On comparing this with the De contemptu mundi (pp. 137, ii. and 533, ii.), which is the undoubted work of Bernard of Cluny, we see in both an equal mastery of a difficult and somewhat similar metre. The poet who could write the one was certainly capable of writing the other. Whatever may be the theological prepossessions of the critic it is altogether unfair to deny that the De contemptu and the Mariale are both the work of a first-rate poet, and it is idle to depreciate the De contemptu in order to exalt the Mariale. The De contemptu indeed contains much that might well have been spared, but the first part, for hundreds of lines, has in its way nothing to equal it in beauty in the whole range of Latin sacred poetry. If the De contemptu may be accused of want of progress and of eddying round its subject, then this is precisely what may justly be said of the Mariale.

Therefore, on the grounds of the early ascription to Bernard of Cluny, of the fact that no mss. can be found which are sufficiently early to disprove the ascription to him, and of his talents as a poet and master of Latin verse, we incline to regard the Mariale as his. St. Anselm was indeed a distinguished theologian and ecclesiastic, but we have really no reason to regard him as a poet of any merit.

(iii.) Centos and Translations. The complete text of the poem is, in Ragey's edition, arranged in 15 parts, viz. a Prooemium, a Praevia Meditatio, and 13 Hymns. It is not necessary however to print the first lines of these as Ragey's 2nd ed. (Tournay: Desclée, Lefebvre & Co., 1885) is easily accessible, as well as cheap, and very prettily printed. Here we give only the beginnings of the different forms or centos which we have noticed, adding the page references to Ragey's 1885 ed. These forms and centos are:—

- i. Jesse proles, pelle moles. p. 104.
- ii. Jesu Christe, per quem iste. p. 123.
- iii. Jesu Verbum, qui superbum. p. 170.
- iv. Lingua mea, dic trophaea. p. 14.
- v. Lux sanctorum, spes lapsorum. p. 71.
- vi. O felicem genitricem. p. 93.
- vii. O Maria, vitae via. p. 107.
- viii. Omni die, dic Mariae. p. 15.
- ix. Pulchra tota, sine nota. p. 28.
- x. Splendor Patris, factor Matris. p. 44.
- xi. Ut jucundas cervus undas. p. 3.

Of these Nos. i., ii., iii., v., vii., x. are given by Mone (Nos. 566–571) from various mss. of the 14th and 15th cent., and seem to have been meant for use at private devotions. The other forms may be here noted somewhat more fully, viz. :—

iv. Lingua mea, dic trophaea virginis puerperae.

A cento beginning thus was tr. as:—

O my tongue, the praise and honours. By T. I. Ball for the 1863 Appx. to the H. Noted, No. 205. This is repeated in the Office H. Bk., 1889. In the St. Margaret's Hyl. (East Grinstead), 1875, it is in two parts, the second beginning "O thou ever pure, yet fruitful."

vi. O felicem genitricem, cujus sacra viscera. This is the only portion of the poem which seems to have come into public use in Pre-Reformation times. It is included in various Missals of the 15th and 16th cent., such as the Lübeck, c. 1480; the Trier, c. 1490; the Prag of 1507; the Naumburg of 1517, and others. Also in Wackernagel, i. p. 192; Daniel, ii., p. 205; Kehrein, No. 315, &c. It is tr. as:—

Blessed Mother o'er all other. By A. D. Wackerbarth, in his Lyra Ecclesiastica, 1842, p. 27.

viii. Omni die, dic Mariae, mea, laudes, anima. The popular form of this is the cento made from the poem by St. Casimir of Poland (b. 1458, d. 1484). A ms. copy of this arrangement is said to have been found in his grave when that was opened in 1604; and in the 17th cent., and indeed till recently, he was generally thought to be its author. It is given in his life in the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum (1668), for March 4; in the Parnassus Marianus, Douay, 1624, p. 364; in J. M. Horst's Paradisus animae Christianae, Cologne, 1630, p. 500 (1644, p. 462); in Daniel, ii. p. 372, &c. Various trs. of it are included in German Roman Catholic hymn-books from 1613 on, it was tr. into French at least as early as 1630, and there are also trs. in Italian, Spanish, Polish, Hungarian, &c. It has also been tr. into English as:—

1. Each day, my soul, Tell Mary's praise. By Canon F. Oakeley, in his tr. of Horst's Paradisus, 1850, p. 593, and divided, as in Horst, into six decades.

2. Daily, daily, sing to Mary, Sing, my soul, her praises due. This is in the Oratory Hys., 1854, and the Catholic Psalmist, 1858, p. 141. It is repeated in the Catholic Hyl., 1860, as the first part of No. 63; and, in almost the same text, in the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862, &c.

3. Sing, sing each day, A tuneful lay. By Cardinal Wiseman, in his Hymn of St. Casimir, London, 1859.

ix. Pulchra tota, sine nota eujuscumque maculae. This is really part of the cento made by St. Casimir. It is tr. as:—

Holy Queen! we bend before thee, Queen of purity divine. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 312, and Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 176; repeated in the Hys. for the Year, 1867, and the Parochial H. Bk., 1880. In the Catholic Hyl., 1860, No. 63, pt. ii., it begins "Holy Mary, we implore thee By thy purity divine," and this form is repeated in the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862.

xi. Ut jucundas cervus undas, aestuans desiderat. This is found also in Daniel, v. p. 409, and in Trench's Sac. Latin Poetry, ed. 1864, p. 237. It is tr. as:—

The thirsty hart pants with desire. By D. T. Morgan, in his Hys. of the Latin Church, 1871, p. 94.

These various forms and centos testify to the popularity which the poem has enjoyed in Roman Catholic circles. It is in parts very beautiful; but is, as a whole, too intensely Marian to lend itself for use in the Churches of the Reformation, unless with such adaptation as would almost destroy its identity.

Ut queant laxis resonare fibris.

Paul the Deacon. [St. John the Baptist's Day.] This hymn by Paul the Deacon, son of Warnfried, is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 54; Vesp. D. xii. f. 81 b; Add. 30848 f. 165); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 102, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 30b). Also in the St. Gall ms. No. 387, of the 11th cent.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 260), &c. Among the Bern mss. it is found in No. 363 of the 8th cent.; No. 303 circa 900; and No. 455 of the 10th cent. Ernest Dümmler, in the Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, Berlin, 1881, vol. i. p. 83, gives it in the Appendix "Carminum Dubiorum" of Paul the Deacon, citing it as in a Vatican ms. of the 10th cent., and many others. It is in the Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. In the Sarum use part i. was assigned to Lauds, pt. ii. Antra deserti teneris sub annis to Matins, pt. iii., O nimis felix, meritique celsi to Lauds. Stanza i. has often been quoted by writers on music (from Guido of Arezzo in the 11th cent. onwards) as indicating the names of the musical notes:—

"Ut queant laxis Resonare fibris
Mira gestorum Famuli tuorum Solve polluti Labii reatum, Sancte Johannes."

The printed text is also in Daniel i. No. 183, with readings at iv. pp. 163, 370, citing the Bern ms. No. 455, &c.; in Wackernagel, i. No. 127; Bässler, No. 64; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888 p. 50, from a 10th cent. ms.; and in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

The three parts of this hymn have been tr. into English as follows :—

i. Ut queant laxis resonare fibris.

1. ■ that, once more, to sinful men descending. By T. I. Ball, in the 1863 Appendix to the H. Noted. In the Office H. Book, 1889, it is given as “O that to sinners once again descending.”

2. Greatest of prophets, messenger appointed. By R. F. Littledale, in the 1860 Appendix to the H. Noted, in the Day Hours of the Church of England, 1864, and again in the People's H., 1867, with the signature “B.”

3. O heavenly Father, cleanse ■ lips. By W. Cooke, in the Hymnary, 1872, with the signature “A. C. C.” and again in Thring's Coll., 1882.

4. O for thy spirit, holy John, to chasten. Anonymous in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882. It is based upon W. J. Blew's tr. as below.

Other trs. are :—

1. That thy rare doings, O S. John we pray thee. Primer. 1599.

2. That we thy servants may with joy declare. Primer. 1615.

3. That we with deep-tun'd strings may sound. Primer. 1685.

4. O sylvan Prophet, whose eternal Fame. Primer. 1706 and 1782.

5. That we with tuneful Notes may sound thy Life. Evening Office. 1760.

6. O for thy spirit, holy John, once more. W. J. Copeland. 1848.

7. Unloose, great Baptist, our sin-fetter'd lips. E. Caswall. 1849.

8. O for thy spirit, holy John, to chasten. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

9. That with glad voices, we thy matchless virtues. T. J. Potter in Catholic Psalmist. 1858.

10. In flowing measures worthily to sing. J. D. Chambers. 1866.

11. That we may worthy be in tuneful strain. J. Wallace. 1874.

ii. Antra deserti teneris ab annis.

1. In caves of the lone wilderness thy youth. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 156; his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 85, and ■ few Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools.

2. Thou, young in years, in desert caverns hidest. By T. I. Ball, in the 1863 Appendix to the H. Noted. In the Office Hy. Book, 1889, it is greatly altered as, “Thou, in the wilds, thy tender years art hiding.”

3. Thou in thy childhood to the desert caverns. Anon. in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

Other trs. are :—

1. From noisy crowds your early years Recess. Primer. 1706.

2. In tenderest years withdrawn from haunts of men. W. J. Copeland. 1848.

3. In the lone desert, to the caves and coverts. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

4. Thou in the desert caves thy tender youth. J. D. Chambers. 1866.

5. Thy childhood's home the desert was. J. Wallace. 1874.

iii. ■ nimis felix meritique celsi.

1. O blessed saint, of snow-white purity. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 158, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 86. It is given in a few collections. In Hys. for the Year, 1867, it begins, “O Saint of snow-white purity.”

2. O blessed saint of high renown and honour. By R. F. Littledale, in the Day Hours of the Church of England, 1864, and the People's H., 1867, where it is signed “B.”

3. ■ more than blessed, merit high attaining.

Anon. in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882. Altered in the Office H. Book, 1889, to “O Saint most blessed, merit high attaining.”

Other trs. are :—

1. Hail Prince of Prophets, Prince of Martyrs, hail. Primer. 1706.

2. O, all too blest, and of transcendent worth. W. J. Copeland. 1848.

3. Baptist thrice blessed, John august and holy. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

4. Most blest, most excellent in holiness. J. D. Chambers. 1866.

5. Thrice happy, thou exalted saint. J. Wallace. 1874. [J. J.]

V. In the New Golden Shower, N. Y., 1870, i.e. Mrs. Van Alstyne.

Van Alstyne the hopes the sons of men. I. Watts. [Justification by Faith.] Pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 94, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed “Justification by Faith, not by Works; or, The Law condemns, Grace justifies, Rom. iii. 19-22.” In the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, it was given unaltered; in that of 1751 it was slightly changed; and in the authorised issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, No. xli., st. i., ii. were rewritten, but began with the original first line as above; st. iii. was taken from the Draft of 1751; and st. iv. unaltered from Watts. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) these alterations are attributed to him. The use of the 1781 form of the text is far more extensive than that of the original. [J. J.]

Van Alstyne, Frances Jane, née Crosby, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was b. at South East, Putnam County, New York, March 24, 1823. When six weeks old she lost her sight. About 1835 she entered the New York City Institution for the Blind. On completing her training she became a teacher therein from 1847 to 1858. In 1858 she was married to Alexander Van Alstyne, a musician, who was also blind. Her first poem was pub. in 1831; and her first volumes of verse as A Blind Girl, and Other Poems, 1844; Monteresy, and Other Poems, 1849; and A Wreath of Columbia's Flowers, 1858. Her first hymn was “We are going, we are going” (Death and Burial), which was written for Mr. Bradbury and pub. in the Golden Censer, 1864. From 1853 to 1858 she wrote 20 songs, which were set to music by G. F. Root. Her songs and hymns number some 2,000 or more, and have been published mainly in several of the popular American Sunday school collections, and often under a nom de plume. About 60 have come into C. U. in G. Britain. The majority of these are taken from the following American collections :—

i. From The Shining Star, 1864.

1. Softly on the breath of evening. Evening.

ii. From Fresh Laurels, 1867.

2. Beautiful Mansions, home of the blest. Heaven.

3. Jesus the Water of Life has given. The Water of Life.

4. Light and Comfort of my soul. In Affliction.

5. There's a cry from Macedonia. Missions.
 6. We are marching on with shield and banner bright. S. S. Anniversary.
 iii. From Musical Leaves, 1868.
 7. O what are you going to do, brother? Youth for God.
 iv. From Sabbath Carols, 1868.
 8. Dark is the night, and cold the wind is blowing. Affliction anticipated.
 9. Lord, at Thy mercy seat, Humbly I fall. Lent.
 v. From Silver Spray, 1868.
 10. If I come to Jesus, He will make me glad. Peace in Jesus.
 11. 'Twill not be long—our journey here. Heaven anticipated.
 vi. From Notes of Joy, 1869.
 12. Little beams of rosy light. The Divine Father.
 13. Press on! press on! a glorious throng. Pressing towards the Prize.
 vii. From Bright Jewels, 1869.
 14. Christ the Lord is risen to-day, He is risen indeed. Easter.
 15. Holy, holy, holy is the Lord! Sing O ye people, &c. Holiness of God.
 16. Jesus, keep me near the Cross. Near the Cross of Christ.
 17. Saviour, bless a little child. A Child's Prayer. Written Feb. 6, 1869.
 viii. From Songs of Devotion, 1870.
 18. Pass me not, O gentle Saviour. Lent. Written in 1868.
 19. Rescue the perishing, care for the dying. Home Missions.
 ix. From Pure Gold, 1871.
 20. Great is Jehovah. King of kings. Greatness of God.
 21. I would be Thy little lamb. The Good Shepherd.
 22. Lead me to Jesus, lead me to Jesus. Desiring Jesus.
 23. To the work, to the work, we are servants of God. Home Missions.
 24. Why labour for treasures that rust and decay? The Fadeless Crown.
 x. From the Royal Diadem, 1873.
 25. I am Jesus' little friend. For Infant Schools.
 26. Jesus I love Thee. Loving Jesus.
 27. Mourner, wheresoe'er thou art. To the Sorrowing and Penitent. Written Oct. 3, 1871.
 28. Never be faint or weary. Joy in Jesus.
 29. Only a step to Jesus. Invitation.
 xi. From Winnowed Hymns, 1873-4.
 30. Loving Saviour, hear my cry. Lent.
 xii. From Echoes of Zion, 1874.
 31. Say, where is thy refuge, my brother? Home Missions.
 xiii. From Songs of Grace and Glory, 1874.
 32. Thou my everlasting Portion. Christ the Portion of His People.
 xiv. From Brightest and Best, 1875.
 33. All the way my Saviour leads me. Jesus the Guide.
 34. I am Thine, O Lord: I have heard Thy voice. Holiness desired.
 35. O come to the Saviour, believe in His name. Invitation. Written, Sep. 7, 1874.
 36. O how sweet when we mingle. Communion of Saints. Written in 1866.
 37. O my Saviour, hear me. Prayer to Jesus for blessing and love.
 38. Only Jesus feels and knows. Jesus the Divine Friend.
 39. Revive Thy work, O Lord. Home Missions.
 40. Saviour, more than life to me. Jesus All and in All.
 41. To God be the glory, great things He hath done. Praise for Redemption.
 xv. From Calvary Songs, 1875.
 42. Come, O come with thy broken heart. Invitation.
 xvi. From Gospel Music, 1876.
 43. Here from the world we turn. Divine Worship.
 44. When Jesus comes to reward His servants. Watching.

- xvii. From Welcome Tidings, 1877.
 45. O hear my cry, be gracious now to me. For Pardon and Peace.
 xviii. From The Fountain of Song, 1877.
 46. Lord, my trust I repose on Thee. Trusting in Jesus.
 xix. From Good as Gold, 1880.
 47. In Thy cleft, O Rock of Ages. Safety in Jesus.
 48. Sound the alarm! let the watchman cry. Home Missions.
 49. Tenderly He leads us. Christ the Leader.
 50. 'Tis the blessed hour of prayer. The hour of Prayer.

In addition to these hymns, all of which are in C. U. in G. Britain (mainly through I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, the Methodist S. S. H. Bk., the Silver Street Sunday Scholar's Companion, and other collections for Sunday schools), there are also "A blessing for you, will you take it?" (Pardon through Jesus); "My song shall be of Jesus" (Praise of Jesus); "Now, just a word for Jesus" (Home Missions); "Onward, upward, Christian soldier" (Pressing Heavenward); "Sinner, how thy heart is troubled" (Invitation); "'Tis a goodly, pleasant land" (Heaven anticipated); and "When the dewy light was fading" (Death anticipated). All of these are in I. D. Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos. Mrs. Van Alstyne's most popular composition is "Safe in the arms of Jesus" (Safety in Jesus). This was written in 1868, at the request of Mr. W. H. Doane, to his well-known melody with which it is inseparably associated, and pub. in Bright Jewels, 1869. Mrs. Van Alstyne's hymns have sometimes been published anonymously; but the greater part are signed by a bewildering number of initials, and noms de plume, including:—

A.; C.; D. H. W.; F.; F. A. N.; F. C.; F. J. C.; F. J. V. J.; J. C. F.; V.; V. A.; Ella Dale; F. Crosby; F. J. Crosby; Fannie; Fannie Crosby; Fanny; Fanny Crosby; Fanny Van Alstyne; Jenny V.; Mrs. Jennie Glenn; Mrs. Kate Grinley; Miss V.; Miss Viola V. A.; Mrs. V.; Viola. (List kindly supplied by Mr. H. P. Main, of New York.)

The combined sales of the volumes of songs and hymns named above have amounted in English-speaking countries to millions of copies. Notwithstanding the immense circulation thus given to Mrs. Van Alstyne's hymns, they are, with few exceptions, very weak and poor, their simplicity and earnestness being their redeeming features. Their popularity is largely due to the melodies to which they are wedded.

Since the above was in type we have found that the following are also in C. U. in G. Britain:—

51. Suppose the little cowslip. Value of Little Things.
 52. Sweet hour of prayer. The Hour of Prayer. These are in Bradbury's Golden Chain, 1861.
 53. Never lose the golden rule. Love to our Neighbours. In Bradbury's Golden Censer, 1864.
 54. I will not be afraid at night. Trust in God. In Bradbury's Fresh Laurels, 1867.
 55. Praise Him, praise Him, Jesus our, &c. Praise of Jesus. In Biglow & Main's Bright Jewels, 1869.
 56. More like Jesus would I be. More like Jesus. In Perkins & Taylor's Songs of Salvation, 1870.
 57. Behold me standing at the door. Christ at the Door. In Biglow & Main's Christian Songs, 1872.
 58. If I come to Jesus. Jesus the Children's Guide.
 59. Jesus, Lord, I come to Thee. Trust in Jesus.
 60. Let me learn of Jesus. Jesus the Children's Friend.
 61. Singing for Jesus, O singing for Jesus, Singing for Jesus,

62. There is a Name divinely sweet. Holy Name of Jesus.

Of these hymns Nos. 58-62 we have not been able to trace. [J. J.]

Various. It was originally intended that additions to and corrections of articles in this Dictionary should come under this heading. The expansion of the work far beyond its original limits, the accumulation of hymns and hymnological works of great value, the discovery of mss. and books heretofore unknown to the hymnologist, the passing away of a large number of hymnwriters since the printing of this Dictionary was begun in 1880, and the late arrival of some important articles, have however necessitated an Appendix, which will be found at p. 1307. In every case where the reader is referred to Various in this Dictionary the information will be found in that Appendix. [J. J.]

Vater unser, der du bist. [Lord's Prayer.] In an Erfurt G. B. of 1527, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 545, in 9 st. of 4 l., and Kirioleyson. Tr. as "O our Father celestiall," by Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 549). [J. M.]

Vater unser im Himmelreich. [M. Luther. The Lord's Prayer.] This was included in V. Schumann's Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1539, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled "The Lord's Prayer briefly expounded and turned into metre" (apparently first as a broadsheet with the same title, in 1539; see Wackernagel's Bibliographie, 1855, p. 156); and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 24. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 52; and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 572. It is a beautiful rendering, and has been by some regarded as Luther's finest hymn. Each of the first eight stanzas amplifies one of the clauses of the Lord's Prayer (omitting the doxology), and the ninth is on the Amen. C. von Winterfeld, in his ed. of Luther's Deutsche Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1840, gives a facsimile of what he believed to be the autograph original draft of this hymn. Tr. as:—

1. Our Father in the heavens above. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 121 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848, repeated as No. 4, in the Appx. to his own Ps. & Hys., 1851, and omitting st. ix., in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.

2. Our Father dear, which art in heaven. In full, by R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 61, repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

3. Our Father, Thou in heaven above. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 114. Repeated in the Evang. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 64.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Our Father God omnipotent." In the Gude and Godlie Ballades, ed. 1568, folio 7 (1863, p. 10). (2) "Our Father Which in Heaven art, And mak'st." By Dr. R. Cox, in the 1560 and 1560-61, Psalms of David. Repeated in the English Psalter of 1562, and added in 1595 to the Scottish Psalter of 1564-65. (3) "Our Father! Who from Heav'n above." By J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 65 (1732, p. 107). Repeated as No. 165 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (4) "Our Father in the heavenly realm." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 45. (5) "Our Father, Who from heaven above." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 59 (1847, p. 73). (6) "Father of all in heaven above." By

Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 88. (?) "Our Father in the heaven Who art." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, altered in his Exotics, 1876. [J. M.]

Vaughan, Charles John, D.D., s. of Mr. Vaughan, Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester, was b. in 1817, and educated at Rugby, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1838 as Senior Classic. He was for sometime Fellow of his College, and successively Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester; Head Master of Harrow; Vicar of Doncaster; Master of the Temple; and Dean of Llandaff (1879). He has also been Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen, and Chancellor of York Cathedral. In 1882 he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the Closet. Although so widely known as a Scholar, Theologian, and Preacher, his hymn-writing is very limited. Practically he is known by one hymn only: "Lord, Whose temple once did glisten" (Laying Foundation Stone of a Church), which was written at Cambridge about 1837, to the tune "The German Emperor" (H. A. & M., 1875, No. 292, 1st tune), and was used at the laying of the Foundation stone of Trinity Church, Chesterfield. It was pub. in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 115, in 4 st. of 8 l., and was given for "The Consecration of a Church." It is in several modern collections. [J. J.]

Vaughan, Henry, M.D., commonly called "The Silurist," was one of twin-brothers born of a titled family at Newton, Llansaintfflad, in 1621. After studying under the Rev. Matthew Herbert, Rector of Llangattock, he proceeded to Jesus College, Oxford, in 1638; but through the national troubles of those days, his studies, in common with those of his brother, were interrupted, and they had to leave the University. Subsequently he entered the medical profession, and practised at Brecon and at Newton. He d. April 23, 1695. His published works include, Poems with the Tenth Satire of Juvenal Englished, 1646; Olor Iscanus, 1651; The Mount of Olives, 1652, &c. As a religious poet he followed very closely the peculiarities of George Herbert, of whose writings he was a great admirer. His best and most devotional poems were written during a severe affliction, and were pub. in his Silex Scintillans. After being almost forgotten for more than 200 years, his quaint, thoughtful, devotional, and, in many instances, beautiful poems, are receiving attention at the hands of hymnal compilers and others. The title of the work in which these pieces appeared is:—

Silex Scintillans: or Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations. By Henry Vaughan, Silurist. London. Printed by J. W. for H. Blunden, at ye Castle in Cornhill, 1650. This contains 110 pages. This was reprinted as Silex Scintillans: or Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations. The Second Edition, In two books; By Henry Vaughan, Silurist. London, Printed for Henry Crips, and Lodowick Lloyd, next to the Castle in Cornhill, and in Popes-Head Alley, 1655. The Rev. H. F. Lyte republished this work as, The Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations of Henry Vaughan, with Memoir. London, Pickering, 1847. It is also reprinted in Grosart's Fuller Worthies, 1863.

From the Silex Scintillans several pieces have been taken as hymns for public worship. In addition to those annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), the following, all from the 1st ed. of 1650, are in C. U. :—

1. As travellers when the twilight's come. Life a Pilgrimage.
2. Bright shadows of true rest! some shoots of bliss. Sundays. Sometimes as "Types of eternal rest, fair buds of bliss."
3. Joy of my life, while left me here. Guiding Stars.
4. King of mercy, King of love. God our King.
5. Lord, with what courage and delight. Cheerfulness.
6. My God and King, to Thee I bow my knee. Lent.
7. Since in a land not barren still. Love and Discipline.
8. Up to those bright and gladsome hills. Ps. cxxi.
9. What needs a conscience, clear and bright? Conscience.
10. When one loud blast shall rend the deep. Advent Judgment.
11. Zion's true glorious God! on Thee. Praise.

Of Vaughan's hymns the most widely used are:—"Bright Queen of heaven," "My soul, there is a countrie," and "Up to these bright and gladsome hills." [J. J.]

Vaughan, Rowland, was a member of an ancient Welsh family in Merionethshire. He received his University education at Jesus College, Oxford. His name stands pre-eminent among the contemporary gentry of Wales, for devoting his talents to the improvement of his poorer countrymen. He translated several excellent works; and besides being a good prose writer, he was also a good poet. His tr. of the Veni Creator Spiritus, "Tyr'd Ysbyrd Glan," and his Galarnad Pechadus are still in great favour in Wales. His mansion at Caergai was burnt to the ground by the Republican forces from Montgomeryshire, and part of his estates confiscated. His attachment to the King's cause brought upon him great sufferings. [W. G. T.]

Venez Jésus, mon salutaire. Antoinette Bourignon. [Renouncing all for Christ.] This hymn was written, circa 1640, and expressed her determination to live for Christ alone, a resolution which she came to whilst suffering from her father's anger because she refused to marry a man whom he had chosen for her. It is given in her Works, Amsterdam, 1686, in 5 st. of 8 l. Tr. as:—

Come Saviour, Jesus, from above. Dr. Osborn, in The Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 110, says in a note to this tr., which is given there from the Wesley Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739, p. 123, in 10 st. of 4 l.

"This, and the 'Farewell to the World,' p. 17, were probably furnished to the compilers by Mr. Byrom, of Manchester (see 'Byrom and the Wesleys,' by the Rev. Dr. Hoole [1864], pp. 17, 27), and translated by him from the French of Madam de Bourignon. The copy of 'A Hymn to Jesus,' which is found in his 'Miscellaneous Poems' (Manchester, 1773), vol. ii. p. 211, differs from that given above only in the title ['Renouncing all for Christ'], and in such verbal alterations as the superior taste and judgment of the Wesleys would dictate. The 9th and 10th verses, in both Byrom's and Wesley's copies are tinged with that mysticism to which the preface [to the Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739] refers; and Wesley has improved on himself as well as on Byrom in the last edition of v. 9 (that in the Large Hymn-Book, 1780), where, instead of 'Nor heaven nor earth,' we read 'Nothing on earth.'"

The references to Byrom and the Wesleys are these:—

(1) p. 17. Under date, "Manchester, March 3rd, 1738," Byrom writes to C. Wesley, and in his letter says:—"As your brother [J. Wesley] has brought so many hymns translated from the French, you will have a sufficient number, and no occasion to increase them by the small addition of Mademoiselle Bourignon's two little pieces. I desire you to favour my present weakness, if I judge wrong, and not to publish them."

(2) p. 27. Under date of "April 26th, 1739," Byrom writes to his son:—"They [J. & C. Wesley] have both together printed a book of hymns [the Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739], amongst which they have inserted two of Madam Bourignon's, one of which they call 'A Farewell to the World,' translated from the French; and the other, 'Renouncing all for Christ,' translated from the French. They have introduced them by a preface against what they call Mystic writers (not naming any particular author), for whom they say that they had once a great veneration, but think themselves obliged very solemnly to acknowledge their error, and to guard others against the like, which they do by certain reasons that I do not see the reason of."

We regard these facts and quotations as good evidence in support of Byrom's authorship, notwithstanding that his Poems were pub. not by himself but by another ten years after his death.

In 1780 J. Wesley included his amended version in 8 st. of 4 l. in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 276. Since then it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America in various forms varying from 4 to 8 stanzas, and all from J. Wesley's text. [J. J.]

Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentis tuorum visita. [Whitsuntide.] In annotating this great hymn we shall deal (i.) with the MSS. and the various forms of the Text; (ii.) with its Authorship and Date; and lastly (iii.) with the differences found in its Use.

i. MSS. and Text. From the 12th cent. onwards mss. of this hymn are innumerable, as it is commonly found in the Hymnals, Breviaries, &c., of almost all churches of the West. Before the 12th cent. copies are much less plentiful. In order to determine the text, seven mss., all assigned to the 11th cent., have been collated as follows:—

Three now in the British Museum, viz., Jul. A., vi. f. 53 (Hymnal), Vesp. D., xii. f. 77 (Hymnal), Add. 30848, f. 159 (Mozarabic Breviary); one at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 391, page 251 (Psalter with hymns); one in the Bodleian, Liturg. Misc. 320, f. 32 (Hymnal); one at Durham, B. iii. 32, f. 27 (Hymnal); and one in the Vatican at Rome, Palat. 30. (Psalter with hymns).

Among other ancient mss. it is found

In two Rheinau mss., now in the Kantonal-Bibliothek at Zürich, viz. No. 111, f. 172b, of the 10th cent., and No. 91, f. 149, of the 11th cent., in the latter assigned to Vespers; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, No. 387, page 215 (the earliest St. Gall ms. in which the Librarian, Herr Idtenson, has been able to find it); in a ms. of the 12th cent. in the Brit. Mus., Arundel, 155f, 157b (Psalter with Hymns), &c.

In other early mss. its existence and use are recognised, but only the first words of the hymn are given. Four such mss., all of the 11th cent., may be mentioned, viz.:—

Three in the British Museum, Harl. 2961, f. 102b (Collectarium and Hymnal), Titus D. xxvii. f. 76 (Book of Offices, &c., circa 1015), Add. 30850, f. 137b (Mozarabic Antiphony); and one in the Bodleian, Liturg. Misc., 359, f. (Pontifical).

From these sources the text is derived thus:—

(a) The Original Text and the Doxologies. The text of the seven mss. cited above is as follows:

i.	iii.
"Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentes tuorum visita, Imple superna gratia Quae Tu creasti pectora.	"Tu septiformis munere, Dextrae Dei Tu dignus, Tu rite premissus Patris, Sermonem ditas guttura.
ii.	iv.
"Qui Paracletus diceris, Donum Dei altissimi, Fons vivus, ignis, chari- tas, Et spiritalis unctio.	"Accende lumen sensibus, Infunde amorem cordi- bus, Infirma nostri corporis Virtute firmans perpeti.

v.
 "Hostem repellas longius,
 Pacemque dones protinus,
 Ductore sic Te praevio Vitemus omne noxium.

vi.
 "Per Te sciamus, da,
 Patrem,
 Noscamus atque Filium,
 Te utriusque Spiritum
 Credamus omni tempore."

These six stanzas clearly form the original text, and in some of the mss. cited (e.g. Add. 30848, and Palat. 30), in the Add. 18301, f. 128b (a Collectarium and Hymnal of the 12th cent.), and in some of the early printed Breviaries, e.g. the Augsburg Brev. of 1493, Basel Brev. of 1493, &c., &c., nothing more is added. Many mss. indeed contain a doxology, the most usual being:—

"Sit laus Patri cum Filio, Sancto simul Paraclito,
 Nobisque mittat Filius
 Charisma Sancti Spiritus."

The extraneous character of the doxology is however betrayed by the quantity of the penultimate of Paraclitus, and by the great variety of such doxologies, almost every church having its own special one. The doxology in the Durham Hymnal is:—

"Sit laus Patri cum Genito, Amborum et Paraclito,
 Proles ut hunc promiserat,
 Nobis modoque tribuat."

In the Roman Brev. of 1570 and 1632 the doxology reads:—

"Deo Patri sit gloria,
 Et Filio, Qui a mortuis
 Surrexit, ac Paraclito,
 In sempiterna (saeculorum) saecula."

But whatever the form was it was, as a rule, merely a general doxology common to all the Pentecostal hymns, as indeed is often indicated by a rubric such as "Sic terminantur Hymni usque ad Vesperas Sabbati sequentis" (Brev. Rom.). In the Arundel MS. 155, only the words "Sit laus Patri," are added; and in the Vesp. D., xii., "Deo Patri sit gloria."

The variations in the six stanzas of the text proper are few and of small importance, viz. in st. iii. ll. 3, 4, some mss. give "promissum" and "ditans," and in st. iv. l. 4, some mss. read "perpetim." In the Roman Brev. of 1632 the variations introduced are:—

- ii. l. 1. Qui diceris Paraclitus.
- iii. l. 2. Altissimi donum Dei.
- vi. l. 2. Digitus Paternae dexteræ.
- vi. l. 3. Teque utriusque Spiritum.

These variations however rest on no MS. authority, but are merely due to the tasteless revision of the Breviary hymns made in 1628–31, under Urban VIII., and are simply somewhat clumsy attempts to improve the rhythm and scansion. That in st. ii. l. 1, is specially to be regretted, as it destroys one of the most characteristic features of the hymn, viz. the way in which it preserves the correct quantity of the penultimate of Paraclitus, contrary to the general practice in Latin.

(β) Additions to the Original Text. In some mss. an additional stanza is given between st. v. and vi. as follows:—

"Da gaudiorum praemia,
 Da gratiarum munera,
 Dissolve litis vincula,
 Astringe pacis foedera."

This is contained e.g. in two mss. in the Bodleian (Laud Misc., 468 f. 4, of the 12th cent., and Liturg. Misc., 370, f. 117, circa 1340), and in some of the early printed books, e.g.

the Basel Brev. of 1493. But it is wanting in the earliest mss. (e.g. it is not in the Durham Hymnal; Vesp. D., xii.; Jul. A., vi.; Liturg. Misc., 320; Palat. 30; C. C. C., 391), and the true ending of the hymn is st. vi., which forms the real doxology, no other being needed.

Another extraneous stanza is sometimes inserted after st. vi., viz.:—

"Dudum sacrata pectora,
 Tua replesti gratia,
 Dimitte nunc peccamina,
 Et da quieta tempora."

This is found in the Durham Hymnal, but it has no business in the text, and really belongs to the "Beata nobis gaudia" (p. 120, i.). In the Sarum Brev. it is attached, along with the doxology, "Sit laus Patri cum Filio," to other Pentecostal hymns.

There is thus no doubt that the hymn should really consist of the 24 lines printed together as above, ending with the stanza "Per Te sciamus, da, Patrem." We may add that in a ms. circa 1100, in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 18302, f. 24), a rubric regarding the "Veni Creator Spiritus" is followed by a hymn in four st., viz.:—

- i. Te nunc Deus piissime.
- ii. Dudum sacrata pectora.
- iii. Hic, Christe, nunc Paraclitus.
- iv. Sit laus Patri cum Filio.

Of these st. ii., iv. are noted above, st. i. is from the "Beata nobis gaudia," and st. iii. is given in the Durham Hymnal as part of the "Jam Christus astra ascenderat" (p. 576, i.).

ii. Authorship and Date. It is curious how very little is known of the authorship of this hymn, which has taken deeper hold of the Western Church than any other mediæval hymn, the Te Deum alone excepted. The real author is as yet unknown, but it has been ascribed (α) to the Emperor Charles the Great (Charlemagne), (β) to St. Ambrose, (γ) to Gregory the Great, and to (δ) Rhabanus Maurus. We may discuss these in this order.

(α) Charlemagne. The best known and most widely accepted opinion is that which ascribes it to the Emperor Charles the Great. Even Dom Gueranger (Institutions Liturgiques, 2nd ed., vol. i. p. 179, Paris, 1878) repeats it without qualification. This is however a legend, and falls to pieces at once when traced to its source. The original authority is Ekkehard v., Monk of St. Gall, in his Vita Sancti Notkeri, written circa 1220. There, in chapter xviii., Ekkehard says:—

"It is told of the blessed man [Notker] that one day when he went through the dormitory he listened, for there was hard by a mill, whose wheel was revolving slowly for lack of water, and, groaning, gave out sounds something like words. And the man of God, hearing this, straightway was in the spirit, and produced that most beautiful hymn, and gave utterance to the honey-sweet melody from the same kind Spirit which possessed him: I mean the Sequence on the Holy Spirit 'Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia' [p. 993, i.]. And when he had completed it he sent it as a present to the Emperor Charles the Great, who was then probably staying at Aachen. And the same Christian Emperor sent back to him by the messenger that with which the same Spirit had inspired him, viz., the hymn 'Veni, Creator Spiritus.'"

Here we have the original story which has spread so widely, and has been so generally accepted. The words in italics above are really found in Ekkehard's autograph ms. at St. Gall (No. 556, p. 342), but are a manifest blunder, for Charles the Great (Charlemagne) died in 814, and Notker was born about 26 years after, circa 840. The Charles to whom the St. Gall tradition really referred was probably Charles the Fat, and such an interchange of courtesies is not at all unlikely to have taken place between Notker and that Emperor. Charles the Fat paid Notker special attention during his visit to St. Gall in 883, and the incident which Ekkehard relates may well have taken place soon after. That the hymn was actually composed by Charles the Fat does not seem probable. If however this tradition has any foundation of fact it implies that the hymn was at that time newly composed, or at least had lately come into the Emperor's hand. This suggests that it was written in the last quarter of the 9th cent., and by a person who was in some way connected with the court of the Emperor of Germany.

(β) St. Ambrose. Like most other important Latin hymns this also has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, e.g. by Gavanti. It appears as his in some early printed books, e.g. in the Breviarium Christianum, Leipzig, 1575, and is included in some of the earlier editions of his works, e.g. Paris, 1614. It is not however claimed for him by the Benedictine editors of his works, nor by Braghi in his Inni sacri e Carmi di Sant' Ambrogio, 1862, and there is really no evidence whatever of his authorship. It is true that it bears traces of his influence. The lines:—

"Accende lumen sensibus, Infunde amorem cordibus," recall the words "Infunde lumen cordibus" of the very ancient hymn "O lux beata Trinitas" (p. 842, ii.), which is probably his work; while ll. 3, 4 of st. iv. are borrowed directly from the "Veni Redemptor gentium" (p. 1211, ii.), which is certainly his. But the mere fact that it borrows two lines from a well-known hymn of his is no evidence whatever that as a whole it is his work. The hymns of St. Ambrose soon became the common property of the Church, and later writers had no scruples about making free use of them in their own compositions. The "Veni Creator" is ascribed to St. Ambrose by no ancient writer, and the ascription to him may be set aside without hesitation.

(γ) Gregory the Great. Mone, i. p. 242 (followed by Koch, i. p. 74), ascribes it to Gregory the Great, on the following grounds:—(1) Its correspondence with his known hymns and his other works. (2) Its classical metre, with occasional rhymes. (3) The correct quantity of the penultimate of Paracletus, as showing a knowledge of Greek. These arguments have a certain value, and Gregory is in himself not an unlikely person to have written the hymn. But had it been the work of a writer of such repute as Gregory in the 6th cent. we might fairly have expected to come across some early notices of it. It is however attributed to him by no early writer, it is wanting in the earliest hymnals which we possess, and is not alluded to by Beede (d. 735) in his "De arte metrica," where many early hymns are mentioned. It is quite precarious to assign it, on purely subjective grounds, and in the absence of any external testimony, to so early and so celebrated a writer as Gregory.

(δ) Rhabanus Maurus, sometime Archbishop of Mainz (b. circa 776, d. 856). Christopher Brower, a learned Jesuit, included the "Veni Creator" in his edition of Rhabanus's Poemata, Mainz, 1617, p. 74. But he was evidently not at all certain that it was really by Rhabanus, and does not print the text in full. He gives no definite information regarding the ms. which he used, and it does not seem to have been of any great antiquity. Some of the hymns in this ms. are certainly not by Rhabanus, and his claim to the rest is very shadowy. The ms. contained 29 hymns, but of these Professor E. L. Dümmler, in his critical edition of the Carmena of Rhabanus (Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, vol. ii., Berlin, 1884), has only seen reason enough to accept two, both of which he gives among the pieces "incertae originis," and he did not find sufficient ground to include the "Veni Creator" even among the poems doubtfully ascribed to Rhabanus. It is indeed true that in Rhabanus's prose work De Universo, Bk. I., chapter iii. (Migne's P.P. Lat. cxi. cols. 23-26) there are some phrases which resemble portions of this hymn; but Mone, i. p. 251, and Abb. Trench, in his Sac. Lat. Poetry (ed. 1864, pp. 175, 185) give quite as close parallels from the writings of St. Augustine and others.

Here we are compelled to leave the question. The evidence is too scanty to draw a positive conclusion. The hymn is clearly not the work of St. Ambrose nor of Charles the Great. Nor is there sufficient evidence to allow us to ascribe it either to Gregory the Great, to Rhabanus Maurus, or to any of the ecclesiastics connected with the court of Charles the Fat. The references to the hymn do not help us much in determining the authorship, as the following facts will show.

The earliest definite allusion to it (apart from the statement of Ekkehard), is that it was used at a Synod at Rheims in 1049 (see C. J. Hefele's Concilien Geschichte, vol. iv. 2nd ed., 1879, p. 729). Daniel, i. p. 213 (ed. 1855, p. 209) indeed says that it had been used at the "Delation of St. Marculus" in 898, and to prove this gives a quotation which he professes to derive from the Annales Ord. S. Benedicti, ed. Mabillon, tom. vi. p. 532. But his date and his reference are equally at fault. The quotation is really from the Acta Sanctorum Ordinis S. Benedicti, ed. D'Achery and Mabillon, Saec. iv. pt. ii. (vol. vi.) p. 523, Paris, 1680, and forms part of the account of the reception of the relics of St. Marculus (Marcol) at Perona (Peronne on the Somme), not in 898, but in 1102. Nor has the hymn yet been found in any mss. earlier than the latter part of the 10th cent. Mone, i. p. 242, indeed speaks of it as being found in mss. earlier than Charles (who d. 814), but the earliest ms. which he used is of the 14th cent., and his statement is probably the result of a mistaken inference from Thomasius. It is true that Thomasius frequently cites Vatican mss. of the 8th cent., and it is also true that he includes the "Veni Creator" in his Hymnarium. But in this case it is not allowable to put two and two together, for Thomasius, ii. 375, does not cite any of these early mss. as giving the text of the "Veni Creator." The closing lines:—

"Te utriusque Spiritum

have been thought to imply that the hymn was written after the Council of Aachen (Aquisgranum or Aix-la-Chapelle) in 809, when the doctrine of the Double Procession was definitely promulgated. The hymn however does not emphasize the doctrine in any way, and similar language was used in the Western Church from a very early period.

iii. Use. In mediaeval times the singing of this hymn was generally marked with special dignity, by the ringing of bells, the use of incense, of lights, of the best vestments, &c. Its use in the Hour Services at Pentecost can be traced back, with tolerable certainty, to the 10th cent.* The earlier mss. for the most part allot it only to Vespers (so Jul. A., vi.; Vesp. D., xii.; the Durham Hymnal; Liturg. Misc., 320), and so late as the 14th cent. Radulf, Dean of Tongres, giving the "Veni Creator" for Vespers, says that at the lesser hours "more Romano" the hymn was never changed (Hittorp, Cologne, 1568, col. 1126). But some time before this date it had certainly been adopted in some churches at Tierce, for a St. Alban's Breviary of the 12th cent. (Brit. Mus. Reg. 2 A. xx.) gives it for this service and not for Vespers; and this was also the Sarum use. Its use at Tierce (in accordance with Acts ii. 15) is said to have originated in the monastery of Cluny, being traced to St. Hugh, Abbot of Cluny (b. 1024, d. 1109) by an anonymous writer cited in the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum, for April 29 (see Annales Ordinis S. Benedicti, vol. v. p. 530). In two Mozarabic service-books of the 11th cent., now in the British Museum, viz. a Breviary (Add. 30848), and an Antiphony (Add. 30850), it is assigned to Lauds. It is also ordered for use at Lauds, as well as Vespers, in a German Breviary, circa 1100, now in the British Museum (Add. 18302); but otherwise its use at Lauds seems to be quite exceptional.

In the Ordination Service its use has not been traced earlier than the 11th cent. It is not found in the Pontifical of Egbert (circa 950, printed by the Surtees Society, vol. xxvii.,

* A clear indication that the hymn was only beginning to be known in the 10th cent. is furnished by G. M. Drevs in his Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 93. He prints the text from a ms. of the 10th cent., but there it does not occur in the regular series of hymns, and had evidently only recently come into use at the Abbey (Benedictine) of Moissac (department of Tarn et Garonne). This ms. seems to present several textual variations peculiar to itself.

1853), nor in numerous ancient services given by Martene and by Morinus; while in some mss. the reference to it is added, by a later hand, in the margin. It is however in at least three Pontificals of the 11th cent., viz. one of Soissons given by Martene (Ordo vii., vol. ii. p. 396); that in the Bodleian Ms. Liturg. Misc. 359; and Samson's Pontifical C. C. C., 146, f. 119, perhaps the earliest instance of its occurrence in a Pontifical. In the Sens Missal of 1529, f. clvii., it is given as part of the priest's preparation for celebrating Mass; and so in the Sarum Missal of 1497 (Burntisland reprint, 1861, ff. col. 577); while in the York and Hereford Missals it is ordered to be sung after the Lavabo (see W. Maskell's Ancient Liturgy, pp. 4, 92, 93). In modern Roman Service-books it is given in the Breviary, for Vespers and Tierce at Pentecost; and in the Pontifical for the Ordination of Priests, Consecration of Bishops, Laying the foundation stone of a Church, the Consecration of a Church, the "Ordo ad Synodum," and various other services.

It may be added that a full commentary on the theological bearings, and ritual uses of this hymn, will be found in the Abbé S. G. Pimont's Hymnes du Breviaire Romain, vol. ii., pt. ii., Paris, 1884, pp. 125-143. [E. C. S. G.]

The "Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentis" has frequently been tr. into German. Through two of these versions it has passed into English as follows:—

i. Komm, Gott Schöpfer, heiliger Geist. This is a full and faithful version by M. Luther, 1st pub. in Eyn Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524. Thence in Wachernagel, iii. p. 14; also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 25, and in the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 172. Tr. as:—

1. Come, Thou Creator God. As an ode of 63 lines by Miss Fry, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 26. From this a cento, in 5 st. of s.m., beginning "O Holy Spirit now," was included in Whittemore's Suppl. to All H. Bks., 1860, and the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863.

2. Creator Spirit, Holy Dove. In full by R. Massie in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 35. Repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, and the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Come God, Creator! Holy Ghost! Thy, &c." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 21 (1847, p. 23). (2) "Creator Spirit! hear our prayer." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 51. (3) "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost! And visit every." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 18. (4) "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost, Visit." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 387, altered in his Exotics, 1876, p. 66. (5) "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost, And visit Thou." In Dr. Bacon's Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 24, partly based on Mr. Massie's tr.

ii. Zu dir, Geist Schöpfer, sehen wir. This is a free version, in 8 st. of 4 l., by J. A. Schlegel, 1st pub. in the 2nd ed., 1772, of his Sammlung geistlicher Gesänge (1st ed. 1766), p. 99, entitled "On the Names and Gifts of the Holy Ghost. The old Ambrosian hymn, 'Veni Creator Spiritus,' newly translated. A Whitsuntide hymn." The form tr. is that in the Berlin G. B., 182c, No. 287, which is considerably altered and reduced to 5 st. The tr. is:—

To Thee, Creator Spirit, now we flee. By J. Salisbury, tr. in 1877, and 1st pub. as No. 246 in the Bapt. Hyl., 1879. [J. M.]

The trs. of the Veni Creator Spiritus direct from the Latin into English have been numerous and important. They include the following:—

1. Come Holy Ghost, eternal God. This tr. in c.m. in the Ordering of Priests in The Book of Common Prayer, was apparently printed in the Ordinal of 1549, and certainly in the 2nd book of Edward 6th, where it is given in 7 st. of 8 l. (Brit. Mus.). As it is too long to reproduce in full, we give the first and last stanzas only:—

(1) "Come holy ghost eternall god Proceeding from above, Bothe frō the father and the sone, the God of peace and loue.
Visite our myndes, and into vs thy heavenly grace inspire,
That in all truethe and Godlinesse, we Maie have true desire.
* * * * *

(7) "Laude and praise be to the father, and to the sonne equall,
And to the holy Spirite also, one God coeternall,
And praiſe we that the onely Sonne, vouchsafe his Spirite to sende,
To al that do professe his name unto the worldes ende."

A tr. which seems to be a variation of this text (but regarded by some as an older tr.) is found in The whole Psalter, translated into English metre, &c., John Daye, London, N.D. (Brit. Mus., Lincoln Cathedral Library, &c.) [Psalters, English, p. 917, § ix.] This is known as Archbishop Parker's Psalter, and was written by him whilst in exile, 1553-1558 (Absolvi Psalterium versum metrico lingua vulgari, Parker's Diary, 1557). The tr. seems to be the preceding rendered into more even feet. It is in 16 st. of 4 l., of which st. i., ii., and xv. and xvi. are as follows:

(1) "Come Holy Ghost: eternall God,
Which doost from God proceede.
The father fyrst: and eke the sonne,
One God as we do reade.

(2) "Oh visite thou: our minds and harts,
Thy heavenly grace inspire:
That we in truth: and godlinesse,
May fet our whole desire."
* * * * *

(15) "Be laude to God: the father hye,
And God his sonne prayfe ye:
Be prayfe to God: the holy spirite,
One God in Trinity.

(16) "Pray we that Christ: the saviour,
Vouchsafe his Spirite to fend:
To all which true: professe his name,
'Till all the world doth ende."

The next form of this tr. is that in "The Ordering of Priests" in The Book of Common Prayer, and given therein in 1662. This is also in 16 st. of 4 l., of which st. i., ii., and xv. and xvi. read as in modern copies of the Prayer Book:—

(1) "Come, Holy Ghost, eternal God,
Proceeding from above,
Both from the Father and the Son,
The God of peace and love;

(2) "Visit our minds, into our hearts
Thy heavenly grace inspire;
That truth and godliness we may Pursue with full desire."
* * * * *

(15) "To God the Father laud and praise,
And to His blessed Son,
And to the Holy Spirit of grace,
Co-equal Three in One.

(16) "And pray we, that our only Lord
Would please His Spirit to send
On all that shall profess His Name,
From hence to the world's end."

From this text two or three centos, all beginning with st. i., have been adopted by a few hymnal compilers.

In Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., 1854 and later eds. this tr. is divided into three parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. vii., "O Holy Ghost, into our minds Send down Thy heavenly light," and Pt. iii. with st. xii., "Of thy strife and of dissension." Pt. ii. is sometimes used as a separate hymn. W. J. Blew reads, "O Holy Ghost, into our souls."

2. Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire. By Bp. John Cosin. This is in his Collection of Private Devotions in the Practice of the Ancient Church, called the Hours of Prayer, &c., 1627. This book was modelled on the Primers which were extensively used during the reigns of Henry VII. and Elizabeth. It contains devotions and a hymn for each of the Canonical Hours, together with other devotions, hymns, and prayers (see Reprint by J. G. & F. Rivington, London, 1838). This tr. is appointed for the "Third Hour," and is given in 18 lines. It was also given in an unaltered form in "The Ordering of Priests" and "The Consecration of Bishops" in The Book of Common Prayer, 1662. This and the C. M. tr. above are the only metrical hymns which have been legally sanctioned in the Church of England by both Church and State. In the hymn books of the last century Bp. Cosin's tr. is rarely found; but in modern collections it is largely used, and in almost every instance in an unaltered form. In the Gospel Magazine for 1774, p. 449, it is given as a "Hymn to the Holy Spirit, modernized for the Office for Ordination." The opening lines are:—

"Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And warm with uncreated fire."

The signature "Minimus" is that of A. M. Toplady. This "modernized" form of the text has never come into use, and was excluded, even by Toplady himself, from his Ps. & Hys., 1776.

3. Creator Spirit, by Whose aid. By J. Dryden. This appeared in his Miscellaneous Poems, pt. iii., 1693, and the Primer of 1706 and 1732, in 7 st. of unequal length, numbering 39 lines in all. It is found in numerous collections, both of the past and the present centuries, but always in an altered and abbreviated form. One of the first to adapt it for congregational purposes was J. Wesley, who included it in his Ps. & Hys., 1741, in an abbreviated form. He was followed by G. Whitefield, 1753, A. M. Toplady, 1776, and others, until the adoption of the hymn became general. The variations which have been introduced into the text are so many and various that it is almost impossible to set them forth in an intelligible manner. The text of given hymnal which may be consulted should be compared with the original in the Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 209. In some American collections it begins "O Source of uncreated light."

4. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator come, And visit all the souls of Thine. By Tate and Brady in the Supplement to the New Version of the Psalms, &c., circa 1700 (3rd ed., 1702). See p. 801, i. This is in L.M. in 28 l. It is given in the Scottish Hyl., 1870, as a tr. by Miss Winkworth, in error. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 50.

5. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, Inspire the [these] souls of Thine. Tate and Brady. This is the C.M. version in the Supplement as above, circa 1700 (3rd ed., 1702). It also appears in J.

Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 91, with alterations in the last stanza only; and again in his Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 50, and in each instance without any indication of its source. Hence it is usually attributed to Chandler, but in error.

6. Holy Spirit, gently come. By W. Hammond, in his Ps., Hys., and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1745, p. 205, in 5 st. of 8 l. This was given in an unaltered form in the 1864 ed. of Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., No. 234.

7. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, Come, visit Thou each willing breast. By Bp. R. Mant in his Ancient Hys., 1837, p. 62, in 7 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1871, p. 110). Its use is limited.

8. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come. The 2nd stanza of this tr. in the Irvingite Hys. for the Churches, 1864 and 1871, given as "Tr. by C., 1845," begins: "Thou, Who art named the Paraclete, The heavenly gift, &c." We have not found it elsewhere.

9. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come! The darkness of our minds illumine. By F. W. Faber, in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hymns, 1862. In the New Mitre Hymnal, 1875, it is given as "O come, Creator Spirit, come," from the 1871 ed. of Faber's Hymns, No. 40, and abridged to 5 st. of 4 l.

10. Come, O Creator Spirit blest! And in our souls take up Thy rest. By E. Caswall in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 103, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in his Hymns, 1873, p. 58. It is given in several modern hymnals.

11. Come, O Creator Spirit! Visit this [these] soul of Thine. By E. Caswall. This tr. of a slightly different text from the above, which is from the Rom. Brev., also appeared in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 291, and in his Hymns, 1873, p. 133.

12. Creator, Spirit, Lord of grace. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, &c., 1850, p. 79, in 7 st. of 4 l. with ll. 1, 2, of st. v. from Dryden. This is found, slightly altered, in a few modern hymnals. It is also in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, p. 170.

13. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, And visit every faithful breast. By Jane E. Leeson in her Paraphrases & Hys., 1853, p. 81, in two parts. Pt. ii. beginning: "Come, Holy Ghost, with sacred fire."

14. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, Down from Thy heavenly throne. This is given in the Irvingite Hys. for the Churches, 1864 and 1876, as a "Tr. by J. E. L., 1852," i.e. Jane E. Leeson, as above, No. 13.

15. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, And in our souls serenely rest. In the Catholic Psalmist, 1858, p. 65, and probably by T. J. Potter.

16. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, Vouchsafe within our souls to rest. This is given in H. A. & M., 1861, and again in 1875. In the index to the latter edition it is said to be by the "Rev. E. Caswall and the Compilers." The Compilers, however, were indebted to Bp. Mant and R. Campbell for one fourth of their cento.

17. Come, Holy Spirit, come, Inspire the souls of Thine. This tr. was given anonymously in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, No. 69. It is apparently Caswall's tr. in 7 st. (No. 11 above) rewritten in S.M. It is the only S.M. tr. of the Veni Creator with which we are acquainted. It was repeated in the Parish H. Bk., 1875.

18. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, From Thy bright heav'nly throne. This appeared anonymously in the Hys. for the Year, 1867, and several later Roman Catholic collections.

We have also seen two or three additional references to American trs., but have been unable to verify them.

The great similarity which is found in the majority of these trs. suggests that many of the later translators were very much indebted to their predecessors for the terseness and vigour of their renderings. This suggestiveness is most apparent in the more striking passages of the hymn. [J. J.]

Veni, jam veni, benignissime. [Whit-suntide.] Mone. No. 188, gives this, in 26 lines, from a 12th cent. ms. at Mainz. It is almost identical with a portion of the Oratio ziv. of St. Anselm of Canterbury, which is also found as No. ix. in the Mediaeval compilation known as the Meditationes of St.

Augustine (Venice, 1553, f. 11). The passage in St. Anselm is :—

"Veni jam, veni, benignissime dolentis animae consolator in opportunitatibus, et in tribulationibus adjutor. Veni, mundator scelerum, curator vulnerum. Veni, fortitudo fragilium, releuator labentium; veni, humilium doctor, superborum destructor. Veni, orphanorum pius pater, viduarum dulcis iudex. Veni, spes pauperum, refocillator deficientium. Veni, navigantium sidus, naufragantium portus. Veni, omnium videntium singulare decus, morientium unica salus. Veni Sanctissime Spiritus, veni et miserere mei," &c.

'It is tr. as :—

1. Come Thou, O come, Sweetest and Kindest. By G. Moultrie, in his Hys. and Lyrics, 1867, p. 143; the People's H., 1867, No. 157; and the Hymnary, 1872.
2. Come, yea and quickly come. By S. W. Duffield, in his Latin Hymn Writers, &c., 1889. [J. M.]

Veni Redemptor gentium [omnium]. St. Ambrose. [Christmas.] This is one of the twelve hymns assigned to St. Ambrose by the Benedictine editors. It is plainly referred to as the work of St. Ambrose by St. Augustine (Sermo 372), and is definitely cited as his by Pope Celestine, at a Council held at Rome, 430; by Faustus, who in 455 became Bp. of Rhegium (Riez in France), in his Epistola ad Gratianum diaconum; by M. A. Cassiodorus (d. 575), in his commentary on the Psalms; and by other early writers. The text in 7 st. is in Daniel, i. No. 10, with further notes at iv. pp. 4, 353 (quoting at length the references by St. Augustine, Pope Celestine, Faustus and Cassiodorus, and citing it as in a 9th cent. ms. at Bern); in Mone, No. 30, and others. Sometimes a stanza is prefixed, as follows :—

"Intende qui regis Israel,
Super cherubin qui sedes,
Appare Ephraem, coram excita
Potentiam tuam, et veni."

Celestine and Cassiodorus however cite the hymn as beginning "Veni Redemptor gentium"; and this stanza does not appear to be found in any mss. earlier than the 14th cent., and has obtained no currency save in the Cistercian Breviaries. In any case these lines are not by St. Ambrose, for they are simply the Vulgate of Ps. lxxx., which begins: "Qui sedes super cherubim, manifestare velut ovem, Joseph. Qui sedes super cherubim, manifestare coram Ephraim, Benjamin et Manasse excita potentiam tuam, et veni, ut salvos facias nos."

The hymn is found in the Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Mozarabic of 1502, and other Breviaries; generally assigned to Christmas Eve or Christmas Day. But it is not in the Roman Breviary, and can hardly be said to be in use at the present day, a somewhat unfortunate ecclesiastical prudery having set aside this noble composition. It must however be confessed that a strictly literal English version is hardly desirable for modern congregational use. The imagery is partly borrowed from Ps. xix. [W. A. S.]

Mone, No. 30, gives the "Veni Redemptor" text from a Reichenau ms. of the 9th cent., a Trier of the 8th or 9th, a Munich of the 10th cent., &c. (prefixing the st. "Intende qui regis" from mss. of the 14th cent. at Karlsruhe and Lienthal). Thomasius, ii. p. 371, cites it as in two Vatican mss. of the 8th cent. It is in five mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum, viz. in three of the early English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 32 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 33, and Harl. 2961, f. 226), and two of the early Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 24; Add. 30851, f. 120). Also in the Bern mss., No. 455, of the 10th cent., and in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p.

239). In the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 43, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 13). The text is also in Büssler, No. 26; Wackernagel, i., No. 12; Hymn. Sarisb., 1851, p. 71; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 87; Migne's PP. Lat. lxxxvi., col. 114; G. M. Dreves's Hym. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms.; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and others.

This hymn has been rendered through the German into English, as follows:—

1. Nun komm der Heidenheiland. A full and faithful tr. by M. Luther, 1st pub. in Eyn Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 12, in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 4, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 17. Tr. as:—

Come, Thou Saviour of our race. Omitting st. iv., by W. M. Reynolds, as No. 776 in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850. Repeated omitting the tr. of st. viii. in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Now the Saviour comes indeed," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 1. (2) "Saviour of the Nations, come," as No. 340 in pt. ii., 1743, of the Moravian H. Bk. (3) "Rejoice, our nature Christ assumes," by J. Gambold (?), as No. 1001 in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1896, No. 35). (4) "Now the Saviour of the heathen," by Miss Fry, 1845, p. 1. (5) "Now comes the world's Redeemer," by J. Anderson, 1846, p. 1 (1847, p. 28). (6) "The time draws nigh, swift fly the years," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 25. (7) "Saviour of the heathen, known," by R. Massie, 1854, p. 1, repeated by Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 16. (8) "Come, Saviour of nations wild," by Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Mag., 1867, p. 153, and his Exotics, 1876, p. 39.

ii. Komm Heidenheiland, Lösegeld (sometimes altered to "Komm Himmelsfürst, komm Wunderheld"). See Campanus, J., p. 201, ii. [J. M.]

The trs. direct from the Latin into English are:—

1. Come, Thou Redeemer of the earth, Come testify. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 12. Included in the Hymnary, 1872, as "Hail, blest Redeemer of the earth," and others. In the Office H. Bk., 1889, it begins, "Come, blest Redeemer of the earth."

2. Redeemer of the nations, come, Pure offspring, &c. By Elizabeth Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 97. The tr. in Mercer's Church Psalter & H. Bk., Oxford ed. 1864, No. 73, is by W. Mercer, based upon this tr. by Mrs. Charles. The first two lines and one or two others are taken verbatim.

3. Redeemer of the nations come, Appear from out, &c. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "A. L. P."

4. O come, Redeemer of mankind, appear. By D. T. Morgan. This tr. was given in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875, and again in the translator's Hys. and Other Poetry of the Latin Ch., 1880.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come, Redeemer of the nations. Bp. J. Williams, 1845.

2. Come, Saviour of the earth. I. Williams, in his Thoughts in Past Years, 2nd ed., 1848.

3. Come, blest Redeemer of the earth. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

4. Come, Thou Redeemer of the earth, The Virgin's, &c. W. J. Blew, 1862-55.

5. Redeemer of the nations, come, Appear, Thou Son, &c. J. D. Chambers, 1852 and 1857.

6. Come, high Redeemer, Spotless one. J. W. Hewett, 1859.

7. Come, Saviour, come, to all the earth. H. Kynaston, 1862.

8. O Thou Redeemer of our race. Ray Palmer, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

9. Redeemer of the world, do Thou draw near. D. T. Morgan, 1871.

10. Redeemer of the nations, come, Display Thy, &c. H. M. Macgill, 1876.

11. Redeemer of the nations, come, Show them a Virgin, &c. R. Thornton, in the S. P. C. K. Father's for English Readers, St. Ambrose, 1879.

The "Intende qui regis Israel" form of the text has also been tr. by W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, as "Shepherd of Israel, Hear Thou our hymn." [J. J.]

Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte coelitus. Innocent III. (?). [Whitsuntide.]

In annotating this beautiful Sequence we shall deal i. with its Merits, ii. with the MS. in which it is contained, iii. with its Authorship, and iv. with the Variations in its Use.

i. Merits. The opinion of critics is unanimous in regarding this Sequence as one of the masterpieces of Latin sacred poetry. We need only quote two notices of it. Clichtonæus (Elucidatorium, Paris, 1516, f. 171), says of it:—

"Nor indeed, in my opinion, can this piece be sufficiently praised; for it is above all praise, whether by reason of its wonderful sweetness along with a most clear and flowing style, or by reason of its agreeable brevity along with wealth and profusion of ideas, especially as almost every line expresses one idea, or finally by reason of the elegant grace of its structure, in which things contrasted are set over against each other, and most aptly linked together. And I well believe that the author (whoever he was), when he composed this piece, had his soul transfused by a certain heavenly sweetness, by which, the Holy Spirit being its author, he uttered so much sweetness in so few words."

And Archbishop Trench, in his Sac. Lat. Poetry (ed. 1864, p. 195) speaks of it as:—

"The loveliest . . . of all the hymns in the whole circle of Latin sacred poetry," adding that it "could only have been composed by one who had been acquainted with many sorrows, and also with many consolations."

In Mediaeval times it was often called the Golden Sequence. It is not indeed distinguished by great and absolute originality of idea, for in its leading thoughts it was clearly influenced by earlier pieces, such as the "Sancti Spiritus adsit" (p. 993, i.), the "Qui procedis" (p. 945, i.), the "O ignis Spiritus Paracliti" (p. 837, ii.), the "Veni Creator" (p. 1206, ii.), and the "Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple" (pp. 631, ii., and 1215, ii.). But it combines a stately grace, a perfect rhythmic melody, and a faculty of saying just the right thing in just the fitting words, in such a measure as to disarm criticism, and at once to defy comparison with any other hymn in any other language, and to make it almost impossible to present an adequate translation. It is in five stanzas, each consisting of six lines of seven-syllable trochaic verse (trochaic dimeter catalectic). The first stanza may be quoted to show its structure:—

Veni Sancte Spiritus,
Et emitte coelitus,
Lucis tuæ radium.
Veni, Pater pauperum,
Veni, dator munerum,
Veni, lumen cordium."

This verse form has not yet been traced earlier than about 1150; and is never found in the earlier, or Notkerian, type of Sequence, but is always associated with the Sequences of the second period (See e.g. p. 647, ii., and K.

Bartsch's Lat. Sequenzen, 1868, pp. 213, 235). Every third line, we may add, ends in ium, and rhymes with every other third line throughout the Sequence. In the hands of any but a first-rate writer such a verse-scheme would certainly have produced a sense of coldness and artificiality, but here "art conceals art," and the glow of devotion so transfuses and transfigures all that one is content to admire the beauty and hardly thinks of the skill.

ii. MSS. The mss. also show that this Sequence does not date from the earliest period of Sequence-writing. It is indeed found in four mss. at St. Gall, which, for the most part, date from the 11th cent. (Nos. 376, p. 434; 378, p. 232; 380, p. 28; 382, p. 250); but Herr Idtensohn, the librarian, having kindly examined these mss., informs me that in no case is this Sequence in a hand earlier than the 13th cent. He adds that it is "everywhere a piece inserted by another, later, hand than that of the ms. volume in general." This agrees with what we have otherwise observed. Up to the present time this sequence has not been found in any ms. earlier than 1200.

For example, it is not in any of the early mss. indexed under the article Sequences (p. 1042), nor is it included in any of the 16 Troparies of Limoges, written prior to 1200, the sequences of which are printed by G. M. Dreyes, in his Prosarium Lemovicense, 1889. It is found in two mss. of the 13th cent., now in the Brit. Mus., one written in Germany about the beginning of the century (Add. 24680, f. 62), the other written in France about the end of the century (Add. 23935, f. 436b). It is also in two early 14th cent. Paris Missals, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 16905, f. 181b; Harl. 2891, f. 349b); in Hereford Missal, circa 1390, and York Missal, circa 1390, both now in the Bodleian, &c. It is not in the fine Sarum Missal, of circa 1370, now in the Bodleian (Barlow 5); but it is in the London ed. of 1498, f. 241. In the Lincoln Missal of circa 1400, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 11414, f. 303b) it is not found in the offices for Whitsuntide, but is in an appendix of Sequences, the use of which was permitted, but not of obligation ("ad placitum"). Also in an early ms. in the University Library at Cambridge (Ll. i. 10), but in a section of that ms., which was written about the beginning of the 15th cent. The printed text is given in Mone, No. 186, from the St. Gall ms., No. 378, and later sources; Daniel, ii. pp. 35, 384, iii. p. 287, v. p. 69, from a Rheinau ms. of the 13th cent., &c.; Wackernagel, i., No. 160; Bässler, No. 80; Kehevin, No. 125; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., N. Y., 1875, p. 92, &c. In regard to the statement of Mr. Duffield (see below) that it is contained in the oldest Reichenau and Einsiedeln mss. we may remark that Mone does not seem to have found it in any of the Reichenau mss. now at Karlsruhe, and that the earliest Einsiedeln ms. which Mone (1868, p. 52), who was librarian there, cites as containing it, is one of the 15th cent.

iii. Authorship. Here critics are very far from being at one. The French tradition as a rule has not attempted to affix any author's name to the sequence, and so e.g. M. Leon Gautier, in his Les Tropes, 1886, pp. 7, 130, and his Poésie Religieuse, 1887, pp. 17, 18, 46, speaks of it as an anonymous sequence of the second period, written not earlier than the beginning of the 13th cent. It has, however, by others been ascribed to a variety of authors, e.g. (1) to Robert II. of France, (2) to Hermannus Contractus, (3) to Archbishop Stephen Langton, and (4) to Pope Innocent III.

(1) Robert II. of France. During the last fifty years the ascription to King Robert has been the usual one. It rests however on no foundation whatever save the statement of Durandus in his Rationale, Bk. iv., in the section "De prosa seu sequentia" (see p. 967, ii.). That section contains less than a dozen lines, but in these succeeds in conveying a surprising amount of dubious information. Thus to Robert it ascribes not only the "Veni Sancte Spiritus," but also the "Chorus novae Hierusalem" (p. 224, i.), which is much more likely to be by Fulbert of Chartres. Then by a strange perversity it adjudges the "Salve regina" from Hermannus Contractus, and in compensation ascribes to him the "Sancti Spiritus adsit," which is certainly not his. As will be seen by referring to p. 967, ii., Durandus is the only ancient authority who ascribes the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" to King Robert. Neither of the two ancient chronicles cited there do so, nor does the Chronicon Tironense (to 1226, see Robert II. in Various); and while William of Malmesbury (d. circa 1142) ascribes to Robert the "Sancti Spiritus adsit," he does not mention the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" (ed. Bp. Stubbs in the Rolls Series, 1887, p. 196). And, as noted above, the verse-form is much later than Robert's time. It is possible that Durandus, when he said that Robert composed "sequentiam illam Veni Sancte Spiritus," really referred to the "Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple" (q.v.). Whether or not there can be no doubt that the ascription of the "Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte coelitus" to Robert is without any sufficient reason.

(2) Hermannus Contractus (b. 1013, d. 1054). Equally little, or even less, reason exists for ascribing this sequence to Hermannus Contractus. Cardinal Bona, in his Rerum Liturgicarum, Rome, 1671, p. 336, says that it "has been by some attributed to Hermannus Contractus." This attribution has recently been warmly espoused by S. W. Duffield, in the New Englander, vol. xlv, 1886, pp. 613-632, and in his Lat. Hys. 1889, pp. 149-168. Mr. Duffield took great pains to make out a good case, but he altogether fails to produce anything that can be called proof in support of his assertions and conjectures. The sequence is ascribed to Hermannus Contractus by no ancient writer, nor by Anselm Schubiger (Sängerschule St. Gallens, 1858), who has in recent times devoted most attention to him. It is moreover entirely different in style from any of the pieces which have with some show of reason been ascribed to him (see K. Bartsch's Lat. Sequenzen, 1868, pp. 61, 90, 106; and also the note on "Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple"); and these are all composed in the verse-form of the first period of sequence-writing, while, as stated above, this sequence is in the verse-form of the second period.

(3) Stephen Langton (consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury by Innocent III. on June 17, 1207; performed his first episcopal act in England at Winchester on July 20, 1213; d. July 9, 1228). The ascription to Langton is found in a commentary on the Clavis de Hominibus of Melito of Sardis (d. circa 170), pub. by Cardinal J. B. Pitra in his Spicilegium Solesmense, vol. iii., 1855, p. 130, where it is said, "Nevertheless let it suffice to adduce as testimony, what Magister Stephanus de Lange-turn, a man venerable in life and doctrine, by the grace of God Archbishop of Canterbury, says in the praise of the Holy Spirit, in that excellent sequence which he composed concerning the Holy Spirit, thus" (then are quoted lines 7-12, 19-24, beginning "Consolator optime"). Pitra regards this commentary as the work of an English Cistercian who flourished about 1210, and says that this statement "of a contemporary and a fellow-countryman," who was clearly a careful writer, and skilled in literary matters, ought to carry great weight. It is to the present writer certainly worth recording, but hardly conclusive in the absence of further evidence.

(4) Pope Innocent III. The ascription to Innocent III., is found in chapter xviii. of the Vita sancti Notkeri, by Ekkehard v., of St. Gall, as follows:—"There may fitly be added here a conversation which, in our times, took place with the Roman See ('sedem Romanam') concerning the blessed man [Notker]. The venerable Abbot of St. Gall, Ulrich, of pious memory, the sixth of this name [Ulrich v. d. 1199, and Ulrich vi. d. 1219], came to Rome to Pope Innocent III., having been sent on an embassy by King Frederick the Second, afterwards Emperor [crowned as King at Mainz, Dec. 9, 1212; crowned as Emperor at Aachen on July 25, 1215]. After they had talked together of many things, and conferred in turn on various matters, it happened that Mass, concerning the Holy Spirit, with the Sequence "Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia," was celebrated before the Pope (Apostolicum), the abbot also being present. That Pope himself had also composed a Sequence on the Holy Spirit, viz.: Veni Sancte Spiritus. When the Mass and the prayers were over, they met again for conversation, and among other things the Pope asked the abbot, saying 'Who was your Notker, and in what way do you keep his anniversary?' For there were at Rome certain things written of him in the books of Sequences, which the Pope himself had read. The abbot replied that he was a simple monk... though certainly learned and holy. To whom the Pope rejoined, 'Do you not keep his festival, &c.?' [Notker was not however beatified till 1513. See p.

812, i.] This passage, with the words in italics, is contained in Ekkehard's autograph copy, written about 1220, and now at St. Gall (MS. No. 556, p. 342). From other sources we know that Ulrich vi. was sent to Rome by the Emperor Frederick to attend the Lateran Council (1215), and the conversation recorded above probably took place either then or at Whitsuntide, 1216, for Innocent III. d. July 16, 1216 (see the Mittheilungen zur vaterländischen Geschichte, St. Gall, vols. xi. p. 130, and xvii. (1879), p. 114). Doubt has been cast on Ekkehard's statement on the ground that he blundered in ascribing the "Veni Creator" to Charlemagne. But in the present case it must be remembered that he was a monk at St. Gall at the time of which he speaks, and there is every reason to believe that he heard the story from the lips of Ulrich himself on his return from Rome. The facts above stated concerning the St. Gall mss. afford a strong presumption that the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" was unknown at St. Gall till Ulrich brought it back with him from Rome, and that it was at his instigation that it was inserted in the early sequentiaries at St. Gall. And finally Innocent III. was undoubtedly a man of great ability, and much more competent to have written such a poem than any of the others to whom it has been ascribed (see also pp. 1081-1082).

The whole evidence as to authorship may be summed up thus. The Sequence is clearly not earlier than about the beginning of the 13th cent. It is certainly neither by Robert II. nor by Hermannus Contractus. The most probable author is Innocent III.

iv. Use. As already stated the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" is not found in any of the very early Missals or Sequentiaries. When it began to come into use it did not at once displace the older Whitsuntide sequence, i.e. the "Sancti Spiritus adsit," for that continued, as a rule, to be used on Whitsunday up till the revision of the Roman Missal in 1568-70. Consequently the "Veni Sancte," though occasionally used on Whitsunday (as in the Breslau Missal of 1483), was almost universally appointed for use on one or more of the immediately succeeding week days.

So e.g. the Langres Missal, circa 1491, assigns it to the Monday; the Angers of 1489 to Tuesday; the Münster of 1489 to Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday; the Liege circa 1485 to Tuesday and Saturday; the Rouen of 1499 to Wednesday; the Augsburg of 1489 to Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday; the Chalons sur Marne of 1489, and the Hereford of 1502 to Thursday; and the Paris of 1481 to Saturday. In other Missals it is given only in the Votive Mass of the Holy Spirit, e.g. in the Magdeburg of 1480, the Brizen of 1493, the Sarum of 1498, &c. The Langres, circa 1491, gives it also in a Mass in time of pestilence. Martene (de antiqua ecclesiæ disciplina) says that in some places such as Limoges and Chalons sur Saône, it was sung as a carol in the Cathedral close after Vespers or Compline on Ascension Day.

Finally it had the honour of being chosen as one of the four (see p. 1042, i.) sequences which were alone retained in the Roman Missal of 1570, and is there appointed for use on Whitsunday and also throughout the week, the text happily being left unaltered both at that time and at the subsequent revision under Urban VIII. (1634). We may add that the text, with a full historical and theological commentary, is given in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. ii., 1886, pp. 61-76.

The Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et, has frequently been tr. into German. Through two of these versions it has passed into English as follows:—

i. Heiliger Geist, du Tröster mein. This is a full and good tr. by Martin Moller, in his Meditationes sanctorum patrum, Görlitz, 1584, where it is entitled "A very beautiful prayer to God the Holy Ghost;" and thence in Wackernagel, v.

p. 55. Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1648, Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714 (omitting st. iv.; so in the Unw. L. S., 1851, No. 171), and others. Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, No. 210, follows Freylinghausen, and supplies a new tr. (by himself?) of st. iv. Tr. as:—

1. Holy Ghost! my Comforter. This is a full and very good tr. from Bunsen by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 2nd ed., 1856, p. 103, and her C. B. for England, 1863 (with st. v. rewritten). Included in full in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875; and, abridged, in Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, &c. In T. W. Chignell's Exeter Coll., 1863, it begins "God, our Light and Comforter!" and in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and some others, "Holy Ghost! the Comforter."

2. Holy Comforter Divine. By Miss Borthwick, omitting st. ii., iv., vi., ix., as No. 97 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "O Holy Ghost! Thou fire Divine." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 103.

ii. Komm, o heil'ger Geist, und wehe. By Cardinal Melchior von Diepenbrock [b. Jan. 6, 1798, at Bochold in Westphalia; became Prince Bishop of Breslau in 1845, and Cardinal in 1850; d. Jan. 20, 1853], in his Gesammelte Predigten, Regensburg, 1841, p. 109. Tr. as "Come, O Holy Ghost, and breathe." By J. Kelly, in his Hys. of the Present Century from the German, 1885, p. 69. [J. M.]

The Veni Sancte Spiritus Et has also been tr. direct from the Latin into English as follows:—

1. Come, Holy Spirit, send down those beams Which gently flow in silent streams. By J. Austin, in his Devotions in the Antient Way of Offices, &c., 1668, p. 410. It is given in several modern Roman Catholic hymnals, including Hys. for the Year, 1867, the Parochial H. Bk., 1880, and others. In these collections it begins "Come, Holy Ghost, send down those beams, Which sweetly flow in silent streams," as in The Evening Office of 1748. It is a most spirited rendering, and is worthy of wider adoption.

2. Holy Spirit, from on high, Come, and from the opening sky. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 105. It was repeated in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and others.

3. Come, O promised Comforter. By A. T. Russell, in the Dalston German Hospital H. Bk., 1848, and his Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 126, in 3 st. of 6 l. In Kennedy, 1863, st. i. is given as "Shed, O promised Comforter" (No. 1034). In the Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, the full text is given in an unaltered form.

4. Holy Spirit, Lord of Light. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 234, and his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 123. It is found in several hymn-books in its full and unaltered form, and also altered and abridged as:—

(1) Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come. This arrangement was given in the trial ed. of H. A. & M., 1859, and again in the 1st ed., 1861. The numerous alterations therein are added to in the revised ed. of 1875. The text of the Sarum Hyl., 1868, is the 1861 H. A. & M. text altered, with a return in some instances to the original tr.

(2) Holy Spirit, Lord of Life. This, in the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875, is also an altered form of Caswall's tr.

(3) Holy Spirit, come in might. This is given in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, with the omission of Caswall's st. iii., iv., to the great injury of the hymn. There are also several uncalled for alterations.

(4) Come, Thou Spirit of all light. This, in Thring's

Coll., 1882, is partly (st. i., ii., iii., l. 6) a recast of Caswall's tr. by Prebendary Thring, but would have been better in Caswall's own words.

In its various forms Caswall's tr. is the most widely used of the numerous renderings of the Veni Sancte Spiritus.

5. Come, Holy Spirit, from the height. By F. W. Faber, in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, and his Hymns, 1862. It is given in a few Roman Catholic hymnals for Missions and Schools.

6. Come, O Spirit, Lord of grace. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 80, in 7 st. of 3 l. This is in one or two hymnals only. In Orby Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, it is expanded into 10 st., the additional stanzas ii., iv., and vi. being by J. C. Earle.

7. Holy Spirit, from on high, On our deep obscurity. By G. Rorison in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 95, in 5 st. of 6 l.

8. Come, Thou Holy Paraclete. By J. M. Neale, in the Hyl. Noted, 2nd ed., 1854, in 10 st. of 3 l. This tr. has passed into a large number of hymnals, and ranks next in popularity to that by E. Caswall noted above.

9. Come, Holy Ghost! in love, Shed on us from above. By Ray Palmer. First pub. in The Sabbath H. Bk., Andover, 1858, No. 451, in 5 st. of 7 l. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America, including Allon's Cong. Psalmist Hyl., 1886; Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1875, in 4 st.; Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.

10. Holy Spirit, come, we pray. By W. Mercer, in the 1864 ed. of his Church Ps. and H. Bk., No. 222, in 10 st. of 3 l.

11. Come, Thou Holy Spirit, nigh; Leave Thy blissful throne on high. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868, in 5 st. of 6 l.

12. Holy Spirit, God of light! Come, and on our inner sight. By H. M. Macgill, in The Juvenile Miss. Magazine of the United Presb. Ch., Jan., 1868; the United Presb. Hyl., 1876; and his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

13. Holy Spirit, Fire divine. By F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Bk., Boston, 1868, in 5 st. of 6 l.

14. Come, Holy Spirit, from above, And from the realms of light and love. By A. P. Stanley, in Macmillan's Magazine, June, 1873, and the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, in 5 st. of 6 l.

15. Holy Spirit, come and shine Sweetly in this heart of mine. By S. W. Duffield, contributed to Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884. Another rendering by the same translator is given in his Latin Hymn-Writers, &c., N. Y., 1889, as "Come, Holy Spirit, And send forth the heavenly, &c."

16. Holy Spirit, on us rest. This in T. Darlington's Hys. for the Ch. of England, revised ed., 1889, is a cento from Copeland and Caswall.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come unto us holy Goste, Send us frō the heavly coste. Primer (Antwerp), 1599 and 1615.

2. Shine heav'nly Dove, descend, and dwell. Primer (London?), 1706.

3. Come, Holy Ghost, and send forth the Beams. Prose tr. in the Evening Office, 1760.

4. Come, O Holy Spirit, down, Send from heaven, &c. A. D. Wackerbath, 1843.

5. Come, Holy Ghost, to us send down, Like rays of light, &c. J. R. Beste, 1849.

6. Come, Holy Spirit, from above, In fulness of the Father's love. Jane E. Leeson, 1853.

7. What is impure, rectify. By W. Graham, A partial tr. in his The Jordan and the Rhine, 1854.

8. Come, O Holy Ghost! inspire Hallowed thought and pure desire. J. D. Chambers, 1854 and 1857.

9. Holy Spirit, come, we pray, Come from heaven and shed the ray. Elizabeth Charles, 1858.

10. Come, O Spirit! Fount of grace. E. A. Washburn. Written in 1860, and pub. in his Voices of a Busy Life, 1893. Also in Schaff's History of the Ch. Church, 1886.

11. Come, O Holy Spirit, come; Earthward from, &c. P. S. Worsley, in his Poems and Translations, 1863.

12. Dwelling high in endless day. F. Troppe, 1865.

13. Holy Spirit from above, Shine upon us, &c. E. C. Benedict, in his Hyl. of Hildebert N. Y., 1867.

14. Come, O Holy Ghost, inspire Hallowed thought. C. B. Pearson, 1868.

15. Come, Holy Spirit, nigh, And from the heaven on high. D. T. Morgan, 1871 and 1880.

16. O Holy Spirit! deign to come. J. Wallace, 1874.

17. Come, Holy Spirit, come, Down from Thy radiant home. In W. Cowan's Poems, Chiefly Sacred, 1879.

18. Holy Spirit, come and shine On our souls with beams divine. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

Although these trs. do not equal those of the Veni Creator Spiritus in number, yet they indicate a long and profound interest in this magnificent hymn. [J. J.]

Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple. [Whitsuntide]. The text of this antiphon is printed at p. 631, ii. It is found in a ms. of the 11th cent., now in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 2961, f. 102), appointed for use at Vespers on the Vigil of Pentecost, and reading "in unitatem." Also in another Brit. Mus. ms. of circa 1100 (Add. 18302, f. 14, and f. 25). In many mss. only the first part ("Veni . . . accende") is given, as in a ms. of the 11th cent., now in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 4951, f. 246), and this form is found in the Sarum Missal of 1498, appointed for the Tuesday and Saturday after Whitsunday, and in the present Roman Missal for Whitsunday and also throughout that week. When Durandus and the earlier writers on Hermannus Contractus ascribed the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" respectively to Robert II. and to Hermannus Contractus, it is not unlikely that they really meant to refer to this antiphon and not to the "Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte"; and the Add. 18302, which was apparently written in Swabia, is also one of the earliest sources of the "Salve regina" (p. 991, ii.) which is most probably by Hermannus Contractus. But there is not sufficient evidence to allow us to assign the antiphon definitely to either of these authors. This antiphon has passed into English through the German (see p. 631, ii.), and also directly. Among the versions directly from the Latin may be mentioned:—

1. Come, O Holy Spirit! fulfil the hearts of Thy faithful ones. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 180.

2. Come, Holy Ghost, all the hearts of Thy faithful. In the Roman Hyl., ed. J. B. Young, N. Y., 1884, p. 41. See also the Crown of Jesus, 1862, p. 4, and the Altar Hyl., 1884, p. 103. [J. M.]

Veni, superne Spiritus: Purgata Christi sanguine. C. Coffin. [Whitsuntide]. Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736 and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri the same year, p. 55. In the Paris and later French Brevs. it is the hymn for the 1st Vespers of Whitsunday. Text in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Come, Heavenly Spirit, come. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, Ember, 9, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

2. Come, O Spirit, from on high. By C. S. Calverley, in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come, Spirit from above. I. Williams, in the British Mag., May, 1834; and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839.
2. Come, Holy Ghost, Thou Source of good. J. Chandler, 1837.
3. Descend, Celestial Spirit blest. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
4. Spirit Superne, come down again. "J. M. H." in Lyra Messianica, 1864. [J. J.]

Veni, veni, Rex gloriæ. [Advent.]

Mr. Crippen says he tr. this "from a ms. of the 15th century (with music) at Karlsruhe." This text is in Mone, No. 35. Mr. Crippen's tr. appeared in his Ancient Hys. and Poems, &c., 1868, in 23 st. of 4 l. as "O come, O come, Thou glorious King." In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, st. xii., xiii., xvii., xviii., and xix., as given ■ "Give us, O Fount of Purity." These stanzas form a most acceptable hymn on Desiring Holiness. Also tr. by Dr. H. Bonar as "Come, O come, Thou King of glory," 1866. [J. J.]

Venit e coelo Mediator alto. [Passion-tide.] This is the hymn at Lauds in the office of the Prayer of our Lord Jesus Christ on the Mount of Olives. See a note on this office under Aspice ut Verbum Patris (p. 87, ii.). This office appears to be of very recent date, viz. since 1830. It is found in the eds. of the Roman Breviary, pub. at Lyons, 1852, and Tournay, 1879, but not among the offices for universal use. Tr. as:—

1. Daughter of Sion, cease thy bitter tears. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 61, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 34. It passed, with slight alterations, into the Hymnary, 1872, and others.
2. Sion's daughter, weep no more. By Sir H. W. Baker, in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and the ed. of 1861. It was revised for the ed. of 1875. Also in Kennedy, 1863, &c.
3. Come from the heavenly thrones above. In the 1860 ed. of the Hy. Noted, No. 152.

Another tr. is:—

From high heaven, the Mediator. J. Wallace, 1874. [W. A. S.]

Verborgne Gottesliebe du. G. Tersteegen. [The Love of God.] 1st pub. in his Geistliches Blumengärtlein, 1729, Bk. iii., No. 26, in 10 st. of 7 l., entitled, "The longing of the soul quietly to maintain the secret drawings of the Love of God." Although a fine hymn and much used in English, its German use has been almost confined to the early Moravian collections. Included in full in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammlung geist- und lieblicher Lieder, and omitting st. iv., v., as No. 542, in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735; but not repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1778, or the Kleine Brüder G. B., 1870. Tr. as:—

1. Thou hidden love of God, whose height. A spirited tr. by J. Wesley, omitting st. iv., v. [trs. of these sts. by S. Jackson were incorporated when he reprinted Wesley's tr. in his Life of Tersteegen, 1832 (1837, p. 409)], in Ps. & Hys., 1738, and Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 71). Written while at Savannah, and in 6-line st. Included, somewhat altered, as No. 3 in the Wesley Hys. & Spir. Songs, 1753; as No. 335 in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (1875, No. 344); and in the Meth.

New Conn. H. Bk., 1863. It is however generally abridged. At least fourteen centos have been included in various hymnals, but as they are taken from the text of the Wes. H. Bk. it is not necessary here to note them in detail. In one form or other the hymn is found under the original first line in collections since 1866, in Thring's Coll., 1880-82, Snepp's S. of G. & G., 1 72, Hyl. Comp., 1876, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c., and in America in the Unitarian H. Bk., 1869, Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., 1872, Epis. Hyl., 1871, &c. Altered forms include:—

1. O God! whose love immense in height (st. i. alt.), in the Moravian H. Bks., 1789-1886.
2. Thou wondrous love of God, whose height (st. i. alt.), New Zealand Hyl., 1872.
3. In mercy, Jesus, Thou hast brought (st. iii.) in J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hys., 1832.
4. Take, Lord, all self from me, that I (st. vii.) in the Moravian H. Bks., 1789-1886.

In the P. Works, 1868, p. 71, Dr. Osborn notes:—

"The translation [in 1736] agrees with this, except in st. iv., where we read:—

"Ah tear it thence, that Thou alone
May'st reign unrivall'd Monarch there:
From earthly loves I must be free
Ere I can find repose in Thee."

But after the ever-memorable 24th of May, 1738, Wesley knew "the way of God more perfectly;" and wrote ■ in the text:—

"Is there a thing beneath the sun
That strives with Thee my heart to share?
Ah, tear it thence, and reign alone,
The Lord of every motion there;
Then shall my heart from earth be free,
When it has found repose in Thee."

"In ■ final revision for the Large Hymn-book, 1780, he changed 'Be' in v. 2, l. 4, into 'Seem,' and made the closing couplet of v. 8 precatory, in accordance with the two preceding, by changing 'is' in the last line into 'be.'" [J. M.]

Verbum caro factum est, Ex virgine

Maria. [Christmas.] This hymn exists in a great variety of texts. Leaving out of account the varieties of reading, which are very considerable, we may reckon at least five different forms. The two lines above are used in some cases as the introduction, and line 2 as the refrain.

i. The earliest form known is in a ms. in the Bibl. Nat.-Paris (Lat., 1139, f. 43, in a hand of the 12th cent.), and thence in E. du Ménil's Poésies inédites du Moyen Age, Paris, 1854, p. 337. This form is partly in Latin and partly in Provençal French. The Latin stanzas are:—

- | | |
|----------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. In hoc anni circulo. | 5. Summi patris filio. |
| 2. Fons de suo rivulo. | 6. Animal impositum. |
| 3. Quod vetustas suffocet. | 7. O beata femina. |
| 4. Sine viri copula | 8. Illi laus et gloria. |

ii. Mone, No. 50, prints it from ■ ms. of the 16th cent. in the town library at Trier. The stanzas there are 1, 2, 7, 8, and the following:—

- | | |
|---------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 9. Stella solem protulit. | 14. Reges tres de gentibus. |
| 10. Virgine de regia. | |
| 11. In præsepe ponitur. | 15. Die hac sanctissima. |
| 12. O pastores currite. | 16. Ex divino flamine. |
| 13. Puer circumciditur. | |

iii. Hoffmann von Fallersleben, 1861, No. 169, gives a German tr. (beginning "In des jares zircklichkeit") from a Munich ms. of 1421. This has 15 stanzas, and represents 1, 2, 3, 9, 4, 7, 11, 12, 13, 14, 8, of the Latin, and also

- | | |
|---------------------------------|---------------------------|
| 17. Joseph nato fruitur. | 19. Aurum regi regnatoro. |
| 18. Ab angelis concinturo. | 20. O Jesu dulcissime. |

iv. G. M. Dreyes, in his Cantiones Bohemice, 1866, p. 43, cites it as in two mss. now at Prag; the first being in the Bohemian Museum, and the second in the University Library. The first written about 1420, has stanzas 1, 3, 7, 10, 14, 19, 8, and also 21. Adam pomo vescu. 23. Serpens ille callidus.

 tur. 24. Oprompta humilitas.
 22. Noe pro diluivio. 25. Ergo nostra concio.
 The second, written about 1510, has 1, 3, 21, 22, 23, 9, 13, 14, 19, 25, 8.
 v. Mone, No. 387, has a form in 29 stanzas from
 mss. of the 15th cent. at Venice, and the same form is in mss. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Fonds Italiens, No. 559, f. 107) also written in Italy in the 15th cent. In the Paris ms. it is given as by Jacobus de Benedictis. The text, as Mone prints it, has stanzas 1, 3, 2, 4, 7, 11, 17, 18, 14, 19, 12, 13, 24, 10, 20, 8, as above.
 The remaining 12 st. of this text need not here be noted.
 vi. Wackernagel, 1841, No. 54, gives it from Leisen-tritt's G. B. (R. C.), 1567. There it is in 14 st., viz. 1, 3, 21, 22, 23, 9, 4, 13, 7, 10, 11, 18, 17, 25.

From this summary it is pretty clear that
 No. i. is the original, and that Nos. ii. and iii.
 are forms which were current in Germany in the 14th cent. Stanzas 21-25 seem also to belong to the 14th cent. Stanza 25 might be attached to any hymn of the same metre, and is found in some forms of the "Puer natus"
 (p. 940, i.). The remaining 12 stanzas of No. v.
 were probably written in Italy. It may be added that ii. is also in Daniel, iv. p. 157; and
 vi. in Daniel, i. No. 477, and Neale's Hy. Eccl., 1851, p. 74. See also Wackernagel, i., Nos.
 264-266. The text as in Daniel, i. No. 477, beginning In hoc anni circulo, was tr., omitting
 st. vii., x., xi., by Dr. Neale, in his Med. Hys., 1851, p. 106, as "In the ending of the Year."
 This was repeated in the 1867 ed. of the Hy.
Noted, and in The Office H. Bk., 1889. [J. M.]

Verbum Dei, Deo natum. [St. John the Evangelist.] Archbishop Trench remarks justly, "This sublime hymn, though not Adam of St. Victor's, . . . is altogether worthy of him." It is found in a ms. of the end of the 12th cent. in the Bodleian (Liturg.
Misc. 341, f. 42), and another circa 1200 (Liturg. Misc., 340, f. 141); also in a ms. of the 13th cent. in the British Museum (Arundel, 156, f. 95). Among the St. Gall mss. it is found in Nos. 376, 381 of the 11th cent., No. 66 of the 12th cent., and others. It is included in the Magdeburg Missal, 1480, and many later German Missals, generally assigned to the festival of St. John at the Latin Gate. Pt. ii. begins with st. ix. Volat avis sine meta. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 709; Daniel, ii. p. 166; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 75; and Kehrein,
 No. 408. Tr. as:—

1. God begotten, God the Word, Pt. i. Boundless still his pinions soar, Pt. ii. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Verses, 1862, p. 17.
2. Word of God, so long awaited, Pt. i. Higher soars his eagle, higher, Pt. ii. By E. A. Dayman, in the Sarum Hyl., 1868. In Pt. ii. st. iii. is original, by Mr.
 Dayman.
3. The Word of God, the Eternal Son, Pt. i. As eagle winging loftiest flight, Pt. ii. By E. H. Plumtre, in the New Test. Com. for Eng. Readers, ed. Bp. Ellicott's, vol. 1, 1877, p. 366, and the translator's Things New and Old, 1884, p. 169.
4. Not made, nor yet created, came, Pt. i. With boundless range our eagle flew, Pt. ii. By D. T.
 Morgan, in his Hys. of the Latin Church, 1871, p. 114
 (1880, p. 71).
5. He the Word of God, the fated, Pt. i. As an eagle unmolested, Pt. ii. By S. W. Duffield, in his Latin Hymn-Writers, 1889. [J. M.]

Verbum quod ante saecula. [Epi- phany.] Given in the Sens Brev., 1726, and the Paris
Brev., 1736, as the hymn for 1st
 Vespers for the Sundays after the Epiphany.
 The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive
Church, 1837; Card. Newman's Hymni
Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. The Word, Who dwelt above the skies. By
 J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 56. In the 1st ed. of H. A. & M., 1861, it was extensively altered by the Compilers, and was included as "The Word, with God the Father One." This was omitted from the revised ed. of 1875. The original tr., with slight alterations, is in the Hymnary, 1872, &c.

2. Word of Life, the Eternal Son. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 94. In J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1861, it begins, "Word of God, Eternal Son,
 Ere the march, &c."

3. Word of God, Eternal Son, From Thy throne.
 By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850,
 p. 57. This is based upon the tr. by I. Williams as above, and several lines are taken from that
tr. It is in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

Other trs. are:—

1. Word that, ere creation's morn. W. J. Blew.
 1852-55.
2. Word! from the Father's bosom born. J. D.
Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

Verbum Supernum prodiens, A Patre olim exiens. [Advent.] This hymn, a short and good summary of the leading ideas of Advent, is given as No. 33 in Mone, with the remark that it is probably of the second half of the 5th cent. Daniel gives the text at i. No. 74, and at iv. p. 144 cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 11th cent., ranking it as a hymn of the 11th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent.
 Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D.
xii. f. 29; Jul. A. vi. f. 31b; Harl. 2961, f.
225b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnary
 (Add. 30851, f. 112); an 11th cent. Mozarabic
Breviary (Add. 30848, f. 3), &c. It is in G.
 M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 239); in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, No. 413; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch.
 (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 11).
 It is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Sarum use being at Matins on the 1st S. in Advent, and daily up to Christmas Eve. The text is also in Wackernagel, i.
 No. 55; the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 4;
 L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, &c.
 In the Roman Brev., 1632, it is considerably altered, and begins, Verbum Supernum prodiens, E Patris aeterno sinu. This text is in recent eds. of that Breviary; in Daniel, i. No. 74; J.
 Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837,
 No. 39; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae,
 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Both forms of this hymn have been tr. as follows:—

i. The Original Text.

1. To earth descending, Word sublime. By J.
 M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 11, the Hymner, 1882, &c.
2. O Word Supreme, created not. By R. F.
 Littledale, in the People's H., 1867.

Other trs. are:—

1. Word from the Sire, supernal. W. J. Blew.
 1852-55.
2. Supernal Word! Thou Effluence bright. J. D.
Chambers. 1852 and 1857.

3. Word of the Father, Coming from high. J. W. Hewett. 1859.

ii. The Roman Breviary Text.

1. Word of th' eternal Father's might. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, 1848, p. 55. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, it is given in an altered form.

2. O Thou, Who Thine own Father's breast. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 45, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 25. It is repeated in a few modern collections, sometimes as "Eternal Word, Who dost reside," as in the English Hyl., 1852-61, where it is changed from C.M. to L.M.; and again as "Thou Who didst leave Thy Father's breast."

3. Supernal Word, proceeding forth. By Card. Newman, in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 103, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 255. This is repeated in the Hymnary, 1872, and others.

4. O Heavenly Word, Eternal Light. By the Compilers of H. A. & M. It was given in the trial copy of that collection in 1859, the 1st ed., 1861, and the revised ed., 1875. It is also in other hymn-books. The first stanza is based upon Copeland's tr. as above.

5. O Word celestial, Who Thy rest. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. The Period's come; and lo, to Day. Primer, 1706.
2. Eternal Word, Who dost proceed. Bp. G. W. Doane. 1824.
3. Word uncreate, beloved one. Bp. R. Mant. 1837.
4. The Father's bosom Thou didst leave. J. Chandler. 1837.
5. Dread Word, Who erst, when time was not. Hymnarium Anglicanum. 1844.
6. O gracious Word, that issuing forth from Heav'n. W. Palmer. 1845.
7. Lo the Word from God proceedeth. W. Bright. 1858.
8. O Thou, the Word, Supreme and blest. F. Trappes. 1865.
9. Dread Word, Who from the Father hast. J. Kehle, in his Misc. Poems. 1869.
10. O Word, proceeding from Thy home. J. Wallace. 1874.
11. Supernal Word, Who didst proceed. J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884. [J. J.]

Verbum Supernum prodiens, Nec Patris linquens dexteram. St. Thomas of Aquino. [Holy Communion.] Written about 1263 for the office for use on Corpus Christi (see Pange lingua gloriosi Corporis). It is found in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and, unchanged, in 1632), Mozarabic of 1502, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1736, and other Breviaries, its primary use being at Lauds on Corpus Christi.

"Most appropriately, says Daniel (i. No. 241), has St. Thomas made his hymn like the well-known hymn for the Nativity of the Lord ['Verbum Supernum prodiens, A Patre olim exiens'], for as to the Festival of the Eucharist, by which the Word made Flesh will dwell with us for ever, what need is there to explain at length the relationship that exists between it and the Nativity of the Lord?"

The text, in 5 st. and a doxology, is in Daniel, i. No. 241; Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 123, and others. St. iv. is a fine instance of perfect form and condensed meaning:—

"Se nascens dedit socium, Convalescens in edulium,
Se moriens in pretium,
Se regnans dat in praeonium."

The last stanza, O salutaris hostia, has often been used along with the doxology as a separate hymn, e.g., at the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The hymn is found in a ms. of the 13th cent. in the Bodleian (Ashmole, 1525, f. 175); in a ms. of the end of the 13th cent. (Add. 23935, f. 4 b), and a 14th cent. Sarum Brev. (Reg. A. xiv. f. 95), both in the British Museum; in a 13th cent. ms. at St. Gall, 503, i., and others. Also in Wackernagel, i. No. 232; Königsfeld, ii. p. 214; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and others. [J. M.]

The trs. of this hymn are as follows:—

i. Verbum supernum prodiens Nec, &c.

1. The Word, descending from above. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 114, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 65. It is in the People's H., 1867. In the Hymner, 1882, it is rewritten as, "The Word proceeding from above."

2. The Word of God proceeding forth. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Noted, 1854. From the H. Noted it has passed into several collections, and in almost every instance with alterations. In the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, it begins, "The Word from His eternal home." Another altered form of the text is "The Heavenly Word proceeding forth," in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875. In the Hymnary, 1872, Neale's tr. is given with st. v., as in H. A. & M.

Other trs. are:—

1. The eternal God, by human birth. Primer, 1706, and O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.
2. The Word, Who ever sits at God's right hand. I. Williams. 1839.
3. The Word Supernal forth proceeds, Nor leaves, &c. A. D. Wackerbarth. 1842.
4. Word of God to earth descending. R. Campbell. 1850.
5. The Word Most Highest from above. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.
6. The Word Eternal going forth. J. A. Johnston. 1856 and 1861.
7. The Word supernal forth proceeds, Yet, &c. J. D. Chambers. 1857. In Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1864, it is altered to "The Word of God from heaven proceeds."
8. Achieving what His wisdom plann'd. F. Trappes. 1865.
9. The eternal Word of God descends. J. Wallace. 1874.
10. The Word supernal, from the heavens descending. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.
11. Proceeding forth, the Word supernal. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

ii. salutaris Hostia.

The special use of this portion of the hymn is thus set forth in the Dict. of Christian Antiquities:—

"A hymn sung during the Office called Benediction, at the moment when the Tabernacle is opened, in order that the Consecrated Host may be removed and placed in the Monstrance prepared for its solemn Exposition.

"Sometimes also, though less frequently, 'O salutaris Hostia' is sung at High Mass, immediately after the Benedictus; not indeed as an integral part of the Mass itself, to which it does not properly belong, but in order to prevent the long and distracting pause which would otherwise ensue, when, as is frequently the case in Plain Chant Masses, the Benedictus is too short to fill up the time which must necessarily elapse between the Elevation of the Host and the Pater Noster."

This portion of the hymn is not usually tr. distinct from the preceding verses, although in some books it is marked off from the rest by the introduction into the tr. of the Latin line. The trs. are:—

1. O saving Host, that heaven's high gate. Primer. 1706.
2. O Saving Host which Heaven's Gate. Evening Office. 1748.
3. O Saving Victim, pledge of love. Divine Office. 1763.

4. O hallow'd fount of bliss! to Thee. D. French. 1839.
5. O Lord, Who didst a willing Victim die. I. Williams. 1839.
6. O! Victim of Salvation's cause. A. D. Wackerbarth. 1842.
7. O saving Victim! opening wide The gate of heaven, &c. E. Caswall. 1849.
8. Mighty Victim, earth's salvation. R. Campbell. 1850.
9. O saving Victim, slain to bless. J. M. Neale. 1854.
10. O healthful, saving Sacrifice. J. D. Chambers. 1852 and 1857.
11. O Saviour victim, Thine the power. H. N. Oxenham. 1854.
12. O Lamb of God! the Victim slain. J. A. Johnston. 1856 and 1861.
13. O Christ, most willing Victim slain. Salisbury H. Bk. 1857. Altered from Neale. This in the Sarum Hymn., 1868, was again altered to "O salutary Victim slain."
14. Hail, saving Host! Hail, source of love. T. J. Potter. 1858.
15. O saving Victim, worthy deem'd. F. Trappes. 1865.
16. O Thou health giving Sacrifice. W. J. Irons, in his Hymns, 1866, and his Ps. & Hys., 1873-75.
17. O Victim of redeeming grace. J. Wallace. 1874.
18. O Host, salvation bringing. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884.
19. O Victim of the world's salvation. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Vere, Thomas Aubrey de, third s. of the late Sir Aubrey de Vere, Bart., was b. in 1814, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. Whilst Dr. Newman was Rector of the Roman Catholic University, Dublin, he was one of the Professors there. His first volume of Poems appeared in 1842, and since then he has also pub. more than thirty distinct works, many of which are in verse, including Poems, 1855; May Carols, 1857; Poetical Works, 1884; and others. A few pieces from his poetical works are given in Roman Catholic collections. [J. J.]

Very, Jones, was b. at Salem, Massachusetts, Aug. 28, 1813, his father, Jones Very, being a shipmaster. He graduated at Harvard College in 1836. He remained at his College, as tutor in Greek, for two years, and then entered the Unitarian Ministry (1843). He has been engaged in the work of a preacher without a pastorate from the first, a great part of his time being devoted to literary pursuits. In 1839 he pub. a volume of Essays and Poems, from which several pieces have been taken as hymns, including:—

1. Father! I wait Thy word. The sun doth stand. Waiting upon God.
2. Father, there is no change to live with Thee. Peace in the Father's Care.
3. Father! Thy wonders do not singly stand. The Spirit-Land.
4. Wilt Thou not visit me? The Divine Presence desired.

These hymns were included in Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Book of Hymns, 1846. In the same collection also appeared:—

5. I saw on earth another light. The Light Within.
6. The bud will soon become a flower. Sowing and Reaping.
7. Turn not from him who asks of thee. Kind Words.

In addition the following hymns appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Hymns of the Spirit, 1864:—

8. One saint to another I heard say, "How long?" The Future anticipated.
9. There is a world eye hath not seen. The Spirit World.

Most of these hymns are in the Lyra Sac.

Americana, 1868; and in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1874. [F. M. B.]

Very, Washington, brother of Jones Very, was b. at Salem, Massachusetts, Nov. 12, 1815. After following mercantile pursuits for some time, he entered Harvard College, and graduated there in 1843. Subsequently he conducted a private school in Salem, where he d. April 28, 1853. Putnam gives three of Very's poetical pieces in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, one of which, "There cometh o'er the spirit" (Spring), appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1846. [J. J.]

Verzage nicht, o frommer Christ. [Trust in God.] Included as one of Drey schöne geistliche Lieder, Constanz, 1607, in 22 st. of 5 l., and thence in Mitzell, No. 584; Wackernagel, v. p. 427; and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 581. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to Nicolaus Herman. Tr. as:—

Ye who the name of Jesus bear, Yield not yourselves &c. A good tr. of st. i., iv., v., vii., xvii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 228 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. [J. M.]

Vexilla Regis prodeunt. V. H. C. Fortunatus. [Passiontide.] This "world-famous hymn," as Dr. Neale calls it, has been ascribed to Theodulf of Orleans, to Sedulius, &c. But it is found in all the mss. of the works of Fortunatus, as well as in all the printed editions, and there is no ground whatever for questioning his authorship. In further annotation it will be most convenient to treat (1) of its Text, then (2) of its Origin and some of the allusions contained in it, and lastly (3) of the variations in its Use.

i. Text, MSS., &c. We print first the full original text from Professor F. Leo's ed. of Fortunatus's Opera poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 34, where it is given as No. 6 in Bk. ii., entitled "Hymn in honour of the Holy Cross," and in 8 st. as follows:—

i. "Vexilla regis prodeunt, Fulget crucis mysterium, Quo carne carnis conditor Suspensus est patibulo.	v. "Arbor decora et fulgida, Ornata regis purpura, Electa digno stipte, Tam sancta membra tan- gere!
ii. "Confixa claviviscera Tendens manus, vestigia Redemptionis gratia Hic immolata est hostia.	vi. "Beata cujus brachiiis Pretium pendidit saeculis Statera facta est corporis Praedam tulitque Tar- tari.
iii. "Quo vulneratus insuper Mucrone duro lanceae, Ut nos lavaret crimine, Manavit unda et san- guine.	vii. "Fundis aroma cortice, Vincis sapore nectare, Jucunda fructu fertili Plaudis triumpho nobili.
iv. "Impleta sunt quae con- cinit David fideli carmine, Dicendo nationibus: Regnavit a ligno Deus.	viii. "Salve ara, salve victima De passionis gloria Qua vita mortem per- tulit Et morte vitam reddidit."

This text Leo prints from a St. Petersburg ms. of the 8th cent., a Laudun ms. of the 8th or 9th cent., a Vatican ms. of the 9th cent. (Regiae, 329), and others. It agrees with the original readings of a 9th cent. ms. of Fortunatus, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 24193, f. 18). In the earliest Hymnaries, &c., it is found in much the same text, e.g.:—

In the so-called Durham Ritual, an ancient ms. in the Chapter Library at Durham (A. v. 19, f. 65 b, written in England in a hand of the 10th cent.), in two Hymnaries, written in England in the 11th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. D., xii. f. 64, and Harl., 2961, f. 238b), &c. During the 11th cent. it began to be customary to omit st. ii., vii., viii., and so in the Vesp. D., xii. st. ii. was subsequently scratched through, st. vii., viii. being erased (in the Vesp. D., xii., the Latin text of almost all the hymns is repeated along with an Anglo-Saxon inter-linear gloss, the Latin being arranged to suit the order of the gloss. In this form, at f. 65b, the original st. ii., vii., viii. are still found, and there is neither original nor gloss of st. ix., x.), and the two following stanzas, not by Fortunatus, inserted in their place:—

ix.	x.
" O crux ave, spes unica, Hoc passionis tempore, Auge piis justitiam, Reisque dona veniam.	" Te summa Deus Trinitas, Collaudat omnis spiritus, Quos per crucis myste- rium Salvas, rege per saecula."

Among other mss. which omit st. vii., viii. and give ix., x., are the Add. 30848, f. 109, a Breviary written in Spain in the 11th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus.; the Arundel, 155, f. 154b, a Hymnarium written in England in the 12th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus., &c. So also the Hymnarius Moissiacensis, a ms. written in France in the 10th cent., and ed. by G. M. Drevès in 1888, p. 45. In the Harl. 2961, as above, the hymn is divided into two parts, pt. i. being st. i.-iv., viii., and pt. ii. beginning " Arbor decora et fulgida," being st. v., vi., vii. In a ms. of the 11th cent. now at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 246), st. iv. also immediately precedes st. viii. Other early mss. which contain this hymn, include one of the 11th cent. now in the Brit. Mus. (Jul. A., vi., f. 46b); one of the 11th cent. at Durham (B., iii., 32, f. 23); one of the 10th cent. at St. Gall, No. 196, &c. The variations in the text are somewhat numerous, but we need only mention two, viz. st. vii., l. 3, where the Add. 24193, reads "Foecunda," and st. x., l. 2, where the Arundel, 155, reads "collaudet." Daniel, i., No. 139, ii. p. 382, iii. p. 284, iv. p. 70, prints the text with readings from a Fleury ms. of circa 800, a Rheinau ms. of the 11th cent., &c. The printed text is also in Wackernagel, i., No. 80; and the Hymn. Saris-buriense, 1851, p. 79; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 66; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, &c. In the revised Roman Brev. of 1632 the text is of st. i., iii.-vi., ix., x., slightly altered.

ii. Origin and Allusions. To appreciate this hymn we must bear in mind the circumstances under which it was written. The details are of more than usual interest, as a short summary will show:—

Fortunatus was then living at Poitiers, where his friend, Queen Rhadegund, founded a nunnery. Before the consecration of the nunnery church she desired to present certain relics to it, and among these she obtained from the Emperor Justin II. a fragment of the so-called True Cross, from which circumstance the nunnery received its name of the Holy Cross. This relic was sent in the first instance to Tours, and was left in charge of the Bishop, in order that he might convey it to Poitiers. (See the Historia Francorum, by Gregory of Tours [d. 594], Bk. ix., Chapter 40.) In the Abbé E. Briand's Sainte Radegonde, Poitiers, 1887, pp. 128-130, its journey to Poitiers is thus described: "Escorted by a numerous body of clergy and of the faithful holding lighted torches, the Bishop started in the midst of liturgical chants, which ceased not to resound in honour of the hallowed wood of the Redemption. A league from Poitiers the pious cortège found the delegates of Rhadegund, Fortunatus at their head, rejoicing in the honour which had fallen to them; some carrying censers with perfumed incense, others torches of white wax. The meeting took place at Migné, at the place where, twelve centuries and a half later, the cross appeared in the air. It was on this occasion that the hymn 'Vexilla Regis' was heard for the first time, the chant of triumph composed by Fortunatus to salute the arrival of the True Cross. . . . It was the 19th November, 569."

The hymn was thus primarily a Processional hymn, written for use at the solemn reception of a relic of the Holy Cross. Inspired by the occasion the poet composed this poem of the Crucified King, one of the grandest hymns of the Latin church, in which in glowing accents he invites us to contemplate the mystery of love accomplished on the Cross. The occasion thus gives the key to his choice of subject, and to most of the allusions throughout the hymn. Fortunatus evidently had in his mind, especially in st. v., the old legends of the Tree of the Cross (see under "Pange lingua gloriosi Proelium," p. 880, i.), and designedly used in i. l. 4, the word "patibulum," which means properly a cross, formed thus Y or thus Ψ; the latter form representing the stem of the tree, with the branches on which, as on a balance, the ransom of the world was weighed (st. vi.). The most interesting of the other allusions is the use made in the 4th stanza of Ps. xcvi. 10. Neither in the Hebrew, the present Septuagint, the present Vulgate, nor in the English versions, do we find anything answering to Fortunatus's statement that David spoke of God as reigning "from the tree," i.e. from the Cross.

Justin Martyr however cited the passage as Messianic, and regarded the words ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, as part of the original (Dialogue with Trypho, sect. 73; see Migne's PP. Graec., vi., 646); and Tertullian (Against Marcion, Bk. iii., c. 19; see Migne's PP. Lat., ii., 347), quotes the words "a ligno" as part of the text of Ps. xcvi. 10. These words are also found in many mss. of the so-called Italic version of the Psalms, so e.g. in a Psalter of the 11th cent. now in the Brit. Mus. (Reg. 2 B. V., f. 112), where the verse reads "Dicite in nationibus dominus regnavit a ligno, et enim correx orbem," and so in another Psalter of circa 700 (Vesp. A., i. f. 92). [In the Add. 10546 of circa 850 it reads "Dicite in gentibus quia dominus regnavit, et enim correx orbem," and so in the Vitelius E., xviii., f. 93, of the 11th cent.] They also survived in the printed Sarum Missals as a versicle for use on Friday in Easter week and for the Festival of the Invention of the Cross, thus "Dicite in gentibus quia Dominus regnavit a ligno," and this form is also in the present Roman Missal, for the Invention of the Cross (ed. Mechlin, 1874, p. 410). In the present Roman Breviary it is appointed for us: at Lauds in the commemoration of the Holy Cross in the ferial office at Eastertide, thus "V. Dicite in nationibus, alleluia. R. Quia Dominus regnavit a ligno" (see the Marquis of Bute's Roman Brev. into English, vol. i., 1879, p. 152). M. Leon Gautier, in his Les Tropes, 1886, p. 153, quotes a Limoges ms. of the 11th cent. (Bib. Nat., Paris, Lat., 1338), as appointing it for the 3rd S. after Easter, and as paraphrasing it thus: "Dicite, concuncti et psallite in gentibus quia magna Domini clementia, suis respiciens ovis, regnavit omnia et imperavit a ligno, proprio Filio suo crucifixo qui surrexit et sedet in trono deconcalato Zabulo."

iii. Use. As already stated the first use was as a processional hymn in honour of the Holy Cross. Its subsequent uses include the following:—

The Sarum use was at Vespers on Passion Sunday, and daily up to Maunday Thursday. In the Paris Brev. of 1736 it was assigned to Vespers from Monday in Passion Week up to Maunday Thursday. In the present Roman Brev. it is used at Vespers on the Saturday before Passion Sunday, and up to Maunday Thursday, and also on the Festival of the Invention of the Cross (May 3); and in the present Roman Missal it is appointed to be sung on the morning of Good Friday, after the ceremony of the Adoration of the Cross, and during the time that the acolytes are censuring the reserved sacrament (kept since Maunday Thursday in a side chapel, in the so-called Holy Grave), previous to its being solemnly placed on the High Altar.

Of the imitations and parodies of this hymn we need only mention two.

The first of these is a sequence beginning "Vexilla Regis, prodeunt et fulget," printed by G. M. Drevès in his Prosarium Lemovicense, 1890, p. 105, from three Limoges mss. now in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 1118, circa 990; Lat. 778 of the 12th cent.; Lat. 1137 of the 11th cent.); being an unhappy combination of Fortunatus with the versicle and antiphon used in the present Roman Brev. at the First Vespers of the Invention of the Cross. The second, printed by Thomas Wright in his Political Songs of England, London, 1839, p. 258, begins "Vexilla regni prodeunt, Fulget cometa comitum," and is a parody describing the death (1312) of

Peter de Gaveston, the favourite of Edward II. of England. (Wright, at p. 259, pub. a second song on the same occasion, beginning "Pange, lingua, necem Petri qui turbavit Angliam," which is a parody on the "Pange lingua gloriosi Proelium.")

We may add that the text of Fortunatus, with a full critical and theological commentary, will be found in the Abbé S. G. Pimont's Hymnes du Bréviaire Romain, vol. ii., pt. ii., p. 30, Paris, 1884; and in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. 1, Paderborn, 1881, pp. 395-411. [J. M.]

The trs. into English of the Vexilla Regis include:—

1. A Broad the Regal Banners flie. This fine rendering is in The Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary in English, &c., 1687 (Brit. Mus.) an account of which is given in the Churchman's Shilling Mag. for July, 1876. Hymn No. 169 in Thring's Coll., 1882, is taken from this tr., the text being slightly altered. It is based on the tr. of 1585 noted below, and is by far the best rendering of the Vexilla Regis in C. U.

2. The royal banner is unfurled. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 74, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 42. It is given in a limited number of hymnals only.

3. Now onward move the standards of our King. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 79, in 7 st. of 4 l. Its use is limited.

4. Forth flames the standard of our King. By Bp. J. Williams, in his Ancient Hys., 1845, p. 61. This is repeated in a limited number of collections, including Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and others.

5. Forth comes the standard of the King: All hail, Thou Mystery ador'd. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 89, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 50, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is given in several Roman Catholic hymn-books for schools and missions.

6. Forth goes the standard of the King, The sign of signs, the radiant Cross. This tr. appeared as No. 36 in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Index it is said to be by Chandler, but its similarity to Chandler's tr. is so faint that the most which can be said of it is that it is Chandler's tr. re-written. It is a most successful rendering of the hymn. In its full, or in an abridged form it is found in later collections, as Murray's Hymnal, 1852, Lowe's Gainsburgh Coll., 1854, and several others.

7. The King of Kings His banner rears. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 65, in 6 st. of 4 l.

8. See the royal banner streaming. By G. Rorison, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 59, in 6 st. of 4 l.

9. The royal banners forward go. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediæval Hys., 1851, p. 6, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in the Hy. Noted, 1852, with the omission of st. vi. It is in C. U. both in its full and in several altered forms. Amongst the latter are (1) H. A. & M., altered by the Compilers, 1861, and repeated in other collections; (2) F. Pott's Hymns, &c., altered by the Editor, 1861; (3) Nicholson's Appendix Hyl., 1866, beginning with st. iii., "Fulfill'd is all that David told"; (4) The Hymnary, altered by the Editors, 1872, and others. When these various forms of Dr. Neale's tr. are taken into account, it is found that his rendering of the Vexilla Regis is more widely used than all others put together.

10. The royal banner forward goes, The Cross's mystery shines to view. By J. A. Johnston in his English Hyl., 1852. In the 1856 ed. he altered it to "See forward the King's banners go," and in the 1861 ed. to "Before us our King's banner goes."

11. The royal banner is unfurled. This, in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, is a cento of which st. i. is from J. Chandler as above, and st. ii.-v. are from Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, somewhat altered.

12. Forth goes the standard of our King, The sacred banner gleams on high. This rendering, which appeared in Chope's Hymnal, 1857, and again in other collections, is an arrangement made from older collections, the principal source being Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, as above.

13. The King's bright banners forward go. This in Kennedy, 1863, No. 601, is J. A. Johnston's 1856 text as above, in a slightly altered form.

14. The royal banner is unfurled, And lo! the Cross is reared on high. This rendering in Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., 1864, in 4 st. of 4 l., is an altered and abbreviated form of the text in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, as above, with a slight resemblance to Chope's text of 1857. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, No. 118 is a cento beginning with st. i. of this text, and concerning which Mr. Ellerton says in his Notes to the Church Hys., 1881, p. xl:—

"Hymn 118. . . Free imitation, written for Church Hymns in 1871 by Bishop William Walsham How, of the Latin hymn Vexilla Regis prodeunt, by Venantius Fortunatus. . . In the present imitation, little except the first two verses of Fortunatus's hymn remain. The original contains eight verses, the last four being an impassioned apostrophe to the material cross, an alleged fragment of which was amongst the relics for the reception of which the hymn was written. These verses being considered by the Editors of Church Hymns wholly unsuitable for the use of the congregations for which their book was prepared, have been replaced by others."

The text of this Church Hymns cento is thus composed: st. i. from Morrell & How, 1864, unaltered; st. ii. from Stretton's Church Hys., unaltered; st. iii., Morrell & How, 1864, st. iii. rewritten; st. iv., v. new by Bp. How.

15. The Kingly banners onward stream. By R. C. Singleton, written in 1867, and pub. in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

16. The King's bright banners forward go. By E. A. Dayman, in the Sarum Hyl., 1868. The opening lines (1 and 2) are from Kennedy's 1863 text, hence the first line of st. ii., "With outstretched hands, transfix'd and torn," must be noted.

Other trs. are:—

1. The banners of the King come forth, The misterie, &c. Primer (Antwerp), 1599.

2. Now forth the Kingly banners goe. Primer (Mechin), 1615.

3. Abroad the Regal Banners fly, Now shines the Crosses mystery. Primer (Antwerp), 1685.

4. Behold the Royal Ensigns fly, The Crosses shining Mystery. Primer (London?), 1706.

5. Abroad the royal Banners fly. A partial tr. in the Evening Office, 1748.

6. Behold the Royal Ensigns fly, Bearing the Cross's Mystery. Evening Office, 1760.

7. Is this the standard of a King? I. Williams, 1839.

8. The great King's banner shines above. F. C. Husenbeth, 1841.

9. Mysterious sign of Royalty. W. Palmer, 1845.

10. See, see the royal banners fly. J. R. Beste, 1849.

11. The Royal Banner forward goes, The mystic Cross refulgent glows. J. D. Chambers, 1852 and 1857.

12. The banners of the King go forth Outshines the mystery of the Rood. W. J. Blew, 1852 and 1855.

13. The banners of the King appear, The mystery of the Cross shines clear. J. Keble, written in 1857, pub. in his (posthumous) Misc. Poems, 1869.

14. Behold the Royal ensigns fly, which bear the Cross's mystery. By T. J. Potter in the Catholic Psalmist, 1858.

15. The Banner of the King goes forth, The Cross, the radiant mystery. Elizabeth Charles, 1858.

16. The Royal Banner floats on high. R. Massie, in Lyra Messianica, 1864.

17. The Kingly banners proudly fly. F. Trappes, 1865.

18. The King's bright banners onward bear. H. M. Macgill, in The Juvenile Miss. Magazine of the U. Presb. Church, April, 1866, and his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

19. The banners of our King advance. J. Wallace, 1874.

20. Banners of our King are streaming. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

21. The royal banners forward fly; The cross upon them cheers the sky. S. W. Duffield, in his Latin Hymn-Writers, &c., 1889.

This extensive list of trs. marks in a striking manner the strong hold this hymn has upon many men. In translating the stanza which has called forth the greatest diversity and skill is the fourth as above.

The finest rendering of these lines which we have seen is that in the Service Book of 1687 (see above), which reads:—

“That which the Prophet-King of old
Hath in mysterious Verse foretold,
Is now accomplisht, whilst we see God Ruling Nations from a Tree.”

The nearest approach to this in dignity and force is Dr. Neale's tr. of 1851. [J. J.]

Victimæ Paschali. Wipo(?). [Easter.] This Sequence is an excellent example of the transition from the rhythmical, irregular, unrhymed Notkerian sequences to the regular rhyming sequences of Adam of St. Victor and later writers. It presents several points of interest, and demands a somewhat detailed examination. We shall treat (1) of the Text and MSS., (2) of the Authorship, and (3) of the Uses made of this Sequence.

i. Text and MSS. To show its structure we print the full text, which reads:—

i. Victimæ Paschali Laudes innoxent Christiani. ii. Agnus redemit oves; Christus innocens Patri Reconciliavit Peccatores. iii. Mors et vita duello Conflixere mirando; Dux vitæ mortuus Regnat vivus. iv. “Dic nobis, Maria, Quid vidisti in via?”	“Sepulchrum Christi viventis, Et gloriam vidi resurgentis; Angelicos testes, Sadarium et vestes. Surrexit Christus, spes mea, Præcedit suos in Galilea.” v. Credendum est magis soli Mariæ veraci Quam Judæorum turbæ fallaci. Scimus Christum resurrexisse Ex mortuis vere. Tu nobis, victor rex, miserere.

(a) Add. 19768, f. 23b, written in the 11th cent., mainly at St. Gall; (b) Reg. 2 B., iv., f. 210b, written in England, circa 1140; (c) Calig. A., xiv., f. 57b, written in England, circa 1199; (d) Add. 23935, f. 435b, written in France, circa 1275; (e) Add. 11669, f. 51, written in Germany, circa 1099; (f) Arundel, 156, f. 92b, written in Germany in the 13th cent. The variations are: i., 1, 1, Paschalis in a; i., 1, 2, innoxent in c; iii., 1, 2, conflixerunt in a; iv., 1, 7, spes nostra in c; iv., 1, 8, vos in b and c; iv., 1, 8, Galileam in e and f; v., 1, 4, surrexisse in a and d; v., 1, 5, A mortuis in b.

This sequence is also found in a ms. written in Germany circa 1199, and now in the Bodeleian (Liturg.

Misc. 341, f. 47); in a ms. apparently written at Linog's, circa 1199, and now in the Bibl. Nat. at Paris (Lat. 1139, f. 159); and in the Echternach Gradual of circa 1060, also in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 10510); in two mss. of the 10th cent. at St. Gall, No. 339, p. 7 (added in a hand of the 11th cent., and No. 340, p. 793, and in a third of the 11th cent., No. 343, p. 304, &c. Among Missals it is found in a Sarum, circa 1370 (Barlow, 5, p. 215), ■ York, circa 1390; a Hereford, circa 1390, all now in the Bodeleian; in ■ Paris of the 14th cent. (Add. 16905, f. 158b, beginning with “Agnus redemit vos”), and a Sens of the 14th cent. (Add. 30058, f. 63, beginning imperfectly, the preceding leaf being missing), now in the Brit. Mus.; in the St. Andrews, circa 1499, the Angers of 1489, the Magdeburg of 1480, the Münster of 1489, and many others in various continental countries. In the Paris Missal (see above, as also in the printed ed. of 1481) st. i. is omitted, and in the present Roman Missal ll. 1–3 of st. v. are omitted, while in some of the 15th cent. eds. of the Roman Missal, e.g. in the Venice eds. of 1477 and 1487, in the Brit. Mus., the question “Dic nobis” (iv., ll. 1, 2) is given thrice, i.e. it is repeated after l. 4 and again after l. 6. Otherwise, in most cases, the text is given in full and unaltered. The printed text is also in Daniel, ii. p. 95, with further notes at ii. p. 385, iii. p. 287, v. p. 58; Kehrein, No. 83; Büssler, No. 78; Wackernagel, l. No. 199; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and others.

ii. Authorship. As a rule this Sequence has been regarded as of unknown authorship. Of the guesses at its authorship the following may be mentioned:—

(1) Cardinal Bona (Rerum Liturg., Rome, 1671, p. 336) says that it had been ascribed to Notker. This ascription, however, is quite without ground (see p. 815).

(2) Robert II. of France. In a list of authors of sequences, written circa 1300 (see p. 1043), it is ascribed to Robert II. of France. This ascription also lacks confirmation (see p. 967, ii.).

(3) Hermannus Contractus. The attribution to Hermannus Contractus, which is mentioned in the Abbé Migne's Encyclopédie Théologique, vol. viii. (Liturgie), Paris, 1844, col. 950, seems also entirely conjectural.

(4) Adam of St. Victor. In the Augustinian Missal of St. Victor, printed at Paris in 1529, it is attributed to Adam of St. Victor, but it is found in mss. written before he was born (see above and p. 14, ii.).

(5) Italian Origin. In the Ecclesiologist for October, 1854, it is said to be “probably of Italian origin.” This appears simply to be a conjecture, and we have been unable to discover anything which can be called evidence in support of it.

(6) Wipo. Lastly P. Anselm Schubiger, in his Sängerschule St. Gallens, 1858, ascribes it to Wipo, on the ground that it is marked with his name in an Einsiedeln ms. of the end of the 11th cent., and gives a facsimile (Appz., No. 35) of the part of the ms. which contains this sequence. Since Schubiger's discovery the sequence has generally been ascribed to Wipo (otherwise Wippo or Wigbert), who was a native of Burgundy, and a secular priest. He was for some time chaplain to the Emperors Conrad II. (d. June 4, 1039), and Heinrich III., and presented a collection of poems to the former in 1025, and another collection to the latter in 1041; his latest work being a prose history of the Emperor Conrad, finished about 1048. His claim to this sequence (marked as his, so far as we can discover, only in this solitary Einsiedeln ms.) can hardly be regarded as definitely established. Neither of the two earliest St. Gall mss. give his name, and the copy in one of these mss. (No. 340) dates circa 1000 (so also the Echternach Gradual noted above), i.e. more than 20 years earlier than we otherwise hear of Wipo. And there is nothing in the other pieces known as his which would lead us to connect the “Victimæ Paschali” with his name.

iii. Uses. This fine Sequence is simple, scriptural, good in rhythm, and embraces in itself various elements which account for its popularity and long extended use. Luther held it in high esteem, especially admiring the terse and vivid picture of the conflict between Death and Life in st. iii., and practically incorporated this stanza in his “Christ lag in Todesbanden” (see p. 224, l.). Its brevity and picturesqueness led to its speedy adoption in the Missals of various countries for use at the ordinary church services during the period of Easter.

Of the mss. from which the text as above is taken, f marks it simply as "a sequence on the Resurrection"; d assigns it to Easter Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday; and c to Thursday in Easter week; while a, b, and c do not indicate its use.

Neither the Sarum, York, nor Hereford Missals used it on Easter Sunday or on Low Sunday; the Sarum appointing it for Friday in Easter week, and for the 2nd and later Sundays up to the Ascension, and the Hereford and York for Wednesday in Easter week, as also on the 2nd and later Sundays. In the Angers Missal of 1489 it is however appointed for Easter Sunday and for Low Sunday, as well as for Tuesday and Wednesday in Easter week; in the Hamburg Missal of 1509 for Easter Sunday, for Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Easter week; in the Uzes Missal of 1495 for the B. V. M. at Eastertide, &c. Other Missals present various combinations or modifications of these uses, which need not be mentioned in detail. In the Roman Missal of 1570 it is one of the four sequences which were alone retained in that revision, and is appointed for use on Easter Sunday and daily up to Low Sunday inclusive, but not for the later Sundays. In the Paris Brev. of 1680 it forms part of the service for Vespers on Easter Sunday.

The dramatic possibilities of this Sequence also early attracted attention. It formed a striking feature in many of the Easter Miracle or Mystery Plays, but these we have not space to describe in detail.

(For its use there see e.g. F. J. Mone's Schauspiele des Mittelalters, Karlsruhe, 1846, pp. 17-27, 123, &c.; Reliquiae Antiquae, ed. T. Wright and J. O. Halliwell, vol. ii., 1843, p. 159; E. de Coussemaker's Dramas Liturgiques du Moyen Age, Rennes, 1860; G. Milchsack's Oster- und Passionsspiele, Wolfenbüttel, 1880, &c.)

It was also frequently employed at Matins on Easter Sunday, in the ceremony of the Easter Sepulchre, which was intercalated in the service between the Third Lesson and the "Te Deum." Various forms of this function are found both in England, and on the continent. Dr. Carl Lange, in his Die Lateinischen Osterfeiern, Munich, 1887, gives the results of his examination of 224 ms. and printed service books (Breviaries, Antiphonaries, Processionals, Troparies, &c.), ranging from the 10th to the 18th cent., and used in France, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, and England, all of which contain longer or shorter forms of this function, and 68 of which embody the "Victimae Paschali," either in full or beginning with "Dic nobis, Maria." The earliest forms in which he has found the "Victimae Paschali" included date from the 13th cent.

At p. 62 Lange prints from a 13th cent. Ritual for use at Chalons-sur-Marne. There, after the Third Responsory, two boys vested in white took their places one on the right and the other on the left of the high altar, to represent the angels at the Holy Sepulchre; followed by three deacons in white dalmatics, coming from the right side and standing before the altar, to represent the Three Marys. The Angels ask the Three Marys "Whom seek ye in the sepulchre?" and they answer "Jesus of Nazareth." The Angels, taking off the white altar-cloth, as representing the grave clothes, reply "He is not here." The Marys, turning to the choir, sing "Alleluia. The Lord has risen." Then, passing down towards the choir, the First Mary sings "Victimae" (st. i.), the Second sings "Agnus redemit" (st. ii.), and the Third sings "Mors et vita" (st. iii.). Then the succentor, coming to the first step of the altar, asks the First Mary "Dic nobis" (st. iv., ll. 1, 2), to which she replies "Sepulchrum" (st. iv., ll. 3, 4), the Second replies "Angelicos testes" (st. iv., ll. 5, 6), and the Third "Surrexit" (st. iv., ll. 7, 8). Then the succentor, turning to the choir, and pointing to the First Mary, sings "Credendum" (st. v., ll. 1-3), and the whole choir sing "Scimus" (st. v., ll. 4-6). In the meantime the Marys have returned to the vestry, and the ceremony ends by the bishop or the succentor beginning the "Te Deum." This is one of the many varieties in which the complete sequence is included. Even in the use of the "Victimae Paschali" there were great variations. So in a Nürnberg Antiphonary of the 13th cent. (Lange, p. 140), Mary Magdalene sings st. i.-iii., then Peter and John ask her "Dic nobis" (st. iv., ll. 1, 2), to which she replies "Sepulchrum" (st. iv., ll. 3-8). Then the choir sing "Credendum" (st. v., ll. 1-3), Mary alone the "Scimus" (st. v., ll. 4, 5), and the choir "Tu nobis" (st. v., l. 6). In the later service books the more dramatic portion of the sequence beginning with the "Dic nobis" is alone retained (e.g. in the Hereford Breviary of 1505). So in the Prag Breviary of 1572 (Lange, p. 122) the rubrics provide for a proper Easter sepulchre and for two Marys. There the Bishop asks Mary Magdalene "Dic nobis, Maria?" the choir singing "Quid vidisti in via?" and Mary replying "Sepulchrum" (st. iv., ll. 3-8), and the choir then singing "Credendum" (st. v., ll. 1-6). As Dr. Lange requires 171 large octavo pages to print and describe the variations of these service-books, we must beg our readers who wish for further information to refer to his interesting work.

As a final proof of the popularity of the "Victimae Paschali," we may mention some of the numerous imitations of it.

Thus M. Leon Gautier, in his 1853 ed. of Adam of St. Victor, prints two sequences, one on St. Victor ("Martyris Victoris laudes resonent Christiani Mortem ei") at ii. p. 94, and the other for the B. V. M. at Easter ("Virgini Mariae laudes intonent Christiani! Eva tristis") at ii. p. 348. Both of these are servile imitations of, and indeed borrow a good deal directly from, the "Victimae Paschali," and in his 1881 ed. of Adam of St. Victor (pp. 236, 245) Gautier says that in both cases the ascription to Adam is a mistake. Other imitations may be consulted in Kehrein, e.g. his Nos. 152, 177, 215, 232, 233, 525, 565.

The varying forms of the text, together with a full critical and theological commentary, will be found in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. ii., 1886, pp. 37-60. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Forth to the paschal Victim, Christians, bring Your sacrifice of praise. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 253; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 122. In a few collections only.

2. The holy Paschal work is wrought. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 72. It is mainly from a ms. tr. by Dr. Neale (so the Campbell mss.) It is in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. In Dr. Rorison's Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 76, it was altered to "The Paschal work is wrought."

3. Christ the Lord is ris'n to-day! Christians, haste your vows to pay. By Jane E. Leeson, in the Rev. H. Formby's Roman Catholic Hymns, 1851, No. 10, in 4 st. of 8 l., and signed in the Index "M. L." This tr. has passed into several collections in G. Britain and America, including H. A. & M., 1861, &c. Usually Miss Leeson's third stanza is omitted. Subsequently Miss Leeson retranslated the hymn in two forms, and included the same in her Par. and Hys., 1853, as:—

(1) Sacrifices of Thanksgiving. This is repeated in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864 and 1871 as "Tr. by J. E. L., 1854." We have here a slight error in the date, but a certain indication that the anonymous Paraphrases and Hys. of 1853 were by Miss Leeson.

(2) Sacrifice ye praises meet. This we have not found elsewhere.

4. To the Paschal Victim, Christians, bring the sacrifice of praise. By J. M. Neale, in the Hy. Noted, 1852, No. 28. This is a prose tr. In the Hymnary, 1872, it is given in a metrical form as "Unto the Paschal Victim bring." Line 3, "The Lamb, the sheep, &c."

5. To the Paschal Victim raise Gift and sacrifice of praise. By W. J. Blew, in his Hy. and Tune

Bk., 1852-55; and again in the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875.

6. Praise to the Paschal Victim bring. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's Hyl., 1867, No. 113, and signed "D. L."

7. Christians, to the Paschal Victim. Anonymous, in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

Other trs. are:—

1. Bring, all ye dear-bought nations, bring. W. K. Blount, 1670; the Divine Office, 1763; and O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

2. Let Christians grateful hymns of praise. F. C. Husenbeth, 1845, and Lyra Messianica, 1864.

3. The Paschal Victim calls for praise. J. R. Beste, 1849.

4. Christians, raise your grateful strain. E. C. Benedict, in his Hy. of Hildebert, 1867.

5. Unto the Paschal Victim bring. Line 3, "The Lamb redeemed, &c." C. B. Pearson, 1868.

6. Christians, come and lift your voices. J. Wallace, 1874.

7. Christians, your voices raise. Anon. in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Victis sibi cognomina. [Circumcision.]

This anonymous hymn was given in the Paris Brev., 1736, for the Feast of the Circumcision at 2nd Vespers, and beyond that date we have been unable to trace it. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 49; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. 'Tis for conquering kings to gain. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 55, and his Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 30. It is given in a great many hymn-books, sometimes in full, and at other times in an abbreviated form.

2. Tyrants their empty titles take. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 102. This is given in the Hymnary, 1872, as "Warrior kings their titles gain."

3. Conquering kings their titles take. This cento appeared in the trial ed. of H. A. & M., 1859, and the eds. of 1861 and 1875, and has passed into several other collections. It is composed of st. i., v., vi., by the Compilers, and st. ii., iii., iv. from J. Chandler as above, slightly altered. Three or four lines in st. v., vi. are also from Chandler. This cento is given in Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, as "Earthly kings their titles take," and in the Sarum Hyl., 1868, as, "Warrior kings fresh glory gain."

4. Let tyrants take their haughty names. By R. C. Singleton, in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. Let earthly tyrants title claim. I. Williams, 1839.

2. From conquered realms let tyrants claim. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

3. Let earthly monarchs titles gain. J. A. Johnston, 1852-61.

4. To earthly kings fresh names accrue. Lord Braye, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884. [J. J.]

Victorinus, Santolius. [Santeüil, Jean-Baptiste de.]

Vinet, Alexandre Rodolphe, b. June 12th, 1799, at Ouchy, near Lausanne. His father, a man of somewhat stern religion, was schoolmaster of the village, and held a small appointment in the Canton du Vaud, Alexandre was appointed Professor of the French language at the gymnasium of Basle, at the age of 20, and occupied this office, with some work for the University, for twenty years.

In 1819 he was called to the ministry, and married. At first opposed to the movement of the Réveil, a deeper knowledge of its principles and deep sympathy with the persecution of its leaders, drew him heartily to its side. His pen was fearlessly used in defence of toleration (Du respect des opinions, 1824), freedom of worship (Mémoire en faveur de la liberté des cultes, 1826), and the separation of Church and State (Essai sur la manifestation des convictions religieuses, et sur la separation de l'Église et de l'État, 1842). No work is more permanently valuable on the subject than the Essai, from the logical sequence of its conclusions from the premises laid down. In 1837 he had been recalled to Lausanne, to occupy the "chaire de théologie pratique," in the Academy. In the end of 1840, however, he resigned the chair, withdrawing at the same time from the national church. He took a prominent part in the preliminary committees for the formation of the "Église libre du Canton de Vaud"; but his proposals were largely modified in the final constitution of it, to his deep regret. He had been compelled to withdraw from the discussions by his failing health. His constitution, always delicate, gave way comparatively early, and he d. May 10, 1847. His name is tenderly cherished, not only for his efforts in the cause of religious freedom, but as an Evangelical Divine (Discours sur quelques sujets religieux, 1831-41, and Études Evangeliques, pub. after his death), and as a distinguished man of letters (see the portrait of him by Sainte Beuve). His articles in the Semteur touched wide and varied subjects of literature with rare delicacy, acuteness, and truth. The most celebrated of his literary works are: Études sur Blaise Pascal, and Études sur la littérature Française au dix-neuvième Siècle, pub. posthumously. The hymns pub. in the Chants Chrétiens are only a few out of the number he wrote. They reveal the inner depth of a nature that shrank from outward demonstration of religious emotion, and are valuable on this account, as well as for that refinement of meditation which places them so high among the Protestant hymns of France. (See p. 392, ii.) [H. L. B.]

Vintimille, Charles Gaspar Guillaume de Vintimille du Luc, was b. Nov. 15, 1655. He was designated Bishop of Marseilles in 1684, but was not consecrated as such till 1692. In 1710 he was translated to the see of Aix (Bouches du Rhône), and in 1729 to that of Paris. He d. March 13, 1746. Under his auspices appeared the new Paris Breviary of 1736 (in which the ancient hymns of the Church were in great measure replaced by those of the Santeüils, Coffin, and other recent French writers); the new Paris Missal of 1738; and the new Paris Processional of 1740; all of which were speedily adopted in many other French dioceses. That Vintimille was himself a hymnwriter seems decidedly doubtful. The hymn "O Christe qui noster poli" (p. 825, i.) has sometimes been ascribed to him, but neither in the Chuniac Brev. of 1686 nor in the Paris Brev. of 1736 is it in any way marked as his. [J. M.]

Virgin born, we bow before Thee.

Bp. R. Heber. [Lent.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 54, in 4 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 3rd S. in Lent. As given in the People's H., 1867, No. 373, the lines "Mary, Mother meek and mild"; are altered to "Mary, Maid and Mother mild." It is otherwise unchanged. [J. J.]

Virginis castae virginis summae decus praeinentes. [Common of Virgins.] Morel, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1868, p. 180, gives a part of this sequence with the note, "This is only the beginning of a rambling and somewhat barbarous sequence in the ms. collection of P. Brander [St. Gall ms., No. 546, written in 1507], where it bears the title 'a prolix sequence of some monk of St. Gall.'" Neale, in his Sequentiae, 1852, p. 237, ascribes it to Godescalcus or Gottschalk (d. 1050); but the earliest source he quotes is the Tournay Missal of 1540, and there does not seem to be any reason for accepting this ascription, which is evidently a conjecture. The earliest text known is in the St. Gall ms., No. 383, of the 13th or 14th cent. The printed text is also in Daniel, v. p. 344, and Kehrein, No. 475. Tr. as "To-day let Christian maidens." In the People's H., 1867, No. 221, and signed "S. M." [i.e. Sister Marion]. [J. M.]

Virginis Proles, Opifexque matris. [Common of Virgins.] This is found in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 67 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 110; Harl. 2961, f. 249 b; Add. 30851, f. 155); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durlham (B. iii. 32, f. 40b); and in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi Coll., Cambridge (391, p. 274), and the Bern ms. 455 of the 10th cent. It is in two mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387 and 413. Also in the Mozarabic, Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Sarum use being for one virgin and martyr at 1st Vespers and at Matins. Daniel, i. No. 238, gives the original, and the form in the Roman Breviary, 1632, citing it at iv. pp. 140, 368, as in a 9th cent. ms. at Bern, a 10th cent. Rheinau ms., &c. The printed text is also in Wackernagel, i. No. 138; G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms., &c. [J. M.]

4. O Virgin's Offspring, Who Thy Mother didst create. J. Wallace. 1874.

The foregoing trs. are of the text for a "Virgin and Martyr." There are also trs. of an arrangement of the text for a "Virgin, but not a Martyr." These include one in the Primer, 1706, and a second by J. Wallace, 1874, each beginning with the same first line as above. In the Rom. Brev., st. viii., of the Latin text, Hujus oratus Deus alme nobis, is given, together with a doxology, for "Holy Women." This is tr. : (1) "O God of bountie, at thy saints intreating," in the Primer, 1599; (2) "Permit, great God, this Saint with Pray'rs may free," in the Primer, 1706; and (3) "O God, for this Thy servant's sake, we humbly Thee implore," by J. Wallace, 1874. In the Marquess of Bute's Roman Breviary into English, 1879, Wallace's tr. is given as "When she pleads for us at her sweet petition," &c. [J. J.]

Virgo vernans velut rosa, Agni sponsa speciosa. [St. Winifred.] This is the Sequence on St. Winifred of Wales, in the Sarum Missal, Venice, 1494, f. 255. It does not appear to be in any other ed. of the Sarum Missal, nor to have been received into other English or Continental Missals. It will be found in a note at col. 960 of the Burnt-Island reprint of the Sarum Missal, 1861. Tr. as :—

More fair than all the vernal flowers. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 337; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 202. It was repeated in Dr. Rawes's Hys. for the Year, 1867, &c. [J. M.]

Vischer, Christoph, s. of Jakob Vischer or Fischer, burgess at Joachimsthal, in Bohemia, was b. at Joachimsthal in 1520. He matriculated at the University of Wittenberg in Nov. 1540 (M.A. 1544), and was ordained at Wittenberg on Feb. 10, 1544, as pastor and probst at Jüterbogk, near Wittenberg. He was then appointed (in 1552) cathedral preacher and superintendent at Schmalkalden; in 1571 pastor and general superintendent at Meiningen; in 1574 court preacher and assistant superintendent at Celle (Zelle); and in 1577 chief pastor of St. Martin's Church at Halberstadt. He returned to Celle in 1583, as general superintendent of Lüneburg, and d. at Celle in October, 1597 (Koch, ii. 265; Wetzell, i. p. 235, and A. H., i. pt. v. p. 38; Rotermund's Gelehrte Hannover, vol. ii., 1823, p. 40; J. K. F. Schlegel's Kirchen- und Reformations-Geschichte Hannover, vol. ii., 1829, pp. 399-402; ms. from Dr. Ebeling, Celle, &c.)

Vischer was a somewhat voluminous writer. Rotermund gives the titles of 29 works by him. Only one hymn is known as his, viz. :—

Wir danken dir, Herr Jesu Christ, Dass du für uns gestorben bist. Passiontide. This is included in pt. ii. of the Dresden G. B., 1597 (thence in Wackernagel, v. p. 248), marked as by M. C. F., and in 4 st. of 4 l., viz. st. i. as above, and

ii. Und bitten dich, war Mensch und Gott.

iii. Behält uns auch für Sünd und Schand.

iv. Und draus schöpfen die Zuversicht.

The only portion we have been able to find in any work of Vischer's is st. ii. This occurs in his Christliche und einseitige Erklärung der gnadenreichen Historien des Leydens und Sterbens hochtörslicher Aufferstehung und siegreicher Honefart unsers lieben Herrn Jesu Christi, auch der Sendung des Heiligen Geistes, &c., Schmalkalden, 1585 [Brit. Mus.], and is given there in Sermo x. of those on the Resurrection (Aufferstehung) as follows :—

"Solche Seufftzer erwecket der heilige Geist, stönet in uns das wir beten.

"Ach Herr Christe, war Mensch und Gott, Durch dein heilig Fünff Wunden rot,
Erlös mich von dem ewigen Tod,
Und tröst mich in meiner letzten Not."

The same stanza is found in the ed. Schmalkalden, 1568 [Berlin Library]. The sermons on the Auferstehung seem to have appeared at Frankfurt am Main in 1564 (preface 1562, title 1563, colophon 1564). So the copy in the Vatican Library at Rome). Mitzell, No. 344, prints the four stanza form from the text given by J. C. Olearius, Jena, 1710, as a reprint of the original, and as entitled "A children's hymn composed by M. Christoph Vischer for the Christian community at Schmalkalden, upon the strengthening uses of the bitter sufferings and death of Christ Jesus our Saviour." It is also in the Uvo. L. S., 1851, No. 122. The trs. are:—

1. We bless Thee, Jesus Christ our Lord; For ever be Thy name adored. This is a good and full tr. by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 622 in his Hymn. Christ., 1863.

2. With thanks we glory in Thy Cross. This is No. 331 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. [J. M.]

Vital Spark of heavenly flame. A. Pope. [The Soul Immortal.] In the Spectator for Nov. 10, 1712, Steele gives a letter sent to him by Pope on the words spoken by Hadrian on his death-bed. This letter, in The Works of Alexander Pope, Esq. . . . Printed verbatim from the Octavo edition of Mr. Warburton. London, C. Bathurst, 1788. Vol. v., p. 185, is dated Nov. 7, 1712, and begins:—

"I was the other day in company with five or six men of some learning; where chancing to mention the famous verses which the Emperor Adrian spoke on his death-bed, they were all agreed that 'twas a piece of gaiety unworthy of that prince in those circumstances. I could not but differ from this opinion: methinks it was by no means gay, but a very serious soliloquy to his soul at the point of his departure; in which sense I naturally took the verses at my first reading them, when I was very young, and before I knew what interpretation the world generally put upon them.

"Animula vagula, blandula,
Hospes comesque corporis,
Quæ nunc abibis in loca?
Pallidula, rigida, nudula,
Nec (ut soles) dabis joca?"

The letter then proceeds with a prose translation of these lines, and a vindication of the same. At the foot of the letter, and after his signature, Pope added the following metrical rendering:—

"ADRIANI MORIENTIS AD ANIMAM TRANSLATED.

"Ah fleeting Spirit! wand'ring fire,
That long hast warm'd my tender breast,
Must thou no more this frame inspire?
No more a pleasing cheerful guest?

"Whither, ah whither art thou flying?
To what dark, undiscover'd shore?
Thou seem'st all trembling, shiv'ring, dying,
And Wit and Humour are no more."

In the Spectator, Nov. 10, 1712, Steele gives this letter verbatim, with the exception of the metrical version at the end. On Nov. 29, 1712, Pope wrote to Steele expressing regret that as this letter was given in his name he had not an opportunity of setting forth his ideas more fully and accurately. This letter did not appear in the Spectator. On Dec. 4, 1712, Steele wrote to Pope:—

"This is to desire of you that you would please to make an ode as of a cheerful dying spirit, that is to say, the Emperor Adrian's 'Animula vagula' put into two or three stanzas for music. If you comply with this, and send me word so, you will very particularly oblige. Yours, &c." (Works, v. p. 189.)

To this Pope gave answer in the following letter, which is undated in his Works, vol. v. p. 190, but was probably sent within a post or two after the receipt of Steele's communication:—

"I do not send you word I will do, but have already done the thing you desire of me. You have it (as Cowley calls it) just warm from the brain. It came to me the first moment I waked this morning: yet, you'll see, it was not so absolutely inspiration, but that I had in my head not only the verses of Adrian, but the fine fragment of Sappho, &c.

"The dying Christian to his Soul,
"ODE.

I.

"Vital spark of heav'nly flame!
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame;
Trembling, hoping, ling'ring, flying,
Oh the pain, the bliss of dying!
Cease, fond nature, cease thy strife,
And let me languish into life.

II.

Hark! they whisper; angels say,
Sister spirit, come away!
What is this absorbs me quite,
Steals my senses, shuts my sight,
Drowns my spirits, draws my breath?
Tell me, my soul, can this be death?

III.

"The world recedes; it disappears!
Heav'n opens on my eyes! my ears
With sounds seraphic ring:
Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!
O Grave! where is thy victory?
O Death! where is thy sting?"

(Works, v. p. 190.)

What Steele did with this ode we cannot say. It was certainly not inserted in the Spectator, as is generally supposed. It was included in various editions of Pope's Works, and was taken from thence for use in the hymnals. Collyer included it in his Coll., 1812, No. 627, and since then it has been repeated in numerous hymn-books. In the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, J. Conder gave Pope's original text as No. 612, and a rewritten form of the same, beginning with the same first line, as No. 613. This rewritten form was repeated in his Choir and Oratory, 1837, p. 246, and in his posthumous Hymns of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 169.

The "fine fragment of Sappho" referred to in Pope's letter, formed the subject of Addison's article in the Spectator of Thursday, Nov. 22, 1711. Addison gives in his article a translation in Latin by Catullus, another in French by Boileau, and a third in English by Amrose Phillips. It was doubtless the original, and to these translations that Pope referred in his letter to Steele quoted above. As pointed out by R. Carruthers in his edition of Pope's Poetical Works, 1853, vol. ii., p. 178; and by Miller in his Singers and Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 149, Thomas Flatman's translation of the "Animula vagula, blandula," may have influenced Pope in his "Vital spark," but we are inclined to think that Addison's article in the Spectator, already referred to, had very much more to do with it than anything that Flatman had done.

Vokes, Mrs. A long correspondence has failed to elicit any information concerning this hymn-writer beyond the facts that the earliest work in which her hymns are found is a Sel. of Missionary and Devotional Hys., edited by the Rev. J. Griffin, a Congregational minister at Portsea, and pub. in 1797. Several of these were repeated in J. Dobell's New Sel. of Seven Hundred Evangelical Hys., &c., 1806. There are also 7 of her hymns, all with the signature "Mrs. Vokes," in W. B. Collyer's Coll., 1812. Of her hymns the following, all pub. in 1797, are still in C. U. :—

1. Behold the expected time draws near. Missions.
2. Behold the heathen waits to know. Missions. This begins with st. iii. of No. 1.
3. Proud Babylon yet waits her doom. Fall of Babylon predicted.
4. Ye messengers of Christ. Missions. [J. J.]

Vom Himmel hoch da komm ich her. M. Luther. [Christmas.] This beautiful Christmas hymn first appeared in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1535, in 15 st. of 4 l.; and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 23. Also in Schirck's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 12, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 55, &c. In Klug's G. B., 1543, it is entitled "A Children's Hymn for Christmas Eve on the child Jesus, taken from the Second Chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke." It has sometimes been said to be derived, at least in part, from the Latin. To the "Parvulus nobis nascitur" its resemblance is very slight; and this Latin hymn has not been traced earlier than the 1579 ed. of Lucas Lossius's Psalmodia (1st ed. 1553). To the "Nuntium vobis fero de supernis" [Brit. Mus. ms. of the 12th cent., Harl. 2928 f. 114], it has no relationship whatever. Of the origin of the German hymn, Laumann, in Koch, viii. 21, thus speaks:—

"Luther was accustomed every year to prepare for his family a happy Christmas Eve's entertainment . . . and for this festival of his children he wrote this Christmas hymn. Its opening lines are modelled on a song, 'Aus fremden Landen komm ich her'; and throughout he successfully catches the ring of the popular sacred song. It is said that Luther celebrated the festival in his own house in this original fashion. By his orders the first seven verses of this hymn were sung by a man dressed as an angel, whom the children greeted with the eighth and following verses."

We may add that Luther took the first stanza almost entirely from the song, which begins:—

"Ich komm aus fremden Landen her,
Und bring euch viel der neuen Mähr,
Der neuen Mähr bring ich so viel, Mehr denn ich euch hier sagen will."

From the rest of the song Luther did not borrow anything.

In Klug's G. B., 1535, it is set to the melody of "Aus fremden Landen," or rather, as F. M. Böhme, in his Alteutsches Liederbuch, 1871, No. 271, gives it "Ich komm aus fremden Landen her." In the Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, V. Schumann, 1539, this was superseded by the beautiful melody still in use, which is sometimes ascribed to Luther, and is set to this hymn in the C. B. for England, 1863 (set also to No. 57 in H. A. & M., 1875). Tr. as:—

1. From highest heaven good news I bring. By A. T. Russell, as No. 17 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848. There st. i. is condensed from i., ii.; and st. ii.—v. are from iii., iv., viii., xv. In his own Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 43, Mr. Russell omitted the tr. of st. xv. and added a tr. of st. vii.

2. From yonder world I come to earth. In full, by Dr. J. Hunt in his Spir. Songs of Martin Luther, 1853, p. 30. From this st. vi.—ix., xiii., xiv., beginning "Oh! let us all be glad to-day," were included in the Manchester S. S. H. Bk., 1855, the Bk. of Praise for Children, 1881, and the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887.

3. From heaven above to earth I come. This is a good and full tr., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1855, p. 12, and in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 30. Repeated in full in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. Varying centos, beginning with st. vii., "Give heed, my heart, lift up thine eyes," are in Bp. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hys., 1858, and his Hyl. Comp., 1876, in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1879, and others.

4. Good news from heaven the angels bring. This is No. 131 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, in 7 st. (answering to st. i., iii., iv., viii., x., xiii., xv.), of which st. i.—iv., vii. are altered from A. T. Russell, and v., vi. from Miss Winkworth. Repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 54. St. i.—iii., v., vi., of this form are in the Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "I come from heav'n to tell." In the Guide and Godlie Ballates, ed. 1568, f. 26 (1868, p. 43). Rewritten by H. R. Bramley, as No. 66 in the Bramley-Stainer Christmas Carols, New and Old, beginning "From highest heaven I come to tell." (2) "I come from heaven, to declare," as No. 300 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. From this st. vii., viii., x., xiii. were given in the Bible H. Bk., 1845, beginning "Awake, my heart, my soul, my eyes." (3) "To-day we celebrate the birth," of st. iv., vii., viii., xiii. (partly founded on the 1754 trs.), as No. 50 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 47). (4) "I come, I come! from yon celestial clime." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 7. (5) "Little children, all draw near." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 3. (6) "From highest heaven, on joyous wing." By R. Massie, 1854, p. 3. (7) "From heaven high I wing my flight." By Dr. H. W. Dulcken, in his Bk. of German Songs, 1856, p. 264. (8) "From heaven high I've wandered forth." By Dr. H. W. Dulcken in his Golden Harp, 1864, p. 137. (9) "From heaven on high I come to you." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 255; altered in his Ecclesi., 1876, p. 45. (10) "From heav'n on high to earth I come." In the Ch. of England Magazine, 1872, p. 44. (11) "From heaven so high I come to you." By the Rev. J. G. Tasker, in the Wes. Meth. Magazine, Dec., 1883.

We may note that in J. C. Jacob's Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 13, there is a hymn in 5 st., beginning "He reigns, the Lord our Saviour reigns," which is set to the melody of 1539. It is not however a tr. from Luther, but is merely a selection of stanzas from Isaac Watts's version of Ps. xcvi.

[J. M.]

Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schaar. M. Luther. [Christmas.] This is founded on St. Luke ii. 10, 11, and St. Matt. ii. 6; and was apparently written in 1543, and meant for use when his other Christmas hymn ("Vom Himmel hoch") was thought to be too long. It was 1st pub. in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1543, in 6 st. of 4 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 28. Also in Schirck's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 15, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851. Tr. as:—

1. From yon ethereal heavens. This is a paraphrase, in 54 lines, by Miss Fry, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 20. From this a cento in 5 st. of s.m., recast and beginning, "Let all our hearts rejoice," is No. 5 in Whittemore's Supp. to All H. Bks., 1860.

2. To shepherds they watched by night. In full, by R. Massie in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 7. Included in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 68.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "A band of angels from the sky," as No. 145 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Sing! sing! ye ransomed mortals, sing." By Sir John Bowring in his Hymns, 1825, No. 81. (3) "The humble shepherds, tending." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 7 (1847, p. 31). (4) "From heaven there came an angel throng." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 33. (5) "From heaven angel hosts did fly." By Miss Manington, 1864, p. 32. (6) "The angels came down in their cohorts so bright." By S. Garratt in his Hys. & Trs., 1867, p. 37. (7) "From heaven the angel-troop came near." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 256; altered in his Eclogics, 1876, p. 48. [J. M.]

Vom Himmel kommt der starke Held. [Christmas.] This hymn appears in the Neues Hildburghäusisches G. B., 1807 (ed. 1808, No. 170), in 10 st. of 4 l. The two opening lines, but not much more, are taken from a hymn by Dr. Johann Christoph Stockhausen [b. October 20, 1725, at Gladenbach, Hesse; became in 1769 Lutheran superintendent at Hanau; d. at Hanau, Sept. 4, 1784], found in the Neue Hanau Münzerbergsche G. B., 1779, and included in the Württemberg G. B., 1791, in 6 st. The rest is a paraphrase, apparently by J. C. Wagner (q.v.), of the same passage of Holy Scripture as that used by Luther in his "Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schaar," but it has very little resemblance to Luther. The trs. from the text of Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 118, in 9 st., are:—

(1) "The mighty Saviour comes from heaven." By Miss Cox, 1841, p. 13. (2) "From Heaven comes the mighty Lord." By Lady E. Fortescue, 1843. [J. M.]

Vos ante Christi tempora. C. Coffin [Septuagesima.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736, for the Sundays from Septuagesima to Lent at Vespers; and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 48. The text is given in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 58; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and in L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. O ye who followed Christ in love. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 64, and his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 35. In 1852 it was given in an altered form (but opening with Chandler's first line) in Murray's Hymnal, No. 32. Murray's alterations were repeated in great part in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and in the 1st ed., 1861, where the tr. began:—

2. How blest were they who walked in love. In this rendering additional changes were made by the Compilers of H. A. & M., thus rendering it a cento by Chandler, Murray, and the Compilers of H. A. & M. This was repeated in a few collections, but omitted from the 1875 ed. of H. A. & M. In Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, No. 430, the opening line is "O ye who follow Christ in love," but the hymn as a whole is from Murray and H. A. & M. The Hymnary, 1872, is the H. A. & M. text with additional alterations.

3. Ye patriarchs all, and ancient sires. This, in Kennedy, 1863, No. 434, is a cento of which st. ii. ll. 1-4 are from Chandler; st. v., vi. from Murray's Hyl., 1852, the doxology from Bp. Ken, and the rest by the editor, partly from J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1856.

Other trs. are:—

1. Ye patriarchal saints and sires. I. Williams, 1839.

2. Ye patriarchs and ancient sires. J. A. Johnston, 1856.

3. O ye, ere Christ had sojourned here. J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Vos O virginei cum citharis chori. [Common of Virgins.] An anonymous hymn at 1st Vespers on the Feast of a Virgin not a Martyr, in the Sens Brev., 1726, and the Paris Brev., 1736. Also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Ye Virgin company. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, 1835 (vol. viii. p. 518), and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 319.

2. Ye virgin choirs rejoice. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, Pt. ii., 1866, p. 43, and with alterations in the Hymner, 1882.

3. Chant your hymns, ye choirs of Virgins. By T. I. Ball, in the 1873 Appx. to the H. Noted.

4. Ye Virgin choirs, with harps of gold. By R. F. Littledale, in the S. Margaret's Hymnal (East Grinstead), 1875. [J. J.]

Vox clara ecce intonat. [Advent.] This hymn has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, but is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors. It is certainly ancient, possibly even of the 5th cent. It is suggested by Rom. xiii. 11 (the Epistle for the 1st S. in Advent), and St. Luke xxi. 25 (the Gospel for the 2nd S. in Advent in Anglican use, for the 1st S. in modern Roman use). It is an excellent summary of the leading ideas of Advent, and well fitted for use throughout the season. Daniel, i. No. 73, gives the ancient text, in 4 st. of 4 l. (together with the recast of the Roman Breviary of 1632, which begins En clara vox redarguit), and at iv. p. 143 cites it as in a Rheinox ms. of the 11th cent. It is also in G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. In the use of Surum it was assigned to Lauds on the 1st S. in Advent, and daily up to Christmas Eve. Also in the York, Aberdeen, ancient Roman (Venice, 1478), and other Breviaries. In the Mozarabic Breviary of 1502 it is the hymn at Vespers on Wednesday and Friday in the first and third weeks in Advent (see Migne's PP. Lat., lxxxvi. cols. 65, 85, 888). [W. A. S.]

It is found in five mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum, viz. three of the Ancient English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 29 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 32; Harl. 2961, f. 225 b); and two of the ancient Spanish Church (Add. 30,848, f. 6 b; Add. 30,851, f. 112). Also in an 11th cent. ms. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 238); in the St. Gall ms., No. 413, of the 11th cent., &c. In the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 37, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 11). The ancient text is also in Wackernagel i., No. 56; Hymn. Sarisb., 1851, p. 6; and Bässler, No. 33; the text of the Roman Breviary of 1632 in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. [J. M.]

Both forms of this hymn have been tr. into English as follows:—

i. Vox clara, ecce, intonat.

1. In music, lo, yon orb appears to rise. Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.

2. Lo! what a thrilling voice sounds forth. J. D. Chambers, 1852.

3. Hark, the clear voice, whose thrilling tone. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

4. Hark! what a thrilling voice invades. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

5. Hark, a clear-toned voice, as thunder. J. W. Hewett, 1859.

6. Give ear! the voice rings clear and true. J. Keble, 1869.

7. Hark to the voice whose thrilling tone. In the Hymner, 1882. Largely indebted to W. J. Blew, as above.

8. Clear rings a voice; it hides the world. Lord Braye, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

ii. En clara vox redarguit.

1. Hark, a joyful voice is thrilling. By Card. Newman, in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 110, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 9. In O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, and others.

2. Hark, an awful voice is sounding. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 46, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 26. It is in a large number of hymn-books. In Kennedy, 1863, it is given in a recast form as "Voice of mercy, voice of terror."

3. Hark, a gladsome voice is thrilling. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 1. It is based upon Card. Newman's tr. as above.

4. Hark to the voice that loudly cries. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hyl., 1852, 1856, 1861.

5. Hark, a thrilling voice is sounding. This, which appeared in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, No. 2, is an altered form of Caswall's tr. as above. It was repeated with variations in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, and many others. The text in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, beginning with same line as H. A. & M., is a nearer approach to the original than that collection. Thring's text, also beginning with the same line, is Caswall with an adaptation of the best emendations of various editors.

6. Voice of mercy, voice of terror. By B. H. Kennedy, in his Hymno. Christiana, 1863, No. 47, is a recast of E. Caswall's tr. as above.

7. Hark, a trumpet voice of warning. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

8. Hark, the Baptist's voice is sounding. In the Hymnary, 1872, is an altered version of Caswall's tr. as above.

Other trs. are:—

1. A heavenly Voice and early Ray. Primer, 1706.
2. Hark, a voice of warning, hark. Ep. R. Mani. 1837.
3. Lo, loudly hath the voice proclaimed. A. J. B. Hope. 1844.
4. Hark! how that voice swells clearly out. Ep. J. Williams. 1845.
5. Hark, louder through surrounding gloom. W. Palmer. 1845.
6. What thrilling voice through midnight peals. W. J. Copeland. 1848.
7. Behold, a chiding voice and clear. F. Trappes. 1865.
8. Hark, hark, the voice of chanticleer. J. Wallace. 1871. [J. J.]

Vox clarescat, mens purgetur. [Trinity Sunday.] Dr. Neale in his Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 67, gives this from the Saintes Missal of 1491, where it occurs in the Votive Mass for the Holy Trinity. Neale's text is repeated by Daniel, v. p. 207, and Kehrein, No. 149. Du Meril, in his Poésies Populaires Lat. du Moyen Age, 1847, p. 305, prints it from a ms. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 5132), of the beginning of the 13th cent. Tr. as:—

With thanks renew'd, and cleansed from guilt of sin. By D. T. Morgan, in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875; and again in his Hys. and Other Poetry of the Latin Church. 1880. [J. M.]

Vox sonora nostri chori. Adam of St. Victor? [St. Catherine.] A graceful sequence relating the history of St. Catherine of Alexandria, to be used on her festival, Nov. 25. Gautier, in his 1858 ed. of Adam's Oeuvres Poétiques, vol. ii., p. 320, gives it among the genuine proses of Adam, but in his ed. 1881, p. 245, he ranks it as doubtful for rhythmical reasons, and so does not print the text, but cites it as in a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat., Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and other sources. Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 309), the Saintes 1491; the Sens 1529, and others. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 205; Daniel, v. p. 324; Kehrein, No. 812; and D. S. Wrangham's Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881. Tr. as:—

1. Let our choir with voice sonorous. By R. F. Littledale, in the Church Times, Nov. 19, 1864, in 12 st., and again in an altered form in the People's H., 1867, No. 304.

2. Loud and true our full-voic'd chorus. J. M. Neale, in the St. Margaret's Hyl. (East Grinstead), 1875.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come, let our choir with full accord. D. T. Morgan. 1871 and 1880.
2. Let our chorus' voice sonorous. D. S. Wrangham. 1881. [J. M.]

Wach auf, mein Herz! und singe. P. Gerhardt. [Morning.] Included in the 3rd ed., 1648, of Crüger's Præcis, as No. 1, in 10 st. of 4 l. Thence in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 99, and Bachmann's ed., No. 1. Repeated in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 1, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1132. It is one of the finest and most popular of German morning hymns, and soon passed into universal use, st. viii. being a special favourite. Tr. as:—

My Soul, awake and tender. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1720, p. 33 (1722, p. 104), repeated as No. 477 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, No. 744 (1886, Nos. 1158, 1159), begins "My soul awake and render," st. i., ii., iv., v. being from i.; v. ll. 3, 4; vi. ll. 1, 2; x.; viii.; while st. iii. ("Bless me this day, Lord Jesus," 1886, No. 1159), is st. iii. of No. 189, in pt. i. of the 1754 (a tr. by J. Gambold from the early Greek hymn, καθ' ἐκδόστην ἡμέραν εὐλόγησά με, p. 1125, i.). From this 1789 text st. i., iii., ll. 1, 2; iv. ll. 3, 4, were given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833.

Other trs. are: (1) "Thy Thanks, my Soul, be raising," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 28. (2) "Wake, my heart, and sing His praises," by E. Massie, 1867. (3) "Awake, my heart, be singing," by J. Kelly, 1867. (4) "Wake up, my heart, elater," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870. [J. M.]

Wach' auf, wach' auf, du sich're Welt. J. Rist. [Second Advent.] 1st pub. in his Neuer Himmlischer Lieder sonderbahres Buch, Lüneburg, 1651, p. 248, in 13 st. of 8 l., entitled, "True hearted Exhortation and Warning to the careless world that with genuine repentance she may prepare and secure herself against the near approaching Last Day." Founded on the Gospel for the 2nd S. in Advent (St. Luke xxi. 25-36), and is one of the finest of Rist's hymns. Repeated in Frey-linghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 14 (8 st.); and in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 493 (Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 426), omitting st. ii.-v. Tr. as:—

1. Awake, thou careless world, awake! The day shall, &c. By A. T. Russell, in 3 st. The tr. of st. i. appeared as No. 108 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848; the trs. of st. vii., xiii., were added in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 39.

2. Awake, thou careless world, awake! The final day, &c. A good tr. of st. i., vii., xii., vi., ix., xi., xiii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1853, p. 4.

From this the trs. of st. vi., ix., xiii., altered and beginning, "The Lord in love delayeth long," were included as No. 113 in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864. A cento in 5 st. of L.M. from the trs. of vii., ix., xiii., beginning, "Lo, He, on whom all of power is laid," is in H. L. Hastings's Hymnal, 1830.

For her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 27; Miss Winkworth rewrote the tr. to the original metre, beginning "Awake, thou careless world, awake! That final Judgment day," omitting the trs. of st. vii., xi.

Other trs. are: (1) "The last of days will come indeed," by Miss Cox, 1841, p. 9, being st. i., vii., xii., vi. In her ed. 1864, p. 33, she added a second part, "Lift up, ye saints, your joyful heads," being st. ix., xi., xiii. (2) "Awake! awake! from careless ease," by Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 1. [J. M.]

Wackernagel, Carl Eduard Philipp, D.D., was b. at Berlin, June 28, 1800. He studied and graduated Ph. D. at the University of Berlin. In 1829 he became a master in the technical school (Gewerbeschule) at Berlin, and in 1839 master in a private school at Stetten in Württemberg. He was then (1845) appointed professor in the Realgymnasium at Wiesbaden, and in 1849 director of the Real-schule at Elberfeld. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Breslau in 1861, and in the same year retired to Dresden, where he d. June 20, 1877 (Herzog's Real Encyclopädie, xvi. 588; Dr. Ludwig Schulze's Philipp Wackernagel, Leipzig, 1879, &c.).

Wackernagel was an enthusiastic and successful teacher, and the author of various works on mathematics, on crystallography, on German literature, &c. His claim to notice here is through his editions of German hymn-writers (P. Gerhard, 1843; M. Luther, 1848; J. Heermann, 1856); his work on Dutch Hymnody (Beiträge zur niederländischen Hymnologie, Frankfurt, 1867), but more especially through his works on German hymnody up to 1600. His Deutsche Kirchenlied first appeared at Stuttgart in 1841, and was supplemented by his Bibliographie zur Geschichte des deutschen Kirchenliedes im xvi. Jahrhundert, Frankfurt am Main, 1855, in which the original works were described. The permanent edition appeared in 5 vols., at Leipzig, 1864-77, as Das deutsche Kirchenlied von der ältesten Zeit bis zu Anfang des xvii. Jahrhunderts, the preface to the last volume being all that he did not live to complete. Volume i. contains 656 Latin hymns, and a Supplement to the Bibliographie of 1855; ii. (1867) has 1443 pieces, which are (14 excepted) by German writers prior to the Reformation; iii. (1870) has 1487 pieces of the Reformation period; iv. (1874) has 1587 pieces, all (3 excepted) by German writers from 1554 to 1584; and v. has 1605 pieces by German writers from 1578 to 1603. This work is a monument of care and research, and is indispensable to the student of early German hymnody. The present writer has gladly availed himself of it, and it is only in a very few cases that he has been able to supplement or correct its results.

Wackernagel had a share in editing the Elberfeld G. B. of 1857. He was also one of the original commission appointed to prepare the so-called Eisenach Conference G. B. (see Koch, vii. 112. It was meant to be a general hymn-book for use by the Lutherans over all Germany), but disagreeing with the critical canons of his colleagues, soon left. He afterwards pub. a small collection of standard German hymns, entitled Kleines Gesangbuch geistlicher Lieder für Kirche, Schule und Haus, Stuttgart, 1860, the greatest merit of which was the beauty of its type. [J. M.]

Wake the song, O Zion's daughter. [Palm Sunday.] This hymn appeared in E. W. Eddis's Irvingite Hymns for the Use of the Churches, in 1864, and is therein accredited to "J. E. L.," i.e. Jane E. Leeson. It is however a curious cento and is thus composed:—

St. i. Original, by Miss Leeson, based on Dr. Neale's tr. of "Gloria, laus, et honor," in the Hymnal Noted.
St. ii. Composed of st. iv. v. of the same tr. by Dr. Neale, with two or three verbal alterations.
St. iii. ll. 1-4. Altered from a doxology in the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll., 1780, No. 294; ll. 5, 6 from Dr. Neale, as above; and ll. 7-9 added by Miss Leeson.

This cento is of more than usual excellence, and might be used with advantage. [J. J.]

Wakefield, John. [Staffordshire Hymn-books.]

Walker, George, F.R.S., b. 1735, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, educated by his uncle, Thomas Walker, dissenting minister at Durham, whom, after further study at Dr. Rotherham's academy at Kendal, and at Edinburgh and Glasgow, he succeeded in the pulpit there. From Durham Walker removed to Great Yarmouth, and thence in 1772 to the Warrington Academy. While there he pub. The Doctrine of the Sphere. This and his Treatise on Conic Sections are the chief of his mathematical works. From 1774 to 1798 he was minister at the High Pavement Chapel, Nottingham, and took a prominent part in the public life of the town. His sermons on political events of the time attracted widespread attention, as did his tract The Dissenters' Plea; or, an appeal of the Dissenters to the Justice, Honour, and Religion of the Kingdom against the Test Laws. This and other essays on religious and philosophical questions were republished after his death in two volumes of Essays on Various Subjects, with a Memoir, 1809. Four volumes of Sermons on Various Subjects were also published (1808), the first two volumes having first appeared in 1790, during his Nottingham ministry. In 1798 he removed to Manchester, as Professor of Theology in the recently founded Manchester Academy and also became president of the Philosophical and Literary Society. His health giving way he spent the last months of his life in the neighbourhood of Liverpool, and d. in 1807, while on a visit to London. He was buried in Bunhill-fields. For his Nottingham congregation Walker pub.

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Public Worship, unmix'd with the disputed doctrines of any sect. Warrington, Printed by W. Eyres, for the Editor. 1788.

This is one of the chief of the collections made for congregations of Presbyterians in the period of their transition towards Unitarianism. Of the 387 psalms and hymns 141 are taken from Watts, and of the rest the names of 24 authors are given, including T. Scott, Barbauld and Kippis. Walker himself, holding a "tempered Arianism," freely altered the hymns adopted, both for doctrinal reasons, and "to improve the style" of the compositions. He also contributed hymns of his own. Of these the best known are:—

1. Enough of life's vain scene I've trod.
2. Though many faults do me reprove.
- Part of "How foolish to oppose to God."
3. The earth proclaims its Lord. [V. D. D.]

Walker, George, D.D., s. of Arthur Walker, a farmer at Hillton of Pitbladdo, near Cupar, Fife, was b. at Hillton, Jan. 6, 1783. He studied at the Universities of St. Andrews and Edinburgh; and after being licensed by the Presbytery of Cupar, in 1806, was appointed in 1813 parish minister of Kinnell, near Arbroath. In 1867 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of Edinburgh. He d. at Kinnell on Sept. 11, 1868. He was a scholarly and devout man, with great taste and modest and retiring manners. He pub. :—

(1) Hymns translated or imitated from the German: Loud., Partridge & Co., 1860. This contains 89 hymns from the German, with a tr. of the "Dies Irae," in all 90. Many are given in abridged form, and Dr. Walker did not bind himself to reproduce the metre, or even uniformly the ideas, of his originals. By the kindness of his representatives his ms. copy has been used to identify his trs., most of which are indexed throughout this Dictionary, though none are in C. U. (2) Prayers and Hymns: Edin., W. P. Nimmo, 1866. Besides 73 Prayers, &c., this contains 92 original hymns and 14 versions of the "Gloria Patri." A number of the prayers and 42 of the hymns had appeared in his Prayers and Hymns for the Mornings and Evenings of a Week, 1862. [J.M.]

Walker, John, B.D., s. of Matthias Walker, was b. at Silvermines, county Tipperary, in 1769, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He graduated in 1790, and was elected a Fellow on taking Holy Orders in 1791. Seceding from the Church of England he resigned his Fellowship in 1804, and founded the sect called "Walkerites." He d. Oct. 23, 1833. He was the author of several mathematical, classical, and other works. His Essays and Correspondence were pub. in 1838. Of two hymns written by him for the opening of the Bethesda Chapel, Dorset Street, Dublin, on June 22, 1794, and which appeared in the Sel. of Hys. for use there, 1814, one, "Thou God of Power and God of Love" (Opening of a Place of Worship), has passed into several collections, including the Irish Church Hymn., 1873; the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878, and others. [G. A. C.]

Walker, Mary Jane, née Deck, daughter of Mr. John Deck, and sister of J. G. Deck (p. 285, ii.), was married in 1848 to Dr. Walker, for sometime Rector of Cheltenham, and editor of Ps. & Hys. for Public and Social Worship, 1855. Several of her hymns appeared as leaflets; others in her husband's Ps. & Hys., 1855. In that Coll. 9 bear her signature "M. J. W." These are:—

1. He came, Whose embassy was peace. Passiontide.
2. I journey through a desert drear and wild. The Journey of Life.
3. Jesus, I will trust Thee, trust Thee with my soul. Trust in Jesus.
4. Lord, Thou didst love Jerusalem. Mission to the Jews.
5. O God, our Saviour, from Thy birth. Passiontide.

6. O joyful tidings let us sing. Sunday School Anniversary.

7. O spotless Lamb of God, in Thee. Passiontide.
8. The wanderer no more will roam. Reconciliation with God.
9. We are not left to walk alone. The Holy Spirit as the Divine Guide.

Of these hymns Nos. 3 and 5 appeared in the 1864 Appendix to Dr. Walker's Coll., and Nos. 2 and 8 are the most popular. [J. J.]

Wallace, James Cowden, was b. at Dudley, circa 1793. He was brother of the Rev. Robert Wallace (1791–1880), Professor of Theology in Manchester New College, and author of Antitrinitarian Biography. J. C. Wallace was Unitarian minister at Totnes, 1824, and afterwards at Brighton and Wareham. He d. at Wareham in 1841. He was a prolific hymn-writer, and contributed various other poetical pieces to the Monthly Repository. In a Sel. of Hys. for Unitarian Worship, by R. Wallace, Chesterfield, 1822, there are 13 of his hymns, and in the 2nd ed. of the same, 1826, there are 29 more. There are also 10 of his hymns in the Dukinfield Sel. of Ps. & Hys. for Christian Worship, 1822 (still in use), and 64 in Beard's Coll. of Hys., 1837. Of these hymns the following are still in C. U.:—

1. Is there no balm to soften grief? The Efficacy of Prayer (1837).
2. It is not rank, or power, or state. The Universality of the Gospel.
3. There's not a place in earth's vast round. God seen in Everything.
4. Through every clime God's care extends. Divine Care of All.
5. There is an eye that never sleeps. The Divine Helper in Need. [V. D. D.]

Wallin, Benjamin, s. of Edward Wallin, pastor of the Baptist Church, Maze Pond, Southwark, was b. in London in 1711. He received a good education under the care of the Rev. John Needham, of Hitchin (father of the hymn-writer of that name), and was for a time engaged in business. But in 1740 he responded to an earnest request to become pastor of the church over which his father had presided, and this position he retained until his death on Feb. 19, 1782. Mr. B. Wallin published nearly forty sermons, charges, and other small religious books and pamphlets. In 1750 he pub. a volume entitled, Evangelical Hymns and Songs, in Two Parts: Published for the Comfort and Entertainment of true Christians; with authorities at large from the Scriptures. The hymns in this vol. are 100 in number, and the texts of scripture illustrated in each stanza are quoted in full in the lower part of the page. The versification is homely and the rhymes are often faulty.

Two hymns from the work are in C. U.:—

1. Hail, mighty Jesus (Saviour) how divine. Divine Grace.
2. When I the holy grave survey. Easter.

These, with others, appeared in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776. They are usually given with alterations, chiefly introduced by Toplady. [W. R. S.]

Walther, Johann, was b. in 1496 at a village near Cola (perhaps Kahla, or else Cölleda, near Sachsenburg) in Thuringia. In 1524 we find him at Torgau, as bassist at the court of Friedrich the Wise, Elector of Saxony. The Elector Johann of Saxony made him "Sengermeister" (choirmaster) in 1526. When the Electoral orchestra (Kapelle) at Torgau was disbanded in 1530, it was reconstituted by the town, and in 1534 Walther was also appointed cantor (singing-master) to the school at Torgau. On the accession of the Elector Moritz of Saxony, in 1548, Walther went with him to Dresden as his Kapellmeister. He was pensioned by decree of Aug. 7, 1554, and soon after returned to Torgau, still retaining the title of "Sengermeister." He d. at Torgau, perhaps on March 25, or at least before April 24, 1570. (Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, 1871, p. 8, and 1878, p. 85; Archiv für Litteraturgeschichte, vol. xii., 1884, p. 185; Dr. Otto Taubert's Pflege der Musik in Torgau, 1868, and his Gymnasial Singe-Chor zu Torgau, N.D., 1870, &c.)

Walther was more distinguished as a musician than as a hymn-writer. In 1524 he spent three weeks in Luther's house at Wittenberg, helping to adapt the old church music to the Lutheran services, and harmonising the tunes in five parts for the Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, pub. at Wittenberg in 1524 (p. 703, ii.). He was also present in the Stadtkirche at Wittenberg, when, on Oct. 29, 1525, the service for the Holy Communion, as rearranged by Luther and himself, was first used in German. His hymns appeared mostly in his Das christlich Kinderlieb D. Marlini Luthers, Erhalt uns Herr, &c. Auff's new in sechs Stimmen gesetzt, und mit etlichen schönen Christlichen Tezten, Lateinischen und Teutschen Gesengen gemehrt, &c., Wittenberg, 1566 (preface dated Torgau, St. Michael's Day, 1566). They are collected by Wackernagel in his D. Kirchenlied, iii. pp. 187-206 (Nos. 219-229).

Those of Walther's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Herzlich Lieb hab ich dich, mein Gott. Trinity Sunday. 1st pub. in 1566 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 204, in 4 st. of 8 l. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 190. Tr. as:—

O God, my Rock! my heart on Thee. This is a good tr. of st. i., iii., iv., by A. T. Russell, as No. 133 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

ii. Herzlich thut mich erfreuen. Eternal Life. 1st pub. separately, in 33 st., at Wittenberg, in 1552, entitled "A beautiful spiritual and Christian new miner's song, of the Last Day and Eternal Life" [Königsberg Library]. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 187, in 34 st., st. 33 being added from the Dresden reprint of 1557. It is set to the melody of a popular song on the Joys of Summer. It is a fresh and beautiful hymn, but is only partially available on account of its length. Wackernagel, in his Kleines G. B., 1860, selects 21 st. as No. 219. The most popular form is that in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1530, beginning "Der Bräutgam wird bald rufen." This form has in order st. 31, 8, 9, 16, 18, 17, 13, and appeared in Melchior Franck's Rosetulum musicum, 1628; in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1705, No. 749, &c. Tr. as:—

1. Now fain my joyous heart would sing. This is a tr. of st. 1, 4, 5, 17, 33, 34, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 223. Her trs. of st. 1, 4, 5, were included in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, No. 325.

2. Soon will the heavenly Bridegroom come. This is by Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymn. Christ., 1863, No. 1009, and follows the text of the G. L. S., omitting st. 16, 18, 13. It is repeated in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, &c.

3. The Bridegroom soon will call us. By Dr. M. Loy, from the G. L. S. text, but omitting st. 18, 13, as No. 24 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. from the G. L. S. text, is "Soon shall that voice resound," by Miss Fry in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 36. Her second part, altered and beginning, "Rejoice, the Lord doth guide us," is in J. Whittemore's Suppl. to all H. Bks., 1860. [J. M.]

Wär Gott nicht mit uns diese Zeit. M. Luther. [Ps. cxxiv.] This version of Ps. cxxiv. was 1st pub. in the Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, in 3 st. of 7 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 17. Also in Schircher's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 79, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 250, &c.

Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 115, relates that the Elector Johann Friedrich of Saxony, having been comforted by the Superintendent Aquila with this hymn during his captivity after the battle of Mühlberg, 1547, on his release on May 12, 1552, sang the whole of it with grateful heart, as a thankoffering to God.

The tr. in C. U. is:—

Had God not come, may Israel say. In full by R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 35. Repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon, in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 49.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "If God were not upon our side." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 96. (2) "Had not the Lord been with us then." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 34. (3) "Had not the Lord been on our side." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 62. (4) "Had God not been with us this time." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 450. In his Ecoties, 1876, p. 68, it begins "Were God not with us all the time," and is otherwise altered. [J. M.]

Wardlaw, Ralph, D.D. This venerable and (in his generation) influential Scottish divine contributed twelve hymns to the praise of the Church Universal that are likely to live in a humble and useful way. As having so done, and besides edited several collections of hymns, he claims a place of honour in this work. Critically, and regarded as literature, his hymns have little of poetry in them; no "winged words" to lift the soul heavenward. They reflect simply and plainly the lights and shadows of every-day experiences of the spiritual life, rather than its etherialities and subtleties. His "Lift up to God the voice of praise" is the most widely known; and there is a certain inspiring clangour about it when well sung; yet it is commonplace. His "Hail morning, known among the blest," is narrative and prosaic, though it filled a gap at the time in Sabbath morning worship. "At the time by God appointed," "Remember Thee! remember Christ!" and "Contemplate, saints, the source divine," have vanishing gleams of imaginative light and fine and tender emotion. "O how good the hallowed union," "Where the sounds of plaintive wailing," and "See the Sun of truth arise," are melodious and singable, and pleasant but shallow. "Christ of all my hopes the ground," (Pt. ii.) "When with wasting sickness worn," is much too long, but is a fairly good song of Zion. Wardlaw pub. in 1803 a Selection of Hymns, to displace what was called The Tabernacle Coll., 1800, that had been used by the Congregationalists of Scotland [see Scottish Hymnody], and to which he contributed a few hymns. He was assisted in the preparation of this compilation by Dr. Charles Stuart, of Dunearn. The 1st ed. contained 322 hymns. In 1817 a Supplement was added of 171, bringing up the number to 493. Of these eleven (or twelve strictly) were by Wardlaw. Two of these had previously appeared in the Scottish Missionary Magazine (vol. viii. 48). His hymns bear so very slight a proportion to Dr. Wardlaw's writings as a profound theologian and expositor and thoroughly-equipped controversialist on the chief problems of the period, as to make it necessary to refer the reader to his remarkable Life, by the Rev. Dr. W. L. Alexander, entitled, Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Ralph Wardlaw, D.D. (2nd ed., 1856). Wardlaw was b. at Dalkeith on December 22, 1779, where he received his early education, later attending Glasgow University. His only church was in Glasgow. He d. at Easterhouse near Glasgow on Dec. 17, 1853, and his public funeral is still remembered for the representative character of the vast multitude who attended it. [A. B. G.]

Of Dr. Wardlaw's hymns the following are still in C. U. :—

1. Glad when they saw the Lord. Easter.
2. Hail, morning known amongst the blest [saints]. Sunday Morning.
3. Lift up to God the voice of praise. Praise to the Father.
4. O Lord our God, arise. Missions.
5. Remember Thee, remember Christ. H. Communion.
6. See the Sun of Truth arise. Christ the Light.

Of these Nos. 3-5 appeared in the Tabernacle Coll. (noted above), 1800. [J. J.]

Ware, Henry, D.D., s. of Dr. H. Ware, pastor of the Unitarian congregation at Hingham, Massachusetts, and afterward Hollis Professor of Divinity at Cambridge, U.S.A., was b. at Hingham, April 21, 1794. Before going to Harvard College, in 1808, he was under the care of Dr. Allyn, at Duxbury, and then of Judge Ware, at Cambridge. He graduated at Harvard in high honours, in 1812; and was then for two years an assistant teacher in Exeter Academy. He was licensed to preach by the Boston Unitarian Association, July 31, 1815; and ordained pastor of the Second Church of that city, Jan. 1, 1817. In 1829, in consequence of his ill health, he received the assistance of a co-pastor in the person of Ralph Waldo Emerson. In the same year Ware was appointed Professor of Pulpit Eloquence and Pastoral Care in the Cambridge Theological School. He entered upon his duties in 1830, and resigned in 1842. He removed to Framingham, and d. there, Sept. 25, 1843. His D.D. degree was conferred upon him by Harvard College in 1834. Dr. Ware's publications as set forth in his Memoir, pub. by his brother John Ware, M.D., were numerous and on a variety of topics. He edited the Christian Disciple, which was established in 1813, and altered in title to the Christian Examiner in 1824, for some years before the change of title, and gave it his assistance subsequently. The Rev. Chandler Robbins collected his works and pub. them in four volumes, in 1847. His hymns, many of which are of more than usual excellence, are given in vol. i. Of these the following are in C. U. :

1. All nature's works His praise declare. Opening of an Organ. Dated Nov. 9, 1822. It is in Order's English Cong. Hymns, 1884.
2. Around the throne of God The host angelic throngs. Universal Praise. Dated 1823, and printed in the Christian Disciple, vol. v., and in Putnam, 1874. A fine hymn of praise.
3. Father of earth and heaven, Whose arm upholds creation. Thanksgiving for Divine Mercies. Appeared in Cheever's American Common Place Book, 1831; and in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
4. Father, Thy gentle chastisement. In Sickness. Dated March, 1836; and in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
5. Great God, the followers of Thy Son. Ordina- tion. Written for the Ordination of Jared Sparks, the historian, as pastor of the Unitarian Church, Baltimore, 1819. Given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874.

6. In this glad hour when children meet. Family Gatherings. Dated Aug. 20, 1835. In Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874.

7. Lift thy glad voices in triumph on high. Easter. Dated 1817, and was pub. in the Christian Disciple of that year, in 2 st. of 8 l. It is in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868; and Putnam, 1874, and numerous hymn-books. Sometimes st. ii. is given separately as, "Glory to God, in full anthems of joy."

8. Like Israel's hosts to exile driven. American National Hymn. Written for the Centennial Celebration of the Boston Thursday Lecture, Oct. 17, 1833, and given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874. It is a quasi American National Hymn in praise of the Pilgrim Fathers.

9. O Thou in Whom alone is found. Laying Foundation Stone of a Place of Worship. In Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Thring's English Coll., 1882.

10. O Thou Who on Thy chosen Son. Ordination. Written for an Ordination, March, 1829. In Putnam, 1874, and Dale's English H. Bk., 1874.

11. Oppression shall not always reign. Against Slavery. "This was Mr. Ware's last composition in verse. It bears date March 15, 1843. In its original form it is longer than as presented here (in 3 st. of 8 l.), and is unsuited to a church-book. The following stanzas, taken from one of the Collections [st. i., ii. are in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hys., 1848] are a part of the original, altered and transposed, and thus adapted to sacred worship." (Putnam, 1874, p. 113.)

12. To prayer, to prayer; for the morning breaks. Prayer. This poem of 10 st. of 6 l. is dated 1826, and is given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874. Two centos therefrom are in C. U. The first begins with st. i., adapting it for Morning, and the second with st. ii., "To prayer, for the glorious sun is gone," for Evening.

13. We rear not a temple, like Judah of old. Dedication of a Place of Worship. This is dated 1839, and is given in Putnam, 1874.

14. With praise and prayer our gifts we bring. Opening of a Place of Worship. In Dale's English Hymn Bk. 1874.

With American Unitarians Dr. Ware ranks very high, and by them his hymns are widely used. [F. M. B.]

Waring, Anna Lætitia, daughter of Elijah Waring, and niece of Samuel Miller Waring, was b. at Neath, Glamorganshire, in 1820. In 1850 she pub. her Hymns and Meditations, by A. L. W., a small book of 19 hymns. The 4th ed. was pub. in 1854. The 10th ed., 1863, is enlarged to 38 hymns. She also pub. Additional Hymns, 1858, and contributed some pieces to the Sunday Magazine, 1871. Her most widely known hymns are: "Father, I know that all my life," p. 367, ii.; "Go not far from me, O my Strength," p. 430, ii.; and "My heart is resting, O my God," p. 761, i. The rest in C. U. include:—

1. Dear Saviour of a dying world. Resurrection. (1854.)
2. In heavenly love abiding. Safety in God. (1850.)
3. Jesus, Lord of heaven above. Love to Jesus desired. (1854.)
4. Lord, a happy child of Thine. Evening. (1850.)
5. My Saviour, on the [Thy] words of truth. Hope in the Word of God. (1850.) Sometimes st. iv., "It is not as Thou wilt with me," is given separately.
6. O this is blessing, this is rest. Rest in the Love of Jesus. (1854.)
7. O Thou Lord of heaven above. The Resurrection.
8. Source of my life's refreshing springs. Rest in God. (1850.)
9. Sunlight of the heavenly day. New Year (1854.)
10. Sweet is the solace of Thy love. Safety and Comfort in God. (1850.)
11. Tender mercies on my way. Praise of Divine Mercies. (1850.)
12. Thanksgiving and the voice of melody. New Year (1854.)
13. Though some good things of lower worth. Love of God in Christ. (1850.)

These hymns are marked by great simplicity, concentration of thought, and elegance of diction. They are popular, and deserve to be so. [G. A. C.]

Waring, Samuel Miller, s. of Jeremiah Waring, of Alton, Hampshire, and uncle of Anna L. Waring, was b. at Alton, in March, 1792, and d. at Bath, Sept. 19, 1827. His hymns appeared in his Sacred Melodies, 1826; and from that work the following, which are in C. U., were taken:—

1. Now to Him Who loved us, gave us. Praise to Jesus. Sometimes, "Unto Him Who loved us."
2. Plead Thou, O plead my cause. Jesus, the Advocate Implored. [G. A. C.]

Warner, Anna, daughter of Henry W. Warner, and sister of Sarah Warner, author of Queechy, and other novels, was b. near New York city about 1822. She is the author of the novel, Say and Seal, 1859, and others of a like kind. She also edited Hys. of the Church Militant, 1858; and pub. Wayfaring Hymns, Original and Translated, 1869. Her original hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Jesus loves me, this I know. The love of Jesus. In Say and Seal. 1859.
2. O little child, lie still and sleep. A Mother's Evening Hymn. In Temple Choir. 1867.
3. One more day's work for Jesus. Evening. From Wayfaring Hymns. 1869.
4. The world looks very beautiful. A Child Pilgrim. circa 1860.

For her translations see Index of Authors and Translators. [F. M. B.]

Warren, William Fairfield, D.D., was b. at Williamsburg, Massachusetts, in 1833, and graduated at the Wesleyan University in 1853. After spending some time in Germany, he was appointed Professor of Systematic Theology in the Methodist Episcopal Mission Institute at Bremen, in 1861. Returning to America in 1866, he held some important appointments there, ultimately becoming President of Boston University, in 1873. His hymn, "I worship Thee, O Holy Ghost" (Whitsuntide), was contributed to the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, at the request of the editorial committee, in 1877, and was pub. therein in 1878 (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884, p. 111). It has passed into other collections. [J. J.]

Warum betrübst du dich, mein Herz. [Cross and Consolation.] Wackernagel, iv. pp. 128–130, gives three forms of the text of this anonymous hymn: No. 190 as the first of Zwey schöne neue geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, n. d., c. 1560; No. 191, from an Enchiridion printed at Hamburg, 1565; No. 192, from the Psalmen und Lieder, Lübeck, 1567. In his Bibliographie, 1855, p. 279, he had cited it as in Neun schöne geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, n. d., which he then dated 1556—probably too early. According to Koch, v., 653, it had already appeared as "Czemu sic troszczysz," in a Polish hymn-book ed. by Pastor Seklucyan, and pub. at Königsberg in 1559.

This hymn has often been ascribed to Hans Sachs. So Ambrosius Hannermann in his Prodromus Hymnologiae, Wittenberg, 1633, Second 10, No. 8, entitles it "Consolation against Tearfulness. Hans Sachs"; and in Jeremias Weber's G. B., Leipzig, 1638, p. 578, it is entitled, "On Fabine. A good family hymn. Written for the use of heads of households and their families, by Hans Sachs, of Nürnberg, the well-known German poet." The hymn has not however been traced in any of the works of Sachs, and the ascription to him seems to be without foundation.

In the 1560 Zwey schöne the hymn has 12 st.; in the 1565 Enchiridion there are 14 (Nos. viii., ix. not in 1560). The 1565 is the usual text as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 701; but st. v.–ix., in which the Old Testament examples of Elijah, Daniel, Joseph, and the Three Holy Children are cited, are omitted in some collections. It is one of the best German hymns of Cross and Consolation, and is in almost universal German use. Tr. as:—

Why art thou thus cast down, my heart? By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. v.–ix., in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 187, and repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 143.

Other trs. are:

- (1) "Why thus with grief oppress my heart," by J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 14 (1732, p. 66), repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., Nos. 141, 317.
- (2) "Rejoice, my soul, God cares for thee," by P. H. Molther, as No. 183, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 221).
- (3) "Why vex thyself with anxious fears," by Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 69.
- (4) "Oh! why art thou so sad, my breast," by Madame de Pontes, in her Poets and Poetry of Germany, 1858, vol. i. p. 376.
- (5) "My soul, why art thou troubled? why," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 88.
- (6) "Why dost thou vex thyself, my heart," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 200.
- (7) "Why dost thou make lament, my heart," by the Rev. Andrew Carter, in the Quiver, 1881.

[J. M.]

Warum sollt ich mich denn grämen. P. Gerhardt. [Cross and Consolation.] Founded on Ps. lxxiii. 23. Appeared in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 240, in 12 st. of 8 l. Thence in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 64, and Bachmann's ed., No. 29. In Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 320, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 784. It is a beautiful hymn, but, like many of Gerhardt's, difficult to translate. It comforted the Salzburg emigrants on their way through Swabia in 1732; it soothed the dying bed of Friedrich Wilhelm I. of Prussia, May 31, 1740; and st. viii. was the last utterance of its author on June 7, 1676. See further, Koch, viii., 471–479. Tr. as:—

1. Why, my soul, thus trembling ever. A good tr. of st. i., iv., vii., viii., xi., xii., as No. 232 in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868, marked as tr. by the Rev. Angelo A. Benson, 1862.

2. Why should sorrow ever grieve me. In full by J. Kelly, in his P. Gerhardt's Spir. Songs, 1867, p. 214. His trs. of st. i., v., x.–xii., are repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880, No. 420.

Other trs. are: (1) "Why should I continue grieving," in the Suppl. to German Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 53. Previously in the Select Hys. from German Psalmody, Tranquebar, 1754, p. 91, and as No. 473 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Suppl. of 1803 to the Moravian H. Bk., of 1801, st. vii., x., are repeated altered, and beginning, "With undaunted resolution." (2) Wherefore should I grieve and pine," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 198. (3) "Wherefore, then, should I be gloomy," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 144. [J. M.]

Was Gott thut das ist wohlgethan, So denken Gottes Kinder. H. Schmolek. [Harvest.] 1st pub. in his Freuden-Oel in Traurigkeit, Breslau, 1720, No. 39, p. 98, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The contented heart in a scanty Harvest." In his Klage und Reigen, Breslau, n. d. [1734], No. 77, p. 96, he gave it in 9 st. (st. iv., v., ix., being new), and entitled it "The contented heart in a scanty harvest, 1731." The text of 1734 is No. 1203 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The German has undergone various recensions, and so e.g. Miss Cox follows that in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833; Miss Warner that in the Berlin G. B., 1829. The text followed in H. A. & M. and the Hymnary is that in Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, which is based on st. i., iii., vii., viii. of the 1734. Tr. as:—

1. What our Father does is well. A free tr. from Biggs's text, by Sir H. W. Baker, as No. 227 in H. A. & M., 1861, with an original doxology. This has been repeated in the Irish Church Hyl., 1873, in Porter's Coll., 1876, the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, &c.; and in America in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, Presb. Hyl., 1874, &c.

2. What God does is done aright. By Mrs. H. M. Chester, as No. 471 in the Hymnary, 1872, from the text of Biggs, with an original doxology. Repeated in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883.

Other trs. are: (1) "Whatever God does is well," by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 255, repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. (2) "What God hath done is done aright," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 125. [J. M.]

Washburn, Edward Abiel, D.D., was b. April 16, 1819; graduated at Harvard, 1838; studied theology at Andover and New Haven, and entered the Congregational ministry. In 1844, having been ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church, he became Rector of St. Paul's, Newburyport, Mass., where he remained till 1851. Spending 1851-52 in Europe, on his return he became Rector of St. John's, Hartford, 1853-62, and Professor of Church Polity in Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Connecticut; also Rector of St. Mark's, Philadelphia, 1862-65; and Calvary, New York, 1865-81. He d. Feb. 2, 1881. His works include Social Law of God, 1874, and trs. of Latin hymns. A selection from his poems was published in New York in 1881. Some of his trs. are given in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and other collections. For these trs. see Index of Authors and Translators. [F. M. B.]

Washburn, Henry S., was b. at Providence, Rhode Island, June 10, 1813; spent his boyhood at Kingston, Massachusetts, and was educated at Worcester and Brown University. Subsequently he was a manufacturer at Worcester and Boston. Since 1875 he has been the President of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Co. Mr. Washburn has held some prominent posts, and has been active in public matters. He has written various hymns and songs, the best known of which is:—

Let every heart rejoice and sing. National Hymn. This "was written for a celebration in Faneuil Hall, Boston, July 4, 1842, and sung by the Sunday School Children of the city." It was set to music by Garcia, and often subsequently used at home and abroad. The author altered it for The Psalmist, 1843, No. 1005; and in that form it has been generally known. [F. M. B.]

Waterbury, Jared Bell, D.D., was b. in New York city, Aug. 11, 1799, and graduated at Yale College, 1822. He was for some time pastor of a Congregational church at Hudson, N. York, and then of Bowdoin Street Congregational church, Boston. He d. at Brooklyn, Dec. 31, 1876. He pub. Advice to a Young

Christian; The Officer on Duty, and other works. To the Rev. J. Leavitt's Christian Lyre, vol. i., 1830, he contributed the following hymns, each of which was headed, "Written for the Lyre," and signed "J. B. W." :—

1. My Jesus, Thou hast taught. The Love of Jesus.
2. Met, O God, to ask Thy presence. Repentance.
3. O fly, mourning sinner, saith Jesus to me. Promise of Pardon.
4. See Sodom wrapt in fire. Warning.
5. Sinner, is thy heart at rest? The Voice of Conscience.
6. Soldiers of the Cross, arise! Lo! your Leader from the skies. Soldiers of the Cross.
7. When, O my Saviour, shall this heart? Desiring Jesus.

In vol. ii. of the same work, 1830, also:—

8. I have fought the good fight; I have finished my race. Martyr's Death Song.

Another of his hymns is given in the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, as:—

9. Infinite love, what precious stores. Riches of Divine Grace. Sometimes dated 1862.

Of these hymns, Nos. 5, 6, and 9 are the best known. [F. M. B.]

Waterston, Robert Cassie, M.A., s. of Robert Waterston, was b. at Kennebunk, in 1812, but has resided from his infancy at Boston, Massachusetts. He studied Theology at Cambridge; had for five years the charge of a Sunday school for the children of seamen; was associated for several years with the Pitts Street Unitarian Chapel, Boston; and then pastor for seven years of the Unitarian Church of the Saviour in the same city. Much of his time has been given to literature, and a long list of his papers of various kinds is given in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1874. He also interested himself largely in educational matters. He contributed one hymn to the American Unitarian Cheshire Pastoral Association Christian Hymns, 1844; 8 to his own popular Supplement to Greenwood's Psalms and Hymns, 1845, and others to various works. Putnam gives 20 poetical pieces in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, amongst which are the following, which are in C. U. at the present time:—

1. In darkest hours I hear a voice. Looking unto Jesus. Contributed to Putnam's Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, and found in a few collections.

2. In each breeze that wanders free. Nature and the Soul. Pub. before 1853, and again in Putnam, 1874. The hymn "Nature, with eternal youth," in Hedge and Huntington's Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, 1853, No. 185, is composed of st. iv.-vii. of this piece.

3. One sweet [bright] flower has drooped and faded. Death of a Child. Appeared in the American Unitarian Cheshire Pas. Association Christian Hys. 1844, No. 668, and again in Putnam, 1874, as "One bright flower, &c." It is in several collections. In the Christian Hys. the heading is "Death of a Pupil;" and Putnam, "On the Death of a Child. Sung by her classmates."

In Putnam there are other pieces by him which are worthy of attention. [F. M. B.]

Watson, George, s. of F. Watson, b. at Birmingham, 1816, and until the year 1866 was in business in London as a printer. From his office and with his co-operation originated the well-known publications, the Band of Hope Review, in 1851; and The British Workman, 1855, which were the pioneers of cheap illustrated publications. Mr. Watson's hymn-writing has been limited. Two (see below) appeared in Paxton Hood's Our Hymn Book, 1868; the rest have been issued as fly-leaves, or are still in ms. Those in C. U. are:—

1. ¶ the deep mystery of that love. The Love of Jesus. 1st pub. in P. Hood's Our H. Bk. 1868, No. 736, in 4 st. of 4 l.

2. With the sweet word of peace. Parting. Written in 1867 to be sung at a meeting held in Brighton to say Farewell to the Rev. Paxton Hood on his leaving his church for a considerable time for change and rest. On his return Mr. Hood included it in his Our H. Bk. 1868, No. 572, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was given with considerable alterations in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys. 1871. This text was repeated in the Scottish Evangelical Union Hymnal, 1878, and is the usually accepted form of the hymn. It has much tenderness and beauty, and is worthy of wide circulation. [J. J.]

Watts, Alaric Alexander, was born in London, Mar. 19, 1797, and educated at the collegiate school of Wye, Kent. After a short engagement as a private tutor, he devoted himself to literary pursuits. He was for some time editor of the Leeds Intelligencer, and then of the Manchester Courier. Subsequently returning to London, he edited 10 vols. of The Literary Souvenir, and 3 vols. of The Cabinet of Modern Art. He was also engaged for some time as editor of the United Service Gazette, and contributed to the Standard, and other newspapers. In 1853 he received a royal pension of £100 a year, and an appointment in Somerset House. He d. at Kensington, April 5, 1864. His hymns appeared in his Poetical Sketches, 1822. 3rd ed. 1824. Of these, "When shall we meet again," is found in a few collections. [J. J.]

Watts, Isaac, D.D. The father of Dr. Watts was a respected Nonconformist, and at the birth of the child, and during its infancy, twice suffered imprisonment for his religious convictions. In his later years he kept a flourishing boarding school at Southampton. Isaac, the eldest of his nine children, was b. in that town July 17, 1674. His taste for verse showed itself in early childhood. He was taught Greek, Latin, and Hebrew by Mr. Pinhorn, rector of All Saints, and headmaster of the Grammar School, in Southampton. The splendid promise of the boy induced a physician of the town and other friends to offer him an education at one of the Universities for eventual ordination in the Church of England; but this he refused; and entered a Nonconformist Academy at Stoke Newington in 1690, under the care of Mr. Thomas Rowe, the pastor of the Independent congregation at Girdlers' Hall. Of this congregation he became a member in 1693. Leaving the Academy at the age of twenty, he spent two years at home; and it was then that the bulk of the Hymns and Spiritual Songs (pub. 1707-9) were written, and sung from mss. in the Southampton Chapel. The hymn "Behold the glories of the Lamb" is said to have been the first he composed, and written as an attempt to raise the standard of praise. In answer to requests, others succeeded. The hymn "There is a land of pure delight" is said to have been suggested by the view across Southampton Water. The next six years of Watts's life were again spent at Stoke Newington, in the post of tutor to the son of an eminent Puritan, Sir John Hartopp; and to the intense study of these years must be traced the accumulation of the theological and philosophical materials which he published subsequently, and also the life-long enfeeblement of his constitution.

Watts preached his first sermon when he was twenty-four years old. In the next three years he preached frequently; and in 1702 was ordained pastor of the eminent Independent congregation in Mark Lane, over which Caryl and Dr. John Owen had presided, and which numbered Mrs. Bendish, Cromwell's granddaughter, Charles Fleetwood, Charles Desborough, Sir John Hartopp, Lady Haversham, and other distinguished Independents among its members. In this year he removed to the house of Mr. Hollis in the Minories. His health began to fail in the following year, and Mr. Samuel Price was appointed as his assistant in the ministry. In 1712 a fever shattered his constitution, and Mr. Price was then appointed co-pastor of the congregation which had in the meantime removed to a new chapel in Bury Street. It was at this period that he became the guest of Sir Thomas Abney, under whose roof, and after his death (1722) that of his widow, he remained for the rest of his suffering life; residing for the longer portion of these thirty-six years principally at the beautiful country seat of Theobalds in Herts, and for the last thirteen years at Stoke Newington. His degree of D.D. was bestowed on him in 1728, unsolicited, by the University of Edinburgh. His infirmities increased on him up to the peaceful close of his sufferings, Nov. 25, 1748. He was buried in the Puritan resting-place at Bunhill Fields, but a monument was erected to him in Westminster Abbey. His learning and piety, gentleness and largeness of heart have earned him the title of the Melancthon of his day. Among his friends, churchmen like Bishop Gibson are ranked with Nonconformists such as Doddridge. His theological as well as philosophical fame was considerable. His Speculations on the Human Nature of the Logos, as a contribution to the great controversy on the Holy Trinity, brought on him a charge of Arian opinions. His work on The Improvement of the Mind, pub. in 1741, is eulogised by Johnson. His Logic was still a valued text-book at Oxford within living memory. The World to Come, pub. in 1745, was once a favourite devotional work, parts of it being translated into several languages. His Catechisms, Scripture History (1732), as well as The Divine and Moral Songs (1715), were the most popular text-books for religious education fifty years ago. The Hymns and Spiritual Songs were pub. in 1707-9, though written earlier. The Horae Lyricae, which contains hymns interspersed among the poems, appeared in 1706-9. Some hymns were also appended at the close of the several Sermons preached in London, pub. in 1721-24. The Psalms were pub. in 1719. The earliest life of Watts is that by his friend Dr. Gibbons. Johnson has included him in his Lives of the Poets; and Southey has echoed Johnson's warm eulogy. The most interesting modern life is Isaac Watts: his Life and Writings, by E. Paxton Hood. (For criticism of his work as a hymn-writer, see Hymnody, Early English, § xi., and Psalters, English, § xv.) [H. L. B.]

A large mass of Dr. Watts's hymns and paraphrases of the Psalms have no personal history beyond the date of their publication. These we have grouped together here and shall preface the list with the books from which they are taken.

(1) Horæ Lyricæ. Poems chiefly of the Lyric kind. In Three Books Sacred: i. To Devotion and Piety; ii. To Virtue, Honour, and Friendship; iii. To the Memory of the Dead. By I. Watts, 1706. Second edition, 1709. (2) Hymns and Spiritual Songs. In Three Books: i. Collected from the Scriptures; ii. Composed on Divine Subjects; iii. Prepared for the Lord's Supper. By I. Watts, 1707. This contained in Bk. i. 78 hymns; Bk. ii. 110; Bk. iii. 22, and 12 doxologies. In the 2nd ed. pub. in 1709, Bk. i. was increased to 150; Bk. ii. to 170; Bk. iii. to 25 and 15 doxologies. (3) Divine and Moral Songs for the Use of Children. By I. Watts, London, 1715. (4) The Psalms of David Imitated in the Language of the New Testament, And apply'd to the Christian State and Worship. By I. Watts. London: Printed by J. Clark, at the Bible and Crown in the Poultry, &c., 1719. (5) Sermons with hymns appended thereto, vol. i., 1721; ii., 1723; iii. 1727. In the 5th ed. of the Sermons the three volumes, in duodecimo, were reduced to two, in octavo. (6) Reliquiæ Juveniles: Miscellaneous Thoughts in Prose and Verse, on Natural, Moral, and Divine Subjects; Written chiefly in Younger Years. By I. Watts, D.D., London, 1734. (7) Remnants of Time. London, 1736.

From these works the following hymns and versions of the Psalms have been taken. The sublines indicate altered texts or centos which have been taken from the original hymns.

These 454 Hymns and Versions of the Psalms, in addition to the centos which are indicated by the sublines, are all in C. U. at the present time. The more important and best known of Dr. Watts's Hymns and versions of the Psalms have separate annotations under their respective first lines. [See Index of Authors and Translators.] [J. J.]

Waugh, Benjamin, was b. at Settle, in Yorkshire, Feb. 20, 1839, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Airedale College, Bradford. He has held pastorates at Newbury, Berkshire, Greenwich, and New Southgate. He has been for several years editor of The Sunday Magazine, and a large contributor to its pages. He has pub. (1) The Goal Cradle, Who rocks it; (2) Sunday Evenings with my Children; (3) The Children's Sunday Hour; (4) The Child of the English Savage; (5) Imperial Legislation and Street Children. Mr. Waugh's hymns have appeared from time to time in The Sunday Magazine, and have not been separately published. Those which have come into C. U. include:—

1. Jesus, the Friend of friendless men. Jesus the Sinner's Friend. 1874.
2. O happy pair of Nazareth. The Child Jesus.
3. O let me see Thy beauty, Lord. The Beauty of the Lord. This is given in a revised form as "Now let us see Thy beauty, Lord," in Holder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.

Mr. Waugh's hymns are for children's use, and are exceedingly fresh and unconventional. Several others of merit might be selected from the Sunday Magazine with advantage to children's hymnody. [W. G. H.]

We all had sinned and gone astray. G. Thring. [The Good Shepherd.] This was the author's first hymn, and was written to the tune "Cambridge New," at his mother's request, in 1861. It was pub. in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1864; and in his own Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, p. 11, in 4 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "The Love of Christ." Also given in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, p. 86, and in his Coll., 1882. [J. J.]

We all, O Lord, have gone astray. [The Shepherd and His wandering Sheep.] This is based upon J. Merrick's version of the last part (Tau) of Ps. cxix., pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1765. It was given in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, p. 64, and has been repeated in a few collections in G. Britain and America. It was arranged from Merrick by Cotterill. [J. J.]

We are but little children poor [weak]. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Holy Baptism.] Pub. in Dr. Hook's Leeds Church S. S. H. Bk., 1850, in 9 st. of 4 l. It is in use, sometimes abbreviated, in its original form; as "We are but little children weak," in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and numerous other collections; and as, "O Lord, the Holy Innocents" (st. ii.), in the American Protestant Episcopal Hymnal, 1871. In these various forms it is in extensive use. [J. J.]

We bid Thee welcome in the Name. J. Montgomery. [Induction of a Minister.] This hymn is in the M. MSS., but is undated. It was pub. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 535, and again in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 305, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "On the Appointment of a Minister."

It is found in many collections, but usually in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

We bow before Thy gracious Throne. This, in the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, No. 518, is a cento from two hymns by C. Wesley, st. i., iv. being from "Thou Son of God, Whose flaming eye"; and st. ii., iii. from "Come, O Thou all-victorious Lord (p. 249, ii.), as in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780. [J. J.]

We come, Lord, to Thy feet. [Opening of Sunday School.] This hymn, together with the companion hymn for the Closing of a Sunday School, "O Lord, our hearts would give Thee praise," appeared on a card printed for Sunday-school use by Bp. Pelham, when Incumbent of Christ Church, Hampstead. Both hymns were adapted by him from another and now unknown source. The Rev. E. H. Bickersteth included both hymns, with slight alterations, in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1858, from thence they have passed into several collections. W. F. Stevenson attributes the former in his Hys. for Church and Home, 1873, to Lady Lucy Whitmore, 1824, but we have failed to find it in her Family Prayers, &c., 1824 (see p. 1085, ii.), and know of no authority for the ascription. [J. J.]

We give Thee but Thine own. Bp. W. W. How. [Offertory.] Written about 1858, and 1st pub. in the enlarged ed. of Morrell & How's Psalms & Hymns, 1864, No. 197, in 6 st. of 4 l. From thence it has passed into numerous collections, and now ranks in popularity with some of the best of modern hymns. Of the author's compositions in extensiveness of use it is exceeded only by his "For all Thy Saints who from their labours rest." Orig. text, Church Hymns, 1871. The doxology in H. A. & M. and others is an addition. [J. J.]

We have not seen Thy footsteps tread. Anne Richter, née Rigby. [Faith.] The complicated nature of the various forms of this hymn in C. U. requires the reproduction of the original poem, and the texts of some of the hymns adapted therefrom.

1. The earliest date to which we have traced the original poem is 1834. In that year it appeared anonymously in Songs from the Valley: A Collection of Sacred Poetry. Kirkby Lonsdale, 18mo. This volume was compiled by the elder daughters of the Rev. W. Carus Wilson. [E. MSS.] At page 130 it reads:—

"FAITH.

"Blessed are they who have not seen, and yet have believed."

"We have not seen Thy footsteps tread
This wild and sinful earth of ours,
Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead
Again to life's reviving powers:
But we believe—for all things are
The gifts of Thine Almighty care.

"We have not seen the billow sea
Grow calm and still at Thy command,
Nor the dim orbs again to see,
Beneath the healing of Thine hand:
But we believe the Fount of Light
Again could give those eyeballs sight.

"We did not see Thee tread the wave;
We did not hear the voice from heaven,
Which once with awful warning gave
That God's own Son for us was given.
But we believe—oh! strengthen Thou
The faith which to Thy Name we owe.

"We did not see the armed throng
Steal to the 'garden's' midnight shade,
And watch the palm-tree's boughs among,
Then quail beneath Thy glance afraid:
But we believe—Almighty love Alone could such dark moments prove.

"We did not see the darkness veil
With sudden gloom the noon-day skies;
Nor the fierce soldier's cheek grow pale,
And priestly mockers veil their eyes:
When the proud Roman owned the power
Of heaven, 'twas in that awful hour.

"We did not hear the footsteps fall
Within that lonely garden ground,
Of the all-wakeful sentinel,
Slow tracing there his watchful round,
But we believe—the Holy One
Bursting that tomb, in glory shone.

"We were not with the chosen few
Who saw Thee through the clouds ascend,
Who gazed, and wished to follow too,
Then on the earth all prostrate bend;
But we believe that mortal eyes
Beheld the journey to the skies.

"Chase every shade of doubt away;
'Light of the World!' in mercy shine;
Illumine with faith our erring way,
We would no worship own but Thine.
Bring us to heaven's peaceful shore,
And make us Thine for evermore!"

This text was republished in the April number of The Friendly Visitor, 1836, also printed at Kirkby Lonsdale, and edited by the Rev. W. Carus Wilson. It is signed "Anne R. Kirton-Lindsey." It is also found in Original and Select Hymns; A Companion to Select Poetry. Lond. John Van Voorst, 1837, No. 143 (2nd ed. enlarged 1838). The editor of this work was a Miss Little, of Bedford.

2. The first adaptation of this poem for congregational use appeared in J. H. Gurney's Lutterworth Coll. of Hys. for Public Worship, 1838, No. 264. It is signed "*American," i.e. from an American source with alterations and additions. From the mss. of H. J. Buckoll (p. 191, i.) we gather that it was the joint production of Gurney and himself. This text is:—

"We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread,
In mortal guise, this sinful earth,
Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead,
And wake them to a second birth:
But we BELIEVE that Thou didst come,
And leave for us Thy glorious home.

"We were not with Thee on the wave,
When Thou the stormy sea couldst bind:
Nor saw the health Thy blessing gave
To lame and sick, to deaf and blind:
But we BELIEVE the Fount of light
Could give the darkened eye-ball sight.

"We did not mark the chosen few,
When Thou didst through the clouds ascend,
First lift to heaven their wondering view,
Then to the earth all prostrate bend:
But we BELIEVE that mortal eyes
Beheld that journey to the skies.

"And now that Thou dost reign on high,
And hence Thy faithful people bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Doth shine upon our wilderness:
Yet we BELIEVE that Thou art there;
And sing Thy praise, and lift our prayer."

3. The next recast was apparently by H. J. Buckoll, alone (see § 5). It appeared in Ps. & Hys. for use in the Rugby School Chapel (of which he was joint editor with Dr. Goulburn), 1843, No. 53, as follows:—

"We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread,
O Saviour, this our sinful earth;
Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead,
And wake them to a second birth:
But we believe that Thou didst come,
And quit for us Thy glorious home.

"We were not with the faithful few,
Who stood Thy bitter cross around,
Nor heard the prayer for those who slew,
Nor felt that earthquake rock the ground;
We saw no spear-wound pierce Thy side;
Yet we believe that Thou hast died.

"No angels' message met our ear,
On that first glorious Easter-day,
'The Lord is risen, He is not here,
Come see the place where Jesus lay!'
But we believe that Thou didst quell
The banded powers of Death and Hell.

"We saw Thee not return on high,
And now our longing sight to bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Shines down upon our wilderness:
Yet we believe that Thou art there,
And seek Thee, Lord, in praise and prayer."

4. The next form of the text appeared in J. H. Gurney's Ps. & Hys. for Public Worship, Selected for some of the Churches in Marylebone, Lond. 1851, No. 263, and reads:—

1. "We saw Thee not when Thou didst come
To this poor world of sin and death,
Nor e'er beheld Thy cottage-home
In that despised Nazareth;
But we BELIEVE Thy footsteps trod
Its streets and plains, Thou Son of God.
2. "We did not see Thee lifted high
Amid that wild and savaging crew,
Nor heard Thy meek, imploring cry,
'Forgive, they know not what they do';
Yet we BELIEVE the deed was done,
Which shook the earth, and veiled the sun.
3. "We stood not by the empty tomb
Where late Thy sacred body lay,
Nor sat within that upper room,
Nor met Thee in the open way;
But we BELIEVE that angels said,
'Why seek the living with the dead?'
4. "We did not mark the chosen few,
When Thou didst thro' the clouds ascend,
First litten to heaven thy wondering view
Then to the earth all prostrate bend;
Yet we BELIEVE that mortal eyes
Beheld that journey to the skies.
5. "And now that Thou dost reign on high,
And thence Thy waiting people bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Doth shine upon our wilderness;
But we BELIEVE Thy faithful word,
And trust in our Redeeming Lord."

It will be noted that st. iv., v. are from the Lutterworth Coll., 1838. In a note to this hymn in the "Table of first lines" to the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., Gurney says concerning it:—

"This hymn, and the last hymn in the book, 'Yes God is good,' were suggested by two poems in a small American volume, which were well conceived, but very imperfectly executed. Successive alterations have left nothing of the original compositions remaining but the first four words, and the repeated words, in each hymn. With this acknowledgment, the writer has not scrupled to put his name to them—J. H. G."

The "small American volume" here referred to has not been identified. In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 361 begins with st. ii. of this text, "We did not see Thee lifted high."

5. On the death of Buckoll in 1871, a ms. in his handwriting, but undated, was found which contained the Lutterworth text of 1838 expanded into 14 stanzas. With the aid of this ms. we are enabled to say with tolerable certainty that of the Lutterworth text st. i., ii. were by Buckoll, and st. iii., iv. were by Gurney; the Rugby text, 1843, was by Buckoll; and the Marylebone text, 1851, by Gurney.

6. After the publication of Gurney's text in the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, complications soon arose mainly in the form of centos. Some of these are:—

(1) In the Hys. for the Chapel of Harrow School, 1855, No. 90 is thus composed, st. i., ii. Buckoll from the Lutterworth Coll.; st. iii., iv., Buckoll, from the Rugby Hymns; st. v., vi., Gurney, from the Lutterworth Coll.

(2) In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and others, is composed of st. ii.–v. of Gurney's 1851 text, and begins "We did not see Thee lifted high."

(3) In Pott's Hys. Fitted to the Order of Common Prayer, &c., 1861, No. 182, we have Pt. i. st. i., Gurney, from the Marylebone; st. ii., iii., Buckoll, from the Lutterworth Coll.; Pt. ii., "We did not see Thee lifted high," Gurney, from the Marylebone text.

(4) The text of the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 541, is: st. i., ii., Buckoll, from the Lutterworth Coll.; st. iii., Buckoll, from the Rugby Hymns; st. iv., v., Gurney, from the Lutterworth Coll.

(5) In the American Unitarian Hym. [and Tune] Bk., 1868, No. 428, is composed of st. ii.–iv. of Buckoll's Rugby text alone, and begins "We were not with the faithful few."

The text by Gurney, as in the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, is the most popular form of the hymn. It is found in H. A. & M., 1875; the Hy. Comp., 1876; Thring's Coll., 1882, and many others. [J. J.]

We in the lower parts. [Holy Communion.] This cento appeared in the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. H. Bk., No. 1242. It is thus composed: st. i. and iii. are from No. 97 of C. Wesley's Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1745; st. ii. from No. 81 of the same; and st. iv. and v. from another source. [J. J.]

We limit not the truth of God. G. Rawson. [Profound Depth of Holy Scripture.] This hymn was given in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 409, in 5 st. of 8 l., and headed with the following extract upon which it was based:—

"He charged us before God, and His blessed angels, if God should reveal anything to us by any other instrument of His, to be as ready to receive it as any truth by his ministry; for he was very confident the Lord had more light and truth yet to break forth out of His holy word." Narrative of Pastor Robinson's Address to the Pilgrim Fathers.

This note, together with the hymn, also appeared in Mr. Rawson's Hys., Verses, and Chants, 1876. [J. J.]

We love the place, O Lord [God]. W. Bullock and Sir H. W. Baker. [The House of God.] In its original form this hymn appeared in Dean Bullock's Songs of the Church, Halifax, N. Scotia, 1854, pp. 37, 38, as follows:

"THIRD SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY.

"Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy house."
Psalm xxvi. 8.

"We love the place, O Lord,
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The joy of Thy abode
All other joy excels.

"We love the house of prayer,
Wherein Thy servants meet;
For Thou, O Lord, art there,
Thy chosen ones to greet.

"We love the sacred font
Wherein the Holy Dove
Pours out, as He is wont,
The effluence from above.

"We love our Father's board,
Its altar steps are dear;
For there in faith adored,
We find Thy Presence near.

"We love Thy saints who come
Thy mercy to proclaim,
To call the wanderers home,
And magnify Thy name.

"Our first and latest love
To Zion shall be given—
The House of God above,
On earth the Gate of Heav'n."

2. This text, which has many features of excellence, underwent the following changes at the hands of Sir H. W. Baker, in 1860, and was pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, as follows, the initials being Sir H. W. Baker's alterations and additions:—

- "We love the place, O God,
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The joy of Thine abode
All earthly joy excels.
- "It is the House of prayer,
Wherein Thy servants meet;
And Thou, O Lord, art there
Thy chosen flock to greet.
- "We love the sacred Font;
For there the Holy Dove
To pour is ever wont
His blessing from above.
- "We love Thine Altar, Lord;
Oh what on earth so dear?
For there, in faith adored,
We find Thy Presence near.
- "We love the Word of Life,
The Word that tells of peace,
Of comfort in the strife,
And joys that never cease.
- "We love to sing below
For mercies freely given;
But Oh! we long to know
The triumph-song of heaven.
- "Lord Jesus, give us grace
On earth to love Thee more,
In heaven to see Thy Face,
And with Thy saints adore."

This form of the hymn has passed into most extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and has been translated into several languages.

3. A third form appeared in Harland's Church Psalter and Hymn, enlarged ed. 1867, the opening stanza of which begins:—

- "O Lord, we love the place
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The sweetness of Thy grace
All other joy excels."

This is based upon the H. A. & M. text; but is very inferior as a piece of literary workmanship.

4. A fourth form is given in Thring's Coll., 1882. Of this st. i., ii. are by Bullock, with "God" for "Lord," in st. i. l. 1; st. iii. ll. 1, 2, Bullock, l. 3, Bullock altered by Thring, l. 4, Bullock altered by Baker; st. v. by Thring; st. vi. ll. 1-3, by Thring, l. 4, Bullock altered by Baker. This is a good cento and worthy of more extensive use. [J. J.]

We love Thee, Lord! yet not alone.
Julia A. Elliott, née Marshall. [Love for Christ.] This appeared in her husband's Ps. & Hys., 1835, in 6 st. of 4 double lines. Although not separately numbered as such, it is really a hymn in two parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. iv., "We love Thee, Lord! because when we, &c." It has passed into a few collections. [J. J.]

We plan foundations for the dead.
J. Montgomery. [Foundation Stone of a Cemetery Chapel.] The ms. of this hymn is dated "May 5, 1848." The hymn was written for the laying of the foundation-stone of the chapel for the Church of England portion of the Sheffield General Cemetery. Montgomery's hymn, "Father of glory, God of grace," was written for the Opening of the same, and is dated "June 27, 1850." Montgomery d. on April 30, 1854, and was buried under the shadow of the spire of this chapel. [J. J.]

We sing the praise of Him Who died. T. Kelly. [Passiontide.] Appeared in Hymns by Thomas Kelly, not before Published, Dublin, 1815, No. 52, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross: Gal. vi. 14." Here st. v. reads:—

- "The balm of life; the cure of woe;
The measure and the pledge of love;
'Tis all that sinners want below;
'Tis all that angels know above."

In later editions of Kelly's Hymns this stanza is altered by Kelly to:—

- "The balm of life, the cure of woe,
The measure and the pledge of love;
The sinner's refuge here below,
The angel's theme in heaven above."

This authorised text is that usually found in modern collections. In H. A. & M., 1861, an additional stanza was given by the Compilers. The use of this hymn in all English-speaking countries is extensive. It has also been tr. into several languages. The Rev. L. C. Biggs's rendering into Latin of the H. A. & M. text in his annotated edition of H. A. & M., 1867, begins "Laudes canamus mortui." Lord Selborne [Sir R. Palmer] said at the York Church Congress, 1866 [Report, Hymnody] that this hymn "is distinguished by a calm subdued power, rising gradually from a rather low to a very high key [quotes, and continues], I doubt whether Montgomery ever wrote anything quite equal to this." In several collections this hymn begins with st. ii., "Inscribed upon the Cross we see." An adaptation of the original text for use at Holy Communion is given in the Memoir of S. Medley, by his daughter, pub. in Liverpool in 1833. It begins with the same first line, and was probably made by Medley. [J. J.]

We sing to Thee Whose wisdom formed. [Divine Use of Music.] This appeared in The Whole Book of Psalms: with the Usual Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Together with all the Ancient and Proper Tunes sung in Churches, with some of Later Use. Composed in Three Parts. . . . By John Playford, London, 1677, p. 293, in 7 st. of 4 l. and a doxology. It was included in the 6th ed. of the Supplement to the New Version, 1708, but has fallen out of use. Its original title is, "On the Divine use of Musick." [J. J.]

We thank, Thee, Lord, for this fair earth. Bp. G. E. L. Cotton. [Flower Services.] Pub. in Hys. for use in the Chapel of Marlborough College, 1856, No. 94, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in the enlarged edition of 1869. It has passed into numerous collections, and usually with the change of two or three words in the whole hymn. [J. J.]

We walk by faith and not by sight.
H. Alfrod. [St. Thomas.] Appeared in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1844, p. 108, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 249. It is also given in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, and others. [J. J.]

Wearied in the strife of sin. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Ascension.] This hymn was pub. as a leaflet, with music by Dr. Charles Vincent, in 1887. It is in 7 st. of 4 l., headed "Crucified and Crowned," and dated "Ascension Day, 1887." It is No. 236 in the 1890 ed. of the H. Comp. [J. J.]

Weary of earth, and laden with my sin. S. J. Stone. [Lent.] Written in 1866, and 1st pub. in the same year in his Lyra Fidelium, p. 44, in 8 st. of 4 l. It is based on Art. 10 of the Apostles' Creed, "The Forgiveness of Sins," and was written, originally, for a parochial mission. In 1868 Mr. Stone revised it for the Appendix to H. A. & M. From H. A. & M. it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America. It is one of the most tender and plaintive of Mr. Stone's hymns. In the American Laudes Domini, 1884, it is divided into two parts, pt. i. being st. i.-v.; and pt. ii. st. vi.-viii., altered to "O Jesus Christ the righteous I live in me." [J. J.]

Weary of this wordy strife. C. Wesley. [For Unity.] 1st pub. in 7 st. of 6 l. at the end of J. Wesley's Sermon on 2 Kings x. 15, in 1755. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. 71.) Two centos are in C. U. (1) "Weary of this wordy strife," in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883; and (2) "My brethren, friends, and kinsmen these," in the American Church Praise Book, N. Y., 1882. [J. J.]

Webb, Benjamin, M.A., was b. in London in 1820, and was educated in St. Paul's School; whence he passed to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1838, B.A. 1842, M.A. 1845. Ordained by the Bishop [Monk] of Gloucester and Bristol he was Assistant Curate of Kemeston in Gloucestershire, 1843-44; of Christ Church, St. Pancras, 1847-49; and of Brasted, Kent, 1849-51; at which date he was presented to the P. C. of Sheen in Staffordshire, which he held until 1862, when he became Vicar of St. Andrews, Wells Street, London. In 1881 the Bishop [Jackson] of London collated him to the Prebend of Portpool in St. Paul's Cathedral. Mr. Webb was one of the Founders of the Cambridge Canden, afterwards the Ecclesiological Society; and the Editor of the Ecclesiologist from 1842 to 1868, as well as the General Editor of the Society's publications. His first appearance in print was as joint editor of Bp. Montague's Articles of Inquiry in 1841; in 1843 he was joined with Mr. J. M. Neale in An Essay on Symbolism, and A Translation of Durandus; in 1847 he put forth his valuable work on Continental Ecclesiology; in 1848 he was joint editor with Dr. Mill of Frank's Sermons, for the Anglo-Catholic Library, and with the Rev. J. Fuller-Russell of Hierurgia Anglicana. After the decease of his father-in-law (Dr. Mill), he edited Dr. Mill's Catechetical Lectures, 1856; a second edition of Dr. Mill's Christian Advocates Publications on the Mythical Interpretation of the Gospels, 1861; and of Dr. Mill's Sermons on our Lord's Temptation, 1873. He was also one of the editors of the Burntisland reprint of the Sarum Missal. One of his most valuable works is Instructions and Prayers for Candidates for Confirmation, of which the third edition was pub. in 1882. Mr. Webb was one of the original editors of the Hymnal Noted, and of the sub-Committee of the Ecclesiological Society, appointed to arrange the words and the music of that book; and was also the translator of some of the hymns. In conjunction with the Rev. Canon W. Cooke he was editor of the Hymnary, 1872, for which office his habitual reconstruction and composition of the words of the anthems used at St. Andrew's, Wells Street, as well as his connection with the Hymnal Noted, eminently qualified him. His original hymns contributed to the Hymnary, 1871 and 1872, were:—

1. Assessor to thy King. St. Bartholomew. In the Hymnary, 1872.
2. Behold He comes, thy King most holy. Advent. Originally written to be sung in St. Andrew's Church, Wells Street, as an anthem to the music of Schumann's Advent-lied, and afterwards pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.
3. Praise God, the Holy Trinity. Hymn of Faith. Originally written for use in St. Andrew's, Wells Street, and subsequently in the Hymnary, 1872.
4. Praise the Rock of our salvation. Dedication of a Church. Pub. in the Hymnary, 1872. Mr. Webb's authorised text is in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883.
5. Ye angel hosts above. Universal Praise to God. In the Hymnary, 1872.

Mr. Webb's trs. are annotated elsewhere. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) He d. in London, Nov. 27, 1885. [Wm. C.]

Wedderburn, James, John and Robert, were the three sons of James Wedderburn, a Dundee merchant. James, the eldest, entered the University of St. Andrews in 1514. He afterwards went to France, and on his return produced tragedies and comedies in Scotch which roused the rage of the ecclesiastics, who forced him to flee, in 1540, to France, where he d., probably at Dieppe, about 1550. John, the second son, graduated M.A. at St. Andrews in 1528. Having entered the priesthood and officiated at Dundee, he fell under suspicion of heresy, and fled in 1539 to Wittenberg, where he associated with Luther, Melancthon, and other Reformers. There in his exile, doubtless under Luther's influence, he wrote and translated many of the psalms, hymns and ballads commonly known as The Gude and Godlie Ballates. After the death of James v. (Dec. 13, 1542), he returned to Scotland, but was forced in 1546 again to flee. He d. in England in 1556. Robert, the youngest son, graduated M.A. at St. Andrews in 1530. He entered the priesthood, and was Vicar of Dundee in 1553. He seems to have written a number of the "Ballates" proper. To him Dr. Laing would ascribe the remarkable Complaynt of Scotland, a satirical poem first pub. at St. Andrews in 1549. (See Scottish Hymnody, § 3; and the works by Dr. Laing and Dr. Mitchell mentioned in the Appendix to that article.) [J. M.]

Weep, mourner, for the joys that fade. W. Knox. [Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Harp of Zion, 1825, in 2 st. of 11 l., and entitled "Heaven." It is based on Job xix. 26. It was also included in his Poems, &c., 1847, p. 181, but is unknown to the hymnals in that form. As early as 1844 it was given in an altered form as: "O weep not for the joys that fade," in the American Unitarian Christian Hymns, of the Cheshire Pastoral Association, and, later, in other American collections, in most of which it is ascribed to Knowles, in error. [J. J.]

Wegelin, Josua, D.D., s. of Johann Wegelin, or Wegelein, then superintendent

(Ephorus) of the Evangelical college at Augsburg, was b. at Augsburg Jan. 11, 1604. After studying at the University of Tübingen (M.A. 1626), he was for a short time pastor at Budweiler, and was appointed in 1627 fourth diaconus of the Franciscan (Barfüßer) church at Augsburg. In 1629, along with 13 other Evangelical pastors, he was compelled to leave Augsburg by the decree of Restitution (see p. 1090, ii.) enacted by the Emperor Ferdinand III. After Gustavus Adolphus had become master of the city, in 1632, Wegelin was recalled to the Barfüßer Kirche as archidiaconus. In 1633 he was appointed preacher at the Hospital Church of the Holy Ghost, but in 1635, as a result of the battle of Nördlingen (Sept., 1634), he was again forced to flee from Augsburg. He found refuge at Pressburg, in Hungary, where he became pastor, and afterwards Senior, Inspector, and Doctor of Theology. He d. at Pressburg, Sept. 14, 1640 (Koch, iii. 169; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii. 1887, p. 161, &c.).

Wegelin's hymns are simple and natural, and are the productions of an earnest, true-hearted and good pastor rather than of a skilful poet. Goedeke, as above, gives lists of their first lines from his (1) Augsburger Bet Büchlein, Nürnberg, 1636 [copy in possession of Pastor E. Krause of Greifswald. There are also eds. which have the engraved title dated 1636, and the printed title dated 1648, a copy of the 8vo ed. being in the Göttingen Library, and a copy of the 12mo in the Library of the Pre diger Seminar at Hannover], and from his (2) Hand-Land- und Stand-Büchlein, Nürnberg, 1637 [Göttingen Library]. Some 20 of his hymns were included in J. M. Dilherr's G. B., Nürnberg, 1654 (p. 301, ii.), and other collections of the 17th cent.

The only hymn by Wegelin which has passed into English is:—

Allein auf Christi Himmelfahrt. Ascension. This is his most popular hymn. 1st pub. 1636, as above, p. 609 (Göttingen copy p. 562, Hannover copy p. 581), in 3 st. of 7 l. entitled, "iv. Short Psalm of Praise on the Ascension of Christ;" repeated in Dilherr's G. B., 1654, p. 394. In the Lüneburg G. B., 1661, No. 112, it is recast and begins, "Auf Christi Himmel-Fart allein"; this recast being probably made by the compiler Ernst Sonnemann (1658 corrector of the Latin school at Celle, 1661 pastor of St. Alexander's Church at Einbeck or Einbeck, in Hannover; d. at Einbeck, Nov. 17, 1670). Both forms are given in the Leipzig Vorrath, 1673, Nos. 388 and 389, and in the Uvw. L. S., 1851. Tr. as:—

1. Raise your Devotion, mortal Tongues. By J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 24; repeated, altered, in his 2nd ed., 1732, p. 41. In 1732 it is marked as tr. from the second form of Wegelin's hymn; in 1732 as from J. Zwick's Auf diesen Tag bedenken wir. It may be regarded as a very free tr. from Wegelin; with the first stanza taken from st. v., vi. of Isaac Watts's "Hosannah to the Prince of Light." The 1732 text was included as No. 443 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, with a new tr. of st. iii. added. This tr. of st. iii. was omitted in the 1789 and later eds. In the edition of 1886, No. 170, only st. i., ii. of Jacobi are retained.

2. Since Christ is gone to heaven, His home. This is a good tr. from the second form, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd ser., 1858, p. 47; and in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 314. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 64, it is altered in metre. [J. M.]

Wegleiter, Christoph, s. of Leonhardt Wegleiter, book-keeper at Nürnberg, was b. at Nürnberg, April 22, 1659. In 1676 he matriculated at the University of Altdorf, and so distinguished himself by his poetic gifts that he was, in 1679, received by S. von Birken as a member of the Pegnitz Shepherd and Flower order, and in 1680 was at once capped M.A. and laureated as a poet. After studying at other German universities, and making a lengthened tour (1685-88) in Germany, Holland, and England, he was appointed, in 1688, Professor of Theology at the University of Altdorf, and also diaconus of the Town Church there; receiving from the University the degree of D.D. in 1697. He d. at Altdorf Aug. 16 (13?), 1706 (Koch, iii., 502; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1885, p. 178; 1886, p. 157; 1887, pp. 30, 31; Will's Nürnbergisches Gelehrten Lexicon, pt. iv. p. 187, &c.).

Wegleiter was a successful professor, and an edifying preacher of the school of Spener and Francke. His hymns, some 25 in all, are thoughtful, original, and devout, but somewhat artificial in style. Six were contributed to the 2nd ed., 1691, of the Pegnitz Society's Poetischer Andachtsklang (p. 569, i.), and the rest appeared in various hymn-books of the period.

The only hymn by Wegleiter which has passed into English is:—

Beschwertes Herz, leg ab die Sorgen. Sunday Morning. 1st pub. in the Geistliche Hertenzen-Music, Schleussing, 1701, No. 497, in 8 st. of 8 l., entitled "Sunday Hymn," and marked as by "D. Christ. Wegleiter." Included in the Uvw. L. S., 1851. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to B. W. Marperger. Tr. as:—

Encumber'd heart! lay by thy sorrow. This is a good tr., omitting st. vi., vii., by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hymns from German, 1841, p. 59. Her trs. of st. iii., iv., ll. 1-4; viii., ll. 1-4, beginning, "My God, I now appear before Thee," are included in the Hedge & Huntington Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853, No. 9.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "O'erburden'd Heart, thy Labour banish," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 1. (2) "Now weary heart! thy cares dismiss," by Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 15. (3) "Now, heavy heart, away with sorrow," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 147. (4) "My burdened heart, throw off thy cares," by Dr. J. Guthrie, 1869, p. 114. (5) "O burden'd heart, cast off thy sorrow." This is No. 1012 in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. [J. M.]

Weingärtner, Sigismund. Very little is known of this author. His name appears as "Sigismund Weingart" in the Index of Authors prefixed to the 766 Geistliche Psalmen, &c., pub. at Nürnberg in 1607, but no biographical particulars are there given. He is generally said to have been a preacher in or near Heilbronn. But Koch, ii. 300, says that no preacher of that name ever held office in or near Heilbronn on the Neckar; and conjectures that he may have been of Heilsbronn in Bavaria. As to Heilsbronn, Dr. Zahn, now of Neundettelsau in Bavaria, informs me that there was no preacher of that name near Heilsbronn, and that he has been unable anywhere to trace this writer. Goedeke, in his Grundriss, vol. ii., 1884, p. 198, says, "he seems to have been of Basel," but for this also there is no clear evidence.

"S. W. Auf Jesum Christum steht all mein Thun, 765."
"Auf meinen lieben Gott, traw ich, 836."

The latter has been tr. into English, viz.:—

Auf meinen lieben Gott. Trust in God. Included, 1607, as above, p. 836, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Another beautiful hymn"; but, as will be seen above, no initials are attached to it in the 1607 index of First Lines. Later compilers, however (such as Jeremias Weber in his G. B., Leipzig, 1638, p. 767; marked as "Another. Sigismund Weingärtner's"), transferred the initials given in the 1607 index, and so ascribed "Auf meinen lieben Gott," to Weingärtner. This ascription is probably a mistake. L. Curtze in his D. Philipp Nicolai's Leben und Lieder, 1859, p. 10, ascribes the hymn to Friedrich Beurhais, since 1567 prorector of the school at Dortmund (d. 1609), but this also lacks confirmation. Wackernagel, v. p. 433, gives it as anonymous, printing it from M. Vulpius's G. B., 1609, with a second form from J. Aldenberger's Gebetbüchlein, Nürnberg, 1611. Whoever was the author the hymn is certainly a good one, and has been a great favourite in Germany. In the Uvw.

L. S., 1851, No. 694, st. i.-iv., vi. are as in 1607, and st. v. is one of the st. added in C. Demantius's Threnodiae, Freiberg, 1620. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. On God in all my woes. This is a good tr. of st. i.-iv. of the 1607, by A. T. Russell, as No. 231 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. In God my faithful God. This is a good and full tr. from the 1607, by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 147, slightly altered in her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 156. Repeated, omitting st. iv., in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1886.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "In God the Lord most just," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 82; repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 474. (2) "I trust my blessed God," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 219.

[J. M.]

Weisse, Michael (Weiss, Wiss, Wegs, Weys, Weys), was b. circa 1480, in Neisse, Silesia, took priest's orders, and was for some time a monk at Breslau. When the early writings of Luther came into his hands, Weisse, with two other monks, abandoned the convent, and sought refuge in the Bohemian Brethren's House at Leutomischl in Bohemia. He became German preacher (and apparently founder of the German communities) to the Bohemian Brethren at Landskron in Bohemia, and Fulnek in Moravia, and d. at Landskron in 1534 (Koch, ii. 115-120; Wackernagel's D. Kirchentiel. i. p. 727; Fontes rerum Austriacarum, Scriptores, vol. ii. pt. ii. p. 227, Vienna, 1863, &c.).

Weisse was admitted as a priest among the Brethren at the Synod of Brandeis, in 1531, and in 1532 was appointed a member of their Select Council, but he had previously performed important missions for the Brethren. He was, e.g., sent by Bishop Lucas, in 1522, along with J. Roh or Horn, to explain the views of the Bohemian Brethren to Luther; and again, in 1524, when they were appointed more especially to report on the practices and holiness of life of the followers of the German Reformers. He was also entrusted with the editing of the first German hymn-book of the Bohemian Brethren, which appeared as Ein New Gesengbuchten at Jungen Bunzel (Jung Bunzlau) in Bohemia in 1531 (see pp. 156, i., and 157). This contained 155 hymns, all apparently either translations or else originals by himself. The proportion of trs. is not very clear. In the preface to the 1531, Weisse addressing the German Communities at Fulnek and Landskron says, "I have also, according to my power, put forth all my ability, your old hymn-book as well as the Bohemian hymn-book (Cantional) being before me, and have brought the same sense, in accordance with Holy Scripture, into German rhyme." So Johann Roh in the preface to the 1544 ed. speaks of himself as correcting "hymns which he (i.e. Weisse) transferred from Bohemian into German"; and the 1639 ed. speaks of Weisse as having "begun to translate the (Bohemian) Cantional, and rendered 143 hymns into German." Mr. Müller, however (see p. 157), has only been able to identify 12 as trs. from the Bohemian.

Luther called Weisse "a good poet, with somewhat erroneous views on the Sacrament" (i.e. Holy Communion); and, after the Sacramental hymns had been revised by Roh (1544), included 12 of his hymns in V. Babst's G. B., 1545. Many of his hymns possess considerable merit. The style is flowing and musical, the religious tone is earnest and manly, but yet tender and truly devout, and the best of them are distinguished by a certain charming simplicity of thought and expression. At least 119 passed into the German Lutheran hymn-books of the 16th and 17th centuries, and many are still in use. Three are annotated in this Dictionary at pp. 395, ii.; 822, i.; and 886, i.

The following hymns by Weisse have also passed into English:—

i. Christus ist erstanden, Von des Todes Banden. East. 1st pub. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 273, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is suggested by the older hymn, "Christ ist erstanden" (p. 225, i.). In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 129. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Christ the Lord is risen again! This is a full and very good tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her

Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 37, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 58. It has been included in many recent English and American hymnals; generally omitting st. ii., as in H. A. & M., 1861; Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1880-82; Cong. Ch. Hyl., 1887, and in America in the Epis. Hyl., 1871; Bapt. Service of Song, 1871, &c. Further abridged forms are in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; and in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and many others, especially in America.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Christ (and 'tis no wonder"). This is No. 260 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Christ our Lord is risen," by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 322.

ii. Es geht daher des Tages Schein. Morning. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 318, in 7 st. of 4 l. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 455. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. The Light of Day again we see. In full, by H. J. Buckoll in his Hys. from German, 1842, p. 14. His trs. of st. iii., iv., vi., vii., beginning "Great God, eternal Lord of Heaven," were included in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1843.

2. Once more the day-light shines abroad. This is a full and very good tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 69, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 18. Repeated in Thring's Coll., 1880-82.

iii. Gelobt sei Gott im höchsten Thron. East. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 265, in 20 st. of 3 l., with Alleluia. In the Pfalz G. B., 1859, No. 19, five st. are given, and in Layriz's Kern, 1844, No. 139, there are six st. At p. 157 it is marked as from the Bohemian (1st pub. 1501), the Bohemian being suggested by the "Surrexit Christus hodie" (p. 1104, i.), and the German being based on both. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Praise God upon His heavenly throne. This is a free tr. of st. 1, 4, 10, 19, 20, by A. T. Russell, as No. 112, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. Glory to God upon His throne. By Mrs. H. R. Spaeth, in the Southern Lutheran Service and Hys. for Sunday Schools, Philadelphia, 1883.

iv. Gott sah zu seiner Zeit. Christmas. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 244, in 10 st. of 9 l. The tr. in C. U. is:—

When the due Time had taken place. By C. Kinchen, omitting st. v., as No. 169 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1849, No. 20). In the ed. of 1886, No. 954 consists of st. x., beginning "Ah come, Lord Jesus, hear our prayer."

v. Lob sei dem allmächtigen Gott. Advent. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 230, in 14 st. of 4 l. Included in V. Babst's G. B., 1545, and recently as No. 12 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. In the larger ed. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, it is marked as a tr. from a Bohemian hymn, beginning "Cirkev Kristova Boha chval." The trs. are:—

1. Praise be to that Almighty God. By J. Gambold, omitting st. xi.-xiii., as No. 246, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the 1789 and later eds. (1886, No. 31), it begins "To God we render thanks and praise."

2. O come, th' Almighty's praise declare. By A. T. Russell, of st. i.-iii., v., as No. 26 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

vi. O Herre Jesu Christ, der du erschienen bist. For Children. On Christ's Example in His early years on earth. 1531 as above, and in Wackernagel, iii. p. 326, in 7 st. of 7 l. The first three st. are tr. as "Christ Jesus, Lord most dear," in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 278. The form in C. U. is that in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 2951 (1865, No. 2601), which begins "Nun hilf uns, o Herr Jesu Christ," and is in 3 st. of 4 l., entirely recast. This is tr. as:—

Lord Jesus Christ, we come to Thee. In full from Knapp, by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 179.

Hymns not in English C. U. :—

vii. Den Vater dort oben. Grace after Meat. 1531, and thence in Wackernagel, iii., p. 321, in 5 st. of 7 l. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1136. Tr. as, "Father, Lord of mercy," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 117. In his ed., 1732, p. 183, slightly altered, and thence in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 290.

viii. Die Sonne wird mit ihrem Schein. Evening. 1531, and thence in Wackernagel, iii., p. 323, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 517. Tr. as, "Soon from our wishful eyes awhile," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842.

ix. Komm, heiliger Geist, wahrer Gott. Whitsuntide. 1531, and in Wackernagel, iii., p. 282, in 9 st. of 5 l. From the Bohemian as noted at p. 157, and partly suggested by the "Veni Sancte Spiritus reple" (q.v.). The trs. are: (1) "Come, Holy Ghost, Lord God indeed." This is No. 285 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Thou great Teacher, Who instructest." This is a tr. of st. vii., as No. 234 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1849, No. 267).

x. Lob und Ehr mit stettem Dankopfer. The Creation: Septuagesima. 1531, and in Wackernagel, iii., p. 287, in 5 st. of 16 l. Tr. as, "Praise, glory, thanks, be ever paid," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 137.

xi. O Jesu Christ, der Heiden Licht. Epiphany. 1531, and in Wackernagel, iii., p. 248, in 2 st. of 14 l. Tr. as, "O Jesus Christ, the Gentiles' Light." This is No. 253 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1467, st. ii. was rewritten. This form begins, "Erscheine allen Auserwählten," and is in 4 st. of 4 l. Tr. as, "Lord, to Thy chosen ones appear," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 139.

xii. Singet lieben Leut. Redemption by Christ. 1531, and in Wackernagel, iii., p. 243, in 16 st. of 4 l. Tr. as, "Sing, be glad, ye happy sheep." This is a tr. of st. xiv., by C. G. Clemens, as No. 299 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the 1801 and later eds. (1849, No. 403) it begins, "O rejoice, Christ's happy sheep."

Besides the above the following in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, are also from Weisse (the numbers in brackets being references to the complete hymns in vol. iii. of Wackernagel, in cases where the tr. does not begin with st. i. of the original), viz. Nos. 247, 248, 250, 255, 256 (iii., 294), 257, 261, 270, 271 (iii., 351), 272, 273 (iii., 401), 280 (iii., 355), 284, 288 (see p. 157. Trs. from the Bohemian, No. 2), 289 (iii., 378), 292. [J. M.]

Weissel, Georg, s. of Johann Weissel, judge and afterwards burgomaster at Domnau, near Königsberg, was b. at Domnau in 1590. He studied at the University of Königsberg, from 1608 to 1611, and thereafter, for short periods, at Wittenberg, Leipzig, Jena, Strassburg, Basel and Marburg. In 1614 he was appointed rector of the school at Friedland near Domnau, but resigned this post after three years, and returned to Königsberg to resume his studies in theology. Finally, in 1623, he became pastor of the newly erected Altrossgart church at Königsberg, where he remained till his death, on August 1, 1635 (Koch, iii. 180; Altpreussische Monatsschrift, 1867, p. 430; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 122, &c.).

Weissel was one of the most important of the earlier hymn-writers of Prussia. His hymns, about 20 in all, are good in style, moderate in length, and varied in metre. The earliest seem to have been written for use at the consecration of the Altrossgart church on the 2nd S. in Advent, 1623. The majority are for the greater festivals of the Christian year. The best are No. ii. below, and those for the dying. They appeared mostly in the Königsberg hymn-books, 1639-1650, and in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., [Elbing, 1642; pt. ii., Königsberg, 1644 [Berlin Library].

Those of Weissel's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Im finstern Stall, o Wunder gross. Christmas. 1st pub. in B. Derschau's Ausserlesene geistliche Lieder, Königsberg, 1639, p. 7, in 5 st. of 5 l. In the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., 1642, No. 14, it is entitled "On the Birth of Christ, Lux in tenebris lucet," and in the Index is marked as by Georg Weisselius. Repeated in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 66, and as No. 168 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The tr. in C. U. is:—

O miracle of love and might! This is a somewhat free tr., omitting st. v., by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 104 in his Hymno. Christ., 1863.

ii. Macht hoch die Thür, das Thor macht weit. Advent. This is a Hymn of Triumph for the Entry of the King of Glory, founded on Ps. xxiv.; and is one of the finest German Advent hymns. 1st pub. in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., 1642, No. 2, in 5 st. of 8 l., marked as "On the 1st S. of Advent," and in the Index marked as by Georgius Weisselius. Included in Crüger's Praxis, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1662, and most later books, as e.g. the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1599. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Lift up your heads, ye mighty gates. This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 10, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 25. In the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, the Evang. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and others, the original form is followed. In the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Bapt. Hyl., 1879; Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others, ll. 7, 8 of each stanza are omitted. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 17, ll. 1-4 of each stanza are given, and then ll. 6, 7 of st. iv., v. are added as a sixth st.—this form being followed in the Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874; Meth. Epis. Hyl., 1878, and other American Colls. Other forms are:—

(1) Behold One cometh from afar (1. alt.). This (partly from Mercer) is in the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. H. Bk., and the 1874 Appx. to the Leeds H. Bk.

(2) Behold He cometh from afar. In J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, altered from No. 1.

(3) Oh! hallowed is the land and blest (iii. l. 1, alt.). In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, &c.

(4) O blest the souls, for ever blest (iii. l. 1, alt.). In Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864.

(5) Fling wide the portals of your heart (iv.). In the American Unitarian H. Bk., 1868.

2. The mighty gates of earth unbar. This is by W. Mercer, based on Miss Winkworth's tr., in his Church P. & H. Bk., 1857, No. 14 (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 71), repeated in Kennedy, 1863.

Another tr. is: "Lift up, lift up your heads, ye gates," by G. Moultrie, in his Spousals of S. Dorothea, 1870.

iii. Wo ist dein Stachel nun, o Tod? Easter. Founded on 1 Cor. xv., 55-58. 1st pub. as No. 3 in pt. ii., 1644, of the Preussische Fest-Lieder, in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled "For the Easter festival," and in the index marked as by Georgius Weisse-lius. Thence in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 193, and others. The form which has passed into English is that in the Hannover G. B., 1657, No. 74, in 10 st., repeated as No. 315 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. This, beginning "O Tod, wo ist dein Stachel nun," is entirely rewritten, probably by Justus Gesenius. Tr. as:—

Death! where is thy cruel sting! This is a full and good version of the 1657 text, as No. 80 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, marked as a compilation, [J. M.]

Weissensee, Philipp Heinrich, was b. Feb. 6, 1673, at Vichberg, near Gaildorf, Württemberg, where his father was pastor and consistorialrath. He studied at the University of Tübingen, and, after acting as assistant to several clergymen, became, in 1697, a tutor to the court pages at Stuttgart. In 1703 he was appointed a tutor in the clergy training school at Maulbronn, and in 1708 in that at Blaubeuren. He was then appointed, in 1722, prelate at Blaubeuren, and in 1727 took up residence at Stuttgart as prelate of Hirsau and member of the Württemberg consistory. For political reasons he was removed, in 1740, to Denkendorf near Esslingen, as Probst and General Superintendent. He d. at Denkendorf, Jan. 6, 1767, being then the Father and Senior of the Lutheran Church in Württemberg (Koch, v. 79; B. Haug's Liederdichter des württembergischen Landesangesangsbuchs, 1780, p. 42, and Appx. ii., &c.).

Weissensee was one of the earliest friends of Foreign Missions, being specially interested in that to Malabar. He was a good poet, and in 1718 pub. a German metrical version of Thomas à Kempis's Imitation. The most important of his hymns were contributed to the 2nd ed. of J. A. Grammlich's Vierzig Betrachtungen von Christi Leiden und Tod, auf die Vierzig Tagen in den Fasten, Stuttgart, 1727 [Berlin Library. The 1st ed., 1722, has no hymns].

Those of Weissensee's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Der Tod kommt an: da soll ich ringen. For the Dying. 1st pub. 1727, as above, p. 144, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the companion to Meditation on St. Luke xxii. 44. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837 and 1865. In Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 888, it begins "Kommt an den Tod, da ich soll ringen." The tr. in C. U. is:

When the last agony draws nigh. This is a good tr. of st. i., iv., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 239; repeated as No. 543 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868.

ii. Jesu, hilf beten! and bete du Treuer. Prayer. 1st pub. 1727 as above, p. 124, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the companion to Meditation x. on St. Luke xxii. 40. Included in the Württemberg G. B., 1742, No. 94 (1842, No. 265). Tr. as "Help me to pray, Lord! and make supplication," by J. D. Burns in his Memoir and Remains, 1869, p. 232. [J. M.]

Welsh Hymnody. No reasonable doubt can exist as to hymns being sung in the early British Church. People whose muse always sang the praises of men, whether kings, warriors, or patriots, would scarcely fail to pour forth their feelings of devotion, and to give the highest scope possible to their muse in the form of hymns or sacred lyrics. In the works of Taliesin, who is supposed to be a bard of the sixth century, reference is made to the hymnology of that period, "Nid cerddor celfydd ni molwy Ddafydd; nid cywir ceimaid ni molwy y Tâd"; that is, "No musician is skilful unless he extols the Lord, and no singer is correct unless he praises the Father."

In the works of Llawdden, a bard who took a prominent part in the reformation of Welsh poetry in the year 1451, some reference is also made to the hymnology of the mediæval period:—

"Mi a luniaf fun lanwaith, Gywyddau a Salmu saith;
A naw emyn o newydd,
A phawb gair i Fair fydd."

Tudur Aled, also, says that in heaven it will be a part of the saints' supremest joy to sing the Virgin's praises:—

"Cawn wynfyd, cawn y Wenfair, Cawn y nef oll, canwn i Fair."

In the year 1340, Davydd Ddu o Hira dng Vicar of Tremeirchion, and Canon of St. Asaph, composed some hymns, perhaps the first Welsh hymns, since the early Church hymns were lost. He also translated the Te Deum, in the Welsh metre known as Hypynt or Vaulted Strain. His sacred poem, Am Ddiwedd Dyn a'i Gorph, is printed in the Myvyrian Archaeology of Wales. Also a very poetical translation of the Officium B. Mariæ from Latin into Welsh by him, fills thirty columns of the first volume of the Myvyrian Archaeology.

At the time of the Protestant Reformation the Welsh appeared to have lost the spirit of sacred song. On the Continent the Reformation was the signal for an outburst of vernacular hymnology. Luther's hymns and psalms fired the hearts of his followers, so that his opponents feared his hymns more than his sermons, and England and Wales caught the fire.

i. Established Church.—In the years 1549–62, Sternhold and Hopkins gave to the English people the Metrical Psalms; but Wales had to wait many years for the appearance of a poet whose name is now familiar to all Welshmen, as well as the task he so admirably performed—Salmau Edmund Prys.

1. Vicar Prichard, commonly known as Vicar Rees Prichard (p. 909, i.), did good service as a hymnologist. It appears that his book called Canwyll y Cymry; or, the Welshman's Candle, was at one time much used, and some of its quaint verses sung as hymns, probably for the want of something better, for in his days the voice of sacred song and praise was scarcely heard in Wales. His compositions were in use before Archdeacon Prys's Psalms were published. On the decay of religion in Wales, according to one author, when the recognised teachers of the people neglected their duty, The Welshman's Candle appeared and was extensively circulated. Much of it was sung, for it served as a kind of Welsh hymn-book. It was the beginning of a new era. The following is one of his hymns, that was much used before and after Archdeacon Prys's Psalms appeared. The title is:—Mawlgan am gariad Crist at y byd (or, Praise for Christ's love for the world):—

"Rhyfedd fawr gariad Mab Duw at y byd,
Pan ddaeth ef o'r Nefoedd i'n prynu mor ddrud;
Myfyriwn i gofio am gariad Mab Duw,
A'i foll'n wastadol tra byddom ni byw.
Cyflawnodd y Gyfraith, boddlonodd ei Dâd,
Fe brynodd ein pardwn, fe'i seliodd â'i waed;
Fe'n dygodd ni eilwaith i heddwch â Duw,
Molianwn yr Iesu tra byddom ni byw.
Fe ddug ar y Croesbren ein pechod bob un,
Fe'n golchodd o'n belau a'i wir waed ei hun;
Fe'n gwnaeth yn frenhinol offeiriad i Dduw,
Molianwn yr Iesu tra byddom ni byw.
Gogoniant a gallu a diolch bob pryd,
A fo fr Glân Drindod o'n prynu mor ddrud;
A mawr-glod a moliant i'n Frynwr a'n Pen,
A d'wedded pob Cristion yn wastad, Amen."

This may be taken as a specimen of his style, and of the early hymns that were heard from every mouth in the Principality before the time of Archdeacon Prys.

"It is scarcely credible," says Canon Williams, "with what avidity and pleasure the work was received, read, repeated, and it may be said, sung by the people."

2. Archdeacon Prys (p. 915, ii.), however, is the connecting link between our Hymnody and the Reformation period. It was in the year 1621 that he turned the Psalms into a metrical shape, in order, as he quaintly puts it, "that the Welsh people might be enabled to praise God from their hearts." It was a glorious task. His version of the Psalms is still used. Some have thought it dry and stiff, but on the whole the task was admirably performed. The Ven. Archdeacon Prys was a man of deep learning and piety. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he took his degree. He assisted Dr. Morgan in the translation of the Welsh Bible; and from his Metrical Psalms, Englynion, Cywyddau, and other things composed by him, we have abundant evidence that he was a man of culture, taste and capacity, and that he possessed the religious spirit that could enter into sympathetic relations with the authors of the Psalms, and interpret them from his inmost soul. In some cases, indeed, his rendering of the Psalms, and his recasting them as it were in his own mould, sheds a flood of light on their meaning. His version of the latter part of the 110th Psalm has been pointed out as an illustration of this: "He shall drink of the brook in the way, therefore shall he lift up the head."

"O wir frys i'r gyflafan hon,
Fe yf o'r afon nesa
A gaffo, ar ei ffordd yn rhwydd
Yr Arglwydd a'i dyrchafa."

That of itself is a sufficient commentary on the Psalm, and its reference to the sufferings and exaltation of the Messiah. It has been said that the Archdeacon's translation of the Psalms is dry and rugged, and that in several places he is guilty of breaking the fixed rules of poetry, and of frequently ignoring the principle of metres so thoroughly developed in Welsh poetry. This, I believe, is a mistake. The old poet, if fairly dealt with, shows that he understood and recognised the principles of rhyme and metre, and the various ways of measuring and adorning Welsh poetry, and their development into a system and rules of art. I do not say that his metrical Psalms are faultless, but I hold that he is not so guilty of the fault called camaceniad, as some have accused him of being. I believe he has respected the rules of rhyme and rhythm, and where he is thought guilty of trampling on those of metre, he is skilfully avoiding doing so by changing the metrical feet and autometers [cyhydeddau a'r corfannau]. The ninety-second Psalm, in which occurs the famous stanza:—

"Y rhai a blannwyd yn nhy Dduw,
Yn goedwig fyw y tyfant;
Ac yn nghynteddau ein Duw ni

is an excellent translation.

3. Next to the Archdeacon's comes the name of Rowland Vaughan (p. 1206, i.), a gentleman, a scholar, and an excellent poet, although his chief mark was made as a translator of hymns, &c. His translation of that beautiful hymn, "Veni Creator Spiritus," is well-known. Whether he translated the original Latin or the English of Bishop Cosin we are not able to decide. The English and Welsh metres, however, differ, the Welsh being a little shorter than the English, but in sweetness, vividness and strength the Welsh far surpasses the English. We quote the opening stanza of each, together with the original:—

"Veni Creator Spiritus
Mentes tuorum visita,
Imple superna gratia,
Quae tu creasti pectora."

"Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And lighten with celestial fire;
Thou the anointing spirit art
Who dost thy seven-fold gifts impart."

"Tyr'd Ysbryd Glân i'n c'lonau ni,
A dod d'oleuni nefol;
Tydi wyt Ysbryd Crist, dy ddawn
Sydd fawr iawn a rhagorol."

Rowland Vaughan's tr. of the Veni Creator Spiritus, and Galarnad Pechadur, ought to be remembered, for we have nothing more beautiful in the whole range of Welsh Hymnody.

4. Elis Wyn o Lasynys (p. 1295, ii.), (or Bardd Cwsg) should be mentioned in connection with this period. One of the best Welsh hymns we have was composed by him, and was as much admired then as it is now. It is a funeral hymn, or, as the Welsh people call it, "Eryn Cynhebrwng, neu Wylnos." It always appeared in Welsh editions of the Prayer-book after 1710:—

"Myfi yw'r Adgyfodiad mawr,
Myfi yw gwawr y bywyd;
Caiff pawb a'm cred, medd f'Arglwydd Dduw,
Er trengu, fyw mewn eilfyd.
A'r sawl sy'n byw mewn ufudd gred
Ini, caiff ddrwydded nefol,
Na allo'r Angau brenhin braw,
Ddrwg iddaw yn drag 'wyddol.
Yn wir, yn wir, medd Gwir ei Hun,
Pob cyfryw ddy'n sy'n gwrando
Fy nghair, gan greu'r Tad a'm rhoes,
Mae didranc einioes ganddo.
A wnel ei oreu'n ufuddhau,
Trwy fydd i'm geiriau hlyfryd;
Ni ddaw i farn, ond trwodd aeth,
O angau caeth, i fywyd."

Some of his works are mentioned in his biographical notice, q.v.

5. The Rev. Griffith Jones (p. 605, ii.), of Llanddowror, published a hymn-book under the title of Casgliad o Hymnau, gan y Parch. Griffith Jones. (A Collection of Hymns by the Rev. Griffith Jones.) We have not been able to find any hymns composed by this celebrated clergyman. The hymns in his collection were selections from the works of different authors. The Rev. Griffith Jones has been called the morning star of the Reformation in Wales. His voice had been heard speaking against corruption and sins rampant in Wales more than twenty years before Rowland and Harris began to rouse the country. Williams of Pantycelyn refers to this in his elegy to the Rev. Griffith Jones:—

"Dyma'r gŵr a dorrodd allan,
Rony'n bach cyn torri'r wawr;
Had fe hauodd, fe eginodd,
Fe ddaeth yn gynhauf mawr."

His collection of Hymns is not in use now, though some of the hymns it contained are still sung by Welsh congregations.

6. The Rev. Evan Evans (Glangetrionydd), is the chief hymnologist of this century. He published two books of hymns and tunes between the years 1829 and 1841. He was Vicar of Rhyl, and died in the year 1850. "Ar lan Iorddonen ddofn," and "O Dduw, rho i'm dy bedd," are two of his hymns that have been sung, and are still sung with unction by many Welsh congregations. Most of his hymns are tender and plaintive. His collections of hymns and tunes are not in use in the Welsh Church now, but in every edition of hymns published in Wales by Churchmen and Dissenters, since his time, his hymns always appear among the choicest.

Several hymn-books have appeared for use in the Established Church in Wales, from time to time, since the days of the Rev. Griffith Jones. Often clergymen composed and collected a number of hymns for one or two or more parishes. This seems to have been the state of things during the greater part of the seventeenth century. After that larger collections were published, but with no efforts to secure for the Welsh Church one general hymn-book. The hymns sung by the Church were much the same as those sung by Nonconformists throughout Wales.

7. The Rev. Robert Davies, M.A., published a collection of hymns which proved useful in parts of North Wales. It was called:—

Hymnau ar Wyliau ac Ymryddiaid Eglwys Loegr, wedi eu casglu allan o waith gwahanol awdwyr, yn rhwng ag amryw rai newyddion; that is, "Hymns on the Feasts and Fasts of the Church of England, collected from the works of different authors, with several New Hymns, by the Rev. Robert Davies, M.A., of Cambridge, and Curate of Rhuddlan, in Flintshire."

Singularly the book has no date. It was published at Denbigh. Several of its hymns are found in the collections of the present day.

Another hymn-book which was in use in many churches, was called Daniel Jones's Book. The Rev. Daniel Jones was a celebrated clergyman in South Wales. He was Vicar of St. Dogmel's in Pembrokeshire. His book is still used in some parts of Wales. Another collection was called The Bishops' Hymn-book. This was collected and published under the direction of the four Bishops, and was an attempt to provide a book for the general use of the Church in Wales. The attempt was not successful; for some reason or other the work failed to commend itself to the universal favour of the Welsh Church.

8. There are three collections which have had a large circulation, and are now used throughout the Principality. (1) Hymnau Hên a Newydd, or "Hymns Ancient and Modern," London, Haddon, 1868, 555 H.; enlarged in 1875 to 596 H., not to be confounded with the English hymn-book of the same name, though the Introits are added, and it is of a similar school. (2) The Rev. Canon Daniel Evans's book, Hymnau a Thonau, London, Novello, 1865, 504 H.; and the (3) Emynydd by the late Rev. T. Williams, Rector of St. George, dedicated to the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph.

These three books contain many of the same hymns, being selections from the works of Williams of Pantycelyn, Morgan Rhys, Ann Griffiths, Rev. E. Evans, and translations from English collections. These hymns as yet belong to no party in the Church, but are hymns that may be sung by all. Complaints are made by some clergymen that many of the hymns are of too subjective a cast, and that they should be replaced by hymns more objective in character, and there is also a demand for more Sacramental Hymns. There is now [1886] in course of preparation, by the Rev. Elis Roberts, Vicar of Llangwn; and the Rev. W. G. Thomas, Vicar of St. Asaph, a new hymnal which is intended, in accordance with the Bishop of St. Asaph's desire, to be a good and acceptable hymnal for the use of the Church in Wales.

ii. Calvinistic Methodists.

1. During the latter part of the eighteenth century a complete change came over the country. The cold negligent spirit which had characterised the first half, disappeared, the people were shaken from a long deep sleep, and with the revival came a love for hymns and spiritual songs. The Methodist revival is a starting point from which has been unfolded a rich and pure literature that will bear comparison with anything of the same nature produced by the most cultured nations. Foremost in the rank of religious poets stands the Rev. W. Williams (b. 1717, d. 1791) of Pantycelyn. He was a most prolific writer. It is a matter of history that his sacred songs and hymns did more than anything else to arouse the people and create a taste for reading in all parts of Wales. The extensive circulation and the universal reception given to his hymns published at different times between the years 1744 and 1758, must lead us to believe that they carried a mighty influence, and were a great factor in the education of the people of Wales. People who could not themselves read soon learnt the hymns, and thousands of people knew a great many of them by heart. All his works appeared in one volume in 1758, and contained upwards of 800 hymns. They are still in general use in the Established Church, and among the different denominations.

2. Morgan Rhys, of Llanfynydd (d. 1776), worked well to build up Welsh hymnody. There are about two hundred of his hymns now extant. Many of them are the favourite hymns of Welsh congregations. The following:—

"O agor fy llygaid i weled"

"Dyna Geidwad i'r colledig"

"O gariad, o gariad, anfeidrol ei fraint," &c., have found their way into every collection of hymns by Churchmen and Nonconformists. He was a contemporary of Williams of Pantycelyn, and belonged to the same religious body.

3. The Rev. David Morris, David Charles, and Thomas Charles, have contributed to the hymnology of Wales. The well-known hymn, "O fryniau Caersalem-ceir gwelod," by the Rev. D. Charles, of Caermarthen, is to be found in all Welsh hymnals. The Rev. Thomas Charles, of Bala, the eminent divine, and one of the founders of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and organizer of the Sunday School as it now exists in Wales, has left behind him only one hymn, but of such a beautiful character as to make Welsh people wish he had done more in that direction. This hymn is in the Calvinistic Hymn-book, now in use among that body throughout the country. It begins, "Dyfais fawr trag'wyddol gariad." In that book it is divided into two parts with five verses in each part. The Rev. D. Charles, jun., is the translator of "Jerusalem, my happy home," as "O Salem, fy anwyl gartrefe."

4. The Calvinistic Hymn-book that we have just referred to, was published by the authority of the General Assembly of the Calvinistic Methodists, and is perhaps the most perfect hymnal in Wales. It is the only hymn-book used among the congregations of that body throughout the Principality. A list of the authors from whose works the hymns are selected is given in the beginning of the book, and the number of authors is over fifty, but by far the greatest number of hymns is taken from W. Williams of Pantycelyn. The book was prepared by a committee appointed by the General Assembly, and bears the date of 1869.

iii. Congregational.

1. One of the first editions of hymns, if not the first ever published, for the Congregationalists in Wales, was by the Rev. T. Baddy, in 1703, about 14 years before Williams of Pantycelyn was born, and about 82 years after the appearance of Archdeacon Prys's Psalms. Baddy published an edition of hymns under the title of Sacramental Hymns, and also a translation of Thomas Doolittle's Christian's Passover, to which were added six hymns to be sung after receiving Holy Communion.

2. In the year 1714, the Rev. D. Lewis, Newport, published Heavenly Songs and Spiritual Hymns. Nothing is known of him beyond the fact that he was a minister of the gospel in South Wales.

3. In 1742, the Rev. Herbert Jenkins issued his Hymnau Duwiol. Mr. Jenkins was a minister at Maidstone, where he d. in 1772, after a ministry of more than 24 years.

4. David Jones, of Caio, is known as the translator of Dr. Watts's works. He published his translation of Watts's Psalms in 1753, and soon afterwards a translation of Watts's Divine Songs.

5. The Rev. Ioan Thomas, of Rhaiadr, published many editions of hymns between the years 1776 and 1786, under the titles of Caniadau Sion, and Hymnau yn perthyn i'r Drysorfa Eurcaidd (or, "Hymns relating to the Golden Treasury" [a Magazine]). There are extant about 187 of his hymns, many of which are still used in many congregations.

6. The Rev. Thomas Williams (q.v.), of Bethesda'r Frô, was a prolific hymn-writer. He published his first collection of hymns in 1812. They became very popular among the Independents, and other denominations in Wales.

7. The Congregationalists have had several collections of hymns since the publication of Watts's Hymns, &c. In 1840, Mr. Evan Edwards, of Mold, brought out a collection, and Dr. Rees published the Perganiedydd (or, "The Sweet Singer") in 1847. Another collection by the Rev. E. Griffiths, of Swansea, appeared in 1857; and Caledfryn's Collection, in 1861. Their best collection is Aberth Moliant, pub. in Liverpool (?), chief ed. Dr. W. Rees.

8. The collection known as S. R., published in 1841, is still used by some congregations.

9. The collection of hymns and tunes in general use among the Congregationalists at present, is Jones & Stephens, published in 1868; and a 2nd ed. by Stephens in 1869. This last book contains the principal hymns of Williams of Pantycelyn; D. Jones, of Caio, D. Williams, Ann Griffiths, Edward Jones, B. Francis, and others.

iv. Baptists.

1. The first collection of hymns belonging to the Baptist denomination in Wales, was by the Rev. Joseph Harris [Gomer], 1821, and this was their only book for many years. The hymns it contained were principally selections, but it contained also many new hymns by "Gomer" himself and his talented son, Ieuan Ddu, also by the Rev. Benjamin Francis, Titus Lewis, and D. Saunders. It contained about 800 hymns.

2. Later the Rev. Daniel Jones, of Liverpool, made a large collection which was adopted by several congregations, but although it contained many excellent hymns, new and old, it never reached a second edition. After that, the Rev. Robert Jones, Llanllyfni, issued a collection containing new hymns by himself and others. This obtained considerable patronage among the churches in North Wales, and is still in use in some congregations.

3. In the year 1867 another collection made its appearance, compiled by the late Rev. Lewis Jones, of Pwllheli, containing about 1200 hymns. This is extensively used in both South and North Wales.

4. There are also several local hymn-books in use in a few churches in South Wales. In some cases a collection is confined to one congregation.

5. Lately, however, another candidate has made its appearance, and has secured a very large circulation. It is called Llawlyfr Moliant (or, "The Hand-book of Praise"), and was prepared by a committee appointed by the Carnarvon Association, and first published in 1881. It contains 422 hymns and 125 tunes. Between 30,000 and 40,000 copies of this book have been sold.

6. A new edition of J. Harris's (Gomer's) book was published, but arranged differently from the first. "Gomer's" arrangement was topical or doctrinal, but the arrangement of this edition is metrical.

v. Wesleyan Methodists.

1. The Wesleyan Body has a large collection of hymns from different sources which was pub. at Llanidloes in 1846. It contains 1040 hymns. This hymnal was prepared by persons appointed by the Synod. The work is also recommended by two Chief Ministers from North Wales, and two from South Wales. Some of the hymns are very good. Several of the hymns are by Williams, of Pantycelyn (with alterations), and other Welsh hymn-writers. Many of the Wesleys' hymns are translated in this hymnal, and with other translations from the English have become favourite hymns among the congregations of the Welsh Wesleyans.

vi. Unitarians.

The Welsh Unitarians, like their brethren in England, developed in the 18th cent. chiefly out of the old Presbyterian congregations; passing through the same stages of Arminian and Arian doctrine. [Cf. Unit. Hymnody.]

1. The first book to be used in their congregations appears to have been the translation of Watts's Psalms, by David Jones, of Caio, 1753.

2. In 1796 Rev. Josiah Rees, of Gellionen, pub. a collection of hymns, and the year following a selection from Watts's Psalms. The bulk of these are D. Jones's translations, but hymns are added from other authors, the editor himself, his father, Owen Rees, Sol. Harris, of Swansea, who contributed a translation of Addison's "Spacious firmament," Jenkin Jones, D. Lloyd, David Davis, &c. A new ed. was pub. in 1834 with considerable additions.

3. The great hymn-writer of the Unitarians is Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg), (1745-1826). He pub. in 1812 a collection of 204 original Psalms, and in 1834 his son brought out a further collection, 211 in number. There was a new ed. 1857. Iolo has also left a collection of about 2000 hymns in ms., besides those published.

4. In 1857, Rev. John Jones, of Aberdare, brought out a collection of hymns, 208 being by Edward Williams, 68 by Thomas Evans, and some by the editor and his brother Rees Jones.

5. But this and other earlier collections are now superseded in congregational use by the collection of his son, Rev. R. J. Jones, minister at Aberdare.

"Emynau o Fawr a Gweddî; or, Hymns of Praise and Prayer," collected by R. J. Jones, Aberdâr. Jenkin Howell, Printer, 1878. Seconded, 1883.

This collection of 379 hymns is excellent, and is modelled on the plan of Dr. Martineau's Hymns of Praise and Prayer. It contains hymns from many sources, including translations of several in C. U. The translations of Dr. Newman's hymn, "Lead, kindly light"; "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and of "For ever with the Lord," are specially good. The names of the 64 authors from whom the hymns are taken, and a very useful glossary, form a part of the book. The bulk of the hymns are by Edward Williams. Other authors of original hymns are Thomas Evans, Owen Rees, Josiah Rees, Jenkin Jones, David Davis, Rees Jones (Amnon), William Thomas, the Editor, &c. In style, order and perspicuity, it is second to no book of the kind ever published in Wales.

vii. General Survey.—Passing from the Collections to the Hymns, we find that Welsh hymnody is, to a great extent, a home production, and is almost, but not entirely, confined to home use. There are a dozen or two of Welsh hymns which have become the favourite hymns of English congregations, most of which are by Williams of Pantycelyn. We give the first lines in Welsh and English. Some were composed in English, and have not been translated into Welsh, such as:—

- (1) "Hark! the voice of my beloved."
- (2) "Jesus, lead us with Thy power."
- (3) "O for a strong foundation" (Author unknown).
- (4) "Jesus is all my hope."

The last is one of Williams's English hymns. The following Welsh and English hymns are also by Williams:—

- (5) "Iesu, Iesu, 'rwyf ti'n ddigon."
"Jesus, Thou art all-sufficient."

- (6) "Arlwydd, arwain trwy'r anialwch."
"Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah."
- (7) "O Iachawdwr pechaduriaid."
"Great Redeemer, friend of sinners."
- (8) "Gosod babbell yn ngwlad Gosen."
"Fix, O Lord, a tent in Goshen."
- (9) "Pa'm y caiff bwystfilod rheibus."
"Why should cruel beasts be suffered."
- (10) "Dros y brynau tywyll niwlog."
"O'er the gloomy hills of darkness."

This last hymn is famous in the Missionary fields, and has been translated into many languages. In the Cashmere districts, in India, most successful Mission work is carried on under the care of Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionaries. The Khassi Hymnal, 1877, consists of 242 hymns, some original, but mostly translations from the latest collection of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists, is the official hymn-book of the Mission.

Ewald says that Hebrew poetry has a simplicity and transparency that can scarcely be found anywhere else, and a natural sublimity that knows but little of fixed forms of art; that even when art comes into play, it ever remains unconscious and careless of it. Compared with the poetry of other nations and ancient peoples, it appears to belong to a simple and child-like age of mankind, overflowing with an internal fulness and grace that troubles itself but little with external ornament and nice artistic law. Much of this is applicable to Welsh religious poetry. In spirit, character, figures of speech, and emotional language, it may be aptly compared with the Hebrew. Williams of Pantycelyn, Morgan Rhys, D. Williams, and Glangeiriondyd, and Islwyn, especially turned to the world of nature, attentively regarded it and used it; and entered into deep fellowship with it in its various phases, not for itself alone, but (like the Hebrew prophet), on account of its relation to their own souls. Nature to them spoke the language of heaven; all forces—animal, vegetable, and physical, attracted them to God. Williams of Pantycelyn, in some of his hymns, makes the most beautiful use of the floral world, as well as of the physical. Nothing could excel the faithfulness to nature, the vividness and the graphic powers of these hymns:—

"Planna'r egwyddorion hyny,
Yn fy nghalon bob yr un,
Ag sydd megis perarglâu
Yn dy natur di hun;
Blodau hyfryd, &c.
Fo'n disgleirio dae'r a nen.
'Rwyf yn caru'r pererinion
Ar y creigiau serth y sy,
Ar eu traed ac ar eu dwylaw
'N ceisio dringo i fyny fry;
Ar fy neulin,
Minau ddof i ben y bryn."

Williams's true and intense admiration of the beauties of nature, and his reverence for its sublimities, may be seen in the use he made of it to express his own experience, which indeed has been the experience of humanity in all ages of the world.

Next to Williams of Pantycelyn comes another Williams, almost his equal as a poet—David Williams, of Llanbedr-y-Frô. Many of his hymns are popular, and some of them are very beautiful. Morgan Rhys, as a hymn-writer, stands almost abreast with those we have named. Several of his hymns have a sacred interest for thousands of Welshmen; and many have a grand martial sound which is most inspiring. T. Williams, Bethesda'r-Frô, is another writer of great merit; often in his hymns we have the utterances of penitence and prayer, the breathings of a weary pilgrim, and the "yearning plaintive music of earth's sadder minstrelsy," followed by jubilant strains and peals of victory, as in:—

" Mae pren wedi 'i gael
Mewn dyrys anial dir,
Yn plygu 'i frig, yn cymhell pawb
I fwyta 'i ffrwythau pur."

Welsh hymn-writers, in common with others, differ in style, but meet on the wide field of subjects suggested by the Gospel. Their works are rich in narrative and scriptural allusion, in praises for redemption, in utterances of penitence and self-abasement, and in vivid description of the Christian warfare. Williams of Pantycelyn surpasses all in the expression of the yearnings of the heavenly home-sickness; in devout tenderness, often rising into rapture, wherewith his faith clasps the crucified Saviour, when wrapt in contemplation of the glory of Jesus as the Head of the Church militant and triumphant; and also in the depth and maturity of his theological thoughts. Wenn mein Stündlein fürhanden ist. N. Herman. [For the Dying.] This beautiful hymn, probably the finest of its author, appeared in his Historien von der Sündfluth, &c., Wittenberg, 1562, in 4 st. of 7 l., entitled, "A spiritual song, in which supplication is made for a happy final hour, on the saying of Augustine:—

' Turbabor, sed non perturbabor, Quia vulnerum Christi recordabor."

Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 1211, and in Ledderhose's ed. of Herman, p. 104. Wackernagel also gives the hymn as lengthened in the Bonn G. B., 1575, to 11 st., being the above 4, the 5 st. of Herman's hymn, "Da nun Elias seinen Lauf," and 2 st. not by Herman, as v. and x. This st. v. (which Mützell, No. 247, quotes from Drei schöne geistliche Lieder, Cöln, 1574), as altered in the Leipzig G. B., 1582, is generally attached to Herman's original 4 st., as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 843, in 5 st. Tr. as:—

1. When Thou shalt close my fleeting day. A good tr. of st. i.—iii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 247 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. In Kennedy, 1863, it begins, "When death shall close our fleeting day," and this form is in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, and the Ibrox Hyl., 1871.

2. Mine hour appointed is at hand. A full and very good tr. by R. Massie, contributed as No. 482 to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 385), and thence in his Lyra Domestica, 1864, p. 134. Repeated in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

3. When my last hour is close at hand, My last sad, &c. A full and very good tr. by Edgar Alfred Bowring, made at request of the Queen for use at the funeral of the Prince Consort in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Dec. 23, 1861, and printed as the first of the Two Chorales then sung. St. iv., v., beginning "I shall not in the grave remain," are set to music and were sung. The full tr. is printed, without music, between the two chorales. The second chorale is, "To Thee, O Lord, I yield my spirit" (p. 301, ii.) In full in the H. Bk. for St. Aidan's College, 1834, and omitting st. iii. in Adam's Ch. Pastorals, 1864, the Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, and others. St. iv., v. beginning "I shall not in the grave remain," are given as a separate hymn in Kennedy, 1863.

4. When my appointed hour is come To pass from earth, &c. A good and full tr. in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, No. 67; and repeated in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and C. N. Hall's Christ Ch. Hyl., 1876. St. iv., v. are from the Bowring version, No. 3.

5. When my last hour is close at hand, And I must, &c. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 193, rewritten and improved in her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 143. In the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are: (1) "Jesus, by Thy Almighty pow'r," as No. 832 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 1201). (2) "When now the solemn hour is nigh," by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 243. (3) "When death arrives, and I must go," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 104. [J. M.]

Werde munter, mein Gemüthe, Und ihr Sinnen geht herfür. J. Rist. [Evening.] Probably Rist's finest hymn. 1st pub. in the "Dritte Zehen" of his Himmlische Lieder, Lüneburg, 1642, p. 45, in 12 st. of 8 l., entitled, "A Christian Evening Hymn, with which to commit oneself to the protection of the Most High." Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 26, and most later hymn-books, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 537. The sixth stanza has been a special favourite in Germany, and was (so Koch, viii. 191) repeated in their last moments by Johann Georg, Duke of Mecklenburg, 1675, and Moritz Wilhelm, Duke of Sachse-Weitz, 1718. Tr. as:—

1. Rouse thy self my Soul and gather. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1722, p. 113. In his ed., 1732, p. 176, slightly altered, and thence as No. 480, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, a considerably altered form of st. vii., ix., v., beginning, "Author of the whole Creation," was included as No. 762 (1886, No. 1184), and this passed into J. Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, J. A. Latrobe's Coll., 1841, and P. Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.

2. Sink not yet, my soul, to slumber. A very good tr., omitting st. viii., ix., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 78. From this st. i.—iv., xii., were repeated in Ps. & Hys., Bedford, 1859; i.—iii., in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867; and i., ii., x., xii., in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. Other centos are:—

(1.) Father, merciful and holy (st. ii.), in Kennedy, 1863, and Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, No. 174. (2.) Have I, Lord, from Thee departed (st. vi.), in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, No. 504.

In her C. B. for England, No. 167 (set to the beautiful melody of 1642, by J. Schop), Miss Winkworth omitted the trs. of st. iii., v., xi.

3. Now, awake, my soul, my senses. A tr. of st. i., v., vii., xii., contributed by Miss Borthwick to Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, No. 180.

Other trs. are: (1) "Thou, my Soul, thy Thoughts be raising!" by H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 73. (2) "Be thou glad, my inmost being," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 169. [J. M.]

We're strangers here below. J. Fawcett. [Life a Pilgrimage.] Pub. in his Hy Adapted to the Circumstances of Public Wor- ship, &c., 1782, No. 26, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Thro' much tribulation we must enter the kingdom of God: Acts xiv. 22." In Conger's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, st. i.-iii. are given as, "As strangers here below." This form has been repeated in later hymnals. [J. J.]

Wesley Family, The.—This very remarkable family is almost as interesting from the hymnologist's as from the Church historian's point of view. The father and his three sons all wrote hymns which are suited for public worship, while one of the daughters, Mehetabel, though not strictly speaking a hymn-writer, wrote poetry of a religious tendency, which sometimes rises to a higher level than that which her father or any of her brothers—with the possible exception of Charles—ever reached. The well-known history of the Wesleys at Epworth gives us a vivid picture of the good side of the life of a clergyman's family in the early part of the eighteenth century. Though the admirable wife and mother was unquestionably the central figure of the group, and perhaps the ruling spirit in the household, yet from the stand-point of this work, the father holds the more prominent place, because it was he and not Mrs. Wesley who both set the example of writing poetry himself, and transmitted the taste to his children. To him also, no less than to Mrs. Wesley, may be traced some of the characteristics which are more or less common to all the family. The chief of these characteristics were clear, vigorous, common-sense, a high standard of faith and morals, an acuteness of intellect sharpened to the finest possible point by education, a certain manliness and robustness of character, which is as conspicuous in the females as in the males, and an outspokenness and even brusqueness of manner which, did we not know the affectionate relationship which always subsisted between all the members, we might have expected to have led to ruptures between them. Owing to the great reputation which John Wesley has attained, and the vast numbers of those who revere him as their spiritual leader, the history of the Wesley family is tolerably familiar to most people, and it will therefore be sufficient in this article to touch briefly upon the leading events in the lives of those members of it who were writers of sacred poetry.

i. Samuel Wesley, M.A., the elder, was b. in 1662 at Whitchurch in Dorsetshire, of which parish his father, John Wesley, was Vicar until the Act of Uniformity caused him to resign his living. He was educated at a Dissenting academy by a Mr. Morton, and was designed for the Nonconformist Ministry. But having been, on account of his talents, selected as a champion to defend the dissenters against some severe invectives, and having commenced a course of controversial reading for this purpose, he was led by his studies to embrace the opposite views, and became, and continued through life, a pronounced churchman. With the impetuosity which was a family trait, he set forth on foot to Oxford, and entered himself at Exeter College. In spite of his straitened means, he managed to keep his terms and take his degrees at the University.

He then received Holy Orders and took a curacy of £28 a year. Having held this curacy for a year, he obtained a naval chaplaincy, and then took another curacy in London. About the year 1690 he married Susanna, daughter of Dr. Annesley, a famous Nonconformist minister, and a scion of the noble house of Anglesey. The wife, like the husband, had been brought up as a dissenter, but at the early age of 13 she had come over to the Church of England, and was afterwards a Jacobite in politics. In 1693 Mr. Wesley was presented to the living of South Ormsby in Lincolnshire. He was also chaplain to the Marquis of Northampton, afterwards Duke of Buckingham. In 1697 he was appointed by the Crown to the Rectory of Epworth, and there he spent the remainder of his life, nearly forty years. The first part of his residence at Epworth was marked by a series of troubles arising partly from his pecuniary embarrassments, which increased with his increasing family, partly from the animosity of his parishioners, who resented the part which he felt it his duty to take, as a staunch churchman, in politics, and partly from unfortunate accidents. These troubles reached their climax in 1705, when he was thrown into Lincoln gaol for debt. They are graphically described by his own pen.

"I have been thrown behind," he writes to his good friends at Oxford, "by a series of misfortunes. My Parsonage Barn was blown down ere I had recovered the Taking my Living; My House great part of it burnt down about 2 years since. My Flax, great part of my Income now in my own Hands, I doubt wilfully f'rd and burnt in y^e night, whilst I was last in London. My Income sunk about one half by the low price of Grain and my credit lost by the taking away my Regiment. I was brought to Lincoln Castle June 23rd last past. About 3 weeks since my very unkind People, thinking they had not yet done enough, have in y^e night stabbed my 3 cows, w^{ch} were a great part of my poor Numberous Family's Subsistence.—For w^{ch} God forgive them."

Some points in this letter require explanation. When he speaks of being in London, he means on Convocation business; for he was elected Proctor for the Diocese, and in one of his absences Mrs. Wesley instituted those religious meetings at the Rectory which are thought by some to have been the precursors of the Wesleyan Society Meetings. "His Regiment" was a Chaplaincy in the army which had been given him in reward for a poem in praise of the Duke of Marlborough. The last and worst of the many fires through which he suffered was in 1709, when the rectory was entirely burnt down, and the present house erected in its place. The latter part of his time at Epworth was more free from troubles. He met with many generous friends who enabled him to emerge from his pecuniary difficulties, the firmest and most constant of these friends being the admirable Archbishop of York, Dr. John Sharp; his sons grew up to be a comfort and a credit to him; his income was slightly increased by the addition of the neighbouring living of Wroot; and his parishioners gradually became more tractable. The annoyance caused by the famous Epworth Ghost can scarcely be reckoned among his serious troubles. In 1731 he met with an accident which probably hastened his end, and in 1735 he passed away and was buried in Epworth churchyard, leaving behind him the character of an excellent parish priest, a good husband and father, and a man of very considerable abilities and attainments.

Mr. Wesley was a somewhat voluminous writer. His first publication was a volume of poems bearing the unpromising, not to say repulsive, title of Maggots. It appeared in 1685. In 1691 he became the clerical correspondent to the Athenian Gazette (afterwards Mercury) pub. by his brother-in-law, John Dunton. In 1693 appeared an Heroic Poem on the Life of Our Blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. This was dedicated to Queen Mary, and led to his appointment to the living of Epworth. In 1695 he pub. Elegies on Queen Mary and Archbishop Tillotson; and in 1698 A Sermon preached before the Society for the Reformation of Manners. The Elegies are rather fulsome and in bad taste according to the standard of the present day; but it should be remembered that high-flown panegyrics were the fashion of the age. The Sermon is a spirited and energetic defence of the "Societies," which were regarded with some suspicion by many high-churchmen, but of which Mr. Wesley, like his friend Robert Nelson, was a warm supporter. In 1700 he published The Pious Communicant rightly prepared; or a Discourse concerning the Blessed Sacrament, &c., With Prayers and Hymns suited to the several parts of that holy office. To which is added A short Discourse of Baptism. In this work appeared his version of the "Great Hallel" or "Paschal Hymn." In 1704 he pub. The History of the Old and New Testaments in Verse, in three volumes, which he dedicated to Queen Anne. This, like his Life of Christ, was illustrated with numerous and costly engravings. In 1705 he pub. a poem of nearly 600 lines on the "Battle of Blenheim," entitled Mariborough, or The Fate of Europe. For this he was rewarded with the Chaplaincy of Colonel Lepell's regiment; but his political enemies at Epworth soon succeeded in getting him deprived of this office. In 1707 appeared A Reply to Mr. Palmer's Vindication of the Learning, Loyalty, Morals, and most Christian Behaviour of the Dissenters towards the Church of England. This originated in the publication, without his consent or knowledge, of a Letter he wrote to a friend Concerning the Education of the Dissenters in their Private Academies. The letter was attacked anonymously and defended by Mr. Wesley in a pamphlet (1704). The pamphlet was answered by Mr. Palmer. After this, Mr. Wesley's pen seems to have rested for some time; but during the last ten years of his life he was engaged in his elaborate Dissertation on the Book of Job, his incessant labours upon which are said to have hastened his end. This work was dedicated to Queen Caroline, the wife of George II., and presented to her by John Wesley some months after the author's death.

Thus Samuel Wesley had the honour of dedicating works to three Queens. There is yet one more poem attributed to Mr. Wesley, but it seems very doubtful whether he was the real, or at any rate, the sole author. It is entitled Eupolis' Hymn to the Creator, and is a sort of Christian Pindaric Ode of considerable length, written in the classical style affected in the 18th century. Dr. Adam Clarke tells us that the ms. is partly in the hand-writing of Mehetabel Wesley; and internal evidence certainly points to her as the chief author; for it bears traces of a far more delicate and elegant touch than Mr. Wesley ever showed that he possessed; while Mehetabel's other writings are fully equal, if not superior, to it. In fact, it must be confessed that the bulk of Mr. Wesley's poetical writings are tedious and prosaic. He had the disadvantage of being over-praised at the outset, and of winning a reputation which he was unable to sustain. Nahum Tate, the Laureate, and others lauded his Heroic Poem in absurdly extravagant terms; Ralph Thoresby refers to him as "that noted poet Mr. Wesley," and Thomas Hearne alludes to him in similar terms. The reaction was sure to come, and his poetry began to be laughed at. Swift and Pope thought very slightly of it, and he appears to have narrowly escaped being pilloried in the Dunciad. But all that he wrote was in the service of virtue and religion; to use the words of his relative, Thomas Fuller,* he "had drunk more of Jordan than of Helicon." Perhaps if he had written less, and spent more time in elaborating what he did write, he might have been more successful; but, after all, the "Divine afflatus" must have been wanting; and the best service which he rendered to sacred poetry was in being father of his children.

ii. Samuel Wesley, M.A., the younger, was the eldest child of Samuel and Susanna Wesley, and was born in or near London in 1691. He received his early education from his mother, who always took a special interest in him as her first-born. In 1704 he went to Westminster School, where he was elected King's Scholar in 1707. Westminster had, under the mastership of Dr. Busby for 55 years, attained the highest reputation for scholarship, and Samuel Wesley, as a classical scholar, was not unworthy of his school. In 1709, Dr. Spratt, Bishop of Rochester, patronised the young scholar, and frequently invited him to Bromley. In 1711 he went with a Westminster studentship to Christ Church, Oxford, and having taken his degree, returned to Westminster as an Usher. He then received Holy Orders and became an intimate friend of Bishop Atterbury, who was then Dean of Westminster. His intimacy with this prelate was a bar to his advancement, and he was bitterly disappointed at not being appointed under-master at Westminster when that post was vacant. But he was faithful to his friend in his adversity, and the banished prelate warmly appreciated his attachment. In 1732 he was invited, without solicitation, to accept the head-mastership of the Free School at Tiverton, and here he spent the remainder of his life. He strongly disapproved of John and Charles Wesley's proceedings; but though the brothers expressed their opinions to one another with characteristic frankness, the disagreement did not cause any interruption in the friendly relations between them. Samuel Wesley was universally acknowledged to be an honest, conscientious and deeply religious man. He was a most uncompromising High Churchman both in the political and the theological sense of that term; and there is no doubt that he was the mainstay of the Wesley family at Epworth. His kindness to his father and mother was unbounded, and he acted like a father to his younger brothers and sisters. He also took a great interest in works of charity, and was one of the first promoters of the Westminster Infirmary. He died at Tiverton in the 49th year of his age, Nov. 6, 1739. His epitaph in Tiverton Churchyard does not exaggerate his merits, when it describes him as—"a man for his uncommon wit and learning, For the benevolence of his temper, and simplicity of manner, Deservedly loved and esteemed by all: An excellent Preacher; But whose best sermon Was the constant example of an edifying life: So continually and zealously employed In acts of beneficence and charity, That he truly followed His blessed Master's example In going about doing good; Of such scrupulous integrity, That he declined occasions of advancement in the world,

* Fuller, the Church historian, was Mr. Wesley's great uncle on the maternal side.

Through fear of being involved in dangerous compliances; And avoided the usual ways to preferment As studiously as many others seek them."

Samuel Wesley pub. in 1736 A Collection of Poems on several occasions, some of which are full of a rather coarse humour, but all of a good moral and religious tendency. This work was reprinted in 1743, and again by W. Nichols in 1862. Dr. Adam Clarke specifies eight hymns of S. Wesley's composition which were in use among the Methodists of that time (1823). The Wesleyan Hymn-book of the present day contains five, the best-known of which is "The Lord of Sabbath let us praise." His other writings are scarcely of sufficient importance to claim a notice in this brief sketch.

iii. John Wesley, M.A. The life of the next brother is, or easily might be, so familiar to every one in its every detail that it will suffice to give the barest outline of his career. John Wesley was b. at Epworth Rectory in 1703, and, like the rest of the family, received his early education from his mother. He narrowly escaped perishing in the fire which destroyed the rectory house in 1709, and his deliverance made a life-long impression upon him. In 1714 he was nominated on the foundation of Charterhouse by his father's patron, the Duke of Buckingham, and remained at that school until 1720, when he went up, with a scholarship, from Charterhouse to Christ Church, Oxford. Having taken his degree, he received Holy Orders from the Bishop of Oxford (Dr. Potter) in 1725. In 1726 he was elected Fellow of Lincoln College, and remained at Oxford until 1727, when he returned into Lincolnshire to assist his father as curate at Epworth and Wroot. In 1729 he was summoned back to Oxford by his firm friend, Dr. Morley, Rector of Lincoln, to assist in the College tuition. There he found already established the little band of "Oxford Methodists" who immediately placed themselves under his direction. In 1735 he went, as a Missionary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, to Georgia, where a new colony had been founded under the governorship of General Oglethorpe. On his voyage out he was deeply impressed with the piety and Christian courage of some German fellow-travellers, Moravians. During his short ministry in Georgia he met with many discouragements, and returned home saddened and dissatisfied both with himself and his work; but in London he again fell in with the Moravians, especially with Peter Böhler; and one memorable night (May 24, 1738) he went to a meeting in Aldersgate Street, where some one was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans. There, "About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me, that He had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death." From that moment his future course was sealed; and for more than half a century he laboured, through evil report and good report, to spread what he believed to be the everlasting Gospel, travelling more miles, preaching more sermons, publishing more books of a practical sort, and making more converts than any man of his day, or perhaps of any day, and dying at last, March 2, 1791, in harness, at the patriarchal age of 88.

In this sketch we are only concerned with one of the many phases of his infinitely varied life; but that, by no means the least important phase. The popular conception of the division of labour between the two brothers in the Revival, is that John was the preacher, and Charles the hymn-writer. But this is not strictly accurate. On the one hand Charles was also a great preacher, second only to his brother and George Whitefield in the effects which he produced. On the other hand, John by no means relegated to Charles the exclusive task of supplying the people with their hymns. When he speaks of the Evangelistic work, his general expression is, "My brother and I;" and when he speaks of the hymns, it is still, "My brother and I." John Wesley was not the sort of man to depute any part of his work entirely to another; and this part was, in his opinion, one of vital importance. With that wonderful instinct for gauging the popular mind, which was one element in his success, he saw at once that hymns might be utilized, not only for raising the devotion, but also for instructing, and establishing the faith of his disciples. He intended the hymns to be not merely a constituent part of public worship, but also a kind of creed in verse. They were to be "a body of experimental and practical divinity." "In what other publication," he asks in his Preface to the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (Preface, Oct. 20, 1779), "have you so distinct and full an account of Scriptural Christianity; such a declaration of the heights and depths of religion, speculative and practical; so strong cautions against the most plausible errors, particularly those now most prevalent; and so clear directions for making your calling and election sure; for perfecting holiness in the fear of God?" The part which he actually took in writing the hymns, it is not easy to ascertain; but it is certain that more than thirty translations from the German, French and Spanish (chiefly from the German) were exclusively his; and there are some original hymns, admittedly his composition, which are not unworthy to stand by the side of his brother's. His translations from the German especially have had a wide circulation. Although somewhat free as translations they embody the fire and energy of the originals. (For further information see the article on Methodist Hymnody.)

iv. Charles Wesley, M.A. But, after all, it was Charles Wesley who was the great hymn-writer of the Wesley family,—perhaps, taking quantity and quality into consideration, the great hymn-writer of all ages. Charles Wesley was the youngest son and 18th child of Samuel and Susanna Wesley, and was b. at Epworth Rectory, Dec. 18, 1707. In 1716 he went to Westminster School, being provided with a home and board by his elder brother Samuel, then usher at the school, until 1721, when he was elected King's Scholar, and as such received his board and education free. While he was at Westminster, his father received a letter from a wealthy Irishman, asking him if he had a son named Charles, and if so offering to adopt him and make him his heir. The acceptance of the offer was left to Charles himself, who declined it. In 1726 Charles Wesley was elected to a Westminster studentship at Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his degree in 1729, and became a college tutor. In the early part of the same year his religious impressions were much deepened, and he became one of the first band of "Oxford Methodists." In 1735 he went with his brother John to Georgia, as secretary to General Oglethorpe, having before he set out received Deacon's and Priest's Orders on two successive Sundays. His stay in Georgia was very short; he returned to England in 1736, and in 1737 came under the influence of Count Zinzendorf and the Moravians, especially of that remarkable man who had so large a share in moulding John Wesley's career, Peter Böhler, and also of a Mr. Bray, a brazier in Little Britain. On Whitsunday, 1737, he "found rest to his soul," and in 1738 he became curate to his friend, Mr. Stonehouse, Vicar of Islington, but the opposition of the churchwardens was so great that the Vicar consented that he "should preach in his church no more." Henceforth his work was identified with that of his brother John, and he became an indefatigable itinerant and field preacher. On April 8, 1749, he married Miss Sarah Gwynne. His marriage, unlike that of his brother John, was a most happy one; his wife was accustomed to accompany him on his evangelistic journeys, which were as frequent as ever until the year 1756, when he ceased to itinerate, and mainly devoted himself to the care of the Societies in London and Bristol. Bristol was his head-quarters until 1771, when he removed with his family to London, and, besides attending to the Societies, devoted himself much, as he had done in his youth, to the spiritual care of prisoners in Newgate. He had long been troubled about the relations of Methodism to the Church of England, and strongly disapproved of his brother John's "ordinations." Wesley-like, he expressed his disapproval in the most outspoken fashion, but, as in the case of Samuel at an earlier period, the differences between the brothers never led to a breach of friendship. He d. in London, March 29, 1788, and was buried in Marylebone churchyard. His brother John was deeply grieved because he would not consent to be interred in the burial-ground of the City Road Chapel, where he had prepared a grave for himself, but Charles said, "I have lived, and I die, in the Communion of the Church of England, and I will be buried in the yard of my parish church." Eight clergymen of the Church of England bore his pall. He had a large family, four of whom survived him; three sons, who all became distinguished in the musical world, and one daughter, who inherited some of her father's poetical genius. The widow and orphans were treated with the greatest kindness and generosity by John Wesley.

As a hymn-writer Charles Wesley was unique. He is said to have written no less than 6500 hymns, and though, of course, in so vast a number some are of unequal merit, it is perfectly marvellous how many there are which rise to the highest degree of excellence. His feelings on every occasion of importance, whether private or public, found their best expression in a hymn. His own conversion, his own marriage, the earthquake panic, the rumours of an invasion from France, the defeat of Prince Charles Edward at Culloden, the Gordon riots, every Festival of the Christian Church, every doctrine of the Christian Faith, striking scenes in Scripture history, striking scenes which came within his own view, the deaths of friends as they passed away, one by one, before him, all furnished occasions for the exercise of his divine gift. Nor must we forget his hymns for little children, a branch of sacred poetry in which the mantle of Dr. Watts seems to have fallen upon him. It would be simply impossible within our space to enumerate even those of the hymns which have become really classical. The saying that a really good hymn is as rare an appearance as that of a comet is falsified by the work of Charles Wesley; for hymns, which are really good in every respect, flowed from his pen in quick succession, and death alone stopped the course of the perennial stream.

v. Mehetabel Wesley. Here, strictly speaking, the list of hymn-writers in the Wesley family ends; but the sketches would scarcely be complete without some mention of one who, if she did not write hymns, showed plainly that she could have done so with a success which might have rivalled Charles's own. Mehetebel Wesley had an exquisite poetic genius, which was cultivated by a careful study of the best models—Latin and Greek, as well as English, for she was an accomplished scholar. Like all the Wesleys, except Samuel and Charles, she was most unfortunate in her marriage; her husband, Mr. Wright, a plumber and glazier, was quite incapable of appreciating her refined mind, and, being a man of no principle, sought relief from society in which he must have felt uncomfortable in low company and pursuits. The neglected Hetty was most unhappy, but her very unhappiness lent a pathetic tenderness to her poetry, which is one of its chief charms. As her name is unknown among hymn-writers, one or two extracts from her poetry seem necessary to justify the mention of her in this connection at all. What glorious hymns might have been written by the author of the following exquisite lines!

A Mother's Address to her Dying Infant.

"Tender softness! infant mild!
 Perfect, purest, brightest light!
 Transient lustre! beauteous clay!
 Smiling wonder of a day!
 Ere the last convulsive start
 Rends thy unresisting heart,
 Ere the long enduring swoon
 Weigh thy precious eyelids down;
 Ah regard a mother's moan,
 Anguish deeper than thy own.
 Fairest eyes, whose dawning light
 Late with rapture blest my sight,
 Ere your orbs extinguish'd be Bend their trembling beams on me!
 Drooping sweetness! verdant flower!
 Blooming, withering in an hour!
 Ere thy gentle breast sustains
 Latest, fiercest, mortal pains,
 Hear a suppliant! let me be Partner in thy destiny!
 That whene'er the fatal cloud
 Must thy radiant temples shroud;

When deadly damps, impending now,
Shall hover round thy destined brow,
Diffusive may their influence be,
And with the blossom blast the tree!"

It is a great temptation to go on quoting this exquisite writer. Her "Lines written when in deep anguish of spirit"; her "Epitaph on herself"; "The Resignation: a penitent heart hoping in God" (which really might be used as a hymn); her "Farewell to the world"; her "Address to a Husband"—all maintain the same high level. But it must be remembered that Mehetabel Wesley was a hymn-writer only "in posse," not "in esse," and can therefore only claim a passing notice.

[J. H. O.]

The hymns by the Wesley family are naturally most extensively used in the Methodist Societies throughout the world. Usually they are given in the hymn-books with little or no alteration. The American Methodist Episcopalian Hymns of 1849 is an exception. The texts in that collection are more mutilated than in all other Methodist hymn-books put together. A large number of the Wesley hymns are annotated under their respective first lines. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) The following lists will complete the number in C. U.:—

i. Samuel Wesley, the Elder. Two of his hymns are in C. U. and are annotated as follows:—

1. Behold the Saviour of mankind, p. 130, i.
2. O Thou Who, when I did complain, p. 852, i.

ii. Samuel Wesley, the Younger. Six of his hymns are in C. U., and are annotated as follows:—

1. From whence these dire portents around, p. 400, ii.
2. Hail, Father, Whose creating call, p. 477, ii.
3. Hail, God the Son in glory crowned, p. 477, ii.
4. Hail, Holy Ghost, Jehovah, Third, p. 477, ii.
5. The Lord of Sabbath, let us praise, p. 1153, ii.
6. The morning flowers display their sweets, p. 1155, i.

John and Charles Wesley. In the article on Methodist Hymnody, p. 726, ii., a full and detailed account of the hymns published by the two brothers is given. As a guide in indicating the sources of their hymns now in common use, and not annotated under their own first lines, we subjoin a Table of Titles, Dates, and Contents of their works which was compiled by the writer of the article on Methodist Hymnody. The Title-pages of those works which contain hymns by writers other than J. & C. Wesley are printed in italics.

It must be noted that the Wesleyan authorities, in the revised edition of their Coll. of Hys. for the Use of the People called Methodists, 1875, decline to distinguish the hymns which appeared in the joint works of the two brothers. They say:—

“The letter W. is affixed to those hymns which first appeared in publications for which the Wesleys were jointly responsible; in this case it cannot be determined with certainty to which of the two brothers a hymn should be ascribed.” (Preface to the “Index to the Hymns.”)

It has been the common practice, however for a hundred years or more to ascribe all translations from the German to John Wesley, as he only of the two brothers knew that language; and to assign to Charles Wesley all the original hymns except such as are traceable to John Wesley through his Journals and other works. In this Dictionary this course has been adopted throughout.

Two works remain to be noted: (1) Collection of Psalms and Hymns, Charles Town. Printed by Lewis Timothy, 1737; and (2) The Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley: Reprinted from the Originals, with the last corrections of the Authors; together with the Poems of Charles Wesley not before Published. Collected and Arranged by G. Osborn, D.D. Lond.: Wesleyan-Methodist Conference Office, 1863-72. In 13 vols. The first of these works has been reprinted in facsimile from the only known copy now existing, together with a Preface by Dr. Osborn. Lond.: T. Woolmer, 1882. The second contains facsimile reprints of the titles of the above Table of Titles; Introductions and notes by Dr. Osborn; the usual Index of first lines to vols. i.-viii.; and an Index to the first line of every verse (except the first in vols. i.-viii.), extending to 239 pages, the joint work of the Rev. Julius Briggs, then of Hawes, Yorkshire, and Mr. William Sugden, B.A., Head Master of the Wesleyan Normal Training Institution, Westminster. The accuracy and completeness of the latter Index merit the highest praise.

In addition to a large number of hymns from the above works which are annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary (see Index of Authors and Translators) the following are also in C. U. The sublines indicate altered texts or of cents from the hymns:—

The translations by John Wesley from the German are given in vols. i. ii. of the Poetical Works, and number 32. They can be easily identified and their history, together with the history of the originals, traced through the Index of Authors and Translators.

The foregoing list of original hymns, in addition to those by the Wesleys annotated elsewhere, all of which are in C. U. at the present time, and most of which have formed an important part of Methodist hymnody for more than a hundred years, shows the enormous influence of the Wesleys on the English hymnody of the nineteenth century. West, Robert Athow, an editor and author, was b. in England in 1802. In 1843 he went to America, and was the official reporter of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844. He was also one of the committee appointed by that Conference to prepare a Standard edition of the Methodist Hymn Book. That collection appeared as Hymns for the Use of The Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1849. To it West contributed two hymns—(1) "Come, let us tune our loftiest song" (Praise of Jesus), and (2) "Now, Lord, fulfil Thy faithful word" (On behalf of Ministers). (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884, p. 32.) [J. J.]

Wetzel, Johann Caspar, s. of Johann Michael Wetzel, shoemaker at Meiningen, was b. at Meiningen, Feb. 22, 1691. He matriculated, at Easter, 1711, as a student of theology at the University of Jena, and afterwards went to Halle. After varied tutorial work, &c., he was appointed, in 1727, diaconus at Römhild, where he eventually became archidiaconus. While returning from a visit to the Bad Liebenstein he was unable to proceed further than Meiningen, where he d. Aug. 6, 1755 (Koch, v. 507, &c.).

Wetzel claims notice here as the best of the earlier German hymnologists. His two most important works, in which he gives notices of more than 1100 hymn-writers; are (1) Hymnopoecographia, pub. at Herrnstadt, pt. i. 1719, ii. 1721, iii. 1724, iv. 1728; and (2) Analectica Hymnica, pub. at Gotha, vol. i. pts. 1-3 in 1751, pts. 4-6 in 1752; vol. ii. pt. 1 in 1753, pts. 2-4 in 1754, pts. 5, 6 in 1755. The style of these works is execrable, but they contain much useful matter, and still rank as standard authorities.

Of Wetzel's original hymns, 62 in all, the most important appeared as his Heilige und dem Herrn gewidmete Andachts-Früchte, in 5 pts., each with 10 hymns, pub. at Coburg; i., ii. in 1718; iii., iv. in 1721; v. in 1722. One of these hymns has been tr., viz. :—

Gott sorgt für mich, was soll ich sorgen. Trust in God. 1st pub. in pt. v., Coburg, 1722 as above, as No. vii., entitled a "Devotional hymn on the Providence of God," and in 9 st. of 6 l., each stanza beginning and ending with the words, "Gott sorgt für mich." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 61 erroneously ascribed to B. Schmolck. Tr. as "God cares for me; why need I sorrow," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 30. [J. M.]

What ails my heart, that in my breast? G. Withier. [Sleeplessness.] 1st pub. in his Hallelujah; or, Britan's Second Remembrance. London, 1641, Pt. i., No. 20, in 4 st. of 8 l. It is introduced by the following note :—

"When we cannot sleep at seasonable times, vain musings and want of right meditating on God, is frequently chief cause of unrest. Therefore this meditation directeth to the remedy of such untimely watchfulness."

The hymn is included in Farr's reprint of the Hallelujah in 1857, and thence it passed, with slight alterations, into Kennedy, 1863, No. 845. [W. T. B.]

What are these in bright array? J. Montgomery. [All Saints.] Pub. in his Greenland and other Poems, 1819, p. 185, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed "Saints in heaven." It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 204; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 559; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 237. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America, and sometimes as, "Who ate these in bright array?" In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, it is rendered into Latin as "Quid sint cohortes lucidæ." [J. J.]

What care the saints of God, if they. G. Moultrie. [Confessors.] Pub. in his Hymns and Lyrics, 1867, p. 159, in 9 st. of 6 l., and headed "Hymn for Festival of Confessors." In an abbreviated form it is found in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

What countless crowd on Zion stands. J. Anstice. [All Saints.] 1st pub. in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, p. 37, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in The Child's Christian Year, 1841. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, st. i.-iii., vi., iv. are re-written (from 8.8.8.6.) in c. m. [J. J.]

What grace, O Lord, and beauty shone. Sir E. Denny. [The love of Jesus.] Appeared in his Sel. of Hys., 1839, No. 32, in 5 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, p. 71, and later editions. It has passed into most of the hymn-books of the Plymouth Brethren, and also into several other collections. [J. J.]

What is earth with all its treasures?

[Missions.] Appeared anonymously in W. Urwick's Coll. of Hys. adapted to Cong. Worship, Dublin, 1829, No. 343, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The dark world enlightened by the Saviour's glory." In addition to an abbreviated form beginning with st. i. there are also "Earth is but the land of shadows" (st. ii.), and "O Thou Sun of glorious splendour" (st. iii.) in C. U. [J. J.]

What is the thing of highest [greatest] price? J. Montgomery. [The Soul.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 504, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Original Hymns, 1853. It is found in a few modern books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

What is the world? a wildering maze. J. Montgomery. [Holy Scripture a Light.] In his Poetical Works, 1851, p. 304, Montgomery dates this hymn "1815": but in his newspaper, the Sheffield Iris, of 1817, he printed it in 3 st. of 6 l., and dated it "February, 1817." Under these circumstances it is difficult to say which of these dates is correct. The hymn was repeated in Montgomery's Greenland and Other Poems, 1819, p. 187; his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 548; his Poetical Works, 1828, and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 26. It is also found in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and in several of the older and modern hymn-books. It is not, however, a good example of Montgomery's powers as a writer of hymns. [J. J.]

What liberty so glad and gay? J. Keble. [Forgiveness of Enemies.] Written Feb. 7, 1826, on the words "Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him?" St. Matt. xviii. 21, and pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 12 st. of 4 l. as the poem for the 22nd S. after Trinity. In Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835, st. x.-xii. were given as "Thou ransomed sinner, wouldst thou know?" This has been repeated in later collections, but is not in extensive use. [J. J.]

What! never speak one evil word? C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] This cento is thus composed: St. i., ii. are from Wesley's Short Hymns, 1762, vol. ii., No. 753, on James iii. 2; and st. iii., iv. from the same, vol. i., No. 854, on Ps. ciii. 3. In this form it appeared in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 353, and has been repeated in several collections. Original texts in P. Works, 1868-72, vols. xiii. and ix. [J. J.]

What shall we ask of God in prayer? J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] Written in 1818, and first printed on a broadsheet with Montgomery's "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," "Lord, teach us how to pray," and "Thou, God, art a consuming fire," for use in the Nonconformist Sunday schools in Sheffield and the neighbourhood. It was included in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 281, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed, "Ask and ye shall receive that your joy may be full." In Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 483, and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 64, it was given with the change, in st. iv., l. 1 of "with" to by, and in 8 st. of 4 l. It is usually given in an abbreviated form. In some American hymn-books a cento from this hymn is given as "Father of all our mercies, Thou." [J. J.]

What shall we render. E. Parson, née Rooker. [Praise.] 1st pub. in J. Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., 1840; and subsequently in Mrs. Parson's Willing-Class Hymns. It was composed for the Air by Mozart, commonly known as "Life let us cherish," and is given in several collections. [J. J.]

What sudden blaze of song. J. Keble. [Christmas.] Pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 6 l., as the poem for Christmas Day. In the American Church Pastorals, Boston, 1864, st. i., v., ix. are given in an altered form, but beginning with the same first line. [J. J.]

What tho' my frail eyelids refuse. A. M. Toplady. [At Night.] Pub. in the Gospel Magazine, Dec. 1774, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled "A Chamber Hymn," and signed "Minimus." Also in Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, &c., 1860. It was given in its original form in several of the older hymn-books, but in Collyer's Coll., 1812, it was divided into two parts, Pt. i. being composed of st. i.-iii., and Pt. ii., beginning, "Inspirer and Hearer of prayer," of st. iv.-vi. From that date the first part fell gradually out of use, whilst the second part rose to great popularity, and has been rendered into several languages. The tr. into Latin by R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, begins, "O Tu precum inspirator." [J. J.]

What various hindrances we meet. W. Cowper. [Exhortation to Prayer.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 60, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Exhortation to Prayer." It has passed into numerous collections, and sometimes in an abbreviated form. Dr. Hatfield, in his Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, dates it 1772. By this he probably means the date of its composition. We cannot, however, find any authority for that date. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, 5 stanzas are rendered into Latin as "Si precibus solium Genitoris adire velimus." [J. J.] Whate'er to Thee, our Lord, be-longs. [Holy Baptism.] This is the first of 13 "Single Verses on Baptism" given in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, Nos. 455-476. The authors of these stanzas are; st. i., iii.-v., B. Beddome; ii. xi., J. Stennett; vii.-ix., H. P.; x., H.; xii., G.; and vi. and xiii. anonymous, but possibly by Rippon. The object of this arrangement of these stanzas is thus stated by Rippon in a note:—

"As it is now pretty common to sing by the water side, and as some of our brethren in the country give out a verse or two, while they are administering the ordinance, it is hoped these single verses will be acceptable."

In the American Bap. Hymn [and Tune] Bk., Philadelphia, 1871, st. iii., iv. and vi. are given as "Behold the grave where Jesus lay." The same arrangement with the addition of st. vii. had previously appeared in the Baptist edition of the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858. [J. J.]

When at this distance, Lord, we trace. P. Doddridge. [Transfiguration.] This hymn is No. 90 in the D. mss., but is undated. It was included, without alteration, in J. Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 183, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again, but with alterations, in J. D. Humphreys's edition of the same, 1839, No. 204. The original text is that in C. U. [J. J.]

When bending o'er [on] the brink of life. W. B. Collyer. [Death anticipated.] Pub. in his Coll., &c., 1812, No. 827, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is found in several modern hymnals, but usually in an abbreviated form. It presents death in its saddest form, and embodies a prayer for divine assistance. In several American collections, including the Meth. Episc. Hymns, 1849; their new Meth. Hymnal, 1878; and others, it is rewritten in s. m. as, "When on the brink of death." [J. J.]

When blooming youth is snatched away. Anne Steele. [Death and Burial of a Young Person.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i. p. 106, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "At the Funeral of a Young Person." Also given in the 1780 ed. of the Poems, and in D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 66. The form of the text usually found in American hymn-books is "When those we love are snatched away." This was given in the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, in 5 st., and is found in later hymnals. Another arrangement in 3 st. is in use in G. Britain. It appeared in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, as "When youth or age is snatched away." The text in Common Praise, 1879, is in 5 st., the last of the original being omitted, and the rest somewhat altered. [J. J.]

When brothers part for manhood's race. J. Keble. [St. Andrew.] Written Jan. 27, 1822, and included in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 4 l. Two centos from it are in C. U.; the first beginning with the opening stanza, and the second with st. vi., "First seek thy [the] Saviour out, and dwell." Their use is limited. [J. J.]

When came in flesh the Incarnate Word. J. Antioch. [Christmas.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, p. 17, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is given in Hys. for the Use of the University of Oxford in St. Mary's Church, 1872, and several other modern collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

When Christ His body up had borne. H. More. [Whitsuntide.] This is the opening line of a hymn in 14 st. of 4 l., entitled "An Hymn upon the Descent of the Holy Ghost at the Day of Pentecost," which appeared in More's Divine Hymns appended to his Divine Dialogues, &c., Lond. 1668. This hymn was rewritten in 15 st. by J. Wesley, and included in the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739, beginning "When Christ had left his flock below." From this revision, st. vi.-xv., slightly altered, were given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as, "Father, if justly still we claim" (No. 444); and "On all the earth Thy Spirit shower" (No. 445). These hymns have been repeated in many collections in G. Britain and America. Wesley's full revised text is in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 165. The first stanza of "Father, if justly still we claim" is by J. Wesley (1739). Dr. More's original text of the remaining stanzas of the two hymns is:—

- vi. "The Spirit of holy Zeal and Love
And of Discerning give us, Lord;
The Spirit of Power from above,
Of Unity and good Accord:
- vii. "The Spirit of convincing Speach,
Such as will every Conscience frite,
And to the heart of each man reach,
And sin and Errour put to flight:
- viii. "The Spirit of refining Fire,
Searching the inmost of the mind,
To purge all foul and fell desire,
And kindle Life more pure and kinde.
- ix. "The Spirit of Faith in this thy Day
Of Power against the force of Sin,
That through this Faith we ever may Against our Lusts the Conquests win.
- x. "Pour down thy Spirit of inward Life,
Which in our hearts thy laws may write,
That without any pain or strife
We naturally may doe what's right.
- xi. "On all the Earth thy Spirit pour,
In righteousness it to renew:
That Satan's Kingdom't may o'repow'r,
And to CHRISST'S Sceptre all fubdue.
- xii. "Like mighty Winde or Torrent fierce
Let it Withstanders all o'terun,
And every wicked law reverie,
That Faith and Love may make all one.
- xiii. "Let Peace and Joy in each place spring,
And Righteousness, the Spirits fruits,
With Meekness, Friendship, and each thing
That with the Christian spirit fuits.
- xiv. "Grant this, O holy God and true,
Who th' ancient Prophets didst inspire:
Hafte to perform thy Promise due,
As all thy Servants thee desire."

A comparison of Wesley's version with this original shows most forcibly how a well conceived but indifferently executed composition may be turned to good account by an experienced hand. The rest of More's hymns, six in all, are worthy of attention. [J. J.]

When Christ the Lord would [shall] come on earth. H. Alford. [St. John Baptist.] In the Author's Hys. for the Sundays and Festivals throughout the Year, 1836, this hymn was appointed for St. John Baptist's Day: but on its transference to his Ps. & Hys., 1844, it was given for the 3rd S. in Advent, No. vi., and marked in error as having been pub. in that collection for the first time. It is found in his Year of Praise, 1867, and Poetical Works, in the 8th ed. of which it is dated 1835. Orig. text, in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is in somewhat extensive use, and sometimes in an altered form, as in the Murray's Hymnal, 1852, with the same first line, but much altered and with the addition of a new stanza. [J. J.]

When darkness long has veiled my mind. W. Cowper. [Peace.] 1st pub. in R. Conyer's Coll., 1772, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Trials overcome by Hope." When included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 23, it was expanded into 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Peace after a Storm." In its full, or in an abbreviated form, it is found in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America, both old and new. Although not referred to, so far as we can find, in Cowper's Memoirs, it was evidently written at or about the same time as his "God moves in a mysterious way" (p. 433, i.). [J. J.]

When gathering clouds around I view. Sir R. Grant. [In Trial and Temptation.] Appeared first in the Christian Observer, Feb. 1806, in 6 st. of 6 l., and signed "E. Y. D. R."; and again in the same magazine in Feb. 1812, accompanied with a letter explaining that it had been sent in an altered form, and signed as before. In 1835, Elliott included it in his Ps. and Hys., No. 342, with a note in the Preface to the effect that it had been revised by the Author for that Collection. It was also given in the Author's Sacred Poems (pub. by his brother) in 1839, p. 3, the text being that of 1812. Three texts of this hymn thus exist, and all by the author: (1) the first in the Christian Observer, 1806; (2) the second in the same, 1812, and in the Sacred Poems, 1839; (3) and the third in Elliott's Ps. and Hys., 1835. Of these the second text is that usually received as authorized, and is given as such in Lyra Britannica, 1867, and in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862. The hymn is based on Heb. iv. 15, "For we have not a High Priest," &c., and is often given in an abbreviated form. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, 4 stanzas are rendered into Latin as: "Quum circumcirca glomerantia nubila cornam." [J. J.]

When God of old came down from heaven. J. Keble. [Whitsuntide.] 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 4 l., as the poem for Whitsunday. In an abbreviated form it is in extensive use. A cento therefrom is given in a few American hymn-books as "Lo, when the Spirit of our God." In Bp. Wordsworth's (St. Andrews) Series Collectarum, &c., 1890, sts. i., iii., iv., vi., vii., ix., and xi. are rendered into Latin as "Olim cum Dominus superâ descendit ab arce." [J. J.]

When His lost sheep the Shepherd finds. [The Lost Sheep.] This appeared in the Uttoxeter Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1805 (p. 1084, ii.), and is also in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and later hymnals, and is sometimes given (but in error) as an altered form of J. Needham's "When some kind shepherd from his fold" (p. 793, ii.). [J. J.]

When I can read my title clear. I. Watts. [Assurance of Faith and Hope.] Appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is headed "The Hopes of Heaven our Support under Trials on Earth." Its use in G. Britain and America is very extensive. The text has undergone several alterations at the hands of Bickersteth in his Ps. & Hys., 1833; Elliott in his Ps. & Hys., 1835, and others. The most important is Bickersteth's rendering of st. iv.:-

"There, anchor'd safe, my weary soul
Shall find eternal rest,
Nor storms shall beat, nor billows roll,
Nor fears assail my breast."

It is hard to see that this is an improvement upon Watts's original:-

"There shall I bathe my weary soul
In seas of heavenly rest,
And not a wave of trouble roll
Across my peaceful breast."

The original text of the whole hymn, as in the Hy. Comp., is that most commonly used. Miller (Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 140) points out that the opening lines of the hymn,-

"When I can read my title clear To mansions in the skies," are used by Cowper in his poem on Truth (pub. in 1782), in his comparison of the lot of Voltaire and that of the poor and believing cottager, who

'Just knows, and knows no more, her Bible true—
A truth the brilliant Frenchman never knew:
And in that charter reads with sparkling eyes,
Her title to a treasure in the skies." [J. J.]

When I can trust my all with God. J. Conder. [Resignation.] Written on the death of one of his children, Jan. 1818, and included in his Star in the East, &c., 1824, p. 113, in 5 st. of 6 l., headed "On the death of an Infant Son," and accompanied with the footnote "C. J. C. ob. Jan. 1818." In Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, 3 st. were given as No. 311; and these were repeated in his posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856. This form of the hymn is that in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

When I resolved to watch my thoughts. Anne Steele. [Ps. xxxix.] Pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. ii., p. 168, in 13 st. of 4 l.; in the 2nd ed. of the Poems, 1780; and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 171. It is not in C. U. in its original form; but from it the following are taken:-

1. Almighty Maker of my [our] frame. This cento, composed of st. iv.-vii. was given in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, as a hymn on "The Shortness of Life." It is found in many hymnals in G. Britain and America.

2. O God, to Whom my life I owe. This, in the Primitive Methodist Hymnal, 1887, is the above cento with the opening stanza rewritten. [J. J.]

When I survey life's varied scene. Anne Steele. [Resignation.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i., p. 134, in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Desiring Resignation and Thankfulness." It was repeated in the new ed. of her Poems, &c., 1780; and again in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. As a whole it is not in C. U. From it, however, the following centos are found in modern hymn-books:-

1. When I survey life's varied scene, in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, is composed of st. i., ii., viii., and ix., slightly altered.

2. Father, whate'er of earthly bliss. This was given in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 214, and thus came into use in the Church of England. From Toplady it passed into Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, and thence into modern Nonconformist collections. Its use is extensive. It is composed of st. viii., ix., slightly altered. A Latin rendering, "Quidquid optatum famulo precanti," by the Rev. R. Bingham, was pub. in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871.

3. Lord, teach me to adore Thy hand. No. 178, in the Scottish Pres. Hymnal, 1876, is composed of st. ii., viii., ix., and x. unaltered.

4. My God, whate'er of earthly bliss. In T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, 1887. It is composed of st. viii.-x., and a doxology not in the original.

Taking these centos together this hymn has a wider circulation than any other of Miss Steele's compositions. [J. J.]

When I survey the wondrous Cross. I. Watts. [Good Friday.] This, the most popular and widely used of Watts's hymns, appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, and in the enlarged ed. 1709, as:-

"Crucifixion to the World, by the Cross of CHRIST. Gal. vi. 14.

1. "When I survey the wond'rous Cross
On which the Prince of Glory dy'd,
My richest gain I count but Loss,
And pour Contempt on all my Pride.

2. "Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast
Save in the Death of CHRIST my God;
All the vain Things that charm me most,
I sacrifice them to his Blood.

3. " See from his Head, his Hands, his Feet,
Sorrow and Love flow mingled down!
Did e'er fuch Love and Sorrow meet,
Or Thorns compose fo rich a Crown!
4. "[His dying Crimfon, like ■ Robe,
Spreads o'er his Body on the Tree;
Then am I dead to all the Globe,
And all the Globe is dead to me.]
5. " Were the whole Realm of Nature mine,
That were a Prefent far too fmall;
Love fo amazing, fo divine,
Demands my Soul, my Life, my All."

The first to popularize the four-stanza form of the hymn (st. iv. being omitted) was G. Whitefield in the 1757 Suppl. to his Coll. of Hys. It came rapidly into general use. In common with most of the older hymns a few alterations have crept into the text, and in some instances have been received with favour by modern compilers. These include:

- St. ii. l. 2. " Save in the Cross," Madan, 1760.
St. iii. l. 2. " Love flow mingling," Salisbury, 1857.
St. iv. l. 2. " That were ■ tribute," Cotterill, 1819.
" " " That were an offering," Stowell, 1831.

The most extensive mutilations of the text were made by T. Cotterill in his Sel., 1819; E. Bickersteth in his Christian Psalmody, 1833; W. J. Hall in his Mitre H. Bk. 1836; J. Keble in the Salisbury H. Bk. 1857; and T. Darling in his Hys. for the Church of England, 1857. Although Mr. Darling's text was the only one condemned by Lord Selborne in his English Church Hymnody at the York Church Congress in 1866, the mutilations by others were equally bad, and would have justified him in saying of them all, as he did of Mr. Darling's text in particular:—

" There is just enough of Watts left here to remind one of Horace's saying, that you may know the remains of ■ poet even when he is torn to pieces."

In the 1857 Appendix to Murray's Hymnal; in the Salisbury H. Bk. 1857; in H. A. & M. 1861 and 1875; in the Hymnary, 1872; and in one or two others a doxology has been added, but this practice has not been received with general favour. One of the most curious examples of a hymn turned upside down, and mutilated in addition, is Basil Woodd's version of this hymn beginning "Arise, my soul, with wonder see," in his undated Ps. of David, &c. (circa 1810), No. 198.

The four-stanza form of this hymn has been translated into numerous languages and dialects. The renderings into Latin include: "Quando admirandam Crucem," by R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871; and "Mirabilem videns Crucem," by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876. The five-stanza form of the text as in H. A. & M. (st. v. being by the compilers) is tr. in Bp. Wordsworth's (St. Andrews Series Collectarum, 1890, as "Cūm miram intueor, de quā Præstantior omni." In popularity and use in all English speaking countries, in its original or in a slightly altered form, this hymn is one of the four which stand at the head of all hymns in the English language. The remaining three are, "Awake, my soul, and with the sun;" "Hark! the herald angels sing;" and "Rock of Ages, cleft for me." (See English Hymnody, Early, §§ XII. XIII., and the NEW SUPPLEMENT.) [J. J.]

When Israel freed from Pharaoh's hand. I. Watts. [Ps. cxiv.] Written in 1712, and sent by Watts, with a letter, to the Spectator, in which it appeared on "Tuesday, August 19, 1712," No. 461, in 6 st. of 4 l. as a rendering of Ps. cxiv. In the letter Watts explained the origin of his rendering, it being to show the force and wisdom of retaining the Name of God to the end of the paraphrase as in the Psalm, and not to introduce it at the beginning as had been previously done by others. The paraphrase was given in Watts's Ps. of David, 1719, with the alteration of st. ii. ll. 3, 4 from—

" The streams of Jordan saw, and fled With backward current to their head," to—

" Jordan beheld their march, and fled
With backward current to his head."

The New Cong., 1859, and others give the text of 1719. [J. J.]

When Israel, of the Lord beloved. Sir W. Scott. [Omnipresence.] This hymn appeared in Scott's Ivanhoe, 1817, Chap. 40. It is thus introduced:—

" It was in the twilight of the day when her trial, if it could be called such, had taken place, that a low knock was heard at Rebecca's prison-chamber. It disturbed not the inmate, who was then engaged in the evening prayer recommended by her religion, and which concluded with a hymn we have ventured thus to translate into English,

" When Israel, of the Lord beloved,
Out of the land of bondage came," &c.

The hymn extended to 4 st. of 8 l. The imaginary trial referred to was that of Rebecca the Jewess by a court of the Order of the Templars for sorcery, the charge being that she had bewitched one Brian de Bois-Guilbert, one of the Knights, into breaking several of the rules of the Order. When stripped of these romantic surroundings, it yet remains a striking hymn. It is based on Ps. cv. It is found in several modern collections; and has been rendered into Latin by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, as "Exeunte Israele Servitute de crudeli." In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, pt. iii., is given as, "O present still, though still unseen." [J. J.]

When Israel press'd by Pharaoh, stood. J. Montgomery. [Thanksgiving on being rescued from Drowning.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 529, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "For a Sermon before a Society for the Recovery of persons apparently Drowned." It was repeated in his Orig. Hys. 1853, p. 308. [J. J.]

When Jesus left His Father's throne. J. Montgomery. [Child's Hymn.] From a flyleaf preserved with the "M. MSS." we find this hymn was written for the Hallam Sunday School, near Sheffield, and is dated as having been used there on Oct. 26, 1816. In 1819 it was given in Cotterill's Sel., No. 258, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Children Praising Christ." In 1825 it was republished in a re-written and extended form of 8 st. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 537, with the new title, "Children recalling Christ's Example and His Love." This text and title were repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 326, the added stanzas being iii., iv., and v. In Cotterill's Sel. the opening line is "When Jesus left the throne of God." In some collections the opening line is "When Jesus left His heavenly home." [J. J.]

When languor and disease invade.
A. M. Toplady. [Affliction and Death.] In the Lady Huntingdon Coll. of Hys., 1780, there is as No. 238, "When languor and disease invade," in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Meditation on God's Love," and as No. 263 "Sweet to rejoice in lively hope," in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Funeral," the two hymns thus making 14 st. of 4 l. These two hymns, with an additional stanza (x.), were given in the Gospel Magazine, Oct. 1796, as a single poem, with this note appended thereto:—

"This hymn was written for the late Countess of Huntingdon, at her request, when in illness, by the Rev. Mr. Toplady, and kindly given to the publisher as it originally stood, by the Right Hon. Lady Ann Erskine."

From the poem as thus printed we find that No. 238 above was composed of st. i.—vii. and xiv., and No. 263 of st. viii., ix., xi.—xiii. and xv. Stanza x. was not used. The centos from this poem now in C. U. are:—

1. How blest to rest in lively hope (st. viii.). In Windle's Met. Psalter and Hyl.
2. Sweet to reflect how grace divine (st. iv.). In some American collections.
3. Sweet to rejoice in lively hope (st. viii.). In a few American collections.
4. 'Tis sweet to rest in lively hope (st. viii.). In C. U. in G. Britain and America.
5. When languor and disease invade (st. i.). In extensive use in most English-speaking countries.

The full text of the poem is in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1860. [J. J.]

When like a stranger on our sphere.
J. Montgomery. [Public Hospitals.] Of this hymn there are two texts, details of which are as follows:—(1) It was written for the opening of the Sheffield Infirmary, October, 1797, and printed in Montgomery's Iris newspaper, Oct. 6, 1797. In 1819 it was included in Cotterill's Sel., No. 246, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled "At a Sermon for an Infirmary." In 1825 this text was repeated, with slight alterations, in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 531, broken into 8 st. of 4 l., entitled "For a Public Hospital." (2) Amongst the m. mss. there is a ms. of this hymn in 10 st., and thus dated: "Revised, June 2, 1844." It is this revised text which was given by Montgomery in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 286, under the heading "Hymn for the Opening of the Sheffield Infirmary, October, 1797," and from which Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymno. Christ., 1863, and other modern editors have taken their text. The older hymn-books have the text as in Cotterill's Sel., whilst most of the modern collections follow that of the Original Hymns, 1853. [J. J.]

When marshall'd on the nightly plain. H. K. White. [The Star of Bethlehem.] Appeared in Collyer's Sel., 1812, No. 862, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Star of Bethlehem." It has much biographical interest, in that it gives a poetical version of the author's change of mind from a species of scepticism to the faith of Christ. The special personal interest is introduced with st. iii., "Once on the raging seas I rode." This also forms the beginning of a cento from this hymn given in one or two American hymn-books. [J. J.]

When my love to Christ [God] grows cold [weak]. J. R. Wreford. [Pas-tor-tide.] Contributed to J. R. Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hys. 1837, No. 140, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Christ's Agony and Crucifixion." In the American Unitarian Bk. of Hys. 1848, No. 144, it was given in a re-written form of 5 st. The alterations were made by S. Longfellow, one of the editors. This text has passed into several hymn-books in G. Britain, as in Thring's Coll., 1882; with a doxology. Horder's Cong. Hys. 1884, &c.; and as "When my love to God grows weak," in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873. [J. J.]

When on her Maker's bosom. Bp. R. Heber. [Epiphany.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 33, in 6 st. of 4 l. and appointed for the 2nd S. after Epiphany. It is found in a few modern hymn-books only. [J. J.]

When on the giddy cliff I stand.
T. Haweis. [The Sea in the hands of God.] Pub. in his Carmina Christo, 1792, in 6 st. of 4 l., and based on Jeremiah v. 22. It passed into Collyer's Coll., 1812; H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855; and a few hymnals in G. Britain of a later date. [J. J.]

When our heads are bowed with woe. H. H. Milman. [Litany in Lent. Burial.] Appeared in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 114, in 6 st. of 3 l., and the refrain, "Gracious Son of Mary, hear." It was appointed for the 16th S. after Trinity, and is based on the Gospel of that day, the raising of the widow's son at Nain, but deals only with the sad side of that event. Although it has become one of the most popular and widely used of Milman's hymns, yet it was not included by him in his Ps. and Hys., 1837, nor in any subsequent edition. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, enlarged ed., 1841, No. 122, the hymn begins with st. v., "When the heart is sad within," and the text is re-arranged thus, st. v., vi., i., ii., iii., and a new stanza. This last stanza is repeated in Bp. Bickersteth's H. Comp., 1870. The refrain "Gracious Son of Mary, hear," has exercised the ingenuity of many editors of hymn-books. The following list of changes in that one line, although not complete, is yet sufficiently long to illustrate the difficulty of maintaining unity in these matters.

1. "Gracious Son of David, hear." Elliott. 1835.
2. "Jesus, Son of David, hear." Bickersteth. 1841.
3. "Son of Man, O Jesu, hear." English Hyl. 1852.
4. "Jesu, Son of Mary, hear." Murray's Hyl. 1852.
5. "Gracious Lord of Mercy, hear." T. Lowe's Hys. 1854.
6. "Jesu, born of Woman, hear." S. P. C. K. ed., 1863.
7. "Jesu, Man of Sorrows, hear." Alford. 1867.
8. "Jesu, Loving Saviour, hear." Windle. 1864.
9. "Gracious Saviour, hear." Scottish U. P. C. 1852.
10. "Gracious Son of David, hear." Horder. 1884.

The text of this hymn as in H. A. & M., 1861, has been tr. into Latin by the Rev. C. B. Pearson in Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, as "Tristes, orbos lacrymantes." [J. J.]

When spring unlocks the flowers.
Bp. R. Heber. [Spring.] 1st pub. in the Christian Observer, 1816, p. 27, in 4 st. of 8 l., headed "Spring," and signed "R." In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 98, it was repeated, after revision by himself, in 4 st. of 4 double lines, and appointed, without any apparent reason, for the 7th S. after Trinity. The text in C. U. is that of 1827. [J. J.]

When the Architect Almighty fashioned had the heaven and earth. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [Consecration of a Church.] Appeared in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 221, in 10 double st. of 4 l., and headed "Consecration of Churches, or Laying the First Stone." In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year it was repeated in two parts, Pt. ii. beginning "O'er the Font's baptismal waters may the Holy Spirit move." Usually this hymn is given in an abbreviated form, that adopted by the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, being the most popular. For its special purpose, for use at the Consecration of a Church, it is one of the finest hymns in C. U. [J. J.]

When the earth was full of darkness. J. M. Neale. [St. Margaret.] Written for the use of the Sisters of St. Margaret's, East Grinstead, as a hymn for St. Margaret's Day, at Lauds, probably for the Festival of July 20, 1865, and first printed in the Church Times, July 15, 1865, where it is signed "J. M. N." In 1866 it was included, with slight alterations, in Dr. Neale's Original Sequences, Hymns, and Other Ecclesiastical Verses. With further alterations and the omission of st. v. it was also given in the People's H., 1867, No. 263. [J. J.]

When the Lord of Hosts ascended. Bp. C. Wordsworth. [Whitsunday.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 103, in 9 st. of 8 l. In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year, 1863, it was given in two parts, Pt. ii. being "Not in fire from heaven descending," the text throughout being revised by the author. Three centos therefrom are in C. U.: (1) Opening with st. i.; (2) "Guide of sinners, go before us;" (3) "Holy Ghost, Divine Creator." [J. J.]

When the wild [dark] waves round us roll. Bp. W. W. How. [St. Peter.] Pub. in the enlarged ed. of Morrell and How's Ps. and Hys., 1864, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Thring's Coll., 1882, and others, it reads, "When the dark waves round us roll." It is a very popular hymn and is found in many collections. [J. J.]

When this passing world is done. R. M. McCheyne. [Debtor to Christ.] Printed in the Scottish Christian Herald, May 20, 1837; and repeated, in his Songs of Zion appended to his Memoir and Remains, 1844, in 9 st. of 6 l., and headed "I am Debtor." As a whole it is not in C. U.; but the following centos therefrom are in C. U. :—

1. When this passing world is done. Various centos of unequal length, with this as the opening stanza are in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

2. When I stand before the throne. This cento, in Kennedy, 1863, and others begins with st. iii.

3. Chosen not for good in me. This cento is in extensive use. It begins with st. vi.

4. Oft I walk beneath the cloud. In use in G. Britain and America. It opens with st. vi.

When these centos are taken into account it is found that this is the best known and most widely used of the author's hymns. Original text in Lyra Brit., 1867. [J. J.]

When thy faith is sorely tried. J. Conder. [Divine Footprints.] This hymn appeared in his posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Divine Footprints." The idea is to devote a stanza to events which took place at "Jehovah-jireh," "Bethel," "Mahanaim," "Peniel," "Jehovah-nissi," &c. Each stanza is headed with the name of the place, and a reference to the passage in Holy Scripture which is dwelt upon by the writer. The cento, "God is in the loneliest spot," in the American Church Pastorals, 1864, is from this hymn. [J. J.]

When waves of trouble [sorrow] round me swell. Charlotte Elliott. [In Affliction.] This hymn, based upon St. Matt. xiv. 27, appeared in the 1834 Appendix to the Invalid's H. Bk., No. v., in 4 st. of 4 l. Subsequently it was given in the body of that collection; and is also found, unaltered, in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. [J. J.]

When, within sight of danger's hour. H. Alford. [St. Peter.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 85, in 3 st. of 4 l., and appointed for St. Peter's Day. It was repeated in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 257, and is also found in other collections. [J. J.]

When wounded sore the stricken soul. Cecil F. Alexander. [Passiontide.] Appeared in her Hys. Descriptive and Devotional, &c., 1858, No. 12, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Passion Week." It was repeated without alteration in her Legend of the Golden Prayers and Other Poems, 1859, p. 141, with the new heading "Touched with the feeling of our infirmities." It is found in many hymn-books in G. Britain and America, and usually in an unaltered form. [J. J.]

Whence do our mournful thoughts arise? I. Watts. [Consolation.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon Is. xl. 27-30 (ed. 1709, Bk. i. No. 32). Another form of this hymn was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. xvi., in 7 st. of 4 l. as "Why pour'st thou forth thine anxious plaint?" In the Drafts of 1751 and 1781 further alterations were introduced until it assumed the authorized form as in the Trs. and Paraphs. of 1781. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) the alterations of 1781 are said to be by him. The designation of the hymn is I. Watts, 1707; Trs. & Paraphs., 1745; W. Cameron, 1781. In the American Prayer Book Coll., 1826, and several later hymnals it begins "Why mournest thou, my anxious soul?" Sometimes st. iv.-viii. are found as a separate hymn, beginning, "Supreme in wisdom as in power," as in W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for the Church and Home, 1873. In one or two American Unitarian hymnals a cento therefrom is also given as "Mere human power shall fast decay." In Jane E. Leeson's Paraphrases and Hys., 1853, the 1781 text is rewritten in three parts as:—(1) "Thus saith the Holy One, to Whom"; (2) "O Jacob and O Israel"; (3) "God giveth power unto the faint." [J. J.]

Where God doth dwell, sure heaven is there. J. Mason. [Praise to, and Joy in God.] This cento in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, is compiled from Mason's Spiritual Songs, or Songs of Praise, 1683, thus:—st. i., ii. from Song 23, st. v.; st. iii.-v. from Song 24, st.

i. ii.; st. v. from Song 27, st. iv., ll. 5-8 re-written. The result is a pleasing hymn of Praise and Joy. [J. J.]

Where high the heavenly temple stands. M. Bruce. [The Divine Mediator.] This hymn, which we have ascribed to M. Bruce on evidence given in his Memoir in this work (p. 187, i.) was written probably about 1764-65, for a singing class in Kinnesswood, Scotland, and was first published by J. Logan in his Poems, 1781, p. 117, No. 9, as his own. In the same year (1781) it was given, with slight alterations, in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. 58, as a second rendering of "Heb. iv. 14 to the end." The alterations extended only to the following:—

St. i., l. 4, "The Guardian," for "The Patron." St. ii., l. 1, "their surety," for "in mercy stood;" i. 3, "his mighty plan," for "his plan of grace;" i. 4, "The Saviour and the friend of man," for "The Guardian God of human race."

In the markings of the Trs. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), the text of 1781 is ascribed to J. Logan. The hymn is found in numerous collections in G. Britain and America, and is of great merit. The hymn "He, Who for men their Surety stood," in Kennedy, 1863, No. 953, is st. ii., iv.-vi., in a re-written form. [J. J.]

Where shall my wondering soul begin? C. Wesley. [Praise for Pardon and Peace.] Written in May, 1738, together with the hymn, "And can it be that I should gain?" (p. 64, i.), on the occasion of the great spiritual change which the author then underwent. Minute details of the event are given in the author's Diary, May 21-23, 1738. Its biographical interests, together with that of "And can it be," &c., are not inconsiderable, showing as they do the struggles and triumphs of a sincere and cultured man. This hymn was 1st pub. in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739, in 8 st. of 6 l., and again, with the omission of st. vi., in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 29, from whence it has passed into other collections. Original text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 91. Dr. Osborn's note on this hymn, vol. i. p. 91, is:—

"Probably the hymn written on his conversion by Charles Wesley. Compare his Journal, under date May 23, 1738: 'Least of all would he [the enemy] have us tell what things God has done for our souls. . . . In His name, therefore, and through His strength, I will perform my vows unto the Lord, of not hiding His righteousness within my heart, if it should ever please Him to plant it there' (vol. i. p. 94). The same hymn was probably sung next day, when his brother John was able to declare, 'I believe' (ib. p. 95)."

Further extracts from the Journal are given in G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 40, together with other comments which are worthy of attention, but are too lengthy to transcribe. [J. J.]

Where'er have trod Thy sacred feet. [Lent.] In the "Notes and Illustrations" to Church Hys., 1881, Mr. Ellerton says of this hymn, "It is hymn 205 in the enlarged edition of Mr. Morrell & How's Psalms and Hymns, 1864. Bishop How found it in a small hymnal compiled for All Saints' Church, Blackheath, where it is attributed to 'Neale.' But it is not in any publication of Dr. Neale's."

Beyond this we have no information, and the hymn must remain "Anon." [J. J.]

Where'er the Patriarch pitch'd his tent. J. Montgomery. [Abraham, the Father of the Faithful.] Written "Jan. 5, 1834" [m. mss.], and pub. in Leifchild's Original Hymns, 1843, No. 25, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 39. It is given in a few modern hymn-books only. [J. J.]

Wherefore so heavy, O my soul? E. Caswall. [Resignation.] Pub. in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 226, and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 255, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Resignation." In some hymn-books it is given as, "O why so heavy, O my soul?" Its use is limited. [J. J.]

Wherefore, we sinners mindful of the love. W. Bright. [Holy Communion.] This hymn was pub. in The Monthly Packet for October 1873, in 6 st. of 6 l. without signature, and entitled "The Eucharistic Presentation." In the following year Canon Bright included it in his Hymns and Poems, 2nd ed., 1874. From thence st. iii.-vi. passed as, "And now, O Father, mindful of the love," into the revised ed. of H. A. & M. in 1875. Full original text as above. [W. T. B.]

Wherewith, O God, shall I draw near? C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in the Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1739, p. 88, in 13 st. of 4 l., and based on Micah vi. 6, &c. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 276). It is given in centos in the hymn-books as follows:—

1. Wherewith, O God, shall I draw near? In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 123, and several modern collections. It is composed of 10 stanzas, st. iv., vii., and xi. being omitted.

2. Wherewith, O Lord, shall I draw near? In A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 47, and later hymn-books in the Church of England. It embodies st. i.-iii., viii.-xiii., slightly altered.

3. Jesus, the Lamb of God, hath bled. In several modern collections. It begins with st. x.; but the choice of stanzas varies.

4. See, where before the throne He stands. Usually composed of st. xii., xiii. [J. J.]

Which of the [mighty] petty kings of earth? C. Wesley. [Guardian Angels.] Given from the Wesley mss. in Dr. Leifchild's Original Hys., 1842, and again in the Wesley P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xiii., in 6 st. of 8 l. It is based on Heb. i. 14. A cento therefrom is sometimes found beginning with st. iii., "Angels, where'er we go, attend." [J. J.]

While carnal men, with all their might. B. Beddome. [Zeal and Diligence.] This hymn appeared in Rippon's Baptist Sel., 1787, in two parts as follows: Pt. i. consisted of 3 st. of 4 l.; Pt. ii., beginning "If duty calls and suffering too," in 7 st. of 4 l. From Pt. ii. the hymn "Alike in happiness and woe," in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, is taken, the stanzas having been re-written throughout. In Beddome's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1817, portions of the hymn as in Rippon are given as Nos. 161 and 216. [J. J.]

While conscious sinners tremble. W. Jowett. [The Judgment.] This is in Verses written on Various Occasions for Friends. London, 1843. Printed for Private Distribution, p. 4, in 2 st. of 4 l. In a note to four hymns, of which this is the last, reads:—

"The four preceding hymns were written [by William Jowett] at the request of the late Dr. Jowett, to accompany some selections made by his dear and intimate friend, the Rev. C. J. Latrobe, from compositions of Michael Haydn."

This hymn has appeared in a few collections, as Kemble's Ps. & Hys., 1853, and others. The Verses, &c., 1843, also include "Thoughts suggested by the Collects." [J. J.]

While for Thy saints who poured abroad. Bp. R. Mant. [Thanksgiving for the Church Reformers.] Appeared in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1837, p. 138, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "Hymn of Thanksgiving for the Church's Reformers" (ed. 1871, p. 233). In Common Praise, 1879, No. 364, "Lord, in Thy truth Thy church delights," is a cento from this hymn. [J. J.]

While health and youth and strength remain. [Early Piety.] This hymn appeared with three others including "Praise the Lord, ye heav'ns adore Him," on a supplementary sheet appended to the musical ed. of the Foundling Coll., 1796, and to the book of words issued in 1801. In the 1809 ed. of that Coll. it was included in the body of the work, and thence passed, in 1810, into J. Kempthorne's Ps. & Hys., No. cxviii. in 4 st. of 4 l., and somewhat considerably altered. Although still retained in the Foundling Coll., it has almost altogether fallen out of common use. On the authority of D. Sedgwick this hymn is usually ascribed to J. Kempthorne, but there is no evidence whatever in his favour. Its ascription is Anon. Foundling Coll., 1796. [W. T. B.]

While in sweet communion feeding. Sir E. Denny. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in his Sel. of Hys., 1839, No. 292, in 2 st. of 8 l. It was repeated in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, and 1870, and has also passed into several collections in G. Britain and America, including Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872; Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and others. [J. J.]

While justice waves her vengeful hand. Anne Steele. [National Humiliation.] This hymn was written for the National Fast of Feb. 11, 1757, and pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 250, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed "National Judgments deprecated. On the Fast. Feb. 11, 1757." It was also given in D. Sedgwick's ed. of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 116. This hymn is usually given in an abbreviated form as in the American Presby. Sel. of Hymns, Philadelphia, 1861. [J. J.]

While midnight shades the earth o'erspread. C. Wesley. [Midnight.] Pub. in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739, p. 35, in 6 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 49), and entitled "A Hymn for Midnight." In the P. Works, Dr. Osborn adds this note on the title:—

"In some editions this title was changed to 'A Midnight Hymn for one under the Law.' Wesley saw how this phrase had been misapprehended; and in a copy of the 5th edition now before me, it is corrected with his own hand to 'A Midnight Hymn for one convinced of Sin.'"

The hymn was written about 1737, and sets forth the unsettled state of his mind at that time. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 148,

J. Wesley gave it with the omission of sts. i., ii., and a few verbal changes. T. Jackson in his Memoirs of C. Wesley (small ed. 1848, p. 51) says:—

"On the 18th December, 1736, he [Wesley] says, 'I began my twenty-seventh year in a murmuring, discontented spirit; reading over and over the third of Job.' While in this state of mind, he wrote the 'Hymn for Midnight,' which is strikingly descriptive of his defective creed and gloomy feelings. He had no hope of permanent happiness, but by the dissolution of his earthly frame. [St. i. and iii. quoted: then he proceeds.] To this fine composition his brother afterwards gave an evangelical character [in the Wes. H. Bk. as above] by substituting the word 'faith' for 'death' in the line 'Since death alone confirms me His'. Thus altered, it no longer appears as the desponding language of a Christian, expecting to be made free from sin and its attendant misery only by the body's dissolution; but as the prayer of a weeping penitent, who is convinced of his guilt and corruption, and is looking for a present deliverance from them through faith in the blood of the atonement."

The Wes. H. Bk. form of the hymn begins with st. iii., "Fain would I leave the world below," and is that which is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

While my Jesus I'm possessing. [Good Friday.] This hymn appeared in The Kendal H. Bk., edited by J. Allen (p. 50, i.), 1757, No. 54, in 6 st. of 8 l. In its original form it has almost entirely passed out of C. U. From this hymn 24 lines were re-written by W. Shirley, and included in the 1770 ed. of the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll. of Hymns, as:—"Sweet the moments rich in blessing," in 3 st. of 8 l. The original lines are:—

- St. ii. "O how happy are the moments
Which I here in transport spend!
Life deriving from His torments
Who remains the sinner's Friend.
Here I'll sit, for ever viewing
How the blood flows from each vein;
Every stream, my soul bedewing
Mortifies the carnal flame.
- St. iii. "Really blessed is the portion Destined me by sovereign grace:
Still to view divine compassion
In the Saviour's bruised face.
'Tis my fixed resolution,
Jesus Christ, my Lord, to love;
At His feet to fix my station,
Nor from thence a hair's-breadth move.
- St. iv. "Filled with sinner-like contrition,
With my tears His feet I'll bathe;
Happy in the sweet fruition
Of my Saviour's painful death.
- St. v. "May I still enjoy this feeling,
In all need to Jesus go;
Prove His wounds each day more healing,
And from hence salvation draw."

These lines were manipulated by W. Shirley into the following hymn:—

- "Sweet the moments, rich in blessing
Which before the Cross I spend;
Life, and health, and peace possessing
From the sinner's dying Friend.
Here I'll sit for ever viewing
Mercy's streams in streams of blood;
Precious drops my soul bedewing
Plead and claim my peace with God.
- "Truly blessed is this station
Low before the Cross to lie;
While I see divine compassion
Floating in His languid eye;
Here it is I find my heaven,
While upon the Lamb I gaze;
Love I much? I've much forgiven,
I'm a miracle of grace.
- "Love and grief my heart dividing,
With my tears His feet I'll bathe;
Constant still in faith abiding,
Life deriving from His death.

May I still enjoy this feeling,
In all need to Jesus go;
Prove His wounds each day more healing,
And Himself more deeply know!"

In Cooke and Denton's Church Hymnal, 1853, No. 72, Shirley's st. i. and ii., ll. 1-4 were given, with slight alteration, and the following lines were added to complete the hymn in 3 st. of 8 l. :—

"Lord, in ceaseless contemplation
Fix our hearts and eyes on Thee,
Till we taste Thy whole salvation,
And unveil'd Thy glories see.
"For Thy sorrows we adore Thee,
For the griefs that wrought our peace;
Gracious Saviour! we implore Thee,
In our hearts Thy love increase.
Unto Thee, the world's Salvation,
Father, Spirit, unto Thee,
Low we bow in adoration,
Ever-blessed One and Three."

This text, with one or two slight alterations, was repeated in the Hymnary, 1872. The alterations and additions in 1853, and the changes in 1872, were by Canon William Cooke and Mr. Webb. In H. A. & M., 1861, Canon Cooke's arrangement, reduced to 4 st. of 4 l., was given as No. 95, st. i.-iii. being from Shirley, and st. iv. part of the additions by Canon Cooke as above. This text was repeated, with slight changes and the addition of st. iii., ll. 1-4, from Shirley as above, in the Hy. Comp., 1870; in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and many others. Other arrangements from Shirley's text are in C. U. in G. Britain and America, and can be tested by Shirley as above. The H. A. & M. text has been rendered into Latin by the Rev. R. Thornton, D.D., in Gittley and Thornton's Fasciculus, 1866, and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, as "Sauve tempus et serenum;" and by Hodges in his The County Palatine, &c., 1876, as "Ter beatae dulces horæ;" and the Hy. Comp. text, with the omission of st. iii., by the Rev. R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, as, "O quam dulce et beatum." Both these forms have also been rendered into other languages. The full original text by J. Allen of "While my Jesus I'm possessing," is in Lyra Britannica, 1867. [J. J.]

While saints and angels, glorious King. J. Montgomery. [Charitable Objects.] Pub. in Dr. Sutton's Ps. & Hys., . . . , Sung at the Parish Church, Sheffield, 2nd ed., enlarged, 1816, No. 102, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 255; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 540, and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 345. In the last two works it is headed "For the Children in a Charity School." It was probably written to be sung at an anniversary of one of the Sheffield Charity Schools. Sometimes it begins with st. iv. as "Father Thy heavenly gifts afford." [J. J.]

While shepherds watched their flocks by night. N. Tate. [Christmas.] Appeared in the Supplement to the New Version (p. 801, i.), in 1702, in 6 st. of 4 l., and in all later editions of the same. In full, or in an abbreviated form, it is found in most hymn-books in English-speaking countries. Original text in the Hy. Comp. In addition to the original, two additional versions are in C. U. :—

1. While humble Shepherds watched their flocks. This was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, the opening stanza reading :—

"While humble Shepherds watch'd their Flocks in Bethleh'ms Plains by Night,
An Angel sent from Heav'n appear'd and fill'd the Plains with Light."

The alterations were confined to this stanza. On its adoption in the revised Draft of 1751, and again in the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, the concluding lines of the last stanza read :—

"Good-will is shewn by Heav'n to men, and never more shall cease."

This arrangement of the text has been in C. U. for more than 100 years.

2. On Judah's plains as Shepherds kept. This is found in one or two American collections only.

The original has been tr. into several languages. Those in Latin include; (1) "Pastorum in pecudis noctu vigilante catervâ," by Lord Lyttelton, 1866; and (2) "Noctivagos, acclinis humo, pastoria pubes," by C. S. Calverley, both in L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867; (3) "Oves dum custodientes," by R. Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871; and (4) "Pro grege Pastores vigilabant nocte silenti," by Bp Wordsworth (St. Andrews) in his Series Collectedum, &c., 1890. [J. J.]

While with ceaseless course the sun. J. Newton. [New Year.] Pub. in his Twenty Six Letters on Religious Subjects, &c., by Omicron, 1774, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed, "For the New Year." It was repeated in R. Conyer's Ps. & Hys. the same year, and again in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 1. It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. In some collections st. ii., iii. are given as, "As the winged arrow flies," but this is not so popular as the full text. [J. J.]

White, Henry Kirke, remarkable both for the early development of his genius and for the untimely termination of his brief life of splendid promise, was b. at Nottingham, March 21, 1785. His father was a butcher, but his mother must have been a superior woman, since for a number of years she successfully conducted a boarding-school for girls. The writing-master in her establishment was for some time Henry's teacher, and under his instruction he made remarkable progress in Latin and other subjects. At the age of 13 he composed the lines "To an early Primrose," which were subsequently printed with his poems. At 14 he left school, and was put to the stocking-frame in order to learn practically the business of a hosier; but, disliking the employment, he was removed to an attorney's office in Nottingham, with a view to the legal profession. All his spare time was now devoted to literary pursuits, the acquisition of languages, and the composition of poetical and other contributions for the periodicals of the day. At the age of 15 he obtained from the Monthly Preceptor a silver medal for a translation from Horace, and a pair of globes for the best description of an imaginary tour from London to Edinburgh. When only 17 he was encouraged to publish his Clifton Grove and other Poems, which were certainly excellent as the compositions of a mere boy. About this time he was inclined to scepticism, but through the perusal of Scott's Force of Truth and the arguments and appeals of a young friend, R. W. Almond (afterwards Rector of St. Peter's, Nottingham), he was led to earnest faith in Christianity. His well-known hymn "When marshall'd on the nightly plain" is understood to be a figurative description of his spiritual experience at this period. He now desired to become a Christian minister, and through the generosity of his employers he was released from his articles in 1804. With the help of the Rev. C. Simeon and other friends, he became a student of St. John's College, Cambridge. There he speedily distinguished himself, and the highest honours seemed within his grasp; but over application to study destroyed his health, and he fell ill and d. Oct. 19, 1806, in the 22nd year of his age. Universal regret was expressed at his untimely end. Southey published his Remains, accompanied by a short memoir. Lord Byron composed some beautiful lines on the sad event. Josiah Conder and others wrote commemorative verses. The entire literary young manhood of England and America seemed moved with sympathy. A monumental tablet, with a medallion by Chantrey, was erected in All Saints Church, Cambridge, at the expense of a citizen of Boston, in the United States. Ten hymns are ascribed to H. K. White, which were printed by the Rev. Dr. W. B. Collyer in his Suppl. to Dr. Watts's Psalms & Hymns Lond. 1812. Of these four of the most popular are annotated as follows: "Awake, sweet harp of Judah, wake," p. 103, ii.; "Christians, brethren, ere we part," p. 231, ii.; "Mush in sorrow, oft in woe," p. 773, ii.; "When marshalled on the nightly plain," p. 1271, i. These are all in extensive use. The rest, all in C. U. at the present time, are:—

1. O Lord, another day has flown. Evening. From this the hymn "O let Thy grace perform its part" is taken.

2. O Lord, my God, in mercy turn. Penitence and Faith.

3. The Lord our God is full [clothed in] of might. Divine Sovereignty.

4. The Lord our God is Lord of all. Divine Sovereignty.

5. Through sorrow's night and danger's path. The Resurrection. Sometimes given as "When sorrow's path and danger's road."

6. What is this passing scene? Human Frailty. This hymn consists of selected stanzas from his "Ode on Disappointment."

Whitfield, Frederick, B.A., s. of H. Whitfield, was b. at Thrapwood, Shropshire, Jan. 7, 1829, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his B.A. in 1859. On taking Holy Orders, he was successively curate of Otley, vicar of Kirby-Ravensworth, senior curate of Greenwich, and Vicar of St. John's, Bexley. In 1875 he was preferred to St. Mary's, Hastings. Mr. Whitfield's works in prose and verse number upwards of thirty, including Spiritual unfolding from the Word of Life; Voices from the Valley Testifying of Jesus; The Word Unveiled; Gleanings from Scripture, &c. Several of his hymns appeared in his Sacred Poems and Prose, 1861, 2nd Series, 1864; The Casket, and Quiet Hours in the Sanctuary. The hymn by which he is most widely known is "I need Thee, precious Jesu" (p. 557, i.). Other hymns by him in C. U. include:—

1. I have a Great High Priest above. Christ the High Priest.

2. I saw the Cross of Jesus. The Cross.

3. In spirit, Lord, we meet Thee now. Missions. This was written at the request of the Committee of the Irish Church Missions for one of their annual meetings in London.

4. Jesus, Thou Name of magic power. The Name of Jesus. Sometimes given as "Jesus, Thou Name of power divine."

5. The sprinkled blood is speaking. The Blood of Christ.

6. There is a day I long to see. Heaven Anticipated.

7. There is a Name I love to hear. The Name of Jesus. Pub. in 1855 in hymn-sheets and leaflets in various languages. From this the hymn "Jesus, the Name I love so well" is taken.

8. There's naught on earth to rest upon. God Unchangeable.

9. When dead in sin and far from God. Redemption.

All these hymns, with the exception of No. 3, are in his Sacred Poems and Prose, 1861, and several of them have been printed as leaflets, and set to special music. The Sacred Poems, &c., contains 26 hymns, some of which are of considerable merit. [J. J.]

Whiting, John Bradford, M.A., s. of the Rev. James Whiting, M.A., Chaplain under the Hon. E. I. C., was b. at Cawnpore, India, and educated at Caius College, Cambridge, where he held a Scholarship and an Exhibition, and graduated B.A. 1850, and M.A. 1853. On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of Saffron Walden, 1851; Vicar of Bloomfield, 1861; and Vicar of St. Luke's, Ramsgate, 1875. He was also Chaplain to Bp. Wigram (Rochester), 1864-67, and Commissary to the Bishop of Niger, 1881. His Hymns for the Catholic Church was pub. in 1882. It contains 516 hymns, a few of which are new, but none are of his composing. (See England, Hymnody, Church of.) [J. J.]

Whiting, Mary Bradford, was b. at Bloomfield, Essex. She is daughter of the Rev. J. B. Whiting, Vicar of St. Luke's, Ramsgate. To her father's Hys. for the Church Catholic, 1882, she contributed:—

1. Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile. The way is weary, &c. Holy Communion.

2. O Sun of truth and glory. Morning.

3. O word of love! O word of life. Holy Scripture.

4. There was beauty on the sea. Creation.

5. Time is swiftly passing o'er us. New Year.

6. To Thee, Creator, in Whose love. Holy Trinity.

7. What was the holy joy, O Lord. Work.

The best of these hymns are Nos. 1 and 7, and all are worthy of attention. [J. J.]

Whiting, William, was b. in Kensington, London, Nov. 1, 1825, and educated at Clapham. He was for several years Master of the Winchester College Choristers' School. His Rural Thoughts and other poems were pub. in 1851; but contained no hymns. His reputation as a hymn-writer is almost exclusively confined to his "Eternal Father, strong to save" (p. 356, i.). Other hymns by him were contributed to the following collections:—

i. To the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.

1. O Lord the heaven Thy power displays. Evening.

2. Onward through life Thy children stray. Changing Scenes of Life.

ii. To an Appendix to H. A. & M. issued by the Clergy of St. Philip's, Clerkenwell, 1868.

3. Jesus, Lord, our childhood's Patern. Jesus the Example to the Young.

4. Lord God Almighty, Everlasting Father. Holy Trinity.
 5. Now the harvest toil is over. Harvest.
 6. O Father of abounding grace. Consecration of a Church.
 7. We thank Thee, Lord, for all. All Saints Day.
 iii. To The Hymnary, 1872.
 8. Amen, the deed in faith is done. Holy Baptism.
 9. Jesus Christ our Saviour. For the Young.
 10. Now the billows, strong and dark. For Use at Sea.
 11. O Father, Who the traveller's way. For Travellers by Land.
 12. When Jesus Christ was crucified. Holy Baptism.

Mr. Whiting's hymns, with the exception of his "Eternal Father," &c., have not a wide acceptance. He d. in 1878. [J. J.]

Whitmore, Lady Lucy E. G. [Staffordshire Hymn-books, § v.]

Whittier, John Greenleaf, the American Quaker poet, was b. at Haverhill, Massachusetts, Dec. 17, 1807. He began life as a farm-boy and shoemaker, and subsequently became a successful journalist, editor and poet. In 1828 he became editor of the American Manufacturer (Boston), in 1830 of the New England Review, and in 1836 (on becoming Secretary to the American Anti-Slavery Society) of the Pennsylvania Freeman. He was also for some time, beginning with 1847, the corresponding editor of the National Era. In 1840 he removed to Amesbury, Massachusetts, where most of his later works have been written. At the present time [1890] he lives alternately at Amesbury and Boston. His first poetical piece was printed in the Newburyport Free Press in 1824. Since then his publications have been numerous, including:—

Voices of Freedom, 1833; Songs of Labour, and other Poems, 1850; Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844; The Panorama, and other Poems, 1856; In War Time, 1863; Occasional Poems, 1865; Poetical Works, 1869; Complete Poetical Works, 1876; The Bay of the Seven Islands, and other Poems, 1883, &c.

From his numerous poems the following hymns have been compiled, and have come into C. U., more especially amongst the American Unitarians:—

- All as God wills, Who wisely heeds. Trust. This begins with st. xi. of Whittier's poem, "My Psalm," in his work The Panorama, and other Poems, 1856 (Complete P. Works, Boston, 1876, p. 179), and is given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868; Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c.
- All things are Thine: no gift have we. Opening of a Place of Worship. Written for the Opening of Plymouth Church, Minnesota, 1872 (Comp. P. W., p. 281). In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
- Another hand is beckoning us. Bereavement. From his poem "Gone," written in 1845 (Comp. P. W., p. 106). In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
- Dear Lord and Father of mankind. Calmness in God desired. From his poem "The Brewing of Soma," beginning with st. xii. (Comp. P. W., p. 266). In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
- God giveth quietness at last. Death and Burial. This begins with st. xvii. of his poem, "The Singer," written in 1871 (Author's MS.), and included in the Comp. P. W., 1876, p. 265. In Martineau's Hymns, 1875.
- Hadst thou, 'midst life's empty noises. The Purpose of Life. Written in 1842. It is in Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Bk. of Hys., Boston, 1846, and several other later American collections. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1864.
- I ask not now for gold to gild. Resignation. From his poem "The Wish of To-Day," written in 1848 (Author's MS.). In Hedge and Huntingdon's Unitarian Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, 1853; the Laudes Domini, 1884, and other collections.
- Immortal love, for ever full. The Love of Jesus. This poem, entitled "Our Master," appeared in Whittier's work, The Panorama, and other Poems, 1856, in 35 st. of 4 l.; in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869-70, p. 117; and in the Comp. P. W., 1876, p. 231, and others. From this poem the following centos have come into C. U.:—

- Immortal love for ever full. In the 1890 ed. of the Hys. Comp. and others.
- O Lord and Master of us all. Begins with st. xvi.
- O Love! O Life! our faith and sight. Begins with st. xxiv. In several American hymnals, including the Unitarian Hymn [and Tune Bk.], Boston, 1868, and others.
- Our Friend, our Brother, and our Lord. Begins with st. xxxiv. In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c.
- We faintly hear, we dimly see. Begins with st. xxvi. In Barrett's Cong. Church Hym., 1887.
- We may not climb the heavenly steeps. Begins with st. v. In Laudes Domini, 1884; the Prim. Meth. Hym., 1887, &c.

The use of these centos shows that the hymnic element in the original poem is of a high and enduring order.

- It may not be our lot to wield. Duty and its Reward. This begins with st. iv. of his poem "Seed-time and Harvest," written circa 1850 (Author's MS.). Given in his Comp. P. W., p. 114. The hymn is in Laudes Domini, 1884, and other American collections.
- May freedom speed onward, wherever the blood. Freedom. In the 1848 Supplement to the Boston Bk. of Hys., Boston, No. 582, Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and other collections. In Whittier's Poetical Works, Boston, 1869, p. 68, it is given as, "Right onward, O speed it! Wherever the blood."
- Now is the seed-time; God alone. Self-Sacrifice. In the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 683.
- O backward-looking son of time. New and Old. This begins with st. xix. of his poem "The Reformer," and is given in this form in the Boston Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, No. 835, and again in later collections. In full in the Comp. P. W., p. 78.
- O beauty, old yet ever new. The Law of Love. This in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, begins with st. xxi. of his poem on "The Shadow and the Light," given in full in the Comp. P. W., p. 173.
- O fairest-born of love and light. American National Hymn. This is from his poem "Democracy," which is dated "Election Day, 1843," and is in his Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844, p. 214, and his Comp. P. W., p. 82.
- O, he whom Jesus loves has truly spoken. True Worship. This in the 1848 Supplement to the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1848, No. 578, begins with st. xi. of his poem on "Worship," given in full in his Comp. P. W., p. 96. The poem is dated by the Author, 1848 (Author's MS.).
- O holy Father, just and true. Freedom. "Lines written for the Celebration of the third Anniversary of British Emancipation at the Broadway Tabernacle, N. Y., First of August, 1837." (Comp. P. W., p. 47.) It was included in the Unitarian Christian Hys., Boston, 1844, and has been repeated in later collections.
- Maker of the Fruits and Flowers. Flower Services. This begins with st. iv. of his "Lines for the Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibition at Amesbury and Salisbury, Sep. 28, 1858," as given in his Comp. P. W., p. 183. It is in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and as "O Painter of the fruits and flowers," in Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
- O not alone with outward sign. Divine Invitation. This begins with st. ii. of his poem, "The Call of the Christian," given in his Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844, p. 185, and his Comp. P. W., p. 73. The hymn appeared in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1846, and again in later collections.
- O pure Reformers, not in vain. Freedom. This begins with st. xii. of his poem "To the Reformers of England," as given in his Comp. P. W., p. 77. The hymn was included in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1846, and has been repeated in later collections.
- O sometimes gleams upon our sight. Old and New. This is taken from his poem "The Chapel of the Hermits," 1852 (in 94 st. of 4 l.), and begins with st. xi. (Comp. P. W., p. 115.) The cento was given in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and repeated in later collections.
- O Thou, at Whose rebuke the grave. Mercy. This was given in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1848, No. 441.
- O [God] Thou, whose presence went before. National Hymn. This hymn is dated by the author 1834 (Author's MS.), and was written for the Anti-slavery Meeting at Chatham Street Chapel, New York, "on the 4th of the 7th month, 1834." It is No. 750 in the Unitarian Christian Hys., 1844. It is sometimes given as "O God, whose presence went before."

23. O, what though our feet may not tread where Christ trod. Presence of Christ's Spirit. The author dates this 1837 (Author's MS.). It is No. 150 in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1846. In their Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 652, it begins: "O, wherefore the dream of the earthly abode." Both centos are from his poem "Poledom."

24. Shall we grow weary in our watch? Patience, or Resignation. This begins with st. x. of his poem "The Cypress-Tree of Ceylon." (Comp. P. W., p. 84.) This form of the text was given in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1846, No. 278, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in Order's Cong. Hys., 1884, in 3 st.

25. Sport of the changeful multitude. Persecution. This begins with line 6 of st. x. of his poem "Ezekiel," and was given in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 651. In full in Comp. P. W., p. 67.

26. The green earth sends its incense up. Worship of Nature. The author dates this 1845 (Author's MS.). It is from his poem "The Worship of Nature," and was given in this form in the Boston Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, No. 193. The cento "The harp at Nature's advent strung," in the Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Bk., Boston, 1868, No. 195, is from the same poem. The cento No. 321 in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, is also (altered) from this poem.

27. The path of life we walk to-day. The Shadowing Rock. This in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, begins with st. xi. of his poem on "The Rock in El Gh'or," which the author dates 1859 (Author's MS.). In full in Comp. P. W., p. 180.

28. Thine are all the gifts, O God. Children's Missions, or Ragged Schools. Written for the Anniversary of the Children's Mission, Boston, 1873. It is given in Order's Cong. Hys., 1884.

29. Thou hast fallen in thine armour. Death. From his poem "To the memory of Charles B. Storrs, late President of Western Reserve College," pub. in his Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844, p. 84. Dated by the author 1835 (Author's MS.). Abridged form in the Hys. of the Spirit, 1864.

30. To-day, beneath Thy chastening eye. Seeking Rest. This begins with st. iv. of his poem, "The Wish of To-Day," dated by the author 1847 (Author's MS.), and given in full in his Comp. P. W., p. 114. The cento is in Martineau's Hymns, 1873, and others.

31. We see not, know not; all our way. Resignation. "Written at the opening of the Civil War, 1861" (Author's MS.), and included in his In War Time, 1863, and his Comp. P. W., p. 190. In full in the Prim. Meth. Hymnal, 1887.

32. When on my day of life the night is falling. Old Age. Written in 1882 (Author's MS.), and included in his work The Bay of the Seven Islands, and other Poems, 1883. In Order's Cong. Hys., 1884.

33. With silence only as thy benediction. Death. "1845. Written on the death of Sophia Sturge, sister of Joseph Sturge, of Birmingham, Eng." (Author's MS.). It is in several collections, including Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873; Order's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others.

Notwithstanding this extensive use of portions of Mr. Whittier's poems as hymns for congregational use, he modestly says concerning himself: "I am really not a hymn-writer, for the good reason that I know nothing of music. Only a very few of my pieces were written for singing. A good hymn is the best use to which poetry can be devoted, but I do not claim that I have succeeded in composing one." (Author's MS.) We must add, however, that these pieces are characterized by rich poetic beauty, sweet tenderness, and deep sympathy with human kind. Whittingham, William. [Old Version, § ix. 3.]

Whittingham, William Rollinson, D.D., LL.D., was b. in New York, Dec. 2, 1805. He received his early education from his mother, and subsequently graduated at the General Theological Seminary, New York, 1825. He was for some time Rector of St. Mark's, Orange, New Jersey; then of St. Luke's, New York; and afterwards Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the General Seminary, N. Y., 1835. In 1840 he was consecrated Bishop of Maryland, and d. in 1879. For talent, learning, and character, Bishop Whittingham is allowed to be one of the great American Bishops, if not the greatest. His contributions to hymnology were Specimens of a Church Hymnal, Baltimore, Dec. 1865, and two trs. from the German, which appeared in Hys. for Church and Home, 1859. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) [F. M. B.]

Who are these that come from far? T. Kelly. [Triumphs of the Gospel.] This hymn in Hatfield's Church Hymns, N. Y., 1872, and others, is composed of st. iii., iv. (re-arranged) v., vi. of Kelly's "Hark! what sounds salute our ears," which appeared in the 1806 ed. of his Hymns, in 6 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1853, No. 6). [J. J.]

Who but Thou, Almighty Spirit? [Missions.] This hymn appeared in The Evangelical Magazine, 1821, in 5 st. of 6 l., and signed Eriphus. It was repeated in Nettleton's American Village Hymns, 1825, and subsequently in numerous collections in that country and elsewhere, as in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, &c. [J. J.]

Who can resist the Almighty arm? J. Logan. [God Omnipotent.] Pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraph., 1781, as a paraphrase of Job xxvi. 6, &c., in 9 st. of 4 l. It is rarely found outside of the Trs. and Paraphs. We have ascribed it to J. Logan on evidence given under Bruce, M., p. 188, ii. [J. J.]

Who is this so weak and helpless? Bp. W. W. How. [Life and Death of Jesus.] This very beautiful hymn in the form of question and answer, on the Life and Death of our Blessed Lord, was pub. in the 1867 Supplement to Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., in 4 st. of 8 l. It was revised by Bp. How for the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is found in a large number of modern hymnals. [J. J.]

Who says, the wan autumnal sun? J. Keble. [Burial. The Widow at Nain.] Dated Sep. 27, 1822, and pub. in the 4th ed. of the Christian Year, 1828, in 13 st. of 5 l., and based upon St. Luke vii. 13, 14, "And when the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her," &c. In R. T. Lowe's Hys. for Christian Seasons, Gainsburgh, 1854, st. iv.-vi., ix. and x., were given as "Who says the widow's heart must break?" In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1328, there is another hymn from this poem and beginning with the same opening line. It is composed of st. iv.-viii. Each of these arrangements forms a good hymn. [J. J.]

Why dost thou beat so quick, my heart. F. W. Faber. [Prayer.] Pub. in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 12 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Sweetness in Prayer." It was also given in his Hymns, 1862. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, the cento, "Thy home is with the humble, Lord," is composed of st. viii., ix., and xii. Sometimes it is given as "Thy home is with the humble soul." [J. J.]

Why march ye forth with hymn and chant? J. M. Neale. [Burial—and Burial at Sea.] This appeared in his posthumous Ori- ginal Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclesiastical Verses, 1866, p. 75, in 4 st. of 9 l., and headed, "At a Funeral." The hymn for Burial at Sea, "We give his body to the surge," No. 516, in the Hymnary, 1872, is based thereupon. It is one of a very limited number of hymns adapted to that occasion. [J. J.]

Why should I fear the darkest hour? J. Newton. [Jesus All and in All.] Printed in the Gospel Magazine, June, 1771 in 8 st. of 3 l., headed "In uno Jesu omnia," and signed "Omicron." It was included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 46, with the heading "Jesus my All." It has passed into a large number of hymn-books both old and new. It is usually abbreviated. [J. J.]

Why should I sorrow more? [Confidence in the Promises.] This hymn in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, is W. Williams's hymn "My God, my Life, my All," rewritten for that collection by Mr. Spurgeon. Williams's original appeared in his Gloria in Excelsis, or Hys. of Praise to God and the Lamb, Carmarthen, 1772, No. 67, in 4 st. of 8 l. [J. J.]

Why should our tears in sorrow flow? [Death of a Minister.] Appeared in the Missionary Minstrel, Lond., 1826. It was by "O. P.," the anonymous compiler of that collection of missionary hymns. It was reprinted in Pratt's Ps. & Hys., 1829, No. 569, in 6 st. of 4 l. From that collection it passed into many hymn-books, especially in America, and is in somewhat extensive use. [W. T. B.]

Why should the children of a [the] King. I. Watts. [Assurance through Faith.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 144, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Witnessing and Sealing Spirit." It was adopted by G. Whitefield in his Coll. of Hys., &c., 1753; A. M. Toplady in his Ps. & Hys., 1776, and others amongst the older compilers. It is also widely used in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Why will ye lavish out your years. P. Doddridge. [Care of the Soul.] In the D. MSS. this hymn is undated, but is placed between two hymns which are dated respectively Oct. 29, 1735, and November 16, 1735. It was pub. in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 206, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 229. It is given in most American hymn-books as "Why will ye waste in trifling cares?" [J. J.]

Whythead, Thomas, M.A., s. of H. R. Whythead, Rector of Crayke, and Prebendary of Lincoln, was b. at Thormanby, Nov. 30, 1815. He was educated at Beverley Grammar School, and St. John's College, Cambridge. He was Bell University Scholar; he also won the Chancellor's medal for English Verse twice; the Hulsean prize of 1835; and other distinctions. He was also twenty-second senior optime in the Mathematical Tripos, and second in the first class in the Classical Tripos; B.A. in 1837, and Foundation Fellow of his college the same year. In 1838 he was classical lecturer at Clare College, but left the University for the Curacy of Freshwater, Isle of Wight, on taking Holy Orders in 1839.

In 1841 he was appointed Chaplain to Dr. Selwyn, Bishop elect of New Zealand, and sailed for that country in 1842. He was appointed the first Principal of the College which the Bishop established in New Zealand; but owing to the rupture of a blood vessel shortly after landing in New South Wales, he never took any duty in New Zealand. The little time and strength which remained to him he spent in correcting the Maori translation of the Bible and Prayer Book. The end came, however, only too soon, and he d. at Waimate, N. Zealand, March 19, 1843. The esteem in which he was held is emphasised by the fact that "When the new chapel of his college [St. John's Cambridge] was erected and the vaulted roof was enriched with a series of figures, beautifully executed, according to the several successive centuries of the Christian era, the five which received the distinguished honour of being selected to represent the nineteenth century, all members of his college, were Henry Martyn, William Wilberforce, William Wordsworth, James Wood, and Thomas Whythead."—[Mission Life, July 1873, p. 390.]

Whythead's Poems were pub. by Rivingtons in 1842, and his College Life, posthumously in 1845. In the former there are seven "Hymns towards a Holy Week." Of these "Last of creation's days" (Sixth day) and the widely known "Sabbath of the saints of old" (q.v.). Five days before he died he wrote to a friend:—

"I took up the translation of the Evening Hymn (four verses for service) into Maori rhyming verse, the first of the kind of the same metre and rhythm as the English. Two hundred and fifty copies have been printed, and sung in church and school by the natives, and several of them came and sang under my window. They call it the 'new hymn of the sick minister.' Bishop Ken's lines [Glory to Thee, my God, this night] it is very hard for one to compress within the same bounds in a rude language. However it is done, and people seem pleased with it; and it is a comfort to think one has introduced Bishop Ken's beautiful hymn into the Maori's evening worship, and left them this legacy when I could do no more for them."

A life so short and holy could have had no more beautiful ending. [J. J.]

Wie ein Vogel lieblich singet. [Morning.] This hymn, which Miss Winkworth appropriately entitles "A Morning Song of Gladness," is included as No. 207 in the Geistreiche Psalmen und Gesänge, Marburg, 1722, in 6 st. of 8 l. It had previously appeared in the ed. of 1690 [Marburg University Library]. In J. Köbner's Christliche, Harfentöne, Hamburg, 1840, p. 239, st. i., iv., vi. are given, marked as "from the year 1580"; and this text is in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 2255 (1865, No. 2323). We have failed to trace the hymn earlier than 1690. The tr. in C. U. is:—

As a bird in meadows fair. A good tr. from Knapp, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 73; repeated in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, beginning, "As the bird in meadows fair." In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 161, Miss Winkworth re-wrote it to the original metre, and there it begins, "As a bird at dawning singeth." [J. M.]

Wie gross ist des Allmächtigen Güte. C. F. Gellert. [Praise.] A beautiful hymn of thanksgiving for the goodness of God, one of the finest and most popular of Gellert's productions. First pub. in his Geistliche Oden und Lieder, Leipzig, 1757, p. 34, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The Goodness of God." Included in the Berlin G. B., 1765, No. 20, in almost all subsequent collections, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

How bounteous our Creator's blessing! A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 204 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

Other trs. are: (1) "How great the goodness of the Lord," in Madame de Pontes' Poets and Poetry of Germany, 1858, vol. i. p. 473. (2) "How great Jehovah's love, how tender," by Mrs. Findlater, in H. L. L., 1862, p. 47 (1884, p. 212). (3) "My God, how boundless is Thy love," in the Day of Rest, 1877, p. 405, marked as by "A. B. H." [J. M.]

Wie soll ich dich empfangen? P. Gerhardt. [Advent.] 1st pub. in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 77, in 10 st. of 8 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistl. Lieder, No. 3, Bachmann's ed., No. 22, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 21. It is founded on St. Matt. xxi. 1-9, the Gospel for the first S. in Advent. The allusions in st. vi.-ix. would suggest that it was written during the Thirty Years' War. It is one of Gerhardt's finest productions, and is probably the best German Advent hymn. Tr. as:—

1. How shall I meet my Saviour. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1722, p. 3 (1732, p. 3, slightly altered). Included in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, and repeated, altered, in later eds. (1886, No. 33). Varying centos under the original first line, but from the Moravian text, are found in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, and Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. Other forms are (see also No. 3):—

(1) We go to meet Thee, Saviour (st. i. alt.), in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, mainly from the Moravian H. Bk., 1801.

(2) Love caused Thine Incarnation (st. v. alt.), in Walker's Coll., 1855, and Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, from the Moravian H. Bk., 1801.

2. Oh, how shall I receive Thee. A good tr. of st. i., ii., vii., viii., x., by A. T. Russell, as No. 36 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. Repeated in Kennedy, 1863, and the People's H., 1867; and abridged in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, H. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, &c.

3. Oh! how shall I receive Thee. This is No. 5 in the ed., 1857, of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. St. i., ii., are based on Russell, and st. iii.-v. (representing iv.-vi.), are based on Jacobi, as altered in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. Slightly altered in Mercer, 1859, and thence in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868; and (omitting tr. of st. iv.) in Mercer's Ox. ed., 1864.

4. Ah! Lord, how shall I meet Thee. A tr. of st. i., ii., v., vi., viii., x., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 21.

5. Say with what salutations. In full, by J. Kelly, in his P. Gerhardt's Spir. Songs, 1867, p. 10; repeated, abridged, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are: (1) "Lord, how shall I be meeting," by Dr. J. W. Alexander, in Schaff's Kirchenfreund, 1850, p. 176, and his Christ in Song, 1869, p. 20, and his own Breaking Crucible, 1861, p. 11. (2) "How shall I meet Thee? How my heart," by Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 7. (3) "How shall I come to meet Thee," by Miss Manning, 1863, p. 65. (4) "Lord, how shall I receive Thee," by R. Massie, 1864, p. 93. [J. M.]

Wigner, John Murch, second s. of J. T. Wigner (see below), was b. at Lynn, June 19, 1844. He was educated at the Grammar School of Lynn, and afterwards graduated B.A. and B.Sc. in the London University. Mr.

J. M. Wigner now resides near London, and has been for many years in the India Home Civil Service. He is connected with his father's church, and has done much to promote the spiritual welfare of the young. He is the author of several hymns, three of which are in the Baptist Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882:—

1. "Come to the Saviour now!" Invitation.
2. "Lost one! wandering on in sadness." Return to God.
3. "Lo, a loving Friend is waiting." The Call of Jesus.

The first of these is in the Bap. Ps. and Hys., 1880, and is dated 1871. [W. R. S.]

Wigner, John Thomas, was b. at Harwich, in or about the year 1815. When a youth he removed to Burnham, in Essex, where he became a member of a Baptist church. In 1836 he entered Stepney College as a student for the ministry, and in 1840 became pastor at Lynn, in Norfolk. From Lynn he removed in 1866 to Brockley, near London, where very shortly a new chapel was built for him, in which he continues to minister. Mr. Wigner was one of the committee which brought out, in 1858, the well-known Baptist Hymn-book Ps. & Hys. He was the editor of the Supplement to that book, which appeared in 1880, and was also editor of the Baptist Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882. In these books two of his hymns were included: (1) "Hark! 'tis the song of heaven" (The Angels' Song at the Birth of Christ), and (2) "O Lord, revive Thy work" (Prayer for a Revival). A third, which appears in the above-named School H. Bk. is an adaptation by Mr. Wigner of a well-known hymn by Mrs. Reed, "O do not let the word depart" (Expostulation with the Awakened). [W. R. S.]

Wilhelm (II. or IV.), Duke of Sachse-Weimar, s. of Duke Johann of Sachse-Weimar, was b. in the castle of Altenburg, April 11, 1598. He studied for some time at the University of Jena, devoting himself especially to music and mathematics. On the outbreak of the Thirty Years' War he espoused the cause of Friedrich v. of the Palatinate. At the battle of the Weisse Berg, near Prague (see p. 155, i.), he was severely wounded, and at the battle fought near Stadtlohn, in Westphalia (Aug., 1623), he was at first left for dead, and then taken prisoner by Tilly. In 1625 the Emperor allowed him to go free, and he assumed the government of Weimar. When Gustavus Adolphus came to Germany (1630), Wilhelm did not join him till after the battle of Breitenfeld (Sept., 1631), and in July, 1635, he was one of the consenting parties to the Peace of Prague, between Saxony and the Emperor, in consequence of which the Swedish troops made various inroads on his territory. When the final partition took place, in 1644, between himself and his surviving brother (Sachse-Weimar fell to Wilhelm, and Gotha to Ernst) he set himself earnestly to restore prosperity and godliness in the regions under his rule. He also found more time (especially after the peace of Westphalia, 1648), to devote to his studies in poetry and music, and to the adornment of Weimar. He d. at Weimar, May 17, 1662 (Koch, iii. 110; Wetzel, iii. 426; Bode, p. 172, &c.).

Wilhelm joined, in 1617, in founding the Fruitbearing Society, the great German Literary and Patriotic Union of the 17th cent.; and, after the death (1650) of Ludwig, Prince of Anhalt-Cöthen, became its head. Weimar thus became the centre of its operations, in the direction of which the Duke was assisted by Georg Neumark (p. 796, i.). Neumark, in his Palmbaum, 1680, p. 449, speaks of the Duke as having "composed several hymns, as well-known in this place, especially the short Hymn of Peace 'Gott der Friede hat gegeben.'"

Besides this hymn on Peace only one other is known as Wilhelm's, viz. :—

Herr Jesu Christ, dich zu uns wend. Public Worship. This was included as No. 124 in the 2nd ed., 1651, of pt. i. of the Cantionale Sacrum, Gotha (1st ed. 1646), in 4 st. of 4 l., entitled "To be sung before the Sermon." As no author's name is there given, and as it did not appear in any of the three parts of the original ed. of 1646-48, the Duke's authorship is decidedly doubtful. So far as yet traced the Duke's name was not attached to it until in the Altdorf Liederfreud of 1676 (Fischer's Supplement, p. 71). In J. Niedling's Handbüchlein, 4th ed., 1655, p. 746, it appears without author's name (Niedling, be it observed, was living at Altenburg), and entitled "A heartfelt petition of pious Christians for grace and the help of the Holy Spirit, during Divine Service, before the Sermon." Koch says it was in the 1st ed., 1638, of Niedling, but this appears to be merely a guess, for the earliest ed. of Niedling which he describes at iii., 109, is that of 1655; and if it were in Niedling's 1638 ed., this circumstance would make the Duke's authorship still more unlikely. Whoever the author was the hymn soon became justly popular, and in 1678 was formally directed to be sung in all the churches in Saxony on all Sundays and festivals. It is a simple and forcible hymn, which survived the Rationalistic period, and is found in all recent German hymn-books, e.g. in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 356. Tr. as :—

1. Lord Christ, reveal Thy holy Face. In full by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 42 (1732, p. 69). Repeated as No. 322 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1886, No. 724), and as No. 54 in J. F. Thrupp's Ps. & Hys., 1853.

2. Lord Jesu, to our prayer attend. This is a good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 12 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

3. Lord Jesus Christ, be present now! This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, as No. 13 in her C. B. for England, 1863; repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, No. 49.

4. Christ Jesus Lord, to us attend. In full by L. Heyl, as No. 3 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are :—

(1) "Lord Jesus, turn to us, and down," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 48. (2) "Lord Jesus Christ, in mercy bend," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 19. (3) "Lord Jesus Christ, now towards us bend," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 221. [J. M.]

Willard, Emma C. [née Hart]. A teacher and educational writer, b. at Berlin, Connecticut, 1787; resided in 1838 and some-time after at Hartford, and for many years conducted a well-known school at Troy, New York. She d. at Troy, 1870. Her hymn—

Rocked in the cradle of the deep (Sailor's Hymn), is sometimes said to have been pub. in 1830. It is found in Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, No. 1285. Its earlier appearance has not been verified. It is a successful sailor's hymn. It is included in several modern collections. [F. M. B.]

Williams, David, a contemporary of William Williams (1717-1791) and author of numerous Welsh hymns. He also wrote English hymns, some of which were pub. in a small tract of 24 pp., entitled, Joy in the Tents of Zion, or a Few Gospel Hymns, Brecknock, 1779. These hymns are rough, and in the style of W. Williams. There is a wild Welsh beauty about them which makes itself felt under the restraints of a gloomy Calvinism and a half foreign language. The original tract is very rare. [W. T. B.]

Williams, David, of Bethesda'r Frô, was a minister with the Independents in South Wales. He was b. at a farm-house, called Trehedyn, near Cowbridge, Glamorganshire. In 1812 he published a collection of hymns, which he called Llais y Durtur, or The Voice of the Turtle Dove. In 1824 he published a new edition under the title of Dyffroedd Bethesda, containing 143 hymns and 10 songs. Many of his hymns are still used by all denominations in Wales. [W. G. T.]

Williams, Edward, or Iolo Morgannwg, the greatest Welsh scholar of his time, published two vols. of hymns under the title Sainau yr Eglwys yn yr Anialwch, "The Psalms of the Church in the Wilderness." He is the chief author of the Myvyrian Archaeology of Wales. His hymns were chiefly used by the Unitarians. [W. G. T.]

Williams, Helen Maria, daughter of Charles Williams, an officer in the Army, was b. in the North of England in 1762. Through the influence of Dr. A. Kippis (p. 625, i.) whose help she sought in London, her first poem, Edwin and Eltruda, a legendary tale, was pub. in 1782. This was followed by An Ode on the Peace, 1783, and Pern, a Poem. These were all included in her Poems, 2 vols., 1786, 2nd ed. 1791. Being connected by her sister's marriage with a French Protestant family, she resided in Paris during the period of the Revolution and the reign of Terror. There she became well known as a political writer of strong republican sympathies, but her too independent expressions of opinion led to her temporary imprisonment by Robespierre. Her Letters from France, 1790, were pub. in England and America, and in a French translation, in France. She also pub. Letters containing a Sketch of the Politics of France from the 31st May, 1793, till the 28th of July, 1794, 2 vols., 1795, and other works of a like kind; some additional Poems, and a tr. of Humboldt's Personal Narratives of his Travels, 1815. The closing years of her life were spent at Amsterdam, in the house of her nephew, Athanase Coquerel, a pastor of the Reformed Church there. Miss Williams d. in 1827. From her Poems, 1786, the following hymns have come into C. U. :—

1. My God, all nature owns Thy sway. Nature speaks of God. In Martineau's Hymns, 1840.

2. While Thee I seek, protecting Power. Safety in God. This hymn was in Dr. Priestley's Birmingham Coll., 1790; in Kippis's Coll., 1795; the Exeter Coll., 1801; and almost every other Unitarian collection to the present time. In the New Cong. H. Bk., 1859, it begins "While Thee I seek, Almighty Power;" and in several collections a cento beginning "Father, in all our [my] comforts here," is given as in Stowell's Ps. & Hys., 1831 and 1877, and several others.

[V. D. D.]

Williams, Isaac, B.D., was b. at Cwmcynfelin in Cardiganshire, Dec. 12, 1802, where his mother happened to be staying at her father's house at the time of his birth. But his parents' house was in Bloomsbury, London, his father being a Chancery barrister at Lincoln's Inn. He received his early education from a clergyman named Polehampton, with whom he was at first a day pupil in London, but whom he afterwards accompanied to a curacy at Worplesdon, near Guildford. All Mr. Polehampton's pupils (15), with the exception of Isaac Williams and his two elder brothers, were being prepared for Eton, where great stress was laid upon Latin versification; and it was in these early years that Isaac Williams acquired his fondness for, and proficiency in, this species of composition. In 1814 he was removed to Harrow, where Mr. Drury was his private tutor. He gained several school prizes, and became so used, not only to write, but to think, in Latin, that when he had to write an English theme he was obliged to translate his ideas, which were in Latin, into English. In 1821 he proceeded to Trinity College, Oxford, that college being chosen on the advice of Mr. Drury; and in his second term he was elected scholar of Trinity. In 1823 he won the University Prize for Latin Verse, the subject being Ars Geologica. The gaining of this prize was indirectly the turning point of his life, for it brought him into close relationship with John Keble, who may be termed his spiritual father. He had been previously introduced to Mr. Keble by the Vicar of Aberystwith, Mr. Richards, whom he had met at his grandfather's house. But there was no intimacy between them until he had won the Latin Verse Prize, when Mr. Keble came to his rooms and offered to look over the poem with him before it was recited and printed. This led to an intimate acquaintance which ripened into a warm friendship of infinite benefit to Isaac Williams's spiritual life. Mr. Keble offered to take him with him into the country and read with him during the Long Vacation, without any payment. Robert Wilberforce, then an undergraduate of Oriel, was also to be of the party. They settled at Southrop, near Fairford, a name familiar to the readers of Keble's Life. Here Isaac Williams made the acquaintance of Hurrell Froude, who was also reading with Mr. Keble, and this acquaintance also ripened into a friendship which was terminated only by death. Keble was like a boy with his pupils, entering with zest into all their amusements, but he also exercised a deep influence over their religious characters, especially that of Isaac Williams. Williams spent this and all his subsequent Long Vacations at Southrop, and became more and more influenced for good by Mr. Keble. He also became a great friend of Sir George Prevost, then an undergraduate of Oriel, who afterwards married his only sister. During one of these sojourns at Southrop, Keble showed Williams and Froude a MS. copy of the Christian Year, but, strange to say, the young men did not appreciate its beauties. Williams's intimacy with Keble caused alarm to Mr. Hughes, the successor of the Vicar of Aberystwith who had first brought the two together; Mr. Hughes was greatly shocked to hear that he was a friend of Mr. Keble of Oriel, and said he would introduce him to a most excellent and promising person there, a Mr. Newman, whom the evangelical vicar knew in connexion with the Church Missionary Society, and who would, he doubtless thought, supply an antidote to Keble's High Church opinions. While Williams was an undergraduate at Oxford, though he was a member of Trinity College, he spent much of his time at Oriel, attracted thither, not only because it was Keble's college, but also because he had many friends there, the chief of whom were the Wilberforces, Ryder, Anderson (now Sir C. Anderson), Hurrell Froude, and Sir G. Prevost. As an accomplished scholar who had the benefit of Keble's tuition, it was naturally expected that he would take a high degree; and so, no doubt, he would have done, had he not attempted too much. In spite of the warnings of friends, he resolved to aim at a "double first," and, as mathematical studies were not to his taste, the labour over this uncongenial work in addition to the necessary preparation for the classical school was too severe for him; his health broke down, and he was obliged to be content with a pass degree. In 1829 he was ordained to the curacy of Windrush, about twelve miles from Fairford where Keble then lived, and about twenty from Bisley, where his brother-in-law, Sir George Prevost, who was now married, was curate. But he did not stay long at Windrush. Passman though he was, he competed successfully for a Trinity Fellowship, and had to return to Oxford the same year as college tutor. He lived on terms of great intimacy with Hurrell Froude, then Fellow of Oriel, and was introduced by him to J. H. Newman, to whom he was much attracted, like almost all who were brought into contact with that remarkable man. The attraction appears to have been mutual, and Williams became Newman's curate at S. Mary's, Oxford, which then included the village or rather hamlet of Littlemore. In 1842 he married Caroline, the third daughter of Arthur Champernown, of Dartington Hall, Devon, left Oxford, and went to Bisley as curate to Mr. T. Keble. So far as his outer life went, little more need be said. Nothing seems to have occurred to ruffle its placid course, except one episode which occurred in 1841-2. When John Keble resigned the Poetry Professorship at Oxford, he was naturally anxious that his friend Williams should be his successor. Not only was there a warm personal friendship and an entire sympathy of opinion on the most important of all matters between the two men, but on the score of poetical merit, Williams seemed to him obviously the proper person. He had already published several of his poetical works, and his reputation as a sacred poet was second only to that of Keble himself. But he was also identified in a peculiar way with the Tract writers. He had actually written that Tract which, next to the memorable Tract 90, had given the greatest offence of all, viz.: Tract 80, on Reserve in the Communication of Religious Knowledge, and he was also known as the especial friend and late coadjutor of Newman. It is not, therefore, surprising that vehement opposition was raised against his election. A rival candidate was found in the person of Mr. Edward Garbett, of Brasenose, a First Classman, but quite unknown in the domain of poetry. There was really no comparison whatever between the fitness of the two candidates, but that counted for little when men's minds were heated by the "odium theologium." It became simply a party question; but a public contest was happily averted by a private comparison of votes, when it was found that there was a large majority of votes in favour of Mr. Garbett. Mr. Williams was much hurt—not by the opposition of the Low Churchmen, for he expected that,—but by the desertion of several whom he counted upon as friends. He withdrew from Oxford and from public life (which had never possessed much attraction to a man of his retiring and studious habits) altogether. He remained at Bisley until 1848, when he removed to Stinchcombe; and there he lived until his death. From time to time some cultured and thoughtful work from his pen was given to the world, but that was all; and when the announcement that he had quietly passed away on SS. Philip and James' Day, May 1, 1865, appeared, the outer world had almost forgotten that he was still living, though it had not forgotten, and will not, it is hoped, while the English language lasts, ever forget his writings. He died of a decline, the seeds of which had long been sown.

As a devotional writer both in prose and verse the name of Isaac Williams stands deservedly high, but as a writer of hymns for congregational use, he does not, either for quantity or quality, at all reach the first rank. Indeed, it would have been very distressing to him if he had done so, for he shared the distaste which most of the early leaders of the Oxford movement felt for the congregational use of any metrical hymns apart from the Psalter, and it is said that he purposely made his translations of the Hymns from the Parisian Breviary rough, in order to prevent them from being so used. His poetical works are:—

(1.) The Cathedral, his first publication in verse, issued in the early part of 1838. It was written about the same time as the famous Tract on Reserve, and "in pursuance of the same great object we had undertaken" (in the Tracts for the Times). What that object was is intimated in the alternative title, The Cathedral, or the Catholic and Apostolic Church in England. It followed very much the same lines as George Herbert's Temple, only it worked out the ideas far more in detail, connecting each part of the edifice with some portion of church doctrine or discipline. The whole volume is written in the true spirit of poetry, and some of the sonnets in it are good specimens of that difficult form of composition; but it contains scarcely any verses out of which even centos of hymns can be formed.

(2.) Later on in the same year (1838) he published a volume, entitled Thoughts in Past Years, though, as the title implies, many of its contents were written at an earlier date. In fact the composition ranged over a period of at least twelve years. In the writer's own opinion there was more true poetry in this volume than in The Cathedral, but the latter had the advantage of being written on one systematic plan, while the Thoughts was a collection of detached poems. The connexion between the four divisions of the volume was, that they were all suggested by the writer's surroundings. Thus the "Golden Valley" was the beautiful district in the neighbourhood of Stroud known by that name; "The Mountain Home" was the writer's own birthplace, Cwmcynfelin in Cardiganshire; "The River's Bank" was the River Windrush, on the banks of which was the writer's first curacy; "The Sacred City" is Oxford. In a later edition (1852) there is an additional division entitled "The side of the Hill," that is, Stinchcombe Hill, Gloucestershire. Like The Cathedral, this is rather a volume of sonnets and sacred poems for private use, than of hymns in the popular sense of the term. The same volume contains his Reliquia Latina; or Harrow School Exercises, and his Oxford Prize Poem, Ars Geologica. The Latinity of these poems fully bears out the writer's own remark, that in his early years he was more at home in Latin than he was in his own language. It also contained a translation of the "Dies Iræ, Dies Illa," to which, in the revised and enlarged edition of 1848, were added, under the title of Lyra Ecclesiastica, a number of translations from other Latin and Greek Hymns. These translations are for the most part very free, and are not adapted, as they were certainly not intended, for congregational use.

(3.) His next publication was Hymns translated from the Parisian Breviary, 1839. He thought that "the ancient Latin hymns were the best source from which our acknowledged deficiency in metrical psalmody should be supplied, as being much more congenial to the spirit of our own Liturgy than those hymns which are too often made to take part in our ancient services;" and he had already published many of the translations which appear in this volume, at intervals from 1833 to 1837, in the British Magazine, the church organ which was edited by Hugh James Rose. A few hymns from this volume, e.g. "O Heavenly Jerusalem," "Disposer Supreme," "O Word of God above," have been adopted for congregational use, but most of these are, perhaps purposely, done into such irregular metres, that they are not available for the purpose. Indirectly, however, they have been highly serviceable to the cause of congregational psalmody, for Mr. Chandler tells us in the Preface to his Hymns of the Primitive Church that Mr. Williams's translations in the British Magazine led him to produce that work.

(4.) The next little volume, Hymns on the Catechism, was written at Bisley and published in 1842. Its object was strictly practical; it was intended as "an aid towards following out that catechetical instruction which is so essential a part of the church system." It cannot be said that these hymns are likely to be so attractive to children, as, for example, those of Mrs. Alexander, but they are suitable for congregational, or at any rate, for Sunday school use, and one of them, "Be Thou my Guardian and my Guide," has found its way deservedly into most collections.

(5.) In the same year (1842) a much more ambitious work, The Baptistery, also saw the light. One seems to recognize in this work the pupil of John Keble, for its leading idea is very much the same as that of Tract 89, viz.: that earthly things are a shadow of heavenly. It is divided into thirty-two "Images," as the author terms them; it is not easy reading, but it well repays the careful attention which it requires, for both in form and matter it is the product of a true poet. One of the "Images," the 20th, "The Day of Days, or the Great Manifestation," has supplied our well-known hymn, "Lord, in this, Thy mercy's day," but the general tenour of the work is quite apart from hymnody.

(6.) The same may be said of The Altar, published in 1847, which takes the second great Sacrament of the Gospel, as The Baptistery took the first, for the basis of a series of devout meditations, 34 in number. The 1st ed. was illustrated by 34 pictures, one to each meditation, after the fashion of a foreign book which the writer had seen; but the illustrations were thought unworthy of the subject, and the later editions appeared without them. The object of the work was to connect the various events which occurred at the time of our Blessed Lord's Passion with the Eucharistic Service. It consists exclusively of a series of sonnets, and supplies no hymns for congregational use.

(7.) In the same year (1849) appeared another work of a very different type. It is entitled The Christian Scholar, and its object is "to render the study of the classics subservient to a higher wisdom." It incidentally gives us an interesting insight into the author's own training under Mr. Keble, for he tells us in the Preface that he himself "derived, not merely moral benefit, but actual religious training from this indirect mode of instruction in another to whom he owes everything that renders life valuable." The plan of the book is, in a word, to take passages from all the chief classical authors, and to give Christian comments on each.

(8.) His only other poetical work was Ancient Hymns for Children, 1842, which consisted of a reprint, with slight alterations, of 30 of his trs. from the Latin, previously published in 1838 and 1839 as above.

Although Isaac Williams's prose writings are as valuable, and perhaps more popular than his verse, yet from the point of view of this article it will suffice to enumerate the principal of them. They include—

Several reviews for The British Critic at various dates; Thoughts on the Study of the Gospels, 1842; Sermons on the Characters of the Old Testament, 1856; The Beginning of the Book of Genesis, with Notes and Reflections, 1861; The Psalms interpreted of Christ, vol. i., 1864 (no other volumes were published); A Memoir of the Rev. R. A. Suckling, late Perpetual Curate of Bussage, 1852; A Harmony of the Four Gospels, 1850; Sermons on the Epistles and Gospels, 3 vols., 1853; Sermons on the Female Characters of Holy Scripture, 1859; The Apocalypse, 1851, and many other minor works.

Besides these, he edited a large number of Plain Sermons at different dates by various writers, and he also wrote some of the Tracts for the Times, notably Tract 80 (1838), and 87 (1840), on Reserve in Communicating Religious Knowledge. It is difficult to see why these should have given so much offence. The principles on which the conclusion is based are obviously correct. Perhaps the title Reserve was alarming when men's minds were excited by the fear that they were being led by the new Oxford school they knew not whither. These two Tracts, with Tract 86, also by Isaac Williams, would fill an octavo volume of more than 200 pages. Both the character and the writings of Isaac Williams are singularly attractive. They both present a striking combination of qualities which are not often found in union. He was as firm as a rock in the maintenance and expression of his principles, but so quiet and retiring that his personality came far less before the public than that of any of the other leaders of the Oxford movement. His writings are so Christian and unaggressive in their tone that we are won over to his side almost without knowing it. He was a most valuable ally on this very account to his party, and the hymnologist may well regret that he did not devote his exquisite poetical taste, his refined culture, and his ardent piety more to hymn-writing than he did. [J. H. O.]

Isaac Williams's position in hymnody does not lie so much in the actual work which he did, as in the influence he had over others. His trs. from the Latin, mainly through the metres which he deliberately adopted, have not had a wide acceptance in the hymnody of the Church. J. Chandler, however, has left it on record that Williams's trs. in the British Magazine led him to undertake kindred work, and Chandler's trs. are amongst the most popular in the English language. Williams's Hymns on the Catechism, 1842, were with Dr. Neale's Hymns for Children of the same year the forerunners of the more popular productions on the same lines by later writers. Williams's trs. together with the more important of his original hymns may be traced through the Index of Authors and Translators. Of his original hymns the following are also in C. U. :—

1. How solemn, silent, and how still. Obedience. (1842.)
2. Jesus, most loving Lord. Hymn to Christ. (1844.)
3. Lord, Thou dost abhor the proud. Humility.
4. Members of Christ are we. Members of Christ.
5. The child leans on its parent's breast. Trust in God. (1842.)
6. The High Priest once a year. Ascension. (1842.)

The dates here given indicate the works in which these hymns appeared. [J. J.]

Williams, John, D.D., LL.D., was b. at Deerfield, Massachusetts, Aug. 30, 1817; graduated at Trinity College, 1835, and was ordained in 1838. From 1842 to 1848 he was Rector at Schenectady, New York, and President of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, from 1848 to 1853. In 1861 he was consecrated Assistant Bishop of Connecticut, taking, in 1865, the full charge of that diocese. Bishop Williams is an eminent scholar. His contributions to hymnology were Ancient Hymns of Holy Church. Hartford, 1845, being trs. from the Latin; the "Additional Hymns," pp. 81-127, were selected from the trs. from the Latin by Isaac Williams. A few of Bp. Williams's trs. have come into C. U. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) [J. J.]

Williams, William, of Pantycelyn, was the Sweet Singer of Wales. He was b. at Cefn-y-Coed, in the Parish of Llanfair-y-bryn, near Llandovery, in 1717. He was ordained a deacon of the Established Church in 1740, by Dr. Claget, Bishop of St. Davids, and for three years he served the Curacies of Llanwrtyd and Llanddewi-Abergwesyn. He never received Priest's Orders. He became early acquainted with the revivalist Daniel Rowlands, and for thirty-five years he preached once a month at Llanllan and Caio and Llansawel, besides the preaching journeys he took in North and South Wales. He was held in great esteem as a preacher. In 1744 his first book of hymns appeared under the title of Halleluiahs, and soon ran through three editions. In 1762, he published another book under the title of Y Môr o Wydr, which soon went through five editions. His son John pub. an excellent edition of his hymns in the year 1811. In addition to his Welsh hymns Williams also pub. several in English as:—

- (1.) Hosannah to the Son of David; or, Hymns of Praise to God, For our glorious Redemption by Christ. Some few translated from the Welsh Hymn-Book, but mostly composed on new Subjects. By William Williams. Bristol: Printed by John Grabham, in Narrow-Wine Street, 1759. This contains 51 hymns of which 11 are tr. from his Welsh hymns. This little book was reprinted by D. Sedgwick in 1859.
- (2.) Gloria in Excelsis; or, Hymns of Praise to God and the Lamb. By W. Williams . . . Carmarthen. Printed for the Author by John Ross, removed to Priory Street, near the Church, M.DCC.LXXI. This contains 70 hymns, not including parts.

From these volumes the following hymns are in C. U. :—

- i. From the Hosannah, 1759 :—
 1. Jesus, my Saviour is enough. Jesus, All in All.
 2. My God, my God, Who art my all. Communion with God desired.
 3. The enormous load of human guilt. God's love unspeakable.
- ii. From the Gloria in Excelsis, 1772.
 4. Awake, my soul, and rise. Passiontide.
 5. Beneath Thy Cross I lay me down. Passiontide.
 6. Hark! the voice of my Beloved. The Voice of Jesus.

7. Jesus, lead us with Thy power. Divine Guidance Desired. Sometimes given as "Father, lead us with Thy power."

8. Jesus, Whose Almighty sceptre. Jesus as King.
9. Saviour, look on Thy beloved. The Help of Jesus desired.

10. White and ruddy is my Beloved. Beauties of Jesus.

Williams is most widely known through his two hymns, "Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah," and "O'er those gloomy hills of darkness." Williams d. at Pantycelyn, Jan. 11, 1791. [See Welsh Hymnody.] [W. G. T.]

Willis, Nathaniel Parker, was b. at Portland, Maine, Jan. 20, 1807, and educated at Yale College, graduating in 1826. After writing for a time for the American Monthly Magazine, which he established, and the New York Mirror, into which the former was merged, he was attached to the American Legation at the French Court. His stay in Europe extended from 1831 to 1837. On his return he became in 1839 one of the editors of The Corsair. His works are numerous, and include Sacred Poems, 1843. He d. Jan. 29, 1867. His sister, Mrs. Parton, is the well-known "Fanny Fern." His hymn—"The perfect world by Adam trod" (Dedication of a Place of Worship), was "Written to be sung at the Consecration of Hanover Street [Unitarian] Church, Boston," in 1826, and since then has been widely used, although of no exceeding merit. [F. M. B.]

Willkommen unter deiner Schaar. N. L. von Zinzendorf. [Christian Church.] The origin of this hymn was somewhat remarkable. On May 10, 1737, Zinzendorf had been consecrated, at Berlin, by Daniel Ernst Jablonsky (see p. 766, ii.), as Bishop and Ordinary of the Moravian Brethren's Unity. In 1741 J. L. Dober, who had officiated as General-Elder (General-Aelteste) of the entire Moravian connexion, resigned his office. Zinzendorf then held (from Sept. 11 to Sept. 23, 1741) a noteworthy synodical conference at London at which the assembled brethren agreed that no suitable successor to Dober could be found in their midst. On Sept. 16, 1741, they therefore resolved to beseech the Lord Jesus Christ Himself to take the office of General-Elder of the entire Unity, and, as on casting lots the result was favourable to their wishes, they took for granted that He had assumed this position, and appointed 12 Assistant-Elders (Vice-Aelteste) to form the directing General Conference of the Unity, Zinzendorf's power of general superintendence being abolished (see Koch, v. 264). It was on this occasion that Zinzendorf wrote this hymn. Albert Knapp in his ed. of Zinzendorf's Geistliche Gedichte (1845, p. 288), entitles it "When Jesus assumed the position of General-Elder," and dates it Sept. 16, 1741. It was included in Appz. xi., circa 1743, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1778, and in 14 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1099, st. vi.-viii. were omitted, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (ed. 1851, p. 188) it is dated "In London, 16 Sept., 1741." Tr. as:—

1. Welcome among thy flock of grace. This is a somewhat free tr. of st. i., ii., iv., v., ix.-xiii., as No. 529 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 834). It was adopted, slightly altered and beginning, "We hail Thee, Lord, thy Church's Rock," as No. 278 in the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 493, in ¶ st.). From Mercer st. i., v., viii., passed into the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, No. 272.

2. Welcome among thy chosen flock. This is No. 234 in the Appz. of 1743 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (ed. 1754, pt. ii., No. 222). [J. M.]

Wilson, Caroline, née Fry, daughter of a farmer, was b. at Tunbridge Wells, Dec. 31, 1787. In 1831 she was married to a Mr. Wilson, and d. at Tunbridge Wells, Sept. 17, 1846. Her publications were somewhat numerous, and included a History of England in Verse, 1801; a Poetical Catechism, 1821; Serious Poetry, 1822; Death, and other Poems, 1823, &c. Her Autobiography, Letters, and Remains were pub. in 1843, and her Table of the Lord in 1859. Her best known hymns are:—

1. For what shall I praise Thee, My God and my King? Thanksgiving in Affliction. In C. U. in G. Britain and America.

2. Often the clouds of deepest woe. Affliction leading to Glory. From her Poetical Catechism, 1821, p. 25. In Kennedy, 1863, it begins "Full oft the clouds of deepest woe." [J. J.]

Wilson, Jane, known as Sister Beatrice, the Mother Superior of the Sisterhood of St. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford, was the daughter of a clergyman, and d. in 1872 aged 36 years. She pub. Legenda Monastica, and other Poems (Oxford: Mowbray), which has passed through several editions. This work includes 16 hymns, originally written for Hymns used at the Church of S. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford, edited by the Vicar, the Rev. T. Chamberlain, 1861; enlarged ed., 1870, as follows:—

1. A Fast before a Feast. Shrove Tuesday.
2. A virgin heart she brought to Christ. St. Frideswide.

3. Again our Lent has come to us. Lent.

4. At eventide was light. Evening.

5. Behold, she comes, in silence. Conception of B. V. M.

6. Calm the saint's slumber. St. Peter ad Vincula; or, Lammass Day.

7. Deep thoughts were in her breast. Visitation of B. V. M.

8. I love the courts of Jesus. Love for the House of God.

9. Jesu, ever present With Thy Church below. Holy Communion.

10. Loud in exultation. St. George.

11. Love and death have wrestled fiercely. St. Mary Magdalene.

12. 'Midst the bitter waters Moses. The Holy Cross.

13. The Church and world for once. SS. Philip and James.

14. 'Tis good, O Jesu, that alone with Thee. Advent.

15. We hail renowned Alban. St. Alban.

16. We cry to Thee, O Jesu. Evening. [J. J.]

Wilt Thou forgive that sin when I began. John Donne. [Lent.] Concerning this hymn, to which special reference is made in the article on Early English Hymnody, Izaak Walton says, in his Life of Donne, after quoting the hymn in detail:—

"I have the rather mentioned this hymn for that he caused it to be set to a most grave and solemn tune, and to be often sung to the organ by the Choristers of St. Paul's [Cathedral] Church in his own hearing, especially at the evening service, and at his return from his customary devotions in that place, did occasionally say to a friend, 'the words of this hymn have restored to me the same thoughts of joy that possessed my soul in my sickness, when I composed it. And, O the power of Church-music! that harmony added to this hymn has raised the affections of my heart, and quickened my grace of zeal and gratitude; and I observe that I always return from paying this public duty of prayer and praise with an unexpressible tranquillity of mind, and a willingness to leave the world.'"—Walton's Lives, 1670.

The special sickness during which this hymn was composed fell upon the author during the earlier part of his life. It was sung at St. Paul's Cathedral, at intervals from 1621 to 1631, when Donne died. It was published subsequently in Donne's Poems in 1633; again in 1635, and in later editions, and is usually entitled, "A Hymn to God the Father." Orig. text in Walton's Lives, 1670 (1850, pp. 53-4). [English Hymnody, Early, § VII.] [J. J.]

Winchester, Caleb Thomas, M.A., was b. in 1847. He is Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut. His hymn, "The Lord our God alone is strong" (Dedication of a Science Hall), was written for the opening of the Orange Judd Hall of Natural Science, Wesleyan University, Middletown. It was included in the Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878 (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884). [J. J.]

Winckler, Johann Joseph, s. of Gottfried Winckler, town clerk of Lucka, Sachse-Altenburg, was b. at Lucka, Dec. 23, 1670. He became a student of Theology at the University of Leipzig, during the time when A. H. Francke and J. C. Schade were holding their Bible readings, and his sympathies henceforth were with the Pietistic movement. In 1692 he was appointed preacher to the St. George's Hospital at Magdeburg, and afternoon preacher at St. Peter's Church there. He became chaplain to the Prince Christian Ludwig regiment in 1695, and went with it to Holland and Italy. After the Peace of Ryswijk (Oct. 30, 1697) he made a tour in Holland and England. Returning to Magdeburg, he was appointed, in 1698, diaconus of the Cathedral, and in 1703 also inspector of the so-called Holzkreis. Finally, in 1714, he became chief preacher at the Cathedral, and in 1716, also Consistorialrath. He d. at Magdeburg, Aug. 11, 1722 (Wetzel, iii. 437; Grischow-Kirchner Nachricht to Freylinghausen, p. 53; Koch, iv. 383; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1888, p. 170, &c.).

Winckler was a man who had the courage of his opinions, and his hymn No. iv. below is a picture of the stand he was willing to make when conscience bade him. Not that he was fond of controversy, but rather the reverse. Twice however he raised considerable feeling against himself in Magdeburg, first by the position he took up against theatre going, and afterwards by his well-meant attempts to bring about a closer union between the Lutheran and Reformed churches in Prussia. But the opposition he encountered he bore patiently, and in the spirit of his hymn No. i. below. His hymns, some 27 in all, appeared mostly in the Appz. to the 2nd ed., 1703, of H. G. Neuss's Heb-Opfer (p. 798, ll.), in Porst's G. B., Berlin, 1708,* and in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714. They rank among the better productions of the earlier Pietistic writers, and are distinguished by firm faith, earnestness, and picturesqueness; but are somewhat lengthy and frequently in unusual metres.

Those of Winckler's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Meine Seele senket sich. Resignation. 1st pub. in the 1703 ed. of Neuss's Heb-Opfer, p. 248, in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "Ps. 62 v. 1. My soul is still towards God." Repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 511, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 714. It is a fine hymn on patient waiting upon God's will. Tr. as:—

Yea, my spirit fain would sink. In full, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 198. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 138, it is greatly altered, beginning "In Thy heart and hands, my God"; and this form is No. 419 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. is: "Wearily my spirit sinketh," by Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 65.

ii. O süßes Stand, o selig Leben. Christian Simplicity. In Porst's G. B., 1708, p. 519 (1711, No. 642), in 8 st. of 8 l., repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 322, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 331. The trs. are:—

1. O sweet condition, happy Living. This, omitting st. iii., is No. 658 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

2. O blest condition, happy living. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., vi., viii., based on the 1754 version, as No. 441 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 584).

iii. Ringe recht, wenn Gottes Gnade. Christian Warfare. A thoughtful and powerful hymn, included as No. 359 in Freylinghausen, 1714, in 23 st. of 4 l., and thence in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 336. Wetzel, iii. 437, says it was written as a hymn on the three favourite Scripture passages of Ursula Maria Zorn, of Berlin, and was 1st pub. at the end of her funeral sermon by Johann Lysius, pastor of St. George's Church, Berlin. Thus st. i.-v. are founded on St. Luke xiii. 24; vi.-xv. on Philipp. ii. 12; and xvi.-xxiii. on Gen. xix. 15-22. The trs. in C. U. are:

1. Strive, when thou art call'd of God. This is a good tr. of st. i., iii.-vii., xii., xiii., xv., xvi. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 46. Repeated, abridged, in Kennedy, 1863; the Harrow School H. Bk., 1866, and Rugby School H. Bk., 1876.

2. Strive aright when God doth call thee. This is a tr. of st. i., iii., iv., xii., xiii., xv., xvi., by Miss Winkworth, founded on her Lyra Ger. version, as No. 128 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Repeated in the Marlborough College H. Bk., 1869.

3. Thou must wrestle, when God's mercy. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., x., xxii., signed E. T. L., as No. 230, in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "Wrestle on! for God is pleading," by Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Sept., 1865, p. 137.

iv. Sollt ich aus Furcht vor Menschenkindern, Adherence to Christ. A hymn on Constancy, and against cowardice and time-serving. In Porst's G. B., 1708, p. 1133 (1711, No. 701), in 17 st. of 4 l. Repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 541 (entitled "For a Preacher"), in the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 658, &c. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Shall I for fear of feeble man. This is a vigorous tr. in 10 st. (representing st. i.-iii., xii.-xv., xvii.; st. iv. being freely from vi., vii., and st. v. from viii., xi.), by J. Wesley in the Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 177). Included in full in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1849, No. 875 abridged). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, st. i.-vii. were included as No. 270; st. viii.-x. being added in the ed. of 1800 (1875, No. 279). The full form is in the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863, and in Mercer's C. P. & H.

* Dr. J. F. Bachmann in his Zur Geschichte der Berliner Gesangbücher, 1856, was only able to describe the 3rd ed. of 1713. The present writer has examined the 2nd ed. of 1711 (Neu-vermehrtes geistreiches G. B.). The references to the 1st ed. of 1708 are from the markings by Professor Müttzell, in a copy of the 1856 presented to him by Dr. Bachmann, and now in the possession of the present writer.

Bk., 1857, and abridged in Mercer's Oxford ed., 1864; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and others. It is also found in the following forms:—

- (1) Awed by a mortal's frown, shall I (Wesley's st. ii.). In W. Carus Wilson's Gen. Psal., 1842.
- (2) Saviour of men, Thy searching eye (Wesley's st. vi.). In J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, and various American collections.
- (3) Our Lives, our Blood, we here present (Wesley's st. ix. alt.). In M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760.

Winkler, Edwin Theodore, D.D., was b. in Savannah, Nov. 13, 1823, and educated at Brown University. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1846, and subsequently filled several important literary and other appointments in addition to his pastorates. He d. at Marion, Alabama, Nov. 10, 1883. He compiled The Sacred Lute, a Collection of popular Hymns, 1855 (enlarged ed., 1860), to which he contributed 8 hymns, the first lines of which are given in Burrage. (Burrage's Baptist H. Writers, 1888, p. 416.) Some of these have passed into other American collections, including "Our land with mercies crowned." (National Hymn.)

Winkworth, Catherine, daughter of Henry Winkworth, of Alderley Edge, Cheshire, was b. in London, Sep. 13, 1829. Most of her early life was spent in the neighbourhood of Manchester. Subsequently she removed with the family to Clifton, near Bristol. She d. suddenly of heart disease, at Monnetier, in Savoy, in July, 1878. Miss Winkworth pub.:—

Trs. from the German of the Life of Pastor Fliedner, the Founder of the Sisterhood of Protestant Deaconesses at Kaiserworth, 1861; and of the Life of Amelia Steinking, 1863.

Her sympathy with practical efforts for the benefit of women, and with a pure devotional life, as seen in these trs., received from her the most practical illustration possible in the deep and active interest which she took in educational work in connection with the Clifton Association for the Higher Education of Women, and kindred societies there and elsewhere. Our interest, however, is mainly centred in her hymnological work as embodied in her:—

- (1) Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1855. (2) Lyra Germanica, 2nd Ser., 1858. (3) The Choral Book for England (containing trs. from the German, together with music), 1863; and (4) her charming biographical work, the Christian Singers of Germany, 1869.

In a sympathetic article on Miss Winkworth in the Inquirer of July 20, 1878, Dr. Martineau says:—

"The translations contained in these volumes are invariably faithful, and for the most part both terse and delicate; and an admirable art is applied to the management of complex and difficult versification. They have not quite the fire of John Wesley's versions of Moravian hymns, or the wonderful fusion and reproduction of thought which may be found in Coleridge. But if less flowing they are more conscientious than either, and attain a result as poetical as severe exactitude admits, being only a little short of 'native music.'"

Dr. Percival, then Principal of Clifton College, also wrote concerning her (in the Bristol Times and Mirror), in July, 1878:—

"She was a person of remarkable intellectual and social gifts, and very unusual attainments; but what specially distinguished her was her combination of rare ability and great knowledge with a certain tender and sympathetic refinement which constitutes the special charm of the true womanly character."

Dr. Martineau (as above) says her religious life afforded "a happy example of the piety which the Church of England discipline may implant. . . . The fast hold she retained of her discipleship of Christ was no example of 'feminine simplicity,' carrying on the childish mind into maturer years, but the clear allegiance of a firm mind, familiar with the pretensions of non-Christian schools, well able to test them, and undiverted by them from her first love."

Miss Winkworth, although not the earliest of modern translators from the German into English, is certainly the foremost in rank and popularity. Her translations are the most widely used of any from that language, and have had more to do with the modern revival of the English use of German hymns than the versions of any other writer. [J. J.]

Winter reigneth o'er the land. Bp. W. W. How. [Winter.] Written for and first pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 64, and from thence has passed into numerous collections. In a few hymn-books, including Sir Josiah Mason's Birmingham Orphanage Hymnal, st. iii.-vi. are given as a hymn, "Sunny days are past and gone," but this mutilated text is not popular. [J. J.]

Wir glauben all an einen Gott, Schöpfer Himmels und der Erden. M. Luther. [Nicene Creed.] This very free setting of the Nicene Creed was 1st pub. in the Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, in 3 st. of 10 l., and thence in Wacker-nagel, iii. p. 16. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 55; the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 253, &c. During the Reformation period it was generally sung after the Sermon. Luther included it among the Christliche Geseng . . . zum Begrebnis, 1542. It had been used at the funeral of the Elector Friedrich the Wise of Saxony, on May 9, 1525, and was often in later times sung before funeral sermons. Tr. as:—

1. We all one only God believe. By A. T. Russell, for his Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 15.
2. We all believe in One true God, Maker of the earth and heaven, Who hath. By R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 59. Repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.
3. We all believe in One true God, Maker of the earth and heaven; The Father. By Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, Appx., No. vi. Repeated, recast, by Dr. Bacon, in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 47.

Other trs. are:—

- (1) "We believe all upon one God." By Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 546). (2) "We trow in God allanerlie." In the Gude and Godlie Ballates, ed. 1563, folio 6, (1868, p. 9). (3) "Believe we all in our Lord God," as No. 185 in part i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (4) "In One God we all believe." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 50. (5) "We believe in God the Father." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 57 (1847, p. 72). (6) "We all believe in God Most High." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 86. (7) "In One true God we all believe." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 571. Repeated, altered, in his Exotics, 1876, p. 89. [J. M.]

Wir legen, Herr! in deinem Namen. [Laying the Foundation Stone of a Church.] Included as No. 140 in the Ohio G. B., 1870, in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled, "For the Festival of the Corner Stone laying." No author's name is given. Tr. as:—"In Thy dear name and by Thy favour," in full by C. H. L. Schnette, as No. 126 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. [J. M.]

Wir singen dir Immanuel. P. Gerhardt. [Christmas.] Included in the Berlin

ed. of 1653 of Crüger's Praxis, No. 100, in 16 st. of 4 l. In Ebeling's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistliche Andachten, Fünfte Dutzet, 1667, No. 52, four st. were added as iv., viii., ix., xvii. The complete text in 20 st. is in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistl. Lieder, No. 10; Bachmann's ed., No. 42, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 58. It is a beautiful hymn of praise to Emmanuel, the longed for by the Fathers and the Prophets. Tr. as:—

1. Emmanuel, we sing Thy praise. This tr. of st. i.—iii., v.—vii., xviii.—xx., appeared in the British Magazine, January, 1838, p. 35. Repeated, omitting the tr. of st. ix., and beginning, "Emmanuel, Thy Name we sing," in Kennedy, 1863.

2. Immanuel, we sing to Thee. A tr. of st. i.—iii., v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 12 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

3. Immanuel, to Thee we sing, Of life, &c. A tr. of st. i.—iii., vi., xx., based on the earlier versions, as No. 35 in J. F. Thrupp's Ps. & Hys., 1853.

4. Thee, O Immanuel, we praise. A good tr. of st. i.—iii., v.—vii., xviii.—xx., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 28. In her 2nd ed., 1856, p. 24, she added a tr. of st. ix., and thus in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 35. Repeated, abridged, in the Hyl. for St. John's, Aberdeen, 1870, and Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871; and, beginning, "With all Thy saints, Thee, Lord, we sing" (st. ii.), in Boardman's Sel., Philadelphia, 1861.

5. We sing to Thee, Emmanuel, The Prince, &c. A good tr. of st. i.—iii., v.—vii., xviii.—xx., by Miss Cox, contributed to Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 55, and in her own Hys. from Ger., 1864, p. 35. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 56, it is in full, and in Jellicoe's Coll., 1867, omitting the tr. of st. v. In the Amer. Bapt. Hym. & Tune Bk., 1871, it begins, "All glory, worship, thanks and praise" (st. ii., iii., ix., xx.).

6. We sing to Thee, Immanuel! Thou Prince of Life. A tr. of st. i., ii., ix., xx., signed "F. C. C.," as No. 26 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Other trs. are: (1) "We sing to Thee, Immanuel, Thou Prince of Life," &c., as No. 109, in pt. iii., 1748, of the Moravian H. Bk. (1754, pt. i., No. 436). (2) "Immanuel, to Thee we sing, Thou Prince," &c., by L. E. Schlecht, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, No. 45 (1886, No. 45). (3) "Immanuel! Thy praise we sing," by Miss Fry, 1859, p. 163. (4) "To Thee, Immanuel, we sing, The Prince," &c., by Miss Manington, 1864, p. 36. (5) "Immanuel! to Thee we sing, The Fount," by J. Kelly, 1867, p. 37. [J. M.]

Wisdome, Robert. [Old Version § ix. 5.]

With heart, and soul, with mind, and might. J. Montgomery. [Sunday Schools.] Printed on a broadsheet for use at a gathering of Sunday schools on Whit Monday, 1851, and included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

With joy we meditate the grace. I. Watts. [Our High Priest.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 125, in 6 st. of 4 l. J. Wesley included it with the omission of st. iii. in his Charlestown Ps. & Hys., 1736-7, and again in the Ps. & Hys., 1743. From the latter it passed into G. Whitefield's Coll. of Hys., 1753; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, and others. This text, with slight alterations, was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Another text, found mostly in the Church of England collections, is from Toplady's Ps. and Hys., 1776, with additional alterations of a later date, the principal sources of which are Stovell, 1831; Bickersteth, 1833, and Elliott, 1835. In common with many of Watts's longer hymns, most forms of the text are abbreviated, and the number and arrangement of stanzas vary considerably. These can be tested by any modern edition of the Hys. & Spiritual Songs. In Harland's Ch. Psalter & Hyl., 1876, it begins, "With joy we celebrate the grace"; and in the Down and Connor H. Bk., 1863, "With joy we contemplate the grace."

Another form of this hymn was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. 8. This began, "Jesus, the Lord, Who once on earth," and was composed of st. i., ii., new, and the rest from Watts, st. i.—iv. and vi., with st. i. ll. 1, 2, altered. In the 1751 revised ed. of the Draft it was slightly altered, and there began, "Jesus, the Son of God, Who once." Stanza vii. was also rewritten as st. vii., viii. These alterations have been ascribed to Hugh Blair. The 1751 text was given in the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphrases, 1781, with st. v., vii., viii. rewritten. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, i.), the 1781 alterations are ascribed to him. In Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphs. & Hys., 1853, the text is reduced to 4 st., and begins with st. iii., "To human weakness not severe." [J. M.]

With praise to Thee my strain began. I. Williams. [Charity. Love.] This is the concluding piece of his Hys. on the Catechism, 1842, in 14 st. of 4 l. and is based on the concluding words of the Catechism, "And be in charity with all men." Two centos therefrom are in C. U.:—(1) "All that we know of saints above" (Quinquagesima), and (2) "How shall we shew our love to Thee?" (Brotherly Love). These centos are of merit and will bear wider adoption than is now accorded to them. [J. J.]

With sin I would not make abode. T. H. Gill. [Early Piety.] Written in 1855, and first pub. in his Golden Chain of Praise, 1869, p. 154, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Early Love. 'How good it is to close with Christ betimes!' Oliver Cromwell." In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, six stanzas are given as No. 1184, beginning with st. vi., "Lord! in the fulness of my might." This text is also given in other collections. [J. J.]

With solemn thanksgiving our Lord. H. Blair (?). [Christ's Invitation.] 1st appeared as No. 26 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of Matt. xi. 25-30, in 8 st. of 4 l. In the Draft of 1781 included, considerably altered, as No. 34, and beginning, "Thus spoke the Saviour of the world," and with st. ii., iii., condensed as ii. Thence with 10 lines altered in the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs., issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) the original is ascribed to Blair, and the alterations in 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781, omitting st. iii., was included as No. 93 in the Eng.

Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and slightly altered, and omitting st. iii., iv., vii., in Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphs. & Hys. for Congregational Singing, 1853, as pt. i. of No. 64. In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 505, and Martineau's Hymns, 1873, No. 122, beginning with st. v. altered, "Come unto me, all ye who mourn." [J. M.]

With thankful hearts our songs we raise. [Holy Baptism.] This hymn is No. 278, in the 4th ed., 1832, of J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hymns, in 4 st. of 4 l. In common with all the hymns in the collection, it is unsigned, and there is nothing to determine its authorship. It is sometimes attributed to "Bickersteth," but for this ascription we know of no authority whatever. It is in somewhat extensive use in America. [J. J.]

With Thee, Lord, will I walk by day. T. Davis. [Morning.] 1st pub. in his Devotional Verse for a Month, 1855, in 4 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "When I awake I am still with Thee," Ps. cxxxix. 18. In 1858 it was included, unaltered, in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., No. 911, and continued in later editions. When given in the author's Family Hymnal, 1860, and Hymns Old and New, 1864, st. iv. l. 3, "give" was changed to grant. This rendering was repeated in his Annus Sanctus, 1877, p. 246, as the authorized text. [J. J.]

With years oppressed, with sorrow worn. Sir R. Grant. [Ps. lxxi.] Pub. in his posthumous Sacred Poems, 1839, p. 31, in 5 st. of 6 l. It is in C. U. in its full or abbreviated form, and also as "Thy mercy heard my infant prayer" (st. ii.). [J. J.]

Wither, George, or Wyther—spelled in both ways by himself, the first usually, the second occasionally, e.g. in Prince Henrie's Obsequies (1612), and erroneously Withers, was b. on June 11th, 1588, at Bentworth, near Alton, Hampshire. He was the only son of George Wither, of Bentworth. His early education was at the Grammar School of Colemore or Colemere, under its celebrated master, John Greaves. After thorough training and discipline here he was entered in 1604 at Magdalen College, Oxford. His tutor was John Warner, subsequently D.D. and Bishop of Rochester. He had only been three years at the University when malicious and ignorant persons persuaded his father that more learning was not required. And so, as he modestly tells us in his Abuses Stript and Whipt (1613), he was withdrawn "without taking any degree," being now destined, as he moderately puts it, "for the plough," that is, for rustic employment on the paternal estate. This proved utterly uncongenial. He is found next at one of the Inns of Chancery, afterwards at Lincoln's Inn, and intimate with William Browne, the poet, of Britannia's Pastorals. His title-pages from 1617 to 1620 self-describe him as "Gentleman," and as "of the Societie of Lincoln's Inne" (Fidelia (1617), and 1st Psalme (1620), and Workes (1620)). But Anthony a-Wood informs us:—

"still his geng after things more smooth and delightful, he did at length make himself known to the world (after he had taken several rambles therein) by certain specimens of poetry, which being dispersed in several hands, he became shortly after a public author and most admired by some in that age for his quick advancement in that faculty" (Athenæ. Ozon. s. n.).

How uncritical was this miserable criticism, will be understood when it is recalled that amongst these "certain specimens" was the Shepherds Hunting under the first form of "A new song of a young man's opinion of the difference between good and bad women" (Pepysian, ad Percy MS.), Prince Henrie's Obsequies (1612), Epithalamia (1612), and his stinging and patriotically outspoken Abuses Stript and Whipt. The last drew down upon him the wrath of the monarch (James I.) and nobles, and cast him prisoner into the Marshalsea. Four large editions within a year, and numerous others up to 1622 and continuously onward (exclusive of the reproductions in his Workes) was the answer of the People to the Upper Ten. While in prison he wrote some of the most delicious of his verse. He likewise composed A Satyre to the King (1615). The wisest fool in Christendom was shrewd enough to perceive that it would be safer to make such a subject a friend than an enemy. He had deftly signed the dedication to the king "his Majesty's most loyall Subject, and yet Prisoner in the Marshalsey." It procured him his release. From this time onward he was perpetually printing something, now in verse and now in prose, until the aggregate exceeded a hundred of books and pamphlets.

There are several fairly accurate enumerations of them, e.g. British Bibliographer, i. 174-205, 305-32, 417-40; ii. 17-32, 378-91; Sir Egerton Brydges' Censura and Restituta; Hazlitt's Bibliography (1867). The Spenser Society reprinted a large portion of the Works in prose and verse; but there was really no editing and no annotation. His successive books are the main facts of Wither's life; yet was he an active member of the nation. Spite of his hard usage and imprisonments, he was loyal as any cavalier. When Charles I. proceeded to declare and carry war into his native Scotland against the Covenanters in 1639, George Wither served his Majesty as a captain of horse and quarter-master of his regiment under the Earl of Arundel. How sorrowful the wrong-headedness of the king who compelled such a true man as Wither to forsake him and prefer the kingdom to the king, as many others who with pathetic reluctance became Roundheads! In 1641-2 he sold his hereditary estates and raised a troop of horse for the Parliament, in whose army he was promoted to be major. On his colours he carried this motto, Pro Rege, Lege, Grege. Having been taken prisoner by the Royalists, a good-humoured jest of Sir John Denham it is alleged saved his life, to wit, that "his Majesty really must not hang George Wither, for so long as he lives no one will account him [Sir John] the worst poet in England." He was set free. Not long after he was constituted by the Long Parliament a Justice of Peace in quorum for Hampshire, Surrey and Essex. This he held for six years, and afterwards was made by Cromwell Major-General of all the horse and foot in the County of Surrey. On the title-page of his Boni Omnis Votum (1656) in the British Museum there is a contemporary ms. note, "lately made Master of the Statute Office." At the Restoration he was shamefully dealt with, and by a vote of the Convention Parliament, was committed to Newgate because of his Vox Vulgi—a noble piece of fiery and idiomatic English, and manly pleading for respect to popular rights and liberties. For his Prisoner's Plea humbly offered (1661) he was again imprisoned, this time in the Tower. He married (Aubrey informs us) Elizabeth, eldest daughter of H. Emerson of South Lanuk, who, he says, was "a great wit and could write in verse too," and was of the same English Emersons from whom the great American Ralph Waldo Emerson descended. He had issue. He was at liberty when he died on 2nd May, 1667. Aubrey states that he was buried within the east doorway of Savoy Church in the Strand, having apparently lived near it, and either died in the church or in his own house (the phrasing being ambiguous).

This Dictionary is not a fitting place for any detailed criticism of the superabundant writings of George Wither. James Montgomery, in his admirable Lectures on Poets and Poetry, thus sums up his estimate of him and them:—

"There are scattered throughout his multifarious and very unequal productions, many passages of great beauty and excellence. He was avowedly a Christian poet, though he frequently lost his Christian meekness in the heat of polemics; but his zeal carried with it every evidence of honesty; and he was a sufferer almost to martyrdom, both for his loyalty and his orthodoxy, in the troublous times in which he lived. That he was a poet can never be questioned by any reader who has taste and sensibility enough to understand and enjoy the exquisitely affecting confession of his obligations to the Muse. That he was a Christian will be little questioned by those who are most extensively acquainted with the character of his religious compositions" (s. n.).

Archbishop Trench, in annotating a charming sacred song entitled Vanished Blessings ("No voice which I did more esteem, Than music in her sweetest key," &c.), thus annotates:—

"I have detached these two stanzas from a longer poem of which they constitute the only valuable portion [?]. George Wither ('a most profuse pourer forth of English rhyme,' Phillips calls him) was indeed so intolerable a power in verse, so overlaid his good with indifferent or bad, that one may easily forget how real a gift he possessed, and sometimes showed that he possessed" (Household Book of English Poetry, 1865).

Mrs. Masson says of him—"he is remembered now-a-days as pre-eminently the Puritan poet, whose irrepressible Muse made herself heard even amid the din of civil war" (Three Centuries of English Poetry, p. 375). She quotes his delightful "Christmas" ("So now is come our joyfullest part"), and "Of Poesy" (which Milton did not disdain to utilize), and his "Shall I, wasting in despair." With reference to the "irrepressible Muse" of Wither, it is a felicitous characterisation however regarded, inasmuch as so "irrepressible" was he that he actually set up the types and printed off at least one of his bulkier books. Wither's contributions to hymnology are to be found chiefly in the following:—

(a) Exercises Vpon the First Psalme (1620). At the close is a metrical paraphrase of Ecclesiastes xii. 1-8; (b) Paraphrase on the Creed and the Lord's Prayer (in Works 1620: separately 1688 and mis-asserted to be now "first printed"); (c) The Songs of the Old Testament, Translated into English Measures: preserving the Naturall Phrase and genuine Sense of the Holy Text To every Song is added a new and easie Tune (1621). This was reprinted in Russell's Library of Old Authors; (d) The Hymnes and Songs of the Church (1623). This was published Cum Privilegio Regis Regali. It was reprinted like c.; (e) The Psalmes of David translated as Lyricke Verse, according to the scope of the Original (1632). Gutch had an autograph ms. of an alleged different text of the versified Psalmes which passed into the Caesar Library; (f) A Collection of Emblemes, Ancient and Modern, quickened with Metrical Illustrations both Morall and Divine (1635). This was a special favourite of Elia; (g) Halelviah; or Britans Second Remembrancer, bringing to Remembrance (in praisefull and penitentiall Hymns, Spiritual Songs, and Morall-Odes (1641). This was reprinted like c and d; (h) Three Graines of Spiritual Frankincense infused into Three Hymnes of Praise (1651).

It is discreditable to the Church of England, of whom he was a devoted son to the close of his life, and to Nonconformity alike, that many, very many more of his Hymnes and Spiritual Songs have not found their way into their hymnals. A critical yet sympathetic reader would easily find a golden sheaf of musical, and well-wrought sacred song. (See Willmott's Lives of Sacred Poets; Gutch's Collection of Works in 3 vols. (1820); also Sir Egerton Brydges' reprints; Ellis; Holland's Psalmists; Campbell; Allibone, s. v.; and several of his Hymnes elsewhere noticed, s. v.

Withington, Leonard, D.D., was b. at Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1789, and graduated at Yale 1814. He was pastor of the First Congregational Church, Newburyport, Massachusetts, from 1816, and d. there, April 22, 1885. His hymn, "O Saviour of a world undone" (Passiontide), appeared in E. Nason's Cong. H. Bk. 1857. [F. M. B.]

Witness Divine, the Just and True. C. Wesley. [Confidence through Faith.] This poem was given in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 34 st. of 4 l., and divided into 4 parts:—

- Pt. i. Witness Divine, the Just and True (9 st.)
- Pt. ii. Come, O Thou greater than our heart (8 st.).
- Pt. iii. Unchangeable Almighty Lord (9 st.).
- Pt. iv. The Lord is King, the earth submits (8 st.).

From these parts the following centos have come into C. U.:—

- 1. Come, O Thou greater than our hearts. In several American collections.
- 2. Giver of peace and unity. Also in American hymn-books.
- 3. The Lord is King, the earth submits. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 271, and later collections.
- 4. Unchangeable Almighty Lord. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 491, and subsequent editions.

This poem is a paraphrase of a part of Isaiah xxviii., and is given in full in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 330. [J. J.]

Witter, Will Ellsworth, was b. Dec. 9, 1854, near La Grange, New York, and educated at the Genesee State Normal School, New York, and the University of Rochester. From the latter he passed in 1880 to the Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary, and in 1884 he entered the Baptist Ministry. He has written several songs and poems, one of which:—

While Jesus whispers to you (The Divine Call) has come into somewhat prominent use. It was written in July 1878, and originated mainly in the great anxiety of the author respecting two of his pupils. In 1878 it was set to music by H. R. Palmer, and included in his Book of Anthems, 1878: from whence it passed into Good as Gold, and I. D. Sankey's Sacred S. and Solos, Lond. 1881. [J. J.]

Woher kommt mir doch diese Zeit. [Cross and Consolation.] F. Hommel, in his Geistliche Volkslieder, Leipzig, 1864, No. 147, prints this, in 4 st. of 4 l., from the Neue aufgerichtete Sing-Schul, a Roman Catholic collection which he describes as "apparently of the second half of the 17th cent." It is tr. as "Why is it that life is no longer sad?" By Miss Winkworth, in her Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 255 (she quotes the first line as "Woher denn kommt es zu dieser Zeit"). [J. M.]

Wohl dem, der in Gottes Furcht steht. M. Luther. [Ps. cxxviii.] This version of Ps. cxxviii. was 1st pub. in Eym Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524, in 5 st. of 4 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 8. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 82, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, &c. Being the description of a pious household it was often sung at weddings. Tr. as:—

(1) "Blessed are all that feare the Lord." By Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 573). He also gives a second version of Ps. cxxviii., 3 st. of 9 l., which contains many lines identical, but in form rather follows the version beginning "Wohl dem, der den Herren fürchtet," which Wackernagel, iii., p. 553, gives, in 3 st. of 7 l., from the Nürnberg Enchiridion of 1527. (2) "Blessit ar thay that sit in Goddis dreid." In the Guide and Godlie Ballates, ed. 1568, folio 66 (ed. 1868, p. 113). (3) "Blest man! who walks in wisdom's way." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 51 (1847, p. 68). (4) "Blest is the man who walks alway." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 81. (5) "Happy the man who feareth God." By R. Massie, 1854, p. 51. Repeated by Dr. Bacon, in his Hys. of M. Luther, 1884. (6) "Happy who in the fear of God." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867. In his Exotics, 1876, altered and beginning "Happy who in God's fear doth stay." [J. M.]

Wolcott, Samuel, D.D., was b. at South Windsor, Connecticut, July 2, 1813, and educated at Yale College, 1833, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1837. From 1840 to 1842 he was a missionary in Syria. On his return to America he was successively pastor of several Congregational congregations, including Belchertown, Massachusetts; Providence, Rhode Island; Chicago, &c. He was also for some time Secretary of the Ohio Home Missionary Society. He d. at Longmeadow, Massachusetts, Feb. 24, 1886. His hymn-writing began late in life, but has extended to more than 200 hymns, many of which are still in ms. Those of his hymns which have come into C. U. include:—

1. All thy realms in midnight shrouded. Missions. In the Oberlin Manual of Praise, 1880.
2. Christ for the world we sing. Missions. Written Feb. 7, 1869. Its origin is thus recorded by the author: "The Young Men's Christian Associations of Ohio met in one of our Churches, with their motto, in evergreen letters over the pulpit, 'Christ for the World, and the World for Christ.' This suggested the hymn 'Christ for the world we sing.'" It was when on his way home from that service that he composed the hymn. It is in several American collections, including Laudes Domini, 1884, &c.
3. Father, I own Thy voice. Trust and Aspiration. This, his first hymn, was written in 1868, more as an experiment in hymn-writing than anything else. It was pub. in the Rev. Darius E. Jones's Songs for the New Life. Chicago, 1869. It has since passed into other collections.
4. Godly were thy tents, O Israel. Missions. Written May 31, 1881, and included in Laudes Domini, 1884.
5. Lo! the faith which crossed the ocean. Missions. In the Oberlin Manual of Praise, 1880.
6. O gracious Redeemer! O Jesus our Lord. The Love of Jesus. Written in 1881.
7. On the works of His creation. God the Creator.

In the Ohio Evangelical Association's Hymn Book 1881.

8. Pitying Saviour, look with blessing. Prayer for the Penitent. In the Ohio Evangelical Association's Hymn Book, 1881.

9. Tell me Whom my soul doth love. Opening of Divine Service. A paraphrase of Cant. i. 8. Written Feb. 6, 1870. Included in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.

10. To — have distant ages. Saints Days. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874.

11. This house, most holy Lord, is Thine. Opening of a Place of Worship. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874.

For most of the information given above we are indebted to Duffield's English Hymns, N. Y., 1886. [J. J.]

Wolfe, Aaron Roberts, was b. at Mendham, New Jersey, Sep. 6, 1821, and educated at Williams College, 1844; and the Union Theological Seminary, New York, 1851. On April 3, 1851, he was licensed by the Third Presbytery of New York. For some time he had charge of a school for young ladies at Tallahassee, Florida; and in 1859 he established "The Hillside Seminary for Young Ladies" at Montclair, New Jersey. In 1858 he contributed 7 hymns under the signature "A. R. W." to Hastings's Church Melodies. These are:—

1. A Parting hymn we sing. Close of Holy Communion.
2. Complete in Thee, no work of mine. Complete in Christ. Pub. in the N. Y. Evangelist, 1850 or 51.
3. Draw near, O Holy Dove, draw near. Holy Communion.
4. How blest indeed are they. In the Likeness of Christ.
5. My God, I thank Thee for the guide. Conscience.
6. Mysterious influence divine. The Cross of Christ.
7. Thou Maker of our mortal frame. Chief end of Man.

The most popular of these hymns are Nos. 1, 2, and 3. [F. M. B.]

Wolf, Jakob Gabriel, LL.D., s. of Jakob Wolf, sometime conrector at Greifswald, was b. at Greifswald in 1684. He matriculated, in 1702, at the University of Greifswald, as a student of law. In 1705 went to Halle, where he graduated LL.D. In 1716 he was appointed extraordinary, and in 1724, ordinary professor of law at Halle, and afterwards received the title of Hofrath. He resigned his professorship in 1744, and d. at Halle, Aug. 6, 1754 (Koch, iv. 375; Bode, p. 174; the Grischow-Kirchner Kurzgefasste Nachricht, Halle, 1771, p. 54, &c.).

Wolf's hymns were mostly written early in life, principally during his student years at Halle. He was in thorough sympathy with the characteristic teachings of the Halle Pietists, and his hymns share in their excellences and defects. Some of them are of considerable merit, elegant in style, earnest and glowing in devotion, and have attained considerable popularity in Germany. Nineteen were contributed to Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714; and these, with nine others, were included in his autograph ms. (see No. iv. below).

Those of Wolf's hymns which have passed into English are:—

- i. Es ist gewiss ein köstlich Ding. Patience. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 481, in 6 st. of 7 l. In the Hannover G. B., 1740, No. 653, with a new st. as st. vii. Tr. as "It is, indeed, a precious thing," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 59.
- ii. O wie selig ist die Seel. Love to Christ. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 418, in 12 st. of 4 l. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1257. The trs. are: (1) "O how happy is the soul." As No. 638 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "O those souls are highly blest." As No. 294 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the 1801 and later eds. (1886, No. 390) it begins "Blest are they, supremely blest."

iii. Seele, was ermüdest du dich. Heavenly Mindedness. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 401, in 12 st. of 6 l., ll. 5, 6 of each st. being the popular refrain, “Suche Jesum und sein Licht;

Alles andre hilft dir nicht.”

In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 338. Tr. as “O soul, why dost thou weary,” by Miss Warner, 1869, p. 14.

iv. Wohl dem der sich mit Fleiss bemühet. Christian Warfare. On True and False Christianity. This hymn is ascribed to Wolff, by Count Christian Ernst of Stolberg Wernigerode (d. 1771, see p. 506, ii.), and by Koch, iv., 570. In the Nachricht = above, p. 54, it is given under Wolff's name; but Kirchner adds that it was not to be found in the autograph ms. of Wolff's hymns which he had bought at Wolff's sale in 1755. It appears in the Berlin G. B., 1711, No. 825, in 11 st. of 6 l., and was repeated (reading “mit Ernst”) as No. 235 in Freylinghausen, 1714 as above. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 646. The tr. in C. U. is: “O well for him who all things braves.” This is = good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser. 1855, p. 167. Her st. ii.-iv., x., xi., beginning, “Who follows Christ, whate'er betide,” are included in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1876, No. 309. [J. M.]

Woodd, Basil, M.A., was born at Richmond in Surrey, Aug. 5, 1760. The influences of his home and of his widowed mother were most salutary, and produced the best results. As a boy he studied under the Rev. T. Clarke, of Chesham Bois, and at seventeen he entered Trinity College, Oxford. Taking Holy Orders in 1783, he was chosen lecturer of St. Peter's Cornhill, in 1784; morning preacher at Bentinck Chapel, Marylebone in 1785, and Rector of Drayton Beauchamp, Buckinghamshire, in 1808. Bentinck Chapel being a proprietary chapel, he purchased the lease in 1793, and held the Incumbency, together with the Rectory of Drayton, from 1808 to his death on April 12, 1831. He took a deep interest in the great religious societies, and in the anti-slavery movement. His prose works were not numerous or important. He is associated with hymnody through the publication of the following:—

(1.) The Psalms of David. . . . Adapted to the Services of the Church of England, &c., 1794. 2nd ed. 1800. (2.) The Psalms of David and other portions of the Sacred Scriptures arranged according to the Order of the Church of England, for every Sunday in the Year, &c., London: Printed and sold by Watts and Bridgewater, n.d. circa 1810-20. The Preface is signed “B. W.” (3.) A New Metrical Version of the Psalms of David; with an Appendix of select Psalms and Hymns, adapted to the service of the United Church of England and Ireland. . . . By the Rev. Basil Woodd, M.A., &c., London: Printed and sold by E. Bridgewater, 1821. Dedicated to the Bp. of Durham. A portion of the preface of No. 2 was repeated; but the preface as a whole, was more historical than the preceding. With the exception of 4 hymns, and 4 doxologies at the end, this collection is a reprint of No. 2, with a new title-page, a dedication, and an enlarged preface.

Very few of Basil Woodd's hymns and paraphrases of the psalms are now in C. U. The best known is “Hail, Thou Source of every blessing” (p. 480, i.). The rest include:—

1. Blest be Jehovah, mighty Lord. Ps. cxliv. 1794.
2. Holy Ghost inspire our praises. Whitsuntide. circa 1810-20.
3. In Thee, O Lord, I trust, My hope is in Thy Name. Ps. xxxi. 1794.
4. Lord of glory and salvation. Praise. circa 1810-20.

A short Memoir of the Rev. Basil Woodd, M.A. By the Rev. S. C. Wilks, M.A., was pub. by Hatchard & Son, London, 1831. [J. J.]

Woodford, James Russell, D.D., was b. April 30, 1820, and educated at Merchant Taylors School, and Pembroke College, Cambridge, of which he was a scholar; B.A. Senior Optime, and 2nd class in the Classical Tripos. He was ordained in 1843, and became second Master in Bishop's College, Bristol; and Curate of St. John the Baptist, Broad Street, in that city. He became Incumbent of St. Saviour's, Coalpit Heath, 1845; of St. Mark's, Easton, Bristol, 1848; and Vicar of Kempstord, Gloucestershire, 1855. In 1868 he was preferred by the Crown to the important vicarage of Leeds on Dr. Atlay's appointment as Bp. of Hereford. He was several times Select Preacher at Cambridge. He was also Hon. Chaplain to the Queen (1867). In 1873 he was consecrated, in Westminster Abbey, Bishop of Ely. He d. at Ely on Oct. 24, 1885. Bp. Woodford pub. Sermons, 1853; Lectures for Holy Week, 1853; Lectures on the Creed, 1853; Sermons, 1864; and Sermons, Charges, &c., at later dates. His Hymns arranged for the Sundays and Holy Days of the Church of England appeared in 1852 and 1855. He also joined H. W. Beadon, and Greville Phillimore in editing The Parish Hymn Book, 1863, and (enlarged) 1875. To these collections his original hymns, and his trs. from the Latin, were contributed. The originals include:—

1. Lamb of God, for sinners slain. Passiontide. 1852.
2. Not by Thy mighty hand. Epiphany. 1863.
3. O come, and with the early morn. Easter. 1852.
4. Within the Father's house. Epiphany. 1863.

Bp. Woodford's trs. are annotated under their respective Latin first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). They are good and popular, the best known being “Thee we adore, O hidden Saviour, Thee.” [J. J.]

Woodhouse, Charles Goddard, B.A., son of George Windus Woodhouse, born Aug. 16, 1835, and educated at Albrighton and Christ Church, Oxford, graduating B.A. in 1860. He was for some time Vicar of Minsterley, Diocese of Hereford. He d. Aug. 20th, 1876. He was the author of a very tender hymn for “Institution to a Parish,” beginning “By the Cross upon thy brow;” and consisting of 3 st. of 8 l. It was printed on a fly-leaf. In 1881, Prebendary G. Thring recast the hymn, added a doxology, and gave it as “Heavenly Shepherd, Thee we pray,” in his Church of England Hymn Book, 1882. [J. J.]

Woodhull, Alfred Alexander, M.D., grandson of John Woodhull, D.D., of Freehold, New Jersey; was b. March 25, 1810, educated for the medical profession, and practiced at Princeton, where he d. Oct. 5, 1836. His hymn, “God of the passing year to Thee,” appeared as No. 406 in the official edition of Presbyterian Psalms & Hymns, Princeton, in 1829. It has attained to extensive use in the altered form as “Great God of nations, now to Thee.” Its authorship was determined by Dr. Hatfield, in his Church Hymn Book, 1872, No. 1295. It is an American National Thanksgiving hymn. [F. M. B.]

Word supreme, before creation. J. Keble. [St. John Evangelist.] This hymn is dated “Hursley, April 19, 1856,” and was first pub. in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, No. 43, in 7 st. of 6 l. It was repeated in Keble's posthumous Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, p. 111, and in several hymn-books. Mr. L. C. Biggs, in his annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, has drawn attention to the similarity between this hymn and a Sequence of the 11th cent., "Verbum Dei, Deo natum," which, according to Mr. Keble, "probably suggested some of his ideas." It has also a trace of Adam of St. Victor's "Verbi vere substantivi." In his annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, Mr. Biggs has rendered Keble's hymn into Latin as, "Verbum Dei, Increatum." [J. J.]

Wordsworth, Christopher, D.D., was b. at Lambeth (of which parish his father was then the rector), Oct. 30, 1807, and was the youngest son of Christopher Wordsworth, afterwards Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Priscilla (née Lloyd) his wife. He was educated at Winchester, where he distinguished himself both as a scholar and as an athlete. In 1826 he matriculated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where his career was an extraordinarily brilliant one. He swept off an unprecedented number of College and University prizes, and in 1830 graduated as Senior Classic in the Classical Tripos, and 14th Senior Optime in the Mathematical, won the First Chancellor's Medal for classical studies, and was elected Fellow of Trinity. He was engaged as classical lecturer in college for some time, and in 1836 was chosen Public Orator for the University. In the same year he was elected Head Master of Harrow School, and in 1838 he married Susan Hatley Freere. During his head-mastership the numbers at Harrow fell off, but he began a great moral reform in the school, and many of his pupils regarded him with enthusiastic admiration. In 1844 he was appointed by Sir Robert Peel to a Canonry at Westminster; and in 1848-49 he was Hulsean lecturer at Cambridge. In 1850 he took the small chapter living of Stanford-in-the-Vale cum Goosey, in Berkshire, and for the next nineteen years he passed his time as an exemplary parish priest in this retired spot, with the exception of his four months' statutable residence each year at Westminster. In 1869 he was elevated to the bishopric of Lincoln, which he held for more than fifteen years, resigning it a few months before his death, which took place on March 20th, 1885. As bearing upon his poetical character, it may be noted that he was the nephew of the poet-laureate, William Wordsworth, whom he constantly visited at Rydal up to the time of the poet's death in 1850, and with whom he kept up a regular and lengthy correspondence. Christopher Wordsworth was a very voluminous writer, his principal works being:—

(1) Athens and Attica, 1836; (2) Pompeian Inscriptions, 1837; (3) Greece Pictorial and Descriptive, 1839; (4) King Edward Vith's Latin Grammar, 1841; (5) Bentley's Correspondence, 1842; (6) Theophilus Anglicanus, 1843; (7) Memoirs of William Wordsworth, 1851; (8) S. Hippolytus, 1853; (9) Notes at Paris, 1854; (10) A Commentary on the whole Bible, 1856-1870; (11) The Holy Year, 1862; (12) Church History, 1881-1883; many volumes of Sermons, and an enormous amount of Pamphlets, Addresses, Letters, Speeches, on almost every subject in which the interests of the church were concerned, and also on subjects connected with classical literature.

Of his many works, however, the only one which claims notice from the hymnologist's point of view is The Holy Year, which contains hymns, not only for every season of the Church's year, but also for every phase of that season, as indicated in the Book of Common Prayer. Dr. Wordsworth, like the Wesleys, looked upon hymns as a valuable means of stamping permanently upon the memory the great doctrines of the Christian Church. He held it to be "the first duty of a hymn-writer to teach sound doctrine, and thus to save souls." He thought that the materials for English Church hymns should be sought (1) in the Holy Scriptures, (2) in the writings of Christian Antiquity, and (3) in the Poetry of the Ancient Church. Hence he imposed upon himself the strictest limitations in his own compositions. He did not select a subject which seemed to him most adapted for poetical treatment, but felt himself bound to treat impartially every subject, and branch of a subject, that is brought before us in the Church's services, whether of a poetical nature or not. The natural result is that his hymns are of very unequal merit; whether his subject inspired him with poetical thoughts or not, he was bound to deal with it; hence while some of his hymns (such as "Hark! the sound of holy voices," &c., "See the Conqueror mounts in triumph," &c., "O, day of rest and gladness") are of a high order of excellence, others are prosaic. He was particularly anxious to avoid obscurity, and thus many of his hymns are simple to the verge of baldness. But this extreme simplicity was always intentional, and to those who can read between the lines there are many traces of the "ars celans artem." It is somewhat remarkable that though in citing examples of early hymn-writers he almost always refers to those of the Western Church, his own hymns more nearly resemble those of the Eastern, as may be seen by comparing The Holy Year with Dr. Mason Neale's Hymns of the Eastern Church translated, with Notes, &c. The reason of this perhaps half-unconscious resemblance is not far to seek. Christopher Wordsworth, like the Greek hymn-writers, drew his inspiration from Holy Scripture, and he loved, as they did, to interpret Holy Scripture mystically. He thought that "the dangers to which the Faith of England (especially in regard to the Old Testament) was exposed, arose from the abandonment of the ancient Christian, Apostolic and Patristic system of interpretation of the Old Testament for the frigid and servile modern exegesis of the literalists, who see nothing in the Old Testament but a common history, and who read it (as St. Paul says the Jews do) 'with a veil on their heart, which veil' (he adds) 'is done away in Christ.'" In the same spirit, he sought and found Christ everywhere in the New Testament. The Gospel History was only the history of what "Jesus began to do and to teach" on earth; the Acts of the Apostles and all the Epistles were the history of what he continued to do and to teach from Heaven; and the Apocalypse (perhaps his favourite book) was "the seal and colophon of all." Naturally he presents this theory, a theory most susceptible of poetical treatment, in his hymns even more prominently than in his other writings. The Greek writers took, more or less, the same view; hence the resemblance between his hymns and those of the Eastern Church. [J. H. O.]

During the time that Bp. Wordsworth was Canon of Westminster, and Vicar of Stanford-in-the-Vale cum Goosey, he published his collection of hymns as:—

The Holy Year; or Hymns for Sundays and Holy-days, And other Occasions. Lond. Rivingtons, 1862.

This work contained an extended Preface; a Calendar of Hymns; 117 Original Compositions; and a Supplement of 82 hymns from other sources. In the 3rd ed., 1863, the Supplement was omitted, and the Original hymns were increased to 127. Several of these hymns are annotated under their respective first lines, the rest in C. U. are:—

From The Holy Year, 1st ed., 1862:—

1. Five pebbles from the brook. Temptation. Stanza ix. added in 1863.
2. Giver of law is God's [Thy] dear Son. Circumcision. Doxology added in 1863.
3. Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost. Quinquagesima.
4. Holy, holy, holy, Lord, God of Hosts, Eternal King. Holy Trinity.
5. Holy of Holies! awful name. Epistle 5th S. in Lent.
6. How blest are hearts which Christ the Lord. Holy Matrimony. In 1863 in two parts, Pt. ii. being "Bless these Thy servants, gracious Lord."
7. How blessed is the force of prayer. St. Peter. In 1863, in two parts, Pt. i. being "Behold! at hand is Herod's doom."
8. How wondrous and mysterious are. Holy Baptism. In the 1863 ed. it is divided into four parts:—Pt. ii. "In Jordan Thou didst sanctify"; Pt. iii. "Thee, risen in triumph from the grave"; Pt. iv. "Baptized in Christ we put on Christ." The cento, "By Water and the Holy Ghost," is also from this hymn.
9. In sorrow and distress. Ash Wednesday.
10. In Thy glorious Resurrection. Easter. In the 1863 ed. it begins, "Lord, Thy glorious Resurrection," and the doxology was added.
11. Lord, may we never, save to One. Against False Worship. Stanza viii. was added in 1863.
12. Lord not with [by] poor and paltry gifts. Offer-tory.
13. Lord, Who didst the Prophets teach. 2nd S. in Advent, or, Holy Scripture. The doxology was added in 1863.
14. Man fell from grace by carnal appetite. Gospel 1st S. in Lent.
15. Mankind in Adam fell. Good Friday. In the 1863 ed. it is divided into three parts; Pt. ii. being "We fell by Adam's sin;" and Pt. iii. "Thy Cross a Trophy is."
16. Not bound by chains, nor pent in cells. The Gifts of the Holy Ghost. This hymn is preceded by a special note on the Holy Spirit and His gifts.
17. Not gifts of prophecy can save. Self Discipline, or, 8th S. after Trinity.
18. O Jerusalem beloved, joyful morn has dawned on Thee. Purification of B. V. M., or, The Presentation. In the 1863 ed. it is divided into two parts, Pt. ii. being "Light the Gentile world to lighten, and thy glory Israel."
19. O Saviour, Who at Nain's gate. The Raising of the Widow's Son.
20. O Son of God, the Eternal Word. The Queen's Accession.
21. Once all the nations were one. Babel and Sion a Contrast.
22. Sing, O sing this blessed morn. Christmas. In the 1863 ed. a doxology was added, and the hymn was divided into two parts, Pt. ii. being, "God comes down that man may rise."
23. The banner of the Cross. Missions. In the 1863 ed. it is in three parts, Pt. ii., "Now for the Lord our God"; Pt. iii. "The earth from East to West."
24. The Gallican Fishers toil. Collect 4th S. in Advent. From this "O Lord, when storms around us howl" is taken.
25. Thou bidst us visit in distress. The Promise of the Comforter, or, S. before Ascension. In the 1863 ed. it is in two parts, Pt. ii. being "At Thy first birth, Thou, Lord, didst wait."
26. Thou hast a Temple founded. The Christian Temple; or, Epistle 17th S. after Trinity.
27. To-day, O Lord, the Holy James. St. James. In the 1863 ed. in two parts, Pt. ii. being "God in His word does not display."

28. To-day with bright effulgence shine. Conversion of St. Paul. In the 1863 ed. it begins "To-day in Thine Apostle shine," and is in two parts, Pt. ii. being "From East to West, from North to South."

29. Upon the sixth day of the week. Easter Eve. Stanzas x., xi. of the 1863 text were added then, and the hymn was given in two parts, Pt. ii. being "By tasting the forbidden fruit."

30. We hear the tolling bell. Burial. The doxology was added in 1863, and the hymn was divided, Pt. ii. being "O gracious Lord, to Thee." The cento "We see the open grave" is from this hymn.

31. When from the City of our God. The Good Samaritan. From this is taken "What beams of grace and mercy, Lord."

32. When Thou, O Lord, didst send the Twelve. SS. Simon and Jude. In the 1863 ed. st. x. is new, and Pt. ii. begins, "Zeal, swollen with passion's cloudy smoke."

ii. From the Holy Year, 3rd ed., 1863.

33. Heavenly Father, send Thy blessing. For Schools. In extensive use.

34. Holy, holy, holy Lord, Maker of this worldly frame. Septuagesima. Based on the Epistle and Gospel of the week.

35. Lo He comes! Whom every nation. Advent. This is headed "The First Advent of Christ, coming to save."

36. O fear not though before thee lies. Communion of the Sick. Pt. ii. begins, "The Resurrection and the Life."

37. On every new-born babe of earth. Churching of Women. Pt. ii. begins, "Bright angels of the King of kings."

38. Peace to this house! O Thou Whose way. Visitation of the Sick. Pt. ii. "O Conqueror by suffering; Pt. iii. "Restore us to Thine house of prayer."

39. The day is gently sinking to a close. Evening. A beautiful hymn.

40. We all, O God, unrighteous are. The Lord our Righteousness. Sometimes "We all, O Lord, unrighteous are." Based upon the Epistle of the S. next before Advent. Pt. ii. begins "Behold the day, the glorious day."

In addition to many of the hymns in the 1863 ed. of The Holy Year being divided into parts, the texts of most of them were revised by the author, and are authorized. [J. J.]

Wordsworth, William, the poet, the s. of an attorney, was b. at Cocker-mouth in 1770, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1791. Devoting himself to literature, and especially to poetry, he gradually rose into the front rank of English poets. His works include Lyrical Ballads, 1798; Poems; The Prelude; The Excursion, 1814, &c. All his poetical productions were collected and republished under his own supervision in 7 vols., in 1842. He d. at Rydal Mount, near Grasmere, in 1850. Notwithstanding his rank and reputation as a poet, his pieces used as hymns are limited to the following extracts from his poems:—

1. Not seldom clad in radiant vest. Christ, the Unchangeable. This is No. v. of five "Inscriptions supposed to be found in and near a Hermit's cell, 1818." It is in 5 st. of 4 l., and is given in his Poetical Works, 1837, vol. iii., p. 290. It is in Stowell's Sel. of Hys., 1831-77; the American Plymouth Coll., 1856, &c.

2. Up to the throne of God is borne. Noonday. This is entitled "The Labourer's Noon-Day Hymn," is dated 1834, and is in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1837, vol. v. p. 122.) It is in C. U. in an abridged form, beginning with st. 1., and the latter part is also given in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, as "Look up to heaven, the industrious sun," as No. 535. [J. J.]

Worship, and thanks, and blessing. C. Wesley. [Confidence in Jesus.] This hymn "Written after a Deliverance in a Tumult," first appeared in Hymns for those that Seek, and those that have Redemption, &c., 1747, in 6 st. of 10 l. Of these st. i.-iv. and vi. were given in the Wes. H. Bk. in 1800. In an edition subsequent to that of 1809, st. iv. was also omitted, and in the revised ed., 1875, this form in 4 st. is retained. Orig. text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. pp. 237-9. It has been suggested that the "tumult" referred to was that which took place at Wednesbury, October 26, 1743. Although this is quite probable it yet lacks certain proof. See G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk., Notes, 1883, p. 211. [J. J.]

Worthy the Lamb for sinners slain.

[Praise to Jesus.] This cento appeared in the General Baptist New Hymn Book, edited by the brothers J. B. and J. C. Pike [Baptist Hymnody, p. 113, i.], in 1851; and was repeated in the Bapt. Hymnal, 1879, in 5 st. of 4 l. Of the cento st. i., ii. are from J. Montgomery's "Sing we the song of those who stand" (p. 1060, i), and the rest (iii.-v.) are anonymous. The Rev. W. R. Stevenson, editor of the Bapt. Hymnal, is strongly inclined to think that these stanzas were by the Rev. J. G. Pike, of Derby (with whom he was co-pastor for some time), who was the father of the brothers Pike named above: but he was not quite satisfied with his authority. [J. J.]

Wreford, John Reynell, D.D., b. Dec. 12, 1800, educated at Manchester College, York, and in 1826 succeeded the Rev. James Yates as co-pastor to the Rev. John Kentish at the New Meeting, Birmingham. In 1830 he pub. a tr. of Cellerier's Discourse on the Authenticity and Divine Origin of the Old Testament. In the following year, in consequence of failure of voice, he withdrew from the Ministry, and in conjunction with the Rev. Hugh Hutton, Minister of the Old Meeting, opened a school at Edgbaston. In 1832 he pub. a Sketch of the History of Presbyterian Nonconformity in Birmingham; and in 1837, Lays of Loyalty, in celebration of the Queen's accession. He also contributed, in 1837, to the Rev. J. R. Beard's Coll. of Hys. for Public and Private Worship 55 hymns, of which the following are still in C. U. :—

1. God of the ocean, earth, and sky. God seen in His Works. In various collections, including those by Page Hopps, G. Dawson, and others.

2. Lord, I believe; Thy power I own. For increase of Faith. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840.

3. Lord, while for all mankind we pray. National Hymn. This is in a large number of collections of various denominations, and is by far the most popular of his hymns. Sometimes it begins with st. iii., "O! guard our shores from every foe."

4. When my love to Christ [God] grows weak. Passiontide. In Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S. A., 1864, "When my love to God grows weak." This is repeated in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873 (p. 1271, i).

Dr. Wreford was also the author of several volumes of verse, chiefly devotional. The latter years of his life he spent in retirement at Bristol, and d. there in 1881.

[V. D. D.]

Wretched, helpless, and distressed.

C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1742, p. 43, in 8 st. of 8 l., as a second hymn on Rev. iii. 17. In 1780, st. ii. was omitted when the hymn was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 105, and in the same form it still retained. Orig. text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. pp. 92-94. The somewhat peculiar lines:—

"My whole heart is sick of sin,
And my whole head is faint" is furnished with this note by Dr. Osborn (P. Works as above).

"This singular transposition of the Prophet's words (Isaiah i. 5) though found in all the editions, must still be regarded as an oversight."

No evidence, however, of its being such is forthcoming, and the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, retains the old reading. [J. J.]

Wright, Philip James, was b. in London, May 1, 1810. His parents belonged to the old section of the Methodists, but not agreeing with the form of government he found there, he withdrew, and became a member, and subsequently a minister, with the New Connexion Methodists. After labouring most successfully for several years in various circuits, he d. in 1863. His pub. works include:—The Study of Creation, 1848; The Way of Salvation, 1848; the Gathered Rose, 1858; Revival Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1860, &c. The Revival Hys., &c., is composed of 91 of his original compositions. Of these a few were included in the Meth. New Con. Hys. for Divine Worship, 1863. "The Lord of glory left His throne" (Redemption), and "Soldiers of the Cross, Servants of the Lord" (Young Men's Societies), are still in C. U. [J. J.]

Wyatt, Henry Herbert, M.A., was educated at Queen's College, Oxford (B.A. 1844, M.A. 1847), and took Holy Orders in 1845. He was travelling secretary for the S. P. G., 1852-56; incumbent of Holy Trinity Chapel, Brighton, 1856-66; principal of the Brighton Training College, 1863-86; and vicar of Bolney, Sussex, 1872-86. In 1886 he became rector of Conington, Ely. Mr. Wyatt has pub. Principal Heresies relating to our Lord's Incarnation, 1881; The Gospel according to St. Matthew, with Explanatory Notes for the Use of Teachers in Schools, 1884; and Ps. and Hys. for Public Worship, 1859 (4th ed., 1868). To this Coll. he contributed in 1859 his well known hymn for National Thanksgiving, "God the Lord has [hath] heard our prayer." It is given in several collections, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

Wyn, Elis, the Author of Bardd Cwsg, was b. near Harlech, Merionethshire, in the year 1670. He stands unrivalled as a Welsh prose writer. He was induced by Bishop Humphreys to enter Holy Orders, and was ordained deacon and priest on the same day, and on the next presented to the Rectory of Llanfair. He held at the same time other parishes. In 1703 appeared his admired work, Gweledigaethau y Bardd Cwsg, or the "Visions of the Sleeping Bard," which in style is one of the most beautiful works written in the Welsh language. In 1710 he was charged by the Bishops of Wales to superintend a new edition of the Book of Common Prayer. His "Eryn Cynhebrwng" or Funeral Hymn is found in all Welsh hymnals. He d. in July, 1734, and was buried under the communion table in Llanfair Church.

Xavier, St. Francis, the great missionary saint of the Roman Catholic Church, was the s. of Don John Giasso and Donna Maria d'Azpilqueta y Xavier; he was b. at the castle Xavier, near Pampeluna, Spain, on April 7, 1506, and is known to history by his mother's name. At the age of eighteen he entered the University of Paris, where in due course he graduated, and then devoted himself to teaching. It was here that he became acquainted with Ignatius Loyola the founder of the Jesuits, who was then planning the colossal work which he afterwards accomplished. Xavier became one of the first nine of Loyola's converts, and the most enthusiastic of the little band. The date of the formation of the Order of the Jesuits is given as Aug. 15, 1534, and the place as Montmartre near Paris. We find Xavier at Venice with Loyola in 1537, where the visitation of a hospital for incurables was assigned to him. Here in the discharge of his duties he gave early evidence of his enthusiasm and self-devotion. He subsequently visited Rome, where with Loyola and others of the Order he was brought, through the influence of the Rector of the University of Paris, who was then at Rome, to the notice of John III. of Portugal, who desired some of them for mission work in India. Circumstances led to the selection of Xavier for the work. He left Rome in March 1540, and set sail on April 7, 1541, for Goa, the chief city of the Portuguese possessions, where he arrived on May 6, 1542. From that time to the day of his death at Sancian, near Canton, on Dec. 22, 1552, he devoted himself to his work in a most heroic and devoted manner, visiting Travancore, Ceylon, Malacca, Japan, and other heathen lands with Cross in hand, and a burning zeal in his heart. Xavier's life has been written by many hands. The roll of deeds which he is said to have done, and the miracles he is said to have wrought, even to the raising of the dead, is long, but many of the alleged facts are open to the gravest doubt, and others are beyond belief. The hymns which are associated with Xavier's name are, "O Deus ego amo Te, Nam prior Tu amasti me" (p. 326, i.), and "O Deus ego amo Te, Nec amo Te ut salves me" (p. 326, ii.). That the first was written by him is most improbable, the evidence in his favour being absolutely nil. The second may possibly be his (see as above), it breathes his abnegation of self in every word, his spirit in every line. See Murray's Mag. for Oct. 1890, for an interesting account of Goa and its Cathedral, where Xavier lies buried. [J. J.]

Ye boundless realms of joy. Tate & Brady. [Ps. cxlviii.] Appeared in the New Version, 1696, in 8 st. of 8 l. It is seldom if ever found in its full form in modern collections, but usually as a cento. The metre, which is now somewhat common, is an imitation of John Pullain's version of the same psalm in the Anglo-Genevan Psalter, 1561. Pullain's use of this metre is the first instance known in English Psalmody. [Old Version, § ix.] [J. J.]

Ye Christian heroes [heralds], go, proclaim. Draper, B. H. [Farewell to Missionaries.] This is one of two hymns compiled from a poem which first appeared in a newspaper as "Ruler of worlds, display Thy power;" then in Hys. Orig. & Select., &c., Portland, Maine, 1805, divided as two hymns; and again, as a complete poem, in the Baptist Magazine, vol. viii. 1816, p. 88, where it is given in 28 lines, and begins: "Sovereign of worlds, display Thy power." The hymns compiled therefrom are:—

1. Sovereign of worlds, display Thy power. This cento in 4 st. of 4 l. was given in Pratt's Ps. & Hys., 1829, No. 467, as a "Prayer for the Conversion of the World," and is composed of ll. 1-12, 17-20, slightly altered.

2. Ye Christian heroes! go, proclaim. This hymn is composed of ll. 17-28 slightly altered. It is found in several collections, including the Plymouth Coll., 1855; the Bap. Praise Bk., 1871, and others. In the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858; the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865; Hys. and Songs of Praise, 1874, &c., it begins "Ye Christian heralds, go, proclaim."

The modern use of these hymns is mainly confined to America. [J. J.]

Ye indolent and slothful! rise. S. Martin. [Industry.] First appeared as No. 12 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Proverbs vi. 6-12, in 4 st. of 4 lines. In the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use, ll. 1, 3, 4, of st. iii. were altered. The markings of the Trs. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) ascribe the original to I. Watts (in whose works we have failed to find it), and the alterations of 1781, to Cameron. In the Free Church Magazine, for 1847, p. 271, it is pretty clearly shown to be by Martin. Martin is there said to have sent in to the Committee versions of other portions of Holy Scripture, which, though not inserted by them, in the Trs. and Paraphs., he probably justly enough regarded as superior to this. [J. M.]

Ye nations exult; Salvation is nigh. [Epiphany.] This hymn appeared in the British Magazine, May, 1832, p. 233, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "B. J. W." It has been republished in several collections, including Kennedy, 1863, &c. In Mercer's Ch. Ps. and H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, it begins "Ye nations rejoice, Salvation is nigh." [J. J.]

Ye neighbours and friends Of Jesus, draw near. C. Wesley. [Thanksgiving for Success of the Gospel.] This is No. 4 of four hymns written after preaching to the Newcastle colliers, and was pub. in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v., p. 115. Under the date of Nov. 30, 1746, Jackson in his Memoir of the Rev. Charles Wesley, says:—

"The very spirited hymn beginning 'Ye neighbours, and friends of Jesus, draw near,' was written by Mr. Charles Wesley 'after preaching to the Newcastle colliers,' and most probably during his present visit to that town. Under the date of Sunday, Nov. 30, he uses in his journal the phraseology upon which the hymn is founded. On that day he preached in one of the streets of Newcastle to listening crowds, who forgot the sharpness of the frost while engaged in the worship of God, and in hearing the word of life and mercy." (Small ed., 1848, p. 191.)

The hymn is in 12 st. of 4 double lines. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, sts. i., ii., viii.-xii. were given as No. 38, and this has become its recognized form in later collections. [J. J.]

Ye principalities and powers. G. Rawson. [Burial.] 1st pub. in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 858, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in the author's Hymns, Verses, &c., 1876, p. 114. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 616, it was given with the omission of st. i., and began "Though tears will fall and hearts are stirred." This form of the text is repeated in later collections. [J. J.]

Ye royal priests of Jesus, rise. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in his Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1745, No. 137, in 7 st. of 4 l.; again in later editions of the same; and in P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-70, vol. iii. pp. 319-320. Its use is not extensive. This hymn is one of the most pronounced of C. Wesley's hymns on "The Lord's Supper." It is based on a portion of Dr. Brevint's work on The Christian Sacrament and Sacrifice, sect. vi. 2. "Concerning the Sacrament, as it is a Sacrifice. And first, of the Commemorative Sacrifice":—

"Nevertheless, this sacrifice, which by a real oblation was not to be offered more than once, is by a devout and thankful commemoration to be offered up every day. This is what the apostle calls, to set forth the death of the Lord: to set it forth well before the eyes of God His Father as before the eyes of men: and what St. Austin explained, when he said the holy flesh of Jesus was offered in three manners: by prefiguring sacrifices under the law before His coming into the world, in real deed upon His cross, and by a commemorative Sacrament after He ascended into heaven. All comes to this: (1) That the sacrifice in itself can never be repeated; (2) That nevertheless this Sacrament, by our remembrance, becomes a kind of sacrifice, whereby we present before God the Father that precious oblation of His Son once offered. And thus do we every day offer unto God the meritorious sufferings of our Lord, as the only sure ground whereon God may give, and we obtain, the blessings we pray for," &c. P. Works, 1868-70, vol. iii. p. 203.

It is curious to note how faithfully C. Wesley reproduces Dr. Brevint's views not only of this aspect of the Holy Communion, but also of its daily administration. It is desirable that all C. Wesley's Hys. on the Lord's Supper be read with the extracts from Dr. Brevint's work, upon which they are based, and with which they are published in the P. Works, as above. [J. J.]

Ye saints! in blest communion. J. S. B. Monsell. [Saints Days, Special and General.] Pub. in his Hys. of Love and Praise, 1863, p. 186, and composed of 5 opening stanzas of 8 l.; 19 st. for special days, as St. Andrew, St. Thomas, and others; and a concluding doxology. In this form it was repeated in his Parish Hymnal, 1873, and in both instances directions were given in a note as to the use which might be made of these 28 st. for special festivals. This hymn suggested to Earl Nelson his well-known "From all Thy saints in warfare, for all Thy saints at rest," p. 398, ii. [J. J.]

Ye servants of God, Your Master proclaim. C. Wesley. [Missions.] Pub. in Hys. for Times of Trouble and Persecution, 1744, in 6 st. of 4 l., as No. 1 of "Hymns to be sung in Tumult" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 51). It is given in its full, or in an abbreviated form in several of the older collections, and especially those of the Church of England. In 1830 a cento was included in the Supplement of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 557, st. i.-v. being from this hymn, and st. vi. from C. Wesley's Funeral Hys., 1746, No. 6, st. v. In the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, this last stanza was omitted. [J. J.]

Ye servants of the Lord, Each in his office wait. P. Doddridge. [Christian Activity and Zeal.] Appeared in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 210, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The active Christian"; and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 234. It is in extensive use, and usually in its original form. Sometimes, however, st. v. l. 3, "And raise that favourite Servant's head," is altered to "And raise that faithful servant's head." [J. J.]

Ye simple souls that stray. C. Wesley (?). [Exhortation.] 1st pub. in Hys. for those that Seek and those that Have Redemption, 1747, in 7 st. of 8 l. In 1780 it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 21, with considerable alterations, and the omission of st. iii. The authorship of this hymn has been a matter of dispute for many years, some claiming it for John Wesley on the authority of Mr. Henry Moore, and others for Charles on the word of Dr. Whitehead. The work in which it appeared is known to have been pub. by the two brothers, and the contents were unsigned. Under these circumstances the difficulty of determining the authorship is great. There is some probability in the suggestion that it was written by Charles, and that the extensive alterations made therein for the Wes. H. Bk., in 1780, were the work of his brother. Original text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 230. [J. J.]

Ye sons of earth, prepare the plough. W. Cowper. [The Sower.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 85, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Sower." It is in several modern collections, but it does not rank in popularity with many of Cowper's hymns. [J. J.]

Ye that pass by, behold the man. C. Wesley. [Good Friday.] 1st pub. in Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 18 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "A Passion Hymn" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 70). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, 15 st. were given as No. 24, the omitted st. being ii., iv., and vii. In the 1809 ed. of that collection the hymn is divided into two parts, pt. ii. beginning with "O Thou dear suffering Son of God." Many expressions in the hymn, such as "Give me to feel Thy agonies," and others, have been much criticised from time to time, and this may possibly account for the omission of the hymn from the revised edition of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Both parts, however, are still in use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Ye that put on the heavenly crown. G. Rawson. [Burial. Easter.] Contributed to the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l., No. 856. In 1858 st. iii.-vi. were given as,

"Glory to Him Who tasted death," in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., No. 273; and have been continued in later editions. The reason of this curtailment of the hymn probably arose from objections to the opening stanzas, and especially to the lines:—

"Brethren in glory, bend ye down,
And aid our faltering hymn."

The abbreviation has however changed a funeral hymn into one for Easter. In 1876 Mr. Rawson republished the full text in his Hymns, with the simple change in st. ii. l. 4, of "beside" to "so near the grave." [J. J.]

Ye whose hearts are beating high. J. Keble. [Palm Sunday.] Given in his Christian Year, 1827, as the Poem for Palm Sunday, in 6 st. of 8 l., and based on St. Luke xix. 40. In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 206, it is given in an altered form as "Come, all grateful human hearts." [J. J.]

Ye wretched, hungry, starving poor. Anne Steele. [The Gospel Feast.] 1st pub. in her Poems Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i., p. 17, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Longing Souls invited to the Gospel-Feast, Luke xiv. 22;" also in the ed. of 1780, and D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 10. From this hymn the following abbreviated texts and centos have come into C.U.:—

1. Ye wretched, hungry, starving poor. In Ash and Evans's Bristol Bap. Coll., 1769, No. 144, and later hymnbooks. Usually st. vii. is omitted.

2. Ye wretched, starving poor. This in the American Church Pastorals, Boston, 1864, is composed of st. i.—iv. rewritten from c.m. into s.m.

3. See, Jesus stands with open arms. In the American Bap. Service of Song, 1871, beginning with st. ii. In the N. Y. Church Praise Bk., 1882, st. iv. is also omitted.

4. Lo, Jesus stands with open arms. This in the American Protts. Episco. Additional and Selected Hys. from H. A. & M., &c., N.Y., 1869 is composed of st. ii., v.—vii. slightly altered.

Through these various forms this hymn is somewhat widely used. [J. J.]

Yea, thou hast drained thy Master's cup. [Conversion of St. Paul.] This cento is in W. J. Blew's Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852—55; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 120, in 7 st. of 4 l. St. i.—iii. are a tr. from "Sudore sat tuo fides"; and iv.—viii. from "Sat Paule sat terris datum." Both hymns are by G. de la Brunetiere, in the Paris Brev. of 1680. The trs. are by Mr. Blew. [J. J.]

Yes, God is good! in earth and sky. [Goodness of God in nature; or, Flower Services.] The history of this popular hymn is somewhat curious and intricate. It is of American origin and came into modern hymn-books in the following manner:—

1. The original hymn appeared in Hys. for Children, Boston, U.S.A., 1825, in 6 st. of 4 l., the opening stanza reading:—

"God is good! each perfumed flower,
The smiling fields, the dark green wood,
The insect fluttering for an hour;
All things proclaim that God is good!"

The editor of this collection is not named. Possibly it may have been Mrs. Follen, the writer of the hymn. The false metre of the opening line (7's instead of 8's) was probably a misprint. In several instances this line has been republished, notwithstanding the clearness of the error. (See p. 380, i. 4.)

2. In Emily Taylor's Sabbath Recreations, Wellington, Salop, 1826, p. 203, this text was given as an original piece never before published, and signed "E. L. C.," the initials of Mrs. Follen's maiden name. Possibly it was sent in ms. to Miss Taylor, before it was printed in the Boston Hys. for Children.

3. In J. R. Beard's English Unitarian Coll. of Hys., 1837, it is included as "Yes, God is good! each perfumed flower."

4. The Boston Hys. for Children, or more probably a little undated work called Gems of American Poetry, fell into the hands of J. H. Gurney whilst engaged in compiling his Lutterworth Coll. of Hys. for Public Worship. In that Coll., in 1838, No. 299, appeared Gurney's version of the hymn as follows:—st. i., Mrs. Follen, "Yes, God is good! each perfumed flower;" st. ii., iii., new; st. iv., ll. 1, 2, Mrs. Follen, ll. 3, 4, new; st. v., new.

5. The Ps. & Hys. for Pub. Worship, Sel. for some of the Churches in Marylebone, was pub. by Gurney and others, in 1851. No. 300 is Gurney's final revision of the hymn. Of this text st. i., by Gurney, reads:—

"YES, GOD IS GOOD,—in earth and sky,
From ocean-depths and spreading wood,
Ten thousand voices seem to cry,
"God made us all, and God is good.""

The remaining stanzas are:—st. ii.—v., repeated from the Lutterworth Coll. as above, and st. vi. is new. To this hymn and another ("We saw Thee not when Thou didst come") (p. 1243, i.) Gurney added the following note in the Index of first lines:—

"This hymn ['We saw Thee not,' &c.], and the last hymn in the book, 'Yes, God is good,' were suggested by two poems in a small American volume, which were well conceived, but very imperfectly executed. Successive alterations have left nothing of the original compositions remaining but the first four words, and the repeated words in each hymn. With this acknowledgment, the writer has not scrupled to put his name to them—J. H. G."

In this note Gurney has overlooked the fact that in "Yes, God is good," st. iv., ll. 1, 2 are direct from Mrs. Follen. This form of the hymn, in full or in an abbreviated form, is in extensive use.

6. In the Methodist S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 73, beginning "Almighty God, Thy works abound" is thus composed: st. i., ii., Anon.; st. iii., viii., from Gurney, 1851, as above.

7. Mrs. Follen's hymn was pub. in a revised form in her Poems, Boston, W. Crosby & Co., 1839, p. 119, as "God, Thou art good, each perfumed flower." It was also repeated in the English ed. of her Poems, pub. as The Lark and The Linnet, Hys., Songs, and Fables, London, Addey & Co., 1854, p. 12, where it begins:—"Thou art good! Each perfumed flower." Putnam, in his Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, 1875, gives the text from the Poems of 1839. [J. J.]

Yes, Lord, my joyful thanks to Thee. S. Browne. [Giving Thanks.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1720, Bk. i., No. 151, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Giving thanks to God always in all things." In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, and again in his Hymns, &c., 1873, it is given as "Great God, my joyful thanks to Thee." [J. J.]

Yes, there are little ones in Heaven. T. R. Taylor. [Infants' Hymn.] This hymn appeared in the Protestant Dissenters Juvenile Magazine, 1833, and again in T. R. Taylor's Memoirs and Select Remains, 1836, p. 245, in 5 st. of 6 l. It is found in C. U. in its original form; and also rewritten as "Children's voices high in heaven," in the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 959, and later collections. The rewritten form of the text is by Mr. George Rawson, and was made for the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858. [J. J.]

Yet a little while: the Lord Gave His saints this precious word. Lady Campbell, née Malcolm. [Second Advent.] The first stanza was written early in Nov., and the remaining two on Dec. 26, 1830, and subsequently pub. in lithograph from the author's mss. It was included in J. G. Deck's Ps. and Hys., Lond., D. Walther, 1842. Pt. i., No. 189; in Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855; in Harland's Ch. Psalter & Hyl., and others. [J. J.]

Yet there is room! The Lamb's bright hall of song. H. Bonar. [Parable of the Marriage Supper.] This most appropriate hymn for Home Missions appeared in 1873. It has been somewhat widely adopted, and is given in the collections of Snapp, Sankey, Thring, and others, and is worthy of this attention. [J. J.]

Yonge, Charlotte Mary, dau. of William Crawley Yonge of the 52nd Regiment, was b. at Otterbourne, Hants, in 1823. Miss Yonge is widely known as the author of The Heir of Redclyffe, The Daisy Chain, and other popular novels; of a series of historical works for the young, including Stories of English History, 1874, Stories of Greek History, 1876, &c.; of the Life of Bishop Patteson; and as the Editor of the Monthly Packet. In 1841 Miss Yonge contributed two hymns to The Child's Christian Year, which was edited by her mother (see below). The hymns are:—(1) "Into Christ's flock we are received" (Holy Baptism); (2) "Why lived I not in those blest days?" (St Thomas). [J. J.]

Yonge, Frances Mary, née Bargus, was b. Jan. 13, 1795, was married to William Crawley Yonge of the 52nd Regiment, and d. Sep. 23, 1868. Mrs. Yonge pub. in 1841, The Child's Christian Year, with a Preface by John Keble. The contents are mainly by J. Anstice, J. H. Newman, I. Williams, and Mrs. Yonge, with a few hymns by Miss Yonge, Mrs. Mozley, T. Whytehead, J. Keble, and others. Mrs. Yonge's hymns are:—

1. Behold a Prophet,—yea, and more. St. John Baptist.
2. His are the cattle on the hill. All things for God.
3. Not only as a sacrifice. Jesus the Example.
4. Put far from us, O Lord, we pray. Advent.
5. The Assyrian King in splendour came. Defeat of the Assyrians.

The use of these hymns is limited. [J. J.]

You now must hear my voice no more. W. Robertson. [Ascensiontide.] First appeared as No. 15 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of John xiv., 25–29, in 6 st. of 4 l. and slightly altered in the revised ed. issued in 1751. In the Draft of 1781 it was included as No. 43, considerably altered, and with st. v., vi. omitted. In the public worship ed. of the Trs. & Paraphs. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use, st. ii. was re-written, and st. i., l. 3, st. iii., l. 1, were altered from the Draft. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) the original is ascribed to Robertson, and the alterations in 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781 is included in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and a few other modern hymnals. (Compare the version of the same passage of Holy Scripture "Peace—it was our Saviour's blessing," No. 73, in Miss Leeson's Paraphs. & Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853.) [J. M.]

You who dwell above the skies. G. Sandys. [Ps. cxlviii.] This fine rendering of Ps. cxlviii. appeared in his Paraphrase of the Psalms, 1636, in 40 l. It was republished in his Paraphrases upon the Divine Poems, 1638, and in later editions. Also in the Library of Old Authors. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 639, it is given in 9 st. of 4 l. as "Ye, who dwell above the skies," where the text is but slightly altered. It is worthy of more extended use than is accorded to it in modern hymnals. [See Psalms, English, § x.] [J. J.]

You who the Name of Jesus bear. [Humiliation and Exaltation of Christ.] First appeared as No. 7 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of Phil. ii., 6–12, in 7 st. of 4 l. The author is unknown. In the revised edition, issued in 1751, st. iii. vii. were altered, and this form was included, slightly altered, as No. 52 in the Draft of 1781 beginning "Ye who the Name of Jesus bear." In the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use, st. v. was re-written, and st. ii., ll. 2–4, st. vi. l. 1 altered. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron, (p. 200, ii.) the original is ascribed to Isaac Watts (in whose works it is not to be found) and the alterations of 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781 is included in Pratt's Coll., 1829, the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and a few other modern hymnals. St. v.–vii. beginning "Hence God this generous love to men," were included, with an added doxology, in the Twickenham Chapel Coll., 1845, p. 58. In Miss Leeson's Paraphs. and Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853, it is slightly altered as pt. i. of No. 81; her pt. ii., beginning "Hail, name of Jesus! glorious name," being partly from "All hail the power of Jesus' name." [J. M.]

Young, Andrew, second s. of David Young, for more than fifty years a most efficient teacher in Edinburgh, was b. in Edinburgh, April 23, 1807. After passing through a distinguished eight years' literary and theological course at the University of Edinburgh, he was appointed in 1830, by the Town Council, Head Master of Niddry Street School, Edinburgh, where he began with 80 pupils, and left with the total at 600. In 1840 he became Head English Master of Madras College, St. Andrews, where he was equally successful. He retired from St. Andrews in 1853, and lived in Edinburgh, where he was for some time the Superintendent of the Greenside Parish Sabbath School. He d. Nov. 30, 1889; Many of Mr Young's hymns and poems were contributed to periodicals. A collected edition of these was pub. in 1876, as The Scottish Highlands and Other Poems. His poems entitle him to rank in the first order of Scottish minor poets. Some of his hymns are very sweet. His "There is a happy land" (q. v.) has attained great popularity. He d. July 18, 1891. [J. M.]

Young children once to Jesus came. Jane Taylor. [Christ receiving little children.] This hymn was given in the 1st ed. of Hys. for Infant Minds, 1810, as "As infants once to Christ were brought." In the 4th ed., 1812, the opening line was altered to "Young children once to Jesus came," and this is repeated in the revised ed. of 1886. It is in 6 st. of 4 l. and based upon the words "Suffer little children to come unto me." It is given in several modern collections for children. [J. J.]

Your harps, ye trembling saints. A. M. Toplady. [Encouragement to Believers.] Printed in the Gospel Magazine, Feb. 1772, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "Weak Believers Encouraged." It was included in his Hys. on Sacred Subjects, &c., London, W. H. Collingridge, 1856; and in D. Sedgwick's ed of his Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1860. Several abbreviated forms of the text, all beginning with the original first line, are in C. U. in G. Britain and America. There is also in American use a cento beginning "If through unruffled seas," in 4 st. of 4 l., of which st. ii.-iv. are from this hymn, and stanza i. is by another hand. It is given in the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, the Laudes Domini, 1884, and others. [J. J.]

Z

Zage nicht wenn sich der Himmel. [Cross and Consolation.] Included in J. Köbner's Christliche Harfentöne, Hamburg, 1840, p. 150, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled "Guidance." No author's name is given. The tr. in C. U. is "Tremble not, though darkly gather." A good tr. expanding st. ii. as ii., iii., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1st ser., 1854, p. 19 (1884, p. 24). Included in Gillilan's Sel., Dundee, 1875, No. 51. [J. M.]

Zeller, Christian Heinrich, s. of Christian David Zeller, Hofrath at Hohenentrigen, near Tübingen, was b. at Hohenentrigen, March 29, 1779. He matriculated at the University of Tübingen in 1797, as a student of law. After completing his studies he chose, however, the profession of teaching. He became director of the Latin School at Zoffingen, Switzerland, in 1809, and finally removed in April, 1820, to Beuggen on the Rhine (Baden), near Basel, as director of the newly founded Institution there, meant for the education of poor children and for the training of teachers for poor children. He d. at Beuggen, May 18, 1860 (Koch, vii. 188, &c.).

Zeller was best known as an educationist, and in connection with the working of the Institution at Beuggen. His hymns, which are simple, Scriptural and earnest, were written primarily for use at Beuggen, and mostly appeared in the Monatsblatt (begun in 1828), and other publications of the Institution. They came into notice through their reception into Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837. They were collected by Zeller's son, and pub. in 1871, as Lieder der Armenerschullehrer-Anstalt Beuggen, 58 being original. Two of these hymns have passed into English, viz. :—

i. Gott bei mir an jedem Orte. Omnipresence. On the joy of God's Presence with us. This appeared in the Monatsblatt in 1828, and was included in the 1871 as above, p. 88. In Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 32 (1865, No. 32), in 6 st. of 6 l.; in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1554, &c. The tr. in C. U. is :—

My God with me in every place. This is a good tr., omitting st. v., by Mrs. Findlater in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 30 (1884, p. 33); repeated, omitting st. iv., in Holy Song, 1869, No. 588. In Miss Warner's Hys. of the Ch. Militant, 1858, it begins, "My God is with me every place."

Another tr. is: "God in every place is near me." By R. Massie, in the British Herald, May, 1866, p. 70, and in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, No. 438.

ii. Treuer Heiland, wir sind hier. Public Worship. This is in the 1871 as above, p. 64. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 857 (1865, No. 1256), in 5 st. of 7 l.; and repeated in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 235. For this hymn Conrad Kocher wrote the well-known melody which in H. A. & M. is called Dix, and which 1st appeared, set to Zeller's hymn, in Kocher's Stimmen aus dem Reiche Gottes, Stuttgart, 1838, No. 201. Tr. as :—

Saviour, here to Thee we come. This is a free tr. of st. i., ii., v., marked as by "F. C. C.," as No. 155 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864. [J. M.]

Zeuch ein zu deinen Thoren. P. Gerhardt. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared as No. 157 in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, in 12 st. of 8 l., viz. st. i.-viii., xii., xiii., xiv., xvi. of the full form. St. xv. was added in J. G. Ebeling's ed. of Gerhardt, 1666-67, No. lxxx., and st. ix.-xi. in J. H. Feustking's edition of the same, 1707. The full form in 16 st. is in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 32, in Bachmann's ed., No. 25, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 184. It was probably written during the Thirty Years' War. The tr. in C. U. are :—

1. Retake thy own Possession. A free tr., omitting st. x.-xii., in pt. ii., 1725, of J. C. Jacobi's Psalmodia Germanica, p. 9. In his ed. of 1732, p. 46, it is greatly altered, and begins, "In me resume thy dwelling." From this form the tr. of st. i., vi., xvi. were included unaltered in the Scottish Evang. Union H. Bk., 1856.

2. Come to Thy temple here on earth. A good tr. omitting st. iv. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1855, p. 113. From this the tr. of st. i., ii., viii., xii., were repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. H. Bk., 1865.

3. Enter, Lord, Thy temple. A good tr. of st. i., ii., v.-viii., xiv., xvi. based on her L. G. version by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 71. Included in full and unaltered as Nos. 482, 483 in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866; No. 483, beginning "All love is thine, O Spirit" (st. vii.). In the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, No. 250 is st. i.-iii., vi., viii., and in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, No. 106 is st. i., ii., v., xiv., xvi.

Other tr. are: (1) "Retake thy own possession, Thou glorious Guest of Hearts," in Select H. from Ger. Psal. Tranquebar, 1754, p. 43, and the Suppl. to Ger. Psal. ed., 1765, p. 26. (2) "Come, O Thou Holy Dove," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 104. (3) "Come, enter Thine own portal," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 117. [J. M.]

Zihn, Johann Friedrich, was b. Sept. 7, 1650, at Suhl, in Thuringia. After studying for some time at the University of Leipzig, he went to Wittenberg, where he graduated m.a. in 1675; and in 1679 was appointed rector of the school at Suhl. In 1690 he became diaconus, and in 1708 archidiaconus at Suhl, and d. there, Jan. 16, 1719 (Wetzel, iii. 470; Koch, v. 419, &c.). Zihn contributed five hymns (Nos. 526-530) to the Schleusingen G. B., 1688, the title of which begins, Der himmlischer Freude zeitlicher Vorschmack. One has been tr., viz. :—

Gott lebet noch, Seele was verzagt du doch. Cross and Consolation. 1688 as above, No. 529, in 8 st. of 10 l., marked as by M. J. F. Z. In each stanza ll. 1, 2 are as quoted above, and ll. 9, 10 are the refrain, “ Seele! so gedanke doch;

Lebt doch unser Herr Gott noch.”

It is a fine hymn, founded on Jer. x. 10. Koch says it was written in 1682. Included in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 844. The tr. in C. U. is :—

God liveth ever! This is a good and full version, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 33. Repeated in full in Miss Warner's Hys. of the Church Militant, 1858, and in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. Varying centos are included in the Cumbræ H. Bk.; Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871, and the Ibrox Hyl., 1871. The form beginning “Our God is good; in every place,” in the Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1864, is from ll. 3-6 of st. i., iii., vi., viii.

Other trs. are :—

(1) “God liveth still! Trust,” &c. By Miss Cox, 1864, p. 129; repeated in the Gilman-Schaff Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1881. (2) “God liveth still! Wherefore,” &c. By R. Massie, in the Day of Rest, 1877, vol. v. p. 326.

Zinzendorf, Christian Renatus, Count von, second s. of Nicolaus Ludwig von Zinzendorf, was b. Sept. 19, 1727, at Herrnhut, in Saxony. He received his education from his parents, and from Johann Langguth and others of the Brethren. He was the only son that survived his boyhood, early accompanied his father on his journeys, and was, e.g., in 1743, for sixteen days imprisoned with him at Riga. From 1744 to 1750 he lived mostly at Herrenhaag in Wetteravia, ministering specially to the single Brethren. When the community at Herrenhaag was dissolved in 1750, his father summoned him to London. He brought with him the seeds of consumption, which developed in England. He d. in London, May 28, 1752 (Koch, v., 312; Hist. Nachricht (to the Brüder G. B., 1778), 1835, p. 192, &c.).

C. R. von Zinzendorf's hymns were principally written during his residence in London. They are by no means free from the faults and mannerisms of that sentimental and fantastic period of Moravian hymn-writing; and their range of subjects is very limited. Their burden is a deep and intense personal devotion to the crucified Saviour; the spirit being that of his favourite saying, “I have but one passion, and that is He, only He.” They were collected by his father, and pub. (with a preface dated March 18, 1755), as the 1st Appendix to the London G. B. of 1754, with 53 (54) pieces, 9 of which consist of only one stanza, 2nd ed. 1760 (See p. 768, ii.). Most of them passed into the Brüder G. B. of 1778. Few have passed into English use in non-Moravian hymn-books.

Three of these hymns may here be referred to :—

i. Ach lass auf allen Tritten. Sanctification, Written in 1751. Included in the Kleine Brüder G. B., London, 1754. It is No. 64 in the 2nd ed., 1760, of the Appx. of 1755, and repeated as st. ii. of No. 380, in the Brüder G. B., 1778. The tr. in C. U. is :—

Lord Jesus, Thy atonement. This is No. 427 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 588), repeated in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmody, 1833.

ii. Für uns ging mein Herr in Todesnöthen. Passiontide. This is included as No. 166 in the Brüder G. B., 1778, in 10 st. of 8 l. It is a cento from three hymns in the Appx. of 1755, as above, viz. st. 1-5, 8, 9 are st. 12-15, 17, 11, 18, of No. 28 (this hymn begins “Ach du unaussprechlich nahes Herze”); st. 6, 7 are st. 2, 3, of No. 10; and st. 10 is No. 17. The text of 1778 is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 230. The tr. in C. U. is :—

My Redeemer, overwhelmed with anguish. By J. Swertner, in full, from the 1778 text, as No. 78 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 93). The trs. of st. 1, 2, 6-8, were included in Walker's Coll., Cheltenham, 1855. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, No. 82, it begins with st. vi. “Our enraptured hearts shall ne'er be weary.”

iii. O süsse Seelenwege. This is noted at p. 467, ii.

Not including the above the English Moravian H. Bk., 1886, gives seven hymns with his name, and ascribes portions of four others to him. [J. M.]

Zinzendorf, Nicolaus Ludwig, Count von, was b. at Dresden, May 26, 1700; was educated at the Paedagogium at Halle (1710-1716), and at the University of Wittenberg (1716-1719); became Hof- und Justizrath at the Saxon court at Dresden in the autumn of 1721; received a license to preach from the Theological Faculty of the University of Tübingen in 1734; was consecrated Bishop of the Moravian Brethren's Unity at Berlin, May 10, 1737; and d. at Herrnhut, May 9, 1760.

An adequate sketch of the life and labours of this remarkable man would far exceed the limits of our space. The details of his life are fully given in his Leben, by A. G. Spangenberg, 8 vols., Barby, 1772-75 (English version, abridged, by Samuel Jackson, London, 1838); and good sketches, with references to the fuller biographies, will be found in Koch, v. 248, Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xvii. 513, &c. The English reader may also consult T. Kübler's Hist. Notes to the Lyra Germanica, 1865, p. 107; Josiah Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 160; Miss Winkworth's Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 305, &c. It is impossible to speak of Zinzendorf apart from the religious Communion of which he was the Second Founder; and accordingly an account of his life and labours is given in this Dictionary in the article Moravian Hymnody (see pp. 765-769).

Zinzendorf's first hymn was written at Halle in 1712, and his last at Herrnhut, May 4, 1760. Between these dates he wrote more than 2000 hymns. He himself pub. an edition of his poems as his Teutsche Gedichte at Herrnhut, 1735 (2nd ed., Barby, 1766), but this only contains 128 hymns. The fullest representation of them is in Albert Knapp's Geistliche Gedichte des Grafen von Zinzendorf, pub. at Stuttgart in 1845 (hereafter, in this article, referred to as Knapp, 1845). This contains 770 pieces, arranged in three books, with an introduction and a biographical sketch by Knapp.

In preparing this edition Knapp had access to much unpublished material in the archives at Herrnhut, and found there many of the hymns in Zinzendorf's autograph. But too much of the labour he bestowed thereon was spent in endeavouring, not so much to reconstruct the text from the original sources, as to modernise it. In various instances the hymns are altogether rewritten, so that the form in which they appear is not that in which, as a matter of fact, Zinzendorf did write them, but that in which he might have written them had he been Albert Knapp, and lived in the year of grace 1845. So much is this the case, that comparatively few of the hymns are given in Knapp's ed. in their original form. If not altered they are often either abridged or else combined with others.

The keynote of Zinzendorf's hymns, and of his religious character, was a deep and earnest personal devotion to and fellowship with the crucified Saviour. This is seen even in his worst pieces, where it is his perverted fervour that leads him into objectionable familiarity with sacred things both in thought and in expression. If his self-restraint had been equal to his imaginative and productive powers, he would have ranked as one of the greatest German hymnwriters. As it is, most even of his best pieces err in some way or other, for if they are reverent and in good taste, they are apt to lack concentration and to be far too diffuse. His best hymns, and those which have been most popular in German and English beyond the Moravian connection, are those of the period prior to 1734. Among the characteristically Moravian hymns of the period 1734 to 1742 there are also various noble pieces. The later productions, especially from 1743 to 1750, are as a rule one-sided, unreal, and exaggerated in sentiment, and debased in style; exemplifying a tendency inherited from Scheffer (see p. 1006, i.), and suffered to run to riot. Without doubt he wrote too much (especially considering the limited range of subjects treated of in his hymns), and gave too little care to revision and condensation. Yet many of his hymns are worthy of note, and are distinguished by a certain noble simplicity, true sweetness, lyric grace, unshaken faith in the reconciling grace of Christ, entire self-consecration, willingness to spend and be spent in the Master's service, and fervent brotherly love.

The hymnbooks in which Zinzendorf's productions mainly appeared, or with which they have been associated, are described at length at pp. 767, 768. The more important may for convenience be briefly noted here, as follows:—

(1) Sammlung geistlicher und lieblicher Lieder, Leipzig, 1725, with 889 hymns. The 2nd ed. was pub. circa 1728, and contains an Anhang with Nos. 890-1078 [Berlin Library, Ei. 2017]; while some copies have a Zugabe with Nos. 1079-1149 [Berlin, Ei. 2016], and others have also an Anderer Zugabe, circa 1730, with hymns 1-44, bound up with them [Berlin, Ei. 2014, and Brit. Mus.]. The 3rd ed., with 1416 hymns in all, was pub. at Görlitz in 1731. A copy of this, now in the Hamburg Library, has bound up with it a Nachlese einiger geistlicher Lieder, dated 1733.

(2) Herrnhut G. B. 1735 (Das Gesang-Buch der Gemeine in Herrn-Huth) with its various Anhänge and Zugaben up to 1748.

(3) London G. B. 1753-54 (Elwas vom Liede Mosis ... das ist: Alt- und neuer Brüder-Gesang, &c.), pub. at London, vol. i. 1753, ii. 1754.

(4) Brüder G. B. 1778 (Gesangbuch zum Gebrauch der evangelischen Brüdergemeinen), pub. at Barby in 1778.

Zinzendorf's hymns passed into German non-Moravian use mainly through the Ebersdorf G. B., 1742 (Evangelisches Gesangbuch in einen hinfälligen Auszug der Alten, Neuern und Neuesten Lieder, &c.), and in recent times through Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837-1865. Comparatively few are found in non-Moravian English hymnbooks prior to 1840, save in the versions made by John Wesley. The translations made by the English Moravians have been very little used by others, except by those who were connected by birth with the Moravians, such as James Montgomery (through whose influence several were included in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., 1855 and 1857), J. A. Latrobe and C. H. Bateman. The versions made by English non-Moravians since 1840 have been mostly of hymns which the Moravians themselves had not thought good to translate.

A number of Zinzendorf's hymns are noted in this Dictionary under their German first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). In the larger ed. of the English Moravian H. Bk. of 1886 those which are by Zinzendorf may easily be traced, his name being added to them, and the first line of the original German prefixed. The others which have passed into use outside the Moravian connection, or have been tr. by non-Moravians, are here noted as follows:—

i. Ach Bein von meinen Beinen. Longing for Heaven. Written circa 1750 (Knapp, 1845, p. 176). Included in the Kleine Brüder G. B., 2nd ed. Barby, 1761, No. 2110, in 2 st. of 8 l.; repeated, altered, in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1681. Tr. as:—

1. The seasons, Lord! are Thin—how soon. A free version as No. 479 in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841.

2. How soon, exalted Jesus. This is No. 838 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 1233).

ii. Ach! mein verwundter Fürste. Union with Christ. Written Aug. 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 125). 1st pub. in Appz. viii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B. as No. 1197, and in 4 st. of 6 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 774, st. iv. was omitted.

The tr. in C. U. is of st. i., ii., and is noted at p. 558, i. Another tr. is, "My wounded Prince enthron'd on high," by C. Kinchen, as No. 85 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. In the 1808 and later eds. (1886, No. 352), st. iii. altered to "Lord, take my sinful, worthless heart" is continued.

iii. Der Gott von unserm Bunde. Supplication. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 231). 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1201, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Hymn for the Hours of Prayer." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1474.

The tr. in C. U. is based on st. i., ii., and is noted at p. 588, i., ii. Other trs. are (1) "The God to whom we homage pay." This is No. 97 in pt. iii. 1748 of the Moravian H. Bk. (2) "O may the God of mercies." This is No. 592 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. In the ed. of 1886, No. 706, it begins with st. iii., "Lord, our High Priest and Saviour."

iv. Die Bäume blühen ab. Autumn. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, No. 12, dated Autumn, 1721, and entitled "Comforting thoughts on Death." It is in Knapp, 1845, p. 17. Further noted under "Wie wird mir einst doch sein" (see p. 467, ii.).

v. Du Vater aller Kreatur. Work for Christ. Written 1722 (Knapp, 1845, p. 26). 1st pub. in Appz. vi., circa 1737, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1159, and in 13 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1717 consists of st. viii.-xiii. beginning, "Des Lebens abgestecktes Ziel." Tr. as:—

Whether the period of this life. This is a tr. of st. viii.-x. as No. 847 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. To this in later eds. (1886, No. 1235) No. 848 was added. This is "Lord may I live to Thee by faith," and is a tr. of an anonymous 17th cent. stanza, "Herr Jesu dir leb ich," which is No. 1686 in the Brüder G. B., 1778. The full form is in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841.

vi. Geschwister! wir geben uns Herzen und Hände. Christian Work. Written 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 234). 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1217, and in 8 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1391, it is united, as in Knapp, with "Gesinde des Heilands" (see No. xxvii. below). Tr. as:—

Grace! how good, how cheap, how free. This is a tr., by C. Kinchen, of st. v., as No. 23 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. Included in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866.

vii. Glanz der Ewigkeit. Morning. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 13, dated Berlin, May, 1721. 1st pub. as No. 470 in the Sammlung, 1725, in 15 st. of 6 l. In Knapp, 1845, p. 16. The only st. tr. into English is st. xi. as part of "Jesus, geh' voran" (p. 589, ii.).

viii. Grosser Bundes-Engel. Ascensiontide. Written for Ascension Day (his birthday), 1740 (Knapp, 1845, p. 144, dated May 26, 1740). 1st pub. in Appz. xi., circa 1741, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1426, in 27 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 603. Tr. as:—

Lord, when Thou saidst, So let it be. This is a tr., by C. G. Clemens, of st. iii., as No. 156 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 190). Included in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, and in Dr. Martineau's Hys., 1840 and 1873.

ix. Heiliger, heiliger, heiliger Herr Zebaoth. Eternal Life. Heaven Anticipated. The Rev. J. T. Müller, of Herrnhut, informs me that this was written in 1723 on the occasion of the birthday (Oct. 6) of Zinzendorf's grandmother, H. C. von Gersdorf. Knapp, 1845, p. 193, dates it Oct. 18, 1723. 1st pub. as No. 1078 (2) in the 2nd ed., circa 1728, of the Sammlung in 7 st. of 7 l., entitled, Closing Hymn. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, st. ii., iii., beginning "Hütten wir," are included as st. i., ii., of No. 1739. Tr. as:—

Had we nought, had we nought. This is a tr. of st. ii., iii., by W. O. Keley, as No. 1189 in the 1808 Suppl. to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1849, No. 1186), and repeated in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, No. 475.

x. Ich bin ein kleines Kindlein. Children. This is No. 1022 in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammlung, in 13 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1214, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1835, p. 188) marked as ■ catechetical hymn for children, and dated 1723. Knapp, 1845, p. 40, dates it June, 1723, and alters it to "Ich bin ein Kindlein, arm und klein." It is ■ simple and beautiful hymn, and is contained in a number of recent German non-Moravian collections, e.g. in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1403. Tr. as:—

1. Saviour, who didst from Heaven come down. This is a free tr. of st. ii., iii., v., made by James Bullivant Tomalin in 1860, and contributed to Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, ed. 1866, Appz., No. 27, with the note at p. 500, "I am indebted for this to the kindness of the translator." Repeated in S. D. Major's Bk. of Praise for Home & School, 1869, and in America in the Bapt. Service of Song, 1871, &c. In M. W. Stryker's Christian Chorals, 1885, and Church Song, 1889, it is altered, beginning, "O Saviour, Who from Heav'n came down."

2. I am a little child you see. By C. Kinchen, as No. 49 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. This form is followed in the ed. of 1886, No. 1038, and in the Bible H. Bk., 1845. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, it begins with st. ii., "Thou, gracious Saviour, for my good;" and this form altered to, "My Saviour dear, Thou for my good," is in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825.

xi. Kommt, Sünder, und blicket dem ewigen Sohne. Repentance or Lent. Mr. Müller informs me that this was written in Aug. 1736, at Bernau, near Berlin, while Zinzendorf was journeying between Berlin and Königsberg. Knapp, 1845, p. 130, dates it Nov. 22, 1738. 1st pub. in Appz. viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1308, in 9 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 321. Tr. as:—

Sinners! come; the Saviour see. This a good and full tr. by C. Kinchen, as No. 120, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1886, No. 259). Of this st. i., ii. are included in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866. Other forms are (1) "Are you formed a creature new" (st. vi.). In the Moravian H. Bk., 1769 (1886, No. 1280), Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, &c. (2) "Rise, go forth to meet the Lamb" (st. viii. alt.). In J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1852, No. 457.

xii. Kron' und Lohn behertzter Ringer. The Beatitudes. Founded on St. Matt. v. 3-12. In his Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 41, dated, Sept. 7, 1722 (his marriage day), and entitled, "Thoughts on my own marriage," 1st pub. as No. 700 in the Sammlung, 1725, in 16 st. of 12 l. In Knapp, 1845, p. 30. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 613, beginning, "Jesu, der du uns erworben." Tr. as:—

Jesu! Lord so great and glorious. This, omitting st. xiv., xv., is No. 226 in pt. ii. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1886, No. 799), as "Jesus, Lord most great and glorious." The versions of st. i., ix., xvi., from the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, were included in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

xiii. Naht heran, ihr lieben Glieder. Holy Communion. Written in 1731 (Knapp, 1845, p. 212). 1st pub. in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammlung as No. 1416 in 16 st. of 4 l. Also in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1148. Tr. as:—

1. Friends in Jesus, now draw near. This is a free tr., omitting st. v., vi., viii.-x., xiv., by Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 4th ser., 1862, p. 57 (1884, p. 220), the German being quoted as "Kommt herein, ihr lieben Glieder." This tr. is repeated in full in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 34, and abridged in G. S. Jellcoke's Coll., 1867, Windle, No. 430, and Harland, 1876, No. 451.

2. Come, approach to Jesu's table. This is No. 556 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 965).

xiv. O du Hüter Ephraim. Supplication for Grace. In his Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 158, dated 1728, entitled, "On his wife's 28th birthday" (she was b. Nov. 7, 1700, see p. 769, ii.), and with the note, "This poem was written for the birthday festival of the Countess, was sung by a company or coterie of friends, each member of which was indicated according to their circumstances at the time." It had previously appeared, without the first stanza, and this form, which begins, "Herz der göttlichen Natur," is noted at p. 517, i.

xv. Rath, Kraft, und Held, und Wunderbar. Christmas. Founded on Is. ix. 6. In his Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 25, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Christmas Thoughts," and dated 1721; and in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 827. In Knapp, 1845, p. 21. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 488, it begins with st. vi., "Mein alles! mein als alle Welt." Tr. as:—

My all things more than earth and sky. This is a tr. of st. vi., by C. G. Clemens, as No. 306 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In 1801 altered to "My all in all, my faithful Friend;" and to this in 1826, trs. of st. ii., vii.-ix., by P. Latrobe, were added (1886, No. 399). From this form a cento in 5 st. of l. m., beginning, "O Lord! Thou art my rock, my guide," was included in Dr. Martineau's Hys., 1840.

xvi. Ruht aus von eurer Mühe. Christian Church. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 232, as Du gestern und auch heute). 1st pub. in Appz. vi., circa 1737, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1183, in 8 st. of 8 l., entitled, "Hymn of the witnesses." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, st. iv. is given as No. 1042. Tr. as:—

■ Jesus Christ, most holy. This is a tr. of st. iv. by C. G. Clemens, as No. 487 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 807; 1886, No. 795, beginning, "Lord Jesus Christ") included in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866.

xvii. Seligs Volk der Zeugenwolk. Holy Communion. Written in 1739 (Knapp, 1845, p. 138, beginning, "Christi Blut, Die Segensfluth" and p. 266, "Selig Volk." 1st pub. in Appz. viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1340, in 14 st. of 8 l., entitled, "Hymn at the Feast of Love." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, as Nos. 1127 and 1422, the latter beginning, "Werther Tod und Wunden roth;" and including st. xi. ("Wisst ihr was? So heisst der Pass"), xiii., xiv. Tr. as:—

1. Would the world our passport see. This is a tr. of st. xi., xiii. as No. 1152 in the 1808 Suppl. to the Moravian H. Bk., of 1801 (1886, No. 895). Included as No. 212 in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841.

2. Flock of Grace, ye Witnesses. This is No. 40 in pt. iii. 1748 of the Moravian H. Bk.

3. Happy race of witnesses. By C. Kinchen as No. 551 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In 1886 four st. are given as No. 951, and the other two beginning, "Eat and rest at this great feast" (st. viii.), as No. 1022.

xviii. Was hätten wir für Freude oder Ehre. Repentance. Written in 1739 (Knapp, 1845, p. 139). 1st pub. in Appz. viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1349, and in 48 st. of 2 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 396, reduced to 19 stanzas. Tr. as:—

What Joy or Honour could we have. In full as No. 161 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742; abridged in 1789 to 12, and in 1801 to 7 st. The 1801 version, which represents st. i.-iv., viii., ix., xi. was included in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825; and with the trs. of st. iii., xi. omitted, and a hortatory stanza added, as No. 268 in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, No. 322, it begins with the tr. of st. iii., "None is so holy, pure, and just."

xix. Wenn sich die Kinder freuen. Christian Work. Written about 1752 (Knapp, 1845, p. 179, as "Wenn wir uns kindlich freuen"). Included as No. 2101 in the *London G. B. Included as No. 695 in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, beginning with st. ii., altered to "Töden ist dem Herrn erlaubt." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1715, it begins with st. iii., "Ehmal's solt'st gestorben sein," and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1835, p. 190) is marked as written on the death of Matthäus Linner in 1732. In Knapp, 1845, p. 101. Tr. as "Once the sentence justly sounded." By Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 1862, p. 92 (1884, p. 252).

xxx. O Liebe, die in fremde Noth. On Unity. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 94, dated 1725, and entitled, "On the Saviour's faithfulness." 1st pub. as No. 198 (b) in the 1725 Sammlung, in 18 st. of 4 l. In the London G. B., 1753, No. 1764, st. ix., x., beginning, "Der du noch in der letzten Nacht," were given as a separate hymn; and this form is repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 714, the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1037, &c. In Knapp, 1845, p. 70. The trs., all of st. ix., x., are: (1) "Lord Jesus, who that very night." By F. H. Møller, as st. ii., iii. of No. 387 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1836, No. 477, beginning, "Lord Jesus, in that"). (2) "Thou Who didst die for all and each." By Miss Cox, 1841, p. 147. (3) "O Thou, Who with Thy latest breath." By Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 66. (4) "Thou who in that bitter night." By Miss Warner, 1858, p. 436. (5) "Thou who in that last sad night." By Miss Fry, 1859, p. 151. (6) "Thou who upon that last sad night." In the Family Treasury, 1859, p. 200. (7) "O Thou who didst on that last night." By R. Massie in the British Herald, Feb. 1865, p. 28. (8) "O Thou, who on that last sad eve." By E. Massie, 1866, p. 69.

xxxi. O wie so glücklich wären wir. Love to Christ. On the blessedness of union with Christ. 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B. as No. 1237, and in 8 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 829, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1835, p. 186) marked as written for J. A. Rothe (p. 978, i.), and dated 1737. In Knapp, 1845, p. 236. Tr. as "How full our cup of joy would be." By Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Sept. 1865, p. 131, and in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

xxxii. Reiner Bräutigam meiner Seelen. Desire for Holiness. Written in 1721 (Knapp, 1845, p. 21). Included in the 2nd ed., circa 1728, of the Sammlung as No. 1001, and in the Christ-Catholisches Sing- und Bet-Büchlein, 1727, p. 133, in 30 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 798. Tr. as "Jesu, to Thee my heart I bow." This is a free tr. of st. i., x.-xii., xvi., xvii., by J. Wesley in Ps. & Hys., Charlestown, 1736-7, and Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 109). Repeated in the Wesley Hys. & Spir. Songs, 1753, Moravian H. Bk., 1754, Bayley's Sel., Manchester, 1789, Bateman's Cong. Psalmist, 1846.

xxxiii. Schau von deinem Thron. Supplication. Written in 1720 (Knapp, 1845, p. 14), and founded on the Lord's Prayer. In the Sammlung, 1725, No. 443, in 6 st. of 6 l. Tr. as "All glory to the Eternal Three." By J. Wesley in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 130).

xxxiv. Solche Leute will der König küssen. Humility. 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1241, and in 4 st. of 4 l. Mr. Müller informs me that it was written in 1738, and was dedicated to Eva Maria Immig née Ziegelbauer, who on March 5, 1740, became the wife of A. G. Spangenberg (p. 1070, i.). In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 842, st. ii., iii., are st. i., iv. of this hymn, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1835, p. 186) it is dated 1738. Knapp, 1845, p. 89 dates it 1728. The trs. are:—(1) "To such the King will give a kiss of love." This is No. 154 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, pt. ii., No. 62). (2) "His loving kindness those shall richly share." This is No. 508 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. (3) "Such the King will stoop to and embrace." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 310.

xxxv. Verliebter in die Sünderschaft. Love to Christ. 1st pub. in Appz. iii., circa 1737, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1072, in 4 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1103 (beginning "Verliebter in die sel'ge Schaar"), and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1835, p. 188), dated 1734. The trs. are: (1) "O Thou, whom sinners love, whose care." By J. Wesley, in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1863-72, vol. i., p. 169), as a "Prayer to Christ before the Sacrament." Included in the Churchman's Altar Manual, ed. 1883, p. 407. (2) "Thou, who with sinners smitten art." This is No. 146 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, pt. ii., No. 192).

xxxvi. Vor seinen Augen schweben. Living to Christ. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 233, entitled "Enoch's Life," and dated 1731. 1st pub. in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammlung, as No. 485, in 5 st. of 8 l., as a hymn on Holy Living. In the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 216, it begins "Vors Bräutigams Augen," and in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1557, it begins "Vor Jesu Augen." In the Hist. Nachricht to the 1778 (1835, p. 190), it is dated 1730, and marked as written for Theodora Countess Reuss (she was his cousin, née von Castell, and first love, but married Count Heinrich xxix. of Reuss-Ebersdorf, whose sister [see Nos. xii., xiv. above] became Zinzendorf's wife in 1722). In Knapp, 1845, p. 100. The text of 177- is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1188. In Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1865, No. 1635, dated Sept., 1731. Tr. as, "Beneath the eye of Jesus." In the British Herald, May, 1866, p. 267, and in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

xxxvii. Was sag' ich dir, die mit viel tausend Schmerzen. Penitence. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 122). 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1251, in 10 st. of 6 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, st. ii., x., beginning "Du treues Haupt! ich sag' es mit Empfinden," were included as No. 752. This form is tr. as "Oh, faithful God! with deep and sad emotion." By Mrs. Findlater, in H. L. L., 1862, p. 45 (1884, p. 211). [See also Appendix.] [J. M.]

Zion stands by hills surrounded. T. Kelly. [The Security of the Church.] 1st pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1806, in 5 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1853, No. 136). It is in C. U. in its full form, and also in centos, as:—

1. Every human tie may perish. This cento, beginning with st. ii., is given in a few American collections.

2. On the Rock of Ages founded. In the 1874 Supplement to the New Cong., No. 1216, is st. i., ii., iv., v. rewritten.

3. Zion stands with hills surrounded. This slightly altered text is in a few American hymn-books.

Taking the original text and these centos together, it is found that the use of this hymn is somewhat extensive. It is based on Ps. cxxv., 2, and is a vigorous hymn on the Security of the Church of Christ. [J. J.]

Ζοφεράς τρικυμίας. St. Anatolius [Christ Stilling the Tempest.] The Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly, in his ed. of Dr. Neale's Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1882 (4th ed.) says:—

"These Stichera are not in use in the Church Service. They are probably taken by Dr. Neale from the work of some German antiquarian. Sundays of the First Tone are the 1st after Easter, and the 2nd, 10th, 18th and every eighth following Sunday after Pentecost until the Sunday next before Easter."

It is more probable, however, that Dr. Neale got his text from the "dateless Constantinopolitan book" from whence he said he got his "Art thou weary" (see p. 632, ii.) than that he secured it "from the work of some German antiquarian." Dr. Neale's tr., "Fierce was the wild billow," was pub. in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed "Stichera for a Sunday of the First Tone." It was included in the Parish H. Bk., 1863; and subsequently in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. In some hymnals it reads, "Fierce the wild billow was," and in others "Fierce was the Galilee," but Neale's text is that which is most extensively known. [J. J.]

Zwick, Johann, s. of Conrad Zwick, Rathsherr at Constanz, was b. at Constanz, circa 1496. He studied law at the Universities of Basel, Freiburg, Paris, and Padua (where he graduated LL.D.), and was for some time tutor in law at Freiburg and at Basel. In 1518 he entered the priesthood, and in 1522 was appointed parish priest of Riedlingen on the Upper Danube. Being accused of Lutheran tendencies, he was forbidden in 1523 to officiate, and in 1525 his living was formally taken from him. He returned to Constanz, and was appointed by the Council in 1527 as one of the town preachers. Here he laboured unweariedly, caring specially for the children, the poor, and the refugees, till 1542. In Aug., 1542, the people of Bischofszell, in Thurgau, having lost their pastor by the pestilence, besought Constanz to send them a preacher; and Zwick, proceeding there, preached and visited the sick till he himself fell a victim to the pestilence, and d. there Oct. 23, 1542 (Koch, ii., 76; Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xvii. 578, &c.).

Zwick was one of the leaders of the Swiss Reformation. He ranks next to Blaurer as the most important of the early hymn-writers of the Reformed Church. His hymns are collected in Wackernagel, iii., Nos. 672-696. The best appeared in the Niwo gsangbüchle von vil schönen Psalmen und geistlichen Liedern, pub. at Zurich, 1536 (2nd ed. 1540 is the earliest now extant), of which he was the chief editor, and which was the first hymn-book of the Reformed Church.

The only hymn by Zwick which has passed into English is:—

Auf diesen Tag so denken wir. Ascension. This probably appeared in the Niwo gsangbüchle, Zürich, 1536; and is certainly in the 2nd ed. of 1540, from which it is quoted in Wackernagel, iii. p. 608, in 5 st. of 7 l., with "Alleluia." It is also in (2) the Strassburg Psalmen und geistliche Lieder, 1537, f. 99b, and in (3) S. Salminger's (J. Aberlin's?) Der ganz Psalter, &c. (Zürich?), 1537, f. 146 [Brit. Mus.]. In each case it is entitled "Another hymn on the Ascension of Christ," while in 1540 the first line is given as "Uff disen tag so denckend wir," in 1537 (2) as "Uf disen tag so denckē wir," and in 1537 (3) as "Auf disen tag so denckē wir." It is the finest of Zwick's hymns, and its spirit of joyful faith, its conciseness, and its beauty of form, have kept it in use among the Lutherans as well as among the Reformed. It is No. 153 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. The trs. are:—

1. Raise your devotion, mortal tongues. This is noted under Wegelin, J. (q. v.).

2. To-day our Lord went up on high. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. iii., in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 46. Repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870, and the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1881.

3. Aloft to heaven, we songs of praise. This is a free tr., in 4 st. of 6 l., by Dr. G. Walker, in his Hys. from German, 1860, p. 30. [J. M.]

Zyma vetus expurgetur. Adam of St. Victor. [Easter.] Gautier, in his ed. of Adam's Oeuvres poetiques, 1881, p. 42, gives this from a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat. Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and a Missal of St. Genevieve, c. 1239. It is also found in an early 14th cent. Paris Missal in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 146 b); in a Sarum Missal, c. 1370, and a York Missal, c. 1390, both in the Bodleian; in a St. Gall ms. No. 383, of the 13th or 14th cent., &c. The printed text is given with full notes in Trench, ed. 1864, p. 165; also in Daniel ii., p. 69; Kehrein, No. 91; D. S. Wrangham's The Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881, i. p. 80, and others. Of this grand sequence Clichtovaeus says with accuracy:—

"The wonderful mysteries of the Resurrection of our Lord are here set forth, as foreshadowed in the Old Testament by many types, and through the goodness of God explained more clearly to us in the New. And of a truth this prose is almost divine, embracing much in few words, and all distinctly taken from the Sacred Scriptures."

In this eulogy Abp. Trench agrees. The explanation of the Scriptural allusions is given by Abp. Trench, Dr. Neale in his Med. Hys., and Mr. Wrangham in his Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor. In the Sarum use this was the Sequence on Monday in Easter Week; Paris on the Tuesday; York on the Friday; St. Victor and St. Genevieve on the octave of Easter.

[J. M.]

The trs. of this Sequence include :—

1. Purge we out the ancient leaven. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediaeval Hys., &c., 1851, p. 88, in 13 st. of 6 l., the text used being that in Daniel ii., 69. Interesting notes are added explanatory of various and in some cases obscure references in the sequence to figures applied by the early Fathers to Christ and His holy work; and also of the typical teaching of certain historical events recorded in Holy Scripture and referred to in the sequence.

2. Purge out the leaven old of sin. By E. H. Plumptre, made for and included in the Hymnary, 1872, in two parts of 7 st., and 2 additional stanzas to be sung at the end of each part. Pt. ii. begins "Shadows of good the law doth show." This rendering is less literal than Dr. Neale's, and the obscure passages are omitted. Dean Plumptre tr. from the Sarum Missal.

Other trs. are :—

1. Let the old leaven be purged out. By C. B. Pearson in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868; and his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871.

2. Purge the old leaven out, that we. By C. B. Pearson in his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871.

3. Purge the old leaven all away. By D. T. Morgan, 1871.

4. Purge away the former leaven. D. S. Wrangham, 1881.
