PRIVATE BANKER BOND $100,000

Senator Gibbs Urges a Law With That Provision

Senator John M. Gibbs of Waltham, chairman of the Special Recess Commission on Banks and Banking, before the Legislative Committee on Banks and Banking, today, urged the enactment of a law under the provisions of which a private banker would be required to file a bond of $100,000 and would be prevented from simultaneously engaging in the business of accepting money for deposit and of accepting it for the purpose of transmission abroad.

Most private bankers, he said, have as their customers persons of foreign birth and others commonly called "foreigners." The Senator maintained that a check should be placed upon the activities of the bankers in handling depositors' money for transmission purposes and for deposits, in view of the fact that there is a good deal of speculation going on among them in foreign exchange.

He explained that a depositor might place an order for a certain amount of foreign money and that he might lose by the rate of exchange dropping. If the foreign money was actually purchased by the banker, said the speaker, the customer would have no complaint, but instances have developed where it was not purchased, yet the customer, having put in his order to buy, was compelled to stand for the loss.

Mr Gibbs told of an instance where the loss was deducted from the savings account of the customer. He declared that the banker has an unfair advantage over the customer, in that he can withhold buying the particular exchange if he believes that the rate is likely to drop. Then, he continued, when settlement is made with the customer, the banker can pocket as profit the amount represented by the decrease in the exchange rate.

Private bankers in Massachusetts in the last year of which records are available, said Senator Gibbs, did a business of $15,000,000 in the transmission of money through foreign exchange and of $2,000,000 in the matter of deposits.

In the upheaval followed by the Ponzi episode, he said, the business of 11 private bankers was taken over by the State, because they were in an insolvent condition. A number of those closed up, said Mr Gibbs, were using deposits for speculative purposes, and in many instances were paying the customers no interest whatever.

An article was read from an Italian paper in Boston, in which the foreign bankers were characterized as plunderers of their own countrymen, and the Bank Commissioner was called upon to issue a check to their alleged dishonesty. The reading of this article drew the statement from the attorney for the bankers that he would show it was published after the editor of the paper had attempted to "hold up" some bankers for advertisements.

Representative John J. McCarthy of Boston, a member of the committee, said he thought the required bond of $100,000 would be prohibitive in the case of many small bankers and would consequently drive them out of business.

Senator Gibbs agreed with Mr McCarthy that some of the men would have to close up shop, but he said the object of the law is to protect depositors and not to provide opportunity for any one who desires to engage in the banking business. He said the savings banks are required to hold reserves for the protection of their depositors, and he maintained the same safeguard should be thrown about the depositors in private banks.

Shipping Board Reports Sea Passenger Traffic

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The report of passenger traffic by sea issued by the United States Shipping Board for the third quarter of 1923 reflects the opening of the new quotas in the immigrant movement. A total of 97,728 third class passengers entered the country during these three months and 13,411 departed.

A striking fact is the size of the passenger traffic between the United States and its possessions and near-by foreign countries. Twelve thousand, six hundred passengers travelled between the United States and Alaska; 7745 between the United States and Hawaii, and 4469 between the United States and Porto Rico. The first class passenger movement between the United States and all of Europe totalled approximately 35,000 passengers for the quarter. During the same period the West Indies and Central America supported a movement of first class passengers exceeding 25,000. The total movement by water of first class passengers to and from all overseas countries totalled for the quarter 41,446; movement by water to Canada, Central America and the islands and countries bordering on the Caribbean was 148,294.
