Hon. R. McBride, Having Utterly Failed in "Better Terms" Mission, Seeks Credit Not Belonging to Him

Unfortunately for British Columbia, her case for "better terms" was entrusted to poor advocate. Premier McBride has failed all along the line.

The Imperial parliament will pass the amendment to the British North America Act which Sir Wilfrid Laurier backed up by resolution of the Dominion parliament, laid before the British government.

They have attempted to show that Hon. Richard McBride, after several months in London, accomplished a grand victory in having struck out from the statement of the increased allowance to the provinces it is to be a "final and unalterable settlement."

FIRST SUNDAY SPENT IN CAMP

THE REGIMENT WAS "AT HOME" TO FRIENDS

Close Competition for Prize for Best Tent--Pleasant Day at Macaulay Plains

Yesterday was an important day in the camp of the Fifth Regiment at Macaulay Plains. It was the first Sunday the members spent in camp, and they were "at home" to their many friends.

W. G. Collingwood, belonging to an English regiment now stationed in Egypt; Mr. L. Dudley, a Japanese newspaper editor, and many other tourists.

The vessel carried 6,000 tons of general merchandise in all, of which 425 tons were discharged at this port. Shortly before noon she left for Vancouver.

All the camp seemed full of merriment. Everyone appeared to be enjoying their hours of leisure. Wit and repartee had taken the place of regimental orders. The camp had become transformed. No wonder when every member of the regiment proved himself a good host as well as a gallant soldier.

HEAD HUNTERS OF FORMOSA

DIABOLICAL RACE GIVES NEW TROUBLE

Japanese Authorities Are Making Every Effort to Stamp Out the Practice.

Among the gruesome and cold-blooded stories which are told of obscure races on the earth's surface to-day it would be difficult to surpass in its diabolical details the news which was brought to port this morning by the steamer Monteaule.

The Monteaule called at Formosa on her present voyage to take on board a cargo of tea. The port at which the C.P.R. vessel touched was Keelung, a place which feeds the town of Taipei, the principal city of Formosa.

GOOD ADVICE TO REGIMENT

SERMON PREACHED BY CHAPLAIN BOLTON

The Men Were Admonished to Make Most of Training--Spiritual Side Presented.

There was a church parade of the Fifth Regiment yesterday morning at 10:30 a. m. There were few absentees. The men marched in a body from camp at Macaulay's Point to St. Paul's church, Esquimalt.

The necessary changes in the mode of elections cannot be submitted, he says, because the composition is unsatisfactory on account of the defects in the election laws itself, and declares that to the authority, which granted the first election law belongs the right to substitute new basis of suffrage.

When outward bound the Beatrice landed a Canadian survey party at Framid harbor, near Haines Junction. The men were in charge of Mr. Wallace, an Ottawa official.

MARRIED A DOLL IN INDIA. To marry a man who has been married twice is considered unlucky in India, and at Badoon, in the United Provinces, a merchant who was in this position had to go through a curious ceremony.

He was persuaded by the parents of the bride-elect to first go through the ceremony of marrying a doll, which he carried in his arms. The doll, which was regarded as his third "wife," was then buried with great pomp, after which the real marriage ceremony took place.

TWO NEW COLORS. Sphinx, a Mysterious Blue, and Earth of Egypt. A serene blue, full of mystery, with a reminiscence of Eastern twilight, it is called Sphinx, and is the latest contribution to the long list of blues which fashion has introduced.

Another new dye is called Earth of Egypt. In tone a warm sand shade with a touch of actual yellow in it, it recalls the desert, and is yet distinctly different from tan, inasmuch as the burning sun seems to be suggested by its soft brilliance.

CONFERENCE AT THE HAGUE

RUSSIAN DELEGATE
CHOSEN AS PRESIDENT

M. Nelidoff in Opening Speech De-precatory of Idea of Ultimate Disarmament.

The Hague, June 15.—The second international peace conference was opened in this city today. The opening session lasted scarcely 20 minutes, and was devoid of any incident outside of the cut and dried prearranged programme. It consisted simply of a short speech of welcome by Dr. Van Tete Van Goudrian, the Netherlands foreign minister; the adoption of a resolution to send telegrams of greeting to Emperor Nicholas and Queen Wilhelmina, and the delivery of the eagerly awaited speech of M. Nelidoff, head of the Russian delegation, who was unanimously chosen president of the conference.

The keynote sounded by M. Nelidoff on behalf of Russia was a Crushing Blow to the Pacificists.

There was no mention of words when he deprecated the idea of ultimate disarmament and the inauguration of a regime of universal peace was relegated to the limbo of dreams.

M. Nelidoff, after expressing his gratitude for the honor conferred on him by choosing him for president, said: "I well know that in so doing it was your intention to pay homage to the sovereign whom I have the honor to represent, to whose initiative the peace conferences have been due, and to whom his excellency, Dr. Van Tete Van Goudrian, has just alluded in terms which deeply touched me. You also doubtless wish to perform an act of deference towards the distinguished statesman, Dr. Van Tete Van Goudrian, who proposed me. I believe, therefore, that I shall be responsible to your unanimous sentiment in requesting his excellency, Dr. Van Tete Van Goudrian, to preserve his connection with the conference by accepting the title of honorary president. I also propose to offer the vice-presidency to the first Netherlands delegate, M. Dr. Beaufort, during whose term of office as foreign minister the conference of 1899 was held."

"It is unnecessary to say that I shall do everything in my power to render our labors most fruitful by endeavoring to observe harmony, seeking points of contact and avoiding anything which may give rise to a too marked divergence of opinion."

"I hope to be able to count on your kindly co-operation and amiable indulgence to second the goodwill I bring to the task."

M. Nelidoff then asked for authorization to send, in the name of the conference, a telegram to the Queen of the Netherlands, expressing gratitude at the gracious welcome accorded the delegates.

Continuing, M. Nelidoff said: "After the eloquent words heard from Dr. Van Tete Van Goudrian it will be unnecessary for me to recall the circumstances which led up to the summoning of the Second Peace Conference or to allude to the share taken in this connection by the eminent chief of the great North American confederation, whose generous impulses are always inspired by the noblest sentiments of justice and humanity."

"I cannot but feel deeply moved at seeing an assemblage of representatives of nearly every constituted state. It is the first time such a meeting has been held. It is the desire for peace that led the different governments to meet their most eminent men from all parts of the world to discuss in common the most cherished interests of humanity, namely, conciliation and justice. May I regard this as a happy augury to the progress of our labors, and express the hope that the harmony which animated the various governments will again reign among their representatives and contribute to the successful completion of the task which devolves on us."

"This task, gentlemen, as set forth in the programme of the conference accepted by all the powers, is divided into two parts. On the one hand we seek means to bring about an Amicable Settlement of the differences which may arise between the different states, and thus prevent ruptures and avoid conflicts.

"On the other hand we have to endeavor in the event of war breaking out, to mitigate its effects upon combatants and upon those indirectly affected. I have heard the opinion expressed that it was an absolutely mistaken idea to seek to diminish the horrors of war. This, to me, seems an absolutely specious opinion.

"We must therefore follow in this respect the path opened by our predecessors in 1864."

"As to the second portion of our task it would seem useless to dwell on the services already rendered in the course of justice and peace by the institutions and decisions formed by the conference. The solemn recognition of the principle of arbitration has already created among the various states the disposition to resort to arbitration for a settlement of disputes, the limits of which always have a tendency to widen."

"We can, therefore, look with respect upon the results of the activity of our predecessors at the Hague. They should act as an incentive to us to persevere in the work they accomplished, and give it greater development."

"All the friends of civilization are following with sympathetic interest the progress of the international institutions which resulted from the first conference, and a generous citizen of the United States has given a fortune for building here a palace in which these institutions shall have permanent headquarters. It is for us to make them worthy of this act of munificence which should be the basis of our showing our gratitude to Andrew Carnegie.

"However, let us not be too ambitious, nor forget that our

Means of Action Are Limited, that nations are living beings, just like the individuals composing them, that they have the same passions, aspirations, weaknesses and impulses, and that, if in our daily life in the courts of justice, despite the severity of penalties with which they are armed, we fail to prevent quarrels, brawls and fights between individuals, it would be the same between nations, although progress in civilization and the progressive softening of manners certainly ought to diminish the number of such cases.

"Let us above all not forget that there is a whole class of questions in which the honor, dignity and essential interest of individuals as well as nations are engaged, in which neither party whatever the consequences, will recognize any authority other than its own judgment and personal sentiments."

"But that should not discourage us from dreaming of the ideal of a universal peace, and the fraternity of peoples, which are, after all, but an ideal, towards which we must always strive without ever reaching it, the essential condition of all progress. A tangible object attained, enthusiasm ceases, whereas for the progress of any enterprise it is necessary to have a constant stimulus aiming at something higher."

"Excellence is the motto of our progress. Let us set bravely to work. Our path is lit by the bright star of universal peace, which we shall never reach, but which will always guide us for humanity's good, for whatever within the modest limits of our means we can do for individuals by lightening the burdens of war and for states by preventing conflicts which entitle the governments to represent to the gratitude of humanity."

"At the close of the president's speech the conference adjourned until Wednesday."

Quebec, June 15.—An accident happened yesterday noon at Hamilton Cay. All seven men were drowned. So far none of the bodies have been recovered. Four of the men, Alfred Gagnon, Geo. Quinn, Xavier Guern and Joseph, were married and leave large families. The three others were single, their names being Philippe Chappedeau, Paspebiac, Zeenon Otis, Little Metis, and George Campion, Matane.

The Killarney Murderer. Morden, Man., June 15.—"I don't want to hang. I want to remain in prison the rest of my life," are the words which Lawrence Gowland, the Killarney murderer, said to the physician at Morden jail yesterday. The prisoner's self-inflicted wounds are healing rapidly, but a close and stringent watch is maintained over him. He spends his time bemoaning his fate.

New Canadian Club. Winnipeg, June 15.—J. H. Smith, school inspector of Hamilton and president of the Canadian Club, visited Moose Jaw yesterday, and organized a Canadian Club.

For Sanatorium. Winnipeg, June 15.—To date subscriptions of $35,000 have been received for Manitoba's sanatorium. Seventy thousand dollars will be necessary to defray the expense of the enterprise. The local government promised that if the people will give $15,000 more it will make up the balance.

SHALL NOT RECEIVE THE FULL MARKET VALUE FOR THEIR PROPERTY?

Political reform is a plant of slow growth in autocratic Russia. When the Czar gently conceded to his people the right of self-government in a strictly limited sense, inasmuch as the concession of parliamentary institutions evidently carried with it the Imperial privilege of accepting or rejecting the advice of the Douma, he was generously applauded by the advocates of reform. But as the course of events has demonstrated that the people of Russia were merely endowed with the shadow of self-government and that the substance still remains in the hands of the hereditary rulers of the country, it is evident that the real crisis in the affairs of the nation has yet to be faced.

CREAMERY MAY MOVE INTO CITY

By Locating Here Cream Could Be Obtained Over E. & N. Line. The announcement made by the Victoria Creamery Company in a letter to the South Saanich council on Saturday afternoon that it contemplated removing its business to the city, was the result of several causes for dissatisfaction with the present location on Carey road. An officer of the company stated to the Times this morning that, although the building at present occupied is in every way suitable for the operations of the company much difficulty was being experienced in successfully disposing of the sewage from the plant. The septic tank and open drain which has, so far, been used has given rise to numerous complaints from the residents of the district, and it is not now capable of properly relieving the creamery. This is one of the main reasons why a change of site is contemplated, the officers of the company being of the opinion that it is imperative to have sewer connections. The other reason is that the present situation does not allow of easy distribution of the products, and it is felt that a site in the city would be a general advantage in drawing a supply of cream from the Metcoun districts as well as the territory covered by the E. & N. railway.

THE TRAINING OF BRITISH CAVALRY

WHAT "B.P." HAS DONE. (Pall Mall Gazette.) When our army returned from South Africa many of our military authorities were much impressed by the efficiency of the last campaign, and they seemed to have a half-acknowledged belief that all future fighting was going to be like the encounters with the Boers, that cavalry was never again to be used in the old way, but was to become a sort of elaborate mounted infantry, relying almost entirely upon its rifles, and never again attributing much practical value to sword and lance. Orders were given that lances should not be held to be part of the service equipment of lancer regiments, but were only to be carried on ceremonial occasions, though the men were still to have some instruction in using them. Time and reflection have modified these beliefs, and it has been recognized that cavalry probably still retains all its importance in the shock and in the use of the "arme blanche." Sword and lance are more cherished than ever, and though the occasions of their employment may not be quite of the same nature as in the last century, it is believed with good reason that they will be just as numerous when two European armies meet. The old conviction, however, that a soldier could not act equally well both mounted and dismounted, and that Dr. Johnson's definition of a dragoon was a man who fought "indifferently" on foot or on horseback, was unconsciously true in a double sense, no longer exists; and our cavalry are adroitly trained to give to the rifle its utmost effect.

DESPOILING THE PEOPLE

Speaking to a reporter of the Colonist on Saturday, Mr. R. L. Richardson, proprietor of the Winnipeg Tribune, said: "I regard British Columbia as the richest province in the Dominion. Such a wealth of natural resources as exist in your fisheries, timber, minerals, fruit, and last but not least, climate and scenery, cannot be found elsewhere. There is one note of warning which I would like to sound. Do not alienate these natural resources. The person who will always have an eye on them and it will take the greatest care to keep him from getting, from time to time, large concessions. This should not be. This great wealth should be carefully preserved for the people." "Doubtless Mr. Richardson, in his personal of the newspapers of the coast, had learned of parties disposing of timber interests acquired from the Crown for a merely nominal figure for large sums of money, in one case for upwards of a million dollars. Hence his note of warning. This admonition is not likely to have any effect. It is apparently useless to point out to the government that a concern like the C. P. 3, manages the timber upon its land grants in British Columbia in such a manner that a large proportion of the profits do not fall into the pockets of astute speculators. We are told that the business of the government printing office has increased to such a wonderful extent that it has far-outgrown the capacity of the present plant. A new press has been purchased as a means of relieving the congestion. There is little doubt that that is correct. Anyone who takes the trouble to glance at the advertising pages of the Gazette cannot but realize that it is true. But an examination of the pages of the Gazette discloses something more than the tremendous increase in the business of the printing office—it contains a warning in regard to the feverish activity of speculators. In a few years all that is left of our timber assets will have passed from the control of the people, whose property it is and ought to continue to be until it is purchased at a figure bearing some reasonable relation to its value, into the hands of private parties. If one prudent investor can clear over a million dollars in one deal at this time when the value of our timber resources is just being realized, how many millions and how many private fortunes of lesser amount are going to be treated ten years from now when practically all of our timber potentialities have passed into private hands and the properties have increased in value in harmony with the increasing domestic and outside demands? We shall of course be told that stamper dues and royalties will result in immense revenues for the treasury and that the processes of manufacture will produce great business activity generally. But if one timber concession be worth more than a million dollars to an intermediary between the people and the manufacturer, how much money must the total of our timber resources, which we shall probably be told cannot be disposed of in any other way than through intermediaries, net to a multitude of speculators? If a private corporation can manage its business in such a manner as will result in the bulk of the profits going to the shareholders of the company, what good reason can be advanced why the people of British Columbia, who are the owners of the timber lands and the timber thereon,

WOMEN WORKERS.

It is quite evident that the time has arrived when women must be recognized as active factors in the world's economic. The tyrant man may continue to place barriers in the path of the political emancipation of the ladies, but there is a point at which his opposition shall become ineffective, and that point will be reached one of these days. In the meantime the oppressed are rapidly becoming competitors with the oppressors in fields which are free to the activities of all regardless of pre-natal descent. In substantiation of this an examination of the industrial census returns of the United States shows, according to the New York World, that the workingwomen of the country numbered about five millions in 1905. This enumeration includes only those whose hours of daily toil are fixed in accordance with office or factory regulations. "Mere wives and mothers who keep house and raise children do not get in on the count." They are of the privileged class whose work is never done, who toil from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof—often until long after the great orb of day has gone to his rest. There are, the census informs us, now more than three hundred occupations in which women are extensively engaged. There are others to which they might devote themselves if their emancipation were as complete as some "rightists" desire, but in the meantime they are content

HONEYMOON IN JAIL.

A newly married couple at Sunderland are spending their honeymoon in jail. They were charged with committing willful damage under the influence of excessive spirits, and although the bridegroom pawned his best suit they were unable to find sufficient money for the fine. The Black Maria was met at the railway station by a hundred girls from the ropewalk where the bride used to work, who cheered the not-too-happy couple as they took the train to prison.

WEALTHIEST QUEEN IN EUROPE.

The Queen of Denmark is the wealthiest queen in her own right—and the tallest. It will doubtless be remembered that Frederick VII. succeeded to the throne of Denmark at the beginning of last year after the sudden death of King Christian, the beloved father of Queen Alexandra. It is now 38 years since King Frederick married Queen Louise, a daughter of Charles XV. of Sweden. From her maternal grandfather, Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, her Majesty inherited three millions, and she was also left a huge fortune by her father. Furthermore, the wealth of Queen Louise has been considerably increased since her marriage, by careful management and judicious investment.

The B. C. Electric Railway Company is to be congratulated upon the agreement recently entered into between it and the Esquimat Waterworks Company whereby the latter concern will supply fresh water for drinking purposes to the Gorge park during the summer. Difficulty has always been encountered in supplying the big summer crowds which patronize
the popular pleasure resort with sufficient fresh water, and the statement made by A. T. Goward, local manager of the street railway company, that the water pipes will probably be installed within a few weeks will be greeted with satisfaction by the many people who visit the park continually during the warm weather.

The bioscope pictures which were presented at the Gorge park last week proved very entertaining, and a large number of Victorians visited the park every evening. Despite the rather unsatisfactory weather the attendance was good. With a change for the better in the weather it is confidently expected that the attendance will be largely increased. Commencing this evening there will be a change in the programme and three new films will be shown. Those that have been selected for this week's entertainment are:
"The Poisoned Food," "The Insurance Agent" and "Over the Garden Wall."
All three are good subjects, and the audience may rest assured of being given a pleasant hour's entertainment.
In connection with the exhibition there will be an orchestral concert, commencing at 8 o'clock, while the pictures will be thrown on the screen as soon as it is sufficiently dark.

on Saturday to consider applications for renewals of licenses. All the old licenses were renewed, and that of the Goldstream hotel was transferred from ving. Aaron Gent applied for license for a hotel to be known as the Bay

West Sooke road. Two written protests were received against the granting of this license, but as the writers did not state their objections, the licensation committee decided to grant the license on condition that the building fulfilled
all the conditions of the plans and specifications filed with and approved by the chief inspector. Those present at the meeting were: Commissioners John

GOOD ADVICE TO REGIMENT

them that obedience, alertness and earnestness to the calls of duty fitted them for the soldier's calling and at the same time were helpful as a training to preserve them for the higher call of death. It was a plain discourse and suitable to the occasion.

Rev. Mr. Bolton said it was written in Esther 8, 25: "These days should be remembered." What days? And Why?
A great plot planned to exterminate a whole defenceless nation had been laid bare. A woman stood in the breach and risked her life to save her fellow countrymen. She did save them, and the order was made that those exciting days should be forever remembered.
They are. "The Jews still keep glad festival on the days of Purim, when Queen Esther long ago braved her life for others. "Have we no days in our lives fit to be remembered?" asked the preacher. "Indeed we have, but the trouble is that men and women do not dwell more on the days of defeat than on those of victory; on the days of sorrow rather than those of joy. I will not talk of those dark days which force and have burnt themselves in on the memory. I do not want to dwell on the days of suffering, the days of loss; perhaps the days of defeat, wanton in. They are landmarks in our lives not easily forgotten. But I wish rather this morning to dwell on some bright days that should bear themselves into our memory and ofttimes be recalled.

And first I shall speak to you of material things. Do you not all of you sneak out of your bedrooms this day when you first stood up a man; when you brought home your first earned money. Were you not justly proud of it at the time?

Do you not recall the day perhaps when first you measured your strength in open competition of one kind or other with your fellowmen, and came out a victor, fair and square?

Do you not remember the day when many of you first stepped out of the home nest and plunged into the battle and rush of life?

Do you not recollect the day when after long and grievous illness you drank again of the sunshine and took your place again amid your fellows?

Do you not recall the day which many of us have experienced when by the mercy of God we narrowly escaped some awful danger which would either have cut our lives short or left us mangled, crippled for life?

These surely are days for you all to remember. And then there is the memory of spiritual things to be recollected. For instance, there is the day of our second birth, when by baptism we were brought into the family of God. Again, there is the day when we first realized what a Saviour meant,
the day when we claim Him as our own.
Moreover there are the days of our Leader's joy, which surely should be ours, seeing that our life is so bound up in His. We mark these days by keeping the festivals of the church. We keep Christmas as the festival of the nativity and Epiphany as the festival of the wise men and the star and His manifestation, Easter as the festival of the resurrection, Ascension Day as the festival of His ascension. In these festivals then we celebrate His birth, His glory, His rising again and returning home. These are all days fit to be treasured up and recalled oft with gratitude. But they are all of the past.

But men of the Fifth, these very days of your annual camp can be made into days to be long remembered with pleasure by you. And what is more, it is up to you to make them so by the spirit and the heart you put into them, if you are sincere in response to orders; if you are listless in your actions; if you think the whole thing a nuisance, these days will drag; they will be monotonous; they will be useless to you in your profession and in your after life. But if you put your whole soul into them and make the most of every hour, then these camp days will be days long to be remembered. They will be days to be treasure up, days full of happy memories,
days of usefulness and work.

I have now spoken of the past and of the present. Can there indeed be a day to be remembered in the future?
Indeed there is, and it is only a coward who dares not see it squarely. I refer to the day of our death. The most certain thing in life is death. Whatever else may be uncertain in this life, this at least is true—we must all die. It is wise to face it before it comes, that we may all learn to die. Experience shows that there is dread in the coming;
yet on the near approach of death all dread ceases. None of us want to die before we must, but it is pure wisdom
to recall it as a fact from time to time.
Some day this rush and hurry must cease. Some day the golden thread will be cut. Some day I must give account of my life. Think over it. Face it as men, and never wholly forget it. Prepare to meet your God.

The service was read by Rev. the Hon. T. R. Henegau, who is setting for the incumbent, Rev. H. St. J. Payne, during his trip to the Old Country.

The thirty-second anniversary of Court Northern Light, A. O. F., will be held on July 10th, when a roll call meeting will take place at which every member is expected to be present. The local courts have decided to hold the annual re-union at Vancouver on August 17th and arrangements will be made for special transportation rates for that event.

What Other People Think

LICENSES AT THE DRIVING PARK.

To the Editor:—If you will allow I would like to say a few words in regard to the licenses to sell liquor on the "race track" and "fair grounds." I will endeavor to say what I wish as dispassionately as a flaming spirit of righteous indignation will allow.

All honor, say I, to the noble women of the W. C. T. U., who by their recent vote have decided to do nothing to do with an affair that cannot be successfully run (?) without the profits accruing from the granting of a license to sell liquor. Certainly it is the only logically consistent stand for such an organization. Every man and woman who is a supporter of the cause of righteousness should stand with the women of the W. C. T. U. Everybody who loves his children and his country better than a few paltry dollars should join in this action. It may be interesting, Mr. Editor, to you and your readers, to know how business is done by the license commissioners of the Oak Bay municipality. At their recent meeting in the schoolhouse on Foul Bay road, when applications for licenses to sell liquor on the driving park and fair grounds were heard by them, there were present delegations from the Local Council of Women and Citizens' League, to protest against their being granted. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.
Agenda for the meeting read, protest heard, applications made, business done and adjournment effected in the phenomenally short period of about fifteen minutes. Although these applications were made by organizations of the city of Victoria, we were informed by His Worship, the chairman, that we had "no right to be heard," but inasmuch as we had come there would show "the courtesy of hearing" us. How long has it been since a few of the citizens of the city of Victoria could do business in the name of the city, without license or license? How long has it been since the citizens of this city were denied liberty of conscience and freedom of speech? What right, sir, has any other committee of a city organization, to take the liberty of securing a license to sell liquor without the consent of the citizens of the city? Have not the citizens of the city the right to protect the liquor business? Have we not the right anywhere, and are we not bound as honor loving people to protest against the proposition of property owned by the city for public welfare, to saloon purposes?

It is a matter of public knowledge that the mayoral election of last year was an emphatic declaration of the citizens of this city for the restriction of the liquor business. The agricultural fair is the "business" of the city. The mayor, as mayor, is a member of the committee of management. The request of the secretary of the agricultural fair committee for a license is the request of the city.
The action of the committee and the mayor as a member of it is a deliberate ignoring of the wishes of the citizens of Victoria. What kind of government is this, Mr. Editor? Name it what you please, but be assured of this, this is not the citizens of this city will not tolerate.

MANY CRICKET GAMES PLAYED

OAK BAY CLUB WON FROM TACOMA TEAM

Second Regatta of the Season Held By the J. B. A. A.—Other Sporting News.

Although there was only time to compete the first innings in the game between Tacoma and Oak Bay Cricket Clubs, notwithstanding fact that play commenced at 10:30 a. m., it proves a most enjoyable affair.

The new local organization is improving every match it plays.

In Saturday's match Oak Bay won the toss and elected to bat first.

The ground was in good condition, the weather fine. There was no outstanding feature in the first innings of the home team.

Barraclough was top scorer with a neatly compiled 35, while five men on the team made double figures, the extras ran to 17.

Tacoma made a very inauspicious start. Three wickets fell for 7 runs.

Lyon and Clarke, however, then stopped the downfall for a few minutes. Lyon was the next to go and half the team was out for 31 runs.

The remaining batsmen with the exception of Barker all added a few runs and the innings was brought to a close for a total of 73. The match was declared over then, Oak Bay winning by 7 runs.

At the lunch interval refreshments were served on the ground. The visitors spent the night in the city and just evening left for their homes in the Sound City.

The following are the tabulated scores in Saturday's game:

Tacoma C. C. (First Innings): L. G. Patullo, b Barraclough, 7; G. C. Saulez, c Davis, b Trimen, 6; J. P. Lyon, c Shelton, b Barraclough, 11; W. W. Dow, b Trimen, 22; W. J. H. Clark, b Shelton, 18; W. A DRAW MATCH. A good draw game between Victoria Cricket Club and the Bankers and Lawyers of this city was played on Saturday. Some good scoring was witnessed; both sides being exceptionally good at batting. The V. C. C. were fortunate in getting the bankers and lawyers out for 127. They had to put of no less than five bowlers to get rid of them with that score. Gillespie made some very clean hitting. When he had made 32 he was out to a brilliant catch by Tye, York and Barnacle took all the wickets.

The bankers and lawyers on winning the toss, sent in Meredith and Gillespie to face the bowling of York and Barnacle. The first wicket soon fell. Meredith when he had made one being bowled with one of York's break-backs. Bowley joined Meredith but was smartly stumped by Warden before making a score. When Martin joined Meredith the runs began to come apace and the score run up to 104 when Martin was bowled by York. None of the others made any stand against the trundling of York and Barnacle, and the side was soon all out for 127.

Ashbery and Warden came in first for the V. C. C. team to face the bowling of the bankers. Ashbery was bowled by Meredith before he had scored. Conyers and Warden were together and the next 10 came easy, but Conyers when he had made 14 was bowled by Meredith. Briggs joined Warden. They continued partners until Briggs was cleaned bowled by Gillespie. Briggs showed some good form.

OF COURSE some men inherit wealth, but most wealthy men were made so by the saving habit. They had to accumulate something before they could make a profitable investment. Just bear in mind that you never will succeed unless you make a start.

York came in and remained together until the call of time.

The score is as follows: Bankers and Lawyers: J. F. Meredith, b York, 1; H. Gillespie, c Tye, b Barnacle, 1; F. Bowley, at Warden, b York, 24; A. F. R. Martin, b York, 24; H. Pooley, c Warden, b York, 4; T. W. Carr-Hilton, c Tye, b Barnacle, 4; T. Fletcher, b York, 4; F. G. Fowkes, b Barnacle, 2; B. Bell, b Barnacle, 0; G. A. Studen, c and b Barnacle, 0; I. K. D'Arcy, not out, 0; Extras, 17; Total, 127.

Victoria C. C.: Q. D. H. Warden, not out, 29; F. W. Ashby, b Meredith, 14; U. Conyers, b Meredith, 14; F. C. Acton-Briggs, b Gillespie, 15; W. York, not out, 12; Extras, 19; Total, 127.

Total, 3 wickets down 30.

J. C. Barnacle, T. B. Tye, H. S. R. Cullen, W. T. Williams, W. Gregson, did not bat.

Bowling Analysis: Victoria C. C. O. M. R. W. York, 19 6 42 5; Barnacle, 14 0 39 5; Tye, 2 0 9 0; Conyers, 1 0 12 0; Williams, 3 0 10 0; Bankers and Lawyers: C. C. O. M. R. W. Meredith, 11 3 28 2; Hilton, 2 0 12 2; Pooley, 2 0 12 1; Gillespie, 3 1 22 1; D'Arcy, 3 1 4 6.

VANCOUVER VICTORY. On Saturday morning at the Jubilee grounds, the Victoria Collegiate School cricket team went down to defeat before the Queen's School, of Vancouver.

The game was very closely contested and although no individual batting scores were made, there was splendid bowling and fielding by both teams. There was a good crowd of interested spectators present and at the end of a very spirited game, the score stood at 39 to 24.

JUNIOR MATCH. A good match between Corrig College and Dallas Cricket Clubs was played on Saturday. The boys of Corrig college won a well fought game by 73 to 55. C. C. R. Davies, H. Laundry and L. Laundry batted well for Dallas. Hawksley, Clarkson and Drury did remarkably well for the college team. The boys on both sides were good all round fielders and elicited much praise from all.

THE OAR. SECOND REGATTA. On Saturday afternoon the J. B. A. A. held their second monthly regatta over the harbor course. The regatta was a great success from every standpoint. The crews, composed largely of green men, showed exceedingly good form. They all pulled well together, and while the crew composed of Belyea, stroke; McCarty, bow; 2, and Elworthy, bow, carried off the honors, the other crews all did very creditably. There were, in all, six crews competing, necessitating five heats. The winning crew had to row two heats, drawing the bye in the semi-finals. The other crew in the final, composed of Hiscocks, stroke; Russel, Strachan and Brown, bow, had accordingly to make three trips, which naturally weakened them for the final effort.

The course was from Coffin Island to the club house, about three-quarters of a mile. Weather conditions were perfect, and a large number of spectators witnessed the races from various points of vantage along the water front.

In the semi-final heat there came very nearly a serious accident. The opposing crew, stroked by Hiscocks and McCarty, were very evenly matched. Hiscocks took a slight lead at the start, and just off the soap works both boats came together. The crew of McCarty's boat colliding with the stern of the other boat. There was a mix-up of oars, and when the crews disentangled themselves Hiscocks boat was slightly ahead, and managed to add another half length to their lead before reaching the finishing line.

In the third heat the Sargison crew were defeated. Belyea's crew was pushed the heavier, and finished four lengths to the good.

The second heat, between Hiscocks and Brown, was a close race, and Hiscocks won with only a length to spare.

The final heat was also a close race. While Hiscocks' crew were rather exhausted by their previous exertions, the opposing team, stroked by Belyea, was practically fresh. They put up a game fight, however, and the winning team had to strain every muscle to carry off the day. The best race of the day, however, occurred in the final heat, when the two crews stroked by McCarty and Clark, opposed each other. The boats hung well together during the whole course, and at the finish McCarty was less than half a length in the lead.

The following is a summary of the results: First heat—McCarty, stroke; Miles, 3; Cox, 2; Jamison, bow; won from Clark, stroke; Jamison, 3; Curry, 2; Frye, bow. Second heat—Hiscocks, stroke; Russel, 3; Strachan, 2; Brown, bow; won from Brown, stroke; Gieson, 3; Curran, 2; Nason, bow. Third heat—Belyea, stroke; McCarty, 3; Boyd, 2; Elworthy, bow; won from Sargison, stroke; Sargison, 3; Sargison, 2; Nason, bow. Fourth heat—Semi-final—Hiscocks, stroke, won from McCarty, stroke. Fifth heat—Final—Belyea, stroke, won from Hiscocks, stroke.

SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP. Charles Towns will row Webb, of New Zealand, for the sculling championship on the Parramatta River on August 3rd.

GOLF. SIX TIMES CHAMPION. The weather conditions under which the final tie in the Amateur golf championship was played a couple of weeks ago at St. Andrews were the most shocking imaginable. The rain was pouring in torrents all through the morning, and a strong wind made everything hopelessly disagreeable.

The finalists were John Ball, of Hoylake, who had won the championship on five previous occasions, and C. A. Palmer, of Birmingham, who had equally done anything of note in open competition until this performance. He owed his position in the final largely to the easy place that he gained in the draw. Anything in the nature of good golf was quite impossible. The players stuck to it well at the beginning of the first round, but when they turned for home, and had the wind and rain in their faces, they were plainly done for. While Ball took 50 strokes for his round, Palmer was 22. Palmer took three to get over the burn at the first hole, and lost it, but squared at the second. Ball, however, won the third, but the match was square again at the sixth. At the eighth Ball became one up, and winning the ninth increased his advantage to two. Palmer was generally driving the longer ball, but was weaker with his shots through the green. He was feeling the cold in his hands very much, and had difficulty with his grips.

At the eleventh, which Palmer ought to have won, Ball being bunkered from the tee, the former completely fooled a short run up from near the edge of the green, the ball only in the draw, a yard. This hole was halved, but Ball, winning the twelfth, was 3 up. Palmer got one back at the fifteenth. His opponent took 7 to the next two holes, winning one and losing the other, but he took the home hole in 5 and 6, and so finished the round two down. The second round was played in worse weather than ever. At the turn Ball was four up on the match. He took 43 out and Palmer 55. In the end Ball beat Palmer by 5 up and 4 to play.

LACROSSE. DEFEATED IN NEW WESTMINSTER. The All-Canadian lacrosse team were hopelessly defeated on Saturday afternoon at New Westminster by a score of 11 goals to nil. It was throughout a very one-sided exhibition, and it was only the clever work of the visitors' goalkeeper that kept the score from being much larger. The New Westminster team showed their superiority at every point, and the game developed into a succession of shots at the visitors' goal. The All-Canadian team, in the opinion of the spectators, will need considerable strengthening if they would accomplish anything in Australia. The following was the line-up of the respective teams: All-Canada—Arens, Kearns, Campin, W. Hanley, L. Campbell, F. Hanley, Fred. McDonald and Graess. New Westminster—Eukhoff, Galbraith, Gifford, Gray, J. Gifford, Rennie, Eysen, W. Turnbull, Wintemute, L. Turnbull, Henry and Bryson.

THE GUN. PETERS CUP WON. The Capital Gun Club held their shoot yesterday afternoon at the Willows traps. There was a large number of members and spectators present, and some fine exhibitions were given. There were two trophies shot for, the Peters trophy and the Leavell challenge medal. The former was taken by W. Lentesty with a score of 38 birds out of a possible 40, and the latter was won by F. W. Stevenson with 13 birds out of a possible 15. The Peters' trophy shoot is always a big event in shooting circles, and competition is always very keen. This is the third time in succession that Mr. Lentesty has won the trophy, which thus becomes his permanent one, and puts an end to a competition which has been going on for six or seven years. The Leavell challenge medal has also to be taken three times in succession to be won, so that Mr. Stevenson has still to add two more successive wins to his credit to become the permanent owner.

ATHLETICS. WILL MEET SHERRING. Alfred Shrub, the champion British long-distance runner, will, it is reported, be matched to meet William Sherring, the winner of the Marathon cup at Athens. The race will be run at Buffalo on July 1st. It is said that the arrangements have been concluded for the match, and the only thing that remains unsettled is the amount of the stake. Shrub ran rings around all competitors in England and Australia, and travelled the world over in the hope of finding a worthy foe on the track. He came to America in the hope of meeting the Indian, Longboat, but before his arrival Longboat was reinstated as an amateur.

The famous wrestler, Hackenschmidt, has been engaged by a music hall in Kansas City at a salary of $3,000 a week, which, it is stated, is the biggest sum ever offered for a music hall turn. THE CARNIVAL AT THE GORGE

SATURDAY WAS MADE A PLEASANT TIME

Amusement Was Afforded By the Committee in Charge of Arrangements.

Never, perhaps, has the Gorge presented a brighter, more animated or prettier scene than it did on Saturday last, upon the occasion of the second carnival held under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Victoria Anti-Tuberculosis Association...

Coming upon the ray scene from the main walk, the first booth the visitor encountered was the "flower stand," where roses and carnations, in company with all those fair blooms that look so well in the little button-hole on the coat lapel and are so beloved of the sterner sex, were retailed by ladies attired in white, a color that contrasted with the beautiful hues of the wares they sold...

ball and cricket players and others to "have a throw." The task set for the competitor was to throw one or more of half a dozen India-rubber balls through a dozen of holes in a large board...

Ice cream stands, refreshment booths and tents, wherein specialties of the stage variety told the fortune from the palm, were scattered about in great numbers and the spare cash of the crowd flowed into them unceasingly...

One of the prettiest features of the whole carnival was the appearance of illuminated canoes and row-boats upon the upper reaches of the arm of water that surrounds the park. Two prizes were offered for the craft displaying the most artistic taste on the part of the decorators...

The carnival, according to the promoters, eclipsed its fore-runner. It was from a social and financial point of view a decided success, and to the ladies who arranged it belongs much credit. The executive committee which had charge of the carnival was composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Galletly, Mrs. Beauchamp Tye, Mrs. George, Miss Poolley, Mrs. Lampman and Mrs. Eberts.

SLEEP OF GREAT MEN.

Many Early Risers, While Some Did Their Best Work at Night. "Five hours' sleep is sufficient for men," declared Napoleon. Seven for women, children and fools.

History hardly bears out the great Corsican's dictum, although there have been some notable advocates among the world's great men of the theory generally regarded as "burning the candle at both ends." Men, however, undoubtedly differ fundamentally in regard to the need of sleep as they do in other respects, and whether greater or little, each one must work out for himself a schedule of rest, as he must of diet and exercise.

Balzac, that titan of the nineteenth century, was accustomed regularly to arise at midnight, and after enveloping himself in his monk's habit, seat himself at his desk, and force his weary brain to its task of creation. Carried away by admiration of the "master," Theophile Gautier and a number of other ambitious youths of the day, undertook to imitate this peculiarity of the "father of realism," with the result that very soon they were forced to take to their beds in earnest to make up for the hours stolen from slumber. Doctors, doubtless, would point to the early taking off of Balzac, who died when 51 years of age, as proof of the deleterious effects of such a regimen. On the other hand, it may be questioned whether his protracted hours were not due to his privations and financial troubles of his early years, rather than to work at ill-adjured hours. It is as illogical to attribute his early death to the abnormality of his habits of labor as to attribute the long survival of Voltaire and the explorer and traveller, Alexander Humboldt, to a like cause.

On one occasion Max Muller, as related in his autobiography, was returning from an evening entertainment in Berlin with Humboldt, who was then 80 years of age, and the conversation turned upon the latter's "Cosmos." Bitterly the savant complained that he was no longer able to accomplish as much as previously, since he now required four hours' sleep instead of two, as in earlier years. "When I was your age," he remarked to the philologist, "I would simply turn down my lamp, and after a nap of two hours, would be as fresh as ever."

The sleeping room of Voltaire's secretary at Ferney was directly beneath that of the author, and at any hour of the day or night when moved to composition, the great Frenchman was accustomed to stamp upon the floor of his chamber and summon the unfortunates to take down his thoughts. When once under way it was no unusual thing for him to continue working sixteen hours at a stretch.

Certainly for the non-genius there can be little doubt as to which of the two "temperaments" it is wise to cultivate. Goethe, despite his habit of early rising, was wont to arise in the night to scribble down a poem or song, and Emerson's wife was subject to the danger of being aroused by the philosopher in his search for writing materials. "Only a thought, my dear," he would reassure her, as he seized the fleeting inspiration. Those of us, however, who are not blessed or cursed with genius can also snatch a passing thought...

INTERURBAN RAILWAYS.
Seattle Will Be Centre of Vast System—Line May Be Extended to Vancouver.

Seattle, June 15.—Seattle has been chosen as the centre of a vast system of interurban electric railways reaching from British Columbia to Olympia, Aberdeen, Grays Harbor, and possibly Chehalis and Portland.

How far the line will be projected into British territory has yet to be determined. It is likely the line will be extended to Vancouver, making that city by the northern terminus.

C. W. Wyman, consulting engineer, representing Stone & Webster of Boston, owners of the Seattle Electric Railway company, and kindred organizations here and in Tacoma and Bellingham, last night gave official announcement of the plans of the corporation to build electric railway lines in the valleys and reaching the sea coast towns of Western Washington and British Columbia, aggregating in cost many millions of dollars.

VERNON'S NEW CHURCH.
All Saints Dedicated by the Right Rev. Bishop Dart.

It is safe to say that the congregation which filled every seat in the new Anglican church of All Saints at the opening services on Tuesday evening, was by far the largest that has ever been assembled under one church roof in the history of the Okanagan, says the Vernon News.

The choir and organist (Mrs. Lambert) acquitted themselves throughout in a manner which all agreed rendered the service of a very high order indeed. The surprised choir was made up of boys, ladies and clergy and laymen in attendance at the synod, and their work would have done no discredit to the choir of any cathedral.

The following order of service was carried out with great effect: Processional psalm; music of Canticles, by T. Turner; anthem, "Blessed be the God and Father;" Wesley: hymns 395 and 365; a te deum after the vesper; recessional hymn 215.

A collection for the building fund was taken at the close, and a goodly sum realized towards paying off the debt on the church.

How Ned and Speckles Went to Sea

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Ned had a new rowboat. It was the joy of his heart. Every evening as soon as his after-school chores were done and supper over, he took Speckles his dog and chum—and went down to the little cove in the river bend where he kept his "pride" moored. With Speckles in the stern of the boat Ned would take the reins and pull off down the river for a mile; then would return with so much additional muscle that his mother laughingly called him the "coming Samson," declaring that if Ned kept on rowing he would soon become "one great bunch of muscles."

Ned's home was on the banks of a big river that poured into a fine bay some 10 miles below the "bend" where Ned kept his boat. Then 10 miles of bay took one into the great sea, the dim blue of which could be seen from Ned's own home.

And often as Ned and Speckles went for their mile down the river (Ned's father had forbidden his son's going any further, as the current was so strong that it was dangerous to risk himself in so small a craft too far from home) Ned would say to Speckles:

"Some day, my old chum, you and I shall go into the bay. Then as I grow stronger and older and you grow more accustomed to rough water, we'll push on through the bay and take a taste of old ocean. But, of course, Speckles, that time is a long, long way off. In all probability this boat we now love so much will be worn out, lying a lanky old hull on dry land. Mamma will doubtless make a coop out of it for young chickens. Who can tell? But we—you and I—will then have a new boat—15 feet long and with a sail and rudder. Gee! Then will be real seamen. I hope you won't get seasick, old Speck. You know the water of the bay is more frolicsome than this of the river, and the bay is a sleeping babe as compared with that roaring and howling old ocean. Of course, we'll catch fish in the bay—a boat full, and sell them in town for enough money to make us quite rich. Maybe after several years of fishing we may have enough cash to buy a ship to sail around the world. Hully gee! That would be going some, wouldn't it, Speckles?"

Speckles would wag his tail in acquiescence, for Speckles always agreed with his master and rhum in everything. That was one reason—the principal one, too—that kept Speckles and Ned such close friends. Even when Ned hinted that Speckles might become seasick the old four-footer only smiled in his own way (by wagging his tail) as if saying: "Yes, Ned, I know I may, but I'll do my best to not bark about it."

One evening when Ned came home from school he found his mother ready to go to town for a week's visit with an old friend who was in very poor health, and who had sent for her. Ned's father would go, too, returning the following day. A hired man and his wife would be at the home to look after things during his parents' absence.

After supper Ned and Speckles, as usual, went for a row on the river. As Ned descended the bank he saw a man skulk off into the woods. "Aha," he said to Speckles, "that tramp is hanging round here to steal our boat—I'll bet nine to five! Well, we'll just lay for him after we're returned from our rowing."

"And good as his word, Ned, after trying up the boat, stretched himself in it to watch for the return of the man who he had seen prowling about the bend. Speckles, of course, kept him company, lying down against his master, his head thrust beneath the broad seat."

The night settled down, the moon rose and the stars twinkled, but the "tramp" did not return to the boat. But a visitor did come and enter it, a visitor whose name was sleep. An hour had hardly passed after Ned and Speckles stretched themselves in the boat when both dog and boy fell into deep slumber, being roched by the rocking of their bed on the restless water and the soft sighing of the wind in the trees and long border-grasses. It must have been long after midnight when Ned awoke. He was roused by Speckles licking his face and whimpering. Opening his eyes he first looked into the sky, wondering for a moment just where he was. Then the rough rocking of the boat and the chill night air roused him to the reality of his situation. Quickly sitting up he was surprised and frightened to find deep, dark water all about him, no sight of land on any side. He caught hold of Speckles in his terror, hugging the old doggie as he cried: "Land of love, Speck, the boat's broke from its moorings—and we're drifting into the bay! Here, sit still old boy, while I get the oars out and row back home!"

But rowing against such a current was like walking up a mountain of slipping sand. He made no progress; in fact, the water carried him further and further out towards the ocean. A light-house looming through the darkness told him of his location. He was at the bay's entrance into the sea!

In vain he rowed with all his wondrous muscle; he kept right on towards the mighty waters—that would make quick craft. Poor Ned fully realized his danger. He but the oars in the bottom of the boat for now rowing was impossible, the boat was tossing so. With one arm about Speckles, who seemed trying hard to console his frightened young master, and with the other hand holding tightly to the edge of the seat, Ned settled himself to suffer the inevitable. Though he was terror-struck he was no "booby," and no tear-dimmed the brave young eyes that looked out across the great expanse of waters that seemed to cover the earth.

So long he sat there waiting for the morning he never knew, but after what seemed an eternity of time the dawn broke and the sun slowly came into view through the morning mists that always hang over the ocean. Ned and Speckles found themselves alone on the waves that were to them mountainous, but in reality very calm for the sea. Ned did not talk to Speckles, nor did the latter say his tail in communication to his master, though his eyes, that were almost human, looked with a sort of helpless despair on his strange and terrible surroundings.

At last a speck appeared in the distance. Ned watched it with some feeling of hope. The speck grew larger and larger, then took on the shape of some kind of sea-craft. Ned's heart gave a flutter. Hugging Speckles to his breast, he broke the long silence:

"Oh, dear old chum, there's a boat, a boat! We must attract the attention of her sailors as soon as they come close enough to us."

Ned then removed his coat and shirt, replacing the former, and fastening the latter to one end of an oar. Then he waited patiently till the boat came within signal distance. After a few minutes the craft—which evolved into a fishing smack—came dancing towards them at full sail. Evidently the fishermen had spied, through their glasses, the little boat that was drifting at the mercy of the billows. Ned held the oar with its fluttering white flag as high as his poor, cold hands would allow. Ah, the muscles that he had boasted of were weak things after all when tried against the mighty strength of the ocean. The fishing smack veered in its course, setting straight for the little boat, which must have looked no larger to the seamen than a thimble. Soon it came within hailing distance of Ned, who still frantically waved his shirt-flag fastened to an oar-pole. All the time Speckles kept a cool head, never moving from his place, close beside his excited little master.

Well, to shorten a long story, Ned and Speckles were taken on-board the fishing smack, whose name was "Captain Peck." And "Captain Peck" was a right merry little boat, too, with her five fishermen and big haul of deep-sea fish. After learning Ned's story, the owner of "Captain Peck" declared that it was "the dimmest, norry escape he had ever heard of."

Then as Ned and Speckles ate a most welcome breakfast—Ned wrapped in an old tarred coat—the fisherman continued: "Well, bless my soul and Captain Peck, I don't understand how you ever managed it! Why coming down that bay 'at's as full of craft as a sailor on shore is full of liquor is risky for old dogs what's us to it; but for a kid—an' him in the arms of Morpheus—with only a dog for look-out—Gimminy! it beats me. Wonder is that you're not this minute in the bottom of the bay, servin' the fish for breakfast instead of sittin' here safe an' sound eatin' of fried fish and biscuits. Well, boys, do get through what would be the finish of men—an' sea-dogs at that."

Ned and Speckles—with their little boat towed behind—were carried safe to shore by the "Captain Peck." They landed several miles from home, and as the owner of "Captain Peck" would not allow Ned to try rowing home (and, really, I don't think Ned wanted to try it, though he pretended to think it safe enough to do so) he was obliged to leave the little boat in the care of the good old fisherman, and borrowing a few dollars from him, took the first train for home. But before starting he wired to the station agent at the little railway flag station near his own home to say to his father—should he be making enquiry for him, that he was safe and sound and on route home.

That afternoon Ned and Speckles reached home, walking from the railway station. To Ned's relief he found on jumping from the train that his father had not yet returned from town. The friendly agent had been on the lookout for both parent and son, and luckily the son had turned up first. Thus the father would be spared any anxiety.

"Well, Speckles," old chum, the folks will be somewhat surprised when we tell of our expedition down to the sea in a rowboat with me asleep and you, the only lookout, eh? But, say, I'm glad it happened that mother and dad were away from home during our absence. Otherwise we might arrive on time for our own funeral ceremony. Of course, seeing boat, dog and boy gone they would think us drowned. But it takes a good deal to drown old Speck and Ned, doesn't it?"

And Speckles smiled with his tail, saying with his eyes the while: "We've come out of danger into safety. Let us profit by our experience. So far as I am concerned, I'd rather pass my nights in the stable manger than in the open rowboat out at sea!"

As Ned and Speckles turned the corner of a hill and came in sight of their own home they saw the hired man coming on the run to meet them. He had been stationed on the roof with a pair of field glasses, scanning the country for Ned. To Ned's amazement the stupid fellow had never once thought of the boat, and just supposed Ned had got up early and gone off for a stroll before breakfast. As the forenoon passed and Ned failed to put in his appearance he became a bit uneasy, and at his wife's suggestion he took the field glasses and climbed upon the roof to make a search of the surrounding country. But when Ned told him of his late experience you "could have knocked him down with a feather," to use his own words: "waa, waa an' so you've bin down to the ocean—the OCEAN. Gorry, what'll yer pap do?"

"He'll be thankful that I'm here instead of a funeral crowd," said Ned. And Speckles agreed with him by wagging his tail.

Mother—"I'm sorry, my dear, but how are you so sure that your husband has ceased living?"

Mrs. Newlywed—"Why the b-b-brute just lets me cry whenever I feel like it."

"Mamma," said little May, as she looked at her baby sister for the first time, "I'm much obliged to you for offering me to me for a sister, but I have all the sisters I want, so I'll take her for a cousin."

No one is great until he feels the pang of a crucifixion.

At last, character never rises above its plane of thought.

THE REAL GRIP
Pat had been very ill all winter. A n old friend meeting him on the street one day asked what had been the matter with him. "I've had the grip," answered Pat in a weak voice. "The grip? Hoopity, and phwat's that?" asked his friend. "It makes you sick six months after you've got well," explained Pat.

Ned fastened his shirt to one end of an oar and waited for the boat to come within signal distance.

LITTLE HOLLAND

By Maud Walker.

There is a pretty little park in the heart of the city of New York called Washington Square. In the spring time the grass comes out green and restful to the eye; the flowers that border the walks and encircle the cool fountain burst into bud and prepare to bloom. And on the first warm days the children pour from the great, dark, unhealthy "tomment" houses that form the back streets south and west of the square, into this breathing space where they may run and romp and feel the genial rays of the sun.

One day in the early spring came John and Mary into Washington Square to play. They lived in a street leading into the park, and their house faced the west. Alas, their father had a good position in a big store and their mother had nothing to do except to look after her children and their home. Thus you will see that Mary and John were not "tomment" children, but of the "comfortable" class. So in playing in the park they rarely joined with the hundreds of other children that came there, but held themselves aloof.

On this day I am telling you about Mary watching her brother as he went up and down the broad walks on his roller skates. But her attention was called from John to a little figure that came and returned near her. It was a tiny boy, in ragged overcoat and muddy stockings and shoes. A rusty brown cap partly covered his flaxen hair, which straggled in an uncombed condition, hanging over his eyes, that were as blue as the sky when it is unveiled by clouds. His face was pinched and pale, and two of the front teeth were missing. On the whole, this child was one to be shunned by Mary and John, themselves so clean and well-dressed. But something in the lovely little fellow's face excited the pity of Mary. She watched him for a few minutes, then said to him:

"Hello, little boy! Haven't you anyone to play with?"

The little boy only looked at her, dropping his head in a bashful way. Then he walked down the path, stopping at an unoccupied bench. But Mary kept watching him, feeling sorry that he had no companion. After a little while John came skidding up and stopped to rest beside his sister.

"Look at that little boy," said Mary, pointing toward the child who had excited her sympathy. "Doesn't he look awfully solemn? I guess he's a foreigner, for he doesn't look a bit American."

"Oh, he's Holland," said John. "Dutch Holland children have such white hair and stogy legs. And see his eyes, they're blue like your doll's eyes are. Yes, he must be Dutch."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry for him," said Mary. "Let's call him to us and play with him. He is all alone."

"Yes, and you might catch something," too, declared John. "Those foreigners always have some disease—maybe the stick—who can tell? And he's dirty enough for that. No, thank you, I don't want to mix up with little Holland. Excuse me from the Dutch."

Then away went John, skating round and round the square. But hardly had he gone when the little boy came slowly toward Mary, smiling in a bashful though friendly way. Mary smiled back at him and motioned him to a seat on the grass beside her. But the child would not come quite so close, preferring to stand some distance away. However, he kept smiling at Mary, showing her that he understood and appreciated her invitation to come and sit beside her.

Thus half an hour passed, and Mary called "Little Holland" as she mentally called the child, to come friends, though no word passed between them. Presently John came back to Mary and asked her to put on the skates and have a little spin around the park. Mary declined, saying that she preferred to sit there and "talk" with "Little Holland."

"But he hasn't spoken a solitary word, has he?" laughed John.

"No, not words," confessed Mary; "but he has conversed with me in the cutest little smiles you ever saw. Really, brother, I've taken a great fancy to Little Holland. I wonder where he lives?"

"Well, leave the kid to me," said the officer. "I'll turn him into the station, if he can't tell me where he lives."

Mary hesitated a moment, then said: "Suppose he cries, Mr. Policeman? I'd hate to have him carried to the station if it frightened him. Indeed, I'd rather go along, sir, than to have the little Dutch thing afraid."

"Ah, Dutch, is he?" asked the officer. "Then I think I can direct you to the place where he lives. There's a family of Dutch lives at Number 17—street. You can trot around there with him, and if he don't belong there just bring him back to me and I'll turn him in at the station. His folks will find him in the course of a day or two, for he'll be advertised in the papers."

Mary resented the cool, indifferent manner of the officer and decided to find the home of Little Holland without his aid. Taking the little child's hand she went to the place where the policeman had said a Dutch family lived. But to Mary's disappointment the woman of the house shook her head on surveying Little Holland and said: "No, I don't think him to be long. In de house mit a popper is my childer."

Just as Mary was on the point of going to her own home and asking her parents' advice as to the disposal of Little Holland she heard a cry of pleasure behind her, and turning round saw a little blonde woman—Little Holland on a larger scale—coming at a run after her. She was crying out something in a foreign tongue, and at the first sound of her voice Little Holland turned toward her, clapping his chubby hands and laughing happily. In another instant the woman had the tousel head of Little Holland against her mother's breast and was weeping and laughing over him by turns.

"Him lose he," she said in her best English to Mary, who was looking at her interrogatively. "Him playing went an' lose he. Myself all day look. Now he I gotten an' keepe." And the little mother clasped her baby to her breast, her blue eyes shining with love and thankfulness.

Mary turned homeward, going at a run, for she knew her own dear mother would soon be out looking for her. As she went along she felt glad that she had not turned her Little Holland over to the policeman.

"The hearts of the poor are as full of love and anxiety as are the hearts of the well-to-do," said Mary to herself. "Clothes and education only affect the exterior—not the interior. After this I shall always keep my eyes open in the park for lonely little ones, especially for my Little Holland."

QUEENS OF ENGLAND

Queen Anne succeeded to the throne of Great Britain and Ireland at the death of her royal brother-in-law, William III. Of Orange, who had reigned jointly with Mary during her sovereignty. At the time of her accession Anne was in most wretched health, caused from self-indulgence at the table and habits of ease.

Most ungratefully and corruptly the coronation ceremonial was gone through with in a low armchair.

Much of her early life was clouded by the differences between herself and her royal sister, Queen Mary. As a wife she was devoted and fidelity. As a mother she was fond to adoration, but only one of her numerous children lived beyond a few months or a year; he was the young Duke of Gloucester, and he died while in his early teens and before his mother became queen. As he had been the one great joy of her life Anne grieved deeply for him, never really recovering from her loss.

From the time she was eight years old till within a few years of her death Anne was very susceptible to the influences of the wicked and designing Sarah Jennings, who afterwards became Lady Churchill and later the Duchess of Marlborough.

Anne was born in this year, 1665, succeeded to the throne in 1702 and died in 1714. During her reign there was almost continuous warfare raging, a fact which Anne deplored deeply. It was in the third year of her reign that the famous battle of Blenheim was fought, the British soldiers winning such a proud victory.

Till she became queen, little could be said of her in commendation, for she had been a selfish, self-indulgent woman and a most unnatural daughter to her fond old father, James II., whose detestation she intrigued for. And when that father, who had been generosity itself to her, begged for her assistance and love, she turned a deaf ear to his pleadings. Also, she pretended to believe the story circulated at the time of James' sad downfall that her brother—James' son by his second wife—was an impostor and not the son of the queen consort. This absurd and dangerous story was put about to rob the young Prince of Wales of his birthright and throw the succession to Mary.

But after becoming queen, Anne seemed to have undergone a change of heart, and she always manifested the deepest love for her subjects. Almost her last word were to the Duke of Shrewsbury as she, on her deathbed, made him lord treasurer, placing in his hands the staff of office and saying: "For God's sake, use it for the good of my people." And during the last hours of her agony, and while in delirium, she kept crying out as if in real anguish of soul: "My father, my father!" And again, "Oh, brother,

ARRESTED ATTENTION
The grey-haired stranger bent over the desk.

"Are you the society editor?" he asked.

"I am."

"Are you the person who wrote up the account of last night's big reception?"

"Yes, anything wrong with it?"

"That's what I want to find out. Look here. In speaking of my daughter you say she swept round the room with an inherited grace that arrested everyone's attention. Now why did you write that?"

"Why it struck me as an opportunity for a neat compliment to her esteemed parents, that's all."

"You're sure you didn't mean to insult her?"

ENGLAND THROUGH JAPANESE EYES
THE THEATRE
By K. Sugimura, Special Correspondent of the Tokyo Asahi, in the London Mail.

I have for the first time visited a London theatre. Seated in the stalls at His Majesty's, watching Mr. Beerbohn Tree and his company in "Julius Caesar," my chief impression was not of the difference between Japanese and English acting, but of the points of uniformity.

The essential manner of expressing one's feelings is the same on the English as on the Japanese stage, apart from the gesticulations of the actors. The manner of articulation, emphasis, adomition and praise, and the interpretation of the great human feelings of love or hatred, reluctance or earnestness, are exactly alike with English actors as with Japanese.

The English theatre itself is different in many ways from that in my own country. In Japan almost every theatrical performance begins at ten or eleven in the morning and lasts until midnight. As a rule, three different plays are performed in one day—one historical, one modern and the third musical. There are long intervals between the acts of from 20 to 40 minutes, and sometimes even an hour. In these intervals there is a great deal of bustle and confusion, some of the audience standing up, some shouting to one another, waiters running to and fro among the spectators, dealers in cakes and fruits calling their wares, and the like. Most of the onlookers eat their meals in the theatre in these intervals.

Some Differences.

In the English theatre you sit in stalls, we sit on the ground. You make attendance at the play a matter of dress, form, ceremony and fashion. We do not, for we go to the theatre for amusement. Any kind of clothing will do with us, no matter where you sit. In Japan the higher class spectators do her lord. But the manner in which Portia spoke to Brutus on the stage on Saturday evening, seemed strange indeed. We would consider that she addressed her husband in too equal a style. Had she been a Japanese wife, she would have shown him more reverence. She put her face near to his, pleading with him, and she placed her arms around him. No Japanese wife of a man of great position would be so familiar with her lord. She would show him more respect and more deference. The Japanese wife who saw this performance would at once say, "This is too Godesha-like."

I prefer the Japanese fashion here. We think in Japan that the husband is greater than the wife, and that the wife should do him reverence and pay him respect. We have many good arguments to support us in so thinking, but this is not the place to advance them.

The Actor's Social Position.

I find that in England the social position of actors is very different from what it is in Japan. Here they occupy high positions, they are sometimes given public honors, and the chief of them mix freely with people of the best classes. This is not so in Japan. There the social position of the actor is wretched. Under the unenviable general term "geinin," actors, popular lecturers, jugglers and circus men are all treated equally, and they are all regarded as far inferior in social rank to the common people. It was quite a surprise to the people of Japan when in March the Marquis Satomi invited ten well-known actors to dinner.

The cause of this social ostracism in the past has lain not merely with the public but with the actors also. They are realizing that the popular treatment of them has been mostly due to their own ill-considered conduct and lack of culture. Little by little they are striving to raise themselves, and as they do so Japan will soon learn to treat their not-as-objects of contempt but as artists.

Some may have expected me to find greater points of contrast between the English and Japanese drama. But, paradoxical as it may sound, Europe is not so European as I supposed when in Japan. In spite of the endless variety of races, languages, customs, dwellings and the like, the main impression one receives is that this world is after all a human world, where people of all races entertain similar feelings. Where humanity stretches out to humanity, even the lack of a common language cannot prevent understanding. In the feudal ages of Japan, when the country was divided into small principalities, the different dominions were largely apart. When the vassals of a lord of the northeast of Japan happened to meet with those of the southern Satsuma, the tone and accents were so different that they could not understand one another.

What did they do on such occasions? They sang a certain kind of song, a kind we call "uta." The "uta" served as the medium of communication, not only because the language used was, as it is now, uniform all over Japan, but because the tone contained in it appealed to the common feelings of humanity. Tastes may differ, but not the senses. The beauty of England is certain to be admired by the Japanese, and vice versa. So in visiting the English theatre the main thing that came home to me was that the artistic expression of the emotions, whether shown by the great actor of England or the great actor of Japan, appeals to those primary instincts of people of both nations alike that rise above the limitations of differing speech.

ont come directly to the entrance of the theatre and buy their tickets. They first go to one of the tea houses in the neighborhood (shibui jaya), and there they obtain tickets, programmes and pamphlets containing plans of the performance. They leave their cloaks, shoes, overcoats, hats, umbrellas, etc., in the tea house, and they come there to rest or to take tea in the long intervals between the acts. A visit to a theatre takes a whole day, and the spectator returns home late at night.

The man who has visited a Japanese theatre thinks that he has a very good excuse for doing very little but rest on the following day.

Thus the order and the decorum of the English audience could not fail to impress me, although I prefer the Japanese custom of not making the occasion for a special display of dress. I was at first somewhat disappointed in the size of the English theatre, for, looking from the stalls, it seemed to me much smaller than I had expected. During the play, however, I went to the top of the upper circle and saw there the very deep balconies full of people. Then I realized that, while in our Japanese theatres we have greater floor space, you accommodate your audiences in tiers.

Men in Women's Parts.

To a Japanese it is somewhat surprising to find all the women's parts taken by actresses. We have very few women performing on the stage in Japan, and the parts, whether male or female, are nearly all taken by men. Where actresses do perform, as in the case of the celebrated actress Sada Yacco, they are usually dressed as men. Our performers possess great art in disguising their sex. Those who have seen the famous actor Kitamura dressed as a Japanese heroine will bear me out in this.

I observed with great attention the acting of Portia, the wife of Brutus. The play of "Julius Caesar" was well known to me long before I came to England. I studied it as a boy, and my professor in Japan made me learn many of its great speeches. The character of Portia especially appeals to me, for she has the nobility and greatness of a Japanese lady in the Middle Ages, willing to sacrifice everything for

How few realize that twenty-five per cent of all disease has its origin in some interference with the function of elimination.

The whole body exists by reason of the transference of fluids through its component parts.

Up to a certain point the body has power to object to destructive elements, but this power is limited.

When it happens that the body is loaded with wastes and poisons which it can't eliminate, fermentation, decay, and germ life run riot through the blood.

VOICE RESTORED BY FRIGHT.

Miss May Dwyer, of Ansonia, Conn., lost her voice while singing at a fair in St. Mary's hall a year ago last winter. At the conclusion of her song she was loudly cheered, but when she appeared on the stage she was unable to speak.

Physicians were unable to restore her voice, and as a last resort it was planned to give her a sudden shock in the hope of restoring her voice. A few nights ago two of her sisters went up stairs and hid in a closet, and Miss Dwyer was sent up in search of something. When she entered the dark room her sisters robed in white, sprang out, and Miss Dwyer screamed. Her voice is now as good as it ever was.

LORD ROSEBERY, THE HERMIT
He is the Loneliest Man in Political Life, and Finds Happiness Only in His Library.

"The main thing which impresses me when I look at the Earl of Rosebery is the sadness of the man. I should say he is one of the loneliest men in London," says John Foster in the Manchester Chronicle.

Yet by all ordinary canons he should be radiant with happiness—a peer having married into the Rothschild family, and therefore more than passing rich, a man who has been prime minister of England, has won the blue ribbon of the turf, is one of the most effective debaters in the land, can make his audience roar with wit, a welcome guest at all dinner parties, a deeply read writer of books, himself a man, indeed, about whose personality there is a glamor, and who never does nor says anything without the attention of the country being focused upon him.

Such a combination would induce most men to walk through the last years of their lives with smiling countenances. If, however, you could probe the heart of Lord Rosebery, you would find that he is a disappointed man. In fact most great men are disappointed with their own lives. The public only see their successes. They themselves secretly mourn over their failures.

Of a Sad Countenance.

The face of Lord Rosebery is one of the saddest I ever have seen. The most sad countenance upon which I have ever looked is that of the Sultan of Turkey. In the case of both men the sadness lay in the eyes. Lord Rosebery's eyes are large, grey and melancholy. They seem to be covered with a film of despair. He looks like a man who has eaten the fruit of life and found it very bitter.

I know his nature does not fit with Lord Rosebery's reputation of being the wittiest of our politicians. He can reduce his opponents to ridicule, his mind is clear, elastic with literary phrases and illusions, and his irony is none the less cutting because it is so genuine. He is a man who has not been burned by the world, and his listeners hold their sides while shaking with hilarity at the fertility of his fancy. "Surely," must think the public, this man spends a happy life when he can regard the world with thoughts so whimsical!

There lies the tragedy. There are few intellectual men who have not a dual personality, one for days to peck at the eyes of men. It has been my fortune to know many distinguished folk regarded by the public as humorists. Yet the humor has been but a thin veneer to hide the tremendous seriousness of their thoughts. It takes a serious man to be witty, though any fool can be a buffoon.

Under the Cloak of Humor.

Lord Rosebery's sparkling speech is really a cloak to cover the seared condition of his heart. He knows the public; he knows how it likes to be tickled into laughter; he understands that an argument can often best be demonstrated with a joke; he is funny simply to escape the deep gloom of his soul.

It is a product of our higher culture, disliking the hurly-burly of our crude political methods of warfare. And yet he feels he must temporize with modern life.

Though the story goes that in his early years he made the boast he would do three great things: marry the vicar's daughter, win the Derby and become prime minister of England, I doubt whether the realization, which he certainly achieved, brought him any real satisfaction. That his wife was the wealthiest daughter of the Rothschild's had little to do with the reason of his marriage. The happiness of his married life was cut short by the death of Lady Rosebery. He took to the breeding of horses, not because race courses had any special attraction for him, but because horse-racing is an excitement; as a rich man he could afford to buy the best horse-flesh, and the winning of races provided him with a distraction. He moved to the south of France, where he dealt with a natural consequence of his close association with Mr. Gladstone.

Omnivorous Reader.

But from long study of the man, I think it has not been political triumph, successes on the turf, nor the possession of great wealth which has provided him with whatever little gleam of sunshine which has come into his life. It is in his library that he has secured whatever happiness which has come his way. He is an omnivorous reader.

All literature is within his range. The books which attract him most are those dealing with the personality of great men. Read the two most recent of his own volumes, the study of Lord Randolph Churchill, and "The Last Phase" in which he deals with the closing years of Napoleon. You cannot help being conscious that all the time he is looking for some resemblance to his own life. Particularly in "The Last Phase" are you conscious that he never dismisses from his thoughts, when dwelling upon the melancholy ending of the great Napoleon a comparison with his own life.

He is a victim of insomnia. For long nights he cannot secure a wink of sleep. The mere reading of books becomes a weariness to him. He seeks forgetfulness in long walks. Many a time, when most of London is in bed, Lord Rosebery sallies out from his house in Berkeley Square and tramps the streets for hours. Occasionally a paragraph appears in the newspapers that he has left England. In five or six weeks you read another paragraph that he has returned to England. He has a villa in Italy, and there he goes alone, to spend his time in quiet contemplation.

Politician by Accident.

Paradoxical though it may seem, the very field in which Lord Rosebery has been most distinguished, that of politics, is where he has most failed. He became a politician more by accident than by inclination. In other directions, as well as his associations with Mr. Gladstone, which raised him to the pinnacle of political fame, rather than any peculiar sagacity.

Indeed, Lord Rosebery does not possess what is called "the political instinct." The great politician, suffused as he generally is with an overwhelming desire to do what is best for his country, generally lacks the quality of sagacity to see from his opponents' point of view. Lord Rosebery has never been in that condition. Even when prime minister he was hardly a party man, and many of his most ardent supporters were not quite sure in their trust. There is no doubt that with his clear vision his power of regarding subjects on their own merits, and not considering the party advantage or disadvantage, steered him with the methods of political warfare. It was not until he was called upon to keep to the narrow path of purely party rectitude that he discovered how irksome was the way.

He was inclined to be free-minded before. But after his experience of the penmanship he burst the bonds of party and became an independent, or what the Americans in unfeeling language describe as a "mugwump."

The Sphinx in Parliament.

Therefore it is that Lord Rosebery, perfectly conscientious, has not to-day the trust of any section of politicians.

He has become a party unto himself. He is just Lord Rosebery, with the acute and the witty mind, the man who brings the great force of his mental capacities to bear upon all the subjects of the day without any consideration as to whether he is aiding one party or hindering it.

Nowadays he sits on the cross benches in the House of Lords, the seats provided for those peers who will not give their adhesion to either of the political forces. He is a fairly constant attendant in the chamber. But he rarely speaks. He has become something of a sphinx. He sits with his hands clasped behind his head, and with cold, implacable countenance watches with lack-lustre eye the contending forces, but rarely joining in the fray himself.

When he talks, his voice reverberating, his gestures that of a skilled actor, the whole place is hushed in attention. He never finishes with a personal remark. He says what he has to say, suddenly stops dead, and then walks back to his seat.

Because nobody can tell what line of argument he will pursue he is an enigma, and therefore he is interesting. His opinions are always his own, and delivered careless of the thoughts of others.

It is his aloofness of mind which makes him a lonely man—the loneliest man in our political life.

TWIN BROTHERS DROWNED.

Twin brothers named Thomas and Edwin Patten, of Southampton, who were inseparable during their lives, met death together in a boating accident. The greatest affection existed between them, and they were seldom apart of each other's company. They worked together, and when they married they still continued to live under the same roof. Recently the brothers spent their spare time in making a flat-bottomed boat, and recently it was launched. They decided to take their wives for a row on the Itchen, but a friend who saw how unsafe the craft was dissuaded the women, and the men set out alone. Cries for help were afterwards heard, and a search resulted in the punt being found in a waterlogged condition. The twin brothers were drowned.

VANCOUVER SCHOOLS

Will Be Closed With Exception of High School and Entrance Classes.

Because of the prevalence of measles all the Vancouver schools will be closed after to-day, with the exception of the High school and the entrance classes. This action was decided upon by the board of school trustees at the regular meeting on Friday evening upon the receipt of a letter from Medical Health Officer Dr. F. F. Underhill, in which he advised the board to that effect. The schools assemble to-day for the whole day, but after that there will be no more attendance required during the present term at the schools affected.

letter stated that the company was considering moving its creamery outside the limits of the municipality, and promised that, while the establishment was still within the limits, every effort would be made to ameliorate the conditions referred to.

A complaint was also received about a duck farm kept by a Chinaman, located near the slaughter house. It was pointed out that the slaughter house was as much a nuisance as the farm. The sanitary inspector was instructed to see that the regulations are carried out in both cases.

A deputation from the Cloverdale Municipal Improvement Association was heard in support of a communication from that body, complaining of the blocking of certain streets by the street railway. This matter was left in the hands of the road superintendent.

Reeve Brydon announced, on behalf of the committee appointed to purchase a lot for the site of the new municipal hall, that one had been bought in the vicinity of the old building. The frontage was 160 feet and the price $500.

Plans for the sub-division of Dr. Toimie's farm were received, considered and approved.

At the request of a number of residents in the municipality, as previously intimated in the Times, the council decided to insist on the extension of Reynolds street to Cedar Hill cross road, as one of the provisions for the sub-division of the North Dairy Farm, belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company. Until this is provided the plans of the sub-division will not be accepted.

By-law providing for the revenue by-law passed its third reading, and will come up for final consideration at the next meeting. It increases the cost of liquor licenses in the municipality from $50 to $75 for six months. After the consideration of some minor matters the council adjourned until June 25th.

PRAISE FOR PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

One Who Has Lived There Describes it as District of Great Riches.

H. H. Lampan, who recently arrived at Edmonton from Dunvegan in the Peace River country, 450 miles northwest of Edmonton, is an old newspaper man, and is full of news from his district, and very enthusiastic over its resources and future.

For some years he was manager and editor of the Grand Forks Evening Times, but the lure of the north drew his attention to the Peace River country, and he has since been in the district.

Mr. Lampan took a trip to the Dakotas and Minnesota, and took with him some samples of wheat. The wheat is of a variety called "Yellow Wonder" and is of a fine quality. The soil is a black vegetable loam from 1 to 3 feet in depth overlaid with a subsoil of light yellow sand with a depth of from 5 to 8 feet. Wherever this rich vegetable mould has been cultivated, crops of great profusion and quality have been produced.

OUR NEWEST CARPETS AND SQUARES

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition (or disease) which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a break-down, as it were, of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same: more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. Now, what ails is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigor.

VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY

To throw off these morbid feelings, and experience nerves that as night succeeds day, the more certainly secured by a course of the celebrated life-reviving tonic

See a new science imparted in place of what had so lately seemed worn-out, "used up," and valueless. The wonderful restorative is purely vegetable and innocuous, is agreeable to the taste—suitable for all constitutions and conditions, in either sex; and it is difficult to imagine a case of disease or derangement, whose main features are those of debility, that will not be speedily and permanently benefited by this new-falling recuperative essence, which is destined to cast into oblivion everything that had preceded it for this wide-spread and numerous class of human ailments.
