov. 28, 1532, at Frankfurt a. Oder. He was ordained in 1557, and was pastor of two parishes before he settled in 1566 as pastor of Langfeld (or Langenfeld), near Sonnenburg, Brandenburg. He was still there in 1597, but seems to have d. there in 1599, or at least not later than 1600. (Koch, ii. 182; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. ii. 1886, p. 512; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1885, p. 109, &c.)

Ringwaldt exercised a considerable influence on his contemporaries as a poet of the people, as well as by his hymns properly so called. He was a true German patriot, a staunch Lutheran, and a man who was quite ready to face the consequences of his plain speaking. His style is as a rule clear and good, though his rhymes are often enough halting; and he possessed considerable powers of observation and description. After 1577 he pub. various didactic poems, the most important being,

(1) Neuzeittung: So Hanns Fromman mit sich auss der Hellen und dem Hmel bracht, Amberg, 1582, and the later eds. enlarged and rewritten as Christliche Warnung des Trewen Eckarts, &c., Frankfurt a. Oder, 1588. In various forms and abridgments it passed through at least 34 editions up to 1700. This work is a mirror of the times and of the morals of the people. (2) Die Lauter Warheit, darinnen angezeigt, wie sich ein Weltlicher und Geistlicher Kriegerman in seinen Beruf vorhalten soll, &c., Erfurt, 1586. Of this again at least 18 eds. appeared up to 1700. In it he gives lively pictures of the life of the various ranks and orders of his time, and shows the temptations and failings of each, not by any means sparing his own class, i.e. the Lutheran clergy.

As a hymn-writer Ringwaldt was also of considerable importance. He was one of the most prolific hymn-writers of the 16th cent. Wackernagel, iv. pp. 906-1065, gives 208 pieces under his name, about 165 of which may be called hymns. A selection of 59 as his Geistliche Lieder, with a memoir by H. Wendebourg, was pub. at Halle in 1858. A number appeared in the various eds. of his Treuer Eckart and Lauter Warheit as above. The rest appeared principally in his

(1) Der 91. Psalm neben Siben andern schönen Liedern, &c., Frankfurt a. Oder, 1577. (2) Evangelia, Auff alle Sonntag und Fest, Durchs ganze Jahr, &c., Frankfurt a. Oder, n.d. The earliest ed. now known is undated, but Wackernagel, i., p. 523, gives it as of 1582. It is marked as a 2nd ed., and has a preface dated Nov. 28, 1581. It contains hymns founded on the Gospels for Sundays and Festivals, &c. (3) Handbüchlin: geistliche Lieder und Gebellein, Auff der Reiss, &c., Frankfurt a. Oder, 1586 (preface, Feb. 21, 1582). A good many of his hymns passed into German collections of the 16th and 17th cents., and a number are still in German C. U.

Those of Ringwaldt's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Es ist gewisslich an der Zeit. Second Advent.

The anonymous original of this hymn is one of Zwey schöne Lieder, printed separately circa 1565, and thence in Wackernagel, iv. p. 344. W. von Maltzahn, in his Bücherschatz, 1875, No. 616, p. 93, cites it as in an undated Nürnberg broadsheet, circa 1556. Wackernagel also gives along with the original the revised form in Ringwaldt's Handbüchlin, 1586. Both forms are also in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 746, in 7 st. of 7 l. It is based on the "Dies Irae," but can hardly be called a version of it. The original has a picturesqueness and force which are greatly lost in Ringwaldt's revision. It was much used in Germany during the Thirty Years' War, when in these distressful times men often thought the Last Day was at hand. The trs. are all, except No. 2, from Ringwaldt's text. They are:—

1. 'Tis sure that awful time will come. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Germanica, 1722, p. 95 (1732, p. 202). Repeated, altered and abridged, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 to 1886. It is also found in two centos.

(1) The waking trumpets all shall hear (st. ii.), in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825.

(2) When all with awe shall stand around (st. v.), from the Moravian H. Bk., 1801, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

2. Most surely at th' appointed time. By A. T. Russell, as No. 38 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, repeated in the College Hyl., N. Y., 1876. It is marked as tr. from the "Dies Irae," but is really a good tr. of st. i., ii., v. of the German of 1565.

3. Behold that awful day draws nigh. A tr. of st. i., ii. v., by W. Sugden, as No. 129 in the Methodist Scholars' H. Bk., 1870.

4. The day is surely drawing near. In full by P. A. Peter as No. 457 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

5. Surely at the appointed time. By H. L. Hastings, made in 1878, and included as No. 722 in his Songs of Pilgrimage, 1886. It condenses iii., iv. as iii.

6. The time draws near with quickening pace. By Miss Fry, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 56.

A hymn which has been frequently but erroneously called a tr. from Ringwaldt's text, is noted as "Great God, what do I see and hear" (p. 454, i.).

Hymns not in English C. U.

ii. Allein auf Gott setzt dein Vertrauen. The Christian Life. In many of the older German hymn-books this is ascribed to Ringwaldt, but it is not found in any of his works now extant. Wackernagel, v. p. 327, gives it as anonymous from the Greifswald G. B., 1597, where it is entitled "The golden A. B. C. wherein is very ingeniously comprised what a man needs to know in order to lead an honourable and godly life." It is in 24 st. of 4 l., each stanza beginning with successive letters of the alphabet. Also in Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 784. Bäumker, ii. p. 276, cites it as in the ms. collection of a nun called Catherine Tirs, written in 1583, in the nunnery of Niesing, Münster. There it is in Low German, and begins "Allene up godt hope und truwe." Bäumker thinks Ringwaldt may possibly be the person who made the High German version. Tr. as (1) "Alone in God put thou thy trust." By J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 29 (1732, p. 110).

iii. Der Herr ist mein getreuer Hirt, Hält mich in seiner Hute. Ps. xxiii. Wackernagel, iv. p. 944, prints it from Ringwaldt's Evangelia, n.d., 1582 as above, in 7 st. of 7 l. The first four lines of st. i. are taken from the older version, "Der Herr ist mein treuer Hirt." In the Minden Ravensberg G. B., 1854, No. 512. Tr. as (i.) "The Lord He is my Shepherd kind." By Miss Mannington, 1863, p. 20.

iv. Herr Jesu Christ, du höchstes Gut, Du Brunnen der Genaden. Lent. One of the finest of German penitential hymns. Wackernagel, iv. p. 1028, gives it, in 8 st. of 7 l., from Ringwaldt's Christliche Warnung, 1588, where it is entitled "A fine hymn [of supplication] for the forgiveness of sins." In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1574. The trs. are (1) "Lord Saviour Christ, my sovereign good." In the Suppl. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 39. Rewritten as (2) "Lord Jesus Christ, my sov'reign good," as No. 226 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the ed. of 1886, No. 278, it begins "Jesus, thou source of every good." (3) "O Christ, thou chiefest good, thou spring." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 76. (4) "Lord Jesus Christ, thou highest good." By F. W. Young, in the Family Treasury, 1877, p. 653.

Rinkart, Martin, s. of Georg Rinkart or Rinckart, cooper at Eilenburg on the Mulde, Saxony, was b. at Eilenburg, April 23, 1586.* After passing through the Latin school at Eilenburg, he became, in Nov., 1601, a foundation scholar and chorister of the St. Thomas's School at Leipzig. This scholarship also allowed him to proceed to the University of Leipzig, where he matriculated for the summer session of 1602, as a student of Theology; and after the completion of his course he remained for some time in Leipzig (he did not take his M.A. till 1616). In March 1610 he offered himself as a candidate for the post of diaconus at Eilenburg, and was presented by the Town Council, but the Superintendent refused to sanction this arrangement, nominally on the ground that Rinkart was a better musician than theologian, but really because he was unwilling to have a colleague who was a native of Eilenburg, and who appeared to have a will of his own. Rinkart, not wishing to contest the matter, applied for a vacant mastership in the gymnasium at Eisleben, and entered on his duties there in the beginning of June, 1610, as sixth master, and also cantor of the St. Nicholas Church. After holding this appointment for a few months, he became diaconus of St. Anne's Church, in the Neustadt of Eisleben, and began his work there May 28, 1611; and then became pastor at Erdeborn and Lyttichendorf (Lütjendorf), near Eisleben, entering on his duties there on Dec. 5, 1613. Finally he was invited by the Town Council of Eilenburg to become archidiaconus there, and in Nov. 1617 came into residence at Eilenburg. He d. at Eilenburg, Dec. 8, 1649. A memorial tablet to his memory, affixed to the house where he lived, was unveiled at Eilenburg on Easter Monday, April 26, 1886. (Martin Rinkart's Geistliche Lieder, ed., with a biographical introduction, and an extensive bibliography, by Heinrich Rembe and Johannes Linke, d.d., Gotha, F. A. Perthes, 1886; K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, pp. 169, 211, &c.)

The greater part of Rinkart's professional life was passed amid the horrors of the Thirty Years War. Eilenburg being walled town became a refuge for fugitives from all around, and being so overcrowded, not unnaturally suffered from pestilence and famine. During the great pestilence of 1637 the Superintendent went away for change of air, and could not be persuaded to return; and on Aug. 7 Rinkart had to officiate at the funerals of two of the town clergy and two who had had to leave their livings in the country. Rinkart thus for some time was the only clergyman in the place, and often read the service over some 40 to 50 persons a day, and in all over about 4,480. At last the refugees had to be buried in trenches without service, and during the whole epidemic some 8,000 persons died, including Rinkart's first wife, who d. May 8, 1637. The next year he had an epidemic of marriages to encounter, and himself fell a victim on June 24. Immediately thereafter came a most severe famine, during which Rinkart's resources were strained to the uttermost to help his people. Twice also he saved Eilenburg from the Swedes, once in the beginning of 1637, and again in 1639 (see p. 319, i.). Unfortunately the services he rendered to the place seemed to have made those in authority the more ungrateful, and in his latter years he was much harassed by them in financial and other matters, and by the time that the long-looked-for peace came (Oct. 24, 1648) he was a worn-out and prematurely aged man.

Rinkart was a voluminous writer and a good musician, but a considerable number of his books seem to have perished, and others survive only in single copies. He early began to write poetry, and was crowned as a poet apparently in 1614. Among other things he wrote a cycle of seven so-called "Comedies," or rather dramas, on the Reformation Period, suggested by the centenary of the Reformation in 1617. Three of these were printed respectively in 1613, 1618, and 1625, and two of them were acted in public. Rinkart's hymns appeared principally in the following works:—

(1) Jesu Hertz-Büchlein. This was completed in 1630, and first pub. at Leipzig in 1633. No copy is now known. The 2nd ed., pub. at Leipzig, 1663, is in the Royal Library at Hannover. (2) Der Meissnische Thronen Saal, Leipzig, 1637. In the Royal Library at Berlin. (3) zlv. Epithalami Salomones—Sulamitici cantica canonicorum . . . Leibliche Geistliche und Himmliche Braut Messe, Leipzig, 1642. In Wolfenbüttel Library. (4) Catechismus-wolthaten, und Catechismus-Lieder, Leipzig, 1645. In the Berlin Library.

* His own statement was that he "was born Anno 1586, Jubilate Sunday, on St. George's day, which was the 23rd of April, between 6 and 7 A.M." In 1586 however Jubilate S. (3rd S. after Easter) fell on April 24, while St. George's day is April 23. The entry in the Registers at Eilenburg says that he was baptised "Monday after Jubilate, the 25th of April," which is quite correct.

Dr. Linke, 1886, as above, gives a list of the first lines of all the hymns in the works of Rinkart which have come under his notice, and prints a selection from them, including 66 in all. The best of them are characterised by a true patriotism, a childlike devotion to God, and a firm confidence in God's mercy, and His promised help and grace. A few passed into the German hymn-books. Those which have been tr. into English are:—

i. Alleluja, Lob, Preis und Ehr. This hymn, noted at p. 482, seems to be based on two hymns, beginning with the same first line, and both found in Rinkart's Braut Messe, 1642. Dr. Linke does not print the full text. (See Blätter für Hymnologie, 1886, p. 91.)

ii. Nun danket alle Gott. Thanksgiving. The oldest text now accessible is in J. Crüger's Praxis, 1648, No. 183, in 3 st. of 8 l.; also in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 187. It is also in Rinkart's Jesu Hertz-Büchlein, 1663, where the text slightly varies, and is entitled "Grace" ("Tisch-Gebetlein," i.e. a short prayer at table). There does not seem any good reason for supposing that it did not appear in the 1st ed., 1636, of the Hertz-Büchlein, and in any case it has no connection with the Peace of Westphalia. (A good specimen of the way in which stories of hymns are manufactured is in the Sunday at Home, Aug., 1888, p. 539, where a full and particular account is given of its legendary origin in Nov. 1648.) It is founded on Ecclesiasticus i. 22-24; and st. i., ii. are indeed little more than a paraphrase of these verses, st. iii. being a version of the Gloria Patri. The fact that the regimental chaplains, when holding the special service of thanksgiving for the conclusion of the peace, were commanded to preach from this passage, may have suggested the theory that Rinkart's hymn was written for the same occasion. It gradually came into general use, successfully survived the period of Rationalism, and is now to be found in every German hymn-book, e.g. in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1022. It may be called the German Te Deum, and as such is used at all national festivals or special occasions of thanksgiving. It was recently used at the festal celebration of the completion of Cologne Cathedral, on Aug. 14, 1880, at the laying of the foundation stone of the new Reichstags building in Berlin, by the Emperor William, June 9, 1884, &c.

The fine melody (set to the hymn in H. A. & M. and most recent English collections) appears in the Praxis, 1648 (Crüger's Kirchenmelodien, 1649, No. 94), and in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, is marked with Crüger's initials. It has been described as adapted from a melody by Lucas Marenzo (choirmaster at Rome, who d. 1598), or as adapted from a motet by Rinkart; but to prove either statement, very little evidence is forthcoming.

The trs. of the hymn into English are:—

1. Let all men praise the Lord. This is a tr. of st. i., iii., by Alfred Novello, as part of his version of the word-book to Mendelssohn's Lobgesang, or Hymn of Praise, 1843, p. 89. This form has passed into a number of hymnals, including the N. Cong., 1859; Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and others. In the Baptist Hyl., 1879, a tr. of st. ii. is added, of which ll. 1-4 are from Miss Winkworth's tr.

2. Now praise the Lord on high. In full as No.

53 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848. This appears to be the version which Kübler, in his Hist. Notes to the Lyra Germanica, 1865, p. 247, says was made by Baron C. K. J. von Bunsen, for the opening of the German Hospital at Dalston, on Oct. 15, 1845.

3. Now let — all to God. In full, by A. T. Russell, as No. 201, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

4. O let us praise the Lord, From hearts by true love guided. This is No. 240 in the Winchester Ch. H. Bk., 1857, and seems to be intended as a paraphrase of the German.

5. Now thank we all our God. A full and very good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 145, repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 11, and her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 181. It has been included in many recent English and American hymnals, e.g. H. A. & M., 1861; People's Hyl., 1867; Cong. Hyl., 1887, &c., and in America in the Epis. Hyl., 1871; Presb. Hyl., 1874, and many others, generally in full and unaltered.

6. Now all give thanks to God. In full as No. 264 in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868 (1871, No. 307), marked as a versification by R. C. Singleton. Repeated in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

7. Now all men thank ye God. In full by T. E. Brown, as No. 37 in the Clifton College H. Bk., 1872.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Now let us praise the Lord." In full by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 85 (1732, p. 144), repeated, altered, in the Moravian H. Bks., 1764 to 1886. (2) "Now all, to God give thanks." By Dr. H. Mills, in the Evang. Review, Gettysburg, 1851, p. 293, and his Horae Ger., 1856, p. 14. (3) "Lift heart, and hands, and voice." By Miss Coz, 1864, p. 239. (4) "Now all give thanks to God." By J. D. Burns, 1869, p. 252. (5) "All hearts and tongues and hands." By N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 212.

iii. So far ich hin mit Freuden. For The Dying. In his Meissnische Thränen-Saat, 1637, No. 24, p. 19, in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled "Even the same, and her soul-rejoicing Farewell Hymn. On May 8." St. i. is,

"So far ich hin mit Freuden
Aus diesem Jammerthal,
Aus Angst, Gefahr und Leiden
In Himmels-Freuden Saal,
Da wir und alle Frommen
Durch Gottes Wundermacht
Zusammen wiederkommen:
In des zu guter Nacht."

The title refers to the preceding hymn, which is in 19 st., the initials of the sts. forming the acrostic Christina Rinckardin. Dr. Linke abridges it and misprints the title, which is:—

"Die Deutsche Jobs-Schwester (Christina M. Rinckart's Hertzgetreue Ehe- und Creutz-genossin) und ihr Tüchtliches und behägliches Trost Lied. Aus ihrem längst erwählten und am 10. [not 30] Tage des Trostkühnen Meyen dieses 1637. Jahres zum letzten Ehrengedächtniss abgehandelten Leich-Teat: des 77. Psalms."

From this it is clear that both hymns are in memory of his wife, that she died on May 8, 1637, and that her funeral sermon was preached by her husband on May 10, 1637. The form tr. into English is the greatly altered, or rather practically new text which is noted under Sturm, Leonhard (q.v.).

A version of the "Jesu dulcis memoria," made by Rinkart, is noted at p. 589, i. [J. M.]

Rippon, John, D.D., was b. at Tiverton, Devon, April 29, 1751, and was educated for the ministry at the Baptist College, Bristol. In 1773 he became Pastor of the Baptist church in Carter Lane, Tooley Street (afterwards removed to New Park Street, London, and over this church he continued to preside until his death, on Dec. 17, 1836. The degree of D.D. was conferred on him in 1792 by the Baptist College, Providence, Rhode Island. Dr. Rippon was one of the most popular and influential Dissenting ministers of his time. From 1790 to 1802 he issued the Baptist Annual Register, a periodical containing an account of the most important events in the history of the Baptist Denomination in Great Britain and America during that period, and very valuable now as a book of reference. But his most famous work is his Selection of hymns for public worship, which appeared in 1787. The full title of the 1st ed. is A selection of Hymns from the best authors, intended as an Appendix to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns. In 1791 he pub. a Selection of Psalm and Hymn Tunes from the Best Authors, adapted to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, and to his own Selection, and from that time the names of tunes were prefixed to the hymns in the successive editions of his hymn-book. In 1800 he pub. the 10th ed. of his Sel., containing more than sixty additional hymns. In 1827 it was still further enlarged, and in 1844, after his death, appeared The Comprehensive Edition, commonly known as The Comprehensive Rippon, containing most of the additional hymns, with about 400 then first added, making in all upwards of 1170, in 100 metres. A rival to the Comprehensive was also afterwards published under the old title, somewhat enlarged. In the preparation of the original book, and its subsequent improvement, Dr. Rippon performed an important service to Baptist Hymnody, and also, it is said, gained for himself "an estate" through its immense sale. In the preface to the 10th ed. he claims for himself the authorship of some of the hymns, but as he refrained from affixing his name to any of the hymns it is impossible now to say with certainty which ought to be ascribed to him. There can, however, be no reasonable doubt that hymn 535, 3rd part, "The day has dawned, Jehovah comes" (q.v.), is one of his compositions. Other hymns, probably by him, are, "Amid the splendours of Thy state" (Love of God), 1800; and "There is joy in heaven, and joy on earth" (Joy over the Repenting Sinner), 1787. He also altered the texts of and made additions to several of the older hymns. Some of these altered texts (see Index of Authors and Translators) are still in C. U. In 1830 the additions given in the 27th ed., 1827, of Rippon's Sel. were reprinted, with notes by Dr. Slater, as:—

Hymns Original and Selected; interspersed in the Twenty-seventh edition of the Selection, with Numerous Doxologies, in the Usual, the Peculiar, and in the less Common metres. By John Rippon, D.D.

A 2nd ed. of this pamphlet of 82 hymns and doxologies appeared in 1832. [W. R. S.]

Rise, heart; thy Lord is risen. Sing His praise Without delayes. G. Herbert. [Easter.] This is Herbert's quaint and beautiful hymn for Easter, pub. in The Temple, 1633, in 3 st. of 6 l. and 3 st. of 4 l. (see reprints The Temple). The hymn in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858:—

"Rise heart! thy Lord arose
With the first morning ray," by G. Rawson (see his Hymns, 1876, p. 190), was suggested by this lyric by G. Herbert. From Herbert's hymn st. iv.—vi. have also been used as a separate piece as, "I got me flowers to straw Thy way." This form is in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, &c. [J. J.]

Rise, my soul, adore thy Maker. J. Cennick. [Morning.] Pub. in his Sacred Hys. for the Children of God, 1741, No. 12, in 7 st. of 4 l., thus:—

"Rise, my soul, adore thy Maker,
Angels praise,
Join thy lays,
With them be partaker."

It was repeated in several of the older hymn-books, as Whitefield's, Madan's, Conyers's, Toplady's, and others. In modern collections it is not so widely used, although still given in several collections, including the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, &c. [J. J.]

Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings. R. Seagrave. [Heaven desired.] Appeared in his Hys. for Christian Worship, &c., 1742, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled "The Pilgrim's Song"; and again in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Seagrave's Hymns, 1860. In 1753 Seagrave's intimate friend, G. Whitefield, included it, with the omission of st. iii., as No. 2 of Pt. ii. of his Hys. for Social Worship. This was repeated in most of the older collections, and is the form of the hymn usually given in modern hymnals. The use of this hymn is extensive in G. Britain and America. Original text in Lyra Brit., 1867. [J. J.]

Rise, my soul, with ardour rise. C. Wesley. [Looking to, and Confidence in, God the Father.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739, p. 219, in 12 st. of 6 l., and headed "John xvi. 24. Ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 192.) It was also added to J. Wesley's Sermon, No. 40, on "Christian Perfection." Although not in C. U. in its original form, the following centos are in several collections:—

1. Since the Son hath made me free. This is composed of st. vi., viii., ix., xi., xii., and is given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as No. 379. It is in several collections.

2. Heavenly Father, Lord of all. This cento in the American Reformed Dutch Hys. of the Church, N. Y. 1869, is composed of st. ii., iv. and viii.

3. Abba, Father, hear Thy child. In a few American collections, including Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, where st. viii., ix., xii. are given as No. 919.

When these centos are taken into account, the use of the hymn in varying forms is not inconsiderable. [J. J.]

Rist, Johann, s. of Kaspar Rist, pastor at Ottensen, near Hamburg, was b. at Ottensen, March 8, 1607, and from his birth was dedicated to the ministry. After passing through the Johanneum at Hamburg and the Gymnasium Illustre at Bremen, he matriculated, in his 21st year, at the University of Rinteln, and there, under Josua Stegmann (q. v.), he received an impulse to hymn-writing. On leaving Rinteln he acted as tutor to the sons of a Hamburg merchant, accompanying them to the University of Rostock, where he himself studied Hebrew, Mathematics and also Medicine. During his residence at Rostock the terrors of the Thirty Years War almost emptied the University, and Rist himself also lay there for weeks ill of the pestilence. After his recovery he seems to have spent some time at Hamburg, and then, about Michaelmas, 1633, became tutor in the house of the lawyer (Landschreiber) Heinrich Sager, at Heide, in Holstein. There he betrothed himself to Elizabeth, sister of the Judge Franz Stapfel, whose influence seems to have had a good deal to do with Rist's appointment as pastor at Wedel. In the spring of 1635 he married and settled at Wedel (on the Elbe, a few miles below Hamburg), where, spite of various offers of preferment, he remained till his death, on Aug. 31, 1667. (Johann Rist und seine Zeit, by Dr. T. Hansen, Halle, 1872; K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 79; Koch, iii., 212; Bode, p. 135, &c. The statements of the various authorities regarding the period 1624-1635 vary greatly and irreconcilably.)

During the Thirty Years War Rist had much to endure from famine, plundering, and pestilence. Otherwise he led a patriarchal and happy life at Wedel, close to the congenial society of Hamburg, and years went on more and more esteemed and honoured by his contemporaries. The Emperor Ferdinand III. crowned him poet in 1644, and in 1653 raised him to the nobility, while nearer home Duke Christian of Mecklenburg appointed him Kirchenrath and Consistorialrath. Among other literary honours he was received in 1645 as a member of the Pegnitz Order (see p. 143, under Birken), and in 1647 as a member of the Fruitbearing Society, the great German literary union of the 17th cent.; while in 1660 he himself became the founder and head of the Elbe Swan Order, which however did not survive his death.

Rist was an earnest pastor and a true patriot. He of course took the side, and that with all his might, of the Protestants, but he longed as few did for the union of the scattered elements of the body politic in Germany. He was a voluminous and many-sided writer (see the full bibliographies in Hansen and Goedeke as above). His secular works are of great interest to the student of the history of the times, and his occasional poems on marriages, &c., to the genealogist and local historian. Perhaps the most interesting to the general reader are the Friede wünschende Teutschland, 1647, and the Friedejauchende Teutschland, 1653, two plays in which there are vivid pictures of the times, especially of the condition of the lower classes during the Thirty Years War. These plays, with selections from his other secular poems and from his hymns, are included in his Dichtungen, Leipzig, 1885, ed. by Goedeke and E. Goetze. Hansen gives analyses of the secular works, with a few extracts from them; and in his second part gives a full selection from the hymns, often however greatly abridged.

As a hymn-writer Rist takes high rank. He wrote some 680 hymns, intended to cover the whole ground of Theology, and to be used by all ranks and classes, and on all the occasions of life. Naturally enough they are not of equal merit, and many are poor and bombastic. Rist meant them rather for private use than for public worship, and during his lifetime they were never used in the church at Wedel. But they were eagerly caught up, set to melodies by the best musicians of the day, and speedily passed into congregational use all over Germany, while even the Roman Catholics read them with delight. Over 200 may be said to have been in C. U. in Germany, and a large number still hold their place. Unfortunately many are very long. But speaking of Rist's better productions, we may say that their noble and classical style, their objective Christian faith, their scripturalness, their power to console, to encourage, and to strengthen in trust upon God's Fatherly love, and their fervent love to the Saviour (especially seen in the best of his hymns for Advent, and for the Holy Communion), sufficiently justify the esteem in which they were, and are, held in Germany. The best known of Rist's hymns appeared in the following collections:—

(1) Himmlische Lieder. This contains 50 hymns. The Erste Zehen is dated Lüneburg, 1641, the 2-5 Zehen are dated 1642 [Royal Library, Berlin]. In the later eds. Rist made various alterations, and also expanded the titles of the hymns, these changes being almost all for the worse. (2) Neuer himmlischer Lieder sonderbahres Buch, Lüneburg, 1651 [Wernigerode Library]. 50 hymns. (3) Sabbatichische Seelenlust, Lüneburg, 1651 [Brit. Mus. and Göttingen]. With 58 hymns on the Gospels for Sundays, &c. (4) Frommer und gottseliger Christen alltägliche Haussmusik, Lüneburg, 1654 [Brit. Mus. and Göttingen]. With 70 hymns. (5) Neue musikalische Fest-Andachten, Lüneburg, 1655 [Wernigerode]. With 52 hymns on the Sunday Gospels. (6) Neue musikalische Katechismus Andachten, Lüneburg, 1656 [Brit. Mus. and Wernigerode]. With 50 hymns.

Seven of Rist's hymns are separately noted under their German first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). The others which have passed into English are:—

i. Du Lebensbrod, Herr Jesu Christ. Holy Communion. In his Hausmusik, 1654, No. 7, p. 32, in 8 st. of 8 l., entitled "A devotional hymn, which may be sung when the people are about to take their place at the Holy Communion of the Lord." Founded on Ps. xxiii. Included as No. 473 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

Lord Jesu Christ, the living bread. A good tr. of st. i., ii., iii., v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 159 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

ii. Ehr und Dank sei dir gesungen. On the Angels. In his Fest-Andachten, 1655, No. 46, p. 304, in 9 st. of 10 l., entitled "Another hymn of Praise and Thanksgiving on the same Gospel [S. Matt. xviii.] for St. Michael's Day. In which the great God who created the Angels, and appointed them for our service, is from the heart adored and praised." Included in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 219, and in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 233. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Praise and thanks to Thee be sung. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. iii.-vi., in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 205, repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 85.

2. Glory, praise, to Thee be sung. A tr. of st. i. as No. 1224, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

iii. Ermuntre dich, mein schwacher Geist. Christ-mas. Founded on Isaiah ix. 2-7. 1st pub. in the Erstes Zehen of his Himmlische Lieder, 1641, No. 1, p. 1, in 12 st. of 8 l., entitled "A hymn of praise on the joyful Birth and Incarnation of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 87, and recently, omitting st. viii., as No. 32 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Be cheerful, thou my spirit faint. A tr. of st. i. by J. Gambold, as No. 138 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754; repeated as st. i. of No. 437, altered to "Arise my spirit, leap with joy," and with his trs. of st. ii., iv., ix. added. In the ed. of 1789, No. 46 (1886, No. 41), it begins, "Arise, my spirit, bless the day."

2. Jesu! welcome, gracious Name! This is a tr. of st. ii., vi., xii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 55 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

Another tr. is "My languid spirit, upward spring." By N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 179.

iv. Gott sei gelobet, der allein. Joy in God. In his Neuer Himmlischer Lieder, 1651, p. 126, No. 9, in 13 st. of 7 l., entitled "A joyful hymn of Thanksgiving to God, that He permits us to enjoy our daily bread in health, peace and prosperity, with a humble prayer that He would graciously preserve us in the same." Included in Olearius's Singe-Kunst, 1671, No. 322, and recently in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 1696 (1865, No. 1766). The tr. in C. U. is:—

Now God be praised, and God alone. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. iii., vi., viii., ix., in her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 192. Repeated, abridged, in Statham's Coll., Edinburgh, 1869, No. 63 (1870, No. 110).

v. Jesu, der du meine Seele. Lent. In the Erstes Zehen of his Himmlische Lieder, 1641, p. 35, No. 7, in 12 st. of 8 l., entitled "A heartfelt hymn of penitence to his most beloved Lord Jesus, for the forgiveness of his many and manifold sins." Founded on prayer viii. in Class III. of J. Arndt's Paradiesgärtlein, 1612. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 382. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Thou hast cancell'd my transgression. A tr. of st. vi., viii., as No. 1022, in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 107).

2. Jesu! Who in sorrow dying. A free tr. of st. i., iii. ll. 1-4, v. ll. 5-8, xii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 78 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

vi. O Jesu, meine Wonne. Holy Communion. This beautiful hymn appears in Rist's Hausmusik, 1654, No. 9, p. 42, in 14 st. of 4 l., entitled "The heartfelt Thanksgiving of a pious Christian when he has partaken of the Holy Communion." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 285. The tr. in C. U. is:—

☉ Sun of my salvation. A good tr. of st. i., iii., v., vi., by A. T. Russell, as No. 160 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

Another tr. is:—"O Christ, my joy, my soul's delight." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 65.

vii. Werde licht, du Stadt der Heiden. Ephany. In his Fest-Andachten, 1655, p. 82, No. 13, in 15 st. of 6 l., entitled "Another festival hymn of the day of the Manifestation of Christ, in which the glorious, godlike, and eternal Light, which has graciously arisen on us poor heathen in thick darkness, is devotedly contemplated." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 82. Tr. as:—

1. All ye Gentile lands awake. A good tr. of st. i.-iv., vi., vii., xiv. xv., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 30. Repeated, abridged, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870, and in Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871.

2. Rise, O Salem, rise and shine. A good tr. of st. i., iii., vii., xiv., xv., based on her Lyra Ger. version but altered in metre, by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 38. Repeated in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, and the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

viii. Wie wohl hast du gelabet. Holy Communion. In his Neuer Himmlischer Lieder, 1651, p. 78, in 9 st. of 12 l., entitled "A hymn of heartfelt Praise and Thanksgiving after the reception of the Holy Communion." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 291. The tr. in C. U. is:—

☉ Living Bread from Heaven. A good tr., omitting st. iv., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 103; repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 94, omitting the trs. of iii., v., vi. Her trs. of st. i.-iii., ix. were included, slightly altered, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

The following have also been tr. into English:—

ix. Heut ist das rechte Jubelfest. Whitsuntide. In his Fest-Andachten, 1655, p. 216, No. 33, in 12 st., founded on the Gospel for Whitsunday (St. John xiv.). In Olearius's Singe-Kunst, 1671, No. 704, and Porst's G. B., ed. 1856, No. 173. The text tr. is that in Bunsen's Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 114, where it begins with st. v., "Heut hat der grosse Himmelsherr." Tr. as "This day sent forth His heralds bold." By Miss Cox, in the Churchman's Shilling Magazine, June 1867.

x. Ich will den Herren loben. Praise and Thanksgiving. Founded on Ps. xxxiv. In his Neuer Himmlischer Lieder, 1651, p. 132 (No. 10 in pt. ii.), in 12 st. of 8 l. This form is in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1201. In his Hausmusik, 1654, p. 348, No. 64. Rist rewrote it to 6 st. of 12 l., and of this form st. iv.-vi., beginning "Man lobt dich in der Stille" (1651, st. x.) are included in many hymn-books, as the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1018. The tr. from this last text is "To Thee all praise ascendeth." In the British Herald, May 1866, p. 266, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. [J. M.]

Ritter, Jakob, s. of Samuel Ritter, assessor of the Court of Appeal and Syndic of the Magdeburg administration at Halle, was b. at Halle, May 29, 1627. After the completion of his university course at Wittenberg, he was appointed secretary of the Magdeburg administration, and Justiceary at Langendorf, near Weissenfels. He d. at Halle, Aug. 14, 1669. (Koch, iii. 352; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1886, p. 2. In the latter his volume of 1666, see below, is spoken of as "not apparently hitherto inspected by any hymnologist." The present writer had however discovered and examined it at Wernigerode some six months earlier.)

Ritter's hymns appeared in his tr. of a work by Dr. Daniel Sennert (b. at Breslau, Nov. 25, 1572; d. at Wittenberg, July 25, 1637, as Professor of Medicine). The tr. by Ritter is entitled, Nützliche und heilsame Vorbereitung und Übung eines christlichen Lebens und seeligen Sterbens, and was pub. at Leipzig, 1666, with a dedication, dated Halle, 1666. The work contains 18 chapters, to each of which Ritter added a hymn. A number of these hymns are worthy of note, being distinguished by conciseness and by living faith. Two came into extended use in Germany, and one has been tr. into English, viz. —

Ihr, die ihr euch von Christo nennt. True Christianity. In 1666, as above, p. 150, at the end of chapter 10, which is entitled, "On the calling and office of a true Christian." The hymn is in 6 st. of 4 l., and is a masterly and concise delineation of true as opposed to nominal Christianity. Included in the Nürnberg G. B., 1676, the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 610, &c. Tr. as:—

O ye your Saviour's name who bear. A good and full tr. by Miss Cox, in her Sac. Hys. from the Germ. 1841, p. 121. Her st. i.-iii., vi., were included in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, his Year of Praise, 1867, and others. The same cento, altered, and beginning, "O ye who bear your Saviour's name," is in Kennedy, 1863.

Another tr. is: "O ye who bear your Saviour's name." By Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 53. [J. M.]

Roberts, Frederick Hall, was b. in London in March 1835; studied at University College, London, and at the University of Edinburgh, and commenced his ministry in 1859 in Liverpool, when he became the Pastor of the Richmond Baptist Chapel in that city, and in 1883 of the Hillhead Baptist Church, Glasgow, a position he still occupies. Mr. Roberts has written some hymns for children, three of which have appeared in Psalms and Hymns for School and Home, 1882. The first lines and respective dates are:—

1. In the name of Jesus. Doing all in the Name of Jesus. (1877.)

2. O bless the Lord, and praise. Remembrance of God's goodness. (1881.)

3. O Lord, our Strength and Refuge. The New Year. (1880.) [W. R. S.]

Robbins, Chandler, D.D., was b. in Lynn, Massachusetts, Feb. 14, 1810, and educated at Harvard College (1829), and the Cambridge Divinity School (1833). In 1833

he became Pastor of the Second [Unitarian] Church, Boston, succeeding Dr. H. Ware, jun., and Ralph Waldo Emerson. He received his D. D. degree from Harvard in 1855, and d. at Westport, Massachusetts, Sept. 12, 1882. Dr. Robbins pub. several prose works. He also edited The Social Hymn Book in 1843, and Hymns for Christian Worship, 1854. His two hymns, "Lo, the day of rest declineth" (Evening), and "While thus [now] Thy throne of grace we seek" (The Voice of God), appeared in Dr. G. E. Ellis's Ps. & Hys. for the Sanctuary, 1845. L. B. Barnes's tune, "Bedford Street," was written for the former.

[F. M. B.]

Robbins, Samuel Dowse, M. A., brother of Dr. Chandler Robbins, was b. in Lynn, Massachusetts, March 7, 1812, and was educated for the ministry at the Cambridge Divinity School. In 1833 he became Pastor of the Unitarian congregation in his native town, and subsequently held pastorates at Chelsea (1840), Farmingham (1859), and Wayland (1867), and retired from the last in 1873. Four of his hymns are given in the Boston Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Book, 1868:—

1. Down towards the twilight drifting. Sunset.
2. Saviour, when Thy bread we break. Holy Communion.
3. Thou art, O God! my East. In Thee I dawned. God, All in All.
4. Thou art my morning, God of Light. Daily Hymn.
5. Thou art our Master, Thou of God the Son. Christ the Master.

These, together with other hymns and poetical pieces, are in Putnam's Singers and Songs, &c., 1875, and the text of No. 3 is revised therein. We are indebted to Putnam for these details.

Robert the Second, King of France, surnamed "Le Page" and "Le Dévot," b. circa 970, was the s. of Hugh Capet, the first of the line of kings that succeeded the Carolingian monarchs on the French throne. After having been associated with his father in the government of the kingdom, in 988 he became king in his own right. The story of his life, rather than of his reign, is a sad one; troubles both in his family and without so multiplying upon him that it needed all the consolation that he sought and found in religion to enable him to bear up against them. Having in 995 or 996 espoused Bertha, the widow of Eades, Count of Chartres, and daughter of Conrad the Pacific, his cousin in the fourth degree (a marriage at that time strictly forbidden by the Roman Catholic Church), he was commanded by a decree of Pope Gregory V. to put her away. He was tenderly attached to her, and refused, whereupon he was excommunicated. This sentence caused the unhappy couple to be abandoned by all their courtiers, and even their servants, with the exception of two of the latter. After living together for a while in a state of sore privation, nay, almost absolute destitution, Bertha was delivered of a still-born infant, which was represented to Robert to have been a monster with "a head and neck like a goose." On hearing this (for the fond husband was but a weak and credulous man), Robert repudiated his wife, who thereupon retired into a nunnery. Subsequently, probably about 1002, he married Constance, a daughter of the Count of Arles, by whom he had four sons and two daughters. Much of the misery of his later life resulted from this marriage; for in addition to the antagonism which existed in their tastes and pursuits, Constance endeavoured to secure the kingdom for her youngest son Robert, to the exclusion of the third son Henry (Hugh, the eldest, having died, and Eudes, the second, being an idiot), and this led to constant domestic broils which embittered the gentle king's existence. In 1024 he refused (and wisely) the Imperial Crown of the House of Saxony, when the Italians offered it to him on the death of Henry II., the last of the Saxon Emperors. Robert spent much of his time in the society of monks, assisting in the services of the Church, and engaging on pious pilgrimages. It was upon his return from one of the latter to some of the principal sanctuaries of France that he was attacked by a fever, to which he succumbed at Thelun in 1031, in the 60th year of his age and the 34th of his reign—more deeply lamented by his people, to whom he had attached himself by the sweetness and simplicity of his character, than any other king, probably, who ever reigned in France. Robert had a great love for, and skill in, church music, and it is not improbable that compositions of his are even at this day in use in the services of his Church. [D. S. W.]

It has been the custom to speak of King Robert as a hymn-writer. But when the different authorities come to specify the pieces which he is said to have composed, their statements are hopelessly at variance. For the purposes of this article we shall take four ancient authorities:—

(a) and (b) in the Recueil des Historiens des Gaules et de la France, vol. x., Paris, 1760, pp. 297–300, there are extracts "ex chronico Sithiensi" (a); and also "ex chronico Alberici ad annum 997" (b).

(c) In the Junius MS., 121, in the Bodeian there is a list of authors of sequences, written about 1300. This list is given in the article Sequences (q. v.).

(d) William Durandus (d. 1296) in his Rationale, Bk. iv., has a section "De prosa seu sequentia." This occurs in two mss. of the 14th cent. in the British Museum [Add. 18304, f. 20 b; Reg. 7 E., ix. f. 53. An earlier and finer ms. than either (Add. 31032) has unfortunately lost the leaf containing this section].

By these four authorities the following hymns and sequences are ascribed to King Robert:—

1. Chorus novae Hierusalem.
2. Rex omnipotens die hodierna.
3. Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia.
4. Veni Sancte Spiritus.
5. Victimae Paschali.

But of these a only ascribes to him No. 3, and does not mention Nos. 1, 2, 4 or 5, while b ascribes to him Nos. 2 and 3, and does not mention Nos. 1, 4 or 5. On the other hand c ascribes to him No. 5, while No. 3 it ascribes to Hermannus Contractus, and Nos. 1, 2, 4 it does not mention at all. Lastly d ascribes to him Nos. 1 and 4, but ascribes Nos. 2 and 3 to Hermannus Contractus, and does not mention No. 5. Taking these in detail, we find No. 1 is only ascribed to King Robert by d, and seems more probably to be by Fulbert of Chartres (see p. 224, i.). No. 3. seems without doubt to be by Notker Balbulus (see note on "Sancti Spiritus adsit"). For No. 5 see note on "Victimae Paschali." No. 2 is noted at

p. 958, ii., and, according to the common opinion, is there ascribed to Hermannus Contractus; but this ascription is very doubtful, seeing that he d. in 1054, and was only b. in 1013, while the Bodelean ms. 775 was written in England about 1000, so that the ascription of b deserves attention. As to No. 4 the subject of authorship is treated more fully under "Veni Sancte Spiritus," but here it may be said that Durandus and those who followed him are alone in ascribing it to King Robert, for the French tradition was clearly against this, e.g. neither a nor b ascribe it to him, and Clichtovaeus in his Elucidatorium, Paris, 1516, and the Augustinian Missal, printed at Paris, 1529 (see Sequences, Part ii.), which may be taken to represent the later French tradition, while agreeing in ascribing No. 3 to King Robert, agree also in treating No. 4 as of unknown authorship. To sum up then it seems to us that No. 2 is possibly by King Robert; that Nos. 3 and 4 are clearly not by him; and that his claim to Nos. 1 and 5 is exceedingly doubtful.

The French chronicles a and b as above also ascribe to King Robert other liturgical pieces, viz.:—(1) "O Constantia martyrum," (2) "Judaea (O Juda) et Hierusalem," (3) "Eripe me," (4) "Cunctipotens genitor" (5) "Cornelius centurio," (6) "Pro fidei meritis," (7) "Concede nobis quaesumus." These appear to be Responsories and Antiphons, but whether rightly or wrongly ascribed to Robert the present writer cannot say. No. 7 is also ascribed to him by c as above. [J. M.]

Roberthin, Robert, s. of Gerhard Roberthin or Robertin, pastor at Saalfeld, in East Prussia, was b. at Saalfeld, March 3, 1600. He entered the University of Königsberg in 1617, went to Leipzig in 1619, and then to Strassburg in 1620, where he became acquainted with Martin Opitz. After 1621 he travelled, employed himself as a private tutor, &c. In 1637 he was appointed secretary to the Prussian Court of Appeal at Königsberg, and in 1645 also Chief Secretary and Rath to the Prussian Administration at Königsberg. After a stroke of paralysis on April 6, he d. on April 7, 1648 (K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 128; Valentin Thilo's Orationes Academicæ, Königsberg, 1653, p. 349, &c.).

Roberthin was an influential, cultured, and lovable man. He had a great liking for poetry, was a liberal patron of talented youths (e.g. Simon Dach, see p. 277, i.), and was one of the founders of the Königsberg Poetical Union (see p. 35, i.). His hymns and poems appeared principally in H. Alberti's Arien. The only one tr. into English is noted at p. 202, ii. [J. M.]

Roberts, Martha Susan, née Blake-ney, daughter of the Rev. J. E. Blakeney, D.D., Archdeacon of Sheffield, was b. at Sheffield, Dec. 25, 1862; and married to Samuel Roberts, J.P., Queen's Tower, Sheffield, Dec. 21, 1880. Mrs. Roberts's hymn-writing has been confined to local events. Her hymn on the Laying of the Foundation Stone of a Church, "Be present, Holy Father, To bless our work to-day," was written, in the first instance, for use at the laying of the foundation-stone of the North Transept of the Parish Church of Sheffield, July 12, 1880. It was subsequently revised by Mrs. Roberts, and is in frequent use in Sheffield and the neighbourhood.

Another hymn, written for the laying of the foundation stone of St. Ann's, Sheffield, June 12, 1882, begins, "O Saviour Christ, Who art Thyself." Her hymn for the Queen's Jubilee service at the Parish Church of Sheffield was "Rise, O British Nation, Hasten now to pay." Mrs. Roberts's ballad writing is very sweet and tender. [J. S.]

Robertson, William, was the s. of David Robertson of Brunton in Fife. After finishing his University course he was licensed to preach in 1711. He is said to have been assistant to the minister of the Presbyterian Church of London Wall, London, before his settlement, in 1714, as parish minister of Borthwick, Midlothian. In 1733 he was appointed minister of Lady Yesters, Edinburgh, and in 1736 of Old Greyfriars, and died at Edinburgh, Nov. 16, 1745. He was in 1742 appointed a member of the Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, which compiled the Translations and Paraphrases of 1745, and is said to have contributed 3 paraphrases which, in the 1781 collection, are numbered 25, "How few receive with cordial faith" (p. 536, ii.), 42, "Let not your hearts with anxious thoughts" (p. 672, i.), and 43 "You now must hear my voice no more." See Scottish Translations and Paraphrases. [J. M.]

Robertson, William, M.A., eldest s. of the Rev. John Robertson, D.D., of Cambuslang, Lanarkshire, was b. at Cambuslang, July 15, 1820. He studied and graduated M.A. at the University of Glasgow. In 1843 he became parish minister of Monzievaird, Perthshire, where he died June 9, 1864. He was appointed a member of the Hymnal Committee of the Established Church in 1852, 1853, and 1857, and contributed 2 hymns to their Hys. for Public Worship, 1861, since included in their Scottish Hymnal, 1869, which have attained considerable popularity, viz., "A little child the Saviour came" (Christmas), and a version of the Te Deum, which begins, "Thee God we praise, Thee Lord confess." [J. M.]

Robertson, William Bruce, D.D., youngest s. of John Robertson, Greenhill, near Stirling, was b. at Greenhill, May 24, 1820. After studying at the University of Glasgow (which conferred upon him the degree of D.D. in 1869), he became, in 1843, minister of Trinity U. P. Church, Irvine, Ayrshire, retiring from the active duties of his charge in 1879. He d. at Bridge of Allan, June 27, 1886. In 1870 he was appointed a member of the Hymnal Committee of the U. P. Church, and contributed a translation of the Dies Irae (see p. 299, i. 12), as No. 356, to their Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876. It had previously appeared as No. 87 in his Hosanna: or chaunts and hymns for Children and Teachers, Glasgow, M. Ogle & Son, N. D. (Preface dated Irvine, August, 1854. Contains 102 for children and 9 for teachers.) He also contributed poems to the Juvenile Missionary Magazine of the U. P. Church [such as "The Departed nigh" (Nov. 1861), "The Child's Angel" (May 1856), "Our Lord's Three Weepings" (June 1857)], and other periodicals. But he was best known as one of the most eloquent Scottish preachers of his time. A considerable number of his hymns and poems are embodied in the interesting Life of William B. Robertson, D.D., Irvine, by James Brown, D.D., Glasgow, 1888. [J. M.]

Robinson, Charles Seymour, D.D., was b. at Bennington, Vermont, March 31, 1829, and educated at William College, 1849, and in theology, at Union Seminary, New York (1852-53), and Princeton (1853-55). He became Presbyterian Pastor at Troy, 1855; at Brooklyn, 1860; of the American chapel in Paris (France), 1868; and of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, New York, 1870. During 1876-77 he was editor of the Illustrated Christian Weekly. As an editor of hymn-books he has been most successful. His Songs of the Church were pub. in 1862; Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865; Spiritual Songs, 1878; and Laudes Domini, A Selection of Spiritual Songs, Ancient and Modern, 1884. His Songs for the Sanctuary has probably had a wider sale than any other unofficial American collection of any denomination, and the Laudes Domini is a book of great excellence. Dr. Robinson has composed a few hymns, including, "Saviour, I follow on" (Following Christ), in his Songs of the Church, 1862, and "Isles of the South, your redemption is nearing" (Missions), in his Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865. The latter is given in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, as "Lands long benighted." [F. M. B.]

Robinson, George Wade, b. at Cork in 1838, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and New College, St. John's Wood, London. He entered the Congregational Ministry, and was co-pastor at York Street Chapel, Dublin, with Dr. Urwick; then pastor at St. John's Wood, at Dudley, and at Union Street, Brighton. He d. at Southampton, Jan. 28, 1877. He pub. two vols. of poems, (1) Songs in God's World; (2) Loveland. His hymn, "Strangers and pilgrims here below" (Jesus Only), from his Songs in God's World, is in Herder's Cong. Hys., 1884, in an abridged form; and "Weary with my load of sin" (Contrition), is in the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. [W. G. H.]

Robinson, Richard Hayes, was b. in 1842, and educated at King's College, London. Taking Holy Orders in 1866, he became curate of St. Paul's, Penge. He subsequently held various charges, including the Octagon Chapel, Bath. He became Incumbent of St. Germans, Blackheath, in 1884. His prose works include Sermons on Faith and Duty, 2nd ed., 1873, and The Creed and the Age, 1884. His hymn "Holy Father, cheer our way" (Evening), was contributed to the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It was written in 1869 for the congregation of St. Paul's, Upper Norwood, and was designed to be sung after the 3rd Collect at Evening Prayer. It has passed into several collections (sometimes in an altered form), including H. A. & M., 1875, and Thring's Coll., 1882. See the latter for the authorized text. He d. Nov. 5, 1892. [J. J.]

Robinson, Robert, the author of "Come, Thou fount of every blessing," and "Mighty God, while angels bless Thee," was b. at Swaffham, in Norfolk, on Sept. 27, 1735

(usually misgiven, spite of his own authority, as Jan. 8), of lowly parentage. Whilst in his eighth year the family migrated to Scarning, in the same county. He lost his father a few years after this removal. His widowed mother was left in sore straits. The universal testimony is that she was a godly woman, and far above her circumstances. Her ambition was to see her son a clergyman of the Church of England, but poverty forbade, and the boy (in his 15th year) was indentured in 1749 to a barber and hairdresser in London. It was an uncongenial position for a bookish and thoughtful lad. His master found him more given to reading than to his profession. Still he appears to have nearly completed his apprenticeship when he was released from his indentures. In 1752 came an epoch-marking event. Out on a frolic one Sunday with like-minded companions, he joined with them in sportively rendering a fortune-telling old woman drunk and incapable, that they might hear and laugh at her predictions concerning them. The poor creature told Robinson that he would live to see his children and grand-children. This set him a-thinking, and he resolved more than ever to "give himself to reading." Coincidentally he went to hear George Whitefield. The text was St. Matthew iii. 7, and the great evangelist's searching sermon on "the wrath to come" haunted him blessedly. He wrote to the preacher six years later penitently and pathetically. For well nigh three years he walked in darkness and fear, but in his 20th year found "peace by believing." Hidden away on a blank leaf of one of his books is the following record of his spiritual experience, the Latin doubtless having been used to hold it modestly private:—

"Robertus, Michaelis Mariæque Robinson filius. Natus Swaffhami, comitatu Norfolkici, Saturni die Sept. 27, 1735. Renatus Sabbati die, Maii 24, 1752, per predicationem potentem Georgii Whitefield. Et gustatis doloribus renovationis duos annosque septem absolutiorem plenam gratuitamque, per sanguinem pretiosum Jesu Christi, inveni (Tuesday, December 10, 1755) cui sit honor et gloria in secula seculorum. Amen."

Robinson remained in London until 1758, attending assiduously on the ministry of Gill, Wesley, and other evangelical preachers. Early in this year he was invited as a Calvinistic Methodist to the oversight of a chapel at Mildenhall, Norfolk. Thence he removed within the year to Norwich, where he was settled over an Independent congregation. In 1759, having been invited by a Baptist Church at Cambridge (afterwards made historically famous by Robert Hall, John Foster, and others) he accepted the call, and preached his first sermon there on Jan. 8, 1759, having been previously baptized by immersion. The "call" was simply "to supply the pulpit," but he soon won such regard and popularity that the congregation again and again requested him to accept the full pastoral charge. This he acceded to in 1761, after persuading the people to "open communion." In 1770 he commenced his abundant authorship by publishing a translation from Saurin's sermons, afterwards completed. In 1774 appeared his masculine and unanswerable Arcana, or the Principles of the Late Petitioners to Parliament for Relief in the matter of Subscription. In 1776 was published A Plea for the Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ in a Pastoral Letter to a Congregation of Protestant Dissenters at Cambridge. Dignitaries and divines of the Church of England united with Nonconformists in lauding this exceptionally able, scholarly, and pungently written book. In 1777 followed his History and Mystery of Good Friday. The former work brought him urgent invitations to enter the ministry of the Church of England, but he never faltered in his Nonconformity. In 1781 he was asked by the Baptists of London to prepare a history of their branch of the Christian Church. This resulted, in 1790, in his History of Baptism and Baptists, and in 1792, in his Eccelesiastical Researches. Other theological works are included in the several collective editions of his writings. He was prematurely worn out. He retired in 1790 to Birmingham, where he was somehow brought into contact with Dr. Priestley, and Unitarians have made much of this, on exceedingly slender grounds. He d. June 9, 1790. His Life has been fully written by Dyer and by William Robinson respectively, both with a bias against orthodoxy. His three changes of ecclesiastical relationship show that he was somewhat unstable and impulsive. His hymns are terse yet melodious, evangelical but not sentimental, and on the whole well wrought. His prose has all, more or less of the σφοδρον και ενθουσιαστικον, that vehement and enthusiastic glow of passion that belongs to the orator. (Cf. Dyer and Robinson as above, and Gadsby's Memoirs of Hymn-Writers (3rd ed., 1861); Belcher's Historical Sketches of Hymns; Miller's Singers and Songs of the Church; Flower's Robinson's Miscel. Works; Annual Review, 1805, p. 464; Eclectic Review, Sept. 1861. [A. B. G.]

Robinson, Robert, was b. in London in 1814, and educated for the Congregational ministry at Highbury College, London. He was pastor successively at Chatteris, Luton, and York Road Chapel, Lambeth, London. From 1865 to 1884 he was Home Secretary of the London Missionary Society. He d. at New Cross, Jan. 10, 1887. His hymns were mainly composed for Sunday School Anniversaries at Luton and York Road Chapel. They include the following, which have passed into C. U. :—

1. Beauteous scenes — earth appear. Written for the Sunday S. Anniversary at Luton, in 1850.
2. Hear, Gracious God, and from Thy Throne. Written for the S. S. A. at Luton, 1851.
3. I love Thy house, my Lord, my King. Written for the S. S. A., Luton, 1853.
4. I've been in chase of pleasure. Written for the S. S. A. at York Road Chapel, 1861.
5. Now while my heart rejoices. Written in 1869. Major's Bk. of Praise, 1871.
6. Once more with joyous greeting. Written in 1869. In Major's Bk. of Praise, 1871.
7. The cheering chime of Sabbath bells. Written for the S. S. A. at Luton, 1849.
8. Thus in holy convocation. Written in 1869. In Major's Bk. of Praise, 1871.
9. While we on earth are raising. Written in 1869. In Major's Bk. of Praise, 1871.
10. Years are rolling, life is wasting. Written for the S. S. A. at Luton, 1849.

All these hymns are for children, and are specially adapted to anniversary services. Most of them are in Major's Bk. of Praise for Home and School, 1871; and the Silver Street Sunday Scholar's Companion, 1880. [W. G. H.]

Rock of ages, cleft for me. A. M. Toplady. [Passiontide.] In the October number of the Gospel Magazine, 1775, in an article on "Life a Journey," and signed Minimus (one of Toplady's signatures), the following occurs at p. 474 :—

"Yet, if you fall, be humbled; but do not despair. Pray afresh to God, who is able to raise you up, and to set you on your feet again. Look to the blood of the covenant and say to the Lord, from the depth of your heart,

*Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
let me hide myself in thee!
Foul, I to the fountain fly:
wash me, Saviour, or I die.*

Make those words of the apostle, your motto: "Perplexed, but not in despair; cast down, but not destroyed."

2. In the Gospel Magazine for March, 1776 (of which Toplady was then the editor), there appeared a peculiar article entitled, A remarkable Calculation: Introduced here, for the sake of the spiritual Improvement subjoined. Questions and Answers, relative to the National Debt. The object and end of this "Calculation" will be gathered from the closing questions and answers :—

Q. 8. How doth the government raise this interest yearly?

A. By taxing those who lent the principal, and others.

Q. 9. When will the government be able to pay the principal?

A. When there is more money in England's treasury alone, than there is at present in all Europe.

Q. 10. And when will that be?

A. Never.

This article is signed "J. F." Immediately underneath, the subject is continued as a Spiritual Improvement of the foregoing: By another Hand. The aim of this "Improvement" is to ascertain how many sins "each of the human race" is guilty of "supposing a person was to break the law (1) but once in 24 hours"; (2) twice in the same time; (3) once in every hour; (4) once in every minute; (5) once in every second. As this last is the climax, we will give the question and the answer,

Q. May we not proceed abundantly further yet? Sixty seconds go to a minute. Now, as we never, in the present life, rise to the mark of legal sanctity, is it not fairly inferrible, that our Sins multiply with every second of our sublunary durations?

A. 'Tis too true. And in this view of the matter, our dreadful account stands as follows.—At ten years old, each of us is chargeable with 315 millions, and 36 thousand sins.—At twenty, with 630 millions, and 720 thousand.—At thirty, with 946 millions, and 80 thousand.—At forty, with 1261 millions, 440 thousand.—At fifty, with 1576 millions, and 800 thousand.—At sixty, with 1892 millions, and 160 thousand.—At seventy, with 2207 millions, and 520 thousand.—At eighty with 2522 millions, 880 thousand.

Q. When shall we be able to pay off this immense debt?

A. Never. . . .

Q. Will not divine goodness compound for the debt, by accepting less than we owe?

A. Impossible. . . .

Notwithstanding this frightful helplessness, there is hope, as the answer, a little further on, makes clear :—

A. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the Law; being made a curse for us." Gal. iii. 13.—This, This, will not only counter-balance, but infinitely over-balance, ALL the sins of the whole believing world.

Questions and Answers follow, all of which are framed to support Toplady's Calvinistic creed. The last answer is :—

A. "We can only admire and bless the FATHER, for electing us in Christ, and for laying on Him the iniquities of us all:—the Sox, for taking our nature and our debts upon Himself, and for that complete righteousness and sacrifice, whereby he redeemed his mystical Israel from all their sins;—and the co-æqual Spirit, for causing us (in conversion) to feel our need of Christ, for inspiring us with faith to embrace him, for visiting us with his sweet consolations by shedding abroad his love in our hearts, for sealing us to the day of Christ, and for making us to walk in the path of his commandments.
"A living and dying PRAYER for the HOLIEST BELIEVER in the World.

1. "Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
 Let me hide myself in Thee!
 Let the Water and the Blood,
 From thy riv'n Side which flow'd,
 Be of Sin the double Cure,
 Cleanse me from its Guilt and Pow'r.

2. "Not the labors of my hands
 Can fulfill thy Law's demands;
 Could my zeal no respite know,
 Could my tears forever flow,
 All for Sin could not atone:
 Thou must save, and Thou alone!

3. "Nothing in my hand I bring;
 Simply to Thy Cross I cling;
 Naked, come to Thee for Dress;
 Helpless, look to Thee for grace;
 Foul, I to the fountain fly:
 Wash me, Saviour, or I die!

4. "Whilst I draw this fleeting breath—
 When my eye-strings break in death—
 When I soar through tracts unknown—
 See Thee on thy Judgment-Throne—
 Rock of ages, cleft for me,
 Let me hide myself in THEE!—A. T."

3. In his Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 337, this text was repeated as "A Prayer, living and dying," with the changes given in italics in st. iv.

"While I draw this fleeting breath,
 When my eye-strings break in death,
 When I soar to worlds unknown,
 See Thee on Thy judgment throne:
 Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
 Let me hide myself in Thee."

In tracing out the subsequent history of this hymn we shall deal with its Text, its Use, its Translations, and its Merits and Usefulness.

4. The Text. In the above quotations we have Toplady's original, and his revised text. Of these we must take the latter as that which he regarded as authorised, and indicate subsequent changes by that standard alone. These changes include:—

(1.) The change of st. iii. 1. 2 from "Simply to Thy Cross, &c." to "Simple to Thy Cross, &c.," first appeared in Walter Row's ed. of Toplady's Ps. and Hys., 1787.

(2.) "Rock of ages shelter me." This was given in Rippon's Bap. Selection, 1787, and others.

(3.) In the 1810 ed. of Rowland Hill's Coll. of Ps. and Hys., No. 111, st. i.—iii. are given as "Smitten on th' accursed tree."

(4.) The most important rearrangement of the text, and that which has gained as great if not a greater hold upon the public mind than the original, is that made by T. Cotterill, and included in his Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1815. This reads (the italics indicate the alterations made by Cotterill):—

1. "Rock of ages! cleft for me:
 Let me hide myself in Thee:
 Let the water and the blood,
 From Thy wounded side which flow'd,
 Be of sin the double cure;
Save from wrath, and make me pure.

2. "Should my tears for ever flow,
 Should my zeal no languor know,
 This for sin could not atone;
 Thou must save, and Thou alone;
 In my hand no price I bring,
 Simply to Thy cross I cling.

3. "While I draw this fleeting breath,
 When mine eyelids close in death,
 When I rise to worlds unknown,
 And behold Thee on Thy throne,
 Rock of ages! cleft for me!
 Let me hide myself in Thee."

(5.) In the 8th ed. of his Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1819, Cotterill repeated this text with the change in st. i. l. 4, from "From Thy wounded side which flow'd," to "From Thy side, a healing flood." This text was repeated in J. Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, and is found in a large number of hymn-books both old and new.

(6.) The next important change was that made in the 1830 Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk. This text is:—

St. i. Cotterill's of 1815, as above.
 St. ii. Cotterill's, 1815, with l. 1, "Could my tears," &c. (Toplady); l. 2, "Could my zeal," &c. (Toplady); l. 3, "These for sin," &c.
 St. iii. Cotterill's, 1815, with l. 2, "When my eyes shall close in death."

This is the recognised Methodist version of the hymn in most English-speaking countries.

(7.) In 1836 another version was given by W. J. Hall in the Mitre H. Bk., No. 99, as follows:—

St. i. Cotterill, of 1815.
 St. ii. "Merit I have none to bring,
 Only to Thy cross I cling:
 Should my tears for ever flow,
 Should my zeal no languor know,
 All for sin could not atone;
 Thou must save, and Thou alone."
 St. iii. Cotterill, 1815, with l. 4, "See Thee on Thy judgment throne" (Toplady).

This text is repeated in The New Mitre Hymnal, 1875.

(8.) The crucial line of the original, "When my eye-strings break in death," has been altered as:—

1. "When mine eyelids close in death." Cotterill, 1815, as above.
 2. "When my eyes shall close in death." Wes. H. Bk., 1830, as above.
 3. "When my heart-strings break in death." Williams's and Boden's Coll., 1801.
 4. "When my eyelids sink in death." J. Kempthorne's Ps. & Hys., 1810.

(9.) Other changes in the text of the hymn might be indicated; but being of minor importance nothing will be gained by their enumeration.

5. Its Use. From 1776 to 1810 this hymn is found in a very limited number of hymn-books. After that date the interest therein grew rapidly until at the present time it is omitted from no hymn-book of merit in the English language. Until Sir R. Palmer's (Lord Selborne) vigorous protest at the Church Congress at York in 1866, most of the altered texts as given above were in common use. Since then in most new hymn-books Toplady's authorised text from his Ps. & Hys., 1776, has been adopted.

6. Translations. In translating this hymn into other languages (and these translations are very numerous and in many languages), the text used has varied with the materials in the hands of the translator, some taking the text direct from Toplady, some from Cotterill, and others from the Wes. H. Bk., or other sources. The following are the first lines of some versions in Latin:—

(1.) "Jesus, pro me perforatus." By W. E. Gladstone, made in 1848, and pub. in Translations by Lord Lyttelton, and the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. Lond. 1861. This is from Toplady's text.

(2.) "Mihī fissa, Rupes diva." By C. I. Black, in Biggs's Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. This is from the H. A. & M. 1861 text.

(3.) "O rupes aeterna, mihī percussa, recondar." By R. Bingham from Toplady's full text, slightly altered, in his Hymno. Christi Latina, 1871.

(4.) "Rupes aevum fissa quondam." By H. M. Macgill, from Toplady's full text, in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

(5.) "Seculorum, pro me fissa." By G. S. Hodges, from the H. A. & M. text, in his The County Palatine, 1876.

(6.) "Rupes Seculorum, te." By Silas T. Rand, in Burrage's Baptist Hymn Writers, 1889.

7. Merits and Usefulness. The merits of this hymn are of a very high order whether regarded as a sacred lyric, or as a metrical epitome of certain well-known passages of Holy Scripture. The influence which it has had upon the minds of men, especially amongst the more learned, has been very considerable. The fact that it was quoted by and gave great consolation to the late Prince Consort in his last illness is well known. This is one, however, of numerous instances of more than ordinary importance, where it has been a stay and comfort in days of peril, and in the hour of death. No other English hymn can be named which has laid so broad and firm a grasp upon the English-speaking world.

Rodigast, Samuel, s. of Johann Rodigast, pastor at Gröben near Jena, was b. at Gröben Oct. 19, 1649. He entered the University of Jena in 1668 (M.A. 1671), and was in 1676 appointed adjunct of the philosophical faculty. In 1680 he became conrector of the Greyfriars Gymnasium at Berlin. While in this position he refused the offers of a professorship at Jena and the Rectorships of the Schools at Stade and Stralsund. Finally, in 1698, he became rector of the Greyfriars Gymnasium, and held this post till his death. His tombstone in the Kloster-Kirche in Berlin says he d. "die xxix. Mart. a. MDCCVIII . . . aetatis anno lix." (Koch, iii. 420; Goedeke's Grundriss, iii. 1887, p. 291; ms. from Dr. Nohl of the Greyfriars Gymnasium, &c.). Two hymns have been ascribed to him, one of which has passed into English, viz.:—

Was Gott thut das ist wohlgethan, ■ bleibt gerecht sein Wille. Cross and Consolation. This hymn is one of the first rank. It is founded on Deut. xxxii. 4, and has reminiscences of an older hymn by Altenburg (p. 54, i.) beginning with the same first line. Wetzel, ii. 396, says it was written in 1675, while Rodigast was at Jena, for his sick friend Severus Gastorius, precentor (cantor) there, and set to music by Gastorius. It appears in the Hannoversche G. B., Göttingen, 1676, as No. 13 in the Appendix, and is in 6 st. of 8 l. Included in the Schleusingen G. B., 1681, and most recent collections, e.g., as No. 902 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. It was, says Koch, viii. 494, the favourite hymn of Friedrich Wilhelm III. of Prussia, and by his command was performed at his funeral on June 11, 1840.

The beautiful melody, given in the C. B. for England, appears in the Nürnberg G. B., 1690 (not in the ed. of 1676), No. 1220. C. von Winterfeld (Evang. Kirchengesang, ii. p. 587) considered that this was not the melody by Gastorius, but was by Johann Pachelbel of Nürnberg, who was in 1675 organist at Eisenach, and from 1678 to 1690 organist at Erfurt, in Thuringia, and who had set it in motet form about 1680.

The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. The will of God is only good. By A. T. Russell, omitting st. iv.–vi., as No. 234 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. What'er my God ordains is right, His will is ever just. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 196. Repeated in full in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860, and E. T. Prust's Coll., 1869. Abridged in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c. 1873, Holder's Cong. Hys., 1884, the Amer. Episc. Hyl., 1871, &c.

3. What'er my God ordains is right, Holy His will abideth. A very good tr., omitting st. iv., and based on her 1858 version, by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 135. Repeated, omitting st. iii. in the Scottish Hymnal, 1869, Snepp's Songs of G. and G., 1871, the Canadian Presb. H. Bk., 1880, and others.

4. What God does, that is rightly done, Allwise. By Miss Borthwick, of st. i., iv.–vi., as No. 235 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

5. What'er God does is good and right. A good but free tr. by E. Massie in his Sacred Odes, 1866, p. 127. Repeated, omitting the tr. of st. v. in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

6. What'er God does is rightly done. A good tr., omitting st. iii., iv., as No. 101 in the Ibrox Hymnal, 1871.

7. What God does, ever well is done. By E. Cronenwett, omitting st. iv., as No. 408 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

8. What'er God doth is rightly done, Righteous. In full by H. L. Hastings, as No. 723 in his Songs of Pilgrimage, 1886.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "What Thou my God dost, all's well done." In the Supp. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 61. (2) "What'er God does is fitly done." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 164). (3) "What God hath done is wisely done." By J. S. Stallybrass, in the Tonic Solfa Reporter, July, 1857. (4) "What God doth is divinely done." By Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, Feb. 1866, p. 216, and Reid's Praise Book, 1872. (5) "All that God does is rightly done." By J. D. Burns, 1869, p. 238. (6) "What God doth, it is all well done." By N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 161.

[J. M.]

Roh, Johann, was a native of Domaschitz near Leitmeritz, in Bohemia. Roh was his name in Bohemian, but when he wrote in Latin he styled himself Cornu, and in German Horn. In 1518 he was ordained priest and appointed preacher to the Bohemian Brethren's community at Jungbunzlau, in Bohemia. At the Synod of Brandeis, in Sep. 1529, he was chosen as one of the three Seniors of the Unity. Finally, at the Synod of Brandeis, in April 1532, he was appointed Bishop, and held this post till his death, at Jungbunzlau, Feb. 11, 1547. (Koch, ii. 114; Wackernagel, i. p. 727, &c.)

Roh was the editor of the Bohemian H. Bk. of 1541, and is said to have written a number of hymns in the Bohemian language, but the ed. of 1561 only gives one with his name. He also edited the second German hymn-book of the Brethren, viz., Ein Gesangbuch der Brüder inn Behemen und Merherrn, Nürnberg, 1544; and seems to have been author or translator of all, or nearly all, of the 32 hymns there added. Another hymn ("O heiliger Vater, gütiger Herr") is also given with his name in the Kirchengeseng, 1566. (See further under Bohemian Hymnody, pp. 153–160, and Weisse, M.) A considerable number of Roh's hymns passed into the Lutheran hymn-books of the 16th and 17th centuries, and into the Moravian H. Bks. of the 18th cent. Rather curiously in the last Moravian H. Bk. (the Kleines Gesangbuch, Gnadau, 1870), his name is not found in the list of authors.

Those of Roh's hymns which have been tr. into English are:—

i. Gottes Sohn ist kommen. Christmas. In 1544, as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 350, in 9 st. of 6 l. The heading "Ave Hierarchia" refers to the melody, for it is not a tr. from the Latin. Included in V. Babst's G. B., Leipzig, 1553, and recently in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 6. Strangely enough this fine hymn was omitted from the Kirchengeseng of 1566 and later eds.; and though it was included in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, and the Brüder G. B., 1778, it has again been omitted from the Kleines G. B., 1870. The trs. are:—

1. Lo! from highest heaven. A free tr. of st. i.—iii., vi., by A. T. Russell, as No. 27 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. Included, altered, in Kennedy, 1863.

2. Once He came in blessing. A good tr. of st. i.—iii., v., ix., by Miss Winkler, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 26. Included in J. Robinson's Coll., 1869, and the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868.

3. God's Son once descending. This is No. 249 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

Hymns not in English C. U.:—

ii. Betrachtn wir heut zu dieser Frist. Easter. 1544 as above, and in Wackernagel, iii. p. 359, in 14 st. of 3 l. Tr. as:—(1) "The Saviour Jesus, Friend of Man." As No. 332 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. This is from the recast "Der selge Heiland, Jesus Christ" (based on ii.—v.), as No. 1875 in Appendix xii. c. 1745, to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735.

iii. Ein starker Held ist uns kommen. Christmas. 1544 as above, and in Wackernagel, iii. p. 352, in 12 st. of 4 l. Tr. = (1) "God took our nature upon Him (st. iii.), as No. 251 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

iv. Lob Gott getrost mit singen. Christian Church. 1544 as above, and in Wackernagel, iii. p. 360, in 9 st. of 3 l. In the Kirchengeseng, 1566, two st. were inserted between iii. and iv. This form, in 11 st., is No. 563 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1014, is a cento in 3 st. (from st. vi., viii., ix. of the 1544, and iv. of the 1566), beginning "Lass dich durch nichts erschrecken," and this form has been tr. as "O be not thou dismayed, Believing little band," = No. 596 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

v. O Mensch, thu heut hören. Passiontide. 1544 as above, and in Wackernagel, iii., p. 355, in 20 st. of 4 l. At p. 157 in this Dictionary it is marked as a tr. from the Bohemian. The English version is "I am thy Lord and God" (st. ii.), as No. 258, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. [J. M.]

Roman Catholic Hymnody, English.

1. It is only during the last thirty or forty years that the attention of Roman Catholics in Great Britain has become widely awakened to the subject of congregational singing, and the treasures of hymnody in their own Office Books. There is even now room for much further diffusion of knowledge on the matter. Considering how many are the hymns of singular power and beauty, venerable, also, through their long use, which are contained in the Roman Missal, Offices, and Breviary, it is surprising that Roman Catholic poets did not, long before the present century, render them more frequently into English verse.

2. The history of Roman Catholic Hymnody in Great Britain is beset with difficulties, arising from the rarity of the earlier books in which the little that was done at the first is found, and from the unsystematic use of the facts that are known. In the stormy days of Elizabeth and James I., when the celebration of Divine Service according to the Roman Use exposed both priest and worshipper to the severest penalties, it was not to be expected that Roman Catholic Hymnody could possibly flourish. Something, however, was done. "Jerusalem, my happy home" (p. 580, i.), and some noteworthy hymns and carols found amongst the poems of Robert Southwell, date from that period. Southwell, an English Jesuit, was born in Norfolk in 1560, and was hanged, drawn and quartered under a charge of constructive treason against Queen Elizabeth in 1595. He was the author of numerous sententious poems, an edition of which was published in London in 1856; and more recently a critical and more complete edition has been privately printed by Dr. Grosart. His "New Prince, new Pomp," is a good specimen of his verse (p. 210, ii.). It begins:—

"Behold a silly, tender Babe
In freezing winter night."

It is fit to be sung as a Christmas hymn, and is far beyond much of the sacred poetry of Elizabeth's time. His translation of the "Lauda Sion" is good, and the earliest translation of that hymn into English yet known.

3. On the dispersion of the English Roman Catholics, and their settlement at Antwerp and Brussels, at Paris and Rheims, and at St. Omer's and Rome, they began to issue books of devotion, and trs. from the Latin with versions of the Old Church hymns. These trs. of the Primer were frequently reprinted. That at Antwerp, for instance, was issued in 1599, 1604, 1650, and 1658, with the Preface signed "R. V." These initials are probably those of Robert Verstegan, a well-known printer then at work at Antwerp, and the author of The Restitution of Decayed Intelligence, and a metrical version of the Seven Penitential Psalms, 1601. A Mechlin ed. of 1615, reprinted at St. Omer, 1619, and, again (place not given), in 1632, contained versions possibly by William Drummond. William Habington wrote nothing that can be called a hymn. Two anonymous trs., however, of Cardinal Damiani's Ad perennis vitæ fontem, one issued in Paris in 1631 in a tr. of St. Augustine's Manual, and the second in a tr. of the Confessions, 1679, show that there was no lack of power or poetic genius amongst the Roman Catholics of that period. The following are specimens from each:—

"The Fields are green, the Plants do thrive,
The streams with Honey flow;
From Spices, Odours, and from Gums
Most precious Liquors grow:
Fruits hang upon whole Woods of Trees:
And they shall still do so.

"The Season is not chang'd for still Both Sun and Moon are bright,
The Lamb of this fair City is That clear, Immortal Light,
Whose Presence makes eternal Day
Which never ends in Night."

1679.

"Here Unguents, Spices, Liquors offer
Scents aromatical;
Still-bearing trees such apples proffer
As know nor cause no Fall.
Here Cornfields seen, there meadows green, practical purposes, and may be supplemented by those of the Rev. E. Caswall; of Cardinal Newman; and The Roman Breviary in English, by the Marquess of Bute, 1879. In this last are given versions of the hymns, antiphons, &c., by various hands.
Honey streams glide between.

8. The leading translators are Cardinal Newman, and the Rev. E. Caswall. Others might be named, but their productions are either limited in number, or inferior in quality. The art of translation is a very rare and difficult one. Many compositions which might pass if accepted as originals, would fail altogether if presented to critical eyes as versions of old and approved hymns of the Church. It is the brightness and delicacy of touch which distinguish the work of a master in translation from the failures of an apprentice. The Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, by Cardinal Newman, contain a priceless collection of hymns for Matins, Lauds, Prime, Tierce, Sext, None, and Vespers, on the different days of the week respectively; for Compline, Matins and Lauds of Advent, and the Transfiguration, for a Martyr, and for a Confessor Bishop. These are full of music and sweetness, of energy and light, which could spring from nothing but genius and long practice in the art. Cardinal Newman is one of the great restorers of Roman Catholic Hymnody, not, indeed, through publishing a complete hymn-book, but by being, one might almost say, in himself a type of rhythmical utterance, and the author of several hymns and translations of supreme excellence. The Rev. E. Caswall (q.v.), more than any other, has enriched English Roman Catholic hymnody with a large number of beautiful translations from the Latin. See, for example, his version of the hymn of Prudentius, "Bethlehem of noblest cities." How elegant is both the language and rhythm. How excellently, also, he has translated that sweetest of mediæval hymns, the hymn of St. Bernard, "Jesu dulcis memoria" ("Jesu, the very thought of Thee"), noted above.

9. Amongst the original hymn-writers Dr. Faber takes the highest rank. His hymns, sung at the Oratory, are often remarkable for true poetry. Among these may be mentioned "Jesus is Risen," "The Immaculate Conception," "To our Blessed Lady," "The Will of God," and the "Evening Hymn." Faber has done more than any other Englishman to promote congregational singing amongst the Roman Catholics in Great Britain. The congregation to which he was attached entered into his hymns fervently, and from them they spread to others. He certainly perceived and appreciated, as a scholar, and from his standpoint as a Roman Catholic, the double advantage possessed by a Church which sings both in an ancient and modern tongue, making two-fold melody continually unto God. He did not prize the less the magnificent hymns of Christian antiquity in Latin, because he taught congregations to sing in the English of to-day. His indebtedness to the Olney Hymns, and to the Wesleys, he freely acknowledges in his Preface to Jesus and Mary, 1849. To these three—Cardinal Newman, Caswall, and Faber—the Roman Catholic Hymnody in England principally owes its revival.

10. Other names of less importance from a hymnological point of view remain to be noted. If Thomas Moore could be regarded as a Roman Catholic, as he is reckoned by his friend and biographer, Lord John Russell, we should not be able to pass over some Sacred Melodies of his which are well-known, and of extreme beauty. But the work published under the title of Sacred Songs, in 1816, has become so popular, and they are so constantly claimed as the productions of one who attended habitually the Anglican services, that we are unwilling to advance a disputable pretension. Besides, exquisite as they are, they have nothing in them that stamps them with any certain mark of the religion in which Moore was brought up in childhood. "Thou art, O God, the Life and Light"; "O Thou Who dry'st the mourner's tear"; "The turf shall be my fragrant shrine"; "Sound the loud timbrel," and many others, are all of them steeped in that tenderness which touches deeply our human nature, when under the influence of Divine grace. Miss Adelaide Anne Procter had passed a considerable portion of her life before she entered the Roman Catholic Church. She was born in 1835, but did not join the Roman communion until 1851. Sometimes she is truly lyrical, and her verses, Confido et Conquiedo, would be suitable for congregational singing. The same may be said of Our Daily Bread. She does not write in the mere routine of pious verse. Her Sent to Heaven is lovely of its kind. She is a thinker, but her poetry is more adapted to reading than to practical psalmody. Religion had taken deep root in her mind, and her days were passed in acts of self-denying charity. Other translators and original writers include the Rev. T. J. Potter, who translated afresh nearly all the Vesper hymns in the Catholic Psalmist, 1858; Aylward, Porter, Rawes, Wallace, Coffin, Russell; H. N. Oxenham, a writer of known ability in ecclesiastical subjects in the Saturday Review; Canon F. Oakeley, a scholar of classical tastes; Aubrey de Vere, a true poet, author of Antar and Zara, and many other volumes; Charles Kent, and Robert Campbell. Matthew Bridges has also struck nobly many a note of adoration in his Hymns of the Heart for the Use of Catholics, 1848, of which, "Rise, glorious Conqueror, arise," and The Seraph's Song, "Crown Him with many crowns," may be taken as samples.

11. In addition to the Oratory Hymns of the Rev. F. W. Faber, a cheap and popular Roman Catholic hymn-book, pub. by Burns and Oates, has come into very extensive use. It is entitled, Hymns for the Year, a complete Collection for Schools, Missions, and General Use, 1867. It contains 288 of the best-known and most frequently used Roman Catholic hymns; and is found, together with the Oratory Hymns of Dr. Faber, to be an invaluable treasure to Roman Catholics. Some of the "Sacred Songs" touching the Communion of Saints are peculiar to Roman Catholic worship. Nothing, however, can exceed the fervour and depth of devotion and adoration to be found in the hymns addressed to the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit;

the Sacred Trinity, and our Lord in his Human and Divine nature. Such, to name a few only, are, "My God, how wonderful Thou art"; "It is my sweetest comfort, Lord"; "O brightness of Eternal Light"; "I met the Good Shepherd"; and "Lead me to Thy peaceful manger."

12. The latest addition to Roman Catholic Hymnody, is the Annus Sanctus, 1884, of Mr. Orby Shipley. It is a work of great value, and the Appendix, containing earlier versions of Latin hymns, is the result of much diligent research on Mr. Shipley's part. In this Appendix will be found the heads of families of versions of Vesper hymns taken from the Primers of 1604, 1615, 1685, and 1706. These versions of some of the best-known Latin hymns have a religious, a poetic, an historic, and an ecclesiastical value. They will be a real boon to literature in a branch that has been little cultivated, and, to say the truth, undeservedly neglected.

13. The following list contains most of the works associated with English Roman Catholic Hymnody (except the Primers, p. 909), which are noticed above:—

1. A Collection of Spiritual Songs. By Bp. John Geddes. 1791, 1802, and 1823.
2. A Collection of Catholic Hymns; or Religious Songs, &c. Edited by the Rev. N. A. Gilbert, Whitby, 1805; 2nd ed. Manchester, 1807; 3rd ed. edited by the Rev. G. L. Haydock. York, 1823.
3. A Collection of Catholic Psalms, Hymns, Motettos, Anthems, and Doxologies. By the Rev. G. L. Haydock. Whitby, 1823.
4. Catholic Psalter, 1839.

26. The Dominican Hymn Book with Vespers and Compline. London, 1881.

27. St. George's Hymn Book. Containing the Hymns sung at St. George's Cathedral, Southwark. Compiled by the Rev. Joseph Reeks. London (3rd ed. 1882).

28. Hymns by the Rev. James Conolly, M.R. London (4th ed. 1882).

29. Annus Sanctus; Hymns of the Church for the Ecclesiastical Year. Translated from the Sacred Offices by Various Authors, with Modern, Original, and Other Hymns, and an Appendix of Earlier Versions. Selected and Arranged by Orby Shipley, M.A. London and New York, 1884.

30. The Catholic Psalmist. Compiled by C. B. Lyons, Dublin, 1888.

31. Hymns for the Year. A Complete Collection for Schools, Missions, and General Use. London, n.d. [Dr. Rawes, 1867.]

32. Hymns: Original and Selected. By the Rev. H. A. Rawes, M.A. London, n.d. [Hymns by H. A. Rawes and F. W. Faber.]

33. The Catholic Hymnal. Hymns Selected for Public and Private Use. London, n.d. [1860].

34. The Crown Hymn Book; Containing Compline, Benediction, Office of Immaculate Conception, Mass for Children, and all the English and Latin Hymns in the Crown of Jesus Prayer Book, &c. London, n.d. [1862].

35. The Parochial H. Bk. New and revised ed. London, n.d. [1st ed. 1880: ed. with music, 1883].

36. Catholic Hys., with Holy Mass for Children, &c. Dublin, n.d.

In addition to these there are also the publications of Matthew Bridges, Aubrey de Vere, Adelaide A. Procter, T. J. Potter, Lady Georgiana Fullerton, and others, from which hymns have been gathered to enrich the various hymn-books published for the use of Schools, Missions, and other purposes.

[J. C. E.]

Romanus. The chief of the Middle School of Greek hymn-writers. He was a native of Emesa, deacon of Berytus, and became attached to the church of Blacherno at Constantinople. In that church he had a vision of the Mother of God, who gave him a piece of a roll (kovros) to eat. He did so, and found himself endowed with the power of making Contakia (Neale, Hist. East. Church, quoting Menea). He is said to have written a thousand of these poems, but whether this means a thousand of the long strophes, which are intercalated among the Odes in the present Greek office books, or a thousand of the long poems, which Cardinal Pitra has discovered under the name of Contakia, cannot be determined. The date of his pieces must be found either as 491-518 or 713-719, the reigns of Anastasius the 1st or the 2nd, ■ he is said to have come to Constantinople in the reign of Anastasius. The desuetude into which his hymns had fallen in the 8th century is perhaps in favour of the earlier date, and the long hymn of Methodius at such an early period as 311 (see Greek Hymnody, §. x. 2) allows the possibility of such long productions at the close of the 5th century (see Greek Hymnody, §. xii. 1). Of his hymns, one only has been rendered into English. It is a Contaktion, or short hymn, found in the office for Christmas Day:—Ἐδὲμ Βηθλεὲμ ἠνοιξε, δεῦτε ἴδωμεν. and republished by Dr. Littledale in his Offices, &c., of the H. E. Church, 1863, p. 76. Dr. Littledale's tr. in blank verse is, "Bethlehem hath opened Eden," same work, p. 197. This has been turned into 8.6.8 6.7.7 measure by W. Chatterton Dix, and was pub. in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 102. [H. L. B.]

Rooke, Thomas, M.A., was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, B.A. 1848, M.A. 1851. Taking holy orders in 1848, he held several curacies and chaplaincies in Ireland till 1881, when he was preferred to the Vicarage of Feckenham, Redditch, diocese of Worcester. Three of his hymns appeared in A. J. Soden's Universal H. Bk., 1885 :—

1. Come to Thy Church, O Lord our God. Consecration of a Church.
2. Father of Mercies! Who of old. For use in Hospitals.
3. O God the Holy Ghost, from Father and from Son. For use in Hospitals. [J. J.]

Rooker, Elizabeth. [Parson, E.]

Rorison, Gilbert, LL.D., s. of John Rorison, a merchant of Glasgow, was b. in Renfield Street, Glasgow, Feb. 7, 1821. He was educated at Glasgow University, and at that time he was a member of the United Presbyterian Church. Subsequently he joined the Scottish Episcopal Church, and, after studying for the ministry at Edinburgh under Bishops Terrot and Russell, was ordained by the latter in 1843. He was for some time curate of St. James's, Leith, and of the Episcopal Church, Helensburgh, and then Incumbent of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Peterhead. He d. at Bridge of Allan, Oct. 11, 1869. In 1851 he edited Hys. and Anthems adjusted to the Church Services throughout the Christian Year, Lond., Hope & Co. (Revised, 1860; Appx. 1869. See Scottish Hymnody, § vii. 2). This contains several of his trs. from the Latin. He is widely known through his "Three in One, and One in Three" (q. v.). [J. J.]

Roscoe Family. In English Unitarian hymnody William Roscoe and three of his children hold honourable positions and are widely known. Taking the father and the children in chronological order we have :—

Roscoe, William, the father, was b. March 8, 1753, in Liverpool, of humble origin. After very meagre schooling, and three years of work in his father's market garden, he was articled to an attorney, and subsequently practised in Liverpool till 1796, when he withdrew from the profession. From the first literature was his chief delight, and throughout a long career of public usefulness he united its pursuit with the efforts of enlightened patriotism and the advocacy of higher education and reform. Liverpool was a centre of the old slave-trade, and Roscoe was one of the first to raise his voice against the iniquity. At the age of 20 he had already uttered a protest in his descriptive poem Mount Pleasant, and in 1787 he pub. a longer poem, The Wrongs of Africa (Pt. ii. 1788), devoted to the subject. During his brief parliamentary experience as member for Liverpool, in 1807, he had further opportunity of advocating the cause of liberty and humanity. His first great historical work, the Life of Lorenzo de' Medici, was pub. in 1796, and the Life and Pontificate of Leo the Tenth, in 1805. After withdrawing from his legal practice, Roscoe had hoped to be able to devote himself entirely to letters, but the claims of friendship induced him in 1800 to enter into a banking business, which involved him in commercial troubles, ending in 1820 in his bankruptcy. His library had to be sold, but part of it was bought by friends, and presented to the Liverpool Athenæum, which in 1789 Roscoe had been instrumental in founding. In 1822 he pub. Illustrations of the Life of Lorenzo de' Medici, defending the views adopted in his former history, and two years later edited a new edition of Pope's works, with a life of the poet. He died June 30, 1831. (Cf. The Life of William Roscoe, by his son, Henry Roscoe, in 2 vols., London, T. Cadell, 1833.) As a member of the congregation of Unitarians meeting in Renshaw Street Chapel, Liverpool, Roscoe took part in preparing A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Public and Private Worship, printed for their use in 1818. He contributed eight hymns and the concluding anthem. Of these hymns the following are in C. U. at the present time :—

1. Let our loud song of praise arise. Praise.
2. Go, suffering habitant of earth. Life, a Warfare.
3. Great God, beneath Whose piercing eye. Divine Providence.
4. Thus said Jesus, Go and do. Love to our Neighbour.
5. What is the first and great command? The Commandments.

These hymns are in several Unitarian collections, including Martineau's Hymns, 1840. No. 3 was written in 1788, as a "secular hymn" of ten stanzas, to be sung at the Benn's Garden Chapel on the Centenary of the Revolution.

Roscoe, William Stanley, the son, was b. in 1782, and d. in 1843. He was educated by Dr. Shepherd, of Gateacre, and at Peterhouse, Cambridge. He was in his father's bank till the failure in 1820, after which he held an office in the Liverpool Court of Passage. His Poems were pub. in 1834. His hymn "Almighty God, in prayer to Thee" (Death anticipated) appeared in the Liverpool Renshaw Street Coll., 1818. It is also in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, and later collections.

Roscoe, Mary Ann, a daughter, was b. in 1795, married to Thomas Jevons, 1825, and d. in 1845. She edited Poems for Youth, by a Family Circle, Lond., 1820, to which her brothers and sister contributed. From 1831 she also edited The Sacred Offering, an Annual of original and selected poetry (Liverpool, D. Marple & Co.). Her 7 hymns were pub. in her Sonnets and other Poems, chiefly Devotional, in 1845. Of her hymns three are still in C. U. :—

1. [Now] O let your mingling voices rise. Christmas.
2. Thou must go forth alone, my soul. Death Anticipated.
3. When human hopes and joys depart. In Trouble and Affliction.

Of these No. 3 was first pub. in her Poems for Youth, &c., 1820.

Roscoe, Jane, a second daughter, was b. in 1797, married to Francis Hornblower in 1838, and d. in 1853. Her Poems by one of the Authors of Poems for Youth by a Family Circle, were pub. in 1820, and her Poems in 1843. Her hymns in C. U. are :—

1. How rich the blessings, O my God. Gratitude. In the Liverpool Renshaw Street Coll. 1818.
2. My Father, when around me spread. Peace in Affliction. Appeared in the Monthly Repository, Dec. 1828; and the Sacred Offering, 1832.
3. O God, to Thee, Who first hast given. Self-Consecration. In Poems for Youth, 1820.
4. Thy will be done, I will not fear. Resignation.

Rossetti, Christina Georgina, daughter of Gabriel, and sister of Dante Gabriel and William Michael Rossetti, was b. in London, Dec. 5, 1830, and received her education at home. Her published works include:—

(1) Goblin Market, and Other Poems, 1862; (2) The Prince's Progress, and Other Poems, 1866; (3) Poems, mainly a reprint of Nos. 1 and 2, 1875; (4) A Pageant, and Other Poems, 1881, &c.

In addition, Miss Rossetti has published several prose works, as:—Annus Domini (a book of prayers for every day in the year), 1874; Letter and Spirit of the Decalogue, 1883, and others. She has written very few hymns avowedly for church worship, but several centos have been compiled from her poems, and have passed into several hymn-books. These include:—

1. Dead is thy daughter, trouble not the Master. The Raising of Jairus's daughter. From her Goblin Market, &c., 1862, into Lyra Mystica, 1865.

2. God the Father, give us grace. Invocation of the Holy Trinity. From Lyra Mystica into the Savoy Hymnary, for use in the Chapel Royal, Savoy (see No. 8 below).

3. I bore with thee long weary days and nights. The Love of Christ. From her Goblin Market, &c., 1862, into Lyra Messianica, 1864.

4. I would have gone, God bade me stay. Resignation. From her Poems, 1875, into Horner's Cong. Hymns, 1884, &c.

5. Once I thought to sit so high. A Body hast Thou prepared Me, or Passiontide. Contributed to Lyra Eucharistica, 1863.

6. The Advent moon shines cold and clear. Advent. From her Goblin Market, &c., 1862.

7. The flowers that bloom in sun and shade. The Eternity of God. In Mrs. C. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

8. What are these that glow from afar? Martyrs. Part of the poem "We meet in joy though we part in sorrow," which appeared in Lyra Mystica, 1865, and then in Miss Rossetti's Prince's Progress, &c., 1866. It is the most widely used of her hymns. No. 2 above is also from the same poem.

Miss Rossetti's verses are profoundly suggestive and lyrical, and deserve a larger place than they occupy in the hymnody of the church. Her sonnets are amongst the finest in the English language. [W. G. H.]

Rothe, Johann Andreas, s. of Aegidius Rothe, pastor at Lissa, near Görlitz, in Silesia, was b. at Lissa, May 12, 1688. He entered the University of Leipzig in 1708, as a student of Theology, graduated M.A., and was then, in 1712, licensed at Görlitz as a general preacher. In 1718 he became tutor in the family of Herr von Schweinitz at Lenbe, a few miles south of Görlitz, and while there frequently preached in neighbouring churches. During 1722 Count N. L. von Zinzendorf, happening to hear him preach at Gross-Hennersdorf, was greatly pleased with him, and when the pastorate at Berthelsdorf became vacant shortly thereafter, gave him the presentation. He entered on his duties at Berthelsdorf Aug. 30, 1722. There he took a great interest in the Moravian community at Herrnhut, which formed part of his parish. But when, in 1737, he had to report to the higher ecclesiastical authorities regarding the doctrinal views of the Moravians, Zinzendorf showed his resentment in various ways, so that Rothe was glad to accept a call to Hermsdorf, near Görlitz. Finally, in 1739, Count von Promnitz appointed him assistant pastor at Thomendorf, near Bunzlau, where he became chief pastor in 1742, and d. there July 6, 1758. (Koch, v. 240; Wetzel's A. H., ii, 756, &c.)

Rothe was a man of considerable gifts and of unbending integrity, a good theologian, and an earnest, fearless, and impressive preacher. His hymns, about 40 in number, though they can hardly be said to rank high as poetry, are yet often characterised by glow and tenderness of feeling, and by depth of Christian experience. They are somewhat akin to Zinzendorf's better productions, but this resemblance may arise from the alterations which Zinzendorf seems to have made in them. The best known of them first appeared in Zinzendorf's hymn-books, and were for a time looked upon with suspicion, because as Zinzendorf did not affix authors' names, the new hymns were at first all ascribed to himself.

Those of Rothe's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Ich habe nun den Grund gefunden. Joy in Believing. 1st pub. in Zinzendorf's Christ-Catholisches Singe- und Bet-Büchlein, 1727, p. 98, and in the 2nd ed. (N.D., but probably in the end of 1727 or beginning of 1728) of his Sammlung g. u. l. Lieder (1st ed., 1725), as No. 934, in 10 st. of 6 l.; and repeated in the later Moravian H. Bks., e.g. the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 255, Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 366, &c. At first the Lutherans suspected it, thinking that it was by Zinzendorf, but on discovering that it was by Rothe, soon adopted it. It is a powerful and beautiful hymn, is found in many recent German collections (e.g. the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 78), and in its English forms has found a very wide acceptance, and proved a comfort and blessing to many. It was doubtless suggested by Heb. vi. 19.

In the Historische Nachricht (to the Brüder G. B., 1778), ed. 1835, p. 176, it is said to have been written for Zinzendorf's birthday, May 26, 1728. This is probably a misprint for 1725, and the hymn, as will be seen above, was in print in 1727. Koch, ii. 241, suggests that it was written in return for the hymn, "Christum über alles lieben," which Zinzendorf had sent to Rothe in 1722 (in the Sammlung, 1725, No. 652, and in the Deutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 30, marked as "on a friend's birthday," and dated May 12, 1722). This, if correct, would rather suggest 1723 as the date of Rothe's hymn, only in that case Zinzendorf would almost certainly have included it in the Sammlung of 1725. Zinzendorf, it may be added, gives in his Deutsche Gedichte two other pieces written for Rothe's birthdays, one dated 1724, for his 36th birthday (beginning "Wer von der Erde ist"), the other dated 1728, for his 40th birthday (beginning "Der Du der Herzen König bist.")

Rothe's hymn under consideration ("Ich habe nun") has been tr. as:—

1. Now I have found the ground wherein. A fine but somewhat free tr. of st. i., ii., iv., v., vi., x., by J. Wesley. Mr. J. G. Stevenson, in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 46, speaks thus regarding it:—

"When the translation of this hymn was finished John Wesley sent a copy of it to P. H. Molther, one of the German Moravians in London, and under date of 25 January, 1740, M. Molther returns the translation with his approval of all but one verse, which Mr. Wesley altered as suggested." The altered stanza begins "O Love, thou bottomless abyss." Mr. Stevenson adds that portions of this version were among the last words of J. W. Fletcher, vicar of Madeley (d. 1785), and of Edward Bickersteth, rector of Watton (d. 1850).

In 1740 the tr. as thus revised was included in the Wesley Hys. & Sac. Poems (P. Works), 1868-72, vol. i., p. 279. It was thence transferred to the Moravian H. Bk., 1742, a tr. of st. iii. of the German, made by P. H. Molther, being added in the 1789 and later eds. It was also included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 182 (1875, No. 189), and has been repeated in very many English and American collections, but as a rule abridged; the full form being however in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk.; the Cong. Hyl., 1887; and Boardman's Sel., Philadelphia, U. S., 1861. It has also appeared in full, or abridged, under the following first lines:—

- (1) Now I have found the blessed ground (st. i.). Lady Huntingdon's Sel., 1780.
 (2) Now have I found the ground wherein (st. i.). W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1873.
 (3) O Lord! Thy everlasting grace (st. ii.). Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884.
 (4) Father, Thine everlasting grace (st. ii.). J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hys., 1832.
 (5) O Love, thou bottomless abyss (st. iii.). Evang. Union Hyl., 1878.
 (6) Jesus, I know hath died for me (st. iv.). Pennsylvanian Luth. Church Bk., 1868.
 (7) Though waves and storms go o'er my head (st. v.). Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858.

2. I now have found, for hope of heaven. In full, by Dr. H. Mills, in the Evang. Review, Gettysburg, Jan. 1850, and in his Horæ Germanicæ, 1856, p. 68. Included in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1852.

3. My soul hath now the ground attained. A good tr. of st. i., iii., v., x., by A. T. Russell, as No. 167 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

4. My soul hath found the steadfast ground. A good tr. (omitting st. v.-ix., and with a st. iv. not by Rothe), by Mrs. Bevan, in her Songs of Eternal Life, 1858, p. 55. Included, abridged, in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and the Ibrox Hyl., 1871.

5. Now I have found the firm foundation. By G. F. Krotel, as No. 251 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, omitting st. vi.-viii.

6. Now I have found the ground to hold. By J. Sheppard, in his Foreign Sacred Lyre, 1857, p. 91.

ii. Vor wahrer Herzensänderung. The Forgiveness of Sins. 1st pub. as No. 448 in the 3rd ed., 1731, of Zinzendorf's Sammlung as above, and in 7 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, it is No. 392. The trs. are:—

- (1) "Thanks be to Thee, Thou slaughter'd Lamb!" (st. vii.). This is No. 345 in pt. ii., 1746, of the Moravian H. Bk. (2) "Before conversion of the heart." A tr. of st. i., iv., by B. Latrobe, as No. 255 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, with the above tr. of st. vii. added. In the 1801 and later eds. (1886, No. 426) the tr. of st. vii. was alone retained.

iii. Wenn kleine Himmelsrben. Death of a Child. Written on the death of one of his daughters. Appeared as No. 1028 in the 3rd ed., 1731, of Zinzendorf's Sammlung as above, and is in 9 st. of 6 l. Included as No. 1688 in the Brüder G. B., 1778, and recently as No. 859 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. The trs. are:—

- (1) "When children, bless'd by Jesus." This is No. 1196 in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 1258). (2) "When summons hence by Death is given." By E. Massie, 1867, p. 105. [J. M.]

Round the Sacred City gather. S. J. Stone. [Church Defence.] Written in 1874 for the Church Defence Institution, and issued as a leaflet with music for use at Church Defence Meetings. Several hundreds of thousands have been used in this form. It was given in the author's Knight of Intercession, 3rd ed., 1874, in 7 st. of 8 l., with the heading "Battle Hymn of Church Defence," and "Dedicated to the 'Church Society' of St. Paul's Haggerston." In 1884 it was enlarged to 12 st. of 8 l. for processional use at a grand Choral Festival in Salisbury Cathedral, and began "Sacred city by the river." In this form it was given in the Monthly Packet, 1884. In its original form it is in several hymnals. Mr. Stone also adapted it for use in the 1889 Suppl. Hymns to H. A. & M. [J. J.]

Rous, Francis (Rouse), was b. at Halton, Cornwall, in 1579, and educated at Oxford. He adopted the legal profession, and was M.P. for Truro during the reigns of James and of Charles I. He also represented Truro in the Long Parliament, and took part against the King and the Bishops. He was appointed a member of the Westminster Assembly; of the High Commission; and of the Triers for examining and licensing candidates for the ministry. He also held other appointments under Cromwell, including that of Provost of Eton College. He d. at Acton, Jan. 7, 1659, and was buried in the Chapel of Eton College. Wood, in his Athenæ Oxonienses, gives a list of his numerous works. The history of his version of the Psalms is given under Psalters, English, § XI., respecting its treatment in England, and under Scottish Hymnody, § III., with regard to its reception and use in Scotland. [J. J.]

Row, Thomas, b. in 1786, was for many years a Baptist minister at Hadleigh, in Suffolk, and Little Gransden, Cambs., and was well known to most of the Calvinistic congregations in the Eastern Counties. He was very singular and methodical in his habits, and for 30 years was a frequent contributor of hymns and other compositions to the Gospel Herald. He d. Jan. 3, 1868. Mr. Row pub. two vols. of hymns. The first was entitled, Concise Spiritual Poems, or Evangelical Hymns on Various Subjects, for the private use of Christians, and also adapted for Public Worship, London, 1817. This was called Book I., and comprised 529 hymns. Book II., including 543 hymns, was pub. in 1822, as Original and Evangelical Hymns on a great variety of subjects, for Private and Public Worship, by Thomas Row, Minister of the Gospel, Hadleigh, Suffolk. Many of these hymns are to be found in Parrott's Sel. From a Calvinistic point of view they are sound in sentiment, but possess little poetic merit. [W. R. S.]

From his Concise Spiritual Poems, 1817, the following hymns have passed into Snepp's Songs of Grace and Glory, 1872:—

1. Awake, my warmest powers. Jesus the Divine Advocate.
2. Awake, O heavenly Wind. To the Holy Spirit.
3. God knows our secret thoughts and words. Omniscience.
4. Gracious God of our salvation. Holy Trinity.
5. How can a mortal tongue express. Holy Trinity.
6. In the Godhead all perfection. Holy Trinity.
7. In vain must sleepy sinners think. The Being of God.
8. Jehovah's will is found. The Will of God.
9. Like wind the Spirit gently blows. Power of the Holy Ghost.
10. Now, Thou faithful, gentle Spirit. Holy Spirit—The Guide.
11. Supremely sweet is sovereign love. The Love of God.
12. The great eternal Spirit comes. The Holy Spirit.
13. The Holy Spirit did engage. Election.
14. The Sacred Spirit comes to take. Work of the Holy Spirit.
15. Thou dear and great mysterious Three. Holy Trinity.
16. Thou great, mysterious Lord. Holy Trinity.
17. To God, the Holy Ghost. Personality of the Holy Ghost.
18. Thou have not chosen me. Election. [J. J.]

Rowe, George Stringer, was b. at Margate in 1830, and educated for the Wesleyan Ministry at Didsbury College. He entered the Wesleyan Ministry in 1853, and has since held important appointments at Ipswich, Hull, Southport, Leeds, Edinburgh, London, &c. In 1888 he was appointed to the chair of Pastoral Theology in Headingley College, Leeds. He is the author of "Life of John Hunt, &c."; "At His Feet"; "On His Day"; "The Psalms in Private Devotion"; and "Alone with the Word." His hymns include:—

1. Behold Thy youthful army.
2. Come, children all and praise.
3. Cradled in a manger meanelly.
4. When they brought little children.

These hymns were written for Sunday School Anniversaries, and were included in the Methodist S. School H. Bk., 1879. [J. J.]

Rube, Johann Christoph, was b. Nov. 20, 1665, his father being then pastor at Hohen- und Thal-Ebra, near Sondershausen. After completing his studies in law, and becoming a licentiate, he was appointed judge (Amtmann) at Burggömmünden near Alsfeld, and then, about 1704, at Battenberg (both in Hesse-Darmstadt). He d. at Battenberg, May 30, 1746. (Bode, p. 137; F. W. Strieder's Hessische Gelehrten- und Schriftsteller Geschichte, vol. xvi. p. 456. The latter dates his birth Nov. 19. On writing to Ebra, Pastor Weise has kindly informed me that no 17th cent. registers are extant either for Hohen-Ebra, or for Thal-Ebra.)

Rube was a most prolific writer of hymns. In the Universal G. B. pub. at Homburg in 5 vols., 1738-44, there are, according to the markings by Count Christian Ernst of Wernigerode in his private copy, no less than 536 by Rube. The earliest appeared in Luppian's Andächtig Singender Christen-Mund, Wesel, 1692, and the Geistreiches G. B., Darmstadt, 1698. In 1712 he published a number (without place of pub.) = Frühlings-Blumen aus der geistlichen Erde [Hamburg Library]; and Rambach in his Anthologie, v. p. xi., says his son-in-law edited another collection in 1737 as Poetisch-christliche Kinder-gedanken (evidently meant for Lieder-gedanken) aus den Sonn- und Festtags-Evangelien. Freylinghausen in his Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, included 7, most of which passed into other books. Many of his hymns are excellent, thoughtful, good in style, and warm in feeling. Of Rube's hymns those which have passed into English are:—

i. Der am Kreuz ist ich meine, Und sonst nichts in aller Welt. Passionide. In his Frühlings-Blumen, 1712, p. 63, in 5 st. of 8 l. When repeated in the Amuthiger Blumen-Krantz, 1712, No. 92, it was altered to "Der am Kreuz ist meine Liebe," and this form was included in the Württemberg G. B., 1741, No. 51 (1842, No. 152), and other collections, and is a great favourite in South Germany. It is sometimes erroneously ascribed to J. E. Greding (b. 1676, d. 1748). The older hymn beginning "Der am Kreuz ist meine Liebe, Meine Lieb ist Jesus Christ" is first found in Ahasuerus Fritsch's Jesus-Lieder, 1668, No. 21, and is probably by Fritsch. It is quite different from Rube's hymn and has not been tr. into English. The trs. from Rube are (1) "Him on yonder cross I love," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 33, repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 189. (2) "More than all the world beside," by R. Massie in his Lyra Domestica, 1864, p. 122, and thence in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

ii. Der Herr bricht ein Mitternacht. Second Advent. In his Frühlings-Blumen, 1712, p. 88, in 15 st. of 4 l. In Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 796 (1865, No. 772). Sometimes erroneously ascribed to N. L. von Zinzendorf. Tr. as:—

tr. of st. i., iii., v., vii., x., xv. by Mrs. Findlater in H. L. L., 3rd ser., 1858, p. 60 (1884, p. 180). Included in Kennedy, 1863, and abridged, in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, and E. Paxton Hood's Our H. Bk., 1868.

iii. Schlaf sanft und wohl! schlaf liebes Kind, Cradle Hymn. In his Frühlings-Blumen, 1712, p. 29, in 15 st. of 4 l., as the first of the "Cradle Hymns." It is worthy of attention as being one of the finest hymns of its class. Included as No. 751 in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, and repeated as No. 1416 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

Sleep well, my Dear! sleep safe and free! A good tr., omitting st. viii., xiii., xiv., by J. C. Jacobi in his Psal. Germanica, 1722, p. 142 (ed. 1732, p. 190, altered). Included as No. 328 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, with trs. of st. xiii., xiv. added; and repeated, altered and abridged, in later eds. (1886, No. 1193, in 5 st.). In 1873 Dr. Martineau, in his Hys. of Praise and Prayer, No. 746, adopted the trs. of st. i., iv., v., xv., from Jacobi's 1732 text. In the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1881 (1883, p. 434), there are 6 st. [J. M.]

Ruben, Johann Christoph. [Rube, J. C.]

Rückert, Friedrich, s. of Johann Michael Rückert, advocate at Schweinfurt, in Bavaria, was b. at Schweinfurt, May 16, 1788. He matriculated at the University of Würzburg Nov. 9, 1805 (where he became a great friend of Baron von Stockmar of Coburg), and finished his course there in the spring of 1809. He graduated Ph. D. at Göttingen in 1810, and on March 30, 1811, began to lecture at Jena as a privatdozent in philology, but left April 16, 1812. On Nov. 2, 1812, he was appointed Professor of the Gymnasium at Hanau, but resigned before entering on his duties, and left Hanau Jan. 21, 1813. He was then for some time living at Würzburg as a man of letters, thereafter at Bettenburg near Hassfurt, &c. In Dec. 1815 he began work at Stuttgart as joint editor of the Morgenblatt, retiring from it Jan. 6, 1817. For some time he travelled in Italy, &c., and then in the end of 1820 settled at Coburg as a man of letters. On his appointment as Professor of Oriental Languages at Erlangen he went there in Nov. 1826; and then, in 1841, was appointed Professor of Oriental Languages at Berlin. During the Revolutionary period of March, 1848, he left Berlin and never returned, but received a pension in 1849. He retired to his estate of Neussess, near Coburg, and resided there till his death on Jan. 31, 1866 (Friedrich Rückert. Ein biographisches Denkmahl. By Dr. C. Beyer, Frankfurt am Main, 1868; Neue Mittheilungen, by Beyer, 1873; Rückert's Nachgelassene Gedichte, Vienna, 1877, &c.).

Rückert was one of the greatest Lyric writers, and one of the most thoughtful and earnest poets that Germany has produced. From the time that, unable to take part in the wars against Napoleon, he issued his Deutsche Gedichte (at Heidelberg) in 1814, containing his famous "Geharnischte Sonnetta," he published himself or contributed to the publications of others, a most voluminous mass of poetry original and translated (see the full bibliography in the works noted above); a complete ed. of his poems appearing finally at Frankfurt am Main, 1868-69, in 12 vols. as his Gesammelte poetische Werke. A considerable proportion of his poems are trs. and adaptations from the Persian, Arabic, Sanscrit and Chinese. Throughout his poems he preserves a high level of purity of thought and expression; and displays a wonderful mastery of form and power of handling the German language. He was of deeply religious spirit, and wrote various epic poems on Biblical history, e.g. Leben Jesu, 1839; Saul und David, 1843; and Herodes der Grosse, 1844. He can hardly however be called a hymn-writer; the second of the poems noted below being almost the only piece by him which has passed into the German hymn-books. A large number of his poems have been tr. into English by Alp. Trench, Dr. John Hunt, Dr. N. L. Frothingham, Dr. C. T. Brooks, and various others.

Of Rückert's pieces we need here only note four, namely:—

i. Das Paradies muss schöner sein. Eternal Life. 1st pub. as one of his Neue östliche Rosen in the Agajla for 1823. Included in his Gesammelte Gedichte, Erlangen, 1834, vol. i. p. 83, in 14 st., entitled "Paradise." The trs. are (1) "Oh! Paradise must show more fair," by Alp. Trench, in his Poems from Eastern Sources, 1842, p. 199. (2) "Oh, Paradise must fairer be." Given, without name of translator, in Dr. H. Bonar's New Jerusalem, 1852, p. 84, and in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 657.

ii. Dein König kommt in niedern Hüllen. Advent. This seems first to have appeared in his Gesammelte Gedichte, Erlangen, 1834, vol. i. p. 95, in 6 st. of 6 l. (it certainly did not appear along with No. iii. in 1824), and entitled "Advent Hymn." It is based on St. Matt. xxi. 1-11, the Gospel for the 1st S. in Advent. It is included in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1545, and in various other recent German hymn-books. The trs. are: (1) "He comes, no royal vesture wearing," by T. C. Porter. Written April 5, 1868, for Hours at Home, N. Y., June, 1868. (2) "In lowly guise thy King appeareth." By Dr. J. Troutbeck, ■ Schumann's Advent Hymn, Novello, n. d., 1876.

iii. Er ist in Bethleem geboren. Bethlehem and Calvary. 1st pub. as No. 5 of a series of "Hymns for Festivals by Friedrich Rückert," in the Taschenbuch zum geselligen Vergnügen auf das Jahr 1824, Leipzig, 1824, p. 276, in 10 st. of 8 l. Repeated in H. Ruete's Anthologie geistlicher Lyrik, 1878, No. 44. The trs. are (1) "In Bethlehem He first arose," by N. L. Frothingham, 1855, p. 168. (2) "In Bethlehem the Lord was born." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 338. (3) "In Bethlehem, the Lord of glory." By T. C. Porter for Hours at Home, N. Y., March, 1868.

iv. Um Mitternacht hab ich gewacht. Midnight. 1st pub. in Nicolaus Lenau's Frühlingssalmanach, Stuttgart, 1835. Included in his Haus- und Jahrslieder, vol. i., Erlangen, 1838 (vol. v. of his Gesammelte Gedichte), p. 313, in 5 st. of 6 l., as one of the poems written at Neussens in the autumn of 1833. Repeated by Ruete, No. 66. The trs. are (1) "At still midnight I raise my sight." By N. L. Frothingham, 1855, p. 175. (2) "At dead of night Sleep took her flight." By Miss Winkworth, in Lyra Mystica, 1865, p. 266, and repeated in her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 337. [J. M.]

Rulers of Sodom! hear the voice. W. Cameron. [True Penitence.] 1st appeared as No. 17 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Isaiah i. 10-19, in 7 st. of 4 l. Thence, with st. vii. l. 1 altered, in the public worship ed. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q. v.), it is ascribed to Cameron. Included in the Relief H. Bk., 1833, and again in others. [J. M.]

Russell, Arthur Tozer, M.A. He was the son of the Rev. Thomas Clout, who later changed his surname for Russell (Gent. Mag., 1848, p. 209; Cong. Hy., p. 259, i. § 6), an Independent or Congregational minister who won for himself a good reputation by editing the works of Tyndale, Frith, Barnes, and Dr. John Owen, &c. He was b. at Northampton, March 20, 1806; educated at St. Saviour's School, Southwark, and at the Merchant Taylors' School, London (cf. Robinson's Register M. T. S., ii., 217). In 1822-24 he was at Manchester College, York (see Roll of the M. C.

students). In 1825 he entered St. John's College, Cambridge, as a sizar, and in his freshman year gained the Hulsean Prize, its subject being, "In what respects the Law is a Schoolmaster to bring men to Christ." In 1829 he was ordained by the Bishop of Lincoln (Kaye), and licensed to the Curacy of Great Gransden, Hunts, and in 1830 was preferred to the Vicarage of Caxton, which he held till 1852. During his ministry here he published the following works: The Claims of the Church of England upon the Affections of the People (1832); Sermons for Fasts and Festivals; A Critique upon Keble's Sermon on Tradition, in opposition. About 1840 appeared his Apology of the Church of England and an Epistle to Signor Sappio concerning the Council of Trent, translated from the original Latin of Bp. Jewell. About the same time appeared Hymn Tunes, Original and Selected, from Ravenscroft and other old Musicians. In 1841 was published A Manual of Daily Prayer. In 1844 Memorials of the Works and Life of Dr. Thomas Fuller. This Life has not been superseded by Bailey's later and over-bulky Life. It has fine things in it. It is severe on Tract XC. In 1848 various of his own hymns, original and tr. from the German, appeared in Hymns for Pub. Worship, &c., Dalston Hospital, London. His first appearance ■ a hymn-writer was in the 3rd edition of the hymn-book published by his father (1st ed. 1813), and known amongst Congregationalists as Russell's Appendix [see Cong. Hymnody, p. 259, i. § 67]. In 1847 followed The Christian Life. In 1851 Psalms and Hymns, partly original, partly selected, for the use of the Church of England. This most modest collection has not received the recognition that it indisputably merits. His original hymns and translations have found their way into many hymnals, e.g., Dr. Peter Maurice's Choral H. Bk. 1861, where several appeared for the first time; Dr. Maurice's Choral Harmony, 1854, contains two of his tunes; Dr. B. H. Kennedy's Hymnologia Christiana, 1863; Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, &c. (1862). In 1852 he was presented to the Vicarage of Whaddon, Cambridgeshire. This, in 1866, he exchanged for St. Thomas's, Toxteth Park, Liverpool. While at Whaddon he published Advent and other Sermons. In 1859 appeared his best prose book, Memorials of the Life and Works of Bishop Andrewes. With every deduction it is a living biography. In Liverpool he republished his Hymn-book. In 1863 he addressed a "weighty and powerful" Letter to the Bishop of Oxford on Dr. Stanley—virtually a trenchant review of the once notorious Essays and Reviews. In 1867 he removed to Wrockwardine Wood, Shropshire, where he remained until 1874, when he was presented to the Rectory of Southwick, near Brighton. Here he d., after a long and distressing illness, on the 18th of November, 1874. In his earlier years he was an extreme High Churchman, but by the study of St. Augustine his views were changed and he became, and continued to the end, a moderate Calvinist. His original hymns are gracious and tender, thoughtful and devout. His translations on the whole are vigorous and strong, but somewhat ultra-faithful to the original metres, &c. He left behind him a History of the Bishops of England and Wales in ms., sufficient to form three or four goodly octavos, and numerous ms. Notes on the Text of the Greek Testament; and also a large number of original chants and hymn-tunes in ms. Surely the last ought to be utilized; and the former deposited in his College of St. John's. [A. B. G.]

Of Russell's hymns a large number are included in Kennedy, 1863, and several also are in a few of the lesser known collections. The trs. are noted elsewhere in this Dictionary, and may be found through the Index of Authors and Translators. Of his original hymns, about 140 in all, including those in Dr. Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861, the following are found in a few collections:—

1. Christ is risen! O'er His foes He reigneth. Easter.
2. Give praise to God our King. Praise.
3. Great is the Lord; O let us raise. Ps. xlviii.
4. Hail, O hail, Our lowly King. Praise to Christ. (Maurice, 1861.)
5. Hail, O Lord, our Consolation. Christ, the Consoler. (Maurice, 1861.)
6. Holy Ghost, Who us instructest. Whitsuntide.
7. Holy Spirit given. Whitsuntide.
8. Hosanna, bless the Saviour's Name. Advent.
9. In the mount it shall be seen. Consolation.
10. In the tomb, behold He lies. Easter Eve. Sometimes "In the night of death, He lies."
11. Jesu, at Thy invitation. Holy Communion.

24. Now be thanks and praise ascending. Praise.
25. Now to Christ, our Life and Light. Evening.
26. O glorious, O triumphal day. Easter.
27. O God of life, Whose power benign. Trinity
In the Dalston Hys. for Pub. Worship, &c., 1848. From this "O Father, uncreated Lord," in L. W. Bacon's Church Bk., N. Y. 1883, is taken.
28. O Head and Lord of all creation. Passiontide.
29. O Jesu, blest is he. Consolation.
30. O Jesu! we adore Thee. Good Friday.
31. O Saviour, on the heavenly throne. The Divine Guide and Protector. (Maurice, 1861.)
32. O Thou Who over all dost reign. Church Defence.
33. Praise and blessing, Lord, be given. Praise to Jesus.
34. Praise the Lord: praise our King. Advent.
35. The Lord unto my Lord thus said. Ps. cz.
36. The Morning [promised] Star appeareth. Christmas.
37. The night of darkness fast declineth. Missions.
38. The way to heaven Thou art, O Lord. Jesus the Way, Truth, and Life. Sometimes "Thou art the Way: Heaven's gate, O Lord."
39. Thou Who hast to heaven ascended. Ascension.
40. To Him Who for our sins was slain. Praise to Jesus, the Saviour. Written Friday, Jan. 24, 1851.
41. We praise, we bless Thee. Holy Trinity.
42. What, my spirit, should oppress thee. In Affliction.
43. What through desert paths Thou leadest? Security and Consolation in Christ.
44. Whom shall I, my [we our] refuge making. Lent. Sometimes "Whom shall we our Refuge making."
45. Whoso'er in Me believeth. The Resurrection.
46. Why, O why cast down, my spirit? In Affliction.

48. With cheerful hope, my soul, arise. Security in God.

49. Ye hosts that His commands attend. Universal Praise of Jesus.

50. Your adoration, O earth and heaven, unite. Universal Praise to Christ.

Unless otherwise stated, all the above appeared in Russell's Ps. & Hys., 1851. The total number of original hymns contributed by him to Maurice's Choral H. Bk. was 21. [J. J.]

Russell, William, was b. in Glasgow in 1798, and educated at the University of Glasgow. Removing from Scotland to America, he was at Savannah in 1817, and subsequently at other places in the United States. He was an active promoter of education, teachers' associations, and kindred objects, and did much to further the cause of education in the States. He was originally a Baptist, but did not hold to close communion. He d. at Lancaster, Massachusetts, Aug. 16, 1873. His hymn, "O'er the dark wave of Galilee" (Christ in Solitude), begins with st. iii. of a poem written by him at the request of Dr. Ware, editor of the Unitarian Christian Examiner, and printed therein in 1826. [F. M. B.]

Russell, William, contributed a few hymns to William Carter's Hymn Book, 1861, and to some minor collections. The best known is "More marr'd than any man's," 1861 (Passiontide). He must be distinguished from W. Russell, the American hymnist. [J. J.]

Rutilius, Martin, s. of Gregorius Rüdell or Rutilius (who in 1548 was diaconus at Salza, near Magdeburg, and in 1551 became pastor at Düben on the Mulde, in Saxony), was b. Jan. 21, 1550. After studying at the Universities of Wittenberg and Jena, he was appointed, in 1575, pastor at Teutleben, near Gotha. In 1586 he became diaconus at Weimar, where, after being for some time archidiaconus, he d. Jan. 18, 1618. (K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 153; articles by Dr. Linke in the Blätter für Hymnologie, 1887, pp. 82, 99, &c.) Rutilius's name has been associated with the well-known German hymn which begins:—

i. Ach Gott und Herr, wie gross und schwer. Lent.
The first printed form of any part of this hymn is in a sermon preached by Dr. Johann Major or Gross (see Major in Various) in the Town Church at Jena, on June 2, 1613. It was occasioned by the great storm which burst over Weimar on May 29, 1613, and caused devastation for miles around. The sermon ends thus:—"O bone Deus, hic ure, hic seca, hic pange, hic tundo, modo in alterum parce:

"Solls ja seyn,
Dass Straff und Pein,
Auff Sünde folgen müssen:
So fahr hie fort,
Und schone dort,
Und lass mich ja wol blüssen.

"Nu wolan der Herr hats gegeben, der Herr hats genommen, der Name des Herrn sey gelobt, heut und in alle Ewigkeit. Amen. Amen. Ende." As Dr. Linke suggests the stanza here given looks much more like a rhymed version of the Latin quotation made by Major for the purposes of his sermon, than a verse quoted from a hymn already known. The 1st ed. of the sermon was printed at Jena, and the 2nd ed. at Eisleben, also in 1613. The title begins, Gedenck und Erinnerung's Predigt, Von dem grausamen Gewitter unnd schrecklichen Gewässer damit Thüringen heimgesucht worden am Sonnabend vor Trinitatis in der Nacht, war den 29. Maji dieses instehenden 1613. Jahrs. In the 2nd ed. there is printed at the end, by itself, a hymn in 6 st. of 6 l., namely, 1. Ach Gott und Herr. 2. Lieff ich gleich weit. 3. Zu dir fliehe ich. 4. Solls ja seyn. 5. Gib Herr Gedult. 6. Handel mit mir. That these stanzas are all by Major seems at least highly probable. They passed into Melchior Franck's Geistliche musikalische Lustgarten, Nürnberg, 1616, as No. xvii. As No. xvi. Franck gives the following: 1. Gleich wie sich fein. 2. Also Herr Christ. Both xvi. and xvii. are given without name of author. In J. Clauder's Psalmodia nova, Altenburg, 1627, No. 67 is Franck's No. 16, but with four st. added, viz., 3. Meinr Händ Arbeit. 4. Die Seite mein. 5. Darinn ich bleib. 6. Ehre sey nun. The form now in use is found in B. Derschau's Ausserlesene geistreiche Lieder, Königsberg, 1639, p. 79, where it is in 10 st., viz. st. i.-vi. as in 1613, and st. vii.-x. from Clauder's l. ii., v., vi. This form passed into most later books, and is No. 350 in the Unv. L. S., 1851.

At first the hymn seems to have passed into the collections either as anonymous or signed "J. G.," i.e. Johann Gross. Then in Clauder's 2nd ed., 1630, the first part was signed "J. Gß.," which was forthwith taken to mean Johann Gödel, who was b. at Altdorf Aug. 31, 1556, became pastor at Diensted, near Kranichfeld, in 1583, and d. at Diensted in 1604. So it went on till 1726, when Caspar Binder, pastor at Mattstedt, pub. at Jena his Historischer Erweis for the purpose of showing that the hymn was by Rutilius. In this book Binder declared that he had in his possession an autograph album which formerly belonged to Melchior Francke, sometime burgomaster at Weimar; and that in this album he had found the hymn "Ach Gott und Herr" (in the 6 st. form of 1613), entitled, "A Prayer for the forgiveness of sins, for patience under the cross, and for deliverance from everlasting punishment." He adds that it was subscribed:—"M. Martinus Rutilius, Diaconus Ecclesiae Viniariensis fecit et propria manu scripsit."

" Jesu, du Sohn Davids, erbarm dich mein, Lass mein Stund zugedeckt seyn,
Im Sterben wöllst mein Beystand bleiben
Vom Todt zum Leben bringm mit Freuden.
Den 29. May 1604."

The date here is almost certainly a misreading or a misprint, i.e. instead of 1604 it should be 1614. If then on May 29, 1614, Rutilius was asked to write something in this album, what more natural than that on the anniversary of May 29, 1613, he should transcribe something related to that calamity. If the "fecit et propria manu scripsit" means more than "I certify that this is my autograph," it can hardly refer to anything but the four lines quoted above. Rutilius was by no means a poetic nature, and these four very halting lines are much more likely to be his composition than are the six stanzas of the original.

On the whole then there seems no good reason to ascribe any part of the hymn to Rutilius. The six stanza form is almost certainly by Major. Wherever a name has been attached to st. vii.-x. they too have been ascribed to Major. So that there appears at least a high probability that the 10 stanza form is by Major.

The translations in C. U. are:—

1. O God my Lord! How great's the Hoard. In full by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Germanica, 1722, p. 56. In his ed. 1732, p. 89, it was greatly altered, and st. i.-iii., viii., x. of this form were included in the Evang. Union H. Bk., 1856.

2. When rising winds, and rain descending. This is a free tr. in 8 l., of st. vii.-x. by T. Dutton, as No. 250 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 314). Included in Dr. Martineau's Hys. of Praise and Prayer, 1873.

3. Alas! my God! My sins are great. A good tr. of st. i.-vi., by Miss Winkworth, as No. 107 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Repeated, omitting st. iv., in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "As small birds use A hole to chuse" (st. vii.-x.) as No. 445, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.
(2) "Alas! my Lord and God." By Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 130. [J. M.]

Ryland, John, D.D., s. of Rev. John Collett Ryland, was b. at Warwick, Jan. 29, 1753. At that time his father was Baptist minister at Warwick, but in 1759 removed to Northampton. "J. Ryland, junior," as for many years he was accustomed to subscribe himself, was in 1781 ordained co-pastor with his father at Northampton. In 1794 he accepted the presidency of the Baptist College and the pastorate of the church in Broadmead, Bristol, and these offices he retained until his death on June 25, 1825. Dr. Ryland was a man of considerable literary culture, and received the degree of D.D. from Brown University, Rhode Island. He was one of the founders of the Baptist Missionary Society, and for the three years following the death of Rev. A. Fuller, in 1815, acted as its secretary. His prose works were Memoirs of Rev. R. Hall, Arnsby (2nd ed., 1852); A candid statement of the reasons which induce Baptists to differ from their Christian brethren; and many Sermons and Charges. After his death appeared 2 vols. of Discourses, selected from his mss., and entitled Pastoral Memorials. To these discourses are appended many of his hymns, with their dates. Dr. Ryland's hymns were composed at different times, from his sixteenth year to the year of his death. The earliest were pub. when he was 16, in his Serious Essays, 1771. These 36 hymns were never republished. Several appeared in the Gospel Magazine from 1771 to 1782, and the Protestant Magazine, 1782-83; others in Rippon's Bapt. Selection, 1787; 2 in the Collection for the Monthly Prayer Meeting at Bristol, 1797; 2 in Andrew Fuller's Memoirs, 1831; and 25 in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825. His Hymns and Verses on Sacred Subjects, to the number of 99, were reprinted from his mss. by D. Sedgwick, and were pub., with a Memoir, in 1862. The hymns are dated therein from the mss.

[W. R. S.]

Those of Dr. Ryland's hymns now in C. U. include:—

1. For Zion's sake I'll not restrain. Missions. Dated 1798, and printed by D. Sedgwick from Ryland's mss., 1862.

2. Had not the Lord, my soul may say [ery]. Ps. cxxiv. From his Serious Essays, 1771. It is No. 124 in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866. Not in Sedgwick's reprint.

3. Holy, holy, holy Lord, self-existent Deity. Trinity. Dated 1796. It was given in the 10th ed. of Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1800, Pt. 2, No. 22; in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825; and Sedgwick's reprint, 1862, in 5 st. of 8 l. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

4. Look down, my soul, on hell's domain. Gratitude for escape. This is No. 881 in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. 1866, and dated 1777. We cannot trace it in any of Ryland's works or amongst his hymns.

5. Lord, teach me little child to pray. A Child's Prayer. Dated 1786. The note to this hymn by Dr. Ryland's son, in Sedgwick's reprint, 1862, p. 15, is:—"This and the following hymn ["God is very good to me"] was composed at the request of Mrs. Fuller, wife of the Rev. Andrew Fuller, of Kettering, for the use of Miss Sarah Fuller, who died May 30th, 1789, aged six years and six months." It was pub. in Andrew Fuller's Memoirs, 1831, p. 442, and in Sedgwick's reprint, 1862.

6. Now let the slumbering church awake. Activity in the Church desired. Dated "Feb. 20, 1798." Pub. in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825, and in Sedgwick's reprint, 1862. In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866.

7. O Lord, I would delight in Thee. Delight in Christ. Dated "Dec. 3, 1777." Dr. Ryland added this note to the ms.:—"I recollect deeper feelings of mind in composing this hymn, than perhaps I ever felt in making any other." It was pub. in Rippon's Sel., 1798, No. 248; in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825; and in Sedgwick's reprint, 1862, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is in extensive use in its original, or an abbreviated form; or as "O Lord we would delight in Thee." In the American Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1849; and their Hymnal, 1878, st. i., ii., vi., vii. are rewritten in e. m. as "Lord, I delight in Thee."

8. Out of the depths of doubt and fear. Ps. cxxv. From the Serious Essays, 1771 (misdated in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1775). It is not in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825, nor in Sedgwick's reprint, 1862.

9. Rejoice, the Saviour reigns. Missions. Dated "Jan. 19, 1792." In the 10th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1800, 422 (2nd pt.) it is given in 6 st. of 6 l., as in the Ryland ms., and then after the word "Pause" two stanzas are added on, which are not in the ms. The 6 sts. were repeated in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825; in Sedgwick's reprint, 1862; and in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866 (abbreviated), and other modern hymnals.

10. Sovereign Ruler of the skies. Guidance, Peace, and Security in God. Dated "Aug. 1, 1777." Included in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 545; the Pastoral Memorials, 1825; and Sedgwick's reprint, 1862, in 9 st. of 4 l.

11. Thou Son of God, and Son of Man. Praise to God, the Son. This is undated. It was given in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825; and Sedgwick's reprint, 1862.

12. When Abraham's servant to procure. Onward, Heavenward. Dr. Ryland's son, under the date of Nov. 4, 1861, informed D. Sedgwick that this hymn "was written with a slate pencil on a rusty iron blower by moonlight, past twelve o'clock, Dec. 30, 1773," and he gives these words as a quotation from his father's ms. It is almost needless to add that this account does not agree with the generally received history of the hymn, as set forth in Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 313. In the May number of the Gospel Magazine, 1776, p. 235, the hymn was given in 9 st. of 4 l., with the heading "Hinder me not—Gen. xxiv. 56," and signed "Elachistoteros." It was repeated in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 447; and Sedgwick's reprint, 1862. In Rippon a note is added, "This hymn may begin with 6th verse." This direction has been followed in some modern collections, the result being the hymn commonly known as "In all my Lord's appointed ways."

13. When the Saviour dwelt below. Compassion of Christ. Dated 1806. Included in the Pastoral Memorials, 1825, and Sedgwick's reprint, 1862.

Dr. Ryland's hymns are plain and simple, but they lack poetry and passion, and are not likely to be largely drawn upon for future hymnals. [J. J.]

Sabbath of the saints of old. T. Whytehead. [Sunday.] 1st pub. in his Poems, 1842, p. 108, as one of his "Hymns towards a Holy Week," in 9 st. of 6 l., and appointed for the "Seventh Day." In no instance is it used in its full and complete form. The fullest text is that in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 50, in 6 st., but usually it is given in a more abbreviated form, one of the shortest being the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 60. One of the most popular forms of the hymn is a cento which is usually appropriated to "Easter Eve." It opens: "Resting from His work to-day." One of the earliest, if not the earliest, collection in which it appeared was Dr. Hook's Church Sunday School H. Bk., 1850, Appendix, No. 232. This is composed of st. iii., iv., vi., vii., of the original. This cento was repeated, with alterations, in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and has been adopted by various collections, including, with very slight alterations, H. A. & M., 1861, Sarum, 1868, and others. In Biggs's Annotated H. A. & M. (Preface), the editor has omitted st. v. and viii. from what he has given as the original poem. [J. J.]

Sacer, Gottfried Wilhelm, s. of Andreas Sacer, senior burgomaster of Naumburg, in Saxony, was b. at Naumburg, July 11, 1635. He entered the University of Jena in 1653, and remained there for four years as a student of law. He was thereafter for two years secretary to Geheimrath von Platen, in Berlin; and then tutor, first to a son of the Swedish Regierungsrath von Pohlen, and then to the sons of the Saxon Landhauptmann von Bünau. In 1665 he entered the military service under Herr von Mollison, commandant at Lüneburg, at first as regimental secretary, and afterwards as ensign. Soon tiring of this he went to Kiel in 1667, in order to graduate LL.D., but before doing so undertook a tour in Holland and Denmark with some young noblemen from Holstein. In 1670 he settled down as advocate at the appeal and chancery courts in Brunswick (graduating LL.D. at Kiel in 1671), and in 1683 removed to Wolfenbüttel as Kammer- und Amts-advocat, receiving the title of Kammer-Consulent in 1690. He d. at Wolfenbüttel, Sept. 8 [18], 1699. (Wetzel, iii. p. i.; Koch, iii. 398, iv. 562, &c.)

Sacer began early to write poetry, was admitted by Rist, in 1660, as one of his poetical order of Elbe Swans, and in his Nützliche Erinnerungen wegen der deutschen Poeterey, Altenstettin, 1661 [Wolfenbüttel Library], already described himself as "Kayserslicher Poët," i.e. having been crowned as a poet by the Emperor of Austria. His hymns are among the best of the period immediately succeeding Gerhardt. They have a considerable measure of poetic glow, and sometimes of dramatic force, and are Scriptural and good in style. His earliest hymns seem to have appeared in his Blut-triefende, stiegende und triumphirende Jesus, 1661, but no copy of this work is now known. Many are included in pt. ii. 1665, of the Stralsund G. B. (Ander Theil des erneuerten Gesang-Buchs), and in the other hymn-books of the period. They were collected and pub. by his son-in-law as his Geistliche, liebliche Lieder, at Gotha, 1714.

Those of Sacer's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Durch Trauern und durch Plagen. New Year. Included in 1665 as above, pt. ii. p. 35, in 7 st. of 8 l.; repeated 1714, p. 3, entitled "On the New Year." It is also in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 191. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Through many changeful morrows. This is a good tr. by Dr. F. W. Gotch, in the Baptist Magazine, Jan. 1857, p. 19, repeated in the 1880 Suppl. to the Baptist Ps. & Hys.

ii. Gott fährt auf gen Himmel. Ascension. Founded on Ps. xlvii. 6-7. Included in 1665, as above, pt. ii. p. 147, in 7 st. of 8 l., and repeated 1714, p. 27, entitled "On the Ascension of Christ." It is also in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 336. In the Württemberg G. B., 1842, it begins, "Der Herr fährt auf." The tr. in C. U. are:—

1. Lo! God to heaven ascendeth. This is a good tr., omitting st. vi., by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 39 (Hys. from the German, 1864, p. 63). Repeated, abridged, in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, and his Year of Praise, 1867; in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, &c.

2. While up to Heaven God goeth. A spirited version, omitting st. vi., by W. J. Blew, printed as a leaflet for choir use in 1846, and included in his Ch. Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852; in Rice's Selection from Blew, 1870, No. 67, and in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 362.

Other hymns by Sacer are:—

iii. Gott, der du aller Himmel Herr. For those at Sea. Included in J. Crüger's Erneuerte Gesangbucklein ... von Peter Sohren, Frankfurt am Main, 1670, No. 878, in 10 st., and repeated, 1714, p. 75, in 11 st., entitled "Hymn for Seafarers." Recently in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. Tr. as, "Thou who hast stretched the heaven's blue sky." In L. Rehfuss's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 34.

iv. Lass mich nicht in Irthum fallen. Christ for all. Included, 1714, as above, p. 53, in 10 st. of 8 l., founded on Ps. li. 13, and repeated in the Hannover G. B., 1740, No. 848. Tr. as "Lord, forbid that e'er such error." By Dr. J. Guthrie, 1869, p. 117.

v. ■ dass ich könnte Thränen gnug vergiessen. Passiontide. Included in 1665 as above, pt. ii. p. 60, in 16 st. of 4 l., and repeated, 1714, p. 20, entitled "Contemplation of the piteous death of Jesus Christ." In the Berlin G. B., 1829, st. xiv.—xvi. altered and beginning, "Mein Herr und Heiland, lass mich gehn zu Herzen," are included as No. 189. This form is tr. as, "Lord, touch my heart with that great Consummation," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 143.

vi. So hab' ich obgesieget. Funeral of a Child. Included in 1665 as above, pt. ii. p. 665, in 13 st. of 8 l., st. i.—xii. being given as spoken by the child in Paradise, and xiii. as the answer of the bereaved parents. Repeated in 1714, p. 91, entitled "Comfort from the departed to those left behind," the 13th st. being entitled "Farewell of the sorrowing ones." Recently as No. 855 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. Tr. as (1) "Lo! now the victory's gain'd me," by Miss Cox, 1841, p. 77. In her ed. of 1864, p. 87, it is altered and begins, "My race is now completed." (2) "Then I have conquer'd; then at last," by Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 243. (3) "My course is run; in glory," by Dr. J. Guthrie, 1869, p. 105.

Sachse, Christian Friedrich Heinrich, D.D., was b. July 2, 1785, at Eisenberg, Sachse-Altenburg, where his father was cantor, and also master in the town school. In the years 1804–1807 he was a student at the University of Jena (D.D. from Jena 1841), and was, thereafter, for some time, a private tutor at Kleinlauchstedt, near Merseburg. In 1812 he became diaconus at Meuselwitz, near Altenburg. He was appointed, in 1823, Court preacher at Altenburg; and also, in 1831, Consistorialrath. After 1849 he had many trials to endure, for seven children and his wife predeceased him, leaving him only one daughter; while his bodily infirmities compelled him, in 1859, to give up his duties in the consistory, and, in Feb. 1860, to resign even his work as Court preacher. He d. at Altenburg, Oct. 9, 1860 (Koch, vii. 22; O. Kraus, ed. 1879, p. 418, &c.).

By his earlier hymns, pub. in 1817, in connection with the Tercentenary of the Reformation, Sachse had a share in the reawakening of Churchly life among the Lutherans. The more important of his other hymns appeared in his Geistliche Gesänge zum Gebrauch bei Beerdigungen und bei der Todtenfeier, Altenburg, 1822 [Hamburg Library]; and were written, to be used at funerals, during his residence at Meuselwitz; or for use at the special service introduced there in 1819, and held in memory of the departed, on the evening of the last day of the year. A number of his later hymns, together with selections from his secular poems, were pub. posthumously, as his Gedichte, Altenburg, 1861. A considerable number of his hymns passed into the Hamburg G. B., 1842, Leipzig G. B., 1844, and other German hymn-books, prior to 1870.

Those of Sachse's hymns which have been tr. into English are:—

i. Wohlan! die Erde wartet dein. Burial. 1st pub., 1822, as above, No. 2, p. 5, in 8 st. of 4 l., entitled, "At the Grave." Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 3375 (1865, No. 2947), altered, and beginning, "Lebwohl! die Erde wartet dein." The tr. in C. U. is:—

Beloved and honoured, fare thee well! This is a full and good tr., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L.

L., 3rd Ser., 1858, p. 56 (1884, p. 176). It was repeated, in full, in Prust's Suppl. Hys., 1869, and the 1869 Appx. to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; and, omitting st. ii., in Holy Song, 1869, and J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

ii. Wohlauf, wohlauf zum letzten Gang. Burial. 1st pub., 1822, as above, No. i., p. 3, in 17 st. of 5 l., entitled "Hymn during the funeral procession." Stanzas i.—v. seem to have been meant to be sung at the house of mourning; st. vi.—xix., on the way to the churchyard; and st. xv.—xvii., at the entrance to the "place of peace." It was sung at his own funeral in 1860. It was included, omitting st. iii., as No. 3404, in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 (1865, No. 2937), with the altered first line (as in Claus Harms's Gesänge, 1828, Nos. 288–290), "Wohlauf, wohlan zum letzten Gang;" and the same form is in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 617. Of this hymn, the late Dr. James Hamilton, in an article in the Family Treasury, 1860, pt. i., p. 116, wrote thus:—

"On behalf of England, we have sometimes envied the brighter hope—the look of Easter Morning—which seems to linger still in Luther's land. With its emblems, suggestive of resurrection and heaven, its churchyard is not a Pagan burial ground, but the place where believers sleep,—a true cemetery, to which friendship can find it pleasant to repair and meditate. At the obsequies of Christian brethren, it is not a funeral knell which strikes slowly and sternly; but from the village steeple there sheds a soft and almost cheerful requiem; and though there may be many wet eyes in the procession, there are not many of the artificial insignia of woe, as the whole parish conveys the departed to his 'bed of peaceful rest.' Once, in the Black Forest, we accompanied to the 'place of peace,' an old man's funeral, and there still dwells on our ear the quaint and kindly melody which the parishioners sang along the road; and we have sometimes wished that we could hear the like in our own land [Scotland], with its sombre and silent obsequies."

The translation in C. U. is:—

Come forth! come on, with solemn song. A good tr. of st. i.—iii., v., xv.—xvii., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 2nd Ser., 1855, p. 68 (1884, p. 126). This version was included, in full, in J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865, No. 309, set to the melody to which it is sung in South Germany (Choral melodien, Stuttgart, 1844, No. 103). In Dr. W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1873, the tr. of st. v. was omitted. A greatly altered form, beginning, "Come, tread once more the path with song," appeared in R. Brown-Borthwick's Select Hys., 1871, No. 71; and in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, No. 242. Instead of adopting the melody of 1844, or the tune "Ich hab' mein Sach' Gott heim-gestellt" (p. 671, i.), for which Sachse wrote this hymn; the editors reduced the hymn to L. M., altered it, and omitted the trs. of st. iii., ll. 3–5, xv., ll. 3–5, xvi. This cento was repeated, omitting the tr. of st. xvii., in Dr. Martineau's Hys. of Praise & Prayer, 1873.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Happy the man who seeks the prize" (st. vi.). By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 236). (2) "Neighbour, accept our parting song." By Dr. James Hamilton, in the Family Treasury, p. 116, as above; and sung at his own funeral in 1867. [See his Life, 1870, p. 597.] (3) "O corpse, thy dwelling's now without." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 110. (4) "Come forth, move on, with solemn song." In the Christian Examiner, Boston, U.S., Nov. 1860, p. 414.

Another hymn, partly by Sachse, is:—

iii. Der Herr der Ernte winket. Burial. 1st pub., 1822, as above, No. vi., p. 11, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "At the funeral of an aged person." Repeated in the Hamburg G. B., 1842. It is founded on a piece beginning, "Herr, nun lasset du im Frieden fahren," by Christian Ludwig Neuffer (b. at Stuttgart, Jan. 26, 1769; pastor of the Cathedral Church, Ulm; d. at Ulm, July 29, 1839), in his Christliche Urania, Leipzig, 1820, p. 220, where it is No. ix. of the "Hymns for the dying under special circumstances," and is in 11 st. of 4 l. Sachse's version is tr. as "The reaper now is waiting." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 261). [J. M.]

Sacrosancta hodiernae festivitatis praeconia. [St. Andrew.] This is found in a Gradual written apparently in England in the 12th cent. (Reg. 2 B. iv., f. 138); in a ms. containing a collection of Sequences written c. 1199 (Calig. A. xiv., f. 88), both now in the British Museum, &c. Among Missals it is found in a Sarum, circa 1370, a Hereford circa 1370, and a York circa 1390, all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrews, the Magdeburg of 1480, the Angers of 1489, and other Missals, uniformly assigned to St. Andrew's day. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 695, and Kehrein, No. 401. It was tr. by the editors of the Hymnary as "King of Saints, O Lord Incarnate," and appeared therein in 1872. Another tr. is "The sacred honours of this festival," by C. B. Pearson in the Sarum Missal in English. 1868. [J. M.]

Sad and weary were our way. Julia

A. Elliott. [Sunday Evening.] This cento is composed of Mrs. Elliott's "Hail, thou bright and sacred morn" (see p. 479, i.), and her hymn, "Soon, too soon the sweet repose," which appeared in her husband's Ps. & Hys., 1835, in 2 st. of 6 l. The cento, in this form of 3 st., is in the Oberlin (Ohio) Manual of Praise, 1880. [J. J.]

Safe home, safe home in port.

St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [Rest in Jesus.] This hymn was given in Dr. Neale's Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 6 st. of 6 l., as "The Return Home. A cento from the Canon of St. John Climacos." In the Preface to the 1866 ed. of the Hys. of the E. Ch., he said, concerning it, "Art thou weary," and "O happy band of pilgrims," that they contained so little that is from the Greek that they ought not to have been included in that collection, and that in any future edition they would appear as an "Appendix." Dr. Neale did not live to carry out his intention; but the Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly has done so in the 4th ed. of that work. The most that can be said of the hymn, then, is that it is by J. M. Neale, based on the Greek of St. Joseph the Hymnographer. In St. Joseph's known works no Greek lines can be found which correspond with those in the English hymn. Dr. Neale's text is found in a large number of hymnals in Great Britain and America. [See Greek Hymnody, §§ xviii. 3, and xx.] [J. J.]

Safely through another week.

Newton. [Saturday Evening.] Appeared in R. Conyers's Ps. & Hys., 1774, No. 355, in 5 st. of 6 l.; and again in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 40. It is found in a few modern collections; and sometimes in an abbreviated and altered form, as in Kennedy, 1863, &c. [J. J.]

Saffery, Maria Grace, née Horsey, b. in 1773, and d. March, 1858, was daughter of the Rev. J. Horsey, of Portsea, and wife of the Rev. Mr. Saffery, pastor of the Baptist Church at Salisbury. Early in life she pub. a short poem and a romance, and in 1834, a volume entitled Poems on Sacred Subjects (Lond., Hamilton, Adams & Co.). Mrs. Saffery was a gifted and accomplished woman. At the suggestion of her husband, and of her son, the Rev. P. J. Saffery, she wrote many hymns for special occasions. She contributed ten to Dr. Leifchild's collection, and others to the Baptist Magazine and other periodicals. Some time before 1818 she wrote a hymn on Holy Baptism, "'Tis the Great Father we adore," which was printed in the Baptist New Selection, 1828, has since appeared in most Baptist hymn-books, and is now in C. U.; and sometimes as, "'Tis God the Father we adore." Her hymn of a Mother for her Child, "Fain, O my babe, I'd have thee know," is in the Comprehensive Rippon, 1844. Her Evening hymn, "God of the sunlight hours, how sad," from her Poems, &c., 1834, p. 183, and her Good Shepherd, "There is a little lonely fold," from the same, p. 172, are also in C. U.

Saget mir von keinem Lieben [Love to Christ.] Included as No. 2057 in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 (1865, No. 1829), in 9 st. of 4 l. Tr. as "Tell me not of earthly love," by Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 1862, p. 70 (1884, p. 232), repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870.

Saints, exalted high in glory. J. Gabb. [Heaven.] First pub. in his Hys. & Songs of the Pilgrim Life, No. xxxix., in 5 st. of 6 l., in 1871; and from thence, with slight alterations and the omission of st. v., into Snapp, Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 1014. Orig. text as above. In 1875 it was rewritten by the author for his Welburn Appendix, and given therein with his spirited tune "Selborne," No. 67, as "Saints, in highest realms of glory." In this form it is far superior to the original in construction, execution, and power. It forms, with the omission of st. ii., a good hymn for "All Saints Day." [J. J.]

Salisbury, James, M.A., was b. at Ashby-de-la-Zouch, May 15, 1821. He studied at the University of St. Andrews and completed his course for the Baptist ministry at Horton College. He has been successively pastor at Longford in Warwickshire, Barrowden in Rutland, Hugglescote and Hinckley in Leicestershire. To the Baptist Hyl., 1879, he contributed a tr. from the German, which is noted under Veni Creator Spiritus.

Salus aeterna, indeficiens mundi vita. [Advent.] This is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775, f. 167 b) written circa 1000; and also in a ms. of circa 1070, there (Douce 222, f. 82); in a Winchester book of the 11th cent. now in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (No. 473); in a 12th cent. Gradual in the British Museum (Reg. 2 B. iv. f. 56), &c. Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris, and a 14th cent. Sens in the British Museum; in a Sarum circa 1370, a Hereford circa 1370, and a York circa 1390, all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrews, and various French Missals. In the English Missals it is appointed for the first S. in Advent. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiae, 1852, p. 3; Daniel, ii. p. 185, and Kehrein, No. 1. All the verses end in a. Tr. as:—

Thou, the Saviour everlasting. By E. A. Dayman, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. Eternal health! Creation's ever new vitality. J. D. Chambers. 1866.
2. Life of the world unending. A. M. Morgan, in the Lyra Messianica, 1864, and his Gifts and Light, 1867. This begins with the words "Indeficiens mundi vita," in the opening stanza.
3. Eternal Health of man. By C. B. Pearson, in The Sarum Missal in English, 1869.
4. Thou for ever our salvation. By C. B. Pearson, in his Sequences from the Sarum Missal. 1871. [J. M.]

Salvation, O the joyful sound. I. Watts. [Praise for Salvation.] The hymn which passes under this first line is found in so many forms that it will be necessary to indicate not only the sources from whence its varying stanzas have been taken, but also to give the original text itself.

i. The original hymn appeared in Watts's Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707. Bk. ii., No. 88, in 3 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Salvation":—

1. "Salvation! O, the joyful sound,
'Tis pleasure to our ears;
A Sov'reign balm for every wound,
A cordial for our fears.
2. "Bury'd in sorrow and in sin,
At hell's dark door we lay;
But we arise by grace divine
To see a heav'nly day.
3. "Salvation! let the echo fly
The spacious earth around,
While all the armies of the sky
Conspire to raise the sound."

Amongst the collections which are in common use at the present day the following contain this text: the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns; Bk. of Praise Hymnal; Bap. Ps. & Hys.; New Cong.; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk.; Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. and Home; and others, which can be readily ascertained by reference to the text as above. It is also found in numerous American collections.

ii. About the year 1772 a cento appeared in the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll. as follows:—

- St. i. Watts's st. i. as above, with "What" for "'Tis."
- St. ii. Watts's st. iii. as above.
- St. iii. "Salvation! O Thou bleeding Lamb,
To Thee the praise belongs;
Salvation shall inspire our hearts,
And dwell upon our tongues."

To these were added the following st. :—

- "Blessing, honour, praise and power
Be unto the Lamb for ever:
Jesus Christ is our Redeemer, Hallelujah! Praise the Lord."

This arrangement is probably due to the Hon. Walter Shirley, who revised the Lady Huntingdon Coll. about 1774. It was exceedingly popular with the older compilers, and is found in many of their collections. In modern hymn-books it is found, amongst others, both in Great Britain and America, in:—the Wes. H. Bk.; Meth. N. Con. H. Bk.; Meth. S. S. H. Bk., &c., with the "Blessing" of the chorus changed to "Glory."

In addition, the following centos are in common use:—

- (a) St. i. "Salvation, O," &c. St. ii. "Buried," &c.
- St. iii. "Salvation let," &c. St. iv. "Salvation, O Thou." Chorus.

This arrangement is found in Mercer, Harland's Psalter, and others; and without the chorus in Windle's Coll. and Stowell's Ps. & Hys., &c.

(b) St. i. "Salvation! O," &c. St. ii. "Salvation! let," &c. St. iii. "Salvation! O Thou," &c. Chorus. Given in the Irish Church Hymnal, &c.

(c) St. i. "Salvation! O," &c. St. ii. "Buried," &c. St. iii. "Salvation! let," &c., and Chorus after each stanza. In Hy. Comp. Scottish Evang. Union Hym., &c.

(d) St. i. "Salvation! O," &c. St. ii. "Buried," &c. St. iii. "Salvation, O Thou," &c. St. iv. "Salvation let." Chorus. Given in Kemble's New Ch. H. Bk., 1873.

iii. In Dr. Kennedy's Hymno. Christ., 1863, No. 624, is a cento thus composed:—

St. i. "Salvation! O," &c. Dr. Watts. St. ii. "Outworn with sorrow," &c. Dr. Kennedy. St. iii. "Salvation! let," &c. Dr. Watts. St. iv. "Salvation! O Thou," &c. Lady Huntingdon's Coll. St. v. "Rejoice, rejoice," &c. Dr. Kennedy.

iv. Some curious and somewhat interesting centos are also found in the older collections: as Ash & Evans's Bap. Coll. (Bristol), 1769; Christ's Coll. (Dublin), 1829; Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833; and others. In one form or another, as an original hymn or as a cento, "Salvation! O the joyful sound," has had and still has a most extensive use. It has also been translated into several languages, sometimes one form of the text being used and then another. R. Bingham's tr. into Latin, "Salus, Salus, O vox laeta," in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, is a rendering of (a) as above. [J. J.]

Salvator mundi Domine. [Advent. Evening.] This is found in ms. of the 12th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2928 f. 110 b); in Sarum Hymnary, circa 1300 (Laud, Lat. 95, f. 134 b); and York Hymnary of the 13th cent. (Laud, Lat. 5, f. 165), both now in the Bodleian; in the Sarum, York, Hereford and Aberdeen Breviaries, &c. Also in Daniel, iv. p. 209, Mone, No. 32, and Card. Newman's Hy. Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Mone thinks it is of the 6th or 7th cent. It was appointed as a hymn at compline; but the seasons during which it was used vary considerably in the various Breviaries, ranging from Saturdays in Advent to the First S. in Lent; and again from Trinity to Christmas. The original was used at Eton, at the 8 P.M. daily service, until about 1830. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Blest Saviour, Lord of all. By Bp. Cosin, in his Col. of Private Devotions, 1627 ("The Approbation," Feb. 26, 1626 . . . Geo. London), which was reprinted several times, the 11th ed. by Rivington in 1838. In W. J. Blew's Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, No. 6, from Trinity Sunday to Advent, begins with st. ii. of this tr. slightly altered, as "Ruler of the day and night." In the Wellington College H. Bk., Bp. Cosin's tr. is altered to "O blessed Saviour, Lord of all."

2. Saviour of the world forlorn, This midnight, &c. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, 1848, p. 154. It is repeated in H. A. & M., 1861, the Hymnary, 1872, &c., but almost always with varying alterations in the text, and another doxology. In the 1875 ed. of H. A. & M. it begins, "O Saviour, Lord, to Thee we pray"; and in the 1863 ed. of the App. to the Hymnal N. as "Thee, Saviour of the world, we pray."

3. Saviour of man, Whose kindly care. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852, p. 358. In Skinner's Daily Service Hym., 1864, it is given as, "Saviour of men, Whose tender care."

4. Redeemer of the world, we pray. By R. F.

Littledale, made for and first pub. in the People's H., 1867, and signed "P. C. E."

Translations not in C. U.:—

Salve crux beata, salve. J. W. Petersen. [Glorying in the Cross.] Included in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 326, in 16 st. of 4 l., entitled "Joy of a soul rejoicing under the cross: Romans v. We glory in tribulations." Repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 410. It has passed into English through—

Glück im Kreuz vom ganzem Herzen. A free tr. by L. A. Götter, in 21 st. 1st pub. in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 329, and repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 402. In Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 432, st. vii., viii., ix. on special saints and martyrs are omitted. In Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 473, has st. i., ii., vi., xi., xii., xiii.—xv., xvii.—xix., xxi., altered and beginning "Kreuz, wir grüssen dich von Herzen." Tr. as:—

1. Welcome Cross and Tribulation. A tr. of st. i.—v., x., xiii., xiv., xv., xviii., as No. 694, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

2. Cross, reproach and tribulation. A free tr., based on the 1754 trs. of st. i., ii., iv., xv., xviii. This is No. 307 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 510). It is repeated in the Bible H. Bk., 1845, and in America in the Bk. of Hys., Boston, 1848; Plymouth Coll., 1855; Laudes Domini, 1884, and others.

3. Cross, we hail thy bitter reign. A good tr. from Bunsen, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 154. Two centos are in Kennedy, 1863, viz. No. 602 of st. i., ii., xi., xiii.—xv.; and No. 994 of st. xvii.—xix., xxi., beginning, "Up, brethren of the Cross, and haste." In Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1864, No. 650 consists of st. xi., xiii., xvii., beginning, "Pledge of our glorious home afar"; and this form beginning, "Sign of a glorious life afar," is in the Berwick Hym., 1886. [J. M.]

Salve festa dies toto venerabilis aevo. This line is taken from a poem by Fortunatus, which begins "Tempora florigero." Two centos, mainly from Fortunatus, are noted under Tempora florigero. The cento for Easter, which was that most widely used, begins "Salve . . . Qua Deus infernum vicit et astra tenet." In the Sarum Processional another cento was given for the Ascension, beginning "Salve . . . Qua Deus in coelum scandit et astra tenet." The York Processional has for the Ascension "Salve . . . Qua Deus in coelum scandit et astra tenet" (see Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and Daniel, ii. p. 181), but this takes nothing from Fortunatus save the opening stanza. Both in England and on the Continent the various Processionals contain a number of hymns which take the opening line from Fortunatus, but are otherwise quite different. Of these we note here :—

i. Salve . . . Qua Deus de coelo gratia fulsit humo. Whitsuntide. This is found in the York Processional of 1530 and is also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; in Daniel, ii. p. 182; and in Kehrein, No. 134. The tr. is :—

Hail! Festal Day! thro' ev'ry age divine, When God's fair grace from Heav'n on earth did shine. By T. A. Lacy, in the Altar Hyl., 1884, No. 42.

ii. Salve . . . Qua Deus ecclesiam dicat honore mmm. Corpus Christi. This is also in the York Processional of 1530; in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; in Daniel, ii. p. 183; and in Kehrein, No. 161. The tr. are :—

1. Hail! all glorious Feast, day hallowed for ever and ever. In the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, p. 63.

2. Hail! festal day! in every age divine. By G. Moultrie, in the Hymner, 1882, No. 80; and the Altar Hyl., 1884, No. 51.

iii. Salve . . . Qua sponso sponsa jungitur Ecclesia. Dedication of a Church. This is in Sarum Gradual, circa 1275 (Add. 12194, f. 88), in the British Museum; in a Sarum Processional there, circa 1390 (Harl. 2942); in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; in Daniel, ii. p. 184; and in Kehrein, No. 876. The tr. are :—

1. Hail, festal day! for ever adored. By W. A., in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 14.

2. Hail, festal day! Hail ever sacred tide. By G. Moultrie, in the Altar Hyl., 1884, No. 52. [J. M.]

Salve mi angelice, spiritus beate. Konrad of Gaming. [Angels.] A hymn of 64 lines given by Mone, No. 312, from a Munich ms. of the 15th cent., and entitled "A prayer concerning one's own (i.e. guardian) angel." Tr. by J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, Pt. ii., 1866, p. 101, as, "Hail, mine angel, pure and bright," and included in the People's H., 1867. [W. A. S.]

Salve mundi Domina. [B. V. M.] This is found in the Parnassus Marianus, Douai, 1624, p. 38, and there marked as taken from a Spanish book of Hours ("ex horis quibusdam valde antiquis in Hispania"). The same text is found in the Path to Heaven (ed. London, 1877, pp. 429-435), in recent eds. of Nakatenus's Coeleste palmetum (e.g. Mechlin, 1859, p. 236), and other modern Roman Catholic manuals of devotion. A portion beginning "Salve arca foederis" is in Daniel, iv. p. 342. F. W. E. Roth, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1887, Nos. 191-97, prints it from a Prayer Book written for the use of the Empress Maria Theresa of Austria, about 1760 (now in Darmstadt), where it occurs in the course of an office for the Immaculate Conception of the B. V. M. It has been tr. by E. Caswall in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 255, and in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 165, in 16 st. of 8 l., and thus divided for Divine Service :—

1. Matins. "Hail, Queen of the heavens."
2. Prime. "Hail, Virgin most wise."
3. Terce. "Hail, Solomon's throne."
4. Sext. "Hail, virginal mother."
5. None. "Hail, city of refuge."
6. Vespers. "Hail, dial of Achaz."
7. Compline. "Hail, mother most pure."
8. Commendation. "These praises and prayers."

These parts are repeated in the Crown of Jesus H. Bl., 1862, as separate hymns.

Other tr. are :—

1. Hail, Lady o' th' world Of heaven bright Queen. Primer, 1684.

2. Hail, Virgin, o'er all virgins bright. D. French, 1839. [J. M.]

Salve mundi salutare. St. Bernard of Clairvaux? [Passiontide.] The text of this sweet and beautiful poem, which has been mainly used by translators into English and German, is that found in St. Bernard's Opera Omnia, Paris, 1609, cols. 1655-56. Here it is entitled "A rhythmical prayer to any one [unum quodlibet] of the members of Christ, suffering and hanging on the Cross," and is divided into seven parts, viz. :—

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|---------------------|
| i. Salve mundi salutare. | To the Feet. |
| ii. Salve Jesu, Rex sanctorum. | " Knees. |
| iii. Salve Jesu, pastor bone. | " Hands. |
| iv. Salve Jesu, mmm bonus. | " Side. |
| v. Salve salus mea, Deus. | " Breast. |
| vi. Summi Regis cor aveto. | " Heart. |
| vii. Salve caput cruentatum. | " Face. |

Going a little further back, a somewhat similar text is in St. Bernard's Opuscula, Venice, 1495, where it is entitled "A divine and most devout prayer of the Abbot St. Bernard, which he made when an image of the Saviour, with outstretched arms, embraced him from the Cross." Here the last section is entitled "To the whole body," and begins, "Salve Jesu reverende." In a ms. of 1454, now in the Town Library at Nürnberg, there is a tr. into German entitled "St. Bernard's Lamentation," and beginning "Der welt heilant, nim min griezen," which is from the same text as that in the Opuscula; and here, after the third last stanza, is the note "As now St. Bernard had spoken these words with great earnestness of desire, the image [Marterbild] on the cross bowed itself, and embraced him with its wounded arms, as sure token that to it this prayer was most pleasing." The same German tr. is also in a 15th cent. ms. at Donaueschingen, with the title "This is the noble prayer of the devout doctor St. Bernard," &c. (see Wackernagel, ii., No. 454, and p. 1193).

Clearly, then, there is tradition at least as far back as 1450 (the tradition indeed seems to have come from Clairvaux), that the poem, as a whole, is by one author, and that this was St. Bernard. St. Bernard, however, d. in 1153, and no mss. of the poem have yet been found of earlier date than the 14th cent. The mss., moreover, present the greatest varieties of text and arrangement, so that it is exceedingly difficult to say whether any part of the poem is really by St. Bernard, or to discriminate what is his and what is not his. Doubtless the remark which Archbishop Trench made regarding other poems ascribed to St. Bernard, is true of this poem, viz., that the internal evidence is in favour of him as its author; and that if he did not write it, it is not easy to guess who could have written it. But in the present state of the evidence we cannot say much more. The conclusions of Mone and Daniel may be thus summed up :—

Mone, Nos. 123-126, gives parts 1-4, from mss. of the 14th and 15th cent. Into the variety of texts and forms shown in his notes we have not here space to enter. In these notes he gives a mass of various readings, and mentions that at least two of the 15th cent. mss. which he used had also parts 5-7. He also says, that in a 15th cent. ms. at Amorbach, the complete poem is entitled, "Prayer of Bonaventura, on saluting the Five Wounds of Christ." In his judgment, the bewildering variety of forms and texts makes it impossible to come to any definite conclusions as to authorship; but he thinks that the original poem was probably by a French writer.

Daniel, i., No. 207; ii., p. 359; and iv., pp. 224-231, gives the text of all the parts. In his notes in vol. iv. he expresses the opinion that only two of the parts, those to the Feet and to the Knees (1 and 2), are by St. Bernard. His principal reason for so thinking is, because the Lichenthal ms. of the 14th cent., quoted by Mone, has only these two, with the title "Lamentation on the Passion of the Lord." As Lichenthal was a Cistercian foundation, he holds that the Brethren there would be most likely to give the complete and correct text of a poem by the founder of their Order. He adds:—

"Whoever reads the first part attentively cannot help seeing that it refers to the whole frame of the suffering Christ; and that special mention is made of the Feet only for this reason,—that the poet places himself prostrate on his knees, at the foot of the cross, and embraces the Saviour's Feet. And as far as regards the Knees, they are only touched upon once in the second part, and that incidentally: the poem, as a whole, is clearly concerned with the Passion as a whole. Such a poem was composed by St. Bernard: the titles of the members are the work of a later age."

Daniel holds that the address to the Hands is later than St. Bernard; that next was added, probably in the 14th cent., the address to the Side; and that those to the Breast, to the Heart, and to the Face, were first added in the 15th cent.

Mone and Daniel thus agree in thinking that parts 5-7 are not by St. Bernard, but are of much later date, probably of the 15th cent. And, apparently, they would have agreed in saying that these additions were made in Germany. If their conclusions be correct, then the finest part of all, the "Salve caput crucentatum," must be by some one other than St. Bernard.

Other texts may be briefly noted. (1) The poem is found in five mss. of the 15th cent., at St. Gall (Nos. 473, 482, 485, 519, 521). (2) F. W. E. Roth, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1887, No. 141, gives the skeleton of a form in 7 parts (beginning, "Salve meum salutare"), the parts being respectively assigned to Matins, Prime, Terce, Sezt, None, Vespers, and Compline. He cites it as in a 15th cent. ms. manual of devotions, now at Darmstadt. (3) G. Milchsack, in his Hymni et Sequentiae, 1886, No. 110, gives a curious form of parts 5-7, from a 15th cent. broadsheet in the Wolfenbüttel Library. (4) Wackernagel, i., Nos. 186-192, gives the text, in 7 parts, from Mone, and the Paris ed., 1719, of St. Bernard's Opera. (5) Archbishop Trench, in his Sacred Latin Poetry, gives parts 1 and 7 from the Opera, 1719. (6) F. A. March gives, in his Lat. Hys., 1875, parts 1, 6, and 7. (7) The texts in Königsfeld, ii., p. 190; (8) Rambach, i., p. 275; and (9), Neale's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 122, are centos.

In J. M. Horst's Paradisus animæ Christianæ, 1644, the text is given in 7 parts, but very greatly altered, thus:—

- i. Jesu summae Rex virtutis.
- ii. Christe Jesu fons bonorum.
- iii. Christe Jesu Pastor bone.
- iv. O Salvator summe bonus.
- v. O Luz Mundi Christe Deus.
- vi. O divinum Cor aveto.
- vii. Caput spinis coronatum.

It may be added that the use of this noble poem seems to have been almost entirely confined to books of private devotion, and collections of sacred poetry. No parts or centos appear to have passed into Mediaeval Breviaries, Missals, Graduals, or Processionals; and the only portion we have been able to trace in similar modern books, is the greatly mutilated cento, "Jesu dulcis amor meus"

(p. 585, i.), included in recent editions of the Roman Breviary.

The whole poem has frequently been tr. into German; and various German versions have also been made from portions of it. The best known set of trs. into German are those by Paulus Gerhardt, which are free versions of all the seven parts, from the Latin text of 1609, thus:—

- i. Sei mir tausendmal gegrüßet.
- ii. Gegrüßet seist du meine Kron.
- iii. Sei wohl gegrüßet, guter Hirt.
- iv. Ich grüsse dich, du Frömmster Mann.
- v. Gegrüßet seist du, Gott mein Heil.
- vi. O Herz des Königs aller Welt.
- vii. O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden.

Of these Nos. 1, 5, 6, 7, have passed into English, as follows:—

i. Sei mir tausendmal gegrüßet. This fine but free tr. appeared in the 5th ed., Berlin, 1653, No. 496, and the Frankfurt ed., 1656, No. 150, of Crüger's Praxis pietatis melica, in 5 st. of 8 l. Included in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistl. Lieder, No. 16, in Bachmann's ed., No. 48, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 116. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Thousand times by me greeted. This is No. 221 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1751. Repeated in later eds. (1886, No. 96).

2. Ever by my love be owned. A tr. of st. i., iii., iv., by A. T. Russell, as No. 95 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

v. Gegrüßet seist du, Gott, mein Heil. A good tr., in 5 st. of 6 l., in the Frankfurt ed. 1656, of Crüger's Praxis, No. 154. Included in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt, No. 20; Bachmann's ed., No. 52; and in Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 81. The trs. are:—

(1) "All hail to Thee, my Saviour and my God." By Mrs. Stanley Carr, in her tr. of Willenhahn's Paul Gerhardt (ed. 1856, p. 116). (2) "All hail! my Saviour and my God." By R. Massie, in the British Herald, Feb. 1865, p. 18.

vi. O Herz des Königs aller Welt. A good tr., in 7 st. of 12 l., in the Frankfurt ed., 1656, of Crüger's Praxis, No. 155. Repeated in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt, No. 21; Bachmann's ed., No. 53; and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 258. It has been tr. as:—(1) "O Heart of Him who dwells on high." By R. Massie, in the British Herald, May 1866, p. 260.

vii. O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden. The trs. of this form are given in the separate note at p. 835, i., ii.

[J. M.]

The trs. of this poem from the Latin into English, in the various parts, as set forth above, are:—

i. Salve mundi salutare. The trs. of this part are:—

1. All the world's salvation hail. By Mrs. Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 161.

2. Jesus, hail, the world's salvation. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Hys., 1862, p. 83.

3. Life of the world, I hail Thee. By R. Palmer, in the N. York Christian Union, April 13, 1881, in 8 st. of 8 l. Of these, 3 sts. were given in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, No. 400.

ii. Salve Jesu [salve] Rex sanctorum. This has been tr. as:—

1. Jesu, King of saints, Whose Name. By T. Whytehead, in his Poems, 1848, p. 75. This pt. is represented in st. i.-iv. of the tr.: the remaining sts., v.-xii., being from Pt. i., beginning with line eleven, "Clavos pedum, plagas duras."

2. Hail, Thou King of saints, ascending. By H. Kynaston, made for and 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

3. Hail! Thou Monarch of confessors. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 158.

iii. Salve Jesu, pastor bone,

iv. Salve Jesu, summe bonus. This is tr. as:—

Jesu, good beyond comparing. By H. Kynaston; made for, and first pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

v. Salve salus mea, Deus.

vi. Summi Regis cor aveto. This is tr. as:—

Heart of Christ my King! I greet Thee. By E. A. Washburn, of N. Y., June, 1868, contributed to Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

vii. Salve caput crucentatum. This, the finest and most popular part of the poem, is tr. as:—

1. Hail that Head with sorrows bowing. By H. Alford, in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 34; his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 102; and the Sarum Hyl., 1868, No. 130. It is composed of ll. 1-5 and 40-50 of this part. See Daniel, i., No. 207.

2. Hail that Head all torn and wounded. By J. F. Thrupp, in his Ps. & Hys., 1853, No. 72; and the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, No. 377. It is slightly indebted to Dean Alford's tr. as above.

3. Hail, thou Head! so bruised and wounded. By Elizabeth Charles, née Rundle, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 159; and her Chronicles of the Schönberg-Cotta Family, 1862, p. 201. It is in a few collections. In the Hymnary, 1872, it is somewhat altered, and begins, "Hail, thou Head, so bruised and torn." In Thrupp's Coll., 1882, No. 173, is a cento thus composed:—st. i., from the Hymnary, ll. 4, 6, 10, Mrs. Charles, ll. 3, 5, 7, 8, 9, Preb. Thring; st. ii., ll. 1, 2, 7, 8, 9, Mrs. Charles, ll. 3, 4, 5, 6, 10, Preb. Thring; st. iii., ll. 1, 3, 4, 8, Mrs. Charles, ll. 2, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, Preb. Thring; st. iv. and v., ll. 1-8, Preb. Thring, ll. 9, 10, Mrs. Charles. This is a very fine combined tr. of this part of the poem. It has been specially set to music by Sir John Stainer; Lond., Novello & Co.

4. O sacred Head, surrounded. By Sir H. W. Baker. This tr., although it follows the metre of the German tr. (see above), was made direct from the Latin, and 1st pub. in H. A. & M., 1861. It is in the new ed., 1875; the Irish Church Hyl., 1873, &c.

5. Head, all hail, with gore drops scattered. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Hys., 1862, p. 85.

In addition to these, two hymns by H. Alford, which were based on St. Bernard, appeared in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, as "Glory to Thy Father's face," and "Thou Saviour who Thyself didst give." The text, in 10 sts., as given in Daniel, ii., p. 359, has also been tr. by D. T. Morgan, in his Hys. of the Latin Church, 1871, p. 76; and the 1880 ed., p. 97, as, "Saviour of the world, to Thee, Blessed One [Jesu, low] I bow the knee."

The Poem, as arranged in Horst's Paradisus animae Christianae, 1644, as above, has been tr., probably by W. J. Copeland (see p. 942, i.), in Dr. Pusey's tr. of Horst; and, again, by Canon Oakeley, in his tr. of the same, 1850, as follows:—

- | | |
|--|----------|
| i. Jesu summae Rex virtutis. | |
| 1. Jesu, Prince of Life and Power. | Pusey. |
| 2. Jesu, great King of saving wealth. | Oakeley. |
| ii. Christe Jesu, fons bonorum. | |
| 1. Jesu, Fount of endless pleasure. | Pusey. |
| 2. Christ Jesu, Fount of blessings rife. | Oakeley. |
| iii. Christe Jesu, Pastor bone. | |
| 1. Gracious Jesu, Shepherd good. | Pusey. |
| 2. O Jesu Christ, Thou Shepherd good. | Oakeley. |

iv. O Salvador summe bonus.

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|----------|
| 1. Saviour, Whose all-pitying care. | Pusey. |
| 2. Saviour, supremely excellent. | Oakeley. |

v. O Lux mundi Christe Deus.

- | | |
|---|----------|
| 1. Glory of the heavens above. | Pusey. |
| 2. O Christ, my God, earth's beacon-fire. | Oakeley. |

vi. O divinum Cor aveto.

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|----------|
| 1. Holy heart, divinely sweet. | Pusey. |
| 2. All hail, divinest heart, to Thee. | Oakeley. |

vii. Caput spinis coronatum.

- | | |
|---|----------|
| 1. Ah, that Head with sharp thorns crowned. | Pusey. |
| 2. All bleeding with the tangled thorn. | Oakeley. |

Although, taken as a whole, considerable attention has been given to this poem in its various forms, yet some of the Parts have suffered from neglect. This should be remedied by an able translator. [J. J.]

Salve, O sanctissime. [St. John Baptist.]

A hymn of 40 lines given by Mone, No. 650, from a ms. of 1439, at Karlsruhe, and a 15th cent. ms. at Mainz. It has been tr. by G. Moultrie in his Hys. and Lyrics, &c., 1867, p. 215, as "Hail, O thou of women born." Also in the People's H., 1867, and signed "M." [W. A. S.]

Salve regina. Hermannus Contractus (?).

[B. V. M.] This famous antiphon has been attributed to a great variety of authors. The opinion of Durandus (d. 1296), in his Rationale, was, that it was by Petrus of Monsoro (Petrus Martinez de Mosoncio), Bp. of Compostella, who d. circa 1000. It has also been ascribed to Adhemar, Bp. of Podium (Le Puy), who d. 1098; to Bernard, Archbishop of Toledo, who d. 1124; to Anselm, Bp. of Lucca, who d. 1086; to St. Bernard, of Clairvaux, who d. 1153, &c. Trittenheim (d. 1516) and others think that it was by Hermannus Contractus (d. 1054); and this seems, on the whole, the most probable opinion. In any case it must have been known by 1100, for there are sermons on the first part of it (down to valle), by Bernard of Toledo (see Migne's P. P. Lat., vol. 184, col. 1059). There is also a Meditatio upon it, which Migne, vol. 184, col. 1078, gives as by Anselm of Lucca; and at vol. 149, col. 583, among the Opuscula spuria ascribed to St. Anselm of Lucca. The text of the antiphon, which is embodied in the Meditatio, is probably the original form, and reads thus:—

"Salve, regina misericordiae, vita, dulcedo, et spes nostra, salve. Ad te clamamus exules filii Evae. Ad te suspiramus, gementes et flentes in hac lachrymarum valle. Eia ergo, advocata nostra, illos tuos misericordes oculos ad nos converte, et Jesum, benedictum fructum ventris tui, post hoc exilium ostende. O clemens, O pia, O dulcis Maria."

Almost the same text is given by Daniel, ii., p. 321, from a Munich ms. of the 13th cent., &c.; and by Schubiger, in his Sängerschule St. Gallens, 1858, p. 85, from the Einsiedeln ms., No. 33, written about 1300. So in a Horae, in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc. 104, f. 122), written in England about 1340, where, however, it begins, "Salve regina, mater misericordiae": and ends, "O dulcis Virgo Maria." This last text is that found in the Roman Breviary (e.g. Modena, 1480, f. 512, and later eds.), where it is appointed for use at Compline, from the First Vespers of Trinity Sunday, up to None on the Saturday before Advent Sunday. According to tradition, the concluding part of the antiphon, "O clemens, O pia, O dulcis Maria," was first added from an ejaculation by St. Bernard of Clairvaux, in the cathedral at Speyer (Spires); but, as will be seen above, these words are in the earliest forms of the text. [See Various.]

In mediæval times, this antiphon became a great favourite, and in many churches money was left to provide for having it regularly sung. It was much used in Italy by the fishermen and sailors, when at sea, in stormy weather. One result of its popularity was, that a large number of hymns were written upon it, embodying the words of the antiphon in their various stanzas. Mone, Nos. 487-495, gives nine examples, more or less complete, from mss. of the 14th and 15th cents.; and a tenth is in Daniel, ii., p. 323. The fine plain-song melody (given by Schubiger as above), has also been ascribed to Hermannus Contractus; and the antiphon has been set to music by very many composers since his day. Luther spoke very sharply of the veneration of the B. V. M. in this antiphon, and of the honour paid to it by the ringing of the church bells while it was being sung. A Protestant version, beginning "Salve Rex æternæ misericordiæ," was in use at Erfurt in 1525. In the Appx. to the Roman Catholic Hymnarius, pub. at Sigismundst., in 1524, there is an evangelical version which reads, e.g. :—

"Salve Jesu Christe, misericordia, vita . . . Advocate noster . . . et teipsum benedictum filium Dei Patris nobis . . . O clemens, O pie, O dulcis Jesu fili Mariæ." (See Bäumker, i., p. 63, and ii., p. 70.)

The Roman Breviary form of the text has been tr. as :—

1. Mother of mercy, hail, O gracious [gentle] Queen. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 40; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 23. This is in use in a few Roman Catholic collections for missions and schools.

Other trs. are :—

1. Hayle Quene, mother of mercye. Sarum Primer, 1538.
2. All hail, O Quene mother of mercie. Primer, 1599.
3. All hail, O Quene mother of Mercie. Primer, 1615.
4. Hail to the Queen who reigns above. Primer, 1685.
5. Hail, happy queen; thou mercy's parent, hail. Primer, 1706.
6. Hail, queen, we hail thee. J. R. Beste, 1849.
7. Hail, holy queen, mother of mercy. Prose tr. in the Primer, 1687, and The Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862. [J. M.]

Salvete Christi vulnera. [Passiontide.] This is the hymn at Lauds in the office of the Most precious Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ (see "Ira justa Conditoris"). It is found in the Roman Breviary, Venice, 1798, Verna, Appendix, p. 60; and is repeated in later eds. of the Roman Breviary, and in Daniel, ii. p. 355. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. [] wounds! which through eternal years. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 87, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 49. It is in a few collections in full, and also altered and abridged to 5 st. in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, as "How clearly all His torturing wounds."
2. Hail! holy wounds of Jesus, hail. By H. N. Oxenham, in his The Sentence of Kæres, and Other Poems, 1854, p. 190; the 1860 Appendix to the H. Noted; Lyra Eucharistica, 1863; and O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

Translation not in C. U. :—

- All hail to you, sweet Jesu's wounds. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Salvete clavi et lancea. [Passiontide.]

This is the hymn at Matins in the Office of the lance and nails of Our Lord Jesus Christ. This Office has been added to the Roman Breviary since 1740, and is now appointed to be said as a Greater Double on the Friday after the 1st S. in Lent at Matins; the 2nd part of the hymn, "Tinctam ergo Christi sanguine" being appointed for Lauds. It is in the Roman Breviary, Bologna, 1827, Pars Verna Supplement, p. 267; and is repeated in later eds. of the Roman Breviary. [J. M.]

Translation in C. U. :—

Hail spear and nails! ere while despised. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 76, the tr. of "Tinctam ergo Christi sanguine," as "O turn those blessed points, all bath'd," being on p. 77, and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, both on p. 43. In the 1863 ed. of the Appendix to the H. Noted, No. 244, is composed of the two parts, with the doxology repeated once only. Pt. ii. for Lauds, "O turn those blessed points, all bathed," is in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. Hail, holy nails, hail, blessed spear ("Salvete clavi"). J. Wallace, 1874.
2. Turn on me then your pointed dart ("Tinctam ergo"). J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Sanctæ Syon adsunt encoenia. [Dedication of a Church.] Dr. Neale, in his Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 252, gives this from the Drontheim Missal of 1519; and his text has been repeated by Daniel, v. p. 215, and Kehren, No. 877. Tr. as :—

1. Holy Zion's feast is spread. By P. Onslow. Appeared in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 49, and again in the St. Margaret's Hymnal [East Grinstead], 1875.
2. Fair Zion's feast is ready. By G. Moultrie, given in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "D. P.," and again in the translator's Esponsals of St. Dorothea, &c., 1870, p. 52.
3. Glad Zion's halls are sounding. By P. Onslow, in the Lyra Mystica, 1865, p. 86. [W. A. S.]

Sancte Dei pretiose, protomartyr Stephane. [St. Stephen.] The original form of this hymn is in 3 st. of 3 lines (ii. "Funde preces," iii. "Gloria et honor"). This form is in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii., f. 36; Harl. 2961, f. 229); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham. (B. iii. 32, f. 14.) Also in the Sarum, Hereford, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. Sometimes used for the Invention of St. Stephen. The original form is also printed by Mone, No. 1158, from an 11th cent. ms. at Stuttgart, &c. The text in Daniel, i., No. 221, contains six additional stanzas, probably of North German origin, and of much later date. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Saint of God, elect and precious. By J. M. Neale, of the 3 st. form of the text, in the H. Noted, 1852; the Hymner, 1882, &c.
2. Saint of God, beloved Stephen. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, Christmas, No. 18, and in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 12. This, in 6 st. of 6 l., is from the text of Daniel abridged.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. Holy Stephen! Protomartyr. J. D. Chambers, 1857, from the text of Daniel.
2. First martyr, Stephen, this is he. J. W. Hewett, 1859, from the early form in 3 st. [J. J.]

Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia.

St. Notker. [Whitsuntide.] This has frequently been ascribed to King Robert of France, but apparently without ground. It is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775, f. 133 b), apparently written circa 1000; in a Winchester book of the 11th cent. now in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 473; in two mss. of the 12th cent. in the British Museum (Add. 11,669 early 12th, f. 51 b; Calig. A. xiv. c. 1199, f. 62); in the Prüm Gradual, circa 1000, and the Echternach Gradual of the 11th cent., both in the Bibl. Nat. Paris; in four mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 376, 378, 380, 381; in a ms. of the end of the 10th cent. at Einsiedeln (121, p. 487). Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris, and a 14th cent. in the British Museum; in a Sarum circa 1370, a Hereford circa 1370, and a York circa 1390, all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrews, the Magdeburg of 1480, and many other Missals, even in Italy and Spain. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 197; Daniel, ii. p. 16, and Kehrein, No. 124. Tr. as:—

Come, O Holy Ghost, within us. By C. S. Calverley, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. The grace of the Holy Ghost be present with us. J. M. Neale, a prose tr. in his Mediæval Hys., 2nd ed., 1863.
2. May the Holy Spirit's grace. By C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868.
3. Now may the Holy Spirit's grace. By C. B. Pearson in his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871.
4. O Holy Spirit, grant us grace, To make our hearts, &c. By E. H. Plumptre, in his Things New and Old, 1884. [J. M.]

Sancti venite, corpus Christi sumite. [Holy Communion.] This is found in the Antiphonarium Benchorense, an antiphonary written 680-691 at the Monastery of Bangor, County Down, Ireland, and now in the Ambrosian Library at Milan. The ms. has been printed in L. A. Muratori's Opere, vol. xi., pt. iii. Arezzo, 1770, and the hymn in question is there at p. 228 as "a hymn when the priests communicate." This title explains st. i., ll. 3, 4, "Sanctum bibentes, Quo redempti, sanguinem." "It has," says Neale, "a certain pious simplicity about it which renders it well worthy of preservation." Its original use was probably to be sung as a Communio in the Mass (see Communio, p. 255, i.). The printed text is also in Rambach, i. p. 132; Daniel, i. No. 160, and iv. p. 109; and Büssler, No. 61. [J. M.]

Translation in C. U. :—

Draw nigh, and take the Body of the Lord. By J. M. Neale, pub. in his Mediæval Hymns, 1851, p. 13, in 10 st. of 2 l. It passed into the People's H., 1867 (7 st.); H. A. & M., 1868 and 1875 (in full); the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871 (in full); in others in 6 st. only, and in most cases with very slight alterations. In the Hy. Comp. it is altered as "Come, take by faith the Body of your Lord." In his annotated ed. of the Hy. Comp. Bp. Bickersteth has this note on his amended text:—

"The Editor has ventured to modify his [Neale's] first line 'Draw nigh and take the Body of the Lord,' which contains no thought answering to Sancti, by introducing the words 'by faith'; and while thus adhering more closely to the original Latin, he has expressed the teaching of our Church, 'The Body and Blood of Christ are verily and indeed taken and received by the faithful in the Lord's Supper' (Catechism). And again, 'The means whereby the body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper is faith (Article xxviii.)'"

In addition to this alteration Bp. Bickersteth has several others, all of which, with one exception, deal more with the rhythm of the lines than with doctrine. The exception is st. x., which reads in the Latin:—

"Alpha et Omega Ipse Christus dominus, Venit venturus Judicare homines."

In Neale:—

"Alpha and Omega, to whom shall bow
All nations at the Doom, is with us now."

In the Hy. Comp.:—

"O Judge of all, our only Saviour Thou,
In this Thy Feast of love be with us now."

[J. J.]

Sanctorum meritis inclita gaudia.

[Common of Martyrs.] This hymn is frequently referred to by Hineman in his "De una et non trina Deitate," 857; but he distinctly says he could not discover its author. It is found in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi., f. 63 b; Vesp. D. xii., f. 104; Harl. 2961 f. 247 b; Add. 30,851 f. 152 b); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo Saxon Ch., 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 39). Also in a ms. of the 10th cent. at Bern, No. 455; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (No. 391, p. 272); in the St. Gall mss., 413 and 414, of the 11th cent. It is in the Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries—the Sarum use being at 1st Vespers and at Matins in the common of many martyrs. The printed text is also in Daniel i. No. 170, and iv. p. 139, giving also the text of the Roman Breviary, 1632; Wackernagel i. No. 125; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms.; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. The triumphs of the martyr'd saints. By Bp. R. Mant, in his Ancient Hys., &c., 1837, p. 76, and 1871, p. 133. It is given in several collections, including Kennedy, 1863; the People's H. 1867; the Hymnary, 1872, &c.
2. The triumphs of the saints, Blessed for evermore. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 39. In the enlarged ed., 1854, it was given as "The merits of the saints," and this latter reading is usually given in modern hymn-books. In later editions of the H. Noted the original reading was restored.

3. Let us fam'd acts and triumphs sing. Primer. 1685.
4. When bleeding Heroes fill the tuneful Quire. Primer. 1706.
5. Sing we the peerless deeds of martyr'd saints. E. Caswall. 1849.
6. Brethren, the praise of the holy ones waken. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.
7. The triumphs of the saints, Their joys beyond compare. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

8. The wondrous joys which crown the saints. J. W. Hewett. 1859.

9. Let us proclaim the Martyrs' bliss. J. Wallace. 1874.

The variations in the Roman Brev. text from the older form are very slight. The trs. by Neale, Blew, Chambers, and Hewett, are from the older form; the rest follow the Roman Brev. form. There is an anonymous imitation rather than a tr. of the Latin text in Fallow's Hys. for Pub. and Private Worship, 1847; and again, with the addition of a doxology, in Johnston's English Hymn., 1852, beginning "Blest Lord, the crown of great reward." [J. J.]

Sandys, George, s. of Dr. Edwin Sandys, Archbishop of York, was b. at Bishophorpe Palace, York, in 1577, and educated at St. Mary Hall and Corpus Christi College, Oxford. For some years he devoted himself to travelling in Europe and Asia, and pub. in 1615 a curious account of his experiences. After visiting America, where he was for a time the Treasurer of the British Colony of Virginia, he became, on his return, a Gentleman of the Privy Chamber of Charles I. He d. at Bexley Abbey, Kent, March 1643. His publications included his Traveller's Thanksgiving; the prose work on his travels, A Relation of a journey begun in 1610, &c., 1615; a tr. of the Metamorphoses of Ovid; and Grotius's tragedy of Christ's Passion. His productions which most nearly concern hymnology were:—

(1) A Paraphrase upon the Psalms of David, and upon the Hymns dispersed throughout the Old and New Testaments. London: at the Bell in St. Paul's Churchyard. M.DCXXVI.

(2) A Paraphrase upon the Divine Poems by George Sandys. London: at the Bell in St. Paul's Churchyard. M.DCXXVIII. This volume contained the Paraphrase of the Psalms, paraphrases upon Job, Ecclesiastes, the Lamentations of Jeremiah, and the Songs collected out of the Old and New Testaments.

(3) His paraphrase of The Song of Solomon was pub. in 1642. The most available form of these works is the Rev. R. Hooper's reprint of Sandys's Poems, in Smith's Library of Old Authors.

A few only of Sandys's versions of the Psalms are found in modern hymn-books, although they were set to music by Henry Lawes. His influence, however, upon later paraphrasers was considerable. [See Psalters, English, § x.] The following, together with a few others annotated under their respective first lines, are in C. U. :—

1. How are the Gentiles all on fire. Ps. ii.
2. Lord, for Thee I daily cry. Ps. lxxvii.
3. My God, Thy suppliant hear. Ps. lxxxvii.
4. Praise the Lord enthroned on high. Ps. cl.
5. Sing the Great Jehovah's praise. Ps. lxxvi.
6. Thou, Lord, my witness art. Ps. cxxxi.
7. Thou who art [dwellst] enthroned above. Ps. cclii.
8. You, who dwell above the skies. Ps. cclviii.

These paraphrases as in C. U. are in the form of centos. [J. J.]

Sankey, Ira David, was b. in Edinburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1840, of Methodist parents. About 1856 he removed with his parents to Newcastle, Pennsylvania, where he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Four years afterwards he became the Superintendent of a large Sunday School in which he commenced his career of singing sacred songs and solos. Mr. Moody met with him and heard him sing at the International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, at Indianapolis, and through Mr. Moody's persuasion he joined him in his work at Chicago. After some two or three years' work in Chicago, they sailed for England on June 7, 1872, and held their first meeting at York a short time afterwards, only eight persons being present. Their subsequent work in Great Britain and America is well known. Mr. Sankey's special duty was the singing of sacred songs and solos at religious gatherings, a practice which was in use in America for some time before he adopted it. His volume of Sacred Songs and Solos is a compilation from various sources, mainly American and mostly in use before. Although known as Sankey and Moody's Songs, only one song, "Home at last, thy labour done" (see Various), is by Mr. Sankey, and not one is by Mr. Moody. Mr. Sankey supplied several of the melodies. The English edition of the Sacred S. & S. has had an enormous sale; and the work as a whole is very popular for Home Mission services. The Songs have been translated into several languages. [J. J.]

Santeuil, Baptiste de, a younger brother of Claude, and J. B. de Santeuil, was the author of two hymns in the Paris Brev. of 1680:—"O vos unanimes Christiadum chori," and "Adeste sancti coelites." These were repeated in his brother's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, and the 2nd ed. of the same, 1698. [G. A. C.]

Santeuil, Claude de, elder brother of Jean-Baptiste de Santeuil (see below), was b. in Paris, Feb. 3, 1628. He became a secular ecclesiastic of the Seminary of St. Magloire, Paris, whence he was also known under the Latinized form of his name as Santolius Maglorianus. He d. Sept. 29, 1684. Like his brother, he was a good writer of Latin poetry, and some hymns by him were included in the Cluniac Brev., 1686, and the Paris Breviaries of 1680 and 1736. Some of these hymns have been translated into English, and are in C. U. in G. Britain. [See Index of Authors and Translators.] [G. A. C.]

Santeuil, Jean-Baptiste de, was b. in Paris of a good family on May 12, 1630. He was one of the regular Canons of St. Victor, at Paris, and, under the name of Santolius Victorinus, was distinguished as a writer of Latin poetry. Many of his hymns appeared in the Cluniac Brev. 1686, and the Paris Brevs. 1680 and 1736, and several have been translated into English, and are in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [See Index of Authors and Translators.] He was very jocose in disposition and singular in his habits. When on a journey he d. at Dijon, Aug. 5, 1697. His Hymni Sacri et Novi were pub. at Paris in 1689, and again, enlarged, in 1698. [G. A. C.]

Santolius Maglorianus. [Santeuil, Claude de.]

Santolius Victorinus. [Santeuil, Jean-Baptiste de.]

Sass, George Herbert, b. in Charleston, South Carolina, Dec. 24, 1845, where he has resided most of his life. He has contributed to the press a number of religious poems under the nom de plume of "Barton Grey." These have not come into use as hymns for congregational purposes. The following are given in the Schaff & Gilman Library of Religious Poetry, 1881.

1. Comes it again, the sweet and solemn hour? Christmas Carol.
2. Once more through storm and calm the changeful hours. The Two Advents.
3. Out of dust and darkness, comes. Easter. Follow Me.
4. Soul, o'er life's sad ocean faring.

[J. J.]

Sat Paule, sat terris datum. Guil-laume de la Brunetière. [Conversion of St. Paul.] Appeared in the Sens Brev., 1726, and the Paris Breviary, 1680, as the hymn at Matins and second Vespers on the 30th June. It is also in other French Breviaries and in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. It has been tr. as:—

1. Enough, O Paul, enough, and now. I. Williams. 1839.
2. Enough, O Paul, on earth no more. J. D. Chambers. 1866.

I. Williams's tr. has been in C. U., but that by Chambers has not passed into the hymn-books.

[J. J.]

Saturatus ferculis. [Holy Communion.] A hymn in 15 st., and entitled "A giving of thanks after Holy Communion," is quoted by Mone, No. 232, from a Reichenau ms. of the 14th cent., a Reichenau ms. of the 15th cent., and a Munich ms. of the 15th cent. It is also contained in the St. Gall ms., No. 309, of the 15th cent. The Munich ms. contains the hymns of the Carthusian prior Konrad, of Gaming, in Lower Austria. As the Reichenau mss. agree in differing from the text of the Munich it is probable that Konrad only made a few alterations on an older hymn. Tr. as:—

1. Fed with dainties from above. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 233; and the Altar Hymnal, 1884.
2. With choicest dainties nourished. By R. F. Little-dale, in the Altar Manual, 1863; and again in the People's H., 1867, No. 182, and signed "D. L.," i.e. Dr. Littledale.

[W. A. S.]

Saviour, again to Thy dear Name we raise. J. Ellerton. [Evening.] Written in 1866, in 5 st. of 4 l., for the festival of the Malpas, Middlewich, and Nantwich Choral Association of that year, and adapted to the tune "St. Agnes," in Thorne's Coll. Of this hymn there are the following texts:—

1. The original in 5 st. of 4 l. See No. 4.
2. Mr. Ellerton's revised and abridged text for the App. to H. A. & M., 1868, in 4 st. This is the most popular form of the hymn, and is in extensive use.
3. The same text, with st. ii. and iii. transposed, and st. iii., l. 1, changed from:—
"Grant us Thy peace, Lord, thro' the coming night," to,
"Grant us Thy peace through the approaching night," and included in Church Hymns, 1871. The use of this form of the hymn is limited.
4. The form given in Thring's Coll., 1882, in 5 st., the most delicate, beautiful, and tender of all. It is the original text, with the exceptions that st. iii. was originally st. ii.; and st. ii. originally st. iii., and the first line of st. ii., reads, "Grant us Thy peace, Lord, through the coming night."

The success which has attended this hymn is very great. No composition of Mr. Ellerton's has attained to anything approaching it in extensiveness of use in Great Britain and America. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, it begins, "Again to Thee, our guardian God, we raise."

[J. J.]

Saviour, bless the word to all. T.

Kelly. [For a blessing on the Word.] Appeared in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1806, in 3 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1853, No. 434). It is in C. U. in this form. In the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, it is altered to "Father, bless Thy word to all." This text is repeated in a few collections; and, sometimes, as in the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, with C. Wesley's stanza, "Sing we to our God above," as a doxology. [J. J.]

Saviour, blessed Saviour. G. Thring. [Pressing Onwards.] Written in 1862, and 1st pub. in his Hymns, Congregational and Others, 1866, p. 36, in 8 st. of 8 l. In 1868 it was repeated in the Appendix to H. A. & M., with alterations by the author and the compilers of H. A. & M., in st. v., vii., and viii. When included in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, Prebendary Thring added the stanza "Farther, ever farther." This full form of the text was repeated in his Hys. and Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882. It has been specially set to music by Sir H. S. Oakeley, the Rev. J. Francis, J. D. Farrer, and others. In several American hymn-books it is broken up as:—

1. Brighter still, and brighter. In the Presbyterian Hymnal, Philadelphia, 1874, and others.
2. Clearer yet, and clearer. In the Songs of Christian Praise, N. Y., 1880.
3. Nearer, ever nearer. In Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.

Through these various forms the use of this hymn is extensive. It is well suited for a processional.

[J. J.]

Saviour, breathe an evening blessing. J. Edmeston. [Evening.] Appeared in his Sacred Lyrics, 1st set, 1820, p. 4, in 2 st. of 8 l., and thus introduced "At night their short evening hymn, 'Jesu Mahaxaroo' = 'Jesus forgive us,' stole through the camp.—Salte's Travels in Abyssinia." One of the earliest to adopt it for congregational use was Bickersteth, who included it in his Christian Psalmody, 1833. It was repeated in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and others, until it has taken rank with the first Evening Hymns in the English language. It is found in the hymnals of all English-speaking countries, and usually in its correct and complete form. In the Hym. Comp., revised ed., 1876, Bp. Bickersteth has added a third stanza of 8 l., beginning "Father, to Thy holy keeping," and in Thring's Coll., 1882, the editor has re-arranged the hymn, omitted the lines concerning sudden death, and added a fourth stanza in 4 l., beginning "Be Thou nigh, should death o'ertake us," in which the same thought is contained in a milder form. It has been tr. into several languages. The Latin rendering, by R. Bingham, in his Hymno. Christi. Lat., 1871, is "Vespere, Salvator, spires benedicta, priusquam." In Martineau's Hys., 1840 and 1873, the opening line is changed to "Holiest, breathe an evening blessing." Orig. text in the H. Comp., st. i., ii. [J. J.]

Saviour, by Thy sweet compassion. Ada Cambridge. [In Affliction.] Pub. in her Hymns on the Litany, 1865, No. 17, in 7 st. of 8 l., and based upon the words "In all time of our tribulation . . . Good Lord, deliver us." It is given in its full and unaltered form in the Lyra Britannica, 1867, p. 120. When used in public worship it is usually abbreviated. [J. J.]

Saviour divine, we know Thy name. P. Doddridge. [Justification.] 1st pub. in Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 132, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Christ, the Lord our Righteousness." Also in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 150. It is in C. U. sometimes in an abridged form, and also forms part of a cento in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 417, where st. i. is the first stanza of this hymn, and st. ii.-v. are st. iii.-vi. of I. Watts's "Lord, we confess our numerous faults," from his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 111. [J. J.]

Saviour, I lift my trembling eyes. [Jesus, the Guide and Advocate.] Lord Selborne's note on this cento in his Book of Praise, 1862, No. lviii., is:—

"This hymn as here given [in 3 st. of 4 l.] was introduced into the Marylebone Collection (1851). [Gurney, J. H.] from a poem of some length, published in 1831, in The Iris, a volume edited by the Rev. Thomas Dale and signed 'M. G. T.']. The text (which will be found at page 139 of that volume) is unaltered, except that the first word, 'Saviour,' has been brought down from a preceding line, in substitution for the words, 'And then,' so as to give to these stanzas an independent beginning."

These stanzas have passed into several collections, and are worthy of greater notice than they have received. We have seen the signature "M. G. T." written out as "M. G. Thompson," but we have not authority to say that this is correct. Another cento from the same poem appeared in the 3rd ed. of The Spirit of the Psalms, by H. F. Lyte, 1853, in 5 st. of 4 l., beginning "Saviour, I think upon that hour." This, reduced to 4 st., is in the Baptist Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, and other American collections. [J. J.]

Saviour, I Thy word believe. A. M. Toplady. [Christ dwelling in Man.] Appeared in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1759, No. 8, in 6 st. of 8 l., and based upon the words "He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." John xiv. 17. It is also in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, &c., 1860. In some American collections, including the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, st. iii., iv., are given as "Blessed Comforter, come down," as a hymn for Whitsuntide. [J. J.]

Saviour, like a Shepherd, lead us. [The Good Shepherd.] The authorship of this hymn is a matter of some doubt. The earliest source to which we have traced it is Miss D. A. Thrupp's Hymns for the Young, 4th ed. 1836, in 4 st. of 6 l., where it is unsigned. We next find it in the Rev. W. Carus Wilson's Children's Friend for June, 1838 (p. 144), again in 4 st. of 6 l., and signed "Lyte." In the January number of the same magazine there is a National Hymn in the metre of "God save the Queen" ("Lord, Thy best blessing shed"), which is signed "H. Lyte," and dated from "Brixham" (see Lyte, H. F., p. 706, i.). "Saviour, like a Shepherd, lead us" appears again in 1838, in Mrs. Herbert Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry for the use of Infant and Juvenile Schools, No. 171; and again in the edition of 1846, but without signature. As in that collection several hymns and poems are signed "D. A. T.," it is clear that Mrs. Mayo did not regard the hymn as Miss Thrupp's production. The most that we can say is that the evidence is decidedly against Miss Thrupp, and somewhat uncertain with regard to Lyte as the writer of the hymn. Its use is extensive both in G. Britain and America. [W. T. B.]

Saviour of sinful men. C. Wesley. [Meeting of Friends.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, in 12 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 458.) In its full form it is not in C. U., but divided, or broken up into centos, it is found in modern hymn-books in the following forms:—

1. Saviour of sinful men. This, in 6 st., was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 470, and continued in later editions. It is also in other collections.

2. Guardian of sinful men. In 6 st. of 4 l. in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, and his Hymns, &c., 1873.

3. Lord of the souls above. This in 6 st. of 4 l. also appeared in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, and 1873. The text is altered from the original.

4. What a mighty change. In 3 st. of 8 l. in the American Meth. Episcopal Hymns, 1849.

Concerning the Wes. H. Bk. arrangement of the hymn Mr. G. J. Stevenson has some pleasing reminiscences in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 304. The centos in Martineau's Hymns are specially adapted for Death and Burial. [J. J.]

Saviour of the nations, come. B. H. Kennedy. [Advent.] 1st pub. in his Hymnologia Christiana, 1863, No. 26, in 11 st. of 4 l., divided into two parts, Pt. ii. beginning, "Zion, at thy shining gates." In 1867 Dean Alford gave st. iii., v., viii.-x., as "Come, Lord Jesus, take Thy rest," in his Year of Praise, No. 26. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, No. 73 is Pt. ii. from the Hymno. Christ. as above. [J. J.]

Saviour, round Thy footstool bending. Elizabeth Parson, née Rooker. [Lent.] This is the most beautiful and pathetic of Mrs. Parson's hymns. It was written for her class for young people at Tavistock, and supplied to J. Curwen in ms. It was included in Curwen's Child's H. Bk., 1840, and subsequently printed in Mrs. Parson's Willing-Class Hymns, No. 9, in 3 st. of 6 l. In the Child's H. Bk. it is in 4 st. There are the following forms of the text in C. U.:—(1) that in the Child's H. Bk., in 4 st.; (2) the Willing-Class Hys., in 3 st.; (3) the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 262, where st. i., iii. and v. are the original slightly altered, and st. ii. and iv. are from Hodder's S. S. H. Bk.; and (4) that in the Silver Street (London) S. S. Companion, 1880, which is No. 2 with alterations. Through these various forms this hymn is in extensive use. [J. J.]

Saviour, Source of every blessing. [Jesus the Source of all Good.] This hymn appeared in the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, in 4 st. of 4 l., and has been repeated in several collections, including the Protestant Episcopal Hymnal, 1871. It is a part of the well-known "Come, Thou Fount of every blessing," p. 252, i., rewritten for the Prayer Bk. Coll. of 1826. [J. J.]

Saviour, to Thee we humbly cry. C. Wesley. [Intercession.] 1st pub. with five others in 1745, at the end of a tract, entitled, A Short View of the Differences between the Moravian Brethren lately in England, and the Rev. Mr. John and Charles Wesley, in 6 st. of 6 l., and again in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 72. In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 449, and retained in later editions. It is also found in other collections. It is on record that the special members of the Moravians against whom Wesley wrote, taught that if a person professed faith in Christ, there was no necessity that he should manifest any sorrow on account of sins past or present, but for him there was simply the acknowledgment that he was a "happy sinner," a doctrine which could have but one logical outcome. Hence the satire of st. iii. :—

"In vain, till Thou the power bestow,
The double power of quickening grace,
And make the happy sinners know
The tempter with his angel face,
Who leads them captive at his will,
Captive—but happy sinners still."

Orig. text, P. Works, 1868–72, vol. v. pp. 244–5. [J. J.]

Saviour, we seek Thy high abode. I. Watts and G. Rawson. [Life a Pilgrimage.] The original of this hymn is I. Watts's "Lord, what a wretched land is this" (p. 696, i.), the rewritten form being by G. Rawson, who re-wrote it for the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 573. It has passed into other collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Saviour, when in dust to Thee. Sir R. Grant. [Lent.] 1st printed in the Christian Observer, 1815, p. 735, in 5 st. of 8 l., and entitled "Litany." In 1835 it was included in Elliott's Ps. & Hys., No. 105, with a protest in the Preface against its mutilation, as found in some collections then in circulation, and the declaration that the text in that collection was pure. This protest was probably levelled at T. Cotterill, who gave 4 st., very much altered, as "By Thy birth and early years," in his Sel. in 1819. The only change in Elliott's Ps. & Hys. from the Christian Observer, 1815, was in st. iii. l. 5., where "anguish'd sigh" was altered to "troubled sigh." Grant's hymns were republished by Lord Glenelg in 1839 as Sacred Poems. This hymn is at p. 6. This text differs from the preceding, but is claimed by Lord Glenelg to be "a more correct and authentic version." (Preface.) It is this text which is reprinted in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862; and in the Lyra Brit., 1867, as the original. In addition to its use in the Christian Observer, Elliott's Ps. & Hys., and the Sacred Poems, forms of the text, it is also in many hymnals as:—

1. By Thy birth and early years. In Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and others, as above.
2. By Thy birth, and by Thy tears. In several hymn-books.
3. Father, when in dust to Thee. In a few American collections.
4. Jesus, when in prayer to Thee. In Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1864.

In addition to its very extensive use in these varying forms, it has also been tr. into several languages. That in Latin, by R. Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, begins "Quando genua flectentes." [J. J.]

Saviour, Who exalted high. Bp. R. Mant. [SS. James and Jude, or Lent.] Appeared in his Holydays of the Church; or Scripture

Narratives of Our Blessed Lord's Life and Ministry, &c., 1828, vol. i. p. 536, in 10 st. of irregular lines, and appropriated to SS. James and Jude. The original text is not in C. U. From it, however, the following centos have been compiled:—

1. Saviour, Who exalted high. In the 1864 Suppl. to the Ps. & Hys., &c., Bedford, this cento is taken from st. i., ii., vii. and x. It is also in other collections.

2. Son of Man, to Thee we cry. This cento in 4 st. of 6 l., beginning with the first l. of st. iii., was given in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853; and is also in several later collections.

3. Son of God, to Thee I cry. This cento, beginning with st. ii., appeared in the 1863 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., No. 90, in 4 st. of 6 l. This, with the exception of the opening line, is from the Cooke and Denton Hymnal with a return, in several instances, to the original text. It is repeated in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, as "Son of Man, to Thee I cry."

4. Jesus Christ exalted high. This, in T. Darling's Hymns, &c., 1887, is in 4 st. of 12 l. In the earlier editions of Darling's Hymns, &c., it began "Jesus, now exalted high."

The popular form of this hymn is the third cento as above. [J. J.]

Saviour, Who ready art to hear. C. Wesley. [The Divine Presence desired.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1740, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "On a Journey." (P. Works, 1868–72, vol. i. p. 304.) With slight alterations, and the omission of st. i., it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as No. 205, and has passed into numerous collections as "Talk with us, Lord, Thyself reveal," and in some as "Speak with us, Lord, Thyself reveal." The stanza which has attained to the greatest repute is:—

"With Thee conversing, I forget
All time, and toil, and care;
Labour is rest and pain is sweet,
If Thou, my God, art there."

Possibly the ideas embodied in these lines had their origin in Milton's Par. Lost, bk. iv., ll. 639, 640:—

"With thee conversing, I forget all time,
All seasons and their change; all please alike."

The hymn, as a whole, is very popular with the various Methodist bodies. See G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883. [J. J.]

Saxby, Jane Euphemia, née Browne, daughter of William Browne of Tallantire Hall, Cumberland, and sister of Lady Teignmouth, was b. Jan. 27, 1811, and married, in 1862, to the Rev. S. H. Saxby, Vicar of East Clevedon, Somersetshire. Her work, The Dove on the Cross, was pub. in 1849. It has passed into numerous editions, and from it several hymns have come into C. U. This was followed by The Voice of the Bird, in 1875; and Aunt Effie's Gift to the Nursery, 1876. Sometimes Mrs. Saxby's Dove on the Cross is dated 1819, but in error. The compilation known as Hys. and Thoughts for the Sick and Lonely, by a Lady, Lond., J. Nisbet & Co., 1848, although it contains several of her hymns in an altered form, is ascribed to her in error. Mrs. Saxby's hymns in C. U. include:

1. Father, into Thy loving hands. Resignation.
2. O Jesus Christ, the holy One. Holy Communion.
3. O Holy Ghost, the Comforter. Whitsuntide.
4. Show me the way, O Lord. Guidance desired.
5. Thou art with me, O my Father. God everywhere.
6. Thou God of love, beneath Thy sheltering wings. Burial.

Of these hymns, Nos. 1, 3, 4, and 6, appeared in her Dove on the Cross, 1849. No. 2 appeared in the English Presbyterian Ps. & Hys. for Divine Worship, 1867, No. 340, in 5 st. of 4 l. It was supplied to Dr. W. F. Stevenson in ms. in 6 st. for his Hys. for the Church and Home, 1873. The additional stanza (the 4th) given in his Notes is:—

“As Thou hast placed beyond my reach
Thy richest means of grace,
Teach me without them, Saviour, teach
My soul to see Thy face.”

The point and meaning of this stanza is explained by the fact that this hymn “was written for one who by illness was prevented joining in the Communion.” The hymn was included in The Voice of the Bird, 1875. Mrs. Saxby’s hymns are very plaintive and tender. This is explained by her thus:—“I wrote most of my published hymns during a very long and distressing illness, which lasted many years. I thought probably that I was then in the ‘Border Land,’ and wrote accordingly.” D. Mar. 25, 1898. [J. J.]

Say, grows the rush without the mire. [Fate of the Wicked. Job viii. 11–22.] Although sometimes attributed to Watts, to the present this hymn has not been traced to his works, and the earliest date at which it is found is in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases of 1745, No. xxiv.. Therein it is given as a Paraphrase of Job viii. 11–22, in 7 st. of 4 l. Copies of this draft being very rare, we subjoin the text:—

“Say, grows the Rush without the Mire?
the Flag without the Stream?
Green and uncut, it quickly fades;
the Wicked’s Fate’s the same.”

2.
“Slight is his Hope, cut off and broke:
or if entire it rise,
Yet, as the Spider’s Web, when try’d, it yieldeth, breaks and flies.”

3.
“Fixt on his House he leans, his House and all its Props decay;
He holds it fast, but faster still the tott’ring Frame gives way.”

4.
“Tho’ in his Garden to the Sun his Boughs with verdure smile;
And, to the Center struck, his Roots unshaken stand a while:”

5.
“Yet, when from Heav’n his Sentence flies, he’s hurried from his Place;
It then denies him for its Lord, nor owns it knew his Face.”

6.
“Lo, this the Joy of wicked Men, who Heav’n’s just Laws despise;
They quickly fall, and in their room as quickly others rise.”

7.
“But God his Pow’r will for the Just with tender Care employ:
He’ll fill their Mouths with Songs of Praise, and fill their Hearts with Joy.”

The recast of this hymn, beginning:—

“The rush may rise where waters flow, and flags beside the stream;”

which was pub. in the authorized Trans. and Paraphs. of 1781, No. vi., in 7 st. of 4 l., is claimed for W. Cameron (p. 200, i.) by his eldest daughter, in her list of authors and revisers.

Say, why should friendship grieve for those? [Death and Burial.] This hymn appeared in the Evangelical Magazine in 1820, in 6 st. of 4 l., headed “On seeing a mourning ring inscribed with the words ‘Not lost, but gone before,’” and is signed “B. C.” the signature, it is said, of Benjamin Clark. In the enlarged ed. of Ps. & Hys., 1864, by Morrell and How it was given in a re-written form in 4 st. of 4 l. as “Why mourn the dead with hopeless tears?” This in a slightly different form was in Kennedy, 1863. The 1820 text is in P. Maurice’s Choral H. Bk., 1861. [J. J.]

Scales, Thomas, was b. at Leeds, Dec. 16, 1786, and educated at the Moravian School at Fulneck, and at the Leeds Grammar School. He received his training for the Congregational ministry at Hoxton College, where he entered in 1806, and of which he was for a short time Classical Tutor. He was successively Congregational minister at Wolverhampton (1810) and Leeds (1819). He remained at Leeds thirty years, and was then appointed (1849) Secretary of the Northern Congregational School at Silcoats. He afterwards became the Secretary of the “Balme Charity.” He d. at Cleckheaton, June 24, 1860. (Miller’s Singers and Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 398.) Mr. Scales is known as a contributor to, and one of the Editors of, A Sel. of Hys. for the Use of the Protestant Dissenting Congregations of the Independent Order, in Leeds, 1822, known as the Leeds H. Bk., 1822. [See Congregational Hymnody, p. 259, i.] His hymn on Missions, “Amazing was the grace,” contributed thereto, is still in C. U. [J. J.]

Scandinavian Hymnody. Up to the period of the Reformation the churches of Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Iceland, like the rest of the churches of Europe, were furnished with Latin hymns only. Of these (many of them peculiar to Sweden) a collection has been published by G. E. Klemming under the title Latinska Sångar fördom använda i Svenska Kyrkor, Kloster, och Skolor, 4 vols. (Stockholm, 1835–7). The Reformation gave throughout the North, as elsewhere, the signal for the production of the vernacular hymn. There, as elsewhere, the Church’s Deborah, when she repeated and obeyed the cry “awake,” also began to “utter a song.” It may not be amiss to preface the history of that song with a short sketch of the events of her awakening.

I. The Reformation.—1. The dissolution of the union of Calmar, which from 1397 to 1523 linked together Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and Iceland under one monarch, placed Gustavus Vasa on the throne of Sweden. He at once declared for the Reformed doctrines, as preached by Luther and Melancthon. With the help of Lawrence Petersen, the Archbishop of Upsala, and Lawrence Anderson, the Chancellor, he ultimately persuaded the majority of his people, in spite of the sturdy opposition of Bishop Brask of Linköping, to accept a reformation on Lutheran lines. His son and successor Erik xiv., a weak and unfortunate monarch, adopted the gloomier views of Calvin; and his deposition in 1569, and the death of Archbishop Petersen in 1573, rendered it easy for King John iii. (second son of Gustavus) to arrange a reactionary movement, in which he was aided by another Lawrence Petersen (Laurentius Petri Gothus), who followed the first Lawrence at Upsala. The reaction was short-lived, and the Lutheran reformation was finally established in Sweden at the synod of Upsala, held in 1593, during the reign of Sigismund (son of John), but under the auspices of Charles Duke of Södermanland, the third son of Gustavus, afterwards king under the title of Charles IX. At this synod the Confession of Augsburg was formally adopted by the Church of Sweden.

2. In Denmark also, under Frederik I., the Lutheran reformation was adopted, after considerable opposition; and Christiern III., son of Frederik, completed the task his father had begun. Not being able to persuade the Danish prelates to officiate at his consecration, or not wishing to avail himself of their services, he was crowned, with a ceremonial adapted from the Roman Pontifical, by John Bugenhagen, a preacher from Wittenberg. Bugenhagen was certainly not a bishop, and there is considerable doubt whether he had even received priest's orders: he took upon himself, however—as Wesley did more than two centuries after—to perform the office of episcopal consecration (1537), and set apart bishops or “superintendents” to fill the ancient sees. A Diet at Odense, in 1539, finally bound Denmark to the principles and practice of the Reformed, or, more correctly speaking, Protestant followers of Luther.

3. The year 1537 witnessed the final union of Norway with Denmark, begun in 1523.* The Norwegians had shown no great readiness to accept the Reformation as offered them by King Frederik. Christiern, however, took summary measures. The Archbishop of Trondhjem and his followers made some resistance, but the king carried his point, and Lutheranism was established in Norway as it had been in Denmark.

4. In Iceland the work was carried on by Einarsen, who in 1540 was elevated, at the age of 25, to the office of bishop, or superintendent, of Skalholt. Jon Arason, Bishop of Holar (or Holum), headed the opposition, and endeavoured to excite a rebellion, but was arrested and put to death in 1550.

II. Hymn-writers and Hymns.—Sweden.—The first hymn-writers of reformed Sweden were the two renowned brothers, coadjutors of Gustavus in the work of reformation, Olaf and Lawrence (or Lars) Petersen, better known by the Latinized names of Olaus and Laurentius Petri.

1. Olaf Petersen was b. in 1497. He was early predisposed in favour of the Reformed doctrines, and in 1517, instead of resorting to the Swedish university of Upsala, preferred to study at Wittenberg, where he heard Melancthon and Luther. Returning in 1520, full of reforming zeal, he received holy orders, and in 1524 was made rector of the church of S. Nicholas in Stockholm. In 1540 he was convicted of a guilty knowledge of a conspiracy against King Gustavus, and condemned to death. He was pardoned, though the king never forgave him; and in 1543 he was appointed to another cure in Stockholm. He died in 1552.

2. Lawrence Petersen was b. in 1499, and studied at Upsala, where he became professor in or about 1524. He was a man of more gentleness and discretion than his impetuous brother Olaf; and this, combined with his high reputation for theological learning, and his known inclination towards a quiet and conservative reformation, induced the clergy to elect him, and the king to appoint him, in 1531, Archbishop of Upsala, and Primate of Sweden. It is not our business to enter into the vexed question of his consecration. That he took a journey to Rome on his appointment seems tolerably clear; but the registers of the period have unhappily been burnt; and whether he really received the laying on of hands there, or, like Bugenhagen, laid hands on others without having received the commission himself, is still a matter of doubt. He is certainly the father of Swedish hymnology. Besides his original compositions he made many translations from Latin and German; and his hymns have been largely borrowed in Denmark. The similarity of the two languages, Danish and Swedish, especially in their older forms, renders transference from the one to the other particularly easy. The Archbishop d., universally beloved and regretted, in 1573.

3. The two Andersens, Lawrence Archdeacon of Upsala, and Peter Bishop of Westerås, seconded the Petersens in their poetical work as well as in their reforming measures. The title of their hymn-book, published in 1536, was:—

Svenske songor eller visor nu på nytt prentade, förökade, och under en annan skick än tilförenna utsatte. (“Swedish Songs or Hymns, now newly printed, enlarged, and published in a different form from the preceding one.”)

The first of the two, Lawrence or Lars (Laurentius Andreae), was b. at Strengnäs in 1480. He became in 1523 Chancellor of the Diocese of Upsala, and shortly afterwards Chancellor, or Chief Secretary, to King Gustavus. It was owing in a great measure to his influence that the Diet of the kingdom adopted the Reformed doctrines in 1527. In 1526 he brought out, with the help of Olaf Petersen, a Swedish version of the New Testament, based mainly upon Luther's German translation, and in 1541 a version of the whole Bible. He was accused in 1540 of complicity in the plot in which Olaf Petersen was involved; and, like him, was condemned to death, but pardoned. He retired to Strengnäs, where he d. in 1552. Peter Andersen, nicknamed Swart (Petrus Andreae Niger), was b. about the end of the 15th cent. He became court chaplain to King Gustavus in 1549, Bishop of Westerås in 1556, and d. in 1562, leaving behind him the reputation of an able and high-principled man. We may note also that the ill-fated king Erik (b. 1533, d. by poison 1577) has also left a couple of hymns, both of which seem to echo his unhappy state of mind. One is a paraphrase of the 51st Psalm:—

Beklaga af allt Sinne må jag min Själa nöd.	(Bewail with all my mind must I my soul's distress.)
the other is not much unlike it:—

O Gud, hvem skall jag klaga den Sorg jag måste draga, så arm och syndfull?	(O God, how shall I lament the sorrow I must bear so poor and sinful?)

* The two kingdoms were newly adjusted in 1814, when Norway was taken from Denmark, and united with Sweden, Denmark retaining Iceland. This arrangement still subsists.

Erik's is, however, not the only royal name that appears in the Swedish hymnary. The great Gustavus Adolphus (b. 1594, d. 1632), s. of Charles ix., is the author of the "Battle Hymn," his "swan-song," as it was called, written just before, and published shortly after, his death at Lützen, in 1632 (see pp. 54, ii.; 55, i.). It begins thus:—

Förfäras ej, du lilla Hop, fast Fiendernas Larm och Rop från alle Sidor skalla.	Fear not, little troop, though the foes' shout and cry resounds from every side.

4. The succession of hymn-writers, begun by Archbishop Petersen, was kept up in Sweden during the succeeding century. Olaf Martinsen (b. 1577, appointed Archbishop of Upsala in 1601, d. 1609) heads the list. He was followed by Jonas Petersen (b. 1587, d. 1644), Bishop of Linköping in 1637; Count Lindsjöld (1634–1690), a distinguished professor in the university of Upsala, and chancellor of that of Lund, which was founded in 1666; Count de la Gardie (1622–1686), Swedish Ambassador at the French court, to whom the University of Upsala owes the priceless Codex Argenteus of the Gothic gospels; to whom we may add Peter Brask (d. 1690), son of a rector of St. Clara's in Stockholm, and a collateral descendant of the Bishop Brask who was so stout an antagonist of Gustavus Vasa.

5. In the 18th cent. we find the hymnary enriched by a third Archbishop of Upsala, Dr. Haquin Spegel (1645–1714). He was a great traveller, having visited Denmark, Germany, Holland, and England; and was bishop of Skara, and afterwards of Linköping, before he was elevated to the Primacy. Jacob Arrhenius (d. 1725), secretary of and professor in the University of Upsala, was another sacred poet; so was the renowned Olaf Rudbeck (1660–1740), professor of botany at Upsala. A yet more eminent name is that of Jasper Swedberg. He was b. at Fahlun, in 1653, and studied at Upsala. After travelling, like Spegel, and serving as pastor of a parish, he was appointed (1692) professor of divinity at Upsala, and in 1702 became bishop of Skara, a post he held for 33 years. His name is especially interesting to us as being one of the earliest on the list of our Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. Later on we find S. L. Ödman, professor of pastoral theology at Upsala, in 1806; S. J. Hedborn (1783–1849), pastor of Askeryd; J. Åström (1767–1844), pastor of Tuna; and a lady, Fru Lenngren, wife of the Secretary of the Board of Trade (1754–1817), whose hymn begins with the sad words:—

Snart Döden skall det Oja sluta som långe Sorgens Tårar göt.	Soon must death close the eye that long shed tears of sorrow.

6. The last and greatest name in the Swedish hymnody, however, is that of Johan Olaf Wallin. He was b. at Stora Tuna, in 1779, and early displayed his poetical powers. In 1805, and again in 1809, he gained the chief prize for poetry at Upsala. In the latter year he became pastor at Solna; here his ability as a preacher was so striking that he was transferred to Stockholm, in 1815, a "pastor primarius," a title for which we have no exact equivalent. In 1818 he was made Dean of Westerås, and set about the task of editing a revised hymn-book for the whole of Sweden. This task he completed in 1819, and pub. it as, Den Svenska Psalmboken, af Konungen gillad och stadfästad ("The Swedish hymn-book, approved and confirmed by the King"). To it he contributed some 150 hymns of his own, besides translations and recastings; and the book remains now in the form in which he brought it out. It is highly prized by the Swedes, and is in use everywhere. Those who desire to know more of Swedish hymnology, and can read Swedish, will find a full and exhaustive review of the book, with a history of and critique on every hymn in it, in J. W. Beckmann's Försök til Svensk Psalmbistoria (Stockholm, 1845).

ii. 1. The earliest hymnary of Denmark and Norway, and perhaps the earliest complete one of the whole North, was brought out at Malmö in 1528, by Claus Martensin Töndebinder (1500–1576), who deserves the name not only of the first evangelical preacher in Malmö, but also of the Father of Danish hymnology. The book contained a number of translations from the original Latin, from German (Luther's), and from Swedish (Petersen's), as well as some originals. Martensin subsequently recast it, with the aid of his friends Arvid Petersen and Hans Spendemager; and the book was printed and published at Rostock, by L. Dietz, in 1529; just 10 years before that diet of Odense at which Denmark (as has been said before) accepted the principles of the Reformation. The book contains a set of prayers, psalms, hymns, and canticles, and is entitled, Een ny Handbog, med Psalmer oc aandelige Lofsange, wdtagne aff then hellige Schrift, som nu y then Christine Forssemling (Gud till Lof oc Menniskan till Salighed) siunges ("A new hand-book, with psalms and spiritual songs of praise, derived from Holy Writ, which now are sung in the Christian assembly to God's praise and men's salvation").*

This book was reproduced, with some changes and additions, by Hans Jansen, Bishop of Ribe, in 1544, and in 1569 by Hans Thomissön, rector of Vor Frue (Our Lady) in Copenhagen.

2. This book, or rather these books, continued to be the hymnary of the Danish and Norwegian Lutherans for more than a century. The poet who had the honour of beginning to re-edit it was Thomas Kingo. He was b. at Slingerup in 1634, and, after completing his theological studies, became in 1668 pastor of his native place. Here he brought out, in 1674, his Aandelige Sjunge-chor ("Spiritual Choral-songs"). The book attracted attention; and in 1677 its author, who had published meanwhile other poetical effusions, was made Bishop of Fyen (Funen). In 1683 he was desired to prepare a new hymn-book, to be authorized for Denmark and Norway. The first part of it appeared in 1689, as Danmarks og Norges Kirkers forordnede Salmebog ("The authorized Hymn-book of the Churches of Denmark and Norway"), and was received with a storm of disapprobation. There were many who admired the work, but an almost equal number exclaimed against it. There were, they said, too many of his own compositions in it; the hymns were too high flown, above the heads of the common people. The criticism was unfairly severe. No doubt some of Kingo's hymns are cold; and some, perhaps, evince what the Pietists of the next century professed to find in them, a little tendency to what they called Rationalism, and we might term undue breadth. But a rationalizer could scarcely merit the name given to Kingo, the poet of Easter-tide.

* It has been republished by C. W. Bruun in his collection of Danish hymnaries (1866), part i.

3. In 1690 a committee was appointed to supersede Kingo, and finish the hymn-book. They worked on Kingo's lines, and put in many of his compositions, and the book finally appeared in 1699 as:—

Den forordnede ny Kirke-Psalme-Bog, efter hans Konglige Mayestets allernaadigste befaling af de ørnmeste Geistlige i Kjøbenhavn til Guds Tjeneste paa Søndagen, Festerne, Bededagene og til anden gudelig Brug i Kirken udi Danmark og Norge af gamle aanderlige Sange ordenlig indrettet og fjittelligen igjennemseet og med mange ny Psalmer forbedret, og ligemaader efter Konglige befaling til Trykken beordret af Thomas Kingo, Biskop udi Fyens Stift.

("The authorized new Church hymn-book, suitably adapted from old spiritual songs and carefully revised, and enriched with many new hymns, according to his Majesty's most gracious command, by the principal clergy in Copenhagen, for the service of God on Sundays, festivals, prayer-days, and for other godly uses in the Church in Denmark and Norway, and in like manner according to the royal command prepared for the press by Thomas Kingo, Bishop in the Diocese of Funen.")

Kingo felt keenly the slight put upon him. He survived it, however, some 12 years or more, dying in 1703. Whatever may be said of him as a hymn-writer and compiler, there is no doubt he was a true poet, and superior to all who preceded him.

4. His book, or rather the book of 1699, continued in use throughout Denmark; not, however, without attempts being made to reform it. The first effort was made by Hans Adolf Brorson. He was b. in 1694, at Randrup, where his father was pastor. He entered the University of Copenhagen in 1712. After finishing his theological course he first acted as his father's assistant, and then (1729) as preacher at Tønder in Slesvig. Here he began to display his powers and tastes by publishing a collection of religious poems entitled Troens rare Klenodie, 1739 ("The Faith's rare Jewel.") His opinions were of the Pietist school, opposed to the dry "orthodoxy" (so-called) of the day, which was said to prevail in Kingo's hymns. A few years after this he was made Dean of Ribe; and in 1741 King Christiern vi. (who inclined in the Pietist direction), being charmed with his hymn "Op, al den Ting som Gud har gjort" ("Up, everything that God has made"), appointed him Bishop of Ribe, where he d. in 1764. Brorson's contributions to Danish hymnody are not all original; three-fourths are translations or paraphrases of German Lutheran hymns. His Christmas lyrics are most approved; and he is called par excellence the poet of Christmas. Brorson, however, was poet rather than editor. The hymn-book which he projected, and to which he largely contributed, was brought out in 1740, under the title Den ny Salmebog ("The new hymn-book"), by Erik Pontoppidan, a relative of the well-known Bishop of Trondhjem, who d. in 1678. Erik was b. in 1698, became Bishop of Bergen in 1748, and

d. in 1764, leaving, like his renowned relative, a number of works on natural history and antiquities. Another effort in the direction of a new hymn-book was made by O. H. Guldberg, secretary to Prince Frederick, who, aided by Bishop L. Harboe, Fru Brigitta Boye (b. 1742, d. 1824), and others, produced in 1778 a hymn-book under the title:—

Salmebog, eller en Samling af gamle og ny Salmer, til Guds Ære og Hans Menigheds Opbyggelse. ("A hymn-book, or a collection of old and new hymns, for the honour of God, and the edification of His Church.")

5. Towards the end of the 18th century a further attempt to effect a revision of Kingo's book was made by N. H. Balle, Bishop of Seeland; who wished, like Brorson, to see more unctious and less stiffness in Danish psalmody. The book appeared in 1797 as Evangelisk-Kristelig Salmebog, til Brug ved Kirke- og Hus-Andagt. ("Evangelical Christian Hymn-book for use in Church and Home Worship.") But the attempt was not successful. Balle's hymn-book, though well-meant, was poor and unpoetical. The book of Kingo remained in use till an impetus was given to the tendency to revision by the great reformer of Danish hymnology and theology, the well known Pastor Grundtvig, an admirer of Balle and of Kingo too. Nicolai Frederik Severin Grundtvig was the son of a pastor, and was b. at Udby, in Seeland, in 1783. He studied in the University of Copenhagen from 1800-1805; and, like some other eminent men, did not greatly distinguish himself; his mind was too active and his imagination too versatile to bear the restraint of the academic course. After leaving the university he took to teaching; first in Lange-land, then (1808) in Copenhagen. Here he devoted his attention to poetry, literature, and Northern antiquities. In 1810 he became assistant to his father in a parish in Jutland. The sermon he preached at his ordination, on the subject "Why has the Lord's word disappeared from His house," attracted much attention, which is rarely the case with "probationers'" sermons. On his father's death, in 1813, he returned to Copenhagen, and for eight years devoted himself mainly to literature. The poetry, both secular and religious, that he produced, drew from a friend the remark that "Kingo's harp had been strung afresh." In 1821 King Frederik vi. appointed him pastor of Präsløe, a parish in Seeland, from which he was the next year removed to Copenhagen, and made chaplain of St. Saviour's church in Christianshavn. From the time of his ordination he had been deeply impressed with Evangelical church sentiments, in opposition to the fashionable Rationalism and Erastianism of the day; and adhered to the anti-rationalist teaching of Hauge, whose death at this time (1824) seemed to be a call to Grundtvig to lift up his voice. An opportunity soon presented itself; Professor Clausen brought out a book entitled Katholicismens og Protestantismens Forfatning, Lære, og Ritus ("The condition, teaching, and ritual of Catholicism and Protestantism"). This book was replete with the Erastian Rationalism which was so especially distasteful to Grundtvig, who forthwith, in his Kirkens Gjenmæle ("The Church's Reply," 1825), strongly opposed its teaching, and laid down truer principles of Christian belief, and sounder views of the nature of the Church. This caused a sensation: Grundtvig (who had not spared his opponent) was fined 100 rix-dollars, and the songs and hymns which he had written for the coming celebration of the tenth centenary of Northern Christianity were forbidden to be used. On this he resigned his post at St. Saviour's, or rather was forced to quit it by a sentence of suspension which was pronounced in 1826, and under which he was kept for 13 years. He took the opportunity of visiting England in 1829, 30, and 31, and consulting its libraries, mainly with a view to a further insight into Northern antiquities, and to help his studies in the early English tongue. His edition of Cynewulf's beautiful poem of the Phoenix from the Codex Exoniensis,—the Anglo-Saxon (so-called) text, with a preface in Danish, and a fri Fordansking (free rendering in Danish), published in 1840,—is a result of this journey and enforced leisure. Tired of his long silence, his numerous friends and admirers proposed to erect a church for him, and form themselves into an independent congregation, but this was not permitted. He was allowed, however, to hold an afternoon service in the German church at Christianshavn. There he preached for eight years, and compiled and wrote his hymn-book, Sang-Værk til den Danske Kirke ("Song-work for the Danish Church"). He still worked on towards his object of raising the Christian body to which he belonged from the condition of a mere state establishment to the dignity of a gospel-teaching national church. In 1839 (the year of the death of King Frederik vi., and the accession of his cousin Christiern viii.) the suspension was removed, and he was appointed chaplain of the hospital Vartou, a position which he held till his death. In 1863 the king (Frederik vii.) conferred on him the honorary title of bishop. The good old man died suddenly, in his 89th year, on Sept. 2, 1872, having officiated the day before. As Kingo is the poet of Easter, and Brorson of Christmas, so Grundtvig is spoken of as the poet of Whitsuntide.

6. With Grundtvig we cannot but join the prose writer and poet Bernhard Severin Ingemann. He was b., he tells us in his Levnets-bog (an autobiography of his first seventeen years), at the parsonage of Torkildskrup in Falster, in 1789, the youngest of five sons. The death of his father in 1800 compelled the family to leave the parsonage for Slagelse, where he was sent to school. This he left in 1806 to enter at Copenhagen. A second autobiography, Tilbageblik paa mit Liv og min Forfatter-Periode fra 1811-1837 ("A retrospect of my life and my time of authorship from 1811 to 1837"), gives us an account of twenty-five years more. It was intended as a preface to an edition of his works which was soon forthcoming. It describes a quiet gentle life of continued literary occupation, begun by an interesting tour in 1818-19 through France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy. Twenty-five years more passed, and the good man went to his rest in 1862 by a calm and painless decease, amidst the deepest regrets of all who knew him.

7. The impulse given by Grundtvig could not be resisted. In 1855 a clerical synod at Roeskilde (the Canterbury of Denmark) drew up and brought out a new Salmebog, which has been sanctioned for general use. It appeared as Salmebogen til Kirke-og Hus-Andagt. ("Hymnbook for Church and Home Worship"). The revision was intrusted to Ingemann. It is founded upon the old book of Kingo, but contains many new hymns, chiefly by Brorson, Grundtvig, Ingemann, and C. F. Boye; and has already reached the dignity of an Appendix, to which those authors contribute about four-fifths.

iii. The Norwegians have in the main followed the lead of Denmark in their hymns. Kingo's book has been the authorized hymnary, or the basis at least of those in use. But they have allowed themselves considerable freedom, and Pontoppidan's, Guldberg's, and still later on, Hauge's revisions of it have been used largely in Norway. To give an instance, one of these popular hymn-books (Christiania, 1844) is Kingo's, or rather Guldberg's, book in the main, but the language is modernized. It is called, like Balle's, Evangelisk-christelig Psalmebog ("Evangelical Christian Hymn-book"), and has bound up with it, as is the case with most of the Swedish and Danish hymn-books, the Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, a series of prayers for various occasions, and the history of the Passion, as given in the official prayer-book, or Alter-Bog. A note on the title-page declares it to be "aftrykt efter original-Udgaven . . . og udgivet efter Foranstaltning af det Kongelige Departement for Kirke-og Underviisnings-Væsenet" ("printed according to the original edition . . . and published according to direction of the royal department for the conduct of the Church and education").

2. The book now most generally used throughout Norway was authorized in 1869 under the title of Kirke-Salme-Bogen ("The Church Hymn-book"). It was edited, on the basis of existing books, by Magnus B. Landstad, a clergyman b. in 1802 and still surviving. He served in several different cures, and always had a deep interest in church psalmody. One of the most popular home hymn-books is that pub. in 1851 by Johan Nicolai Frantzen, a clergyman of Christiania (1808-68), and called Christelige Psalmer til Husandagt og Skolebrug ("Christian hymns for domestic worship and the use of Schools"). But there is still a great desire in Norway for a general Salmebog for Kirke og Hjem ("Hymn-book for Church and Home").

iv. Iceland followed, but slowly, in the track of Denmark. For a long time the hymn-book consisted of translations of a few of the earlier hymns of Martensön's collection: it was published under the name of Graduale, which was explained to mean Messu-savungs böök ("The Mass-song book"). The last edition of the Graduale appeared with the name of Bishop Magnussen, in 1773. Since that time the Danish books have been used, in the Icelandic language. One of the last, if not the last, of the attempts to follow the lead of 1855, is the hymn-book of Thordersen (Reykjavik, 1861), entitled Nýr við-bætur við hina evangelisku sölmabök ("New contributions to the evangelical psalm-book").

v. Conclusion. The hymnody of the Scandinavian North is decidedly subjective in its character, rather than objective. The earlier hymns, certainly, were doctrinal and invocative, but the later are, to a great extent, expressive of religious sentiments, hopes, and fears, rather than of definite objective faith and worship. That we might borrow with advantage from our kinsfolk is not to be doubted. Mr. G. Tait's Hymns of Denmark, (1868) especially, supplies a store from which to cull flowers for transplantation into our own "spiritual rose-garden." The similarity of the Northern Lutheran ritual and Church constitution to ours,—the fact, in short, that so much that is Catholic has survived the Reformation among them,—makes religious thought in the North to run, to some extent, on the same lines with our own. On the other hand, they are thoroughly Erastian and Lutheran. Religion is a State department, and Luther is the guide rather than primitive Catholicity. Under these circumstances we find, unavoidably, a want of backbone in their Church songs now and then. But there is much affinity between Swedish and English devotion, as will be seen in the few translations which are available for English use in Gilbert Tait's Hymns of Denmark, 1868, already mentioned, and his Hymns of Sweden rendered into English; three renderings of Swedish hymns by Mrs. Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858; Baring-Gould's "Through the night of doubt and sorrow," and a few others. The following is a specimen, from the Danish poet Brorson, of the style of hymn which largely prevails in the North:—

"Den Grund hvorpaa jeg bygge
Er Christus og Hans Død;
I Jesu Pines Skygge
Er Sjælens Hvide Sød:
Der har jeg fundet Livet;
Selv er jeg intet værd;
Hvad Jesus mig har givet
Gjør mig for Gud saa kjær.

"Ei Aanders Kraft og Even,
Ei Fyrstendømmers Magt,
Ei hvad man veed at nævne
Af Haanhed og Foragt,
Ei Stort og ei det Ringe,
Ei Sorrig eller Savn,
Ei Døden selv skal tvinge
Mig udaf Jesu Favn!"

This, may be rendered:—

"I build on one foundation,
On Christ Who died for me;
Sheltered by Jesu's passion
My soul at rest shall be:
'Tis there the life of heaven
Poor worthless I obtain;
Through what ray Lord has given
The Father's love I gain.

"No craft or deep invention,
No princely power or might,
Nor ought that man can mention
Of mocking or despite,
Nor weak, nor strong endeavour,
Nor want's or sorrow's smart,
Nor death itself, shall sever
My soul from Jesu's Heart."

The plaintiveness of a large proportion of these Northern hymns is very marked, whilst the strength of their writers' personal faith is undeniable. The blending of the two, as in the above illustration, often produces a most pleasing result.

Schade, Johann Caspar, s. of Jakob Schad or Schade, pastor and decan at Kühdorf, near Suhl, in Thuringia, was b. at Kühndorf, Jan. 13, 1666. He entered the University of Leipzig in 1685 (where he became a great friend of A. H. Francke), and then went to Wittenberg, where he graduated M.A. in 1687. On his return to Leipzig he began to hold Bible readings for the students. This soon raised ill-will against him among the Leipzig professors, and when, in 1690, he was invited to become diaconus at Würzen, near Leipzig, they interfered and prevented his settlement. In 1691 he was invited to become diaconus of St. Nicholas's church, at Berlin (where P. J. Spener had just become probst, or chief pastor), and entered on his work there on the 2nd S. in Advent. In his later years he raised a storm of feeling against himself by refusing to hear private confessions. The Elector of Brandenburg, in order to end the strife, appointed him, in June 1698, pastor at Dorenburg, near Halberstadt. Meantime he was seized with a fever, which ended fatally at Berlin, July 25, 1698 (Koch, iv. 222, 468; Wetzel, iii. p. 23, &c.).

Schade was a most earnest and faithful pastor and preacher, and specially interested himself in the children of his flock. As a hymn-writer he was not particularly prolific, but of his 45 hymns a good many passed into the German hymn-books of the period. His hymns are clear and simple in style, are composed in a considerable variety of metres, and are full of fervent love to the Lord Jesus, and of zeal for a living and practical Christianity; but they are frequently spun out, or are too subjective. A number appeared in A. Luppius's Andächtig singender Christenmunde, Wesel, 1692-94, and in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697. They were collected and posthumously pub. as Fasciculus Cantionum, Das ist zusammen getragene geistliche Lieder, &c., Cüstrin, N.D. [1699].

Those of Schade's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Auf! hinauf! zu deiner Freude. Faith. 1st pub. in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 402, in 6 st. of 8 l.; repeated in 1699, as above, p. 83. Recently, as No. 403, in the Unv. L. S., 1851. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Up! yes upward to thy gladness Rise, my heart. This is a good and full tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 171, repeated in full in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, and, omitting st. v., in Kennedy, 1863. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 157, it is slightly altered, and st. iii. is omitted.

2. Rise, my soul! with joy and gladness. A tr. of st. i., ii., vi., by F. C. C., as No. 233 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Look up, my soul, to Christ thy joy," by J. B. Holmes, as No. 1099 in the Supp. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 600), repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. (2) "Upwards, upwards to thy gladness," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 13. (3) "Up! yes upward to thy gladness, Rise, my soul," by W. Reid in his Praise Bk., 1872.

ii. Meine Seel ermuntre dich. Passiontide. In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 215, in 15 st. of 6 l., repeated in 1699, as above, p. 9, entitled "Contemplation of the suffering of Christ and surrender of His will." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 106. Tr. as, "Rouse thyself, my Soul, and dwell." In the Suppl. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 20, and in Select Hys. from Ger. Psalmody, Tranquebar, 1754, p. 31.

iii. Meine Seele willt du ruhn. This hymn, frequently ascribed to Schade, is noted under Scheffler, J., p. 1007, ii. [J. M.]

Schaff, Philip, D.D., LL.D., was b. at Chur, Switzerland, Jan. 1, 1819. He studied at the Universities of Tübingen, Halle, and Berlin. In 1843 he was appointed a Professor in the German Reformed Theological Seminary at Mercersburg, Pennsylvania, U.S.A., and in 1870 Professor of Sacred Literature in the Union Seminary, New York. As translator, author, and editor, Dr. Schaff holds high rank, both in Great Britain and America. The various Histories and Encyclopedias which he has edited are standard works. His knowledge of hymnology is extensive, and embraces hymns in many languages and of all ages, his speciality being German hymnody. The hymnological works which he has edited alone, or jointly with others, are:—

(1) Deutsches Gesangbuch, 1860; (2) Christ in Song, a most valuable collection of original English and American hymns, and translated hymns, N.Y. 1869, Lond. 1870; (3) Hys. and Songs of Praise for Public and Social Worship, 1874, in which he was assisted by Roswell D. Hitchcock, and Zachary Eddy; (4) Library of Religious Poetry, 1881, of which A. Gilman was joint editor.

Dr. Schaff has not composed any original hymns. His trs. from the Latin are meritorious, and may be found through the Index of Authors, &c. He d. Oct. 20, 1893. [J. J.]

Schalling, Martin, s. of Martin Schalling, sometime pastor at Strassburg (after 1543, pastor at Weitersweiler, near Saarbrücken), was b. at Strassburg, April 21, 1532. He matriculated, in 1550, at the University of Wittenberg, where he became a favourite pupil of Melancthon, and a great friend of Nicolaus Selnecker (p. 1038, ii.). After taking his M.A., he continued, for a short time, at Wittenberg as lecturer; and then became, in 1554, diaconus at Regensburg. The Superintendent at Regensburg, at that time, was Nicolaus Gallus, a strong partisan of Matthias Flach; and as Schalling thought it his duty to preach against Flacianism he had to give up his post in 1558; but soon after was appointed diaconus at Amberg, in Bavaria (Oberpfalz). When, in 1568, after the Elector Friedrich III., of the Palatinate, had adopted Calvinistic opinions as to order of service, &c., all the Lutheran clergy who would not conform were expelled, Schalling had to leave Amberg. But as Duke Ludwig, the son of the Elector, continued a Lutheran, he allowed Schalling to minister to the Lutherans at Vilseck, near Amberg. After Ludwig became Regent of the Oberpfalz he recalled Schalling to Amberg, in 1576, as court preacher and superintendent; and when, after his father's death, on Oct. 24, 1576, he became Elector of the Pfalz, he appointed Schalling as General-Superintendent of the Oberpfalz, and also court preacher at Heidelberg. But when the clergy of the Oberpfalz were pressed to sign the Formula of Concord, Schalling hesitated to subscribe, holding that it dealt too harshly with the followers of Melancthon. For this action he was banished from the court at Heidelberg; and after being confined to his house at Amberg, from 1580 to March 1583, he was finally deprived of his offices. Thereafter he stayed for some time at Altdorf, but was appointed, 1585, pastor of St. Mary's church in Nürnberg, where he remained until blindness compelled him to retire. He d. at Nürnberg, Dec. 19 (29), 1608 (Koch, ii. 282, &c.)

Though the above notice might seem to indicate that Schalling was an ardent polemic, yet this was not so. He was naturally a moderate man, and a man of peace; but during the period of 1550 to 1600, Protestant Germany was rent asunder by all manner of controversies, in which hardly any one with a conscience or an opinion could avoid being involved. Only one hymn by him is known, but that justly ranks among the classic hymns of Germany. It is:—

Herzlich Lieb hab ich dich, O Herr. For the Dying. This was, apparently, written about 1567, and was 1st pub. in Kurtze und sonderliche Neue Symbola etlicher Fürsten, &c. Nürnberg, 1571; and thence in Wachernagel, iv., p. 788, in 3 st. of 12 l. It is also in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 561. Lauxmann, in Koch, viii., p. 265, says of it: "This hymn, 'a prayer to Christ, the consolation of the soul in life and in death,' after Psalms xviii. and lxxiii., is a treasure bequeathed to the church from the heart of Schalling;" and adds, that it was a favourite hymn of P. J. Spener, who sung it every Sunday evening; of Duke Ernst III. of Sachse-Gotha; of C. F. Gellert, and of many others. The fine melody generally set to it, is from Bernhard Schmidt's Zwey Bücher einer neuen Künstlichen Tabulatur auff Orgel und Instrument, Strassburg, 1577; was embodied by J. S. Bach, in his Passion music according to St. John; and is in the C. B. for England, 1863 (see below). The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Thee, Lord, I love with sacred Awe. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, pt. ii., 1725, p. 51 (1732, p. 194); repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 312. In the 1801, and later eds. of the Moravian H. Bk. (1886, No. 448), trs. of st. iii., vi., of E. Neumeister's "Herr Jesu Christ, mein höchstes Gut" (p. 798, i.), were substituted for Schalling's ii., iii. The 3rd st. of Jacobi's version, beginning, "Lord, let Thy blest angelic bands," was also given, as a separate hymn, in the 1754 and later Moravian H. Bks. (1886, No. 1248).

2. My heart, O Lord, its love on Thee. A good and full tr., by A. T. Russell, as No. 185, in his Ps. & Hys. 1851.

3. With all my heart I love Thee, Lord. A good and full tr., by H. G. de Bunsen, for Mercer's C. P. and H. Bk., ed. 1857, No. 105. In Mercer's Oxford ed., 1864, No. 198, st. i. was omitted; and it thus began, "My body, soul, and all I have."

4. Lord, all my heart is fixed on Thee. A good and full tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger. 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 164. Altered to the original metre in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 119.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "I love Thee, Lord, with love sincere." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 80 (1856, p. 112). (2) "O Lord! I love Thee from my heart." In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 609. (3) "Lord, Thee I love with all my heart." By R. Massie, in the Day of Rest, 1877. [J. M.]

Scheffler, Johann (Angelus Silesius), was b. in 1624 at Breslau in Silesia. His father, Stanislaus Scheffler, was a member of the Polish nobility, but had been forced to leave his fatherland on account of his adherence to Lutheranism, and had then settled in Breslau. The son was thus educated as a strict Lutheran. After passing through the St. Elisabeth's Gymnasium at Breslau, he matriculated at the University of Strassburg, on May 4, 1643, as a student of medicine. In the next year he went to Leyden, and in 1647 to Padua, where he graduated PH. D. and M.D. on July 9, 1648. Thereafter he returned to Silesia, and, on Nov. 3, 1649, was appointed private physician, at Oels, to Duke Sylvius Nimrod of Württemberg-Oels. The Duke was a staunch Lutheran, and his court preacher, Christoph Freitag, administered the ecclesiastical affairs of the district according to the strictest Lutheran churchly orthodoxy. Scheffler, who in Holland had become acquainted with the writings of Jakob Böhme, and had become a personal friend of Abraham von Frankenberg, the editor of Böhme's works, soon found that the spiritual atmosphere of Oels did not suit him. His own leanings at this time were distinctly to Mysticism and Separatism. He was at no pains to conceal his sentiments, and withdrew himself from public worship, from confession, and from the Holy Communion. When he wished to publish his poems, and submitted them for this purpose to Freitag, he was refused permission to print them on the ground of their mystical tendencies. He resigned his post in the end of 1652, and went to Breslau. Here he became acquainted with the Jesuits, who in that place were earnest students of the mystical works of Tauler (q.v.), and through them was introduced to the study of the mediæval mystics of the Roman Catholic Church. On June 12, 1653, he was formally received into the Roman Catholic communion, and at his confirmation on that day at St. Matthias's Church in Breslau, he took the name of Angelus, probably after a Spanish mystic of the 16th cent. named John ab Angelis.* On March 24, 1654, the Emperor Ferdinand III. conferred on him the title of Imperial Court Physician, but this title was purely honorary, and Scheffler remained still at Breslau. On Feb. 27, 1661, he entered the order of St. Francis; on May 21, 1661, was ordained priest at Neisse in Silesia, and in 1664 was appointed Rath and Hofmarschall to his friend Sebastian von Rostock, the newly created Prince Bishop of Breslau. After the Bishop's death in 1671 Scheffler retired to the monastery of St. Matthias in Breslau, where he d. July 9, 1677, from a wasting sickness, during which he used this characteristic prayer, "Jesus and Christ, God and Man, Bridegroom and Brother, Peace and Joy, Sweetness and Pleasure, Refuge and Redemption, Heaven and Earth, Eternity and Time, Love and All, receive my soul." (Koch, iv. 3; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 197; Memoir in Dr. D. A. Rosenthal's ed. of Scheffler's Sämmtliche Poetische Werke, 2 vols., Regensburg, 1862, &c.)

Of Scheffler, as a Convert and as a Controversialist, not much need be said. He certainly became more Roman than the Romans; and in his more than 50 controversial tractates, shows little of the sweetness and repose for which some have thought that he left the Lutheran church. In his Ecclesiologia, pub. at Glatz in 1677 [Brit. Mus. has the 2nd ed., pub. at Oberammergau and Kempen in 1735], he collected 39 of these treatises, of which e.g. No. 34 is entitled, "The Lutheran and Calvinistic Idol of the Understanding exhibited, laid bare, as well as the Likeness of the True God. In which also, at the same time, the attacks and objections of adversaries are repelled. 1 Cor. viii. 4, Idolum nihil est, an idol is nothing."

At an early age Scheffler had begun to write poems, and some of these occasional pieces were printed in 1641 and 1642. His most famous non-hymnological work is his Geistreiche Sinn- und Schlussreime, &c., pub. at Vienna in 1657, but better known by the title prefixed in the 2nd ed. pub. at Glatz in 1675, viz. the Cherubinischer Wandersmann. [Both eds. in the Brit. Mus.]

The 1st ed. contains five books, and a supplement of 10 sonnets; and in the 2nd ed. a sixth book is added, which includes these 10 sonnets. The work consists of Aphorisms, the majority being in two Alexandrine rhyming lines, often of considerable beauty and depth; throughout breathing the spirit of Mysticism, and not seldom verging very nearly on Pantheism. A few of those aphorisms have been tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Christian Singers, 1869, pp. 252-53; and by E. Vitalis Scherb, in the Schaff-Gilman Library of Rel. Poetry, 1881.

Scheffler's latest poetical work was the Sinnliche Beschreibung der vier letzten Dinge, zu heilsamen Schröken und Aufmunterung aller Menschen inn Druck gegeben. Mit der himmlischen Procession vermehrt, &c. Schweidnitz, 1675. [Brit. Mus.]

This is the 2nd ed., but no copy of the 1st ed. seems to have survived. It consists of poems, written in a somewhat coarsely realistic style, on Death (20 st.), Last Judgment (66 st.), Hell (72 st.), and Heaven (157 st.). Then follows, at the back of p. 119, the hymn, Mehr als die Augen lieb ich dich, with the note that it ought to have been added to the 1668 ed. of the Heilige Seelenlust.

Scheffler's most important hymnological work is his Heilige Seelenlust, oder geistliche Hirten-Lieder, der in ihren Jesum verliebten Psyche, gesungen von Johann Angelo Silesio, und von Herrn Georgio Josepho mit aussündig schönen Melodeyen geziert, &c.

Of this the 1st ed. appeared at Breslau, apparently in 1657, in three books, with Hymns 1-123, and a fourth—separately paged—book, with 32 hymns, apparently also at Breslau, 1657. In the 2nd ed., pub. at Breslau in 1668, the paging and numbering are consecutive; and a fifth book is added, with Hymns 166-205. [Both eds. in Royal Library, Breslau; 2nd ed. in Brit. Mus.] The first three books form a cycle of hymns, principally on the person and work of Our Lord, arranged according to the Christian Year, from Advent to Whitsuntide, and seem mostly to have been written before Scheffler left the Lutheran church. Those of the fourth book were probably written 1653 to 1656, and those of the fifth book between 1656 and 1668. In the first three books he is most clearly under the influence of his predecessors. That is, so far as the style and form are concerned, he was greatly influenced by the Pastorals of the Nürnberg Pegnitz Shepherds, and of Friedrich von Spee (q.v.); and in the substance of his poems—their longings for mystical union with Christ, and their clinging love to the Saviour—he was influenced on the one side by Böhme, and on the other by the earnest inner religious life which he had found in Holland. In his later hymns the tone is more manly, and the defects and excesses of his earlier style have, in great measure, disappeared.

Scheffler's hymns were gladly received by the Lutheran Church as a welcome addition to the store of "Jesus Hymns," but many long passed current as anonymous; the I. A., for Johann Angelus, being often interpreted as Incerti Autoris, and vice versa. Through the Nürnberg G. B., 1676; Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704 and 1714; Porst's G. B., 1713; and Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, a large number came into use among the Lutherans, more indeed than among the Roman Catholics. They were great favourites among the Moravians, after Zinzendorf had included 79 of them in his Christ-Catholisches Singe- und Bet-Büchlein, 1727; and, unfortunately, precisely the worst were selected for imitation, so that Scheffler has the doubtful honour of being the model of the spiritual-fleshly productions which disfigured the Moravian hymn-books between 1740 and 1755.

Judging Scheffler's hymns as a whole one must give them a very high place in German hymnody. Only a small proportion of the hymns bear a distinctively Roman Catholic character. Of the rest, after setting on one side those in which Christ is set forth as the Bridegroom of the soul, with an excessive use of the imagery of Canticles; and those disfigured by the mannerisms of the Pastoral School, there remain a large number which are hymns of the first rank. These finer hymns are the work of a true poet, almost perfect in style and in beauty of rhythm, concise and profound; the fruits indeed it may be said of Mysticism, but of Mysticism chastened and kept in bounds by deep reverence and by a true and fervent love to the Saviour. Scheffler holds a high place in the first rank of German sacred poets, and is much the finest of the Post-Reformation Roman Catholic hymn-writers. A complete ed. of his poetical works appeared, in two vols., at Regensburg, 1862 (see above).

A number of Scheffler's hymns are noted under their own first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). Two, which are trs. from the Latin, are noted at p. 70, ii., and p. 326, ii. The rest, which have passed into English, are as follows.

i. Ach Gott, was hat vor Herrlichkeit. God's Majesty. 1st pub. as No. 110 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 185), in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "She [the soul] rejoices herself on the glory of Jesus." In the Herrnuth G. B., 1735, No. 67. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Thy Majesty, how vast it is. This is a free tr. of st. i.-iv. as part of No. 189 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 225).

Another tr. is: "My God! how vast a Glory has," as No. 310 in the Moravian H. Bk., pt. ii., 1743 (1754, pt. i., No. 455).

ii. Der edle Schäfer, Gottes Sohn. The Good Shepherd. 1st pub. as No. 185 in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 307), in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled, "She tells of his Faithfulness." In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1705, No. 701, beginning, "Der edle Hirte." Tr. as:—

The true good Shepherd, God's own Son. This is a tr. of st. i., v., by P. H. Molther, as No. 18 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the 1826 and later eds. (1886, No. 22) it begins, "Christ the good Shepherd." The version of 1801, slightly altered, is in Montgomery's Ch. Psalmist, 1825.

iii. Grosser König, dem ich diene. Love to God. 1st pub. as No. 161 in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 274), in 10 st. of 8 l., entitled, "She presents to her Beloved her heart in diverse fashion as a morning gift." Included, greatly altered and beginning, "Grosser König den ich ehre," as No. 737 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1705, and further altered in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Make my heart a garden fair. This is a tr. of st. viii., as st. ii. of No. 439 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 588).

Other trs. are: (1) "Lord, I come, Thy grace adorning," by J. P. Burns, 1869, p. 227. (2) "Almighty King, Eternal Sire," by G. Moultrie, in his Espousals of S. Dorothea, 1870, p. 69.

iv. Jesus ist der schönste Nam'. Love to Christ.

1st pub. as No. 35 in Bk. i., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 72), in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled, "She praises the excellency of the Name of Jesus." Included as No. 59 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and recently as No. 88 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

Jesus is the highest name. This is a good tr. of st. i., ii., viii., ix., by A. T. Russell, as No. 69 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851; repeated, altered, as No. 148 in Kennedy, 1863.

Another tr. is: "Jesus is the sweetest Name, Unto mortals," by J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus; Sanctus, 1884, pt. ii. p. 43.

v. Keine Schönheit hat die Welt. Love to Christ. A beautiful hymn on Christ in Nature. 1st pub. as No. 109 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 183), in 16 st. of 4 l., entitled, "She ponders His charmingness to the creatures." Included in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 204, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 733. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Earth has nothing sweet or fair. This is a very good tr., omitting st. vi.-viii., x., xi., by Miss Cox in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 165 (Hys. from the German, 1864, p. 144). Varying centos have appeared in numerous American collections, e.g. in Hedge and Huntingdon's Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, 1853; Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865; Dutch Reformed Hys. of the Church, 1869, &c.

2. Nothing fair on earth I see. This is a somewhat free tr. of st. i.-v., ix., xii.-xiv., xvi., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 48; repeated, abridged and altered, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 158.

Other trs. are: (1) "All the beauty we can find," as No. 457, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Would you view the glorious face," in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, No. 437. (3) "Whatever of beauty I behold," by Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 35. (4) "Earth has nothing bright for me," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 168. (5) "The world with broadcast beauties sown," by E. Massie, 1867, p. 14.

vi. Morgenstern der finstern Nacht. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 26 in Bk. i., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 63), in 6 st. of 5 l., entitled, "She wishes to have the little Jesus as the true Morning Star in the heaven of her heart." Included in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1705, No. 752; in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865, &c. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Morning star, O cheering sight! This is a good tr., omitting st. ii., iv., as No. 28 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

Another tr. is: "Morning Star in darksome night," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 250.

vii. Nun nimm mein Herz, und alles was ich bin. Self-surrender to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 102 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 168), in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled, "She gives herself to her Bridegroom." Included in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 505, and recently as No. 767 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The tr. in C. U. is:—

O take my heart, and whatsoever is mine. This is a tr. of st. i., iv., by F. W. Foster, as No. 267 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 346).

Another tr. is: "Now take my heart and all that is in me," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 98. Repeated in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 211 (1864, p. 255).

viii. Wollt ihr den Herren finden. Seeking for Christ. 1st pub. in Bk. iv., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust, p. 31 (ed. 1668, Bk. iv., No. 130; Werke, 1862, i. p. 222), in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled, "She gives notice where Jesus is to be found."

In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 338, and Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 777. Tr. as:—

If you would find the Saviour. This is a free version, condensing st. iii., iv., as st. iii. in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 657. Included, greatly altered, and beginning, "Would you find the Saviour?" in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841 and 1852.

ix. Wo willst du hin, weils Abend ist. Evening. A beautiful hymn founded on the Narrative of Christ at Emmaus. 1st pub. as No. 69 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 127), in 4 st. of 8 l., entitled, "She prays that He will abide with her because it has become evening." Included in Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 673. It has passed into English through an entirely rewritten form, in 5 st. of 4 l., which appears in the Plön G. B., 1875, No. 59, and is probably the work of Christoph Gensch von Breitenau, the editor of that book [b. Aug. 12, 1638, at Naumburg, d. Jan. 11, 1732, at Lübeck]. This form is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 325. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Where wilt Thou go? since night draws near. By A. Crull, in full, as No. 93 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. is: "Where wilt Thou go? the eve draws nigh," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 154.

Other hymns by Scheffler which have been rendered into English are:—

x. Ach, sagt mir nicht von Gold und Schätzen. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 89 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 151), in 7 st. of 6 l. Included in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 368, with additional st. as iv., v., and this form is No. 737 in the Urv. L. S., 1851. The trs. are (1) "Tell me no more of golden treasures," in the Suppl. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 53; and Select Hys. from Ger. Psalmody, Tranquebar, 1754, p. 84. (2) "O tell me not of glitt'ring treasure," by Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 75 (1856, p. 105). (3) "O tell me not of gold and treasure," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, August, 1865, p. 121, repeated 'as "Ah, tell me not," &c., in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

xi. Ach, was stehst du auf der Au. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 68, in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 126), in 4 st. of 8 l. In J. F. H. Schlosser's Die Kirche in ihren Liedern, vol. ii., 1852, p. 213, rewritten and beginning "Jesus meine Süßigkeit." This form is tr. as "Jesus, end of my desires," by J. C. Earle in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

xii. Auf, auf, O Seel', auf, auf, zum Streit. Christian Warfare. 1st pub. as No. 201, in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 334), in 11 st. of 6 l., entitled, "She rouses to battle." It is a beautiful picture, founded on 2 Tim. ii. 3-5, and Rev. i. iii., of the Christian campaign and its reward. In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 436, it is altered to "Auf Christen Mensch," and is entitled "Ad arma fideles." This form, with a new st. = st. ix., is repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and is No. 739 in the Urv. L. S., 1851. The trs. are (1) "Up! Christian man, and join the fight," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 44. (2) "Up, Christian! gird thee to the strife," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, July, 1865, p. 106.

xiii. Dein' eigne Liebe zwinget mich. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 100 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 166) in 4 st. of 7 l. In Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 409, with two st. added as ii., v. Tr. as, "Thine own love doth me constrain," by J. Kelly, in the Family Treasury, 1878, p. 716.

xiv. Ihr Sonne kommt heran. Morning. 1st pub. as No. 11 in Bk. i., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 42), in 4 st. of 8 l. Tr. as "The sun will soon appear," by J. Kelly, in the Family Treasury, 1878, p. 716.

xv. Ihr Engel, die das höchste Gut. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 75 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 134), in 7 st. of 4 l. In the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 613, altered and beginning, "Ihr Seraphim, die ihr den kennt." This form is tr. as, "Ye Seraphim, who prostrate fall," as No. 549 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

xvi. Jesu, ew'ge Sonne. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as

No. 93 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 156), in 7 st. of 4 l. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to G. Arnold (so in Ehmann's ed., 1856, p. 79). Tr. as "Christ the spring of endless joys," by J. Kelly, in the Family Treasury, 1878, p. 716.

xvii. Kommt, meine Freund, und höret an. Eternal Life. 1st pub. as No. 202 in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 336), in 16 st. of 7 l. Tr. as, "Come hither, friends, and hear me say," by J. Kelly, in the Family Treasury, 1879, p. 271.

xviii. Meine Seele willt du ruh'n. Love to God. 1st pub. as No. 83 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 144), in 4 st. of 6 l. In A. Luppinius' Andächtig singender Christen-Mund, Wesel, 1692, p. 69, two st. of J. C. Schade were added as v., vi., and this form is at p. 13 in Schade's Pascuicium Cantionum, n. d., 1699. In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 189, six new st. were added as vii.-xii., and this text is repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 819. This last form is tr. as "O my soul, desire's thou rest," in the Suppl. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 56.

xix. Mein Lieb ist mir und ich bin ihm. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 184 in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 306), in 7 st. of 4 l. In the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 761, beginning, "Mein Freund." This is tr. as, "My Friend's to me, and I'm to Him," = No. 467 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

xx. O du allerliebster Gott. Christ in Gethsemane. 1st pub. as No. 41 in Bk. ii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 85), in 6 st. of 8 l. In J. F. H. Schlosser's Die Kirche in ihren Liedern, vol. ii., 1852, p. 209, it begins "Jesus, du mein Herr und Gott." This form is tr. as "Jesus, O my Lord and God," by J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, p. 73.

*xxi. Schau', Braut, wie hängt dein Bräutigam. Passiontide. 1st pub. as No. 44 in Bk. ii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 90), in 10 st. of 4 l. In the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 106. Tr. as, "O Bride! behold thy Bridegroom hangs," as No. 460 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

xxii. Tritt hin, o Seel' und dank' dem Herrn. Thanksgiving. 1st pub. as No. 196 in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 325), in 15 st. of 4 l., with a two line refrain. In Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 604. Tr. as "Come, O my soul, with thankful voice," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 70.

xxiii. Weil ich schon seh' die gold'nen Wangen. Morning. 1st pub. as No. 160 in Bk. v., 1668, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 272), in 11 st. of 6 l. In the Urv. L. S., 1851, No. 476. The trs. are (1) "Because I see red tints adorning," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 119. (2) "I see the golden light of morn," in the Family Treasury, 1877, p. 603.

xxiv. Wie lieblich sind die Wohnungen. Eternal Life. 1st pub. as No. 122 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, p. 203), in 14 st. of 8 l. Tr. as "How lovely are the mansions fair," by J. Kelly, in the Family Treasury, 1879, p. 270.

xxv. Zeuch mich nach dir, so laufen wir. Love to Christ. 1st pub. as No. 72 in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1862, i. p. 130), in 5 st. of 6 l. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 144, st. v., "O Jesu Christ, der du mir bist," is given as st. i. and vi. Tr. as "Draw us to Thee, then will we flee," as No. 137 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

It may be added that in some English books Scheffler appears as a composer of hymn-tunes. This is however a mistake, for the melodies in the Heilige Seelenlust are, as the title distinctly says, by Georg Joseph, a musician living at that time in Breslau. [J. M.]

Schein, Johann Hermann, s. of Hieronymus Schein, pastor at Grünhain, near Annaberg, in Saxony, was b. at Grünhain, Jan. 20, 1586. He matriculated at the University of Leipzig in 1607, and studied there for four years. Thereafter he acted for some time as a private tutor, including two years with a family at Weissenfels. On May 21, 1615, he was appointed Capellmeister, at the court of Duke Johann Ernst, of Sachse-Weimar; and in 1616 he became cantor of St. Thomas's Church, and music director at Leipzig, in succession to Seth Calvisius (d. Nov. 24, 1615). This post he held till his death, at Leipzig,

Nov. 19, 1630. (Bode, p. 411; Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, 1871, p. 26, &c.)

Schein was one of the most distinguished musicians of his time, both as an original composer, and as a harmoniser of the works of others. As a hymn-writer he was not so prolific, or so noteworthy. Most of his hymns were written on the deaths of his children or friends, e.g. on seven of his children, and on his first wife. They appeared mostly in broadsheet form, and were included, along with his original melodies, in his Cantional oder Gesang-Buch Augspurgischer Confession, Leipzig, 1627; 2nd ed., 1645. [Both in Wernigerode Library.]

Those of Schein's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Machs mit mir, Gott, nach deiner Güte. For the Dying. 1st pub., as a broadsheet, at Leipzig, 1628, as ■ Trost-Liedlein à 5 (i.e. for 5 voices), &c. [Berlin Library.] The words, the melody, and the five-part setting, are all by Schein. It was written for, and first used at, the funeral, on Dec. 15, 1628, of Margarita, wife of Caspar Werner, a builder and town councillor at Leipzig, and a churchwarden of St. Thomas's. It is in 6 st. of 6 l.; the initial letters of ll. 1, 3, in st. i.—iv., forming the name Margarita; and the W of st. v. l. 1 standing for Werner. In Schein's Cantional, 1645, No. 303 (marked as Trost-Liedlein, Joh. Herm. Scheins, à 5), and later hymn-books, as e.g. the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 830, st. vi. was omitted. It is Schein's finest production, and one of the best German hymns for the sick and dying. Tr. as:—

Deal with me, God, in mercy now. This is ■ good and full tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 191, set to Schein's melody of 1628.

ii. Mein Gott und Herr, ach sei nicht fern. For the Dying. 1st pub., with his name, in his Cantional, 1627, No. 262, in 9 st. of 6 l. The initial letters of the stanzas give the name Margarita, probably one of the daughters who predeceased him. It is included, in 5 st., in the 1648, and later eds., of Crüger's Praxis; and recently, in full, in von Tucher's Schatz des evang. Kirchengesangs, 1848, No. 555; and reduced to 6 st. in Layritz's Kern des deutschen Kirchenlieds, 1844, No. 421. The tr. in C. U. is:—

My Lord and God, go not away. A good tr. of st. i., ii., iv., v., vii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 254, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. [J. M.]

Schenk, Heinrich Theobald, s. of Simon Schenk, pastor at Heidelberg, on the Schwalm, near Alsfeld, Hesse, was b. at Heidelberg, April 10, 1656. He entered the Pädagogium at Giessen, in 1670, and then pursued his studies at the University (M.A. 1676). In 1676 he returned to the Pädagogium, as one of the masters; and was, from 1677 to 1689, "præceptor classicus." On Dec. 27, 1689, he was ordained as Town preacher and "definitor," at the Stadtkirche in Giessen. He d. at Giessen, April 11, and was buried there April 15, 1727. (F. W. Strieder's Hessische Gelehrten und Schriftsteller Geschichte, vol. x., Cassel, 1795, p. 10; ms. from Dr. Naumann, pastor primarius; and from Dr. Schiller, Gymnasial-director at Giessen. The registers at Giessen give the date of his funeral, but not of his death; but say, that at his death he was aged 71 years less 10 days, which would rather suggest April 21 as the date of his birth.) Only one hymn is known by him, but it is a hymn which is found in almost all recent German hymn-books; and, through trs., in many recent English collections. It is:—

Wer sind die vor Gottes Throne. Eternal Life. This is found in the Neu-vermehrtes Gesang-büchlein, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1719, No. 362, p. 341, in the "Anhang einiger Gesänge"; and is repeated in the Neuest-und vollständigste Frankfurter G. B., 1729, No. 568, in 20 st. of 6 l. In the Hesse-Darmstadt Kirchen G. B., 1733, No. 497, it is given, with a reference to Schenk as its author, and entitled, "On Rev. vii. 13–17." It is included in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1617, omitting st. vii., viii. It is a beautiful hymn on the Church Triumphant (i.—xiii.), and on the aspirations of the Church Militant to attain the same victorious glory. Tr. as:—

1. Who are these like stars appearing. By Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 89, being ■ very good tr. of st. i.—vi., ix.—xi., xiv.—xvii., xx. This has come into extensive use in the cento adopted in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, and repeated in H. A. & M., 1861; being the trs. of st. i., iii.—v., ix. Other centos are found in Rorison's Hys. & Anthems, 1851, &c. Other forms may also be noted:—

(1) Lo! a multitude appearing. This, in T. Darling's Hys. for Ch. of England, 1874, is based on Miss Cox's st. i., iv., v., with two additional stanzas.

(2) Who are these in dazzling brightness, Bearing the victorious palm. This form, found, as No. 630, in the Baptist Ps. & Hys., 1858, is by George Rawson, with st. i., iii., based on Miss Cox's trs. of st. iii., iv. In Mr. Rawson's Hys., Verses, & Chants, 1876, No. 56, it is re-written, so as to rank ■ an original hymn; and there it begins, "Who are these salvation singing."

In 1864 Miss Cox printed a revised text in her Hys. from the German, p. 91. This is found in a considerable variety of centos, in many English and American hymn-books; some following the text of 1864 throughout, and some partly reverting to the text of 1841. It is included, e.g. in the People's Hyl., 1867, Church Hys., 1871, Hyl. Comp., 1876, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, Thring's Coll., 1880 and 1882; and in America, in the Hys. & Songs of Praise, 1874, Laudes Domini, 1884, and others. In H. L. Hastings's Songs of Pilgrimage, 1886, it begins with st. iii., "Who are these in dazzling brightness, These in God's own truth arrayed."

2. Who are these in light adoring. By A. T. Russell, as No. 145 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851; being a tr. of st. i., iv., xi., xv.

3. Who are those before God's throne, What the crowned host I see. This is ■ good tr. of st. i.—vi., ix., x., xiv., xvii., xx., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 207. Repeated, abridged, in Boardman's Sel., Philadelphia, 1861; Kennedy, 1863; and the Sarum Hyl., 1868. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 77, Miss Winkworth repeated the trs. of st. i., iii., v., ix., x., xiv., xvii., altered, and beginning, "Who are those that, far before me."

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Who are those before God's throne, What the countless." By J. D. Burns, in the Family Treasury, 1859, pt. i., p. 307; and his Memoir & Remains, 1869, p. 267. (2) "Who are those round God's throne standing." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 90. (3) "What is this host that round the throne." By Miss Warner, 1869, p. 20. [J. M.]

Schirmer, Michael, s. of Michael Schirmer, inspector of wine casks at Leipzig, was b. at Leipzig, apparently, in July, 1606, his baptism being entered as on July 18, in the registers of St. Thomas's Church there. He matriolated at the University of Leipzig, at Easter, 1619, and graduated M.A. in 1630. In 1636 he was appointed subrector, and in 1651 conrector of the Greyfriars Gymnasium at Berlin. During his conrectorship the rectorship fell vacant several times, and each time, after he had officiated as prorector during the vacancy, a younger man than he was set over him (probably on account of Schirmer's feeble health) till, last of all, in May, 1668, the subrector was promoted over his head. In the same year Schirmer retired from office. The remainder of his life he spent in Berlin, where he pub., in the end of 1668, a version of the Aeneid in German Alexandrine verse, wrote various occasional poems, &c. He d. at Berlin, apparently on May 4, and was certainly buried there, in the churchyard of the Kloster Kirche, on May 8, 1673 (M. Michael Schirmer, &c., by Dr. J. F. Bachmann, Berlin, 1859; K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 180; Koch, iii. 333, &c. Koch speaks of Schirmer as having been rector of the school at Freiberg in Saxony, and then pastor at Striegnitz on the Mulde, both between 1630 and 1636; and of his having been finally, just before his death, appointed archidiaconus at Freiberg. But for these statements there appears to be no evidence whatever. The Michael Schirmer who was rector at Freiberg, and on Feb. 7, 1672, was appointed archidiaconus there, but d. at Freiberg on Oct. 25, 1672, was only b. on March 26, 1635. The rectorate at Freiberg was held by Johann Schellenberg from 1603 to 1642; and the pastorate at Striegnitz was held by Friedrich Hilner from 1623 to 1656).

Schirmer had many domestic and personal afflictions to bear. His wife and his two children predeceased him. The early part of his life in Berlin was spent amid the distress caused by the Thirty Years War, during which Brandenburg, and Berlin itself, suffered greatly from pestilence and poverty. In 1644 a deep melancholy fell upon him, which lasted for five years; and something of the same kind seems to have returned to him for a time, after his wife's death, in Feb. 1667. Schirmer was crowned as a poet in 1637. His earlier productions were mostly occasional pieces in German and Latin. In 1655 he pub., at Berlin, a metrical version of Ecclesiasticus as, Das Buch Jesus Sirach, &c.; and in 1660, also at Berlin, a Scriptural play, which was acted by the scholars of the Gymnasium, and was entitled Der verfolgte David, &c. He also pub., at Berlin, in 1650, versions of the Songs of the Old and New Testament as, Biblische Lieder und Lehrsprüche. The only compositions by him which have come into use as hymns, are those which he contributed to J. Crüger's Neues vollkömliches G. B., Berlin, 1640; and to Crüger's Praxis pietatis melica, Berlin, 1648, &c. (See pp. 271, ii.; and 272, i.). These, five in all, passed into many German hymn-books of the 17th cent., and most of them are still in use. They were reprinted by Dr. Bachmann, as above, pp. 71-81, together with various selections from his other poetical compositions. They are practical, clear, objective, churchly hymns, somewhat related to those of Gerhardt; and still more closely to those of Johann Heermann, from whom indeed Schirmer borrows a few expressions.

The only hymn by Schirmer which has passed into English is:—

O heilger Geist, keh'r bei uns ein. Whitsuntide. 1st pub., 1640, as above, No. 75, in 7 st. of 10 l., entitled, "Another short hymn for Whitsuntide, M. Michael Schirmers." Repeated in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 162; and, recently, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 179. It is a beautiful New Testament paraphrase of Is. xi. 2. The third stanza is partly based on st. vii. of J. Heermann's "Wir wissen nicht, Herr Zebaoth." Tr. as;—

1. O Holy Ghost, descend, we pray. This is a somewhat free tr. of st. i., v., ii., iii., by W. M. Reynolds, as No. 794, in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850; and is repeated, with trs. of st. iv., vi., vii., added, as No. 103, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. The Ohio Hyl. also gives, as st. ii., a tr. of the recast of st. v., which was interpolated between st. i., ii. when the hymn was included in the Hannover G. B., 1657.

2. O Holy Spirit, enter in. This is a good tr., omitting st. ii., iv., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 70. It was repeated, as No. 249, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868. In Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, it is Nos. 480, 481; No. 481 beginning, "O mighty Rock, O source of Life," which is the tr. of st. v. [J. M.]

Schlegel, Catharina Amalia Dorothea von. Little is known of this lady. According to Koch, iv., p. 442, she was b. Oct. 22, 1697, and was "Stiftsfräulein" in the Evangelical Lutheran Stift (i.e. Protestant nunnery) at Cöthen. On applying to Cöthen, however, the present writer was assured that her name did not occur in the books of the Stift; and from the correspondence which she carried on, in 1750-52, with Heinrich Ernst, Count Stolberg (p. 506, ii.), it would rather seem that she was a lady attached to the little ducal court at Cöthen. (ms. from Dr. Eduard Jacobs, Wernigerode, &c.) Further details of her life it has been impossible to obtain.

In the complete ed., 1744, of the Cöthnische Lieder (see p. 50, ii.), Nos. 30 and 73 in pt. i.; and Nos. 3, 20, 24, 33, 43, 50, 84, in pt. ii., are by her. In the marked copies, at Wernigerode, of the Neue Sammlung geistlicher Lieder, Wernigerode, 1752, the following hymns in that collection are ascribed to her, viz. :—Nos. 19, 60, 90, 149, 209, 279, 329, 357, 373, 396, 448, 479, 520, 548, 551, 640, 689, 698, 739, 751.

The only one of her hymns which has passed into English is:—

Stille, mein Wille, dein Jesus hilft siegen. Cross and Consolation. A fine hymn on waiting for God. It appeared in 1752, as above, No. 689, in 6 st. of 6 l.; and is included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 2249 (1865, No. 2017). The tr. in C. U. is:—

Be still, my soul!—The Lord is on thy side. This is a good tr., omitting st. iii., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 2nd Ser., 1855, p. 37 (1884, p. 100). It has been included in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860; Scottish Hyl., 1869; Canadian Presb. H. Bk., 1880; Church Praise, 1883, and others. [J. M.]

Schlegel, Johann Adolf, D.D., s. of Dr. Johann Friedrich Schlegel, Appellationsrath at Meissen, in Saxony, was b. at Meissen, Sept. 17, 1721. After passing through the famous school at Pforta (Schulpforta), near Naumburg, he studied, from 1741 to 1746, at the University of Leipzig, where he became acquainted with Cramer, Gellert, and Klopstock, and was one of the principal contributors to the Bremer Beiträge (Neue Beyträge zum Vergnügen des Verstandes und Witzes). In 1746 he became a private tutor at Strehla, in Saxony, and then returned to Leipzig, where he occupied himself in literary work, until he went, in 1748, to live with his friend Cramer at Crellwitz, near Lützen. He remained at Crellwitz till 1751, when he was appointed a master in his old school at Pforta, and also diaconus of the church there. In 1754 he became chief pastor of the Holy Trinity church at Zerbst, and also professor of Theology and Metaphysics in the Academic Gymnasium in that town. He removed to Hannover in 1759, as pastor of the Markt Kirche. In 1775 he was removed to the Neustadt Church there, as chief pastor, and also as Consistorialrath and Superintendent. While retaining his pastorate at Hannover, he was also appointed, in 1782, as General Superintendent of the district of Hoya. In 1787 he exchanged this for the General Superintendency of the Principality of Kalenberg. The same year he received the degree of D.D. at the Jubilee Festival of the University of Göttingen. He d., of fever, at Hannover, Sept. 16, 1793 (Heerwagen, i., p. 214; Jördens's Lexikon, iv., p. 521; Koch, vi., 217; ms. from Pastor A. Kranold, Hannover).

Schlegel was a most prolific writer, though to the literary world at large the names of his sons, August Wilhelm and Friedrich von Schlegel, are better known. He was one of the most celebrated preachers of his time, and the author of many volumes of sermons. His hymns suited the taste of the Rationalistic period, and were exceedingly popular in the end of the 18th cent., but have now, in great measure, passed out of use. Many of them were merely polished and weakened versions of, or were founded upon, earlier hymns. In his strictly original hymns, he does not at all equal either Gellert or Klopstock. His hymns appeared in the following collections:—

(1) Sammlung geistlicher Gesänge zur Beförderung der Erbauung, Leipzig, 1766; 2nd ed., revised and enlarged, Leipzig, 1772. (2) Zweite Sammlung, Leipzig, 1769. (3) Dritte Sammlung, Leipzig, 1772. (4) Vermischte Gedichte, 2 vols., Hannover, 1787 and 1789 [1, 2, 4, in Brit. Mus.; 3 and 2nd ed. of 1 in Hamburg Library.] He edited, and contributed to, the 1792 Appz. to the Hannover G. B., 1740.

One of Schlegel's hymns is a tr. of, and is noted under "Veni Creator Spiritus." Another is noted under Gellert, C. F., No. ix. (p. 407, ii.). The others which have passed into English are:—

i. Wie herrlich strahlt der Morgenstern. Love to Christ. 1st pub. in 1763, as above, p. 112, in 7 st. of 11 l., and entitled, "Longing after union with Jesus, on the model of the old hymn, Wie schön leuchtet der Morgenstern." It is a recast of Nicolai's hymn (see p. 806, ii.), but so thorough as to be almost independent of it. It was included in Zollikofer's G. B., Leipzig, 1766, No. 404; in the Hamburg G. B., 1842, No. 450, &c. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. How brightly beams the Morning Star! This is a good tr., omitting st. iv., vii., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 36.

2. How brightly shines the Morning Star! What eye desorries it from afar. A good tr., omitting st. vii., contributed by J. M. Sloan to J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865, No. 282, and repeated, omitting st. iii., iv., in Wilson's Songs of Zion, 1878. Mr. Sloan recast the trs. of st. i., ii., v., vi., for the Free Church H. Bk., 1882; and this form is repeated in Church Praise, 1883. In Laudes Domini, N.Y., 1884, the text of 1882 is given with the added st., "Rejoice ye heavens," from Mercer's variation of Jacobi's tr. from Nicolai (see p. 807, i.).

Hymns not in English C. U.:—

ii. Es lag die ganze Welt. St. John Baptist's Day. In 1766, as above, p. 25, in 9 st. of 8 l. It is based on a hymn by J. G. Olearius (p. 866, ii.), 1st pub. 1664, p. 29, in 5 st., as "Es war die ganze Welt;" and in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 336. The tr. from Schlegel's recast is "The world enslav'd to sin." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 193 (1856, p. 282).

iii. Jauchzt! = ist eine Ruh vorhanden. Sleeping in Jesus. 1st pub. in his Vermischte Gedichte, vol. i., 1787, p. 123, in 2 st. of 10 l., dated 1777, and entitled, "Of the happiness of Heaven." It is based on Kunth's

"Es ist noch eine Ruh vorhanden (p. 634, ii.). Tr. as "Rejoice, that rest is not far distant." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 89.

iv. Mein Jesu, für dein Herz. Passiontide. 1st pub. in 1766, as above, p. 65, in 14 st. of 6 l. Tr. "How trying to the heart." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 210 (1856, p. 299).

v. Schweig Stürme! brauset nicht ihr Meere. Summer. This is an Ode, 1st pub. in the Neue Beyträge, &c., Bremen and Leipzig, vol. i., 1744 (ed. 1747, p. 184), and entitled, "Praise of the Godhead. On the model of the 104th Psalm." In C. C. Sturm's Sammlung geistlicher Gesänge über die Werke Gottes in der Natur, Halle, 1776, p. 257, it is recast, and begins, "Rund um mich her ist nicht als Freude;" and this form is in the Hamburg G. B., 1842, No. 702. It is tr. as, "Around me all is joy—and oh, my God." By Miss Fry, 1859, p. 111.

vi. Tag der Erleuchtung uns gebracht. Whituside. 1st pub. in 1769, as above, p. 42, in 9 st. In some collections, as in the Kopenhagen G. B., 1782, No. 282, it begins "O Tag, der uns des Vaters Rath." This is tr. as "O day! that hath unto our souls set forth." By Miss Fry, 1859, p. 94. [J. M.]

Schlosser, Ludwig Heinrich. [Neumeister, E., No. iii., p. 797, ii.]

Schmidt, Johann Eusebius, s. of Johann Jakob Schmidt, pastor at Hohenfelden, near Erfurt, was b. at Hohenfelden, Jan. 12, 1670. He matriculated at the University of Jena in the autumn of 1688, and in 1691 went to Erfurt to attend lectures by Breithaupt and Francke. Part of 1692 he spent in travelling in North Germany, and during the years 1693–96 he was mostly employed in private tuition at Gotha. On the 12th S. after Trinity, 1697, he began work at Siebleben, near Gotha, as substitute (curate in charge), and on the 4th S. in Advent, 1698, as pastor there. He d. at Siebleben, Dec. 25, 1745, with the character of "An edifying teacher in his parish, a good example to his flock, and a methodical man in his office." (G. G. Brückner's Kirchen und Schulentaat, vol. iii. pt. iv. p. 59, Gotha, 1761, &c.).

Schmidt's hymns were contributed to Freylinghausen's Geistreiches G. B., 1704, and Neues Geistreiches G. B., 1714. In the latter Freylinghausen prints as a supplement (Zugabe) 17 so-called "Psalms for Festivals," being compositions in Ode or Psalm form and unrhymed, remarking in his preface that the author of these (i.e. Schmidt), had written similar compositions for all the Sundays in the year. Of his hymns in rhyme (4, 1st pub. 1704; 21, 1st pub. 1714), some have attained considerable popularity, being of moderate length, good in style, thoughtful and interesting.

Of Schmidt's hymns those which have passed into English are:—

i. Es ist vollbracht: vergiss ja nicht. Passiontide. This hymn on "It is finished," 1st appeared in 1714 as above, No. 72, in 6 st. of 5 l. Included as No. 96 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. All is fulfill'd—my heart, record. By A. T. Russell, omitting st. iv., vi., as No. 100 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. 'Tis finished: ■ glorious word. A full but rather free tr. by Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymn. Christ., 1863, repeated, omitting st. ii., vi., in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

ii. Erhebe den Herren, der Alles in Allen. Thanksgiving. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 560, in 4 st. of 8 l. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. Tr. as, "The praises of him who is Grace's Dispenser." This is No. 550 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

iii. Fahre fort, fahre fort. Faithfulness. Founded on Christ's Messages to the Seven Churches in Asia. 1st pub. 1704 as above, No. 667, in 7 st. of 7 l. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 223. The trs. are:—

(1) "Hasten on, hasten on," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, Sept. 1865, p. 143, and Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. (2) "Hold thy course," by E. Massie, 1867, p. 31. (3) "Onward go, onward go," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 238.

iv. Gelkruziger! mein Herze sucht. Passiontide. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 73, in 6 st. of 6 l. In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 483. The trs. are:—

(1) "Christ crucify'd! my Soul by Faith Desires," in the Supp. to Ger. Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 23. (2) "Christ crucify'd, my soul by faith, With," as No. 424, based on the earlier tr., in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 959).

v. O Jesu der du dich. Easter. 1st pub. 1704 as above, No. 651, in 5 st. of 6 l., repeated in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 123. Tr. as "O Jesu, who now free," as No. 552 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

[J. M.]

Schmolek, Benjamin, s. of Martin Schmolek, or Schmoleke, Lutheran pastor at Brauchitzchdorf, near Liegnitz in Silesia, was b. at Brauchitzchdorf, Dec. 21, 1672. He entered the Gymnasium at Lauban in 1688, and spent five years there. After his return home he preached for his father a sermon which so struck the patron of the living that he made Benjamin an allowance for three years to enable him to study theology. He matriculated, at Michaelmas, 1693, at the University of Leipzig, where he came under the influence of J. Olearius, J. B. Carpov, and others, and throughout his life retained the character of their teaching, viz. a warm and living practical Christianity, but Churchly in tone and not Pietistic. In the autumn of 1697, after completing his studies at Leipzig (during his last year there he supported himself mainly by the proceeds of occasional poems written for wealthy citizens, for which he was also crowned as a poet), he returned to Brauchitzchdorf to help his father, and, in 1701, was ordained as his assistant. On Feb. 12, 1702, he married Anna Rosina, dau. of Christoph Rehwald, merchant in Lauban (see No. xvii. below); and in the end of the same year was appointed diaconus of the Friedenskirche at Schweidnitz in Silesia. As the result of the Counter-Reformation in Silesia, the churches in the principality of Schweidnitz had been taken from the Lutherans, and for the whole district the Peace of Westphalia (1648) allowed only one church (and that only of timber and clay, without tower or bells), which the Lutherans had to build at Schweidnitz, outside the walls of the town; and the three clergy attached to this church had to minister to a population scattered over some thirty-six villages, and were moreover hampered by many restrictions, e.g. being unable to communicate a sick person without a permit from the local Roman Catholic priest. Here Schmolek remained till the close of his life, becoming in 1708 archidiaconus, in 1712 senior, and in 1714 pastor primarius and inspector. Probably as the result of his exhausting labours he had a stroke of paralysis on Laetare (Mid-Lent) Sunday, 1730, which for a time laid him aside altogether, and after which he never recovered the use of his right hand. For five years more he was still able to officiate, preaching for the last time on a Fastday in 1735. But two more strokes of paralysis followed, and then cataract came on, relieved for a time by a successful operation, but returning again incurably. For the last months of his life he was confined to bed, till the message of release came to him, on the anniversary of his wedding, Feb. 12, 1737. (Koch, v. 463; Bode, p. 144; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 306; sketch prefixed to Ledderhose's ed. of Schmolek's Geistliche Lieder, Halle, 1857, &c.)

Schmolek was well known in his own district as a popular and useful preacher, a diligent pastor, and a man of wonderful tact and discretion. It was however his devotional books, and the original hymns therein contained, that brought him into wider popularity, and carried his name and fame all over Germany. Long lists of his works and of the various editions through which many of them passed are given by Koch, Bode and Goedeke. It is rather difficult to trace the hymns, as they are copied from one book of his into another, &c. The most important books which are the first sources of his hymns are the following:—

(1) Heilige Flammen der himmlisch-geirneten Seele, &c. Of this the 1st ed. seems to have appeared at Striegau, in 1704, with 50 hymns; the 2nd, in 1705, with 100; the 3rd, in 1706, with 140. The earliest we have been able to find are a pirated ed. of 1707, and the 4th ed., at Görlitz and Lauban, 1709. [Both in Royal Library, Berlin.] This was his most popular book, and passed through 13 eds. in his lifetime. (2) Der lustige Sabbath, in der Stille zu Zion, mit heiligen Liedern gefeyert, &c. Jauer and Schweidnitz, 1712 [Berlin Library]. (3) Das in gebundenen Seufzern mit Gott verbundene Andächtige Hertz, &c., Breslau and Liegnitz, 1714 [Berlin Library]. 2nd ed., enlarged, 1715. (4) Eines andächtigen Hertzens Schmuck und Asche, 1st ed., apparently 1716; 2nd ed., Breslau and Liegnitz, 1717, is in Berlin. (5) Geistlicher Wander-Stab des Sionitischen Pilgrims, &c., Schweidnitz and Jauer, 1717 [Berlin Library]. (6) Freuden-Oel in Traurigkeit, &c., Breslau and Liegnitz, 1720 [Berlin Library]. (7) Schöne Kleider vor einen betrübten Geist, &c., Breslau and Liegnitz, 1723 [Berlin Library]. (8) Mara und Manna, &c., Breslau and Liegnitz, 1726 [Berlin Library]. (9) Bochim und Elim, &c., Breslau and Liegnitz, 1731 [Berlin Library and Brit. Mus.]. (10) Der geistliche Kirchen-Gefährte, &c., Schweidnitz, 1732 [Brit. Mus. and Göttingen Library]. (11) Klage und Reigen, &c., Breslau and Liegnitz, n. d., 1734 [Berlin Library]. The contents of these, and of his numerous other works, are collected in his Sämtliche Trost- und Geistreiche Schriften, &c., 2 vols., Tübingen, 1738 and 1740 (later ed. dated 1740 and 1761). Selections have been recently ed. by Ludwig Grote (Leipzig, 1855) and by K. F. Ledderhose, as above.

Schmolek was the most popular hymn-writer of his time, and was hailed as the "Silesian Rist," as the "second Gerhardt," &c. Nor was he altogether unworthy of such praise. It is true that he did not possess the soaring genius of Gerhardt. Nor had he even Gerhardt's concise, simple style, but instead was too fond of high-sounding expressions, of plays upon words, of far-fetched but often recurring contrasts, and in general of straining after effect, especially in the pieces written in his later years. In fact he wrote a great deal too much, and latterly without proper attention to concentration or to proportion. Besides Cantatas, occasional pieces for weddings, funerals, &c., he is the author of some 900 hymns, properly so called. These were written for all sorts of occasions, and range over the whole field of churchly, family, and individual life. Naturally they are not all alike good; and those in his first three collections are decidedly the best. A deep and genuine personal religion, and a fervent love to the Saviour, inspire his best hymns; and as they are not simply thought out but felt, they come from the heart to the heart. The best of them are also written in a clear, flowing, forcible, natural, popular style, and abound in sententious sayings, easily to be remembered. Even of these many are, however, more suited for family use than for public worship. Nevertheless they very soon came into extensive use, not only in Silesia, but all over Germany. Thus, for example, in the Hannover G. B., 1740, and the Lüneburg

G. B., 1767, there are 73 by Schmolck. In the Andere Theil, 1725, of the Gotha G. B., there are 256, and the Neue Anhang, circa 1732, has 45 more; so that in the complete book, no less than 301, out of 1360, are by him. In the recent German hymn-books many still remain; and the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, so often referred to in this Dictionary, has in all 114 of his hymns.

A number of Schmolck's hymns are annotated under their original first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). The others which have passed into English are:—

i. Der beste Freund ist in dem Himmel. Love of Jesus. 1st pub. in his Heilige Flammen (ed. 1709, p. 100), in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "The best Friend." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 788. The tr. in C. U. is:—

A faithful friend is waiting yonder. This is a good tr., omitting st. v., as No. 293, in Kennedy, 1863.

ii. Die Woche geht zum Ende. Saturday Evening. In his Andächtige Hertze, 1714, p. 116, in 10 st. of 8 l., entitled "Evening Hymn," and appointed for Evening Prayer on Saturday. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1158. Tr. as:—

The week draws near its ending. This is a good tr. of st. i., vi., vii., x., marked as by "A. G.," as No. 81 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

Other trs. are: (1) "Though now the week is ending," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 107. (2) "The week at length is over," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 137.

iii. Gott du bist selbst die Liebe. Holy Matrimony. In his Schmuck und Asche, 1717, p. 289, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled "Marriage Hymn"; and so in his Wanderstab, 1717, p. 70. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1407. Tr. as:—

God, Who all providest. This is a good tr., omitting st. iii., by J. M. Sloan, as No. 312 in J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865.

iv. Halleluja! Jesus lebt. Easter. In his Bochim und Elim, 1731, p. 67, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled "Hallelujah! at the grave of Jesus." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 296. Tr. as:—

Hallelujah! Lo, He wakes. By E. Cronenwett, omitting st. iv., as No. 79 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. is: "Hallelujah! Jesus lives! Life, immortal life, He gives." This is a full and good tr., by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 486, repeated in the Treasury of Sacred Song, Kirkwall, n.d.

v. Heute mir und Morgen dir. Funeral Hymn. In his Schmuck und Asche, 1717, p. 252, in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "Daily Dying"; ll. 1, 6 of each st. being identical. So in his Wanderstab, 1717, p. 66. In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1010. The tr. in C. U. is:—

To-day mine, to-morrow thine. This is a good and full tr., by Miss Warner, in her Hys. of the Church Militant, 1858, p. 260; repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860.

vi. Je grösser Kreuz, je näher Himmel. Cross and Consolation. In his Andächtige Hertze, 1714, p. 273, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled "Hymn of Cross and Consolation." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1233. By its sententiousness and its manifold illustrations of the power of the Cross it has been a favourite with many. Tr. as:—

1. Greater the Cross, the nearer heaven. This is a good tr., omitting st. ii., iii., in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848. In Sacred Lyrics from the German, Philadelphia, U.S., 1859, p. 133, it is marked as by "J. J. Gurney," but upon what authority we know not.

2. The more the cross, the nearer heaven. By Miss Warner, in her Hys. of the Church Militant, 1858, p. 238, repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860.

Another tr. is: "The heavier the cross, the nearer heaven," by J. D. Burns, in the Family Treasury, 1859, p. 160 (Memoir and Remains, 1869, p. 242); repeated in the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, ed. 1883, p. 758, altered and beginning, "Heavier the cross."

vii. Jesus soll die Lösung sein. New Year. In his Mara und Manna, 1726, p. 201, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled "Jesus's Name for the New Year, 1725." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 199, st. i.-iv. are given, with an added st. as st. iii. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Jesus shall the watchword be. This is a good tr. of st. i.-iv., by J. D. Burns, in his Memoir and Remains, 1869, p. 262; repeated (reading shall ow) in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. is: "Jesus's name shall be our watchword," by J. Kelly, in the Family Treasury, 1868, p. 689.

viii. Licht vom Licht, erleuchte mich. Sunday Morning. This fine hymn appeared in his Andächtige Hertze, 1714, p. 19, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "Morning Hymn," as one of the hymns for Morning Prayer on Sundays. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1061. Tr. as:—

Light of Light, enlighten me. This is a very good tr., omitting st. vii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 66, and thence in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 17. Repeated, in full, in Kennedy, 1863; Bapt. Hyl.; 1879, and others, and in America in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868; Dutch Ref. Hys. of the Church, 1869; Presb. Hyl., 1874, &c.; and, abridged, in various collections.

Other trs. are: (1) "Light of Light! illumine me," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 6. (2) "O thou blessed Light of Light," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 74.

ix. Meinen Jesum lass ich nicht, Ach was wollt ich besseres haben. Love to Christ. In his Heilige Flammen (ed. 1707, p. 7; ed. 1709, p. 10), in 8 st. of 6 l., entitled "The constant faithfulness of Jesus." The initial letters of the various lines give the name "Maria Helena von Hohenberg, gebahrene Frein von Biebrana." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 818. Tr. as:—

I'll with Jesus never part. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., iv., as st. iii.-v. of No. 378 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the ed. of 1886, No. 452 (see p. 614, i.), the part from Schmolck begins, "He is mine and I am His" (the tr. of st. ii.).

Another tr. is: "I'll not leave Jesus—never, never," by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 509.

x. Mein Gott, ich weiss wohl dass ich sterbe. For the Dying. This seems to have first appeared in the 9th ed. c. 1700, of the Breslau Vollständige Kirchen- und Haus-Music, p. 805. Also in Schmolck's Heilige Flammen (ed. 1707, p. 74; ed. 1709, p. 199), in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled "Daily Thoughts on Death." Included in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1478. Tr. as:—

My God! I know that I must die, My mortal. This is a good and full tr. by Mrs. Findlater, in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 39 (1884, p. 41), repeated in Boardman's Sel., Philadelphia, U. S., 1861; Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, and Holy Song, 1869.

Other trs. are: (1) "That I shall die full well I know," by Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 232). (2) "My God! I know full well that I must die," by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 344. (3) "My God, I know that I must die; I know," by G. Moultrie, in his Espousals of S. Dorothea, 1870.

xi. Mein Jesus lebt! was soll ich sterben. Easter. In his Heilige Flammen (ed. 1707, p. 40;

ed. 1709, p. 78), in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled "The Christian living with Jesus." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 312. Tr. as:—

My Saviour lives; I shall not perish. This is a good tr. by A. T. Russell, omitting st. ii., as No. 115, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851; slightly altered in Kennedy, 1863.

xii. O wie fröhlich, o wie selig. Eternal Life. In his Mara and Manna, 1726, p. 211, in 8 st. of 8 l., entitled "The best lot in God's hands." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 718. Tr. as:—

Oh how joyous, oh how blessed. This is a good tr. of st. i., v., viii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 262, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

Another tr. is: "Oh, how blest beyond our telling." This is in the British Herald, Nov., 1866, p. 360; repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. It is from "O wie unaussprechlich selig," a recast, probably by J. S. Diterich, as No. 133, in the Berlin G. B., 1765, in 9 st.

xiii. Schmückt das Fest mit Maien. Whitsuntide. In his Andächtige Herteze, 1714, p. 246, in 9 st. of 10 l., entitled "Hymn for Whitsuntide." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 372. Tr. as:—

Come, deck our feast to-day. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. iv., in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 110. Abridged and recast in Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1864, No. 265.

xiv. Thut mir auf die schöne Pforte. Sunday. In his Kirchen-Gefährte, 1732, p. 47, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "Appearing before God" (in his Klage und Reigen, 1734, p. 89, entitled "The first step into the Church"). In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1381. Tr. as:—

1. Open now thy gates of beauty. This is a good tr., omitting st. iii., vii., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 15. Repeated, generally in full, in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866; New Cong. H. Bk. Suppl., 1874; Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884; and in America in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868; Evang. Hyl., N. Y., 1880; Laudes Domini, 1884.

2. Open wide the gates of beauty. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., iv., vi., vii., by H. L. Hastings, dated 1885, as No. 1076, in his Songs of Pilgrimage, 1886.

Another tr. is: "Throw the glorious gates wide open," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 146.

xv. Weine nicht, Gott lebet noch. Cross and Consolation. In his Heilige Flammen (ed. 1709, p. 144), in 7 st. of 8 l., entitled "A little handkerchief for tears." Founded on St. Luke vii. 13. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1327. Tr. as:—

Weep not,—Jesus lives on high. By Mrs. Findlater, omitting st. iii., in H. L. L., 1st Ser. 1854, p. 13; repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860.

Another tr. is: "Weep not, for God, our God, doth live," by Dr. R. Maguire, 1883, p. 59.

xvi. Willkommen, Held im Streite. Easter. In his Lustige Sabbath, 1712, p. 95, in 12 st. of 4 l., entitled "Easter Triumphant Arch. At Midday on Easter Day." In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 627. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Welcome Thou victor in the strife. This is a good tr., omitting st. ii.—iv., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 91 (C. B. for England, 1863, No. 61, omitting the trs. of st. v., viii., ix.). It was included, in full, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868; Bapt. Service of Song, 1871, and others. The trs. of st. vi., viii., altered and beginning, "The dwellings of the free resound" (and with three st. not from the German, added), are included as

No. 263 in the Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1864, as a "Hymn of Peace."

Hymns not in English C. U.:—

Schmücke dich, o liebe Seele. J. Franck. [Holy Communion.] Of this st. i. first appeared in J. Crüger's Geistliche Kirchen Melodien, 1649, No. 103, set to the beautiful melody by Crüger given in the C. B. for England (see below). The full form, in 9 st. of 8 l., is in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 199, entitled "Preparation for Holy Communion." Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 267, and most succeeding hymn-books, as recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 490. In Franck's Geistliches Sion, 1674, No. 22 (1846, p. 55).

This hymn is perhaps the finest of all German hymns for the Holy Communion. It is an exhortation to the soul to arise and draw near to partake of the Heavenly Food and to meditate on the wonders of Heavenly Love; ending with a prayer for final reception at the Eternal Feast. It soon attained, and still retains, popularity in Germany (in many German churches it is still the unvarying hymn at the celebration), was one of the first hymns tr. into Malabar, and passed into English in 1754.

It has been tr. into English as:—

1. Come, soul, thyself adorning. A free tr. by

E. Jackson of st. i., vii., viii., as No. 199 in Dr. Hook's Church School H. Bk., 1850.

2. Deck thyself, my soul, with gladness. A good tr., omitting st. iii., vi., viii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser. 1858, p. 94. Included in full in Cantate Domino, Boston, U. S., 1859, the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880, &c., and, omitting st. vi., in Snapp's Songs of G. and G., 1876. In Kennedy, 1863, st. iv.—vi. beginning "Here I sink before Thee lowly," were given as No. 660, and the same in the Christian H. Bk., Cincinnati, 1865.

3. Deck thyself, my soul, with gladness. By Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 93. This is her Lyra Ger. version rewritten to the original metre. This form is found in the Clifton College H. Bk., 1872, and the Evangelical Hyl., N. Y., 1880.

4. Soul, arise, dispel Thy sadness. A tr. of st. i., iv., ix. by Miss Borthwick as No. 259 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, repeated in H. L. L., 1884, p. 263.

Other trs. are: (1) "Trim thy Lamp, O Soul betrothed," as No. 468 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Soul, at this most awful season," rewritten from the 1754 as No. 558 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 964). (3) "Leave, my Soul, the shades of darkness," in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 88, signed "J. M.]

Schneegass, Cyriacus, was b. Oct. 5, 1546, at Buffleben, near Gotha. He studied and graduated M.A. at the University of Jena. In 1573 he became pastor of the St. Blasius church at Friedrichroda, near Gotha. He was also adjunct to the Superintendent of Weimar, and in this capacity signed the Formula of Concord in 1579. He d. at Friedrichroda, Oct. 23, 1597 (Koch, ii. 252, &c.).

Schneegass was a diligent pastor, a man mighty in the Scriptures, and firm and rejoicing in his faith. He was also an excellent musician and fostered the love of music among his people. His hymns reflect his character, and are good and simple, setting forth in clear and intelligible style the leading ideas of the festivals of the Christian year, &c., and his Psalm versions are also of considerable merit. They appeared principally in his (1) zv. Psalmi graduum, &c., Erfurt, 1595 (Gotha Library). This contains the Psalms of Degrees (120-134) also Ps. 82 and 85, and three hymns. (2) Weihenacht und New Jahrs-Gesäng, Erfurt, 1595. Koch speaks of this as containing 9 hymns. The present writer has been unable to trace a copy of the book. (3) Geistliche Lieder und Psalmen. Für Einfeltige from Herzen zugerichtet, Erfurt, 1597 [Berlin Library]. This is the complete edition of his psalms and hymns, containing 72 in all.

Of his hymns those which have passed into English are:—

i. Das neugeborne Kindelein. Christmas. Probably first pub. in No. 2 above. Included in 1597 as above, No. 1, in 4 st. of 4 l., entitled "A beautiful little Christmas hymn on the dear little Jesus." Repeated in Wackermagel v. p. 138, and as No. 65 in the Uno. L. S., 1851. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. The holy Son, the new-born Child. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 60 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. The new-born Child this early morn. In full as No. 46 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. Another tr. is (3) "The new-born Babe, whom Mary bore," as No. 439 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

ii. Herr Gott Vater, wir preisen dich. New Year. Probably 1st pub. in No. 2 above. Included in 1597 as above, No. 7, in 4 st. of 7 l., entitled "A New Year's Hymn." Repeated in Wackermagel v. p. 139, in the Pfalz G. B., 1859, No. 129, and the Ohio G. B., 1870, No. 54. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Lord our Father, thanks to Thee. In full, by A. Crull, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. [J. M.]

Schneesing, Johannes, sometimes called Cniomusus or Chyomusus, was a native of Frankfurt-am-Main. He was appointed, sometime before 1524, assistant to Johann Langenhayn, pastor of St. Margaret's church, in Gotha, who had begun, in 1522, to preach the doctrines of the Reformation. Subsequently he became pastor at Friemar, near Gotha; and in the records of the Visitation in 1534, he is described as a "learned, diligent, pious, and godly man." He d. at Friemar, in 1567. (Koch, i. 376, &c.)

During Schneeing's early years at Friemar, his energies were greatly exercised in combating the Anabaptist doctrines promulgated in the neighbourhood by Nicolaus Storch, of Zwickau. Throughout his incumbency, he greatly interested himself in the children of his flock, for whom he prepared a Catechism, taught them in school, catechised them in church, and, as his pupil, Marx Wagner declares, taught them to sing many hymns and tunes which he had himself composed. He also possessed some skill as a painter.

The only hymn which has been ascribed to Schneeing, with any certainty, is—

Alllein zu dir, Herr Jesu Christ. Penitence. The earliest hymn-book to which this has yet been traced, is the (Low German) Magdeburg G. B., 1542, where it begins, "Alleyn tho dy," and is entitled, "A Hymn of Penitence." Wackernagel, iii., pp. 174-177, gives this, and three other forms (the oldest being from an undated Nürnberg broadsheet, circa 1540), and ascribes it to Schneeing. It was included by Luther in V. Babst's G. B., 1545; and this text, in 4 st. of 9 l., is repeated in many later collections, as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 361. Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, p. 85, calls it "an immortal hymn of prayer of a confident faith."

Its rhymes show that it was evidently written in High German, and, therefore, apparently, earlier than 1542. In the earliest broadsheets and hymn-books, it appears without name. Schneeing's pupil, Marx Wagner (b. at Friemar, 1528), in his Einfältiger Bericht, wie durch Nic. Storcken, der Aufruhr in Thüringen sey angefangen worden, Erfurt, 1597, distinctly says that it was composed by Schneeing, and inserted by him in the ms. Kirchenordnung (i.e. Liturgy), which he composed, in 1542, for the church at Friemar. Conrad Huober [b. 1507, at Bergzabern; studied theology at the University of Basel; 1531, diaconus, and 1545, Canon of St. Thomas's church at Strassburg; d. at Strassburg, April 23, 1577], to whom it is ascribed in the Gros Kirchen G. B., Strassburg, 1560, does not seem to have had more share in it than a few alterations in the text; and the earliest Strassburg H. Bk. in which it appears, is the New auserlesen Gesangbüchlein, 1545, where it is marked "N. N." and not with Huober's name.

The melody generally set to it is first found in an undated broadsheet, which Wackernagel, in his Bibliographie, 1855, p. 172, No. CDXXXVIII dates as probably at Wittenberg, 1541, and is repeated in V. Babst's G. B., 1545, and many later books, including the C. B. for England, 1863 (see below). It has been also ascribed to Schneeing, but this ascription seems decidedly doubtful.

The trs. of Schneeing's hymn are:—

1. In Thee alone, O Christ, my Lord. A good tr. of st. i.-iii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 194, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. Lord Jesus Christ, in Thee alone. A good and full tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 129. Repeated, slightly varied in metre, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 112.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "In Thee, Lord Christ, is fix'd my hope." By J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 20 (1732, p. 91). (2) "In Thee alone, Lord Jesus Christ." This is No. 308, in pt. i., of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (3) "In Thee, O Christ, is all my Hope." This is based on Jacobi's tr., and is No. 539, in pt. i., of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1886, No. 284). Included in the 1780 and later eds. of Lady Huntingdon's Selection. (4) "According to Thy mercy, Lord." This is a tr. of st. iii., by J. Swertzer, as st. i. of No. 720, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 711).

Schnesing, Johannes. [Schneeing, J.]

Scholefield, James, M.A., s. of the Rev. Nathaniel Scholefield, Congregational Minister at Henley-on-Thames, was b. Nov. 15, 1789, and educated at Christ's Hospital, and at Cambridge, B.A. 1812. Taking Holy Orders, he was Curate to the Rev. Charles Simeon, 1813; Fellow of Trinity, Cambridge, 1815; and Incumbent of St. Michael's, Cambridge, 1823. He was also Regius Professor of Greek at Cambridge, 1825, and Canon of Ely, 1849. He d. at Hastings, April 4, 1853. In addition to various learned works he pub. A Sel. of Psalms and Hymns, 1823 (11th ed., 1855), and Passion Week, a small devotional work including hymns, 1828. His Memoir was pub. by his widow in 1855. His hymns now in C. U., all from Passion Week, 1828, are:—

1. Draw me, O draw me, gracious Lord. Passiontide.

2. I looked, and to my raptured eyes. Christ in Glory.

3. Once did the Ointment's rich perfume. Anointing the Feet of Jesus.

Schöner, Johann Gottfried, s. of J. G. Schöner, pastor at Rügheim, near Hassfurt, Bavaria, was b. at Rügheim, April 15, 1749. He studied at the universities of Leipzig and Erlangen. In 1772 he became tutor in the family of Herr von Winkler at Nürnberg, by whose influence he was appointed, in Sept. 1773, preacher at St. Margaret's chapel, in the Kaiserburg, at Nürnberg. He was then appointed, in 1783, diaconus of St. Mary's church, and in 1783 diaconus of St. Lawrence's church, where, in 1809, he became chief pastor (Stadtpfarrer). After 1799 he suffered greatly from nervous affections, and in October 1817, he had to resign his offices. He d. at Nürnberg, June 28, 1818. (Koch vi. 399; Heerwagen ii. pp. 32, 262, &c.)

Schöner was a popular preacher, and was specially successful with children. He took a great interest in the circulation of the Bible, and founded the Nürnberg Bible Society in 1805. His hymns are the fruit of genuine and earnest piety, and attained considerable popularity. A number were printed separately, or in magazines. The more important of the collected editions are (1) Einige Lieder zur Erbauung, Nürnberg, 1777 [Berlin Library]. (2) Vermischte geistliche Lieder und Gedichte, Nürnberg, 1790. (3) Vollständige Sammlung der geistlichen Lieder und Gedichte von Johann Gottfried Schöner, Nürnberg, 1810.

Those of Schöner's hymns which have passed into English are:—

1. Erhebt euch, frohe Lobgesänge. Holy Matrimony. Included 1790, as above, p. 51, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "After a Marriage." It is one of the best hymns on the subject. It was included, but greatly altered, and in 12 st. (st. iii.-v., vii., ix., being added), as No. 490 in J. E. Gossner's Sammlung, 3rd ed. 1825, beginning "Erhebt euch, frohe Jubellieder." This text is repeated in full in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 2978; and, omitting the added sts., as No. 622 in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Raise high the notes of exultation. A good tr., from Bunsen, by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 71. Included in full, but altered in metre, in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., 1857 and 1864, beginning "Now let your notes of praise arise." Miss Cox recast her tr. for her Hys. from German, 1864, p. 79, where it begins "Rise high, ye notes, a glad ovation." The form in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, is mainly from the 1864 text, but begins with the original first line, and omits st. iv. The form in Thring's Coll., 1882, is also mainly from the 1864 text; but it omits st. iii., and begins "Raise high in joyful acclamation."

Another tr. is: "Lift up yourselves, ye joyous strains." In the British Mag., Nov. 1837, p. 617.

ii. Himmel an, nur Himmel an. Longing for Heaven. Included 1810, as above, p. 198, in 10 st. of 8 l., entitled "Our Conversation is in Heaven, Phil. iii. 20. A call to all Christians." It had previously appeared in the Sammlungen für Liebhaber christlicher Wahrheit und Gottseligkeit, Basel, 1806, p. 222. It has been a special favourite in Württemberg, and is No. 421 in the Württemberg G. B., 1842. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Heavenward, still heavenward. In full, by Dr. H. Mills, in his Horae Ger., 1845, p. 163 (1856, p. 251), included, abridged, in M. W. Stryker's Christian Chorals, 1885.

Other hymns by Schöner are:—

iii. Der Glaube fehlt, und darum fehlen. Faith. On the evils of feeble faith. In 1790 as above, p. 115, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled "Feeble Faith." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 652. Tr. as "Faith fails; Then in the dust," by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 427.

iv. Es dankt mein Herz! It jauchzt mein-Lied. Pilgrim Song. In 1810 as above, p. 112, in 10 st. of 4 l., entitled "Hymn of consolation on the pilgrim way to Heaven." In the Württemberg G. B., 1842, it begins, "Dir dankt mein Herz." Tr. as, "O Christ, in gladsome faith arise," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 95.

v. Friedefürst, vernimm mein Flehen. Passiontide. In 1790 as above, p. 16, in 7 st. of 8 l., entitled "Appropriation of the sorrows of Jesus. Passion Hymn." In his ed. 1810, p. 18, altered and beginning, "Friedefürst zu dem wir flehen," and in 8 st. This text is in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. Tr. as "Prince of Peace! Thy Name confessing," by Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Feb., 1866, p. 216, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

vi. Ich blick in jene Höhe. Longing for Heaven. In 1777 as above, p. 32, in 14 st. of 4 l., entitled "Removal from the World." Repeated 1790, p. 84, and in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. Tr. as "Mine eyes are thither turning," in the British Herald, July 1866, p. 297, and Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. [J. M.]

Schönster Herr Jesu. [Love to Christ.] In Heart Melodies, No. 51, Lond., Morgan & Chase, N. D. this is marked as "Crusader's Hymn of the 12th cent. This air and hymn used to be sung by the German pilgrims on their way to Jerusalem." For these statements there does not seem to be the shadow of foundation, for the air referred to has not been traced earlier than 1842, nor the words than 1677. In the Münster G. B., 1677, p. 576, it appears as the first of "Three beautiful selected new Hymns" in 5 st., viz.:—

i. Schönster Herr Jesu; ii. Alle die Schönheit; iii. Schame dich Sonne; iv. Schön seindt die Blumen; v. Er ist wahrhaftig.

In the Schlesische Volkslieder, Leipzig, 1842, p. 339, it is given with greatly altered forms of st. i., iii., ii., v., with a second st. ("Schön sind die Wälder") practically new. The text and melody (the melody that in C. U.) are both marked as taken down from oral recitation in the district (Grafschaft) of Glaz. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, is st. i., iii., and the new st., all nearly from the text of 1842: and this is the text which has been translated. Tr. as:—

Fairest Lord Jesu. Mr. Richard Storrs Willis, of Detroit (U. S. A.) informs me that this tr. appears in his Church Chorals, 1850, but that he does not know the name of the translator. It has passed into various American collections — the Plymouth Coll., 1855; Dutch Ref. 1869, Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, &c., and in England into Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865; Allon's Children's Worship, 1878, &c.

Other trs. are: (1) "Sweetest Lord Jesu, Lord," by E. Massie, 1867, p. 203. (2) "Beautiful Saviour! King of Creation," by Dr. J. A. Seiss, in the Sunday School Bk., Philad., 1873, of the Amer. Luth. Gen. Council. [J. M.]

Schröder, Johann Heinrich, was b. Oct. 4, 1667, at Springe (Hallspringe) near Hannover. He studied at the University of Leipzig, where he experienced the awakening effects of A. H. Francke's lectures. In 1696 he was appointed pastor at Meseberg, near Neuhaldensleben; and in the registers there records of himself (writing in the third person), "1696, on the 17th S. after Trinity, viz. on Oct. 4, on which day he was born, with the beginning of his 30th year, he entered on the pastorate of this parish." He d. at Meseberg, June 30, 1699 (Koch, iv., 381; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1883, p. 192, &c.).

Schröder is best known by the four hymns which he contributed to the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697; and which are repeated in the Geistreiches G. B., Darmstadt, 1698; and in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704. They are very good examples of the early hymns of the Pietists, being genuine and earnest outpourings of Love to Christ, not unmingled with Chilistic hopes for the victory of Zion and the overthrow of Babylon. In the same books are two hymns by his wife (Tranquilla Sophia née Wolf), who d. at Meseberg, April 29, 1697.

Two of Schröder's hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

i. Eins ist noth, ach Herr, dies eine. Love to Christ. This is included in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 505, in 10 st. of 8 l., entitled, "One thing is needful. Luke x. 42. Jesus, Who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption. 1 Cor. i. 30." It is also in Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1697, vol. iii., p. 437. It is repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 325, and in many later collections, e.g. the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 686, &c.

Its popularity has been due, not only to its own beauty and power, but also to the taking character of the melody to which it is set. This is by J. Neander, in his Bundes Lieder, Bremen, 1680, as the melody of Grosser Propheete (p. 792, i.); and as altered in Freylinghausen to suit Schröder's hymn. The full form from Freylinghausen is in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., and there called Landsberg. The second part is given in the Bristol Tune Book as Ems. A greatly altered form, as Ratisbon, has passed through W. H. Havergal's Old Church Psalmody into the Irish Church Hymn., the Scottish Presb. Hymn., and others.

The tr. in C. U. from Schröder is:—

One thing's needful, then, Lord Jesus. This is a good and full tr., by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 137 (Hys. from the German, 1864, p. 217), repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870. In 1857, Mercer adopted the trs. of st. v., viii., x., as No. 411 in his C. P. & H. Bk., altered, and beginning, "Wisdom's highest, noblest treasure." In his 1859 ed., he omitted the tr. of st. x. and altered the others, now beginning, "Wisdom's highest, holiest, treasure;" and this form is repeated, reading "Wisdom's unexhausted treasure," in his Oxford ed., 1864.

Other translations are:—

(1) "One thing is needful! Let me deem." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 183. (2) "One thing's needful:—this rich treasure." By Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 92.

ii. Jesu, hilf siegen, du Fürste des Lebens. Christian Warfare. In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 509, in 14 st., of 6 l., entitled, "Tearful sigh for the help of Jesus." Also in Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1697, vol. vi., p. 711, in 14 st., entitled, "For God's succour in order to overcome spiritual enemies." In the Geistreiches G. B., Darmstadt, 1698, p. 216, st. xv., xvi., are added, and this form is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 667. It is said to have been written, in 1696, as a companion to his wife's hymn, "Trautster Jesu, Ehrenkönig" (Halle, 1697, as above, p. 301, and the G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 771). It was accused of Chiliasm, by the Theological Faculty of Wittenberg, but still holds an honoured place in German collections. The tr.s. are:—(1) "Jesus, help conquer! Thou Prince ever-living." By Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 126. (2) "Jesus, help conquer, Thou Prince of my being." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 2.

The hymn beginning, "Jesus, help conquer! my spirit is sinking," by Miss Warner, in 6 st., in her Hys. of the Church Militant, N. Y., 1858, p. 161, borrows little more than the first line from the German. It is repeated in Boardman's Selection, Philadelphia, 1861, No. 463. [J. M.]

Schubart, Christian Friedrich Daniel, s. of Johann Jakob Schubart, schoolmaster and assistant clergyman at Obersontheim near Hall, in Württemberg (after 1740, at Aalen), was b. at Obersontheim, March 26, 1739, and in 1758 entered the University of Erlangen as a student of theology. Thereafter he was for some time a private tutor at Königsbronn. In 1764 he was appointed organist and schoolmaster at Geisslingen, near Ulm. In 1768 he became organist and music-director at Ludwigsburg; but, in 1772, on account of misconduct, he was deprived of his office. After that, he led for some time a wandering life, and then settled down in Ulm, where he edited a political newspaper, entitled the Deutsche Chronik, with success. By his scurrilous attacks on the clergy, especially on the Roman Catholics, and in particular upon the Jesuits, and by a satirical poem on the Duke of Württemberg, he made himself obnoxious. Unsuspectingly accepting an invitation to Blaubeuren, he was handed over to the Duke's adjutant, and, on Jan. 23, 1777, was imprisoned in the castle of Hohenasperg, where he remained, without even the shadow of a trial, till May 11, 1787. As a recompense for his long imprisonment, the Duke made him Court and theatre poet at Stuttgart, where he d. of fever, Oct. 10, 1791 (Koch, vi. 376; K. H. Jördens's Lexicon deutscher Dichter und Prosaisten, vol. iv. 1809, p. 639).

Schubart was a man of versatile genius, who might have attained distinction in half a dozen lines of life, had he only stuck to any of them. He was a man who could make himself most popular, spite of the fact that he possessed hardly any tact. His moral principles were anything but strong; and the Ten Commandments (especially the seventh) seemed to have little restraining influence over him. As a writer of secular poems, especially of lyrics, he displayed vigour and spirit; but his literary workmanship was often very careless. His hymns, over 130 in all, were written during the two periods when he led an orderly and Christian life, viz., in the years 1764–66, immediately after his marriage, and in the years 1777–87, during his enforced absence from temptation. His captive state, his reading of the devotional books in the commandant's library, and the visits which he then received from P. M. Hahn, pastor at Kornwestheim, awakened in him a repentance, sincere if not altogether Mfelong; one of the principal results being the series of hymns included in his so-called Gedichte aus dem Kerker (Zürich, 1785). These were composed at a time when he was deprived of writing materials, and were dictated through a wall to a fellow prisoner in the next cell. They were pub. without his knowledge or supervision. In self defence he asked the Duke's permission to pub. an authorised ed. of his poems; and this appeared at Stuttgart, in 3 vols., 1785–86, as his Sämmtliche Gedichte (a number of copies, printed beyond the subscription, bear the date 1787, and the name of a Frankfurt publisher, e.g. the copy in the Brit. Mus.); and this also included most of those in his Todesgesänge, originally pub. at Ulm in 1767. Being printed at the Ducal printing office at Stuttgart, the poems were subjected to an official revision. Schubart meant to issue a genuine author's edition, but did not live to do so; and that pub. by his son, as his father's Gedichte, in two parts, at Frankfurt, 1802, is really a selection, and contains only about half of his hymns.

The best of Schubart's hymns are those first pub. in 1785, which are more genuine and spiritual than his earlier productions. A considerable number became popular, and passed into the Württemberg G. B., 1791, and other collections, up to 1850; and a few still continue in C. U. They are, however, too personal and subjective, and not sufficiently natural in style for general use.

Of Schubart's hymns the following have been tr. into English, viz.:—

i. Urquell aller Seligkeiten. Supplication for Spiritual Blessings. This fine hymn was written about 1780, and 1st pub. in his Gedichte aus dem Kerker, Zürich, 1785, p. 102, in 16 st. of 4 l., entitled, "Supplication." The full text is in Koch, 2nd ed., vol. iv., p. 740. In the Württemberg G. B., 1791, No. 404, it is reduced to 12 st.; and the same in the ed. of 1842, No. 21. In Dr. Schaff's Deutsches G. B., Philadelphia, U. S., 1860, No. 274, it has only ten. Tr. as:—

Though by sorrows overtaken. This can hardly be called a tr., but is rather a hymn suggested by the German, and is in 6 st. of 4 l. It appeared in A. R. Reinagle's Coll. of Ps. and Hy. Tunes as sung in the Parish Church of St. Peter in the East, Oxford, pub. at Oxford in 1840, p. 138. It is one of four hymns [for the others, see pp. 699, i.; 806, i.; 1091 i.], regarding which the Rev. Walter Kerr Hamilton (then Rector of St. Peter's, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury), says, in the preface, "Philip Pusey, Esq., has allowed me to add to this collection some hymns which are partly translations and partly original." From Reinagle this hymn passed, with alterations, into the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, the Sarum Hyl., 1868, and various other collections. In Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862, it is No. 363, and is marked as by "Algernon Herbert," who was Pusey's brother-in-law; and in the Sarum Hyl., as "German tr. by Algernon Herbert." The ascription to Pusey seems the more probable.

Other hymns by Schubart are:—

ii. Alles ist euer! O Worte des ewigen Lebens. Thanksgiving. Written about 1784, and 1st pub. at Zürich, 1785, as above, p. 117, in 9 st. of 5 l.; founded on 1 Cor. iii. 21–23. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1250. Tr. as, "All things are yours! O sweet message of mercy divine." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1855, p. 5 (1834, p. 73).

iii. Dm Trennung Last liegt schwer auf mich. Re- union in Heaven. On the sorrow of parting with friends whom one hopes to meet in heaven. 1st pub. at Zürich, 1785, as above, p. 148, in 14 st. of 7 l., entitled, "The meeting again of the righteous." In the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 648, in 9 st. Tr. as, "I die and grieve from those to go." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 58.

iv. Hier stand ein Mensch! Hier fiel er nieder. Sudden death of a Sinner. 1st pub. at Ulm, 1767, as above, p. 199, in 12 st. of 6 l., entitled, "A sudden death." In the American Ev. Luth. G. B., 1786, No. 608 (1844, No. 569). Tr. as, "Now one in health Death, instant, crushes." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 32).

v. Kommt heut ein eurem Stabe. For the Aged. On the Presentation in the Temple; and founded on St. Luke ii. 22-32. 1st pub. at Ulm, 1767, as above, p. 262, in 12 st. of 4 l., entitled, "Simeon." In the Württemberg G. B., 1791, No. 101. Tr. as, "Ye who with years are sinking." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 275).

[J. M.]

Schütz, Johann Jakob, was b. Sept. 7, 1640, at Frankfurt am Main. After studying at Tübingen (where he became a licentiate in civil and canon law), he began to practise as an advocate in Frankfurt, and in later years with the title of Rath. He seems to have been a man of considerable legal learning as well as of deep piety. He was an intimate friend of P. J. Spener; and it was, in great measure, at his suggestion, that Spener began his famous Collegia Pietatis (see Spener, p. 1071, ii.). After Spener left Frankfurt, in 1686, Schütz came under the influence of J. W. Petersen (p. 892, i.); and carrying out Petersen's principles to their logical conclusion, he became a Separatist, and ceased to attend the Lutheran services or to communicate. He d. at Frankfurt, May 22, 1690 (Koch, iv. 220; Blätter für Hymnologie, Feb. 1883). See also Various.

Schütz is known as an author by two tractates; one being his Christliche Lebensregeln, Frankfurt, 1677; the other, that which contains his hymns, Christliches Gedächtnisbuchlein, zu Beförderung eines anfangenden neuen Lebens, &c., Frankfurt am Main, 1676 [Library of the Predigerministerium at Frankfurt]. This work includes 5 hymns, in a separate section, which is headed, "Hierauf folgen etliche Gesänge." These hymns are:—

i. Die Wollust dieser Welt.

ii. Was mich auf dieser Welt betrübt.

iii. So komm, geliebte Todes-Stund.

iv. Scheuet ihr, ihr matten Glieder.

v. Sei Lob und Ehr dem höchsten Gut.

Of these No. v. is undoubtedly by Schütz, and the other four exhibit much the same style of thought as, and frequent parallels to, the prose portions of the work. None of these have been traced earlier than 1675; and until this has been done, it is pretty safe to ascribe them all to Schütz.

Three of these hymns have passed into English, viz:—

i. Sei Lob und Ehr dem höchsten Gut. Praise and Thanksgiving. 1st pub. in 1675, as above, No. v. It is founded on Deut. xxxii. 3; entitled, "Hymn of Thanksgiving;" and is in 9 st. of 6 l., and the refrain, "Gebt unserm Gott die Ehre." It passed into the Minden G. B., 1689; Luppius's G. B., 1692, p. 48; the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, pp. 570 and 656; and is now found in almost all German collections, as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 721.

Koch, iv. 220, speaks of this hymn as "outweighing many hundred others; and a classical hymn, which, from its first appearance, attracted unusual attention." And Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 334-339, relates how delighted J. J. Moser was, when, on entering church the first Sunday after his captivity at Hohentwiel, he heard this hymn, and how heartily he joined in it; how it comforted the dying G. C. Rieger, of Stuttgart, on Tuesday, in Easter Week, 1743, and many other incidents.

Translations in C. U.:—

1. All Glory to the Sovereign Good. This is a full and good tr., by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal.

Germanica, 2nd ed., 1732, p. 151, where it is entitled, "The Malabar Hymn." In the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 136, it is entitled, "Summary of the Book of Psalms" (1886, No. 646). Montgomery, in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 215, adopted st. i.-iv., nearly from the 1754; and from this, the trs. of st. i., ii., iv., were repeated in Gurney's Marylebone Coll., 1851; Windle's Coll., &c. The form in the 1873 Appx. to Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., No. 514, consists of st. i.-iv., viii., recast mainly from the 1801 Moravian, but partly from Miss Cox. In J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, No. 5, st. i., ii., v., viii., ix., were adapted for use on Trinity Sunday.

2. All glory be to God most high. A good tr., by A. T. Russell, of st. i., iv., viii., for the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848, No. 59.

3. All praise and thanks to God most high. This is a good tr., omitting st. ix., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 146. Repeated, in varying centos, in Ps. & Hys., Bedford, 1859; Harrow School H. Bk., 1866; Holy Song, 1869; Irish Church Hyl., 1873, and others. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 2, Miss Winkworth altered the metre and omitted st. vi; and this form was repeated in full in the Evang. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and abridged (i.-iv.) in the Hymnary, 1871.

4. Sing praise to God Who reigns above. A good tr., omitting st. ix., contributed by Miss Cox to Lyra Eucharistica, 1864, p. 33, and included in her Hys. from the German, 1864, p. 235. This tr. is given in full in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876. It is also found, in varying centos, in many English and American hymn-books, including H. A. & M., 1868 and 1875; Bapt. Hyl., 1879; Thring's Coll., 1882; and in America, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868; College Hyl., N. Y., 1876; Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, &c.

5. To God a joyful anthem raise. A good tr. of st. i., ii., iv., v., viii., by J. M. Sloan, as No. 314, in J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865.

The following are also tr. into English:—

ii. So komm, geliebte Todes-Stund. For the Dying. 1st pub. in 1675, as above, No. iii., in 11 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The thoughts on Death of a Royal Princess, after the usual interpretation of Job xix. 25." This Princess was Sophie Elisabeth, daughter of Duke Philipp Ludwig, of Holstein-Sonderburg (b. at Homburg vor der Höhe, May 4, 1653; married, in 1676, to Duke Moritz, of Sachse-Zeit; d. at Schleusingen, Aug. 19, 1684), who had been a regular attendant at Spener's conferences at Frankfurt, and thus associated with Schütz. This hymn (as also No. iv. in the 1675 work) has often been ascribed to her; and she had already chosen Job xix. 25, as the text of her funeral sermon. But it is more probable that both hymns were written by Schütz for her use, or in her honour. The text of No. iii., in 1675, is repeated in the Geistliche Lieder und Psalmen, Frankfurt, 1676, p. 148, in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704; Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 882, &c. The trs. are:—(1) "Come, happy hour of death, and close." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 56. (2) "O come, delightful hour of death." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 106.

iii. Was mich auf dieser Welt betrübt. Earthly Vanities. This hymn, on Renunciation of the World, 1st appeared in 1675, as above, No. ii., in 4 st. of 10 l., and entitled "From the World to God." Repeated in the Geistliche Lieder und Psalmen, Frankfurt, 1676, p. 150; Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 763, &c. It has sometimes been erroneously ascribed to Michael Franck (p. 386, l.). It is tr. as "The woes that weigh my body down." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 32. [J. M.]

Schwedler, Johann Christoph, s. of Anton Schwedler, farmer and rural magistrate at Krobsdorf, near Löwenberg, in Silesia, was

b. at Krobsdorf, Dec. 21, 1672, and matriculated at the University of Leipzig, in 1695 (M.A. 1697). In 1698 he was appointed assistant minister at Niederwiese, near Greifenberg, and began his duties there on the 18th S. after Trinity. On the death of the diaconus, Christoph Adolph, he succeeded him as diaconus, in December, 1698; and, finally, in 1701, he became pastor there. He d. at Niederwiese, suddenly, during the night of Jan. 12, 1730. (S. J. Ehrhardt's Presbyterologie Schlesiens, 1780-89, vol. iii., pt. ii., p. 254; Koch, v. 225, &c.)

Schwedler was a powerful and popular preacher, and peculiarly gifted in prayer. It is said that sometimes, beginning service at 5 or 6 A.M., he would continue the service to relays who in succession filled the church, till 2 or 3 P.M. He also founded an orphanage at Niederwiese. He was a near neighbour and great friend of Johann Mentzer (p. 724, ii.) and N. L. von Zinzendorf. As a hymn-writer he was useful and popular. The principal theme of his hymns was the Grace of God through Christ, and the joyful confidence imparted to the soul that experienced it. Of his hymns, 462 appeared in his Die Lieder Mose und des Lammes, oder neu eingerichtetes Gesang-Buch, Budissin, 1720, Nos. 345-806. Others are in his Wöchentliche Haus-Andacht, 1712, in his various devotional works, and in the hymn-books of the period.

The only hymn by Schwedler tr. into English is:—

Wollt ihr wissen was mein Preis? Jesus the Crucified, or Love to Christ. Founded on 1 Cor. ii. 2, and Gal. vi. 14. Included in the Hirschberg G. B., 1741, No. 233, in 6 st. of 4 l., and the refrain, "Jesus, der Gekreuzigte." This form is repeated, with his name, in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 327; and is in many recent collections, as the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 282. It was long the usual funeral hymn in Silesia. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Ask ye what great thing I know. By Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymn. Christ., 1863, No. 620, being a good tr. of st. i.-v., with a sixth st. suggested by st. vi. of the German. It is repeated, in full, in Thring's Coll., 1882; and in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870. Abridged forms are in Morell and How's Ps. & Hys., 1864; J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876; and in America, in the Dutch Ref. Hys. of the Church, 1869; Bapt. Praise Bk., 1871; Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and others.

2. Do you ask what most I prize? This is a fairly close version, omitting st. vi., as No. 98, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1886. [J. M.]

Schweinitz, Hans Christoph von, of Friedrichsdorf and Niederleube, s. of Baron Hans Christoph von Schweinitz, of Crane and Hähnichen, in Silesia, was b. at Crane, Feb. 1, 1645. After studying at Breslau, Strassburg, Leyden, and Paris, and taking a prolonged tour in Italy and elsewhere, he returned to Silesia in 1668, where he was appointed Landesältester for the district of Görlitz, and afterwards Rath and Kammerher, by August II., in his capacity of King of Poland and Elector of Saxony. He resigned his post as Landesältester, in 1708, and retired to Leube, where he d. Nov. 10, 1722 (G. F. Otto's Lexicon . . . Oberlausitzischer Schriftsteller, iii., p. 257, &c.). Only two hymns are known by him. One of these is:—

Wird das nicht Freude sein? Eternal Life. This beautiful hymn, on the Joys of Heaven, was written on the death of his first wife, Theodora von Schweinitz (née Festenberg). It was first printed, as a broadsheet, at Lauban, in 1691, with music, in 5 parts, by Christoph Adolph, diaconus at Niederwiese, who d. in 1698 (melody from this broadsheet in Dr. J. Zahn's Psalter und Harfe, 1886, No. 522). The broadsheet, of which there is a copy in the Town Library at Breslau, is entitled Den letzten Liebesdienst, &c., and has the note:—"The following hymn was composed from the late Frau von Schweinitz's own words, and from a conversation she held, shortly before her happy end, and was sung after the end of the [funeral] sermon." The hymn was included in J. C. Schwedler's Lieder Mose, 1720, No. 296 (marked as "On the death of a little child. Joh. Christ. von Schweinitz"), and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1539. It is in 5 st. of 6 l. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Will that not joyful be? This is a full and very good tr., by Mrs. Findlater, in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 7 (1884, p. 13); repeated, in full, in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860, and, omitting st. iii., in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858. Stanzas i.-iv., altered, and beginning, "Oh, that will joyful be," are in W. B. Bradbury's Golden Chain, N. Y., 1861 (ed. 1870, p. 48). Another tr. is, "Will it not pleasure be." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 259). [J. M.]

Scott, Elizabeth, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Scott, Independent Minister at Norwich, and sister of Thomas Scott, noted below, was b. at Norwich about 1708. In 1751 she was married to Elisha Williams, who had been from 1726 to 1739 Rector of Yale College, U.S.A., and with him she proceeded to Connecticut. On the death of Mr. Williams she was married to the Hon. William Smith, of New York, who also predeceased her. She died at Wethersfield, Connecticut, June 13th, 1776. In connection with Miss Scott's hymns we are acquainted directly and indirectly with four MSS., each of which is interesting in itself. These are as follows:—

i. The first ms. is in the library of Yale College, New Haven, Connecticut. Mr. Franklin Bowditch Dexter, M.A., Assistant Librarian, has tabulated the hymns in this ms. for this Dictionary. He says (Jan. 29, 1889): "The label on the back of this volume is 'Hymns & Poems by Eliz. Scott.' There is no title to the ms. pages. Prefixed to the Hymns and Poems there is, however, a long and very tenderly written dedication (in prose) 'To my much Rever'd, much Lov'd, Father,' this signed 'E. S.' and dated 1740. Then follows (without numbers) the Hymns with titles and first lines as below." Mr. Dexter adds on the first lines and the titles of 90 hymns.

ii. The second ms. is in our possession. It is headed "Poems on Several Occasions by Miss Scott of Norwich, who married to Mr. Williams of New England, January 1750/1." Then follow 26 hymns in full. At the end this is written, "These transcribed from Mrs. Williams' Manuscript, Feb. 27, 1751, the week before she left Norwich to go to New England." The whole of these 26 hymns are in the Yale College ms.

iii. The third ms. we have consulted contains 8 hymns which are prefaced with these words, "Copied from a book of Mrs. Bury's, written by her Aunt Miss Elizabeth Scott, afterwards Mrs. Williamson." Of these hymns 6 are in the Yale College ms. and 2 not therein, viz. —(1) "Arise and hail the happy [sacred] day" (p. 78, i.), and "Hail, King supreme, all wise and good," both of which are given anonymously in the Unitarian New Col. of Ps. for the Use of a Cong. of Protestant Dissenters in Liverpool, commonly known as The Liverpool Liturgy, pub. in 1763. Concerning the authorship of these two hymns there is great doubt.

iv. In Dr. Dodd's Christian's Magazine for Dec. 1763 we find a writer who signs himself "CL—T." He had at that time a ms. of Miss Scott's hymns with a Dedication by her father prefixed thereto and signed "Eliz Sc—t." From this ms. he sent "Why droops my soul with guilt oppressed" (Christ, the Great Physician) to the Dec. number of the magazine; "Evil and few our mortal days" (Vanity of human Life), to the Feb. number, 1764, and "What finite power with ceaseless toil" (Praise for Temporal Blessings), to the April number of the same year. At the close of the last hymn he says in a note:—"N.B. As some of your Correspondents have sent you some pieces out of the same collection, from which these are transcribed, that I have undertaken to send you (e.g. that on Gen. xvii. 1) it were to be wished, if they should do the like again, that they would signify whose they are."

The hymn referred to in this note is, "Great God, Thy penetrating eye" (God pervading all things), which appeared in the January number of the Christian Mag., 1764, without signature or acknowledgment of any kind. All these hymns are in the Yale College ms.

From these facts it is clear that before departing for America Miss Scott allowed copies of her hymns to be made from her ms., and it was mainly from these copies that those of her hymns composed before her marriage were printed in the English hymn-books. None of those hymns date later than 1750. The collections in which they appeared, and through which they came into C. U., were the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash and Evans, 1769, and the New Sel., &c., by J. Dobell, 1806. In Ash and Evans there are 19 hymns, signed "S.," all of which are in the Yale College ms. under the same first lines except "Was it for man, apostate man?" but this also may possibly be there under another first line. In Dobell there are 20 hymns signed "Scott," of which 17 are in the Yale College ms., 2 are parts of hymns from Ash and Evans, also in that ms., and "Sole Sovereign of the earth and skies," also probably in the ms. under another first line. Of the 90 hymns in the Yale ms., in addition to those annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary (see Index of Authors and Translators), there are also in C. U. :— i. From Ash and Evans's Coll. of Hymns, 1769.

1. God of my life, to Thee belongs. On Recovery from Sickness.

2. My God, shall I for ever mourn? Covenant-keeping God. From this "Shall e'er the shadow of a change?" is taken (st. iii.).

3. When Abram full of sacred awe. For a Fast Day. Sometimes, "Thus Abram, full of sacred awe."

4. Why, O my heart, these anxious cares? Submission.

ii. From J. Dobell's New Selection, &c., 1806.

5. Dare we indulge to wrath and strife? Against Wrath.

6. Eternal Spirit, 'twas Thy breath. Whitsuntide.

7. For ever shall my fainting soul. Against grieving the Holy Spirit. Sometimes "O Lord, and shall our fainting souls?"

8. Great God, Thy penetrating eye. God All and in All.

9. The glittering spangles of the sky. The Mercies of God.

10. Thy bounties, gracious Lord. Offertory.

11. Where e'er the Lord shall build my house. Family Religion. [J. J.]

Scott, Jacob Richardson, was b. in Boston, Massachusetts, March 1, 1815, and graduated in Arts at Brown University 1836, and in Theology at Newton Theological College, 1842. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1842, and was successively located at Petersburg, Virginia; Portland, Maine; at Fall River, Massachusetts; and Yonkers, New York. He d. Dec. 10, 1861. His hymn "To Thee this temple we devote" (Dedication of a Place of Worship) was contributed to The Psalmist, 1843. It is found in several American hymn-books. [F. M. B.]

Scott, Thomas, s. of Thomas Scott, Independent Minister at Norwich, brother of Elizabeth Scott (see above), and nephew of Dr. Daniel Scott, was b. at Norwich, 1705. As a young man he kept a school at Wortwell, and preached once a month at Harleston, Norfolk. Then, after a short ministry at Lowestoft, he removed in 1734 to Ipswich as co-pastor with Mr. Baxter of the Presbyterian congregation meeting in St. Nicholas Street Chapel. On the death of his senior in 1740 he became sole pastor. In 1774 he retired to Hapton, and d. there in 1775. He was the author of various poetical works, including :—

(1) The Table of Coebes; or, the Picture of Human Life, in English Verse, with Notes, 1754; (2) The Book of Job, in English Verse; translated from the original Hebrew, with Remarks, Historical, Critical, and Explanatory, 1711; 2nd ed. 1773; (3) Lyric Poems, Devotional and Moral. By Thomas Scott, Lond., James Buckland, 1773.

To Dr. Enfield's Hymns for Public Worship, Warrington, 1772, he contributed "All-knowing God, 'tis Thine to know (p. 43, ii.); "Angels! roll the rock away" (p. 69, i.); "As various as the moon" (p. 85, ii.); and the following :—

1. Absurd and vain attempt to bind. Persecution.
2. Behold a wretch in woe. Mercy.
3. Imposture shrinks from light. Private Judgment, its Rights and Duties.
4. Mark, when tempestuous winds arise. Meekness.
5. O come all ye sons of Adam and raise. Universal Praise to God.
6. Th' uplifted eye and bended knee. Devotion vain without Virtue.
7. Was pride, alas, e'er made for man? Humility.
8. Why do I thus perplex? Worldly Anxiety reproved.

In his Preface to his Lyric Poems, 1773, he said that the object of his work was :—

"To form a kind of little poetical system of piety and morals. The work opens with natural religion. Thence it proceeds to the mission of Jesus Christ, his sufferings, his exaltation, and the propagation of his doctrine. Next is the call to repentance, the nature and blessedness of a christian life, and the entrance into it. These topics are succeeded by the various branches of devotion: after which are ranked the moral duties, personal and social, the happy end of a sincere christian, and the coming of Jesus Christ to finish his mediatorial kingdom by the general judgment. The whole is closed with a description of the illustrious times, when by means of the everlasting gospel, the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

Of Scott's better known hymns this volume contained most of those named above, and :—

9. Hasten, sinner, to be wise. p. 493, ii.
10. Who, gracious Father, can complain? The Divine Dispensation.

In the Coll. of Hys. and Ps., &c., 1795, by Kippis, Rees, and others, several of the above were repeated, and the following were new :—

11. If high or low our station be. Justice.
12. Happy the meek whose gentle breast. Meekness.

Doctrinally Scott might be described as an evangelical Arian. Hymns of his appear in most of the old Presbyterian collections at the close of the last century, and in the early Unitarian collections. Several are still in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [V. D. D.]

Scott, Sir Walter, Bart., was b. in Edinburgh, Aug. 15, 1771, and d. at Abbotsford, Sept. 21, 1832. Although so successful and widely known as a poet, he made no direct contributions to hymnody whatever. His condensed rendering of the "Dies Irae" (p. 297, ii.), and his hymn of Rebecca in Ivanhoe, "When Israel of the Lord beloved" (q.v.) were utilized as hymns for congregational use by others, but were never intended for such a purpose by himself. His work and rank as poet, novelist, and historian are fully set forth in his Life by J. G. Lockhart. [J. J.]

Scottish Hymnody. After the Reformation in Scotland, the revulsion from the Roman Church and its services led at once to the establishment of services in the vernacular. As on the Continent recourse was naturally had to the Psalter, and, as easiest for popular use and also as reckoned nearer to the Hebrew structure, the metrical Psalm instead of the prose Psalm chanted. Metrical Psalmody was the only part of Divine worship in which the congregations in the Scottish Churches vocally joined till at least 1749, and in the three principal sections of Presbyterianism the singing of hymns, other than the Paraphrases of 1741-81, did not become at all general till after 1852 in the United Presbyterian Church, after 1870 in the Established Church, and after 1873 in the Free Church. Consequently the use of the Hebrew Psalter has had a mighty influence upon the Scottish mind and heart.

In tracing the history of Scottish Metrical Psalmody and Hymnody we find six stages:— I. The Preparatory; II. The Psalter of 1564-65; III. The Psalter of 1650; IV. Scripture Songs, 1564-1708; V. The Translations and Paraphrases, 1741-81; VI. The Hymnals.

I. The Preparatory Stage.

The early congregational psalmody of Scotland found its example, and much of its materials in the work begun on the Continent by Marot, and in England by Sternhold.

1. Clement Marot had begun translating the Psalms about 1533, and seems to have completed his first 30 versions in 1539, but did not himself publish them till 1542, at Paris, as Trente Pseaumes de David. Meantime John Calvin, then in exile at Strassburg, had included in his Aulcuns Pseaumes et Cantiques, 1539, 12 of the Marot versions, but in the form given to them by Pierre Alexandre, who having obtained ms. copies of Marot's Psalms made considerable alterations in the text, and published the whole 30 along with 15 by various authors as Psalmes de David translatez de plusieurs autheurs, &c., Antwerp, 1541. Marot, having fled to Geneva, was induced by Calvin to revise his first 30 versions and add 19, pub. in 1543 as Cinquante Psaumes (including the Song of Simeon). After Marot's death Theodore de Beza at Calvin's request continued the work, publishing in 1551 Trente-quatre Psaumes de David, reissued in 1552 with Marot's, as Pseaumes octante trois de David, to which he added 6 in 1554 and 1 in 1555, finishing the work after his return from Lausanne in 1558, the completed Psalter appearing as Les Pseaumes mis en rime francoise par Clement Marot et Theodore de Beze, Geneve, pour Antoine Vincent, 1562-49 versions being by Marot and the rest by Beza. (See Psalters, French, p. 932, i., and an interesting series of articles on Clement Marot and the Huguenot Psalter, by Major G. A. Crawford in the Musical Times, June to Nov., 1881.) In regard to the Scottish Psalter the influence is seen in the force of example, in the inclusion of French tunes and in the composition of versions in French metres, rather than in any versions directly translated from those by Marot and Beza. [Psalters, French, § i.]

2. Meantime in England Thomas Sternhold had issued 19 Psalm versions in an undated edition not earlier than 1547, increased to 37 in 1549, and to 44 by the addition of 7 by John Hopkins in 1551. These were carried by the English exiles to Geneva and there included, with 7 versions by William Whittingham, in the One and Fiftie Psalmes of David, published in 1556 along with The forme of prayers, &c., used at Geneva (Advocates' Library, Edinburgh). The Rev. William Dunlop, in the Contents to his Collection of Confessions of Faith, &c., vol. ii., Edinburgh, 1722, says that his reprint of The forme of prayers follows the Genevan edition of 1558. This edition, which is now lost, probably contained the Psalter enlarged by the 9 versions by Whittingham and 2 by Pullain contained in the Psalter of 1560, now in Christ Church Library, Oxford. The next Anglo-Genevan edition now extant (St. Paul's Cathedral Library) is the Four Score and Seven Psalmes of David, Geneva, 1561, which adds to the 51 of 1556 the 9 by Whittingham, and 2 by Pullain, mentioned above, with 25 new ones, (including Ps. c.) by Kethe. Of this a revised edition was issued in the same year, probably printed in England (Britwell Library), which formed the basis of the Scottish Psalter of 1564-65. [For full details, see Old Version, p. 857, i., §§ II., III.]

3. The earliest Psalm versions used in Scotland were those included in the collection sometimes called the Dundie Psalmes, better known as the Gude and Godlie Ballates, entitled, in the edition of 1578, Ane Cōpendious buik of godlie Psalmes and spirituall Sangis. This collection seems, from the notice of David Calderwood, the Church historian, to have been published, at least in a rudimentary form, before 1546, but the earliest edition now extant is represented by a copy in the possession of Patrick Anderson, Esq., Blackness House, Dundee, who has kindly given a collation of it. The copy wants titlepage, and begins with folio 5 at the words "sall be condemnit" in the article "of our Baptisme," but is otherwise perfect. From the fact of its containing an advertisement titlepage of a Scottish Psalter of 1568, and also a song prohibited by the General Assembly of 1568, it may be dated 1568. It does not contain the last 5 ballads of the 1578 ed.; ending instead with the prohibited song, Welcum Fortoun. From the copy in the Britwell Library of the earliest perfect edition, that of 1578, a careful reprint was edited in 1868 by the late Dr. Laing (see Appendix to this article).

The ed. of 1578 is in four parts:—i. The Catechisme. This includes a prologue, versions of the Ten Commandments, Creed, and Lord's Prayer, with a hymn on Baptism and another on the Lord's Supper, concluding with 11 Graces—in all 12 pieces, 6 of which are from the German. ii. Spiritual Sangis, 16 in number, of which 11 are from the German and 1 from the Latin. iii. Ballatis of the Scripture, 20 in number, 1 being from the German. iv. Psalmes of David with uther new pleasand Ballatis Translatit out of Enchiridion Psalmorum to be sung. These include 22 Psalm versions—of which 13 are from the German—3 hymns from the German and 1 from the Latin, 7 adaptations from secular ballads, and 36 other pieces, in all 69. The collection as a whole thus includes 117 pieces, of which 34 at least are from the German (some being very close and others very free versions), and 2 from the Latin. Some of the pieces, though rude, have a wonderful pathos, and even beauty. Reading the anti-papal satires one does not wonder at the rage they excited among the Roman ecclesiastics. Four pieces very closely resemble four of Bishop Coverdale's Goodly Psalmes, c. 1539, and were probably derived from it. The book as a whole must be regarded as a poetical miscellany. Dr. Laing would assign the translations and Psalm versions to John Wedderburn (written probably 1539-46), and a number of the ballads to his brother Robert (see Wedderburn). If the collection was printed in book form before 1559, we may conjecture that it would not contain more than p. 151 of the edition of 1578. The "augmentation" in 1568 and 1578 seems to have been by various hands.

4. From these beginnings, Scottish, English and Continental, arose the Psalmody and subsequently the Hymnody, which have formed the sole part of Divine worship in the Churches of Scotland in which the congregations have joined for more than 300 years. The first result of importance was the Psalter of 1564-65.

II. The Psalter of 1564-65.

1. The Anglo-Genevan Psalters having been imported into Scotland, the General Assembly of 1561 ordered the completion of the Psalter. The Committee appointed, unlike the editors of the English Psalter of 1562, took the whole of the 87 versions of the Anglo-Genevan of 1561, as these were given in the revised edition printed in England in the same year. These versions were:—

37 by Sternhold, 1549 (Ps. 1-17, 19, 20, 21, 25, 28, 29, 32, 34, 41, 43, 44, 49, 63, 68, 73, 78, 103, 120, 123, 128), and 7 by Hopkins, 1561 (Ps. 30, 33, 42, 52, 79, 82, 146), to which were added at Geneva 16 by Whittingham (Ps. 23, 51, 114, 115, 130, 133, 137, in 1556; Ps. 37, 50, 67, 71, 119, 121, 124, 127, 129, probably in 1558); 2 by Pullain (Ps. 148, 149, probably in 1558), and 25 by Kethe (Ps. 27, 36, 47, 54, 58, 62, 70, 85, 88, 90, 91, 94, 100, 101, 104, 107, 111, 112, 113, 122, 125, 126, 134, 138, 142). They then added the 15 by Craig and 6 by Pont, noted below. The remaining 42 versions were taken from the English Psalter of 1562, as follows:—2 by Sternhold (Ps. 18, 22), 30 by Hopkins (Ps. 26, 31, 35, 38-40, 45, 46, 48, 55, 60, 61, 64-66, 69, 72, 74, 77, 84, 86, 87, 89, 92, 93, 95-99); 8 by Norton (Ps. 53, 106, 109, 116, 139, 144, 147, 150), and 2 by Marckant (Ps. 131, 135).

The complete version appeared as:—

The Forme of Prayers and Ministration of the Sacraments, &c., used in the English Church at Geneva, approved and received by the Church of Scotland, whereunto besides that was in the former booke, are also added sondrie other prayers, with the whole Psalmes of David in English meter. Printed at Edinburgh by Robert Lekprevik, MDLXIII.

Of this there is a copy in the Corpus Christi Library, Oxford, and another identical, but dated 1565, in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh. The Advocates' Library, it may also be noted, possesses a copy of the Forme of Prayers printed by Lekprevik in 1562, but this does not contain the Psalter.

2. This constituted the first Scottish Psalter properly so called. Regarding it the General Assembly on Dec. 26, 1564, ordained that every minister, reader, and exhorter should have and use a copy. The most important reprints of it are those of 1596, 1611, 1615, 1633, 1634, and 1635.

The Psalms are all initialed with the names of their authors. The numbers are as follows:—To Sternhold are ascribed 40 (including the 23rd), to Hopkins 35, to Kethe 26 (including the 45th), to Whittingham 15, to Craig 15, to Norton 8, to Pont 6, to Marckant 2, and to Pullain 2, the 38th being unascribed. But of these Ps. 38 and 45 are by Hopkins, and Ps. 23 by Whittingham, thus leaving Sternhold 39, Hopkins 37, Whittingham 16, and Kethe 25. The versions varying from those in the English Psalter of 1562 are in all 44, but of these Whittingham's 23rd and 50th, and Kethe's 100th, were added as alternative renderings to the 1565, and Craig's 136th, to the 1581 and later editions of the English Psalter. The first lines of the remaining 40 are here given, those of the 1561 Anglo-Genevan from the Britwell Library copy, and those of the 1564-65 Scottish Psalter from the edition of 1565.

i. Versions from the Four score and seven Psalmes, 1561, not included in the English Psalter:—

 80. O Pastor of Israel, like shepe that dost leade
 81. O God our strength most comfortable
 83. God for thy grace.

Of these authors Craig, Kethe, and Pont were Scotsmen. Until 1635 the melodies only of the proper tunes were given, but in that year Andro Hart published an edition with the tunes harmonised in four parts. Besides the proper tunes printed with the text of the Psalms, the edition of 1602 contained 3 Common Tunes (i.e. tunes which could be sung to any Psalm of like metre), to which 9 were added in 1615, 2 in 1633, 3 in 1634, and 14 in 1635, making in all 31. Of the 118 Proper tunes 51 are Genevan, 32 French, 4 German, 21 English, and 10 Scottish; while of the 31 Common tunes 7 are English and 24 Scottish, the 3 tunes in Reports being also Scottish. See the Dissertations and notes in the complete reprint of the Psalter of 1635, edited in 1864 by the Rev. Neil Livingston, D.D., cited in the Appendix to this article.

3. Although this Psalter continued in use till the present version was issued in 1650, yet in the meantime an attempt was made to impose upon the Scottish Church the version published at Oxford in 1631 as The Psalmes of King David, translated by King James. This version was in great measure the work of William Alexander, Earl of Stirling [see p. 39, i.]. Under the authority of Charles I. an injunction was published by the Scottish Privy Council in December 1634 that no other Psalms should be printed or imported, Alexander having been on Dec. 26, 1627, granted the exclusive right of publishing it for 31 years. On account of the opposition it created he in great measure rewrote the version. As thus reprinted at London by Thomas Harper in 1636 it was bound up and issued with Laud's Service Book of 1637, the forcible introduction of which caused an uprising of popular feeling over the whole of Scotland, which at once overturned all the ecclesiastical schemes of Charles, and led to the restored

General Assembly at Glasgow, 1638. The monopoly of course simultaneously ceased. This version, while possessing felicities, is often harsh and stilted, and the circumstances of its introduction made it altogether unacceptable. We would add that Harper also reprinted the 1636 text in 12mo in 1637, and that in the British Museum (MSS. Reg., 18 B. xvi.), there are preserved ms. metrical versions in Scotch by King James of 30 Psalms, Ecclesiastes xii., the Lord's Prayer, and the Song of Moses.

III. The Psalter of 1650.

1. The desire for Uniformity of Worship between England and Scotland having led to the calling of the Westminster Assembly in 1643, one part of the work recommended to it by Parliament was the preparation of a Psalter for use in both kingdoms. The Lords recommended the 3rd ed. 1646, of the version of William Barton, published in 1644 as The Book of Psalms in Metre, and finally revised in 1654; and the Commons the version of Francis Rous, originally published in 1641 and reissued in 1643 as The Psalmes of David in English Meeter set forth by Francis Rous. The latter being preferred by the Assembly was revised by it and published by authority of the House of Commons as The Psalmes of David in English Meeter, London, printed by Miles Flesher, for the Company of Stationers, 1646.

2. The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, not being satisfied with the Westminster revision, in 1647 appointed 4 persons to further revise it, viz., John Adamson to revise Ps. 1-40; Thomas Craufurd, 41-80; John Row, 81-120; and John Nevey, 121-150. In revising they were enjoined to use the versions of Zachary Boyd and Sir William Mure of Rowallan, as well as the Psalter of 1564-65. In 1648 their amended version was sent to Presbyteries to examine and report, and in 1649 a final Committee was appointed, consisting of James Hamilton, John Smith, Hugh MacKail, Robert Traill, George Hutcheson, and Robert Lowrie to examine these reports and the corrections sent in, and to report to the Commission, which was authorised "to conclude and establish the Paraphrase, and to publish and emit the same for publick use." The Commission accordingly thereafter issued:—

1650. The Psalmes of David in Meeter. Newly translated and diligently compared with the Original Text and former Translations; More plain, smooth, and agreeable to the Text than any heretofore. Allowed by the Authority of the General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland, and appointed to be sung in Congregations and Families. Edinburgh. Printed by Evan Tyler, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, 1650, authorising it as the only version to be used after May 1, 1650. And, it may be added, it has survived all proposals to modernise it, save in orthography, and remains to this day the only version of the Psalms used by Presbyterian Scotland.

3. Though based on Rous not much remains as first versified by him. Even of the edition of 1646 hardly a version is retained without considerable alteration. In several instances the compilers adopted recasts from the 1564, while in many cases they have incorporated stanzas and couplets from Zachary Boyd's version, and occasionally have taken lines and phrases from Sir William Mure and from the Earl of Stirling. William Barton's complaint that much of the version was stolen from him seems quite groundless.

As issued in 1650 the version may be called rude, but its associations have endeared it to the Scottish heart, and its faithfulness, vigour and terseness cannot be denied. These qualities become manifest when it is compared with other versions which, when faithful, have been failures, and when successful have been so expanded and adapted as to have ceased to be faithful. Under "The Lord's my Shepherd, I'll not want," will be found a note on a typical version.

4. Although the Gaelic Psalms have a limited interest, a few details are necessary to the completeness of our work:—

The first complete version of the Psalms in Gaelic was that by the Rev. Robert Kirk, of Balquhider, pub. in 1684. In 1659 the first 50 Psalms had been published by ministers appointed by the Synod of Argyle, and in 1690 those appointed to prepare a complete version of the Psalms in Gaelic were instructed to have their version revised by that Synod and forthwith printed. In 1694 the General Assembly recommended that in Gaelic speaking congregations this version, printed in 1694, should be used as being in the vernacular, and not the Psalter of 1650. In 1753 the version of 1694 was revised by the Rev. Alexander Macfarlane, of Melfort, and published at Glasgow, along with the Gaelic version of the 45 Paraphrases of 1751, by authority of the Synod of Argyle. His revision was slightly altered by the Rev. Thomas Ross, and reissued in 1807. The Rev. Dr. John Smith, of Campbeltown, rewrote Macfarlane's version, and published it at Edinburgh in 1787, adding to it versions of the 67 Paraphrases of 1781. He also published a new version in 1801. From these versions a revised edition was prepared by the Committee of the General Assembly, and published in 1826 at Edinburgh—including the 67 Paraphrases of 1781—as the only version to be used in public worship.

IV. Scripture Songs, 1564-1708.

1. The Scottish Psalter of 1564-65 did not contain any Spiritual Songs, but in 1575 5 were given, 10 in 1595, and 14 in 1634. They do not seem to have received direct ecclesiastical sanction, and none of them were transferred to the Psalter of 1650 or to the Translations and Paraphrases, 1741-81.

2. By the same Act of General Assembly, 1647, which appointed John Adamson and others to revise Rous's version of the Psalms, it was recommended "that Mr. Zachary Boyd be at the paines to translate the other Scripturall Songs in meeter, and to report his travels also to the Commission of the Assembly, that, after their examination therof, they may send the same to Presbyteries, to be there considered till the next General Assembly."

Again, in 1648, the General Assembly recommended—

"to Master John Adamson and Mr. Thomas Craufurd, to revise the labours of Mr. Zachary Boyd, upon the other Scripturall Songs, and to prepare a report therof," to be given in to the Commission, and by them to be examined and transmitted to the Assembly of 1649. But on account probably of the troublous times nothing further was then done.

3. The question, however, came up again in 1696, when the General Assembly enjoined their Commission to revise the Spiritual Songs of Patrick Simson (p. 1058, ii.). Accordingly, after revision, the Commission recommended them for private use. In 1704 the Assembly renewed this recommendation, and in 1705 enjoined the Commission to revise them for public use. The Commission accordingly appointed two Committees, at Edinburgh and Glasgow, who united in advising—

“That only such of the said printed copie as are purely Scriptural Songs should be recommended for publick use.”

The Glasgow Committee (of which Simson was a member) proposed the addition of some of his ms. versions, and suggested that in all there should be given complete versions of Canticles and Lamentations, with 15 Old Testament and 10 New Testament Songs. In 1706 the Assembly recommended—

“to the several Presbyteries of the Church to endeavour to promote the use of these Songs in privat families,” and recommended Presbyteries to buy copies of the edition of 1686 to compare with the amendments to be sent to them by the Committee of revision appointed by the Commission. In 1707 the Assembly sent the Songs again to the Committee for further revision, and enjoined Presbyteries which had not yet reported to report to the General Assembly of 1708. The Assembly of 1708 accordingly appointed and authorised them

“their Commission, maturely to consider the printed version of the Scripture Songs, with the remarks of the Presbyteries thereupon,”

“to publish and emit it for the publick use of the Church,” as in the case of the Psalter of 1650. And further “seeing there are many copies of the said version lying on the author's hand, It is recommended to ministers and others to buy the same for private use in the meantime.”

By the time that the stock of the 1686 edition was exhausted all idea of issuing the selection authorised for public worship seems to have been abandoned, and no trace of such an issue can be discovered.

V. The Translations and Paraphrases, 1741-1781.

1. These efforts to provide a wider range of subjects in Praise having failed to attain the object sought, the matter was again brought up by an overture to the General Assembly of 1741, which referred it to the Commission. In 1742 the Assembly appointed a Committee to and desired the Presbytery of Dundee or Synod of Angus (whence the overture seems to have come) to transmit to this Committee “what Collections they have made or shall make.” This Committee having made no report the Assembly of 1744 renewed their appointment and added some others to their number. They having appealed for help to the Presbyteries of the Church, received materials “partly furnished by ministers of this Church,” and embodied these in a Draft entitled Translations and Paraphrases of several Passages of Sacred Scripture, which the Assembly of 1745 ordered to be printed and sent to Presbyteries that they might report. Presbyteries being engrossed with the Jacobite movement had to be again enjoined to report by the Assemblies of 1746, 1747, and 1748.

Thus the Metropolitan Presbytery of Edinburgh after revising Nos. 1-9, on March 27 and April 3, 1746, did not resume their revision till 1748, when on Jan. 27, March 30, and April 27 they went over the remainder.

The Assembly of 1749 authorised the Committee to print the Paraphrases ■ amended and send copies to Presbyteries that they might report. None having done so the Assembly of 1750 transmitted the amended Paraphrases to them. The Assembly of 1751 again transmitted them to Presbyteries which had not reported: adding—

“In the meantime, the Assembly recommends the said Psalmody to be used in private families.”

After this Presbyteries were again and again enjoined to report, but no further Act was passed.

2. The collection of 1745, though thus reprinted with verbal alterations, was not enlarged in 1749. It consists of 45 Paraphrases (but no Hymns), all of which were afterwards included in the collection of 1781, 23 being by Isaac Watts, 5 by Philip Doddridge, and 2 by N. Tate; while 3 have been attributed to Hugh Blair, 3 to William Robertson, and 1 to Thomas Randall—leaving 8 unasci-ribed.

3. Though never authorised for use in public worship the 1745-51 collection had been introduced into some congregations, and in 1775 the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr overtook the Assembly to sanction it for public use. Instead of simply granting this, the Assembly appointed a Committee to revise and add to it. The Committee not having made any report the Assembly of 1780 added some new members to their number. At length in 1781 they presented a Draft, the Advertisement to which thus describes their work:--

“All the Translations and Paraphrases which had appeared in the former Collection are here, in substance, preserved. But they have been revised with care. Many alterations, and, it is hoped, improvements, are made upon them. A considerable number of new Paraphrases, furnished either by members of the Committee, or Ministers with whom they corresponded, are added. The whole is now arranged according to the order in which the several poems lie in the books of Scripture. A few Hymns are also subjoined, of such a nature as is supposed will be generally acceptable.”

On May 26, 1781, the report of the Committee was given in and read to the Assembly. The Committee were then renewed, and some members added and appointed to report their opinion of the printed Draft, at a future diet of Assembly. Accordingly, on June 1, 1781, the Assembly appointed

“these Translations and Paraphrases to be transmitted to the several Presbyteries of this Church, in order that they may report their opinion concerning them to the ensuing General Assembly; and, in the meantime, allows this Collection of sacred Poems to be used in public worship in congregations, where the Minister finds it for edification. The General Assembly renews the appointment of their Committee; with powers to judge of any corrections or alterations of these Poems that may be suggested previous to the transmission of the same; and with directions to cause ■ proper number of copies, with such corrections as they approve, to be printed, for the consideration of Presbyteries, and for public use.”

The Assembly further appointed John Dickson, the printer to the Church, to print and publish it, and gave him the sole right of doing so for 5 years; his right being renewed in 1786 for 9 years, and in 1795 for 14 years. The Committee accordingly, after introducing a very considerable number of verbal alterations, published the collection in the same year for public use. After this the Paraphrases were brought before the Assembly in 1786, 1795 and 1803, but only for the purpose of confirming the right of printing.

4. Thus, unlike the Psalters, the Paraphrases of 1781 have never received the formal sanction of the Church. They however still continue to be used in the various sections of Scottish Presbyterianism, and some of them far beyond its bounds.

It may be noted that while in England their use in hymnals other than Presbyterian has been comparatively limited (save Nos. 18, 19, 30, 58, and the recast 66), in America they have been extensively used by all denominations, the five above, with Nos. 4, 11, 16, being special favourites. As they have come into use in many varied forms, they are all annotated throughout this Dictionary.

The estimates taken of these Paraphrases have varied according to the ecclesiastical and spiritual standpoint of their critics. A common opinion has been that the collection of 1745 was too evangelical for the dominant Moderate party in 1781, and that while gaining in smoothness the Paraphrases lost in vigour and spirituality. As a rule, however, the amendments of 1781 have been improvements. Of the Scottish contributions some are exceedingly good, others possess the merit of being faithful to the text, while some are poor both in thought and expression. Upon the whole the collection is hardly what might have been expected from the gifts and graces of the ministers of the Church of Scotland from 1741 to 1781. For details of the authorship of the Paraphrases, the names of the Committees who compiled them, &c., see the article Scottish Translations and Paraphrases.

VI. The Hymnals.

In Sections following, i.-iv., are given the authorised hymnals of the Established, Free, United Presbyterian, and Evangelical Union Churches. In Sections v.-vii. are given the principal collections of Scottish origin used in the Baptist, Congregational and Scottish Episcopal Churches. Section viii. contains lists of the Private Collections used in the first four Churches; the less important Baptist, Congregational and Episcopal Collections; and hymnals outside these seven denominations.

i. The Established Church of Scotland.—After the publication of the Translations and Paraphrases of 1781, nothing further was done till 1807, when the General Assembly being overtured anent “the improvement of the Psalmody” appointed a Committee to consider “the need of additional Psalm Versions and Paraphrases.” In 1811 they were authorised to print their Draft which contained 17 entire Psalms and 21 Psalm portions and Paraphrases. In 1814 they were authorised to reprint their amended draft, containing 16 entire Psalms and 24 Psalm portions and Paraphrases, for transmission to Presbyteries. In 1820 the Committee were authorised to reprint 19 of the 1814 collection together with 20 or 30 others, and in 1821 Presbyteries were enjoined to report on this new collection, which contained 32 Psalm versions, 17 Paraphrases and 2 Doxologies. In 1822 a Committee was appointed to examine these reports, but no hymnal was authorised or issued. Again, in 1827, a Committee was appointed “for enlarging the collection of Translations and Paraphrases from Sacred Scripture, and otherwise improving the Psalmody,” but the matter dropped without result. The Assembly having been overtured in 1845, appointed a Committee on Psalmody, and in 1847 a second on Paraphrases. These Committees, with additional members, were united in 1850. In 1852 the Assembly having been overtured anent “an authorised collection of sacred hymns” referred the matter to the Committee. They presented a draft of 123 hymns in 1854 which was not sanctioned, though 25 of them, with Bp. Ken’s morning and evening hymns, were reissued in 1855. A new Committee was appointed in 1855 (enlarged in 1857), who presented in 1856 a draft of 22, in 1859 of 33, and in 1860 of 85 hymns. A special committee was then appointed to revise it, and the draft in 1861 became 97, but as allowed in 1861 as Hymns for Public Worship selected by the Committee of the General Assembly on Psalmody, it contained 89 hymns, 22 doxologies, 3 thanksgivings, 2 dismissals, Hosanna, and 4 sanctuses. After a revision in 1864, in which 22 hymns were omitted and 53 added, the need of a better selection with less altered texts was made evident, and accordingly what was practically a new Committee was appointed in 1866. They presented successive drafts to the Assembly in 1868, 1869 and 1870, retaining finally from the 1864 revision only 64 hymns, and these practically restored to their original forms. In 1870 the Committee was authorised “to revise the Hymnal, and thereafter to publish an edition for the use of such congregations as may wish to avail themselves of it.” It was accordingly published in Sept. 1870 as The Scottish Hymnal, containing 200 hymns, selected with much judgment and taste. Having come into very general use, it was after a time felt that an enlargement was needed. The Committee accordingly in 1882 suggested the preparation of an Appendix, and in May 1883 presented a draft to the Assembly. This after being sent to all the ministers of the Church for revision during 1883 was sanctioned by the Assembly in 1884 with hymns 201–358, and an Appendix of 86 hymns for children. Editions of the Hymnal have also been published with these additional hymns incorporated in their proper places, in all 442.

In 1862 the Assembly’s Committee on Psalmody issued a Hymn Tune Book, which was enlarged in 1865 and incorporated in 1868 in The Church of Scotland Psalm and Hymn Tune Book. This was, as the Committee mention, the first authorised collection of tunes issued since 1650. In 1872 it was reissued, revised and enlarged by the Committee under the musical editorship of William Henry Monk. The Scottish Hymnal has been issued with the tunes as a cut book, and also with fixed tunes, the complete tunes being issued in a cut form to the Psalms, Paraphrases and Scottish Hymnal in one volume. The enlarged Scottish Hymnal of 1884 has also been issued (in 1885) with music ed. by Albert Lister Peace.

ii. The Free Church.—After the formation of the Free Church by the Disruption of 1843 no steps were taken to provide a hymnal till 1866, when, after considerable discussion, the General Assembly appointed a Committee to consider the subject. In 1869 the Assembly authorised its Committee to select from and add to the Translations and Paraphrases of 1781. In 1870 they presented a Draft to the Assembly which was sent for further revision to Presbyteries in 1871, sanctioned by the Assembly in 1872, and issued in 1873 as Psalm-Versions, Paraphrases, and Hymns. It contains 21 psalm-versions and 123 hymns, including 40 selections from the Translations and Paraphrases of 1781. For this a tune book was published by the Psalmody Committee as The Scottish Psalmody in 1873. This collection being found rather meagre, a Committee of enquiry was appointed in 1877 on whose report a Committee was appointed in 1878 to revise and enlarge it. This Committee presented a Draft to the Assembly of 1880 which, after being revised by the Presbyteries of the Church, was sanctioned by the Assembly of 1881 and issued in 1882 as the Free Church Hymnbook. It contains 387 hymns (including 23 selections from the Paraphrases of 1781) and 30 scripture sentences. The indices in the larger edition without music are by the Rev. James Bonar, M.A., of Greenock, and are among the most accurate and useful yet issued. The Committee having been authorised to set tunes to the hymns, engaged Edward John Hopkins as musical editor, and under his revision the complete book appeared in 1882 as The Free Church Hymnbook with Tunes. One of the best recent hymnals, it owes much of its completeness and excellence as to hymns and music to the energy, good taste, and musical knowledge of the Rev. Professor A. B. Bruce of Glasgow, the Convener of the Committee. Under the revision of Mr. Hopkins the Psalmody Committee then proceeded to set tunes to the Psalter of 1650, the Paraphrases of 1781 and portions of the prose Psalter, and their work was sanctioned by the Assembly of 1883, and published as The Scottish Psalter. Being the Psalms in Metre, with the Paraphrases, and a Selection of the Prose Psalms. With appropriate Tunes and Chants, 1883.

iii. The United Presbyterian Church.—The United Presbyterian Church was formed in 1847 by the union of the United Associate (Secession) and the Relief Churches.

1. As early as 1748 the Associate Synod had requested Ralph Erskine to versify the Songs of Scripture. In 1752 a Committee was appointed to revise his work, but it never met, and his death taking place shortly afterwards the Committee was dissolved in 1753. In May 1811 the session of Well Street Church, London (Dr. Alex. Waugh) asked leave to compile and use a collection, and in September the Synod appointed a Committee to consider the question. In 1812, on the recommendation of this Committee, the Synod formally permitted the use of the Translations and Paraphrases of 1781, and appointed a small committee to compile a new collection. No collection was however thereafter issued. Again in 1842 a Committee was appointed to prepare a collection of Paraphrases and Hymns. They presented a Draft in 1844, and the same, further revised, in 1846, but in the prospect of the Union of 1847 nothing more was done.

2. In 1793 the Synod of the Relief Church was overtured to enlarge the Psalmody, and on May 20, 1794, a Committee of eight was appointed which recommended the selection compiled in 1786 by the Rev. James Steuart, of Anderston, Glasgow, with the additional selections made by the Rev. Patrick Hutcheson of Paisley, as united by the Rev. James Dun of Glasgow, all members of the Committee. This collection was sanctioned by the Synod on the 22nd, and forthwith published as Sacred Songs and Hymns on various Passages of Scripture, approved by the Synod of Relief (Glasgow: J. Mennons, 1794). It contains 231 hymns and paraphrases, and is Dun's Collection (Dun having taken Nos. 1-180 from Steuart, and 181-231 with the preface from Hutcheson) with a new title-page. In 1825 a Committee was appointed to prepare a new selection, who were authorised to print their work in 1831. It was finally sanctioned in 1833, and issued as Hymns adapted for the Worship of God. Selected and sanctioned by the Synod of Relief (Glas.: Blackie & Son, 1833). It was an excellent collection for the time at which it was compiled.

Such was the position of their Hymnody at the Union of 1847.

3. In 1847 the Synod of the United Presbyterian Church appointed a Hymnal Committee, and in 1848 authorised them to prepare a hymnal on the basis of the Relief Hymnbook of 1833 and the United Associate Draft Hymnbook of 1846. They presented their first draft in 1848. In 1851 their final draft was approved, and they were empowered, after considering suggestions, to publish it in time for the next Synod. The Synod of 1852 accordingly sanctioned it as the Hymnbook of the United Presbyterian Church (Edin.: W. Oliphant & Co.), with 468 hymns and 23 doxologies. As it contained many hymns which never became popular, and had introduced many alterations into the text of the hymns, a Committee was appointed in 1870 to revise it. In 1873 they were authorised to send their Draft to Presbyteries, and in 1874 to Sessions, and in 1875 were empowered to publish their final draft. The Synod of 1876 accordingly sanctioned it as The Presbyterian Hymnal. In 1874 the Psalmody Committee were authorised to set tunes to the hymns, and in 1875 engaged Henry Smart as musical editor, the completed work, with fixed tunes, being issued in 1877 as The Presbyterian Hymnal with Accompanying Tunes, and containing 366 hymns, 18 doxologies, and 24 scripture sentences. Considering its size it is one of the best modern Hymnals, both as regards hymns and tunes, and their union. Under the same editor the Committee then prepared tunes for the Psalter of 1650, and Paraphrases of 1781, and issued their work in 1878 as The Presbyterian Psalter with Accompanying Tunes. In 1887 Notes on the individual hymns, by Mr. James Thin of Edinburgh, were added to the large type ed. of the words, together with additional scripture sentences numbered 25 to 133.

IV. The Evangelical Union.

The Evangelical Union was formed at Kilmarnock in 1843 by James Morison of Kilmarnock, Robert Morison of Bathgate, A. C. Rutherford of Falkirk, and John Guthrie of Kental, who had all been ministers of the United Associate Church in these places, but had been deposed by the Synod for the views they held on the extent of the Atonement of Christ. In doctrine they are closely allied to the Wesleyans, and in polity to the Congregationalists. Their first Hymnal was prepared by a Committee appointed in 1852, and was issued in 1856 as The Evangelical Union Hymnbook. A desire having arisen for a more select and accurate collection, a committee was appointed in 1874 to prepare a new hymnal, and their work was issued in 1878, as The Evangelical Union Hymnal. This consists of 420 hymns, with names of authors and dates of publication affixed, 15 doxologies and 40 chants. It also contains an Index of Authors, and, what is almost a unique feature, a list of original readings where the author's text has been departed from. These were prepared by the Rev. William Dunlop, of Glasgow, the editor, the selection of hymns being made by the Committee as a whole. It is altogether a well selected and well edited collection.

V. Baptist.

The earliest Baptist Church in Scotland now existing is that of Keiss, founded in 1750. No. 1 was composed for it; Nos. 2 and 3 are the most important of the other Baptist Hymnals.

1. A Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs. By Sir William Sinclair, Minister of the Gospel of God, and Servant of Jesus Christ (1751). Contains 60 hymns by Sir William Sinclair, Bart., of Dunbeath, who while residing in his castle of Keiss in Caithness, formed a church there, of which he was pastor from 1750 to 1763, at which date he left Keiss and went to Edinburgh. It is still occasionally used in Keiss Baptist Church, and was reprinted, unaltered, by Peter Reid, Wick, in 1870.

2. A Collection of Christian Songs and Hymns in Three Books (Glas.: D. Niven, 1786), containing in all 275 hymns. It took its final shape in the second ed., pub. by Niven in 1792 as Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, in Three Books, with 330 hymns and an appendix of 28. To the ed. of 1813 (Edin.: J. Hay & Co.) a supplement of 33 hymns was added. The last form was Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in Three Books, Selected for use in the Scotch Baptist Churches. A new impression, with enlarged Supplement (Glas.: A. Liddell & Co., 1841). This contains the 330 hymns and appendix of 28 from the ed. of 1792, a supplement, numbered 331-363, from the ed. of 1813, and a second supplement numbered 364-449 from the ed. of 1830; and gives names of authors of hymns.

3. The Christian Hymnal. A Collection of Hymns for Divine Worship. Selected and arranged by Rev. Oliver Flett. 1871. Contains 457 hymns and 9 scripture selections for chanting, with authors' names and dates, dates of publication, &c. The compiler of this excellent collection is minister of Storie Street Baptist Church, Paisley.

VI. Congregationalist.

Congregationalism of the English type was introduced into Scotland in 1798. Its principal collections of Scottish origin are—

1. A Collection of Hymns for the use of the Tabernacles in Scotland (Edin.: J. Ritchie, 1800), with 320 hymns. Probably compiled by the Rev. John Aikman of Edinburgh, and Rev. George Cowie, of Montrose. In the 1807 and later eds. (13th ed. 1844), entitled A Collection of Hymns for the use of Christian Churches, and enlarged to 326 hymns. This collection is not of great value.

2. A Selection of Hymns for Public Worship: Intended primarily for the Church in Albion Street Chapel, Glasgow (Glas.: R. Williamson, 1803). Compiled by Dr. Wardlaw, with 322 hymns. In the third, 1811, and later eds. it was entitled, A Selection of Hymns for Public Worship, by Ralph Wardlaw. A supplement was added in 1817, making the number in all 493 (13th ed. 1860). Of these 11 are by Dr. Wardlaw. The book seems to have attained its popularity by the influence of its compiler's reputation rather than by its own merits.

3. A Collection of Hymns from the Best Authors, adapted both for Public and Family Worship. Selected and arranged by Greville Ewing and George Payne (Glas.: A. Duncan and M. Ogle, 1814, 11th ed., 1846). Ewing was minister of West Nile Street Congregational Church, Glasgow, had been originally a minister in the Established Church, and was one of the founders of Congregationalism in Scotland; while Payne was then minister of the Congregational Church meeting in Bernard's Rooms, Edinburgh. It contains 647 hymns and doxologies. It is not a collection of great merit.

4. A Selection of Hymns for Public Worship in Christian Churches. By William Lindsay Alexander, D.D. (Edin.: H. Paton, 1849). This hymn-book (commonly called The Augustine Hymn Book, from the name of Dr. Alexander's church) as first pub., contained 553 hymns and doxologies. Various changes were made in the 2nd, 1858, and subsequent eds., the 5th ed. of 1872 containing 616 hymns, doxologies, and anthems. Of these 7 are original hymns and 5 translations by Dr. Alexander. While his contributions are excellent and useful, the collection as a whole is disappointing.

5. Hymns of Faith and Life, collected and edited by the Rev. John Hunter, Trinity Congregational Church, Glasgow. 1889. This contains 695 hymns, Nos. 696-865 being words of psalms, canticles and anthems.

This is a book of very different type from any of the preceding, being pronouncedly modern, meant as the exposition in song of "progressive and Catholic Christianity," and having a closer affinity to the collection of Mr. Page Hopps (viii. Sect. xiv., No. 2) than to any other Scottish collection. A considerable proportion of the pieces are really undogmatic religious verse, often of considerable beauty and significance, and gathered from a wide circle of English and American authors, but even less suited for public worship than the doctrinal hymns in the earlier Congregational books.

VII. Scottish Episcopal.

1. General.—No attempt was made to provide an authorised Hymnal for general use till 1856, when, upon representations from the Diocese of Edinburgh, a committee was appointed by the Episcopal Synod consisting of 2 clergymen and 1 layman from each of the 7 dioceses. Of this committee the late Dean E. B. Ramsay was chairman, and the late Archdeacon Philip Freeman, Professor William Bright, Canon Henry Humble of St. Ninian's Cathedral, Perth, and the Hon. G. F. Boyle, afterwards Earl of Glasgow (who kindly lent a copy of the draft), were leading members. By them was prepared and printed, in 1857, a draft Hymnal for the Scottish Church, containing 289 hymns, 69 psalms and paraphrases, 42 doxologies, and words of 29 anthems. As more than 150 were from the Latin, the Episcopal Synod, instead of sanctioning this form, appointed Dr. Charles Wordsworth, Bishop of St. Andrews, to revise it, and his revision was sanctioned by them and published as A Collection of Hymns to be sung in Churches. Approved and sanctioned by the Episcopal Synod of the Church in Scotland, 1858 (Edin.: R. Grant & Son), with 119 psalms and hymns, all taken from the draft of 1857. Being so small, a supplement was at once compiled by the Edinburgh clergy, and issued in 1858 as Additional Psalms and Hymns selected by several clergymen for the use of their own congregations (Edin.: R. Grant & Son). This brought the number up to 217, increased in the 4th ed. of 1866 to 236, with 20 doxologies in pt. i. and 16 in pt. ii. Of these Supplemental Hymns, 75 are from the draft of 1857. The book being as a whole meagre, and weak in design, has long since given way to Hymns Ancient and Modern, which though never formally authorised by the Episcopal Synod, is now in almost exclusive use in the Scottish Episcopal Church.

2. Diocesan.

1. A selection of Psalms and Hymns adapted to the use of Protestant Episcopal Congregations (Edin.: R. Grant & Son). This collection, which is of little value, was licensed by its principal compiler, Dr. James Walker, Bishop of Edinburgh, in 1830, and reached its 8th ed. in 1856. It contains 137 portions of psalm versions, 74 hymns and 12 doxologies.

2. Hymns and Anthems for use in the Holy Services of the Church, within the United Diocese of St. Andrews, Dunkeld, and Dunblane (Edin.: R. Lendrum). This collection, licensed by Bishop Patrick Torry in 1850, contains 128 hymns, the greater number of which are translations and original hymns by the compiler, Robert Campbell (p. 202, i.), and a selection of prose Anthems. This is the collection called S. Ninian's Hymns [as being used in St. Ninian's Cathedral, Perth] in the preface to The Hymnary.

3. Metrical Psalmody, consisting of portions of the several Psalms; and also a collection of Hymns, recommended for use in Public Worship in the Diocese of Glasgow and Galloway (Edin.: R. Grant & Son, 1853). Licensed June, 1853, by its compiler, Bishop W. J. Trower, D.D. Contains 272 portions of Psalm-versions, 15 paraphrases of the Psalms, 150 hymns, and 8 doxologies. It is of moderate value.

4. Hymnal for use in the Services of the Church (Aberdeen: D. Wyllie & Son). This collection, known as the Aberdeen Hymnal, was compiled by Norval Clyne (p. 239, i.), and sanctioned by T. G. Suther, Bishop of Aberdeen, in 1857, and reached its 4th 1000 in 1866. It contains 154 hymns and 24 psalm-versions—all, save 8, taken from the draft Hymnal of 1857 (see above).

3. Congregational.

The more important collections, issued mainly for individual congregations, are:—

1. The Church of England Hymn Book: containing a Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Public and Private Use. By the Rev. D. T. K. Drummond, B.A., Ozon, and Robert Kaye Greville, LL.D. (Edin.: W. Oliphant & Son, 1838). To this collection Mr. Drummond contributed 10 and Dr. Greville 8 hymns. It was compiled for the use of that Evangelical section of Scottish Episcopalianism which seceded in 1843, and which recently put itself under the care of Bishop Beckles. It contains 626 hymns and is a good hymn-book of the Evangelical school.

2. Hymns and Anthems adjusted to the Church Services throughout the Christian Year (Lon.: Hope & Co., 1851). Contains 152 hymns, 30 Psalm-versions, and words of 18 Anthems. Compiled by Rev. Gilbert Rorison, LL.D., incumbent of St. Peter's, Peterhead, and includes 24 translations by himself, and his well-known hymn, "Three in One, and One in Three." In 1860 he entirely recast it, omitted the anthems, 10 Psalms, and 78 hymns, and re-issued it as Hymns adapted to the Church Services throughout the Christian Year: with a Selection of Metrical Psalms (Peterhead: W. L. Taylor). This form contains 250 psalms and hymns, enlarged by an Appendix, 1869, to 310. It is upon the whole the best Scottish Episcopal Collection.

3. Hymns, Introits and Psalms for the use of St. John the Evangelist's, Aberdeen (Aberdeen: A. Brown & Co.). Contains 105 hymns and was edited in 1851 by the Rev. Patrick Cheyne, the incumbent. Reissued, 1865, as Hymnal for the use of St. John the Evangelist's, Aberdeen, and Introits throughout the Year. The first part there contains 111 hymns—not including the introits. This is followed by an Appendix, dated 1863, with hymns 112–252. In the ed. of 1870, the second part (compiled by the Rev. John Comper, incumbent of St. Margaret's) brings up the total to 255. The first part consists mainly of translations from the Latin, while the second contains a number of translations from the Greek and German, and a good selection of modern English hymns. Mr. Comper also pub. in 1870 Mission Hymns for St. Margaret's Chapel, Aberdeen, with 394 hymns.

4. Introits and Hymns, with some Anthems, compiled for the use of the Collegiate Church, Isle of Cumbrae (Lon.: J. Masters & Co., n.d.). This consists of 3 parts. Part i. was pub. in 1852 as Introits and Hymns, with some Anthems adapted to the Seasons of the Christian Year (Lon.: J. Masters & Co.), and edited by the Rev. George Cosby White, M.A., then Provost of the College at Cumbrae, now of Great Malvern, and was also used in Margaret Street Chapel, London, and elsewhere. Pt. ii. (hymns 176–287) was compiled mainly by the Hon. G. F. Boyle, late Earl of Glasgow, and added about 1863. Pt. iii. (hymns 288–311) was compiled mainly by Dr. J. G. Cazenove, then Provost at Cumbrae, now Chancellor of St. Mary's Cathedral, Edinburgh, and added about 1869. In 1876 the book was superseded by Hymns Ancient and Modern, Revised and Enlarged Edition with an Appendix. For use in the Cathedral and Collegiate Church, Isle of Cumbrae. This consists of H. A. M. with an appendix of hymns numbered 474–561, from the former Cumbrae book.

VIII. Private Presbyterian and less important collections of other Churches.

These we note in detail, beginning with—

i. Established Church of Scotland.

1. The Psalms of David methodized: being an Attempt to bring together (without the smallest Alteration) those Passages in them which relate to the same Subjects. For the use of Churches and Families. By Robert Walker, F.R.S.E., Senior Minister of Canon-gate (Edin., W. Creech, 1794). Contains 31 subject divisions and 154 pages. The Psalms are from the Psalter of 1650,

2. Hymns, Doxologies, &c., sung in Sconie Parish Church. Selected from the General Assembly's Church of Scotland Hymn-book, and arranged according to the subjects of the Lord's Prayer and Apostles Creed (Leven, T. Porter, 1863). Compiled by Rev. John Duncan, minister there. 17 hymns selected, and 4 added; 23 doxologies, 3 thanksgivings, 3 dismissions, 1 hosanna, and 6 sanctuses.

3. Hymns adapted for Public Worship, selected from various Authors by the late Thomas Crainger, Esq., of Craigpark, with an Appendix consisting of Hymns for private devotion, Sabbath Schools, and Children. (Edin.: Neill & Co., 1852). With 285 hymns. Meant for use in Abercorn Church, near Linlithgow.

4. The Order of Public Worship and Administration of the Sacraments as used in the Church of Old Greyfriars, Edinburgh. Compiled by Dr. Robert Lee, minister there, and pub. in 1865. The edition of 1873 (Edin., A. & C. Constable) has appended to it portions of psalm versions numbered 1-203, paraphrases 204-253, and hymns 254-267, edited by Dr. Lee before his death in 1868. In 1877 a Supplement appeared, compiled by Dr. Wallace, then minister there, with hymns 268-316, and prose psalms 317-348. Both compilers were aided by Mr. Geoghegan, the presenter.

5. Hymnal Appendix (Edin., Lorimer & Gillies, 1874). Edited by Rev. John Macleod for use in his church at Duns (withdrawn from use after he removed to Govan, Glasgow), as an appendix to the Scottish Hymnal. Contains prose chants 201-219, and Hymns 220-366—a large proportion being from Anglican sources.

6. The Scottish Book of Praise, being Selections from the Psalms in Prose and Verse, and other parts of Scripture, with a collection of Hymns, Paraphrases, and Anthems. The music edited by Henry A. Lambeth (Lon. & Glas., Swan & Pentland, 1876). Edited by Donald Macleod, D.D., for his Park Church, Glasgow, and for general use as a book with fixed tunes—the musical editor being his organist. Contains selections from the Psalter of 1650, the Paraphrases of 1781, and the prose Psalter, with 38 scripture selections for chanting, 25 Anthems, and 155 Hymns, 120 taken from the Scottish Hymnal, 1870, being numbered as in that collection.

ii. Free Church.

1. Hymns for the Sanctuary; also instructive Hymns for Home Use (printed by D. Adam, Glasgow, 1859). Edited by the Rev. D. C. A. Agnew, of Wigton; with 130 hymns in pt. i., and 60 in pt. ii., besides "prayer meetings." Mr. Agnew also pub. A Hymn-book for Prayer Meetings. It contains 150 Scriptural Hymns, selected and revised (Edin.: A. Elliott, 1860).

2. Hymns for Christian Worship, compiled by several ministers of the Free Church in Glasgow (Glas., W. Collins, Sons, & Co.). With 95 hymns, and in 2nd ed. of 1866 103 hymns. Not authorised by the F. C. General Assembly.

3. Hymns selected for Divine Worship, by the Rev. William Knight, St. Enoch's, Dundee (1871). With 115 Hymns. Enlarged and reissued (after he had joined the Established Church) as The St. Enoch's Hymnal, Dundee (1874), with Hymns 1-301 and prose selections for chanting 302-339; many hymns from Unitarian sources. The compiler was then minister in Dundee, and is now [1890] Professor in St. Andrews.

iii. United Presbyterian.

1. Sacred Songs and Hymns on various Passages of Scripture; Selected for the congregation at Anderson-town (Glas., D. Niven, 1786), by Rev. James Steuart, of the Relief Church, Anderston, Glasgow. Contains 180 Hymns. Was the first Presbyterian Hymn-book, and formed the basis of the Relief H. Bk. of 1794.

2. Sacred Songs and Hymns on various Passages of Scripture. To be sung in the Worship of God (Paisley: J. Neilson, 1793). Edited, with a preface, by Rev. Patrick Hutcheson, of the Relief Church, Canal Street, Paisley. Hymns 1-180 are the same, and under same numbers as Steuart's save 16 exchanged for hymns in easier metres; with Hymns 181-231 added.

3. Sacred Songs and Hymns on various Passages of Scripture, for the new Relief Church, Campbell Street (Glas.: J. Menmons, 1794). The Rev. James Dun, minister there, took hymns 1-180 from Steuart, and preface and Hymns 181-231 from Hutcheson. Adopted by the Relief Synod in 1794 as their first hymn-book.

4. A Collection of Paraphrases and Hymns. For the use of the Relief Congregation, Rozburgh Place, Edinburgh (Edin.: J. Ruthven & Sons, 1810). Compiled by Rev. John Johnston, minister there, mainly from the Relief H. Bk. of 1794. Contains 210 hymns. The ed. of 1821 (Edin.: J. L. Huie) adds 19 doxologies.

5. A Collection of Sacred Songs and Hymns, selected from various Authors, and recommended to be sung in Churches and Families (Cupar Fife: R. Tullis, 1811). With 210 hymns, mainly from the Relief H. Bk., 1794. Compiled by the Rev. Robert Walker, minister of the Relief Church in Cupar.

6. A Collection of Hymns on various Passages of Scripture; for the use of the Relief Chapel, Congate (Edin.: Sanderson & Co., 1819). 197 hymns, mostly from the 1794, and 12 doxologies. Probably compiled by Rev. James Scott, then minister.

7. Hymns for Public Worship (Edin.: J. Hume, 1368). 106 hymns, selected by Rev. Peter Davidson, D.D., for use of Queen Street U. P. Church, Edinburgh.

8. Hymns for Divine Worship. Selected from the United Presbyterian Hymn-book according to the original authors: with an appendix (Edin.: J. Greig & Son, 1870), by Rev. William Ritchie, D.D., for use in his church at Duns. Nos. 1-102 selected as above, and 103-110 added.

9. The Ibrox Hymnal (Glas. & Lon.: M'Corquodale & Co., 1871). Compiled by Rev. Joseph Leckie, D.D., of Ibrox U. P. Church, Glasgow, as a supplement to the U. P. H. Bk. of 1852. Of its 104 hymns, mostly recent, 3 (Nos. 8, 19, 100) are by himself.

10. Hymns specially selected for the use of the U. P. School Wynd Congregation (Dundee, 1875), by Rev. George Gilfillan, minister there—106 Hymns and 5 Doxologies. The Rev. David Macrae, who became minister to a section of the congregation, has reissued it as Gilfillan Memorial Hymn-book, being Mr. Gilfillan's Selection revised and enlarged by the Rev. David Macrae, 1880, with 170 hymns and doxologies.

iv. Evangelical Union.

1. Hymns and Spiritual Songs collected by James Morison (Kilmarnock, 1844), one of the founders of the Union and the best living Scottish exegete. Contains 80 hymns and was originally published in two parts, in the second of which (38-80) 2 hymns by Dr. John Guthrie were first published. Reissued unaltered 1848. Superseded by the Evang. Union H. Bk. of 1856.

v. Baptist.

1. A Selection of Hymns adapted for Divine Worship (Edin.: Waugh & Innes, 1818), by Rev. Christopher Anderson, of Rose Street Baptist Church, Edinburgh.

2. Hymns selected for Public and Private use. (Glas.: D. Cameron & Co., 1838) by Rev. James Paterson, D.D., of Hope Street (now Adelaide Place) Baptist Church, Glasgow. 329 hymns. The 2nd ed. of 1867 (J. Maclehose) contains 436 hymns and 27 chants.

3. A new Selection of Hymns, adapted to Public and Private Devotion. (Edin.: W. Innes, 1843). 290 hymns, 3 doxologies, and an appendix of 8 hymns. Compiled mainly by Rev. Jonathan Watson, co-pastor of Elder Street (now Dublin Street) Baptist Church, Edinburgh. Superseded 1861 by No. 5.

4. Hymns for Divine Worship, being a supplement to the New Selection. For the use of the Baptist Congregation, South Street. (Perth: J. & W. Bayne, 1851), 109 hymns, probably selected by Rev. John Cloke, then minister.

5. Hymns and Spiritual Songs selected and arranged for Public and Social Worship. (Edin.: Turnbull & Spears, 1861). Contains 366 hymns and 7 chants, and was compiled for use in Dublin Street Church, mainly by J. W. Urquhart, Esq., one of the deacons. Superseded 1879 by the English Baptist Psalms and Hymns.

6. Church Song. A Collection of Hymns for Public Worship. (Paisley: J. & R. Parlane, 1875), by Rev. Jervis Coats, M.A., for use in the Baptist Church, Govan, Glasgow, with 200 hymns.

vi. Congregational.

1. The Congregational Psalmist; or, a Selection of Psalms and Hymns specially adapted for the use of the Congregational Churches of Scotland. By Christian Henry Bateman. (Edin.: H. Armour, 1846.) [See Bateman, C. H., p. 116, ii.] Contains 350 hymns.

2. A Selection of Hymns, chiefly Watts's, for use in Public Christian Worship; edited by S. T. Porter, minister of the Independent Church, Bath Street, Glasgow. (Glas.: 1853). 800 hymns.

3. Hymns and Passages of Scripture for Divine Worship. Selected and arranged by John Hutchison (Dunfermline, 1861), then Congregational minister at Dunfermline. A fair collection, hymns 1-479, doxologies 480-496; with 51 scripture passages and 5 ancient hymns.

vii. Scottish Episcopal.

1. A Collection of Hymns and Anthems for the use of the Episcopal Church of Scotland. (Edin.: Murray & Cochrane, 1781), with 38 hymns and anthems. A subsequent edition was A Collection of Hymns and Anthems as used in St. Andrew's Chapel, Aberdeen, and other Chapels of the Episcopal Church in Scotland, 14th edition. (Aberdeen: D. Chalmers & Co., 1826), with 50 hymns and anthems.

2. A Selection of Psalms and Hymns adapted to Public Worship in general, but chiefly intended to be used in the Episcopal Chapel, New Town, Edinburgh. By A. C. (Edin.: Gordon and Neill, 1786), with 37 Psalm Versions (from Tate and Brady, and from Merrick) and 51 hymns. Compiled for the congregation then meeting in West Register Street, afterwards in Charlotte Chapel, Charlotte Square, and now in St. John's, Princes Street, to which Dean Ramsay long ministered.

3. Selected Portions from the Old and New Version of the Psalms, &c., Hymns and Anthems. (Edin.: J. Taylor & Co., 1804). Compiled by Charles Vincent for St. George's Chapel. Part II. enlarged appeared as Hymns, Anthems, &c., used in St. George's Chapel, York Place, Edinburgh (Edin.: Caledonian Mercury Office, 1811), with 81 hymns and words of 34 anthems; while the edition of 1817 (Edin.: P. G. Buchanan), contained 84 hymns.

4. A Collection of Hymns and Anthems, for the use of the Episcopal Chapel, Glasgow (Glas.: R. Chapman, 1805), with 104 hymns and words of 24 anthems. Compiled by the Rev. Wm. Routledge, incumbent, aided by the organist and some of the congregation. The ed. of 1823 (Glas.: R. Griffin & Co.) contains 108 hymns, words of 32 anthems, 7 doxologies, and Bp. Ken's morning and evening hymns. Superseded in 1845 by an English collection, and that again by No. 11.

5. A Selection of Hymns for St. James's Chapel, Leith (Edin.: A. Allardice, 1810), 71 hymns with anthems and doxologies, and an App. of 18 hymns.

6. A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, arranged for the Public Worship of God in the Episcopal Chapel, Carrubers Close, Edinburgh (Edin.: J. Gifford, 1820), with 47 psalm-versions, 109 hymns, 5 doxologies, and an appendix of 33 hymns.

7. A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, arranged for the Public Worship of God, in St. James's Chapel, Broughton-Place, Edinburgh (Edin.: Waugh & Innes, 1824), with 47 Psalm portions, 109 hymns, 5 doxologies, and an Appendix of 33 hymns. Probably compiled by Rev. Edward Craig, then Incumbent.

8. Select Portions of Psalms from Modern Translations and Paraphrases supplementary to the Old and New Versions; and Hymns from various authors Designed for Public and Social Worship (Glas.: G. Brookman). Compiled and pub. in 1827 for use in St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Glasgow. The 2nd ed. of 1837 contains 141 psalm-versions, 161 hymns and 8 doxologies. The 3rd ed. of 1845 is a reprint of the 2nd.

9. A Selection of Psalms and Hymns, used in St. John's Episcopal Chapel, Greenock (Greenock: Advertiser Office, 1835), with 108 portions of psalms, 100 hymns and an appendix of 83 hymns.

10. A Collection of Hymns for the use of the congregation assembling for the Public Worship of God, in St. James' Chapel, Broughton Place, Edinburgh (Edin.: Waugh & Innes, 1836), with 219 hymns. Probably compiled by the Rev. Daniel Bagot, then Incumbent.

11. Hymns adapted for Congregational Singing (Glas.: J. Graham, 1836). Edited by Sir Archibald Edmonstone, Bart., of Duntreath and Colzium, with 120 hymns, mostly from Bp. Heber's collection, the last 10 being original.

12. Hymns appropriate to the several Seasons of the Ecclesiastical Year. For use in Trinity Episcopal Chapel, Dunfermline (Dunfermline: J. Miller & Son, 1852), with 48 hymns. The 2nd ed., 1859, contained in all 61 hymns. Compiled by the Rev. William Bruce, Incumbent, as a supplement to Tate and Brady. Superseded in 1866, by H. A. & M.

13. Hymnarium, chiefly from ancient sources, used in the Holy Services of Mattins and Evensong of St. Andrew's Church, Glasgow (Lon.: J. Masters. Glas.: M. Ogle & Son, 1857). Compiled by Rev. J. F. S. Gordon, D.D., the Incumbent. Contains 250 hymns and 31 introtos. Superseded in 1866, by H. A. & M.

14. A Hymnal adapted to the Seasons of the Christian Year (Aberdeen: A. Wilson & Co., 1859). Compiled by Rev. Alexander Harper, for use in his church at Inverurie, with 168 hymns. First ed. 1856 had 79 hymns.

15. The Supplementary Hymnal compiled by the Rev. H. J. Palmer, B.A., for use in S. Mary's Church, Aberdeen (Aberdeen: G. Davidson, N. D., 1866), 81 hymns, mostly recent hymns and translations; supplementary to H. A. & M., 1861. Almost all are included in the revised H. A. & M. or the People's Hymnal.

16. Glengarnock, Ardeer and Carnbroe Mission Hymn-book (Paisley: N. D. [1866]). With 222 hymns and 8 doxologies. Compiled by the Rev. F. Graeme Littlecot.

17. Hymns authorised by the Bishop (Aberdeen: King & Co., 1868), 24 hymns, selected by Rev. T. I. Ball for use in St. Mary's Chapel, The Cove, Aberdeen.

18. Supplement to the "Hymnal Noted with Appendix" (Edin.: Home & Macdonald, 1882). The editions up to 1873 were edited by the Rev. H. A. Walker, of Hatcham, and the Rev. T. I. Ball. The Supplement by Mr. Ball, with Hymns 372-588, contains a large proportion of English Hymns of the Evangelical school.

19. See also § xvi. 10.

viii. Glasse or Sandemanian.

The Rev. John Glas, M.A., minister of the parish of Tealing, near Dundee, having adopted Independent views, was deposed in 1728. After presiding over congregations of his sympathisers at Dundee and Perth, he died at Dundee, Nov. 2, 1773. In the meetings for public worship of this sect (who have an unpaid ministry and literally observe Acts xv. 29)—sometimes from Robert Sandeman, the son-in-law of Glas, called Sandemanians—the Psalms only are used, the Scottish Psalter of 1650 having been first employed and then the revision of it by Robert Boswell, first pub. as The Book of Psalms in Metre; from the Original, compared with many Versions in different Languages, London, 1784. For their meetings for religious fellowship were composed the: Christian Songs. To which is prefixed the Evidence and Import of Christ's Resurrection verified for the help of the Memory. Of this the first ed. was pub. at Edinburgh in 1749. A copy, without title page, now in Perth, seems to represent this, and contains 38 songs; increased in the 2nd ed. (Edinburgh: A. Donaldson for W. Coke, Edin.: R. Morison, Perth, &c.) to 40; in the 3rd ed. (Leith: W. Coke, N. D.) to 47; in the 4th (Dundee: D. Ogilvy, 1770) to 52; in the 5th (Dundee: L. Chalmers for W. Coke, Leith, and R. Morison, Perth, 1775) to 95 songs (No. 80 being afterwards omitted), and 11 Elegies. The 8th ed. (Perth: R. Morison, 1794) contains 94 Songs and 11 Elegies; and a second part with 25 Songs, pt. ii. being in the 13th ed. (Perth: R. Morison, 1847), enlarged to 63, and in the 14th ed. (Perth: R. Morison, 1872), to 114 Songs, the additions being mostly recent compositions of the brethren. The ed. pub. by George Waterston, 1875, for the Edinburgh congregation, is a reprint, with one or two of the Songs abridged, of pt. i. and the Elegies of the 1794, with two additional songs, No. 95, by W. Buchanan, 1851, and No. 96, by E. C. Anderson. Pt. ii. is omitted, and the Airs to the Songs (such as "The Flowers of the Forest," &c.) separately printed and inserted in a pocket in the binding.

A considerable number of these Songs passed in more or less altered forms into the hymnals of the Baptists, the Scots Old Independents, and the Congregationalists in Scotland, 1781-1867. Such as are found in hymnals included under main sections v., vi., or in English Hymnals since 1830, are here noted, the numbers being given from the 1794, but all had appeared in the edition of 1775. First lines in italics are altered, the rest are generally centos.

ix. Scots Old Independents.

Founded in 1768 by Rev. James Smith and Rev. Robert Ferrier, ministers of the adjacent parishes of Newburn and Largo in Fife; and by David Dale and others, in Glasgow. In 1814 there were 12 churches in Scotland, of which only 3 now remain.

1. The Psalms of Isaiah, Paul, Peter, &c., paraphrased in Metre, or, Hymns founded on some important Passages of Holy Scripture, and adapted to many occasions of Christian Life (Edin.: D. Paterson and W. Gray, 1771). By Alexander Pirie (see p. 896, i.). Of its 95 hymns 11 passed into the Relief H. Bk., 1794.

2. Hymns and Spiritual Songs (Glas.: Mrs. Orr, 1781), with 77 hymns. Republished as Hymns and Spiritual Songs, collected for the Christian congregation which meets in the Grammar School Wynd, Glasgow (Glas.: D. Niven, A. Orr, &c., 1786), with 100 hymns. The sixth ed., 1794, was enlarged to 118 hymns, many being Glassite; and a seventh ed. appeared unaltered in 1798.

3. Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, collected for a Christian Church in Paisley (Glas.: D. Niven, 1797). In Three Books—i. with Hymns 1-101, ii. H. 102-226, iii. H. 227-285. From the Baptist H. Bk. of 1786, omitting those specifically Baptist, and adding 65 from various sources.

4. A Selection of Hymns adapted to Christian Worship (Glas.: J. Graham & Co., 1819). Probably compiled by the late James McGavin, of Paisley, with 362 hymns in alphabetical order, a number being Glassite. The second ed. of 1832 contains 365 hymns. In 1853 a Supplement (Glas.: Mackay & Kirkwood), compiled by two of the Glasgow elders, appeared with Hymns 366-433. Both are still in use.

x. Berean.

Founded by Rev. John Barclay, b. 1734, near Muthill, Perthshire, assistant of Fettercairn Parish, 1763-1772; died at Edinburgh, as pastor of the Bereans, July 29, 1798.

1. Rejoice Evermore; or Christ all in all. An original publication consisting of Spiritual Songs, &c. By John Barclay (Glas.: W. Bell, 1767). Contains, besides Psalms and a version of the Song of Solomon, 196 hymns. Republished as A Select Collection of new original Spiritual Songs, Paraphrases and Translations. Together with the most useful and agreeable of those formerly published under the title of Rejoice Evermore, or Christ all in all. By John Barclay, A.M., minister of the Berean Assembly in Edinburgh, vol. ii. (Edin.: J. Donaldson, 1776), with 285 hymns and a Paraphrase of the Song of Solomon. Vol. i. contains his version of The Psalms paraphrased according to the New Testament Interpretation, &c. Mr. Barclay also published a cheap collection entitled The Experience and Example of the Lord Jesus Christ; illustrated and improved for the consolation of the Church; making a copious variety of Subjects for the Purpose of Divine Praise, &c. (Edin.: J. Donaldson, 1783), with a prefatory address of 48 pages fulminating against the Scottish sects of the day, 34 Psalm versions selected for a

Ms. version still more paraphrastic and spiritualised than his 1776, a complete metrical version of Hebrews, 33 paraphrases and hymns from his 1776 volume, and 7 additional paraphrases. Appended are 12 pages of further fulminations, ending with definitions of Latin phrases used, the last of which is Rabies cleri. "You may call it the madness of the clergy; or, the real mad-dog-fury and fatal infatuation of false pretended priests. From which, may the gracious Lord of heaven and earth deliver us, and all his own Elect! Amen." In Songs of the Spirit, edited by the Revs. W. H. Odenheimer and F. M. Bird, New York, 1871, two hymns are given by Barclay: "Drink deep of the Spirit, and thou shalt be filled" (since included in the Library of Religious Poetry, ed. P. Schaff, D.D., and A. Gilman, M.A., ed. 1883, p. 802), and "O love ye the Spirit indwelling," at pp. 127-130.

xi. Roman Catholic.

Hymn singing in public worship seems of recent introduction in Scotland, and the hymnals used seem mostly those popular elsewhere. We have only been able to trace the following, of which Nos. 1-3 are properly School hymnals but have been used in Church at Children's Services, &c.

1. A Selection of approved Catholic Hymns, for the use of Schools (Glas.: H. Margey, 1861), 57 hymns and the Litany of Loretto.

2. St. Patrick's Catholic Hymnbook published by the Marist Brothers with the approbation of the Right Rev. Dr. Murdoch, Vicar Apostolic of the Western District. Sixteenth Thousand. (To be had of the Marist Brothers, St. Mungo Street and Charlotte Street, Glasgow, &c., 1864), 169 hymns. Compiled in 1862 and contains "several original contributions, kindly supplied by the Rev. Canon Oakeley, Very Rev. F. W. Faber, Rev. F. Stanfield and others."

3. Collection of Hymns for the use of the Children of St. Andrew's Congregation (Glas.: H. Margey, 1875), with 105 hymns, of which 6 and the Litany of Loretto are in Latin.

4. Hymns arranged according to the Ecclesiastical Year, for use in Catholic Churches. Music may be had separately. Cum permissu superiorum (Glas.: H. Margey, 1878), with 107 hymns, 18 being in Latin and the rest mainly by Faber and Caswall.

5. A very curious book was pub. at Aberdeen (J. Chalmers & Co.) in 1802 as A Collection of Spiritual Hymns and Songs, on various religious subjects. The pieces occupy pp. 3-149, but are not numbered. They consist mostly of trs. from the Latin, and hymns set to popular song tunes. A number are by Bishop Geddes, eight are signed J. C., eight are signed W. D., &c. It is hardly likely that the book was ever used in the public services of the Roman Catholic Church in Scotland. (See also p. 974, ii.)

xii. Universalist.

1. King David's Psalms in common use, with notes critical and explanatory. Dedicated to Messiah (Glas.: printed and sold by N. Douglas, the author, 1815). Psalter of 1650 and Paraphrases of 1781 with notes. The editor, who in 1780 became minister of the Relief Church at Cupar-Fife, and in 1793 at Dundee, resigned his charge in 1798 and finally settled in Glasgow as a Universalist preacher, where he d. in 1823. In his Sermons on Important Subjects with some Essays in Poetry (Edin.: G. Caw, 1789), he gives 14 paraphrases of psalms and 24 hymns and poems—all original.

2. A Collection of Hymns for the use of Believers in God's infinite and immutable love, manifested to the Creation in Jesus Christ (Glas.: W. Kaye, 1824), 116 hymns.

xiii. Theistic.

1. Hymns selected for Divine Worship. By the Rev. James Cranbrook (Edin.: Turnbull & Spears, 1867), formerly minister of Albany Street Congregational Church, Edinburgh. 38 hymns. Recast as—

2. A Manual of Devout Song for Common Worship. Compiled by the Rev. James Cranbrook (published for use in the Hopetoun Rooms, Edin.: 1868), with prose psalms for five Sundays and 34 hymns, No. 15 being by himself. Again recast as—

3. Hymns collected and adapted for Rational Worship, Temporary Issue (Edin.: n.p. 1869), with no psalms, 68 hymns and 3 doxologies. After Mr. Cranbrook's connection ceased it was enlarged and issued as—

4. Hymns selected and adapted for Divine Worship and Human Encouragement (Edin.: Printed for Freemasons' Hall Congregation, 1870), by Mr. Statham, his successor. Contains 165 hymns, words of 16 anthems, and 3 sanctuses. The final issue was:—

5. Hymns (Freemasons' Hall, Edin., 1872), with 69 hymns, of which, according to Mr. Statham's preface, "Many have been written expressly for this collection," only 8 being taken from No. 4.

xiv. Unitarian.

1. Hymns and Anthems for Private and Public Worship. Edited by Charles Clarke (Glas. printed for the Unitarian Church, Union Street, by W. Rankin, 1850), 309 hymns and anthems with authors' names, &c. Based on W. J. Fox's H. & Anthems, 1841. The ed. of 1860 has 320 hymns with an Appendix of 40 "Hymns of Consolation" compiled by H. W. Crosskey.

2. Hymns for Public Worship edited by John Page Hopp (Glas. : The Unitarian Christian Churches, 1873), 477 hymns with authors' names, &c. The compiler was then minister of St. Vincent Street Unitarian Church, Glasgow.

xv. Brethren.

1. Our Hymnbook. Compiled by Rice T. Hopkins. Fifteenth Thousand (Edin. : Quigley & Reid, n.d.). Two hymns on back of titlepage, with gospel hymns 1-67 and praise hymns 68-215.

2. Aids to the Service of Song (Edin. : A. Elliot, n.d., c. 1868). Compiled by Dr. Naylor. 203 hymns.

3. The Gospel Hymnal. Compiled by W. T. F. Wollston (Lon. & Glas. : E. L. Allan & Co., 1871, n.d.). 300 hymns. The compiler was leader of "The Brethren" in Edinburgh.

xvi. Miscellaneous.

1. A Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs (Glas. A. McLean, 1755). 12 hymns.

2. A Collection of Hymns for Christian Worship (Edin. : G. Craufurd, 1762). 56 hymns and 5 sacramental hymns—in all 61.

3. A Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs, extracted from various Authors, and published for the use of Christians of all denominations (Edin. : James Donaldson, 1778). With 147 hymns and 2 doxologies, mostly taken from R. Conyers's Collection (p. 332, ii.).

4. A select number of Spiritual Hymns, &c., either for the use of the congregation, family, or the devout Christian's meditation, &c. By David Mitchell (Glas. : W. Smith, 1781). 70 hymns. It is not likely that either this or Nos. 5-7, 11, were ever used in public worship.

5. A Collection of Hymns and Sacred Poems. In Two Parts. For all Denominations. Published by James Fordyce (Aberdeen : printed by A. Leighton, 1787). Contains 200 hymns in pt. 1. and 94 poems in pt. ii. The 2nd ed. of 1788 has 178 hymns, and the 3rd ed., 1789, has 187.

6. Hymns and Scripture Paraphrases published at the request of a Congregation of Christians. By William Bell (Edin. : G. Caw, 1806). With 142 hymns.

7. A Selection of Sacred Hymns for Social Worship (Dalry : printed by J. Gemmill for T. Watt, Kilwinning, 1807), with 149 hymns.

8. Hymns on Natural, Moral and Theological Subjects, for the use of the Theophilanthropist Society (Glas. : 1816) with 152 hymns.

9. A Collection of Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, selected from a number of other collections, for the use of Christian Churches; and adapted to New Testament Worship. By William Cullen, Dundee (Dundee : A. Colville & Co., 1817), with 219 hymns.

10. A Miscellaneous Collection of Hymns, chiefly designed for Public Worship (Aberdeen : D. Chalmers & Co., 1825), with 204 hymns and the Benedicite. Compiled for use in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Aberdeen.

11. Morning and Evening Hymns for every day of the year, for the Family and Church (Glas. : 7 Argyle Street, 1857). With 732 hymns, edited by John Smith, LL.D.

Note.—Two hymnals compiled by the Rev. J. H. Wilson, D.D., of the Barclay Free Church, Edinburgh, though never we believe used in public worship, are cited occasionally throughout this Dictionary and are thus here mentioned. (1) The Service of Praise (Edin. : T. Nelson & Sons, 1865), with 322 hymns, 35 chants, 10 anthems and sanctuses, and 78 children's hymns. A number of hymns by Mrs. Cousin, Mr. Sloan and others, first appeared here: (2) Songs of Zion (Edin. : T. Nelson & Sons, 1876), with 301 Hymns, &c., mainly from the 1865, from Songs of Zion, 1862, and from the hymns introduced by Mr. Sankey.

IX. APPENDIX.

1. Scottish Hymn Writers.

Scotland has produced a long series of minor poets. It would be both difficult and useless to enumerate even those of them who have attempted to write sacred poetry. Notices will be found in this Dictionary under their respective names of a very large number of these authors, including the following, who by birth or residence are connected with Scotland, viz. :—

2. Principal Works on the Scottish Psalms and Paraphrases, and their authors.

In this section we have grouped together those works which are of greatest value in tracing the history of Scottish Hymnody.

1. The Scottish Metrical Psalter of A.D. 1635, reprinted in full from the original work, the additional matter and various readings found in the editions of 1666, &c., being appended, and the whole illustrated by dissertations, notes, and facsimiles. Edited by the Rev. Neil Livingston. Printed from stone, by Maclure and Macdonald, lithographers to the Queen, Glasgow, 1864.

The most elaborate and careful work on the early Scottish Psalters, and the fruit of much labour and research. It contains a great amount of interesting and curious information, and in fact exhausts the subject.

2. The Letters and Journals of Robert Baillie, A.M., Principal of the University of Glasgow, MDCXXXVII-MDCLXII. Edited from the author's manuscripts by David Laing, Esq. In three volumes. Edinburgh, printed for Robert Ogle, 1841-1842. Edited for the Bannatyne Club. It is an important work for the period it embraces. In the appendix to vol. iii. (pp. 525-556), Dr. Laing gives a valuable series of "Notices regarding the metrical versions of the Psalms received by the Church of Scotland."

3. History of the Scottish Metrical Psalms, with an account of the Paraphrases and Hymns, and of the music of the Old Psalter. Illustrated with 12 plates of ms. music of 1566. By Rev. J. W. Macneekon, Lesmahagow. Printed for subscribers only. Glasgow : McCulloch & Co., Printers, 7 Alston Street, 1872. A very useful work, containing most of the accessible information, and including reprints of many original documents and titlepages of rare editions.

4. The Wedderburns and their Work, or the Sacred Poetry of the Scottish Reformation, in its historical relation to that of Germany. By Alex. F. Mitchell, D.D., Professor of Hebrew, St. Andrews. William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London, 1867. A very careful and interesting little book, tracing out the German originals of a number of the Gude and Godlie Ballates, and giving all the information accessible as to their authors and their origin.

5. A compendious book of Psalms and Spiritual Songs, commonly known as "The Gude and Godlie Ballates". Edinburgh, reprinted from the edition of 1578, n. r. (but William Paterson, Edinburgh), 1868. A reprint from the earliest perfect edition now extant (but see I. § 3 of this article), edited by Dr. David Laing, with a historical preface, a valuable series of notes, a glossary, and copies of the title-pages of the three editions then known, viz. those of Henrie Charteris 1578, Robert Smyth 1600, and Andro Hart 1621.

6. The Free Church Magazine for 1847, volume 4, Edinburgh, John Johnstone. Contains four articles on the Paraphrases—interesting, but needlessly controversial. They raised a discussion on the subject of Robert Burns's connection with the Paraphrases, the writer having in his hands a ms. copy of the Paraphrases prepared for the use of the Convener of the 1775 Committee, with alterations in a hand which much resembled that of Burns, but which proved to be that of John Logan—a facsimile page being given. We have failed to trace this ms.

7. The United Presbyterian Magazine, volume 18, 1874, and volume 19, 1875. Edinburgh, William Oliphant & Co. These include a series of interesting papers on Scottish Hymn-writers by the late Rev. William Thomson, of Slateford, near Edinburgh. Chapter i. is on John Wedderburn, ii. on the Paraphrases of 1745, iii. on Bruce and Logan, and iv. on the Paraphrases of 1781.

8. Fasti Ecclesie Scoticanæ. The succession of ministers in the parish churches of Scotland, from the Reformation, A.D. 1560, to the present time. By Hew Scott, D.D., F.S.A., Scot. minister of Anstruther Wester, Edinburgh. William Paterson, 3 vols. in 6 parts, 1866-1871. A most careful and elaborate work, the fruit of many years' research among original documents, and of great use in matters of biography.

9. The Book of Common Order of the Church of Scotland, commonly known as John Knox's Liturgy, and the Directory for the Public Worship of God agreed upon by the Assembly of Divines at Westminster; with historical introductions and illustrative notes by the Rev. George W. Sprott, B.A., and the Rev. Thomas Leishman, M.A. William Blackwood and Sons, Edinburgh and London, 1868. The notes on the Psalters are concise and good.

10. The Scottish Paraphrases. . . . An account of their history, authors, and sources; together with the minutes of the General Assembly and extracts from Presbytery records relative thereto; reprints of the editions of 1745, 1751, and 1781; information regarding hymns contemporary with the Paraphrases; and some account of the Scripture Songs of 1706. By Douglas J. MacLagan. Edinburgh, Andrew Elliot, 1889. This work justifies its title, is well and carefully done, and gathers together almost all the available information. It is especially valuable as reprinting the full text of the very rare edition of 1745.

In appending these authorities it may be stated that the article throughout is based upon independent research, and that in almost every case (save Rous, 1641 and 1643, and the French Psalters) the works mentioned have been examined by myself, or by others on my behalf. To Mr. Clark and the librarians of the Advocates Library, Edinburgh, and to Dr. Dickson, Mr. Lymburn, and the librarians of the Glasgow University Library, I am especially indebted for the full facilities and courteous attention afforded in my researches; to Mr. William Bonar of London I was indebted for the loan of early editions of the Paraphrases, &c.; to Mr. James Thin of Edinburgh, and Mr. W. T. Brooke of London, I am indebted for kind help in completing the lists of Hymnals; and to correspondents, of various denominations, too numerous to mention I am indebted for prompt answers embodying the information they had to give on the points submitted to them. Scottish Psalter. [Scottish Hymnody.]

Scottish Translations and Paraphrases. These Translations and Paraphrases were originally prepared by a Committee appointed by the General Assembly of 1742. They were presented in draft in 1745, and in 1751 were authorised for private use. In 1775 a Committee was appointed to revise and enlarge them for public use, by which a draft collection was prepared and printed in 1781, and after many verbal changes published as Translations and Paraphrases, in Verse, of several Passages of Sacred Scripture. Collected and prepared by a Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, in order to be sung in Churches. Edinburgh: Printed and sold by J. Dickson, Printer to the Church of Scotland MDCCCLXXXI [see Scottish Hymnody, v. 1-4].

The Paraphrases of 1781 are made up of 45, taken—some with great alterations—from the collection of 1745; and of 22 added in 1781.

From the 1745 are the following, the numbers being given as in 1781. 23 (Nos. 1, 3, 7, 13, 20, 22, 24, 40, 41, 46, 47, 50 (partly), 51, 54-57, 61, 63-67) by Watts, 5 (Nos. 2, 32, 39, 45, 60) by Doddridge, 2 (Nos. 36, 37) by Tate, 3 (Nos. 4, 33, 34) ascribed to Blair, 3 (Nos. 25, 42, 43) ascribed to Robertson, and 1 (No. 49) ascribed to Randall, leaving 8 (Nos. 6, 18, 23, 26, 38, 48, 52, 59) to which no probable ascriptions have been assigned.

Of the 22 added in 1781, 2 (Nos. 5, 15) are by Watts, while 7 (Nos. 8-11, 31, 53, 58) are assigned to Bruce or Logan; 2 (Nos. 27, 28) are said to be joint productions of Logan and Morison; 5 (Nos. 19, 21, 29, 30, 35) are ascribed to Morison; 2 (Nos. 14, 17) to Cameron, 1 (No. 12) to Martin, 1 (No. 16) to Blacklock, 1 (No. 44, really a cento) to Blair, and 1 (No. 62) to Ogilvie.

Deducting those by Watts, Doddridge and Tate, we find of the 67 in 1781 there are 35 of presumably Scottish origin, 8 of which are still anonymous. The authors of the remaining 27 are noted under Blacklock, Blair, Bruce, Cameron, Martin, Morison, Ogilvie, Randall, and Robertson.

Of the Hymns appended in 1781, 3 (Nos. 1-3) are by Addison, 1 (No. 4) by Watts, and 1 (No. 5) by Bruce or Logan [see Bruce].

The Committees who compiled the Paraphrases were thus made up:—

On May 13, 1742, the Assembly appointed the Revs. James Nisbet, William Gusthart, William Robertson, Robert Kinloch, Professor John Gowdie, Frederick Carmichael, William McGeorge, Thomas Turnbull, Robert Blair, Principal William Wishart, Robert Hamilton, George Logan, James Bannatyne, Professor Patrick Cumming, Alexander Webster, George Wishart, Robert Dalgleish, James Nasmyth, and Matthew Mitchell, ministers; with Messrs. John Wilson, Robert Baillie, and Alexander Nisbet, ruling elders. To these were added on May 18, 1744, the Revs. Principal Thomas Tullidolph, Daniel McQueen, Hugh Blair, George Kay, and Thomas Randall, ministers; with Lord Arniston, Lord Drummore, the Solicitor General Robert Dundas, and Mr. Charles Erskine, ruling elders.

On May 29, 1775, the Assembly appointed the Revs. Dr. Patrick Cumming, Dr. Alexander Webster, Principal William Robertson, Dr. Robert Finlay, Dr. Hugh Blair, Dr. Harry Spence, Dr. John Ogilvie, Thomas Linning, Andrew Hunter, Dr. Alexander Carlyle, Dr. Joseph McCormick, John Logan, James Brown, Samuel Martin, Robert Walker, James Campbell, and John Gibson, ministers; with Messrs. John Home, James Stoddart, John McLauren, Robert Cullen, and Professors Andrew Dalryell and George Hill, ruling elders. To these were added on June 2, 1780, the Revs. Dr. Henry Griep, Robert Walker, Jun., Sir Harry Moncrieff, John Kemp, Dr. George Barclay, and Dr. Robert Dick, ministers; with Messrs. John Dickson, James Colquhoun, and Alexander Stevenson, elders. And finally, on May 26, 1781, the Assembly added the Revs. Dr. William Dalrymple, Dr. James Gillespie, William Burnside, Alexander Watt, John Morison, and William Peebles, ministers; with Mr. Hardie, and Professors William Richardson and John Anderson, ruling elders.

Throughout the body of this work these Paraphrases have been annotated in full. For reference, the first lines are here given with the numbers as they appear in 1781. Where an alternative line is given in italics the note will be found under that line.

The Paraphrases of 1751 had been printed at the end of some editions of the Psalter of 1650 (e.g. by Colin Macfarquhar, Edinburgh, 1771), and though the right of printing the Paraphrases of 1781 was assigned to the Church printer up to 1809, yet before the end of the century the King's printer had begun to add them to the Psalter, and they are still almost universally so printed. [J. M.]

Scriver, Christian, s. of Christian Scriver (Schrifer, Schreiber), merchant at Rendsburg in Holstein, was b. at Rendsburg, Jan. 2, 1629; and was from his birth destined for the ministry. His father d., of the plague, in 1629, but by the help of a rich great-uncle, he was able eventually to matriculate at the University of Rostock in Oct., 1647 (M.A., 1649). In 1650 he became tutor to a family at Segeberg, near Lübeck. While visiting a married half-sister at Stendal, he preached there with much acceptance, and was appointed, in 1653, archidiaconus of St. James's Church there. He then became, in 1667, pastor of St. James's Church at Magdeburg, where he was also appointed, in 1674, assessor at the consistory, in 1676 as Scholarch, in 1679 as Senior; and in 1685 had also the parishes and schools of the so-called Holzkreis placed under his inspection. At length he found his work too heavy, and, in 1690, accepted an invitation to Quedlinburg as consistorialrath and chief court preacher at the church of St. Servatius, and also as private chaplain to Anna Dorothea, Duchess of Saxony, and Abbess of the Lutheran Stift at Quedlinburg. After a series of strokes of paralysis, he d., at Quedlinburg, April 5, 1693 (Koch, iv. 78; Herzog's Real-Encyklopädie, xiv. p. 1, &c.).

Scriver was the most popular, useful, and influential preacher; his earnestness being deepened by the memory of his many wonderful escapes from accident and pestilence. He was also the author of various devotional works, which found much acceptance, e.g. his Gotthold's 300 Zufällige Andachten, Magdeburg, 1663 (1671, and later eds., have 400 Andachten: English version, as Gotthold's Emblems, by R. Menzies, D.D., Edinburgh, 1857); his Seelen-Schatz, in 5 parts 1675-92; and his Gotthold's Siech- und Steges-Bette, in 2 pts., 1687-94.

It is difficult to say how many hymns Scriver wrote, apparently about ten. He refers to one or two in his Seelenschatz and his Andachten, but does not give the full texts. A number are included, as by him, in C. Weise's abridgment of the Seelenschatz, which was pub. at Wittenberg, in 1704, as the Seelenschatz's Krafft und Saft; and C. O. Weinschenk, pastor of St. Ulrich's in Magdeburg, in his Erbauliche Leben of Scriver (Magdeburg and Leipzig, 1729), gives a list of those he considers genuine.

Those of Scriver's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Auf, Seel, und danke deinem Herrn. Morning. Included, 1704, as above, and in 1729, also marked as by Scriver. But Scriver's son-in-law, Johann Heinrich Hävecker [b., 1640, at Kalbe, near Magdeburg, became diaconus, and, in 1693, pastor at Kalbe; latterly, also, Inspector of the Holzkreis; and d. at Kalbe, in 1722], in his Dreyfach schallend und nachhallend Kirchen-Echo, Leipzig, 1695, p. 3, claims it as his own. It is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1078. Tr. as, "To God, my Soul, Thank-offerings pay." By H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 30.

ii. Der lieben Sonne Licht und Pracht. Evening. This is Scriver's best hymn. It seems to be earlier than 1671, as in that year Scriver quotes st. viii., in his Andachten, as above. According to tradition it was written one evening when Scriver was disturbed by hearing outside a profane song sung to a beautiful melody; whereupon he, grieved that the melody should be so misapplied, composed this hymn for it. Rambach, in his Anthologie, iii. p. 205, prints the hymn from the Vollständiges G. B., Hamburg and Ratzburg, 1684, in 9 st. of 7 l. In the Lüneburg Stadt G. B., 1686, No. 1907, it is marked as "M. C. S.;" and in Hävecker's Kirchen-Echo, 1695, p. 30, as M. C. Scriver's. It is also in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1153. Regarding it Laumann, in Koch, viii. 201, speaks thus:—"Of the beautiful hymn of this true Teacher, the Chrysostom of our Lutheran church, in which the thoughts of Gerhardt's evening hymn [p. 822, i.] ring and are powerfully re-echoed; st. vi.—viii., are of the greatest force, and of these especially st. viii." He also gives a portion of a sermon on Rogation Sunday, 1671, in which Scriver quotes st. viii. as expressing the deepest sentiments of his heart. Tr. as:—

1. With Thee I lay me down to sleep. This is a tr. of st. v., vii., viii., as No. 481, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. It is also found in the following forms:—

i. In peace I'll now lie down to sleep. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789.

ii. I lay me down with Thee to sleep. In Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.

iii. In peace will I lie down to sleep. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

2. My praise again I offer Thee. A tr. of st. iv., v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 6, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

3. The lovely Sun has now fulfilled. This is a tr. of st. i., iv., v., ix., dated 1882, by M. W. Stryker, in his Hys. & Verses, 1883, p. 28, repeated in his Christian Chorals, 1885, No. 16. In his Song of Miriam, 1888, p. 26, it begins "The golden Sun has now fulfilled."

iii. Hier lieg ich ~~me~~ mein Gott ~~in~~ deinen Füßen. Repentance. Lent. Included in Hävecker's Kirchen-Echo, 1695, p. 351, in 28 st. of 4 l.; repeated in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1582, &c. It is included as Scriver's, in 1704, as above; and so in Burg, and by Koch; but Weinschenk does not give it as his; and Hävecker gives it without name of author. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Here, O my God, I cast ~~me~~ as Thy feet. This is a tr. of st. i., iii., v., vi., x., xi., xxi., xxiii., xxvi., xxviii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger. 1st Ser., 1855, p. 63. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 45, it begins, "Here, O my God, low at Thy feet I bend me;" is altered in metre; and omits the tr. of st. iii., ll. 3, 4; v.; vi., ll. 1, 2; and xxiv. [J. M.]

Scudder, Eliza, niece of Dr. E. H. Sears, (q.v.), was b. in Boston, U.S.A., Nov. 14, 1821, and now (1888) lives in Salem, Massachusetts. Formerly an Unitarian, she some time ago joined the Protestant Episcopal Church. Her hymns in C. U. are:—

1. From past regret and present [faithlessness] feebleness. Repentance. In the Quiet Hours, Boston, 1875.

2. I cannot find Thee! Still on restless pinion. Seeking after God. Appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, 1864.

3. In Thee my powers and treasures live. Faith and Joy. In the Hys. of the Spirit, 1864. It is from a hymn of 10 st. beginning, "Let whosoever will enquire," entitled, "The New Heaven," and dated 1855.

4. Life of our life, and light of all our seeing! Prayer. In the Boston Quiet Hours, 1875.

5. The day is done; the weary day of thought and toil is past. Evening. In Sermons and Songs of the Christian Life, by E. H. Sears, Boston, 2nd ed., 1878, p. 296, entitled "Vesper Hymn," and dated "October, 1874." This is possibly her finest hymn.

6. Thou grace divine, encircling all. Divine Grace. Appeared in Dr. E. H. Sears's Pictures of the Olden Time, as shown in the Fortunes of a Family of Pilgrims, 1857. It was written in 1852, and included in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864. It has sometimes been taken as "An Ancient Catholic Hymn" (Unitarianist's Ps. & Hys. 1866), but in error.

7. Thou long disowned, reviled, oppress. The Spirit of Truth. In the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864.

Of these hymns, Nos. 2, 6, and 7 are in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, 1873. Some of Miss Scudder's poetical pieces appeared in Dr. Sears's Monthly Religious Magazine. Her Hymns and Sonnets, by E. S., were pub. by Lockwood, Brooks & Co., Boston, 1880. From this her hymn "Thou hast gone up again" (Ascension), is taken. [F. M. B.]

Σὲ καὶ ὑν εὐλογοῦμεν. Gregory of Nazianzus. [Evening.] This hymn is given in his Works, Paris, 1611, i.; in Daniel iii. 13; and in the Antho. Græca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 29. It is tr. as "And now again at night" by A. W. Chatfield in his Songs and Hys. of Earliest Greek Christian Poets, 1876, p. 122, in 8 st. of 4 l. (See Greek Hymnody, § iv.) It dates 324-389, and contains 28 lines. [J. J.]

Σὲ μὲν ἀρχομένης. Synesius, Bp. of Ptolemais. [Morning or Evening.] Hymn iv. of ten hymns composed by him at various periods of his life, 375-430. The full Greek text is found in the Antho. Græca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 15 in 299 lines. It is tr. as "To Thee at evening grey," by A. W. Chatfield in his Songs and Hys. of Earliest Greek Christian Poets, 1876, p. 56, in 27 st. of 8 l. (See Greek Hymnody, § v.) It is an Evening Hymn, and contains several passages of great beauty which might be utilized in the form of a cento for congregational use. Another tr. is "Thee at the break of sacred day," by Alan Stevenson in his The Ten Hymns of Synesius, &c., 1865. [J. J.]

Σὲ τὸν ἀφθιτον μονάρχην. Gregory of Nazianzus. [Praise to Christ.] This hymn to Christ is given in his Works, Paris, 1611, i.; in Daniel iii. 5; and in the Antho. Græca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 23, in 51 lines. It is tr. as "O Thou the One supreme," by A. W. Chatfield in his Songs and Hys. of Earliest Greek Christian Poets, 1876, p. 93, in 13 st. of 6 l. It is a fine hymn gracefully translated. (See Greek Hymnody, § iv.) It dates 324-389. [J. J.]

Seagrave, Robert, M.A., s. of Robert Seagrave, Vicar of Twyford, Leicestershire, was b. at Twyford, Nov. 22, 1693, and educated at Clare College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1714. Taking Holy Orders he entered most earnestly into the movement then being carried forward by the Wesleys and Whitefield; and between 1731 and 1746 he issued numerous letters and pamphlets, &c., designed to awaken in the clergy a deeper earnestness in their work. In 1739 he was appointed Sunday Evening Lecturer at Loriners' Hall, London, where he continued to preach till 1750. He also occupied Whitefield's Tabernacle from time to time. His hymns, which were better known and more highly appreciated by the older compilers than those in modern days, and will still repay perusal, were included in his collection, pub. by him for use at the Loriner's Hall, as Hymns for Christian Worship, partly composed, and partly collected from Various Authors, 1742. The 4th ed. was pub. in 1748, and the originals were reprinted by D. Sedgwick as Seagrave's Hymns, in 1860. Two of these hymns are still in C. U. :—

1. Now may the Spirit's holy fire. Opening of a Place of Worship. This, from Hys. for Christian Worship, &c., 1742, was given by G. Whitefield as the opening hymn of his Hys. for Social Worship, &c., 1753. It was repeated in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776; and again in later collections to modern hymn-books.

2. Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings. Pilgrim's Song. Also from his Hymns, &c., 1742, into G. Whitefield's Hymns, &c., 1753; and again in others to modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Searcher of hearts, before Thy face. P. Doddridge. [Lent.] Pub. by Job Orton, in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 250, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Peter's Admonition to Simon Magus, Acts vii. 21-24." It was repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. [J. J.]

Sears, Edmund Hamilton, D.D., s. of Joseph Sears, was b. at Sandisfield, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, April 6, 1810, and educated at Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., where he graduated in 1834; and at the Theological School at Cambridge. In 1838 he became pastor of the First Church (Unitarian) at Wayland, Massachusetts; then at Lancaster in the same State, in 1840; again at Wayland, in 1847; and finally at Weston, Massachusetts, in 1865. He d. at Weston, Jan. 14, 1876. He pub. :—

(1) Regeneration, 1854; (2) Pictures of the Olden Time, 1857; (3) Athanasia, or Foregleams of Immortality, 1858, enlarged ed., 1872; (4) The Fourth Gospel the Heart of Christ; (5) Sermons and Songs of the Christian Life, 1875, in which his hymns are collected. Also co-editor of the Monthly Religious Magazine.

Of his hymns the following are in C. U. :—

1. Calm on the listening ear of night. Christmas. This hymn was first published in its original form, in the Boston Observer, 1834; afterwards, in the Christian Register, in 1835; subsequently it was emended by the author, and, as thus emended, was reprinted entire in the Monthly Magazine, vol. xxxv. (Putnam, 1874, p. 306.) This emended text is given in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, p. 306, in 5 st. of 8 l. Usually, both in G. Britain and America, the text is abbreviated. Its use is extensive.

2. It came upon the midnight clear. Christmas. The "Rev. Dr. Morison writes to us, 'Sears's second Christmas hymn was sent to me as editor of the Christian Register, I think, in December, 1849. I was very much delighted with it, and before it came out in the Register, read it at a Christmas celebration of Dr. Lunt's Sunday School in Quincy. I always feel that, however poor my Christmas sermon may be, the reading and singing of this hymn are enough to make up for all deficiencies." (Putnam, p. 308.) It appeared in the Christian Register, Dec., 1850, in 5 st. of 8 l., and is now in extensive use in G. Britain and America.

3. Ho, ye that rest beneath the rock. Charitable Meetings on behalf of Children. Appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, in 2 st. of 8 l.

Dr. Sears's two Christmas hymns rank with the best on that holy season in the English language. Although a member of the Unitarian body, his views were rather Swedenborgian than Unitarian. He held always to the absolute Divinity of Christ. [F. M. B.]

Sedgwick, Daniel, was b. in Leadenhall Street, London, Nov. 26, 1814, of poor parents. His education was of the scantiest. Although apprenticed to a shoemaker at an early age, the elements of the trade were not taught him, and through ill health and neglect, at the completion of his apprenticeship, he was unable entirely to earn his own living. During his rambles, he occasionally solaced himself with the purchase of old hymnbooks, and in the study and comparison of these he began to find his chief delight. He joined himself to the strict Baptist congregation, worshipping in Providence Chapel, Grosvenor Street, Commercial Road, in 1839, having previously married a wife of his own humble station and education. At the age of 23 he began to dabble in the secondhand book trade, and gradually worked up a connection. About 1840 he taught himself writing by copying printed letters, and acquired a singularly neat and clear hand. Hymnbooks then were a drug in the market, and he gradually acquired a noble collection. About 1852 he began the issue of reprints of the rarer hymn-writers of the 17th and 18th cents., and in his Library of Spiritual Song he republished the hymns of William Williams, John Mason, Thomas Shepherd, Robert Seagrave, Joseph Grigg, Anne Steele, John Ryland, John Stocker, James Grant, Thomas Olivers, Bishop Ken, and others. This series brought him into communication with many clergy, and with ministers of all denominations, and the humble bookseller of 81 Sun Street, Bishopsgate, would there receive men of high station and culture and teach them the rudiments of the then infant science of English Hymnology. It was, however, on the publication of Sir Roundell Palmer's, (Lord Selborne's) Book of Praise, in 1862, that Sedgwick first took his place as the foremost living English hymnologist. With all his dogmatic ignorance and want of power to balance evidence, his industry and perseverance in following up clues in every direction, led to the formation of an invaluable library, and to a unique correspondence. In the purchase, sale, and exportation of duplicates, and in assisting hymn-compilers in tracing dates, authors, and copyrights, he passed, from 1862 till his death in 1879, the happiest years of his life. He was consulted by men of all shades and opinions, and Hymns Ancient and Modern owed, from its earliest days, something to his assistance. He was consulted at every step by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon for his Our Own Hymnbook (1866); and in Josiah Miller's Singers and Songs of the Church every article had the benefit of his knowledge and revision; in fact the practised expert can detect in that work baseless suggestions and erroneous conclusions, which arose out of Mr. Miller's too close adherence to his guide. Sedgwick's health began to fail rapidly in 1879, and exhausting and severe spasms of heart disease followed to his death. On Sunday, March 9th, he asked in the afternoon for Cennick's "Thou dear Redeemer, dying Lamb," to be sung to him, the last verse,

"When we appear in yonder cloud
With all the ransomed throng,
Then will we sing more sweet, more loud,
And Christ shall be our song."

being specially dwelt on by him. It was in the very early hours of the following morning that, with the words, "Hallelujah, Praise the Lord," on his lips, he fell asleep; and on the 15th March, 1879, he was buried at Abney Park cemetery. He may well be called the father of English Hymnology; and it is to be specially remembered, to his honour, that, with all drawbacks of education, temperament, and narrow theological prepossessions, he, by the collection and comparison of hymns and hymnological literature, and by careful annotation, made it possible for others to reap a rich harvest, by bringing their education, critical acumen, wide sympathies, and accurate knowledge of Biblical, classical, ecclesiastical, and historical subjects to bear upon the stores of hymnological wealth which he had accumulated, but which, to a very great extent, he could not use. [W. T. B.]

Sedgwick, John, D.D., was b. at Wimpleton, April 24, 1823, and educated at Christ Church and Magdalen College, Oxford; B.A. 1846, D.D. 1859. He was a Fellow of Magdalen College 1855-63; Bursar, 1859-60; and Vice-President 1860-61. He was also successively Curate of Greinton, Somerset, 1854; Chaplain of High Legh, Cheshire, 1858; Rector of Great Houghton, Northants, 1862; of Stoke-Climsland, Cornwall, 1872; and of Birdbrook, Essex, 1876. He has pub. History of France, 1849; History of Europe, 1850; Hints of the Establishment of Public Industrial Schools, 1853; and Oremus: Short Prayers in Verse for Sundays and Holy Days, suggested by the Services of the Church of England, 1852. From the last work his Quinquagesima hymn, "Lord of love, Whose words have taught us," in Kennedy, is taken, and many more of equal merit remain. [J. J.]

Sedulius, Coelius. The known facts concerning this poet, contained in his two letters to Macedonius, are, that in early life, he devoted himself to heathen literature; that comparatively late in life he was converted to Christianity; and that amongst his friends were Gallieanus and Perpetua. The place of his birth is generally believed to have been Rome; and the date when he flourished 450. For this date the evidence is, that he referred to the Commentaries of Jerome, who d. 420; is praised by Cassiodorus, who d. 575, and by Gelasius, who was pope from 492 to 496. His works were collected, after his death, by Asterius, who was consul in 494. They are (1) Carmen Paschale, a poem which treats of the whole Gospel story; (2) Opus Paschale, a prose rendering of the former; (3) Elegia, a poem, of 110 lines, on the same subject as the Carmen; (4) Veteris et Novi Testamenti Collatio; and (5) the hymn, "A solis ortus cardine" (p. 4, i.). Areval (1794) quotes 16 mss. of Sedulius's work, ranging in date from the 7th to the 16th cent. The best ed. of his Opera is that by Dr. J. Huemer, pub. at Vienna in 1885. Areval's text is printed in Migne's PP. Lat. vol. xiv. This Sedulius must not be confounded with the Irish, or with the Scottish Sedulius, is sometimes done. [J. J.]

See amid the winter's snow. E. Caswall. [Christmas.] Pub. in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 259, in 7 st. of 4 l., and a chorus. It was repeated in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 280. It is given, in an abbreviated form, in several hymn-books. It sometimes begins with an altered form of st. ii. as, "See in yonder manger low." [J. J.]

See, gracious God, before Thy throne. Anne Steele. [Public Humiliation.] Written for the Public Fast, Feb. 6, 1756, in 7 st. of 4 l., and published in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, ivol. i. pp. 248-9; in the new ed. of same, 1780, vol. i. pp. 248-9; and in D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 115. In its full form it is not in common use. From it, however, the following centos are taken:—

1. Almighty God, before Thy throne. This, as given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 274, and some of the older collections, is the above slightly altered, together with the omission of st. v. The same first line begins a cento in 4 st. usually found in modern hymnals. It is composed of st. i., ii., vi. and vii., also altered, sometimes as in Stevenson's Hys. for Church & Home, No. 5, and again as in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., No. 860.

2. Almighty Lord, before Thy throne, is the same cento with further alterations; S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., No. 138; and in a fuller form of 3 st. of 8 l., being st. i., ii., v., vii. (again altered), and a doxology.

3. Behold, O Lord, before Thy Throne. This cento in the New Cong., 1859, No. 994, is composed of st. i., ii., iii., vi., and a concluding stanza, "Hear Thou our prayer," which we have not traced. The second stanza of the original "Tremendous judgments from Thine hand," sometimes given as "Dark judgments," &c., and again as "Dire judgments," &c., has, according to a note to the original, a special reference to the Lisbon earthquake of 1755.

4. See, gracious God, before Thy throne. An abbreviated form of the original in a few modern collections. [J. J.]

See how great a flame aspires. C. Wesley. [Praise for the Success of the Gospel.] In Jackson's Memoirs of the Rev. Charles Wesley, small ed., 1848, p. 191, this hymn is referred to under the date of Nov. 1746, as follows:—

"The very animated and emphatic hymn beginning—

'See how great a flame aspires,

Kindled by a spark of grace,' was also written by Mr. Charles Wesley on the joyful occasion of his ministerial success, and that of his fellow labourers, in Newcastle and its vicinity. Perhaps the imagery was suggested by the large fires connected with the collieries, which illuminate the whole of that part of the country in the darkest nights."

The hymn was pub. in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1746, vol. i., No. 4, of 4 hymns, written "After Preaching to the Newcastle Colliers," in 4 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 120). It was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 209, and is found in numerous collections. [J. J.]

See how the rising sun. Elizabeth Scott. [Morning.] Appeared in J. Dobell's New Selection, &c., 1806, No. 440, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Morning Hymn." It is given as "See how the mounting sun" in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, and as "See how the morning sun," in the Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1849, and the Hymnal, 1878. There is also a cento in C. U. beginning with st. iii. "Serene I lay me down." [J. J.]

See in the vineyard of the Lord. [The barren Fig-tree; or, Close of the Year.] This hymn is given in 6 st. of 4 l. at the close of Sermon xvii. of Short Sermons to Children, to which are added Short Hymns suited to the Subject. By a Lady [Rebecca Wilkinson].

London: Printed and Sold by the Philanthropic Society, St. George's Fields, N. D., [circa 1795]. It appeared in an improved form in the 1815 Appendix to T. Cotterill's Sel., No. 208, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in the 1819 ed. of the same, No. 205. It is in several collections in G. Britain and America, and is sometimes said to be by "Cotterill, based upon Doddridge;" and again by "Cotterill, based upon Harbottle." It has, however, little or nothing in common with any hymn by Doddridge; nor with Harbottle's, "See how the fruitless figtree stands," which appeared in The Comprehensive Rippon, 1844, though probably written sometime before that date. [See Harbottle, J., p. 484, i.] [J. J.]

See Israel's gentle Shepherd stand. P. Doddridge. [The Good Shepherd.] 1st pub. by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, 1755, No. 198, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Christ's condescending Regard to little Children;" and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 221. In addition to its use in its original form it is found as follows:—

1. Lo! Israel's gracious Shepherd stands. This was given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833.

2. The gentle Saviour calls. This altered form, in 3 st. of 4 l., was made by Bp. Onderdonk for the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, No. 87. It is in several modern collections, and is suitable for Holy Baptism.

3. The Saviour's gentle voice. This is in Kennedy, 1863, No. 231. It is the American text rewritten by Dr. Kennedy.

In these various forms this hymn has a wide circulation. [J. J.]

See, sinners, in the gospel glass. C. Wesley. [Invitation.] Pub. in Hys. on God's Everlasting Love, 1741, No. 10, in 18 st. of 6 l., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 20. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, it was broken up thus:—

1. See, sinners, in the gospel glass, st. i.-iv.

2. Sinners, believe the gospel word, st. vi.-ix.

3. Would Jesus have the sinner die? st. xii., xiv., xvi., xvii.

These hymns have been repeated in several collections. The centos, "Behold the Lamb of God, Who bears The sins of all," &c., in Mercer's Church Psalter & H. Bk., 1855; and "See where the lame, the halt, the blind," in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., 1849 and 1865, are also from the original hymn. [J. J.]

See the Conqueror mounts in triumph. Bp. C. Wordsworth, of Lincoln. [Ascension.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 99, in 10 st. of 4 double lines. In the latest editions of the Holy Year it has been divided into two parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. vi. "Holy Ghost, Illuminator." Usually these two parts are given as separate hymns for congregational use. In addition a cento, beginning with st. ii., "Who is this that comes in glory?" is given as a hymn. The original is one of Bishop Wordsworth's finest compositions, and is the nearest approach in style and treatment to a Greek Ode known to us in the English language. The amount of Holy Scripture compressed into these 40 lines is wonderful. Prophecy, Types, Historical Facts, Doctrinal Teaching, Extatic Praise, all are here; and the result is one grand rush of holy song. [J. J.]

See the [good] kind Shepherd, Jesus, stands. [The Good Shepherd.] This hymn is found in [Rebecca Wilkinson's] Short Sermons to Children, To which are added Short Hymns suited to the Subject [circa 1795]; later ed. pub. at Bath 1798, No. 1, in 4 st. of 4 l. In J. Benson's Hys. for Children, selected chiefly from the publications of the Rev. John and Charles Wesley and Dr. Watts, &c., 1814, it was given anonymously as No. 15. From that collection it has passed into a large number of hymn-books for children. In the Short Sermons there is nothing to show by whom the hymn was composed. It is sometimes given as "See the good Shepherd, Jesus, stands." [W. T. B.]

See where the Lord His glory spreads. T. Kelly. [Ascension.] Appeared in his Hymns, &c., 2nd ed., 1806, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in later editions of the same (ed. 1853, No. 46). In Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and other American collections, it begins with st. ii., altered to "Around the Saviour's lofty throne." In this form it is a good hymn on "Christ as King." [J. J.]

Seelenbräutigam, O du Gotteslamm! N. L. von Zinzendorf. [Follow Christ.] Written in Sept., 1721. 1st pub. as No. 434 in the Sammlung g. und l. Lieder, Leipzig & Görlitz, 1725, in 11 st. of 6 l.; repeated in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, and in Knapp's ed. of Zinzendorf's Geistl. Lieder, 1845, p. 22. The form which has attained the greatest popularity in German is a cento beginning "Jesu, geh' voran" (p. 589, ii.). The only tr. in C. U. from the full form is:—

O Thou to whose all-searching sight. A free tr. by J. Wesley, in the Wesley Ps. & Hys., 1738, and H. and Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 137), in 6 st. of 4 l. St. i.-iii. are based on st. i., ii.; st. v.-vi. on x., xi; while st. iv. is from st. xii. of the hymn "Wer ist wohl wie du," by J. A. Freylinghausen (p. 396, ii.). This tr. was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 330 (1875, No. 339), and has since appeared in many collections, e.g. recently in Church Hys. 1871, Hyl. Comp. 1876, Allon's Cong. Psalmist Hyl., 1886, &c.; and in America in the Episcopal Hymnal, 1871; Pres. Hymnal, 1874; Evangelical Hyl., N. Y., 1880, &c. The hymn "As through this wilderness we stray," in the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, Irish Church Hyl. 1869 and 1873, Universal H. Bk., 1885, &c., consists of st. iii.-vi. of Wesley altered. Wesley's tr. in whole or in part is in extensive use. [J. M.]

Selnecker, Nicolaus, D.D., s. of Georg Selnecker (Selnecker, Schellenecker, who was protonotarius to the Nürnberg magistracy, but lived at Hersbruck near Nürnberg) was b. at Hersbruck Dec. 5, 1532. In 1536 he was removed to Nürnberg, and became during his school time, when only twelve years old, organist at the chapel in the Kaiserburg there. He went to the university of Wittenberg in 1550 (where he became a favourite pupil of Melancthon), graduated M.A. on July 31, 1554, and subsequently lectured as a privat-docent, sometimes to 200 students. In the end of 1557 he was appointed second court preacher at Dresden, and tutor to the heir apparent Prince Alexander, having also to supervise the education of the choirboys of the royal chapel. He was ordained at Wittenberg Jan. 6, 1558. The principal theologians at the Saxon court at that time were inclined to follow Melancthon's lead and to approximate to Calvin's teachings regarding Consubstantiation. When therefore Selnecker thought it his duty openly to declare his adhesion to strict Lutheranism, he found his position almost untenable. When Martin Hoffmann of the Neustadt church in Dresden preached against the Elector August's passion for game preserving, Selnecker took Hoffmann's part. His enemies took advantage of this, and managed so that after Hoffmann had been expelled from Dresden, in August, 1564, Selnecker was requested to seek work elsewhere (see No. iii. below. The hymn more probably refers to Selnecker's own troubles at this period). He preached his farewell sermon at Dresden on March 15, 1565, and on the 26th he entered on his new office of Professor of Theology at Jena. After the siege of Gotha, Duke Johann Wilhelm of Saxony recalled Wigand and other professors of Theology who had been expelled from Jena, in 1561, as adherents of Flacius; and Selnecker, not being so extreme a Lutheran as they, had to leave Jena. Thereupon the Elector August again received him into favour, appointed him professor of Theology at Leipzig, and also pastor of St. Thomas's church and Superintendent of Leipzig. He entered on his duties at Leipzig in August 1568, and for some time worked quietly and successfully. In July 1570 the Elector acceded to the request of Duke Julius of Brunswick for Selnecker's services, and gave Selnecker leave of absence to go to Wolfenbüttel as court preacher and general superintendent. Here he succeeded in inducing the clergy to receive the so-called Saxon Confession, and persevered in zealous visitations of churches, schools, &c. After 1572 he resided at Gandersheim, took an interest in the Gymnasium there, &c. In 1573 he also visited, and drew up a book of Church Order and Discipline for the district of Oldenburg-Jever. But in Brunswick, what with Martin Chemnitz the Superintendent of Brunswick, who was a High Lutheran, the Duke who wished for peace, and the other General Superintendent at Wolfenbüttel, Selnecker found it a difficult matter to work comfortably, and was himself accused of Crypto-Calvinism. He therefore gladly accepted the Elector August's recall to Leipzig, and began to lecture there again in Feb. 1574. In 1576 he was once more appointed pastor of St. Thomas's Church, and Superintendent. At Leipzig the sacramental controversy broke out afresh, and Selnecker became deeply involved therein. He was then engaged in drawing up the Formula of Concord (meant to unite the Lutherans, but to exclude the Romanists on one hand, and the Calvinists on the other), which was finally revised on May 29, and pub. on July 22, 1577. The Formula of Concord was so far a success that it was very largely subscribed, but at the same time its authors, and specially Selnecker, were subjected to the most violent abuse both from the High Lutherans and from the Calvinists, so much so that he called 1579 his "year of patience and silence." For a few years immediately thereafter his life was a more peaceful one, and he found time to devote to poetry and music. At this time he assisted greatly in the building up of the famous Motett Choir of St. Thomas's Church, which J. S. Bach afterwards conducted. But on the death of the Elector August in 1586 the real direction of affairs passed into the hands of Dr. Nicolaus Crell, Chancellor to the Elector Christian I., and under his rule the Lutheran clergy were gradually displaced by Melancthonians and Crypto-Calvinists. When the new court preacher Salmuth began to issue a German Bible with notes in which he clearly taught Calvinism and impugned the Formula of Concord, Selnecker published a pamphlet in opposition, and was in consequence deprived of his offices on May 17, 1589. For a time he stayed on in his own house in Leipzig, and used his pen in controversy. But after having received, on Oct. 22, notice to cease writing, he thought it prudent to leave Leipzig. He found many sympathisers, and after a short time spent in Halle and then in Magdeburg, he accepted the appointment of Superintendent at Hildesheim. Here he had many anxious and weighty matters to settle, and was finally called on, in 1591, to arbitrate in matters of dispute at Augsburg. Returning from Augsburg in stormy December weather, and being worn out and seriously ill, he reached Hildesheim half dead, and was confined to his room till April. Meantime the Elector Christian I. had suddenly died, and his widow, after deposing the Chancellor Crell, proceeded to recall those whom Crell had banished. Selnecker, spite of his weakness, welcomed the idea of returning to Leipzig, left Hildesheim on May 9, and reached Leipzig on May 19; but only to die. He d. at Leipzig, May 24, 1592 (Koch, ii. 1917, v. 656; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xiv. 76; G. A. Will's Nürnbergisches Gelehrten Lexicon, pt. iii. 1757, p. 670, and Supplement, pt. viii. 1808, p. 198, &c.). Koch dates his birth 1530, but Will quotes an apparently genuine autobiographical sketch in which Selnecker gives the date 1532; and the reference which Koch, ii. 191, makes to Selnecker's Paraphrasis Psalterii is full of misprints, for that work was pub. in 1573 (not 1583), and the date after Ps. cl. is "Absolutum Gandesiae [i.e. Gandersheim], Anno 1573, die Maii 25, qui est dies Urbani; Anno aetatis 42 (not 45)."

Selnecker, as we have seen, was a prominent figure in the ecclesiastical history of Germany in the latter half of the sixteenth century, and a good illustration of the extremes to which theological controversies were then carried. He was the author of some 175 theological and controversial works, in German and Latin, perhaps the most important being his Institutio Religionis Christianae, Frankfurt, 1572-73 (see lists in Will's Lexicon as above). He also ranks, with Helmbold and Ringwaldt, among the most important hymn-writers of the period. Amid the manifold changes and chances of his life he found inspiration and consolation in the study of and recourse to the Psalter, and in his love of music. In Latin verse he pub. a Scriptural play on the Fall of our First Parents, entitled Theophania, &c., Wittenberg, 1560 [Brit. Mus.], and a version of the Psalms as Paraphrasis Psalterii, Heinrichstadt, 1573 [University Library at Paderborn in Westphalia. Reference as above kindly verified by Gymnasiallehrer Richter of Paderborn]. His German hymns partake for the most part of the objective churchly character of the hymns of the Reformation period, and indeed contain many reminiscences of them. Of the rest, many only too faithfully mirror the misfortunes and changes and conflicts of his life, and are full of personal matter and careless in style. Still there remain not a few worthy of note, in which a genuine piety, a deep and fervent love to the Saviour, and a zeal for the best interests of His Church on earth, are expressed in clear, flowing and musical style. A large number first appeared appended to or interspersed in his prose works, e.g. his exposition of the Psalms (Ps. i.-l., 1st ed. 1563; li.-c., 1st ed. 1564; ci.-cl., 1st ed. 1566; complete ed. 1571); and the popular ed. (Der Psalter mit kurzen Summarien, &c.) 1st pub. in his exposition of the Prophets (pt. i. 1st ed. 1579; pt. ii. 1st ed. 1579). Also in his Sieben Buss-Psalmen, Leipzig, 1585; in the Drey Predigten, Heinrichstadt, 1572 (contains three sermons preached by Selnecker, by Martin Chemnitz, and by Christoph Vischer at the baptism of Anna Ursula, Duchess of Brunswick-Lüneburg. Appended to Selnecker's sermon are 6 hymns on Luther's Catechism), &c. They were collected, together with other pieces by various authors, in his Christliche Psalmen, Lieder und Kirchengesänge, &c., Leipzig, 1587, where 130 German hymns are marked with his initials, and where various of the melodies and of the four-part settings seem also to be by him. A selection from his hymns, with a biographical sketch by Heinrich Thiele, appeared at Halle in 1855. The most complete collection is that in Wackernagel's Deutsche Kirchenlied, vol. iv. Nos. 303-475, and in the bibliographical notices in which they are found are given at length.

The hymns by Selnecker which have passed into English are:—

i. Ach bleib bei uns, Herr Jesu Christ. Peace and Orthodoxy. It has sometimes been said of this hymn that st. i., ii. are by Selnecker, and that the rest are a later addition. The opposite however is the case. The full form appeared in the Geistliche Psalmen, &c., Nürnberg, 1611, p. 597, in 9 st., viz.:—

1. Ach bleib bey uns, Herr Jesu Christ.
2. In diser schweren betrüben Zeit.
3. Herr Jesu, hilf, dein Kirch erhalt.
4. Erhalt unns nun bey deinem Wort.
5. Ach Gott es geht gar übel zu.
6. Den stolzten Geistern wehre doch.
7. Die Sach und Ehr, Herr Jesu Christ.
8. Dein Wort ist unsers Hertzens Trutz.
9. Gib dass wir leben in dein Wort.

Of this arrangement st. 1, according to Mützell, No. 297, first appeared in 1579, on a broadsheet, along with N. Herman's hymn, Danket dem Herren heut und allezeit. It is a tr. of Melancthon's "Vespera jam venit, nobiscum Christe maneto Exstingui lucem nec patiere tuam." (Corpus Reformatorum, vol. x., col. 602, Halle, 1842), and is founded on St. Luke xxiv. 29.

St. 2, says Mützell, first appeared in Christliche Gebet und Psalmen, welche die Kinder in der Jungfrau Schulen zu Freyberg zu beten und zu singen pflegen, Freyberg, 1602. It resembles the rhymed prayer given at the end of Ps. xxix., in Selnecker's Der Psalter, 1572.

St. 5 is st. 2 of the hymn "Wir danken dir, Herr Jesu Christ, Dass du unser König worden bist," which is the rhymed prayer to Ps. cxlix., in Selnecker's Der Psalter, 1572.

St. 3, 4, 6-9, form the hymn, "Herr Jesu, hilf, dein Kirch erhalt," which is the rhymed prayer to Ps. cxxii., in Selnecker's Der Psalter, 1572. See also Wackernagel, iv., p. 286.

The text of 1611 is in H. Thiele's ed. of Selnecker's Geistl. Lieder, 1855, p. 31, and in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1863, No. 408. The trs. in C. U. are from this text:—

1. Lord Jesus with Thy children stay. This is a tr. of st. 1, 2, 8, 6, 9, 3 by J. Swertner in the Moravian H. Bk. 1789, No. 6 (1886, No. 6).
2. Ah Jesu Christ, with us abide. This is a good tr. of st. 1-5, 9, by Dr. Kennedy as No. 41 in his Hymn. Christ. 1863, repeated in Holy Song, 1869.
3. Lord Jesu Christ, with us abide, For round us fall, &c. By Miss Winkworth, of st. 1, 2, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 19, repeated in Bosworth's Bk. of Church Hys., 1865. It is slightly altered in Miss Winkworth's Christian Singers, 1869, p. 152.

4. Forsake us not, O Lord be near. By L. Heyl, in full, as No. 181 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl. 1880.

Other trs. are—(1) "Abide with us, O Jesu dear," as No. 336, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Lord Jesu Christ, with us abide, 'Tis now." By H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 69. (3) "With us, Lord Jesus Christ, abide." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 61.

ii. Christ der wahre Gottes Sohn. Holy Baptism. This is No. 4 of the 6 hymns by Selnecker, on Luther's Catechism, appended to one of Drey Predigten, 1572, and thence in Wackernagel, iv. p. 255, in 8 st. of 4 l. In the Ohio G. B. 1870, No. 239. Tr. as:—

Now Christ, the very Son of God. By C. H. L. Schnette as No. 221 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl. 1880, st. i.-iii. are literal, iv.-vi. are based on iv.-viii. of the German.

iii. Hilf, Herr, mein Gott, in dieser Noth Cross and Consolation. In his Christliche Psalmen, 1587, in 15 lines entitled "Anno 1565. God knows why." Thence in Wackernagel, iv. pp. 242-243 (with two other forms), and H. Thiele's ed. 1855, p. 45. It was probably written during his last months at Dresden. It has indeed been said to have been written to comfort Martin Hoffmann, diaconus of the Holy Cross Church at Dresden, on his expulsion after preaching about the Elector August's passion for hunting and game preserving; but the hymn is dated 1565, and Hoffmann left Dresden in August, 1564. The form tr. into English is:—

Hilf, Helfer, hilf in Angst und Noth. This is found in M. Moller's Manuale de praeparatione ad mortem, Görlitz, 1593, f. 114, in 3 st. of 4 l., among the hymns "composed by other spiritual persons." This is Wackernagel's second form, and is also in the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 624. The reason why Moller did not claim it as his own was, most likely, because it was based on Selnecker. The trs. are:—

1. My Helper, aid: Thy mercy show. By A. T. Russell, in full, as No. 223 in his Ps. and Hys. 1851.
2. Help, Saviour! help, in fear and need. By E. Cronenwett, in full, as No. 410 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl. 1880.
3. Help, Jesus, help! in woe, in need. By Miss Manington in her Footprints of the Holy Dead, &c., 1863, p. 8.

iv. Lass mich dein sein und bleiben. Close of Service. This is a beautiful st. of 8 l. which is very frequently used in Germany at the close of Divine service. It was written as his daily prayer and 1st pub. in his Passio, 1572, and thence in Wackernagel, iv. p. 251, and also in Thiele's ed. 1855, p. 59. In the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 231, with two additional st. which Wetzel, iii. 213, says appeared in the Rudolstadt G. B. 1688. The trs. are:—

1. Let me be Thine for ever, My gracious. This is a tr. of st. i.-iii. by Dr. M. Loy as No. 230 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl. 1880.
2. Make me Thine own and keep me Thine. By Miss Winkworth in her Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 152.
- v. O Herre Gott, in meiner Noth. For the Dying. Founded on Ps. cxvi. 9. 1st pub. in his Der Psalter, 1572. Wackernagel iv. p. 290, quotes it from the ed. of 1578, in 3 st. of 6 l.

It is also in Thiele's ed. 1855, p. 58, and in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1863, No. 969. Tr. as:—

O Lord and God, I cry to Thee. This is a good and full tr. by A. T. Russell as No. 253 in his Ps. & Hys. 1851.

In Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 885 (Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 388) there is a version of this hymn entirely re-written, and beginning Herr Gott, ich ruf zu dir. The tr. in C. U. from this form is:—

O Lord my God, I cry to Thee. This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger. 2nd Ser. 1858, p. 212, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 192. Repeated in the Irish Church Hyl. 1873, Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk. 1868 and others.

vi. Wir danken dir, Herr Jesu Christ, Dass du gen Himmel gefahren bist. Ascension. A hymn beginning thus, and in 4 st. of 4 l. appeared at the end of Ps. lxxviii. in Selnecker's Der Psalter, 1572. Wackernagel, iv. p. 278, quotes it from the ed. of 1578. It is also in Thiele, 1855, p. 15. Mützell, No. 277, gives this text, and also a form in 13 st. of 4 l. from the Geistliche Psalmen, &c., Nürnberg, 1611, where it is ascribed to Selnecker. The 13 st. form is also in M. Prätorius's Musae Sioniae, pt. v. 1607, No. 140; and in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1863, No. 340. The tr. in C. U. is:—

We thank Thee, Jesus! dearest Friend, that Thou didst. By Dr. M. Loy, in full, from the G. L. S. text, as No. 96 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl. 1880.

Other trs. are—(1) "Lord Jesus Christ! we thank Thee now." This is No. 334, in pt. i., of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "To Thee, our Lord, all praise be given." This is a hymn, in 6 st. of 4 l., by J. Swertner, as No. 136 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1843, No. 178, beginning, "To Thee, Lord Christ!"; based on this hymn, and on Ernst Lange's "Herr Jesu Christ zieh uns dir nach." Lange's hymn is in Freylinghauser's Neues Geistreiches G. B., 1714, No. 117.

vii. Wir danken dir, o treuer Gott. Absolution. This is No. 6 of the 6 hymns by Selnecker, on Luther's Catechism, appended to one of Drey Predigten, 1572. It is in 3 st. of 4 l. and a fourth st. of 2 l., and is entitled "How one should comfort himself in Holy Absolution." The complete form in 4 st. of 4 l., is in his Christliche Psalmen, 1587. Both forms are in Wackernagel, iv. p. 257; and in Mützell, Nos. 285, 286. The second form is also No. 274 in the Ohio Luth. G. B., 1870. Tr. as:—

O Faithful God, thanks be to Thee. By C. H. L. Schnette, in full, as No. 246 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. [J. M.]

Σήμερον συνέχει τάφος [Ἄφραστον θαύμα].

Send out Thy light and truth, O God! J. Montgomery. [Missions.] This well-known hymn was first printed in a religious annual, The Christian Keepsake, in 1836; again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 253; and again in Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., 1854, No. 381, in 4 st. of 8 l., the only change from the 1836 text being st. iii. 1, 9, "Then spring" to "Then be new born." &c. From Mercer's Preface it would seem that he was under the impression that it was written specially for his collection. Montgomery says in a note in his Original Hys., p. 256, that it was written "in the metre and to suit the tune of the hymn said to have been composed and set to music by Luther, and sung by him and his friends as they entered the city of Worms to appear before the Diet there." The German hymn referred to is Ein' feste Burg (p. 322, ii.). Montgomery's hymn, however, has nothing in common with Luther's save the metre. It has attained to somewhat extensive use in Great Britain and America. [J. J.]

Sensus quis horror percuit. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Ascension.] In the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. 497, this hymn begins "Quid obstupendum cernimus," but in Santeuil's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 22, and ed. 1698, p. 105, it is given as above. It is also in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the hymn at Matins on the octave of the Ascension. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. What is this horror? The sky is rended By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, Dec. 1834 (vol. vi. p. 620, together with the Latin), and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839.

2. What terrors shake my trembling soul! By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 85, and again in his Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 49. It is No. 120 in the 1863 Appendix to the H. Noted.

3. Awful thought of endless doom. By R. Campbell, in his St. Andrews Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 78, and, with slight alterations, in the Hymnary, 1872. Some portions of this tr. are by Miss Jane Campbell, of Ravensdale, Scotland. It is given in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, as "Fearful thought of endless doom."

4. What terror every bosom shakes. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 201.

Another tr. is:—

Great God, what terror fills the eye. By W. Palmer, in his Short Poems &c., 1845, p. 50. [J. J.]

Sequences. The origin and structure of Sequences or Proses (p. 914, i.) have been referred to under Latin Hymnody (see pp. 648-650). The Gradual or Antiphon sung between the Epistle and Gospel in the Liturgy ended on festal days with the word Alleluia. The last syllable of this word was pronounced to a number of musical notes (called neumes), which were entitled the Sequentia, as following the Alleluia. In the ninth century the custom began of adapting words to suit these notes; and these words came in their turn to be called Sequences. The first author of this kind of Sequences was Notker Balbulus (p. 812, ii.), a monk of St. Gall, who d. 912. He had many successors, one of the most voluminous and finished writers of Sequences being Adam of St. Victor, who d. 1177.

One of the earliest mss. containing Sequences is an Anglo-Saxon Tropary written in the reign of Ethelred (979-1016), and now in the Bodleian (see e below). In the Leofric Missal, an English service book in use at Exeter half a century later, and now in the Bodleian (Bodl., No. 579. Printed at the Clarendon Press, Oxford, in 1883) only six Sequences are indicated for use by their catchwords (the full text is not given), these Sequences being "Coelica resonant"; "Mater Sequentiarum," i.e. "Pangamus Creatori"; "Clariss vocibus"; "Lyra pulchra"; "Omnes sancti" and "Scalam ad coelos." The use of Sequences soon became very general. In most mediaeval Missals there are proper Sequences appointed for nearly every Sunday and Holy Day, except from Septuagesima to Easter, when verses of Holy Scripture known as the Tract were substituted for the Alleluia and the Sequence. Sequences or Proses are also found in Processionals and Breviaries, where they were introduced in lieu of the Versus after the Responsory attached to one of the *Lectio*s, generally the last (York Brev., 1883, ii. 106), or in lieu of the Hymn at Vespers or Compline, or in connection with Processions on certain festivals. In the revised Roman Missal of 1570 all Sequences were abolished save four, viz. (1) "Victimæ paschali," for Easter; (2) "Veni Sancte Spiritus," for Pentecost; (3) "Lauda Sion Salvatorem," for Corpus Christi; (4) "Dies iræ, dies illa," for Masses for the Dead. In comparatively recent times, about 1727, there was added (5) "Stabat mater dolorosa," for Friday after Passion Sunday.

A large number of Sequences are included in the collections of Mone, Daniel, Morel, Wackernagel, and others. In 1852 Dr. Neale published 125 under the title Sequentiæ ex Missalibus germanicis, anglicis, gallicis, aliisque mediæ ævi collectæ. The most complete collection of Sequences is Dr. Joseph Kehrein's Lateinische Sequenzen des Mittelalters, pub. at Mainz in 1873, with 895, including almost the whole of those previously edited by Mone, Daniel, Morel, Wackernagel and Neale; and many others, principally from Missals of the 16th cent. Of these many are only printed in part, and the number (895), large as it is, does not nearly exhaust the list of such compositions; for even on comparing with the lists below, a large proportion will be found not included by Kehrein.

An interesting collection of Sequences has just been pub. under the title Prosarium Lemovicense (Leipzig, Fues's Verlag, 1890). This is edited by G. M. Dreves, as pt. vii. of his Analecta Hymnica Medii Aevi, and contains 265 Sequences, taken from 16 Troparies of the 10th, 11th, and 12th cent., which formerly belonged to the Abbey of St. Martial at Limoges, and are now in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris.

In Part i. we append a list of first lines of Sequences and Proses contained in the Arbuthnot, Hereford, Sarum and York Missals, and a few important early ms. Service Books, mostly of English, French and German origin. In Part ii. are given the first lines of additional Sequences in later English Service Books, in a few representative French and German diocesan Missals not later than 1490, and in two Monastic Missals. In many cases there are slight variations of the text. We have given the various forms where the varieties of reading affect the alphabetical order.

Part i. In compiling the first list of first lines of Sequences an exhaustive use has been made of the following mss. and printed Service Books:—

(a) The Arbuthnot Missal. This ms. is in the possession of the Arbuthnot family. It was written about the end of the 15th cent. for the use of St. Ternan's Church, Arbuthnot, Kincardineshire, by Sybald, parson of Arbuthnot, who d. in 1507. It is a Sarum Missal with variations, and probably represents the use of the diocese of St. Andrews. The copy used is the ed. printed at Burntisland, 1864.

(b) Reg. 2 B. iv. This is a ms. Gradual in the British Museum, written in England about 1140.

(c) Reg. 8 C. xiii. Also in the British Museum, containing a collection of Sequences written about 1100, apparently in England.

(d) Add. 11669. Also in the British Museum, and is a Gradual written in Germany about 1099.

(e) The Tropary of Ethelred. A ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775) written at Winchester shortly after 980, and during the reign of Ethelred (979–1016). It is described in the Academy for Oct. 23, 1886, p. 280. The Sequences of this ms. have been printed in vol. 2 of the Surtess Society's ed. of the York Missal (see y below); those which are not included in the York Missal being printed in full, and the rest having their titles and first lines given with references to the full text where they occur in the York Missal.

(f) Add. 23935. A beautiful Service Book written in France in the end of the 13th cent., and now in the British Museum.

(g) Add. 19768. A Tropary with a collection of Sequences, &c., written at St. Gall in the 11th cent., and now in the British Museum. The hymns of this ms. are not indexed.

(h) The Hereford Missal. Of this use only one ms. is known. This was written about 1390, belongs to University College, Oxford, but is kept in the Bodleian. The ms. is very imperfect, and consequently the references are made to the ed. printed at Rouen in 1502 (Missale . . . ecclesie Helfordensis). It may be stated however that all the Sequences of the printed ed. which are not contained in the Sarum 1370 and York 1390 mss. noted below are found in this ms. except two ("Gaudete prole," and "Missus est"), and the ms. has the Mass which contains them but without the Sequences. The Hereford Missal was reprinted under the editorship of Dr. W. G. Henderson, at Leeds, 1874.

(i) Harl. 2961. This ms. is of the 11th cent. and is in the British Museum. It is described under Hymnarium, page 546, ii.

(k) Calig. A. xiv. This ms. is in the British Museum, and contains a collection of Sequences written in England about 1199.

(n) The Sens Missal. Of this there is a ms. in the British Museum written in the 14th cent. (Add. 30058), but unfortunately imperfect in various places. The Sequences marked *n*² are found in the Missale Senonense, printed at Paris in 1529 by Nicolas Prevost, of which there is a copy in Durham University Library.

(p) The Paris Missal. Of this there is a ms. in the British Museum written early in the 14th cent. (Add. 16905). The Sequences marked *p*² are found in the Missale . . . ecclesie Parisiensis printed at Paris in 1481 by Joannes de Prato and Desiderius Huyn, those marked *p*³ in the edition printed at Paris in 1501, by Thielman Kerver, and those marked *p*¹ in the edition printed at Paris by Desiderius Maheu, and pub. in 1543. In the 1543 ed. the word Prosa is always used instead of Sequentia. The Proses are given in full in the Masses to which they respectively belong, and not grouped together at the end of the Missal as in some other cases.

(s) The Sarum Missal. The Sarum Missal seems to have been edited in 1085 by St. Osmund, Bishop of Salisbury. The earliest complete copy we have been able to examine is a fine example in the Bodleian (Barlow 5) written about 1370. The use of Sarum became almost a national one. Mr. W. H. James Weale in his Catalogus Missalium, London, 1886, enumerates 53 editions from 1457 to 1557, and in the bibliography of the Burntisland reprint several others are mentioned. Many of those printed abroad were apparently booksellers' speculations, and differ considerably in their contents. The Sequences marked *s*² are found in the Missale . . . ecclesie Sarum printed at London in 1498 for Winkin de Worde. Those marked *s*³ are found in the reprint of the Sarum Missal at Burntisland, 1861 ff, which is made up from a great variety of editions, supplemented by portions taken from the Sarum Gradual and the Sarum Processional. The index to the Burntisland ed. contains references to various compositions which in the text are marked as Graduale, Versiculum, Tractus, Offertorium or Communio; and these have all been omitted from the list below save the "Dolce nomen" (q.v.), there marked as a Tractus, but by Kehrein ranked as a Sequence.

(w) C. C. G. 473. A Tropary with a collection of Sequences, apparently written at Winchester in the 11th cent., and now in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

(z) Douce 222. A Tropary with a collection of Sequences, written about the end of the 11th cent., apparently in France, and now in the Bodleian.

(y) The York Missal. This represents the use of the North of England. The ms. collated was written about 1390, and belongs to University College, Oxford, but is kept in the Bodleian. The Sequences are mostly found collected together near the end of the volume, and a few others are given in the text of the more recent Masses. The Sequences marked y² are included in the reprint of the York Missal (Missale ecclesie Eboracensis) by the Surtees Society, 1874, which is made up from the printed eds. (Rouen c. 1609, and again in 1516, 1517 and 1530; Paris 1533) and other sources.

(z) Arundel 156. This ms., in the British Museum, contains a collection of Sequences apparently written in Germany in the 13th cent. Those marked z² are written in the margins in a hand of the early 14th cent.

A number of other mss. of interest have been collated throughout. References are made to them for all the additional Sequences which they contain, but they are not, as a rule, referred to in the case of Sequences already found in the mss. b, c, d, e, g, w, or x. They are as follows:—

(a*) Liturg. Misc. 341. A Gradual, written about the end of the 12th cent., apparently in Germany, and now in the Bodleian.

(b*) Liturg. Misc. 340. A Gradual, written about 1200, apparently in Germany, and now in the Bodleian.

(c*) Add. 12194. A Gradual, written about 1275, apparently in England, and now in the British Museum.

(d*) Liturg. Misc. 27. A collection of Sequences, apparently written in France in the end of the 14th cent., and now in the Bodleian.

In only a very few instances are the names of the authors of Sequences attached to them in the early mss. It may therefore be of interest to give here a list of authors of Sequences which is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Junius 121, f. 1), and was written apparently about 1300. The ascriptions (which it must be added are indefinite, and apparently oftener wrong than right) are as follows:—

- (1) Robert, King of France. Victimae paschali.
- (2) Hermannus Contractus. Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia, and Ave praeclara.
- (3) Gervasius Cestrensis (i.e. of Chichester, f. 1160). Laus devota mente, and Exultemus in hac die.
- (4) Richard the Monk, Archbishop (Richard, Abp. of Canterbury, 1171–1184). Plausu chorus laetabundo, and Gaude Roma caput.
- (5) Gervasius, archdeacon of Gloucester (in 1148). Stola jucunditatis, and Jubilemus omnes.
- (6) Prior Montac. [Montacute, a Linciac foundation in Somersetshire, dating from shortly after 1100.] Hodierna lux diei, and Misus Gabriel de coelis.
- (7) Adam of St. Victor (see p. 14). Salve mater Salvatoris, and Ave virgo singularis, and Zyma vetus, and Lux jucunda, and Proficientes Trinitatem.
- (8) Robert of Winchester, see note below (? Robert, prior of Winchester in 1173). Potestate non natura, and Dirī patris.
- (9) Fulbert of Chartres (see p. 401). Stirps Jesse, and Ad nutum Domini, and Solem Justitiae.
- (10) Robert of York (d. about 1263). Exultemus in hac die festiva.

It seems not improbable that Robert of York and Robert of Winchester are identical. At least in Archbishop Gray's Registers (printed by the Surtees Society), Robert, canon and sometime precentor of York, who d. about 1263, is always designated Robert of Winchester, and in one case = Archdeacon of Winchester (Surtees ed., p. 232).

In his Histoire de la Poésie Liturgique au Moyen Age. Les Tropes. Paris, 1886, pp. 111–136, M. Leon Gautier describes (with many facsimiles) 40 important mss. containing Sequences, which are now found at Paris, St. Gall, Berlin, Vienna, Munich, and Rome: also the mss. e, g, k, x noted above. In the Verzeichniss der Handschriften der Stiftsbibliothek von St. Gallen, Halle, 1875, the St. Gall mss. are shortly described; and at pp. 509–530 there is an index which professes to include the first lines of all the Sequences, with references to the mss. in which they are contained.

The occasional references by numbers are to the printed Missals in Part ii. of this article.

Part ii. In this second part are given the first lines of Sequences which are not included in the first part of this article. These are principally taken from certain representative French and German diocesan Missals printed not later than 1490; and from two monastic Missals, viz. an Augustinian and a Benedictine. A few more are taken from English service books other than Missals, the editions used being the following:—

Sarum Processional, in a ms. written about the end of the 14th cent., and now in the British Museum (Hart. 2942), compared with the Antwerp ed. of 1523.

Sarum Breviary, in the Paris ed. of 1516 (Byrckman). The Paris ed. of 1531 was reprinted at the Cambridge University Press, 1879-1886.

York Processional, in the Rouen ed. of 1530 (reprinted in vol. 63, 1875, of the Surtees Society's publications).

York Breviary, in the Venice ed. of 1493 (reprinted by the Surtees Society, 1880-83, vols. 71, 75).

Hereford Breviary, in the Rouen ed. of 1505. Of this the Pars Hiemalis is in the Worcester Cathedral Library, and the Pars Aestivalis in the Bodleian.

The Missals collated are the following:—

(1) Angers. The ed. used is the Missale Andegavense, printed at Paris in 1489 by Joannes de Prato.

(2) Augustinian. The ed. used is the Missale canonicorum regularium ordinis Sancti Augustini, secundum ritum insignis ecclesie Sancti Victoris ad muros Parisienses, printed at Paris in 1529 by Nicolas Prevost. In this ed. the word Prosa is always used instead of Sequentia, and the Sequences are printed together at the end of the Missal in the Commune Prosarum. The name of the composer is given in all cases known to the compilers. A large proportion are ascribed to Adam of St. Victor, and two to Henricus Pistor, frater S. Victoris; with one each to St. Bernard (Laetabundus), St. Thomas of Aquino ("Lauda Sion"), Peter Abelard ("Mittit ad virginem"), and Robert, King of France ("Sancti Spiritus . . . Quae"). The rest are anonymous.

(3) Basel. The ed. used is the Missale Basiliense printed at Basel in 1488 by Michael Wenssler.

(4) Benedictine. The ed. used is the Missale . . . ordinis sancti Benedicti reformatorum nigrorum monachorum per Germaniam; printed at Hagenau in 1518 by Thomas Anshelmus. In this ed. the word Sequentia is always used instead of Prosa, and the Sequences are printed together at the end of the volume.

(5) Breslau. Missale Wratislaviense. The ed. used is that printed at Mainz in 1483 by Petrus Schöffler.

(6) Constanz. The ed. used is the Missale secundum chorum Constantiensem printed at Basel in 1485 by Petrus Kollicker.

(7) Freising. The ed. used is the Liber Missalis . . . ecclesie Frisingensis printed at Bamberg in 1487 by Joannes Sensenschmidt.

(8) Magdeburg. The ed. used is the Missale Magdeburgense printed at Lübeck in 1480 by Bartholomäus Gothan and Lucas Brandis.

(9) Trier. The ed. used is the Missale Treverense printed at Basel by Michael Wenssler. Mr. W. H. James Weale, in his Catalogus Missalium, 1886, p. 208, dates this c. 1488. In the British Museum Catalogue it is dated c. 1490.

(10) Würzburg. The ed. used is the Missale Herbipolense printed at Würzburg in 1484 by Georgius Reyser.

(11) Cologne. The ed. used is the Missale Colonense, printed at Basel 1487, without name of printer.

(12) Regensburg. The ed. used is the Liber Missalis . . . ecclesie Ratisponensis, printed at Regensburg in 1485, by Joannes Sensenschmidt and Joannes Bekenhaub.

Many of the Sequences in the English Missals are only to be found in these Missals. Of the remaining Sequences in both of the above lists a considerable proportion have not yet (Feb. 1888) been edited in any way. Mr. W. H. James Weale, in his Analecta Liturgica, is beginning the publication of all known Sequences which are not given, or only given in part, in Kehrein's Lateinische Sequenzen, and hopes in about five years to complete the work.

[F. E. W. and J. M.]

Sergius. [Greek Hymnody, § xii. 2.]

Servant of God, well done! Rest from thy loved employ. J. Montgomery. [Death and Burial of a Minister.] This poem was pub. in Montgomery's Greenland and Other Poems, 1819, p. 191, in 6 st. of 8 l., with the following heading:—

"The Christian Soldier. Occasioned by the sudden death of the Rev. Thomas Taylor; After having declared in his last Sermon, on a preceding evening, that he hoped to die as an old soldier of Jesus Christ, with his sword in his hand."

Mr. Taylor, who was a Methodist preacher, was found dead in his bed on the morning of Oct. 15, 1816. The poem is given as a hymn in the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 366; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 534; and in his Original Hys., 1853, No. 311. In addition to the use of this hymn in its original, and in an abbreviated form, three centos are also in C. U.:—(1) "Soldier of Christ, well done," which begins with l. 5 of the last stanza; (2) "The pains of death are past," beginning with l. i. of the same stanza; and (3) "The voice at midnight came," st. i. l. 5.

[J. J.]

Servant of God, well done! Thy glorious warfare's past. C. Wesley. [Death and Burial of a Minister.] This hymn, in 4 st. of 8 l., was printed at the end of the Funeral Sermon by John Wesley, on the death of G. Whitefield. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. 316.) Whitefield died on Sept. 30, 1770, and J. Wesley preached the Funeral Sermon at the Tabernacle, Tottenham Court Road, and again at Moorfields on Nov. 18, 1770. He also preached on the same subject at Greenwich and at Deptford. His remark in his Journal is, "In every place I wish to show all possible respect to the memory of that great and good man." It must be noted that this hymn is a distinct piece from C. Wesley's Elegy on the Death of the Rev. George Whitefield.

[J. J.]

Servants of God, awake, arise. [Exhortation.] This is an altered form of P. Doddridge's "Awake, ye saints, and raise your eyes," p. 103, ii. It was included in the 1815 Appendix to Cotterill's Sel., No. 219, and is found in a few modern collections, including Windle's Ch. & Home Met. Ps. and Hymnal, and others. In the 1819 ed. of his Sel. Cotterill again altered the text, and gave it as "Servants of God! lift up your heads," p. 214. This form of the text is seldom found in modern hymn-books.

[J. J.]

Servants of God, His praise proclaim. J. Montgomery. [Ps. cxliii.] Holland, in his Memoirs of Montgomery, says that after Montgomery ran away from the Moravian school at Fulneck, he lived from 1788 to June 19, 1789, with one Lockwood, at Mirfield, near Leeds. This person was a Moravian. He kept a small retail shop, and went by the name of the "Fine Bread Baker." Holland says:—

"Of the conduct of Montgomery behind the counter we never heard much; he did not remain there more than a year and a half; he had little to do, and still less inclination for the employment, such as it was. While there he composed the largest part of the poem of Alfred, and amongst his smaller pieces a metrical version of the 113th Psalm, which, many years afterwards, was published, with some verbal alterations, in the collection [Cotterill's Sel., 1819] now in use under the auspices of the Archbishop of York in various churches in his diocese and elsewhere."—Memoirs, i. p. 73.

This version of Ps. 113 is on p. 57 of Cotterill's Sel., 1819, in 5 st. of 4 l. It was republished in Montgomery's Songs of Zion, 1822, and is found in several modern hymn-books. It very frequently begins "Servants of God! in joyful lays." This is the first line of the last stanza, and is substituted for the original opening of the hymn. This is the earliest of Montgomery's hymns to which a date can be given. He was about 17 when it was written.

[J. J.]

Set thine house in order. H. Alford. [Sunday after Christmas.] 1st pub. in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 27, in 4 st. of 8 l., and repeated in the Universal H. Bk., 1885. It is based on the first lesson at Evening Prayer on the 1st S. after Christmas, Isaiah xxxviii. 1.

[J. J.]

Seymour, Aaron Crossley Hobart, s. of John Crossley Seymour, M.A., Vicar of Cahirelly, Diocese of Cashel (and elder brother of the Rev. Michael Hobart Seymour, author of several works on the Roman controversy), was b. in the county of Limerick, Dec. 19, 1789. From an early age he gave much attention to literary pursuits, and at the age of 21 he pub. his Vital Christianity exhibited in a Series of Letters on the most Important Subjects of Religion, addressed to Young Persons, 1810. This work, written during an illness, contains several of his hymns and other poetical pieces. He also edited a new edition of Dr. Gillies's Life of Whitefield, and wrote a "Memoir," which was prefixed to the Reliques of Ancient Irish Poetry, by Miss Charlotte Broolce, 1816. His most important work was his Life and Times of Selina, Countess of Huntingdon, 2 vols., 1839. He resided for some time in Naples (circa 1839-1847), and then at Bristol. He d. Oct., 1870. A few of his hymns are still in C. U., including "Jesus, Immortal King, arise," p. 599, i., and others. For these details we are indebted to Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, pp. 410-12.

[J. J.]

Shall heavenly wisdom cry aloud? [Christ, the Wisdom of God.] This hymn appeared in the Scottish Draft Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, No. 36, in 10 st. of 4 l., and based on Prov. viii., 22, &c. It was composed of I. Watts's "Shall wisdom cry aloud?" (s. m.) from his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 92; and st. ii., iii. of his "Thus saith the wisdom of the Lord" (l. m.) from the same work, Bk. i., No. 94; rewritten in c. m. In the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, No. 13, this arrangement is given with alterations as "Keep silence, all ye sons of men." In the markings of the Trs. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) this form of the text is attributed to him. [J. J.]

Shall we go on to sin? I. Watts. [Rom. vi. 1-6.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1709, Bk. i., No. 106, in 3 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Death to sin by the Cross of Christ." Its use is limited. Orig. text in modern editions of Watts. In the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, it was given as "And shall we then go on to sin?" the alterations being confined to the change of metre. In adopting the hymn for the authorized issue of the Trans. in 1781, No. xlviii. (Rom. vi. 1-7), the first line only of the 1745 alterations was retained, the whole hymn being rewritten in 4 st. of 4 l. This recast has very little indeed of Watts, being to a great extent new. This form, according to the markings of the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), was by Cameron. It is given in several modern collections. [J. J.]

Shall we not love thee, Mother dear. Sir H. W. Baker. [B. V. M.] Written for and first appeared in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and again, after revision, in the revised edition, 1875. [J. J.]

Shelly, Martha Evans, née Jackson, daughter of John Jackson, of Manchester, b. at Stockport, Cheshire, and married in 1846 to J. W. Shelly, of Great Yarmouth. Her hymns appeared in Curwen's Child's Own Hymn Book, 1844-1874, and include:—

1. Father, let Thy benediction. On behalf of Children. Appeared in Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., 1844, and is found in a few modern collections.

2. Lord, a little band and lowly. Children's Prayer. Mrs. Shelly's account of this hymn is:—"At a Sunday School meeting in Manchester, the Rev. John Curwen, one evening, gave a lecture on singing. He sang a very pretty and simple tune, to which he said he had no suitable words, and wished that some one would write a hymn to it. I wrote these verses and gave them to him after the close of the meeting." (Curwen's Biog. Notes, p. 15.) The tune which Mr. Curwen sang was a German one, and was given in his Child's Own Tune Book under the name of Glover. The hymn was pub. in his Child's Own H. Bk., 1844, and has passed into a large number of collections for children.

3. Lord, help us, as we sing. Sincerity. Pub. in The Voice of Praise, 1886. [J. J.]

Shepherd, Anne, née Houlditch, daughter of the Rev. E. H. Houlditch, sometime Rector of Speen, Berkshire, was b. at Cowes, Isle of Wight, Sept. 11, 1809: married to Mr. S. Saville Shepherd in 1843; and d. at Blackheath, Kent, Jan. 7, 1857. Her Hymns adapted to the Comprehension of Young Minds were pub. (3rd ed. 1847 5th ed. 1855), and contained 64 hymns. Of these the following have come into C. U.:—

1. Around the throne of God in heaven. (See p. 82, ii.)
2. Glory to Jesus, glory. Praise.
3. Here's a message of love. Invitation.
4. I have read of the Saviour's love. The Love of Christ.
5. See where the gentle Jesus reigns. Jesus, the Children's Friend.

Of these hymns the first has by far the widest acceptance, and is found in a large number of children's hymn-books. Her religious novels, Ellen Seymour, 1848; and Reality, 1852, attracted some attention: [J. J.]

Shepherd of Israel, bend Thine ear.

P. Doddridge. [During a Ministerial Vacancy.] In the D. MSS. this is No. 63, in 5 st. of 4 l., and is headed, "Of seeking a right way from God, from Ezra viii. 21. At a meeting of ministers at Bedworth, during their long vacancy;" and is dated "April 10, 1735." It was pub. by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 370, in a slightly altered form; and the same text was repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. It is usually given in modern hymn-books in a slightly altered form from that of 1755. In the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, st. ii.-iv. are given as "O Lord, Thy pitying eye surveys." [J. J.]

Shepherd of the ransomed flock. [The Good Shepherd.] In Miss Dorothy A. Thrupp's Thoughts for the Day, 1837, 1st series, p. 8, are the following lines, sometimes given as a hymn in 2 st. of 4 l.:—

"Shepherd of the little flock,
Lead me by the shadowing rock;
Where the richest pasture grows;
Where the living water flows;
By that pure and silent stream,
Sheltered from the scorching beam,
Shepherd, Saviour, Guardian, Guide,
Keep me ever near Thy side."

In the Rev. T. Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1855, lines 1-4 of the above were given with alterations as the opening of the hymn "Shepherd of the ransomed flock," the remaining four stanzas being by Mr. Darling. This form of the hymn was repeated, with the addition of a doxology, in the 1863 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., and again in other collections. In Mr. Darling's Hymns, &c., 1887, it is condensed to 4 st. It is specially adapted to the 2nd S. after Easter. [W. T. B.]

Shepherd of Thine Israel, lead us. J. Conder. [The Good Shepherd.] In Conder's Hys. of Praise, Prayer, and Devout Meditation, 1856, p. 201, this hymn is given in 3 st. of 6 l., together with the following note by the author's son, the Rev. E. R. Conder:—

"It is not quite certain whether the Author designed this Hymn to be included. It originated in an attempt to render a well-known imitation from the Welsh ['Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah,' p. 77, i.], the popularity of which far exceeds its poetical merit, more worthy of the place it has now in our psalmody. But so little is borrowed, beyond the form and leading thought, that the foregoing seems fairly to rank as an original composition.—E. R. C."

This has failed to receive the attention of hymnal compilers. [J. J.]

Shepherd, Thomas, s. of William Shepherd, sometime Vicar of Tilbrook, Bedfordshire, and subsequently a Nonconformist Minister at Oundle, and at Kettering, was b. in 1665. Taking Holy Orders he held for some time preferment in Huntingdonshire, and in Buckinghamshire. Seceding from the Church of England, he became, in 1694, pastor of the Castle Hill Meeting House (Independent), Nottingham, of which Dr. Doddridge was subsequently pastor. In 1700 he removed to Bocking, near Braintree, Essex, where he began his work in a barn. A chapel was erected for his congregation in 1707. He d. Jan. 29, 1739. His publications consisted chiefly of Sermons. His Penitential Cries were a continuance of those by John Mason

(p. 716, ii.), who wrote the first six and the version of Ps. 86, and were pub. with Mason's Songs of Praise in 1693. It must be noted that in D. Sedgwick's reprint of the Songs, and the Penitential Cries, in 1859, Mason's Cries are under the head of Songs, &c., pp. 49-61, and those under Penitential Cries, are all by Shepherd. Some of these Cries are still in C. U., including, "My God, my God, my Light, my Love" (Longing for God); and "When wilt Thou come unto me, Lord" (Communion with God desired). [English Hymnody, Early, § XI.]

Sherwin, William Fisk, an American Baptist, was b. at Buckland, Massachusetts, March 14, 1826. His educational opportunities, so far as schools were concerned, were few, but he made excellent use of his time and surroundings. At fifteen he went to Boston and studied music under Dr. Mason. In due course he became a teacher of vocal music, and held several important appointments in Massachusetts; in Hudson and Albany, New York County, and then in New York City. Taking special interest in Sunday Schools, he composed carols and hymn-tunes largely for their use, and was associated with the Rev. R. Lowry and others in preparing Bright Jewels, and other popular Sunday School hymn and tune books. A few of his melodies are known in Great Britain through I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, where they are given with his signature. His hymn-writing was limited. The following pieces are in C. U.:-

1. Grandder than ocean's story (1871). The Love of God.
2. Hark, hark, the merry Christmas bells. Christmas Carol.
3. Lo, the day of God is breaking. The Spiritual Warfare.
4. Wake the song of joy and gladness. S. School or Temperance Anniversary.
5. Why is thy faith, O Child of God, so small. Safety in Jesus.

Mr. Sherwin d. at Boston, Massachusetts, April 14, 1888. [J. J.]

Shew pity, Lord; O Lord, forgive. I. Watts. [Ps. li.] Pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 141, in three parts:-

1. "Shew pity, Lord; O Lord, forgive." Pt. i.
2. "Lord, I am vile, conceived in sin." Pt. ii.
3. "O Thou that hear'st when sinners cry." Pt. iii.

Each of these parts is in C. U. In addition in the Wes. H. Bl., revised ed., 1875, the first part of No. 574 beginning, "Shew pity, Lord," &c., is a cento from these three parts in 6 st. of 4 l. The second part of the same version (Wes. H. Bl., No. 574), "O Thou that hearest," &c., is Pt. iii. of Watts, as above, with the omission of st. v. This last arrangement was included by J. Wesley in his Ps. & Hys., pub. at Charlestown, America, 1736-37, and was repeated in the 1830 Suppl. to the Wes. H. Bl. In 1722 J. C. Jacobi gave ll. 1-3 of st. i. of Pt. i. by Watts as above, with ll. 2, 3, transposed, as the opening of his tr. of "Erbarm dich mein, O Herre Gott" (p. 506, i.), in his Psalmodia Germanica, p. 59. [J. J.]

Shindler, Mary Stanley Bunce, née Palmer, better known as Mrs. Dana, was b. in Beaufort, South Carolina, Feb. 15, 1810. In 1835 she was married to Charles E. Dana, of New York, and removed with him to Bloomington, now Muscatine, Iowa, in 1838. Mr. Dana d. in 1839, and Mrs. Dana returned to South Carolina. Subsequently she was married to the Rev. Robert D. Shindler, who was Professor in Shelby College, Kentucky, in 1851, and afterwards in Texas. Mrs. Shindler, originally a Presbyterian, was for some time an Unitarian; but of late years she has been a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. As Mary S. B. Dana she pub. the Southern Harp, 1840, and the Northern Harp, 1841. From these works her hymns have been taken, 8 of which are in T. O. Summers's Songs of Zion, 1851. The best known are:-

1. Fiercely came the tempest sweeping. Christ stilling the storm. (1841.)
2. I'm a pilgrim, and I'm a stranger. A Christian Pilgrim. (1841.)
3. O sing to me of heaven. Heaven contemplated. (1840.) Sometimes given as "Come, sing to me of heaven." [F. M. B.]

Shine, mighty God, on Britain shine. I. Watts. [Ps. lxxvii. National Hymn.] Appeared in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 170, in 7 st. of 4 l., with the heading, "The Nation's prosperity, and the Church's increase," and with the following note:-

"Having translated the scene of this Psalm to Great Britain, I have borrow'd a devout and poetical Wish for the Happiness of my native Land from Zech. 2. 5. and offer'd it up in the 2^d Stanza. 'I will be a Wall of Fire round about, and will be the Glory in the Midst of her.'"

This second stanza, which is bracketed as not being a part of the Psalm, is:-

"Amidst our Isle exalted high
Do Thou, our Glory, stand,
And like a Wall of Guardian Fire Surround the Favourite Land."

This version of Ps. 67 is used (1) in its original form; (2) with the omission of st. ii.; (3) as "Shine, mighty God, on this our land"; (4) as "Shine, mighty God, on Zion shine;" and (5) as "Shine on our land, Jehovah shine." [J. J.]

Shipton, Anna. Concerning this writer we can ascertain no details beyond the fact that she pub.:-

- (1) Whispers in the Palms. Hymns and Meditations. Lond. W. Yapp, 1855; second edition, augmented, 1857.
- (2) Precious Gems for the Saviour's Diadem, 1862.
- (3) The Brook in the Way; Original Hymns, 1864.
- (4) Tell Jesus: Recollections of E. Gosse.
- (5) The Cottage on The Rock, an Allegory. Also other smaller books.

Her hymns in C. U. include:-

- i. From her Whispers in the Palms, 1855-57.

1. Down in the pleasant pastures. The Good Shepherd.
2. Father, My cup is full. Gethsemane.
3. How shall I praise Thee, O my God? Praise.
4. Jesus, Master, hear my cry. Blind Bartimaeus.

- ii. From her other Works.

5. Call them in, the poor, the wretched (1862). Home Missions.
6. Praise God, ye gladdening smiles of morn. Ps. cxlvii. [J. J.]

Shirley, Hon. Walter, M.A., fourth s. of the Hon. Laurence Shirley (s. of the 1st Earl Ferrers, and cousin of the Countess of Huntingdon), was b. in 1725. He was a friend of Whitefield and the Wesleys, and often preached in their chapels. He was for sometime Rector of Loughrea, county of Galway. He d. April 7, 1786. A selection of his sermons was published; also two poems in 1761—Liberty, an Ode, and The Judgment. In 1774 he assisted the Countess of Huntingdon in revising the collection of hymns used in her chapels, and therein a few of his productions are found. In the Life of Selina, Countess of Huntingdon, 1839, vol. ii., p. 291, the following note is given on Shirley's hymn-writing:—

"Mr. Shirley was the author of several well-known hymns in Lady Huntingdon's collection, particularly:—
 'From heaven the loud angelic song began.'
 'Hark! in the wilderness a cry.'
 'Flow fast my tears, the cause is great.'
 'Sweet as the shepherd's tuneful reed.'
 'Source of light and power divine.'

"There are also some in other collections; and a few little poems scattered in various periodical publications. The lines on the departure of the Missionaries from Lady Huntingdon's College for America, in 1772, under the direction of Mr. Piercy, have been much admired; they were re-published in the Evangelical Magazine, in 1796, on the departure of the ship Duff, for the South Sea Islands. . . . He likewise assisted Lady Huntingdon in the Selection of hymns now in use in the congregations in her Connexion."

The Missionary hymn here referred to is:—
 "Go, destined vessel, heavenly-freighted, go!"
 His hymns now in C. U. include:—

1. Flow fast, my tears, the cause is great. Good Friday. Pub. in the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll., circa 1773, p. 294, in 3 st. of 8 l. It is in several modern hymn-books; and especially in America, including Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872.

2. From heaven the loud angelic song began. Ascension. Also in the C. of Huntingdon's Coll., circa 1773, p. 312, in 7 st. of 4 l. The hymn, "Worthy the Lamb of boundless sway," in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, and others, is composed of st. ii. and vii.

3. Hark, in the wilderness a cry. St. John Baptist. Also in the C. of Huntingdon's Coll., circa 1773, p. 245, in 7 st. of 4 l.

4. Source of light and power divine. Before Sermon. Also in the C. of Huntingdon's Coll., circa 1773, p. 231, in 4 st. of 6 l. In Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 812, st. i. and iv. are given in an altered form; and the first two lines of the hymn are added as a refrain.

5. Sweet is the shepherd's tuneful reed. Also in the above Coll., circa 1773, p. 126, in 4 st. of 6 l. The hymn, "Peace, troubled soul, whose plaintive moan," in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and others, is composed of st. ii. and iii.

For Shirley's popular recast, "Sweet the moments, rich in blessing," see "While my Jesus I'm possessing." [J. J.]

Shrinking from the cold hand of death. C. Wesley. [Death and Burial.] This cento was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 43, in 3 st. of 4 l. Of these st. i., ii., are No. 102, and st. iii. is No. 244, in vol. i. of his Short Hymns on Select Passages of H. Scripture, 1762 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ix. pp. 33 and 80). This text is repeated in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and is in a large number of collections in most English-speaking countries. The spiritual uses of this hymn have been great. Several instances are given in G. J. Stevenson's Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 56. [J. J.]

Shrubsole, William, eldest s. of William Shrubsole, a master mastmaker in the dockyard at Sheerness, Kent, and a Lay Preacher, was b. at Sheerness, Nov. 21, 1759. In his earlier years he was engaged as a shipwright in the dockyard, and then as a clerk. In 1785 he removed to London, and entered the Bank of England as a clerk. He subsequently became the Secretary to the Committee of the Treasury. He d. at Highbury, Aug. 23, 1829. Mr. Shrubsole was for some time a communicant at St. Anne's, Blackfriars, during the incumbency of the Rev. W. Goode; but during the last twenty years of his life he was a member with the Congregationalists, and attended the Hoxton Academy Chapel. He interested himself in religious societies, and especially the London Missionary Society (of which he became a director and one of the secretaries), the Bible Society, and the Religious Tract Society. He contributed hymns to the Evangelical Magazine, the Christian Magazine, the Theological Miscellany, the Christian Observer and the Youths' Magazine, at various dates, from 1775 to 1813. To these works we have traced nearly twenty of his hymns. A Memoir of Shrubsole was contributed by his daughter to Dr. Morison's Fathers and Founders of the London Missionary Society, 2 vols., Lond., Fisher, Sons & Co., 1844. Seven of his hymns are also given, together with a portrait, in the same work. His hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Arm of the Lord, awake, awake. Put on Thy strength, the nations shake. Missions. This appeared in Missionary Hymns, 1795; and in Morison's Fathers and Founders, &c., 1844, vol. i. p. 451, in 6 st. of 4 l. Dr. Rogers in his Lyra Britannica, 1867, attributes this hymn to Shrubsole's father, and dates it 1780. Against this statement we can only put the fact that it is claimed in Morison for the son. Orig. text, Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 502.

2. Bright is the sun's meridian blaze. Missions. Written Aug. 10, 1795, for the first meeting of the London Missionary Society. It was printed in the Evangelical Magazine, Sept., 1795, headed "On the intended Mission," and signed "Junior." It is also in Morison, 1844, i. p. 449, together with the note that the hymn "was duly acknowledged by Mr. Shrubsole in his lifetime, and the original ms., with numerous corrections, is in possession of his family, in his own autograph," and that it bears date "August 10, 1795." Orig. text Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 504.

3. In all the paths my feet pursue. Looking unto Jesus. Appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, 1794; in Morison, i., 1844, p. 454; and Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 503.

4. Shall science distant lands explore? Missions. Pub. in the Evangelical Magazine, 1795; and again in Morison, 1844, i. p. 452.

5. When streaming from the Eastern skies. Daily Duties; or, Morning. Pub. in the Christian Observer, Aug., 1813, in 8 st. of 8 l., headed "Daily Duties, Dependence and Enjoyment," and signed Produs. Also in Morison, 1844, i. p. 453; and Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 505. The well-known cento, "As every day Thy mercy spares," is from this hymn, and begins with st. iii.

6. Ye saints, your grateful praises bring. Praise. In the Evangelical Magazine, 1794; and Morison, 1844, i. p. 451, in 5 st. of 4 l.

7. Zion awake, Thy strength renew. The Glory of the Church. Appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, 1796; and in Morison, 1844, i. p. 450. It is sometimes given as, "Zion, awake, behold the day."

Of these hymns the most widely used are Nos. 1, 2, 5, and 7. [J. J.]

Sic ter quaternis trahitur. [Lent. Evening.] This is found in a ms. circa 890 in the Bodleian (Junius 25, f. 128); in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii., f. 50 b; Harl. 2961, f. 236 b); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 61, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 18). In the York Breviary of 1493 (where it begins "Jam ter quaternis trahitur") it is appointed for Vespers on the Saturday before the 3rd S. in Lent. The text is also in Daniel i., No. 77. Tr. as:

1. Now twice [thrice] four hours have passed away. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852, p. 344; his Lauda Syon, 1857; and the 1863 Appx. to the Hymn N.

2. With its thrice quaternioned hours. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hymn and Tune Book, 1852-55. [J. M.]

Sidney, Sir Philip (b. 29th Nov., 1554; d. 17th October, 1586) and Mary Sidney, Countess of Pembroke (b. 1550 (?); d. 25th September, 1621). This illustrious pair claim notice in this work from their versification of the Psalms. These are frequently noticed by contemporaries, memorably by Dean Donne (Poems, vol. ii., pp. 313-15 in Fuller Worthies' Library); but they were not printed until 1823, as follows:—

The Psalms of David, Translated into Divers and Sundry Kinds of Verse, More rare and Excellent For the Method and Varietie Than any yet hath been done in English. Begun by The noble and learned gent, Sir PHILIP SIDNEY, Knt., and finished by The Right Honorable The Countess of PEMROKE, his Sister. Now first printed from A Copy of the Original Manuscript, Transcribed by JOHN DAVIES, of Hereford, in the reign of James the First.

This ms of John Davies, the renowned calligraphist, passed from the Bright Sale to Penshurst. Its exquisite penmanship is its chief value. It has many bad readings and gratuitous obscurities. A more accurate text is preserved in the Bodleian (Rawlinson, Poet. 25), written by Dr. Samuel Woodford, having been made from the ms. of a scribe who copied under the superintendence of Sir Philip Sidney himself, who in certain places has written "Leave a space here" for a variant stanza. There are also occasional alterations in Sidney's own autograph. This ms. is the text of the present writer's reproduction in both of his editions of the complete Poems of Sir Philip Sidney in the Fuller Worthies' Library (2 vols.) and in Early English Poets (3 vols.). The critical reader is referred to the "Various Readings" from both the above MSS., and from a third in Trinity College, Cambridge, and two in the British Museum (Add. MSS. 12,048 and 12,047), and many notes and illustrations. It was for long doubted which portions belonged to Sir Philip and which to his sister (e.g. Dr. Macdonald in his Antiphon). But the evidence is multiplied that to Sidney belong only the first forty-three; e.g. Lord Brooke's Letter, which is reprinted in our Essay (as above), names "about forty psalms," and Dr. Woodford, at end of Psalm xliiii., notes, from the autograph-corrected Sidney ms., "Thus far Sir Philip Sidney," and the British Museum ms. (12,048) writes there "Hactenus Sir Philip Sidney;" and so elsewhere. Most will agree that the Countess excels her brother, and that, of its kind, the best poetry is found in her Psalms. John Ruskin, in his Fors Clavigera, has dedicated a whole part to a brilliant eulogy of the Psalms of both. Some of Sir Philip Sidney's Songs and Sonnets deserve introduction into the Church's Praise. Many are melodious and thought-laden, and some seem to set themselves to music. [See Psalms, English, § ix.] [A. B. G.]

Sie ist mir lieb, die werthe Magd. M. Luther. [The Christian Church.] Founded on Rev. xii. 1-6: 1st pub. in Klug's G. B., Wittenberg, 1535, in 3 st. of 12 l.; and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 24, in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 80; and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 246. The trs. are:—

(1) "The worthy maid is dear to me." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 26 (1847, p. 47). (2) "She's dear to me—the worthy maid." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 57. (3) "Dear is to me the Holy Maid." By R. Massie, 1854, p. 27; and thence in Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 63. (4) "To me she's dear, the worthy maid." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Mag., 1867, p. 450; altered in his Exotics, 1876, p. 70. (5) "I love her dearly, precious maid." By E. Massie, 1867, p. 59. [J. M.]

Sieh hier bin ich Ehren König. J. Neander. [Supplication.] This beautiful and searching hymn is traditionally said to have been written in 1677 during enforced absence from his duties. Founded on Ps. lvii. 7 ("God, my heart is ready, to sing and to praise"). 1st pub. in his Glaub- und Liebesübung: auffgemuntert durch einfältige Bundes-Lieder und Danck-Psalmen. Bremen, 1680, p. 139, in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "Encouragement to Praise." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 341. Tr. as:—

1. Behold me here, in grief draw near. By Mrs. Findlater in the 1st Ser., 1854, of the H. L. L., p. 44 (1884, p. 46). This follows the text of Knapp in his Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 2060 (1865, No. 1682), omitting st. iv. St. v. of this version is not by Neander, and had appeared in the Württemberg G. B., 1791, No. 464, thus:—

"Tief in Nöthen Lass mich beten, Kündlich beten, Herr, vor dir!
Ach, erscheine, Wenn ich weine,
Bald mit deiner Hülfe mir!
Lass dich finden! Lass dich finden!
Denn mein Herz verlangt nach dir!"

Included in full in Cantate Domino, Boston, U. S., 1859, and omitting Mrs. Findlater's st. iv. in the Meth. N. Connexion H. Bk., 1863.

2. Here behold me, as I cast me. A very good tr., omitting st. iv., v., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 170; repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 122. Included in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864; Christian H. Book, Cincinnati, 1865; Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, &c. In 1876 it was included in the Scottish Presb. Hymnal, with a tr. of the stanza quoted above made by Miss Winkworth at the request of the committee of publication. This form is repeated in Newman Hall's Christ Church Hyl., 1876. The form in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, beginning "Look upon me, Lord, I pray Thee," consists of st. ii. and iii.

Other trs. are: (1) "King of glory, see before Thee," from Knapp, by R. Massie in the British Herald, May, 1865, p. 68, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. (2) "Now behold me, King of glory," in the German reformed Guardian, June 1865, p. 173, signed "S. T."

Σιγησάτω πάσα σὰρξ βροτεία.
[Holy Communion.] This is the "Prayer of the Cherubic Hymn," from the Liturgy of St. James, as given in Neale and Littledale's Translations of the Primitive Liturgies, 1868-9, but rendered into metre as "Let all mortal flesh keep silence," by G. Moultrie, in the 2nd ed. of the Lyra Eucharistica, 1864, in 4 st. of 3 double lines. In 1867 it was transferred to the People's H., for use "Before Consecration."

Sigourney, Lydia, née Huntley. This distinguished name stood at the head of the female poets of America a generation ago, and is still well remembered. Born in Norwich, Connecticut, in 1791, she conducted a school in the same town from 1809 to 1814, when she removed to Hartford, where she was married to Charles Sigourney in 1819. Most of her subsequent life was spent at Hartford, and she d. there, June 10, 1865. Her first publication was Moral Pieces in Prose and Verse, 1815. This was followed by 58 additional works. A thorough exploration of these, or of such of them as are poetical, would be necessary to trace her hymns with accuracy. They, however, are more numerous than important. Many have been used in the older collections; some are still in use, but few are extensively and none are universally so. The principal hymn-books in which they appeared were the Congregational Village Hys., 1824; Ripley's Sel., 1829; and the Connecticut Ps. & Hys., 1845; the Baptist Additional Hys. by Winchell, 1832; and Linsley and Davis's Select Hys., 1836; and the Universalist's Hys. for Christian Devotion, by Adams & Chapin, 1846. Her best known hymns chronologically arranged are:—

1. When adverse winds and waves arise. In Affliction. A graceful lyric, possibly inspired by Sir R. Grant's "When gathering clouds around I view." It appeared with four others of less importance by Mrs. Sigourney, in Dr. L. Bacon's (p. 105, ii.) Hys. and Sac. Songs for the Monthly Concert, Andover, Sept. 1823. It is widely known.

2. Blest Comforter divine. Whitsuntide. This is one of four hymns by Mrs. Sigourney, which appeared in Nettleton's Village Hymns, 1824, under the signature of "H." It is sometimes altered to "Thou Comforter divine." Her best hymn.

3. We mourn for those who toil. Death and Burial. This poem on "Mistaken Grief" appeared in Cheever's Common Place Book, 1831. It is in a few English collections, including the Leeds H. Bk., 1853.

4. Choose ye His Cross to bear. Holy Baptism. This was given in Ripley's Sel., 1829-31.

5. Saviour, Thy law we love. Holy Baptism. In Winchell's Additional Hys., 1832.

6. Onward, onward, men of heaven. Missions. This missionary hymn appeared in three different books in 1833, including the Christian Lyre Supp., &c. It is in C. U. in Great Britain (Kennedy, 1863, &c.).

7. Labourers of Christ, arise. Home Missions. This was contributed, with nine others, by Mrs. Sigourney, to Linsley & Davis's Select Hymns, 1836. This is one of the most widely used of her hymns.

8. Pastor, thou art from us taken. Burial of a Minister. Sung at the funeral of the Rev. G. F. Davis, d. d., circa 1836.

9. Go to thy rest, my [fair] child. Death of a Child. From a Selection from her poems pub. in London in 1841.

10. Not for the summer hour alone. Holy Matrimony. In the same Selection as No. 9.

11. Where wilt thou put thy trust? Leaning upon God. In the Connecticut Cong. Ps. & Hys., 1845.

12. Lord, may the spirit of this feast. Holy Communion. In the same as No. 11.

13. We praise Thee if one rescued soul. Temperance Anniversary. In Adams and Chapin's Hys. for Christian Devotion, 1846.

In addition to these hymns there are several others in the collections named above. As, however, they are not repeated in modern hymn-books they are omitted from this list. We would add that two hymns, not noted above, "Little raindrops feed the rill" (Power of little things), and "There was a noble ark," are in C. U. in G. Britain; and that a selection of her pieces is given in the Lyra Sac. Amer., Lond., 1868. [F. M. B.]

Silence in the house of prayer. A. T. Gurney. [Easter Eve.] Pub. in his Bk. of Prcise, or Hys. for Divine Worship, 1862, in 6 st. of 4 l. In 1864 it was repeated, unaltered, in Lyra Messianica, and again in the 1869

Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., with the omission of st. ii. [J. J.]

Simpson, Jane Cross, née Bell, dau. of James Bell, Advocate, of Glasgow, was b. Nov. 12, 1811. She contributed several pieces to The Edinburgh Literary Journal, of which her brother, Henry G. Bell, was editor, under the nom de plume of Gertrude; and later to the Scottish Christian Herald. She was married in 1837 to her cousin, Mr. J. B. Simpson, of Glasgow; and d. June 17, 1836. Her publications are:—(1) The Piety of Daily Life, 1836; (2) April Hours, 1838; (3) Woman's History, 1848; (4) Linda, or Beauty and Genius, 1859; (5) Picture Poems, 1879; (6) Linda, and other Poems, 1879. Her hymns in C. U. are:—

1. Go when the morning shineth. Prayer. This appeared in The Edinburgh Literary Journal, Feb. 26, 1831, in 4 st. of 8 l., and again in her April Hours, 1838, in 3 st. The full text from Mrs. Simpson's ms. was given in Lyra Britannica, 1867, p. 507. It is extensively used. It is sometimes erroneously attributed to "Lord Morpeth;" and again to "Lord Carlisle."

2. I had a lesson to teach them. The Death of Children. Contributed to Dr. Rogers's Lyra Britannica, 1867, p. 508, in 9 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in full in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873.

3. Star of morning, brightly shining. For use at Sea. Given in E. Prout's Psalmist, 1878.

4. Star of peace to wanderers weary. For those at Sea. Written in 1830, and given in the Scottish Evang. Union Hyl., 1878. [J. J.]

Simon, Patrick, b. Oct. 2, 1628, at New-Abbey, near Dumfries, studied at the University of Edinburgh, and was ordained Parish Minister of Renfrew in 1653. He was Moderator of the General Assembly in 1695-96, and d. at Renfrew, Oct. 24, 1715. His poetical pieces were pub. as Spiritual Songs; or, Holy Poems. A Garden of true Delight. Edinburgh, A. Anderson, for J. Gibson, Glasgow, 1685-86. These poems are divided into six books. A selection from this work, after revision, was formally sanctioned by the General Assembly of 1708 for use in public worship, but seems never to have been issued. [See Scottish Hymnody, iv. § 3.] The Aberdeen reprint (1757) of the Spiritual Songs contains a second part given as a Supplement, entitled Some Scriptural Hymns, selected from sundry Passages of Holy Writ, 61 of which are from the O. T. and 48 from the N. T. These hymns are by the Rev. John Forbes, who in 1717 was ordained minister of the parish of Pitsligo, Aberdeenshire, became minister of Old Deer in 1718, and d. April 29, 1769. [J. M.]

Sinae sub alto vertice. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [For Evangelists.] Appeared in the Clunian Brev., 1686, p. viii.; in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 198 (ed. 1698, p. 241); and the Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn at Lauds for the Feasts of St. Mark and St. Luke. The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 91; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

From Sinai's trembling peak. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 321, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 183. It is repeated in the 1863 Appendix to the H. Noted, the Hymnary, 1872, &c.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. When from the mount the Law was given. I.

Williams, in the British Mag. Feb., 1837; and his Hys. tr. from the Paristian Brev. 1839.

2. The Law on Sinai's fiery height. J. Chandler. 1837 and 1841.

3. From thundering skies at Sinai's rock. Bp. R. Mant. 1837.

4. Where Sinai towers, while thunder pealed. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

5. 'Mid thundrings loud, from Sinai's rock. J. A. Johnston's English Hym., 1852. [J. J.]

Since Jesus freely did appear. J. Berridge. [Holy Matrimony.] Appeared in the Gospel Magazine for Aug. 1775, p. 380, in 6 st. of 4 l., headed with the text St. John ii. 1, 2, followed by the words "A Wedding Hymn," and signed "Old Everton." It was afterwards included in his Zion's Songs, 1785, as "Our Jesus freely did appear." It is given in modern hymn-books generally in an altered form, with varying number of stanzas. [J. J.]

Since the dear hour that brought me to Thy foot. [Faith in Christ.] The closing lines of W. Cowper's poem, entitled Truth, which was pub. in his Poems, 1782, read as follows:—

"All joy to the believer! He can speak—Trembling yet happy, confident yet meek.
'Since the dear hour that brought me to Thy foot,
And cut off all my follies by the root,
I never trusted in an arm but Thine,
Nor hoped, but in Thy righteousness divine:
My prayers and aims, imperfect and defiled,
Were but the feeble efforts of a child;
How'er perform'd, it was their brightest part,
That they proceeded from a grateful heart;
Cleansed in Thine own all-purifying blood,
Forgive their evil, and accept their good;
I cast them at Thy feet—my only plea
Is what it was, dependence upon Thee,
While struggling in the vale of tears below,
That never fail'd, nor shall it fail me now."
"Angelic gratulations rend the skies,
Pride falls unptied, never more to rise,
Humility is crown'd and Faith receives the prize."

On these lines the Rev. J. G. Pike, Baptist minister at Derby, based a cento in 5 st. of 6 l., the first of which reads:—

"Jesus, if Thou hast brought me to Thy foot,
And cut up all my follies by the root,
Ne'er may I trust in any arm but Thine,
Nor hope but in Thy righteousness divine:
In life, in death, be this my only plea,
That Thou on Calvary didst die for me!"

The italics show the changes made by Mr. Pike in adapting these opening lines for public worship. The remaining lines are similarly treated, and the result is a most pleasing and devotional hymn. It was 1st pub. in a hymn-book compiled by Mr. Pike for the use of his own congregation, about 1830. From that collection it passed into the General Baptists' New H. Bk., pub. in 1851 by Mr. Pike's two sons; and again in the Bapt. Hymnal, 1879.

[W. R. S.]

Sing a new song unto the Lord. J. Montgomery. [Praise to the Father.] Written for the Whitsuntide gathering of the Sheffield Church Sunday Schools in 1843, in 6 st. of 4 l., and dated in the m. mss. "May 6, 1843." It was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 201. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, it begins with st. ii., "God is the Lord; around His throne." [J. J.]

Sing to God in sweetest measures. [St. Mark.] This hymn, No. 170 in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, was adapted by Canon Cooke from R. Campbell's "Come, pure hearts, in sweetest measures" (p. 250, ii.), in

3 st. of 6 l. St. ii. and iii. are almost entirely new. This text, with slight alterations, was repeated in Kennedy, 1863. [J. J.]

Sing to the Lord a joyful song. J. S. B. Monsell. [Morning.] This hymn, based on Ps. cxlv. 1, 2, appeared in his Hys. of Love and Praise, 1863, p. i. in 5 st. of 8 l. It was repeated with slight variations in his Spiritual Songs, 1869, and again in his Parish Hymnal, 1873, No. 13. The text in C. U., as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others, is that of 1863. [J. J.]

Sing to the Lord a new-made song, Great miracles to Him, &c. B. H. Kennedy. [Ps. xxviii.] Appeared in his Psalter, or Ps. of David, &c., 1860, p. 155, in 7 st. of 3 l., and again, with a doxology, in his Hymno. Christ., 1863, in 4 st. of 6 l. [J. J.]

Sing to the Lord a new-made song; Let all in one, &c. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. xevi.] Pub. in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, as the 2nd version of the 96th Ps., in 3 st. of 8 l., and again in other hymn-books. [J. J.]

Sing to the Lord a new-made song, Who wondrous things, &c. Tate & Brady. [Ps. xxviii.] This N. V. (1696) paraphrase of Ps. 98 is not in C. U. The cento given in Spurgeon's O. H. Bk., 1866, as No. 98, is composed of st. i.-iv. from this paraphrase, and st. v., vi., of Bp. Mant's version of the same psalm, 1824. [J. J.]

Sing to the Lord of harvest. J. S. B. Monsell. [Harvest.] Pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hys. of Love and Praise, 1866, in 4 st. of 8 l. and, again, altered to "Sing to the Lord of bounty," in his Parish Hymnal, 1873. Both forms of the text are in C. U. in G. Britain and America. In his Parish Hymnal, Dr. Monsell appointed this hymn for Rogation Days. [J. J.]

Sing to the Lord with joyful voice. I. Watts. [Ps. c.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 256, in 6 st. of 4 l. In this form its use in modern collections is limited; that which has attained to the greatest popularity being—"Before Jehovah's awful throne." This arrangement is by J. Wesley, and was 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., at Charlestown, U.S.A., in 1736-7, p. 5, and repeated in J. & C. Wesley's Ps. & Hys., 1741, p. 74: the Wes. H. Bk., in 1797, as the first of the "Additional Hymns," and the revised ed. of 1875. Modern collections of the Church of England have received it through Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, and others of the last century. It consists of Watts, as follows, with alterations thus: st. i., Watts's st. ii. altered, by J. Wesley, to:—

"Before Jehovah's awful throne Ye nations bow with sacred joy."

St. ii. Watts's st. iii. unaltered. St. iii. Watts's st. v. unaltered. St. iv. Watts's st. vi. altered, by an unknown hand, for the "Additional Hymns," added to the Wes. H. Bk., after Wesley's death, in 1797, thus:—"Firm as a rock Thy truth shall stand." In this last form this hymn is known in all English-speaking countries, and has been translated into many languages. A Latin tr. by R. Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, begins, "Ante Jehovah tremendum." [J. J.]

Sing we the song of those who stand.

J. Montgomery. [Communion of Saints.] Written for the Whitsuntide gathering of the Sheffield Sunday School Union, 1824, and first printed for that occasion. It was included in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 560: and, again, in his Original Hys., 1853, No. 200, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, in both instances, "The Church Militant learning the Church Triumphant's Song." It is in somewhat extensive use. See also, Worthy the Lamb for sinners slain. [J. J.]

Sing, ye faithful, sing with gladness.

J. Ellerton. [Christmas.] 1st pub. in the Rev. R. Brown-Borthwick's Sixteen Hys. for Church and Home, 1870, in 8 st. of 6 l., with the refrain, "Evermore and evermore." It is repeated, unaltered, in the Brown-Borthwick Select Hys. for Church and Home, 1871. This form of the hymn is the authorized text. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, it was given, with slight alterations, and the omission of st. ii.-iv., and the refrain. This hymn is partly an imitation of Prudentius's "Da puer plectrum" (p. 276, i.) [J. J.]

Singen wir aus Herzensgrund. [Grace after Meat.] Wackernagel, i., p. 776, cites this as No. 6 of Schöner geistlicher Lieder achte, printed at Erfurt, 1563; but at iv., p. 579, he prints the text from the Hundert Christliche Haussgesang, Nürnberg, 1569: and from J. Eichorn's Geistliche Lieder, Frankfurt a. O., 1569, in 6 st. of 7 l. The broadsheet, Nürnberg, eds., which, in his Bibliographie, 1855, pp. 279, 308, he had dated 1556 and 1560, he afterwards said were of later date. Mützell, No. 559, prints it from a 1568 ed. of Eichorn's G. B. It is found in Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 681. It has sometimes been erroneously ascribed to E. Alber, to B. Ringwaldt, or to N. Selnecker. Tr. as:—

(1) "Now give thanks ye old and young." By J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 62 (1732, p. 181). Included in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 316; but only partly repeated in later eds., e.g. 1886, No. 1197, where only the st. beginning, "Praise our God, it is but just," is from this hymn. [J. M.]

Singer, Elizabeth. [Psalters, English, p. 925, i.]

Singleton, Robert Corbet, M.A., was b. Oct. 9, 1810, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin; B.A. 1830; M.A. 1833. He was for some time Warden of St. Columba College, near Dublin; and subsequently First Warden of St. Peter's College, Radley, from 1847 to 1851. In 1851 he retired to Monkstown, near Dublin; and then to York, where he d. in 1881. In 1868 he pub. in conjunction with Dr. E. G. Monk, the Anglican Hymn Book (2nd ed. 1871). To that collection he contributed a large number of trs. from the Latin, a few from the German, and the following original hymns:—

1. As James the Great, with glowing zeal. St. James.
2. Beneath the fig-tree's grateful shade. St. Bartholomew.
3. From out the deep, O Lord, on Thee. For those at sea.
4. Good Lord! who hast the weighty woes. Sexagesima.
5. Hail! highly favoured, blessed Maid. Annunciation.
6. How blest the union, gracious Lord. SS. Simon and Jude. In 1871 it reads, "How blest the unity, good Lord."

7. In weakness great, and strong in hidden might. St. Peter.
8. Jesu, Child of mortal throes. A Litany.
9. Lord, ever shew Thy blessed face. Evening.
10. Lord, give us of that fervent love. St. Thomas.
11. Lord, see how swelling crowds arise. Ps. iii.
12. Lo, sea and land their gifts outpour. St. Matthew.
13. O all ye people, clap your hands. Ps. xvii.
14. O is it nought to you who tread? Tuesday before Easter.
15. O Lord, how excellent Thy name. Ps. viii.
16. The Cross upraised on Calvary's height. Good Friday.
17. The Father shew us, gracious Lord. SS. Philip and James.
18. The Lord hath quelled the rebel powers. Easter.
19. The Lord, He gave the word. Septuagesima.
20. The morning light hath shed its beams. Morning.
21. Thy dear disciple on the sea. St. John the Evangelist.
22. When fairest Eve in Eden rose. Holy Matrimony.
23. Who comes from Edom, with His robes. Monday before Easter.
24. Why storm the heathen? Wherefore do they ring? Ps. ii.
25. Why, weary mourner, shed the ceaseless tear? Resignation.
26. With gladsome feet we press. Processional.
27. Within a chamber, calm and still. St. Matthias.
28. With me is Luke, alone of all. St. Luke.

These hymns were all contributed to the 1st ed. of the Anglican H. Bk., 1868, and very few of them are found elsewhere. [J. J.]

Sinner, O why so thoughtless grown.

I. Watts and J. Rippon. [Expostulation.] In I. Watts's, Horæ Lyricæ, 1706, Bk. ii., there is a poem, "To the Right Honourable John Cuts, at the Siege of Namur:" and entitled, "The Hardy Soldier." It begins, "O why is man so thoughtless grown," and extends to 6 st. of 4 l. Dr. Rippon, in his Sel., 1787, No. 581, gave st. i., iv., v., in a very much altered form, and succeeded in producing a hymn which has been somewhat popular, as follows:—

I. Watts, 1706.

"O why is man so thoughtless grown!
Why, guilty souls, in haste to die?
Vent'ring the leap t' worlds unknown,
Heedless to arms and blood they fly.

"But frenzy dares eternal fate,
And spurr'd with honour's airy dreams,
Flies to attack th' infernal gate,
And force a passage to the flames.

"Thus hovering o'er Namur's plains,
Sung heav'nly love in Gabriel's form:
Young Thraso left the morning strains,
And vow'd to pray before the storm."

J. Rippon, 1787.

"Sinner, O why so thoughtless grown?
Why in such dreadful haste to die?
Daring to leap to worlds unknown,
Heedless against thy God to fly?

"Will thou despise eternal fate,
Urg'd on by sin's fantastic dreams?
Madly attempt th' infernal gate,
And force thy passage to the flames?"

"Stay, sinner! on the gospel plains
Behold the God of love unfold
The glories of His dying pains,
For ever telling, yet untold."

Dr. Rippon's form of the text was repeated in some of the older collections, and is still found in a few modern hymn-books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Sinners, obey the gospel word.

C. Wesley. [Invitation.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. i., No. 155, in 10 st. of 4 l., and based upon St. Luke xiv. 17. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 63.) In his note on this hymn, Mr. G. J. Stevenson says:—

"In John Wesley's 'Plain Account of Christian Perfection,' the author makes the following statement: 'In the year 1749, my brother printed two volumes of Hymns and Sacred Poems. As I did not see them before they were published, there were some things in them which I did not approve of. But I quite approved of the main of the hymns on this head—Present Salvation and Perfect Love This hymn is the first extracted [for the Wes. H. Bk., 1780] from those volumes. The work was published by subscription in order to raise money for the author's marriage, and to enable him to commence housekeeping. He had the names of 1145 subscribers, at twelve shillings each; the preachers acted as agents to collect the money and distribute the books."—Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 20.

In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, the text of this hymn was given in full, and without alteration, as No. 9. It was repeated in later editions, and also passed, in the same form, into several collections in G. Britain and America. In addition the following abbreviations and centos are in C. U. :—

1. Sinners, obey the gospel word. This abbreviation in 5 st. (st. i.-iv., vi.) was given in G. Whitefield's Hys. for Social Worship, 1753, No. 6; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760; Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and others, to modern books.

2. Come, now, ye wanderers, to your God. This begins with st. vi. with alterations, and is given in several American collections, including the Plymouth Coll., 1855, and others.

3. Come, O ye sinners, to the Lord. This also begins with st. vi., altered, and is in several American collections.

4. Come, weary souls, in Christ your Lord. This, in Bp. Bickersteth's H. Comp., is composed of st. iv., vi., ix., x., slightly altered.

5. O come, ye sinners, to the Lord. In the American Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, No. 433, is composed of st. vi.-x., slightly altered.

6. Ye sinners, hear the gospel word. This, in Kennedy, 1863, is from the former part of the hymn, with st. iii. ll. 5-8, added by Dr. Kennedy. This cento is adapted for Holy Communion.

This hymn has a wide acceptance (in its full form, and in these its several parts) both in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Sinners, the call obey, The latest call of grace. C. Wesley. [In Time of National Danger.] This hymn was written under the same circumstances as "Sovereign of all, Whose will ordains" (p. 1069, ii.), and was pub. in the same tract, Hymns for Times of Trouble and Persecution, 1st ed., 1744, in 8 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 12). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, st. v.-vii. from this hymn, and st. v., vi. from C. Wesley's "Tremendous Lord of earth and sky," pub. in Hys. Occasioned by the Earthquake, March 8, 1750: Lond., 1750, were given as No. 441, as a hymn "For England," beginning, "Terrible God and true." In the 2nd ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1781, this cento was replaced by st. i., ii., vi.-viii., as "Sinners, the call obey," and this was retained until the revised ed. of 1875, when it was replaced by "Jesus, the word bestow" (Home Missions), which had been previously pub. from the Wesley MSS. in the 1830 Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk., No. 706 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xiii., p. 22). [J. J.]

Sinners, turn; why will ye die? C. Wesley. [Expostulation.] Appeared in Hys. on God's Everlasting Love, 1741, in 16 st. of 8 l., and based upon Ezekiel xviii. 31. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 84). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, 12 st. were given as three separate hymns:—

1. Sinners, turn; why will ye die? No. 6.
2. Let the beasts their breath resign. No. 7.
3. What could your Redeemer do. No. 8.

And these have been repeated in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. In the American Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1849, there is also a cento, "Sinners, turn while God is near," beginning with st. xv. [J. J.]

Skinner, James, M.A., son of the Very Rev. John Skinner, Dean of Dunkeld and Dunblane, and grandson of Bishop Skinner of Aberdeen, was b. June 23, 1818, and educated at the University of Durham, B.A. 1837, M.A. 1840, and subsequently a Fellow of his University. Taking holy orders in 1841, he became a Chaplain to Her Majesty's forces in 1844. He was subsequently Curate of St. Barnabas, Pimlico, Vicar of Newland, and Warden of the Beauchamp Charity. Through ill-health he retired from parochial work in 1877, and d. in Dec. 1881. His pub. works include (1) A Guide to Advent; (2) A Guide to Lent; (3) Warnings and Consolations; (4) An Office of Spiritual Communion; and (5) Cælestia. This last is a versified tr. of the so-called Manual of St. Augustine in 36 odes. Mr. Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, was pub. in 1863. In this collection he contributed several trs. from the Latin, and two or three original hymns, including "The Seven Canonical Hours of the Passion," adapted from other sources:—

Matins. Jesu, Lord, at dead of night.

Prime. Jesu, Lord, at hour of Prime.

Tierce. Jesu, Lord, for sins of mine.

Sext. Jesu, Lord, Who three long hours.

Nones. Jesu, Lord, with bleeding brow.

Vespers. Jesu, at the Vesper hour.

Compline. Jesu, Whose pure limbs for me.

These hymns were subsequently transferred to the Appz. of the Hymnal N. Usually Skinner's trs. are not found beyond the Daily Service Hymnal. [J. J.]

Slain for my soul, for all my sins defamed. H. Kynaston. [Good Friday.] Pub. in his Occasional Hymns, 2nd Series. Pt. ii. Chiefly on the Miracles: 1866, p. 11, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Lord, remember me." In 1872 it was repeated in the Hymnary, with the omission of St. iv. The same text is in the American Church Praise Bk., 1882. [J. J.]

Slatter, James, was b. at Oxford in 1790, and spent his life in that city. He was a layman, in business, and a member of the Baptist church in the New Road. He d. May 22, 1862. Mr. Slatter wrote a book entitled "Rural Pictures," which however was only circulated privately. He also wrote many hymns, which were never published, and two, which appeared in the Bap. New Selection, 1828: (1) "Great God, to thee, a lowly band" (Sunday Scholars' Hymn). (2) "Through Nature's temple, large and wide" (Divine Worship). [W. R. S.]

Slavery and death the cup contains. L. M. Sargent. [Temperance.] Mr. Nutter says in his Hymn Studies, &c., N. Y., 1884, p. 347, "This hymn was written during the Washingtonian Temperance Revival." It appeared in Adams and Chapin's Unitarian Hys. for Christian Devotion, Boston, U.S.A., 1846, No. 793, in 4 st. of 4 l. In the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878, it begins "Bondage and death the cup contains." The author, Lucius Manlius Sargent (b. 1788, d. 1867) was an earnest advocate of Temperance, and the author of Temperance Tales, and other works. [J. J.]

Slinn, Sarah. In the Gospel Magazine for July 1779 a hymn in 9 st. of 4 l. was given beginning "God with us! O glorious Name;" headed "Emanuel; or, God with us. By a Lady," and signed "S. S—N." In Rippou's Bap. Sel. 1787, st. i. ii. vi. iii. iv. with alterations, and in the order named, were given as No. 174, but without signature. In J. Dobell's New Sel., 1806, the same text is repeated as from Wood's Col. The same text was again repeated to modern hymn-books, and is that now in C. U. From D. Sedgwick's mss. we find the signature "S. S—N." was filled in as Sarah Slinn by him, but his papers do not furnish any authority for the name, nor for the date of 1777 which he has attached thereto in his ms. note to Dobell's New Sel. [J. J.]

Sloan, John Morrison, M.A., eldest s. of John Sloan, farmer of Stairaid, near Mauchline, Ayrshire was b. at Stairaid, May 19, 1835. He studied at the Universities of Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Erlangen, and graduated M.A. at Edinburgh in 1859. In 1864 he became collegiate minister of the Free Church, Dalkeith; in 1868 minister of the South Free Church, Aberdeen; in 1878 collegiate minister of Anderston Free Church, Glasgow; and is now (1890) minister of the Grange Free Church, Edinburgh. He contributed 8 trs. from the German to the Rev. J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865, 2 of which have since appeared in Mr. Wilson's Songs of Zion, 1877, and 1 in the Free Church H. Bk., 1882. The best known of these is his tr. of "Wie herrlich strahl't der Morgenstern" (see p. 1010, i.). He also contributed a hymn beginning "O Shepherd, good and gracious" (The Good Shepherd) in 4 st. of 8 lines, as No. 126 to Wayside Songs for Young Travellers Zionward (Paisley: n.d. 1881) a hymnal compiled by the Rev. Dr. J. J. Black of Inverness primarily for his own Sunday School. [J. M.]

Smith, Caroline Louisa, née Sprague, was b. at Salem, Massachusetts, and married to the Rev. Charles Smith, pastor of the South Congregational Church, Andover. Mrs. Smith is the author of:—

Tarry with me, O my Saviour. An Old Man's Prayer. Mrs. Smith's account of this hymn is "About the year 1853 (in the summer of 1852), I heard the Rev. Dr. H. M. Dexter preach a sermon on 'The Adaptedness of Religion to the Wants of the Aged.' I went home and embodied the thought in the hymn 'Tarry with me, O my Saviour!' I sent it to Mr. Hallock, for The Messenger. He returned it as 'not adapted to the readers of the paper.' Years after I sent it, without any signature, to the little Andover paper. . . . I send it to you in its original form, in a little paper of which my sister, Mrs. Terry (Rochester, N.Y.), is editor." (Hatfield's Poets of the Church, N.Y., 1884, p. 564.) Hatfield gives the full text in 7 st. of 6 l. In the Plymouth Coll., 1855, No. 1337, in 5 st. of 4 l., was compiled from st. i., ii., vi., vii. This was repeated in The Sabbath H. Bk., 1853, and others. Of this text st. ii. is sometimes omitted. [J. J.]

Smith, Charitie Lees. [Bancroft, C. L.]

Smith, Elizabeth Lee, née Allen, daughter of Dr. W. Allen, President of Dartmouth University (p. 50, i.), was b. in 1817, and married in 1843 to Dr. H. B. Smith, who became Professor in Union Theological Seminary, N. York, in 1850, and d. in 1877. Mrs. Smith's hymns, including trs. of "Je Te salue" (p. 579, i.), "O Jesus Christus" (p. 666, ii.), are in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870. [F. M. B.]

Smith, George, D.D., Secretary of the Congregational Union, began his ministry at Liverpool in 1827, and passed on first to Plymouth, and then to Trinity Chapel, Poplar, London (1842). He is the author of The Domestic Prayer Book, 1848; Sermons, 1851; Life Spiritual, 1855; Lectures on the Pentateuch, 1863, &c. He also compiled during his residence at Plymouth a Supplement to Watts's Ps. & Hys., to which he contributed:—

1. Come in, ye chosen of the Lord. Admission of Church Members.

2. Thou art, O Christ, the Way. Christ the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

which were included in the New Cong. 1859 (Miller's S. and S. of the Church, 1869, p. 552). [J. J.]

Smith, Isaac Gregory, M.A., s. of Rev. Jeremiah Smith, D.D., was b. at Manchester, Nov. 21, 1826, and educated at Rugby and Trinity, Oxford, where he held both the Hertford (1846), and Ireland (1847) scholarships, B.A. 2nd cl. Lit. Hum. 1849. Taking holy orders, he was preferred to the rectory of Tedstone-de-la-Mere, Hertfordshire, 1854; and the Vicarage of Great Malvern, 1872. From 1852 to 1855 he held a fellowship at Brasenose, Oxford, and was also Bampton Lecturer in 1873, his subject being The Characteristics of Christian Morality. In 1870 he became Prebendary of Pratum Minus in Hereford Cathedral, in 1882 Rural Dean of Powick, and examining Chaplain to the Bp. of St. David's, and in 1887 Hon. Canon of Worcester. Prebendary Smith has pub., in addition to his Bampton Lectures, an Epitome of the Life of Our Blessed Saviour, &c., Fra Angelico and other Poems, and other works. He has also contributed hymns to the collection of which he was co-editor, and to the Rev. O. Shipley's Lyras. In preparing A Hymn Book for the Services of the Church, and for Private Reading, Lond., Parker, 1855, 2nd ed., 1857, he was assisted by his brother John George Smith, Barrister-at-Law, and the Rev. W. S. Raymond. To this collection Canon Smith contributed:

1. By Jesu's grave on either hand. Easter Eve.

2. The tide of years [time] is rolling on. The Circumcision and the New Year.

and a tr. of "Adeste Fideles" (p. 22, i. 17). In addition to these the following are in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1884:—

3. Adown the river, year by year. Second Advent Desired.

4. Comes at times a stillness as of even. Death Anticipated. Written for the unveiling of the Albert Memorial in Edinburgh, and set to music by Sir H. S. Oakeley.

5. The day-beam dies behind yon cloud. Winter Evening.

There is also in Pt. ii. "For Reading," in the Hymn Book of 1855, a sweet hymn on Heaven beginning "Come away, where are no shadows in a glass." [J. J.]

Smith, Sir James Edward, b. at Norwich Dec. 2, 1759; d. March 17, 1828. A distinguished botanist, and President of the Linnaean Society from its foundation in 1788 to the time of his death. He was knighted when the Prince Regent became, in 1814, a Patron of the Society. Smith studied medicine at Edinburgh, and, in 1786, graduated as a physician at Leyden. After further travels abroad he finally settled down at Norwich in 1797. He pub. English Botany in 36 vols. (beginning in 1790) and various other botanical works. He was also a large contributor to Rees's Encyclopaedia. The friend of Dr. Enfield and John Taylor, he was also a member of the congregation meeting in the Octagon Chapel, Norwich, and a subscriber to the British and Foreign Unitarian Association. He contributed 3 hymns to A Selection of Hys. for Public Worship, Norwich, 1814 (printed for the Octagon Chapel); and 6 others to the Suppl. added to the 2nd ed., 1826. Of these the following are in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840; his Hymns, &c., 1873, and other Unitarian collections:—

1. Adore, my soul, that awful Name (1814). Dependence upon God.
2. As twilight's gradual veil is spread (1814). Nature and Immortality.
3. Holy, wise, eternal Father (1826). The Mansions of the Blessed.
4. How glorious are those orbs of light (1826). Nature and Immortality.
5. Praise waits in Zion, Lord, for Thee (1826). Public Worship.
6. When power divine in mortal form (1826). Confidence in God.
7. Who shall a temple build for Him (1826). God's Temple in the Heart. [V. D. D.]

Smith, Joseph Denham, was b. at Romsey, Hants, circa 1816. After studying for some time in the Dublin Theological Institute, he entered the Congregational Ministry in 1840. In 1849 he became Pastor of the Congregational Church at Kingstown, near Dublin, and in 1863 began a series of services at Merrion Hall, Dublin, and subsequently at other places. His Evangelistic work in England and Ireland is well known. In connection therewith he has published a large number of tracts, pamphlets, and small books. One of these, Times of Refreshing illustrated in the Present Revival of Religion, 1860, included several of his hymns which were sung during that time at his special services at Kingstown. He also pub. Seven Hymns for the Present Time, circa 1870-6; and The New Times of Refreshing. Hys. for General and Special Use. Compiled by J. Denham Smith. Lond.: J. E. Hawkins, N.D. In this collection his signed hymns are 36 in all, and deal with the subjects usually associated with what are known as "Gospel Hymns." There are several also in The Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873. His hymn "Just as Thou art—how wondrous fair" (1860) is in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and "Yes, we part, but not for ever" (Parting), in several minor collections. Mr. Smith's hymns have not been incorporated into the leading hymnals of G. Britain or America. [J. J.]

Smith, Samuel Francis, D.D., was b. in Boston, U.S.A., Oct. 21, 1808, and graduated in arts at Harvard, and in theology at Andover. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1832, and became the same year editor of the Baptist Missionary Magazine. He also contributed to the Encyclopædia Americana. From 1834 to 1842 he was pastor at Waterville, Maine, and Professor of Modern Languages in Waterville College. In 1842 he removed to Newton, Massachusetts, where he remained until 1854, when he became the editor of the publications of the Baptist Missionary Union. With Baron Stow he prepared the Baptist collection known as The Psalmist, pub. in 1843, to which he contributed several hymns. The Psalmist is the most creditable and influential of the American Baptist collections to the present day. Dr. Smith also pub. Lyric Gems, 1854, Rock of Ages, 1870, &c. A large number of his hymns are in use in America, and several have passed into some of the English collections. Taking his hymns in C. U. in alphabetical order, we have the following:—

1. And now the solemn deed is done. Ordination. Given in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 954. In Dr. Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, it is altered to "The solemn service now is done."
2. As flows the rapid river. Life Passing Away. In Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 33; the Hys. for the Vestry and Fireside, Boston, 1841; and The Psalmist, 1843, No. 1059. Found in a few English hymn-books, and in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
3. Auspicious morning, hail. American National Anniversary. Written for July 4th, 1841, and pub. in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 1007.
4. Beyond where Cedron's waters flow. Gethsemane. In L. Bacon's Appendix, 1833; the Psalmist, 1843, No. 220, and later collections.
5. Blest is the hour when cares depart. Divine Worship. In The Psalmist, 1843, No. 947, and others.
6. Constrained by love we follow where. Holy Baptism. Appeared in the Baptist ed. of the Plymouth H. Bk., 1857.
7. Down to the sacred wave. Holy Baptism. Contributed to Winchell's Additional Hys. added to his Coll. of 1817, in 1832, No. 510; repeated in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 818, and in several collections. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
8. Hail! ye days of solemn meeting. Public Worship. An altered form of No. 26 below, in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, as an "American Hymn, 1840."
9. How blest the hour when first we gave. Holy Baptism. Appeared in the Baptist ed. of the Plymouth H. Bk., 1857, No. 1468.
10. How calmly wakes the hallowed morn. Holy Baptism. Given in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 810, in later collections, and in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
11. Jesus, Thou hast freely saved us. Salvation. In Winchell's Additional Hys., 1832, No. 503, and others.
12. Meekly in Jordan's Holy Stream. Holy Baptism. Contributed to The Psalmist, 1843, No. 808.
13. My country, 'tis of thee. National Hymn. "Written in 1832, and first sung at a children's Fourth of July celebration in Park Street church, Boston." Included in the Psalmist, 1843, No. 1000, and found in a large number of American hymn-books, but not in use in G. Britain. It is one of the most popular of Dr. Smith's compositions. Text, with note in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
14. O not my own these verdant hills. Bought with a Price. Appeared in Nason's Cong. H. Bk., 1857, and given in Laudes Domini, 1884.
15. Onward speed thy conquering flight. Missions. Appeared in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 892, and is found in several modern collections in G. Britain and America. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
16. Planted in Christ, the living Vine. Christian Fellowship; or, For Unity. Given in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 929, in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and several hymn-books. Of the hymns contributed by Dr. Smith to The Psalmist this is the best, and one of the most popular.
17. Remember thy Creator. Youthful Piety Enforced. In Christian Psalmody, 1832, No. 32; the Hys. for the Vestry and Fireside, 1841; The Psalmist, 1843, No. 778; Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and other collections.
18. Sister, thou wast mild and lovely. Death and Burial. Written on the death of Miss J. M. C., of Mount Vernon School, Boston, July 13, 1833, and pub. in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 1096.
19. Softly fades the twilight ray. Sunday Evening. Written in 1832, and included in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 56. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, and several hymn-books.
20. Spirit of holiness, descend. Whitsuntide. Appeared in the Hys. for the Vestry and Fireside, 1841,

No. 295, and again in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 384. In the Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853. St. ii., iii., iv. were given as "Spirit of God, Thy churches wait." This form of the text and the original are both in modern hymn-books.

21. Spirit of peace and holiness. Institution of a Minister. Appeared in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 953, and Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872.

22. The morning light is breaking. Missions. Written in 1832, and included in Hastings's Spiritual Songs, 1832-33, No. 253; and The Psalmist, 1843, No. 912. This hymn is very popular and has been translated into several languages. Dr. Smith says of it that "it has been a great favourite at missionary gatherings, and I have myself heard it sung in five or six different languages in Europe and Asia. It is a favourite with the Burmans, Karens, and Telegus in Asia, from whose lips I have heard it repeatedly." (Duffield's English Hys., 1886, p. 534.) Full text in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.

23. The Prince of Salvation in triumph is riding. Missions. Given in Hastings and Mason's Spiritual Songs, 1832-33, No. 274; The Psalmist, 1843, and later collections.

24. 'Tis done, the [important] solemn act is done. Ordination. Appeared in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 951, and later hymn-books.

25. To-day the Saviour calls. Invitation. First sketch by Dr. Smith, the revised text, as in Hastings and Mason's Spiritual Songs, No. 176, and The Psalmist, No. 453, by Dr. T. Hastings (p. 495, i. 19).

26. Welcome, days of solemn meeting. Special Devotional Services. Written in 1834, and given in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872. See No. 8.

27. When shall we meet again? Parting. This is a cento. The first stanza is from Alaric A. Watts's Poetical Sketches, &c., 1822, p. 158; and st. ii.-iv. are by Dr. Smith. In this form it was pub. in L. Bacon's Supplement to Dwight, 1833, No. 489. It is in several American hymn-books; and also the English Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, &c.

28. When the harvest is past and the summer is gone. Close of Worship. Contributed to Hastings and Mason's Spiritual Songs, 1831, No. 244; and repeated in the Fuller and Jeter Supplement to The Psalmist, 1847, No. 22, and later collections.

29. When thy mortal life is fled. The Judgment. Contributed to Winchell's Additional Hys., 1832, No. 379, and repeated in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 455, and later hymn-books. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.

30. While in this sacred rite of Thine. Holy Baptism. Appeared in The Psalmist, 1843, No. 803; Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, &c.

31. With willing hearts we tread. Holy Baptism. In The Psalmist, 1843, No. 798; and again in the Bapt. Praise Bk., 1871.

32. Yes, my native land, I love thee. A Missionary's Farewell. Contributed to Winchell's Additional Hys., 1832, No. 445, and found in later collections. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868. [F. M. B.]

Smith, Samuel J., b. in the autumn of 1771, and d. Nov. 14, 1835. He was a wealthy Quaker, resided at Burlington, New Jersey; but followed no profession. His Miscellaneous Writings with a short Memoir, were pub. posthumously in 1836. He is known to hymnology through his hymn—

Arise, my soul, with rapture rise. Morning. The earliest date to which we have traced this hymn is Priscilla Gurney's Hymns, Lond., 1818. It was included in the American Prayer Book Collection, 1826, No. 165, and thence has passed into several collections. It is also in the Misc. Writings, 1836; but there are slight differences in the text. It is included, together with a second piece, on Christ stilling the Tempest, "When on His mission from His throne in heaven," in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868. [F. M. B.]

Smith, Walter Chalmers, D.D., was b. at Aberdeen Dec. 5, 1824, and educated at the Grammar School and University of that City. He pursued his Theological studies at Edinburgh, and was ordained Pastor of the Scottish Church in Chadwell Street, Islington, London, Dec. 25, 1850. After holding several pastorates he became, in 1876, Minister of the Free High Church, Edinburgh. His contributions to poetical literature have been many and of great merit. His principal works are:—

(1) The Bishop's Walk, 1860; (2) Obrig Grange, 1872; (3) Boyland Hall, 1874; (4) Hilda among the Broken Gods, 1878; (5) North Country Folk, 1883; (6) Kildrostan, 1884; (7) Hymns of Christ and Christian Life, 1876.

From his Hys. of Christ, &c., 1876, the following, after revision, were included in Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884:—

1. Immortal, Invisible, God only wise. God, All in All.

2. Lord, God, Omnipotent. Omnipotence.

3. Our portion is not here. Treasure in Heaven.

4. There is no wrath to be appeased. God is Love.

In Horder's Cong. Hymns a new opening stanza was added to this hymn by Dr. Smith at the request of the editor, and in that collection the hymn begins "I vexed me with a troubled thought."

Dr. Smith's hymns are rich in thought and vigorous in expression. They deserve and probably will receive greater notice than hitherto at the hands of hymnal compilers. [W. G. H.]

Smith, Wharton Buchanan, M.A., was b. March 15, 1848, and educated at King's College, London (where he was McCaul and Trench prizeman in 1870), and Trinity College, Dublin, B.A., 1878; M.A. 1883. Taking Holy Orders in 1871 he was from 1871-73 Curate of St. Mark's, Surbiton; and from 1873-83 of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, London. In 1883 he became Chaplain to the Bishop of Gr. hams-town. He is the author of two hymns in Thing's Coll., 1882: "My God, I praise Thee for the light returning" (Morning), which appeared in the Parish Magazine of St. Peter's, Eaton Square; and "Raised between the earth and heaven" (Dedication of Church Bells). [J. J.]

Smyttan, George Hunt, B.A., s. of Dr. Smyttan, of the Bombay Medical Board, was b. circa 1825, and educated at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, B.A. 1845. He took holy orders in 1848, and in 1850 was preferred to the Rectory of Hawksworth, Notts, where he d. in 1870. He pub. Thoughts in Verse for the Afflicted, 1849; Mission Songs and Ballads, 1860; and Florum Sacra, N. D. He was the author of the well-known hymn, "Forty days, and forty nights" (p. 384, i.), and of a second which is found in several collections, "Jesu, ever present with Thy Church below" (Holy Communion), which appeared in the 2nd ed. of Lyra Eucharistica, 1864. [J. J.]

So did the Hebrew prophet raise. I. Watts. [Passiontide.] Pub. in his Hymns and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 112, in 4 st. of 4 l. In the same work, Bk. i., No. 100, is the L. M. hymn, "Not to condemn the sons of men," in 4 st. of 4 l. These hymns are in C. U. in their original forms, but their principal interest arises out of their connection with the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases. In 1745, st. i.-iii. of "So did the Hebrew prophet raise," were adopted as st. i.-iii. of the Draft Trs. and Paraphs. "Of old the Hebrew prophet rais'd," and "Not to condemn the sons of men," was rewritten in c. m., and given as st. iv.-vii. of the same hymn. In the Draft of 1751 this arrangement was altered to "As when the Hebrew prophet rais'd," the alteration being confined to st. i. The Draft of 1781 contained further alterations, and finally the hymn came forth in the official Translations and Para- phrases, 1781, as a paraphrase (No. xli.) of St. John iii. 14-19, "As when the Hebrew prophet rais'd," st. i. being from the Draft of 1751, as above; st. ii., iii., iv., new, but based upon the Draft of 1745; st. iv. from the Draft of 1745; st. v. new; st. vi. from the Draft of 1745. This form of the hymn has been authorized for use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years, and is also found in several modern hymn-books. In a list of authors and revisers of the Scottish Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, made by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), the 1781 revision is attributed to W. Cameron. The designation of this hymn is I. Watts, 1709; Scottish Trs. and Paraphs., 1745-51; and W. Cameron, 1781. [J. J.]

So firm the saint's foundations stand. P. Doddridge. [Joy in Affliction.] This hymn is No. 3 of the D. mss., in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The impoverished saint rejoicing in God, from Habak. iii. 17." It is undated, but is found between two hymns dated respectively "Oct. 29, 1735," and "Nov. 16, 1735." This associates it with the year 1735. In 1755 it was pub. in Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, No. 161, and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1739, No. 182. Its use is limited.

About 1741 (see Doddridge, P.: also Doddridge, P., in Various), a copy of the above-named ms. was given by Lady Frances Gardiner to Robert Blair (p. 145, i.), of Athelstaneford, Scotland, who, in 1742, became one of the Committee by whom the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases of 1745 was compiled. In that Draft this hymn appeared as, "Secure the saint's foundation stands." In 1748 the Presbytery of Edinburgh proposed to add an alternative version of the same passage (Habak. iii. 17), in 4 st., and probably made by Dr. Hugh Blair. The Assembly's Committee, however, not seeing the need for two versions of the same passage of Holy Scripture, adopted st. i.-iii. of Blair's version, and st. iii. from Doddridge's hymn as st. iv., and gave the cento as "What tho' no flowers the fig-tree clothe," in their Draft Trs. and Paraphs. of 1751. In the Draft of 1781 it was repeated, with slight alterations, and a new stanza, beginning, "He to my tardy feet shall lend." In the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs. of 1781 it finally appeared as No. xxxii., the only alteration from the Draft of the same year being in ll. 3 and 4 of the new stanza. This last alteration is attributed by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) to John Logan. The correct designation therefore of the authorized text is P. Doddridge, 1735; Scottish Trs. & Paraphs., 1745; Dr. H. Blair, 1748 and 1751; and J. Logan, 1781. Miss J. E. Leeson rewrote this hymn as "Although the fig-tree blossom not," for her Paraphrases and Hymns, 1853. There is also a cento in T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, ed., 1889, in 3 st. of 6 l., beginning, "What though the fig-tree's strength decay." This is by Mr. Darling based upon the 1781 text as above. [J. J.]

So new-born babes desire the breast. I. Watts. [Christian Life.] Pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 143, in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed "Characters of the Children of God from several Scriptures." In C. U. it is usually abridged. Modern hymn-books also contain the following centos therefrom:—

1. As new-born babes desire the breast. In a few collections.
2. Dost thou the high and heavenly One? This, in the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, No. 427, is composed of st. ix., vi.-viii. with slight alterations.
3. Father, I wait before Thy throne. An altered form of st. ix., x., in the Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1849, and other American collections.
4. Grace, like an uncorrupted seed. This begins with st. v. and is found in a few American hymnals.
5. Immortal principles forbid. This, in the New Cong., 1859, is composed of st. v.-x., with alterations.
6. Lord, I address Thy heavenly throne. This, in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, is composed of st. ix., vi., v., vii., viii., in the order named.

This hymn in these various forms is in extensive use. [J. J.]

So wahr ich lebe, sprichst dein Gott. J. Heermann. [Lent.] On Ezekiel xxxiii. 11. 1st pub. in his Devoti musica cordis, Breslau, 1630, p. 1, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled, "A true admonition from St. Augustine that one should not put off repentance." It seems to be suggested by chap. 2 in the mediæval compilation known as the Meditations of St. Augustine. It is in Mitzell, 1858, No. 13, in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 1, and the Unv. L. S., 1851. Tr. as:—

As sure I live, thy Maker saith. In full by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Ger., pt. ii., 1725, p. 21. In his ed. 1732, p. 93, altered and beginning "Sure as I live;" and from this st. i., ii., v., ll. 1-4, and vi., ll. 1-2 were included in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 470; and st. i., iv., v. in the Evang. Union H. Bk., 1856.

Other trs. are:—(1) "Sinners, your Maker is your Friend," tr. of st. i. as No. 225 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. (2) "As truly as I live, God saith," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, Aug. 1865. (3) "Yea, as I live, Jehovah saith," by E. Massie, 1867. [J. M.]

Soden, Alfred James, s. of Thomas Soden, J.P. of Coventry, was b. at Coventry, Jan. 9, 1839, and educated for the legal profession, in which he practised as a solicitor, at Coventry, for three years. With a prosperous career before him, yet the profession was distasteful to him, and in 1864 he took Holy Orders; was successively Curate of King's Norton, 1864; and of Blockley, 1866. In 1878 he was preferred to the Vicarage of Aston Magna in the Diocese of Worcester, which he has since exchanged for Hogsthorpe, Alford, Lincolnshire. Mr. Soden pub. in 1875 The History of Blockley. He also edited:—

The Universal Hymn Book, specially adapted for Sundays and Holy Days, and for General Use in the Church. Lond., Hliffe & Son, 1883. It contains 620 hymns, which are arranged mainly in the order of the Book of Common Prayer, special attention being given to supply hymns based on the Collects, Epistles and Gospels throughout. This is a distinctive feature, and worthy of notice. There is also a large percentage of hymns not found in other collections. The work is comprehensive and well edited.

To this collection Mr. Soden contributed the following hymns:—

1. A quiet eve at Bethany. The Barren Fig Tree.
2. A Spirit, Mighty God, Thou art. God a Spirit.
3. Almighty God, this truth we own. Collect for 12th S. after Trinity.
4. Almighty God, to Whom we owe. Flower Services.
5. Citizens of heav'n, Soldiers of the Cross. Epistle, 23rd S. after Trinity.

6. Hark now, thou sinner, Jesus calls. Invitation.
7. Hark to the words of Him like Whom. Gospel, 4th Sunday after Trinity.
8. Harsh were the notes of woe that rose. Death and Burial.
9. Jesu, Chief Shepherd of the souls. Consecration of a Bishop.
10. Lord, Thine apostle asked of old. Gospel, 22nd S. after Trinity.
11. Lord, when to Thee this Gentile came. Gospel, 2nd S. in Lent.
12. Our days are but a shadow. Life, as a Shadow.
13. The deed is done—ended the strife. Easter Eve.
14. The martyr's crown is won to-day. St. Stephen.
15. This is the house of God. Public Worship.
16. This night, O God, we lift our cry to Thee. For those at Sea in Stormy Weather.
17. When Jesus on this earth. On behalf of the Sick.
18. When near Jerusalem of old. 10th S. after Trinity.
19. Within Bethesda's porches five. Offertory for Hospitals.

Sol praeceptis rapitur, proxima nox adest. [Evening.] This line is given in E. Caswall's Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 381; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 237 as the opening of a Latin hymn, the tr. of which by Caswall (as above) began:—

"The sun is sinking fast
The daylight dies;
Let love awake and pray
Her evening sacrifice."

The Rev. L. C. Biggs, who corresponded with the translator on the subject, says in a note to the tr. in his Annotated ed. of H. A. & M.:—

"Every effort has been made to discover the original of this hymn, but in vain. It was, the translator believes, in the possession of one of the former members of the Edgbaston Oratory; contained in a small book of devotions. It can scarcely have been older than the eighteenth century."

The search has been continued to our going to press; but still in vain. In Biggs's annotated H. A. & M. a rendering of Caswall's tr. into Latin by the Rev. C. B. Pearson is substituted for the original. The tr. "The sun is sinking fast," is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Soldiers of Christ, arise, And put your armour on. C. Wesley. [The whole Armour of God, or Confirmation.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, in 16 st. of 8 l., being No. 28 of "Hymns for Believers." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 40.) In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, 12 of the 16 stanzas were given as three separate hymns thus:—

1. "Soldiers of Christ, arise." No. 253.
2. "But, above all, lay hold." No. 259.
3. "In fellowship alone." No. 260.

All of these hymns have passed into other collections in G. Britain and America. The most popular arrangement, however, is a cento (beginning with the original first line), ranging from 4 st. to 6 st. of 4 l., which is found in numerous modern hymn-books. It is descended from A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1776, where No. 16 is composed of 16 st. of 4 l., compiled from C. Wesley's 16 st. of 8 l. The doxology in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, in Thring's Coll., 1882, and others, is not in the original. Alterations are also sometimes made in the text, as in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, which considerably weaken the hymn. The hymns: (1) "Followers of Christ, arise"; (2) "Rise, Christian soldiers, rise"; (3) "Soldiers of Christ, lay hold"; and (4) "Pray without ceasing, pray." given in some American collections, are centos from the original, with alterations. [J. J.]

Soldiers of the Cross, arise. Bp. W. W. How. [Home Missions.] 1st pub. in Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., 1854, in 7 st. of 4 l. When included in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, slight changes were made by Bp. How, in the text of st. vi. and vii. This form of the hymn is authorized. [J. J.]

Solemne nos jejunii. [Lent.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736, where it is appointed for Vespers on Sundays and Ferial days in Lent to the Saturday before Passion Sunday exclusively. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 61, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. The solemn season calls us now. J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 68, and again in his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 38. It is in C. U. in its original form, and also as:—

(1) Again the solemn season calls. This is in Barry's Ps. & Hys., 1862, &c.

(2) Once more the solemn season calls. An altered version of Chandler's tr. with this opening stanza was given in Murray's Hymnal, 1852. This stanza and portions of the rest of Murray's text have been repeated in later collections but without uniformity, the principal variations being:—

- (a) In H. A. & M., and Sarum, by Chandler, Murray, and the compilers of H. A. & M.
- (b) In Mercer, by Chandler, Murray, and Mercer.
- (c) In Kennedy, by Chandler, Murray, and Kennedy.
- (d) In Morrell & How, by Chandler, Murray and compilers of H. A. & M.

In addition to these collections there are others of less importance, in which variations are introduced.

(3) The sacred season now doth call. This appeared in the English Hyl., 1852-61. This opening line, but not the rest of the English Hyl. alterations was repeated in the 1863 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., No. 217.

(4) O sinner, bring not tears alone. This, in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873, and in a few American collections, is composed of st. ii.-v. of Chandler's text.

When these various forms of the text are taken into account, Chandler's tr. is found to be in extensive use.

2. Weeping on God we wait. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, Lent, No. 12, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

3. The solemn time of holy fast. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868 and 1871.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. And now the season grave and deep. I. Williams, 1839.

2. Again the time appointed see. R. Campbell, 1850. This owes a little to Chandler, and st. ii. ll. 3, 4, and st. iv. ll. 3, 4, are by Dr. Neale, and were supplied to Campbell in ms. This tr. is repeated with slight variations in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

3. The solemn fast of Lent is here. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

It must be noted also that although No. 208 in the Hymnary begins with the same line as Chandler's tr., yet the hymn as a whole is a tr. by the editors of the Hymnary, based upon Chandler. [J. J.]

Sollt ich meinem Gott nicht singen. P. Gerhardt. [Thanksgiving.] One of Gerhardt's finest hymns, setting forth the eternal love of God in His creation, redemption, and sanctification of us, His kind preservation in all our troubles and crosses, even in our forgetfulness of Him; ending with a prayer thus rendered by Mr. Massie:—

"Grant me grace, O God, I pray Thee,
That I may with all might
Love, and trust Thee, and obey Thee,
All the day and all the night;
And when this brief life is o'er,
Love and praise Thee evermore."

It is included in the 5th ed. Berlin, 1653, and in the Frankfurt ed., 1656, of Crüger's Praxis, No. 230; reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistl. Lieder, No. 81, Bachmann's ed., No. 60, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 722. It is in 12 st. of 10 l., ll. 9, 10 in each st. except xii. being

"Alles Ding währt seine Zeit, Gottes Lieb in Ewigkeit."

Of it Lauxmann in Koch viii, 333 relates the following:—

"At one of the Pastoral conferences, which the venerable Father of the Faith, Karl Helfferich, of Döflingen in Württemberg, conducted from 1756 to 1785, a great many little complaints were made at table about deficiency of tithes and such like matters. For a while he listened in patience. At length, while still sitting at table, he suddenly began to sing with cheerful voice the last stanza of this hymn. At this those present felt ashamed of their petty complaints, and henceforth the conversation was of more edifying matters."

It is tr. into English as:—

1. Shall I not his praise be singing. By Dr. Mills in his Horae Germanicae, 1845, p. 141 (1856, p. 195). It is a poor version, altogether missing the characteristic points of the German. His st. ii., iv.—vii. beginning "As the eagle fondly hovers," were included in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850–52, No. 85.

2. Shall I not sing praise to Thee. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 200; repeated omitting st. iii.—vi., viii., as No. 10 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Included in full in Cantate Domino, Boston, U. S., 1859; and, abridged, in Kennedy, 1863; Meth. N. Connex. H. Bk., 1863, and Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871.

3. I will sing my Maker's praises. A good tr. omitting st. vi., viii. contributed by R. Massie to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., No. 185 (Ox. ed. 1864, No. 286, omitting trs. of st. ii., iv.), reprinted in his own Lyra Domestica, 1864. In full in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, and abridged in the Meth. N. Connex. H. Bk., 1863.

4. Can I fail my God to praise. A tr. of st. i., iii., iv. by F. C. C., as No. 218 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

5. Should I not, in meek adoring. A tr. of st. i.—iii. by M. W. Stryker in his Hys. & Verses, 1883, p. 38, and Christian Chorals, 1885, No. 36.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Can I cease, my God, from singing," in Lyra Davidica, 1708, p. 22. (2) "Shan't I sing to my Creator," by J. C. Jacobi, 1732, p. 153. Repeated in the Moravian H. Bks., 1754 to 1886; in the 1789 and later eds. (1886, No. 179), beginning "I will sing to my Creator." (3) "Shall I not my God be praising," by J. Kelly, 1867, p. 240. [J. M.]

Sometimes a light surprises. W. Couper. [Joy and Peace in Believing.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii. No. 48, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "Joy and Peace in Believing." It is in C. U. in its full and in an abbreviated form. There are also two centos therefrom in modern collections:—(1) "In holy contemplation, we sweetly then pursue," in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and later editions; and (2) "Thy children, Lord, lack nothing," in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1870. [J. J.]

Somno refectis artubus. St. Ambrose? [Monday Morning.] This hymn is ascribed to St. Ambrose by Hincmar in his "De unâ et non trinâ Deitate," 857; and is one of the twelve hymns received as genuine by the Benedictine editors of St. Ambrose. Daniel, i., No. 18, gives the text, and at iv. p. 36 cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent. He ranks it, however, among the hymns of the 7th or 8th cent.; and Biraghi does not include it in his Inni sinceri e Carmi de Sant' Ambrogio, 1862. Mone i. p. 372, cites it as a ms. of the 8th cent. at Trier. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 12; Jul. A. vi., f. 23 b; Harl. 2961, f. 221); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30,851, f. 176 b), an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30,848, f. 74), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, page 232); in two mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 5). It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries; the universal use being at Matins on Monday. The text is also found in the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 42; Königsfeld ii. p. 30, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Sleep has refreshed our limbs; we spring from off our bed, and rise. By Card. Newman, in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 59, and again in his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 206. It is in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. The cento in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, "Be Thou the first on every tongue," is composed of st. ii. and iv.

2. Our limbs refresh'd with slumber sweet. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hyl., 1852.

3. Our limbs refreshed with slumber now. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 2; the Hymner, 1882, and others.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. O God, be present and inspire. Primer, 1706.

2. Our limbs refreshed with wholesome sleep. Bp. R. Mant. 1837.

3. Spurning the bed where luxury lies. J. E. Doubleday's Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.

4. With limbs refreshed by needful sleep. Bp. J. Williams, 1845.

5. Now are our limbs refreshed with quiet sleep. I. Williams, in his Thoughts in Past Years, enlarged ed. 1848.

6. Our limbs refresh't with healthful rest. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

7. Our limbs with tranquil sleep restored. E. Caswall, 1849.

8. Our wearied limbs with sleep restored. J. D. Chambers, 1852.

9. Our limbs with grateful sleep refreshed. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

10. Our limbs are now refreshed with sleep. J. W. Hewett, 1859.

11. Sleep has refreshed our limbs; we spring out of our beds as men in fear. J. Keble, 1866. Of this tr. st. i. ii. are altered from Card. Newman as above.

12. Now that our limbs, refreshed by sleep. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Son of God, Eternal Word. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [Morning.] This, together with Bp. Wordsworth's Evening Hymn, "The day is gently sinking to a close," were printed separately from his Holy Year, and were pasted into unsold copies of the 3rd ed. of that work, in 1863. In 1864 they were given as the opening hymns of the Holy Year, and have since come into somewhat general use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Son of the carpenter, receive. C. Wesley. [To be Sung at Work.] Pub. in Hys. and Poems, 1739, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "To be sung at work." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 172.) Two centos from this hymn, and both beginning with st. ii., "Servant of all, to toil for man," are in C. U. The first, composed of st. ii.-iv. appeared in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 313, and the second, st. ii.-iv. and i. in the New Cong., 1859. [J. J.]

Sonnet Regi nato nova cantica. [Christmas.] This is found in a ms. in the Bodleian (Bodl. 775, f. 129 b), written circa 1000; in a Winchester ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 473; in a Sarum Missal, circa 1370, in the Bodleian (Barlow 5, f. 18 b); in the St. Andrew's, Angers of 1489, Sens of 1529, and other Missals. In the Sarum use it was the sequence in the Mass at Daybreak ("in aurora") on Christmas Day. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 9, Daniel v. p. 175, and Kehrein, No. 17. The trs. are:—

1. O come, new anthems let = sing. By E. H. Plumtre, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.
2. Now to the new-born King. By J. W. Hewett, in Lyra Messianica, 1864.
3. Unto the King new-born, new praises sing. By C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868. [J. M.]

Songs of praise the angels sang [sing]. J. Montgomery. [Universal Praise.] Pub. in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 168, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "God worthy of all Praise." It was repeated in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 562; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 90. The heading in 1825 and 1853 was changed to "Glory to God in the highest." The opening line is sometimes changed to "Songs of praise the angels sing." The use of this hymn is extensive. [J. J.]

Songs of thankfulness and praise. Bp. C. Wordsworth, of Lincoln. [Epiphany.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, No. 23, in 5 st. of 8 l., with the heading:—

"Sixth Sunday after the Epiphany.—Recapitulation of the Subjects presented in the Services of former weeks throughout the season of Epiphany; and Anticipation of the future great and glorious Epiphany, at which Christ will appear again, to judge the World."

In Bp. Wordsworth's revised and enlarged edition of the Holy Year, 1863, st. v., l. 2, was changed from "Mirror'd in Thy holy word," to "Present in Thy holy word;" and the heading expanded to the following:—

"Sixth Sunday after the Epiphany.—A Recapitulation of the successive Epiphanies or Manifestations of Christ, which have been already presented in the Services of the former weeks throughout the season of Epiphany; and which are preparatory to that future great and glorious Epiphany, at which Christ will be manifested to all, when He will appear again to judge the World. See Collect, Epistle, and Gospel for this week."

This hymn is one of the most popular of Bp. Wordsworth's hymns, and is in extensive use in most English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

Sons of God, triumphant rise. C. Wesley. [Spiritual Ecultation; or, Holy Com- munion.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739, Pt. ii., in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Hymn after the Sacrament." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 170.) This hymn is known in three forms in addition to the original:—

1. The first was given to it by A. M. Toplady, in his Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 295, where it is composed of st. i.-iv. of the original, and st. ii., iii., of C. Wesley's "Lord and God of heavenly powers" (q.v.). In this form it is a hymn of Praise.
2. The second is in Mercer, 1855-1864 (Oxford ed., No. 187). This is from Toplady's cento; st. i. being from "Sons of God, triumphant rise"; and st. ii., iii., from "Lord and God of heavenly powers." The refrain "Hallelujah" is added to each line, and it is appointed for Easter.
3. In the Altar Hymnal, 1884, No. 171, st. i.-iii., viii., are given for Holy Communion. [J. J.]

Sons of men, behold from far. C. Wesley. [Epiphany.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Hymn for the Epiphany." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 184.) In M. Madan's Ps. & Hymns, 1760, it was given as No. 23, and was thus brought into use in the Church of England. It is seldom given in modern hymn books in its full form; and slight alterations are nearly always found in the text. It is in extensive use in most English-speaking countries. Notwithstanding this popularity it was excluded from the Wes. H. Bk. of 1780 and 1875. In the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, st. iv., v., vi., of this hymn, rewritten, together with an opening stanza and a doxology from another source, were given as, "Lo, the Gentiles bend the knee." This cento was repeated in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and other collections. Sometimes it reads, "Lo, the Gentiles bend the knee." [J. J.]

Sons we are through God's election. [Election.] This hymn was given in the Gospel Magazine, April, 1777, in 8 st. of 6 l., based on the words, "The godly consideration of Predestination and Election in Christ, is full of sweet, pleasant, and unspeakable comfort to godly persons."—Church of England, Article XVII; and signed "S. P. R." In J. Dobell's New Sel., 1806, it was repeated, with slight alterations, and the omission of st. iii., and given as by "R —." From the New Sel. it has passed into other hymn-books in the same form. In the s. mss., the Rev. S. Adams (see p. 599, ii., "Jesus is our great salvation") says he believes this hymn to be his father's (see Adams, J., p. 15, ii.), but gives no proof, as he has done with others of his father's hymns. The hymn certainly reads like one of Adams's compositions; but his authorship is open to doubt. His usual signature in the Gospel Magazine was "J. A." [J. J.]

Soon shall this earthly frame, dissolved. [The Resurrection.] This paraphrase of 2 Cor. v. 1-11 first appeared in the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, in 1745, and was repeated in the Draft of 1751. In the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs. of 1781, No. 51, several alterations were introduced into the text by W. Cameron. (See p. 200, ii.) Of this paraphrase, sts. v.-vii., are from I. Watts's "There is a house not made with hands" (Hys. & S. Songs, 1709, iii.-v.), somewhat altered. Possibly some of the remaining stanzas may have been suggested by other hymns by Watts on kindred subjects, as, for example, Bk. i. No. 100; and Bk. ii., No. 61, in the Hys. & S. Songs, 1709; but the similarity between these hymns and this paraphrase is very slight.

Sophonius. [Greek Hymnody, § vi.]

Souls in heathen darkness lying.
Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Missions.] This hymn is known in four forms, each by Mrs. Alexander, and beginning with the same first line, as follows:—

1. In E. Hawkins's Verses in Commemoration of the Third Jubilee of the S. P. G., 1851-52, p. 53, in 9 st. of 6 l.

2. In the S. P. C. K. Hys. for Pub. Worship, 1852, No. 184, in 4 st. of 6 l., of which st. i.-iii. are from No. 1 and st. iv. is new. This is the form in which it is usually given in modern hymn-books.

3. In Mrs. Alexander's Legend of the Golden Prayers and Other Poems, 1859, p. 167, in 8 st. of 6 l. This is the text of the Verses, &c., 1851-52, with the omission of st. iv.

4. In Mrs. Carey Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, No. 310 is composed of st. i., ii., vi., viii., from The Legend of the Golden Prayers, &c., as above. [J. J.]

Souls of men, why will ye scatter?
F. W. Faber. [Invitation: The Divine Call.] This is given at p. 362, i. 21, as from his Hymns, 1862. It really appeared in his Oratory Hys., 1854, in 8 st. of 4 l., with the heading "Come to Jesus." It is found in its full form in some collections; and the following cents therefrom are also in C. U.:—(1) "There's a wideness in God's mercy;" and (2) "Was there ever kindest Shepherd?" These are in several collections. [J. J.]

Southey, Caroline Ann, née Bowles, daughter of Charles Bowles, of Buckland, near Lymington, was b. in 1786; married, in 1839, to Robert Southey, the poet; and d. in 1854. Her publications include Solitary Hours, 1826; The Birth-day, a Poem, 1836; and some prose works. Her Poetical Works were pub. in 1867; and her correspondence with Southey in 1882. A few pieces from her works are in C. U. as hymns:—

1. I weep, but not rebellious tears. For the Aged. Pub. in her Solitary Hours, 1826; and, again, in her Poetical Works, 1867, p. 285, in 5 st. of 6 l. It is given, in full, in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858. To the line, "The faithful few made perfect there" (st. v., l. 5), the following note is appended in the Poetical Works:—"The word 'few' is used here in no presumptuously exclusive sense of the Author's, but simply as being the scriptural phrase, 'Many are called, but few are chosen.' The word having been altered, lately, in two religious publications, where the poem was inserted unknown to the Author, it is thought proper to annex this note."

2. Launch thy bark, mariner. For Sailors. Given in her Solitary Hours, 1826, p. 22, in 5 st. of 8 l., and entitled, "The Mariner's Hymn;" also in her Poetical Works, 1867. [J. J.]

Sovereign of all the worlds on high.
P. Doddridge. [Adoption.] This is No. 78 in the D. mss., in 5 st. of 4 l., is headed, "Adoption argued from a filial temper, on Gal. iv. 6," and is dated "June 17, 1739." It was repeated, without alteration, in Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 281, but with the title changed to "A filial Temper the Work of the Spirit, and a proof of Adoption. Galat. iv. 6." In J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 307, the 1755 heading is repeated, but the text is changed in st. iv. l. 3, from "Thou know'st, I Abba, Father, cry," to "And thus, I Abba, Father, cry." It is in C. U. in its original form, and as, "My Father God! how sweet the sound" (st. ii.). [J. J.]

Sovereign of all, Whose will ordains.
C. Wesley. [In Time of National Trouble.] This is from the tract of Hymns for Times of Trouble and Persecution, 1st ed., 1744, No. 10, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed, "A Prayer for His Majesty King George, 'Fear God and honour the King.'" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 21.) Jackson, in his Memoir of C. Wesley (ed. 1848, pp. 149-51), says that the dread of invasion by France on behalf of the Pretender, and the fear that Popery would be re-established, drove the people to many excesses, not the least marked of which was a common crusade against the Wesleys and their followers on the alleged ground (amongst other things) that they were secretly furthering the Pretender's views, and were receiving money for their labours. It was under these circumstances that the Hys. for Times of Trouble and Persecution were written and published, the finest being "Saviour of all, Whose will ordains," and "Lord, Thou hast bid Thy people pray," the latter being entitled "For the King and the Royal Family." The former of these hymns was given in the 1st ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 453, and the latter in the 1830 Supp. thereto, an abbreviated form as No. 755. [J. J.]

Sow in the morn thy seed. J. Montgomery. [Missions.] Under the date of June 16, 1832, Montgomery, in a letter to his friend George Bennett, gives the history of this hymn in the following words:—

"In the month of February last, on our return from Bath, as my friend Mr. Rowland Hodgson and myself were travelling between Gloucester and Tewkesbury, I observed from my side of the carriage, a field which had been recently ploughed, and apparently harrowed, for the surface lay not in furrows; but upon it were several women and girls in rows, one behind another, laterally, as though they were engaged in parallel lines, but did not keep pace with each other in their work. What the work was I could not guess: it was evidently not weeding, for the ground was perfectly clear and fresh turned up. It seemed to be planting, all stooping down and appearing to put something into the earth, but they were too far off for me to distinguish what. I therefore described the scene and their mode of action to my friend, who, being blind, could not help out the imperfection of my eyes by the aid of his. He immediately replied, 'I dare say it is dibbling, a mode of husbandry by which two-thirds of the grain necessary in the ordinary way of sowing an acre is saved: boles are picked in lines along the field, and into each of these two or three grains are dropped.' 'I have often heard of drilling or dibbling, but I never saw it before,' I exclaimed; 'and I must say if this be the latter, dibbling is quite in character with everything else in an age of political economy. * * * * But for my part, give me broadcast sowing, scattering the seed on the right hand and on the left, in liberal handfuls; this dibbling is very unpoeitical and unpicturesque; there is neither grace of motion nor attitude in it.' * * * * I fell immediately into a musing fit, and moralised most magnificently upon all kinds of husbandry (though I knew little or nothing of any, but so much the better, perhaps, for my purpose) making out that each was excellent in its way, and best in its place. * * * * By degrees my thoughts subsided into verse, and I found them running lines, like furrows, along the field of my imagination: and in the course of the two next stages they had already assumed the form of the following stanzas, which I wrote as soon as we reached Bromsgrove. This is the whole history and mystery of which I fear you have heard so romantic an account, 'Sow in the morn thy seed.'" Memoirs, by Holland, vol. v. p. 34.

The hymn written under these circumstances, in February 1832, was printed for the use of the Sheffield Sunday School Union, at their Whitsuntide gathering of the same year. It is in 7 st. of 4 l. It was pub. in Montgomery's Poet's Portfolio, 1835, p. 248, and headed, "The Field of the World," and again, with the same heading, in his Original Hys., 1853, p. 258. It is given in many modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Sowers went throughout the land,
Emily E. S. Elliott. [Harvest.] 1st pub. in the Church Missionary Juvenile Instructor, 1872, p. 124, in 4 st. of 8 l., and then in her Chimes of Consecration, 1873, p. 146. It was included, as No. 362, in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1879, as a hymn for teachers as workers in the spiritual harvest. [J. M.]

Spake the glorious Lord in heaven.
Archbishop E. W. Benson. [Ps. cx.] Written for and first pub. in the Wellington Coll. H. Bk., 1860, and repeated in Kennedy, 1863, and others. [J. J.]

Spangenberg, August Gottlieb, s. of Georg Spangenberg, Lutheran pastor at Klettenberg near Nordhausen, was b. at Klettenberg, July 15, 1704. He entered the University of Jena in 1722, as a student of law, but soon abandoned law for the study of the theology. He lived in the house of Professor Buddens, graduated M.A. in 1726, and for some time lectured there. In Sept. 1732 he went to Halle as adjunct of the Theological faculty and superintendent of the Orphanage schools. Here he associated himself with the Separatists, and by an edict from Berlin was deprived of his offices, and, on April 8, 1733, was expelled from Halle. He at once proceeded to Herrnhut, and was received into the Moravian Community, with which he had become acquainted as early as 1727. In 1735 he accompanied the Moravian colony which settled in Georgia, and served also in Pennsylvania and in the Island of St. Thomas. He returned to Germany in 1739, and was for some time at Marienborn in Hesse. In Sept. 1741 he was present at an important Moravian Conference in London, and was there appointed a member of the Unity's Direction, and also director of their financial affairs. While in England he founded, in 1742, the first English Moravian settlement, at Smith House in Yorkshire. He was then, on June 15, 1744, consecrated at Herrenhaag as Moravian Bishop for North America, and from that time till 1762 was for the most part in America, working principally in Pennsylvania, and among the Indians, and paying two visits to Europe. In 1762 he became the senior member of the Unity's Direction as successor to Zinzendorf, and thereafter resided for the most part either at Herrnhut or at Barby. The last years of his life were spent at Berthelsdorf near Herrnhut, where he resigned his offices in Sept. 1791, and d. Sept. 18, 1792. (Koch, v. 337; G. F. Otto's Leicon Oberlausitzischer Schriftsteller, iii. 306; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xiv. 460, &c.)

Spangenberg was an earnest and able man, was much beloved and respected, and was entrusted by the Brethren with many important missions, being e.g. the principal agent in the negotiations between the Moravians and the British Government (see p. 767, i.). He did good service both in consolidating the Moravian organization and by untiring labours in America. His Autobiography appeared in 1784. He also wrote a life of Zinzendorf, in 8 vols., pub. at Barby 1772-75. His other chief work is his Idea fidei fratrum, &c., Barby, 1779 (English tr. = An Exposition of Christian Doctrine, as taught in the Protestant Church of the United Brethren, &c., London, 1784), which is accepted as an authorised exposition of the Moravian theology. He only wrote a few hymns, which are of fervent but not rational piety, but do not entitle him to high rank as a hymnwriter. They were mostly written before 1746. Ten of them are included in the Brüder G. B. of 1778.

Of these ten hymns the following may be noted here:—

i. Der König ruht, und schauet doch. Christian Work. 1st pub. as No. 1004 in Appx., i., 1737, to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, and is in 8 st. of 10 l. Repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1385, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto, marked as "On Zinzendorf, May 26, 1734," i.e. as written for Zinzendorf's birthday. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1865, No. 1126. Tr. as:—

High on His everlasting Throne. This is a spirited but free tr. by J. Wesley, in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1742 (P. Works, 1868-72, ii. p. 61), in 13 st. of 8 l. St. i.-vi. are from st. i.-iii. of the German; vii. from iv.; viii. from v.; ix., x. from vi.; and xi.-xiii. from vii., viii. This tr. was included in full in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742, No. 37, and repeated abridged in later eds. (1886, No. 888, in 9 st.). Centos under the original first line are given in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, the Amer. Meth. Epis. Hymns, 1849, &c. Wesley's st. xi.-xiii., altered and beginning, "What shall we offer our good Lord," were included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 479 (1875, No. 492), and repeated in the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863, and others.

ii. Die Kirche Christi ist hin und her. Unity of the Christian Church. Included as No. 2210 in the 2nd Suppl., circa 1746, after the 12 Appendices to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735; and is in 12 st. of 5 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 959, st. ii., v.-vii., xii. are omitted, and it is altered to "Die Kirche Christi, die er geweiht." In the Hist. Nachricht to the 1778 it is marked as composed in North America in 1745 [at a Union Synod at Lancaster, Pennsylvania]. The text of 1778 is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1362. In the Württemberg G. B., 1842, st. i.-iii. are as i.-iii. in 1778; iv., v. are based on v., vi. in 1778; while st. vi. is not even suggested by Spangenberg. St. vi. reads:—

"O Geist des Herrn, der das Leben schafft, Walt in der Kirche mit deiner Kraft,
Dass die Gotteskinder Geboren werden
Gleich wie der Morgenstau schon auf Erden
Zu Christi Preis."

The hymn has been tr. as:—

The Church of Christ that He hath hallow'd here. This is a good tr. of st. i.-iii. of the 1778, and of the st. printed above, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 58; repeated in Ps. & Hys., Bedford, 1859, No. 169.

iii. Heilige Einfalt, Gnadenwunder. Christian Simplicity. This is an excellent picture of his own Christian character. It was 1st pub. as No. 1589 in Appx. x., circa 1741, to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, and is in 19 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 835, reduced to 11 st. (st. iv. is by Zinzendorf), and this form is in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 823 (ed. 1881, No. 441), and in some recent German collections, e.g. the Pfalz G. B., 1860. According to Bunsen, 1833, p. 904, it was written as a birthday hymn for his sister. The date which Bunsen gives for its composition (1744) is probably a misprint for 1741. Tr. as:—

1. When simplicity we cherish. This is given in 14 st. as No. 387 in pt. ii., 1746, of the Moravian H. Bk. In the 1789 and later eds. (1849, No. 603) it is reduced to 6 st., and is entirely rewritten, save the opening line. [See Various.] [J. M.]

Spee, Friedrich von, s. of Peter Spee (of the family of Spee, of Langenfeld), judge at Kaiserswörth, was b. at Kaiserswörth, Feb. 25, 1591. He was educated in the Jesuit gymnasium at Cologne, entered the order of the Jesuits there on Sept. 22, 1610, and was ordained priest about 1621. From 1613 to 1624 he was one of the tutors in the Jesuit college at Cologne, and was then sent to Paderborn to assist in the Counter Reformation. In 1627 he was summoned by the Bishop of Würzburg to act as confessor to persons accused of witchcraft, and, within two years, had to accompany to the stake some 200 persons, of all ranks and ages, in whose innocence he himself firmly believed (His Cautio criminalis, seu de processibus contra sagas liber, Rinteln, 1631, was the means of almost putting a stop to such cruelties). He was then sent to further the Counter Reformation at Peine near Hildesheim, but on April 29, 1629, he was nearly murdered by some persons from Hildesheim. In 1631 he became professor of Moral Theology at Cologne. The last years of his life were spent at Trier, where, after the city had been stormed by the Spanish troops on May 6, 1635, he contracted a fever from some of the hospital patients to whom he was ministering, and d. there Aug. 7, 1635. (Koch, iv. 185; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 193, &c.)

Spee was the first important writer of sacred poetry that had appeared in the German Roman Catholic Church since the Reformation. Among his contemporaries he was noteworthy for the beauty of his style, and his mastery of rhythm and metre. He seems to have come independently to much the same conclusions regarding measure and accent, and the reform of German prosody as did Opitz (see p. 871, ii.). He was however of a much deeper and purer nature than Opitz; and far surpasses him in originality, in imagination, and in poetic inspiration. His poems are characterised by a very keen love for the works of God in the natural world, and a delight in all the sights and sounds of the country, especially in spring and summer; and at the same time by a deep and fervent love to God, to Christ, and to his fellow-men. On the other hand his mannerisms are very pronounced; the pastoral imagery and dialogue which he is fond of using jar upon modern ears when used on such serious subjects as the Agony in Gethsemane. In the hymns to Jesus he is too subjective and sentimental, and works out the idea of Christ as the Bridegroom of the soul with unnecessary detail. His poems are often full of beauty, of pathos, and of genuine religious warmth, but they cannot be considered as suitable for public worship, and hardly any really came into use except as processions sung by the people at the great festivals or at out-door gatherings. A number passed into the Roman Catholic hymn-books of the 17th cent., and one or two still survive. Recently Knapp, in his Ev. L. S., 1850 and 1865, has included a few. Spee's influence on the hymnody of the Church was not so much direct as through the impulse his work gave to Scheffler (p. 1004, ii.). His earlier poems are included in his (1) Trutz Nachtigal, oder Geistlichen-Poetisch Lust-Waldlein, &c., Cologne, 1649. [Brit. Mus., Berlin Library, &c. The ms. of this work, completed in 1634, is in the Town Library of Trier.] This is Spee's most important book; reached a 5th ed. in 1683, and has been several times reprinted in this century, e.g. ed. by Clemens Brentano (with selections from No. 2), at Berlin, 1817; by Wilhelm Smets, at 1845 (2nd ed., Bonn, 1849); by Karl Simrock, at Heilbronn, 1876; by Gustav Balke, at Leipzig, 1877, &c. A few of the hymns had appeared in the Seraphisch Lustgart, Cologne, 1635; the Geistlicher Psalter, Cologne, 1638, and other Jesuit books. (2) Güldenes Tugend-Buch, &c., Cologne, 1649 [Göttingen Library]. This is a prose work on the Christian Graces of Faith, Hope, and Love, and has a few hymns interspersed.

The hymns by Spee which have passed into English appear to be only two, viz.:—

i. Bei stiller Nacht, zur ersten Wacht. Passiontide. In the Trutz Nachtigal, 1649, p. 225, in 15 st. of 4 l., entitled "A mournful song on the agony of Christ on the Mount of Olives in the Garden." Previously in the Seraphisch Lustgart, Cologne, 1635, p. 160, in 17 st., beginning, "Bei finster Nacht," and this text is followed in H. Bone's Cantate, 1847, No. 83, where it begins "Bei finster Nacht, vom Garten her," and is reduced to 8 st. The form which has passed into English is that in the Trier G. B. (R. C.), 1846, p. 56, in 13 st., entirely rewritten, hardly anything save the first two lines being the same as in 1649. The tr. in C. U. is:— Within ■ Garden's bound. In full from the text of 1846, by Miss Cox for Lyra Mystica, 1864, p. 119, and in her Hys. from the German, 1864, p. 45. Her tr. of st. 1, ii., x.-xiii. are included in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

ii. Der trübe Winter ist vorbei. Summer. In his Trutz Nachtigal, 1649, p. 35, in 12 st. of 10 l., entitled "Love Song of the Bride of Jesus in the beginning of summer time." It is a beautiful poem rather than a hymn. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850 and 1865, after the text of W. Smets. Tr. as:—

The gloomy winter now is o'er. By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 242. [J. M.]

Spener, Philipp Jakob, D.D., s. of Johann Philipp Spener, keeper of the archives of Count von Rappoltstein, at Rappoltswiler, near Colmar, in Alsace, was b. at Rappoltswiler, Jan. 13 (25), 1635. He matriculated at the University of Strassburg, in 1651, and graduated M.A. in 1653. From 1654 to 1656 he had the oversight of the studies of two sons of the Palzgraf Christian I. In 1659 he went to Basel, and then spent a year at Geneva. He left Geneva in 1661, and accompanied the young Count von Rappoltstein to Württemberg, staying principally at Stuttgart and Tübingen. During 1662 he gave some University lectures at Tübingen. He was then appointed, in 1663, as general preacher at Strassburg (D.D. from the University in 1664), and gave also University lectures there; preaching his farewell sermon in the Cathedral on July 3, 1666. He then became chief pastor of the Franciscan church (Barfüsserkirche, now St. Paul's), and Senior of the Lutheran clergy at Frankfurt am Main. Here, in Aug. 1670, he began to hold the Collegia pietatis or prayer meetings which are regarded as the beginnings of Pietism. During this period he pub. his famous Pia desideria.* In 1686 he was called to become senior court preacher at Dresden, then regarded as the most important post in the German Lutheran church. Here, however, he found much in the court life which needed reformation; and finally, on the general Fast day, Feb. 23, 1689, he addressed to the Elector Johann Georg III., a respectful, but perfectly definite, remonstrance regarding his drinking habits. From this time forth the Elector planned his removal, and with his knowledge and consent Spener at last received from the Elector Friedrich Wilhelm III., of Brandenburg, an invitation to become Probst of the St. Nicholas church, Consistorialrath, and Inspector of Schools and Churches at Berlin. He preached his first sermon in Berlin on June 21, 1691, and his last on July 1, 1704. In the last months of his life he was unable to undertake any duty. He d. at Berlin, Feb. 5, 1705 (Koch, iv., 201, v., 663; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 204; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xiv., 500, &c.).

* First appeared, 1675, in his ed. of Arndt's Postilla. First separate ed. in German, dated Frankfurt, 1676, with a dedication of Sept. 8, 1675, is in the Brit. Mus. Latin ed. pub. 1678. In this work he set forth what he considered to be the great desiderata in the Lutheran church of his time.

Spenser was a man of high personal character, and of unquestionable sincerity. By means of his official positions, of his intercourse with men of light and leading all over Germany, and through the extensive correspondence on spiritual matters by which he became the confessor of hundreds of all ranks and classes of the German people, he greatly moulded the religious life of his times. He came into fame and influence as the leader of a great religious movement. During his latter years at Berlin he had the pleasure of seeing the University of Halle founded (formally opened in 1694), and of finding his friends and pupils, like A. H. Francke (see p. 388, ii.) and P. Anton, appointed professors, and propagating his teachings there, and bringing on the triumph of the Pietistic movement.

To Hymnology Spenser did not make important contributions. Though he wrote a great deal of verse, hardly any of it could be called poetry. His hymns derive their interest from the fact of their authorship rather than from their intrinsic value. In them we find the characteristic points of view of the Pietistic school, and they give the keynote to many of the later Pietistic hymns. They are only nine in all, and appeared in the Frankfurt ed., 1674, of Crüger's Praxis [see p. 272, i. Copy in the Hamburg Library], in the Frommer Christen erfreuliche Himmels Lust [copy in the Göttingen Library, without date or publisher's name. Koch dates it 1676], and as his Geistreiche Gesänge, at Halle, 1710. Six of them were included in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704 and 1714.

Those of Spenser's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Nun ist auferstanden. Easter. 1st pub. 1674, as above, No. 264, in 10 st. of 10 l., marked as by "P. J. S. D." In the Berlin G. L. S. ed., 1863, No. 313. The tr. is from the text of the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 169, which begins, "Aus des Todesbauden." The tr. is "Lo! death's bands are riven." In the British Herald, July 1866, p. 296, signed "W. T. H." Repeated in Reid's Praxis Bk., 1872.

ii. So ist's an dem dass ich mit Freuden. For the Dying. His finest hymn. 1st pub. 1674, as above, No. 755, in 6 st. of 8 l., marked, "P. J. S. D." In Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 901 (Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 409). Tr. as "Then now at last the hour is come." By Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 218.

iii. Soll ich denn täglich kränken. Resignation. 1st pub. 1674, as above, No. 527, in 12 st. of 8 l., marked "P. J. Spenser D." In Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. Tr. as "Shall I o'er the future fret." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 270. [J. M.]

Spengler, Lazarus, was the 9th of the 21 children of Georg Spengler and Agnes his wife, and was b., March 13, 1479, at Nürnberg, where his father was clerk of the Imperial court of Justice (Landgerichtschreiber). He entered the University of Leipzig in 1494; but on the death of his father on Dec. 27, 1496, he returned to Nürnberg, obtained a position in the town clerk's office, in 1507 became himself town clerk (Raths Syndikus), and in 1516 also Rathsherr. When Luther was passing through Nürnberg, in 1518, on his way to Augsburg, Spengler made his acquaintance. He warmly espoused the Reformation doctrines, pub. in 1519 his Schutzred in Luther's favour, and himself became one of the leaders in the Reformation work at Nürnberg. He was one of those condemned by name in the Bull of Excommunication launched by Pope Leo the Tenth, on June 15, 1520, against Luther and his friends. Dr. Eck sent the Bull to the Town Council of Nürnberg, and urged them to proceed against Spengler, but they ignored it, and then sent him as one of their representatives to the Diet of Worms, in April 1521. In 1525 Spengler went to Wittenberg to consult with Luther and Melancthon as to turning the Benedictine Aegidienstift (Schottenkloster) into an Evangelical Gymnasium, and this was opened as such by Melancthon on May 23, 1526. Spengler was also the prime mover to the Visitation of 1528, and upheld strict Lutheranism in the negotiations at the Diet of Augsburg in 1530. He d. at Nürnberg, Sept. 7, 1534 (Koch, i., 308; Will's Nürnbergisches Gelehrten-Lexikon, iii., p. 731; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xiv., 516).

Spengler was a trusty friend and valued counsellor of Luther and the principal Reformers of Germany. He also interested himself in the improvement of the church services, and in 1532 was able to have an authorised Liturgy (Kirchenordnung) printed. He wrote a considerable quantity of verse, sacred and secular; but only two hymns are entitled to him. The one is an indifferent version of Ps. cxviii., beginning "Vergebens ist all Müß und Kost." The other is:—

Durch Adams Fall ist ganz verderbt. Fall and Redemption. 1st pub. in the Geistliche Gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 48, in 9 st. of 10 l. Also in the Urv. L. S., 1651, No. 409. During the Reformation period it attained a wide popularity as a didactic and confessional hymn of the Evangelical faith. It is one of the most characteristic hymns of the time, conceived in the spirit of deep and earnest piety, eminently Scriptural, and setting forth the Reformation teachings in concise and antithetical form, but is however too much like a system of theology in rhyme. The trs. are:—1. "By Adam's fall was so forlorne." By Bp. Coverdale, 1539, reprinted in his Remains, 1846, p. 556. 2. "When Adam fell our total Frame." By J. C. Jacobi in his Psalmodia Germanica, pt. ii., 1725, p. 17. In his ed. 1732, p. 86, it begins "When Adam fell, the Frame entire;" and this form was repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 304, and later eds. (1849, No. 18). (3) "Our nature fell in Adam's fall." This is a paraphrase, in 5 st. of L.M., by Dr. M. Loy, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, No. 247. [J. M.]

Spenser, Edmund (b. 1552; d. 1599), has a right to his place in this work extrinsically and intrinsically. Extrinsically his odes, entitled by himself Four Hymnes, give us a connecting link with Chaucer; and intrinsically they are of "the brave translunary things" that ought long since to have introduced much in them to the Church's Hymnology. Spenser in the outset acknowledged Chaucer for his "dere maister;" and throughout there are echoes and re-echoes of him. Specifically in relation to the Four Hymnes, the Complaynt of Pite must have been carried by the youthful Spenser to Hurstwood and the Pendle district, or was found in one or other of the contemporary cultured Spenser households there. The Complaynt is of "Love," as is Spenser's first of the immortal four "in honour of Love." Like Chaucer's, the metre of the new Hymnes is rhyme-royal; and the meditative reader of the elder and later poets will catch notes and images common to both, e.g., in the "Hymne to Beautie" (l. 257) we find—

"Doe seeme like twinkling starres in frostie night."

So in the "Prologue" (l. 269):—

"His eyghen twinkled in his hede aright
As don the sterres in the frostie night."

Nor is it mere verbal resemblances that we come upon. The thought and emotion flow in the same channels. It were easy to multiply proofs of the truth of Spenser's own grateful acknowledgment in Colin Clout :—

"The shepherd's boy (best known by that name)
That after Tityrus first sung his lay," in imitation of, or as disciple of Chaucer, as we use the phrase of a painter "after Raphael." Intrinsically the Four Hymnes have the additional interest of having been (in "Two Hymnes of Love and of Beautie" at least) among the earliest of the "newe poet's" verse-attempts, though delayed in publication until 1596. There is a brilliancy, a charm, an exquisiteness of phrasing, a delicacy and daintiness of wording, and a pervading melodiousness in them that should simply have rendered anything of their kind meagre between Chaucer's Complaynt of Pite and them. His "Rosalind" was their inspiring motif; but his "high mood" lifted him to Incarnate Love and Pity and Beauty. All the more noticeable is it, therefore, that in the epistle-dedicatory of the Four Hymnes to the "Ladie Margaret, Countesse of Cumberland, and the Ladie Marie, Countesse of Warwicke," the poet distinctly assigns the two of Love and Beauty to "the greener times" of his "youth." Turning to the Hymnes themselves, the student-reader will be rewarded if he consult Professor F. T. Palgrave's inestimable Essay (Grosart's Spenser, vol. iv., pp. xcvi.—c.) on the "Minor Poems of Spenser." I can only cull two bits on the two greatest of the Hymnes. Of "Love" :—

"The love painted here is at once so idealized and so general—the human and the personal aspect of passion so faintly present—that we feel as though this were some splendid procession unwinding itself before us in progress to the Capitol, rather than a hymn sung in the inmost shrine of Eros. What we hear is far less the music of Love, than Love set to lovely music: a stream of gorgeous beauty, in which the chivalry of the Middle Ages blends audibly with the mythology of the Renaissance."

Then of "Heavenly Love" :—

"Nowhere, I think, has Spenser written, in his larger pieces at least, with more uniformly equable dignity, united with more serene melody, than here; and great is the gain in reasonableness and charm to the celestial vision and the pictures from the Gospel story which he presents, from the absence of that Platonic colouring—so far as Platonism it is—which tinges the earlier companion Ode. Spenser, in fact, now writes from the fulness of his faith; and the poem has hence a reality which the most skilful art alone, in the most skilful hands, let the artist strive as he will, must ever fail to compass." [A. B. G.]

Speratus, Paulus, D.D., was b. in Swabia, Dec. 13, 1484. In a poem, written circa 1516, on Dr. J. Eck, he calls himself Elephantinus, i.e., of Ellwangen; and in his correspondence, preserved at Königsberg, he often styles himself "a Rutilis" or "von Rötlen." These facts would seem to indicate that he was b. at the castle of Rötlen, near Ellwangen. This property belonged to the Probst of the ecclesiastical corporation at Ellwangen, and Speratus's father was probably their bailiff or agent. The family name seems to have been Hoffer or Offer, and to have been in later years, following a practice common in the 16th cent., Latinized by himself into Speratus. He is probably the "Paul Offer de Ellwangen," who matriculated at the University of Freiburg (Baden) in 1503. He is also said to have studied at

Paris, and at some of the Italian universities. In 1518 we find him settled as a preacher at Dinkelsbühl, in Bavaria. In the end of that year he was invited to become preacher in the cathedral at Würzburg. He went to Würzburg in Feb. 1519, but his preaching was much too evangelical for the new bishop, and he had to leave, apparently in the beginning of 1520. Proceeding to Salzburg he preached for some time in the cathedral, until the archbishop there also would not tolerate his pronounced opinions. He left Salzburg in the autumn of 1520, and went to Vienna, where he appears to have graduated D.D. at the University. He was already married (probably as early as 1519), and was one of the first priests who had dared to take this step. After a violent sermon against marriage, delivered by a monk in St. Peter's church, at Vienna, the governor of Lower Austria (Count Leonhard von Zech) asked Speratus to make a reply. With the consent of the bishop he did so, and preached, on Jan. 12, 1522, a sermon in the cathedral (St. Stephen's), founded on the Epistle for the 1st S. after the Epiphany, in which he expressed his opinions very freely regarding the monastic life and enforced celibacy, and also clearly set forth the doctrine of Justification by Faith. This sermon (pub. at Königsberg in 1524) made a great impression, and was condemned by the Theological Faculty at Vienna, who also prevented Speratus from accepting an invitation to become preacher at Ofen, near Vienna. On his way from Vienna to the north he stayed at Iglau in Moravia, where the abbot of the Dominican monastery appointed him as preacher. Here the people became greatly enamoured of him and of the Reformation doctrines, and stood firmly by him, notwithstanding the remonstrances and threats of the king, and of the bishop of Olmütz. In the summer of 1523 king Ludwig came to Olmütz and summoned Speratus to him. Without even the form of a trial he put him in prison, but after three months he released him, probably through the influence of his queen (Maria of Hungary, see p. 710, i.), and of his cousin, the Margrave Albrecht of Brandenburg, but on the condition of his leaving Iglau and Moravia. In the end of 1523 Speratus came to Wittenberg, where he worked with Luther, and assisted him in the preparation of the first Lutheran hymn book (the Etlieh cristlich lieder. See p. 703, ii. It contained 4 German hymns by Luther, 3 by Speratus, and 1 anonymous German hymn). Luther then recommended him to the Margrave Albrecht, and about May 1524 the Margrave appointed him as court preacher at Königsberg. Here he had also charge of the Altstadt church till Graumann came into residence, in Oct. 1525 (see p. 461, i.). He seems to have had the principal share in drawing up the Liturgy and Canons (Kirchenordnung or "Book of Church Order") for the Prussian church, which was presented to the Diet in December 1525, and printed in 1526. On March 31, 1526, he was chosen as the clerical commissioner to visit the parishes of Prussia and see that the new arrangements were carried out; and in the end of 1529 he was appointed Lutheran bishop of Pomesania, with his residence at Marienwerder. Here he remained till his death on Aug. 12, 1551

Speratus was the author of various works, but was best known as the Reformer of Prussia. Feeling that for the working of ordinary parishes it was necessary to have pastors who had been brought up in Prussia, and could preach, if need be, in Polish or Lettish, he gladly welcomed the foundation at Königsberg (1544) of the first Prussian university. Among other important events affecting his administration may be mentioned the Visitations of 1528, of 1533, and especially that which lasted from Dec. 15, 1542, to the middle of February 1543; the Synods of 1529 (the Synodical Constitutions were pub. in 1530), of 1530, and of 1531; the new Kirchenordnung of 1544; and the welcome he extended, in 1543, to the exiled Bohemian Brethren who settled in Prussia.

As a hymn writer Speratus is principally known by the three hymns pub. in the Etlisch cristlich liden, 1524. He also pub. (no place or date but Königsberg, 1527), in 1527, a version of Ps. xxvii., beginning, "Erzurn dich nicht, sei nicht neidisch;" and a Hymn of Thanksgiving, to be used after the sermon, beginning, "Gelobet sei Gott, unser Gott." These five are all that can be confidently ascribed to him. The two collections which Cosack attributes to him do not bear any indication of his authorship; and Wackernagel, i., pp. xix., 386, 387, 388; iii. pp. 618-643, denies that they are his, and thinks that they are, much more probably, by Casper Löhner or Löner, who in 1524 became Lutheran pastor at Hof, in Bavaria; and in 1542, at Nördlingen, in Bavaria. The Low German hymn-books which he was for some time supposed to have edited (1525 and 1526), were really edited by Joachim Slüter, the Rostock Reformer. (See Dr. J. Bachmann's Gesch. des evang. Kirchengesanges in Mecklenburg, Rostock, 1881, p. 28, &c.) Of the five hymns mentioned above two have passed into English, viz. :—

i. Es ist das Heil uns kommen her. Law and Gospel. This, his most famous hymn, is founded on Rom. iii. 28. It was probably written in the autumn of 1523, either during his imprisonment at Olmütz, or else during his stay at Wittenberg. Included as one of the 8 hymns in the Etlisch cristlich liden, 1524, dated 1523, and entitled, "A hymn of Law and Faith, powerfully furnished with God's Word. Doctor Paul Speratus." In some eds. it has two pages of references to texts of Holy Scripture printed with it (Wittenberg, 1524), and signed "Paulus Speratus." It was repeated in the Erfurt Enchiridion, 1524, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 31, in 14 st. of 7 l. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 411.

Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 236, calls it "the true confessional hymn of the Reformation, or, as Albert Knapp puts it, 'the poetical counterpart of Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans.'" He relates many instances of the effects it produced. It is a Scriptural ballad, setting forth, in what was, for the time, excellent verse, the characteristic teachings of the German Reformers; and is indeed of considerable historical importance. But for present day use it is too long, somewhat harsh in style, and too much a compend of doctrinal theology.

The only version we have found in English C. U. is:—

To us salvation now is come. In full by Dr. H. Mills, in his Horae Germanicæ, 1845, p. 44 (1856, p. 60). His trs. of st. i., ii., v., xiii., were repeated, with alterations, in the Amer. Luth.

Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850, No. 842, and the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are :—

(1) "Now is our health come from above." By Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 552). (2) "Our whole Salvation doth depend." By J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 23 (1732, p. 101). Repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1849, No. 19). (3) "Now comes salvation from above." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 79. (4) "Salvation hath come down to us." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 123.

ii. In Gott gelaub ich, dass er hat aus nicht. The Apostles' Creed. This is a free version, in 9 st. of 19 l. 1st pub. in the Etlisch cristlich liden, 1524. Repeated in the Erfurt Enchiridion, 1524; and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 33. It was included in V. Babst's G. B., 1545, and many others, but on account of its length and its unusual metre it has not found a place in recent hymnals. It is tr. as "In God I trust, for so I must." By Bp. Coverdale, 1539. (Remains, 1846, p. 547.) [J. M.]

Spirit Divine, attend our prayer. A. Reed. [Whitsuntide.] This hymn appeared, unsigned, in 7 st. of 4 l., in the Evangelical Magazine for June 1829, with the heading, "Hymn to the Spirit. Sung on the late Day appointed for solemn Prayer and Humiliation in the Eastern District of the Metropolis." From the April number of the same magazine we find that the "Day appointed for Solemn Prayer," &c., was the Good Friday of that year, and that it was "cordially recommended . . . as a day of humiliation and prayer, with a view to promote, by the divine blessing, a revival of religion in the British churches," by the Board of Congregational Ministers, resident in and about London, whose recommendation is dated "Tuesday, Feb. 10, 1829." The hymn was republished in Dr. Reed's Hymn Book, 1842; and again, in the Wycliffe Chapel Suppl., 1872. It is the most widely known of Dr. Reed's hymns, and is in extensive use. It is one of his best productions. [J. J.]

Spirit, leave thine house of clay. J. Montgomery. [Death and Burial.] This, in its original form, is a poem in 14 st. of 4 l. It was printed in Montgomery's Iris newspaper, July 14, 1803, and repeated in his Wanderer of Switzerland, and other Poems, in 1806, and again in his P. Works in 1823 and 1841. Its origin is explained in its title, which reads:—

"Verses to the Memory of the late Joseph Browne, of Lothersdale, one of the People called Quakers, Who suffered a long Confinement in the Castle of York, and Loss of all his worldly Property, for Conscience Sake."

To adapt the poem for congregational use st. i.-iv., xiii., and xiv., were slightly altered, and given in Collyer's Coll., 1812. This form was repeated in J. Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836; the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and others, as "Spirit, leave thy house of clay." [J. J.]

Spirit of God, that moved of old. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared in the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, No. 70, in 4 st. of 4 l. In Mrs. Alexander's Hys. Descriptive and Devotional, 1858, No. 15, it was republished in 5 st. of 4 l., the new stanza, the third, being "Unseal the well within our hearts." The 1852 text is that usually given in modern hymn-books. In Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, No. 95 is an altered form of st. ii.-iv. of the 1852 text, and begins, "Thou Power and Peace! in Whom we find." [J. J.]

Spirit of holiness, look down. W. H. Bathurst. [Divine Grace desired.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1831, No. 59, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "For healing and strengthening Grace." The hymn, "Lord, let Thy saving mercy heal," in the American Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882, is a cento from this hymn (st. iii., ii., iv.). [J. J.]

Spirit of life, Thine influence shed. W. H. Bathurst. [Whitsuntide.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1831, No. 56, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Spiritual Strength and Wisdom desired." In modern hymnals st. v. is usually omitted, as in the New Cong., 1859. [J. J.]

Spirit of mercy, truth, and love. [Whitsuntide.] The earliest date to which this hymn has been traced is 1774, when it appeared in the Collection published for use in the Foundling Hospital, London, where it is given as follows:—

- "Spirit of mercy, truth, and love!
Shed Thy sweet influence from above,
And still from age to age convey
The wonders of this sacred day.
- "In ev'ry clime, by ev'ry tongue,
Be God's amazing glory sung;
Through all the list'ning earth be taught
The acts our ris'n Redeemer wrought.
- "Unfailing Comfort! Heav'nly Guide!
Still o'er Thy favour'd church preside;
Still may mankind Thy blessings prove,
Spirit of mercy, truth, and love."

From the Foundling Collection it passed into those of Cotterill, Bickersteth, Elliott, Hall, and other compilers, both old and new. Several, who copied from R. W. Kyle's Collection, 1846, have attributed it to him. It was in print, however, before Kyle was born. Some of the slight changes in the text found in modern hymnals are from Cotterill's Sel., 1819. In the Anglican H. Bk., 1868, it is altered to "Blest Source of mercy, truth, and love." [J. J.]

Spirit of Truth! on this Thy day. Bp. R. Heber. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 82, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is in several modern hymn-books in G. Britain and America, and usually in an abbreviated form. For the date 1812, sometimes assigned to it, we have no evidence. [J. J.]

Spirit of Truth, Thy grace impart. [Whitsuntide.] This cento was given in the 1863 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., No. 236, as follows:—

1. "Spirit of Truth, Thy grace impart,
To guide our doubtful way;
Thy beams shall scatter every cloud,
And make a glorious day."

This is an altered form of st. v. of J. Needham's "Thy influence, mighty God, impart," from his Hymns, &c., 1768, p. 163.

2. "Light in Thy light, O may we see,
Thy grace and mercy prove,
Revived and cheered and blest by Thee
Spirit of peace and love."

This is ll. 5-8 of C. Wesley's "Eternal Sun of Righteousness," from his Short Hys., &c., 1762, No. 201.

3. "'Tis Thine to soothe the sorrowing mind,
With guilt and fear oppress'd;
'Tis Thine to bid the dying live,
And give the weary rest."

This is an altered form of st. ii. of J. Hart's "Bless'd Spirit of truth, eternal God," from his Hys., &c., 1759, No. 5, slightly varied from T. Cotterill's Sel., 1810, No. 66, "Eternal Spirit, Source of Truth."

4. "Subdue the power of every sin,
Whate'er that sin may be,
That we, in singleness of heart,
May worship only Thee."

Also from T. Cotterill's Sel., 1810, No. 66, as above.

In Thring's Coll., 1882, this text is repeated, together with a doxology from Tate & Brady with l. 2 borrowed from C. Wesley. [J. J.]

Spitta, Carl Johann Philipp, D.D., was b. Aug. 1, 1801, at Hannover, where his father, Lebrecht Wilhelm Gottfried Spitta,* was then living, as bookkeeper and teacher of the French language. In his eleventh year Spitta fell into a severe illness, which lasted for four years, and so threw him back that his mother (the father d. in 1805) abandoned the idea of a professional career, and apprenticed him to a watchmaker. This occupation did not prove at all congenial to him, but he would not confess his dislike, and his family were ignorant of it till an old friend, who was trying to comfort him after the death of a younger brother, discovered his true feelings. The younger brother had been preparing for ordination, and so Carl was now invited by the family to adopt this career. He joyfully accepted the offer, left the workshop in the autumn of 1818, and succeeded, by dint of hard study during the winter, in gaining admission to the highest class in the Gymnasium (Lyceum) at Hannover, which he entered at Easter, 1819. He was thus able, at Easter, 1821, to proceed to the University of Göttingen, where he completed his theological course, under professors of pronounced Rationalistic opinions, at Easter, 1824 (D.D. from Göttingen, 1855). He then became, in the beginning of May, a tutor in the family of Judge (Oberamtmann) Jochmus, at Lüne, near Lüneburg. Here he remained till his ordination on Dec. 10, 1828, as assistant pastor at Sudwalde, near Hoya. In Nov., 1830, he became assistant chaplain to the garrison and to the prison at Hameln on the Weser, and would have succeeded as permanent chaplain there, in the beginning of 1837, had not the military authorities, alarmed by reports which described him as a Pietist and a Mystic, refused to sanction the arrangement. As a compensation, he was appointed pastor at Wechold, near Hoya, in Oct., 1837, and married just before settling there. On his birthday, Aug. 1, 1847, he was instituted as Lutheran superintendent at Wittingen; in Oct., 1853, at Peine; and in July, 1859, at Burgdorf—all his appointments having been in the kingdom of Hannover. A few weeks after removing to Burgdorf he was seized with gastric fever, but had apparently recovered, when, on Sept. 28, 1859, while sitting at his writing table, he was seized with cramp of the heart, and died in a quarter of an hour. (Karl Johann Philipp Spitta, Ein Lebensbild von Dr. Theol. K. K. Münkkel, Leipzig, 1861; Koch, vii, 232; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xiv., 539, &c.)

* A native of Brunswick, and descended from a Huguenot family named de l'Hôpital, who had settled in Brunswick after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The French name was exchanged for the German equivalent, i.e. Spital or Spittel, and this was modified into Spitta.

Spitta had begun to write in verse when he was eight years old, along with his brother Heinrich (see No. xlv. below). During his university course he continued to write songs and secular poems, and pub. a collection of songs anonymously as Sangbüchlein der Liebe für Handwerksleute. At Göttingen he formed a life-long friendship with Adolf Peters, afterwards professor in the St. Afra Gymnasium (Fürstenschule) at Meissen, in Saxony. He was also on intimate terms with Heinrich Heine, who was a fellow member with them of the Burschenschaft, or student's patriotic union (see K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 181, p. 259); and this friendship continued till Heine, while visiting him at Lüne, so jested at things sacred, even in the presence of Spitta's pupils, that their friendship came to an end. After the spiritual change, which began about the end of his university course, Spitta ceased to write secular pieces. His hymn-writing proper seems to have begun in 1821. In writing to a friend on May 5, 1826, he says, "In the manner in which I formerly sang I sing no more. To the Lord I consecrate my life and my love, and likewise my song. His love is the one great theme of all my songs: to praise and exalt it worthily is the desire of the Christian singer. He gave to me song and melody; I give it back to Him." The most fruitful period of his hymn-writing was at Lüne, where many of his most popular hymns were composed in the quiet evenings, in his own room, often after fasting, and when, sitting at the piano or at his harp, he had tuned his spirit to song. Many others were inspired by the beautiful scenery of the valley of the Weser, and by the intercourse with friends during his residence at Hameln. In his later years his ecclesiastical duties absorbed his attention, and hardly any of his hymns were written after 1847. A number of them were first printed in the Christliche Monatschrift zur häuslichen Erbauung für alle Stände, which appeared from Jan. to June, 1826, and was edited by Spitta and by Pastor Deichmann, of Lüneburg. Seminarlehrer W. Bode of Lüneburg has recently found a copy of the Christliche Monatschrift in the Town Library at Lüneburg. This contains ten hymns, viz.: 1. "Wir leiden Angst wir leiden Noth." 2. "Ja, or hat dich stets geliebet." 3. "Wie selig ist ein Herz das Jesum funden." 4. "Wir irrten wie zerstreut und ohne Leiter." 5. "Wort des Lebens, lautre Quelle." 6. "Es hält die Hand jetzt fest am Pfing." 7. "Selig, wer ins Reich der Gnade." 8. "Hinzu, O Christ, zur offenen Quelle." 9. "In der Angst der Welt will ich nicht klagen." 10. "O Jesu meine Wonne, Die alle Noth." Of these Nos. 1, 2 appeared in January; No. 3 in March; Nos. 5, 6 in April; Nos. 7, 8, 9 in May; and No. 10 in June. They are probably all by Spitta (p. 838, ii.), but only Nos. 5, 9, 10 are included in the Psalter und Harfe. No. 10 being given as "O Jesu meine Sonne."

The first separate collection was the result of a selection and arrangement made by himself and Adolf Peters, and appeared at Pirna, in 1833, with the title, Psalter und Harfe. Eine Sammlung christlicher Lieder zur häuslichen Erbauung. This contained 61 hymns. In the 2nd pub. ed., at Leipzig in 1834, five were added, viz.—(1) "Der Mensch hat bange Stunden." (2) "Ein lieblich Loos ist uns gefallen." (3) "O dass mein Leben deine Rechte." (4) "Was macht ihr, dass ihr weinet." (5) "Wohl uns, der Vater hat uns lieb." This work attained an unexampled popularity, and, year after year, editions followed (all reprints of the 2nd ed.), the 55th ed. being pub. at Bremen in 1889. The success of this first series led Spitta to pub. a second series, consisting of 40 hymns, and entitled: Psalter und Harfe. Zweite Sammlung, &c., Leipzig, 1843. This reached a 2nd ed. at Leipzig in 1843, and a 42nd at Bremen in 1887. After Spitta's death, his widow handed over to Professor Peters (see above) a considerable number of pieces from her husband's unpublished papers, to which Peters added others in his own possession, and pub. them as Spitta's Nachgelassene geistliche Lieder, &c., at Leipzig, 1861. One of these pieces, hardly to be called a hymn, dates from 1822, the rest of the 112 were written in the years of Spitta's early manhood (from 1825 on), a fact which rather suggests that neither Peters in 1833, nor Spitta himself in 1843, ranked them among his happiest efforts. The circulation of this work has been comparatively limited (5th ed., Bremen, 1883), and hardly any of the hymns it contains have passed into the Church hymn-books in Germany, or even into collections of German sacred poetry. It is by his Psalter und Harfe that Spitta is known and loved.

Various causes doubtless contributed to the popularity of Spitta's Psalter und Harfe. The hymns therein are, as a rule, of moderate length, are clear and simple in style, refined in diction, sweet, flowing and melodious. Their quiet beauty, their tone of earnest, sincere, and childlike piety, of glowing devotion to the Saviour, and of calm resting on, what to Spitta were, the eternal verities, endeared them to all ranks and classes. They form a faithful mirror of his inner life and Christian experience. They at once met and ministered to the revival of Evangelical religion in Germany, and thus enjoyed somewhat of the same good fortune and popularity which the renewed churchly life in England brought to Keble's Christian Year. As the title adopted shows Spitta meant them for family and private use, and for this they are best fitted, being, for the most part, subjective and individual. They speedily, however, passed into the German hymnbooks for church use, both at home and abroad, and translations of them are found in almost all recent English and American collections. An excellent version of both parts has been made by Mr. Richard Massie, and pub. as Lyra Domestica, 1st ser., London, 1860; 2nd ser., London, 1864. A glance at the lists below will show their popularity with translators. If (as already said at p. 627, ii.) Albert Knapp ranks higher than Spitta, both as a poet and as a writer of hymns for church use, yet Spitta at least caught the popular ear as Knapp never did, and is much more fully represented in the English and American hymnals.

Another element of Spitta's popularity in Germany has been contributed by the very numerous musical settings which have appeared to his hymns. Koch, vii., 246, gives a list of the more important of the collective editions, but, besides these, many of the separate pieces have been set to music by various composers, the "Angel of Patience" (see p. 355, i.) being one of the greatest favourites (see also Dr. J. K. Schauer's Geschichte der biblischkirchlichen Dicht- und Tonkunst, 1850, p. 149).

A number of Spitta's hymns are annotated under their original first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). Of the rest we may note here the following:—

The trs. are: (1) "Word of Life! unsullied fountain." By the Hon. S. R. Maxwell in his Sacred Poems, 1857, p. 99. (2) "Thou word of Life, unsullied spring!" By Miss Fry, 1859, p. 81. (3) "Word of Life, eternal Fountain." By R. Massie, 1860, p. 83. (4) "Word of Life, thou fountain bright." In L. C. Biggs's English Hymnology, 1873, p. 114.

The whole of the remaining hymns in the Psalter und Harfe, 1833 and 1843, have been tr. by R. Massie, in his Lyra Domestica, vol. i. 1860, ii. 1864; and versions of many of them are included in Miss Fry's Echoes of Eternity, 1859; Miss Manington's Footprints of the Holy Dead, 1863; and Lady Durand's Imitations from the German of Spitta and Tersteegen, 1873. To annotate them in full would exceed the limits of our space.

II. From his Nachgelassene geistliche Lieder. Leipzig, 1861.

Hardly any of these have come into use in Germany; and they have either remained unknown to or have been almost entirely ignored by translators into English. We need only note two, viz. :—

xlvii. Die erste Ruhestätte die die Welt. Christmas. 1st pub. at Leipzig, 1861, p. 154, in 3 st. of 5 l., ■ No. 4 of the Hymns for Christmas. It is tr. as "The cradle which the world has drest." In the Family Treasury, 1865, p. 251, and signed "X. X."

xlviii. O Herbst, du Abendstunde. Autumn. 1st pub. at Leipzig, 1861, p. 181, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is tr. as "O autumn, fair pensive evening." By Miss Borthwick, in the Family Treasury, 1864, p. 191, dated September 1864, and included in her Thoughtful Hours, 1867, p. 181. [J. M.]

Splendor paternae gloriae. St. Ambrose. [Morning.] A beautiful morning hymn, to the Holy Trinity, but especially to Christ as the Light of the World, and a prayer for help and guidance throughout the day. It is the companion and sequel to the "Aeternae rerum Conditor" (p. 26, i.), and, like it, is almost indisputably by St. Ambrose. It has been ascribed to him by Fulgentius, Bp. of Ruspe, in North Africa (d. 533); by Bede (d. 735), in his De arte metrica; and by Hincmar, in his De una et non trina Deitate, 857. It is one of the twelve hymns which the Benedictine editors of St. Ambrose receive as genuine; and is included by Biraghi as one of the Inni sinceri e Carmi di Sant' Ambrogio, Milan, 1862. It is mentioned in the Rule of Aurelianus, Bp. of Arles (d. 555).

It is found in a ms., circa 700, in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. A., i., f. 152); in ■ ms., circa 890, in the Bodleian (Junius 25, f. 123 b); in four mss. of the 11th cent., in the British Museum (Vesp. D., xii., f. 12 b; Jul. A., vi., f. 24; Harl., 2961, f. 221 b; Add. 30,848, f. 75); in a ms. of the 11th cent., at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 232); in the St. Gall mss., 387, 413, of the 11th cent.; and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B., iii., 32, f. 5 b). Most of the mediæval Breviaries include it, e.g., the Ambrosian of 1539, Mozarabic of 1502, Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, &c. Its use was generally for Matins or Lauds on Monday, though some of the Monastic orders (e.g., the Benedictines and Carthusians) used it daily. It is printed by Daniel, i., No. 17, and iv., p. 20, from ■ Rheinau ms. of the 9th cent., a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent., &c.; by Mone, No. 272, from a Trier ms. of the 8th cent., a Trier ms. of the 9th cent., &c.; by Dreves, in his Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 29, from a ms. of the 10th cent. Also in Wackernagel, i., No. 4; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 11; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and others. The text, with a full commentary, will also be found in the Abbé S. G. Pimont's Hymnes du Breviaire Romain, vol. i., 1874, p. 139; and in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, 1881, p. 195. [J. M.]

Spurgeon, Charles Haddon, the world-famous preacher, was b. June 19, 1834, at Kelvedon, in Essex, where his father was Congregational minister. He was educated at Colchester, and at an Agricultural College at Maidstone, after which he was for a few years usher in schools at Newmarket and Cambridge. In 1851 he became minister of a small Baptist church at Waterbeach, near Cambridge, and soon attained great popularity. In 1854 he removed to New Park Street, London, the place where Drs. Gill and Rippon had formerly ministered, and ere long the thronging of people to hear him led, first, to the temporary occupation of Exeter Hall, and of the Surrey Music Hall, and then to the erection of the great Metropolitan Tabernacle, where he still ministers. Mr. Spurgeon is chiefly known as a preacher and as the author of many vols. of sermons, expositions, and other homiletical literature; but he is also a hymn writer, and the compiler of a well-known hymn book. This book was prepared, in 1866, primarily for the use of the congregation at the Tabernacle. Hence its title Our Own Hymnbook, a collection of Ps. & Hys. for public, social, and private worship. It contains 220 versions of the Psalms, and 910 hymns. Of Mr. Spurgeon's contributions noted below, only one, "Sweetly the holy hymn," can be regarded as possessing any particular merit. The others do not rise above respectable mediocrity. His psalm-versions and hymns, all dated 1866, are:—

1. Amidst us Our beloved stands. Holy Communion.
2. Behold, O Lord, my days are made. Ps. xxxix.
3. Blessed is the man that feareth. Ps. cxvi.
4. Here, O ye faithful, see. Holy Baptism.
5. I will exalt Thee, Lord of hosts. Ps. xxx.
6. Jesus, poorest of the poor. Ps. xli.
7. Lord, I would dwell with Thee. Ps. xv.
8. Lord, make my conversation chaste. Ps. lxxviii.
9. Lord, Thy church without a pastor. Election of a Minister.
10. Make haste, O Lord, my soul to bless. Ps. lxx.
11. O God, be Thou no longer still. Ps. lxxviii.
12. O God, Thou hast cast off Thy saints. Ps. lx.
13. Our ears have heard, O glorious God. Ps. xliii.
14. Praise the Lord with exultation, My whole heart, &c. Ps. cxv.
15. Risen Lord, Thou hast received. Election of a Minister.
16. Sweetly the holy hymn. Prayer Meetings.
17. The foes of Zion quake for fright. Ps. lxxi.
18. The Holy Ghost is here. Prayer.
19. The Kings of earth are in the hands. Ps. lxxvii.
20. Thy strength, O Lord, makes glad our King. Ps. xxi.

In addition to these Mr. Spurgeon re-wrote or added to the hymns of others, as "Come ye who bow to sovereign grace"; "Great King of Zion, now"; "O God, before whose radiant throne"; and "Woe's me that I in Mesecch am"; and composed two Graces for before, and two for after Meat. [W. R. S.]

Stabat mater dolorosa. Pope Innocent III.? [Passiontide] This noble poem (used both as a sequence and as a hymn) has been, not unjustly, styled the most pathetic hymn of the Middle Ages. The vividness with which it pictures the weeping Mother at the Cross, its tenderness, its beauty of rhythm, its melodious double rhymes almost defying reproduction in another language, and its impressiveness when sung either to the fine plain-song melody or in the noble compositions which many of the great masters of music have set to it, go far to justify the place it holds, and has long held, in the Roman Catholic Church. It was not indeed officially sanctioned for general use, or regularly incorporated in the Roman Breviary or Missal, till by decree of Pope Benedict XIII., in 1727; but long before that date it was in popular use, especially after the Flagellants in the 14th cent. had brought it into notice by singing it on their way from town to town. The passages of Holy Scripture on which it is based are St. John xix. 25; St. Luke ii. 35; Zech. xiii. 6; 2 Cor. iv. 10; and Gal. vi. 17.

Concerning the authorship of this poem there has been, and still is, a great amount of uncertainty. It has been ascribed to Pope Gregory the Great (d. 604), to St. Bernard of Clairvaux (d. 1153), to Pope Innocent III. (d. 1216), to St. Bonaventura (d. 1274), to Jacobus de Benedictis (d. 1306), to Pope John XXII. (d. 1334), to Pope Gregory XI. (d. 1378), &c. The verse-form is, however, not earlier than about 1150, while Daniel, ii. p. 140, cites it as in a ms. not later than 1360. The only ascriptions which bear any impress of probability are those to Pope Innocent III. and to Jacobus de Benedictis.

For Pope Innocent III. there is, it must be confessed, little positive evidence. Pope Benedict XIV. (d. 1758), who had made Hymnology a special study, in his De festis Domini nostri Jesu Christi, Padua, 1758, ascribes it to Pope Innocent III. So does F. E. von Hurter, in his Geschichte Papst Innocenz des dritten, Hamburg, 1834-42. So also does Mone in the notes to his No. 446. Certainly Pope Innocent III. had quite sufficient ability to have written such a masterpiece, and the ascription is strengthened by the fact that to him has been attributed, with great probability, another masterpiece of Latin sacred poetry, viz. the "Veni Sancte Spiritus Et emitte" (q. v.).

For Jacobus de Benedictis (Jacopone) the evidence at first sight seems more probable. In the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris there is a ms. of the beginning of the 15th cent., which formerly was catalogued as No. 7783, but now bears the press-mark "Fonds italien, No. 559." From a collation kindly sent by M. Leopold Delisle, the Principal Librarian, it appears that the title of this ms. is "Incipiunt laudes quae fecit sanctus frater Jacobus de Tuderto, ordinis fratrum minorum," &c. Besides poems in Italian this ms. has the following in Latin:—

- | | |
|--------------------------------|-----------|
| i. Jesus dulcis memoria. | f. 106. |
| ii. Verbum caro factum est. | f. 107. |
| iii. Crux de te volo conquere. | f. 108. |
| iv. Cur mundus militat. | f. 108 b. |
| v. Ave regis angelorum. | f. 109. |
| vi. Stabat mater speciosa. | f. 109 b. |
| vii. Stabat mater dolorosa. | f. 111. |

The whole of these, save No. 1, are also included in the Laude of Jacopone, pub. at Brescia in 1495. But No. i. is certainly not by Jacopone (see p. 585, ii.) No. ii. is also certainly not by him (see "Verbum caro"). His claim to No. iv. is also exceedingly doubtful (see e.g. the Ecclesiologist, July 1888, p. 17). It may be added that no Latin poems are found in the ed. of Jacopone's Laude, pub. at Florence in 1490, nor in the ed. of his Cantici, pub. at Rome in 1556. In the complete edition of his poems, that by the Franciscan, Giovanni Tressati (Venice, 1617), the "Stabat mater dolorosa" is not included. The present writer, in view of all the evidence at his command, has come to the conclusion that it is exceedingly doubtful if Jacopone wrote any Latin hymns; or alternatively that he was merely an alterer or imitator of earlier compositions. It is almost impossible to believe that the person who wrote the "Stabat mater dolorosa" could also have written the "Stabat mater speciosa." This difficulty being felt, it has been sought to meet it by asserting that the dolorosa is by Jacopone, and that the speciosa is by some imitator of his style. To the present writer the contrary supposition is much more probable, viz. that the speciosa is by Jacopone and that the dolorosa is by an earlier writer. Indeed Jacopone does not seem to have been capable of writing such a poem as the "Stabat mater dolorosa." Certain of the expressions in st. vi.-ix. of the dolorosa have been thought to refer to the Stigmatisation of St. Francis of Assisi, the inference drawn being that the hymn was by a Franciscan. This, if true, would make it impossible that at least the current form should be by Pope Innocent III., for he d. in 1216, and the date commonly assigned to the conferring of the Stigmas on St. Francis is Sept. 15, 1224. It is however a little difficult to see how any ordinary person could be supposed truly to pray to be allowed to pass through such an ordeal (see the Roman Breviary under Sept. 15). And in the Vulgate there are various close parallels, e.g. Zech. xiii. 6 ("Et dicitur ei, Quid sunt plagistae in medio manuum tuarum? Et dicit, His plagatus sum in domo eorum qui diligebant me"), which the mediaeval writers referred to the Passion of Our Lord; Gal. vi. 16 ("Ego enim stigmata Domini Jesu in corpore meo porto"), &c. As to the account of Jacopone given by Luke Wadding in his Scriptures ordinis Minorum, Rome, 1650, one must bear in mind that Wadding was an Irish Franciscan, and not unwilling to claim for his Order at least all that was its due. And in fact Wadding's account is much more of the nature of a series of pious imaginations than of a sober record of actual facts.

From the other mss. containing the poem one does not get very much help, for none of those yet described are earlier than the 14th cent. In a ms. circa 1380, or slightly later, and now in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc. 251, f. 242 b), it occurs with the note, "Bonifacius Papa concessit cui libet dicenti hunc planctum beatae Mariae septem annos et quadraginta quatuor dies indulgentiarum." This almost certainly refers to Boniface VIII., Pope from 1294 to 1303, for Boniface IX. did not become Pope till 1389. But if the accounts of the relations between Pope Boniface VIII. and Jacopone are at all trustworthy, it is most improbable that this Pope (who is said to have shut Jacopone up in prison, from which he was only released after the Pope's death in 1303) would have thus honoured the poem had he known that it was by Jacopone; though if he knew that it was by Pope Innocent III. his action would be intelligible enough. In a ms. of the 14th cent. in the Brit. Mus. (Arundel, 214, f. 111) it is headed, "Quincunq. recitaverit hunc planctum beatae virginis Mariae devoto corde consequatur septem annos et XL. karenas indulgentiarum papa Bonifacio." The poem is also in a 15th cent. ms. in the Bodleian (Ashmole 1291, f. 140); in a Horae, circa 1440, in the British Museum (Add. 18192, f. 228 b); in three mss. of the 15th cent. at St. Gall (Nos. 309, 489, 519); in three mss. of the 15th cent. at Einsiedeln (Nos. 98, 764, 765), &c. Mone, No. 446, prints it from a Lichtenenthal, a Reichenau, a Mainz, and a Salzburg ms., all of the 14th cent., and from other sources. Mone thinks that the original form was by Pope Innocent III., and that Jacopone may have made alterations and additions. He says that the text of the Roman Missal, with st. vi.-viii. omitted, would represent μ form suited to the Seven Dolours of the B. V. M., and that this form is found in some mss. But the original form would, he thinks, be represented by six stanzas of the text of the Roman Missal, with slight alterations, and arranged in the order 1, 4, 3, 5, 9, 10. This proposed text is actually printed by Wackernagel, i. No. 214, under the name of Innocent III. (as No. 262 Wackernagel prints the 10 stanza form under the name of Jacopone); but it is purely conjectural, and is not found in any ms. yet described. Daniel, ii. pp. 131, 385, iii. p. 291, v. p. 59, prints the text from a ms. at Munich of circa 1350, and from other sources. Daniel also prints the text given by Georgius Stella (d. 1420) in his Annales Genenses, where Stella speaks of it as being sung by the Flagellants in 1388 [in the chronicle compiled for the magistrates of Lübeck (Detmarsche Chronik) it is also mentioned, under date of 1399, as in use by the Flagellants], and also the text given by Bernardinus de Bustis (d. 1500) in his Rosarium Sermoneum. It may be noted in passing that though Bernardinus was a Franciscan, he evidently had no idea that the "Stabat mater dolorosa" was by Jacopone. The text is also in Kehelein, No. 223; in Büssler, No. 105; in Königsfeld, i. p. 180; in F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 171; in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, &c.

Although, as stated above, this Sequence was brought into notice by the Flagellants, and was well known at least as early as 1390, yet it only very gradually came into use in the services of the Church. It seems to have been added to the Breslau diocesan Missal shortly after 1414, and is found in the printed Breslau Missal of 1483. It is also in the Paris Missal of 1481, and various other Missals of the 15th cent., but was not included in any of the English Missals. (The York Missal has a sequence somewhat resembling it, beginning "Stabat juxta Christi crucem," and this is found in the ms. York Missal, circa 1390, now in the Bodleian, as well as in the printed eds.; the text being also in Wackernagel, i., No. 263, and in Kayser as below.) It was not received into the Roman Missal or Breviary till after 1727, and is there appointed for use in the office of the Seven Dolours of the B. V. M., held on the Friday after Passion Sunday (the office of the Seven Dolours appointed in the Breviary for the 3rd S. in September uses other hymns). In the Roman Breviary it is divided into three parts, viz. st. i.-v. at Vespers; vi., vii. ("Sancta mater, istud agas"), at Matins; and viii.-x. ("Virgo virginum preclara"), at Lauds.

There is quite a literature on the subject of the "Stabat mater dolorosa." The best and most complete summary of it is that by Dr. J. Kayser, in his Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. ii., Paderborn, 1886, pp. 110-192, where the different forms of the text are printed in full, with an elaborate commentary and a full apparatus of various readings. See also Dr. P. Schaff, in Hours at Home, for May 1867.

The "Stabat mater dolorosa" is also worthy of note by reason of the frequency with which it has been set to music by the great composers, such as Palestrina, Pergolesi, Haydn, Rossini, and, more recently, Dvorak. The particulars regarding their printed settings are given at length by C. H. Bitter, in his Studie zum Stabat mater, Leipzig, 1883. See also the Cæcilien Kalender (Regensburg, Pustet), 1883, p. 59; 1886, p. 79; 1888, p. 97.

It is also noteworthy on account of the very numerous translations in which it has passed into various European languages. Dr. F. G. Lisso, in his Stabat Mater, Berlin, 1843, prints 78 versions in German, to which list a good many more might now be added. The list of English trs., as will be seen below, is also large. The fact that so much of the hymn is directly addressed to the B. V. M. has limited its use in hymn-books outside those of the Roman Catholic Church. Perhaps the most skilful attempt to bring the hymn into greater harmony with 1 Tim. ii. 5, is by J. S. B. Monsell, in his Parish Hyl. 1873 (see below). [J. M.]

The trs. of this poem into English are (1) of the full text, as in the Roman Missal and Breviary; and (2) of the stanzas as appointed for Vespers, and are:—

i. Roman Missal and Breviary text.

This text is thus divided:—

Vespers. Stabat Mater dolorosa.

Matins. Sancta Mater istud agas.

Lauds. Virgo virginum preclara.

and is tr. sometimes with these divisions, and again as one hymn, viz.:—

1. At the Cross her station keeping. Vespers.
Holy Mother, pierce me through. Matins.
Virgin of all virgins best. Lauds.

By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 138; and in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 76. Some three or four lines are from Bp. Mant's tr. as below. In these divisions, or as one hymn, this tr. is extensively used in Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools.

2. Lo! her heart with anguish rending. Vespers.
-This, O Holy Jesu, grant me. Matins.
King of saints, all saints out-shining. Lauds.

By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hymn & Tune Bk., 1852-55. The tr. of the Vespers text is also in Rice's Sel. from Blew, 1870, No. 39, altered to—"Stood the woe-worn Mother weeping."

3. At the Cross her station keeping. This, in the Roman Catholic Hys. for the Year, N.D. [1867], is composed of two parts: Pt. i. being E. Caswall's tr. of the Vespers text, as above; and Pt. ii., "Fount of Love and holy sorrow," a tr., probably by Dr. Rawes (the editor), of the rest of the hymn. This combined tr. is also in the Catholic Hyl., N.D. [1860].

4. Plunged in grief the Mother stood. In The Crown of Jesus H. Bk., N.D. [1862]; a tr. of the full text as one hymn.

5. Sorrowful the Mother stood. In Saint Winifred's H. Bk., N.D. [1860]; a tr. of the full text as one hymn.

6. Close beneath the Cross that bore Him. By Francis Trappes, in his Liturgical Hys. for the Chief Festivals of the Year, &c., N.D. [1865]. In full, as one hymn.

7. Stood the mournful Mother weeping. By J. S. B. Monsell, in his Parish Hymnal, 1873; and his Watches by the Cross, 1876. In full, as one hymn.

Other trs. are:—

1. The Mother stood in woful wise. Primer, 1599.
2. The Mother stood with grief confounded. Primer, 1615.
3. The dolorous chast Mother stood. Primer, 1695.
4. Under the World-Redeeming Rood. Primer, 1687 and 1706.
5. Close by the ever-hallow'd cross that bore. D. French, 1839.
6. See the Mother stands deploring. A. D. Wackerbarth, 1842.
7. Bathed in tears, and deeply grieving. W. Palmer, 1845.
8. Tearful stood the Mother lowly. J. R. Beste, 1849.
9. Lo the Mother standeth fearful. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
10. By the Cross sad vigil keeping. Lord Lindsay in Seven Great Hys. of the Church, 1865.
11. Stood th' afflicted Mother weeping. A. Coles, 1867.
12. By His Cross the Mother stood, Hanging on its fatal wood. D. T. Morgan, 1871.
13. How sorrowful the Mother stood. J. Wallace, 1874.
14. By the Cross on which suspended. D. F. MacCarthy, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1834.
15. Weeping sore the Mother stood. J. D. Aylward, in Shipley, as above.
16. By the Cross of expiation. A. de Vere, in Shipley, as above.

ii. The Vespers text. Stabat Mater.

1. By the Cross sad vigil keeping, Stood the Mother, doleful, weeping. By Bp. R. Mant, in the British Magazine, Oct. 1833, p. 397, in 5 st. of 6 l., and signed "Δ." It was repeated in Bp. Mant's Ancient Hys., 1837, p. 54, and 1871, p. 96. The original tr. was given in the People's H., 1867; and, again, with slight alterations, in the Hymnary, 1872, and other collections.

2. By the Cross, sad vigil keeping, Stood the mourning [mournful] Mother weeping. This cento appeared in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, No. 50, in 5 st. of 6 l. Of these 30 lines, 15 are from Mant, 1 from Caswall, and 14 altered from Mant, by the Editors.

3. By the Cross her station keeping. This, in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868; the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875; and Thring's Coll., 1882, is Murray's text; in each case with slightly differing alterations.

4. At the Cross her station keeping. This cento, as given in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, is composed of 2 lines directly from Caswall, 21 lines directly or indirectly from Mant, through Murray, as above, and 7 lines by the compilers. Its proper designation, therefore, is "A cento, based upon Bp. Mant and E. Caswall, from Murray's Hymnal, 1852, somewhat altered." As Caswall's tr. begins with the same opening lines as this cento, it should be noted, to distinguish the two, that st. 5 begins in each thus:

Caswall:—"O thou Mother! fount of love!
Touch my spirit from above."

H. A. & M.:—"Jesu, may her deep devotion, Stir in me the same emotion."

The H. A. & M. cento is found in a few collections; but outside of that work it is not so extensively used as the Murray cento, as above.

5. By the Cross, in anguish sighing. This tr. appeared in the Rugby School Ps. & Hys., 1850 (probably before), No. 62, in 4 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1876, No. 105). It was possibly made by J. H. Buckoll, then Assistant Master in the School, and co-editor of the collection.

6. Near the Cross was Mary, weeping. By J. W. Alexander, in his work, The Breaking Crucible, and Other Translations, 1861; and in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.

7. By the Cross her sad watch keeping. This cento, in Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1864, is composed of st. i.-v., from Bp. Mant, and st. vi., vii., by the Editor.

8. By the Cross sad vigil keeping. This tr., in the Anglican H. Bk., 2nd ed., 1871, is by R. C. Singleton, the Editor, based upon Bp. Mant; and can be distinguished by st. v., which begins, "Fountain of divine affection."

Other trs. are:—

1. Forth pouring many a bitter tear. By "O," in the British Magazine, July 1833.

2. By the Cross in anguish weeping. By G. Rorison, in his Hys. & Anthems, 1851.

In addition to these metrical renderings of the Roman Missal and Breviary text, Mrs. Charles has, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 208, a prose tr. beginning, "The mournful mother stood tearful beside the Cross." There are also two or three metrical renderings by American writers, which we have been unable to verify. [J. J.]

Stabat mater speciosa. Jacobus de Benedictis.? [Christmas.] As mentioned in the note above, this sequence is found in a 15th cent. ms. in the Bibliotheque Nationale at Paris (formerly No. 7783, now Fonds italien, 559 f. 109 b), and in 13 stanzas. From this ms. it was printed by O. F. Ozanam, in his Poètes Français en Italie au treizième Siècle, 1852 (Œuvres Complètes, Paris, 1855-1865, vol. v. p. 170), and his text is repeated in Königsfeld, ii. p. 242; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 173; and in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. ii., Paderborn, 1886, p. 185. Ozanam thought it had never been printed, but it had appeared in Jacopone's Laude, Brescia, 1495. It has not been found in any other sources earlier than 1500, and for this cause, and for reasons mentioned in the preceding note, the present writer is inclined to think that it may possibly be by Jacopone. It has a certain beauty if looked at by itself. But on comparison with the "Stabat mater dolorosa" it is seen to be a servile and rather tame imitation of that poet, giving, on parallel lines, a picture of the B. V. M., as she may be supposed to have stood joyfully watching beside our Lord's cradle at Bethlehem. It never came into liturgical use. The trs. into English include:—

1. Full of beauty stood the Mother. By J. M. Neale (with the Latin text), in his Stabat mater speciosa, London, n.d. 1866, p. 9. His tr. has been repeated in the St. Margaret's Hymnal (East Grinstead), 1875, in three parts, Pt. i. beginning "Mother, fount of love still flowing," and Pt. iii., "Virgin, peerless of condition."

2. Stands that Mother more than beautiful. An anonymous tr. in the Roman Catholic Parochial H. Bk., n.d. [1880]. [J. M.]

Staffordshire Hymnbooks. In the early part of this century several collections were published in Staffordshire for local use. It will prevent confusion to treat these as a group. The first is:—

A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Public and Private Use. Uttoxeter, Richards, 1805.

This Sel. contains 27 psalms (to which the Old 100th was added in later editions) and 128 hymns, many of which are from Watts, Cowper, and Newton. It was edited by the Rev. Jonathan Stubbs, M.A., sometime Fellow of New College, Oxford, and Curate-in-charge of Uttoxeter from 1804 until his death in 1810. He was assisted in compiling the Coll. by the Rev. T. Cotterill (q.v.), the Rev. Thomas Gisborne, and the Rev. Edward Cooper. Of Gisborne and Cooper we append the following biographical details:—

Gisborne, Thomas, M.A., s. of Mr. John Gisborne, of Yoxall, was b. circa 1760, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he was 5th Wrangler of his year, and Chancellor's Medalist, graduating B.A. in 1780, and M.A. in 1783. Subsequently he became a Prebendary of Durham. He was the author of Sermons; the Duties of Men; the Duties of Women; Poems Sacred and Moral, 1799 (to the later editions of which his hymns were added), 3rd ed. 1803; and of another volume of poetry entitled, Walks in a Forest, 1795. The following hymns by him are found in the Uttoxeter Sel.:—

1. A soldier's course from battles won. Soldiers of Christ. No. 72, in 6 st. of 4 l., and in several hymnbooks.

2. Hark! 'tis the bell with solemn toll. Death. No. 74, in 6 st. of 4 l.

3. O Father, glorify Thy name. In Sickness. No. 92, in 5 st. of 4 l.

4. Saviour! when night involves the skies. Christ All and in All. No. 80, in 4 st. of 4 l.

5. Thy humblest works with full accord. Teachings of Nature. No. 118, in 4 st. of 4 l.

6. When groves by moonlight silence keep. The hour of Peace. No. 116, in 4 st. of 4 l.

All the above hymns, except No. 2, are in Gisborne's Poems, 3rd ed., 1803.

Cooper, Edward, B.A., of Queen's College, and sometime Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, was Rector of Hamstead-Ridware from 1799 to 1833, and of Yoxall, Staffordshire, from 1809 to 1833. He published several volumes of Sermons, and edited a small Coll. of Hymns (see No. 4 below). b. 1770, d. 1833. He contributed to the Uttoxeter Sel.:—

1. Father of heaven, whose love profound. No. 67. (See p. 369, i.)

2. This is the day the Lord hath blest. Sunday. No. 69, in 4 st. of 4 l.

The hymns in the Uttoxeter Sel. which Cotterill is believed to have written or recast are:—

1. Almighty Father, God of grace. For Pardon. No. 64, in 4 st. of 4 l. See p. 52, ii.

2. Bless'd with the presence of their God. See p. 147, i.

3. Jesus, exalted far on high, No. 77. See p. 598, ii.

4. Not unto us, but to Thy name. See p. 811, ii.

5. When the archangel's trump shall sound. "

2. Next in order of time we have the following collection:—

Portions of the Psalms, chiefly selected from the Versions of Merrick & Watts, with Occasional Hymns, adapted to the Service of the Church, for every Sunday in the Year. Uttoxeter, Richards, 1808.

This Coll. contains 174 Portions of Psalms (to which may be added 8 second and third parts not separately indexed), 12 Doxologies, and 33 Hymns (with 9 second or third parts). It repeats E. Cooper's hymn "Father of heaven;" but with the exception of this and a few psalm versions found in all collections, it is wholly different, both as regards contents and plan, from the Uttoxeter Coll. of 1805, with which Mr. Ellerton in his Notes to the fol. ed. of Church Hymns has confounded it, also erroneously assigning the editorship of the latter to E. Cooper, whose own Coll. was not published until 1811 (see iv.). A reference in the Coll. of 1808 to Ashbourne (a parish in Derbyshire on the borders of Staffordshire), and the statement that the music to which five of the hymns were sung was adapted or composed by Edward Simms, then organist of Ashbourne church, indicate that in all probability the Coll. was intended for use in that parish, and it is not unlikely that it was compiled by the Rev. Samuel Shipley, who became Vicar in 1806.

3. The third Sel. in this section is:—

A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Public and Private Use. Newcastle, Staffordshire, 1810.

This Sel. was compiled by the Rev. T. Cotterill, and went through 8 editions. [See Cotterill, T., p. 263, ii.]

4. The fourth Sel. is:—

A Selection of Psalms and Hymns. Lichfield, Lomax, 1811.

This Sel. was made by the Rev. Edward Cooper for use in his churches of Hamstall-Ridware and Yoxall. A 2nd edition appeared in 1823. It is a small book, containing only Ken's Morning Hymn, 26 Psalms, and 19 Hymns. Of the latter, "Father of heaven, whose love profound" and "This is the day the Lord hath blest" are respectively Nos. 3 and 4.

5. The fifth Sel. is:—

A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for public worship. Uttoxeter, Norris & Son, 1843.

6. The Uttoxeter Sel. of 1805 remained in use for many years, and passed through several editions (4th ed. 1814) unaltered, until 1843, when ■ revised ed. was pub. This contains 49 Psalms, 1 Gloria Patri, 94 Hymns, and an Introductory Anthem, 145 pieces in all, of which 106 were taken from the older Sel. About 1854 this revised ed. was in its turn replaced at Uttoxeter by A Church Hymnbook for every Sunday and Holyday. London, Masters. One of the hymns (No. 126) in the Uttoxeter Sel. of 1805, "When heaves with sighs my anxious breast," in 5 st. of 4 l., is by the Rev. Humphrey Price, Curate and afterwards (1819-53) Incumbent of Christ Church, Needwood, but it does not appear that he had any further part in compiling the Sel. This hymn was included afterwards in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist.

7. As connected with Staffordshire, though not as compilers of Hymnals for local use, two hymn-writers may be named here, the Rev. John Wakefield and Lady Lucy Whitmore.

Wakefield, John, M.A., s. of Mr. Thomas Wakefield, was b. at Uttoxeter, Jan. 17, 1798; educated at St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. 1824, M.A. 1827. Took Holy Orders in 1824, and after holding curacies at St. Alkmund's and All Saints, Derby, became Rector of Hughley, Shropshire, in 1851. He compiled A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, chiefly designed for Public Worship. Belper, J. Mason, 1825, containing 100 Psalms and 210 Hymns; and in 1831 printed privately a small vol. of 24 original hymns entitled Hymns and Spiritual Songs, recreations in age and seclusion of a Rural Pastor. W. Lawley, printer, Much Wenlock; and in 1858, an Appendix thereto of 8 hymns.

Whitmore, Lady Lucy Elizabeth Georgiana, was the only dau. of Orlando, 2nd Baron and 1st Earl of Bradford, b. Jan. 22, 1792, married in 1810 to Mr. William Wolryche Whitmore, of Dudmaston, Shropshire, and d. Mar. 17, 1840. She published, "Family Prayers for Every Day in the Week," &c., 1824, containing 14 original Hymns; 2nd edit. 1827. No. viii. of these hymns, "Father, again in Jesus' name we meet" (p. 365, ii.) has passed into many collections.

To information furnished by the Rev. J. Wakefield we are indebted for much of the materials employed in this article. [G. A. C.]

Stallybrass, James Steven, fourth s. of the Rev. Edward Stallybrass, of the London Missionary Society, was b. Oct. 3, 1826, at Selenginsk, in the province of Irkutsk, Siberia, where his father was then stationed. He resided for many years in Stoke Newington, London, and d. there Dec. 2, 1888. He was a well known educationist, and tr. from the German a number of scientific and other works. He contributed a large number of trs. from German hymns and poems to the various publications of Mr. Curwen, e. g. to the Songs and Tunes for Education, 1861; the Tonic Sol fa Reporter, &c. In 1859 he contributed trs. of 4 German hymns to Mr. Curwen's Sabbath H. Bk. (Nos. 234, 417, 418, 420). To Mr. Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., 1862, he also contributed:—

1. Who through Heaven is guiding. God the Child's Guide. This was originally pub. in 5 st. of 5 l., as No. 117 in Songs and Tunes, 1861, and marked as a tr., but Mr. Stallybrass in 1881 could not remember from what. It has since been included in the Congregational Bk. of Praise for Children, 1881.

2. High heaven! my home and fatherland. Heaven Anticipated. 1st pub. in 4 st. of 4 l., as No. 195, in Songs and Tunes, 1861, and marked as a tr., but Mr. Stallybrass in 1881 regarded it as an original composition.

For Mr. Stallybrass's trs. from the German noted in this Dictionary see Index of Authors and Translators. [J. M.]

Stammers, Joseph, was b. at Bury St. Edmunds in 1801, and educated for the legal profession. After practising in London as a solicitor for some time he was called to the Bar in 1833, and joined the Northern Circuit. (Lyra Brit., 1868.) He d. in London, May 18, 1885. His popular hymn—

Breast the wave, Christian (Perseverance) was contributed to the Cottage Magazine (a small serial edited by the Rev. John Buckworth, late Vicar of Dewsbury) in 1830. It has passed into several collections, including the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; the People's Hyl., 1867 (altered), and others.

Mr. Stammers also contributed 4 hymns to Dr. Rogers's Lyra Brit., 1868, but these have not come into C. U. [J. J.]

Stand, soldier of the Cross. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Adult Baptism.] Written for the 1st ed. of his Hymnal Comp. 1870, No. 291, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was also given in his Two Brothers, &c., 1871, p. 238. On its adoption by the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, st. ii., iii., were slightly altered by the author. [J. J.]

Stand the omnipotent decree. C. Wesley. [Trust and Confidence in God.] This is No. 16 of 17 hymns pub. in 1756, as Hys. for the Year, 1756, Particularly for the Fast-day, Feb. 6, in 4 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. p. 94). This Fast was held as a day of humiliation arising mainly out of a dread of an invasion by the French. Miss Steele's hymn "See gracious God, before Thy throne" (p. 1037, ii.), was also written for the same occasion. C. Wesley's hymn was republished, without alteration, in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 60, and has since passed into a large number of collections in most English-speaking countries. It has received great praise at the hands of many writers. J. Montgomery in the preface to his Christian Psalmist, 1825, p. xxiv. says:—

"The hymn on the Day of Judgment, 'Stand the Omnipotent decree' begins with a note, abrupt and awakening like the sound of the last trumpet. This is altogether one of the most daring and victorious flights of our author. Such pieces prove that if Charles Wesley's hymns are less varied than might have been desired for general purposes, it was from choice and predilection to certain views of the Gospel in its effects upon human minds, and not from want of diversity of gifts."

This was written by Montgomery in ignorance of the fact that the hymn was directly associated with Young's Night Thoughts. In his private copy of his Christian Psalmist, 1825 (in our possession) he has written in pencil on the margin opposite the above quotation "a paraphrase from Dr. Young's Night Thoughts." Jackson in his concluding chapter of the Memoirs of C. Wesley quotes this hymn as one of "two examples of the manner in which C. Wesley occasionally availed himself of the writings of other men." He says (small ed., 1848, p. 488):—

"The just and striking sentiments contained in the Night Thoughts, often proposed with great abruptness and force, were exactly suited to Mr. Charles Wesley's peculiar temper and mental habits. He therefore esteemed this book next to the holy Scriptures. Yet could he when occasion served surpass Young himself in living energy both of thought and expression, as the following example demonstrates. The author of the Night Thoughts [Night vi. The Infidel Reclaimed, pt. i.] exclaims:—

'O man immortal! Hear the lofty style.
If so decreed, th' Almighty Will be done.
Let earth dissolve, yon pond'rous orbs descend,
And grind us into dust! The soul is safe;
The man emerges; mounts above the wreck,
As tow'ring flame from Nature's funeral pyre;
O'er devastation, as a gainer, smiles;
His charter, his inviolable rights,
Well pleas'd to learn from Thunders impotence,
Death's pointless darts, and Hell's defeated storms.'

"Mr. Charles Wesley, taking up the theme, thus sings in still loftier strains, and with a greater power of expression:—

'Stand th' Omnipotent decree!
Jehovah's Will be done!
Nature's end we wait to see,
And hear her final groan:
Let earth dissolve, and blend
In death the wicked and the just,
Let those pond'rous orbs descend,
And grind us into dust!
Rests secure the righteous man!
At his Redeemer's beck
Sure to emerge, and rise again,
And mount above the wreck.
Lo! the heavenly spirit towers,
Like flames o'er nature's funeral pyre,
Triumphs in immortal powers,
And claps his wings of fire!'"

Jackson quotes the remaining two verses of Wesley's hymn (see Wes. H. Bk., No. 61), but omits to point out that there is nothing corresponding thereto in the Night Thoughts, and that they are strictly Wesley's original composition. Young began his Night Thoughts after the death of his wife and daughter in 1744, and the Preface to pt. ii. of "The Infidel Reclaimed," which begins a few lines after those quoted above, is dated "July 7, 1744." This would give the date of his lines as quoted, circa 1744, C. Wesley's date is 1756. We may add that line 4 in st. iv:—

"Yield we now our bodies up To earthquake, plague, and sword," refers in the earthquake to the great earthquake which demolished the city of Lisbon on Nov. 1, 1755; the plague to the terrible mortality among the cattle which had been prevailing in various parts of England; and the sword to the invasion which was feared from France. These things made the strongest men in the land tremble. [J. J.]

Stand up and bless the Lord. J. Montgomery. [Praise and Thanksgiving.] Written for the Sheffield Red Hill Wesleyan Sunday School Anniversary, held on Mar. 15, 1824; and also used at the Whitsuntide gathering of the Sheffield Wesleyan Sunday School Union, on the Whit-Monday of that year. The opening lines of the original read:—

"Stand up and bless the Lord, Ye children of His choice."

When Montgomery included it in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 558, in 6 st. of 4 l., he altered this opening to:—

"Stand up and bless the Lord, Ye people of His choice:"

and this was repeated in his Original Hys., 1853, No. 86. In J. H. Thom's Hymns, &c., 1858, it begins, "Arise, and bless the Lord:" and in the American Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, "O Thou above all praise" (st. ii. altered). It is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and usually the 1825 text is followed. [J. J.]

Stanley, Arthur Penrhyn, D.D., was b. at Alderley, in Cheshire, Dec. 13, 1815. His father, Edward Stanley, was the s. of Sir Edward Stanley of Alderley, and younger brother of the first Lord Stanley of Alderley, and was rector of the parish until 1837, when he became Bishop of Norwich. His mother, Catherine Stanley, was daughter of the Rev. Oswald Lyecester, Rector of Stoke-upon-Tern, Shropshire. Arthur Stanley received his early education under the superintendence of his father; but in 1829 he was sent to Rugby to be under the direct charge of Dr. Arnold, who had been appointed to the head-mastership the year before, and of whom Mr. Stanley had been an early friend and admirer. Arthur Stanley bore the stamp of Rugby and of its great headmaster to the end of his life. In 1834 he went up to Oxford, having won a Balliol scholarship, the "blue ribbon of undergraduate life," and commenced a career of unusual brilliancy at the University. He gained the Newdigate prize for English Verse (the subject being The Gypsies); the Ireland scholarship (the highest test of Greek scholarship), and a First Class in Classical Honours, all in 1837. He won the Prize for the Latin

Essay in 1839, the Prize for the English Essay, and the Ellerton Prize for the Theological Essay in 1840, and was in the same year elected to a Fellowship at University College. He was then appointed College Tutor, and held that office for twelve years. In 1845-6 he was Select Preacher for the University. From 1850 to 1852 he was Secretary to the Oxford University Commissioners. In 1851 he was appointed Canon of Canterbury, and held that post until 1855, when he was elected Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Oxford, to which a Canonry at Christ Church was attached. He was also chosen in 1858 Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of London, his fellow Rugebeian, Dr. Tait. These offices he held until 1863, when, on the elevation of Dean Trench to the Archbishopric of Dublin, he was appointed to the Deanery of Westminster. In the same year he married Lady Augusta Bruce, a sister of the Earl of Elgin, and a personal friend and attendant of Queen Victoria. This marriage brought him into still closer relation with the Court, at which he had before been so highly valued, that he had been twice chosen to accompany the Prince of Wales in his travels in the East. He was singularly happy in his married life, and felt the death of Lady Augusta, which occurred in 1876, as an irreparable loss. In 1872, he took part in the Old Catholic Congress at Cologne; and at the close of the same year he was again appointed Select Preacher, not, however, without considerable opposition being made to the appointment on account of the Dean's theological views; the vote, however, was carried by 349 against 287. In 1875 he was installed Lord Rector of the University of St. Andrews, having received the degree of LL.D. from that University four years previously. He died at the Deanery, Westminster, on July 18, 1881, after a short illness.

Dr. Stanley was a voluminous and very popular writer, his pure and picturesque style being singularly fascinating. The first work by which he became known to the literary world was the Life and Correspondence of Dr. Arnold, pub. in 1844. This is an almost perfect model of biography. Though the writer is distinctly a hero-worshipper, he never allows his worship to violate the rules of good taste, while he brings out all the points in his hero's character most vividly, and exercises a most wise discretion in permitting him, as far as possible, to tell his own tale. This was followed in 1850 by Memoirs of Edward Stanley, Bishop of Norwich, and Catherine Stanley, which is very interesting both for its intrinsic merits, and also as a pious tribute of filial affection; but it does not reach the level of the Life of Arnold. In 1854 appeared the Epistles to the Corinthians, the value of which will be variously estimated according to the theological standpoint of the reader. But his next two works will command the admiration of all persons who are competent to judge. In his Historical Memorials of Canterbury, pub. in 1854, and Sinai and Palestine in connexion with their History, pub. in 1856, Dr. Stanley was again on his own proper ground where his almost unique powers of description had their full scope. The former was a very popular work, reaching a 6th ed. in 1872; but Sinai and Palestine was still more warmly welcomed, and may be considered, with the Life of Dr. Arnold, as Dr. Stanley's chef-d'œuvre. Passing over for the present his sermons, we next come to his Lectures on the History of the Eastern Church, pub. in 1861; this also was very popular, reaching a 5th ed. in 1869. Then followed a series of Lectures on the History of the Jewish Church, in 2 volumes (1863-5). His next publication again showed him at his best. The Historical Memorials of Westminster Abbey, pub. in 1867, may be regarded as a companion volume to the Historical Memorials of Canterbury, and is, at least, worthy of its predecessor. It is a fortunate circumstance that two of the most interesting places in England should have had for their historian one who, both from his position and his powers, was, of all men, the most fitted to do justice to his subject. Of the rest of Dr. Stanley's prose works it does not seem necessary to do more than specify the titles. They include Lectures on the History of the Church of Scotland, 1865; Essays on Questions connected with Church and State, 1870; a great number of single Addresses, &c., on various subjects, and Christian Institutions, Essays on Ecclesiastical Subjects, pub. not long before his death.

Dr. Stanley attained great eminence as a preacher, especially in his own Abbey. His manner was most solemn and impressive, and his style of composition was exactly suited for a sermon. It is fair to add that sermons would also, of course, be the species of composition in which what many considered the most unsatisfactory features of Dr. Stanley's intellectual character, his vagueness of doctrine and extreme breadth of statement, were most conspicuous. He pub. several volumes of sermons and single sermons. The chief are: Sermons and Essays on the Apostolical Age (1846), Sermons preached in Canterbury Cathedral (1857), Sermons on the Unity of Evangelical and Apostolical Teaching (1859), Sermons in the East preached before the Prince of Wales (1863), Address and Sermons at St. Andrews, 1871.

The point of view from which this sketch naturally regards Dean Stanley as a writer is that from which he appears at the least advantage. Thirteen of his hymns which had been published singly have been incorporated in the Westminster Abbey Hymn Book, but none of them have attained any extensive popularity; and, to tell the truth, they do not deserve it. That exquisite taste and felicity of diction which distinguish more or less all his prose writings seem to desert him when he is writing verse. This is all the more strange because one would have said that he regarded outward nature, as well as the works and history of man, with a poet's eye. Like another great writer, Jeremy Taylor, his prose is poetical, but his poetry is prosaic. The divine afflatus is wanting. Of course he always writes as a scholar; hence his translations are more successful than his original hymns; but in neither department has he produced anything that can at all be termed classical; and it is from his general eminence rather than from his contributions to hymnology that he requires even the small space which has been devoted to him in this article.

[J. H. O.]

In addition to Dean Stanley's trs. from the Latin, and his popular hymns, "He is gone! beyond the skies," and "Master, it is good to be," which are annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary, the following are also in C. U. :—

1. Let us with a glad some mind. National Hymn. The Accession. This hymn is called "Hymn for the Accession (June 20). An Accommodation of Milton's Version of the 136th Psalm," and was pub. in Macmillan's Magazine, June 1873, in 11 st. of 8 l. Lines 3, 4, of st. i. :—

"Long our island throne has stood, Planted on the ocean flood ;"

will distinguish it from Milton's hymn.

2. O frail spirit, vital spark. Easter. Given in Macmillan's Magazine, May 1878, and headed "Our Future Hope." An Easter Hymn. It has been thought that there may be a place for some expressions such as the following hymn or hymns endeavour to embody, of the prospect of another world, more hopeful than the touching address of the Emperor Hadrian to his soul, less vague and material than Pope's graceful version of it in his well-known lines, "Vital spark of heavenly flame." The hymn following this introduction is in two parts :— Part i. "O frail spirit, vital spark," in 6 st. of 8 l., and Pt. ii., "Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings," also in 6 st. of 8 l. Of Pt. ii., st. i., ll. 1-4, are from Robert Seagrave's hymn, noted on p. 964, ii.

3. Spirit unseen, our spirits' home. Whitsuntide.

This hymn was pub. in Macmillan's Magazine, May, 1879, in 7 st. of 8 l., and 1 st. of 9 l.; with the following note:—"Manzoni's Hymn for Whitsuntide. Of all the Sacred Hymns of Manzoni this is the one which breathes the most comprehensive spirit. The first part runs on the more mystical emblems of the Church. But the latter part, which alone is capable of general use, enters into the very heart of the doctrines of the spiritual nature of Christianity, and contains a meaning beyond the original force of the words, which was intended to be confined to the limits of the Roman Church. It is in this wider sense that the following paraphrase has been attempted." Manzoni's poem on Pentecost was pub. circa 1820. (See Italian Hymnody, § 11.)

4. The Lord is come! On Syrian soil. Advent. This hymn appeared in Macmillan's Magazine, Dec. 1872, in 6 st. of 8 l., with the following introduction:—"Hymn for Advent. The accompanying hymn is offered as a sequel to the two which have already appeared in this Magazine, April 1870, [No. June 1862, see p. 500, ii.], on the Ascension, and the Transfiguration [April 1870, see p. 718, i.]. The first four stanzas run parallel to the Gospels of the four Sundays in Advent, and the two last on the Gospels and Epistles for Christmas."

5. When the Paschal evening fell. Holy Communion. This appeared in Macmillan's Magazine, Nov. 1874, in 5 st. of 8 l., 1 st. of 12 l., and 1 st. of 8 l., with this introduction:—"This do in Remembrance of Me. It is intended in the following lines to furnish a sacred hymn founded on the one common idea of commemoration which lies at the basis of all views of the Eucharist, whether material or spiritual, and to express this undoubted intention of the original institution apart from the metaphorical language by which the ordinance is often described."

6. Where is the Christian's Fatherland? The Christian's Fatherland. This poem (it cannot be called a hymn) was given in Macmillan's Magazine, Nov. 1872, in 7 st. of 8 l., with the following introduction:—"The Traveller's Hymn for All Saints' Day. Being an adaptation of Arndt's Poem, 'Was ist des Deutschen Vaterland.'" "

7. Where shall we find the Lord? Epiphany. Given in Macmillan's Magazine, March 1880, in 7 st. of 8 l., and introduced thus:—"The Divine Life. 'Who lived amongst men.' (In the original draft of the Nicean Creed) from the Creed of the Church of Palestine."

8. Where shall we learn to die? Good Friday. This was pub. in Macmillan's Magazine, March 1880, in 7 st. of 8 l., with the simple heading, "The Perfect Death. Disce mori."

9. Who shall be the last great Seer? St. John Baptist. Appeared in Macmillan's Magazine, July 1879, in 4 st. of 8 l., as a "Hymn for St. John the Baptist Day, June 24."

All these hymns were given in full, and without alteration, in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883. Their use is mainly confined to that collection. [J. J.]

Star of morn and even. F. T. Palgrave. [Morning or Evening.] Written in 1862, and given to Sir R. Palmer (Lord Selborne) in ms., and included by him in his Bk. of Praise, 1862, in 4 st. of 6 l. It is also given in the author's Hymns, 1867, p. 7, where it is entitled "The Day Star"; in the Savoy Hymnary, 1882; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. It has been set to special music by Tilleard, Lond., Novello, 1868. [J. J.]

Stars of the morning, so gloriously bright. St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [St. Michael & All Angels.] In the Paracletice there are several Canons of the Bodiless Ones, and all are of an ornate character. In Dr. Neale's Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, these stanzas appeared with the following title and note:—"Stars of the Morning. A cento from the Canon of the 'Bodiless Ones.' Tuesday in the Week of the Fourth Tone." In omitting the opening line of the Greek, Dr. Neale, doubtless, intended it to be understood, that he had followed the spirit rather than the letter of the original. In fact, there is no attempt to reproduce the sequence of thought as set forth in the Canon, although the ornate character of the original is imitated. Since the adoption of Dr. Neale's translation for congregational use, in H. J. Palmer's Suppl. Hymnal, 1866, the People's, 1867, H. A. & M., 1868, and others, it has become most popular, and is found in a large number of hymn-books. The texts in use, however, vary considerably. Dr. Neale's authorized text is in the 3rd ed. of the H. of the E. Church, 1866. The original Greek Canon is found in modern editions of the Octoechus. [J. J.]

Statuta decreto Dei. C. Coffin. [Advent.] Pub. in his Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 35, and also in the Paris Breviary the same year, where it is appointed as the Ferial hymn at Vespers in Advent. It is in several modern French Brevs., in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 38, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. The rolling years at length fulfil. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 42. Generally given in an abbreviated and altered form.

2. Deep hidden by divine decree. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 46. The tr. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 104, "O Lord, the rolling years fulfil," is by the editors based on I. Williams's tr.

3. And now, by God's sure word decreed. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, Advent, No. 7. This is a tr. of st. i., v., vi. The Advent hymn, No. 8, in Blew, is a tr. of the remaining stanzas of this hymn, beginning with st. ii., "Patris nefando crimine," which is rendered as, "While Adam's race sore wounded lay." This is in Lyra Messianica, 1864.

4. The fulness of the time ordained. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hyl., 1856. Based on J. Chandler, as above.

Other trs. are:—

1. The times of old by God decreed. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

2. Sing we now redeeming love. D. T. Morgan. 1880.

3. Predestinate of God most high. By W. M. A. in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884. [J. J.]

Stay, Thou insulted Spirit, stay. C. Wesley. [Lent.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. i., No. 41, in 7 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv., p. 370.) It was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 155, with the omission of st. vi., and the change of st. ii., l. 4, from, "For forty long rebellious years" (the forty referred to his own age at the time), to "For many long," &c. The Wes. H. Bk. form of the text is in most of the Methodist collections, and a few others. Other forms of the text are:—(1) "Stay, injured, grieved, Spirit, stay," in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and later collections; and (2) "Stay, Thou long-suffering Spirit, stay," in the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878. [J. J.]

Steane, Edward, D.D., was b. at Oxford, Mar. 23, 1798, studied at the Baptist College, Bristol, and at Edinburgh University. In 1823 he became pastor of a Baptist church at Camberwell, London, where he laboured with success until his death on May 8, 1882. Dr.

Steele was for many years one of the most eminent ministers of the Baptist denomination. He was one of the founders of the Baptist Union; the Bible Translation Society; and the Evangelical Alliance. He edited Evangelical Christendom; and pub. The Doctrine of Christ developed by the Apostles, in 1872. He was one of the Committee which prepared the Baptist New Selection in 1828. The only hymn known to have been composed by him appeared in that book:—"Prophetic era! blissful day!" (The Triumphs of Christ anticipated). It reappeared in the Selection Enlarged in 1838. [W. R. S.]

Steele, Anne, b. in 1716, was the daughter of Mr. Wm. Steele, a timber merchant, and pastor, without salary, of the Baptist Church at Broughton, in Hampshire. At an early age she showed a taste for literature, and would often entertain her friends by her poetical compositions. But it was not until 1760 that she could be prevailed upon to publish. In that year two vols. appeared under the title of Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, by Theodosia. After her death, which occurred in November, 1778, a new edition was published with an additional volume and a Preface by the Rev. Dr. Caleb Evans, of Bristol (Bristol, 1780). In the three vols. are 144 hymns, 34 Psalms in verse, and about 30 short poems. They have been reprinted in one vol. by D. Sedgwick, 1863. Miss Steele's hymns were first made available for congregational use in 1769, 62 of them being then introduced into the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans, the letter T for "Theodosia" being affixed; 47 were also given in Dr. Rippon's Sel., 1787, and 26 in Dr. W. B. Collyer's Coll., 1812. Among Baptist hymn-writers Miss Steele stands at the head, if we regard either the number of her hymns which have found a place in the hymnals of the last 120 years, or the frequency with which they have been sung. Although few of them can be placed in the first rank of lyrical compositions, they are almost uniformly simple in language, natural and pleasing in imagery, and full of genuine Christian feeling. Miss Steele may not inappropriately be compared with Miss F. R. Havergal, our "Theodosia" of the 19th century. In both there is the same evangelic fervour, in both the same intense personal devotion to the Lord Jesus. But whilst Miss Steele seems to think of Him more frequently as her "bleeding, dying Lord"—dwelling on His sufferings in their physical aspect—Miss Havergal oftener refers to His living help and sympathy, recognizes with gladness His present claims as "Master" and "King," and anticipates almost with ecstasy His second coming. Looking at the whole of Miss Steele's hymns, we find in them a wider range of thought than in Miss Havergal's compositions. She treats of a greater variety of subjects. On the other hand, Miss Havergal, living in this age of missions and general philanthropy, has much more to say concerning Christian work and personal service for Christ and for humanity. Miss Steele suffered from delicacy of health and from a great sorrow, which befell her in the death of her betrothed under peculiarly painful circumstances. In other respects her life was uneventful, and occupied chiefly in the discharge of such domestic and social duties as usually fall to the lot of the eldest daughter of a village pastor. She was buried in Broughton churchyard. [W. R. S.]

A large number of Miss Steele's hymns are in C. U., the larger proportion being in American hymn-books. In addition to "Almighty Maker of my frame," "Far from these narrow scenes of night," "Father of mercies in Thy word," and others annotated under their respective first lines, there are also:—

i. From her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, 1760, vols. i., ii.

Stegmann, Josua, D.D., s. of Ambrosius Stegmann, Lutheran pastor at Sülzfeld, near Meiningen, and finally, in 1593, superintendent at Eckartsberga, near Merseburg, was b. at Sülzfeld, Sept. 14, 1588. He entered the University of Leipzig in 1608, M.A. in 1611, and was for sometime adjunct of the Philosophical Faculty. In 1617 he was appointed Superintendent of the district (Grafschaft) of Schaumburg, and also pastor at Stadthagen, and first professor of the Gymnasium there; and before entering on his duties graduated D.D. at Wittenberg, on Oct. 24, 1617. When the Gymnasium was erected into a university, and transferred (1621) to Rinteln, he became ordinary professor of Theology there. By the outbreak of war he was forced to flee from Rinteln, in 1623. After his return he was appointed, in 1625, Ephorus of the Lutheran clergy of Hesse-Schaumburg. By the Edict of Restitution, promulgated by the emperor on March 6, 1629, he was greatly harassed; for the Benedictine monks, after they had settled in Rinteln, in 1630, claimed to be the rightful professors, and demanded the restoration of the old church lands, and especially the property formerly belonging to the nunnery at Rinteln, but which had been devoted to the payment of the stipends of the Lutheran professors. They sent soldiers into Stegmann's house to demand that he should refund his salary, and on July 13, 1632, compelled him to hold a disputation, at which they annoyed him in every possible way. Soon after he was seized with fever, and d. Aug. 3, 1632. (Koch, iii, 128; Wetzel, iii, 251; Einladungsschrift des Gymnasium Bernhardinum, Meiningen, 1888; ms. from Pastor A. Bicker, Rinteln; Dr. Förstemann, Leipzig), &c.

Stegmann was known as a writer of Latin verse while yet a student at Leipzig, and by his contemporaries was reckoned as a hymn writer. It is, however, very difficult to discriminate his productions. The hymns interspersed in his devotional works are given without any indications of authorship, and many of them are certainly by earlier writers, or recasts founded on earlier hymns. They appeared principally in his (1) Suspiria Temporum. Of this the 3rd ed., Rinteln, 1628, is in the Karlsruhe Library. (2) Erneuerte Herten-Seufftzer, Lüneburg, MCCCXXX (colophon gives the correct date, viz., "Im Jahr 1630"). Of this there is a copy in the University Library at Breslau. In the Blätter für Hymnologie, 1888, p. 162, a list is given of the more important hymns in No. 2, tracing as far as possible those which had previously appeared elsewhere. Two hymns, which are usually ascribed to Stegmann, and are not found earlier than in his works, have passed into English as follows:—

i. Ach bleib mit deiner Gnade. Supplication. Included in 1628, as above, p. 462. In 1630 it is given, at p. 347, in 6 st. of 4 l., as a "Closing Hymn," after the "Prayer for the Preservation of the Doctrine, and of the Church of God." Thence in Mitzell, 1858, No. 337a. In J. Clauder's Psalmodia nova, pt. ii., 1631, p. 266, it is ascribed to Stegmann, and so in later collections. It is a simple and beautiful hymn, and is found in most recent German hymnals, e.g. as No. 208 in the Uuv. L. S., 1851. Lauxmann, in Koch, viii., 146, relates various incidents regarding its use (it was, e.g., a favourite hymn of king Friedrich Wilhelm IV. of Prussia), and thus analyses it:—

"It has in its keynote the saying of the two disciples at Emmaus, 'Abide with us.' St. i. puts this prayer simply before the Lord Jesus; st. ii.-vi. develop it in detail: Abide with us with Thy Word as our Saviour (ii.); with the illumination of Thy Spirit as our ever-guiding Truth (iii.); with Thy blessing as the God rich in power (iv.); with Thy protection as the Conqueror in battle (v.); and with Thy Faithfulness as our Rock in the time of need (vi.)."

The Translations are:—

1. Abide with us, our Saviour. This is a free tr. of st. i.—iii., as No. 51, in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848; and repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868. In Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, tr. of st. iv., vi., were added.

2. O Saviour, go beside us. This is a free tr. of st. i., iv., v., with an original "Shepherd" st., as st. ii., by J. S. Stallybrass, in the Tonic Solfa Reporter, July 1857; and in Curwen's Sabbath H. Bk., 1859, No. 420. Thence in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, No. 116.

3. Abide among — with Thy grace. This is a good and full tr., in C.M., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd ser., 1858, p. 84; and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 14. Included in Allon's Suppl. Hys., 1868, Irish Church Hyl., 1869 and 1873, and others; and in America, in the Cantate Domino, 1859, Boardman's Sel., 1861.

4. Abide with us, Lord Jesus! Thy grace. This is a complete tr., as No. 8 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and marked as a compilation.

5. Come, abide with Thy grace, in our hearts, O Lord. By Dr. R. Maguire, 1872, p. 197.

ii. Wie schön leuchtet der Morgenstern, Vom Firmament des Himmels fern. Morning. Included in 1630, as above, p. 10, in 8 st. of 10 l., entitled, "Morning Hymn." (The text printed by Fischer, ii., p. 385, as that of 1630, is really the greatly altered form in the ed. of 1638); and repeated in the Leipzig Vorrath, 1673, No. 838, and others. St. viii. is altered from st. ix. of "O Lebensbrünnlein, tief und gross" (see p. 775, ii.). It is an imitation, but not a recast, of the hymn by P. Nicolai, noted at p. 806, ii. The form in C. U. was given to it by Burchard Wiesenmeyer, in Crüger's Neues vollhönnliches G. B., 1640, No. 111, and further recast in Crüger's Praxis, 1648, No. 3, which begins, "Wie schön leuchtet uns der Morgenstern." This form is No. 477, in the Unv. L. S., 1851. The tr. in C. U. is—

How beautiful the Morning Star shines from the firmament afar. This was contributed by Philip Pusey to A. R. Reinagle's Ps. & Hy. Tunes, Oxford, 1840, p. 130 (see p. 1017, ii.). St. i. is a fairly close version of st. i., while st. ii., iii., are very free tr. of st. vi., vii. Included, slightly varied, in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and thence, with st. i., ll. 5, 6, altered in Kennedy, 1863. It was considerably altered in the Sarum Hyl., 1868; and this form is repeated in R. Minton Taylor's Coll., 1872, and J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

Other trs. are:—(1) "How fair shines forth the Morning-star." By H. J. Buckcoll, 1842, p. 24. (2) "How lovely now the morning-star." By Miss Cox, 1864, p. 3. (3) "How beautiful the morning star, shines in." By R. Massie, in the Day of Rest, 1876, p. 472. [J. M.]

Stennett, Joseph, the earliest English Baptist hymn-writer whose hymns are now in C. U., was b. at Abingdon, Berks, in 1663. He received a superior education at the Grammar-School of Wallingford, and at the age of 22 removed to London, where for several years he engaged in tuition. In 1688 he married a daughter of George Guill, a French Protestant refugee, another of whose daughters was the wife of the celebrated Presbyterian minister, Dr. Daniel Williams, who became a generous friend to Stennett. In the following year he was called to preach by the Baptist Sabbatarian congregation then meeting in Devonshire Square, London, afterwards in Pinners' Hall; and in 1690 became its pastor, a position he retained to his death, July 4, 1713. Since the meetings of this congregation for worship were on the seventh day of the week, he was free to preach to other congregations on the Sunday, which he did very frequently, especially to the General Baptist Church in the Barbican. Such was Stennett's repute for piety, learning and practical wisdom that his advice was very much sought by his Christian friends, and by the "great Whig Lords" of that day he was occasionally consulted as to the feeling of the Dissenters concerning national affairs. His published works include:—

(1) Hymns in commemoration of the Sufferings of our Blessed Saviour Jesus Christ, compos'd for the Celebration of his Holy Supper, 1697; 2nd ed. 1703 (This is entitled in Stennett's Works, 1732, Hymns for the Lord's Supper). These were 37 in number, increased to 50 in the 3rd ed., 1709. (2) In 1700 he published a poetical Version of Solomon's Song of Songs, together with the XLVth Psalm. A 2nd ed., corrected, appeared in 1709. (3) In 1712 he pub. twelve Hymns composed for the Celebration of the Holy Ordinance of Baptism; 2nd ed. 1722.

Stennett also translated Dacier's Plato and other works from the French, and published several sermons preached on days of National Thanksgiving and other public occasions. His Works were collected after his death and pub. in 1732, in 4 vols. 8vo. They contain a Memoir, Sermons and Letters, the Hymns and Poems mentioned above, and a few other poetical pieces. A controversial work, An Answer to Mr. Russen's Book on Baptism, 1702, may be reckoned as a 5th vol. Of his hymns, that which, in the form of varying centos, is most widely known is, "Another six days' work is done" (p. 71, ii.). Others in C. U. include:—

1. Gracious Redeemer, how divine. Holy Communion. Appeared in his Hys. for the Lord's Supper, 1st ed., 1697. (Works, 1732, ii. p. 98.) Usually abbreviated.

2. Immortal praise be given. Holy Communion. Pub. in his Hys. for the Lord's Supper, 1st ed., 1697. (Works, 1732, ii. p. 97.) From this "We'll praise our risen Lord," is taken.

3. Jesus, O word divinely sweet. Redemption through Jesus. Pub. in Hys. for the Lord's Supper, 3rd ed. 1709, No. 47. (Works, 1732, ii. p. 147.) In full in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and others.

4. Lord, at Thy Table I behold. Holy Communion. This hymn is not in Stennett's Works. It appeared in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, with his name prefixed, and was probably supplied to Dr. Rippon by Dr. S. Stennett, J. Stennett's grandson. From it "With humble faith and trembling heart," is taken.

5. My blessed Saviour, is Thy love? Self-Consecration to God. Appeared in his Hys. for the Lord's Supper, 1697, No. 22. (Works, 1732, ii. p. 111.) Usually abbreviated.

6. The great Redeemer we adore. Pub. in his Hys. for Baptism, 1712. (Works, 1732, ii. p. 163.)

7. Whene'er one sinner turns to God. Holy Baptism. Pub. in his Hys. for Baptism, 1712, No. 12. (Works, 1732, ii. p. 168.) From this "See how the willing converts trace" is taken. It begins with st. iii.

Several of his hymns additional to these are given in the older collections, but have passed out of use. We may add that the Joseph Stennett, the subject of this article, had a son, Joseph Stennett, D.D., who also became an eminent Baptist minister, and was the father of Samuel Stennett, D.D. noticed below. [W. R. S.]

Stennett, Samuel, D.D., grandson of Joseph Stennett, named above, and s. of the Rev. Joseph Stennett, D.D., was b., most probably in 1727, at Exeter, where his father was at that time a Baptist minister. When quite young he removed to London, his father having become pastor of the Baptist Church in Little Wild Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields. In 1748, Samuel Stennett became assistant to his father in the ministry, and in 1758 succeeded him in the pastoral office at Little Wild Street. From that time until his death, on Aug. 24, 1795, he held a very prominent position among the Dissenting ministers of London. He was much respected by some of the statesmen of the time, and used his influence with them in support of the principles of religious freedom. The celebrated John Howard was a member of his congregation and an attached friend. In 1763, the University of Aberdeen conferred on him the degree of D.D. Dr. Stennett's prose publications consist of volumes of sermons, and pamphlets on Baptism and on Nonconformist Disabilities. He wrote one or two short poems, and contributed 38 hymns to the collection of his friend, Dr. Rippon (1787). His poetical genius was not of the highest order, and his best hymns have neither the originality nor the vigour of some of his grandfather's. The following, however, are pleasing in sentiment and expression, and are in C. U., more especially in Baptist congregations:—

1. And have I, Christ, no love for Thee? Love for Christ desired.
2. And will the offended God again? The Body the Temple of the H. Ghost.
3. As on the Cross the Saviour hung. The Thief on the Cross.
4. Behold the leprous Jew. The healing of the Leper.
5. Come, every pious heart. Praise to Christ.
6. Father, at Thy call, I come. Lent.
7. Great God, amid the darksome night. God, a Sun.
8. Great God, what hosts of angels stand. Ministry of Angels.
9. Here at Thy Table, Lord, we meet. Holy Communion.
10. How charming is the place. Public Worship.
11. How shall the sons of men appear? Acceptance through Christ alone.
12. How soft the words my [the] Saviour speaks. Early Piety.
13. How various and how new. Divine Providence.
14. Not all the nobles of the earth. Christians as Sons of God.
15. On Jordan's stormy banks I stand. Heaven anticipated.
16. Prostrate, dear Jesus, at thy feet. Lent. Sometimes, "Dear Saviour, prostrate at Thy feet."
17. Should bounteous nature kindly pour. The greatest of these is Love. From this, "Had I the gift of tongues," st. iii., is taken.
18. Thy counsels of redeeming grace. Holy Scripture. From "Let avarice, from shore to shore."
19. Thy life I read, my dearest Lord. Death in Infancy. From this "Tis Jesus speaks, I fold, says He."
20. 'Tis finished! so the Saviour cried. Good Friday.
21. To Christ, the Lord, let every tongue. Praise of Christ. From this, "Majestic sweetness sits enthroned," st. iii., is taken.
22. To God, my Saviour, and my King. Renewing Grace.
23. To God, the universal King. Praise to God.
24. What wisdom, majesty, and grace. The Gospel. Sometimes, "What majesty and grace."
25. Where two or three with sweet accord. Before the Sermon.
26. Why should a living man complain? Affliction. From this, "Lord, see what floods of sorrow rise," st. iii., is taken.
27. With tears of anguish I lament. Lent.
28. Yonder amazing sight I see. Good Friday.

All these hymns, with others by Stennett, were given in Rippon's Bapt. Sel., 1787, ■ few having previously appeared in A Coll. o Hys. for the use of Christians of all Denominations, London. Printed for the Booksellers, 1782; and No. 16, in the 1778 Supplement to the 3rd ed. of the Bristol Bap. Sel. of Ash and Evans. The whole of Stennett's poetical pieces and hymns were included in vol. ii. of his Works, together with a Memoir, by W. J. Jones. 4 vols., 1824. [W. R. S.]

Stephano primo martyri. [St. Stephen.] This hymn is found in various forms. Mone, No. 1156, gives first what he professes to consider to be the original text, and which he says is very probably by St. Ambrose himself. But for this text (which begins "Stephano coronae martyrum") he gives no source, and seems to derive it from his own imagination. His second form begins "Stephani corona martyris." If from this second form are rejected the additions (including st. i., which is not found in other mss.), from a Benedictine ms. cited through Cassander, then we have what is probably the original text, beginning "Stephano primo martyri." This last form is found in two mss., circa 1150, in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc., 202, f. 144; Liturg. Misc., 297, f. 306); in a ms. of the 12th cent. in the British Museum (Add. 18301, f. 112); in the St. Gall ms., No. 413, of the 11th cent.; in a ms. of the 10th cent. at Munich, &c. Also in the Ambrosian Breviary, 1539. In the Ambrosian Breviary, 1830, there is a recast beginning "Duci cruento martyrum"; and this text is in Dr. Neale's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 79. All these forms and variations are given by Daniel, i., No. 82, and iv. pp. 89, 90, 354-357. [J. M.]

Of these forms of the text two have been rendered into English, viz. :—

- i. Stephano primo martyri.
 1. To Stephen, first of martyrs, raise. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 87.
 2. Blood is on the martyr's palm. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55. This was altered by Canon W. Cooke, and given in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, No. 30, as, "Jesu, Lord, Thy praise we sing."
- ii. Duci cruento martyrum.

To Thee, O Christ, our hymn we raise. By E. A. Dayman, in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868, No. 46. This is rather a paraphrase than a tr. of the hymn. [J. J.]

Stephenson, Thomas Bowman, D.D., LL.D., s. of the Rev. John Stephenson, was b. at Newcastle on Dec. 22, 1839, and educated at Wesley College, Sheffield, subsequently graduating at the University of London. In 1860 he entered the Wesleyan Ministry, and has since laboured in Norwich, Manchester, Bolton, and London. The great work of his life has been the establishment and maintenance of The Children's Home at Victoria Park, London, and its branches at Bolton, Birmingham, and the Isle of Man, and in Canada. Dr. Stephenson has written for Magazines and Reviews, and pub. a small work on Sisterhoods, and a Memorial Sketch of the late James Barlow. He has written several hymns, of which the following are most widely known :—

1. Fading like a lifetime ends another day. Evening. Written circa 1873, and pub. in The Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 487, in 2 st. of 8 l.
2. Hear us, Saviour, bowed before Thee. Children's Hymn. Written for a Festival at the Children's Home, circa 1879.
3. O Father, Whose spontaneous love. Easter, or Missions. Appeared in The General Hymnary for Missions, &c., 1889, No. 266, in 9 st. of 4 l.

4. Onward, o'er Time's great ocean. Life a Voyage. Written during a voyage across the South Sea.

5. Sweetly dawns the Sabbath morning. Sunday Morning. Written circa 1875, and pub. in The Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 504, in 4 st. of 8 l.

6. This is the glorious gospel word. Jesus saves. Called forth by a religious Convention at Brighton, and pub. in The Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 314, in 5 st. of 8 l., and in The General Hymnary, 1889, No. 431, with an additional stanza (st. iv.). [J. J.]

Στερέωσόν με, Χριστέ. [Ἄσωμεν πάντες λαοί.]

Στέργω μὲν ἡμᾶς. [Ἔσωσε λαόν.]

Sternhold, Thomas. [Old Version, § IX. 1: X.]

Steuerlein, Johannes, s. of Caspar Steuerlein, or Steurlein, first Lutheran pastor at Schmalkalden, was b. at Schmalkalden on July 5, 1546. After completing his course as a student of law, he was, about 1580, appointed Town-clerk of Wasungen (between Schmalkalden and Meiningen), and then, in 1589, secretary in chancery (Kanzlei-Secretär), at Meiningen, to the Henneberg administration. He was also Notary Public, and, about 1604, Mayor at Meiningen. He d. at Meiningen, May 5, 1613. (Koch, ii. 248, 267, 353; C. von Winterfeld's Evang. Kirchengesang, 1843, i. p. 413; K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. ii., 1886, pp. 51, 171, 208, 573; preface to his Gründliche und wahrhaftige Beschreibung, Jena, 1611, &c.)

Steuerlein was crowned as a poet by the Emperor Rudolph II., and was the author of a metrical version of Jesus Sirach (Ecclesiasticus), pub. at Frankfurt am Main in 1581. He was an excellent musician, and pub. various works containing melodies and four-part settings by himself. His most important work is his Sieben und Zwanzig neue geistliche Gesenge, mit vier Stimmen componiret, &c., Erfurt, 1588 [Göttingen Library and Library of the Institut für Kirchenmusik at Breslau]. Of these 27 hymns 3 are marked as by Steuerlein, 4 as by Cyriacus Schneegass, 2 as by Erasmus Alber, and 1 as by Martin Lutner. The other 17 have no names of authors affixed.

One of these 17 hymns is:

Das alte Jahr vergangen ist, Wir danken dir, Herr Jesu Christ. New Year. In 1588 as above, No. 1, in 6 st. of 4 l., reprinted in full in the Blätter für Hymnologie, 1893, p. 156. This is the earliest appearance, so far as is yet known, of the hymn in this six stanza form. A shorter form, in 8 lines (st. i., ii. of the 1588), is in Clement Stephani's Schöner auserlesener deutscher Psalm, und anderer künstlicher Moteten und geistlichen Lieder XX., &c., Nürnberg, 1568 [Göttingen Library], and reprinted in the Blätter, 1887, p. 142. It is thus very doubtful if Steuerlein is the original author of this hymn, and, as already pointed out, he did not claim it as his own in 1588. It is quite possible that st. iii.-vi. may be by Steuerlein, though they have been frequently ascribed to Jakob Tapp (q.v.), and indeed in M. Prätorius's Musae Sionae, pt. vi., Wolfenbüttel, 1609, No. 1 [in Index marked as "Autor Textus Jacobi Tappii"], the whole hymn is ascribed to Tapp. Wackernagel, v. p. 125, not having seen the 1588, gives the six stanza form as an anonymous hymn, quoting it from the Eisleben G. B., 1598. The text in the Urv. L. S., 1851, No. 63, is nearly that of 1588. Steuerlein is probably the author of the melody sometimes set to this hymn, but which, in 1588, was set to N. Herman's hymn, "Gott Vater der du deine Sonn" (see Dr. J. Zahn's Psalter und Harfe, 1886, No. 44). Tr. as:—

1. With this New Year we raise new Songs. In full by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1722, p. 10 (1732, p. 9, altered). Included in Hawker's Coll., 1847, No. 62, abridged, and beginning, "With this New Year we raise our songs."

2. The old year now hath passed away. This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, as No. 171 in her C. B. for England, 1863, repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

3. The old year now is past and gone. In full by

J. M. Sloan, as No. 187 in Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865.

Another tr. is: "Another year is gone, and now." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 64. [J. M.]

Stevens, John, was b. at Aldwinkle, in Northamptonshire, June 8th, 1776. About the age of sixteen he went to London, where he joined the Baptist church in Grafton Street, whose pastor was at that time R. Burnham (p. 196, ii.). He began to preach, and in 1797 became minister at Oundle, soon afterwards at St. Neots, and then at Boston. In 1811, after the death of Burnham, he was invited to succeed him at Grafton Street. Stevens had popular gifts as a preacher: the place became too small, and ultimately a new chapel was built in Meard's Court, Soho, where he continued to minister until he d., Oct. 6, 1847. Stevens was a High Calvinist in theology, and an ardent polemic. He wrote several controversial works, the most famous of which was entitled, A Scriptural Display of the Triune God & the early existence of Jesus' human soul, Lond. 1812. From the theory advocated in this book he was called a Pre-existarian. In 1809 he pub. A New Sel. of Hymns, including also several Original hymns never before offered to the Public. This, and the 2nd ed., 1812, contained 465 hymns. The 5th ed., 1825, had an Appendix of 102 hymns, and the 12th, 1868, one of 365 hymns. The ed. of Stevens's hymn-book now in C. U. was edited, in 1881, by J. S. Anderson. It is described on the title-page as "enlarged and improved," and contains 970 hymns. Of these a few are by Mr. Anderson, and 34 by Stevens. Many of the hymns of Stevens embody High Calvinistic views, strongly expressed; some, however, on the Lord's Supper would be accepted by most Christians. Of his hymns the following are in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872.

1. Christ has a chosen Church (1809). Election.
2. Eternal election preserves me secure (1809). Election.
3. Grace is Jehovah's sovereign will (1809). Election.
4. Long as I live I'll sing the Lamb (1809). Praise to Jesus. [W. R. S.]

Stevenson, George John, M.A., was b. at Chesterfield, Derbyshire, July 7, 1818. In early life he was connected with the printing and bookselling business, and continued therein until 1844, when he entered St. John's College, Battersea, where he was trained for an organizing Mastership under the National Society. In 1846 a Reformatory School was established in the Philanthropic Institute, Southwark, for the benefit of the better conducted criminals from the convict prisons, and Mr. Stevenson was the first Master. This school is now represented by the Farm School at Red Hill, Reigate. In 1848, he was appointed Head Master of the endowed parochial school at Lambeth, but resigned in 1855, and established himself in Paternoster Row as a bookseller and publisher, where he continued the business until a few years before his death, on Aug. 16, 1888. His interest in education was shown in his publication of the periodicals, School and Teacher, The Pupil Teacher, and The English Journal of Education. In 1861 he purchased the Wesleyan Times newspaper, and for six years he bore the editorial and financial responsibility. Mr. Stevenson's literary work began with contributions to the Sheffield Patriot, in 1839, and the Norfolk News, 1841. Having joined the Methodist Society in 1831, his interest in Methodism, and specially in Methodist history and literature, became very keen, and has had much to do with his literary life. His publications outside of hymnology are numerous, and include biographical works mainly on the Wesley Family, and Methodist Worthies; historical works on City Road Chapel; the Young Men's Christian Association; Methodism in Chesterfield; Methodism in Hackney; and historical articles on Methodism in several Encyclopedias, &c.; Essays on Education; and smaller works on other subjects. His hymnological work began with his biographical sketches of hymn-writers and notices of hymns in the Wesleyan Times, which were subsequently largely used by Dr. Rogers in his Lyra Britannica, and Miller in his Singers and Songs of the Church. His Methodist Hymn Book and its Associations was pub. in 1869; and in an enlarged form as The Methodist Hymn Book Illustrated with Biography, Incident, and Anecdote, in 1883. The first of these dealt with the writers and hymns of the Wes. H. Bk. of 1780-1831; and the second with the revised ed. of the same, 1875. The latter is the most complete account of Methodist hymnody extant, and is indispensable to every lover of the Wesleyan Hymn-book. Outside of Methodist hymnody, Mr. Stevenson's acquaintance with English and American hymnology was very superficial; and of the vast stores of Greek, Latin, German, French, Italian, Scandinavian, and other treasures he knew almost nothing. His reputation entirely rests upon his researches as a student of and authority upon Methodist Hymnody. In that department he had no equal. [J. J.]

Stichëra. [Greek Hymnody, § XVI. 9.]

Still with Thee, O my God. J. D. Burns. [Evening.] Included in his little work, The Evening Hymn, 1857, No. 23, in 6 st. of 4 l. It passed into the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; and, subsequently, into other collections. In the Cong. Hyl., 1887, it begins "With Thee, my Lord, my God." Although mainly included, because of its beautiful simplicity, in children's hymn books, it is yet better adapted for congregational use. [J. J.]

Stock, Sarah Geraldina, b. Dec. 27, 1838, has devoted much time to literature with special reference to Mission work and Sunday Schools. Her prose publications include Lessons on Israel in Egypt, &c., 1874; The Child's Life of our Lord, 1879; Bible Stories from the Old Testament, &c., 1882, and others. Her hymns in C. U. include:—

1. A debtor! For the love of God unbounded. Missions. Written for the Church Missionary Almanack, 1878, and also issued as a C. M. S. leaflet.
2. Behind and Before. Departure of Missionaries. Written for India's Women, and sung for the first time at the dismissal of Church of England Zenana missionaries, Sep. 30, 1887. Since issued as a C. M. S. leaflet.
3. Called to Thy service, Lord. Holy Matrimony. Written for the marriage of Mr. W. Merry and Miss Grainger, of the "Home of Industry," Bethnal Green Road, London, March 14, 1889.
4. Coldly the wind is sweeping. For Workers. Pub. in the Church S. School Magazine, 1885.
5. Jesus! All-sufficiency. Teachers' Devotional Meetings. Pub. in the Church S. School Magazine, 1882.

6. Lord of light, and Fount of love. Home Missions. Pub. in the Church S. School Magazine, 1875; in Hys. for Special Services, &c. Bemrose & Sons, &c.

7. Lord, Thy ransomed Church is waking. Home Missions. Written for the London February Mission, 1874, and pub. in the Church S. S. Magazine, Feb., 1874, and subsequently in several hymn-books.

8. O Master! when Thou callest. Departure of Missionaries. Written for India's Women, and first sung at the Valedictory Meeting of the Ch. of England Zenana Society, Oct. 2, 1888.

9. Open stood the gates of heaven. Christmas. Pub. in the Church S. S. Musical Leaflets, No. 6, with music by C. H. Nottingham.

10. Shut out from heaven's glory. Harvest. Pub. in the same Leaflets, No. 9.

11. The tender light of home behind. Departure of Missionaries. Written for India's Women, Sep. 1887, and first sung at the Valedictory Meeting of the Church of England Zenana Society, Sep. 30, 1887.

12. There's a fight to be fought, there's a work to be done. Missions. Written for the Church Missionary Gleaners' Annual Meeting, Nov. 1888, and issued as a C. M. S. leaflet.

13. We know not how the rays that stream. Holy Trinity. Written for the Church S. S. Magazine. Pub. in an abridged form as "We cannot read the mystery," in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1868.

14. With voice of joy and singing. Thanksgiving. Written for the opening of Miss Annie Macpherson's "Home of Industry," Bethnal Green Road, London, 1887, and issued as a leaflet.

Of these hymns, Nos. 1, 7, 8, 11, and 12, were pub. in Eight Missionary Hys. and Poems, C. M. S., 1889. Miss Stock contributed 3 hymns to the "Golden Songs," which appeared in the S. S. U. Sunday S. Chronicle, 1875; 7 for children to the Sunday at Home. She has also written several others on various subjects, which have been issued as leaflets. Her hymns are bright and musical, and should be sought out by hymnal compilers. Her poems are pub. as Joy in Sorrow, 1884. She d. Aug. 29, 1898. [J. J.]

Stocker, John, some-time of Honiton, Devonshire, contributed, during 1776 and 1777, 9 hymns to the Gospel Magazine. These hymns were collected and reprinted, in 1861, by D. Sedgwick, as Hys. and Spiritual Songs, and, with their dates, are:—

1. Thy mercy, my [O] God, is the theme of my song. Mercy. "J. S." March, 1776.
2. Of Jesus, my Saviour, I'll sing. Praise. "J. Stocker," October, 1776.
3. O come, ye poor sinners, with burdens oppress. Invitation. "John Stocker," May, 1777.
4. No strength in myself I possess. Christ All and in All. "J. S." May, 1777.
5. Awake, my soul, arise and sing. Praise of Jesus. "J. Stocker," May, 1777.
6. Jesus, my Saviour, I avow. Glorying in Christ. "J. Stocker," May, 1777.
7. Jesus, my Rock, which cannot move. Confidence through Jesus. "J. Stocker," July, 1777.
8. Away my doubts, begone my fears. Death anticipated. "J. Stocker," July, 1777.
9. Gracious Spirit, Dove divine (p. 449, i). "J. Stocker," July, 1777.

These varying signatures, "J. S.," "J. Stocker," and "John Stocker," led D. Sedgwick to conclude that the signature "J. S." meant the same person as the other two. We doubt this: first, because Nos. 3, 4, 5, and 6 above, were all printed in May 1777, in the order named; and we cannot see why "J. S." should have been adopted in this manner; and, second, because other hymns signed "S." are found in the same numbers of the magazine as those signed "J. Stocker." If "J. S." is John Stocker, why not "S." also? Sedgwick had no authority for saying that "J. S." was John Stocker; we have no authority for saying this is not so. There is no proof either way. [J. J.]

Stola regni laureatus. Adam of St. Victor. [Common of Apostles.] A very fine sequence, dealing with the symbolic character of the apostles, not with their individual histories. It is found in the Augustinian Missal, printed at Paris in 1529, for use at St. Victor. It is given by Gautier, in his Oeuvres poetiques d'Adam, 1858, vol. ii. p. 407. In his new ed., 1881, p. 197, Gautier cites it as in a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat., Paris, No. 14452), and a 14th cent. Missal of St. Victor (B. N., No. 14448). Also in Trench, ed. 1864, p. 202, with copious notes, and D. S. Wragham's The Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881, vol. iii. p. 150. The use of St. Victor was for Oct. 28 ("SS. Simon and Jude"). Tr. as:—

1. Laurelled with the stole victorious. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of his Medieval Hys., 1863, p. 153, in 10 st. of 6 l. In an abbreviated form it is in the 1887 Appendix to the H. Noted, and the Hymner, 1882.

2. In royal robes of splendour. By Jackson Mason and the Compilers of H. A. & M., in the 1889 Suppl. Hymns to that collection.

Other trs. are:—

1. To the apostolic cohort. D. T. Morgan. 1871.
2. Glorious cohort apostolic. D. T. Morgan. 1880.
3. Decked with robes such state befitting. D. S. Wragham. 1881. [J. M.]

Στομίον πώλων ἀδαῶν. [Clemens, T. F.]

Stone, Samuel John, M.A., s. of the Rev. William Stone, M.A., was b. at Whitmore, Staffordshire, April 25, 1839, and educated at the Charterhouse; and at Pembroke College, Oxford, B.A. 1862; and M.A. 1872. On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of Windsor in 1862, and of St. Paul's, Haggerston, 1870. In 1874 he succeeded his father, at St. Paul's, Haggerston. Mr. Stone's poetical works are (1) Lyra Fidelium, 1866; (2) The Knight of Intercession and Other Poems, 1872, 6th ed., 1887; (3) Sonnets of the Christian Year, first printed in the Leisure Hour, and then pub. by the R. T. Society, 1875; (4) Hymns, a collection of his original pieces and translations, 1886. He has also pub. Order of The Consecutive Church Service for Children, with Original Hymns, 1883. Mr. Stone's hymns, most of which are in C. U., and several of which have a wide popularity, include:—

1. A sower went to sow his seed. The Sower. In his Hymns, 1886, the author says this hymn was "Written specially in allusion to the sixteen years' work of the first Vicar [his Father] of St. Paul's, Haggerston, to whom the Parish was given in 1853, without Church, or School, or Vicarage, or Endowment."
2. Bear the troubles of thy life. Patience. A tr. of Thomas à Kempis's "Adversa mundi tolera" (p. 23, ii.) made for the Rev. S. Kettlewell's Thomas à Kempis, 1882.
3. By Paul at war in Gentile lands. St. Mark. Written at Windsor in 1870, and pub. in his Knight of Intercession, 1872.

6. Christ the Wisdom and the Power. For Church Workers. Written for the Church Society of St. Paul's, Haggerston in 1872, and pub. in The Knight of Intercession, 1872.
7. Dark is the sky that overhangs my soul. Sorrow succeeded by Joy. Written at Windsor in 1869 for the Monthly Packet, and printed therein 1869. Pub. in The

Knight of Intercession, 1872, under the title of "Light at Eventide."

8. Deeply dark and deeply still. The Transfiguration. Written in 1871 and pub. in The Knight of Intercession, 1872.
9. Eastward, ever eastward. Processional for Sunday Morning. Written at Haggerston in 1876, and pub. in the Monthly Packet, 1884.
10. Faith, who sees beyond the portal. Faith, Hope, and Charity. Written at Windsor in 1869, and pub. in the Monthly Packet, 1869, and The Knight of Intercession, 1872.
11. Far off our brethren's voices. Missions. Written for the First Day of Intercession for Foreign Missions, 1871, and pub. in The Knight of Intercession, 1872. "For Colonial Missions."
12. Give the word, Eternal King. Missions. Written for the First Day of Intercession for Foreign Missions, 1871.
13. Glory in heaven to God. Christmas Carol. Written in 1882 for G. H. Leslie's Cantata The First Christmas Morn, 1882.
14. God the Father, All, and One. For Unity. Written in 1883 for Canon G. Venables's Service for Unity, and appeared in the Monthly Packet, 1884.
15. God the Father's Only Son. Offices of Christ. Pub. in his Lyra Fidelium, 1866, on Art. ii. of the Apostles' Creed, "And in Jesus Christ His Only Son our Lord."
16. God the Spirit, we adore Thee. The Holy Ghost. Pub. in his Lyra Fidelium, 1866, on Art. viii. of the Apostles' Creed, "I believe in the Holy Ghost."
17. Great Captain of God's armies. For Purity. Written in 1884 for the Ch. of England Purity Society, and printed in Church Bells, April 10, 1885.
18. Homeward we pass in peace. Close of Divine Service. Written in 1884 at Haggerston; and included in the author's Hymns, 1886, as a "Hymn after Benediction."
19. How can we praise Thee, Father! For the Fatherless. Written by request for "The Ch. of England Central Home for Waifs and Strays," 1882, and printed in the Monthly Packet, 1884.
20. Is there no hope for those who lie! Missions. Written in 1870 for the Monthly Packet; and also included in The Knight of Intercession, 1872.
21. Jesu, to my heart most precious. Jesus, All in All. A tr. of Thomas à Kempis's "De dulcedine Jesu," made for the Rev. S. Kettlewell's Thomas à Kempis, 1882.
22. Lo! they were, and they are, and shall be. St. Michael and All Angels. Written in 1875 for The Scottish Guardian, in which it was given in 1875.
23. Lord Christ, my Master dear. For Church Workers. Written for the Sunday School Teachers of St. Paul's, Haggerston, 1885, and given in his Hymns, 1886.
24. Lord of the harvest, it is right and meet. Missions, Thanksgiving. Written for the Second Day of Intercession for Foreign Missions, 1871, and pub. in The Knight of Intercession, 1872. In the 1889 Appendix to H. A. & M. it is somewhat altered.
25. Most true, most High; O Trinity. Holy Trinity. A tr. of Thomas à Kempis's "O vera summa Trinitas," made for the Rev. S. Kettlewell's Thomas à Kempis, 1882.
26. My Saviour! I behold Thy life. Passiontide. Pub. in his Lyra Fidelium, 1866, on Art. iv. of the Apostles' Creed, "Suffered under Pontius Pilate, was Crucified, Dead, and Buried."
27. Need hath the golden city none. Evening. Written at Windsor in 1869, and was pub. in the Monthly Packet in 1870. Also in The Knight of Intercession, 1872.

40. There is an ancient river. The Spiritual River. Written at Windsor for the Monthly Packet, in 1870; and given in The Knight of Intercession, 1872.

41. Thou Who hast charged Thine elder sons. For School Teachers. Written in 1881 for St. Katharine's Training College for Mistresses; and subsequently adapted for use by teachers of both sexes.

42. Thou Who didst love us when our woes began. Temperance. Written for the Ch. of England Temperance Society Magazine, 1866.

43. Through midnight gloom from Macedon. Missions. Written for the First Day of Intercession for Foreign Missions, 1871.

44. Unchanging God, hear from eternal heaven. On behalf of the Jews. Written for the East London Mission to the Jews, 1885. It is included in an abridged form in the 1889 Appendix to H. A. & M.

45. While the Shepherds kept their vigil. Christmas Carol. Written at Windsor in 1868.

46. Winter in his heart of gloom. The Resurrection of the Body. Pub. in his Lyra Fidelium, 1866, on Art. xi. of the Apostles' Creed, "The Resurrection of the Body."

47. Wistful are our waiting eyes. The Judgment. Pub. in his Lyra Fidelium, 1866, on Art. vii. of the Apostles' Creed, "From thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead."

48. Ye faithful few of Israel's captive days. Holy Scriptures. Written at Windsor for the Monthly Packet, in 1869.

Some of Mr. Stone's finer hymns, including "Round the Sacred City gather;" "The Church's One Foundation;" "Weary of earth and laden with my sin," and others, are annotated under their respective first lines. These, together with the 48 above, are given in his Hymns, 1886, some of the trs. being recast. Additional trs. from Thomas à Kempis are also noted under his name.

Another hymn, inseparably associated with Mr. Stone's name is:—

49. Lord of our Soul's salvation. National Thanksgiving. This was ordered by command of Her Majesty the Queen to be sung at the Thanksgiving for the Recovery of H. R. H. The Prince of Wales, on Feb. 27, 1872. In its original form it was in 7 st. of 8 l., and was thus sung throughout the country. Owing however "to the necessary restrictions as to time in the Cathedral service, a selection of four verses only—the 1st, a combination of the 2nd and 4th, the 6th, and the 7th—was adapted by the author for use in St. Paul's." The full text was included in The Knight of Intercession, 1872.

Mr. Stone's hymns vary considerably in metre and subject, and thus present a pleasing variety not always found in the compositions of popular hymn-writers. His best hymns are well designed and clearly expressed. The tone is essentially dogmatic and hopeful. The absence of rich poetic thought and graceful fancy is more than atoned for by a masterly condensation of Scripture facts and of Church teaching given tersely and with great vigour. His changes and antitheses are frequently abrupt, in many instances too much so for congregational purposes, and his vocabulary is somewhat limited. His rhythm, except where broken either by long or by compound words, is rarely at fault, and his rhyme is usually perfect. A few of his hymns are plaintive and pathetic, as the tender "Weary of earth and laden with my sin"; others are richly musical, as "Lord of the harvest! it is right and meet": but the greater part are strongly outspoken utterances of a manly faith, where dogma, prayer, and praise are interwoven with much skill. Usually the key-note of his song is Hope. He d. Nov. 19, 1900. [J. J.]

Stowe, Harriet, née Beecher, daughter of the Rev. Lyman Beecher, D.D., was born at Litchfield, Connecticut, June 15, 1812. In 1832, her father having been appointed President of Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, she removed there with the family; and in 1833 was married to the Rev. Calvin E. Stowe, D.D., Professor of Languages and Biblical Literature in the same Institution. Her high reputation as an author is well known; and the immense success of Uncle Tom's Cabin, which first appeared in The National Era, in 1852, ensures her a lasting reputation. She has also written other well-known works. Three of her hymns appeared in the Plymouth Collection, edited by her brother, H. W. Beecher, in 1855:—

1. Still, still with Thee, when purple morning breaketh.
Resting in God.

2. That mystic word of Thine, O sovereign Lord.
Abiding in Jesus.

3. When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean.
Peace.

Another hymn by Mrs. Stowe, "How beautiful, said he of old" (The Gospel Ministry), is No. 231 in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864. Her poetical pieces were pub. in her Religious Poems, 1867; and from a poem therein the hymn, "Knocking, knocking, who is there?" (Christ knocking), in Sankey's Sac. Songs and Solos is adapted. [F. M. B.]

Stowell, Hugh, M.A., s. of Hugh Stowell, Rector of Ballaugh, near Ramsey, was b. at Douglas, Isle of Man, Dec. 3, 1799, and educated at St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, B.A. 1822; M.A. 1826. He was ordained in 1823, and held the curacy of Shepscombe, Gloucestershire; and then that of Holy Trinity, Huddersfield. Subsequently he was Curate in charge of St. Stephen's, Salford, and became rector of Christ Church, Salford, in 1831. In 1845 he was appointed Hon. Canon in Chester Cathedral; in 1851 Chaplain to the Bp. of Manchester; and Rural Dean of Eccles. He d. at Salford, Oct. 8, 1865. His Memoir, by the Rev. J. B. Marsden, was pub. in 1868. Canon Stowell was a popular and effective preacher. His publications included Tractarianism Tested, 1845; A Model for Men of Business, 1854; Pleasures of Religion and Other Poems, 1832; The Peaceful Valley, 1826; and a large number of single sermons, pamphlets, &c. His Sel. of Ps. & Hys. was pub. as:—

A Selection of Psalms & Hymns Suited to the Services of the Church of England. By the Rev. H. Stowell, M.A., Manchester. Printed by H. nry Smith, St. Ann's Square, 1831.

This Sel. contained 233 hymns, in addition to versions of the Psalms. Of the hymns the following were by the compiler:—

1. Almighty Shepherd, Who didst give. (1828.) The Good Shepherd.
2. From every stormy wind that blows. See p. 399, i.
3. Gracious God, look down in kindness. Sunday School Anniversary.
4. Great God, we dare not bow the knee. Holy Communion.
5. Meek Lamb of God, on Thee. Lent.
6. To Thee, O God, we raise. Sunday School Anniversary.
7. Tune every heart, wake every tongue. Sunday School Anniversary.
8. When Jesus left the glorious sky. For an Infants' School.
9. Yes, in the morning of our years. Sunday School Anniversary.

The 12th ed. of this Sel. pub. by Canon Stowell in 1864, was increased to 273 hymns, the additional hymns being in nearly every instance his own compositions. In addition to those already given we have:—

10. Again our yearly strain we raise. 1864.
11. Another year has glided past. (Before 1846.)
12. Another year with mercies strown. (Before 1846.)
13. Before Thy throne, O Lord, we bend. (Before 1846.)
14. By pressing dangers compassed round. 1843 (?).
15. Come, raise we all the blessed strain. 1862.
16. Hail, hallowed day of heavenly rest. 1844 (?).
17. Hark, how sweet those infant voices. 1841 (?).
18. How fruitless is the ploughman's toil. 1864.
19. How gently in night's silent hours. 1850.
20. Jesus is our Shepherd, Wiping, &c. 1849.
21. Jesus, Lord, Who hast ascended. 1853.
22. Jesus, Lord, we wait on Thee. 1863.
23. Jesus, our Saviour and our Lord. (Before 1846.)
24. Jesus, Prophet of Thy Church. 1861.
25. Lord, if our land be great and free. 1851.
26. Lord, in this dark and stormy day. 1848.
27. Lord, in Thy mercy hear our cry. 1855.
28. Meek Lamb of God, Who dost impart. 1859.
29. O God, the liquid sign of grace. 1856.
30. Sailing o'er life's changeful ocean. (Before 1846.)
31. Saviour, guide this little band. (Before 1846.)
32. The day of rest is passed away. (Before 1846.)
33. The morn of our life-time is fast gliding by. (Before 1846.)
34. Though our lot be poor and lowly. 1847.
35. Thy cross, O Lord, the holy sign. 1840.
36. Wake, wake our yearly strain anew. 1852.
37. Wake, wake the joyful song. 1844.
38. We, a little simple throng. (Before 1846.)
39. We, little pilgrims of a day. 1845.
40. We love the holy house of prayer. 1857.
41. We will not weep as others do. 1842.
42. What is your life? It glances by. 1860.
43. What though our earthly lot be low. 1853.

These hymns were all written for the Anniversary Services of Christ Church Sunday Schools, Salford, and are included with others in a special Appendix in the 1877 ed. of the Sel. as above. Other hymns by Canon Stowell are:—

44. Children of old, Hosannah sang. Sunday Schools. 1830.
45. Lord of all power and might, Father of love, &c. Missions. Written for the Jubilee of the B. & F. Bible Society, March 7, 1853.
46. Shepherd of the ransomed sheep. The Good Shepherd.
47. Pilgrims in the narrow way. Sunday School Anniversary. This was his last hymn, and was written for the Christ Church S. School Anniversary, 1865.

Of Canon Stowell's hymns the most popular are Nos. 2, 3, 20 and 44. As a writer for children he was very successful. All the foregoing hymns are in the 15th ed. of his Sel. edited by his son, Manchester, 1877; and in Hymns. By the late Rev. Canon Stowell, M.A. Manchester, 1868. [J. J.]

Stowell, Thomas Alfred, M.A., s. of Canon H. Stowell, was b. at Salford, July 15, 1831. He was Bridgman Exhibitioner at Queen's College, Oxford, 1853, and B.A. in honours in 1855. Taking Holy Orders in 1857, he became Curate of Bolton, Diocese of Ripon, 1857-60; Incumbent of St. Stephen's, Bowling, Bradford, 1860-65; and then Rector of Christ Church, Salford, in succession to his father, 1865. He was also appointed Rural Dean of Salford in 1876, and Hon. Canon in Manchester Cathedral in 1879. Canon T. A. Stowell has pub. The Church Catechism simply and clearly explained, 1882, various Sermons, papers on Education, &c. Most of his hymns were written for the Anniversary Sermons of Christ Church S. Schools, Salford (nearly 2000 children), and include:—

1. Blessed Saviour, hear us when we cry. 1872.
2. Happy were those mothers. 1866.
3. In God's holy dwelling. 1873.
4. Lord, on Thy day, within Thy holy dwelling. 1877.
5. Lord, Thy children lowly bending. 1875.
6. My Saviour, be thou near me, When I lie down, &c. 1874.
7. O Jesus [Saviour] we have promised Henceforth to be Thine Own. Confirmation. 1877.
8. Sweet day of rest which God has given. Sunday. 1868.
9. While the sun is shining. Work. 1869.

These 9 hymns are in Canon T. A. Stowell's 1877 ed. of his father's Sel., and of these Nos. 3 and 9 are the most popular. He is also the author of:—

10. Come, Christian youths and maidens. S. School Anniversary. In Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, and others.
11. Early the holy women came. Easter. In the Church Monthly, April, 1888.
12. Remember thy Creator. Youthful Piety. In the Church S. School Mag., Feb. 1888.
13. Saviour, we are young and weak. The Christian Race. In Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

Several of these are popular hymns for children, and will no doubt gradually come into somewhat extensive use. [J. J.]

Strafford, Elizabeth, daughter of H. Strafford, of Belper, b. in London, Oct. 30, 1828; d. at Belper, April 4, 1868. Her hymns appeared in Hymns for the Collects throughout the Year, for the Use of Children, 1857 (W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. and Home, 1873). From this, "God Almighty heareth ever" (Love of God), "Once to our world there came" (Passiontide), and "We praise Thee, we bless Thee, O Father in heaven" (Praise for Salvation), have come into C. U. [J. J.]

Strauss, Victor Friedrich von, was b. at Bückeberg, Schaumburg-Lippe, Sept. 18, 1809. He became a student of law at the Universities of Erlangen, Bonn, and Göttingen. In 1832 he married Albertine von Torney, daughter of a Hanoverian landed proprietor; and, in 1872, at the request of her relations, added her name to his own (Strauss und Torney), having been previously, in 1851, raised to the Austrian nobility. Having entered the diplomatic service of Schaumburg-Lippe, in 1832, he was appointed, in 1840, Archivrath at Bückeberg; and attended the Frankfurt Diet as Geheimrath, in 1850, as the accredited representative of Schaumburg-Lippe. He was also, from 1853 to 1866, the regular representative of Schaumburg-Lippe, at the North German Diet. Thereafter he retired on a pension, and went at Easter, 1869, to Erlangen, where he wrote a tr. of the works of the Chinese philosopher Lao-tse, with a commentary (pub. 1870). In 1872 he removed to Dresden, where he still [1889] resides. In 1889 he pub. the 1st vol. of a work on Allgyptische Götterglaube (Koch vii. 270; O. Kraus, 1879, p. 525, &c.).

Both as a secular and as a sacred poet, Strauss holds high rank among his contemporaries in Germany; not so much for popularity, as for wealth of ideas, breadth of culture, beauty of form, and clear, simple expression. The impulse which he received to the study of theology and to hymn-writing, was mainly through the impression of manifest unfairness left upon him by reading D. F. Strauss's Leben Jesu, 1835. This led him to study the New Testament for himself; and to find, in the old Gospel, the satisfaction of the needs of his spirit. His hymns, while, like most modern hymns, in the main subjective, often catch the ring and noble simplicity of the older objective classical hymns, but are more finished in form. Many have passed into recent German hymn-books. They appeared principally in Knapp's Christosterpe, 1844-48; and in his own—(1) Gedichte, Bielefeld, 1841; (2) Lieder aus der Gemeinde für das Christliche Kirchenjahr, Hamburg, 1843; and (3) Weltliches und Geistliches, Heidelberg, 1856. The hymns in No. 3 are in the second part, which is separately paged, and entitled Geistliches im Gedichten und Liedern. The work entitled Das Kirchenjahr im Hause, Heidelberg, 1845, is a series of poetical meditations, and not of hymns properly so called.

The hymns by Strauss which have passed into English are:—

i. Lobjauchz und mehret Gottes Ruhm. Advent. 1st pub. in 1856, as above, pt. ii., p. 8, in 16 st., entitled "Advent." Tr. as, "The Lord doth in His Kingdom come." By J. Kelly, 1885.

ii. Nun gingst auch du. Easter Eve. 1st pub., 1843, as above, p. 126, in 7 st. of 5 l., and entitled, "The Lord in the Grave." Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 560. Tr. as:—

Thou sore-oppress'd. A good tr., omitting st. v. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 34; and thence in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 56. Included in the Hymnary, 1872, Parish H. Bk., 1875, Evang. Hyl., N. York, 1880, and others.

iii. O mein Herz, gieb dich zufrieden. Waiting on God. 1st pub., 1841, as above, p. 160, in 5 st. of 8 l., and entitled, "Tranquillity." Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 1955. The tr. in C. U. is:—

O my heart, be calm and patient. A tr. of st. i., ii., v., by Miss Borthwick, as No. 243 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "O my heart, be calm, confiding." By Miss Burlington, in the British Herald, June 1866, p. 287; and in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. (2) "O my heart, be thou content." By J. Kelly, 1885, p. 75. [J. M.]

Streatfeild, Charlotte, née Saint, eldest daughter of the Rev. J. J. Saint, Rector of Speldhurst, was b. at Speldhurst, Dec. 31, 1829, and married, in 1862, to Charles N. Streatfeild, Lieutenant, Royal Navy, eldest s. of Major General Streatfeild, Royal Engineers. Mrs. Streatfeild has pub.:—

(1) Hymns and Verses on the Collects; Lond., Longmans, 1865. (2) Hymns on the Love of Jesus, and the Home above; Lond., Skeffington & Son, 1877. (3) A Little Garland of the Saints, and Other Verses; Lond., Mowbray, 1877. (4) The Story of the Good Shepherd; Lond., Skeffington, 1885. Mrs. Streatfeild also contributed to Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

The following include Mrs. Streatfeild's hymns in C. U.:—

1. And didst Thou hanger then, O Lord. 1st S. in Lent. Appeared in her Hys. and Verses on the Collects, 1865.

2. Brothers, tread the holy portals. For the Dedication of a Church. Pub. by Skeffington, with music by M. S. Skeffington. A Processional.

3. He scarcely felt the cruel stones. St. Stephen. Pub. in her Hys. and Verses on the Collects, 1865.

4. High o'er the glittering temple. Gospel For 1st S.

in Lent. Contributed to Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

5. How beautiful the hills of God. Gospel, 1st S. in Lent. Contributed to Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

6. I linger round the fold of God. Lent. Pub. in The Story of the Good Shepherd, 1885.

7. In the Paradise of Jesus. Heaven. Appeared in her Hys. on the Love of Jesus, &c., 1877.

8. Jesus, tender Shepherd, Seeking for Thine own. The Good Shepherd. Pub. in The Story of the Good Shepherd, 1885.

9. Sweet Shepherd, Thou hast sought me. The Good Shepherd. Appeared in her Hys. on the Love of Jesus, &c., 1877; and The Story of the Good Shepherd, 1885.

10. There is joy amongst the angels. Joy in Heaven over Repenting Sinners. Pub. in her Hys. on the Love of Jesus, &c., 1877; and The Story of the Good Shepherd, 1885.

Mrs. Streatfeild has also a "Litany for a Children's Service," in A Little Garland of the Saints, 1877. Nos. 1, 3, 4, 5 and 7 of the above hymns are in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, and they all rank with the sweetest and most tender of modern verses for children. Some have been arranged as songs, and have been set to music by M. S. Skeffington. Mrs. Streatfeild's prose works include Meditations on the Seven Last Words, 1874; and Words of Comfort, 1875. [J. J.]

Strong, Nathan, D.D., a leading Congregational divine of his day, was b. at Coventry, Connecticut, Oct. 16, 1748, and educated at Yale College, where he graduated in 1769. He first studied law, but soon turned his attention to the ministry. In January 1774 he became the Pastor of the First Congregational Church at Hartford, and remained there to his death in 1816. In 1796 he won much repute through his essay on The Doctrine of Eternal Misery consistent with the Infinite Benevolence of God. He founded The Connecticut Evangelical Magazine, in 1800, and also took a prominent part in establishing the Connecticut Home Mission Society in 1801. His degree of D.D. was conferred by the University of Princeton. His services to American hymnology, as the principal editor of the Hartford Sel. [American Hymnody, p. 57, ii.], 1799, have been very great. As in that Sel. the author's names were not given, most of his numerous contributions thereto cannot be identified. Six of these hymns, however, are reproduced in Nettleton's Village Hymns, 1824, with his name attached thereto. These are:—

1. Alas, alas, how blind I've been. The Sinner awakened.

2. Blest Lord, behold the guilty scorn. Prayer for opposers to Revivals.

3. Long have I walked this dreary road. The Sinner's Complaint.

4. Sinner, behold, I've heard thy groans. The Pardoning God.

5. Smote by the law, I'm justly slain. The Law, and the Gospel.

6. The summer harvest spreads the fields. The Great Harvest.

In addition to these the following are from the Hartford Sel., 1799 (but not in the Village Hys.) They are the best known and most widely used of Strong's hymns:—

7. Almighty Sovereign of the skies. National Thanksgiving.

8. Swell the anthem, raise the song. National Thanksgiving.

Stryker, Melancthon Woolsey, D.D., s. of the Rev. Isaac Pierson Stryker, was b. at Vernon, New York, Jan. 7, 1851, and educated at Hamilton College (1872) and Auburn Theological Seminary (1876). In 1876 he entered the Presbyterian ministry as Pastor at Auburn, New York. In 1878 he removed to Ithaca, N. Y.; in 1883 to Holyoke, Massachusetts, and in 1885 to Chicago, Illinois. He received his degree of D.D. from Hamilton College in 1889. He has edited Christian Chorals, 1885; New Alleluia, 1880-86; and Church Song, 1889. He was also joint editor with H. P. Main of The Church Praise Book, 1882. He has also pub. Hymns and Verses, 1883, and Song of Miriam, and Other Hymns and Verses, 1888. To two of these works which have been designed for daily use in divine worship Dr. Stryker contributed the following original hymns:—

- i. The Church Praise Book, 1882.
 1. Burst forth, O Bridegroom, from Thy chamber bright. Second Advent Desired. (1880.)
 2. Death cannot make my soul afraid. Death Contemplated. (1881.)
 3. Eternal day hath dawned. Heaven. (1881.)
 4. Mighty God, Thy Church recover. Missions. (1881.)
 5. Ring again, ye starry chime. Christmas. (1881.)
 6. Sing, Israel, for the Lord your strength. Passing the Red Sea. (1878.)
 7. The tribes of faith from all the earth. Heaven. (1881.)
 8. Thy Kingdom come, O blessed Son of God. Second Advent Desired. (1880.) Re-written in Church Song, 1889, as "Thy Kingdom come, O everlasting Lord."
 9. When the everlasting Lord. Morning. (1880.)
- ii. Church Song, 1889.
 10. Arouse Thy Church, Almighty God. Missions. (1887.)
 11. Father, as here we bow. Holy Trinity. (1886.)
 12. Four hundred years their course have sped. American National Hymn. (1888.)
 13. God of our Fathers, our God to-day. National Hymn. (1889.)
 14. Lo, where that spotless Lamb for sin provided. Passiontide. (1884.)
 15. My Maker, at Thy holy throne. Holy Baptism. (1888.)
 16. O God, Thy judgments give the King, Thy Son. Missions. (1883.)
 17. O Thou, Eternal, Changeless, Infinite. Praise to God. (1882.)
 18. O Thou, Omnipresent. Omnipresence of the Father. (1885.)
 19. O Thou Shepherd of Thine Israel, hear us. Ps. lxxx. (1883.)
 20. Our God, and our Redeemer. Opening of a Place of Worship. (1883.)
 21. Robbed, bruised, and dying, once I lay. The Good Samaritan. (1886.)
 22. Sing, every boy and maiden. Praise to God. (1885.)
 23. Thou, Lord of my life, by the words Thou hast said. Lent. (1887.)
 24. Thy grace is all of grace. Divine Grace. (1886.)
 25. To Thee, our God, these babes we bring. Holy Baptism. (1886.)
 26. Tranquilly, slowly, solemnly, lowly. Burial. (1884.)
 27. We close Thy blessed Word. Sunday Evening. (1887.)
 28. While all the night-stars fade and wane. Easter. (1884.)

In addition to these original hymns Dr. Stryker has several translations from the German which are in C. U., and are noted in this Dictionary (see Index of Authors and Translators). One of his hymns, No. 513, "Now I lay me down to sleep" (Child's Evening hymn), in Church Song, 1889 (dated 1884), begins with a stanza by another hand. In the same work there are also several of his tunes. Dr. Stryker's hymns are massive and rugged, full of dogmatism and fire, but they lack unity and purity of rhythm. In some instances words stand for thoughts, and exclamations for ideas.

Nevertheless a few will live. (See also American Hymnody in Various.) [J. J.]

Stubbs, Jonathan. [Staffordshire Hymn-books.]

Sturm, Christoph Christian, s. of Johann Jakob Sturm, lawyer (Imperial notary) at Augsburg, was b. at Augsburg, Jan. 25, 1740. He studied at the universities of Jena (M.A. 1761) and Halle. He was then appointed, in 1762, as one of the masters in the Paedagogium at Halle, and in 1765 became Conceptor of the school at Sorau, in Brandenburg. In 1767 he returned to Halle as fourth pastor of the Market Church, and became third pastor in the same year. He left Halle in 1769, to become second pastor of the church of the Holy Spirit at Magdeburg, where he passed the happiest part of his professional life, and where he wrote most of his devotional works. Finally, in 1778, he was appointed chief pastor of St. Peter's Church at Hamburg. Here he at first lived happily, beloved and respected as a preacher and author, until, in 1782, his views on the Salvation of the Heathen led J. M. Goetze, chief pastor of St. Katherine's Church in Hamburg, to accuse him of Rationalism, &c. The resulting controversy embittered and shortened Sturm's life. In his latter years he suffered from a weak chest; and in the night of Aug. 10-11, 1786, he was seized with an attack of spitting of blood, from which he never recovered. He d. at Hamburg, on Aug. 26, 1786 (Koch, vi., 357; Bode, p. 158, &c.).

Sturm is best known to English readers by his devotional works, which were for some time very popular, viz., his "Conferences with God in the Morning Hours" (Unterhaltungen mit Gott in der Morgenstunden, &c., Halle, 1768), and his "Reflections on the Works of God" (Betrachtungen über die Werke Gottes, &c., Halle, 1772-76). He was one of the most prolific hymn-writers of the Rationalistic period, being the author of more than 400 hymns. His productions are less dreary than most of the time, and are not without earnestness, devoutness, and lyric power; but they are often too rhetorical, and not sufficiently simple. They found great favour with the compilers of hymn-books from 1765 to 1845, but not many of them are retained in later collections. His specialties were hymns on the Works of God in Nature, and hymns for Children. Long lists of his works are given by Koch and Bode. We need only note the following:—(1) Christ am Sonntage, Halle & Leipzig, 1764-65 [Hamburg Library]. This was a weekly paper, which contained 88 hymns by Sturm. (2) Sammlung geistlicher Gesänge über die Werke Gottes in der Natur, Halle, 1775 [Brit. Mus. and Wernigerode Library]. Over 40 of the hymns are originals by Sturm. (3) Vollständiges Gesangbuch für Kinder, Halle, 1777 [Hamburg Library]. More than 60 hymns seem to have been written by Sturm for this work. (4) Predigtentwürfe, Hamburg, 1779-86 [Brit. Mus.]. An eight years' course of sermon outlines on the Gospels for Sundays and Festivals; with over 80 hymns by Sturm, some being recasts from other authors. (5) Lieder und Kirchengesänge, Hamburg, 1780 [Royal Library, Hannover]. With 54 hymns, many being recasts of his earlier hymns, made by himself or by J. S. Diterich. (6) Gesangbuch für Gartenfreunde und Liebhaber der Natur, Hamburg, 1781 [Hamburg Library]. More than 60 of the hymns seem to have been written by Sturm for this work.

The hymns by Sturm which have passed into English are:—

- i. Auferstanden, auferstanden, Ist der Herr, der uns versöhnt. Easter. In his Predigtentwürfe, vol. iii., 1781, p. 144, in 5 st. of 8 l. It is based on J. C. Lavater's "Auferstanden, auferstanden" (in his Zweites Fünfundzig christlicher Lieder, Zürich, 1776), and on Johann Friedrich Dannel's [b. Nov. 21, 1719, at Quedlinburg; d. there, Feb. 10, 1772, as Consistorialrath and pastor of St. Giles's (Agidius) church], "Hallelujah! Jesus lebet" (in his Christliche Empfindungen, Quedlinburg, 1762). Sturm's hymn is in the Hamburg G. B. 1787, No. 109

(1842, No. 195), and has been tr. as "Christ is risen, Christ is risen, He by Whom." By N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 191, repeated in the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1881.

ii. Dank, Dank, sey dir für dein Erbarmen. This is noted at p. 279, ii.

iii. Ein Pilgrim bin ich in der Welt. Christian Pilgrimage. In his Christ am Sonntage, vol. ii., p. 359 (number for Sunday, Nov. 18, 1764), in 7 st. of 7 l., entitled "The Consolation of Eternity." Tr. as "I'm but a weary pilgrim here." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 168.

iv. Gott, wenn mein Aug', der Welt entrückt. For the Dying. In his Christ am Sonntage, vol. iii., p. 30 (at the end of a meditation in a churchyard on the Last Judgment, for Sunday Dec. 9, 1764), in 5 st. of 12 l. In the Berlin G. B., 1765, No. 124, it begins, "Mein Heiland, wenn mein Geist erfreut." This form is repeated by Sturm, in 1780, as above, p. 18, and has been tr. as "Dear Saviour, while I here am blest." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 131 (1856, p. 184).

v. Heut öffnet sich die neue Bahn. New Year. In his Predigtwürfe, vol. vi., 1784, p. 40, in 4 st. of 7 l., given for New Year's Day, 1784. In the Hamburg G. B., 1787, No. 357 (1842, No. 691). The trs. are:— (1) "Life's course must recommence to-day." By Miss Coz, 1841, p. 49. (2) "I now commence a separate stage." By Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 18.

vi. Schmal ist der Weg, auf welchem Christen gehen. Christian Pilgrimage. In his Christ am Sonntage, vol. i., p. 130 (for Sunday, Jan. 22, 1764), in 9 st. of 4 l., entitled, "The Way to Heaven." Repeated 1780, as above, p. 80, in 5 st., st. iii.-v. being new, and beginning, "Schmal ist der Pfad." Repeated thus in the Württemberg G. B., 1791, No. 397. Tr. as "The way of Christians leads through deserts dreary." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 110 (1856, p. 154).

vii. Wenn der Erde Gründe beben. Second Advent. In his Lieder und Kirchengesänge, 1780, p. 73, in 5 st. of 5 l., entitled, "The Day of the World's Judgment," and beginning, "Wann der Erde." In the Württemberg G. B., 1791, No. 363. Tr. as "When the solid earth is quaking." By C. W. Shields, in Sacred Lyrics from the German, Philadelphia 1859, p. 215. [J. M.]

Sturm, Julius Carl Reinhold, was b. July 21, 1816, at Köstritz, in the principality of Reuss (younger line). After being a student of theology at Jena, from 1837 to 1841, he was for two years a private tutor at Heilbronn on the Neckar, and then, for a year, at Friesen, in Saxony. In 1845 he became tutor to Prince Heinrich xiv. of Reuss; and after the Prince's confirmation, in 1848, acted as tutor to him for three years more at the Gymnasium in Meiningen. He was then appointed pastor at Göschitz, near Schleiz, in the end of 1850; and pastor at Köstritz, in 1858, where he still (1889) lives as Kirchenrath and Court preacher (Koch, vii. 284; ms. from the author, &c.). Sturm is one of the most important of modern German sacred poets. Among his works of this nature may be mentioned:—

(1) Gedichte, Leipzig, 1850; 3rd ed., 1862. (2) Fromme Lieder, Leipzig, 1852; 6th ed., 1867. (3) Zwei Rosen, oder das hohe Lied der Liebe, Leipzig, 1854; = version of Canticles. (4) Neue fromme Lieder und Gedichte, Leipzig, 1858; 2nd ed., 1870. (5) Israel's Weg zur Herrlichkeit, Erlangen, 1858; 2nd ed., as Israelitische Lieder, Halle, 1867. (6) Von der Pilgerfahrt, Halle, 1868. (7) Gott grüsse dich. Religiöse Gedichte, Leipzig, 1876. (8) Aufwärts, Leipzig, 1881. (9) Ich bau auf Gott. Neue religiöse Gedichte, Bremen, 1883. (10) Palme und Krone, Bremen, 1888.

From these works a large number of pieces have passed into recent collections of German sacred poetry, and a few into recent German official hymn-books. A considerable number have been tr. by Lady John Manners, the Rev. J. Kelly, and others, but none have passed into English hymn-books. [J. M.]

Sturm, Leonhard, became Master in the Latin School, and Cantor (precentor) in St.

George's Church, at Nördlingen, Bavaria, in 1635. In the church registers at Nördlingen he is described as "of Fehlbürg in the Pfalz" (? Palzburg in Alsace). He d. at Nördlingen, Sept. 11, 1682, aged 74 (Blätter für Hymnologie, 1886, p. 62; 1888, pp. 17-19, 178, &c.).

Eight hymns, by Sturm, are included in the Appz. to the New-vermehrte christliche Seel-harpp, Onoltzbach (Ansbach), 1664-65 [Heidelberg University Library]; and eleven in the Nördlingischer Kirchen-Schall, oder Geistliche Seelen-Lust, Nördlingen, 1676 [Wernigerode Library]. Only one of these has passed into English, viz.,

Ich fahr dahin mit Freuden. For the Dying. The first stanza is taken almost verbatim from a piece by Martin Rinkart (see p. 963, ii.). Sturm added to this seven stanzas, which carry out Rinkart's idea without borrowing almost anything more from him. The initial letters of Sturm's eight stanzas form the acrostic Jacobina; this being the name of his second wife, Maria Jacobina, to whom he was married in 1646, and who d. in 1687. Possibly the hymn was written at some period when she was dangerously ill. Sturm's hymn appeared in the Nördlingen G. B., 1676, as above (it is not in the Ansbach G. B., 1664-65); and in the Blätter, 1888, p. 18, is reprinted, in full, from the Nördlingen G. B. of 1684. It is also in the Leich-Gesang-Büchlein, Rothenburg on the Tauber, 1679, p. 108, in the Württemberg G. B., 1741, No. 321, and others. Tr. as:—

I journey forth rejoicing. This is a somewhat free version of st. i.-iii., vi., vii., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 71 (1884, p. 71). Repeated, in full, in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860; the Christian H. Bk., Cincinnati, 1865, &c.; and, omitting st. iii., in Kennedy, 1868. The trs. of st. iii., vi., vii., beginning, "Why thus so sadly weeping," are No. 63, in J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865. [J. M.]

Sublime numen, ter potens, ter maximum. [Holy Trinity.] Appeared in the Sens Brev., 1726, and the Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn at Matins for Trinity Sunday. Text in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. God most high, thrice mighty God. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, Trinity, No. 8; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 90.

Other trs. are:—

1. All-good, all-great, all-mighty, Three in One. I. Williams, in the British Mag. Sep. 1839, and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 161.

2. Godhead sublimest. Thrice great, &c. J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Summae Deus clementiae. St. ii., Da dexteram surgentibus. [Trinity Sunday.] This cento was added to the Roman Breviary at the revision of 1568, and is found at p. 433 of the ed. pub. at Rome in 1570, as the hymn at Matins on Trinity Sunday. It consists of st. i. of the hymn noted below, and of st. ii. of the hymn, "Aeterna coeli gloria," with an added doxology. At the revision of 1628-32 st. i. was rewritten, beginning, "Summae Parens clementiae" (st. ii. "Da dexteram surgentibus"), and this form is repeated in the editions of this revision, and in Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Parent of all, Whose love displayed. By Bp. R. Mant, in his Ancient Hys., &c., 1837, p. 65, ed. 1871, p. 113. In the English Hyl., 1852 and 1861, it is altered to "Almighty God, Whose love displayed."

2. Thou eternal Source of love. St. ii. Be nigh to us, &c. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 109, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 62. It is given in a few collections only.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. O God, by Whose command is sway'd. Primer, 1706. In O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

2. Parent of highest clemency. A. J. B. Hope, 1844.

3. Of boundless love Parental Source. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

4. Great Source of goodness, Godhead blest. St. ii. Give Thy right Hand. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Summae Deus clementiae Mundique factor machinae. [Saturday Morning.] This has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, as by Hinemar, in his "De unâ et non trinâ Deitate," 857, but it is not one of the twelve hymns received as genuine by the Benedictine editors of St. Ambrose, nor is it included by Biraghi as one of the Inni sinceri e Carmi di Sant' Ambrogio, 1862. Daniel, i. No. 24, gives both this text and that of the Roman Brev., 1632 (see below), and at iv. p. 38, cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent., ranking it among the hymns of the 7th or 8th cent. Mone, i. p. 372, cites it as in a ms. of the 8th cent. at Trier. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 24b; Jul. A. vi. f. 30; Harl. 2961, f. 224b): in a Mozarabic Hymnarium of the 11th cent. (Add. 30851, f. 175); a Mozarabic Breviary of the 11th cent. (Add. 30848, f. 80), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 237); in three mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413, 414; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 9). In the Roman Breviary, 1632, it begins "Summae Parens clementiae, Mundi regis qui machinam." The original form is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, for Saturday at Matins. This text is also to be found in Wackernagel, i. No. 5; Hymnarium Sarisb. 1851, p. 57; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a ms. of the 10th cent., &c. The revised text of the Roman Breviary, 1632, is given in the recent eds. of that revision, in Daniel, i. No. 24, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. See also note on the previous hymn. [J. M.]

Both forms of this hymn have been rendered in English, viz. :—

i. Summae Deus clementiae, Mundique.

1. O God of mercies infinite. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55.

2. Thou Framer of earth's fabric! hear. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852, p. 248.

3. Great God of boundless mercy, hear. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 31. This is given in the Hymner, 1882, with extensive alterations, as, "O God of mercy passing thought."

ii. Summae Parens clementiae, Mundi.

1. O Thou eternal Source of love. St. ii. For Thy dear mercy's sake, &c. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 33, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 20. In limited use.

2. Great God, eternal Source of love. In Hys. for the Year, 1867. No. 214. E. Caswall, altered.

3. Father of mercies infinite. By Card. Newman, in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 68; and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 215. It is in the Marquess of Bute's Roman Brev., into English, 1879, O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, &c., and several other collections.

Other trs. are :—

1. O God, by Whose command is sway'd. Primer, 1706.

2. O God of graciousness, Maker of all we see. Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.

3. Paternal Source of love divine. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

4. Father, Thou Whose love and care. R. Campbell, 1850.

5. Great Source of goodness, Godhead blest. St. ii., May we Thy mercy, &c. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Summae, Deus, clementiae, Septem Dolores Virginis. [Dolours of the B. V. M.] This is the hymn at Lauds in the office of the Seven Dolours, which was declared in 1814 to be of obligation. The office is found in the Proprium officiorum . . . ordinis servorum B. M. V. in Germania, Prague, 1720, and includes three hymns, viz. :—

Vespers. O quot undis lachrymarum. (See Variou.)

Matins. Jam toto subitus. (p. 578, ii.)

Lauds. Summae, Deus, clementiae.

In the Kempton ed., 1746, of the Roman Breviary, this hymn is at p. clx. The text is to be found in recent eds. of that Breviary, and also in Daniel iv., p. 308. Tr. as :—

1. God, in Whom all grace doth dwell. E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 173; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 93. It is given in a few Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools.

2. God of mercy, let us run. By F. W. Faber, in Hys. for the use of the Schools and Cong. of St. Wilfrid's Staffordshire, 1849; Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849; Oratory Hys., 1854, and his Hymns, 1862.

Another tr. is :—

Great God of clemency supreme. By J. Wallace, 1874. [J. M.]

Summe Pater, O Creator. [Life of our Lord.] This appears in J. M. Horst's Paradisus Animae Christianiae, Cologne, 1644, pp. 366-71, in the Section "On the Life and Passion of our Lord." It is entitled, "Rosarium D. N. Jesu Christi, praecipua vitae ac Passionis ejus puncta, grata brevitate complectens: et uberem meditandi materiam, faciliemque praxin suppeditans." It opens with an introduction in 19 lines, the rest being divided into decades i.-v. There are three trs. of the complete poem, made in this order, viz. :—(1) In Dr. Pusey's tr. of the Paradisus Animae Christianiae, 1847, where, according to Canon Liddon, the tr. is probably by W. J. Copeland; (2) by F. W. Faber, in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 2nd ed., 1852, and (3) by Canon F. Oakeley, in his tr. of the Paradisus, 1850. These trs., in the order of the poem, are :—

Summe Pater, O Creator.

1. Father, All-creating Mind. Pusey.

2. Father! Creator! Lord most high. Faber.

3. Father most high, Who didst us make. Oakeley.

Jesu thronum majestatis.

1. Jesu, for lost sinners' sake. Pusey.

2. Jesus, Whom Thy throne didst come. Faber.

3. Jesu, Thy throne of glory Thou. Oakeley.

Jesu, fonte baptizans.

1. Jesu, as the waters crown Thee. Pusey.

2. Jesus, the Father's words approve. Faber.

3. Jesu, baptized, the Father's voice. Oakeley.

Jesu Deus et magister.

1. Jesu, Lord and Master great. Pusey.

2. Jesus, Who deemdest it not unmeet. Faber.

3. Jesus, our Lord and Master, Thou. Oakeley.

Jesu cruceum dum portabas.

1. Jesu, now the hard cross bearing. Pusey.

2. Jesus, along Thy proper road. Faber.

3. Jesus, along Thy tearful road. Oakeley.

Jesu nostros ob reatus.

1. Jesu, by that Death of pain. Pusey.

2. Jesus, all hail, Who for my sin. Faber.

3. Jesu, because of all our guilt. Oakeley.

From these trs. the following hymns have come into C. U. :—

1. Father, Creator, Lord most high. Faber.
2. Jesus, along the Calvary road. Faber.
3. Jesus, all hail, Who for my sin. Faber.
4. Jesus, Who from the dead arose. Faber.

These appeared in the Cooke and Denton Church Hymnal, 1853. Another series of centos is in the Roman Catholic Parochial H. Bk., n.d. [1880]:—

1. Jesus! Thou didst a Mother choose. Faber.
2. Jesus! the spacious world was Thine. Faber.
3. Jesus! the Father's words approve. Faber.
4. Jesus! how toiled Thy blessed feet. Faber.
5. Jesus! Who saw'st on that sad night. Faber.
6. Jesus! Who to the Father prayed. Faber.
7. Jesus! Who in the garden felt. Faber.
8. Jesus! all hail, Who for my sin. Faber.
9. Jesus! Who from the dead arose. Faber.

There is also a cento from Faber:—"O Lord along Thy chosen road." J. Austin gives, in his Devotions in the Antient Way of Offices, 1668, two centos from this poem:—"Jesu, Who from Thy Father's throne;" and (2) "Jesu, Whose grace inspires Thy priests." These, tr. by Austin, are reprinted in Griffith, Farran, & Co.'s Ancient and Modern Library (Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory and Triumph), 1888. From the cento "Jesu, Whose grace inspires Thy priests," as given in Hickes's reprint of Austin's Devotions, 1687 (see p. 97, i.), J. Wesley took st. ii.—vii., and gave them, with slight alterations, in his Charles-Town Ps. and Hys., 1736-37, and again in the Wesley Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739, as:—"Jesu, behold the wise from far" (Wesley, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 116). This is repeated in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862. [J. J.]

Summer ended, harvest o'er. G. Philimore. [Harvest.] Contributed to the Parish H. Bk., 1863, No. 180, in 8 st. of 4 l.; of which lines 3, 4, of st. i., and the whole of st. iii., were by the late Bp. Woodford, of Ely. The hymn was repeated in the Sarum Hyl., 1868, the Hymnary, 1872, the 1875 ed. of the Parish H. Bk., and others. [J. J.]

Summers, Thomas Osmond, D.D., LL.D., son of James Summers, was b. near Corfe Castle, Dorsetshire, England, Oct. 11, 1812. Proceeding to the United States in after years, he was admitted to the Baltimore Conference in 1835. From 1840 to 1843 he was a missionary in Texas; removing to Tuscaloosa, Alabama, 1844, and Charleston, South Carolina, 1846. From 1845 he acted as Secretary of the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was also Book Editor. Subsequently he was Professor of Theology and Pastor of Vanderbilt University. He was Chairman of the Hymn Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and edited the Songs of Zion, 1851, and the Wesleyan Psalter, 1855. He d. in May 1882. Dr. Summers is the author of several original works, and of the following hymns:—

1. The morning bright, With rosy light. Morning.
2. The daylight fades, The evening shades. Evening.

Concerning these Morning and Evening hymns Dr. Summers says:—

"My first child was born in January, 1845. When she was about a year old, as I was descending the Tombigbee River in a little steamer, I wrote a morning Hymn for her on the back of a letter, transcribed it when I reached Mobile, and sent it to her at Tuscaloosa. That was the origin of 'The morning bright.' When editing the Southern Christian Advocate, I put it without name in the Child's Department. It was copied into the religious papers generally, and into books. My second child was born in 1847, and for her I wrote 'The daylight fades,' as far as I can recollect, about 1849. . . . Both of these children for whom they were written are now singing hallelujahs with the angels." (Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. & Home, Biog. Index, 1873.)

These hymns have attained to great popularity as children's hymns, and are found in numerous collections both at home and in Great Britain. The 3rd l. of st. i. of the Morning Hymn should read: "Has waked me up from sleep," and not as found in many collections. [F. M. B.]

Summi largitor praeemii. [Lent.] Sometimes ascribed to St. Gregory the Great, but not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors. It is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii., f. 54b; Harl. 2961, f. 237b.; Add. 30848, f. 95b); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 67, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 196). In these mss. it begins "Summe largitor." Among the St. Gall mss. it is in No. 95 of the 10th or 11th cent., and No. 414 of the 11th. It is also in a 10th cent. ms. at Bern, No. 455. Also in the Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Sarum use being at Matins on the 1st S. and daily up to the 3rd S. in Lent. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 75; Daniel, i. No. 153, iv. p. 217; Wackernagel, i. No. 98; Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a ms. of the 10th cent., &c. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. O Thou Who dost to man accord. By J. W. Hewett, in his Verses by a Country Curate, 1859, p. 34, from the text as in Daniel. It was included in an altered form in H. A. & M., 1861. The H. A. & M. text was repeated in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., &c.
2. Giver of the perfect gift. By J. Ellerton, made for and first pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, and again in Mr. Ellerton's Hymns, &c., 1888.

3. Thou only hope of all below. An anonymous tr. in The Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. Thou Giver of august reward. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
2. Dispenser of the gifts of heaven. J. D. Chambers, 1852, and 1857. [J. J.]

Summi Parentis Filio. [Lent. The Sacred Heart of Jesus.] Probably of the 18th cent. In the Roman Breviary, Lisbon, 1786, pars estiv. p. 461, it is the hymn at Lauds in the office of the Most Sacred Heart of our Lord Jesus Christ. Text also in Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867. (See note on Quicumque certum quaeritis.) Tr. as:—

To Christ, the Prince of Peace. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 123, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 69. It is in a great many modern hymn-books, usually unaltered, but sometimes with the changes in the text made in H. A. & M.

Another tr. is:—

To Jesus, Son of God most high. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. M.]

Summi pusillus grex Patris. Guillaume de la Brunetiere [Common of a Just Man. Saints' Days.] Appeared in the *Paris
Brev.*, 1680 and 1736. Also in the *Narbonne
Brev.*, 1709, as the hymn for first and second Vespers, in the Common of Just Persons. It is also in later French Breviaries; in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No.
99; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae,
1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

Be not afraid, ye little flock. I. Williams, as the first of a series of trs. from the Paris Brev., contributed by him to the British Magazine.
This appeared in Dec. 1833. It was republished in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 314, and in the 1863 ed. of the Appendix to the H. Noted, No. 201.

Other trs. are:—

1. Thou little flock whose Shepherd is above. *J.
Chandler.* 1837.
2. To God, your mightiest Father, dear. J. D. Chambers. 1866.

3. Little flock, be not afraid. D. T. Morgan. 1880.
[J. J.]

Summi Regis potentia. [St. Andrew.]
This is found in a ms. of the early part of the 14th cent. in the Bodleian (Ashmole, 1523,
f. 236b), as a hymn in 6 st. and a doxology for the "Translation of St. Andrew." Mr. Chambers erroneously quotes the first line as "Rex Jesu potentissime." Mr. Chambers's
tr. "O King Supreme, of boundless might," appeared in the 1863 Appendix to the *H.
Noted*, No. 168, and again in his *Lauda
Syon*, Pt. ii. 1866. [J. M.]

Supernae matris gaudia. *Adam of St.
Victor.* [All Saints.] This sequence is, as Dr. Neale justly remarks, "one of the loveliest that Adam ever wrote." In it, contrary to the usual practice, the church triumphant is spoken of as the mother, the church militant as the daughter. Gautier, in his ed. 1881 of Adam's Oeuvres poetiques, gives it at p. 200 from a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl.
Nat., Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and says it is also in a 12th cent. Antiphony now in the Library at Chaumont, and formerly of the monastery of Montierender. It is also in a collection of sequences written circa 1199 (Calig.
A. xiv. f. 85), and a French Missal of the end of the 13th cent. (Add. 23935, f. 439 b), both in the British Museum; and in a ms. of the latter half of the 13th cent. in the Bodleian (Rawlinson, C., 510, f. 25 b). Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 232 b), the Saintes of 1491, and others. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 623; Daniel, v. p. 109; Kehrein, No. 338; and D. S. Wrangham's *Lit.
Poetry of Adam of St. Victor*, 1881, vol. iii.
p. 170. [J. M.]

J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Noted,
1854, and again in his Mediæval Hys., 2nd ed., 1863. It has passed into a few collections, including the People's H., 1867, the Hymner, 1882, &c.

2. The strains of joy that ceaseless flow. By Harriet M. Chester, made for and first pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, and signed "H. M. C."

3. Christ's Church in heaven to-day, Rejoiceth.
By C. S. Calverley, also made for and first pub.
in the Hymnary, 1872. In the 2nd ed. 1872, it was considerably altered, and begins, "Christ's Church in heaven is glad to-day."

Supreme High Priest, the Pilgrim's
Light. A. M. Toplady. [Christ the High Priest, or Lent.] 1st pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, Dublin, 1759, p. 20, in 12 st.
of 4 l., and again in Sedgwick's reprint of Top-lady's Poetical Works, 1860. In Drummond and Greville's Ch. of England H. Bk., 1838, st. v.-viii. were given, unaltered, as "Ah, give me, Lord, the single eye." These stanzas have passed into later collections. [J. J.]

Supreme Motor cordium. C. Coffin.
[Saturday Evening; or Quinquagesima.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and his Hymni Sacri, p. 31, the same year. It is the hymn for Saturdays at Vespers from Trinity to Advent. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 34; Card.
Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. Supreme Disposer of the heart. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 31, and a few hymnals.

2. Great Mover of all hearts, Whose hand. By
I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839. This is the most popular and widely used of the trs. of this hymn. It is in a large number of hymn-books, including *H. A. &
M.*, 1875, Thring's Coll., 1882, and others.

3. Lord of the hearts of men. Bp. J. R. Woodford, in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, No. 30, and again in the enlarged ed., 1875. It is also in the Sarum Hyl., 1868, and the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. Great Mover of the heart, Alone. R. Campbell.
1850.

2. Thou Ruler of the human heart. J. D. Chambers.
1857.

3. O Sovereign Mover of the heart. D. T. Morgan.
1880. [J. J.]

Supreme quales, Arbitrator. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil [Festival of an Apostle]. This is given in the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. ii.; his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 190 (ed. 1698,
p. 236); the Paris Brev., 1736; and later French Brevs. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 86, with the omission of a stanza; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. Disposer Supreme, And Judge of the earth. I.
Williams, pub., together with the Latin, in the British Magazine, June 1836 (vol. ix. p. 627), and again in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 271. It has passed, either in its full form or abbreviated, into a large number of hymn-books. Of the altered texts the most popular is that in H. A. & M., 1861-75. For congregational purposes this is one of the most successful of the translator's efforts.

2. What feeble instruments, O Lord. By J.

Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 97, and again in his Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 55. In a few of the older collections.

3. Imperial Monarch! Judge divine. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, Pt. ii., 1866, p. 3.

4. O Lord, through instruments how weak. C. S. Calverley, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872. [J. J.]

Supreme Rector coelitum. [Whitsun Eve.] This anonymous hymn is in the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. 506; the Paris Brev., 1736, and later French Brevs. The text from the Paris Brev. is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 78; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M. Tr. as:—

1. Ruler of the hosts of light. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 88. It is found in a few collections. The popular tr. of this hymn is the cento in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875. It is thus composed: st. i., Chandler; st. ii. ll. 1, 2, Chandler, ll. 3, 4, Compilers; st. iii., Compilers; st. iv. v., Chandler, rewritten by the Compilers.

2. Bread King, to Whom the angelic hosts do cry. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brevariary, 1839, p. 148; and Lyra Messianica, 1864.

3. Sovereign of heaven, Who didst prevail. By C. S. Calverley, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. O King, most high, of earth and sky. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

2. Celestial Monarch, strong to quell. J. D. Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

Surrexit Christus hodie. [Easter.]

This hymn, or rather Easter Carol, exists in a great variety of forms. For the determination of the original text we have three mss. of the 14th cent., viz., a Munich ms. of the 14th cent., cited by Mone, No. 143; a Prag ms. of the 14th cent. cited by G. M. Dreyes in his Cantiones Bohemicae, No. 183, and an Engelberg ms. of 1372 cited by Bäumker, i. p. 517. From these we obtain the following:—

1	5
"Surrexit Christus hodie Humano pro solamine.	"Mulieres o tremulae, In Galilaeam pergite.
2	6
"Mortem qui passus cor- pore Miserrimo pro homine.	"Discipulis hoc dicite, Quod surrexit rex gloriae.
3	7
"Mulieres ad tumulum Dona ferunt aromatum.	"Paschali pleno gaudio Benedicamus Domino.
4	8
"Album videntes angelum Annunciantem gaudium.	"Laudetur sancta Tri- nitas. Deo dicamus gratias."

Of these eight stanzas 1-4 and 6 are found in all three mss., 5 in the Engelberg and Prag mss., 7 in the Engelberg and Munich, 8 in the Engelberg and Prag. The text above is from the Munich ms.; the only variations of importance in the Prag ms. being ii. l. i., passus pridie and vii. l. i., Ergo cum dulci melodo.

Dreyes gives two additional st. which are probably of Bohemian origin, and are not found in the later printed books, viz.:—

9	10
"Ubique praecedet suos, Quos dilexit, discipulos.	"Sit benedictus hodie, Qui nos redemit san- guine."

He quotes them from two mss. now at Prag, viz. a Hohenfurt ms. circa 1410 (st. i.-x.); and the Gradual of Jistebnicz circa 1420 (st. i.-iii. v.-vii., ix., x.). The later stanzas are apparently all interpolations. Those given by Daniel i., No. 390, are:—

11	12
"Quaerentes Jesum Domi- num Qui est Salvator homi- num.	"Petro delinco et caeteris Apparuit apostolis.

"Gloria tibi Domine Qui surrexisti a morte."

Of these st. 12 is found in the second part of Leisentritt's G. B. (R. C.), 1567; st. 11 in the Dilingen G. B. (R. C.), 1589; and st. 13 in the Speier G. B. (R. C.) printed at Cologne, 1599. The order of stanzas in Daniel's text is 1-3, 11, 4-6, 12, 7, 13, 8; and he gives st. 7, l. 1, as "In hoc paschali gaudio." The Dilingen G. B., 1589, gives four additional st., which need not here be printed. Wackernagel, i., Nos. 276-280, gives various forms of the text. See also Hoffmann von Fallersleben ed., 1861, Nos. 201-204. Also see under Jesus Christ is risen to-day, p. 596, ii. The trs. from the Latin include:—

1. To-day the Victor o'er His foes. By J. M. Neale, in his Medieval Hys., 1851.

2. Lo! Christ is risen this day, and brings. J. W. Hewett, in his Verses by a Country Curate, 1859; and Lyra Messianica, 1864.

It has also often been translated into German. One of these trs. has passed into English, viz.:—

Erstanden ist der heilige Christ. This is found in a great variety of forms. That which is tr. is given by Wackernagel, ii. p. 737, from a broadsheet printed at Nürnberg, 1544, and is No. 135 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. It is in 19 st. of 2 l. with Hallelujah. St. i.-vi. are narrative, vii.-xvii. a dialogue between Mary and the angel, xviii. Mary to the chorus, xix. the chorus. It is based on st. i.-viii., xi. of the Latin. This form probably originally formed part of an Easter play. Tr. as: "Christ our Lord is risen to-day," in Lyra Davidica, 1708, p. 12. [J. M.]

Sutton, Amos, D.D., was b. at Sevenoaks, Kent, on Jan. 21, 1802. Though educated with a view to secular business, when about the age of 21 he felt constrained to offer himself for service in connection with the General Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. He was sent to India; and in the year 1825 was stationed at Cuttack, in the province of Orissa, where, with intervals during which he visited England and America, he laboured most usefully until his death on Aug. 17, 1854. He was gifted as a translator; and compiled an Uriya Dictionary, besides translating a number of English books into that language. He also prepared the first Uriya Hymn Book, 179 of the hymns being of his own composition. [Missions, Foreign.] The degree of D.D. was conferred on him by the College of Waterville, U.S.A. On his visit to England in 1833 he composed a farewell hymn to the tune of "Auld lang syne"—"Hail sweetest, dearest tie that binds." (Parting.) It soon became very popular, and is still in C. U. Another hymn written about the same time, entitled "The Macedonian Cry," is now almost forgotten. [W. R. S.]

Sutton, Henry Septimus, b. at Notting-ham, 1825, the son of a bookseller and newspaper proprietor. He was articled to a surgeon, but abandoned medicine for literature. Mr. Sutton's connection with newspaper work has been life-long, and for upwards of thirty years he has been editor of the Alliance News. His first volume of Poems was issued from the Review office, Nottingham, 1818. This included Clifton Grove Garland, a long descriptive and narrative poem. In 1854 appeared Quinquinergia, a prose work of mystical religion, the author being a member of the New Church. To this was appended a series of poems, entitled Rose's Diary, written in memory of an early friend of the author's, who died in 1850. In successive cantos the changing moods and aspirations of personal religion are depicted, with occasionally a touch of quaintness in the language and imagery which reminds one of the best of the devout poets of the seventeenth century. An enlarged and revised edition of the Poems was published by David M. Main, Glasgow, 1886. In Martineau's Hymns, 1873, appear the following five pieces, selected from Rose's Diary :—

1. I have a little trembling light, which still. The inward light. Canto I. and the last two stanzas of Canto III.
2. O Father! I have sinned: I have done. Under the sense of sin. Canto XI.
3. Put not on me, O Lord, this work divine. Self-distrust and self-surrender. Canto VIII.
4. The day with light its genial self engirds. The outer and inner sunshine. Canto VI.
5. What mean these slow returns of love; these days. The sleep that longs for waking. Canto X. [V. D. D.]

Swain, Joseph, was b. at Birmingham in 1761, and after being apprenticed to an engraver, removed to London. After a time he became a decided Christian, and being of an emotional poetic temperament, began to give expression to his new thoughts and feelings in hymns. In 1783 he was baptized by the Rev. Dr. Rippon, and in 1791 became minister of a Baptist congregation in East Street, Walworth. After a short but popular and very useful ministry, he d. April 16, 1796. Swain pub. the following :—

- (1) A Collection of Poems on Several Occasions, Lon. 1781; (2) Redemption, a Poem in five Books, Lon. 1789; (3) Experimental Essays on Divine Subjects, Lon. 1791; (4) Walworth Hymns, by J. Swain, Pastor of the Baptist Church Meeting there, Lon. 1792, 129 hymns; with Supplement, 1794, 192 hymns; (5) A Pocket Companion and Directory, Lon. 1794.

In addition to a limited number of Swain's hymns, annotated under their respective first lines, the following, from his Walworth Hymns, 1792, and the 2nd ed., 1796, are also in C. U. :—

1. Brethren, while we sojourn here. Mutual Encouragement.
2. Children of the King of grace. Holy Baptism.
3. Christ the Lord will come again. Second Advent.
4. Come, ye souls, by sin afflicted. The Yoke of Christ.
5. How sweet, how heavenly is the sight. Communion of Saints.
6. In expectation sweet. Second Advent.
7. Lift up your heads, ye gates. Ascension.
8. Love is the sweetest bud that blows. A Flower an Emblem of Christ.
9. O how the thought that I shall know. Heaven Anticipated. Sometimes it begins with st. ii., "For ever to behold Him shine" (p. 837, i.).
10. On earth the song begins. Heaven Anticipated.
11. On the wings of faith upspringing. Passiontide.
12. Pilgrims we are to Canaan bound. Pilgrimage of Life.
13. Praise ye the Lord, the eternal King. Divinity of Christ.
14. Praise your Redeemer, praise His Name. Praise for Redemption.
15. 'Tis heaven begun below. Heaven Anticipated.
16. What is it for a saint to die? Death and Burial.
17. What must [will] it be to dwell above? Heaven Anticipated.

18. When firm I [we] stand on Zion's hill. Confidence. Sometimes as "I stand on Zion's mount," in American collections.

19. Who can forbear to sing? Praise of Jesus.

From his Redemption, a Poem in Five Books, 1791, the following hymns are also in C. U. :—

20. O Thou in whose presence my soul takes delight. In Affliction.

21. Ye daughters of Zion, declare, have you seen? Comfort in Affliction.

Of these hymns the most widely known are Nos. 1, 5, 6, and 20. We may add that several of Swain's hymns appeared in The Theological Miscellany, 1784-1789. [W. R. S.]

Swain, Leonard, D.D., was b. at Concord, New Haven, Feb. 26, 1821, and educated at Dartmouth College and Andover. In 1847 he became a Congregational minister at Nashua, New Haven; and in 1852 of Central Church, Providence, Rhode Island. He d. July 14, 1869. His hymns, "My soul, it is thy God" (The Christian Race), and "My soul, weigh not thy life" (The Good Fight of Faith), appeared anonymously in The Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and their authorship has only recently been determined. The second hymn is the more widely used of the two. [F. M. B.]

Swaine, Edward, b. at London, Sep. 21, 1795. He was for about 40 years a deacon of Craven Chapel (Congregational) under the pastorate of Dr. Leifeild and others; one of the directors of the London Missionary Society, and founder and chairman of the Pastors' Insurance Aid Society. He d. April 22, 1862. (Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 441.) Mr. Swaine wrote several tracts, and also printed for private circulation The Hand of God, A Fragment, with Poems, Hymns, and Versions of Psalms, 1839. His hymns, "Hail! blessed communion of love" (Holy Communion), and "Lord Jesus, let Thy watchful care" (For Emigrants), were written in 1855 for the New Cong. H. Bk., and given therein, 1859. See also, "O how the thought that we shall know" (p. 837, i.). [J. J.]

Swedenborgian Hymnody. The hymnody of the religious body known as The New Church signified by the Jerusalem in the Revelation, or briefly, The New Church, commenced with the Rev. Joseph Proud. Proud was the son of a General Baptist minister, and was b. at Beaconsfield, March 22, 1745. Entering the Baptist ministry, he became pastor successively at Knipton, Fleet, and Norwich. In 1788 his religious views underwent a change, and the following year he openly adopted those of Emanuel Swedenborg. He at once broke out into song; and it is told us by his biographer, the Rev. E. Madeley, that his first volume of more than 300 original hymns occupied him only some three months in its production. This volume appeared in 1790; again, with additions, in 1791; and, again in 1798. The title of the 3rd ed. is :—

Hymns and Spiritual Songs for the Use of the Lord's New Church, signified by the New Jerusalem in the Revelation, by Joseph Proud, N. H. M. London, Printed by E. Hodson, and sold at the New Jerusalem Temple in Cross Street, Hatton Garden, 1798.

This volume contained 359 original hymns of decided merit. After leaving Norwich Proud went to Birmingham, where he suffered great misfortunes. He passed on to Manchester, but in a few months again returned to Birmingham. Subsequently London was the scene of his labours for a time. During his residence there he printed a small book of Hymns and Songs for Children in 1810. Three years later he returned to Birmingham, where he d. on Aug. 3, 1826. The esteem in which his hymns are held by The New Church is seen in their authorised hymn-book of 1880, in which of a total of 750 hymns, 164 are by him.

2. The next hymn-writer of note in The New Church was the Rev. Manoah Sibly (b. 1757), whose Hymns and Spiritual Songs appeared, in 1802, from the press of the same printer as Proud's book; but also "sold by the Author, No. 35, Goswell Street." It contained 222 original hymns and 11 doxologies. The literary merits of this volume are below that of Proud's work. The hymns are solid and practical, and are more akin to those by Bedome and Doddridge than to those either by Wesley or Watts. Sibly died in 1840.

3. The first Swedenborgian minister in Manchester was the Rev. William Cowherd, a man of high scientific attainments, who had been for some time a clergyman in the Church of England. Shortly after joining the Swedenborgian body he established a cause in Manchester, which he called "The Bible Christian Church." The members of this society held the doctrine of Swedenborg in a modified form, with the additional obligations of total abstinence from animal food and intoxicating liquors. (See Various.) For their use Cowherd compiled Select Hymns for Christian Worship. By the Rev. W. Cowherd, Manchester. Printed by Sowler & Russell, 1800. The 3rd ed., pub. at Stourport in 1810, contained 218 hymns; the 5th ed., printed at Salford in 1818, was increased to 221 hymns, a few of which were by Cowherd, but the greater part were taken from Proud, Sibly, Watts, Wesley, and others.

4. In 1813, the Rev. Robert Hindmarsh, then minister of the Swedenborgian congregation in Salford, compiled a small volume of hymns, chiefly selected from Proud and Sibly, which he published as:—

Hymns for the Use of The New Church, signified by The New Jerusalem in the Apocalypse. Carefully corrected, and arranged under proper heads. Manchester. F. Davis, 1813. It contained 153 hymns and 5 doxologies.

5. Next, in order of date, came a small volume as:—

Original Hymns, for Family and Congregational Worship, chiefly designed for the use of those who acknowledge the Supreme Divinity of the Great Redeemer. By F. M. Hodson. Manchester, J. Gleave, 1819.

This volume contains only 45 hymns and 2 doxologies. Whilst some of these hymns do not rise above mediocrity, others have certainly higher literary and poetic merit than those of either Proud or Sibly, and one or two are not unworthy of C. Wesley. Of his hymns 6 are in the authorised hymn-book of 1880. Of his life little is known. He was at one time with the Rev. Richard Jones, as joint minister of the Manchester and Radcliffe Swedenborgian Societies. Afterwards he preached in St. George's Chapel, near Oldham Road, Manchester; and, at a later period, he settled in Hull.

6. In 1822 a new departure was made. The General Conference of The New Church, in session, respectively, at Manchester and London, authorised a Committee to prepare a hymnal for general use, "adapted not only for public devotion, but also for private meditation and instruction, and which should form a useful and agreeable companion on every day of the week, at home as well as in the public assemblies of the Church." The outcome of this was the first authorised hymn-book of the Swedenborgians. It was pub. as:—

Hymns for the Use of the New Church signified by the New Jerusalem in the Revelation, Ch. xxi. 1, 2. Compiled by order of the General Conference. London, T. Goyder & H. C. Hodson, 1824.

This collection contains 600 hymns and 7 doxologies. While borrowing largely from Proud and Sibly, it is at once catholic and eclectic. The alterations made in the texts of the hymns of Watts, Wesley, and others, to adapt them to the creed of The New Church are less frequent and distasteful than in many similar cases. A singular feature in this collection is the large number of Unitarian hymns found therein, when doctrinal differences would have suggested the necessity for their exclusion. This hymn-book was mainly compiled by the Rev. William Mason (b. 1790, d. 1863) of whose original hymns about 60 are included therein. Mason subsequently published a separate collection as:—

Hymns of Spiritual Experience, eminently calculated to promote the growth of individual piety. Chiefly selected, with a few originals. London, 1840.

This volume contains 166 hymns, of which 23 are by Mason. We may add that Mason possessed musical gifts of no mean order, and that he composed a number of hymn tunes.

7. In 1872 an authorised Supplement to the 1824 collection was published as:—

Supplement of Hymns for the New Church, Compiled by Order of the General Conference. London, James Speirs, 1872.

In this Supplement translations of Latin and German hymns are found for the first time in Swedenborgian hymnody. This blending of the old and the new was hardly successful, and the hymns were more didactic than lyrical. The general result was felt to be most unsatisfactory, and led to the appointment of a Committee, to whom was entrusted the compilation of a new hymnal. Of this committee the Rev. Jonathan Bayley, D.D., was the chairman, and the Rev. John Presland, the secretary. The result of their labours was published in 1880, as:—

Hymns for the Use of The New Church signified by the New Jerusalem in the Revelation. Compiled by Order of the General Conference of The New Church in Great Britain. London: James Speirs, 1880.

This collection contains 750 hymns, and deserves the attention of compilers of hymnals. To it Dr. Bayley contributed 5 hymns, the Rev. Joseph Deans 9, and "J. C." 3. From this collection a selection for mission services was published in 1883.

8. The Swedenborgians have been amongst the foremost in recognizing the value of hymns and music in Sunday schools. As already noted, Proud's Hymns and Songs for Children (1810) were published contemporaneously with the early efforts in the same direction by Anne and Jane Taylor. In 1835, an excellent little collection was published by the Rev. E.

Madeley, which went through several editions. In 1868 it was greatly enlarged and revised from a poetical and musical point of view, by Mr. John Bragg, of Birmingham. To this revised edition, 73 modern hymns were added, in 1887, by "The New Church Sunday School Union." In its complete form it contains 336 hymns. [See Various.] [W. T. B.]

Sweet as the Shepherd's tuneful reed. W. Shirley. [Spring.] Pub. in The Coll. of Hys. sung in the Countess of Huntingdon's Chapels, Bath, W. Gye, n. d. (circa 1773), No. 86, in 4 st. of 6 l. In common with all the hymns in that Coll. it is anonymous; but in the Life of the Countess, 1839, vol. ii. p. 291, it is definitely stated to be by W. Shirley. The most widely known form of this hymn begins with st. ii., "Peace, troubled soul, whose plaintive moan." It is composed of st. ii., iii., and appeared in the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, No. 130. It is repeated in several American hymn-books. [J. J.]

Sweet day, so cool, so calm, so bright. G. Herbert. [Virtue. Spring.] Appeared in his posthumous work, The Temple, 1633, in 4 st. of 4 l., as a poem on "Virtue." (The Chandos Classics, ed. 1887, p. 140.) It is a beautiful poem, but is unsuited as a hymn for congregational use, although found in a few collections for that purpose. I. Walton's reference to it in his Compleat Angler, 1653, is very tender and just:—"PISCATOR.—And now, scholar! my direction for tily fishing is ended with this shower, for it has done raining. And now look about you, and see how pleasantly that meadow looks; nay, and the earth smells as sweetly too. Come, let me tell you what holy Herbert says of such days and showers as these; and then we will thank God that we enjoy them. "Sweet day, so cool," &c. [J. J.]

Sweet feast of love divine. Sir E. Denny. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in his Sel. of Hymns, 1839, No. 295; and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1848, p. 96 (3rd ed., 1870, p. 66), in 6 st. of 4 l. It is in C. U. in its original form; but much more extensively as "Blest feast of love divine." In America especially, this is the popular form of the hymn. [J. J.]

Sweet is the last, the parting ray. [Saturday Evening.] This hymn is usually attributed to Charles Jenkins, for some years Congregational Minister in Portland, Maine, but upon insufficient evidence. D. C. Colsworthy (p. 242, ii.) says that it was repeated by Mr. Jenkins in a sermon, and the congregation supposed it to have been his own. No other claimant having appeared it is often attributed to him on this uncertain ground. J. Curtis, in his Union Coll., Lond., 1827, No. 519, gives it as from the "American Monthly Mag." [F. M. B.]

Sweet is the scene when virtue dies. Anna L. Barbauld, nee Aikin. [Death and Burial.] Appeared in the Leisure Hour Improved, pub. at Ironbridge, 1809, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in The Works of Anna Laetitia Barbauld, with Memoir, 1825, p. 315, with the heading "The Death of the Virtuous."

In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, it begins, "Sweet is the scene when Christians die." On the death of Mr. Barbauld, Nov. 11, 1808, Mrs. Barbauld wrote the "Dirge," beginning "Pure Spirit! O where art thou now" (p. 941, ii.). From the date of the publication of "Sweet is the scene when virtue dies" (1809), it is probable that it was the outcome of the same sad event. The popular form of this hymn is, "How blest the righteous when he dies," which appeared in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 190. In the Sheffield Iris for January 13, 1824, James Montgomery gave an account of the Rev. T. Cotterill's funeral, in which he says concerning "How blest the righteous when he dies," which was sung on that occasion:—

"This hymn was not the composition of the deceased, as has been mistakenly reported. It was extracted with some modifications from a longer copy of verses which appeared in the Iris many years ago, the author of which we understood to be Mr. Robert Barnard, formerly of this town, and one of the Society of Friends. The opening of the original lines being 'Sweet is the scene when virtue dies,' was altered [to "How blest, &c.,"] for an obvious reason when the stanzas were adopted for Mr. Cotterill's hymn-book. We can further say that he was peculiarly delighted with them. The following exquisite poetical stanza follows the first as they stand in the hymn-book:—

" 'So fades a summer cloud away,
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er,
So gently shuts the eye of day,
So dies a wave along the shore.'"

From this extract it is evident that the alterations in the text of the poem to adapt it for congregational purposes were made by Montgomery for Cotterill. Montgomery's guess as to the authorship of the original was disproved by the publication of Mrs. Barbauld's Works in 1825 with the poem therein. This form of the hymn is in C. U. in all English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

Sweet is the work, my God, my [and] King. I. Watts. [Ps. xcii. or Sunday.] 1st pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1719, p. 237, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "A Psalm for the Lord's Day." In G. Whitefield's Hys. for Social Worship, &c., 1753, No. 20, st. i., ii., iii., vii. were given as "Sweet is the work, O God, our King." This was repeated in M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 105. A. M. Toplady gave the same stanzas in his Ps. & Hys., 1776, as No. 34, but with other changes in some stanzas, and the opening line as "Sweet is the work, my God and King." This reading is found in some modern collections in the Church of England. Other arrangements of the text are given in hymn-books in G. Britain and America. It is a good and popular hymn. [J. J.]

Sweet Saviour, bless us ere we go. F. W. Faber. [Evening.] 1st pub. in his Jesus and Mary, first edition, 1849; and again in his Hymns, 1862, p. 251, in 7 st. of 6 l. It was written in 1849 for use as an Evening Hymn at the London Roman Catholic Oratory, of which Dr. Faber was then the Superior. In most hymnals the last stanza is usually omitted, or if retained, the second line, "Mary and Philip, near us be," is altered. In some collections it opens with "Dear Saviour, bless us ere we go," or "O Saviour, bless," &c.; and in others, "O Father, bless us ere we go." In the Wellin- ton College H. Bk., 1860-80, it begins with st. ii., "The day is done; its hours have run," and the text is somewhat altered. The use of this hymn in its various forms is extensive.

[J. J.]

Sweet the time, exceeding sweet. G. Burder. [Christian Fellowship.] Pub. in the Gospel Magazine, April, 1779, p. 220, in 5 st. of 4 l., headed "An Hymn for Christian Company," and signed "A. R." In 1784 it was given, unaltered, in G. Burder's Coll. of Hys., as No. 66, and in the Index it is signed "G. Burder." In Cotterill's Sel., 1810, No. 46, it is altered to "Great the joy, the union sweet." This form is in extensive use. In the 8th ed. of his Sel. Cotterill altered it again to "Great the joy when Christians meet." This, also, is well known. In one or two collections it is also altered to "Gladsome 'tis when Christians meet."

[J. J.]

Sweetest Saviour, if my soul. G. Herbert. [Redeemed in Christ.] First pub. in his Temple, &c., 1633, in 4 st. of 8 l., as a "Dialogue" between the Soul and the Saviour. (Works in the Chandos Classics, 1887, p. 168.) In 1739, it was rewritten by J. Wesley, and pub. in Hys. & Sac. Poems, as "Saviour, if Thy precious love," in 4 st. of 8 l., and again in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 107. In 1875, st. i.-iii. were given in the revised edition of the Works. H. Bk., No. 24*, where it replaced "Ye that pass by, behold the Man." In this form it is suited for private reading, or as the words of an anthem, but does not make a good hymn for congregational use.

[J. J.]

Sweetly sang the angels, In the clear, calm night. J. Julian. [Christmas.] Written Nov. 7, 1873, and first printed in the Preston Herald [Lancashire], Nov. 11th, 1873, in an article entitled "Table Talk." It was in 5 st. of 8 l., with a refrain of 4 l. In 1874 it was included in the Hymn Book pub. for the use of St. Mary's Church Sunday School, Preston; in Dec. 1874, in an article on "Christmas Hymns" in the Churchman's Shilling Magazine; again in Order's Cong. Hys., 1884, and other collections. It is also set as a part song by A. J. Caldicott. Mus. B., No. 147 of The Choral Handbook, Lond., J. Curwen. [J. J.]

Swift, James Frederick, s. of Joseph Swift, was b. at Manchester, Dec. 28, 1847. In 1851 he removed with his parents to Liverpool, where he was educated at the Commercial School of Liverpool College. At an early age he displayed a talent for music, and performed in public as a pianist as early as 1859. In 1863 he was appointed organist at the Cranmer Wesleyan Chapel. Subsequently he was organist at St. Andrew's Church, Liverpool, for 10 years, and then, from 1886 to the present, at St. Bride's, in the same city. He has composed a large number of songs and instrumental pieces under the nom-de-plume of "Godfrey Marks." He has also written a number of hymns and sacred odes, for which he has composed music. From these eight were pub. with the music, in 1875, as Hys. for Home and Sacred Festivals (London, Novello). From this small collection the following hymns have come into C. U. :—

1. When evening shadows gather. Evening. Written in 1873, and first sung in public at the Wesleyan Choral Festival in St. George's Hall, Liverpool, in 1874. It was included in his Hys. for Home, &c., No. 8, in 5 st. of 8 l. It then passed into Thring's Coll., 1882, the Prim. Meth. Hymnal, 1887, and others. It is a very beautiful Evening Hymn.

2. Have you heard the sweet, sweet story? Life of Jesus. Written in 1874, and pub. in his Hys. for Home, &c., 1875, No. 4, in 5 st. of 8 l., with a chorus of 4 lines.

3. When life is gay with sunshine. Refuge in Trouble. Written in 1874, and pub. in his Hys. for Home, &c., 1875, No. 7, in 3 st. of 8 l.

Of these hymns Nos. 2, 3 have been largely used at Sunday School Anniversaries and similar gatherings.

Sylvestris, in the Gospel Magazine, 1776, &c., i.e. Jehoida Brewer.

Symington, Andrew James, s. of R. B. Symington, of Paisley, Scotland, was b. there on July 27, 1825. After receiving his education at the Grammar School of his native town he entered into business with his father and brother. During the intervals of business he has devoted himself to literature. His publications include Harebell Chimes, 1848; Genevieve, and Other Poems, 1851; The Beautiful in Nature, Art, and Life, 1857; Pen and Pencil Sketches of Farøe and Iceland, 1862; The Reasonableness of Faith; with Appendix containing Hys. and Verses of Consolation and Hope, 1870; Hints to our Boys, 1884; Poems, and other works. He also edited Blackie's series of Men of Light and Learning, and has contributed to a large number of magazines in Great Britain and the United States. Several of his hymns have been pub. by J. and R. Parlane, Paisley, as leaflets, and include :—

1. Heart Jesus say to Thee. Jesus the Way, the Truth, and the Life. (1869.)

2. Hemmed in, armed hosts behind, on either side. Israel at the Red Sea.

3. How much ow'st thou? Debtors to Mercy. (Sep. 1870.)

4. I long for rest. Rest desired. (1869.)

5. Lord in love and mercy save us. Morning or Evening. (1869.)

6. Near Jordan's ford. Christ's Invitation.

7. Tossing through the starless night. Rest. (1869.)

8. When anguish overwhelms the heart. Comfort.

Of these hymns No. 5 is the best known and most widely used. Taken as a whole Mr. Symington's hymns are better suited for private devotion than for public worship.

Synesius, a native of Cyrene, b. circa 375. His descent was illustrious. His pedigree extended through seventeen centuries, and in the words of Gibbon, "could not be equalled in the history of mankind." He became distinguished for his eloquence and philosophy, and as a statesman and patriot he took a noble stand. When the Goths were threatening his country he went to the court of Arcadius, and for three years tried to rouse it to the dangers that were coming on the empire. But Gibbon says, "The court of Arcadius indulged the zeal, applauded the eloquence, and neglected the advice of Synesius." In 410 he was made Bishop of Ptolemais, but much against his will. He d. in 430. Synesius's opinions have been variously estimated. That he was imbued with the Neo-Platonic philosophy there is no doubt [see Greek Hymnody, v. and viii.], but that he was a semi-Christian, as alleged by Mosheim [see Ecc. History, Lond., ed. 1845, vol. i., pp. 310, 439 and Notes], or that he denied the doctrine of the Resurrection as stated directly by Gibbon [see Decline and Fall, vol. ii.], and indirectly by Bingham [see Christian Antiq., Lond., 1843, i. pp. 464-5] is very doubtful. Mr. Chatfield, who has translated his Odes in his Songs and Hymns of the Greek Christian Poets, 1876, contends that his tenth Ode "Lord Jesus, think on me," proves that he was not a semi-Christian, and that he held the doctrine of the Resurrection. The first is clear: but the second is open to doubt. He certainly prays to the Redeemer: but there is nothing in the hymn to shew that he looked upon the Redeemer as being clothed in His risen body. This tenth ode is the only Ode of Synesius, which has come into C. Ū. The original Odes are found in the Anth. Graeca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 2 seq., and Mr. Chatfield's trs. in his Songs, &c., 1876. [Greek Hymnody, § v. and Μῦθεο Χριστῶ.] Synesius's Odes have also been tr. by Alan Stevenson, and included in his The Ten Hymns of Synesius, Bishop of Tyreore, A.D. 410 in English Verse. And some Occasional Pieces by Alan Stevenson, LL.B. Printed for Private Circulation, 1865. [See Various.] [J. J.]

Syriac Hymnody. No history of Christian hymnody can be deemed complete which fails to give some account of the hymns and other metrical compositions of the ancient churches of Syria, Upper Mesopotamia, and Western Persia. At an early period in Christian history a fountain of sacred poetry and song burst forth in that region, from which for a time there flowed a stream of marvellous fulness; but soon the stream dwindled, and its flow became intermittent, until, by the middle of the 14th century, like a river lost in desert sands, it had almost, if not entirely, disappeared.

Syriac, the language of these ancient hymns and poems, is akin to the Hebrew, and resembles, if it is not identical with, the language spoken by the common people of Palestine in the time of our Lord. It is still used in religious services, like Latin in the Church of Rome; but, as a vernacular in Syria proper, it has long been supplanted by the Arabic; whilst, in Mesopotamia and Persia, the Christian inhabitants, though they call themselves Sūrāyē, or Syrians, speak a dialect termed Sūrīth, which differs almost as much from the old Syriac as Italian from Latin.

i. History of Syriac Hymnody.

Concerning the hymns sung in Syria in the first century after Christ we have no certain information, although tradition connects the origin of responsive singing in Christian worship with Ignatius, the martyred bishop of Antioch. But the commencement of Syriac hymnody, so far as known to us, was on this wise.

1. Bar-Daisan, or Bardesanes, b. A.D. 154, at Edessa, now called Urfaḥ, in Upper Mesopotamia, was a religious teacher, who sought to combine with the truths of Christianity certain speculations of the Gnostics. Being a man of poetic genius, he was led to compose hymns or songs, which, set to music and sung by his disciples, became very popular. His son, Harmonius, followed in his steps, composing additional hymns and introducing new metres. But of their compositions only a few fragments have been preserved.

2. Simeon bar Sabbae. The next Syrian hymn-writer of whom we have any mention was of the orthodox school, Simeon bar Sabbāe, bishop of Seleucia, who suffered martyrdom A.D. 296. Two hymns composed by him are said to be found in the sacred offices of the Chaldeans.

3. Ephraem Syrus. But about A.D. 307 there was born at Nisibis, in northern Mesopotamia, Ephraem or Ephraim Syrus, the most celebrated father of the Syrian church, and famous not only as a theologian, but also as a poet and hymn-writer. Historians differ as to the details of his life; but it is known that having first been a pupil of James, bishop of Nisibis, he finished his education at Edessa, where for the rest of his days he chiefly resided. He visited Basil at Caesarea, in Cappadocia, and by him he was ordained to the office of deacon. He d. at Edessa in June, 373. Ephraim was a most voluminous writer of commentaries, expository sermons, hymns, and metrical homilies. Metrical Homilies, first mentioned in connection with him, are a peculiar kind of composition, to which we know of nothing in other literature exactly similar. The tracts in verse explanatory of the Christian religion, circulated by missionaries in some parts of India, and which the people like to read aloud in a kind of chant, seem most nearly to resemble them. The Homilies are in metre, i.e. in lines containing a fixed number of syllables, e.g. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, or 12, as the case may be, and are divided into strophes, but differ from hymns proper in their greater length and more decidedly didactic character. We might have supposed them to be poems intended to be simply read, but from notes found on mss. giving directions as to the singing, it appears as though, at least in some cases, they were actually sung or chanted in connection with religious services. In neither the hymns nor the homilies is any regard paid to accent or quantity, and only occasionally does there seem to have been an attempt at rhyme or assonance. The main characteristics of Syriac poetry are (1) a certain elevation of style, (2) division of the verses into strophes, and (3) the use of lines or verses with a fixed number of syllables. The following are illustrations of some of the metres, taken from the writings of Ephraim, the translations being those of Dr. H. Burgess, in his Select Metrical Hymns and Homilies of Ephraem Syrus, translated, with Notes, &c., London, 1853, a work to which reference may be made for further examples.

a. Tetrasyllabic Metre. Two verses from an "Evening Hymn."

صَلِّتَهُ، نَفَقَا Bkālūn rāmshé

كَبْرُ لَقَدْسُهُ؛ Lók thésbákthó

"In all evenings
To Thee let there be praise."

b. Pentasyllabic Metre. Two verses from the 11th Homily concerning the "Paradise of Eden."

ܐܘܪܝܢܐ ܕܢܦܝܫܐ ܕܥܕܢܐ O'ar' d phardáyso

ܡܗܝܢܘܢܝܢ ܕܒܘܫܐܡܐ Mhínón' d búsamó

"The air of Paradise Is a fountain of sweetness."

c. Heptasyllabic Metre, which has traditionally borne the name of Ephraim, as being his favourite metre. Two verses from a hymn on "Death."

ܡܘܬܐ ܕܐܝܘܒ ܕܠܥܝܢܐ ܕܡܪܝܢܐ

ܡܘܬܐ ܕܐܝܘܒ ܕܠܥܝܢܐ ܕܡܪܝܢܐ

Mór 16'th kinnáy hám bishé
Daúdíth bók Mór áudó bý.

"Lord! appoint me not a place with the wicked:
Do Thou, Lord, confess me, who have confessed Thee."

The poetical compositions of Ephraim, so far as printed, are as follows, beginning with his works edited by J. S. Assemani and P. Benedict at Rome, in 1732-46.

(1) Eleven metrical expositions, in heptasyllabic and pentasyllabic metre, of portions of Scripture treating of the Creation, the Temptation of Eve, the Mission of Jonah, and the Repentance of the Ninevites. The last-named is the most striking and the longest, extending to between 500 and 600 strophes of four lines each. Of the use made of it by the Nestorian Christians of the present day we shall speak in the second part of this article.

(2) Thirteen discourses on Christ's Nativity. These are of various lengths and metres. The last is tetrasyllabic, in strophes of 10 lines, every tenth line being a doxology. The life of Christ is supposed by the author to have extended to thirty years, and to every one of these years is assigned an act of praise from some created beings, beginning with the cherubim in the first year, and ending with the dead who have lived again, the living who have repented, and heaven and earth, which through Christ have been reconciled, in the thirtieth. Dr. Burgess says that this is "a very beautiful production, tastefully conceived, and carried out in a masterly manner."

(3) Next come 56 homilies in various metres against "False Doctrines," especially those of Bardesanes, Marcion, and the Manichaeans. In the first homily of this collection Ephraim pays the following compliment to the skill and influence of Bardesanes, whilst he condemns his use of them:—

"In the resorts of Bardesanes
There are songs and melodies,
For seeing that young persons
Loved sweet music,
By the harmony of his songs
He corrupted their minds."

Elsewhere we are told that it was Ephraim's desire to counteract the influence of these heretical songs, as well as to provide a substitute for profane games and noisy dances, which prompted him to compose hymns and train choirs, "in the midst of whom he stood, a spiritual harper, and arranged for them different kinds of songs, and taught them the variation of chants, until the whole city was gathered to him and the party of the adversary was put to shame."

(4) Then follow 87 homilies against Rationalists or Free Thinkers, in which occur many curious and highly artificial arrangements of metres. These are succeeded by a collection of seven homilies, forming a separate work, entitled "The Pearl, concerning Faith." This poem is tetrasyllabic, in strophes of 10 lines each, and highly fanciful in conception, though not without passages of beauty. A pearl is treated as suggestive of truths connected with Christ and His Church.

(5) Four other controversial homilies follow, after which come the pieces which may be more properly called Hymns. Of these perhaps the most interesting are 85 relating to "Death," apparently intended to be used in funeral services. One of these we may cite, in Dr. Burgess's translation, both as short and as a good specimen of Ephraim's style.

On the Death of Children.

"How bitter is the grief
For the death of childhood;
How grievous the separation
Of the infant from its mother:—
Train it up, Lord, in Thy dwelling!

"This day afflicts
The fathers through their sons;
And death now breaks
The staff of their old age:—
Lord! may they lean on Thee!

"This day removes
The beloved one from its mother,
And cuts off the arm
Which would have been her stay:—
In Thee, Lord, may she trust!

"This day separates
The little one from its parent,
And leaves her in the wilderness
Of suffering and grief:—
Do Thou, Lord, comfort her!

"This day divides
The sucking-child from the breast;
And the mother wails and grieves
Because her intercourse with it hath perished:—
May she see it in the Kingdom!

"O happy infancy
Which hath gained Paradise!
Alas! for old age
Which still remains in sorrow!—
Lord! be Thou its helper!"

(6) This collection of Funeral Hymns is followed by four short pieces on the "Freedom of the Will," the strophes of which have an alphabetical arrangement, like the Hebrew of the 119th Psalm. The succeeding 76 homilies have the general title "Exhortations to Penitence," but among them are found morning and evening hymns, and a hymn for the Lord's day.

(7) Next come twelve homilies on the "Paradise of Eden," and finally, in the Roman edition of Ephraim's works, 18 discourses on various subjects in pentasyllabic and hexasyllabic metres. But in 1866, Bickell pub. "Carmina Nisibena," 21 in number, the subject of most of them being the struggle between the Persian monarch, Sapor, and the Romans. The rest are on the "Overthrow of Satan," the "Resurrection of the Body," and kindred topics.

In 1882 and 1886 Lamy pub. 2 vols., entitled S. Ephraemi Syri Hymni et Sermones, containing hitherto unpublished metrical homilies and hymns, on the Epiphany, the Nativity, the Blessed Virgin, the Passover, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection, &c. [For translations see end of this article.]

4. Various. Ephraim was followed by a succession of authors of metrical homilies, hymns and anthems, most of whom our limited space forbids us to do more than mention. Among these were Balai or Balaeus; Cyrrilloná, who, about the year 396, wrote a poem on the Invasion of the Huns; Abamyá, son of Ephraim's sister; Rabbúlá, bishop of Edessa, A.D. 411, some of whose hymns have been printed by Overbeck; Ihbbá, or Ibas, who succeeded Rabbúlá in the see of Edessa; Marúthá, bishop of Maiperchat, a learned physician, who wrote hymns in honour of the martyrs; and Isaac of Antioch, commonly called the Great, and styled by Dr. Wm. Wright (Encyclop. Britan., vol. xxii. p. 8296) "one of the stars of Syrian literature." He was abbot of a convent near Antioch, and died about A.D. 460. His works were almost as voluminous and varied as those of Ephraim. One of his metrical homilies may be mentioned as a literary curiosity, a poem of 2137 lines, on a parrot which proclaimed ἄγιος ὁ θεός in the streets of Antioch. Isaac was followed by Barsauma, bishop of Nisibis (484-496), author of compositions of the class called Turgámé, hymns calling on the faithful to give ear to the words of the New Testament. In the Nestorian worship of the present day the Turgámé are chanted responsively by the officiating deacons around the altar, at that part in the service when the Epistle and Gospel are about to be read.

5. Narsai. A fellow-worker with Barsauma, both at Edessa and Nisibis, was Narsai, or Narses, called by his co-religionists the "Harp of the Holy Spirit." He was especially famous for his metrical homilies, 360 in number, and his hymns, two of which are now in the Nestorian psalter.

6. Jacob of Serugh. We come next to Jacob of Serugh, one of the most celebrated writers of the Syrian Church (b. 451, d. 521), styled by his contemporaries "the Flute of the Holy Spirit and the Harp of the believing Church." Besides commentaries, he wrote odes, hymns, and metrical homilies, 760 in number, mostly in dodeca-syllabic verse, i.e., the four-syllable line thrice repeated. Bar Hebraeus says that he had 70 amanuenses to copy out his homilies. More than half of his homilies have perished, but nearly 300 are preserved in European collections. A liturgy in use among the Maronites is ascribed to him.

7. Simeon Kukaya. The deacon Simeon Kūkayā was a potter by trade, as his name denotes. Whilst working at his wheel, he composed hymns, which he wrote down on a tablet or scroll by his side. Bishop Jacob of Serugh visited him, admired his compositions, and encouraged him to continue his labours. Nine of his hymns, on the "Nativity of our Lord," are now in the British Museum. In the same treasury of antiquities are to be found a few hymns out of a rather large number composed by the abbot John bar Aphlōnyā, who d. A.D. 528, at Kenneshrē, on the Euphrates. Also a few hymns are extant of Mārābhā the Elder, Catholicus of Seleucia, from 536 to 552, one of which commences "Glory to Thee, Lord, how good Thou art!"

8. Seventh Century. With the seventh century began the slow decay of the native literature of the Syrians, one cause being the dreadful sufferings of the people during the great war with the Persians, and another the conquest of Syria by the Muhammadans in 633-636, from which time the Arabic language began to supplant the Syriac. Nevertheless, Professor W. Wright, LL.D., in his admirable and exhaustive article on "Syriac Literature," in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, vol. xxii.—an article to which in this paper we are ourselves greatly indebted—gives the names of seventeen writers between the beginning of the 7th century and the end of the 12th, who were authors of either hymns, or metrical homilies, or both. In most cases some of their writings are extant in the libraries of the British Museum, the Vatican, or Berlin, and not unfrequently their hymns are found in Nestorian Psalters.

9. Bar Hebraeus. The thirteenth century was an age of literary revival with the Nestorians. Bar Hebraeus or Abul Faraj Gregory, "one of the most learned and versatile men Syria ever produced," lived at this time. He was almost equally eminent as philosopher, historian, theologian and poet, and to him we are indebted for much of the information we possess in regard to Syriac hymn-writers.

10. George Warda. In this century too lived George Wardā (the Rose) of Arbēl, whose hymns and other poems have entered so largely into the use of the Nestorian Church that one of their service books is to this day called the Wardā.

11. Mus'ud, a Syrian, who was physician to the Caliph al Musta'sim in the years 1242-1258, wrote hymns for the Feast of the Epiphany, one of which is in the Vatican library.

12. Khanis bar Kardahe, of Arbēl, is another favourite hymn-writer of this period, whom we shall have occasion to mention again when speaking of the service-books of the Nestorians. But besides the hymns of this author, to which we may then make reference, others are found in the great libraries of Europe.

13. Abhd-isho bar Berikha. Lastly, there was Abhd-isho bar Berikha, or, as he is called by some, Mar Abd Yeshua, Metropolitan of Nisibis and Armenia, A.D. 1298-1318, who has rendered valuable service to literature by a catalogue of nearly 150 Syrian authors and their works, beginning with Simeon bar Sabbaē, in the 3rd century, and ending with one, whom in his humility he calls his "vile self." This last he describes as the author of a commentary on the Bible, Consolations, Antiphons and Anthems for various occasions, and a number of other works. Turqāmē, written by him, are in ms. in the library of Berlin.

14. Dr. Wright says that after Abhd-isho there are "hardly any names worthy of a place in the literary history of the Syrian nation." The fount of sacred song no more poured forth sweet waters. It remained for the men of succeeding ages to make use of the compositions of their predecessors.

ii. The present use of Syriac hymns.

In order to a clear understanding of this part of our subject it will be beneficial to explain the various sections into which the Syrian branch of the Christian church is divided, a division which in at least three instances is of ancient date.

(1) Nestorian.—One section, once very numerous, and sending its missionaries even to Tartary and China, but whose members, now few in number, are at present found chiefly in Kurdistan and Western Persia, is known by the name of Nestorian. It is so called from Nestorius, who was condemned by the Council of Ephesus, A.D. 431, because, as it was alleged, he held that in the one Christ there were two Persons, Divine and human, and with this doctrine these Syrian Christians are supposed to sympathise.

(2) Jacobites.—Another section, called Jacobites, inhabiting both Syria and Mesopotamia, received their name from a certain Jacob Burd'sānā, bishop of Edessa in the middle of the 6th century, who was the chief agent in organising them into a distinct community. Their peculiar belief is that in Christ the human nature was absorbed into the Divine. Hence they are called Monophysites.

(3) Maronites.—The date and occasion of their origin as a sect are disputed, but most probably they received their name from a certain abbot of a monastery near the Orontes, called John Maroun, who lived in the 7th century, and favoured the doctrine of Christ's person known as Monothelite. However, this may have been, the Maronites in 1180 acknowledged the authority of the Roman Pontiff, and are at the present time in nominal communion with Rome. In the district of Mount Lebanon they have now 82 convents, containing 2000 monks and nuns.

(4) Chaldaeans.—In Mesopotamia and Persia are Syrian Christians, who were originally Nestorian, but about the year 1680 made their submission to Rome and have since been known by the name of Chaldaeans.

(5) Christians of St. Thomas.—In South India, both on the Malabar coast and in the neighbourhood of Madras, are the so-called Christians of St. Thomas, speaking Malayalam or Tamil as their vernacular, but using in their worship Syriac hymns and prayers. They are probably descendants of Syrians, who centuries ago came from Western Asia by way of the Persian Gulf and settled in these parts. Some are Nestorian in their creed, others Jacobite, and yet others, through the influences brought to bear upon them by the Portuguese at Goa, have adopted the faith of Rome.

Now all these differing sections of Syrian Christians have their respective service books and liturgies, and all use hymns. The following are the facts we have been able to ascertain with respect to their use of hymns:

(a) The Nestorians. In 1852, an Anglican clergyman, the Rev. G. P. Badger, D.D., published two volumes (London, J. Masters) containing a narrative of visits paid by him to the Syrian Churches of Kurdistan and Mesopotamia, with an account of his researches into the condition of the Nestorians, Syrian Jacobites, Papal Syrians, and Chaldeans. The work is entitled The Nestorians and their Rituals, and is full of information concerning the Nestorian service books.

(1) First, he mentions a book called Turgāmā, or Instruction, containing hymns chanted before the reading of the Epistle and Gospel. To this we have referred when speaking of Barsauma, of Nisibis.

(2) Another book is the Khudra, or Cycle of Services for all the Sundays in the year and for certain fast days. Dr. Badger describes this as a collection of anthems, responsories, hymns and collects, comprised in a large folio volume of more than 800 pp.

(3) The Gezza, or Treasury, contains the services for all the festivals throughout the year, Sundays excepted. It also comprises anthems, hymns and collects, and is a volume equal in size to the Khudra.

(4) The Baoothā d' Ninwādā, or Prayer of the Ninevites, is described as "a collection of hymns in verse ascribed to St. Ephraim Syrus," and from the account given of its contents is evidently the metrical homily mentioned in our notice of the writings of Ephraim. The Nestorians use it in connection with an annual commemorative service, having reference to the Ninevites, lasting for three days and accompanied with fasting.

(5) The Khamis is a collection of hymns chiefly in exposition of the Life, Parables and Miracles of the Saviour and on the duty of Repentance. It has its name from its author, Khamis bar Kardāhē, whom we have mentioned as a writer of the 13th century. A long hymn from this collection, which has been translated by Dr. Badger, is appointed in the Gezza to be used on the feast of the Holy Nativity.

(6) The Wardā is a collection of hymns written and compiled by George Wardā, already mentioned. They were apparently prepared for use at church festivals, the particular occasions for which they are fitted being noted at the head of each. Dr. Badger has translated a hymn from the Wardā, five pages in length, in praise of the Virgin Mary, and intended to be used on any of the festivals commemorative of her.

In the services for Marriages and Burials, anthems and hymns are introduced. The following is a translation by Dr. Badger of a short and rather beautiful hymn sometimes sung in the part of the marriage service called "The Setting up of the Bridal Chamber." It seems intended to be sung responsively.

"Blessed is He who hath built for His Church a house not made with hands, and hath raised and set her up on high according to His promise.

"The elect Church saith to Christ in her supplications: 'Show me from the Scriptures what dowry Thou wilt give unto me.'

"O lovely Spouse, incline thine ear and hearken to my voice; leave thy father and thy mother, and come, follow me, for I am thy Bridegroom.

"Behold, I flee to Thy love, and condemn all the idols of the heathen, and leave off worshipping them, and flee to Thy cross.

"I have espoused thee through water and the Spirit, and have saved thee from Satan and from death; beware that thou become not another's, for there is none other that can help thee as I can.

"If thou art faithful unto Me, O thou daughter of the poor, I will make ready for thee a bridal chamber above, and will call prophets, apostles, and martyrs to thy wedding.

"Thy commandments are dearer unto me than gold or pearls: and the words of Thy mouth are sweeter unto me than honey and the honey-comb."

From all this it will be seen that hymns are largely used by the Nestorians, besides which they chant Psalms from the Daveedha, or David, in connection with nearly every service. But it must be added that only the clergy and a few of the more educated laymen fully understand the meaning of the words read or sung. Indeed, says Dr. Badger, "many even of the clergy have no certain knowledge of what they read in the churches;" so great is the difference between the modern Sūrith and the ancient Syriac, and such the present backward state of education.

(B) The Chaldaean services appear to resemble those of the Nestorians, excepting that a few expressions have been modified in accordance with the Roman doctrines they have embraced.

(γ) The Jacobites and Maronites. J. W. Etheridge states, in his book on the Syrian Churches (London, 1846), that, among the liturgies in use among the Jacobites and Maronites, the favourite one is that ascribed to St. James, the brother of our Lord. Now in the public or preparatory part of this service a hymn is appointed to be sung after the prayer for all believers, and this hymn is said to be frequently a composition of Mar Ephraim, as he is termed—Mar signifying Master or Lord. A letter, also, with which we have been favoured from the Rev. Dr. Carslaw, missionary of the Free Church of Scotland at Shweir, on Mount Lebanon, informs us that the hymns of Ephraim are now used in that region by both Jacobites and Maronites, though not to any great extent. But they are simply read by the priest, not sung either by priests or people. Dr. Carslaw adds that most of the service of the Maronites is in the ancient Syriac, but as a rule neither priest nor people understand it. The priests learn to read it, and that is all that is considered necessary.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel Bliss, President of the Protestant College at Beyrout, has also obtained for us the following list of first lines of hymns now used in the Maronite churches of Mount Lebanon, with the names of their reputed authors. All are in the ancient Syriac language.

1. By St. Peter the Apostle:—

"O Lord God of Peace and Master of Safety."

2. By the Twelve Apostles:—

"O Lord, merciful God, who hast prepared for us this spiritual table."

3. By St. James, Brother of our Lord:—

"O Lord, our God and our Master, Lover of mankind."

4. By St. John, the Apostle and Evangelist:—

"O Lord, mighty God, Thou art the true Love."

5. By St. Mark, the Evangelist:—

"O Lord God Almighty, Thou art the Holy One, who hast true love."

6. By Pope Sixtus of Rome:—

"O Lord, grant Thy church, and the sheep of Thy pasture, safety, peace and everlasting love."

7. Prepared by order of the Holy Roman Catholic Church, Mother of all churches:—

"O our Lord Jesus Christ, who hast said to Thine Apostles 'Peace, I leave with you, my peace I give unto you.'"

8. By St. John Maroon, Patriarch of Antioch:—
 "O Lord God, merciful and holy God, who hast through Thine only Son, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," &c.

(6) Christians of St. Thomas. With regard to the use of Syriac hymns by the so-called Christians of St. Thomas, on the Malabar coast of India, we have been kindly furnished with information from agents of the Church Missionary Society, whose head-quarters are at Cottayam, in Travancore, which is also the centre of the district inhabited by the Syrian Christians. One of our correspondents is the Rev. J. H. Bishop, B.A., the other the Ven. Archdeacon Kóshi Kóshi, who is himself of Syrian parentage.

Mr. Bishop informs us that "The Syrian Christians of Travancore have no choral or congregational singing, or musical instrument in their worship. The ancient liturgies of St. James and others are monotoned by the Cottanars or Priests, and the people standing in the nave repeat the responses from memory. In many Syrian churches the services are conducted in the Malayalam language" [the vernacular of the country], "though formerly they were always performed in the Syriac tongue, which is still used more or less, especially in the celebration of the Mass."

Archdeacon Kóshi states that "The hymns used in the Syrian church are too many to be numbered. They are so scattered throughout their service books that it is impossible even to form a guess respecting their number. The Syrians have no separate collection of hymns such as we have. They have more than 500 tunes, and everyone of their hymns is so made that it can be sung to eight different tunes. All the great poets of old, such as Mar Ephraim, had each his own eight tunes distinct from the eight belonging to every other, and on hearing any hymn sung, the priests instructed in these matters could tell who the author of it was. Hymns composed by poets of inferior grade, who were unable to invent new tunes, are never credited to their real authors, but go under the names of those to whose tunes they were adapted."

The Archdeacon then proceeds to give a list of hymn-writers, a number of his names coinciding with those we have given in the former part of this article. If at first view there seems to be some disagreement between the accounts of our two correspondents, the explanation is doubtless to be found in the fact already stated, that the Syrian Christians of India are divided among themselves, and consequently, in all probability vary in their usage as regards singing.

We have seen the past and present of Syriac Hymnody; one word may be permitted with respect to its future. It is then, we think, morally certain that Syrian Christians, in whatever country living, will, with the progress of enlightenment, come to realise the fact that acceptable worship must be intelligent and spiritual, and will therefore cease to employ in their religious services a dead language. Nevertheless the large-minded student of Christian history will always feel an interest in the great collection of old-world metrical compositions, lyrical and hortatory, noticed in this article, remembering that for a thousand years or more they were the medium of prayer and praise, consolation and admonition, to successive generations, confessing the One Saviour, and having hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, duties and temptations common to man. [W. R. S.]

Several of the Syriac hymns of Ephraem Syrus have been translated into English as follows:—

Of his hymns 35, and of his metrical homilies 9, have been rendered into prose, printed as blank verse, by Dr. Henry Burgess, in his Select Metrical Hymns and Homilies of Ephraem Syrus (Lond., 1853), and from these versions the Rev. T. G. Crippen rendered 4 into English metre in his Ancient Hymns and Poems (Lond., 1868). Mrs. Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song (Lond., 1858), gives 6 versions from the trs. into German in Daniel, iii. (1846), where are given 10 of his hymns in the Syriac, with German trs. taken from Plus Zingerle's Heilige Muse der Syrer. The Rev. J. B. Morris, in his Select Works of S. Ephraem the Syrian (Oxford, 1847). There is also 1 tr. in the Rev. J. W. Hewett's Verses by a Country Curate, 1859.

As for the majority of our readers it would be useless to give the trs. under the first lines of the Syriac, they are here given together.

i. Versions by Horatius Bonar.

1. Glory to the glorious One. For the Lord's Day. (Canon 41.) Tr. in 2nd series, 1861, of his Hys. of Faith and Hope, in 11 st. of 6 lines. From this st. 1, 3, 4, 10, 11 were taken, slightly altered, with 2 st. adapted from Dr. Bonar's st. 5, 6, 7, 8, as No. 18 in the Hymnary, 1871. Dr. Burgess quotes the hymn from the ed. of S. Ephraem's Opera, in 6 folios, pub. at Rome, 1732-43 (vi. p. 499), says it is tetrasyllabic, with strophes unequal in length, and gives his version at p. 85.

2. Jehovah, judge my cause. Battle Song against Satan. (Canon 59.) In 9 st. of 4 lines, in the 2nd series, 1861, of his Hys. of Faith and Hope. Dr. Burgess quotes it from the Opera, vi. p. 526, says it is heptasyllabic, in strophes of 4 lines, and gives his version at p. 98.

ii. Versions by Mrs. Charles.

1. To Thee, O God, be praises. On the Children in Paradise. (Canon 44.) In 5 st. of 4 lines (p. 46, ed. 1858). Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 155, 156.

2. Salem is shouting with her children. Palm Sunday. In 6 st. of 4 lines (p. 47, ed. 1858). Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 162-164.

3. He calls us to a day of gladness. Christ's Entry into Jerusalem. In 11 st. of 4 lines (p. 48, ed. 1858). Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 159-162.

4. A star shines forth in heaven suddenly. Epiphany. A poem in 45 lines (p. 51, ed. 1858), since given in Schaff's Christ in Song (ed. 1879, p. 85). Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 149-151.

5. Child by God's sweet mercy given. Death of a Child. A beautiful lament of a father on the death of his little son. (Canon 36, "In funere puerorum") In 3 st. of 12 lines (p. 52, ed. 1858). Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 151-152. Dr. Burgess says it is tetrasyllabic, in strophes of 14 lines, and gives his version at p. 1.

6. Then because they fled from him. Eve and Mary. Part of a poem on Eve and Mary, being a tr. of lines 26-48 of Zingerle. Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 164, 165.

iii. Versions by the Rev. T. G. Crippen.

1. Blessed be Messiah's name. Easter. (Canon 48.) In 8 st. of 6 lines, given at p. 1. Dr. Burgess quotes it from the Opera, vi. p. 303, says it is tetrasyllabic, in strophes of 6 lines, and gives his version at p. 77.

2. When softly breathes the Resurrection air. Resurrection. (Canon 42, "In funere puerorum.") In 9 st. of 4 lines, given at p. 4. Syriac and German texts in Daniel, iii. pp. 152-155. Dr. Burgess says it is octosyllabic, in strophes of 4 lines, and gives his version at p. 31.

3. In the time of evening let Thy praise ascend. Evening. (Canon 65.) In 17 st. of 2 lines, given at p. 7. Dr. Burgess quotes it from the Opera, vi. p. 535, says it is tetrasyllabic, in strophes of 4 lines, and gives his version at p. 73.

4. Pity me, Father, for Thy mercies sake. Last Judgment. (Canon 60.) In 6 st. of 4 lines, given at p. 11. Dr. Burgess quotes it from the Opera, vi. p. 326, entitles it "Necessity for Preparation for Death," says it is hexasyllabic, in strophes of 8 lines, and gives his version at p. 56.

iv. Version by J. W. Hewett.

O my child, my best beloved one. Death of a Child. In his Verses by a Country Curate, 1859, p. 167, from Dr. Burgess's tr., but adapted for a mother instead of a father.

v. Versions by Dr. Henry Burgess.

Besides those already mentioned Dr. Burgess gives 14 hymns on the Death (a) of children (pp. 4, 6), (b) of youth (pp. 9, 11), (c) of a Private Person (pp. 14, 26), (d) of a Presbyter (pp. 17, 53, 58), (e) of a Bishop (p. 20), (f) of a Deacon (p. 23), (g) of a Monk (p. 44), (h) of a Woman (p. 48), (i) of an Aged Man (p. 61). He also gives 4 hymns on the Prospect and Preparation for Death (at pp. 25, 29, 41, 63). The rest are on the Funeral of a Prince or Rich Man (p. 34), in Pestilence (p. 61), for Morning (p. 67), before retiring to rest, Evening (p. 80), for the Whole Church (pp. 89, 93), to the Trinity (p. 95), for the whole Convent (p. 100), a General Invocation (p. 103), and the Praises of Noah (p. 105). Also of 9 Metrical Homilies (pp. 113-173).

Take comfort, Christians, when your friends. J. Logan. [Sorrow, but not without Hope.] 1st pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, No. liii., in 8 st. of 4 l., and based on 1 Thess. iv. 13-18. In many American collections a cento beginning with st. iii., "As Jesus died and rose again," is given for Easter, and is most suitable for that purpose. It is given in Hatfield's Church Hys., N. Y., 1872, &c. We have ascribed this paraphrase to John Logan, and not to Michael Bruce, on evidence set forth on p. 188, ii. [J. J.]

Take my heart, O Father, take it. [Holiness Desired.] This hymn was given anonymously in Dr. C. A. Bartol's Hys. for the Sanctuary, commonly known as the West Boston Unitarian Coll., 1849, No. 290, in 5 st. of 4 l. This was repeated in the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858; the Laudes Domini, 1884, and other American hymn-books. Another form of the text is, "Take my heart, O Father, mould it," in 3 st. It appeared in the Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864. This is altered from the former. [F. M. B.]

Take my life, and let it be. Frances R. Havergal. [Self-Consecration to Christ.] This hymn was written at Areley House, Feb. 4, 1874, in 11 st. of 2 l., and pub. in her Loyal Responses, 1878; the musical ed. of the same, 1881; and in Life Chords, 1880. It has also been printed as a leaflet, in various forms for Confirmation, Self-Consecration, and for enclosing in letters, some being accompanied by her father's tune Patmos. It has been tr. into French, German, Swedish, Russian, and other European languages, and into several of those of Africa and Asia. The history of its origin is thus given in the HAV. MSS.:—

"Perhaps you will be interested to know the origin of the consecration hymn 'Take my life.' I went for a little visit of five days [to Areley House]. There were ten persons in the house, some unconverted and long prayed for, some converted, but not rejoicing Christians. He gave me the prayer 'Lord, give me all in this house!' And He just did! Before I left the house every one had got a blessing. The last night of my visit after I had retired, the governess asked me to go to the two daughters. They were crying, &c.; then and there both of them trusted and rejoiced; it was nearly midnight. I was too happy to sleep, and passed most of the night in praise and renewal of my own consecration; and these little couplets formed themselves, and chimed in my heart one after another till they finished with 'Ever, ONLY, ALL for Thee!'"

The music to which Miss Havergal invariably sang this hymn, and with which it was always associated in the publications over which she had any influence, was her father's tune Patmos, and the family's desire is that this course may be followed by others. [J. J.]

Tam. The assumed name of Thomas Mackellar, in Neal's (American) Gazette, 1845.

Tandem audite me. [Love to Christ.] Probably of the 17th cent., and founded on Canticles ii. 5. It is found in the Mainz G. B. (R. C.) 1661, p. 434, in 6 st. entitled "Hymn on the love of the Mother of God in her dying hour." It is also in Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1697, vol. iii. p. 745; the Hymnodia Sacra, Mainz, 1671, p. 121; Daniel, iv. p. 344; and Trench's Sacred Latin Poetry, ed. 1864, p. 249. In R. Campbell's St. Andrew's Hyl., 1850, the hymn "Mary mourner, sad, forlorn," for St. Mary Magdalen, is partly derived from this hymn. [J. M.]

Tandem peractis O Deus. C. Coffin. [Saturday.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736, and in his Hymni Sacri, p. 29, of the same year. In the Paris and later French Brevs. it is the hymn at Matins for Saturdays from Trinity to Advent. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 32; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M. 1867. Tr. as:—

1. At length creation's days are past. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 29, and again in his Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 16. In the Hymnal for St. John the Evangelist, Aberdeen, 1870, it begins, "And now the six-days' work is done." In one or two others it is given without alteration.

2. And now Thy labours, Lord, are done. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 38. In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 49, this tr. is rewritten as "At length six days their course have run."

3. Six days of labour now are past. This tr. was given in H. A. & M., 1861. It was based on J. Chandler's tr. as above. In the 1875 ed. of H. A. & M. it begins with the same first line, but several other lines have been rewritten and much improved thereby.

Other trs. are:—

1. At length the six days' course is past. W. Palmer, 1845.

2. At length, O God, Thy work is done. J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Tappan, William Bingham, was b. at Beverly, Massachusetts, Oct. 29, 1794, and was apprenticed to a clockmaker at Boston in 1810. In 1815 he removed to Philadelphia, where he was engaged in business for a time. In 1822 he was engaged as Superintendent of the American Sunday School Union. In 1840 he was licensed to preach with the Congregational body, his sphere of usefulness on behalf of Sunday Schools being thereby considerably widened. He d. suddenly, of cholera, at West Needham, Massachusetts, June 18, 1849. His poetical works include:—

(1) New England and Other Poems, 1819; (2) Poems, 1822; (3) Lyrics, 1822; (4) Poetry of the Heart, 1845; (5) Sacred and Miscellaneous Poems, 1848; (6) Poetry of Life, 1848; (7) The Sunday School and Other Poems, 1848; (8) Late and Early Poems, 1849; (9) Sacred Poems, 1849; (10) Gems of Sacred Poetry, 1860.

Of these works the earliest are the most important. His hymns in C. U. include the following:—

1. Holy be this as was the place. Public Worship Included in his Lyrics, 1822; and given in Lyra Sac Americana, 1868.

2. The ransomed spirit to her home. Love. Appeared in Nettleton's Village Hys., 1824. This is probably his best hymn.

3. There is an hour of hallowed peace. Heaven, a Place of Rest. Given in his New England and Other Poems, 1819.

4. There is an hour of peaceful rest. Heaven a Place of Rest. The author's account of this hymn in his Gems of Sacred Poetry, 1860, is that it "was written by me, in Philadelphia, in the summer of 1818, for the Franklin Gazette, edited by Richard Bache, Esq., and was introduced by him to the public in terms sufficiently flattering to a young man who then certainly lacked confidence in himself. The piece was republished in England and on the Continent, in various newspapers and magazines, and was also extensively circulated in my own native land, where it has found a place in several hymn and music-books. It was pub. in my first volume of Poems, at Philadelphia, in 1819, and soon after was set to music by A. P. Heinrich, Esq., in the same city." It is in Lyra Sac Americana, 1868, p. 265.

5. 'Tis midnight, and on Olive's brow. Gethsemane. Appeared in his Poems, 1822, and repeated in Lyra Sac Amer., 1868, and several hymnals.

6. Wake, isles of the south, your redemption is near. Missions. Appeared in the Lyrics, 1822. It was sung at the wharf in New Haven at the embarkation of Missionaries for the Sandwich Islands, 1822.

7. When sorrow casts its shades around us. Resignation. From his New England and Other Poems, 1819. It is in Lyra Sac Americana, 1868.

8. While the solemn note of time. Saturday Evening. Pub. in his Poems, 1822; repeated in Lyra Sac Americana, 1868, and thence into Thring's Coll., 1882.

Τὰς ἐδρὰς τὰς αἰώνιας. St. John of Damascus. [All Saints.] In his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, Dr. Neale entitles this "Idiomela for All Saints." According to this it should be found in the Pentecostarion. Various editions, however, have been searched in vain. Dr. Neale's tr., "Those eternal bowers," was given in his Hys. of the E. Church, 1862, in 4 st. of 8 l. It has since appeared in various collections, and ranks with the more popular of his translations from the Greek. [J. J.]

Tate and Brady. [New Version; also Psalters, English, § 13.]

Tate, Nahum. [Psalters, English, § 13.]

Tauler, Johannes, was b. at Strassburg about 1300, and seems to have been the son of Nikolus Tauler or Taweler, of Finkweiler, who in 1304 was a member of the Strassburg Town Council (Mitglied des Raths). About the year 1318 he entered the Dominican convent at Strassburg. He studied for eight years at Strassburg, where the famous Meister Eckhart (d. 1327) was Dominican Professor of Theology from 1312 to 1320. He then went to Cologne to undergo a further training, in theory and practical work, extending over four years. Thereafter he returned to Strassburg, where he soon came into note as an eloquent and practical preacher. When much of Germany was laid under interdict by Pope John xxii., because of resenting his interference with the election of the German Emperor in 1324, the Dominicans at Strassburg still continued to preach, to celebrate mass, and to administer to the people the consolations of the Church, even though Strassburg was under the Papal bann. After the Diet of Frankfurt in 1338 the strife between Emperor and Pope (now Benedict xii., Pope since 1334) became more pronounced. Up to 1339 the Dominicans at Strassburg still continued to sing mass, but were then compelled to cease doing so by command of the superiors of their Order. As the Strassburg magistracy still remained faithful to the Emperor, they resented this submission, and accordingly closed the Dominican convent in 1339, and it stood empty for three years and a half. About the beginning of 1339 we find Tauler in Basel, where he remained for some years, in close connection with Heinrich of Nördlingen and others of the so-called "Friends of God" in that city and neighbourhood. About 1346 he was again in Strassburg, and he spent most of the remainder of his life there and at Cologne. He d. at Strassburg on June 16, 1361. (Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xv. 251; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. i., 1884, p. 210; Tauler's Bekehrung, by P. H. S. Denifle, Strassburg, 1879; Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, 1880, p. 200, &c.)

The above notice embraces what seem to be the best authenticated details of Tauler's life. It differs greatly from the account which till recently was regarded as historical, and which has been made accessible to English readers by Miss Susanna Winkworth (see below), and by Miss Frances Bevan, in her Three Friends of God, London, 1887. The basis of the common account was a work by Rulmann Merswin, which Denifle's investigations have shown to partake much more of the nature of a novel with a purpose than of authentic history (see also the Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxi., 459).

Tauler was one of the most celebrated of the Mediæval Mystics, and one of the most famous of all German preachers. Much uncertainty still exists however, not only as to the details of his life, but also as to what writings may safely be ascribed to him. The best authenticated are his Sermons, which were first printed at Leipzig in 1498 (good recent ed. by Julius Hamberger, Frankfurt, 1864, and Prag, 1872. English version of 26, with an account of his life, tr. and ed. by Miss Susanna Winkworth, London, 1887). The well-known Nachfolge des armen Lebens Christi has generally been ascribed to Tauler, but Denifle, who edited the most recent critical ed. (Munich, 1877), is of opinion that it is not by him (a recent English version by J. R. Morell, as The Following of Christ, London, 1886). The famous Theologia Germanica (good English version by Susanna Winkworth, London, 1854, with an interesting introduction on the "Friends of God") has also often been ascribed to him, but on no good grounds; though in its working out of the idea that a godly life is the renunciation of self and self-will, and complete devotion to the will of God, and that in this inner union with God we again become God's children, as at the first, the Theologia Germanica has much affinity with Tauler's teachings.

The hymns attributed to Tauler were printed in his Werke, Cologne, 1543, and by Daniel Sudermann, in his Schöne ausserlesene sinnreiche Figuren, Strassburg, 1620, and his Ettliche hohe geistliche Gesänge, Strassburg, 1626. Sudermann seems to have rewritten them, or at least considerably altered them. Wackernagel, ii. pp. 302-307, gives 11 (really 9) pieces under Tauler's name. Three of these have passed into English, viz. :—

i. Es kommt ein Schiff geladen. Christmas. Wackernagel, ii. p. 302, gives three versions of this hymn. The first, in 4 st., is from a 15th cent. ms. in the Royal Library at Berlin, and the third, in 8 st. (beginning "Uns kommt ein Schiff gefahren'") is from the Ander-nach G. B. (R. C.), Cologne, 1608. The trs. follow the second version, in 6 st., taken from Sudermann's Gesänge, 1626; and this text is in H. Bone's Cantate, 1847, No. 34 (1879, No. 26). See also Hoffmann von Fallersleben's Geschichte des deutschen Kirchenliedes, 1861, pp. 107-109. In the text of 1626, st. i., ii., nearly agree with st. i., iv. of the ms., while st. iii.-vi. borrow nothing from the older text, but are closely allied to the text of 1608. The tr. in C. U. is:—

There comes a galley sailing. This is a good and full tr. by Dr. R. F. Littledale for the People's Hymn, 1867, No. 37, and signed "D. L."

Other trs. are:—

(1) "There comes a bark full laden." By C. W. Shields in Sacred Lyrics from the German, Philadelphia, U. S., 1859, p. 109. (2) "There comes a galley laden." By Dr. E. V. Kenealy, in his Poems and Trs., London, 1864, p. 441, repeated in Lyra Messianica, ed. 1865, p. 98, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870, &c. (3) "A ship comes sailing onwards." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 84.

ii. Ich — die Creaturen fliehen. Self Renunciation. Wackernagel, ii. p. 302, gives two versions, the first from two Strassburg mss. of the 15th cent., the second from Daniel Sudermann's Figuren, pt. ii., 1620, both being in 3 st. of 4 l. Tr. as "From outward creatures I must flee." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 74.

iii. O Jesu Christ, ein lieblichs Güt. Love to Christ. Wackernagel, ii. p. 304, gives this, in 15 st. of 4 l., from Daniel Sudermann's G. B. of 1600-1601, a ms. now in the Royal Library at Berlin. It is tr. as "O Jesu Christ, most Good, most Fair." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 75. [J. M.]

Ταχεῖαν καὶ σταθῆράν διδου. St. John Arclas. [Whitsuntide.] This forms a "stanza" in the office for the Sunday of Pentecost in the Greek Church. The original text is in Dr. Littledale's Offices from the Service-Books of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 111, and Dr. Littledale's tr. in blank verse, beginning "O Jesu, give unto Thy servants," at p. 242 of the same. Mr. W. C. Dix's metrical arrangement of this tr., "Jesu, give Thy servants," was originally printed in the Church Times. It was then included in Mr. Dix's Seekers of a City, and Other Verses, 1878, and the People's H., 1867, in 8 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

Taylor, Ann and Jane. These names are associated together here for convenience of reference, and because many of their hymns were published under their joint names.

Gilbert, Ann, née Taylor, the elder of the two sisters, and daughter of Isaac Taylor, was b. at London, Jan. 30, 1782, her father at that time being engaged in London as an engraver. Subsequently her father became a Congregational Minister, and resided, first at Colchester and then at Ongar. In 1813 she was married to the Rev. Joseph Gilbert, Classical and Mathematical Tutor at the Congregational College, Masborough, near Rotherham, Yorkshire. From Masborough they passed to Hull, and then to Nottingham, where Mr. Gilbert d. in 1852. Mrs. Gilbert remained at Nottingham, and d. there Dec. 20, 1866. In addition to contributing hymns to the joint works of herself and her sister, a few were given in Collyer's Coll., 1812, signed "A." or "A. T.," and about 100 of her hymns appeared in Dr. Leifchild's Original Hymns, 1842, and a few in the Nottingham H. Bk. (1812, 20th ed. 1861). She pub. independently, Hymns for Sunday School Anniversaries, 1827;

Hymns for Infant Schools, 1827; and The Wedding among the Flowers. Her Memoirs, by her son, Josiah Gilbert, were pub. in 1874.

Taylor, Jane, the younger of the two sisters, was also b. at London, Sept. 23, 1783. Her gift in writing verse displayed itself at an early age. Her first piece was printed in the Minor's Pocket Book for 1804. Her publications included Display, a tale, 1815; Essays in Rhymes, 1816; and the posthumous work edited by her brother, entitled The Contributions of Q. Q., 1824, being pieces in prose and verse from the Youth's Magazine, to which she had contributed under the signature of "Q. Q." She d. at Ongar, Essex, April 13, 1824. Her Memoir and Poetical Remains, were pub. by her father in 1825.

The joint productions of the two sisters were—

(1) Original Poems, 1805; (2) Hymns for the Nursery, 1806; (3) Hymns for Infant Minds, 1809; 2nd ed. 1810; 52nd ed. 1877. To the 35th ed., 1844, Mrs. Gilbert interspersed 23 additional hymns by herself, thereby raising the total to 93. In 1838 Josiah Gilbert revised these hymns, added thereto from the works named above, supplied the initials "A." and "J." respectively, and pub. the same under the original title as the "Authorized Edition." (4) Original Hymns for Sunday Schools, 1812.

In addition to the hymns which are noted under their respective first lines, Mrs. Gilbert and Miss Taylor are the authors of the following (the date in brackets indicates the book in which each hymn appeared):—

i. Mrs. Ann Gilbert's Hymns.

1. Among the deepest shades of night (1812). Omniscience.
2. As Mary sat at Jesus' feet (1809). On repeating the Catechism.
3. Father, my spirit owns (1842). Resignation.
4. God is in heaven! Can he hear? God's care of Little Children.
5. Good Daniel would not cease to pray (1812). Prayer.
6. Hark the sound of joy and gladness (1842). Universal Peace.
7. How long, sometimes a day appears (1809). Time and Eternity.
8. I faint, my soul doth faint (1842). Contribution.
9. I thank the goodness and the grace (1809). Praise.
10. Jesus, that condescending King (1809). Coming to Jesus.
11. Jesus was once despised and low (1809). The Love of Jesus.
12. Jesus Who lived above the sky (1812). The Love of Jesus.
13. Lo, at noon, 'tis sudden night. Good Friday.
14. Lord, help us as we hear. Opening of Divine Service.
15. Lord, what is life? 'tis like a flower [the bow] (1809). Life.
16. My Father, I thank Thee for sleep (1809). Morning.
17. O [How] happy they who safely housed (1842). Death.
18. Spared to another spring (1827). Spring.
19. The God of heaven is pleased to see (1809). Brotherly Love.
20. This year is just going away (1810). New Year's Eve.
21. Wearied with earthly toil and care (1843). Sunday.
22. When I listen to Thy word. Comfort of the Scripture.
23. When little Samuel woke (1809). About Samuel.
24. Why should we weep for those who die (1843). Death.

ii. Miss Jane Taylor's Hymns.

1. A sinner, Lord, behold I stand (1809). A Child's Humble Confession.
2. Almighty God, Who dwellest high (1809). Praise to God.

3. Come, my fond, fluttering heart (Collyer's Coll. 1812). Renunciation of the World.

4. God is so good that He will hear (1809). Encouragement to Pray.

5. God!—What a great and awful name (1809). God's Condescension.

6. How dreadful to be turned away (1812). Expulsion from Sunday School.

7. Lord, I would own thy tender care (1809). Thanks for Daily Mercies.

8. Love and kindness we may measure (1809). Against Selfishness.

9. Now condescend, Almighty King (1809). Evening Hymn for a Small Family.

10. This is a precious book indeed (1809). Holy Scripture.

11. What is there, Lord, a child can do? Repentance.

12. When daily I kneel down to pray (1809). Against wandering thoughts in Prayer.

13. When for some little insult given (1809). Against Anger, &c.

14. When to the house of God we go (1809). Public Worship.

Mr. Gilbert's ed. of the Hys. for Infant Minds, 1886, together with ms. notes, are our authorities for the foregoing ascriptions of authorship. Mr. Gilbert cannot distinguish the authorship of the following hymns by one or both sisters:—

1. Good David, whose Psalms have so often been sung (1812). Concerning David.

2. If Jesus Christ was sent (1812). Repentance.

3. King Solomon of old (1812). Concerning Solomon.

In literary excellence Mrs. Gilbert's hymns surpass those of her sister. They are more elevated in style, ornate in character, broader in grasp, and better adapted for adults. The best are "Great God, and wilt Thou condescend?" (p. 452, ii.), "Jesus, Who lived above the sky," and "Lo! at noon 'tis sudden night." Miss Taylor's hymns are marked by great simplicity and directness. The most popular and one of the best is, "There is a path that leads to God." Taken as a whole, the hymns of both sisters are somewhat depressing in tone. They lack brightness and warmth. [J. J.]

Taylor, Dan, was b. of humble parentage, at Northwram, near Halifax, Dec. 21, 1738. Early in life he came under the influence of the Methodist movement, and in 1761 began to preach. Presently he became a Baptist, and for 20 years ministered to a congregation gathered by himself at Birchcliff, near Heptonstall, Yorkshire. Thence in 1783 he removed to Halifax, and in 1785 to Church Lane, Whitechapel, London, and of this congregation he continued pastor until his death in Dec. 1816.

Mr. Taylor was the leader of the movement among the General Baptists, which, in 1770, resulted in the formation of the New Connexion, and for many years he was the guiding spirit in the new body, his remarkable soundness of judgment causing him to be regarded almost as an oracle. For their use in 1772, he compiled a hymn-book, having the title Hymns & Spiritual Songs, mostly collected from Various Authors; with a few that have not been published before. Halifax, Printed by E. Jacob, 1772. Among "the few" hymns here referred to are three by Taylor himself, of which the following are the first lines:—

1. Behold, to what a wretched case. Justified by Faith.

2. Condemned are all the sons of men. Jesus the Redeemer.

3. Jesus, Redeemer, Saviour, Lord. Peace by Jesus Christ.

This book contains 293 hymns, with a few doxologies. In 1791, J. Deacon, having been requested by the G. B. Association to prepare a new collection, his work was submitted to a committee, of which D. Taylor was the chairman, and the new book appears to have been edited, and probably was greatly modified by Taylor, since a copy now before us has on its back the title Dan Taylor's Hymns. The title-page runs Hymns & Spiritual Songs, selected from Various Authors. London; printed for the Editors and sold by D. Taylor, Union Street, Bishopsgate Street, 1793. This book contains 632 hymns, and includes the three by D. Taylor cited above. Since J. Deacon, in 1800, pub. a hymn-book bearing his own name, it is probable that he disapproved of the treatment his work had received, and regarded the book of 1793 as the production of D. Taylor rather than his own. [v. Deacon, John.] [W. R. S.]

Taylor, Emily, b. 1795, was the daughter of Samuel Taylor, of New Buckenham, Norfolk, niece of John Taylor, of Norwich, the hymn-writer, and great grand-daughter of Dr. John Taylor, the Hebraist. Miss Taylor was the writer of numerous tales for children, chiefly historical, and of various books of instruction, and of descriptive natural history. Amongst her publications are:—

(1) Letters to a Child on Maritime Discovery, 1820; (2) Vision of Las Casas, and other Poems, 1825; (3) Poetical Illustrations of Passages of Scripture, 1826; (4) Tales of the Saxons, 1832; (5) Tales of the English, 1833; (6) Memoir of Sir T. More, 1834; (7) The Boy and the Birds, 1835. She also edited Sabbath Recreations, 1826; and Flowers and Fruit in Old English Gardens, 1836; and contributed to the Magnet Stories, 1860, &c.; and the Rainbow Stories, 1870, &c.

Miss Taylor wrote several hymns, which appeared as follows:—To the Unitarian Collection of Ps. & Hys., printed for the Renshaw Street Chapel, Liverpool, 1818, she contributed anonymously:—

1. Come to the house of prayer. Invitation to Public Worship. Sometimes given as "O come to the house of Prayer."

2. God of the changing year Whose arm of power. Lessons of the Changing Year.

3. O Father, though the anxious fear. Sunday.

4. O here, if ever, God of love. Holy Communion.

These, and the following 6 hymns, were given anonymously in the 2nd ed. of the Norwich Unitarian Hymn Book, 1826:—

5. Here, Lord, when at Thy Table met. Holy Communion.

6. O not for these alone I pray. Holy Communion. Sometimes, "No, not for these alone I pray."

7. The Gospel is the light. Worth and Power of the Gospel. Sometimes "It is the one true light."

8. Thus shalt thou love the Almighty God [Lord]. Self-consecration to God.

9. Who shall behold the King of kings? Purity.

10. Who that o'er many a barren part. Missions. Sometimes it begins with st. ii., "Thy kingdom come! The heathen lands."

Of the above No. 6 is part of a longer poem which was given in her Poetical Illustrations of Passages of Scripture, 1826. This work also contains:—

11. O Source of good! around me spread. Seek, and ye shall find.

12. Truly the light of morn is sweet. Early Piety.

13. When summer suns their radiance fling. Resignation with Praise.

In the Rev. J. R. Beard's Coll. of Hys. for Pub. and Private Worship, 1837, several of the above are repeated, and also:—

14. If love, the noblest, purest, best. Communion with Jesus.

Of these 14 hymns 10 are in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, and 9 in his Hymns, &c., 1873. Several are also found in other collections, as Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884, and some American and other hymn-books. Although for the greater part of her life Miss Taylor was a Unitarian, latterly, under the influence of F. D. Maurice, she joined the Church of England. She d. in 1872.

[V. D. D.]

Taylor, Helen, daughter of Martin Taylor, was the author of The Child's Book of Homilies, N. D.; Sabbath Bells, A Series of Simple Lays for Christian Children, N. D.; and Missionary Hymns: for the Use of Children, 1846. From her Sabbath Bells, "I love that holy Scripture" (Concerning Heaven) is taken. The following are all from her Missionary Hymns, 1846:—

1. A feather'd seed that lifted is. Value of Little Things.
2. And shall we dwell together? Concerning Heaven.
3. Father, the little offering take. Offeratory.
4. There is a happy land on high. Concerning Heaven. [J. J.]

Taylor, Jeremy, D.D. This poet of preachers was born of very humble parentage on both sides, at Cambridge, in August, 1613. His father was a barber. He must have had a good school as a boy. He entered Caius College, of his native city, as a "sizar" in 1626. His career at the university was a brilliant one. He was made fellow of All Souls College, Oxford, in 1632; and rector of Uppingham, Rutlandshire, in 1638, as is still proudly remembered there. He was inevitably "sequestered" by Parliament in 1642. Inevitable necessities of circumstance put him in prison. During the opening of the great Protectorate he kept a school in Wales along with William Nicholson, and acted as chaplain to the Earl of Carberry at Golden Grove, Carmarthenshire, one of the pilgrim spots of our country, because of this and of his imperishable book named after it. In 1658 he is found in Ireland. He preached at Lisburn and Portmore. He returned to London early in 1660, and signed the loyalist or royalist Declaration of the Nobility and Gentry, on April 24th, thirty-five days before the "Restoration." He was not overlooked, as so many faithful royalists were. He was consecrated bishop of Down and Connor in January, 1661; made a member of the Irish Privy Council in February; entrusted with the diocese of Dromore in March: and in the same year was chosen Vice-chancellor of the University of Dublin. He d. at Lisburn, August 13th, 1667, and was interred in the choir of the cathedral of Dromore. Bishop Taylor's complete works have been repeatedly edited, e.g. by Henry Rogers, Pitman, Bp. Heber, Eden; and manifold Selections and single books, as his Holy Living and Holy Dying. Notwithstanding his rich and imperial intellect, and enthralling eloquence, and absolute command of words, Bishop Taylor holds only a very small place in the Antiphon of England. It has been admirably said by Dr. Rowland Williams, "Poetry differs from eloquence, as love differs from friendship" (Stray Thoughts, 1878). His attempts at verse are eloquence, not poetry, and even the eloquence hampered and shallowed. The present writer collected his entire poems and verse-translations in the Miscellanies of the Fuller Worthies' Library (1870). In the "Introduction" the reader will find a critical account of the various hymns; and also therein an account is furnished of a flagrant misappropriation of Bp. Taylor's Hymns by Samuel Speed in his Prison Piety, or Meditations divine and moral. Digested into poetical heads on mixt and various subjects (1677). The following is the original title-page of the volume in which all the Festival Hymns, save one, first appeared:—

The Golden Grove, or a Manuall of Daily Prayers and Letanies Fitted to the dayes of the Week. Containing a short Summary of what is to be Believed, Practised, Denied. Also Festival Hymns According to the manner of "The Ancient Church." Composed for the Use of the Devout, especially of Younger Persons; By the Author of "The Great Exemplar." London: Printed by J. F. for R. Royston, at the Angel in Ivie Lane, 1655. (12mo.) A 2nd ed. appeared in 1657 with the Author's name thus, By Jer. Taylor, D.D., Chaplain in Ordinary to his late Majesty—a courageous announcement in the circumstances. A 3rd ed. seems to have disappeared. The 4th ed. appeared in 1659; and from it is derived the second Christmas Hymn, "Awake, my soul," which was not in either the 1st or 2nd ed. Heber, Pitman, and Eden overlooked this hymn. [A. B. G.]

From Bp. Taylor's Golden Grove, 1655, the following hymns are in C. U.:—

1. Full of mercy, full of love. Prayer for Charity. From the G. Grove, p. 116, where it is given in 20 lines, and headed, "A Prayer for Charity." It was given in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 109, and thus came into later hymn-books.
2. Lord, come away, why dost Thou stay. Advent, see p. 686, ii.
3. Lord, let Thy flames of holy charity. Whitsunday. This begins with line 12 of his hymn in the G. Grove, "On the Feast of Pentecost, or Whitsunday," p. 157.

His Christmas Carol, "Where is this blessed Babe," and his Prayer, "My soul doth pant towards Thee," are also from the Golden Grove. [See English Hymnody, Early, § 9.] [J. J.]

Taylor, John, b. July 30, 1750, was the s. of Richard Taylor, of Norwich, and grandson of Dr. John Taylor (1694-1761, the eminent Hebrew scholar, who was for many years minister of the Octagon Chapel, Norwich, and afterwards Divinity tutor at the Warrington Academy. Dr. Taylor published A Coll. of Tunes in Various Airs, one of the first collections of its kind, and his grandson was one of the most musical of Unitarian hymnwriters). Young Taylor, after serving his apprenticeship in his native place, was for two years in a banking house in London, at which time he was an occasional poetical contributor to the Morning Chronicle. In 1773 he returned to Norwich, where he spent the rest of his life, first as a manufacturer, and afterwards as a wool and yarn factor. For nearly fifty years he was a deacon at the Octagon Chapel. At the time of the French Revolution he joined in the support of The Cabinet, a periodical brought out by the Liberals of Norwich, in conjunction with Dr. Enfield, William Taylor, Miss Alderson (Mrs. Opie), and others, and as a "poet of the olden time," he contributed five poems thereto. These, and other political songs and poems relating to family events, &c., together with 50 hymns, were collected in Hymns and Miscellaneous Poems, Reprinted for Private Distribution, 1863, with a Memoir taken from the Monthly Repository of Sept. 1826, by his son, Edward Taylor, then Gresham Professor of Music. An earlier and less complete edition, containing 43 hymns, he had himself caused to be printed by his sons, Richard and Arthur Taylor, London, 1818. He d. June 23, 1826. Of his hymns the following 9 were contributed to Dr. Enfield's Sel. of Hymns for Social Worship, Norwich, 1795 (see p. 331, ii.):—

1. Far from mortal cares retreating. Divine Worship.
2. Father divine, before Thy view. Divine Providence.
3. Father of our feeble race. Christian Love. This begins in Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others, with st. ii., "Lord, what offering shall we bring?"
4. Glory be to God on high. Divine glories celebrated. The first stanza is by C. Wesley (see p. 427, ii.), and the rest are by Taylor.
5. God of mercy, God of love [grace], Hear our sad repentant song. Penitence.
6. O sing to the Lord a new song. Praise to the Supreme Ruler and Judge.
7. Praise to God, the great Creator. Praise to the Father. The hymn "Saints with pious zeal attending" in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N.Y., 1872, begins with line 4 of st. i. of this hymn.
8. Raise your voice and joyful sing. Praise.
9. Rejoice, the Lord is King. Providence acknowledged in the Seasons. The first stanza and ll. 5 and 6 of all are by C. Wesley (955, ii.), and the rest are by Taylor.

J. Taylor edited Hymns intended to be used at the Commencement of Social Worship, London, 1802. To that collection he contributed 10 hymns, including:—

10. At the portals of Thy house. Divine Worship. In a few American collections a cento from this hymn is given as, "Lord, before Thy presence come."
 11. Blessed Sabbath of our [the] Lord. Sunday.
 12. O how delightful is the road. Divine Worship.
 13. Supreme o'er all Jehovah reigns. Divine Worship.
- All the foregoing, except No. 8, were republished in the Norwich Coll. of 1814. That edition contained 33 of Taylor's hymns. To the 2nd ed., 1826, he added 9 more. To R. Aspland's Sel. of Ps. and Hys. for Unitarian Worship, Hackney, 1810, he contributed 26 hymns, old and new, including:—
14. Like shadows gliding o'er the plain. Time and Eternity.
 15. The Mighty God who rolls [rules] the spheres. God the Preserver of Man.

These 15 are the best known of Taylor's hymns, and are largely found in Unitarian collections. See especially Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., of 1840, and of 1873. [V. D. D.]

Taylor, Rebekah Hope, née Morley, eldest dau. of S. Morley, M.P., and wife of H. W. Taylor, a member of the Plymouth Brethren, is represented in the Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873, by:—

1. Blessed Saviour, I would praise Thee. Praise to Jesus.
2. My Saviour, I would own Thee. Steadfastness.
3. One more boundary passed o'er. New Year.
4. Thou art the Way, O Lord. The Way, Truth, and Life.

Mrs. Taylor d. Nov. 8, 1877. Her Letters were pub. in 1878. [J. J.]

Taylor, Thomas Rawson, s. of the Rev. Thomas Taylor, some time Congregational Minister at Bradford, Yorkshire, was b. at Ossett, near Wakefield, May 9, 1807, and educated at the Free School, Bradford, and the Leaf Square Academy, Manchester. From the age of 15 to 18 he was engaged, first in a merchant's, and then in a printer's office. Influenced by strong religious desires, he entered the Airedale Independent College at 18, to prepare for the Congregational ministry. His first and only charge was Howard Street Chapel, Sheffield. This he retained about six months, entering upon the charge in July 1830, and leaving it in the January following. For a short time he acted as classical tutor at Airedale College, but the failure of health which compelled him to leave Sheffield also necessitated his resigning his tutorship. He d. March 7, 1835. A volume of his Memoirs and Select Remains, by W. S. Matthews, in which were several poems and a few hymns, was pub. in 1836. His best known hymn is "I'm but a stranger here" (p. 562, ii.). The rest in C. U. all from his Memoirs, 1836, are:—

1. Earth, with her ten thousand flowers. The love of God.
2. Saviour and Lord of all. Hymn to the Saviour. Altered as "Jesu, Immanuel" in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853.
3. There was a time when children sang. S. School Anniversary.
4. Yes, it is good to worship Thee. Divine Worship. From this "Thy sweet, O God, to sing Thy praise," beginning with st. ii.
5. Yes, there are little ones in heaven. Sunday S. Anniversary. [J. J.]

Te decet laus = σοι πρέπει αἶνος. See pp. 1121, col. iii., 1125, 1127, etc.

Te Deum laudamus, the most famous non-biblical hymn of the Western Church, intended originally (as it appears) for daily use as a morning hymn. It is not now known to the Eastern Church in a Greek form, though the first ten verses exist in Greek. In the West it is known to have been in use from the beginning of the 6th cent. as a hymn for the Sunday service for mattins before the lesson from the Gospel.

The subject will be treated under the following heads: i. Authorities; ii. Text; iii. Title; iv. Date and Authorship; v. Origin and Intention; vi. Versions; vii. Liturgical use; viii. Musical Settings.

i. Authorities. Of the Authorities the most important are:—

1. For the earlier literature it is sufficient to refer to Bart. Gavantus's Thesaurus Sacrorum rituum as edited by C. M. Merati in 2 vols. fol. Venice, 1744 (vol. 2, pp. 147-153), and to Cardinal J. M. Thomastus' Opera, ed. Vezzosi, Rome, 1747, vol. 2, p. 345 foll. and vol. 3, p. 614 foll. In the former the question of the Ambrosio-Augustinian authorship is carefully discussed by Merati; in the latter several MS. texts are given with various readings. The dissertation of W. E. Tentzel, Exercitationes Sacrae, Leipzig and Frankfurt, 1692, is also frequently referred to.

2. Till recently the best modern authority was Daniel's Thesaurus Hymnologicus, vol. 2, Halle, 1843, pp. 276-299, but considerable advance has been made on this by Prebendary Edgar C. S. Gibson, of Wells, in his able and learned article on the Te Deum in the Church Quarterly Review, of April, 1884 (vol. 18, pp. 1-27); supplemented by one on the Gloria in Excelsis, ibid., Oct., 1885 (vol. 21, pp. 19, 20), which have been of the greatest service to the writer of this article. Dr. Swainson's article in Cheetham's Dict. of Christian Antiquities (1850) is ill-arranged, but touches some points not noticed by the later writer.

3. A small volume by Ebenezer Thomson called A Vindication of the Hymn Te Deum laudamus, &c., London, J. Russell Smith, 1858, contains a certain number of versions, not readily accessible elsewhere.

4. W. Palmer's Origines Liturgicae contains several acute remarks, i. p. 226 foll., Oxf., 1832. W. Maskell's Monumenta Ritualia, vol. ii., 1846, pp. 12-14; 229-232, has some early English versions.

5. Dom G. Morin in the Maredsous Revue Benedictine, Feb., 1894, first named Nicetas of Remesiana as author.

6. More recent are A. E. Burn's Introduction to the Creeds and the Te Deum, Lond., 1899, and Niceta of Remesiana, his Life and Works, Camb., 1905. Cp. Bp. (Wordsworth) of Salisbury, The T.D., its Structure, &c., ed. 2, S.P.C.K., 1903.

7. Thanks are due to M. L. Delisle and Prof. S. Berger of Paris, Dr. Ceriani of Milan, Dr. Idtenson of St. Gall, Dr. Leitschuh of Bamberg, and Rev. H. J. White for copies and collations of MSS.; to Mr. W. J. Birkbeck, of Magdalen College, Oxford, for valuable hints, and especially for the sections on the Russian version, and on the musical settings (see below, vi. 6, and viii.)

ii. The Text. As it is impossible to discuss the Date and Authorship and Origin and Intention of the hymn without a minute analysis of its text, we here present, in parallel columns, four of the most ancient forms which we possess.

 12. So in G: om. BT.

12. verum + et many MSS. but not the best.
 16. suscepisti most old MSS.; susceperunt Vienna 1861 and Lambeth 427, Cyprian of Toulon (A.D. 524-546) Ep. ad Maximum, Hincmar and Abbo of Fleury, and many later MSS.
 20. ergo + sancte. See note on col. II. tuis famulis: > famulis tuis later texts; see also col. I.
 21. gloria munerari most old MSS.; a few have in gloria munerari: in gloria munerari does not appear to be found in any MSS, but is in many (not all) printed editions of the Brevery from about 1491 onwards.
 Mr. Gibson suggests (p. 14) that it is not so much due to the natural confusion of letters as to "the well-known words added by Gregory the Great to the Canon of the Mass, in eleanorum tuorum iubeas grege numerari."
 23. After this verse Alex. xi. adds "Benedictus es domine deus patrum nostrorum et laudabile et gloriosum nomen tuum in saecula," instead of verses 24 and 25. Cp. II. [26] and the Greek morning hymn quoted above.

This version agrees most with that of Vat. 82 (V.), as given by Thomassinus from an early Psalter, possibly Old Latin.
 11. Peter: patrem V.
 12. verum unigenitum V.
 16. Note the omission of suscepisti, which is also omitted in Maskell's MS., English Primer: see below, p. 1128, ii.
 20. om. sancte V; it is found however in other MSS. in the order te ergo sancte quesumus. Mr. Gibson devices this gloss from the last stanza of the morning hymn.
 Rex eterne conuive | perum creator omnium. (See p. 987, ii.)
 23. laudabo: laudamus V.
 25. + at end Amen V.

iii. Title (cp. esp. Thomasius, l. c. 3, p. 614 foll. note, C. Q. R. pp. 5-7, 11). The hymn is found in many mss. without any title and so in some printed books. In earlier literature it is generally cited by its first three words. Later it is simply, as with ourselves, the Te Deum, and sometimes, though less commonly, the Hymnus Ambrosianus. The titles found in Psalters and early printed books may be divided into three classes: (1) those which define or describe its ritual use; (2) those which refer to its character or contents; (3) those which assign it to a particular author or authors. Sometimes 2 and 3 may be combined. The first class appears to be the earliest, which would harmonize with the early method of citation and with the uncertainty as to its authorship.

1. Titles denoting its ritual use are, Ymnus matutinalis (Bamberg Quadruple Psalter, copied from one dated A.D. 909, A. 1, 14), Hymnus ad matutina dicendus die dominico (Queen Christina's Psalter in the Vatican, ascribed to the 7th cent., Cod. Vat. Alex. xi., cf. Thomas, 2, p. 345, and 3, p. 614 n.) and many similar titles, e.g. Lambeth 427; Hymnum dominicale (Alcuin, officia per ferias, tom. 2, p. 116=Migne's PP. Lat. 101, p. 597), Ymnus in die dominica (Bangor Antiphony, late 7th cent., now at Milan, Bib. Ambros. C. 5 infra, rather incorrectly printed in P. P. Lat. 72, p. 587), Hymnus dominicalis pro nocturnis hoc est ante lectionem evangelii (S. Gall. 20, 9th cent.), Hymnus dom(ini)c(a) nocturna laude can(endus) (B. M. Arundel 155, 11th cent.).

2. Titles descriptive of contents are, Laudatio dei (Book of Cerne, 8th or 9th cent., Camb. Univ. Ll. 1, 10), Hymnus et oratio in laude domini (Corbie Psalter, 11th cent., Paris Bib. Nat. Lat. 11550), Hymnus SS. Patrum in honorem sanctae Trinitatis and Hymnus in honorem sanctae Trinitatis (Thomas, 2, p. 345, and 3, p. 614). More colourless titles are, Hymnus optimus (Bacon's Psalter, Camb. Univ., quoted by Swainson, l. c.); Oratio pura cum laudatione (B. M. Reg. 2 B. v.); Laus angelica (Camb. S. John's, C. 15), and simply Ymnus (Bodl. Douce 127, prob. 11th cent., a Lombard Psalter).

3. Titles indicating authorship are numerous but inconsistent. Indeed they may not all have been intended at first positively to assert the authorship of the person named, but perhaps to ascribe the introduction of the hymn to him, or possibly its musical setting, or it may be even to refer to his frequent use of it as a favourite hymn. Some however distinctly assert composition.

(a) The oldest of these titles, as far as MSS. are concerned, would appear to be Hymnus quem S. Hilarius primus composuit (Cod. S. Emmerami, 8th or 9th cent., C. lxvii., now at Munich, Daniel's M. 1). Cp. the Quaestiones Grammat. of Abbo Floriacensis (A.D. 985), P. P. Lat. 139, p. 632 § 18, "in Dei palinodia quam composuit Hilarius Pictaviensis episcopus non iuxta quorundam impertorum errorem suscepisti, sed potius suscepturus legendum est."

(β) Next would seem to be those which incorporate the tradition with regard to S. Ambrose and S. Augustine, Hymnus quem S. Ambrosius et S. Augustinus invicem condiderunt (S. Gall. 23 and 27, 9th cent.; Vienna Psalter, No. 1861, said to have been sent by Charles the Great to Pope Hadrian, but perhaps in this part in a later hand; B. M. Cotton Vitellius, E. xviii.; Bodl. Laud. 96, 11th cent., preceded by the older title, Laudes post nocturn.; Douce 296, circa A.D. 1050), Hymnus

s(an)c(t)oru(m) doctoru(m) Ambrosii & Augustini Episcoporum (Tournai Psalter, Paris, Lat. nouvelles acquisitions 2195, with Greek version of verses 1-11); Haec est laus sanctae trinitatis quam Augustinus sanctus et Ambrosius composuit (Irish Book of Hymns, 10th cent., Tr. Coll. Dublin, E. 4, 2); Hymnus Augustini (Salzburg Psalter, A. V. 31, quoted by Swainson).

(γ) Several MSS. refer to S. Nicetus or Nicetius, but whether the Bp. of Vienne or Treves or some other is meant is not clear. Such are the Florence Laurentian Plut. XVII. iii. and viii. of 11th cent., Brit. Mus. Harl. 863, 10th or 11th, and a Cotton MS. cited by Abp. Ussher, but not now identified. In the 11th century Arundel MS., No. 60 of the same library, with a Saxon gloss, is the title (fol. 127) Ymnus sancti Viceti episcopi diebus dominicis ad matutinis, which is probably meant for the same person. In the very scarce Psalterium Davidicum ad usum ecclesie Sarisburiensis, printed by Kyngston and Sutton, Lond. 1555, is the rubric "Canticum beati Niceti," and a note stating that the traditional account respecting S. Augustine's baptism is untrue: "Quod non est verum sed decantaverunt usum prius compositum per beatum Nicetium episcopum Vien(n)ensem quod inquit cassiodorus de institutione sanctorum scripturarum," on which see below. This name is closely connected with that in the Irish MS. Neeta, coarb. of St. Peter. The connection with Rome is prob. due to the misreading Romana for Romatiana or Remisiana, the see of Niceta, to whom Morin attributes the T.D.; see iv. 2.

(δ) The titles Hymnus S. Abundii (Breviarium Monasticum, Vat. 4928, circa 1166; cf. Merati in Gavantus, p. 152, No. iii. and Thomasius, 3, p. 615 n.), and Hymnus S. Sisebuti or Sisebuti monachi, &c. (Breviary of Monte Cassino, circa A.D. 1086, ap. Merati, l. c., cod. Basilicae Vatic. No. xi. ap. Thomas, l. c.) are puzzling. Abundius, Bp. of Como, who d. in 469 A.D., is probably meant. "Sisebutus monachus" would be so called to distinguish him from the well-known Spanish king, the contemporary of Isidore in the 7th cent. The monk may have belonged to Monte Cassino, or have been the Benedictine Abbot of Cardeñas, who d. in 1082.

In the printed Breviaries the reference to S. Ambrose and S. Augustine is general in some form or other, though the hymn sometimes has no title.

iv. Date and authorship. The consideration of these titles naturally leads us to the question of authorship. The traditional attribution to S. Ambrose and S. Augustine has been traced up as far as the year 859, when Hincmar of Rheims published his second dissertation On Predestination, in which he refers to it (c. 29 = PP. Lat. 125, p. 290):

"Et quomodo intelligi debeat quod sanctus dixit Ambrosius, Tu ad Uberandum suscepturus hominem (quia ut a maioribus nostris audivimus tempore baptismatis sancti Augustini hunc hymnum beatus Ambrosius fecit et idem Augustinus cum eo confect) in capite libri De bono coniugii exponit dicens," etc.

The tradition however took fuller shape in a Milanese chronicle, now ascribed to Landulfus senior, who wrote in the 11th cent. (Hist. Mediolanensis, i. 9 = PP. Lat. 147, p. 833). After mentioning the place of Augustine's baptism, the Church of S. John (now destroyed), he goes on:

"In quibus fontibus prout Spiritus sanctus dabat eloqui eis Te deum laudamus decantantes, cunctis qui aderant audientibus et videntibus simulque mirantibus, in posteris ediderunt quod ab universa ecclesia Catholica usque hodie tenetur et religiose decantatur."

The attribution of this part of the chronicle to Datius, Bp. of Milan (who d. A.D. 552 or 553), by a large number of writers, apparently copying from one another, naturally gave great credit to this tradition; but it is now destitute of any other authority than that which may be given it by the reference of Hincmar above quoted.

2. The absolute disproof of such a tradition is not easy nor perhaps possible, especially as internal evidence tends to fix the composition to a period very near the time suggested. But the comparative lateness of its appearance, the variety of other claims to authorship at about the same date, and the apparent use of S. Jerome's revision of the Psalter in the last 8 verses, pointed out by Mr. Gibson (p. 22 foll.) combine to deprive this tradition of any real probability. The coincidences are rather with S. Jerome's second revision, the so-called Gallican Psalter, dated 388 A.D., than with the Roman Psalter, his first revision of 382. As S. Augustine was baptized in 385 the conclusion is fairly strong as regards the hymn in its present form, although the verses in question, as we shall see presently, do not belong to the body of the hymn. The disproof of the claims of S. Ambrose will carry with it those of S. Hilary of Poitiers (d. A.D. 368), and probably also of Nicetius of Vienne (circa A.D. 379). Nicetius Abp. of Treves A.D. 527-566 is certainly too late. But Gennadius (†496) in his de viris ill. mentions "Niceas (or Nicetas) Romacianae civitatis episcopus" as writing 6 books of instruction to candidates for baptism and ad Virginem lapsam. Paulinus of Nola had a great friend, Nicetes or Niceta, a Dacian Bishop, who visited him in 398 and 402, whose learning and poetry he praised highly: Ep. 29, Carm. 17 and 27 passim. He is prob. the same person, and also = the Nicetus or Nicetius praised by Cassiodorus (de instit. div. lit. 16). Under these circumstances Dom G. Morin's conjecture (above, iii. γ) that Niceta of Remesiana, Bp. 392-414, is the author of the T. D. is very plausible. It is accepted by Zahn, Kattenbusch, W. H. Frere and A. E. Burn, who has published his works, 1905. But see 7 end.

3. If therefore we take the date of the Gallican Psalter as a probable terminus a quo for the origin of the hymn in its present form, we have next to ask what is the superior limit of date which can be fixed for it? The first actual reference to the hymn is in the rule of S. Caesarius of Arles, drawn up, it is said, before his elevation to the episcopate in 502 A.D. It is here ordered as part of the Sunday morning service (Regula ad Monachos, xxi. = PP. Lat. 67, p. 1102). It is ordered also by S. Aurelian of Arles to be said "omni Sabbato ad matutinos" (PP. Lat. 68, p. 396), and by S. Benedict to be said on Sunday "and vigiliis," when it is to precede the Gospel which is to be followed by the little hymn Te decet laus (Regula, cap. xi. = PP. Lat. 66, p. 436). All these cite the hymn simply by its first three words.

4. These indications point to the 5th century as the date of the hymn, and to its first rather than to its second half, since by the end of the century it had gained a recognized position almost equal to that of the ancient Psalms. Fifty years is not too long to allow for the growth of this popular acceptance, and allowing some time for the popular acceptance of S. Jerome's Gallican Psalter at the beginning of the period, we may date the Te Deum as it now appears in our prayer-books about 400-450 A.D.

5. An attempt has been made to define the date more precisely by an ingenious comment on the 16th verse. Dr. Swainson wrote (Dict. Chr. Ant. II. p. 1950 B.), "The phrase suscepit hominem was current in the time of S. Augustine, but went out of favour after the Nestorian controversy; it gave place to the phrase adsumpsit humanitatem or humanam naturam." Mr. Gibson accepts this dictum (C. Q. R. 18, p. 10) as a second proof of the date already suggested, and possibly as throwing the date further back in the 5th century.

It is certainly à priori not unnatural to suppose that hominem suscipere would be a phrase viewed with suspicion, since the Council of Ephesus in 431 condemned a creed, attributed by the presbyter Charisius to Theodore of Mopsuestia, in which the crucial phrase descriptive of the Incarnation is ὁ θεοπότης θεὸς λόγος ἄνθρωπον εἴληφε τέλειον, ἐκ σπέρματος ὄντα Ἀβραὰμ καὶ Δαυὶδ, κ.τ.λ. (ap. Labbe, Concil. iii. pp. 677 and 689). The words ἄνθρωπον εἴληφε could only be rendered hominem suscepit or adsumpsit. The text also of the different forms of the Te Deum shows more variation in this 16th verse than in any other, and that of a kind which suggests that a difficulty was felt as to the propriety of the language. The original reading appears to have been that preserved in the Irish text (as Bp. Lightfoot is said to have been the first to suggest, C. Q. R., vol. 18, p. 10, note 2) which runs as follows: "Tu ad liberandum mundum suscepisti hominem." There is a Johannine and Pauline fulness about this (reminding us of John iii. 16, 17, iv. 42; 1 John iv. 14; Rom. viii. 21; Eph. i. 10, &c.), and it is also so clearly intelligible, that it is difficult not to believe it the true reading. The other readings are easily explicable as derived from it, possibly through the loss of "mundum" on account of similarity of ending with "liberandum," possibly from a wish not to lay so much stress on the phrase "suscipere hominem," which might be misinterpreted in a Nestorian sense. In the Milan text and in one of the early English versions the verb "suscepisti" is omitted altogether, and the two parallel clauses are united into one sentence, "Tu ad liberandum hominem non horruisti virginis uterum." In the common text of the old MSS. the parallelism is preserved, "Tu ad liberandum suscepisti hominem: Non horruisti virginis uterum," but the ambiguity is introduced as to whether "suscepisti" is to be rendered "thou tookest man upon thee to deliver (him)," which is a harsh ellipse; or "thou tookest upon thee to deliver man"—as we render it (since the last Primer of Hen. viii., 1546)—which is scarcely good Latin. The modern printed text again, which was used by Hincmar in the 9th, and insisted upon by Abbo of Fleury in the 10th century, reads in one sentence, to avoid the anacoluthon, "Tu ad liberandum suscepturus hominem non horruisti virginis uterum"—but this, though as old as Cyprian of Toulon, c. 524, appears to be a mere correction for the sake of supposed elegance or orthodoxy, such as is often made nowadays by editors of hymns.

6. What then are the facts as to the use of the phrases "suscipere" or "assumere hominem" by the Fathers? This question has been discussed by Gerhard, Loci theologici IV, vi. § 96, in opposition to Bellarmine who accused Brentius of Nestorianism for having said, "Filius dei assumpsit filium hominis." Though it is not easy to verify Gerhard's quotations, it is possible to add many to them.

S. Cyprian does not seem to use either phrase exactly, though he twice employs the idiom "hominem induit" (quod idola dñi non sunt, 11 and 14). Others however do not shrink from it, having on their side Biblical authority in two striking phrases: (1) the old version of Hebrews ii. 16 (Sabatier), "nec enim statim angelos adsumpsit sed semen Abrahamæ suscepit" (ἐπιλαβόμενος); and (2) the frequent use in the Psalter of "susceptor meus" = ἀντιλήπτω μου, answering to various Hebrew words, which was sometimes taken literally as "he who takes me up" or "upon himself." Much stress cannot be laid upon the use of the Latin version of S. Irenæus, though it was probably made early and widely read. Here we find "facere ut et Deus assumeret hominem," &c. = καὶ θεὸς μὲν παραστήσει τὸν ἀνθρώπον, κ. τ. λ. iii. 13, 7). S. Hilary of Poitiers comes very near the usage of the Te Deum in his note on "susceptor meus," Ps. lxi. (Heb. lxii.) § 2, 3, and he actually uses "assumere" (though not "suscipere") "hominem," de Trin. lix. 38. Ambrose too goes closely up to it, but scarcely touches it, so far as has been as yet observed. In de Fide, vi. § 69, he has the remarkable phrase "quamvis ex personæ hominis incarnati susceptione loqueretur" (or, as variously read, ex persona hominis in carnis susceptione); but in his treatise of Incarnatione, while he constantly uses the verb "suscipere" and less frequently "assumere," it is always apparently with "carnem," "corpus," "animam," "sensum," "nostram naturam," "naturam humanam," &c., and never with the concrete "hominem." Indeed the guarded language of this treatise would seem by itself to make it highly improbable that he could have been the author of the Te Deum.

On the other hand, the phrase appears to be widely used by S. Augustine and with great boldness, repeatedly for instance in his de Prædestinatione Sanctorum, where he does not shrink from asking the question, "Ille homo, ut a verbo Patri coeterno, in unitatem personæ assumptus, Filius dei unigenitus esset, unde hoc meruit?" (see cap. xv. § 30, 31). Taken alone, it is obvious how open such a speculation is to a Nestorian misconception. Other instances are Sermo ad Catech. 8, de Fide et Symbolo 8 ("ut totum hominem suscipere dignaretur in utero virginis") and 18, Enchiridion 36, cp. de Trin. I. vii. 14, "propter acceptum hominem," and de Civitate Dei xi. 2, "assumpto homine." Probably S. Augustine's use is the strongest instance, but we also find the phrase used by writers in the midst of the Nestorian controversy and later. Such are Leporius, in his recantation made about A. D. 420, quoted by John Cassian, and Cassian himself (de Inc. contra Nestorium, i. 5 and ii. 3, where he also uses the phrase "homo unitus Deo") and S. Leo, Serm. 28, 6 and 12, 6 (cp. Dr. W. Bright, Sermons of S. Leo, p. 165, ed. 2). It may be that, as Mr. Gibson suggests, both Cassian and Leo are more cautious in their later books, but they are not the latest writers who use the phrase. Vigilius Tapsensis (circa A. D. 484) writes: "Ingressus est virginis uterum dei filius, . . . et suscepit totum hominem qui iam habebat a patre plenissimam deitatem" (de Unitate Trinitatis xiv. = PP. Lat. 62, p. 343). Another sufferer from Vandal persecution in Africa, Fulgentius of Ruspe, uses the phrase frequently, both with "hominem" alone and qualified by an epithet, in his books ad Trasimundum regem, written about A. D. 520 (e.g. iii. 12, 13, 16, and with a qualification ib. 7, 8, 27, parallel naturally with a similar use of "humanitas" and "caro"). Florus Lugdunensis de Expositione Missæ in the 9th cent. § 5 (PP. Lat., 119, p. 21 c) is the last author that need be quoted for "suscipere" with "totum hominem" and "mortalem." The use of "assumere hominem" by Boethius, de Personæ et duabus Naturis, cap. 7, and by Ratramnus, de Corpore et Sanguine Domini 25, is of course closely parallel. Thomas Aquinas in the Summa, pars iii. qu. 4, art. 3, says, "non possumus dicere quod homo sit assumptus," though he is obliged to admit that many fathers used the phrase without offence. Cp. Billuart, Tract. de Inc. dissert. iv. art. 1.

It seems, then, that Dr. Swainson's assertion is much too sweeping, and that though some authors may have grown shy of the phrase "suscipere hominem," during or soon after the Nestorian controversy, others did not feel scrupulous about it. The names of Augustine, Leporius (and with him Cassian), Vigilius, and Fulgentius suggest that the African school especially accepted the phrase as a convenient and telling one and without any fear of being misunderstood. The use of the double phrase "totum hominem suscipere in utero virginis" by S. Augustine, and of "ingressus est virginis uterum . . . et suscepit," by Vigilius, is also a point of contact with the hymn. How far does this fall in with other probable evidence?

7. Merati long ago suggested that the Te Deum originated in Southern Gaul and particularly in the school of Lerins, though his further conjecture that S. Hilary of Arles was the author does not seem a happy one. This suggestion is adopted by Daniel in general terms (p. 288) and is also considered probable by Mr. Gibson, as far as Gaul and Lerins are concerned. The evidence in favour of Gaul drawn by the last writer from the Contestations or prefaces of the Gallican Sacramentaries is certainly very striking, and is important even if we conclude that the hymn is older than the Liturgies. Such are particularly: "Dignum et iustum est . . . ut te dominum ac deum totis visceribus humana conditio veneretur" (Missale Gothicum, p. 604, and Gallicanum, p. 753); "Omnis terra adorat te et confitetur tibi; sed et caeli caelorum et angelicæ potestates non cessant laudare, dicentes Sanctus," &c. (Miss. Goth., p. 518); "Quem angeli et archangeli quem throni et dominationes quem Cherubin et Seraphin incessabili voce proclamant, dicentes Sanctus," &c. (Mone's Missæ, ii.); and others in the later verses which deserve to be read, though none of them touch verse 16. The early adoption of S. Jerome's revision of the Psalter by Gallican writers points also in the same direction; and the fact that Caesarius of Arles, who was a disciple of the famous school of Lerins (in the little island of St. Honoratus between Antibes and Fréjus), is the first person known to have used the hymn, gives a certain plausibility to the conjecture of Merati with regard to the specific locality of its origin. But verse 16 is a difficulty, since the phrase "suscipere hominem" appears to be African rather than Gallican. It is natural then to think of Cassian, whose monastery at Marseilles was probably the model for that of Lerins, and whose intercourse with S. Honoratus is well known, as the intermediary link in this as he was in some other greater matters. It is not suggested that Cassian himself was the author or compiler, but that he brought the hymn to Lerins. It is noticeable that "suscipere hominem" does not appear in the prose works attributed to Niceta, but "carnem susceptum humanam," de symbolo 10.

v. Origin and Intention.—If therefore it is impossible to fix the authorship of the Te Deum, can we go any further in the enquiry as to its origin?

1. A careful comparison of the four parallel columns given under the head of Text (§ ii.) will suggest at any rate some interesting conclusions. In the first column we have placed the Irish text, mainly from the Bangor Antiphonary, which is by internal evidence dated between A. D. 680–691 (Warren's Liturgy and Ritual of the Celtic Church, p. xiii.). This text appears to be the most primitive. In the second we have a version which is that of a Breviary of Milan Cathedral (kindly collated for this article by Dr. Ceriani) and of an early Psalter in the Vatican library described by Thomasius. In the third is the ordinary version found in mss.; and in the fourth a Greek version extending to the first eleven or twelve verses found in four or five mss., three from the school of S. Gall (at S. Gall, Bamberg and Cologne) and one from Tournai (at Paris). The version of the Mozarabic Breviary is interesting, but seems to require more careful editing.

2. Most students of the hymn now recognise the triple division of its 29 verses: (1) The "Te Deum" proper (1-11), preceded in the Irish text by the antiphon "Laudate pueri," &c.; (2) the hymn "Tu rex gloriæ" (12-21); (3) the antiphons "Salvum fac" and "Per singulos dies"—in inverse order in the Milan text—followed in the common use by certain Preces, or versicles and responses, of which there are four sets in the current text (22-29). Of these 3 parts (1) consists of a hymn to the blessed Trinity in two parallel divisions, (A) verses 1-6 being the Praise of Earth and Heaven, particularly of the Angels, ending with the Angelic Tersanctus in the western or Latin form, and (B) verses 7-11 being the "Confession" of the Church on Earth, based on the language of S. Cyprian, and ending with a Trinitarian Gloria. This is a sort of Christian counterpart to Psalm 148. Each verse (except the Glorias) begins with "Te" or "Tibi." Part (2) is a continuous hymn to Christ, proclaiming the mysteries of His divine worship, incarnation, atoning death, and opening of heaven, session and future coming to judge, ending with a prayer for those whom He has redeemed and for their future glory. Every verse begins with "Tu" or "Te," except 19, "Iudex crederis," which in the Irish version (reading "sedens") is not a separate verse but a part of 18. There is thus a contrast between (1) and (2), but also a continuity of structure; and it can hardly be doubted that (2) was written as a continuation of (1), even if (1) existed by itself first. The rhythm (sometimes called "Cursus Leoninus") is the same also throughout, every line ending with two feet which, when scanned accentually, may be roughly described as equivalent to the end of a hexameter verse. Seven have the exact hexameter ending (˘ ˘ | ˘ ˘), viz., voce proclamant, deus sabaoth, gloriæ tuæ, gloriæ Christe, régna caelorum, gloriæ patris, esse venturus. Seven end with two dactyls: laudabilis numerus, laudat exercitus, confitetur ecclesia, unigenitum (or unicum) filium, paraclitum spiritum (acc. to Greek accent often accepted in Latin verses), sempiternus es filius, virginis uterum. One ends with two spondees: apostolorum chorus. The other six have a less regular ending in which final quadrisyllables, accented on the penultimate, take the place of spondees, viz., dominum confitemur, terra veneratur, universae potestates, immensae maiestatis, sanguine redemisti, gloriæ munerari.

Similar rhythmical endings are found in the first half of lines 16, 17, 20. See more on this rhythm in Burn, Int. to Creeds, &c., 248-252, and Niceta, cix.-cxii.

3. Mr. Gibson's suggestion that these antiphons were transferred from the Greek morning hymn Gloria in excelsis to the Latin morning hymn, when it took its place in the daily service, is very plausible (C. Q. R. 21, p. 20). This accounts for the variety of the three endings, since these antiphons did not belong to the original hymn and were felt to be public property to be used as liturgists thought most fitting. It is also noticeable that a similar antiphon, "Laudate pueri dominum: laudate nomen domini," precedes the hymn in the Irish version in the Bangor Antiphony and in the Dublin Book of Hymns, being the antiphon to the short Greek evening hymn at the end of the viii book of the Apostolic Constitutions, which hymn closes with the σοι πρέπει αλως, &c. Hence we conclude that the Te Deum as first used as a whole in the Latin Church consisted of verses 1-21, ending with the words "aeterna fac cum sanctis [-+ tuis?] gloria munerari" = "make them to be gifted in company with the saints with eternal glory." The musical evidence given below strongly confirms this.

4. Can we analyse any further? Not with any certainty; but the Greek version of the first part, existing in four mss., suggests prima facie that verses 1-10 down to "sancta confitetur ecclesia" were originally a separate Greek hymn and were an address to Christ as God; that the Trinitarian passage (11-13) is an insertion, a sort of doxology added at the end like that in the Te decet laus; and that 14-21 is an exclusively Latin composition ("Tu rex gloriæ Christe . . . gloria munerari").

5. That hymns were addressed to Christ as God as early as the 1st and 2nd centuries is not only suggested by the well-known passage of Pliny's letter to Trajan (x. 96), but asserted apparently by S. Hippolytus (ap. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. v. 28) who speaks of Psalms and Odes of the brethren "written by faithful men from the beginning, which hymn Christ the Word of God calling him God" (τὸν λόγον τοῦ θεοῦ τὸν Χριστὸν ὑμνοῦσι θεολογῶντες). There would be nothing historically improbable in the supposition that verses 1-10 were a Greek hymn dating back to the 2nd cent. and known in a Latin form to S. Cyprian in the 3rd cent. The passage of his de Mortalitate (ch. 26, written circa A.D. 252) seems, as Abp. Benson remarks, something more than a coincidence. He is speaking of course of the joys of heaven:

"Illic apostolorum gloriosus chorus, illic prophetarum exultantium numerus, illic martyrum innumerabilis populus ob certaminis et passionis gloriam et victoriam coronatus, triumphantis virgines . . . remunerati miscerordes," &c.

It is not however close enough to suggest that the first part of the hymn, as we have it, was known to him by frequent usage, else we should expect some other epithet than "exultantium," and some reference to the white robes of the martyrs. On the whole it seems safest to conclude that verses 7-9 are a reminiscence of S. Cyprian, not vice versa; and that the Greek form of verses 1-10 is a translation from the Latin, not an original composition. Yet this is to be observed (1) that the Te decet laus and the Gloria in excelsis are both from a Greek original; (2) that the other canticles in the Quadruple Psalters have their Greek originals, in parallel columns, in just the same writing and style as the Te Deum; and (3) that there is nothing in verses 1-10 which reads like a translation except the form of the Tersanctus and a phrase which we shall discuss below, verse 8. It is only necessary to read them in a form which is more easy for ourselves than the Latin characters into which the Greek of the Psalter is (as usual) transliterated, to be convinced of their genuine ring of strength and simplicity.*

1. Σε θεὸν (θεὸς B.) αἰνοῦμεν · σὲ κύριον ἐξομολογοῦμεν ·
2. Σε αἰώνιον πατέρα πάσα ἡ γῆ [σέβεται].
3. Σοὶ πάντες ἄγγελοι, σοὶ οὐρανοὶ καὶ πάσαι ἐξουσίαι,
4. Σοὶ χερουβιμ καὶ σεραφίμ ἀκαταπαύστῳ φωνῇ ἀνακράζουσιν ·
5. Ἅγιος ἅγιος ἅγιος κύριος ὁ θεὸς σαβαώθ ·
6. Πλήρεις οὐρανοὶ καὶ ἡ γῆ τῆς μεγαλωσύνης τῆς δόξης σου.
7. Σε δεδοξασμένους ἀποστόλων χορὸς ·
8. Σε προφητῶν αἰνετὸς ἀριθμὸς ·
9. Σε μαρτύρων ἑκκλησιῶν αἰνεῖ στρατὸς ·
10. Σε κατὰ πάσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην ἡ ὄγία ἐξομολογεῖ ἐκκλησία.

In verse 2 we notice the absence of a verb after γῆ, such as σέβεται. This is an argument, it may be, for the mutilation of the Greek copy from which the scribe wrote, but does not suggest (as verses 11 and 12 do) an attempt at translation by an ignorant person. For any one who could (ex hypothesi) translate so freely, using for instance the compound words which this writer does, would have been able to find an equivalent for "veneratur." Its absence might indeed be explained as an omission from carelessness on the part of a scribe who was making an interlinear gloss, such as seems occasionally to be met with in the versions about to be examined. But such omissions of words may equally be set down to carelessness of transcription, e.g. the Murbach O.G. ms. omits to gloss "redemisti" in verse 20; which is probably merely an accident in copying. The only other verse which calls for remark in point of style is the 8th, where the use of ἀριθμὸς is rather peculiar. The verses after the Trisagion rise to a gradual climax in point of extent. First comes the small and well-defined band of Apostles (cp. χορὸς προφητῶν, 1 Sam. x. 5, 10, and χορὸς εἰρήνης at the close of the hymn of Clement of Alexandria), then the well-disciplined and therefore praiseworthy regiment (numerus) of prophets, then the bright-clad army of martyrs, then the universal Church. Now there is no doubt that "numerus" constantly means a regiment, from the time of Tacitus onwards, but this use of ἀριθμὸς is not so common. It is found indeed in the LXX. in Isa. xxxiv. 24=tsâbâ, in 1 Macc. ix. 65, and in later writers as noticed by Sophocles, Lexicon, s. v., and it may be remarked that δεδοξασμένους and αἰνετὸς occur together in the Greek Song of the Three Children and in the Antiphons to the Gloria in excelsis. We are however bound to notice that the Tersanctus follows the wording of the Latin Mass (God of hosts and heavens instead of heaven), and not that of the Greek Liturgies. This is an almost conclusive argument against the originality of the Greek poem, at any rate as it has come down to us.

6. But this version, if not original, is the work of one to whom Greek was thoroughly familiar, and implies that verses 1-10 are a separate hymn. For the peculiar form of verse 11 in all three mss., and of verse 12 in the S. Gall. ms., and the absence of verse 13 (see Text, § ii. p. 1120) betray an incompetent and bungling hand attempting to translate at a later date and dropping the attempt. The barbarous word "emmeso" or "emmeso" can scarcely be anything else than a puerile transliteration or vague representation of "inmensae," remembering the length of e in Latin before ns and the forms Κόστας, Κρήσκης, &c., for "Constans," "Crescens," which show how easily the n was dropped in such a position. No true Greek word can be thought of (such as ἀμέτρον) of which "emmeso" could be a corruption.

The next verse in the S. Gall ms., on the other hand, might be a bad copy of a correct but mutilated or blotted line, but on the whole it is most probable that the "ali th eikon" represents a barbarous ἀληθικόν, not a blurred ἀληθινόν, formed on the analogy of such words as ἀσθενικός, εὐθικός, &c. The absence of the last line would then be due to the interpreter's consciousness of failure, or at any rate to his self-distrust, unless the theory of an incomplete doxology be resorted to, as in the grace after meat at the close of the Apostolic Constitutions.

7. The arguments in favour of the theory that this early part of the hymn is in intention an address to Christ are chiefly based on the first verse and on the use of the accusative case in it, "We praise thee who art God; we acknowledge thee who art the Lord." The parallel of the Gallican Contestatio quoted above, which is addressed distinctly to our Lord, is very striking, and we are also necessarily reminded of the confession of S. Thomas, "My Lord and my God." The application of the Trisagion to the second person of the Trinity is also justified by the quotation from Isaiah, chap. vi. 10, made by S. John, and by his description of the scene from which it is taken, "These things said Esaias when he saw his glory and spake of him" (John xii. 41). The only real difficulty is in the αἰώνιον πατέρα or "aeternum patrem," which we should expect to find as an equivalent to abi-'ad in the versions of Isaiah ix. 6, but do

* They differ very much from the Greek translation in the Ambrosian MS. of the 15th cent. (C. 13. inf.) which Mr. Gibson has kindly transcribed for this article, which appears to be simply a very rough and unscholarly attempt at rendering into Greek from the Latin, and which is only a fragment. It runs as follows Literatim :—

Σε θεὸν αἰνοῦμεν σε κύριον ὁμολογοῦμεν.
Σε τὸν αἰὶον πατέρα πάσα ἡ γῆ σέβεται.
Σοὶ πάντες ἄγγελοι σοὶ οὐρανοὶ καὶ πάσαι ἐξουσίαι.
Σοὶ τα χερουβιμ καὶ τα σεραφίμ ἀκαταπαύστῳ φωνῇ βλάσι Ἅγιος ἅγιος κύριος ὁ θεὸς σαβαώθ
Πλήρεις εἰσιν οἱ οὐρανοὶ τῆς μεγαλοπρεπῆς τῆς

The rendering of the Greek Prayer-book printed by Field, Cambridge, 1655, is naturally better than this Milan text, but is not so good as that of our four MSS. The article is less exactly used. In verse 4 ἐκβώσιν is not so good as ἀνακράζουσιν, and in verse 6 μεγαλειότης is not so natural as μεγαλωσύνη.

not exactly find, the nearest being Symmachus's πατήρ αἰώνος.

8. On the whole the parallel of the angelic Tersanctus, after the angelic praise, to the Trinitarian doxology, after the Church's praise, pointed out by Dr. Gibson, strongly reinforces the arguments in favour of the originality of the Latin text as we have it, and emphasises the Trinitarian intention of the whole first part.

vi. Versions. 1. Old German. The old-German version is possibly the earliest that has come down to us, unless the Anglo-Saxon may be considered earlier. It is contained in a MS. assigned to the earlier part of the 9th century, where it formed the last of a series of twenty-seven hymns. The first twenty-five are metrical Latin hymns (all in Daniel), with an interlinear old German or Theotisc gloss. No. 26 is the "Te decet laus" to which reference has been frequently made in this article, which was wrongly attached by Grimm, following Junius and Price, to No. 25. No. 27 (Grimm, 26) is the Te Deum which, like all the rest, is in the form of an interlinear gloss.

The volume in which this important collection is bound up is No. 25 in the library of F. Junius, since A.D. 1678 in the Bodleian library. From a note on fol. 103 b. (p. 33 of the Glossary) it is known to have belonged to the Abbey of Murbach (M. Morbacense, Munsterthal), in southern Alsace, in the middle of the 15th century (A.D. 1461). Whether it was written there or at the mother house of Reichenau (M. Augense) is, of course, matter of conjecture; but there are reasons for inclining to the latter opinion. Through the temporary disappearance of this volume, or through the carelessness with which its contents were investigated—for hymns 22-27, in a different but hardly later hand, have long been bound before hymns 1-21—this collection has been chiefly known from a transcript made by Junius (No. 74). Another transcript (No. 110) is said to have been stolen when Dr. Owen was librarian (A.D. 1747-1768). Four of the hymns, including the Te Deum, were printed by Dr. Geo. Hickes in his Grammatica franco-theotisca, Oxf. 1703; the Te Deum was printed alone by J. G. Eccard at Helmstädt in 1713, and the others in his Francia Orientalis at Würzburg in 1729. The first complete edition of the 26 (27) hymns was published by Jakob Grimm at Göttingen in 1830, but based, as he tells us in his preface, upon a copy made for him by Dr. Price, Bodley's librarian, who died in 1813. This copy was unfortunately not from the Murbach MS., but from Junius's transcript, No. 74. From this edition of Grimm's others have reprinted, such as K. E. P. Wackernagel (Das deutsche Kirchenlied von Martin Luther bis auf Nicolaus Herman, &c., No. 70, p. 40, Stuttgart, 1841), who is followed by Daniel II. 277; and lastly Thomson. Wackernagel has a few useful notes, 1841, pp. 864. He did not reprint these old German hymns in his great collection Das deutsche Kirchenlied von der ältesten Zeit bis zu Anfang des zwölften Jahrhunderts, vols. i-v., Leipzig, 1864-1877.

In 1874, however, Prof. Ed. Sievers edited the whole from the original MS. (Die Murbacher Hymnen nach der Handschrift herausgegeben at Halle), printing, like Grimm, the Latin and German in parallel columns, with a useful introduction and glossary. He, like others, assigns the MS. to the early part of the 9th century, but the interlinear gloss is very probably older, inasmuch as over some words there are two glosses standing side by side, showing that the MS. was based upon a double tradition of the German version. It is also remarkable that in many cases only the termination is written, while the stem of the word is left to be supplied by the reader—which implies a rather unusual condition of knowledge of languages. These stems are supplied by the editors in square brackets; the contractions are indicated by italics. The following are the double glosses in the Te Deum. Verse 2 ueneratur=uuiridit eret; verse 17 deuicto=kerihemo, but ubarunomo is also written in the margin; verse 22 populum=folh liut.

The following are the most important verses:—

- 1 thih cot [lob]mes.
thih [truht]jan gelemes;

- 2 thih euuigan fater eokiuuelih erda uuiridit eret;
11 fater unginuzenera meginchrefri,
12 erhaftan thinan uuaran einagu[n] sun;
13 uuihan auh trost amut;
16 thu za arlossanne anfing mannan.
ni leithichetos thera magidi ref
21 euuigero tua mit uuihem thinem tiurida lonot (lat. munerare).

In verse 9 the word "kasconnot" for "candidatus" appears to mean "adorned" or "splendid." The same word is found as a translation of "ornavit" in st. iii., in No. xi. in this ms.

Thomson prints a High German Te Deum from a Psalter printed at Basel (1502) beginning: "Wir loben dich Got; wir bekennen dich Her. 2 "Alle erd eret dich ewigen Vater." Verse 16 runs "Du zu erlösung an dich zenemen den menschen, hast mit versmehcet den leib der junkfrawen," and 21 "Haisz sy begabet werden, mit den haligen, mit der ewigen ere." Other notices of German versions may be found in Daniel (II. pp. 292, 3). Luther loved the hymn and strongly recommended its use; and his translation (made in 1529) "Herr Gott dich loben wir" (p. 1134, l. 1) is still in use. Another version by H. von Meyer, beginning like Luther's, is much praised by Daniel and printed by him at ii. pp. 278-9. The following lines show its character: "Uns zu erlösn hast | Du dich in's Fleisch gesenkt, | Uns durch dein Todespein | Himmliche Freud geschenkt," and "Lass sie nach dieser Noth | Haben in Friede Theil | Mit deinen Heiligen all'n | Dort an dem ewgen Heil."

2. Old-French. Three versions are printed by Thomson, pp. 45-52, one from MS. Harl. 1770 and two from Harl. 273, in verse and prose. Both mss. appear to be of the 14th century, and the latter to come from Ludlow. Prof. Samuel Berger, of the Protestant Theological Faculty at Paris, has kindly supplied other copies; (1.) from the Psalter of Eadwin (Tr. Coll. Camb. R. 17.1, copied at Canterbury circa A.D. 1120); (2.) from the so-called "Psalter of Corbie" (Paris B. Nat. Lat. 768); (3.) from the Anglo-Norman Bible copied for John de Welles, d. 1361 (Paris B. Nat. Franç. 1, cp. Berger, La Bible Française au Moyen Age, p. 324, 1884). He has also made notes on a number of others, from which it is clear that there was a very large variety of French versions of this hymn current in England and France in the middle ages. We give select verses from those not readily accessible.

(1) Eadwin. 1. "Sire tei Deu löims, tei seignur regelissimus;" 2. "Tei parmenable Perre henouered tute terre . . ." 16. "Tu recuus houme ■ deliurer le, ne turnas a hisdour le ventre de la Virgine . . ." 21. "Fai les eitre gureednez de parmenable gloire od tes sainz." (2.) "Corbie" Psalter. 1. "Tei deus loms; tei seignur regelissimus;" 2. "Tei parmanable perre; tote terre honore . . ." 16. "Tu a deliurer a sosceute le home; ne enherdis de la uirgine le ventre . . ." 21. "Pardurable (=aeternam?) fai et tes sainz reguerredone la glorie." (3.) Anglo-Norman Bible. 1. "Nous toy loms dieu nous toy regoroms seignor;" 2. "Tote la terre toy honore pere pardurable . . ." 16. "Tu a prendre a deliuerer hom ne doubtas point le ventre de ta uirgine . . ." 21. "Fai tes serlis estre rewarder en glorie tut dis duraunt." Mr. Berger remarks on the whole question, "Cette multiplicité des traductions du Te deum, contraire à ce que nous observons pour le Psautier, me parait assez facile à expliquer. D'abord c'était un texte liturgique que chacun avait en memoire et d'après lequel le copiste retouchait et rajeunissait presque instinctivement son texte; en outre, tous les Psautiers ne contenaient pas cet appendice, en sorte que le copiste ne trouvait peut-être pas la traduction française du Te deum dans son original et il y suppléait comme il pouvait."

In the French Protestant churches there are in use two versions, one in prose and the other in verse. The prose version is the older being found in the Liturgie de Montbéliard, Strasbourg, 1844. It is reprinted in the Liturgie dans l'Église de la Confession d'Augsbourg, Nancy, 1887, p. 20. Its first words are

"Nous célébrons tes louanges, ô Dieu, et nous reconnaissons que tu es le Seigneur." It is not very exact (e.g. "La glorieuse assemblée des apôtres, des prophètes et des martyrs célèbre tes louanges") or spirited, and it is, says M. Berger, rarely used. On the other hand the hymn in verse "Grand Dieu nous te bénissons, Nous célébrons tes louanges," which is by the famous Genevan pietist, H. L. Empeytaz (d. 1853), is sung at all national festivals and thanksgiving services in all the churches in which the French language is used. It may be found in Recueil de Cantiques à l'usage des églises évangéliques de France, Paris, Rue Chauchat, 1876, &c. It is not however so much a translation as a partial adaptation. It is curious that it wholly omits the central doxology (verses 11-13) and therefore, perhaps by accident, reproduces what we have supposed to be the original intention of the hymn. Verse 16 is also wholly omitted. The last three stanzas, 8-10, have a very faint resemblance to the original. The last is a doxology often used at the end of the ordinary service:—

"Gloire soit au Saint-Esprit!
Gloire soit à Dieu le Père!
Gloire soit à Jésus-Christ,
Notre époux et notre frère!
Son immense charité
Dure à perpétuité."

Another metrical rendering is given, together with that of Empeytaz, but anonymously, in Recueil de Psalmes et Cantiques à l'usage des Églises Reformées, Paris and Strasbourg, 1859, in 14 sts., beginning:—

"Grand Dieu, nous te louons, nous t'adorons, Seigneur, Et nous voulons chanter un hymne en ton honneur."

3. Anglo-Saxon and English. (1.) Thomson prints two Anglo-Saxon versions, one from B. M. ms. Arundel, No. 60, of the 11th century, the other from the Brit. Mus. ms. Vesp. A. 1, ascribed in the catalogue to the 8th century. There is also a tenth century MS. Psalter (Lambeth, No. 427), which contains it. They vary considerably from one another, but in such a way as to suggest a common origin.

The version of the Lambeth ms., Fol. 195, is here given as it appears never to have been printed. Some words are un glossed, and the gloss is supplied from the context or the margin or from the Arundel ms. [in square brackets].

(2.) The latter part of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th century saw a considerable spread of English prayers and devotions, as well as of versions of the Scripture. Mr. Maskell has printed three of these in his Monumenta Ritualia Eccl. Anglic. 1846, viz. in vol. ii. pp. 12-14, from a ms. of about 1410 in his own possession, ib. pp. 229, 230, from the Bodleian Douce MS. 275, and pp. 231, 232, from the Douce MS. 246, both probably a few years later than 1410. The British Museum also contains two in Add. MSS. 10046 and 31044, and others are mentioned by Maskell in his preface, pp. xxxiii. xxxiv. The relation of these versions to the Wycliffite movement is too difficult a question to be discussed here, as it belongs to the general history of the Primer in English. A few readings from these three MSS. however will be of interest.

MS. 1 reads in verse 1, 2. "We herien thee God, we knowlechnyn thee lord. Thee, everlastynge fadir: al the erthe worchipith." 16. "Thou wert not skoyms of the maidens wombe to deluyer mankynde" [= the Milan version om. suscepisti]. 21. "Make hem to be rewardid with thi seyntes: in blisse with euerlastynge glorie" [perhaps a conflation of two versions].

Other remarkable phrases in it are: 5. "Lord god of vertues"; 13. "Oure counfortour" [and so MS. 2, MS. 3]; 14. "Thou, crist, kyng of glorie" [similarly MS. 2 and MS. 3]; 17. "For thou ouercamest the sharpnesse of death"; 18. "On goddis rizt syde" [so MS. 2 and MS. 3]; 19. "Thou art bleueid to be juge to come"; 29. "be I not schent withouten ende" [similarly MS. 2, MS. 3].

MS. 2 and MS. 3 agree much together and with the British Museum MSS. MS. 2 begins, "Thee, God, we preisen: thee, Lord, we knowlechnyn" [similar MS. 3]. Verse 16 "Thou wert not skoyms to take the maidenes wombe: to deliuerer mankynde" [nearly= MS. 3 and B. M. MSS.]; 21. "Make hem to be rewarded with the seyntes in endeles blisse" [so MS. 3 and B. M. MSS.]; 25. "And we preisen thi name into the world: and into the world of world" [so MS. 3. The B. M. MSS. read, "And we preisen thi name into the world of world."]

The two Brit. Mus. Add. MSS. 10046 and 31044 agree closely with one another as well as with MS. 2 and MS. 3. The most remarkable phrases in those not already noticed are; verse 2, "every erthe worshipith"; 13, "and the holy goost counfortour"; 14, "Thou art kyng of glorie" [om "Christ," but 31044 reads "Thou Christ kyng of glorie," om "art"].

(3.) Another interesting text is that of The Myzoure of oure Ladye, a devotional treatise in English written for the use of the nuns of Sion (a house founded in the reign of Henry v.). It is in the form of a commentary on the services to be said by the nuns, and is apparently quite independent of the preceding versions. The modern editor, Rev. J. H. Blunt (Early English Text Society, extra series, No. xix., 1873, p. ix.) inclines to the belief that the author was Dr. Thos. Gascoign, Warden of Merton, &c., in the middle of the 15th century. There is a certain beauty and freedom about the version of the Te Deum, e.g. "We praise thee, God, we knowlege the Lord. And all the earth worshippeth thee: endless Father. All angels sing to thee: heavens and all powers sing to thee. Cherubim and Seraphim sing to thee with one voice that never ceaseth." . . . 9. "The fair host of Martyrs that are washed white and fair in their own blood praise thee." . . . 16. "When thou shouldest take upon the mankind for the deliverance of man, thou horydest not the Virgin's womb." . . . 21. "Make thy servants to be rewarded in endless bliss with thy saints" . . . 23, 24. "Govern them here by grace and enhance them into bliss without end. And we praise thy Name from time to time, unto the end of the world, and after without end."

(4.) The next text that has come to our notice is from the Prymer in Englyshe and in Latin sette out alonge; after the use of Sarum, Robert Valentin, 1504, where it is headed "The Songe of Austyn and Ambrose." This curious version is the first to read "We prayse the (oh God)," &c., as well as "Sabaothe" in v. 5, and "O Lord in the have I trusted." But its chief characteristic is paraphrase, e.g. verses 10, 11 run, "The holy congregacyon of faythfull throughe all the world magnify the. They knowlege the to be the father an infinite maiesty. They knowlege thy honorable and very onely soune. And the Holye Ghoste also to be a comforter." Verse 16, "Thou (when thou shouldest take upon the our nature to delyver man) dydest nat abhorre a virginys wombe." Verse 21 has the modern mistake, for the first time, "Make them to be numbered with thy saints in joy everlasting." Then follows the Prymer of 1535 (Three Prymers of Henry VIII., Oxford, 1834, p. 82) which agrees generally with the preceding, but has some curious peculiarities of its own; e.g. verses 5, 6, "Holy art thou. Holy art thou. Holy art thou. Thou art the Lord God of hosts. Heaven and earth are fulfilled with the glory of thy majesty;" v. 9, "The fair fellowship of martyrs praise thee." In v. 16 it agrees generally with the preceding, but reads "the virgin's," and proceeds, "Thou hast opened the kingdom of heaven to the believers, death's dart overcome . . . Thou art believed to come our judge." This version is probably presupposed in the two other Prymers (of 1539 and 1545), printed by Dr. Burton in the same volume, pp. 337 and 465, where the first words only are given—in the first case with the title, The Song of Augustin and Ambrose. Te Deum laudamus—in the second, Te Deum laudamus. The praise of God, the Father the Son and the Holy Ghost.

(5.) The version of the last Prymer of Henry VIII. 1546 (reprinted in facsimile at the end of the 17th or beginning of the 18th century), and of the first Prayer Book of Edward VI. (1549) is practically the same as that in our Prayer-books. We have seen that the later versions gradually approach to the present, which is not a new one but merely a revision, based apparently upon a collation or reminiscence of several existing forms, which may plausibly be ascribed to Cranmer. It cannot be said to be successful in point of accuracy, though it is beautiful in its smoothness and rhythm. It appears to be the first to introduce the inaccurate renderings "when thou tookest upon thee to deliver man" and "thou didst open the kingdom of heaven to all believers," the last evidently merely for the sake of euphony; and it stereotypes the misrenderings "We praise thee, O God," and "make them to be numbered with thy saints in glory everlasting," the later, however, being a misreading, as we have seen, of the somewhat earlier date. (See Notes on the Metrical Versions at the close of this article.)

5. Thomson prints a modern Sveedish version beginning "O Gud! wi lofwe dig: O Herre! wi tacke dig." Verse 16 runs "Till människones forlossning togst du i Jungfru lifwe mandom." and v. 21 "Och gifwer dem den ewiga härligheten med din Helgom." Quotations from the Icelandic version are given below.

6. Russian. The Te Deum, though unknown in the Greek-speaking churches (which use the "Great Doxology," or Gloria in Excelsis in some form or other) is very popular in Russia. It is not sung at Mattins, but at what are called "molebni," which are short thanksgiving services connected with anniversaries, birthdays, &c. The "Great Doxology" is in these cases allowed as an alternative. It is always called the "Song of St. Ambrose," and appears to be translated almost word for word from the Latin, very much in the manner of an interlinear gloss. As the mss. in which it occurs (according to the testimony of Prof. Pokrofski, of the Academy of S. Alexander Nevski at St. Petersburg) appear not to be older than the 17th century, it is not unlikely that it is of comparatively modern introduction. Mr. W. J. Birkebeck, to whom this information is due, suggests that it was introduced by Peter Mogila, who was at first a uniat, and was educated at Rome and Paris, and who, as Metropolitan of Kieff (circa 1630) introduced many useful reforms and practices from the West, while he guarded against certain Roman errors in doctrine. The Te Deum may be found on p. 220 of the Molitvostoff, or popular book of prayer for the City of St. Petersburg, Press of the holy Synod, 1886, and is headed, "A song of praise of St. Ambrose, Bishop of Milan." In verse 1 the accusative Bôga ("God") answers to Deum. In the Tersanctus the fuller Latin form is used instead of that of the Liturgies and the copula (suti) = sunt would have been omitted in Slavonic except in a literal tr. In verse 16 the words mean "Thou for deliverance about to take upon Thee man didst not, &c." In verse 21 the words seem to represent "Dignare (eos) cum sanctis tuis in aeterna gloria tua regnare," which is the only serious departure from the original. The last verse runs "O Lord in thee have we trusted let us never be ashamed (postydimisja)."

vii. Liturgical Use. 1. The ancient Liturgical use has been touched upon in passing in noticing the earliest references to the hymn, in the monastic rules of Cæsarius, Aurelian and Benedict. Palmer remarks that the usage prescribed by the first and second, who both appoint the hymn to be sung in the morning, is a kind of argument for their better acquaintance with the author's design than the rule of Benedict who ordered it to be sung at the nocturnal office on Sundays, i.e. on Saturday night (Orig. Lit. p. 228). From Sundays its use seems gradually to have extended to Saints' Days, and from the regular to the secular clergy.

Daniel, ii. p. 291, quotes Amalaris to shew that in Rome, in 831, it was not yet sung even on Sundays. "In terrogavi si canerent per Dominicas noctes Te Deum : Re-sponsus est: Tantum in Nataliis pontificum Te Deum canimus." On the other hand, the old Benedictine use made no exception to the singing of the hymn on all festivals throughout the year. Benedictines were accused in the 13th century of reciting the hymn even in Advent or Lent, when the rest of the Church usually dropped it (Daniel, p. 291). Technically speaking, its ordinary use is as a responsory to the ninth (or third) lesson at the end of Matins and just before Lauds, but in the Benedictine use the responsory is said as well. "In the ancient English offices," says Palmer (Or. Lit. p. 31), "the matins (nocturns) terminated with the Te Deum, and were immediately followed by lauds (ancient matins)." As a general rule, it was said on all Sundays and Festivals; but in the Sarum Breviary it is noted that it is not to be said in Advent or Lent (from Septuagesima to Easter), or on vigils, or generally in the Ember seasons. The Advent rubric is as follows: "Non dicatur Te Deum per totum Adventum, de quocumque fit servitium; sed nonum Responsorium reiniciatur; et hoc fiat in Dominicis et in festis ix. lectionum tantum. Non dicatur etiam per totum annum Te Deum laudamus in vigiliis, nec in Quatuor temporibus nisi in Vigilia Epiphaniæ quando in Dominica contigerit et præterquam in quatuor temporibus ebdomade Penthecostes" (Procter and Wordsworth's Sarum Bræc. fasc. L., p. 30). The Septuagesima rubric runs, "Ab hac die usque ad Pascha non dicatur Te Deum, sive de Temporalibus, sive de Festis Sanctorum fit servitium: sed semper nonum Responsorium reiniciatur: et hoc in Festis ix. Lectionum tantum. Non enim repetatur Responsorium in Commemoratione Beate Mariæ, nec de Festo loci." In agreement with this, there are special notes for St. Andrew's Day (Nov. 30), and the Conception of B. V. M. (Dec. 8) that it is not to be said. For the Purification (Feb. 2), the note is "Si Dominica Septuagesima hac die contigerit, tunc servitium fiat de Festo; sed sine Alleluja et Te Deum."

The order as to saying the Te Deum in the Roman Breviary (Rubricæ generales, xxxi.) is very similar to the Sarum order:—

Hymnus, Te Deum, dicitur in omnibus festis per annum, tam trium quam novem Lectionum, & per eorum Octavas, excepto festo sanctorum Innocentium, nisi venerit in Dominica; dicitur tamen in eius die Octava. Dicitur etiam in omnibus Dominicis, a Pascha Resurrectionis inclusive, usque ad Adventum inclusive, et a Nativitate Domini inclusive, usque ad Septuagesimam inclusive: in omnibus feriis temporis Paschalis, scilicet a Dominica in Albis usque ad Ascensionem, excepta feria ii. Rogationum, in qua non dicitur.

2. Non dicitur autem in Dominicis Adventus, & a Septuagesima usque ad Dominicam Palmarum inclusive, neque in feriis extra tempus Paschale.

3. Cum dicitur, omittitur semper nonum, vel tertium Responsorium; & statim dicitur post ultimam Lectionem.

4. Cum non dicitur, eius loco ponitur nonum vel tertium Responsorium quo dicto statim inchoantur Laudes. Similiter quando dicitur Te Deum, eo Hymno dicto statim inchoantur Laudes, præterquam in nocte Nativitatis Domini: quia tunc dicitur Oratio, postea celebratur Missa, ut suo loco notatur.

As a general rule we may say Te Deum is sung at Matins only whenever the Gloria in excelsis is sung at Mass.

2. As to the method of recitation we have the following statements and directions:—

(1) Daniel says (p. 294, 5) "Si recitatur officium divinum in choro inchoatur canticum a Celebrante vel a præside chori: prosequuntur reliqui stando in plurimis ecclesiis alternatim canentes. Ad primum versiculum denudantur capita, ad verba Sanctus etc. et: Non horruisti virginis uterum profunde inclinatur. Quum perventum sit ad ultimam anticæ partem: Te ergo quesumus etc. genuflectunt omnes usque ad finem."

(2) The rubric of the first Prayer-book of Edward VI. (1549) is as follows, at morning prayer: "After the first Lesson shall follow Te Deum laudamus, in English, daily throughout the year, except in Lent, all the which time, in the place of Te Deum shall be used Benedicite omnia Opera Domini Domino in English as followeth." Later prayer-books order the Te Deum daily, but permit the Benedicite as an alternative.

(3) The following is from Wetzel and Welte s. v.: "The Te Deum is sung exceptionally to thank God for any great blessing. In such a case the Te Deum constitutes by itself a religious solemnity, or it is attached to a solemn celebration of the mass, and is sung at the end of the office. The Roman Pontifical enumerates several occasions on which the Te Deum ought to be sung, for example, at the consecration of a bishop, the coronation of a king, the consecration of a virgin. The Roman Cærimoniale adds the election of a Pope, the canonization of a saint, the publication of a treaty of peace, the conclusion of a treaty of alliance in favour of the Church. In Bavaria it is sung on the festival of the king and of the queen. In France it is used also on the festival of a sovereign, after confirmation, first Communion," &c. "The officiant vested in a cope and wearing a stole stands before the altar on which not less than four wax lights burn, surrounded by his assistants. When they sing the verse Te ergo quesumus all kneel, except when the holy sacrament is exposed. The colour is usually white, except when it follows a mass, when it is that of the day."

(4) "After the conclusion of an alliance in favour of the Church the Roman Cærimoniale gives the following: "a Pater Noster then *V. Salvos fac servos tuos domine & Deus meus servans in te V. Dissipa gentes quæ bella volunt. & Ut liberentur dilecti tui et confiteantur nomini tuo. V. Concede domine populo tuo ut sit ei cor unum et anima una. & In observantia mandatorum tuorum. V. Mitte nobis domine auxilium de Sancto. & Et de Sion tuere nos. The office ends with the prayers Ecclesie tue (oratio contra persecutores Ecclesie) and the post-communion Deus auctor pacis of the votive mass pro pace."*

(5) In the old English services the Te Deum was similarly used. It is a well-known feature in the Coronation Service of our kings and queens, though it does not appear in the oldest forms that have come down to us, the Missæ pro regibus in the Pontifical of Abp. Egbert (8th cent.) and the similar form in the Leafric Missal (Maskell iii. pp. 74–81, Warren Leafric Missal, 230–232). In the service for the consecration of King Ethelred A. D. 978 (B. M. Cotton MS. Claud. A. iii.), it forms the first act after the procession enters the Church "Pervenientes rex ad ecclesiam prosternat se coram altare et hymnizetur. Te Deum laudamus: te dominum confitemur." Then follows the triple oath to keep the Church in peace; to suppress robbery and iniquity; to command equity and mercy in all judgments. Some time or other after the Norman Conquest the place of the Te Deum was changed from the beginning to the latter part of the service. It is mentioned in this place in the account of the coronation of King Richard II. 22 Jan. 1377, i.e. after the coronation itself, followed by the investiture with globe and sceptre, the benediction and the kiss, and before the mass (Maskell, iii. p. xxxiii.). This is practically where it is found at present, though the arrangement of the parts has been somewhat altered (cf. T. Silver, The Coronation Service, &c. Oxford, 1831, p. 74; J. F. Russell, The Coronation Service, &c. pp. 19, 20). It is referred to by Shakspeare at the coronation of Anne Boleyn (Hen. VIII. act iv. sc. 1). It is possible that the use at the coronation of Ethelred may have been in imitation of a continental custom, since the Te Deum is said to have been sung at the coronation of Louis I. (the Pious) by Pope Stephen IV. in 816 at Rheims, on his entry into the Church, and again at that of Charles the Bald in 869 at Metz. Louis also concluded the assembly of bishops at Tribur in 822 with a Te Deum. It is noticeable that Amalarius, who is quoted above, was sent by the same Emperor on a mission to Rome in 831.

In England it was regularly sung immediately after the election of a bishop. In the office for the enthronization of a bishop it accompanies the central act (Maskell, iii. p. 288). It is also appointed at the reception of an archbishop's pall (ib. p. 294) and before he is actually vested in it (ib. p. 299).

(6) Other early instances of such occasional use are the translation of S. Germanus (740), the restoration of Pope Leo III. to his See by Charles the Great, and the restoration of Ebbo, Abp. of Rheims (Daniel, p. 291).

(7) The use of the hymn as a song of victory is referred to by Shakspeare, Hen. v. act iv. sc. 8 (taken from Holinshed):—

"Do we all holy rites; Let there be sung Non nobis, et Te Deum."

Handel's Dettingen Te Deum will also occur to every one.

Lastly the more than hazardous act of S. Bonaventura in travestying the Te Deum into a canticum Marianum may just be mentioned ("Te matrem Dei laudamus, te omnis terra veneratur, æterni patris sponsam"). It is, however, satisfactory to be informed that this had never been admitted into any public devotion, to the best of Daniel's knowledge (p. 293). [JOHN SARUM] viii. Musical Settings.—One musical setting only of the Te Deum is to be found in the choro-liturgical books of the Western Church. Although slight differences appear in various dioceses, these are never more than mere local embellishments or variations, such as are constantly to be met with in local versions of the melody of the Preface, Pater Noster, and other invariable portions of the Latin services. Indeed, as Dom Pothier has pointed out in his Melodies Grégoriennes (p. 238), there is a close connection between these melodies and that of the Te Deum, as may be seen by comparing

Per om-ni-a sæ-cu-la sæ-cu-lo-rum and with the open-

Sur - sum cor - da

ing phrase, :

Te De - um lau - da - mus :

or, to te Do-mi-num con-fi-te-mur;

take a portion of another melody belonging to the same class :

Ex-ül-tet jam an-gé-li-ca tur-ba cæ-ló-rum with the first half of the verse,

Te a-tér-num Pa-trem :

 This last

om-nis ter-ra ve-ne-rá-tur.

quotation from Te Deum has been purposely taken from another version of the melody to show the nature of the variations between different dioceses. The former is undoubtedly the older of the two, but the latter (Sarum) is a natural development of the original melody, with the addition of an intonation after the pause in the middle of the verse, analogous to that which appears above on the words Per omnia or Te Deum. This melody is used, with only such variations as the changes in the number of syllables or in the position of the accents necessitate, till the end of the 13th verse: and its obvious connection with the Preface music would seem to indicate its very early appearance in the Western offices: for apart from the early date which the absence of a fixed dominant suggests, the melody appears in portions of the Ambrosian and Mozarabic uses, and is therefore clearly Pre-Gregorian. At verse 14 Tu rex gloriæ, Christe a fresh melody is introduced, which closely resembles the ordinary Psalm tone of the fourth Gregorian mode in a somewhat ornate form, of which the following verse containing a full complement of syllables is a specimen :

Tu ad li-ber-an-dum suscep-tu-rus ho-mi-nem :

non hor-ru-is-ti vir-gi-nis u-te-rum.

This melody, with its clearly defined dominant, is certainly Gregorian rather than Ambrosian in character, and would seem to belong to a distinctly later period than the first. It is continued down to the end of verse 20; but for verse 21 we have the following setting :

Æ-ter-na fac . . . cum sanc-tis tu-is: in glo-ri-a nu-me-ra-ri, the music of which is in the form of an antiphon of the fourth mode, and stands in the same relation to the previous seven verses as an ordinary antiphon might to its Psalm, bringing it to a complete close with a regular cadence ending upon the final of the mode. After this, although no fresh melody is introduced, the music fully bears out the conclusion to which a comparison of the various texts leads. First come two verses (22 and 23) set to the antiphon melody, and then five verses (24-28) to the Psalm tone, when the whole is brought to a fit close once more by the antiphon form :

In te do-mi-ne spe-ra-vi :

non con-fun-dar in æ-ter-num.

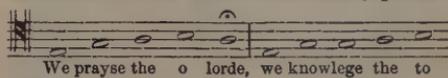

The placing together of the three antiphon forms (verses 21-23) is musically as well as liturgically extremely unnatural, and points to some different earlier arrangement in which these verses were either used separately, or else divided by some verses of the Psalm melody, as indeed No. 2 of the Latin versions suggests, where verses 24 and 25 come between 21 and 22. At the end of the last verse there appears in almost all copies, both ancient and modern, a long string of notes to be sung upon the last syllable, known as the pneuma :

num.

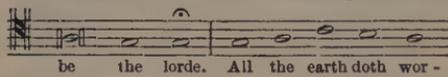

This is not part of the original melody, but is one of a set of eight similar passages composed by Guido of Arezzo, one for each mode, and which were much used during the middle ages at the end of the principal antiphons, in order to give greater dignity to the services on festivals, much in the same way as a short voluntary is sometimes played at the present day on the organ between (e.g.) the Te Deum and the second Lesson. Their use has now almost entirely ceased, except in the case of the Te Deum, which being used on Festivals alone, and therefore always with the pneuma, was never written without it, and so has retained it in nearly every diocese of the Roman Church.

The above examples have been taken (with one exception) from the Sarum version, not only because it represents an extremely pure form of the melody, but also for the sake of comparing it with its adaptation by Merbecke to the English text. Merbecke's setting of the First English Prayer Book was drawn up under the direction of Cranmer, and published in 1550. In it the Archbishop's aim (as stated in his well-known letter to Henry VIII. quoted by Strype), to avoid the use of more than one note to each syllable in the adaptation of the ancient melodies to English words, is fully carried out; and in some instances it will be seen from the following examples, that he was thus unconsciously going back to earlier forms. The following passages give Merbecke's version of the verses already quoted:

We praise the o lorde, we knowlege the to be the lorde. All the earth doth wor-

- shipp the, the fa-ther e-uer-last-ing.

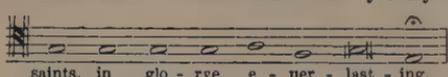

When thou tokest up-on the to de-li-uer man, thou didest not ab-horre the uir-gin's wombe.

Make them to be nom-bred wyth thy saints, in glo-rye e-uer-last-ing.

O lord in the have I trust-ed, lett me ne-uer be con-found-ed.

It seems that the ancient melody was known to the musicians of some of the Lutheran Churches down to at least the middle of the 18th century. We come across fragments of it amongst Buxtehude's Vorspiele, and also in those of Bach. In Iceland a remarkable metrical version was retained down to the beginning of this century; it disappeared when (A.D. 1801) the independent Icelandic service books were modified in order to assimilate them to the more modern Danish forms. The following extracts from the 19th edition of the Icelandic Graduale, printed at Holar in A.D. 1779, will show how the ancient melody was still made use of:

FYRSTE KOOR.

This version was sung by the sides of the choir alternately, each side taking half a verse. In the pneuma, here set to the word Amen, both choirs united. [W. J. B.]

The metrical trs. of the Te Deum into English are in almost every instance the prose tr. in the Book of Common Prayer turned into metre. That tr. beginning "We praise Thee, O God" was given in the Book of Common Prayer in 1549. (See § vi. 3. (4)). The translator is unknown. The metrical renderings therefrom in English include:—

1. O God, we praise Thee, and we own. Dr. J. Paterick. This was given in his Ps. of David in Metre, &c. 1679, in 12 st. of 4 l. and began:—

"O God, we praise Thee, and we own, Thee to be Lord and King alone."

This version of the Te Deum has had a somewhat strange and eventful history, as the following facts will show:—

(1.) In Tate & Brady's Supplement to the New Version, circa 1700 (2nd ed. 1702), it was given in a rewritten form as:—

"O God, we praise Thee, and confess That Thou the only Lord," and this remained in C. U. in the Church of England until the New Version was superseded by the modern hymn books. In an abbreviated form it is still in use amongst Nonconformists in G. Britain and America, as in the New Cong. 1859, the Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and others.

(2.) In the English Moravian H. Bk. pub. in London in 1754, No. 209, Dr. Paterick's tr. was given in an expanded form, the additions being trs. of portions of Luther's German rendering "Herr Gott, dich loben wir!" as below. It begins:—

"O God, we praise Thee, and we own Thee, the Almighty Lord alone."

This was in 5 st. of 12 l. and chorus of 4 l. In the 1789 and later eds. (1849, No. 663) it begins "Lord God, Thy praise we sing, To Thee." From this the following hymns have been manipulated:—

(a.) In the American Reformed Dutch Church H. Bk. 1789, is a hymn beginning:—

"O Christ, Thou glorious King! we own Thee to be God's eternal Son," which is taken from the Moravian H. Bk. 1754, with several lines rewritten. This is No. 193 in the American Reformed Dutch Hys. of the Church, N. Y. 1869.

(b.) In the American Ref. Dutch Ch. H. Bk. of 1792, there is another hymn from the same source which begins:—

“Almighty God, we praise and own Thee our Creator King alone.”

Several of the lines are altered, the whole being from the first part of the Te Deum. This is No. 47 of the American Ref. Dutch Hys. of the Church, N. Y. 1869.

(c.) In the 1815 Appendix to T. Cotterill's Sel. of Ps. & Hys. pub. in Staffordshire, No. 214 begins:—

“Thee we adore, eternal Lord!
We praise Thy name with one accord.”

This has no connection with the version in the Moravian H. Bk. of 1754. It embraces st. i.-ix. of the Prayer Book version of the Te Deum, and was probably by Cotterill. When Cotterill issued the 8th ed. of his Sel. in 1819 he was Incumbent of St. Paul's, Sheffield. In the preparation of this edition he was assisted by the Moravian poet, James Montgomery, at whose press it was printed. In this edition “Thee we adore, eternal Lord” is given as No. 25. This was followed by two hymns based on the remaining stanzas of the Te Deum as follows:—

No. 26. “Thee, King of glory, Christ we own
The Father's everlasting Son.”

No. 27. “The Church on earth confesseth Thee,
The Father, throned in majesty.”

These two hymns are adapted from the tr. in the Moravian H. Bk. 1754, and were probably moulded into their present form by Montgomery.

(d.) In the American Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y. 1874, No. 5, beginning “Thee we adore, eternal Lord,” is a cento from the above three hymns in Cotterill's Sel. st. i.-iii. being from No. 25; st. iv. from No. 26; and st. v. from No. 27.

(e.) In the Leeds H. Bk. 1853, No. 207, and some other collections, a cento in 5 st. of 4 l. is taken direct from the Moravian H. Bk. 1754, and, with slight alterations, is given as:— “Both heaven and earth do worship Thee.” It forms a most successful hymn.

(f.) In James Montgomery's Original Hys. 1853, No. 13, there is a rendering of the Te Deum in 50 lines. Of these 11 are word for word from the Moravian H. Bk. 1754; 9 are partly therefrom; and the rest are only the Moravian tr. rewritten. From this Moravian-Montgomery text (which begins as in the Moravian H. Bk.) the cento in C. U. in America:—
“Hail King of Glory! Christ the Lord,” is taken.

2. We sing to Thee, Thou Son of God. J. Cennick. Pub. in his Sacred Hys. for the Use of Religious Societies, &c. Pt. i. 1743, No. 2. This has been abbreviated and altered by various hands, beginning with Whitefield's Coll. 1753; then Toplady, in his Ps. & Hys. 1776; J. Conder, in the Congregational H. Bk. 1836; and others. The text now commonly in use is that of the Cong. H. Bk. 1836. It is in the Leeds H. Bk. 1853, &c.

3. Infinite God, to Thee we raise. C. Wesley. Appeared in Hys. for those that seek and those that have Redemption, 1747, No. xiii. in 14 st. of 6 l. In the 1830 Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk. it was broken up into three hymns, and given as Nos. 564-5-6, as follows:—1. “Infinite God, to Thee we raise” (sts. i.-v.). 2. “Messiah, joy of every heart” (sts. vi.-xi.). 3. “Saviour, we now rejoice in hope” (sts. xii.-xiv.). The first line of No. 3 is altered from the original to adapt it as the opening of a separate hymn. There are also other alterations in this and No. 2 as above. (Orig. text in P. Works, 1869-72, vol. iv. pp. 224-27.) The hymn in some American collections “To Thee to laud in songs of praise,” is a cento from this version of the Te Deum.

4. How can we adore, Or worthily praise? W. Hammond. Pub. in his Ps. & Hys. &c. 1745, p. 193, in 17 st. of 8 l. An abbreviated form of this rendering of the Te Deum is in Hatfield's Church H. Bk. N. Y. 1872.

5. We praise, we worship Thee, O God. This anonymous version of the first part of the Te Deum is traced to P. Gell's Ps. & Hys. 1815. It is also in W. Urwick's Coll. of Hymns, Dublin, 1829; the Leeds H. Bk. 1853, the New Cong. 1859, the Prim. Meth. Hymnal, 1887, and others. In some books it is given in 5 sts. and in others in 6 sts. The doxology is later than Gell's Coll.

6. God eternal, Lord of all. J. E. Millard. Written for and first pub. in the Rev. T. F. Smith's Devout Chorister, 1848, p. 106, in 8 st. of 4 l. and entitled “Hymn for Choristers.” It was subsequently republished in Hys. and Intros., Lond. Masters, 1852; Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise (original text), 1862, and others. An abbreviated and altered form of the text was given in H. A. & M. 1861, as:—“God eternal, Mighty King,” and this has been repeated in several collections in G. Britain and America.

7. Holy God, we praise Thy Name, Lord of all, &c. C. A. Walworth. This is dated 1853 in the American Evangelical Hymnal (Hall and Lasar), Barnes & Co., N. Y. 1880.

8. Thou art the everlasting Son. This anonymous rendering of the latter part of the Te Deum appeared in the American Sabbath H. Bk. 1858, No. 335, in 3 st. of 6 l. and has been repeated in a few American collections.

9. Thee God we praise, Thee Lord confess. W. Robertson. This rendering of the first part of the Te Deum was given in the Hys. for Public Worship, 1861, and the Scottish Hymnal, 1870.

10. Thee, Thee, we praise, O God, and own. E. F. Hatfield. Written in 1871 for, and pub. in 1872 in his Church H. Bk. in 6 st. of 4 l.

Other translations are:—

1. We prayse thee God, we knowledge thee. Old Version. 1660.

2. We praise thee, O God, with one accord. W. Barton. 1639.

3. O God, we praise Thy Holy Name. W. Barton. 1639.

4. We praise thee, God, we acknowledge thee. W. Barton. 1639.

5. We give thee praise, O God, with one accord. W. Barton. 1639.

6. Great God, we praise thee, thee our Lord. Miles Smyth. 1668.

7. Thee Sovereign God! our grateful accents praise. J. Dryden. 1701. Repeated in The Christian's Mag. 1760.

8. Thee Sov'reign God! our anthems praise. B. Woodd. Circa 1800.

9. We praise Thee God, before Thee fall. By “M. A. C.” in Almond's Hys. for Occasional Use in the Parish Church of St. Peter in Nottingham. 1819.

10. Before Thee, Lord of all, we bow. W. W. Hull. 1852.

11. Thee God! we praise, and Thee our Lord confess. D. French. 1839.

12. We praise Thee as our God. W. W. Hull. 1852.

The above four renderings of the Te Deum by W. Barton were written at the request of Richard Baxter (see p. 116, ii.). J. R. Beste has a kind of blank verse rendering in his Church Hys. 1849, as:—"Thee we praise, O God; we own Thee our Lord Almighty." W. H. Jewitt (p. 603, ii.) pub. in 1874, twenty-three hymns on the various clauses of the Te Deum of which four have come into C. U. [J. J.]

Many German versions of the Te Deum have been made at various periods. Of these one is noted on p. 515, i., "Herr grosser Gott." Another is:—

Herr Gott, dich loben wir! Herr Gott, wir danken dir. This is a free version, by Martin Luther, in 52 lines arranged for antiphonal singing. It apparently was first pub. in Klug's G. B. Wittenberg, 1529, and from this passed into the Rostock G. B. (Low German) of 1531. Wackernagel, iii. p. 19, prints it from the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1531. It is also in Schireks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 1, and in the Uw. L. S. 1851, No. 189. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Thee Lord, our God, we praise. This is No. 356 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl. 1880, marked as a cento.

Other trs. ■:—

(1) "Oh, Lord our God! Thy name we praise." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 83. (2) "Lord God, to Thee we raise." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 83. In his ed. 1847, p. 94, altered to "Lord God of hosts, to Thee we raise." (3) "We praise Thee, God—Thy name we praise." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 166. (4) "Lord God, Thy praise we sing, Lord God." By R. Massie, 1854, p. 86, repeated by Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 55. (5) "Lord God, Thee praise do we." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 841, repeated, altered, in his Exotics, 1876, p. 112. [J. M.]

Te Deum Patrem colimus. [Grace after Meat.] The earliest text known is in a folio volume of 17th cent. ms. music in the Library of Christ Church, Oxford (H. i. 21). It is given there with the following note (kindly communicated by the Rev. T. Vere Bayne, the librarian):—

"This hymn is song every day, in Magdalen College Hall, Oxon, Dinner and Supper; throught the yeare for the after Grace, by the Chaplains, Clerks, and Choristers there. Composed by Benjamin Rogers, Doctor of Musique of the University of Oxon, 1685."

The ms. is in the autograph of Dr. Rogers, but whether he was the author of words as well as music does not clearly appear. The hymn is still sung every year on the first of May by the choristers from the top of Magdalen College Tower, and is annually sung as the after grace in Magdalen College Hall on Gaudy Day, viz. St. Mary Magdalen's Day. The text is:—

"Te Deum Patrem colimus,
Te laudibus prosequimur:
Qui corpus cibo reficis,
Coelesti mentem gratiâ.

"Te adoramus, o Jesu,
Te fili unigenite,
Te qui non dignatus es
Subire claustra virginis.

"Actus in cruceam, factus es
Irate Deo Victimâ:
Per te, Salvator unice,
Vitæ spes nobis rediit.

"Tibi, Æterne Spiritus,
Cujus afflatu peperit
Infantum Deum Mariâ,
Æternum benedicimus.

"Triune Deus hominum
Salutis auctor optime,
Immensum hoc mysterium
Ovante linguâ canimus."

Dr. Rogers's music is given in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868, No. 181 (a tr. of the Latin as above), and is dated in the Index, 1660. Tr. as:—

1. Father of all! To Thee we raise. By W. Palmer, in his Short Poems & Hys., the latter mostly Translations, 1845, p. 21, and headed "Hymn of Thanksgiving after Dinner. Sung in Latin in the Refectory of St. Mary Magdalen College, in the University of Oxford." In 1850 it was included in Dr. Oldknow's Hys. for the Service of the Church, and later in several other collections, as the Sarum (where it is attributed to J. Chandler in error), and others. In the Hymnary, 1872, it is altered to "To Thee, O Father, here we raise."

Other trs. ■:—

1. Thee, mighty Father, we adore. Bp. G. Horne, in his Memoirs, by William Jones, 1795, p. 233.

2. Almighty Father, just and good. J. Chandler, 1837 and 1841. [J. M.]

Te laeta mundi Conditor. C. Coffin. [Septuagesima.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736, and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, p. 44, the same year. It is also in later French Brevs. It is the hymn at Vespers on the Saturdays before Septuagesima, Sexagesima, and Quadragesima. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 56; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. Thou great Creator, art possessed. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 62, and again in his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 33. Repeated without the doxology in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868, &c.

2. Thou, Creator, art possessed. By R. Campbell, in his St. Andrews Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 60, and the Hymnal for St. John the Evangelist, Aberdeen, 1870.

3. Thee, Maker of the world, doth rest. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852–1855, Septuages. 9, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 32.

4. Maker of earth, to Thee alone. By J. M. Neale, in an article in the Christian Remembrancer. It was repeated in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, the People's H., 1867, and other collections.

5. Creator of the world, to Thee. This tr. was given in H. A. & M., 1861, and repeated in 1875. In the Index to the latter ed. it is stated to be by the "Compilers: based upon older translations from Latin." These "older translations" were specially the two by Chandler and Neale noted above. This text was repeated in Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, &c., sometimes with, and at other times without the doxology. In the Hymnary, 1872, the text, slightly changed, begins, "Creator of the earth to Thee."

Other trs. are:—

1. Thou, Lord, in endless rest. I. Williams. 1839.

2. Creator, Majesty divine. J. D. Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

Te lucis ante terminum. [Evening.] This has sometimes been ascribed to St. Ambrose; but it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors, by Biraghi, or even by Thomasius. Mone, i. p. 372, cites it as in a ms. of the 8th cent. at Darmstadt. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 10 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 23; Harl. 2961 f. 220 b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848 f. 66 b), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 231); in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, No. 387; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 4 b). It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and, with slight differences in the text, in the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries, generally as a hymn at Compline. The text is also in Daniel i. No. 43 (the older, and the Rom. Brev. texts), Wackernagel, i. No. 9, the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 3; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867 (Rom. Brev.) [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Now that the daylight dies away, By all Thy grace and love. By Card. Newman, from the Rom. Brev., in the Tracts for the Times, 1836, No. 75, p. 84, his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 105, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 252. In O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, and others.

2. Ere the waning light decay. By Bp. R. Mant, from the Rom. Brev., in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1837, p. 28; ed. 1871, p. 53. This tr. is in a large number of hymn-books, including the Parish H. Bk., 1863-1875; Thring's Coll., 1882; and others.

3. Thee before the close of day. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, 1848, p. 18, and the Hyl. for the Use of St. John the Evangelist, Aberdeen, 1870.

4. Now with the fast departing light. By E. Caswall, from the Rom. Brev., in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 37, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 22. This tr. is in several Roman Catholic collections for Missions and Schools.

5. Before the ending of the day. By R. Campbell, from the Rom. Brev., in his St. Andrews Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 27.

6. Before the ending of the day. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 9. In this tr. Dr. Neale took the opening lines from R. Campbell, as above, as the first stanza from each will show :—

Campbell , 1850.	" Before the ending of the day Creator of the world, we pray, Beneath Thy kind protection take And shield us for Thy mercy's sake."
Neale , 1852.	" Before the ending of the day Creator of the world, we pray That with Thy wonted favour, Thou Wouldst be our Guard and Keeper now."

The popular form of the hymn under these opening lines is that in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, st. i. of which reads :—

Compilers H. A. & M. 1861.	" Before the ending of the day, Creator of the world, we pray That Thou with wonted love wouldst keep Thy watch around us while we sleep."
--	---

This tr. which is by the Compilers of H. A.

& M., based upon Neale, has passed into several collections, but usually with slight alterations, as Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861; the Sarum Hyl., 1868; the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; the Hymnary, 1872, and others.

7. Father, at the close of day. By G. Rorison, from the Rom. Brev., in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 6.

8. Now that the daylight dies away. By W. J. Blew, from the Sarum Brev., in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 100.

9. To Thee before the close of day, Creator of the world, &c. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 356, and his Lauda Syon, 1857, and the People's H., 1867.

10. Ere darkling wanes the day. By Archbishop Benson, from the Rom. Brev. Written for and first pub. in the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860, and appointed for Tuesday evening in Summer.

11. Before the waning light decay. This cento was given in Kennedy, 1863, No. 1451, and is thus composed :—st. i., ii., Bp. Mant's tr. as above altered; st. iii., from C. Wesley's "Forth in Thy name, O Lord, I go," st. v. (p. 382, ii.); st. iv. probably by Dr. Kennedy; st. v., doxology.

12. As now departs the light of day. This is No. 15 in T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, 1887. In the Index it is said to be by "J. Mason Neale." It is really the H. A. & M. version from Campbell and Neale as above, with alterations by Mr. Darling.

Te matrem Dei laudamus, te omnis terra veneratur. St. Bonaventura (?). [B. V. M.] This travesty of the "Te Deum laudamus," referred to in the previous article thereon as the production of St. Bonaventura (which is open to question), is known to us in two forms. The first form is in Daniel, ii. p. 293; and the second in Mone, ii. p. 229, where it is given from two mss. of the 14th century, and begins, "Te matrem laudamus, te virginem confitemur." Mone's text is tr. by Mrs. Charles in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, &c., 1858, p. 210, as, "We praise thee, O Mother, we acknowledge thee to be the Virgin." [J. J.]

Te Redemptoris Dominique nostri. [B. V. M.] This is the hymn at Lauds on the festival of the B. V. M. under the title of "Help of Christians." This office has been added to the Roman Breviary since 1740, and is now said as a Greater Double on May 24. The hymn is in the Roman Breviary, Bologna, 1827, Pars Verna Supplement, p. 339, in 7 st., and is repeated in later eds. of the Breviary and in Daniel iv. p. 303. Tr. as:—

Mother of our Lord and Saviour. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 152, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 83. Repeated in a few Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools.

Another tr. is:—

Mother of our Redeemer and our Lord. J. Wallace. 1874. [J. M.]

Teach me, my God and King. G. Herbert. [Duty.] This hymn is found in modern hymn-books in two forms, the first as written by Herbert, and the second as altered by J. Wesley. Herbert's text was printed in his Temple, 1633, p. 178, under the title "The Elixir"; and J. Wesley's in his Coll. of Psalms & Hymns, 1738. The two texts are:—

By G. Herbert, 1633.
"Teach me, my God and King,
In all things Thee to see;
And what I do in anything,
To do it as for Thee.

"Not rudely as a beast,
To run into an action;
But still to make Thee preposset
And give it his perfection.

"A man that looks on glass,
On it may stay his eye,
Or, if he pleaseth, through it pass,
And then the heav'n espy.

"All may of Thee partake;
Nothing can be so mean
Which with his tincture
(for Thy sake), (a)
Will not grow bright and clean.

"A servant with this clause
Makes drudgery divine;
Who sweeps a room as for Thy laws
Makes that and th' action fine.

"This is the famous stone
That turneth all to gold;
For that which God doth touch and own
Cannot for less be told."

By J. Wesley, 1738.
"Teach me, my God and King,
In all things Thee to see;
And what I do in anything,
To do it as for Thee.

"To scorn the sense's sway,
While still to Thee I tend:
In all I do be Thou the Way;
In all be Thou the End.

"A man that looks on glass,
On that may fix his eye;
Or unopposed may through it pass
And heaven behind descry.

"All may of Thee partake;
Nothing so mean can be, (b)
But draws, when acted for Thy sake,
Greatness and worth from Thee.

"If done to obey Thy laws,
Even servile labour shines;
Hallow'd all toil, if this the cause (c)
The meanest work divine.

"This is the long-sought stone (d)
That all converts to gold;
For that which God for His doth own
Cannot for less be told."

In modern hymn-books, as in Mercer and others, J. Wesley's text, with the omission of the last stanza, is usually followed. We must note that in Herbert's text the line (a) reads in the 7th ed. "Which with this tincture for Thy sake," and that in later editions of J. Wesley's Coll. of Ps. & Hys. the following changes are also made:—

(b) "Nothing so small can be."

(c) "Hallow'd is toil, if this the cause."

(d) "The elixir this the stone."

This rugged, but beautiful hymn is well adapted in its original form for private use.

Teacher of hearts, 'tis Thine alone.

C. Wesley. [Ordination.] Printed from the Wesley MSS. in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xii. p. 140, in 2 st. of 8 l. The opening stanza reads:—

"Teacher of hearts, 'tis Thine alone
Thine officers to ordain,
Point out Thy instruments, unknown
To undiscerning men;
Our apostolic guides apprise
Of Thine unseen decree,
And stir them up to recognize
The men design'd by Thee."

In the 1875 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 871, ll. 5, 6, read:—

"The pastors of Thy Church apprise
Of Thine unseen decree."

and this reading was repeated in the Primitive Methodist Hymnal, 1887. By this change Charles Wesley's well-known convictions respecting Holy Orders are completely suppressed. [J. J.]

Tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King. Frances R. Havergal. [Missions.] Written at Winterdyne, April 19, 1872, and first pub. in Evening Hours, 1872, and subsequently in her Under the Surface, 1874, Life Mosaic, 1879, &c. The HAV. MSS. tell us that it "was written at Winterdyne, when unable to go to church one snowy morning. She asked for her Prayer-Book (in bed), always liking to follow the services of the day. On Mr. Shaw's return from church, he heard her touch on the piano. 'Why, Frances, I thought you were upstairs!' 'Yes; but I had my Prayer Book, and in the Psalms for to-day I read, 'Tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King.' I thought, 'What a splendid first line!' and then words and music came rushing in to me. There it's all written out. With copperplate neatness she had rapidly written out the words, music and harmonies complete."

The words and music are issued by Parlange of Paisley as a leaflet. Both are also in the musical ed. of Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1880. The hymn is also repeated in other collections.

Telluris ingens Conditor. St. Gregory the Great. [Tuesday. Evening.] Mone, No. 274 and i. p. 372, gives this as probably by St. Gregory (it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors), and cites it as in a ms. of the 8th cent. at Trier, one of the 9th cent. also at Trier, &c. Daniel, i. No. 51, gives it as a hymn on the Work of the Third Day [of the Creation]; and at iv. p. 50, cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent., and ranks it as a hymn of the 7th or 8th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 16 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 26; Harl. 2961 f. 222 b), in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848 f. 73), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 234); in a ms. of the 9th cent. (No. 20), and three mss. of the 11th cent. (Nos. 387, 413, 414), at St. Gall; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 6 b). In the revised Roman Brev. 1632 it begins "Telluris alme Conditor." The original form is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen and other Breviaries, as a hymn at Vespers on Tuesday. Also in Wackernagel, i. No. 91, the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, and G. M. Dreves's Hymnarium Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. The Roman Breviary text is in recent eds. of that Breviary, in Daniel i. No. 51, and Card. Newman's Hymni Eccles., 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Both forms of this hymn have been tr. into English and are in C. U. The variations in the Latin text are very slight, and are:—

St. i. ll. "Telluris ingens conditor,
1, 2. Mundi solum qui creans."

St. iv. l. 4. "Et mortis actum nesciat."

Roman Brev. "Telluris alme conditor, Mundi solum qui separans."

St. iv. l. 4. "Et mortis ictum nesciat."

Hymn No. 249 in the People's H., 1867; "Wherefore, O earth, while years flow by," is a tr. by "S. M." [J. J.]

Temperance Hymnody. The Temperance movement has produced abundant stores of verse, consisting of hymns, odes, ballads, and compositions descriptive, imaginative, humorous, pathetic, satirical, and elegiac. America has furnished much of this material, but its principal sources have been Scotch and English. The department here treated, Hymnody, may be considered as to its rise and progress, with brief notices of some of its chief contributions and contributors. The Temperance Reform, which began in America early in 1826, took root in Ireland and Scotland in the autumn of 1829, and in England early in 1830. The first societies, founded on the basis of abstinence from distilled spirits only, do not appear to have made use of any special hymns bearing upon the Temperance question. In a few years they took the position of abstinence from all intoxicating liquors; and in 1836 a collection of Temperance Hymns and Songs was issued from the office of the Temperance Advocate at Preston, a town which had been for some years the chief centre of total abstinence propagandism. Before the middle of 1837, the Rev. F. Beardsall, of Manchester, brought out the first general Temperance Hymn Book, containing nearly 200 hymns, which the editor had culled from temperance periodicals, American and British. In a second edition the number of hymns was increased to 226, and afterwards to 255. Subsequently appeared the Hymn Book of the New British and Foreign Temperance Society, N. D.; Temperance Hymns and Songs, edited by J. W. Green, N. D. (enlarged in 1853); and the Scottish Temperance League Hymn Book, N. D. (edited by the Rev. F. C. Wilson). Collections were also issued by Rev. R. G. Mason, and by others under the names of Gwyther Kendal, Nottingham, Leicester, and Bristol. The demands of the Juvenile Temperance movement, especially in the Band of Hope form, stimulated the publication of poetical pieces with music attached; but hymns, strictly so called, did not multiply in the same proportion. Among works, largely but not exclusively used in meetings of young persons, may be named, The Crystal Fount, N. D.; The Crystal Spring, N. D.; The British Band of Hope Melodist, N. D.; The National Temperance Hymn Book, N. D., compiled by the Rev. H. A. Hammond; Hymns and Melodies of the Band of Hope, N. D.; The New Penny Temperance Hymn Book, N. D., by J. W. Kirton; The Book of Song of Bands of Hope, N. D.; and Odes for Good Templars, N. D.; and W. Hoyle's Hymns and Songs, N. D. The Committee of the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union have published a handsome volume of 176 Hymns and Songs for Bands of Hope, N. D. In connection with the Church of England Temperance Society a book of 254 Hymns and Songs has been published, but only a small number are on temperance topics. In 1864, Mr. G. H. Graham, of Maidstone, published the National Band of Hope and Temperance Melodist, comprising 250 pieces, the production of above 70 writers. In succession to this, and as the result of much labour, Rev. John Compston edited for Mr. Graham the National Temperance Harmonist, 1870, containing 550 hymns and songs. The musical edition contained 341 tunes. In 1878 this work was re-issued in an improved form, under the name of the National Temperance Hymnal, the editor as before being the Rev. John Compston. The hymns in this collection are 490. In 1878 also appeared the Standard Book of Song for Temperance Meetings and Home Use, edited by Mr. T. Bowick; followed in 1881 by an elegant volume containing these hymns with music, by Mr. A. J. Burch. All the more recent works can be obtained from the National Temperance Publication Depot, 33, Paternoster Row. It may be observed that all these collections abound in songs as well as hymns, and it is difficult to judge of the numerical proportion they bear to each other in the whole body of metrical compositions. Perhaps it will be an approach to accuracy to estimate the number of distinct hymns at about 300, and of hymn-writers at from 60 to 70. In the earliest collections many hymns by the same writer are printed; but in the later compilations no writer, with rare exceptions, is represented by more than a few specimens of his poetic powers.

ii. Amongst the most popular and widely used of Temperance hymns are the following:—

1. A glorious light has burst around us. Walker.
2. Abstainers, wake, there is work to be done. J. Anderson.
3. All gracious Lord, we look to Thee. W. J. Harvey.
4. Almighty Father, while we own, Thy saving power, &c. Vernon.
5. Am I my brother's keeper? Yes. American.
6. Christian, awake, still the foe. H. Anderton.
7. Come all dear children, sing a song. J. Tunnickliff.
8. Come, gentle daughters of our land. Clara L. Balfour.
9. Come, lovers of mankind. Vernon.
10. Come, ye men of rank and station. Vernon.
11. Father of the human race. R. G. Mason.
12. Friends of Temperance, onward go. J. B.
13. Give me a draught from the crystal spring. T. Hastings.
14. Great God, Thy presence we implore. Jabez Burns.
15. Hail, Temperance, bright celestial ray. J. W. Green.
16. Lo Zion droops; in vain, in vain. H. Anderton.
17. Lord of heaven and earth, defend us. Anon.
18. O Thou from Whom all gifts proceed. Vernon.
19. Onwards the animating sound. American.
20. Parent, who with speechless feeling. Sigourney.
21. Pledged in a noble cause. H. P.
22. Rise, and shine through every nation. T. J.
23. Round the Temperance standard rally. Jabez Burns.
24. Wake, for the time of slumber. Dawson Burns.
25. We praise Thee, if one rescued soul. Sigourney.
26. Who hath sorrow? who hath woe? American.
27. Who the sacred page pursuing. Vernon.
28. Who will tell of strength and freedom? Eliza Cook.
29. Wine is a mocker; it beguiles. J. B.

iii. In furnishing a few biographical details of Temperance hymn-writers we confine ourselves to the following, who have all passed away:—

1. Anderton, Henry, was b. at Walton-le-Dale, near Preston, Lancashire, Dec. 3, 1808, and was one of the early Preston abstainers. He was a popular speaker, and his poems were widely recited and sung. A complete edition of his Poems, with a Memoir by E. Grubb, has been published.

2. Balfour, Clara Liddell, née Lucas, was b. Dec. 21, 1808. She edited several Temperance Journals, and pub. the Garland of Water Flowers, and many other Temperance works. On Literary as well as on Temperance subjects she was an elegant writer and charming speaker. She d. July 3, 1878.

3. Beardsall, Francis, a Minister of the Baptist denomination, was b. at Sheffield, Sept. 6, 1799, and entering the Ministry he became an active friend of the Temperance cause in Manchester, and edited the Temperance Star for some time. In 1837 he pub. the first general Temperance Hymn Book, which passed through several editions. He d. June 23, 1842, while on a voyage to America.

4. Burns, Jabez, D.D., the well known Baptist Minister, was b. at Oldham, Lancashire, Dec. 18, 1805, and was one of the first Ministers of Religion in London who vigorously advocated Total Abstinence. He edited several Temperance publications, and employed a versatile and forcible pen in the cause of Temperance, both in prose and verse. He d. Jan. 31, 1876.

5. Green, John William, was b. in 1783, and rendered marked service to the Temperance cause as editor, writer, and speaker. His collection of Temperance Hymns and Songs, had a large sale in London and the neighbourhood. He d. Feb. 1, 1860.

6. Mason, Robert Grey, was b. Nov. 18, 1792. He was engaged for many years in the promotion of the Temperance cause both in the pulpit and on the platform. He edited the Temperance Hymn Book, N. D. He d. Aug. 31, 1867.

7. Tunnickliff, Jabez, a Minister of the Baptist denomination, was b. Feb. 7, 1809, and was the pastor of a Baptist congregation in Leeds, where he founded the first Band of Hope, in 1847, the outcome of a visit to Leeds of Mrs. Carlile of Dublin. He wrote many songs and hymns for children. He d. June 15, 1865.

iv. When it is remembered that Temperance hymns have been necessarily restricted to one topic, the variety of expression found therein may be justly regarded as being somewhat remarkable. And although not one hymn can be named which ranks with the highest productions of sacred song, yet the literary and devotional merits of not a few are conspicuous. Several of those named above would make no unworthy addition to modern hymn-books designed for special use in divine worship. They might be embodied in a separated section on Temperance. [D. B.]

Templi sacratas pande, Sion, fores.
Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Purification of B. V. M.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1680, the Cluniac Brev., 1686, p. 924, and the author's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 6 (ed. 1698, p. 65). It is also in the Paris Brev., 1736, and later French Brevs., as the hymn at 1st Vespers of the Feast of the Purification. Text in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. Sion, ope thy hallowed dome. Appeared in I. Williams's Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 182, as having been contributed thereto by "a friend," who is usually understood to have been J. Chandler, although it did not appear in Chandler's Hys. of the Church, 1841. In addition to being in C. U. in its original form, it is also found as:—

(1) O Sion, ope thy hallowed dome, in the English Hyl., 1852 and 1861.

(2) Zion, open wide thy gates, The Lord before, &c., in Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861.

(3) Zion, ope thine hallowed dome, in Kennedy, 1863.

2. O Sion! open wide thy gates; Let figures disappear. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 271, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 172. Repeated in H. A. & M., 1861; the Sarum Hyl., 1868; the Hymnary, 1872, and others, sometimes with, and at other times without, a doxology.

3. The forty days are past. By Jane E. Leeson, in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864 and 1871, with the signature "J. E. L."

4. Sion, open wide thy gates, Christ before His temple waits. An anonymous tr. in the Parish H. Bk., 1863-75.

5. Sion, open thy temple gates; The victim-priest, &c. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. Now, Sion, to the approaching King. W. Palmer. 1845.

2. Sion, thine hallowed gates unfold. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

3. Sion, open fling Thy sacred temple gates. J. D. Chambers. 1866.

4. Set wide the temple gate. D. T. Morgan. 1880.

Tempora florigero rutilant distincta sereno. V. H. C. Fortunatus. [Easter.] This is No. 9 in Bk. iii. of his Poems. It is a poem on the Resurrection, addressed "ad Felicem Episcopum" [Felix, Bp. of Nantes, d. 582], and is in 110 lines. The full text is in F. Leo's ed. of Fortunatus's Opera poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 59; from a St. Petersburg ms. of the 8th or 9th cent., a Paris ms. of the 9th cent. (Lat. 9347), &c. Also in a ms. of the 9th cent. in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 24193, f. 35. "In this sweet poem," says Dr. Schaff (Christ in Song, ed. 1870, p. 185), "the whole Nature, born anew in the Spring, and arrayed in the bridal garment of hope and promise, welcomes the risen Saviour, the Prince of spiritual and eternal life." In the Middle Ages varying centos beginning with ll. 39, 40: Salve festa dies toto venerabilis aevo, Qua Deus infernum vicit et astra tenet came into extensive use as Processionals from Easter to the Ascension. Thus the form given by Daniel, i. No. 143, in 14 couplets, is found in an Echternach Gradual of the end of the 10th or beginning of the 11th cent. now in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 10510; printed by A. Reiners in his Tropen- Prosen- und Präfatons-Gesänge, Luxemburg, 1884, p. 73) and Daniel, at ii. p. 382, cites it as in a Munich ms. of the 11th cent. Other early forms, beginning with l. 39, are in a ms. circa 1200, in the Bodleian (Laud Misc. 4, f. 140), in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, No. 381, &c. In the Sarum and York Processionals it appears in various forms, and several hymns in imitation are also included in them, all beginning "Salve festa dies." (See Sequences, pt. ii.) Other centos from Fortunatus are in Wackernagel, i. No. 83; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 152 (10 lines); Bässler, No. 57 (10 lines), and others. It would appear that Cranmer had made an English tr. in 1544 (see p. 344, i.). There are versions from the "Salve festa dies" in German as early as the 14th cent., one of which has passed into English as follows:—

Also heilig ist der Tag. Wackernagel, in his D. Kirchentiedl., ii. p. 742, gives three, really four, forms of this, i.-iii. in 1 st. of 8 l.; iv. in 3 st. of 6 l. The trs. follow the text given by Wackernagel in 8 lines from the Psalter Ecclesiasticus, Mainz, 1550, where it is entitled Gemeinen Mans Prozessgesang. It seems to have been used in Pre-Reformation times at processions and pilgrimages. The text in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 123, is nearly that of 1550 (see also Mittell., No. 534, and Hoffmann, Nos. 114, 115). It is tr. by (1) "Hallow we with praise the day." A free tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 106 in his Ps. & Hymns, 1851; and (2) "So holy is this day of days," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 88.

[J. M.]

The renderings into English from this poem have been confined to the extract given in Daniel, i. No. 143, or to selected portions of the same as follows:—

Salve, festa dies, toto venerabilis aevo.

1. Hail, festal day, for evermore adored. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Nodet, 1854. It is a tr. of a selection from Daniel. Its use is limited.

2. Hail, festal day, ever exalted high. By Elizabeth Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, &c., 1858, p. 135. This is a literal tr. of the text, as in Daniel.

3. Hail, Day of days, in peals of praise. By W. J. Copeland, in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 287; the People's H., 1867, and Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870.

4. Welcome, happy morning, age to age shall say. By J. Ellerton, contributed to R. Brown-Borthwick's Suppl. Hy. and Tune Bk., 1868. It was republished in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, and several other hymn-books in G. Britain and America, sometimes in an abbreviated form. It is a vigorous and popular paraphrase rather than a direct translation. Full text in Mr. Ellerton's Hymns, &c., 1888.

5. Hail! festal day, to endless ages known. By T. A. Lacey. In the Altar Hymnal, 1884, there are two paraphrases by this translator, one for Easter day and one for the Ascension, and both beginning with the same first line. [J. J.]

Tempted oft to go astray. J. S. B. Monsell. [SS. Philip and James.] The first stanza of this hymn was given in the 1st ed. of his Parish Musings, 1850. In his Spiritual Songs, 1857, three st. were added, thus forming a hymn of 4 st. of 8 l. In the revised and enlarged ed. of the Hy. Comp., 1876, st. i., ii. and iv. were given as No. 355. [J. J.]

Τὴν ἡμέραν διελθῶν. [Evening.] The usually accepted history of this hymn is that given by Dr. Neale in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, as follows:—

"This little hymn, which, I believe, is not used in the public service of the Church, is a great favourite in the Greek Isles. Its peculiar style and evident antiquity may well lead to the belief that it is the work of our present author [St. Anatolius]. It is, to the scattered hamlets of Chios and Mitylene, what Bishop Ken's Evening Hymn is to the villages of our own land; and its melody is singularly plaintive and soothing."

In 1874, under date of May 1st (13th), The Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly, then Priest of the Greek Church, Wolverhampton, and subsequently of that at Bristol, pub. Dr. Neale's tr. "The day is past and over," with slight alterations; a tr., by a friend, of the original Theotokion, in the same metre; an original tune by himself, and a note in which he pointed out that the hymn was taken from the Great After-Supper service (in Slavonic "Great After-Vespers"), and was a cento from two parts of that service. Dr. Neale took his cento from Daniel iii. p. 127, where it is given not in the original rhythmical prose but in a metrical form; and in his original tr. of 1853, as given below, he closely followed that form. The original Greek is in the Horologion (ὁρολόγιον τὸ μέγα, Venice ed. 1851, pp. 136, 137; ed. 1870, pp. 157, 159). The Greek text occurs in the Great After-Supper service as follows:—

It is introduced by the Stichoi, "Ὅτι μεθ' ἡμῶν ὁ θεός" ("For God is with us"), and then proceeds:—

"Τὴν ἡμέραν διελθὼν Εὐχαριστῶ σου, κύριε· Τὴν ἐσπέραν αἰτούμαι Σὺν τῇ νυκτὶ ἀναμάρτητον, Παράσχου μοι, σωτήρ, καὶ σώσον με.

"Δόξα.

"Τὴν ἡμέραν παρελθὼν Δοξολογῶ σε, δέσποτα· Τὴν ἐσπέραν αἰτούμαι Σὺν τῇ νυκτὶ ἀσκανδαλίστον, Παράσχου μοι, σωτήρ, καὶ σώσον με.

"Καὶ νῦν.

"Τὴν ἡμέραν διαβὰς, Ὑμολογῶ σε, ἄγιε· Τὴν ἐσπέραν αἰτούμαι Σὺν τῇ νυκτὶ ἀνεπίβουλον, Παράσχου μοι, σωτήρ, καὶ σώσον με.

"Δόξα.

"Φώτισον τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς μου Χριστὲ ὁ Θεός, μήποτε ὑπνώσω εἰς θάνατον, μήποτε εἶπρ ὁ ἐχθρός μου· Ἰσχυσα πρὸς αὐτόν.

"Δόξα.

"Ἀντιλήπτω τῆς ψυχῆς μου Γένου ὁ Θεός, ὅτι μέσον Διαβαίνω παγίδων πολλῶν· Ῥύσαι με ἐξ αὐτῶν καὶ σώσον με Ἄγαθε, ὡς φιλόνητος.

"Καὶ νῦν.

"Ὅτι οὐκ ἔχομεν παρῆρσιαν διὰ τὰ πολλὰ ἡμῶν ἀμαρτήματα, σὺ τόν, ἐκ σου γεννηθέντα δυσάπισσον Θεοτόκε Παρθένη· πολλὰ γὰρ ἰσχύει δέσσης Μητρὸς πρὸς εὐμενεαν Δεσπότης. Μὴ παρίδῃς ἀμαρτωλῶν ἰκεσίας ἢ πάνσεμος· ὅτι ἐλεῆμων ἐστὶ καὶ σώζειν δυνάμενος, ὁ καὶ παθεῖν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν καταδεξάμενος."

It must be noted that these stanzas are not signed. (See below concerning authorship.) It will possibly be of interest to the English reader to have a literal translation of these stanzas together with the Theotokion omitted by Daniel and the translators who have followed his text. It is as follows, with the portions known as the hymn "The day is past and over," in italics:—

"God is with us, let the nations know and be discomfited: for God is with us.

"The day is passing on, I thank Thee, O Lord: that the evening with the night may be sinless, I beseech, —Grant to me, Saviour, and save me.

"Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

"The day is passing away, I glorify Thee, O Master: that the evening with the night may be offenceless, I beseech, —Grant to me, Saviour, and save me.

"Both now, and ever, and to ages of ages. Amene.

"The day has passed away, I hymn Thee, O Holy: that the evening with the night may be plotless, I beseech, —Grant to me, Saviour, and save me.

"¶ Then the two choirs sing together:—
"The Cherubim, of nature bodiless, with loud hymns glorify Thee.

"The Seraphim, the six winged living ones, with ceaseless voices exalt Thee.

"And all the Angelic host, with thrice-holy songs praise Thee.

"For before all things Thou art the Father, I Am, and hast Thy co-unoriginate Son.

"And dost bear the equal-honoured Spirit of life, and manifestest the undivided Trinity.

"All holy Virgin. Mother of God; ye eyewitnesses and ministers of the Word;

"All ye choirs of Prophets and Martyrs, having life immortal:

"Intercede earnestly for all, that we may be supported in all dangers.

"That being delivered from the wandering of evil, we may cry aloud the Angelic ode:

"Holy, Holy, Holy, Thrice Holy Lord, have mercy and save us. Amene.

"¶ And straightway in a low voice:—

"I believe in One God, the Father, Almighty, &c.

"¶ Then the following Stichoi, the first of which is said thrice, and the rest twice, excepting the last, which is said once only. The second choir begins [s] that in the second and subsequent Stichoi the first choir may take its place as leader.]

"All-Holy Mistress Theotokos, intercede for us sinners.

"O all ye heavenly Powers of holy Angels and Archangels, intercede for us sinners.

"O holy John, Prophet and Forerunner, and Baptist of our Lord Jesus Christ, intercede for us sinners.

"O holy glorious Apostles, Prophets, and Martyrs, and all ye Saints, intercede for us sinners.

"O devoted and God-bearing Fathers, our Pastors and Ecumenical teachers, intercede for us sinners.

"Let not the unconquered, and indissoluble, and divine power of the honourable and lifemaking Cross, be ever wanting to us sinners.

"O God, be gracious to us sinners.

"And have mercy upon us.

"¶ Then—Holy God: three times. Glory. Both now. All-Holy Trinity. Lord, have mercy: three times. Glory. Both now. Our Father. For Thine is the kingdom. And these Troparia:—

"Lighten mine eyes, O Christ the God, lest I sleep in death: lest mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him.

"Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost."

"Be the Defender of my soul, O God, for I pass through the midst of snares: deliver me from them, and save me, O God, as Lover of men.

"Both now, and ever, and to ages of ages. Amene."

"THEOTOKION.

"As we have not boldness through our many sins, do thou, O Virgin Theotokos, supplicate Him who is born from thee, for the prayer of the Mother availeth much to procure the clemency of the Master. Disregard not, O all-pure, the supplications of sinners, for He who vouchsafed to suffer for us is merciful, and powerful to save."

On turning to the hymn as known to the English reader through Dr. Neale's tr., and comparing it with the above, it is clear that it is not a complete hymn in itself, but a cento composed of three stanzas from one part of the Greek Great After-Supper service, and two stanzas from another part of the same service with the omission of the Theotokion. (This cento form of the text is taken from C. Pelargus's Enchiridion, Frankfurt, 1594.) Another point which is equally clear is that the whole of the stanzas are anonymous in the Greek service-book. Dr. Neale attributes them to St. Anatolius, who died in 458. The Anatolius, however, of the Greek service-books, has his name appended to hymns in commemoration of martyrs of the latter part of the sixth and the early part of the seventh centuries. (See Anatolius, p. 63, i.) There must have been therefore two hymn-writers of the same name (Anatolius), one as stated by Dr. Neale, and another, who wrote in the 7th cent. In the Greek service-books the subject matter or nature of a hymn is often indicated by a kind of heading or preface to the hymn, as for instance Στιχηρὰ ἀνατολικά; Στιχηρὰ ἀναστάσιμα; and so on. In the case of the first three stanzas of this cento there is no such heading, nor is there any author's name given in any Greek service-book with which we are acquainted. In fact, no heading including the words Στιχηρὰ ἀνατολικά (the natural title of a Morning hymn) could have been attached to an Evening hymn. Whilst therefore we cannot determine the authorship of these Stichera, we regard them as very ancient, and possibly of the sixth or seventh centuries.

2. The first tr. of this hymn into English was by Dr. Neale, and was evidently taken from the text as given in Daniel. This tr. was first pub. in The Ecclesiastic and Theologian, 1853, p. 161. As both in this instance and in the 1st ed. of his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, the tr. is more faithful to the original than his revised tr. in the 2nd ed. of that work in the same year, we subjoin the text as given in The Ecclesiastic :—

- "The day is past and over!
All thanks, O Lord, to Thee!
I pray Thee now that sinless
The eve and night may be:
Grant that I crave, O God, and save!"
- "The day hath parted from us!
All glory, Lord, to Thee!
I pray Thee that offenseless
The eve and night may be:
Grant that I crave, O God, and save!"
- "The toils of day are over,
I raise the hymn to Thee;
And pray that eve and night-time
Without attack may be;
Grant that I crave, O God, and save!"
- "Lighten mine eyes, O Saviour!
Or sleep in death shall I;
And he, mine adversary,
Triumphantly shall cry
I have assailed and have prevailed."
- "Be Thou my soul's preserver!
O God! for Thou dost know,
The snares and sins are many
Through which I have to go:
Lover of men, oh hear my call,
And guard and save me from them-all!"

When this tr. is compared with the revised text by Dr. Neale in his 2nd ed. of the Hys. of the E. Church, 1862, and which is followed in the hymn-books, it will be seen that the latter is much more smooth, and musical, than the former (although less literal), and on that account is better suited for public worship. Amongst the earliest hymnals in which it found a place was T. Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1862; the Parish H. Bk., 1863, and others, in some cases st. iv. being omitted. At the present time it is found in almost every hymnal of note in all English-speaking countries.

In addition, Mrs. Charles has a tr. (from Daniel) in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 25, the first of which reads:—

- "The day is passing on,
I thank Thee, O Lord.
I beseech Thee this evening and this night
Keep me without sin,
Saviour, and save me!"

Dr. H. Bonar has also rendered it into English (from Daniel), and included it in his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 2nd series, 1864. The opening stanza is:—

- "The day is done!
I thank Thee, Lord, alone,
'Tis evening, and I cry,
O Saviour, be Thou nigh,
This night from sin me keep,
Preserve me while I sleep."

3. Some twenty-five years ago Mr. Hatherly wrote a tune in double counterpoint which was published in Our Own Fireside in Nov. 1865, to a "Fountainside Hymn," but was incorporated with the 6th ed. of the Rev. W. H. Havergal's Old Church Psalmody in 1867, in alliance with Dr. Neale's tr. of the present hymn. It subsequently became popular in the Levant. To adapt the original Greek to the tune it has been rewritten in the following form by an unknown hand, and is one of the very few current instances of a rendering back into the original tongue of what had previously been translated from it.

- "Ἀπόδειπνον.
"Πέρανας τὴν ἡμέραν
Σὲ Κύρι' εὐλογοῶ
"Ὡ δὸς καὶ τὴν ἑσπέραν
Νὰ Σὲ δοξολογῶ.
"Ρύσαι μ' ἐξ ἔργων σκοτεινῶν,
Καὶ σώσον με τὸν ταπεινόν.
"Πληρώσας τὴν ἡμέραν
Σὲ Ἄγι' εὐλογοῶ
"Ὡ δὸς καὶ τὴν ἑσπέραν
Νὰ Σὲ δοξολογῶ.
Νύκτ' ἀσκανδαλιστὸν μοι δὸς,
Καὶ σκέπε σωτηριωδῶς.
"Ἀμείψας τὴν ἡμέραν
Σὲ Σῶτερ εὐλογοῶ
"Ὡ δὸς καὶ τὴν ἑσπέραν
Νὰ Σὲ δοξολογῶ.
"Ἐπίσκειβαί με συμπαθῶς, Καὶ σώσον με ὡς ἀγαθός."

For many and important details in this article we are indebted to the Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly, Mus. Bac., editor of the 4th ed. of Dr. Neale's Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1882.

[J. J.]

Τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν φρικτὴν. St. Theodore of the Studium. [Sexagesima.] This is the opening line of Ode i. of the Canon for Apocreois. The Apocreois answers to the Sexagesima of the Anglican Church, and on that day the Greek Church commemorates "The Second and impartial Coming of Our Lord Jesus Christ."

"This commemoration the most Divine Fathers set after the two parables" [i.e. the Gospels of the two preceding Sundays, The Pharisee and Publican, and the Prodigal Son], "lest any one, learning from them the mercy of God, should live carelessly, and say, 'God is merciful, and whenever I wish to relinquish sin, it will be in my power to accomplish my purpose.' They therefore here commemorated that fearful day, that, by the consideration of death, and the expectation of the dreadful things that shall hereafter be, they might terrify men of negligent life, and bring them back again to virtue, and might teach them not simply to put confidence in God's mercy, considered by itself, but to remember also that the Judge is just, and will render to every man according to his works." Dr. Neale adds to the above tr.:—"As the Eastern Church has no such season as Advent, this commemoration becomes more peculiarly appropriate." Hymns of the E. C., 2nd ed. 1862, pp. 101, 102.

This Canon is found in the Triodion, and dates from the beginning of the ninth century. As a Judgment hymn, for majesty and power, it has been regarded by Dr. Neale and other competent judges as second only to the Dies Irae, which it anticipates some four hundred years. Four Odes only have been tr. into English. These are by Dr. Neale, and were pub. with notes (from which we have quoted) in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862. The variation of metre in the tr. follows that of the original; but Dr. Neale omits the θεοτόκιον (address to the B. V. M.) which closes each Ode. The contrast in Ode iv. with human courts of justice, is much more vivid in the original. ["Orator persuasion" = κλεπτοῦσα πιθανότης.] In the first three eds., Ode ix., st. 3, l. 1, Dr. Neale has the curious misprint of "David" for "Daniel." This has been corrected in the 4th ed. He also omits st. v. of that Ode. The untranslated Odes repeat the same ideas as those translated, which are as follows:—

Ode i. Τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν φρικτὴν.
That fearful day, that day of speechless dread. This was repeated in Lyra Messianica, 1864; the Hymnary altered 1871-2; and later collections.

Ode iii. 'Ο κύριος ἔρχεται.
God comes, and who shall stand before His fear. Republished in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870.

Ode iv. Ἐφάρτηκεν ἡ ἡμέρα.
The day is near, the Judgment is at hand. Repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870.

Ode ix. Ὁ κύριος ἔρχεται.
The Lord draws nigh, the righteous throne's Assessor. Also in Lyra Messianica, 1864. [J. J.]

Ten thousand times ten thousand.

H. Alford. [Processional for Saints' Days.]
Appeared 1st in his Year of Praise, 1867,
No. 229, in 3 st. of 8 l. In 1870 it formed part of the poetical setting of F. R. Pickersgill's illustration of the Lord's Prayer, which was
pub. as *The Lord's Prayer Illustrated by F. R.
Pickersgill, R.A., and Henry Alford, D.D.*, p. 16. On Jan. 17, 1871, it was sung at the author's funeral, with the additional stanza,
"Bring near Thy great Salvation." In this full form it was printed in the author's Life, &c., 1872, p. 483; in H. A. & M., 1875, and again in other collections. [J. J.]

Ter sancte, ter potens Deus. Claud de Santeuil. [Holy Trinity.] Appeared in the Chuniac Brev., 1686, p. 517. In the Paris Brev., 1680, and later French Brevs. it is the hymn for the 1st and 2nd Vespers on Trinity Sunday. The Paris text is in J. Chandler's
Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 82;
and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838
and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Thrice holy, thrice Almighty Three. By I.
Williams, in the British Magazine, Sep., 1837 (vol. xii., p. 267), and again in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 160.

2. Thrice holy God, of wondrous might. By J.
Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837,
p. 92, and again in his Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 53. It is in several collections. The form in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, and Thring's Coll., 1882, is a cento in which st. i., ii., and ll. 1, 2 of st. iii. are by J. Chandler, slightly altered, and the rest of the hymn is by J.
Ellerton.

3. Lord, thrice holy, and supreme. By E. Cas-wall, in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 279, and altered in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 130, to "Lord, thrice holy! Lord of might!" Given, with slight alterations, in the Hymnary, 1872, as "Lord, thrice holy, God of might."

4. Thrice holy and thrice potent God. By W.
L. Alexander, in his Augustine H. Bk., 1849, No.
198 (ed. 1865, No. 205).

5. God thrice holy, God of might. By W. J.
Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55;
Trinity, 7; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870,
No. 89.

6. Thrice holy God, of sovereign might. By R.
C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. O threefold holiness and might. W. Palmer, 1845.
2. Thrice blest, thrice mighty Deity. J. D. Chambers,
1857. [J. J.]

Tersteegen, Gerhard, s. of Heinrich
Tersteegen (otherwise ter Stegen or zur Stiege), merchant at Mörs (Meurs), in Rhenish Prussia, was b. at Mörs, Nov. 25, 1697. His parents intended that he should become a minister of the Reformed Church in Germany. His father however d. in 1703, and his mother found that after giving him a thorough classical training in the Latin school at Mörs she was unable to afford the cost of his University course. He was accordingly apprenticed, in 1713, to his brother-in-law, a merchant at Mühlheim on the Ruhr, and in 1717 started in business on his own account, at Mühlheim. As he found his time much broken up, and his opportunities of meditation few, he gave up his business in 1719; and, after a short trial of linen weaving, took up the easier and much more lucrative occupation of weaving silk ribbons. During the years 1719-24 he passed through a period of spiritual depression, at the end of which his faith in the reconciling grace of Christ became assured (see No. xxxiv. below), and on Maundy Thursday, 1724, he wrote out a solemn covenant with God which he signed with his own blood. Previous to this, even before 1719, he had ceased to attend the ordinary services of the Reformed Church; and also absented himself from Holy Communion on the ground that he could not in conscience communicate along with open sinners. About the beginning of 1725 he began to speak at the prayer meetings (styled "Übungen") which had been held at Mühlheim, since 1710, by Wilhelm Hoffmann, who was a candidate of theology (licensed preacher) of the Reformed Church. Tersteegen soon became known as a religious teacher among the "Stillen im Lande," as the attenders on these meetings were called, and in 1728 gave up his handicraft in order to devote himself entirely to the tr. of works by mediæval and recent Mystics and Quietists, including Madame Guyon and others, and the composition of devotional books, to correspondence on religious subjects, and to the work of a spiritual director of the "awakened souls." From this date to his death he was supported by a small regular income which was subscribed by his admirers and friends. About 1727 a house at Otterbeck, between Mühlheim and Elberfeld, was set apart as a "Pilgerhütte," where the "awakened souls" could go into a spiritual retreat, under the direction of Tersteegen. This house, with accommodation for eight persons, was retained until about 1800. Tersteegen, however, did not confine himself to Mühlheim, but travelled over the district, addressing gatherings of like-minded Christians, giving special attention to Elberfeld, Barmen, Solingen, and Crefeld. From 1732 to 1755 he also went regularly every year to Holland, to visit his spiritual kinsfolk at Amsterdam and elsewhere. From 1730 to 1750 a law against conventicles was strictly enforced, and Tersteegen could not hold meetings except on his visits to Holland. During this period he removed to a house which had been Wilhelm Hoffmann's, where he preached, and provided food and simple medicines for the poor. After 1750 he resumed his public speaking until 1756, when he overstrained himself, and had to confine himself to the smallest gatherings absolutely.

In 1769, dropsy set in, and after patient endurance for a season he d. on April 3, 1769, at Mühlheim (Koch, vi. 46; Herzog's Real-Encyklopädie, xv. 334; Max Goebel's Gesch. des christl. Lebens in der Rheinisch-Westphälischen Evang. Kirche, vol. iii., 1860, p. 289, &c.).

Up to the end of his life Tersteegen remained outside the Reformed Church, but never set up a sect of his own. After his death his followers as a rule reunited themselves with it, especially when a less formal type of religion began to prevail therein.

Of Tersteegen's public addresses given between 1753 and 1756, reports were taken of the more important, and in 1769-73, thirty-three of these were pub. as Geistliche Brosamen von des Herrn Tisch gefallen, &c. Seven of them have been tr. by S. Jackson as Spiritual Crumbs from the Master's Table, 1837. In addition he pub. in 1750 a collection of tracts as Weg der Wahrheit. A large number of his German letters were pub. in 1773-5, at Solingen; and of his Dutch letters, at Hoorn, in 1772.

Tersteegen's most important hymnological work was his Geistliches Blumen-Gärtlein, of which many editions were published, details of the more important of which we subjoin.

The 1st ed. was pub. in 1729; 2nd, 1735; 3rd, 1738; 4th, 1745; 5th, 1751; 6th, 1757; 7th, 1768; and the 8th in 1778. [Eds. 1-4, 6, pub. by Böttiger, at Frankfurt and Leipzig; 5, 7, 8, by Schmitz, at Solingen.] Of these eds. the Royal Library at Berlin has the 2nd and 4th, and the Wernigerode Library has the 1st and 3rd. The 5th is in the Library of the Prebiter-Seminar at Hannover. The 6th is in the possession of Professor Dr. Kleinert, in Berlin. No copy of the 7th ed. has been accessible to the present writer, but he possesses a copy of the 8th ed., 1778, which professes to be a reprint of the 7th ed. So far as the hymns proper are concerned the dates at which they appeared in the successive editions (the numbers in each case being as in Bk. iii. of the ed. of 1768), are as follows: The 1729 has Nos. 1-28, 107-111; the 1735, 1-58, 107-111; the 1738, 1-65, 107-111; the 1745, 1-84, 106-111; the 1751, 1-91, 106-111; the 1757, 1-93, 106-111; the 1768, 1-111. In Dr. Kleinert's copy of the 1757 ed. the additional hymns of the 1768 ed. are appended in the shape of several separately printed supplements, but none of these seem earlier than 1760. So far as the shorter pieces of the Blumen-Gärtlein are concerned, the 1729 has 220 pieces in Bk. i., 220 in Bk. ii., and 60 in Bk. iii., and the hymns proper in Bk. iv. In the later eds. Bks. i., ii., are united and enlarged; and so e.g. the 1738 ed. has 513 in Bk. i., and 120 in Bk. ii., while the 1768 ed. has 584 in Bk. i., and 120 with an Appx. of 16 in Bk. ii. The 1729 ed. does not contain the Frommen Lotterte. This was 1st pub. separately at Elberfeld, in 1732, with 235 "Lots," and added to the later eds. of the Blumen-Gärtlein, the 1738 ed., e.g. containing 284 aphorisms or "Lots," and the 1768 ed. containing 381. In the most accessible recent ed. of the Blumen-Gärtlein, viz., the stereotype ed. pub. by J. F. Steinkopf, of Stuttgart (6th ed., 1879), neither Nos. 555-606 in Bk. i., the Erbauliche Verse der Madame Guion, appended to Bk. ii. [1st pub. separately in 1749], Nos. 113-122 in Bk. iii., nor Nos. 382-412 in the Frommen Lotterte, are in any of the first eight editions; and some of these pieces are certainly neither originals nor trs. by Tersteegen.

The hymn-book used at the meetings of Hoffmann and Tersteegen has often been regarded as Tersteegen's. The 1st ed. appeared at Elberfeld, in 1721, as Joachimi Neandri vermehrte Glaubens- und Liebes-Übung . . . nebst einem Anhang, &c., and was ed. by Adolph Weber of Haan, near Elberfeld. The 2nd (Duisburg, 1736), 3rd (Duisburg, 1747), 4th (Solingen, 1760), and 5th (Solingen, 1768) eds. were edited by Tersteegen, the title being enlarged in 1760 as Gott-geheiligt Harfen-Spiel der Kinder Zion, &c. These later eds. contain many hymns by Tersteegen, but none of the hymns of the Blumen-Gärtlein seem to have been first pub. therein.

Tersteegen ranks as one of the three most important hymnwriters associated with the Reformed Church in Germany, the other two being F. A. Lampe (p. 636, ii.), and Joachim Neander (p. 790, i.).

He is however more closely allied, both as a Mystic and as a Poet, with Johann Scheffer (p. 1004, ii.), than with either of his co-religionists. He almost equals Scheffer in power of expression and beauty of form, and if Scheffer has more pictorial grace, and a more vivid imagination, Tersteegen has more definiteness of teaching, a firmer grasp of the Christian verities, and a greater clearness in exposition. Inner union of the soul with God and Christ, the childlike simplicity and trust which this brings, renunciation of the world and of self, and daily endeavour to live as in the presence of God and in preparation for the vision of God, are the keynotes of his hymns. To his intense power of realising the unseen, his clear and simple diction, and the evident sincerity with which he sets forth his own Christian experience, his hymns owe much of their attractiveness and influence. During his lifetime they did not come much into use except through the Harfenspiel, as above, and they did not meet the taste of compilers during the Rationalistic period. But since Bunsen in his Versuch, 1833, and Knapp in his Ev. L. S., 1837, brought his hymns once more into notice they have been received in greater or less measure into almost all the German hymn-books, among the Lutherans as well as among the Reformed, the most popular of all being his "Gott ist gegenwärtig" (p. 443, ii.).

A number of Tersteegen's hymns are noted under their own first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). They appeared, almost all for the first time, in the successive editions of his Geistliches Blumen-Gärtlein, viz., in the 1st ed., 1729; 2nd ed., 1735; 3rd ed., 1738; 4th ed., 1745; 5th ed., 1751; 6th ed., 1757; 7th ed., 1768; and in each case (after 1729. See above) in the Third Book of that work. Those which have passed into English and are not noted elsewhere, are as follows:—

i. Freue dich, du Kinder-Orden. Christmas. In the 5th ed., 1751, as above, Bk. iii., No. 87, in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "Christmas Day's awaking for the Children." Repeated in Bunsen's Aug. G. B., 1846, No. 47, omitting st. ii. Tr. as:—

Little children, God above. This is a free tr., omitting st. vi., by Mrs. Bevan, in her Songs of Eternal Life, 1858, p. 78. Her trs. of st. i., ii., v. are in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "Children rejoice, for God is come to earth." By Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 30.

ii. Jedes Herz will etwas lieben. Love to Christ. In the 4th ed., 1745, as above, Bk. iii., No. 70, in 8 st. of 4 l., entitled "The Soul wishes to take Jesus as her best Beloved." Repeated in the Harfen-Spiel, 1747, as above (ed. 1768, No. 544). Tr. as:—

1. The heart of man must something love. This is a good and full tr. by S. Jackson, in his Life of Tersteegen, 1832 (1837, p. 426). Repeated in full in Leifchild's Orig. Hys., 1842. A cento beginning with st. ii. "Though all the world my choice deride," is in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and also in the Plymouth Coll., 1855, and other American hymnals.

2. Something every heart is loving. A full and good tr. by Mrs. Bevan, in her Songs of Eternal Life, 1858, p. 58. Repeated, abridged, in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867; Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872; Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, &c.

iii. Jesu, der du bist alleine. Communion of Saints. In the 2nd ed., 1735, as above, Bk. iii., No. 43, in 11 st. of 6 l., entitled "Prayer on behalf of the brethren." Previously in the Hesse-Homburg G. B., 1734, No. 1461, and evidently as early as 1731, for in that year Tersteegen quotes part of it in one of his letters (see Goebel, as above, iii. p. 347). Repeated in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 318. Tr. as:—

Jesus, whom Thy Church doth own. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. iii., in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 99; repeated, omitting the trs. of st. v., vii., in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 106. The trs. of st. i., ii., iv. are included in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

iv. Jesu, mein Erbarmen! höre. Lent or Penitence. In the 2nd ed., 1735, as above, Bk. iii., No. 41, in 12 st. of 6 l., entitled "In outward and inward sufferings and Temptations." Previously in the Hesse-Homburg G. B., 1734, No. 1664. Koch, vi. 50, speaks of it as written before 1724. In the Elberfeld G. B., 1857. Tr. as:—

Jesus, pitying Saviour, hear me. In full, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 133, repeated, omitting st. ii.-iv., ix., in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 109. In her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 298, she gave st. ii., v., vi., beginning "Lost in darkness, girt with dangers."

v. Nun so will ich denn mein Leben. Self-Surrender. In the 2nd ed., 1735, as above, Bk. iii., No. 37, in 10 st. of 6 l. entitled "Thorough resolution to give oneself wholly to God." Previously in the Hesse-Homburg G. B., 1734, No. 960, in 10 st. Also in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 718. According to Koch, vi. 68, it was originally in 9 st., and st. 10 was added at the suggestion of his friend Wilhelm Hoffmann (see above). Tr. (omitting st. ii., iii., vi., x.) as:—

1. Lo! my choice is now decided. By Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 125 (Hys. from the Ger., 1864, p. 215, altered), Her trs. of st. viii., ix., vii., altered and beginning, "One thing first and only knowing," are repeated in Hedge & Huntington's Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853.

2. Now at last I end the strife. By Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 165, repeated (omitting the tr. of st. viii.), as No. 131, in her C. B. for England, 1863.

vi. O liebe Seele! könntst du werden. The Childlike Spirit. In the 1st ed., 1729, as above, Bk. iv., No. 7, in 18 st. of 4 l., entitled "Picture of Christian childhood." Repeated, abridged, in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 824. It is a beautiful description of ideal childhood. Tr. as:—

Soul! couldst thou, while on earth remaining. By Miss Cox, omitting st. ii.-iv., ix., xi., xv., in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 113. Her trs. of st. i., xvii., xviii., were repeated, altered, in Hedge & Huntington's Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853. In Miss Cox's Hys. from German, 1864, p. 197, it begins "Soul, while on earth thou still remainest."

Other trs. are: (1) "Wouldst thou, my soul, the secret find." By Lady E. Portescue, 1843, p. 47. (2) "Dear soul, couldst thou become a child." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 22.

vii. Siegesfürste, Ehrenkönig. Ascension. In the 2nd ed., 1735, as above, Bk. iii., No. 54, in 7 st. of 8 l., entitled "Prayer to Jesus on His Ascension." Repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1031. Tr. as:—

Conquering Prince and Lord of Glory. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. ii., in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 48. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 63, considerably altered; a tr. of st. ii. being added, and the trs. of st. iii., iv., omitted. This form is repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868.

viii. Wie gut ist, wenn man abgespehnt. Lent or Self-Renunciation. In the 1st ed., 1729, as above, Bk. iv., No. 21, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled "Of the sweetness of the hidden life of Christians." Tr. as:—

How sweet it is, when wean'd from all. This is a good and full tr. by S. Jackson, in his Life of Tersteegen, 1832 (1837, p. 417). His trs. of st. i., iii., v., ix. are repeated in the Christian Hyl., 3rd ed., Adelaide, 1872, No. 225.

Other hymns by Tersteegen which have been rendered into English are:—

ix. Ach Gott, es taugt doch draussen nicht. On the Vanity of Earthly Things. In the 7th ed., 1768, as above, Bk. iii., No. 102, in 4 st. of 4 l. xxviii. Nun lobet alle Gottes Sohn. Praise to Christ. In the 4th ed., 1745, as above, Bk. iii., No. 84, in 8 st. of 6 l. Tr. as "Give glory to the Son of God." By Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 75.

xxix. O Jesu, König, hoch zu ehren. Self-surrender. In the 2nd ed., 1735, as above, Bk. iii., No. 33, in 12 st. of 4 l. Previously in the Hesse-Homburg G. B., 1734, No. 962. Tr. as "O Jesus, Lord of majesty." By Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 136.

xxx. So gehets von Schritt zu Schritt. For the Dying. In the 4th ed., 1745, as above, Bk. iii., No. 73, in 11 st. of 4 l. Tr. as "Thus, step by step, my journey to the Infinite." By Lady Durand, 1873, p. 105.

xxxi. So ist denn doch immer abermal ein Jahr. New Year. In the 7th ed., 1768, as above, Bk. iii., No. 97, in 7 st. of 4 l., entitled Sincere disposition on New Year's Day or on one's Birthday, and with the note: "This I wrote for my birthday, when I was 63 years old, and then the first line began, 'So ist dann auch mein grosses Stufenjahr.'" It is one of the supplemental hymns appended to some copies of the 6th ed., 1757. Tr. as "Thus, then another year of pilgrim-life." By Lady Durand, 1873, p. 73.

xxxii. Sollt ich nicht gelassen sein. Cross and Consolation. In the 1st ed., 1729, as above, Bk. iv., No. 17, in 8 st. of 4 l. Tr. as "Should I not be meek and still." By Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 45.

xxxiii. Von allen Dingen ab. Turning to God. In the 5th ed., 1751, as above, Bk. iii., No. 86, in 9 st. of 6 l. Tr. as "From all created things." By Lady Durand, 1873, p. 100.

xxxiv. Wie bist du mir so innig gut. The Grace of Christ. In the 2nd ed., 1735, as above, Bk. iii., No. 39, in 14 st. of 4 l. Previously in the Hesse-Homburg G. B., 1734, No. 1120. In Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 757, and Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. Written in 1724 at the close of his time of spiritual despondency. "This state of spiritual darkness continued five years; until at length whilst on a journey to a neighbouring town, the day-spring from on high again visited him; and the atoning mercy of Jesus Christ was made so deeply and convincingly apparent to him, that his heart was set entirely at rest. On this occasion he composed that beautiful hymn, &c." (see S. Jackson's Life of Tersteegen, ed. 1837, p. 7). Tr. as "How gracious, kind, and good, My great High Priest art Thou" (st. i.-v.), No. 74 in Dr. Leifchild's Original Hys., 1842.

xxxv. Wiederum ein Augenblick. The Flight of Time. In the 1st ed., 1729, as above, p. 232, in 6 l. In the 7th ed., 1768, Bk. iii., No. 109, in 2 st. of 6 l. Tr. as (1) "Of my Time one Minute more." As No. 691, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "One more flying moment." By Lady Durand, 1873, p. 26.

xxxvi. Willkomm'n, verklaerter Gottes Sohn. Easter. In the 1st ed., 1729, as above, Bk. iv., No. 22, in 10 st. of 6 l. The form tr. into English is that in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 727, which is st. vii.-x., beginning "Verklärtes Haupt, nun lebest du." This is tr. as "O Glorious Head, Thou livest now." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 89. Repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870.

The first Book of the Blumen-Gürtlein contains short poems, more of the nature of aphorisms than of hymns. In the ed. of 1768 there are in all 568 pieces in Bk. i., and of these Miss Winkworth has tr. Nos. 429, 474, 565, 573, 575, 577 in her Christian Singers, 1869. Others are tr. by Lady Durand, in her Imitations from the German of Spitta and Tersteegen, 1873, as above, and by S. Jackson, in his Life of Tersteegen, 1832.

To the 2nd and later eds. of the Blumen-Gürtlein a collection of aphorisms, entitled Der Frommen Lotterie, was appended. This was enlarged in the successive eds. till the ed. of 1768 contained 381 in all. Of these 200 were selected and tr. by Lady E. A. Durand, and pub. in 1874, as The Spiritual Lottery. A selection translated from Gerhard Tersteegen's Frommen Lotterie. [J. M.]

Thank and praise Jehovah's Name. J. Montgomery. [Ps. cvii.] This version of Ps. 107 was given in his Songs of Zion, 1822, in five numbers as follows:—

1. Thank and praise Jehovah's name.
2. They that mourn in dungeon-gloom.
3. Fools, for their transgression, see.
4. They that toil upon the deep.
5. Let the elders praise the Lord.

In his Original Hys., 1853, numbers 1-4 were given as one hymn in four parts, with No. 3 altered to "Sinners, for transgression, see," and making 24 st. of 4 l. in all. The most widely used part is No. 1. It is sometimes altered to "Magnify Jehovah's Name," as in the American Baptist Praise Bk., 1871, and other collections. [J. J.]

Θαύματος ὑπερφυῶς. [Χριστὸς γεννᾷται.]

That holy rite, that solemn vow. E. Osler. [Holy Baptism.] 1st pub. in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 107, in 2 st. of 6 l., and again in Osler's Church and King, March, 1837, as the conclusion of an article on "Easter Even." In 1858 it was adopted by the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, No. 711, but the stanzas were transposed, st. ii. being placed first, and thus opening, "Baptized into the Saviour's death." In this form it is found in a few collections. [J. J.]

That we might walk with God. B. Beddome. [Leadings of the Holy Spirit.] This is No. 138 of Beddome's posthumous Hymns Adapted to Public Worship, &c., 1817, in 4 st. of 4 lines, and headed "Leadings of the Spirit." In its original form it is not in C. U.; but it has supplied the following to a large number of American hymn-books:—

1. Heirs of unending life. This appeared in the American Prayer 'Bk. Coll. 1826, No. 210, in 3 st. of 4 l. Of these st. iii. is from Beddome (st. iv.); st. ii. Beddome (st. ii.) altered; and st. i. new. American authorities say that this cento was arranged by Bp. Onderdonk, who also wrote st. i. It is in several collections.

2. 'Tis God the Spirit leads. This is composed of st. ii.-iv. from Beddome, with the alteration of the first line only. It appeared in this form, anonymously, in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and is in extensive use in America.

Sometimes Beddome's hymn is dated 1795, the year of his death. [J. J.]

The angel comes: he comes to reap. H. H. Milman. [Second Advent.] 1st pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 40, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in Dean Milman's Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1837. It is given in several modern hymn-books, including Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, and others. [J. J.]

The apostle slept, a light shone in the prison. [Burial of the Dead.] J. D. Burns. Appeared in his Vision of Prophecy,

&c., 1858, as a paraphrase of the account contained in Acts xii. of the deliverance of St. Peter from prison. It was repeated in his Poems, 1865, p. 248, in 9 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The death of a Believer." As a whole this hymn is not in C. U., but the cento for the Burial of the Dead, "A voice is heard on earth of kinsfolk weeping," in the Hy. Comp., 1876, is composed of st. vii.-ix. [J. J.]

The ark of God in safety rode. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [For use at Sea.] Appeared in The Holy Year, 1862, p. 216, in 20 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Prayers at Sea—The Sailors' Hymn." In later editions it is divided into four parts thus:—

- Pt. i. "The ark of God in safety rode."
Pt. ii. "O Thou Whose way is on the waves."
Pt. iii. "Our bodies are with earthly food."
Pt. iv. "The stars will fall, the sun be dark."

These parts are in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., st. vi. of the original being omitted. This revision was made by the author. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, is a cento composed of st. i., ii., v., xi., xv.-xx. [J. J.]

The billows swell, the winds are high. W. Cowper. [Temptation.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 18, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Temptation." It was extensively adopted by the older collection, but is somewhat restricted in its modern use. [J. J.]

The bird that soars on highest wing. J. Montgomery. [Humility.] This poem appeared in his Poet's Portfolio, 1835, p. 179, in 3 st. of 6 l., and headed "Humility." It is given as a hymn in several collections, including Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840; the Prim. Meth. S. School Union H. Bk., 1879, and others in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

The chariot! the chariot! its wheels roll on fire. H. H. Milman. [Advent.] 1st pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 7, in 5 st. of 4 l., but not included by the author in his Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1837. It is in several modern hymn-books, including Kennedy, 1863; Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, &c. [J. J.]

The Church has waited long. H. Bonar. [Advent.] Pub. in the Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 299, in 5 st. of 8 l., with the refrain "Come then, Lord Jesus, come." It was repeated in the 3rd ed. of the author's Songs for the Wilderness, Kelso, 1850, p. 39, and again in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1857, p. 31. It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America, sometimes without the refrain. [J. J.]

The Church of God lifts up her voice. W. C. Dix. [Easter.] This hymn is based upon a tr. in blank verse by Dr. Littledale of a short hymn near the end of his tr. of the office of the Greek Church for Easter Sunday, as pub. in his Offices from the Service Books of the Holy Eastern Church, &c., 1863, p. 222, and begins in the original Πάσχα τὸ τερπνόν. Mr. Dix's rendering was made in 1864, and pub. in 6 st. of 5 l., in the St. Raphael (Bristol) Hys. for Public Worship, No. 203, as one of six additional hymns given at the end of the collections, and headed, "Founded on translation from the Greek. Written by W.

C. D. for St. Raphaels. Easter, 1864." It must be observed that by an error of the printer this note reads as though it referred to No. 202 (another hymn by Mr. Dix), instead of to No. 203, the present hymn. [J. J.]

The Church's one Foundation. S. J. Stone. [Processional for Festivals.] The impression made upon the author's mind by Bishop Gray's (Capetown) noble defence of the Catholic Faith against the teachings of Bishop Colenso, was in chief the origin of this magnificent hymn. It has thus associations of historical value, to which special reference is made in the stanza:—

- "Though with a scornful wonder
Men see her sore oppress,
By schisms rent asunder,
By heresies distrest;
Yet saints their watch are keeping
Their cry goes up, 'How long?'
And soon the night of weeping
Shall be the morn of song."

The hymn was written in 1866, and is based on the ninth article of the Apostles' Creed. It is known in three forms, (1) the original, which was pub. in the author's Lyra Fidelium, 1866, in 7 st. of 8 l., and headed "The Holy Catholic Church: The Communion of Saints. 'He is the Head of the Body, the Church'"; (2) the revised form in 5 st. of 8 l., made in 1868 for, and pub. in the Appendix to H. A. & M., No. 320 (the form in universal use); and (3) the expanded text in 10 st. of 8 l., made in 1885 for Processional use in Salisbury Cathedral. We give here the full form of 1885, with notes in the margin which explain the position of each stanza in 1866 and 1868:—

- St. i. in 1866, and 1868. 1. "The Church's one Foundation
Is Jesus Christ her Lord:
She is His new creation
By water and the word:
From heaven He came and sought her
To be His Holy Bride
With His own blood He bought her
And for her life He died.
- St. ii. in 1866, and 1868. 2. "Elect from every nation,
Yet one o'er all the earth,
Her charter of salvation,
One Lord, one Faith, one Birth,
One Holy Name she blesses,
Partakes one holy Food,
And to one hope she presses
With every grace endued.
- St. iii. in 1866; omitted in 1868. 3. "The Church shall never perish!
Her dear Lord, to defend,
To guide, sustain, and cherish,
Is with her to the end;
Though there be those that hate her,
And false sons in her pale,
Against or foe or traitor
She ever shall prevail.
- St. iv. in 1866; and st. iii. in 1868. 4. "Though with a scornful wonder Men see her sore oppress,
By schisms rent asunder,
By heresies distrest;
Yet saints their watch are keeping,
Their cry goes up, 'How long?'
And soon the night of weeping
Shall be the morn of song.
- St. v. in 1866, and st. iv. in 1868. 5. "Mid toil and tribulation,
And tumult of her war,
She waits the consummation
Of peace for evermore;
Till with the vision glorious
Her longing eyes are blest,
And the great Church victorious
Shall be the Church at rest.
- New in 1885. 6. "So, Lord, she stands before Thee,
For evermore thine own;
No merit is her glory,
Her boasting this alone:

That she who did not choose Thee
Came, chosen, at Thy call,
Never to leave or lose Thee
Or from Thy favour fall.

New in 1885. 7. "For Thy true word remaineth;
No creature far or nigh,
No fiend of ill who reigneth
In hell or haunted sky;
No doubting world's derision
That holds her in despite,
Shall hide her from Thy vision,
Shall lure her from Thy light.

New in 1885. 8. "Thine, Thine! in bliss or sorrow,
As well in shade as shine:
Of old, to-day, to-morrow,
To all the ages, Thine!
Thine in her great communion,
Baptized into Thy Name,
And in her last fruition
Of all her hope and aim.

St. vi. in 1866; st. v., ll. 1-4, in 1868; ll. 5-8 omitted in 1868. 9. "As she on earth hath union
With God, the Three in One,
So hath she sweet communion
With those whose rest is won;
With all her sons and daughters,
Who by the Master's hand
Led through the deathly waters,
Repose in Eden-land.

St. vii. in 1866; ll. 1-4 in 1868. 10. "O happy ones and holy!
Lord, give us grace that we
Like them, the meek and lowly,
On high may dwell with Thee;
There past the border mountains,
Where, in sweet vales, the Bride
With Thee, by living fountains,
For ever shall abide. Amen."

A collation of the above text of 1885, with those of 1866 and 1868, gives the following results:—

St. i. The same in all.

St. ii. In 1866, line 1 reads "She is from every," &c.

St. iii. The same in 1866 and 1885.

St. iv., v. The same in all.

St. vi., vii., viii. New in 1885.

St. ix. In 1866 and 1868, ll. 1-4 read:—

"Yet she on earth hath union
With God the Three in One,
And mystic sweet communion
With those whose rest is won."

St. ix., ll. 5-8, same in 1866, not in 1868.

St. x., ll. 1-4, same in all; ll. 5-8, same in 1866 and 1885, not in 1868.

This collation and further reference to the full text shew that the 1868 version of the hymn is the finest of the three, and that which will live in the hymn-books of the future. The use of this form of the text is most extensive in all English-speaking countries. It has also been translated into several European and other languages. The versions in Latin include "Nobis unum est fundamen," by the Rev. E. Marshall, 1882 (and circulated as a card); and "Qui Ecclesiam instauravit," by the late T. G. Godfrey-Faussett, in Memorials, 1878.

In reference to the fact that this hymn was chosen as the Processional at each of the three great services at Canterbury Cathedral, at Westminster Abbey, and St. Paul's Cathedral, when all the Bishops of the Lambeth Conference of 1888 assembled, the following lines were written by Bishop Nelson, of New Zealand. They appeared in Church Bells of Nov. 30, 1888.

"Bard of the Church, in these divided days
For words of harmony to thee be praise:
Of love and oneness thou didst strike the chords,
And set our thoughts and prayers to tuneful words.
The Church's one Foundation thou didst sing,
Beauty and Bands to Her thy numbers bring.
Through church and chancel, aisle, and transept deep,
In fullest melody thy watch-notes sweep;
Now in the desert, now upon the main,
In mine and forest, and on citied plain:
From Lambeth towers to far New Zealand's coast,
Bard of the Church, thy blast inspires the host." [J. J.]

The city paved with Gold. Bp. W. W. How. [The New Jerusalem.] "Written for Church Hymns, 1871. Designed specially as a counteractive to the merely materialist and futurist tone of many of the ordinary 'Jerusalem' hymns" (Notes on Ch. Hymns, p. lxxxiii.). This is attempted to be accomplished by giving a spiritual meaning to the "gold" and "gates of pearl," &c., of the New Jerusalem, as for instance:—

"The gates of pearl are there
In penitential tears,
Bright as a jewel rare,
Each saintly grace appears:
We track the path saints trod of old,
And lo! the pavement is of gold!"

is said of the "true kingdom" within the man. Although well conceived, and executed in good style, it has failed to gain attention, and is very limited in its use. [J. J.]

The day is past and gone, Great God, we bow to Thee. W. J. Blew and J. Ellerton. [Evening.] This is a cento from Mr. Blew's tr. of "Grates, peracto jam die" (p. 451, i.), with original additions by Mr. Ellerton. Mr. Blew's tr. appeared in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, in 6 st. of 4 l. In 1868 Mr. Ellerton compiled the cento for the Nantwich Festival of Choirs. It was composed of 4 st. from Mr. Blew's tr., 3 original st. by Mr. Ellerton, and a doxology, thus:—

i. The day is past and gone. Blew.
ii. O when shall that day come. Blew.
iii. Where all things shall be peace. Blew.
iv. Faint are our voices here. Ellerton.
v. Yet, Lord, to Thy dear will. Ellerton.
vi. This Thine each soul to calm. Ellerton.
vii. Until at rest beneath. Blew.
viii. One God, the Father, Son. Doxology.

In 1869 this cento was rewritten in 6 st. as "The day of praise is done," and pub. in the Rev. R. Brown-Borthwick's Supplemental Hy. & Tune Bk., and again in his Select Hymns, 1871. This text was revised by Mr. Ellerton for the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., where it was given in 1871 as "Our day of praise is done." In this form it has nothing of Blew's hymn except that the line of thought is the same. It is a hymn of great merit, and in popularity and extensiveness of use it is unequalled by any of Mr. Ellerton's original hymns except his "Saviour, again to Thy dear name we raise," which was also written for a Nantwich Choral Festival. [J. J.]

The day, O Lord, is spent. J. M. Neale. [Evening.] 1st pub. in his Hymns for Children, 1st series, 1842, No. xviii., in 4 st. of 4 l., and given as a daily hymn for use at 6 p.m. It is in a large number of hymn-books, and usually unaltered, as in Thring's Coll., 1882. In the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, No. 199, in 4 st. of 4 l., beginning, "Saviour, abide with us," is a cento, of which st. i. and iv. are by Canon W. Cooke, and st. ii. and iii., the corresponding stanzas of this hymn, by Dr. Neale. This cento is repeated in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, with the omission of the doxology. [J. J.]

The days of old were days of might. Jane E. Leeson. [The Days of Old.] Pub. in her Songs of Christian Chivalry, 1848, No. 21, in 4 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "The Days of Old." In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1396, it is altered to "The ancient days were days of might." It is a plaintive poem mourning departed greatness. It is answered by No. 22, "Yea, watch and wait a little while," which is entitled "Rejoinder," and is a poem of faith in and hope for the future. [J. J.]

The deluge, at the Almighty's call. J. Doddridge. [Safety in Christ.] Pub. in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 336, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 362, and in each case with the heading, "Noah preserved in the Ark, and the Believer in Christ." In H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, st. ii., iii. are omitted, whilst in the Presby. Ps. & Hys. for the Worship of God, 1867, st. vi., vii. are given as "Enter the ark, while patience waits." [J. J.]

The eternal gates lift up their heads. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Ascension.] Contributed to the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, No. 62, in 5 st. of 4 l. In 1858 it was published in a revised form in Mrs. Alexander's Hys. Descriptive and Devotional, No. 14, as "The Golden gates are lifted up." It is in C. U. in both forms: but the earlier is the more widely used of the two. In addition st. iii., iv. are given in the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, as "O, ever on our earthly path." [J. J.]

The fabric of nature is fair. S. Pearce. [During Sickness.] This poem, for it cannot be called a hymn, unless taken as such for private devotion, appeared in A. Fuller's Memoir of Samuel Pearce, 1800, and again in the 2nd ed., 1801, at the end of the Memoir. It is in 15 st. of 4 l., and entitled "On being prevented by sickness from attending on Public Worship." It was added to Rippon's Sch. in 1800, No. 540, Pt. ii., through which it passed into other collections. [J. J.]

The faithful men of every land. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Holy Catholic Church.] 1st pub. in her Hys. for Little Children, 1848, No. 16, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed with the words from the Apostles' Creed, "The Holy Catholic Church." In many instances where the hymn is in C. U. the following stanzas are omitted (iv., v.):—

"All members of one body vast
With Jesus for their Head,
And Sacraments whereby their souls
Are born again and fed;

"And Bishops good to order them,
And Priests to train and teach,—
This is the Holy Church, wherein
We have our places each."

The hymn in full or in part is in several collections. [J. J.]

The festal morn, my [O] God is come. J. Merrick. [Ps. cxxii. Sunday Morning.] Pub. in his Poems, 1763; and again in his Psalms Translated or Paraphrased in English Verse, 1765, p. 327, in 7 st. of 6 l. It was given in several of the older, and is still retained in a few modern collections, but usually in an abbreviated and slightly altered form, as in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872; E. Prout's Psalmist, 1878, and others. In the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, st. i.—v. were given as "With joy shall I behold the day." This form is repeated in several American collections, including The Church Hymnal, Philadelphia, 1869; and in 4 st. in the Protestant Episco. Church Hymnal, 1871. [J. J.]

The first sad hours of shame. H. Alford. [Annunciation of B. V. M.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 82, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 253. Its use is limited. [J. J.]

The foe behind, the deep before. J. M. Neale. [Easter Carol.] This carol for Easter was pub. in his Carols for Easter-tide, 1854, p. 55, in 12 st. It is found in several modern hymn-books, but usually in an abbreviated form. It reads like an Ode from a Greek Canon, and is sometimes taken for one. As Dr. Neale tr. the Canon for Easter by St. John of Damascus, "Tis the day of resurrection" in 1853, and this Carol for Easter was pub. in 1854, it is not improbable that the direct source of inspiration was the Greek of St. John, although many of Neale's carols for Easter-tide are "free imitations" of Latin Sequences (see Preface). [J. J.]

The gathering clouds with aspect dark. J. Newton. [In Time of War.] In the Rev. Josiah Bull's John Newton of Olney and St. Mary Woolnoth, 1868, p. 210, there is the following entry from Newton's Diary:—

"31st [May 31st, 1775.] The paper this evening brought an account of the commencement of hostilities in New England, and many killed on both sides. These things, I fear, are the beginning of sorrows. O that I could be suitably affected with what I see and hear."

Mr. Bull adds to this extract:—

"A few days afterwards Mr. Newton says that 'having proposed an extraordinary meeting for prayer weekly on account of the times, we began this morning; and, though we met at five o'clock, more people were present than we usually have in the evening.'"

Following this is a further extract from Newton's Diary:—

"Sunday, June 11th [1775.] In the evening I gave a brief sketch of the past and present state of the nation, with a view to engage the people to attendance on our Tuesday morning meetings by apprising them of the importance of the present crisis. Hymn 207 was composed for this service."

The hymn thus referred to was that now under notice. In the July number of the Gospel Magazine it was given in 9 st. of 4 l., headed "On the Times," and signed "Vigil." It appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, as No. 64 of Bk. ii., and with the heading, "On the Commencement of Hostilities in America." Beyond these historical and biographical associations the hymn has little value, and could not be used except under very exceptional circumstances. [J. J.]

The glorious myriads round the throne. A. Rutherford. [Saints in Glory; or All Saints Day.] This hymn is found in the 5th ed. of the Glassite or Sandemanian Christian Songs, &c., Dundee, L. Chalmers, &c., 1775, No. 69 [see Scottish Hymnody, § x. 8]; and again in later editions of the same. In its rewritten form as, "The countless multitude on high," it is found in the 1830 Appendix to the Scottish Bapt. Ps., Hys. & Spiritual Songs, No. 448. It has passed into several modern hymn-books, including Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871; Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, and others. The original is sometimes attributed to Robert Sandeman but in error. [J. M.]

The glorious universe around. J. Montgomery. [Communion of Saints.] This hymn appeared in the Leeds Sel. of Hys., Compiled and Original, &c., by E. Parsons and others, 1822, No. 829, in 5 st. of 4 l. In Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 476, it was given with a slight revision and the addition of the stanza "The earth, the ocean, and the sky" as st. ii. in its revised form of 6 st. The same text was repeated in his Original Hys., 1853. In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, st. iv.-vi. of the 1825 text are given as "In one fraternal bond of love." [J. J.]

The glory of the Spring, how sweet. T. H. Gill. [Spring.] "Composed at Whitsuntide, 1867, and 1st printed in the Golden Chain, &c., 1869," No. 112, in 9 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Divine Renewer. 'Thou renewest the face of the earth.' 'Be renewed in the spirit of your mind.'" It is an exquisite lyric, and has been somewhat widely used, but usually with the omission of one or more stanzas. In G. Britain it is in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, No. 1143; the Bapt. Hymnal, 1879, No. 816; Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884, No. 622, and others, and in America in the Songs of the Spirit, N. Y., 1871, &c. [J. J.]

The God of Abraham praise. T. Olivers. [Praise to and Trust in the God of Abraham.] Concerning the origin and first publication of this hymn somewhat conflicting accounts are in circulation. The most circumstantial is that quoted by Miller from an unauthenticated source. (Singers & Songs, 1869, p. 245):—

The son of a Wesleyan Minister said a few years ago, "I remember my father telling me that he was once standing in the aisle of City Road Chapel, during a conference in Wesley's time. Thomas Olivers, one of the preachers, came down to him and said, 'Look at this; I have rendered it from the Hebrew, giving it, as far as I could, a Christian character, and I have called on Leoni, the Jew, who has given me a synagogue melody to suit it; here is the tune, and it is to be called Leoni."

On communicating with the late Rev. Dr. Adler, the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire, we find that this account of the origin of this hymn is as near the actual facts as possible. The hymn is a free rendering, with, as Olivers puts it, as decided "a Christian character" as he could give to it, of the Hebrew Yigdal or Doxology, which rehearses in metrical form the thirteen articles of the Hebrew Creed. The Yigdal is supposed to have been composed by Daniel ben Judah, a Mediæval writer, the date of whose birth and death is unknown. The thirteen articles were drawn up by Moses Maimonides (1130-1205), the first who formulated the Dogmas of Judaism. [See article on the Dogmas of Judaism in the Jewish Quarterly Review, October, 1888.] The Yigdal is contained in the Hebrew daily Prayer Books, and is sung at the conclusion of divine service on the eve of Sabbaths and Festivals. Leoni, or rather Meyer Lyon, was chorister at the Great Synagogue, Duke's Place, Aldgate, London, at the end of the last century. Leoni sang the Hebrew Yigdal to the melody now known as Leoni. It is still chanted on Friday evening in every Synagogue of the British Empire, and at the family worship in Jewish homes (Dr. Adler's MS.)

As this hymn, both in its Hebrew form, and as a paraphrase by Olivers, is of world-wide interest, we append (1) The Hebrew Text, as used in the Jewish Synagogues, supplied by Dr. Adler, (2) A literal translation, as appended to the Hebrew text in the printed form as used in some of the Synagogues, supplied by Dr. Adler, (3) the Paraphrase by Olivers, and (4) The Melody, as sung in the Jewish Synagogues.

ii. A literal Translation of the same.

Extolled and praised be the living God, who exists unbounded by time. He is one unparalleled unity, invisible and eternal. Without form or figure,—incorporeal,—holily beyond conception. Prior to all created things,—the first, without date or beginning. Lo! He is Lord of the world and all creation, which evince His greatness and dominion.

The flow of His prophetic spirit has He imparted to men selected for His glory. No one has appeared in Israel like unto Moses; a prophet, beholding His glorious semblance. God has given the true law to His people, by the hands of his trusty prophet. This law, God will never alter nor change for any other.

He perceives and is acquainted with our secrets,—sees the end of all things at their very beginning. He rewards man with kindness according to his work; dispenses punishment to the wicked, according to his misdeeds.

At the end of days by Him appointed, will He send our Messiah, to redeem those who hope for final salvation. God, in His great mercy, will recall the dead to life. Praised be His glorious name for evermore.

iii. The Paraphrase by T. Olivers.

"PART THE FIRST.

I.

"The God of Abrah'm praise,
Who reigns enthroned above;
Antient of everlasting days,
And God of Love:
JEHOVAH GREAT I AM!
By earth and heav'n confess'd!
I bow and bless the sacred Name,
For ever bless'd.

II.

"The God of Abrah'm praise,
At whose supreme command,
From earth I rise—and seek the joys
At his right hand;
I all on earth forsake,
Its wisdom, fame, and power;
And him my only Portion make,
My Shield and Tower.

III.

"The God of Abrah'm praise,
Whose all-sufficient grace
Shall guide me all my happy days,
In all my ways:
He calls a worm his friend!
He calls himself my God!
And he shall save me to the end
Thro' Jesu's blood.

IV.

"He by Himself bath sworn,
I on his oath depend,
I shall, on eagle's wings up-borne,
To heaven ascend;
I shall behold his face,
I shall his power adore,
And sing the wonders of his grace
For evermore.

"PART THE SECOND.

V.

"Tho' nature's strength decay,
And earth and hell withstand,
To Canaan's bounds I urge my way,
At his command:
The wat'ry deep I pass,
With Jesus in my view;
And thro' the howling wilderness
My way pursue.

VI.

"The goodly land I see,
With peace and plenty bless'd;
A land of sacred liberty,
And endless rest.
There milk and honey flow;
And oil and wine abound,
And trees of life for ever grow,
With Mercy crown'd.

VII.

"There dwells the Lord our King,
THE LORD OUR RIGHTeousNESS
(Triumphant o'er the world and sin),
The Prince of Peace;
On Zion's sacred height,
His Kingdom still maintains;
And glorious with his saints in light,
For ever reigns.

VIII.

"He keeps his own secure,
He guards them by his side,
Arrays in garments, white and pure,
His spotless bride:
With streams of sacred bliss,
With groves of living joys—
With all the fruits of Paradise
He still supplies.

"PART THE THIRD.

IX.

"Before the great THREE-ONE
They all exulting stand;
And tell the wonders he hath done
Thro' all their land:

The list'n'ng spheres attend,
And swell the growing fame;
And sing the songs which never end,
The wond'rous NAME.

X.

"The God who reigns on high,
The great archangels sing,
And 'Holy, holy, holy,' cry,
'ALMIGHTY KING!
'Who Was, and Is, the same;
'And evermore shall be;
'JEHOVAH—FATHER—GREAT I AM!
'We worship Thee.'

XI.

"Before the SAVIOUR'S face
The ransom'd nations bow;
O'erwhelm'd at his Almighty grace,
For ever new:
He shows his prints of Love—
They kindle—to a flame!
And sound thro' all the worlds above,
The slaughter'd LAMB.

XII.

"The whole triumphant host,
Give thanks to God on high;
'Hail, FATHER, SON, and HOLY-GHOST,'
They ever cry:
'Hail, Abrah'm's God—and mine!
(I join the heav'ly lays),
All Might and Majesty are Thine
And endless Praise.'

The title of the tract, from which this text is reprinted, is:—

A Hymn to the God of Abraham. In Three Parts: Adapted to a celebrated Air, sung by the Priest, Signior Leoni, &c., at the Jews' Synagogue, in London: By Thomas Olivers. [Quotations of H. Scripture.] Nottingham, Printed by S. Creswell, Bookseller, &c.

Tradition says that Olivers wrote the hymn at the house of John Bakewell (p. 108, i.), at Westminster, in 1770. The copy from which we print is undated; the 4th ed. is 1772; 5th, 1772; 6th (London and Philadelphia) and 7th, 1773; 8th, Pine, Bristol, 1773. In addition to its use in an abbreviated form in varying lengths, all beginning with the first stanza, there are also the following centos:—

1. By faith we, day to day. This, in T. Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1837, is a cento in 3 st. from T. Olivers and T. Darling.

2. The God who reigns on high. This is the most popular cento of any, and is in numerous hymnals in G. Britain and America. It begins with st. x.

3. The goodly land I see. This, opening with st. vi., is in several collections in G. Britain and America.

4. Though mortal strength be weak. This cento, in the People's H., 1867, in 9 st. of 4 l. is in s. m., and is a portion of Olivers's hymn, beginning with st. v., rewritten by Dr. Littledale.

5. Though nature's strength decay. This cento, beginning with st. v., is in a few collections only, including Kennedy, 1863.

6. Where dwells the glorious King! This, in Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1839, is based on this hymn.

Christophers in his Epworth Singers, Stevenson in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1833, and Duffield in his English Hymns, 1886, enter largely upon the spiritual use of striking portions of this hymn to many individuals. Stevenson's account is specially worthy of attention. Under date of July 29, 1805, Henry Martyn, then on the eve of his voyage to India, wrote:—

"I was much engaged at intervals in learning the hymn, 'The God of Abraham praise'; as often as I son for the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, and again for his Hymns, Verses and Chants, 1876.

3. G. Rawson has a second version of Ps. 23 in his Hymns, &c., 1876, the opening stanza of which is:—

“ My Shepherd is the Living Lord,
So I can never need;
In pastures green
Still streams between
I lay me down to feed.”

4. G. Rawson's third version in his Hymns, &c., 1876, in 6 st. of 4 l., begins:—

“ The God of love my Shepherd is,
My gracious constant Guide;
I shall not want, for I am His:
In all supplied.”

This was given in Thring's Coll., 1882, with a new verse by Prebendary Thring in the place of Mr. Rawson's st. v. The latter reads:—

“ Thy grace astounds my demon foes;
True oil of joy is mine;
My cup of mercy overflows
With care divine.”

Prebendary Thring's substitute is:—

“ Thou spread'st my table 'mid my foes,
The oil of grace is mine,
My cup with mercy overflows
And love divine.”

5. Mr. Rawson, not content with his original version, supplied us with the following in MS.:—

“ God is my host, His welcome glows;
The festal oil is mine;
My board is spread, my cup o'erflows,
By care divine.”

To our mind Prebendary Thring's version is the most acceptable of the three renderings of the fifth stanza. [J. J.]

The God of nature and of grace. J. Montgomery. [Glory of God in Creation.] Pub. in his Greenland and other Poems, 1819, p. 174, in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed, “The Visible Creation.” It was repeated the same year in Cotterill's Sel., No. 331, in 8 st. of 4 l.; again in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 520, also in 8 st. of 4 l. (slightly altered); and again, in the same form, in his Original Hymns, 1853. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 338, st. i., and st. ii. ll. 1–4, are from this hymn—the rest of the cento being by Dr. Kennedy. The cento begins with the same first line as above. In addition there are in C. U. two centos from the original: (1) “Behold this fair and fertile globe” (st. ii.), and (2) “How excellent, O Lord, Thy Name.” [J. J.]

The golden gates are lifted up. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Ascension.] Pub. in her Hymns Descriptive and Devotional, &c., 1858, No. 14, in 5 st. of 4 l., and repeated in later editions. It is in C. U. in its full form, and also as “Thou art gone up before us, Lord,” beginning with st. ii. [J. J.]

The great Apostle called by grace. H. Alford. [Conversion of St. Paul.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1844, No. 79, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 250. It is given in several hymnals in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

The ground on which this day we stand. J. Montgomery. [Laying the Foundation Stone of a Church.] Written for the laying of the foundation stone of Holy Trinity Church, The Wicker, Sheffield, erected by the Misses Harrison (compilers of the Weston H.

Bk.), which took place on June 30th, 1847. It was written at the earnest request of the incumbent, though much against Montgomery's own wish, as he judged that on that subject he had written enough, and had “nothing more to say” (Memoirs, vol. vii. p. 78). The hymn was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 294, in 6 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

The head that once was crowned with thorns. T. Kelly. [Christ Perfect through Sufferings.] This hymn is sometimes given as from the 1804 ed. of his Hymns, &c. This is not so. It appeared in the ed. of 1820, in 6 st. of 4 l., and is No. 53 in the edition of 1853. It is based on Heb. ii. 10, “For it became Him, for Whom are all things, and by Whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.” It has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America, and has been tr. into Latin by H. M. Macgill, in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, as, “Spinis caput coronatum.” [J. J.]

The heart of childhood is all mirth. J. Keble. [2nd Sun. after Epiphany.] 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 17 st. of 4 l., and based upon “The Marriage in Cana of Galilee, the Gospel of the Day.” Two centos therefrom have come into C. U. (1) “The silent joy, that sinks so deep,” and (2) “Fathers may hate us or forsake.” Beyond these no other use has been made of the poem for congregational purposes. [J. J.]

The heathen perish: day by day. J. Montgomery. [Missions.] 1st printed in the Sheffield Iris newspaper, of which Montgomery was the proprietor and editor, on the 20th April, 1824, in 3 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 551, and again in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 256. It is given in comparatively few modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

The highest and the holiest place. H. Alford [St. Matthias.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hy. &c., 1844, No. 81, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 252. It is also in Kennedy, 1863, and other collections. [J. J.]

The hour of my departure's come. J. Logan. [Death anticipated.] This is hymn No. 5, in 6 st. of 4 l., of the “Hymns” appended to the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781. We have most reluctantly assigned this sweetly plaintive hymn to J. Logan rather than to M. Bruce, for reasons which are given on p. 188, ii. of this Dictionary. The hymn is in several modern hymn-books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

The hours of [day] school are over. J. Ellerton. [Evening.] Written in 1858 as a companion hymn to “Day by day we magnify Thee” (p. 262, i.), and pub. in the author's Hys. for Schools and Bible Classes (Brighton), 1858. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Mr. Ellerton changes the opening line to “The hours of day are over.” It is in C. U. both in this form and in the original [J. J.]

The King of love my Shepherd is. Sir H. W. Baker. [Ps. xxviii.] 1st pub. in the 1868 App. to H. A. & M., in 6 st. of 4 l., and from thence has passed into numerous collections, and usually in an unaltered form. Mr. Ellerton, in his annotation thereon in Notes to the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, says truly and sympathetically, "It may interest many to know that the third verse [Perverse and foolish off I strayed] of this lovely hymn, perhaps the most beautiful of all the countless versions of Psalm xxiii., was the last audible sentence upon the dying lips of the lamented author. February 12, 1877" (p. 107, ii.). A tr. of this paraphrase into Latin, by J. P. M., appeared in Blackwood's Magazine, Feb., 1887, as "Rex, Rex amoris, ut Pastoris." [J. J.]

The last and greatest herald of heaven's King. W. Drummond. [St. John the Baptist.] This in 14 lines is No. 9 of his Flowers of Zion; or, Spiritual Poems, 1623. Also in The Works of William Drummond of Hawthornden, &c., Edinburgh, James Watson, 1711. It was repeated in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 131, in 2 st. of 6 l., and again in later collections. [J. J.]

The Lord ascendeth up on high. A. T. Russell. [Ascension.] Pub. in the Hys. for Pub. Worship and Private Devotion, pub. for the benefit of the London German Hospital, Dalston, 1848, in 4 st. of 6 l. In 1854 st. i., ii., and ■ third stanza by Bp. How, were given in Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., No. 51, each stanza being in 7 l. This text was repeated in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871. See folio ed. of the same, 1881, for note thereon, and for the original text. [J. J.]

The Lord forgets His wonted grace. Anne Steele. [Divine Compassion.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 80, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. In some American hymn-books ■ part of this hymn beginning with st. iv. is given as "A mother may forgetful be," and again in others, "Forgetful, can a mother be?" [J. J.]

The Lord is King; He wrought His will. J. Keble. [Christ the King.] "Composed on the occasion of the Visit of the British Association for the Promotion of Science, to be sung in the Parish Church of St. Nicholas, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 1863," and pub. in the author's posthumous Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, in 6 st. of 4 l. In Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

The Lord is King! lift up thy [your] voice. J. Conder. [Christ the King.] Pub. in his Star in the East, &c., 1824, p. 50, in 8 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "Alleluia! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth." It was repeated in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 461; in Conder's posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 196. It is sometimes given as "The Lord is King! lift up your voice." In addition there are also centos in C. U. beginning (1) "The Lord is King! Child of the dust" (st. iii.), and "He reigns! ye saints, exalt your strains." Through these various forms this hymn is in extensive use. [J. J.]

The Lord is my Shepherd, He makes me repose. W. Knox. [Ps. xxiii.] Appeared in his Songs of Israel, &c., 1824, and again in his posthumous Poems, 1847, p. 107, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is in a few modern hymn-books only, including the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865. [J. J.]

The Lord is risen indeed. T. Kelly. [Easter.] 1st pub. in his Coll. of Ps. & Hys., &c., Dublin, 1802, No. 263, in 7 st. of 4 l., and then in his Hymns, &c., 1804, and later eds. In the latest eds. it was expanded to 8 st. as in that of 1853, the addition there being st. vi. It is found in full or in an abridged form in a large number of hymn-books. [J. J.]

The Lord Jehovah calls. P. Doddridge. [Warning to Sinners.] This hymn is No. 64, in the D. MSS. It is in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "On hearing God's Voice immediately; from Heb. iii. 13." It has no date; but being found between one hymn dated "April 10, 1735," and another "Jan. 1, 1735," we may date it circa 1736 with tolerable certainty. In Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, it was given in a slightly different form as No. 309, and with the heading changed to "An immediate Attention to God's Voice required," Heb. iii. 15. The same text and heading were repeated in J. D. Humphreys's edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1839, No. 335. [J. J.]

The Lord Jehovah reigns, His throne is built on high. I. Watts. [Ps. cxlviii.] Although given in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 169, as a version of Ps. 148, in 4 st. of 8 l., it did not appear in his Psalms of David, 1719, nor in any subsequent edition of the same. It is in somewhat extensive use. [J. J.]

The Lord, my Saviour, is my Light. Anne Steele. [Ps. xxvii.] Appeared in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. ii. p. 150, in 15 st. of 4 l., and again in D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. In Cotterill's Sel., 1810, Ps. 27, st. i., iv., v., xi., xv. were given in an altered form as "Thou Lord, our Guide, our Light, our Way." This was repeated in the 1819 ed. of the same, p. 16. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 260, Cotterill's form of the text is altered to "O Lord, our Guide, our Light, our Way." [J. J.]

The Lord of might from Sinai's brow. Bp. R. Heber. [Passiontide.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 60, in 6 st. of 7 l. as the second hymn for the 6th Sunday in Lent. It has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

The Lord of Sabbath let us praise. S. Wesley, junr. [Sunday.] Appeared in his Poems on Several Occasions, 1736, in 4 st. of 4 l.; again in J. Wesley's Coll. of Ps. & Hys., 1741; and again in Nicholl's reprint of the Poems, &c., 1862, p. 364. It was included in the Church of England collections at an early date; and is found in its original form in several modern collections, including the 1875 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 950. In some hymn-books, as Mercer and others, it is given as "Lord of the Sabbath, Thee we praise." The well-known couplet:—

"'Twas great to speak a world from nought;
'Twas greater to redeem:"

concludes this hymn.

[J. J.]

The Lord shall come! the earth shall quake. Bp. R. Heber. [Second Advent.] Of this hymn there are three forms in C. U. as follows:—

1. The Lord shall come! the earth shall quake. This, the original form of the hymn, was given in 5 st. of 4 l. in the Oct. number of the Christian Observer, 1811, as a hymn for the 4th S. in Advent. In its original form it is not in C. U. In the 1815 Appendix to Cotterill's Sel., st. i.—iii. and v. were given in an altered form as No. 240. In the 8th ed. of his Sel., 1819, No. 196, Cotterill restored st. iv. in an altered form. This form of the text was repeated in J. Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 310, and is given in several modern hymnals including the Leeds H. Bk. 1853; the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; the People's H., 1867, and others.

2. The Lord will come, the earth shall quake. This revised form of the hymn appeared in Bp. Heber's post-humous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 5. It is in extensive use in most English-speaking countries, and is by far the most popular form of the hymn. Usually the text is unaltered as in the Hy. Comp., 1876.

3. The Lord will come; the earth shall quake. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, the 1827 text was given with slight alterations, and the addition of a doxology. In Chope's Hymnal, 1857 and 1864, st. i.—iii. of Bp. Heber's 1827 text, slightly altered, were given with a new stanza beginning, "O King of Mercy, grant us power," and the doxology as in Murray's Hymnal, 1852. This arrangement of the text, with slight variations, is No. 111 in Thring's Coll., 1882.

In other hymn-books there are variations from the above forms of this hymn. These variations can be tested by the works already named. Of Bp. Heber's 1827 text rendering into Latin is given in R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, as "Adveniet Dominus! Tellus tremefacta labascat;" and another of the same text in H. M. Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed & Life, 1876: as "Deus veniet; trementes." [J. J.]

The Lord will happiness divine. W. Cowper. [Lent.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 64, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The contrite heart." It is in a large number of hymnals in G. Britain and America, and is specially suited for private use. [J. J.]

The Lord's my Shepherd, I'll not want. Scottish Psalter, 1650. [Ps. xxiii.]. We have selected this for treatment as a specimen of the so-called Scotch Version, seeing that it is the most familiar of all in Scotland; and is also included in many English and American hymnals of the present day. It is founded on the version by Francis Rous. His 1st ed. of 1641 has not been accessible, but the text of his 1643 ed. is here quoted from Dr. Laing's Letters and Journals of Robert Baillie, vol. iii., 1842.

"My Shephard is the living Lord, and he that doth me feed;
How can I then lack anything whereof I stand in need.

"In pastures green and flourishing
he makes me down to lye:
And after drives me to the streames which run most pleasantly.

"And when I feele my selfe neere lost, then home he me doth take;
Conducting me in his right paths,
even for his owne Names sake.

"And though I were even at death's doore, yet would I feare none ill;
Thy rod, thy staffe do comfort me, and thou art with me still.

"Thou hast my table richly stor'd in presence of my foe;
My head with oyle thou dost anoint,
my cup doth overflow.

"Thy grace and mercy all my daies shall surely follow me;
And ever in the house of God,
my dwelling place shall be."

In great measure this text is taken from Whittingham's "The Lord is on ly my support," 1st pub. in the One and Fiftie Psalmes of David, Geneva, 1556. After being revised by the Divines of the Westminster Assembly, it appeared in 1646 as:—

"The Lord my shephard is, I shall not want; he makes me ly
In pastures green, me leads by streams that do run quietly.

"My soule he doth restore again, and me to walk doth make
On in the paths of righteousness, ev'n for his owne names sake.

"Yea tho' I walk in deaths dark vale
I feare no evill thing,
Thou art with me, thy rod, thy staffe, to me do comfort bring.

"Before me thou a table fit'st
in presence of my foes;
My head thou dost with oyle anoint,
my cup it overflows.

"Goodnesse and mercy all my life
shall surely follow me;
And in God's house for evermore
my dwelling place shall be."

The version pub. in 1650 is a revised form of this, the variations being in st. i., st. iii. ll. 2-4, and st. iv. ll. 1, 4.

On analysing it we thus find: Of Whittingham's original version only two lines survive (ii. l. 4, iii. l. 2); of Rous, 1643, only seven lines (i. l. 2, ii. l. 4, iii. l. 2, iv. ll. 2, 3, and v. ll. 2, 4); and of the 1646 st. ii. ll. 1, 2, 4; iii., l. 1; iv. ll. 2, 3; and st. v. exactly, and st. ii., l. 3, and iv. l. 4 nearly. Zachary Boyd's various editions only furnish one line (st. i. l. 1 from his 3rd ed. 1646). The version by Sir William Mure, 1639 (in the Historie and Descent of the House of Rowallan, Glasgow, 1825, p. 185) affords the following:—

iii. 3. "For thow art with me, Lord, thy rode and staffe me comfort still."

iv. 1. "For me a table thow dost spread,
in presence of my foes;
With oyle thow dost anoint mine head
by thee my cup overflows."

Thus the only lines of the 1650 not given exactly, or nearly, in any of the above are:—

i. 3. "He leadeth me
The quiet waters by."

iv. 1. "My table thou hast furnished."

The first religious verse learnt at a mother's knee, and often the last repeated before entering "the valley of the shadow of death," its place in the Psalter makes it needless to include it in Scottish hymnals. Among collections of the present time it is found in England in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, Barry's Hymnal, 1867, the Canterbury Hymnal; and in America in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858; Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, Dutch Reformed H. Bk., 1869. It is also in full, and unaltered from the 1650 Psalter in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. [J. M.]

The morning dawns upon the place. J. Montgomery. [Passiontide.] Pub. in his Greenland and Other Poems, 1819, p. 181, in 4 st. of 8 l. and headed "Christ's Passion." In Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 223, it is headed "For Good Friday." In his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 492, Montgomery gave it in a revised form in 7 st. of 4 l., the omitted lines being st. iv. ll. 1-4.

"He dies:—the veil is rent in twain:
Darkness o'er all the land is spread:
High without tempest rolls the main:
Earth quakes: the graves give up their dead."

The 1825 text was repeated with slight variations in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 61, and is that usually given in the hymn-books both in G. Britain and America. Sometimes the text is abbreviated. [J. J.]

The morning flowers display their sweets. S. Wesley, jun. [Death.] Appeared in David Lewis's collection of Miscellaneous Poems, 1726; in Wesley's Poems on Several Occasions, 1736; and in the 1862 reprint of the same, 1862, p. 81, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Poems it is headed "Verses on Isaiah xl. 6, 8. Occasioned by the death of a Young Lady." It was also given in the Wesley Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1743, and in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 44 (ed. 1875, No. 46). It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

The morning stars in concert sang. J. Montgomery. [Praise.] Written for the Sheffield Sunday School Union Whit Monday gathering of 1849, and printed on a broad sheet for use on that occasion. In Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l. it is given "For the Opening of an Organ," for which it is well adapted. [J. J.]

The night is come; like to the day. Sir T. Browne. [Evening.] 1st pub. in the 1642 ed. of his Religio Medici, Pt. ii., § 12, and is thus introduced in speaking of sleep:—

"It [sleep] is that death which we may be literally said to die daily; ■ death which Adam died before his mortality; a death whereby we live ■ middle and moderating point between life and death. In fine so like death I dare not trust it without my prayers and an half adieu unto the world, and take my farewell in a colloquy with God:—

"The night is come; like to the day," &c. [extending to 30 lines]. "This is the dormitive I take to bedward; I need no other laudanum than this to make me sleep; after which I close mine eyes in security, content to take my leave of the sun, and sleep unto the resurrection."

From the above-named 30 lines, the cento in common use has been compiled. It is also sometimes given in an altered form as "The sun is gone: like to the day," as in Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858. Original text in The Camelot Classics, Lond., W. Scott, 1886. [J. J.]

The night is wearing fast away. [Second Advent.] This appeared anonymously in the Plymouth Brethren's Hys. for the Poor of the Flock, 1838, No. 86, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in several later collections. In The Christian Hyl. (N. D.) it is attributed to Sir E. Denny, but it is not in his Hys. and Poems, 1848 or 1870. In J. Denham Smith's New Times of Refreshing, 1888, the author's name is given as "Hoare." [J. J.]

The poorest of the poor are we. J. Montgomery. [Ragged Schools.] Under the date of 1849, Holland says in his Memoirs of Montgomery, vol. vii. p. 216:—

"We [Mr. J. Everett and himself] found that our entrance had arrested his pen in the midst of transcribing ■ hymn which he had been requested to compose for the use of Ragged Schools. On being requested to favour us with a hearing of the verses, he read what he had written, but with such an involuntary accompaniment of deep feeling that we felt more pain than pleasure in the affecting incident."

This hymn is in 9 st. of 4 l. in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853. In its full form it is not in C. U., but st. ix. vi.-viii, are given in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, No. 373, as "O God, most merciful and just." [J. J.]

The race that long in darkness pined. J. Morison. [Epiphany.] This fine hymn appeared as No. 19 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Isaiah ix. 2-8 thus:—

I.
"The race that long in darkness pin'd have seen a glorious light;
The people dwell in day who dwelt in Death's surrounding night.

II.
"To hail thy rise, thou better Sun!
the gath'ring nations come,
Joyous, as when the reapers bear the harvest-treasures home.

III.
"For thou our burden hast remov'd, and quell'd th' oppressor's sway;
Quick as the slaughter'd squadrons fell in Midian's evil day.

IV.
"Through shrieks of woe, and scenes of blood,
the warrior urges on;
The light'ning's speed, great Saviour! marks the conquest thou hast won.

V.
"To us a Child of hope is born;
to us a Son is giv'n;
Him shall the tribes of earth obey, him, all the hosts of heav'n.

VI.
"His name shall be The Prince of Peace;
the Wise, the Mighty One;
With justice shall he rule the earth from his eternal throne."

In the public worship ed. issued in that year by the Ch. of Scotland, and still in use st. iv. was omitted and st. vi. rewritten thus:—

V.
"His name shall be the Prince of Peace,
for evermore ador'd,
The Wonderful, the Counsellor, the great and mighty Lord.

VI.
"His pow'r increasing still shall spread;
his reign no end shall know;
Justice shall guard his throne above, and peace abound below."

In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron [p. 200, ii.], ascribed to Morison. The revised text of 1781 is included in full and unaltered as No. 35 in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise Hymnal, 1868, and slightly altered as No. 47 in the American Episcopal Coll., 1826, and as No. 80 in the Anglican H. Bk., 1871. Omitting st. iii. it has been included in the American Baptist Psalmist, 1843, Kennedy, 1863, the Baptist Hymnal, 1879, and other collections. It is also found in the following forms:—

1. The race which long in darkness pined. Pratt's Coll., 1829; Liverpool Coll., 1841.

2. The race that long in darkness lay. Urwick's Coll., 1829.

3. The race that long in darkness walk'd. S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852; Common Praise, 1879, &c.

4. The people that in darkness sat. A greatly altered version by the compilers of H. A. & M., 1861, (No. 61, with an added doxology). This has been included in Barry's Hymnal, 1867, and in the Hymnary, 1872. The version in the Irish Church Hymnal ed., 1869, No. 52, is st. i., ii., iv., v. of H. A. & M., and vi. of the 1781—the 1873 ed. (No. 102) giving st. v. nearly as in the 1781. In America it has appeared in the Evang. Hymnal, New York, 1880.

5. The race that long in darkness sat. Thring's Coll., 1882, No. 146, the revised text of 1781 slightly altered and a doxology by Mr. Thring added; with st. ii. 1, 3, st. iii., and st. iv. 1 as in H. A. & M.

6. To hail thy rising, Sun of life. American Prot. Epis. Hymnal, 1871, No. 27, beginning with st. ii. altered.

7. To ■■■ Child of hope is born. St. iv.—vi. included in England in Curwen's and various other children's hymn-books, and in America in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858; Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865; Dutch Reformed H. Bk., 1869; Baptist Praise Bk. 1871, and various others.

8. Lo! unto ■■■ child is born. St. iv., v. altered in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., Ox. ed., 1864, No. 417.

The text should also be compared with Watts's Hymns, 1709, Bk. i., No. 13, "The lands that long in darkness lay;" and "The people that in darkness walk'd," in Miss Leeson's Paraphrases & Hymns for Congregational Singing, 1853, No. 45. [J. M.]

The radiant morn hath passed away. G. Thring. [Afternoon.] Written in 1864, and 1st pub. in his Hys. Congregational and Others, 1866, p. 66; and again in his Hys. & Lyrics, 1874, p. 137, in 5 st. of 4 l. It was adopted as the opening hymn of the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and has since then been included in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. In H. A. & M. it is set to special music by Sir F. A. G. Ouseley, Bart. This tune is known as "St. Gabriel." [J. J.]

The roseate hues of early dawn. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Evening.] Mrs. Alexander has published this hymn in two forms as follows:—

1. The first form appeared in the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, No. 155, as:—

■ The roseate hues of early dawn,
The brightness of the day,
The crimson of the sunset sky,
How fast they fade away!
Oh! for the pearly gates of heaven,
Oh! for the golden floor,
Oh! for the Sun of Righteousness,
That setteth nevermore!

“The highest hopes we cherish here,
How fast they tire and faint!
How many a spot defiles the robe
That wraps an earthly saint!
Oh! for a heart that never sins,
Oh! for a soul washed white,
Oh! for a voice to praise our King,
Nor weary day or night.”

“Here faith is ours, and heavenly hope,
And grace to lead us higher;
But there are perfectness and peace,
Beyond our best desire.
Oh! by thy love, and anguish, Lord!
Oh! by thy life laid down!
Oh! that we fall not from thy grace,
Nor cast away our crown.”

This text was repeated in Mrs. Alexander's Legend of the Golden Prayers, &c., 1859, p. 139; and is also found in a large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America, including H. A. & M., the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., Thring's Coll., the Hy. Comp., and others. Sometimes st. ii., l. 8, reads "Nor weary day nor night," as in H. A. & M. In some collections the hymn opens with st. i. l. 5, "O! for the pearly gates of heaven," and in others with st. ii., "The highest hopes we cherish here." In Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, the full text is rendered into Latin by Lord Lyttelton (1866), as, "Aurorae roseus primigenae color."

2. Mrs. Alexander's recast of this hymn appeared in her Hys. Descriptive and Devotional. For the Use of Schools, 1858, No. iv., as:—

“The crimson of the sunset sky,
The last gold lines of day
Along the mountain's rosy verge
How fast they fade away!

O for the pearly gates of Heaven,
O for the golden floor;
O for the Sun of Righteousness
That setteth nevermore.

■ The lark that soar'd so high at dawn
On weary wing lies low,
The flowers so fragrant all day long
Are dead or folded now.

O for the songs that never cease
Where saints to angels call,
O for the tree of life that stands
By the pure river's fall.

“O'er the dull ocean broods the night
And all the strand is dark,
Save where a line of broken foam
Lies at low water mark.
O for the land that needs no light,
Where never night shall be;
O for the quiet home in Heaven,
Where there is no more sea.”

“The highest hopes we cherish here,
How fast they tire and faint,
How many a spot defiles the robe
That wraps an earthly saint!
O for a heart that never sins,
O for a soul wash'd white;
O for a voice to praise our King,
Nor weary day or night.”

In this recast it will be noticed that the portions in italics are from the original text. Taken as a whole the recast is more poetical but less adapted for public worship than the original. Its use is limited. [J. J.]

The Sabbath day has reached its close. Charlotte Elliott. [Sunday Evening.] 1st pub. in Elliott's Ps. and Hymns, 1835, in 5 st. of 3 l., with the refrain, "Smile on my evening hour." In 1839 it was enlarged to 7 st., the 3rd and 4th sts., as in modern collections, being added, and republished in her Hymns for a Week. This latter text is found in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, with the refrain lengthened to form a l. m. hymn, "Oh, smile upon my evening hour." It is given in a large number of modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

The Saviour stood on Olivet. [Ascension.] This hymn appeared in the British Magazine for July, 1832, p. 460, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "B. J. W." It was reprinted in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, No. 110, with the addition of a doxology; and again in Kennedy, 1863, in 3 st. of 8 l. We have failed to ascertain the author's name. [J. J.]

The Saviour, what ■ noble flame. W. Cowper. [Passiontide.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 55, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Jesus hastening to suffer." In its original form it is seldom used. In Cotterill's Sel., 1810, hymn No. 4, begins, "See! what unbounded zeal and love." This is composed as follows:—

St. i. "See what unbounded zeal," &c. Cotterill.
St. ii. "Good-will to man, and zeal," &c. Cowper.
St. iii. "With all His sufferings," &c. Cowper.
St. iv. "By His obedience," &c. Cotterill.
St. v. "Lord, fill our hearts," &c. Cowper.
St. vi. "With love like Thine," &c. Cotterill.

On the withdrawal of the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Sel., 1819 [see Cotterill, J., p. 263, ii.] st. v. and vi. were rewritten, and the cento in this revised form was given in the 9th ed., 1820, and is that which is in C. U. (as in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872) at the present time. It is sometimes given as "How wondrous was the burning zeal." Another cento in C. U. is "With all His sufferings full in view." This begins with st. iii. of the original. [J. J.]

The scene around me disappears. J. Montgomery. [Christmas.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 488, in 4 st. of 7 l., and headed, "A visit to Bethlehem in Spirit"; and repeated, without alteration, in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 52. In Holy Song for All Seasons (Bell & Daldy), 1869, it begins "Fair Bethlehem's star again appears." It is limited in use. [J. J.]

The secret of the Lord, From sinners, &c. [Covenant of Free Grace.] This hymn appeared in the Gospel Mag. for March, 1778, p. 151, 7 st. of 4 l., headed "Psalm xxv. 14," and signed "Ingenuus." In Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, st. v.-vii. are given as "The covenant of free grace." We have not found this extract elsewhere. [J. J.]

The shadow of th' Almighty's cloud. J. Keble. [Confirmation.] Written on Feb. 21, 1827, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 10 st. of 4 l. The cento, "Spirit of might and sweetness too," in Kennedy, 1863, begins with st. vi. of this poem, the doxology being an addition by Dr. Kennedy. In most other collections, as the Wellington College Chapel Hymns, 1860 and 1880, the doxology is omitted. [J. J.]

The sick man in his chamber. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [During Sickness.] This poem in 14 st. of 4 l., was contributed to Rutherford's Lays of the Sanctuary and other Poems, 1859, p. 89, under the title "The Sun of Righteousness." It appeared also in the same year in Mrs. Alexander's Legend of the Golden Prayers, 1858, p. 151. From it the cento "The sick man lieth weary," in Kennedy, 1863, No. 15, is taken. It is composed of st. vii., viii., xi.-xiv. [J. J.]

The Son of David bowed to die. J. Anstice. [Easter.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, pub. by his widow in 1836, No. 15, in 4 st. of 6 l. It is sometimes given in its full form, and at others abbreviated to 3 st. as in Thring's Coll., 1882. It is a spirited hymn and worthy of more attention than it has received. [J. J.]

The Son of God goes forth to war. Bp. R. Heber. [St. Stephen.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 17, in 8 st. of 4 l. It is usually given in an unaltered form as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, and is often accompanied by a fine musical setting as in the same hymnal. [J. J.]

The Son of God in mighty love. H. Bonar. [Christmas.] This hymn is given on p. 161, ii., as first appearing in Bonar's Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1857, in error. It was pub. in his Songs for the Wilderness, 1st ed., 1843, in 8 st. of 4 l., with the heading "The Word made Flesh." It was repeated in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1857, in the same form. In addition to being in C. U. in its original form, it is abbreviated as "In love, the Father's sin-less Child" (st. ii.); and "Jesus, Whom angel-hosts adore." [J. J.]

The Spirit breathes upon the word. W. Cowper. [Holy Scripture.] Included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 62, in 5 st.

of 4 l., and entitled "The Light and Glory of the Word." It is in use in its original form, and also as "A glory gilds the sacred page" (st. ii.). In the latter form it is found in a large number of hymn-books, especially in America. It is also often found as "What glory gilds the sacred page!" [J. J.]

The starry firmament on high. Sir R. Grant. [Ps. xix.] This was given in Lord Glenelg's posthumous edition of Grant's Sacred Poems, 1839, p. 28, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed with the following words:—

"This is intended as a sequel or counterpart to Addison's hymn, 'The spacious firmament.' It corresponds to the latter portion of the 19th Psalm, as Addison's does to the former."

The use of this paraphrase in its full form is confined to a few American collections. The last stanza, "Almighty Lord, the sun shall fail," is given in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, as No. 233. [J. J.]

The sun is set, the twilight's o'er. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Holy Communion.] Written in 1869 for the author's Hy. Companion, in which it was pub. in 1870 in 5 st. of 4 l. It was also included in his Two Brothers and Other Poems, 1871. Outside of the Hy. Comp. its use is limited. [J. J.]

The Sun of Righteousness appears. S. Wesley, jun. [Easter Day.] 1st pub. in his Poems on Several Occasions, 1736, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in Nicholl's reprint of the same, 1862. At an early date it appeared in the Ps. & Hys. of J. & C. Wesley, and other collections. It has passed into a limited number of modern hymn-books. The fourth stanza is noteworthy as being that upon which C. Wesley based his st. iii. in "Christ the Lord is risen to-day." The two stanzas are as follows:—

S. Wesley, jun. "In vain the stone, the watch, the seal Forbid an early rise
To Him Who breaks the gates of hell,
And opens paradise."

C. Wesley. "Vain the stone, the watch, the seal;
Christ has burst the gates of hell!
Death in vain forbids His rise:
Christ has open'd paradise."

S. Wesley's hymn was given in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 69, as Anon. In a few collections st. iii., iv. are given as "Alone the dreadful race He ran." [J. J.]

The thing my God doth hate. C. Wesley. [Holiness Desired.] This cento was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 331, in 3 st. of 8 l., and is composed of No. 1240 as st. i., and 1232 as st. ii., iii. of his Short Hymns on Sel. Passages of Holy Scripture, 1762, vol. ii. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. x., Nos. 1362, and 1354). Several times it has been pointed out that the line (st. iii., l. 5) "Soul of my soul, remain!" is evidently taken from Sir Richard Blackmore's "Ode to the Divine Being," where we have the same expression thus:—

"Best object of my love intense,
I Thee my Joy, my Treasure call,
My Portion, my Reward immense,
Soul of my soul, my Life, my All."

One can hardly think that this is accidental. This hymn is in several collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

The virtues of Thy saints, O Lord. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [St. Mark.]

1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 168, in 14 st. of 4 l. In the 1863 ed. of the Holy Year, it was divided into two parts, pt. ii. beginning with st. ix., "Taught by St. Mark, the Morians land." To this line the following note is appended in both editions:—

"St. Mark was Bishop of Alexandria in Egypt, and died there as a martyr, and the celebrated Catechetical School which produced Clement, Origen, and other famous ancient Teachers of Christianity, bore his name."

In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 357 is composed of st. viii. of pt. i., and the whole of pt. ii. It begins "Jesu, we praise Thee for his work." The text is altered. [J. J.]

The voice of one that cries. H. Alford. [Advent.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 1, in 4 st. of 4 l., for the 1st Sunday in Advent; and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, for the same Sunday. As a s. m. hymn it is an acceptable change of metre in the Advent hymns. [J. J.]

The voice that breathed o'er Eden. J. Keble. [Holy Matrimony.] Written for and first pub. in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, where it was given as No. 187, in 8 st. of 4 l. In the author's posthumous Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, it is headed "Holy Matrimony. To be sung at the Commencement of the Service," and is dated "July 12, 1857." In Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, it is rendered into Latin by Lord Lyttelton (1866) as "Ille Edeneas qui Patris Deus." The original is in extensive use, and is one of the most beautiful of modern hymns for Holy Matrimony. [J. J.]

The winds of God have changed their note. [Easter.] In a volume of verse consisting of English poems by H. Vaughan and some Latin verses by his brother Thomas, put forth by one "J. W." in 1678 as Thalia Rediviva; the Pastimes and Diversions of a Country Muse, a short poem in 14 l. was given under the motto, "The Revival." In Bell & Dally's ed. of H. Vaughan's Sacred Poems, &c., 1858, it was repeated at p. 226. From it the following lines were taken by the Rev. T. Darling, and, after being elaborated into the hymn, "The winds of God have changed their note," were given in the 1st ed. of his Hys. for the Church of England, 1855, and continued in later editions:—

"Hark! how the winds have changed their note,
And with warm whispers call thee out,
The frosts are past, the storms are gone,
And backward life at last comes on.
The lofty groves in express joys
Reply unto the turtle's voice;
And here in dust and dirt, O here
The lilies of His love appear." [J. J.]

The winds [are] were howling o'er the deep. Bp. R. Heber. [Epiphany, 4 S.] This hymn in 10 st. of 4 l. was given in the 1828 ed. of Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., as the 5th hymn for the 4th Sunday after the Epiphany, and is based on the stilling of the tempest, the Gospel for that day (St. Matt. viii. 23). The cento "How long the time since Christ began," in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and several others in G. Britain and America is from this hymn. The original in an abbreviated form is in several American hymnals, including the Plymouth Coll., 1855, and others. [W. T. B.]

The wise men to Thy cradle throne. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Epiphany.] Pub. in her Hys. Descriptive and Devotional, &c., 1858, No. 8, in 5 st. of 4 l. Although seldom found in modern collections it is in Mrs. Alexander's best style. Possibly her interpretation of the gold, frankincense, and myrrh, as symbolizing love, prayer, and repentance, has made against the general adoption of the hymn. [J. J.]

The Word of God, Who hid in flesh. Archbishop Benson. [Passiontide.] This hymn for the Thursday before Easter, and dealing with the Institution of the Holy Communion, was contributed to the Wellington College H. Bk., 1863, in 6 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the morning of that day. A slight alteration in ll. 3, 4 of st. i. would make it a most acceptable hymn for Holy Communion for use at any season. [J. J.]

The world can neither give nor take. [The Love of God.] This is a cento compiled from John Mason's Songs of Praise, pub. in 1683. It is thus composed:—

St. i., ii. From "Song of Praise," No. 23, for Peace of Conscience st. ii., iv.
St. iii. From "Song of praise," No. 23, st. iv.
St. iv., v., vi. From the same st. iv., v., and vi. altered.

In this form it is found in the Countess of Huntingdon's Collection, 1780, and later editions. Orig. text in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Mason's Songs of Praise, 1863. The 1780 text of the cento is in Lyra Brit., p. 655, where its compilation and alterations are ascribed to Lady Huntingdon. This ascription, however, is open to doubt. The cento is still in C. U. [J. J.]

The world to-day divides its year. J. S. B. Monsell. [Annunciation B. V. M.] This poem of 14 st. of 6 l. appeared in his Spiritual Songs, 1857, with the heading "Lady Day. The Incarnation of Christ, Commonly called The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary." In his Hys. of Love and Praise, &c., 1863, the hymn for "The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary" is "O Saviour! Thou this day didst make." This hymn begins with st. vii. of this poem; and of its 8 st. of 4 l. there are 18 lines from the latter part of the poem (some of them somewhat freely altered), and the rest are new. In the revised ed. of the Hy. Comp., 1876, the cento "O Saviour, Who in love didst take," is from the original (st. vii.) poem with an alteration of the opening line. It makes a much better hymn than Dr. Monsell's arrangement in his Hys. of Love and Praise as above. [J. J.]

The year begins with Thee. J. Keble. [Circumcision.] Written June 20, 1824, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 17 st. of 4 l., and headed with the text "In Whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands." In its full form it is not in C. U. It has, however, supplied the following centos to modern hymn-books:—(1) "The year begins [began] with Thee." In several collections; (2) "Art Thou a child of tears?" and "Is there a mourner true?" In a few collections only. The poem as a whole is better adapted for private devotion than for public worship. [J. J.]

Thebesius, Adam, s. of Peter Thebes or Thebesius, pastor at Seiffersdorf near Liegnitz in Silesia, was b. at Seiffersdorf, Dec. 6, 1596. After studying at the University of Wittenberg (M.A. 1617) he was instituted, on Nov. 24, 1619, as pastor at Mondschütz, near Wohlau, and in 1627 became pastor at Wohlau. Finally, in 1639, he was appointed pastor of SS. Peter and Paul, the principal church in Liegnitz, and in 1642 he also became assessor of the consistory. He d. at Liegnitz suddenly, after a double stroke of paralysis, on the evening of Dec. 12, 1652. (Koch, iii. 64; S. J. Ehrhardt's Presbyterologie Schlesiens, 1780-89, vol. iv. p. 265, &c.)

Thebesius was a diligent, faithful and popular preacher. He was much tried by family afflictions (his wife and four children predeceased him), and by the misfortunes of these times of war and pestilence. He was crowned as a poet in 1638. Mützell, 1858, prints two pieces as his. One of these, which, according to Koch, outweighs all his other poetical productions, is:—

Du grosser Schmerzensmann. Passiontide. This appears in Martin Janus's Passionale melicum, Görlitz, 1663 [Wernigerode Library], No. 239, in 7 st. of 8 l., marked as by "M. Adam Thebesius." Included in Mützell, 1858, No. 318, and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 224. Tr. as "Thou Man of Sorrows, hail!" This is a good tr. of st. i. iv., vii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 89 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. [J. M.]

Thee in the loving bloom of morn. H. Bonar. [God in all, and all in God.] Pub. in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 3rd Series, 1866, in 12 st. of 4 l. Repeated in full in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883. [J. J.]

These we adore, eternal Name. I. Watts. [Life frail, Eternity unending, or New Year.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707 (2nd ed. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 55), in 7 st. of 4 l. It is found in a large number of hymn-books in all English-speaking countries. The form of the text which is in the most extensive use is that given in the Ps. & Hymns of J. and C. Wesley in 1738, and continued in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, in which there are four slight changes from the original. The original came into use in the Church of England through M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, it begins with st. ii., "Our wasting lives grow shorter still." [J. J.]

Their hearts shall not be moved. Jane E. Leeson. [Ps. cxxv.] Pub. in her Hys. and Scenes of Childhood, 1842, No. 57, in 6 st. of 6 l. In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 174, st. i.-iii. are given in an altered form, and opening with the same first line. These alterations were made by G. Rawson. This text was repeated in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, and other collections in G. Britain and America, and is that in C. U. [J. J.]

Theoctistus of the Studium. A monk of the great monastery of the Studium at Constantinople, circa A.D. 890. Neale calls him a friend of St. Joseph. [See Greek Hymnody, § xvii. 1.] His only work known to the Church is his "Suppliant Canon to Jesus," which is found at the end of the Paracletice or Great Octoechus, a volume in eight parts, containing the Ferial Office for eight weeks. From that canon Dr. Neale compiled a cento beginning, "Ἰησοῦ ἡλυκίτατε, and pub. its translation, "Jesus, Name all names above," in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 6 st.

of 8 l. In 1867 it was included in an unaltered form in the People's H., and subsequently repeated in the Hymnary, the Parish H. Bk., and other collections. In the 1889 Suppl. Hys. to H. A. & M. there is another tr., "Sweet Saviour, in Thy pitying grace" (Lent). This was contributed thereto by the Rev. R. M. Moorsom. [J. J.]

Theodore, St., of the Studium. One of the Greek hymn-writers. He was b. at Constantinople, circa 759, and educated by his uncle, St. Plato. He was banished by Constantine, for his resolute refusal to acknowledge the Emperor's illicit marriage with Theodora, in 797. On the accession of Irene (798), he was recalled, and enjoyed the favour of the Empress. In 809 he was again banished, for the old cause, refusal to acknowledge the legitimacy of Constantine's marriage. Recalled once more in 811, he was imprisoned and again banished for his defence of the Icons, under Leo the Armenian. He was recalled a third time at the death of Leo, and d. Nov. 11, 826 (Dr. Neale adds, "in banishment"). He succeeded his uncle, St. Plato, as Hegumen of the Monastery of the Studium. See further Greek Hymnody, § xviii. 1, and Ceillier's Auteurs sacrés. [H. L. B.]

Theodosia, the nom de plume of Anne Steele.

Theophanes, St. The third in rank among the Greek ecclesiastical poets called Melodists, circa 800-850. He was a son of pious parents, and a native of Jerusalem. He may have been educated, as his elder brother Theodore was, in the Laura of St. Sabas, and thence have imbibed his taste for the composition of hymns. He was sent, with his brother, by the Patriarch of Jerusalem, to Constantinople, to remonstrate with the Emperor Leo the Armenian (reg. 813-820), against iconoclasm. They were scourged and banished from Constantinople. After the murder of Leo they were allowed to return, but were again banished. In the reign of Theophilus (reg. 829-842) they were again at Constantinople, and were then branded on their faces with some opprobrious iambic verses (from which they were afterwards known as "Grapti"), and a third time banished. After 842 Theophanes was recalled, on the triumph of the defenders of the Icons at the accession of Theodora, and was made Archbishop of Mida, where he died. The brothers are commemorated in the Greek calendar on Dec. 27. The sketch here given will be found quite different from that prefixed to the translations from Theophanes in Neale's Hymns of the Eastern Church. Dr. Neale mistook the poet for an earlier saint, Theophanes of Syngriana, who continued the Chronicon of George Syncellus. The identification of the poet with Theophanes Graptus is however universally attested by the Greek writers, and the Canon of Theophanes of Syngriana is written by Theophanes Graptus on the acrostical, Θεοφάνης μέλπει τε τὸν Θεοφάνην. (See Dict. Greek and Roman Biography; Ceillier's Auteurs sacrés; and Greek Hymnody, § xviii. 2. [H. L. B.]

Θεὸς ὦν εἰρήνης. [Χριστὸς γενῶται.]

Θεοτόκιον. [Greek Hymnody, § xvii. 2.]

There came a little Child to earth. Emily E. S. Elliott. [Christmas.] 1st pub. in 1856 in Matty's Missionary Box (Lond.: T. Nelson & Son), and since included in Miss Elliott's Chimes for Daily Service, 1880, p. 97, in 4 st. of 8 lines. It has appeared in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1868, Scottish Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876; Allon's Children's Worship, 1878, &c.; and is included in full and unaltered (save st. ii. l. 8) as No. 373 in the Scottish Free Church H. Bk., 1882. Its use is extensive. [J. M.]

There is a blessed home. Sir H. W. Baker, Bart. [Heaven anticipated.] Written in 1861, and pub. in H. A. & M. the same year as No. 182, in 4 st. of 8 l. It has passed into several collections, and is a beautiful and touching hymn. It was sung over the author's grave. In Biggs's Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, there is a rendering in Latin by Lord Lyttelton (1866) beginning "Est beatorum Domus incolarum." [J. J.]

There is a book, who runs may read. J. Keble. [Septuagesima.] Written in 1819, and pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, as the poem for Septuagesima Sunday, in 12 st. of 4 l. It is in several collections in G. Britain and America, but usually in an abbreviated form. In a few collections it begins with st. ix., "One Name above all glorious names." The original, which is very beautiful, is based upon the words, "The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made:" Rom. i. 20, with a distinct reference to Gen. i., which is the first Lesson for Septuagesima Sunday Morning. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, st. i.-v., xii., as in H. A. & M., are rendered into Latin as "Est liber, atque illum qui currit perlegat, omnem." [J. J.]

There is a calm for those who weep. J. Montgomery. [Death and Burial.] This is the opening of Montgomery's poem "The Grave," which first appeared in his Sheffield Newspaper, the Iris, June 20, 1805, in 30 st. of 4 l., and signed "Aleæus:" again in his Wanderer of Switzerland and Other Poems, 1806; and again in various editions of his Poetical Works. In the 1854 ed. of his P. Works Montgomery has dated it 1804. Various centos from this poem are in C. U. as hymns, and all but one begin with st. i. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, No. 365 is composed of st. i., ii., xvi., xix., xxv., xxvii. slightly altered; and No. 366 of st. xxviii.-xxx. It must be noted that st. xxviii. is a repetition of st. i. with the third line rewritten. The centos in American hymn-books differ from these, and from each other. [J. J.]

There is a Fountain filled with blood. W. Cowper. [Passiontide.] This hymn was probably written in 1771, as it is in Conyers's Coll. of Ps. and Hys., 1772, in 7 st. of 4 l. It was republished in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 79, with the heading "Praise for the Fountain opened." It is based on Zech. xiii. 1, "In that day there shall be a Fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness." This hymn in full or abbreviated is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries.

A well known form of this hymn is "From Calvary's Cross a Fountain flows." This appeared in Cotterill's Sel., 8th ed., 1819, No. 43, in 5 st. of 4 l., and consists of st. i.-v. very much altered. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 49, the same opening stanza is given, with a return, in most of the remaining six stanzas, to the original text. The question as to by whom these alterations were made, first in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and then in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, is answered by R. W. Dibdin, in the Christian Annotator, vol. iii., No. 76, for July 5, 1856, p. 278, where he writes concerning this hymn:—

"About 18 years ago, I was regretting to the late James Montgomery, the poet, of Sheffield, that hymns were so frequently printed differently from the originals as written by their authors. I pointed out the very hymn mentioned by ΩΩΩ (i.e. 'There is a Fountain,' &c.) in the Rev. Edward Bickersteth's Coll. ■■■ example. He smiled, and said, 'I altered it as you see it there; Bickersteth asked me to alter it.'"

We know from Montgomery's Memoirs that he altered hymns for Cotterill's 1819 ed. of his Sel. and here by his own confession we have one of those alterations. Previously to this, however, he had acknowledged having rewritten the 1819 text as in Cotterill's Sel. in these words:—

"I entirely rewrote the first verse of that favourite hymn, commencing 'There is a Fountain filled with blood.' The words are objectionable as representing a fountain being filled, instead of springing up; I think my version is unexceptional."

The two versions are:—

W. Cowper, 1771-2. "There is a Fountain filled with blood, Drawn from Emmanuel's veins;
And sinners plung'd beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

J. Montgomery, 1819. "From Calvary's cross, a Fountain flows
Of water and of blood.
More healing than Bethesda's pool,
Or famed Siloam's flood."

It should be noted also that Montgomery's alteration of st. ii., ll. 3, 4, has changed the whole meaning and character of the hymn, so far as Cowper was concerned. Cowper's original stanza reads—

"The dying thief rejoic'd to see
That Fountain in his day;
And there have I, as vile as he,
Wash'd all my sins away."

In Cotterill's Sel., 1819, Montgomery altered this to:—

"The dying thief rejoiced to see
That Fountain in his day;
And there may sinners, vile as he,
Wash all their guilt away."

In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, Montgomery rewrote it thus:—

"The dying thief rejoic'd to see
This Fountain in his day;
And there would I though vile as he,
Wash all my sins away."

In later collections ll. 3, 4 have again been altered to,

"And there may I, though vile as he,
Wash all my sins away."

In these alterations of the text the sustained confidence and rapture of Cowper are entirely lost. This may suit public taste, but it gives an entirely false view of the state of Cowper's mind when he wrote this hymn. Our positive knowledge of the poet's frequent depression of spirits and despair is painful enough without this gratuitous and false addition thereto.

Five stanzas of this hymn, taken from the commonly received text, are rendered into Latin in R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, as: "Fons est sanguine redundans." Dr. H. M. Macgill has however taken the original text for his rendering into Latin in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, where it reads:—"Sanguis en Emmauelis." In addition to Latin, various forms of the text have been translated into many other languages. [J. J.]

There is a God, all nature cries. J. Montgomery. [Nature's witness to the Existence of God.] The ms. of this hymn is dated "January 8, 1838." It was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 6, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Guilt and Folly of denying God." It must be distinguished from Miss Steele's "There is a God, all nature speaks," which is also in C. U. [J. J.]

There is a green hill far away. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Good Friday.] 1st published in her Hys. for Little Children, 1848, p. 31, in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "Suffered under Pontius Pilate, was Crucified, Dead, and Buried," of the Apostles' Creed. It is an exceedingly popular children's hymn, and is in extensive use. [J. J.]

There is a happy land. A. Young. [Heaven.] In 1838 Mr. Young was spending an evening in the house of Mrs. Marshall, the mother of some of his pupils. Among other pieces she played one air which caught his attention. On inquiry he found it was an Indian air called "Happy Land." With the air ringing in his ears he composed this hymn to it. It was sung in his classes at Nidry Street School, Edinburgh, and there heard by the Rev. James Gall, who included it in the first series of the Sacred Song Book, 1843 [see Bateman, C. H., p. 116, ii.], from whence it has passed into many hymn-books. It has been tr. into Chinese, many Indian and African dialects, &c., and in these and its original form is now to be heard in Sunday Schools all over the world. In 1876 Mr. Young included it in his The Scottish Highlands and other Poems, p. 117, in 3 st. of 8 lines. Originally st. iii. l. 8 began "We reign," but subsequently, and in his volume of 1876, Mr. Young altered it to "Reign, reign." The text of 1876 is included unaltered in the Hy. Comp., 1876, the Scottish Free Church H. Bk., 1882, and others. In the Cottage Melodies, N. Y., 1859, an imitation beginning "O send the word divine" as a hymn on Sending the Bible to the Heathen is included as No. 545. It may be noted that the Rev. John Inglis, D.D., Presbyterian missionary in the New Hebrides tr. it in 1854 (as his first attempt), into the Aneityumese language, beginning "Et eteuc incediaig." This version was a great success and continues to be a favourite. Dr. Geddie and Dr. Inglis, assisted to some extent by others, tr. 51 Psalms and Hymns (of which this is No. 23) into Aneityumese, included as part of the Noh-raiitai Itap, pub. by the Religious Tract Society of London in 1880. [Missions Foreign, p. 741, ii., § ii., iii., 2.] [J. M.]

There is a holy sacrifice. Charlotte Elliott. [The Contrite Heart.] This hymn is usually attributed to J. Montgomery on the grounds that its first appearance as far as yet traced was in the 1819 ed. of Cotterill's Sel., to which Montgomery largely contributed; and that in the 2nd series of W. Oliphant & Son's Sacred Poetry, N. D. [circa 1839], pp. 291-2, it is attributed to Montgomery. In 1836 Miss Elliott pub. her Hours of Sorrow, with an Introduction "To the Reader" which begins:—

"Not for the gay and thoughtless do I weave These plaintive strains:"

These words to our mind clearly intimate to the Reader that the entire contents of the book were by Miss Elliott. At p. 10 this hymn is given in 5 st. of 3 l., with the refrain "The contrite heart!" as in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 341. Seeing that in 1819 Miss Elliott was 30 years of age, that it is in her Hours of Sorrow as above, and that in style and metre it is the same as a large number of her hymns, and that it is not in any known work by Montgomery, we have no hesitation in ascribing it to her. It is a sweet hymn for private use, and is found in several collections. [J. J.]

There is a land of pure delight. I. Watts. [Heaven anticipated.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1707, and again in the 2nd ed., 1709, Bk. ii., as No. 66, in 6 st. of 4 l., with the heading "A prospect of Heaven makes Death easy." In the older collections very many variations in the text were introduced, but most of these have gone out of use. Of those which remain the following appeared in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 182:—

- St. i. "Infinite day" to "Eternal day."
- St. ii. "Never with'ring" to "Never fading."
- St. iii. "This heavenly" to "That heavenly."
- St. v. "Could we make" to "could we all."
- St. vi. "We but climb" to "we but stand."

The last alteration was made by Bp. Blomfield, to whom the "proofs" of the Mitre H. Bk. were submitted. Other variations are found in the text in some hymn-books: but latterly a strong reaction has taken place in favour of the original as given in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862-7. The use of this hymn has extended to all English-speaking countries, and it has been translated into many languages. In his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, R. Bingham has rendered four stanzas into Latin as, "Extat terra procul sanctis habitata beatis." This hymn is one of the earliest of Watts's compositions. A tradition exists in Southampton that it was suggested by the view of the Isle of Wight as seen from that town. [J. J.]

There is a path that leads to God. Jane Taylor. [A Child Pilgrim.] 1st pub. in the Hymns for Infant Minds, by A. and J. Taylor, 1810, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Little Pilgrim." It is one of the best examples of the writer's clear, simple, nervous style, and exceeds in popular use all of her other compositions. It is found in numerous collections for children in Great Britain and America, but often in an abbreviated form. Orig. text in the Hy. Comp. [J. J.]

There is a safe and secret place. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. xci.] Appeared in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, as his c. m. version of Ps. 91, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is very simple and tender, and is in somewhat extensive use in G. Britain and America. In the enlarged ed. of the Spirit of the Psalms, 1836, st. ii. ll. 1, 2, are altered from:—

"The least, the feeblest there may hide Uninjured and unawed;"

to

"The least, the feeblest there may bide Uninjured and unawed."

The change of thought from hiding in terror, to abiding in calm repose is a decided poetic improvement; and is certainly more in accord with the Psalmist's declaration "Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness, nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday" (vers. 5, 6), than the original reading. [Psalters, English, § xvii.]

[J. J.]

There is an everlasting home. M. Bridges. [Christ, the Rock of Ages.] Pub. in his Hys. of the Heart. For the use of Catholics, 1848, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Latus Salvatoris." In its full or abbreviated form it is in several collections, including the People's H., 1867, &c. The tune Mitford, by T. Woolsey White, was specially composed for this hymn.

[J. J.]

There is no night in heaven. F. M. Knollis. [Heaven.] Contributed to the Lays of the Sanctuary, &c., 1859, in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The One Family. Thoughts for the Feast of St. Michael and All Angels." In the edition of 1861 it is given in 5 st. of 8 l. In this form it was included in Kennedy, 1863, No. 1104. Its well-known and popular form appeared in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, where to sts. i., iii., vii., ix. of the original of 1859 are given with alterations, and an additional stanza was added by the Rev. J. Ellerton. In Thring's Coll. the orig. text of these stanzas is restored. [J. J.]

There is no sorrow, Lord, too light [slight]. Jane Crewdson, née Fox. [Divine Sympathy.] Given in her A Little While and Other Poems, Manchester, N.D. (circa 1860), p. 19. In Kennedy, 1863, it begins, "There is no grief, however light," and in one or two others the words "too light" are changed to "too slight," in the opening line. It is sometimes also given as "There's not a grief however light."

[J. J.]

There were ninety and nine that safely lay. Elizabeth C. Clephane. [The Lost Sheep.] This beautiful poem was probably written in 1868 at Melrose, where the authoress then resided, and first pub. in 1868, in a small magazine for the young, entitled, The Children's Hour, pt. ii. p. 15, in 5 st. of 6 l. Subsequently it appeared as No. 8 of the series of her hymns entitled Breathings on the Border, in the Family Treasury, 1874, p. 595. Thence it was copied into the Christian Age, May 13, 1874, where it was seen by Mr. I. D. Sankey, who set it to music and sang it with great effect at his gospel meetings. He included it in 1875 in his Sacred Songs and

Solos. It has since appeared in England, in the Hym. Comp., 1876; Thring's Coll., 1882; Bapt. Ps. & Hys. Supp., 1880, &c., and in America in the Evang. Association H. Bk., Cleveland, 1882, and other collections. It is rapidly attaining a foremost position among modern hymns. [J. M.]

There's a friend for little children. A. Midlane. [Jesus, the Children's Friend.] Written Feb. 27, 1859, and first pub. in Good News for the Little Ones, Dec., 1859. The stanzas, however, were not in the order in which they are usually found, but as follows:—

i. "There's a rest," &c.; ii. "There's a home," &c.; iii. "There's a Friend," &c.; iv. "There's a crown," &c.; v. "There's a song," &c.; vi. "There's a robe," &c.

The rearrangement produces a better sequence in the order of the stanzas, and gives greater unity to the hymn. Soon after its appearance in 1859 it was adopted by various hymn-books, and at the present time it is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. It has been set to music several times, and is the most popular of Mr. Midlane's hymns. [J. J.]

There's not a bird with lonely nest. W. B. Noel. [God the Divine Father of All.] This hymn was given anonymously in common with the rest of the hymns, in W. B. Noel's Sel. of Ps. and Hys., 1832 (ed. 1853, No. 561), in 7 st. of 4 l. It is commonly attributed to W. B. Noel, and we see no reason to doubt the authorship. It is in several collections, but usually in an abbreviated form. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 37, it is given in its full form. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christi. Latina, 1871, st. i., iii.-v., are rendered into Latin as, "Non avis est, nidum quae sola ponit eremo." [J. J.]

There's not a star whose twinkling light. J. C. Wallace. [God seen in Nature.] This hymn appeared in A Supplement to the 4th ed. of Robert Aspland's Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Unitarian Worship, London: Rowland Hunter, 1825, No. 48, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Creator seen in his Works." As it has undergone rearrangement and enlargement, we give the opening line of each stanza:—

St. i. "There's not a star whose twinkling light."
St. ii. "There's not a cloud whose dews distill."
St. iii. "There's not a place in earth's vast round."
St. iv. "Around, beneath, below, above."
St. v. "Then rise, my soul! and sing His name."

In J. R. Beard's Unitarian Collection of Hymns, &c., Lond.: J. Green, 1837, to which Mr. Wallace contributed more than sixty hymns, this hymn was given in 6 st., and is rearranged thus:—

i. "There's not a place." ii. "There's not of grass."
iii. "There's not a tempest." iv. "There's not a star."
v. "Around, beneath." vi. "Then rise, my soul."

In the new ed. of Mr. Beard's Collection, 1860, another arrangement with changes is introduced, which leaves the hymn thus:—

i. "There's not a tint that paints the rose." ii. "At early dawn." iii. "There's not of grass." iv. "There's not a tempest." v. "There's not a star." vi. "There's not a cloud." vii. "There's not a place." viii. "Around, beneath." ix. "Then rise, my soul."

From these outlines the construction of the hymns, "There's not a place," &c., and "There's not a tint," &c., as in Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., Major's Book of Praise, the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., and many others, including American collections, may easily be traced, and a reference to Aspland's and Beard's works, as above, will correct the text. In Major's Bk. of Praise for Home & School the author is said to be John Aikman Wallace, and in the Prim. Meth. S. School H. Bk., 1879, Heber, but both are in error. [J. J.]

These glorious minds, how bright they shine. I. Watts. [Martyrs.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1707, Bk. i., No. 41, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Martyrs glorified. Rev. vii., 13, &c." In this form it is rarely used.

In the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases of 1745, it is given as No. xliii. As from this recast the modern form of Watts's hymn has mainly come, we give it in full, indicating the alterations in italics:—

"These glorious Minds how bright they shine!
whence all their white Array?
How came they to the happy Seats of everlasting Day.

"Lo! these are they, to endless Joy,
From Suff'rings great, who came;
And wash'd their Raiment in the Blood of CHRIST, the dying LAMB.

"Now they approach ■ holy God,
and bow before his Throne;
With Hearts enlarg'd to serve him still,
and make his Glory known.

"His Presence fills each Heart with Joy;
tunes ev'ry Mouth to sing;
By Day, by Night, the blest Abodes with glad HOSANNAS ring.

"Hunger and Thirst are felt no more,
nor Suns with scorching Ray:
God is their Sun, whose cheering Beams diffuse eternal Day.

"The Lamb shall lead his heav'nly Flock where living Fountains rise;
And Love divine shall wipe away
the Sorrows of their Eyes."

The author of this recast is unknown. This text was repeated, with slight changes, in the Draft of 1751, but in the authorized issue of the Trans., &c., of 1781, it underwent considerable changes. It opens, as No. lxvi., as:—

"How bright these glorious spirits shine!"

and is derived thus:—

St. i. Watts altered in 1781 Draft; st. ii. from 1745 altered; st. iii. new in 1781; st. iv. from 1745, with sacred courts, for "blest abodes"; st. v. from 1745 unaltered; st. vi. new in 1781, based on Watts's st. vi.; st. vii. new in 1781.

This text has been in authorized use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years. It is also in extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and sometimes with a doxology added thereto, as in H. A. & M. It has been tr. into several languages, e.g. into Latin, by H. M. Macgill, in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, as:—"Animæ clare lucentes." The 1781 version is claimed by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), as his. His indebtedness, however, to the recast of 1745 was very great. Its right designation is I. Watts, 1709; Scottish Draft Trs. and Paraphs., 1745; and W. Cameron, 1781. From the 1781 text we also have:—

1. A numbered company behold. By Jane E. Leeson, in her Paraphrases and Hys., 1853. This is a recast.

2. How bright these saints in glory shine. In T. Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1857-88.

3. How bright those saints in glory shine. In J. B. Whiting's Hys. for the Church Catholic, 1882.

These altered versions of the text are not in extensive use. [J. J.]

They are all gone into the world of light. H. Vaughan. [Death and Burial.] Pub. in his Silex Scintillans, 2nd ed. 1655; in H. F. Lyte's reprint of the same, 1858; and in Grosart's Fuller Worthies, 1868. In some collections, as in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, it begins as above; but in the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, it opens, "Dear, beauteous Death! the jewel of the just." [J. J.]

They come, God's messengers of love. R. Campbell. [St. Michael and All Angels.] Written for, and 1st pub. in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 94, in 6 st. of 4 l. In 1852 it was republished, with alterations, in Murray's Hymnal, No. 79. This was repeated in several collections, including H. A. & M., 1861, and has become the accepted form of the hymn. Sometimes it is abridged to four stanzas. It is the most widely adopted hymn for St. Michael and All Angels of any in the English language. [J. J.]

They whom the Father giveth. J. Conder. [Perseverance.] 1st pub. in his Star in the East, 1824, p. 54, in 8 st. of 6 l., and based upon John x. 27, 28, "My sheep hear My voice . . . and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish." In 1856 it was repeated in his Hys. of Praise, Prayer and Devout Meditation, pp. 155-57. In its original form it is not in common use, but st. v., vi., vii. and viii., beginning, "Christ watches o'er the embers," were given in Kennedy, 1863. This arrangement is adapted to "Burial," or a service associated therewith. [J. J.]

They whose course on earth is o'er. J. M. Neale. [Communion of Saints.] 1st pub. in his Hymns for the Young, 1844, No. xv., in 9 st. of 4 l., and based on the article of the Creed "The Communion of Saints." In 1866, Dr. Neale revised the text on his death-bed, and made alterations in st. iv., v. and ix. This text was pub. in his posthumous Original Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclesiastical Verses, 1866, p. 64, and given there for All Souls at Vespers. The same text was repeated in the People's H., 1867; and, with the omission of st. ii., in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. [J. J.]

Thilo, Valentin, s. of Valentin Thiel or Thilo [b. Jan. 2, 1579, at Zinten, became diaconus of the Altstadt Church in 1603, and d. of the pestilence at Königsberg in 1620], diaconus of the Altstadt Church in Königsberg, was b. at Königsberg, April 19, 1607. He matriculated in 1624 at the University of Königsberg ■ a student of theology, but devoted himself more especially to the study of rhetoric. When the Professor of Rhetoric, Samuel Fuchs, retired in 1632, he recommended Thilo as his successor. The post was, at Thilo's desire, kept open for two years, during which he pursued his studies at the University of Leyden. On returning to Königsberg, he graduated M.A. there on April 20, 1634, and was thereafter installed as Professor of Rhetoric. During his 28 years' tenure of office he was five times elected as dean of the Philosophical Faculty, and twice as Rector of the University. He d. at Königsberg,

July 27, 1662. (Koch, iii 202; K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 135, &c.)

This was a great friend of Heinrich Albert (p. 35, i.) and of Simon Dach (p. 276, ii.), and was with them a member of the Königsberg Poetical Union. He was the author of two text books on Rhetoric, pub. in 1635 and 1647. Some of his separately printed occasional poems are noted by Goedeke as above. His hymns were almost all written for various Festivals of the Christian Year. They are as a rule short and vigorous, and are somewhat akin to those of Dach. They appeared principally in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, Elbing, 1642-44 [Berlin Library], and in the New Preussisches vollständiges G. B., Königsberg, 1650 [Hamburg Library]. A list of their first lines is printed in the Altpreussische Monatschrift, Königsberg, 1899, p. 308, where evidence is given to show that they are by the younger Thilo, and not, as has sometimes been said, by the father.

The only hymn by Thilo tr. into English is:—

■ Ernst, o Menschenkinder. Advent. This is a fine hymn founded on St. Luke iii. 4, 5, and was 1st pub. in pt. i., Elbing, 1642, of the Preussische Fest-Lieder, as No. 8, in 4 st. of 8 l., entitled "On the Fourth Sunday of Advent. Parate viam Domino," and marked as by "Valentinus Thilo." Thence in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, as above, p. 27, also marked as by "Valentinus Thilo." In the Hannover G. B., 1657, st. iv. was re-written, and this form, passing through Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, is found in most recent German hymn-books. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 15, both forms of st. iv. are given. Laumann, in Koch, viii. 8, considers st. iii. the finest, and thinks that it may have been suggested by the remembrance of his beloved sister (wife of Pastor Kuhn, of the Rossgart Church in Königsberg), who d. of the pestilence on Aug. 16, 1639, and as a picture of her character. Tr. as:—

1. O sons of men, your spirits. This is a good tr. of st. i.-iii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 35 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. Ye sons of men, in earnest. This is a good tr. of the original form, by Miss Winkworth, as No. 84 in her C. B. for England, 1863. It is repeated, omitting st. iii., in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, No. 121. [J. M.]

Thine for ever! thine for ever! C. Wordsworth, Bp. of Lincoln. [Confirmation.] Contributed to the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns. It was originally in 4 st. of 8 l., but in later editions of the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns it is given in 6 st. of 4 l. In 1871 it reappeared in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, in 8 st. of 4 l., this last being the authorized text. [J. J.]

Thine, Jesus, Thine. A. Midlane. [Self Dedication to Jesus.] A birthday hymn written on the author's 36th birthday, Jan. 23, 1861, and pub. in the Things Old and New magazine, in May the same year. It has passed into a large number of what are commonly known as "Gospel hymn-books," including The Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873; The Little Flock, 1880, and others. [J. J.]

Thine, O Lord, our quiet trust. B. H. Kennedy. [Ps. lxx. Harvest.] This version of Ps. 65 appeared in Dr. Kennedy's Psalter in 1860, p. 95, in 10 st. of 4 l. From this Dr. Kennedy compiled the hymn, "Thou Who hearest human prayer," and included it in his Hymno. Christ. 1863, No. 1290. The same text was again altered for the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 579, where it is given as "O Thou God, Who hearest prayer, All shall come to Thee, that live." This opening line is borrowed from J. Conder (p. 256, ii.). [J. J.]

Thine, Thine for ever, blessed bond. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Confirmation.] Written in 1870 for the 1st ed. of the Hymnal Companion, and included therein in 1870. Also in his work The Two Brothers, 1871, p. 240, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is designed "To be sung after the benedictory prayer, 'Defend, O Lord, this Thy servant with Thy heavenly grace, that he may continue Thine for ever,'" &c. It is a hymn of much beauty, and is very popular for Confirmations. [J. J.]

Think gently, and gently speak. J. S. B. Monsell. [Gentleness.] Appeared in his Spiritual Songs, 1857 (ed. 1875, p. 31), in 10 st. of 4 l., and based on the Gospel for the 5th S. after Epiphany. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, No. 760, st. i., ii., viii.-x. are re-written, and given as "Gently think, and gently speak." In this form it is a serviceable hymn for congregational use. [J. J.]

Think gently of the erring [one]. [Gentleness.] This hymn is given in the American Universalist's Hys. for Christian Devotion, by Adams and Chapin, Boston, 1846, No. 813, in 2 st. of 8 l., and headed "Compassion for the Sinning." It is there given as by "Miss Fletcher," a writer to us otherwise unknown. It is in the awkward metre of 7.6.8.6.8.6.8.6. As usually found in modern American hymn-books it is in c.m. as given in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, No. 1062, in 4 st. of 4 l.; but sometimes with the omission of st. iii. [J. J.]

Think, O ye who fondly languish. W. B. Collyer. [Death Anticipated.] Given in his Coll., 1812, No. 839, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled "Consolation." In modern hymnals st. i., iii. are usually given as in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872. [J. J.]

Think on the mercy of our God. Emily Garnier. [Christmas.] This was given in The Child's Christian Year, 1841, in 3 st. of 6 l., and is found in several hymn-books. From the Sedgwick mss. we find that it was written in 1835 by Emily Garnier, daughter of the Dean of Winchester, who died at the age of 14, and that it was printed in The Child's Christian Year from ms. [J. J.]

This day and at this very hour. E. Caswall. [Birthday.] Pub. in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 245, in 18 st. of 4 l., and headed "Prayer written on my Thirtieth Birthday" (i.e. July 15, 1844), and again, after revision, in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 268. A cento compiled from this poem was given in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 227, "Thee, Jesu, suffering, crucified," as a hymn for Lent, for which it is specially suitable. [J. J.]

This day the Light of heavenly birth. Bp. W. W. How. [Sunday.] Contributed by Bp. How to the 1st ed. of Morell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1854, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in the enlarged ed., 1864, as "This day by Thy creating word." Of this hymn we have the following forms:—

1. The original as above.
2. The 1864 revised text as above.

3. No. 138 in Chope's Hymnal, 1864, with the 1st st. of the original, and the remaining stanzas with many alterations. This version is repeated in Thring's Coll., 1882, No. 69. It has not the author's authority.

4. "This day by Thy creative word." In addition to slight alterations this text has Bp. Ken's dox. added thereto. It was given in the Hymnary, 1878, No. 14.

5. "This day at Thy creating word." The Church Hymns text by Bp. How, 1871, No. 6, with the doxology from H. A. & M., 1861, No. 3. This is the authorized text of the hymn.

When these various forms of the text are taken together, it is found that the hymn is in extensive use. [J. J.]

This is the day of Light. J. Ellerton. [Sunday.] Written in 1867, and 1st pub. in Hymns for Special Services and Festivals in Chester Cathedral, a collection of 100 hymns, compiled by Dean Howson, 1867 (Chester: Phillipson & Golder), No. 51, in 5 st. of 4 l. From thence it passed into the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M.; the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and several other hymnals both in G. Britain and America. It is a good hymn, and ranks in popularity with some of the best of Mr. Ellerton's compositions. [J. J.]

This is the day the Lord hath made, He calls the hours His Own. I. Watts. [Easter-day, or Sunday.] First pub. in his Psalms of David, 1719, p. 309, as a paraphrase of a portion of the 118th Psalm, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Hosanna; the Lord's Day; or, Christ's Resurrection, and our Salvation." It is in several collections and usually unaltered and unabbreviated. In the Hymnary, 1872, the cento "Behold the tomb its prey restores," is composed of st. i. new, ii.-iv. from this by Watts, slightly altered, and v. new. It is a successful hymn for Sunday. [J. J.]

This is the day the Lord hath made, Let young and old rejoice. J. Montgomery. [Sunday.] Written for the Sheffield Red Hill Sunday School Anniversary, held on March 26, 1820, and printed on a fly sheet for that occasion. It was repeated in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 467; and again in his Original Hys., 1853, No. 95, in 5 st. of 4 l. Its use is limited. [J. J.]

This is the feast of heavenly wine. W. Cowper. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 53, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Welcome to the Table." Sometimes it begins with st. ii., "O bless the Saviour, ye that eat." See also "Bless'd with the presence of their God." [J. J.]

This is the month, and this the happy morn. J. Milton. [Christmas.] This is the opening of Milton's great ode On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, written in his 21st year (1629), and found in all editions of his Works. It has an introduction of 4 st. of 7 l., and then follows the hymn proper in 27 st. of 8 l. beginning, "It was the winter wild." From this the following centos have come into C. U. :—

1. It was the winter wild (st. i.). This is in a few collections.

2. No war or battle's sound (st. iv.). This is in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, and other American hymn-books.

3. Ring out ye crystal spheres (st. xiii.) In Hys.

for the Use of the University of Oxford in St. Mary's Church, 1872, and others.

4. This is the month, and this the happy morn. From the Introduction to the hymn. [J. J.]

This livelong night we've toiled in vain. J. Keble. [Obedience.] This poem is dated 1821. It appeared in the Christian Year, 1827, for the 5th Sun. after Trinity, and based upon a portion of the Gospel of the day, St. Luke v. 1, &c. In its original form it is unknown to modern hymnals, but a cento compiled from its 15 st. is given in the New Cong., 1859, beginning with st. i. [J. J.]

This night I lift my heart to Thee. W. Bartholomew. [Evening.] Written in 1854 for Costa's oratorio Eli, and 1st pub. therein, 1854, as one of the songs appropriated to the Prophet Samuel. It is in 3 st. of 4 l., and was repeated in the New Cong. H. Bk., 1859, and subsequently in other collections. [J. J.]

This place is holy ground. J. Montgomery. [Death and Burial.] This is the opening line of Verses to the Memory of the late Richard Reynolds, of Bristol. London: Longmans, 1816. The Verses were given in three parts: i. "The death of the Righteous"; ii. "The Memory of the Just"; iii. "A Good Man's Monument." Mr. Reynolds was an eminent Quaker philanthropist; and the "Monument" referred to was the Society for the relief of persons in necessitous circumstances which was founded in Bristol in his memory. The Verses were repeated in all the complete editions of Montgomery's Works. The cento given in several American hymn-books, including Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, is composed of st. i., ii., vii.-ix. of pt. i. on "The death of the Righteous." The original is in 9 st. of 6 l. [J. J.]

This stone to Thee in faith we lay. J. Montgomery. [Laying Foundation-stone of a Church.] Written in 1822, for the laying of the Foundation-stone of Christ Church, Attercliffe, Sheffield, and sung at that ceremony on Oct. 30, 1822. It was printed in Montgomery's newspaper, the Sheffield Iris, Nov. 5, 1822, together with a full account of the whole ceremony. Subsequently it was pub. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 474, his Poetical Works of various dates, and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 300, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is in extensive use in its full or in an abbreviated form, and also as:—

1. Here, in Thy Name, eternal God. This form is given in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and others.

2. When in these courts we seek Thy face. In the American Sabbath H. Bk., Andover, 1858, it begins with an altered form of st. ii.

3. Within these walls let heavenly peace. In the American Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882. Of this text in 3 st., st. i. is from J. Newton's "O Lord, our languid souls inspire," Olney Hys., 1779, Bk. ii., No. 43, st. v., and st. ii. and iii. are from this hymn by Montgomery.

4. When here, O Lord, we seek Thy face. This form of the text, beginning with st. ii., is in the Plymouth Coll., U.S.A., 1855. [J. J.]

Tholuck, Friedrich August Gottreu, D.D., was b. at Breslau, March 30, 1799. He studied at the Universities of Breslau and Berlin. He became a University lecturer (Privatdocent) at Berlin, in Dec. 1820, and extraordinary professor of Theology there in April, 1823 (D.D. from Berlin in 1826). In Nov., 1825, he was appointed ordinary professor of Theology at Halle, and entered on his duties at Easter, 1826. He was also appointed as University preacher, in 1839, and a member of the Magdeburg consistory in 1829. From Michaelmas, 1828, to Easter, 1829, he officiated as chaplain to the German Embassy at Rome, having gone there on sick leave. Otherwise, after 1826, his life was spent almost entirely at Halle. He d. at Halle, June 10, 1877 (Koch, vii. 26; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xv., 560, &c.).

Tholuck was a celebrated preacher, and a great linguist. He is perhaps best known to English readers by his Commentaries, as e.g. on Romans, 1824 (5th ed., 1856; Eng. tr. 1833 and 1836); on St. John's Gospel, 1827 (7th ed., 1857; Eng. tr. 1859); on the Sermon on the Mount, 1833 (6th ed., 1872; Eng. tr. 1834 and 1837, improved in 1859); on Hebrews, 1836 (3rd ed., 1850; Eng. tr. 1842); on the Psalms, 1843 (2nd ed., 1873; Eng. tr. 1856), &c.; and by his Die Lehre von der Sünde und dem Versöhner, oder die wahre Weihe des Zueifers, 1823 (enlarged ed., 1825; 9th ed., 1871), a sort of religious novel which has powerfully influenced many, e.g. C. J. P. Spitta (see p. 1075, ii.), and has been tr. into English (two versions as Guido and Julius, &c., by J. E. Ryland, 1836, and by J. Martin, 1855), French, Danish and Swedish. He was a many-sided man, who exercised a great and far-reaching influence over his contemporaries, and who, by the charm of his personal character as well as by his learning, drew crowds of students to Halle, not only from all parts of Germany, but also from Great Britain and America. His hymns appeared in his Stunden christlicher Andacht, Hamburg, 1839-40. This is a volume of Meditations which has passed through many eds. in German (8th ed., 1870), and of which at least two versions have appeared in English (as Hours of Christian Devotion), a partial one by the Misses Ann and Catherine H. Dunn, pub. at London in 1853; 2nd ed., 1857; and a nearly complete one by Dr. R. Menzies, pub. at Edinburgh in 1870 (partly pub. as The Circle of Human Life, Edinburgh, 1847; and completed by The Circle of the Church's Life, London, 1873). In the preface to the Stunden, Tholuck mentions that he had intended to introduce many quotations from German hymns and sacred poems, but could find few that suited his purpose. So he adds "I therefore myself spoke in the language of poetry; only a very few of the verses here interspersed are by other authors." He does not however indicate in any more definite way which are his own compositions. A few pieces from this work have passed into American-German hymn-books, and they have all been tr. by Dr. Menzies, as above. Two which have not been traced earlier, and are probably original, may be here noted, viz. :-

i. Einst wird's geschehn, dass auf der Erde. Second Advent. In his Stunden, 1840, p. 470, as the conclusion of Med. lxvii., in 2 st. of 8 l., and founded on Rom. viii. 21-23. Tr. as :-

A day will dawn when from on high. In full by Dr. R. Menzies, 1870, as above, p. 551. Included by H. L. Hastings in his Songs of Pilgrimage, Boston, U. S., 1880, No. 193.

ii. O süßser Hirte, unter deinem Stabe. The Good Shepherd. In his Stunden, 1840, p. 151, in 7 st. of 4 l., as the conclusion of Med. xxvi., and founded on Ps. xxiii. The trs. are (1) "O gentle Shepherd, guided by Thy hand, My soul hath found her everlasting rest." By Miss Dunn, 1853, as above, p. 110. (2) "O gentle Shepherd by Thy staff directed." By Miss Burlingham in the Bristol Herald, Sept., 1865, p. 143, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. (3) "Beneath Thy gentle care, O Shepherd dear." By Dr. R. Menzies, 1870, as above, p. 178.

Thomas, Joan, of Rhaiadar, was b. 1730, in the parish of Myddfai, Carmarthenshire. One of the first books he ever read was the Welshman's Candle. He published several books of hymns. The first appeared in 1771, The Golden Treasury, a translation of C. H. von Bogatzky, with some of Dr. Watts's hymns. In the same year appeared Flewyrchiadan Grás, and in 1788, Caniadan Sion. His hymns in all number about 200. He was a minister with the Independents in Radnorshire, but d. at Carmarthen in 1804. [W. G. T.]

Thomas, Joan Elizabeth. [Conder, Joan E.]

Thomas of Aquino, confessor and doctor, commonly called The Angelical Doctor, "on account of," says Dom Gueranger, "the extraordinary gift of understanding wherewith God had blessed him," was born of noble parents, his father being Landulph, Count of Aquino, and his mother a rich Neapolitan lady, named Theodora. The exact date of his birth is not known, but most trustworthy authorities give it as 1227. At the age of five he was sent to the Benedictine monastery at Monte Cassino to receive his first training, which in the hands of a large-hearted and God-fearing man, resulted in so filling his mind with knowledge and his soul with God, that it is said the monks themselves would often approach by stealth to hear the words of piety and wisdom that fell from the lips of the precocious child when conversing with his companions. After remaining at Monte Cassino for seven years, engaged in study, St. Thomas, "the most saintly of the learned, and the most learned of the saints," returned to his family, in consequence of the sack of the abbey by the Imperial soldiers. From thence he was sent by his parents to the University of Naples then at the height of its prosperity, where, becoming intimate with the Fathers of the Dominican Order, and being struck, probably, by the devotedness and ability of the Dominican Professors in the University, he was induced to petition for admission into that order, though he was at that time not more than seventeen years of age. This step gave such umbrage to his mother that she caused him to be waylaid on the road to Paris (whither he was being hurried to escape from her), and to be kept for more than two years in prison, during which time his brothers, prompted by their mother, used all means, even the most infamous, to seduce him from religion.

At last the Dominicans' influence with the Pope induced the latter to move the Emperor Frederick to order his release, when St. Thomas was at once hurried back to Naples by the delighted members of his order. He was afterwards sent to Rome, then to Paris, and thence to Cologne. At Cologne his studies were continued under the celebrated Albertus Magnus, with whom, in 1245, he was sent by the Dominican Chapter once more to Paris for study, under his direction, at the University. In 1248, when he had completed his three years' curriculum at Paris, St. Thomas was appointed, before he was twenty-three years of age, second professor and "magister studentium," under Albertus, as regent, at the new Dominican school (on the model of that at Paris), which was established by the Dominicans in that year at Cologne. There he achieved in the schools a great reputation as a teacher, though he by no means confined himself to such work. He preached and wrote; his writings, even at that early age, were remarkable productions and gave promise of the depth and ability which mark his later productions. His sermons also at that time enabled him to attract large congregations into the Dominican church. In 1248 he was directed to take his degree at Paris; and though his modesty and dislike of honour and distinction made the proposal distasteful to him, he set out and begged his way thither; but it was not until October 23rd, 1257, that he took his degree. The interval was filled by such labours in writing, lecturing, and preaching, as to enable him by the time he became a doctor to exercise an influence over the men and ideas of his time which we at this time can scarcely realise. So much was this the case that Louis IX. insisted upon St. Thomas becoming a member of his Council of State, and referred every question that came up for deliberation to him the night before, that he might reflect on it in solitude. At this time he was only thirty-two years of age. In 1259 he was appointed, by the Dominican Chapter at Valenciennes, a member of a Commission, in company with Albertus Magnus and Pierre de Tarentaise, to establish order and uniformity in all schools of the Dominicans. In 1261 the Pope, Urban IV., immediately upon his election to the Pontifical throne, sent for St. Thomas to aid him in his project for uniting into one the Eastern and Western Churches. St. Thomas in that same year came to Rome, and was at once appointed by the General of his Order to a chair of theology in the Dominican College in that city, where he obtained a like reputation to that which he had secured already at Paris and Cologne. Pope Urban being anxious to reward his services offered him, first the Patriarchate of Jerusalem, and then a Cardinal's hat, but he refused both. After lecturing, at the request of the Pope, with great success at Viterbo, Orvieto, Perugia, and Fondi, he was sent, in 1263, as "Definitor," in the name of the Roman Province, to the Dominican Chapter held in London. Two years later Clement IV., who succeeded Urban as Pope, appointed him, by bull, to the archbishopric of Naples, conferring on him at the same time the revenues of the convent of St. Peter ad Aram. But this appointment he also declined. In 1269 he was summoned to Paris—his last visit—to act as "Definitor" of the Roman Province at the General Chapter of his Order, and he remained there until 1271, when his superiors recalled him to Bologna. In 1272, after visiting Rome on the way, he went to Naples to lecture at the University. His reception in that city was an ovation. All classes came out to welcome him, while the King, Charles I., a mark of royal favour bestowed on him a pension. He remained at Naples until he was summoned, in 1274, by Pope Gregory X., by special bull, to attend the Second Council of Lyons, but whilst on the journey thither he was called to his rest. His death took place in the Benedictine Abbey of Fossa Nuova in the diocese of Terracina, on the 7th of March 1274, being barely forty-eight years of age.

St. Thomas was a most voluminous writer, his principal work being the celebrated Summa Theologiae, which, although never completed, was accepted as such an authority as to be placed on a table in the council-chamber at the Council of Trent alongside of the Holy Scriptures and the Decrees of the Popes. But it is outside the province of this work to enlarge on his prose works. Though not a prolific writer of hymns, St. Thomas has contributed to the long list of Latin hymns some which have been in use in the services of the Church of Rome from his day to this. They are upon the subject of the Lord's Supper. The best known are:—

Pange lingua gloriosi Corporis Mysterium; Adoro te devote latens Deitas; Sacris sollemniis juncta sint gaudia; Lauda Sion Salvatorem; and Verbum supernum prodiens. The 1st, 3rd, and 5th of these are found in the Rom. Brev., the 2nd, 4th, and 5th in Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae; the 4th in the Rom. Missal; all of them appear in Daniel; the 2nd and 4th in Mone; and the 2nd, 4th, and 5th in Königsfeld. Various other hymns have been attributed to St. Thomas, but in error, as:—O esca viatorum, (p. 828, i.); and the Ut jucundas cervus undas (q.v.). See also Mone, No. 199, and ii. p. 257.

Of these hymns numerous translations have been made from time to time, and amongst the translators are found Caswall, Neale, Woodford, Morgan, and others. Each of these hymns is annotated in this work under its original first line. [D. S. W.]

Thomas of Kempen, commonly known as Thomas à Kempis, was b. at Kempen, about fifteen miles north-west of Düsseldorf, in 1379 or 1380. His family name was Hammerken. His father was a peasant, whilst his mother kept a dame's school for the younger children of Kempen. When about twelve years old he became an inmate of the poor-scholars' house which was connected with a "Brother-House" of the Brethren of the Common Life at Deventer, where he was known as Thomas from Kempen, and hence his well-known name. There he remained for six years, and then, in 1398, he was received into the Brotherhood. A year later he entered the new religious house at Mount St. Agnes, near Zwolle. After due preparation he took the vows in 1407, was priested in 1413, became Subprior in 1425, and d. according to some authorities on July 26 and others on Aug. 8, 1471. Much of his time was occupied in copying Missals, Breviaries, and other devotional and religious works. His original writings included a chronicle of the monastery of St. Agnes, several biographies, tracts and hymns, and, but not without some doubt as to his authorship (for a résumé of the controversy see Enc. Brit., 9th ed.) the immortal Imitatio Christi, which has been translated into more languages than any other book, the Bible alone excepted. His collected works have been repeatedly published, the best editions being Nürnberg, 1494, Antwerp in 1607 (Thomae Malleoli à Kempis . . . Opera omnia), and Paris in 1649. An exhaustive work on St. Thomas is Thomas à Kempis and the Brothers of the Common Life, by S. W. Kettlewell, in 2 vols., Lond., 1882. In this work the following of his hymns are tr. by the Rev. S. J. Stone:—

i. From his Vita Boni Monachi, ii. :—

1. Vitam Jesu Christi. Imitation of Christ. Be the life of Christ thy Saviour.
2. Apprehende arma. Christian Armour. Take thy weapons, take thy shield.
3. Sustine dolores. Resignation. Bear thy sorrows with Laurentius.

ii. From his Cantica Spiritualia :—

4. O dulcissime Jesu. Jesus the most Dear. O [Child] Christ Jesu, closest, dearest.

5. O Vera summa Trinitas. Holy Trinity. Most true, most High, O Trinity.

6. Adversa mundi tolera. Resignation. Bear the troubles of thy life (p. 23, i.).

7. O qualis quantaque laetitia (p. 845, ii.). Eternal Life. O joy the purest, noblest.

Of these trs. Mr. Stone has repeated Nos. 5, 6, and 7 in his Hymns, 1886, and No. 4 in a rewritten form as "Jesus, to my heart most precious," in the same. [See also Index of Authors and Translators.] Pastor O. A. Spitzzen has recently published from a ms. circa 1480, ten additional hymns by Thomas, in his "Nalezing op mijn Thomas à Kempis," Utrecht, 1881. Six of these had previously been printed anonymously by Mone. The best known are "Jerusalem gloriosa" (p. 579, ii.), and "Nec quisquam oculis vidit" (p. 793, i.). We may add that Thomas's hymn-writing is not regarded as being of the highest standard, and that the modern use of his hymns in any form is very limited. [J. J.]

Thompson, Alexander Ramsay, D.D., a minister of the American Reformed Dutch Church, was b. at New York, Oct. 22, 1812, and graduated at the New York University, 1842, and the Princeton Seminary, 1845. He was Reformed Dutch Pastor at various places, including East Brooklyn, St. Paul's (R. P. D.), New York City, North Reformed Church, Brooklyn (1874), and others. Dr. Thompson was joint editor of the Reformed Dutch Hys. of the Church, N. Y., 1869, and the Hys. of Prayer and Praise, 1871. He has contributed original hymns and trs. from the Latin to these collections, to Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and to the Sunday School Times, Philadelphia, 1883, &c. His trs. will be found in the Index of Authors and Translators. In addition two original hymns:—

1. O Thou Whose filmed and fading eye. Good Friday.

2. Wayfarers in the wilderness. Life a Pilgrimage. are in the Hys. of the Church, 1869, with the signature "A. R. T." [F. M. B.]

Thompson, Henry John, M.A., s. of John Northon Thompson, was b. at Kingsclere, Hants, 1830; was Tylney Exhibitioner Queen's College, Oxford, 1850; and graduated B.A. in 1853, M.A. in 1856. On taking Holy Orders, he became curate of St. Mary's, Warwick. In 1859 he was instituted to the vicarage of Dodford, near Weedon, Northants. In 1878 he became chaplain to the R.A. garrison at Weedon, and in 1879 was appointed rural dean of Weedon. Mr. Thompson has written, "Christ, we come before Thee" (Holy Matrimony), to be sung at the commencement of the office of Holy Matrimony. It was 1st printed, with music by the Rev. T. R. Matthews, by Novello & Co.; and again, together with the same music, in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 238, in 4 double st. of 8 l. Mr. Thompson has also written a few hymns for "Harvest," "Confirmation," and other occasions, and some carols. These, with other poetical pieces, were pub. in his Hymns and other Verses, and form a pleasing volume. He d. Dec. 12, 1887. [J. J.]

Thompson, Jemima. [LuKe, Jemima.]

Thou art coming, O my Saviour.
Frances R. Havergal. [Advent.] Written at

Winterdyne, Nov. 16, 1873. 1st printed in the Rock newspaper, 1873, and then as one of Parlane's leaflets, 1874; her Under the Surface, 1874; and Life Mosaic, 1879. It is one of the most popular of Miss Havergal's hymns. Sometimes it is divided, when Pt. ii. begins with "Thou art coming; at Thy Table." Miss Havergal's tune St. Paul was written to this hymn; but she preferred to hear it sung to Dr. Monk's tune Advent, as in H. A. & M. [Hav. MSS.] [J. J.]

Thou art gone to the grave! but we will not deplore thee. Bp. R. Heber. [Death and Burial.] Was written in December, 1818, on the death of his daughter, aged six months. (Memoirs, vol. i. p. 501.) So far as is at present known its earliest publication was in the Rev. Carus Wilson's Friendly Visitor, for August, 1824. It is also found, with variations, in st. iii. in a vol. of Sacred Poetry, Edin.: W. Oliphant, n.d. In 1827, the text, in the Friendly Visitor, was included in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, p. 150. It is rendered into Latin by E. Bingham in his Hymn. Christ. Latina, 1871, as "Mortuus inter resides, et absens." [J. J.]

Thou art [hast] gone up on high, To mansions, &c. Emma Toke, née Leslie. [Ascension.] Written in 1851, and contributed anonymously to the S. P. C. K. Hymns for Public Worship, 1852, No. 61, in 3 st. of 4 l.; and again in later editions of the same collection. Its use is very extensive in most English-speaking countries. The text is seldom altered, a marked instance to the contrary, however, being the Hymnary, 1872. In H. A. & M., 1861, st. i., l. 2, reads "To realms"; but in the 1875 ed. the original reading "To mansions" is restored.

In 1871, Mrs. Toke slightly altered the text for the Rev. R. Judd's S. S. Liturgy & H. Bk., No. 62 (Halifax), and wrote at the same time the following additional verse, which is given in Judd's collection as the first:—

"Thou hast gone up on high!
Triumphant o'er the grave,
And captive led captivity,
Thy ransomed ones to save.
Thou hast gone up on high!
Oh! help us to ascend,
And there with Thee continually,
In heart and spirit blend."

This stanza is practically unknown to compilers, and is not in general use. [J. J.]

Thou biddest, Lord, Thy sons be bold. T. H. Gill. [Liberty of the Children of God.] The second hymn written by the author, composed in 1845, and 1st pub. in G. Dawson's Ps. & Hys., 1846, No. 115, in 9 st. of 4 l. In 1853 it was included in Hedge & Huntington's Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S.A., No. 507, with the omission of st. ii., viii., and was thus introduced to the American collections. It was revised for the author's Golden Chain, &c., 1869, and included as No. 132 in 4 st. of 8 l., with the heading "The glorious Liberty of the Children of God." In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, No. 633, st. ii. of the 1869 text is omitted. The American Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, contains two centos from this hymn, (1) "We stand unto our God, how near!" and (2) "Thou biddest, Lord, Thy sons be bold." [J. J.]

Thou boundless Source of every good. [Divine Guidance desired.] This hymn is a cento, and as such it appeared in T. Cotterill's Sel. of Ps. & Hys. 1st ed. 1810, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "For the right improvement of the dispensations of Providence." It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819 and 1820; Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833; and again in a great many modern hymn-books, including the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys. &c. It is sometimes abbreviated to 4 st. Of the original cento st. ii., iii., iv., vi. are from O. Heginbotham's (p. 506, i.) "Father of mercies, God of love," which was No. 9 of his Hymns, &c., Sudbury, 1794, but in an altered form; and st. i. and v. are probably by T. Cotterill. [J. J.]

Thou child of man, fall down. H. Alford. [Adult Baptism.] 1st pub. in G. Stevenson de M. Rutherford's Lays of the Sanctuary, and Other Poems, 1859, p. 7, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Lines for an Adult Baptism." In 1868 it was included by the author in the revised ed. of his Poetical Works, p. 256, with the simple heading "1846," the date of its composition, and probably of a special Baptism for which it seems to have been composed. In Kennedy 1863, No. 771, "Servant of God, go forth," is composed of st. iv.-viii. It is a hymn of some merit, and might be divided with ease into two parts; the first to be sung before, and the second after, the administration of the Holy Rite. [J. J.]

Thou dear [great] Redeemer, dying Lamb. J. Cennick. [The Holy Name Jesus.] Pub. in his Sacred Hymns, &c., Pt. iii., 1743-44, p. 143. It was included in the 1875 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk. as "Thou great Redeemer, dying Lamb." In the English Moravian H. Bk., 1886, it is given in 3 st., and begins with the original first line. [J. J.]

Thou didst leave Thy throne and Thy Kingly crown. Emily E. S. Elliott. [Christmas.] 1st privately printed, 1864, for the use of the choir and schools of St. Mark's Church, Brighton, and first pub. by the authoress in the Church Missionary Juvenile Instructor, 1870, p. 188; and again in her Chimes for Daily Service, 1880, p. 99, in 5 st. of 6 l. It was repeated in Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865; Allon's Children's Worship, 1878; Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881; Church Praise, 1883, &c., and is given in full, and almost in the 1880 text as No. 374 in the Scottish Free Church H. Bk., 1882. [J. M.]

Thou glorious Sun of Righteousness. Charlotte Elliott. [Sunday Morning.] This hymn is in C. U. in two forms, and both are by Miss Elliott. The first form is in 3 st. of 4 l., beginning as above, and appeared in the "Third Thousand" of H. V. Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1839, No. 291. This text is repeated in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and others. The second form is that given in Miss Elliott's Morning and Evening Hys. for a Week, 1839, p. 3, in 11 st. of 4 l. Of this form of the text st. i., ii. and xi. are the preceding hymn, the remaining stanzas being new. This form is repeated, sometimes abbreviated, in Brown-Borthwick's Select Hys., &c., 1871; the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Snepp's Songs of

Grace and Glory, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

Thou God art ■ consuming fire. J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] Written in 1818, and first printed on a broadsheet with Montgomery's "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," and "What shall we ask of God in prayer?" for use in the Nonconformist Sunday schools in Sheffield. It was included in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 279, in 4 st. of 8 l.; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 481, with alterations, and in 8 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 68, without further alteration. This last is the text usually given in the hymnals. [J. J.]

Thou God of glorious majesty. C. Wesley. [Death and Judgment.] 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i., in 6 st. of 6 l., and entitled "An Hymn for Seriousness" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 316). In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., as No. 58, and from thence has passed into many collections. The hymnals of the Church of England however received their text from M. Medan, who included the hymn in his Ps. & Hymns, 1760, and appended to the lines:—

"Give me to feel their solemn weight,
And tremble on the brink of fate
And wake to Righteousness," and a long note, thus introduced:—

"I am glad of an Opportunity to rescue this significant Word [Fate] out of the Hands of the Infidels, who use it together with Luck, Fortune, Chance, Destiny, to promote their favourite Scheme, of excluding the particular Providence of the Wise Disposer of all Events from the Government of the Affairs of Man."

He then proceeds to justify the use of the word by first giving its derivation from the Latin, Fatum, and then quoting classical authorities for its use in the same sense as that in which it is used by Wesley. Fate is that which God has spoken concerning man. In this verse of the hymn that word is, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Hence its truth.

Concerning the second stanza, "Lo! on a narrow neck of land," much controversy has arisen as to whether or not it was written "on a narrow neck of land" at the Land's End, Cornwall. Mr. T. Jackson, in his Life of C. Wesley, asserts that there is no proof of its having been written under these circumstances; and Dr. Osborn, the learned editor of the Poetical Works of J. & C. Wesley, is silent on the subject. Failing to find elsewhere any evidence of value in favour of the common belief, we must join the above authorities in pronouncing against it.

The literary merits of this hymn won the praise of Montgomery:—

"Thou God of glorious majesty!" is a sublime contemplation in another vein; solemn, collected, unimpassioned thought, but thought occupied with that which is of everlasting import to a dying man, standing on the lapse of a moment between 'two eternities.'" Christian Psalmist. Introductory Essay.

An abbreviated form of this hymn is found in a few collections including Major's Book of Praise, &c., No. 65. It is composed of st. iii.-vi., beginning "O God, mine inmost soul convert." The same stanzas, considerably altered, are given as "O God, Thy saving grace impart," in Kennedy, 1863. [J. J.]

Thou knowest, Lord, that they.
J. Anstice. [In Temptation.] First privately printed in Hys. by the Rev. Joseph Anstice, M.A., Lond.: 1836, and afterwards pub. in The Child's Christian Year, 1841, in 5 st. of 6 l., and appointed for the 19th S. after Trinity. In 1863 Dr. Kennedy gave in his Hymno. Christ., an altered version, beginning "Help, Lord, Thou know'st that they," in 4 st., the fourth stanza being omitted. [J. J.]

Thou, Lord, delights Thy saints to own.
J. Allen. [Holy Baptism.] This imperfect line is the opening of a hymn out of which a fairly good lyric has been made. The original, by J. Allen, appeared in A Collection of Hymns for the use of those that seek, and those that have Redemption in the Blood of Christ. Kendal: Printed by Thomas Ashburner, MDCCCLVII, No. 114, as follows:—

- "At Baptism.
- "1. Thou, Lord, delights Thy saints to own
 In Thy appointed ways;
 This ordinance with blessings crown,
 And tokens of Thy grace.
 - "2. Jointly we raise our hearts to Thee,
 Thy powerful Spirit breathe;
 And let this little infant be Baptiz'd into Thy death.
 - "3. O let Thy unction on him rest,
 With grace his heart bedew;
 And write within his tender breast
 Thy name and nature too.
 - "4. If Thou shouldst quickly end his race
His place with Thee prepare;
 Or if Thou lengthen out his days,
 Continue still Thy care.
 - "5. Thy faithful soldier may he prove,
 Begirt with truth divine;
 A sharer of Thy dying love,
 A follower of Thine."

In 1782 Thomas Beck included it in an altered form in his Hymns Calculated for the Purposes of Public, Social, and Private Worship, &c., Rochester, 1782, as No. 105, thus:—

- "Dedicating the Child to God in Baptism.
- "1. Thou, Lord, art pleased Thy saints to own,
 And wilt their children bless;
 This ordinance now with mercy crown,
 And tokens of Thy grace.
 - "2. Jesus, we raise our souls to Thee
 [And, as in orig. above.]
 - "3. O let Thy unction on him rest,
 Thy grace his soul bedew;
 [And, as in orig. above.]
 - "4. [As above with l. 1 "race" to "days;" and
 l. 3, "days" to "race."] "
 - "5. [As above with l. 2 "Begirt," to "Girded," and l. 3 "sharer of" to "sharer in."] "
 - "6. A new stanza, being:—
 "Plant us into His death,
 That we His life may prove;
 Partakers of His cross beneath, from Hys. on The Lord's Supper, by J. and C. Wesley, 1745, No. cxlviii. 4, rewritten in c.m. as:—
 And of His crown above."

- "Lord, plant us all into Thy death,
 That we Thy life may prove;
 Partakers of Thy cross beneath,
 And of Thy crown above."

In 1833, this cento took the form in which it is known in modern hymn-books, appearing in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, No. 351, as "Jesus, we lift our souls to Thee," in 5 st., beginning with the second stanza altered, by Allen, and concluding with the stanza, also altered as above, by Wesley. In the Irish Church Hymnal, st. 4, as in Bickersteth, is omitted. The cento should therefore be subscribed "J. Allen, C. Wesley, T. Beck, and E. Bickersteth."

[W. T. B.]

Thou, Lord, through every changing scene.
P. Doddridge. [God, the Dwelling-place of His People.] This is No. 21 in the D. mss., in 6 st. of 4 l.: is headed "God the Dwelling-place of His people thro' all generations," from Ps. xc. 1, and dated May 30, 1736. It was given in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 51; and again with slight differences in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. It has passed into several modern hymnals. [J. J.]

Thou that art the Father's Word.
H. Alford. [Christmas, or the Epiphany.] This is No. 18 in Dean Alford's Psalms and Hymns, 1844; and No. 32 in his Year of Praise, 1867, in 4 st. of 6 l. and the refrain, "Hail, Lord Jesus." In the Irvingite Hys. for the use of the Churches, 1864, No. 21, begins "Songs of glory fill the sky," and is signed in the Index "J. E. L." (i.e. Jane E. Leeson). In the 1871 ed. of that collection it is repeated as No. 121, and in the Index is set forth as by "Dean Alford (altered)." It is really a cento in 3 st. of 8 l. and a refrain, of which ll. 3 and 7 of st. i., the whole of st. ii. and the refrain, are from Dean Alford's hymn. [J. J.]

Thou thrice denied, yet thrice beloved.
J. Keble. [St. Peter.] Written May 15, 1825, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 18 st. of 4 l. A cento beginning with an alteration of st. i. to "Lord, thrice denied yet thrice beloved," is sometimes found in modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Thou Who art enthroned above.
G. Sandys [Ps. xcii.] Pub. in his Paraphrase upon the Psalmes of David, 1636; again in his Paraphrases upon the Divine Poems (with which the Psalms were incorporated), 1638; and again in later eds. of the same. It is in 46 lines. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, 24 lines, beginning with the first, were given as No. 237. This cento was repeated in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853; the New Cong. H. Bk., 1859, and others. Another cento is in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. It consists of 18 lines from the original paraphrase, and begins with the first line. [J. J.]

Thou Who didst for Peter's faith.
Ann Gilbert, née Taylor. [The Divine Guide.] Pub. in Collyer's Coll., 1812, Nos. 893 and 894, in two parts. Pt. i. in 8 st. of 6 l., entitled "Divine Guidance in the Changes of Life"; and Pt. ii., "When the vale of death appears," in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled "Divine support in Death," and each signed "A." Both parts are in C.U. [J. J.]

Thou Who didst on Calvary bleed.
J. D. Burns. [Lent.] Appeared in his work of hymns and prayers, The Evening Hymn, 1857, No. 16, in 6 st. of 5 l., and headed "Out of the depths." Orig. text in Hy. Comp., 1876, with "There deliverance," &c., for "Their deliverance," &c., in st. iv. l. 2. [J. J.]

Thou Who dost my life prolong.
J. Fawcett. [Morning.] Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1782, No. 51, in 14 st. of 4 l., and headed, "A Morning Hymn." In a few American hymn-books, including Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, it is abbreviated to 5 st. [J. J.]

Though all men's eloquence adorned.

T. Randall. [Love.] First appeared as No. 11 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of 1 Cor. xiii., in 14 st. of 4 lines. In the Draft of 1781, No. 49, slightly altered, and beginning "Though perfect eloquence adorn'd." Thence with st. iv. and st. iii. l. 2, rewritten in the public worship ed. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), the original is ascribed to T. Randall, and the alterations in 1781 to W. Cameron. In the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hymns, 1867, the text of 1781 was included as Nos. 281-283, No. 282 beginning "Love suffers long, love envies not" (st. v.), and No. 283 beginning with st. x., "Here all our gifts imperfect are." It is also found in the following forms:—

1. Though every grace my speech adorn'd, beginning with st. i. altered in the Springfield Coll., 1835, No. 247 (American).
2. Love still shall hold an endless reign, st. ix., x., xii.-xiv., in Rorison's Hymns, 1860, No. 161.
3. "This Love shall hold an endless reign", st. ix., x., xiii., xiv. in Twickenham Chapel Coll., 1845, p. 64.
4. Faith, hope, and love, now dwell on earth, st. xiii., xiv. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 104, and in America in Adams & Chapin's Coll., 1846, No. 387. (Compare Watts's Hymns, Bk. 1., Nos. 133, 134.) [J. M.]

Though holy, holy, holy, Lord. J. Montgomery. [Holy Trinity.] This appeared in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 12, in 7 st. of 4 l., and based on Isaiah vi. 3. It is given in a few modern hymn-books in G. Britain and America, but is not found in Montgomery's Original Hys., 1853. [J. J.]

Though troubles assail, And dangers affright. J. Newton. [Security in God.] Written in February, 1775, for the service at the Great House at Olney (Bull's Life of Newton, 1868, p. 208), and first pub. in the Gospel Magazine, Jan. 1777, p. 42, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "Jehovah-Jireh, i.e. The Lord will provide, Gen. xxii. 14." It was included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 7, with the title "The Lord will provide." It is usually given in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

Thought on thought in solemn train. E. Caswall. [Man Perfect, Fallen, Redeemed.] This poem of 222 lines appeared in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 232, as "Musing in a solemn train," in 7 parts as follow:—i. Nature in Paradise; ii. Nature Fallen; iii. Nature Comforted; iv. Nature Redeemed; v. Nature Warned; vi. Nature Restored; vii. Nature Glorified. In his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 259, it was repeated in full with the same divisions, and the general heading "Human Nature before and since the fall." In the Hymnary, 1872, two centos were given from it as (1) "Hail, O Thou of grace divine"; (2) "If thou wouldest life attain." The latter of these has been repeated elsewhere. [J. J.]

Thousands, O Lord of hosts, this day. J. Montgomery. [During Sickness.] Pub. in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 183, in 8 st. of 4 l., and again in the Weston H. Bk., compiled by the Misses Harrison of Sheffield, 1834, No. 198. It was republished in Montgomery's Poet's Port- folio, 1835, p. 255, with the title "'The Prisoner of the Lord.' A Sabbath Hymn for a Sick Chamber;" and the addition of two stanzas ("I, of such fellowship bereft," and "O make Thy face on me to shine"). This text was repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 183. It is in C. U. in Great Britain and America usually in an abbreviated form; and also as follows:—

1. Many, O Lord, my God, to-day. In T. Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1874-87.
2. Thousands, O Lord, of souls this day. In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, in 3 st.
3. The dew lies thick upon the ground. In the American Church Pastorals, 1864, st. vi.-viii. [J. J.]

Three in One, and One in three. G. Rorison. [Holy Trinity.] The ms. of this hymn was sent in 1849, with seven others, to R. Campbell for insertion in his St. Andrews Hymnal, but they were not included therein, although the mss. were retained and now form part of the c. mss. The heading of this special ms. is "Trinity Sunday, An imitation and combination of the Roman Breviary 'Tu Trinitatis Unitas,' and 'Jam sol recedit igneus.'" The hymn was first pub. in Dr. Rorison's Hys. and Anthems, 1851 (Preface dated "All Saints Day, 1850"), p. 97, as follows:—

"Three in One and One in Three!
Ruler of the earth and sea!
Hear us while we lift to Thee
Holy chant and psalm.

"Light of lights! with morning-shine
Lift on us Thy light divine;
And let charity benign
Breathe on us her balm.

"Light of lights! when falls the even
Let it sink on sin forgiven;
Fold us in the peace of heaven;
Shed a vesper calm.

"Three in One, and One in Three!
Darkling here we worship Thee:
With the Saints hereafter we Hope to bear the palm."

In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, it was repeated with "Dimly here," &c., for "Darkling here," &c., in st. iv., l. 2. This text was given in H. A. & M., 1861, with the additional change of "Shed a vesper calm," "to shed a holy calm." Other, but slight, alterations have been introduced in modern hymn-books, including:—

1. Ever blessed Trinity. In the 1880 Appendix to the Bap. Ps. & Hys.
2. Holy Godhead, One in Three. In the Roman Catholic Hys. for the Year 1867.
3. Lord of love! deep and free. In J. Hunter's Hys. of Faith and Life, Glasgow, 1889.

It must be noted that most editors of hymnals have misquoted st. ii. by printing the compound substantive "morning-shine" as two words, followed by a semicolon, an oversight which destroys the whole point and meaning of the stanza, and goes far towards spoiling the entire hymn. The text, usually as in H. A. & M., is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. The H. A. & M. text is also tr. into Latin by G. S. Hodges, and is given in his County Palatine, 1876, as, "Una Trina Deitas." [J. J.]

Threlfall, Jeannette. This sweet singer of hymns and other sacred poems, was born in the town of Blackburn, Lancashire, on 24th March, 1821. She was the daughter of Henry Threlfall, wine merchant, and

Catherine Eccles, the latter a somewhat noticeable local family, who disapproved of the marriage. She was early left an orphan, and became the "beloved inmate" (as a memorial-card bears) of the households successively of her uncle and aunt Bannister and Mary Jane Eccles, at Park Place, Blackburn, and Golden Hill, Leyland; and later of their daughter, the late Sarah Alice Aston, and her husband, of Dean's Yard, Westminster. Latterly she met with a sad accident that lamed and mutilated her for life, and a second rendered her a helpless invalid. She bore her long slow sufferings brightly, and to the end retained a gentle, loving, sympathetic heart, and always a pleasant word and smile, forgetful of herself. Throughout she was a great reader, and at "idle moments" threw off with ease her sacred poems and hymns. These were sent anonymously to various periodicals. They were first collected and issued in a small volume, entitled Woodsorrel; or, Leaves from a Retired Home. By J. T., Lond.: J. Nisbet, 1856.* There are thirty-five poems in all. They do not appear to have won any notice except among friends. Years later she selected 15 pieces from Woodsorrel and added 55 others, and pub. them as Sunshine and Shadow. Poems by Jeannette Threlfall. With Introduction by the Lord Bishop of Lincoln [Wordsworth], Lond.: (Hunt), 1873. A 3rd ed. (1880) is entitled New Edition. With In Memoriam from the Sermons of the Dean of Westminster and Canon Farrar. The two memorial tributes are very tender and sweet. A few words from each will be acceptable. Dean Stanley, amongst other things finely put, says:—

"If I may speak of one who has been taken from these precincts within the last week: when a life, bright and lovely in itself, is suddenly darkened by some terrible accident; when it has been changed from the enjoyment of everything to the enjoyment of nothing; when year by year, and week by week, the suffering, the weakness, have increased; and when yet, in spite of this, the patient sufferer has become the centre of the household, the adviser and counsellor of each; when there has been a constant stream of cheerfulness under the severest pain; when there has been a flow of gratitude for any act of kindness, however slight; when we recall the eager hope of such an one, that progress and improvement, not stagnation or repose, will be the destiny of the newly-awakened soul; then, when the end has come, we feel more than ever that the future is greater than the present."

So Canon Farrar:—

"A few days ago there passed away a resident of this parish, a member of this congregation, whose name many of the poor well know; who was their friend and their benefactor; who had the liberal hand and the large heart; who helped the charities of this parish with a spontaneous generosity which is extremely rare; whose purse was ever open, unasked, to every good work of which she heard; whose delicate mind was alive with Christian sympathy; who had pre-eminently

"The faith, through constant watching wise,
And the heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathise."

Bp. Wordsworth praises her poems, and observes:—

"It is an occasion for great thankfulness to be able to point to poems, such as many of those in the present volume, in which considerable mental powers and graces of composition are blended with pure religious feeling, and hallowed by sound doctrine and fervent devotion."

* The title Woodsorrel was chosen from its name in Italian "Alletula," and because Fra Angelico puts it, with daisies, at foot of the Cross in one of his most lovely paintings.

The sacred poems are not very well wrought, nor at all noticeable in thought or sentiment. But all through one feels that a sweet spirit utters itself. She d. on 30th November, 1880, and was interred at Highgate Cemetery, 4th Dec., 1880. [A. B. G.]

Of Miss Threlfall's hymns those in C. U. include:—

1. Hosanna! loud hosanna, The little children sang, Palm Sunday.
2. I think of Thee, O Saviour. Good Friday.
3. Lo, to us a child is born. Christmas.
4. Thou bidd'st us seek Thee early. Early Piety.
5. We praise Thee in the morning. Morning.
6. When from Egypt's house of bondage. Children as Pilgrims.

These hymns are all taken from Miss Threlfall's Sunshine and Shadow, 1873. No. 2 was written during a dangerous illness, at her dictation, by a friend. No. 1 is the most widely used of her compositions. [J. J.]

Thresher, Mrs. J. B., a nom de plume of Mrs. Van Alstyne, q. v.

Thrice happy saints who dwell above. S. Browne. [Sunday.] Appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1720, No. 122, in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Lord's Day." In its full form it is not in C. U. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, st. iv., v., vii., viii. were given as No. 283 as "Frequent the day of God returns." This cento has been repeated in a large number of hymnals in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Thrice happy souls, who born from heaven. P. Doddridge. [Walking with God.] This is No. 37 in the D. MSS. in 8 st. of 4 l., headed, "Of spending the day with God," from Prov. xxiii. 17, and dated "March 27, 1737." In J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 79, it was given with several changes in the text, and with the heading altered to "Walking with God; or, being in His fear all the day long." Proverbs xxiii. 17; and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 93. This text again differs from both the above. That however in C. U. is from Orton. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 445, st. v., vi., iv. and iii., are given as, "Lord, we must labour, we must care." Both this and the text as in Orton are in several collections. [J. J.]

Thring, Edward, M.A., brother of Godfrey Thring, was b. at Alford, Somerset, on Nov. 29 1821, and educated at King's College, Cambridge; B.A. 1844. He won the Porson Prize in 1843, and was elected a Fellow of King's College in 1844. He became Head Master of Uppingham School in 1853, and retained the same to his death on October 22, 1887. He was the author of several important works for schools and colleges, of a volume of Sermons pub. in 1858, and two other vols. in 1886, and of Borth Lyrics, 1881. He was joint editor with Herr David of the Hymn Book for the use of Uppingham and Sherborne Schools, 1874, and to it he contributed some trs. from the German (see Index of Authors and Translators). Two of his original hymns are in Thring's Coll. (1) "A day of work is done" (For the Sick), and (2) "Death shut the gates of Paradise" (Death). His great success as the Head Master of a Public School has become a matter of history. [J. J.]

Thring, Godfrey, B.A., s. of the Rev. J. G. D. Thring, of Alford, Somerset, and brother of the Rev. E. Thring (see above), was b. at Alford, March 25, 1823, and educated at Shrewsbury School, and at Balliol College, Oxford, B.A. in 1845. On taking Holy Orders he was curate of Stratfield-Turgis, 1846-50; of Strathfieldsaye, 1850-53; and of other parishes to 1858, when he became rector of Alford-with-Hornblotton, Somerset. R.D. 1867-76. In 1876 he was preferred as prebend of East Harptree in Wells cathedral. Prebendary Thring's poetical works are:—Hymns Congregational and Others, 1866; Hymns and Verses, 1866; and Hymns and Sacred Lyrics, 1874. In 1880 he pub. A Church of England Hymn-book Adapted to the Daily Services of the Church throughout the Year; and in 1882, a revised and much improved edition of the same as The Church of England Hymn Book, &c. (for details concerning which see England, Hymnody, Church of, p. 331, § vi.). A great many of Prebendary Thring's hymns are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators); the rest in C. U. include:—

1. Beneath the Church's hallowed shade. Consecration of a Burial Ground. Written in 1870. This is one of four hymns set to music by Dr. Dykes, and first pub. by Novello & Co., 1873. It was also included (but without music) in the author's Hys. & Sacred Lyrics, 1874, p. 170, and in his Coll., 1882.
2. Blessed Saviour, Thou hast taught us. Quinquagesima. Written in 1866, and first pub. in the author's Hys. Congregational and Others, 1866. It was republished in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. It is based upon the Epistle for Quinquagesima.
3. Blot out our sins of old. Lent. Written in 1862, and first pub. in Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. It is in several collections in G. Britain and America, and has been specially set to music by H. H. Pierson (Novello & Co.), and in other hymnals.
4. Bowed down with sorrow, sin, and shame. Lent. Written in 1880, and first pub. in his Coll., 1882, as = Processional during Lent. It is of more than usual merit.
5. Bulwark of a mighty nation. Church Conferences, &c. Written in 1876, and first pub. with music by the Rev. S. M. Barkworth (Novello), 1877, and by many others. In the author's Coll., 1882.
6. Dead to life, yet loath to die. Invitation to the Weary. Written in 1862, and first pub. in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1864; and again in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; and in his Coll., 1882, and in other hymnals.
7. For mercy, Lord, I cry. Lent. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, and his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874.
8. From the eastern mountains. Epiphany. Written in 1873, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882. It is a Processional for Epiphany, and is found in several collections.
9. Gird we, soldiers, for the battle. Purity. Written for the White Cross Army, and pub. in the Bath and Wells Diocesan Magazine, July, 1884.
10. God the Father, God the Son, Holy Spirit, Three in One. Litany for Close of Service. Written in 1871, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882, and in other hymnals.
11. Grant us, O our heavenly Father. Growth in Grace desired. Written in 1881, at the request of the Rev. Preb. W. Michell, Diocesan Inspector of Schools for Bath and Wells, to set forth the growth of religion through the ordinances of the Church, and first pub. in the author's Coll., 1882.
12. Great Architect of worlds unknown. Holy Trinity. Written in 1872, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and again in his Coll., 1882.
13. Hail, sacred day of earthly rest. Sunday. Written in 1863, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, in 13 st. of 4 l. Originally it was not intended for Public Worship; but from it st. i.-lii., vii., ix.-xi. and xiii. were adapted by the author and Bp. How for the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, st. i., ll. 3, 4, reading:

"Hail! day of light, that bringest light
And joy to me,"
for the original which read:—
"Hail! quiet spirit, bringing peace
And joy to me."

Although the altered form is in the author's Coll., 1882, the original is his authorized text for the future.

14. Hark! hear ye not the angel-song. Christmas Carol. Written in 1868 at the request of the Rev. R. R. Choje, and pub. in the author's Coll., 1882, in 2 st. of 8 l. Of this hymn, st. ii., ll. 1-4, are by George Wither.
15. Hark! the vault of heaven is ringing. Ascension. Written in 1873, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; again in his Coll., 1882; and again in other hymnals.
16. Hast thou sinned? sin = more. Lent. Written in 1867, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874. In C. U. in America.
17. Have we no zeal for Him Who died? Conversion of St. Paul. Written in 1876, and pub. in his Coll., 1880, and again in 1882.
18. Heal me, O my Saviour, heal. Lent. Written in 1866, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, in 5 st. of 4 l., and, enlarged to 8 st., in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals. It has been specially set to music by H. H. Pierson in his Hymn Tunes, 2nd series, 1872. Its use has extended to America.
19. Hear us, Thou who broodedst. Processional for Whitsuntide. Written in 1873, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals. The latter is his authorized text.
20. In the Name of God the Father. Holy Baptism. Written in 1869, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and again in his Coll., 1882. The second stanza begins, "Washed beneath the mystic waters."
21. Jesu, heavenly Shepherd. The Good Shepherd. Written in 1872, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and again in his Coll., 1880; also in other hymnals, but omitted from the 1882 ed. of the same, although it is by no means an indifferent hymn.
22. Lord God Almighty, Who hearest all, &c. God the Hearer of Prayer. Written in 1875, and first pub. in his Coll., 1880, and repeated in the ed. of 1882.
23. Lord of Power, Lord of Might. Collect, 7th S. after Trinity. Written in 1862, and first pub. in Choje's Hymnal the same year. It was repeated in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1864; in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882. It is also in a large number of collections, and ranks in popularity with most of the author's best hymns. It has been specially set to music by Dr. Monk, and by H. H. Pierson.
24. Make me holy, O my Saviour. Holiness desired. Written in 1867, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and again in his Coll., 1882 (Private Use).
25. O death, thou art no more. Death anticipated with Joy. Written in 1862, and pub. in Choje's Hymnal the same year. Also in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. It has been specially set to music by H. H. Pierson and W. T. Best.
26. O for the faith that knows no doubt. Unfailing Faith desired. Written in 1864, and first pub. in his Hys. and Verses, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1880; but omitted from the ed. of 1882.
27. O God of mercy, God of might, in love and pity infinite. Offertory. Written in 1877, and first pub. in his Coll., 1880, and again in 1882. Specially set to music by H. S. Irons.
28. O God, the King of glory, Who. Collect, S. after the Ascension. Written in May, 1863, and pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1880; but omitted from the ed. of 1882.
29. O Mighty God, Creator, King. For those traveling by Land or by Sea. Written in 1878 for his Coll., and pub. therein, 1880, and 1882.
30. O sing to the Lord with a psalm of thanksgiving. Church Conference. Written in 1871, and pub. in Four Hymns, set to music by Dr. Dykes, 1873, in the author's Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882. A fine Processional hymn for Church gatherings of various kinds.
31. O Thou Who dwellest in realms of light. Praise for Divine Mercies. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. Specially set to music by H. H. Pierson in his Hymn Tunes, 2nd Series (Simpkin & Marshall), 1872.
32. O Thou, Who every change of human life. St. Thomas. Written in 1875, and first pub. in his Coll., 1880, and also in the 1882 ed. of the same.
33. O Thou, Who from me blood didst take. For Unity. First pub. in his Coll., 1880; again in 1882, and in other hymnals.

34. O Thou Who madest land and sea. For Orphans. Written in 1881, and included in his Coll., 1882.

35. O Thou, Who sitt'st enthroned above all worlds both great and small. Consecration of a Church. Written in 1867, and pub. with music by Dr. Dykes in Four Hymns, 1873, and used at the consecration of Hornblotton Church, Feb. 19, 1874. Also specially set to music by H. S. Irons (Novello), 1874. It was repeated in the author's Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals.

36. See the Sun high heaven ascending. Mid-day. Written in 1864, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882.

37. The ocean hath no danger. For Use at Sea. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sacred Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882.

38. Thou that sendest sun and rain. Times of Scarcity. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, as a hymn for a "Bad Harvest." It was repeated in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and in several hymnals.

39. Thou to Whom the sick and dying. On behalf of Hospitals. Written in 1870, at the request of Preb. Hutton of Lincoln, and first pub. in his Supplement, Lincoln, 1871; and again with music by H. H. Pierson in Hymn Tunes (Simpkin & Marshall), 1872. It is also in the author's Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and several other hymn-books.

40. Thrice happy he whose tranquil mind. Contentment. Written in 1863, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; and his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874. It is given in one or two American hymn-books.

41. Thy love for all Thy creatures. Mid-day. Written in 1864, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; again in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and several hymn-books.

42. To Thee, O God, we render thanks. Holy Scripture. Written in 1880, and pub. in his Coll., 1882.

43. Watch now, ye Christians, watch and pray. Advent. Written in 1861, and first pub. in Chope's Hymnal, 1862. Afterwards repeated in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals.

44. We know not, O we know not, how far a prayer may go. Prayer. Written in 1866, and first pub. in Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and again, abbreviated, in his Coll., 1882 (Private Use).

45. With tears and hearts bowed down with sorrow. Death of a Child. Written by request in 1881 for the funeral of a little boy, William Holmes Orr, son of the Rev. W. H. Orr, Rector of West Lydford, Somerset, who was killed by the fall of a shed, under which he with five other boys had taken refuge during the great storm on Oct. 14, 1881. It was included in the author's Coll., 1882. The special metre was adopted that the hymn might be sung to Neumark's Choral, "Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten." (See p. 796, ii.)

46. Work is sweet for God has blest. Work. Written in 1863, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and other hymn-books.

In addition to the above, and those annotated under their respective first lines, Prebendary Thring wrote in 1868 a series of "Hymns on the Creation," as set forth in the first chapter of Genesis, and pub. the same in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and in his Coll., 1880 and 1882. These hymns have also passed into other collections. They are all in the same metre (8.8.8.8.3.6), and are certainly very fine. The first lines are:—

47. When o'er the water's misty deep. Sunday.

48. The earth in robes of light arrayed. Monday.

49. With azure girdle circled round. Tuesday.

50. So grass, and herb, and fruitful tree. Wednesday.

51. Four days had come and gone to rest. Thursday.

52. The last great day of work had come. Friday.

53. And now, 'mid myriad worlds enthroned. Saturday.

Although, as is natural, Prebendary Thring's hymns are more fully represented in his own Coll. than elsewhere, yet a fair proportion are found in a large number of hymn-books in Great Britain and America. His hymns are mainly objective, and are all of them of a strong and decided character. The poetical, as distinct from the sermonizing style of hymn-writing on the one hand, and the grand use of Holy Scripture (as by Bishop C. Wordsworth) on the other, is very prominent, with a tendency to diffuseness and over-elaboration. His descriptive and narrative hymns are very few, and Passiontide and the two Sacraments of the Church are almost untouched. In some of his finer hymns his tone is high and his structure massive, in several others his plaintiveness is very tender, whilst very varied, and his rhythm is almost always perfect. The prominent features throughout are a clear vision, a firm faith, a positive reality, and an exulting hopefulness. His hymn-book possesses the same features of strength, beauty, and excellence. [J. J.]

Through all the changing scenes of life. Tate & Brady. [Ps. xxxiv.] 1st appeared in the New Version, 1696, in 18 st. of 4 l., divided into two parts. As a c.m. rendering it is regarded as one of the most successful in the New Version, and has been a perfect mine of wealth for cento makers. Its use as a whole in modern hymn-books is unknown, but centos of varying length and arrangements are in most extensive use. Of these the following are the most popular:—

i. St. i., ii., iii., vii., viii. This was given with slight alterations in Cotterill's Sel., 1810; and repeated with further alterations in 1819. From Cotterill, 1819, it passed into Stowell's Coll., 1831; Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833; Stowell's Ps. & Hys., 1875, and others in the Ch. of England. The Cong. H. Bk., 1836; Leeds H. Bk., 1853; New Cong., &c., 1859; the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, &c., and numerous collections of various denominations both in Great Britain and America. In some instances Cotterill's alteration of st. ii. l. 4, "And charm their griefs," to "And soothe their griefs," is reproduced; but in most cases the original text is retained. This is the most popular extract form of the hymn.

ii. St. i., vi., vii., viii. Mitre Hymnal, 1836; Morell & How, 1854-64.

iii. St. i., ii., iii., vi. S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., 1855.

iv. St. i., ii., vii., viii. Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835; Mercer, &c.

v. St. i., iii., vi., vii., viii. Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844; Alford's Year of Praise, 1867; Hy. Comp., 1870; Stevenson's Hys. For Ch. & Home, 1873, and others.

vi. The same arrangement with Tate and Brady's doxology; H. A. & M.; Hymnary; Thring's Coll. In Biggs's Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, a French version of this cento, without the doxology, is given as in common use in Guernsey: "Jamais je ne ferai."

vii. St. i., ii., iii., vi., vii., viii. Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855; Barry; Sarum; Wes. H. Bk., 1875; Islington Ps. & Hys., and others.

viii. St. i., ii., vi., viii. Kennedy's Hy. Christ., 1863.

ix. St. i., ii., vi., vii., viii. Windle's Met. Psalter & H. Bk.

x. St. i., iii., vi., vii., xviii. The S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871.

xi. St. vi.-ix. In Martineau's Hymns, 1840, beginning, "The hosts of God encamp around."

Although other centos can be pointed out both in the older and modern collections, sufficient evidence is supplied in the above to show the great hold this version of Ps. xxxiv. has upon the public mind. The collections quoted are but a small part of those in which some portion of this version is found. Its use in various forms is universal. [See New Version, and Psalter, English, § 13 y.] [J. J.]

Through all the dangers of the night. T. Kelly. [Morning.] 1st pub. in the 1st ed. of his Hymns on Various Passages of Scripture, 1804, in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words in Job vii. 20, "O Thou Preserver of men" (ed. 1853, No. 497). It is found in several modern collections. [J. J.]

Through endless years Thou art the same. [Ps. cii.] This cento is found in several English and American hymn-books; sometimes in four and at other times in five stanzas; and in most cases differing somewhat in the text. The earliest date to which we have traced it is the English Bap. New Sel. of Hys., 1828, No. 17, in 5 st., the first of which is taken from Watts's version of Ps. cii., and the rest from the New Version, 1696, and in both instances with alterations. This text, with alterations and the omission of st. v., was given in the American Congregational Church Psalmody, by Mason and Greene, Boston, 1831, No. 102. In some later American hymn-books, st. v., as in the English Bap. New Sel., 1828, or altered, is restored. The text of the 1880 Suppl. to the English Bap. Ps. & Hys., is from the New Sel., slightly altered. [J. J.]

Through the day Thy love has spared us. T. Kelly. [Evening.] Pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1806, in 2 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1853, No. 500). It has come into extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and has been tr. into several languages. R. Bingham's tr. into Latin in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, begins:—"Per hunc diem trepidum." [J. J.]

Throw away Thy rod. G. Herbert. [Discipline.] 1st pub. in his posthumous work The Temple, 1633, under the title "Discipline," thus:—

" Throw away Thy rod, Throw away Thy wrath : O my God, Take the gentle path. " For my heart's desire Unto Thine is bent ; I aspire To a full consent. " Not a word or look I affect to own, But by book, And Thy book alone. " Though I fail, I weep ; Thou I halt in pace, Yet I creep To the throne of grace.	" Then let wrath remove ; Love will do the deed ; For with love Stony hearts will bleed. " Love is swift of foot ; Love's a man of war, And can shoot, And can hit from far. " Who can 'scape his bow ? That which wrought on Thee, Brought Thee low, Needs must work on me. " Throw away Thy rod ; Though man frailties hath, Thou art God ; Throw away Thy wrath."
--	---

The earliest attempt known to us to adapt this poem for congregational use was made by John Wesley. In his Coll. of Ps. & Hys., printed at Charlestown, America, 1736-7, it was altered from its 5.5.3.5 metre to s.m. and given as No. vii. of the "Ps. & Hys. for Wednesday and Friday." The first stanza begins :

" O throw away Thy rod !
O throw away Thy wrath !
My gracious Saviour and my God,
O take the gentle path."

The original poem, usually in an abbreviated form, is found in several modern hymn-books, including the People's H., 1867; the Cong. Ch. Hymnal, 1887, and others. [J. J.]

Thrupp, Dorothy Ann, daughter of Joseph Thrupp, of Paddington Green, was b. at London, June 20, 1779, and d. there on Dec. 14, 1847. Her hymns, ■ few of which have come into extensive use, were contributed to the Rev. W. Carus Wilson's Friendly Visitor and his Children's Friend, under the nom de plume of Iota; to Mrs. Herbert Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry for the use of Infant Schools and Nurseries, 1838 (3rd ed. 1846, with change of title to A Sel. . . of Infant and Juvenile Schools and Families), in which her signature is "D. A. T.," and also to the Hys. for the Young, which she herself edited for the R. T. S. circa 1830, 4th ed., 1836. In 1836 and 1837 she also pub. Thoughts for the Day (2nd series), in which she embodied many hymns which previously appeared in the Friendly Visitor. In addition to her hymns, which are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), there are also in C. U. :—

1. Come, Holy Spirit, come, O hear an infant's prayer. Child's Prayer. Appeared in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry, 1838, No. 14, and signed "D. A. T."

2. God loves the little child that prays. God's love for Children. Given in Miss Thrupp's Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836; and again in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 2nd ed., 1840, and signed "D. A. T." It is sometimes given as "God loves the child that humbly prays."

3. Have you read the wondrous story? Life and Death of Jesus. This appeared anonymously in Miss Thrupp's Hys. for the Young, R. T. S., 1830, No. 12, in 5 st. of 4 l. In Miss Thrupp's later publications this hymn is omitted, a fact which suggests that it was not her composition, but possibly that of a friend. It is in the Leeds S. S. Union H. Bk., 1833-78.

4. Let us sing with one accord. Praise of Jesus. This hymn is usually associated with Miss Thrupp's name, but on insufficient evidence. We find it in the 4th ed. of her Hys. for the Young, 1836, and again in the 3rd ed. of Mrs. H. Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry for the Use of Infant and Juvenile Schools, &c., 1846, and in both instances without signature. We know of no evidence which justifies us in ascribing the authorship with certainty to Miss Thrupp. The hymn is in the Leeds S. S. Union H. Bk., 1833-78, and several others.

5. Poor and needy though I be. Divine Providence. Appeared in Miss Thrupp's Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836, No. 22; and again in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 2nd ed., 1840, and signed "D. A. T."

6. See, my child, the mighty ocean. Love of God compared to the Sea. Given in the R. T. S.'s Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836, No. 26, and in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 1st ed., 1838, and signed "D. A. T." In Kennedy, 1863, it begins "Have you seen the mighty ocean."

7. Thou Guardian of my earliest days. Jesus the Children's Friend. This hymn we have traced to her Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836. It is sometimes given as "Thou Guardian of our earliest days."

8. What a strange and wondrous story. Life and Death of Jesus. This hymn is found without signature in her Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836, and again in Mrs. H. Mayo's Sel., 1838, No. 173, in 4 st. of 4 l. We have found no authority for ascribing it to Miss Thrupp. In the Ch. S. H. Bk., n.d., 8 lines have been added as a concluding stanza by an unknown hand.

9. What led the Son of God? Love of God in Christ. This appeared anonymously in her Hys. for the Young, 1830, and again in the Leeds S. S. Union H. Bk., 1833. In modern collections it is attributed to Miss Thrupp, on the ground that it is found in the Hys. for the Young, which she edited.

10. Who ■ they in heaven who stand? All Saints. Pub. in Mrs. Mayo's Sel., 3rd ed., 1846, No. 64, in 5 st. of 4 l., and signed "A. D. T." It is in the Prim. Methodist S. S. U. H. Bk., 1879, and others.

Several additional hymns to those named above have also been attributed to Miss Thrupp on insufficient authority. This has probably arisen out of the fact that all the hymns in the Hys. for the Young, including her own, were given anonymously. [J. J.]

Thrupp, Joseph Francis, M.A., s. of a solicitor, was b. May 20, 1827, and educated at Winchester School and Trinity College, Cambridge. At Winchester he gained the Heathcote and Duncan prizes, and the Queen's gold medal for an English poem, and was Head Prefect during his last year. He graduated in 1849 as 7th Wrangler, and 11th in the 1st class of the Classical Tripos. In 1850 he was elected a Fellow of his college. Taking Holy Orders in 1852, he was appointed Vicar of Barrington, Cambridge, in 1852, and Select Preacher before the University in 1865. He was also for some time a member of the Board of Theological Studies, and was associated with the S. P. C. K. some 20 years. He d. at Surbiton, Sept. 24, 1867. His published works include An Introduction to the Study and the Use of the Psalms; A Revised Translation of the Song of Songs; Ancient Jerusalem; and Psalms and Hymns (Cambridge, Macmillan), 1853. This last contains prefaces, indices, with authors' names, 93 psalms, 236 hymns, 16 doxologies. Of these 28 psalms and 18 hymns are by Mr. Thrupp. The best known of his hymns are, "Awhile in spirit, Lord, to Thee" (p. 104, ii.); "Hail, that head, all torn and wounded"; "O Son of Man, Thyself once crossed." Mr. Thrupp's versions of individual psalms have not come into common use beyond his own collection. They are therein signed with his initials, "J. F. T.," but are not separately annotated in this Dictionary. His hymns are mainly on the special Festivals of the Church, and, in addition to those annotated elsewhere are:—

1. Abide with us, O Saviour dear. Evening.
2. Eternal Word! Incarnate Light. Christ our All.
3. Eternal Word! Who ever wast. Annunciation.
4. How beautiful are their peaceful feet. Ordination.
5. Lord of majesty and might. School Festival.
6. Master, the Son of God art Thou. St. Bartholomew.
7. O Saviour of our earthly race. St. Luke.
8. O Thou, Whom upward to the sky. Ascension.
9. O, where shall we deliverance seek. Lent.
10. Ope, Salem, ope thy temple gates. The Presentation.
11. Saviour of men, Almighty Lord. St. Mark.
12. Thou Who didst Thy brethren twain. SS. Simon and Jude.
13. Thou Whose voice upon the border. St. Andrew.
14. To David's Son hosannas sing. Palm Sunday.
15. Two and two, Thy servants, Lord. SS. Philip and James.
16. What, though the ground all good at first. Lent.

Mr. Thrupp contributed several articles to Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, and was one of the selected writers on the staff of the Speaker's Commentary. [J. J.]

Thus far on life's bewildering [perplexing] path. J. Montgomery. [Safety in God.] 1st printed on a broadsheet for use at the Anniversary Sermons, on behalf of the Red Hill Sunday School, Sheffield, March 28, 1819, in 4 st. of 6 l., and signed "J. M." In Montgomery's Greenland and Other Poems, 1819, p. 171, it was given in 6 st. of 6 l., the new stanzas being st. iv. and v. of the text as included in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 479, and his Original Hys., 1853, No. 55. The 1819 text was altered in 1825; and again, but very slightly, in 1853. In modern collections the text is usually abridged. [J. J.]

Thus speaks the heathen: How shall man. J. Logan. [Mercy rather than Sacrifice.] 1st pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, No. xxxi., in 6 st. of 4 l., on Micah vi. 6-9. It is rarely found outside of that work. This paraphrase is ascribed to J. Logan, on evidence given in the memoir of M. Bruce (p. 118, ii.). [J. J.]

Thus speaks [saith] the high and lofty One. J. Logan. [God with the Hum- ble.] Pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, No. 27, on Is. lvii. 15, 16, in 5 st. of 4 l. [See Bruce, M., p. 118, ii.] In Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphrases & Hymns, 1853, this text is given in an altered form as, "Thus saith the high and lofty One." [J. J.]

Thy living saints on earth, Thy saints who sleep. [All Saints' Day.] Appeared in E. W. Eddis's Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, in 3 st. of 8 l., and signed "E. S., 1849," in common with several other hymns in the same book. We have seen it stated that "E. S." was Ellen Eddis, née Shepherd, but have been unable to authenticate the statement. This hymn has passed into other collections. [J. J.]

Thy promise, Lord, is perfect peace. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. iii.] Pub. in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is in C. U. in its full form, and also, altered "Lord, how the troublers of my peace," in the American Bap. Service of Song, 1871. [J. J.]

Thy throne, O God, in righteousness. J. Montgomery. [For Schools.] The earliest work in which this hymn has been found is Select Portions of Ps. from the New Version, Hys. and Anthems, &c., compiled by the Rev. Dr. Sutton, Vicar of Sheffield, for use in that Parish Church, circa 1815, 2nd ed. 1816, No. 103. From thence it passed into Cotterill's Sel., 1819; Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 542; and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 343. Among modern collections it is found in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879; Major's Bk. of Praise, &c. [J. J.]

Thy way, not mine [ours] O Lord. H. Bonar. [Resignation.] Appeared in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1st Series, 1857, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is sometimes given as, "Thy way, not ours, O Lord"; and as "Father, Thy way, not mine." There is also an adaptation in three stanzas, beginning, "My portion, Thou! my cup," in the American Church Pastorals, 1864. The original is in extensive use in most English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

Τί σοι θέλεις γενέσθαι. St. Gregory Nazianzen. [Private Use.] This hymn "To His own Soul," is given in his Opera, Paris, 1611; Dan. Thos. Hymn. iii. 13; and in the Anth. Græc. p. 26. Mr. Chatfield's tr. in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, in 52 st. of 4 l. is from the latter, which contains 181 lines. He says of this poem, "The original is one of the most spirited pieces anywhere to be found, truly forcible and racy," p. 106. His tr., "O soul of mine, repining," is pleasing and vigorous, but not adapted to congregational use. [See Greek Hymnody, § iv.] [J. J.]

Tibi Christe, splendor Patris. St. Rabanus Maurus (?). [St. Michael and all Angels.] Daniel, i. No. 189, gives the text of this hymn, and at iv. p. 165 cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 11th cent. It is not however included by E. Dümmler in his ed. of the Carmina of Rabanus. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 91 b.; Jul. A. vi. f. 56 b.; Harl. 2961 f. 242); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848, f. 199 b), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 266); in the Bern ms. 455, of the 10th cent.; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from a ms. of the 11th cent. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 34). Also in Mone, No. 307; and in G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 64, from a 10th cent. ms. It is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. In the Roman Breviary, 1632, it is recast greatly for the worse, and begins Te splendor et virtus Patris; and this recast is repeated in later eds. of that Breviary, in Daniel i. No. 189, and others. In some of the more recent eds. of the Roman Breviary (e.g. Kempton, 1746, and Lyons, 1852), the original form is repeated, with slight alterations to suit the festival of St. Raphael (Oct. 24); and this text is in Königsfeld ii. p. 136. [Various.] [J. M.]

This hymn has been tr. from both forms of the text as follows:—

i. Tibi Christe splendor Patris.

1. Thee, O Christ, the Father's splendour. By J. M. Neale, in his Medieval Hys., 1851, p. 25, and the H. Noted, 1852, No. 42. It has passed into a few collections, including the Hymner, 1882.

2. Christ, to Thee, the Father's glory. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, H. Seasons, No. 47, and Rice's Eccl. from the same, 1870, No. 124. Altered in J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1856-61, to "Christ, to Thee the Father's brightness."

3. Christ, the Father's mirrored brightness. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1866, p. 95, and the People's H., 1867, No. 284.

Other trs. are:—

1. Thy father's brightnes, Christe to thee. Primer. 1699.

2. To thee, O Christ, thy Father's light. Primer. 1615.

ii. Te splendor et virtus Patris.

1. Thee, the Father's power and light. By Bp. R. Mant, in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1837 (ed. 1871, p. 121), Dr. Oldknow's Hys. for the Services of the Ch., 1850, and later eds., &c.

2. Thee, Who the Father's brightness art. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 127, and subsequently in a few hymnals.

3. O Jeau! life-spring of the soul. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 145; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 79. Given in a few collections, including Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, &c.

4. Life and strength of all Thy servants. By the compilers of H. A. & M. in the 1889 Suppl. of that collection.

Other trs. are:—

1. We praise thee, Christ, among the Quires. Primer. 1685.

2. O Lord of Hosts, whose Beams impart. Primer. 1706.

3. Jesus, the Father's ray and might. Divine Office, 1763.

4. We praise Thee 'mid the Angel hosts. A. J. B. Hope. 1844.

5. O Brightness of the Father's Light. W. Palmer. 1845.

6. Ruler of the dread immense. J. F. Thrupp, in his Ps. & Hys., 1853. A paraphrase rather than a translation.

7. Splendour of glory all divine. J. Wallace. 1874. [J. J.]

Till he come, O let the words. Bp. Bickersteth. [Holy Communion.] Written in 1861 and first pub. in his work The Blessed Dead, 1862, and subsequently in his Suppl. to Psalms and Hymns, No. 41; The Two Brothers, 1871; and the 1870, 1876, and 1890 eds. of the Hymnal Companion. The author says that it is given in his Hymnal Comp. as presenting "one aspect of the Lord's Supper which is passed over in many hymnals, 'Ye do show forth the Lord's death till He come'; and also our communion with those of whom we say 'We bless Thy holy Name for all Thy servants departed this life in Thy faith and fear.'" (Note in the annotated ed. of Hy. Comp.) It is in several hymn-books. [J. J.]

Time is earnest, passing by. [Old and New Year.] This popular Sunday School hymn appeared in three publications in the same year, and in each case anonymously. (1) It is found in Sidney Dyer's American South-western Psalmist, 1851 (p. 317, ii.), and signed "Anon.;" (2) again in an American paper called Independent, 1851; (3) and again, in England, in The Bible Class Magazine, 1851, with the signature "Independent," the name of the American paper from which it was taken. It was in 4 st. of 4 l. Subsequently it was reprinted in The Bible Class Magazine, with music by Mr. Joseph Dyer, the Schoolmaster of the Wesleyan School, Pocklington. Miller says (Singers & Songs, &c., 1869, p. 551) that "it also appeared in Select Music for the Young (Sunday School Union), where it is headed, 'All Things Earnest; composed by Joseph Dyer.'" This curious association of two men of the name of Dyer with the hymn, the first in America, and the second in England, has led to its authorship being attributed at one time to Sidney Dyer, and at another to Joseph Dyer, and in each case without authority of any weight. Usually the hymn is given in an abbreviated form of 5 st. as in the Universal H. Bk., 1885, the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, and others. [J. J.]

Time is winging us away. J. Burton, sen. [New Year.] Pub. in Hys. for the Use of Sunday Schools selected from Various Authors, Nottingham, J. Dunn, 1812, No. 305, in 2 st. of 8 l., and entitled "Brevity of Life." It has passed into a very large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America. Of Burton's hymns it ranks next to his "Holy Bible, book divine," in popularity. [J. J.]

'Tis a point I long to know. J. Newton. [In Doubt and Fear.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 119, in 9 st. of 4 l. It is in C. U. in an abbreviated form, and opening with the first line as above. In some collections it begins, "Lord, my God, I long to know"; and in others, "Could my heart so hard remain" (st. iii.). These altered forms of the text are in use principally in America. [J. J.]

'Tis enough, the hour is come. J. Merrick. [Nunc Dimittis.] This paraphrase of the Nunc Dimittis was pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1763, p. 13, in 22 lines. As given in Kennedy, 1863, No. 185, some of the lines are transposed, and the whole are expanded into 3 st. of 8 l. [J. J.]

'Tis finished, the Messiah dies, Cut off for sins, &c. C. Wesley. [Good Fri- day.] In 1762 this hymn, in 2 st. of 8 l., appeared in C. Wesley's Short Hymns, vol. ii. p. 234. These stanzas are:—

"'Tis finished! the Messias dies,
Cut off for sins, but not His own!
Accomplish'd is the sacrifice,
The great redeeming work is done;
Finish'd the first transgression is,
And purg'd the guilt of actual sin,
And everlasting righteousness
Is now to all the world brought in.
"'Tis finish'd, all my guilt and pain,
I want no sacrifice beside,
For me, for me, the Lamb is slain,
And I am more than justified;
Sin, death, and hell are now subdued,
All grace is now to sinners given,
And, lo, I plead th' atoning blood,
For pardon, holiness, and heaven."

It is from the first four lines of this hymn that Blair formed st. iv. of his cento, "Behold the Saviour on the cross," p. 130, i. The original, as above, was given in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 223, and thus came into use in the Church of England. Charles Wesley, however, was not satisfied with these stanzas, and at his death he left in ms. another hymn on the same text, "It is finished," in 8 st. of 4 l., of which st. i. and viii. are st. i. ll. 1-4, and st. ii. ll. 5-8 (slightly altered) respectively of the 1762 text, and st. iii.-vii. are new. This text was given in the 1830 Suppl. to the Wes. H. Bk., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xii. p. 99. [J. J.]

'Tis gone, that bright and orb'd blaze. J. Keble. [Evening.] Dated Nov. 25, 1820, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 14 st. of 4 l., and headed with the text "Abide with us, for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. St. Luke xxiv. 29." The centos from this poem in C. U. are:—

1. Sun of my soul, Thou Saviour dear. This cento was given in three stanzas in Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835. This was repeated in numerous hymnals, sometimes in the same form, but usually with additional stanzas, until it has become one of the foremost hymns in the English language. It has been tr. into several languages. Those in Latin include, "Sol animae viteaque meae, praedulcis Jesu" (4 st.), by R. Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871; and "Sol meus! O mihi Salvator!" (4 st.), by H. M. Macgill, in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

2. The Rulers of this Christian land. This cento, For those in Authority, is in limited use.

3. Thou Framer of the light and dark. This cento "For the High Court of Parliament" is in the 1863 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; the Hy. Comp., and others, and is admirably suited for the purpose.

4. When the soft dew of kindly sleep. This cento for Evening was given in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; the Sarum Hyl., 1868, and others. [J. J.]

'Tis my happiness below. W. Couper. [In Affliction.] Appeared in Lady Huntingdon's Coll., 1774, No 143, in 3 st. of 8 l., and in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 16. In the Lady Huntingdon Coll. it precedes, and in the Olney Hymns it follows Cowper's "God moves in a mysterious way" [see p. 433, i.], and seems to have been written at, or about the same time, and under the same circumstances. Its modern use is mainly confined to America where, in its full, or in an abridged form, it is somewhat popular. [J. J.]

'Tis pure delight without alloy. I. Watts. [Divine Love Desired.] Pub. in his Horæ Lyricæ, 1706, Bk. i., in 6 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Ascending to Him in Heaven." In the American Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1849, and in their Hymnal, 1878, it is given with the omission of st. iv. as, "O 'tis delight without alloy." It is from the original, as above, that Watts took a portion for his hymn, "Happy the heart where graces reign." [J. J.]

'Tis seldom we can trace the way. Sir J. Bowring. [The love of God.] This hymn is in the Plymouth Brethren Hys. for the Poor of the Flock, 1838, No. 250, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is best known as "We cannot always trace the way." In this form it was given in Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855, No. 333, and signed "Bowring" in the Index. Some later collections attribute it to "Elliot;" but Miller says (Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 422) that Sir John Bowring assured him personally that it was his own composition. It is in several collections of a recent date, including Dr. Allon's Cong. Psalmist Hyl., 1886. Another form of the text in use in America is "I cannot always trace the way." It is in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, and some later hymn-books. [J. J.]

'Tis sweet to wake at early morn. T. Davis. [Morning. Heaven anticipated.] Pub. in his Devotional Verse for a Month, 1855, p. 23, in 4 st. of 6 l. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, it was given as "'Tis sweet on earth at early morn." In the author's Hys. Old and New, 1864, No. 5; and his Annus Sanctus, 1877, p. 194, it was given as "'Tis sweet on earth to wake at morn," and this is the authorised form of the hymn. [J. J.]

Titius, Christoph, s. of Christoph Titius or Tietze, pastor at Wilkau, near Ramslau, in Silesia, was b. at Wilkau, May 24, 1641. He entered the St. Mary Magdalene Gymnasium, at Breslau, in 1654, and the Aegidien (St. Giles) Gymnasium at Nürnberg, in 1660. He matriculated as a student of Theology at the University of Altdorf, in 1662. After completing his studies at the University of Jena, in 1664, he acted for two years as a family tutor. On Aug. 24, 1666, he was ordained as pastor of Laubenzedel, near Gunzenhausen, in Franconia; and then became, in 1671, pastor at Henfenfeld, near Nürnberg. In 1685 he was appointed diaconus at Hersbruck, near Nürnberg, became archidiaconus in June, 1701, and in Nov., 1701, was appointed chief pastor and inspector of schools. He d. at Hersbruck, Feb. 21, 1703 (Koch, iii., 523; Wetzel, iii., 296; G. A. Will's Nürnbergisches Gelehrten-Lexicon, pt. iv. p. 34; K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 287, &c. Koch says he was b. Jan. 10, 1641, and d. Sept. 7, 1703, but gives no authority for these dates).

Titius had begun to write hymns while at the Nürnberg Gymnasium, and his best known hymns originated either then or during his University course. They appeared in his Sünden-Schmerzen, Trost im Hertenzen, Töden-Kertzen, erwecket, entdeckt, angestecket von Christophoro Titio Silesio, . . . Theol. St., at Nürnberg, 1663 [Library of the Prediger-Seminar at Hannover], with 15 hymns; in the 2nd enlarged ed. pub. as Himmel-Reise, Seelen-Speise, Engel-Weise, &c., Nürnberg, 1670 [Berlin Library], with 45 hymns; and in the 3rd further enlarged ed. pub. as Vorige und neue Morgen- und Abend-Catechismus . . . Lieder, &c., Nürnberg, 1701 [Göttingen Library] with 55 hymns. The most popular were those of the 1st ed., many of which passed into the German hymn-books of the 17th cent., and various of which are still found in recent collections. The best of them are hearty and popular in style, earnest and scriptural in tone, and sententious.

Two of Titius's hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

i. O du Schöpfer aller Dinge. Holy Communion. This is a hymn of penitence before Holy Communion, and was 1st pub. in 1663, as above, as No. ii., in 9 st. of 8 l. Repeated in Crüger's Praxis, Frankfurt, 1676, No. 153; but recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, and erroneously ascribed to Johann Heinrich Keulisch or Calisius [b. 1633, at Wohlau, in Silesia; d. March 30, 1696, as chief pastor and superintendent at Gaidorf, in Württemberg]. This possibly arose from the fact that in Calisius's Hauskirche, Nürnberg, 1676, p. 388, there is a hymn beginning "O du Schöpfer aller Dinge, Dem bei dieser Morgen-Zeit," in 7 st., but it is entirely different from this hymn. Tr. as "Bow Thine ear, I now implore Thee." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 38.

ii. Sollt es gleich bisweilen scheinen. Cross and Consolation. His most popular hymn, 1st pub. in 1663, as No. vi., in 10 st. of 4 l., entitled "Hymn of Consolation." Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1675, the Nürnberg G. B., 1676, Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, the Berlin G. L. S., 1863, No. 856, and many others, sometimes printed as 5 st. of 8 l.

Lauemann relates (Koch, viii. 488) that C. A. Dann, chief pastor of St. Leonard's Church, at Stuttgart, having spoken somewhat freely at the funeral of one of the courtplayers, had been relegated in 1812 to the village of Oieschingen in the Swabian Alb [in 1819 to the neighbouring village of Mössingen]. The king at last granted the earnest desire of the Stuttgart people for his return, and on Feb. 5, 1824, recalled him to Stuttgart. That night four friends walked over to Mössingen, and in the early morning conveyed the news to Dann by singing this hymn at the door of his room.

The tr. in C. U. is:—

Seems it in my anguish lone. This is a good tr., omitting st. vi., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 201; repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 146. Included in full in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880, and abridged in the St. Aidan's College H. Bl., 1864.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Yea should it ev'n to man appear." This is a tr. of st. i., as st. v. of No. 1062, in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bl., 1801 (1886, No. 505). (2) "Deem we sometimes, spirit-shaken." In L. Rehfuss's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 44, only st. i., vi. being from this hymn. [J. M.]

Τὸ Βασιλεῖ καὶ Δεσποτῆ. St. Anatolius. [St. Stephen.] These stichera are appointed in the Greek Service Books in the Office for St. Stephen's Day, to be sung at Vespers. The probable date is the latter part of the 8th or the beginning of the 9th cent. [St. Anatolius, p. 63, l.] The hymn is found in the Menaæ, and the Anth. Graeca Carm. Christ., p. 117. The tr. by J. M. Neale, "The Lord and King of all things," appeared in The Ecclesiastic and Theologian, 1853, vol. xv. p. 233, and again in a revised form in Dr. Neale's Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, p. 7, in 3 st. of 8 l. These texts are:—

Ecclesiastic: "The Lord and King of all things 1853. Upon the earth is born."

Hys. of the E. C., "The Lord and King of all things 1862. But yesterday was born."

Mr. Hatherly, in the 4th ed. of the Hys. of the Eastern Church, notes that "the Vespers of Dec. 27 occurring on the evening of the 26th, permits of the word 'yesterday' being used with reference to Christmas Day." [J. J.]

To Christ the Son Almighty. R. F. Littledale. [Adult Baptism.] This is a tr. by Dr. Littledale of a Syriac hymn given, together with a tr. into Latin, in Daniel, iii. p. 235. It appeared in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "F." [J. J.]

To day we're bidden to a feast. J. Cennick. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in his Sacred Hys. for the Children of God, &c., 1741, No. vi., in 8 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Before the Sacrament." In a few hymn-books a cento therefrom is given as "Together with these symbols, Lord" (st. vi.). [J. J.]

To God belongs the eternal sway. J. Merrick. [Ps. xcvi.] 1st pub. in his Psalms Translated or Paraphrased in English Verse, 1765, p. 239, in 48 lines. In 1797 Merrick's Psalms were republished by W. D. Tattersall "divided into stanzas for Parochial Use," and this version was given therein in 13 st. of 4 l., two lines being added to st. vii., and two lines to st. x. to make up the required number of stanzas. In this form it is unknown to modern hymn-books. In Cotterill's Sel., 1819, Ps. 97, it is given in an abbreviated and rewritten form as, "The Lord is King! let earth obey." This is given in some modern hymnals, including Kennedy, 1863, with alterations and the omission of st. ii., iii. [J. J.]

To God most awful and most high. J. Montgomery. [In time of Scarcity.] Written for the laying of the foundation stone of a Corn Mill at Sheffield, on Nov. 5, 1795, which was "built for the common use and benefit of the people." It was printed in Montgomery's Sheffield Iris newspaper the same day, and signed "Paul Positive," a nom de plume of the author. It subsequently appeared in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 260; Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 532; and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 276. In the last two it is headed, "The poor praying for bread in the time of scarcity." It is found in a few modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

To God the only wise, Our Saviour and our King. I. Watts. [Preserving Grace.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707 (2nd ed. 1709, Bk. i., No. 51), in 5 st. of 4 l. It is found in most of the early hymn-books, especially those of a Calvinistic type, as the collections of G. Whitefield, M. Madan, and others, but to modern hymnals, except in America, it is not so well known, although still found in several books. [J. J.]

To God the only wise, Who keeps us by His word. [Doxology.] This doxology, which is in somewhat extensive use in America, is usually ascribed to I. Watts. One stanza only—the second, "Hosannah to the Word"—is from his works, and this is altered from his c. m. doxology in Hys. and S. Songs, 1707. Stanzas i. and iii. we have not traced. The latter is 2 Cor. xiii. 14 turned into metre. [J. J.]

To God with mournful voice. Tate & Brady. [Psalms cxlii.] In the New Version, 1696, in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1836 it was re-written by J. Hall or E. Osler, probably the latter, and included in the Mitre H. Bl., as,

"In deep distress to God
I poured my care and grief," in 4 st. of 4 l., and from thence passed, without alteration, into the Wes. H. Bl., 1875,

No. 634. The version of Ps. cxx. in the Mitre H. Bk., in 3 st. of 4 l., beginning,

"In deep distress to God I cried
And He aveng'd my wrongs," was by E. Osler, and is also found in his Church and King, 1836-37, p. 137, for the 2nd Sun. after Trinity. [J. J.]

To Him that loved us for Himself. J. Mason. [Praise.] This is No. xxxiii. of his Songs of Praise, 1683, in 4 st. of 8 l. and entitled, "A Song of Praise collected from the Doxologies in the Revelation of St. John." It is very unequal in merit, some lines being very fine, whilst others are of little worth. It has, however, the elements of a splendid hymn of Praise. In modern hymnody it is known as the hymn to which Watts is supposed to have been indebted for his "Now to the Lord that makes us know" (q.v.), a supposition which cannot be maintained. Orig. text in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Mason's Songs, 1859, p. 65. [J. J.]

To keep the lamp alive. W. Cowper. [In Trial and Despondency.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 74, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Dependence." In its original form it is in limited use. The extract from it beginning with st. iii., "Beware of Peter's word," is much more popular, and especially in America, where it appeared in Nettleton's Village Hymns, 1824. [J. J.]

To me a sinner, chief of all. H. Alford. [Lent.] Written for and pub. in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 191, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Poetical Works, 5th ed., 1868. It has passed into Dale's English H. Bk., 1874; Thring's Coll., 1882, &c. [J. J.]

To me to live, let it be Christ. J. Montgomery. [The Image of Christ.] This is dated in the m. mss. "Aug. 30, 1835." We have not traced it in print earlier than his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 122, where it is given in 3 st. of 4 l.; but probably it was published before that date. [J. J.]

Τὸ μέγα μυστήριον. St. Andrew of Crete. [Passiontide.] This is the 3rd Ode of a Canon, containing 3 odes, found in the Compline for Great Thursday (the Thursday of Holy Week) in the Triodion, and is in 8 stanzas. It dates about 700, and was first rendered into English by Dr. Neale, and pub. in The Ecclesiastic and Theologian, 1854, p. 44, and again in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 6 st. of 6 l. as, "O the mystery, passing wonder." In this tr. st. iv. is omitted, and st. vi. and vii. are fused together. In 1863 it was included in Lyra Eucharistica, and the Parish H. Bk., and subsequently in numerous collections. [J. J.]

Τὸ παντάνακτος. [Ἐσώσε λαόν.]

Τὸ πρὸ τῶν αἰώνων. [Χριστὸς γενῆται.]

To the hills I lift mine eyes. C. Wesley. [Ps. cxxi.] Pub. in Ps. & Hys., 1743, in 6 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. viii., p. 235). In A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, st. i., ii. and iv. were given with alterations, as No. 227. This cento has gone out of use. The following arrangements of the text are in several modern hymn-books:—

1. To the hills I lift my eyes. This, with the omission of st. v., was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1800, as one of the additional hymns. It is in the revised ed., 1875, and other collections.

2. See the Lord, thy Keeper, stand. This in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, is composed of st. iv., vi. ll. 1-4; iii. ll. 5-8, altered.

3. God shall bless thy going out. In the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, No. 74, and later American collections. It is composed of st. vi. ll. 1-4, and st. ii. ll. 5-8, altered.

This version ranks with the best of C. Wesley's renderings of the Psalms. [See G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883; and Psalters, English, § xvi.] [J. J.]

To the Source of every blessing. W. H. Bathurst. [Holy Trinity.] 1st pub. in his Psalms & Hymns, 1831, No. 2, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Praise to God." In 1853 it was included in the Leeds H. Bk., No. 443, and later in one or two collections. It is better known with the omission of st. i., as "Glory to the Almighty Father," as in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 156, and others. [J. J.]

To Thee, O dear, dear Saviour. J. S. B. Monsell. [Rest and Peace in Jesus.] Pub. in his Hymns of Love and Praise, 1863, p. 172, in 5 st. of 8 l. In a few collections it begins "To Thee, O blessed Saviour"; whilst a cento, opening with line 5 of st. ii., "O Thou Whose mercy found me" is also in C. U. as in the Scottish Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876. [J. J.]

To Thee, O God, we homage pay. P. Doddridge. [Christ, the Sun of Righteousness.] This hymn is No. viii. in the D. mss., where it is entitled "The Sun of Righteousness. From Matt. iv. 2." It is in 6 st. of 4 l. Although undated, its position in the D. mss. shows it to be circa 1734. In Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 173, the text differs somewhat from the ms. Orton's text is repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the Hymns, &c., 1839, No. 194. It is in a few collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

To Thee, O Lord, our hearts we raise. W. C. Dix. [Harvest.] This hymn was given with five others at the end of the St. Raphael's (Bristol) Hys. for the Service of the Church, 1864, No. 202, in 4 st. of 8 l. By a printer's error it is accompanied by a note which really belonged to the next hymn, No. 203, "The Church of God lifts up her voice" (p. 1146, i.). In 1867 "To Thee, O Lord, &c." was given in the People's H., and since then it has passed into numerous collections, including H. A. & M., the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., Thring's Coll., and others. The fourth stanza is also given as a concluding chorus to Dr. Stainer's harvest anthem, "Ye shall dwell in the land." [J. J.]

To Thy temple I repair. J. Montgomery. [Divine Worship.] Pub. in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 916, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "A Sabbath Hymn." It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 286; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 468; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 115. It is in C. U. in its original form; as "In Thy presence we appear," in Kennedy, 1863; and as "To Thy presence I repair," in Dale's

English H. Bk., 1874. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, the original, with the omission of st. v., is rendered into Latin as, "Sacratam Domini domum." [J. J.]

To us the voice of wisdom cries. J. Montgomery. [Invitation of Wisdom.] Appeared in Cotterill's Selection, 1819, No. 147, in 3 st. of 8 l., and entitled "The voice of Wisdom." In 1825, on its republication in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 501, it was partly rewritten, and given in 7 st. of 4 l., the title being also changed to "The Invitation of Wisdom." This latter text and title were repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 29. It is the text in C. U. [J. J.]

To Whom but Thee, O God of grace. W. J. Irons. [Seven Words from the Cross.] In his Hys. for Use in Church, 1866, Dr. Irons included seven hymns on the words on the Cross, and repeated them in his Ps. & Hys., 1873-75, as follows:—

1. To whom but Thee, O God of grace. St. Luke zzziii. 34.
2. Thy presence, Lord, is heaven to those. St. Matt. zzzvi. 46.
3. Jesu! Who for us didst bear. St. John xix. 28.
4. O Thou, Our God, Who hearest prayer. St. Luke zzziii. 43.
5. Son of God in glory reigning. St. John xix. 26.
6. It is not finished! Lord of grace (1866). Lord, is it finished? God of grace (1873). St. John xix. 30.
7. Faithful Creator, Lord divine. St. Luke zzziii. 46.

Most of these hymns have passed into other collections, but their use is limited. [J. J.]

To whom, my Saviour, shall I go? [Clinging to Christ.] This hymn is found in the Panoplist, 1815, where it is signed "Carus." It was repeated in Nettleton's Village Hymns, &c., 1824, No. 408, in 4 st. of 4 l., and without signature. Subsequently it appeared in several collections, and amongst modern hymnals it is found in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and several others. [F. M. B.]

To-day the Lord our Shepherd leads. J. Montgomery. [The Good Shepherd.] Printed on a broadsheet for the use of Sheffield Sunday School Whit-Monday gathering, June 11, 1821, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "J. M." There is also a copy in the m. mss. in Montgomery's handwriting, dated "Sep. 14, 1833." The text in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 161, is slightly altered from the broadsheet of 1821. In a few collections it begins "Now may the Lord our Shepherd lead." [J. J.]

To-day Thy mercy calls me [us]. O. Allen. [Invitation.] Appeared in his Hys. of the Christian Life, 1862, p. 102, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "To-day." It is found in several collections in Great Britain and America, and sometimes altered to "To-day Thy mercy calls us," as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is the most widely used of the author's hymns. [J. J.]

Toke, Emma, née Leslie, daughter of John Leslie, D.D., Bishop of Kilmore, was b. at Holywood, Belfast, Aug. 9, 1812; married to the Rev. Nicholas Toke, Godington Park, Ashford, Kent, in 1837; and d. in 1872. Mrs. Toke's early hymns were written in 1851, "at the request of a friend who was collecting for the Committee of the S. P. C. K." (Miller, p. 573), and they appeared in the S. P. C. K. Hymns for Pub. Worship, 1852, as follows:—

1. Glory to Thee, O Lord (see p. 429, ii.).
2. Lord, of Thy mercy, hear our cry. National Thanksgiving.
3. O Lord, in all our trials here. Saints' Days, General.
4. O Lord, Thou knowest all the snares. Leul.
5. O Thou, to Whose all seeing eye. Annunciation.
6. O Thou, Who didst with love untold. St. Thomas.
7. Thou art gone up on high. Ascension.

The most popular of these hymns are, "Glory to Thee, O Lord"; "O Lord, Thou knowest all the snares"; and "Thou art gone up on high." These hymns as a whole are simple and pleasing. They seldom rise into passionate fervour, and are weakened in several instances by faulty construction. They have been widely adopted in G. Britain and America. Another series of hymns by Mrs. Toke was contributed to the Sunday School Liturgy . . . and Hymn Book, arranged by the Rev. R. Judd, B.A., Incumbent of St. Mary's, Halifax, F. King, 1870. These hymns have failed to attract attention, although in literary merit they fall little short of her earlier efforts. They are:—

8. Jesu! by Whose Almighty Grace. St. Andrew.
9. Lord God, the strength and stay of all. General.
10. Lord of all power and might. General.
11. Lord of light and life. St. Mark.
12. O Father, Whom in truth to know. SS. Philip and James.
13. O God of comfort, Thou alone. St. Barnabas.
14. O God of mercy, chill and dark. St. John Evang.
15. O God, the strength and stay of all. General.
16. O God, upon this solemn day. St. Matthias.
17. O Thou, Who didst through heavens, &c. Purification B. V. M.
18. The joyful day at last is come. Easter.
19. This is the day when Jesus Christ. Christmas.
20. Upon this sad and solemn day. G. Friday.
21. We bless Thee, Lord, for that clear light. Conversion St. Paul.

In addition to these hymns Mrs. Toke re-wrote and expanded some of her earlier compositions. In their new form, however, they are almost unknown. [J. J.]

Τῶν ἀμαρτιῶν μου τὴν πληθύν. St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [Len.] This is the opening line of a cento taken from a long Canon for the Monday of the First Tone in the Paracletice. It is virtually, as compiled by Dr. Neale, a new poem, representing neither the form nor the idea of the original. Dr. Neale's tr., beginning, "And wilt Thou pardon, Lord?" was pub. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 5 st. of 4 l. In a slightly altered form as, "O wilt Thou pardon, Lord?" it was also given in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, and repeated subsequently in various collections. The Hymnary text opens, "And wilt Thou hear, O Lord?" The original dates from the middle of the ninth cent. [J. J.]

Τὸν ἐν προφήταις. St. Andrew of Crete. [St. John Baptist.] Three Idiomela from the Vespers of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, by St. Andrew of Crete (q. v.). The poems are in the form of an address to St. John, each of them closing with an appeal. It is found in the Menæa. The tr. "The first of all Apostles," by Dr. Littledale, was made for and 1st pub. in the People's Hymnal, 1867, signed "L," and appointed for the Festival of St. John Baptist. St. i.-v. represent the 1st idiomelon, st. 6 the 2nd, and verses 7, 8 the 3rd. The doxology added by translator.

[H. L. B.]

Τῶν ἱερῶν ἀθλοφόρων. St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [Martyrs.] The original from which this cento is taken is the Canon (see Greek Hymnody) for the Deacon St. Timothy and his wife St. Maura, whose martyrdom is commemorated by the Church of Constantinople on May 3. The Office for that day is included in the service-books of the Greek Church. The tr. of this cento was made by J. M. Neale, and first pub. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 4 st. of 8 l., and beginning, "Let our Choir new anthems raise." As a hymn for congregational use it was included in the People's H., 1867, the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and many others, and usually with the omission of st. iii., and sometimes altered, as, "Let the Church new anthems raise," and "Let the Church new anthems sing." The martyrdom of SS. Timothy and Maura has been popularized for the English reader by Canon Kingsley, in his poem "Santa Maura," and Dr. Neale's tr. of the cento from the Canon ranks with the most popular and widely used of his trs. from the Greek. Stanzas i., ii. represent Ode i.; the remaining stanzas give rather the spirit than the letter of the original. [J. J.]

Τὸν πρὸ ἡλίου ἡλιου δύναντα ποτὲ ἐν τάφῳ. [Easter.] This is an Oikos, or short hymn, in honour of the holy women who brought spices to anoint the body of Jesus, and follows in the Greek Office for Easter Day, a κοντάκιον (another short hymn), by St. Romanus (q. v.), to whom, possibly because of this close association, it is sometimes ascribed. It dates probably about 500, and is found inserted between Odes vi. and vii. of the Golden Canon of St. John of Damascene in the Pentecostarion. The original text, together with a blank verse tr., are given in Dr. Littledale's Offices, &c., of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 92 and p. 216, and the same tr. rendered into 8. 7s. measure by W. Chatterton Dix, in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 292. The two translations begin:—

Seeking as those who seek the day. R. F. Littledale.
As those who seek the break of day. W. C. Dix.

Tonna, Charlotte Elizabeth, née Browne, commonly known as "Charlotte Elizabeth," was the only daughter of Michael Browne, Rector of St. Giles, Norwich, and was b. in Norwich, Oct. 1, 1790. She was first married to Captain George Phelan, of the 60th Rifles (who d. in 1837), and secondly to the Rev. Lewis H. Tonna. Her death took place at Ramsgate, July 12, 1846. Under the name of "Charlotte Elizabeth" she pub. several works, including Chapters on Flowers, Derry, a Tale of the Revolution, Personal Recollections, &c. Her hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Holy Father, heavenly King (1832). God Man's only Refuge.
2. O God of Israel, deign to smile. For Resignation.
3. O Thou Who didst prepare. For Use at Sea.
4. Sinner, what hast thou to show? Christians' Joy.
5. Soldier go, but not to claim. The Good Fight of Faith.

Of these hymns Nos. 3, 4 appeared in W. Urwick's Dublin Coll. of Hys., 1829. [J. J.]

Toplady, Augustus Montague, m.a. The life of Toplady has been repeatedly and fully written, the last, a somewhat discursive and slackly put together book, yet matterful, by W. Winters (1872). Summarily, these data may be here given: he was born at Farnham, in Surrey, on November 4, 1740. His father, Richard Toplady, was a Major in the British army, and was killed at the siege of Carthage (1741) soon after the birth of his son. His widowed mother placed him at the renowned Westminster school, London. By-and-by circumstances led her to Ireland, and young Augustus was entered at Trinity College, Dublin, where he completed his academical training, ultimately graduating m.a. He also received his "new birth" in Ireland under remarkable conditions, as he himself tells us with oddly mixed humility and lofty self-estimate, as "a favourite of heaven," common to his school:—

"Strange that I who had so long sat under the means of grace in England should be brought right unto God in an obscure part of Ireland, midst a handful of people met together in a barn, and by the ministry of one who could hardly spell his own name. Surely it was the Lord's doing and is marvellous. The excellency of such power must be of God and cannot be of man. The regenerating spirit breathes not only on whom but likewise when and where and as He listeth."

To be read cum grano salis; for the present writer happens to know that the lay preacher, a Wesleyan Methodist, was James Morris, and his text Ephesians vi. 13; and that he was not the illiterate man Toplady's words would have us believe. Likewise he had far more brain power than his convert, and was a born orator, though reticent and lowly-minded. Toplady received orders in the Church of England on June 6, 1762, and after some time was appointed to Broadhembury. His Psalms and Hymns of 1776 bears that he was then "B.A." and Vicar of Broadhembury. Shortly thereafter he is found in London as minister of the Chapel of the French Calvinists in Leicester Fields. He was a strong and partizan Calvinist, and not well-informed theologically outside of Calvinism. We willingly and with sense of relief leave unstirred the small thick dust of oblivion that has gathered on his controversial writings, especially his scurrilous language to John Wesley because of his Arminianism, as we do John Wesley's deplorable misunderstanding and misrepresentation of Calvinism. Throughout Toplady lacked the breadth of the divine Master's watchword "Forbid him not, for he that is not against us is for us" (St. Luke ix. 50). He was impulsive, rash-spoken, reckless in misjudgment; but a flame of genuine devoutness burned in the fragile lamp of his over-tasked and wasted body. He d. on August 11, 1778. The last edition of his works is in 6 vols., 8vo., 1825. An accurate reproduction of most of his genuine hymns was one of the reprints of Daniel Sedgwick 1860. His name occurs and recurs in contemporary memoirs and ecclesiastical histories, e.g., in Tyerman's Life of John Wesley. The reader will find in their places annotations on the several hymns of Toplady, and specially on his "Rock of Ages," a song of grace that has given him a deeper and more inward place in millions of human hearts from generation to generation than almost any other hymnologist of our country, not excepting Charles Wesley. Besides the "Rock of Ages" must be named, for power, intensity, and higher afflatus and nicer workmanship, "Object of my first desire," and "Deathless principle arise." It is to be regretted that the latter has not been more widely accepted. It is strong, firm, stirring, and masterful. Regarded critically, it must be stated that the affectionateness with which Toplady is named, and the glow and passion of his faith and life, and yearning after holiness, have led to an over-exaltation of him as a hymn-writer. Many of his hymns have been widely used, and especially in America, and in the Evangelical hymn-books of the Church of England. Year by year, however, the number in use is becoming less. The reason is soon found. He is no poet or inspired singer. He climbs no heights. He sounds no depths. He has mere vanishing gleams of imaginative light. His greatness is the greatness of goodness. He is a fervent preacher, not a bard.

[A. B. G.]

Toplady's hymns and poetical pieces were published in his:—

(1) Poems on Sacred Subjects wherein The Fundamental Doctrines of Christianity, with many other interesting Points, are occasionally introduced. . . . Dublin: Printed by S. Powell, in Crane-lane, MDCCLIX.; (2) his Ps. & Hys. for Public and Private Worship, 1776; (3) in The Gospel Magazine, 1771-1776; and (4) in Hys. and Sacred Poems on a variety of Divine Subjects, &c. D. Sedgwick's reprint, 1860. His Works, with a Memoir by W. Row, were pub. in 6 vols. in 1794. Walter Row was also the editor of the 2nd and some later editions of the Ps. and Hys. He was a most careless editor, and attributed several hymns by C. Wesley and others to Toplady.

A large number of Toplady's hymns are annotated in this Dictionary under their respective first lines. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) The following additional hymns in C. U., together with centos indicated in the sub-lines, are from:—

i. His Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1759.

1. Can my heaven-born soul submit? All for Christ.
2. Come from on high, my King and God. Holiness desired.
(1.) O might this worthless heart of mine.
3. Earnest of future bliss. The Witness of the Spirit.
4. From Thy supreme tribunal, Lord. Christ's Righteousness a Refuge.
(1.) The spotless Saviour lived for me.
5. Great God, Whom heaven, and earth, and sea. For Peace.
6. I saw, and lo! a countless throng. Saints' Days. Revised form in Gospel Magazine, 1774, p. 449.
7. Immovable our hope remains. Divine Faithfulness.
8. Jesus, God of love, attend. Divine Worship. Pt. ii. Is "Prayer can mercy's door unlock."
9. Jesus, Thy power I fain would feel. Lent.
10. Lord, I feel a carnal mind. Mind of Christ desired.
11. My yielding heart dissolves as wax. On behalf of Arians, &c.
(1.) O Jesus, manifest Thy grace.
12. Not to myself I owe. Praise for Conversion.
(1.) Not to ourselves we owe.
(2.) The Father's grace and love.
13. O that my heart was right with Thee. Dedication to God desired.
14. O Thou that hearest the prayer of faith. Christ the Propitiation.
15. O Thou Who didst Thy glory leave. Thanksgiving for Redemption.
16. O when wilt Thou my Saviour be. Trust in Jesus.
(1.) Jesus, the sinner's Rest Thou art.

17. Redeemer, whither should I flee? Safety in the Cross.
18. Remember, Lord, that Jesus bled. Pardon.
19. Surely Christ thy griefs hath borne. Redemption. Revised text in Gospel Magazine, 1774, p. 548.
(1.) Weary sinner, keep thine eyes.
(2.) Weeping soul, no longer mourn.

ii. From the Gospel Magazine.

20. Compared with Christ, in all besides. Christ All in All. Feb. 1772.
21. Eternal Hallelujahs Be to the Father given. Holy Trinity. Dec. 1774.
22. From whence this fear and unbelief. Reviving Faith. Feb. 1772.
23. How vast the benefits divine. Redemption. Dec. 1774. From this "Not for the works which we have done" is taken.
24. Whom have I in heaven but Thee? Christ All and in All. Feb. 1772. From this "If my Lord Himself reveal" is taken.
25. Jesus, immutably the same. Jesus, the True Vine. June, 1771.

All these hymns, together with "O precious blood, O glorious death" (Death of Christ), are in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, &c., 1860. We have met with several other hymns to which Toplady's name is appended, but for this we can find no authority whatever. [J. J.]

Toss'd with rough winds, and faint with fear. Elizabeth Charles, nee Rundle. [Consolation in Affliction.] Appeared in her Three Wakings, &c., 1859, p. 190. It was given in an abbreviated form of 6 st. of 3 l., and the refrain, "'Tis I, be not afraid," in the Hy. Comp., 1870, and again in other collections. The slight change in the text of st. iii. was made by Mrs. Charles. [J. J.]

Tourneux, Nicolas le, was born of poor parents at Rouen, April 30, 1640. The uncommon ability he displayed at an early age attracted the notice of M. du Fosset, Maître des Comptes at Rouen, who sent him to the Jesuits' college at Paris, where he made remarkable progress in his studies. He then retired to Touraine, where he passed some time with a pious ecclesiastic in the practice of prayer and penitential exercises. His friend, observing that he had a gift for preaching, advised him to return to Rouen. This he did, and adopted the clerical profession, and was in 1662 admitted to priests' orders by special dispensation, though still under canonical age. He subsequently removed to Paris, where he employed his time in study, and in 1675 obtained the prize given by the French Academy for prose composition. He was appointed to a canony at the Sainte-Chapelle, and later became prior of Villiers sur Fere in the diocese of Soissons, and d. suddenly on the 28th Nov., 1686. He was the author of several theological and religious works, and wrote some hymns [see Index of Authors and Translators], which were inserted in the Cluniac Breviary of 1686, and the Paris Breviary of 1680. In the Cluniac Brev., 1686, his signature is "N.T.P.R." [G. A. C.]

Tract. Verses of Holy Scripture, originally always of the Psalms, sung after the Gradual instead of the Alleluia, in all masses from Septuagesima till Easter Eve in the Roman liturgy. The Tract was so called either because it was sung "tractim" by the cantor or cantors, without the interruption of other voices, or because, according to Durandus, it was sung in a slow, sad voice. In some of the later English Missals the Tract assumed a metrical form, as e.g. the following:—

“ Dulce nomen Jesu Christi,
Felix omen ferens tristi;
Jocundans mentem júbilo;
Tollit luctum, affert fructum,
Et obductum et seductum,
Purgat cor a nubilo.
Tam peccatum quam reatum
Condonatum, expurgatum,
Reddit mulcens leniter
Hostes ferit, mores serit,
Mala terit, graves gerit,
Plenum est prasidium;
Nos defendit, nos accendit,
Nos intendit, et extendit
Hoc nomen in gaudium.
Nominatum, invocatum,
Honoratum, prædicatum
Semper sonat dulciter.”

This Tract in the Masses of the Name of Jesus is found in three MS. Missals now in the Bodleian, viz., a Sarum (Barlow 5), a York (Univ. Coll.), and a Hereford (Univ. Coll.), each dating about the end of the 14th cent. [F. E. W.]

Tregelles, Samuel Prideaux, LL.D., s. of a Quaker, was b. at Wodehouse Place, Falmouth, Cornwall, Jan. 20 (sometimes dated Jan. 30), 1813, and educated at the Falmouth Grammar School. From 1838 to 1844, he was employed in the Neath Abbey Iron Works. In 1836 he became a private tutor in Falmouth. His deep interest in biblical studies developed in an earnest desire to produce the most perfect edition of the Greek Testament it was possible to publish. The first specimens of his work were pub. in 1838, and the first instalments of his task for public use, in 1844. His Greek Testament thus begun was pub. in parts, Pt. vi. appearing in 1872. The work was hindered by his two attacks of paralysis (1861 and 1870); and the Prolegomena had to be added by Dr. Hort and A. W. Streane in 1879. Dr. Tregelles received a Civil List Pension for some years. He was one of the Revisers of the New Testament, but ill-health prevented him from taking an active part in the work. He d. at Plymouth April 24, 1875. His hymn-writing began, so far as we can gather, before 1837, and extended to 1861 or later. The earliest were pub. in the Plymouth Brethren's Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1838; their Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, 1842; and their Few Hymns and some Spiritual Songs, selected, 1856. Some also were contributed to Dr. P. Maurice's Ch. of England Choral Hymn-Book, 1861, in which they are marked as having been supplied in “ms.” Some of those so marked were, however, in print before. His hymns now in C. U. include the following, the date of each as given being that of the collection named in which it appeared:—

1. Father, we Thy children bless Thee. Thanks-giving for Divine Mercies; and the Second Advent (1838). In the Few Hymns of 1856, st. iv., v. were given as No. 310, “Father, O how vast the blessing.”
2. Holy Saviour, we adore Thee. The Second Advent desired (1838).
3. Lord Jesus, we believing. Peace in Jesus (1861).
4. O God of grace, our Father. Praise for Electing Grace (1856).
5. O look not on the Cross of Christ. Christ the One Oblation (1861).
6. The gloomy night will [shall] soon be past. Heaven anticipated (1842).
7. Thou God of grace, our Father. Praise for Electing Grace (1838).

8. Thou, Lord of all, on earth hast dwelt. Passion-tide (1861).

9. Thou, O God, Thy love commendest. Complete in Jesus (1861).

10. Thy Name alone, O Lord, we own. Jesus, our Strength and Safety (1861).

11. Thy Name we beseech, Lord Jesus. Jesus, the Name over all (1838).

12. 'Tis sweet, O God, Thy praise to sing. The Sacrifice of Praise (1861).

13. 'Tis sweet to think of those at rest. The Dead in Christ; or, All Saints (1842).

14. 'Twas the Holy Ghost who taught us. Passion-tide (1841 Appendix to Hys. for the Poor of the Flock).

15. Worthy the Lamb is now the song. Communion of Saints (1861).

The use of Dr. Tregelles's hymns is mainly confined to the Plymouth Brethren; and taken as a whole they are marked by no striking features of excellence. [J. J.]

Trench, Richard Chenevix, D.D., was b. in North Frederick Street, Dublin, on Sept. 9th, 1807, during a visit of his parents of some months to Ireland. His father was Richard Trench, 6th son of Frederick Trench, of Woodlands, co. Galway; his mother Melesina, only grandchild and heiress of Richard Chenevix, Bishop of Waterford, and widow of Colonel St. George. On his mother's side he was almost purely French, the grandfather of Bishop Chenevix of Waterford, Philip Chenevix of d'Eply of Loraine having only taken refuge in England on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The Huguenot refugee families married for a long time within themselves, and in Mrs. Richard Trench, four distinct foreign strains were blended. Her sons (the Archbishop and his brothers, besides his two sisters) were the only descendants of the Refugee Philip, either in the male or female line, all the other branches having come to an end. Trench's home in childhood was Elm Lodge, close to the village of Bursledon, not far from Southampton. In February, 1816 he proceeded to Twyford School, and in 1819 to Harrow, where he won great distinction. In October 1825 he was entered at Trinity College, Cambridge. His mother's correspondence is full of references to a little periodical called The Translator, begun in 1825, or immediately on his becoming an undergraduate. She was his ardent co-worker both as contributor and critic. In 1826 he had acquired Spanish, and in that year applied himself to preparing and publishing a volume of Miscellanies, of which the “profits were to be sent to the committee formed for the relief of the exiled Spaniards.” On May 27th, 1827, his mother died at Malvern. The Letters and Memorials (1888) give vivid and exciting details of his continuous interest and daring personal service and sacrifices on behalf of Spain. It was during the winter days of 1829–30 that the consultations and schemes respecting Spain were discussed in John Sterling's apartment. Robert Boyd, Trench's cousin, threw himself and his entire fortune into the plot by purchasing a small ship in the Thames and storing it with arms, in which General Torrijos and fifty picked Spaniards were to sail for the new adventure of the Golden Fleece. The enterprise ended tragically. Boyd and others perished by the inevitable vengeance of the Spanish sovereign when captured. By the hand of God, Trench was safe in Gibraltar. Till far up in young manhood he was undeecided as to his calling, Law rather than Divinity colouring his thoughts and plans. He left Cambridge on February 1st, 1829, and rejoined his widowed father at Elm Lodge, near Southampton. He married, at the Abbey Church, Bath, on May 31st, 1832, his own cousin, Frances Mary Trench, daughter of his uncle, Francis Trench (2nd son of Frederick Trench, of Woodlawn, co. Galway, Ireland, and next brother to the 1st Lord Ashtown). On October 7th, 1832, he received Deacon's Orders in Norwich Cathedral at the hands of the aged Bishop Bathurst of Norwich. His first curacy was at Hadleigh, Norfolk, with H. J. Rose. He was ordained priest early in July, 1835, by Bishop Sumner, of Winchester. He pub. in 1835 The Story of Justin Martyr, and other Poems (Moxon). This was (practically) his first book. In 1838 followed Sabbation, Honor Neale, and other Poems, with Notes. In 1840 appeared his first prose work, Notes on the Parables of our Lord, subsequently companioned with Notes on the Miracles of our Lord (1846). In 1841 "the loving discipline of pain" visited his heart and hearth by the death of his eldest born, a deep sorrow which gave its subtlest and finest inspiration to his Elegiac Poems. A third volume of poetry, Poems from Eastern Sources, the Steadfast Prince, and other Poems, was pub. early in 1842; and a fourth, Genoeva, later in the same year. Early in 1843 he delivered his Five Sermons before the University of Cambridge, pub. in 1844. In 1844 also was pub. Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount, drawn from the Writings of St. Augustine, with Observations. In this same year he became Vicar of Itehen Stoke. In 1845 he delivered a lecture "On Language as an instrument of Knowledge," which expanded into his famous and suggestive Study of Words. In 1846 he was appointed Professor of Divinity at King's College, London, later changed into "Professor of the Exegesis of the New Testament," which he held until 1858. The friendship between Trench and Maurice here was very beautiful. In 1846 also came the Hulsean Lectures, their subject being Christ "the Desire of all Nations." In 1849 appeared his Sacred Latin Poetry. This is an inestimable book. In 1852, Lessons on Proverbs and Study of Words, and in 1855 English Past and Present appeared. His Synonyms of the New Testament (1854) was a permanent contribution and inspiration to Philology and Theology. Life's Dream: the Great Theatre of the World, from the Spanish of Calderon, with an Essay on his Life and Genius, was pub. in 1856; 2nd ed. in 1880. The Crimean war drew from him his finest verse, Poems written during the Russian War (1854-55). In 1856 he was appointed Dean of Westminster. In 1861 was pub. his Commentary on the Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia. On New Year's Day, 1864, he was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin in Christ Church Cathedral. He instantly took a foremost place in the regard of the entire community. His pub. Sermons, including his Studies on the Gospels (1867), are amongst the most thoughtful and quietly eloquent in our language; as are his Lectures on Plutarch (1873), and others. Timolem (1881) was his last poem. His final confirmation was in St. Bartholomew's Church on May 16th, 1884. On November 28th, 1884, he resigned his Archbishopric. He d. in London, March 28, 1886. Few have left behind them a more stainless, a more loveable, a more enviable memory. He was sweetness and light embodied. [A. B. G.]

In the strict sense of the word Archbishop Trench, although a poet, was not a hymn-writer. Some of his poetical pieces are used as hymns, but their use is limited. These include:—

1. High thoughts at first, and visions high. Ordination. Appeared in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, p. 53, in 7 st. of 8 l., and entitled "To a Friend entering the Ministry." (Poems, 1885, i. p. 30.) Its use as a hymn is in an abbreviated form.

2. I say to thee, do thou repeat. Safety in Divine Guidance. Pub. in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, in 10 st. of 3 l., again in his Poems, 1865, p. 98, and ed. 1885, i. p. 140. It is headed, "The Kingdom of God."

3. Let all men know that all men move. Love of God. Pub. in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., p. 111. It is given in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874; Order's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others.

4. Lord, weary of a painful way. Evening. Appeared in his Sabbation, Honor Neale, &c., 1838, p. 117; and Poems, 1885, i. p. 207.

5. Not Thou from us, O Lord, but we. Divine Love. Pub. in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, p. 62, in 14 l., and in his Poems, 1885, i. p. 109.

6. Pour forth the oil, pour boldly forth. The Law of Love. Appeared in his Sabbation, Honor Neale, and Other Poems, 1838, p. 132, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Law of Love," also in his Poems, 1865, p. 150, and ed. 1885, i. p. 215. From this is taken the hymn, "Make channels for the stream of love."

7. Some murmur when their sky is clear. Contentment. Pub. in the Sabbation, Honor Neale, and Other Poems, 1838, p. 116, in 2 st. of 8 l., in his Poems, 1865, p. 113, and ed. 1885, i. p. 142.

8. Thou inevitable day. Death. From his Sabbation, Honor Neale, &c., 1838, p. 99, in 14 st. of 3 l., and headed, "The Day of Death." Also in Poems, 1885, i. p. 213. [J. J.]

Trestrail, Elizabeth Ryland, née Dent, was b. at Milton, near Northampton, March 24, 1813, and is great-granddaughter of the Rev. John Collet Ryland, A.M., grand-niece of the Rev. John Ryland, D.D. (v. Ryland, John), and sister of Miss Caroline Dent (p. 288, ii.). Her first husband was John Roby, banker, of Rochdale. In 1858 she was married to the Rev. F. Trestrail, D.D., an eminent minister of the Baptist Denomination.

Mrs. Trestrail contributed a few pieces to the Thoughts and Sketches in Verse, pub. by her sister. She also wrote the Sketch of the Life & Character of John Roby, prefixed to his Legendary & Poetical Remains (Longmans, 1854). She was also joint authoress with her sister of a small vol. of consolatory verses printed for private circulation, and entitled Our Darling (1861). Only one of Mrs. Trestrail's hymns is in C. U.—"Hallelujah! Praise the Lord" (Praise). It was written in 1864, in celebration of the Jubilee of the Baptist mission in Jamaica, and is No. 5 in the Bap. Ps. & Hys. for School and Home, 1882. [W. R. S.]

Trinitas, Unitas, Deitas aeterna. [Trinity Sunday.] Given by Mone, No. 6, from a Munich ms. of the 12th cent. and arranged in 36 lines, and repeated in Daniel v. p. 206, and Kehelein, No. 141. Tr. as:—

Trinity, Unity, Deity, Eternal [Majesty]. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Notes, 1854; the Hymnary (with alterations), 1872; the Hymner, 1882, &c. [W. A. S.]

Triodion. [Τριώδιον.] [Greek Hymnody, § xv, xvi. 10.]

Τριφεργῆς Μονὰς Θεαρχικῆ. [Metropolitan of Smyrna, p. 732, i.]

Trisagion. [Τρισάγιον.] [Greek Hymnody, § x. 7.]

Tritton, Joseph, was b. at Battersea, Surrey, Sept. 21, 1819, educated at Charterhouse and other schools, and was for upwards of 40 years a partner in the banking-house of Barclay, Bevan, Tritton & Co., Lombard Street. He was a member of the Baptist Denomination, and for many years Treasurer of the Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, and of a number of other important philanthropic and religious institutions. During the latter part of life his residence was Bloomfield, Norwood. He d. May 1, 1887. Mr. Tritton was for many years an occasional writer of hymns and poems. Two of the hymns sung at the opening of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, in 1861, were composed by him for that occasion, and afterwards incorporated by Mr. Spurgeon in O. O. H. Bk., 1866. These are:—

1. Sing to the Lord with heart and voice. Opening of a Place of Worship.
2. Spirit of glory and of grace. Opening of a Place of Worship.

A third hymn in the same book,

3. Behold He comes! the glorious King (Second Advent), was composed in 1856. In the 1880 Supplement to the Bap. Ps. and Hys. are two hymns prepared for use at meetings of the Baptist Missionary Society in 1880. These are:—

4. Head of the Church and Lord of all. Missions.
5. Lord God of our salvation. Missions.

Other hymns of merit by Mr. Tritton have appeared from time to time in The Missionary Herald. [W. R. S.]

Triumphe! plaudant maria. [Ascension.] Probably of the 17th cent. Included in the Sirenes symphoniacae, Cologne, 1678, p. 108; the Psalterium cantionum catholicarum, Cologne, 1722, p. 114; in the Hymnodia sacra, Münster, 1753, p. 118; and in Daniel ii. p. 365. Tr. as:—

1. Sing victory, O ye seas and lands. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediaeval Hys., 1851, p. 157.
2. With all your floods attending. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Hys., 1862, p. 106, and the Hymnary, 1872.
3. O clap your hands, ye oceans. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, with the signature, "B. T." In The St. Michael's Hyl., Teignmouth, it begins, "O clap your hands, great ocean." [J. M.]

Troparia. [Τροπάρια.] [Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 10.]

Troparium. The Tropary was a mediaeval service-book, of which specimens exist from the 9th century onwards. It contained the Tropitags or farses prefixed to or inserted into the Introit, Kyries and other choral parts of the service. It also contained the Sequences or Proseae ad Sequentiam, an extension of the last syllable of the Alleluia preceding the Gospel. These non-scriptural and complicated additions to the Ordinary and Canon of the Mass mostly fell out of use in the thirteenth century. Those which survived became incorporated in the Gradual or Missal. But the word Troparium still appears from the 13–16th century, with an altered meaning, as a book merely containing the Sequences. A 15th cent. tas. Troparium in the Bodleian Library (Rawl.

c. 90), imperfect at the commencement, contains 101 Sequences, and another Bodleian ms. of the same date (Laud, Misc. 524) contains 65. See also Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 8902, 15th cent., and article on Sequences. [F. E. W.]

Trope. Tropes were short verses prefixed, or added to, or introduced into the middle of the Introit, Gloria in Excelsis, and other choral parts of High Mass, and added much to the intricacy of the service. They were certainly in use in the tenth century, perhaps earlier, but they were entirely excised from the Roman Missal in the revision under Pius V. They seem occasionally to have taken a metrical shape. The following, given as among the Tropes in an ancient English Troparium for the recently baptized, at Easter or Pentecost, is an instance.

"Audite vocem hymni
Qui estis vere digni
In hac beata nocte
Conscendite ad fontem," etc.

Pamelius Liturgicon, ii. 615.
[F. E. W.]

True Bread of Life, in pitying [tender] mercy given. H. Bonar. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 2nd series, 1861, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The True Bread." It is usually given in 4 st., and sometimes as "True Bread of Life, in tender mercy given," as in T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, 1887. [J. J.]

Try us, O God, and search the ground. C. Wesley. [Prayer for Unity.] Pub. in the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 4 parts, as follows:—

1. Try us, O God, and search the ground. This part is in 6 st. of 4 l. It was included, with the omission of st. v., in G. Whitefield's Ps. & Hys., 1753, p. 135; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 122; and in later collections to the present day. The full form of the text was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 489. Both forms are in extensive use. G. J. Stevenson's note in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 316, is specially interesting as setting forth the spiritual use of these stanzas.
- ii. Jesu, all power is given to Thee. This is in 8 st. of 4 l. Not in C. U.
- iii. God of our life, at Thy command. In 6 st. of 4 l. Not in C. U.
- iv. Jesu, united by Thy grace. This part, in 9 st. of 4 l., was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 490, and has also passed in full or in part into several collections in G. Britain and America. In the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, st. i. and iii. are given as "Father, united by Thy grace."

There are also the following centos in C. U.:—

1. The sacred bond of perfectness. This, in the American Methodist Episco. Hymns, 1849, &c., is composed of st. vi.-ix. of Pt. iv., slightly altered.
2. Through Him Who all our sickness felt. This, in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, is thus composed: st. ii. and iii. are from Pt. i. (st. iii., iv.), and st. i. and iv. are based upon thoughts and expressions scattered through the four parts.

The complete hymn is headed "A Prayer for persons joined in Fellowship." Full orig. text in P. Works, 1868–72, ii. p. 136. [J. J.]

Tu Christe nostrum gaudium. [Ascension.] This is a portion of "Aeterna Rex altissime" (p. 26, ii.), and begins with line 37. It is in the Sarum and Aberdeen Breviaries; in Daniel i. No. 162, and Mone, No. 172. Its use was on the Vigil of the Ascension, and Daily up to Pentecost. Tr. as:—

1. O Christ, Thou art our joy and light. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852, p. 209. In this Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 191, and the Hymner, 1882, it begins "O Christ, Thou art our joy alone."

2. O Christ, our joy, gone up on high. D. T. Morgan, in H. A. & M., 1875, and his Hys. and Other Poetry of the Latin Church, 1880.

Other trs. are:—

1. Lord Christ, our living Joy art Thou. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

2. O Christ, the Source of our delight. J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884. [J. J.]

Tu qui velatus facie. [Passiontide.] Mone, Nos. 87-91, gives this from a 14th cent. Reichenau ms. where it bears the title "Hours of the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ, compiled from the Prophets and the New Testament by the blessed Pope Urban." [The pope meant may possibly be Urban the 4th, pope 1261-1264; more probably Urban the 5th, b. 1302, d. 1370.] It is in five parts, viz.: i. "Tu qui velatus facie," for Prime; ii. "Hora qui ductus tertiâ," for Terce; iii. "Crucem pro nobis subiit," for Sext; iv. "Beata Christi passio," for None; v. "Qui jacuisti mortuus," for Compline. Mone's text is repeated by Daniel iv. p. 220, who adds that an office with this hymn was in use at Halberstadt till the beginning of this century. [W. A. S.]

The trs. of this hymn into English, and as divided for divine service, are:—

i. Tu qui velatus facie. Prime.

1. Thou, Who though veiled Thy glorious face. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 164.

2. O Thou, Who, though with veiled face. By Elizabeth Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 176.

3. Sun of Righteousness, blest face. By F. Oakeley, in his Devotions Commemorative of the Most Adorable Passion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. 1842.

ii. Hora qui ductus tertia. Terce.

1. Thou Who at this third hour of dread. By J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 165, with the opening line given as "Tu qui hac hora tertia."

2. Thou Who at the third hour wast led. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 177.

3. Who to die, along the road. By F. Oakeley, as above.

iii. Crucem pro nobis subiit. Sext.

1. The Cross for us the Saviour bore. By J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 165.

2. For us the bitter cross He bore. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 177.

3. The Cross for us see Jesus bear. By F. Oakeley, as above.

iv. Beata Christi passio. None.

1. Now may Christ's blissful Passion ever. J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 166.

2. Christ's blessed Passion set us free. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 178.

3. Suffering Christ, we pray to Thee. By F. Oakeley, as above.

v. Qui jacuisti mortuus. Compline.

1. Thou sinless King, Who stark and dead. By J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 167.

2. O Thou Who layest dead, the King. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 178.

3. Who in the grave. By F. Oakeley, as above.

Of these trs. those by Mrs. Charles are in Thring's Coll., 1882; and those by Canon F. Oakeley, in Skinner's Daily Service Hyl. 1864. [J. J.]

The Compline hymn "Qui jacuisti mortuus" has also been rendered into English through the German as follows:—

Der du Herr Jesu, Ruh und Rast. Included in the Königsberg G. B., 1650 (preface 1643), p. 167, in 3 st., marked as by Georg Werner. It is also in Crüger's Praxis, 1648, No. 125, the Uuv. L. S., 1851, No. 92, &c. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Lord Jesu, Who with holy rest. In full, as No. 25, in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

2. Lord Jesus, Who our souls to save. A full and good tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 36, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No.

55. Repeated in the Irish Church Hyl., 1869 and 1873; Boardman's Sel., Philadelphia, 1861; Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868; Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880, &c.

[J. M.]

Tu Trinitatis Unitas. St. Gregory the Great? [Friday. Morning.] (St. ii. is "Jam [Nam] lectulo consurgimus.") Mone, No. 279, and i. p. 372, gives this as probably by St. Gregory (it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors), and cites it as in a ms. of the 8th cent. at Trier, one of the 9th cent., also at Trier, &c. By Hinemar in his De unâ et non trinâ Deitate, 857, it is ascribed to St. Ambrose; but it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors nor by Biraghi in his Inni sinceri e Carmi de Sant' Ambrogio, 1862. Daniel gives the text at i. No. 25, and at iv. p. 38 cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent. ranking it as one of the hymns of the 7th or 8th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 22; Jul. A. vi. f. 28 b; Harl. 2961 f. 224); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30851 f. 174 b), an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848 f. 78 b), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 236); in two mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surttees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 8 b). It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1643, and other Breviaries, as a hymn on Friday at Matins and Nocturns. The text is also in Wackernagel i., No. 6, Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 54; in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. See also note on following hymn. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Dread Unity in Trinity. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 40. This is given in the Hymnary, 1872, in an abridged and altered form, as "Dread Trinity in Unity."

2. O Three in One and One in Three. In the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, p. 20.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. Thou great mysterious Three and One. Primer. 1706.

2. Holy Being, One and Three. Bp. R. Mant. 1837.

3. Thou Unity of Trinity. J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852.

4. May the dread Three in One, Who sways. Card. Newman. 1853.

5. Dread Triune Mystery. Hymnarium Anglicanum. 1844.

6. O Thou, Who dost all nature sway. E. Caswall. 1849.

7. Thou Trinity of Unity. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

8. O Three in One, eternal Cause. F. Trappes. 1865.

9. Thou Godhead One in Persons Three. J. Wallace. 1873. [J. J.]

Tu Trinitatis Unitas. [Trinity Sunday.] This cento was added to the Roman Breviary at the revision of 1568, and is found at p. 436 of the ed. pub. at Rome in 1570, as the hymn at Lauds on Trinity Sunday. It consists of st. i. of the hymn noted above, and of st. iii. of the hymn "Aeterna coeli gloria" ("Ortus refulget lucifer"); with an added doxology. This form is repeated in the 1632 and later eds. of the Roman Breviary, and in Card.

Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Thou great mysterious Three and One. Primer. 1706.
2. Three in One, and One in Three, Sov'reign of the universe. Bp. Doane, 1824.
3. Thou Trinity in Unity. Bp. J. Williams, 1845.
4. Thrice-holy One, All-glorious Trine. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
5. O Thou! Who dost all nature sway. E. Caswall, 1849.
6. Thou Three in One, Who mightily. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
7. Thou Godhead One in Persons Three. J. Wallace, 1874.
8. Blest Three in One, and One in Three. R. Campbell, circa 1850, from the Campbell mss. into O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884. [J. M.]

Tuba Domini, Paule, maxima. Peter Abelard. [Conversion of St. Paul.] Cousin in his ed. of Abelard's Opera, Paris, 1849, vol. i. p. 320, gives this from a ms. in the Royal Library at Brussels. This ms. is of the 12th cent. and is probably the collection of hymns which Abelard prepared for the use of the Abbey of the Paraclete, of which Heloise was abbess. The text is given with full notes in Trench, ed. 1864, p. 207. Also in Neale's Sequentiae, 1852, p. 98, Daniel v. p. 234, and Kehrein, No. 385. It is tr. as "Mightiest of our militant Lord," in the Monthly Packet, 1869. The tr. which in some copies of the Hy. Noted is marked as from this hymn, is really from the "Paule doctor egregie": p. 887, i. [J. M.]

Turner, Daniel, M.A., was b. at Blackwater Park, near St. Albans, March 1, 1710. Having received a good classical education, he for some years kept a boarding-school at Hemel Hempstead, but in 1741 he became pastor of the Baptist church, Reading. Thence he removed, in 1748, to Abingdon, and continued pastor of the Baptist church there until his death on Sept. 5, 1798. He was much respected throughout his denomination, and was the friend and correspondent of Robert Robinson, Dr. Rippon, and other eminent men of that day. He probably received the honorary degree of M.A. from the Baptist College, Providence, Rhode Island. Turner was the author of works on Open Communion and Social Religion; also of Short Meditations on Select Portions of Scripture. His Divine Songs, Hymns and other Poems were pub. in 1747, and his work, Poems Devotional and Moral, was printed for private circulation in 1794. Four of his hymns are in the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans (1769), and eight (including the four already named) in Rippon's Bap. Sel. 1787). Only the following are now in C. U.:—

1. Faith adds new charms to earthly bliss (1769). Excellence of Faith.
2. Jesus, full of all compassion (1769). Sinner's appeal to Christ.
3. Lord of hosts, how lovely fair (1787). Divine Worship. Altered in Baptist Ps. and Hymns, 1858, to "Lord of hosts, how bright, how fair!"

The well-known hymn "Beyond the glittering starry skies," in its enlarged form of 28 stanzas, was the joint production of Turner and his brother-in-law, the Rev. J. Fanch, for details of which see p. 139, ii. [W. R. S.]

Turney, Edward, D.D., an American Baptist minister, was b. at Easton (then Weston), Connecticut, May 6, 1816, and graduated at Madison University, New York. He was successively pastor at Hartford and at Granville, Ohio (1842-47); Professor of Biblical Criticism, Madison University, 1850, and also of Biblical Literature at Fairmount Theological Seminary, Cincinnati (1853-58). Subsequently he taught in Washington, District of Columbia. He d. at Washington, Sept. 28, 1872. He pub. Baptismal Hymns, 1862, and Memorial Poems and Hymns, 1864. Of these hymns the following are in C. U.:—

1. Blessed Jesus, blessed Jesus. Peace and Rest in Jesus.
2. Come to Jesus, little one (1860). Invitation.
3. I will go in the strength of the Lord (circa 1860). Missions. In the Church Missionary Gleaner (English) in 1861.
4. O love divine, O matchless grace (1864). Divine Love.

These hymns are in the Memorial Poems & Hymns, 1864. [F. M. B.]

Tuttiett, Lawrence, s. of John Tuttiett, surgeon in the R.N., was b. at Cloyton, Devonshire, in 1825, and educated at Christ's Hospital, and King's College, London. It was originally purposed that he should follow the medical profession, but, abandoning it for the ministry, he took Holy Orders in 1848. In 1854 he became vicar of Lea Marston, Warwickshire; and in 1870 incumbent of the Episcopal Church of St. Andrews, Scotland. He was also preferred to a prebendaryship in St. Ninian's Cathedral, Perth, in 1880. He is the author of several manuals of prayers, pub. by the S. P. C. K., and other prose works, and also of:—

- (1) Hymns for Churchmen, 1854; (2) Counsels of a Godfather, 1861; (3) Hymns for the Children of the Church, 1862; (4) Germs of Thought on the Sunday Services, 1864; (5) Through the Clouds; Thoughts in Plain Verse, 1866.

From those works and other sources the following hymns have come into C. U.:—

1. As calmly in the glowing west. Evening.
2. Come, our Father's voice is calling. Confirmation. Appeared in his Hys. for the Children of the Church, 1862, in 6 st. of 4 l. It passed into Mrs. C. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.
3. Grant us Thy light that we may know. Divine Guidance. Included in his Germs of Thought, &c., 1864, in 6 st. of 4 l. In Horde's Cong. H. Bk., 1884; the Universal H. Bk., 1885, it begins, "O grant us light that we may know."
4. I come, O Father kind. Holy Communion.
5. Lo, like a bride, in pure array. Septuagesima.
6. No sign we ask from heaven above. After Holy Baptism. Pub. in his Hys. for Churchmen, 1854, in 4 st. of 6 l. It has passed into several collections, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, &c.
7. Now, eternal Father, bless. Holy Baptism. In his Hys. for the Children of the Church, 1862, in 3 st. of 6 l., and Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881. In the latter it is attributed to Bp. MacLagan in error.
8. O happy Christian children. Divine Protection. From his Hys. for the Children of the Church, 1862, into Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, &c.
9. O Jesu, ever present. The Good Shepherd. Pub. in his Germs of Thought, 1864; the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, and many others.
10. Shepherd, good and gracious. The Good Shepherd. In his Hys. for the Children of the Church, 1862; Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, &c.
11. Sometimes o'er our pathway. In time of Trouble. From his Hys. for the Children of the Church, 1862, in 3 st. of 8 l., into Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.
12. When the world is brightest. Litany to the Saviour. Pub. in his Through the Clouds, &c., 1866, in 10 st. of 8 l., with the note:—"Those words were written for the music of a Roman Litany 'Ave Stella Maris.'" This Litany is in extensive use.
13. Who is this? the long expected. Advent.

In addition to these, several of Mr. Tuttiett's hymns are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), the most popular of which are, "Father, let me dedicate"; "Go forward, Christian soldier"; and "O quickly come, dread Judge of all." Mr. Tuttiett's hymns are characterised by smoothness of rhythm, directness of aim, simplicity of language, and deep earnestness. Those for special services and seasons are of great merit. He d. May 21, 1897. [J. J.]

'Twas on that night when doomed to know. John Morison. [Holy Communion.] First appeared as No. 35 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, in 6 st. of 4 l., as a version of Matt. xxvi. 26-29. Here st. iv. ll. 1, 2, read:—

"Then taking in his hands the cup,
To Heav'n again he thanks sent up."

The rewriting of these lines was the only change made in the public worship ed. issued in that year to the Church of Scotland, and still in use. The hymn bears a close resemblance to a Latin hymn, beginning, "Nocte quā Christus rabidis Apellis" (Private Prayers, p. 405, Parker Society, 1851, quoted in full in the notes to the larger ed. of the Free Church H. Bk., 1882), by Andreas Ellinger, who was b. 1526 at Orlamünde, on the Saale, a little above Jena, and d. March 12, 1882, at Jena, where he had become Professor of Medicine in 1569. Mr. William Bonar, of London, considered it a tr. from Ellinger by William Archibald (ordained parish minister of Unst, Shetland, in 1735, d. there March 7, 1785), and that Archibald's text was altered by Morison for the Translations and Paraphrases. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), it is ascribed to Morison. It is very generally used in Scotland as a Communion hymn. Included in Burgess & Money's Ps. & Hys., 1857; Common Praise, 1879; Church Praise, 1883, and other collections; and in full and unaltered, as No. 35 in the Free Church H. Bk., 1882. The resemblance to Watts's "Twas on that dark and doleful night," in his Hymns, 1709, Bk. iii., No. 1, often referred to, is but slight. [J. M.]

'Twas silence in Thy temple, Lord. J. Keble. [Ordination.] Dated March 28, 1828, and pub. in the 4th ed. of his Christian Year, 1828, in 13 st. of 4 l. The following centos therefrom are in C. U.:—

1. Spirit of Christ, Thine earnest given (st. viii.). In Holder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.
2. Spirit of Christ, be earnest given (st. viii.). In the Cong. Church Hymnal, 1887.
3. Spirit of Light and Truth, to Thee (st. x.). In the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; the New Cong. H. Bk., 1859, and others.

It is somewhat curious to note that whilst this poem has been thus made use of by Non-conformists, the Church of England, upon whose Office for Ordination it is based, has utterly ignored it in her hymnody for public worship. [J. J.]

Twells, Henry, M.A., was b. in 1823, and educated at St. Peter's College, Cambridge. B.A. 1848, M.A. 1851. Taking Holy Orders in 1849, he was successively Curate of Great Berkhamsted, 1849-51; Sub-Vicar of Stratford-on-Avon, 1851-54; Master of St. Andrew's House School, Mells, Somerset, 1854-56; and Head Master of Godolphin School, Hammer-smith, 1856-70. In 1870 he was preferred to the Rectory of Baldock, Herts, and in 1871 to that of Waltham-on-the-Wolds. He was Select Preacher at Cambridge in 1873-74, and became an Honorary Canon of Peterborough Cathedral in 1884. Canon Twells is best known by his beautiful evening hymn, "At even ere the sun was set" (p. 88, ii.). He also contributed the following hymns to the 1889 Suppl. Hys. to H. A. & M.:—

1. Glorious is Thy Name, O Lord. The Name of God.
2. Know ye the Lord hath borne away? Ascension.
3. Not for our sins alone. Plea for Divine Mercy.
4. The voice of God's Creation found me. The Word of God a Light. [J. J.]

Two brothers freely cast their lot. Card. Newman. [SS. James and John.] Written at sea, June 22, 1833, and printed anonymously in the British Magazine, 1835, vol. vii. p. 661, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Lyra Apostolica, 1836, p. 31, and again in Card. Newman's Verses on Various Occasions, 1868. Usually in modern collections it is appropriated to St. James, and a doxology is usually added, as in the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860, or as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. [J. J.]

Two clouds before the summer gale. J. Keble. [St. Luke.] Written April 6, 1822, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 20 st. of 4 l. It is also given in all subsequent editions of the same work. In 1854 a cento from this poem, consisting of st. ix.-xii., xix. and xx. were given with slight alterations, in Hys. for the Christian Seasons, pub. at Gainsburgh, No. 143, as, "Behold and see Christ's chosen saint." This cento is also given in the same form in Chope's Hymnal, 1862. [J. J.]

Tye, Christopher, MUS. D., b. at Westminster in the reign of Henry VIII. He was celebrated as a musician, and was granted the degree of MUS. D. at Cambridge in 1545. He was musical tutor to King Edward VI., and organist of the Chapel Royal under Queen Elizabeth. Besides composing numerous anthems, he rendered the first fourteen chapters of the Acts of the Apostles into metre, which were set to music by him and sung in Edward 6th's Chapel, and pub. in 1553. [English Hymnody, Early, § vi.] He d. circa 1580. [J. J.]

Tyers, John, was b. at Wymeswold, in Leicestershire, Oct. 14, 1788. For a number of years in the earlier part of his life he lived at Loughborough, where he was in business as a lace manufacturer. In 1835 he removed to Leicester, where he d. Sept. 11, 1848. Mr. Tyers was a General Baptist, widely known and much respected, and though never the pastor of a church, was often engaged in preaching. Seven of his hymns are in the 1830 Appendix to the General Baptist Hymn-book, and two as below in the Baptist Hymnal, 1879:—

1. Come, Holy Spirit, from the throne. The Holy Spirit.
2. Great God, avow this house Thine own. Opening a Place of Worship.

Besides these Mr. Tyers wrote a number of hymns for Sunday Schools, which appeared in the school hymn-books of his day, but are no longer in use. He was also the author of a short poem on the Death of the Rev. Robert Smith, of Nottingham (Lond., 1829). [W. R. S.]

Tymms, Thomas Vincent, was b. in Westminster, Jan. 5, 1842. After being educated for the Baptist ministry in Regent's Park College, London, he became, in 1865, pastor at Berwick-upon-Tweed. Thence, in 1868, he removed to Accrington, and in 1869 to London, where he now ministers to an influential congregation in the Downs Chapel, Clapton. In 1885 Mr. Tymms published an able book entitled The Mystery of God; a consideration of some intellectual hindrances to Faith (2nd ed. 1886; a 3rd ed. 1887). Mr. Tymms has written several hymns, which have been printed in the 1880 Supplement to the Bap. Psalms and Hymns, and in the Bap. Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882:—

1. Another Sabbath ended (1866). Sunday Evening.
2. In Shiloh, where Thine ark was stored (1881). Prayer to the God of Samuel.
3. O Lord of glory, be my light (1882). Invocation.
4. Lord, I read of tender mercy (1882). Tenderness of Jesus.

Of these hymns, No. 4, originally in 7 st. of 4 l., was altered and abridged to 5 st. in the Bap. Ps. and Hys. for School and Home. The original st. v.-vii. are:—

Ulrich Anton of Brunswick. [Anton Ulrich.]

Ultricibus nos undique. C. Coffin. [Friday.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, of the same year, p. 27. In the Paris and other French Brevs. it is the hymn for Fridays at Lauds from Trinity to Advent. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 30, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. While Thine avenging arrows fall. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 35, and again with alterations as "Lord, while Thy chastening arrows fall," in the Hymnary, 1872.

2. Lord, when Thine avenging dart. By G. Rorison, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 58. In the 1869 Appendix to the same No. 307, the last 4 st. are given as "Lord, Thy chastening hand we fear."

Other trs. are:—

1. While Thine avenging arrows, Lord. J. Chandler. 1837.
2. When Thou, O God, Thine own elect. J. D. Chambers. 1857.
3. Great Searcher of our hearts, Whilst Thy, &c. D. T. Morgan. 1880.

Ἐγνώμεν κούρον νύμφας. Synesius. Bp. of Ptolemais. [Christmas.] This is hymn v. of the ten hymns which he wrote at various periods of his life, and dates 375-430. It opens as a hymn for the Nativity, but expands into a prayer to Christ in the fulness of His glory. The Greek text is found in the Anth. Græca Carm. Christ., 1871. From this Mr. Chatfield's tr.:—"Awake, our lute, the child to sing" was made, and first pub. in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, in 13 st. of 4 l. [See Greek Hymnody, § v.] [J. J.]

Ἐγνοῦμέν σου Χριστέ, τὸ σωτήριον Πάθος. [Easter.] The author of these "four Resurrection Stichera of the Octoechus" is unknown. They are found in the Office for the "Sunday of Easter," as reprinted by Dr. Littledale in his Offices of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 95, together with a blank verse tr. at p. 220. This latter has been re-written by W. Chatterton Dix, and included in the Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 277: "Christ, we sing Thy saving passion." This was repeated in the People's H., 1867. [J. J.]

Uncta Crux Dei cruore. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Holy Cross.] This is a cento from three of his hymns, viz.: (1) "Luce quanta se sub una;" (2) "Publici fontens salutis;" and (3) "Totius fons sanctiatis"—all given in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1698, pp. 93-96. It was appointed in the revised Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn at Lauds at the Feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross. Tr. as "With the precious blood anointed" by "Sister M." for the Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 46. Repeated in the People's H., 1867, and marked as from "Uncta Dei Crux cruore." [J. J.]

Under Thy wings, my God, I rest. Anna L. Waring. [Trust in God.] 1st pub. in her Hys. and Meditations, 1850, No. xv., in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "I will trust in the covert of Thy wings," Ps. lxi. 4. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, it is given as, "Beneath Thy wings, O God, I rest." [J. J.]

Ungrateful sinners, whence this scorn? P. Doddridge. [Despising Divine Mercy.] This hymn is No. 72 in the d. mss., headed, "Of despising Divine Mercy, and treasuring up Wrath. From Rom. ii. 4, 5." In Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, the same text and heading were given as No. 258; and in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 283. This hymn was given, with slight changes, in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, from a ms. described under Doddridge, P., in Various. In the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, the 1745 text was recast, viz., st. i. from 1745; st. ii. from 1745, with scorn for "spurn"; st. iii. from the 1751 Draft; st. iv. new; st. v. Doddridge rewritten; st. vi. new. According to the marked list by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) this final form of the hymn was by Cameron. [J. J.]

Unheard the dewdrops around me fall. [Peace amid silence.] This hymn appeared anonymously in Dr. G. W. Briggs's (Unitarian)

Hys. for Pub. Worship, Boston, 1845, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Hedge and Huntington's Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, and later American collections; and in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873. In Stopford A. Brooke's Christian Hys., 1881, No. 177, it is slightly altered, and another stanza (iv.) is added. This text is repeated in Holder's Cong. Hys., 1884, No. 438. [J. J.]

Unitarian Hymnody, Scottish.
[Scottish Hymnody, p. 1032, i.]

Unitarian Hymnody, Welsh. [Welsh Hymnody.]

Unitarian Hymnody.—For the right understanding of English Unitarian Hymnody a few words of historical introduction are needed.

1. The English Presbyterians, after close fellowship with the Independents during the early decades of last century, gradually moved into a separate position. Through force of circumstances they had become as much congregational in their system of church government as their neighbours, but after the Salters' Hall controversy of 1719 they were more and more confirmed in the principle of non-subscription to any formulated statement of belief, the Bible only being their standard of authority in matters of doctrine. The consequence was that while the Independents at the close of the century occupied much the same doctrinal position as at the beginning, the Presbyterians had passed through various changes. Their original Calvinism had been abandoned for a form of Arminian doctrine, and then, through the influence of such men as Locke and Dr. Samuel Clarke (their teachers, though not of their fellowship), they gradually adopted the scheme of Arianism. This was held in various degrees of precision, until it passed into Unitarianism, as in the person of Dr. Priestley and those who thought with him, towards the close of the century. A similar change had taken place in a portion of the General Baptist churches, especially in the south of England, and these two groups of non-subscribing congregations were naturally drawn together by their common sympathies. Then there was the congregation of Unitarians organised in Essex Street Chapel, London, by Theophilus Lindsey, on his leaving the Church of England, as early as 1774; and to these have been added during the present century other congregations, either through doctrinal development (as with certain Methodist Societies under Joseph Cooke, early in the century, or later through the influence of Joseph Barker), or through fresh missionary effort on the part of established societies of Unitarians. (Cf. Rev. J. J. Tayler's Retrospect of the Religious Life of England, chap. 3 and 5, and Rev. Brooke Herford's Story of Religion in England, chap. 30, 32 and 33.) In Wales and Ireland there are also similar groups of non-subscribing churches, in which Unitarianism is now the prevailing doctrine. Taken together, all these are popularly known as the Unitarian body of this country, but it is a body which has not always been Unitarian, and is in fact a group of Free Churches, which hold to the fundamental principle of the liberty of prophesying, and impose no restraint of formulated creed on further doctrinal development. It is of the hymn-books and hymn-writers of this group of churches, various in their origin, but united in their broad principles, that the present article is to speak. [See also references to special articles on p. 1191, i.]

2. The marked individualism which from early times has characterised the members of these churches appears also in their hymn-books. From the time when the various departures from the use of Dr. Watts began, about the middle of the last century, to our own day, there has been a long succession of books, often two or three appearing in a single year; and although occasionally a book has made its way into very general use, there has never been any one recognised hymnal of the whole body of churches. The Psalms and Hymns of Dr. Watts were as popular for some time with the Presbyterians as with the Independents. The Psalms on their appearance, quickly superseded the books previously used, and in many congregations remained in use even to the close of last century, when various other books had already been provided. These others had their origin at first in the needs of special congregations. As the doctrinal movement into Arianism became more decided, and as Watts himself had not lived to make that revision of his work, which his own reported change of opinions would have required, ministers of Presbyterian congregations in various parts of the country took in hand to supply the want. They either made a selection from Watts, with the necessary alterations, or compiled a supplement to the Psalms from his hymns and other sources, or made an entirely new collection, in which, while Watts remained predominant, his psalms and hymns were mingled with those of other writers. This last was the course most frequently adopted.

3. Thus in 1757 there appeared

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Divine Worship. London, Printed and sold by J. Noon, at the White Hart, in Cheapside, near the Poultry; James Waugh, at the Turk's Head, Lombard Street; and Aaron Tozer, in Exeter. This was a collection of 218 psalms and hymns, the authors in addition to Watts being Addison, Tate & Brady, Browne & Doddridge. It is said to have been edited by Rev. Micaiah Towgood, Arian Minister of James's Meeting, Exeter, and was certainly used by his congregation. A second ed., enlarged to 345 psalms and hymns, was printed in 1779, by W. Grigg, at Exeter. In the year following the first appearance of this book, it was reprinted with alterations and additions for the Presbyterian congregation of Lewin's Mead, Bristol.

In 1760 the Rev. Michael Pope, minister of the Leather Lane Meeting, in London, followed the same example, though in more independent fashion. His book is entitled Psalms and Hymns for Divine Worship. London: Printed for J. Waugh, in Lombard Street; J. Ward, in Cornhill; J. Buckland, at the Buck; T. Longman, at the Ship; W. Fenner, at the Angel and Bible, in Paternoster Row; and E. Dilly, in the Poultry, 1760, and is known as Pope's Coll. It is divided into two parts, (i.) 229 psalms, of which 176 are by Watts, 28 by Tate & Brady, others by Patrick, Addison, Doddridge, Flexman, &c. (ii.) 203 hymns, nearly half being by Watts, other authors being Doddridge, Addison, A. Pope, Browne, Grove, Kippis, Flexman, and Amory (?). This collection was the first in which the hymns of the four last authors (all Presbyterian ministers) appeared. The alterations and omissions from the psalms and hymns of Watts and others, due to the editor's Arianism, or to his poetical taste, are considerable.

A similar, though smaller collection, appeared in Liverpool in 1764, edited by Revs. John Breckell and W. Enfield, ministers of the Key Street and Benn's Garden chapels respectively:—

A New Collection of Psalms proper for Christian Worship, in Three Parts. I. Psalms of David, &c. II. Psalms of Praise to God. III. Psalms on Various Subjects. Liverpool. Printed in the Year 1764. There are 242 psalms, more than half by Watts, and in addition to names mentioned above, Gibbons, Carter, Rowe, Cotton, Ogilvie, Heginbotham, and Steele, are represented. There were later editions in 1767 and 1770; in 1787 a new edition was printed (for J. Gore), with 60 psalms added to the third part, including some by Mrs. Barbauld and T. Scott. This edition, entitled merely A Collection of Psalms, &c., was reprinted in 1798 and 1806. A few years after it was superseded by new collections separately made for each of the two congregations.

4. Different in character from the above collections was Dr. Enfield's second book:—

Hymns for Public Worship, selected from Various Authors, and intended as a supplement to Dr. Watts's Psalms. Warrington. Printed for the Editor, 1772. Later editions 1781 and 1789. Its character is indicated by the title. There are 160 hymns, more than a third being selected from Watts's hymns, while after Doddridge, Mrs. Barbauld and Thomas Scott hold the chief place. Some of their hymns appeared for the first time in this collection.

5. Different again was a book issued without date, but probably in 1780, by two Presbyterian ministers, Revs. W. Wood and Benj. Carpenter:—

An Abridgment of Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, with some alterations. To which is added an appendix containing some hymns, selected from other authors. Birmingham. Printed by Piercy and Jones, and sold by them and by the editors at Dudley and Stourbridge. This collection is notable for the very slight alterations of Watts, when compared with what he has undergone at other hands. It contains 163 psalms and then 110 hymns. Only the last 14 hymns form the appendix, by Addison, Doddridge, Kippis, and T. Scott. A third edition considerably enlarged, with an entirely new title-page, was issued in 1802 as A Selection of Sacred Poetry, adapted to Public and Private Worship. In Three Parts. Stourbridge. Printed and sold by J. Heming. The former appendix of 14 hymns is enlarged to a third part, and includes hymns by Wesley, Cowper, Beddome, Steele, Dyer, &c.

6. These are examples of various departures from the exclusive use of Dr. Watts in the old Presbyterian congregations. The collection of Theophilus Lindsey was of other origin. To the second edition of his Book of Common Prayer Reformed according to the Plan of the late Dr. Samuel Clarke, prepared in 1774 for use in Essex Street Chapel, he appended—

A Collection of Hymns and Psalms for Public Worship. London. Printed for J. Johnson, No. 72, St. Paul's Church Yard, 1774.

It contains only 127 hymns and psalms, of which more than half are by Watts. In subsequent editions, 1784, 1793, 1805, 1822 (the last two by Rev. T. Belsham), it was gradually enlarged. In the editions of 1835 and 1849, by the Rev. T. Madge, it became practically a new collection.

7. The method of appending hymns to the forms of liturgical service had already been adopted in Liverpool in 1763 by the congregation which met for a few years in the Octagon Chapel. To their "Form of Prayer" was added A New Collection of Psalms, for the use of a Congregation of Protestant Dissenters in Liverpool. It contains only 150 psalms, and is quite distinct from the larger Liverpool Coll. of 1764. Other examples of the same practice are found in the Mansfield Liturgy of 1797, and the Sherborne Devotional Services for the Public Worship of the One True God, issued in 1812 by Rev. W. Blake (the second), of Crewkerne. The title-page of the Salisbury Forms of Prayer for Public Worship, 1776, also promises a collection of hymns, but apparently it was not issued until two years later, ■■

A Collection of Hymns for Public Worship: on the general Principles of Natural and Revealed Religion. Salisbury: Printed in the year 1778.

There is more originality shown in this collection than in the other books of the same period. Watts and Doddridge are not so strikingly predominant, there is greater variety of authorship, several hymns by John and Charles Wesley (greatly altered in some cases) being introduced; and "of the originals contained in this collection the greater part consist of peculiar metres, which have been but lately introduced into psalmody." One of the editors, Rev. Benj. Williams, the last minister of the old Presbyterian congregation in Salisbury, was a man of considerable poetical power. He contributed hymns of his own, including, "Holy, holy, holy Lord"; and the adaptations of Methodist hymns, of which in more than one instance only the first line and the metre are adopted, and a quite new hymn written, are full of genuine music. The collection contains 310 hymns, without names of authors.

8. There were other notable collections made by Presbyterian ministers about this time. The Rev. Newcome Cappe, minister at St. Saviour-gate, York, a Biblical critic of clear Unitarian convictions, was the editor of A Selection of Psalms for Social Worship. York: Printed by A. Ward, 1786. On the title-page are printed extracts from Watts's prefaces to his Psalms and Hymns, and a passage from a sermon of Lardner's, expressing the view that in worship only language should be used in which all devout Christians of whatever party could join without offence. The preface elaborates the same position, and contains an "explication of terms and phrases," to aid in the right understanding of the chief theological ideas which are found in the book. There are 279 psalms, arranged in four books, according to metre, long, common, short and particular. Similar collections were that of Rev. George Walker of Nottingham:—

(1) A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Public Worship, unmix'd with the disputed doctrines of any sect. Warrington. Printed by W. Eyres. . . 1788, and:—

(2) Psalms and Hymns for the use of the New Meeting in Birmingham. Birmingham: Printed by J. Thomason, 1790.

This latter collection was edited by Rev. William Hawkes and Dr. Joseph Priestley, ministers of the congregation. In the preface they say:—

"Most of the variations from Dr. Watts's compositions have been made for the sake of rendering the sentiment unexceptionable to Unitarian Christians Propriety of sentiment was the first thing to be attended to; and it is to long use only that many of Watts's own verses are indebted for the little offence they now give even to the ear, and much more to the understanding."

The alterations are very freely made in accordance with Priestley's theological views, but often apparently only from difference of taste, not always to the advantage of the poetry.

In 1791 the larger number of the new books perished in the fire by which the mob destroyed not only Priestley's house, but both the Old and the New Meetings. Part of the issue had been provided for the congregation of Cross Street Chapel, Manchester, and remained in use there until the introduction of Kippis; but the Birmingham congregation, joining for a time in common worship with their friends of the Old Meeting, returned to the use of Watts's Psalms and Hymns, which the latter congregation had not yet relinquished. Afterwards a fresh collection was made for the New Meeting, issued in three books successively in 1798, 1806, and 1830. The Old Meeting adopted Kippis.

9. Among the Presbyterians in the North of Ireland the Scottish Psalms and Paraphrases occupied the same place as Watts's Psalms and Hymns with their brethren in England. The first book of their own seems to have been the Hymns for the use of the Presbyterian Congregation in Lisburn. Belfast, 1787,—a collection of 100 hymns taken from much the same sources as the English books, altered in the same way. A somewhat larger collection, but of similar character, was A Collection of Psalms and Hymns proper for Christian Worship. In two parts. I. Psalms of David. II. Sacred Hymns. London-Derry, 1788. Second ed. 1794. This book was afterwards discarded by the congregation as not sufficiently orthodox.

10. The collection known variously as Kippis or Rees, from two of its editors, was the first of the Unitarian books to attain to any very extended circulation. It went through many editions, and has remained in use in some out-of-the-way places until quite recently. It may be taken as typical of the kind of Unitarianism most prevalent in England at the beginning of the present century, before the deeper spiritual influence of Channing made itself felt on this side of the Atlantic. The title of the book is:—

A Collection of Hymns and Psalms for Public and Private Worship; selected and prepared by Andrew Kippis, D.D., F.R.S., & F.S.A.; Abraham Rees, D.D., F.R.S., F.L.S.; The Rev. Thomas Jervis, and the Rev. Thomas Morgan, LL.D. London, 1795. The editors were all Presbyterian ministers resident at that time in London. The preface states that hitherto the Presbyterian societies in the Metropolis and its vicinity have been contented with Dr. Watts's Psalms, with the exception of one congregation, which has a book of its own (Pope's Coll., 1760, at the Leather Lane Meeting). To remedy this defect the present compilation is made on the same principles as the earlier Presbyterian collections. Alteration and adaptation are freely resorted to, in order to avoid whatever might "clash with the sentiments, or hurt the feelings of any sincere Christian." There are 690 hymns by more than 50 authors, including Watts, Mrs. Steele, Doddridge, Merrick, Jervis, Mrs. Barbauld, Thomas Scott. Other well-known names are Milton, Dryden, Addison, Pope, Cowper, Burns, besides many less remarkable, common to the early Presbyterian books. In 1807 a Supplement of 94 hymns was added, and in 1852 a much enlarged Supplement, edited by Rev. Edmund Kell.

The general impression made by Kippis is of a somewhat cold and external piety. Though very excellent in moral tone and exhortation, too much of its celebration of the attributes of God and the greatness of His works touches no spring of living emotion, and the redemptive work of Christ seems to be viewed rather from outside than expressed in the kindling words of actual experience. It must be added however that the hymns of Cowper, J. Wesley's "Commit thou all thy griefs," and others which spring from the deeper sources of inspiration, are included in the volume.

11. In spite of the considerable popularity attained by Kippis, it is not too much to say that during the 45 years between its appearance and the publication of Martineau's Hymns for the Christian Church and Home, on an average one Unitarian hymn-book, large or small, was issued every year. It was a period of considerable activity in Unitarian propagandism, and several of the books are of importance. Only a few can be so much as named here, e.g. :—

Dr. Enfield's Norwich Coll. of 1795; the Exeter Coll., 1801; Dr. Estlin's (Bristol), 1806; Rev. W. Turner's (Newcastle), 1806; Norwich, 1814; Liverpool, Paradise Street, 1815; Samuel Dobell's, 1816; Liverpool, Renshaw Street, 1818, and again 1836; Warrington, 1819 (the curious book in which the editors object to "the introduction of the term soul, in connections where it necessarily implies an immaterial and separable principle in man"); Dukinfield, 1822 (still in use); R. Wallace's, 1822; Rev. J. J. Tayler's (Mosley Street, Manchester), 1829; Dr. Carpenter's (Bristol), 1831; Rev. Benj. Carpenter's (Nottingham), 1838.

In Ireland appeared the Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs; selected for the First Congregation of Presbyterians in Belfast, 1801, which in that congregation superseded the use of the Psalms and Paraphrases, and was itself superseded by A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for the use of the Presbytery of Antrim and the Congregation of Strand Street, Dublin. Belfast, 1818, really a new ed. of the earlier book. There was also Rev. A. G. Malcom's Newry Coll., 1811.

12. In 1810 Rev. Robert Aspland of Hackney published A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Unitarian Worship, which passed through several editions, and to which in 1824 a supplement was added. This is said to be the first instance of the term Unitarian appearing on the title-page of a hymn-book. To hold such doctrine was still a penal offence. This collection contains 500 hymns for private and domestic as well as public worship, by more than 60 authors. There is greater variety and freshness of devotional expression than in Kippis.

13. The two books between Kippis and Martineau which had the widest circulation were those known as the Exeter Coll. and House's Coll. The former was A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Social and Private Worship, Exeter, 1812, edited chiefly by Dr. Lant Carpenter, at that time minister of the George's Meeting. Many editions were printed, not only at Exeter, but also at Glasgow and London, the 12th ed. being London, 1835. It is a collection of 313 hymns, and while strictly Unitarian in doctrine, it aimed "to increase the number of suitable hymns especially referring to Christian privileges and requisitions." The same may be said of A Selection of Hymns and Psalms for Christian Worship. By H. E. House, jun. Bath, 1830. Of this nine editions were printed, and it was extensively used by the congregations of Gen. Baptists who had become Unitarians, as well as by others, in some cases until quite recently. There are 528 hymns by about 80 authors.

14. One other book of this period must be named;—

A Collection of Hymns for Public and Private Wor ship. Compiled by John R. Beard. London: John Green. Manchester: Forrest & Fogg, 1837.

The peculiarity of this collection was that only hymns by Unitarian writers were admitted. The result was a collection of 560 hymns by 55 authors, the chief contributors being: John Bowring, William Gaskell, J. C. Wallace, J. R. Wreford, John Johns, S. G. Bulfinch, J. Brettell, and Mrs. Barbauld. Only a few of these hymns have passed into general use in G. Britain, and the principle of selection has not found favour among the Unitarians of the English non-subscribing churches. Many of these hymns have however passed into American Unitarian collections.

15. In 1840 appeared the book which has made the most striking epoch in the history of Unitarian hymnody. As Kippis fairly represents the condition of English Unitarians at the end of last century, so the may be taken as the best expression of the new spirit of devotion which, largely through the influence of Channing, had for some time been making its way in their societies. When the new hymn-book appeared Dr. Martineau was minister at Paradise Street Chapel, Liverpool. It was to some extent only a prophecy of what was to be, for the book was received at first with objection in some quarters; but quickly made its way, and, far more generally than Kippis at the beginning of the century, superseded all earlier collections. It is now the book most widely used among Unitarians in England. It was a collection of 650 hymns, Mrs. Adams's "Nearer, my God, to Thee" being added as hymn 651 to the 10th ed. of 1853. The preface develops the thought of worship as being the natural expression of emotion, awakened in the mind "possessed with the religious or mysterious conception of God, of life and death, of duty, of futurity," and shows how the substance of the devotion of the various writers, whose hymns are adopted, is preserved, while the special dialect of their dogmatic theology is changed into a more universal language.

Of the 161 authors from whom selection is made not a third could be rightly classed as Unitarians; the chief of these being Adams, Barbauld, Bowring, Bryant, Butcher, Enfield, Estlin, Furness, Gaskell, Johns, Norton, Pierpoint, the Roscoes, J. E. Smith, John and Emily Taylor, Ware and Wreford. But the chief contributors are members of other Churches, Catholic, Lutheran, Anglican, Wesleyan, Baptist, Independent, and others; Dr. Watts standing first with 77 hymns, and after him Montgomery with 57, Doddridge 53, Charles Wesley 43, Heber 28, Cowper 14, Newton 14, Conder 12, Hemans 11, Steele 10, Milman 10. The hymns are divided into six books according to their subjects.

16. From 1840 until the appearance of Dr. Martineau's last collection in 1873, was a period not so prolific as the preceding in Unitarian hymn-books. This was natural, since the need of the churches had been so well supplied. Various books for individual congregations were however issued. Among these may be named:—

(1) W. J. Fox's Hymns and Anthems, London, 1841, to which were first contributed the hymns of Sarah Adams; (2) the Plymouth Hymns for Public and Private Worship, 1856; (3) the Liverpool Renshaw Street Hymns, Chants, and Anthems; selected and arranged by John Hamilton Thom, 1858; (4) a new Exeter Collection, 1863, edited by Rev. T. W. Chignell; (5) the Rev. Charles Clarke's Book of Prayer and Praise, Birmingham, 1871; (6) the Rev. J. P. Hopps's Hymns for Public Worship, Glasgow, 1873. In Ireland appeared the (7) Psalms, Paraphrases and Hymns for Christian Worship, Belfast, 1841, and in 1856 what was really a new edition of the above, also at Belfast, (8) Hymns for Christian Worship; edited by members of the Non-subscribing Presbyterian Church of Ireland. Further editions in 1867 and 1886.

17. This period however not only added greatly to the treasures of Christian hymnody, but witnessed marked further changes in the religious attitude of the free churches, for which particularly Dr. Martineau produced his earlier hymn-book. To meet the fresh need he published:—

Hymns of Praise and Prayer, collected and edited by James Martineau, LL.D., D.D., "Vatum suspiria solatium Ecclesiae." London, Longmans, 1873.

There had come to be less importance attached to the external historical records, Biblical incidents were less dwelt upon than formerly, and greater stress was laid on the inwardness of the religious life, identifying Christianity with the religion of Christ in its pure and personal essence. And so in this collection the new hymns admitted belong "chiefly to the poetry of the inner life; while the old hymns excluded mainly deal with objective incidents either in Biblical history or in the apocalyptic representation of the future." But besides the change in character of the collection there were large additions to be made from new writers. There are 797 hymns, 417 being also in the former collection and 380 added. Of hymns where names are given there are 255 authors, those not included in the former collection being gathered from every quarter of the Church, from the Roman Catholic to the Unitarian. Among them are Newman, Faber, Caswall, Procter, Lyte, Neale, Trench, Bonar, Gill, Ellerton, Lynch, Waring, Whittier, Parker, Emerson, Holmes, the Longfells, Jones Very, Johnson, Clarke. In amount of contribution Watts loses his pre-eminence, Montgomery standing first with 67 hymns, then Charles Wesley with 58, Watts 49, Doddridge 34, Heber 17, Faber 16, Cowper 15, Barbauld 15, Lyte 15, Conder 13, Hemans 11, Gill 11. The same principle of alteration is adhered to as in the earlier collection, "for grave reasons of religious veracity." The growing acceptance of this collection in the "Nonconformist Broad Church," for which it was designed, shows that it has rightly gauged the condition of the religious life of English Unitarians. After Hymns for the Christian Church and Home it is now used in their societies more than any other book.

18. Of subsequent collections the most notable are the Hymns of Experience and Hope, Manchester, 1874, a small but choice selection edited by Revs. F. E. Millson and S. Farrington; Hymns, Chants and Anthems for Public Worship, edited by John Page Hopps, Leicester, 1877, now used in several congregations; and the Bedford Chapel Christian Hymns, London, 1881, edited for his congregation by Rev. Stopford A. Brooke, on his leaving the Church of England.

19. From the above account of Unitarian hymn-books it will be seen that with one exception their material has been largely drawn from writers belonging to other branches of the Christian Church, and that the work of the editors has been more that of selection and adaptation from common sources than a collecting of new material. There are however a considerable number of original writers among Unitarians in England as well as America, some of whom are well known beyond the borders of their own immediate circle.

20. In the old Arian days there were several liberal ministers whose hymns occur repeatedly in the earlier collections and less uniformly in the modern books, who stand naturally in the line of development which has resulted in modern Unitarianism. Such were Henry Grove, Thomas Scott, Roger Flexman, John Breckell, and somewhat later, Benj. Williams, Henry Moore, and the editors Kippis, Jervis, Walker and Enfield. Among Unitarian hymn-writers in the latter part of last century the first place must be given to Mrs. Barbauld, with whom are naturally associated the Norwich group of the Taylors and Sir J. E. Smith, William Roscoe of Liverpool, and his gifted children. Other contemporaries, passing gradually on to a new generation, were Dr. Estlin, Pendlebury Houghton, Edmund Butcher, William Lamport, John Rowe, George Dyer, Helen Maria Williams, and in Ireland Dr. Drennan and William H. Drummond. Of those born later in the last century were John G. Robberds, Sir John Bowring, W. J. Fox, J. C. Wallace, Jacob Brettell, Hugh Hutton, and in Ireland David Whyte and A. G. Malcom. Belonging entirely to the present century are the Martineaus, Sarah Adams, John Johns, Dr. Wreford, William Gaskell, Samuel Greg, Thomas Hincks, John Page Hopps, and others.

Of the chief of these further notice will be found elsewhere in this Dictionary. In the alphabetical list given below brief notes are added concerning the rest.

Aikin, John, M.D., 1747-1822. The brother of Mrs. Barbauld, son of Dr. Aikin of the Warrington Academy. As a physician he practised at Warrington and Yarmouth, and from 1798 till the time of his death lived at Stoke Newington. Author (with his sister), of Evenings at Home, editor of the General Biographical Dictionary, and for some time of the Monthly Magazine. His hymn In time of war, "While [what] sounds of war are heard around," was very popular. It is in K. and M. 1.

Aspland, Robert, 1782-1845. Minister at Hackney, founder and for many years editor of the Monthly Repository and the Christian Reformer. In his Psalms and Hymns for Unitarian Worship, 1810, are three hymns signed "A."

1. Almighty Father of mankind! Jehovah, self-existent Lord. To the One God.

2. Sons of Adam! join to raise. Creation, Redemption, and Restoration.

3. Welcome, the hope of Israel's race! The glory of the Man Jesus.

Astley, Francis Dukinfield, 1782-1825. Layman, of Dukinfield, author of a volume of poems (no relation of Rev. Richard Astley who edited the Gloucester Coll., 1827). Two of his hymns are in the Dukinfield Coll., 1822.

1. Blest is the man whose pitying eye. Of Charity.

2. Thou Cause unknown! whose secret word. God the Creator.

Atkins, Hugh, b. 1839. Of Hinckley, manufacturer. H. includes his hymn Of the pure in heart, "Jesus, on the Mount of Olives." This, with two others, is in J. G. Lunn's Leicester Coll., 1880.

Bache, Sarah, 1771-1844. A relative of the Carpenters, who kept a school for many years in Birmingham. Her hymn, "See how he loved," exclaimed the Jews," Love of Christ, was contributed to the Exeter Coll., 1812. It is in M. 1 and B., and most of the early books after its appearance.

Barmby, Goodwin, 1820-1881. Minister at Wakefield, author of the Return of the Swallows, and other poems, 1864, &c. H. gives a hymn of his on The following of Christ, "Beside the shore of Galilee."

Barnes, Thomas, D.D., 1747-1810, b. at Warrington and educated for the ministry at the Warrington Academy. Settled first at Cockey Moor, near Bolton, and in 1780 at Cross Street Chapel, Manchester. In 1786 he became first Principal of the newly founded Manchester Academy, now Manchester New College. Two hymns of his on The Christian's Hope, are in the Dukinfield Coll., 1822.

1. I hope ere long to leave behind.

2. While darkness reigns beneath the pole.

Breckell, John, 1696-1769. Minister of Key Street Chapel, Liverpool, and co-editor with Dr. Enfield of the old Liverpool Coll., 1764, which gives his hymn for a Past Day, "O Lord of hosts, Almighty King!" Cappe's York Coll., 1786, gives a version of Psalms 19 as his, "The glory of their builder, God."

Bright, Henry Arthur, 1830-1884. A Liverpool merchant and man of letters. A friend of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and a contributor to the Athenaeum, &c. Thom's Renshaw Street Coll., 1853, contains his hymn, "To the Father through the Son."

Carpenter, Lant, L.L.D., 1781-1840. Minister at Exeter and Bristol, a distinguished writer and teacher among the Unitarians of his day. To his Exeter Coll., 1812, he contributed the hymn of Reverence and love for Jesus, "Father of Jesus, God of Love." He also pub., under the signature "L," in his Collection of Hymns for the use of Unitarian Christians, Bristol, 1831:—

1. Behold the Gospel mercy-seat. Christ, the Mercy-seat.

2. O God, all holy and all just. The mercy of God in Christ Jesus.

3. The hour must come, the closest ties. Parting here, reunion hereafter.

Carpenter, Mary, 1807-1877. Daughter of Dr. Lant Carpenter, of Bristol, best known for her works of philanthropy, but also a devotional writer in prose and verse. Her Morning and Evening Meditations (1845) has passed through several editions. It contains her hymn of Dedication, given in B., "To thee, my God, to thee." Another hymn by Miss Carpenter is in the Supp. to Martineau's Hys. for use at Lewin's Mead Chapel, Bristol, 1849 and 1859. It begins "Father, here Thy glory praising." (Sunday Evening.)

Chignell, T. W., b. 1824. Minister of George's Meeting, Exeter, and editor of the Exeter Coll., 1863 and 1884, which contain several of his own hymns, and various translations from foreign authors. The South Place enlargement of W. J. Fox's Coll., 1873, gives from 1863:—

1. Morning breaketh on thee. Morning aspiration.

2. Happy they who are not weary. Progress.

Conway, Moncure Dana, b. 1832. For many years minister at South Place Chapel, Finsbury, and editor of the enlarged edition of W. J. Fox's Hymns & Anthems, 1873, which contains his hymn of Music out of the storm, "A storm sped over sea and land."

Cox, James, d. 1825. An Exeter layman, who contributed several hymns to the Exeter Coll., 1812. Of these B. and H. give:—

1. Homage pay to God above. Thanksgiving.

and B. also:—

2. See from on high a light divine. The baptism of Jesus.

Cross, John, d. 1830. An Exeter layman, who contributed three hymns to the Exeter Coll., 1812; also in the Dukinfield Coll., 1822, and Bristol Coll., 1831:—

1. The morn of life, how fair and gay. The word of God the guide of youth.

2. With warm affection let us view. Reflections on the death of Christ.

3. With warm delight and grateful love. The character of Christ.

Darwin, Erasmus, M.D., 1732-1802. Physician and poet, of Lichfield, author of The Botanic Garden, 1781, &c. He was a friend of Dr. Priestley's, and in sympathy with many of his views, although not permanently connected with any church. His hymn on God, the disposer of events, "The Lord, how tender is his love," is in K., M. 1 & 2. H. gives another hymn on Immortal Nature, "Roll on, ye stars, exult in youthful prime."

Daye, Elizabeth, 1733-1829. Daughter of Rev. James Daye, Presbyterian minister at Lancaster (d. 1770). Published a volume of poems at Liverpool, 1798, and contributed to the Monthly Repository. Her hymn of Worship is in K. & B., "I'll bless Jehovah's glorious name." Wallace gives another hymn for Sunday Evening, "O may the truths this day has taught."

Drennan, William, M.D., 1754-1820. A Belfast physician, author of Fugitive Pieces, in verse and prose, Belfast, 1815. He contributed 7 hymns to Aspland's Coll., 1810.

1. The heaven of heavens cannot contain. God present to sincere worship.

2. In this fair globe with ocean bound. The love of God.

3. Humanity! thou sent of God. Charity, Faith, and Hope.

4. All nature feels attractive power. The law of love.

5. O sweeter than the fragrant flower. The luxury of doing good.

6. The husbandman goes forth afield. Fruits of benevolence.

7. Why does the will of heaven ordain. The use of affliction.

Some of these are still in C. U.

Dyer, George, B.A., 1755-1841. Educated at Christ's Hospital and Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The friend of Charles Lamb, of Priestley and Wakefield, and biographer of Robert Robinson of Cambridge. In 1792 he moved to London, to chambers in Clifford's Inn, Fleet Street, supporting himself by private tuition and literary work. He was a contributor to the Gentleman's and the Monthly Magazine, for which he wrote the introductory Ode in 1796. From 1809 to 1830 engaged upon Valpy's edition of the Classics, in 141 vols. Author of a History of the University and Colleges of Cambridge, 1814, and of several volumes of verse. Three of his hymns are in K., and frequently in other books.

1. Greatest of beings, source of life. Hymn to the Deity.

2. Greatest of beings, source of life. The same continued.

3. Great Framers of unnumbered worlds. Hymn for a Fast.

Estlin, John Prior, D.D., 1747-1817, b. at Hinckley, and educated at the Warrington Academy. For many years minister at Lewin's Mead, Bristol; author of Familiar Lectures on Moral Philosophy, &c.; editor of the Psalms & Hymns, adapted to Public and Private Worship, Collected for the use of the Society of Lewin's Mead, Bristol, 1806, to which he contributed two hymns, also in M. 1 & 2.

1. Gracious source of every blessing. For the close of Evening Service.

2. Thou art the First, and thou the Last. Ascription of Praise.

3. Eternal source of life and light. Prayer for spiritual blessings. In K. & B.

Flexman, Roger, D.D., 1708-1795, b. at Great Torrington, Devon. Educated for the ministry at Tiverton by Rev. John Moore, ordained at Modbury, 1730, and from 1747 to 1783 was minister at Rotherhithe. In 1770 appointed one of the compilers of the Index of the Commons Journals. He contributed 4 hymns to Pope's Coll., 1760:—

1. Great God, to thee my grateful tongue. God the Benefactor.

2. In realms of everlasting light. Saint's Conflict and Reward.

3. Jesus, adorned with grace divine. Second Advent.

4. To God my grateful soul ascend. Ps. cxvi.

Freckleton, Thomas Wesley, b. 1827. Minister of Unity Church, Islington. His hymn, "The toil of brain, or heart, or hand" (Christian Service), is in H. and in Holder's Cong. Hymnal, 1884.

Greg, Samuel, 1804-1876. Member of a family closely associated with Manchester industries, and social work of various kinds. Selections from his papers, in prose and verse, with a memoir and a prefatory letter by Dean Stanley, were published posthumously as A Layman's Legacy, 1877. The best known of his hymns are:—

1. [Now] slowly, slowly darkening. The Light of God in darkness.

2. Stay, Master, stay upon this heavenly hill. Worship preparing for work.

3. My soul in death was sleeping. Strong in his strength.

4. Awful Power, whose birth-place lies. The mystery of pain.

Grove, Henry, 1683-1738. Presbyterian minister at Taunton, his birth-place, and conductor of a Dissenting Academy there, a contributor to Addison's Spectator

(Nos. 588, 601, 626, and 635), and author of An Essay towards a Demonstration of the Soul's Immateriality, 1718; A Discourse of Secret Prayer, 1723; Some Thoughts concerning the Proofs of a Future State from Reason, 1730; Miscellanies in Prose and Verse, 1739, including his Spectator papers; A System of Moral Philosophy, 1749, published by Dr. Amory, after his death, and various other works. There are two hymns of his in Pope's Coll., 1760:—

1. O Lord, how excellent thy name. God the Creator.

2. Before the Lord our Maker we. God the Preserver.

(1) is in K. and M. 1; a selection from (2) in Aspland, and another selection beginning with st. 3, "The starry hosts in order move," in the Suppl. to K. and in Wallace.

Hampson, William, 1770-1834. A Dukinfield layman, three of whose hymns are in the Dukinfield Coll., 1822.

[V. D. D.]

United Methodist Free Churches Hymnody. [Methodist Hymnody, § v.]

United prayers ascend to Thee. W. B. Collyer. [Family Worship.] This hymn is given in his Coll., 1812, No. 975, in 6 st. of 4 l., to be used after the Administration of Holy Baptism, in private, for the welfare of the Family; the hymn, also by Collyer, given for use "Before the Administration," being "Saviour, Father, Brother, Friend." [J. J.]

Unprofitable all and vain. C. Wesley. [Trust in God.] This is a cento composed of portions of four hymns, 1st pub. from the Wesley mss. in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. x. pp. 189-190, thus:—St. i., ii., No. 124, St. Matt. vi. 27; st. iii., No. 125, St. Matt. vi. 28; st. iv., No. 128, St. Matt. vi. 32; st. v., No. 126, St. Matt. vi. 30. In this form it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. [J. J.]

Uns strahlt das Licht der Ewigkeit. [Eternal Life.] In the Stollberg bei Aachen G. B., 1802, this is No. 1196 in 8 st. of 4 l. in the section entitled "Happiness of Christians in this life." In J. H. D. Zschokke's Stunden der Andacht, 9th ed., Aarau, 1824, it appears as the heading of Meditation 24 in pt. ii., which is entitled "On the value of religious festivals in civic and household life. Psalm c. 1-5," and is in 5 st. This form is tr., as Behold that bright, that hallowed ray. By Miss Fry, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 217. Included beginning "Religion's hallowed ray," as No. 18, in J. Whittimore's Suppl. to all H. Bks. 1860. [J. M.]

Unsar trohtin hat farsalt. [St. Peter.] Wachernagel, ii. p. 22, gives this from a Munich ms. of the 9th cent., in 3 st. of 4 l. with the refrain "Kyrie eleyson, Christe eleyson." It has been, apparently without ground, ascribed to Otfrid (p. 874, i.). Tr. as "Our dear Lord of grace hath given" by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 28. [J. M.]

Unto Him whose Name is holy. Emily E. S. Elliott. [Praise to Christ.] Written for the German chorale, "Warum sollt ich mich denn grämen," and contributed to the Additional Hymns, issued in 1866 by her father for use in St. Mark's Church, Brighton, as No. 34, in 5 st. of 6 lines, and reprinted in her Chimes for Daily Service, 1880, p. 101. St. i., ii., v., are included as No. 266 in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, and as No. 80 in the Psalmist, 1878, in both cases ascribed to Charlotte Elliott in error. [J. M.]

Unus bonorum fons, Deus, omnium. C. Coffin. [B. V. M.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736, and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri of the same year, p. 64. In the Paris and later French Brevs. it is the hymn at 2nd Vespers on the Feast of the Nativity and Conception of the B. V. M. Tr. as:—

O Thou sole Fountain, of all good. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 174. Also in the 1860 Appendix to the H. Noted, and others. [J. J.]

Unvail thy bosom, faithful tomb. I. Watts. [Burial.] This is the last of five odes which are appended to a letter "To Lucius, on the death of Serena," pub. in his Reliquiz Juveniles, &c., 1734. It is in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Ode v. A Funeral Ode to the Interment of the Body, supposed to be sung by the Mourners." It has passed into several hymn-books in Great Britain and America. [J. J.]

ἮΜΝΟΙ. [Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 8.]

Upham, Thomas Cogswell, D.D., was b. at Durfield, New Haven, Jan. 30, 1799, and educated at Dartmouth College (1818), and at Andover (1821). Having entered the Congregational Ministry he became Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy at Bowdoin College, in 1825, and retained the same to 1867. He d. at New York, April 2, 1872. His publications were numerous and included Mental Philosophy (which was long and widely used); American Cottage Life; a volume of Poems, 1852, &c. Five of his hymns are given, with accompanying dates, in Hymns and Songs of Praise, &c., N. Y., 1874, as follows:—

1. Fear not, poor weary one. Help in Sorrow (1872).
2. Happy the man who knows. Obedience (1872).
3. O Thou great Ruler of the sky. Morning (1872).
4. O Thou great Teacher from the skies. Following Christ (1872).

5. 'Tis thus in solitude I roam. Omnipresence (1853).

These hymns are limited in their use. In 1847 Upham pub. the Life and Religious Opinions and Experiences of Madam de la Mothe Guyon . . . Two vols., N. Y. In this work the anonymous trs. from Madam Guyon's hymns given at p. 476, ii., are found., viz., (1) "By sufferings only can we know"; (2) "I would love Thee, God and Father"; (3) "'Tis not [by] the skill of human art." There are also additional trs. of two of her hymns in the same work. [J. J.]

ἮΜΝΟΙ ΔΩΡΙΟΝ ἈΡΜΟΓΩΝ. Synesius, Bp. of Ptolemais. [For the Family.] A sweetly beautiful and tender prayer to Christ on behalf of his wife and children. It is No. viii. of his ten hymns written at various periods of his life, and dates 375-430. The full Greek text is found in the Anth. Graeca Carm. Christ., 1871. From this Mr. Chatfield's tr. "O! 'tis no theme of common things," was made. It is in 56 l. and was first published in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 81. Also tr. by I. Williams, in his Thoughts in Past Years, 1852, p. 368, as "To the harmonious Dorian sound." [See Greek Hymnody, § v.] [J. J.]

Upon the Gospel's sacred page. Sir J. Bouring. [Progress of the Gospel.] Contributed to Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hys., 1837, No. 206, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Progress of Gospel truth." It was included in the 3rd ed. of the author's Matins and Vespers, 1841, p. 240, and subsequently in several hymn-books, especially in America. In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 698, "On mightier wing, in loftier flight," is composed of st. ii., iv., v. (slightly altered) of this hymn. [J. J.]

Urbem Romuleam quis furor incitat. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [St. John at the Latin Gate.] Pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1698, p. 32. In 1736 it was included in the revised Paris Brev. for the Feast of St. John at the Latin Gate. It was repeated in later French Brevs., and also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. What frenzy doth the city move! By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hym. & Tune Bk. 1852-55.

2. Through Rome's infuriate city. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "F. R."

[J. J.]

Urbs beata Hierusalem, dicta pacis visio. [The Dedication of a Church.] This "rugged but fine old hymn," as Archbishop Trench calls it, is probably of the 6th or 7th cent., and is based on 1 Peter ii. 5, Rev. xxi., and Eph. ii. 20. It is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum, viz.: in one of the Early English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 119), and in two of the Early Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 46b; Add. 30851, f. 155b). Also in the St. Gall ms., No. 387, of the 11th cent. In the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 157, it is printed from the Vesp. D. xii. G. M. Dreves, in his Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 73, prints it from a ms. of the 10th cent. It is also in Daniel, i. No. 219; Mone, No. 251; Wackernagel, i. No. 124; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 208, &c. As it has generally been printed from comparatively recent mss. it is here given from the three 11th cent. mss. noted above, viz. (a) Vesp. D. xii., (b) Add. 30848, (c) Add. 30851.

- (1) "Urbs beata Hierusalem, dicta pacis visio, Quae constituitur in caelo vivis ex lapidibus, Et angelis coornata ut sponsata comite.
- (2) "Nova veniens e caelo nuptiali thalamo, Praeparata ut sponsata copuletur domino, Plateae et muri ejus ex auro purissimo.
- (3) "Portae nitent margaritis adytis patentibus, Et virtute meritorum illuc introductorum Omnis qui pro Christi nomine hoc in mundo premitur.
- (4) "Tonsionibus, pressuris expoliti lapides, Suisque aptantur locis per manus artificis, Disponuntur permansuri sacris aedificis.
- (5) "Angularis fundamentum lapis Christus missus est Qui compage parietis in utroque necitur, Quem Sion sancta suscepit, in quo credens permantet.
- (6) "Omnis illa Deo sacra et dilecta civitas Plena modulis in laude et canore júbilo, Trinum Deum unicumque cum favore praedicat.
- (7) "Hoc in templo, summe Deus, exoratus adveni, Et clementi bonitate precum vota suscipe, Largam benedictionem hic infunde jugiter.
- (8) "Hic promereantur omnes petita accipere, Et adepta possidere cum sanctis perenniter, Paradisum introire, translati in requiem.
- (9) "Gloria et honor Deo usquequo altissimo, Una Patri, Filioque, inclyto Paraclito, Cui laus est et potestas, per aeterna saecula."

The principal variations in these three mss. are:—

- i. l. 3, "Et angelico ornata," b. c. i. l. 3, "ut sponsa comitur" c. ii. l. 3, "Portae atque muri ejus," b. c. iii. l. 2, "illic," b. c. iii. l. 3, "pro Christi nomen," b. c. iv. l. 2, "Suis coaptantur locis," b. c. vi. l. 3, unumquoque, a. vii. l. 1, "Deus summe," b. c. viii. l. 1, "acquirere," a. ix. l. 1, "Deo, virtus et imperium," b. ix. l. 2, "Una Patri inclytoque Filio Paraclito," b. In b. and c. st. vi. precedes st. v. In c. there is no doxology.

In the Moissac MS. there is an additional st. inserted before st. vii. and another inserted after st. viii. These are not found elsewhere, and clearly form no part of the original hymn. Otherwise the Moissac text is practically the same as the above, except in the doxology.

A discussion has arisen as to the antiquity of sts. vii., viii., the sum of which is this:—

Daniel, No. 219, suggests that st. vii., viii. are a later addition meant to adapt a hymn to the Heavenly Jerusalem for use on the Dedication Festival. But there does not seem to be any foundation for this idea, since these stanzas are found in the oldest mss.; and according to his own showing there are hymns for the dedication of the Church probably as old as this (see Christe oenotomum, p. 226, ii.). He adds the statement that Martene (de Antiq. Eccles. Disciplina, p. 431), says that in the Pontifical of the 10th cent. of the diocese of Poitiers this hymn is directed to be sung at the Benediction of the Font on Holy Saturday. For this purpose Daniel suggests that st. vii., viii. are inappropriate: but how any one examining these stanzas can say so it puzzles us to see. Trench (Sacred Latin Poetry, ed. 1864, p. 313), says: "The hymn coheres intimately in all its parts, and in ceasing to be a hymn In Dedicatione Ecclesiae it would lose its chiefest beauty. It is most truly a hymn 'of degrees' ascending from things earthly to things heavenly, and making the first to be interpreters of the last. The prevailing intention in the building and the dedication of a church, with the rites thereto appertaining, was to carry up men's thoughts from that Temple built with hands, which they saw, to that other built of living stones in heaven, of which this was but a weak shadow (Durandus, Rationale. i. 1) . . . This poem witnesses for its own true inspiration, in the fact that it has proved the source of manifold inspiration in circles beyond its own."

Dr. Neale's opinion on this matter is set forth in his Mediaeval Hys., 1851, p. 20.

"Daniel imagines these stanzas to be a later addition, when the hymn, originally general, was adapted to the Dedication of a Church. Mr. Trench, on the contrary, will have the whole poem to be of one date: and alleges, very truly, that this mixture of the earthly and heavenly temple is usual in hymns and sequences on a similar subject. Nevertheless, I think that Daniel is right. 1. Because there is a clear difference in the style and language of the two last and seven first stanzas. 2. Because the transition from one part to the other is so unusually abrupt. 3. Because, at the end of the sixth stanza, there is a quasi-doxology as if to point out that the hymn originally concluded there."

This hymn passed into many mediaeval Breviaries, always for the Dedication of a Church, and sometimes given as a whole, but often divided into two parts, with sts. v.-viii., as a separate hymn, beginning Angularis fundamentum. So in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Paris of 1643 and 1736 (in both cases beginning Urbs Jerusalem beata), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and others. Occasionally st. vii., viii. are given separately as Hoc in templo, summe Deus.

2. In the revised Roman Brev., 1632, it is recast, very much to its disadvantage, as follows:—

- (1) "Coelestis urbs Jerusalem, Beata pacis visio, Quae celsa de viventibus Saxis ad astra tolleris, Sponsaeque ritu cingeris Mille angelorum millibus.
- (2) "O sorte nupta prospera, Dotata Patris gloria,
Respersa Sponsi gratia, Regina formosissima,
Christo jugata principi Coeli corsua civitas.
- (3) "Hic margaritis emicant, Patentque cunctis ostia:
Virtute namque praevia Mortalis illic ducitur,
Amore Christi percitus Tormenta quisquis sustinet.
- (4) "Scalpri salubris icibus, Et tunsione plurima,
Fabri polita malleo Hanc saxa molem construunt, Aptisque juncta nexibus Locantur in fastigio.
- (5) "Alto ex Olympi vertice Summi Parentis Filius,
Ceu monte desectus lapis Terras in imas decedens, Domus supernae, et infimae Utrumque junxit angulum.
- (6) "Sed illa sedes coelium Semper resultat laudibus,
Deumque trinum et unicum Jugi canore praedicat:
Illi canentes jungimur Almae Sionis aemuli.
- (7) "Haec templa, Rex coelestium, Imple benigno lumine;
Huc o rogatus adveni, Plebisque vota suscipe,
Et nostra corda jugiter Profunde coeli gratia.
- (8) "Hic impetrent fidelium Voces precosque supplicum
Domus beatae muna, Partisque donis gaudeant:
Donec soluti corpore Sedes beatae impleant.
- (9) "Decus Parenti debitum Sit usqueaque altissimo,
Natoque Patris unico, Et inlycto Paraclyto,
Cui laus, potestas, gloria, Aeterna sit per saecula."

This form is in Daniel, i. No. 219, Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, &c. Both in the Hymni Breviarii Romani, Rome, 1629 (p. 87), and in the Breviary of 1632 the doxology is printed at the end of each part.

3. The Paris Breviary text of 1643 and 1736 differs but slightly from the original as above. The 1736 text begins thus:—

"Urbs Jerusalem beata Dicta pacis visio,
Quae constructur in coelis Vivis ex lapidibus,
Et ovantum coronata Angelorum agmine!"

This text is given in full in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, Nos. 105, 106.

4. Another form of the text is given in the Breviaryum Metropolitanae ac primatialis ecclesiae Senonensis . . . Senonis MDCCLXVI. Pars Haemalis, p. lxxxviii. as follows:—

"Urbs beata, vera pacis Visio, Jerusalem,

"Quanta surgit! celsa saxis Conditur viventibus:
Quae polivit, haec coaptat Sedibus suis Deus.

"Singulis ex margaritis Singulae portae nitent:
Murus omnium fulget auro, Fulget unionibus:

"Angularis petra Christus Fundat urbis moenia.

"Ejus est sol caecus Agnus, Ejus est templum Deus:

"Aemulantes hic Beati, Puriores Spiritus,
Laude jugi numen unum Terque sanctum concinunt.

"Undequaque sunt aperta Civitatis ostia:

"Quisquis ambit huc venire, Inserique moenibus,
Ante duris hic probari Debit laboribus.

"Sit perennis laus Parenti, Sit perennis Filio:

"Lais tibi, qui nectis ambos, Sit perennis, Spiritus: Chrisma cujus nos inungens, Viva templa consecrat."

This is the text to which Dr. Neale refers in his Mediaeval Hys., 1851 and 1867, as:

"There is in the Paris Breviary, a rifacimento of this hymn; very inferior, it is true, to the original, but much superior to the Roman reform."

It is however an error to call this the Paris Brev. text, as it is neither in the Paris Brev. of 1643, 1736, nor 1778. This form has been ascribed to Sebastian Besnault (p. 138, ii.), many of whose hymns are included in the Sens Brev. of 1726. [J. M.]

The translations of the various forms of this hymn are:—

i. Original Text: (i.) Urbs beata Hierusalem; (ii.) Angularis fundamentum.

1. (a.) Blessed city, heavenly Salem, Vision dear of peace and love, &c. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is made the sure Foundation. Pt. ii.

By J. M. Neale. This was given as one hymn in Mediaeval Hys., 1851, but in the H. Noted, 1852, it was revised and divided into two parts as above (Nos. 43, 44). The tr. as thus divided was given in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and in H. A. & M., 1861, with alterations in each case. Dr. Neale's comment on some of these alterations in the 3rd ed. of his Mediaeval Hys., 1867, p. 22, is:—

"This hymn, divided as in the Breviary, after the fourth verse, was inserted, with some corrections, in the Hymnal Noted. Thence, with a good many alterations, it was copied in the Sarum Hymnal [Salisbury H. Bk., 1857]; one of these changes seems true and happy: v. 27—

Who, the two walls underlying,

Bound in each, binds both in one.

In Hymns Ancient and Modern it is very slightly altered: and some of the changes can hardly be thought improvements, e.g., 'Thither faithful souls do soar' [Neale 'Thither faithful souls may soar']. It is curious to observe how both one and the other soften the second line of the second verse: [Neale 'Ready for the nuptial bed'] the Sarum has:—

'Grace and glory round her shed.'

Hymns Ancient and Modern (much better)—

'Bridal glory round her shed.'

The second part of the translation, 'Christ is made the sure Foundation,' has been adopted as a dedication hymn with so much general favour, that it would be unthankful not to mention the fact."

Amongst those collections which include both parts of this tr. as in the H. Noted, but giving in almost every instance variations, chiefly from H. A. & M., are Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861; Kennedy, 1863; People's H., 1867; Sarum, 1868;

the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, and several others in G. Britain and America. There are also a few collections which take only Pt. i., and others, greater in number, Pt. ii. There are centos also from both parts in C. U., beginning with the opening line of Pt. i., as in the Parish H. Bk., 1863-75; the Hy. Comp., and others. The position taken by Dr. Neale's tr. of this hymn is thus prominent and important. In popularity and extensiveness of use it is unapproached by any other.

2. (a.) Happy city, holy Salem. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ, the key-stone of the corner. Pt. ii.

By W. J. Blew, in his Ch. Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, H. Seasons, 1, 2, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, Nos 114, 115.

3. (a.) A blest city is Jerusalem. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is laid the sure Foundation. Christ is the tried [And the precious], &c. Pt. ii.

These renderings in the English Hymnal, 1856 and 1861, are by the editor, J. A. Johnston, based upon Dr. Neale, as above.

4. (a.) Blessed City, Heavenly Salem, Peaceful vision, &c. Pt. i.

(b.) Deeply laid a Foundation. Pt. ii.

By Archbishop Benson, tr. at Rugby, and used at the Dedication of Wellington College Chapel, July 16, 1863. It had previously appeared in the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860. It is also given in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871.

5. (a.) Blessed Salem, long expected. Pt. i.

1. (a.) The holy Jerusalem. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is set the Corner-stone. Pt. ii.

By I. Williams. Of these Pt. i. was given in the British Magazine, Aug. 1833, and Pt. ii. in the same, July 1837 (vol. xii. p. 30), and both parts were included in Williams's Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 333.

2. (a.) O City of our God. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is our Corner-stone, On Him alone build. Pt. ii.

By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 119. Pt. i. is very rarely used, but Pt. ii. is the most popular of any tr. of that portion of the hymn, and is in very extensive use in G. Britain and America. It sometimes begins, "O Christ, our Corner-Stone." The hymn "Here, Gracious God, do Thou," in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873, is from this tr., beginning with st. iii.

3. O heavenly Queen, high Salem. Pt. i. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, H. Seasons, 53, and again in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 126.

iv. The Sens Breviary Text, 1726: Urbs beata, vera pacis.

A tr. of this text, by A. R. Thompson, is given in Duffield's Latin Hymn-writers, 1889, as, "Blessed city vision true." [J. J.]

Ut jucundas cervus undas, aestuans desiderat. Bernard of Cluny (?) [B. V. M.] This is the opening of a poem, or rather cycle of poems or hymns, known as the Mariale. Up to 1600 it generally passed under the name of Bernard or of St. Bernard, though it was also ascribed to St. Thomas of Aquino (d. 1274); to Hildebert, archbishop of Tours (d. 1134), and to others. After 1600 it (or rather a cento from it beginning "Omni die dic Mariae") passed current under the name of St. Casimir of Poland (d. 1484). It has recently been ascribed to St. Anselm of Aosta, who, in 1063, was appointed Prior, and, in 1078, Abbot of Bec in Normandy; became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1093; and d. April 12, 1109. The ascription to St. Anselm has been upheld by Father Ragey of the Marist Order, who in 1884 pub. an ed. of the full text Sancti Anselmi Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi Mariale, &c. (London, Burns & Oates), with a preface and introduction dated April 21, 1883. This ed. is out of print, but Father Ragey kindly presented the present writer with a copy, and also with copies of his articles on the Mariale in the Annales de Philosophie Chrétienne (Paris), May and June 1883, and in the Controverse et Contemporain (Lyons), Nov. 1887. There, in the Revue des Questions historiques (Paris), Oct. 1886 and July 1887, and in the works referred to in these articles, the subject may be studied in detail. Here we can give only a brief outline of the subject, dealing (i.) with the MSS., (ii.) with the Authorship, and (iii.) with the Centos and Translations.

(i.) MSS. The Mariale exists in at least five mss. not later than 1200. Two of these are in the British Museum, viz., the Add. 21927, and the Harl. 2882.

The former of these (a Psalter apparently written for a Benedictine monastery in the province of York) contains only a portion of the text, beginning at f. 40b with the words "Omni die dic Mariae," and is entitled "Laus et oratio de sc̄a Maria." This ms. has sometimes been assigned to the end of the 11th cent., but the British Museum authorities, on being requested by the present writer to re-examine it, agree in considering that it is not earlier than 1175. The Harleian MS. (a complete and excellent one, apparently written in England), is dated in the Catalogue as of the 12th cent., but the similarly elicited opinion of the British Museum authorities is that it is not earlier than 1200.

The other three mss. are in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris, viz., Lat. 2445 A., Lat. 10522, and Lat. 16565.

M. Leopold Delisle, the Principal Librarian, has kindly re-examined these, and has come to the conclusion that none of them is as early as 1140. The 2445 A. is the earliest, and may possibly date soon after 1150.

The Mariale is also found in a considerable variety of mss. of later date, in the Brit. Mus. and in various French and German libraries, but these need not here be mentioned in detail. The verse form, a variety of the trochaic catalectic tetrameter, is not earlier than about 1050.

(ii.) Authorship.—These facts, and the other evidence adduced in the works noted above, clearly point to the conclusion that the poem was written, either in France or in England, not earlier than 1050 and not later than 1150. The possible authors are thus reduced to four, viz.: St. Anselm of Canterbury, St. Bernard of Clairvaux, Bernard of Cluny, and Hilbert of Tours. St. Thomas of Aquino (to whom it is ascribed in a 14th cent. ms., cited by Mone, ii. p. 258) was only born in 1225.

(a) Hilbert. For Hilbert there is only the ascription in a miscellaneous ms. volume of the 13th or 14th cent., formerly belonging to the monastery of St. James at Liege, and now in the Darmstadt Library (No. 2777. The text of this ms., which contains nearly the whole of the Mariale, is printed by F. W. E. Roth, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1887, No. 203.) The Mariale is not contained in the Benedictine ed. of Hilbert's Opera (Paris, 1708), and M. Haureau, who has recently interested himself in the study of Hilbert, ascribes it not to him, but to Bernard of Cluny.

(b) St. Bernard of Clairvaux. The ascription to St. Bernard also rests on a very slight foundation. The Bernard to whom the early mss. ascribed the Mariale was clearly not the abbot of Clairvaux, but the monk of Cluny. (See M. Haureau's articles in the Journal des Savants for 1882, reprinted as the Poèmes Latins attribués à Saint Bernard, Paris, 1890.)

(c) St. Anselm of Canterbury. The principal specific reasons (beyond the general contention that it harmonises in sentiment and expression with St. Anselm's character, and with his works), which led Ragey to think that it was by him are:—

(1) The fact of its being in very early mss. But, as shown above, no ms. of it is as early as 1140, and consequently it cannot be adjudged from Bernard of Cluny on that ground. (2) The fervour of its devotion to the B. V. M. But St. Anselm was not alone in his devotion to her. (3) The frequent resemblances to passages in the works undoubtedly by St. Anselm. In the first ed. of the Mariale these parallel passages are printed at the foot of the pages containing the corresponding portions of the text. But the parallels are not very close, and even if they were closer they might be accounted for otherwise, for it is tolerably certain that Bernard had access, in the library at Cluny, to at least a fairly complete set of the works of so well-known an ecclesiastic and theologian as St. Anselm. (4) The fact that in the Harl. MS. 2882 it occurs in a section which otherwise contains nothing but pieces which are undoubtedly by St. Anselm. This is not a very conclusive argument, especially as the other pieces are all in prose. (5) Certain allusions which Ragey thinks were meant to refer to contemporary events in England, under the rule of William Rufus (1078–1100). The allusions are however not distinct enough to found an argument upon.

To the present writer the great difficulties in the way of ascribing the Mariale to St. Anselm are firstly that F. Ragey relies too much on subjective evidence, and secondly that the other poems ascribed to him are of such small importance, and nowhere show any evidence of poetical talent or of the power to compose such a long poem in so difficult a metre.

The Mariale had indeed been ascribed to St. Anselm much earlier than by Father Ragey, viz., in a ms. of about the end of the 13th cent., now in the Bibl. Nat. at Paris (Lat. 16499, f. 343), where it is entitled "Meditationes Anselmi de beata Virgine." But the mere fact of its appearance with that title in this solitary, and not very ancient, ms., has not convinced M. Haureau (1890, p. 87) that it is really by St. Anselm, nor is the present writer inclined to regard it as conclusive evidence of his authorship.

(d) Bernard of Cluny. The earliest ms. of the poem now known is the Lat. 2445 A. at Paris, written circa 1150. Here it is entitled "Invocatio divina Sapientiae facta a Bernardo in laudem monacho perpetuae Virginis." The epithet 'monachus' is evidently meant to point to Bernard of Cluny, for long before 1150 St. Bernard, from a simple monk, had become Abbot of Clairvaux. The ascription to Bernard is found in various other of the early mss. As time went on and the fame of St. Bernard of Clairvaux increased, while the name of Bernard of Cluny was forgotten, we find the mss. ascribe the Mariale distinctly to St. Bernard. So in two mss. of the 14th cent., written in France, and now in the Brit. Mus. (Reg. 7 A. vi., and Reg. B. 1.), the author is styled 'Bernardus doctor,' and in a ms. of the 15th cent., now also in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 30935, f. 363b), the poems are styled "Orationes sancti Bernardi devoti doctoris," and appointed for the Octave of the Assumption of the B. V. M.

To show the structure of the poem we print here the opening of its best-known part:—

"Omni die, dic Mariae, mea, laudes, anima;
Ejus festa, ejus gesta cole splendidissima.
Contemplare, et mirare ejus celsitudinem;
Dic felicem Genitricem, dic Beatam Virginem."
