NATIONAL CENSUS OF IRAN

REPORT ON THE NUMBER AND DISTRIBUTION OF THE INHABITANTS FOR IRAN, THE CENSUS PROVINCES,
THE CENSUS DISTRICTS, DEHESTANS, CITIES, AND VILLAGES: NOVEMBER 1956

Introduction

After thoroughly testing enumeration and processing techniques in widely scattered areas of Iran, the Imperial Government in accordance with His Imperial Majesty's wishes conducted the first nationwide census of Iran in November 1956. The enumeration began on November 1 and was completed in all areas by November 16. A total of 26,836 enumerators and supervisors participated in the census, visiting every household in the country and recording the desired information about each member of the household. Most of the enumerators and supervisors were either school teachers or students in the 11th and 12 grades of secondary school. Training classes were conducted in each census district by the local civil registrars who in turn were trained in Tehran. The civil registrars also arranged for publicity and supervised the collection of data in their districts.

The complete results of the census have been published in a series of statistical bulletins for each Census District and in a two volume national summary. This report is volume one of the national summary and presents data on the number of inhabitants in Iran, the Census Provinces, the Census Districts, Dehestans, cities, and villages. This volume is supplemented by volume two which presents data on the characteristics of the population in Iran, the Census Provinces, the Census Districts, cities, and the rural areas.

Description*

Population of Iran: The population of Iran in November 1956 was about 18,955,000 persons consisting of about 9,645,000 males and 9,310,000 females or about 104 males for every 100 females.

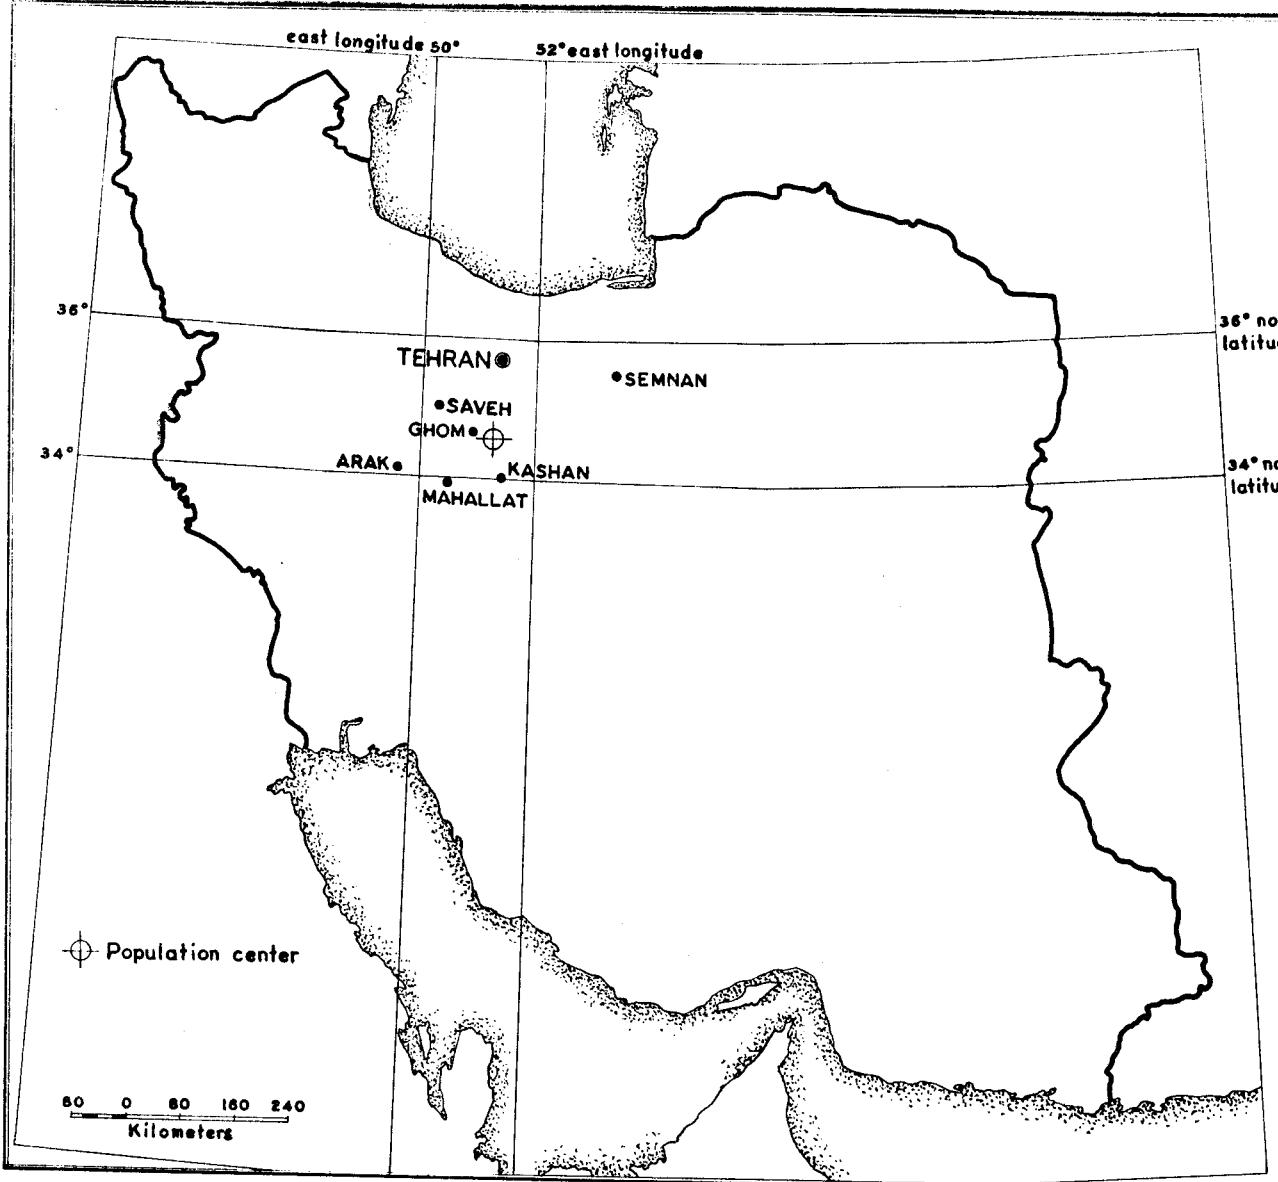

Center of Population: These 18,955,000 Iranians were so distributed that the center of population in Iran was approximately at 34° 30' north latitude and 51° 19' east longitude or about 15 kilometers south and 30 kilometers east of Ghom city.

Population of Census Provinces: The population of Iran was concentrated in the northern, north-central, western, and southwestern Census Provinces coinciding with the location of the large cities of Iran as follows:

Region	Percent of total population
North and North-central Iran (Central, Gilan, Mazandaran-Gorgan, and East Azarbeyjan Census Provinces)	43.1
Western Iran (West Azarbeyjan, Kordestan, and Kermanshah Census Provinces)	14.0
Southwestern Iran (Khoozestan-Lorestan and Fars-Gulf Ports Census Provinces)	17.9
Central Iran (Esfahan-Yazd and Kerman Census Provinces)	12.2
Eastern Iran (Khorasan and Baloochestan-Sistan Census Provinces)	12.9

Area and density: The gross land area of Iran in 1956 was 1,648,000 square kilometers which was divided by Regions as follows:

Region	Percent of total area in Iran
North and North-central Iran (Central, Gilan, Mazandaran-Gorgan, and East Azarbeyjan Census Provinces)	20.5
Western Iran (West Azarbeyjan, Kordestan, and Kermanshahan Census Provinces)	7.8
Southwestern Iran (Khozestan-Lorestan and Fars-Gulf Ports Census Provinces)	16.2
Central Iran (Esfahan-Yazd and Kerman Census Provinces)	25.6
Eastern Iran (Khorasan and Baloochestan-Sistan Census Provinces)	29.9

For Iran the population per square kilometer was 12 as compared with 1956 estimates of 11 persons per square kilometer in Iraq, 32 in Turkey, 9 in the USSR, 19 in Afghanistan, 88 in Pakistan, and 2 in Saudi Arabia.*

The population density was highest in the two Census Provinces bordering the western coasts of the Caspian Sea and, of course, in the Central Province because of the heavy concentration of population in Tehran city. The average density for these three provinces was 35 persons per square kilometer. The next densest area for the Provinces of Iran included the tier of four western Census Provinces with an average density of 19 persons per square kilometer. The least dense area, of course, was the eastern two-thirds of Iran consisting of those Provinces with sizeable segments of the central desert areas (Loot and Kavir Deserts). These six Provinces had an average density of 6.

There was, of course, considerable variation in the population density among the Census Districts comprising a given Census Province as well as variation among the areas comprising a given Census District. The densest District was Tehran (243 persons per square kilometer) followed by Bandar Pahlavi (207 persons per square kilometer), Abadan (171), and Khorramshahr (160 persons per square kilometer). Census Districts containing the other large cities of Iran also contained less dense territory so that their average density fell below that of the Districts listed above. With the exception of Jask the ten least dense Census Districts all bordered on the great central deserts and had less than 3 persons per square kilometer. These 10 Districts in ascending order of density are as follows:

Tabass	0.6	Persons per square kilometer
Na'in	0.8	Persons per square kilometer
Zahedan	1.1	Persons per square kilometer
Shahrood	1.5	Persons per square kilometer
Birjand	1.7	Persons per square kilometer
Saravan	1.8	Persons per square kilometer
Iranshahr	1.9	Persons per square kilometer
Zarande Kerman	1.9	Persons per square kilometer
Jask	2.0	Persons per square kilometer
Ardestan	2.3	Persons per square kilometer
Sabzevaran	2.5	Persons per square kilometer

Sex distribution: In Iran there were approximately 104 males for every hundred females ranging from about 100 males per hundred females in the Gilan and Khozestan-Lorestan Census Provinces to 109 in the Central Census Province. The latter undoubtedly reflects the heavy immigration of young men to the Tehran area where there were 112 males for every hundred females. Among the Census Districts, of course, there was considerable variation in the ratios of males to females.

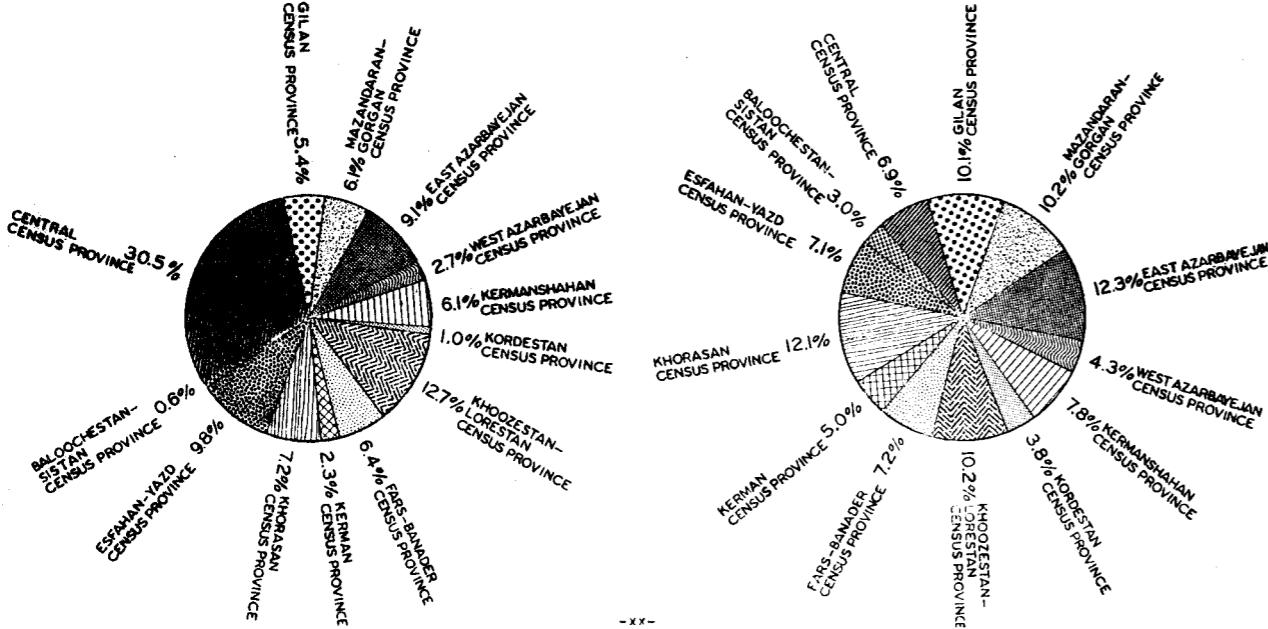

Urban-Rural Residence: In November 1956 there were 186 places in Iran with 5000 or more population. Almost one-third (31.4%) of the population were living in these 186 urban areas of Iran. Most of the urban dwellers, of course, were in the Central Province which alone accounted for 30 percent of Iran's urban population of which Tehran city provided 25 percent. The balance of the urban population was largely concentrated in the Census Provinces of Khozestan-Lorestan (31%), Esfahan-Yazd (10%), and East Azarbeyejan (9%). The Provinces with the smallest share of the urban population included Baloochestan-Sistan (1%), Kordestan (1%), Kerman (2%), and West Azarbeyejan (3%). However, although the Central Province had the largest number and proportion of urban population, it only ranked sixth, which it shared with Khorasan and Kermanshah, with respect to number of included urban places as follow:

Census Province	Number of urban places
Esfahan-Yazd	30
Mazandaran-Gorgan	23
