SCOTS HONOR THE DAY OF ANDRA

ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE RACE ARE DWELT UPON

Seventh Banquet of St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society Held in Grill been in the country for 128 years. The U. E. Loyalists had come to this land not because they were in sympathy with the ministers of King George who imposed taxation without representation on the colonists of New England but because they believed that for all the evil arising within the empire the remedy was to be found within the empire. This was the true loyalist idea. The speaker advised the young men present to take an active share in the government of the country and so make it the country they would have it to be. As descendants of a people which had been a ruling race all over the world they should leave their impress as Scotsmen on the institutions of their country. Let them build up a nation which would recognize the responsibilities imposed upon it by its commanding position, responsibilities which it could not shirk. He would be ashamed to be a Canadian if Canadians failed to do their duty in the matter of national defence, whatever the way decided upon by those upon whom the decision rested; let it be hoped it would be a decision in harmony with our ideals and principles. Mr. Lugin spoke of the place Scotsmen had occupied in the world's history and recalled that in the progress of Canada they had filled a large place. George Brown had given us responsible government, Sir John A. Macdonald had laid the foundations of confederation, George Stephen and Donald Smith had given Canada its first transcontinental railway and William Mackenzie and Donald Mann were giving it another.

Ald. Okell, replying to the toast of the city, proposed by J. Mowat, stated that whatever hard things might be said of the streets there had been laid during the year twenty miles of sidewalks at a cost of fifty per cent. less than ever before, 33 miles of surface drains, 44 miles of surface drain connections, 45 miles of main sewers and 50 miles of sewer connections. No city of Victoria's size had better streets.

Robert Stevens made the most eloquent and racy speech of the evening by proposing the toast of Scotia. He dwelt on the fact that in every realm of life Scotsmen were found pre-eminent, and he went on to point out that they were none the less true Canadians because they were devoted to the country of their birth or origin. N. H. Nesbitt, who was the only one present in full Highland evening dress, replied to this toast.

Other toasts drunk with equal enthusiasm were: St. Andrew's and Caledonian and kindred societies, proposed by H. W. Douglas and responded to by James Fyfe Wilson; the Press, proposed by A. Manson and replied to by Robert J. Hartley; the ladies, proposed by Walter Walker and responded to by H. B. Thomson, M. P. P.

Mr. Thomson, in the course of his remarks, referred to the opening of the Panama Canal and what he considered was the share of Scotsmen in securing for Victoria its share of the great trade to come. He reminded his hearers that eighty per cent. of the timber of the province was to be found on Vancouver Island, and that this was timber the value of which in the next ten years it was impossible to figure out. The Panama Canal would take our timber all over—Europe, South America, Eastern Canada and the Eastern States would take it.

"And we must demonstrate to the Ottawa government that we have got to have proper harbor development here to cope with the trade which will offer," concluded Mr. Thomson, amid general applause.

Between the speeches songs were rendered by John Dobbie and William Adamson, D. Black played concertina solos and Will Lochrane gave one of his inimitable monologues. During the day messages of greeting had been sent to the leading Scottish societies in the Dominion and at the banquet the following greetings in reply were read:

St. Andrew's Society, Montreal—MacLeod or Macdonald, Macgregor or Campbell, Cameron, Ogilvie, Gordon or Hay. Who cares a preen-heid for the hue o' the tartan?

We're a' o' ae clan on St. Andrew's Day.

St. Andrew's Society, Toronto—St. Andrew's Day—the day we blow our horn. Cordial greetings from this society.

St. Andrew's Society, Winnipeg—Greetings. May your feast days be many and your fast days be few.

St. Andrew's Society, Edmonton—Proudly we stand a' sae firmly united and proud o' the fame o' the auld mitherland this night.

St. Andrew's Society, Vancouver—Auld mair the five and twentieth time.

We rak a' friendly niver, mon, And hope that a' our brither Scots This night hae nocht ta' grieve, mon, J. W. Galloway, Chilliwack, president of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society of British Columbia, wrote as follows:

"I beg to acknowledge yours with your kind invitation to your annual celebration of St. Andrew's night, and regret that as I have accepted the invitation of the Vancouver Society it will be impossible for me to attend. I hope you will have a very pleasant evening."

Gae, bring my guide auld harp and mair, Gae bring it free and fast; For I maun sing anither sang Ere a' my glee be past, And trow ye, as I sing, my lads, The burden o' it shall be Auld Scotland's hames and Scotland's knowes, And Scotland's hills for me; I'll drink a cup o' Scotchland yet, Wi' a' the honors three.

Letters of regret at inability to be present were read from Premier McBride, Hon. William Templeman, Lt.

YOU TAKE NO CHANCES WHEN YOU BUY A

Heintzman & Co. Piano

The reasons for this are well known to those who are familiar with the structure of the instrument and with the strict methods of the Heintzman & Co. Factory

THE MATERIALS	THE WORKMEN
Every piece of metal with the slightest flaw, every piece of wood imperfect in its grain or not thoroughly seasoned, is rejected—it is not tried out to see if it will do—it is not even given the benefit of a doubt.	Each workman, too, brings to his task skill of the highest order—and that skill is still further developed and kept to the highest possible standard by the rigid discipline for which the Heintzman & Co. factory is well known.

It's "worth while" calling at our warehouses and seeing for yourself our display of Pianos made by "Ye Olde Firme" of Heintzman & Co., Ltd.

NEWS OF SPORT

PACKY M'FARLAND WON BARREN VICTORY

Outpointed Murphy All Through but Could Not Land the Knockout Punch

San Francisco, Dec. 1.—Packy McFarland, the idol of the Chicago stockyards, won and lost yesterday, when he was awarded the decision over Harlem Tommy Murphy at the end of twenty rounds of fighting before 6,000 critical spectators. McFarland's victory over the tough New Yorker, whom 90 per cent of those present expected him to knock out, was clean and left little room for argument, but the rank and file of experts and fight fans seemed unanimous in their view that as for being after Wolgast, the Chicago man was impossible. Hence his victory over Murphy left a tinge of disappointment among fight followers which they were not backward in expressing. Murphy gave an exhibition of gameness and ability to come back rarely seen in a prize ring. During the earlier rounds of the battle, McFarland fairly smothered the little fighter with a dazzling variety of punches, from which there was no escape. He sent Murphy flat on his back, but Tommy was up in a trice, apparently none the worse for wear. Time and again Murphy was all but fought out of the ring into the laps of the newspaper crowd, and appeared to be in great distress, but the well-defined punch was not forthcoming to give him his quietus.

For twelve rounds the battle was one-sided, then it was noticed that McFarland began to slow down, and seemingly had tired.

Summing up the battle, McFarland outpointed his adversary to such an extent that the latter's gameness and ability to absorb punishment did little to make it a two-man affair, but the knockout punch was lacking, and the reputed powerful McFarland right cross proved a negligible quantity. McFarland expects to leave for Chicago on Monday, whence he will proceed to New York to keep an engagement with Milt Wells, the British boxer.

BAYLEY FIGHTS IN CALGARY TO-NIGHT

Victoria Lightweight to Meet Lombard Before Going After Billy Lauder

Calgary, Dec. 1.—A boxing match has been arranged for to-night in the Lyceum theatre, Edmonton, when Joe Bayley will meet Harry Lombard in a ten-round bout. In addition to the fight of the evening there will be two preliminaries, and a real smoking concert. It will be good fast boxing, the contestants being governed by the clean break rules.

MAY BAR BLACKS.

New York, Dec. 1.—The New York boxing commission is considering the advisability of enacting a rule that white pugilists shall not put on the gloves with negroes in public bouts at clubs operating under the law. This would mean that Langford, Johnson, Jeannette and McVey would have to fight among themselves for the negro championship, while Kaufmann, Flynn, Carl Morris, Paiser, Kennedy, Lester and others would be compelled to compete for the white man's title only.

NANAIMO AGAINST VICTORIA SATURDAY

Something Doing When Hornets Play Here—Changes in Local Squad

There will be something doing when the Nanaimo Hornets and Victoria come together on Saturday afternoon in the Kechikan cup Rugby football game. The locals have lost one game, and if they keep their grip on the championship they can't afford to drop another just now. Nanaimo is equally determined to grab a victory.

They have some good players in the little northern town and always put up a good showing, although perhaps they are better on their ground than anywhere else. Victoria's game with Vancouver last Saturday brought out the weak points very clearly, and Captain Billy Newcombe has done everything in his power to strengthen these. Martin is in Shires' place on the three-quarter line, and Straker, Wise and E. Gillespie are replacing Sweeney, Miller and Milligan in the pack. The change in the three-quarter line should have a good effect, for, although Shires is quick and willing, he has not had the experience. He was taken over as a half back, but owing to Frank Nason's absence a shift around was necessary. The wisdom of the changes in the forward line is not so evident. Leo Sweeney is always a hard worker and his absence will be a loss. He is taking a rest this Saturday. Wise and Gillespie should be an improvement on Miller and Milligan. Whichever way you look at it is going to be a tough struggle for the visitors.

Neither Vincent nor Nason are on the team again this week-end. The trouble with Frank Nason is that he will not practice and Vincent's ankle is still weak. The game will be played at Oak Bay, starting at 2 1/2 o'clock.

The Victoria team—Full back, Johnson; three-quarters, Gallier, Ogden, Stewart and Martin; half backs, Rich and Newcombe; forwards, S. Gillespie, Helmekey, R. Gillespie, Carstairs, Straker, Simpson, Jeffs and Wise.

Nanaimo has its choice of W. Moresby, A. D. R. Scott or F. A. Sparks as referee.

INDOOR BOWLING

The Uptons won three straight games from the Miners last evening. The scores:

Pritchett	1	2	3

MAY PLAY ON SUNDAY.

Question as to Whether Big Four Will Play Sunday Lacrosse is Raised.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—Will the Big Four play Sunday lacrosse? A man on the inside says they will on the Maisonneuve grounds at Montreal. There is nothing against the law in this Sabbath-breaking departure, but it is certainly against all the traditions of the game and of the men who have controlled it. Hitherto to play lacrosse on Sunday, even in an exhibition game, was suspension in the C. L. A., and the N. L. A. teams have always respected the law, under which they have been raised.

The plan, however, if attempted, is likely to come to a sudden cropper when it reaches Archbishop Bruchesi. It may get by the Big Four magnates, but the Toronto, Tecumseh, Nationals and Irish-Canadians will scarcely be able to salve the archbishop's conscience.

LOCAL MCGILL PLAYERS.

College Teams Leaving With High School For Vancouver—The Games.

The local McGill teams which go to Vancouver with the High School students to-day, follow:

Boys' Hockey Team: Goal, Fort; fullbacks, Stevens and Hope; half backs, Hamilton, Dowler (capt.) and Ross; forwards, Harrison, Sivertz and Wood, Yeo and Robinson. Reserves, Hamington and Spencer.

Girls' Basketball Team: Forwards, Misses E. Moss and G. Ryan (capt.); centre, Miss M. Hamilton; guards, Misses C. Bissett and E. Gonnason. Reserves, Miss B. Brynjolfson.

Boys' Basketball Team: Forwards, Robinson and Yeo (capt.); centre, Ross; guards, Stevens and Sivertz. Reserve, Dowler.

High School plays Vancouver High School basketball team in Y. A. C. hall this evening; girls' hockey at Brockton Point to-morrow morning, and Rugby in the early afternoon.

The local McGill plays Vancouver McGill boys' hockey to-morrow morning, and the National school girls' and boys' basketball at the V. A. C. hall early to-morrow evening.

SPORT NOTES

At the meeting of the Victoria and District Soccer Association last evening there was some talk of breaking away from the B. C. A. A. U. and forming an amateur constitution of their own, but, of course, nothing so radical as that was attempted. The discussion was occasioned by the action of the Vancouver branch of the union's action in reinstating Frank Youson, an admitted professional, at its last meeting. It is likely that the amateur body will hear from the local football association, when the members cool down and are in a suitable frame of mind to take reasonable steps. Nothing at all was done last evening.

Louis Cass, of Los Angeles, Cal., will captain the 1912 Stanford Rugby team, succeeding Benny Erb of Chesham, Vancouver Island. The appointment was unanimous by the college players.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MEETS.

Big Leaguers Gather in New York December 12—National Commission Meetings.

New York, Dec. 1.—The annual meeting of the National League will be held in this city Tuesday, December 12. Ban Johnson, the American League president, has set no official date for his league.

There is virtually no business for either major league, aside from schedule matters. Ban Johnson hopes to have the joint schedule meeting held at this time, eliminating the spring meetings of the two major leagues. Of more general interest will be the National Commission meetings December 11. The alleged ticket-scalping scandals of the world's series will be threshed out and the commission will meet representatives of the Eastern and Pacific Coast Leagues and American Association to modify the national agreement, giving higher classification to the three big minors.

NANAIMO HORNETS HAVE DISBANDED

The Coal City Team Will Not Play Again This Season

The Nanaimo Hornets are out of the running and the club has decided to disband the team for the season. Lack of players and money has brought about this result, which is announced in a wire received this morning from Thomas S. Booth, secretary of the Hornets.

Meeting called to-night to select a team for Saturday. No players were in attendance and the club management decided to disband for the season. Finances prevent sending a team to Victoria on Saturday and we consider the Hornets out of the schedule entirely.

WEST BASKETBALL TEAM.

The Victoria West basketball team for the game against Duncan in the V. W. A. A. hall to-morrow evening is: Guards, S. Ross and S. Jenkins; centre, A. Corbett; forwards, Bob Shyte and Charles Brown. The game will commence at 8.30, with Mr. Wilson handling the whistle.

NEW LIGHTHOUSE LAMP

The use of electric lamps for lighthouses presents certain disadvantages, says the Scientific American. It is therefore with some interest that we follow the course of some experiments in France on the use of a new kind of incandescent light for lighthouse purposes. The lamp in question has a number of filaments mounted somewhat after the fashion of the fibres of an incandescent gas mantle. In this way a very strong light is secured, which, moreover, has the desirable property of being very uniform in all parts of the circumference. According to recent trials the new type of lamp gave twenty times as much light as a Welsbach burner and required very little attention. The lamp is particularly adapted for shore lighthouses, which are easily placed in communication with electric light mains.

As a step towards combating increased cost of living, the French cabinet has introduced a bill which will place municipal authorities in a position to exercise effective control upon the prices of the necessities of life. The plan is to lend money for the establishment of local co-operative butchers' and bakers' shops under a municipal regime.

Prices Advancing In Cranmore

There are eleven lots left in Cranmore Place, North Hampshire Road, between Bowker avenue and Cranmore road. These are all held at prices considerably lower than surrounding property. TO PROTECT OURSELVES WE HAVE DECIDED TO ADVANCE ALL LOTS ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS EACH AFTER SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9TH

The present prices are

Lots 1 and 2, on Bowker avenue, each	$950
Lot 3, on Hampshire Road	$800
Lot 9, on Hampshire Road	$900
Lots 13 and 14, on Cranmore Road, each	$1,000
Lot 16, on Cranmore Road	$950
Lot 17, on Cranmore Road	$900
Lot 28, Bowker Avenue	$950
Lot 29 Bowker Avenue	$900
Lot 30 Bowker Avenue	$850

There is sea view from several of the lots, and all are near the sea and almost adjoining the new cricket and tennis grounds. The street car is a little over a block away and will soon pass the property.

Work is about to commence on the Uplands Farm and these lots are in the direct line of the improvements which will carry prices away up. This is the last opportunity to obtain lots at speculative prices in this district. In the very near future they will be worth double what we are selling them at today. Remember that there are only eleven lots left and the prices advance Saturday, Dec. 9.

terday for the Mystic Shriners' gathering included J. J. Miller, H. H. Watson, M. P. P., and James Stark, Vancouver; D. E. MacKenzie, Robert Jardine, Angus Munn and Neil Nelson, New Westminster.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashfield have returned to Vancouver from Winnipeg, where they have been living since their marriage and are thinking of taking up their residence in that city. They are now making a short visit to Victoria and are staying at the Empress hotel. They were accompanied to the capital by Mrs. B. F. Crystdale and Mrs. A. B. Erskine. Mr. Crystdale and Mr. Erskine will join them there for the week-end.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday by Rev. A. Henderson, pastor Centennial Methodist church, at the parsonage, when Frank E. Marlon of the local post office staff, was united in marriage to Mrs. Annie Harding, formerly of Sidney, N. S. W. Mrs. G. W. Rowbottom assisted the bride and W. J. Dunn supported the groom. After the ceremony a pleasant evening was spent by friends at the home of the bridegroom, Superior street. The happy couple left for a visit to the Sound cities.

A bright event on Tuesday afternoon was Mrs. John M. O'Driscoll's post nuptial reception at Vancouver. Her apartments at Holly Lodge were filled with callers all afternoon. The hostess wore a blue satin gown with headed chiffon tunic, and trimmed with fringe. She was assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. George A. Fraser of Victoria. Mrs. Fraser wore a royal blue silk gown trimmed with fringe. The rooms were done with roses, carnations and smilax. Mrs. J. S. Mackay poured the tea and coffee and was wearing a beautiful brown satin gown. Assisting were: Miss Fraser of Victoria, who wore white broadcloth with pink fringe trimmings, and Miss O'Driscoll in a gown of Copenhagen blue silk.

In spite of the many musical attractions of the week, it is anticipated that the concert of the Ladies' Musical club, which is to be held to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 in the ball-room of the Alexandra Club, will be well attended, the members of the society deemed much interest in the success of these entertainments. The programme will be a very attractive one, and will give Victorians the opportunity of hearing a new tenor, Mr. Muirhead, who is making his first appearance before the select patrons and aficionados here as a new-comer to Victoria. She is a pianist of unusual ability, holding the degrees of R.A.M. and A.R.C.M., and will be welcomed by musical circles here as a distinct acquisition to their ranks. The programme which will be given to-morrow afternoon follows: Two pianos—Serenade and Allegro Glogos—Mendelssohn, Mrs. Burmeister and Miss Long; song—"My Old Shate"—H. Trotter, Mr. Muirhead; violin solo—Serenade—Schubert, Prof. Philo; song—"Should He Upbraid"—Bishop, Mrs. D. B. McLaren; trio—violin, Viola, piano—Mozart, Mrs. Margaret Tilly, Miss Tilly, Dr. Nash; song—"My Love's an Arbutus"—C. Villers Starford, Mr. Muirhead; piano solo—Fantaise Op. 15—Schubert, Allegro, Adagio, Mrs. D. B. Harris; song—"The Oak and the Ash"—Traditional, Mrs. D. B. McLaren; "God Save the King," Club accompanist—Mrs. A. J. Gibson.

is so powerful and persuasive in drawing trade as the plain unvarnished truth, backed up by high-class boots and shoes, averaging 40 to 50 per cent. less than the regular market value of the merchandise. The big closing out sale now in progress at McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART proves the above statement, because the people are the best judges of values; they know bargains when they see them; that's why the store has been crowded with eager purchasers every day since the inception of the sale. It is predicted that Saturday's business will eclipse all previous records, as great preparations have been made in providing a gigantic feast of bargains in all lines of Men's, Women's and Children's boots and shoes. The sale is of a strictly legitimate character and big price reductions throughout the entire stock. The policy is in keeping with McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART'S reputation for square dealing and reliable merchandise. Space does not permit a complete list of cut prices, nor could you be expected to believe such big price reductions possible without seeing the goods and prices as they really are. Come to-morrow, join the merry throngs of prudent buyers. Your bargain expectations will be fully realized.

NOBODY

can or dares offer high-class boots and shoes at such low prices as McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART. All other merchants must make a profit on their goods--McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART are quitting the shoe business and do not expect to make one cent of profit, but must convert their entire stock into cash quickly regardless of loss of money. Consequently it stands to reason that McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART cut prices are much lower than those of any Victoria store. The firm has been in business in Victoria for years and have never yet deceived the public, and will not do so now, as they value their name more than mere money. Please do not compare this sale with the so-called sales and other trade getting schemes often resorted to by unscrupulous stores; remember this is a genuine sale worthy of your serious attention. Big cases of shoes which orders were too late to countermand have just arrived and have been put in stock and will be offered to-morrow at less than actual wholesale cost. All makes and grades of boots and shoes have been marked low enough to satisfy the most expectant and exacting purchasers. You will not hesitate in buying for your present and future footwear after looking at McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART'S prices. Where can you duplicate McCANDLESS BROS. & CATHCART'S merchandise at low prices?

ANNUAL BANQUET OF CALEDONIANS

SCOTS CELEBRATE DAY OF ST. ANDREW

Enjoyable Evening at Empress Hotel Last Evening—Splendid Speeches and Songs

St. Andrew's Day was fittingly commemorated by the Caledonia Society with a banquet in the Empress hotel ball room last evening. Appropriate toasts were proposed and responded to in an interesting and at times amusing manner; and interspersed were songs rendered in those mellifluous tones which only a Scotchman can command. A unique feature of a long and elaborate menu was "The Haggis," perhaps the most renowned of all Scottish dishes. It was brought in to the music of the bagpipes.

Owing to the several attractions of a similar nature in progress there were not as many present as was expected. This, however, did not detract from the hearty enjoyment by all of the good things spread about them, and it was not until the wee hours of the morning that the company broke up.

Previous to the drinking of the royal toast the chairman, P. J. Riddell, expressed regret that His Honor the Lieut.-Governor was not among them, and explained that His Honor had been taken ill that afternoon.

Responding to the toast, "The President of the United States," the Hon. A. Smith remarked on the fitness of the way things had befallen that day, January 30. It was Thanksgiving Day throughout the United States and there was, therefore, a reason, outside his friendship and interest, for his presence at the Caledonia banquet board. He extolled his country to the skies, reviewing in brief some of the great achievements accomplished by it and mentioning in particular the Panama canal, which, although not yet completed, was expected to be by 1913 or at the latest, 1915. With a twinkle in his eye he intimated that there was no need for fortifications in Canada, for the United States would protect her little neighbor. The toast was proposed by Vice-President Manuel of the association.

"The Governor-General, Lieut.-Governor and the Parliaments of Canada" was proposed by Dr. Milne and responded to by Hon. Dr. Young. Both paid tributes to His Majesty's representatives, past and present, at Ottawa, and spoke with pride of the honor done Canada by the appointment of the Duke of Connaught, a member of the Royal Family. The Lieut.-Governors were also the subject of a brief eulogy. As for the Parliament of the Dominion the Hon. Dr. Young stated that they were on trial and he thought they would prove the soundness of the people's judgment.

Replying to a toast to the local Legislature, proposed by E. H. Paul, superintendent of city schools, H. B. Thomson, M.P.P., appealed to those present to do their utmost to prepare to receive the benefits of the Panama canal. "We cannot grab the canal from the United States as the English did the Suez from the French, but we can grab the major part of the benefits," was how he put it. "I appeal to you as Scotchmen to unite your efforts in bringing about the materialization of the harbor improvements. Every port on the coast is making preparations. At Seattle alone $10,000,000 has been appropriated for the purpose."

W. K. Houston availed himself of the opportunity, when proposing the toast to the mayor and the city council, to take the city fathers to account. He considered that they had done many things, but had left undone many which they were sent in to do. He deprecated the scrappy proclivities of the mayor and aldermen and thought they should make an end to this old get down to work. If they did he was sure they would find more time to devote to the interests of the people. He also thought the harbor improvement scheme should be pushed forward as quickly as possible.

Alderman Moresby and J. L. Beckwith replied in short addresses. The former repudiated Mr. Houston's suggestion that the council did not devote its entire time to the interests of the citizens. He enumerated many of the public works completed by the council since its inauguration and told of how much time it was necessary for an alderman to give to the city in order to fulfil all his duties. He was of the opinion that all disagreements and squabbles, notwithstanding the present council had done more for the city of Victoria than any other.

Mr. Moresby did not think that with the proposed breakwater in the royal harbor would be able to accommodate the seven-going steamers which would come through the Panama canal. They would have to go to Esquimaut, and he put this forth as one good reason why the city limits should be extended so as to include Esquimaut.

Mr. Beckwith heartily concurred in all the alderman had said, especially in regard to the council. He had been through it all, and his motto was "Don't knock, but boost." He agreed with Mr. Thomson that the citizens should work in unison to forward the interests of the city in every way, and in particular to bring about the completion of the harbor railway.

John Spouse and the Rev. W. Leslie Clay, respectively, presented and replied to the toast, "The Day and All Who Honor It." Other toasts were: "The Land We Left and the Land We Live In," proposed by Mr. Smith and responded to by the Rev. Dr. Campbell; and "Our Guests," "The Press," and "The Ladies."

The gathering broke up with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King."

The Evening Chit-Chat

By Ruth Cameron

A woman in our neighborhood who has recently had her youngest daughter taken to a nursing home, has had a nervous breakdown and is in a sanitarium. And she blames her trouble to a nervousness, pure and simple. "I was always used to young life around the house," she says, "and I missed it so. It seemed to me as if everything had just stopped."

Another woman who has lost one child by death and two by marriage has taken to spending much time at the home of a neighbor who was just a bare acquaintance in the old days. "I can't see what has come over Ellen—to be so intimate with Mrs. L.," comments one of her old friends. "She never used to have any use for her."

"Ah," responds a wiser woman. "You forget that Mrs. L. has three daughters growing up. Ellen really goes there to see them, to talk to them and their friends. She's just hungry for young life."

"I don't think that young people as a rule realize how large a part their lives are playing in living, their vitality and exuberance, their plans, ambitions and their wonderful power of saying 'Someday,' play in the older folks' lives."

With the eternal selfishness of youth, they seize the stage for themselves, crowding the older generation into the auditorium to be their audience, and then, when they are tired of their own playing, they run lightly away and quite forget that their audience, now grown quite too old and stiff to climb back onto the stage and become actors themselves again, are left to gaze drearily at the dispiriting vacancy of an empty stage.

Now it seems to me that just as the pauper of worldly goods becomes the responsibility of the community and is supplied with the necessities of physical life out of a general store, so the pauper of young life becomes the responsibility of the community and should be supplied with enough young life to keep them from social starvation, out of the general store.

And I think those who should take charge of this responsibility, who should be the "overservers of the poor" for this kind of poverty, are the young people of the neighborhood, the "crowd" to which the missing young folks belonged.

I think the sight of any of these empty homes should be a challenge to all the young folks who pass them to "run in" for a few minutes; to carry their own joys and ambitions there as well as into their own homes; to go occasionally to ask for news of the distant ones; and always to carry news there when any comes to them.

I know it's difficult, young folks, for you who cannot help feeling you will always be young, to fancy yourself middle-aged and absorbed and bound up in other young folks' lives.

And I know it's almost impossible for you to imagine further and see yourself lonesome and depressed because these imaginary beings, having become the centre of your universe, slip lightly away and leave that universe empty.

Nevertheless, all this is very likely to happen to you some day.

And you'll remember it won't you, the next time you are passing one of those empty homes that calls to you to come in?

NELSON'S LOG-BOOK.

Historical Document to Be Sold by Auction.

The log-book of the Victoria, from September 19, 1865, to January 15, 1866, and therefore including an account of the battle of Trafalgar, is to be sold shortly by Messrs. Sotheby, London. Thomas Atkinson, sailing master or navigating lieutenant of the Victoria, among whose duties the keeping of the "deck log" fell by naval route, fortunately retained this record after the usual copy demanded by the regulations had been deposited at the Admiralty. It now comes into the market through the grandson of his daughter, Mrs. Carey, wife of Commander Thomas Carey, R. N. The value of this direct provenance is increased by the fact that the present log-book records the signals which passed between the Victoria and the fleet on the morning of the great day, whereas the Admiralty log does not mention them.

Thus at 6.22 a. m. on October 21 the "General" received the signal "Prepare for battle" from the Victoria. Three-quarters of an hour after (7.5 a. m.) several vessels were signalled that "Ships may take such stations as are most convenient at the time without regard to any established order of sailing." At 9.15 a. m. the log-book ceases to record the signals passing. Then at 11.30 a. m. the battle commenced. The Victoria opened fire at four minutes past twelve, and at 12.29 the action became general. "About 1.12 the Right Honorable Lord Viscount Nelson, K.B. and Commander-in-Chief, was wounded in the shoulder," the record continues. "The action continued general until 3 o'clock, when several of the enemy's ships around us had struck."

At 4.15 . . . observed one of the enemy's ships at 1.12 the Right Honorable Lord Viscount Nelson, K.B. and Commander-in-Chief, was wounded in the shoulder," the record continues. "The action continued general until 3 o'clock, when several of the enemy's ships around us had struck."

The compiler of this careful record, who was himself wounded in the battle, used to tell the following curious anecdote: During the action the Victoria's tiller ropes were shot away. Atkinson was descending the quarter deck in order to see them replaced when Nelson addressed him. As he stopped to reply, a shot knocked away the step of the ladder on which he was standing, and let him down to the next without injury. "Not hurt, Atkinson?" said Nelson. "No, my lord, all right," was the reply. Atkinson entered the navy in 1790 and in 1796 became sailing master on the Thespes, Nelson's ship. He served with Nelson till Trafalgar in all the great naval engagements, and received a certificate naming: "I hereby certify that Mr. Thomas Atkinson is capable of being master of any first-rate, and I recommend him as one of the best masters I have seen in the royal navy." Nelson and Bronte. In 1859 he became King's harbor master at Portsmouth, and held the post till his death in 1836.

No such important document connected with recent history has ever come before the English market.

A fishmonger at Sible, Heddingham, Essex, when the important event of his marriage came, to save valuable time, sandwiched it into his daily village round. After calling on several customers with his pony and cart, he arrived at Stambourne, where his bride lived, drove up to the church, leaving his equipage outside, and went to the altar just as he was, fishmonger's blue apron included. The service completed, the couple went their several ways, the bridegroom continuing his round, and the bride proceeding by herself to her new home to await his return.

JEWELS OF QUEENS.

In the great safes at Windsor Castle among the jewels old and new there are treasures that belonged to Queens of Long ago, in some cases to Queens that lived before the Norman conquest. Notable among others are Queen Elizabeth's great ruby and the necklaces worn by Queen VIII's six wives.

In making a new catalogue of these gems no safe was opened except in the presence of three ladies of the court. Queen Victoria cared but little for these old relics, and Queen Alexandra is believed to entertain no great affection for them, but Queen Mary is exceedingly fond of them and sometimes wears jewellery that had not seen the light of day for sixty years.

NEED MORE SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION

New Westminster Trustees Discuss Situation With the City Council

New Westminster, Dec. 1.—The crying need of more school accommodation was impressed on the city council yesterday when a special meeting was called to meet the school board to discuss the situation. Three new schools were provided for this year, one at Queensborough, which is complete; one in Sapperton, which is well under construction, and one in the west end, also being constructed. The school at Sapperton is already found to be inadequate and the school board asked the city council to guarantee the sum of $15,000 for the addition of a wing of four rooms. When the plans were accepted for this school provision, was made for the addition of two wings of four rooms each, to be built when necessary.

The school board also asked for a guarantee of the sum of $20,000 for the purchase of a school site which it was felt it was absolutely necessary to obtain immediately. The question as to whether the council can grant money to the school without first getting the sanction of the ratepayers is all that prevents the council from raising the money for the school board.

GRANDSTAND COLLAPSES

Fifty Persons Injured in Accident on Football Grounds

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 1.—Fifty persons were injured, several possibly fatally, when a grandstand at the state fair grounds collapsed yesterday just before play started in the annual football contest between the University of Mississippi and the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College. A thousand or more spectators tumbled to the ground with the wreckage.

Lieut.-Gov. for Marshing and Secretary of State Power, of Mississippi, were among those in the stand at the time it collapsed. They escaped with slight bruises. A number of women and children were in the structure.

PANDORA LICENSEE MUST PAY $40 FINE

An Intoxicated Man Took Child Into Saloon and Obtained Liquor

Before Magistrate Jay in the police court this morning Albert Quagliotti, licensee of the Pandora hotel was fined $40, having been found guilty on a charge of allowing a drunken man to remain on the hotel premises.

J. A. Aikman obtained a stay of proceedings for twenty four hours for the purpose of considering an appeal against the magistrate's application of the word "remain" to the charge.

George Doley, 1724 Cook street, a drifter, was seen a week ago yesterday staggering along Pandora street holding a girl about 4 years of age by the hand. He took the child into the Pandora hotel bar where Joseph Jeffries, a barber, followed him and saw him order and obtain a drink. He heard the bartender tell the man to hurry up and take the child out of the saloon, after the drink had been supplied. Doley then left and having walked along Pandora street, a short distance fell into the gutter and was taken to the police station.

Mr. Aikman held that as Doley had been told to get out of the saloon he was not "allowed to remain," as charged. The defence was that the man was sober when he entered the saloon and when he left.

A fourth charge against H. E. Holbe of passing a bad cheque was read to him this morning and his plea of not guilty taken. He is now charged with obtaining $440 from Robert Harrison by means of a cheque drawn on the Seattle National bank, alleged to be valueless. He was remanded until Tuesday when the case will be heard with three others that are against him.

Another remanded case was that against lessee Grant of the Windsor hotel, who is charged with serving Harry Atkinson a minor. His age was not proved this morning and an adjournment was taken for the purpose of obtaining the proof. The young man said he was 19 to 20 years of age and in company with William Grey, a baker, had obtained a glass of beer at the saloon. A charge arising out of the same circumstances is laid against Boyd's saloon and was remanded until Wednesday. Mr. Aikman appears for both hotels and the defendants plead not guilty.

H. R. Beall was fined $5 for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk, and C. G. Helling, who admitted having beaten a horse with a shovel as was testified to by J. M. Ackland was fined $5. The prosecution was brought by the S. P. C. A.

The total quantity of tobacco smoked in Canada last year was 18,903,322 pounds against 17,901,779 pounds in 1910 and 15,217,719 pounds in 1909.

OBITUARY RECORD

John Carbis Stevens died this morning at the family residence, 331 Quebec street. Mr. Stevens, who had retired from business some time ago, was 68 years of age, and was born in Liscaird, Cornwall, England. He came to Victoria in 1862, proceeding to Cariboo and Cassiar at the time of the boom. He also went to Fairview, B. C., where he engaged in mining. He is survived by a widow in Victoria, and some brothers and sisters in England. The remains have been removed to the B. C. Funeral parlors, where they will repose until Monday morning. The funeral will take place from the house on Monday at 2:30 p.m., and a few minutes later from St. James church, Rev. Mr. Sweet officiating.

On Thursday evening at the family residence, 909 King's road, occurred the death of Alexander McDonald, one of the oldest of Victoria's residents. Mr. McDonald, who was born on the island of Coll, Scotland, was 93 years of age, and had lived in this city for many years. He is survived by his widow and three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Morrison and Mrs. Farquhar Gilchrist, of this city, and Mrs. W. J. Smith, of Vancouver. The funeral will take place from the residence at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. Campbell officiating.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Nellie Maude Jilworth took place from the B. C. Funeral Company's chapel at 2:30 this afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. A. Henderson. Many floral contributions were sent, and a large number of the deceased lady's friends were at the service. The pallbearers were: Messrs P. Forinkeri, A. Miller, H. A. Mackenzie, Russell, L. Thompson and J. Thomson. Interment was in Ross Bay cemetery.

The funeral of the late Edward Cutler will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the B. C. Funeral Company's chapel, the services to be conducted by Rev. G. Cook.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Hobday, wife of Col. Hobday, will take place to-morrow morning at 10:45 from the B. C. Funeral Company's parlors, and afterwards from Christ Church cathedral. The services will be conducted by Rev. Dean Doull.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Minnie Cox will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2:15 from the B. C. Funeral Company's chapel, Rev. Mr. Gladstone officiating.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH

New York Dec. 1.—Rumors that the striking garbage men from the New York street cleaning department are attempting to poison the food served to strikebreakers by the city, started a panic among men at one of the uptown sections to-day. The rumors followed the sudden death at Bellevue hospital of one of the strikebreakers. The cause of death was given by the hospital authorities as "unknown." An autopsy will be held at once.

Several other strikebreaking laborers are said to be suffering from a stomach trouble of unusual character.

RECEPTION BY LIEUT. GOVERNOR UNIONIST MEMBERS LEAVE HOUSE

ARRANGING WELCOME FOR AUSTRALIAN BOYS

Some Objects Sought by Remarkable World Tour—A Self-Supporting Scheme

The welcome to be accorded the party of Australian boys who will arrive here at the end of the present month will be as hearty as the Californian cities have given the boys recently. The advance agent, Cecil Jeffrey, who left the city yesterday for Vancouver, saw Premier McBride during the day and received a cordial promise of the government's support, and Lieut. Governor Paterson has arranged for a reception at Government House during their stay here. Yesterday Mr. Jeffrey, who is in the teaching profession himself, addressed the cadets at the High School on the Australian system of compulsory training.

The boys have had a remarkable welcome on the American side, and are fortunate in their leader, Lieut. J. J. Simons, who has the distinction of having been the youngest general president of the Australian Native's Association, an organization which exercises very considerable influence in moulding public opinion in the Commonwealth, and he is certain to enter politics at an early date, having been already approached to enter parliamentary life, but felt pledged to take this party of forty-five members on the world trip now in course of being carried through, before so doing.

VANCOUVER TALKS OF UNDERGROUND LINE

Company Will Seek Incorporation at Coming Session—Railway to Peace River

An underground railway is the latest scheme which Vancouver is being promoted and which in its civic enthusiasm it is understood to be greatly taken with. It is an ambitious scheme, whatever may be the fulfilment of the promise.

Port Angeles, Wash., Dec. 1.—Bob Charles, an Indian, is in custody today charged with the murder of Chas. Hills, a white fisherman at Pysht, November 4. Hills flashed some gold and Charles took a gun and left camp with the remark that he was going to get it. Hills simultaneously disappeared.

PROTEST AGAINST GOVERNMENT'S ACTION

Ministers Accused of Obeying Demands of Redmondites—Insurance Bill

ARION CLUB CHARMS A LARGE AUDIENCE

An Artistic Performance Given in Victoria Theatre Last Night—Some Features

The large audience which turned out last night to hear the Arion Club concert testified to its past successes and popularity, and last evening's entertainment added another to the club's long list of successes. The programme had not only been selected with the greatest care, but the whole management of the voices afforded evidence of a course of the most careful training on the part of the honorary conductor, E. Howard Russell, B. A.

AUTO ACCIDENT. Five Persons Sustain Injuries While on Way Home From Dance. Haverstock, N. Y., Dec. 1.—An automobile, travelling at 40 miles an hour, plunged over a 20-foot embankment near here last night, with five occupants. One was fatally injured. The others were severely hurt. The party had been attending a dance. The accident happened at a sharp turn in the road. Crashing through the rail fence which protected the embankment, the machine landed in a group of trees and turned over, throwing its occupants in all directions. All were unconscious when discovered by a passing milkman.

"Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary How Does Your Garden Grow?"

MARY poked her inquisitive little head over the window sash and hung on with her pink finger tips, so that she could obtain an unrestricted view of her aunt's morning-room.

When she saw that lady calmly rocking and sewing in the sunshine, she wagged an accusing head in her direction.

"I knew you'd forget, Aunt Edith, you always do," she averred sternly. "Don't, you really remember promising to show me how to plant my bulbs?"

"Hess my soul!" exclaimed Aunt Edith, in conscience-stricken haste. "So I did, girlie!"

"She put down her sewing and soon was standing beside Mary.

"The pots, at least, are all ready," she said. "See, you must use the large, shallow ones."

"Yes," said Mary. "Now we'll put the soil in it."

"Not quite so fast, little one. See, the pots are new, and have to be soaked so that they will not drink all the moisture meant for the bulbs."

"Now, while we're waiting for the pots to soak, we'll mix the soil—two-thirds regular potting soil and one-third sand."

"What a lot of sand!" exclaimed Mary. "Why do bulbs need so very much, Aunt Edith?"

"Because the roots, my dear, are very fine and small. Now, graniums have very strong, coarse roots, which like to drink a great deal. These you give very much less sand, but even then there should be sufficient to make the soil loose, do you see? Very few plants will thrive in a soil such as you used to make mudpies in."

Stooping over, Aunt Edith dived with bare arms into the tub and brought up the wet pots.

"Run to the end of the summer house, dear," she said to Mary, "and get some bits of broken crockery."

Into each pot she dropped a piece over the hole so that the pot might drain, and be in no danger of becoming clogged.

"Now," said Mary, "we'll plant the tulips, auntie."

"Don't put them in too deep," warned down, Aunt Edith, would it?"

"No, indeed, dearie. Now we water them. There, they're not too wet. Just to make them moist, you know. Now they must be put away in the dark for their long sleep."

"Where shall we make their bed?" asked Mary, solemnly.

"I think, if I were you," said Aunt Edith, thoughtfully, "I'd make a trench one foot deep over there in the corner of your garden by the fence, where it will be protected, and I'd put the pot in and cover it up. Then in eight weeks I'd dig it up."

"And put it directly in the sun?" said Mary, her eyes sparkling.

"No, indeed," said Aunt Edith, positively. "That would be much too sudden. First we'll put it in a room where there is light and air but no artificial heat. Then by and by when the leaves are grown we put it out in the warm sunlight, and soon we have the beautiful flowers."

"Oh," said Mary, slowly, "see, I was in too big a hurry, wasn't I, auntie dear? But I'm not unwilling to wait for my beautiful flowers."

DOMINION TRUST COMPANY LIMITED

More About Wills

The trust company came into existence to render to the community certain services which the corporation was far better fitted than was the individual to perform.

The primary functions of trust companies were to act as executor, trustee, administrator and guardian. These still continue to be among its important functions, because of its peculiar fitness to discharge them.

When appointing a private executor, a testator usually chooses a friend of nearly his own age; yet his trust may continue as long as his children and grandchildren live. On the death of the trustee, which may occur soon after that of the testator, the trust must pass to others unknown to the testator. Thus he leaves his property to the eventual management of he knows not who.

The trust company has a continuous life. It takes no holidays, has no illness. It is the perfected modern device for executing the will of testators.

Before making a will, or altering one already made, read our booklet: "About Wills."

It is free for the asking.

FLAMES DESTROY FARM AND LIVESTOCK

Valuable Horses and Herd of Dairy Cattle Burned

Chilliwack, Dec. 1.—Fire, which broke out early Wednesday morning on the farm of J. P. McConnell, editor of the B. C. Saturday Sunset, on the Yale road, three miles east of this city, destroyed Mr. McConnell's barn and livestock as well as his farm implements and supply of winter food. The loss will be heavy, as a number of valuable horses and dairy cattle were destroyed.

How the fire originated is not known. About 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, Miss Murray the housekeeper, and the two men in charge of the farm, were awakened by the crackling of the fire and found the stable in flames. It was too late then to save any of the animals in the building. All had by that time been suffocated or burned to death. Nothing could be done but allow the fire to burn itself out.

Mr. McConnell's greatest loss will come from the destruction of six valuable horses, which were in the stable when the fire broke out. Some of the animals were prize winners, and one of them, purchased in Washington state a year ago, is understood to have cost in the neighborhood of a thousand dollars. A herd of fourteen valuable dairy cattle also perished.

Mr. McConnell, who has been in the east on a business trip, is at Winnipeg on his way west, and is expected home on Saturday. Until he arrives it will not be known definitely what the loss amounts to in dollars and cents. Some insurance was carried on the building and stock though how much is not known. The farmhouse was not damaged in any way.

Organ of Orange Society Says Time is Ripe for National Naval Policy

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 1.—The Sentinel, organ of the Orange Society, declares that the time is ripe for a national naval policy. That journal advocates the presentation to Britain of super-dreadnoughts built of Canadian material by Canadian workers. The placing of an export duty on raw material and nickel matte, the re-establishment of the British North Atlantic squadron with headquarters at Halifax, and a request for a voice in Imperial councils.

MEDINA'S ROUGH TRIP

London, Dec. 1.—Reports reaching here from the steamship Medina, which is conveying King George and Queen Mary to the Indian durbar, indicate that the royal passengers had an extremely rough passage through the Bay of Biscay.

The sea, which is usually rough in the bay, was uncommonly turbulent. A portion of the Queen's apartments was flooded. Queen Mary was forced to vacate hastily and take up her quarters in a special storm-cabin with a swinging cot, but the King, who is a good sailor, continued to occupy his usual cabin.

The Medina, which has proved herself a good sea vessel, suffered less than the conveying warships, which were severely buffeted by the gale. Several of them sustained damage to the extent of losing railings, and the King, appreciating the difficulties under which they were laboring, ordered them to steam ahead of the Medina.

MURDERER'S SUICIDE

San Jose, Cal., Dec. 1.—John Karso, an insane Italian, after driving his wife and children from home began shooting at passers-by with a rifle. His first bullet killed Mrs. Lena Blase, a neighbor. Karso then barricaded himself in a shed well stocked with arms and ammunition, and for two hours stood off the police and sheriff's officers. Dynamite was used ineffectually in an effort to dislodge the man and the place was finally fired by a venturesome deputy, who crept close to the shed in the gathering darkness.

When the flames were put out by the fire department the charred body of Karso was discovered with the top of his head missing. It is believed he shot himself.

CRUSHED BY LOGS

Nanaimo, Dec. 1.—A fatal accident occurred at Campbell river on Tuesday. John Cooper, aged 30, an employee of the International Timber Co., logging camp, being killed by a log. A log fell and crushed him to death. At the coroner's inquest held yesterday a verdict of accidental death was returned, no blame being attached to anyone. Deceased, who was very popular, was a native of Australia.

YUAN SHI KAI IS CHINA'S STRONG MAN

Clever Statesman Will Win Out No Matter Which Side Triumphs

Yuan Shi Kai had the honor of many biographical sketches when he fell from power in 1908. Again a turn of the wheel has made him the man of the hour in China. He is the "strong man" which every great crisis is expected to develop; but it is only fair to Yuan to say that he is not one of those strong men who despise craft. He realizes that mere strength is at a serious disadvantage when it is opposed by both strength and cunning, and it is his fortune to be armed at both points. In a country torn by a revolution a strong man might place himself at the head of one party or the other and in the event of his choosing the winning party his reward would be certain. The man who is able to be at the same time at the head of both opposing parties, and to be in the position of winner no matter which side falls, possesses dexterity of the highest order. That is the happy situation of Yuan Shi Kai at the present time. Of course, a mis-step would ruin him, but it would ruin any other big man in China, and Yuan's ultimate triumph would be, in sporting parlance, "a good bet."

His career up to the present time has been a remarkable one, and chiefly because it has revealed a man able to enjoy the confidence of both sides in any conflicts. Through it all he has enjoyed the confidence of the foreigners, and this is at the bottom of his strength. At the present time, for example, the Premier of China, who he is trusted by the revolutionists, and was offered the Presidency of the Chinese Republic by them. The Prince Regent realizes that Yuan is a reformer at heart, and yet he was obliged to appeal to him to save the country. The hesitation of Yuan before he accepted the invitation was a master stroke of diplomacy. Had he hastened to Peking he would have forfeited the regard of the revolutionists. Had he refused to answer the summons he would have incurred the enmity of the Chinese loyalists. He paused impressively, and then when he made his move he did so with the blessing of both parties.

Yuan first attracted attention by a demonstration of patriotism, or treachery, according to the point of view, when the Boxer agitation was in its earlier stages. He was at that time Mayor of a small town in Shan-tung, and he beheld most of his friends enrolling themselves in the Boxer Society. The revolutionists were in a minority, and yet Yuan was wise enough to see that their cause was doomed to failure. To have said so openly would have been to risk his life. So he remained silent. The time came, however, when he had to take his stand. He was invited to join the brotherhood and help rid China of the foreign devils. Fortunately for him, in its earlier stages the Boxer agitation was ministered to by the grossest superstition. For instance, he was believed that a demon spirit, a Chinaman, who the Boxer became at once the ward of the Chinese gods, who would render him immune from the effects of foreign inventions such as rifles, and it was this belief that gave Yuan his chance.

In response to the invitation, he said he would gladly join the society and help exterminate the foreigners if he could be certain that the miraculous effects attributed to the Boxer initiation ceremonies were to be depended on. He was assured that there could be no doubt on this point, and finally he induced the most active of the Boxers in the town to give him a demonstration, and he produced a rifle, and the Boxer stood a few yards away. The mayor then explained that it was at the request of his friend the Boxer that he was making the test, and that he considered it a mere matter of form anyway. So he took careful aim, and shot his friend through the heart. He was filled with grief at the accident, and had the victim buried at the expense of the town. Later on, as the people began to think the matter over, they concluded that there were disadvantages connected with the Boxer business, after all, and that they would be better not to mix themselves up in it.

Newer strokes of his policy reached the Dowager Empress and greatly delighted her, and Yuan's subsequent efforts in behalf of the foreigners marked him out for honor at the court. Gradually he rose, and finally was forced on the Empress Dowager by the allies and became the Viceroy of Chihli, the most important post in the Empire. Soon after the death of the Empress he fell a victim to the Manchou Princes, who induced the Regent to depose him. The occasion of a temporary indisposition, caused by a trifling accident to his leg, was seized upon by his enemies, and it was announced that on account of an accident he had been granted indefinite leave in order to nurse his leg. When he was invited three weeks ago to return to Peking as Premier he sent word that his leg was still troubling him, and although he was keenly sensible to the honor done him he could not immediately make the journey. Although he has never traveled abroad, and is an unlettered man, Yuan Shi Kai is a man dominated by Western ideas, and whether as Premier or President he is the one man who can best serve his country in the present crisis.

CHICAGO'S CAMPAIGN FOR CIVIC BEAUTY

Pupils in Public Schools Are Now Given Lessons on Horticulture

Chicago has begun to realize the need of beautifying the city. Various special courses in practical horticulture have been started to enable them to teach this subject to the children, so that they can apply it at school and at home. Among the schools that are devoting much time to practical horticulture is the Van Vliessen School. Its principal, George A. Brennan, has devoted many years to this subject, and a large number of its teachers have taken special lessons in the work. The school rooms are adorned with the choicest trees, shrubs, vines and flowers. Mr. Brennan has done much work in horticulture and botany and has taught economic horticulture for several years. The pupils of the Van Vliessen School last year killed more than 5,000 tussock moths and caterpillars.

The new schools are surrounded by from one to five acres of ground, while the Gary School, on the west side, has ten acres. The new Hyde Park High, ten acres, the new Hyde Park High, ten acres, and the Curtis High will cost $500,000 each, and the spacious grounds surrounding them will be beautifully arranged as parks and athletic fields.

A. B. Larson, the business manager, is in thorough touch with plans to give the Chicago schools the benefit of modern experience and to see that as soon as possible the buildings and grounds are provided with plants from the various school nurseries.

Mrs. Ella Elmer Young, superintendent, realizes that the beautiful must be joined with the practical to develop the best in nature. She is seeking not only attractive surroundings for the schools, but also to have the pupils develop a sense of beauty and incorporate it in their daily tasks.

The pupils are not only taught what and how to plant, but also how to care for the plants. They are trained how to kill injurious insects, molds and fungi, and to fill cavities in trees with cement.

The United States department of agriculture has sent one of its experts, Miss Susan Slpe, on a tour of investigation to ascertain what is being done by the schools and what can be given by the government. The work of the building and grounds committee of the Principals' Club interested her. The members of the committee are, with the co-operation of their teachers, endeavoring to have the planting of school grounds done in a scientific manner and to have nature study taught in a practical and efficient manner.

Among reforms that have succeeded is the establishment of a nursery, at the parental school to furnish trees, shrubs, etc., for the schools. The school board will also furnish a fine botanical garden at the Bowen High School in South Chicago to train the young people in practical biology, and

POWER OF MONEY.

Millionaires are much under discussion at the moment. A writer in the Strand points out that the wealth of Messrs. Rockefeller, Astor, Morgan, Rothchild, Carnegie and Strathcona far exceeds the total value of the product for a whole year. Nearly seven millions of workers, totalling six days a week, produced a net output of British industry for 1910-11 of 712 million pounds. These six men would be able to pay for all the result of a year's toil accumulated by a whole nation of toilers. They could buy up all the wealth of a year—all the machinery, all the manufactured goods, all the steel, all the iron, all the tobacco, all the sugar. That is what such wealth—as theirs means.—Westminster Gazette.

Lord Mayor of London as a title was first bestowed in 1354 by Edward III.

SHAKESPEARE AND BEN JOHNSON

What is believed to be a contemporary portrait of William Shakespeare playing chess with some actor friend or perhaps with Ben Jonson, has come into the possession of Mr. Frank de Heyman.

Mr. De Heyman is still seeking evidence with regard to the work, but he believes to justify his belief that he has made an important discovery. If this be an exact likeness of the Bard of Avon, painted from life the work will prove of most historical value. The present owner said he would gladly lend it for the Shakespearean celebration which is to take place in 1916 in England.

The work is an old oak frame pegged together with wood. On each corner of it is a small shield. The upper shields bear the initials "W.S." and a monogram which appears to be "B.J." while on the lower shields is the name "Isaac Oliver."

Oliver was a miniature and water color painter of distinction, and several of his miniatures are owned by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan. The picture, however, is decidedly Italian in its treatment, and an expert asserts it was painted in the seventeenth century. It had the ruddy tints and the vigorous brush work of the Caravaggio school.

NEW SEX PROBLEM.
Must Be Seriously Considered in Question of Women's Rights.

In these days, when the qualities by which we have been in the habit of differentiating between the sexes are losing most of their significance, it is strange to note how one peculiar trait still remains to brand the woman with an unmistakable sign. With no small measure of success our sisters and our cousins and our aunts—and even our grandmothers—have met men on their own ground in almost every phase of life from which they are not legally barred. They have entered many of the professions in their hundreds, and the writing profession, in particular, in their thousands. But although they can write—and write uncommonly well, some of them—there is one thing they cannot do. They may design the greatest literary masterpiece (or smugly "own" a mistresspiece), but in its execution they display with all too painful obviousness their inherent limitations. They cannot punctuate. By that shall you know the woman writer.

The test is not an infallible one, of course, because there is sometimes the printer's reader to be reckoned with. But not always; it would appear indeed, that printer's readers usually allow the softness of their hearts to overcome their stern sense of duty when dealing with the ladies. One gathers that from one's everyday experience as a consumer of fiction. Extract from your circulating library bundle a novel of feminine authorship (probably three out of four admit this impachment), and glance through it with an eye to its punctuation (if that is to say, you possess an eye for such things). You will find that in general the woman writer knows of only four marks: the full-stop, the comma, the question-mark and the note of exclamation. Occasionally there is a dash—usually a most inconsequential dash—and sometimes a pair of brackets (although more often than not the second of the pair gets lost in the fog). Of the higher branches of punctuation, which include the elegant employment of the colon and the semi-colon, she knows nothing; but this would not be so intolerable if she knew what to do with the marks she does condescend to employ. The full-stop is mostly in the right place—according, that is to the writer's lights; the question-mark falls at times when it is urgently required; the note of exclamation is sadly abused. But it is with the comma that the woman runs supremely amok. Not only does she make it do duty at all times for the absent colon and semi-colon, but she obtrudes it with a most misguided insistence where it is the theory of Mr. De Heyman, in spite of these Italian characteristics, that it was painted by Oliver, who learned oil painting from Federico Zuccaro, an Italian master, who was for a time in London when exiled from his native country.

A photograph of the picture was submitted to Mr. Sidney Lee, a critic of art in London and a student of Shakespeare and his times. Mr. Lee sees a noticeable resemblance between the face in the picture now discussed and that of the well known Chandos portrait of Shakespeare. Both have the same shaped noses and the same modelling of the upper cheeks. The painting shows the two men as they have stopped writing and taken up a game of chess, for there are two inkstands and quills on the table in the background. A book on this table bears the scrawling initials, "W.S.," in the style of the familiar signature of Shakespeare. The painting is in a good state of preservation. The upper part of the head, however, looks as if it had been restored by a none too skillful limner, for it is not in keeping with the nervous and well modelled hand in the foreground. The work is 31x38 inches. The canvas, which has been re-lined, was originally treated with wax.

any stop at all is manifestly out of order. I should imagine that her plan of procedure is to write a page or a chapter of stuff, putting in as she goes along the punctuation marks she thinks correct; and then, when the end of the chapter is finished, to go through it again, this time sticking in commas wherever she thinks there have been too many words without a stop, criminally heedless of the stifled cry of syntax. As who should say:

"Dolores stood up and faced him, in her eyes there was a steely look of determination. So this was to be the end! This was to be the finish of the romance, she had fondly hoped would last forever! But she was not done with yet, he should see she was not a woman who could be so lightly tossed aside. Did he forget the compromising letters she had in her possession. Now, it was her turn to play. Rudolph would soon find he had not got all the tricks in his hand!"

I have earnestly striven not to exaggerate. Scores of times I have encountered in novels written by women passages every whit as bad as the foregoing; and they made me wriggle. Naturally I am far from denying that there are many men who have little or no idea of the rules of punctuation; but either they refrain from writing books, or with them the printer's reader is more beneficently ruthless in his correction. Certainly the fact remains that, whereas some men cannot punctuate, no woman can. This is a sex problem that has to be seriously taken into account in any discussion on the subject of equal rights for women—Stanley J. Fay, in the Pall Mall Gazette.

MAKES HAIR GROW
Campbell, the druggist, has an inventor that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of. If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by Campbell, the druggist, under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

PROFESSOR BERGSON'S PHILOSOPHY OF FUN

Fashionable Philosopher Managed by Good Literary and Financial Agents

(Philip Gibbs in London Chronicle.)
There must be good literary agents and business managers behind Professor Henri Bergson, that fashionable philosopher whose words give spiritual comfort to people who have but the vaguest idea of his meaning. The Bergson "boom" has been engineered with wonderful success, and translations of his books are tumbling out of the English printing presses with great rapidity so as to catch the tide of public interest.

The very latest is an admirable translation of Professor Bergson's book on Laughter, which all who run may read, without being baffled by a philosophic language which has nothing in common with the language of ordinary life, and without groping perplexity in the maze of metaphysical ideas. This discourse on laughter is delightful, clear and held. It leaves one with a flattering sense of one's own intelligence in being able to enjoy philosophy without a horrid mental strain. And the subject is fascinating.

But Bergson's analysis of laughter, though nightly ingenious, is hardly satisfying. None of his definitions covers the whole range of those phases which impel humanity to open its mouth with a glorious "Ha! ha!" and laugh till its sides ache. For laughter is a mysterious, frolicsome, elusive emotion which mocks at the serious fellow who tries to fasten it down within psychological laws. The Spirit of Laughter is continually assuming new shapes and disguises, and dodging the philosopher who goes peering after it with an intellectual tape-measure and mental microscope. It leaves a "hitting" from odd corners, and when he sits down to write his book digs him in the ribs and asks, "Where is your sense of humor?"

The spirit of laughter will howl with glee at Professor Bergson. For he has given a mechanical explanation of an emotion which is the most fanciful of all the emotions. He explains laughter as an engineer would explain the inside of a steam engine and the reason why the wheels go round. He analyzes the causes of laughter into a number of mechanical laws such as might lie behind the manifestations of a clockwork toy with complicated springs.

"The attitude, gestures, and movements of the human body," he says, "are laughable in exact proportion as that body reminds us of a mere machine." Carrying this rule further, we laugh at the interference of matter with life, at the body impeding the movement of the soul (as when a preacher sneezes in the middle of a sermon), at something mechanical exerted upon the living. The comedy of ideas, he argues, is due to this mechanical law. Absent-mindedness, which is the source of a world of humor, is comic because the mind has become temporarily rigid like a machine, and does not work quickly enough in unison with its surroundings. Absent-mindedness may nearly always be traced, he says, to the "rigidity" of the muscles or of the mind, which continue to perform some habitual movement when the circumstances of the case call for something else.

As instances of this machine-made comedy he quotes the case of the man running along the street who stumbles and falls, thereby causing the passers-by to burst out laughing. The laugh because his sitting down is involuntary. It was due to absent-mindedness—that is to say, rigidity of mind and muscle. So, when a man sits on his hat—always a delightful source of laughter. A man with a long nose or a hump-back is comic to the spectators because the deformity appears to be due to a kind of physical obstinacy or rigidity. The deformity obstinacy of the unsightly rather than of the unsightly. So we laugh every time a person gives us the impression of being a thing or an automaton. Thus the clown in the circus who bump up against each other and tumble down, and bounce up again are immensely funny because they seem to lose their human nature and to be worked by mechanical forces. And when Punch whacks the policeman on the head or is whacked in return we laugh because of the repetition of a mechanical effect achieved by puppets in the likeness of human beings.

The comedy of words and ideas is traced to this cause. It is the automatism of the brain. He quotes two examples: "Twenty years ago a large steamer was wrecked off the coast at Dieppe. With considerable difficulty some of the passengers were rescued in a boat. A few custom-house officers, who had courageously rushed to their assistance began by asking them 'if they had anything to declare.' We find something similar though the idea is a more subtle one, in the remark of an M. P. when questioning the Home Secretary on the morrow of a terrible murder which took place in a railway carriage: 'The assassin, after dispatching his victim must have got out on the wrong side of the train, thereby infringing the company's rules.'"

The comedy in both these stories lies, says Professor Bergson, in the rigidity of mind caused by professional habits not adapting themselves quickly to a new situation. There is also a rigidity of language which leads to puns and plays on words, and comic effects of a sprightly imagination making use of stereotyped expressions. Thus in a French play a mother says to her son, "My dear boy, gambling on 'Change is very risky, you win one day and lose the next." "Well, then," says the son, "I will gamble only every day."

Professor Bergson sums up his philosophy of laughter in the following words: "The rigid, the ready-made, the mechanical in contrast with the supple, the ever-changing, the living, absent-mindedness in contrast with attention, in a word, automatism in contrast with free activity such as the defects that laughter singles out and would fain correct."

This mechanical theory of laughter is ingenious, and is undoubtedly one of the elements of truth in the primitive causes of laughter. But it entirely leaves out the moral aspect of laughter. Hobbes came nearer the truth, but did not capture the whole of it, when he saw that the origin of laughter lies in the sense of superiority it gives to the man whose actions drag him down to the common level of humanity. Thus a man running after his hat in a gale of wind is indescribably comic to the spectator because the dignity of the man is suddenly taken from him, and he is exposed to all his weaknesses as a creature subject to an inanimate object which evades his grasp. Rochefoucauld's maximum that we enjoy the misfortunes of our friends is true provided the misfortunes are too trivial to inspire pity or indignation, and laughter is again caused by the sight of men subject to the accidents which set traps for human nature.

The spirit of all this comedy is to delight the observer by the spectacle of men and women being stripped of their dignity, their pomposity, their pose, and revealed as ordinary foibles and frailties as those who watch them. Satire, which is one of the most subtle forms of the comic, is always pulling people from their pedestals. Parody and caricature serve the same purpose. Laughter is a frolicsome Puck-like emotion which loves to twynk the noses of great people, and to strip them of the coverings in which they hide the nakedness of human nature. To take one of Professor Bergson's own examples—the preacher who sneezes in his pulpit in the midst of a high-sounding phrase: Laughter is irresistible not because of any mechanical effect, but because the congregation is tickled by the abrupt revelation that the man preaching at them from the lofty height of mental superiority is brought down with a bump to their own level by a twitching in his nose.

So when an orator uttering impressive words suddenly makes a dramatic gesture which shoots off his cuff Laughter snorts at him. He has, as it were, been pulled off his perch by this commonplace accident. He is now on a level with the crowd. The glorious humor of Don Quixote is due not to Professor Bergson's law of mental rigidity, but to the fact that the man of common sense is made to feel superior to the knight with his high ideals of chivalry and romance. The Sancho Panza of the world feel themselves better men than Don Quixote de la Mancha. We do not laugh so much at Don Quixote now, because our sense of humor is overshadowed by our social conscience, and we are inclined to weep rather than to laugh at the knight, because we have begun to realize that his ideals are greater, in spite of his madness, than our common sense. Cervantes himself would have been surprised at his mental attitude.

writer, is a proof that laughter is nearly always due to the joy of seeing people pulled off their pedestals, and thrown down to the level of ordinary human nature. His clowns are always satirists of the pomposities of life. The tricks played on Malvolio, on Bottom, on Falstaff, all serve the purpose of stripping the characters of their false pretences. And Falstaff himself, the greatest character of comedy ever invented, is always delighted and utterly provoking because he is a tremendous satirist of kings and judges and high moralities, and dignity and solemn phrases, and drags all down to the level of human frailty.

DR. CLARK IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

CLOSE ANALYSIS OF GOVERNMENT POLICY

Member for Red Deer Makes Excellent Contribution to Debate on Address

The people of Victoria who heard Dr. Clark, member of parliament for Red Deer, speak on political issues in the theatre here last June, will read with interest the report of that gentleman's speech in the debate on the address which has just closed at Ottawa. It was an exceedingly able contribution to the discussion. Dr. Clark said: Mr. Speaker, I should like to congratulate my hon. friend the Prime Minister even in his absence—if he were present I am sure he would give me credit for sincerity—on his accession to the high position of premier of this great land. In the midst of much criticism of the public life and the characteristics of the public men of Canada, I think we do well on both sides to remember that at any rate this country can boast of a tradition by which no one is admitted to the position of the premier citizen of Canada without having the character of high personal integrity.

I am glad to concede that in the present Prime Minister we have, in this respect, a worthy successor to his great predecessors. With apologies to my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. R. B. Bennett), I venture to offer a further word of congratulation to the government as a whole upon the condition in which the country is handed over to their care—a condition very different, let me say, from that in which it was received by the preceding administration. It is the fashion, I know, among hon. gentlemen opposite, from the Prime Minister downwards, to talk of the prosperity of Canada as if it had endured for the last thirty years. Now, I have tried to find evidence of any prosperity in Canada before the year 1896, and I am bound to say that all the study I could make has not revealed one jot of such evidence to my researches. What is the test of a nation's prosperity? My hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Foster), is not present; I wish he were, I enjoy breaking a lance with him. And I am bound to say that I attach to one particular test very much more importance than he seemed to do in the remarks which he made to the House the other day. I contend that the surest test of the prosperity of a nation is in the expansion of its foreign trade. Is there not evidence of that in one of the first paragraphs of the Speech from the Throne? How does His Royal Highness the Governor-General, in the words put into his mouth by the Ministry, proceed to prove that Canada is prosperous at the present moment? Why, by the fact that trade is expanding with the utmost rapidity not only with the mother country but with other countries of the world. Apply the test to the claim, this first fallacy I shall call attention to, which is being continually peddled before the country in the speeches of my hon. friends opposite, and how does their case come out? In 1895, when they had been in power for seventeen years, the volume of commerce of Canada with the whole world was represented by the insignificant figure of $230,000,000. Or rather I should say it was represented by $24,000,000 in that year, the same being $200,000 less than the $230,000,000 which represented the foreign commerce of Canada in 1883, twelve years before. So far as this test is a guide on the point I am discussing, Canada, during the last twelve years of the previous Conservative government, had progressed indeed, but progressed as the crab is said to progress, if it had gone backwards. Take any other test you like to apply and compare the condition of Canada then with the condition of Canada now, and you are bound to concede that Canada did not know progress until the year 1896. Take the tests of the deposits of your people in the banks, of the homesteader taking up homesteads, or the immigrants coming into your land. Under any test you like you will find that Canada's condition was one of stagnation and retrogression in 1896. Nobody doubts for a moment that Canada's progress to-day is one of the wonders of the world.

Now, on this head, while repeating my congratulations to the government, I wish to refer to another policy which is constantly being formulated or insinuated by our hon. friends on the other side of the House, and that is that the progress and prosperity which Canada is enjoying at the present moment are in any sense due to the system of protection. As to what progress did take place after 1896, let me follow up the figures in regard to foreign commerce that I have already mentioned: The foreign commerce of $24,000,000 in 1895, was increased under the Laurier administration which took office in 1896, so that three years later, in 1899, our foreign commerce had grown to $321,000,000. That is, in three years of the late administration there had been an increase of nearly fifty per cent. Now, what had the Laurier government done to increase foreign commerce in that most remarkable, most phenomenal way? We are told that they never lowered the tariff. They lowered tariffs by the introduction of the British preference, and by that preference, they at once opened the markets of Great Britain to the agricultural products of this country. Is it any more than the simplest and most obvious common-sense that, if you have a dam across a stream and remove a part of that dam, some water will flow over? A tariff is an obstacle to foreign commerce; tariffs were lowered by the Laurier government; and it is surely good reasoning to say that the extension of commerce finds in that fact one of its explanations.

What did the Laurier government do to account for the remarkable change which took place? They introduced an immigration policy. By that immigration policy, we are told, it is estimated that $100,000,000 is being brought into this country every year. Think of that, Mr. Speaker,—one hundred millions of dollars of dry cash coming into the country yearly. Yet, according to the opposition, the country owes all its prosperity to protection. You have fourteen dollars per head of the population coming in, and these hon. gentlemen seek in some artificial tariff arrangement the explanation of the extraordinary prosperity of the country. Sir, this single fact is a strange comment upon the whole protective doctrine. Protection, if it has any object and any purpose, is meant to keep imports out of the country. But there is one hundred million dollars of imports yearly,—surely a better explanation of the prosperity of Canada than any artificial manner of restricting trade or raising revenue.

Now, I am glad to have been able to offer my congratulations to my hon. friend the Prime Minister and the government generally upon the condition in which the affairs of the country were handed over to them. And here my words of congratulation, I fear, come to an end. I cannot congratulate my hon. friend (Mr. Borden), on the auspices under which he came into power. I wish I could. I am sincerely hopeful of the future of this country and as jealous of its public life as if I had been born in it, and I say again, I wish I could. But I cannot congratulate the Prime Minister upon the fact that in the province of Quebec during the recent election he may be said to have partaken of the light wine of old France purveyed by such a connoisseur as my hon. friend (Mr. Monk), while in the province of Ontario he drank a beverage flavored with more than a dash of orange bitters.

In western Canada we conducted a simple, economic argument on this question, and a particular province we had no reason to be dissatisfied with the results. But when I reflect upon the condition of affairs in the east, I do not think it rounds so greatly to the credit of the public life of this country. When I reflect upon my hon. friend the Prime Minister walking into power, flanked on one side by that well-known unscrupulous gentleman, Mr. Clifford Sifton, and on the other by that well-known imperialist, Mr. Bourassa, with Mr. Armand Lavergne following in the rear, waving, I am told, or some of his friends did, the flag of old France, and the party asking elsewhere at the same time, "Under which flag," then I cannot help acknowledging the truth of the saying that "politics like poverty, makes strange bedfellows."

Now, we have heard a great many explanations of what happened on the 21st of September. Well, I myself think the best explanation probably is that 35,000 more people voted on one side than on the other. But there are other explanations that are perhaps worthy of examination for a moment. I have not come across anything more amusing than the explanation that was given by the Lord Bishop of London. The Lord Bishop of London has been informing the people of Great Britain that Canadian elections went the way they did on the 21st of September because Canada was preferred to remain poor and British, than to become rich and American. The worthy Bishop, I have no doubt, had in mind a band of men, lean, ascetic, without any campaign fund, going forth to battle for principles as sacred as those of the Sermon on the Mount, and I suppose now the good politics of the old land who take their politics from the bench of bishops, are congratulating themselves that Canada has been delivered from the hands of such well-known bloated plutocrats as my right hon. friend and Mr. Fielding, and has passed into the frugal care of a cabinet poor but patriotic. I cannot think this explanation of the election will commend itself to the Manufacturers' Association nor yet to my good friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Burrell), whom I am glad to see in the cabinet, and who, before he went into the cabinet, warned the fruit growers of British Columbia, not that they were going to be made rich by trading with the Americans, but that they were going to be made poor if the pact went through. It may not be inconsistent with the duty of a bishop to join in the cry of prejudice against the Americans, whether they are rich or poor; but for my part I would a thousand times rather suffer defeat in trying to assuage international animosities than to achieve the greatest victory by inflaming them. Though, as I have said, the Manufacturers' Association and the Minister of Agriculture could not support the view of the bishop, he is not without support in this country. If he had heard my hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Foster) speak the other night he would have found that with the boldness we all admire he was supporting the Lord Bishop's view, for he told us that the result of the elections was a triumph against the selfishness. Just imagine the sentiment of the Manufacturers' Association. I would just imagine the sentiment on the part of the license victuallers of Great Britain who, with great honesty, are in the habit of putting up in their places of business during an election campaign the poster, "Our trade is our politics." And I am not so sure but that the manufacturers' association would endorse that view. Yet the Minister of Trade and Commerce says that the election was a triumph of sentiment over selfishness. Why, sir, look at the appeals that were made to sectionalism: "When it suited them they made an appeal to the east against the west; I did not read the speeches of all the candidates in eastern Canada, but I did read a dispatch from the east, at a certain period of the contest, which told us that this argument was being used, and I am going to claim credit for at least one western member, that I at once went on the platform and denounced it as a crime against the country. Who has launched this doctrine of the east against the west?" Mr. Currie (Shmooc). You have, the Mr. Clark (Red Deer). My hon. friend is suffering for the moment from a little irritation, natural to one in his circumstances. But there are some instances in which the Prime Minister did not make any mistake, anyhow. I detect in my hon. friend's interruption a very suspicious evidence that he is one of the guilty parties himself. In fact, if my memory does not play me false, I think his name was in the very dispatch that I have been mentioning. But I am going to call fair minded gentlemen with whom I had the honor of a seat in this House during the previous parliament, I am going to call to their remembrance that in this House the member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) used this language: We in the west-to-day believe in western development, because western development is Canadian development; and why I regret the defeat of the pact more than anything is this, that it would have benefited every man, woman and child in Canada, in my humble opinion.

Now would it have done it? We heard T. Eaton's mentioned just now. When I sell a bunch of steers my wife sends an order frequently to T. Eaton's. Would not the orders have been more frequent if I had more for my steers? Western development is Canadian development—I have argued in this House. All that makes work for the one makes it for the other. Was it that sentiment triumphed over selfishness? Not in the appeal to us in the west. When they needed a new and different argument they expanded their views a little, and they were ready to argue the position of Canada against the old country. With perfect honesty, a quality which did a great deal to put him where he is, the Prime Minister, when he came to the west, came out flat-footed, not only against reciprocity, but, as I understood him, against any increase in British preference. Where was the sentiment in that attitude? A little extended, but still a sectional view, still a selfish view. When all else failed it was east versus west, Canada versus the old country, and the empire against the world. Mr. Speaker, are these hon. gentlemen contented with any such narrow view as that the highest thought of the world today is not national, it is not even imperial; it is international. Ever since civilization dawned upon mankind, since we have known anything about trade, have not the greatest and grandest things all been international? If a man of my own profession, a medical man, invents something new, does he confine it to the country in which he happens to live? No, it is his greatest privilege, his highest ambition to benefit mankind. An inventor makes an invention and he may obtain every material good that is in it, but he is glad to be able to go forth to the world and give it for the good of mankind. Science, art and literature are all international, and not national. There is where unselfishness lies. But, whoever thought of an international system of protection? The thing is a contradiction in thought and in terms. It is impossible because it is in its very nature anti-social, sectional and selfish. It is the embodiment of the quintessence of selfishness.

No, Mr. Speaker, what did happen was that a large number of the people believed they were voting for sentiment, but the trusts, mergers, corporations and big moneyed men were under no delusion in this matter. They used the sentiment of others to cloak their own selfishness. The hon. member for Calgary (Mr. Bennett) has an explanation, or one of his explanations, of the change of parties on the 21st September, in the words that the organic union of the empire was threatened. I quite admit that the people thought so, but if the House will allow me, it would not be uninteresting for me to explain why I did not think so. I can assure my hon. gentleman opposite that I wish they had sent all the copies of the pamphlet to the British-born, to myself. The harm done by it would have been extremely little. I was born and lived for forty years in Great Britain. I want to put this in, in case there may be hon. gentlemen in the House who believe what they said on this question. When I lived in Great Britain I shared with the other inhabitants of the country the right which they freely exercised of buying wheat, for example, from twelve different countries in the world, and selling wherever they could do it at a profit—a harmless line of conduct for any one of us without our private capacity. Are the people of Great Britain disloyal to the flag? I do not suppose that even the most patriotic, the most loyal man opposite would suggest such a thing as that; at least not all of them. But, if I was loyal to the flag when buying and selling with the world, in Great Britain, the thing that puzzled me was to know how I was to become disloyal to the flag by selling and buying with one more country after I had become a Canadian. I cannot understand it. I do not suppose that even the most patriotic, the most loyal man opposite would suggest such a thing as that; at least not all of them. DR. CLARK IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS times, and I have not had time to read his speech to see how many times he used the phrase. Now, my only wish about that phrase is that he had come down from vague generalities and gone a little into detail as to what he meant by the "organic and commercial union" that is likely to result from the rejection of this pact. I presume he means to indicate that he is a supporter of the policy which was first brought before the empire and the world by that brilliant statesman, Joseph Chamberlain. Well, how is organic union with Great Britain going to be strengthened by Mr. Chamberlain's scheme? That scheme proposed to tax the wheat of the world and to allow Canadian wheat to go into British markets more cheaply, the result of which process must be to increase the price of flour to the British workman. The result of that scheme would have been that my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. Bennett) would have held of the British workman, metaphorically speaking, by the stomach, and in that way there would be indeed a kind of organic union, and of course the length of time that union would last would altogether depend upon the ability of the man with the stomach to get out of the grip. I wish again that some one on the other side would descend from vague generalities and give us some details about what they are going to do for this commercial union. Presumably, my hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Foster), as I proved last session, has been working for this thing for twenty years and now that he is in power he will surely get to business and do something. There is an excellent article of woolens that we need very much in his country. Woolens are an essential article of clothing in a country where you have five months of winter, sometimes zero most of the time as I have seen occur once. A plentiful and cheap supply of woolens would seem to be a very great thing for people inhabiting such a country, so that I presume one of the first steps of this government in bringing about organic and commercial union—which, to use a verb familiar to my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) he has adumbrated for so many years—one of the first things this government will do will be to go to Britain and indicate woolens as one of the things upon which they are willing to reduce their duties so that we home-steaders in the west will get the chance of buying the products of the Yorkshire mills which are the best woolens in the world. We need the chance to buy more cheaply all the more because we have been refused the right to sell where we like. Unless this whole talk of organic and commercial union and inter-imperial preference is a gold-brick to the British-born, I shall be interested indeed to see the present government make offers to Britain along the line of woolens with the smiling approval of my hon. and esteemed friend the chief whip of the party (Mr. Stanfield) and of my other hon. friend from Laurier (Mr. Thoburn). It is only when you go into details and look at schemes like this that you see the difficulty.

An hon. member. Unshrinkable woolens.

Mr. Clark (Red Deer). The woolens might be unshrinkable as my hon. friend suggests, but the policy is unshrinkable. My hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. Bennett) is great on new ideas, and in connection with the mention of fair trade he has introduced the phrase that it was a new idea. Why, sir, I remember in the early days of my political work in the old country that Mr. Chamberlain, when in the height of his power, and president of the Board of Trade in Mr. Gladstone's second administration, used to trounce the protectionists of those days who at that particular time called themselves fair traders. Fair trade is not a new idea; there is nothing new about the idea of protection any more than there is about selfishness which is at the root of it; it is as old as human nature. But commercial union seems to be a new idea to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett). I wonder how he, who has done much reading—as he will soon give this House ample evidence of—I wonder how he has forgotten his history. There was a time when we had commercial union between Canada and the old land. Has my hon. friend forgotten the navigation laws? The navigation laws were repealed by the wily Liberal government of Lord Russell in 1849 and these laws were designed to force Canada into exclusive trade with the old land. The date 1849 is significant, because five years later as a result of the repeal of those laws Lord Elgin negotiated his first reciprocity treaty with the United States. Now, sir, the point I want to bring to the notice of my hon. friend (Mr. Bennett)—who doubtless in his blind and stumbling way loves the empire as much as I do—the point I want to bring to his attention is this; that before that repeal, and before that introduction of reciprocity there was disloyalty in Canada. The people were disaffected, but the gift of commercial freedom (not commercial restriction), that is to say the freedom to make their own commerce restored that loyalty, that patriotism and that imperialism which are as strong to-day in Canada as in any portion of the British Empire.

And now Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word or two upon the amendment of my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) which after all is the specific thing we are debating at the present moment. I was very much interested in listening to the first speech of my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and I hope I may already call him my hon. friend. It was an able speech, a speech which fully justifies—if I can say so without offence—his inclusion in the cabinet. But it was not free from fault, and I think that one of its faults was as a piece of parliamentary debating, and as my hon. friend from Pictou very well pointed out in an interruption, that he in general terms charged the whole of this side of the House with inflaming race and party prejudice without producing one jot or tittle of a quotation to prove his case.

That is not a method of debating which will carry my hon. friend very far in producing conviction as to any cause which he is arguing. We are charged by my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Hazen) with inflaming race and creed prejudices in this country. Why, when my hon. friend makes a charge of that kind in this House he presumes upon the credulity of his own followers. Did we issue "The Appeal to the British-born" in the last election? I never used an argument upon any platform which I did not address to my audience as an audience of Canadians. I should be ashamed upon this or any other topic to speak to any audience of men from the Atlantic to the Pacific, except as the members of one great country—and I have learned that lesson partially from my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) who, above all men, so far as I have been able to observe his career, has for his magnum opus, his chief object, the cementing of all classes and creeds. If he has one pride it is Canada. I am glad to pay that tribute to him when he is leading the opposition, because I am as proud of being behind him to-day as ever I was when he was in power. I never wanted anything from him or from anybody else, I do not now, but I am proud to have followed him on this and a hundred other grounds; I am proud because in him, as all Canadians realize, we have an incomparable party leader, a great asset of a whole people, a splendid example of a world citizen and, with all that, a simple and loving friend of every man, woman and child in the country. I am sorry that I might have on my part had the effect of driving from his place the Minister of Marine (Mr. Hazen); however, in the absence of the minister I must continue to say just a few words about the amendment, and may I point out, sir, that the amendment is justified to the hilt by the speech of my hon. friend the Minister of Marine. The amendment has done some good already. It complains that no policy has been declared in regard to naval defence, but the Minister of Marine declared at last the fourth policy of the Conservative party upon this subject. It is exceedingly interesting to reflect upon the kaleidoscopic views of the party opposite in regard to naval defence. But I shall not do more than touch on them:

First act in the drama—German scare at full height. The hon. member for North Toronto, as he then was (Mr. Foster), comes down to the House with his full war paint on and, with tears in his voice, tells us about the weary Titan. Just before the curtain went down they decided upon the speedy construction of a Canadian naval service, and the gentleman in the biggest hurry was the Prime Minister because at his instigation that word "speedy" was put in the resolution.

Second act in the drama—German scare still on, so badly on that we must send dry cash, $20,000,000 or $25,000,000. Down went the curtain on the second act.

Third act in the drama—Capture of the omnibus by my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) whom I am more than pleased on personal grounds now to see a minister of the government—capture of the omnibus and a blockade on that part of this great loyal and imperialist party to find out from the country whether they should really do anything or not.

Last act in the drama—Revealed by one of the recruits of the party and of the minister last evening, when he lifted the curtain just a little he justified the amendment to which I am speaking, and he says he is now going not to the Canadian people, but to the British Admiralty. I hope that if he does so he will take my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Monk), who still runs the omnibus—at least he possesses the works—and Mr. Bourassa over with him.

What are the circumstances which have led the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Hazen) to announce this fourth policy within two years? Why he actually finds that if you are going in for a Canadian service, you will have to build some ships. That has been a perfect revelation to him—I am surprised at that seeing that he is a proponent of build-up ships. Why did they expect to build when they were going into a naval service, airships or houses? Of course if you go in for a naval service, you must build ships; it has never been done in any other way. If my hon. friend the Minister of Marine had been in this House a year or two ago, he would have heard me give more startling figures than he produced last evening. He talks of nine ships, cruisers and destroyers, and he is so frightened at that that he gives up his first resolution, his second resolution and the plebiscite and he is going. I understood, as a deputation, to the British Admiralty to see if it would not be better to go a little more slowly. That plea for time does not for one moment touch the principle of this amendment—not for one moment. The figures which I quoted to the House were that our representatives to the imperial press conference in Britain, two or three years ago, saw 144 ships of the line in the Solent and only one of these ships was 12 years old. That is the brand of imperialism they go in for in Britain. They believe in the flag there. I doubt that my friend's opposition if they are frightened out of their wits at the idea of building nine ships. I think that is a fair criticism of a party that has just come out of an election in which they have nearly shaken their arms off waving the flag. I have great respect for the loyalty which will die in the last ditch for the flag, but I am very suspicious of loyalty which wants the other fellow to die in the last ditch to provide him with bigger dividends on the one hand and is frightened at the idea of building nine little ships of war on the other.

I said, the plea for time is no answer to the amendment before the House.

Now that amendment I shall support with the utmost heartiness, because it raises a question of the highest importance to this country. And let me say, and I hope to prove what I say, that in the first place the amendment involves nothing less than the personal honor of the ministry. That is very strong language, but according to the canons and traditions of the best political life with which I am acquainted—the political life of the government and parliament of the old country—that is what is involved in this amendment.

Some hon. members. Hear, hear. Mr. Michael Clark. For what are the facts? Up to the time of the formation of the cabinet there was a distinct cleavage in opinion on this question of naval defence as between the two sections of the cabinet. I went to explain to my hon. friend the Minister of Marine (Mr. Hazen) at this point that I, of all men in this House, had the least possible objection to the inclusion in any cabinet of my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works. What I am concerned for is that he should go into that cabinet in accordance with the traditions of the British Empire. There was a distinct cleavage; there is no denying that; it cannot be denied. Nor can it be denied further that it is a very constitutional practice that the members sitting in one cabinet, and as has been pointed out in the words of the amendment itself, should be in agreement upon the principles upon which they are going to govern in regard to the vital questions before the country. May I give an illustration, to any one who knows anything of recent British history or how highly British statesmen regard their honor in this respect. All of us, many of us remember when Mr. Gladstone was first forming his first home rule administration, Sir Henry James, afterwards Lord James, was an old and honored member of the Liberal party. He had been Mr. Gladstone's attorney-general in the previous administration; he was in agreement with Mr. Gladstone upon everything but home rule, if he had gone into Mr. Gladstone's government he would have been the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain. When Mr. Gladstone explained his explanation, what he proposed he laid down cheerfully the Lord Chancellorship of Great Britain and didn't go into the government, because he could not agree with Mr. Gladstone's policy upon the home rule question. The Duke of Devonshire was in exactly the same boat. Now, I do not know what minister has given way upon this subject, but I think I have given evidence that according to the best parliamentary traditions that have ever been known in this world the question of honor of ministers is involved. Nay more, the rights of parliament are involved. Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Hear, hear.

Mr. Michael Clark. Parliament passed a resolution on this subject, unanimously, parliament has a right to know whether the resolution is going to be honored by this ministry and loyally honored by every section of it. There was a cleavage in the two sections set together in a cabinet. One of two things has happened, either there is no change in opinion on the part of either section in the cabinet or there is a change. If there is no change then one side of the formation of the cabinet is guilty of breaking this constitutional rule, and has fallen beneath of the high standard of statesmanship shown by Devonshire and James, and I for one am a good enough Canadian to want as high a standard in these matters to prevail in Canada as ever prevailed in Great Britain. If there is a change the country has a right to know who has changed and then all will go well.

It is a poor thing if Canadian traditions are to be given away in such a matter, because some one is afraid to give notice that he has made a change in case it should hurt the chances of his political party. We have heard recently of a simile of a dog that had or did not have a collar on, but it appears to me in this case that some dog has got a muzzle on. I do not know what if I were to speak until bedtime I could make a point in regard to this amendment any clearer. I leave it with the cabinet in that shape. But I will vote for the amendment cheerfully on the grounds that I have given. Imperialism was the word we heard recently throughout the length and breadth of the land. My hon. friend the member for East London wrote a letter to his constituents after the election was over and, if I mistake not, it ended with the words: "Continentalism is dead, imperialism is alive." Mr. Speaker, during the recess, a year or two ago, while our naval debates were in their career, I saw a little house on my western farm a poor Norwegian who had only been two or three years in Canada, and in broken English he said to me: "I wish you could do something for the old country, if there is any danger, sir. I think more of that man's loyalty, and that man's imperialism than the three-cent brand that I have tried to say some few words about this afternoon, that seems to animate the whole government benches."

SPEAKS ON PEACE.

NEW WESTMINSTER LIBERALS MEET

Annual Gathering Enthusiastic — Officers of Association Re-elected

New Westminster, Nov. 30.—President George Kennedy presided at the annual meeting of the New Westminster Liberal Association which was marked by great enthusiasm. Mr. Kennedy's speech was in part as follows:

It is just a year past since the New Westminster Liberal Association held its last annual meeting and election of officers. This year has been an eventful one politically, with the accent on the one outstanding event of the Dominion general election on September 21st last, which resulted in a complete and unexpected reverse for the Liberal party throughout Canada, on the question of reciprocity with the United States in natural products, the one issue on which the appeal to the people was made and the election fought.

It is entirely to the credit of the consistency, courage and honesty of purpose of the Liberal party and of the late government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that, when the opportunity came they did not seek to weakly evade, but boldly challenged this issue and sought to give to the people of Canada the mutually beneficial free trade relations with the great republic to the south, the achievement of which had been earnestly striven for by the leading public men of Canada, Liberals and Conservatives alike, for over half a century. Hungering for office after fifteen years in the "cold shades," the Conservative party unhesitatingly renounced and repudiated its own political faith and record on this question and took advantage of the occasion to make a characteristically frantic flag-waving appeal in opposition to reciprocity, which temporarily blinded the people to their true interests and led to a rejection of the very benefits they had so long and persistently sought to obtain.

No leader, government or party could ask for a better cause, for a nobler fight, win or lose, than that in which the Laurier government and the Liberal party of Canada went to defeat on the 21st of September last—a defeat more creditable and glorious than was the victory of their opponents, in the circumstances. Because of this fact and because of the fog of misrepresented and false issues under cover of which the Conservatives won—because, also, of the hostages which the Conservative party has given as the price of success to the organized high protectionists and to the extreme anti-imperialists of Canada—hostages which they have been compelled to begin to redeem even in the constitution of the cabinet—the future of that party in power rests upon an obviously transitory, insecure and treacherous basis, which the alert, well reasoned and unusually well equipped Liberal opposition at Ottawa will not be slow to take advantage of.

After a round of applause, the president called upon the secretary-treasurer, Ed. Goulet, for his annual report, which showed receipts by the local association for the year prior to be $323, and expenditures of $257.95, leaving a balance on hand of $65.95, against which there were unpaid accounts aggregating about $15. Besides the association had to its credit in trust account $65, from the sale of former club assets, with $50 collectable to the credit of the same account, constituting a special fund to be disposed of as the association might in future direct.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows: Honorary president, Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (re-elected by a standing vote); president, Geo. Kennedy; first vice-president, Ald. J. J. Johnston; second vice-president, C. B. Deans; third vice-president, A. Hardman; secretary-treasurer, Ed. Goulet, executive board, Jno. Reid, W. L. Johnson, A. E. Kelly, J. M. Phillips, Ald. J. S. Bryson, R. Buckland and D. Douglas (all re-elected).

After the discussion of various details of organization and plans of work for the year, the meeting by unanimous resolution, authorized the president and secretary to draw a telegram of congratulation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the attainment in vigorous health of his seventieth anniversary on the 22nd inst., coupled with assurances of hearty support and endorsement of his continued leadership of the Liberal party of Canada by this association.

INCREASED PAY FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS

South Vancouver Board of Trustees Will Draw Up New Schedule

South Vancouver, Nov. 30.—Two important questions, the installation of automatic fire alarm systems in the schools of the municipality and better pay for the school teachers, occupied the greater part of the time at the meeting of the South Vancouver Board of School Trustees held in Lord Selkirk school. After some discussion it was decided to defer action in the matter for the present. A number of chemical appliances for the subduing of any small local blaze will be purchased.

In regard to teachers' salaries, a strong deputation waited on the board with a request that the present remuneration to teachers in the municipality was lower than that paid in the city, something should be done to even up the schedules.

S. B. Clement, principal of the Lord Selkirk school, spoke for the deputation. He pointed out that the board, while in the front rank in most matters, was rather behind in regard to salaries. The opinion of the Teachers' Association, he said, was that intermediate teachers should be advanced from $65 to $70 a month, and the senior grade be paid $75 from the start, with regard to the principals and first assistants he confined himself to asking that they should be advanced in the same manner as those in the city.

Spencer Robinson, chairman of the board, assured the deputation that the superior had already been given instructions to draw up a schedule based on more liberal terms than before.

Mr. Thompson, representing the presbytery of Collingwood, came before the board to ask for the use of the Carleton School for their congregation in West Collingwood. The request was granted.

EXECUTION ON DECEMBER 5.

New Westminster, Nov. 30.—Henry Anderson Jones, convicted wife murderer of this city, will be executed on the morning of December 5.

The crime for which Jones was convicted was the culmination of quarrels which had existed for a period of over twenty-five years. Arriving from England not more than a year ago he took up his residence in this city. The wife arrived shortly after, when the quarrelling again commenced. After a quarrel and threatening to shoot her, Jones left the home and took up his residence down town. Early one morning, as a grown-up son was going to work, he met his father coming from the residence, who passed him without speaking. Hurrying home the boy found his mother lying dead on the floor of the kitchen, having been shot twice, as she was having breakfast. From the time Jones was seen by his son he disappeared for nearly a week, when he entered a logging camp on the Fraser river and asked to be taken to Westminster to give himself up. He was brought to the city and gave an account of his wanderings which had extended to a number of points in the Fraser valley.

He was lodged in the city jail, and in his cell practically admitted his guilt to an officer. At the preliminary hearing of his case he was almost too weak to stand. At the autumn assize court he was found guilty and condemned to be hanged on December 5.

This is the second case of the death sentence to be inflicted in this city this year, the previous one being that of a Japanese convicted of killing countryman at White Rock during a drunken quarrel.

VANCOUVER BANK ROBBERY.

Vancouver, Nov. 30.—When teller A. D. McLeod of the Grandview branch of the Royal Bank of Canada counted out the thousand dollars yesterday for the robber who confronted him, he gave a bonus of twenty-five per cent. "Give me a thousand," said the robber. "The moment I have counted out $1250 for the robber, for the bank official's cash was that much short last evening when business for the day was finished. There is, so far, not the slightest clue of the robber.

STRUCK BY TRAIN.

Kamloops, Nov. 30.—Brandon Valence and J. A. Hodgson, two recent arrivals from the old country, were badly injured at Salmon Arm by being struck by a train while attempting to cross the track. Both were on foot. Valence, a trapper, had his foot so badly crushed that it was found necessary to amputate the member. Hodgson was injured in a most painful manner, being carried along by the engine for a short distance and having a steel splinter from a rail driven into his foot.

A Little Advertising is a Dangerous Thing!

Any advertiser who puts an occasional ad. in the paper and hurries to his place of business expecting people to rush in, will be disappointed. He will probably remark, "advertising does not pay." He says, "I have tried it." He thinks he has tried it, but not so—he has not even half tried it. To make advertising pay you MUST be persistent.

If you are an advertiser, and not quite satisfied with results, we shall be glad to interview you.

Tenders for Sooke Water Supply

Office of the Water Commissioner of the Corporation of Victoria, British Columbia, November 22nd, 1911.

Sealed tenders will be received at the office of the Water Commissioner, in the City Hall, between the hours of 11 a. m. and 12 o'clock noon, on Friday, the 15th day of December, 1911, for the construction and installation, including all work and the furnishing of all materials and equipment required for the conserving, conveying, and delivering of Sooke Lake water to the City mains in the City of Victoria, under the direction and to the satisfaction of said Water Commissioner.

Progressive payments will be made, as provided for in the Specifications, and said work must be done in accordance with the Plans and Specifications therefor on file in the office of the Water Commissioner, to which reference is hereby made for full details and description of said work and materials, and must be completed within thirty days, and completed within seven hundred and thirty-one days, from the date upon which the contract becomes binding upon the Corporation under the provisions of B/Law 814.

The amount of the bond to be given for the faithful performance of the contract is hereby fixed at 10 per cent. of the contract price.

All proposals offered shall be accompanied by a cheque, certified by a Victoria branch of a chartered bank, and made payable to the order of the Treasurer of the Corporation of the City of Victoria, for the sum of $15,000 (Fifteen Thousand Dollars), and no proposal will be considered unless accompanied by such cheque.

Printed proposal forms will be furnished gratuitously upon application at the office of the said Water Commissioner, and all proposals must be made upon such forms attached to and formally part of the Specifications.

Printed copies of the Specifications, with proposal forms included, may be obtained from the said Water Commissioner upon depositing $50.00 (Fifty Dollars) for their safe return, and when returned, in good condition, such deposit will be refunded.

The Water Commissioner reserves the right to accept the tender or tenders which will, in his judgment, best secure the efficient performance of the work, or to reject any, or all tenders or proposals which are incomplete, conditional, or obscure, or which contain additions not called for, erasures, alterations, or irregularities of any kind, which will be rejected as informal.

Failure to name sureties will be sufficient cause for the rejection of a tender.

No contract will be awarded for fractional parts of a schedule, and no tender will be considered that does not cover at least one complete schedule in all its parts.

JAMES L. RAYMUR,
Water Commissioner.

RESERVOIR TENDERS

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to 3 p. m. on Friday, the 1st of December, for the re-opening of the Smith's Hill Reservoir. THIRD DAY GONE STILL NO NEWS

The "Tees" it is impossible to make any statement.
The Nanooose will be on the islands at the entrance to the Sound, shipping men here believe that she will be battered to pieces in a short time owing to the heavy seas which sweep that part. If she is lying further up, however, where the water is comparatively calm the vessel, if tightly wedged, will be safe.
The Nanooose should reach the Sound some time to-morrow afternoon and if the other vessels had not proceeded inside she will at once head up Ky-quot channel. After rendering whatever assistance she can the Nanooose will come south and call at different ports en route to pick up mails.

In order to relieve the anxiety of the friends of those who are aboard the Tees it might be stated that the fact that the wireless apparatus on the steamer is not working does not necessarily mean that the vessel has sunk. Her engine room, no doubt, has been flooded which has prevented her engines from working and thereby the means of operating the dynamo would be shut off. If the vessel is lying further up the Sound it is quite possible that the high lands may have prevented communication.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET UNSETTLED

Traders Await the President's Message to Congress—Moderate Firmness at Close

New York, Dec. 1.—It was an uncertain market in stocks today, with a tendency towards further weakness, and moderate firmness at the close. It is fully apparent that trading acts under the influence of the forthcoming President's message to Congress on December 1, and eagerly awaits final sentiment from that quarter. It is expected that the message will be confined principally to the anti-trust law on the basis of the establishment of a federal corporation commission to apply constructive legislation; and in addition a federal incorporation law suggested. Whatever the outcome, the market will act heavily until the outlook becomes clearer.

WHEAT PRICES WELL MAINTAINED

Improvement Due to Reports of Showers in North of Argentine

Chicago, Dec. 1.—There was a much improved tone to the wheat market today and prices were well sustained. It is generally conceded that selling has been overdone on the recent break and many of the shorts have evened up. There was heavy covering in Liverpool due to reports of showers in the north of Argentine and Broomfield's bullish world's crop estimate. Northwest receipts are still substantial. The Modern Miller is slightly bullish.
Corn strength was manifest to-day especially in the December option, was suggestive of short covering. With a fair demand and slow movement from the farms, the market offers small scope to sellers and maintains good rallying power. December was one cent higher than Wednesday's close.
Oats were steady with tendency upward.

B. C. E. R. MEETING

Vancouver, Dec. 1.—That Vancouver will hardly care to adopt municipal ownership of the B. C. E. R. Company in 1912, of the year of the expiration of its present franchise was the opinion expressed by Mr. M. Horne-Payne at the meeting of the company in London yesterday, according to private dispatches received in this city. Mr. Horne-Payne made this statement in concluding upon the subject of Vancouver's recent desire to unify the franchise under which the company operates its railways in the different parts of Vancouver and adjacent territory for the purpose of paying the way for a Greater Vancouver. Mr. Horne-Payne based his opinion upon the belief that by this time Vancouver would have had an object lesson in the trouble of municipal ownership from other cities in the Dominion operating under such a system.

CHOCOLATE COMBINE

A London mercantile house reports that a Swiss chocolate combination has been formed with a capital of 10,000,000 francs. The style of the company will be Peter, Callier, Kohler, Chocolate Juigues, Vevey. It is also stated that it has entered into an agreement with the Nestle and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Companies, giving them the sole selling rights of the chocolate combine's products in all countries outside of Europe, United States and Canada.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A London special says the minimum rate of discount of the Bank of England is unchanged at 4 per cent.
Yukon Gold has declared a quarterly dividend of 7 cents a share, a reduction of 2 cents quarterly. This is equivalent to a reduction from 5 per cent. per annum to 4 per cent.
There is talk in New York of a reduction in the dividend of both St. Paul and Northern Pacific.
American Tobacco books on common stock close to-day and will not reopen until March 11, owing to plan of dissolution.
Directors of the Rock Island will meet Monday and declare the usual dividend.
The Merchants' Linotype Co. has declared its regular quarterly dividend of 2 1/2 per cent. and an extra dividend of 2 1/2 per cent. payable December 20 to stock of record December 5.

WATER POWERS OF THE DOMINION

COMPREHENSIVE REPORT ON THEIR CONSERVATION
Less Power is Available at Niagara Falls Than Was Supposed

What is the most complete work on the water powers of Canada? Is the volume just issued by the Conservation Commission. It is the first inventory ever taken of the wealth of the Dominion in this regard, and it is embodied in a large and profusely illustrated report. It is undoubtedly one of the most valuable and interesting reports to come from the government press, and the work which the commission is doing in this one branch of conservation of natural resources alone is proof sufficient of the wisdom of the late government in appointing such a body.
The investigation made by the commission, which has extended over a period of two years, shows that there are 1,016,521 horse-power developed from water-power in Canada. Every phase of the subject from the laws governing the disposition of water-powers in the various provinces, to the actual physical data regarding each individual water-power, concerning which information was obtainable, is treated in the report. In addition, there is a very full bibliography of 30 pages, and appendices giving, among other things, the text of the laws concerning the export of power and also of the treaty recently concluded with the United States regarding the establishment of an international joint commission.
The volume opens with two chapters of an introductory nature that are concerned mainly with the general economic bearing of water-powers on national development. The relation of water to agriculture, mining, navigation, domestic supply and so forth, is dealt with, and the principles to be used in the interpretation of water-powers data are stated and discussed critically. The broad and optimistic statements very often made on the platform and in the press regarding our vast water power resources are deprecated.
To quote from the report, "General statements implying that the aggregate amount of water-power must be great because the total water area, or watershed area is so great, or because there are so many lakes and rivers, are generalities to be considered of very little definite value. One of the chief dangers of such generalities is to create in the popular mind a feeling of unwarranted assurance that, even though desirable water-rights are being granted by a government, yet there is so much left, that no apprehension may be entertained regarding the amount of power rights being parted with."
A chapter is devoted to the water-powers of each province, in which the general features of the province as regards water-power development are discussed and an outline given of the law whereby powers are granted or leased to private individuals or corporations. The larger developments are also described. The statistical data given in tabular form includes the height of the fall, the horse-power that may be developed, the present development and the main uses to which the power is applied such as lighting, pulp and paper making, etc. Reference is also made to the possibility of increasing the amount of power developed by storage reservoirs and dams where such are feasible.
The power situation in Ontario is treated very fully, special attention being given to the power possibilities at Niagara and the conditions affecting development there. Each of the power companies operating there, whether on the Canadian or American side, is described in detail. A significant reference is made to the granting of franchises to develop power at Niagara Falls. The report states that the low-water flow of the Niagara river would yield at the falls about 2,250,000 horse-power, of which Canada's share (one-half) would be 1,125,000 horse-power. "Franchises have already been granted," it goes on to say, "and plants partially completed, for the development on the Canadian side of the river of about 450,000 horse-power. In other words, instead of 'millions' of horse-power being available, as has been sometimes stated, it appears that about half, and by all odds the better half, of Canada's usable share of Niagara Falls power has already been placed under private control."
The volume embodies all the useful information regarding the water-power of Canada that has heretofore been collected and this has been supplemented and, in many cases, verified, by field surveys, conducted by the engineers of the commission. In fact, all the information regarding the Maritime Provinces power was obtained in this way last year by the experts of the commission. The data regarding the western provinces was found to be so incomplete that it was decided to make special investigations of powers in those provinces, the results of which will be published next year in the form of a report on the "Water-Powers of Western Canada." The engineers of the commission are now engaged upon this work.
In Germany a general census is taken every five years, as against ten years in Great Britain.

DEPENDENT MAN'S SUICIDE.
 Shoots Himself at Football Match at Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 1.—A football game here yesterday was brought to a sudden stop by a suicide in the crowd of spectators attending the side lines. Startled by the report of a revolver shot, the crowd turned to see a man stagger and drop with a bullet through his head. He died in the arms of one of the players a minute later. The suicide proved to be Harry Mintz, a former football player, from Stockton, Cal. He came to Buffalo a few days ago with the expectation of meeting his wife and effecting a reconciliation. He found that she had gone away. Disappointed and disheartened he determined to shoot himself.

OUR LETTER BOX
 SNOWFALL AT NEW DENVER

To the Editor:—On November 18 the Slovan Record published the following: "Sunday and Monday there occurred the heaviest snowstorm in the history of Slovan Lake, at least in the memory of the oldest resident. In the two days there must have fallen about forty feet of snow. It came down so fast Monday night that the C.P.R. steamer Slovan couldn't push her nose through it on the trip. Tunnels are being run along the principal streets and shafts being sunk to the chimneys in the smaller houses."

May I venture to suggest to my good friend, the editor of the Slovan Record, that in future when in a facetious mood it might be well for him to add the word "joke" to all items he shall print when intended to be simply funny and not to be taken seriously. His not having done so in this instance has resulted in that old sobersides, the Colonist, cribbing the Record editor's little bit of pleasantry and serving up under the black-letter caption, "Heavy Snowfall" in this fashion: "Sunday and Monday, November 12 and 13, are destined to be historic dates in the history of New Denver, the so-called Lucerne of America, perched high in the Kootenay hills—for during the forty-eight hours it witnessed what was probably the heaviest snowstorm ever recorded, with a fall of little less than one foot per hour. On the two days, it is stated, forty feet of snow fell. The white masses descended so rapidly on Monday night that the C.P.R. steamer Slovan could not push her nose through it on the down trip. Tunnels were run along the principal streets and shafts sunk to the chimneys in the houses."

New Denver, which is low down at the lake-side, "perched high in the Kootenay hills," suggests a vivid, though faulty, imagination. But this aside, it happened that after a long day's walk in the Slovan mountains I reached New Denver on the Sunday night mentioned, and next morning left by the steamer Slovan en route to Victoria. It is true snow was falling when the steamer continued her trip up the lake, but at 8 o'clock that morning the snow on the level was certainly not fifteen inches in depth. That nearly 30 feet fell during the remainder of Monday is, of course, just a "fairly tale," jocosely given out by the Slovan Record. Perhaps the New Denver Town Improvement Society will now discuss the desirability of passing a vote of thanks to the Colonist for the advertisement of such questionable value it has so credulously given that well-favored town. E. JACOBSON, Victoria, B. C., November 30, 1911.

BLOODSAL COMPANY'S AFFAIRS.

To the Editor:—Will you permit me space in your valued paper for the following:

As chairman of the new board of the Bloodsal company I should like it publicly stated that the intention of the directors is to carry out an impartial inquiry into the affairs of the company. If we find our grievances are ill-founded we will apologize to the late management. In any case I for one will retire from office after the inquiry unless re-elected at a general meeting.

—Our desire is to see that all shareholders, big and little, receive just treatment, and that the limited amount of capital is used to the best advantage.
