FREE TRADEIOR!

The votes were falling thick and fast,
When towards the distant White House passed
A youth who bore mid snow and ice,
A banner with the Strange Device:
Free Tradeior!

There in the twilight cold and gray,
Lifeless, but beautiful he lay;
And from the sky, serene and far,
A voice fell like a falling star,
Free Tradeior!

PROVERB—It never Blaines, but it pours.

SPEAKING OF BROOKLYN, something might be said perhaps as to the uncrowned Kings.

THE DEADEST MAN is A. S. Hewitt; with the exception, perhaps, of George Jones and Larry Godkin.

BOSS McLAUGHLIN and President Cleveland are very innocent, unsuspecting men; but they do not seem to understand each other.

SENATOR EDMUNDS was once a fine man for the stump; but Senator Edmunds has much frost on his cheek and at the base of his venerable ear.

PROBABLY NO MAN did better service for the Republican party in the late canvass than William Evarts. We do not remember what William did, and that is why we say so.

BET YOUR LIFE, if you happen to have one—and if not bet that of some other individual—that there are no stalwarts or half-breeds in the Republican party now—there are only Republicans.

THOSE REPUBLICANS who had nothing to say during the late canvass will be very beautiful if they have nothing to say with respect to the result of it. What they want to do is to retain their sweet silence and their mysterious serenity.

THE JUDGE still believes in the wife of the reigning president; and if she does not remain the mistress of the white-house it will be because the wife of General Harrison is just as good and the more fortunate lady for that place.

TO THE VICTORS THE SPOILS.

THE JUDGE does not expect that any mugwump federal office-holder will resign, for all mugwumps are in place under the auspices of the Almighty; but every Democratic office-holder who has self-respect will have his resignation at the white-house on the 4th of next March, to take effect as soon as President Harrison can fill the consequent vacancy. That is civil-service reform as the people look at it.

HOPE.

THE ENGLISH PRESS is bitter against Cleveland; and as that was the largest printing establishment that supported Grover the dear old boy has special reason to be lonely. But, as the JUDGE has repeatedly remarked, the politics of this country are not run by the English, and perhaps the enmity of the English press will be a good card for Grover in 1892.

THE RETURN TO REASON.

THE great Republican victory is not a political one; it is a national one. The policy of Mr. Cleveland and his advisers to subordinate the country to the interests of the English free-trade policy, the intent by the proposed extradition treaty to make the United States simply a British province for the arrest of political refugees, this and the humiliating abandonment of the commonest courtesies of civilization through the fishery proposal, were sufficient alone to produce the overwhelming victory just gained.

The Democracy called for the ayes and nays. Nearly a quarter of a million federal officers and appointees volunteered, or were detailed to "persuade" the jury. The response to the appeal, to the patriotism and common sense of the American people, sent a "no" across the continent, growing in volume as it rolled; shrill and piping in little Delaware, roaring in Pennsylvania, booming in New York, and more and more sonorous as it gathered, and reverberated west. Its greeting was echoed back from the valleys of far Oregon. Even the sycophantic cry of the conceited mugwump was drowned, as its weak and shriveled snarl died on the lips that made it.

Industries menaced by the choke of the Democratic nightmare, relieved, will rise again. A definite tariff policy, replacing the dread of an unknown one, will infuse fresh blood and new vigor into our recently paralyzed manufactories. The Republican party is pledged to a protective, not a prohibitory tariff, to a policy that will save the investor from ruin, and assure labor a liberal reward. Its civil service will be based on integrity and capacity, rather than scholastic responses to a Franklin-square literary catechism. It must be further conceded that the Republican party has among its supporters, and for official selection, all the needed honesty and experience necessary for the management of lesser, or larger, national affairs.

The Republican policy that controlled for twenty-five years, and gave to the world a spectacle of the greatest internecine contest, in which the vanquished, equal with the victors, were the winners, added the financial phenomenon of paying without pain, oppression or suffering, a vast portion of the public debt. It reduced the burden of interest on the rapidly reducing remainder from nearly seven and one-half to two and one-half per cent. It made a paper "government promise" as good as gold, and through its protective policy made this possible by the retention here of untold millions, which by a free, or freer-trade plan, would to our own impoverishment have been transferred abroad.

Before the Republican party lie many problems yet to be solved; the fair and honorable adjustment of our and Canadian interests; the solution of the "negro status" in the south—an adjustment that must be made without harm to the black, or embarrassment or hurt to the white; a continued protection to the products of American labor, and an equally needed restriction and protection against foreign labor itself. It is expected that the party heretofore successful in its Herculean labors will be both wise and fortunate in its future work.

J. A.

LET US BE HAPPY.

THE TARIFF will be reformed by a Republican house of representatives and a Republican senate, and the reformation will be indorsed by a Republican president. It will be satisfactory to the people, and that will mean Republican rule for many years. Thanks to President Cleveland; and a mellow Thanksgiving, a merry Christmas, and a happy new-year to the United States and all the rest of the world.

AFTER HARRISON.

THE PRESIDENT to be elected four years hence will come from the west. New York has had more than her share of the chief political honor; and if Harrison is not good for two terms some other western man will be good for one. This seems sad for David B. Hill; though, to be sure, he is young enough to wait for the Democratic resurrection that will come around—in about forty years.

THE AMERICAN IDEA.

WHAT THIS COUNTRY most wants is more Republican votes down south and more Democratic votes up north. That means an abolishment of sectionalism, and the adoption of broader, nobler and more patriotic politics. The solid south has been broken. Now let us break up the solid north and have our national elections on national issues.

THE UNCROWNED KING.

THE JUDGE is going to make no cabinet for President Harrison. The JUDGE half suspects that in that new president, judging him from his excellent speeches and his general good sense, the country, as the JUDGE said some weeks ago, has secured a new Abraham Lincoln, and that there is nothing left but the opportunity to demonstrate that fact. But, of course, Mr. Blaine will be the head of the cabinet if he wants that place. He will go abroad if he wants that distinction. He is the hero of this splendid Republican victory. He won it when some of the best of the other Republican orators put their tongues to the roof of the mouth and proclaimed nothing but their majestic silence. The JUDGE only hopes that Mr. Blaine is sufficiently well and sufficiently ambitious to take a large share of the victory he won.

IT IS BARELY POSSIBLE that Colonel Bob Ingersoll thinks he is a bigger man than Major Blaine or General Benjamin Harrison; but the colonel is a poet, and his magnificent imagination ran away with him three or four years ago.

FROM CATFISH TO QUEUE; OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A HEATHEN.

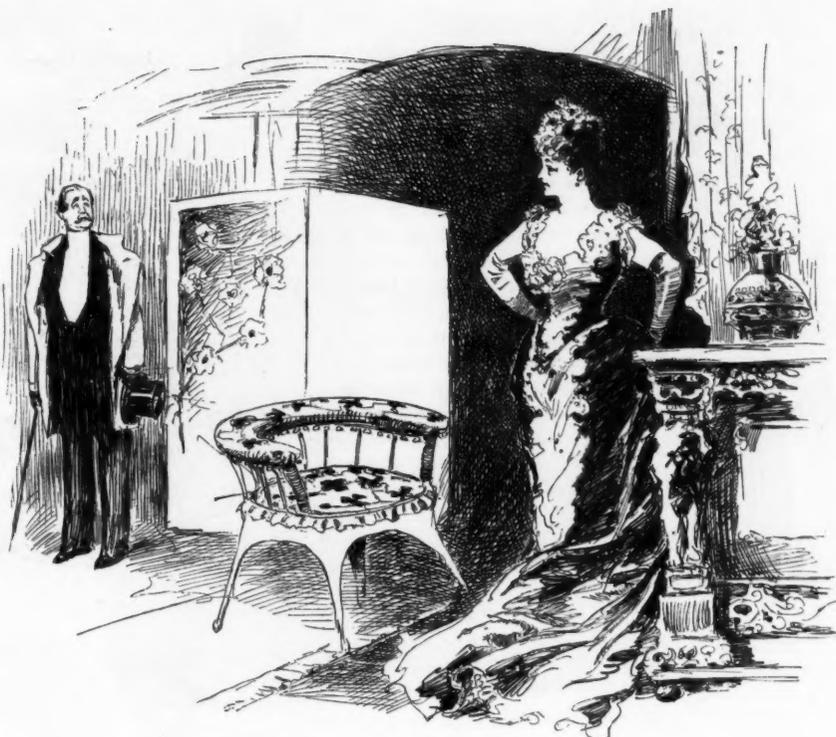

A YAWP FOR HARRISON.

HURRAH FOR HARRISON! May he rule in peace;
Win every time, prosperity increase.
He saw within the torchlight of his boom,
Shining so bright and like a summer moon,
A scribbler writing on a JUDGE's pad.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Harrison glad,
And to the person in the gloom he said:
"What writest thou?" The penman raised his head,
And with a look as though he could afford
No time to waste, replied, "I here record
The names of those who for protection roared."
"And is mine one?" Ben Harrison inquired.
"Yea, surely so." Our grandson spoke more low,
With meaning smile, and said, "I pray you, too,
Write me as one who'll stay and see this through."
Reporter wrote and vanished; the next night
He came around and seemed to be "all right,"
And showed the names whom voters polled the best,
And, lo! the JUDGE's name led all the rest.

PEARL EYTINGE.

BARBERS' HIGH TARIFF AT UTICA, N. Y.

A UTICA Democrat on the second day after the election complained thus:
"These confounded barbers are now charging 20 instead of 10 cents a shave—the result of your senseless victory."
"What! How in thunder can they do that?"
"Because all Democrats are wearing such long faces it takes twice the usual time to shave them."

THE LAST AND UNKINDEST CUT.

MR. HENDERSON (rejected)—"It grieves me more than I can say to have a parting like this."
MISS ECCLESON—"Why don't you get a wig, then, and let the parting come at the side? I think myself it would be more becoming."

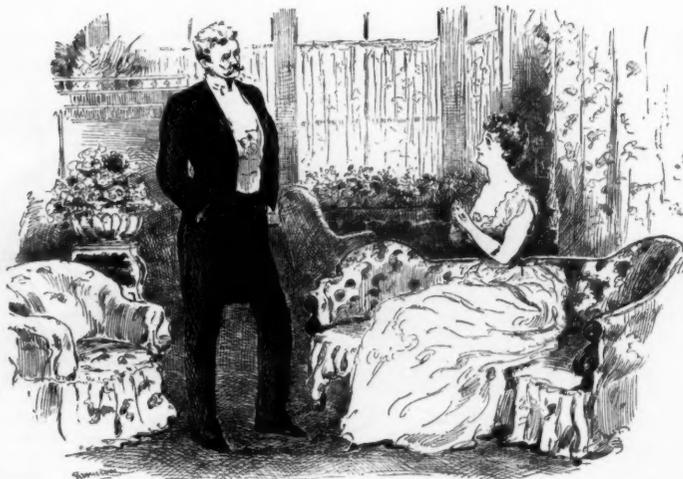

M. FOX KANE thinks she is raising the last four letters of her name, and it may be—it may be.

WHEN KING MILAN got his divorce he felt that it was a righteous triumph over wickedness almost as bad as his own.

THERE HAS BEEN but one man with more self-sufficiency than Father Abram Hewitt, and the trouble killed him some years before he was born.

HIS OBJECTION.

MISS JELLYBY—"And now that I have said 'Yes,' my dear Claude, I wish you would ask papa at once; and while you are about it you might say a word to mamma, and—er—Aunt Mary has been so kind, you know; just mention it to her and ask if she is willing; and then Uncle George might—"
CLAUDE—"Pardon me, Miss Jellyby; isn't it a little rough on a fellow to make him secure a wife on the instalment plan?"

A FAMILY DIFFERENCE.

MISS DAISY BUFFINGTON tried to entertain her Aunt Hepsibah, from Three Mile Junction, last week, but lamentably failed in impressing the old lady with her niece's sense of right and wrong. They boarded a train on the elevated railroad, and all the way down town Miss Daisy did her best to point out the objects of interest to be seen from the car windows, and explain to her kinswoman why such little accessories to the ensemble of the city as the Phelps statue and a west-sidewalk Sixth avenue dude were allowed to exist. On reaching the Battery the statue of Liberty was pointed out, and the rapt expression on the good old lady's face was a study. She gazed and pondered and pondered and gazed, and finally broke out with, "For mercy's sake! how did they float it out thar?"

"Why, auntie!" replied her convoy, "they built it in sections, just as, for instance, they built this elevated railroad that we just came down on."

"The what?" exclaimed Aunt Hepsibah as she threw up her hands.

"Why, the elevated railroad; what is the matter, auntie?"

"Margaret D. Buffington, if you mean ter say that you've taken your unsuspectin' aunt, who's been the secretary of the Three Mile Junction temp'rance club for goin' on thirty year, on anythin' elevated she's goin' ter leave you, an' leave you to once!" And she did, on a belt-line car which connected with the Grand Central station.

BUSINESS AND PLEASURE.

 He doesn't begin to snore until the prayers commence, and he has trained his snore so that it sounds for all the world like "Amen."
 He thus combines business and pleasure.

AN ANCIENT FABLE.

The venerable sage was dying, and in a feeble voice he called his sons to his bedside. One of them was exceedingly fresh, and he carried in his hand a bundle of rods stoutly bound with a cord.
 "What hast thou there?" demanded the dying sage.
 "It is a bundle of rods emblematic of the union of thy sons," said the fresh but blushing youth.
 "Unbind them!" said the sage, "and each take one and belabor his brother."
 "What is the teaching of thy robust and blister-raising symbol?" asked the unsalted but calm youth.
 "Ah!" said the sire, "the teaching of Cobb's elementary spelling-book is a thing of the past and the symbol bu'sted. My method will create activity and get out the whole Democratic vote;" and winking laboriously with his left eye the old man died, and it was in New York city in 1888.

MR. BRINGBACK—"How does the coat hit you, Charley?"

Echoes

HE was handsome and gay; 'twas a fair summer night,
The moon kindly hiding its too brilliant light.
"I love you! I love you! I love you so well,
How madly I love you I never can tell."
I blushing sighed as I bent low my head,
Yet listened in rapture to all that he said.

But hark! what was that? 'twas a singular sound—
A kiss on the sly, 'twas a kiss I'll be bound;
And pausing, we listened—"But you are not free;
It is wrong, it is wicked to make love to me;
And, on second thought, as I calmly reflect,
I fancy my husband, perhaps, might object."

"'Tis rather ridiculous, do you not see?
While you have been sitting here, talking to me,
The man just beyond is my own precious lord
The lady's your wife, it is she on my word!
It's perfectly shocking; she should not forget
That she is a wife! and he called her 'my pet."

"I thought him as true as a star in its course;
Well, I've half a mind—yes, I'll get a divorce.
He thinks he is hidden there in the dim light;
I hear it again, they are saying good-night!
Just look at the wretch, see the white on his coat!"
"My dear, you forget—we are in the same boat."

Farmer's wife—"Why, certainly, my good man. And while you're about it, here's a piece of soap and a towel to quench a little of that dirt on your face and hands before winter sets in."

Tramp—"Thanks, madame; but I make it a rule never to quench more than one thing at a time."

EARTH IN THE FEMINE GENDER.

IT MUST be conceded that there is a fair show for the scattered belief that the earth is a great animal, her veins the rivers, her heart the ocean, and we her parasites. Her traits are most human: she is gleeful when the sun shines, and puts forth a thousand flowery graces to attract his gaze; her airs are coquettish; she knows how to weep, and is often terrible in her throes of agony. She has a fire in her bosom, and our own bodies are composed only of the minerals and juices derived from her.

She sleeps, and wakes in a tangle of dreams to be dispelled by the sun's ardent kisses. She has her periods of increase and her periods of rest and inaction, when she veils her face from the sun.

She has a handmaid in waiting, who ministers to her fancies when she turns from her lord in excess of happiness and desire of repose. She has a woman's true love of color, and does what cannot always be said of a woman—she never makes a mistake. Tender grays and greens for spring, with garniture of sweet, pale-tinted flowers; in June a deeper tone, with languid roses on her breast and scarlet poppies on her eyelids. As autumn draws near she snatches a handful of remaining colors from her wardrobe and decks herself in russet, purple, crimson, gold and brown. For her period of penance and denial she has left only the passionless white robe or the soft gray veil of the convent nun.

Above all things she has a fondness for birds for trimmings; but soft, my feminine friend! she has never been known to have a scarlet songster skinned for her wearing, and hides all dead and sightless things as soon as possible, leaving it to her swarming parasites to slay and eat or wear each other as they will.

Is she not alive? The glad blood bubbles in her veins, and her great heart throbs unceasingly. Does she not love, and is she not beloved? What, then, is that attraction in the sun which draws her ever, keeping her true to her orbit, with never a faltering step?

CAP-AND-BELLS.

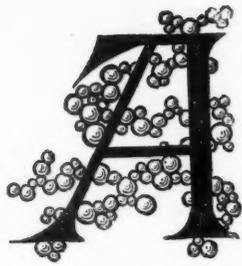

NOT HIS FIRST ENGAGEMENT.

"This is a lovely ring, my dear," she said, "and it's a thousand pities it's a little too small."

"Never mind," he returned. "That's the one I once gave Gracie. The next time I call I will bring you up the one Jennie had."

A KISS.

POUT and a parting of lips
as they touch—
That's a kiss in the abstract.
It does not seem much;
But where is the language
can rightly express it?
What letters can sound it, to help you to guess it?
What simile suggest, or what fancy reveal
The mysterious bliss it can cause one to feel?

Here nature assuredly won a diploma
For fragrance of flavor and perfect aroma.

A kiss is electrical! comes with a start
That tingles a delicate shock to the heart,
And sets the eyes twinkling with rapturous delight,
Like stars in the sky of a clear, frosty night.
When 'tis over the ecstasy clings to you yet;
'Tis a joy to remember and never forget.
All pleasure condensed in an instant of bliss
Can but partly describe what's contained in a kiss.

"Whenever you like, Mr. Dukes," was the demure reply.

SENTENCES PASSED BY THE JUDGE.

No, a man is not apt to get too much religion, but he needs to keep a lookout for counterfeits.

We are all dissatisfied. The only difference is that some of us sit down in the squalor of our dissatisfaction, while others make a ladder of it.

A mole furnished with a spy-glass or a twenty-foot telescope would still be unable to determine the question of the moon's habitation, or even to distinguish it from green cheese.

We all pray—religious, irreligious and unreligious, good, bad and indifferent. Caliban prayed to Setebos, the Hebrews prayed to Jehovah, and the modern prays to the Almighty—dollar.

The crank is a very necessary wheel in life's machinery. The stolid average man may afford to keep an even pulse, for it is the man that lives in one idea who keeps the world agog.

Those who appear to be most anxious to become angels and spend the remainder of eternity in pouring forth uninterrupted song are generally those who have least power for vocal melody.

There may be a possibility of getting more religion than one can adequately contain, but this is true only of what may be called the foreign article. That developed internally rarely overgrows its capacity.

There is a rumor to the effect that an old man with a lighted lantern is frequently seen on the streets of an old New England town in broad daylight. There can be no doubt that this is the re-embodied spirit of Diogenes continuing his search. If he succeeds in finding an honest man he should have the specimen carefully mounted and placed within a glass case, not so much for the purpose of exhibiting it as a curiosity as for the purpose of keeping it so.

Nothing is more characteristic of the Chinese as a nation than the habitual reverence with which they speak of the dead. When an emperor dies, "The mountain has collapsed;" and when a prince departs this life, "The dream is over." Some of our western phrases are equally characteristic. The announcement, "He has kicked the bucket;" or, "He has handed in his checks," may not bear on its bosom the flowery fragrance of eastern sentiment, but such expressions are certainly characteristic and cannot fail to be impressive.

LOG CABIN GRANDMOTHERS.

An Indiana doctor has recently discovered in a common weed whose medicinal qualities have never before been suspected, a valuable remedy for bowel disorders. There is nothing particularly strange about this fact. Nothing.

And yet the very simplicity of the new discovery would, with some, seem to throw just doubt upon its power. To make it one has only to pour hot water over the leaves of the plant. In its preparation no vast chemical works and appliances are required.

Is it to be wondered at, since such plainly prepared remedies are accounted as of such great merit in these days, that such wonderful results attended our grandmothers, whose teas and infusions of roots and herbs and balsams, have exerted so great an influence in the maintenance of health and life?

Certainly not!
The greatest pieces of machinery strike us most by their exceeding simplicity.

The secret of the success of grandmother's remedies was their freshness and simplicity. Every autumn found the little Log Cabin abundantly supplied with fresh leaves, roots, herbs and balsams, which were carefully dried and prepared and laid away for use. Dreading to call a doctor because of the expensiveness of his farm-made trips, they immediately gave attention to the disease and routed it before it had gained a foothold.

The old Log Cabin grandmother, in cap and high tucked gown, and perchance bespectacled in rough silver, her weary feet encased in “hum-made” slippers, is the dear sweet nurse who rises to the view of many a man and woman to-day as the early years of life pass in retrospect.

The secrets of grandmother's medicines were rapidly being forgotten, and the world was not growing in the grace of good health. To restore the lost art of Log Cabin healing has been for years the desire of a well known philanthropist in whose ancestral line were eight “godly physicians” of the old style, men who never saw a medical college save in the woods, nor a “medical diploma” except that inscribed on the faces of healthy and long lived patients. Much time and money was expended in securing the old formulæ, which to-day are put forth as Log Cabin remedies:—sarsaparilla, hops and buchu, cough and consumption, and several others, by Warner, whose name is famous and a standard for medical excellence all over the globe. These oldest, newest and best preparations have been recognized as of such superexcellence that to-day they can be found with all leading dealers.

When Col. Ethan Allen was making history along our northern frontier during the revolution, Col. Seth Warner, the fighting Sheridan of that army, who was a skilful natural doctor, used many such remedies, notably like the Log Cabin extract, sarsaparilla and cough and consumption remedy, among the soldiers with famous success.

They are a noble inheritance which we of to-day may enjoy to the full, as did our forefathers, and using, reap, as did they, the harvest of a life full of days and full of usefulness.

“Say,” said the subordinate to the editor of the new paper, “the Bugle here says our first issue gives evidence of no more brains than a sheet of fly-paper, and that the wax dummy who edits it ought to have embarked in the fish business.”

“The Bugle man,” returned the editor of the new paper, with some warmth, “is a perambulating insane asylum, and hasn't brains enough to sit on a board and watch a game of base ball. The Bugle is about the poorest apol!”

“Oh, by the way,” interrupted the subordinate, “I've got 'em mixed. It is the Banner that has made the uncomplimentary remark. The Bugle gives us a good notice—says our initial number fairly scintillates with brilliant and original ideas and bears the impress of genius in every line.”

“Clip the notice and run it in under the head of ‘Praise from Sir Hubert,’” said the pleased editor.—Norristown Herald.

HAS USED THEM FOR 15 YEARS

Ira J. Griffin, Bookkeeper First National Bank, Sing Sing, N. Y., writes:

"I have been using Alcock's Porous Plasters for the last fifteen years in my family, and can conscientiously recommend them as invaluable when applied where pain is to be relieved. Two years ago I contracted pneumonia from a heavy cold, and during my convalescence, and in the winter months since, have worn one on each lung across my back and have experienced great benefit therefrom, and was relieved from a threatened return in less than twenty-four hours."

Warner's Log Cabin Remedies—old-fashioned, simple compounds, used in the days of our hardy forefathers, are "old timers" but "old reliable." They comprise a "Sarsaparilla," "Hops and Buchu Remedy," "Cough and Consumption Remedy," "Hair Tonic," "Extract" for External and Internal Use, "Plasters," "Rose Cream," for Catarrh, and "Liver Pills." They are put up by H. H. Warner & Co., proprietors of Warner's Safe Remedies, and promise to equal the standard value of those great preparations. All druggists keep them.

TODYCRAFT OF NEW YORK—"Get out of my house you dirty lazy tramp."
BOGUS LORD—"My sister, Lady Foolem led me to expect a better reception from the Todyocracy of New York."

EXCLUSIVE TODYCRAFT—"Your sister Lady Foolem! Heavens what have I done? O, I humbly beg a thousand pardons. Honor me so much as to walk into my poor house."

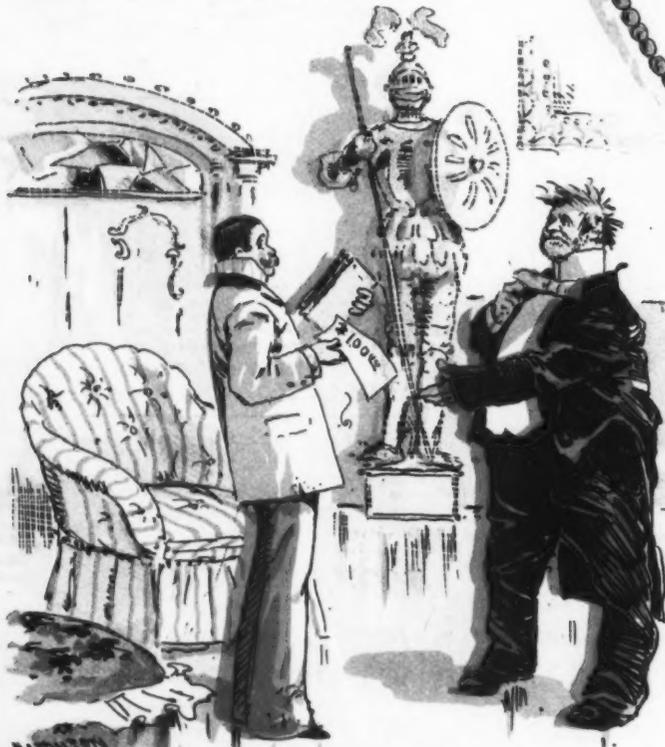

EXCLUSIVE TODYCRAFT—"Really me lord I'm almost ashamed to have you partake of this frugal repast, but your visit was wholly unexpected."

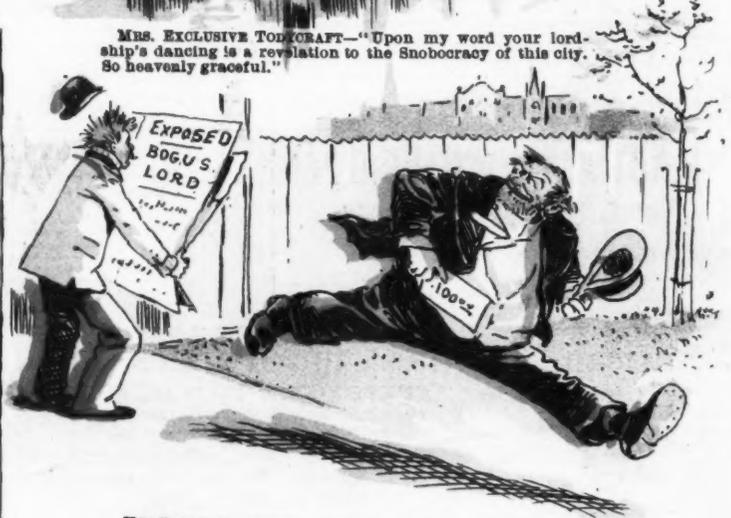

MISS TODYCRAFT (softly)—"Ah, me lord who could withstand your lordships charms—I'm yours forever!"

MRS. EXCLUSIVE TODYCRAFT—"Upon my word your lordship's dancing is a revelation to the Snobocracy of this city. So heavenly graceful!"

HIS BOGUS LORDSHIP—"Yaw, I wonder what's de matter with that stoopid banker o' mine. Just let me have another hundred, Tody—old feller."

HIS BOGUS LORDSHIP—"Thanks awfully. Lady Foolem will be delighted to have you call when you go abroad—ta, ta, see yer later."
