ALL THE WHILE.

The nights they come and the mornings they go,
And the rosy twilight round them lie—
And the stars are bright and the stars are sweet, And I sit in the silence and watch them meet,
But all the while my heart beats low,
For the moon is out of my sky.

The mornings come and the mornings go—Yellow and purple, crimson and gray,
And the morn'ning sings as she calls her cows,
And the fresh whistles the white he ploughs;
But all the while my heart beats low,
For the hawk, the hawk is away.

The tides they ebb and the tides they flow,
And the sun shines more than the storm can
And the ships with their white sails blowing free, Like a forest of silver, cover the sea;
And all the while my heart beats low,
For the one good ship goes down.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

When a person in the humbler walks of life, possessing indomitable energy, resolves to make a mark, punches his way to respect, and attains to a fair standard of intellectual culture, the popular voice is wont to meet him with such honeyed compliments as—"he is one of the few of our self-made men." To be singled out from the masses as self-made is a feather to be prized in any one's cap; it involves sea-room, massive timbers in the mental attic, muscle and strain of machinery, and a true eye on the boiler, to keep the steam at a non-explosive temperature.

Gen. Banks is self-made; Gen. Wilson is self-made; our star characters are mostly self-made. Now, brother mechanic, give us your hand; we propose a novel. About twenty-four years since a spunky young man crossed the Atlantic, turned some short corners around Boston, pretty soon weighed anchor in Weymouth. In those days, European adventurers were rather elbowed from the ring by the major portion of our staid farmers; however, our foreign lad soon made a hitch to farm it, with one who manufactures boots and shoes. His eyes glinted with delight when $12 a month was fixed as compensation. After rendering three or four years of faithful service he struck out for a bran new scheme, to learn a mechanical trade and ascertain how much balm of Gilead the tying up in the bonds of matrimony would afford. Time rolled on; occasionally "chips of the old block" would peep around; little mouths needed bread—"Where! didn't he have a tough one, striving to keep the pot boiling?"

'Tis past midnight! behold the muf-fl'd lamp in that work-shop. There is an iron will exemplified. How the bow fronts assume form; mark the dexterity with which he plies those pincers, impelled by a momentum issuing from little ones' many wants. Ten years have elapsed. This mechanic has a troop of "young America" to keep the mill in running order for, and asks no favors.— Backbone and vim covers the ground.— See that ten-year old lad "on the home stretch" for school; shouldn't think any object but the school-house attracted his eye. After school-hours just glance in upon that mechanic's shop; that plump ten year old is putting in, assisting his father bravely. Time moves on; said ten years had attained 15 years; constant exercise of the muscles has made him hardy and robust; he's about as keen, sharp, and modest as a scholar as the district grammar school turns up; something besides chap ball championship under that chap's jacket!

Let us now peep into the Weymouth High School. Upon our honor, there sits the aspiring lad, with the deportment of a gentleman. The accuracy of his recitations attests his deep study and persistent application. At home, in the evening, he rolls up sleeves, pitches in, crimping boots, earns $2.00, then in the small hours of the night reviews his lessons.

He graduates with marked honors.—
The member of Congress from our district advertises for applicants as candidates for the West Point Academy. A committee of learned gentlemen are authorized to examine candidates, and recommend the successful one. Our said High School lad aspires to cadetship; is examined by the board, disposes of intricate, learned queries, scholarly and satisfactorily; physically and mentally is pronounced a suitable and competent pupil to enter West Point. This chap has friends; so has Gen. Phil. Sheridan.— This High School boy resides now in Weymouth—so does his father. "Who are they?" Guess, boys, guess!

SILAS JONES TRAP.

Silas Jones, Esq., was a member of the church,—was, and had been, long before the young people were born. He had attended meetings, related his forty-years-ago experience made hard exhortations and dry prayers enough to be a saint ready to be translated. But, alas, instead of this, he was one of those crooked horn beam trees that sometimes grow on Mount Zion, too stiff to be straightened and too tough to be split. He was one of those positive, decided characters that make a path, such as we might suppose a team of buffaloes would move in could they once be yoked. He had influence, and if it need be, made fight. His strength did not lie in the softer graces, charity, benevolence and kindness to the poor, sympathy for suffering, and a desire to communicate the Gospel to the world.—The contribution book looked dry when it came out of his paw.

Mr. Jones was a champion in dry theology, and was to the minister who was so unfortunate as to say anything not previously known and acted by him.
A new thought, or an old thought in a new light, was a heresy, and no pointer could be keener to nose a bird than he was to sniff a heresy. Some said he had a kind heart within. I don't pretend to know how that was. The bark on the tree was so rough and thick, I doubt whether any body ever saw the "within."

Mr. Jones was not one of those porcupines that would prick and wound you if you touched him, but he really had the power of shooting his quills into his adversary. If his neighbor's horse got into his pasture, if his neighbor's sheep crept under his fence, or his hen got into his garden, then look out! The storm was a perfect typhoon.

But his great trials and battles were with his ministers; I say ministers, for, though he had but one at a time, he wrought upon them so energetically that he had them very often. Two years was a long ministry in the parish where brother Jones lived and acted. It seemed to make no difference who or what a minister was. Mr. Jones would be the first to take the new comer warmly by the hand, tell him how awfully they were deceived by the last half-dozen ministers, and how they would all have been ridden to death, had he not the superhuman courage to unhorse them.
But the year would not be round before Mr. Jones was at loggerheads with the new minister,—was undermining him, and so arranged matters that he must and would leave. His flail was iron, and he thrashed so hard that the meekest was glad to get away from his blows. And yet Mr. Jones had no idea but he was a very good, useful, zealous, wide-awake disciple to take the sword and split over the head of friend or foe in the good cause.

It came to pass in process of time that Rev. Mr. Strong came to the church as his pastor. He was a puzzle to our friend Jones. He was quiet, reserved, mild and gentle, but the flash of his eye showed that he had a will of his own. When Mr. Jones greeted him warmly on his arrival, he was received kindly, but notwithstanding more. The new pastor acted as if he had been used to kind speeches.
And by and by, when Mr. Jones began to insinuate, and then talked louder, and show the people that Mr. Strong was not adapted to that place, and could never do anything there, said Mr. Strong never moved to hear of it, never to notice it, went about his duties as usual, and treated Mr. Jones with unexceptional civility.

At length Mr. Jones could stand it no longer. Either he or the minister must be put down. There seemed to be no hole in the minister's coat into which he could thrust his finger, no opening of the harness through which he could thrust his arms. But a notable scheme occurred to him, and about it he set to work with his usual energy. He went round house by house, and invited all the men to meet at the big white school-house next Tuesday evening on business of great importance. The people all smelt mischief, and were about ready to have a wrestle with this hard disciple, and see who would rule, he or the parish.

Tuesday evening came, and the meeting was full. Mr. Jones was in full gear.
As soon as they had appointed a chairman of the meeting, he rose and said, "Brethren, I think it must be evident to you all that our minister, Mr. Strong, though a good man, and might do good in some places, probably, yet is not the man for us. I have been hoping that somebody else would move in this thing, but it seems to fall to me to do the most disagreeable thing. I don't want any formal vote on the subject. But what I propose is, that a hat be passed round and all those who think Mr. Strong is not the man for us, or who have anything against him, or who think he is not perfect, should drop in a paper on which is written 'no,' and all who are contrary-minded, write 'yes.'" Then it was that the quiet, gentle Mr.

Snell arose, amid great silence, and said "Mr. Chairman, I want to amend the motion of Mr. Jones, and I therefore move, that previous to taking the vote concerning Mr. Strong, the hat be carried round, and all those who think Mr. Jones a troubler in Israel, or who have any-
not perfect, drop in a paper on which is written 'yes,'—after that we can vote about Mr. Strong."

The amendment was seconded by at least a dozen voices, and the vote was taken, and every paper had "yes" written on it, very loud, and the vote was declared to be unanimous; and Mr. Jones took his hat, and the minister was left undisturbed; and the people have much glee to this day in speaking of "Eq.
Jones's trap."

THE IMPERIAL FAMILY OF RUSSIA.

The American excursionists who are steaming around the shores of Europe, by invitation visited the Czar and family at his summer resort on the Black Sea.— The interview is thus described:
"At the appointed hour we assembled in the handsome garden in front of the Emperor's palace. The Autocrat came out, and with him the Empress, the Grand Duchess Maria, her daughter, a pretty, blue eyed, fair haired girl of 14, and a little Grand Duke about 10 years old. The Emperor had on a white cloth cap, and pantaloons and coat of similar material, coarse in texture. The Empress and her daughter wore simple suits of foulard, with a little blue spot in it, blue trimmings, low crowned straw hats, trimmed with blue velvet, linen collars, flesh-colored gloves, parasols—lady readers will take due notice. The exceeding plainness and simplicity of their attire against creating a sensation anywhere. The little Grand Duke wore a red calico blouse and a straw hat, and had his pantaloons tucked into his boots.
Simplicity of costume and kingly staid-ness in manner came very well together, and I was curious to see how the Imperial party would act. They acted as if they had never been used to an 'acting finer.' They were as free from any semblance of pride or haughtiness as if their house had always been a village minister's house.
They conversed freely and unconstrainedly with anybody and everybody that came along (they all speak English) and so did the great officers of the Empire that were with them. Our party of Americans who were so distressed the day before, as to how they were going to get through this severe trial with credit, suddenly found themselves entirely at home and comfortable.

The 15-minute audience pleasantly augmented itself to half an hour, and then, instead of dismissing the guests, the Autocrat of all the Russias and his family transformed themselves into ushers, and led our tribe into the palace dining-room, to the library, the private chapel, the sitting-rooms, private writing-room—all over the establishment, in fact. I cannot recollect half the places. There was no hurry; there were plenty of affable Dukes and Princes, and Admirals, to answer questions, and this part of the programme insensibly wore out another half hour, and something over. When there was nothing more to see, the Imperial family bade the guests good-by till "to-morrow," and we departed for the palace of the Grand Duke Michael. The young Grand Duchess, however, went to another door and bowed at the party in detail as they passed by. If you ever called on an Emperor you will remember that little attentions not strictly in the bill were the very ones that went furthest toward making you feel comfortable.
That young girl's pleasant face, its expression of friendly interest, and her timid bow, were not calculated to make one feel like a tire-some nuisance. In my own case I know this was so. It struck me forcibly at the time that I had seldom felt so little like a nuisance before.

It is singular, but for the moment I forgot that before all this leave-taking occurred we were invited to the palace of the Crown Prince of Russia (aged 20), and shown all through it with the same absence of hurry as was the case at his father's mansion.
A drive of twenty minutes brought us to the beautiful park and gardens and the elegant palace of the Grand-Duke Michael. The first persons we saw there were the Empress and her daughter.
They had come by a nearer road. I suppose. Whether justly or not, we chose to consider this as a mark that they were not altogether tired of us yet. The introduction to the Grand Duke and his Duchess was hardly over, when the Emperor arrived himself. This was about as cheerful as it could be. He caught up his brother's little children and kissed them affectionately. I could not help noticing that, because it was so little like what we had reason to expect from the stern Russian bear we read about so much.

The Grand Duchess was as simply dressed as the Empress—was as gentle and unreserved, and as ready to talk with everybody. Her husband was just like her in these respects—a splendid looking man, over six feet high, well formed, and endowed with as kingly a presence as one could wish to see. He wore a handsome Cossack uniform, and looked the military commander to a charm.

There was but little ceremony here.
We were shown through the palace in the free-and-easy way we had already got accustomed to, and then our friends, the Princess, and Generals, and Barones-ses, conducted the gang all about the lawn and groves of the park. I enjoyed it. I had reached my level at last. If there is one thing that I am naturally fitted for, it is to converse with Dukes. I got along well.

Some of us lingered in the grounds a good while, and when we got back we found the balance of the mob scattered about the reception room and the verandah, sitting at little tables, and drinking tea and wine and eating bread and cheese and cold meats with the Grand Duke, who ate at one table awhile and then at another, and kept the conversation and the destruction of provisions going with a zeal which was perfectly astonishing in the brother of an Emperor. The Grand Duke's tea was delicious. It is brought over-land from China. It injures the article to transport it by sea.

Well, to cut a long story short, it was a chatty, sociable tea party, and free from restraint. Whoever chose got up human testimonials and had been allowed to whistle if he had wanted to.
And it was a pleasant picnic all through, from the time we left the ship till we got back again. We had spent nearly half a day with the heads of the Russian Empire, and it had seemed as if we were merely visiting a party of ordinary friends. There was not one of them but had said the kindest things about America, and said them with an earnestness that proved their sincerity—not one but had done everything he could to make us feel contented and at home. I fear for our less liberal hospitality. If they visit the ships they find a sign up, "No smoking about the wharf"—but the Grand Duke passed around his box of cigars in his own reception room. And there was another incident that shows how little he was inclined to put on airs, and how genuine the seeming cordiality of our reception was. This lordly brother of an Emperor, and himself sub-chief of half an empire, came down on his horse to Yalta, three miles, when we first came ashore, and escorted our procession all the way to the palace, keeping a sharp look-out, and despatching his aids hither and thither to furnish assistance whenever it was needed; and being dressed in an unpretentious uniform, nobody ever suspected who he was until we recognized him in his own palace. I doubt if he goes about escorting a rabble of plain citizens every day.

BASE BALL.—The game of base ball is generally supposed to be a modern pastime, but Shakespeare would seem to indicate a more remote origin, for instance:
You base (foot) ball players.—Leur.
Why, these balls bound.—Merry Wives.
Now, let's have a catch.—Twelfth Night.
I will run no base.—Merry Wives.
And so I shall catch the fly.—Henry V.
Hector shall have a great catch.—Troil.
And Cressid.
More like to run the country base.— Cymbeline.
Never leave striking in the field.—Henry V.
After he scores.—All's Well.
He proved the best man in the field.— Coriolanus.
The word is pitch and pay.—Henry V.
Whatever men do catch.—King John.
What foul play had we.—Tempest.
Unprovided of a pair of bases.—Titus Andronicus.
No other books but the score.—Henry IV.
His confounded base.—Henry IV.
I will fear to catch.—Timon.
What works, my countrymen, in hand?
Where go you with bats and clubs?—

ORIGIN OF THE OXEN-WALTZ.

Mozart had been in the service of the Emperor of Germany, whose orchestra he directed with more honor than profit to himself. Indeed, so indifferent was his salary, that the master of tunes found himself frequently unable to defray current expenses.

He was sitting one fine morning in his bed, when his wife entered to inform him that a very unassuming being, the butcher, was down stairs with his bill. Mozart, who had been for some time composing one of his greatest operas, the Clemenza di Tito, was arranging in his phantasia one of its most beautiful airs. He neither heard nor saw his wife. She, at lovely, kind soul, of rather practical views, who had been shortly before married to the young artist, stood waiting for awhile, reporting her information, but no answer followed her words.
Seizing the young artist by the elbow, she began to repeat the butcher's account. Mozart was writing without intermission; feeling, however, his arm touched, and hearing sounds whose tender harmonious notes of his soul, he shut his ears with his left hand, writing with the right as quickly as the notes could be scribbled.

A second shake of his wife followed.
Mozart growing impatient, seized his walking stick, and his wife, alarmed at so strange an intimation, hastened to the door. The whole had passed without Mozart's being in the least conscious of it. She ran down stairs with tears in her eyes, telling the butcher that her husband could not be spoken to, and that he must come another time. But the man of blood was not easily to be daunted—he must have his bill settled and speak with Mozart himself—and he would not send him another ounce of meat. He ascended the stairs. Mozart, distinctly conscious that something had happened in his presence, had continued pouring the effusions of his phantasia on paper, when the heavy footsteps resounded in the hall. His stick was at the door; he held his stick against the door to keep out intruders.

But the steps were approaching. Mozart, more anxious, hurried as fast as he could, when a rap at the door demanded permission to enter. The beautiful effusion was in danger of being lost.
The aflight composer cast a furtive glance at his stick; it was too short.
With anxiety bordering on frenzy he looked around his room, and a pole standing behind the curtain caught his eye; this he seized, holding with all his might against the door, writing like fury all the while. The knob was turned, but the pole withstood the first effort. A pause succeeded; words were heard on the staircase, and the intruders renewed their efforts a second time. But the strength of the composer seemed to increase with his anxiety. Large drops of perspiration stood on his forehead.
Stemming the pole against his left breast, with the force of despair he still kept out the visitors. He succeeded but for a moment, yet it was a precious moment; the delightful air was poured upon the paper—it was saved!

Such had been the anxiety, fear and despair of the composer, so intense his feelings, that his bodily strength was not equal to stand the powerful effort of his soul. Scarcely were his effusions arranged, when his strength left him, the pole dropped from his hand, and he fell back on his pillow exhausted. The door opened, and his wife with the terrifying butcher entered. Pale, unconscious of everything, the son of Euterpe lay on the bed, his forehead bathed in cold sweat. His wife, terror-struck at the sight, rushed to her beloved husband; she bathed his forehead, embraced him, when Mozart's eyes opened, and looking about with surprise, they fell upon the unavoidable scarp lying still before him.

"Mr. Mozart," said the butcher—"Halt! halt!" said the composer, seizing the manuscript and leaping at the same time out of his bed and hurrying towards the piano-forte. Down he sat, and the most delightful air that was ever heard responded from the instrument. The eyes of his wife, and even of the butcher, began to moisten. Mozart finished the tune, rose again, and running for his writing-desk, he filled out what was wanting.
"Well, Mr. Mozart," said the butcher, when the artist had finished, "you know that I am to marry."
"No, I do not," said Mozart, who had somewhat recovered from his musical trance.
"Well, then, you know it now, and also that you owe me money for meat."
"I do," said Mozart, with a sigh.
"Never mind," said the man, under-whose blood-stained coat bent a feeling heart; you make me a fine waltz for my marriage ball, and I will cancel the debt and let you have meat for a year to come."

"It is a bargain!" cried the lively and gifted Mozart. And down he sat, and a waltz was elicited from the instrument—such a waltz as never before set the dance-loving butcher's feet in motion.

"Wait for a year, did I say?" exclaimed the enraptured tradesman; "no! one hundred ducats you shall have for this waltz, but I want it with trumpets, and horns, and fiddles—you know best—and soon, too."

"You shall have it so," said Mozart, who could scarcely trust his ears, "and in one hour you may send for it."
The liberal-minded butcher retired.
In an hour the waltz was set in full orchestral music. The butcher returned, was delighted with the music, and paid Mozart his hundred ducats—a sum more splendid than he had ever received from the Emperor for the greatest of his operas.

It is to this incident that the lovers of harmony are indebted for one of the most charming trifles, the celebrated oxen-waltz—a piece of music still unrivalled.

HIGHPRICE HOUSE, GREEN- BACK FALLS, N. Y.

Overcharge, Sticker & Co., Proprietor.

The proprietors of this palatial hotel respectfully announce that the house is now open for the convenience of guests.
The back yard has been enclosed by a new pine fence, elegantly frescoed, in white wash, by eminent artists in lime, and a large and imposing woodpile has been built in the northeast corner. A new and commodious pigpen has also been added under the rear windows of the hotel, and furnished with swine, who will be fed from 5 to 7. There is the strongest evidence already in the rear apartments that this department will be highly satisfactory. The house is furnished with a wash-bowl, pitcher, and a bottle of bug poison; clean toilet every Monday morning. Gentlemen can ring for anything they want, and the proprietors hope they may get it. A strong force of insolent waiters, who have been discharged from the principal hotels in New York, have been engaged. Guests desiring seats at the table can easily obtain them by properly seeing the blind waiter, Cheeky Bribe, Esq.

The office clerks have been selected from the brightest ornaments of that brilliant profession; they will be clad in the most gorgeous shirt fronts. The barber's shop will be reserved from 9 to 11 A. M., for their exclusive use; and their cluster diamond breast-pins are warranted to be superior in size, to those of any nigger minister in the country.
These creatures are each provided with a span of trotting horses, a terrier dog and a gold watch, have had a long and valuable experience in billiards, faro and draw poker, and any gentleman who has the stamps can be accommodated to a game. If they are not otherwise engaged, travelers will find one of these gentlemen in the office, who will not pay the least attention to their presence for half an hour after arrival, at which time he may direct him to the wash-room, and tell them he will see what he can do for them in the way of a cot in the bowling alley, all the best rooms in the house being reserved for sporting men and barkeepers.

A body of muscular baggage smashers will be present on the arrival of the trains and any gentleman getting his trunk to the hackmen. Every driver is provided with brass knuckles, slung shot, and a choice assortment of oaths. Guests receiving any attention from the employer of the house will please notify the proprietors. Hardfisted porters will wake up the whole floor when any gentleman wishes to leave by the early train.—Com.

following letter received at that postoffice.

BRIDGEWATER, Sept. 1.
Mr. Postmaster—I was informed the other day that there was a widow II—at Newport that would like to get married. I think it was her. But if you know of any young widow there please inform me. I am very good looking and want a wife. With perfect confidence please write me and I will come down.

THE SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

The new suspension bridge which is to connect the cities of New York and Brooklyn, will be one of the greatest of the kind, the cost being reckoned at $8,000,000. The abutment of the bridge on the Brooklyn side will be slightly to the north of the Fulton Ferry. Its foundation will be 33 feet in the earth, and its height from the surface 117 feet.
Two towers will rise from the abutment 1000 feet apart, which is the width of the river. From these towers a passage way for pedestrians will stretch over the length of the bridge, in addition to those the bridge affords below, and will afford a splendid view of the surrounding country. A gradually sloping continuation of the bridge will carry it high over the buildings near the river, between those that it meets in its descent, and land it near the intersection of Fulton and Sande streets.

On the New York side an abutment will be sunk 50 feet, near Pier 29,—a greater depth being necessary than on the Brooklyn side, to correspond with the greater depth of the river. The bridge will slope to the park near the junction of Frankfort and Chatham Sta.
Stairs will exist at intervals beyond the abutments, to save passengers desiring it the trouble of going to the entrance.

A curiosity to ascertain at what depth rock exists on both sides of the river, has led to boring on the Brooklyn side far below the point needed for an abutment foundation. Rock was found at 92 feet.

The length of the bridge from Sands street to the Park will be a mile and a ninth. Its width at each entrance will be 100 feet, contracting to 80 feet as it crosses the stream. Horse cars will pass over it, and if the grade from each end should prove too steep for horses, cars will be rapidly drawn by a chain moved by a steam engine. In addition to railroad tracks, abundant space will be afforded for vehicles and for foot passengers.

The height of the bridge, above high water, will be 130 feet—the average of not lowering any of their masts. In cases of very large ships the royal and top-gallant masts may have to be lowered.

A GAMBLING HOUSE IN THE OLDEN TIME.

We find in an old journal, 1731, a list of the officers established in the most notorious gaming houses:

1. A Commissioner, always a proprietor who looks in of a night, and the week's account is audited by him and two directors.
2. A Director, who superintends the room.
3. An Operator, who deals the cards at a cheating game called Faro.
4. Two Croupiers, who watch the cards and gather the money for the bank.
5. Two Puffs, who have money given them to dozy others to play.
6. A Clerk, who is a check on the Puffs to see that they sink none of the money given them to play with.
7. A Squib, a Puff of lower rank, who serves at half-past salary while he is learning to deal.
8. A Flasher, to swear how often the bank has been stripped.
9. A Dunner, to go about and collect money lost at play.
10. A Waiter, to fill out wine, snuff candles and attend the gaming room.
11. An Attorney, a Newgate solicitor.
12. A Captain, who is to fight any gentleman who is peevish for losing his money.
13. An Usher, who lights gentlemen up and down stairs and gives the word to the Porter.
14. A Porter, who is generally a soldier of the Foot Guards.
15. An Orderly Man, who walks up and down outside of the doors to give notice to the Porter, and alarm the house at the approach of the constable.
16. A Rammer, who is to get intelligence of the justices meeting.
17. Link Boys, Coachmen, Chairmen and others, who bring news of the justices meeting or of the constables being out, at half a guinea reward.
18. Common Bail, Affidavit Men, Bravos, Ruffians, cum suis alii.

* CORRECTION.—Instead of "people all very lousy," in a letter from Crystal Park, the other day, read "people all very busy."

Who is the laziest man? The furniture dealer—he keeps chairs and lounges about all the time.

Said Tom, "Since I have been in France I have eaten so much veal that I am ashamed to look a calf in the face."
"I s'pose, sir, then, you shave without a glass," said a wag.

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE,
 We claim for the Florence the following advantages over any and all Sewing Machines:
 It makes four different stitches, the lock, knot, double lock, and double knot, on one and the same machine. Each stitch being alike on both sides of the fabric.
 Every Machine has the reversible feed motion, which enables the operator, by simply turning a thumb screw, to have the work run either to the right or left, to stay any part of the seam, or fasten the ends of seams, without turning fabric.
 The only machine having a self-adjusting shuttle tension—the amount of tension always being in exact proportion to the size of the bobbin.
 Changing the length of stitch, and from one kind of stitch to another, can really be done while the machine is in motion.
 The needle is easily adjusted.
 It is almost noiseless and can be used where quiet is necessary.
 Its motions are all positive; there are no springs to get out of order, and its simplicity enables the most inexperienced to operate it.
 It does not require finer thread on the under than for the upper side, and will sew across the heaviest canvas or from one to two more thicknesses of cloth, without change of needle, tension, or breaking thread.
 The Hammer is easily adjusted and will turn any width of hem desired.
 No other machine will do so great a range of work as the Florence. It will sew, fell, blind, gather, braid, quilt, and gather and sew on a ruffle at the same time.
 The taking up of the slack thread is not performed by the irregular contraction of a wire coil or uncertain operation of wire levers. The precision and accuracy with which the Florence draws the thread up into the cloth is unapproached in any Sewing Machine hitherto offered in the market.
 We furnish each machine with "BARSKO'S" machine oil, which gives the work fast and free of invariable value, especially to inexperienced operators.
 While possessing the above and many other advantages, the Florence is sold at corresponding prices with other first class machines; and a careful examination will fully substantiate all that we have claimed for it, and justify the assertion we now make, that it is the best Sewing Machine in the world.
 We warrant every machine to be all that we claim for it, and will give a written warranty, if required.
 A HANDSOME PRESENT will be found with every machine bought of me.

BRADLEY'S Super Phosphate

TAKE NOTICE.
 Those who have been unable to get any PROSPERITY for planting are advised to grow vegetables. A small handful scattered around the plants at the time of sowing, and afterwards with care, will show its effects immediately after the first rain. A change in color of the plants will be noticed at once, and you will be surprised to see the plants start to give them, and more supported at the end of the season to see the large increase of crops, and at an earlier date.
TURNIPS
 Should never be raised without using 200 to 300 lb. of BRADLEY'S SUPER PHOSPHATE per acre at the time of sowing the seed. It will double the yield, and double the value, as to quality, for feeding stock.
 Note the following from the distinguished English Chemist, Dr. Johnson:—"The same kind of turnips grown on the same field, one with Phosphate and the other with manure present, this striking difference in the proportion of Phosphate contained in the ash of the turnips. The one grown on Phosphate yielded 30 percent of Phosphate, while the manure turnip contained only 11 percent of Phosphate. This could not fail to make an important difference in their relative value for the feeding of stock whose bones are growing, and which require a large amount of Phosphate in their food."
 "D. JAS. E. W. JOHNSON, F.R.S.E.S., L.E.D. BUCKINGHAM."

Where BRADLEY'S SUPER PHOSPHATE has been used in growing Buckwheat, the reports of its effects are even more astonishing than other crops. Two hundred and fifty to three hundred bushels to the acre, harvested in with the seed, on poor soil, is sufficient to make a heavy crop.
 My Agents everywhere are authorized to guarantee it to give satisfaction to all who wish to try it for Buckwheat.

LONGAOMING,
 the great thoroughbred between New York and Philadelphia. These lands are so cheap as to be within the reach of all; they are among the most fertile in New Jersey, and most advantageously adapted to every species of fruit culture and market gardening, grass, grain and stock growing. The climate is un surpassed, being a little removed from the real burning sun extending to the central part of South Jersey.
 Those in search of houses will find their ideal here by applying to J. KIMBALL, Longaoming, N. J.

AGRICULTURAL. Corn.—To grow successfully 100 bushels of corn on two acres of land, it should be plowed in the fall, and in spring plow fine, running furrows east and west, and mark out the rows north and south.—Cultivate often, and plant vegetables in every other row, which will give a good circulation of air between the rows of corn. Keep the soil light, as a good free circulation of air is the life of the crop, and with the roots well covered the farmer will be richly repaid.

PLEASANT. A gent and lady, strangers to each other, were riding in a stage, the lady carrying a large white rabbit, which she requested the gentleman to hold a moment while she arranged her bundles.—On handing it back the gent remarked of the pet—What beautiful eyes! just like its mother's. Yes, responded the lady, and ears just like its father's!

Gen. Jackson could not bridge, and without one. The rough, unpolished stream must be the regular engine of the fact. In a carpenter's plan, the latter go at the work at once but they objected to their plans on paper; they tried their tent, and went to work at once. In a short time he had a bridge, and his pictures ain't come.

THURSDAY, OCT. 10, 1887.

Valuation of Weymouth Centenary... Mr. Ezra Reed, of South Weymouth, has furnished the entire valuation of this town in 1768...

Those who consider this mere "moonshine" will at least be interested to note the light burden of taxation which their fathers enjoyed a hundred years ago...

As the whole valuation would require more space than could be afforded; and the variation in the taxes is but trifling between different individuals, we give the above as a sample, and append the names of the other tax payers, as follows:

The total amount of taxation was $134 88.10c, divided among 164 persons. The Assessors were John Poole, Eben's Colson, Nath'l Bayley...

Sweet Potatoes.—Joshua B. Cowing, of East Weymouth, has raised two bushels of sweet potatoes this season...

We have received a copy of "The Star of Temperance," a temperance paper published at Duxbury by Henry Barstow.

Mr. Editor.—With many others I was rather surprised at the excess of kindness which led you so judiciously to present to the public the names of certain individuals who have seen a to withdraw their subscriptions...

It is not my object to defend those persons; they stand before the public as they have stood for years; their characters are well known to our citizens...

Do you thus deliberately impugn the motives of those gentlemen in your paper? It does seem that they can judge of what is right and wrong in this case as well as one who, till very recently, was an entire stranger to the circumstances...

As the whole valuation would require more space than could be afforded; and the variation in the taxes is but trifling between different individuals, we give the above as a sample, and append the names of the other tax payers, as follows:

James Beal, 8 9 11 2 1 3; Isaac Beal, 8 1 3 3; John Bates, 8 12 1 3 2 10 1; Sarah Burrell, 8 2 1 1 1 7 3; Lem'il Barber, 8 11 3 1 1 3; John Canterbury, 8 1 1 2 2 1 7 3; Jacob Canterbury, 8 1 1 1 2 1; Josiah Colson, 8 9 11 2 3 9; John Darby, Jr., 8 1 1 2 2 7 3; Wm. Hollbrook, 16 1 1 1 3 1 2; Abner Hollbrook, 8 1 7 2 1 1 3; Nath'l Hollbrook, 8 3; John Hunt, 8 4 1 0 3 2 3 2; Lydia Hunt, 8 2 1 2 1 9 2; Simon Joy, 8 13 8 2 2 4 2; Jacob Joy, 8 8 5 3 2 5 2; David Joy, 8 1 1 1 1 1 3; Elisha Lovell, 8 3 1 1 1 1 3; Meah Level, 8 3 1 1 1 1 3.

The meeting at Dr. Nye's was not held immediately after and not for some weeks (you see how truthful or accurate your correspondent is) but subscriptions were commenced and several individuals were occupied during portions of many days in this parish and among friends in the city, in endeavoring to raise the sum of $1500, which they have not yet succeeded in doing.

Were the $500 spoken of in one of your recent issues to be added to the money before raised? I do not know but it would amount to the $1500, but when the opportunity was first afforded to the gentleman who in part makes this generous offer, he declined to subscribe anything, and when asked if it would be of any use to present the subscription paper to the other party, in this joint subscription, he was understood to say that he thought it would not, and so the paper was not presented.

These hopes, in reference to the cellar and also in regard to the money, were continued long after the time specified in the vote for calling a parish meeting, and as long as they were confidently entertained the committee felt that they should not be warranted in calling the meeting, with nothing to report; and after that date, the 19th July, had passed they felt that they had no authority to do so, as their chairman reported their action to one of the assessors.

I beg your pardon for saying so much, but as you opened the discussion I thought, with many other patrons of your paper, that it was no more than right you should give the above explanations...

(We have no point of objection to present against the publication of the above communication, but must object to the writer's misstatement of the animus of the few editorial remarks appended to the article concerning "Subscriptions Withdrawn," those comments bearing simply on the parish as a whole, without reference to or prejudice against any party or person.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

In the sacred volume minute details are rendered of the architecture, regal grandeur and surpassing magnificence of Solomon's Temple; that in its embellishment gold and silver were kept not back, but were lavishly poured in to the King's exchequer, in order that the sanctuary, when dedicated to the worship of the Most High, should radiate manifold charms and fill the mind with the effulgent glory contemplated, but unseen, of the golden streets and pearly gates of the Heavenly Jerusalem.

Such a conclusion is pertinent and legitimate in given cases; exceptions occur now and then, whether emanating from an unhealthy desire to hoard wealth, or a heart faulty and a bit selfish, we by no means are qualified to determine.

Speaking of beautiful and costly private residences, reminds us of noticing in our New England villages, that some gentlemen's stables were more spacious and attractive than any of the neighborhood churches. We queried how the occupants of adjacent, sumptuously furnished parlors could forego their attractive chambers and give heed to the Gospel in a plain meeting-house.

In closing, we offer a word to the Orthodox Society in this village. Numerically and financially it may be classed the first in town; among its members are some of our prominent citizens and many of our enterprising young men; and the aggregate wealth of the members exceeds by far any other organization in town.

Once a Month, a magazine published by W. J. Holland & Co., Springfield, Mass., presents many features of interest to its readers, and the publishers have during the initial year of its existence, received abundant evidence that their efforts to benefit and please the business and reading public have been successful.

The Riverside Magazine for Young People, Hurd & Houghton, New York, has a variety of carefully selected matter adapted to the tastes of young people.

Fire at East Weymouth.—On Friday evening last, the store of Nathan Pratt, new depot, narrowly escaped destruction by fire, the particulars of which we gave from Mr. Pratt, who stated that while he was at tea a boy named Hamilton employed in the store attempted to draw some kerosene oil for a customer, and holding a lighted lamp too near the oil, it fell on the floor, the oil took fire, Mr. Ruddle, who was in the store, kicked the lamp away from the barrel, scattering the kerosene over the person of the boy and on the floor.

The opening of the Hall over their store for that purpose meets a want which without doubt will be duly appreciated and if well selected, attractive stock sold at low prices will assure success, Messrs A. J. Bates & Co. are well assured in their new enterprise.

"Wanted to Borrow."—This was a byword in the army when "all was quiet on the Potomac," and the wintry road to Richmond was scored by graves. Then every regiment wanted to borrow Private Elias Howe Jr. from the Con. Regiment to which he belonged.—Private Howe, who had refused epaulets to serve in the ranks, was once, when Government's offers were empty, paid from his own pocket every man in his regiment.

Religions Intelligence.—Rev. William Nye's, who is well known to the citizens of Weymouth Landing as the former proprietor of the dry goods store now occupied by M. H. Lord, where he was located for some years, will preach in the Baptist church next Sabbath.

New Patent.—Among the exhibition of manufacture at the recent Fair of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society, we noticed an improvement on mill carriages, exhibited by D. B. Gurney, of Abington, which is said to obviate some of the difficulties attendant upon the movement of the article to be sawed.

Take Your Choice.—We will send a fifty-five Sewing Machine, either Wheeler & Wilson's or Singer's, to any person sending us the names of eight new subscribers to the New York Observer.

Turner's Tic Douloureux or Universal Neuralgia Pill.—Is a safe, certain and speedy cure for Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgic Pain, Sciatica, Gout, Gravel, &c. It is a powerful, yet perfectly harmless, and perfectly permanent cure in the shortest time.

Whistler's Balm of Wild Cherry.—In the whole history of our discovery no remedy has performed so many and such remarkable cures of the numerous affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, as this long and justly celebrated Balm. No general remedy has ever been known to have tested its virtues by experience, failed to keep it as sound as a spring, and certain cures for such affections of a long standing, that its remedial powers are comprehensive enough to embrace every form of disease, from the slightest cold to the most dangerous system of pulmonary complaint.

Unsolicited Testimony.—From Rev. Emanuel Leibel, Pastor of the South Congregational Church, Braintree, Mass.: "I consider it a duty which I owe to suffering humanity to bear testimony to the virtues of Dr. Weston's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I have used it, when I have had occasion for any remedy for Coughs, Colds, and Sore Throat, for many years, and never in a single instance has it failed to relieve and cure me. I have frequently been very liberally supplied with it, and have often sold it to my brethren in the ministry, and to public speakers generally, as a certain remedy for the bronchial troubles to which we are peculiarly exposed."

Marriages and Deaths.—In Lewiston, Me., Oct 6, by Asa Redington, Esq. assisted by Rev. Dr. Edly, of New York, S. Andrew G. Bowler, Esq., of Chicago, Ill., and Mrs. Bath M. Blanchard, daughter of Dr. F. S. Shaw, Esq., of South Weymouth.

Marriages.—On the 14th of August, at St. Mary's Church, Year of Helen Blake, Edward Dicey, Esq., and son of the late Thomas Edward Dicey, Esq., of Claybrook Hall, Leicestershire, to Annie Greene, youngest daughter of the late Henry Gordon Chapman, Esq., of Boston, U. S. A., and grand-daughter of the late Warren Weston, Esq., of this town.

The only machine having a self-adjusting character—the amount of tension always being in exact proportion to the size of the bolting.
Changing the length of stitch, and from one kind of stitch to another, can readily be done while the machine is in motion.
The needle is easily adjusted.
It is almost noiseless and can be used where quiet is necessary.

Its motions are all positive; there are no springs to get out of order, and its simplicity enables the most inexperienced to operate it.
It does not require finer thread on the under than for the upper stitch, and will sew across the heaviest seams, or from one to two more thicknesses of cloth, without change of needle, tension, or making thread.

The Hemmer is easily adjusted and will turn any width of hem desired.
No other machine will do so great a range of work as the Florence. It will hem, fell, bind, gather, braud, quilt, and gather and sew on a rattle at the same time.

The taking up of the slack thread is not performed by the irregular contraction of a wire coil or uncertain operation of wire levers. The precision and accuracy with which the Florence operates with other fine stitch machines, in a careful examination will fully substantiate all that we have claimed for it, and justify the assertion we now make, that it is the best Sewing Machine in the world.

We furnish each machine with "MARKET'S" SILK STITCHER," which gives the work a full and is of inimitable quality, especially to inexperienced operators.
While possessing the above and many other advantages, the Florence is sold at corresponding prices with other fine stitch machines. See careful examination will fully substantiate all that we have claimed for it, and justify the assertion
in the world.

We warrant every machine to be all that we claim for it, and will give a written warranty, if required.
A HANDSOME PRESENT will be found with every machine bought of us, when the compensation is made.

It makes four different stitches, the lock, knot, double lock, and double knot, on one and the sides of the fabric.

Every Machine has the reversible foot motion, which enables the operator, by simply turning a

AGRICULTURAL.

Spring Bulbs.—Now is the time to set about planting these showy spring flowers. For out-door culture, select a sheltered nook, if possible, as they are in flower so early, that in this latitude they are apt to get injured by cold winds. The first one to open is the Snowdrop—a neat little white bell-shaped flower, followed pretty soon by the Crocus of several colors; then come the Hyacinths, then the gaily tulips. Besides these there are several other sorts, the common Daffodil being well known. There are several pretty varieties of the Narcissus and a few should always be selected among the rest of the bulbs.

A stately plant is the Crown Imperial, pushing up its strong stem at a great rate before even the frost has fairly left the ground; these are perfectly hardy.

The feathered Hyacinths are quite neat and pretty, the common grape Hyacinth being of this family; they too are hardy. The Jonquils are similar to the Narcissus.

Before planting, spade up the soil deep and add a good coating of very rotten manure; a sandy soil suits them best. Plant the larger bulbs with the crowns two or three inches below the surface—the smaller kinds not quite so deep—just before winter sets in put over a coating of manure to protect partially from frost—to be removed early in the spring.

Hyacinths may be grown in pure water in glasses made for the purpose, the dark colored glass being best. Select the soundest bulbs, and put them so they barely touch the water; as the water becomes dirty or evaporates, add fresh, the same temperature, as the room, and run water. They do best kept in the dark for a month, so that the roots get in advance of the top; the same is true of bulbs grown in pots or moss. The imported bulbs are best for growing in pots or other fancy articles, as the bulbs have been prepared with peculiar reference to give a showy flower. Once grown this way, they are comparatively useless for the same purpose, but make very good bulbs for border planting.

Bulb growing is a business of itself in Holland. There labor is cheap, and the soil adapted, and the growers have the markets of the world to supply. As even in England, no attempt is made to grow their own bulbs, for forcing purposes many thousands of dollars are naturally sent from this country for these onions, as the Dutch call them.—B. D. D. Prairie Farmer.

Pea Blight.—Some years since we set out a number of pea trees, all of which after growing nearly one or two years, died of the blight, with the exception of one—and that one was set beside a hen roost, so near that it derived its substance from the droppings of the roost. This one grew finely, and never showed any symptoms of blight. Acting upon the hint that hen manure might be the cause of it not being injured by blight, I have experimented on a number of trees by placing around the roots a quantity of hen manure, and have never lost a tree by blight since.

Boys who make cows run should be located for a few minutes where they could give a good deal if they themselves could run.

To Cure Warts on Horses and Cattle.—Take a small quantity of blue vitriol, pulverize it, and add enough water to make it into a paste; rub the warts over with this once or twice, which will effectually cure them.—W. D. D. Spectator, O.

Hanging Evergreens for Winter.—Some of the simplest and yet most beautiful embellishments for winter window decorations have been pots of the English Ivy (Hedera). The plants should be grown in pots in a cool, partially shaded situation during summer, being careful to have a stone or brick under the pot to prevent the roots gaining earth below it. In late autumn these pots of ivy, with their dark, rich, green foliage, clean and glossy, can be transferred to the window of a sitting-room or library, and even should the temperature run down to zero, they are not at all injured.

A Berkshire county, N. Y., dairyman estimates that 45 cows require 100 tons of hay to winter them through.

We said we would give our readers a few more words in this week's issue concerning Mr. Briggs, we have known but very little of him since he "went down south," till last year when we found that he was in his old business, and now he hauls from Boston, which is a very sure sign that he has not gone back. We think we can safely recommend him as one that will do as he says. Doubtless our citizens will give him a large dancing class and a fair trial. His dancing friends also will most assuredly give him a call. His Office is at White's Music Store, 86 Tremont Street, Boston.

PIQUANTS.

When Louis XIV showed Killigraun, a wit of his time, his pictures at Paris, the king pointed out to him a picture of the crucifixion between two portraits. "That on the right," added his majesty, "is the pope, and that on the left is myself." "I humbly thank your majesty," replied the wit, "for the information; for though I have often heard that our Lord was crucified between two thieves, I never knew who they were till now."

Lizzie Euphemia Pochontas Spotted Tail, (nice name for a girl), daughter of the distinguished Spotted Tail of the aboriginal persuasion, is receiving her education, with piano and other accompaniments, at Omaha.

A lawyer had his portrait taken in his favorite attitude, standing with his hands in his pockets. "It would resemble him more closely," said an acquaintance, "if he had his hands in somebody else's pocket."

"I have nothing but my heart to give you," said a spinster to a lawyer who had conducted a suit for her. "Well," said the lawyer gruffly, "go to my clerk—he takes the fees."

The correct answer to the gentleman who wrote the song, "Why did I marry?" most likely would be, "Because your wife was foolish."

Miss Tucker says it is with bachelor, as with old wood; it is hard to get them started, but when they do take flame they burn prodigiously.

"Does your knitting-machine seem?" asked an old lady of the proprietor of the Bridgeport knitting-machine. "It seems to me," was the pertinent reply.

"Pa, tell us about the angry ocean. What makes the ocean angry?" "Oh, it has been crossed so often."

Did the man who plowed the sea and afterward plowed his feet on his native soil ever harvest the crops?

If four quarters make a yard, how many will make a garden? If seven days make one week, how many will make one string?

"Two Pence"—There was once a very illustrious gentleman—one Peter Patterson—appointed as Justice of the Peace. The first day his clerk handed him a duplicate writ.

"Well, what shall I do with it?" was the query.

"Nothing but sign your initials," was the reply.

"My initials—what are they?"

"Why, two P's," replied the clerk, impatiently.

Cold perspiration stood on the forehead of the unhappy magistrate, and he seized a pen and, with desperation in his face, wrote "Two Pence."

It does not follow that two persons are fit to marry because both are good. Milk is good and mustard is good, but they are not good for each other.

Which is the oldest, Miss Ann Tipity, old Aunty Dehavior, Miss Ann Terior, Miss Ann Gester, Miss Ann T. Muncham, or Miss Ann T. Coulou?

"If there is any body under the canopy of heaven that I have in utter exorcism," says Mrs. Partington, "it is the shandlery, going about like a boy constructor circulating his colored upon honest folks."

On the Fly.—Base ball is raging fearfully in the West, sparing neither age nor condition. We eat base ball, talk it, dream and act it. The other night a deacon, winding up a petition to the Throne of Grace, said: "Oh, Lord, as we strike for a home run to glory, don't let us be by the devil be caught out on the fly!"

The Augusta (Me.) Journal says that as workmen were applying mastic to the front of a block of stores in that city, a man accosted the owner with the question: "Are you intending to masticate all your stores?"

"Not immediately," was the reply; "as my teeth are rather poor, I may not chew up more than one of them now."

An old lady lately refused to let her niece dance with a young graduate, because she heard that she was a bachelor of arts, whereby she misunderstood him to be an artful bachelor.... At a recent railroad celebration, the following sentiment was given:—"Our mothers—the only faithful lenders who never misplaced a switch."

At a spiritual meeting in Boston some time since, a person applied through the medium for the spirit of Lindley Murray; the reply in the affirmative being received, the question was put—"Is this the spirit of Lindley Murray?" Imagine the feeling of the person asking the question at the reply—"It are."

An obituary notice in Utah closes touchingly—he "leaves thirteen widows and fifty-four children."

Josh Billings, in describing the horse-fair of the Billingville Agricultural Society, says: "There was few yokes of oxen on the ground, besides several yokes of sheep and a pile of carrots, and some wasted work but they didn't seem to attract any sympathy. The people banker for pure agricultural loss took."

A TEXAS HORSE STORY. George W. Kendall writes from Texas to the New Orleans Picayune: "You must all recollect little Winter of Georgia, who used to keep a banking and lottery office at Montgomery, Alabama."

Children and dogs go in and out Sharing the mirth that overruns; And help the sport with many a shout, That sends its echoes far without.

Ames he worked eight months, but Thomas was exacting, and Elias left him at the expiration of that time. In the meantime, his sick wife and three children had joined him. The story of his life for several months after his dismissal from the workshop of Thomas, is most painful in its details, ending in absolute penury and in his return home, after an absence of two years, with an empty pocket.

On one occasion we had a larger arithmetic lesson than usual, completely baffling our small brains. Upon comparing notes, none of us had mastered it. "I'll ask Susan of her success," said one of my class.

None of us went to take the stranger by the hand, and welcome her as the companion of our studies and our play. We stood aloof, and staring at her with cold and unfeeling curiosity.

"Winter, do you want a horse?" "No," was the response.

WHAT IS A NAME.—A correspondent of the "able and independent" sheet, the Grass Valley National, says: "We fell in, during a chance journey of ours, a few months ago, with an old Kansas man, who had moved with his numerous family from 'Varmout' to the western wilds."

THE CAREER OF THE INVENTOR OF THE SEWING MACHINE.

The death of Elias Howe, Jr., the inventor of the sewing machine, in his 48th year, adds renewed interest to the story of his trials and the privations endured by him while endeavoring to bring his great invention into practical use.

ASCENT OF MONT BLANC.

Mr. S. H. Leathe, of St. Louis, recently achieved the dangerous feat of ascending to the summit of Mont Blanc. In a letter dated at Geneva, July 23d, published in the St. Louis Republican, he thus describes his adventure:

In regard to the injurious effects of feeding diseased potatoes to stock, a correspondent writes as follows: "I have fed my cattle some six hundred bushels of potatoes the past winter, and four hundred of them have been diseased or affected with rot."

On Motion of D. S. Murray of Weymouth, the meeting was dissolved.

A few members of the press from the city honored the Weymouth Gazette with a call on Tuesday last. After a brief survey of our office, being in equal sorts and our forms all locked in friendly, we repaired to the residence of Mr. Benj. White, at North Weymouth, to "greet the patron of the plough and spade," who in former years willed the shooting stick and is well known to the press of the city.

After a gentle tap at the door we were ushered into an apartment and in due form announced ourselves, when our "just worthy" disciple of the type appeared, to whom was tendered remarks congratulatory of good health, &c., which received the following rejoinder: Gentlemen:—Permit me to present to you my respectful and sincere acknowledgments for the honor of your call this day.

Such was the law of the craft, it was obliged to keep a galloway always standing on which a lead of the black and white, I long the most spotless through all this I was pressed and was the last to receive kind and sympathetic indulgence from all here for whom I wasted the most precious in conclusion will say with all this experience, I found in this mankind's mind, where one had brains twenty had stomachs, and therefore concluded to feed the latter, and that is why you find me here today.

A shake of hands followed, and after a pleasant ramble along by schools and churches and neat and pretty dwellings of our villages, round through Hingham to Pease's saloon in East Weymouth, the party sat down to satisfy the inner man with one of Joe's superb chambers. The typographic corps then returned home, clear as a fount of Colubian, all bright and upright, no empty cases, no battered faces, and we distributed our forms with a general wish that all might be preserved from the old shoe.

A PUBLIC MEETING.

Was held in the Town Hall Monday evening last, pursuant to a call inviting the citizens of Weymouth to be present at a meeting for the discussion of the questions of the day in relation to the politics of the State. The hall was well filled with opponents of the prohibitory law, who manifested their sympathy with the sentiments of the speakers by frequent and enthusiastic applause.

The Weymouth Band opened the meeting with a spirited musical entertainment, after which the chairman introduced Hon. E. C. Baker, of Boston, who addressed the audience at considerable length. He stated that he had come at invitation of the committee to consult with the people in relation to the great questions on which judgment is to be passed in a very few days.

He proposed in beginning to preach a sermon. Lay sermons were the fashion now, and though he was not a preacher by authority, he had a right to preach and would take as a text, The Constitution of Massachusetts. After depicting the struggles of the people under monarchical and autocratical governments to attain a larger liberty, he passed to the government of this country, where power is invested in the people, and under which for two centuries we have lived for two centuries in peace, because we have had a government of laws and not of men.

But here in Massachusetts we are now told by philanthropists whose righteous indignation was so denunciatory of the wrong of slavery, in the past, that after two centuries of experience of a principle of government which has covered our hillsides with schools, and created a general intelligence, the white men of Massachusetts cannot take care of themselves, but need the strong hand of a State Constable, to aid in deciding as to what they shall eat and drink, and what time they shall get up in the morning. We are told that in organic law we have certain rights, and the fifth article of the Constitution says every citizen of the Commonwealth—not the reverend gentleman from School-street or the leather dealer from Pearl-street—must every one, has a certain remedy for all wrong he may receive, in law—completely and without delay, promptly and without delay, conformably to law. Now if we are not in that position we have reason to talk upon that point. We have a law which says no man shall sell a certain article of trade, but we find that by the silence or consent of the men who are appointed to execute that law, some are able to sell, while others are arraigned for selling sweet cider. Is that a government of laws, or of men? If the meanest man commits a murder, and one considered highly respectable is guilty of the same crime, does the law know a difference? If a judge—dressed and has a good reputation, we will let him go and punish the poor devil, would you not say that the educated man was a thousand times more guilty? And yet this is the way that the law is now executed.

The speaker touched upon the point of property recognition of liquor under the U. S. laws, which permitted importation and distillation, while the prohibitory law declares this property a nuisance, liable to confiscation. He thought that the people of this Commonwealth had seen enough of such law.

But he was not here to speak in behalf of the abuse of intoxicating liquors; it was not their use, but abuse, that does mischief. If a man would drink only a 11 o'clock and 4 o'clock it wouldn't hurt him; but if he drank twelve times a day it would kill him. If you eat a slice of steak, a potato, and bread for breakfast, it would benefit you, but eat a peck and it might hurt you. But must we send a State constable to prevent your doing this, to tell a man how much he must eat or drink, or how many children he must have? You may do one as well as the other.

In closing, the speaker remarked that in every principle of morality or belief you cannot control the mind of man by law—as well attempt to control the laws which govern the universe as the sympathies and feelings of man by law. It will be and has been a failure. The worst feature of the prohibitory law is that instead of governing we are educating people to disregard all law, that it is right and safe to defy the officers of law, and he appealed to the audience to consider well these suggestions and do their duty as citizens of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Baker was followed by Edward Avery, Esq. of Braintree, whose remarks were in keeping with those of his predecessor. He took up the financial aspect of the State, and to prove the need of reform showed that the expenses of the State had increased from one million dollars in 1861 to 5,000,000 in 1867, $4 a head for each person, to pay the officers of the general government of Massachusetts.

DELPHI COUNCIL OF TEMPLARS, No. 12 was instituted at East Weymouth, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 23d, by the Officers of the Grand Temple of Honor of Massachusetts, and the following were duly installed as officers for the ensuing term.—C. of C., D. C. Earl, S. of C., Edward A. Joy, J. of C., Wm. H. Farmer; R. of C., Nathan H. Pratt; Treas., of C., R. H. Pratt; M., W. J. Dunbar; D. M., Josiah E. Louie; P., John H. Stodder; G., N. B. Peare.

RIDDLE ADDRESSED TO THE FIRST UNI-VERSALIST SOCIETY OF WEYMOUTH.

My first, important, steps upon the stage,

Lead to the human heart of every age;

The foremost place my conscious merit claims,

At once the night and the light of days.

Within my second the beginning lies,

Of every mighty deed and high enterprise,

'Tis what the venture does when nature drifts,

With Spring's first kisses, thro' the vales and hills.

What well filled ears and stages daily do,

And men of business, lawyers, preachers too,

My third the exposure of peace and rest,

Where love makes even common pleasures bliss!

Sometimes, may be, almost a paradise.

Of scene of war, of wretchedness and vice,

Where woman daily toils, her darling care

Some special duty for her legs, not for her face;

Best in believing woman's sphere is —

My fourth may boast of ancient names and rites, Christened by Luna, gentle throned of Nixia,

With modern Yankees, oft degenerate race,

For board and stinger these high themes efface.

My whole's a sentence which may much import,

To citizens with riddle reading for a,

Or bring some tidings which will glad to learn,

Or make it good, had pennies well return.

Lawrence, Kansas, Oct. 5, 1867.

STRANGE BREAK OF NATURE.

Among the dangerous misdeeds of San Francisco is a little Italian woman not more than three feet in height, who has no hands, but only horrible stumps at the wrist, as if the hands had been cut off during her infancy by the application of a string tied around them for that purpose. This hideous little creature is sent round begging, and recently a case of malformation occurred in connection with her visits. A female canary was making her nest preparatory to laying, when a little handless monstrosity of an Italian beggar woman toddled suddenly into the room. The bird was from some cause greatly frightened, and continued jumping up to the top of the cage, and murdering about in great excitement until the hideous creature left the room. When her brood of four little ones came forth from the shell, it was found that every one of them were deformed in much the same manner as the revolting looking little beggar, the difference being that the birds, for want of arms, are deformed at the feet. Three of the birds have mere knobs in place of feet, the ends having the raw flesh-like appearance of an's unsightly stumps of arms, fourth has no feet at all, but of legs about half the ordinary

In all other respects the birdyand perfectly well formed, are all alive and doing well.

I doubt whether a parallel to can be found anywhere, and it is certainly a hard nut for physiologists and scientific men to crack.—Correspon- dence Chicago Tribune.

THE BONES OF BULL RUN.—A report of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing of a visit to the battle-field of Bull Run, says—

"The first sight that greeted my eyes at Manassas Junction, was a forcible reminder of the war. Two huge piles of bones; horse bones, cattle bones, and, sad to say, human bones, intermingled, lay whitening right in front of the hotel.

They are picked up off the battle-field by the owners of the soil, and carted here for shipment by the cars to be ground into fertilizers at some mill in Baltimore. The price here is a penny a pound! one of Fairbank's platform scales standing ready by the railway track to weigh the deliveries, and several tons of bones have been shipped. One Geographical & Historical Sketch

OF THE

TOWN OF WEYMOUTH.

Written by Dr. Canton Taggart, and published in the year 1855.

Situation.—Weymouth, by the Aboriginals called Wessagusset, or Wessagus- set lies N. E. from Boston, and extends about 6 miles in width, somewhat exceeding 2 miles in length, and terminates easterly by the water in a neck of land, from the extreme part of which the naigation to Boston is pretty direct, being a N. W. course, and is about 12 miles, the distance by land from Boston to the confines of the town being 14 miles.

A little to the N. E. of this neck of land is Grape Island, to the S. E. of that Slate Island, and to the E. of this Pumpkin Island, all within the territory of the town. This neck of land is surrounded by two rivers; the one called the Fore

River on the N. and W. side, the other the Back River on the S. and E. side, which in their course include near one-half of the town. The Fore River is navigable as far as Germantown, so called, for vessels of 400 or 500 tons, and makes the divisional line between this town and Braintree, until it reaches Sauck Brook Bridge; not far from thence the line forms an angle and runs a little to the westward of S. on Braintree, until it meets Abington line, then turns and runs easterly upon Abington until it meets Hingham line, then turns and runs on Hingham somewhat northerly until it meets Fresh-water Brook, so called, and keeps the course of the water to the Back River above-mentioned, which for several miles makes the dividing line between the two towns of Weymouth and Hingham.

Hills.—It abounds with hills and vales, some of the hills affording an agreeable prospect. The most noted are those called King-Oak hill and Smith's hill.—

From the former may be seen the interior part of the country to a great distance, Boston, the islands in the harbor and the bay, to the land of Marblehead.

Ponds.—There are two ponds of considerable extent, the one called the Upper or Great Pond, being one and one-half miles in length and three-quarters in breadth, and the other, the Lower or Whitman's Pond, being one mile in

From the S. part of the Upper pond there is a discharge of water into brooks and ponds, which finally empty into

Taunton River, and on the Northeastly side there is a discharge which in its course supplies a grist mill, and runs into the lower pond, and this in its turn discharges water, supplies a grist and full-ing-mill, and then runs into the Back river already mentioned. There is also one other discharge of water from the upper pond, to procure which a canal was cut, and with great labor and expense the water conveyed through a hill for near two miles to a dam; this supplies a grist-mill for a considerable part of the year. These ponds abound with pickered and smaller fish.

About 10 years ago a few alewives were caught and conveyed into the lower pond, in the year following a considerable number were seen in the river below, striving to force their way into the pond; the obstructions were so great as to prevent their passage, and at the expense of the town a way was opened for them.—

Since then, large numbers annually pass about the middle of May into the ponds, there spawn and return to sea in July.

Minerals.—There is some iron ore in these ponds. There are also diverse beds of the same in different parts of the town, and one of yellow ochre, but it is so intermixed with gravel that it is separated but of little value.

Soil.—The country road through the town to Plymouth makes nearly an

ROLLING ARMOR PLATES.

The London Evening Mail give the following description of the process of rolling an armor plate at the Atlas Iron Works, Sheffield, England:

Very few visitors were present on Friday, possibly because in case of failure with a first attempt at such a stupendous operation it might not have been thought advisable to have too many witnesses present. The plate was not quite ready at the time appointed, and during the short interval of delay the works were inspected. It is almost impossible to describe the aspect of Cyclopean activity which they presented. The huge space of lofty workshops, covering more than twenty acres of ground, was above, all dim with smoke; below, all dazzling with the blinding glare and heat of furnaces. Everywhere ponderous fly-wheels were spinning round with a loud hum through the gloom, everywhere steam hammers were falling with a shock upon the solid earth that made the walls vibrate, and people near them jumped under the tremendous convulsion. No place seemed free from steam and flame or melted iron. The dark nooks would suddenly become bright as furnace doors were lifted and emitted their long light-looking flames of dazzling white vapor, and disgorged a mass of scorching metal, which men, almost clad in light steel armor, wheeled away and shot under the steam-hammers, the first stroke of which sent jets of melted iron rushing in trains of fire like meteors in all directions.—Sometimes one came on groups of men who were sauntering in water the rough bands of sacking in which they were enveloped before going to wrestle with some white-hot forging; sometimes on men nearly naked, with the perspiration pouring from them, who had come to rest for a moment from the paddling furnaces, and to take a long drink of the thick oatmeal and water, which is all that they venture on during their labor, and which long experience has proved to be most sustaining of all drinks under the tremendous heats to which they are subjected. On every side the glare, the smoke, the dim, and steam are alike deafening and blinding. On every side are masses of melted iron running down troughs or great blocks, of it heated to a glow that is almost melting, being welded and knocked away in myriads of sparks and jets of refuse under the blows of the hammer. Most uncomfortable of all are the slabs of armor plate and blocks of steel ingots which, half cooled, and of a dull slate color, lie about everywhere. From those in a bright, red glow the visitor can guard himself, for he sees them; but from those which are partly cooled, but yet hot enough to scorch the flesh from the bones when closely approached, there is little safeguard, as one hurries out of the way of scorching puddle blooms or open furnaces, which diffuse such an intense general heat around that little extra warning is given by the treacherous masses of half-cooled slabs till the danger is almost too near to be avoided. After seeing and suffering under seeing such scenes, the visitors were conducted to the armor rolling-mill, where the monster plate was to be drawn. The process of drawing it is simple, but peculiar. The plate when laid in the furnace rests upon little stacks of fire bricks, so that the flame and heat play equally round it, till all is glowing white, and the successive layers have settled down into one dense mass. A great deal of the success depends upon the time at which the plate is drawn and the amount and length of time to which it is to be heated. All this is regulated by the chief roller and chief furnace men, who are paid wages which many eminent professional men might envy—wages amounting from 41, 200 to some times 42,000 a year. On Friday, as the time for "drawing" approached, these officials opened the furnace doors, and approaching close to them with only the shelter of a lump of CARD.—The subscriber returns his sincere thanks to the public and the members of the fine Companies for their prompt and efficient action in endeavoring to save his house from destruction by fire, and in removing his furniture to safety.

TAKE NOTICE.

Those who have been able to get my PHOS-PHATE for Planting are advised to use it in their soil, and to use it in their gardens.

A small barrel scattered around the plants at this time, will do them more good than any other manure.

A change in color of the plants will be noticed at once, and you will be surprised to see the crops grow so much more rapidly.

At the end of the season to see the large increase of crops and the health of the soil.

Should never be raised without using 200 to 400 the yield, and double the value, as to quality, for

Ladies' Garments

PIQUANTS. A Boy's First Composition. The Terre Haute, Ind., Albion gives the following essay on "The Ox," from one of its young contributors, just as it came from his pen.

Oxen is a very slow animal, they are good to break ground with. I would rather have horses if they didn't have kolik, which they say is wind collected in a bunch, which makes it dangerous for to keep horses than an ox. If there was no horse the people would have to wheel their wood on a wheelbarrow, it would take them two or three days to wheel a cord a mile. Cows are useful to I have herd some say that if they had to be either or an ox they would be a cow. But I think when it came to have their tits pulled of a cold morning they would wish they wasn't, for oxen don't generally have to raise calves, if I had to I couldn't be a better and had to be both, would be an ox.

A man who won a fat turkey at a raffle, and whose piens wife was very inquisitive about the method of obtaining the poultry, satisfied her at last by the remark that the "Shakers" gave it to him.

A man advertised a new patent stove which saves three quarters of the coal, while the ashes which it makes pays for the other quarter.

Earl Russell's daughter has married Mr. Peol. Peol is a result of pairing.

It is said that the prettiest girls in Sak Lake City usually marry Young.

Why is a church singing-book like a school-house? Because it is full of little hints.

"Why do you always buy a second class ticket?" asked a gentleman of a miser. "Because there is no third class ticket," was the reply of the latter.

A paper tells of a visit to a cave near Augusta, Ga. While the party were within, investigating the gloomy interior, there was noticed an old colored man standing on the outside, who was asked, "Say, uncle, why don't you go into the cave?" "Ah, my master," said he, "the Lord knows I see trouble enough on top of the earth, I don't go in that hole searching after misery."

A brother minister intending to purchase a horse, stopped Rev. Dr. Mason to ask his opinion. After taking a good look at him, Dr. Mason pointed to the knees of the horse, which were worn, indicating that he was in the habit of stumbling. "That," said he, "is a good sign for a minister, but a very bad sign for a minister's horse."

In an Episcopal church in the North, a porter employed during the week at the railway station does duty on Sunday by blowing the bellows of the organ. One Sunday, wearied by the long hours of railway attendance, combined, it may be, with the soporific effects of a dull sermon, he fell asleep during the service, and so remained when the pealing of the organ was required. He was suddenly and rather rudely awakened by another official, when apparently dreaming of an approaching train, as he started to his feet and roared out, with all the force and shrillness of stentorian lungs and habit, "Change here for Elgin, Louisville, and Bughead." The effect upon the congregation may be imagined.

New Edition of the Scriptures.—Prof. W. V. Nash, who runs the "Military and Biblical Institute" of Kentucky, thus records one result of the defeat of negro suffrage in Ohio: "The Faculty of the Institute met next morning for the purpose of revising the Scriptures. It was decided that the word 'white' should be inserted wherever necessary, and that the edision only be issued by the Democracy and Conservative Republicans. We made progress, the folder's 'ben' a few ay the changes: "So God created a white man" in his own image."

Wich last is comfortin', ez it shows that the distinction is kept up through all eternity. I give these merely as samples. We shed hev it furnished in a few days, and, of funds can be raised, shed publish it. Such a verbum ay the Skipeters is needed."

At a trial in a divorce case, a witness recently, in England, made the following reply: Mr. Sergeant Tindall—"He treated her very kindly, did he not?" Atkinson—"Oh, yes, very; he kissed her several times." Mr. Sergeant Tindall—"And how did she treat him?" Atkinson—"Well, she retained."

It is said that the first load of "provisions" landed in Virginia city, Nevada, for the few pioneers then there, consisted of eighteen barrels of whiskey.

A shocking thing to think of—A galvanic battery.
