6. Carpenter v. Rommell, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 34. See, generally, Leavitt v. Dabney, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 350; s. c., 37 How. Pr. 264; s. c., 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 469; Spooner v. Holmes, 102 Mass. 503; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 491; State v. Wells, 15 Cal. 36; Texas v. White, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 700; s. c., 25 Tex. 465.

7. Welch v. Sage, 47 N. Y. 143; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 423; Goodman v. Harvey, 4 Ad. & El. 870.

8. Crook v. Juelis, 5 Barn. & Ad. 909; Blackhouse v. Harrison, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1098.

The same rule prevails in the United States. See Murfree on Official Bonds, ination in order to escape the imputation of bad faith.[1] He has a right to presume that bonds payable to bearer were issued as agreed between the original parties.[2]

A purchaser of government bonds after the time for redemption takes them subject to equities.[3]

"As a general rule, a bona-fide holder of commercial paper is not bound to make a critical examination of the title to such paper; his rights are not impaired by negligence unmixed with fraud or bad faith.[4] If, however, he deals with a corporation for its negotiable bonds, or deals in such bonds at second or third hand, he must take notice of the organic law of that corporation and its powers under it. If he deals with an agent of the government or of a corporation, he is charged with knowledge of the authority of such agent.[5] He has a right to presume, when a corporation is vested with a power to issue negotiable bonds, that such power has been duly exercised by its accredited agents; and if upon their face they import a compliance with the law, he is not bound to look further.[6] He is, however, charged with knowledge as well

§ 104; Swift v. Tyson, 41 U. S. (16 Pet.) 1; Goodman v. Simonds, 61 U. S. (20 How.) 343; Bank v. Neal, 63 U. S. (22 How.) 96. Compare Lawson v. Weston, 4 Esp. 56; Gill v. Cubit, 3 Barn. & Cr. 466.

1. Birdsell v. Russell, 29 N. Y. 220; Welch v. Sage, 47 N. Y. 143; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 423.

The wrongful putting in circulation of the bonds of a foreign government, payable to bearer and transferable by delivery by an agent of the obligor having them in custody, will not invalidate the title of a purchaser in good faith without notice. Leavitt v. Morgan, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 350; s. c., 37 How. (N. Y.) 264; 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 469.

An action for conversion will not lie against an agent who, in good faith, received and sold stolen coupons of United States bonds, and turned the money over to his principal. Spooner v. Holmes, 102 Mass. 503; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 491; and see State v. Wells, 15 Cal. 336.

2. Commonwealth v. Pittsburg, 34 Pa. St. 496.

A party who in good faith advances money to a corporation for a particular purpose is under no obligation to see that it is so applied. Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 493.

3. Texas v. White, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 700; s. c, 25 Tex. 465.

4. Welch v. Sage, 47 N. Y. 143; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 423; Seybel v. National, etc., Bank, 54 N. Y. 288.

5. Selliman v. Fredericksburg, etc., Co, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 119. 130; Pearce v. Madison & Co., 43 U. S. (21 How.) 441; Zabriskie v. Cleveland & Co., 64 U. S. (23 How.) 381; The Floyd Acceptances, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 666; Clark v. Des Moines, 19 Iowa, 199.

6. Bonds of municipalities have been invested with certain immunities to which the ordinary rules of law for testing the rights and liabilities of parties to commercial paper do not apply. See, generally, Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 65 U. S. (24 How.) 287; Maran v. Miami Co., 67 U. S. (2 Blackf.) 722; Woods v. Lawrence Co., 66 U. S. (1 Blackf.) 386; Mercer Co. v. Hackett, 68 U. S. (1 Wall.) 83; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 68 U. S. (1 Wall.) 175; Meyer v. Muscatine, 68 U. S. (1 Wall.) 384; Lexington v. Butler, 81 U. S. (14 Wall.) 282; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.) 355; St. Joseph v. Rogers, 82 U. S. (16 Wall.) 644.

"When a corporation has power under any circumstances to issue negotiable securities, the bona-fide holder has a right to presume that they were issued under the circumstances which give the requisite authority, and they are no more liable to be impeached for any infirmity in the hands of such a holder than any other commercial paper." Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 68 U. S. (1 Wall.) 384, per Mr. Justice Swayne, citing Commissioner v. Aspinwall, 62 U. S. (21 How.) 539; Royal, etc., Bank v. Farquand, 6 Ellis & Bl. 327; Farmers, etc., Co. v. Curtis, 7 N. Y. 466; Stoney v. A. L. I. Co., 11 Paige (N. Y.), 635; Morris & Co. v. Fisher, 1 Stockton Ch. (N. J.) 667; Wilemarth v. Crawford, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 343; Alleghany City v. McCluskan, 14 Pa. St. 83; Lexington v. Butler, 81 U. S. (14 Wall.) 296.

of the statute to which the bonds refer as to the recitals of the bonds themselves.[1] He is bound only by the law as it stood when the bonds were issued, and not by ex post facto adjudications.[2] He must risk the authenticity of the bonds and their due execution by accredited officers.[3] He is not charged with notice of collateral matters, such as the financial condition of the county.[4] He must, however, at his peril, see that the bonds were issued under a valid power.[5] In short, he must verify the powers and pretentions of the corporation in whose securities he deals, and the authority of all agents who profess to represent it; and if he fails to do this, and loss or injury results, he can blame nobody but himself.[6]

3. INDORSEMENT.—A bond cannot, at its inception, be made payable to some certain obligee or bearer like a note or bill. But after it is complete it may be transferred by indorsement so as to become payable to bearer.[7]

A bond given in one State may be indorsed out of the State so as to give a right of action in the State where given, though there is no statute making bonds negotiable in the State where the indorsement was made.[8]

Recitals. — "We have decided that where the bonds on their face import a compliance with the law under which they were issued, the purchaser is not bound to look further." Mercer Co. v. Hackett, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 93, per Mr. Justice Grier. Under these rulings it would seem that a purchaser need not go back of the recitals in the bond. Miller v. Berlin, 13 Blatchf. C. C. 245, 249. But in a later case, McClure v. Oxford, 94 U. S. (4 Otto) 129, these rulings were modified. "To be a bona fide holder," said Mr. Chief Justice Waite, "one must be himself a purchaser for value without notice, or the successor of one who was. Every man is chargeable with notice of that which the law requires him to know, and of that which, after being put upon inquiry, he might have ascertained by reasonable diligence. Every dealer in municipal bonds which, upon their face, refer to the statute under which they were issued is bound to take notice of the statute and all its requirements." And presumably he must see that the statute itself is constitutional.

1. McClure v. Oxford, 94 U. S. (4 Otto) 129.

2. Douglass v. Pike Co., 101 U. S. (11 Otto) 677, citing Fairfield v. Gallatin Co., 100 U. S. (10 Otto) 47; Rowan v. Runnell, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 134; Ohio, etc., Co. v. Debolt, 57 U. S. (16 How.) 416; Supervisors v. United States, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 71.

As to the relation of the Federal judiciary to the statute law of the States, see Rowan v. Runnell, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 134, language of Chief Justice Taney.

3. Anthony v. Jasper Co., 101 U. S. (11 Otto), 693.

4. S. C., etc., Co. v. Osceola Co., 52 Iowa, 26. See 45 Iowa, 168.

5. Lippincott v. Town of Pana, 92 Ill. 24; Farce v. Batavia, 61 Ill. 100; Williams v. Town of Roberts, 88 Ill. 13.

6. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 116.

7. Marsh v. Brooks, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 409.

A bond payable to A., or to A. or order, is transferable only by indorsement. Fairly v. McLean, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 158.

8. Groce v. Hannah, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 94.

Liability of Indorser.—The indorser of a single bill for the accommodation of the principal obligor is not, without a special contract to that effect, liable to contribute as a co-surety with one who signed the bill as a co-obligor with the principal. The indorser in such case is to be taken only as a supplementary surety, and not liable to be called upon for contribution by the primary surety. Dawson v. Pettway, 4 Dev. & B. L. (N. Car.) 396.

An indorsement of a bond by the obligee in the form "A. B., for 60 days, 19 Nov. 1858," imposes no obligation on the indorser after 60 days. Johnson v. Olive, 1 Win. (N. Car.) No. 1, 215.

The liability of an indorser of a nego-

4. Official Bonds.—1. Construction and Effect.—(a) In General.—Every bond which is required or authorized by statute to be executed by an officer is an official bond.

(b) Execution and Delivery.—A bond complete upon its face at the time of its delivery by the principal obligor to the obligee is a valid and binding instrument, though the sureties executing it may have delivered it to the principal obligor with the understanding that it was not to be delivered to the obligee until signed by other persons or another person. The failure of such other person or persons to sign will not affect the validity of the bond unless the conditional delivery was known to the obligee or he was guilty of fraud or rashness in accepting the bond.[2] It is not necessary that the names of the parties be recited in the bond. If they subscribe their names and acknowledge it to be their act and deed in the presence of witnesses, or otherwise comply with the requirements of the law, it is sufficient.[3]

(c) Form and Essentials.—Statutes usually prescribe the form of official bonds. These rules must be substantially conformed to.[4] But it is not necessary that the bond follow the exact words of the statutory form, unless the statute expressly declares it shall. It is sufficient if it include in substance all the material require-tiable State bond when fixed as to principal is also fixed as to the interest coupons attached. No new demand and protest is required. Lane v. E. T., Va. & Ga. R. Co., 13 Lea (Tenn.), 547.

1. Commonwealth v. Adams, 3 Bush (Ky.), 41, 46.

A bond given by a public officer for the faithful performance of his duties is an official bond although not in the form prescribed by statute. Hubert v. Mendheim, 64 Cal. 213.

The bond of a deputy not prescribed by statute is a common-law bond, and should be made payable to the person for whose benefit it is executed. Lucas v. Shepherd, 16 Ind. 368.

2. Lyttle v. Cozad, 21 W. Va. 183, 199; Nash v. Fugate, 24 Gratt. (Va.) 202; Smith v. Moberly, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 266; Millett v. Parker, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 608; Deardorf v. Foresman, 24 Ind. 481; State v. Pepper, 31 Ind. 76; Passumpsic Bank v. Goss, 31 Vt. 318; State v. Peck, 53 Me. 284; State v. Potter, 63 Mo. 212; Dair v. U. S., 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 1.

3. Howell v. Parsons, 89 N. Car. 230; Vanlook v. Barnett, 4 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 268; Moore v. McKinley, 60 Iowa, 367, 370; Pequawkett v. Mathes, 7 N. H. 230; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 737.

Official Bond Executed in Blank.—Sureties, by executing an official bond in blank and delivering it to the principal, make him their agent and are bound by his acts and omissions. Mutual, etc., Co. v. Wilcox, 8 Biss. C. C. 197, 203; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. § 635, citing Dair v. United States, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 1; Butler v. United States, 88 U. S. (21 Wall.) 272.

To Whom an Official Bond should be Made Payable.—A bond payable to the wrong person cannot be good as an official bond. A replevin bond payable to the officer instead of the defendant was held void as a statutory bond because it did not conform to the statute, and as a common-law bond because its effect was to aid and abet a trespass. Purple v. Purple, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 226.

But where such a bond does not promote a violation of law or contravene public policy, it is good as a common-law bond. Johnston v. Meriwether, 3 Cal. 523.

In Supervisors, etc., v. Coffenbury, 1 Mich. 355, 358, citing United States v. Tingey, 30 U. S. (5 Pet.) 115, it was held that where the law required a treasurer's bond to be made payable to the county commissioner, and this office was superseded by that of supervisor, the bond should be made payable to the latter.

Where the statute requires a bond to be executed to the clerk of court "by his name of office as obligee," a bond running to "A., clerk," etc., meets the requirements. Bates v. Simmons, 62 Wis. 69; McNair v. Rewey, 62 Wis. 167.

4. Tevis v. Randall, 6 Cal. 632.

ments of the law. The liabilities imposed must not be in excess of those prescribed by the statute.[1]

(d) General Rules of Construction.—The general rule is that the law of the place where a contract is made governs its construction, unless the intention of the parties is that it shall be executed elsewhere.[2] But the official bond of a United States officer will always be construed as if it was executed and to be performed at Washington.[3] The liability of the obligors in an official bond is measured by its terms.[4] General terms used in an official bond must be construed with reference to the subject-matter of the bond.[5] So the conditions of a bond are limited and contracted by the recitals, although such conditions are expressed in general terms.[6] Particular words cannot be construed by the general terms set forth in the condition.[7] The construction of a bond must be reasonable.[8]

(e) Approval.—The necessity for the approval of an official

1. United States v. Morgan, 3 Wash. C. C. 10; Stewart v. Lee, 3 Cal. 364.

The addition of superfluous words, such as "shall well and truly, faithfully, firmly, and impartially execute and perform," for the statutory words "faithful performance of his duties" will not impose upon the principal other conditions than for the faithful performance of the duties of his office. The court held these words merely redundant, and said: "It is an error to suppose that the agreement to perform the duties of the office faithfully means merely that the incumbent will not wilfully do any wrong act. It has a stretch beyond this and is broken by a neglect, or by carelessness in discharge of the official duty, as well as by an intentional misfeasance." Mayor, etc., v. Evans, 31 N. J. L. 342.

Effect of Conditions More Onerous than Required by Law.—If a person voluntarily gives to an officer a bond with obligations greater than required by law, he is bound by it; but if such a bond is required by an officer of an inferior officer as a condition precedent to allowing him to enter into office, it is void so far as it imposes unlawful liabilities. Slutter v. Kirkendall, 100 Pa. St. 307, 312; People v. Reeder, 25 N. Y. 302; Burrall v. Acker, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 582. See Kings County Charities Comm'rs v. Hammill, 33 Hun (N. Y.), 348.

Rule where Bond does not Contain all the Statute Requires.—A bond does not lose its character as an official bond, if it contains nothing unauthorized, because it does not contain all that it requires. Governor v. Miller, 3 Dev. & Batt. (N. Car.) 55.

Irregular Expressions and Omissions.—Through omission to fill blank, obligee held as principals and sureties. See Cox v. Thomas, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 312, 316, citing Morrow v. Peyton, 8 Leigh (Va.), 54; Kerby v. Turner, 1 Hopkins Ch. (N. Y.) 309; Brazer v. Clark, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 96; Towne v. Ammidown, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 535; Clark v. Williams, 6 Gill. & J. (Md.) 288; Liddersdale v. Robinson, 2 Brock. C. C. 160; Green v. Hanbury, 2 Brock. C. C. 403; Luster v. Middlecoff, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 54; Berry v. Homon, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 48.

2. Hunter v. Potter, 4 Term, 182; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 241; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285.

3. Cox v. United States, 31 U. S. (6 Pet.) 172, 204.

4. Fuller v. Calkins, 22 Iowa, 301, 304.

5. United States v. Barnhardt, 17 Fed. Repr. 579.

6. Sanger v. Baumberger, 51 Wis. 592, citing Bell v. Bruen, 42 U. S. (1 How.) 169; Arlington v. Merricke, 2 Saund. 403; Liverpool, etc., Works v. Atkinson, 6 East, 507; Wardens v. Bostock, 2 Bos. & Pul. 175; Leadley v. Evans, 2 Bing. 32; Peppin v. Cooper, 2 Barn. & Ald. 431.

7. Crumpler v. Governor, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 52, 59.

8. United States v. Lent, 1 Paine C. C. 417, 421.

Where a bond is given to secure the performance of a written contract which is attached to the bond, the bond and contract can be read together in determining the liability of the obligor. Jordan v. Kavanaugh, 63 Iowa, 152.

bond must be found in the statute. In some States an official approval is required as a condition precedent to its validity and to the title of the principal to his office. Such an approval is a condition required for the protection of the public, and its omission can in no instance inure to the benefit of the obligors.[1] Attempts to invalidate bonds for such reasons have usually failed.[2]

The approval or rejection of an official bond is a ministerial, not a judicial, duty, although it be coupled with discretion.[3] It is the duty of such officer to use ordinary care and prudence to protect the security and to see that the bond is valid.[4]

The approval of the bond of an officer of a private corporation must be proved like any other fact. "The fact of the possession by the bank of such a bond (cashier's bond) in due form, legally executed, and complete in every respect, the officer having been allowed to enter on his duties, is evidence which of itself will suffice to authorize a suit upon it as having been delivered, accepted, and approved with all requisite formality."[5]

(f) Justification of Sureties.—Provisions for the justification of sureties are governed wholly by local statutes. No general principle can be evolved. "The nearest approximation to such a result is that when two or more sureties are required by the law or order controlling the subject, and a sum is fixed in which the sureties are severally to justify, each of the sureties offered must swear that he is worth that sum after payment, etc.; and if one of two sureties is worth much more than the prescribed amount, his sur-

1. Mendocino Co. v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145; People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 436; People v. Edwards, 9 Cal. 286; McCracken v. Todd, 1 Kans. 148; State v. Shirley, 1 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 597, 606; State v. Wall, 2 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 267; State v. Pool, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 105, 117.

In Young v. State, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 253, 261, the court said: "Was the prescribed attestation designed for their benefit? Did it form any inducement to their entering into the contract? Assuredly not. The requisition was made solely for the benefit of others; not to limit or impair the liability of the sheriff and his securities, but to multiply the facilities by which their liability would be rendered certain. There is nothing in the nature of the contract nor in reason or justice which would give to the omission of this ceremony the effect of annihilating this bond."

2. Jones v. State, 7 Mo. 81, 85; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 180. See Moore v. State, 9 Mo. 334.

In Arkansas, where it is the duty of the State treasurer to present his bond to the governor for approval, a failure to do so will not release him and his sureties from liability in case he obtains his commission and is inducted into office. Its approval is not a condition precedent to the validity of the bond. Auditor v. Woodruff, 2 Ark. 73; s. c., 33 Am. Dec. 368; Taylor v. Auditor, 2 Ark. 174.

3. Oliver v. Martin, 36 Ark. 134; State v. Lafayette County Court, 41 Mo 221.

Such discretion is confined to an examination of the sufficiency of the security offered, and is a legal discretion. It must not be exercised in an arbitrary or capricious manner. State v. Lafayette Co. Court, 41 Mo. 221.

In some States the action of the proper officer in approving or rejecting an official bond is considered a judicial act. Bay Co. v. Brock, 44 Mich. 45; Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90, 135; Raynsford v. Phelps, 43 Mich. 342. See Held v. Bagwell, 58 Iowa, 139.

4. Bracken Co. v. Daum, 80 Ky. 388 (erasures); Blakey v. Johnson, 13 Bush Ky.), 197; Hall v. Smith, 14 Bush (Ky.), 604; Chamberlain v. Breever, 3 Bush (Ky.), 561.

5. Bostwick v. Van Voorhis, 91 N. Y. 353; Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.) 64; Graves v. Lebanon Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.), 50; Morse on Banking (2d. Ed.), 235, and cases cited.

plus cannot be made available to supply the deficit of his co-surety." [1]

(g) When an Official Bond becomes Operative.—An official bond, like a deed, becomes operative from the time of its delivery.[2]

(h) The Law as Part of the Contract.—The existing law enters into and forms a part of every bond, and it has been held that the obligors in an official bond enter into their obligations in view of the possible modifications of their liability by the legislature.[3]

But the responsibility of sureties is much more limited than that of the principal. "Any substantial addition by law to the duties of the obligor of a bond after the execution of the instrument, materially enlarging his liabilities, will not impose an additional obligation upon his sureties, unless the words of the bond by a fair and reasonable construction bring such subsequently imposed duties within its provisions." But this rule has been very much weakened by judicial construction.[4]

(i) Object of an Official Bond.—The object of an official bond is to secure indemnity against the misuse of an official position. The principal and his sureties are liable for misconduct done under color of office.[5]

1. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 178; Trask v. Annett, 1 Demarest, 172.

2. Bryant v. Wood, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 327; Eberhardt v. Wood, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 467; s. c., 2 Tenn Ch. 490, 494; Johnson v. Harney, 84 N. Y. 363.

In Butler v. United States, 88 U. S. (21 Wall.) 272, 275, the Supreme Court of the United States held that a bond delivered to the obligee for acceptance and afterwards accepted takes effect from the date of the delivery. "A bond may not be a complete contract until it has been accepted by the obligee; but if it has been delivered to him to be accepted if he should choose to do so, that is not a conditional delivery which will postpone the obligor's undertaking to the time of its acceptance, but an admission that the bond is then binding upon him, and will be so from that time if it should be accepted."

Deeds speak from their delivery—traditio loqui facit chartam. Clayton's Case, 1 Coke, 1; Ozkey v. Hicks, Cro. Jac. 263; Steele v. Mart, 4 Barn & C. 272.

When Delivered.—A postmaster's bond speaks from the time of its approval by the postmaster-general. United States v. LeBaron, 60 U. S. (19 How.) 73, 79; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. §§ 256, 257, 261.

A sheriff's bond takes effect when approved by the county court. Bruce v. State, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 382.

An exception is found in the case of a collector's bond, which is deemed to be delivered when put in course of transmission to the controller of the treasury. Broome v. United States, 56 U. S. (How. 15) 143.

3. United States v. Gunssen, 2 Woods C. C. 99; s. c., 4 Myer's Fed. Dec. § 279. See Postmaster-General v. Munger, 2 Paine C. C. 189; Boody v. United States, 1 Woodb. & M. 150; Pybus v. Gebb, 6 El. & Bl. 903; s. c., 88 Eng. Com. Law, 910; People v. Vilas, 36 N. Y. 459; Broome v. United States, 56 U. S. (15 How.) 157; Converse v. United States, 62 U. S. (21 How.) 463.

4. United States v. Powell, 81 U. S. (14 Wall.) 493; White v. Fox, 22 Me. 341; People v. Vilas, 36 N. Y. 459; United States v. Hodson, 77 U. S. (10 Wall.) 406; Lionberger v. Krieger (Mo.), 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87.

5. People v. Treadway, 17 Mich. 480.

What is an Official Act.—See McNutt v. Livingston, 15 Miss. (16 Smed & M.) 641.

An action can be sustained against a sheriff on his official bond only for causes arising out of the performance or non-performance of ministerial duties. No such action can be maintained for a failure to protect the plaintiff from the violence of a mob. South v. Maryland, 59 U. S. (18 How.) 396, 403, citing Entick v. Carrington, 19 State Trials, 1062.

Acts Done under Color of Office.—The sureties on the bond of an officer are not liable for money obtained from a party by the officer on the pretence of having an execution when he had not. This was held not an act done under color of office. Commonwealth v. Cole, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 250.

(j) Cumulative Bonds.—In some States officers whose terms of office extend over several years are required to give a new bond

Seizing goods of a surety without having used proper exertions to get the money from the principal, as required by law to do, is an act done under color of office, for which the sureties on the official bond of the officer are liable. State v. Drnly, 3 Ind. 431.

Where a constable seized goods under color of process which he had no legal right to execute, the sureties were held responsible. The court said: "He therefore took the goods colore officii, and though he had no sufficient warrant for taking them, yet he is responsible to third persons, because such taking was a breach of his official duty." City of Lowell v. Parker, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 309, 314; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 436; Grinnell v. Philips, 1 Mass. 530.

Sureties held for money collected by a tax collector which the taxpayers were under no obligation to pay. Fuller v. Calkins, 22 Iowa, 301, citing Gilbert v. Isham, 16 Conn. 525; Warren Co. v. Ward, 21 Iowa, 84.

The whole question of the liability of officers and their sureties on official bonds for acts done under color of office was fully discussed in Lammon v. Feusier, 111 U.S. 17, 22; s.c., 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286. This was an action on the bond of a United States marshal for attaching the property of one person for the debt of another. Mr. Justice Gray said: "The marshal in serving a writ of attachment on mesne process which directs him to take the property of a particular person acts officially. His official duty is to take the property of that person, and of that person only, and to take only such property of his as is subject to be attached, and not property exempt by law from attachment. A neglect to take the attachable property of that person and a taking upon the writ of the property of another person, or of property exempt from attachment, are equally breaches of his official duty. The taking of the attachable property of the person named in the writ is rightful; the taking of property of another person is wrongful; but each, being done by the marshal in executing the writ in his hands, is an attempt to perform his official duty, and is an official act. A person other than the defendant named in the writ, whose property is wrongfully taken, may indeed sue the marshal, like any other wrongdoer, in an action of trespass to recover damages for the wrongful taking; and neither the official character of the marshal nor the writ of attachment affords him any defence to such an action. Day v. Gallup, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 97; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall (U.S.) 334. But the remedy of a person whose property is wrongfully taken by the marshal in officially executing his writ is not limited to an action against him personally. His official bond is not made to the person in whose behalf the writ is issued, nor to any other individual, but to the government for the indemnity of all persons injured by the official misconduct of himself or his deputies (United States v. Moore, 2 Brock. C. C. 317), and his bond may be put in suit by and for the benefit of any such person. When a marshal upon a writ of attachment on mesne process takes property of a person not named in the writ the property is in his official custody and under the control of the court, whose officer he is and whose writ he is executing; and according to the decisions of this court the rightful owner cannot maintain an action of replevin against him nor recover the property specifically in any way except in the court from which the writ issued. Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. (U. S.) 450; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276. The principles upon which those decisions are founded is, as declared by Mr. Justice Miller in Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 341, above cited, 'that whenever property has been seized by an officer of the court by virtue of its process, the property is to be considered as in the custody of the court and under its control for the time being; and that no other court has a right to interfere with that possession unless it be some court which may have a direct supervisory control over the court whose process has first taken possession or some superior jurisdiction in the premises.' Because the law had been so settled by this court the plaintiff in the case failed to maintain replevin in the courts of the State of Nevada against the marshal for the very taking which is the ground of this action. Feusier v. Lammon, 6 Nev. 209. For these reasons the court is of opinion that the taking of goods upon a writ of attachment into the custody of the marshal, as the officer of the court that issues the writ, is, whether the goods are the property of the defendant in the writ or of annually. These new bonds operate as additional security for new duties, and do not relieve the sureties on the previous bonds from liability as originally intended.[1]

(k) Successive Bonds—Substitute Bonds.—Sureties are not liable for the default of their principal before the execution of their bond; but when an officer is reappointed and gives a new bond his sureties are liable for the amount of money shown by his

any other person, an official act, and therefore, if wrongful, a breach of the bond given by the marshal for the faithful performance of the duties of his office. Upon the analogous question whether the sureties upon the official bond of a sheriff, a coroner, or a constable are responsible for his taking, upon a writ directing him to take the property of one person, the property of another, there has been some difference of opinion in the courts of the several States. The view that the sureties are not liable in such a case has been maintained by the supreme courts of New York, New Jersey, North Carolina, and Wisconsin, and perhaps receives some support from decisions in Alabama, Mississippi, and Indiana. Ex parte Reed, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 572; People v. Schuyler, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 166; State v. Conover, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 224; Sate v. Long, 8 Ired L. (N. Car.) 415; State v. Brown, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 141; Gerber v. Ackley, 32 Wis. 233; s. c., 37 Mo. 43; s.c., 19 Am. Rep. 751; Governor v. Hancock, 2 Ala. 728; McElhaney v. Gilleland, 30 Ala. 183; Brown v. Mosely, 11 S. M.& Marsh. (Miss.) 354; Jenkins v. Lemonds, 29 Ind. 294; Carey v. State, 34 Ind. 105. But in People v. Schuyler, 4 N. Y. 173, the judgment in 5 Barb 166 was reversed, and the case of Ex parte Reed, 4 Hill (N.Y.), 572 overruled by the majority of the New York Court of Appeals, with the concurrence of Chief Justice Bronson, who had taken part in deciding Reed's case. The final decision in People v. Schuyler has been since treated by the Court of Appeals as settling the law upon this point. Mayor, etc., of New York v. Sibberns, 3 Abb. App. Dec. 266; s. c., 7 Daly (N.Y.), 436; Cummings v. Brown, 43 N. Y. 514; People v. Comstock, 93 N. Y. 585. And the liability of the sureties in such cases has been affirmed by a great preponderance of authority, including decisions in the highest courts of Pennsylvania, Maine, Massachusetts, Ohio, Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Texas, and California, and in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Cormack v. Commonwealth, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 184; Bennett v. McKee, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 513; Archer v. Noble, 3 Greenl. (Me.) 418; Harris v. Hanson, 2 Fairf. (Me.) 243; Greenfield v. Wilson, 13 Gray (Mass.), 384; Tracy v. Goodwin, 5 Allen (Mass.), 409; Sangester v. Commonwealth, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 124; Commonwealth v. Stockton, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 192; Jewell v. Mills, 3 Bush (Ky.), 72; State v. Moore, 19 Mo 369; State v. Fitzpatrick, 64 Mo. 185; Charles v. Haskins, 11 Iowa, 329; Turner v. Killian, 12 Neb. 580; Hollimon v. Carroll, 27 Tex. 23; Van Pelt v. Littler, 14 Cal. 194. In State v. Jennings, 4 Ohio St. 418, Chief Justice Thurman said: 'The authorities seem to us quite conclusive that the seizure of the goods of A under color of process against B is official misconduct in the official making the seizure, and is a breach of the condition of his official bond where that is that he will faithfully perform the duties of his office. The reason for this is that the trespass is not the act of a mere individual, but is perpetrated colore officii. If an officer under color of a fi. fa. seizes property of the debtor which is exempt from execution, no one, I imagine, would deny that he had broken the condition of his bond. Why should the law be different if, under color of the same process, he takes the goods of a third person? If the exemption of the goods from the execution in the one case make the seizure official misconduct, why should it not have the same effect in the other? True, it may sometimes be more difficult to ascertain the ownership of the goods than to know whether a particular piece of property is exempt from execution; but this is not always the case, and if it were it would not justify us in restricting to litigants the indemnity afforded by the official bond, thus leaving the rest of the community with no other indemnity against official misconduct than the responsibility of the officer might furnish.'" See People v. Lucas, 93 N. Y. 585, reversing People v. Lucas, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 610.

1. Poole v. Cox, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 65, 71, citing Oats v. Bryan, 3 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 451; Bell v. Jasper, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 597.

books to be on hand. He is presumed to have the amount charged to him, and the burden of proving the contrary is upon the sureties.[1]

(l) Bond of De Facto Officer.—If a party who is ineligible to an office nevertheless gets appointed, gives a bond, and enters upon the performance of the duties of the office, his sureties are responsible for his acts as upon a common-law bond.[2]

(m) Liability of an Officer for Public Money.—A receiver of public money is liable, virtute officii, in the absence of contract, only as an ordinary bailee. But if he executes a penal bond in which he binds himself to perform the duties of his office without exception, he becomes an insurer. The contract, not the law, makes such an officer an insurer.[3]

The rule making the depositary of public money who has given a bond an insurer has been materially modified by excepting

1. Bruce v. United States, 58 U. S. (17 How.) 437, 443; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. § 522; United States v. Stone, 106 U. S. (16 Otto) 525; United States v. Eckford, 42 U. S. (1 How.) 250.

Whether new bonds required by statute are supplemental, cumulative, and additional, or substitutes for old bonds, is often a difficult question. It depends chiefly on the language of the statute. Where from a fair construction the intent seems to be to furnish a substitute for the old bond, the sureties on the old bond are released by the execution of the new. United States v. Wardwell, 5 Mason C. C. 82, 85.

Apportionment of Payments.—It is a well-settled rule that where there are several different accounts the debtor may elect to which account he will apply payments; if he fails to do so, the creditor has a like option; and if he fails to act, the law will adjust the several payments. It has been held by the Supreme Court of the United States that this rule did not apply to the case where the receiver is a public officer, where the payments are indiscriminately made, and where there are different sureties liable under distinct obligations. "It will be generally admitted that moneys arising, due, and collected subsequently to the execution of the second bond, cannot be applied to the discharge of the first bond without manifest injury to the surety on the second bond, and vice versa." United States v. January, 11 U. S. (7 Cranch) 575. See United States v. Nicholl, 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.) 505; Myers v. United States, 1 McLean C. C. 493, 498. Compare United States v. Wardwell, 5 Mason C. C. 82, 87, citing Clayton's Case, 1 Meriv. 572, 604, 608; Bodenham v. Purchos, 2 Barn. & Ald. 39; Simson v. Cooke, 1 Bing. 452; Simson v. Ingham, 2 Barn. & Cr. 65.

It is the failure to perform his duty, not the receipt of money, which fixes the liability of the sureties on an official bond. Commissioners v. McCormick, 4 Montana, 115.

Where there is no evidence of when the default occurred the court will apportion the loss among the sureties for each year in proportion to the sums of money collected that year. Inhabitants of Phipsburg v. Dickinson (Me.), 7 Atl. Repr. 9.

2. Commonwealth v. Teal, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 29; Green v. Wardwell, 17 Ill. 278; Corbett v. Carroll, 5 Ala. 315; State v. Cooper, 53 Miss. 615; Jones v. Scanland, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 195; s.c., 44 Am. Dec. 300, citing State v. Maurice, 2 Brock. C. C. 97, 113. See also State v. Wells, 8 Nev. 105; State v. Rhoades, 6 Nev. 352. See Ford v. Clough, 8 Me. 334.

"An officer de facto is one who has the reputation of being the officer he professes to be, but is not a good officer in point of law." Parker v. Kelt, 1 Ld. Raymond, 658; The King v. Corporation of Bedford Level, 6 East, 368.

In a suit upon the bond of a de facto officer neither he nor his sureties can be heard to allege that he was not an officer de jure; they are estopped to deny their liability on the bond. Lionberger v. Krieger (Mo.), 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87; Commonwealth v. Teal, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 29; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Williamson v. Woolf, 37 Ala. 296.

3. Boyden v. United States, 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 17, 25; The Harriman, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 161; United States v. Dashiel, 71 U. S. (4 Wall.) 182; United States v. Prescott, 44 U. S. 578; Muzzy v. Shattuck, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 233; Common-cases arising from overruling force or the act of a public enemy.[1]

(n) Liability for Stolen Money.—In many States officers charged with the custody of public funds are held to the same liability as a bank which receives a deposit. They become debtors from the receipt of the money, and the loss of the fund by robbery is no excuse for non-payment.[2]

But in other States the officer may prove as a defence to an action on his bond that the money was stolen from him without any fault or negligence on his part.[3]

(o) Retrospective and Retroactive Laws.—The acts of an officer cannot be made official by a statute passed after the acts are performed, although it may purport to explain an antecedent law.[4]

(p) Bond of an Annually Appointed Officer.—The sureties on the official bond of an officer appointed annually are liable only for his official acts during the year.[5]

2. OFFICIAL BONDS OF WHICH THE UNITED STATES IS THE BENEFICIARY.—(a) Power of the United States to Require Bonds from its Officers and other Persons.—The United States may be wealth v. Comly, 3 Pa. St. 372; State v. Harper, 6 Ohio St. 607.

1. United States v. Thomas, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.) 337; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. 337, citing the following authorities: It is no defence to an action on an official bond that the money was stolen. United States v. Prescott, 44 U. S. (3 How.) 578; United States v. Dashiel, 71 U. S. (4 Wall.) 182. Or that the money was lost by shipwreck during lawful transportation. United States v. Humason, 6 Sawy. C. C. 199. Or that it was taken from him by force. Bevans v. United States, 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 56. Or that it was lost through the failure of a bank in which he had deposited it, although the bank may have been selected by the government. United States v. Freeman, 1 Woodb. & M. C. C. 45. Or that it was paid to a creditor of the government, that not being part of his official duty. United States v. Keehler, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 83.

2. Com. Bank v. Hughes, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 100; Muzzy v. Shattuck, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 233; Supervisors v. Door, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 584, note; United States v. Prescott, 44 U. S. (3 How.) 578.

3. Ross v. Hatch, 5 Iowa, 149.

4. McKee v. Griffin, 66 Ala. 211.

5. Moss v. State, 10 Mo. 338, 339.

Where a sheriff who gave a bond as such was ex officio tax collector, and was required to give bond annually as such, it was held that the bond as tax collector fell within the principle which limits the responsibility of sureties of officers elected annually; that the liability on the bond as tax collector, although the words of the condition were general, could not be extended beyond the year. Moss v. State, 10 Mo. 338.

Liability of Sureties when Principal Holds Office until his Successor is Elected.—The sureties of an officer who is chosen annually and to hold office until his successor is "chosen and qualified in his stead" are bound only for the year for which he was chosen, and for a time reasonably sufficient for the election and qualification of his successor. Chelmsford Co. v. Demarest, 7 Gray (Mass.), 1; Bigelow v. Bridge, 8 Mass. 275; Welch v. Seymour, 28 Conn. 387; County of Wappello v. Bingham, 10 Iowa, 40; Dover v. Twombly, 42 N. H. 59; Moss v. State, 10 Mo. 338; State Treasurer v. Mann, 34 Vt. 371; Mayor v. Horn, 2 Harr. (Del.) 190; Insurance Co. v. Smith, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 590; s. c., Society v. Johnson, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 41; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 644; Committee, etc., v. Greenwood, 1 Desau. (S. Car.) 450; Insurance Co. v. Clark, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 196; Patterson v. Inhabitants of Freehold, 38 N. J. L. 255; Harris v. Babbitt, 4 Dill. C. C. 185, 194; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. §§ 588, 589. Compare State ex rel. v. Berg, 50 Ind. 496; Thompson v. State, 37 Miss. 518; Placer Co. v. Dickerson, 45 Cal. 12; State v. Daniels, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 444. See Murfree on Official Bonds, § 225. As to meaning of "qualified," see Fresno Enterprise Co. v. Allen (Cal.), 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 344, 346.

a party to a negotiable bond, and it may, in its official capacity, without an enabling statute, take a bond from any person dealing with it for the faithful discharge of his duties.[1] The "United States, being a body politic, may within the sphere of the constitutional powers confided to it, and through the instrumentality of the proper department to which these powers are confided, enter into contracts not prohibited by law and appropriate to the just exercise of those powers." But such a bond must be voluntarily given; for if a bond which is not required by law is demanded by a superior officer from an inferior as a condition precedent to entering upon his duties, it is extorted under color of office and is illegal and void.[2]

(b) Of whom Bonds are Required by the United States.—No bonds are required from political, military, naval, or judicial officers, except in the case of military and naval officers who have control of public property or money, such as paymasters, quartermasters, and pursers.[3] All officers charged with the collection, care, and disbursement of the public money, such as collectors of customs, naval officers (customs), naval storekeepers, and all officers who may become indebted to the United States, must give bond with approved sureties.[4] The same is true of all ministerial officers of justice, such as marshals and clerks of federal courts;[5] of all treasurers and subtreasurers charged with the disbursement of the public money;[6] all collectors of internal revenue, gaugers, and storekeepers;[7] all postmasters, whether male or female, married or single;[8] registers and receivers of land offices;[9] surveyor gen-

1. Postmaster-General v. Rice, Gilp. (U. S.) 554.

The irregularity of an officer's appointment does not in any way absolve him from legal obligation to account for public money in his hands. United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock. C. C. 96.

2. United States v. Tingey, 30 U. S. (5 Pet.) 115, 128; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. §§ 183, 184, 191, 200, 632. See Dugan v. United States, 16 U. S. (3 Wheat.) 172.

The Postmaster-General may take bonds from his deputies to secure the faithful performance of their duties. Postmaster-General v. Early, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 136.

The United States may take a common-law bond and enforce the same. United States v. Linn, 40 U. S. (15 Pet.) 290; United States v. Hodson, 77 U. S. (10 Wall.) 395. See Jessup v. United States, 106 U. S. 147.

Execution, Delivery, and Acceptance.—All bonds in which the United States is the beneficiary are supposed to be executed at Washington. The law of the lex loci in this respect is immaterial; consequently State laws as to seals cannot affect such bonds. By the custom and usage of the goverment a scrawl for a seal is sufficient. United States v. Stephenson, 1 McLean C. C. 462, 466; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. § 233; Cox v. United States, 31 U. S. (6 Pet.) 172, 204; Duncan v. United States, 32 U. S. (7 Pet.) 435, 452.

The same rules govern the signing, delivery, and acceptance of bonds given to the United States as like bonds given to private persons. Acceptance may be presumed, but it is a fact for a jury. Postmaster-General v. Norvill, Gilpin (U. S.), 105.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat. 191; United States v. Kirkpatrick, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 720; United States v. Van Zandt, 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.) 184; Dox v. Postmaster-General, 26. U. S. (1 Pet.) 325; United States v. Linn, 40 U. S. (15 Pet.) 290.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2619, 1415.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 783, 794. See Gwin v. Breedlove, 43 U. S. (2 How.) 29; Gwin v. Barton, 47 U. S. (6 How.) 7.

6. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 302, 3600.

7. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3143, 3156, 3153.

8. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3834.

9. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2236.

erals and deputy surveyor-generals of land ;[1] and generally all persons connected with the United States government, except political, judicial, military, and naval officers, with the exceptions above enumerated, must give bond for the faithful performance of their duties. This includes all who have pecuniary transactions with the government. Importers of foreign merchandise must give bonds for the delivery at a foreign port for goods imported and re-exported.[2] Frauds against the internal revenue are guarded against by requiring bonds from brewers, distillers, tobacco manufacturers, and others.[3]

(c) Extraneous Matter.—Official bonds are void in so far as they contain conditions in excess of the requisitions of the statute. Consequently the bond of a collector of public money which includes the pre-existing indebtedness of the collector to the United States, the terms of the statute being prospective, is void as to such extraneous matter.[4]

(d) Retroactive Clauses.—The general rule is that a retroactive clause in a bond, not authorized by statute, is void.[5] But there are exceptions to the rule.[6]

(e) Laches.—Immunity against laches is a prerogative which operates in favor of the United States, except in those cases where it has been limited by special statutes. There are numerous statutes limiting the period within which actions may be maintained on official bonds payable to the United States.[7] The United States government is not responsible for the laches of its officers to whom the enforcement of its obligations is intrusted. "The utmost vigilance would not save the public from the most serious losses, if the doctrine of laches can be applied to its transactions. It would in effect work a repeal of all its sureties."[8]

(f) Priority of Payment by Debtor.—Debts due the United States are entitled to priority of payment out of the estate of a deceased or insolvent debtor.[9] "The same right of priority which belongs to the government attaches to the claim of an individual who, as surety, has paid money to the government."[10]

1. U. S. Rev. § 2216.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4145, 4306, 4317, 4320, 4328.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3260, 3336, 3355; United States v. Hodson, 77 U. S. (10 Wall.) 395; United States v. Powell, 81 U. S. (14 Wall.) 493.

4. Armstrong v. United States, 1 Pet. C. C. 46.

5. United States v. Brown, Gilpin (U.S.), 155; Purple v. Purple, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 226.

6. 1 Stat. at Large (U. S.), 705; 5 Stat. at Large, 661; United States v. Ellis, 4 Sawy. C. C. 590, 592.

The sureties on the bond of a postmaster are responsible for his obedience to all laws enacted, and all orders issued, relating to his duties up to the last day of his term. Boody v. United States, 1 Woodb. & M. C. C. 150, 171. See United States v. Powell, 81 U. S. (14 Wall.) 493.

7. Suits for penalties or forfeitures, U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1047; on bond of postmaster, U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3838; marshal's bond, U. S. Rev. Stat. § 786.

8. Dox v. Postmaster-General, 26 U. S. (1 Pet.) 318, citing United States v. Van Zandt, 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.) 184; United States v. Kirkpatrick, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 720.

9. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3466, 3468.

10. Hunter v. United States, 30 U. S. (5 Pet.) 173. See also United States v. Boyd, 46 U. S. (5 How.) 29.

Construction of Priority Statutes.—United States v. Fisher, 6 U. S. (2 Cranch) 358; United States v. Hooe, 7 U. S. (3

(g) Set-offs against the United States in Actions on Official Bonds.—No claims, credits, or set-offs can be used as defences to an action by the United States against a public debtor, except such as have been duly presented for allowance to the proper officers and rejected by them.[1]

3. BONDS OF STATE, COUNTY, AND MUNICIPAL OFFICERS.—The ministerial and executive officers of States, counties, townships, and municipalities are almost universally required to give bond for the faithful discharge of their duties. Statutes providing for the execution of such bonds are usually directory only, and a failure to furnish the bond immediately as provided by the statute does not work a forfeiture of the office.[2]

Cranch) 73; Prince v. Bartlett, 12 U. S. (8 Cranch) 431, 434; United States v. Howland, 17 U. S. (4 Wheat.) 108; Conard v. Atlantic, etc., Co., 26 U. S. (1 Pet.) 386; United States v. Hack, 33 U. S. (8 Pet.) 271.

Existing Liens Superior to the Priority of Payment in Favor of the United States.—Brent v. Bank of Washington, 35 U. S. (10 Pet.) 596.

Bankrupt Law as Affecting Priority.—Lewis v. United States, 92 U. S. (2 Otto) 618.

Demands of the United States against insolvent national banks are not entitled to priority. Daviess v. Fairbairn, 44 U. S. (3 How.) 636; United States v. Tynen, 78 U. S. (11 Wall.) 88; Cook County National Bank v. United States, 107 U. S. (17 Otto) 445.

1. United States v. Lent, 1 Paine C. C. 417; United States v. Smith, 1 Bond C. C. 68; United States v. Giles, 13 U. S. (9 Cranch) 212; Cox v. United States, 31 U. S. (6 Pet.) 172; Halliburton v. United States, 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 63.

This rule does not apply where the claim is for payment made by a surety after the death of his principal, as part satisfaction of the default sued upon. Cox v. United States, 31 U. S. (6 Pet.) 172

Jurisdiction.—The proper place for bringing an action on a bond given to the United States is the federal courts. Wetmore v. Rice, 1 Biss. C. C. 237; Sperring v. Taylor, 2 McLean C. C. 362. See also Adler v. Newcomb, 2 Dill. C. C. 45.

Liability of Sureties.—A surety on an official bond is not discharged by fraud on the part of the principal or negligence on the part of the government. Ryan v. United States, 86 U. S. (19 Wall.) 514; Osborn v. United States, 86 U. S. (19 Wall.) 577.

Sureties are not liable for past defaults unless made so by the terms of the bond. They are liable only for money in the hands of the principal at the time the bond became operative. Farrar v. United States, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 373. The responsibility is limited only to such money as is actually received by the principal or his authorized agent during the life of the bond. Bryan v. United States, 66 U. S. (1 Black) 140. See United States v. Spencer, 2 McLean C. C. 265.

2. Smith v. Cronkhite, 8 Ind. 134; State v. Finley, 10 Ohio, 51.

Failure to file bond may, by provision of statute, create ipso facto a vacancy. People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620. A statute making the filing of a bond a condition precedent to entering upon an office is constitutional. Cooley Const. Lim. (5th Ed.) 78; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Hyde v. State, 52 Miss. 665.

The failure on the part of a person who has been elected to an office to file an official bond under the time required by statute does not of itself and ipso facto vacate the office. It is a cause of forfeiture, but not a forfeiture. A vacancy must be declared by the proper officers and in the proper manner. State v. Laughton (Nev.), 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 79, note; Knottman v. Ayer, 3 Strob. (S. Car.) 92; People v. Hopson, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 574; Weeks v. Ellis, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 320; Cronin v. Gundy, 16 Hun (N. Y.), 520; Foote v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674. But see Beebe v. Robinson, 52 Ala. 71; State v. Toomer, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 216; Treasurer v. Stevens, 2 McCord (S. Car.), 107. See also Crawford v. Howard, 9 Ga. 314.

The State may waive the cause of forfeiture arising from failure to file bond. State v. Toomer, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 216.

An officer cannot legally act in his official capacity until he has qualified as required by statute. Rounds v. Mans-

Judicial officers are generally exempt from the necessity of giving a bond, but in some of the States justices of the peace are required to execute a bond.[1] A justice is not, however, liable upon his bond as a judicial officer, but he and his sureties are liable for fraud, negligence, or other misdemeanor in any part of his duty which is of an executive or ministerial nature.[2]

Suits on bonds executed by an officer of a State are usually brought in the name of the State "upon the relation of" or "to the use of" the party injured. It is not necessary to obtain the permission of the State before bringing suit on an official bond payable to the State, but there "is no doubt that it is incumbent on the party suing on the bond to show that he has an interest in it before he could recover in a regular trial prosecuted to verdict."[3]

4. BONDS REQUIRED IN COURSE OF JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS. —Bonds of this class differ from ordinary official bonds in that they are intended for the benefit of the particular person named, and not for the public generally. They are more definite in their terms, conditions, and operation. They are made for the particular occasion, and are rarely of a continuing character.[4] field, 38 Me. 586; Rounds v. Bangor, 46 Me. 541. His salary does not begin to run until he is legally qualified. Jump v. Spence, 28 Md. 1.

1. Rev. Stat. Ind. (1881) § 1421; Laws of Iowa (1873), §§ 674, 678; Th. & S. Code (Tenn.), § 5004.

2. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 314; Kress v. State, 65 Ind. 106.

Liability of Justices of the Peace on their Official Bond.—It was held in Indiana in 1852 that a justice of the peace who acted in an oppressive, illegal, and corrupt manner was liable on his bond to injured party. State v. Flinn, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 72. See also Poulk v. Slocum, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 421; State v. Littlefield, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 129; Barkeloo v. Randall, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 476; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 46; Noel v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 523; Weaver v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 563.

In Dietrichs v. Schaw, 43 Ind. 175, which was an action for false imprisonment, it was held that judicial officers "are not liable for mistakes of judgment or erroneous decisions; but they are liable for trespasses committed under color of judicial authority, where they have no jurisdiction over the parties in the subject-matter."

In Widener v. State, 45 Ind. 244, it was held that an action could be sustained on the official bond of a justice for money received by him in payment of a note where no suit was commenced.

In Iowa the primary object of a justice's bond is to secure the proper application of money which may come into his hands. Latham v. Brown, 16 Iowa, 118. But it has been held in that State that a justice and his sureties are liable for wrongs done under color of office through favor, fraud, or partiality. Cowing v. Cowgill, 12 Iowa, 495.

3. State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 177.

"The laws which provide for the execution of bonds similar to the one before us do not require them for the purpose of protecting the rights of the State alone. They are also designed to secure the faithful performance of official duties, in the discharge of which individuals and corporations have a deep interest, and therefore they should have the privilege of suing upon such bonds for injuries sustained by them through the negligence and mal-conduct of the officers." State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 177. See also Kersted v. State, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 248; McMechen v. Mayor, etc., 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 41; Ing v. State, 8 Md. 294; State v. Dorsey, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 75; Laureson v. State, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 339; Corporation v. Young, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 406.

4. "They are all required by positive law; their substance, if not their form, is prescribed by statute; they are executed either by the express orders and under the actual supervision of a court of record, or else under the requisition of an officer of the law; their custody is under the control of the court; their sufficiency is adjudicated in the manner prescribed by statute; if not technically, they are practically a part of the record; their beneficiaries are either parties to

(a) Attachment Bonds.—In most of the States the plaintiff is required to give a proper bond before an attachment will be issued, conditioned that he will prosecute his suit with effect, or pay all damages which the defendant may suffer by reason of the wrongful suing and of the attachment. It is not necessary in an action on an attachment bond to show that the process was sued out maliciously; it is sufficient if it was wrongful and unwarranted by the law under the actual circumstances of the case.[1]

In an action on an attachment bond, the measure of damages is the actual loss or injury suffered, including all costs and expenses.[2]

An attachment bond inures only to the benefit of the defendant, and no action will lie on it for the benefit of a stranger.[3] Several obligees in an attachment bond may maintain a joint the cause in which they are filed, or officers of the courts." Murfree on Official Bonds, § 409.

1. Wilson v. Outlaw, Minor (Ala.), 367; Tallant v. Burlington & Co., 37 Iowa, 261; Seay v. Greenwood, 21 Ala. 491; Dunning v. Humphrey, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 31; Williams v. Hunter, 3 Hawks (N. Car.), 545; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 507.

In Alabama it has been held that where an attachment was issued upon just grounds and afterwards vacated for informality, damages could not be recovered in an action on the bond. Sharpe v. Hunter, 16 Ala. 765.

An abandonment or failure to prosecute the action with effect is not of itself sufficient cause for an action on the bond; the process must have been wrongfully procured. Smith v. Story, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 169; Pettitt v. Mercer, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 51.

In Louisiana, "if the plaintiff in an attachment voluntarily abandon it, he renders himself and his sureties responsible in damages; and if it be set aside by order of the court, it is prima-facie evidence that it was wrongfully issued, and that damages to some extent have been sustained." Cox v. Robinson, 2 Rob. (La.) 313, 318.

In Indiana it is held that "if the attachment proceedings are wrongful and oppressive, that gives the defendant a right of action, whether the plaintiff has a good cause for his main action or not, or whatever may be the result of the principal action." Harper v. Keys, 43 Ind. 220.

The sureties upon a bond to dissolve an attachment conditioned that the defendant will perform the judgment of the court in the action in which the attachment issued are absolutely liable without reference to the question whether the attachment was rightfully or wrongfully issued. Ferguson v. Glidewell (Ark.), 2 South. Rep. 711.

In an attachment suit the officer released the property from custody upon a bond in the following language: "We, J. B., as principal, and J. H., as surety, bind ourselves to pay F. & B. $492, unless the said J. B. shall satisfy any judgment which may be recovered against him by the said F. & B. in their attachment suit against the said J. B. for $2150, returnable before the circuit court of W. Co., Miss., on the 1st day of December, 1881." This was held not a bond for the forthcoming of the property, but a bond discharging the attachment as to the property released, under § 2428, Code of 1880. Forbes v. Narva, 63 Miss. 1.

2. Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490; Dunning v. Humphrey, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 31; Johnson v. Bank, 4 Bush (Ky.), 283; Munnerlyn v. Alexander, 38 Tex. 125; Wilson v. Root, 43 Ind. 486; Haydon v. Sample, 10 Mo. 215. See also Moore v. Stanley, 51 Mo. 315; Hughes v. Brooks, 36 Tex. 379.

Remote damages and those of speculative character cannot be recovered. Pettitt v. Mercer, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 51; State v. Thomas, 19 Mo. 613; Myers v. Farrell, 47 Miss. 281; Floyd v. Hamilton, 33 Ala. 235; Plumb v. Woodmansee, 34 Iowa, 116; Campbell v. Chamberlain, 10 Iowa, 337.

Malice and bad faith will aggravate damages. Renkert v. Elliott, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 235.

3. Davis v. Commonwealth, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 139; Raspellier v. Brownson, 7 La. 231.

Plaintiff may give a new undertaking in attachment if first is defective or insufficient. Pierse v. Miles, 5 Mont. 549; Langstaff v. Miles, 5 Mont. 554.

action on the bond although the damages were several.[1] No action for damages can be sustained until the original suit has been determined and the attachment discharged.[2]

(b) Injunction Bonds.—The object of an injunction bond is to reimburse a defendant for an illegal interference with his rights and property. Statutes which require a bond as a condition precedent to issuing an injunction are mandatory.[3] An order for an injunction is ineffectual until a proper bond is executed.[4] An injunction bond takes effect from the time it is filed in the proper

1. Boyd v. Martin, 10 Ala. 700; Gayle v. Martin, 3 Ala. 593; Hill v. Wood, 4 Ala. 214.

The obligees who have been injured may sue without regard to the others who have not been injured. Alexander v. Jacoby, 23 Ohio St. 358.

2. Nolle v. Thompson, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 121; Bettick v. Wilkins, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 307. See Kerr v. Reece, 27 Kans. 469.

In some States an action must be ineffectually prosecuted against the principal personally before an action can be brought upon the attachment bond. Holcomb v. Foxworth, 34 Miss. 265; Sledge v. Lee, 19 Ga. 411; Penney v. Hishfield, 1 Montana, 367; Tarpey v. Shillenberger, 10 Cal. 390. Compare Churchill v. Abraham, 22 Ill. 455; Herndon v. Farney, 4 Ala. 243; Dickinson v. McCraw, 4 Rand. (Va) 158.

The sureties on an attachment bond may be liable although the attachment has not been formally vacated, it being in effect vacated by the judgment. Lee v. Homer, 37 Hun (N. Y.), 634.

One who gives a bond that property attached in his hands in a suit against another person shall be forthcoming cannot be allowed to interplead after judgment against defendant. McElfatrick v. Macauley, 15 Mo. App. 102.

A sued B and C, C being a non-resident, and gave an attachment bond payable to "defendants" for all damages "he" may sustain. The goods seized were owned by B and C, as partners; and on trial there was judgment for B and C. Held, that C had no right of action on the bond. Faulkner v. Brigel, 101 Ind. 329.

If in violation of law (Neb. Comp. St. § 14) the clerks allows an attorney to become surety on an attachment bond, and approves the bond, the surety is bound. Tessier v. Crowley, 17 Neb. 207.

3. Miller v. Parker, 73 N. Car. 58.

Such bonds cannot be affected by laws passed subsequent to their execution. Mix v. Vail, 86 Ill. 40.

In the absence of a statute the terms and condition of the bond rest in the judicial discretion of the chancellor. Newell v. Partee, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 325. See Foster v. Shephard, 33 Tex. 687.

It is error to grant an injunction without requiring a bond. Miller v. Parker, 73 N. Car. 58.

An injunction bond need not specify any particular sum as penalty. N. Car. G. A. Co. v. N. Ca. O. D. Co., 79 N. Car. 48.

It is proper but not necessary that the approval of the court be indorsed on the bond. Griffin v. Wallace, 66 Ind. 410.

4. Pell v. Lander, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 554.

The court may at any time require additional bond. Crawford v. Paine, 19 Iowa, 172.

Insufficiency of the bond alone is not in the first instance ground for dissolving an injunction. Drake v. Phillips, 40 Ill. 388.

The plaintiff should have a reasonable time in which to file a new bond. Beauchamp v. Kankakee, 45 Ill. 274; Gamble v. Campbell, 6 Fla. 347; Chesapeake & Co. v. Patton, 5 W. Va. 234.

It is not correct practice to perpetuate an injunction upon condition that the plaintiff within a limited time file such a bond as shall meet the case. Downes v. Monroe, 42 Tex. 307.

Injunction bonds must be construed ut res magis valeat quam pereat. It will be enforced as to the conditions required by statutes which it contains. Holliday v. Myers, 11 W. Va. 276.

Additional matter when not against the law or in violation of public policy will be regarded as surplusage. Johnson v. Vaughn, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 217.

If the terms of the bond bind the obligor to pay the debt unless the suit is successfully prosecuted, the bond will be strictly enforced if the injunction is dissolved. Hunt v. Scobie, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 469. See Hanley v. Wallace, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 184.

Injunction bond of an executor, see Mahan v. Tydings, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 351.

office.[1] All parties to the suit who are affected by the injunction are entitled to the benefit of the bond.[2] An action cannot be sustained upon an injunction bond until the final termination of the suit in which the injunction issued.[3] The Statute of Limitations begins to run from the time the cause of action accrues.[4]

(c) Appeal Bonds.—The conditions of an appeal bond are controlled by the character of the judgment from which the appeal is taken. Where the appeal operates as a supersedeas the bond should secure the debt, damages, and costs. An irregular appeal bond is good as far as it goes, if the cause proceeds upon the faith of such bond. The word "damages" in an appeal bond means the damages in consequence of the appeal; that is, the interest at the rate fixed by statute upon the amount of the judgment below, from the date of its rendition to the time of entering the judgment above; and the damages are recoverable against the surety whenever the appeal is not prosecuted with effect; that is to say, where the final recovery is for the same or a larger amount than the judgment below.[5]

(d) Indemnity Bonds.—It is customary for an officer, when required in the course of his business to seize property the ownership of which is in dispute, to demand an indemnity bond from the party in whose behalf the seizure is made. Under such bonds the officer is entitled to be reimbursed for any damages he may suffer if he proves to be a trespasser. But the act must not be illegal or against the policy of the law. The officer is not entitled to indemnity if he knows that the seizure will be a trespass.[6] The officer is presumed to know the law, and an indemnity bond against the peace and policy of the law is void.[7] The breach of an in-

1. Lothrop v. Southworth, 5 Mich. 437.

2. Cumberland, etc., Co. v. Hoffman, etc., Co., 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 16.

3. Goodbar v. Dunn, 61 Miss. 624; Penny v. Holberg, 53 Miss. 567; Hansard v. Gray, 47 Miss. 75; Gray v. Veirs, 33 Md. 159; Bemis v. Gannett, 8 Neb. 236; High on Injunctions, § 1649.

Until the suit is disposed of it cannot be known that the injunction was wrongfully sued out. Thompson v. McNair, 64 N. Car. 448.

When an injunction is dissolved and the suit in which it was granted terminated, the breach of the injunction bond is complete and an action can be maintained upon it. Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 625, overruling Gelston v. Whitesides, 3 Cal. 309, citing Loomis v. Brown, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 325.

4. Pickett v. Boyd, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 498. See this case as to injunction bond from sister State.

5. Mason v. Smith, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 69; Gohlson v. Brown, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 496; Jones v. Parsons, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 321; Matlock v. Banks, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 95; Bank v. Williams, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 579; Nunnellee v. Morton, Cooke (Tenn.), 21; Dodson v. Dodson, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 110; Sharp v. Pickens, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 268; Hutchinson v. Fulghum, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 550; Banks v. McDowell, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 85; Mason v. Anderson, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 38; Mason v. Metcalf, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 440; Nichols v. McComb, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 83; Banks v. Brown, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 198.

The State need not give an appeal bond. State v. Co. of Coahoma (Miss.), 1 South. Rep. 501.

A county auditor need not give a bond when appealing in his official capacity. Scheerer v. Edgar (Cal.), 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 153.

As to right of contribution and subrogation between surety on an appeal bond and surety on original debt, see Briggs v. Hinton, 14 Lea (Tenn.), 233; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 159, and note on rights and liabilities of sureties.

6. Porter v Stapp, 6 Colo. 32; Stone v. Hooker, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 155.

7. Porter v. Stapp, 6 Colo. 32; Hardemnity bond arises when the injured party recovers judgment against the officer. Such bond may be assigned to the claimants, who may maintain an action against the indemnitors on the bond so assigned.[1] Under a bond to save harmless, a judgment against the obligee fixes the obligor's liability, and the obligor may pay it without waiting for execution.[2]

5. BONDS OF PERSONS ACTING UNDER JUDICIAL CONTROL.—(a) Executors.—In the absence of statutes, an executor is regarded as a mere trustee, and, like any other trustee, will be required to give bond before he will be permitted to execute the trust.[3] Where a testator provides that no bond shall be required from his executor, a court is not justified in requiring a bond from the mere insolvency or poverty of the executor. There must be in addition some fraud or danger of loss from maladministration.[4] In most of the States the statutes require executors to give bond before letters testamentary can be issued to them, and only the express will of the testator as expressed in the will can justify an exception.[5] In other States bonds are required from executors only when it appears to be necessary for the proper care of the estate.[6] At any time when the security is deemed insufficient an executor or administrator who has given a bond may be required to give additional security.[7] The sureties on an executor's bond are liable only for assets within the State.[8] desty v. Price, 3 Colo. 558; Purple v. Purple, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 226; Cumpston v. Lambert, 18 Ohio, 81; Nelson v. Cook, 17 Ill. 443.

1. McBeth v. McIntyre, 57 Cal. 49; Jones v. Childs, 8 Nev. 121; Chace v. Hinman, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 452; Challoner v. Walker, 1 Burr. 574. See Negus's Case, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 499; Rockfeller v. Donnelly, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; Jones v. Cooper, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 54; Ramsey v. Gervais, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 145.

An obligor who is bound to save the obligee harmless against a certain engagement is bound to secure him for incurring any expense by virtue of the engagement. Sparks v. Martindale, 8 East, 593.

As to amount recoverable, see Lyon v. Clark, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 250; s. c., 8 N. Y. 148.

2. Creamer v. Stephenson, 15 Md. 211; Jones v. Childs, 8 Nev. 121. See Tate v. Booe, 9 Ind. 13; Given v. Driggs, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 450; Turk v. Ridge, 41 N. Y. 201.

The word "judgment" in an indemnity bond does not refer solely to a judgment obtained by adverse litigation. Conner v. Reeves (N. Y.), 9 N. E. Repr. 439.

3. Raus v. Noble, 2 Vern. 249; Batten v. Earnley, 2 P. Wms. 136; Stanning v. Style, 3 P. Wms. 336.

4. Fairbairn v. Fisher, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 390; Wilson v. Whitfield, 38 Ga. 269; Wilkins v. Harris, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) 41; Clark v. Niles, 42 Miss. 460; Bowman v. Wootton, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 67; Shields v. Shields, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 56. Compare Atwell v. Helm, 7 Bush (Ky.), 504.

The statutes of New York give the court power to require a bond where the circumstances are "precarious." See Grigsby v. Cocke's Ex'rs (Ky.), 3 S. Westn. Repr. 518.

5. Cowling v. Justices, 6 Rand. (Va.) 349; Webb v. Dietrich, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 401; Cohen's Appeal, 2 Watts (Pa.), 175; Bankhead v. Hubbard, 14 Ark. 298; Holbrook v. Bentley, 32 Conn. 502.

6. Mandeville v. Mandeville, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 475; Wood v. Wood, 4 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 299; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 451; Colegrove v. Horton, 11 Paige (N. Y.), 261; Holmes v. Cock, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 426; McKennan's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 237; Powell v. Thompson, 4 Desau. (S. Car.) 162; Shields v. Shields, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 56.

7. Kelcrease v. Kelcrease, 7 How. (Miss.) 311; Ellis v. McBride, 27 Miss. 155; Hannan v. Day, 105 Mass. 38; National Bank v. Slanton, 116 Mass. 438.

8. Fletcher v. Weir, 7 Dana (Ky.),

An executor who voluntarily gives a bond is, with his sureties, liable upon it.[1] Where an executor has given a bond without sureties and in all other respects has complied with the statute, his bond is an executor's bond, and entitles him to the defence of the Statute of Limitations.[2]

(b) Administrators.—Administrators are universally required to give bonds for the due performance of their duties. Administrators are not chosen by the deceased, and stand in no fiduciary relation to him. They are mere officers of the law.[3]

(c) Bond of Guardian.—A guardian may be appointed by will and exempted from the necessity of giving a bond. Because of the trust imposed on a testamentary guardian, security will not be primarily required, but under certain circumstances the courts will interpose in order to protect the interests of the parties and require proper security.[4] The jurisdiction of courts to appoint guardians is almost wholly regulated by statute.[5] Such bonds

349; Govenor v. Williams, 3 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 152; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 712; Normand v. Grognard, 17 N. J. Eq. 423.

1. Ames v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 15.

2. Wells v. Child, 12 Allen (Mass.), 330, citing Laughton v. Atkins, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 547; Marcy v. Marcy, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 367; Arnold v. Sabin, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 530; Abercrombie v. Sheldon, 8 Allen (Mass.), 532.

Bond to Pay Debts.—In some States if the executor is also the residuary legatee he may give bond conditioned to pay debts and legacies only. Such bond admits assets sufficient to pay all debts and legacies. Colwell v. Alger, 5 Gray (Mass.), 67; Jones v. Richardson, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 247; Clark v. Tufts, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 337; Stebbins v. Smith, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 97; Morgan v. Dodge, 44 N. H. 262; Duval v. Snowden, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 430. The same rule applies to administrator with will annexed. 1 Mass. Stat. 1870, ch. 285.

In some States an administrator with the will annexed must give the ordinary bond of an administrator; in others his bond corresponds with that of an executor. See Ex parte Brown, 2 Bradf. Sur. (Pa.) 22; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 53 Pa. St. 470; McKennan's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 237; Small v. Commonwealth, 8 Pa. St. 101; Johnson's Appeal, 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 317.

The sureties on an official bond are not liable for debts owing the estate which the executor, without fault on his part, could not collect. Lyons v. Osgood (Vt.), 7 Atl. Repr. 5.

3. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 344.

The allegation that an administrator who has resigned has failed to pay to his successor the amount found due on the settlement of his accounts is a sufficient assignment of a breach of the condition of his bond "to administer according to law" the assets of the estate. Slagle v. Entrekin (Ohio), 10 N. E. Repr. 675.

Section 1987, Code of 1880 (Miss.), which provides that an executor or administrator must give bond "in such penalty as will be equal to the full value of the estate, at least," relates to the rights, powers, and duties of an executor or an administrator with the will annexed. The term "estate" in the statute must be construed with reference to the will, and must mean such estate, real or personal, as may be committed thereby to the executor or administrator. Section 1995, Code of 1880 (Miss.), relates to an administrator without the will annexed. Ellis v. Witty, 63 Miss. 117.

4. Green's Estate, 7 Phila. 202; Estate of Stanton, 13 Phila. 213.

The bond required in such case is a continuing bond. State v. Howarth, 48 Conn. 207. As to what constitutes a breach of a continuing bond, see Commonwealth v. Gracey, 96 Pa. St. 70; Lee v. Lee, 67 Ala. 406.

5. Earl v. Crum, 42 Miss. 165; Stewart v. Morrison, 38 Miss. 417; Ex parte Atkinson, 40 Miss. 17.

Appointment without Jurisdiction.—In Crum v. Wilson, 61 Miss. 233, 236, the court said: "When no action is maintainable against the principal because of the inherent nullity of the alleged obligation sued on, no action can be maintained against sureties on such obligation, for a surety is only bound for the acts of his principal, and if there were no are to be liberally construed as to defects of form.[1] Like other bonds they will be held good as far as they comply with the law, and void as to unauthorized portions.[2] As a general rule the penalty of the bond of a guardian should be double the value of the estate.[3] The authority of a guardian to act is derived from his appointment and bond and not from the letters.[4] The execution, delivery, and approval of the bond is a condition precedent to the appointment of a guardian.[5] In Virginia the approval of a guardian's bond is held to be a judicial act.[6] The sureties on official bonds may be released from obligation by making the proper application.[7] Sureties of guardians may be subrogated to the rights of the ward.[8] A guardian's bond is a continuing bond, and he is not in default until he has been denuded of his trust and required by the court to pay over the trust fund, and has failed to do so. The cause of the action against the sureties then accrues.[9]

(d) Receivers.—The obligation of a receiver to give security is founded upon the general practice of equity, and it is within the power of the court to dispense with security when unnecessary.[10] principal there could be no surety. Even after judgment against sureties they are entitled to be relieved if their principal is discharged for some cause going to the original transaction and not merely personal to him." See Brown v. Bradford, 30 Ga. 927; Beall v. Cochran, 18 Ga. 38; Hempstead v. Coste, 36 Mo. 437; Ames v. Maclay, 14 Iowa, 281; Dickson v. Bell, 13 La. Ann. 249; Miller v. G——, 1 Smedes & M. Ch. (Miss.) 524; Boyd v. Swing, 38 Miss. 182.

1. Probate Court v. Strong, 27 Vt. 202; State v. Martin, 69 N. Car. 175; Brunson v. Brooks, 68 Ala. 248. See Alston v. Alston, 34 Ala. 15.

2. Pratt v. Wright, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 175.

3. Bennett v. Byrne, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 216.

Where the estate is very large, courts of chancery have relaxed this rule. Matter of Hedges, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 59.

4. Moxsom v. Sawyer, 12 Ohio, 195.

5. Carpenter v. Sloane, 20 Ohio, 327.

6. Page v. Taylor, 2 Munf. (Va.) 492.

In Kentucky a judge may become personally liable for misconduct in accepting a guardian's bond. The judge must have personal knowledge of the sufficiency of the sureties, or must institute an investigation into the circumstances. Colter v. McIntyre, 11 Bush (Ky.), 565.

7. In Mississippi the chancellor may, of his own motion, summon a guardian to appear and give a new bond. McWilliams v. Norfleet, 60 Miss. 987.

Liability of sureties on guardian's bond. See McWilliams v. Norfleet, 63 Miss. 183.

8. Adams v. Gleaves, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 367.

Neither an original creditor nor a subrogated creditor can enforce any claim to homestead or exempt property. Christian v. Clark, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 630.

9. Moore v. Nichols, 39 Ark. 145; Connelly v. Weatherby, 33 Ark. 658; Moody v. State, 84 Ind. 432.

A contract between a guardian and the administrator of his predecessor by which the administrator is to retain the fund charged against his predecessor, paying interest therefor, is void and will not release the sureties from liability. Neel v. Commonwealth (Pa.), 7 Atl. Repr. 74.

10. Banks v. Potter, 21 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 469.

It was early established in the English court of chancery that a receiver was required to enter into a recognizance with two sureties. Mead v. Orrery, 3 Atk. 235. And it was held that the security could not be dispensed with. Manners v. Furze, 11 Beav. 30. But if the parties agreed upon a receiver to be appointed at their own instance, no security was necessary. Manners v. Furze, 11 Beav. 30; Ridout v. Earl of Plymouth, Dick. 68.

Where a receiver was appointed without salary no bond was required. Gardner v. Blune, 1 Hare, 381.

In the Irish Court of Chancery, a receiver, even those chosen by the parties, must give security. Bailie v. Bailie, 1 Ir. Eq. 413.

Failure to execute a bond in due form is good ground for a nonsuit in an action brought by a receiver in his official capacity. Johnson v. Martin, 1

The title and authority of a receiver depend upon his giving a proper bond according to the terms of his appointment.[1]

6. BONDS UNDER CHARTERS AND BY-LAWS OF CORPORATIONS. —(a) Power of Corporation to Exact Official Bonds.—We must look to the charter of a corporation in order to ascertain its powers. They may be either express or implied. Among the express or implied powers are those of making contracts within the general scope of the business of the corporation, and of enacting by-laws. These by-laws generally provide for taking bonds from the officers and employees of the corporation. "The by-law which authorizes the exaction of a bond is, in effect, a delegation by the legislature of a portion of the legislative power of the State, and to this extent, and for this special purpose, the exaction of such a bond is an exercise of the sovereign power of the State."[2] By-laws must not be contrary to the organic law of the nation, State, or charter of the corporation.[3]

(b) Delivery, Acceptance, and Approval.—Generally, form, manner of delivery, acceptance, and approval of bonds of private corporations are governed by the same rules of law as other official bonds. The provisions of the charters and by-laws of corporations have been held to be merely directory. The fact of delivery, acceptance, and approval must be proved like any other fact.[4]

(c) Corporation may accept its own Members as Sureties on Official Bonds.—In the absence of a prohibitory statute an officer of a corporation may become a surety on the bond of a subordinate which he is required to approve. "A corporation is an artificial person in law, distinct from all the individuals composing it, capable of contracting and bringing suits, and may contract with its own members, or have suits against them, as well as against other persons."[5]

Thompson & C. (N. Y. S. Ct.), 504. As ground for reversing a decree, see Schulte v. Hoffman, 18 Tex. 678.

The mere informality of a receiver's bond cannot be taken advantage of in an action against third parties. Morgan v. Potter, 17 Hun (N. Y.), 403.

Where a creditor of the defendant levies upon the property which is the subject-matter of the receivership, between the date of the appointment and the giving of the required bond, there is no disturbance of the possession of the receiver. Defries v. Creed, 34 L. J. N. S. Eq. 607; Edwards v. Edwards, 2 Ch. D. 291, reversing s. c., 1 Ch. D. 454. Compare Ex parte Evans, 13 Ch. D. 252.

1. Johnson v. Martin, 1 Thompson & C. (N. Y. S. Ct.) 504; Defries v. Creed, 34 L. J. N. S. Eq. 607; Edwards v. Edwards, 2 Ch. D. 291, reversing s. c., 1 Ch. D. 454. Compare Ex parte Evans, 13 Ch. D. 252. See, generally, High on Receivers (2d Ed.), §§ 118–308.

2. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 411; Lionberger v. Krieger (Mo.), 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87.

3. Kearney v. Andrews, 10 N. J. Eq. 70; Carr v. St. Louis, 9 Mo. 191; State v. Curtiss, 9 Nev. 325; Kennebec & Co. v. Kendall, 31 Me. 470; In re Butchers' Beneficial Assoc., 35 Pa. St. 151.

4. Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.) 64; Lexington & Co. v. Elwell, 8 Allen (Mass.), 371; Dedham Bank v. Chickering, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 335; Union Bank v. Ridgely, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 324; Graves v. Lebanon Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.), 23; Engler v. People, etc., Co., 46 Md. 322; State Bank v. Chetwood, 8 N. J. L. 1; Amherst Bank v. Root, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 522.

Written approval of bond of bank cashier is not necessary. Bostwick v. Van Voorhis, 91 N. Y. 352; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 337.

5. Amherst Bank v. Root, 2 Metc.

(Mass.) 522, 534, per Shaw, C. J. See Morawetz on Corporations (2d Ed.), ch. 1.

When an officer of a bank is prohibited by law from becoming surety on the bond of a subordinate he cannot evade the law by indemnifying other sureties by giving them a mortgage on his property. In such a case the obligation of indemnity and the mortgage are void. Jose v. Hewett. 50 Me. 248, 251.

If the officer who becomes surety resigns before the acceptance of the bond, the obligation becomes valid. Franklin Bank v. Cooper, 36 Me. 179; s. c., 39 Me. 542. See Morawetz on Private Corporations (2d Ed.), ch. 1.

Sureties—How affected by Increase of Principal's Duties.—The sureties upon an official bond are not discharged by the imposition of new duties which are distinct and separable from those protected by the bond, unless they impede or render impossible the duties guaranteed against.

In Mayor, etc., v. Kelly, 98 N. Y. 467; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 303, the court says: "Where the new employment is separate and distinct and in no respect essentially interferes with the duty covered by the bond, the imposition of such added duty is wholly a matter between the employer and servant with which the sureties have no concern. For misconduct as to the new employment the bondsmen are in no manner responsible, and have no right to complain so long as the added and separable duties do not prevent or tend to prevent the proper and just performance of those which are guaranteed. In such case, if misconduct occurs, the sole question is whether it was a violation of the duties guaranteed, or of those outside of the bond and its protection."

In People v. Vilas, 36 N. Y. 459, it was held that the sureties upon the bond of a public officer are not discharged by the imposition upon the principal of new duties of a similar nature and character by the legislature. To the same effect see Commonwealth v. Holmes, 25 Gratt. (Va) 771; Hatch v. Inhabitants of Attleborough, 97 Mass. 533; United States v. Kilpatrick, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 720; White v. Fox, 9 Shepley (Me.), 341; Colter v. Morgan, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 278; German American Bank v. Auth, 87 Pa. St. 416; Kindle v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 586; Rochester City Bank v. Elwood, 21 N. Y. 88.

In Gaussen v. United States, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 584, the court says: "If it be conceded, as it may be, that the addition of duties different in their nature from those which belong to the office when the officer's bond was given will not impose upon the obligor in the bond, as such, additional responsibilities, it is undoubtedly true that such addition of new duties does not render void the bond of the officer as security for the performance of the duties as first assumed. It will still remain a security for what it was originally given to secure." Compare Pybus v. Gibbs, 6 Ell. & B. (88 Eng. C. L.) 902; Bonar v. McDonald, 3 N. L. Cas. 226; Bartlett v. Atty.-Gen., Parker, 277; Napier v. Bruce, 8 C. & F. 470.

The increase of the stock of a bank will not release the sureties on the bond of the cashier. Lionberger v. Krieger (Mo.), 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87.

In Eastern R. Co. v. Loring, 138 Mass. 381; s.c., 19 Rep. 436, the bond was conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of a ticket agent "which are or may be imposed upon him under this or any future appointment." The agent's salary was increased from $1000 to $1300 a year. The stock of the company was increased from $2,853,400 to $4,667,600, and the business was extended from 1040 miles to 2250 miles. Notwithstanding these changes the sureties were held not discharged, for the reasons that there was no change in the office, that the nature of the duties remained the same, and that the increase of business was fairly contemplated in the bond, looking at the character of the position which the agent held. Railroad Co. v. Goodwin, 3 Wels. Hurl. & C. 320; Morris Canal v. Van Vorst, 21 N. J. L. 100; Strawbridge v. B. & O. R. Co., 14 Md. 360.

Change of Statutory Duties.—The sureties of an official are generally liable for the faithful performance by him of all duties imposed by statute, whether before or after the execution of the bond, provided they are within the scope of the office. Governor v. Ridgway, 12 Ill. 14; Compher v. People, 12 Ill. 290; People v. Leet, 13 Ill. 261; Smith v. Peoria Co., 59 Ill. 412; People v. Tompkins, 74 Ill. 482; People v. Vilas, 36 N. Y. 459; Mayor of New York v. Silberns, 3 Abb. Pr. New Cas. (N. Y.) 236; Commonwealth v. Holmes, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 771; Commonwealth v. Galbert's Admr., 5 Bush (Ky.), 438; United States v. Gaussen, 2 Woods (U. S.), 92; Postmaster-General v Munger, 2 Paine (U. S.), 189; King v. Nichols, 16 Ohio St. 80; State v. Bradshaw, 10 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 229; Dawson v. State, 38 Ohio St. 1; Board of Supervisors v. Clark, 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 405; s.c., 92 N.Y. 391.

But a total change of the functions of (a) Official Bond designed to effect an Illegal Purpose.—An official bond executed in furtherance of an illegal purpose is void. An omission to comply with the provisions of a directory statute will not render void the bond of an agent transacting the business.[1]

(e) Action in Name of Corporation.—In accordance with the general rule that where a contract is made with an agent who has no beneficial interest in the transaction suit must be brought in the name of the principal, it is held that when a bond is made to the "directors" of a corporation suit may be brought upon it by the corporation in the corporate name.[2]

7. IMPERFECT OFFICIAL BONDS.—Official bonds are entitled to the special remedies and processes granted by statute, while common-law or voluntary bonds stand upon the same footing as ordinary contracts.[3] A voluntary bond not being illegal or against the policy of the law may be good as a common-law bond, although through some defect it is not a good statutory bond.[4] If the office may discharge the sureties. Van Epps v. Walsh, 1 Woods C. C. 598; Fielden v. Lahens, 6 Blatchf. C. C. 524; Romans v. Peters, 2 Rob. (La.) 479; Denio v. State, 60 Miss. 949.

As to when sureties will be held liable for special fund collected by authority of a particular law, see State v. Hathorn, 36 Miss. 491; McGuire v. Bry, 3 Rob. (La.) 196; State v. Rhoades, 7 Nev. 434; State v. Watson, 38 Ark. 96.

The imposition upon the county treasurer of the duty of keeping large sums of money in addition to the usual and ordinary duties of the office does not discharge the sureties upon his bond. Board of Supervisors v. Clark, 92 N. Y. 391; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 405.

Sureties upon bond of a municipal officer are not liable for money received by the principal outside the line of his duty. United States v. White, 4 Wash. C. C. 414; People v. Pennock, 60 N. Y. 421; Saltonberry v. Laucks, 8 La. Ann. 95; State v. White, 10 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 442; Nolly v. Calloway Co. Ct., 11 Mo. 447.

The sureties on bond of a receiving-teller of a bank are liable for his defalcations while acting as general teller. Detroit Sav. Bank v. Zeigler (Mich.), 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 332, 335.

The sureties on bond of a cashier are not discharged because at the time the bond was given the cashier was a defaulter and the bank failed to ascertain and disclose the fact. Brown v. Mt. Holly Nat. Bank (N. J. L.), 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 339; s. c., 45 N. J. L. 360; Bostwick v. Van Voorhes, 91 N. Y. 353; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 337.

1. Washington, etc., Co. v. Colton, 22 Conn. 42, 50

Where a bank establishes an agency in a State and takes a bond from the agent in charge of it, the sureties on the bond may set up the illegality of the bond in an action against them for the penalty. Bank of Newberry v. Stegall, 41 Miss. 142; Thorne v. Travellers, etc., Co., 80 Pa. St. 15.

An express company which had not complied with the law was not allowed to recover on the bond of an agent, although the court intimated that as between the company and the agent the latter might be held liable as upon an implied assumpsit to pay over the money. Daniels v. Barney, 22 Ind. 207.

2. Bayley v. Onondaga, etc., Co., 6 Hill (N. Y.), 476; Pigott v. Thompson, 3 Bos. & P. 147; Gilmore v. Pope, 5 Mass. 491; Taunton, etc., v. Whiting, 10 Mass. 327; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 124; Commercial Bank v. French, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 486; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 280.

3. Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674.

4. Lane v. Kasey, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 410; Rowlet v. Eubank, 1 Bush (Ky.), 477; State v. Thompson, 49 Mo. 188; Gathwright v. Calloway Co., 10 Mo. 663; Freeman v. Davis, 7 Mass. 200; Burroughs v. Lowder, 8 Mass. 373; Morse v. Hodsdon, 5 Mass. 314; Howard v. Brogan, 21 Me. 358; Kavanagh v. Saunders, 8 Me. 482; Winthrop v. Dockendorff, 3 Me. 378; McGowen v. Deyo, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 340; Classen v. Shaw, 5 Watts (Pa.), 468; Williams v. Shelby, 2 Oreg. 144; Fellows v. Gilman, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 414.

A bond required by the selectmen of a town from a tax collector without the a bond be drawn so as to include all the obligations imposed by statute and to allow every defence given by law, it is valid although slightly variant from the prescribed form.[1] But if the condition of a bond be contrary to the statute it is void.[2] If a part be in pursuance of the statute and another part otherwise, it will not avoid the bond altogether unless the statute so enacts.[3]

A statutory bond is vitiated by the omission of a material condition required by the statute.[4] But a superadded condition unauthorized by the statute will be regarded as mere surplusage and rejected.[5] No breach can be assigned in such part of the condition.[6] Upon a common-law bond there can be but one recovery, and bonds intended to be official but which fall short of the requirements of the statute are not entitled to the privileges accorded to official bonds.[7]

An official bond in which the conditions are less onerous than required by statute is good as a common-law bond, and the obligors are bound to the full extent of its terms.[8] In Illinois the filing of an insufficient bond by a justice of the peace does not entitle him to induction into office.[9]

The bond of an officer is valid as a common-law bond when regular in other respects, although payable to an obligee other than as required by statute.[10] sanction of any statute will not be regarded as a voluntary bond. Montville v. Henghler, 7 Conn. 543; Monell v. Sylvester, 1 Me. 248.

1. Commissioner v. Way, 3 Ohio, 103; Skellinger v. Yendes, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 306.

2. "The statute is a tyrant—when he comes he makes all void; but the common law is like a nursing father—makes void only that part where the fault is, and preserves the rest." Maleverer v. Redshaw, 1 Mod. 35.

3. State v. Layton, 4 Harr. (Del.) 512; Justices v. Winn, Dudley (Ga.), 22; Central Bank v. Kendrick, Dudley (Ga.), 66; U. S. v. Brown, Gilp. 155; Justices v. Smith, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 473; Hay v. Rogers, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 225; Cobb v. Curtis, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 235; Speck v. Comw., 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 324.

4. Dixon v. United States, 1 Brock. C. C. 177; United States v. Ginder, 1 Brock. C. C. 190; United States v. Morgan, 3 Wash. C. C. 10; United States v. Gordon, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 287.

Statutory bonds may be valid although not strictly complying with the terms of the statute, if the object of the statute is not defeated thereby. Nunn v. Goodlett, 10 Ark. 89.

5. United States v. Ginder, 1 Brock. C. C. 195; Dixon v. U. S., 1 Brock. C. C. 177; Walker v. Chapman, 22 Ala. 116; Wood v. State, 10 Mo. 698; Shunk v. Miller, 5 Pa. St. 256.

6. Hall v. Cushing, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 404; Sanders v. Rives, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 109.

7. Stephens v. Crawford, 3 Ga. 499. See Stephens v. Crawford, 1 Ga. 574; s. c., 44 Am. Dec. 680; Crawford v. Howard, 9 Ga. 314.

8. People v. Slocum, 1 Idaho, 62.

9. 8 Ill. 57.

10. Governor v. Humphreys, 7 Jones (N. Car.), 258; Williams v. Ehringhaus, 3 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 297; Iredell v. Barbee, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 250; United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock. C. C. 115.

Bonds Payable to Wrong Obligee.—Where no form is prescribed, a bond to the selectmen is a bond to the town. Horn v. Whittier, 6 N. H. 88; Moore v. Graves, 3 N. H. 408.

Where a bond purporting to be official is made payable to official persons whom the statute does not authorize to become the obligees, the successors of such obligees cannot maintain an action on the bond. Stevens v. Hay, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 229; Overseers, etc., v. Sears, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 126; Cutts v. Parsons, 2 Mass. 440; White v. Quarles, 14 Mass. 451; Jansen v. Ostrander, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 670; Kennell v. Etheridge, 3 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 360; Pickering v. Pearson, 6 N. H. 559; Governor v. Twitty, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 153; Jones v. Wiley, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 146; Calhoun v. Sunford, 4 Porter (Ala.) 345; Hibbetts v. Canada, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 465; Stuart v. Lee, 3 Call (Va.), 364.

A voluntary bond is, between the parties, both in law and equity, a gift of the money secured by it.[1] Such a bond when entered into by competent parties, founded on a good consideration and for a lawful purpose, is good and valid at common law.[2]

8. PENALTY AND BREACH OF CONDITION OF OFFICIAL BONDS. —If no specific penalty is inserted in an official bond the sureties are nevertheless liable for the loss or injury sustained, where their obligation is otherwise explicit.[3] That the penalty is for an amount in excess of the amount required by statute does not impair its validity.[4] While it is a general rule that in all conditional bonds the sum stipulated to be paid upon a breach will be construed as a penalty, yet, if the penalty or forfeiture is prescribed by statute, courts of equity will not mitigate the forfeiture because it would be in contravention of the legislative will.[5]

"Cases of agreements and conditions of the party and of the law are certainly to be distinguished. You can never say that the

A bond which is not a probate bond made payable to a probate judge and his successor cannot be sued on by his successors. White v. Quarles, 14 Mass. 451.

Public officers can maintain action as successors only when expressly provided by statute. Overseers, etc., v. Sears, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 126; Governor v. Twitty, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 153; Jones v. Wiley, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 146; Hibbetts v. Canada, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 465; Calhoun v. Lundsford, 4 Porter (Ala.), 345; Stuart v. Lee, 3 Call (Va.), 364. Compare Horn v. Whittier, 6 N. H. 88; Tyler v. Hand, 7 How. (U. S.) 573.

But all such bonds are good as common-law bonds, and may be enforced by suit in the name of the obligees or their personal representatives. Sweetser v. Hay, 2 Gray (Mass.). 49; Thomas v. White, 12 Mass. 369; Horn v. Whittier, 6 N. H. 88; Governor v. Allen, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 176; Van Hook v. Barnett, 4 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 268; Justices v. Smith, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 472.

Where a statute requires a bond to be made payable to a township and instead was made payable to the "people of the State of Michigan," the township cannot maintain an action on the bond. It is payable to a different political organization. Town of La Grange v. Chapman, 11 Mich. 499.

Who may Bring Suit on Irregular Official Bond.—In Tennessee it is held that when a statute directs bonds for the public benefit to be made payable to an officer having legal succession, it is payable to the officer, and the successor, whether described in the statute or bond by name or not, may maintain an action. Polk v. Plummer, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 500; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 566.

An action on an official bond should be brought in the name of the obligee, or, when payable to a State or official personage, in the name of such person "to the use" of the party in interest. In Alabama when a bond is made payable to the wrong obligee and the officer has acted under it the "person aggrieved" has, by statute, all the remedies which he might have maintained on a regular statutory bond. Rev. Code Ala (1876), § 171, 181; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Lewis v. Lee Co., 66 Ala. 480.

Where an officer takes a bond from an agent or deputy, and delegates to him a part of his official duties, such bond is in no sense an official bond, and suit must be brought in the name of the obligee and not the State. Galbreath v. Gaines, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 568.

1. Handy v. Phila., etc., R. Co., 1 Phila. 31.

2. Archer v. Hart, 5 Fla. 234.

A bond voluntarily given by a son for the debt of his father is good. Murrell v. Greenland, 1 Desau. (S. Car.) 332.

A voluntary bond payable immediately after the death of the obligor is a valid debt against the estate of the deceased obligor, except as against the creditors, and it will be preferred in preference to a will previously made. Isenhart v. Brown, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 341; Candor's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 119.

3. Noble v. Hime, 12 Neb. 193.

4. In re Read, 34 Ark. 239; Graham v. Commr's Jefferson Co., 66 Ind. 386.

5. Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 457.

law has determined hardly, but you may that the party has made a hard bargain."[1]

Where a penalty is a fixed forfeiture for the violation of public law it is not to be taken as fixing the maximum of damages.[2]

When an officer receives trust funds and deposits them in bank to his own credit, or mixes such funds with his own money, and it is lost, there is a breach of his bond.[3] A failure to pay over money due from an officer to the government when required by law so to do is a breach of his bond, and an action can be commenced at once without waiting to obtain a judgment against the delinquent officer.[4]

The death of the principal obligor in a bond has been held to be such a breach as to subject his sureties to liability on it.[5] The bond of a constable conditioned simply that he "shall faithfully perform all the duties of a constable in the service of all civil process that may be committed to him" is not broken by a failure to pay over money paid to the officer after the service of process and before the rendition of judgment.[6]

There is no breach of an official bond where there is no violation of duty.[7] Where the obligation is to do a certain thing or to save the obligee from a liability, there is a breach whenever there is a failure to do the stipulated thing or the liability becomes fixed. But if the undertaking is to indemnify against damages, there is no breach until actual damage is suffered.[8] Where an officer refuses or fails to perform the condition of his bond within a reasonable time,[9] a breach occurs. A surety cannot be held liable for any extra-official act of the principal, and such act cannot constitute a breach of an official bond.[10] Sureties on official bonds are ordinarily responsible only for defaults of their principal in the nature of misfeasance in office, and not generally for malfeasance.[11]

In Massachusetts a town-treasurer is liable as an insurer for money actually received. "His obligation is not regulated by the

1. Peachy v. Duke of Somerset, 1 Strange, 447, 453.

Where bonds are given not to defraud the revenue a breach is considered a crime, and "this court," says Lord Hardwicke, "will not relieve for that reason." Benson v. Gibson, 3 Atk. 395. See also Treasurer v. Patten, 1 Root (Conn.), 260; Keating v. Sparrow, 1 Ball. & B. 367.

By relieving from penalties and forfeitures incurred in violation of the revenue laws the court would virtually repeal a statute. Powell v. Redfield, 4 Blatchf. C. C. 45.

The penalty in a bond given pursuant to an act of Congress is a forfeiture inflicted by the sovereign for a breach of its laws. United States v. Montell, Taney Dec. C. C. 47.

2. Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436.

3. State v. Roberts, 21 Ark. 260; Wren v. Kirton, 11 Ves. 380; Draper v. Joiner, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 614.

4. United States v. Babbitt, 95 U. S. (5 Otto) 334.

5. Allen v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 252.

6. City of Boston v. Moore, 3 Allen (Mass.), 126.

7. Turpin v. McKee, 7 Dana (Ky.), 301.

8. Gilbert v. Wiman, 1 N. Y. 550; Rockfellow v. Donnelly, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; Chace v. Hinman, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 452; Kip v. Brigham, 7 John. (N. Y.) 168; Thomas v. Allen, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 145; Churchill v. Hunt, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 321; Warwick v. Richardson, 10 Mees. & W. 284; Cutler v. Southern, 1 Saund. 116, note.

9. Mills v. Sugg, 3 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 77.

10. Governor v. Perrine, 23 Ala. 807.

11. Governor v. Hancock, 2 Ala. 728.

law of bailments. . . . He is a debtor, an accountant bound to account for and pay over the money he has collected. The loss of his money, therefore, by theft or otherwise is no excuse for nonperformance. This is founded on the nature of his contract and considerations of public policy." [1]

In Minnesota the loss of public funds by robbery is a breach of the official bond of the custodian, however innocent he may be.[2] Loss occasioned by a deviation from the ordinary routine of official duty at the request of the party to be benefited by the act is not a breaeh of the officer's bond.[3] A sheriff and the sureties on his official bond are liable for the acts and omissions of the former's deputies, but the liability is purely civil.[4] "An officer who begins the execuion of final process must complete it." Consequently a deputy of an outgoing sheriff is responsible on his bond for money part of which was collected before the termination of his principal's term of office, and part afterwards, the deputy having been retained by the sheriff's successor.[5] A public officer is liable only to the person to whom he owes a particular duty.[6] A sheriff is liable for his neglect in a pending suit only to the plaintiff or defendant in that suit.[7] When the condition of a bond is possible when the bond is executed, but before it can be performed it becomes impossible by the act of God or of the

1. Inhabitants of Hancock v. Hazzard, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 112; Inhabitants of Colerain v. Bell, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 499; United States v. Prescott, 3 How. (U. S.) 578.

2. County of Redwood v. Tower, 28 Minn. 45; County of Hennepin v. Jones, 18 Minn. 199; County of McLeod v. Gilbert, 19 Minn. 218.

3. Skinner v. Wilson, 61 Miss. 90; Simms v. Quinn, 58 Miss. 221.

An officer may defend an action for not returning an execution by showing that he acted according to the instructions of the plaintiff. Robinson v. Coker, 11 Ala. 466; Norris v. State, 22 Ala. 524; Kennedy v. Smith, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 472; Robinson v. Harrison, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 489; Granberry v. Crosby, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 579; Bassett v. Bowmar, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 325.

Where a deputy-marshal allowed the name of an obligor in a replevin bond to be erased under the instructions of plaintiff's attorney, it was held that no action could be maintained on the official bond of the principal. Rogers v. The Marshal, 1 Wall. (68 U. S.) 644, 654; s. c., 4 Myers, Fed. Dec. §§ 309, 310.

Strict compliance will be required with the terms of a statute which renders a sheriff liable for failing to return an execution which was irregular and wrongful. Moore v. McClief, 16 Ohio St. 50; Bank, etc., v. Domigan, 12 Ohio, 220; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 475; Duncan v. Drakely, 10 Ohio, 47; Conklin v. Parker, 10 Ohio St. 28; Langdon v. Sunmers, 10 Ohio St. 77.

4. State v. Nichols, 39 Miss. 318; Foote v. Van Zandt, 34 Miss. 40.

5. Larned v. Allen, 13 Mass. 295.

6. State v. Harris, 89 Ind. 363.

7. Harrington v. Ward, 9 Mass. 251; Compton v. Pruitt, 88 Ind. 171; Gardner v. Heartt, 3 Denio (N. Y.). 232; Bank of Rome v. Mott, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 554.

A recorder who gives an erroneous certificate is responsible only to the person to whom he gives it. Wood v. Ruland, 10 Mo. 143.

The publisher of the newspaper having the largest circulation could recover damages from the postmaster for denying to him the publication of the list of letters uncalled for, although it was the duty of the postmaster to give the printing to the paper having the largest circulation. Strong v. Campbell, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 135.

"The law does not attempt to give full reparation to all parties injured by a wrong committed. . . . It is only the proximate injury that the law endeavors to compensate; the more remote comes under the head of damnum absque injuria." Dale v. Grant, 34 N. J. L. 142.

obligee, or performance becomes unlawful, the obligation is discharged.[1]

9. SUMMARY REMEDIES ON OFFICIAL BONDS.—In many States judgment may be rendered on an official bond on motion. All such statutes which tend to abbreviate the ordinary course of procedure are in derogation of the common law and must be strictly construed.[2] Such statutes are not unconstitutional as infringing the right to a trial by jury. The existing law enters into and becomes a part of a bond; and if the law authorizes summary proceedings at the time the bond is executed, the parties are liable to the operation of the law.[3] The foundation of the summary proceedings is the default or misfeasance of the officer, and not the bond. But the motion cannot be sustained unless the bond is valid. "For assuredly if the sheriff and his sureties could not be made liable in an action on the bond by reason of its invalidity, they could not be held liable in this summary mode of proceeding if the bond were void."[4] In some States it is provided that notice of such motion need be served on the officer only, and that such service will warrant a judgment against the sureties. If the sureties do not appear, the fact of suretyship must be proved.[5]

1. Badlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 287; U. S. v. Dixey, 3 Wash. 15; U. S. v. Mitchell, 3 Wash. C. C. 93; Baylies v. Fettyplace, 7 Mass. 338; Blake v. Niles, 13 N. H. 459; Oline v. Alter, 14 Mo. 185; Mounsey v. Drake, 10 John. (N. Y.) 27.

The condition of a bond is not impossible when it may be performed by the aid of the obligee. If the obligee neglect or refuse to act, the obligation is saved. Pindar v. Upton, 44 N. H. 358.

2. Dawson v. Shaver, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 204; Hasbrogs v. Hastings, 1 Salk. 212.

3. Lewis v. Garrett, 5 How. (Miss.) 434; Wells v. Caldwell, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 441; Burk v. Levy, 1 Rand. (Va.) 2; Van Zant v. Waddell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 260; Tipton v. Harris, Peck (Tenn.), 414; McWhorter v. Marrs, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 63; Johnson v. Atwood, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 225; Bank of Columbia v. Okley, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 235.

4. Paddleford v. Moore, 32 Miss. 622.

5. Reid v. Planters' Bank, 3 Ala. 712; Harris v. Bradford, 4 Ala. 214.

In Mississippi notice must be served on both principal and sureties. If they desire to deny their liability as sureties they must crave oyer of the bond and plead non est factum. Hamblin v. Foster, 4 Smed. & M. 139; Lewis v. Garrett, 5 How. (Miss.) 434.

The plaintiff may enter a motion against an officer and all his sureties on a joint and several bond, or dismiss as to part of the sureties. McCrosky v. Riggs, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 712.

The liability of the officer must be first fixed unless he has died, been removed, or cannot be found. Code of Miss. (1880) § 325.

In Tennessee, in Rice v. Kirkman, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 415, it was held that a judgment by motion against a sheriff and four sureties out of five was void on the ground that "a judgment on motion being in derogation of common law must be strictly taken. As a consequence of this rule, it has always been held that a statute giving a remedy by motion has no latitude of construction. The statute gives judgment on motion against a sheriff and his securities. If the judgment be taken against less than the number of the securities, are the terms of the statute complied with? Is it against his securities? Surely not. A judgment is given by motion against two. Upon what principle shall you have it against one? If it be done, it must be by construction, and that a very dangerous construction." This ruling was followed in Fay v. Britton, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606.

A nol pros as to one of the sureties is fatal to the entire motion. Chairman v. Sawyers, 1 Thompson Cases (Tenn.), 55.

If one of the sureties is dead, a motion will lie against the principal and the surviving sureties. Rice v. Kirkman, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 418; Houston v. Dougherty, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 505; Hearn v. Ewin, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 399. But otherwise if it is the principal who is dead. Gibson v. Martin, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 127.

5. Actions on Bonds.—(a) In General—Upon What State of Facts.—Where a money bond is payable in instalments, debt will lie thereon after all the instalments have become due, but not to recover the amount of one instalment.[1] Separate actions will not lie where more than one instalment is due.[2] Where all the instalments have become due the remedy is by action for breach of covenant.[3]

An obligee in a bond to indemnify him for having given a receipt to an officer for goods attached is damaged by an attachment of his property in a suit on his receipt, and may thereupon bring an action on his bond.[4]

Where covenants are secured by a penalty, the obligee may sue, at common law, in debt for the penalty, or bring an action on the covenants. In covenant he may recover as often as the breach arises, even beyond the penalty. But having elected to proceed in debt on the penalty, he cannot then go on the covenant.[5]

The right of action on a bond to indemnify against "liability" is complete when the obligee becomes legally liable,[6] as by a judgment.[7] Action may be brought on a bond payable on demand without demand.[8]

The omission of the name of one of the sureties by mistake will not invalidate a judgment rendered against the principal and the other sureties. Jones v. Henderson, 1 Thompson Cases (Tenn.), 53. See Th. & St. Code of Tenn. § 2789.

Against whom Summary Proceedings may be Taken.—This varies according to the different statutes. In Virginia the summary remedy is allowed against sheriffs, sergeants, coroners, collectors, their deputies, and the sureties on their respective bonds. Code of Va. ch. 49, §§ 45, 46, 47, 48, p. 479, and under certain circumstances against constables and sureties. Code of Va. (1873) ch. 147, § 12, p. 1006.

In Alabama in proper cases against sheriffs, coroners, and other executive officers; against clerks of court, registers, and prosecuting officers; against judges of probate, tax-collectors, tax assessors, treasurers, and other persons receiving money belonging to the county, and against defaulters of school money. Code of Ala. (1876), title 2, ch. 3, p. 763. See Armstrong v. Holley, 29 Ala. 305; Marion Co. v. Brown, 43 Ala. 112.

1. State v. Scoggin, 10 Ark. 326.

2. See Hopkins v. Deaves, 2 Brown (Pa.), 93; Black v. Caruthers, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 87; Warwick v. Matlock, 7 N. J. L. 163.

3. State v. Scoggin, 10 Ark. 326.

4. Otis v. Blake, 6 Mass. 336. And see Murrell v. Johnson, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 450; Kip v. Brigham, 7 John. 168. See, generally, Heralson v. Mason, 53 Mo. 211; Western B. v. Sherwood, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 383; Howard v. Farley, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 260; Spear v. Stacy, 26 Vt. 61; Stickney v. Stacy, 1 Fost. (N. H.) 61; Cottle v. Payne, 3 Day (Conn.), 289; Chapman v. Lathrop, 39 Mo. 431; Hoxie v. Weston, 19 Me. 322; McNinch v. Ramsey, 66 N. Car. 229; Garlington v. Priest, 13 Fla. 559; Haughton v. Meroney, 65 N. Car. 124; Thorrington v. Smith, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 1.

As to fact necessary to sustain an action on a bond given to relieve a party from arrest on mesne process, see Webster v. Bailey, 56 Me. 364.

5. New Holland Turn. Co. v. Lancaster Co., 71 Pa. St. 442; Perkins v. Lyman, 11 Mass. 83; McLaughlin v. Hutchins, 3 Ark. 207.

6. Bancroft v. Winspear, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 209; Chase v. Hinman, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 452.

7. Jones v. Childs, 8 Mo. 121.

8. Husbands v. Vincent, 5 Harr. (Del.) 268.

A bond payable "with interest from date, the interest payable annually," is due and payable from date, and no demand is necessary before suit. Knight v. Bradswell, 70 N. Car. 709.

Where the obligor in a bond for the conveyance of land has conveyed the land to a third person by deed of warranty made "subject to the incumbrance created by the bond," no demand for a conveyance need be made on the obligor

In an action on a bond payable on a day certain at a place named, it is not necessary to allege demand of payment at the time and place mentioned.[1]

(b) Official Bonds.—Official bonds are designed to secure the interests of private individuals as well as the public. Suit must be brought in the name of the obligor, and no suit can be instituted for the benefit of any person other than the obligor without the consent of the obligor. When the object of the suit is to protect private interests it is usually brought in the name of the obligee "for the use of" or "at the relation" of the real party in interest. In Maine it is provided by statute that when suit has been instituted on an official bond, any person who has a cause of action arising out of the bond may file an additional declaration and become a co-plaintiff. This statute does not take away the right to institute more than one action on the bond.[2] In some States the action must be wrought in the name of the real party in interest, but an exception is made in the case of bonds payable to the State.[3] But the general rule is that the right of action on a bond belongs to the party having the legal interest, and suit must be brought in the name of the obligee.[4] In an action of debt on a bond the amount of the penalty and not damages laid in the declaration gives jurisdiction.[5] Only the courts of the State where prior to the commencement of an action on the bond. McCarthy v. Mansfield, 56 Me. 538.

1. Langston v. S. C. R., 2 S. Car. 248; Truman v. McCollum, 20 Wis. 379. See Bulkley v. Finch, 37 Conn. 71.

The maker of a bond has the whole day on which it falls due in which to pay it. Bachery v. Brown, 17 Ark. 442.

2. White v. Wilkins, 24 Me. 299.

Official statutes cannot be made available to protect private interests without a statutory provision to that effect. In State v. Nichols, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 657, the court says: "The bond is given to the State; is intended to enforce the performance of official duties, and to indemnify the public against official delinquency. Such is the plain meaning of its terms, and from the nature of the case, unless otherwise directed by statute, would be its object. It certainly was not intended to be operative in favor of individual citizens for any wrong done to them by the officer." This was a case in which the officer overdid his duty. For the neglect of duty is assigned. See Crews v. Taylor, 56 Tex. 461; Fox v. Thibault, 33 La. Ann. 32. (Both cases under statute.)

3. Carmichael v. Moore, 88 N. Car. 29.

In Arkansas bonds for the payment of costs are made payable to the defendant, and are designed to protect the officers of the court for fees as well as the defendant. In cases the bond may be put in suit by the person entitled to the fees, without the consent of the obligee. Boyd v. Crutchfield, 7 Ark. 149.

4. Inhabitants of Northampton v. Elwell, 4 Gray (Mass.), 81; Sanders v. Filley, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 554; Johnson v. Foster, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 167; Millard v. Baldwin, 3 Gray (Mass.), 484; Fuller v. Fullerton, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 59; Jansen v. Ostrander, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 670; Armine v. Spencer, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 406; Lawton v. Erwin, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 233; Skellinger v. Yendes, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 306.

A county treasurer entitled to receive the funds may maintain a suit against his predecessor and the sureties on his official bond for a balance due the county. Hunnicutt v. Kirkpatrick, 39 Ark. 172; Haynes v. Butler, 30 Ark. 69; Jones v. State, to use, etc., 14 Ark. 170.

The auditor cannot bring suit in his own name and official character for demands claimed by the State. See Taylor v. Auditor, 2 Ark. 174.

An action cannot be brought by an official obligee after his retirement from office. It should be by his successor. Bagby v. Baker, 18 Ala. 653.

The real party in interest must show his interest before he can recover. Ing v. State, 8 Md. 287.

5. Sims v. Harris, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 57; State v. Rousseau, 71 N. Car. 194; Stone an official bond is authorized to be executed have jurisdiction in an action on such bond.[1] In an action on a bond for the payment of money or for the performance of official duties judgment will be rendered for the amount of the penalty to be discharged by the payment of the amount found due.[2] The person who first sues on a bond is entitled to the whole of the penalty if his demands amount to so much.[3] The State cannot maintain an action on a sheriff's bond for a breach from which no damage resulted.[4] A judgment against the officer individually is not a necessary preliminary to an action on his official bond.[5] An action cannot be maintained on an official bond for money received by the officer which he had no authority to receive, although such authority was afterwards conferred upon him by statute.[6] A judgment for the

v. Murphy, 2 Iowa, 35; Boomer v. Saine, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 525.

1. Pickering v. Fish, 6 Vt. 102.

Suit cannot be sustained in Ohio on an official bond executed in Indiana so as to charge the obligor with the Indiana statutory penalties for misfeasance in office. "The penal laws of one State can have no operation in another State, or be enforced by the courts of another. Penal laws are strictly local, and affect nothing more than they can reach." Indiana, to use, etc., v. John, 5 Ohio, 218; Falliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Blkst. 135.

In Pickering v. Fish, 6 Vt. 102, the court says that "whenever a bond, although taken in pursuance of a statutory provision, is left, as to its operation and effect, to be governed by common-law rules, there can be no obstacle to enforcing it anywhere, like any other instrument of the kind. What we decide is this: when an official bond is, by the law of the State where it is executed, to have effect only in a particular way, and to be enforced only in a particular mode pointed out by those laws, the enforcing it in that mode is the exclusive province of the tribunals of that State."

2. State ex rel. v. Luckey, 51 Miss. 528; Harrison v. Park, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 174.

In Iowa it was held that a justice of the peace had jurisdiction where the amount claimed was $100 and the penalty of the bond was $300. The amount claimed, not the penalty, was the criterion. Stone v. Murphy, 2 Iowa, 35; Boomer v. Laine, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 525.

In Illinois a distinction is made between official bonds and other bonds on condition. On the latter a justice has no jurisdiction when the penalty exceeds $100. Snowhook v. Dodge, 28 Ill. 63.

In North Carolina, on the contrary, the penalty is held to be the sum demanded, which controls jurisdiction. State ex rel. v. Porter, 69 N. Car. 140; State ex rel. v. Rousseau, 71 N. Car. 194.

In some States the question of jurisdiction is affected by the form of action. Sims v. Harris, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 55; Wetherill v. Inhabitants, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 357.

3. Dallas v. Chaloners, 3 Dall. (3 U. S.) 501, note; Christman v. Commonwealth, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 381. See also Lea v. Yard, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 95, note; McKean v. Shannon, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 370.

4. Commonwealth v. Reed, 3 Bush (Ky.), 516.

Loss or damage to the plaintiff is essential to the maintenance of an action on a bond. Jones v. Biggs, 1 Jones (N. Car.), 364.

Two Bonds Given by Same Officer.—Where an officer has given two bonds, one general and one special, parties having a cause of action for a breach of one bond cannot seek redress by an action on the other. State v. Felton, 59 Miss. 402; State v. Mayes, 54 Miss. 417.

5. State v. Leeds, 31 N. J. L. 185; Douglass v. Howland, 34 Wend. (N. Y.) 35; McKellar v. Bowell, 4 Hawks. (N. Car.) 34; Colter v. Morgan, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 278; Governor v. White, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 441; s.c., 24 Am. Dec. 763. Compare Comm'rs v. Newby, 1 McCord (S. Car.). 184; Bailey v. Butterfield, 14 Me. 112; People v. Easton, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 297 (left to the discretion of the court).

The plaintiff may elect either to sue the officer alone as for trespass or to join his sureties as defendants. Charles v. Hoskins, 11 Iowa, 329.

6. "For acts not within the line of official duty and authority, not under color of office, he may incur personal, not official, responsibility, and in that personal responsibility the sureties on his penalty of a bond on account of one breach does not prevent suit and recovery for a subsequent breach.[1]

BONUS.—A premium given for a loan or other privilege;[2] an official bond are not involved." McKee v. Griffin, 66 Ala. 211; Coleman v. Ormond, 60 Ala. 328; Brewer v. King, 63 Ala. 511; Drake v. Webb, 63 Ala. 596; Morrow v. Wood, 56 Ala. 1; Kelly v. Moore, 51 Ala. 364; Moore v. Madison Co., 38 Ala. 670; McElhaney v. Gilleland, 30 Ala. 183.

1. Ahl v. Ahl, 60 Md. 207.

2. Where by the provisions of an act chartering a railroad company the counties through which it ran were authorized to aid in its construction by sale or mortgage of the swamp lands within each county, before any such sale, however, the sense of the qualified voters being first taken; and the county of Wayne in the State of Illinois held such an election, in which the question was thus proposed to the voters: "For appropriating the swamp lands of Wayne county as a bonus to any company for building a railroad through said county; Against the same," on the question as to the validity of the mortgage made in accordance with the vote taken, it was held by the court, Hunt, J.: "The objection to the word 'bonus' in the proposition submitted to the voters of Wayne county is not valid. This submission, in connection with the general subject of a failure to comply with the requisites prescribed by the statutes, has been already discussed. Upon its individual merits we are also of the opinion that the objection is not valid. It is a verbal criticism merely—an objection to the words and not to the substance of the submission. A proposition was submitted to the voters, of which the affirmative was in these words: 'For appropriating the swamp lands of Wayne county as a bonus to any company for building a railroad through said county.' It is said that the word 'bonus' condemns the submission; that this word means a gratuity, a voluntary donation, a gift, and that a town or county cannot, although it have the direct authority of the legislature, give away its property. When this question is properly before us it will be disposed of. It does not, however, arise in this case. In the first place, if it be assumed that the word is correctly defined as a gift or gratuity, that meaning is controlled and limited by the connection in which it is here used, to wit, that in consideration of it the company receiving the lands will undertake to build a railroad through the county. It is not simply a bonus, but a bonus to any company who shall undertake the great task, which, it is loudly complained, has not yet been performed by any one. But, secondly, the meaning of the word 'bonus' is not that given to it by the objection. It is thus defined by Webster: 'A premium given for a loan or charter or other privilege granted to a company; as, the bank paid a bonus for its charter; a sum paid in addition to a stated compensation.' It is not a gift or gratuity, but a sum paid for services, or upon a consideration in addition to or in excess of that which would ordinarily be given." Kenicott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 452, 470.

Where an act providing for the establishment of savings and building associations, passed in 1850, authorized such associations "to receive for such loan or loans, in addition to the legal rate of interest, such a bonus as the parties in each case may agree upon," it was held that a promissory note given by a member to the association for the payment of $6000 with interest, and a bonus of three fourths of one per cent per month, in addition to the interest, both interest and bonus payable monthly in advance, though not entirely void, was usurious, both in respect to that part of it denominated a 'bonus' and to the interest; the court, Waite, C. J., saying: "It is apparent that the legislature intended to authorize an association formed under the statute to receive a compensation, in addition to the legal rate of interest, for a loan of money made to one of their members. But did they intend to exonerate all contracts made with their members from the operation of the usury laws? We think not. Had they so intended, they would have used language more appropriate for such purpose. They naturally would have said that such associations might loan money to their members at such rates of interest, or upon such terms, as the parties might agree. This language would have been plain, intelligible, and liable to no misconstruction. But they have simply authorized the receipt of a bonus for the loan in addition to the legal interest. By that expression we think that they meant something definite; something distinct and independent of the interest in the acceptation of that term: a definite sum extra dividend given to the members of a joint-stock company out of accumulated profits.[1]

BOOK. (See also COPYRIGHT.)—A printed literary composition.[2]

for a loan for a specified time, and not anything which the parties, in their contract, might choose to denominate a 'bonus.'" Mut. Savings Bank and Building Assoc. v. Wilcox, 24 Conn. 147, 154.

1. The word "bonus" is often used in this sense in those cases in which the question has arisen as to whether the extra dividend so declared is capital or interest, and should belong to the life-tenant or the remainderman. For examples see Paris v. Paris. 10 Ves. Jr. 185; Witts v. Steere, 13 Ves. Jr. 363, where it was held that distribution by the Bank of England of extraordinary profit beyond the regular dividend, not by way of increased dividend, but as bonus, is to be taken as capital. Norris v. Harrison, 2 Mad. Ch. 268; Vaughan v. Wood, 1 Myl. & K. 403. But where there is merely an increase in the dividend and no express declaration of an extraordinary distribution, it is not a bonus, and belongs to the life-tenant. Barclay v. Wainewright, 14 Ves. Jr. 66.

So in Brander v. Brander, 4 Ves. Jr. (Sumner's Ed.) 800, note, where it is said: "It is now well settled, by a long series of decisions, that whenever a question on the subject arises between a tenant for life of bank stock and a remainderman, any extraordinary division of profits by the bank amongst the proprietors, unless such bonus is clearly and distinctly made as dividend only, must be considered as an accretion of capital; to the interest upon which, however (and to the interest only), the tenant for life will be entitled." Clayton v. Cresham. 10 Ves. Jr. 290; Hooper v. Rossiter, 1 McClel. 536.

2. In deciding that a musical composition published on a single sheet of paper is privileged as a book within the statute of 8 Anne, c. 19, § 1, the court, Ellenborough, C. J., accepted the argument of Erskine in Hime v. Dale, sitting after May term, 1803, as follows: "There is nothing in the word 'book' to require that it shall consist of several sheets bound in leather or stitched in a marble cover. 'Book' is evidently the Saxon boc, and the latter term is from the beech tree, the rind of which supplied the place of paper to our German ancestors. The Latin word liber is of a similar etymology, meaning originally only the bark of a tree. 'Book' may therefore be applied to any writing, and it has often been so used in the English language. The horn book consists of one small page, protected by an animal preparation, and in this state it has universally received the appellation of a 'book.' So in legal proceedings the copy of the pleadings after issue joined, whether it be long or short, is called the paper book or the demurrer book. In the Court of Exchequer a roll was anciently denominated a 'book,' and so continues in some instances to this day. An oath as old as the time of Edward I. runs in this form: 'And you shall deliver into the Court of Exchequer a book fairly written,' etc. But the 'book' delivered into court in fulfilment of this oath has always been a roll of parchment." Clementi v. Golding, 2 Campbell, 25, and notes; s c., 11 East, 244; White v. Geroch, 2 B. & Al. 298; Clayton v. Stone, 2 Paine (U. S.), 382. See also Drury v. Ewing, 1 Bond (U. S.), 540: Scoville v. Toland, 6 West L. J. 84.

The act of 5th and 6th Vict. c. 45, § 2, declares that a book "shall be construed to mean and include every volume, part or division of a volume, pamphlet, sheet of letterpress, sheet of music or dramatic piece;" under which it was held that a newspaper was not a "book" within the said act. Cox v. Land and Water Journal Co., L. R. 9 Eq. Cas. 324.

The University of Cambridge has concurrent authority with the King's Printer to print acts of Parliament and abridgments thereof under a grant of authority to print omnes et omnimodos libros. Basket v. Cambridge University, 1 Wm. Bl. 105.

A periodical or magazine is a book within the meaning of 5 and 6 Vict. c. 45. § 24. Henderson v. Maxwell, L. R. 4 Ch. Div. 163.

A part of a work published at uncertain intervals, of which thirty copies only are printed, twenty-six of which are subscribed for, the principal costs of publication being defrayed by funds devised by a testator for that purpose, is not a "book" demandable by the public libraries under 53 Geo. III. c. 156. Trustees of the British Museum v. Payne, 2 Y. & J. 166.

BOOKS AS EVIDENCE. (See also ALMANAC; EVIDENCE.)

1. Principles Governing Admission.—These principles may be stated as follows: (a) Records of judicial or legislative proceedings or other matters of a public nature are admitted in evidence at the common law on the ground that they have been made by authorized and accredited agents appointed for the purpose, and also because of their publicity. (b) Semi-public records, public as to a certain part of the community because they proceed from an authority which it recognizes, but private as to the rest of the community, are admissible, as between persons to whom they are such, on the same grounds as wholly public records. (c) Declarations or entries against the interest of the party making them are admissible as secondary evidence and as likely to be true. The best evidence is the testimony of the party making such entries. (d) Entries made in the usual course of business by one whose duty it was to make them are admissible for the reason that, being made in the usual routine of business, they are part of the res gestæ. (e) Original entries have been made admissible in many of the different States either by modifications of the rules of the common law by the courts or by act of legislature on the ground of necessity.

2. What Books Admissible.—The books which under these principles are generally admitted as evidence may be classified as follows: 1. Books containing statutes, official registers, judicial records, histories, books of science or art; 2. Account-books, memorandum-books, corporation-books, letter-books; 3. Books of original entries.

1. STATUTE BOOKS—PAMPHLET LAWS—DIGESTS.—The Supreme Court of the United States and the courts of many of the States have held that a printed volume purporting on its face to contain the laws of a sister State is admissible as prima-facie evidence to prove the statute laws of that State.[1]

1. Young v. Bank of Alexandria, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 384; Thompson v. Musser, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 458; Biddis v. James, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 321; Muller v. Morris, 2 Barr (Pa.), 85; Raynham v. Canton, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 293; Kean v. Rice, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 203; State v. Stade, D. Chipm. (Vt) 303; Comparet v. Jernegan, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 375; Taylor v. Bank of Illinois, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 585; Taylor v. Bank of Alexandria, 5 Leigh (Va.), 471; Clarke v. Bank of Mississippi, 5 Eng. (Ark.) 516; Allen v. Watson, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 319; Hale v. Rose, 2 Penning-

2. JOURNALS OF EITHER HOUSE.[1]

3. OFFICIAL REGISTERS.—These books are only evidence of such facts as are required to be recorded in them.[2]

So parish registers, registers of baptisms or births, prove only those facts of marriage or baptism.[3]

Registers kept at the navy office are admissible to prove the death of a sailor, the date thereof, the ship he belonged to, and the wages due him.[4] ton (N. J.), 591; Eagan v. Connelly, 107 Ill. 458. Contra, Van Buskirk v. Mulock, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 185.

Some States have expressly enacted this rule. Connecticut, Rev. Stat. 1849, title 1, § 131; Michigan, Rev. Stat. 1846, c. 102, § 78; Mississippi, Hutchins. Dig. 1848, c. 60, art. 10; Missouri, Rev. Stat. 1845, c. 59, §§ 4–6; Wisconsin, Rev. Stat. 1849, c. 98, § 54; Maine, Rev. Stat. 1840, c. 133, § 47; Massachusetts, Rev. Stat. 1836, c. 94, § 59; New York, Stat. 1848, c. 312; Florida, Thomp. Dig. p. 342; North Carolina, Rev. Stat. 1837, c. 44, § 4.

The common law of a sister State may be shown by books of reports of adjudged cases accredited in that State. Inge v. Murphy, 10 Ala. 885.

Such copies are admitted in Massachusetts if purporting to be published under the authority of the State government or if commonly admitted as evidence in the courts of that State. Pub. Stat. c. 169, § 71; Ashley v. Root, 4 Allen (Mass.), 504.

Other States have similar statutes. Clanton v. Barnes, 50 Ala. 260; Martin v. Payne, 11 Tex. 292; Merrifield v. Robins, 8 Gray (Mass.), 150.

A copy purporting to be printed by "order of the governor" was admitted, the statute providing for admission of copies printed by authority of the State government of another State. Wilt v. Cutler, 38 Mich. 189. Cf. Pac. Pneumatic Gas Co. v. Wheelock, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 566.

Experts or books of decisions may prove the unwritten law of another State in Massachusetts. Pub. St. c. 169, § 72; Penobscot & C. R. Co. v. Bartlett, 12 Gray (Mass.), 244; Craigin v Lamkin, 7 Allen (Mass.), 395; Ames v. McCamber, 124 Mass. 90.

Provisions of Congress for the authentication of the acts of the legislatures of the several States are not regarded as exclusive of any other which the States may respectively adopt. Lothrop v. Blake, 3 Barr (Pa.), 483. See Grant v. H. Clay Coal Co., 80 Pa. St. 208.

Under the act of Congress, the seal of the State is a sufficient authentication without the attestation of any officer or other proof, and the seal will be presumed prima facie to have been affixed by the proper officer. U. S. v. Amady, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 392; U. S. v. Johns, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 412; State v. Carr, 5 N. H. 367.

A book of statutes printed by a private printer is not admissible as evidence of the statutes of another State. Bostwick v. Bogardus, 2 Root (Conn.), 250; Canfield v. Squire, 2 Root (Conn.), 300.

Books of a township trustee are public records in Indiana. Anderson School Township v. Thompson, 92 Ind. 556.

The bank of Alabama and its branches being public property, its books are public writings of which sworn copies may be produced wherever the books themselves would be evidence. Crawford v. Branch Bank at Mobile, 8 Ala. 79.

1. Jones v. Randall, Cowp. 17; Root v. King, 7 Cowen (N. Y.), 613; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 299.

2. Fitler v. Shotwell, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 14; Brown v. Hicks, 1 Pike (Ark.), 232; Haile v. Palmer, 5 Mo. 403.

3. A parish register is evidence only of the time of the marriage. Doe v. Barnes, 1 M. & Rob. 386.

A register of baptism is only evidence of that fact. Rex v. North Petherton, 5 B. & C. 508; Clark v. Trinity Church, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 266. Nor is the mention of the child's age in the register of christenings proof of the day of his birth to support a plea of infancy. In re Wintle, L. R. 9 Eq. 373. Nor the date of the birth, made in a registry of births kept under a law which requires the register to enter all births in his parish, except so far as it shows the birth of the person before the date of the entry. In re Wintle, L. R. 9 Eq. 373.

4. Wallace v. Cook, 5 Esp. 117; Barber v. Holmes, 3 Esp. 190; Rex v. Fitzgerald, 1 Leach Crim. Cas. 24; Rex v. Rhodes, 1 Leach Crim. Cas. 29.

Records kept by employees of the signal service are evidence of what it was their duty to record. Evanston v. Gunn, 99 U. S. 660. So lighthouse records. The Maria Das Donas, 32 L. J. Adm. 163.

The prison calendar, to prove the commitment and discharge and date thereof of a prisoner.[1]

Books of assessment of public taxes, to prove the assessment of the taxes upon the individuals or the property therein mentioned.[2]

A ship's logbook, required to be kept by law, is an official register as to all required to be kept in it,[3] and prima-facie evidence thereof.[4]

Requisites.—It is sufficient that the book be directed by the proper authority to be kept, and that it be kept according to such directions to give it the character of an official register.[5]

4. JUDICIAL RECORDS.—Books containing records of judicial proceedings, when obtainable, are always admissible whenever the proceeding, the record of which is contained therein, is admissible, and when not obtainable exemplifications or sworn copies thereof.[6] (See also JUDGMENT, VERDICT, etc.)

Copies.—Immediate copies of contents of all books, themselves evidence when produced, if duly verified, will be admitted.[7]

5. HISTORIES.—Any approved public and general history may prove remote transactions of a general and public nature, but not particular facts or customs.[8]

1. Salte v. Thomas, 3 B. & P. 188; Rex v. Aickles, 1 Leach Crim. Cas. 435.

2. Doe v. Seaton, 2 Ad. & El. 178; Doe v. Arkwright, 2 Ad. & El. 182; Rex v. King, 2 T. R. 234; Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Peters, 349; Com. v. Heffron, 102 Mass. 148. Also prima facie of domicile. Doe v. Cartwright, Ry. & M. 62; 1 C. & P. 218.

3. Abbott on Shipping, p. 468, n.; Orne v. Townsend, 4 Mason C. C. 544; Cloutman v. Tunison, 1 Sumner C. C. 373; U. S. v. Gibert, 2 Sumner C. C. 19, 78; The Sociedade Felix, 1 W. Rob. 303.

4. Ship's Registry is not of the nature of a public register, and is therefore only prima-facie evidence of ownership, and only when that is incidental and is no evidence at all when in favor of the person claiming. Weston v. Penniman, 1 Mason C. C. 306; Bixby v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 86; Colson v. Bensey, 6 Greenl. (Me.) 474.

Logbook of man-of-war, but not of merchant vessel, may prove time of sailing.

Logbook kept by mate is not evidence on an indictment against the crew for a revolt and confining the master. U. S. v. Sharp, Peter's C. C. Rep. 119.

5. The records of the alcade are evidence of that officer's acts. Kyburg v. Perkins, 6 Cal. 674.

Whenever the written record of the transactions of a public officer is an appropriate mode of discharging the duties of the office, it is his duty to keep that record, whether required by law or not, and such record is a public record. Coleman v. Com., 25 Gratt. (Va.) 865.

The register in these cases must be required by law and kept in the manner required. Newham v. Rathby, 1 Phillim. 315; Read v. Passer, 1 Esp. 213; Cood v. Cood, 1 Curt. 755.

An authenticated copy of a foreign register, legally kept, is admissible in the United States. Kingston v. Lesley, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 383.

6. "The records and judicial proceedings of the courts of any State shall be proved or admitted in any other court within the United States by the attestation of the court and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate of the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate, as the case may be, that the said attestation is in due form. And the said records and judicial proceedings, authenticated as aforesaid, shall have such faith and credit given to them, in every court within the United States, as they have by law or usage in the courts of the State from whence said records are or shall be taken." Afterwards extended to courts of Territories within the jurisdiction of the United States. 1 U. S. Stat. at Large (L. & B.'s Ed.). 122; 2 U. S. Stat. at Large (L. & B.'s Ed.), 298.

7. Lynch v. Clerke, 3 Salk. 154.

The handwriting of the recording or attesting officer is prima facie presumed genuine. Bryan v. Wear, 4 Mo. 106.

8. Morris v. Harmer, 7 Peters (U. S.).

6. BOOKS OF SCIENCE OR ART.—These are usually inadmissible.[1]

7. FAMILY BIBLES—BIRTH, BAPTISM, AND BURIAL REGISTERS.—The law resorts to hearsay evidence in cases of pedigree on the ground of the interest of the declarants knowing the connections of the family. On this ground these books are admitted.[2]

8. BOOKS OF ACCOUNT.—All books in which entries are made in the usual course of the business of the person making them whose duty it was to do so or against whose interest the entries are.

554; Case of Warren Hastings, 30 St. Tr. 492; Com. v. Alburger et al., 1 Wharton (Pa.). 469; Gregory v. Baugh, 4 Rand. (Va.) 611.

Appleton's Cyclopedia was not allowed to prove that an island was known among merchants and insurers as a guano island. Whiton v. Alb. City Ins. Co., 109 Mass. 24.

The Northampton tables, however, are good evidence on the probable duration of life. Schell v. Plumb, 55 N. Y. 592. As also the Carlisle tables. Donaldson v. Miss., etc., R., 18 Iowa, 280.

Upon the question of the existence of a foreign law, it is proper to read to the jury from printed books of decisions and history. Charlotte v. Chouteau, 33 Mo. 194.

Matters of history are evidence in certain cases, but must be shown if the history is not admitted. Woods v. Banks, 14 N. H. 101.

Admitted with great caution to establish possession one hundred and forty years previous. Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 633.

1. Such books are not to be read before a jury, either as evidence or argument. Com. v. Wilson, 1 Gray (Mass.), 337; Washburn v. Cuddihy, 8 Gray (Mass.), 430; Ashworth v. Kittredge, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 193.

Medical works by authors admitted or proven standard are admissible with proper explanation of technicalities. Stoudenmeier v. Williamson, 29 Ala. 558; Meckle v. State, 37 Ala. 139; s. c., Ala. Sel. Cas. 45; Bowman v. Woods, 1 Greene (Iowa), 441. Contra, Carter v. State, 2 Ind. 617.

A book on diseases of a horse inadmissible on a trial of whether a horse had a certain disease at a particular time. Harris v. Panama R. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 7; Fowler v. Lewis, 25 Tex. 380.

The court in its discretion may prohibit the reading of medical or scientific books to the jury as a matter of evidence or authority. Luning v. State, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 178; Wale v. Dewitt, 20 Tex. 398. Cf. Washburn v. Cuddhy, 8 Gray (Mass.), 430.

Scientific books may not be given in evidence nor read to the jury except to contradict an expert who bases his opinion upon them. Bloomington v. Schrock, 110 Ill. 219; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 678.

Extracts from medical books may not be read in evidence. Epps v. State, 102 Ind. 529.

Books of science and art are prima-facie evidence of fact, of general notoriety and interest, by Cal. Code, § 1936; but a medical work is not evidence of the nature of injuries. Gallagher v. Market St. R. Co., 67 Cal. 13.

2. Entries in registers of burial, birth, and baptism, and in a family Bible, of the death, birth, or baptism of a member of a family are evidence to show the time of a person's decease, birth, or baptism. Lewis v. Marshall, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 469; Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175; Woodard v. Spiller, 1 Dana (Ky.), 179; Greenwood v. City of New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 426; Berry v. Aring, 2 Harr. & G. (Md.) 103; Kennedy v. Doyle, 10 Allen (Mass.), 161; Jackson v. King, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 237; Hunt v. Johnson, 19 N. Y. 279; Arms v. Middleton, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 571.

A statement of age of person may be corroborated by record in family Bible. Wiseman v. Cornish, 8 Jones L. (N. Car.) 218.

Previous entries by a father in a book must be accounted for before a copy therefrom into the family Bible by a son can be admitted. Curtis v. Patton, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 135.

An entry of birth in a baptism register is not evidence of the birth. Clark v. Trinity Church, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 266.

Where better evidence is obtainable these entries are not admissible, such as father or mother or one who testifies from recollection. Taylor v. Hawkins, 1 McC. (S. Car.) 164; Campbell v. Wilson, 23 Tex. 252.

Entries in a family Bible are admissible, even without proof of having been made

Entries made in the usual course of the business or duty of the party making them, charging himself, need not be against his interest.[1]

Entries by which receivers, stewards, bailiffs, and other agents charge themselves with the receipt of money are in general admissible to prove the facts entered.[2]

Evidence going to show that the party making the entry had knowledge of the fact is unnecessary.[3]

9. MEMORANDA.—Memoranda of acts by a person who is dead and whose duty it was, in the course of the business he had undertaken, to do the acts and make the memoranda of them can be adduced upon proof of handwriting and death to prove that the acts were done.[4] by a parent or relative. Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708.

1. State v. Shinborn, 46 N. H. 497; Augusta v. Windson, 1 Appleton, 317; Brewster v. Doane, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 537; Gale v. Norris, 2 McLean (U. S.), 469; Kendall v. Field, 2 Shepley, 30; Doe v. Sawyer, 28 Me. 463; Thomson v. Porter, 4 Strobh. Eq. (S. Car.) 58; Arms v. Middleton, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 571; Chase v. Smith, 5 Vt. 558; Thompson v. Stevens, 2 Nott & McCord (S. Car.), 493.

2. An entry by an agent in his own favor, unconnected with other entries charging himself, is not evidence. Knight v. Marquis of Waterford, 4 Y. & C. 284; Doe dem. Kinglake v. Beviss, 7 C. B. (62 E. C. L. R.) 456. But the mere fact of a balance in his favor will not affect the admissibility of entries charging himself. Williams v. Greaves, 8 C. & P. 592; Rowe v. Brenton, 3 M. & R. 268.

Entries in parish books of receipt of portion of church rates from another township—Outram v. Morewood, 5 T. R. 121; s. c., 3 Wood. 332—in private books of collector of taxes as against his surety—Middleton v. Melton, 10 B. & C. (21 E. C. L. R.) 317—in executor's and trustee's books—Spiers v. Morris, 9 Bing. (23 E. C. L. R.) 687—have all been held admissible.

3. Crease v. Barrett, 1 C. M. & R. 919, where it was said that the absence of such knowledge goes to the weight.

4. Welsh v. Barrett, 15 Mass. 380; Nicholls v. Webb, 8 Wheaton (U.S.), 326.

A magistrate's book of accounts, the magistrate being dead, containing charges for taking acknowledgments, was admitted to show that a deed purporting to have been acknowledged before and witnessed by him could not have been so acknowledged. Nourse v. McCay, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 70.

Books of a bank have been admitted to show receipts and payments against a depositor who has overdrawn, and upon proof of clerk's handwriting if dead or insane. Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 96.

Two undated receipts, with the dated letters which inclosed them, to prove payment; entries in account books of parties for whom payment was made, to prove date and agency of person who paid, said parties being away and the clerk who made the entries being dead, with proof of his death and handwriting, all admitted. Beaver v. Taylor, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 637.

The party's own books are not evidence in his favor though in the handwriting of a deceased clerk, unless containing the original entry. Fendall v. Billy, 1 Cranch C. C. 87; Owen v. Adams, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 72.

All entries made by a person in the regular course of his business before his decease are admissible. So also those by a clerk since dead. But the books must be produced; copies are inadmissible. Gale v. Norris, 2 McLean (U. S.), 469; Bunting v. White, 3 Houst. (Del.) 551.

So a private book of entries of a marshal's official sales, kept by himself as evidence of a particular sale. Linthicum v. Remington, 5 Cranch C. C. 546.

The books of a tax-commissioner out of the State were admitted on proof of handwriting to prove tax-list, without proof that the list was given in on oath. Sutton v. Floyd, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 3.

The proof of the handwriting of the deceased clerk who made the original entries will be admitted to substantiate the book of accounts. James v. Wharton, 3 McLean (U. S.), 492; Hodge v. Higgs, 2 Cranch C. C. 552.

Proof also that decedent was correct

Such entries or memoranda are usually only admitted when the person making them is dead,[1] but it has been urged that the fact of death is not material to the admissibility.[2]

If the party who made the entries can be brought into court it is generally decided to be the better course, though many States have held such books to be independent and primary evidence.[3]

10. CORPORATION BOOKS.—The books of a corporation containing a record of its acts are evidence between members or against the body,[4] but not against strangers.[5] They are evidence and accurate in making charges. Everly v. Bradford, 4 Ala. 371; Grant v. Cole, 8 Ala. 519.

Books of account in which entries were made in the regular course of business by one who would at the time have been a competent witness, since deceased, are admissible; and, the original being lost, a copy supported by oath of person making it is evidence. Bank of Montgomery v. Plannett, 1 Ala. 178; Bute v. Simpson, 4 Ala. 305.

A book of accounts kept by plaintiff in which there were some pencil entries made by defendant's intestate is only evidence as far as the pencil entries. Rembert v. Brown, 14 Ala. 360.

The ordinary rules are not dispensed with because no clerk is kept. Scott v. Coxe, 20 Ala. 294.

Proof that the entries are in handwriting of party is prima facie sufficient. Holliday v. Butt, 40 Ala. 178.

1. State v. Phair, 48 Vt. 366; Whitcher v. McLaughlin, 115 Mass. 167; Augusta v. Windsor, 19 Me. 317; Mulhall v. Keenan, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 342; Bartholomew v. Farwell, 41 Conn. 107.

The death of the treasurer of a corporation must be proved before the corporation books, shown to have been kept by the treasurer in the corporation business and in his handwriting, can be admitted. Chenango Bridge Corporation v. Lewis, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 111.

One who has been out of the State a long time and cannot be procured as a witness has been held as if dead in Connecticut. New Haven, etc., Co. v. Goodwin, 42 Conn. 230.

But the entry must be in the course of the person's duty and against his interest. Webster v. Webster, 1 T. & F. 401.

The entry of a baptism contemporaneously made by a Roman Catholic priest in the discharge of his duty is evidence after his death of the date of the baptism, the book being produced from the proper custody. Kennedy v. Doyle, 10 Allen (Mass.). 161. So the temperature on a given day was proved by a record kept at the State insane asylum. De Armond v. Neasmith, 32 Mich. 231.

2. 1 Greenleaf's Ev. §.

3. Copy of original entries may be admitted upon proof by the agent or clerk who made them. Vinal v. Gilman, 21 W. Va. 301.

Entries made by a clerk which would be admissible were he dead are equally so if he is a foreigner and supposed to be in Australia. Reynolds v. Manning, 15 Md. 510.

Entries made by clerks in the usual course of business, if he be deceased, are admissible, otherwise if he is not out of the jurisdiction of the court. Brewster v. Doane, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 537.

Entries being made by a clerk, he should be called; or if dead or out of the State, his handwriting may be proved. Sterrett v. Bull, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 234; Stiles v. Homer, 21 Conn. 507.

4. Books of a corporation proved to be such are evidence of its acts and proceedings. Owings v. Speed, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 420; Highland Turnpike Co. v. McKean, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 154.

All members of a corporation are chargeable with a knowledge of the entries made by their agent in the course of his business, and the true meaning thereof. Allen v. Coit, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 318.

Entries made by a clerk in books of trustees who are a corporation are not evidence in a cause in which they are interested. Jackson v. Walch, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 226; Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Boraef, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 152; Owings v. Speed, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 420; Lane v. Brainerd, 30 Conn. 565; Jefferson v. Stewart, 4 Harr. (Del.) 82; Fitch v. Pinckard, 5 Ill. 69; Meadow Co. v. Shrewsbury Church, 22 N. J. L. 424; Hamilton Plank Road Co. v. Rice, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Bavington v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 34 Pa. St. 358; McHose v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. St. 32; Corp. of Columbia v. Harrison, 2 Mill Const. (S. Car.) 213.

5. Com. v. Woelper, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 29; Highland Tpk. Co. v. McKean, 10 of the elections of their officers and other corporate acts and proceedings therein recorded.[1] They are evidence not only in the character of account books, etc., but as semi-public records.

Requisites to Admission.—Before corporation books can be admitted as evidence they must be shown to have been publicly kept as such, and that the entries were made by the proper officer or some one authorized to make them during his necessary absence.[2]

11. LETTER-BOOKS.—The letter-book of a party to the cause, it being his habit to keep such book, is evidence.[3]

12. BANK-BOOKS, ETC.—The books of the messenger of a bank and of a notary public, to prove demand of payment from the maker and notice to the indorser of a promissory note, are evidence on the ground of the contemporaneous character of entries made in the ordinary course of business.[4]

13. BOOKS OF ORIGINAL ENTRIES.—Entries made by the parties themselves in books of shopkeepers and others have been received in nearly all the States as evidence in a greater or less de-

Johns. (N. Y.) 154; Merchants' Bank v. Rawls, 21 Ga. 334; Union Bank of Florida v. Call, 5 Fla. 409.

1. Rex v. Martin, 2 Campb. 100; Halleck v. Boylston, 117 Mass. 469; Chase v. Sycamore, etc., R., 38 Ill. 215; Wheeler v. Walker, 45 N. H. 355; New Eng. Mfg. Co. v. Van Dyke, 9 N. J. Eq. 498; Union Canal Co. v. Loyd, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 393; Graff v. Pittsburg, etc., R., 31 Pa. St. 489.

The stock book is not admissible to prove a party a stockholder in an action by a creditor of the company against him. Mudgett v. Horell, 33 Cal. 25.

The books of a corporation as against a member are not evidence of his private contracts or dealings with it. Haynes v. Brown, 36 N. H. 545. Nor the minutes thereof of an agreement by stockholders as individuals not intended to bind the company. Black v. Shreve, 13 N. J. Eq. 455.

Entries in the books of a corporation are, as a rule, competent evidence of the proceedings of the corporation, but such entries are not notice to third persons. Wetherbee v. Baker, 35 N. J. Eq. 501.

2. Highland Turnpike Co. v. McKean, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 154.

Proof that the books are in the handwriting of a person stated to be secretary in the books themselves is not sufficient; he must be otherwise shown to be the proper officer. Highland Turnpike Co. v. McKean, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 154.

Copies.—A copy of an entry in a corporation book is not authenticated by the seal of the corporation; an examined copy must be produced. Stoever v. Lessee, etc., 6 Binney (Pa.), 416.

Seal.—An original corporation book though not under corporate seal is good evidence in a suit by the corporation against one of its members. Fleming et al. v. Wallace, 2 Yeates (U. S.), 120. The seal of a private corporation must be proved by testimony. Dea v. Vreelandt, 2 Halst. Rep. (N. J.) 352; Leasure v. Hillyers, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 313; Foster v. Shaw, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 156; Jackson v. Pratt, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 381.

A copy of the proceedings of an incorporated banking company certified to by the secretary is not evidence in Massachusetts unless sworn to, he not being a certifying officer. Hallowell & Augusta Bank v. Hamlin, 14 Mass. 178; Rust v. Boston Mill Corp., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 158.

It is sufficient to show that the seal is the official seal of the corporate body. Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 307; Chadwick v. Bunting, Ry. & M. (21 E. C. L. R.) 306.

3. Pritt v. Fairclough, 3 Campb. 305; Hagedorn v. Reid, 3 Campb. 377.

The letter-book is evidence that letters copied into it have been sent. But it is not evidence of any other letter in it than those which the adverse party has been required to produce. Sturge v. Buchanan, 2 P. & D. 573; s. c., 10 Ad. & El. 598.

4. Nicholls v. Webb, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 326; Welsh v. Barrett, 15 Mass. 380; Poole v. Dicas, 1 Bing. N. C. 649; Hallidy v. Martinet, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 168; Butler v. Wright, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 369; Hart v. Wilson, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 513; Nichols v. Goldsmith, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 160; New Haven Co. Bank v. Mitchell, 15 Conn. 206; Sheldon v. Benham, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 129.

gree, governed by legislation or decision, to prove the sale and delivery of goods, and the performance of work and labor, and the price for the same.

It is the usual rule that such evidence must be supported by the oath of the party plaintiff, that the book is his book of original entries, that the goods so charged were actually sold and delivered and the services performed, that the items were entered by him at the time of the delivery of the goods or performance of the services or immediately afterwards.

The rules governing the admission of this class of evidence have been more or less modified by statutes making parties competent witnesses or otherwise changing the rules of evidence, and as nearly all the States differ in the application of this principle or in the extent to which it is carried, the law of each State, as nearly as possible, has been stated in the accompanying note.[1]

1. Alabama.—By statute, oaths of a party as to claims not exceeding $20 are received. Code (Ed. 1876), p. 809, § 3616.

Original entries made in the usual course of business contemporaneously by one having personal knowledge of the facts, corroborated by testimony of party if living or by proof of his handwriting, if dead, insane, or out of the jurisdiction. Dismukes v. Tolson, 67 Ala. 386.

Arkansas.—Original books of entries are inadmissible in merchant's favor. Jeffrey v. Schlasinger, Hempst. 12; Bun v. Byers, 10 Ark. 398.

California.—A book of original entries, made at their dates, sworn to by owner, is admissible. Landis v. Turner, 14 Cal. 573. Even to prove money loaned where evidence showed that goods procured had been charged as money loaned. Le Franc v. Hewitt, 7 Cal. 186. Plaintiff's book of accounts is evidence to prove the delivery of goods therein charged when better evidence is not obtainable, though not to render liable as a defendant and co-partner one with whom plaintiff had no direct dealing. Severance v. Lombardo, 17 Cal. 57. The original being lost, the ledger with newspapers containing advertisements may show what items of the advertisement were for benefit of an attorney and what for client. Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569.

Connecticut.—Books of parties containing daily accounts of their business transactions and made in the regular course of their business, are admissible in evidence in their favor in actions of assumpsit and book debt. Smith v. Law, 47 Conn. 431. General Statutes, Revision of 1875, p. 471.

The book is not admissible where money was sent to be applied to a note, and was not so applied, the right to recover arising from subsequent events to the delivery. But only where the right to charge exists at the time of and arises in consequence of the delivery. Bradley v. Goodyear, 1 Day (Conn.), 104.

So where the delivery is in pursuance of special agreement from which the right of action arises. Terrill v. Beecher, 9 Conn. 344; Green v. Pratt, 11 Conn. 205. Nor in case of property loaned and not returned, or for torts, or for a claim for use and occupation. Beach v. Mills, 5 Conn. 493.

The entries are admissible to recover of a father charges against a son, provided he be legally bound for them. Bryan v. Jackson, 4 Conn. 289. For money lent. Clark v. Savage, 20 Conn. 258. For a due bill assigned. Hunt v. Pierpont, 27 Conn. 301.

Charges for goods, services, and money are admissible in case of death. Dwight v. Brown, 9 Conn. 84.

The circumstances in which an entry was made, so long as it was made in the regular course of business, affect only its weight as evidence. 47 Conn. 431.

Colorado.—Books of original entry are admissible upon oath that the same are books of original entries, which were made by himself, just and true, "or by a deceased person, or by a disinterested person non-resident of the State at the time of the trial, and that they were made in the usual course of trade, and of his duty or employment to persons so testifying." General Laws, § 2953. See Farrington v. Tucker, 6 Col. 557.

Delaware.—Book entries, with the plaintiff's oath, are evidence for goods sold and delivered, and other things properly chargeable in an account. Revised Statutes, Ed. 1874, p. 653, § 11. The party shall be subject to cross-examination touching the same.

Cash items; a horse; tollage; tavern expenses; wheat on ground. Townsend v. Townsend, 5 Harr. (Del.) 125. Plans of an architect; the erection of a building. Sloan v. Grimshaw, 4 Houst. (Del.) 326, are not proper items of charge.

The subscription to a newspaper being established by other proof, the annual subscription price may be the subject of a book entry. Ward v. Powell, 3 Harr. (Del.) 379. So lottery tickets are proper items. Bailey v. McDowell, 1 Harr. (Del.) 346. So sawing lumber. Conoway v. Spicer, 5 Harr. (Del.) 425.

Plaintiff may prove books kept by his clerk or agent as well as by himself. Webb v. Pendergrass, 4 Harr. (Del.) 439; Fredd v. Eves, 4 Harr. (Del.) 385.

Florida.—Original entries are admitted under a statute, the credibility going to the jury at law and court in equity. McClellan's Dig. p. 516, § 15.

The entries must be original and contemporaneous, fairly kept erasures and interlineations accounted for, supported by oath that the articles were delivered, the labor and services actually performed, the entries original, and sums charged not been paid. Hooker v. Johnson, 6 Fla. 730.

Georgia.—The code provides for the admission of the books of account of any merchant, shopkeeper, blacksmith, physician, or other person doing a regular business, and keeping entries thereof upon the conditions: 1. That no clerk was kept, or else the clerk was dead or inaccessible. 2. Upon proof of the party's oath being sufficient that the book tendered is his book of original entries. 3. Upon proof by customers that he usually kept correct books. 4. Upon inspection by the court. Code, p. 665, § 3777.

Not evidence of cash items. Petit v. Teal, 59 Ga. 145. Nor the book of a journeyman shoemaker for boots and shoes mended. Schale v. Eisner, 58 Ga. 190.

Witness's statement that he considered his accounts reasonable with the admission that he had never examined the items, and could not say that services charged were actually rendered, is no compliance with requirement that customers should prove books to be kept correctly. Bower v. Smith, 8 Ga. 74.

Transcript inadmissible. Creamer v. Shannon, 17 Ga. 65. Contra, Fielder v. Collier, 13 Ga. 496.

The evidence is only secondary. Slade v. Nelson, 20 Ga. 365. So the sales clerk of the party offering the books being alive and accessible, no account can be proved by the books. Bracken v. Dillon, 64 Ga. 243.

Book entries, properly admitted, are evidence to charge parties, there being no rebutting proof, with the addition of "per Pate" to the entries. Chastain v. Brown, 31 Ga. 346.

Illinois.—Admitted by statute upon oath of any party or interested person that the books are books of original entries made by himself or by a disinterested person, deceased or out of the State, in the usual course of trade, or of the duty and employment to the person so testifying. Hurd's Rev. Stat., p. 506, § 3.

The statute was declaratory of the existing law, except that it permitted the testimony of an interested person. Taliaferro v. Ives, 51 Ill. 247; Kibbe v. Bancroft, 77 Ill. 18.

Substantial compliance with the terms of the statute is sufficient. Presbyterian Church v. Emerson, 66 Ill. 269.

Testimony that the account books of a decedent were the only ones kept by him is equivalent to evidence that they were his books of original entry. Patrick v. Jack, 82 Ill. 81.

A single entry does not make an account book. Kibbe v. Bancroft, 77 Ill. 18.

The fact that goods were charged to the person to whom they were delivered is not conclusive as to whom credit was given. Baird v. Hooker, 8 Ill. App. 306.

Books of account are admissible when copied once a month from a slate, and a careful comparison subsequently made. Redlich v. Bauerley, 98 Ill. 134; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 876.

Indiana.—Plaintiff's books of accounts in which he has charged the items on which he sues are not competent evidence. De Camp v. Vandegrift, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 272.

Entries in private books made in the usual course of business, not being public records or res gestæ, are inadmissible. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Noel, 77 Ind. 110.

Iowa.—Books of account containing entries made in the usual course of business are admissible on the following conditions: 1. The books must show continuous dealings, or several charges against the other party at different times in the same set of books. 2. Party must swear that they are his books of original entries. 3. That the charges were contemporaneous with or near the time of the transactions unless satisfactory reasons appear for not so showing. 4.

Must be verified by party or clerk making them, unless sufficient reason is shown for not verifying. Code, p. 566, § 3658.

The admissibility is for the court, the degree of credit for the jury. Eyre v. Cook, 9 Iowa, 185.

A payment or loaning of money must come within the ordinary business of the party who offers his books to prove them. Veiths v. Hagge, 8 Iowa, 163; Lyman v. Bechtel, 55 Iowa, 437; Cummins v. Hall, 35 Iowa, 253; Sloan v. Ault, 8 Iowa, 229. Nor can small sums of cash be proved. Young v. Jones, 8 Iowa, 219; Sloan v. Ault, 8 Iowa, 229. Nor a special agreement or delivery thereunder, or delivery to a third person. Lyman v. Bechtel, 55 Iowa, 437. Nor an item of an account, "four months' work, $300." Karr v. Stivers, 34 Iowa, 123.

The book must be a registry of business actually done and not of orders, executory contracts, and things to be done subsequently. So a book seeming to be a memorandum or stock book, containing occasional charges, among others one, "Bo't of Livingston's, 25 fat hogs. 12 head delivered immediately, balance when fattened, p'd $15," was not admitted. Hart v. Livingston, 29 Iowa, 217; Whisler v. Drake, 35 Iowa, 103.

Charges made alternatively are admitted after preliminary proof. Burnell v. Dunlop, 11 Iowa, 446.

A single entry will not make a book of original entries. Fitzgerald v. McCarty, 55 Iowa, 702.

Books of account are admissible, though not between parties to the suit, to refute witnesses who have referred to them in their testimony, and especially when they state they only know such matters from having seen them in the books. Davenport v. Cummings, 15 Iowa, 219.

Entries made by a deceased person of his own transactions are admissible in a criminal case only when against interest. State v. Wooderd, 20 Iowa, 541.

Kansas.—Entries are admitted with the usual oath, or on proof of handwriting of deceased maker, or one absent from the State. Comp. Laws, p. 652, § 387; Barons v. Brown, 25 Kan. 410; Rice v. Hodge, 26 Kan. 164.

Kentucky.—A party may testify for himself as to the correctness of original entries made by him against persons who are under no disability other than coverture or infancy and coverture combined in an account book according to the usual course of business, even against a lunatic or decedent, but must produce the book. Bullitt's Codes, p. 125. § 7.

The day-book of the vendor was admitted to prove on whose credit the goods were charged, as sold in an action against one for goods furnished to a third party at his direction. Leisman v. Otto, 1 Bush (Ky.), 228.

Louisiana.—A merchant's books are not evidence in his favor, nor in favor of his creditors, especially where no fraud or collusion between merchant and debtor is shown. Porche v. Le Blanc, 12 La. Ann. 778.

A book-keeper who can only swear that he kept the ledger correctly from the entries furnished him by the partners and other clerks made no original entries himself, and saw no goods purchased, has not sufficiently proven the accounts of his employer. White v. Wilkinson, 12 La. Ann. 359.

Books annually examined by an employer who has also the balance sheets embracing the disputed items semi-annually furnished him are prima-facie evidence for a clerk against the employer. Rayne v. Taylor, 12 La. Ann. 765.

Though the entries in a pass-book have been made by a merchant or his clerk, yet it is evidence against the owner, who is presumed to have examined it, provided he has made no objection to its contents. Succession of McLaughlin, 14 La. Ann. 398. Cf. Didier v. Ange, 15 La. Ann. 398.

Where defendant offers in evidence the credit side of an account copied from a merchant's books, the whole amount must be taken together, but particular items may be shown incorrect. White v. Jones, 14 La. Ann. 681. Entries on the books of an insolvent shown to be in good faith, at the time stated within the knowledge of the witnesses, are sufficient to correct an error in the syndic's tableau of distribution. Hernandez v. Creditors, 15 La. Ann. 87.

Maine.—Books are competent evidence to prove work done, goods delivered, and cash charges to the amount of forty shillings ($6.67). Kelton v. Hill, 58 Me. 114.

They must be supported by oath as given, and in handwriting of owner. Witherell v. Swan, 32 Me. 247; Towle v. Blake, 38 Me. 95; Hooper v. Taylor, 39 Me. 224.

It has been held that books are not proof of delivery of articles whose bulk makes them susceptible of other proof. Leighton v. Manson, 14 Me. 208; Mitchell v. Belknap, 23 Me. 482. Nor delivery to defendant as agent, and an agreement by him to sell on account. Dunn v.

Whitney, 10 Me. 9. Otherwise where the agency is proved aliunde. Soper v. Veazie, 32 Me. 122. Nor by books in handwriting of deceased partner. Godfrey v. Codman, 32 Me. 162. Though the sale can be proved in favor of surviving partners on proof of handwriting. Amee v. Wilson, 22 Me. 116; Mitchell v. Belknap, 23 Me. 482.

Plaintiff can only present his books, verified by a suppletory oath, against the estate of a decedent. The entries unless intelligible in themselves are inadmissible; the explanation must be made by other witnesses than the plaintiff. He cannot testify that charges apparently against third persons were actually against deceased. Nor can defendant give his counter-entries of work done, or prove by his books the rate of wages. Silver v. Worcester, 72 Me. 322.

Maryland.—Entries of things properly chargeable, sworn by the creditor before a justice to be just and true, and that no payment, security, or satisfaction other than is credited has been received, is prima-facie evidence. Stat. 1729, c. 20, s. 9. Limited to accounts not exceeding £10 in the course of a year. Stat. 1785, c. 46, s. 6; Code (Ed. 1878), p. 759, § 43.

Plaintiff's entries and oath are inadmissible beyond this. Owings v. Low, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 134. Nor are they conclusive evidence of credit given. Elder v. Warfield, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 391; King v. Madduse, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 467; Owings v. Henderson, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 142.

The rule has not been changed by the act rendering witnesses competent without regard to interest. Romer v. Jaecksch, 39 Md. 585.

Entries in the day-book of an agent who contracted in his own name are admissible to prove that the contract was made on behalf of plaintiff. Oelrichs v. Ford, 21 Md. 489.

Entries will not prove that a bill of sale was conditional by a vendee, defendant in a suit for repairs of a carriage. Rogers v. Severson, 2 Gill (Md.), 385.

Massachusetts.—Evidence of articles delivered, and work and labor done. They must be supported by oath, may be in ledger form, and the jury judge of their credit. Prince v. Smith, 4 Mass. 455; Coggswell v. Dolliver, 2 Mass. 217; Faxon v. Hollis, 13 Mass. 427; Ball v. Gales, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 49; Pratt v. White, 132 Mass. 478.

They are evidence of money charges to the amount of $6.66. Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 109; Burns v. Fay, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Davis v. Sanford, 9 Allen (Mass.), 216; Turner v. King, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 512. And of articles delivered to any amount. Shillaber v. Bingham, 3 Dane's Abr. (Mass.) 321. Their competency is for the court, and "must be determined by the appearance and character of the book and all the circumstances of the case, indicating that it has been kept honestly and with reasonable care and accuracy, or the reverse." Mathes v. Robinson, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 269.

The charge of a commission on the books of a ship-broker is not admissible. Winsor v. Dillaway, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 221. Nor an item of $308 for seven gold watches. Bustin v. Rogers, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 346. Nor to show amount, in a suit for money paid by mistake, received by defendant. Townsend Bank v. Whitney, 3 Allen (Mass.), 454; Maine v. Harper, 4 Allen (Mass.), 115. Nor a book of credits, to show that plaintiff did not work on certain days by defendant's omission to give credit therefor. Morse v. Potter, 4 Gray (Mass.), 292.

Entries made from memorandum brought home by servants of a painter were admitted, the servants also testifying. Morris v. Briggs, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 342. And by a wife by her husband's direction and in his presence, proved by her. Littlefield v. Rice, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 287. So also entries made by one partner, though the goods were delivered by another, supported by oaths of both. Harwood v. Mulry, 8 Gray (Mass.), 250. Though where the entries were copied from the delivery book of a drayman, the drayman not being produced, they were rejected. Kent v. Garvin, 1 Gray (Mass.), 148.

There need be no measure, weight, or quantity given in connection with a decedent's book, as far as its admissibility is concerned. Pratt v. White, 132 Mass. 478.

A book in the ledger form belonging to a blacksmith, such being the customary form for country mechanics, was admitted. Faxon v. Hollis, 13 Mass. 427. See also Gibson v. Bailey, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 537, where it was held that there was no objection to entries in pencil. But where the ledger did not appear to be the book of original entries, it was rejected. Stetson v. Wolcott, 15 Gray (Mass.), 545.

The ledger should be produced where an account has been transferred to it from a day-book, that the other party may have advantage of any credits. The oath must be taken in court and not by a commission. Frye v. Barker, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 65.

A transcript proved by the witness who transcribed it is admissible in case the ledger and day-book have been accidentally destroyed by fire, and the items actually stood in the book and were correctly transcribed. Holmes v. Marden, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 169; Prince v. Smith, 4 Mass. 455.

A charge for three months' labor is inadmissible. Henshaw v. Davis, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 146. So a gross charge for putting up stair, some of the work having been done a year before, though not finished till just before the charges. Earle v. Sawyer, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 142.

The oath of an administrator or executor is sufficient to the books of a decedent. Pratt v. White, 132 Mass. 478. Or a guardian of a lunatic. Holbrook v. Gay, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 215.

A charge on books of account to a person is competent but not conclusive evidence that a contract was made with him or to his credit. James v. Spaulding, 4 Gray (Mass.), 451; Swift v. Pierce, 13 Allen (Mass.), 136; Allen v. Fuller, 118 Mass. 402; Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 505. Compare Somers v. Wright, 114 Mass. 171, where it was held that plaintiff's books of account were inadmissible to prove a promise of payment by defendant.

Field v. Thompson, 119 Mass. 151, was decided on the authority of Somers v. Wright, 114 Mass. 171, and a book of accounts was not admitted to show that articles were charged to defendant and credit given to him alone. See Keith v. Kibbe, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 35; Banfield v. Whipple, 10 Allen (Mass.), 27; Swift v. Pierce, 13 Allen (Mass.) 136.

Meals furnished from day to day to one and his servants are a proper subject of book charge. Tremain v. Edwards, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 414.

The freight books of a railroad corporation, supported by the testimony of the clerk who made them, that he had no doubt of their correctness, though having no personal recollection thereof, are admissible. Briggs v. Rafferty, 14 Gray (Mass.), 525. So a plaintiff's time-book, kept in a tabular form, is evidence of his apprentice's as well as his own labor. Mather v. Robinson, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 269. Compare Morse v. Potter, 4 Gray (Mass.), 292.

Michigan.—The New York rule is recognized. To render books of account kept by the party himself, he must show that he had no clerk; that some of the articles charged have been delivered; that the books produced are his account-books, and that he keeps fair and honest accounts by the testimony of those who have dealt and settled accounts with him. Jackson v. Evans, 8 Mich. 476.

A servant who keeps a slate of sales of brick made during the day, reporting them to his employer at night, who makes entries thereof in his books, is not a clerk, and his books are books of original entries. Jackson v. Evans, 8 Mich. 476.

Mississippi.—"Where the party introduces evidence satisfactory to the presiding judge, showing that the books are books of account, containing entries contemporaneous with the transactions under investigation, and the books themselves are unobjectionable and perfectly fair, they may be admitted." Bookout v. Shannon, 59 Miss. 378. See Moody v. Roberts, 41 Miss. 74; Hunter v. Wilkinson, 44 Miss. 721.

Copies are inadmissible. Moody v. Roberts, 41 Miss. 74.

One who makes entries must have personal knowledge of the facts. Chicago, St. Louis, etc., R. v. Provine, 61 Miss. 474.

Missouri.—Books of original entries are not admissible. Hinrick v. McPherson, 20 Mo. 310.

New Hampshire.—If the party who offers his books of account as evidence with his oath shows upon examination that better evidence can be adduced, that the charges are in the handwriting of another, or the article was delivered to or by a third person, the book is to be rejected. Eastman v. Moulton, 3 N. H. 156; Cummings v. Nichols, 13 N. H. 421; Webster v. Clark, 30 N. H. 245.

The books are competent evidence to prove payments of money not exceeding $6.67. Bassett v. Spofford, 11 N. H. 167; Rich v. Eldridge, 42 N. H. 153. But not to show that they were made on any particular debt. Bailey v. Harvey, 60 N. H. 152. And not to prove collateral facts. Woods v. Allen, 18 N. H. 28; Woodes v. Dennett, 12 N. H. 510; Brown v. George, 17 N. H. 128; Batcheldor v. Sanborn, 22 N. H. 325; Putnam v. Goodall, 31 N. H. 419.

The rule has not been changed by the statutes allowing parties to testify in chief. Swain v. Cheney, 41 N. H. 234.

No particular form is needful. Bassett v. Spofford, 11 N. H. 167; Cummings v. Nichols, 13 N. H. 421. The charges should be separate and special. Swain v. Cheney, 41 N. H. 234. Entry may be in lead-pencil. Stone v. Sprague, 24 N. H. 310; True v. Bryant, 32 N. H. 241. May be in ledger form. Wells v. Hatch, 43 N. H. 246.

Book of intestate, with administrator's oath, is admissible. Dodge v. Morse, 3 N. H. 232. But a memorandum-book, of which all the charges, save the one against defendant, were of money paid and received, is not. Richardson v. Emons, 23 N. H. 220. Nor charges on loose sheets of paper. 21 N. H. 219.

A charge of the goods upon plaintiff's books to the third person may not be conclusive that the goods were sold on his credit; but it may be shown that they were so charged for the convenience and at the request of defendant. Walker v. Richards. 41 N. H. 388.

New Jersey.—The party's books and handwriting having been proved by a witness, they are evidences of work done and articles delivered.

A book exhibiting no mutual dealings between the parties, and containing a single charge of cash lent, is inadmissible to sustain a demand for money lent. Carman v. Dunham, 11 N. J. L. 189; Inslee v. Prall, 23 N. J. L. 457; affirmed, 1 Dutch. 665. In the latter case a book containing charges for cash, interspersed with charges of a proper kind against other persons in regular order as to date and sum through a course of some years; though two of the charges agreed with the indorsements on the notes, others with credits on defendant's own books, and there was evidence as to the correctness of others. See Craven v. Shaird, an earlier case, 7 N. J. L. 345, where it was held that a party's book is evidence of money lent, but not conclusive. See also Bonnell v. Mawha, 37 N. J. L. 198.

The charges should be original entries, contemporaneous or as nearly so as usual; prices should be stated, and appear in the course of business, not on the last page of a book with blank leaves intervening between it and other accounts, but dated at the same time as they. Wilson v. Wilson, 6 N. J. L. 95; Hagaman v. Case, 4 N. J. L. 370; Swing v. Sparks, 7 N. J. L. 59.

The entry need not be on the same day, and two or three days' services may be entered at once. Bay v. Cook, 22 N. J. L. 343.

Accounts kept as a ledger, if the usual mode of the party, are admissible. The credit is for the jury. Wilson v. Wilson, 6 N. J. L. 95; Jones v. De Kay, 3 N. J. L. 955.

The admission of a tradesman's day-book, without his ledger, admitted to be kept, is no error of itself, especially when the objection is first made on appeal. Tindall v. McIntyre, 24 N. J. L. 147.

Nor will a single erroneous charge destroy the credibility of account-books. Rodenbough v. Rosebury, 34 N. J. L. 491.

Entries against one may be given against another on proof, aliunde, of the things being ordered by the latter. Tenbrooke v. Johnson, 1 N. J. L. 288; Townley v. Wooley, 1 N. J. L. 377; Jones v. Brick, 8 N. J. L. 269.

New York.—Books of account are not evidence of money lent; nor in the case of a single charge, there being no regular dealings between the parties; nor when the party has a clerk; nor unless there is proof, (a) of the delivery of some of the articles charged; (b) that the books are the account-books of the party; and (c) by those who have dealt and settled with him that he keeps fair and honest accounts. Under these restrictions they are evidence. Vosburgh v. Thayer, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 461; Larne v. Roland, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 108; Tomlinson v. Borst, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 42; Conklin v. Stamler, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 422; Foster v. Coleman, 1 E. D. S. (N. Y.) 85; Houptman v. Catlin, 1 E. D. S. (N. Y.) 729; Morrill v. Whitehead, 4 E. D. S. (N. Y.) 239.

The rule can never apply to a charge for cash lent. Case v. Potter, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 211; Low v. Payne, 4 N. Y. 247. Cf. Burke v. Wolfe, 38 Sup. Ct. (N. Y.) 263.

The rule being complied with, the books are competent, if but by the testimony of a single witness. Linnell v. Sutherland, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 568; Beattie v. Qua, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 132.

Where plaintiff had clerks the books were not his general books of daily account, and where the charges were for something done under a supposed special contract, but which afterwards became matter of account by operation of the law in consequence of a rescission of the contract, check-rolls to show the number of days men employed by plaintiff worked were held inadmissible as books of account. Merrill v. I., etc., R., 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 587.

All the books of account must be given in evidence. Larne v. Rowland, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 107.

The rule has not been affected by statutes making parties competent. Tomlinson v. Borst, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 42; Stroud v. Tilton, 4 Abb. App. (N. Y.) 324. Except that having had no clerk, or the clerk being dead, the preliminary proof of the correctness of the books may be made by the party. Burke v. Wolfe, 38 Sup. Ct. (N. Y.) 263. Though not where one of the parties is dead, the rule being still the same. Knight v. Cunnington, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 100.

Entries in books of account making charges against a particular person are not conclusive that the credit was given to such person. Fiske v. Allen, 40 Sup. Ct. (N. Y.) 76; Peck v. Von Keller, 76 N. Y. 604.

Books of account, once admitted, are evidence of all the matters that may be properly proved from them. Winants v. Sherman, 3 Hill (N. Y.). 74; Low v. Payne, 4 N.Y. 247; Dewey v. Hotchkiss, 30 N. Y. 497.

Entries in books of accounts kept by his clerk, and made up from small books kept by workmen, and memoranda made by plaintiff and clerk when goods went out, are admissible. Taggart v. Fox, 11 Daly (N. Y.). 159.

Nevada.—Held, that a stockbroker's ledger is not a book of original entries, and is not competent to prove an original transaction or purchase. Cahill v. Hirschman, 6 Nev. 57.

Nebraska.—The statute follows that of Iowa. Comp. Stat. (Ed. 1881), p. 576, § 346. In Martin v. Scott, 12 Neb. 42, plaintiff, seeking to recover for medical services against a decedent, was excluded, but was allowed to prove his charges in his account-book by his wife.

Account-books are admissible as evidence in an action only where they contain charges by one party against another. Masters v. Marsh, 19 Neb. 458.

Minnesota.—It is provided by statute that account-books proved to be party's books of account, kept for that purpose; to contain original entries of charges for moneys paid or goods delivered, or work or other services performed, or materials furnished, made contemporaneously in the handwriting of some person having authority to make them, and to be just and true, witness being subject to cross-examination, are admitted subject to all just exceptions to their credibility. Stat. (Ed. 1878), p. 803, § 70.

Person who made temporary memorandum on a slate, board, or paper must prove that about the time the charges were made, articles were delivered or work performed of a character similar to those charged. Paine v. Sherwood, 21 Minn. 225.

Account-books of a partnership containing charges made by both partners may be evidence of all the sales charged, although one partner only verifies the books, and is unable to identify particular sales. Webb v. Michener, 32 Minn. 48.

Books are admissible in evidence when the charges are against one for goods delivered to him on another's promise to pay. Which one was given credit may be considered. Winslow v. Dakota Lumber Co., 32 Minn. 237.

North Carolina.—By statute, in debt and assumpsit, the declaration being general and copy of the account being filed with it—likewise when a set-off is pleaded—the plaintiff swearing that the matter in dispute is a book account, that his book is his only means of proof, and a true account of his dealings with the other, or of the last settlement of accounts, that the articles were delivered, and all just credits given, the book and oath are good evidence of all articles delivered within two years and not amounting to more than $60. This is true of accounts of decedents accruing not more than two years previous to their death, and suit being brought within one year subsequent. Copies are evidence unless the original is demanded. Battle's Rev. Ed. (1873), p. 225, § 343 a.

A party can prove his debt under the old book-debt law, when his opponent is dead, notwithstanding the restriction that a party cannot testify in his own behalf under such circumstances. Leggett v. Glover, 71 N. Car. 211.

Book entries of a party as a general rule are inadmissible. 65 N. Car. 372.

Ohio.—Books of account are admitted under a statute removing disqualification of interest, and providing that in suits against guardians of deaf, dumb, or insane persons, or of a decedent's child, or against an executor or administrator, or heir, grantee, assignee, devisee, or legatee of deceased persons, the party cannot testify except "if the claim or defence be founded on a book account a party may testify that the book is his account-book, that it is a book of original entries, that the entries therein were made by himself, a person since deceased, or a disinterested person, non-resident of the county," whereupon the book shall be competent evidence, and such book may be admitted as evidence in any case without regard to the parties, upon like proof by any competent witness. Rev. Stat. (Ed. 1880), p. 1279, § 5242.

Such books are not conclusive evidence in a suit by an administrator, but may be strengthened by other evidence, that he had no clerks, kept fair books, etc. Bentley v. Hollenback, Wright (Ohio), 169; Horn v. Brady, Wright (Ohio), 451.

Oregon.—The rule laid down in Tomlinson v. Borst, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 42, seems to have been followed. Ladd v. Sears, 9 Oregon, 244.

Pennsylvania.—Books of original entries made by the party and verified by his oath, are competent evidence of goods sold and delivered and work done, and of the prices, but not of money lent or paid. Ducoign v. Schreppel, 1 Yeates (Pa.), 347.

But they are not competent to prove any collateral matter, as that a third party assumes to pay, or that a certain person was a partner in a house charged, or to prove an agency, or a delivery of goods under a special contract. Poultney v. Ross, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 238; Juniata Bank v. Brown, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 226; Baisch v. Hoff, 1 Yeates (Pa.), 198; Murphy v. Cress, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 33; Lonergan v. Whitehead, 10 Watts (Pa.), 249; Nickle v. Baldwin, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 290; Alexander v. Hoffman, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 382; Eshleman v. Hamish, 76 Pa. St. 97; Petriken v. Baldy, 7 Pa. St. 429; Phillips v. Tapper, 2 Pa. St. 323; Fitler v. Eyre, 14 Pa. St. 392.

A book may be admitted in a suit in relation to a foreign mercantile transaction for articles furnished and money expended from the necessity of the case. Seagrove v. Redman et al., 2 Yeates (Pa.), 254; Himes v. Barnitz, 8 Watts (Pa.), 39.

The house being the defendant, a book of entries may prove the materials to have been furnished on the credit of the house in sci. fa. sur mechanic's lien. McMullen v. Gilbert, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 277. So a charge against a steamboat is prima facie evidence against the owners. Blackstock v. Leidy, 19 Pa. St. 335. In these cases charges against the owner or contractor individually are competent to show the amount of materials furnished, and the liability of the building may be proved aliunde. Church v. Davis, 9 Watts (Pa.), 304. So if it is proved aliunde that another than the one charged is really liable as to the principal debtor, the books can show the amount and price of the things for which he is shown to be liable. Quin v. Naglee, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 92; Hartley v. Brookes, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 189.

Entries must be made in course of dealing and about time of transaction. Walter v. Bollman, 8 Watts (Pa.), 544; Curren v. Crawford, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 3. Article sold must be in line of business. Shoemaker v. Kellog, 11 Pa. St. 310. Must be in a regular and usual account-book. Thompson v. McKelvey, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 126; Carroll v. School, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 260; Hough v. Doyle, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 291.

Undecipherable entries in a physician's book cause rejection of book. Gorman's Est., 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 192.

They should be with intent to charge, and an invoice-book was rejected. Cooper v. Morel, 4 Yeates (Pa.), 341. A defendant's entries of work done for him by plaintiff are therefore inadmissible Summers v. McKim, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 405; Keim v. Rush, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 377. So where no charges appear. Hough v. Doyle, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 291; Fairchild v. Dennison, 4 Watts (Pa.), 258; Phillips v. Tapper, 2 Pa. St. 323; Rogers v. Old, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 404.

The book should be original, but is so though taken from memoranda intended to serve only as notes. Ingraham v. Bockins, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 285; Patton v. Ryan, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 408; Hoover v. Gehr, 62 Pa. St. 136. Must be the day-book, not the ledger. Hamill v. O'Donnell, 2 Miles (Pa.), 101. But may be in ledger form, if an original. Thomson v. Hopper, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 467; Rehrer v. Ziegler, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 258; Odell v. Cuthbert, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 66; Hoover v. Gehr, 62 Pa. St. 136. Not original if the entries are transcribed from time to time, as the party had time from a counter book or blotter. Breinig v. Mertzler, 23 Pa. St. 156.

The fact that some entries are not original will not affect those proved by the parties' oath to be so. Ives v. Niles, 5 Watts (Pa.), 323; Wollenweber v. Ketterlinus, 17 Pa. St. 389. Nor does it injure entries should they be written in lead-pencil. Hill v. Scott, 12 Pa. St. 168.

Entry must be made after delivery, and an arbitrary mark affixed to items to show actual delivery does not help the matter, if it appear not to charge the defendant but to warn the porter against a double delivery. Rhoads v. Gaul, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 404; Fitler v. Eyre, 14 Pa. St. 392; Thompson v. Bullock, 2 Miles (Pa.), 269; Parker v. Donaldson, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 9; Kunzig v. Haedrick, 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 228. A copy from memorandum, not registering the transaction as a sale and delivery, is inadmissible. Fairchild v. Dennison, 4 Watts (Pa.), 258. Contra, Kaughley v. Brewer, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 133. See also as to time of entry Keim v. Rush, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 377; Koch v. Howell, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 350; Benners v. Maloney, 3 Phila. (Pa.) 57.

The entries must not be too long after delivery, they must be a memorandum of transactions as they occur. Curren v. Crawford, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 3; Jones v. Long, 3 Watts (Pa.), 325. Entries copied from a card the evening of the next day admitted. Potter v. Ryan, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 408. Not so when copied by party from entries by a journeyman on a slate inside of two weeks. Kessler v. McConachy, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 435. But where the man who first made the entries testified as well as the plaintiff, admitted. McCoy v. Lightner, 2 Watts (Pa.), 347. Not admitted when made up from loose scraps of paper and carried from one to four days. Vicary v. Moore, 2 Watts (Pa.), 451.

The entry must be made within a reasonable time; it is better if made within one day. Jones v. Long, 3 Watts (Pa.), 325. See Yearsley's App., 48 Pa. St. 531; Forsythe v. Norcross, 5 Pa. St. 432; Cook v. Ashmead, 2 Miles (Pa.), 268; Walter v. Bollman, 8 Watts (Pa.), 544; Hartley v. Brookes, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 189; Van Swearingen v. Harris, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 356.

Where the evidence is not conflicting, the competency is for the court. Churchman v. Smith, 9 Whart. (Pa.) 146; Curren v. Crawford, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 3.

Entries need not be made from party's own knowledge. Ingraham v. Bockius, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 285; Jones v. Long, 3 Watts (Pa.), 325. Nor that he should be without clerks or porters.

Entries to which a party swears must be in his own handwriting. Van Swearingen v. Harris, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 356; Alter v. Berghaus, 8 Watts (Pa.), 79; Odell v. Culbert, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 66; Hoover v. Gehr, 62 Pa. St. 136.

A party having been absent from the country for seven years and could not be found, on proof of his handwriting the book of original entries was admitted. Bear v. Trexler, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 214.

Reputation of plaintiff as to keeping correct or incorrect books may be shown. Weamer v. Inart, 29 Pa. St. 257; Funk v. Ely, 45 Pa. St. 444.

The person who makes the entry need not have delivered the goods. Kline v. Gundrum, 11 Pa. St. 243.

Plaintiff is not concluded by his books, and may prove his claim in another way. Adams v. Columbia S. B. Co., 3 Whart. (Pa.) 75; Fitler v. Beckley, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 458.

Plaintiff is not rendered incompetent by act of 1869 from supporting his book entries by a suppletory oath. White's Est., 32 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 430.

Under act of 1869 enabling interested parties to become witnesses, the parties are enabled to use the books as mere memoranda and testify themselves, rendering questions as to book entries less important. Barnet v. Steinback, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 335; Nichols v. Haynes, 78 Pa. St. 174.

A notary public's claim for half-day's labor in taking depositions is not a proper subject of book account. Harbison v. Hawkins, 81 Pa. St. 142.

South Carolina.—Books of accounts are admitted on the oath of the party. Clough v. Little, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 353. They are evidence beyond a year for goods sold, work done, and articles furnished. Lamb v. Hart. 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 105.

Where other evidence can be produced this is not allowed. Thomas v. Dyott. 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 186.

They prove the delivery of an article or work done and nothing more. St. Philip's Church v. White, 2 McMull. (S. Car.), 306. Nothing collateral. Gage v. McIlwain, 1 Strobh. (S. Car.) 135. Nor are they evidence to prove or contradict a special contract. Pritchard v. McOwen, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 131; Deas v. Darby, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 436; Brown v. Kinloch, 2 Spear (S. Car.), 284; Kinloch v. Brown, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 223.

In Venning v. Hacker, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 584, plaintiff was held incompetent to prove entries made up from memoranda of defendants, and it was also held that plaintiff's books could only prove delivery by himself, and entries made up from representations by a slave were incompetent. Gage v. McIlwain, 1 Strobh. (S. Car.) 135.

In McBride v. Watts, 1 McC. (S. Car.) 384, a physician was allowed to prove by his books both the service rendered to the sailors, and that it was at the instance of the captain of the vessel. The books must have been regularly kept, and the entries made in the usual course of business and in the regular order in which the transactions occurred. Lynch v. McHugo, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 33; Thayer v. Deen, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 677. If regularly kept and composed of original entries, they are admissible, though not day-books but kept by double or single entry. Toomer v. Gadsden, 4 Strobh. (S. Car.) 193.

Charges must be specific and particular. Lynch v. Petrie, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 130; Hughes v. Hampton, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 544; Lance v. McKenzie, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 449.

The books offered must be produced in court for defendant's inspection. Furman v. Play, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 394. The party proving is subject to cross-examination. Clough v. Little, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 353.

Some entries being incompetent and undistinguishable from the others, the book is inadmissible. Venning v. Hacker, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 584.

Entries should be proved by oath of the party who made them; but if one of two partners, plaintiffs, who has made the entries is dead or has moved out of the State, the other partner may be allowed to prove his handwriting. Foster v. Sinkler, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 40; White v. Murphy, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 369.

Third parties were permitted to prove a physician's books, he having moved out of the State. Spence v. Sanders, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 119.

The books of a carpenter or a bricklayer are evidence. Lynch v. Petrie, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 130; Slade v. Teasdale, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 172. Or other mechanic. Lamb v. Hart, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 362. Or of a ferryman. Frazier v. Drayton, 2 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 471. Of a physician. McBride v. Watts, 1 McC. (S. Car.) 384; Lance v. McKenzie, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 449. Of a miller, to show quantity of lumber delivered. Gordon v. Arnold, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 517. Or of meal delivered. Exam v. Davis, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 357. Of a printer to show charges for advertising and delivering a paper. Thomas v. Dyott, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 186. For proof of advertisement, however, the file of papers is better evidence. Richards v. Howard, 2 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 474. Of a seinemaker. 2 Mill Const. R. (S. Car.) 220.

A schoolmaster's book is not evidence to prove an account for instruction. Pelzer v. Cranston, 2 McC. (S. Car.) 328. Nor a jailer's, to prove length of confinement. Walker v. McMahon, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 251. Nor a scrivener's, to prove commissions on money received. Watson v. Bigelow, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 127. Nor were farmers' or planters' books until made by statute evidence in all trials in which the business or transactions of their farms or plantations should be called in question, as between the farmer or planter and his employees. Rev. Stat. (Ed. 1873) p. 517, § 32. Nor the memorandum books of a peddler. Thayer v. Deen, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 677. Nor of a billiard-table keeper. Boyd v. Ladson, 4 McC. (S. Car.) 76.

Account books of tavern-keepers or other dealers in spirituous liquors are not admitted as evidence of any debt contracted or money due for spirituous liquors sold in less quantity than a quart. Rev. Stat. (Ed. 1873) p. 517, § 33.

Tennessee.—The statute making books admissible on plaintiff's oath has become obsolete since the statute 1869–70, making parties competent witnesses in their own behalf. King's Tennessee Dig. 27.

Texas.—Books appearing to the court regularly, chronologically, and honestly kept, without erasures or interlineations, are admissible. Burleson v. Goodman, 32 Tex. 229. With the suppletory oath and proof aliunde that the party kept correct accounts, and after the best testimony has been exhausted. Townsend v. Coleman, 18 Tex. 418; s. c., 20 Tex. 821; Werbiskie v. McManus, 31 Tex. 116.

In the absence of evidence establishing liability of plaintiffs in a book account produced by defendants as a set-off, the books cannot be admitted to the jury without definite explanation of the use to be made of them by the jury. Compton v. Young, 26 Tex. 644.

Proof must be made of the correctness of items in memorandum- or cash-books of occasional entry. Kotwitz v. Wright, 37 Tex. 82.

Copies are inadmissible. Flats v. Brod. 37 Tex. 734.

Vermont —By statute the action of account is brought on book account, and after judgment quod computet the auditor has power to examine all the parties to the suit on oath in relation to the account or any item of it, and call for the original books if there are any; and in an action before a justice where a book account is sued on or used as a set-off, the justice has similar powers to examine the parties on oath. Laws (Ed. 1880), p. 277, § 1202.

This action can be maintained whenever either the contract is implied or has been maintained on the plaintiff's side, but not where the plaintiff sues for damages specially for non-performance of a contract. Way v. Wakefield, 7 Vt. 223.

The credit, not the competency, of the book is affected by erasures or alterations. Sargeant v. Pettibone, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 355.

The entries need not be specific nor made at the time. Read v. Barlow, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 145; Leach v. Shephard, 5 Vt. 363; Newell v. Keith, 11 Vt. 214.

The account may be made up from memory in court, and no books need be kept; the only requisites are that the charges should be of a proper kind for book charges, and an examination of both parties should show the claim just. Bell v. McCan, 3 Vt. 185.

The whole practice rests upon the statute, and under it it is not the book of evidence supported by the parties' oath, which is evidence; it is the oath of the party affected as to its credibility by the appearance of his account-book, or the fact that he kept no books, that is the substantive evidence received. See 1 Smith's Ldg. Cases, p. 585.

Virginia.—The original entries in a merchant's book are competent evidence for him. An account charging defendants is evidence on the question whether

3. What Constitutes a Book.—A slate, a card, scraps of paper, shingles, or whatever may seem to the court bona-fide accounts have been received, usually on the condition that the contents have been copied into regular books within a reasonable time.[1]

4. Character of Book.—With but few exceptions the book must be unattended by suspicious circumstances or facts, such as alterations or additions calculated to throw discredit on it.[2] goods were sold by plaintiffs to defendants or to a third person. Downer v. Morrison, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 250.

The oath and books of plaintiff cannot be allowed to charge defendant with goods delivered to a third person on his order, unless otherwise proved. Kerr v. Love, 1 Wash. (Va.) 172.

Wisconsin.—"Such books are by statute admitted as presumptive evidence of the charges contained therein upon oath of the party that the books are his account-books containing original entries; said entries being just and true and in his own handwriting and made at or about the time of delivery or performance. The party is subject to cross-examination under the same rules as any other witness." Rev. Stat. (Ed. 1878) p. 1010, § 4186.

Statutes also provide that where a book has marks which show that the items have been transferred to a ledger, the ledger must be produced. Rev. Stat. p. 1010, § 4188. And the oath of an agent, servant, or clerk is equally competent; but no item of money, in any event, exceeding five dollars at one time shall be admitted, or money paid to third persons, or charges for rent. § 4187.

Verified copies of bank-books are received. Act of 1881, April 2, P. L. 414.

The account-book having been received, plaintiff's character for veracity cannot be shown. Winne v. Nickerson, 1 Wis. 1; Nickerson v. Morin, 3 Wis. 243.

The books must be verified as required by statute. Marsh v. Case, 30 Wis. 531; Winner v. Bauman, 28 Wis. 563.

Mistakes which can be fairly explained do not affect the competency of the entries. Schettler v. Jones, 20 Wis. 412.

While goods may be charged to "E. Transportation Co." in a running account, and not under the individual name of E., the defendant, it may be explained by testimony that the credit was originally given to defendant. Hannan v. Engelman, 49 Wis. 278.

1. Entries made on a slate and transferred within a reasonable time are no less original entries. Landis v. Turner, 14 Col. 573; Jefferies v. Urmy, 3 Hous. (Del.) 653; Redlick v. Bauerlee, 98 Ill. 134; Hall v. Glidden, 39 Me. 445. When the time was from two to four weeks, there being no occasion for a more frequent transfer. Faxon v. Hollis, 13 Mass. 427; Barker v. Haskell, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 218; Jackson v. Evans, 8 Mich. 476; McGoldrick v. Traphagen, 88 N. Y. 334; Kessler v. McConachy, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 435; McCoy v. Lightner, 2 Watts (Pa.), 347; Forsythe v. Norcross, 5 Pa. St. 432; Yearsley's Appeal, 48 Pa. St. 531; Van Swearingen v. Harris, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 356. Unless plaintiff live out of the State, when sworn copies are admitted unless the other side object. Craig & Sergeant v. Russel, 2 Harr. (Del.) 353; Fitzgibbon's Admr. v. Kinney, 3 Harr. (Del.) 317; Grady v. Hugpin, 6 Fla. 668.

A notched stick—Rowland v. Barton, 2 Harr. (Del.) 288—scraps of paper—Smith v. Smith's Exrs., 4 Harr. (Del.) 532; Hall v. Field, 4 Harr. (Del.) 533; Hooper v. Taylor, 39 Me. 229—have been admitted as books.

A shingle. Kendall v. Field, 14 Me. 230.

Entries from chalk scores on side of delivery cart. Smith et al. v. Sandford, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 139.

From boards and slips of papers if truly copied. Davison v. Powell, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 467; Paine v. Sherwood, 21 Minn. 225.

Scraps containing various other memoranda are not allowed in Pennsylvania. Thompson v. McKelvey, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 126; Hough v. Doyle, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 29.

2. Fraudulent appearances, such as material and gross alterations, false additions, etc., make the book inadmissible. Caldwell v. McDermit, 17 Cal. 464; Cheever v. Brown, 30 Ga. 904; Doster v. Brown, 25 Ga. 24; Cogswell v. Dolliver, 2 Mass. 217; Davis v. Sandford, 9 Allen (Mass.), 216; Larue v. Rowland, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 107. Unless explained by plaintiff. Churchman v. Smith, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 146; Kline v. Gundrum, 11 Pa. St. 249.

BOOKSELLER.—A dealer in books.[1]

BOOM COMPANIES. (See also CORPORATIONS; WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.)

1. Definition.—A boom is an inclosure formed upon the surface of a stream or other body of water, by means of spars, for the purpose of collecting or storing logs or timber.[2]

Booms are usually formed by extending a series of spars for some distance at right angles to the shore and then continuing them up stream parallel to the shore, leaving the upper end open. As the logs float down stream, they are guided into the boom and there arrested.[3]

A booming company is a company formed for the purpose of improving streams for the floating of logs, by means of booms and other contrivances, and for the purpose of running, driving, booming, and rafting logs.[4]

1. Boosellers, dealing in such stock as is usually kept in a retail bookstore, who buy and sell, in connection with their other business, and as incidental thereto, second-hand books, are not "dealers in second-hand goods" within the meaning of an ordinance requiring dealers in second-hand goods to procure a license, and declaring that "any person who keeps a store, office, or place of business for the purchase or sale of second-hand clothing or garments of any kind, or second-hand goods, ware, or merchandise, is hereby declared to be a dealer in second-hand goods." Eastman v. City of Chicago, 79 Ill. 178.

In a number of cases it has been held that evidence of buying a libel in the shop of a known "bookseller" is sufficient prima facie evidence to convict him of publication. The leading case is Rex v. Almon, 5 Bur. 2686. See also Rex v. Walter, 3 Esp. 21; Rex v. Gutch, Moody & M. 433; Attorney-Gen. v. Sidon, 1 Cromp. & J. 220; Attorney-Gen. v. Riddle, 2 Cromp. & J. 493.

2. 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 399.

3. 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 399.

4. 1 How. Ann. Stats. (Mich.) §§ 3896, 3899, 3904 et seq. The Michigan statutes, being the general acts of 1855 and 1864 for the organization of booming companies, give the companies express powers to run, drive, boom, and raft logs, timber, and lumber; also to construct all proper and necessary rollways, booms, piers, etc. The Revised Statutes of 1878 of Wisconsin, § 1777, contain similar provisions.

The Pennsylvania statute (act June 22, 1883, Pamph. Laws, 156) provides for the formation of corporations for the purpose of driving and floating saw-logs, lumber, and timber, § 1; to use streams not exceeding twenty miles in length, § 1; may clear out streams, purchase and erect dams, deepen crib, widen streams, etc., § 2; not to obstruct navigation by rafts and boats, § 2; majority of stock to be held at all times by persons owning lands drained by such streams, § 2; improvements made to be for public benefit, subject to reasonable tolls, but under the control of the corporation, § 3; compensation to be made to owners of streams before operations are commenced, § 4; in case of disagreement damages to be assessed, § 4; proceedings regulated, § 4; bond to be filed and approved by the court before entry upon or control over the stream, § 5; property not to be taken for private use, § 6; pending suits at law or equity not to be affected by act, § 6.

2. Right to Float Logs.—The general public has an easement of floating logs down any stream which is capable of floating them.[1]

The right to float exists although the stream is not capable of floating logs the entire year round. It is enough if the stream is capable of floating logs for periods long enough and occurring often enough to make the stream useful to the public for purposes of "floatage."[2]

3. Right to Improve Stream for Purposes of Floatage.—Any person interested in the use of a stream for the purpose of floating logs may put into the stream any contrivances necessary or convenient for utilizing the stream for that purpose. Thus a riparian owner or other person may construct booms to arrest or store logs.[3]

But the use of streams for purposes of floatage is not paramount to, but concurrent with, its use for other purposes.[4]

Hence no person may put into the stream any boom or other contrivance which will unduly interfere with the use of the river for supplying water power to mills,[5] or with its use for naviga-

1. Moore v. Sanborn, 2 Mich. 519; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445; Shaw v. Oswego Iron Co., 10 Oreg. 371; Whisler v. Wilkinson, 22 Wis. 572; Sellers v. Union Lumbering Co., 39 Wis. 525; Olsen v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203; Shaw v. Crawford, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 236; Morgan v. King, 35 N. Y. 459.

According to the English law the public had no easement of navigation in non-tidal waters except by custom or long user. In this country it is otherwise: the public has an easement of user in every stream that is capable of being put to any public use. In a community in which logging and lumbering is an important industry, any stream which is capable of floating logs is subject to a public easement for that purpose. Moore v. Sanborn, 2 Mich. 519.

A stream capable, in its natural condition, of being profitably used for floating rafts or logs, though it be private property and not navigable for other purposes, is subject to a public easement for that purpose. Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445.

A stream is "navigable" although it is usual or convenient to aid the passage of logs or craft by manual help from the banks. Olsen v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203.

Where the public have used a stream twenty-six years for the purpose of floating rafts of logs, it becomes subject to a public easement for that purpose, although not navigable in the common-law sense of the word. Shaw v. Crawford, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 236.

Where a stream is capable of being used by a very limited number of persons only, for the purpose of floating logs, it is not subject to a public easement for that purpose. This was held in the case of a stream which in thirty years had not been used for floating logs by more than twelve persons, and not by more than six in any one year. The user did not exceed six days in any one year. The stream was only five miles long, and flowed for two miles through private land. Meyer v. Phillips, 97 N. Y. 485.

2. Moore v. Sanborn, 2 Mich. 519; Shaw v. Oswego Iron Co., 10 Oreg. 371; Olsen v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203.

3. Brig City of Erie v. Canfield, 27 Mich. 479; Stevens Point Boom Co. v. Reilly, 44 Wis. 295; s. c., 46 Wis. 237.

The right to erect booms in a river capable of floating logs rests upon the same principle by which the construction of wharves and piers upon waters generally navigable is allowed. Stevens Point Boom Co. v. Reilly, 44 Wis. 295, 305.

4. Buchanan v. Grand River Log Co., 48 Mich. 364; Middleton v. Flat River Booming Co., 27 Mich. 533; Woodin v. Wentworth, 57 Mich. 278; Stevens Point Boom Co. v. Reilly, 44 Wis. 295.

An owner of logs engaged in driving them may blockade the stream with them, but he has no right to blockade a stream by storing his logs in it. McPheeters v. Moose R. L. D. Co., 5 Atl. Repr. (Me.) 270.

An action lies at the suit of any one injured thereby for needlessly obstructing the use of a navigable stream by keeping logs therein longer than necessary for floating them. Gifford v. McArthur, 55 Mich. 535.

5. Attorney-General v. Evart Booming Co., 34 Mich. 462; Middleton v. Flat tion or other purposes,[1] or with the property right of riparian owners.[2]

4. Nature of Boom Companies.—Booming companies are organized to carry on, on a large scale and under one management, the business of driving and rafting logs which would otherwise have to be done by individuals. They are intended to supply facilities for the driving of logs to the general public, and are quasi-public corporations.[3]

Booming companies being quasi-public corporations, the legis-

River Booming Co., 27 Mich. 533; Buchanan v. Grand River Log Co., 48 Mich. 364.

A booming company has no right to erect dams in a river in order to store up water for the purpose of floating logs at a period when the river in its natural state would not be capable of floating them; and it is liable to a riparian mill-owner whose water supply is cut off by reason of the dam. Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechley, 31 Mich. 336; Middleton v. Flat River Booming Co., 27 Mich. 533.

In Buchanan v. Grand River Log Co., 48 Mich. 364, the court state that persons interested in the floating of logs may, under some circumstances, dam the stream for the purpose of flooding; that this right is included in the general right to use the stream for the floating of logs. But this right is not paramount to the right of a riparian owner to use the water of the stream for water power, and must not be exercised so as unduly to interfere with it. Both rights are concurrent, and each modifies the other to some extent.

The rights of the riparian owner to dam the stream are not paramount to the right to use the stream for floating logs. The owner has no right to build a dam which will unduly interfere with the floating of logs. Beliveau v. Levasseur et al., 1 Revue Legale (Quebec), 720.

A sued B for an injury to his raft caused by the improper state of B's dam. Held, that the circumstance that the river would not have been navigable for a raft of logs of the size of those composing A's raft except for the existence of the dam was no defence to the action. Volk v. Eldred, 23 Wis. 410.

The question of lawfulness in the action of a booming company in inclosing part of a stream for its own purposes, whether by permanent structures or otherwise, depends upon whether the general public, desirous of availing themselves of the navigable rights, are or are not more inconvenienced than accommodated thereby. Attorney-General v. Evart Booming Co., 34 Mich. 462.

1. Brig City of Erie v. Canfield, 27 Mich. 479.

Raftsmen have no right to moor their rafts in navigable streams in such a manner as to interfere with navigation. Harrington v. Edwards. 17 Wis. 586.

2. White River Log, etc., Co. v. Nelson, 45 Mich. 578; Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

In Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308, it was held that the right to use a stream for the purpose of floating logs did not include the right to cause an overflow of the land of a riparian owner by such use of the stream. In that case it appeared that a booming company every year, by means of its boom, detained a large number of logs in the stream which formed a jam, and caused the overflow of the land of a riparian owner. It also appeared that the detention of the logs was necessary for the purpose of sorting them. It was, nevertheless, held that the company was liable in damages to the riparian owner, and that it had no right to injure the land of a riparian owner, even though such injury was an inevitable result of the operation of its boom.

A boom company is not responsible for damage by flooding caused by a jam of logs when it took all reasonable precautions to prevent the jam. Anderson v. Thunder Bay River Boom Co., 28 N. Westn. Repr. (Mich.) 518.

One floating logs down a navigable stream is not responsible to a riparian proprietor for damage caused by the stranding of his logs, if he uses all reasonable efforts to keep them in the stream. Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104.

One owning a boom may fasten it to the land of a riparian owner if it is necessary to do so in order to successfully operate the boom. Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445.

3. Osborne v. Knife Falls Boom Co., 32 Minn. 412; s.c., 49 Am. Rep. 590; Cohn v. Wausau Boom Co., 47 Wis. 314; Duluth Lumber Co. v. St. Louis Boom and Improvement Co., 17 Fed. Repr. 419.

Land on the banks of a navigable lature may give them the exclusive right to maintain booms or to drive logs in any stream.[1]

So the legislature may authorize a booming company to construct a boom which shall entirely obstruct navigation in a navigable stream.[2]

5. Right of Boom Company to Maintain Booms.—The right of a booming company to construct and maintain booms is generally defined and restricted by the provisions of its charter or of the general act under which it is organized. The nature of the boom which the company is authorized to build depends entirely upon such charter or statutory provisions.[3] stream may be condemned for boom purposes; such a use is a public one. Cotton v. Mississippi & Rum River Boom Co., 22 Minn. 372.

1. Cohn v. Wausau Boom Co., 47 Wis. 314; Duluth Lumber Co. v. St. Louis Boom & Improvement Co., 17 Fed. Repr. 419; South Bay Boom Co. v. Jewett, 5 Allen (N. B.), 267.

A statute giving to a boom company the exclusive right to maintain a boom upon a navigable stream, and to collect and control all logs within certain limits, and to charge boomage for its services, is not in violation of a constitutional provision that the stream shall be free, and that no tax, duty, or impost shall be charged for its use. The boom company is a quasi-public corporation, and its operations are for the benefit of public navigation, and hence it may be authorized to charge a fee or tax for boomage. Osborne v. Knife Falls Boom Co., 32 Minn. 412; s. c., 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203.

A statute declared all navigable waters leading into two great rivers to be common highways and free forever to all persons without tax or impost. Held, not to prohibit the legislature from permitting a company incorporated to improve the navigation of a stream only partly navigable from charging toll. Wisconsin River Imp. Co. v. Manson, 43 Wis. 255.

In general it is provided that the right to run, drive, boom, and raft logs shall not be exclusive in the boom company, but that private persons may also exercise that right. How. Ann. (Mich.) St. §§ 3900, 3917.

2. Heerman v. Beef Slough Mfg. Co., 8 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 334; Edwards v. Wausau Boom Co., 30 N. Westn. Repr. 716; Enos v. Hamilton, 24 Wis. 658.

3. Enos v. Hamilton, 24 Wis. 658.

Where a boom company constructs its boom properly and in accordance with statutory or charter requirements, it will not be liable when, by reason of a freshet, the boom causes lands to be overflowed. Lawler v. Boom Co., 56 Me. 443; Anderson v. Thunder Bay, etc., Co., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 98.

But a boom company is liable in damages for the delay or detention of rafts caused by its exceeding its charter powers in the construction of its boom. Plummer v. Penobscot Lumbering Assoc., 67 Me. 363.

A boom company is liable in tort for an injury caused to a riparian owner by the unauthorized and improper construction of its works. Hackstack v. Keshena Improvement Co., 66 Wis. 439.

The State cannot authorize a boom company to construct a boom the necessary effect of which will be to cause a flowage of land of a riparian owner, unless provision is made for compensation for the flowage. Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

The respondent brought action for damages caused to his vessel by a boom which appellant had constructed in the river St. Francis. Held, confirming the judgment of the court below, that the appellant was liable, notwithstanding the statute which authorized the construction of these booms in such a way as not to obstruct the navigation of the river, required that the plan and proposed site of the booms shall first be submitted to and approved by the governor in council, and that the plan and site of the boom had been actually approved of by the governor in council, where the evidence established that these booms did really form an obstruction to the navigation of the river. Pierreville Steam Mills Co. v. Martineau, 20 Low Can. Jur. 225.

Where the charter provided that if any person should suffer damages by the exercise of powers granted to a boom company, his damages should be assessed in a certain way, held, that the statute covered the case of damages caused by an overflow resulting from the

6. Compensation and Lien.—It is commonly provided in the charters of booming companies or the general act of incorporation that they may charge reasonable tolls or fees for the use of their booms and for their services in rolling, driving, and rafting logs, etc.[1]

Apart from statutory regulation, the matter of compensation rests wholly in contract.[2] Booming companies are commonly obstruction of the river by logs accumulated by defendant's boom. Bald Eagle Boom Co. v. Sanderson, 81 Pa. St. 402.

1. R. S. Wis. § 1777; 1 How. Ann. Stats. (Mich.) § 3917.

Booming companies being quasi-public corporations, the State has a right to regulate the prices they may charge for their services. Androscoggin Side Boom Co. v. Haskell, 7 Me. 474.

In fixing the reasonableness of a boom company's charges, the value of the company's real estate used for booming purposes may be considered; but the value must be the general market value, not its value for booming purposes, since that would be greater than the charge for booming. Pere Marquette Boom Co. v. Adams, 44 Mich. 403.

Boom companies given the right by charter to collect toll upon logs taken care of by them have no right to charge toll for rafts of lumber intended to pass down the river, but accidentally and against the owner's wishes stopped by the boom. Chase v. Dwinal, 7 Me. 134.

A statute prohibiting an existing toll company from receiving any tolls for logs, unless such logs, after having been rafted out, had first been surveyed by an official surveyor appointed by the selectmen of a town, is not unconstitutional. Proprietors of Side Booms, etc., v. Haskell, 7 Me. 474. Compare Merritt v. Knife Falls Boom Co. (Minn.), 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 201.

Where the charter of a boom company provided that its boomage charges, at a given rate per 1000 feet, should become due and payable as soon as the amount of lumber was ascertained, held, that an actual measurement was not necessary before a right of action to recover boomage charges accrued. Wausau Boom Co. v. Plumes, 49 Wis. 115.

It is a question whether a booming company must not tender delivery of the logs before having any right to demand the legal charges thereon. Johnson v. Cranage. 45 Mich. 4.

Boomage Charges Constitutional.—Such charges do not conflict with clauses of a constitution making streams "forever free . . . without tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor." They are not made for the use of the river, but to compensate the company for its outlay in erecting and maintaining works which are improvements of and aids to navigation. Osborne v. Knife Falls Boom Corporation, 32 Minn. 412; s. c., 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203; Benjamin v. Manistee River Imp. Co., 42 Mich. 628; Duluth Lumber Co. v. St. Louis Boom Co., 17 Fed. Repr. 419; Nelson v. Sheboygan Slack-water Nav. Co., 44 Mich 7; Manistee River Imp. Co. v. Sands (Mich.), 19 N. Westn. Repr. 199; Cooley's Cons. Lim. 592; Gould on Waters, sec. 143. See also Cotton v. Miss. & Rum River Boom Co., 22 Minn. 372; Weaver v. Miss. & Rum River Boom Co., 28 Minn. 534; Stevens Point Boom Co. v. Reilly, 44 Wis. 295; Cohn v. Wausau Boom Co., 47 Wis. 314; Watts v. Tittabawassee Boom Co.. 52 Mich. 203; Duluth Lumber Co. v. St. Louis Boom Co., 17 Fed. Repr. 419; Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S. 459; Black River Imp. Co. v. La Crosse B. & T. Co., 54 Wis. 659.

2. A Michigan statute provided that the boom company should post a list of all log-marks of all members of the company, and of all persons whose logs they have contracted to run, and also provided that any other person may furnish and have posted a list of his marks, and shall be entitled to 30 days' notice of the sale of any of his logs on which the company has a lien. Held, that the furnishing of a list under the last clause did not imply a contract by the person furnishing it to have his logs run. Ames v. Port Huron Log Driving and Booming Co., 6 Mich. 266.

The defendants were the lessees of the plaintiff's boom and appurtenances at the rent of nine cents for every 1000 feet of logs passing through the same. Held, that an increased rent could not be charged, although a portion of the logs were twice rafted before they passed through the plaintiff's booms. Penobscot Boom Co. v. Penobscot Lumbering Assoc., 61 Me. 533.

Where the boom company has rafted logs and well secured them below its boom it has earned its boomage, and is entitled to the same although some of the logs are subsequently lost, if the loss was not caused by its negligence. Penobscot Boom Co. v. Baker, 16 Me. 233.

In an action to recover boomage for given a lien upon enough of the logs driven for any person to secure the amount of its compensation due from him.[1]

7. Power to Drive Logs of Non-consenting Owners.—Booming companies are commonly authorized and empowered by the law under which they are organized to drive the logs of non-consenting third persons, wrongfully left to obstruct the stream, and which actually hinder the company in its lawful use of the stream,[2] and to collect from the owner a reasonable compensation for such service.[3]

The company is invariably given a lien, with power of sale, upon enough of the logs thus driven to cover its compensation.[4]

one parcel of logs, the defendant cannot recoup damages for the loss of logs out of another parcel. Penobscot Boom Corporation v. Wadleigh, 16 Me. 235; Proprietors of Side-Booms, etc., v. Weld, 6 Me. 105.

1. How. Ann. Stat. (Mich.) § 3917; R. S. Wis. 1878, § 1777.

Where a boom company is empowered by statute to sell logs to pay toll due upon them, a purchaser obtains a good title although the sale was irregular and defective. Hunter v. Perry, 33 Me. 159.

A boom company waives its lien upon logs when it takes time acceptances in payment of its claim. Au Sable River Boom Co. v. Sanborn, 36 Mich. 358.

2. 1 How. Ann. Stats. (Mich.), §§ 3929, 3901; R. S. Wisconsin, 1878. § 1777; Anderson v. Maloy, 32 Minn. 76.

A boom company cannot drive the logs of a third person and charge for so doing when the owner himself is using all reasonable means to drive his logs. Butterfield v. Gilchrist, 55 Mich. 22.

The right of a boom company to take charge of and run the logs of a non-consenting owner is one for the jury to determine, under the facts and circumstances of the case. Sturgeon River Boom Co. v. Nester, 55 Mich. 113.

A statute authorized boom companies to run and boom logs of third persons put into the stream without a sufficient force to prevent their forming jams, and gave the company a lien for its services. Held, that the statute authorized the company to take charge of logs of third persons even when such logs did not obstruct its own use of the stream, and that, therefore, it was unconstitutional, as giving general police powers to persons not public officers. Held also, that, the right of interference being in the discretion of the company, the act virtually gave a private company a judicial function, and was unconstitutional for that reason. Ames v. Port Huron Log Driving and Booming Co., 11 Mich. 139.

There appears to be no statute upon the subject of boom companies in Maine. R. S. Maine, 1883, title 3, ch. 42, § 6, however, provides that any person whose logs in any waters are so intermixed with those of another that they cannot conveniently be separated may drive all the logs and may charge a reasonable compensation for driving the logs of such other person, and have a lien on them therefor.

A person may recover, under Gen. St. Mich. 1878, ch. 32, § 78, for driving the logs of another person, even where the logs have become intermingled by consent. Walker v. Bean, 26 N. Westn. Repr. 232.

Under ch. 32, § 78, Gen. Stats. Minn. 1878, which provides that when one person drives the logs of another which have become intermingled with his own he shall have a lien on such logs for his services, held, that the plaintiff was entitled to his lien where, owing to the absence of means natural or artificial for separating logs at the point at which defendant wished his logs delivered, the plaintiff was compelled to drive them to a point beyond. Chesley v. De Graff, 29 N. Westn. Repr. 167.

The existence of a custom to treat as gratuitous services authorized by statute in driving intermingled logs cannot affect the statutory right to recover. Osborne v. Nelson Lumber Co., 33 Minn. 285.

3. R. S. Wis. 1878, § 1777; How. Ann. Stats. (Mich.) § 3917.

4. R. S. Wis. 1878, § 1777; How. Ann. Stats. (Mich.) §§ 3901, 3929. See R. S. Maine, 1883, title 3, ch. 42. § 6.

Boom companies have, under the general act relating to logging, a lien for their services in breaking jams and driving logs where the owners have not put on a sufficient force to do it. Hall v. Tittabawassee Boom Co., 51 Mich. 377.

The fact that the Booming Companies Act gives booming companies a lien for their services upon the logs of non-consenting owners driven by them under

8. Nature of Property in Booms.—It has been held that boom property is taxable as real estate.[1]

9. Liability of Boom Companies—Degree of Care.—Booming companies are not liable, like common carriers, for the safe-keeping of the logs.[2]

They are bailees for hire, and are held only to an ordinary degree of diligence in the care of logs of which they nave charge.[3]

10. Constitutional Law.—Booming companies, being quasi-public corporations, may be empowered to condemn land.[4]

For the same reason they may be given the right to make improvements in streams, and to charge a toll upon all logs floated therein.[5]

A statute giving a boom company general police powers in a stream capable of floating logs is unconstitutional.[6]

11. Miscellaneous Cases.—For a collection of miscellaneous cases relating to booming companies, see the note hereto appended.[7] the provisions of the act does not imply that an action of assumpsit may not be maintained to recover for those services. Chapman v. Keystone Lumber and Salt Co., 20 Mich. 358.

1. Hall v. Inhabitants of Benton, 69 Me. 346.

Where a boom is attached to the land, an injury caused by it to a vessel is not a marine injury, and could not be redressed in equity. Brig City of Erie v. Canfield, 27 Mich. 479.

The sale upon execution of a boom does not embrace the land inclosed by the piers, chains, and logs. Rollins v. Clay, 33 Me. 132.

Where one owning the right of fastening a boom to shore of an adjoining owner, and exercising that right in connection with his booms along his own shore, conveys his land "together with all booms and piers thereto appertaining as heretofore used by me," the right of fastening the boom as enjoyed by the grantor passes to the grantee. Hoskins v. Brown, 76 Me. 68.

2. Mann v. White River Log and Booming Co., 46 Mich. 38.

3. Weld v. Proprietors of Side Booms, 6 Me. 93.

4. Cotton v. Mississippi & Rum River Boom Co., 20 Minn. 378.

A statute giving a boom company the right to maintain a boom, the necessary effect of which will be to cause a flowage of the land of a riparian owner, is unconstitutional, unless provision is made for compensation. Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

5. Where the constitution provides that a stream shall be forever free, the legislature may nevertheless authorize a booming company to improve the stream and to charge a toll upon all logs floated in it. Osborne v. Knife Falls Boom Co., 32 Minn. 42; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 590; Wisconsin River Impr. Co. v. Munson, 43 Wis. 255.

6. The Michigan statute of 1855, for the forming of boom companies, in so far as it authorized the companies to assume control of logs of non-consenting parties, without any necessity arising from the obstruction of their own business, is unconstitutional, first, because it gives a police power to persons not elected or appointed; second, because it deprives persons of their property without due process of law. Ames v. Port Huron Log Driving and Booming Co., 11 Mich. 139.

7. A boom company was authorized by statute to maintain two booms, but was only required to collect and care for logs which came into the lower boom. A declaration averred that plaintiff drove logs into the limits of said boom, which it was defendant's duty to collect, secure, and deliver, "as provided in said act." Held, sufficient, on demurrer, without express averment that the boom referred to was the lower boom. Nelson v. St. Croix Boom Co., 52 Wis. 647.

Where the charter of a boom company requires it to start its main drive each year "as early as practicable." held, that the company performed its duty under the statute by appointing skilled lumbermen to take charge of the starting of the drive. Patterson v. Penobscot Log Driving Co., 71 Me. 44.

Where the charter of a boom company provided that the company might drive all logs and other timber in a certain river, the company is under no obligation to drive any logs; but if the privilege of the charter is accepted and the company undertakes to drive any logs, it must drive all. Weymouth v. Penobscot Log Driving Co., 71 Me. 29.

BOOTH.—A house or shelter built of slight materials for temporary purposes.[1]

BOOTS.—Covering for the feet.[2]

A statute granting the right to collect toll to any person or corporation who should make boom improvements at a prescribed expense, in a certain river, was held void for not vesting the franchise in some particular person or corporation. Sellers v. Union Lumbering Co., 39 Wis. 525.

Where a shore owner has rented his land every year to a boom company, and a city erects a dam which injures the value of his land for booming purposes, he may recover damages for such injury. Barrett v. Bangor, 70 Me. 335.

The possession of logs by a boom company for booming purposes only is that of the owner, and hence is no obstacle to a change of possession or delivery to a purchaser or mortgagee. Sheldon v. Warner, 26 Mich. 403.

One booming company cannot abate a mere private nuisance maintained by another booming company by an information filed in the name of the attorney-general. Attorney-General v. Evart Booming Co., 34 Mich. 462.

Where the charter provided for the survey of logs by the surveyor-general of Bangor, there being no officer of that title, it was held that a survey by the surveyor-general for the county of Penobscot, residing at Bangor, was a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the act. Penobscot Boom Corp. v. Lamson, 16 Me. 224.

Consolidation of two boom companies held not a consolidation of booms. Brown v. Susquehanna Boom Co., 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 383.

Construction of Minnesota statute, and charter provisions of boom company. Missisippi, etc., Boom Co. v. Prince, 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 391.

1. A permanent building used and slept in only for a short time, for the purpose of a fair, may be treated as the dwelling-house of the person so occupying it, in an indictment for burglary, though unoccupied the rest of the year. Rex v. Smith, 1 Moo. & R. 256.

But burglary cannot be committed in a mere tent or booth erected in a market or fair. 4 Bl. Com. 225; 1 Hale P. C. 557; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 17.

Where the offence alleged in an indictment consists of selling intoxicating liquors in a booth or other like place named in the statute, the indictment must specify it, and a mere allegation of a sale in the county is not sufficient; "for," said Marshall J., "in the description of the offence contained in the various statutes, place is always introduced as a part of the definition; as in the 4th section of the act of 1793 (Stat. Law. 1499), if any person shall sell, etc., in any house, booth, arbor, etc.; and in the 5th section of the act of 1820, page 1502, any person who shall sell, etc., in any booth, arbor, etc. So that if the place did not affect the grade of the offence, it might still be material to its proper specification. But, second, there is a difference in the penalty inflicted for selling by retail in different places. The first of the sections above referred to subjects the offence of selling in the places therein referred to, to a penalty of £3 or $10. The second imposes a penalty of twenty dollars. Upon comparing them it is seen that the last does not enumerate all the places mentioned in the first, and the consequence is that for selling in any place embraced in the first and not in the second of the sections, the penalty is $10, while for selling in any of the places mentioned in the other it is $20, so that there is a substantial ground of discrimination; and as the last statute, in effect, repeals the first as to the places named in the last, the designation of place in the presentment is necessary, in order to show under what statute the offence is charged, and to what penalty it is subject." Grimme v. Com., 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 263.

2. One Pair of Boots.—Where the defendant was indicted for stealing "one pair of boots" and the proof was that he stole two boots mismatched, being the right boot of two pair, it was held that the proof did not sustain the indictment, the court saying: "The object of certainty in an indictment is to inform the defendant plainly and precisely of what offence he is charged. This certainty must be not merely to a common intent, but to a certain intent in general, which requires that things shall be called by their right names, at least by such as they are usually known by. 'One pair of

BOOTY. See CAPTURE.

BORN. (See also BIRTH.)—It is now settled, according to the dictates of common-sense and humanity, that a child en ventre sa mère, for all purposes for his own benefit, is considered as absolutely born.[1] boots' means two boots paired, matched or suited to be used together." State v. Harris, 3 Harr. (Del.) 559.

Good Custom Cow-hide Boots.—In an action on a promissory note of the following tenor: "For value received of Parly Fairbanks, I promise to pay him or his order the sum of one hundred and ninety dollars of 'good custom cow-hide boots' at four dollars per pair; said boots to be delivered at my shop in Wardsboro' in two years from the first day of January instant, one half of said boots to be horse-hide legs, and one half of the other to be good kip-skin legs,"—it was held that said note was ambiguous, and parol proof was admissible to show the agreement and understanding of the parties in relation to the kind, quality, and worth of the boots intended; there being no definite meaning attached to the words "good custom cow-hide," etc. Wait v. Fairbanks, Brayton (Vt.). 77.

1. Swift v. Duffield, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 40. "He takes by descent, under the Statute of Distributions; is entitled to the benefit of a charge for raising portions for children; may be executor; have a guardian assigned; in executory devises is a life in being; may be vouched in a common recovery. In a devise to children or grandchildren the prima-facie intention will include a child en ventre sa mère, unless it appears by particular expressions in the will that the testator intended the contrary and confines it to children then born." See to the same effect McKnight v. Read, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 220 (in which case, however, the infant was not considered as born, it not being for his own benefit to take under the will in question); Marsellis v. Thalhimer, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 35, where it was decided that if the infant were born dead or in such an early stage of pregnancy as to be incapable of living, it is to be considered as never born, so far as the rights of others claiming through it are concerned. Harper v. Archer, 4 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.), 108, in which the court say: "It is now settled both in England and in this country that from the time of conception the infant is in esse for the purpose of taking any estate which is for his benefit, whether by descent, devise, or under the Statute of Distributions: provided, however, that the infant be born alive and after such a period of fœtal existence that its continuance in life might be reasonably expected. A premature birth would not be regarded as of a character to give completeness to the inchoate right." Doe dem. Clarke v. Clarke, 2 H. Black, 401; 1 Bl. Com. 130.

Born and to be Born.—A legacy was left in trust for the children of testator's son "born and to be born," interest to be paid them during their minorities, and the principal as they respectively came of age. Held that none were entitled to take who were not born at the period prescribed for distribution. "It is certain that slight indications of an intent to the contrary, such as the words 'born or to be born' will be insufficient to found an exception. To prevent an indisputable violation of the intention on the one hand, these words must, on the other, be taken to have been used in reference to the period of distribution, by which means each part of the testator's direction may be made consistent with the whole." Heisse v. Markland, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 275.

Born or to be Born.—A testator by a settlement made on the marriage of his daughter covenanted with trustees to leave an equal child's share of certain freehold property to the use of her husband for his life or until insolvency, with remainder to her use for life, remainder to the issue of the marriage, with specified limitations; and if there should be no issue, or, there being issue, all should die under 21 years of age, then to the use of her heirs "as if she had died sole and unmarried." His will recited the settlement, and the limitations contained in the will substantially coincided with those in the settlement. The ultimate limitation was as follows: "And in case every child born or to be born shall die under the age of 21 years and without leaving issue, to the use of the heirs and assigns of E. A. V. (the daughter), as if she had continued sole and unmarried," with remainder to the testator's right heirs. There were three children born of the marriage. Two died in infancy and previous to the date of the will; one was alive at that time and lived until the age of twenty-three. He died before the tes-

BOROUGHS. (See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.)—1. Definition.—The name given to incorporated towns or villages of a less grade than city in the States of Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

In England the term "borough" implied a town or village having the right to send members to Parliament.

2. History.—Boroughs existed in England from the earliest times.[1] Edward I. first summoned the towns to send representatives to Parliament, and that right became afterward an incident to all boroughs. About the time of Henry VI. municipalities began to be generally incorporated. The corporation at first consisted of a head or heads, one or more definite classes, and an indefinite class consisting of the general body of the freemen or burgesses.[2] This indefinite class was also known as the commonalty.

The common council or corporate meeting consisted at first of the definite classes and of as many of the freemen as chose to attend; in the course of time, however, the common council became also a select or definite class, and municipalities became close corporations,[3] and continued till the reform act of 1835.

tator, who died in 1849. E. A. V.'s husband became insolvent in the following year, and E. A.V. died in 1868. In ejectment by one who filled the double character of heir-at-law of the testator and of E. A. V. against an assign of E. A. V., held, that the ultimate limitation never took effect, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover as heir of the testator. Brookman v. Smith, L. R. 6 Ex. 291.

"The words actually used are 'born or to be born.' There is, in the first place, this obvious objection to reading these words as if they were used at the death, viz., that if so used they would require the additional words 'and now alive' to be added to them so as to make the words 'born and now alive, or to be born,' otherwise the limitation could not come in at all; for the word 'born' cannot be rejected, and the limitation is to take effect in case a child born or to be born died under twenty-one and without issue. But a child had been born and attained twenty-one, so that the condition upon which the estate was to go over failed altogether; and in order to give effect to those words as if they were used at the death, other words, 'and now alive' must be added, importing an additional condition, and this of itself seems an almost insuperable objection to reading them as so used. If the words were 'now born or to be born,' there can be no doubt that they must refer to the date of the will; or if they were 'born or to be born hereafter,' they must equally refer to the date of the will. . . . The words of the settlement are, 'And if there shall be no child of the marriage, or if,' etc. Now, at the time of making the will the testator could not use these words, because there was then one son living, and no one can doubt that this fact caused the altered language of the will. It was having regard to that fact that the words in the will are, 'child born or to be born.' It seems to follow from this that the testator had in his mind the existence of one of the class to take, and having that in his mind, he used the words 'born or to be born.' The case then is rather one of an omission of the testator to provide for a lapse than of a class contemplated not coming into existence." Affirmed in L. R. 7 Ex. 271.

1. Firma Burgi by Thomas Modox.

2. The burgesses were the permanent free inhabitants, performing their duties and enjoying their privileges as free inhabitant householders, paying scott and bearing lot, presented, sworn, and enrolled in the court leet. Merewether & Stevens Hist. of Boroughs, p. v. Introd.

3. The right of participation in the corporate meetings and elections was regarded rather as an inconvenience than a privilege, and the supineness of the commonalty permitted the administration of affairs to devolve upon the select classes—a condition of affairs of which the crown was quick to take advantage in order to control more surely the elections to Par-

In America the charters of Baltimore and Penn empowered them to incorporate towns into boroughs: but in Maryland there were never any boroughs erected. In Virginia the term "borough" was applied to certain districts made up of hundreds, and plantations having representation in the House of Burgesses; but boroughs proper, as incorporated towns, obtained no footing in that State.[1] In New Jersey boroughs date back to the early part of the eighteenth century, but they were erected by special acts, and without uniformity of purpose or system till 1818, when a general borough act was passed.[2] In Connecticut boroughs are erected by act of legislature. The present boroughs were enumerated in 1875.[3] In Pennsylvania few boroughs were erected by the proprietary, but after the Revolution numerous special charters were granted by the legislature. In 1834 a general system was provided whereby the court of quarter sessions, with concurrence of the grand jury, might erect certain territory with its inhabitants into boroughs.[4] This act is strictly construed, and was prospective only in its effect.[6]

3. Constitution and Powers.—Boroughs have the common-law powers strictly incidental to municipal corporations, and such other powers only as their special charters, or the general acts under which they are created, confer.[7]

The general powers, duties, liabilities, and privileges held by boroughs in common with other municipalities will be best considered under the title of MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

liament. This usurpation secured its first legal sanction in the famous case of corporations, 4 Rep. 77 b. See also Willcock on Corporations; Merewether & Stephens Hist. of Boroughs, Introd.; Philadelphia, 1681–1887, pp. 15, 16; Allinson & Penrose; Report on English Municipal Corporations, vol. 1, note B; 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76.

1. Hist. of Va. 161, Virginia Local Institutions; Johns Hopkins University Studies, Third Series, Nos. 2, 3.

2. Act April 5, 1878; Laws of 1878, p. 403. By this act, by the petition and vote of the inhabitants of any township or part thereof embracing an area not exceeding 4 square miles and containing a population not to exceed five thousand may become a borough. The petition is presented to the freeholder, who calls the election. Each borough elects a mayor and six councilmen, who serve without compensation.

3. Revised Statutes, p. 2, title 2. The charters cannot be altered on petition by the assembly without due advertisement of said petition. Rev. Stats. of 1875, title 6, § 7, p. 79; Southport v. Ogden, 23 Conn. 130.

4. Pennsylvania Boroughs, by Halcome; Johns Hopkins University Studies, Fourth Series, No. 4; Act April 1, 1834, P. L. 163; Act April 3, 1851, P. L. 320; Brightly's Purd. Dig. (Pa.) 125.

5. The Pennsylvania act of 1834 does not authorize the incorporation into a borough of two or more villages, together with a tract of open farming country. Borough of West Philadelphia, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 281. No more than the village itself with its proper territory can be thus incorporated. Borough of Little Meadows, 28 Pa. St. 256; Borough of Sewickley, 36 Pa. St. 80.

6. Com. v. Montrose, 52 Pa. St., 391.

As to Ohio: In an indictment a description of a municipality as an "organized borough and village" was held a good description of an "organized village." "The words 'borough and village' are to be understood as duplicate or cumulative names of the same thing. . . . Whether a borough is a village, and whether we have any boroughs in Ohio, the questions argued by counsel, we need not now decide." Brown v. State, 18 Ohio St. 507.

7. Borough of York v. Forscht, 23 Pa. St. 391; Northern Liberties v. Gas Co., 12 Pa. St. 320; Carlisle v. Baker, 1 Yeates (Pa.), 471; Respublica v. Duquet, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 493; Stiles v. Jones, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 491; Douglass v. Com., 2 Rawle (Pa.), 263; Mayor v. Davis, 6 W. & S. (Pa.)

BOROUGH-ENGLISH.—A custom that prevails in some ancient boroughs that the youngest son shall inherit the estate in preference to all his elder brothers—so named in contradistinction (as it were) to the Norman customs.[1]

BORROW. (See also LOAN.)—I. The idea of a borrowing is not filled out unless there is in the agreement therefor a promise or understanding that what is borrowed will be repaid or returned—the thing itself, or something like it of equal value, with or without compensation for the use of it in the mean time. To borrow is the reciprocal action with to lend; and to lend or to loan, say the dictionaries, is the parting with a thing of value to another for a time fixed or indefinite, yet to have some time an ending, to be used or enjoyed by that other; the thing itself, or the equivalent of it, to be given back at the time fixed or when lawfully asked for, with or without compensation for the use as may be agreed upon.[2]

II. The word "borrow" in its broader sense implies a contract for the use of money. The terms of the contract are within the control of the contracting parties so long as they keep within the law and there is no legal objection to a perpetual loan. Such contract implies the voluntary advance of a sum of money, repayment of which is not to be demanded, presumably for some benefit or advantage to the lender. Such transactions are common in England, and are not unknown in this country.[3]

269; Manayunk v. Davis, 2 Pars. (Pa.) 289; Wartman v. Phila., 33 Pa. St. 202; Staats v. Borough of Washington, 44 N. J. L. 605; Weed v. Borough of Greenwich, 45 Con. 170.

1. 1 Bl. Com. 75; 2 Bl. Com. 83; 1 Steph. Com. 54, 211.

2. Kent v. Quicksilver Mining Co., 78 N. Y. 177.

"'Borrowed' necessarily imports an obligation to return the thing borrowed if it be loaned for use, or to return its kind and value if it be loaned for consumption." Hart v. Burton, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 324.

3. P. & R. R. Co. v. Stichter, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 327–8, where a railroad company proposed to raise funds by issuing irredeemable bonds at a large discount which were not to be entitled to interest until after the common stock had received a dividend of six per cent, were then to take all revenues up to six per cent, and were then to rank pari passu with the common shares for further dividend, and it was held that the right to issue such bonds was within the implied power of the corporation to "borrow money and issue obligations therefor." The court (three judges dissenting) say: "It is urged, however, that this transaction is not a borrowing of money within the implied powers of the company; that the meaning of the word 'borrow' as applied to moneyed transactions involves an obligation to return the sum or thing borrowed. This is a narrow view of the subject. It is true we often use this word in the sense of returning the thing borrowed in specie, as to borrow a horse. But it is not limited to this sense. Among the definitions given by Webster are the following: 1st, 'to take or receive from another on trust, with the intention of returning or giving an equivalent for;' and, 2d, 'to take from another for one's use; to adopt from a foreign source; to appropriate; to assume.' We need not give the apt illustrations with which the learned lexicographer adorns his text. While the borrowing of money is usually accompanied with a contract for the return of the principal at a stated time, it is not always nor necessarily so. The object of loaning money is to obtain a return in the way of interest. The interest is the consideration for the loan, the hire or price which is paid for the use of it. If I agree to pay $60 for the use of $1000 for one year, it is a borrowing of money. It is equally so if I contract at the same rate for the use of it for ten years. Is it any the less so when the contract is perpetual and the loan irredeemable? The equivalent is paid an-

BORROWER—within the meaning of the N. Y. usury law (1 R. S. 772, § 8; § 4, chap. 430, Laws of 1837), enabling any "borrower" to sue in equity for a discovery as to usury without tender of principal or interest—includes any person who is a party to the original contract, or in any way liable to pay the loan.[1] It was held not to be confined to the person to whom the original loan was made, but to embrace his sureties,[2] such as accommodation indorsers;[3] but not a subsequent grantee of premises covered by a usurious mortgage;[4] nor the general assignee of an insolvent nually in the shape of interest. We do not think trading corporations any more than individuals are restricted in their moneyed transactions to the narrow meaning of the word 'borrow.'"

Borrowed.—The word "borrowed" in a writing under seal imports an acknowledgment by the maker that he has agreed to refund the amount borrowed, or is under a legal obligation to do so, and amounts to an express covenant to pay it at the time designated. Hart v. Burton, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 324.

The word "borrow" imports in itself a promise to pay as strongly as the word "due," and the written acknowledgment that a party, has "borrowed" money is as clearly a note for the direct payment of money as is the written acknowledgment that money is due. Harrow v. Dugan, 6 Dana (Ky.), 341.

All Borrowed Money, in a deed of composition with creditors, includes in ordinary popular sense all sums of money loaned by a creditor to a debtor without regard to the mode or the existence of any security or evidence of indebtedness, and it is incumbent on one alleging a different meaning to establish by clear, satisfactory proof that the terms used have acquired and were used in a technical or peculiar sense. Murray v. Spencer, 24 Md. 524.

Borrowing of Money.—A contract made by a city to pay a sum of money with interest to a person who has assumed the payment of interest on some of the city's debt—as well interest to become due as interest already due—is not a "borrowing of money," but is a contract for the payment of a debt. Gelpcke v. City of Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.), 221. Compare Reg. v. St. Michaels, 6 El. & Bl. 807, where an agreement by churchwardens to treat a sum due to contractors as a loan from them was, under the circumstances, held to constitute a "borrowing." "It was further objected that the power was to borrow money on the rates, whereas the power exercised was to charge a debt on the rates. But it appears to me that the effect of the transaction as stated in the bonds is the same as it would have been if . . . had lent the money to the churchwardens, and they had given the bonds for the loan, and had then paid the debt due for work by returning the money to those who lent it. When parties agree that a transaction shall have the same result as would exist if money had passed and repassed from one to the other, it has been decided that this agreement is to be carried out by the law."

Receiving Deposits, as understood in the practice of banking, is different from "borrowing money" in the ordinary acceptation of that term, and agreeing to allow interest on moneys deposited with a bank and giving notes or certificates or any other evidences of debt therefor does not constitute the doing so an act of borrowing; hence the power of receiving deposits does not necessarily include the power of borrowing. Leavitt v. Yates, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 165.

1. National Bank v. Lewis, 75 N. Y. 523; Leavitt v. De Launey, 4 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 281.

2. Cole v. Savage, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 590; Livingston v. Harris, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 336; Post v. Boardman, Clarke (N. Y.), 527; Perrine v. Striker, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 602

3. Hungersford's Bank v. Dodge, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 627; Hungersford's Bank v. Potsdam, etc., R. Co., 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 25. But see, contra, Allerton v. Belden, 49 N. Y. 37, in which the court say: "It may be difficult to assign any good reason why the legislature should not have extended to a surety, in such a case, the same privilege which they have afforded to the principal debtor; but as they have in terms confined the benefits of the provision to the borrower, we cannot remedy this supposed defect by giving to the word 'borrower' a construction of which it is not justly susceptible."

4. Post v. Pres't of Bank, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 391; Schemerhorn v. Tallman, 14 N. Y. 127; Rexford v. Widger, 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 131 and 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 641.

debtor;[1] nor a legatee, devisee, or executor.[2] The limited meaning of the word seems to have prevailed, however; sureties are now excluded;[3] and "the tendency of judicial opinion to limit the application of the word 'borrower' to the person who borrowed the money and was at the time a party to the contract, and who continued to stand in the position of borrower, is very marked."[4]

BOSTON.—The term "port" or "harbor" of Boston as used in the pilotage acts is not satisfied by restricting its meaning and application to the city of Boston, and to vessels entering its docks and lying at its wharves, or in the stream between them and the inner islands of the harbor. It is a term or designation which clearly includes all those ports which use the several channels leading to the city of Boston itself; and this embraces the mouths of the various rivers which empty into the harbor.[5] It includes the opposite shore of Chelsea.[6]

BOTH. See note 7.

BOTTLES.—An averment in an indictment alleging larceny of a number of "bottles" of whiskey and of brandy is not sustained by proof that the defendant drew the liquor from casks into bottles which he took with him for the purpose.[8]

A demijohn is not a bottle, within the meaning of a statute

1. Wright v. Clapp, 28 Hun (N. Y.), 7, following Wheelock v. Lee, 64 N. Y. 242.

2. Buckingham v. Corning, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 503, affirmed in 91 N. Y. 525.

3. Buckingham v. Corning, 91 N. Y. 525.

4. Buckingham v. Cooning, 91 N. Y. 525, where the cases are reviewed.

5. Martin v. Hilton, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 378.

6. Young v. The Orpheus, 119 Mass. 185. See also 1 Bish. Crim. Law, § 147.

7. Or of Both.—A statute enacting that no person should acquire a settlement in any parish by reason of dwelling in a rented tenement unless such tenement should consist of "a dwelling-house or building or of land within such parish, or of both," applies to a dwelling-house and building. "But then it is said the statute requires that the tenement shall consist of a dwelling-house or building, or of land, or of both, and that the word 'both' can apply only to two of the things previously mentioned, and that it must be referred to a dwelling-house and land, or a building and land, but not to a dwelling-house and building. The word 'both' is improperly used in this sentence. But as no good reason can be assigned why a tenement (in order to confer a settlement) should not consist of a dwelling-house and building, as well as a dwelling-house and land, I think we are not bound by the inaccurate use of the word 'both' to hold, in this case, that the legislature meant to confine the meaning of the word 'tenement' to a dwelling-house and land, or to a building and land. I think it includes a dwelling-house and building, as well as a building and land, and that it may even apply to all three." Rex v. Inhab. of Tadcaster, 4 B. & Ad. 710.

8. Com. v. Gavin, 121 Mass. 54; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 255. "It was unnecessary to allege that the liquors were contained in bottles, but the language of the indictment admits of no other construction than that it charges the larceny of bottles containing, or filled with, the liquors described. . . . It was suggested in the argument that the larceny of a bottle of whiskey means merely the larceny of the whiskey contained in the bottle. But as bottles are not of a uniform size, the term 'bottle' has no recognized and established meaning as a measure of quantity. In this view of the case, the indictment would be reduced to a mere charge of stealing a quantity of whiskey and a quantity of brandy, without naming any definite quantity of either. We hardly need say that such an indictment could not be sustained. 2 Hale P. C. 182."

requiring bottles of spirituous liquors to be packed in packages of one dozen each.[1]

BOTTOMRY. (See also ADMIRALTY; HYPOTHECATION; MARITIME LIEN; RESPONDENTIA BOND; SHIPPING INSURANCE.)

1. Definition.—An agreement entered into by the owner of a ship or his agent, whereby, in consideration of a sum of money advanced for the use of his ship, the borrower undertakes to repay the same, with a high rate of interest, upon the condition that the ship terminates her voyage successfully, and binds or hypothecates the ship to performance of his contract; the debt being lost in the event of the non-arrival of the ship at her destination.[2]

The freight and cargo, as well as the ship, may be included in the agreement.[3]

2. General Nature.—The form of the instrument is usually, but not invariably, that of a bond.[4] The contract must be in writing, and, whatever be its form, it must contain in substance all the necessary terms.[5] As creatures of necessity and distress, bonds may be expected to assume different shapes,[6] they are favored instruments,[7] and must be construed without recourse to extrin-

1. U. S. v. Ninety Demijohns of Rum, 8 Fed. Repr. 487.

2. Rapalje & Lawrence's Law Dict. 145, "Bottomry."

3. When the cargo alone is hypothecated the agreement is called a respondentia bond. Williams & Bruce's Ad. p. 31.

The contract of hypothecation was unknown to the common law: it varies essentially from both a pledge and a mortgage; it neither transfers property nor is it dependent upon possession; it simply confers a right, to be enforced through the medium of legal process, by the arrest of the res. Maclachlan's Law of Merchant Shipping. 47, 48.

4. Rapalje & Lawrence's Law Dict., "Bottomry."

5. It should state that the vessel is hypothecated, the sum for which she is hypothecated; the rate of interest agreed to be paid, the voyage on which she is about to proceed, and the fact that payment of the loan is dependent upon the safe arrival of the vessel at her destination. Will. & Br. Adm. Jur. 50, 51.

6. Which cannot be limited except by the condition of a faithful and benevolent discharge of the authority exercised in granting them. The Kennesley Castle, 3 Hagg. Adm. 78.

7. When once the transaction is proved to have been clearly and indisputably that of bottomry, that is, when the distress is admitted or established and the want of personal credit is beyond question, and the bond in all essentials apparently correct; then, under such circumstances, the strong presumption of law is in favor of its validity, and it will not be impugned, save when there is clear and conclusive evidence of fraud, or when it is proved beyond doubt that, though purporting in form to be a bottomry transaction, the money was in truth advanced upon a different consideration. The Gratitudine, notes thereto; Tud. Cas. Merc. Law, 75.

The conduct of third parties will not sic evidence;[1] they may be good in part and bad in part.[2] Being choses in action, they were not formerly assignable at law; but in admiralty the rule is otherwise.[3] They are negotiable instruments,[4] and may be given at the same time with and as collateral security for bills of exchange.[5] The master cannot by a bottomry bond hypothecate the vessel and by the same instrument pledge the personal credit of his owners as well.[6] The owners' affect the validity of the bond if the bondholder have no privity therewith. The Zodiac, 1 Hagg. Adm. 326; The Atlantic Insur. Co. v. Conard, 4 Wash. R. (C. C.) 662.

In a well-founded claim the court will not enter upon a minute examination of the bond or regard any defect in the formality thereof. The Alexander, 1 Dods. 280.

1. The Emancipation, 1 W. Rob. 128; The Brig Atlantic, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 522.

Proof of the intention of the parties will not be admitted to supply a deficiency affecting the validity of the bond. The Edmund Albro, 10 Ben. (D. C.) 668.

Bottomry bonds are to be liberally construed, so as to carry into effect the intentions of the parties. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Sto. (C. C.) 465.

But the court is powerless to vary the stipulations of the contract merely for the purpose of administering equitable relief. The Brig Atlantic, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 517.

2. The Augusta, 1 Dods. 283; The Hunter, 1 Ware (D. C.), 249.

And though bad as a bottomry bond it may be good as a mortgage. Greeley v. Smith, 3 Wood. & M. (C. C.) 236.

And whilst valueless as an express lien it may be evidence of an implied lien. The William & Emmeline, Blatchf. & H. (D. C.) 66.

Where the valid amount is small, and the total amount of the bond large, it does not follow that the court will, as of course, pronounce even for the valid portion of the bond. The Osmanli, 14 Jur. 96.

3. Burke v. The M. P. Rich. 1 Clif. (C. C.) 312.

4. Abbot Ship. 154.

But it is not a negotiable instrument in the broad sense in which that term is employed as applied to bills of exchange and promissory notes. Thompson v. Downing, 14 M. & W. 406.

But a bond may be transferred and sued upon by the assignee in his own name, or it seems also in that of the assignor. Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Clif. (C. C.) 313.

The assignee takes subject to whatever legal infirmities were incident to the instrument whilst it was possessed by the former owner The Onward, 4 L. R. Adm. & Ecc. 53.

The lien is not lost by the assignment. The Belle of the Sea, 15 Int. Rev. Rec. (C. C.) 104.

Nor are the rights of the assignee, of necessity, affected by reason of the fact that he is also a mortgagee. Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Clif. (C. C.) 308.

The fact that he is also a mortgagee. Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Clif. (C. C.) 308.

5. The Jane, 1 Dods. 466; The William & Emmeline Blatchf. & H. (D. C.) 66.

But the bill must share the fate of the bond. The Brig Atlantic, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 514.

When a bill is drawn and a bond given for the same consideration, the owner is not bound to honor the bill; at least not before the safe arrival of the vessel and the end of the risk. For it does not appear that anything will ever be due until the happening of the event on which the bond becomes payable, and then the payment of one security extinguishes both. The Brig Hunter, 1 Ware (D. C.), 252.

The bondholder may sue upon the bond notwithstanding the fact that there has not been such a dishonor of the bill as might have been necessary to give a right of action against a drawee or indorsee thereof; it is sufficient if reasonable efforts have been made for the purpose of getting the bill accepted and paid. The Staffordshire, L. R. 4 P. C. 194.

The bondholder's lien is not affected by the bill of exchange. The Hilarity, Blatch. & H. (D. C.) 90.

The bondholder has his option: he may, if the debt is not paid, sue upon the bill of exchange or upon the bond. The Lord Cochrane, 2 W. Rob. Adm. 336.

6. Stainbank v. Sheppard, 13 C. B. 418; Stainbank v. Fenning, 11 C. B. 51.

But the shipowner may hypothecate ship and freight and bind himself personally, or he may by express instructions authorize the master to do the same.

liability is limited to the value of the property hypothecated.[1] Actual total loss of the property, by the described perils, extinguishes the bondholder's right of recovery, but so long as the vessel exists in specie in the hands of her owners she continues subject to the hypothecation.[2] Underwriters and lenders on bottomry stand on a different footing,[3] as do also lenders on bottomry and lenders on ordinary loans.[4]

3. Maritime Risk.—It is essential to the contract itself that it should be founded on maritime risk, and that payment of the loan should be made contingent upon the safe arrival of the vessel.[5] If the risk has once commenced and the voyage or adventure be voluntarily broken up by the borrower, in any manner whatever, the bond is forthwith payable.[6]

Willis v. Palmer, 7 C. B. N. S. 340, 360, 361.

If the agreement binds the owners personally to payment at all events, it is not a contract of bottomry, and in the absence of the express sanction of the owners cannot be sustained either at law or in admiralty. The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 554; Stainbank v. Sheppard, 13 C. B. 418; Stainbank v. Fenning, 11 C. B. 51.

1. They cannot in general be made personally liable if the fund realized turns out to be inadequate. They are liable, however, so far as the same comes into their hands. The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538.

And they are liable also under the circumstances set forth in rule U. S. S. C. Admiralty Rules, Rule 18.

2. And this is true though she may require repairs greater than her value. The Insurance Co. v. Gossler, 96 U. S. 645.

3. Wilmer v. The Smila, 2 Pet. Ad. (D. C.) 295.

The doctrine of constructive total loss has no applicability to contracts of this character. Thompson v. The Royal Exchange Assn. 1 M. & S. 30.

Unless the property hypothecated be actually destroyed, it is not a total loss within the meaning of the contract of bottomry. The Catharine, 1 Eng. L. & Eq. 697; Thompson v. Royal Exchange Assoc., 1 M. & S. 30.

4. The essential difference between a bottomry loan and a simple loan is that in the latter case the money is at the risk of the borrower, and must be paid at all events; in the former it is at the risk of the lender during the voyage, and his right to payment is dependent upon the safe arrival of the vessel. The Brig Atlantic, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 516.

5. The Nelson, 1 Hagg. Adm. R. 169; Stainbank v. Sheppard, 13 C. B. 442; The Robert L. Lane, 1 Low. (D. C.) 390.

But it is not absolutely necessary that the condition should be stated in express terms. It is sufficient if it may be inferred from the contents of the instrument. The Emancipation, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 128; The Nelson, 1 Hagg. Ad. R. 169; The Edmund Albro, 10 Ben. (D. C.) 668.

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible for this purpose. The Emancipation, 1 W. Rob. Ad. R. 128; The Edmund Albro, 10 Ben. (D. C.) 668.

But the existence of a marine risk cannot be inferred from the rate of interest charged or from the mere use of the word hypothecate. The Emancipation, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 130.

Whilst the absence of an agreement to pay maritime interest is a significant circumstance in determining whether the loan was made upon the hazard of the voyage, it is not conclusive proof that no maritime risk was assumed. Free v. Ship Pride of the Ocean, 3 F. R. (D. C.) 164.

6. A sale or transfer of the vessel is sufficient. The Draco, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 157.

As is a voluntary abandonment of the voyage. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Sto. (C. C.) 465.

Or a voluntary ending of the voyage at some intermediate port. The Great Pacific, L. R. 2 Adm. & Ecc. 381.

But the bond is not violated if the master is driven to proceed to a port without the limits of the voyage for the purpose of repairs. The Armadillo, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 256.

But it is otherwise if the deviation be caused for the purpose of making repairs, the result of a collision, occasioned by

4. Maritime Interest.—In consequence of the maritime risk incurred by the lender, he is permitted to charge a rate of interest which under other circumstances would be usurious. The rate of interest thus charged is known as maritime interest.[1] It is not necessary to the validity of the bond that it should carry maritime interest,[2] but when it does not appear clearly upon the face of the instrument that the contract is subject to marine risk, the circumstance that a low rate of interest was taken raises a suspicion that a sea risk was not intended, and that the contract, therefore, is not one of bottomry.[3] If the voyage is defeated before the risk is run, only legal interest can be recovered.[4] When the bond provides for neither marine interest nor marine risk, and its condition is a mere pledge to recover a debt and simple interest, it is not valid as a contract of bottomry.[5]

5. Who May Execute.—A bottomry bond may be executed and the vessel and freight money hypothecated by the owner and by the master as well. The owner may resort to a loan on bottomry at any time, at any place, and for any lawful purpose.[6] Circumstances which do not restrain the power of the owner limit the authority of the master.[7] With respect to cargo, the power and authority of both vessel-owner and master are subject to certain definite restrictions.[8] the fault of the borrower. Force v. Ship Pride of the Ocean, 3 F. R. 164.

But a fraudulent refusal to prosecute the voyage is sufficient. Joyce v. Williamson, 3 Douglass, 164.

If, however, the ship has not been exposed to the risk, the lender must be content to forego the marine interest and to accept instead thereof ordinary interest. Deguilder v. Depeister, 1 Vern. 263.

If a total loss happens by capture the lender cannot recover; but if the ship is only detained by capture the bond is not forfeited. Joyce v. Williamson, 1 Doug. 164.

1. The William & Emmeline, 1 Blatch. & H. (D. C.) 66.

When the premium is clearly excessive the court will order it to be reduced. This power is exercised with great caution, and after a consideration of all of the circumstances of the case. The Cognac, 2 Hagg. Ad. 377; The Brig Hunter, 1 Ware (D. C.), 249.

2. Force v. Ship Pride of the Ocean, 3 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 162; The Emancipation, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 130.

3. The Royal Arch, Swabey R. 269.

But whilst the absence of an agreement for maritime interest is a significant circumstance, it is not conclusive. Force v. Ship Pride of the Ocean, 3 F. R. (D. C.) 162.

4. Greeley v. Smith, 3 Wood. & M. (C. C.) 236; The Atlas, 2 Hagg. Adm. 49.

5. The William & Emmeline, 1 Blatchf. & H. (D. C.) 66; The Ann C. Pratt, 18 Howard (U. S.), 63.

6. When made at the home port they are frequently made on time. When made abroad they are generally made for the next voyage. Wilmer v. The Smilax, 2 Pet. Adm. (D. C.) 295; The Draco, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 157; The Jane, 1 Dods. Ad. R. 461.

When the contract is made with the owner, it is not necessary that the money borrowed should be advanced for the vessel's necessities. The Draco, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 157.

Nor is the concurrence of the master requisite when the bond is made by the owner. The Duke of Bedford, 2 Hagg. Ad. 294.

Before the passage of the judicature acts contracts of bottomry made by the owners themselves when in English port could not be enforced in the Admiralty Court. The Royal Arch, Swabey, 277.

But from the time a ship enters a foreign port all expenses necessary to enable her to prosecute her voyage for which the owner or master is liable are expenses for which a bottomry bond may be given by the owner. The Edmund, 29 L. J. Adm. 76.

7. Will. & Br. Adm. Jur. 32.

8. Will. & Br. Adm. Jur. p. 32.

6. What Justifies the Master in Executing.—In the absence of express authority[1] the master should not, in consequence of the high rate of interest usually charged, resort to a loan on bottomry excepting when impelled to do so by absolute necessity.[2] His duty, in the first instance, when destitute of funds, is to endeavor to obtain them on the personal credit of the vessel-owner. Hence, if the owner be without known personal credit in the port of distress, the master's first duty is to endeavor to communicate with his principal and endeavor to ascertain whether or not funds can be raised by recourse to the personal credit of the latter, and whether or not he shall resort to a loan on bottomry.[3] With regard to the cargo the duty of the master is, at least, equally imperative. Whenever communication is practicable the owner of the cargo must be communicated with.[4] When the master is dealing with the cargo for the benefit of the voyage he must endeavor to hold the balance evenly between his two principals; he must not sacrifice the ship to the cargo or the cargo to the ship.[5] Assuming that the master has no other means of procuring funds and has not been able to communicate with the owners,

1. If acting under express authority, the limit of the master's powers depends upon his instructions. Communication with the owner in such a case may be unnecessary. The Bonaparte, 3 W. Rob. Adm. 298.

The express authority may be sufficient to enable the master to do what the owner himself might do, if present. The Royal Arch, Swab. 276.

2. The necessity must be absolute. The absence of necessity will lead to the undoing of the bond. The Lord Nelson, 1 Hagg. Ad. 169.

Necessity creates the law, whatever is reasonable and just is legal. The Gratitudine, 3 C. Rob. 266; The Circassian, 3 Ben. (D. C.) 416.

3. Tud. Cas. Mer. & Mar. Law, p. 67.

When practicable, the owner should be communicated with, however bad his credit may be, unless he has been judicially declared insolvent. Baron v. Stewart, 3 L. R. P. C. C. 199.

The communication must state both the necessity for the expenditure and the necessity of resorting to a loan on bottomry therefor. The Panama, L. R. P. C. C. 199; The Onward, 4 L. R. Adm. & Eccl. 38, 55; The Guilio, 27 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 318.

The concurrence of the owner is important, as evidence of the existence of necessity. The Royal Arch, Swab. R. 269.

When communication is practicable and is not resorted to or excused, payment of the bond will be denied. The Circassian, 3 Ben. (D.C.) 398; The Guilio, 27 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 318.

But if the master be unable to communicate with the owner within a time commensurate with the necessities of the ship, communication may be dispensed with. Wallace v. Fielden, 7 Moore's P. C. C. 398.

When great delay and uncertainty of the transmission of letters exist want of communication may be excused. The Lizzie, 2 L. R. Ad. & Eccl. 264.

After waiting for a reasonable time the receipt of an answer, the master is justified, in the event of its non-arrival, in exercising his own discretion. The Carnac, 2 Law Rep. P. C. C. 505; The Gratitudine, 3 C. Robinson, 240.

4. The Casa Maritima, 2 App. Cas. 156.

The necessity of resorting to hypothecation by bottomry should be sufficiently stated in the communication. The Onward, 4 L. R. Adm. & Eccl. 38, 55.

When it is not practicable to communicate with the owner of the cargo communication with the shipper will be sufficient. The Bonaparte, 3 W. Rob. Adm. 298.

When there would be great delay and uncertainty in the transmission of letters want of communication may be excused. The Lizzie. 2 L. R. Ad. & Eccl. 254; The Gratitudine, 3 C. Rob. Adm. 240, 261.

5. If the repairs to the ship produce no benefit, or prospect of benefit, to the cargo, the latter cannot be hypothecated or that, in the event of communication, he has failed to obtain sufficient help or instructions from them, he[1] may, in case of absolute necessity,[2] for proper purposes, when in a foreign port,[3] resort to a loan for the payment of which ship, freight and cargo may be hypothecated. The master cannot hypothecate if he has funds of the owner within his reach,[4] but he is not bound to take money on board which belongs to the shipper before resorting to bottomry.[5] When the master can procure funds on the owner's credit,[6] or by advances on freight or passage money, he is not authorized to borrow on bottomry.[7] It is said that if he has funds of his own they must first be exhausted.[8] This, however, is not free from doubt.[9] A loan on bottomry, when made by the master, in the presence of the owner, is only valid by reason of his implied assent.[10] The master has no power to borrow on bottomry if a consignee or agent of the owner be present with funds.[11]

It is necessity alone that supports bottomry bonds; the absence therefor. The Amelie, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 18–27.

The cargo cannot be bottomried in any event before it is laden on board. The Jonathan Goodhue, Swab. 355.

The master has no authority to pledge the cargo without the consent of the shipper or consignee when it appears from the port where the vessel entered in distress that the cargo could have been forwarded by another vessel, and that it was for the interest of the shipper that it should have been forwarded instead of being hypothecated. The Julia Blake, 107 U. S. 426.

1. As a general rule, any person acting as master may, under suitable circumstances, exercise this authority. The Jane, 1 Dods. Ad. 464.

Even though he be not the registered master. The Orelia, 3 Hagg. Adm. 81.

One appointed master as a measure of necessity by the agent of the underwriters or by the consignee of the cargo may have the requisite authority. The Kennesley Castle, 3 Hagg. Adm. R. 1; The Alexander, 1 Dods. Ad. 278.

Or if appointed by an English or American consul. The Zodiac, 1 Hagg. Adm 320; Cowan v. The Jackmel Packet, 2 Ben. (D. C.) 107.

2. Necessity creates the law, it supersedes rules, and whatever is reasonable and just is likewise legal. The Gratitudine, 3 C. Rob. Adm. 240, 266; The Circassian, 3 Ben. (D. C.) 416.

That is a sufficient necessity which would induce an owner to so act, if on the spot. The Fortitude, 3 Sum. (C. C.) 228, 246.

If the master acts bona fide and with reasonable care, the rights of the parties are bound by his acts, although it should be afterwards found that he had committed an error of judgment, and might have acted more beneficially in another manner. The Ship Packet, 3 Mason (C. C.), 255.

If the loan be indispensable, and if it be incurred on the credit of the vessel, it is no objection to its validity that it was executed after the repairs were made or supplies furnished. The Yuba, 4 Blatch. (C. C.) 352.

3. The ports of each State are for this purpose considered foreign to the other. Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Clif. (C. C.) 308.

It may be given at the port of destination as well as at any other foreign port. Reed v. Com. Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 352.

4. The William & Emmeline, 1 Blatch. & H. 73.

5. The Packet, 3 Mason (C. C.), 225.

6. Waldon v. Chamberlain, 3 Wash. (C. C.) 290; The Fortitude, 3 Sum. (C. C.) 257.

7. The Hunter, 1 Ware (D. C.), 254; The Aurora, 1 Wheaton (U. S.), 96; Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Cliff. (C. C.) 314.

8. The Packet, 3 Mason (C. C.), 255, 263.

9. The William & Emmeline, 1 Blatch. & H. 73.

10. The Ship Panama, Olcott, 348.

Unless it be given in a case of stringent necessity and the owner withholds his assent unreasonably. 3 Kent, 172.

11. Tunno v. The Ship Mary, 1 Bee (D. C.), 120; Putnam v. The Polly, 1 Bee (D. C.), 157. Rucher v. Conyngham. 2 Pet. Adm. (D. C.) 295.

of necessity is their undoing.[1] The necessity for funds may arise in various ways: to supply money with which to make repairs,[2] if in a foreign port,[3] when repairs are absolutely necessary to enable the ship to prosecute her voyage or to procure supplies for the subsistence of passengers or crew[4] or to pay the wages of the crew,[5] but a personal debt of the master is not a sufficient necessity.[6] But the circumstance that the ship is detained for a debt at a foreign port will, in some cases, justify the master in hypothecating to defray expenses to meet which he would have no authority to raise money by bottomry were it not from the fact of ship's liability to arrest therefor.[7]

7. Who May Loan.—A bond cannot be ordinarily given to a person who is indebted to the owners in respect to the ship.[8] A part owner is debarred from loaning on bottomry,[9] but under certain circumstances an agent or consignee[10] of the vessel or the owner

1. The Lord Nelson, 1 Hagg. Adm. 169.

And when the necessity is clear the court will not examine minutely into the particulars of repairs or rigidly examine small items of expenditure. The Royal Arch., Swab. R. 279.

2. The Aurora, 1 Wheat. R. (U. S.) 96.

But not to secure prior advances if made without any reliance whatever on the vessel's credit. The Packet, 3 Mason (C. C.), 255.

But though executed after the advance was made the bond will be valid if its execution was the result of an agreement made at the time of the advance. The Edward Albro, 10 Ben. (D. C.) 668; The Karnak, 2 L. R. Adm. & Ecc. 301.

3. The ports of each State are for this purpose foreign to the other. Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Cliff. (C. C.) 308.

4. The Cognac, 2 Hagg. Ad. 392.

5. If due at the time the bond was given, but if not due until the completion of the voyage, a bottomry bond cannot be given therefor. The Cognac, 2 Hagg. Ad. R. 393.

6. Not even if it be necessary for him to resort to such a measure in order to free himself from arrest. The Prince George, 4 Moore, P. C. C. 21.

7. The Edmund, Lush. 57, 211.

But it is not every debt for which a ship is liable to be detained that will justify this course. The Osmanli, 7 Notes of Cas. 327.

The fact that the lex loci sanctions arrest for advances made to a vessel will not convert into a bottomry transaction advances made on personal credit. The Laurel, 1 Lush. R. 17.

Actual arrest for an antecedent arrest debt is a sufficient cause if the debt be a lien by lex loci, but not a mere fear or threat of arrest. The Circassian, 3 Ben. (D. C.) 398; The Aurora, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 96; The Yuba, 4 Blatch. R. (C. C.) 352.

However great be the apparent necessity of procuring the release of the vessel, hypothecation by bottomry is not to be resorted to except to discharge debts incurred in some way or other in respect to the voyage in which she is engaged. The Edmund, Lush. R. 25; The Laurel, 33 L. J. 17; The Osmanli, 3 W. Rob. R. 198.

The master cannot hypothecate for a debt due for general average contribution on the outward cargo, but the expenses of unloading the outward cargo, if absolutely necessary, may be provided for by hypothecation, because the unloading of the outward cargo is necessary to enable the ship to earn the freight on the homeward voyage. The Edmund, Lush. R. 58, 211.

8. If, however, the debt be less than the sum advanced, the bond is valid to the extent of the surplus. The Hebe, 2 W. Rob. Adm. 146.

9. Patton v. The Schooner Randolph, Gilpin (D. C.), 457.

But the owner may give a bond to the master to secure repayment of advances made by the latter. Miller v. Rebecca, Bee (D. C.), 151.

10. Some of the earlier American cases absolutely prohibit the consignee from becoming a lender on bottomry under any circumstances.

But the later cases sustain the doctrine that whilst it is wise to discourage bonds of this character, they are not necessarily invalid. Rucher v. Conyngham, 2 Pet. Adm. (D. C.) 307; Ship Lavinia v. Barclay, 1 Wash. (C. C.) 49.

An agent cannot loan on bottomry when in possession of a sufficient fund of the cargo[1] may execute a bond. When the lender on bottomry is the agent of the vessel the court watches the transaction with the utmost vigilance.[2]

8. Requirements of the Lender.—It is incumbent upon the lender, for his own security, to make due inquiries and to endeavor to ascertain that there exists both a necessity for the advance and a necessity for resorting to a loan on bottomry therefor.[3] The utmost good faith is another requirement; but if the loan be made in good faith and upon sufficient inquiry the lender is not called upon to enter into a minute investigation of details,[4] nor is he called upon to see to the application of the money.[5] It is sufficient if the lender acts with good faith and does not wilfully co-operate in any unnecessary expenditure.[6] If the lender in any way connives at any fraud of the master, this avoids the bond in toto, and his lien is lost for the entire amount of the advance.[7] But the fraud of the borrower will not have this effect if the lender were neither participant in nor cognizant of it.[8] If the lender connives with the master to send the ship on a new and different voyage from that authorized by the owner, his action will be regarded as a fraud on the owner, and his bond will be avoided in consequence.[9] But if there be no collusion the rule is otherwise.[10]

A lender on bottomry has an insurable interest in the safety of the ship, provided that the bond is made to depend on the safe arrival of the vessel.[11] But an insurance on goods only does not belonging to his principal. Hurry v. Hurry, 1 Wash. (C. C.) 293.

A consignee, who is bound to advance freight, is in a similar position, and he must give notice of his intention of doing so before lending money on bottomry. 3 Kent's Com. 60; The Augusta, 1 Dods. Adm. 283; The Jane, 1 Dods. Adm. 461.

1. Ross v. The Active, 2 Wash. (C. C.) 226.

2. The Royal Stewart, 2 Spink's Ec. & Ad. R. 260.

The master should first be given an opportunity of borrowing elsewhere on the owner's credit. The Staffordshire L. R. 4 P. C. C. 194.

3. The Jane, 1 Dods. Adm. 464; The Ship Fortitude, 3 Sum. 228.

The lender is chargeable with notice of the facts on which the master relies for his justification for resorting to bottomry, and must make inquiries and judge for himself and at his own risk whether the owner, if present, would do what the master is undertaking to do for him. The Julia Blake, 107 U. S. 418.

4. The Yuba, 4 Blatchf. (C. C.) 353.

There must exist a necessity for the loan and a necessity for resorting to bottomry. Ins. Co. v. Gossler, 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 353.

5. The Grape Shot, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 141; The Ship Fortitude, 3 Sum. (C. C.) 228; The Lulu, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 192.

But he must show that the advances were necessary or believed to be necessary to effectuate the objects of the voyage. The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538. And that they were reasonable, or appeared to be so. Ross v. The Ship Active, 2 Wash. (C. C.) 226; The Ship Fortitude, 3 Sum. (C. C.) 247.

He must show the items of the advance. The Bridgewater, Olcott's R. (D. C.) 33; The Aurora, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 96.

6. If mere fictitious items inserted, with intent to defraud, the bond cannot be enforced. Carrington v. Pratt, 18 How. (U. S.) 63.

7. The Nelson, 1 Hagg. Ad. 169; The Tarton, 1 Hagg. Ad. 14.

8. Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, 4 Wash. (C. C.) 662.

9. The Virgin; 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538; The Reliance, 3 Hagg. Adm. 66.

10. The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538; The Hunter, 1 Ware (D. C.), 249, 253.

11. Stainbank v. Fenning, 11 C. B. 51; Stainbank v. Sheppard, 13 C. B. 418.

But whilst the lender may insure, the borrower may not. Glover v. Black, 2 cover a bottomry interest.[1] The lender must show the various items of the advance, and have proofs to sustain them in order that they may be separately weighed and considered.[2]

9. Burden of Proof.—Before there can be a recovery in a suit on the bond, the lender must show that the circumstances were such as to make it apparently proper for the master to do what he has already done. To this extent the burden of proof is on the lender.[3] The creditor must also show the existence of actual necessity for repairs and supplies, and if actual necessity is not proven, evidence of due inquiry and of reasonable ground for belief that the necessity was real and pressing.[4] When the necessity for repairs and supplies is shown to exist, the burden of proof is on those who resist the bond to show that the money could have been obtained in some other way.[5]

10. When Payable.—Generally speaking, money advanced on bottomry becomes due and payable when the vessel arrives in safety at her port of destination.[6] It also becomes due if a sale or transfer of the vessel takes place, or the voyage is broken up in any manner, by the borrower, by reason of his own fault or misconduct.[7] It becomes payable when the voyage or adventure is broken up by a third party,[8] or by deviation,[9] capture, condemnation, and sale.[10] A loss not strictly total cannot, by abandonment, be turned into a technical total loss so as to excuse the borrower from payment.[11] There is no average or salvage on bottomry bonds.[12]

11. What is Payable.—The practice is to consider the sum lent and the maritime interest as principal, and to allow common interest on that sum from the day when payment was due.[13] No terms of the contract can render the owners liable for more than the value of the vessel or the value of the fund pledged.[14] The loss beyond the amount of the fund pledged is to be borne by the lenders.[15]

12. What is Bound.—A bottomry on the ship and freight binds

Burr. 1394; Simmons v. Hodgson, 3 B. & Ad. 50.

1. Glover v. Black, 3 Burr. 1394.

2. The Bridgewater, Olcott (D. C.), 33; The Aurora, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 96.

3. The Julia Blake, 107 U. S. 428.

4. The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 130.

5. The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 130; The Barkentine Kathleen, 2 Ben. (D. C.) 461.

6. The Great Pacific, 2 L. R. Ad. & Eccl. 384.

7. The Draco, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 157.

Or by that of his agent. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (C. C.), 465; Greeley v. Smith, 3 Wood. & M. (C. C.) 258.

8. Greeley v. Smith, 3 Wood. & M. 236.

9. Wilmer v. Smila, 2 Pet. Ad. (D. C.) 294.

But not by a deviation from necesity. The Armadillo, 1 W. Rob. Ad. 251.

10. Appleton v. Crowning Shield, 3 Mass. 441.

But if the ship is captured and restored to the owner, it is a detention and not a loss. Joyce v. Williamson, 3 Doug. 164.

11. Even though the expense of repairing the ship exceeds her value. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (C. C.), 465.

12. Joyce v. Williamson, 3 Dougl. 164.

13. The Packet, 3 Mas. (C. C.) 255.

The premium, if exorbitant, may be moderated. The Packet, 3 Mas. (C. C.) 255; The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538.

14. The Virgin, 8 Pet. R. (U. S.) 538; The Irma, 6 Ben. (D. C.) 7; Naylor v. Baltzell, Taney (C. C.), 55.

15. The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538.

ship and freight only.[1] Where the ship and cargo belong to different persons, the bond is to be first satisfied out of the proceeds of the ship, but if they belong to the same person the holder of the bond may resort to either.[2] The contract for its operation and validity is dependent upon the law of the flag.[3]

13. Lien—Waiver—Laches.—The lien is a jus in re without possession or any right of possession.[4] It accompanies the property into the hands of a bona-fide holder,[5] and can be executed or divested only by a proceeding in rem.[6] Having once attached, it follows the property or its proceeds into the hands of an assignee,[7] and the lien is not divested by the assignment.[8] Unreasonable delay in the enforcement of the lien is discountenanced. The bond must be put in suit with all reasonable diligence.[9]

14. Priority of.—As a general rule, a bottomry bondholder is to be preferred to all other creditors.[10] But sailors' wages are an exception to this rule.[11] A bottomry bond given subsequent to salvage expenses is entitled to priority,[12] but if the salvage expenses be the last incurred they will take precedence.[13] A bottomry bond given at the beginning of a voyage may be post-

1. The Zephyr, 3 Mas. (C. C.) 331.

2. Welsh and Cabot, 39 Penn. 342.

Both ship and freight are liable before the cargo, and this is true although the cargo is given on cargo alone. The Packet, 3 Mas. (C. C.) 255, 267; The Constancia, 4 Notes of Cas. 385.

3. Pope v. Nickerson, 4 Story, 465.

But the lex fori controls questions of evidence and procedure. The Bonaparte, 4 Moore P. C. 459.

4. Vandewater v. Mills, 19 How. (U. S.) 90; The Young Mechanic, 2 Cur. (C. C.) 404; The Nester, 1 Sum. (C. C.) 73; The H. D. Bacon, Newberry (D. C.), 274.

5. Ramsey v. Allegre, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 611; The Avon, 1 Brown's Ad. R. (C. C.) 178.

6. Vandewater v. Mills, 19 How. (U. S.) 90; The Young Mechanic, 2 Cur. (C. C.) 404.

7. Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. (U. S.) 729; The George Prescott, 1 Ben. (D. C.) 6.

8. The Belle of the Sea, 15 Int. Rev. Rec. (C. C.) 104.

So long as the vessel exists in specie, she continues subject to the hypothecation. The Ins. Co. v. Gossler, 96 U. S. 645.

9. Blaine v. The Charles Carter, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 382; The Rebecca, 5 Robinson Adm. 105.

The claim may be prejudiced or altogether defeated by laches.

Where money is advanced under an agreement for a bottomry bond, and the ship is permitted to go to sea without any attempt to enforce the agreement, the party who thus waives his right cannot be permitted, at a subsequent time and under a change of circumstances, to reinstate himself in his former position. The Aurora, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 104.

But the laches of the bondholder cannot be set up by the mortgagee, unless the mortgagee's position has been thereby prejudiced. The Helgoland, Swabey, 500.

A valid bond will, if there is no laches, be sustained as against the bona-fide purchaser for value without notice. The Draco, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 157.

Where proceedings are taken within a reasonable time, the mere departure of the vessel from the return port does not of itself affect the lien, whether it be with or without notice to the holder of the bond. Burke v. M. P. Rich, 1 Cliff. 308.

But if the obligee permits the vessel to make several voyages without asserting his lien, it is deemed as waived as against execution creditors. Blaine v. The Charles Carter, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 328.

10. The Onlia, 3 Hagg. Adm. 83; The Madonna P. Ira, 1 Dods. Adm. 40.

11. Blaine v. The Charles Carter, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 328; The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538.

And this is true whether earned before or after the execution of the bond. The Aline, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 111.

12. The Selina, 2 Notes of Cas. 18.

13. The William F. Safford, Lush, 69.

poned to the claim arising out of a subsequent collision,[1] but if the damage was done before the bond was given, and if the holder of the bond is a stranger who has made the advance in good faith, it seems that he has a lien to the extent of the increased value of the vessel by reason of the betterments growing out of his advance, and is to that extent entitled to precedence over the claim for damage.[1] As between two bonds, the last executed must be paid first.[2] Bottomry bondholders will be permitted to pay off prior charges of small amount and be substituted for them.[4] The lien of a bottomry bond takes priority in distribution over a claim for general average,[5] but sums advanced on account of freight must be deducted in preference to bottomry.[6]

15. Procedure.—The method of procedure ordinarily is in rem against the property hypothecated or its proceeds,[7] but the bondholder may also, under certain conditions, proceed in personam against the master or owner.[8] When the ship and cargo belong to different owners, the bond is first to be satisfied out of the ship, and the cargo is only secondly liable;[9] but when the ship and cargo belong to the same person, the creditor may resort to either for the payment of his bond.[10] Freight is considered as an incident to the ship, and in the marshalling of assets the rules which regulate ship and cargo apply equally to freight.[11] It is not necessary for the maintenance of a proceeding in rem that the officers should actually find the property upon which to make service, and actually take it into possession.[12] A monition served upon the holder of the property or its proceeds is sufficient.[13] Whilst the construction of the contract must for its validity depend upon the

1. The Pride of the Ocean, 3 Fed. 162.

2. The Aline, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 111.

3. The Sidney Crow, 2 Dods. Adm. 1; The Ronolo, 8 Jur. 462.

And this it seems is the rule though they be given at the same port. The Eliza, 3 Hagg. Adm. 89.

But if the second bondholder have notice of the existence of the prior bond, or if in point of fact they are practically contemporaneous, there will be no priority. The Cynthia, 5 Irish Jur. 317.

4. Fair Haven L. R., 1 Ad. & Ecc. 67.

5. The Anna, 9 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 475.

6. The Freight Money of Brig Anastasia, 1 Ben. (D. C.) 188.

For further information on this head the reader is referred to the following English authorities: Abbott on Shipping; Maclachlan's Merchant Shipping; Williams & Bruce's Admiralty; Tudor's Leading Cas. in Mercantile and Maritime Law; Pritchard's Admiralty Digest; and also to the following American authorities: Parsons' Shipping and Admiralty; Desty's Shipping and Admiralty; Abbott's Digest and Rapalje's Fed. Decision. A brief summary of the Continental decisions will be found in Pritchard's Admiralty Digest (Eng.).

7. Rule 18, Sup. Court U. S. Adm. Rules; Sheppard v. Taylor, 5 P. T. (U. S.) 710.

8. Rule 18, Sup. Court U. S. Adm. Rules; The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538; The Bark Irma, 15 Int. Rev. Rec. (D. C.) 130.

9. The Ship Packet, 3 Mason (C. C.), 255, 267.

The property of the ship-owner, both ship and freight, are liable before that of the owner of the cargo. The Ship Packet, 3 Mason (C. C.), 255, 267; The Constancia, 4 Notes of Cas. 285.

10. Welsh v. Cabot, 39 Penn. 356.

But sums advanced on account of freight must be deducted. Freight Money of the Anastasia, 1 Ben. (D. C.) 188; The Catharine, Swab. 264.

11. Welsh v. Cabot, 39 Penn. 356.

12. Snow v. 180 Tons of Scrap Iron, 11 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 517.

13. Snow v. 180 Tons of Scrap Iron, 11 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 517.

law of the flag, the lex fori is supreme on questions of evidence and procedure.[1]

BOUGHT. See BUY.[2]

BOUND. See BIND; BOND.[3]

1. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Sto. (C. C.) 465

2. An act required a return to be made regularly by all persons who "deal in or purchase" British corn of the amount "bought" by them, the object of the act being to ascertain from time to time the average prices of British corn with a view to the proportionment of duties on the importation of foreign corn. Held, that one who entered into a contract not binding under the Statute of Frauds was yet liable to conviction under the penal section of the act for not making a return goods "bought." "The question . . is whether the word 'bought' is to be understood in the popular sense or in the strictly legal sense? . . . The object of the legislature here was to impose a duty on the importation of corn, which duty is to be in proportion to the price of British corn. The object, therefore, was to ascertain that price, and for that purpose a general average is directed to be given of the preceding six weeks. Such being the object, it is clear that it will be best attained by having the price which the parties, by their bargain, stipulated to pay inserted in the account from which the six weeks' average is to be calculated, for that is the sale or purchase which the legislature have in view. . . . It appears to me, therefore, that we must understand the word 'bought' in its ordinary sense." Rex v. Townrow, 1 B. & Ad. 479.

All Goods Bought.—A commission agent was employed by a manufacturer to sell goods on the terms contained in the following letter: "We sell at your terms, and have no further interference with the account beyond forwarding the order and references. We give you all the information we possess, and you treat the order as coming direct from the buyer. We expect to receive our commission on all goods bought by houses whose accounts are opened through us." Held, that he was entitled to a commission where an order had been given and accepted by the manufacturer, though in consequence of the latter's inability to supply the goods they were not ultimately delivered to the buyer. "The learned judge . . . was of opinion that the words 'goods bought' might extend to goods in respect of which an order had been given and accepted, and that the commission was payable although no goods had been actually delivered. I think . . . [he] was quite right in the construction which he put upon the letter. . . . It seems to me that the letter itself shows clearly that a person giving an order in the capacity of a buyer was to be considered as a buyer." Lockwood v. Levick, 8 C. B. N. S. 608.

3. The terms "bind," "bound," "binding effect," "obligation," are used often by the most respectable jurists without meaning to have them applied to bond, in the technical language of the law. Stone v. Bradbury, 14 Me. 193, citing Union Bank v. Hyde, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 572, where a request by the indorser of a promissory note that his notes should not be protested, "as I will consider myself bound in the same manner as if the said notes had been or should be legally protested," was held ambiguous as to whether it amounted to a waiver of demand and notice, and parol proof was admissible on that point; the court remarking: "What effect is to be given to the word 'bound'? It must be to pay the debt, or it means nothing. But to cast on the indorser of a foreign bill an obligation to take it up, protest alone is not sufficient; he is still entitled to a reasonable notice in addition to the technical notice communicated by the protest. To bind him to pay the debt all these incidents were indispensable and may therefore be well supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties, when entering into this question. . . . If this course of reasoning should not be held conclusive, it would at least be sufficient to prove the language of the undertaking equivocal; and that the sense in which the parties used the words in which they express themselves may fairly be sought in the practical exposition furnished by their own conduct, or the conventional use of language established by their own customs or received opinions."

Bound to Convict.—On a question whether a magistrate was bound to convict or had a discretion, the court said: "We think the magistrate ought to have convicted, and that is the only meaning we can put on the words 'bound to convict;' and therefore we affirm the conviction." Marshall v. Fox, L. R. 6 Q. B. 373.

BOUNDARIES. (See also ADVERSE POSSESSION; DEED; EVIDENCE; MINES AND MINING; SURVEYS AND SURVEYORS; WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.)

1. Definition.—A boundary may be defined to be the delineation of the limits of a tract of land, or "the separation, natural or artificial, which marks the confines or line of division of two contiguous estates."[1] These limits may be pointed out and ascertained by reference to a variety of things having some relation with the land and indicating its extent.

2. Description.—In consequence of the requirement of the Statute of Frauds that all conveyances of lands or of any interest therein, except leases for a short period, should be in writing signed by the grantor, it is an invariable rule of law in all of the United States and England that every conveyance should contain a sufficiently accurate description of the land and of its boundaries to be conveyed in order that it may be identified and its

Bound with Surety.—An act directing that the defendant who appeals from the judgment of a justice of the peace shall be bound with surety in the nature of special bail is satisfied by his finding surety, without joining in the recognizance. "In order, therefore, to effectuate the true intent of the legislature, the expressions 'he shall be bound with surety,' etc., are to be construed, he shall be bound by surety, etc., or, he shall find surety. It is more analogous to special bail that the defendant should not be bound himself, for he never joins in a recognizance of special bail." Cavence v. Butler, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 52.

Held and firmly Bound.—"The obligation in question, though not technically, is substantially in the form of the common-law recognizance. In the one, the party acknowledges that he is held and firmly bound to pay; in the other, that he owes and is indebted. This language, though variant in form, has the same force and meaning." Shattuck v. The People, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 480.

Persons Bound as Security for Another.—Within the meaning of a statute enacting that such persons may, at any time after action has accrued on the bond, bill, or note, require the person having the right of action forthwith to commence suit against the principal debtor, on penalty of such security being exonerated, "undoubtedly includes sureties proper in a bond, bill, or note, but it would be extending the words of the statute beyond their reasonable meaning to hold that it includes an indorser whose liability is fixed by the required notice of the dishonor of the bill or note." Ross v. Jones, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 591.

Shall Remain Bound as Now, in a stipulation entered into by a corporation, "neither by its terms nor intent imposes any new obligation; nor does it furnish any new remedy. Before the contract was made the duty of the defendants to maintain the roads and bridges existed, and for neglect of the duty they were liable to indictment. The contract makes no new agreement on the subject. It merely recites that it is understood that the defendants are to remain bound as before; that is to say, they are not discharged by any of the provisions of the agreement from their existing obligations in this behalf." The corporation was, therefore, held not liable in an action of contract for not keeping bridges, etc., in repair upon an agreement for the exchange of lands which contained the above stipulation with reference to repairing. Com. v. Boston & Roxbury Mill Corp., 8 Allen (Mass.), 296.

1. Hunt's Law of Boundaries, 1; Bouvier's Law Dict.

limits ascertained. Parol evidence is not admissible to supply the inaccuracies of description appearing on the face of the deed or other writing. But when the written description is certain, so far as it goes, but there are two or more distinct tracts of lands which may easily fall within the description, parol evidence is admissible to explain away this ambiguity which arises outside of the deed.[1]

If a description is hopelessly uncertain, the deed of conveyance will be void and no title passes.[2]

But a deed will not be declared void for uncertainty as long as it is possible by any reasonable rules of construction to ascertain from the deed what property was intended to pass.[3]

In construing a deed very little attention is paid to the punctuation of the description, and it is disregarded altogether if this is necessary to remove the ambiguity.[4]

A rational intention must be sought after, and the construction must be consistent with reason and common-sense;[5] and where the language of the deed admits of two reasonable constructions, that one which is more favorable to the grantee will be preferred, particularly in a deed-poll, on the assumption that the deed is in the language of the grantor, and therefore he is in fault if there be any uncertainties or inconsistencies in the description.[6]

Where the deed, upon a reasonable construction, conveys other property than the parties intended, or is void for uncertainty or ambiguity, the courts, more particularly those of equity, are authorized, either by statute or under the equitable jurisdiction, to reform it so that it will conform to the intention of the parties.[7]

1. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 397; Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 827; Doe v. Martin, 4 T. R. 65; Shore v. Wilson, 9 Cl. & Fin. 556; Burton v. Dawes, 10 C. B. 261; s. c., 19 L. J. C. B. 302; Ewing v. Burnett, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 54; Eaton v. Smith, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 150; Bond v. Fay, 12 Allen (Mass.), 88; Putnam v. Bond, 100 Mass. 58; Cole v. Lake Co., 54 N. H. 278; Hannum v. West Chester, 70 Pa. St. 372; Hall v. Davis, 36 N. H. 569; Lippett v. Kelley, 46 Vt. 516; Caldwell v. Fulton, 31 Pa. St. 489; Hildebrand v. Fogle, 20 Ohio, 147; Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 162; Morrison v. Wilson, 30 Cal. 347; Hoffman v. Riehl, 27 Mo. 554. See Boyle v. Mulholland, 10 Ir. Com. Law Rep. 150; Smith v. Ridgway, L. R. 1 Exch. 46, 331; Read v. Read, 15 W. R. 164; Harman v. Gurner, 35 Beav. 478.

2. 3 Washb. Real Prop. 381; Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 827; Presbrey v. Presbrey, 13 Allen (Mass.) 283; United States v. King, 3 How. (U. S.) 773; Bailey v. White, 41 N. H. 337; Walters v. Breden, 70 Pa. St. 238; Wofford v. McKinna, 23 Tex. 45; Campbell v. Johnson, 44 Mo. 247; Shackleford v. Bailey, 35 Ill. 391.

3. Abbott v. Abbott, 51 Me. 582; Bond v. Fay, 12 Allen (Mass.), 88; Crafts v. Hibbard, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 452; Stone v. Stone, 116 Mass. 279; Harvey v. Mitchell, 31 N. H. 575; Kruse v. Wilson, 79 Ill. 233; Andrews v. Murphy, 12 Ga. 431. See also Mulford v. La Frame, 26 Cal. 88; Stevens v. Mayor, etc., 14 J. & S. (N. Y.) 274; Wendell v. Jackson, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 635; Bass v. Mitchell, 22 Tex. 285; Bosworth v. Sturtevant, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 392; Newson v. Pryor, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 7; Hart v. Hawkins, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 502; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 666.

4. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 387; Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 827; Doe v. Martin, 4 T. R. 65; Ewing v. Burnett, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 54.

5. Lyman v. Arnold, 5 Mason (U. S.), 198; Day v. Adams, 42 Vt. 510; Magoon v. Harris, 46 Vt. 271.

6. Worthington v. Hylyer, 4 Mass. 205; Clough v. Bowman, 15 N. H. 504; Sanborn v. Clough, 40 N. H. 330; Marshall v. Niles, 8 Conn. 469; Carroll v. Norwood, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 155; Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 228; Vance v. Fore, 24 Cal. 446.

7. Metcalf v. Putnam, 9 Allen (Mass.),

The reformation will not be ordered unless the uncertainty is hopeless and cannot be removed by construction.[1]

Contemporanea Expositio est Optima et Fortissima in Lege.—In the endeavor to ascertain the limits or boundary of the land which the grantor intended to convey, the courts will ascertain, if possible, all the circumstances surrounding and connected with the parties and the land at the time of the conveyance, since parties are presumed to refer to the condition of the land at that time, and the meaning of the terms used in the description can only be ascertained by a knowledge of the relative positions of themselves and of the land. The adoption of this rule will eliminate all doubts and ambiguities which may arise from a subsequent change in the position or character of the parties or of the land.[2]

Falsa Demonstratio non Nocet.—The description of a deed should be so construed, if possible, that no part be rendered inoperative.[3]

Where it is the plain intention of the parties that all of the elements of description should be necessary to the identification of the property, the conveyance will be void if no lands of the grantor can be found which will correspond with every part of the description.[4]

97; Canedy v. Marcy, 14 Gray (Mass.), 373; Stockbridge Iron Co. v. Hudson Iron Co., 107 Mass. 317; Adams v. Stevens, 49 Me. 362; Prescott v. Hawkins, 16 N. H. 122; Brown v. Lamphear, 35 Vt. 260; Crame v. Burton, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 225; Andrews v. Gillespie, 47 N. H. 487; Gray v. Hornbeck, 31 Mo. 400.

1. White v. White, L. R. 15 Eq. 247; Andrews v. Spurr, 8 Allen (Mass.), 416; Caldwell v. Fulton, 31 Pa. St. 484; Clement v. Youngman, 40 Pa. St. 344; Keene's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 274; Mills v. Lockwood, 42 Ill. 111. See Stockbridge Iron Co. v. Hudson Iron Co., 107 Mass. 317; Glass v. Hulburt, 102 Mass. 44; Canedy v. Marcy, 13 Gray (Mass.), 373; Hutchings v. Huggins, 59 Ill. 32.

2. Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 828; Dunklee v. Wilton R., 24 N. H. 489; Richardson v. Palmer, 38 N. H. 218; Connery v. Brooke, 73 Pa. St. 84; Adams v. Frothingham, 3 Mass. 372; Commonwealth v. Roxberry, 9 Gray (Mass.), 493; Rider v. Thompson, 23 Me. 244; Abbott v. Abbott, 51 Me. 581; Lane v. Thompson, 43 N. H. 324; Pollard v. Maddox, 28 Ala. 325; Karmuller v. Kratz, 18 Iowa, 356; Stanley v. Greene, 12 Cal. 148.

Thus where the grant was made of a farm by a general description without any particular description of the parcels of land which were intended to be included, it was held that all those parcels would pass under the grant which were at the time of the conveyance used and cultivated together. Bell v. Woodward, 46 N. H. 337.

So, likewise, it was held in another case where at the time of conveyance the grantor held, in addition to the title of certain lands, a right of entry for the breach of a condition in other lands in the same place, the breach of which had not then occurred, but did subsequently, and he acquired the title to them that these latter lands did not pass under a mortgage of all his rights and interests in lands in C., because the right of entry was not assignable at common law, and he had no other title to these lands when the mortgage was delivered. Richardson v. Cambridge, 2 Allen (Mass.), 118; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 767.

On the other hand, where the channel of a stream, passing through a tract of land, had been changed by the owner, and he subsequently divided up the land into parcels in such a manner that the stream as changed was altogether within the boundaries of one of the parcels when these parcels were sold to different persons, it was held that the grantee of the parcel containing the stream could not restore the stream to its old channel and inundate the other parcels. Roberts v. Roberts, 55 N. Y. 275; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 384.

3. Herrick v. Hopkins, 23 Me. 217; Walters v. Breden, 70 Pa. St. 238; Lane v. Thompson, 43 N. H. 320.

4. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 400; Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 829; Brown v.

But if it does not appear to be necessary to satisfy all the elements of description, or if parts of the description are inconsistent with other parts, and enough of them are sufficiently reasonable, in order to locate the land which the parties desire to be conveyed, the repugnant elements of the description will be rejected, and the deed will be construed to pass those lands which will fall within the consistent elements of the description.[1]

But if there are lands in the possession of the grantor which will comply with all the particulars of the description, only such lands will pass by the deed, although it may be shown by parol evidence that the parties intended other parcels to pass also which fall within only a part of the description.[2]

In determining what is the falsa demonstratio which may be rejected in order that the rest of the description may be given effect, it must be remembered that a particular or special description will always control a general or implied description, in whatever order they may appear.[3] But if the particular description is in any degree uncertain or obscure, then the general description will prevail and the particular description be rejected as false.[4] The first part of the description usually prevails over the latter part, if both appear in the premises of the deed; and if one part is written and the other is printed, the former will prevail.[5] And it is said that, where the two inconsistent parts of the de-

Saltonstall, 3 Me. 423; Warren v. Coggswell, 10 Gray (Mass.), 76.

1. Corbin v. Healey, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 514; Bond v. Fay, 8 Allen (Mass.), 212; Parker v. Kane, 22 How. (U. S.) 1; Crosby v. Bradbury, 20 Me. 61; Parks v. Loomis, 6 Gray (Mass.), 467; Jackson v. Clark, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 223; Presbrey v. Presbrey, 13 Allen (Mass.), 283; Doane v. Wilcutt, 16 Gray (Mass.), 371; Lush v. Druse, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 313; Morrow v. Willard, 30 Vt. 118; Abbott v. Abbott, 53 Me. 360; Scofield v. Lockwood, 35 Conn. 428; Law v. Hempstead, 10 Conn. 23; Spiller v. Scribner, 36 Vt. 246; Johnson v. Simpson, 36 N. H. 91; Bosworth v. Sturtevant, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 392; Peck v. Mallams, 10 N. Y. 532; Bass v. Mitchell, 22 Tex. 285; Tubbs v. Gatewood, 26 Ark. 128; Hathaway v. Juneau, 15 Wis. 264; Fancher v. De Montegre, 1 Head (Tenn.), 40; Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224; Beal v. Gordon, 55 Me. 482; Anderson v. Boughman, 7 Mich. 69; Wade v. Deray, 50 Cal. 376; Raymond v. Coffey, 5 Oreg. 132; Shewalter v. Pirner, 55 Mo. 218; Thayer v. Torrey, 37 N. J. L. 339; Wendell v. Jackson, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 635; Doe v. Galloway, 5 B. & Ad. 43; Taylor v. Parry, 1 M. & G. 604, 623; Boyle v. Mulholland, 10 Ir. Com. Law Rep. 157; Travers v. Blundell, 6 Ch. Div. 436; Loomis v. Jackson, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 449; Austen v. Nelms, 1 H. & N. 225; Doe v. Ashley, 10 Q. B. 663; Doe v. Hubbard, 15 Q. B. 236; Goodtitle v. Southern, 1 M. & S. 299; Dyne v. Nutley, 14 C. B. 122; Rand v. Green, 9 C. B. N. S. 477; Manning v. Fitzgerald, 29 L. J. Ex. 24; White v. Birch, 35 L. J. Ch. 174; Llewellyn v. Earl of Jersey, 11 M. & W. 183.

2. Brown v. Saltonstall, 3 Me. 423; Morrell v. Fisher, 4 Exch. 591; Warren v. Coggswell, 10 Gray, 76; Griffithes v. Penson, 1 H. & Colt. 862; Llewellyn v. Jersey, 11 M. & W. 183; Pedley v. Dodds, L. R. 2 Eq. 819; Smith v. Ridgway, L. R. 1 Ex. 46, 331; Webber v. Stanley, 16 C. B. N. S. 698; Sheppard's Touchstone, 29.

3. Smith v. Strong, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Whiting v. Dewey, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 428; Winn v. Cabot, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 553; Dana v. Middlesex Bank, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 250; Howell v. Saule, 5 Mason (U. S.), 410; Barney v. Miller, 18 Iowa, 466; Jones v. Smith, 73 N. Y. 205; Gans v. Aldridge, 27 Ind. 294; McEowen v. Lewis, 26 N. J. L. 451.

4. Ela v. Card, 2 N. H. 175; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 46; Haley v. Amestoy, 44 Cal. 132; Sawyer v. Kendall, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 241; Barney v. Miller, 18 Iowa, 460.

5. Webb v. Webb, 29 Ala. 606; McNear v. McComber, 18 Iowa, 17.

scription are equally balanced, the grantee may choose that which is most favorable to him.[1]

The Elements of Description.—A comprehensive description will contain, as data for the determination of the boundaries, an enumeration of the monuments, the courses and distances, and the quantity of land conveyed. The relative value of them is in the order in which they are named, in accordance with the common-sense rule of construction that, in all cases of contradiction between the elements of description, that element will control about which there is the least likelihood of mistake. Therefore the monuments will control the courses and distances, and the courses and distances control the quantity of land.[2]

But this is not an cast-iron rule without exceptions; and when the deed bears internal evidence of the fact that the recognition of the ordinarily inferior element of description, as controlling the construction, will best carry out the intention of the parties, the rule will give way, and under such circumstances courses and distances will control the monuments.[3]

But very rarely will the quantity of land be allowed to control either of the elements of description, and only when the intention is very clear to convey only the quantity mentioned in the deed and no more.[4]

3. Monuments, Natural and Artificial.—Natural monuments are

1. Esty v. Baker, 50 Me. 331; Melvin v. Proprietors, etc., 8 Metc. (Mass.) 27.

2. Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305; Powell v. Clark, 5 Mass. 355; Llewellyn v. Jersey, 11 Mees. & W. 183; Hall v. Davis, 36 N. H. 569; Jackson v. Defendorf, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 493; Mann v. Pearson, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 37; Drew v. Swift, 46 N. Y. 207; Hall v. Mayhew, 15 Md. 551; Snow v. Chapman, 1 Root (Conn.), 528; Murphy v. Campbell, 4 Pa. St. 485; Ufford v. Wilkins, 33 Iowa, 113; Mackentill v. Savoy, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 164; Dalton v. Rust, 22 Tex. 133; Wright v. Wright, 34 Ala. 194; Commissioners v. Thompson, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 434; Miller v. Cherry, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 29; Miller v. Bentley, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 671; Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148; Colton v. Seavey, 22 Cal. 496; Coburn v. Coxeter, 51 N. H. 158; Melvin v. Proprietors, etc., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 28; Esty v. Baker, 50 Me. 311; Ferris v. Coover, 10 Cal. 628; Falwood v. Graham, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 491; Kalbfleisch v. Standard Oil Co., 43 N. J. L. 259; Galvin v. Collins, 128 Mass. 525; Woodward v. Nims, 130 Mass. 70; Yates v. Van De Bogert, 56 N. Y. 526; West v. Shaw, 67 N. Car. 489; Dickson v. Wilson, 82 N. Car. 487; Keenan v. Cavanaugh, 44 Vt. 268; Welder v. Aunt, 34 Tex. 44; Johnston v. Preston, 9 Neb. 474; Grand Trunk Railway Co. v. Dyer, 49 Vt. 74; Opdyke v. Stevens, 28 N. J. L. 83; Chinoweth v. Haskell, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 96; Bryan v. Beckley, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 91; s. c., 12 Am. Dec. 276; Wendell v. Jackson, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 635; Clark v. Scammon, 62 Me. 47; Erskine v. Moulton, 66 Me. 276; Heaton v. Hodges, 14 Me. 66; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 731, 741, note; Fuller v. Carr, 33 N. J. L. 157; Peay v. Briggs, 2 Mill (S. Car.), 98; s. c., 12 Am. Dec. 656; Birmingham v. Anderson, 48 Pa. St. 253; Hoffman v. Riehl, 27 Mo. 554; Kennebec Purchase v. Tiffany, 1 Me. 219; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 60; Wolfe v. Scarborough, 2 Ohio St. 361; Powers v. Jackson, 50 Cal. 429; Winans v. Cheney, 55 Cal. 267.

3. Davis v. Rainsford, 17 Mass. 207; Higginbotham v. Stoddard, 72 N. Y. 94; Johnson v. McMillan, 1 Strob. (S. Car.) 143; Newhall v. Ireson, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 595; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 790; Haynes v. Young, 36 Me. 557; Hamilton v. Foster, 45 Me. 32; White v. Luning, 93 U. S. 515; Jones v. Bargett, 46 Tex. 484; Den v. Graham, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 76; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 226; Mizell v. Simmons, 79 N. Car. 182.

4. Pierce v. Faunce, 37 Me. 63; Kirkland v. Way, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 4; s. c., 45 Am. Dec. 752.

those natural objects which are found on the land in the place where they were placed by nature, and whose location is decidedly permanent. Such would be trees, walls and fences,[1] streams of all kinds,[2] ponds and lakes,[3] beaches and shores,[4] streets and highways,[5] and the like.[6]

The adjoining lot or farm may also be referred to as a monument in the description of a tract of land.[7]

Artificial monuments are those which are erected by man, such as surveyors' stakes and corner-stones.[8] If the artificial monuments are referred to in a deed when they do not exist, they may be erected subsequently; and when erected will control courses and distances, even though it may be shown that the artificial monuments as placed do not show the true line, provided that the parties have jointly agreed upon or assented to their location.[9]

1. Bradford v. Cressey, 45 Me. 9; Boston v. Richardson, 13 Allen (Mass.), 154; Warner v. Southworth, 6 Conn. 471; Child v. Starr, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 369.

2. Arnold v. Elmore, 16 Wis. 509; Stanford v. Mangin, 30 Ga. 355; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 385; Primm v. Walker, 38 Mo. 94; Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 142.

3. Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen (Mass.), 167; Nelson v. Butterfield, 21 Me. 229; Manton v. Blake, 62 Me. 38; Canal Com'rs v. People, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 446; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 377; Jakeway v. Barrett, 38 Vt. 323; Austin v. Rutland R. Co., 45 Vt. 215; Bradley v. Rice, 13 Me. 198; Lowell v. Robinson, 16 Me. 357; Phinney v. Watts, 9 Gray (Mass.), 269; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 288; Hathorn v. Stinson, 12 Me. 183; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 167; Wood v. Kelley, 30 Me. 47; Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 170; Mill River, etc., Co. v. Smith, 34 Conn. 462; State v. Gilmantown, 9 N. H. 461.

4. Hodge v. Boothby, 48 Me. 71; East Hampton v. Kirk, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 257; s. c., 84 N. Y. 215; Hathaway v. Wilson, 123 Mass. 361; Littlefield v. Maxwell, 31 Me. 134; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 653; McCullough v. Wainwright, 14 Pa. St. 171; Yates v. Van de Bogert, 56 N. Y. 531; Teschemacher v. Thompson, 18 Cal. 21; Dana v. Jackson St. Wharf, 31 Cal. 120; Martin v. O'Brien, 34 Miss. 21.

5. Berridge v. Ward, 10 C. B. N. S. 400; Falls v. Reis, 74 Pa. St. 439; Gove v. White, 20 Wis. 432; Dunham v. Williams, 37 N. Y. 251; Chatham v. Brainard, 11 Conn. 60; Smith v. Howden, 14 Com. B. N. S. 398; Tibbetts v. Estes, 52 Me. 566; Stevens v. Mayor, etc., 14 Jones & S. (N. Y.) 274; Johnson v. Anderson, 18 Me. 76; Cottle v. Young, 59 Me. 105; O'Linda v Lothrop, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Parker v. Framingham 8 Metc. (Mass.) 267; Fisher v Smith, 9 Gray (Mass.), 441; Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 57; Read v. Leeds, 19 Conn. 187; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 527; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 678; Canal Trustees v. Havens, 11 Ill. 557; Kimball v. Kenosha, 4 Wis. 331; Dubuque v. Maloney, 9 Iowa, 458; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 358.

6. Hoffmann v. Armstrong, 48 N. Y. 201; Stapleford v. Brinson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 311; Patton v. Alexander, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 603.

7. Cate v. Thayer, 3 Me. 71; Sayers v. City of Lyons, 10 Iowa, 249; Flagg v. Thurston, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 145; Northrup v. Sumner, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 196; Rutherford v. Tracy, 48 Mo. 325; Powers v. Jackson, 50 Cal. 429.

8. Call v. Barker, 12 Me. 320; White v. Williams, 48 N. Y. 344; Fleischfresser v. Schmidt, 41 Wis. 223.

9. Kennebec Purchase v. Tiffany, 1 Me. 219; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 60; Knowles v. Toothacker, 58 Me. 175; Corning v. Troy Co., 40 N. Y. 208; Makepeace v. Bancroft, 12 Mass. 469; Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261; Cleveland v. Flagg, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 81, Blaney v. Rice, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 62; Hathaway v. Evans, 108 Mass. 270; Lerned v. Morrill, 2 N. H. 197; Rockwell v. Baldwin, 53 Ill. 22; Purinton v. N. Ill. R. Co., 46 Ill. 300; Smith v. Hamilton, 20 Mich. 433; Emery v. Fowler, 38 Me. 99.

And it may always be shown by parol evidence that the parties have agreed to the location of the monuments. Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 267. See Kellem v. Smith, 65 Pa. St. 86. Kincaid v. Dormey, 47 Mo. 337.

Although parol evidence is not admissible to control the boundaries of land in a deed, yet, when the monuments are lost or have been moved, parol evidence is admisible to show where they originally stood.[1]

In consequence of the more permanent character of the natural monument and of its location, it is always to be preferred to the artificial monument in cases of contradiction, unless it is clearly shown in any particular case that the artificial monument is the more reliable as an index of the boundary.[2]

If one side of a tract of land be described as running from one monument to another, it is always a straight line between the two monuments; and if three or more monuments are referred to, the boundary lines must be laid out straight from one monument to another successively.[3] So, also, if a line described as running from a given point to a natural object, like a highway or stream, unless the length or course of the line is given, the shortest line that can be drawn between the two objects must be held to have been intended, and therefore the line must be laid out at right angles with the stream or highway.[4] And when the line is described as running "between" two objects, or "from" one object "to" another, the objects, as well as the land lying between them, are excluded from the grant.[5]

Artificial Monuments in the United States Surveys.—At the close of the American revolution, when the present Constitution and general government were established, the different States which claimed title, under their charters from the crown of England, to large tracts of lands beyond the inhabited portions of their territory, and extending into the then unexplored West, ceded these lands to the United States; and all other lands to which Great Britain claimed title by the right of discovery, and which lay outside of the colonies, also became the property of the United States under the treaty which brought the revolution to a successful close. Since then there have been purchases and cessions of

1. Stone v. Clark, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 378; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 370; Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 267; Abbott v. Abbott, 51 Me. 581; Opdyke v. Stephens, 28 N. J. L. 90; Frost v. Spalding, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 445; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 150; Claremont v. Carlton, 2 N. H. 369; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 88; Gratz v. Beates, 45 Pa. St. 504; Middleton v. Perry, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 539; Ferris v. Coover, 10 Cal. 624; Colton v. Seavey, 22 Cal. 496.

2. Lincoln v. Wilder, 29 Me. 169; Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. St. 124; Higinbotham v. Stoddard, 72 N. Y. 94; Fulwood v. Graham, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 491; Bolton v. Lann, 16 Tex. 96; Ogden v. Porterfield, 34 Pa. St. 196; Behan v. Stapleton, 13 Gray (Mass.), 427; Ferris v. Coover 10 Cal. 624; Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305; McIver v. Walker, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 444; Newsom v. Pryor, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 7; Shelton v. Maupin, 16 Mo. 124; Duren v. Presberry, 25 Tex. 512.

3. Allen v. Kingsbury, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 235; Jenks v. Morgan, 6 Gray (Mass.), 448; Hovey v. Sawyer, 5 Allen (Mass.), 585; Nelson v. Hall, 1 McLean (U. S.), 519; Caraway v. Chancy, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 364; Baker v. Talbott, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 179; McCoy v. Galloway, 3 Ohio, 382.

4. Bradley v. Wilson, 58 Me. 360; Van Gorden v. Jackson, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 474; Craig v. Hawkins, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 64; Caraway v. Chancy, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 364; Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 142.

5. Bonney v. Morrill, 52 Me. 256; Revere v. Leonard, 1 Mass. 91; Hatch v. Dwight, 17 Mass. 289; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 145; Carbrey v. Willis, 7 Allen (Mass.), 370; Millett v. Fowle, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 150; Wells v. Jackson Iron Co., 48 N. H. 491.

other lands from other nations, notably Louisiana, Florida, and the large tracts of territory ceded by Mexico at the close of the Mexican war. To all the lands included in this vast territory the United States claimed the title; and all private property in them, which was not acquired before the cessions to the United States, is derived by conveyance from the Federal government. These lands of the general government have been by official survey divided into townships and sections, and the latter again subdivided into fractions of a section—halves, quarters, and eighths. When these lands were sold by the government to private persons they were described by giving the number of the township, section, and subdivision of a section. The boundaries of these sections and fractions of a section were usually marked by artificial monuments,—corner-stones, as they are called,—which pointed out the corners of the tracts of land. If, therefore, a deed calls for a certain fraction of a certain section in a certain township, the location of the land and of its exact boundaries can, in most cases, be easily ascertained by referring to the maps and field notes of the surveyor. Maps and surveys are generally considered admissible evidence to determine boundaries;[1] and the United States statutes make the field notes and plats of the original surveyor the primary and best evidence of boundary.[2]

Ordinarily these field notes and maps call for artificial monuments to designate the corners of the tract of land, and if they are actually found upon an investigation of the land, the boundary is definitely determined by them in most cases, since artificial monuments will control courses and distances in government surveys as well as in ordinary cases.[3]

If the deed calls for natural monuments, as well as describes the land by a reference to the number of township, section, and fraction of a section, in accordance with the general rule that natural monuments will control both artificial monuments and the courses and distances, the boundaries would be determined by the natural monuments, although the plats and field notes would indicate a a different location.[4]

Sometimes it happens, in cases where there is no other description but a reference to the number of the township, section, and fraction

1. Haring v. Houten, 22 N. J. L. 61; Alexander v. Lively, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 159; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 50; Bruce v. Taylor, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 160; Steele v. Taylor, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.), 226; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 151; Madison City v. Hildreth, 2 Ind. 274; Tate v. Gray, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 73; Carmichael v. Trustees, 4 Miss. 84; McClintock v. Rogers, 11 Ill. 279.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. sec. 2396: "The boundary lines actually run and marked in the surveys returned by the surveyor-general shall be established as the proper boundary lines of the sections or subdivisions for which they were intended." Bruce v. Taylor, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 160; Steele v. Taylor, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 226; McClintock v. Rogers, 11 Ill. 279.

3. Robinson v. Moore, 4 McLean (U. S.) 279; Hunt v. McHenry, Wright (Ohio), 599; Bayless v. Rupert, Wright (Ohio), 634; Bruckner v. Lawrence, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 19; Climer v. Wallace; 28 Mo. 556.

4. Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305; McIver v. Walker, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 444; Newsom v. Pryor, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 7; Shelton v. Maupin, 16 Mo. 124; Duren v. Presberry, 25 Tex. 512.

of a section, that upon an investigation of the land one or more of the corners are discovered to be lost. Wherever the natural and artificial monuments cannot be ascertained by proper evidence, the courses and distances will determine the location of the boundary.[1]

But when there is a variance between the monuments and the courses and distances as elements of description, before the courses and distances can be permitted to determine the boundaries all means for ascertaining the location of the monuments must first be exhausted, and parol evidence, even hearsay evidence, and evidence of general reputation, are admissible to establish their location.[2]

If the courses and distances noted by the government surveys were accurate, and corresponded exactly with the actual location of the corners, a reference to these courses and distances would give one the exact location of the lost corners; but, in making these measurements on such an extensive scale, the chains used by the surveyors were gradually stretched beyond the standard length, so that the courses and distances would call for less land than what was actually included within the established corners. Following the analogies of the general rules for the determination of the boundaries hereinbefore set forth, if there is no other way for establishing the lost corners but by reference to the courses and distances of the field notes, and the courses and distances of the two contiguous tracts of land, between which the boundary is to be ascertained, would include less land than what is found within the two known corners, the surplus of land must be divided between the two tracts of land in proportion to their respective lines in the plats.[3]

In Missouri it has been erroneously decided that the courses and distances according to the field notes must be measured off from the known corner on the eastern line of the township or section, throwing the surplus of land into the western section or fraction of a section.[4]

The Missouri rule is properly applicable under the United States statutes only to those cases in which the corners had not been established at all in the original survey.[5]

1. Heaton v. Hodges, 14 Me. 66; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 731; Budd v. Brooke, 3 Gill (Md.), 198; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 321; Bruckner v. Lawrence, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 19; Calvert v. Fitzgerald, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 391.

2. Boardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 341; Jackson v. McCall, 10 Johns. (N.Y.) 377; Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 545; Smith v. Shackleford, 9 Dana (Ky.), 452; McCoy v. Galloway, 3 Ohio, 288; Nixon v. Porter, 34 Miss. 697; Smith v. Prewitt, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 158; Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275; Stroud v. Springfield, 28 Tex. 649; Yates v. Shaw, 24 Ill. 367.

3. This rule is recognized and adopted in Jones v. Kimble, 19 Wis. 429, and constituted one of the printed instructions, issued by the United States land office to the United States deputy and county surveyors; and these instructions are by statute made a part of every contract for surveying land. U. S. Rev. Stat. sect. 2399.

4. Knight v. Elliott, 57 Mo. 322; Vaughn v. Tate, 64 Mo. 491; Major v. Watson, 73 Mo. 665.

5. See Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 832, for a more complete discussion of this question.

4. Navigable and Non-Navigable Streams.—As a general rule, where land is described as bounding on a non-navigable stream, the boundary line is the centre line of the stream, the filum aquæ; and this line changes its course with the gradual and natural changes in the current of the stream.[1]

But the thread of the stream is not always the boundary line, when the stream is referred to as a monument. If the stream is referred to, as the boundary, in general terms; or the land is described as "bounding on" or "running along" a stream; or the deed describes the line along the stream as extending from one object on the banks to another, for example, as "bounding on" the river and "extending from" one tree or other object on the shore to another, the stream will be considered the monument, and the thread or centre line of the stream the boundary. The termini of the boundary will be ascertained by drawing straight lines, at right angles with the shore, from these objects of description to the filum aquæ.[2]

But when the land is described as bounding "on the bank or shore" of the stream, then the bank or shore is the monument instead of the stream, and the low-water mark on the shore will be the boundary line.[3]

Where the stream or shore is referred to as the boundary, the boundary line follows its meanderings, and if the distance along the bank or stream is given, instead of referring to some objects on the shore to indicate the termini of the boundary, the termini are ascertained by reducing the irregular lines of the shore to a straight line, and the given distance measured off in that manner.[4]

Where land is bounded by a common-law navigable stream, i.e., in which the tide ebbs and flows, the boundary is the high-water mark on the shore.[5]

But in those States in which the large rivers are held to be

1. Morrison v. Keen, 3 Me. 474; Hatch v. Dwight, 17 Mass. 289; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 145; People v. Canal Appraisers, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 355; Commissioners v. Kempshall, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 404; People v. Platt, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 195; s. c., 8 Am. Dec. 382; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 366; Browne v. Kennedy, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 195; Hayes v. Bowman, 1 Rand. (Va.) 417; Lynch v. Allen, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 62; State v. Gilmanton, 9 N. H. 461; Arnold v. Elmore, 16 Wis. 514; Love v. White, 20 Wis. 432.

2. Lunt v. Holland, 14 Mass. 150; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 97; Cold Springs Iron Works v. Tolland, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 492; Newhall v. Ireson, 13 Gray (Mass.), 262; Railroad v. Schurmeier, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 286; Luce v. Carley, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 451; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 637; Varick v. Smith, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 547; Browne v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; Robinson v. White, 42 Me. 218; Newton v. Eddy, 23 Vt. 319; Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. St. 129; McCulloch v. Aten, 2 Ohio, 425.

3. Bradford v. Cressey, 45 Me. 9; Child v. Starr, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 369; Halsey v. McCormick, 13 N. Y. 296; Babcock v. Utter, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 27; Dunlap v. Stetson, 4 Mason (U. S.), 349; Daniels v. Cheshire R. Co., 20 N. H. 85; Martin v. Nance, 3 Head (Tenn.), 650; Watson v. Peters, 26 Mich. 516.

4. Calk v. Stribling, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 122; Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 142; People v. Henderson, 40 Cal. 32.

5. Canal Comrs. v. People, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 423; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 377; East Haven v. Hemingway, 7 Conn. 186; Niles v. Patch, 13 Gray (Mass.), 254; Stewart v. Fitch, 30 N. J. L. 20; Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 520.

navigable, although the tide does not ebb and flow in them, the boundary line on those rivers is held to be at low-water mark.[1]

In both cases, as appurtenant to his land, the proprietor has a right, subject to government supervision for the benefit of the public, to erect wharves and piers, extending to low-water mark or into the channel of the stream.[2]

In determining the exact location of the low or high-water mark, reference is always had to the ordinary rise and fall of the water.[3]

The same rule applies to land bounded by the sea or by arms of the sea. The boundary is the high-water mark.[4]

In Massachusetts the common-law rule has been changed by statute, and non-riparian owners on navigable streams, and on arms of the sea, own up to low-water mark.[5]

What is a Navigable Stream.—According to the English common-law rule, all streams in which the tide ebbed and flowed were navigable streams, and all others were non-navigable.[6]

In England this rule is not so arbitrary and misleading as it could be if applied to the streams of this country. In England all tidal waters, and no others except the Thames above tide-water, are actually navigable by boats. But in the United States there are tidal streams which are too shallow to be navigable, and very many large, actually navigable, rivers, in which the tide does not ebb and flow. The common-law rule is therefore inapplicable to this country, and it is still a difficult matter to determine what is a navigable stream. The courts are at variance on all points, except one, viz., that where a stream is actually navigable by boats used in the prosecution of commerce and agriculture the public has a right to use them as highways, notwithstanding they are not tidal streams.[7]

1. Stover v. Jack, 60 Pa. St. 339; Wood v. Appal, 63 Pa. St. 221; Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. St. 66; Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 196; Martin v. Evansville, 32 Ind. 85; Ensminger v. People, 47 Ill. 384; People v. Canal Comrs., 33 N. Y. 461; Edder v. Burrus, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 367; Martin v. Nance, 3 Head (Tenn.), 650.

2. Ensminger v. Davis, 47 Ill. 384; Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 196; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 497; Weber v. Harbor Comrs., 18 Wall. (U. S.) 64.

3. Stover v. Jack, 60 Pa. St. 339; Tinnicum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. St. 21; Wood v. Appal, 63 Pa. St. 221; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 63; Commonwealth v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.), 451; Martin v. O'Brien, 32 Miss. 21; City of Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 349; Teschemacher v. Thompson, 18 Cal. 21.

4. Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 435; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 155; Commonwealth v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.), 492; Niles v. Patch, 13 Gray (Mass.), 254; Pollard v. Hogan, 3 How. (U. S.) 230; Goodtitle v. Kibbe, 9 How. (U. S.) 477; Hodge v. Boothby, 48 Me. 71; Cortelyou v. Van Brandt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 362; Ledyard v. Ten Eyck, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 125; Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 382; Dana v. Jackson St. Wharf, 31 Cal. 120.

5. Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 353; Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 168; Valentine v. Piper, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 94.

6. Washb. on Real Prop. 413; People v. Tibbetts, 19 N. Y. 523; Commonwealth v. Chapin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 199.

7. The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557; The Montello, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 439; Spring v. Russell, 7 Me. 273; Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Ingraham v. Wilkinson, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 342; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 53; Canal Commissioners v. People, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 423; People v. Platt, 17

But the public may have the right to use the stream the title to whose bed is in the riparian proprietors. The courts are unanimous that the title to the beds of tidal streams is ordinarily in the State, the boundary lines of riparian properties being at high-water mark.[1] But it would be absurd to apply this rule to tidal streams so shallow that they cannot float boats of the lightest draught, and so it has been held that the title to salt-water creeks which are not actually navigable is in the riparian proprietors, and the boundary line is the centre of the creek.[2]

In respect to the title to the beds of fresh-water streams the courts are divided; some holding that the title is in the State, like the tidal streams,[3] while others hold that the title to the bed of those fresh-water streams which are open to the use of the public is in the riparian proprietors, a distinction being drawn between public and navigable streams.[4]

It will require further adjudication or legislation to bring about a unanimity of legal opinion on this subject in all the States.[5]

5. Ponds and Lakes.—If the pond or lake is natural, the boundary line is along the edge at low-water mark.[6] If it be artificial, the Johns. (N. Y.) 195; Palmer v. Mulligan, 3 Caines (N. Y.), 307; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 275; Claremont v. Carlton, 2 N. H. 369; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 88; O'Fallon v. Daggett, 4 Mo. 343; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 640; Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 112; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 366; Cates v. Waddington, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 580; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 699; Gavit v. Chambers, 3 Ohio, 495; Blanchard v. Porter, 11 Ohio, 138; Home v. Richards, 4 Call (Va.), 441; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 574; Shrunk v. Schuylkill Co., 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 71; McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa, 1; Commissioners, etc., v. Withers, 29 Miss. 29.

1. Commonwealth v. Chapin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 199; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 385; People v. Tibbetts, 19 N. Y. 523; Smith v. Levinus, 8 N. Y. 472; Keyport Steamboat Co. v. Farmers' Transp. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 13; Cobb v. Davenport, 32 N. J. L. 369; Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219.

2. Rowe v. Granite Bridge Corp., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 344; Glover v. Powell, 10 N. J. Eq. 211. See State v. Gilmantown, 14 N. H. 467; Wilson v. Forbes, 2 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 30; Am. River, etc., Co. v. Amsden, 6 Cal. 443.

3. Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324; Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 475; Shrunk v. Schuylkill Co., 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 71; Houghton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 47 Iowa, 370; McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa, 1; Tomlin v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 32 Iowa, 106; Stover v. Jack, 60 Pa. St. 339; Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. St. 66; Martin v. Evansville, 23 Ind. 85; People v. Canal Com'rs, 33 N. Y. 461; Benson v. Morrow, 61 Mo. 345; Bullock v. Wilson, 2 Port. (Ala.) 436; Martin v. Nance, 3 Head (Tenn.), 650; Wilson v. Forbes, 2 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 30.

4. Steamboat Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 109; Canal Appraisers v. People, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 595; Adams v. Pease, 2 Conn. 481; Ingraham v. Wilkins, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 53; People v. Platt, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 195; Palmer v. Mulligan, 3 Caines (N. Y.), 307; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 270; Claremont v. Carlton, 2 N. H. 369; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 88; O'Fallon v. Daggett, 4 Mo. 343; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 640; Houck v. Yates, 82 Ill. 179; Bay City Gaslight Co. v. Industrial Works, 28 Mich. 182; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 366; Blanchard v. Porter, 11 Ohio, 138; Braxon v. Bressler, 64 Ill. 488; Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 578; Berry v. Snyder, 3 Bush (Ky.), 266; Schurmeier v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; Walker v. Public Works, 16 Ohio, 540; Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 196; Lorman v. Benson, 8 Mich. 18; Ensminger v. People, 47 Ill. 384.

5. See Tiedeman on Real Prop. § 835, in which suggestions are offered looking to a reconcilement of the authorities.

6. Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. 261; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen, 167; Nelson v. Butterfield, 21 Me. 229; Manton v. Blake, 62 Me. 38; Canal Com'rs v. People, 5 Wend. 446; Wheeler v. Spiboundary is through the centre.[1] If a natural pond or lake is raised and enlarged by artificial means, the boundary line will continue at the low-water mark in its natural condition; so that if the dam or trench be removed, allowing the water to return to its original basin, it has been held that the land thus left bare will belong to the riparian owners.[2] The conversion of a fresh-water pond into a salt one by an artificial trench or channel from the sea will not change the boundary. But the boundary will vary with the ordinary natural change in the low-water mark.[3]

6. Highways and Parks.—Where land is bounded by a highway or street, the location of the boundary line will in the first place depend upon the character of the public right to the road or street. If the State or municipality owns the bed of the road, the boundary line of the abutting land is the nearer edge of the roadway.[4] But if the public only have a right of way over the land, and not a title to the soil, then the location of the boundary line depends upon the intention of the grantor, as manifested by the language of the deed, and the same rules of construction apply as are found in practical use in the case of non-navigable streams. If the land is described as "bounding on," "running along," the highway, and the like, the boundary line is the centre of the highway, although the dimensions of the lot would exclude the highway; and in all cases of doubt the presumption is always in favor of the boundary being in the centre of the road.[5] But if the land is described as bounded by "the side" of the street, or the intention nola, 54 N. Y. 377; Jakeway v. Barrett, 38 Vt. 323; Austin v. Rutland R. Co., 45 Vt. 215; Primm v. Walker, 38 Mo. 99.

1. Bradley v. Rice, 13 Me. 198; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 501; Lowell v. Robinson, 16 Me. 357; Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261; Phinney v. Watts, 9 Gray (Mass.), 269; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 377.

2. Hathorn v. Stinson, 12 Me. 183; Bradley v. Rice, 13 Me. 200; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 501; Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261.

But the position here taken in these cases has been qualified in later decisions to this extent, viz., that unless the deed bears internal evidence that the grantor had in mind the natural condition of the pond when he was describing the land, the boundary will be the low-water mark of the pond at the time when the conveyance was made. See Wood v. Kelley, 30 Me. 47; Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 170.

3. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 417; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 377.

4. White v. Godfrey, 97 Mass. 472; Dunham v. Williams, 37 N. Y. 251; Falls v. Reis, 74 Pa. St. 439; Kings County Fire Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 87 N. Y. 287.

5. Berridge v. Ward, 10 C. B. N. S. 400; Johnson v. Anderson, 18 Me. 76; Cottle v. Young, 59 Me. 105; O'Linda v. Lothrop, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Parker v. Framingham, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 267; Fisher v. Smith, 9 Gray (Mass.), 441; Harris v. Elliott, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 53; Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 57; Morrow v. Willard, 30 Vt. 118; White v. Godfrey, 97 Mass. 47; Wallace v. Fee, 50 N. Y. 694; Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 624; Jackson v. Hathaway, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 454; Sherman v. McKeon, 38 N. Y. 271; Child v. Starr, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 369; Read v. Leeds, 19 Conn. 187; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 527; Paul v. Carver, 24 Pa. St. 207; Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. St. 124; Witter v. Harvey, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 67; Trustees v. Louder, 8 Bush (Ky.), 680; Canal Trustees v. Havens, 11 Ill. 557; Kimball v. Kenosha, 4 Wis. 331; Weisbrod v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 18 Wis. 43; Dubuque v. Maloney, 9 Iowa, 458; Gear v. Barnum, 37 Conn. 229; Oxton v. Groves, 68 Me. 371; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 75; Low v. Tibbetts, 72 Me. 92; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 303; Stark v. Coffin, 105 Mass. 328; Salter v. Jonas, 10 Vroom, 469; 23 Am. Rep. 229. See Hoboken Land Co. v. Kerrigan, 30 N. J. L. 16; Palmer v. Dougherty, 33 Me. 507.

to exclude the soil of the street is indicated in any other manner, the boundary will be the nearer edge of the roadway.[1]

And where there has once been such a conveyance, excluding the soil of the street, since the grantee of such a conveyance owns only to the edge of the street, he cannot in any subsequent conveyance by any words of description extend the boundary of the land to the centre of the highway.[2] Where the highway is referred to as the boundary, the actual line, as it is laid out, will be taken as the true line of the street. Although encroachments by abutting owners do not become legalized by lapse of time, it seems that if a fence is maintained on a certain line for twenty years, or whatever is the statutory period of limitation in respect to actions for the recovery of lands, the fence will be considered the true line, if the real boundary cannot be ascertained from the records.[3]

But the rule is different in respect to parks as monuments. If the land is described as bounded by a park, the boundary will be the exterior line of the park, and not the centre.[4]

7. Courses and Distances.—Where courses and distances are given in a deed, conveying a city lot of comparatively small dimensions, they are very much relied upon in the ascertainment of the boundaries. And where there are no monuments, parol evidence will not be permitted to control or vary them, even though the admeasurements are given as so many feet, "more or less."[5] When the course is described as "northerly" or "southerly," the line is always understood to be "due" north or south, but the direction of the line is always ascertained by a reference to the magnetic meridian.[6]

8. Quantity.—The quantity of land conveyed is sometimes given; but, except when there is a covenant as to the quantity, it is seldom resorted to for the purpose of determining the boundary, and it is very rarely, if ever, permitted to control courses and distances.[7]

1. Salisbury v. G. N. R. Co., 5 C. B. N. S. 174; Sibley v. Holden, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 249; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 521; Smith v. Slocomb, 9 Gray (Mass.), 36; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 274; Brainard v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.). 410: Morrow v. Willard, 30 Vt. 118; Hoboken Land Co. v. Kerrigan, 30 N. J. L. 16.

2. Brainard v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.), 410; Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 426; Dunham v. Williams, 37 N. Y. 251.

3. Hallenbeck v. Rowley, 8 Allen (Mass.), 475; Fisher v. Smith, 9 Gray (Mass.), 441; Lozier v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 468; Bissell v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 61; Cross v. Morristown, 18 N. J. Eq. 305.

4. Perrine v. N. Y Cent. R. Co., 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 65; Hanson v. Campbell, 20 Md. 223.

5. Drew v. Swift, 46 N. Y. 209; Chadbourne v. Mason, 48 Me. 391; Bagley v. Morrill, 46 Vt. 94; Flagg v. Thurston, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 145; Blaney v. Rice, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 62; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 204; Block v. Pfaff, 101 Mass. 538; Cherry v. Slade, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 82; Welch v. Phillips, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 215.

6. Brandt v. Ogden, 1 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 158; Gordon v. Jackson, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 473; Jackson v. Reeves, 3 Caines (N. Y.), 293; Wells v. Company, 47 N. H. 235; Bosworth v. Danzien, 25 Cal. 296.

7. Mann v. Pearson, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 37; Jackson v. Defendorff, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 493; Powell v. Clark, 5 Mass. 355; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 67; Snow v. Chapman,

9. Fences.—A fence is "an enclosure about a field; especially an enclosing structure of wood, iron, or other material, intended to prevent intrusion from without or straying from within." (Webster.)

The common law required the owner of domesticated animals to prevent their straying upon the lands of others, even though the lands were not enclosed. The law did not require the owners of lands to protect themselves by fences against estrays. But in consequence of the abundance of waste lands in the United States, it was considered wise to abrogate the common law in this respect more or less, so that the waste lands could be conveniently utilized for grazing. There is some difference in the scope of the modifying statutes of the different States. In some of the States, particularly the Eastern States, the common law was retained, so far as it made it unlawful for animals to roam at large upon the highway, imposing no obligation upon the owner of land to construct and maintain an outside fence, as a protection against cattle going at large upon the highways; but in these States it is now required that owners of land shall erect and maintain fences between adjoining properties, called division fences, and all right of action for trespass damage feasant is denied to the owner of land who does not comply with the law in maintaining a proper lawful fence.[1] In the Western States, as a general rule, cattle are allowed to roam at large, and the owner of land is required to fence the land on all sides.[2] But while, under the American statute law, the owner of land is denied all right of action for the trespass of cattle if he does not maintain a lawful fence, it is not permitted to owners of stock to drive them on another's land, and if they do so they are liable for trespass in any case.[3]

Although the statutes require a certain kind of fence to be constructed between adjoining tracts of land, the adjoining proprietors may agree upon some other kind of fence, and as between themselves the agreement constitutes a waiver of statutory rights.[4]

There is a difference in the matter of obligation between the outside and division fences. The owner of land is not obliged under any circumstances to construct and maintain an outside fence; if he fails to do so, he simply loses his right of action

1 Root (Conn.), 528; Commissioners v. Thompson, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 434; Hall v. Mahew, 15 Md. 551; Miller v. Bentley, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 671; Wright v. Wright, 34 Ala. 194; Dutton v. Rust, 22 Tex. 133; Ufford v. Wilkins, 33 Iowa, 113; Ward v. Crotty, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 103; Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148; Llewellyn v. Jersey, 11 Mees. & W. 183.

1. Stackpole v. Healey, 16 Mass. 36; Weymouth v. Gile, 72 Me. 446; Wells v. Howell, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 385; Lord v. Wormwood, 29 Me. 282; Lyman v. Gibson, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 422; Mills v. Stark, 4 N. H. 512 (17 Am. Dec. 444).

2. Seeley v. Peters, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 130; Wells v. Beal, 9 Kans. 597.

3. Melody v. Read, 4 Mass. 471; Delany v. Errickson, 11 Neb. 533; Logan v. Gedney, 38 Cal. 579; Caulkins v. Matthews, 5 Kans. 191; U. P. R. Co. v. Rollins. 5 Kans. 167; Dent v. Ross, 52 Miss. 188.

4. Albright v. Bruner, 14 Ill. App. 319; Dent v. Ross, 52 Miss. 188; Milligan v. Wehinger, 68 Pa. St. 235; Stone v. Wait, 50 Vt. 663; Miner v. Deland, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 266. Such an agreement need not be in writing. Bills v. Belknap, 38 Iowa, 225.

against the owners of trespassing cattle. But where the law requires a division fence, it gives to one adjoining proprietor the right and power to compel the other to do his part towards the erection of the fence.[1] The statutes vary somewhat in detail, but they generally require the owners of lands to contribute towards the maintenance of a division fence, as soon as his land ceases to be a common, or when it is enclosed, or otherwise improved.[2] A division fence should be constructed directly on the boundary line; but a worm or zigzag fence may be so constructed as to cross the line from side to side, one half of the fence being on each side of the line.[3] But if more than half of the fence is placed on one man's land, he may remove it to its proper location.[4] If a division fence is not placed upon the true line, he who constructs it cannot compel the other to contribute towards its cost, unless he assents to it by acquiescence or previous agreement.[5]

The statutes usually describe what are the qualities of a lawful fence, and there must be a substantial compliance with these requirements, in order that the landowner may claim damages for the trespass of cattle.[6]

The statutes provide for the joint contribution of the adjoining proprietors towards the cost of the division fence, and if one should refuse to contribute, he may be compelled to contribute his one half of the cost, even though the fence that has been erected was not as economical a fence as might have been constructed.[7] Ordinarily the owner of the land is the one liable to contribution, but if the land is leased, the lessee may be compelled to contribute.[8] Unless there is a special agreement between the parties in respect to fencing, the statutory remedy must be pursued, for the recovery of the contribution.[9] In the absence of a special statutory pro-

1. Mann v. Williamson, 70 Mo. 661; Chase v. Chase, 15 Nev. 259; Oil v. Rowley, 69 Ill. 469; Aylesworth v. Harrington, 17 Mich. 417; Morris v. Fraker, 5 Col. 425; Clark v. Stipp, 75 Ind. 114; Kerwhacher v. Railroad Co., 3 Ohio St. 172.

2. Perkins v. Perkins, 44 Barb. 134; Jones v. Perry, 50 N. H. 134; Rohrer v. Rohrer, 18 Pa. St. 367; Palmer v. Silverthorn, 32 Pa. St. 65; Talbot v. Blacklege, 22 Iowa, 572; Otis v. Morgan, 61 Iowa, 712; Chase v. Jefts, 58 N. H. 280; Slate v. McMinn, 81 N. Car. 585; State v. Perry, 64 N. Car. 305; Hoenig v. Hornberg, 24 Minn. 367.

3. Ferris v. Buskirk, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 397; Patterson v. Lancy, 48 Mo. 380; Newell v. Hill, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 180.

4. Sparhawk v. Twitchell, 1 Allen, 450; Sims v. Field, 74 Mo. 139; Jeffries v. Burgin, 57 Mo. 327; State v. Watson, 86 N. Car. 626.

5. Oxboro v. Boesser, 30 Minn. 1; Avary v. Searcy, 50 Ala. 54; Robb v. Brachman, 24 Ohio St. 3; Kennedy v. Owen, 131 Mass. 431.

6. Scott v. Buck, 85 Ill. 334; Scott v. Wirshing, 64 Ill. 102; Allen v. Tobias, 77 Ill. 169; Runyan v. Patterson, 87 N. C. 343; Hilliard v. Railroad Co., 37 Iowa, 442; Phillips v. Oyster, 32 Iowa, 257; Race v. Snyder, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 583; State v. Land, 8 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 229; Lamb v. Hicks, 11 Met. (Mass.) 496; Canefox v. Crenshaw, 24 Mo. 199; Adams v. McKinney, Add. (Pa.) 258; Barnum v. Vandusen, 15 Conn. 200; Moore v. White, 45 Mo. 206; Kerwhacker v. R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 172; Jones v. Witherspoon, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 555; Soule v. Barlow, 48 Vt. 132; Tripp v. Hazell, 1 Strobh. (S. Car.) 173.

7. Rohrer v. Rohrer, 18 Pa. St 367; Hewitt v. Jewell, 59 Iowa, 37; Hall v. Andrew, 75 Ill. 252; Brawner v. Laughton, 57 Mo. 516.

8. Tewsbury v. Bucklin, 7 N. H. 578.

But not a mere foreman or agent of the landowner. State v. Taylor, 69 N. Car. 543.

9. Burr v. Hames, 12 Neb. 483.

vision to the contrary, the ordinary courts will have jurisdiction over all disputes arising out of the construction and maintenance of division fences. But in some of the States the statutes provide a special judicial tribunal, called fence-viewers, for the hearing of all such disputes.[1] Their proceedings are not very formal, and the rules of procedure are as irregular as those of the courts of justices of the peace, care only being required that all the parties are summoned before the court and are given an opportunity in their own defence, in conformity with the fundamentals of our constitutional law.[2] Their judgments are conclusive upon the parties or not, according to the provision of the statute; they are not conclusive, unless it is so provided by the statute.[3] The decision need not be in writing.[4]

The division fence is the joint property of the adjoining proprietors, and it cannot be removed or otherwise interfered with, without the consent of all parties.[5]

10. Party-walls.—A party-wall is one which is erected between two lots for the common benefit of the owners thereof in supporting the beams of their adjoining buildings. They are not tenants in common of the entire wall. Each has the title in severalty to one half, with an easement for support in the other half. Each of the owners can do whatever he pleases with his own half, provided he does not weaken the support of the other half. And if he tears down his half, he does it at the risk of rendering himself liable for any injuries sustained by the remaining portion of the wall.[6] But it is not every wall which is common between two houses that has the characteristics of a party-wall. But every such wall by constant use as a common wall for the statutory period of limitation will become a party-wall by prescription.[7] Party-walls are generally erected by express agreement of the parties, each paying his share of the expenses. The mere erection by one of a common

1. McKeever v. Jencks, 59 Iowa, 300; Oxboro v. Boeser, 30 Minn. 1; Bills v. Belknap, 38 Iowa, 225; Sanborn v. Fellows, 22 N. H. 473; Thompson v. Batson, 78 Ill. 277.

2. See Talbott v. Blacklege, 22 Iowa, 312; Briggs v. Haynes, 68 Me. 535; Tabbs v. Ogden, 46 Iowa, 134; Fox v. Beebs, 24 Conn. 271; Hale v. Andrews, 75 Ill. 252; Holliday v. Swailes, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 515; Harris v. Sturdivant, 29 Me. 366; Lockhardt v Wessels, 45 Iowa, 81; Scott v. Dickinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 276; Shriver v. Stephens. 20 Pa. St. 138; Fairbanks v. Childs, 44 N. H. 458; Lambs v. Hicks, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 497; Bailey v. Bryan, 3 Jones L. (N. Car.) 357; Sears v. Charlemonte, 6 Allen (Mass.), 437; Shaw v. Gilfillan, 22 Vt. 565; Talcott v. Stillman, 29 Conn. 193.

3. Bills v. Belknap, 38 Iowa, 225; Baker v. Lakeman, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 195; Nelson v. Stewart, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 298; Robb v. Brachman, 24 Ohio St. 3; Butler v. Barbour, 2 Wis. 107; Miller v. Sanborn, 54 Vt. 532; Grey v. Edrington, 29 Kans. 208; Beschange v. Mueller, 50 Iowa, 237.

4. Tubbs v. Ogden, 46 Iowa, 134.

5. Walker v. Watrous, 8 Ala. 493; Drees v. State, 37 Ark. 122; Sayles v. Bemis, 57 Wis. 315; Stallcup v. Bradley, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 406; McCormick v. Tate, 20 Ill. 335; Holliday v. Marsh, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 142; s.c., 20 Am. Dec. 578. But the fence may be taken down for the purpose of repair, or for the purpose of rebuilding with other materials. Burrell v. Burrell, 11 Mass. 294.

6. Matts v. Hawkins, 5 Taunt. 20; Sherred v. Cisco, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 480; Bubois v. Beaver, 25 N. Y. 127; Brooks v. Curtis, 50 N. Y. 639; s.c., 10 Am. Rep. 545; Orman v. Day, 5 Fla. 385.

7. Eno v. Del Vecchio, 4 Duer, 53; Dowling v. Hennings, 20 Md. 179. But wall between them will not subject the other to liability for one half the expenses of erection, even though he derives as much benefit from it as the one who caused its construction.[1] Party-walls are generally, though not necessarily, erected one half on each of the contiguous estates.[2] See PARTY-WALLS.

BOUNDED. See BOUNDARIES.

BOUNTY. See MILITARY LAW; PENSIONS; WAR.

BOYCOTT—BOYCOTTING. (See also CONSPIRACY.)—In a criminal sense, a conspiracy formed and intended directly or indirectly to prevent the carrying on of any lawful business, or to injure the business of any one by wrongfully preventing those who would be customers from buying anything from, or employing, the representatives of said business, by threats, intimidation, or other forcible means.[3] see Mitchell v. Mayor, 49 Ga. 19; s.c., 15 Am. Rep. 669; Napier v. Bulwinkle, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 311.

1. Richardson v. Tobey, 121 Mass. 457; s.c, 23 Am. Rep. 283; Sherred v. 4 Sandf. 480; Dole v. Hughes, 54 N. Y. 444; s.c., 13 Am. Rep. 611; Orman v. Day, 5 Fla. 385.

One part owner may be sued on his covenant for his share of the expenses. Day v. Caton, 115 Mass. 513; s.c., 20 Am. Rep. 347; Rindge v. Baker, 57 N. Y. 207; s.c., 15 Am. Rep. 475. But a covenant to build a party-wall is executory and personal in its nature, and does not run with the land, so as to bind the assigns of the covenantors. Cole v. Hughes, 54 N. Y. 444; s.c., 13 Am. Rep. 611.

2. See Cubitt v. Porter, 8 B. & C. 257; Wiltshire v. Sidford, 8 B. & C. 259; Bradley v. Christ's Hospital, 4 Mann. & G. 761; Brondage v. Warner, 2 Hill (N. Y.). 145; Partridge v. Gilbert, 15 N. Y. 601; Evans v. Jayne, 23 Pa. St. 36; Dowling v. Hennings, 20 Md. 179.

3. Opinion of Atkins, J., in Com. v. Shelton, 11 Va. Law Jour. 329. The definition in the text is not advanced in the opinion as such, but is presented as applicable to a "boycott" so far, at any rate, as that falls within legal censure or prohibition.

In State v. Glidden, 8 Atl. Repr. 890, Conn. (reported also in 35 Alb. L. Jour. 348; 1 R. & Corp. L. Jour. 386; 3 New Eng. Repr. 858), it is said: "We will also notice that it is alleged that the conspiracy contemplated boycotting as a means to the end sought. That word is not easily defined. It is frequently spoken of as passive merely—a let-alone policy; a withdrawal of all business relations, intercourse, and fellowship. If that is its only meaning, it will be difficult to find anything in it criminal. We may gather some idea of its real meaning, however, by a reference to the circumstances in which the word originated. Those circumstances are thus narrated by Mr. Justin H. MacCarthy, an Irish gentleman of learning and ability, who will be recognized as good authority. In his work entitled 'England under Gladstone' he says: 'The strike was supported by a form of action, or rather inaction, which soon became historical. Captain Boycott was an Englishman, an agent of Lord Earne, and a farmer of Lough Mask, in the wild and beautiful district of Connemara. In his capacity as agent he had served notices upon Lord Earne's tenants, and the tenantry suddenly retaliated in a most unexpected way, by, in the language of schools and society, sending Captain Boycott to Coventry in a very thorough manner. The population of the region for miles round resolved not to have anything to do with him, and, as far as they could prevent it, not to allow any one else to have anything to do with him. His life appeared to be in danger; he had to claim police protection. His servants fled from him as servants flee from their masters in some plague-stricken Italian city. The awful sentence of excommunication could hardly have rendered him more helplessly alone for a time. No one would work for him; no one would supply him with food. He and his wife had to work in their own fields themselves, in most unpleasant imitation of Theocritan shepherds and shepherdesses, and play out their grim eclogue in their deserted fields, with the shadows of armed constabulary ever at their heels. The Orangemen of the north heard of Captain Boycott and his sufferings, and the way in BRANCH.—A particular line of descent, as distinguished from other lines having the same common ancestor.

The definition of a "branch" railroad does not "depend either upon its length or direction. If the projection of a completed road for one square is too short for a branch, then what distance will be required to allow the use of this term? The question involves in itself its own absurdity. The mistake is found in giving too narrow a definition to the word 'branch.' According to Worcester it may mean 'any distinct article or portion; a section; a subdivision.' But if for the word 'branch' we use 'section,' the subject under discussion is relieved of all possible obscurity. In like manner are we delivered from hesitancy in the matter of direction; that is, whether we are to regard the word 'branch' as merely an offshoot of the main road, or whether we may apply it to a direct extension from the terminus, since the substitution of the word 'section' dissipates anything like doubt on this score." [1] which he was holding his ground, and they organized assistance and sent him down armed laborers from Ulster. To prevent civil war, the authorities had to send a force of soldiers and police to Lough Mask, and Captain Boycott's harvests were brought in and his potatoes dug by the armed Ulster laborers, guarded always by the little army.' If this is a correct picture, the thing we call a boycott originally signified violence, if not murder. If the defendants, in their handbills and circulars, used the word in its original sense in its application to the Carrington Publishing Company, there can be no doubt of their criminal intent. We prefer, however, to believe that they used it in a modified sense. As an importation from a foreign country, we may presume that they intended it in a milder sense—in a sense adapted to the laws, institutions, and temper of our people. In that sense it may not have been criminal. But even here, if it means, as some high in the confidence of the trades-union assert, absolute ruin to the business of the person boycotted unless he yields, then it is criminal. . . . From these considerations it is apparent that the purpose of this conspiracy, or the means by which it was to be accomplished, or both, were not only unlawful, but, as some authorities express it, 'were in some degree criminal.'"

In Reg. v. Barrett, 18 L. R. Jr. 430; s. c., 8 Crim. L. Mag. 574, it is said: "In the present case the traverser has knowingly published a notice which wrongfully and without legal authority requires the traders of Loughrea to abstain from doing what they have a legal right to do, viz., to supply their goods to persons with whom they are entitled to deal; and the same notice contains a threat to interfere with, and endeavor to ruin, their trade if they exercise such right, for this is the well-known meaning of the threat 'to boycott them.' . . . The traverser threatened that he and the other members of the League (and the resolution was passed at a large meeting) would boycott any person who sold goods to the caretakers. It was said that boycotting is not a legal term, and that an innuendo should have been added, 'meaning thereby, and so forth;' but we are not dealing with an action of libel, and special demurrers, but with facts and conduct. The jury would thoroughly understand the meaning of the term; they would not perhaps understand the meaning of the word 'ostracizing,' a classical word of ancient origin. Boycotting is a term of modern invention, but has become emphatic, unmistakable. Many words are of modern origin—'to burke,' 'to guillotine.' They would not perhaps be found in Johnson's or Webster's dictionaries, but their meaning is not the less known. The threat to boycott these traders in case they supplied the goods seems to threaten very serious injury and damage, at least to the property and trade of these traders—such an injury and damage as would tend to the deprivation of some considerable portion of the business in which they were engaged. This injury seems to me entirely to flow from the acts threatened to be done." In a dissenting opinion it is said: "The words in the section are, 'violence, injury, or damage,' and a threat of being 'boycotted' would not, in my opinion, in the ordinary acceptation of the word, amount to a threat of violence, injury, or damage within the terms of the section."

1. McAboy's Appeal 107 Pa. 548,

The character of a road as a "branch" is in no sense affected by the incident that to reach its objective point it makes a détour that increases its length over that of the main line.[1]

The main branch of a river is not necessarily that in whose channel water might be found at all seasons of the year, at the point farthest removed from its mouth. The largest volume of water is certainly one criterion of the main stream; the length of the stream is another.[2]

In constitutional provisions respecting the legislature, the terms "branch" and "house" are used indiscriminately to mean the same thing,—one division of the legislature.[3]

BRAND.—To brand, in common parlance and according to common acceptance at this day, means to mark. To brand has become an equivalent expression with to stamp, and to mark.[4]

BRASS is an alloy of copper and tin, or copper and zinc, and where the building of a short elevated railroad from the terminus of the old railroad was held authorized by an act allowing the railroad company to construct "branches of railroad."

1. Vollmer's Appeal, 8 Atl Rep. 224 (Pa.), where such road was held a "branch" and not an "extension." "The relative importance of the main line and the branch are not to be measured by their length, respectively, under the peculiar circumstances of the case. As a branch, it clearly comes within the provisions of the ninth section of the act of 1868."

Future Extensions or Branches, in a contract between two connecting railroad corporations for a division or drawback of freights and fares over their roads, "or any future extensions or branches of the same," must not be construed, in their general sense, to apply to extensions then unauthorized by the legislature, where there were unexhausted powers in the charter and supplements at the time of the contract to build other extensions or branches sufficient to meet the requirements of the words. Morris & Essex R. Co. v. Sussex R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 542.

2. Reynolds v. M'Arthur, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 440. "If one branch of a small river has by consent retained the name of the main river, in exclusion of the others, that branch must be considered, in the absence of other circumstances, as the true boundary intended by the parties in a deed which calls for the stream by its name."

3. Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 679. "From these and other provisions it is evident that the term 'house' means one branch of the legislature as contradistinguished from the other branch, and that a majority of the entire members composing the body constitute in legal contemplation the house or branch of the legislature."

4. Dibble v. Hathaway, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 575, where it was held that the use of the word "brand," in a statute forbidding the alteration or defacement of the brand required by that act to be placed by the manufacturers upon all butter-tubs, only meant that the name and weight should be marked upon it in a legible and distinct manner, e.g., by a stencil-plate and a chisel, and it was not necessary that they should be actually burned into the tubs. Learned, P. J., says in his dissenting opinion: "The word 'brand' itself shows its meaning. It is a piece of wood burning or partly burnt; hence, a mark made by burning with a hot metal. Excluding the poetical and figurative use of the word, I find no definition which does not include the idea of burning. See Webster's Dictionary and Richardson's Dictionary. In modern times the branding of articles has, to some extent, given place to the marking them by means of a stencil-plate. But neither such marking nor the cutting of characters with a chisel is branding. . . In my opinion, then, the stencilled name was not a 'brand,' and more plainly the chisel-cuts, supposed to indicate weight, were not 'brands.'"

The provision in a statute that "no brands . . . shall be recognized in law as any evidence of ownership of the cattle, horses, or mules upon which the same may be used" was held not to include marks, and the prohibition, therefore, not to be applicable to marks. Johnson v. State, 1 Tex. App. 345.

not, in a scientific sense, a metal. Where, however, Congress has described as metals gold, silver, brass, copper, pewter, steel, etc., and speaks of them as "these metals," thus specifically saying they are metals, the declarations are as clear and distinct as if they read thus: "We, the Congress of the United States, hereby declare that in these statutes we regard copper as a metal, and also brass as a metal." [1]

BRASS KNUCKLES signifies a certain weapon, used for offence and defence, worn upon the hand to strike with, as if striking with the fist. This weapon when first known and used was commonly made of brass, but is still known and called "brass knuckles," no matter what it is made of. "Brass knuckles" is the name of the particular weapon, the word "brass" being used to designate the weapon, not to specify the metal of which it must be made.[2]

BRAWLS.—The popular meanings of the words "brawls" and "tumults" are substantially the same and identical. They are correlative terms, the one employed to express the meaning of the other, and are so defined by approved lexicographers. Legally, they mean the same kind of disturbance to the public peace, produced by the same class of agents, and can be well comprehended to define one and the same offence.[3] Brawling is the offence of quarrelling or creating a disturbance in the church or churchyard.[4]

BREACH OF THE PEACE. (See also ARREST.)—A violation of public order; the offence of disturbing the public peace. One guilty of this offence may be held to bail for his good behavior. An act of public indecorum is also a breach of the peace.[5]

1. U. S. v. Ullman, 4 Benedict (U.S.), 556, where "Dutch metal" was held a "manufacture of brass," and not a "manufacture of which copper was a component of chief value."

2. Harris v. State, 3 S. W. Repr. 477, (Tex.), where the fact that the weapon was made of steel was held immaterial. See also Patterson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 575, where the weapon is called "brass knucks," but in this case was made of lead or pewter. "It is called 'brass knucks.' because originally (as is now frequently done) it was made of brass. 'Brass knucks' is used as the name of the weapon. without reference to the metal of which that weapon is made."

3. State v. Perkins, 42 N. H. 465.

4. Whar. Law Lex.

A clergyman who without any just cause or provocation, in the course of divine service, addresses himself with a loud voice and quarrelling manner to one by whom no offence had been committed is guilty of "brawling." Cox v. Goodday, 2 Hagg. Cons. Rep. 138. So is one who endeavors to force his way violently into church past a churchwarden who is trying to preserve order. Asher v. Calcraft, 56 L. J. R. (N. S.) Mag. Cas. 57. See also 4 Bl. Com. 146; 4 Steph. Com. 253.

One who in his own dwelling-house is in the habit of using loud and violent language, consisting of opprobrious epithets and exclamations, in such a manner as to attract crowds of persons passing and living in the neighborhood, on Sundays as well as other days, and in the night as well as in the daytime, is a disturber of the public peace by railing and brawling, and is rightly indicted as a "common railer and brawler." Com. v. Foley, 99 Mass. 498.

5. Bouvier's Law Dict.; Galvin v. State, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 283. See also, U. S. v. Hart, 3 Wheel. C. C. (N. Y.) 304; State v. Huntley, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 418; Higgins v. State, 7 Ind. 549.

What Constitutes.—Besides actual breaches of the peace, anything that tends to provoke or excite others to break it is an offence of the same denomination. 4 Black. Com. 150.

It is not essential that the act committed amounts to an assault at com-

2. Surety to Keep the Peace.—As a restraint on the commission of crime in the nature of a breach of the peace, the court has power to bind a person in a penal bond to the State, conditioned that such person will keep the peace of the State as to all its citizens, and especially as to the one at whom the threatened breach of the peace appears to have been pointed. The order is made either upon affidavit or proof of the necessity of the same, to protect an individual or the community. This can be done although the party has not been indicted, tried, or convicted. It constitutes a part of the preventive power of the court in the administration of the criminal law.[1]

mon law. State v. Farrall, 29 Conn. 72.

If a man stops before the door of a dwelling-house or shop, applying abusive and opprobrious epithets to the inmates, and attracts a crowd, and refuses to desist when requested, he commits a breach of the peace. Cohen v. Huskisson, 2 M. & W. 482. Compare State v. Schuermann, 52 Mo. 165.

So, also, if he uses loud and violent language in his own dwelling-house, and addressed only to persons with whom he has an altercation, if the disturbance is such as to attract a gathering of persons outside the house. Com. v. Foley, 99 Mass. 497. Or if he uses the language in a public place. McCandless v. State, 2 S. W. Repr. (Tex.) 811.

The use of grossly indecent, profane, and abusive language towards another person upon the public street and in the presence of others is a breach of the peace. Davis v. Burgess, 54 Mich. 514; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 828. In this case the court said: "Now, what is understood by 'a breach of the peace'? By 'peace,' as used in the law in this connection, is meant the tranquillity enjoyed by the citizens of a municipality or community where good order reigns among its members. It is the natural right of all persons in political society, and any intentional violation of that right is 'a breach of the peace.' It is the offence of disturbing the public peace, or a violation of public order or public decorum. Actual personal violence is not an essential element in the offence. If it were, communities might be kept in a constant state of turmoil, fear, and anticipated danger from the wicked language and conduct of a guilty party, not only destructive of the peace of the citizens but of public morals, without the commission of the offence. The good sense and morality of the law forbid such a construction."

Consent to engage in a boxing match is not a defence to an indictment for a breach of the peace. It is for the jury to determine from the nature of the contest whether it was a breach of the peace, under proper instructions as to what constitutes such a breach. Nor was evidence admissible to prove that such matches are common and harmless amusements, practised in the colleges of this country. Nor was there error in refusing to allow the jury to examine the boxing gloves used by the respondent. State v. Burnham, 56 Vt. 445; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 801.

The wanton discharge of a firearm in the public street of a city is a breach of the peace. People v. Bartz, 53 Mich. 493.

Where an offensive denunciation calculated to provoke a breach of the peace is addressed to a company of men, and intended to apply to all of them, it may be charged as having been made to all or any one or more of them. Hearn v. State, 34 Ark. 550.

On trial of an indictment for disturbing a collection of persons met together in a school-house as a singing school, evidence that the defendant was one of a group of persons outside, from whom came the noises which disturbed the meeting, but not connecting him with any of the disturbances, is insufficient to sustain a conviction. Miller v. State, 83 Ind. 334.

Accessories.—All the parties engaged are liable as principals. 1 Bish. Cr. L. (7th Ed.) § 685.

Breach of the Peace "in the Presence of an Officer."—A breach of the peace is committed "in the presence of an officer," though done at some distance from him, and in the dark, if he can detect the act, and could see the person doing it if it were light. People v. Bartz, 53 Mich. 493. See ARREST, vol. 1, p. 730.

1. Malone's Cr. Briefs, 336; 4 Black. Com. 251; R. v. Dunn, 12 A. & E. 590; Doyle's Case, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 269.

A menace or threat is a malicious declaration of an intention to do an injury unlawfully to another, such as sending a threatening letter to another and informing him that unless he does certain things the writer will commit an injury to his person, his relative rights, or his property. This is a misdemeanor, for which the party aggrieved may cause the wrong-doer to give security to keep the peace. Bouvier's Inst. (Gleason's Ed.) § 2234.

Grounds for Requiring Giving of Surety to Keep the Peace.—The power of justices to require sureties to keep the peace is derived from the commission of the peace, and it is confined to cases where a party makes it appear to the justices that he goes in fear and in danger of personal violence from another, by reason of threats employed by him, or by reason of looks, gestures, and conduct; but the party applying for protection must himself draw the inference that he is in fear of personal violence. R. v. Dunn, 1 Arn. & H. 21; 5 Jur. 721; 12 A. & E. 59.

It is sufficient ground for articles of the peace that the complainant has been accustomed to go to a particular place, rightfully, as he alleges, for the transaction of business, and has been threatened with violence if he goes there again. R. v. Mallinson, 16 Q. B. 367.

The court granted an attachment upon articles of the peace where the threat of further violence was conditional on the exhibitant writing again to a member of the defendant's family, although it did not appear that the exhibitant had written again or was under any necessity of doing so. R. v. Tollemache, 2 L. M. & P. 401.

H. had written a letter to a young lady, a relative of T.; T. afterwards, in consequence of his writing the letters, violently assaulted H., and said: "If you write again I will flog you within an inch of your life." On a subsequent occasion T., meeting H., said to him: "Remember what I said to you; I am determined to put a stop to your proceedings." The court permitted H. to exhibit articles of the peace against T. Hulse, Ex parte, 21 L. J. M. C. 21.

A threat of bodily injury, coupled with a condition of the performance of a professional duty by the threatened party, if so made as to lead a cautious man to expect fulfilment of the threat, is sufficient cause for placing the threatener under bonds to keep the peace. Richey v. Davis, 11 Iowa, 124.

To constitute an offence under a statute which provides that "no person shall address to another, or utter in the presence of another, any words . . . having a tendency to create a breach of the peace," the words must be uttered in the presence of the person whom they tend to provoke to such breach of the peace. Ex parte Kearny, 55 Cal. 212.

Controverting Facts Stated.—Where a person exhibits articles of the peace, and swears that her life is in danger, the truth of the facts cannot be controverted. Lord Vane's Case, 13 East, 172, n.

There ought to be a reasonable foundation on the face of the articles, to induce a fear of personal danger, before the court will require sureties of the peace. Lord Vane's Case, 13 East, 172, n.

The facts stated in the articles are to be considered as true till the contrary appears upon a proper prosecution. Lord Vane's Case, 13 East, 172, n.

One against whom articles of the peace are exhibited is not entitled to read affidavits on his behalf, in contradiction of the facts sworn to against him in such articles. R. v. Doherty, 13 East, 171. See Deloohery v. State, 27 Ind. 521.

Where articles of the peace have been filed, and an attachment issued for the purpose of bringing in the defendant to find sureties, the court will not entertain an application to discharge the articles and to award costs under 21 Jac. I. c. 8. s. 2, on the ground of alleged insufficiency of the articles, though notice of such application has been given to the prosecutor. R. v. Mallinson, 16 Q. B. 367; 15 Jur. 746.

A party against whom articles of the peace have been exhibited in the court cannot call upon the prosecutor to show cause why the articles should not be discharged. R. v. Mallinson, 16 Q. B. 367; 15 Jur. 746.

Affidavits are not admissible for the purpose of supplying facts said to have been suppressed by the complainant, as, the contents of a correspondence alluded to in the articles. Nor is it an objection to the articles that such correspondence is not set out, if it does not contain any part of the menace relied upon. R. v. Mallinson, 16 Q. B. 367; 15 Jur. 746.

When articles of the peace are exhibited against any person, the person against whom they are exhibited may not give evidence before the justices in contradiction of the facts stated in the articles. If it appears on oath, to the satisfaction of the justices, that the complainant has been threatened, it is their duty to require recognizances to be entered into to keep the peace. Lort v. Hutton, 45 L. J. M. C. 95; 34 L. T. N. S. 730—Q. B. Div.

Powers of Magistrates and of Courts; and Requisites of Commitments.—A justice of the peace is not authorized to require a party to find sureties to keep the peace for an unlimited time. Prickett v. Gratrex. 2 New Sess. Cas. 429; 8 Q. B. 1021; 10 Jur. 566; 15 L. J. M. C. 145.

It is not necessary that a commitment for want of sureties should mention the sum in which the party and his sureties are to be bound. Prickett v. Gratrex, 2 New Sess. Cas. 429; 8 Q. B. 1021; 10 Jur. 566; 15 L. J. M. C. 145.

A warrant of commitment in substance stated that whereas the plaintiff had been brought before the defendant (who was a justice), charged on the oath of T. P. with having written on the pavement in a lane the offensive words reflecting on the character of R. T. W., "Donkey Watt, the railway jackass;" and it having been stated to the defendant on the oath of T. P. that the continued writing for some time past of the offensive words was calculated to produce a breach of the peace, and T. P. prayed that the plaintiff might be required to find sureties to keep the peace, he, the defendant, ordered and adjudged that the plaintiff should enter into his own recognizances in 20*l.*, with two sufficient sureties in 15*l.* each, to keep the peace for three calendar months. The warrant stated that the plaintiff had refused to enter into such recognizances and find such sureties, and commanded that the plaintiff should be conveyed to prison and there kept for the space of three months, unless the plaintiff in the mean time entered into such recognizance with such sureties. This warrant was afterwards quashed on motion, and an action of trespass brought against the defendant who granted it. Held, first, that the warrant put in by the plaintiff was evidence of the information recited in it. Held, secondly, that it must be taken that the sureties for defendant intended to require good behavior, notwithstanding the words "sureties of the peace" in the warrant. Held, thirdly, that a justice of the peace has jurisdiction to require sureties for good behavior in some cases of libel against private individuals, and that therefore the defendant had jurisdiction in the matter out of which the cause of action arose, and within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, and consequently was not liable to an action of trespass. Haylocke v. Sparke, 1 El. & Bl. 471; 17 Jur. 731; 22 L. J. M. C. 67.

Articles of the peace were exhibited against A. at the quarter sessions of the county of H., and he was by that court ordered to enter into recognizance before one or more justices of H. to keep the peace for six calendar months thence ensuing. Under the warrant of two justices of H., A. was brought before two justices of the same county, to show cause why he should not enter into the recognizance, and he then refused to do so, whereupon the justices last mentioned committed him to the county jail for the then residue of six calendar months from the date of the order of quarter sessions, unless he should in the mean time enter into the recognizance. Held, that the justices had no power to commit, and that the prisoner was entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus. Ashton or Aston, In re, 1 New Sess. Cas. 581; 7 Q. B. 169; 9 Jur. 727; 14 L. J. M. C. 99.

A justice of the peace may commit to the house of correction, under 6 Geo. I, c. 19, s. 2, for want of sureties to keep the peace. Aston, In re, 1 New Sess. Cas. 73; 12 M. & W. 456, 8 Jur. 293.

In a warrant of commitment for want of sureties to keep the peace, in consequence of having used language threatening bodily harm to an individual, it is not necessary that the warrant should show the nature of the bodily harm threatened, or when the language was used. Aston, In re, 1 New Sess. Cass. 73; 12 M. & W. 456, 8 Jur. 293.

Upon articles of the peace exhibited, the court has power of requiring bail for such a length of time as they think necessary for the preservation of the peace, and are not confined to a twelvemonth. R. v. Bowes, 1 T. R. 696.

The court will, if it sees ground, require sureties of the peace, although justices have refused to do so on the same complaint. R. v. Mallinson, 16 Q. B. 367.

Where articles of the peace appeared malicious and untrue, the court stayed process on them, and committed the exhibitant for perjury. R. v. Parnell, 2 Burr. 806.

The court cannot interfere to reduce the amount of security which the magistrates require a party to give for the preservation of the peace. R. v. Holloway, 2 D. P. C. 525.

A party gave information on oath before a magistrate that, from certain language used towards him, he was in bodily fear from another, and the magistrate upon hearing the complaint, required the latter to enter into recognizances to keep the peace. On motion to discharge the recognizances, on the ground that the language was used in a metaphorical sense only, the court refused to interfere, because it was for the magistrates to judge in what sense the language was used. R. v. Tregarthen, 5 B. & Ad. 678; 2 N. & M. 379.

Where a peer had been arrested by a warrant of two justices, and bound by recognizances with two sureties to keep the peace, the court refused an application for a certiorari to bring up the recognizances (on the ground of the justices having no jurisdiction), as the applicant was not in custody; and, in the event of its being necessary to enforce the recognizances, their validity could be tried in another way. Gifford (Lord), Ex parte, 1 New Sess. Cas. 490.

Where articles of the peace were returned by certiorari, and affidavits made by others than the exhibitant were subjoined on the same parchment, and the whole ended with the following jurat: "sworn by the several deponents," etc.,—held that it sufficiently appeared that the articles had been exhibited on oath. R. v. Dunn, 12 A. & E. 599; 4. P. & D. 415; 1 Arn. & H. 21; 5 Jur. 721.

On habeas corpus bringing up a party committed by justices for not finding sureties of the peace, the court will not hear affidavits controverting facts alleged in the articles of the peace. R. v. Dunn, 12 A. & E. 599; 4 P. & D. 415; 1 Arn. & H. 21; 5 Jur. 721; s. p., R. v. Stanhope, 12 A. &. E. 620, n.

The court of Queen's Bench has authority to examine the allegations contained in articles of the peace when they are brought up by certiorari, and to quash the articles if no sufficient offence is alleged to justify the justices in ordering the defendant to give sureties of the peace. R. v. Dunn, 12 A. & E. 599; 4 P. & D. 415; 1 Arn. & H. 21; 5 Jur. 721; s. p., R. v. Stanhope. 12 A. & E. 620, n.

A prosecution under the statute for surety of the peace is a criminal proceeding to prevent the commission of a crime, but is not a prosecution for a crime. Fisher v. Hamilton, 49 Ind. 341. See State v. Cooper, 90 Ind. 575; Arnold v. State 92 Ind. 187.

The constitutional provision which protects one from a second jeopardy for the same offence does not apply to a prosecution for surety of the peace. State v. Vankirk, 27 Ind. 121.

On an application to a magistrate for sureties of the peace, there must be a formal complaint in writing and upon oath, besides the examination in writing required by the statute, to justify the magistrate in issuing a warrant against the party complained of; it is not enough that the complaint is embraced in the examination. Bradstreet v. Furgeson, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 638.

In cases where the person whose life or person is in danger is disqualified by law from taking the oath required to obtain a peace warrant, the natural protector of such person may take the oath and conduct the proceedings to obtain it. State v. Tooley, 1 Head (Tenn.). 9.

A husband may demand surety of the peace in behalf of his wife, and take the oath, and conduct the proceedings to obtain the warrant, she being incapable of so doing. State v. Tooley, 1 Head (Tenn.), 9.

While the affidavit in proceedings for surety of the peace must state that it is made "only to secure the protection of the law and not from anger or malice," yet the only issue for trial is whether the complainant had just cause for the fears stated, when the affidavit was filed; and if it be found affirmatively in the circuit court, surety must be required though such cause may then have ceased. Stone v. State, 97 Ind. 345.

A proceeding for surety of the peace is not a prosecution for crime, the doctrine of reasonable doubt does not apply to it, nor are the jury the judges of the law, but they must take the law from the judge. Arnold v. State, 92 Ind. 187.

Where a person is charged with wilfully disturbing the peace and quiet of another person and his family, and the county attorney relies for a conviction upon the conduct of the defendant on a particular day, previous conduct of the defendant of a similar character, in connection with other facts, may be shown for the purpose of showing that the conduct of the defendant on the particular day was wilful. State v. Burns. 35 Kan. 387.

The question as to just cause of fear relates to the time of the institution of the proceedings and not to the time of the trial. If, on the final trial of the proceeding, it is found that the fears have, since the commencement of the proceeding, ceased to exist, this fact may be considered by the court in determining the time and the amount of the recognizance to be entered into by the defendant; but it will not entitle him to an unconditional discharge, at the costs of the relator. State v. Sayer, 35 Ind. 379; State v. Steward, 48 Ind. 146.

An affidavit for surety of the peace alleged that the complainant verily believed and actually feared, etc., that A. B. would kill him, or do him great bodily injury, or procure others to do so, etc. Held, that the charge was bad for being in the alternative. Steele v. State, 4 Ind. 561. Compare Collins v. State. 11 Ind. 312; Conklin v. State, 8 Ind. 458; State v. Bridegroom, 10 Ind. 170.

A justice of the peace can only require

In all cases of misdemeanor the court has from the common law authority, to be exercised or not as a sound discretion may dictate, to require, as a part of the sentence, that the defendant give bonds to keep the peace and be of good behavior.[1]

BREACH OF PROMISE (OF MARRIAGE). (See also CONTRACT; HUSBAND AND WIFE.)

1. Definition.—When two persons have agreed or promised to marry each other and one of them refuses to carry out the agreement or promise, the other may bring a suit for damages. Such suits are called "breach of promise suits." The failure to carry out any kind of a contract is in reality a breach of promise, but this appellation has been limited by custom to broken promises of marriage.

2. The Contract.—The contract is the mutual agreement of a man and a woman to marry each other, or become husband and wife in the future, and must satisfy the legal requirements as to parties, consideration, etc., as other contracts must. (See CONTRACTS.)

(a) The Offer and Acceptance.—There must be an offer of marriage or promise to marry by the one party made known to the other; a mere intention to marry, communicated to third persons out of the other party's presence, is no offer or promise at all.[2] The offer may, however, be made through a friend or agent.[3] It need not be made in express words.[4] It need only appear that both parties understood it to be an offer of marriage.[5] And there must be an acceptance of the offer or a promise in return; both parties one to find sureties of the peace until the next court. Com. v. Morey, 8Mass. 78; Com. v. Ward, 4 Mass. 497.

Proof that the defendant had been informed that the complainant had slandered his wife on the same day of, and just prior to, the menacing conduct which gave rise to the proceeding, is not admissible for the defendant. Arnold v. State, 92 Ind. 187.

The proceeding may be brought in the name of the State without any relator. State v. Carey, 66 Ind. 72.

An action can be maintained for a malicious prosecution for surety of the peace without probable cause. Fisher v. Hamilton, 49 Ind. 341.

No appeal is permitted on behalf of the State ex rel. State v. Long, 18 Ind. 438. Nor from an order discharging, without further security, one who was bound to keep the peace, and who had appeared according to his recognizance. Com. v. Oldham, 1 Dana (Ky.), 468.

1. 1 Bish. Cr. L. (7th Ed.) § 945; Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 229; Dun v. Reg, 12 Q. B. 1026. Compare Estes v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 496.

2. Cole v. Cottingham, 8 Car. & P. 77; Lawrence v. Cooke, 56 Me. 187; Roper v. Clay, 18 Mo. 383.

3. Prescott v. Guyler, 32 Ill. 323.

4 Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94.

5. Homan v. Earle, 53 N. Y. 267, 279; Vanderpool v. Richardson, 52 Mich. 336.

If one uses equivocal language and allows the other party to take it and act on it as an offer of marriage, he is bound. Homan v. Earle, 53 N. Y. 267. As when he says that he cannot live without her and will make a good home for her. Button v. McCauley, 1 Abb. Dec. 282.

are bound or neither is; the contract must be mutual.[1] The acceptance like the offer may be made through a friend or agent,[2] and need not be in express words,[3] but may be inferred from the promisee's conduct.[4] But it must appear that the acceptance was made known to the other party,[5] and evidence which goes to show an acceptance is not competent to prove the offer.[6] The acceptance must be made within a reasonable time after the offer.[7] The accepted promise must be certain, and either absolute or upon contingencies which are legal and which must occur within a reasonable time;[8] thus a promise to marry "perhaps" could not be the foundation of a suit;[9] and a man's promise to marry a

1. Vineall v. Veness, 4 Fost. & F. 344; Espy v. Jones, 37 Ala. 379; Morgan v. Yarborough, 5 La. Ann. 321; Kelley v. Riley, 106 Mass. 339; Allard v. Smith, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 297; Standiford v. Gentry, 32 Mo. 477; Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94; Wells v. Podgett, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 324; Homan v. Earle, 53 N. Y. 267; Conrad v. Williams, 6 Hill (N.Y.), 444; Weaver v. Zachert, 2 Pa. St. 80; Ellis v. Guggenheim, 20 Pa. St. 287.

2. See Gough v. Farr, 2 Car. & P. 631; Prescott v. Guyler, 32 Ill. 323.

3. Royal v. Smith, 40 Iowa, 615.

4. Walnesly v. Robinson, 63 Ill. 41; Wells v. Podgett, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 324; Wilcox v. Green, 23 Barb. (N.Y.) 639; Lecky v. Bloser, 24 Pa. St. 401.

For example, her going to another place at the request of the promisor to marry him there. Harvey v. Johnston, 17 L. J. C. P. 298. Getting ready for the wedding. Reed v. Clark, 47 Cal. 194; Wilcox v. Green, 123 Barb. (N. Y.) 639. Telling her friends of the engagement. King v. Hersey, 2 Ind. 402. Receiving his visits as her suitor. Daniels v. Bowles, 2 Car. & P. 553. Allowing familiarities and intercourse. People v. Kenyon, 5 Parker Cr. C. 254. Her declarations before suit brought. Leppinger v. Lowe. 6 N. J. L. 384; King v. Hersey, 2 Ind. 402; Cates v. McKinney, 48 Ind. 562.

In fact, express words need be proved on neither side; it is sufficient if there is shown a definite understanding between the parties, their friends and relations, that their marriage is to take place. Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94; Homan v. Earle, 53 N. Y. 267, 279; Burnham v. Cornwell, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 284; Wightman v. Coates, 15 Mass. 1.

Parties are presumed to intend what their conduct fairly indicates, and engagements to marry may with perfect propriety be inferred by the jury from their conduct, their treatment of each other, their epithets, their letters, their habits. Waters v. Bristol, 26 Conn. 398; Thurston v. Cavenor, 8 Iowa, 155; Rockafellow v. Newcomb, 57 Ill. 186; Blackburn v. Mann, 85 Ill. 222; Richmond v. Roberts, 98 Ill. 472; Conaway v. Shelton, 3 Ind. 334; Wightman v. Coates, 15 Mass. 1; Hoitt v. Moulton, 21 N. H. 586; Coil v. Wallace, 24 N. J. L. 291; Hubbard v. Bonesteel, 16 Barb. (N.Y.) 360; Wagenseller v. Simmers, 97 Pa. St. 465; Perkins v. Hersey, 1 R. I. 493; Memson v. Hastings, 12 Vt. 346; Whitcomb v. Walcott, 21 Vt. 368; Tefft v. Marsh, 1 W. Va. 38; Wilcox v. Gotfree, 26 L. T. N. S. 328; Hickey v. Campion, 20 Week. R. 752.

But the conduct must be something more than demanded by mere friendship. Burnham v. Cornwell, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 284; Walnesly v. Robinson, 63 Ill. 41; Whitcomb v. Walcott, 21 Vt. 368. And must be different from that which shows a mere meretricious connection. Com. v. Walton, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 487; Weaver v. Zachert, 2 Pa. St. 80. It must be such as is unusual except between engaged persons. Perkins v. Hersey, 1 R. I. 493. Now that the parties may testify, the indirect mode of proof is less important than it was formerly. Homan v. Earle, 53 N. Y. 267, 269.

5. Graham v. Martin, 64 Ind. 567; Cates v. McKinney, 48 Ind. 562; Russell v. Cowles, 15 Gray (Mass.), 582; Green v. Spencer, 3 Mo. 318; Moritz v. Melhow, 18 Pa. St. 331; Wetmore v. Mell, 1 Ohio St. 26.

6. Lecky v. Bloser, 24 Pa. St. 401.

7. Vineall v. Viness, 4 Fost. & F. 344.

8. Clark v. Pendleton, 20 Conn. 495; Prescott v. Guyler, 32 Ill. 312.

In determining what is a reasonable time, their age, pecuniary ability, and circumstances in general are to be considered. Wagenseller v. Simmers, 97 Pa. St. 465; Stevenson v. Pettis, 12 Phila. 468. A year has been held a reasonable time. Nichols v. Weaver, 7 Kan. 373.

9. Conrad v. Williams, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 444.

woman if he married any one is void both because it is too indefinite and because it acts virtually as a restraint on marriage and is against public policy.[1] A promise to marry after the death of a parent, the parent having died, has been held good,[2] and a promise to marry a woman after she has had an operation performed, the operation not having been performed, has been held not binding.[3] Conditions which are insignificant are sometimes disregarded, as where a man promised to marry plaintiff when certain carriages should be finished and they were not finished, the court held such a limitation not of the essence of the contract and the man bound nevertheless.[4] But a man's promise conditional on his getting a divorce from his wife,[5] or upon her dying,[6] is void, and so is a promise conditional on the promisee's having intercourse with him[7] or continuing to live for a time as his mistress,[8] as such promises are contrary to public policy. If the parties do not themselves make the contract definite as to time and place, the law presumes that a promise to marry is a promise to marry within a reasonable time,[9] and at the residence of the woman,[10] and after a reasonable time has elapsed the Statute of Limitations begins to run.[11] In determining what is a reasonable time the age and circumstances of the parties will be considered.[12]

(b) The Form.—The contract need not be in writing,[13] or in any particular form.[14] It is not a contract in consideration of marriage within the Statute of Frauds;[15] but where statutes require contracts which are not to be performed within a limited time (as one year) to be in writing, these contracts are included,[16] though, under the familiar construction of such statutes, if the contract may or may not be performed within the limited time the statute does not apply.[17]

(c) The Consideration.—The consideration in contracts of this kind is the mutual promise.[18] There may be some other consider-

1. Lowe v. Peers, 4 Burr. 2225; Philips v. Medbury, 7 Conn. 568; Conrad v. Williams, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 444; Hall v. Wright, El. B. & E. 788.
2. Frost v. Knight, 41 L. J. Exch. 78.
3. Gring v. Lerch, 112 Pa. St. 244; 3 Cent. Rep. 161. 164.
4. Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 346.
5. Noice v. Brown, 39 N. J. L. 133; s. c., 38 N. J. L. 228.
6. Paddock v. Robinson, 63 Ill. 99; Haviland v. Halstead, 34 N. Y. 643; Millwood v. Littlewood, 20 L. J. Exch. 2.
7. Hanks v. Naglee, 54 Cal. 51; Stinefield v. Levy, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 26; Goodall v. Thurman, 1 Head (Tenn.), 209; Baldy v. Shatton, 11 Pa. St. 316; Beaumont v. Reeve, 8 Ad. & El. N. S. 483.
8. Boigneres v. Boulon, 54 Cal. 146. Contra, Morton v. Fenn, 26 Eng. C. L. Rep. 80. Compare Hotchkiss v. Hodge, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 117.
9. Atchinson v. Baker, Peake Ad. Cas. 103; Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94; Coil v. Wallace, 24 N J. L. 291; Wagenseller v. Simmers, 97 Pa. St. 465.
10. Graham v. Martin, 64 Ind. 567.
11. Nichols v. Weaver, 7 Kan. 378.
12. Wagenseller v. Simmers, 97 Pa. St. 465.
13. Kelley v. Riley, 106 Mass. 339.
14. Homan v Earle, 53 N. Y. 267, 279; Hickey v. Campion, 20 Week. R. 752; Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94.
15. Cook v. Baker, 1 Strange, 34; Short v. Stotts, 58 Ind. 29; Clark v. Pendleton, 20 Conn. 495; Ogden, 1 Bland (Md.), 284; Deaby v. Phelps, 2 N. H. 515.
16. Nichols v. Weaver, 7 Kan. 373; Paris v. Strong, 51 Ired. 339.
17. Lawrence v. Cooke, 56 Me. 187; Wiggins v. Keizer, 6 Ind. 252.
18. Steinfield v. Levy, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 26, 27. See ante, § 2, (a).

ation added, which will neither add to nor detract from the contract unless it be immoral. Thus a promise to marry made after seduction in consequence thereof is binding,[1] but a promise to marry in consideration of future intercourse is void.[2]

(d) The Capacity of the Parties.—The contract must be made between competent parties. In order to bind himself by a promise of marriage a person must be capable both of making a binding contract[3] and of entering into a valid,[4] and perhaps even a legal,[5] marriage. Thus, an infant not capable of making ordinary contracts, though he is old enough to marry[6] (and though he accomplished seduction by his promise[7]) is not bound by a promise of marriage,[8] though, as in the case of other contracts with infants, he may sue on the promise to him.[9] So where impotence rendered a marriage void, the promise of an impotent man to marry was held void.[10] So a promise of a nephew to marry his aunt where such marriages were illegal.[11] So with the promise of a married person to marry,[12] even though it be conditional on divorce[13] or on his wife's death.[14] But in all cases where the party is competent to contract and knew of his incompetence to marry he may be liable in an action for deceit though his promise to marry be void.[15] The fact that the party has already promised to marry some one (is engaged to be married) does not affect his capacity to promise to marry some one else.[16]

(e) Fraud and Duress.—Force, fraudulent concealment, and false representations may invalidate contracts to marry, just as they in-

1. Hotchkiss v. Hodge, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 117.

2. Adding the immoral consideration of future intercourse to the legal consideration of a mutual promise makes the whole bad; but if the mutual promise is entirely distinct from the promise of intercourse, it will be good. Steinfield v. Levy, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N.Y.) 26, 27. As where the defendant had said he would marry her anyhow in October, and at once if she became pregnant. Kurtz v. Frank, 76 Ind. 594; 40 Am. Rep. 275.

3. Frost v. Vought. 37 Mich. 65.

4. Paddock v. Robinson, 63 Ill. 99; Haviland v. Halstead, 34 N. Y. 643; Gulick v. Gulick, 41 N. J. L. 13; Harrison v. Cage, 1 Ld. Raym. 387.

5. Campbell v. Crompton, 8 Abb. N. Cas. (N.Y.) 363; s. c., 18 Blatch. C.C. 150. As to distinction between valid and legal marriages, see article MARRIAGE.

6. Frost v. Vought. 37 Mich. 65; Reish v. Thompson, 55 Ind. 34.

7. Lichtweiss v. Treskow, 21 Hun, 487.

8. Hale v. Ruthven, 20 L. T. N. S. 404; Pool v. Batt, 1 D. Chip. 252; Hunt v. Peake, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 475; Cannon v. Alsbury, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 76; Rush v. Wick, 31 Ohio St. 521; Reish v. Thompson, 55 Ind. 34.

Full age of defendant need not be alleged in declaration. Simmons v. Simmons, 8 Mich. 318.

9. Willard v. Stone, 7 Cow. (Ky.) 22.

The contract is voidable. Frost v. Vought. 37 Mich. 66; Warwick v. Cooper, 6 Sneed (Tenn.), 659.

Consent of parent not necessary. Beelman v. Rousch, 26 Pa. St. 509.

10. Gulick v. Gulick, 41 N. J. L. 13. See Allen v. Baker, 86 N. Car. 91, 96; Hall v. Wright, El. B. & E. 746; Boast v. Firth, L. R. 4 C. P. 8.

11. Campbell v. Crompton, 8 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 363.

12. Paddock v. Robinson, 63 Ill. 99; Haviland v. Halstead, 34 N. Y. 643.

13. Millward v. Littlewood, 20 Law. J. Ex. 2.

14. Noice v. Brown, 39 N. J. L. 133; s. c., 38 N. J. L. 228.

15. Wild v. Harris, 18 Law J. C. P. 297; Millward v. Littlewood, 20 L. J. Exch. 2; Kelley v. Riley, 106 Mass. 339; Blattmacher v. Saal, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 22; Stevenson v. Pettis, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 468; Allen v. Baker, 86 N. Car. 91, 98; Coover v. Davenport, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 368; Pollock v. Sullivan, 53 Vt. 507, 38 Am. Rep. 702.

16. Roper v. Clay, 18 Mo. 383.

validate other contracts.[1] A promise made at the point of a pistol or to get free from actual confinement would not be enforceable.[2] While a person is supposed to have inquired and learnt all about the fortune, condition, circumstances, etc., of another before promising to marry her,[3] and while a woman is not bound to disclose anything[4] except her previous unchastity[5] or her unfitness for sexual intercourse,[6] any false representations made by her or on her behalf with her knowledge,[7] for the purpose of deceiving the promisor, constitute a fraud, and his promise is not binding whether such false representations relate to her social position and fortune[8] or to her character.[9]

3. The Breach.—There is a breach of the contract to marry entitling the party not in default to sue for damages, if a party (1) refuses to be married on the day fixed;[10] (2) or when the promise was general, upon request, after a reasonable time refuses to fix a day;[11] (3) marries some other person;[12] or (4) repudiates his promise and declares that he will not be bound by it.[13] In either of

1. See titles FRAUD. DURESS.

2. McCrum v. Hildebrand, 85 Ind. 204. An actual marriage entered into under such pressure would not be valid. Willard v. Willard, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 297, 298; Harford v. Morris, 2 Hagg. Const. 423; Bassett, 9 Bush (Ky.), 696; Pyle, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 58; Stevenson, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 336, 387; Collins v. Collins, 2 Brews. (Pa.) 515, 519; Stales v. Stales, 37 N. J. Eq. 195, 196, notes.

3. "When a man enters into an engagement of marriage with a woman, he is presumed to have made himself acquainted with her appearance, her temper, her manner, her character, and other matters which are obvious to the understanding, and which can be ascertained in the social intercourse which usually accompanies courtship. If he changes his mind and refuses to marry her for a defect which is open to observation, and which he might have ascertained before by reasonable care, it is no defence to an action for breach of promise of marriage." Paxson, J., in Gring v. Lerch, 112 Pa. St. 244; 3 Cent. Rep. 161, 163.

4. Not a contract uberrimæ fidei. Pollock Cont. 307. Calls for richest good faith. Gring v. Lerch, 3 Cent. Rep. 161, 164; 112 Pa. St. 244. Not bound to disclose a previous engagement. Beachy v. Brown. El. B. & E. 796; 29 L. J. Q. B. 105; Roper v. Clay, 18 Mo. 383. Or previous insanity. Baker v. Cartwright, 10 C. B. N. S. 124.

5. Irving v. Greenwood, 1 Car. & P. 360; Foulkes v. Sellway, 3 Esp. 236; Baddeley v. Mortlock, Holt, 151; Young v. Murphy, 3 Bing. N. C. 54; Beach v. Merrick, 1 Car. & K. 463; Espy v. Jones, 37 Ala. 379; Cal. Civ. Code, § 62; Woodard v. Bellamy, 2 Root (Conn.), 354; Denslow v. Van Horn, 16 Iowa, 476; Showman v. Wardwell, 32 Me. 275, Berry v. Bakeman, 44 Me. 164; Van Storch v. Griffin, 77 Pa. St. 504; Capehart v. Carradine, 4 Strobh. (S. Car.) 42; Goodall v. Thurman, 1 Head (Tenn.), 209.

6. "To conceal such a thing from him until after marriage would be a fraud. It would be a fraud to sell a cow with such a defect without making it known to the purchaser." Gring v. Lerch, 112 Pa. St. 244; 3 Cent. Rep. 161, 164.

7. Foote v. Hayne, 1 Car. & P. 546.

8. Wharton v. Lewis, 1 Car. & P. 529.

9. Foote v. Hayne, 1 Car. & P. 546; Leeds v. Lock, 4 Esp. 166; Bell v. Eaton, 28 Ind. 468; supra, n. 5.

If a man promises to marry one he knows to be a prostitute, he is bound. Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288; Burch v. Merrick, 1 Car. & K. 463; Berry v. Bakeman, 49 Ill. 164. Though the bad character of promisee is evidence in mitigation of damages. Burnett v. Simpkins, 24 Ill. 264; discussed post.

10. Reed v. Clark, 47 Cal. 194.

11. Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94; Prescott v. Guyler, 32 Ill. 323; Coil v. Wallace, 34 N. J. L. 291.

Where there was no day agreed upon, there can be no breach until an offer is made to fix the time and place for the marriage. Fible v. Coplinger, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 464.

12. Short v. Stone, 8 Q. B. 358; Shellenbarger v. Blake, 67 Ind. 76; King v. Hersey, 2 Ind. 402.

13. Frost v. Knight, 41 Law J. Ex. 78; Coil v. Wallace, 34 N. J. L. 291.

the two last-mentioned cases the party not in default need not wait for the time of performance to arrive,[1] or request the fulfilment of the promise,[2] but may sue at once.[3] When a request is required, in the case of a woman, the modest expression of her readiness to be married, in the presence of the man, is sufficient request.[4]

4. The Action.—Suit cannot be brought for the specific performance of a promise of marriage,[5] but an action for damages lies for a breach of such promise.[6] This action exists independently of statute by the common law,[7] although at an early day in this country it was questioned whether such an action could be brought,[8] and efforts have been made at various times to have it abolished.[9] The action may be brought by either a man or a woman.[10] It does not survive against a party's representatives unless there has been special damage.[11] The action is one for debt within a constitutional inhibition against imprisonment for debt.[12] There is no remedy by attachment, as the damages are not liquidated.[13] Breach of promise of marriage is not of itself a fraud, and punishable as such;[14] but if there has been also seduction and an attempt to abscond, it has been held to amount to a fraud.[15] The action is of course an action ex contractu.[16]

5. The Defences.—When sued for damages for breach of promise the defendant may show either that, owing to the absence of some requisite, there never was any contract,[17] or that, though such a contract did exist, he did not break it because he was discharged from his obligation. He may show that he was discharged by the plaintiff's express consent,[18] or by the plaintiff's consent to be implied by the jury from her conduct;[19] or by the plaintiff's failure

1. Lahey v. Knott, 8 Oregon, 198; Hunter v. Hatfield, 68 Ind. 416.

As where a man promised to marry a woman when his father died, and renounces his promise before that time. Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Exch. 111. Or has fixed the day for his marriage and marries another before it arrives. Sheehan v. Barry, 27 Mich. 223; Short v. Stone, 8 Q. B. 358.

2. Lahey v. Knott, 8 Oreg. 198; Hunter v. Hatfield, 68 Ind. 416; Pettengill v. McGregor, 12 N. H. 180.

3. Frost v. Knight, 41 L. J. Exch. 78; Donoghue v. Marshall, 32 L. T. N. S. 310; Kurtz v. Frank, 76 Ind. 594; Holloway v. Griffith, 32 Iowa, 409.

4. Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94.

5. Cheney v. Arnold, 15 N. Y. 345.

6. Wightman v. Coates, 15 Mass. 1; cases post, § 6.

7. Short v. Stotts, 58 Ind. 29.

8. 18 Central Law Journal, 441.

9. 18 Central Law Journal, 261.

10. Kelly v. Renfro, 9 Ala. 328.

11. Smith v. Sherman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 408; Kelley v. Riley, 106 Mass. 330; Wade v. Kalbfleisch, 50 N. Y. 282; Grubb v. Sult, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 203; Shuler v. Milisape, 71 N. Car. 297.

But the mere fact that the woman has borne a child which she has had to support is not such special damage. This matter depends largely on the statutes of the particular State.

12. Perry v. Orr, 35 N. J. L. 295.

13. Price v. Cox, 83 N. Car. 261.

14. Tyson, 32 Mich. 262.

15. Sheahan v. Sheahan, 25 Mich. 145.

16. Malone v. Ryan, 14 R. I. 614; Shreckengast v. Ealy, 16 Neb. 510.

17. The essentials of the contract have already been discussed under section 1. The defendant may show that there was no offer, or no exception; or that the consideration was illegal; or that one of the parties was not competent; or that the promise was obtained by force or fraud. See ante, cases cited.

18. Shellenbarger v. Blake, 67 Ind. 75; Grant v. Willey, 101 Mass. 356.

19. As where the plaintiff went away and stayed two years without correspond-to carry out some condition of the contract [1] or prior breach of the contract herself;[2] or by the plaintiff's (or even the defendant's [3]) having become physically or mentally unfit to marry after the promise was made;[4] or by the plaintiff's having been dissolute,[5] or guilty of such brutal or immoral conduct as shows her unfit to expect the defendant to marry her,[6] though excessive drinking has been held not enough.[7] But it is not a defence that after the promise the defendant discovered that he could not live happily with the plaintiff,[8] or that she had promised to marry some one else before she agreed to marry him,[9] or that he made his promise in bad faith,[10] or that after he refused to marry her he offered to carry out his contract,[11] certainly not if his second offer came after she had threatened or brought the suit.[12] If the defendant pleads the plaintiff's bad conduct as a discharge, he must show that his refusal to consummate his promise was due to such bad conduct,[13] and that he renounced his promise as soon as the conduct happened or was discovered by him.[14] And dissolute conduct is no defence if he was a party to it or connived at it.[15]

6. The Damages.—In actions for breach of promise of marriage damages have never been limited to the rules governing actions upon simple contracts for the payment of money,[16] but rest with the sound discretion of the jury under the circumstances of each particular case,[17] subject, of course, to the general restriction that a verdict influenced by prejudice, passion, or corruption will not be allowed to stand.[18] To keep cases of this kind out of the courts, exemplary damages may properly be awarded.[19] The ence with the defendant. King v. Gillett, 7 Mees. & W. 55; Davis v. Bomford, 6 Hurl. & N. 245.

1. As where she had failed to have a promised operation performed on her hymen. Gring v. Lerch, 3 Cent. Rep. 1; s. c., 102 Pa. St. 244.

2. See ante, § 3; Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 346; Fible v. Coplinger, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 464; McCoormick v. Robb, 24 Pa. St. 44.

3. See Hall v. Wright, El. B. & E. 746; Boast v. Firth, L. R. 4 C. P. 8; Allen v. Baker, 89 N. Car. 91; Barnes v. Brown, 69 N. Car. 439; Kantzler v. Grant, 2 Brad. (Ill.) 231.

4. Atchison v. Baker, Peake Ad. Cas. 103; cases last cited.

5 Espy v. Jones, 37 Ala. 379; Denslow v. Van Horn, 16 Iowa, 476.

6. Leeds v. Lock, 4 Esp. 166; 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 413.

7. Button v. McCauley, 1 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 282.

8. Coolidge v. Neat, 129 Mass. 146; Sheahan v. Barry, 27 Mich. 217.

9 Roper v. Clay, 18 Mo. 318.

10. Prescott v. Guyler, 32 Ill. 312.

11. Holloway v. Griffith, 32 Iowa, 409; Southard v. Wexford, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 284 See Kelly v. Renfro, 9 Ala. 328.

12. Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 354; cases last cited.

13. Woodard v. Bellamy, 2 Root (Conn.), 354; Butler v. Eschleman, 18 Ill. 44; Bell v. Eaton, 28 Ind. 468; Denslow v. Van Horn, 16 Iowa, 476; Showman v. Wardwell, 32 Me. 275; Berry v. Bakeman, 44 Me. 164; Van Storch v. Griffin, 77 Pa. St. 504; Capehart v. Carradine, 4 Strobh. (S. Car.), 42; Goodall v. Thurman, 1 Head (Tenn.), 209.

14. Boynton v. Kellogg, 3 Mass. 189; Palmer v. Andrews, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 143; Young v. Murphy, 3 Bing. N. C. 54.

15. Johnson v. Smith, 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 184.

16. Thorn v. Knapp, 42 N. Y. 474.

17. Southard v. Rexford, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 254; Grant v. Willey, 101 Mass. 356; Coolidge v. Neat, 129 Mass. 146; Shreckengast v. Ealy, 16 Neb. 510; Barry v. Da Costa, 1 Har. & R. 291; Smith v. Woodfire, 1 Com. B. N. S. 660.

18. Collins v. Mack, 31 Ark. 684; Douglass v. Gausman, 68 Ill. 170; Denstow v. Van Horn, 16 Iowa, 477; Wilken v. Johnson, 58 Mo. 600.

19. Coryell v. Colbaugh, 1 N. J. L. 77;

plaintiff is entitled to recover not only an indemnity for her pecuniary loss, and the disappointment of her reasonable expectations of material and worldly advantage resulting from the intended marriage, but also compensation for wounded feelings, and the mortification and pain which she has been wrongfully made to undergo, and for the harm that has been done to her prospects in life.[1] Thus there may be given in evidence, and the jury may take into consideration in estimating the damages, the defendant's general reputation[2] for wealth[3] (and in rebuttal poverty[4]), and his social position;[5] the length of the engagement;[6] the depth of the plaintiff's devotion;[7] her lack of independent means:[8] her mortification and injured feelings and affections;[9] her loss of virtue and reputation, but not her loss of time and the expenses of medical attendance;[10] her altered social condition in relation to her home and family due to his conduct,[11] and her expenses in preparation for the marriage.[12] But no facts arising after suit brought may be proved.[13]

In aggravation of damages, it may be proved in some States, if this is alleged in the complaint,[14] that by means of his promise[15] the defendant seduced her;[16] and the results of the seduction, as the expenses attending the birth of a child,[17] or the pain and mortification of bearing a bastard.[18] In other States, on the ground that the plaintiff must have been a particeps criminis to the seduction, and therefore could not complain of it, the jury cannot consider it.[19] In aggravation also may be shown the

Davis v. Single, 27 Mo. 600; Fiddler v. McKinley, 21 Ill. 308; White v. Thomas, 12 Ohio St. 313.

1. Collins v. Mack, 31 Ark. 684; Sherman v. Rawson, 102 Mass. 399.

2. Kniffen v. McConnell 30 N. Y. 285, 289; Kerfoot v. Marsden, 2 Fost.& F. 160.

3. Douglass v. Gausman, 68 Ill. 170; Hunter v. Hatfield, 68 Ind. 422; Reed v. Clark, 47 Cal. 194; Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 346; Wells v. Podgett, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 323; Allen v. Baker, 89 N. Car. 91; Wilken v. Johnson, 58 Mo. 600.

The damages are not to be measured by the wealth or poverty of the defendant, though his wealth and rank may be pertinent to the issue as showing the injury sustained by the loss of marriage. Collins v. Mack, 31 Ark. 685.

4. Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288.

5. Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 349; Lawrence v. Cooke, 56 Me. 187.

6. Coolidge v. Neat, 129 Mass. 146; Grant v. Willey, 101 Mass. 356.

7. Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288.

8. Vanderpool v. Richardson, 52 Mich. 336.

9. Barry v. Da Costa, 1 Har. R. 291; Reed v. Clark, 47 Cal. 194; Sauer v. Schulenberg, 33 Md. 288; Sherman v. Lawson, 102 Mass. 395.

10. Giese v. Schultz, 53 Wis. 462.

11. Barry v. Da Costa, 1 Har. & R. 291; s. c., 1 L. R. C. P. 331.

12. Smith v. Sherman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 408.

13. Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 346; Greenleaf v. McColly, 14 N. H. 304; Greenup v. Stoker, 7 Ill. 688.

14. Cates v. McKinney, 48 Ind. 562; Selger v. Etzell, 75 Ind. 417; Leavitt v. Cutler, 37 Wis. 46.

15. See Espy v. Jones, 37 Ala. 379; Sauer v. Schulenberg, 33 Md. 288.

16. Collins v. Mack, 31 Ark. 684; Whalen v. Layman, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 194; Hatten v. Chapman, 46 Conn. 607; Burnett v. Simpkins, 24 Ill. 264; Tubbs v. Vankleek, 12 Ill. 446; King v. Kersey, 2 Ind. 339; Sheahan v. Barry, 27 Mich. 217; Green v. Spencer, 3 Mo. 318; Hill v. Waupin, 3 Mo. 324; Roper v. Clay, 18 Mo. 383; Wells v. Podgett, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 323; Kniffen v. McConnell, 30 N. Y. 285; Coil v. Wallace, 21 N. J. L. 291; Williams v. Hollingsworth, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 12, White v. Campbell, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 573, Giese v. Shultz, 53 Wis. 462.

17. Collins v. Mack, 31 Ark. 684; and cases last cited.

18. Wilds v. Bogan, 57 Ind. 453.

19. Burks v. Shain, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 341; mode in which the engagement was broken;[1] the cruel, indecent, and insulting conduct of the defendant;[2] and the fact that to justify his refusal he has pleaded the plaintiff's unchastity in bar,[3] whether such plea was in bad faith or not;[4] though in some States to enhance damages the plea of justification must have been made in bad faith,[5] and in some it cannot be taken into consideration at all.[6]

And in mitigation of damages may be shown the fact of the plaintiff's unchastity, though known at the time of the promise or condoned,[7] and her general bad character[8] (good character in rebuttal[9]); and the defendant's bad character,[10] or his being afflicted with a contagious[11] or incurable[12] disease; and any misconduct showing that the plaintiff would be an unfit companion in married life.[13] But not that since the commencement of the action the plaintiff has made declarations to the effect that she had no affection for the defendant, and would not marry him but for his property;[14] but such declarations made before the action were admitted,[15] and not the fact that the plaintiff had been trying to marry some one else,[16] or the probabilities of unhappiness resulting from the marriage;[17] and not that the defendant had seduced the plaintiff or corrupted her morals, rendering her a less desirable person to marry.[18]

BREACH OF TRUST. See TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

BREAK.—The lifting the latch of a door; the picking of a lock or opening with a key; the removal of a pane of glass, and indeed the displacement or unloosing of any fastening which the owner has provided as a security to the house, is a breaking—an actual Weaver v. Bachert, 2 Pa. St. 80; Perkins v. Hersey, 1 R. I. 493.

1. Grant v. Willey, 101 Mass. 356; Chesley v. Chesley, 10 N. H. 327; Baldy v. Stratton, 11 Pa. St. 316.

2. Baldy v. Stratton, 11 Pa. St. 356; Chesley v. Chesley, 10 N. H. 327.

3. Davis v. Slagle, 27 Mo. 603; Thorn v. Knapp, 42 N. Y. 474; Southard v. Rexford, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 260.

4. Kniffen v. McConnell, 30 N. Y. 285.

5. Powers v. Wheatly, 45 Cal. 113; Reed v. Clark, 47 Cal. 194; Blackburn v. Mann, 85 Ill. 222; Fiddler v. McKinley, 21 Ill. 308; Denslow v. Van Horn, 16 Iowa, 477; Tompkins v. Wadley, 3 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 424; White v. Thomas, 12 Ohio St. 312; Leavitt v. Cutler, 37 Wis. 46; Simpson v. Black, 27 Wis. 206.

6. Hunter v. Hatfield, 68 Ind. 416. Compare Kurtz v. Frank, 76 Ind. 594.

7. Burnett v. Simpkins, 24 Ill. 264; Butler v. Eschlemann, 18 Ill. 44; Denslow v. Van Horn, 16 Iowa, 474; Cole v. Holliday, 4 Mo. App. 94; Williams v. Hollingsworth, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 12; Sheahan v. Barry, 27 Mich. 217.

8. Berry v. Bakeman, 44 Me. 164; Morgan v. Yarborough, 5 La. Ann. 416.

9. Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288.

10. Button v. McCauley, 1 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 382.

11. Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288; Hall v. Wright, El. B. & El. 746.

12. Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288; Allen v. Baker, 86 N. Car. 91.

13. Button v. McCauley, 1 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 382.

14. Miller v. Hayes, 34 Iowa, 496; Stiles v. Tilford, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 339.

15. Miller v. Rosier, 31 Mich. 475.

16. Simpson v. Black, 27 Wis. 256.

17. Piper v. Kingsbury, 48 Vt. 480

18. Boynton v. Kellogg, 3 Mass. 189. In this case, Sedgwick, J., said: "It is not to be endured that a man should seduce a female and ruin her character and standing in society, and, when she comes to ask compensation for the injury under which she is suffering, avail himself of her humiliation and disgrace to diminish her claim for damages."

breaking—within the meaning of the term as employed in the definition of burglary at common law, and it is employed in the statute.[1] What would be a "breaking" of the outer door in burglary is equally a "breaking" by the sheriff when he comes to levy.[2] As the word "break" has obtained a fixed and definite meaning at common law when applied to a dwelling-house proper or other buildings within the curtilage, the legislature must be presumed to have used it in the same sense when applied to other statutory breakings.[3] (See BURGLARY.)

BREAKING DOORS. See ARREST, vol. 1, pp. 722, 746.

BREEDING—BRED. See note 4.

BRETHREN—in the limitation over a child's share in a will—has been construed to include the daughters of the testator.[5]

BREVET.—"It may be that in the strict sense of the military term the rank of brigadier and brevet brigadier is the same, but it is well known that practically they are by no means identical, and that the position of the former is, in many respects, better than that of the latter. Brevet rank is conferred, in theory at least, for meritorious services by commission from the President, under authority of an act of Congress. It does not entitle the holder to corresponding pay or command, except under special circumstances defined by law."[6]

1. Walker v. State, 63 Ala. 59.

2 Curtis v. Hubbard, 1 Hill (N.Y.), 338.

3. Nichols v. State, 32 N. W. Repr. (Wis.) 546.

4. For Breeding Purposes.—The statute of the United States providing that "animals specially imported for breeding purposes shall be admitted free, etc.," limits free importation of animals to such as are imported for the particular purpose of breeding; and it is a sufficient compliance with the statute that the importer, in good faith, intends them for that purpose, and it does not prevent his otherwise disposing of them if he afterwards finds it necessary or desirable to do so. U. S. v. 196 Mares, 29 Fed. Repr. 139. See also U. S. v. 11 Horses, 33 Intern. Rev. Rec. 190.

Bred, Kept, or Preserved.—On an indictment for taking fish "bred, kept, and preserved" in a river running through a park, where it was shown that the park was walled round except where the river entered and passed out, and that there were fences to keep in the deer but nothing to keep in the fish, and that they were not known to breed there, and nothing was done to stock the river, but persons were never suffered to angle in the park without leave, held, that the place was not one where fish were "bred, kept, or preserved" within the meaning of the act, and that the conviction was wrong. Rex. v. Caradice, Russ. & Ry. 205.

Breeding Back Again.—The agreement with regard to a stallion to give to customers the "privilege of breeding back again next season, should the mare not prove with foal" means only that they could have such privilege if the horse and mares lived to another season and the owner did not covenant that his horse would live to another season, nor make the amount due him for the service of his horse depend upon whether the animal so lived. Price v. Pepper, 13 Bush (Ky.), 42.

5. Terry v. Brunson, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 78. "That it is unusual and rather unnatural to employ the word 'brethren,' as it is employed in this will, to designate a class of persons such as the legatees named is admitted. . . . Nor is the philological criticism upon the word 'brethren' so strong as to forbid its application in the sense contended for by the plaintiff. This application of it is legitimate, although unusual. We hear from the highest authority of the words 'men,' and 'brethren,' both masculine, having been employed in addressing mixed multitudes, and we learn from the same sacred source that a whole nation was invoked as brethren of the stock of Abraham. The word is a noun of multitude, and may undoubtedly be so employed."

6. U. S. v. Hunt, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 552. "When an officer holding rank by brevet receives a regular commission of the

BREWER.—Every person, firm, or corporation who manufactures fermented liquors of any name or description for sale, from malt, wholly or in part, or from any substitute therefor, is a brewer, within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Acts.[1]

BRIBERY. See also CONSPIRACY.

Definition.—The crime of offering any undue reward or remuneration to any public officer, or other person intrusted with a public duty, with a view to influence his behavior in the discharge of his duty. The taking such reward is as much bribery as the offering it. It also sometimes signifies the taking or giving a reward for public office.[2] same grade, he is said to be promoted and to become a full officer of that rank. These circumstances make it evident that there is a difference of military position between an officer by brevet and an officer by regular commission, and that the one is less eligible than the other. . . . We think that Congress had in view the distinction between brevet rank and regular rank, to which we have referred, and regarded the latter as above the former."

1. 14 U. S. Stat. at Large, 117.

2. Brown's Law Dict. See Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; 4 Black. Com. 139; State v. Ellis, 33 N. J. L. 102.

The voluntary giving or receiving of anything of value in corrupt payment for an official act done or to be done. 2 Bish. Cr. L. (7th Ed.) § 25.

Nature of the Offence.—Bribery is a misdemeanor punishable at common law. Bribery in strict sense, says Hawkins, is taken for a great misprision of one in a judicial place, taking any valuable thing except meat and drink of small value of any man who has to do before him in any way, for doing his office, or by color of his office. In a large sense, it is taken for the receiving or offering of any undue reward by or to any person whomsoever, whose ordinary profession or business relates to the administration of justice, in order to incline him to do a thing against the known rules of honesty and integrity. Also bribery sometimes signifies the taking or giving a reward for offices of a public nature. Hawk. P. C. b, 1, c. 67, §§ 1, 2, 3.

It seems that this offence will be committed by any person in an official situation who shall corruptly use the power or interest of his place for rewards or promises; as in the case of one who was clerk to the agent for French prisoners of war, and indicted for taking bribes in order to procure the exchange of some of them out of their turn. (R. v. Beale, E. T. 38 Geo. III., cited in R. v. Gibbs, 1 East R. 183; and see R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494.) And bribery sometimes signifies the taking or giving of a reward for offices of a public nature. (1 Hawk. P. C. c. 67, s. 3.) Corrupt and illegal practices in giving rewards or making promises, in order to procure votes in the elections of members to serve in Parliament, are also denominated bribery, and punishable by common law and by statute. (R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1338; 2 Geo. II. c. 24; 49 Geo. III. c. 118.) So, giving refreshments to voters before they vote, in order to induce them to vote for a particular candidate, is bribery at common law. (Hughes v. Marshall, 2 Tyrw. 134; s. c., 2 C. & J. 118; 5 C. & P. 151.) And the attempt to influence persons serving as jurymen corruptly to one side, by gifts or promises (which, with other practices tending to influence a jury, will be considered in treating of the crime called embracery), may be mentioned as a species of bribery. The law abhors the least tendency to corruption; and upon the principle which has been already mentioned of an attempt to commit even a misdemeanor being itself a misdemeanor, attempts to bribe, though unsuccessful, have in several cases been held to be criminal. Thus, it is laid down generally, that if a party offers a bribe to a judge, meaning to corrupt him in a case depending before him, and the judge takes it not, yet this is an offence punishable by law in the party that offers it. (3 Inst. 147; Rex v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2500.) And it has been held to be a misdemeanor to attempt to bribe a cabinet minister, and a member of the Privy Council, to give the defendant an office in the colonies. (Vaughan's Case, 4 Burr.

The mere offer to bribe, though it may be rejected, constitutes the offence;[1] and it is not necessary that the money should be 2494; and see R. v. Pollman, 2 Campb. 229.) And an information was granted against a man for promising money to a member of a corporation to induce him to vote for the election of a mayor. (Plympton's Case, 2 Ld. Raym. 1377.) An information also appears to have been exhibited against a person for attempting by bribery to influence a juryman in giving his verdict. (Young's Case, cited in Rex v. Higgins, 2 East R. 14 and 16.) Where a police officer was offered £1000 to assist a party in obtaining possession of a ward of the court of chancery who had a fortune of £5000, and who afterwards married such party, Lord Eldon, C., said: "The endeavor to bribe a man to commit an offence is itself a very serious offence, and the person who made that offer may not be aware of his danger." (Wade v. Broughton, 3 Ves. & B. 172.) 1 Russ on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 223.

Writing a letter in one State, proposing to bribe, and sending it by mail to a person in another State, is an offence completed in the State in which the letter is written. U. S. v. Warrall, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 384.

The offer of services is bribery, as where one offered to come and "chop cotton for a week." Caruthers v. State, 74 Ala. 406.

A note given as a bribe is void, as contrary to public policy. An indictment charging the receiving a promissory note is bad, as it does not charge the receiving a thing of value. State v. Walls, 54 Ind. 561. See Com. v. Callaghan, 2 Va. Cas. 460.

An indictment for offering to bribe need not allege the particular acts required to be done for the bribe. Reed v. State, 43 Tex. 319.

The offer must precede the act. Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293; Huntingtower v. Ireland, 2 D. & R. 450.

In a prosecution against a township trustee for accepting a bribe to influence him in his official action, and for entering into a contract for supplies in pursuance of such bribe, it is no defence that such contract was void and not enforceable against the township. Glover v. State, 109 Ind. 391.

On the trial of a defendant charged with having accepted a bribe, as trustee of a school township, and with having been influenced thereby to make purchases of school supplies, etc., in payment of which township warrants were by him issued, where an admission of the defendant is proved that a certain letter received by him as such trustee, from a third party, contained a correct list of township warrants issued by him, and that they were so issued and delivered in consideration of money received by him, such letter is admissible in evidence. Glover v. State, 109 Ind. 391.

De Facto Officer.—Appellant was indicted for offering to bribe one L., "a deputy sheriff of said county." The State having proved that L. at the date alleged was and for some time had been acting as deputy sheriff and jailer of the county, the defence proposed but was not permitted to prove that L. had not been appointed in writing, nor sworn, nor otherwise qualified as directed by article 4520 of the Revised Statutes. Held, that it was sufficient for the State to prove that L. was a deputy sheriff de facto at the date alleged. The regularity of his appointment and qualification was not an issue in the case, and therefore the proof proposed by the defence was properly excluded. The alleged object of the corrupt offer was to obtain the release of a prisoner who was in the custody of L. as jailer, and it is contended by the appellant that, inasmuch as no mittimus to L. was in proof, the prisoner was not legally in his custody. But held that the manner in which the jailer became charged with the custody of the prisoner was a matter into which the appellant was not entitled to inquire. Florez v. State, 11 Tex. App. 102.

Evidence.—Under the allegations of the indictment and the circumstances of the case as shown by the testimony, it was held competent for the State to prove other acts of bribery than those alleged in the indictment for the purpose of corroborating the principal witness upon material facts involved in the original contract of bribery, and also for the purpose of showing the system, plan, and design of the parties involved in the transaction alleged in the indictment. Guthrie v. State, 16 Neb. 667.

1. Walsh v. People, 65 Ill. 58; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 569; Com. v. Harris, 1 Leg. Gaz. (Pa.) 455; State v. Ellis, 33 N. J. 102; U. S. v. Worrall, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 380.

If the offer be of a present, then its nature and value must not be left to conjecture; and therefore an affidavit for an information, charging that the offer was of "a present, or a present of $100, the tendered or produced.[1] A proposal by a public officer to receive a bribe is an indictable offence at common law.[2] The payment or offer of a valuable consideration to a public officer constitutes the offence.[3] affiant is not certain which," is insufficient, and a further charge therein of the payment of $100 after the official action desired was consummated is mere surplusage. State v. Stephenson, 83 Ind. 246. Compare Com. v. Chapman, 1 Va. Cas. 138.

If a person makes a full and complete delivery of money to a magistrate, with the corrupt intention of influencing his decision in a matter pending before him, such person is guilty of corruptly giving a gift to the magistrate, within the Pub. Sts. c. 205, § 9, although the latter receives the money in ignorance of what it is, and retains it solely for the purposes of public justice. Com. v. Murray, 135 Mass. 530.

In Sulston v. Norton, 3 Burr. 1235, which was an action under the st. of 2 Geo. II. c. 24, § 7, which provided that "if any person by himself, or any person employed by him, doth or shall, by any gift or reward, or by any promise, agreement, or security for any gift or reward, corrupt or procure any person or persons to give his or their vote," he shall be subjected to a penalty of £500, Lord Mansfield remarks: "The offence was completely committed by the corrupter, whether the other party shall afterwards perform his promise or break it."

In Henslow v. Fawcett, 3 A. & E. 51, which was an action on the same statute, Lord Denman, in commenting upon it, remarks: "Procuring is one thing; it is essential that the vote should be given. Corrupting (which word is connected by the disjunctive particle) is another; it seems to me to lie altogether in the act of the party giving the bribe." Mr. Justice Coleridge says: "I am prepared to go the length of saying that if it were clearly shown that Garner [the person who received the money] never intended to give the vote, concealing the intention from the defendant, and being so far moved by the defendant's act as to receive his money and conceal such intention, the defendant would be liable."

It is not material whether the money was paid over to the defendant before or at the time he entered into the contract. It is sufficient if he received the money afterwards in pursuance of a prior arrangement and agreement. Glover v. State 109 Ind. 391.

1. People v. Ah. Fook, 62 Cal. 493; Jackson v. State, 43 Tex. 421. Compare Barefield v. State, 14 Ala. 603.

2. Walsh v. People, 65 Ill. 58; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 569. Compare Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293; O'Brien v. State, 6 Tex. App. 665.

3. Watson v. State, 39 Ohio St. 123; State v. Ellis, 33 N. J. L. 102; State v. Pomeroy, 1 Cent. Law Jour. 414; Walsh v. People, 65 Ill. 58; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 569; State v. Pearce, 14 Fla. 153; State v. Smalls, 11 S. Car. 262.

A bond given to influence an alderman to a particular course in the discharge of his duties is illegal and void. It is immaterial to whom it is executed. Cook v. Shipman, 24 Ill. 614.

An indictment which charges that defendant corruptly offered and promised to B., a member of the House of Representatives, with the intent to corruptly and feloniously influence his vote upon a certain bill then pending in such house, "a valuable thing, to wit, stock of the Cincinnati Union R. Co. of the amount and value of $20,000, and a large amount of money, of great value," is not bad for uncertainty. It is not necessary, in addition to such allegation, to recite the facts which give the thing offered a value, nor to charge that a definite sum of money was offered. A single count in such indictment, which charged that B. was a member of the House, and also a member of a standing committee of such House to which the bill was referred, and that the offer or promise was made to influence his vote therefor in the House, and his vote for a favorable report thereon in the committee, is not bad for duplicity. The charge thus made constitutes but one offence under the statute. To charge the jury in a trial upon such indictment that the thing offered or promised must have a value at the very time it is offered or promised, and while the bill is pending, is error, but not to the prejudice of the defendant. It is a crime to offer or promise a thing valuable at that time, or which will be valuable when, according to the promise, it is to be given or delivered. Watson v. State, 39 Ohio St. 123.

An indictment charging that on, etc., the defendant unlawfully, feloniously, and corruptly offered and promised one F., a township trustee, that if he, as such

2. Instances.—The promise or the payment of money to a public officer for the appointment as teacher in a public school, even if there is no vacancy,[1] or to summon such jurors as the person offering the bribe should name,[2] or for failure to execute a process on account of receiving a bribe from the person against whom it is issued;[3] an offer to a witness of a valuable consideration to disobey a subpœna,[4] or to offer one who has power of appointment a bribe for an appointment to office;[5] an offer to an officer, or a demand or acceptance by him, of a valuable consideration to permit a person in custody to escape,[6] or not to make an arrest,[7] nor to molest gamblers or other offenders;[8] an offer of a valuable consideration to a person in a judicial position to influence his decision.[9]

3. Of Voters.—Bribery of a voter is the offering of a valuable consideration either for his vote or for his forbearance to vote.[10] trustee, would purchase of defendant twelve sets of reading charts for the township, and pay him therefor the sum of $175, he would sign and deliver to the trustee a voucher and receipt in his favor as such trustee, "on said township," for $194, thereby unlawfully, corruptly, and feloniously offering the sum of $19, of the value of $19, the difference between the amount of the receipt and the amount to be paid, and that the offer and promise were unlawfully, feloniously, and corruptly made for the purpose of bribing, inducing, and influencing the trustee to act in buying the charts of defendant, charges an offer and promise to do an act beneficial to the trustee, and is good on motion to quash. State v. McDonald, 106 Ind. 233.

1. Shircliff v. State, 96 Ind. 369.

2. Com. v. Chapman, 1 Va. Cas. 138.

3. Old v. Commonwealth, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 915.

4. Scroggins v. State, 18 Tex. App. 298. See Jackson v. State, 43 Tex. 421; State v. Hughes, 43 Tex. 518. Compare Brown v. State, 13 Tex. App. 358.

5. R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494.

6. People v. Ah Fook, 62 Cal. 493; Florez v. State, 11 Tex. App. 102; O'Brien v. State, 7 Tex. App. 181.

7. A police officer who receives money in consideration of his promise not to arrest any one of a class of offenders against the criminal laws is guilty of receiving a bribe, and it is not necessary to allege in the information, or prove at the trial, that the crime was subsequently committed, and that the officer failed to make an arrest. People v. Markham, 64 Cal. 157; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 700.

8. Guthrie v. State, 16 Neb. 667.

9. 4 Black. Com. 139; State v. Lusk, 16 W. Va. 767 (an arbitrator); People v. Purley, 2 Cal. 564; Newell v. Commonwealth, 2 Wash. (Va.) 88; Barefield v. State, 14 Ala. 603. See R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2500.

The offence may be committed by an attempt to influence an arbitrator. State v. Lusk, 16 W. Va. 767.

If a person makes a full and complete delivery of money to a magistrate with the corrupt intention of influencing his decision in a matter pending before him, such person is guilty of bribery, although the magistrate receives the money in ignorance of what it is, and retains it solely for the purpose of public justice. Com. v. Murray, 135 Mass. 530.

In Barefield v. State, 14 Ala. 603, it was held that under the Alabama statutes case must be pending and the bribe accepted to constitute the crime. See People v. Purley, 2 Cal. 565.

10. State v. Jackson, 73 Me. 91; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 342; Com. v. Hoxey, 16 Mass. 385; Com. v. Silsbee, 9 Mass. 417; Nicholas v. Mudgett, 32 Vt. 546; People v. Thornton, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 555; Com. v. Shaver, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 338; Com. v. Walter, 86 Pa. St. 105; State v. Ellis, 33 N. J. L. 102; Walsh v. People, 65 Ill. 58; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 569; State v. Purdy, 36 Wis. 13; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 485; State v. Franks, 38 Tex. 640; Russell v. Commonwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 469; Com. v. Stephenson, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 226; State v. Collier, 72 Mo. 13; Com. v. Callaghan, 2 Va. Cas. 460; Russell on Crimes (9th Ed.), 232; Henslow v. Fawcett, 3 Ad. & E. 51; Baker v. Rusk, 15 Q. B. 870; Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & R. 265.

Promising is equivalent to offering a reward to a voter. State v. Harker, 4 Harr. (Del.) 559.

An attempt to bribe or corruptly influence the elector, although not accomplished, will subject the offender to an indictment. State v. Jackson, 73 Me. 91; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 342.

Any one is a candidate for whom a vote is asked, and it is not competent to the defendant to dispute a man's right of voting when he had asked him for his vote; it being immaterial whether the voter bribed had a right to vote or not, if he claimed to have such a right. Russell on Crimes (9th Am. Ed.) 233; Lilley v. Corne, 1 Selw. N. P. 650, n.

A promise to pay for loss of time is bribery. Simpson v. Yeend, 4 L. R. Q. B. 626. So also to pay the travelling expenses of a voter. Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & R. 265; Cooper v. Slade, 6 El. & Bl. 447. Even if all the candidates agree in the payment of the same amount. Bernbridge v. Roberts, 5 C. & P. 186.

If refreshments are supplied to voters with a view to influence elections, it is bribery. Hughes v. Marshall, 2 C. & J. 118. See Ribbans v. Crickett, 1 B. & P. 264; Lofthouse v. Wharton, 1 Camp. 550, n.; Ward v. Nanney, 3 C. & P. 399.

Thus an order given by a candidate to a tavern-keeper to furnish his friends with liquor and other articles during canvass has been pronounced bribery. Duke v. Asbee, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) 112. Compare Heilman v. Shanklin, 60 Ind. 424.

An agreement by the owner of a building that it should he kept open for the benefit of a certain party has been held to have in it the essence of bribery. Jackson v. Walker, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 27.

The acts must have been done by the candidate, or some person acting for him and on his behalf in order to be elected. Where supporters of a candidate gave orders to the landlord of a public house opened by the committee of the candidate to supply others with refreshments, which were supplied on the credit of those who gave the orders, held, not bribery. Ward v. Nanny, 3 C. & P. 399.

A promise made to the voters of a railroad-aid tax that they would be paid fifty cents on the dollar on their certificate when they paid such tax is bribery. Chicago, etc.. R. Co. v. Shea, 25 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 901.

The town of Gloucester (Mass.) was entitled to six representatives in the legislature. Each town was required by law to pay its own members, and for economical reasons the town of Gloucester usually returned but two instead of six. For political reasons it was thought desirable that the town should elect a full delegation, and thereupon certain individuals, with a view to induce the town to do so, gave a bond for the use of the inhabitants, conditioned that the whole expense of a full representation should not exceed the pay of two members, and six members were accordingly elected. Although the members elected had no agency in procuring such bond to be given, the legislature declared the election void. Gloucester Case, Cushing's Mass. Contested Elect. Cas. 97.

A candidate announced in a circular to the voters and tax-payers that he was willing to discharge the duties of the office for a less salary than that established by law. Held, that such offer was illegal, as it was an attempt to bribe the voters. State v. Purdy, 36 Wis. 213; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 485; Carrothers v. Russell, 53 Iowa, 346; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 222; State v. Collier, 74 Mo. 13; State v. Church, 5 Oregon, 375; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 746. Compare People v. Thornton, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 555; State v. Church, 5 Oregon, 375; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 746.

Where a certain town offered to erect a public building if the voters of the county would locate the county seat at that town, held, that it was not bribery of the electors. Wells v. Taylor, 5 Montana. 202; Dishon v. Smith, 10 Iowa, 212; Hall v. Marshall, 80 Ky. 552.

A gave money to B to induce B to vote for a candidate, and B agreed to do so in consideration of the gift. A was liable for bribing B, although B never gave the vote. Henslow v. Fawcett, 3 Ad. & El. 51.

A gave B five guineas to vote, and took from him a note for that sum, but at the same time gave a counter-note to deliver up the first note when the elector had voted. Held, it was an absolute gift, and bribery, although B voted for the opposite party. Sulston v. Norton, 3 Burr. 1235.

Three persons were candidates. It was apparent that if only one ran, he would be elected. To secure this result, it was agreed between the three candidates and their supporters that there should be a test ballot to determine who should stand at the election. One of the three, who was at the head of the test ballot, stood at the election, and was returned; but his agents gave money to voters to vote for him at the test ballot, without, however, making any stipulation as to their votes at the election. Held, that this was bribery. Bristol Election Petition. Brett v. Robinson, 5 L. R. C. P. 503.

It must appear that an election was held and that a vote was given at the election. Newell v. Commonwealth, 2 Wash. (Va.) 88. See Reed v. Lamb, 6 H. & N. 75.

Where a person has been guilty of several acts of bribery at an election, he is liable to a penalty in respect of each such act of bribery. Milnes v. Bale, 10 L. R. C. P. 591.

An agreement in writing, by which B., a candidate for the sheriff's office, agrees to withdraw his pretensions and give his influence in favor of E., in consideration of which E., if elected, agreed to appoint B. his deputy at a yearly salary of $500, is bribery. Lewis Cr. L. 126, citing Benedict v. Ehler, Lancaster Com. Pleas. See Com. v. Callaghan, 2 Va. Cas. 460.

A sheriff, after his election, may be convicted of bribery committed during the canvass, in bribing an elector to vote for him and use his influence in his favor. But such conviction does not authorize the sheriff's removal from office. It is not a misbehavior in office, nor is it deemed an "infamous crime," and therefore it is no ground for removal, and the supersedeas of the governor, reciting the conviction and purporting to remove the person convicted from office, is a nullity. Com. v. Shaver, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 338.

An officer may be removed by quo warranto for obtaining his election by bribery, without being first convicted of the offence on an indictment. Com. v. Walter, 83 Pa. St. 105.

English Statutes.—It was held that, notwithstanding the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, which made the offender liable to forfeit £500, bribery in elections of members to serve in Parliament remained a crime at common law; that the legislature never meant to take away the common-law crime, but to add a penal action; and that this appears by the words in the statute—"or being otherwise lawfully convicted thereof." (R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1335.) And a conviction upon an information granted by the court of King's Bench was just the same as if the party had been convicted upon an indictment. (R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1339.) But as the offender was equally liable to the penalties of the statute (Combe v. Pitt, 1 Blac. R. 524), that court would not interpose by information until the two years were expired in ordinary cases; though there might possibly be particular cases, founded on particular reasons, where it might be right to grant information before the expiration of the time limited for commencing the prosecution on the statute. (R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1340.) And in one case, where the defendant had been convicted of bribery, and the time for bringing the penal action was not expired, the court permitted him to enter into a recognizance to appear at the expiration of that time. (R. v. Haydon, 3 Burr 1359.) There was a great difference between the two parts of sec. 7 of the 2 Geo. II. c. 24. The first part, which was applicable to the voter, contained the word "ask," which was not repeated in the second. From this it might be taken that, in an action against the party tendering the bribe, proof should be required of more than a mere solicitation. Then, in the first part, the words went on thus, "or agree or contract for any money;" the agreement, therefore, would subject the party to the penalty. (Henslow v. Faucett, 3 A. & E. 51.) In the second part the words were "corrupt or procure." As to procuring, it was necessary that the vote should be actually given, but the corruption was complete by effecting an agreement amounting to corruption, although the vote was not given. If, therefore, A gave money to B to induce B to vote for a candidate, and B agreed to do so in consideration of the gift, A was liable to the penalty for corrupting, although B never gave the vote (Henslow v. Faucett, 3 A. & E. 51), and two very learned judges thought that A was equally liable if B never intended to vote according to the agreement at all, as A had done all that lay with him (Henslow v. Faucett, 3 A. & E. 51); and this opinion was held to be correct by the court of exchequer. (Harding v. Stokes, 2 M. & W. 238.) Where a friend of the candidate gave an elector five guineas to vote, and took from him a note for that sum, but at the same time gave a counter-note to deliver up the first note when the elector had voted, it was held to be an absolute gift and bribery within the act, although the elector voted for the opposite party. (Sulston v. Norton, 3 Burr. 1235.) And laying a wager with the voter that he did not vote for a particular candidate was also bribery within the act. (1 Hawk. P. C. c. 67, § 10, and note.) In an action upon this statute it was held that before the time of election any one was a candidate for whom a vote was asked; and that it was not competent for the defendant to dispute a man's right of voting when he had asked him for his vote; it being immaterial whether the voter bribed had a right to vote or not, if he claimed to have such a right. (Combe v. Pitt, 1 Blac. R. 523.) A declaration upon this statute must have stated what the bribe was, and specified that the defendant took money or some other particular species of reward; and where it stated generally "that the defendant did receive a gift or reward," in the disjunctive, it was held bad in arrest of judgment, the charge being of a criminal nature. (Davy v. Baker, 5 Burr. 2471.) And where the person corrupting was sued the same rule applied. And as the means of corrupting must be stated, so they must be stated accurately according to the facts. Where those means rest in agreement only, the actual agreement must be stated in order that the party may know what he has to answer, and may be able to plead the verdict, whatever it may be in another action, though it may not be necessary to state the matter with the same precision as in an action on the agreement supposing it were legal. (Baker v. Rusk, 15 B. Q. 870.) Where, therefore, a count stated that the defendant corrupted a voter by promising him to pay a debt of £41, and the evidence was a promise to pay the debt of £41 and the expenses in respect of the pledge of a boat for such debt, it was held that there was a fatal variance between the promise alleged and that proved by reason of the omission in the declaration of all mention of the expenses. (Baker v. Rusk, 15 Q. B. 870.) But where a count alleged that the defendant corrupted a voter by giving £10 and promising to pay £31 in addition, and the evidence proved the payment of the £10 and the promise to pay £31 and also the expenses of the pledge of the boat, it was held that the offence consisted in corrupting, which depends entirely on the means used in soliciting; the payment of £10 was undoubtedly corruption, and was sufficient to support this count; and that the promise to pay £31 more might be treated as surplusage, and, that being so, the omission to add "and the expenses" was immaterial. (Baker v. Rusk, 15 Q. B. 870.) The words of sec. 7 were all prospective, and they were construed as if they had been "in order to give" and "in order to forbear to give," and consequently they did not include a case where money was given to a voter after an election for having voted for a candidate, there having been no agreement made before the election for giving such money. (Lord Huntingtower v. Gardiner, 1 B. & C. 297.) Where voters for a member of Parliament had only been paid their actual travelling expenses, a difference of opinion has existed as to the legality of such payments; some committees of the House of Commons having held that such payments are legal, others (and probably theirs is the more correct opinion) that such payments are not legal, for it is obvious that such a mode of proceeding, if allowed, would lead to great abuses. (Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & Rob. 265.) And it seems, at all events, that where the same sum is given to every voter coming from the same place to an election for his travelling expenses, it is bribery; and it is not the less so though all the candidates agree in the payment of the same amount. (Bremridge v. Campbell, 5 C. & P. 186.) But where an action was brought by an agent of a candidate to recover from him the amount so paid, Tindal, C. J., left it to the jury to say "whether the sums were paid really and bona fide for travelling expenses, and travelling expenses only, or to induce the voters to give their votes." (Bremridge v. Campbell, 5 C. & P. 186.) It has since, however, been decided by the House of Lords that such payments, though bona fide made for travelling expenses only, are illegal; and though they are now rendered legal to some extent by the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 87, § 1, the case contains so much that is valuable in other respects that it is here inserted. Every promise to pay and every payment of travelling expenses, though fair and reasonable, to a voter in order to induce him to vote—that is, every promise upon any condition, express or implied, that he should be paid his travelling expenses if he voted for a particular candidate—is bribery within the meaning of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, § 2, No. 1. But where there is both a promise and a payment in pursuance of it, only one penalty is incurred within that clause. It is a clear proposition of law, that if a man employs an agent for a perfectly legal purpose, and that agent does an illegal act, that act does not affect the principal unless it is shown that the principal directed the agent so to act, or really meant he should so act, or afterwards ratified the illegal act, or he appointed one to be his agent to do both legal and illegal acts—to do everything, in short, which he might think proper to support the interests of the candidate;—if the candidate gives his agent such a general authority, and the agent is guilty of bribery, the candidate is no doubt responsible for it. (Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. C. 746.) One count alleged that the defendant promised money to R. C., a voter, in order to induce him to vote at an election; another count alleged that the defendant corruptly gave money to the voter, on account of his having voted at the said election. The defendant was a candidate at an election for Cambridge, and a printed circular had been prepared whereby out-voters were requested to return and vote for the defendant, and in his committee-room the question was discussed whether the expense of bringing up voters was legal, and the opinion of Tindal, C. J., in Bremridge v. Campbell (5 C. & P. 186) was read, on which the defendant said, "I think the expenses are legal," but limited it to the payment of expenses out of pocket; and thereupon a clerk of the defendant's agent, in his presence, but without any express direction from him or his agent, wrote at the bottom of each circular the words, "Your railway expenses will be paid." In consequence of receiving one of the circulars, a voter went from Huntingdon to Cambridge in order to vote, and voted at the election for the defendant, and he was paid eight shillings for his expenses from Huntingdon by the defendant's agent. Parke, B., told the jury that, if they were satisfied upon the evidence that the defendant did, by himself or any other person on his behalf authorized so to do, promise money to the voter in order to induce him to vote for the defendant, they must find for the plaintiff on the first count, although the money so promised was no more than the fair and reasonable expenses of the voter's travelling from Huntingdon to Cambridge and back again; and that if they were satisfied upon the evidence that the defendant did, by himself or any other person on his behalf authorized by him so to do, give money to the voter on account of, that is to say, that the moving cause of his giving such money was the voter's having voted for the defendant, they must find for the plaintiff on the second count, although the money so given was no more than the fair and reasonable expenses of the voter's travelling from Huntingdon to Cambridge and back again, and although the defendant honestly believed that he was committing no offence thereby. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff on both counts; and, upon a bill of exceptions, it was held that it was necessary to show that the circular was written by the authority, expressed or implied, of the defendant, and that there was not only evidence to go to the jury, but that they were well warranted in finding that both the promise and the payment were made by the authority, express or implied, of the defendant; and that although the defendant was perfectly innocent of any intention to violate the law, yet if he did authorize the memorandum to be added to the note, and that note was sent to the voter by his authority, he was acting in violation of the statute; but that the plaintiff ought not to recover two penalties, one for the promise to pay and the other for performing the promise by payment; for where there was a promise to pay, and a payment in pursuance of that promise, the legislature meant that to be only one act of bribery. (Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. C. 746.) But payment of the expense of taking up the freedom of voters is clearly illegal. (Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & Rob. 265.) A declaration under the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 7, for corrupting a voter by corruptly giving the voter the sum of £10, as a reward to him to give his vote, was supported by evidence that the defendant gave the voter a card in one room, which the voter presented to a person in another room, who thereupon gave him the money. (Webb v. Smith, 4 Bing. N. C. 373.) And it was held in the same case that the plaintiff might prove that the defendant on the same day, and at the same place, gave cards to other persons who also obtained money by presenting them to the person in the other room. (Webb v. Smith, 4 Bing. N. C. 373.) It seems that an indictment against a voter for giving a false answer at an election is insufficient if it merely state that the voter gave the answer at an election, and does not aver that the writ for holding the election, or that the election was duly held (R. v. Bowler, C. & M. 559; R. v. Ellis, C. & M. 564), and the same point would have applied to an indictment for bribery; but the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 6, makes it sufficient to allege that the defendant was guilty of bribery at the election. Where the first count charged the defendant with having paid money to one Gilbert with intent that it should be applied in bribery at an election, and several other counts charged the defendant with the actual bribery of several persons named in these counts, and the only act of the defendant was giving £2000 to Gilbert for the purposes of the election, and Gilbert was the person who had bribed the persons named in the second and other counts, and the jury found the defendant guilty on all the counts, it was objected that, as the defendant was found guilty on the first count, he ought not to have been found guilty upon the other counts, it appearing that there was but one act, namely, that of paying money by him to an agent; but it was held that this objection, if available at all, would only be by application at the trial that the prosecutor should be compelled to elect upon which count he would proceed. There was no doubt that a man by one and the same act might commit several distinct offences. By the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 2, No. 5, paying money to any person with intent that such person should use it to bribe electors is declared to be equivalent to bribery, and, as such, a misdemeanor, though no person was actually bribed; and by No. 1, giving money to an elector to induce him to vote is declared to be bribery, and as such a misdemeanor; but the offences are not the same, though it may be said that they arise from one and the same act. It was further objected that as the defendant had employed subordinate agents, by whom the bribes were given, he could not be convicted of having bribed the voters himself; but it was held that if a man employs an agent to corrupt voters, and that agent in carrying such general instructions into effect employs subordinate agents within the scope of the authority received from the principal, such principal, with reference to the express terms of this statute, as well as upon general principles of law, will be guilty of a misdemeanor as a principal. (R. v. Leatham, 3 L. T. 504.) In an action for bribery at an election it was held that the register of voters at an election made in pursuance of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, ss. 48, 49, is a document of such a public nature as to be admissible upon its mere production by the returning officer, and therefore an examined or certified copy of it is admissible; and where the plaintiff having given in evidence a copy of the writ and return from the office of the clerk of the crown, certified by a clerk in the office to be a true copy of the original writ and examined therewith, and the defendant's counsel, having suffered it to be given in evidence as a certified copy, at the close of the case objected that the copies of the writ and return were not duly certified copies, it was held that, assuming that they were not, there was no ground for granting a new trial, for the objection came too late, and might have been cured by proving that they were examined copies if it had been taken at the proper time. It seems that in such an action proof of the writ, return, and register of voters is requisite, and that parol evidence of an election having taken place is not sufficient. (Reed v. Lamb, 6 H. & N. 75.) And on an indictment for personating a voter at an election for a borough, it has been held that the writ to the sheriff must be produced in order to prove that the election was duly held. (R. v. Vaile, 6 Cox C. C. 470.) But where an offence is complete before the return is made, as where the offence is preventing a voter from voting, the return need not be given in evidence. (R. v. Clarke, 1 F. & F. 654.) The 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 6, makes the certificate of the returning officer evidence of the election. Where a book, which was in writing and duly signed, contained the register of voters, Byles, J., held that though there ought to be a copy of the list printed in a book and duly signed, in order to constitute a proper register, yet this register, though irregular, was valid, and admissible in evidence. (R. v. Clarke, 1 F. & F. 654.) Where an action for bribery was brought in Essex, and the sum of £10 had been paid by the defendant to the London correspondents of the Harwich Bank to the credit of a person who had a boat in his possession for a debt, and a few days afterwards the boat was released, it was held that the £10 must be taken upon the facts to have been paid at Harwich, and therefore the venue was properly laid in Essex. (Baker v. Rusk, 15 Q. B. 870.) The 5 & 6 Will. IV., c. 76, s. 54, enacts "that if any person who shall have or claim to have any right to vote in any election of mayor, or of a councillor, auditor, or assessor of any borough, shall, after the passing of this act, ask or take any money or other reward, by way of gift, loan, or other device, or agree or contract for any money, gift, office, employment, or other reward whatsoever, to give or forbear to give his vote in any such election, or if any person, by himself or any person employed by him, shall, by any gift or reward, or by any promise, agreement, or security for any gift or reward, corrupt or procure, or offer to corrupt or procure, any person to give or forbear to give his vote in any such election, such person so offending in any of the cases aforesaid shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of fifty pounds of lawful money of Great Britain, to be recovered, with full costs of suit, by any one who shall sue for the same, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; and any person offending in any of the cases aforesaid, being lawfully convicted thereof, shall forever be disabled to vote in any election in such borough, or in any municipal or Parliamentary election whatever in any part of the United Kingdom, and also shall for ever be disabled to hold, exercise, or enjoy any office or franchise to which he then shall or at any time afterwards may be entitled as a burgess of such borough, as if such person was naturally dead." The 54th section, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, contemplates three descriptions of offences: first, that of procuring the party to give his vote for a particular candidate, that is, when he acts in pursuance of the corrupt agreement; secondly, that of procuring the voter, where the bribe is offered and accepted, an actual agreement is made, and the party promises to act upon it; the third offence is a new one, not found in the old Bribery Act, where the whole that appears is the mere offer of a bribe, refused on the other side, or not assented to at the time. An employment is a reward within the meaning of this section. The offence of corrupting a voter is complete where the two parties have agreed, the one to offer, the other to accept, a bribe as the condition of voting for a particular person, whether the person who has agreed to vote votes or not for such person, or whether he intended so to vote or not. But where a bribe is offered but not accepted, the offence is that of offering to corrupt. A declaration in debt for the penalty of £50, under the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 54, alleged that the defendant did corrupt one J. W., who had a right to vote at an election of councillors for a borough, by corruptly promising to give the said J. W., if he should vote at the said election for certain candidates, employment in hauling stones at and for certain hire and reward to be paid for the same; and it was held upon demurrer that the declaration was sufficient. The question was whether any difference was made between the asker and the offerer of a gift or reward, as to the nature of the thing asked or offered. To ascertain what is the "gift or reward" contemplated in the latter branch of the clause, the court must look at the former part of the section, and there are found in conjunction the words "any money, gift, office, employment, or other reward whatsoever." An employment, therefore, is there considered as a reward; and by the common-sense of mankind it is so, where the party to whom it is offered wants employment. It falls, therefore, equally within the more general words of the latter part of the clause. But whether this employment was in the particular case given as a reward within the object of the act was a question for the jury; if only the ordinary wages were given they might probably find that the employment was not given for a corrupt reward. (Harding v. Stokes, 1 M. & W. 354.) The demurrer having been withdrawn by leave of the court, the defendant pleaded not guilty, and on the trial it appeared that J. W. having promised his vote in favor of certain candidates, the defendant told him that if he would vote for certain other candidates he would give him employment in hauling stones at certain weekly wages; J. W. answered that it was a good offer, but that the difficulty was how he should get off his promise; that he would consider it, and would see the defendant again the next Friday. No further communication, however, took place, and J. W. eventually voted for the candidates to whom he had originally promised his vote. It was objected for the defendant that the evidence did not prove a corrupting of the voter, as charged in the declaration, but a mere offering to corrupt; and the plaintiff was nonsuited. But the court, upon a rule to show cause why there should not be a new trial, held that if it were proved that there was an agreement to vote in pursuance of the offer, no matter whether the party intended to perform it or not, the offence of corrupting was complete. The evidence given in this case might be construed to prove that the offer was accepted; if the jury should be of that opinion the offence of corrupting was complete; but on the other hand they might well come to the conclusion that the voter had not made up his mind, but took time to consider further whether he would accept the offer; in that case the offence of corrupting was not complete, but it was a mere offer to corrupt within the third clause of the statute. (Harding v. Stokes, 1 M. & W. 354.) Some cases decided upon the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 8, may throw light upon the construction of the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 55. On that act it was decided that the circumstance of a party having been, within the limited time, a plaintiff in an action on the statute, and having prosecuted it to judgment, did not prove him to have been the first discoverer. Lord Mansfield, C. J., observed that the court had not said, nor would say, that a plaintiff cannot be the discoverer; but that the act does not make him so, or consider him as the discoverer; and that as the plaintiff could not be the witness himself in the action, some other person must have been the BRICK. See note 1.

4. Embracery.—Embracery includes an actual bribery of, or any attempt to bribe, a jury. (See EMBRACERY.)

BRIDGES. (See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; DAMAGES; HIGHWAYS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; NAVIGATION; NEGLIGENCE; NUISANCES; RAILROADS; WATER-COURSES; WAYS.)

1. Definition.—A bridge is a structure which affords to travellers and others a safe and complete passageway over a river or stream,[2] or over a ditch or other place or obstruction.[3]

witness; it was not therefore to be presumed, without any evidence of it, that the plaintiff was the first discoverer. (Curgenven v. Cumming, 4 Burr. 2540.) And where one person procured another to make an affidavit of facts amounting to bribery, and then prosecuted a third person upon these facts to conviction, it was held that the person making the affidavit was the discoverer. (Sibly v. Cuming. 4 Burr. 2464.) Not only a verdict, but judgment must be obtained to satisfy the clause; but when judgment is obtained it will relate, for the purpose of the indemnity, to the time when the discovery was first made. (Sutton v. Bishop, 1 Blac. R. 665.) 1 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 230 et seq.

1. Brick Dwellings.—Where buildings described in a policy of insurance as "brick dwellings" are shown to form a part of a block of houses having brick walls in the front and rear, with side walls in the basement and first story of brick, eight inches thick, and above them walls made with joists filled in with brick four inches thick and plastered, it is competent to ask a builder whether they would or would not be called brick houses. Mead v. N. W. Ins. Co., 7 N. Y. 530.

Brick Store.—Where a place in which liquors were kept was described in a warrant as a "brick store," and it was shown that the front and principal part of the store was of brick, but the liquors were kept and seized in a wooden addition in the rear, which communicated with the main room by a door, and that the store was also known in the neighborhood by the name of "the brick store," it was held that the place sufficiently answered the description in the warrant. "We think the objection is rather hypercritical. It was substantially a brick store. There is some wood in the construction of every brick building. Neither the plaintiff nor any one else would be liable to be misled by this description." Lowrey v. Gridley, 30 Conn. 450.

2. By the common law—flumen vel cursus aquæ. Rex v. Whitney, 3 N. & M. 60, 417, 421; Rex v. Oxfordshire, 1 Barn. & Ad. 300.

But water need not flow at all times. Regina v. Derbyshire, 2 G. & D. 97.

3. Whitall v. Freeholders of Gloucester, 40 N. J. L. 302; Board of Madison Co. v. Brown, 89 Ind. 48, 52; Tomlins' Law Dict.; Jacob's Law Dict.; Bouvier's Law Dict.; Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 524, 525.

Bridges declared to be of the same nature as ferries, and within the same principles applicable to them. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 713, 725; People v. Rensselaer & S. R. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 113, 133; Ward v. Gray, 6 B. & S. 345.

The term "bridges" is not confined to such structures as afford a complete passageway over a water-course.[1]

Exactly what constitutes a bridge is not a question of law, but rather of fact.[2]

2. Are Highways.—Public bridges are a part of the highway.[3]

But the terms "bridge" and "highway" are not convertible, so that an indictment for neglect to repair a bridge must be by the term bridge, and not highway.[4]

Railway viaducts are not bridges. Although it has been a subject of much discussion by the courts, it may be considered as settled, by a majority of the decisions, that a railway viaduct with no roadway or path over which man or beast could travel, intended only for railway trains and the transportation of passengers, baggage, etc., is not a bridge within the meaning of an act giving to a bridge company the exclusive right to erect and maintain a bridge and take tolls, especially where the act was passed when railroads were practically unknown.[5]

1. Whitall v. Freeholders of Gloucester, 40 N. J. L. 302, 305.

The common-law definition—flumen vel cursus aquæ, etc.—has a more enlarged signification by modern usage; so the term "bridge" in statutes signifies also crossings of public ways on land. State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451.

Special Instances.—A structure over a canal or surface water is a bridge within the meaning of the law authorizing chosen freeholders to construct bridges. McKinley v. Chosen Freeholders of Union Co., 29 N. J. Eq. (2 Stew.) 164.

An aqueduct for the passage of a canal or water-pipes over the river is a bridge, but not such a bridge as to be the violation of a grant to a bridge company of an exclusive right to take tolls. Bridge Co. v. Hoboken Land and Improvement Co., 13 N. J. Eq. (2 Beas.) 81, 91.

Structures with their abutments erected over a railroad for highways to cross are bridges. State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451.

Bridges are a "public use." Sedgwick on Statutory and Constitutional Law (2d Ed. Pomeroy's Notes), 446. Note a et seq., citing Baldwin, J.. in Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 251, 251.

Case of a foot-bridge formed by three planks and a hand-rail used for a foot-path over a small stream. Regina v. Southampton, 14 Eng. L. & E. 116.

Structure over a channel dry part of the time is not a "county bridge." Taylor v. Davis, 40 Iowa, 295.

2. Tolland v. Willington, 26 Conn. 578; Regina v. Gloucestershire, 1 Carr. & M. 506; Moreland v. Mitchell Co., 40 Iowa, 394; Rex v. Whitney, 3 N. & M. 60, 417, 421.

3. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Commissioners, 4 Neb. 450; McCormick v. Township of Washington (Pa. 1886), 2 Cent. Repr. 584; Zimmerman v. Conemaugh (Pa. 1886), 2 Cent. Repr. 361; Rapho v. Moore, 68 Pa. St. 404; Rex v. Inhabitants of Bucks, 12 East, 192; (under sec. 416 of the Municipal Act) McHardy v. Corporation of Township of Ellice et al (Prov. Ont.), 1 App. R. 628; s. c., 39 Q. B. 546; Commonwealth v. Central Bridge Corporation, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 243; Washer v. Bullett Co., 110 U. S. 558, 564; City of Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266; Rex v. Sainthill, 2 Ld. Ray. 1174. But see Osmond v. Widdecomb, 2 Barn. & Ald. 49; State v. Canterbury, 8 Fost. (N. H.) 195.

Bridge not a highway when. Rex v. Chart & Longbridge, 39 L. J. M. C. 107.

A bridge over a stream crossing a city street is a part of the street. City of Chicago v. Powers' Adm'x, 42 Ill. 169.

Is a street within intent of statute. Beaver v. Manchester L. J., 26 Q.B. 311; City of Eudora v. Miller, 30 Kan. 494; Erie City v. Schwingle, 22 Pa. St. 384.

The question whether actually a part of highway was not in issue in the last case, but action was for injury from defective highway, the injury having occurred on bridge upon it.

4. State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195, 230; Rex v. Oxfordshire, 1 Barn. & Ad. 300, where it was held that an indictment must be of non-repair of pons . . . super flumen, etc.

5. Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land Co., 13 N. J. Eq. (2 Beas.) 503;

A Connecticut case, however, holds that a railroad bridge, although not convenient for or admitting common vehicles and not intended for or admitting foot-passengers, is what would ordinarily be called a bridge, since it had the form, name, and character of a bridge and did its work; its purposes being that of transportation in its cars of personal baggage and freight, etc.[1]

Bridges are classified as public or private.

3. Public Bridge.—The general use of a bridge by the public as a part of the highway common, and its public utility, are necessary to constitute it a public bridge.[2]

And whether a bridge is so connected with a public highway as to be of public necessity and utility is a question of fact for the jury.[3]

But such general use may be limited to occasions when special emergencies arise, as in times of freshets, and the bridge will still be a public bridge.[4]

4. Dedication and Prescription.—Bridges in respect to repairs may become public by dedication or prescription; as, where a private bridge built in a highway was used by the public for forty years, it was held to have become a public bridge.[5]

5. A Private Bridge is one erected for the use and benefit of a Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall. (U. S.) 116; Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica & Schenectady R. Co., 6 Paige (N. Y.), 564; Bridge Co. v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., 13 N. J. Eq. (2 Beas.) 81, 91; Attorney-General v. Delaware & Bound Brook R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. (12 C. E. Green) 1; Thompson v. N. Y. & Harlem R. Co., 3 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 625; Lake v. Virginia Co., 7 Nev. 294.

A charter granted in 1766, with exclusive right to maintain a bridge and collect tolls, is not violated by a grant to a railroad to construct a bridge intended only for the transportation of its passengers, baggage, and freight in cars. McRee v. Wilmington & Raleigh R. Co., 2 Jones Law (N. Car.), 186.

1. Enfield Toll-bridge Co. v. Hartford R. Co., 17 Conn. 40. This case is criticised in Lake v. Virginia & Truckee R. Co., 7 Nev. 294; explained in Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 524; and distinguished in Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall. (U. S.) 116, as being based upon a fact found and before the court, viz., that the road and bridge would to a certain extent diminish the tolls of the plaintiff.

2. Reg. v. Inhabitants of Yorkshire, 2 East, 342; Woolrych on Ways and Bridges, 202, 204; 1 Russell on Crimes (5th Am. Ed.), 342.

"The interpretation clause (s. 5) of the Highway Act, 1835, (5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 50,) includes in the words 'county bridges' all public bridges." Boville, C. J., in The Queen v. Upper Half Hundred of Chart & Longbridge, Law Rep. 1 C. C. Res. 237. See further, on this point, notes to REPARATION under this subject.

3. State v. Northumberland, 44 N. H. 628.

4. Rex v. Devon, Ryan & Moody, 144; Rex v. Buckingham et al., 4 Campb. 189. But see Rex v. Northampton, 2 M. & S. 262.

5. Town of Dayton v. Rutland, 84 Ill. 279; State ex rel. Lawrence, etc., 22 Kan. 438; Rex v. Glamorgan, 2 East, 356; Rex v. Ely, 4 New Sess. Cas. 222; Comyns Dig. Chimin, B. 1; Rex v. Stratford-upon-Avon, 14 East, 348; Glusburne Bridge Case, 5 Burr. 2594; 2 Inst. 201, 700; Rex v. Hendon, 4 B. & Ad. 628; Rex v. Kent, 2 M. & S. 513; Rex v. Inhabitants of Northampton, 2 M. & S. 262; State v. Town of Compton, 2 N. H. 573; Williams v. Cumington, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 312.

Whether a private bridge has been made a town bridge by public use is a question for the jury. Dygert v. Schenck, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 445.

Stated impliedly that a bridge may become a public bridge by dedication. Regina v. Corporation of the County of Haldimand (Prov. Ont.), 38 Q. B. 396. See further, on this point, REPARATION under this title; see also title HIGHWAYS, sub-title DEDICATION.

private person and not built for common good and public convenience.[1]

6. By What Authority Erected.—Who May Not Build.—At the common law the rule prevailed that no one could erect a public bridge without license.[2]

Nor could the inhabitants of a county of their own authority change a bridge from one place to another, but must needs have an act of Parliament therefor.[3]

The fact that a public highway is laid out to a river on both sides does not authorize a private person to build a bridge over it and thereby make it a part of the highway.[4]

So a municipal corporation has no power without authority from the State to erect a toll-bridge and collect tolls.[5]

General Law as to Erection of Bridges.—Under the statute laws of most of the States it is made the duty of towns, counties, or other corresponding corporate divisions to maintain the public highways within their respective limits reasonably safe and convenient for public travel. This duty includes the duty of erecting and maintaining necessary bridges upon those highways.[6]

1. King v. Inhabitants of Bucks, 12 East, 203; 2 Inst. 701; 1 Salk. 359.

2. 1 Salk. 12.

3. Regina v. Inhab. de Com. Wilts, 6 Mod. 307; 2 Inst. 29, 700, 701.

4. Smith v. Harkins, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 613; s. c., 44 Am. Dec. 83.

5. Clark v. City of Des Moines, 19 Iowa, 199, 223; Colton et al. v. Hanchett et al., 13 Ill. 615.

6. Beatty v. Titus, 47 N. J. Law, 89; Freeholders v. State, 42 N. J. Law, 263, 273; Ripley v. Chosen Freeholders, etc., 40 N. J. Law, 45, 49; Penn. Township v. Perry County, 78 Pa. St. 457; McCormick v. Township of Washington (Pa. 1886), 2 Central Reporter, 584; Humphrey v. Armstrong County, 56 Pa. St. 204; City of Eudora v. Miller, 30 Kan. 494.

Where necessary to improve the usefulness of its streets, a municipal corporation may erect bridges over them or may bridge its gutters. Allentown v. Kramer, 73 Pa. St. 406.

As to the power of the board of county commissioners to purchase bridges, etc., see Fountain County v. Thompson, 106 Ind. 534; s. c., 4 Week. Repr. 520, citing Driftwood Valley Turnpike Co. v. Board, 72 Ind. 226; Board v. Duprez, 87 Ind. 309; Board v. Rushville, etc., Co., 37 Ind. 504.

Obligation to construct bridges in Iowa extends only to bridges of the larger class requiring an extraordinary expenditure of money. Taylor v. Davis County, 40 Iowa, 295; Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40 Iowa, 394.

Counties have the power in Iowa to provide for the erection of bridges necessary for public convenience within the county. Taylor v. Davis County, 40 Iowa, 295, citing Bell v. Foutch, 21 Iowa, 119; Long v. Boone County, 33 Iowa, 181.

County court under statute may grant franchise for toll-bridge subject to the police power of the State. Chandler v. Montgomery County, 31 Ark. 25.

Free bridge may be erected in place of private one. Red River Bridge Co. v. Mayor of Clarksville, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 176

Municipal act of 1866, 29–30 Vict. c. 51, sec. 341, sub. sec. 12. requires county councils to "erect and maintain bridges over rivers forming township or county boundary lines;" case of river between two townships in same county and not county boundary. Kinnear v. Corporation of the County of Haldimand (Prov. Ont.), 30 Q. B. 398.

Sec. 413 of the municipal act makes it obligatory upon county councils to maintain bridges over rivers constituting boundary lines between municipalities in same county. McHardy v. Corporation of Township of Ellice et al. (Prov. Ont.), 1 App. R. 628; s. c. (Prov. Ont.), 39 Q. B. 546.

One county cannot compel another to erect a bridge over stream between adjoining counties. Garrard County Court v. Boyle County Court, 10 Bush (Ky.), 208.

In Indiana there is a statutory provision (R. S. 1881, secs. 2880–2884, Acts

And extends to rebuilding such bridges when destroyed.[1]

So a town may appropriate money to build a necessary public bridge (N. H. G. L. c. 37, § 4), and may accept a private donation to aid in making the same.[2]

Special Authority.—The legislature may authorize the erection of a bridge over small creeks, etc.[3] It may expressly delegate the power to determine whether a bridge is necessary over a creek or cove;[4] and may grant an exclusive right to erect a bridge.[5]

The State has a right to determine that a railroad bridge shall be constructed for railroad use and public travel, and that a certain proportionate amount of the cost of constructing the same shall be paid to the railroad by the county in which the bridge is located.[6]

So it may provide that a part or the whole of the expense of 1885, p. 58), concerning the erection, etc., of bridges over streams forming the boundary line between two counties. Fountain County v. Thompson (Ind. 1886), 4 Western Reporter, 520, citing Browning v. Board, 44 Ind. 11.

Recovery by one town from another of expense of building bridge. Pittsburg v. Clarksville, 58 N. H. 291.

Case of bridge over stream between two counties; one county not liable to the other in the absence of a contract for expense of building. Courts will not interfere with the discretion of the proper officials, in the matter of building, when there is no abuse of power. Brown v. Commissioners of Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355.

Liability of county to reimburse town for one half cost of bridge under bridge law of 1879. McHenry County Supervisors v. People, 12 Ill. App. 204.

Towns extending to centre of river are bound to erect necessary bridges within the town to make the highway passable. State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195, 230.

Town must raise half the funds for building bridge before any obligation arises on part of county to do anything. Kendall County Supervisors v. People, 12 Ill. App. 210.

Town must Erect.—Where a bridge becomes necessary for the convenient use of a public highway, town may be compelled to erect a bridge. (G. L. c. 76, § 1, c. 1, § 25, N. H. Stat.) Kelly v. Kennard, 60 N. H. 1, citing State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195, 228, 232.

Internal Improvement.—Bridges erected by county are not works of ——, when erected on highways and wholly within its limits. De Clerg v. Hogan et al., 12 Neb. 185.

Petition for Bridge, under statute may be signed by attorney in behalf of town. Town v. Town of Royalton, 58 Vt. 212.

May not Remove.—A temporary railroad bridge, although it obstructs highway, cannot be forcibly removed by the selectmen of the town. Flanders v. Norwood, 141 Mass. 17.

Private person cutting a canal across a public highway for his own benefit held bound to erect and maintain a bridge over the same. Phœnixville v. Phœnix Iron Co., 45 Pa. St. 135.

But aliter where a new and wider public road was laid, necessitating a new and wider bridge. Phœnixville v. Phœnix Iron Co., 45 Pa. St. 135. See REPARATION under this title, post.

1. Whitall v. Freeholders of Gloucester, 40 N. J. Law, 302, 306.

A bridge owned by a private person was sold to a county, and was accepted, repaired, and maintained by it for a long period of time. A bridge was necessary at the point where built. Upon its destruction, held that the county was bound to rebuild it under the general law. (Acts of 1876, Purd. Dig. 2074, pl. 6.) Lancaster County v. Commonwealth (Pa. 1885), 1 Central Reporter, 130; State ex rel. Roundtree v. Board of Gibson County, 80 Ind. 478.

2. Kelly v. Kennard, 60 N. H. 1.

3. Commonwealth v. Commissioners of Monroe County, 2 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 495.

4. State v. Anthonie, 40 Me. 435.

5. Piscataqua Bridge v. N. H. Bridge et al., 7 N. H. 35.

Doubted if the State can erect bridges over a canal crossing public highway without the consent of the trustees after it has already transferred its interest. People ex rel., etc., v. Canal Trustees, 14 Ill. 402.

6. Brayton v. Fall River, 124 Mass. 95.

constructing a bridge shall be borne by the county, notwithstanding the fact that under the general law the expense must have been sustained wholly by the town in which the bridge is located.[1]

The legislature may impose the burden of maintenance and repair upon one county when bridge is in another,[2] and may apportion among counties and towns the amount to be borne by each.[3] The legislature may impose duty of maintaining bridge on municipal corporation.[4]

Where a statute provided for the erection of a bridge by a railroad company, at the direction of the town, when the railroad should intersect any highway in any town, held, no express distinction being made between highways established and constructed and those established but not constructed, that none would be implied, and the company was bound to erect a bridge over the latter when required by the town.[5]

7. Ownership.—Towns have a qualified interest in bridges erected by them; and where the same are destroyed, or obstructed, or the materials converted, they may maintain an action therefor.[6]

In 1842 and 1843 a bridge was built across the Wabash river on the line of a public highway extending over the same. The superstructure was of wood; the abutments and piers were of stone, the latter resting on submerged timbers. A narrow structure was attached as a wing to the bridge. The bridge was used in connection with the highway for public travel, and the wing was used as a towpath by those navigating the canal to transfer horses used in towing boats across the river. The highway on

1. Norwich v. County Commissioners of Hampshire, 13 Pick. 60; Commonwealth v. Newburyport, 103 Mass. 13.

May require one county to build at its own expense a bridge across a boundary line into another county. Washer v. Bullett County, 110 U. S. 558, 565, citing Agawam v. Hampden, 130 Mass. 528, and other cases.

2. Carter v. Cambridge, etc., Bridge Proprietors, 104 Mass. 237, and cases cited in opinion; Commonwealth v. Newburyport, 103 Mass. 135. But see Boston v. County Commissioners, 111 Mass. 313.

3. Carter v. Cambridge, etc., Bridge Proprietors, 104 Mass. 237; Scituate v. Weymouth, 108 Mass. 130; Commonwealth v. Newburyport, 103 Mass. 135.

4. Pumphrey v. Mayor and C. C. of Baltimore, 47 Md. 145.

5. Worcester, N. & R. R. v. Nashua (N. H., 1886), 2 New Eng. Reporter, 292.

Question whether a canal company is bound to erect bridges over its canal to connect a highway laid out after the canal was constructed, the charter requiring the company to make good and sufficient bridges over the canal when the same should cross any public road. State v. Morris Canal & Banking Co., 22 N. J. Law (2 Zab.), 537. Held, however, in Morris Canal & Banking Co. v. State, 24 N. J. Law (4 Zab.), 62, that neither under the common law nor the charter of the company did any obligation to erect such bridges rest upon the company.

Bridge company not authorized to close fords, although it has exclusive rights under its charter over several miles of the river above and below a given point. Crupton v. Waco Bridge Co., 62 Tex. 715.

Where railroad company has a grant to lay its road over a bridge within a city, the fact that it afterwards lays another track over the bridge to accommodate increased business does not impair the grant. Des Moines v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. Co., 41 Iowa, 569.

6. Town of Troy v. Cheshire R. Co., 23 N. H. 83, citing Harrison v. Parker, 6 East 154. See Inhabitants of Freedom v. Weed, 40 Me. 383; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 670.

County may maintain action for injury to or destruction of. Corporation of the County of Wellington v. Wilson et al., 16 C. P. (Prov. Ont.) 124.

the line of which the bridge was erected was laid out in 1841, and had been continuously used as a public highway since that time. A dam had been built across the river just below the line of the highway. The river just above the dam constituted a part of a canal. In 1873 the wooden part of the bridge was blown down, and was rebuilt by the defendant. A short time thereafter the canal was abandoned. The public continued its use of the bridge as a highway until 1881, when the superstructure was again destroyed. A year prior to this the dam was so injured that the water above was let out and fell below the submerged timbers upon which the stone piers and abutments rested, exposing them to the air and decay, so that it was necessary, in order to make the bridge reasonably safe for public travel, to take down and rebuild the piers upon other and safer foundations. The appellants derived their title to the canal under a decree of court made in 1874, and a purchase under the same in 1876. It was claimed by the appellants that the piers and abutments were the property of the canal company, and that the commissioners of the defendant county had no right to use them in rebuilding its bridge. Held, that the purchasers of the canal took the fee burdened with the easement which the public had had, for over forty years, to use the bridge as a public highway; that the fee was thus burdened was a fact open and visible before them, and one of which they were bound to take notice, it not being necessary that they should have actual knowledge thereof; that they had no rights which would "prevent the State through its local instrumentality, the board of commissioners, from rebuilding the bridge and restoring the highway to its former condition," and that the piers and abutments and the material in them might be used in rebuilding.[1]

8. Over Navigable Waters.—Bridges connecting parts of turnpikes, streets, and railroads have been declared to be as much a means of commercial transportation as navigable waters.[2]

Congress has power to authorize the erection of a bridge over a navigable river, although it may obstruct the free navigation of the same to a certain extent.[3]

That a State has the power to authorize the building of bridges

1. Shirk, et al. v. Carroll County (Ind. 1886). 3 Western Reporter, 902, citing St. Louis Bridge Co. v. Curtis, 103 Ill. 410; Logansport v. Shirk, 88 Ind. 563. A petition for rehearing principal case was subsequently brought; this was overruled, and reasons therefor given at length.

Where the town erected a bridge jointly with the county, it is not exclusively a county bridge, and neither town nor county could remove it at pleasure. Greely Township v. Commissioners of Saline County, 26 Kan. 510.

Party permitting bridge to be erected upon his land without objection, insisting only on compensation, cannot afterwards claim the bridge as realty of his own, on ground that no condemnation proceedings were first had. Sullivan v. Board of Lafayette Co., 58 Miss. 790.

Town cannot recover for injury to a bridge upon a road in its limits where no attempt has been made to repair the injury, and no expense having been incurred on account of the same, although a town highway. Inhabitants of Freedom v. Weed, 40 Me. 383; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 670.

2. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 713, 729.

3. People ex rel. Kelly, 76 N. Y. 475; Pierce on Railroads, 207.

over navigable waters, although they may to a certain extent obstruct navigation, is a well-established doctrine. This power, however, is held to be subject to the exercise of the power of Congress to regulate navigation.[1] So it is declared to be a "proposition not disputed that but for the power granted by the constitution to Congress the State legislatures would have as full and entire control of the waters of their several States as they have over the land. . . . The States reserve all power not granted to Congress. The entire sovereignty over the waters of the States then vests in Congress and the several State legislatures. . . ."[2]

In the Wheeling Bridge Case,[3] decided in 1855, it was determined that "the regulation of commerce includes intercourse and navigation, and of course the power to determine what shall or shall not be deemed in judgment of law an obstruction to navigation; "that the purely internal streams of a State were, so far as the public right of navigation is concerned, entirely in the control of and subject to regulation by the State itself; and that a structure or impediment to the navigation of such internal waters, although a material obstruction, might be lawfully authorized by its legislature.

In a later case,[4] decided in 1865, where a bridge had been erected over the river Schuylkill, a navigable river entirely within

1. South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4; U. S. v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 401, 508; Silliman v. Hudson River Bridge Co., etc., 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 395; Parkersburg Transportation Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691; Wilson v. Blackbird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. 245; City of Chicago v. McGuire, 51 Ill. 266; Bridge Co. v. U. S., 105 U. S. 470; Clinton Bridge in re, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 454; Hughes v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 18 Fed. Repr. 106, 113; U. S. v. Mil. & St. P. R. Co., 5 Biss. (U. S.) 410; Jolly v. Terre Haute Bridge Co., 6 McLean (U. S.), 237; U. S. v. Railroad Bridge Co., 6 McLean (U. S.), 517; Weldon v. State of Mo., 91 U. S. 275; Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S 459; Clarke v. Birmingham & Pittsburg Bridge Co., 5 Wright (Pa.), 147; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791; Welton v. State of Mo., 91 U. S. 275, affd. in Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St 112; Board of Wardens, etc., of Philadelphia v. City of Philadelphia, 6 Wright (Pa.), 209; Atty.-Gen. v. Stevens, 1 Sax. Ch. (N. J.) 369; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 526; Commonwealth v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 180; Arundel v. Inhabitants of McCullough, 10 Mass. 70; Wisconsin River Improvement Co. v. Manson, 43 Wis. 255; Miss. River B. Co. v. Lonergan, 91 Ill. 508; Bainbridge v. Sherlock et al., 29 Ind. 365; Talbot County v. Queen Anne County, 50 Md. 245–262; Philadelphia v. Field, 58 Pa. St. 320; Carter v. Bridge Proprietors, 104 Mass. 236; Pumphrey v. Baltimore, 47 Md. 145; Bailey v. Philadelphia W. & B. R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 389; s. c., 44 Am. Dec. 593; Commonwealth v. Breed, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 460; Hamilton v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 970; Hatch v. Wallamet Iron Bridge Co., 7 Sawy. (C. C.) 127; s. c., 6 Fed. Repr. 326, 780; Commonwealth v. Inhabitants of Taunton, 7 Allen (Mass.), 311; Erie v. Canal, 59 Pa. St. 174; Piscataqua Bridge v. N. H. Bridge et al., 7 N. H. 35; Commissioners v. Board, 39 Ohio St. 628; Rogers v. Kennebec & Portland R. Co., 35 Me. 319; Atty.-Gen. v. Stevens, 1 Sax. Ch. (N. J.) 369; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 526; Flanagan v. City of Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 213, 232; Commissioners v. Board of Public Works, 39 Ohio St. 628; People ex rel. Kelly, 76 N. Y. 475. See Cox v. State, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 193; Palmer v. Cuyahoga Co., 3 McLean (U. S.), 226; Columbus Ins. Co. v. Peoria Bridge Assoc., 6 McLean (U. S.), 70.

2. The court in People v. Rensselaer & Saratoga R. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 114.

3. State of Penn. v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 421, 431; 13 How. (U. S.) 518.

4. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 713, 725.

the limits of the State of Pennsylvania, the court argued, "Commerce includes navigation. The power to regulate commerce comprehends the control for that purpose, and to the extent necessary, of all the navigable waters of the United States which are accessible from a State other than those in which they lie. . . . This necessarily includes the power to keep them open and free from any obstruction to their navigation interposed by the States or otherwise;" that Congress might interfere by general or special laws, regulating all bridges over navigable waters, "remove offending bridges, and punish those who should hereafter erect them." [1]

Later on, in 1882, a bill was brought to enjoin the closing at special hours of the draws to certain bridges over the Chicago river erected by the city to connect its avenues and streets and necessary to the condition of business in the city, and also to compel the removal of the bridges. The river and its branches were entirely within the limits of the State, and its free navigation necessary to those engaged in commerce on its waters, and were erected under authority from the State. The court held that the power of the States to regulate within their limits matters of internal police embraced the construction of bridges; but if a navigable river was unnecessarily obstructed by the State, or it should exercise its powers in an arbitrary manner or to the injury of commerce, Congress could interfere, although the river was wholly within the limits of the State. Until, however, "Congress acts on the subject, the power of the State over bridges across its navigable streams is plenary," and such a drawbridge over a stream is not an obstruction.[2] Then followed in 1883 the case of the Brooklyn Bridge,[3] where it was held that so far as it was an obstruction it was authorized by both the State and Federal governments, and was a lawful structure which could not be abated. The principles enunciated in the last four cases were expressly affirmed by Mr. Justice Field in Cardwell v. Bridge Co.,[4] who says: "In these cases the control of Congress over navigable waters within the States so as to preserve their free navigation under the commercial clause of the constitution, the power of the States within which they lie to authorize the construction of bridges over them until Congress intervenes and supersedes their authority, and the right of private parties to interfere with their construction or continuance have been fully considered, and we are entirely satisfied with the soundness of the doctrines reached." [5]

1. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 731. Three judges dissented in this case, and one judge did not sit or take part in the decision.

2. Escanaba v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 690; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 220.

3. Miller v. Mayor of New York et al., 109 U. S. 385; 18 Blatchf. C. C. (U. S.) 212.

4. 113 U. S. 205, 208.

5. Proviso in Grant.—The franchise of a corporation conferred upon it the right to erect and maintain a certain toll-bridge, with an express proviso that the bridge should not be erected in such a "manner as to injure, stop or interrupt the navigation of said river." Held, that the corporation by accepting the franchise with such a condition took it cum onere, and was limited in its enjoyment by that condition; and held that an authority to build a bridge causing as

Bridge in Two States.—The State of Kansas may authorize the building of a bridge over the Missouri river, although a part of the bridge will be in Kansas and the other in Missouri, and "a corporation of either State may build, own, and operate the whole of the bridge." [1]

Drawbridges.—The duty of maintaining a drawbridge over navigable waters includes the obligation to properly provide for the safe passage of vessels through the draw.[2] little injury and obstruction to navigation as possible had reference not only to navigation as it existed at the time the charter was granted, but also to the future and possible increase and growth in navigation. Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa 82, 303; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 464.

Proviso in the charter that the bridge should not be constructed so as to "injure, stop, or interrupt the navigation of said river." Held, that a strict literal meaning was not intended, but that a reasonable construction should be adopted. Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112.

A general authority to build a bridge across a river does not warrant the erection of a bridge when there is no apparent necessity at a point or in a manner to obstruct navigation when it could reasonably be constructed at a point and in a manner not to have that effect. Hickok et al. v. Hine, 23 Ohio St. 523.

Municipal corporations may appoint agents to carry into effect powers granted, and authorize them to obtain loan to pay for expense of building bridge. Carter v. Bridge Proprietors, 104 Mass. 236; Philadelphia v. Field, 58 Pa. St. 320.

A bridge lawfully erected partially obstructed navigation by vessels with standing masts. Held, not to diminish the right of navigation so that the river ceased to be a navigable river, so as to authorize county commissioners to lay out a highway over it. Inhabitants of Charlestown v. County Commissioners, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 205.

Where by general law the Court of Sessions was authorized to lay out public highways, held, that it had no power to extend the highway over a navigable river so as to obstruct it by a bridge. Commonwealth v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 180; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 164.

Legislature may determine in its grant upon what conditions a bridge may be erected. Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112; Flanagan v. City of Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 232.

Trespass.—A bridge lawfully erected over a navigable stream not the property of owner of land lying along the stream, and party tying his boat to such bridge below low-water mark, is not guilty of trespass against such owner. Parsons v. Clark, 76 Me. 476.

Secretary of War.—Acts of Congress of April 1st and June 4th, 1872, construed. Secretary of War may determine under these acts whether erection of bridge obstructs navigation and determine de its erection. Town of Dayton v. Rutland, 84 Ill. 279; State ex rel. Lawrence, etc., 22 Kan. 438.

Oregon, Act of Congress.—The State of Oregon may authorize the erection of a bridge over navigable waters within its limits, and such an act is not void and inoperative as being in conflict with a prior act of Congress admitting Oregon into the Union, which act provided that "all the navigable waters of the State shall be common highways and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of said State as to all other citizens of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor," the provision being similar to that admitting California into the Union, and being "only intended to prevent the use of navigable streams by private parties to the exclusion of the public and the exaction of tolls for their navigation," and does not prevent those States from exercising the powers possessed by other States in regard to obstructions of navigable waters. Scheurer v. Columbia St. Bridge Co., 27 Fed. Repr. (1886) 172.

1. Shook v. Waugh, 11 Mo. 412.

2. Weisenburg v. Winnecome; Winnecome v. Weisenburg, 56 Wis. 667; Edgerton v. Mayor, etc., 27 Fed Repr. 230 (1886).

Those having custody of the bridge are bound to use ordinary diligence, and are liable for want of ordinary care on the part of their servants. Weisenburg v. Winnecome; Winnecome v. Weisenburg, 56 Wis. 667; Edgerton v. Mayor, etc., 27 Fed. Repr. 230 (1886).

Railway company having swing bridge over canal held not bound to open it to vessel when railway train was about to

9. Nuisance, When.—It is held in Hughes v. Northern Pacific R. Co.,[1] that a bridge unlawfully erected over navigable waters is a nuisance.[2] So the power granted must be exercised as provided by the grant. If not, or if exceeded, bridge is a nuisance.[3]

Incorporated road company may not erect a bridge over navigable waters so as to impede navigation, although it only attempted to erect a fixed bridge at a point where insolvent canal had erected a bridge under a charter, said bridge having become out of repair.[4]

10. Railway Bridges over Navigable Waters.—The authority to bridge navigable waters may result by implication from the powers expressly granted as in the case of railroad companies, where a grant to construct its road carries with it the right to erect and maintain necessary bridges with suitable draws on the line of its lay-out.[5] pass. Turner v. Great Western R. Co. (Prov. Ont.), 6 C. P. 536.

Railway bridge with opening span, over navigable stream, company not bound under Railway Clauses Act, 1863, to open bridge for vessel with mast constructed so that it could be lowered. West Lancashire R. Co. v. Iddon, 49 L. T. N. S. 600.

Dock company having swing bridge is bound to exercise all reasonable care to prevent unnecessary delay to passing vessels. Wiggins v. Boddington, 3 C. P. 544.

Cities.—All that can be required of a city is to use every reasonable effort, and as soon as possible to remove all obstacles to permit vessels to pass bridges within its limits over a navigable river. Scott v. City of Chicago, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 510.

City may regulate the time and manner of vessels passing bridges over navigable waters within their limits. City of Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266.

Canal company intersecting highway and erecting a swing bridge must keep it safe and convenient for public travel, and use all reasonable means to prevent accidents, and must light bridge if necessary. Manley v. St. Helen's Canal & R. Co., 2 H. & N. 840; 27 L. J. Exch. 159.

1. Hughes v. Northern Pacific R. 18 Fed. Repr. 106, 113. citing Angell on Watercourses, sec. 555; The Wheeling Bridge Case, 13 How. (U. S.) 564; Hatch v. Wallamet Iron Bridge Co., 7 Sawy. C. C. 127; s. c., 6 Fed. Repr. 326, 780.

2. Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa. St. 303; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 464; Arundel v. McCullough, 10 Mass. 70; Barnes v. City of Racine et al., 4 Wis. 454; South Carolina R. Co. v. Moore & Philpot, 28 Ga. 398; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 778; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 91; Silliman v. Troy, etc., 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271.

Public bridge is a nuisance if built in a public way without public utility. The King v. Inhabitants of W. R. of Yorkshire, 2 East, 342.

3. Ill. R. Packet Co. v. Peoria Bridge Association, 38 Ill. 467, 475

Discretion must be used in exercising the power granted. If discretion be abused or wilfully or wantonly exercised, court of equity will interfere, but not for mere mistake of judgment in exercising such discretion. Haight et al. v. Day et al., 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 18.

4. Town of Dundas v. Hamilton & Milton Road Co. (Prov. Ont.), 18 Chy. 311.

Case of a broken railway bridge in navigable river and construction of North British Railway Act of 1881 (special act) authorizing the railway company to erect a new bridge near the old one, and providing that they should "remove the ruins and débris of the old bridge and all obstructions interfering with navigation caused by the old bridge, to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade." Held, that the company was bound to remove the whole ruins and débris of the old bridge, that they might remove them before applying to the Board of Trade, and that there was an effective remedy against an improper exercise by the company of its obligations under the statute. North British R. Co. v. Lord Provost of Perth et al., Law Rep. 10 Appeal Cas. (1885) 579.

5. Hamilton v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 970; U. P. R. Co. v. Hall,

11. Remedy for Obstructing Navigation.—The remedy for impeding navigation of a river by a railway bridge is by indictment, and not by civil action.[1]

So held where the owner of a wharf was unable to obtain access thereto by vessels on account of a bridge.[2]

In the case of piers for the support of a bridge which are impliedly or expressly authorized, the fact that the discretion of the corporation was improperly exercised, or that there was a mere mistake of judgment in locating them, is not ground for a private action, and this although a pier may have been so located as to obstruct navigation to some extent. The remedy is in the public;[3] but in case of the unlawful, wanton, or malicious abuse by the company of its discretion in this respect whereby an immediate and particular injury resulted to an individual, a private action would lie.[4]

A bridge-owner has the right to remove a boat forced by ice up against his bridge and likely to cause damage to the same, but is bound to use ordinary care; and if in extricating the boat he unnecessarily and recklessly pulls down a span of the bridge upon it and causes the boat to sink, he is liable.[5]

91 U. S. 343; People v. R. & S. R. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 129.

A corporation organized under Wisconsin Railroad Laws (Gen. Laws 1872, ch. 119), is authorized to build a bridge over navigable waters crossing the line of its road. Miller v. Prairie du Chien & McGregor R. Co., 34 Wis. 533.

Contra, there must be a special or general act of the sovereign power to authorize such railroad bridge. Works v. Junction R., 5 McLean (U. S.), 425, 435.

A railroad has no authority to bridge navigable streams on the line of its road to impede navigation unless by virtue of an express provision in its charter. Little Rock, Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Brooks, 39 Ark. 403.

1. Small v. Grand Trunk R. Co. (Prov. Ont.), 15 Q. B. 283. See Regina ex rel. Trustees of St. Andrew's Church v. Great Western R. Co. (Prov. Ont.). 14 C. P. 462; Cull v. Grand Trunk R. Co. (Prov. Ont.) 10 Chy. 491; South Carolina R. Co. v. Moore & Philpot, 28 Ga. 398; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 778.

2. Blackwell v. Old Colony R. Co., 122 Mass. 1.

3. Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112.

4. Clarke v. Birmingham & Pittsburg Bridge Co., 41 Pa. St. 147.

Where a bridge erected by defendants caused the actual detention of plaintiff's boat when in the course of navigation, held, that an action would lie for particular damages resulting therefrom, and that, as a general rule, a public nuisance was the subject of indictment. South Carolina R. Co. v. Moore & Philpot, 28 Ga. 398; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 778; Rogers v. Kennebec & P. R. Co., 35 Me. 319.

5. Mark v. Hudson River Bridge Co. (N. Y., 1886). 4 Central Repr. 203.

It was held in Arundel v. McCullough, 10 Mass. 70, that a private person is not liable in trespass for cutting down an unauthorized bridge over a navigable river when the same is an obstruction to the free navigation of his vessel, and this although the bridge had been maintained for fifty years. The United States has a right to maintain a suit against a company de unlawful bridge over the Ohio river which impedes the navigation of the stream. United States ex rel. Atty.-Gen'l v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co., 26 Fed. Repr. (1886) 113, citing Dugan v. United States, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 173; United States v. Tingey, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 115. And the court said: "As an indictment against the bridge as a nuisance is not maintainable, no such proceeding having been authorized by Congress, the appropriate remedy is by an information at the suit of the attorney-general in equity;" citing State v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518; Story's Eq. Jur. sec. 921 et seq.; Wood's Nuisance, 813.

Under an act of Congress authorizing the construction of certain bridges, the owners must conform to the requirements of that law, and for a departure there-

12. Construction of Bridges.—The rule is that those constructing bridges must exercise care and caution to see that they are built of the requisite strength and in the best manner as to condition and safety, and must so build them as to cause the least injury possible to others; such as to owners of abutting land where a bridge is built over water-courses,[1] or so as to cause as little obstruction to navigation as possible when erected over navigable waters.[2]

A railroad company constructing a bridge under a legislative enactment is bound to construct the same with care and caution.[3] from they are liable in damages to a party injured thereby. Mo. R. Pkt. Co. v. H. & St. J. R. Co., 79 Mo. 478.

Upon inquiry as to whether a bridge is a public nuisance and the charter is found to have been violated, the remedy would be, not to destroy the bridge, but to remove excess so that the bridge should conform to the charter requirements. Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa. St. 303; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 464.

1. A town is bound to construct a bridge over a water-course so as not to unnecessarily obstruct the free course of the waters to the injury of owners of abutting land; nor may towns permit a third person to alter such bridge so as to cause such injury. Lawrence v. Inhabitants of Fairhaven, 5 Gray (Mass.), 110.

Bridges ought to be broad enough for passage of vehicles and the necessary uses of the travelling public. Irvinton v. Burton Road Supervisors, 61 Iowa. 471.

City is not required to construct its bridge for unusual and extraordinary use, such as crossing at great speed or with large or unusual weight, as a steam thresher consisting of three vehicles, engine, boiler, and water-tank. McCormick v. Washington Turnpike, 112 Pa. St. 185.

A city may not construct a bridge with water-ways so narrowed as to injure the plaintiff's mills by causing water in times of a freshet to set back upon them. Perry v. City of Worcester, 6 Gray (Mass.), 544; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 431.

2. In the absence of express restrictions upon the power to erect a bridge over a navigable river, it is not unlawful to build and maintain piers in the bed of the river, the supporting of bridges in such manner being common and usual when the charter was granted, and the right to erect and maintain piers included the right to determine their number and location. Clarke v. Birmingham & Pittsburg Bridge Co., 41 Pa. St. 147.

Where the charter authorized the erection of a bridge "upon such piers and abutments as to afford at all times a clear and uninterrupted passage for the water of the river equal at least in area equal to that now existing" at a certain other bridge over the same river. held, under peculiar circumstances, to have reference, not to navigation, but to the outflow of the river; that the superficial area was not meant, but that the perpendicular depth taken with the width was the area intended. Clarke v. Birmingham & Pittsburg Bridge Co., 41 Pa. St. 147.

The defendant company having lawful authority to erect its bridge over the Allegheny river undoubtedly had the right to drive piles in the bed of the river as was done here, but in the exercise of that right the company was bound to observe all reasonable precautions to secure the safety of boats navigating the stream; and if at ordinary flood stage of the river such piles were likely to become a hidden and dangerous obstruction to navigation, it was the duty of the company to mark the spot by a buoy or otherwise so as to put approaching boats on their guard. The Modoc, 26 Fed. Repr. 718; Evans, etc., v. North Side Bridge Co., 26 Fed. Repr. 718.

3. Frankfort Bridge v. Williams, 9 Dana (Ky.), 403; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 155.

Railway company constructing bridge over a dry channel bound to prepare against possible floods, which a careful examination of the country and channel-bed would have anticipated. Kansas Pacific R. Co. v. Miller, 2 Col. 442.

Railroad company must not construct its bridge over a river in a direction and manner to cause injury to the plaintiff in times of freshets by overflowing his grass land, and leaving deposits thereon of sand and earth, when with a little additional expense the bridge could have been constructed so as to have been equally safe, and not have caused the injury. Spencer v. Hartford, P. & F. R. Co., 10 R. I. 14.

And a contract for the construction of a drawbridge for a railroad implies a bridge reasonably safe, serviceable, and suitable for the use intended.[1]

In a recent case, where a bridge erected by a railroad corporation over a highway did not, when built, impede or obstruct the safe and convenient use of the highway, held that, if by an increased use of the highway an alteration of the bridge was necessitated, it was the duty of the railroad corporation to make such alteration to meet the public needs.[2]

And a city or town undertaking to erect a bridge is bound to construct it so that it shall be reasonably safe for travel.[3]

Generally the owner of a bridge franchise is obliged to exercise ordinary care in constructing its bridge.[4]

13. Reparation.—Under the common law the duty of repairing public bridges rested generally upon the counties at large in which they were situate, unless it appeared that some one else was obligated to repair them.[5]

The exact rule, however, seems to be as stated in a recent case, that "at common law highways are repairable by the parish or hundred, including bridges over small streams, while those over large streams are repairable by the county. Cases may arise where, under acts of Parliament authorizing the making of Railroad company must conform to the requirements of its charter in constructing its bridge. Atty.-Gen'l v. Niagara Falls Bridge Co., 20 Grant U. C. 341; Atty.-Gen'l v. Mid-Kent, etc., Law Rep. 3 Ch. 100. See Atty.-Gen'l v. International Bridge Co., 22 Grant U. C. 298.

Railroad bridge crossing a city street 66 ft. wide, bridge 42 ft. 2 in., held compliance with company's charter requiring that bridge company should restore highway in such manner as not to impair its usefulness. Regina v. Great West. R. Co. (Prov. Ont.), 12 Q. B. 250; Ward v. Same (Prov. Ont.), 13 Q. B. 315.

1. Railroad Co. v. Smith, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 255.

Bridges weakened by sudden and unprecedented flood, duty of railway carrier to inspect, and liability consequent upon not exercising the highest degree of care proportioned to the known danger considered. So where a railroad bridge was so constructed as not to resist ordinary floods, and was occasionally in times of freshet covered with water, held unsafe. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Thompson's Adm (Ind. 1886), 5 West. Repr. 833, 838, 839; citing Hardy v. North Carolina Cent. R. Co., 74 N. Car. 734; Great West. R. Co. v. Braid, 1 Moore P. C. (N. S.) 101; Railroad Co. v. Halloran, 53 Tex. 46; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 744.

2. Cooke v. Boston & Lowell R., 133 Mass. 185, citing Commonwealth v. New Bedford Bridge, 2 Gray (Mass.), 339.

3. Jordan et al. v. City of Hannibal, 3 Westn. Repr. 795 (Mo. 1886); Board of Shelby Co. v. Deprez Admr., 87 Ind. 509.

Whether the planks of a bridge on a township road should be spiked down or not depends upon whether an unspiked floor was reasonably safe and convenient for the public to travel over it. The court declared that "a bridge such as this on a township road, over a stream, would not necessarily be built at the same expense, nor would it require the same skill in building, as the famous Brooklyn bridge." There should be taken in consideration "all the surroundings and the use for which the bridge was intended by the community in determining what sort of a bridge it should be." Zimmerman v. Conemaugh (Pa. 1886), 2 Cent. Repr. 361.

4. Tift v. Touns, 53 Ga. 47; Townsend v. Susquehanna Turnpike Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 90; City of Juliet v. Verley, 35 Ill. 58.

5. Rex v. West Riding of Yorkshire, 5 Burr. 2594; Tomlins' Law Dict.; Rex v. Middlesex, 3 B. & Ad. 201; Rex v. Sainthill, 2 Ld. Ray'd, 1174; Regina v. Inhabitants de com. Wilts, 6 Mod. Rep. 307; Rex v. Oxfordshire, 6 D. & R. 231; Rex v. Inhabitants of Bucks, 12 East, 192; Rex v. Surrey, 2 Camp. 455; Com-bridges, the makers may be liable for their repair, . . . but the hundred is not thereby relieved."[1]

In the several States the obligation to repair bridges rests upon the counties, towns, cities, or other corporate bodies created with special reference to the constructing, maintaining, and repairing of highways, bridges, and public works.[2] sioners v. Martin, 4 Mich. 557; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 333.

So it is said that "bridges in highways, 'if within any city or town corporate,' were to be repaired by the inhabitants of such city or town; if 'without the city or town corporate,' by the county; and no other corporation or private person was bound to repair, unless by tenure or prescription." Hill v. Boston, 122 Mass. 344, 347; Washer v. Bullett Co., 110 U. S. 558, 564. These last three cases exhaustively consider this subject. State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451.

The statute of 22 Hen. VIII. c. 5, is declaratory of the common law in this respect. 2 Inst. 701.

Obligation extended only to bridges over flumen vel cursus aquæ. Rex v. Oxfordshire, 1 B. & Ad. 289.

1. Blackburn, J., in Queen v. Kitchener, 2 C. C. Cas. Res'd, 88; citing Rex v. Ely, 15 Q. B. 827; 19 L. J. M. C. 223; Rex v. Southampton, 18 Q. B. 841; Reg. v. Inhabitants of Dorset, 45 L. T. N. S. 308.

2. No liability to repair exists outside of express statutory requirements. Mower v. Inhab. of Leicester, 9 Mass. 247; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 63; Sawyer v. Northfield, 7 Mass. 494; Noyes v. Town of Morristown, 1 Vt. 353; Ried v. Belfast, 20 Me. 246; Chidsey v. Canton, 17 Conn. 475; Hill v. Livingstone County, 12 N. Y. 52; Whitall v. Freeholders of Gloucester, 40 N. J. Law, 302, 306, citing State v. Hudson, 30 N. J. Law, 137.

The history of the law of New Jersey as to erecting, maintaining, and repairing bridges fully considered. Beatty v. Titus, 47 N. J. Law, 89; Ripley v. Chosen Freeholders, etc., 40 N. J. Law, 45, 49; Freeholders of Bergen v. State, 42 N. J. Law, 263, 273; Freeholders of Sussex v. Strader, 3 Harr. (Del.) 108; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 530.

Counties in Indiana must repair. Fulton County v. Richards (Ind.), 4 Westn. Repr. (1886) 492, citing Vaught v. Board, 101 Ind. 123; Patton v. Board, 96 Ind. 131; Board v. Bacon, 96 Ind. 31; Board v. Emerson, 95 Ind. 579; and others

County must repair primitive log and slab bridge over pond in highway. Board of Madison County v. Brown, 89 Ind. 48.

So in Alabama. Smoot v. Mayor, etc., of Wetumpka, 24 Ala. 112. In New York. Hill v. Livingston, 12 N. Y. 52. In California. Hoffman v. San Joaquin County, 21 Cal. 427.

"County to a great extent exercises a discretion in building and repairing bridges." Browning v. City of Springfield, 17 Ill. 144.

When county having over 2000 inhabitants is bound to repair a bridge within the limits of a city of the second class. County Commissioners v. Wyandotte, 29 Kan. 431.

"The liability to repair a public bridge may . . . be imposed upon a hundred or a division or a borough, or on one or more individuals," or upon the county. The Queen v. Chart & Longbridge, Law Rep. 1 C. C. Res. 237.

General rule is that towns and cities are liable, but certain facts held to change rule and county owning is liable. The State ex rel. Neeves v. Supervisors of Wood County, 41 Wis. 28, citing Hill v. Board of Supervisors of Wood County, 12 N. Y. 52.

In Massachusetts must be repaired by the town, city, or place where situated, in the absence of other provision therefor. Lyman v. Hampshire, 140 Mass. 311; Stat. of Mass. 1882, p. 347, c. 52 et seq.; City of Lowell v. Proprietors of Locks and Canals, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 4.

County only liable for bridges erected by it under legislative authority; duty to repair is on county or township, city or borough. Township of Newlin v. Davis, 77 Pa. St. 317; Erie City v. Schwingle, 22 Pa. St. 384; Pittsburg City v. Grier, 22 Pa. St. 64; Meadville v. Erie Canal Co., 18 Pa. St. 66; Rapho v. Moore, 68 Pa. St. 404; Zimmerman v. Conemaugh (Pa. 1886), 2 Cent. Repr. 361; McCormick v. Township of Washington (Pa. 1886), 2 Cent. Repr. 584.

City held liable. Holmes v. City of Hamburg, 47 Iowa, 348.

County held liable to repair (case under Code, sec. 527). Roby v. Appanoose Co., 63 Iowa, 113.

Liability to repair extends only to bridges of the larger class requiring a large expenditure of money. Bridge over a ravine not such a bridge. Taylor v.

Bridges in Two Counties.—Where county commissioners acting under a statute made a valid award that the defendant town should keep a certain portion of a bridge over the Merrimac river in repair, held, that the town was bound to keep such portion in repair although not wholly within the limits of the town.[1]

Davis County, 40 Iowa, 295; Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40 Iowa, 394; Long v. Boone County, 33 Iowa, 181.

A short foot-bridge formed by three planks and a hand-rail, used for a foot-path over a small stream, not such a bridge as county is bound to repair. Regina v. Inhabitants of Southampton, 14 Eng. L. & E. 116.

Towns and cities held liable. City of Eudora v. Miller, 30 Kan. 494, distinguishing Wyandotte County v. City of Wyandotte, 29 Kan. 431; State v. Boscawen, 32 N. H. 331, 342; Griffin v. Williamstown, 6 W. Va. 312; City of Denver v. Dinsmore, 7 Col. 328; McDonald v. Corporation of Township of South Dorchester (Prov. Ont.). 29 C. P. 249; Jordan v. City of Hannibal, 3 Westn. Repr. (Mo. 1886) 795; Medina v. Perkins, 48 Mich. 67; Town of Mechanicsburg v. Meredith, 54 Ill. 84.

Cases where towns were not held liable for non-repair. Conners v. Martin, 4 Mich. 557; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 333; Hickok v. Trustees, etc., of Plattsburg, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 427.

Town not obliged to keep in repair a bridge recently and unlawfully established. Commonwealth v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 180; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 164.

Turnpike road not a highway so as to make mill-owners liable in an action on behalf of the town to recover for an outlay for repair of a bridge over a turnpike and repaired by the mill-owners, said turnpike having subsequently become a public highway, such duty to repair not devolving upon the mill-owners under the statute (Gen. Stat. R. I. cap. 60, sec. 22), which provides that "whenever any artificial water-course has been or shall be made under, through, or by the side of any highway previously existing, the proprietors or occupants of such water-course shall make and maintain all necessary bridges. North Providence v. Dyerville Mfg. Co., 13 R. I. 45.

Canal company is not bound to keep in repair public bridges connecting highways intersected by its canal. City of Erie v. Erie Canal Co., 59 Pa. St. 174.

As to bridges over highways laid out across canal after it was constructed, canal company not bound to repair. Morris Canal & Banking Co. v. State, 24 N. J. Law (4 Zab.), 62; 22 N. J. Law (2 Zab.), 537.

Canal company is not bound to repair bridges where State has permitted it to abandon its rights thereto. Pennsylvania & Ohio Canal Co. v. Comm'rs of Portage Co., 27 Ohio St. 14.

Peculiar circumstances under which a toll-bridge corporation was held bound to keep its bridge in repair six days after the expiration of the term for which its charter was granted. Atty.-Gen'l v. Proprietors of Deerfield River Bridge, 105 Mass. 1.

1. Whitman v. Groveland, 131 Mass. 553.

In Vermont an act was passed in 1884 to entirely relieve towns from liability to support bridges or roads outside their own limits. Towns of Tunbridge and Chelsea v. Town of Royalton (Vt. 1885), 1 New Eng. Repr. 347.

County councils must maintain bridges over rivers constituting boundary lines between municipalities in same county (sec. 413 of the Municipal Act). McHardy v. Corporation of Township of Ellice et al. (Prov. Ont.), 1 App. R. 628; s. c., 29 Q. B. 546.

Both counties bound to repair a bridge over stream which was a boundary line between two counties—statute. Rapho v. Moore, 68 Pa. St. 404; Reg. v. New Sarum, 2 New Sess. Cas. 133; Washer v. Bullett Co., 110 U. S. 558, 564, citing Agawam v. Hampshire, 130 Mass. 528; Norwich v. County Comm'rs., 13 Pick. (Mass.) 60; and other cases.

Part in one shire and part in another, each bound to repair. Woolrych on Ways, 200; 2 Inst. 701; 1 Hawk. P. C. C. 77, § 2.

Under a statute a bridge was erected over an arm of the sea between two towns, the erection and repair of the same to be at the joint expense of both. It was afterwards discontinued and taken down, and that part of the channel was filled in and a roadway constructed in its place. Held, that one town could not maintain an action against the other for one half the expense incurred in repairing the roadway, the old statute relating to the bridge having become inoperative by discontinuing the bridge. Provincetown v. Truro, 135 Mass. 263.

Private corporations, generally canal companies, railway and other private corporations, are bound to repair all bridges erected by them under their charters over public highways, especially where a revenue is derived from them.[1]

Other Obligations.—Those bound to repair public bridges were by the common law compelled to make them of the height and strength necessary for the course of the water.[2]

14. Private Bridges—Public Use.—If an individual build a bridge and the public use it, and it becomes of public utility, the public must repair it.[3] But if a private bridge is erected by one for his own benefit and so continued, although the public use it, if it is not of public utility the county need not repair.[4]

1. Pittsburg City v. Grier, 22 Pa. St. 64; Nicholl v. Allen, 31 L. J. Q. B. 283; Rex v. Kent, 13 East, 220; Longmore v. Great Western R. Co., 19 C. B. N. S. 183; Rex v. Somerset, 16 East, 305; Hayes v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 9 Hunt (N. Y.), 63; State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451; Van Allen v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 29 U. C. Q. B. 436; Sawyer v. Inhabitants of Northfield, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 490; State v. Norridgewock Bridge, 65 Me. 514; People ex rel. v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 67 Ill. 118; Burrett v. City of New Haven, 42 Conn. 174; Orcutt v. Kitterry Point Bridge Co., 53 Me. 500. Whicher v. Somerville, 138 Mass. 454; White v. Quincy, 97 Mass. 430.

An incorporated company was by act of the Assembly authorized to occupy a county bridge over a creek with a railway, conditioned that it should build and attach to the bridge a safe and convenient footway over the creek. Held, that the company was bound to repair it. Phœnixville v. Phœnix Iron Co., 45 Pa. St. 135.

Railroad company changed an old public highway at its intersection with the railroad, laid out another which was used by the public, and constructed a bridge over a stream on the line of the new road. Held, not liable for repair of the bridge, although it had repaired the same at different times. Brookins v. Central R. & Banking Co., 48 Ga. 523.

Company erecting bridges over navigable rivers is bound to keep them in such repair as public safety demands. Hamilton v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 970.

Highway carried over railway by a bridge; company must repair (C. S. C. c. 66, s. 9, sub-s. 5, sec. 12, sub. 4). Van Allen v. Grand Trunk R. Co. (Prov. Ont.), 29 Q. B. 436.

2. Tomlins' Law Dict., citing Dalt. cap. 16.

Of the obligation to repair, ratione tenuræ or by prescription. Reg. v. Sutton, 3 N. & P. 569; Rex v. Hendon, 4 B. & Ad. 628; Rex v. Stratford-upon-Avon, 14 East, 348; Hale's P. C. 143; Baker v. Greenhill, 3 Q. B. 148.

Some English statutes de repair, etc.: 9 Hen. III. c. 15; 22 Hen. VIII. c. 5; 5 Will. & M. c. 11, s. 6; 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 14; 52 Geo. III. c. 110; 55 Geo. III. c. 143; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 64; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 33; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 73, s. 12; 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 21, 22; 5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 50; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20.

3. Regina v. Inhabitants de com. Wilts, 6 Mod. Rep. 307; Rex v. Inhabitants of the W. R. of Yorkshire, 2 East, 342, and cases reported; 2 East, 353, 354, and 356; 2 Inst. 701.

So the public must repair where private bridge was built before 43 Geo. III. c. 59, where used by public. Reg. v. Ely, 4 New Sess. Cas. 222; State ex rel. Roundtree v. Board of Gibson Co., 80 Ind. 478; 2 Inst. 701; State v. Crompton, 2 N. H. 513; Batty v. Duxburry, 24 Vt. 155.

Canal trustees cannot impose upon a city the burden of keeping a bridge in repair because built over its canal in the city limits, unless the city assumes control over it. City of Joliet v. Verley, 35 Ill. 58.

4. Regina v. Inhab. de com. Wilts, 6 Mod. Rep. 307; Rex v. Kerrison, 3 M. & S. 526; State v. Madison, 59 Me. 538; Township of Newlin v. Davis, 77 Pa. St. 317.

Canal company is bound to repair a bridge erected for its benefit over its canal where it crosses a highway. Reg. v. Desjardins Canal Co. (Prov. Ont.), 27 Q. B. 374.

A canal company having for its own benefit made a navigable cut so as to cause a ford crossing the highway, and of public utility, to be impassable, and having erected a bridge over the same, is bound to repair it. The King v. Inhabitants, etc., of Lindsay, 14 East, 317.

15. Approaches.—Approaches and embankments are as a rule a part of a bridge, and duty to repair bridge includes them.[1] And an act of Congress declaring an existing "bridge" to be a "lawful structure" was held to mean "the bridge as built with its abutments, piers, superstructures, draw, and height."[2]

It has been decided, however, that it is erroneous to hold that an approach is part of a bridge as a matter of law.[3]

Where a highway is located over private land and the owner should open a water-course across it, he is bound to erect and keep in repair a bridge over the same. Lowell v. Proprietors of Locks, etc., 104 Mass. 18.

Where private persons cut a canal across a public highway for their benefit, held, bound to erect and maintain a bridge over the same. Phœnixville v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 45 Pa. St. 135.

But aliter where a new and wider public road was laid out, necessitating a new and wider bridge, which was erected by the town in place of the old one. Phœnixville v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 45 Pa. St. 135.

Bridge erected near a public bridge by a private person, and travel equally divided between both, county not bound to repair (37 Vict. c. 16, §§ 17, 18, O.). Regina v. Corporation of the County of Wellington (Prov. Ont.), 39 Q. B. 194.

Where the owner of land cut a mill-race across a public highway for his own benefit, and erected a bridge over it, held, that he must keep the same in repair so as to maintain the road in as good a condition as it was before the mill-race was cut through. But "had the town agents actually taken the bridge under their care and repaired it for a long time, there might have been a question for a jury whether they had not made it a town bridge." Dyget v. Schenck, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 445.

1. Watson v. Proprietors, 14 Me. 201; State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451; Board of Rush County v. R. & V. Gravel Road Co., 87 Ind. 504; Board of Shelby County v. Duprez Adm'r, 87 Ind. 509; Freeholders of Sussex v. Strader, 3 Harr. 108; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 530; Commonwealth v. Deerfield, 6 Allen (Mass.), 449.

If the charter does not expressly define the limits of a bridge in this respect, its extent must be determined by what is reasonable under the particular circumstances of each case. Commonwealth v. Deerfield, 6 Allen (Mass.), 449.

So of lateral embankments extending from railroad bridge to raise highway over its track Parker v. Boston & Maine R., 3 Cush. (Mass.), 107; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 709; Burritt v. City of New Haven, 42 Conn. 174.

Approaches are part as well as every necessary appliance for its proper use. Penn. Township v. Perry County, 78 Pa. St. 457.

2. The Clinton Bridge, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 454, 462.

Under a statute requiring a railroad to keep a bridge in repair the obligation is not extended to the approaches as they existed when the bridge was erected, but attaches to the approaches when they are extended by a widening of the highway. Carter v. Boston & Providence R. Corp., 139 Mass. 525.

Duty to repair held to extend beyond abutments in a case where railway crossed highway. Titcomb v. Fitchburg R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.), 254; White v. Quincy, 97 Mass. 430.

At the common law the duty to repair extended to the highway for a space of three hundred feet at each end. Rex v. West Riding of York, 7 East, 588; Rex v. Inhabitants of Devon, 14 East, 47.

So highways at either end are approaches. Whicher v. Somerville, 138 Mass. 454, and cases cited.

But where street had been lowered so that bridge might be erected over it for the passage of railroad as required by statute, held, that "approaches" did not include any portion of the highway. Whicher v. Somerville, 138 Mass. 454, and cases cited.

Bridge over a tidal river held to mean the structure over the river and its approaches, but did not include "causeways" built from each end of the structure. Swanzey v. Somerset, 132 Mass. 312.

That railroad company must keep in repair its bridges with their approaches and abutments. Whicher v. Somerville, 138 Mass. 454.

Fast driving on bridge prohibited. Evidence of fast driving on approach excluded. Weeks v. Town of Lyndon, 54 Vt. 638.

3. Nims v. Boone County, 66 Iowa, 272.

When question whether approach is a part of a bridge is for the jury. Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40 Iowa, 394.

16. Action—Damages.—The common law gives no action to a private person for damages consequent upon injury arising from a defective public bridge, and no such action lies against towns or counties unless given by statute.[1]

The case of Eastman v. Meredith[2] sustains the principle applicable to bridges that a civil action cannot be maintained against a quasi corporation for neglect of a public duty as repairing bridges unless so provided by statute.[3]

For want of repairs to a public bridge the remedy at the common law was by indictment or information at the suit of the king.[4]

But private persons may have an action under the statutes in most if not all of the States against such corporate bodies as are bound to repair.[5]

1. Mower v. Leicester 9 Mass. 247; Hedges v. County of Madison, 1 Gilm. (Ill.) 567; Cooley v. Chosen Freeholders of Essex, 27 N. J. Law (3 Dutch.), 415; Hoffman v. San Joaquin County, 21 Cal. 427. See Medina v. Perkins, 48 Mich. 67.

Statutory provision exists; counties and towns and cities distinguished in this respect. White v. Commr's of Chowan, 90 N. Car. 437; s. c. 47 Am. Rep. 534; Russell et al. v. The Men of Devon, 2 D. & E. 667; Crowell v. Sonoma County, 25 Cal. 313; Freeholders of Sussex v. Strader, 3 Harr. (Del.) 708; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 530; Cooley v. Chosen Freeholders of Essex, 27 N. J. Law, 415.

A municipal corporation is not liable in a private action for lack of judgment in selecting a plan to construct a public improvement. Cooley v. Chosen Freeholders of Essex, 27 N. J. Law, 415; Jordan et al. v. City of Hannibal, 3 Western Reporter (Mo. 1886), 795.

Private action lies where special damage is suffered. City of Denver v. Duvemore, 7 Col. 328; Daniels v. Denver, 2 Col. 669, distinguished.

2. 36 N. H. 284.

3. Hill v. Boston, 122 Mass. 344, 347; Mower v. Inhabitants of Leicester, 9 Mass. 247; Bartlett v. Crozier, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 250; Cooley v. Freeholders of Essex, 27 N. J. Law, 412; Livermore v. Freeholders of Camden, 29 N. J. Law, 245; aff'd, 31 N. J. Law, 394; Comm'rs of Highways v. Martin, 4 Mich. 557; White et al. v. County of Bond, 58 Ill. 297.

City liable for improperly constructing a bridge so as to injure plaintiff's land by overflow of water caused thereby. Perry v. City of Worcester, 6 Gray (Mass.), 544.

4. Hill v. Boston, 122 Mass. 344, 347; Mower v. Inhabitants of Leicester, 9 Mass. 247.

Indictments at the common law must be of non-repair of common bridges on highways, or possibly of common footways. Mod. Cas. 256.

Indictable at the common law not as a corporation. State v. Hudson, 30 N. J. Law, 137, 145; Rex v. Inhab. of Stratford upon-Avon, 14 East, 349.

In Pennsylvania, held that the supervisors of the township were indictable for neglect to repair. Zimmerman v. Conemaugh (Pa. 1886), 2 Central Reporter, 361.

Bridge corporation is liable to indictment for not building bridge as charter requires, Commonwealth v. Newburyport Bridge, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 141.

5. See cases under this subject, subtitles NAVIGABLE RIVERS, REMEDY, supra. See Clarke v. Birmingham & Pittsburg Bridge Co., 41 Pa. St. 147; Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa. St. 303; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 464; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112.

Where inhabitants of a village were duly incorporated with power to build bridges, held liable for damages at suit of a private person injured by reason of negligent and defective construction of the bridge. Conrad v. Trustees of Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 161.

By statute the expense of erecting, maintaining, and repairing a certain bridge was to be borne equally by a certain town and county. Necessary repairs had always been made by the town, which had been reimbursed by the county for its half. Held, that county was liable for injury resulting from bridge being out of repair. Lyman v. Hampshire, 140 Mass. 311.

The clause in a statute "sufficient for the safe and easy travelling" defined. McCormick v. Township of Washington (Pa. 1886), 2 Central Reporter, 584.

Town's liability stops with constructing and maintaining its bridges, so as to protect against injury by a reasonable, proper and probable use thereof in view

Notice that a bridge is out of repair "should be brought home to the defendant, or the defect must be shown to have existed of the surrounding circumstances, such as the extent, kind, and nature of the travel and business on the road of which it forms a part. McCormick v. Township of Washington (Pa. 1886), 2 Central Reporter, 584.

No action lies where horses take fright before entering bridge. Board of Fulton Co. v. Rickel, 106 Ind. 501.

A city bound by law to maintain a certain bridge as a highway is not liable for delay to a vessel caused by the draw being narrower than the statute prescribed unless the statute gives such action. French v. City of Boston, 129 Mass. 592; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 393.

Where by statute a certain portion of a bridge was to be kept in repair by county commissioners, held, liable for damages occasioned by neglect to repair although that portion on which the injury occurred was not within the limits of the town. Whitman v. Groveland, 131 Mass. 553.

County commissioners may recover from canal company money paid to satisfy judgment against the county for injury on company's bridge over its canal crossing public county road. Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Co. v. Commissioners of Alleghany Co., 57 Md. 201.

For defect in approaches when highway is widened a railroad company held liable. Carter v. Boston & Providence R. Corp., 139 Mass. 525.

Person injured by embankments extending laterally from railroad bridge have an action under the statute therefor. Parker v. Boston & Maine R., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 107; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 709.

Where by reason of a defect in a passageway leading from the public way to defendants' bridge the plaintiff's horse was injured and died therefrom, held, that defendants were liable by statute, although the approach was constructed by an individual, since the defendants had adopted and repaired the same. Watson v. Proprietors, 14 Me. 201.

That one end or approach was private property does not alter liability for neglect to repair. House v. Town of Fulton, 34 Wis. 608.

Bridge in four towns. Question as to the liability to repair a certain road or space between wing walls extending from abutments of bridge along the banks of the river. Held, that the space was not bridge, but highway. Powers v. Woodstock, 38 Vt. 44.

Railroad bridge; agreement by city to keep approaches in repair; estoppel by statute: city not liable. Rouse v. Somerville, 130 Mass. 361.

Bridge erected by a railroad company, but not one which the company was bound to repair, and not over a highway or private way established by law, the bridge not being so wide as necessitated by law, an action in behalf of a private person cannot be sustained, the lack of proper width being the only defect. Cox v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 68 Ga. 446.

Action for compensation for injury to plaintiff's land by railroad bridge over company's road, where it crossed highway. No right of action. McDonnell v. Ontario, Simcoe & Huron R. Union Co. (Prov. Ont.), 11 Q. B. 271.

Railroad company and town jointly liable to repair under statute injury to company's car by gate being left open, defendant being required to take care and superintendence of the bridge by statute. Held, no liability for injury. Malden & Melrose R. Co. v. City of Charlestown, 8 Allen (Mass.), 245.

Case of private bridge and duty of company to repair. Whether town is liable to one injured. People v. Troy, 37 How. 430; Fairbanks v. Great Western, etc., 35 U. C. Q. B. 523; Whitmarsh v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 7 U. C. Com. Pl. 373.

Act 24 & 25 Vict c. 70, s. 7. de damage to county bridge by locomotive construed. Queen v. Kitchner, 2 C. C. Cas. Res. 88.

County liable for damage sustained on primitive log or slat bridge over a pond on public highway. Board of Madison Co. v. Brown, 89 Ind. 48.

Where by law a railroad company is obliged to erect a bridge so as to carry a highway over its road, held that the town is not liable for an injury caused by a defect in the bridge. Sawyer v. Inhabitants of Northfield, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 496; Wilson v. Boston, 117 Mass. 509; Campbell v. Boyd, 88 N. Car. 12; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 740. See Gautret v. Egerton L. R. 2 C. P. 371.

Where a railroad bridge was constructed over a city street and it was shown that the surface of the street under the bridge could be lowered, held, that the court "could have ruled as a matter of law that the height of the bridge over the surface of the way did not make the way defective;" that the city was not liable for a defect in the railroad bridge itself. If the city had raised the grade for such a length of time that the defendant by the use of ordinary care would have discovered the same in time to have made the needed repairs." [1]

Where from gradual decay of the timbers of a toll-bridge it was defective and dangerous, although not open and visible to all, held that the owners by keeping the bridge open and taking toll were liable in damages for an injury sustained by reason of such defect.[2]

So where bridges are built over a railroad track at a height reasonably safe above it for the free passage of cars, and the railroad builds higher cars, this fact, when it appears that the bridge owners had no notice of the change, will not render them liable in damages for the death of a brakeman on the railroad, who, while on the top of a car, was struck by the bridge and killed.[3]

Reasonable Care.—A town or other corporation must exercise reasonable care in ascertaining defect in bridge, which it is under obligations to repair.[4] of the street the defect was in the way and not in the bridge, and city was liable therefor, Talbot v. City of Taunton, 140 Mass. 552.

1. Black, J., in Jordan et al. v. City of Hannibal, 3 Western Reporter, 795 (Mo. 1886).

2. Randall v. Proprietors of Cheshire Turnpike, 6 N. H. 147.

And so although they gave plaintiff notice that the bridge was unsafe for passage. It was incumbent upon them in addition to refuse toll. Randall v. Proprietors of Cheshire Turnpike, 6 N. H. 147.

Township held liable for damages sustained by reason of patent defects. For latent defects, however, the township is not liable "unless the supervisor exercising ordinary care had knowledge or notice of the defect," and reasonable time in which to make repairs. Zimmerman v. Conemaugh (Pa. 1886), 2 Central Reporter, 361.

County chargeable with knowledge of tendency of timbers to decay, but only bound to ordinary care. Board of Howard County v. Legg Adm'r, 93 Ind. 523.

Constructive notice and degree of care. Board of Porter County v. Dombke, 94 Ind. 72.

Action for damages; report of unsafe condition of bridge made to city council admissible to show notice to city. Bond v. City of Biddeford, 75 Me. 538.

3. Stoneback v. Thomas Iron Co. (Pa. 1886), 2 Central Reporter, 604.

4. Medina v. Perkins, 48 Mich 67.

Counties in Indiana are liable if negligent in not keeping county bridges in repair. The injury caused must, however, be the proximate result of the county's negligence. So where a horse before entering the bridge took fright at something upon the bridge, overturned the carriage and injured the plaintiff, held that the county was not liable. Fulton County v. Ricketts (Ind. 1886), 4 Western Reporter, 492.

Where a bridge is undergoing repair, it is the duty of the town to provide proper safeguards against accident. Mullen v. Rutland, 55 Vt. 77.

Owner of toll-bridge bound only to ordinary vigilance. Stokes v. Tift, 64 Ga. 312.

Duty of city under authority to light streets to light bridge crossing a city stream. City of Chicago v. Powers' Adm'x, 46 Ill. 169.

Negligence in constructing approach—whether county liable is question for the jury. Moreland v. Mitchell Co., 40 Iowa, 394.

Proprietors are bound to light toll-bridge at night if light be necessary to make it safe and convenient for public travel. Commonwealth v. Central Bridge Corporation, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 243.

Railroad company liable in damages for defective bridge caused by its neglect to exercise ordinary vigilance as to its condition and safety. Frankfort Bridge v. Williams, 35 Am. Dec. 155, citing Townsend v. Turnpike Road Co., 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 90.

Bridge company must exercise reasonable care to prevent driftwood accumulating about their piers, which might endanger navigation. Railroad Co. v. Meese, 44 Ark. 414.

Canal company is bound to light its

But the mere neglect to repair a bridge does not ordinarily constitute wilful negligence.[1]

So defendant county may show that the plaintiff might have gone another way over a good road and bridge, nearer than the road where the injury occurred.[2]

Where the sway-girt, the most essential timber in a certain bridge, was made of poor timber, whereby the plaintiff sustained an injury, the bridge giving way and killing a horse while he was driving over the same; held, that the owners of the bridge were liable.[3]

Public Officers.—A municipal corporation bound by statute to keep a certain bridge in repair is not liable in damages for the detention of a vessel on account of the draw not being of proper width, or because the bridge superintendent through his carelessness delays a vessel, unless there is an express statutory liability.[4] drawbridge at night, or by suitable barriers make it safe for travellers passing upon and over it, or is liable. Manley v. St. Helen's Canal Co., 2 Hurl. & N. 840. See Witherly v. Regent's Canal Co., 12 C. B. N. S. 2.

Action of tort for injury to land from overflow of waters caused by railroad bridge over a river, held liable unless proven by defendants that they had used due and reasonable precautions without negligence or carelessness in constructing their bridge. Mellen v. Western R. Corp., 4 Gray (Mass.), 301.

Approaches to a bridge must be constructed so as to be reasonably safe for passengers by night or day, or action lies. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Boteler, 38 Md. 568.

1. Peoria Association v. Loomis, 20 Ill. 235; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 263.

Where a bridge was used by a railroad company, held that such use made it obligatory upon the bridge association to furnish additional guards against new dangers. And whether the bridge was condemned for use by the railroad company, or whether such use was by permission of the bridge association, made no difference. Peoria Association v. Loomis, 20 Ill. 235; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 263.

2. Walker v. Decatur County, 67 Iowa, 307, following Porkhill v. Brighton, 61 Iowa, 103.

When general allegation of negligence and no averment of notice is sufficient. Board of Allen Co. v. Bacon, 96 Ind. 31.

3. Townsend v. Susquehanna Turnpike Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 90, action under statute.

If a bridge was sufficient to resist an ordinary storm, but gave way to a rainstorm unusually violent, defendant was not liable. Jordan et al. v. City of Hannibal, 3 Western Reporter (Mo. 1886).

Gorging of ice against bridge of railroad company, when company exercise reasonable care in constructing, is no ground of action. Omaha & Republican Valley R. Co. v. Brown, 14 Neb. 170.

If a city undertakes to construct approaches to a bridge erected over a company's canal within its limits, an obligation rested upon it to build them so as not to endanger the lives or limbs of its citizens. If an abutment of the bridge had stone steps leading from it, situated so that a passageway for travellers could not be safely constructed, the city in undertaking to make one was grossly derelict in its duty. The City of Juliet v. Verley, 35 Ill. 58.

4. French v. Boston, 129 Mass. 592.

Construction of statutes as to power of superintendent of a bridge to determine which of two vessels shall first pass the draw. Commonwealth v. Chase, 127 Mass. 7.

Tender of drawbridge held liable for negligence in not exercising proper care as to the safety of travellers passing upon and over the bridge when draw was open, although appointed and salary fixed by the State. Nowell v. Wright, 3 Allen (Mass.), 166; s. c., 80 Am. Dec. 62.

Tender of a drawbridge acting under an appointment by the governor and paid a salary was held bound to use reasonable care in the discharge of his duties, and was liable for neglect to exercise proper and due caution for the safety of travellers passing over the bridge. Nowell et ux. v. Wright, 3 Allen (Mass.), 166.

Contra, negligence of agents in taking care of bridge, county is liable. Patton

Railings.—The omission of suitable railings is a negligent act.[1]

17. Eminent Domain.—Under a general law the State may authorize the taking and laying out as a public highway a bridge erected and maintained by a private corporation and having a right to take tolls under its franchise, provided compensation be made for the property taken. The power of appropriation and the exertion thereof in such manner by the State by taking away the franchise from a corporation is not an instance of impairing the obligation of a contract in the sense of the constitution.[2]

"Although a State grants a privilege in exclusive terms, it does

v. Board of Montgomery County, 96 Ind. 131.

Municipality liable for neglect of public officer to keep bridge in repair. Township of Newlin v. Davis, 77 Pa. St. 317.

1. Whittaker's Smith on Negligence, 115.

A toll-bridge corporation is not bound by law to construct railings to a bridge for persons to sit upon, lean against, or lounge on. Orcutt v. Kittery Bridge Co., 53 Me. 500.

In the case of railroads intersecting a highway at a grade below the level of the highway, it was held in the Great Eastern R. Co. v. Hackney District Board of Works, Law Rep. 8 App. Cas. (1883), 687, by Lord Watson, that sec. 46 of the Railway Clauses Act of 1845 "provides that the 'road' shall be carried over the railway 'by means of a bridge.' Again, sec. 50 enacts, with regard to 'every bridge erected for carrying any road over a railway,' that there shall be a good and sufficient fence 'on each side of the bridge,' and also that 'the road over the bridge' shall have a clear space of a certain width between the fences thereof. The real import of these enactments is that the substitute road shall be supported by means of a bridge provided by the railway company, the land upon which the old highway rested having been taken and used for railway purposes." P. 691.

The public are "entitled in the terms of the statute to have the road maintained and to have the bridge kept properly fenced by the railway company." These remarks, although expounding the law in this respect, may perhaps have no special force, inasmuch as the question in the case cited was whether the railway company were "owners of land bounding and abutting on the highway" within the terms of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, and so liable to contribute to the expense of paving the highway. See also Brighton R. Co. v. St. Giles Camberwell, Law Rep. 4 Ex. Div. 239. See generally, as to liability of municipal corporation for neglect to repair highways and bridges, 35 Am. Dec. 542, note; 27 Am. Dec. 99, note.

2. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 535.

In 1825 the petitioners were incorporated with authority to construct a certain bridge, with the power to take toll for seventy years, to remunerate them for the cost of erecting and maintaining the structure. There was also a proviso that the bridge might be made free for public use upon the proprietors being reimbursed for the outlay originally made with annual interest at nine per cent less what had been received for tolls, although the bridge originally lay in two towns. By annexations it came entirely within the limits of the city of Lowell. In 1853 an act was passed authorizing the city of Lowell to take and lay out the bridge as a highway upon the payment of damages, to be assessed and paid as provided by law in laying out streets and highways in that city. Held, that upon the expiration of the seventy years the right of the proprietors in the bridge would determine, and the bridge would revert to the public, or upon the payment of the sum stipulated in the charter it would pass by redemption to the public, or it might be lawfully taken and appropriated to the use of the public, by right of eminent domain, and this without compensating the proprietors for the actual value of the bridge as a structure independently of their franchise, but only for the loss of their franchise. Central Bridge Corporation v. City of Lowell, 15 Gray (Mass.), 106.

A corporation to build a bridge is in one sense a franchise, and carries with it the right to erect a bridge and take tolls. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 535.

Such franchise is a species of property vested in the corporation. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 535.

not thereby bind its hands against such an exercise of the right of eminent domain as may annihilate the franchise for the benefit of another which the terms of the first would exclude." [1]

18. Toll-bridges—Exclusive Rights.—A new bridge erected so near another as to impair directly and materially the value of the exclusive right of the other under its franchise to collect tolls is a nuisance, for which action would lie; or if the law did not furnish adequate relief, equity will interfere by injunction:[2] and this was the rule under the common law.[3]

So where there was a grant of a privilege to erect a bridge and take tolls, and prohibiting the erection of another bridge "within two miles either above or below the bridges to be erected and maintained in pursuance of this act," held, to be a contract within the protection of the constitution within the principle laid down in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 625.[4]

That an exclusive right to erect a bridge and take tolls will not be implied, is fully settled by the Charles River Bridge case.[5]

Where a petition for an injunction was brought to the supreme court of Massachusetts, and a bill was also filed in the same court for relief upon the ground that an exclusive right to erect a bridge and collect tolls was granted by the legislature to the plaintiff, that the grant to the defendant was invalid, impaired the obligation of contracts, and took away the property of the plaintiff without compensation, the petitioners were dismissed by the court. Under the provisions of the 25th section of the Judiciary Act of 1789 the case was taken by writ of error to the supreme court of the United States. The latter court found that the grant to the plaintiffs was silent as to the contested power, and was a grant only of such privileges as are usually given to corporations of that kind, and, in the absence of an express grant to the plaintiffs of an exclusive privilege to erect and maintain a bridge, that the court would not imply an engagement on the part of the State that another should not be erected, or that there should be no competition or improvements that might diminish the plain-

1. Cooley, C. J., in East Saginaw Mfg. Co. v. City of East Saginaw et al., 19 Mich. 259, 282, citing West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 16 Vt. 446; s. c., 6 How. (U. S.) 507; Enfield Toll Bridge Co. v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co., 17 Conn. 40, 454; Matter of Kerr, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 119. The question in the main case was de power of State to exempt perpetually from taxation.

2. Newburg Turnpike v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 101; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 274, citing Croton Turnpike v. Ryder, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 611; Ogden v. Gibbons, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150, 160.

3. Morris v. Farmers & Teamsters' Co., 6 Cal. 590; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 535, citing 3 Bla. Com. 319; Anonymous, 1 Hayw. L. & Eq. 457; Smith v. Harkins, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 613; Harrell v. Ellsworth, 17 Ala. 584.

Limitations upon right in California to establish a bridge when likely to interfere with old one considered. Morris v. Farmers & Teamsters' Co., 6 Cal. 590; 65 Am. Dec. 535.

4. Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 51, Chief Justice and Justices Field and Grier dissenting.

5. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 420; s. c., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 376; 7 Pick. (Mass.) 344; Thompson v. N. Y. & Harlem R. Co., 3 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 625; White River Turnpike Co. v. Vermont Central R. Co., 21 Vt. 595.

tiff's income. The decision of the Massachusetts supreme court in dismissing the bill was affirmed.[1]

19. Injunction.—An injunction will lie where bridge obstructs navigation.[2]

20. Mandamus.—Mandamus will lie to compel board of commissioners to approve or disapprove bridge plans submitted in accordance with statutory provision.[3]

21. Miscellaneous Cases.—A turnpike company may accept a subscription of stock from the county to aid in building a bridge.[4]

Bridges are not subjects of maritime lien.[5]

1. Turnpike Co. v. State, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 210.

2. Wisconsin River Improvement Co. v. Lyons, 30 Wis. 61.

Temporary injunction was issued to restrain a railroad corporation from building a bridge over Connecticut river. Baird v. Shore Line R. Co., 6 Blatch. (U. S.) 276.

Injunction to prevent building a bridge across a navigable river not allowed. Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Barnesville & Moorehead R. Co., 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 224.

Case of railroad diverting a highway and erecting bridge over same, and right under Railway Clauses Land Clauses Act to restrain the erection of a bridge with less heading than fifteen feet, or any bridge which would carry the road to such a level as to cause it to be flooded. Atty.-Gen. v. Furness R. Co., 47 L. J. Ch. Div. 776; 38 L. T. N. S. 555.

In a proper case injunction lies in favor of landowner to prevent the entry of the public upon his land to build a bridge. Kyle v. Board of Kosciusko Co., 94 Ind. 115.

Location of bridge may be a proper subject of equitable control in injunction proceeding. Irwinton v. Burton Road Supervisor, 61 Iowa, 471.

3. Commissioners v. Board of Public Works, 39 Ohio St. 628.

Mandamus to compel railway company to construct bridge instead of a level crossing. British & North Somerset R. Co., In re, 3 L. R. Q. B. Div. 10; 47 L. J. Q. B. Div. 48.

Mandamus to compel adjoining county under statute to assist in making bridge over swamp and run denied. Construction of statute which provided for bridge or causeway. County Court of Gloucester Co. v. County Court of Middlesex Co., 79 Va. 15.

4. Mercer County Court v. Springfield, Maxville, etc., Turnpike Co., 10 Bush (K.), 254.

Bridge over a canal navigable by statute, held, upon facts presented, to be a bridge between city and county (under sec. 39 of 12th Vict. c. 81). Woods v. Municipality of Wentworth and Corporation of Hamilton (Prov. Ont.), 6 C. P. 101.

Other cases of construction of statutes upon this point. In re Corporation of the County of Waterloo and the Corporation of the County of Brant (Prov. Ont.), 23 Q. B. 537; Harold v. Corporation of the County of Simcoe et al. (Prov. Ont.), 16 C. P. 43

Held upon a question as to the construction of a statute (Rev. Stat. 1879, sec. 6901, Mo.): "That it matters not whether a bridge owned by a joint-stock company is a toll-bridge or not. it is taxable as a bridge." The statutory clause being "all bridges over streams in this State, or over streams dividing this State from other States owned by joint-stock companies, and all such bridges where a toll is charged, shall be subject," etc.; "but it does not embrace bridges owned by railroad corporations. Such corporations are not joint-stock companies." State ex rel. Collector v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. (Mo. 1886), 4 West. Repr. 697.

Neglect of defendant corporation to comply with terms of their charter requiring a return to be made of amount of tolls collected, whether decree of forfeiture should be made—a question. State v. Barron. 57 N. H. 498.

Board of county commissioners of one county no power to purchase toll-bridge over stream forming boundary line between two counties. Boards of both counties must concur. Board of Fountain Co. v. Thompson, 106 Ind. 534; Board of Fountain Co. v. Wright, 106 Ind. 600.

Building erected on bridge. Boston & Maine R. Co. v. Durgin, 67 Me. 263.

Corporation authorized to build a bridge may buy one at same place. Thompson v. N. Y. & Harlem R. Co., 3 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 625.

5. Galena Packet Co. v. Rock Island Bridge Co., 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 190.

The Niagara suspension bridge at Clifton is land.[1]

BRIEF. (See also CONVEYANCING.)—Short, condensed; used as a noun to mean a writ,[2] and an abstract, an abridgment, a memorandum; for example, a lawyer's brief, a brief of title.[3]

1. (Within act 29 & 30 Vict. 52, s. 3.) Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge Co. v. Gardner (Prov. Ont.), 29 Q. B. 194.

Relative rights and duties of Canadian and American powers de this bridge. Atty.-Gen. v. Niagara Falls International Bridge Co. (Prov. Ont.) 29 Chy. 34, 491.

Authorities for Bridges.—Pierce on Railroads; Wood's Law of Nuisances; Gould on Waters; High on Injunctions; Sedgwick on Statutory and Constitutional Law (2d Ed., Pomeroy's Notes); Shearman & Redfield on Negligence, with Addenda. 1874, 1880; Dillon on Municipal Corporations; Story's Eq. Jur.; Whittaker's Smith on Negligence; Thompson on Negligence; Russell on Crimes; Houck on Navigable Rivers; Abbott's National Digest; Lacey's Digest of Railway Decisions, 2 vols.; Field's Lawyers' Briefs.

2. Brief, in Norman-French, meant a writ (2 Co. Lit. 73, b: "quia breviter et paucis verbis intentionem proferentis exponit") because it set forth briefly and in a few words the plaintiff's claim. 5 Bracton, 413.

3. In Indiana, rule 14 of the Supreme Court provides that "where a cause is submitted on call the appellant shall have sixty days in which to file a brief. and if not filed within the time limited the clerk shall enter an order dismissing the appeal," etc. In affirming the judgment of the lower court, on the ground that the paper filed by the appellant was not a brief, the court, Perkins, J., said: "But is the paper filed in this case a brief? What is a brief? In the English practice it is 'an abbreviated statement of the pleadings, proofs, and affidavits at law; or of the bill, answer, and other proceedings in equity, with a concise narrative of the facts of the plaintiff's case, or the defendant's defence, for the instruction of counsel at the trial or hearing' Whart. Law Dict. In America, at least in Indiana, a brief, in addition to the statement of the case above mentioned, should contain a summary of the points or questions involved, with a citation of authorities, if authorities are relied on, and an argument based upon both, which should be characterized by perspicuity and conciseness; though says Bouvier: 'When the argument is pertinent and weighty, it cannot be too extended.' It is manifest from these definitions that the paper filed by counsel is not a brief. A mere copy of a part of the assignment of errors can scarcely be dignified with the name. Such being the fact, the cause is before us without a brief by the appellant. But, by rule 28 of the Supreme Court, points not made in the brief of counsel are considered as waived; and where no brief is filed no points are made, and all are waived. Such being the case, this court has nothing to do but to affirm the judgment below or dismiss the appeal, either of which courses it is in its power to take." Parker v. Hastings, 12 Ind. 654. See Deford v. Urbain, 42 Ind. 476.

In following this ruling, and holding that a paper which did not purport to contain any statement of the case or to furnish the court any information was not a brief, the court, Osborn, J., said: "Tidd says a brief should contain an abstract of the pleadings; a statement of the facts of the case, with such observations as occur thereon. The great rule to be observed in drawing briefs consists in conciseness with perspicuity. Tidd. Pr. 799. 'A detailed statement of a party's case.' Bouv. Law. Dict. 'An abridgment of a plaintiff's or defendant's case, prepared by his attorney, for the instruction of counsel on a trial at law.' Burrill Law Dict. A brief within the meaning of rule 14 is some kind of a statement of the case for the information of the court. We will not say that it should be as full as required by an attorney to counsel. Still it should at least purport to furnish the court some information; some aid in deciding the case. An attempt should be made to show why the judgment of the court below should be reversed or affirmed. To say that counsel cannot discuss the reasons upon which the court below decided the case, or to notify the court that the question is upon the sufficiency of the complaint, without making any suggestion or citing any authority, as in this case, does not purport to be a statement for the information of the court. It is no better than a blank sheet." Gardner v. Stover, 43 Ind. 356.

Brief Statements.—Where brief statements had been filed by both plaintiff and defendant, under the Maine practice, the court, Shepley, C. J., held that it did not prevent the offering of testimony pertinent to the general issue, saying:

BRING.—To transfer from one place or point to another. This word in its various forms is used in several metaphorical senses, examples of which will be found in the notes.[1]

"The rules applicable to special pleading can rarely be applied to brief statements and counter brief statements. One of the important purposes designed to be accomplished by allowing them to be used instead of pleas and replications was to relieve the parties from that exactness of allegation and denial by which parties were sometimes so entangled as to prevent a trial upon the merits. The term 'brief statement' conveys the idea of a short notice without formal or full statements of the matters relied upon. Such brief statements cannot prevent either party from offering testimony appropriate under the general issue. Nor can the omission of a denial in a counter brief statement of some matter alleged in the brief statement control or destroy the effect of testimony properly received under it. Such brief statements appear to have been considered as amounting to little more than notices of special matter to be given in evidence under it." Trask v. Patterson, 29 Me. 499. See Potter v. Titcomb, 13 Me. 26; s. c., 16 Me. 423; Bricket v. Davis, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 404.

1. Advancements Brought into Hotchpot.—In deciding, under a statute as follows, "Such advancements, both of real and personal estate, shall be brought into hotchpot, with the whole real and personal estate descended," etc., that the value of the property at the time of the advancement must govern in the distribution, the court, Handy J., said: "It is contended that by the terms of this statute the party bringing in or returning his advancement into the whole estate surrenders his title to the property so returned, and merges it in the general estate, agreeing to take from the value of the whole of it his portion, which of course must be ascertained by the valuation to be put upon the property at that time. We do not consider this a correct view of the subject. By the terms 'bringing or returning the advancement into' the whole estate, it was not intended that the party should relinquish his interest in that particular property, but it is intended to be brought in for the purpose of being taken into consideration in making a distribution of the entire estate, in order to ascertain whether it amounts to his full share of the estate. His title to the property is derived from the gift, and cannot be affected by the distribution, and consequently its value must be estimated as at the time when the gift was made." Jackson v. Jackson, 28 Miss. 674, 680.

Bring Up.—To rear or educate children. In a group of cases it has been decided that under a devise to a wife on condition that she bring up the testator's children until they come of age creates an interest in a term in the wife, and is not a mere confidence, so that if she die before the term expires it passes to her personal representative. Smith v. Havens, 1 Cro. Eliz. 252. See also Merrill v. Emery, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 507; s. c., 4 Wheeler Am. C. L. 435. But contra in a Connecticut case, where a testator devised the use and improvement of all his real estate to his wife until his son should arrive at the age of twenty-one years, she "bringing him up," and then devised to his son the whole of his real estate, except the use and improvement as before disposed of, to be and remain to him an estate for ever. The wife intermarried again, and died before the son came of age, when, in ejectment by him against his mother's second husband, it was held that a fee, immediately on the testator's death, vested in the son, subject to a personal trust or confidence in his mother. Everts v. Chittendon, 2 Day (Conn.), 338.

Bringing an Action or Suit.—"The entering or bringing the action," said Tilghman, C. J., "is one thing, the appearance in court another. The first proviso in this same section shows that the legislature distinguish between the bringing of the action and the first term after it is brought." And by Yeates, J.: "The words of the law are, 'it shall and may be lawful for either party in all civil suits or actions pending or that may hereafter be brought in any court, etc., to enter at the prothonotary's office a rule of reference, etc.' Whether the rule has been obtained prematurely or not must depend on the meaning of the words 'pending or that may hereafter be brought.' It may be said that, according to the common acceptation of the term, an action may be considered as brought immediately after mesne process has issued; but the legal idea seems to be different as we find it in our books. An action does not commence till the defendant makes his appearance, which is not till bail filed." Hertzog v. Ellis, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 208.

Under the New Hampshire statute February 9th, 1791, which provides that "no action of review shall be brought after the expiration of three years from the time of rendering the judgment to be reviewed," it was held that the true time when a writ is sued out, or an action commenced, is the time when the writ is in fact filled up with the declaration in order to have it served upon the opposite party, and the date, and not the service of the writ, is prima-facie evidence of the true time when it was sued out; but this prima-facie evidence may be rebutted, and the true time shown by parol testimony, the court, Woodbury, J., saying: "In this case the plea in abatement must be founded on the supposition that the time of the service of the writ is the time when the 'action of review' is brought, while the demurrer must rest on the opinion that it is brought at the time the writ bears date or, at the latest, when the writ was in fact sued out. In this State our writs of mesne process contain the declaration; and not being sued till that is inserted, they disclose the whole cause of action. But when obtained from the clerks of the respective courts, though attested and sealed, they are mere blank forms, and are afterwards filled up by the parties or their counsel with the appropriate term, dates, names and declaration, whenever an occasion arises to use them. They are then handed to an officer for service; and except the entry of the action on the docket of the court, the plaintiff does no more till the defendant appears and pleads. This course of practice differs so essentially from many of the English forms that sometimes the same expressions convey meanings altogether unlike, and the same principles are inapplicable to the same nominal stage in the proceedings. Thus, in the King's Bench the writ issues merely to bring the defendant into court, and not at the same time to apprise him of the cause of action. The cause of action may not even exist till the filing of the bill, and then for the first time it is technically set forth to the defendant. Hence it follows that for some purposes an action there may not be commenced till after both the date of the writ and the service, and also the appearance of the defendant in court; because the cause of action may neither exist nor be set forth till then. Thus in the Common Pleas, likewise, the filing of bail is in some cases for some purposes regarded as the commencement of the action. But it will be seen that in those cases no declaration had previously been filed, and the affidavit to hold to bail disclosed to the defendant the true cause of action. So it would seem that writs of error are not considered as commenced for some purposes till the errors are assigned, which in England is not till after the service and return of the writ. Then the defendant first receives notice of the special cause for which the writ issues. While, on the contrary, it has often been ruled that for most purposes an action is commenced at the date of the writ. Johnson v. Smith, 2 Burr. 950, and authorities there cited. The questions in this case, then, must be settled upon general principles, modified as we may find them by the peculiarities of our practice. . . . We entertain an opinion that the word 'action' here means writ; and that the word 'brought' means the procurement of it with a view to service upon the opposite party. Thus the word 'action,' though in general it signifies merely motion or an act, yet, when applied to legal subjects, means a proceeding by one party against another to try their mutual rights, or, as it is more technically expressed in some books, a process, to which there may be pleadings. As a writ here embraces the declaration, it is manifestly such a process; and the words 'writ of review' are frequently used as synonymous with 'action of review.' So the word 'brought' means obtained or gotten, and signifies the same as sued out, because the plaintiffs made suit, or secta to the king, to the chancellor, or to the clerk, as in different ages the practice altered; and obtained not a mere blank form as with us, but a writ filled up with the dates, term, etc., ready for service. In like manner we now obtain from the clerks writs of execution filled up; and hence, when thus obtained, they are properly said to be 'sued out.' But by the procurement of a blank form from the clerk or an attorney an action is not brought, because such form is not a writ, though by the procurement of such a form, suitably filled up and intended to be served, the 'writ' or 'action' may well be called 'commenced,' 'sued out,' or, in the language of the statute under consideration, 'brought.' . . . It must be obvious, therefore, that a plea which, like the present one, is founded on an idea that the service of the writ is necessarily, or even prima facie, the true time when the action is brought must be bad. The plea ought to follow the words of the statute, and allege that the action of review was not brought within the time limited; and then if the issue thus tendered be joined, the defendant may prove, by parol or otherwise, that the writ was not filled up with a view to service till the day of the service, or till some intervening time between its date and the service." Society Prop. Gospel v. Whitcomb, 2 N. H. 227.

BRITISH.—Of or belonging to; pertaining to or connected with Great Britain or its inhabitants.[1]

Under a New York statute which makes "any person beneficially interested in the recovery of an action" (2 R. S. 515, § 47, 2d Ed.) liable for costs, it was held that one may be said to have brought the action within the meaning of the statute who has retained the attorney for that purpose, either individually or in conjunction with others, or sanctioned the act of an assumed agent in retaining him, or agreed to indemnify the nominal plaintiff for the expenses consequent upon the retainer. Whitney v. Cooper, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 629.

In construing the act of July 4th, 1857, (Acts of 1857, page 44), as follows, "All proceedings and prosecutions brought to obtain the forfeiture of any liquor, etc., shall be held, etc., proceedings in rem and not criminal proceedings, etc.," the court held that it applied to proceedings pending when the act was passed; Waldo, J., saying: "The language of the statute justifies the views we have taken of its meaning. The words are, 'all proceedings and prosecutions brought to obtain the forfeiture,' etc. The word 'brought' implies past time, and includes prosecutions then pending as well as those thereafter to be brought." Hine v. Belden, 27 Conn. 384. 390.

To Bring to Port.—Where a policy of insurance on a certain ship on a commercial voyage, with or without letters of marque, gave leave to the assured to chase, capture, and man prizes, and the letters of marque issued to the ship authorized the captain to seize and take the ships, etc., of the French Republic, etc., "and to bring the same to such port as shall be most convenient," it was held that the assured was not justified in shortening sail and laying to in order to let a prize keep up with him, for the purpose of protecting her as a convoy into port, though such port were within the voyage insured; the court, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., saying: "I would, however, observe that the words in the letter of marque which have been most relied on, directing the captor to bring the prize into port to be condemned, does not mean an actual bringing of it in by the master himself, but causing it to be brought into port would fully satisfy those words; that is, by putting a competent number of men on board the prize for that purpose." Lawrence v. Sydebotham, 6 East, 45, 52.

Brought Before the Justices or Magistrate.—Where a statute requires the justice to cause the offender to be brought before him, it has been considered that this implies an authority to use compulsory process. 2 Chitty Gen. Pr. 179.

It does not necessarily mean a being brought personally; as in construing the statute 35 Geo. III. c. 101, § 2, which confines the jurisdiction of the justices to suspend an order of removal made by them to cases where the pauper is "brought before the justices" for the purpose of being removed, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said: "All, therefore, that the act meant was, not that where any pauper was brought personally, but where his case was brought judicially before the magistrates." The King v. Inhabitants of Everdon, 9 East, 101, 106.

1. Good British Brig.—Where a vessel, stated in the body of a policy to be the "good British brig called the John," was insured at the usual sea-risk premium, and the brig and her cargo were totally lost upon a reef of rocks, it was held that the words "British brig," even if a warranty, did not imply that she was a British registered vessel, but merely that she was owned by a British subject; and it being proved that the owner was a Scotchman by birth, and that he navigated the vessel under a clearance and license from the British custom-house, this was sufficient prima facie to show that he continued to be a British subject, without showing his domicile or place of habitual residence. In this case the court, Tilghman, C. J., said: "The first exception involves matter of greater difficulty. The insurance was on the 'good British brig,' etc. . . . It was urged on the part of the defendant that the expression 'the good British brig' amounted to a warranty; that the brig was a British registered vessel properly documented to entitle her to all the privileges attached to such vessels. On the contrary, it was contended for the plaintiff that this was not a warranty, but a description of the vessel, which was sufficiently complied with by proving to the referees that the brig belonged to a British subject. . . . I do not think it very material whether the expression 'British brig' is to be called a description or a warranty, since it is allowed on all hands to contain an assertion which the assured is bound to maintain. . . . The material question is, what is the meaning of it? The words 'British brig' may have several meanings. Strictly speaking, a vessel owned by a British subject is a British brig. Or, they may have a more extensive signification—a brig not only owned by a 'British subject,' but having a 'British register,' etc. In ascertaining the meaning, I think it fair to resort to circumstances disclosed in other parts of the instrument. In that point of view it is material that the insurance was against perils of the sea only, so that it is not to be supposed that the privileges attached to a registered vessel entered into the contemplation of the parties, because those privileges could avail nothing against storms and tempests. And here it may be proper to take notice of the custom of the insurance officers to insert at the foot of the policy such matters as they think of sufficient importance to make the subject of a special warranty. These memorandums are generally expressed in plain terms, without regard to form; and I cannot help conjecturing that if the insurers had contemplated a 'British registered vessel,' they would have had a note of it at the bottom, without trusting to the general expression 'British brig' in the descriptive part of the policy Considering the whole of the instrument, I am of opinion that the expression 'British brig,' is to be understood, a brig owned by a 'British subject.' The next question is whether the warranty thus understood has been complied with. The referees say it was proved to their satisfaction that the owner was a 'British subject.' They have been examined, and given their reasons, with which I cannot say that I am dissatisfied. Upon the whole, therefore, my opinion is that the defendant has not shown sufficient cause for setting aside the award." Mackie v. Pleasants, 2 Binney (Pa.), 363, 370.

British-built Ship —In an action of assumpsit by the master against the freighter of a ship for not loading and dispatching on a voyage from London to Gottenburg, where the ship was denominated in the memorandum for charter "the Swedish ship or vessel called the Maria." the defence was that the ship, instead of being Swedish, was British built, whereby the defendant had been prevented from sending her to Gottenburg, a Swedish port. To prove this, the defendant first offered in evidence a British register of this ship, stating J. Evans, of Yarmouth, to be sole owner. But Lord Ellenborough held that this was no evidence she was British built, without first proving that Evans was privy to the register, and then through some other medium that he was the owner of the ship. In the manner in which the register was actually presented, it was merely res inter alios acta, and proved nothing. Evans himself, being in court, was then called, and stated that he was sole owner, and had obtained the register for her as a British-built ship according to her real character, but that at the time this contract was entered into she had a complete set of Swedish papers, and a treasury license to sail as a Swedish ship, all which particulars were known to the defendant; whereupon Lord Ellenborough held: "I should hold that the ship must correspond with the description in the written contract; but she is Swedish in one sense, being furnished with Swedish papers, and in a condition to navigate as a Swedish ship. Although the expression in the memorandum for charter be ambiguous, I think it was enough that she had a Swedish national character imposed upon her, and that she was Swedish within the meaning of the parties to the contract." And the plaintiff had a verdict. Reasse v. Meyers, 3 Camp. 475.

Recognized British Ship.—In an action of limitation of liability under the Merchant Shipping Acts, on the part of a vessel which, though registered as a British ship at the time of the institution of the action, was not so registered at the time of the collision, Sir Robert Phillimore filed the following opinion: "On the 14th of July, 1877, the Andalusian, a vessel in the imperfect and unfinished state of equipment which is termed a launch, having been built in a building yard on the Cheshire side of the river Mersey, was launched into that river, and brought into collision with a ship called the Angerona, which ship brought an action against the Andalusian in this court, and I pronounced that the Andalusian was to blame for the collision. The Andalusian now brings an action for limitation of her liability under the Merchant Shipping Acts, and this action is opposed on behalf of the Angerona, upon the grounds, first, that the Andalusian was not a ship; secondly, that she was not used in navigation at the time of the collision; and thirdly, that she was not a 'British registered ship.' The court is much indebted to the able and ingenious arguments of the attorney-general and Mr. Benjamin upon all these points. By the 2d section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, it is enacted that '"ship" shall include every description of vessel used in navigation not propelled by oars.' I am disposed to consider that a ship of this character, in the imperfect state of a launch, might be included under this provision. The 18th section of the same act provides that 'no ship shall be deemed to be a British ship unless she belongs wholly to owners of the following description.' It is only necessary to mention one category, namely, 'natural-born British subjects.' The Andalusian is proved to have been the property of a natural-born British subject, and therefore is, in one sense, a British ship. The last and most important question remains to be considered. At the time of the collision this launch-ship had not her engines and boilers and other portions of her machinery on board, and was not in a condition to be registered, and as a matter of fact was not registered. By the 19th section of the same statute it is enacted that 'every British ship must be registered in manner hereinafter mentioned,' with certain exceptions which it is not necessary to mention; and it is further enacted that 'no ship required to be registered shall, unless registered, be recognized as a British ship.' The 54th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1862, limits the liability of shipowners with reference to the registered tonnage of sailing ships and the gross tonnage of steamships, without deduction on account of engine room; and the 516th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, provides that nothing in that part of that act which relates to limitation of liability shall be construed to extend to any British ship not being a 'recognized British ship' within the meaning of that act. It has been contended by the attorney-general that these sections should not be construed to deprive a vessel such as this launch —not yet ripe for registration, but intended to be registered when the proper time has arrived—of the benefits of this limitation of liability; that it would be very harsh to put this construction upon the sections; that this launch is not a ship 'required to be registered,' because at the time of her being launched she was not ready for registration, inasmuch as a launch cannot, and in this instance did not, take place with all the machinery on board, which it is necessary she should have at the time of registration; that she is not an offender against the law by reason of not having been fully registered, and that being owned by a British subject, and intended to be registered, she might be recognized as a British ship. After much consideration, I am unable to arrive at this conclusion. It is, in the first place, to be remembered that the limitation of liability is a creature of statute law; that upon general principles of jurisprudence and natural equity, as I think Dr. Lushington more than once said, the sufferer is entitled to a restitutio in integrum at the hands of the wrong-doer; that it is not a question of the launch being liable to a penalty for necessary non-registration, but a question whether she is entitled to a privilege which operates severely upon the sufferer, unless she brings herself strictly within the plain meaning of the provisions of the statute. Now, it appears to me that, however unfortunate it may be that the collision should have happened before the privilege of limitation of liability accrued, I think that it has so happened, and that with respect to this privilege, at least, the Merchant Shipping Acts, from beginning to end, treat a registered British ship as the only 'recognized British ship' entitled to this privilege. I must, therefore, reject the claim of the plaintiff in this suit, and there must be judgment for the defendant with costs." The Andalusian, L. R. 3 Prob. Div. 182, 188.

British Custom.—Where a bill of lading read, "Average, if any, is to be adjusted according to British custom," in an action for general average contribution in respect of the destruction of plaintiff's bark shipped under said bill of lading, and destroyed by water pouring into the ship through a hole cut in the side to extinguish a fire in the forehold, whereby the general cargo on board was saved, the court, Brett, J., said: "But the bill of lading, which in express terms provides that 'average, if any, is to be adjusted according to British custom,' appears to us to admit of no other construction than that which has been put upon it by the court of Queen's Bench. The custom or usage prevailing among average staters in England is uniform and invariable that goods thus damaged or destroyed are not brought into account in an average adjustment. We agree with the court below that the phrase, 'British custom,' in this bill of lading, was intended to refer, and upon a true construction does refer, to this custom or usage, even if it be different from the British law, a point which in this case we do not determine." Stewart v. West India & Pacific Steamship Co., L. R. 8 Q. B. 362; s. c. in Q. B., L. R. 8 Q. B. 88.

British Statute.—An indictment concluding "against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and made of force in the state aforesaid," cannot be sustained under an Act of Assembly, although it be entitled "an act for putting in force" certain British

BROKEN.—Out of repair. Used in the Statute of Bridges, 22 Hen. VIII. ch. 5.[1]

BROKERS. (See also AGENCY.)

1. Definition.—The term "broker" in its largest sense is applied to a specialist who acts as the medium of negotiating and con-statutes, and the British statute relating to the offence be copied nearly verbatim in the Act of Assembly; for said Waters, J.: "I am of opinion that the judgment ought to be arrested, because it does not appear that the British statute against forgery is made of force here as such, but only that certain clauses thereof are incorporated in an act of our legislature. The indictment, therefore, should have concluded against the act, and for want of this must be quashed." State v. Holley, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 35, 41; s. c., 2 Bay (S. Car.), 262. See State v. Sandford, 1 N & McC. (S. Car.), 512.

British Subjects.—The rule as to the point of time at which the American ante nati ceased to be British subjects is different in the United States and in England, as established by the courts of justice in the respective countries. The English rule is to take the date of the treaty of peace in 1783. Our rule is to take the date of the declaration of independence. Inglis v. Trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99.

The language of the ninth article of the treaty with Great Britain of 1794, as follows, "That 'British subjects' who now hold lands in the territories of the United States, etc., shall continue to hold them," etc., covers the case of one who, being born in South Carolina before the declaration of independence, married a British officer in 1781, and in 1782 accompanied her husband to England, where she remained until her death in 1801; and her children are entitled to inherit the real estate which vested in her on the death of her father in 1782 intestate. Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 242.

British Weight.—Where the words "British weight," in a charter-party, may have two meanings, it is such a latent ambiguity as to warrant the introduction of parol testimony to show whether, in commercial usage, it is understood to mean gross or net weight. Goddard v. Bulow, 1 N. & McC. (S. Car.) 45; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 663.

1. By Wills, J.: "Now I come to the tracting any kind of bargain. Thus there are ship-brokers, insurance brokers, real-estate and insurance brokers, etc. The term is, however, emphatically applied to persons whose business it is to negotiate and effect contracts of sales between merchants.[1]

Statute of Bridges, which, although it is in archaic language, is none the less expressive. The preamble describes the annoyance caused by bridges 'broken in highways,' and then describes the remedy. Broken means out of repair, and applies to bridges in highways." Queen v. Inhabitants, 16 Cox C. C. 117.

1. Coddington v. Goddard, 16 Gray (Mass.) 436; Hinckley v. Arey, 27 Me. 362; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 79; Beal v. McKiernan, 6 La. (O. S.) 407; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush (Ky.), 12; White v. Brownell, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 318; Barnard v. Monnot, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 440; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 42.

A broker is one who makes a bargain for another and receives a commission for so doing. Pott v. Turner, 6 Bing. 702.

A broker, within the meaning of our revenue laws, is an agent who negotiates sales between parties for a commission, and therefore a person who sells only stocks and bonds bought by him is not a broker. State v. Duncan, 16 Lea (Tenn.), 75.

A salaried agent who does not act for a fee or rate per cent is not a broker. Portland v. O'Neill, 1 Oreg. 218.

A partnership whose sole employment relates to the property and business of third persons may act as brokers. Bromley v. Elliot, 38 N. H. 287; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 182.

C., a manufacturer of railroad and bar iron, wrote to W. & L.: "In reply to your application to be appointed selling agent for the Glendower Iron Works, I will agree to appoint you my selling agent for the sale of my railroad iron, merchant bar and muck bar, for New York and Eastern markets, provided you will agree to exert yourselves to keep the mill employed, and give me the preference and refusal of all orders that may come to you. In compensation for such service I will agree to allow you a commission, on all sales of railroad iron and muck bar in your district, of one and one half per cent. (1½), out of this percentage you to pay all extra commissions to other brokers." On the same day W. & L. wrote on the face of this letter, "Terms and conditions of this agreement accepted." W. & L. negotiated a sale of 4500 tons of rails to a railroad company, but only 646 tons were delivered, as the company through its embarrassments was unable to pay for more. W. & L. claimed to recover commissions on the whole 4500 tons, and in a suit therefor the court below instructed the jury that the right of the plaintiffs to compensation did not depend upon the quantity of railroad iron delivered, but upon the amount which was sold through the agency of the plaintiffs; that if the latter brought the defendant and the purchaser together, and "there was an act of sale or purchase passing from one to the other, the one agreeing to do and the other accepting, this constitutes a sale so far as the agent employed is concerned, who when he has gained the mutual assent of the minds of the person who desires to purchase and of him who desires to sell, has then performed what he agrees to perform, and has earned his percentage." Held, that this was error; that plaintiffs were not acting in the capacity of brokers of the defendant, but as agents to sell under a special agreement, and that the sales contemplated in said agreement were actual sales in a commercial sense, and not mere contracts to sell. Creveling v. Wood, 95 Pa. St. 152.

A broker differs from a factor in this, that he has no possession of the goods he sells for his principal, and consequently no lien on them, neither can he sell in his own name. Story on Agency, § 34; Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 79; Bernshouse v. Abbott, 16 Vroom (N. J.), 531; s. c., 46 Am. Repr. 789; James' Appeal, 89 Pa. St. 54; Barry v. Boninger, 46 Md. 59; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush (Ky.), 12; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235; Fisher v. Brown, 104 Mass. 259; Stollenwerck v. Thacher, 115 Mass. 224; Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137.

Although a broker has generally no lien, he may have a lien on the proceeds in his hands of a sale, for his commissions, but not for a general balance. Barry v. Boninger, 46 Md. 59; Bostock v. Jardine, 34 L. J. Exch. 142.

A principal may either directly or impliedly confer upon a broker the authority of a factor, as by investing him with the indicia of title. But the intention to extend the power of the broker must be clearly shown. Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Jeffrey v. Bigelow, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 518; Andrews v. Kneeland, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 354; McNeil v. Tenth Natl. Bank, 46 N. Y. 325; Talmage v. Nev-

2. Authority of Broker.—Defined by Usage.—Where a person sends an order to a broker engaged in a known and established market or trade for a deal in that trade, he gives authority to the broker to deal according to any well-established usage in the market or trade, whether in fact known to him or not, provided such usage is fair in itself and does not change the essential character of the broker's employment as such or of the contract purporting to be made by him on behalf of his principal.[1]

Implied Authority.—A broker has generally the power to use all the means necessary to effect the business for the transaction of which he was employed, unless restricted by the well-known usages of trade.[2] ins, 2 Sweeney (N.Y.), 38; Morey v. Webb, 65 Barb. (N.Y.) 22; Morton v. Scull, 23 Ark. 289; Wood v. Hayes, 15 Gray (Mass.), 375; Henry v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 81 Pa. St. 76.

An insurance broker may insure in his own name. Story on Agency, § 109; Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137. See INSURANCE BROKERS.

1. Robinson v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. L. 836; Sutton v. Tatham, 10 Ad. & E. 27; Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 724; Russell v. Hankey, 6 T. R. 12; Bowring v. Shepherd, L. R. 6 Q. B. 309; Cropper v. Cook, L. R. 3 C. P. 194; Scufance v. Hawley, 13 C. B. N. S. 458; Sumner v. Stewart, 69 Pa. St. 321; Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; s. c., 3 Am. Repr. 125; Rich v. Boyce, 39 Md. 314; Fame Ins. Co. v. Mann, 4 Ill. App. 485; Bailey v. Bensley, 87 Ill., 566; Walker v. Walker, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 425; Higgins v. Moore, 34 N. Y. 417; White v. Fuller, 67 Barb. (N.Y.) 267; Baker v. Drake, 66 N.Y. 518; Gilchrist v. Brooklyn Mfg. Assoc., 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 390; Gallup v. Lederer, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 282; Wanless v. McCandless, 38 Iowa, 20; Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Butler v. Dorman, 68 Mo. 298.

But usage will never be allowed to take the preference over express instructions. Scott v. Rogers. 31 N. Y. 676; Pierce v. Thomas, 4 E. D. Smith (N.Y.), 354.

The agency of a real-estate broker, and his duty to his principal, ceases upon the delivery of the title-papers and payment for the property. Walker v. Derby, 5 Biss. (U.S.) 134.

A broker may sell on credit when it is the usage of trade. Henderson v. Barnewell, 1 Y. & Jerv. 387; Boorman v. Brown, 3 Q. B. 511.

Usage will not authorize brokerage of an illegal or immoral character, as stock-jobbing, smuggling, the procuration of divorces by clandestine and corrupt means, etc. Brown v. Turner, 7 T. R. 631; Steers v. Lashley, 6 T. R. 61; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 441; Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 155; Evans v. Waln, 71 Pa. St. 69; Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. St. 89; Ruchizky v. DeHaven, 97 Pa. St. 202; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 756; Com. v. Cooper, 130 Mass. 285; Pointer v Smith, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137; Foster v. State. 45 Ark. 361; Gregory v. Wilson, 36 N. J. L. 315; s. c., 13 Am. Repr. 448; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33; Pearce v. Foote, 113 Ill. 228; Yerkes v. Salomon, 11 Hun (N.Y.), 473; Gregory v. Wendell, 39 Mich. 337, 40 Mich. 432; Rumsey v. Berry, 65 Me. 574. Compare Smith v. Bouvier, 70 Pa. St. 325.

In the buying and selling of stocks upon margins the brokers employed to conduct such transactions are in Pennsylvania regarded as being engaged in wagering contracts, which the law of that State does not recognize, and they cannot recover in assumpsit for services rendered, or excess over the margin, where the bona fides of the transaction show them to have been of a wagering nature. Stewart v. Garrett, 4 Atl. Repr. (Md.) 399. See Kirkpatrick v. Adams, 20 Fed. Repr. 287; Bennett v. Covington, 22 Fed. Repr. 816; Fortenbury v. State, 1 S. Western Repr. (Ark.) 58.

2. The authority of a broker to sign bought- and sold-notes is implied. Parton v. Crofts, 16 C. B. N. S. 11; Greaves v. Legg, 34 Eng. L. & Eq. 489; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 79. But not the power to submit his principal's case to arbitration. Ingraham v. Whitmore, 75 Ill. 24.

A broker's power to negotiate for the sale of a promissory note implies the power to give all necessary information, and any false representations made in regard to it will bind the principal. McBean v. Fox, 1 Ill. App. 177.

A broker employed to buy or sell has authority to bind his principal by any price he may fairly and honestly agree to,

Power to Receive Payment.—A broker has ordinarily no authority virtute officii to receive payment for property sold by him; and if payment is made to him by the purchaser, it is at his own risk unless from other circumstances the authority can be inferred.[1]

Cannot Make a Contract in his Own Name.—Ordinarily a broker cannot make a contract either to buy or to sell in his own name, but should contract in the name of his principal; and where he contracts in his own name his principal will have the same rights and remedies against a third party as if his name had been disclosed by the broker, and no set-off will be allowed for a debt due by the broker to the third party contracting.[2] except when specially limited. Wilkinson v. Churchill, 114 Mass. 184; East India Co. v. Hensley. 1 Esp. 111.

When not restricted as to the mode of sale he may sell by sample or with warranty, and bind his principal by the sale. Andrews v. Kneeland, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 534; Boorman v. Jenkins, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 566; Waring v. Mason, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 425; The Monte Allegre, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 616. Compare Dodd v. Farlow, 11 Allen (Mass.) 426.

Where defendant, in Council Bluffs, Iowa, appointed a broker in Mobile, Alabama, to sell hams, and the agent took plaintiffs' order for "choice, sugar-cured, canvassed hams," and plaintiffs had no opportunity to inspect the hams, but they were to be shipped from Council Bluffs, and defendant shipped the same and demanded and received payment therefor while they were in transit, held, that the facts amounted to a warranty that the hams shipped were "choice, sugar-cured, canvassed hams." Forcheimer v. Stewart, 65 Iowa, 594.

Except when specially empowered by his instructions or by the usage of trade, a broker has no implied authority to sell on credit. White v. Fuller, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 267; Wiltshire v. Sims, 1 Camp. 258. See Higgins v. Moore, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 344.

Nor, where he is employed to buy, to borrow the money in his principal's name to make the purchase. Bank of Indiana v. Bugbee, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 86.

A broker employed to buy has no implied authority to sell, unless his principal invests him apparently with the legal ownership of the goods sold. McNeilly v. Cont. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 23; Roach v. Turk, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 708.

A broker employed to sell lands has no implied authority to sign a contract for the sale in the name of his principal. Morris v. Ruddy, 20 N. J. Eq. 236; Coleman v. Garrigues, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 60; Glentworth v. Luther, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 145; Roach v. Coe, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 175; Ryon v. McGee, 2 Mackey (D. C.), 17; Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213.

Oral employment of a broker to sell goods implies power to execute such writings as are necessary to execute the agency, but no other writings. Lawrence v. Gallagher, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 309.

The power of a broker to sell does not imply power to rescind the sale when once made. Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 79.

A broker who has obtained a loan for his principal, and holds certain chattels as security therefor, has no implied authority to appropriate the proceeds of said chattels to the payment of a debt due to him by his principal. James's Appeal, 89 Pa. St. 54.

1. Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137; Campbell v. Hassell, 1 Stark. 233; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush (Ky.), 12; Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Gallup v. Lederer, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 710; Bassett v. Lederer, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 671; Higgins v. Moore. 34 N. Y. 417; Doubleday v. Kress, 50 N. Y. 410; Bliss v. Bliss, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 339; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 79; Peck v. Harriott, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 149; Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. St. 513; Morris v. Ruddy. 20 N. J. Eq. 236.

So he has no implied authority to make the freight under a charter-party entered into by him in the name of his principal payable to himself. Walshe v. Provan, 8 Exch. 843.

Payment to the broker does not discharge the buyer from liability to the broker's principal. Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & A. 137; Kymer v. Suwerkropp, 1 Camp. 109.

2. Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137; Fowler v. Hollins, L. R. 7 Q. B. 616; Henderson v. Barnwall, 1 Y. & J. 387; Bostock v. Jardine, 24 L. J. Ex. 142; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 79; Gallup v. Lederer, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 710; Bassett v. Lederer, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 671; Beebee v. Robert, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 413;

3. Liability of Broker to Principal.—Must Obey Instructions.—Like other agents, a broker is bound to obey his instructions in order to bind his principal, and he will be liable in damages if he does not.[1]

Must Use Reasonable Skill and Ordinary Diligence.—A broker is bound to use in the transaction of his business such skill as is ordinarily possessed and employed by persons of common capacity engaged in the same trade or business, and such diligence as persons of common prudence are accustomed to use about their own business and affairs.[2]

s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 132; McKindley v. Dunham, 55 Wis. 515; Graham v. Duckwall. 8 Bush (Ky.), 12; Evans v. Waln, 71 Pa. St. 69; Locke's App., 72 Pa. St. 491; Brown v. Morris, 83 N. Car. 254; Clark v. Smith, 88 Ill. 298; Korneman v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36.

A broker who was not intrusted with the possession of the property contracted in his own name to sell the same to a vendee, who had no knowledge that the broker was not the real owner, but dealt with him as such. The broker notified his principals that he had sold for them, and directed where to ship the property to the purchaser. The owners, without any knowledge that the broker had contracted in his own name, and without any conduct on their part clothing the broker with authority to receive payment for them, or any possession, actual or constructive, of the property, delivered the same to the vendee. Held, payment by the purchaser to the broker under such circumstances is not a bar to the right of recovery by the owner. Crosby v. Hill, 39 Ohio St. 100. Compare Cropper v. Cook, L. R. 3 C. P. 194.

1. Nesbit v. Helser, 49 Mo. 383; Morris v. Ruddy, 20 N. J. Eq. 236; Dav v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Parsons v. Martin, 11 Gray (Mass.), 111; Pickering v. Demerritt, 100 Mass. 416; Hoyt v. Shipherd, 70 Ill. 309; Ward v. Lawrence, 79 Ill. 295.

Where a cotton-broker was authorized to deliver a bill of lading only upon payment of a bill of exchange, it was held that a delivery without such payment could not bind the principal. Stollenwerck v. Thacher, 115 Mass. 224.

Where a broker was instructed to sell real estate and to take part of the purchase-money in cash and part in notes, payable in three, four, and five years, and he received in payment notes payable in three, four, and five years, or before, the principal was held not to be bound by the transaction. Siebold v. Davis, 67 Iowa, 560.

Where he is employed for a single transaction he cannot bind his principal in any other transaction. East India Co. v. Hensley, 1 Esp. Cas. 111; Coddington v. Goddard, 16 Gray (Mass.), 436; Scott v. Rogers, 31 N. Y. 676.

Evidence that some real estate had doubled in value within a year has no tendency to prove that a broker was not authorized to sell during the year at the original price. Wilkinson v. Churchill, 114 Mass. 184.

Where the instructions to a broker are ambiguous or obscure, and he uses his own judgment in the matter, he will not be liable for a misunderstanding of his instructions. Bessent v. Harris, 63 N. Car. 542.

2. Jenkins v. Bethan, 15 C. B. 168; Gheen v. Johnson, 90 Pa. St. 38; Esser v. Linderman, 71 Pa. St. 76; Deshler v. Beers, 32 Ill. 368; Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86; Stewart v. Muse, 62 Ind. 385; Greenleaf v. Moody, 13 Allen (Mass.), 362; Marland v. Stanwood, 101 Mass. 470; Stewart v Drake, 46 N. Y. 449; White v. Smith, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 5; Schepeler v. Eisner, 3 Daly (N.Y.), 11.

But he will not be liable for any mistake he may make where he acts in good faith and uses reasonable skill and diligence. Matthews v. Fuller, 123 Mass. 446; Buddecke v. Alexander, 20 La. Ann. 563; Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86; Pappa v. Rose, L. R. 7 C. P. 32.

A money-lender to whom a sum of money is given to invest is bound to exercise reasonable skill and prudence. By his business he holds himself out as possessing competent skill to determine what reasonable care and prudence required. If he fails to exercise these, and through his negligence loss occurs, he is liable to make it good. McFarland v. McClees, 5 Atl. Repr. (Pa.) 50.

Any loss a principal may have sustained on account of the negligence of his broker may be set off against the latter's claim for commissions. McEwen v. Kerfoot, 37 Ill. 530.

Brokers Cannot Delegate their Authority.—Inasmuch as a principal employs a broker from the opinion he entertains of his personal skill and integrity, a broker has no right, without notice, to turn his principal over to another of whom he knows nothing.[1]

May not Buy from or Sell to Themselves.—A broker employed to sell cannot buy for his own account, neither can a broker employed to buy, buy his own goods even if he acts in good faith, and purchases or sells at a fair market price.[2]

A loan-broker was held liable to a lender on real estate for negligently loaning his principal's money on property which was already encumbered. Shipherd v. Field, 70 Ill. 438.

In an action against a firm of real-estate brokers for negligence in selling a parcel of land belonging to the plaintiff, there was evidence that the land was situated in a State in which neither the plaintiff nor the defendants resided or had a place of business; that the plaintiff employed the defendants to obtain offers for the land; that the defendants employed one O. to obtain an offer; that he reported an offer, which was in fact made in his own behalf, and which was less than the market value of the land, which offer was reported to the plaintiff and accepted by him, and the land conveyed; that one of the defendants at the time of sending the order to the plaintiff, who did not know the value of the land, advised him that the sale was a good one, and the plaintiff relied to some extent on this advice; that the defendants did not in fact know the value, except as they were informed by O., who represented the value to be what was offered; that they did not communicate their want of knowledge to the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff directed one of the defendants to telegraph to his partner to accept the offer "if a good sale." Held, that if the acceptance by the plaintiff was on the condition that the defendants thought it was a good sale, they were not liable if their opinion was honestly formed and no misrepresentation of fact was made; that if the acceptance was conditional on the sale being a good one, and the defendants were informed that the plaintiff relied upon them to decide upon that, they were bound to exercise reasonable care in determining that fact. Barnard v. Coffin, 138 Mass. 37.

Where a broker through negligence loaned his principal's money on a second mortgage while he should have loaned it on a first mortgage, but before the debt became due the lender, with other creditors of the mortgagor, signed a composition releasing him from all liabilities beyond the lien of the mortgage, it was held that this released the broker from his contingent liability to the lender. Nicolai v. Lyon, 8 Oreg. 56.

A broker was employed to effect an exchange of property, and found a customer willing to exchange within a certain time by warranty deed free from encumbrances. He prepared a deed conveying his principal's property, subject to certain taxes, which the customer refused to receive, and kept his principal in ignorance of this refusal until the stipulated time had expired. Held, that his negligence precluded him from recovering his commissions. Fisher v. Dynes, 62 Ind. 348.

An owner of certain unregistered bonds instructed his broker to sell them and to invest the proceeds "in the Central Iowa or any sure road;" adding, "I want registered bonds of which I will have no trouble in drawing the interest;" also, "I shall feel under many obligations if you will kindly make such sale and purchases of bonds as your good sense dictates." The broker bought unregistered Central Iowa bonds which declined in value, in consequence of which the owner lost heavily. Held, that if the broker acted in good faith, the purchase was within the scope of his authority. Matthews v. Fuller, 123 Mass, 446.

1. Cockram v. Irlam, 2 M. & S. 301; Henderson v. Barnewell, 1 Y. & Jerv. 387; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491.

This rule does not apply, however, to mere ministerial acts. Williams v. Woods, 16 Md. 220; Commercial Bank, etc., v. Norton, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 501; Elwell v. Chamberlain, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 230.

2. Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425; Conkey v. Bond, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 276; Tewksbury v. Spruance, 75 Ill. 187; Hughes v. Washington, 72 Ill. 84; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Ruckman v. Bergholz, 38 N. J. L. 531; Sharman v. Brandt, L. R. 6 Q. B. 720; Ex p. Dyster, 1 Meriv. 155; Mollett v. Robinson, L. R. 5 C. P. 655.

If A, after refusing to sell goods to B, a broker, personally delivers the goods to B, upon his representation that they are for an undisclosed principal in good credit, and it turns out that no such principal exists, there is no sale, although the transaction is entered on A's books as a sale to B, and a bill of parcels of the goods is made to him; and A may maintain replevin for the goods against a bona-fide pledgee of B. Rodliff v. Dallinger, 141 Mass. 1.

4. When Agent of Both Parties.—The broker is primarily the agent of the party who employs him, and he becomes the agent of the other party only when the bargain or contract is definitely settled as to its terms between the principals, and is then only the agent of the third party in making the memorandum of sale.[1]

5. Liabilities of Principal.—Principal Liable for Contracts of Broker.—A principal is liable to a third party for all contracts entered into by his broker within the scope of his authority, as defined by direct instructions of which such third party has knowledge, or by the usage and custom of the particular trade in which he is engaged.[2]

A broker cannot sell his principal's goods to a firm of which he is a member. Martin v. Moulton, 8 N. H. 504. And this principle extends even to the broker's clerk, who has access to the correspondence between the broker and his principal. Gardner v. Ogden, 22 N. Y. 327.

A local or temporary custom of a board of trade cannot be set up in defence of a sale to or from the broker. Butcher v. Krauth, 14 Bush (Ky.), 713.

A broker may sell to himself or be the purchaser in behalf of his principal of his own goods, where he communicates the fact to his principal and acts openly and in good faith, and the principal does not object. Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Reed v. Reed, 82 Pa. St. 420; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 42; Edwards v. Goldsmith, 16 Pa. St. 43. And he may recover his commissions in such a case. Grant v. Hardy, 33 Wis. 668. Compare Tower v. O'Neil, 66 Pa. St. 332.

An agreement by a party who wished to buy certain property to convey part of it to the broker employed by the seller, if the broker would put him in communication with the seller, cannot be enforced. Smith v. Townsend, 109 Mass. 500.

1. Henderson v. Barnwall, 1 Y. & J. 387; Wright v. Danah, 2 Camp. 203; Fairbrother v. Simmons, 5 B. & Ald. 333; Greaves v. Legg, 2 Hur. & N. 210; Hinckley v. Arey, 27 Me. 362; Raisin v. Clark, 41 Md. 158; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 66; Coddington v. Goddard, 16 Gray (Mass.), 436; Evans v. Waln. 71 Pa. St. 69; Everhart v. Searle, 71 Pa. St. 256; Schlesinger v. Texas., etc., R. Co., 13 Mo. App. 471; Grant v. Hardy, 33 Wis. 668; Woods v. Rocchi, 32 La. Ann. 210; Cassard v. Hinman, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 8; Pugsley v. Murray, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 245.

A broker cannot act for both parties where their interests conflict; conflict of duty renders such employment incompatible. Watkins v. Cousall, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 65; Dunlop v. Richards, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 181; Pugsley v. Murray, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 245; Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 281; Meyer v. Hanchett, 39 Wis. 419.

2. Story on Agency (9th Ed.), §§ 126, 127; Wiltshire v. Sims, 1 Camp. 258; State v. Delafield, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 527; Bank of Indiana v. Bugbee, 1 App. Dec. (N. Y.) 86.

When a broker is authorized by his non-resident principal to buy cotton of a particular quality, and at a specified price, and to draw on his principal for the purchase-money, the bank to which he applies, and which advances to him in good faith the money to pay for the cotton, taking his draft on his principal, is not bound to inquire whether the price and the quality of the cotton conform to the terms of the order. These matters were submitted to the discretion of the broker, and persons dealing in good faith with him had a right to rely on his representations in reference to them. Whilden v. Merchants', etc., Bank, 64 Ala. 1.

The authority of a broker cannot be limited by private instructions not known to the parties who deal with them. Lobdell v. Baker, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 193; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 358.

When the language of the instructions is ambiguous, they must be taken most strongly against the principal, especially when a construction of which they are fairly susceptible has been placed upon it, and third parties have been induced to act upon such construction. Measured by this rule, it is held that certain letters, authorized by defendant to be written to certain agents in regard to the sale of

6. Compensation.—A broker is entitled to compensation from his employer for services rendered. This compensation is generally in the form of commissions, and is contingent on success.[1]

Transactions must be Complete.—Before a broker can claim his commissions the transaction by which they are alleged to be earned must be completed. But where he has done his part of the transaction and from no fault of his own, but by causes outside of the agent, as by the refusal of the principal to complete the contract, the contract is not consummated, the broker will be entitled to his commissions.[2] lands, were susceptible of a construction which gave the agents authority to make sale of lands, and that defendant was bound to consummate a sale so made to the plaintiff. Hopwood v. Corbin, 63 Iowa, 218.

1. Howland v. Coffin, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; Everhardt v. Searle, 71 Pa. St. 256; Street v. Swain, 21 Ind. 203; McClelland v. Snider, 18 Ill. 58; Bingham v. Hawley, 17 Ill. 38.

Brokers, in the discharge of their agency, are bound only to the exercise of reasonable skill and diligence; and so long as they are guilty of no bad faith, and exercise the same care and diligence that a prudent man would exercise in the management of his own like business, they are entitled to reasonable commissions for their services. Guesnard v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 76 Ala. 453.

In the absence of a definite understanding between the parties, the amount may be fixed by custom or by a jury. Paley's Agency, 101–2; Ruckman v. Bergholz, 38 N. J. L. 531; Erben v. Lorrillard, 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 567; Graham v. Graham, 34 Pa. St. 475; Glenn v. Salter, 50 Ga. 170; Frazer v. Gregg, 20 Ill. 299; Kock v. Emmerling, 22 How. (U. S) 69.

In an action to recover for services rendered in effecting the sale of land located near a large city, evidence as to the character of the land and its possible value as a future suburb of the city is admissible. Forsyth v. Doolittle, 7 Supr. Ct. Rep'r, 408.

One who employs stockbrokers to purchase, carry, and sell stocks on his account, cannot dispute as too high the rates of commissions charged against him for raising money to carry the stock in a stringent money market, where he is informed of their custom in that respect in their dealings, and is kept informed at short intervals of the state of his accounts with them, and he makes no objection at the time. Robinson v. Norris, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 442.

Where a custom exists, it is to be presumed parties deal in view of it, and where no agreement is made as to commissions, that they agree to pay the customary rate. In the absence of such custom and of any agreement as to rate, the measure of compensation would be the value of the services rendered. Potts v. Aechternacht, 93 Pa. St. 138.

A salaried agent who does not act for a fee or rate per cent is not a broker. Portland v. O'Neill, 1 Ore. 218.

The one who employs the broker is liable for the commissions, whether he holds the subject-matter of the brokerage in his own name or as trustee. Jones v. Adler, 34 Md. 440.

A broker was employed to buy certain lots, and agreed with the owner on a certain price, the owner stating he was not willing to pay commissions at that price. The purchaser upon being informed said that he would see to it. Matters remained in this state for about one month, when the purchaser went to the owner and bought the property at the price agreed upon. Held, that the purchaser was liable for the commissions. Lynch v. McKenna, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 42.

The broker's principal must, however, be legally competent to enter into the contract to make him liable for commissions. Cavender v. Waddingham, 5 Mo. App. 457.

2. Mooney v. Elder, 56 N. Y. 238; Moses v Bierling, 31 N.Y. 462; Redfield v. Tegg, 38 N. Y. 212; Hague v. O Connor, 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 287; Wylie v. Marine Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 416; Glentworth v. Luther, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 147; Lyon v. Mitchell, 36 N. Y. 237; Harris v. Burtnett, 2 Daly (N.Y.), 189; Briggs v. Boyd, 56 N. Y. 289; Doty v. Miller, 43 Barb. (N.Y.) 529; Barnard v. Monnott, 42 N.Y. 203; Hart v. Hoffman, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 168; Higgins v. Moore, 34 N. Y. 417; Barnes v. Roberts, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 73; Fraser v. Wyckoff, 63 N. Y. 445; Holly v. Gosling, 3 E. D Smith (N. Y.), 262; Jacobs v. Kolff, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 133; Corning v. Calvert, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 56; Van Lien v. Burns, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 134; Trundey v. N. Y., etc., Steamb. Co., 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 312; Richards v. Jackson, 31 Md. 250; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 49; Kimberly v. Henderson, 29 Md. 512; Jones v. Adler, 34 Md. 440; Ryon v. McGee, 2 Mackey (D. C.), 17; Kock v. Emmerling, 22 How. (U. S.) 69; Colwell v. Springfield Iron Co., 24 Fed. Repr. 631; McGavock v. Woodlief, 20 How. (U. S.) 221; Carter v. Webster, 79 Ill. 435; Rockwell v. Newton, 44 Conn. 333; Royster v. Mageneney, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 148; Hewett v. Brown, 21 Minn. 163; Finnerty v. Fritz, 5 Colo. 174; Gottschalk v. Jennings, 1 La. Ann. 5; s. c., 45 Am. Dec. 70; Santos v. Taney, 13 La. Ann. 151; Blanc v. Improvement Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 63; Didion v. Duralde, 2 Rob. (La.) 163; Anderson v. Weiser, 24 Iowa, 428; Iselin v. Griffith, 62 Iowa, 668; Shepherd v. Hedden, 29 N. J. L. 334; Morris v. Ruddy, 5 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 236; Hinds v. Henry, 36 N. J. L. 328; Treat v. Celis, 41 Cal. 202; Phelan v. Gardner, 43 Cal. 306; Middleton v. Findla, 25 Cal. 76; Duffy v. Hobson, 40 Cal. 240; Neilson v. Lee, 60 Cal. 555; Stewart v. Murray, 92 Ind. 543; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 167; Fisher v. Bell, 91 Ind. 243; Beineke v. Wurgler, 77 Ind. 468; Thomas v. Lincoln, 71 Ind. 41; Bell v. Kaiser, 50 Mo. 150; Timberman v. Craddock, 70 Mo. 638; Tyler v. Pars, 52 Mo. 249; Bailey v. Chapman, 41 Mo. 536; Budd v. Zoller, 52 Mo. 238; Woods v. Stephens, 46 Mo. 555; McArthur v. Slauson, 53 Wis. 41; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Coleman v. Meade, 13 Bush (Ky.), 358; Edwards v. Goldsmith, 16 Pa. St. 43; Tower v. O'Neil, 66 Pa. St. 332; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 42. Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa St. 513; Vanhorn v. Frick, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 90; Chapin v. Bridges, 116 Mass. 105; Drury v. Newman, 99 Mass. 256; Desmond v. Stebbins. 1 New Engl. R. (Mass.) 528; Loud v. Hall. 106 Mass. 404; Gillespie v. Wilder, 99 Mass. 170; Newhall v. Pierce, 115 Mass. 459; Cook v. Fiske, 12 Gray (Mass), 491; Fisk v. Henarie, 9 Pac. Repr. (Oreg.) 322; Gillett v. Corum, 7 Kans. 156.

The plaintiffs were authorized, as the agents of the defendant, to sell his land for the price net to him of $7000, payable one half down and the remainder within one year. The plaintiffs were to have whatever they could obtain in excess of that sum. They secured the execution of a written agreement for the purchase for $7200, to be "paid in cash and mortgage" when the deed should be delivered, but without other provision as to manner of payment. The purchaser tendered to the defendant $3500 in money, and a like amount in notes secured by a mortgage payable within one year, and demanded a deed, which was refused. Held, that the written agreement for the sale was incomplete, and could not be enforced to recover the price named, $7200; and the evidence being insufficient to show the making of a contract for the payment of that sum, or that a purchaser had been procured ready to pay that sum, a verdict for the plaintiff for $200 was not justified. Bradford v. Menard, 28 North Western Repr. (Minn.) 248.

In Walker v. Tirrell, 101 Mass. 257; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 352, the defendant sent a proposal to a broker in these words: "If you send, or cause to be sent, to me, by advertisement or otherwise, any party with whom I may see fit and proper to effect a sale or exchange of my real estate, above described, I will pay you the sum of $200." The broker found a person who proposed to purchase the property, but the sale was not effected, and the court held that the broker was not entitled to his commission.

A person desirous of purchasing certain real estate employed a real-estate broker to negotiate the purchase, and agreed to pay him $3500 in consideration "for his services in connection with the purchase." The agent or broker procured a contract for the sale of the property to be executed by four persons, one of whom had only a life estate in a one-fourth part of the premises, the remainder being in her minor children, so that it became necessary to foreclose a mortgage on the property to pass the title to such fourth interest, which was afterward done. The broker, after having been paid the $3500, as agreed upon, sued his principal to recover for his services in consummating the title, rendered after the date of the contract of sale. Held, that the broker's service did not end, under the contract, with the procuring of the agreement to sell, as the purchase was not then completed, and that he could not recover for subsequent services rendered, whereby the title was in fact acquired. It being uncertain whether the sale could be closed, and the purchaser being desirous of renting the property, the broker secured a lease of it for him, which was cancelled as soon as he acquired the title through the foreclosure, held, that the lease was made in the carrying out of the purpose of acquiring the property by purchase, and that the services of the broker in procuring its execution were to be considered as rendered in connection with the purchase, and as paid for in the $3500 allowed him. It becoming necessary for the purchaser to borrow one half of the purchase-money for the property bought, the broker assisted in negotiating the loan, to enable the purchaser to complete the purchase, without notice that an extra charge should be made therefor, held, that such voluntary service might be treated as connected with the purchase, and as falling under the contract of employment, and that no recovery in addition to the sum agreed upon could be had for such services. Kerfoot v. Steele, 113 Ill. 610.

Under an oral contract, a broker is entitled to compensation if he substantially effects a sale by procuring and introducing a purchaser, to whom the owner sells the land. Desmond v. Stebbins, 140 Mass. 339.

If an agent or broker is employed to sell property at a stated price, and he finds a customer who is able and willing to take the property at that price, and upon the stated terms, he is entitled to compensation whether a sale is effected or not; or, if the undertaking is simply to find a customer, the broker will be entitled to compensation if he furnishes a purchaser who is ready and willing to buy, and to whom the principal makes a sale. Casady v. Seely, 29 N. Western Repr. (Iowa), 932.

Where the price of property and the terms of payment are fixed by the seller, and the broker engages to procure a purchaser at that price and upon those terms, if, upon the procurement of the broker, a purchaser is produced, with whom the seller himself negotiates and effects a sale, although the terms may be changed, and even the sale itself finally abandoned, he is entitled to his commission. And he is also in such case entitled to his commission, even although the seller see fit to let the contract rest in parol, whereby he may be unable to enforce it. Potvin v. Curran, 13 Nebr. 302.

Plaintiff was employed by defendant to find some person with whom he could trade a certain lot for other property, defendant agreeing to make the trade himself if the proper person were produced by plaintiff. After such person was found and a sealed contract for the exchange was made, plaintiff told defendant that he would not charge any commission for his services unless the trade went through and was consummated. The trade never was consummated. Held, that plaintiff was nevertheless entitled to his commissions, his verbal promise not to charge commissions being without a consideration and after he had performed his part of the contract. Little v. Rees, 26 N. Western Repr. (Minn.) 7; Bach v. Emerick, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 548.

It is said in Vinton v. Baldwin, 88 Ind. 104; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 447, that a broker employed to procure a loan for a commission is entitled to his commission on finding a person able and willing to make the loan, although the principal declined to take it. See Budd v. Zoller, 52 Mo. 238.

Where a property owner contracted with a real-estate agent that the latter should not only find a purchaser for his property, but also make actual sale of the same, on terms stated, before claiming commissions, it was necessary for the agent to complete the sale; he must find a purchaser in a situation, and ready and willing to complete the purchase on the terms agreed on; upon doing this, he would be entitled to commissions, although the vendor should refuse to perfect the sale. But where the agent carried a proposition to purchase from a proposed buyer to the owner, and the latter indorsed upon it "Accepted," this did not entitle the agent to commissions, where the trade was not consummated, without fault on the part of the principal. Hyams v. Miller, 71 Ga. 608.

One authorized as agent to sell land, but without power to convey, who has procured a purchaser, and bound him by contract to purchase the land upon the terms prescribed by the principal, or upon such modified terms as the principal has elected to accept and ratify, has performed his duty, and is entitled to the stipulated compensation. Having bound the parties by an authorized contract, any inability or refusal of the principal to consummate the contract which he had authorized should not affect the agent's rights to compensation. Gross v. Stevens, 32 Minn. 472; Love v. Miller, 53 Ind. 294; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 192; Mooney v. Elder, 56 N.Y. 238; Knapp v. Wallace, 41 N.Y. 477; Stillman v. Mitchell, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 523; Higgins v. Moore, 34 N. Y. 417; Heinrich v. Korn, 4 Daly (N.Y.), 74; Barnard v. Monnot, 3 Keyes (N.Y.), 203; Chapin v. Bridges, 116 Mass. 105; Drury v. Newman, 99 Mass. 256; Cook v. Fiske, 12 Gray (Mass.). 491; Rice v. Mayo, 107 Mass. 550; Middleton v. Findla, 25 Cal. 76; Delaplaine v. Turnley, 44 Wis. 31; Phelan v. Gardner, 43 Cal. 306; Nesbit v. Helser, 49 Mo. 383.

In O'Connor v. Semple, 57 Wis. 243, where S. agreed to pay O. a certain sum if he would sell certain lands, or find a purchaser for them, within a specified

Failure of Principal to Make a Good Title.—The broker will be entitled to his commissions where the purchaser refuses to complete the sale on account of the failure of the principal to make a good title, or on account of misrepresentations of the principal, no fault or knowledge of the agent being proved.[1] time, it was held that if, within the time limited, O. made a sale to a responsible party, and within a reasonable time thereafter gave notice to S., and produced the purchaser, who was ready and willing to complete the purchase on S.'s terms, O. was entitled to recover the agreed compensation, although he did not produce the purchaser in time, so that all the papers necessary to complete the sale could be executed within the time specified.

But see Watson v. Brooks, 11 Oreg. 271, where it was held that a broker could not recover commissions who was employed to sell land within a certain specified time and who on the last day brought a purchaser willing to buy if he could have a reasonable time to investigate the title, which was refused. See also McCarthy v. Cavers, 66 Iowa, 342.

Where a broker, employed to effect a sale of property, has found a purchaser of sufficient responsibility willing to take upon the terms named, he has performed his contract and is entitled to his commissions. If a broker is required to furnish the vendor with the name of the purchaser as a condition precedent to his right to recover commissions, when the vendor interposes no objection on that ground but absolutely disaffirms the sale, he thereby waives the right to insist upon the condition. Duclos v. Cunningham, 102 N. Y. 678.

A principal employed a broker to buy, stipulating that the broker was to look to the vendor for his commissions. The broker found one willing to sell on these terms, but the principal refused to take the property. Held, that under these circumstances he was liable to the broker for his commissions. Cavender v. Waddingham, 2 Mo. App. 551.

Where a broker produced certain parties willing to buy his principal's land, and the principal entered into negotiations with them, and left them a fixed time in which to decide, and the principal sold the land to other parties before the expiration of this time, the broker was held to be entitled to his commissions. Reed v. Reed, 82 Pa. St. 420; Lane v. Albright, 49 Ind. 275.

But where an exchange is not consummated on account of a refusal by the broker's principal to complete the transaction, the other party having made a material misstatement as to the amount of encumbrance on his property, the broker was held not to be entitled to his commissions. Rockwell v. Newton, 44 Conn. 333.

Where property is left in the hands of a broker for sale, a successful negotiation for its exchange will entitle him to his commissions. Hewett v. Brown, 21 Minn. 163; Redfield v. Tegg, 38 N. Y. 212.

Where a broker sells goods to arrive, he is entitled to his commissions as soon as a contract for the sale of the goods has been made, although the sale is never perfected on account of the non-arrival of the goods. Paulsen v. Dallett, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 40.

A broker is not entitled to commissions when the customer through no fault of the seller refuses to complete the contract; but it is different where the customer had entered into a contract binding on both parties, or into an agreement to pay a stipulated sum as damages in case of refusal to complete the contract. Leete v. Norton, 43 Conn. 219; Coleman v. Meade, 13 Bush (Ky.), 358; Veazie v. Parker, 72 Me. 443; Pearson v. Mason, 120 Mass. 53; Rice v. Mayo, 107 Mass. 550; Knapp v. Wallace, 41 N. Y. 477; Simonson v. Kissick, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 143; Mooney v. Elder, 56 N. Y. 238; Haines v. Bequer, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 51; Love v. Miller, 53 Ind. 294; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 192; Lane v. Albright, 49 Ind. 275.

Where a broker, employed to sell real estate within "a short time," found a purchaser to take at the price fixed by the vendor, the vendee paying down a small sum to bind the bargain, and no notice being given the broker of withdrawal or change of terms, held, that two weeks was reasonable time within which to find a purchaser, and that a rise in value was no defence against the broker seeking to recover commissions. Smith v. Fairchild, 7 Colo. 510.

1. Glentworth v. Luther, 21 Barb. (N Y.) 145; Doty v. Miller, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 529; Knapp v. Wallace, 41 N. Y. 477; Allen v. James, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 13; Smith v. Monney, 14 Week. Dig. (N. Y.) 237; Schwartze v. Yearley, 31 Md. 270; De Santos v. Taney, 13 La. Ann. 151; Phelan v. Gardner, 43 Cal. 311; Gonzales v. Broad, 57 Cal. 224; Middleton v. Findla.

Broker must Act in Good Faith.—The rule that a real-estate broker's commission is earned whenever a party is procured who will comply with the terms of the principal is to be enforced only when the agent acts with the utmost good faith towards his principal.[1]

Broker must have been the Procuring Cause.—The broker to be entitled to commissions must have been the procuring cause of the transaction; and it does not matter how slight his services had been or how great his exertions he can only recover when the sale resulted from them.[2] 25 Cal. 76; Cook v. Welch, 9 Allen (Mass.), 350; Cook v. Fiske, 12 Gray (Mass), 491; Topping v. Healey, 3 F. & F. 325.

A real-estate agent employed to procure a purchaser of real estate, but not to execute a contract on behalf of the seller, is entitled to his compensation where it appears that he has procured such purchaser, able, ready, and willing to make and complete the purchase upon the terms stipulated between such agent and his principal, though in consequence of the default of the seller, or his inability to make a good title, no sale is finally consummated. And where it appeared as a part of the terms and conditions stipulated between the vendor and his agents, upon which a purchaser was to be procured, that it was understood that the vendor's wife should unite in the sale, and also in a warranty deed of the premises (it being necessary to a good title), and a purchaser was procured by such agents, ready and willing to take the property and complete the purchase on such terms, but the sale was not consummated through the vendor's failure to comply with such conditions, and because of the refusal of the wife to ratify and consent to such sale, held, that a prima facie case was made in behalf of such agents for a recovery against their principal for their compensation. Hamlin v. Schulte, 27 N.Westn. Repr. (Minn.) 301; Clapp v. Hughes, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 382.

But where the purchaser refuses to complete the sale without the fault or negligence on the part of the principal on account of a supposed defect in the title, the broker cannot recover. Blankenship v. Ryerson, 50 Ala. 426.

1. Segar v. Parrish, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 672; Vennum v. Gregory, 21 Iowa, 326; Coleman v. Meade, 13 Bush (Ky.), 358; Bach v. Emerick, 35 N. Y. Super Ct. 548.

Where an owner employed an agent to sell his property for $140,000, and a purchaser entered into an agreement with the agent to purchase at that price on condition that the agent should endeavor to induce the owner to sell at a lower figure, and conceal from him the agreement, the concealment of the agreement, and efforts by the agent to induce the owner to sell at a lower sum, showed such a lack of good faith that the agent was not entitled to recover commissions from the vendor. Pratt v. Patterson, 112 Pa. St. 475.

2. Shepherd v. Hedden, 29 N. J. L. 334; Gillespie v. Wilder, 99 Mass. 170; Pope v. Beals, 108 Mass. 561; Cook v. Fiske, 12 Gray (Mass.), 491; Woods v. Stephens, 46 Mo. 555; Doonan v. Ives, 73 Ga. 295; Earp v. Cummins, 54 Pa. St. 394; Pratt v. Bank, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 378; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Wylie v. Marine Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 415; Lloyd v. Matthews, 51 N. Y. 124; Sussdorff v. Schmidt, 55 N. Y. 319; Barnard v. Monnot, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 108; McClave v. Paine, 49 N.Y. 561; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 431; Moses v. Bierling, 31 N. Y. 462; Redfield v. Tegg, 38 N. Y. 212; Chilton v. Butler, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 150; Stillman v. Mitchell, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 523; Arnold v. Wood, 13 Week. Dig. (N. Y.) 302; Arrington v. Cary, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 609; Carter v. Webster, 79 Ill. 435; Kimberly v. Henderson, 29 Md. 513; Jones v. Adler, 34 Md. 440; Lincoln v. McClatchie, 36 Conn. 136; Durkee v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 29 Vt. 127; Mansell v. Clements, L. R. 9 C. P. 139. Compare Charlton v. Wood, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 19.

Where a person desiring a loan makes an application in writing, upon which is an indorsement authorizing a single broker to procure the loan, and the broker leaves copies of such application with a number of persons, one of whom, induced by such application, without the broker's knowledge lends the money, the broker is entitled to his commissions. Derrickson v. Quinby, 43 N. J. L. 373.

Where a broker who has property for sale for his principal advertises it and gives information about it to a third party, who communicates such information to a friend, and the friend afterwards buys directly from the principal, the broker is entitled to his commissions. Lincoln v. McClatchie, 36 Conn. 136; Anderson v. Cox, 16 Nebr. 10. See Newhall v. Pierce, 115 Mass. 457.

An auctioneer and estate agent was employed to sell an estate, under an agreement by which he was to receive a commission of two and a half per cent if the estate should be sold, and in case the estate should not be sold he was to be paid 25*l.* as a compensation for his trouble and expense. Having put up the estate to auction and failed to sell it, the agent, being asked by a person who had attended the sale who was the owner of the property, referred him to his principal; and ultimately that person, without any further intervention of the agent, became the purchaser. Held, that, the sale having been effected through the means of the agent, he was entitled to the stipulated commission. Green v. Bartlett, 14 C. B. N. S. 681; 32 L. J. C. P. 261.

It is not necessary that the principal should know that the purchaser is the broker's customer. It is the principal's duty to inquire whence the customer derived his information. Lloyd v. Matthews, 51 N. Y. 124; Durkee v. Vermont Centr. R. Co., 29 Vt. 127; Hanford v. Shapter, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 243.

Where the broker procures a party ready and willing to buy, but the principal takes the further proceedings out of his hands and completes the sale himself or through another, the broker has earned his compensation. Gottschalk v. Jennings, 1 La. Ann. 5; s. c., 45 Am. Dec. 70; Levistones v. Landreaux, 6 La. Ann. 26; Winans v. Jaques, 10 Daly (N.Y.), 487; Martin v. Silliman, 53 N. Y. 615; Ludlow v. Carman, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 107; McGavock v. Woodlief, 20 How. (U. S.) 221; Gillespie v. Wilder, 99 Mass. 170; Bornstein v. Lans, 104 Mass. 214; Loud v. Hall, 106 Mass. 404; Newhall v. Pierce, 115 Mass. 457; Chapin v. Bridges, 116 Mass. 105; Delaplaine v. Turnley, 44 Wis. 31; Dolan v. Scanlan, 57 Cal. 261; Bailey v. Chapman, 41 Mo. 536; Timberman v. Craddock, 70 Mo. 638; Shepherd v Hedden, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 334; Arrington v. Cary, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 609; Gillett v. Corum, 7 Kans. 156.

The duty of a broker employed to sell property is to bring the buyer and seller to an agreement. While it is not essential that he should be present and an active participator in the agreement or sale when it is actually concluded, to entitle him to his commissions he must produce a purchaser ready and willing to enter into a contract on the employer's terms. He is not entitled to commissions for unsuccessful efforts to effect a sale, unless the failure is caused by the fault of the principal. Sibbald v. Bethlehem Iron Co., 83 N. Y. 378; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 441.

Merely putting a purchaser on the track of property is not equivalent to presenting him to the seller so as to entitle the broker to commissions. Sievers v. Griffin, 14 Ill. App. 63.

The defendant employed the plaintiff as a real-estate broker to sell his estate. The plaintiff rendered some services in attempting to sell the estate to P., who at one time thought of buying it, but abandoned the idea. A subscription was raised for the purpose of preserving the building standing on the estate as an historical monument. A committee of the subscribers employed C. as their agent, and he entered into negotiations for the property which resulted in an agreement by the defendant to sell it. Neither the plaintiff nor P. had any connection with these negotiations. The subscriptions were not sufficient to pay the price agreed upon, and it was necessary to borrow a large sum of money upon a mortgage of the estate. The lender required that the mortgage note should be signed by some known responsible person, and thereupon the committee induced P. to take the conveyance to himself and to sign the mortgage and note. Held, that P. was not a purchaser of the estate, even if the information furnished him by the plaintiff induced him to take the position he did in regard to the property, within the meaning of a usage that a broker, whose services are accepted by the seller, and who introduces the seller to a purchaser, is entitled to a commission upon the amount for which the estate is sold, if ultimately purchased by the person so introduced, whether the sale is finally effected by the same broker or by another person. Viaux v. Old South Soc., 133 Mass. 1.

Where the efforts of the broker do not effect the sale, and after the proposed purchaser has decided not to buy other parties induce him to buy, the broker will not be entitled to commissions. Earp v. Cummins, 54 Pa. St. 394; Doonan v. Ives, 73 Ga. 295; Wylie v. Marine Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 416; Harris v. Burtnett, 2 Daly (N. Y.). 189. See Bennett v. Kidder, 5 Daly (N. Y.). 512.

Where the broker has been allowed a Principal may Negotiate Himself.—A party having employed a broker to sell real estate, may, notwithstanding, negotiate himself, and if he does so without any agency of the broker, he is not liable to the latter for a commission. To entitle the broker to his commission, he must be an efficient agent in, or the procuring cause of, the contract of sale.[1] reasonable time to procure a purchaser and effect a sale, and has failed so to do, and the principal in good faith has terminated the agency, and sought other assistance by means of which a sale is consummated, the fact that the purchaser is one whom the broker introduced, and that the sale was in some degree aided by his previous unsuccessful efforts, does not give him a right to commissions. Defendant employed plaintiff, a broker, to sell the steel rails of its manufacture to the G. T. R. Co. After various unsuccessful negotiations for a sale, carried on during a period of four months, between that company and plaintiff, during which defendant had fixed its prices several times, upon receipt of a telegram from said company, asking upon what terms one thousand tons of defendant's rails would be delivered, plaintiff telegraphed to defendant asking its lowest terms. Defendant declined to fix a price or to negotiate further through plaintiff; and the latter thereupon telegraphed to the G. T. R. Co. that defendant declined to name a price. Subsequently a sale was made by defendant to said company through another broker. Upon the trial of an action to recover commissions, the court was requested to charge that defendant had the right, under the circumstances, to refuse to use the services of plaintiff if the action was taken in good faith and without intent to deprive him of his commissions. The court so charged, with the qualification, however, that defendant had no right, acting either in good or bad faith, to avail itself of what plaintiff had done, to make a sale through other agencies. Held, that the qualification was error; that defendant had the right to terminate the agency as it did; and, if done in good faith, plaintiff had no right to compensation although his efforts were of benefit in the subsequent successful negotiation. Sibbald v. Bethlehem Iron Co., 83 N. Y. 378; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 441.

A broker who was fully aware of a defect in the title of the land he had for sale introduced a customer to his principal. The customer finding the title defective refused to complete the sale, when it was decided between them to sell the land at auction as a means to cure the defective title, the customer agreeing to bid a certain sum. At auction the land sold at a higher price to another party. Held, that the broker was not entitled to commissions for procuring the first customer, as he did not complete the sale; and that he could not claim any commissions on the auction sale because his agency in bringing it about was too remote. Tombs v. Alexander, 101 Mass. 255; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 349.

A broker who was employed to sell real estate called the attention of a customer to it, who jointly with a friend negotiated for the sale but did not succeed in coming to terms. Two or three months after the negotiations were broken off, the friend, without the interference of the broker, bought the property. Held, that the latter was not entitled to commissions. Armstrong v. Wann, 29 Minn. 126.

A broker received an offer of $5000 for a certain property, which he advised his principal not to accept. The principal afterwards sold it to the same party without the interference of the broker for $5300. Held, that the broker was not entitled to commissions, the principal being the procuring cause. White v. Twitchings, 26 Hun (N. Y.), 503.

1. McClave v. Paine, 49 N. Y. 561; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 431; Chilton v. Butler, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 150; Wylie v. Marine Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 415; Lloyd v. Matthews, 51 N. Y. 125; Barnard v. Monnot, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 108; Stewart v. Murray, 92 Ind. 543; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 167; Hungerford v. Hicks, 39 Conn. 259; Dolan v. Scanlan, 57 Cal. 261; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 42.

But the principal may not take negotiations out of the hand of his broker and complete them and refuse to pay commissions, specially where the broker has a reasonable time in which to make the sale. Lane v. Albright, 49 Ind. 275; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 42; Reed v. Reed, 82 Pa. St. 420; Briggs v. Boyd, 56 N. Y. 289; Doonan v. Ives, 73 Ga. 295.

And where the principal pending such negotiations reduces the price and sells at a lower price than he had authorized

Employment of Several Brokers.—Where a principal employs more than one broker, the several brokers act independently from each other; the one who first completes the sale is entitled to the commission, and such sale instantaneously revokes the authority of all the others. A subsequent sale will be subject to the risk of such revocation, and no action for damages will lie in such case unless the nature of the contract between the broker and the principal is such as to estop the principal.[1] the broker to sell for, the latter will be entitled to pro-rata commissions. Martin v. Silliman, 53 N. Y. 615; Lawrence v. Atwood, 1 Ill. App. 217; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Jones v. Adler, 34 Md. 440; Richards v. Jackson, 31 Md. 250; Lincoln v. McClatchie, 36 Conn. 136; Nesbit v. Helser, 49 Mo. 383; Lane v. Albright, 49 Ind. 275; Arrington v. Cary, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 609. Compare McArthur v. Slauson, 53 Wis. 41.

A employed B to find purchasers for a certain number of shares of stock at a price named, and agreed to pay him a commission of a certain per cent on the sale. B negotiated with C for the purchase of the stock, and D was subsequently consulted with by C, and later by B, as to joining in the purchase. D suggested E as an associate, and afterwards called his attention to the matter. While these negotiations for a sale were pending, A informed B that he had sold the stock to other persons, and could not sell to C and his associates; but afterwards, at the request of B and C, A transferred the shares to C, D, and E, as a sale in one "block," and at a lower price than that originally fixed by him, though B had nothing to do with such reduction in price. Held, in an action by B against A, that B was entitled to recover a commission on the shares so sold. Dexter v. Campbell, 137 Mass. 198.

Where the principal sells only part of the subject-matter of the brokerage, the broker will be entitled to commissions on the part so sold. Wood v. Stephens, 46 Mo. 555; Bailey v. Chapman, 41 Mo. 536; Kimberley v. Henderson, 29 Md. 512.

Where a broker opens negotiations for a sale, but fails to complete and abandons them, and the owner afterwards sells the property to the same customer, the broker cannot claim commissions. Lipe v. Ludewick, 14 Ill. App. 372; Doonan v. Ives, 73 Ga. 295; Wylie v. Mar. Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 415; Chandler v. Sutton, 5 Daly (N. Y.), 112; Lane v. Albright, 49 Ind. 275.

1. Ahern v. Baker, 24 N. Western Repr. (Minn.) 341; Maracella v. Odell, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 123; Dreyer v. Ranch, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 22; Vreeland v. Vetterlein, 33 N. J. L. 247; Glenn v. Davidson, 37 Md. 365. Compare Fox v. Rouse, 47 Mich. 558.

If the owner has several agents appointed to sell the same land, and one of them finds a purchaser, and negotiates with him to sell the land at a certain stipulated price and on terms differing from those specified in the authority to sell, and when the sale is about to be consummated, another agent of the owner meets the same person, who talks to him about the offer of the first agent, and with full knowledge of the negotiations of the first agent, the second agent sells the same property to such person for a less price, but on the same terms as to cash down and time in which to pay the deferred payments, and the owner is ignorant of the negotiations of the first agent with the purchaser, but ratifies the sale by the second agent, made on the terms proposed by the first, he is not liable to the second but to the first agent, and should pay him a reasonable compensation for procuring said sale. Reynolds v. Tompkins, 23 W. Va. 229, 235.

Notice of a change of purpose to one of the brokers does not affect the others. Lloyd v. Matthews, 51 N. Y. 124, 131.

In an action brought by a real-estate broker to recover compensation for selling a certain piece of land, it was shown that the defendant had previously owned the land; that he put it into the hands of this broker, and also in the hands of another broker, for sale; that the land was sold, and that the plaintiff in the action was the primary, efficient, and procuring cause of the sale; and that the defendant had full notice of this fact; but that the defendant, on the trial, claimed that the plaintiff had not made the sale, but that it was made by the other broker, and asked the court to instruct the jury as follows: "Where several brokers are openly employed to effect the sale of the same property, the entire duty of the seller is performed by remaining neutral

Customer must be Ready to Buy on Terms Stipulated.—Where a broker finds a customer, the latter must not only be ready and willing to buy to entitle the broker to his commissions, but he must be ready and willing to buy on the terms specified by the principal to the broker, unless the principal himself changes such terms or ratifies any other terms the broker may have made.[1] between them; and he has the right to make the sale to a buyer produced by either or any of them, without being called upon to decide between these several agents as to which of them was the primary cause of the purchase;" and the court refused to give the instruction. Held, that although said instruction may be good law for some cases, yet that, under the circumstances of this case, it is not good law for this case, and that the court below did not err in refusing to give it. Eggleston v. Austin, 27 Kans. 246. See Vreeland v. Vetterlein, 33 N. J. L. 247.

Where one of the brokers negotiated for the sale of the property but without success, and the negotiations were broken off, and afterwards another broker succeeded in selling the property to the same customer, and the jury found that the sale was accomplished wholly through the efforts of the second broker, the first one was held not to be entitled to commissions. Livezey v. Miller, 61 Md. 336; Chandler v. Sutton, 5 Daly (N. Y.), 112; Smith v. McGovern, 65 N. Y. 574.

An agreement to sell real estate was made by a broker and the owner. After some time the broker stated that he could not sell, but subsequently informed another broker that the property was for sale, and through the latter a sale was effected. Held, that the first broker was not entitled to commissions. Holley v. Townsend, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 34. See Ward v. Fletcher, 124 Mass. 224.

Where a real-estate agent enters into a written contract with the owner of land that his farm shall be left with him for sale for the term of two months, and that in case of a sale within the time, whether made by the agent, the landowner, or others, the agent is to receive a commission of 5 per cent, and within the two months the agent does not produce to the owner a purchaser who is ready and willing to take the farm and pay the money upon the terms prescribed in the special contract, the agent cannot, under the contract, recover anything for his services, although he has made efforts to sell the farm, and the person subsequently buying the farm had his attention first called thereto by the agent, and was by him introduced to the land-owner as one who wanted to buy the farm, if the delay in making the sale to the purchaser has not been caused by any negligence, fault, or fraud of the land-owner. Fultz v. Wimer, 34 Kans. 576; Coleman v. Meade, 13 Bush (Ky.), 358; Charlton v. Wood, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 19.

1. Schmidt v. Baumann, 30 N. Western Repr. (Minn.) 765; Nesbit v. Helser, 49 Mo. 383; Coleman v. Meade, 13 Bush (Ky.), 358; Williams v. McGraw, 52 Mich. 480; Wylie v. Marine Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 415; Sibbald v. Bethlehem Iron Co., 83 N. Y. 378; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 441; Satterthwaite v. Vreeland, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 152; Briggs v. Rowe, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 189; Rees v. Spruance, 45 Ill. 308; Menifee v. Higgins, 57 Ill. 50; Bash v. Hill, 62 Ill. 216; Clendenon v. Pancoast, 75 Pa. St. 213; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Schwartze v. Yearly, 31 Md. 270; Jones v. Adler, 34 Md. 440; McGavock v. Woodlief, 20 How. (U. S.) 221.

Where plaintiffs entered into a contract to sell for defendant certain lands at and upon certain designated prices and terms, and afterwards they showed the lands to a third party, stating the prices at which they could be bought, and pointing out the advantages and profits which would accrue to a purchaser, but the third party entered into no negotiations with the plaintiffs, but resorted to the defendant, and began negotiations with it, which resulted in the sale to him of the whole list of lands at prices lower than those at which plaintiffs were authorized to sell, and defendant had no knowledge that the purchaser's attention had been called to the lands by plaintiffs, but, upon the opening of negotiations with the third party, it informed plaintiffs that the lands were, for the time being, withdrawn from sale through them, to await the result of such negotiations, held that plaintiffs could not recover under their contract a commission on the sale to such third party, because they had not found a purchaser on the terms named in the contract, and defendant did not accept what they did as performance—not knowing, until long afterwards, that they had done anything which tended to bring

Customer must be Responsible.—Not only must the broker, in order to earn his commissions, find a customer who is willing to buy at the terms given by the principal, but he must also be financially responsible, and able to respond in damages in case of breach of contract.[1] about the sale to the third party. Blodgett v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 63 Iowa, 606.

Defendant, owning a building in which he and his wife resided, and a lease of the ground upon which the same was situate, employed plaintiffs, by written memoranda, to procure for him a purchaser thereof for the price of $25,000, as follows: $5000 cash; $5000 on or before 5 years; and $15,000 on or before 10 years, with semi-annual interest at 7 per cent per annum on the deferred payments. No other terms, conditions, or particulars of sale were specified in the memoranda. Plaintiffs procured a purchaser on the terms above mentioned, but added the following stipulations: "Possession to be given April 1, 1883; and we hereby agree to convey said building, and all our rights named, by good and sufficient warranty deed, on or before March 20, 1883 and at the same time to assign, by sufficient instrument in writing, to him the lease of the ground, subject to all its terms and conditions." Held that the broker was not entitled to commissions. Hamlin v. Schulte, 31 Minn. 486.

If an agent with authority to sell, upon a certain commission, in the event of a sale, procures a purchaser at the price and on the terms authorized, who would have taken the property at the price, and the owner of the property steps in, ignores the agent, and sells to the purchaser so secured, at the same price and on the same terms, or for a less price, and on the terms proposed to the purchaser by the agent, even if they were different from the terms stipulated in the authority to sell, the owner is liable to pay to the agent the amount of commission stipulated to be paid. Reynolds v. Tompkins, 23 W. Va. 229, 235.

The plaintiff was employed by the defendant, without power of attorney to convey, "to sell" real estate, for the price of $8000; "$3000 cash," and the balance ($5000) at a future time specified. His compensation was agreed upon. Held, that the agent completely executed this authority, and earned the stipulated compensation, when he procured a purchaser, and bound him by contract to the performance of the specified conditions, although no money was paid. The terms, "$3000 cash," do not import in such case the payment of any money until the owner should transfer the property by his deed of conveyance. Goss v. Broom, 31 Minn. 484.

Where A promises to pay B a certain sum if he will produce a purchaser of A's property at a specified price, B cannot recover on such promise without producing a person able and willing to pay such price. The stipulation as to price is not waived by A's selling the property for a less price to a person produced by B, unless he does so with knowledge that such person is able and willing to pay the price stipulated in the contract between A and B. McArthur v. Slauson, 53 Wis. 41. Compare Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344.

Plaintiff and defendant, the owner of a patent, entered into an agreement whereby defendant agreed to pay plaintiff $1500 provided he should procure a customer who would pay $17,500 for said patent, or ten per cent on any less sum defendant might agree to take. In pursuance of said agreement plaintiff procured two parties who went into partnership with defendant for the purpose of selling rights under said patent and operating it. The firm were to pay defendant $15,000 as follows: Twenty-five per cent of the net profits to be realized from the sale of rights, and twenty per cent of the net profits to be realized from operating it, until the whole amount should be paid. Held, that this agreement was not such a sale as was contemplated under the agreement, and that plaintiff was not entitled to commissions. Fraser v. Wyckoff, 63 N. Y. 445.

1. Coleman v. Meade, 13 Bush (Ky.), 358; Pratt v. Hotchkiss, 10 Ill. App. 603.

Where, by the terms of a contract, a real estate agent, upon "finding a purchaser" for a tract of land, was to receive certain compensation for his services, and he found one who said that he would take the land, but the owner, having then sold the land to another, was unable to make a deed to the agent's alleged purchaser, held, that the agent could not recover the agreed compensation, without showing that the purchaser found by him was in a condition to comply with the contract, or to respond in damages for a

Broker Must Show Express Appointment.—A broker to be entitled to commissions must be actually employed by the principal. Mere voluntary services, which result in a sale, will not be sufficient.[1]

Expenses.—The broker is not only entitled to his commissions, but also to be reimbursed for expenses and losses incurred in behalf of and in the service of his principal.[2]

Cannot Recover Commissions from Both Parties.—A broker is bound to employ his skill and best efforts in the interest of his immediate employer, and therefore it is unlawful for him to act also as agent for the other party, and to receive commissions from him also.[3] failure so to do. Iselin v. Griffith, 62 Iowa, 668.

The burden of proof that the customer is not pecuniarily responsible is, however, upon the principal. Goss v. Broom, 31 Minn. 484; Cook v. Krolmeke, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 268; Hart v. Hoffman, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 168.

1. Atwater v. Lockwood, 39 Conn. 45; Pierce v. Thomas, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 354; Glenn v. Davidson, 37 Md. 365; Hinds v. Henry, 36 N. J. L. 328; Cook v. Welch, 9 Allen (Mass.), 350; Platt v. Patterson, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 135; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 42; Morrow v. Allison, 39 Ala. 70.

The appointment may, however, be inferred from a ratification of the broker's acts. Low v. Connecticut, etc., R. Co., 46 N. H. 284.

In California a real-estate broker cannot, in consequence of the statute, recover reasonable compensation for services performed by him in negotiating for defendant an exchange of real property, unless the agreement authorizing him to perform the services was in writing, subscribed by the defendant. Myres v. Surryhue, 8 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 523; Schuller v. Farquarson, 6 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 86; Pacific L. & T. Co. v. Blockman, 11 Pac. C. L. J. 24; McCarthy v. Loupe, 62 Cal. 299.

In a suit by a broker against a corporation to recover commissions, he must establish his employment by a competent party authorized to bind the corporation, or prove a subsequent knowledge of, adoption, and ratification of his services by the corporation. Twelfth Street Market Co. v. Jackson, 102 Pa. St. 269.

A contract with a real-estate broker to pay him a certain sum in case he finds a purchaser for designated real estate at a price fixed, need not be in writing, and the broker, upon producing a purchaser ready, able, and willing to purchase at the price and on the terms fixed, with notice thereof to his employer, is entitled to his commission, though the employer may refuse to sell. Fischer v. Bell, 91 Ind. 243.

To recover for commissions, a broker must prove direct authority or employment by the principal, not the mere ordinary agency of a wife for her husband. Harper v. Goodall, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 288.

2. Lacey v. Hill, L. R. 18 Eq. 182.

A broker who knowingly acts for parties who make mere bets or wagers on the future state of the market cannot recover his losses in such transactions. McLean v. Stuve, 15 Mo. App. 317.

3. Lynch v. Fallon, 11 R. I. 311; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 458; Raisin v. Clark, 41 Md. 158; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 66; Schwartze v. Yearly, 31 Md. 270; Holcomb v. Weaver, 136 Mass. 265; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 756; Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 459; Follansbee v. O'Reilly, 135 Mass. 80; Smith v. Townshend, 109 Mass. 500; Walker v. Osgood, 98 Mass. 348; Lloyd v. Colston, 5 Bush (Ky.), 587; Mullen v. Keetzlieb, 7 Bush (Ky.), 253; Everhart v. Searle, 71 Pa. St. 256; Simonds v. Hoover, 35 Ind. 412; Railroad Co. v. Pattison, 15 Ind. 70; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Walworth Co. Bank v. Farmer's Trust, etc., Co., 16 Wis. 629; Scribner v. Collar, 40 Mich. 375; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 541; Redfield v. Tegg, 38 N. Y. 212; Pugsley v. Murray, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 245; Seigel v. Gould, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 177; Finnerty v. Fritz, 5 Colo. 174; Bates v. Copeland, 4 MacArthur (D. C.), 50; Robbins v. Sears, 23 Fed. Repr. 874; Atlee v. Fink, 75 Mo. 100; Byrd v. Hughes, 84 Ill. 174; Shepherd v. Hedden, 29 N. J. L. 334; Harrington v. Victoria Graving Dock Co., 3 Q. B. D. 549. Compare Gordon v. Clapp, 113 Mass. 335.

By acting for both parties he loses his claim to commissions from his immediate

Except by Consent of Both Parties.—Where a broker is employed by both parties, and each has knowledge of the fact that he is acting in a double capacity, and each agrees to pay him a commission, he can recover from both.[1]

Or when Acting as Middleman.—Where he acts simply as a middleman to bring the parties together, and takes no part whatever in the negotiations, there will be nothing illegal in his acting for both parties and claiming remuneration from each.[2]

No Commissions can be Recovered for Illegal Transactions.—Where the transaction for which the broker was employed is employer. Everhart v. Searle, 71 Pa. St. 256; Scribner v. Collar, 40 Mich. 375; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 541; Smith v. Townshend, 109 Mass. 500; Meyer v. Hanchett, 39 Wis. 419; Bollman v. Loomis, 41 Conn. 581.

And can enforce payment of commissions from neither. Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 459; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 756; Walker v. Osgood, 98 Mass. 348; Bell v. McConnell, 37 Ohio St. 396; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 528; Capener v. Hogan, 40 Ohio St. 203.

And a custom among brokers that they are entitled to commissions of both parties is invalid as against public policy, and cannot be sustained. Raisin v. Clark, 41 Md. 158; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 66; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 756; Com. v. Cooper, 130 Mass. 285; Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Robinson v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. L. 802. 838. And see Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499.

If a broker, employed by A to sell his house, effects a transaction by which A's house is bought by B, who sells his house to C, the purchase and the price paid by B being dependent upon the purchase and the price paid by C, by whom the purchase-money, the amount of which is the same in each, is paid directly to A, who pays the broker a commission for his services in selling A's house, the broker cannot maintain an action to recover a commission of C, even if he was employed by C to buy a house for him. Follansbee v. O'Reilly, 135 Mass. 80.

Where a broker has received a commission from a third party, he must account to his principal for the amount, and no previous demand is necessary. Morison v. Thompson, L. R. 9 Q. B. 480; Dodd v. Wakeman, 26 N. J. Eq. 484; Morrison v. Ogdensburgh, etc., R. Co., 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 173; Minn. C. R. Co. v. Morgan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 217; Dutton v. Willner, 52 N. Y. 312; Price v. Keyes, 62 N. Y. 378; Armstrong v. Elliott, 29 Mich. 485; Cotton v. Holliday, 59 Ill. 179; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 756.

A broker is without demand liable to his principal for a concealed excess received on a sale of land above the sum fixed for the price. Love v. Hoss, 62 Ind. 255.

1. Rowe v. Stevens, 53 N. Y. 621; Joslin v. Cowee, 56 N. Y. 626; Puggsley v. Murray, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 245; Alexder v. Northwestern University, 57 Ind. 466; Adams Mining Co. v. Senter, 26 Mich. 73; Fitzsimons v. South. Ex. Co., 40 Ga. 330; Rolling Stock Co. v. Railr., 34 Ohio St. 450; Bell v. McConnell, 37 Ohio St. 396; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 528.

An agent to sell lands having found a purchaser, and having with the vendor's knowledge signed the contract of purchase on behalf of the vendee, may still recover his commissions of the vendor. Barry v. Schmidt, 57 Wis. 172; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 35.

2. Rupp v. Sampson, 16 Gray (Mass.), 398; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 416; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 496; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 756; Walker v. Osgood, 98 Mass. 352; Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 459; Seigel v. Gould, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 177; Balheimer v. Reichardt, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 414; Rowe v. Stevens, 53 N. Y. 621; Muller v. Keetzleb, 7 Bush (Ky.), 253; Collins v. Fowler, 8 Mo. App. 588; Herman v. Martineau, 1 Wis. 151; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 368; Orton v. Scofield, 61 Wis. 382; Barry v. Schmidt, 57 Wis. 172; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 35; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Meyer v. Hanchett, 39 Wis. 419; Finnerty v. Fritz, 5 Colo. 174; Alexander v. Northwestern, etc., University, 57 Ind. 466; Merryman v. David, 31 Ill. 404; Anderson v. Weiser, 24 Iowa, 430; Shepherd v. Hedden, 29 N. J. L. 334; Green v. Robertson, 64 Cal. 75; Collins v. Fowler, 8 Mo. App. 588.

illegal in its character, contrary to good morals, or to the precepts and policy of the law, he can claim no commissions.[1]

7. Liability of Broker to Third Parties.—Although a broker can ordinarily not act in his own name, yet if he does not disclose his principal and interposes his own credit or acts without authority he will be personally liable to third parties on contracts so entered into.[2]

1. Brua's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 294.

Even where some of the parties to stock-gambling operations are actual buyers and sellers, and do not intend to gamble. Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. St. 89.

But mere knowledge of a broker that his principal in making sales through him intends to thereby wager on the future price of the article will not affect his right to commissions and advances. Kent v. Miltenberger, 13 Mo. App. 503; Crane v. Whittemore, 4 Mo. App. 510.

Neither is this right affected where he merely brings the parties together and takes no part in the transactions. Ormes v. Danchy, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 85.

So where a professional broker acts without a license as required by a statute he cannot recover for his services; but the burden of proof that he acted without a license is upon his employer. Johnson v. Hulings, 103 Pa. St. 498; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 131; Shepler v. Scott, 85 Pa. St. 329; Holt v. Green, 73 Pa. St. 198; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 737. Compare Ruckman v. Bergholz, 37 N. J. L. 437; Woodward v. Stearns, 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 395

This does not refer to an individual who is not a professional broker. Chadwick v. Collins, 26 Pa. St. 138; Pope v. Beals, 108 Mass. 561.

2. McGraw v. Godfrey, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 397; Cabot Bank v. Morton, 4 Gray (Mass.), 156; Calder v. Dobell, L. R. 6 C. P. 486; Talbot v. Godbolt, Yelv. 137; Harvey v. French, Alleyn, 6.

Where a broker purchases property without disclosing the name of the principal for whom he acts, he becomes liable personally for the purchase-price, and is entitled to collect such price from the principal; the latter can relieve himself from such liability only by showing payment to the vendor, or a release for a good and valuable consideration from the broker. Knapp v. Simon, 96 N. Y. 284.

And where in his memorandum of sale or in the "bought and sold notes" he assumes to act personally, parol evidence will not be admitted on his part to show that he acted as agent only, although a third party may show by parol the liability of the unnamed principal. Williams v. Bacon, 2 Gray (Mass.), 387; Eastern R. Co. v. Benedict, 5 Gray (Mass.), 561; Dykers v. Townsend, 24 N. Y. 57; Thomson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 78. See 2 Smith's L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 398–435.

Where a broker signs as such, he will incur no personal liability to third parties even though in the body of the memorandum the description of his position is ambiguous. Fairlee v. Fenton, L. R. 5 Exch. 169.

Upon the question whether certain iron bought of M. & Co., who were iron-brokers, was sold as their own or for some other party, the court charged the jury that if they should find that M. & Co. were brokers and as brokers selling such iron at the time, and that the purchaser knew this, it would of itself be evidence of notice to the purchaser that they were not the owners but were selling for some one else. Held to be erroneous. But the court added that if the word "only" had been inserted after the word "brokers" wherever it is used in the charge, it would have avoided the objection. Elwell v. Mersick, 50 Conn. 272, 274. See Baxter v. Duren, 29 Me. 434.

Where money was paid to an agent under an agreement with his principal for the sale of real estate upon the promise of the agent to return it in case it should turn out that the principal had not a good title, and the sale fell through because the principal had no title in fee to the property, held, that an action would lie against the agent for the money thus deposited. Read v. Riddle, 7 Atl. Repr. (N. J.) 487.

Although the principal is primarily liable for all the acts of his broker within the scope of his employment, the broker is personally liable to third parties for any torts he may commit where he has liberty of action. Kimball v. Billings, 55 Me. 147; Spraight v. Hawley, 39 N. Y. 441.

So although a mere broker whose office it is simply to bring the parties together is not responsible for any fraud practised by his principal on the other party, yet where he conducts the negotiations he

8. Statute of Frauds.—Broker Agent for Both Parties.—To satisfy the Statute of Frauds the broker is the agent of both buyer and seller to sign the memorandum of sale required by the statute, and his signature to the memorandum or note of the agreement is binding on both principals if the memorandum be otherwise sufficient.[1]

Bought and Sold Note.—Where a broker has succeeded in making a contract he reduces it to writing, and delivers to each party a copy of the terms as reduced to writing by him. He also ought to enter them in his book and sign the entry. What he delivers to the seller is called the sold note; to the buyer, the bought note. No particular form is required.[2] may be held liable for any deceit or fraud practised upon such other party. Todd v. Bourke, 27 La. Ann. 385.

A broker is liable to third parties in trover if he wrongfully obtains and converts their property even under the express orders of his principal. Williams v. Merle, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 80; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 604.

A broker is guilty of fraud and deceit when he was acquainted with the defects in his principal's title and either directly affirmed what was false or threw the plaintiff off his guard by a wilful and artful suppression of the truth; as where he directs an investigation about an encumbrance to a place where he knew no satisfactory information could be obtained, when he should have directed to another point where the truth could have been ascertained. Chisolm v. Gadsden, 1 Strobh. L. (S. Car.) 220; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 550.

1. Coddington v. Goddard, 16 Gray (Mass.), 436; Shaw v. Finney, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 453; Butler v. Thomson, 92 U. S. 412; Newberry v. Wall, 84 N. Y. 576; Lawrence v. Gallagher, 10 J. & S. (N. Y.) 309; Merritt v. Clason, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 102; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 286; Hinckley v. Arey, 27 Me. 362; Schlesinger v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 87 Mo. 146.

Where the vendee's agent, known by the vendor to be acting as such, signs such memorandum in his own name, both parties are bound by it as a written contract. Wiener v. Whipple, 53 Wis. 298. Compare Morgan v. Bergen, 3 Neb. 209.

2. Benjamin on Sales, § 276; Davis v. Shields, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 341.

From a careful review of the often contradictory decisions on the question whether the original entry, where it exists, or the bought or sold notes form the contract, Mr. Benjamin states the following propositions. See Benjamin on Sales, §§ 294–302.

1st. The broker's signed entry in his book constitutes the contract between the parties, and is binding on both. Heyman v. Neale, 2 Camp. 337; Thornton v. Charles, 9 M. & W. 802; Sievewright v. Archibald, 20 L. J. Q. B. 529; Thompson v. Gardiner, 1 C. P. D. 777. Contra, Cumming v. Roebuck, Holt, 172; Thornton v. Meux, M. & M. 43; Townend v. Drakeford, 1 Car. & K. 20; Thornton v. Charles, 9 M. & W. 802 (Lord Abinger).

2d. The bought and sold notes do not constitute the contract. Thornton v. Charles, 9 M. & W. 802; Heyman v. Neale, 2 Camp. 337; Sievewright v. Archibald, 17 Q. B. 115.

3d. The bought and sold notes, when they correspond and state all the terms of the bargain, are complete and sufficient evidence to satisfy the statute, even though there be no entry in the broker's book, or, what is equivalent, only an unsigned entry. Goom v. Aflalo, 6 B. & C. 117; Sievewright v. Archibald, 17 Q. B. 115. See Suydam v. Clark, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 133; Peltier v. Collins, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 459; Davis v. Shields, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 341.

4th. Either the bought or sold note alone will satisfy the statute, provided no variance be shown between it and the other note, or between it and the signed entry in the book. Hawes v. Forster, 1 Mood. & Rob. 368; Parton v. Crofts, 16 C. B. N. S. 11; Thompson v. Gardiner, 1 C. P. D. 777. See Newberry v. Wall, 84 N. Y. 576; Butler v. Thomson, 92 U. S. 412.

5th. Where one note only is offered in evidence, the defendant has the right to offer the other note or the signed entry in the book to prove a variance. Hawes v. Forster, 1 Mood. & Rob. 368; Parton v. Crofts, 15 C. B. N. S. 11.

6th. As to variance. This may occur between the bought and sold notes where there is a signed entry or where there is

9. Revocation.—The authority of a broker, like that of any other agent, may be revoked by either party before he has signed in behalf of the party so revoking, but not after he has signed.[1]

10. Real-estate Brokers.—Definition.—Real-estate agents or brokers are those who negotiate the sale or purchase of real property. They are a numerous class, and in addition to the above duty sometimes procure loans on mortgage security, collect rents, and attend to the letting and leasing of houses and lands.[2]

none. It may also occur when the bought and sold notes correspond but the signed entry differs from them. If there be a signed entry, it follows, from the authorities under the first of these propositions, that this entry will in general control the case, because it constitutes the contract of which the bought and sold notes are merely secondary evidence, and any variance between them could not affect the validity of the original written bargain. If, however, the bought and sold notes correspond, but there be a variance between them taken collectively and the entry in the book, it becomes a question of fact for the jury whether the acceptance by the parties of the bought and sold notes constitutes evidence of a new contract, modifying that which was entered in the book. Sievewright v. Archibald, 16 Q. B. 115; Thornton v. Charles, 9 M. & W. 802; Hawes v. Forster, 1 Mood. & Rob. 368. See Toomer v. Dawson, Cheeves (S. Car.), 68.

7th. If the bargain is made by correspondence, and there is a variance between the agreement thus concluded and the bought and sold notes, the principles are the same as those just stated which govern variance between a signed entry and the bought and sold notes. Heyworth v. Knight, 17 C. B. N. S. 298.

8th. If the bought and sold notes vary, and there is no signed entry in the broker's book, nor other writing showing the terms of the bargain, there is no valid contract. Thornton v. Kempster, 5 Taunt. 786; Cumming v. Roebuck, Holt, 172; Thornton v. Meux, 1 M. & M. 43; Grant v. Fletcher, 5 B. & C. 436; Gregson v. Rucks, 4 Q. B. 747; Sievewright v. Archibald, 17 Q. B. 115.

9th. If a sale be made by a broker on credit and the name of the purchaser has not been previously communicated to the vendor, evidence of usage is admissible to show that the vendor is not finally bound to the bargain until he has had a reasonable time after receiving the sold note to inquire into the sufficiency of the purchaser, and to withdraw if he disapproves. This was decided in Hodgson v. Davies, 2 Camp. 531; and as the special jury spontaneously intervened in that case and the usage was held good without proof of it, it is not improbable that the custom might now be considered as judicially recognized by that decision, and as requiring no proof (see Brandao v. Barnett, 3 C. B. 519); but it would certainly be more prudent to offer evidence of usage.

A slight difference in the language of bought and sold notes will not constitute a variance if the meaning is the same, and mercantile usage is admissible to explain the language. Bold v. Rayner, 1 M. & W. 343; Sievewright v. Archibald, 17 Q. B. 115; Rogers v. Hadley, 2 H. & C. 227; Kempson v. Boyle, 3 H. & C. 763.

A fraudulent alteration of a bought or sold note destroys its effect; and so will any material alteration, even if not fraudulently made. Powell v. Divett, 15 East, 29; Mollett v. Wackerbarth, 5 C. B. 181. See also ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

1. Farmer v. Robinson, 2 Camp. 389; Warwick v. Slade, 3 Camp 127. Compare Hodgson v. Davies, 2 Camp. 531.

In Lamson v. Sims, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 281, it was held that where a real-estate owner employed a real-estate agent to sell his property, and the latter, within the scope of his authority, but without the owner's knowledge, employed a broker for the same purpose, and the broker found a purchaser after the agent's authority had been revoked, but without notice to the broker, that the broker was entitled to his commissions.

A principal is not liable to a broker for commissions on a sale effected after revocation of the agency by the acceptance of a proposition made during the agency, the revocation being made in good faith with no intention to renew the negotiations. Uphoff v. Ulrich, 2 Ill. App. 399.

The broker must, however, receive distinct notice of such revocation. Bash v. Hill, 62 Ill. 216.

2. Bouvier Law Dict., title "Brokers."

The power of a real-estate broker does

11. Insurance Brokers.—Definition.—Insurance brokers procure insurance and negotiate between the insurers and insured.[1]

Their Power.—The usage of trade has conferred upon insurance brokers powers and liabilities in excess of those conferred upon other brokers and peculiar only to this class.[2] not generally extend to execute a sale, but merely to bring the parties together or to negotiate for the contract. In some cases he may execute the contract for a sale binding on both parties under the Statute of Frauds. Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Pringle v. Spaulding, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 17; Haydock v. Stow, 40 N.Y. 363; Glentworth v. Luther, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 145; Roach v. Coe, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 175; Force v. Dutcher, 18 N. J. Eq. 401: Morris v. Ruddy, 20 N. J. Eq. 236.

The owner of real estate situated in Kansas City wrote from Chicago, where he resided, to his agent at Kansas City in terms as follows: "Your letter received last night; I will leave the sale of the lots pretty much with you; if the party, or any one, is willing to pay sixty dollars per foot, one third cash, and balance one and two years, interest seven per cent per annum, and pay commission of sale, I think I am willing to have you make out a deed and I will perfect it; I think you have the deeds to those lots, have you not? If you think better to try spring market, hold till then; the party buying may want the abstract in full, which I believe I have at Rockford, and will sell much less than cost. The above price is only for the present. It is understood if I pay the taxes now due, that hereafter I am relieved from any taxes." Held, that the letter authorized the agent to make a contract for the present sale of the lots. Smith v. Allen, 86 Mo. 178.

The authority of a real-estate broker need not be under seal unless he is authorized to execute a contract under seal. It may be by parol. Smith v. Armstrong, 24 Wis. 446; 25 Wis. 518; Turbeville v. Ryan, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 113; Mumley v. Doherty, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 26; Fiero v. Fiero, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 288; Blood v. Goodrich, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 525; Worrall v. Munn, 5 N. Y. 229.

Real-estate agents employed to buy cannot buy from themselves nor buy on their own account. See AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 375.

Where a person desiring to purchase a piece of land employs by parol a firm of land agents to negotiate for the purchase of the land for him, and the member of the firm who does the business commences such negotiations, but finally, and in violation of his duties as agent, purchases the property for himself, with his own money, and takes the title thereto in his own name, and afterward the principal tenders to the agent an amount of money equal to the purchase-money, and an additional amount sufficient to compensate the agent for all his services, and also tenders a deed for the land for the agent to execute to the principal, and demands of the agent that he shall execute the same, but the agent refuses, and claims to own the land himself, held, under these facts, and by operation of law, that the agent holds the legal title to the land in trust for his principal; that the principal holds the paramount equitable title thereto, and by keeping his tender good may recover the property in an action in the nature of ejectment; and this notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, and the fact that the employment of the agent was only in parol, and the further facts that the principal did not advance the purchase-money, and has never been in the possession of the property, nor made any improvements thereon; that the case is not one of the creation of an express trust either by parol or in writing, nor one of the express transfer of any interest in real estate either by parol or in writing, but is simply a case of resulting trust, brought into existence by the operation of law upon the facts of the case; and that the case does not come within the Statute of Frauds; and that the authority of the agent for the purpose for which he was employed need not be in writing. Rose v. Hayden, 35 Kans. 106.

The agency of a real-estate broker and his duty to his principal ceases upon the delivery of the title papers and payment for the property. Walker v. Derby, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 134.

As to compensation of real-estate brokers, see COMPENSATION OF BROKERS.

1. Bouvier Law Dict., title "Brokers."

They are in some States liable to penalties for soliciting insurance for companies who have not complied with the statutes governing their authority to transact business in the State. State of Wisconsin v. Farmer, 9 Ins. Law Jour. 515; State v. Beazley, 60 Mo. 220; Ehrman v. Teutonia Ins. Co., 1 Fed. Repr. 471.

2. So the usage of trade makes an insurance broker an exception to the

Lien of Insurance Brokers.—Insurance brokers have by general usage a lien for their general balance upon policies of insurance in their hands procured by them for their principals, and also upon the moneys received by them upon such policies.[1] general rule that a broker cannot contract or sue in his own name. Policies not under seal are often effected by brokers in their own name for the benefit of a named principal or of whom it may concern. The action on the policies so effected may be brought either in the name of the principal for whose benefit it was made or of the broker who was immediately concerned in effecting it. Browning v. Provincial Ins. Co., L. R. 5 P. C. 263; Provincial Ins. Co. v. Ledue, L. R. 6 P. C. 224; Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137; Sargent v. Morris, 3 B. & Ald. 277; Farrow v. Com. Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 53; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 564; Finney v. Bedford Com. Ins. Co., 8 Metc. (Mass.) 348; Braden v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 1 La. 220; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 277; Newson v. Douglass, 7 H. & J. (Md.) 417; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 317.

An insurance broker employed by a party to effect insurance for him may be regarded by the insurer as clothed with full authority to act for his principal in procuring, modifying, or cancelling policies; and his acts in these respects are binding upon his principal. Standard Oil Co. v. Triumph Ins. Co., 64 N. Y. 85. So have they authority to adjust losses and to receive payment on them. Richardson v. Anderson, 1 Camp. 43; Bonsfield v. Creswell, 2 Camp. 545; Todd v. Reid, 4 B. & Ald. 210; Scott v. Irving, 1 B. & Ad. 605. But the authority to receive payment is restricted to receive payment in money. Russell v. Bangley, 4 B. & Ald. 395. But not to pay losses where he is the agent of the insurer. Bell v. Auldjo, 4 Doug. 48. Nor to allow the company to set off a debt due by the broker, even where it is the usage of trade, when such usage is not known to the insured. Sweeting v. Pearce, 7 Com. B. N. S. 449; Scott v. Irving, 1 B. & Ad. 605.

Where an insurance broker acts under a del credere commission he is not under such commission made the principal debtor under the contract, and cannot pay the insured the amount of the loss and afterward recover the same from the insurer. Grove v. Dubois, 1 T. R. 113; Morris v. Cleasby, 4 M. & S. 566.

An insurance broker may not arbitrate a loss in dispute. Goodson v. Brooke, 4 Camp. 163. Compare Huber v. Zimmerman, 21 Ala. 488. Nor abandon in case of loss. Chesapeake Ins. Co. v. Stark, 6 Cranch (U. S.), 26; Lattomus v. Farmers' M. F. Ins. Co., 3 Houst. (Del.) 404.

A broker has no implied authority to return a policy to the company to have it cancelled or to have a new one substituted in its place. Bennett v. City Ins. Co , 115 Mass. 241; Van Valkenburg v. Lenox F. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 465; Latoix v. Germania Ins. Co., 27 La. Ann. 113; Rothschild v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co., 5 Mo. App. 596. Compare Standard Oil Co. v. Triumph Ins. Co., 3 Houst. (Del.) 404.

An insurance broker must see that insurance covers risks and that the insurers are responsible. Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86; Moore v. Morgue, Cowp. 479; Park v. Hammond, 6 Taunt. 495; Mallough v. Barber, 4 Camp. 150; Mayhew v. Forrester, 5 Taunt. 615.

He will not be liable, however, when he insures in companies which are generally considered solvent even where his principal requested him to insure in other companies. Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86.

1. McKenzie v. Nevins, 22 Me. 138; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 291; Spring v. South Car. Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 268; Cranston v. Phila. Ins. Co., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 538; Moody v. Webster, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 424.

Even though the lien has been lost by a surrender of the policy by the broker, it revives at once when the policy comes again in the broker's possession, unless the manner of parting with it manifests his intention to abandon the lien. And if other liens have attached while the policy was out of the hands of the broker, as by a bona fide assignment, his lien will not revive. Spring v. South Car. Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 268; Sharp v. Whipple, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 557.

This lien extends only over matters relating to insurance brokerage, not to matters outside of this relation. Walker v. Birch, 6 T. R. 258; Houghton v. Matthews, 3 B. & P. 485; Olive v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 56; Jarvis v. Rogers, 15 Mass. 389.

Sub-agents of the broker also have a lien on the policy in their hands, but not for the general balance due them from the broker, but only a particular lien for premiums and commissions in relation to the policy. Snook v. Davidson, 2

Broker Agent of Insured and Insurer.—An insurance broker is agent for the insured and also for the underwriter. He is agent for the insured first in effecting the policy, and in everything that has to be done in consequence of it; then he is agent for the underwriter as to the premium, but for nothing else; and he is supposed to receive the premium from the insured for the benefit of the underwriter; but the whole account with respect to the premium, after the insurance is effected, remains a clear and distinct account between the underwriter and broker. Exclusive of fraud and other similar circumstances, there is an end to everything with respect to the premium as between the insurer and insured.[1]

Camp. 218; Maans v. Henderson, 1 East, 335; McKenzie v. Nevins, 22 Me. 138; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 291.

The broker's lien attaches to all policies procured by him even if his principal acts for another, of which fact the broker has no notice at the time. And the lien is not destroyed when he afterward discovers the rights of such third party. Mann v. Forrester, 4 Camp. 60; Rabone v. Williams, 7 T. R. 361; Maans v. Henderson, 1 East, 335; Foster v. Hoyt, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 327.

But where he affects the policy, knowing that his principal is acting simply as agent for a third party, his lien is limited to charges against such third party. Foster v. Hoyt, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 327; Bank of Metropolis v. New Engl. Bank, 1 How. (U. S.) 234; Snook v. Davidson, 2 Camp. 218.

1. Minett v. Forrester, 4 Taunt. 541; Crousillat v. Ball, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 375; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 375; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Reynolds, 36 Mich. 502; How v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 39; Wood v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 126 Mass. 316; Monitor Ins. Co. v. Young, 111 Mass. 537; Mayo v. Pew, 101 Mass. 555; Planter's Ins. Co. v. Myers, 55 Miss. 479; Cahill v. Ander Ins. Co., 5 Biss. (U. S.) 211; Kings County F. Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 11 Ill. App. 590. Compare Robertson v. Atl., etc., Ins. Co., 68 N. Y. 192; Pottsville Mut. Ins. Co. v. Minnequa Springs Imp. Co., 100 Pa. St. 137.

But the broker is not so far the agent of the company that he may give the insured credit and bind the company in the mean time, or make a binding contract of renewal, or waive condition as to prepayment of premium. Marland v. Royal Ins. Co., 71 Pa. St. 393; Hambleton v. Home Ins. Co., 6 Biss. (U. S.) 91.

But where the company was in the habit of charging the premium to the broker, and the broker gave credit to the insured, it was held that by this usage the premium was considered paid, and the company liable on the policy. Train v. Holland, etc., Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 598; Bang v. Farmville Ins. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S.), 290; White v. Conn. Ins. Co., 120 Mass. 330; Stebbins v. Lancashire Ins. Co., 60 N. H. 65.

A, an insurance broker, secured an application for a policy of fire insurance from B, which he gave to C, who, while he did not have a certificate of appointment as agent under seal from D, an insurance company, received applications, forwarded them, received policies, which he delivered to the assured, and collected premiums therefor for D. C forwarded B's application to D, received a policy of insurance and delivered the same to A, who delivered it to B. C about the same time had secured for A two other policies of insurance for B. He charged the premiums on all the policies, amounting to $200.82, to A. B's property covered by D's policy was destroyed by fire. A had paid on account of said premiums to C $100 before the fire, and the remainder of the premiums after the fire. C forwarded the premium received to D after the fire, which D refused to receive. In an action by B against D to recover the amount of his loss on his policy of insurance, D defended on the ground that there was no liability under the provisions of the policy until the premium was actually paid; the court entered a compulsory nonsuit, and overruled a motion to take it off. Held, that D could waive the provisions of the policy requiring the actual payment of the premium in full before there should be any liability on part of D under it, and whether or not this provision of the policy was waived should have been, under the evidence, submitted to the jury. Elkins v. Susquehanna F. Ins. Co., 113 Pa. St. 386.

So where the insurer has accepted the broker's promissory note on account of the premium. Union Ins. Co. v. Grant, 68 Me. 229.

An insurance company giving an insurance broker printed instructions to secure payment of premium when application is made, is responsible for such premium paid the broker on a risk they refuse to take, though plaintiff did not know of such instructions. Gentry v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 15 Mo. App. 215.

Where an insurance broker gave a local agent of an insurance company a check in payment of a premium with directions to retain it until his principal should have accepted the policy, and the principal did not approve of the policy, it was held that the broker could recover from the local agent the amount of the check which he had given up to the general agent. Dobson v. Jordan, 124 Mass. 542.

Knowledge of a broker who makes application for insurance in behalf of another is not the knowledge of the company. McFarland v. Peabody Ins. Co., 6 W. Va. 425; Mellen v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 609; McLachlan v. Ætna Ins. Co., 4 Allen (N. B), 173; Ben. Franklin Ins. Co. v. Weary. 4 Ill. App. 74.

But a notice from the company to the broker of a cancellation of the policy and payment or tender of the return payment to him affects the insured. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Reynolds, 36 Mich. 502. Compare Grace v. Am. Centr. Ins. Co., 109 U. S. 278, where it was held that where his employment did not extend beyond the procurement of the insurance, his agency ceased upon the execution of the policy, and subsequent notice to him of its termination by the company was not notice to the insured. Kehler v. New Orleans Ins. Co, 23 Fed. Repr. 709; Franklin Ins. Co., v. Sears, 21 Fed. Repr. 290; Hodge v. Security Ins. Co., 33 Hun (N.Y.), 583; White v. Conn. F. Ins. Co., 120 Mass. 330; Body v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 63 Wis. 157.

An agent with authority to obtain insurance is not necessarily an agent of the insured to whom notice of cancellation of the policy may be given, or payment of the unearned premium made, so as to bind the insured; nor is a recital in the policy that the broker obtaining the insurance was agent of the insured conclusive upon that subject. In such case a direction to the agent to charge the unearned premium to the insurance company, he being personally indebted to the latter in a larger sum, is not a compliance with a stipulation in the policy that it may be cancelled by refunding the unearned premium. Indiana Ins. Co. v. Hartwell, 100 Ind. 566.

Plaintiff authorized K. & B., insurance brokers, to procure insurance on certain property for a sum specified; they procured a policy from defendant, which was delivered to plaintiff; it contained a clause giving the company the right to terminate the insurance "on giving notice to that effect." Defendant directed its agents to cancel the policy; they notified K. & B. of this fact, and arranged with them to issue a policy in another company to take the place of defendant's policy. K. & B. agreed to procure said policy from defendant, and thereupon defendant's agent wrote a policy in another company. Plaintiff had no knowledge or information as to this arrangement until after a loss, and had the original policy in his possession. Held, that the notice to K. & B. was not notice to plaintiff, and the transaction did not operate as a cancellation of defendant's policy. A clause in the policy declared that any person other than the assured procuring the policy should be deemed an agent of the assured, not of the company, "in any transaction relating to this insurance." Held, that this did not constitute K. & B. continuing agents, or make the notice to them binding upon plaintiff. Plaintiff resided in New York; the property insured was in Troy. Defendant gave evidence tending to show a local custom in Troy that notice of cancellation may be given to the broker who procures the insurance. This custom was unknown to plaintiff. Held, that the custom was inadmissible to control or affect the contract. Herman v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. 411.

A party desiring to insure certain property applied to an insurance agent of his place to procure the insurance, leaving him to select the company. He forwarded the application to certain insurance brokers in Chicago, who procured the policy in a company with which they had considerable dealing, and sent the same to the assured through the first-named agents, and he sent the premium to the agents in Chicago, who never forwarded the same to the insurance company. The policy contained the usual clause that it should not be binding until the actual payment of the premium. A loss occurred, and payment was refused, when suit was brought on the policy, and a recovery had. Held, that the liability of the insurance company depended upon the fact whether the Chicago agents were its agents or were authorized to receive payment in its behalf. Where insurance brokers procuring a policy of insurance received payment of the required premium, and failed to return the same to the insurance company, it was held that the correspondence between the brokers and the company was proper evidence for the purpose of showing their previous relations and methods of business in respect to insurance effected through them, and as tending to show they were, in fact, agents of the company, and as such authorized to receive payment of the premium. Sun Mutual Ins. Co. v. Saginaw Barrel Co., 114 Ill. 99.

A broker may, however, also be the agent of the insurer, and a clause in the policy making him the agent of the insured cannot operate to change his character or status. Bassell v. Am. Fire Ins. Co., 2 Hughes (U. S.), 531; Commercial Ins. Co. v. Ives, 56 Ill. 402; Newark Fire Ins. Co. v. Sammons, 110 Ill. 166; Wood v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 126 Mass. 316.

Where the agent of a company employed a broker to furnish business for the company, the company is bound by the broker's contract upon the receipt of the policy and the payment of the premium by the insured. Riley's Ex'rs v. Com. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 1 Atl. Repr. (Pa.) 528.

The plaintiff signed an application for insurance, which was written by B., "an insurance broker," in the office of the defendant's agent. The defendant returned the application to its agent for further information as to the occupancy and ownership of the property insured. The agent handed it to B., requesting him "to go and get the reply." B. took it, saw the assured, and, although he learned from him that he was only a conditional vendee in possession of the personal property, and the vendor the tenant of the store in which it was situated, wrote in it that the assured was both the owner and tenant. B. was neither appointed nor recognized as agent by the company, or by its agent. Held, that the writing of the false statements, in legal significance, was the act of the agent; that the knowledge of B. was the knowledge of the company, and that it was estopped from claiming a forfeiture; that the defendant could not avoid its responsibilities by repudiating the acts of its agent, though done in part by a person employed by him. Mullin v. Vt. M. Fire Ins. Co., 58 Vt. 113.

Where a broker represents himself as the agent of an insurance company, and the insured deals with him as such, the supposed agent delivering the policy in due form, and receiving the premiums which, in fact, he did not pay over to the company, the company is estopped by the delivery of the policy from denying the authority of the broker, and payment to him is payment to the company. Lycoming Fire Ins. Co. v. Ward, 90 Ill. 545. Compare Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. McKee, 94 Ill. 494.

In such a case any waiver of condition by such broker will bind the company. Packard v. Dorchester Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 77 Me. 144.

The insured applied to W., an insurance agent, to insure his property. W. placed the risk, not in any company represented by him, but in companies, including the defendant, represented by other agents; and there was no communication on the subject between the insured and such other agents. Held, that W. must be regarded as the company's agent in respect to this insurance, and his knowledge that the premises were unoccupied at the time of the insurance binds the defendant, and operates as a waiver of the condition as to occupancy. Alkan v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 53 Wis. 136; Schomer v. Hekla Ins. Co., 50 Wis. 575. See Knox v. Lycoming Fire Ins. Co., 50 Wis. 671.

A broker who effects insurance under no employment by the insurers, but for a commission paid by them, upon the premiums received, for such risks as he procures to be offered and they choose to accept, is not an agent in such a sense that they will be bound by notice to him after policies are issued. Defendant issued a policy of insurance to plaintiff upon his canal boat, which policy contained a warranty that the boat would be "securely moored in a safe place satisfactory to defendant from December 10th to April 1st, with privilege to lighter in in New York harbor during the winter." The boat was laid up during the period specified at a place outside of said harbor. No notice of the laying up was given save to S., an insurance broker, not in defendant's employ, who solicited applications for insurance by it, forwarded them when obtained, and, if accepted, policies were issued, sent to S., who delivered them to the applicants and received commissions thereon. While so laid up the boat was destroyed by fire. In an action upon the policy, held, that notice to S. was not notice to defendant. Devens v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., 83 N. Y. 168; Mellen v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 609.

Where an assured intrusts a written application to a broker, he constitutes him his agent for every purpose. Notice to such broker does not affect the company, and the rule that he is the agent of the insurer for the sake of delivering

12. Bill and Note Brokers.—Bill and note brokers negotiate the purchase and sale of bills of exchange and promissory notes, and are generally paid a commission by the seller of the securities. When they negotiate bills of exchange on foreign countries or on other places in this country, they are called Exchange Brokers.[1]

13. Ship-brokers.—Ship-brokers negotiate the purchase and sale of ships and the business of freighting vessels. Like other brokers, they receive a commission from the seller only.[2]

14. Stock-brokers.—As the law in regard to stock-brokers, closely connected with the law on stock exchanges, is of a peculiar character, in many respects differing from the law on the ordinary broker, this subject will be fully treated under the title STOCK-BROKERS.

15. Custom-house Broker.—A custom-house broker is a person authorized to act for parties at their option, in the entry or clearance of ships and the transaction of general business.[3]

16. Marriage-broker.—Marriage-brokage is the act by which a person interferes for a consideration to be received by him between a man and a woman for the purpose of promoting a marriage be-the policy and to receive the premiums does not apply. Fame Ins. Co. v. Mann, 4 Ill. App. 485; Ben. Franklin Ins. Co. v. Weary, 4 Ill. App. 74.

If an application for a policy of insurance is made in writing, the insurance company has no right to rely upon a verbal representation made to the agent of the company by a clerk of the broker who procured the insurance; and such representation, though false, will not vitiate the policy. Dolliver v. St. Joseph, etc., Ins. Co., 131 Mass 39.

The insured is responsible for all representations and statements made by the broker in his behalf; but the statements must be absolute; a mere matter of opinion will not affect the interests of the insured. Standard Oil Co. v. Amazon Ins. Co., 14 Hun (N. Y.), 619; Samo v. Gore Distr. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 26 U. C. C. P. 405.

Where one without an appointment acts as broker for the insured, the latter may ratify the acts of such party in obtaining a policy even after the loss, and so make him his agent. Excelsior Fire Ins. Co. v. Royal Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 343; Grace v. Am. Centr. Ins. Co., 109 U. S. 278.

Conversations with the broker may be received in evidence as part of the res gestæ upon the question of agency. Lycoming Fire Ins. Co. v. Ward, 90 Ill. 545; Union Ins. Co. v. Chipp, 93 Ill. 96.

1. Bouvier's Law Dict., title "Brokers."

A broker who sells negotiable paper without disclosing his principal, guarantees that the signatures are genuine, and will be personally liable if they prove to be forgeries, but not so when he discloses his principal and pays over the proceeds to him. Thompson v. McCullough, 31 Mo. 224; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 644; Lyons v. Miller, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 427; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 129; Bell v. Cafferty, 21 Ind. 411; Herrick v. Whitney, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 240; Shaver v. Ehle, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 201; Morrison v. Currie, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 79; Flyn v. Allen, 57 Pa. St. 482; Merriam v. Wolcott, 3 Allen (Mass.), 258; Aldrich v. Jackson, 5 R. I. 218; Gurney v. Womersley, 4 El. & Bl. 132; McCay v. Barber, 37 Ga. 423; Terry v. Bissell, 26 Conn. 23; Thrall v. Newell, 19 Vt. 202; Dumont v. Williamson, 18 Ohio St. 516. Compare Baxter v. Duren, 29 Me. 434; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 602.

The seller of a note is bound by the representations of the broker to whom he gave it for sale. Ahern v. Goodspeed, 72 N. Y. 108; Frevall v. Fitch, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 325; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 558.

It is sometimes part of the business of exchange brokers to buy and sell uncurrent bank-notes and gold and silver coins, as well as drafts and checks drawn or payable in other cities, although as they do this at their own risk and for their own profit, it is difficult to see the reason for calling them brokers. The term is often thus erroneously applied to all persons doing a money business. Bouvier's Law Dict., title BROKERS.

2. Bouvier's Law Dict., title "Brokers." See also SHIPPING.

3. Bouvier Law Dict.

tween them. The money paid for such services is also known by this name.[1]

BROTHER. (See also BLOOD; HALF-BLOOD.)—Offspring of the same parents; but it also includes half-brothers, or those having one common parent.[2]

1. Bouvier Law Dict., title MARRIAGE-BROKAGE.

Any promise in consideration of such services is void as against public policy. Hall v. Potter, 3 Lev. 411; Williamson v. Gihon, 2 Sch. & L. 357; Drury v. Hooke. 1 Vern. 412; Cole v. Gibson, 1 Ves. Sr. 503; Debenham v. Ox, 1 Ves. 276; Smith v. Bruning, 2 Vern. 392; Roberts v. Roberts, 3 P. Will. 74.

Marriage-brokage bonds which are not fraudulent on either party are yet void, because they are a fraud on third persons and a public mischief, as they have a tendency to cause matrimony to be contracted on mistaken principles and without the advice of friends, and they are relieved against as a general mischief for the sake of the public. Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 112; Crawford v. Russell, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 92.

2. On an application for life insurance, deceased, in answer to a question as to how many brothers he had had, answered, "Three; two living;" whereas it appeared that he had had also four half-brothers, of whom only one was living. It was left to the jury to say whether the applicant in this answer was guilty of an untruth, and whether the statement was material; and it was held that it was properly so left, and a verdict for the plaintiff was sustained; the court, Hagarty, C. J., saying: "I do not see how the learned judge could have taken the question and answer wholly into his own hands, and directed the jury to find one way or the other purely as a consequence. He expressed an opinion that as a matter of mere legal construction he inclined to think brothers meant brothers of the whole blood. It is not easy, in my opinion, to give a very clear legal definition of the word 'brother.' I have not found a strict legal definition of the word as such.

Mr. Jarman says, vol. ii. (Ed. 1861) 140: "A gift to brothers and sisters extends to half brothers and sisters.' He cites Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, but there the point, though adverted to, is not necessarily decided. In Grieves v. Rawley, 10 Hare, 63, before Tarner, V. C., Sir W. P. Wood, in arguing, quotes Johnson's Dictionary, defining a brother as one born of the same mother and father. The vice-chancellor says: 'It is true the dictionaries so describe the relation of brother and sister.' He adds: 'I think that in general when a man speaks of his brothers and sisters he speaks of them, not with reference to the definition of the word in the dictionary, but as a class, standing in the same relationship to one or both of his parents as he himself stands in. Though not descended from the same parents, the parties are, as is said in the termes de la ley, after a sort brothers; "brothers by the father's side," "brothers by the one mother;" and however other parties may describe them, or they designate themselves, if required to give a precise description of the nature and degree of the relation subsisting between them, I think that, in ordinary parlance, they would be called, and would call themselves, brothers and sisters.' He puts a case of a family of sons and daughters of the father by different marriages, and A was asked the question as to the relation between him and B, another member of the same family. Would not the question be, 'Is B your whole brother or sister, or your half brother or sister?' and would not the answer be in similar terms? Both the party questioning and the party questioned would thus call B a brother or a sister, but each would distinguish the character and degree of their relation. Lexicographers certainly favor the idea that brother means the offspring of the same parents. Richardson says: 'Brothers, or brethren, are children bred from the same parent,' quoting Skinner: 'I believe that brother, the Dutch Broeder, the German Brüder, are all derived from the verb "to breed"—simul fotus, i.e., educatus—of the same brood." Again, under 'Sister': 'Females by the same parents are sisters. Males and females so related are brothers and sisters.' See also Imperial and other dictionaries. "Frater consanguineus, a brother by the father's side; frater uterinus, by the mother's side; frater metricius, sometimes used for a bastard brother.' Tomlins' Law Dictionary; Bridgman v. London Life Ins. Co., 44 U. C. Q. B. 536.

It is not necessary for an indictment for incest against a brother and sister to show that their parents were lawfully married; for, said the court, Beck, C. J.:

BUBBLE.—A scheme for business or trade projected by dishonest individuals to cheat the public.[1]

BUDGET.—The name applied in England to the financial statement of the national revenue and expenditure for each year submitted to Parliament by the chancellor of the exchequer.

BUFFALO.—A wild bovine animal. In America the term is popularly applied to the bison.[2]

BUGGERY (see SODOMY).—The crime against nature; carnal copulation of human beings with each other against nature, or with a beast.[3]

BUILD.—To frame, construct, and raise; to erect; to construct.[4]

"The statute declares the act of a brother marrying a sister to be incest. Now, the terms 'brother' and 'sister' mean offspring of the same parents. They do not imply legitimacy of birth. It would be quite proper to use these words in reference to those born out of wedlock." State v. Schaunhurst, 34 Iowa, 547.

So also the word "brother," in a statute against incest, includes a brother of the half-blood. State v. Wyman, 10 Eastn. Repr. (Vt.) 847; s. c., 4 New Eng. Repr. 126.

And a legacy "to my brother, J. S.," is good, although J. S. was an illegitimate son of the testator's mother before her marriage with his father. Dane v. Walker, 109 Mass. 179.

On the construction of the word "brother," when used in statutes of descent and distribution as denoting whole or half blood, see Gardner v. Collins, 3 Mason (U. S.), 398; s. c., 2 Peters (U. S.), 58; Crooke v. Watt, 2 Vern. 124; Tracy v. Smith, 2 Lev. 173; Sheffield v. Lovering, 12 Mass. 490; Clark v. Sprague, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 412; Doe d. Moore v. Abernathy, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 442; Cliver v. Sanders, 8 Ohio St. 501; Wheeler v. Clutterbuck, 52 N. Y. 67.

1. The stat. 6 Geo. I. c. 18, passed in 1719, "for restraining several extravagant and unwarrantable practices herein mentioned," was known as the "Bubble Act," as it prescribed penalties for the formation of companies with little or no capital, with the intention, by means of advertisement, of obtaining money from the public by the sale of shares. It was repealed by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 91.

2. A buffalo, though tamed, is not cattle within the meaning of a statute providing for the punishment of a person wilfully and maliciously killing, maiming, or wounding the cattle of another. State v. Crenshaw, 22 Mo. 457.

3. 3 Inst 59; 12 Co. 37. This crime was denominated "buggery" in 25 Hen. VIII. c. 6, and the use of the word was deemed indispensable in an indictment for the offence. Foster C. C. 424; 3 Inst. 59; 2 Stark Cr. Pl. 436. It is still in use and considered requisite in indictments for sodomy. Bishop's Direcs. & Forms, § 963. The term is used as an exact equivalent of sodomy. Rex v. Cousins, 6 C. & P. 351; Rex v. Jacobs, Russ. & Ry. 331; Commonwealth v. Thomas, 1 Va. Ca. 307; Penna. Act, 11th June, 1879, P. L. 148, where the offencee is defined.

4. What the Power to Build Includes — "It is incident to a general power to build a market, to determine upon the form, dimensions, and fashion of the edifice," and to employ an architect to prepare plans, specifications, and working drawings for its erection. Peterson v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449.

Where one is authorized to make a canal and take tolls thereon, on the condition among others that he will build suitable and convenient bridges where the canal crosses highways, he is bound to keep the bridges in repair. Commissioners of Franklin Co. v. White Valley Canal Co., 2 Ind. 162; The King v. Inhabitants of Lindsey, 14 East, 317.

A corporation created "to build and maintain a flouring mill" may build a dam by means of which to obtain power to run the mill. Ginrich v. Patrons' Mill Co., 21 Kan. 61.

The grant of a privilege to build a certain building on land of the lessor without defining the place where it is to be erected or the quantity of land to be occupied does not, without actual entry and location, confer such a right as to enable the lessee to bring ejectment. Jackson v. May, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 184.

In Contract.—Where a contract to build a ship is declared on, it is a fatal variance to prove a contract to finish a ship that is already partly built. Smith v Barker, 3 Day (Conn.), 312.

BUILDER.—One who builds; one whose occupation is to build.[1]

BUILDING. (See also FIXTURES; MECHANIC'S LIEN.)—I. A fabric or edifice constructed for use or convenience; as a house, a church, a shop.[2] It must be permanent,[3] and designed for the habitation of men or animals, or the shelter of property.[4]

A contract to build a ship is not a maritime contract. Edwards v. Elliott, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 532; Scull v. Shakespear, 75 Pa. 297.

A covenant in the lease that if the lessor shall be minded to sell any part of the land to build upon he may resume that part, is not restricted to any buildings of any particular species; warehouses are within the meaning of the clause, and wharves as appurtenant thereto. Gough v. Canal Co., 6 Ves. 353.

Under a contract to build a ship, house, or other thing, no property vests in the person for whom it is being built until it is finished and delivered. And the rule is the same where certain portions of the price are paid at specific stages of the work, and the building is carried on under the superintendence of the one for whom it is done. Andrews v. Durant, 11 N Y. 35; Merritt v. Johnson, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 473; Low v. Austin, 20 N. Y. 182; Tompkins v. Dudley, 25 N. Y. 272; Scull v. Shakespear, 75 Pa. 297; Haney v. Schooner Rosabelle, 20 Wis. 247; Edwards v. Elliott, 36 N. J. L. 449; Laidler v. Burlinson, 2 M. & W. 602; Adams v. Nichols, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 275; School District v. Dauchy, 25 Conn. 530; Revenue Cutter No. 2, 4 Sawy. (C. C.) 144.

Specific Performance of a Contract to build may be decreed if the agreement is sufficiently defined, but not the performance of a general covenant to lay out a certain sum in a building, it not being distinctly expressed what the building is. Mosely v. Virgin, 3 Ves. 184.

Erect or Build.—To materially enlarge and alter a wooden building by adding stories and extending the walls is a breach of an ordinance forbidding any one to erect or build wooden buildings within a city. Douglass v. Commonwealth, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 262. See State v. Tuttle, 4 Conn. 68.

New-build.—A covenant in a lease to new-build the houses on the premises is not complied with by rebuilding some and repairing others, although the repairing consisted in pulling down the front and back walls and rebuilding them. City of London v. Nash, 3 Atk. 515.

1. Webster. One engaged in repairing and replacing machinery in a steam canal-boat is a builder within the meaning of an act providing for the collection of demands against vessels and creating a lien in favor of the builder. King v. Greenway, 71 N. Y. 413. But the builder of a steam-engine for a vessel is not. Calkin v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 298.

A lumber merchant is not an artisan, a builder, or a mechanic within the meaning of a mechanic's lien law. Duncan v. Bateman, 23 Ark. 327.

2. This is Webster's definition, and is adopted in State v. Barr, 39 Conn. 41; Church v. Allison, 10 Pa. 413; Coddington v. Dry Dock Co., 2 Vr. (N. J.) 477. The word has a narrower meaning than "build;" it does not mean anything built.

3. Stevens v. Gourley, 7 C. B. N. S. 99. But it need not be let into the ground, but may be laid on timbers upon the surface. See FIXTURES.

4. Railroad Co. v. Vanderpool, 11 Wis. 119.

"Taken in its broadest sense, it can mean only an erection intended for use and occupation as a habitation or for some purpose of trade, manufacture, ornament or use, constituting fabric or edifice, such as a house, a store, a church, a shed." Truesdell v. Gay, 13 Gray (Mass.), 312; Powell v. Boraston, 18 C. B. N. S. 175.

In Statutes.—"The word 'building' in a statute will almost always depend for its meaning in some degree on the particular subject, and its connection with other words." Bishop on Stat. Crimes, § 292.

A saw-mill is not necessarily a building within the meaning of a statute of arson. State v. Livermore, 44 N. H. 386. An unfinished house is. The Queen v. Manning, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 338. But it is not a building "erected for manufacture," etc., within such a statute. McGary v. People, 45 N. Y. 153.

The untenantable remains of a house after a previous fire are not a building within a statute of arson. Reg. v. Labadie, 9 U. C. Q. B. 429.

An unfinished structure to be used as a cart-shed, with boarded sides and a door with a lock, but unthatched, is a building within a larceny act. Rex v. Worrall, 7 C. & P. 516.

Under a statute prescribing a penalty for breaking into a building, an indictment for breaking into a store is not good. Com. v. McMonagle, 1 Mass. 517.

A stable is a building within the statute of burglary. Orrell v. People, 94 Ill. 456.

Under an indictment for keeping a certain building for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor, or for omitting to take all reasonable means to eject a tenant so using the building, it is a fatal variance to prove that the defendant is only tenant of a part of the building. Commonwealth v. McCaughey, 9 Gray (Mass.), 296; Commonwealth v. Bossidy, 112 Mass. 277.

Neither a park nor a platform erected therein is a building within a statute forbidding the sale of liquor on Sunday. State v. Barr, 39 Conn. 41. See Bishop on Stat. Crimes, § 1069.

Under a statute giving the suffrage to certain tenants of houses, warehouses, counting-houses, shops, or other buildings, one who had exclusive occupancy of certain apartments in a house and a key to the outer door while his landlord occupied, but did not reside in a part of the premises, is a tenant of a building. Toms v. Luckett, 5 C. B. 36. So are cotton-spinners who rent rooms in the factory. Wright v. Town Clerk, 5 M. & G. 33. And a shed, though covered with tarpaulin, used for the storage of marketing, is not denied to be within the act, though a pigsty is. Powell v. Farmer, 18 C. B. N. S. 181; Watson v. Cotton, 5 C. B. 51. But where the shed was erected by an electioneering agent for the pupose of qualifying the tenant, the contrary was held. "It ought to be in some degree adapted both to be used by man either for residence or for the industry to which the statute relates, and also to have the degree of durability which is included in the idea of building." Powell v. Boraston, 18 C. B. N. S. 175. See also Harris v. Amery, L. R. 1 C. P. 150; Morris v. Harris, L. R. 1 C. P. 155; s. c., Harr. & Ruth. 328.

Hustings erected at polls are not buildings within an act providing a remedy for the destruction of buildings by riotous assemblies. Allen v. Ayre, 3 Dowl. & Ry. 96.

A summer house is a building within an act making it felony to steal lead, etc., from any dwelling-house, out-house, coach-house, stable, or other building. Rex v. Norris, Russ. & Ry. 69.

In Indictment.—Where a statute of larceny says "in any building," the word "building" must be used in the indictment; it is not sufficient to say "in the saloon," without stating that the saloon was a building. Commonwealth v. Mahar, 8 Gray (Mass.), 469.

Mechanic's Lien Laws.—The following have been decided to be buildings within statutes giving a lien for labor performed in erecting, altering, or repairing a building: A church. Church v. Allison, 10 Pa. 413. A railroad depot. Hill v. Railroad Co., 11 Wis. 214. See McIlvain v. Railroad Co., 5 Ph. 13. The following are not buildings: A bridge. Railroad Co. v. Vanderpool, 11 Wis. 119; Burt v. Washington, 3 Cal. 246. A ditch. Ellison v. Water Co., 12 Cal. 542. A floating dock. Coddington v. Dry Dock Co., 2 Vr. (N. J.) 477. Swings and seats in a park, though a dancing-hall may be. Lothian v. Wood, 55 Cal. 159. A wall erected near and around a furnace. Truesdell v. Gay, 13 Mass. 312.

Where the structure of a building is so completely changed that in common parlance it may be properly called a new building or a rebuilding, it comes within a law giving a lien to mechanics on "every building erected." Armstrong v. Ware, 20 Pa. 520. See NEW BUILDINGS, post, p. 603.

In Deed—A privilege to cut wood (for building on premises) includes privilege to cut wood for fences. Livingston v. Ten Broek, 16 Jns. R. (N. Y.) 14; s. c., 8 Am. Dec. 287.

A covenant not to erect a building within a certain distance of a boundary line is broken by the erection of a fence twenty feet high. Wright v. Evans, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. 308. So is the erection of a building the bay window of which extends beyond a certain line a breach of a covenant not to erect a building beyond that line. Manners v. Johnson, 1 Ch. Div. 673. But a restriction that no building should be erected within ten feet of the street is not violated by the erection of a brick wall six feet high. Nowell v. Academy of Notre Dame, 130 Mass. 209.

In Lease.—A covenant to keep buildings in repair only applies to existing structures, not to new ones. Cornish v. Cleife, 3 H. & C. 446.

A lease of a building conveys the land under the eaves, if it belongs to the lessor, and the erection of a wall on that land with the lessor's authority is a breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment. Sherman v. Williams, 113 Mass. 481.

In Application for Insurance.—A hog-pen and a hen-house are not buildings within the meaning of an application which represents that there are no buildings not disclosed within a certain distance. White v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.), 566. An answer to the question, "How bounded, and the distance from other buildings if less than ten rods?" giving the distance of the nearest building in each direction, is sufficient though it does not mention remoter building within ten rods. Gates v. Ins. Co., 5 N. Y. 469.

Addition to a Building.—What is an addition under a lien law is a question of law. It must be lateral, on ground outside of the building. An increase in height is not such an addition. Updike v. Skillman, 27 N. J. L. 131; City v. Parker, 5 Vr. (N. J.) 352. A piazza is, while folding doors are not. Whitenack v. Noe, 11 N. J. Eq. 321, 412.

Appurtenance to a Building.—A vault under the pavement is not under a mechanic's lien law. Parmelee v. Hambleton, 19 Ill. 615.

Construction or Repair of Building.—Making a pavement is not. Knaube v. Kerchner, 39 Ind. 217. Nor does it come within the terms of erecting, constructing, and finishing a building. McDermott v. Palmer, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 675.

Construction, Erection, or Repair of Building.—The equipping of fixed machinery in a building to be used as a paper-mill is not under a lien law. Rose v. Paper Works, 29 Conn. 256.

Building Erected.—An unfinished building is not within this term as used in a statute of arson. McGary v. People, 45 N. Y. 153. Nor is a building repaired under a lien law. Landis's App., 10 Pa. 379. But see Armstrong v. Ware, 20 Pa. 520.

A building removed and fitted up as a school-house is a "building erected for public use" under an arson statute. Commonwealth v. Horrigan, 2 Allen (Mass.). 159.

Erection, Enlargement, and Repair of a Building.—Putting on a new roof comes within this phrase. King v. Davenport, 98 Ill. 306.

If the Building Should Fall.—This phrase in an insurance policy is construed literally. To meet the condition, the building must have actually and entirely fallen. It is not sufficient that it is very much damaged, has fallen into decay. Firemen's F. I. Co. v. Cong. Rodeph Sholom, 80 Ill. 558. Or that a part only has fallen. Brenner v. Ins. Co., 51 Cal. 101.

Building Ground.—The description of a bounding lot as building ground does not operate as notice of an intention to build, so as to alter the rule as to ancient lights. Swansborough v. Coventry, 9 Bing. 305.

Building Material.—Earth excavated from a lot preparatory to building is not within an ordinance forbidding the deposit of building material in the street. Hundhausen v. Bond, 36 Wis. 29.

Nature and Material Structure of the Buildings Insured, in an application for insurance, does not cover machinery in a building. Baxendale v. Harvey, 4 H. & N. 448.

New Buildings.—What is a new building within a mechanic's lien law is a question of law and for the court. Armstrong v. Ware, 20 Pa. 519; Smith v. Nelson, 2 Phila. 113. The following have been held not to be new buildings: Back buildings. Harris v. Woolston, 3 Phila. 376; Rand v. Mann, 3 Phila. 429. An old structure moved to a different part of the lot and extensively repaired. Tuttle v. State, 4 Conn. 68. A new structure raised in the place of a torn-down portion of an old one, the upper stories of which are only to be reached through the old part. Shiel v. Mayor, etc., of Sunderland, 6 H. & N. 796. "A substantial addition of material parts, a rebuilding upon another and larger scale, constitutes a new building, even though some portions of the old are preserved, and incorporated in the new." Driesbach v. Keller, 2 Pa. 77.

A new building is defined by the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, prohibiting building beyond a certain line, to include a building in course of erection which has not been carried higher than the footings at the time when the act goes into operation. Tear v Freebody, 4 C. B. N. S. 288. Where a back building was raised, and two of the walls of a building changed from wood to brick, this was held a new building within an act requiring that a certain amount of open space should be left whenever a new building was erected in a certain city. Brice's App., 89 Pa. 85.

Buildings or Other Property, in a statute making railroad companies liable for injury to buildings or other property along their route, and giving them the right to have such insured, includes fences and growing trees. Pratt v. R. Co., 42 Me. 579; Grissell v. Railroad (Conn.), 4 N. E. Repr. 85. All kinds of combustible property. Ross v. Railroad Co., 6 Allen (Mass.). 87. It was confined, however, to permanent, insurable property, and held not to extend to movables, as a pile of cedar posts in Chapman v R. Co., 37 Me. 92; Pratt v. Railroad Co., 42 Me. 579.

Public Buildings of a county are such as are ordinarily used in, or are indis-

II. Framing; erecting: the present participle of build.[1]

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS. (See also AMOTION; CORPORATIONS; DISSOLUTION; INTEREST; OFFICERS, PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.)

1. Definition.—A building and loan association is an organization created for the purpose of accumulating a fund from the monthly subscriptions or savings of its members to assist them in building

pensable to, the conduct of the business of the county; an academy is not a public building under an act setting apart certain land for the public buildings of the county. Kittaning Academy v. Brown, 41 Pa. 270.

A church was treated as within a statute providing that the walls of public buildings should be constructed in such manner as is approved by the district surveyor. The Queen v. Carruthers, 8 B. & S. 817.

An act concerning roads which forbids the pulling down of "any dwelling-house, market-house, or other public building" does not cover an engine-house. The term "public building" means "such as that the property in it, and also its possession and use, are in the public." State v. Troth, 34 N. J. L. 377.

Land used for building purposes means land sold as building land or let on building leases and actually laid out for building. Coventry v. Railway Co., L. R. 5 Eq. 104. See Carrington v. Railway Co., 3 Ch. App. 377; Railroad Co. v. Doddridge, 4 E. & I. App. 610.

Buildings for Religious Worship.—The residence of a priest or clergyman is not exempt from taxation as such because it contains a room set apart for religious worship. Church v. Assessors, 12 R. I. 19.

Wooden Buildings.—Acts forbidding their erection within cities are constitutional, as an exercise of police power. King v. Davenport, 98 Ill. 305. But an ordinance for this purpose is not necessarily within the power of a municipal corporation. Thorne v. Hudson, 7 Paige (N. Y.), 261. The following structures have been held to be within such acts: An addition to a building made by erecting a wooden frame and placing a brick wall around it. Tuttle v. State, 4 Conn. 68. A structure of wood laid on timbers on the surface of the ground. Stevens v. Gourley, 7 C. B. N. S. 99. But a building composed partly of wood and partly of brick was held not within the meaning of such an act in Stewart v. Commonwealth, 10 Watts (Pa.), 306.

The lease of a wooden building does not pass as appurtenant any title to an out-building, yard, or passageway in an adjoining curtilage equally belonging to a brick house. Oliver v. Dickinson, 100 Mass. 114.

1. A contract to win stone for the purpose of building certain houses does not include the completion of the houses by plastering and tile-pointing. Charlton v. Gibson, 1 C. & K. 541.

The building a cabin on a steamboat is within a statute giving a lien for work and labor done "in the building, repairing, fitting, furnishing, and equipping" of ships. Steamboat Dictator v. Heath, 56 Pa. 290.

or purchasing for themselves dwellings or real estate by loaning to them the requisite money from the funds of the society upon good security.[1]

2. Origin.—The first building society is said to have been established at Kirkcudbright in Scotland by the Earl of Selkirk in 1815,[2] though mention of "building clubs" in Birmingham occurs in 1795,[3] and one appears to have existed at Greenwich in 1807.[4] The first association of this kind in the United States was established at Brooklyn (N. Y.) in 1836.[5] After that date they began to crop out plentifully throughout the eastern seaboard, sometimes as unincorporated voluntary associations and sometimes incorporated under general acts of the several States. In some States they have proved a failure and their formation has been either prohibited or abandoned; in others they have continued to prosper and multiply until their number and the amount of capital they control is truly enormous.[6]

3. Varieties.—The building association as known in the United

1. Compare Parker v. Fulton Building and Loan Assoc. 46 Ga. 166; 1 Bouv. Dict. (15th Ed.) 268.

"The primary design of building associations is to encourage the acquisition of real estate, the building of dwellings, the ownership of homesteads,—to increase the proportion of property-holders among that class of the population whose slow and laborious earnings are, by reason of their pettiness, most fugitive, and generally spent before they reach a sum of sufficient magnitude to back a desire for these guarantees of good citizenship which the policy of our law has always found in landed property. That is the class for whose benefit building associations were originally devised; from among whose number their membership was, and for the most part still is, drawn; and all the incidents of membership were designed to accommodate their necessities, and intended to serve their purposes." Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. (1st Ed.) § 118. Hence an association for the "accumulation of a fund by the savings of its members to build or purchase for themselves dwelling-houses, or to enter into business," or merely for the purpose of loaning money to its members without expressing any intention to further the acquisition of homesteads, is not a building association within the meaning of the legislature. Jarrett v. Cope, 68 Pa. St. 67; Kupfert v. Guttenberg Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 30 Pa. St. 465. See also North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463 (opinion of Strong, J., 467); Am. Security L. Assoc. v. Lake, 64 Ala. 456; s.c, 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418.

The end, however, must be attained by the association assisting its members to procure land for themselves, and not by first purchasing the land in its corporate capacity and then distributing it to the members. If it follows the latter course it usurps the functions of a freehold land society, and its acts are ultra vires. Grimes v. Harrison, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 442.

"A freehold land society buys land with the funds contributed by the members of the society, and then divides it amongst them; but a benefit building society advances to its borrowing members money derived from subscriptions, and which the borrowing members themselves lay out in the purchase of lands and buildings, and then mortgage them to the society." Master of the Rolls in Grimes v. Harrison, 26 Beav. (Eng.) 442.

2. Bibb County L. Assoc. v. Richards, 21 Ga. 592.

3. 4 Encyclopædia Britannica, 513.

4. Pratt v. Hutchinson, 15 East, 511.

5. Bibb County L. Assoc. v. Richards, 21 Ga. 592.

In 1836 the 6 & 7 Will. IV. was passed, affording ample opportunities for the formation of such associations.

6. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. § 6.

This power and importance grew rapidly during the feverish period in our national development immediately preceding the Civil War, and most of the older States made their first attempts to control their powers, formation, and management by statutory enactment during the decade of 1850 to 1860. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. § 6, and see chap. 2 for good compendium of legislation in the different States.

States exists in three varieties: the terminating, the permanent, and the serial

A Terminating Society is one which must terminate by expiration of its charter when the stock arrives at par value.[1] Upon each share a fixed monthly subscription of uniform amount is payable throughout the whole duration of the society, the purpose being to continue the same until the members' subscriptions by aid of investments, made from time to time, shall amount to a fund large enough to give to every member upon every share held by him a sum fixed by the charter at the commencement. The possible duration of the association is limited by law or by charter, and the payments required from the shareholders so adjusted as to guarantee, on the score of long experience, its running out within that period. The members all start from the same date; and should any one be permitted to join the society subsequently to the time limited for taking subscriptions, he will be required to make a "back payment" of an amount equivalent to the then value of the stock. Whenever the society has on hand a sum equal to the full value of a share, or, when by law required, at stated intervals, loans will be made to members upon sufficient security. The member then, in addition to the regular subscription, pays, also monthly, the legal interest upon the full face value of his loan or upon the amount actually received by him, according as the one or the other is allowed under the governing statute, and both these duties are stipulated for in the mortgage, which becomes available for their enforcement in the hands of the association.[2]

The Permanent Building Association may be described as "a society which has not by its rules any fixed date or specified result at which it shall terminate."[3] It differs from a terminating society chiefly in the fact that a person may become a member at any time without paying any back subscriptions, and in that a borrowing member can obtain an advance repayable by small instalments extending over a fixed term of years, at his own choice, with the absolute certainty of clearing his property from the encumbrance, and freeing himself from all further liability at the end of the time.[4]

1. A terminating society is one which by its rules is to terminate at a fixed date or when a result specified in its rules is attained. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 42, § 5.

2. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. (1st Ed.) § 42.

3. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 42, § 5.

4. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. (1st Ed.) § 46.

The following account of the development of this form of the building society is given in the Encyclopædia Britannica: "About 1846 an important modification of the system of these societies was introduced by the introduction of the 'permanent' plan, which was adopted by a great number of the societies established after that date. It was seen that these societies really consist of two classes of members; that those who do not care to have, or have not received, an advance upon mortgage security are mere investors; and that it matters little when they commence investing or in what amount, while those to whom advances have been made are really debtors to the society, and arrangements for enabling them to pay off their debt in various terms of years according to their convenience, would be of advantage both to themselves

Serial Associations differ from terminating in that, their duration being limited, instead of issuing all the stock, to the full extent allowed by law or charter, at once, they divide it up into series and issue each series successively, each class or series being then treated to some extent as a separate association distinct from the others, but with them sharing in the profits of the concern.[1] and the society. By permitting members to enter at any time without back payment, and by granting advances for any term of years agreed upon, a continuous inflow of funds and a continuous means of profitable investment of them would be secured. The interest of each member of the society would terminate when his share was realized or his advance paid off, but the society would continue with the accruing subscriptions of other members employed in making other advances." 4 Enc. Brit. (9th Ed.) 514.

1. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. (1st Ed.) § 47.

The successive serial issues of stock constitute its permanent feature; for although the membership of any individual terminates with the series of stock on which that membership is claimed, yet the association continues on until the last series is wound up. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. (1st Ed.) § 49.

The advantages of the serial association are (1) that it allows a person wishing to become a member to avoid back payments by purchasing stock in the last series; (2) that by loaning the surplus funds of the elder series to the members of the younger a profitable investment can always be insured. When we recall the fact that the chief trouble in the successful working of the terminating plan arises from the difficulty of obtaining new members, owing to the heavy back payments necessary to equalize them with the first members, after the association has reached its third or fourth year, the consequent falling off in the number of stockholders by reason of death or withdrawal, and the difficulty thereby occasioned of finding proper investments for the large sums of money which accumulate upon the hands of the society, the immense practical importance of this feature of the serial system cannot be overestimated. See Wrigley, Workingman's Way to Wealth, p. 38.

"The total issue of stock is confined or limited to 2500 shares as formerly (i.e., in terminating plan), but in place of disposing of the whole in one issue, all at once, as in the terminating plan, an association working on the permanent (i.e., serial) plan will sell or dispose of as many shares as is thought advisable (say 500) during the first year, and these will run their course to the final result, precisely as those issued by a terminating association; and at the end of the first year the sum total of dues and profits is divided by the total number of shares in this first 'series,' and their value is thus ascertained, whereupon a new or second series of stock is issued, of as many shares as is thought advisable to sell, and payments on this second 'series' commence only with their issue; and these in turn run the same as the first series, and at the end of the second year the sum total of dues and profits for that year are divided by the total number of shares in both series, and their value again ascertained. The stock in the first series will be found to have a value of two years' dues ($24 per share), to which is added the profit made during the two years on each share; while the stock in the second series will be worth but the amount of the one year's dues ($12 per share) and the one year's profits; and so on, each year producing a new series of stock, the sum total formed by dues and profits being divided at the end of each year by the total number of shares of all the series then issued (excepting, of course, such stock as may have been withdrawn and returned to the association)." Wrigley, Workingman's Way to Wealth, p. 32.

Bowkett and Starr-Bowkett Societies.—These are terminating varieties of limited popularity. The former are best described in the language of the originator, Dr. Bowkett, in his evidence before the royal commissioners in England: "They are based on a principle of arithmetic which scarcely any one connected with building societies or any one else seems to comprehend. The principle is this: That, by a certain arrangement, men uniting together can realize, in the first instance, the same amount of interest for their own savings that they are accustomed to pay for other people's money; next, that they can practically obtain one fourth more than that rate of interest;

4. Method of Business.—The par value of the stock is fixed by charter or by-law, and each member of the society binds himself on becoming a member to pay a subscription at stated intervals, until the amount in the treasury produced by the sum total of all the subscriptions, together with the profits, is such as will enable the society to pay to each member on every share of stock the par value of that share. Whenever the amount in the treasury at any time equals the par value of one or more shares, that sum is "put up at auction," and that member obtains the loan who offers the highest premium, or, in other words, agrees to accept the smallest sum at the time of making the loan in lieu of the par value of his stock at the final distribution.

The borrower continues a member,[1] and gives adequate security for the payment of interest on the loan, subscriptions, and charges. On the final distribution of the stock those members who have not become borrowers receive the par value of their shares in cash, while borrowing members get back their bonds and mortgages receipted in full. To secure prompt payment of interest and dues a system of fines and forfeitures is adopted which at once makes it the interest of the member to discharge his obligations to the society and compensates the latter for the loss of the interest upon the amount due.[2] and next, that that rate of interest is compound-interest. The plan is this: One hundred persons, putting down 9½d. a week, will produce £2 1s. 2d. each year. Leaving the 1s. 2d. out of the question, to pay the current expenses (and that amount is nearly sufficient), they have at the end of the year £200; they draw lots for it, and the one to whom it falls has the £200 lent to him, without interest, provided he expends it upon freehold property, and repays it at the rate of £10 per cent. per annum, continued for ten years. After that he continues his subscription, until if he is one of the earlier persons he has paid £62, and if one of the later ones £50. Each member has all his subscriptions back again, the principle being that the subscriber lends the society a small sum annually for a long time, and the society lends him a large one for a long time." First Rep. of Commissioners, p. 64.

"The chief difference between the Starr-Bowkett societies and the preceding is that, In the Starr-Bowkett societies, after a man has repaid that which has been lent to him upon property, he has to pay an increased subscription, so as to make the society terminate at an earlier period than it would do if the member still continued to pay his ordinary subscription." Davis, Law of Building, etc., Societies, p. 59.

1. In Virginia it is held that the contract between the association and the borrower involves the total cessation of his interest and membership in the concern, and the total extinguishment of his stock, his mortgage binding him, however, to continue his payments during the existence of the association. White v. Mechanics' Bldg. Assoc., 22 Grattan, 233; Winchester Bldg. Assoc. v. Gilbert, 23 Grattan, 787.

A similar doctrine appears to be held in the District of Columbia. Pabst v. Bldg. Assoc., 1 McArthur (D. C.), 385; Mulloy v. Fifth Ward Bldg. Assoc., 2 McArthur (D.C.), 594.

For full discussion of the relation between the borrowing member and the association, see next section.

2. As to nature of fines, see post, § 8, (b).

The following lucid account of the practical working of a building association is given in Endlich on Building Associations, § 8. "Suppose that there are a hundred men able to save five dollars out of their monthly earnings. They agree for the purpose of united action and mutual encouragement to put their money together upon fixed days every month, until the whole aggregate shall be sufficient to pay to each of the hundred associates $1000 in cash. It is clear that if all are prompt in their payments the treasure will be readyfor division at the end of 200 months; in other words, letting each monthly payment of one dollar represent a 'share' in the common fund, each share will, at the end of 200 months be worth a fixed par value of $200. This period, however, will be shortened if, after each monthly collection of $500 has been made, that sum is at once put out at interest, upon some safe investment, with the addition of the interest, etc., accruing to the fund. The distribution of $200 to each share may be feasible in, say, 180 months, when each associate has, in fact, paid only $180 on each of his five shares—that is, has paid in $900 up to the time when he is entitled to receive $1000. Thus far we have only a co-operative savings fund, the stated payments being periodical and compulsory. But the persons who started this association, had an object beyond the mere saving of money; they desired through it to acquire houses, homes. When, therefore, the question of investing the money arose, it was found that it might be made the means of securing to some of the members, particularly anxious to 'become their own landlords,' the property upon which they wished to build, and the money to defray the expenses of building, they paying the interest upon the amount loaned them. In this way the money which belonged to all would assist the individual, and he, whilst he continued to pay his monthly instalments, would, in paying interest on the money advanced to him, in fact be paying it in part to himself, and would himself help to hasten the day when he would be entitled to participate with the others in the distribution of the common fund, his share in which might then at once be devoted to the extinguishment of the loan he had received. Thus he could get his house perhaps a number of years before his monthly payments of five dollars could be expected to amount to a sum sufficient to pay for it; and yet those small payments, being kept up by him, would in time equal the sum he had borrowed, and he would have his house free, virtually paying for it in instalments of five dollars monthly, and the interest on the amount he had borrowed. Such a bargain he could get nowhere else, and it stands to reason that more than one member should endeavor to obtain the advantage of being able to pay so gradually for his house and yet have it all his very own. Hence, whenever there is a sum of money ready for investment, there will probably be a number of applicants, and it will be a matter of embarrassment to know to whom to give the loan. But this awkwardness is again turned into a source of profit. Among those who apply there will be some to whom, for various reasons, the accomodation may be of considerably more moment than to others. It will be worth more to some than to the rest, and this difference will probably be capable of expression in dollars and cents. The loan, therefore, is put up at a sort of auction. Various members desirous of obtaining it bid against each other for the preference, agreeing that they will receive the sum offered less the amount bid by them. This difference is called the premium or bonus, which he undertakes to pay, together with the amount actually received by him, the two constituting his whole debt, to be discharged in the same manner and at the same time. It is a rule with these societies that a member's indebtedness by loan shall not exceed the paid-up value of the number of shares he holds in the association.

"The sources of profit are interest on the loans to members, premiums, and fines. The fact that the money so obtained is at once reinvested, and in like manner the interest derived therefrom, and so on ad infinitum enables the non-borrowing member to realize compound interest on his subscriptions; while to one wishing to become a borrower the fact that the loan can be repaid in small monthly instalments, and that the sum advanced is greater than private individuals would be willing to lend on the same security, offers substantial advantages. This the association can do without risk, since as each instalment is paid the security is by that much increased; thus property which at first might well seem inadequate security will at the end of six months be ample. To the workingman, above all, do these societies, when honestly conducted, commend themselves, in that their management is perfectly democratic, and that they have no preferred class to share its profits, no heavy sinking-fund to create and hold in reserve against possible contingencies, and in that it is the only plan by which he can become his own capitalist and create a source of wealth from which he can supply all reasonable demands, without the aid or interference of the outside capitalist. "However it may be elsewhere," says Chief-Justice Sharswood, "Philadelphia has become a city of comfortable homes for the poor by means of these organizations." Becket v. Uniontown B. & L. Assoc., 88 Pa. St. 211. 216. See also, in this connection, Wrigley, Workingman's Way to Wealth, pp. 5 et seq., 80.

5. Mutuality of the System.—If one man lent another $800 upon an agreement that the latter should repay him $1000 in monthly instalments of $20 in addition to legal interest upon the amount received, the contract would be clearly usurious; still less inviting would the arrangement appear if the obligation of the unhappy debtor was enforced by an elaborate system of fines and forfeitures. There must therefore be something peculiar to the building-association loan by which the debtor receives some quid pro quo in return for the onerous liabilities which he assumes, and by which the transaction, though apparently usurious and oppressive, is rendered really equitable and mutual. This mutuality lies in the fact that after the loan the borrower still retains his membership in the association and all the rights and privileges thereunto belonging; he stands to the association in the twofold relation of debtor and member. As debtor, he is bound to pay premium, interest, and dues; as member, he has a proportionate interest to the extent of his stock in his own payments; and whatever profit the association may derive from their future investment redounds to his own advantage by hastening the day of final settlement, and thereby shortens the time during which the payments must be continued. He is interested in his subscriptions both at the time of payment and at the final settlement, and, in the expressive language of Judge Sharswood, "the borrower at usury is himself also a lender at usury."[1]

1. Becket v. Uniontown Bldg. & L. Assoc., 88 Pa. St. 211, 216. "It would require $5 per annum to pay off $100 in twenty years, and the interest during the same period, crediting each payment on the principal, would be $77. Our building associations often wind up in six or eight years—that is, their common fund becomes $200 a share, to be distributed to the members or applied in discharge of their loans. Thus it will be seen that the borrower at usury is himself also a lender at usury, and, if he can by economy and self-denial manage to make his payments, is sure to come out in the end a large gainer." See also Wrigley, Workingman's Way to Wealth, pp. 67–70, in which he shows by actual calculation that in those societies in which the premiums range low and the profits are small the sum total actually paid by the borrower is greater than in those in which the premiums are high, the profits large, and the winding up thereby hastened.

In the leading case in Alabama the following explanation is given: "Their purpose (i.e., of building associations) is not banking, neither are they manufacturing or trading corporations. They have some elements of mutual aid, and if properly organized and prudently and faithfully conducted they furnish a safe and profitable depository for surplus earnings, notably for small surplus earnings. Under their workings many small sums contributed by the many shareholders are brought together monthly, and an aggregate sum is thus gathered in which, passing out immediately to one or more shareholders, furnishes a capital or stock in trade sufficient for permanent and profitable investment. Each month this process is repeated, furnishing capital or stock in trade for other shareholders. Thus the working is continued from month to month, until a sufficient sum is collected and disbursed to pay off and cancel all the shares of stock, at the value fixed in the articles of incorporation. The lettings of the moneys are frequently called loans, but they are not strictly loans. The principal is never to be repaid. It is an advance payment by the corporation of the agreed value the shares owned by the bidder are to represent and have at the final completion of the enterprise and the dissolution of the corporation. It is the policy of the association that the funds received on stock calls should not remain idle, and hence they are employed in advance liquidation of the demands the shareholders are severally to have at the dissolution. In anticipating payments of shares the payments are at the rate of $200 per share. But all payments cannot be made at the same time. Hence the competition. Hence the sale to the highest bidder. Those who obtain the first advance first realize the increased value of their shares, and so on, until the enterprise runs its course and winds itself up. Shareholders pay for their shares in stock calls $100 per share in instalments of one per cent a month, running through one hundred months—equal to eight years and four months. Discounting interest from the deferred payments, we have an average of four years and two months' interest saved. This would reduce the cash cost of shares to less than $73. Now, if those who receive early advance payment upon their shares, like the shareholders who are not paid in advance, are required to pay only the stock calls, it will readily be seen how inequitably such method of payment will work. Hence it is that those receiving payment in advance of others are required to pay for this privilege whatever premium they bid and bind themselves to pay. All such payments go to augment the fund for the payment of other shareholders and accelerate final completion of the purposes of the corporation, its final liquidation and dissolution." Stone, J., in Security Loan Assoc. v. Lake, 69 Ala. 456; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418. See also Hammerslough v. Kansas City Bldg. Loan, etc., Assoc., 79 Mo. 80.

Nature of the Contract of Loan—Summary of Authorities. — Nevertheless it must be admitted that a true understanding of the exact nature of the contract of loan is difficult, and the authorities differ. In England the transaction was viewed as a dealing in partnership funds. "The defendant was interested in the fund when it was advanced and when it was repaid. The rules of the society are in effect a mere agreement by partners that their joint contributions shall be advanced for the use of the one or the other, as occasion requires; and the transaction was not a borrowing by the maker of the note from the payee." Tindal, C. J., in Silver v. Barnes, 6 Bing. N. C. 180; s. c., 8 Scott, 300; 37 Eng. C. L. Rep. 335. In this case the society was unincorporated, but the principle was subsequently applied to corporations chartered under the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 32, and has been uniformly followed ever since. Burbridge v. Cotton, 5 De G. & Sm. 17; 8 Eng. L. & Eq. 57; 15 Jur. 1070; 21 L. J. ch. 201; Seagrave v. Pope, 1 De G. M. & G. 783; 15 Eng. L. & Eq. 477; 16 Jur. 109; 22 L. J. (N. S.) ch. 258; Cutbill v. Kingdom, 27 L. J. Ex. 177; 1 Exch. 494; In re Durham County Perm. Ben. Bldg. Soc.; Davis's Case; Wilson's Case, Law Rep. 12 Eq. 516; s. c., 25 L. T. Rep. (N. S.) 83; Ex parte Bath, 51 L. T. (N. S.) 520.

These cases are followed in Maryland, where the mortgage is given for dues only, and the association is organized under the Building Association Act. Robertson v. Homstead Assoc., 10 Md. 397; Balt. Perm. Bldg., etc., Soc. v. Taylor, 41 Md. 417; Williar v. Balt. Butchers' L., etc., Assoc. 45 Md. 562; Birmingham et al. v. Maryland & Perm. Homestead Assoc., 45 Md. 541 See also Citizens' Security & Land Co. v. Uhler, 48 Md. 455, in which it was held that the act of 1872, ch. 78, authorizing corporations not within the Building Association Act to take more than six per cent interest was unconstitutional, and that where the borrower, immediately on borrowing the money, executes a mortgage releasing or transferring to the company his shares of stock, thereby ceasing to have any interest in the profits earned by the corporation, the association is not within the act.

In Massachusetts and New Hampshire the decision in Silver v. Barnes, 6 Bing. N. C. 180, was applied in all its consequences to an unincorporated association. Delano v. Wild, 6 Allen (Mass.), 1; Bowker v. Mill River L. Fund. Assoc., 7 Allen (Mass.), 100; Shannon v. Dunn, 43 N. H. 194.

In Georgia a distinction between a formal sale of stock to the association and a mere loan is recognized on the ground of the borrower's continued interest in the society's affairs—his partnership relations. Parker v. Fulton L. & B. Assoc., 46 Ga. 166; Bibb County L. Assoc. v. Richards, 21 Ga. 592; Pattison v. Albany Bldg. & L. Assoc., 63 Ga. 373.

In both New Hampshire and Georgia it is left to the jury to determine whether the object of the organization is the "accumulating a fund by monthly subscriptions or savings of the members thereof to assist them in procuring for themselves such real estate as they may deem proper," or a mere device to evade the usury laws. Parker v. Fulton L. & B. Assoc., 46 Ga. 166; Shannon et al., Trustees Manchester L. & F. Assoc., v. Dunn, 43 N. H. 194.

In Virginia "the price of the shares is not a loan," but a redemption; they become the property of the association, and are sunk and extinguished, and the borrower loses his membership in the association. Winchester Bldg. Assoc. v. Gilbert et al., 23 Gratt. (Va.) 787; Cason v. Seldner et al.. 77 Va. 297.

In West Virginia the payment of interest upon the money lent was held to mark the transaction as one of loan, and the English decisions are said to be founded upon the wording of the statute of 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 32. Pfeister v. Wheeling Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 676. For extended review of decisions see this case.

The decisions in Kansas, New Jersey, and New York are inconsistent and vacillating. Hassey v. Citizens' Bldg. & Sav. Assoc. of Paola, 22 Kan. 624; Kekelnkaemper v. German Bldg. Assoc., 22 Kan. 549; Glyn et al. v. Home Bldg. Assoc., 22 Kan. 746; Clarkville Bld. & L. Assoc. v. Stephens, 11 C. E. Greene (N.J.), 351, 355; Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 428; Franklin Bldg. Assoc. v. Marsh, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 225; Washington Bldg. & L. Assoc. Pros. v. Hornbaeker, 13 Vr. (N. J.) 635; Dime Sav. Inst. v. Mulford, 4 Stew. (N. J.) 99; Citizens' Mutual Loan Assoc. v. Webster, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 263; City Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Fatty, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 347; Melville v. American Ben. Bldg. Assoc. et al., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 103.

In all these States, statutes enabling the association to recover the premium exist, and it is not believed that in the absence of such provision it could be recovered. Kekelnkaemper v. German Bldg. Assoc., 22 Kan. 549; Dime Sav. Inst. v. Mulford, 4 Stew. (N. J.) 99; Hamilton Bldg. Assoc. v. Reynolds, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 671.

In New York such recovery was refused in the case of an unincorporated association. Melville v. American Ben. Bldg. Assoc. et al., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 103.

In North Carolina, South Carolina, Nebraska, Tennessee, and Kentucky the transaction is considered simply a loan, and the premium is held to be usurious, and cannot be recovered. Mills et al. v. Salisbury Bldg. & L. Assoc., 75 N. Car. 292; Overby and Wife v. Fayetteville Bldg. & L. Assoc., 81 N. Car. 56; Columbia Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Bollinger, 12 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 124; Lincoln Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., Appellee, v. Graham, Appellant, 7 Neb. 173; Same v. Benjamin and Benjamin, Appellants, 7 Neb. 181; Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assoc., 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 418; Herbert v. Kenton Bldg. & Sav. Assoc. of Covington, 11 Bush (Ky.), 296; Gordon, etc., v. Winchester Bldg. & Accumulating Fund Assoc., 12 Bush (Ky.), 110.

In Pennsylvania the doctrine of Silver v. Barnes was held inapplicable. Bechtold v. Behm, 26 Pa. St. 269. And while the nature of the relationship sustained by a building association is at the present time more correctly appreciated, the legal position then taken has not been abandoned. North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463; Becket v. Uniontown Bldg. & L. Assoc., 88 Pa. St. 211.

In Indiana the premium was held not to be interest on money within the meaning of sec. 22, art. 4, of the constitution of Indiana, which prohibits, inter alia, the enactment of local or special laws on such subjects. McLaughlin et al. v. Citizens' Bldg. L. & S. Assoc., 62 Ind. 264; Shaffrey v. Workingmen's Sav. L. & B. Assoc., 64 Ind. 600.

In Alabama, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Connecticut, Iowa, and Ohio, the statute under which the association was incorporated is the exact measure of the legitimacy and binding effect of the contract. Only under the statute can it be enforced, and only so far as it is in accordance with the statute. Montgomery Mutual Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Robinson, 69 Ala. 413; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 403; Rhoads v. Hornerstown Bldg. Assoc., 82 Pa. St. 180; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15; Pfeister v. Wheeling Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 676; Mechanics' & Workingmen's Mut. Sav. Bank & Bldg. Assoc. of New Haven v. Wilcox et al., 24 Conn. 147; Hawkeye Ben. & L. Assoc. v. Blackburn, 48 Iowa, 385; Hagerman et al. v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186.

In Pennsylvania unincorporated societies are not within the provisions of the act of 1859, and cannot recover upon their mortgages more than the sum actually advanced with legal interest. Jarrett v. Cope, 68 Pa. St. 67; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15; Hansbury v. Pfeiffer, 12 Phila. 250. Nor do the provisions of this act apply to borrowers who are not members or who are not sui juris, and incapable of acquiring membership. Wolbach v. Lehigh Bldg. Assoc., 84 Pa. St. 211.

But this principle has not been extended to protect the husband of a married woman who joins with the wife in the deed and obtains the full benefit of the loan. Tanner's App., 95 Pa. St. 118.

In like manner it has been held in Connecticut that if a statute authorizes the receipt of a premium or bonus upon a loan to members, in addition to the legal rate of interest, such a loan is usurious, if made to a corporation incapable of becoming a stockholder or member. Mechanics' Bldg. Assoc. v. Meriden

6. General Powers.—Building associations possess all the attributes of corporations: (1) to maintain perpetual succession; (2) to have a common seal; (3) to sue and be sued in their corporate name;[1] (4) to contract, grant, and receive and hold real

Agency Company, 24 Conn. 159. Or if made to persons generally who are not members. St. Joseph, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Thompson, 19 Kan. 321.

A Maryland association incorporated under an act passed in 1868, ch. 427, directing the corporation "in all cases to deduct the interest and bonus or either of them in advance," added the premium to the face value of the loan and took a note and mortgage for the amount. It was held that the mortgages were liable only for the amount actually lent. "The privilege thus granted is a very unusual and extraordinary one, and no contract should be brought within its operation unless made and executed in strict conformity with the very terms of the law." Birmingham v. Md. Land & Perm. Homestead Assoc. of Balt. Co., 45 Md. 541.

What Charges are Deemed Usurious?—In general the clauses in acts of assembly authorizing the charging of certain rates of interest on the "loan" made by the association are to be construed as referring to the actual amount advanced after all deductions for premiums and otherwise have been made. Forest City, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Gallagher, 25 Ohio St. 208; Oak Cottage Bldg. Assoc. v. Eastman, 31 Md. 556; Balt. Perm. B. & L. Soc. v. Taylor, 41 Md. 409; Burlington Mut. L. Assoc. v. Heider, 55 Iowa, 424.

In many States, where premiums themselves may be taken, charging interest thereon is illegal. Post, § 10, PREMIUMS.

A stipulation that a new member shall pay a sum equal to all back dues up to time of joining society is just and reasonable, and in Maryland authorized by the act of 1868. Geiger v. Eighth German Bldg. Assoc., 58 Md. 569; Home Mut. Bldg. Assoc. v. Thursby, 58 Md. 284.

Stipulations for payment by borrower of incidental charges and expenses incurred about his loan are not usurious. Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 428.

Stipulations that the mortgagor shall pay conveyancing expenses, ground rent, taxes, and insurance will not render the loan usurious. Hanner v. Greenboro Bldg. & L. Assoc., 78 N. C. 188; Oberly v. Fayetteville Bldg. & L. Assoc., 81 N. C. 56; Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 10 Md. 397.

Rights of Borrower in Case of Usury.—In a case where the association is not entitled to the premium the borrower may set up usury as a defence. Citizens' Security & Land Co. v. Uhler, 48 Md. 516; Pattison v. Albany Bldg. & L. Assoc., 63 Ga. 373. Or may recover the amount paid beyond the sum actually advanced, with legal interest. Philanthropic Bld. Assoc. v. McKnight, 35 Pa. St. 470.

In North Carolina the borrower is held to be in pari delicto with the lender, and cannot recover back money paid. Latham et ux. v. Bldg. & L. Assoc., 77 N. C. 145.

The decision in North Carolina is contrary to the general principles applicable to the law of usury, founded upon a misapplication of the maxim in pari delicto, potior est conditio defendentis, and opposed to the course of authority. See Clarke v. Shee & Johnson, Cowp. (Eng.) 197, in which Lord Mansfield discusses the proper limitations to the application of the maxim, and also an able review of the course of decisions by Strong, J., in Philanthropic Bldg. Assoc. v. McKnight, 35 Pa. St. 470.

If the person entitled to set up the defence of usury allows the usurious claim to become merged in a judgment, it is then too late to set it up. Schnepf's App., 48 Pa. St. 37; Thatcher v. Gammon, 12 Mass. 268; Thompson v. Berry & Van Benthuysen, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 395; Berry v. Thompson, 17 Johns. Rep. (N. Y.) 436.

The plea of usury apart from fraud must conform to the statute, where as a defence it has been made the subject of special legislation. Pattison v. Albany Bldg. & L. Assoc., 63 Ga. 373. See also, in this connection, Citizens' Security & Land Co. of Balt. City v. Uhler, 48 Md. 455; Md. Perm. Land & Bldg. Soc. of Baltimore v. Smith et al., 41 Md. 516.

The personal character of the defence of usury applies to contracts by building associations. Thus it cannot be set up by one who purchases the mortgaged premises subject to the mortgage. Stein v. Indianapolis, etc., Assoc., 18 Ind. 237; People's, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Collins, 27 Conn. 142. Nor by one who for a full consideration assumes the payment of the mortgage. Burlington Mut. L. Assoc. v. Heider, 55 Iowa, 424.

1. Suits by the Association against Bor.

estate subject to the provisions of the governing statute on the subject; (5) to make by-laws. Whether any particular power is implied in the charter depends upon whether its exercise would be conducive to the accomplishment of the legislative intent in creating the corporation. Any act which tends to defeat the accomplishment of the object contemplated is necessarily unlawful; for "the person, whether natural or artificial, to whom a privilege is granted is bound, upon accepting it, to render to the public that service the performance of which was the inducement of the grant; and it is because of such obligation to render service to the public that the legislature has power to make the grant." [1] rowing Members.—In a suit by a building association upon a bond given to it containing the usual special conditions and provisos that upon the failure to make certain payments for a certain length of time the whole principal, with interest, fines, etc., shall become at once recoverable, the ordinary averment that the sum stipulated with interest yet remains unpaid is inapplicable. The declaration (or, if the action be by scire facias upon the mortgage securing the bond, the writ which takes its place) must show upon its face an immediate cause of action. There must be a specific allegation that there was a failure to pay instalments beyond the stipulated period of grace, and that the principal sum, etc., has actually become recoverable. Swift v. Allegheny Bldg. & L. Assoc., 82 Pa. St. 142; Second American Bldg. Assoc. v. Platt et al., 5 Duer (N. Y.), 675; Schaeffer v. Amicable Perm. Land & Loan Co. of Baltimore City, 47 Md. 126. But in the computation of the period fixed by charter or by-laws as the limit allowed before the whole debt becomes due, partial payments of dues, etc., are not to be counted. The period begins to run from the first day of the month next following the last month on which the dues, etc., were fully paid. Barndt v. Greul, 4 Leg. Gaz. (Pa.) 388; 1 Luz. L. Reg. 737; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 259.

The defendant, on his part, must distinctly aver that the payments have been made upon the claim in suit. The presumption is that they were made upon fines and dues. Selden v. Reliable Sav. & Bld. Assoc., 32 P. F. Smith (Pa.), 336.

It has been held, however, in Indiana that a complaint on a promissory note conditioned for the payment of assessments in a building association need not allege with particularity the method of making the assessments. Borchus v. Huntingdon Bldg., Loan, etc., Assoc., 97 Ind. 180.

Nor is it necessary for the association to exhibit copies of the by-laws and constitution in a complaint to foreclose a mortgage, nor if exhibited will they be considered part of the complaint. Newman v. Ligonier Bldg., Loan, etc., Assoc., 97 Ind. 295.

1. Gordon, etc., v. Winchester Bldg. & Accommodating Fund Assoc., 12 Bush (Ky.), 110.

In West Virginia, therefore, when the building-association law provides for incorporating homestead and building associations for the purpose of raising money to be used among the members in buying lots or houses or in building or repairing houses, and directs that the funds shall be used for no other purposes, it was held that if the corporation fails to see that money lent to a member is applied in buying lots or houses or in building or repairing houses, it forfeits its privilege of exemption from the usury law, but may enforce the payment of principal and legal interest but nothing more, although stipulated for, except reasonable fines for non-payment of dues. Pf. Feister v. Wheeling Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 676. In connection with the principle stated in the text see also Mills et al. v. Salisbury Bldg. & L. Assoc., 75 N. Car. 292; Latham and Wife v. Washington Bldg. & L. Assoc., 77 N. Car. 145; Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assoc. et al., 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 418; Mechanics & Workingmen's Mutual Savings Bank & Building Assoc. of New Haven v. Meriden Agency Co., 24 Conn. 159; Same v. Wilcox, 24 Conn. 147.

Implied Powers.—The general rule that a corporation may make any contract fairly within the purposes and objects of their incorporation except when prohibited by their charters or other statutes applies to building and loan associations, as also does the converse of the rule, that contracts of a corporation which are not within any of the powers expressly or impliedly granted are ultra vires. Therefore an executory contract between a building association and one of its members in respect of shares claimed by him in his own right, and in excess of the maximum number which under the statute a member may hold in his own right, is ultra vires, and cannot be enforced. Simpson v. Bldg. Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 349.

But the fact that a member holds a greater number of shares than is allowed by the by-laws of the association, but not in excess of the number limited by statute, is no defence to a claim which the association may have against him on account of such shares. Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186.

Borrowing Money.—In England societies incorporated under the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 32 may have a limited power to borrow conferred upon them by constitution or by-law. Laing v. Reed, 21 L. T. N. S. 773; Re Victoria Perm. Bldg. Soc., 22 L. T. N. S. 777. In the absence of such special provision in the constitution or by-law no such power can be implied. In re National Perm. Bldg. Soc., 22 L. T. N. S. 284. If the power so conferred is unlimited, it is held to be inconsistent with the legislative intent in creating the corporation and void. In re Vict. Perm. Bldg. Soc., 22 L. T. N. S. 777. To render the association liable in any given case under such a rule its particular exercise must be clearly within its intendment. "Thus societies have powers of borrowing for the special purpose indicated by their constitution, if those purposes do not violate any principle of law; but those powers of borrowing can only be for those special purposes within those limits." Moye v. Sparrow, 22 L. T. N. S. 156.

In America the point does not seem to have arisen frequently. In Maryland notes signed and given by building associations to members instead of money, the members giving mortgages to the building associations for the proceeds of the notes, the same as if they had received money, have been enforced, and their capacity to borrow money with a view to accomplish the purposes of their incorporation expressly recognized. Davis v. West Saratoga Bldg. Union No. 3, 32 Md. 285. See also Canton National Bldg. Assoc. v. Weber, 34 Md. 669; Jackson et al. v. Myers et al., 43 Md. 452; Muth v. Dolfield, 43 Md. 466.

In Pennsylvania and Ohio the power has been denied, but in the former State the point was not directly before the court, and in the latter the facts showed that the money was borrowed by the association partly with a view to trafficking in its own stock. Stiles's App., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 83; State v. Oberlin Bldg. & L. Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258. See, in this connection, Faulkner's App., 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 48; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 301 et seq. and Murray v. Scott, 9 App. Cas. (Eng.) 538.

Under no circumstances, either in the United States or in England, can the individual credit of members be pledged to lenders of money to the society, and a rule granting such power is ultra vires. In re Mut. Aid Perm. Ben. Bldg. Soc., 13 Am. & Eng. Cor. Cas. 638; L. R. 30 Ch. Div. 434.

In England it is held that even when the society is not authorized by its rules to borrow money, nevertheless if it has given the creditor deeds to its property as security for the loan, it cannot compel him to surrender the deeds without first tendering him the money lent. Re Durham Co. Bldg. Soc., 25 L. T. N. S. 83.

Investing in Real Estate.—In England a building society is not precluded from investing its surplus funds in the purchase of real estate. Mullock v. Jenkins, 14 Beav. 628; 21 L. J. Ch. 56. And where a rule of a building society directed that unemployed money should be invested "in such manner and upon such legal security" as the board of directors should deem necessary, it may be invested in freeholds. Grimes v. Harrison, 26 Beav. 435; 5 Jur. N. S. 528; 28 L. J. Ch. 823; 33 L. T. Rep. 115. Compare In re Kent Benefit Bldg. Soc., 30 L. J. Ch. 787; 4 L. T. N. S. 610; 7 Jur. N. S. 1045; 1 Dr. & Sm. 417; 9 W. R. 686; Lethbridge v. Kirkman, 25 L. J. Q. B. 89; 2 Jur. N. S. 372. See Caldwell v. Ernest, 28 L. J. Ch. 810; 27 Beav. 39. But this does not warrant the association in usurping the functions of a freehold land society. Grimes v. Harrison, 26 Beav. 435.

In Pennsylvania building and loan associations have no power to take or hold real estate beyond the limits fixed by statute. Miller's Estate, 2 Pearson (Pa.), 248; Rhoads v. Hornerstown Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 82 Pa. St. 180. And debts contracted by them in the purchase of real estate cannot be enforced against them. Faulkner's App., 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 48.

As to the general powers of building associations incorporated under the general law of Alabama to hold real estate and convey the same (not abridged by the act of 1870), see Cahall v. Citizens' Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 61 Ala. 232.

By the Code of California, §§ 640, 641,

7. Who are Members.—As in other corporations, membership in a building association is acquired by becoming the owner of stock, and any person who is capable of entering into a binding contract may become a member by subscribing to its stock.[1] In the absence of express statutory authority, neither infants nor married women can become members; and where the statute does permit such membership, the license without further authorization extends only to allowing the enabled individual or class of individuals to become investing or depositing members of the society, and, as such, subject to its rules and entitled to exercise the rights of membership.[2] It does not extend without express provision to that effect to an authority to borrow money, execute a valid security, or enter into any other contract with the association from which the subsisting inability, under the law, of the individual's condition would in the ordinary relations of life debar him.[3] Independent of express statutory authorization a corporabuilding societies may also exercise the functions of freehold land societies, and may hold real estate within $100,000 in value, at any one time, with a view to allotment to members.

Loans to Strangers and Persons not "sui juris."—It is said in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and seems to be the understanding in Indiana, Kansas, and Massachusetts, that a building association has power to lend its money to members only, and not to strangers. Wolbach v. Lehigh Bldg. Assoc., 84 Pa. St. 211, 217. See Stiles' App., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 83 (84); State v. Oberlin Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258; Poock et al. v. Lafayette Bldg. Assoc., 71 Ind. 357; St. Joseph & Kansas L. & Bldg. Assoc. v. Thompson et al., 19 Kan. 321; Howard Mut. L. & Fund Assoc. v. McIntire, 3 Allen (Mass.), 571.

In England and New Jersey the right to lend to strangers is admitted. Cutbill v. Kingdom, 1 Exch. 494 (505); 17 L. J. Exch. 177; Union Bldg. L. Assoc., etc., v. Masonic Hall Assoc., 2 Stew. (N. J.) 389 (392).

In Connecticut, under the act of 1850, the power of loaning to strangers was expressly recognized. Mechanics & Workingmen's Mut. Sav. Bank & Bldg. Assoc. v. Wilcox et al., 24 Conn. 159. This act allowed loaning to strangers when no members applied. But in all these cases the power has been expressly granted by statute, and where such is not the case the weight of authority is to hold the loan to outsiders unlawful. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., p. 312.

In Indiana the borrower was not permitted to defend against the building association, plaintiff, on the ground that it had exceeded its powers in loaning the money to one not a member. Poock et al. v. Lafayette Bldg. Assoc., 71 Ind. 357.

In Pennsylvania and Kansas the building association is allowed to recover from a borrower, not being a member, the amount loaned with interest. Wolbach v. Lehigh Bldg. Assoc., 84 Pa. St. 211; St. Joseph & Kansas L. & Bldg. Assoc. v. Thompson, 19 Kan. 321.

The principle appears to be that a building association can only lend to strangers when no member offering proper security applies for the loan, and that in making such loans the building association holds to the stranger the same relation as any other money-lender, and can recover only the principal and legal interest on the loan. Mechanics & Workingmen's Mut. Sav. Bank & Bldg. Assoc. of New Haven v. Wilcox, 24 Conn. 147; Same v. Meriden Agency Co., 24 Conn. 159; Wolbach v. Lehigh Bldg. Assoc., 84 Pa. St. 211, 217.

1. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 69; Davis on Law of Bldg., etc., Societies, p. 144.

2. A person non sui juris may withdraw the whole or any part of the investment if and when the rules of the society and the statutes governing them permit; he may give a valid discharge to the society for any sum so withdrawn. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 70.

3. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 70; Davis on Law of Bldg., etc., Societies, p. 144.

In Maryland the sale upon an infant's mortgage to a building association was set aside where there was no evidence that the infant had received any part of the money loaned, or that he was capable of perpetuating a gross fraud upon tion cannot become a member.[1] An executor or administrator of a deceased member does not ipso facto become a member, nor will a suit brought by him to enforce a liability of the society to the decedent, or an attempt to avail himself of the privileges of membership, render him such. If, however, he takes advantage of a rule allowing him to become a member, and is recognized as a member by the association, the relationship is created.[2] the association, and it being uncertain whether or not the mortgage was for his benefit. Monumental Bldg. Assoc., No. 2. of Baltimore City v. Herman et al., 33 Md. 128.

In Pennsylvania, under the Building Association Act of 1859 and its supplements, where a married woman capable of mortgaging her separate estate, but incapable of contracting except where expressly empowered by statute, and only to the precise extent granted by such authorization, gave a mortgage to a building association to secure the repayment of a loan together with fines, premiums, and dues, the association could recover from her no more than the amount actually loaned, with legal interest, and that notwithstanding the money received by her was expended in the improvement of her separate estate. Wolbach v. Lehigh Bldg. Assoc., 84 Pa. St. 211; Bldg. Assoc. v. Rice and Wife, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 12.

Where, however, being capable of giving a mortgage upon her separate property to secure her husband's debts, she joins him in executing such a mortgage to secure a loan which her husband, as a stockholder, procured from a building association, it was held to be a valid mortgage upon her separate property, covering premiums, fines, and dues. Juniata Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Mixell, 84 Pa. St. 313. See also Kingsessing Bldg. Assoc. v. Roan, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 15; Tanner's App., 95 Pa. St. 118; Hudson City Sav. Inst. v. McArthur et al., 8 N. Y. Weekly Digest, 63.

As to the nature of a married woman's interest in a building association, see Davis on Law of Bldg., etc., Societies, p. 147, and note (u.)

1. This would seem to flow from the design of the creation of building associations. Compare § 1 supra; North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton. And is in accord with the English decisions. Dobinson v. Hawkes, 16 Sim. (Eng.) 407.

2. This at least would appear to be the rule deducible from the only cases on the subject, and which both arose in England. The earliest case simply held that a claim by an administrator of an investing member on a policy of life insurance granted to the intestate by a society enrolled under the Friendly Societies Acts, 10 Geo. IV. c. 56 and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 40, is not a dispute "between the society and a member or a person claiming on account of a member" within the meaning of the 27th sec. of 10 Geo. IV., which requires such disputes to be determined by arbitration. "An administrator does not claim on account of a member but on his own account." Pollock, C. B., in Kelsall v. Tyler, 11 Exch. 513; 25 L. J. Exch. 153.

In the later case of Knox v. Shepherd, 2 L. T. N. S. 351, the 14th rule of the North London Ben. Bldg. Society provided that "in case of the death of any member his executors or administrators shall be entitled to his share or shares, and may vote and act in all cases whatever as fully as the deceased member whom they represent might have done if living." Another rule provided for the settlement of disputes between members and the society by arbitration. The administrator of a deceased member called at the office of the society and produced letters of administration granted to himself, and the deceased's club book showing his payments to the society in support of his title as administrator under the above rule, and from henceforth he acted and was treated by the society as the legal representative of the deceased. Subsequently he gave notice to withdraw the shares held in the society, and brought suit for fines and dues between the death of the deceased member and notice of withdrawal. It was held that, having taken advantage of the 14th rule, and having been treated by the society as a member, he could compel the society to arbitrate. "The society have adopted the defendant as a member, for they so treated him, for they fined him. The father paid everything up to his death, and this action is for sums accrued due since. The rule makes the administrator liable, but fines and subscriptions can be claimed from him only as a member. As an administrator he is not subject to the rules, but he has availed himself of them to come in and become a member.

One who gives a bond and mortgage to an association, reciting in the bond that he is a member thereof, and recognizing the obligation of the by-laws, is estopped to deny that he is a member in an action to foreclose the mortgage from the fact that he never signed the by-laws as required.[1] On the other hand, the receipt of payments on account of instalments due on the plaintiff's shares of stock after a full recovery on a mortgage given by him will estop the association from denying the existence of the stocks, and in consequence his membership.[2] In all dealings between the association and its members the stock book is prima-facie evidence of membership.[3]

8. Duties and Liabilities of Members.—Members of a building association are liable by virtue of their membership for (a) subscriptions, stock payments, or dues, for (b) fines and forfeitures, and for (c) contribution to the losses and necessary expenses of the organization.

(a) Subscriptions, Stock Payments, or Dues.—Subscriptions, stock payments, or dues may be defined as the fixed periodical contributions upon each share of stock held which by virtue of the original undertaking of membership in the society the holder thereof is liable to pay, whether he remain an investor or become a borrower.[4] The obligation to pay dues is contemporaneous with and if he is a member the dispute must be settled by arbitration." Cockburn, C. J.

Mr. Endlich is of opinion that the cases are inconsistent, and no inference can be drawn from them save that an administrator or executor is not ipso facto a member. His statement of facts in the latter case is very meagre. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc., § 73, n.

Where the charter of an association provides that in the event of the death of a stockholder who has obtained an advance his heirs or legal representatives may continue the membership, the death of a member works a dissolution of his membership; and if the privilege is exercised, such persons become members not in a representative capacity, but in their own right. Montgomery Mutual B. & L. Assoc. v. Robinson, 69 Ala. 413; 1 American & Eng. Corp. Cas. 401.

1. Howard Mutual L., etc., Assoc. v. McIntire, 3 Allen (Mass.), 571. And the general principle is asserted that a person is estopped from denying membership for like reasons after he has acted for years as a member, claiming and enjoying all the privileges of such. Parker v. U. S. Bldg., etc., Assoc., 19 W. Va. 744 (766).

But when land is purchased subject to a deed of trust to the association, which the purchaser agreed to discharge by monthly payments equal in amount to those agreed to be paid by the stockholder, the association cannot treat the purchaser as a stockholder and credit the monthly payments accordingly. Capitol Hill Bldg. Assoc. v. Hilton, 1 Mackey (D. C.), 107.

2. North American Bld. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463. But the acceptance must be clearly the act of the association. Card v. Carr, 1 C. B. N. S. 197; 26 L. J. C. P. 113. See post, § 12, n.

3. Dobinson v. Hawkes, 16 Sim. Eng.) 407; Bank of Commerce App., 73 Pa. St. 59; Assoc. v. Sendmeyer, 50 Pa. St. 67.

If an association should refuse to transfer shares on their books to a purchaser, he is not entitled to a mandamus to compel a transfer. State ex rel. Galbraith v. People's B. & L. Assoc., 43 N. J. L. 389. He has an adequate remedy in a suit for damages, and the measure of damages is the actual value of the stock at the time of the refusal. Germantown Union Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Sendmeyer, 50 Pa. St. 67; North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463. That is, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount paid on the stocks as dues, with interest thereon from the time of the several payments. North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463.

4. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. § 371.

membership in the society, arises from the inherent nature of the contract of membership, and ends only when membership ceases to exist. The undertaking is absolute;[1] the misbehavior of other members, their refusal to live up to their engagements, their persistent and deliberate default in the payment of dues, will not excuse similar conduct on the part of any particular one, nor relieve him of his liability to the association for his stipulated stock payments.[2] The association may maintain an action of assumpsit against a member for his dues,[3] and it is not necessary that it should give the member notice of his delinquency.[4] The statutes in the various States regulating building associations generally give them a lien upon the defaulting members' shares for the amount of the unpaid instalments and other charges and liabilities of membership.[5] The fact that a member has become a borrower in no wise affects his liability,[6] and it is customary to make his

1. This absolute liability, however, does not attach until, where the amount of capital stock is fixed and number of shares ascertained by the charter, the whole capital has been subscribed. Morrison et al., Receivers Chesapeake Mut. L. & Bldg. Assoc., v. Dorsey, 48 Md. 461.

2. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 84; Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 13 N. J. Eq. 427.

Defection may amount to dissolution. See Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 496–503.

The obligation to pay dues cannot extend beyond the existence of the association. Kisterbock v. Bldg. Assoc., 7 Phila. (Pa.) 185; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 496 et seq.

If the affairs of an association are placed in the hands of a receiver upon its becoming incapable of performing its obligations to its stockholders, the obligation to pay dues ceases. Low Street Bldg. Assoc. v. Zueker, 48 Md. 448; Peter's Bldg. Assoc. v. Jaecksch, 51 Md. 198.

Where the association without the consent of the defendant resolved to close its affairs and practically suspended business, and the defendant thereupon refused to make further payments upon his loan, and an action was commenced by the association to foreclose the mortgage, it was held that, as the association had practically dissolved, further payments by the mortgagor could not be required. Waverly, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Buck, 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 649.

The obligation to pay dues likewise ends on withdrawal, and the stock is cancelled. Miller v. Second Jefferson Bldg. Assoc., 50 Pa. St. 32. See also further, on this question when liability to pay dues and fines ceases, Cook v. Kent, 105 Mass. 246.

But the bringing of suit by the building association against a member does not relieve him from continuing his payments, or, upon neglect to do so, from exposing himself to the penalties resulting therefrom under the rules of the society. German Fair Hill Bldg. Assoc. v. Metzger, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 204; Union Bldg. L. Assoc. v. Masonic Hall Assoc., 2 Stew. (N. J.) 389.

3. Bldg. Assoc. v. Krebs, 7 Leg. & Ins. Repr. (Pa.) 21.

4. A statutory direction to corporations generally to give notice to members of calls upon unpaid subscriptions does not apply to a corporation under whose by-laws the subscribers to its stock are under a continuing requirement to pay a periodical instalment of a fixed amount on each share. Hence it has no application to a building association. Morris et. al., Recrs. Chesapeake Mut. Land & Bldg. Assoc., v. Dorsey, 48 Md. 461.

5. Such right of lien, however, rests upon statute and not upon common law. Field Corp. § 310, cit. Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Rogers v. Huntington Bank, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Grant v. Mechanics' Bank, 15 S. & R. 140; Sewall v. Lancaster Bank, 17 S. & R. 285; Utica Bank v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; Steamship Dock Co. v. Heron, 52 Pa. St. 280.

6. Having been subject to this liability in the former capacity of investor, he is not relieved from it by the fact of having incurred the additional obligation of a loan. Delano v. Wild, 6 Allen (Mass.), 1. A borrowing member still retains his membership. See ante, § 5 (n.). If there is any surplus of assets, it is even said he may come in for his share of it on mortgage or deed of trust secure the payment of dues, fines, and other charges in addition to the interest on the amount actually advanced.[1]

(b) Fines and Forfeitures.—To secure the prompt payment of dues, fines are imposed upon delinquent members, and the members may even be made liable to forfeiture of stock. Fines may be defined as impositions in the nature of liquidated damages upon members neglecting to pay, at the proper time, to the society any moneys which are due to the latter from them;[2] they are essentially an incident to membership in the association, the direct outgrowth of the obligation, resting upon every shareholder, regularly and punctually to pay the dues accruing periodically upon his stock.[3]

The power to impose fines depends upon authority conferred by statute, and in the absence of such authority they cannot be enforced, and if paid by the borrower may be defalked from the amount due by him to the association.[4] Fines cannot be collected at all unless they are imposed by charter or by-law,[5] and when so distribution. State v. Oberlin Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258.

1. Parker v. U. S. B., etc., Assoc., 19 W. Va. 744. Even after repayment of the loan, if the borrower still continues a member, the liability for subscriptions continues, and is secured by the mortgage. Post, § 11 (b).

During the continuance of the loan the subscriptions and interest upon the money advanced are usually consolidated, under the general term of redemption money or dues; what is said in this section simply applies to the member's liability for "dues" proper, or stock payments by virtue of his membership, and does not affect his liability for interest on the loan. The former is an incident of membership, the latter of the contract of loan. See, as to the relation of dues to interest, Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 373 et seq., and post, § 10.

2. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc. § 379.

Fines are not within the equitable doctrine concerning penalties, and are in the nature of liquidated damages. A member seeking to redeem a mortgage will be compelled to pay them, and they will be included in a decree of foreclosure. Parker v. Butcher, L. R. 3 Eq. 762, 36 L. J. Ch. 552; Provident Perm. B. Soc. v. Greenhill, L. R. 9 Ch. D. 122, 38 L. T. 140, 27 Week. Rep. 110; Shannon v. Howard Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 36 Md. 383.

The Supreme Court of California seems, however, to regard them as penalties. Occidental B. & L. Assoc. v. Sullivan, 62 Cal. 394.

And in Ocmulgee B. & L. Assoc. v. Thomson, 52 Ga. 427, it was said that the law will not enforce fines as such, but where they are slightly in excess of the actual injury caused by the default they are recoverable as stipulated damages.

In Mulloy v. Fifth Ward Bldg. Assoc., 2 McArthur (D. C.), 594, unreasonable fines were considered as penalties which would be relieved against.

The obligation to pay fines in case of default does not cease on filing a bill of foreclosure, but they are recoverable for the time which has elapsed since the filing of the bill. Union Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Masonic Hall Assoc., 29 N. J. Eq. 389.

If a member obtains a loan from the association, not only may his mortgage or deed of trust be made to secure the payment of dues, but fines also. Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186; Parker v. U. S. Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 744; Pfeister v. Wheeling Assoc., 19 W. Va. 676; Juniata Bldg. & Sav. Assoc. v. Mixell, 84 Pa. St. 313.

3. Dues and fines are payable in cash, and the treasurer has no right, and cannot be authorized by the officers, to receive anything but cash in payment thereof. People's Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Wroth et al., 14 Vr. (N. J.) 70.

4. Lincoln Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., Appellee, v. Graham, Appellant, 7 Neb. 173; Same v. Benjamin & Benjamin, 7 Neb. 181; Jarrett v. Cope, 68 Pa. St. 167; Rhoads v. Hoernerstown Bldg. Assoc., 82 Pa. St. 180; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 405.

5. Building Assoc. v. Schuller, 3 W N. C. (Pa.) 431.

imposed they must be certain and notorious;[1] and if the by-law imposing them admit of several constructions, the court will adopt that most favorable to the member and least favorable to the association.[2] Fines must be reasonable;[3] a second fine cannot be imposed for non-payment of the same dues,[4] nor is interest chargeable upon fines;[5] and, lastly, fines must be imposed for derelictions in duties incident to membership.[6]

In addition to fines, the rules of every society establish a limit beyond which indulgence cannot be claimed by derelict members, by providing for the forfeiture of their shares, when that limit is exceeded; and such rules, not imposing too short a period of grace, have expressly, upon general principles of law, been held reasonable, and within the legal power of building associations.[7] As in the

1. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 407; Davis on Law of Building, etc., Societies, p. 32.

2. Where the rule was that "mortgagors neglecting to pay their monthly repayments will be subject to fines at the rate of three per cent per share for the first month, and for each and for every succeeding month threepence per share additional on such repayments," the association was allowed to collect only one fine of threepence on each share of the defaulting member. Tierney's Est., 9 Ir. Rep. Eq. 1; 8 Ir. L. T. Rep. 29. See also Shannon v. Howard Mut. Assoc. of the City of Baltimore, 36 Md. 383; Monumental Perm. Bldg. & Land Society of Baltimore v. Lewin, 38 Md. 445; Bldg. Assoc. v. Schuller, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 431.

3. Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186. A fine of ten cents a share where the par value is $150 and the dues twenty-five cents a week is reasonable. McGannon v. Central Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 726.

So fines at the rate of a shilling per pound per month are reasonable. Parker v. Butcher, L. R. 3 Eq. 762, 36 L. J. Ch. 552.

The proper measure of fines is the real damage the building association sustains from the failure of a member to pay his dues, which damage is really equal to interest upon the amount, together with the proportion coming to it from the then obtainable premiums upon the sale of money. The fine should be slightly in excess of this, so as to make it more profitable to the member to pay promptly than to lag behind. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc., § 413. Compare Ocmulgee Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Thomson, 52 Ga. 427; Davis on Law of Building, etc., Societies, p. 165.

4. McGannon v. Central Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 726; Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186; Monumental, etc., Soc. v. Lewin, 38 Md. 445; Forest City, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Gallagher, 25 Ohio St. 208.

Without special mention fines cannot be imposed for default in payment of interest on loans. Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186; Forest City, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Gallagher, 25 Ohio St. 208; Shannon v. Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 36 Md. 383; Occidental Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Sullivan, 62 Cal. 394.

Under the code of West Virginia an association has no right to impose such a fine. Parker v. U. S. Bldg., etc., Assoc., 19 W. Va. 744.

5. Ingolby v. Riley, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 55.

6. Endlich on Law of Bldg Assoc. § 414.

An authority given by statute to an association to impose fines upon its members does not authorize their imposition upon persons holding the relation of depositors merely. Hagerman et al. v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186.

7. Card v. Carr, 1 C. B. N. S. 197; 26 L. J. C. P. 113; Endlich on Law of Bldg Assoc. § 99.

"Gross impropriety of conduct on the part of a member may also become the ground of forfeiture, when it is specifically and distinctly set forth as such in the charter or by-laws, or for which he is indictable by the laws of the land." Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 100, citing Angell & Ames Corp. §§ 412–417.

But without an express power in the charter, a corporator cannot be disfranchised unless the offence affects the good government of the society or is indictable by the law of the land; therefore a by-law to expel a member for villifying any members of the association is void. Commonwealth v. St. Patrick Society, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 440.

case of fines, so in that of forfeitures it is necessary that the causes of their occurrence should be distinctly defined by by-law,[1] and the method of their enforcement, as there pointed out, must be exactly followed.[2] Nor does forfeiture ever take place until declared against a member by the society or its competent officers.[3] Hence it may be waived by implication by the society or its officers,[4] and its enforcement is at all times at the option of the directors.[5]

"Forfeiture of stock is necessarily forfeiture of membership, and vice versa; and when it takes place the obligation to continue the payment of dues, the consequence and necessary incident of membership, necessarily is at an end."[6]

(c) Contribution to Losses and Expenses.—Being equally entitled with all the others, in the direct ratio of his interest in the society, to share in the common gains of the enterprise, every member is liable to contribute in the same proportion in which he expects to profit, to the losses and expenses incident to its management.[7] He cannot evade such liability by a transfer of the stock without the consent of the association;[8] nor can he be allowed to with-

1. Butchers' Beneficial Assoc., No. 1, 38 Pa. St. 298.

The supreme court will not approve a charter of incorporation for a beneficial society which gives the majority of the association power to expel any member "guilty of any offence against the law." The expression is too general for the purpose of the association. Ben. Assoc. of Brotherly Unity, 38 Pa. St. 299.

2. Wachtel v. Noah Widows & Orphans' Ben. Soc., 11 N. Y. Week. Dig. 457; Com. v. Pennsylvania Ben. Inst., 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 141; Dlligent Fire Co. v. Comm., 75 Pa. St. 291.

3. Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514; Reg. v. D'Eyncourt, 116 Engl. C. L. Rep. (4 Best & Smith), 820.

4. North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463.

5. Moore v. Rawlins, 6 C. B. N. S. 289.

6. Endlich on Bldg. Assoc., § 202; McCahan v. Columbia Bldg. Assoc. of East. Baltimore, No. 2, 40 Md. 226.

An association has no power to retire or cancel any part of the stock of a member against his will and without any default on his part, unless such power is reserved in the articles of incorporation. Bergman v. St. Paul Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 29 Minn. 275.

Accelerating Payments. — Intimately connected with the matter of forfeitures of stock on default of members is the question of accelerating payments for a like cause. A provision in a mortgage to secure an advance that in case of failure to pay the prescribed contributions, interest, dues, or fines, for a time specified, the whole sum advanced, together with all dues and fines owing by the mortgagor, shall be deemed due, and may be collected, is lawful, and a court of equity will not relieve against the consequences. Concordia Sav. & Aid. Assoc. v. Read, 93 N. Y. 474.

And where the mortgage contains a provision that in case of default the association might sell under the statute, and invest the overplus, if any, and draw for, and apply it from time to time as required to the payment of all accruing dues, fines, etc., until the determination of the association, the association is entitled, on judgment of foreclosure, to have a provision inserted directing the surplus to be invested accordingly. Franklin Bldg. Assoc. v. Mather, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 274.

But a provision in a mortgage given to secure monthly instalments, that if default should be made "in the said monthly payment for the space of six months after they, or any of them, should become due," it should be lawful for the association to advertise and sell the mortgaged premises at public auction, according to statute, precludes the association from suing to foreclose the mortgage within the six months, as well as from proceeding under the statute. Second American Bldg. Assoc. v. Platt, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 675. See also Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 69 Am. Dec. 154.

7. McGrath v. Hamilton Sav. & L. Assoc., 44 Pa. St. 383.

8. Everhart v. West Chester R., 28 Pa. St. 339.

draw for the purpose of escaping his just proportion of the common burden.[1] Nor is his liability in any way affected by the fact that he has become a borrower, so long as he still continues a member. Having been subject to this liability in his former capacity of investor, he is not relieved from it by the fact that he has incurred the additional obligation of a loan.[2] If, however, on becoming a borrower his membership is relinquished,[3] he bears to the association the relation of debtor simply; and the same result obtains where a borrower withdraws in accordance with the rules of the association, pays off his loans, and has his stock marked "cancelled" and "withdrawn."[4] If the association be incorporated, as a general proposition the extent of a member's liability is his stock interest.[5] And if he is himself a creditor of the corporation he may set off his debt when sued by the association to enforce this statutory liability.[6]

9. Rights of Members.—The rights acquired by a member on joining the association, as incident to membership, are: (a) the right to continue a member of the organization until the latter has run its course, and to receive on winding up the par value of his stock; (b) the right to withdraw; (c) the right to receive a loan. Of these, the first has been sufficiently considered.[7]

1. McGrath v. Hamilton Sav. & L. Assoc., 44 Pa. St. 383; United States Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Silverman, 85 Pa. St. 394; Wittman v. Bldg. Assoc., 7 W. N. C. (Pa.) 80.

An allegation in the association's affidavit of defence to a suit by a withdrawing member for a refusal to make the payment demanded by him upon statutory notice of withdrawal, that the association had, owing to the depreciation of real estate, sustained heavy losses, and incurred liabilities which should be paid before the stockholders were permitted to withdraw, is insufficient unless it set forth losses incurred before the plaintiff's withdrawal. United States Bldg. & Loan Assoc. v. Silverman, 85 Pa. St. 394.

Such an allegation is a defence to the extent of the withdrawing member's proportionate share of the expenses of the association incurred prior to acceptance of the notice of withdrawal, and that sum can be deducted from the amount otherwise coming to him. Whether or not he would be liable for losses incurred between the time of acceptance of notice of withdrawal and actual withdrawal by payment of "bonus" and cancellation of stock would depend upon the status of withdrawing members; as to which see post, THE RIGHT TO WITHDRAW.

A building association has the right to retain from the withdrawing stockholders their proportion of probable loss sustained by reason of the purchase of real estate sold under its mortgage, which had depreciated, even before the loss has been finally determined by the sale of the real estate, where it is evident there will be a loss. The society may have the property appraised by a committee, and fix the loss and assess the same on each share of stock pro rata. Knoblauch v. Robert Blum Bldg. & L. Assoc., No. 2, 8 Pitts. Leg. Jur. N. S. 39; Paffert v. Same, 8 Pitts. Leg. Jur. N. S. 40. See also Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 105.

2. McGrath v. Hamilton Sav. & Loan Assoc., 44 Pa. St. 383; Pattison v. Albany Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 63 Ga. 373.

3. Bowker v. Mill River, etc., Assoc., 7 Allen (Mass.), 100.

4. Miller v. Jefferson Bldg. Assoc., 50 Pa. St. 32.

So, after a shareholder has redeemed his stock, he cannot participate in the profits of the business thereafter. Overby v. Fayetteville Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 81 N. Car. 56.

5. State Sav. Assoc. v. Kellogg, 63 Mo. 540.

6. Remington v. King, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 278.

7. As to the right to continue a member of the organization, see the article on AMOTION, vol. 1, p. 557.

As to the right of a member to receive the par value of his stock on winding up, see ante, §§ 4, 5.

The Right to Withdraw.—Inasmuch as a member's relation to the association is essentially that of one of a partnership for a definite period of time, entitled upon its expiration to the profits upon his investments in the enterprise, his failure to continue in the concern is in the nature of a breach of contract, upon which the loss of his previous contributions might not unnaturally be held to follow. To avoid such contingency, therefore, a provision, as politic in the interest of the building association as just and reasonable to its members, is usually made an integral part of the scheme, that a member desiring to withdraw shall be allowed to do so, with the privilege of receiving from the society the amount paid in by way of subscription (after deducting all fines and charges against him), together with such share of the profits of the association as may appear just and warranted by its business.[1] The right thus obtained is founded upon statute, charter, or by-law; it is a privilege reserved, not a duty imposed; if the member elect to exercise it he must comply with the terms prescribed.[2] To obtain the advantage of withdrawal, notice, if required, must be given.[3] If, however, the right is secured by statute, all provisions as to the matter in a charter, granted by the courts, or in a by-law of the association itself, if inconsistent with the provisions of the statute, are invalid;[4] and where by the rules of the association the grounds of withdrawal are to be submitted for the approval of a board of trustees or directors, such officers cannot withhold their approval without resonable cause.[5] In construing a by-law relative to withdrawal, the court will lean towards that construction most favorable to the members;[6] and where a

1. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 127.

2. Security Loan Assoc. v. Lake, 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418; 69 Ala. 456.

3. Hartford Coöperative Mut. Homestead Co., 128 Mass. 494.

4. Rhoads v. Hornerstown Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 82 Pa. St. 180; Miller v. Jefferson Bldg. Assoc., 50 Pa. St. 32.

5. Wetterwulgh v. Knickerbocker Bldg. Assoc., 2 Bos. (N. Y.) 381. In this case the rules of the association provided that if any member, by reason of sickness, removal from the city, or misfortune, were unable to continue his subscriptions, he should give notice of his intention to withdraw; and in case the board of trustees were satisfied as to the grounds of withdrawal, the whole amount of subscriptions paid in by the member should be returned to him A member gave notice in due form of his intention to withdraw on the ground that he was "no longer able to continue the payment of his subscriptions to the association, owing to various misfortunes, losses in business, sickness in his family, and the rigor of the times." The approval of the trustees being withheld, suit was brought by the member against the society. It was held that he must be permitted to prove the truth of his alleged grounds of withdrawal, which were set forth in his complaint and denied in the building association's answer, and that if he proved upon these grounds his total inability to continue his subscriptions, and that there was nothing in the pecuniary circumstances of the building association furnishing any reason why the money paid into it should not be returned, he might recover it back, although the board of trustees may not have declared themselves satisfied as to the grounds of his withdrawal. The trustees, it was said, could not withhold their consent arbitrarily when no ground existed or could be suggested for their so doing.

6. Thus, the by-laws of an association provided that "in case any member by reason of sickness, removal, or through misfortune is unable to continue the payment of his subscription, he may give notice to the secretary of an intention to withdraw from the association, and in case the directors are satisfied as to the by-law is favorable to a member, and he has acted on the strength thereof, the association is estopped from abrogating the rule, and cannot set up that it is ultra vires.[1] One who has become a borrower and whose stock is in pledge cannot withdraw until he redeems his stock by repayment or tender of the amount due.[2]

The right to withdraw does not entitle the member to an account of profits,[3] but merely to a sum equal to subscriptions paid in, less all fines and legal charges, and to such proportionate amount of the profits as the by-laws may declare.[4] Acceptance of notice of withdrawal terminates membership in the association; the member at once assumes the position of a creditor, and may recover the amount due in assumpsit, but the judgment and execution will be controlled by the court as justice and right may require.[5] grounds of withdrawal his whole amount of subscription shall be returned except the entrance fee," and that "any person wishing to withdraw for the above reason or otherwise," and who shall have been a member for a certain length of time "and be clear of the books," shall be entitled to a certain interest on that amount. It was held that any person having been a member for the time specified, and being "clear of the books," might withdraw without leave of the directors, and was entitled to the benefits set forth in the by-laws. The requirement of the director's approval applied only to those who wished to withdraw for the reasons given in the by-laws and had not been members for the specified time. Fuller v. Salem & Danvers Loan & Fund Assoc., 10 Gray (Mass.), 94; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 135.

1 Miller v. Jefferson Bldg. Assoc., 50 Pa. St. 32; Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 428.

2. Watkins v. Workingman's Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514; Laurel Run Bldg. Assoc. v. Sperring, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 340; Anderson Bldg. Loan Fund & Sav. Assoc. v. Thompson, 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 196; 88 Ind. Rep. 445; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 151 et seq. See also Barry on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 26; Pabst v. Trustees, etc., of Economical Bldg. Assoc., 1 McArthur, 385.

Under the act of 1859 a stockholder cannot withdraw after the stock has reached par, and the association exists only for purposes of liquidation. The only object of such withdrawal is to gain the right to sue immediately for the value of the stock. This would be gaining an unfair advantage, which the law does not favor. Laurel Run Bldg. Assoc. v. Sperring, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 340.

3. Such right would be inconsistent with the nature of the relationship subsisting between a building association and its members, and the difficulty of estimating the sum to which the member would be entitled amounts to a practical impossibility. Endlich Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 128 et seq.; Citizens' Mut. Loan & Accumulating Fund Assoc. v. Webster, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 263; Watkins v. Workingman's Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 97 Pa. St 514.

4. This is the simplest way of making the estimate; and in Pennsylvania has been prescribed by the act of April 12, 1859, P. D. 183. United States Bldg. Assoc. v. Silverman, 85 Pa. St. 394; Endlich Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 130.

Where, as formerly in Connecticut, the shares of a building association are a regular feature in the stock market, and have an ascertainable value by reason of that fact, the difficulty is readily removed. Babcock v. Middlesex Sav. Bank & Bldg. Assoc., 28 Conn. 302.

If the charter provides that on the death of a stockholder his legal representatives might receive the net value of his stock, a statement in the bank-book of the decedent of the computed value of his stock, made by the treasurer of the association, is not conclusive upon it. Babcock v. Middlesex, etc., Bldg. Assoc., 28 Conn. 302.

5. United States Bldg. & Loan Assoc. v. Silverman, 85 Pa. St. 394; O'Rourke v. W. Penn. Loan & Bldg. Assoc., 93 Pa. St. 308; Wetterwulgh v. Knickerbocker Bldg. Assoc., 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 381; Hennighausen v. Fischer, 50 Md. 583.

A member may recover the amount due him by assumpsit, using the common counts. Haigh v. United States Bldg. etc., Assoc., 19 W. Va. 792.

Status of Withdrawing Member.—A member who has perfected his right to withdraw by complying in all respects with the requirements of the governing statute is not estopped by a proviso that at no time shall more than one half the funds in the treasury be applied to the demands of withdrawing stockholders, from bringing suit for the recovery of the amount due, until the treasury has funds sufficient to meet his claim. To hold otherwise, it was said, would enable the association to defraud the member of all benefit from his right of withdrawal by keeping itself in a state of quasi insolvency. The proviso merely intended that the operations of the society should not be embarrassed by having the whole amount of its cash assets taken in order at once to pay the withdrawing stockholders; and this object is amply served by enabling the court to restrain the plaintiffs' execution in order to give the building association a reasonable time to raise the money without undue derangement of its affairs. United States Bldg. Assoc. v. Silverman, 85 Pa. St. 394; Nat., etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Hubley, 34 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 6.

As to liability of withdrawing stockholder for his proportion of losses sustained prior to notice of withdrawal, see Wiltman v. Concordia Bldg. Assoc., 7 W. N. C. (Pa.) 80, and ante, § 8 (c).

He is not liable for dues subsequently accruing. Miller v. Jefferson Bldg. Assoc., 50 Pa. St. 32.

Nor is a member bound by new rules after he has given notice of an intention to withdraw. Armitage v. Walker, 26 L. T. 182; 2 Jur. N. S. 13; 2 Kay & J. 211.

In England the theory that a withdrawing stockholder, who has complied with all the prescribed requirements, assumes the position of a creditor, is consistently carried out. Thus, when a society was ordered to be wound up, and it appeared that the assets were sufficient to pay the outside creditors, but not sufficient to pay the investing members in full, it was held that the investing members who had given notice of withdrawal before the commencement of the winding up, but had not been repaid, were entitled to be paid next to the outside creditors, and in priority to those who had given no notice of withdrawal. In re Blackburn & Dist. Ben. Bldg. Soc., 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 182; Eng. L. Rep. 24 Ch. D. 421. Affirmed in Walton v. Edge by the House of Lords, Nov. 1, 1884, 52 L. T. N. S. 666.

In Pennsylvania, on the other hand, it has been held that a withdrawing stockholder who held a withdrawal order from the treasurer of the association for the withdrawal value of his stock was not a creditor within the meaning of the assignment laws governing assignments for the benefit of creditors, and was not entitled to any priority over other members. "While, in a qualified sense withdrawing stockholders may be considered creditors of the association, their rights as against those with whom they have been associated are very different from those of general creditors whose claims are based wholly on outside transactions. If the association has been prosperous, they have a right under certain limitations and restrictions to demand and receive their proportionate share of the accumulated fund. But if bad investments have been made, or losses have been sustained before actual withdrawal, they must bear their just proportion thereof. That right, it was held in United States Bldg & Loan Assoc. v. Silverman, 4 Nor. (Pa.) 394. may be enforced by appropriate proceedings at law; but the right of withdrawal and the extent to which it may be exercised presupposes that at least a relative proportion of the assets will remain for the benefit of those who continue to be active members of the association. After expenses, incident to the administration of its assets, are deducted, the general creditors, if any, should be first paid in full, and the residue of the fund should be distributed among those whose claims are based upon the stock of the association, whether they have withdrawn and hold orders for the withdrawal value of their stock, or not. Both classes are equally meritorious, and in marshalling the assets neither is entitled to priority over the other. The claims of each are alike based upon their relation to the association as members thereof. Orders issued to withdrawing stockholders are merely evidence of their interest in the assets remaining after paying general creditors." Sterrett, J., in Christian's App., 102 Pa. St. 188, 189. See also In re Estate of Natl. Sav., L. & Bldg. Assoc., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 79; Chriswell's App., 100 Pa. St. 488.

Suits by Stockholders against the Association.—A withdrawing stockholder in a building association can only recover the withdrawal value of his stock under the constitution and by-laws of the association, and not its par value, even though it has matured. After the maturity of the stock, a stockholder is entitled not to the matured value of the stock, but to an equal division of the assets, less expenses and losses. Laurel Run Bldg. Assoc. v. Sperring, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 340.

Right to Receive a Loan.—The right to receive a loan is an essential incident of membership, and arises from the nature and objects of the association.[1] An association having funds cannot refuse to lend them to its members in good standing offering proper security.[2] The power to lend money to members when not expressly conferred by statute or charter may be implied from the general objects of the association.[3] If a statute confer express power to lend money to shareholders upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the by-laws, a loan made not as

Nor in Pennsylvania can a member obtain judgment against the association, for want of an affidavit of defence, for the value of his shares merely upon the strength of the report of auditors that the shares were at par, and before a meeting has been convened to wind up and make distribution. Britton v. American Bldg. & L. Assoc., 12 Phila. Rep. (Pa.) 430. Nor does the report of auditors fixing the value of the shares entitle a withdrawing member to a judgment to that amount for want of an affidavit of defence, the value of the shares being liable to a deduction. Love v. Bldg. & L. Assoc., 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 303.

Building associations form no exception to the general principle that a stockholder qua stockholder cannot sue the corporation. If he is not content to await the winding up of the concern, his course is to withdraw and bring suit as a withdrawing stockholder. O'Rourke v. W. Penna. Loan & Bldg. Assoc., 93 Pa. St. 308. "It is, however, a right belonging to every member of a building association, by virtue of his membership, in a proper case, and under proper circumstances, to invoke the jurisdiction of a court of equity to wind up the society, and thus compel a settlement." Endlich Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 145. See also, post, § 13; Mutual Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Archbold, 4 East, Rep. 338; Arling v. Kenton Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 26 Am. Law Reg. 273; Seibel v. Bldg. Assoc., 2 N. East. Rep. 417; Mechanics & Workingmen's Bldg. Assoc. v. Monroe, 6 Cent. Repr. (S. C. Pa.) 580. (Decided Jan. 17, 1887.)

To such a bill it has been said that all the shareholders, or at least all the delinquent shareholders, should be made parties. Cason v. Seldner, 77 Va. 293; Arling v. Kenton Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 26 Am. Law Reg. (S. C. Ky.) 273. Compare post, § 13.

1. As to the general nature of this right, see §§ 4. 5.

Under the West Virginia Homestead and Building Association Act it is held to be incumbent upon the association to see that the money loaned is expended in purchasing real estate or in building or repairing houses. Pfeister v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 19 W. Va. 676. In England, Pennsylvania, and Ohio no such necessity exists. Cutbill v. Kingdom, 1 Exch. 494, 17 L. J. Exch. 177; Juniata Bldg. & Loan Assoc. v. Mixell, 84 Pa. St. 313; Johnston v. Elizabeth Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 14 W. N. C. 247; Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186.

2. State v. Oberlin Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258.

Under a by-law providing that "each stockholder, not in arrears, for each $200 worth of stock he may hold in this corporation be entitled to receive a loan of $200 of stock from its funds at 6 per cent interest," a stockholder not in arrears is entitled to a loan as a matter of right. Bergman v. St. Paul Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 12 N.W. Repr. 122; 29 Minn. 282. Defective title to the property offered as security is, however, always good ground for refusal. Conway v. Log Cabin Perm. Bldg. Assoc., 52 Md. 136.

3. Thus the object of an association as stated in the act of incorporation was "the accumulation of a fund by small monthly instalments, to enable its members to purchase real estate, erect buildings, redeem mortgages, satisfy ground rents, loan money, pay taxes, and effect other similar purposes." It was claimed on behalf of the defendant that the charter did not confer power upon the corporation to loan money; that it had authority only to accumulate funds by small monthly instalments; that by the terms of the charter it was the members and not the corporation who were enabled to "build houses," etc. But the court held otherwise: "What was the fund accumulated for? To enable its members to do certain things specified in the charter. How could it enable them to do these things? By loaning them money from its accumulated fund. By fair implication, it was one of the purposes of the prescribed in the by-laws is not ultra vires.[1] But a shareholder bidding off a loan put up at auction cannot compel the association to lend him the money if it subsequently refuses to do so.[2]

10. Loans and their Incidents.—The general nature of a building-association loan has already been sufficiently considered.[3] Incident to every such loan are (1) stock payments or dues; (2) interest; (3) fines; (4) premiums; and (5) security.

Stock Payments or Dues are properly an incident of membership, and can only be deemed incident to the loan in so far as the security is conditioned upon their continued payment.[4]

Interest is so much an ordinary incident to a loan, that the authority to loan implies the right to take it.[5] It must be of the legal rate, and in the absence of express statutory sanction cannot be charged upon more than the amount actually advanced.[6] The interest reserved by a building association upon an advance to one charter, and one of the powers intended to be conferred upon the company by it, to loan its accumulated fund to its members." Massey v. Citizens' Bldg. & Sav. Assoc. of Paola, 22 Kan. 624.

1. On suit to foreclose a building-association mortgage, defendant's counsel proposed to show by the evidence that the loan was not in accord with the by-laws of the association. Held, immaterial and irrelevant. "The lending of money to shareholders on mortgages of real estate, on such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the by-laws, is one of the express powers conferred upon building and loan associations. Code of, 1876, § 1943, subd. 5. The loan to appellant may have been in conformity to, or may have been in contravention of, the by-laws of the association, but it was not ultra vires. By-laws of a corporation are not enforced by avoiding contracts made in violation of them." Kelly v. Mobile Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 64 Ala. 503. See also Agg. & Ames Corp. § 262.

2. Conklin v. People's, etc., Assoc., 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 240.

Equity will not enforce specifically a contract to loan or pay money, the reason being that there is always in such cases an adequate remedy at law by suit for damages for breach of contract. Rogers v. Challis, 27 Beav. 175; Larios v. Garety, L. R. 5 P. C. 346. Nor, on the other hand, can assumpsit be maintained against the associations for the money: "We have failed to see any principle upon which an action like this can be supported. The appellant is not entitled to the money claimed as his absolutely; his only claim, to say the most, is solely as a temporary loan. How and in what form could a judgment be entered so as properly to limit the time for which the money sought to be recovered is to be held by the plaintiff? The judgment could only be for a sum certain, and would finally settle and determine what amount belonged to the plaintiff. It would be conclusive upon the parties, and would as a necessary consequence estop the defendant from setting up afterwards that the money so received was loaned to the plaintiff. We are clear that this action cannot be maintained. The remedy of the appellant might be by an action on the case for breach of contract, but certainly cannot be on assumpsit." Conway v. Log Cabin Perm. Bldg. Assoc., 52 Md. 136.

3. See MUTUALITY, ante, § 5.

4. STOCK PAYMENTS, ante, § 8 (a).

5. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 374.

6. Post, § 10. PREMIUMS.

It follows from the doctrine that payments upon stock are not payments upon the loan (which is a necessary consequence of the fact that stock payments are incident to membership); that is, that payments of dues are not intended to be applied as soon as made ipso facto, as partial payments to the pro tanto extinguishment of the debt, but are paid as the capital of the company, and paid alike by those who do and those who do not take loans; that the figure upon which the interest is to be paid, and hence the amount of the interest itself, does not vary from the time of taking the loan until it is finally discharged, and that consequently the reservation of an unvarying amount of interest for the whole period of the loan, whilst at the same time the borrower's stock payments are going on, is not usurious. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 374; Citizens' Mutual L. & Accumulating of its members ceases when it is reimbursed for the advance.[1] In many building associations interest upon the loan and stock payments are consolidated under the name of "redemption money" or "dues," and form but a single payment.[2] When the "dues" have been so united by the by-laws, their subdivision for the purpose of imposing separate fines for the non-payment of each is improper.[3]

Fines may be imposed for non-payment of either subscriptions or interest.[4]

Premiums. — "The premium is a bonus charged to a stockholder wishing to borrow, for the privilege of anticipating the ultimate value of his stock, by obtaining the immediate use of the money his stock will be worth at the winding up."[5] It is in effect the conventional difference between the par value of the share advanced and the amount actually received by the borrower. It is not a cash payment which he is obliged to make upon obtaining his preference; nor can it properly be said to be a deduction made at the time from any money belonging to him.[6] It is

Fund Assoc. v. Webster et al., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 263; City Bldg. & L. Co. v. Fatty, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N.Y.) 347; Red Bank Assoc v. Patterson, 12 C. E. Greene (N. J.). 223

Payments on account of interest are usually made monthly or weekly according to the rules of the society. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 374.

1. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 375, and cases cited.

2. "The dues per share of an investing member being a certain fixed amount per week or per month, these dues, it is said, become increased by another fixed amount per week or per month after he has received his advancement, and usually this additional payment is the amount for a week or a month of the interest, at the legal rate, either upon the nominal par value of the share advanced, or upon the amount actually received by the borrower." Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 373.

3. Shannon v. Howard Mutual Bldg. Assoc. of Baltimore, 36 Md. 383. See also Hanner et al. v. Greensboro Bldg. & L. Assoc., 78 N. Car. 188; Ex parte Osborne; In re Goldsmith, L. R. 10 Ch. App. 41; Clarkville Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Stephens, 11 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 351; Delano v. Wild, 6 Allen (Mass.), 1.

4. Parker v. Butcher, L. R. 3 Eq. 762; 36 L. J. Ch. 552.

In Ohio fines are not allowed upon default in payment of interest on the loan, because, it is said, the object of fines being to reach the member in his relation as member, the statute did not contemplate exposing him under the same clause to additional and separate penalties, in a character which is distinct from that of membership, viz., debtor. Hagerman et al. v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186; Forest City United L. & Bldg. Assoc. v. Gallagher et al., 25 Ohio St. 208.

Were the advancement by a building association a mere loan, and the payment of interest a mere consideration for the forbearance of that loan, this reasoning might be held to be decisive. But its force is materially diminished when it is remembered that the transaction is not one of loan merely, and that when the advancement is taken the payment of interest or its equivalent, is just as much a duty belonging to membership as the payment of dues. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 415. All that has been said as to the payment of premiums (ante, § 5) applies equally to the payment of interest.

5. Wrigley, The Workingman's Way to Wealth, p. 67

6. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 388.

The borrower sells the future dividend upon his shares at a discount; the society its funds at a premium; but there is neither a transfer of money to the society to cover the premium, nor a deduction from anything belonging to the borrower to liquidate the debt. The taking of a prepayment on the part of the society would undoubtedly be beyond what the legislature contemplated, and therefore usurious. Nor can it be regarded as an actual deduction of money, either belonging to him, in the hands of the society, or which he was entitled to receive in substance the pecuniary standard by which the value, to the member who obtains the loan, of the preference over other members seeking the same, is determined.[1] Since, however, in offering its money to borrowers, the society adopts as the basis of its loan the par value of its stock for purposes of computation, the premium must be treated as a deduction,[2] and must ordinarily be from it. At the time when he received the loan, he had as yet nothing in the society but a prospective interest in its final accumulations, in proportion to the number of his shares. These are, to be sure, estimated at a certain figure. They may, however, never reach it; they may, indeed, exceed it; but, for the present, there is no basis for a deduction—no certain figure describing an amount which belonged to him, or which he was entitled at the time to receive. Hence it was said by Paxon, J., in Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. & L. Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514, in answer to a claim by the defendant in a judgment which had been given by him as borrower, to a building association, and which embraced the whole debt—principal, premium, and interest: "It is a mistake to suppose, as was claimed by the defendant, that he has paid the premium. He only promised to pay it. It was inserted in the judgment note, and is now being collected."

In Low Street Building Association No. 6 v. Zueker, 48 Md. 448, the transaction is thus described: "The association proposes to sell to the shareholder the right of presently receiving the fixed value of the shares upon being allowed a certain deduction from the amount, commonly called a bonus, it being in fact a deduction made at the time, and the shares thus discounted or redeemed are to be paid for by the continuance of the subscriptions, and the payment of weekly dues, and fines, if any incurred, until the required amount shall be raised to pay each unredeemed shareholder the fixed value of his shares in full." Mr. Endlich holds this description to be inaccurate. "It is not 'the right of presently receiving the fixed value of the shares' which the society sells, subject to any deduction upon that value, but the right of anticipating that fixed value by receiving what, in the borrower's opinion, may presently be equal to that future dividend. The difference between these two values, the premium, he promises to make up in raising his share, for the benefit of all the members of the society, to its par value. When that is accomplished, the society absorbs the whole, and then only is the premium paid." Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 390, n. (1).

1. See §§ 5, 6.

2. But it is apparent that this is a rule of computation merely necessitated by the fact that a member is ordinarily entitled to incur liabilities to the association not exceeding, in the whole, the par value of the shares he holds in the stock. Now, if it were attempted to add the premium he bids to the par value of such shares, his debt to the association would be clearly in excess of what is lawfully allowable. In other words, if the member holding five shares in the society, of a prospective aggregate value of $1000, be, under the law and rules of the society, entitled to receive a "loan" of that amount and not beyond; and in competing for the advance, if he be accepted, upon the offer of a premium of $50 per share, then his whole debt or loan, not being permitted to exceed $1000, it is evident that to ascertain the amount he is entitled to receive, the sum of $250 must be deducted from $1000. If it were added to $1000, the borrower actually receiving that amount, instead of $750, his debt would be $1250, i.e., $250 in excess of what it lawfully may be. He would therefore be obliged to make up to the society such an amount as would eventually render his shares worth $250 more than their fixed value, according to the value fixed for all the shares; whereas the manifest intention of the legislature, and the very nature and operation of the building association scheme, is to balance, upon final settlement, the par value of the shares standing to the borrower's credit, and which have been advanced against his indebtedness, so that the one shall cancel the other. Wrigley, The Workingman's Way to Wealth, p. 67; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., § 391.

An association incorporated under the Maryland Act of 1868, c. 427, which authorizes premiums and interest, or either, to be "deducted in advance," has no right to add the premium to the face value of the loan, taking a mortgage for the whole amount repayable in monthly instalments for 120 consecutive months, of $10.41⅔ dues, and of $6.25 for interest and bonus; and that a contract so made not being in conformity with the statute was usurious, and could be enforced only for a gross amount per share, not merely increased interest.[1] The amount of the premium must be determined by full, fair, and open competition. A premium enhanced by fraud, express or implied, can neither be charged nor retained,[2] and on the same principle it is improper for the association to fix arbitrarily a certain figure as the lowest premium at which it will entertain a bid.[3] But the mere existence of the rule in the association will not enable the borrower to evade his obligation, unless his particular obligation has been affected by it.[4] In the absence of express statutory sanction, interest cannot be charged upon the premium.[5] the amount actually received and lawful interest thereon. Birmingham et al. v. Maryland L. & Perm. Homestead Assoc., 45 Md. 541.

1. The statute, unless it declares otherwise or permits other methods, means a definite sum for the whole period of the loan, and not anything whatever which the parties, in their contract, may choose to denominate a bonus or premium. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 393; Mechanics & Workingmen's Mut. Sav. Bank & Bldg. Assoc. of New Haven v. Wilcox et al., 24 Conn. 147; Same v. Meriden Agency Co., 24 Conn. 159.

The ground of these decisions is that while the borrower may be able to foresee the consequences of a contract to pay a gross sum in addition to the legal interest on the debt, he may not be able to foresee the effect of a contract to pay fifteen or twenty per cent per annum for the loan so long as it continues, and from an accumulation of the debt at that rate he has no means of rescuing himself except by the repayment of the debt with the accumulated interest. Nevertheless the practice of requiring the borrower to pay the premium in monthly instalments, instead of deducting the amount from the face of the loan, is by no means uncommon in Pennsylvania. This practice would appear to be entirely illegal, although it has not as yet been the subject of judicial construction. Wrigley, The Workingman's Way to Wealth, p. 71; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 392, 393.

2. Orangeville Mutual Sav. Fund & L. Assoc. v. Young, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 251.

3. "They" (i.e., building associations), says Sharswood, C. J., in Stiles's App., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 83, "are bound to offer all that is in the treasury to open competition, so that the members may obtain the loan at a low premium if there should be no bid at a higher. The practical operation of such institutions is, that whenever the member procures a loan, at a premium below the average of the premiums for the whole time the association has to make, he is to that extent a gainer; when his loan is at a premium higher than the average, he is to that extent a loser. This is a most valuable feature in such associations, and hence the importance of maintaining the principle of free competition in the bids. When the member is told that there is a minimum below which loans will not be made, he must offer that amount for the loan, whether any other one offers or not. If no offer to that amount is made, the money remains in the treasury without investment. It is evident in this way the members who are not borrowers will obtain a very undue advantage over the members who are borrowers. These institutions are liable, like everything else human, to abuse, and are bound to guard them carefully from being perverted into mere contrivances by which capitalists can evade the laws of usury. So the legislature evidently intended they should be by the act.

"When there is little or no competition, and a member bids a merely nominal premium for the preference, and there is no higher bid by any other member or depositor, he is entitled to the loan at such nominal premium, and the board of directors cannot refuse it, if sufficient security is properly tendered." Gilmore, C. J., in State v. Greenville Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 92. See also State v. Oberlin Bldg. & L. Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258.

If, as appear, upon analysis of the transaction, the only ground upon which the charge of the premium can be justified is that it is the price paid by the member obtaining the loan for the preference over other bidders, it would appear that charging a premium, in the absence of competition, or other than that determined by competition, is entirely unwarranted. Compare §§ 4, 5.

4. Orangeville Mutual Sav. Fund & Loan Assoc. v. Young, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 251.

5. Charging interest upon the premium

It is, of course, within the discretion of the building association to allow abatements, discounts, or remissions upon the premium bid by any applicant for a loan under the specified conditions.[1] To compromise with its borrowing members, and, at all events, when the compromise has taken effect, the society is not in a position to dispute the validity of the arrangement.[2]

Security.—The power to loan money implies the power to take adequate security for the repayment of the loan,[3] and in the absence of express requirement in the statute or charter that the security taken shall be such and no other, building and loan associations have power to loan money on the same security as individuals, notwithstanding their usual mode is to require the borrower to assign their own stock as collateral to his mortgage.[4] has been expressly held unlawful and essentially usurious in Maryland, Ohio, Iowa, Kentucky, and Tennessee. Williar v. Butchers' L. & Annuity Assoc., 45 Md. 546; Geiger v. Eighth German Bldg. Assoc., 58 Md. 569; Forest City United Land & Bldg. Assoc. v. Gallagher et al., 25 Ohio St. 208; Risk v. Delphos Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 31 Ohio St. 517; Burlington Mutual Loan Assoc. v. Heider et al., 55 Iowa, 424; Hawkeye Ben. & L. Assoc. v. Blackburn, 48 Iowa, 385; Gordon, etc., v. Winchester Bldg. & Accumulating Fund Assoc., 12 Bush (Ky.), 110; Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assoc., 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 418.

In Pennsylvania it is authorized by statute and held valid. See acts 12th April, 1859; 29th April, 1874; 7th June, 1879; Assoc. v. Neurath, 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 95; Bldg. Assoc. v. George, 3 W. N. C. 239; Selden v. Reliable Sav. & Bldg. Assoc., 32 P. F. Smith, 336.

1. Such is the custom in Pennsylvania: "Where a member has simply paid dues on a certain series of stock, without borrowing, for one or more years, and then borrows, an allowance of ten per cent is made upon the premium bid (the rate it is believed most usual) for each year that has expired since the series of stock on which he borrows was issued. For instance, were he to borrow on a series of stock at any time during the running of the second year of its existence, say at thirty per cent, he would be allowed a deduction at ten per cent off the premium, thus reducing the premium to twenty-seven per cent. If the stock is in its third year, twenty per cent will be deducted, reducing the premium to twenty-four per cent. If it is in its sixth year, five-tenths of fifty per cent will be deducted, reducing the premium to fifteen per cent. This is manifestly a just and reasonable provision, as it would be unfair to charge one as much premium for the use of money borrowed in the second, third, or fifth year of a series, as is charged one borrowing during the first year, and who would then have the use of the money during the entire running of the series." Wrigley, The Workingman's Way to Wealth, pp. 73, 74.

Upon repayment of the loan previous to its maturity, such remissions or discounts may become obligatory upon the association under the statutes or under the provisions of its own by-laws. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 400. See post, § 11 (a).

2. Miller v. Jefferson Bldg. Assoc., 50 Pa. St. 32.

Such measures, even if ultra vires, come strictly within the principle that even unauthorized measures affecting only the interests of stockholders may be sanctioned and made operative by unanimous consent. Kent v. Quicksilver Mining Co., 78 N. Y. 159.

3. Thus when an association is authorized to loan money, but its charter does not expressly authorize it to take a mortgage or other security, it will nevertheless have power by implication to take a mortgage. Massey v. Citizens' Bldg. Assoc., 22 Kan. 624.

4. Union Bldg. L. Assoc. v. Masonic Hall Assoc., 29 N. J. Eq. 389; 2 Stew. (N. J.) 389.

The borrower at any sale cannot evade his obligation by showing a deviation from the rule governing the society, nor will any equities arise therefrom as against the building association in favor of other encumbrancers. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, 7 N. Y. Weekly Dig. 13; Union Bldg. L. Assoc. of New Brunswick v. Masonic Hall Assoc., 2 Stew. (N. J.) 389.

Where the by-laws of an association provide that borrowers from it "shall

The mortgage or deed of trust of a third person may be taken to secure a loan to a member:[1] and a wife having power to mortgage her separate property for the debt of her husband may give a mortgage to a building association to secure a loan made to him,[2] and in either case the mortgage will stand for the full extent of the undertaking, including interest, fines, dues, and charges.[3] In such case the association is under no obligation to notify the third person of the member's default.[4]

11. Mortgages.—A mortgage taken by a building association is security for the payment of money only within the statute,[5] and operative only so far as authorized by it, and by the by-laws of the association, and in conformity therewith. No reservation, therefore, not contemplated in statute or by law can be enforced.[6]

The bond and mortgage or trust deed given by the borrower evidence the terms of the contract, and cannot subsequently be varied without his consent.[7] There are three principal classes of building association mortgages: (1) That in which the condition calls for regular stock payments of fixed amounts and performance of membership duties and liabilities generally, together with the secure the repayment of the said loan with legal interest by satisfactory bond or mortgage upon real estate," the officers of the association have power to take both securities. Juniata Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Hetzel, 103 Pa. St. 507. For a case where the contract was held to be in legal effect a mortgage although in form a lease, see Mobile Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Robertson, 65 Ala. 382.

A building association having authority to make loans and provide for the security of the same on real estate, has as an incident thereto the right to provide for insuring the property taken as security. Chicago Bldg. Soc. v. Crowell, 65 Ill. 453.

1. Massey v. Citizens' Bldg., etc., Assoc., 22 Kan. 624; Relief, etc., Assoc. v. Longshore, 8 Luz. Lg. Reg. (Pa.) 199; Pfeister v. Wheeling Bldg. Assoc. 19 W. Va. 676.

2. Juniata Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Mixell, 84 Pa. St. 313.

3. Pfeister v. Wheeling Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 676; Juniata Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Mixell, 84 Pa. St. 313.

4. Pfeister v. Wheeling Bldg. Assoc., 19 W. Va. 676.

5. Franklin Bldg. Assoc. v. Mather, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 274.

6. Shannon v. Howard Mut Bldg. Assoc. of City of Baltimore, 36 Md. 383; Hagerman et al. v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio, 186.

Hence where a building association was incorporated by special act, its charter authorizing it to grant loans at a premium, taking mortgages from the borrowers for the payment of instalments to the end of the society's running, together with fines and interest on the par value of the shares advanced; a mortgage so written as to include the sum actually advanced, and making it repayable with interest from date, in case any default should be made by the borrower in the payments undertaken by him, was held to be prima facie in violation of the constitution of the association. Smith and Wife v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc., 73 N. Car. 372. See also Baltimore Perm. Bldg. & Land Soc. v. Taylor, 41 Md. 409; Birmingham et al. v. Maryland Land & Perm. Homestead Assoc., 45 Md. 541; Bldg. Assoc. v. Schuller, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 431.

"It may be laid down, therefore, as a rule, that where the statute or charter under which a building association is incorporated defines the formal conditions and covenants which may be embodied in the mortgage, with a view to attaining the results contemplated by the act, these details must be strictly and technically followed out. Where, however, the statute and charter make provision merely for the results to be worked out by the scheme, a greater latitude obtains, and every form of mortgage or security which secures that result may be adopted by the association." Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 420.

7. If these terms are to pay monthly instalments and interest on the sum borrowed, and he is not in default, he cannot be required to pay a sum in solido. Cason v. Seldner, 77 Va. 293.

payment of redemption money or interest on the amount advanced (being frequently lumped together with stock payments under the name of dues) to the end of the society's existence; (2) that in which in addition the sum advanced is made repayable; (3) that in which the nominal amount of the loan, the par value of the shares advanced, thus including the premium, is made payable, with interest (upon that whole sum or only upon the actual advance, accordingly as the statute may sanction the one or the other), stock payments, etc., being stipulated as in the other cases. It is the stipulation for the payment of dues and the discharge of membership duties which constitutes the differentia of the building association mortgage, every legitimate form of which presents it as the essential peculiarity; but the class in which the stipulation is simply for dues, etc., without any superfluous adjuncts concerning repayments, is to be regarded as the proper type of building association mortgages. There is at bottom no difference between them, and the same principles with very slight and obvious modifications apply to all.[1] In case these stipulations for the payment of dues and interest are not complied with by the mortgagor, there is a provision inserted for the foreclosure of the mortgage and sale of the encumbered property.[2] In such case the ordinary course of procedure in equity is to take a preliminary account of the actual arrears and charges[3] standing against the borrower up to that time of the decree, deducting the credits to

1. In the first form the obligation is for the payment of dues, etc., solely; in the second, "the obligation . . . is nominally for the repayment of the loan, but particularly for the payment of monthly dues on the stock, and the legal interest on the loan until the association is able to divide, to each share of stock held by the members, the sum of two hundred dollars (or whatever the par value of the shares may be), and when this result is reached, as the association would owe a borrower on five shares of stock $1000, and the borrower would also owe the association $1000, one debt cancels the other." Wrigley, Workingman's Way to Wealth, p. 67.

The third differs from the second only in the fact that interest may be charged upon the premium bid, as well as on the sum actually advanced, which in no wise affects the nature of the transaction. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 421, 422.

On the face of it, such a mortgage secures the payment of a series of small sums during an indefinite period of time. Yet though the time during which the payments are to be made is not specified, there is a contingency stated in the mortgage, on the happening of which the payments are to cease; and its duration may be ascertained by proof, or approximated with as much certainty and exactness as the duration of a mortgage securing an annuity for the life of a person. The mortgage is, therefore, not void for uncertainty, but a valid mortgage in law. Nor, though being for the payment of such trifling sums, does it fall under the operation of the principle de minimis non curat lex, but it is properly within the jurisdiction of a court of chancery. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 424, citing Merrill v. McIntire, 13 Gray (Mass.), 157; Franklin Bldg. Assoc. v. Mather, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 274; Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 10 Md. 397; Winchester Bldg. Assoc. v. Gilbert, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 787.

2. As to the disposition of the surplus upon such sale, see Franklin Bldg. Assoc. v. Mather, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 274; Winchester Bldg. Assoc. v. Gilbert, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 787; Seagrave v. Pope, 15 Eng. L. & Eq. Rep. 477.

A building association is entitled to a foreclosure of mortgages to members, although the deeds and rules contain only powers of sale in case of default. Ingolby v. Riley, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 55.

3. These charges consist of the items enumerated in the mortgage, monthly interest, weekly instalments, fines, which the borrower is entitled. If he pays the amount thus found, the sale will be prevented, and the decree will stand against him as security for future payments.[1] If he refuses or neglects to pay them, the sale must take place, and the premises mortgaged will be discharged of the encumbrance.[2]

(a) Rule for Ascertaining the Amount Presently Due upon Mortgage in Case of Foreclosure or Voluntary Redemption.—The rule, as laid down in England, requires the probable or possible duration of the society to be approximated by proof, and the aggregate of all the dues—or redemption money—stipulated for in the mortgage to be calculated as they would accrue during that period, and the whole amount, thus found, to be charged against the member as a present debt immediately due, in addition to all arrearages and fines.[3] In America the rule is substantially the same except that, when the interest is lumped with stock payments as in England, there is a rebatement of interest for the time between the repayment of the loan and the estimated termination of the society, so that the society will not recover interest after that which bears interest, the loan, has been returned to its hands.[4] The rule ap-ground rents, taxes, insurance, costs, etc., if any such be in arrear. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 428.

1. Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 10 Md. 397; Hagerman et al. v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186; Risk v. Delphos Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 31 Ohio St. 517. See also Somerset County Bldg. L. & Sav. Assoc. v. Vandervere, 3 Stock. (N. J.) 383; Citizens' Mutual L. & Accumulating Fund Assoc. v. Webster, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 263; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 176, 177, 428.

2. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 428.

3. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 154–157, 158–164, 427; Fleming v. Self, 3 DeG. M. & G. 997; 1 Jur. N. S. 25; 24 L. J. Ch. 29; 3 Week. Rep. 89; Smith v. Pilkington, 1 DeG. F. & J. 120; 4 Jur. N. S. 58; 29 L. J. Ch. 227; Mosley v. Baker, 6 Hare, 87; 12 Jur. 551; 17 L. J. Ch. 257; affirmed on app., 13 Jur. 8, 17; 18 L. J. Ch. 457; 3 DeG. M. & G. 1032; Seagrave v. Pope, 1 DeG. M. & G. 783; 15 Eng. L. & Eq. 477; Archer v. Harrison, 7 DeG. M. & G. 404; 3 Jur. N. S. 194; 29 L. J. 71; Matterson v. Elderfield, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 207; 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 504; 17 Week. Rep. 422; Farmer v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 196; 5 Jur. N. S. 533; 28 L. J. Exch. 226; Sparrow v. Farmer, 26 Beav. 511; 5 Jur. N. S. 530; 28 L. J. Ch. 537; 33 L. T. 216; Handley v. Farmer, 29 Beav. 362.

The position that no rebatement in interest can be allowed for the premature redemption of the debt is a legitimate consequence of the assumption that the transaction between the society and the borrower has nothing in it of the nature of a loan; but even American courts, which adopt the English theory of the building-association loan, feel obliged to repudiate this logical result of the doctrine. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 375, n. (3).

For discussion of English theory, see ante, MUTUALITY.

4. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 154–157, 375, 376, 427. For a case in which the same rule was applied in England, under the construction placed upon the rules of a permanent society, see Ex parte Osborne, in re Goldsmith, Law Rep. 10 Ch. App. 41.

In Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 10 Md. 397, 69 Amer. Decisions, 150, the leading case in the United States, the rule is thus stated: Ascertain the probable duration of the association, then estimate the probable amount of the interest and dues for that time, rebating from that sum a just sum for interest, and adding thereto the arrearages due, after allowing for payments made to the association.

In Ohio the same principle seems to be expressed in the rule thus laid down: Ascertain by proof the probable duration of the corporation, and calculate the dues and interest yet to come; then find the principal, which, with the interest for the supposed time, will amount to the dues and interest already calculated; this will be the present value of the anticipated pay-

plies equally to the case of a foreclosure or a redemption, the only difference being that in the latter a withdrawing borrower is entitled to the "bonus," or proportionate share of the profits allowed by the governing statute or the by-laws of the association.[1]

ments; to this principal add the arrearages due, and the fines for the time between the date of default and the entry of the decree of sale, and the sum will be the present value of the mortgage. Cincinnati German Bldg. Assoc., No. 3, v. Flach et al, 1 Rep. (Cinc. Sup. Ct.) 468; approved in Hagerman et al. v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186. See also Risk v. Delphos Bldg. & S. Assoc., 31 Ohio St. 517; Licking County Sav., etc., Assoc. v. Beheels, Admr., 29 Ohio St. 252.

The rule as stated in the leading Maryland case has been approved in Oak Cottage Bldg. Assoc. v. Eastman, 31 Md. 559; Shannon v. Howard Mutual Bldg. Assoc., 36 Md. 383; Lister v. Log Cabin Bldg. Assoc., 38 Md. 115; McCahan v. Columbian Bldg. Assoc., 40 Md. 226; Hennighausen & Wolf, Recrs., v. Tischer, 50 Md. 583; Border State Perpetual Bldg. Assoc. v. McCarthy, 57 Md. 555.

The rule has been approved, recognized, or referred to in the following: Knell v. Green St. Bldg. Assoc., 34 Md. 72; Low St. Bldg. Assoc. v. Zucker, 48 Md. 452; Home Mutual Bldg. Assoc. v. Thursby, 58 Md. 288. See also Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 428; Somerset County Bldg. L. & Sav. Assoc. v. Vandervere, 3 Stock. (N. J.) 382; Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. of New Brunswick v. Conover, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 219 (not reversed in this particular in 2 C. E. Gr. 497); City Bldg. & L. Co. v. Fatty, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N.Y.) 347; Citizens' Mutual Loan & Accumulating Fund Assoc. v. Webster, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 263; Winchester Bldg. Assoc. v. Gilbert et al, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 787; Richards v. Bibb County Loan Assoc., 24 Ga. 198.

In Ocmulgee Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Thomson, 52 Ga. 427, the borrower was compelled to pay back the money received, with such an advance as would enable the company, at the lower or higher rates prevailing, to get the same monthly interest upon it as he ought to pay at the same rates he got it at. See also Pattison v. Albany Bldg. & L. Assoc., 63 Ga. 373.

In Hoskins v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc., 84 N. Car. 838, the rule of settlement indicated a basis of a mere loan and subsequent partial payments. Compare Overby & Wife v. Fayetteville Bldg. & L. Assoc., 81 N. Car. 56.

In Kansas the transaction is regarded as a mere loan, and the rule in the text is held inapplicable. Hekelnkaemper v. German Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 22 Kan. 549; Glynn et al. v. Home Bldg. Assoc., 22 Kan. 746.

In Pennsylvania the leading case of Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. & L. Assoc. of Hyde Park, 97 Pa. St. 514, so far as it relates to voluntary repayments proceeds upon the provisions of the statute, and as for the rest, treats the transaction as a loan which must be repaid, but to which the borrower may apply his stock payments already made.

In Alabama the transaction is viewed as a loan, and all payments made by or for the mortgagor, except his contributions as a member of the association, are applied first to the reimbursement of the expenses incurred by the association in the conservation of the property held as security, and when these expenses are satisfied and the interest extinguished, if a surplus remain, it is applied to the reduction of the principal. Mutual Loan Assoc. v. Robinson, 69 Ala. 413; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 403. Compare Security Loan Assoc. v. Lake, 69 Ala. 456; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418.

Where an association is prematurely dissolved, and the mortgages of members foreclosed, in determining the amount due, the mortgagors should be allowed not only for the sums paid by them as dues, but also for what they paid as interest, while they are to be charged interest on the sums advanced by the association, and so from time to time on the balance of such sums, after deducting therefrom the money paid by them for dues and interest. Windsor v. Baudel, 40 Md. 172. See also Low Street Bldg. Assoc. v. Zucker, 48 Md. 448; Hampstead Bldg. Assoc. v. King, 58 Md. 279; Waverly, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Buck, 3 East. Rep. (S. C. Md.) 137; Goodrich v. City Loan & Bldg. Assoc. 54 Ga 98.

A shareholder can set off, as against the amount due by him to the association under the mortgage, claims held by him against it, consisting of balances due from the association to members who had withdrawn from the association and assigned by them to the mortgagee. Hennighausen v. Tischer, 50 Md. 583.

1. The repayment of the loan at any period intermediate between the time of

In ascertaining the amount due it has been held that the court is bound by the terms of the mortgage and cannot look beyond the articles of association, unless the latter are so referred to in the instrument as to make them a part of the mortgage or call the court's attention to them.[1] But the rule is not to be so extended as to preclude the court from examining the articles of association for the purpose of determining when the mortgage contract terminated.[2] taking it and the time of the ultimate squaring of accounts upon the expiration of the society or series is not contemplated by the contract. Seagrave v. Pope, 22 L. J. Ch. 258.

It is a privilege granted, not a duty imposed; and if the borrower elect to exercise it, he must comply with the conditions prescribed. Security Loan Assoc. v. Lake, 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418; s. c., 69 Ala. 456; Shannon v. Howard Mutual Bldg. Assoc. of Baltimore, 36 Md. 383.

On the other hand, the rights in respect of repayment or redemption which at the time of obtaining the loan are secured to the borrower by the rule then in force become part of his contract and cannot be subsequently varied without his consent. In re Norwich & Norfolk Provident Bldg. Soc., Smith's Case, 1 L. R. Ch. Div. 481, 45 L. J. Ch. Div. 143, 24 W. R. 103.

In construing provisions regulating the right and terms of repayment, the courts favor the borrower. Oak Cottage Bldg. Assoc. v. Eastman, 31 Md. 556. See ante, BY-LAWS

Therefore, in striking the account between the association and a borrowing member wishing to redeem and withdraw, the latter is to be credited only with his actual payments on account of stock and interest, and not with any of the profits thereon (unless special statutory enactments or the by-laws of the society allow him some share of the profits). For the profits the society is accountable only on dissolution, and then only to those who have persevered in its membership. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 156 et seq. See also note to WITHDRAWAL, ante, § 9 (b); also Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514; Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. of New Brunswick v. Conover, 1 McCart. (N. J.), 219 (not disturbed in this respect in 2 C. E. Gr. 497).

Nevertheless, it is said that where such "bonus," benefit, or rebate is not provided by statute or by law, a member thus repaying to obtain his discharge from the society is entitled to the same proportion of bonus as is conceded to withdrawing members. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 430. See also Flemming v. Self, 18 J. P. 296, 23 L. T. 63; Kay, 518. On appeal, 24 L. T. 101.

And this extends to the reduction of redemption moneys paid in by the borrower. Smith v. Pilkington, 4 Jur. N. S. 58; 30 L. T. 196; s. c. on app., 29 L. J. Ch. 227; 1 DeG. F. & J. 120.

And where a mortgage given by a member of a building association to it becomes divested and repayable, in consequence of a judicial sale of the mortgaged premises upon the member's decease, it has been held upon the principle actus legis neminem in juriat, that the association is bound to make the same allowances upon the mortgage as if the member had elected to pay off the loan and withdraw. Sindel's Est., 34 Leg. Int. (Pa. 49.

The cases which define the rights of repaying borrowers most clearly, and which are the leading authorities upon this point, arose in England: Mosley v. Baker, 12 Jur. 551; s. c., 10 L. T. 461; 6 Hare, 87; on app., 13 L. T. 317; 13 Jur. 317; 27 Eng L. & Eq. 512; Seagrave v. Pope, 22 L. J. Ch. 258; 16 Jur. 1099; 19 L. T. 173; 1 De.G. M. & G. 784; 15 Eng. L. & Eq. 477; Flemming v. Self, 23 L. T. 63; Kay, 518; 1 Jur. N. S. 25; Archer v. Harrison, 3 Jur. N. S. 194; 7 DeG. M. & G. 404; 29 L. T. 71; Smith v. Pilkington, 29 L. J. Ch. 227; 1 DeG. F. & J. 120; Farmer v. Smith, 28 L. J. Ex. 226; 32 L. T. Rep. 37; 5 Jur. N. S. 533 n; 3 H. & N. 196; W. R. 362.

1. Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 10 Md. 397; 69 Am. Dec. 150.

2. McCahan v. Columbian Bldg. Assoc. of East. Baltimore, No. 2, 40 Md. 234–236.

Repayment in Serial and Permanent Associations. In serial societies the rules above laid down apply with this only difference, that the rights and liabilities of each memberare relerable, in the first instance, to the series to which he belongs. National Bldg. Assoc. v. Hottenstein, 10 Pittsb. Leg. Jour. N. S. (Pa.) 225.

(b) Extinguishment of Membership of Mortgagor, Mortgage Remaining Subsisting Security in Hands of Association.—A sale of the mortgaged premises and application of the previous stock payments made by the mortgagor to the extinguishment of the debt "terminates the membership of the mortgagor in the association, and the obligation to continue payment of dues in consequence of membership ceases." [1] If, however, neither the building association nor the borrower applies the previous stock payments to the extinguishment of the debt, and the association collects the whole sum due from the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises or upon voluntary repayment, the whole debt undiminished by any stock payments is returned to the society. The stock remains intact, and the member continuing to hold it retains his membership,[2] and is entitled upon the final distribution to his share in the company's profits.[3] In such case his bond and mortgage remain in the hands of the association as a subsisting security to insure the payment of future instalments and liabilities.[4]

The rules settle the terms upon which an advanced member may redeem equally whether the society be permanent or terminating. Matterson v. Elderfield, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 503, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 207.

If the rules do not provide otherwise, an advanced member in a permanent society must pay the full amount of his future subscriptions, and not merely their present value if he wishes to redeem. Matterson v. Elderfield, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 503, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 207.

If any fines are due at the time of notice of withdrawal, they must be paid before he will be entitled to have his security discharged. Parker v. Butcher, 36 L J. Ch. 552; L. R. 3 Eq. 762.

And it has been held that, on the society being wound up, the advanced members ought to be placed on the list of contributories of the society, for the purpose of discharging the debts due to third parties. In re Doncaster Permanent Bldg. Soc. ex parte Burgess, L. R. 3. Eq. 158; 15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 270; 15 W. R. 102. Compare Davis on Law of Bldg., etc., Societies; pp. 252–254; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 180.

1. McCahan v. Columbian Bldg. Assoc. of East Baltimore No. 4, 40 Md. 239; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 431. See also Robertson v. American Homestead Assoc., 10 Md. 397; Shannon v. Howard Mutual Bldg. Assoc. of the City of Baltimore, 36 Md. 383; Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg., etc., Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514.

2. North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463; Hennighausen & Wolf, Recrs., v. Tischer, 50 Md. 583.

As to estoppel to deny membership by acceptance of stock payments under such circumstances, see post (n).

3. North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463; Ocmulgee Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Thomson, 52 Ga. 427; Overly and Wife v. Fayetteville Bldg. & L. Assoc., 81 N. Car. 56. See also Hekelnkaemper v. German Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 22 Kans. 549; Richards v. Bibb County Loan Assoc., 24 Ga. 198; Hennighausen & Wolf, Recrs., v. Tischer, 50 Md. 583.

4. Everham v. Oriental Sav. & L. Assoc., 47 Pa. St. 352. This case arose prior to the act of 1859, and its policy expands with the act of that year. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 88 n (5).

In England the same principle is enforced. The estimated duration of a building association was thirteen years. An advanced member was held entitled to redeem on payment of his subscriptions (the mortgage being given to secure such) to the end of the thirteen years, although he was still liable to continue to pay subscriptions until the fixed value of each share was realized for every member. Sparrow v. Farmer, 26 Beav. 511; 5 Jur. N. S. 530; 28 L. J. Ch. 537; 33 L. T. 216. See also Handley v. Farmer, 29 Beav. 362.

In a similar case a borrower who was allowed to redeem was, notwithstanding the redemption, held liable to continue his subscriptions beyond the thirteen years, which period proved insufficient to bring the shares up to the fixed value, upon reaching which the society was to terminate. Farmer v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 196; 5 Jur. N.S. 533 n; 28 L. J. Exch. 226.

12. Application of Stock Payments to the Extinguishment of the Debt.—It is a well-recognized doctrine that payments of dues upon the stock are not payments upon the mortgage debt, and do not ipso facto work an extinguishment pro tanto of the mortgage.[1] But the borrower, by virtue of his membership, has, notwithstanding, a right at any time so to apply them, and the association holding a lien upon his shares as security for his debt may, in case of default, make a like application.[2] But in the latter case the appropriation by the society

1. In North Carolina, when a member of an association becomes a borrower, the transaction has been considered so much in the nature of a loan that subsequent payments made by the member upon his stock are held to be partial payments upon his debt. Overby v. Fayetteville Bldg. & L. Assoc., 81 N. Car. 56; Hoskins v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc., 84 N. Car. 838.

Prior to the North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463, the same view was maintained in Pennsylvania, and therefore every such payment made by a borrowing member was held to be a pro-tanto reduction of his mortgage debt. Kupfert v. Guttenberg Bldg. Assoc., 30 Pa. St. 465; Hughes's App., 30 Pa. St. 471; Philanthropic Bldg. Assoc. v. McKnight, 35 Pa. St. 470; Bldg. Assoc. v. Timmins, 3 Phila. 209; Bldg. Assoc. v. Reid, 3 Phila. 345. See also the later cases of Kelly v. Perseverance Bldg. Assoc., 39 Pa. St. 148; Schnepf's App., 47 Pa. St. 37; McGrath v. Hamilton Bldg. Assoc., 44 Pa. St. 383.

As sustaining the position in the text, see North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463; Spring Garden Assoc. v. Tradesmen's Loan Assoc., 46 Pa. St. 493; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15 (unincorporated); Economy Bldg. Assoc. v. Hungerbuehler, 93 Pa. St. 258; Germania Bldg. Assoc. v. Neill, 93 Pa. St. 322; Early & Lane's App., 89 Pa. St. 411; Weiss's App., 5 W. N. C. (Pa.) 423; Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. Assoc., 98 Pa. St. 514; Barker v. Bigelow, 15 Gray (Mass.), 130 (137); Delano v. Wild, 6 Allen (Mass.), 1; Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Conover et al., 1 McCart. (N. J.) 219 (not overruled in this particular in 2 C. E. Gr. 497); Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 428; 13 N. J. Eq. 428; Somerset County Bldg. & Sav. Assoc. v. Vandervere, 3 Stock. (N. J.) 382; State, Washington Bldg. & L. Assoc. Pros. v. Hornbacker, 13 Vr. (N. J.) 635; Hekelnkaemper v. German, etc., Assoc., 22 Kan. 549.

The distinct and independent existence of the stock and debt at the same time is well explained in State, Washington Bldg. & Loan Assoc., pros. v. Hornbacker, 13 Vr. (N. J.) 635. It was contended in this case that the mortgages held by an association, in which loans were made to members upon mortgages with a collateral assignment of the stock, could not be taxed at their full face value, but only after making allowance thereon for stock payments made. "The unsoundness of the argument in support of this denial consists in not observing the distinct and separate existence of the stock on the one hand and the bond on the other—the distinct and separate relation borne to the company on the one hand by its stockholder and on the other by its borrower. A connection is sought to be established between the stock held by the stockholder and the bond held by the company, by virtue of which, as payments are made on the stock, they are to be treated as payments on the bond, so that one steadily merges in or becomes offset by the other. But while in a general way this view may seem fair, because an exchange of the one for the other is the result expected to happen, it is still not a view warranted by the terms of the company's constitution, nor by the terms of the bond. By the condition of the bond the borrower is to pay interest monthly on the principal borrowed, at the rate of six per cent per annum. No time is named for the payment of the principal, because if the borrower, in addition to interest, pays also the monthly instalments on the stock, he cannot be compelled to pay the principal in cash, but may, when his stock becomes paid up, exchange his stock for such principal debt. This is so provided in the condition of the bond. But until so exchanged, they are distinct in legal contemplation as well as in form. The stock is a collateral security for, and not a credit on, the bond." Dodd, J., p. 638.

2. Spring Garden Assoc. v. Tradesmen's Bldg. Assoc., 46 Pa. St. 493; Early & Lane's App., 89 Pa. St. 411; North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa.

must be prompt and unequivocal.[1] By such application on the part of the borrower the stock is relinquished to the association, forced upon it, and its value deducted from the amount of the debt owing to it, and his membership destroyed.[2] The borrower's representative, his assignee for the benefit of creditors, or executor may also make the application,[3] but not a sheriff's vendee of the mortgagor.[4] When a member borrows money from the association, and gives a joint note of himself and another person for the advance, and the borrower's stock being assigned to the association as additional security, the third party has the right to have the stock sold first for the debt.[5] On the other hand, the title to the stock has so far passed from its owner by the assignment, that a subsequent purchaser cannot prevent the association from applying the sums paid thereon in extinguishment of the debt.[6] Where stock is pledged and a mortgage given for the same debt, the mortgagor has the right to insist as against his assignee in bankruptcy and an assignee of the mortgage that the stock be first sold to reduce the amount of the mortgage lien and St. 463; Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514; Economy Bldg. Assoc. v. Hungerbuehler, 93 Pa. St. 258.

1. When payments made by a borrowing member on stock have been credited to his general account with the building association, the testimony of its officers that they considered those payments in law payments on the mortgage is not evidence of an application to that purpose. Economy Bldg. Assoc. v. Hungerbuehler, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 218.

The receipt of stock payments after a full recovery on a member's mortgage estops the association from denying the existence of the stock. And the receipt-book of the association, proved by the secretary to be such, containing entries of payments made by the member, is evidence against the association without producing the officer by whom they were countersigned. The fact that the entries furnish evidence of other payments than those for which they were properly admissible will not lead to their rejection. North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463. But to work such an estoppel the acceptance must be clearly the act of the association or of such portion of it as can bind the whole. Hence when stock payments were received by only two of the twelve directors, from one whose shares under the rules were forfeited, and their acceptance was promptly disavowed and the money returned, no claim of membership upon the ground of the acceptance of such payment was allowed to avoid the forfeiture. Card v. Carr, 1 C. B. N. S. (87 Eng. C. L. R. 197); 26 L. J. C. P. 113.

2. Spring Garden Assoc. v. Tradesmen's Bldg. Assoc., 46 Pa. St. 493; North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463; Watkin's v. Workingmen's Bldg. Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514.

But the borrower may, when sued on his bond, continue a member, by paying the debt and retaining his stock. Springfield Bldg. Assoc. v. Raber's Adm., 33 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 329. Compare § 11 (b), ante.

3. Spring Garden Assoc. v. Tradesmen's Loan Assoc., 46 Pa. St. 493; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 459.

4. Springville Loan Assoc. v. Raber's Admr., 11 Phila. 546; 33 Leg. Int.(Pa.) 329. See post, § 13 (n).

5. Massey v. Citizens' Bldg. etc., Assoc., 22 Kan. 624.

A claim on the part of the society that the share is forfeited to it and that no credit should be given for it is inequitable and cannot be allowed. The share must be sold either subject to all dues which have accrued against it since the trial of the case, or freed from all dues accrued prior to the sale; in the latter case the dues accrued since the trial and before the sale to be first paid out of the proceeds. Massey v. Citizens' Bldg., etc., Assoc., 22 Kan. 624.

6. S., the holder of shares in a building association, procured a loan from the association giving a judgment to secure it. Afterwards he assigned his stock to G. Real estate of S. having been sold under a lien subsequent to the judgment, and the money paid into court, the association directed the sums already paid on the stock to be applied in payment of the original loan to S. G. appeared before of the mortgagor's personal liabilities.[1] A member who has assigned his stock to a third person as collateral security for a debt, cannot, when sued upon his mortgage to the association, claim a credit for the value of his shares.[2]

As between the association and a second mortgagor of the premises, stock held by the association as collateral security will be first applied to the payment of amount due on the mortgage to the association before recourse is had to the mortgaged premises.[3] Nor will this equity be defeated by a levy upon the stock under a judgment against the mortgagor.[4] the auditor and claimed that the judgment should be paid in full out of the proceeds of the sale. It was held that he had no claim upon the fund in distribution, and therefore no standing in the proceeding. "If the building association have injured him by a wrong in forfeiting his stock, his remedy is in a different proceeding." Weiss's App., 5 W. N. C. (Pa.) 423.

1. Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 62 Cal. 560.

2. By the assignment he has already made a definite appropriation of the value of the stock. He cannot afterwards assume to reappropriate it in violation of that already consummated arrangement. Schober v. Accommodation Sav. Fund & Loan Assoc., 35 Pa. St. 223. And where a member assigned all his shares as collateral security, upon obtaining a loan from an association, and upon obtaining a second loan on other shares, made a second assignment of all his stock, he cannot afterwards apply the instalments paid upon the stock to the first loan which had been secured by a judgment, if before obtaining the second he had made no such appropriation. The second assignment to the building association itself operated as a new appropriation. See p. 239. Hence as the first assignment, as collateral, was not a discharge of the loan to the extent of the instalments paid, and as the second was an election by the defendant not to treat the first as a partial payment of the first bond, but to pledge all the stock as a living security for the payment of the second it was held that his payments on the stock should be applied to his second bond and not to his first, against the consent of the association, except to the extent of what might remain after the second. Phila. Mercantile L. Assoc. v. Moore, 47 Pa. St. 233.

3. Herbert v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. et al., 2 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 497, overruling on this point the same case nom. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. of New Brunswick v. Conover et al., 1 McCart. (N. J.) 219; Red Bank Mutual Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Patterson, 27 N. J. Eq. 223; Phillipsburg Mutual L. & Bldg. Assoc. v. Hawk, 27 N. J. Eq. 355.

4. Phillipsburg Mutual L. & Bldg. Assoc. v. Hawk, 27 N. J. Eq. 355.

The right of the creditor to marshal the assets of the debtor is absolute as against the debtor himself, and cannot be taken away by the subsequent action of the other creditors. Herbert v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. of New Brunswick et al., 17 N. J. Eq. 497.

Where a person executed a mortgage upon two lots to a building association, and assigned to it as security five shares of stock, and afterwards gave the complainant a mortgage on one of the lots, and then assigned his interest in the stock to third persons, the complainant may require the association to sell first the lot which was exclusively embraced in its mortgage, but cannot compel the appropriation of the stock to the payment of the first mortgage. Reilly v. Mayer, 12 N. J. Eq. 55; 1 Beas. (N. J.) 55. See also Washington Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Beaghen et al., 12 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 99.

In Virginia, where one whose shares were redeemed, and who executed a trust deed upon his property to secure the payment of dues, etc., then gives another deed to secure a debt to another party upon the same property; upon his default in paying dues and interest, and sale of the property by the building association, the debtor and other creditors may elect to have the proceeds of sale invested, and the unpaid monthly dues and interest paid monthly out of the interest and as much of the principal as may be necessary, or to have the present value of these monthly dues and interest ascertained, on the principal of annuities, and paid out of the proceeds of the sale to the building association. Winchester Bldg. Assoc. v. Gilbert et al., 23 Grattan (Va.) 787.

In Pennsylvania, however, there is a

The rule for ascertaining the absolute value of the stock at any given time applicable in reduction of the mortgage debt, is to find the total gross amount of all the stock payments made by the member up to the time of default or repayment, allowing no interest upon any of them, the interest he has paid on his loan standing as interest to his credit.[1]

In the absence of express provision in the governing statute or by-laws, membership in the association does not entitle the borrower upon voluntary repayment of his loan to a proportionate class of cases in which the right of applying the stock payments upon the borrower's stock, held as collateral by the building association, to the extinguishment of the debt also secured by mortgage in favor of the same, seems to be confined to the original parties to the transaction, the borrower and the society; and in which the right of any third party, no matter what may be his equities, to compel the society to so apply them seems to be denied in toto. Spring Garden Assoc. v. Tradesmen's Loan Assoc., 46 Pa. St. 493; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15; Economy Bldg. Assoc. v. Hungerbuehler, 93 Pa. St. 258.

These cases all profess to be founded upon North American Bldg. Assoc. v. Sutton, 35 Pa. St. 463. See also Springville Bldg. Assoc. v. Raber's Adm., 33 Leg. Int. 329; Bldg Assoc. v. Eshelbach, 7 Phila. 189; Selden v. Reliable Sav. & Bldg. Assoc., 32 P. F. Smith, 336; Kreamer v. Springfield Bldg. Assoc., 6 W. N. C. 267; Kingsessing Bldg. Assoc. v. Roan, 9 W. N. C. 15; App. of Harris, 6 East. Rep. 865. For full discussion of the subject and analysis of cases see Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc., §§ 462, 466.

As to the standing of judgment creditors, see Herbert v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc., 2 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 497; Weiss's App., 5 W. N. C. (Pa.) 423; Lodge v. Lyseley, 6 Eng. Ch. R. 37; Knell v. Green St. Bldg. Assoc., 34 Md. 67; Cover v. Black, 1 Pa. St. 493.

The doctrine of marshalling the assets will not be applied to the injury of third parties, over whom the person claiming the benefit of the principle has no superior equities. Reynolds v. Tooker, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 591. See also Ayres v. Husted, 15 Conn. 504; John v. Reardon, 11 Md. 465; Miller v. Jacobs, 5 Watts (Pa.), 208; Reilly v. Mayer et al., 1 Beas. (N. J.) 55.

If there are any equities to compel the prior-lien creditor to resort to any particular fund, the subsequent creditor must notify him thereof; for a prior creditor is not bound to know of the existence of any subsequent encumbrance. Uniontown Bldg. & L. Assoc. App., 92 Pa. St. 200; Bank of Penna. v. Winger, 1 Rawle. (Pa.), 295; Konigmaker v. Brown, 2 Har. (Pa.) 274; Adams v. Hefferman, 9 Watts 529.

Recording the subsequent encumbrance is not notice to him. Taylor's Ex'rs v. Maris, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 51; Reilly v. Mayer, 1 Beas. (N. J.) 55.

Where, however, the building association, holding besides a mortgage upon the borrower's land, an assignment of his stock as collateral to his mortgage, released the stock, with actual notice of the existence of a subsequent mortgage on the land, it was held that the prior mortgage was, so far as the right of the subsequent mortgage was concerned, satisfied to the extent of the value of the stock. Washington Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Beaghen et al., 12 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 99.

On the general subject of marshalling, see 1 Story Eq. Jur. § 633, and Ex parte Kendall, 17 Ves. (Eng.) 514.

1. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 456.

"If his interest has been punctually paid, the remaining claim against him to be discharged is the principal sum loaned. Towards payment of that, the mortgagor may properly apply the gross amount of all sums paid as monthly dues, computing the same as the amount may be at the time of the adjustment. But upon such payment of monthly dues the mortgagor can claim no interest, nor require any application of them to be made as payments at the time when received. They are not payments originally required or stipulated to be paid as payments towards any loan. They are paid as the capital of the company, and paid alike by those who do and by those who do not take loans. These who take loans may apply them, on the final adjustment of the loans, to the discharge of the loans; but they are to be applied in a gross sum, without any allowance of interest thereon." Barker v. Bigelow, 15 Gray (Mass.), 130 (137).

share of the profits up to the time of repayment ;[1] and even where express provision exists in the constitution or by-laws, a defaulting member can claim no such benefit.[2]

13. Winding Up.—Hopeless insolvency, rendering the accomplishment of the purposes of incorporation impossible, is good ground for a petition by members to the court for the winding up of the association and the appointment of a receiver.[3] The insolvency of a building association is a thing peculiar to itself, and consists in its inability not to pay outside debts (for such a case can hardly ever occur, and in the nature of things is not to be thought of), but to satisfy the demands of its own members ;[4] hence it has been repeatedly asserted that the application must proceed from persons interested and suing as members.[5]

1. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Conover, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 219; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15; McGrath v. Hamilton Bldg. Assoc., 44 Pa. St. 383.

"Its value" (i.e., the member's stock) "for the purpose of this case was just what the defendant had paid on account thereof This was all . . . . the law gave him the right to apply. The value of the stock beyond this consisted mainly of the profits in which a defaulting borrower has no right to participate. This arises from two causes: 1st. The peculiar nature of the contract between building associations and their members; 2d. The difficulty, if not absolute impossibility, of ascertaining the profits until the association is ready to wind up. . . . The ascertainment of the real value of the stock can only be arrived at by closing up the affairs of the corporation. This the defendant has no right to demand. If, as was contended, he was entitled to it in this proceeding, the most that could be done would be to approximate it. The jury and even the court might place a much higher value upon its securities than could be realized therefrom. In such case the defaulting member would receive more than the members who paid up to the end; besides, the profits are composed chiefly of premiums; they are made up in part of the premium which the defendant agreed to pay. I say agreed to pay, for it is a mistake to suppose, as was claimed by the defendant, that he has paid the premium—he only promised to pay it. It was inserted in the judgment note, and is now being collected. The building-association law expressly authorizes the plaintiff to recover the premium from a defaulting borrower, yet the defendant's proposition, if sustained, would defeat his right in part. We are of opinion that the right to apply the stock in such cases as this means only the right to apply the payments made thereon." Paxson, J., in Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. & Loan Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514. See also Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Conover, 1 McCart. (N. J.), 219; Link v. Germantown Bldg. Assoc., 89 Pa. St. 15; McGrath v. Hamilton Bldg. Assoc., 44 Pa. St. 383. It must not be forgotten that the member is also liable to contribution to expenses and debts. Ante, § 8 (c). Compare also §§ 4, 5, 9 (b).

2. Ante, § 9 (b); Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 175, 156 (n).

3. Insolvency does not necessarily dissolve a corporation. Railroad Co. v. Fitler, 60 Pa. St. 132; Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 217. It "neither impairs its power to manage its own affairs, nor converts its property into a trust fund for the benefit of its creditors." Angell & Ames Corp. § 770.

The mere allegation that the building association is without any responsible officers is not a sufficient ground for asking the interposition of a court of equity, even if coupled with an averment of the society's insolvency. Gormerly v. Port Richmond Bldg. & L. Assoc., 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 11. See also Hoboken Bldg. Assoc. v. Martin, 2 Bees. (N. J.) 428.

Where, however, upon the ground stated in the text, the winding up of a building association becomes desirable, it has been decided in Pennsylvania that the proper course is through a court of equity by means of a receiver, and not by an assignment of its property under the insolvency laws to an assignee for the benefit of creditors. In re Assigned Est. of National Sav. L. & Bldg. Assoc., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 79.

4. In re Assigned Est. of National Sav. L. & Bldg. Assoc., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 79; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 488.

5. It has been held in England that an

The right to invoke the aid of a court of equity for the appointment of a receiver for the purpose of winding up the affairs of the association or series arises where, in point of fact, the time has arrived when the shares, owing to the past accumulations of the business, are worth the stipulated par value fixed by the charter. But while the right to invoke such aid has been repeatedly recognized and never denied,[1] it is a right which is conceded to none order to wind up a building association whose rules do not give it express power to borrow may be obtained upon the petition of a person who, under the rules of the society, has deposited money with a view to becoming a shareholder, but before becoming one has given proper notice to withdraw the money, and been unable to obtain it. Such petition must express that the petitioner is a creditor in respect of money advanced by him as a member of the society which he has given notice to withdraw. In re Queen's Benefit Bldg. Society, 19 W. R. 697, 762; L. R. 6 Ch. 815. See also In re Planet Benefit Bldg. & Investment Society, L. R. 14 Eq. 441; 41 L. J. Ch. 738; 20 West. Repr. 935; 27 L. T. N. S. 638.

In Pennsylvania the court refused to wind up a society upon a petition filed by a shareholder who was also a creditor in the latter capacity, although the association was insolvent and had no responsible officers. Gormerly v. Port Richmond Bldg. & L. Assoc., 3 W. N. C (Pa.) 11. See also In re Professional, Commercial & Industrial Benefit Bldg. Society, L. R. 6 Ch. 856; 25 L. T. N. S. 397; 19 West. Repr. 1153.

1. O'Rourke v. West Pennsylvania L. & Bldg. Assoc., 93 Pa. St. 308; Bowker v. Mill River Loan Fund Assoc., 7 Allen (Mass.), 100; Lister v. Log Cabin Bldg. Assoc., 38 Md. 115; Edelyn et al. v. Pascoe et al., 22 Gratt. (Va.) 826. In the last case it was said that a court of equity has jurisdiction at the suit of unredeemed shareholders in a building association to call the redeemed shareholders to account, enforce payment of what they respectively owe, and distribute the fund among the unredeemed shareholders, thus embracing the whole series of steps necessary to bring about the winding up of the concern, by making the corporation and its debtors all parties to one bill. See also Est. of National Sav. L. & Bldg. Assoc., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 79; Goodrich v. City Loan & Bldg. Assoc., 54 Ga. 98; Mechanics' & Workingman's Bldg. Assoc. v. Monroe, 6 Cent. Rep. 580.

If the constitution of a building society provides that it shall close when the unsold stock is worth fifty per cent premium, it cannot after that time has come defer closing for a further advance in the value of its real estate, and meanwhile compel stockholders to continue the payment of dues. Burns v. Metropolitan Bldg. Assoc., 2 Mackey (D. C.), 7.

On the other hand, until the period of duration fixed by charter or general law has been attained, not even a majority of the members can force a dissolution upon the rest against what the latter conceive to be their interests. Thus in a recent case in Kentucky certain members of a building association who had borrowed from the association to the full amount of their respective shares, securing the same by mortgages on real estate, met together, and without authority of the charter or constitution, and without consent of the other members, agreed among themselves that they would each pay up at once an amount equal to the dues accruing on their respective shares up to a certain date and no more, and that their mortgages should be cancelled by the association. The directors then in office accepted said payments, and caused the several mortgages to be cancelled, and released them from any further obligation to pay their weekly contributions, thus practically dissolving the association. Certain of the members who had not borrowed from the association the amount of their respective shares, and who did not consent to this arrangement, suing for themselves and other members of the same class, and averring these facts and the further fact that there was yet due on their shares a large balance, prayed for the dissolution of the association, a settlement of its affairs, and a judgment against the defendants. Held that the action could be maintained. Held further, that all the delinquent stockholders should be before the court, and their liabilities ascertained and determined. It was error to render judgment against only part of the delinquent stockholders, thus compelling them to pay not only their pro rata of the sum necessary to equalize the various stockholders, but the pro rata of the remaining debtors. Arling v. Kenton Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 26 American Law Reg. (S.

but members.[1] Such an application must show that the assets of the association are sufficient to pay, over and above all losses and expenses, and after cancellation of the advanced members' securities, to every unadvanced member the par value of his stock. In ascertaining the sufficiency of the corporate assets for this purpose, mortgages held against advanced members must not be counted as assets.[2] Whenever the assets of the association become equal to the par value of all its stock, it is ready to be wound up, and ceases ipso facto to be a corporation, except for the purpose of winding up its affairs.[3] Whatever liabilities the association has

C. Ky.) 273; Cason v. Seldner, 77 Va. 293.

Where the borrowers, who formed a majority of the whole membership of the association, passed a resolution to wind up the concern before the time limited by the charter, and attempted to compel the non-borrowers to accept a sum less than the amount fixed by charter, an injunction was granted at the instance of the investors. Plaff v. Bldg. Assoc., 6 W. N. C. (Pa.) 349. See also Reg. v. D'Eyncourt, 116 Eng. C. L. R. (4 Best & Smith C. B.) 820; 9 L. T. Rep. N. S. 712. See also Hughes v. D'Eyncourt, 12 W. R. 408.

But where the stockholders had agreed to wind up the association before the period limited in the charter, it was held that the agreement was valid, and bound a member who had consented, and his assignee. White Haven L. & Bldg. Assoc. v. Kelley et al., 9 Luz. Leg. Reg. (Pa.) 9. See also Field Corp. §§ 486, 487, where the authorities are collected.

1. Where, therefore, a borrower from a building association, who up to the time of taking the loan had been a member, but by the terms of his contract had ceased to be such, and became merely a debtor for a fixed sum repayable by instalments, believing that the period had arrived when the shares could be paid out by the society at their par value, but that the officers were redeeming certain shares at such a rate as to delay the time of his discharge, presented his bill for an injunction upon the officers of the society, the appointment of a receiver, and winding up of the concern, it was held that the bill was properly dismissed. Being simply a debtor, bound to pay a certain amount of money, he could not be discharged until that was paid, and as he had ceased to be a member, the continuance of the society for a greater or lesser time was not a matter wherein he could have any interest. Bowker v. Mill River Loan Fund Assoc., 7 Allen (Mass.), 100.

2. Lister v. Log Cabin Bldg. Assoc., 38 Md. 115.

"The association has no authority to collect and apply the indebtedness under the mortgage to the liquidation of the claims of unpaid members. Whilst they exist, and are of binding efficacy, they are only a source of revenue, and as such constitute an efficient part of the available assets of the association." Stewart, J., p. 122.

In such a computation they must be set off against the shares upon which they were advanced, and both be excluded from the reckoning. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 440; Lister v. Log Cabin Bldg. Assoc., 38 Md. 115.

For purposes of taxation, however, mortgages held against members must be considered as assets, "as synonymous with property." State, Washington Bldg. & L. Assoc. pros., v. Hornbacker, 12 Vr. (N. J.) 519; on app., 13 Vr. (N. J.) 635.

Where the real estate held by the association consists of property bought in by it at public auction in competition with other bidders, the price bid by the association must be taken, as against it, as conclusive of the value of the property, for the purpose of ascertaining if the time has arrived when the association should close; but the value, if greater, may be shown by witnesses. for the association cannot, with an all-sufficient amount of property in its hands to close up, go on collecting dues. Burns v. Metropolitan Bldg. Assoc., 2 Mackey (D. C.), 7.

In an action by a building association upon a judgment note given by one of its members, where the defence is "payment," the burden of proof that the association has matured is on the defendant. Watkins v. Workingmen's Bldg. & L. Assoc., 97 Pa. St. 514.

3. Hagerman v. Ohio Bldg. & Sav. Assoc., 25 Ohio St. 186 (205). The statutes under which the associations are incorporated sometimes contain provisions empowering the building associalawfully incurred are, of course protected upon dissolution;[1] creditors and depositors are entitled to be paid out of the assets in priority to any of the members;[2] and where a member is also a creditor or depositor, he is entitled to come in upon the distribution of the assets as such.[3]

BULL.—The male of the bovine genus of animals.[4]

tion about to be wound up to elect officers to be charged with the duty of winding up the concern, or casting the burden upon those last elected or their survivors, and granting them all powers necessary to a proper settlement of the affairs of the association. In the absence of such provision, the general powers of supervision and control with which courts of equity are invested in respect of corporations afford a safe and perfect means of doing justice to all parties by the appointment of a receiver, even independently of the expedient which building associations have it in their own hands to adopt, of conveying to trustees all their assets before dissolution for the benefit of members and creditors. Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. § 494.

Under the act of April 26, 1869. P. D. 227. building and loan associations of Philadelphia may, for the purpose of winding up their affairs, issue a scire facias sur mortgage after the expiration of the charter, although the land mortgaged lies outside of the city limits. This legislation does not "renew" or "extend" the time of the existence of these associations within the constitutional prohibition. It simply provides for the collection and distribution of their assets. Cooper v. Oriental Sav. & L. Assoc., 100 Pa. St. 402.

In Pennsylvania it has been held that the order prescribed by the by-laws of a building association for the payment of money out of its treasury to the different classes of members in the regular course of the business of the association does not apply to the distribution of its assets when insolvent. Criswell's App., 100 Pa. 488; Christian's App., 102 Pa. St. 184. See Goodrich v. City L. & Bldg. Assoc., 54 Ga. 98.

In England, on the other hand, it has been held that the rules applied to the relations of the members inter se, notwithstanding the winding up; and hence where the assets of a society were sufficient to pay the outside creditors, but not sufficient to pay the investing members in full, investing members who had fulfilled the requirements of the rules by giving notice of withdrawal prior to the commencement of the winding up, but had not been repaid, were entitled to priority to those who had given no notice of withdrawal. "The winding up," said Lord Blackburn, "no doubt stops all things which are coming on from coming to maturity—it stops them in that sense—but it does not affect the rights of the parties; and when a right has been acquired in presenti, although it is solvendum in futuro, I see no reason why it should not be enforced in a winding up as much as in a bankruptcy or anything else." Walton v. Edge (H. of L.), 52 L. T. N. S. 666, affirming Re Blackburn and Dist. Ben. Bldg. Society, 49 L. T. N. S. 720. See also In re Norwich & Norfolk Bldg. Soc.; Ex parte Rockham, 45 L. J. Ch. Div. 785.

1. Field Corp. §§ 491, 492, and cases cited. See also Kisterbock v. Bldg. Assoc., 7 Phila. (Pa.) 185.

2. In re Mutual Aid, etc., Soc., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 638; Criswell's App., 100 Pa. St. 488; Christian's App. 102 Pa. St. 184.

3. Criswell's App., 100 Pa. St. 488.

As to members who are creditors, see Angell & Ames Corp. § 394; Hennighausen v. Tischer, 50 Md. 583; U. S. Bldg. & L. Assoc. v. Silverman, 85 Pa. St. 394; Endlich on Law of Bldg. Assoc. §§ 144, 264, 268, 486, 487.

The mere fact that the member is also an officer or director in no wise affects his right. Christian's App., 102 Pa. St. 184. Unless he has been guilty of fraud or culpability in bringing about the insolvency. Hence one who was a director in a building association, long insolvent by declaring dividends out of the capital, with his knowledge and participation, is not entitled to receive from the estate of the corporation in the hands of an assignee any part of a loan made by him to the corporation, to pay a dividend fraudulently declared until the stockholders are fully paid. Kisterbock's App., 51 Pa. St. 483.

4. The act of 1869 (Session Laws, p. 176) which provides that it shall not be lawful for the owners of any domestic animals of the species horse, bull, mule, ass, sheep, and hog to suffer them to run at large in the counties named, and authorizing that they be impounded when found at large, etc., does not authorize the taking up of any cow, heifer, or steer. In this case the court, Walker, J., said: "Do, then, the words 'species bull' embrace cows, heifers, and steers? Linnæus, the great naturalist, divides the science of zoology into classes, classes into orders, orders into genera, genera into species, and species into individuals. These general divisions are believed to still obtain among naturalists. A species, then, embraces individuals of the same kind, and all of the individuals having the same characteristics. It embraces all individuals that are precisely alike in every character and not capable of change by any accidental circumstances, and capable of uniform, invariable, and permanent continuance by natural propagation; or it is founded on identity of form and structure, both external and internal, —the principal characteristic of species in animals being the power to produce beings like themselves, and who are themselves also naturally productive. These seem to be the generally accepted definitions of the word 'species' in zoology. Then these bovine animals all seem to belong to the same species. They are identical in form and structure externally and internally, and naturally capable of producing like beings with themselves. The mere circumstance which changed the bulls to steers can in nowise affect the definition. They are nevertheless members of the same species. But when we turn to the third section of this act we see that the term 'bull' is referred to as an individual of the species. It provides that fees shall be paid for taking up and feeding the animals enumerated in the first section, and uses this language: 'For taking any horse, mule, ass, or bull, fifty cents.' This would seem to place it beyond question that cows, heifers, and steers were intended to be excluded. If not, surely some other language would have been employed. We can only conclude that the term 'species bull' was intended to embrace bulls of all kinds and descriptions, without reference to size, age, or quality. But it is said that the other description of cattle came as fully within the reason of the statute as bulls. This may be true, and we should, no doubt, so hold if it were not for the language of the third section. But we cannot say that when a cow, heifer, or steer is taken up the fee could be paid for taking up a bull. The legislature had the power to make this distinction, and seem to have done so in this enactment. Hence the pleas are bad, and the demurrer was properly sustained. When we remember that the General Assembly use such language as is apt and proper to embrace the objects intended to be embraced in a law, it would be unreasonable to hold that words shall be construed contrary to their etymological and grammatical meaning. The word 'bull' can by no rule of construction be held to mean a cow or a steer. Bulls are, no doubt, individuals of the bovine genera, and also of the species ox or cow, but individuals are never taken as a representative of a genus or a species. They are, no doubt, embraced in both. We cannot, according to the definition of the term 'species,' say that mules form a species, because they are hybrids, being neither of the species horse nor ass, but are a cross between the two; nor can they reproduce beings like themselves. Again, the legislature by a former enactment, when referring to kine, have almost uniformly designated them as cattle or neat cattle, thus embracing the entire species." Oil v. Rowley, 69 Ill. 469.

Therefore, where there was an indictment for stealing a bull, and the defendant's plea was that he had been previously indicted in the same court for stealing a cow and two heifers, tried and acquitted, and that the offence charged in the indictment was embraced in the former indictment,—that the offences were the same,—the court held this plea of former acquittal bad; English, C. J., saying: "On the first indictment he could not have been convicted for stealing a bull. If, upon the first indictment, he could not have been convicted of the offence described in the second, then an acquittal upon the former is no bar to the latter" (3 Greenleaf Ev. § 36; 1 Whart. Cr. L. 6th Ed. §§ 551–557). 'The rule is,' says Mr. Wharton, 'that if the prisoner could have been legally convicted on the first indictment upon any evidence that might have been legally adduced, his acquittal on that indictment may be successfully pleaded to a second indictment, and it is immaterial whether the proper evidence was introduced at the trial of the first indictment or not.' But upon the indictment for stealing a cow and two heifers appellant could not, upon any evidence that might have been legally adduced, have been convicted for stealing a bull, the variance between the indictment and proof as to the subject of larceny being material and fatal; hence an acquittal upon the first indictment could be no bar of the second for stealing a bull. This rule of the common law has not been changed by statute." State v. McMinn, 34 Ark. 160.

BULLION. (See also MONEY.)—Gold or silver in the mass.[1]

1. With regard to bullion, which signifies properly either gold or silver in the mass, and is here intended to denote those metals in any state other than that of authenticated coin, the legislature for the prevention of frauds, both with respect to the coin and to plate, have made several provisions. 1 East P. C. 188.

It has been held in New York that a contract to pay the plaintiff for his service "at the rate of sixty dollars per month in gold bullion, valued at sixteen dollars per ounce in gold coin of the United States" is a contract for wages payable in money, and that the plaintiff could sue for them without making the demand, required when payment is to be made in anything besides money. In this case, Daly, C. J., after citing several cases in which a demand was held necessary, before suit brought, said: "It is somewhat difficult to say what these cases collectively determine; but I think substantially that it amounts to this, that where it appears, or is necessarily implied from the terms of the contract, and the nature of the articles that are to be received in payment, that it was the intention of the parties that the debtor is to deliver them at his residence or otherwise when requested by the creditor, that a special request to deliver them must be made to the debtor before he can be sued for the non-performance of the contract. It is argued that such is the case here, the agreement being to pay in bullion, which it is urged is a specific article, bullion being merchandise. But in the same sense coin may be regarded as merchandise, for it is not its coinage which makes it the standard by which other commodities are measured, but its intrinsic value in the markets of the world as a precious metal. The precious metals are adopted as the general medium of exchange, because they have in themselves an intrinsic value, being used for many purposes, are produced in nearly equal quantities, at nearly equal cost, are portable, and comparatively indestructible, and they have this value coined or uncoined; for the stamp which the government impresses upon the coin is simply a guaranty of its weight and fineness. Bullion, when the word is used in a financial sense, for it has other meanings (Nares' Glossary, Ed. of 1872; Wedgwood's Eng. Etymology), imports uncoined gold and silver, either smelted, refined, or in the condition in which it is used for coining, and has from the earliest period been associated with or employed as a term denoting money. It is derived from the French word billon, which Savary, in his Dictionnaire Universel de Commerce, defines as a term for money, Terme de monnoye, and one of the earliest English authorities upon those words that are derived from the French. Cotgrave, in his French and English Dictionary of 1632, defines bullion, 'Money, Monnoye de billon.' Bayley, more than a century afterwards, defines it in his English Dictionary of 1763, 'Money having no stamp upon it;' and our own contemporary authority, Webster, says, 'The word is often used to denote gold and silver, coined and uncoined, when reckoned by weight and in mass, including especially foreign or uncurrent coin.' Webster's Dict., Unabridged, of 1864, and Locke, in his paper on Raising the Value of Money, so employs the word in this passage: 'Foreign coin hath no value here for its stamp, and our coin is bullion in foreign countries.' In France, billon is used not only for coin, and for the material before it is coined, but also for the mint or place where the precious metals are sent to be coined (Bescherelle, Dictionnaire Universel de la Langue Française); and bullion was formerly used in this sense in England (Wedgwood's Dictionary of English Etymology, p. 112; 27 Edw. III. st. 27, c. 14; 4 Henry IV. c. 10). That the words billon and bullion should be associated with the idea of coin, and used as terms to express it, very naturally follows from their etymology, both being derived from the Latin bulla, the name of the leaden seal which is affixed to the pope's ordinances or decrees, imparting to them the term by which they are known of Papal bulls. Bulla in the Latin meant any small object rounded by art, such as a boss or stud in a girdle, and was originally the small thin circular plate of gold or other metal, with some insignia or device engraved or stamped upon it, which was worn suspended from the neck by the children of Roman patricians as their distinguishing mark, and afterwards by all Roman children who were of free birth. From this origin it came in time to be used in the Latin for the seal hanging by a band to a legal instrument, or to the executive decrees of sovereigns or other public functionaries, as well as the term for the matrix or die with which a seal was impressed or a coin was stamped." Wedgwood's Dictionary,

BUNDLE.—To sleep on the same bed without undressing; applied to the custom of a man and woman, especially lovers, thus sleeping.[1]

BURDEN. See note 2.

BURDEN OF PROOF. (See also CRIMES; EVIDENCE; NEGLIGENCE.)

1. Definition.—The obligation imposed upon a party who alleges the existence of a fact or thing, necessary in the prosecution or defence of an action, to establish it by proof.[3]

English Etymology, p. 112; Milman's Hist. of Latin Christianity, book xii., c. xi.; Smith's Greek and Roman Antiquities, bulla; Phillip's New World of Words, bull; Andrew's Latin Lex., bulla, 2; Johnson's Dictionary (Quarto, 2d Edit.), bull; Bailey's Dict., bull, golden bull, 2d and 20th Eds.; Brandes' Dict. vol. i. p. 331; Counsel v. Vulture Mining Co. of Arizona, 5 Daly (N.Y.), 74.

1. "Van Corlear stopped occasionally in the villages to eat pumpkin pies, dance at country frolics, and bundle with the Yankee lasses." Washington Irving.

In an action by one for the seduction of his daughter, a custom of bundling, i.e., for persons courting to sleep together, cannot be set up by him to excuse his connivance at the intercourse, for a custom must be moral. Seagar v. Sligerland, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 219; s. c., Lawson's Usages and Customs, 9.

In an action brought to recover damages for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter, it appeared that the defendant and daughter slept together on the occasion of the seduction, according to a custom which prevails in the part of the country where they resided, known as bundling, and with the knowledge of the plaintiff. Held, that the knowledge of the plaintiff amounted to connivance, and he could not therefore recover damages; the court, Banks, P. J., saying: "Much has been said by the plaintiff's counsel about the custom in courtship, which he has denominated bundling. He has said that this custom prevails very generally in the part of the country where these parties reside. This may be so, but I am unwilling to believe it. If it is so, it is time the custom should be abolished. Even if this custom does prevail, it furnishes no excuse for the plaintiff's carelessness or his daughter's indiscretion. If it be any excuse, it would extend equally to all concerned, and the defendant might claim his portion of protection under it also. The plaintiff has by this time, I apprehend, found out that this custom is dangerous at least, if he does not feel that it is indecent. A man who takes no pains to abolish this custom in his own house has no right to complain of consequences which most naturally follow." Hollis v. Wells, 3 Clark (Pa. L. J. Rep.), 29.

2. Conveyance of Goods or Burden in Course of Trade.—Carriages belonging to a circus and used for carrying the band and other performers in a parade through the town are not carriages "used solely for the conveyance of any goods or burden in the course of trade," so as to be exempt from duty under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 14, s. 19, subs. 6. "These carts or wagons cannot be properly said to have been conveying any 'goods or burden' of the respondents in the course of their trade. I may give as an illustration of the meaning of the statute the case of a coal merchant sending his carts or wagons to fetch coal to his yard or to convey it to his customers, or a wine-merchant or other tradesman similarly supplying goods in the ordinary course of business. . . . I cannot think that in the case I put in the argument, of a person carrying on his trade by means of sending out a traveller in a gig to obtain orders, the gig would be exempted on the ground that the traveller was a 'burden' conveyed in the course of trade."

3. Quoted from People v. McCann, 16

N. Y. 66; Ex parte Walls, 64 Ind. 461; Wilder v. Cowles, 100 Mass. 487; Burnham v. Allen, 1 Gray (Mass.), 500.

"The strict meaning of the term onus probandi is this, that if no evidence is given by the party on whom the burden is cast, the issue must be found against him. In all cases this onus is imposed on the party propounding a will." Barry v. Butler, 6 Eng. Eccl. Rep. 418, quoted in Davis v. Rogers, 1 Houst. (Del.) 95; Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 481; Com. v. Tuey. 8 Cush. (Mass.) 1; Costigan v. Mohawk, etc., R. Co., 2 Denio (N. Y.), 600; Powsey v. Shook, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 267; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 108.

Roman Law.—The rule of the Roman law is, Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit, non qui negat. Dig. lib. 22, tit. 1, 2; Best on Ev. (Morgan's Ed.), § 267.

A Rule of Convenience.—The rule requiring the party having the affirmative to prove it is one of convenience, not because a negative cannot be proven, but because the affirmative can usually be proven more easily. Dranguet v. Prudhomme, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 83; Costigan v. Mohawk, etc., R. Co., 2 Denio (N. Y.), 609.

Price of Liquor Sold.—In an action for liquor sold by a liquor merchant the only evidence was that several bottles of liquor were delivered at the defendant's house; but the kind and price were not shown. The court instructed the jury to presume that it was the cheapest liquor in which the plaintiff dealt. Clunneo v. Pezzy, 1 Camp. 8.

Money Loaned.—In an action for money lent it appeared that, the defendant having asked the plaintiff for more money, the latter delivered to him a bank note, the amount of which could not be proven; it was held that the jury were rightly directed to presume the note to have been the lowest in amount in circulation. Lawton v. Sweeney, 8 Jur. 964.

Failure of Consideration.—The plaintiff brought suit upon a note; and the defendant answered that the consideration had failed because it had been given for a patent right to a person who was neither patentee nor assignee of the patent. It was held that the burden was on the defendant to prove his affirmative allegation. Towsey v. Shook, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 267; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 108; Rogers v. Worth, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 186.

Illegal Note.—If it be alleged that a note was given without consideration, and also that it was illegal or fraudulent in its inception, the burden is upon the plaintiff, when he is the assignee, to prove that he purchased it for a good consideration. Munroe v. Conper, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 512; Paton v. Coit, 5 Mich. 505; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 58; Northern v. Letouche, 4 C. & P. (Eng.) 140; Vallett v. Parker, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 615; Zook v. Simoson, 72 Ind. 83; Vather v. Zane, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 246.

The burden is on the holder to prove a lack of knowledge of the fraud. Thrower v. Cureton, 14 Strobh. Eq. (S. Car.) 155; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 660; Bailey v. Bidwell, 13 M. & W. 73.

Fraud.—He who alleges that a transaction was fraudulent must prove it. White v. Trotter, 14 S. & M. (Miss.) 30; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 112; Bartlett v. Blake, 37 Me. 124; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 775; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 107 Ind. 442; Northwestern M. L. Ins. Co. v. Hazelett, 105 Ind. 212; Bixby v. Carskaddor, 29 N. Westn. Repr. 626; Rochester v. Sullivan, 11 Pac. Repr. 58.

Especially is this true of a fraudulent conveyance. Johnson v. McGreer, 11 Iowa, 151; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 137; Ikerd v. Beavers, 107 Ind. 483.

Sometimes, where the relation of trustee or the like exists between the parties, the burden, upon a charge of fraud, rests upon the opposite party. Thus in an action against an insolvent by his assignee to set aside a transfer made by the insolvent, the burden is on the insolvent to show his good faith, and that the transaction complained of was in the usual course of dealing. 1 Rev. de Leg. (Can.) 40; Rochester v. Levering, 104 Ind. 562 (agency).

Dealing with Agent as Principal.—If a person deals with an agent as principal, the burden is on such agent to show that the person so dealing had notice that he was only acting for his principal and not for himself. Vawter v. Baker, 23 Ind. 63.

A failed in business, and started up in the same business in the same place as agent of B, and bought goods of an old customer. It was held that A must show that such customer had notice of the capacity in which he was acting in order to avoid a personal liability. Kerchner v. Reilly, 72 N. Car. 171.

General Issue.—Under the general issue the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff throughout, as to every part of his case. Berringer v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 41 Mich. 305; City of Lafayette v. Wortmer, 107 Ind. 404; Ingalls v. Eaton, 25 Mich. 32; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Ehman, 30 Ind. 83; Jarboe v. Schreb, 34 Ind. 350; Rothrock v. Perkinson, 61 Ind. 39 (argumentative denial).

2. Negative Allegations.—The party who grounds his right of action or defence upon a negative proposition which is an essential element in it must prove such allegation.[1]

3. When Parties have Equal Opportunity of Proving a Negative.—When the means of proving the facts are equally within the control of each party, then the burden is upon the party averring the negative.[2]

1. 1 Greenl. on Ev. § 78; Harvey v. Towers, 4 E. L. & Eq. 531; s. c., 15 Jur. 544; Lane v. Crombie, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 177; Holmes v. Love, 3 B. & C. (Eng.) 242; Rex v. Pratten, 6 T. R. 559; Spiers v. Parker, 1 T. R. 141; Ross v. Hunter, 4 T. R. 33; Nash v. Hall, 4 Ind. 444; Dougherty v. Deardorf, 107 Ind. 527; Vigus v. O'Brannon, 8 N. E. Repr. 778; Carter v. Goff, 5 N. E. Repr. 471; s. c., 141 Mass. 123.

If the agreement is not to do a particular thing, slight evidence that it was done suffices. Thus in an action on an agreement to pay £100 if the plaintiff would not send herrings for one twelvemonth to the London market, and in particular to the house of J. & A. M., and the plaintiff proved he had sent no herrings during the twelvemonth to the house J. & A. M., it was held sufficient to entitle him to recover, no proof having been given that he had sent herrings within that time to the London market. Colder v. Rutherford, 3 B. & B. (Eng.) 302.

So on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences, where it was alleged that the accused obtained the money upon the representation that he owned certain bonds which were deposited with a third person, but never exhibited, it was held that the State must prove that there were no such bonds. State v. Wilborne, 16 Rep. 151.

2. Quoted from Great Western R. Co. v. Bacon, 30 Ill. 347; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 199.

Fencing Railroad-track.—"This was an action on the case for killing a mule. The plaintiff below relies only on the first count of his declaration to maintain his judgment. This count is on the statute which requires the railroad company to fence its road where it runs through inclosed lands, except where it is fenced by the proprietor, or where the company has a contract with the proprietor of the lands that he shall fence the road. The mule was killed by a train on the defendant's road, at a place where it passes through inclosed grounds, and where it is not fenced; and the only question is whether it was the duty of the plaintiff to prove that there was no contract between the company and the proprietor of the land that he should fence the road. The statute requires, in general terms, all railroad companies to fence their roads, and then makes several exceptions, one of which is when it runs through inclosed lands the proprietor of which has agreed to fence it. We have repeatedly held that it was necessary, in pleading, to negative all these exceptions; whether it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove these negative averments must depend upon their nature and character. Where it is as easy for the plaintiff to prove the negative as it is for the defendant to disprove it, then the burden must rest upon him, or that the place where the animal was killed was not in a town or village or was not more than five miles from a settlement; but where the means of proving the negative are not within the power of the plaintiff, but all the proof on the subject is within the control of the defendant, who, if the negative is not true, can disprove it at once, then the law presumes the truth of the negative averment from the fact that the defendant withholds or does not produce the proof which is in his hands, if it exists, that the negative is not true. In other words, the burden of proof is thrown upon the defendant to prove the affirmative against the negative averment. There are cases between these extremes where the party averring a negative is required to give some proof to establish it. Indeed, it is not easy to lay down a general rule by which it may readily be determined upon which party the burden of proof lies when a negative is averred in pleading. Each case must depend upon its peculiar characteristics, and the courts must apply practical common-sense in determining the question. Where the means of proving the fact are equally within the control of each party, then the burden of proof is upon the party averring the negative; but where the opposite party must, from the nature of the case, be in possession of full and plenary proof to disprove the negative averment, and the other party is not in possession of such proof, then it is manifestly just and reasonable that the party thus in the possession of the proof

4. Burden to Disprove Negative Averment.—Where the means of proving the negative are not within the power of the party alleging it, but all the proof on the subject is within the control of the opposite party, who, if the negative is not true, can disprove it at once, then the law presumes the truth of the negative averment from the fact that such opposite party withholds or does not pro-should be required to adduce it, or on his failure to do so, we must presume it does not exist, which of itself establishes a negative. Such is the case here. If the railroad company has a contract with the proprietor of this land that he shall fence it, it is no trouble to produce it and thus exonerate itself from the liability to build the fence. If the defendant does not produce such a contract, the presumption is that none exists." Great Western R. Co. v. Bacon, 30 Ill. 347; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 199. The language, "we have repeatedly held that it was necessary in pleading to negative all these exceptions," was modified in Great Western R. Co. v. Hanks, 36 Ill. 284, because the court had thus held only in regard to the exceptions contained in the enacting clause of the statute commented upon. "Whoever asserts a right dependent for its existence upon a negative must establish the truth of the negative by a preponderance of the evidence. This must be the rule, or it must follow that rights of which a negative forms an essential element may be enforced without proof. This conclusion would be both illogical and unjust, and we are therefore authorized to infer the truth of its converse. Confusion has arisen from statements loosely made by text-writers, and sometimes by courts; but it will be found upon examination that, wherever the question has been directly presented and considered with care, it has been uniformly held that, wherever the petitioner's right depends upon the truth of a negative, upon him is cast the onus probandi, except in cases where the matter is peculiarly within the knowledge of the adverse party." Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144.

Where one relied upon a negative allegation that a negotiable promissory note was not taken in payment of a precedent debt, it was held that he must prove it. Smith v. Bettger, 68 Ind. 254. See, generally, Spiers v. Parker, 1 T. R. 141; Rex v. Pratten, 6 T. R. 559; Holmes v. Love, 3 B. & C. 242; Lane v. Crombie, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 177; Harvey v. Towers, 15 Jur. 544; s. c., 4 E. L. & Eq. 531; Purcell v. Macnara, 1 Camp. 199; s. c., 9 East, 361; Phillipskirk v. Pluckwell, 2 M. & S. 395; Rex v. Rogers, 2 Camp. 654; Rex v. Jarvis, 1 East, 643, note; Rex v. Burditt, 4 B. & Ald. 95; Rex v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206; Colder v. Rutherford, 3 B. & B. 302; s. c., 7 Moore, 158; Doe v. Johnson, 7 Mon. & Gr. 1047; Woodbury v. Frink, 14 Ill. 279; Little v. Thompson, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 128; Gibson v. Waterhouse, 4 Greenl. 226; Ulmer v. Leland, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 134; Com. v. Samuel, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 103; Smith v. Moore, 6 Greenl. (Me.) 274; Williams v. Hingham, etc., Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 341.

Malicious Prosecution.—An action for a malicious prosecution is grounded upon the absence of a probable cause; and, although a negative, the burden of proving that fact is upon the plaintiff, for his action is based upon the negative allegation of want of it. Adams v. Leiher, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 445; Purcell v. Macnara, 9 East, 361; s. c., 1 Camp. 199; Cummings v. Parkes, 2 Ind. 148; Trogden v. Deckard, 45 Ind. 572; Smith v. Zent, 59 Ind. 362; Carey v. Sheets, 67 Ind. 375; Gibson v. Waterhouse, 4 Me. 22; Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 85; Abrath v. Northwestern R. Co., 25 Am. L. Reg. 757. See Munandee v. Allard, 14 L. C. R. (Can.) 154.

Illegal Voter.—So in a prosecution against a man for illegal voting, and the cause of action is based upon the allegation that he was not a legal voter, the prosecution, civil or criminal, must prove it. Beardstown v. Virginia, 76 Ill. 34.

Incapacity to Marry.—In an action by the plaintiff to set aside the marriage of her brother with the defendant, on the ground that at the time of the solemnization of the marriage he was suffering from delirium tremens and had not the reason or mental capacity which rendered him competent to enter into such a contract, it was held that the burden was on the plaintiff to show such was the case. Scott v. Paquet, 4 L. C. J. (Can.) 151; 3 L. C. J. (Can.) 136; 11 L. C. J. (Can.) 289; 17 L. C. R. (Can.) 283.

Notary's Fees.—In a suit by a notary for his fees, the defendant pleaded that the deed was not made in time, and he was held to have the burden to prove it. Bedard v. Blouin, 4 R. L. (Can.) 479.

duce the proof which is in his hands, if it exists, that the negative is not true.[1]

1. Quoted in part from Great Western R. Co. v. Bacon, 30 Ill. 347; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 199; Sunderland Marine Ins. Co. v. Kearney, 16 Q. B. 925; R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & A. 95, 140; King v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206; State v. Crowell, 25 Me. 171; State v. Lipscomb, 52 Mo. 32; Sheldon v. Clark, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 513; State v. Richeson, 45 Mo. 575.

In an action by the assignee of a bankrupt for a debt due to the bankrupt's estate, the defendant offered to set off some cash notes issued by the bankrupt, payable to bearer, and bearing date before his bankruptcy. It was held that the defendant was bound to show that they came into his hands before the bankruptcy. Dickson v. Evans, 6 T. R. 57. See, generally, Apothecaries Co. v. Bentley, Ry. & Mood. 159; R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 211; Elkin v. Janson, 13 M. & W. 655; R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & A. 95; Rex v. Hawkins, 10 East, 211; Powell v. Milburn, 3 Wils. 355; Sissons v. Dixon, 5 B. & C. 758; Rodwell v. Redge, 1 C. & P. 220; United States v. Hayward, 2 Wall. 498; Hartwell v. Root, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 345; Com. v. Stow, 1 Mass. 54.

Where a grantee, in an answer to a bill filed by his grantor's creditor, who charged that the conveyance was fraudulent, and the allegation was that the conveyance embraced all the debtor's estate, denied the latter allegation and avered that the debtor had other estate in a particular county sufficient to pay the complainant, it was held that the defendant had to prove the presence of property in the county named. Birely v. Staley, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 432; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 303.

Sale without License.—Upon a charge of a sale of liquors or merchandise without a license as required by law, the burden is on the defendant to show a license; for if he have a license, that is a fact peculiarly within his knowledge, as proof of it can be more easily made than the negative can be by the prosecution. Farrall v. State, 32 Ala. 557; Williams v. State, 35 Ark. 430; Sharp v. State, 17 Ga. 290; Conyers v. State, 50 Ga. 103; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 686; Noecker v. People, 91 Ill. 468; Gunnerssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 569; Flora v. Ess, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 629; Shearer v. State, 7 Blackf. 99; Howard v. State, 5 Ind. 516; Taylor v. State, 49 Ind. 555; State v. Miller, 53 Iowa, 84; State v. Stopp, 29 Iowa, 551; State v. Curley, 33 Iowa, 359; Haskill v. Com., 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 342; State v. Woodward, 34 Me. 293; State v. Crowell, 25 Me. 171; Smith v. Adrain, 1 Mich. 455; State v. Schmail, 25 Minn. 370; Schmidt v. State, 14 Mo. 137; Easterling v. State, 35 Miss. 210; State v. Foster, 3 Fost. (N. H.) 348; State v. McGlynn, 34 N. H. 422; Bliss v. Brainard, 41 N. H. 256; State v. Morrison, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 290; State v. Cutting, 3 Oreg. 260; State v. Edwards, 60 Mo. 490; Geuing v. State, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 573; Information against Oliver, 21 S. Car. 318; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 681. Contra, State must show a sale without a license. Com. v. Bolkom, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 281; Com. v. Tuttle, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 502; Com. v. Kimball, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 304; Com. v. Thurlow, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 374. Changed by statute. Com. v. Lakey, 8 Gray (Mass.), 459; Com. v. Lock, 114 Mass. 288; Lisbon v. Lyman, 49 N. H. 553; State v. Perkins, 53 N. H. 435; s. c., 2 Green L. Cr. Cas. 332; Mehan v. State, 7 Wis. 760.

Permission.—On a charge of a sale of liquor to a slave without the master's permission, it was held that the prosecution must prove the absence of permission. McGuire v. State, 13 S. & M. (Miss.) 257. On the ground that the master could be easily called to prove the lack of permission. State v. Evans, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 250; State v. Woodly, 2 Jones (N. Car.), 276. Coming there without permit. Rex v. Rogers, 2 Camp. 654; State v. Whittier, 21 Me. 341; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 272.

Sale without Inspection.—On a charge of a sale of adulterated liquor the prosecutor must give some evidence that the liquor had not been inspected. Cheadle v. State, 4 Ohio St. 477.

Sale to Persons not Travellers.—A statute allowed a sale of liquor by victuallers to travellers only on Sunday. In a prosecution for a violation of it, it was held that the prosecution must prove that the liquor sold was not to travellers. Taylor v. Humphries, 17 C. B. N. S. 539.

Disorderly Shop.—Where a statute made it a finable offence for any licensed liquor dealer to keep his shop in a disorderly manner, it was held incumbent upon the prosecution to allege and prove that the shopkeeper had a license to sell liquor. Brubaker v. State, 89 Ind. 577. See Schlict v. State, 31 Ind. 246.

Carrying Concealed Weapons.—A statute allowed only travellers to carry concealed weapons, the privilege being granted on exception. It was held that the State

5. Negative Involving a Criminal Omission.—Where a person is required to do an act the omission to do which would be criminal, his performance of that act will be intended until the contrary be shown.[1]

6. Where the Presumption of Law is in Favor of the Affirmative.—Where the presumption of law is in favor of the affirmative the opposite party has the burden of proving the contrary.[2] was not bound to show affirmatively that the accused was not a traveller. Wiley v. State, 52 Ind. 516.

1. A suit had been instituted in the spiritual court for tithes, when the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had not read the Thirty-nine Articles. The ecclesiastical court put the defendant to prove the fact though a negative; upon which he moved the court of King's Bench for a prohibition; but it was refused, upon the ground that in such a case the law will presume that a person has read the Articles, for otherwise he is to lose his benefice; and when the law presumes the affirmative, the negative must be proven. Monk v. Butler, 1 Rol. Rep. 83, cited in 3 East, 199; Hicks v. Martin, 9 Mart. (La.) 47; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 304.

In an action by a ship-owner against a defendant for putting on board a ship a quantity of combustible and dangerous articles "without giving due notice thereof," the court held that it lay upon the plaintiff to prove the negative averment, for the omission involved a criminal offence. Williams v. East India Co., 3 East, 192; s. p., King v. Hawkins, 10 East, 216.

Even in an indictment for coursing deer upon inclosed ground without consent of the owner of the close, absence of consent must be proven. Rex v. Rogers, 2 Camp. 654.

The person alleging that goods were not legally imported must prove it. Sissons v. Dixon, 5 B. & C. 758. Or that a theatre was not licensed. Rodwell v. Redge, 1 C. & P. 220.

Where goods are seized and taken out of the owner's possession for an alleged forfeiture under the revenue laws, the seizure is presumed unlawful until proved otherwise. Aitcheson v. Maddock, Peake's Cases, 162; Lilienthal v. U. S., 97 U. S 237.

Exceptions.—If the circumstances of the case raise a presumption that all has not been regularly performed, whether that presumption arise from positive or negative evidence, then it is incumbent to prove the due performance of the act required. Thus on the trial of an indictment against a parish for not repairing a highway which was reputed to lie within the parish and had been from time to time repaired by the inhabitants, an award made by commissioners of inclosure, awarding the highway to be situated in a different parish, was adjudged not to be admissible evidence for the defendants, because it was not proven that the commissioners had given the previous notice (required by the inclosure act) to the parish which would be affected by their award; the circumstance of the defendant having continued to repair after the award raised a presumption that there had not been such a notice as the act of Parliament required. Rex v. Inhabitants, 2 M. & S. (Eng.) 558.

Where instances of a fiduciary relationship exist between the plaintiff and defendant, the burden is frequently charged by these circumstances. Thus in chancery, in the case of an attorney and client, it has been ruled that if the attorney, retaining his connection, contract with his client, he is subject to the burden of proving that no advantage has been taken of the situation of the latter. Gibson v. Jeyes, 6 Ves. 278; Cane v. Ld. Allen, 2 Dow. 289.

2. Thus an infant between seven and fourteen is presumed to be incapable of committing a crime; but the prosecution may show a mischievous disposition. 1 Hale P. C. 26; 4 Black. Com. 23; Hawks. P.C. 2; 1 Bish. Cr. L. § 461 (4th Ed.); Willett v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.), 230; McClure v. Com., 81 Ky. 448; s. c., 5 Crim. L. Mag. 210; State v. Guild, 5 Halst. (N. J.) 192; Stage's Case, 5 City Hall Rec. (N. Y.) 120; R. v. Smith, 1 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 260; R. v. Owen, 4 C. & P. (Eng.) 236; Com. v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.), 398; State v. Bostick, 4 Harr. (Del.) 563; Angelo v. People, 96 Ill. 209; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 132; Com. v. French, Thacher (Mass.), 163; Com. v. Green, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 380.

So a sale of liquors without a license is not presumed, in a civil case at least. Smith v. Joyce, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 21. Or the running of a theatre unlicensed. Fry v. Bennett, 28 N. Y. 324; s. c., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 200,

7. Burden of Proof and Weight of Evidence Distinguished.—The burden of proof remains on the party affirming a fact in support of his case, and does not change in any aspect of the cause; the weight of evidence shifts from side to side in the progress of a trial, according to the nature and strength of the proofs offered in support or denial of the main fact to be established.[1]

8. Test.—The party having the burden is the party who, if no proof is offered, will be defeated in the suit.[2]

So officers are presumed to do their duty, and the burden is on him who asserts the contrary. Wood v. Terry, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 80; Wood v. Morehouse, 45 N. Y. 368; s. c., 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 405.

All persons are presumed to be sane; and the burden of proving a particular person is not is on him who alleges it. U. S. v. Lawrence 4 Cranch C. C. 514; Lilly v. Waggoner, 27 Ill. 395; State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 538.

1. Quoted from Central Bridge Co. v. Butler, 2 Gray (Mass.), 132.

A. sued B. on a warranty of the genuineness of an indorsement on a note sold by the latter to the former, and B. contended that A. knew he was acting as an agent for L. The court instructed the jury that A. was "bound to show to your satisfaction that at the time of the transaction he was ignorant that the defendant was dealing for L. If he fails to do this, or if you are unable to say, on the whole, how this is, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover." In reviewing this the appellate court said: "In a certain sense, and to a certain degree, these statements of the burden upon the plaintiff may be said to be correct. The plaintiff must prove that his contract was made with the defendant, and with no one else. He must maintain this proposition against all the evidence which tends to show that Lane was the real party instead of the defendant; and if the jury are left in doubt upon the whole evidence, the plaintiff must fail. But the particular facts, for which it is claimed that a contract with Lane, as the principal, may be inferred, must be proved by the defendant. If the plaintiff's evidence shows a contract negotiated with the defendant, apparently in his own behalf or principle, and nothing to the contrary appears, that is sufficient. He is not bound to go further and exclude other possibilities. Evidence tending to prove that the defendant was the agent of Lane does not require the plaintiff to prove affirmatively and specifically that the agency was not disclosed. The absence of all evidence of such disclosure, or tending to show knowledge without any affirmative proof upon the point, would warrant a jury in finding that the negotiation with the defendant, apparently as principal, was in fact so. The burden upon the plaintiff is coextensive only with the legal proposition upon which his case rests. It applies to every fact which is essential or necessarily involved in that proposition. It does not apply to facts relied upon in defence to establish an independent proposition, however inconsistent it may be with that upon which the plaintiff's case depends. It is for the defendant to furnish the proof of such facts; and when he has done so the burden is upon the plaintiff, not to disprove those particular facts nor the proposition which they tend to establish, but to maintain the proposition upon which his own case rests, notwithstanding such controlling testimony, and upon the whole evidence in the case. The distinction may be narrow, and may often be decisive. To apply it to this case, the burden upon the plaintiff is to prove a contract with the defendant, not to disprove a contract with Lane, nor to disprove any of the facts from which a contract with Lane might be inferred. It appears to us that the instructions of the learned judge at the trial extended the rule of the burden of proof beyond its legitimate office, making it apply to facts not strictly embraced within the issue." Wilder v. Cowles, 100 Mass. 487; Nat'l Bank v. Huxford, 29 Iowa, 579.

2. Barry v. Butlin, 2 Moo. P. C. 484; Geach v. Ingalls, 14 M. & W. 100; Amos v. Hughes, 1 Moo. & Rob. 464; Doe v. Rowlands, 9 C. & P. 735; Osborn v. Thompson, 2 Moo. & Rob. 254; Mercer v. Whall, 5 A. & E. 447; Judah v. Trustees, 23 Ind. 272; Kent v. White, 27 Ind. 390. This rule determines who has the open and close, or the right to begin, usually. Leet v. Gresham Life Ins. Co., 7 E. L. & Eq. 578; s. c., 15 Jur. 1161; Hackman v. Fernie, 3 Mes. & Wels. 510. Another test is to examine whether if the particular allegations were struck out of the plea there would or would not be a defence to the action. In this last instance the burden rests upon the party whose case would thereby be destroyed. Mills v. Barber, 1 Mes. & Wels. 427; s. c., Tyrwh. & Gr. 835; Blecker v. McIntosh, 8 C. & P. 720; Osborn v. Thompson, 2 Man. & R. 254; Doe v. Rowlands, 9 C. & P. 734; Geach v. Ingall, 14 Mes. & Wels. 95; Ridgeway v. Ewbank, 2 Man. & R. 218; Thompson v. Lee, 8 Cal. 275; Judah v. Trustees, etc., 23 Ind. 272; Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144; Ford v. Simmons, 13 La. Ann. 397; Oppenheim v. Leo Woolf, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 571; New Haven Copper Co. v. Brown, 46 Me. 418; Hudson v. Wetherington, 79 N. Car. 3; McRae v. Lawrence, 75 N. Car. 289; Frost v. Brown, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 133; Gregory v. Baugh, 4 Rand. (Va.) 611.

Best puts the test, "Which party would be successful if no evidence at all, or no more evidence, as the case may be, were given." Best on Ev. (Morgan's Ed.) § 268. See Baker v. Bett, 2 Moo. P. C. C. 317.

Mere Form of a Proposition does not Change the Rule.—But the mere form of a proposition does not change the rule as to the burden. Lord Abinger said upon a like question: "Looking at these things according to common-sense, we should consider what is the substantive fact to be made out, and on whom it lies to make it out. It is not so much the form of the issue which ought to be considered as the substance and effect of it." Soward v. Leggatt, 7 C. & P. 613; Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113, 116; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144; McLees v. Felt, 11 Ind. 218.

Upon an issue to determine whether certain land assigned for payment of a legacy was deficient in value, where issue was joined upon the deficiency, the one party alleging that it was deficient and the other that it was not, it was held by the court that though the averring that it was deficient is such an affirmative as implies a negative, yet it is such an affirmative as turns the proof on those that plead it; if he had joined in the issue that the land was not of value, and the other had averred that it was, the proof then had lain on the other side. Berty v. Dormer, 12 Mod. 526.

The following rules have been given by a standard writer: "Rule I. The issue must be proved by the party who states an affirmative, not by the party who states a negative. Rule II. The issue must be proved by the party who states the affirmative in substance, and not necessarily the affirmative in form. Rule III. In every case the onus probandi lies on the party who wishes to support his case by a particular fact which lies more peculiarly within his knowledge, or of which he is supposed to be cognizant. Rule IV. The burden of proof is shifted by presumptions of law, presumptions of fact of the stronger kind, and evidence strong enough to establish a prima facie case." Bailey's Onus Probandi, 1, 5.

Witness Testifying to an Affirmative Fact.—The general rule is that a witness testifying to an affirmative fact is entitled to credit (all other things being equal) in preference to one who testifies to a negative; for the latter may have forgotten what actually occurred, while it may be impossible to remember what never existed. Stilt v. Huidekoper, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 384. See 8 Mod. 81; 2 Curt. Eccl. Rep. 434; Wills. Circ. Ev. (3d Ed.) 224; Stark. Ev. (4th Ed.) 863.

Several Issues.—If there are several issues and the plaintiff hold the affirmative in any one of them, he is entitled to begin and close. Rees v. Smith, 2 Stark. 31; Jackson v. Hesketh, 2 Stark. 518; Curtis v. Wheeler, 4 C. & P. 196; s. c., 1 M. & M. 493; James v. Salter, 1 M. & Rob. 501; Comstock v. Hadlyme, 8 Conn. 261; Williams v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 234; York v. Reese, 2 Gray (Mass.), 282; Holbrook v. McBride, 4 Gray (Mass.), 218; Cushing v. Billings, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 158; Browne v. Murray, Ry. & Mood. 254.

Examples.—In an action of assumpsit on a contract to emboss calico in a workmanlike manner, the breach was that the defendant did not emboss the calico in a workmanlike manner, but, on the contrary, embossed it in a bad and unworkmanlike manner; to which the defendant pleaded that he did emboss the calico in a workmanlike manner. It was held, on issue being joined on the plea, that the burden was on the plaintiff. Amos v. Hughes, 1 Moo. & R. 464.

A statute prohibited the granting of a license to retail intoxicating liquor to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated. Where, therefore, under this statute, an applicant for a license applied, it was held that the burden was on him to show he was not such a person. Goodwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 113; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 144.

On a covenant to repair, it was alleged that the defendant had not repaired, and the defendant plead he had repaired in accordance with his covenant. The burden was held to lie on the plaintiff. Seward v. Leggatt, 7 C. & P. 613.

9. Criminal Cases.—In criminal cases the burden of proof never shifts; before a conviction can be had the jury must be satisfied from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, of the affirmative of the issue presented in the accusation, that the defendant is guilty in the manner and form as charged in the indictment.[1]

1. So noted in substance from Lilienthal v. U. S., 97 U. S. 237; Com. v. McKie, 1 Gray (Mass.), 61; Com. v. Eddy, 7 Gray (Mass.), 583; State v. Bartlett, 43 N. H. 224; State v. Jones, 50 N. H. 369; State v. Redemier, 71 Mo. 173; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 462; 1 Crim. L. Mag. 456; Shafer v. State, 7 Tex. App. 239; Lewis v. State, 7 Tex. App. 567; Guffee v. State, 8 Tex. App. 187; State v. Fowler, 2 Crim. L. Mag. 45; 2 Ky. L. Rep. 150; Alexander v. People, 96 Ill. 96; People v. Core, 8 Pac. C. L. J. 133; Dubose v. State, 10 Tex. 230; Fairchild v. People, 48 Mich. 31; s. c., 11 N. W. Repr. 773; Com. v. Whittaker, 131 Mass. 224; Grise v. State, 37 Ark. 456; People v. Cheong Foon Ark, 61 Cal. 527; s. c., 10 Pac. C. L. J. 275; Jones v. State, 18 Tex. App. 485; s. c., 15 Rep. 27; Davis v. State, 12 Tex. App. 11; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 373; State v. Flye, 26 Me. 312; State v. Tibbets, 35 Me. 81; People v. Bodine, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 281; U. S. v. Wright, 16 Fed. Repr. 112; Regina v. Jones, 50 L. T. 726; State v. Middleham, 62 Iowa, 150; Wharton v. State, 73 Ala. 366; People v. King, 64 Cal. 338; People v. Willett, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 500; s. c., 22 Week. Dig. 42; People v. Millard, 53 Mich. 63; U. S. v. Searcey, 26 Fed. Repr. 435; Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563; s. c., 9 West C. Rep. 584, 9 Pac. Rep. 852.

"In every criminal case the burden is, throughout, upon the prosecution. Whatever course the defence deem it prudent to take, in order to explain suspicious facts or remove doubts, yet it is incumbent on the prosecution to show, under all the circumstances, as a part of their own case, unless admitted or shown by the defence, that there is no innocent theory possible which will, without violation of reason, accord with the facts. And in case of alleged poisoning, where the symptoms and appearances during the last illness become controlling facts in determining whether the death was from poison or from disease, the charge is not made out unless the prosecution negative everything but poison as the cause of death. And this they can only do by showing, affirmatively, that the combined symptoms, and the absolutely certain facts with which they are associated, are inconsistent with any other disease or ailment." People v. Millard, 53 Mich. 63; s. c., 5 Crim. L. Mag. 588.

Independent Exculpatory Fact.—If, however, there is an independent exculpatory fact relied upon by the accused, he must produce evidence of it; and to this extent the burden lies upon him; but when the whole evidence is in, the burden still lies upon the prosecution to, upon the whole case, establish the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; and if not so established, he is entitled to a verdict of not guilty. Dubose v. State, 10 Tex. App. 230; People v. Marshall, 59 Cal. 386; Hawthorne v. State, 58 Miss. 778; State v. Hopkins, 15 S. Car. 153; State v. Payne, 86 N. Car. 609; People v. Cadd, 60 Cal. 640; Jones v. State, 18 Tex. App. 485; State v. Cain, 20 W. Va. 679; People v. Abbott, 4 Pac. Repr. 769; s. c., 6 Crim. L. Mag. 71; Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563; s. c., 9 West C. Rep. 584; 9 Pac. Repr. 852.

Self-defence.—Self-defence is an illustration of the last proposition. For if an assault with a deadly weapon is shown to have been made by the accused, a prima facie case is proven, and he must produce some evidence of excuse, or else abide by a verdict of guilty. Sawyer v. People, 91 N. Y. 667; State v. Skidmore, 87 N. Car. 509. See State v. Fowler, 52 Iowa, 509; s.c., 2 Crim. L. Mag. 45.

Some of the cases claim that he must prove his defence by a preponderance of the evidence. State v. Jones, 20 W. Va. 764.

Former Conviction.—The burden is on the accused to show the offence charged is the identical one for which he has been formerly convicted. Cooper v. State, 47 Ind. 61.

Erasures in Indictment.—The burden is on the defendant to show by irresistible proof that erasures and interlineations in an indictment were not the act of the grand jury. Dodd v. State, 10 Tex. App. 370.

Insanity.—The presumption is that every man is sane, and that when he commits an act he has sufficient mental capacity to understand the nature of his act. When, therefore, the prosecution has proven the commission of the act denounced by the law, the law raises the presumption that the accused had sufficient mental capacity to understand what BURGAGE-TENURE is a tenure whereby houses and lands which were formerly the site of houses, in an ancient borough, are held of some lord by a certain rent. [1] One of the most remarkable customs affecting these tenures is that of Borough-English (which see).

BURGESS.—An inhabitant of a borough. Also used to denote a magistrate of a borough.[2]

he was doing, and a prima facie case is made. The duty then devolves upon the accused to adduce some evidence of his insanity, which the State may rebut. Yet when the whole evidence is before the jury, the burden is with the prosecution that the accused was sane at the time the act was committed. In no sense has the burden changed; but a greater burden has been cast upon the prosecution—to prove a sanity which the law, before any exculpatory evidence was produced, presumed. The presumption of innocence never deserts the accused until a verdict of guilty is returned. Hopps v. People, 31 Ill. 385 (overruling Fisher's Case, 23 Ill. 293); Alexander v. People, 96 Ill. 96; Chase v. People, 40 Ill. 352; Bradley v. State, 31 Ind. 492; McDougal v. State, 88 Ind. 24; s. c., 4 Crim. L. Mag. 509, and note; Guetig v. State, 66 Ind. 94; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 99; State v. Jones, 64 Iowa, 349; s. c., 17 N. W. Repr. 911; 20 N. W. Repr. 470; 6 Crim. L. Mag. 91; State v. Crawford, 11 Kans. 32; s. c., 24 Am. Law Reg. 21; People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9; Cunningham v. State, 56 Miss. 269; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 360; Wright v. People, 4 Neb. 407; Ballard v. State, 28 N. W. Repr. 27; State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 399; State v. Bartlett, 43 N. H. 224; State v. Jones, 50 N. H. 369; State v. Waterman, 1 Nev. 543; Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147; People v. McCann, 16 N. Y. 58; O'Brien v. People, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; O'Connell v. People, 87 N. Y. 377; Dove v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 348; State v. Patterson, 45 Vt. 308.

But a contrary view has been taken by many of the courts, substantially upon the ground that the sanity of mankind being the rule, the burden of proof is on the defendant to show that an exception exists in his case. Braswell's Case, 63 Ala. 307; s. c., 2 Crim. L. Mag. 32; 35 Am. Rep. 20; Ford v. State, 5 Crim. L. Mag. 32; McKenzie v. State, 26 Ark 334; Cavaness v. State, 43 Ark. 331; People v. McDonnell, 47 Cal. 134; People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 489; People v. Knapp, 8 Crim. L. Mag. 640: (by a preponderance under a statute People v. Rodrigo, 11 Pac. Repr. 483;) Jones v. State, 13 Tex. App. 1 (by code).

In some States he must not only raise a reasonable doubt, but prove his insanity by a preponderance. Ford v. State (Ala.), 5 Crim. L. Mag. 32; Graves v. State, 5 Crim. L. Mag. 815; State v. Spencer, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 196; State v. Martin (N. J.), 3 Crim. L. Mag. 44; Dejarnette v. Com., 75 Va. 867; s. c., 2 Crim. L. Mag. 348; State v. Hoyt, 47 Conn. 518; State v. Kline, 54 Iowa, 183; s. c., 2 Crim. L. Mag. 641; State v. Frazier, 1 Del. Cr. 177; State v. Taylor, 1 Del. Cr. 436; State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574; Com. v. Eddy, 7 Gray (Mass.), 583; Loeffner v. State, 10 Ohio St. 598; Bond v. State, 23 Ohio St. 349; Bonfanti v. State, 2 Minn. 123; State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341; Ostwein v. Com., 76 Pa. St. 414; Lynch v. Com., 77 Pa. St. 205; State v. McCoy, 34 Mo. 531; State v. Klinger, 43 Mo. 127; State v. Humdley, 46 Mo. 414; State v. Smith, 53 Mo. 267; State v. Holme, 54 Mo. 153; Corbit v. Smith, 7 Iowa, 60; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 431 (on person asserting); Webb v. State, 9 Tex. App. 490; Coyle v. Com., 100 Pa. St. 573; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 397; 4 Crim. L. Mag. 76; 15 Cent. L. J. 413; State v. Redemier, 71 Mo. 173; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 462; 1 Crim. L. Mag. 456.

Must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Del Rance, 34 La. Ann. 186; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 426; Baccigalpo v. Com., 33 Gratt. (Va.) 807; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 795.

For discussion on this subject see 14 Cent. L. J. 2 and 16 Cent. L. J. 282.

Authorities for Burden of Proof.—1 Greenl. Ev. (13th Ed.) 74–81, c.; 1 Starkie Ev. (10th Am. Ed.) 585; 1 Whart. Ev. (2d Ed.) §§ 353–371; 1 Phillips Ev. (5th Am. Ed.) 683; 1 Taylor's Ev. (1st Eng. Ed.) 372; Woods Prac. Ev. (1st Ed.) 642; Burrill Cir. Ev. (1st Ed.) 728; Best's Prin. Ev. (Morgan's Ed.) §§ 265–290; Lawson Presumptive Ev. 20; 2 Southern L. Rev. (N. S.) 126; 17 Am. L. Rev. 892; 5 Am. L. Rev. 205 (reviewing the case of Cass v. Boston & Lowell R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.), 448); Wharton Cr. Ev. §§ 319–344; Roscoe's Crim. Ev.; Bish. Cr. Proc. (2d Ed.) §§ 1056–1058.

1. Whar. Law Lex.

2. See Bright. Purd. Dig. (Pa.) 206.

BURGLARY. (See also CRIMINAL LAW.)

1. Definition.—Burglary, at the common law, is where a person breaks and enters any dwelling-house by night, with intent to commit a felony therein, whether such felonious intent be executed or not. The "breaking" is either actual, as where the person makes a hole in a door or opens a window, or in law, as where he obtains an entrance by threats or fraud or by collusion with some one in the house.[1]

1. Sweet's Law Dict. See People v. Marks, 4 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 153; Allen v. State, 40 Ala. 334.

Offence at Common Law.—Burglary is a felony at common law, and a burglar is defined by Lord Coke as "he that in the night-time breaketh and entereth into a mansion-house of another, of intent to kill some reasonable creature, or to commit some other felony within the same, whether his felonious intent be executed or not." 3 Inst. 63. And this definition is adopted by Lord Hale. 1 Hale P. C. 549; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 1; 2 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 1.

By Statute.—In the United States the English definition of burglary has been so far modified as to include offences committed by day as well as by night, and in other buildings than dwelling-houses; and various degrees of the crime have been established. Arch. Cr. L. (Pomeroy's Ed.) 1069.

Burglary is a common-law offence and not a statutory crime; but Michigan statutes distinguish between the degrees of punishment for simple and for aggravated burglary, and if all the incidents warranting the severer penalties are not alleged in the information, but the offence is stated as at the common law, the smaller punishment only can be inflicted. Harris v. People, 44 Mich. 305.

2. Breaking necessarily includes force. An entrance may be made by force and not by breaking, but not by breaking without force. To allege a "breaking" sufficiently shows use of force.[1]

A building may be within a statute of burglary, although such building was unknown when the statute was enacted. State v. Bishop, 51 Vt. 287; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 690.

Breaking and entering with intent to steal and carry away goods is burglary. The goods need not be actually carried away. Olive v. Com , 5 Bush (Ky.), 376. See, generally, Rex v. Hanson, 1 Root (Conn.), 59; Lewis v. State, 16 Conn. 32; State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 441; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 216; Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 247; Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582; State v. Newbegin, 25 Me. 500; State v. Seymour, 36 Me. 225; Cooper v. State, 69 Ga. 761; Thomas v. State, 6 Miss. 20; Cole v. People, 37 Mich. 544; Butler v. People, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 68; Earhart v. Commonwealth, 9 Leigh (Va.), 671.

An indictment for burglary must charge that the offence was "burglariously" committed ; otherwise it is bad. State v. Meadows, 22 W. Va. 766. Compare Reed v. State, 14 Tex. App. 662.

1. Matthews v. State, 36 Tex. 675; Shotwell v. State, 43 Ark. 345.

What shall constitute a breaking is thus described by Hawkins: "It seems agreed that such a breaking as is implied by law in every unlawful entry on the possession of another, whether it be opened or be inclosed, and will maintain a common indictment, or action of trespass quare clausum fregit, will not satisfy the words felonice et burglariter, except in some special cases, in which it is accompanied with such circumstances as make it as heinous as an actual breaking. And from hence it follows that if one enter into a house by a door which he finds open, or through a hole which was made there before, and steals goods, etc., or draw anything out of a house through a door or window which was open before, or enter into the house through a door open in the daytime, and lie there till night, and then rob and go away without breaking any part of the house, he is not guilty of burglary." Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, ss. 4, 5; State v. Boon, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 244; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 555; Green v. State, 68 Ala. 539; Walker v. State, 63 Ala. 49; Stone v. State, 63 Ala. 115; Walker v. State, 52 Ala. 376; Pines v. State, 50 Ala. 153; Hamilton v. State, 11 Tex. App. 116; People v. Fralick, Lalor's Sup. (N. Y.) 63; People v. Arnold, 6 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 638; Timmons v. State, 34 Ohio St. 426; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 376; State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 439; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 216; Com. v. Stephenson, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 354; Com. v. Strupney, 105 Mass. 588; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 556; State v. Boon, 13 Ired. (N. Car. 244; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 555.

Evidence is admissible to prove that the doors or windows are usually kept closed. People v. Bush, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 552.

It not being proved that certain blinds through which the entry was made were so closed as to require a breaking to effect the entry, held, a conviction could not be sustained. Williams v. State, 52 Ga. 580.

Where a door bears evidence of having been forced open the jury may infer that it had been properly closed. Com. v. Merrill, Thach. Cr. Cas. 1.

Where a cellar window, which was boarded up, had in it a round aperture of considerable size, to admit light into the cellar, and through this aperture one of the prisoners thrust his head, and, by the assistance of the other prisoner, he thus entered the house, but the prisoners did not enlarge the aperture at all, it was held that this was not a sufficient breaking. R. v. Lewis, 2 C. & P. 628.

So where a hole had been left in the roof of a brew-house, part of a dwelling-house, for the purpose of light, and it was contended that an entry through this hole was like an entry by a chimney, it was held that this was not a sufficient breaking. Bosanquet, J.: "The entry by the chimney stands upon a very different footing; it is a necessary opening in every house, which needs protection; but if a man choose to leave an opening in the wall or roof of his house, instead of a fastened window, he must take the consequences. The entry through such an opening is not a breaking." R. v. Spriggs, 1 M. & R. 357.

So where corn having been abstracted from the crib by the defendant, by thrusting his arm through an opening between the chinks, if he made or enlarged the opening for the purpose, this would constitute a sufficient breaking as an element of burglary; but if the opening was neither made nor enlarged by him,

The breaking is either actual or constructive. ACTUAL where the offender, for the purpose of getting admission for any part of his body, or for a weapon or other instrument, in order to effect his felonious intention breaks a hole in the wall of a house, breaks a door or window, picks the lock of a door or opens it with a key, or even by lifting the latch, or unlooses any other fastenings to doors or windows which the owner has provided.[1] though he thrust in his arm and took out the corn, and might thereby be guilty of larceny, he would not be guilty of burglary. Miller v. State, 77 Ala. 41.

The two rooms of a gin-house, which had not been used as such for two years or more, being separated by a partition in which an opening was left, not for ingress or egress, but for the passage of the cotton from the gin (when running) into the lint-room; and being used and occupied by two different persons, each having the key to the door of his own room; if one of them enters the room of the other, through the said opening, with the intent to steal his seed-cotton stored therein, he is not guilty of burglary, though he opened and entered the door of his own room with the intent to pass through the opening and steal the cotton in the other room, and carried his intent into execution. Stone v. State, 63 Ala. 115.

A person entering is not guilty of burglary because he removed the bar of the door while within, and opened it to let in his accomplices, if none of them in fact entered. Ray v. State, 66 Ala. 281.

Where the only evidence for the prosecution is the testimony of the owner of the house to the effect that he one morning found a window open which was usually kept closed, but could not say that it was closed or fastened the previous night, and that he found on examination no signs of a breaking or entry, the court should charge the jury, on the written request of the defendant, that they must find him not guilty. Green v. State, 68 Ala. 539.

So where there was no evidence that the defendant had opened the door of the office at all, as there was none that it was shut before he entered, the court should have instructed the jury, on his request, that upon the evidence they must find him not guilty. Lowder v. State, 63 Ala. 143; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 9.

Where the indictment charges force, it is error for the court to instruct concerning burglary by threats or fraud, thus confusing the jury. Lott v. State, 17 Tex. App. 598.

But breaking a window, taking a pane of glass out by breaking or bending the nails or other fastenings, the drawing of a latch when a door is not otherwise fastened, picking open a lock with a false key, putting back the lock of a door or the fastening of a window with an instrument, turning the key where the door is locked on the inside, or unloosing any other fastening which the owner has provided,—these are all proofs of a breaking. 2 East P. C. 487; 2 Russ. Cr. (5th Ed.) 3.

Any breaking that enables the prisoner to take the property out through the breach with his hands is a sufficient breaking, if the intent was felonious. Fisher v. State, 43 Ala. 17.

1. 2 Russell on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 2.

The lifting the latch of a door, the picking of a lock or opening with a key, the removal of a pane of glass, and indeed the displacement or unloosing any fastening the owner has provided as a security to the house, is a breaking, an actual breaking, within the meaning of the term as employed in the definition of burglary at common law, and as it is employed in the statutes. Walker v. State, 52 Ala. 376.

A burglarious entry may be effected either by force, threats, or fraud, and the effect of charging it to have been made by force merely confines the proof to that character of entry. Summers v. State, 9 Tex. App. 396.

Actual Breaking—Doors.—Entering the house through an open door is not, as already stated supra, such a breaking as to constitute a burglary. Yet if the offender enters a house in the night-time through an open door or window, and when within the house turns the key of, or unlatches, a chamber-door with intent to commit felony, it is a burglary. Hale P. C. 553; State v. Scripture, 42 N. H. 485; Rolland v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 66; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 626; Lowder v. State, 63 Ala. 143; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 9; State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 413; Carter v. State, 68 Ala. 96; Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705; State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 439.

So where the prisoner entered the house by a back door which had been left open by the family, and afterwards broke open an inner door and stole goods out of the room, and then unbolted the street door on the inside and went out, this was held by the judges to be burglary. R. v. Johnson, 2 East P. C. 488.

So where the master lay in one part of the house and the servants in another, and the stair-foot door of the master's chamber was latched, and a servant in the night unlatched that door and went into his master's chamber with intent to murder him, it was held burglary. R. v. Haydon, Hutt. 20; Kel. 67; 1 Hale P. C. 554; 2 East P. C. 488; U. S. v. Bowen, 4 Cranch C. C. 604.

A servant employed by an attorney in and about his office, and intrusted with the key to the front door, may be convicted of burglary if he enters the office by night, by using the key, with the intention at the time of stealing the money of his employer while asleep in an inner room; but if he is in the habit of sleeping in the office with the consent of his employer, or without objection from him, and enters with the intention only of going to bed, but afterwards forms the design to steal the money, and attempts to do so, he is not guilty of burglary. Lowder v. State, 63 Ala. 143; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 9.

The force necessary to push open a closed but unfastened transom that swings horizontally on hinges over an outer door of a dwelling-house is sufficient to constitute a breaking. Timmons v. State, 34 Ohio St. 426; 32 Am. Rep. 376; Dennis v. People, 27 Mich. 151.

So the lifting of a latch may, when that is the ordinary mode of fastening, constitute a breaking. State v. Groning, 33 Kan. 18; State v. Jansen, 22 Kan. 498; State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 439; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 216; Bass v. State, 1 Lea (Tenn.), 444; McCourt v. People, 64 N. Y. 583; People v. Bush, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 552; Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705.

To constitute a breaking into a railroad car it is not necessary that the doors of the car should be locked. Lyons v. People, 68 Ill. 271.

Where defendant was indicted for burglary, with intent to commit robbery, proof showing the breaking and entry by violence, accompanied by a loud noise in the room where prosecutor and wife lived, indicates an attempt to rob rather than to commit a simple larceny. Lowe v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.), 204.

The lifting the latch of a door, the picking of a lock or opening with a key, the removal of a pane of glass, and indeed the displacement or unloosing any fastening the owner has provided as a security to the house, is a breaking, an actual breaking, within the meaning of the term, as employed in the definition of burglary at common law, and as it is employed in the statutes. Walker v. State, 52 Ala. 376.

The pushing open of a closed door will constitute an actual breaking. State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 413; Timmons v. State, 34 Ohio St. 426; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 376; Mason v. People, 26 N. Y. 200; Tickner v. People, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 657; State v. Boon, 13 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 244; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 555; People v. Nolan, 22 Mich. 229; State v. Comstock, 20 Kan. 650; State v. Jansen, 22 Kan. 498; Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705; Carter v. State, 68 Ala. 96; Anderson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 305; Finch v. Commonwealth, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 643; Lyons v. People, 68 Ill. 271.

The opening of a door which is closed and fastened with a chain hooked over a nail is a sufficient breaking to constitute burglary, if done with the intent to steal and carry away property, and is followed by an entry of the building to which the door belonged. State v. Hecox, 83 Mo. 531; s. c., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 98.

Where a store is lighted, and the doors are merely closed but not locked, and the clerks are in the store, it is not burglary for one to enter the store after sunset with intent to rob. State v. Newbegin, 25 Me. 500.

Whether the pushing open the flap or flaps of a trap-door, or door in a floor, which closes by its own weight, is a sufficient breaking, was for some time a matter of doubt. In the following case it was held to be a breaking. Through a mill (within a curtilage) was an open entrance or gateway, capable of admitting wagons, intended for the purpose of loading them with flour through a large aperture communicating with the floor above. This aperture was closed by folding doors with hinges, which fell over it, and remained closed with their own weight, but without any interior fastenings, so that persons without, under the gateway, could push them open at pleasure. In this manner the prisoner entered with intent to steal; and Buller, J., held that this was a sufficient breaking to constitute the offence of burglary. R. v. Brown, 2 East P. C. 487.

In another case, upon nearly similar facts, the judges were equally divided in opinion. The prisoner broke out of a cellar by lifting up a heavy flap, whereby the cellar was closed on the outside next the street. The flap had bolts, but was not bolted. The prisoner being convicted of burglary, upon a case reserved, six of the judges, including Lord Ellenborough, C. J., and Mansfield, C. J., thought that this was a sufficient breaking; because the weight was intended as a security, this not being a common entrance; but the other six judges thought the conviction wrong. R. v. Callan, Russ. & Ry. 157.

It has been observed that the only difference between this and R. v. Brown, 2 East P. C. 487, seems to be that in the latter there were no internal fastenings, which in Callan's case there were, but were not used. Russ. & Ry. 158 (n). The authority of R. v. Brown has been since followed, and that decision may now be considered to be law. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 361. See McCourt v. People, 64 N. Y. 583.

Upon an indictment for burglary, the question was whether there had been a sufficient breaking. There was a cellar under the house, which communicated with the other parts of it by an inner staircase; the entrance to the cellar from the outside was by means of a flap which let down: the flap was made of two-inch stuff, but reduced in thickness by the wood being worked up. The prisoner got into the cellar by raising the flap-door. It had been from time to time fastened with nails, when the cellar was not wanted. The jury found that it was not nailed down on the night in question. The prisoner being convicted, on a case reserved, the judges were of opinion that the conviction was right. R. v. Russell, 1 Moody C. C. 377.

Unless a distinction can be drawn between breaking into a house and breaking out of it, this case seems to overrule. R. v. Lawrence, 4 C. & P. 231.

The removal of an iron grating covering an area opposite a cellar window is a breaking. People v. Nolan, 22 Mich. 229.

Actual Breaking—Windows.—Where a window is open, and the offender enters the house, this is no breaking, as already stated, ante, p. 660, n. 1. But removing a netting which covers a window and entering through the window, although it was open, is burglary. Com. v. Stephenson, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 354. See Hunter v. Commonwealth, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 641; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 121.

And where the prisoner was indicted for breaking and entering a dwelling-house and stealing therein, and it appeared that he had effected an entrance by pushing up or raising the lower sash of the parlor window, which was proved to have been, about twelve o'clock on the same day, in an open state, or raised about a couple of inches, so as not to afford room for a person to enter the house through that opening, it was said by all the judges that there was no decision under which this could be held to be a breaking. R. v. Smith, 1 Moody C. C. 178. See Com. v. Strupney, 105 Mass. 588; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 556.

A square of glass in the kitchen window (through which the prisoners entered) had been previously broken by accident, and half of it was out when the offence was committed: the aperture formed by the half-square was sufficient to admit a hand, but not to enable a person to put in his arm, so as to undo the fastening of the casement: One of the prisoners thrust his arm through the aperture, thereby breaking out the residue of the square, and having so done, he removed the fastening of the casement; the window being thus opened, the two prisoners entered the house. The doubt which the learned judges entertained arose from the difficulty they had to distinguish satisfactorily the case of enlarging a hole already existing (it not being like a chimney, an aperture necessarily left in the original construction of the house, see post, p. 664, "But an entry through a hole," etc.), from enlarging an aperture by lifting up further the sash of the window, as in R. v. Smith, 1 Moody, C. C. 178, but the learned judges thought it was worth considering whether in both cases the facts did not constitute, in point of law, a sufficient breaking. Upon a case reserved, all the judges who met were of opinion that there was a sufficient breaking, not by breaking the residue of the pane, but by unfastening and opening the window. R. v. Robinson, 1 Moody C. C. 327; Miller v. State, 77 Ala. 41.

Where a pane of glass had been cut for a month, but there was no opening whatever, as every portion of the glass remained exactly in its place and the prisoner was both seen and heard to put his hand through the glass, this was held a sufficient breaking. R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44.

Where a house was entered through a window upon hinges, which was fastened by two nails which acted as wedges, but notwithstanding these nails the window would open by pushing, and the prisoner pushed it open, the judges held that the forcing the window in this manner was a sufficient breaking to constitute burglary. R. v. Hall, Russ. & R. 355. So pulling down the upper sash of a window which has no fastening, but which is kept in its place by the pulley-weight only, is a breaking, although there is an outer shutter which is not fastened. R. v. Haines, Russ. & Ry. 451. So raising a window which is shut down close, but not fastened, though it has a hasp which might be fastened. R. v. Hyam, 7 C. & P. 441; Com. v. Stephenson, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 354; State v. Carpenter, 1 Houst. Cr. C. (Del.) 367; State v. Tutt, 63 Mo. 595; People v. Edwards, 1 Wh. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 371; State v. Boon, 13 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 244; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 555; Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705; State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 413; Dennis v. People, 27 Mich. 151; Frank v. State, 39 Mich. 705; Cooper v. State, 69 Ga. 761; People v. Bush, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 552.

Where a cellar window, which was boarded up, had in it an aperture of considerable size to admit light into the cellar, and through this aperture one of the prisoners thrust his head, and by the assistance of the others thus entered the house, Vaughan, B., ruled that this resembled the case of a man having a hole in the wall of his house large enough for a man to enter, and that it was not burglary. R. v. Lewis, 2 C. & P. 628.

A shutter-box partly projected from a house, and adjoined the side of the shop window, which side was protected by wooden panelling lined with iron. Held that the breaking and entering of the shutter-box without getting into the house did not constitute burglary. R. v. Paine, 7 C. & P. 135.

Where the evidence given in a prosecution for burglary made it impossible for the jury not to conclude that the window through which defendant effected an entrance was an outside window; held, that it was not essential for the trial court specially to instruct the jury that they could not convict unless they found this fact. State v. Butterfield, 75 Mo. 297.

Actual Breaking—Quality of Fastenings.—The law cannot institute an inquiry into the sufficiency of the various fastenings employed. Carter v. State, 68 Ala. 96.

Cutting and tearing down a netting of twine which is nailed to the top, bottom, and sides of a glass window, so as to cover it, and entering the house through such window, though it was not shut, constitutes a sufficient breach and entry. Com. v. Stephenson, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 354.

Actual Breaking—Chimneys.—"It was at one time considered doubtful whether getting into the chimney of a house in the night time, with intent to commit a felony, was a sufficient breaking to constitute burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 552. But it is now settled that this is a breaking; for though actually open, it is as much enclosed as the nature of the place will allow. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 6; 2 East P. C. 485; Carter v. State, 68 Ala. 96; Vonaken v. State, 36 Ala. 281. And accordingly it was so held, in a late case, by ten of the judges. Their lordships were of opinion that the chimney was part of the dwelling-house, that the getting in at the top was a breaking of the dwelling-house, and that the prisoner, by lowering himself, in the chimney, made an entry into the dwelling-house. R. v. Brice, Russ. & Ry. 450." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 363.

To enter through a chimney into a store, the upper rooms of which are inhabited as a dwelling, is burglary, though there be no communication between the chimney and the dwelling. Robertson's Case, 4 C. H. Rec. (N. Y.) 63; Walker v. State, 52 Ala. 376; Donohoo v. State, 36 Ala. 281; State v. Willis, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 190.

But an entry through a hole in the roof, left for the purpose of admitting light, is not a sufficient entry to constitute burglary; for a chimney is a necessary opening and requires protection, whereas if a man chooses to leave a hole in the wall or roof of his house, instead of a fastened window, he must take the consequences. R. v. Spriggs, 1 Moo. & R. 357.

Actual Breaking—Interior Doors, etc.—The breaking requisite to constitute a burglary is not confined to the external parts of the house, but may be of an inner door, after the offender has entered by means of a part of the house which he has found open. Thus, if A enters the house of B in the night-time, the outward door being open, or by an open window, and, when within the house, turns the key of a chamber door, or unlatch it, with intent to steal, this will be burglary. 2 Russell on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 7. See Martin v. State, 1 Tex. App. 525; People v. Van Gaasbeck, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 328; Smith's Case, 4 C. H. Rec. (N. Y.) 63; People v. McCloskey, 5 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 57; State v. Scripture, 42 N. H. 485; State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 439; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 216. Compare People v. Marks, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 153; People v. Fralick Hill & D. Sup. (N. Y.) 63; Rolland v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 66; s. c., 3 Am. Cr. Rep. 35.

Where the prisoners went into the house of the cook at Sergeant's Inn, in Fleet Street, to eat, and taking their opportunity, slipped up stairs, picked open the lock of a chamber door, broke open a chest, and stole plate, it was agreed that the picking open the lock of a chamber door ousted them of their clergy, though the breaking open the chest would not have done so. 1 Hale, 524. And it will also amount to burglary if a servant in the night-time open the chamber door of his master or mistress, whether latched or otherwise fastened, and enter for the purpose of committing murder or rape, or with any other felonious design; or if any other person, lodging in the same house, or in a public inn, open and enter another's door, with such evil intent. 1 Hale, 553, 554; 4 Blac. Com. 227; Binglose's Case, 2 W. & M.; MS., Denton, cited 2 East P. C. c. 15, s. 4. p. 488; Gray's Case, 1 Str. 481; Sum. 82, 84; Bac. Abr. tit. "Burglary" (A.); R v. Wenmouth, 8 Cox C. C. 348; State v. Scripture, 42 N. H. 485; State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 439; Martin v. State, 1 Tex. App. 525.

But it has been questioned whether, if a lodger in an inn should, in the night-time, open his chamber door, steal goods, and go away, the offence would be burglary; on the ground of his having a kind of special property and interest in his chamber, and the opening of his own door being therefore no breaking of the innkeeper's house. 1 Hale, 554.

It is immaterial whether the felony is committed in the particular room into which the inner door leads or another part of the house. Rolland v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 66; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 626; s. c., 3 Am. Cr. Rep. 35.

A servant left in charge of a house, who enters a closed room and steals therefrom, when, by virtue of his employment, he had no right to go there, is guilty of burglary. Hild v. State, 67 Ala. 39.

Unlatching the door of a sleeping apartment, and entering with intent to kill. Held, burglary. U. S. v. Bowen, 4 Cranch C. C. 604.

Where a boarder breaks into the room of a fellow-boarder in the same boarding-house, and robs it, it is burglary. Ullman v. State, 1 Tex. App. 220; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 405. See State v. Clark, 42 Vt. 629.

The windows of the lower floor of a mill were left open. There was nothing kept on the floor. An entry was made to the second floor by pushing aside a board which covers a hole in the floor of the second story. The board was held in place by a small quantity of seed cotton. Held, that there was a breaking and entering. Carter v. State, 68 Ala. 96.

Removing a loose plank (not fixed to the freehold) in a partition-wall of a building is not a breaking. Com. v. Trimmer, 1 Mass. 476.

One who enters with burglarious intent a room of a house, enters the house with such intent; and where such room is a "ticket-office," it may properly be described as "a building, to wit, the ticket-office." In such an action it is not error to charge the jury that, to constitute a room, the partition between it and the rest of the house need not extend to the ceiling or roof of the house, but that a partition eight or nine feet high from the floor would be a sufficient partition. People v. Young, 65 Cal. 225.

An employé left in charge of a house, who enters a closed room and steals therefrom, when, by virtue of his employment, he had no right to go there, is guilty of burglary. Hild v. State, 67 Ala. 39.

Actual Breaking—Fixtures, Cupboards, Safes, etc.—The breaking open of a movable chest or box in a dwelling-house, in the night-time, is not such a breaking as will make the offence burglary, for the chest or box is no part of the mansion-house. Foster, 108; 2 East P. C. 488.

Whether breaking open the door of a cupboard let into the wall of a house, be burglary or not, does not appear ever to have been solemnly decided. In 1690 a case in which the point arose was reserved for the opinion of the judges, and they were equally divided upon it. Foster, 108.

Lord Hale says that such a breaking will not make a burglary at common law. 1 Hale P. C. 527. Though on the authority of R. v. Simpson, Kel. 31; 2 Hale P. C. 358, he considers it a sufficient breaking within the repealed stat. 39 Eliz. c. 15. In the opinion of Mr. Justice Foster, however, R. v. Simpson does not warrant the latter position. Foster, 108; 2 East P. C. 489. And see 2 Hale P. C. 358 (n). Mr. Justice Foster concludes that such fixtures as merely supply the place of chests and other ordinary utensils of household, should for the purpose be considered in no other light than as mere movables. Foster, 109; 2 East P. C. 489.

If one finds all the doors open, and breaks open a chest or box, it is not burglary. State v. Wilson, Coxe (N. J.), 439; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 216.

Upon the trial of an indictment for burglary, the evidence tended to show that the accused, in the night, broke and entered a warehouse with intent to steal money supposed to be in a safe therein, belonging

3. Breaking out of a Dwelling-house.—It was formerly doubted whether, where a man entered a dwelling-house in the night (without breaking) with the intent to commit felony, and afterwards broke out of the same, or being there in the night committed a felony, and broke out, this amounted to burglary or not. It was, however, declared to be such by the repealed statute 12 Anne, c. 7, and the provision has been repeated in the subsequent acts.[1] to the owner of the building, which safe, however, was not used as a place for the deposit of money. The court charged the jury, that if the accused broke and entered the building with the intent to break into the safe and steal money supposed to be therein, and the safe was not used as a place for the deposit of money, and there was none therein at the time, he was not guilty. Held, that the instruction was erroneous. State v. Beal, 37 Ohio St. 108: s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 490.

Actual Breaking—Walls.—"Whether breaking a wall, part of the curtilage, is a sufficient breaking to constitute burglary, has not been decided. Lord Hale, after citing 22 Assiz. 95, which defines burglary to be, 'to break houses, churches, walls, courts, or gates, in time of peace,' says, 'by that book it should seem that if a man hath a wall about his house for its safeguard, and a thief in the night breaks the wall or the gate thereof, and finding the doors of the gate open enters into the house, this is burglary; but otherwise it had been, if he had come over the wall of the court and found the door of the house open, then it had been no burglary.' 1 Hale P. C. 559. Upon this passage an annotator of the Pleas of the Crown observes, 'This was anciently understood only of the walls or gates of the city (vide Spelman, in verbo Burglaria). If so, it will not support our author's conclusion, wherein he applies it to the wall of a private house.' Id. (n.) ed. 1778. It has been likewise observed upon this passage, that the distinction between breaking and coming over the wall or gate, for the purpose of burglary, is very refined, for if it be part of the mansion, and be inclosed as much as the nature of the thing will admit of, it seems to be immaterial whether it be broken or overleaped, and more properly to fall under the same consideration as the case of a chimney; and if it be not part of the mansion-house for this purpose, then whether it be broken or not is equally immaterial; in neither case will it amount to burglary. 2 East P. C. 488." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 363.

Actual Breaking—Gates.—Where a gate forms part of the outer fence of a dwelling-house only, and does not open into the house, or into some building parcel of the house, the breaking of it will not constitute burglary. Thus, where large gates open into a yard in which was situated the dwelling-house and warehouse of the prosecutors, the warehouse extending over the gateway, so that when the gates were shut the premises were completely inclosed, the judges were unanimous that the outward fence of the curtilage, not opening into any of the buildings, was no part of the dwelling-house. R. v. Bennett, Russ. & Ry. 289. So where the prisoner opened the area gate of a house in London with a skeleton key and entered the house by a door in the area, which did not appear to have been shut, the judges were all of opinion that breaking the area gate was not a breaking of the dwelling-house, as there was no free passage in time of sleep from the area into the dwelling-house. R. v. Davis, Russ. & Ry. 322.

1. 1 Hale P. C. 554; R. v. Clarke, 2 East P. C. 490; Lord Bac. Elem. 65; 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 7; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 386; State v. Ward, 43 Conn. 489; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 665; Sand's Case, 6 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 1.

An indictment which stated in one count that the prisoner "did break to get out," and in another that he "did break and get out," was held by Vaughan and Patteson, J. J., insufficient since the last-mentioned statute, which uses the words "break out." R. v. Crompton, 7 C. & P. 139.

Where a lodger, in the prosecutor's house, got up in the night and unbolted the back door, and went away with a jacket of the prosecutor's which he had stolen, he was convicted of burglary. In his case it was also held to be not the less a burglary because the defendant was lawfully in the house as a lodger or as a guest at an inn. R. v. Wheeldon, 8 C. & P. 747.

It has been held that getting out of a house by pushing up a new trap-door, which was merely kept down by its own weight, and on which fastenings had not at that time been put, but the old trap-door, for which this new one was substituted, had been secured by fastenings, was not a sufficient breaking out of the house. R. v. Lawrence, 4 C. & P. 231. Unless a breaking out of a house can be distinguished from breaking into a house, this case seems overruled by Rex v. Russell, R. & M. C. C. R. 377 (ante, p. 663).

4. Constructive.—The breaking is constructive where admission is gained by some device, there being no actual force.[1]

Unbolting a door to escape is not a "breaking and entering." White v. State, 51 Ga. 285; Rolland v. Commonwealth, 82 Pa. St. 306; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 758; Brown v. State, 55 Ala. 123; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 693; Adkinson v. State, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 569; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 69; Wine v. State, 25 Ohio St. 69. Compare State v. Ward, 43 Conn. 489; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 665.

An indictment charging "breaking, etc., into a house" will not warrant a conviction for "breaking out." State v. McPherson, 70 N. Car. 239; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 769.

1. State v. Carter, 1 Houst. Cr. C. (Del.) 402; Johnston v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 54; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 622; Rolland v. Commonwealth, 82 Pa. St. 306; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 758; Clarke v. Commonwealth, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 908; Ducher v. State, 18 Ohio, 308; Fisher v. State, 43 Ala. 17; State v. Johnson, Phil. (N. Car.) 186; State v. Mordecai, 68 N. Car. 207; State v. Henry, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 463; Conoly v. State, 2 Tex. App. 412; Martin v. State, 1 Tex. App. 525; Fisher v. State, 43 Ala. 17.

The breaking may be done by fire, and the breaking is not lost by the destruction of the building. White v. State, 49 Ala. 344.

Constructive Breaking—Fraud.—"In order to constitute such a breaking as will render the party subject to the penalties of burglary, it is not essential that force should be employed. There may be a constructive breaking by fraud, conspiracy, or threats, which will render the person who is party to it equally guilty as if he had been guilty of breaking with force. Where, by means of fraud, an entrance is effected into a dwelling-house in the night-time, with a felonious intent, it is burglary. Thieves came with a pretended hue and cry, and, requiring the constable to go with them to search for felons, entered the house, bound the constable and occupier, and robbed the latter. So where thieves entered a house, pretending that the owner had committed treason; in both these cases, though the owner himself opened the door to the thieves, it was held burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 552, 553. The prisoner knowing the family to be in the country, and meeting the boy who kept the key of the house, desired him to go with her to the house, promising him a pot of ale. The boy accordingly let her in, when she sent him for the ale, robbed the house, and went off. This, being in the night-time, was held to be burglary. R. v. Hawkins, 2 East P. C. 485. By the same reasoning getting possession of a dwelling-house by a judgment against the casual ejector, obtained by false affidavits, without any color of title, and then rifling the house, was ruled to be within the statute against breaking the house and stealing goods therein. 2 East P. C. 485. So where persons designing to rob a house took lodgings in it, and then fell on the landlord and robbed him. Kel. 52, 53; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 9." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.).

Where the prisoners induced the occupant of a house to admit them, and there assaulted him and robbed the house, held, a sufficient breaking and entering. State v. Mordecai, 68 N. Car. 207; Ducher v. State, 18 Ohio, 308.

The prisoner, pretending to have business with the occupant of a dwelling-house, gained admittance thereto at night, with intent to commit a robbery. Held, a constructive breaking sufficient to support an indictment for burglary by breaking and entering. Johnston v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 54; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 622; Rolland v. Commonwealth, 82 Pa. St. 306; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 758; State v. Johnson, Phil. (N. Car.) 140.

Appellant was convicted of burglary on an indictment which charged a nocturnal entry effected by fraud. The evidence relied on to prove the entry and fraud tended to show that he took off his shoes and entered through an open door, without the consent of any one. Held, not sufficient to prove that the entry was effected by fraud. Hamilton v. State, 11 Tex. App. 117.

Where a guest at an inn entered the barroom in the night, and stole some money, held, that as the guest had a legal right to enter the inn and the barroom, his subsequent larceny did not relate back and give a character to his entry, so as to make it illegal, and a conviction could not be sustained. State v. Moore, 12 N. H. 42.

Where a boarder entered the room of a fellow-boarder, and robbed it, held, burglary. Ullman v. State, 1 Tex. App. 220; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 405; State v. Clark, 42 Vt. 629.

Where the owner of a house was induced to open the door and proceed to a distance from the house, leaving the door unfastened, and the prisoner entered the house through the unfastened door about fifteen minutes after the owner left it, held, that it was not a constructive breaking; that in order to make it such the entry must be immediate or in so short a time that the owner or his family has not the opportunity of refastening the door. State v. Henry, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 463. Compare Breese v. State, 12 Ohio St. 146.

Where it is shown that the accused went to the house of another in the nighttime, and called to the persons within, who were asleep, to open the door, falsely stating that he was the sheriff of the county, and desired to serve a subpœna: but when the door was opened he ordered the inmates of the house to throw up their hands, but before he could enter the house, the door was closed, and through which he shot twice, and then forced the door open, and entered the house,—this was held to be sufficient proof of breaking and entering. Seling v. State, 26 N. W. Repr. (Neb.) 254.

Where the indictment charges that the accused "feloniously, fraudulently, and burglariously did break and enter," held, not sufficiently to charge an entry "by fraud." Sullivan v. State, 13 Tex. App. 462.

Where the indictment alleges force, it is not competent to prove that it was committed by force or fraud. Buntain v. State, 15 Tex. App. 485.

Constructive Breaking—Conspiracy.—"A breaking may be effected by conspiring with persons within the house, by whose means those who are without effect an entrance. Thus if A the servant of B conspire with C to let him in to rob B, and accordingly A in the nighttime opens the door and lets him in, this, according to Dalton (c. 99), is burglary in C and larceny in A. But according to Lord Hale, it is burglary in both; for if it be burglary in C it must necessarily be so in A, since he is present and assisting C in the committing of the burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 553. See People v. Bowjet, 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 11. C. was indicted with another person for burglary, and it appeared that he was a servant in the house, and in the nighttime opened the street door and let in the other prisoner, who robbed the house, after which C. opened the door and let the other out, but did not go out with him. It was doubted on the trial whether this was a burglary in the servant, he not going out with the other; but afterwards, at a meeting of all the judges, they were unanimously of opinion that it was a burglary in both, and C. was executed. R. v. Cornwall, 2 Str. 881; 4 Bl. Com. 277; 2 East P. C. 486." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 364.

But if a servant, pretending to agree with a robber, open the door and let him in for the purpose of detecting and apprehending him, this is no burglary, for the door is lawfully open. R. v. Johnson, Carr & M. 218.

The facts that the three were there together, that they would not leave, that they were followed and the goods found on them, make such a case of conspiracy as to authorize a charge that if one breaks in and another stands by and helps and receives the goods, all are guilty. Wilkerson v. State, 73 Ga. 799.

Constructive Breaking — Menaces.—There may also be a breaking in law, where, in consequence of violence commenced or threatened, in order to obtain entrance, the owner, either from apprehension of force, or with a view more effectually to repel it, opens the door, through which the robbers enter. 2 East P. C. 480. But if the owner only throw the money out of the house to the thieves who assault it, this will not be burglary. 2 East P. C. 480; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 3. Though if the money were taken up in the owner's presence it would be robbery. 2 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 9. But in all other cases, where no fraud or conspiracy is made use of, or violence commenced or threatened, in order to obtain an entrance, there must be an actual breach of some part or other of the house, though it need not be accompanied with any violence as to the manner of executing it. 2 East P. C. 486; Hale, Sum. 80.

Where the evidence was that the family within the house were forced by threats and intimidation to let in the offenders, Thomson, B., told the jury, that although the door was, literally, opened by one of the family, yet if such opening proceeded from the intimidations of those who were without, and from the force that had been used, knocking at and breaking the windows, calling out and insisting upon the door being opened, and firing of guns, if under these circumstances the persons within were induced to open the door, it was as much a breaking by those who made use of such intimidations to prevail.

4. Entry.—The least degree of entry with any part of the body, or with any instrument held in the hand, will suffice; for example, stepping over the threshold, putting a finger or hook in at the open window in order to abstract goods.[1] upon them so to open it, as if they had actually burst the door open. R. v. Swallow, 2 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 9.

Constructive Breaking—by one of Several.—"Where several come to commit a burglary, and some stand to watch in adjacent places, and others enter and rob, in such cases the act of one is, in judgment of law, the act of all, and all are equally guilty of the burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 439, 534; 3 Inst. 63; 2 East P. C. 486. So where a room-door was latched, and one person lifted the latch and entered the room, and concealed himself for the purpose of committing a robbery there, which he afterwards accomplished. Two other persons were present with him at the time he lifted the latch to assist him to enter, and they screened him from observation by opening an umbrella. It was held that the two were, in law, parties to the breaking and entering, and were answerable for the robbery which took place afterwards, though they were not near the spot at the time it was perpetrated. Where the breaking in is one night, and the entering the night after, a person present at the breaking, though not present at the entering, is, in law, guilty of the whole offence. R. v. Jordan, 7 C. & P. 432." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 365.

If two conspire to open a window and enter a store with intent to commit a larceny and one opens it in part and leaves it thus, standing a short distance off, while the other hoists the sash high enough to enter, and does enter except his legs, and is then seized, both are guilty of burglary. Cooper v. State, 69 Ga. 761.

1. 1 Hale P. C. 551, 555; 2 East P. C. 490; 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 38, § 11; Allen v. State, 40 Ala. 334; Pines v. State, 50 Ala. 153; State v. McCall, 4 Ala. 643; Burke v. State, 5 Tex. App. 74; France v. State, 42 Tex. 276; Com. v. Glover, 111 Mass. 395; Harris v. People, 44 Mich. 305.

It is always necessary to prove an entry; otherwise it is no burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 555.

If any part of the body be within the house, hand or foot, this is sufficient. Foster, 108; 2 East P. C. 490.

Thus where the prisoner cut a hole through the window-shutters of the prosecutor's shop, and putting his hand through the hole, took out watches, etc., but no other entry was proved, this was held to be burglary. R. v. Gibbon, Foster, 108.

So where the prisoner broke a pane of glass in the upper sash of a window (which was fastened in the usual way by a latch), and introduced his hand within, for the purpose of unfastening the latch, but while he was cutting a hole in the shutter with a centre-bit, and before he could unfasten the latch, he was seized, the judges held this to be a sufficient entry to constitute a burglary. R. v. Bailey, Russ. & Ry. 341.

The prosecutor, standing near the window of his shop, observed the prisoner with his finger against part of the glass. The glass fell inside by the force of his finger. The prosecutor added that, standing as he did in the street, he saw the fore-part of the prisoner's finger on the shop-side of the glass. The judges ruled this a sufficient entry. R. v. Davis, Russ. & Ry. 499.

Simply breaking the blinds, and making no entry beyond the sash-windows, is not a breaking and entering. State v. McCall, 4 Ala. 643; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 314.

The prisoner raised a window, and held it so that his fingers were within the house, his elbows resting on the sill of the window. Held, that such entry and the circumstances were sufficient from which the jury might find the felonious intent, and their verdict of guilty would be supported. France v. State, 42 Tex. 276.

Where the facts do not quite amount to an entry, the prisoner may be found guilty of the attempt to commit burglary. R. v Spanner, 12 Cox C. C. 155.

The getting in at the top of the chimney, as already stated, ante, p. 664, has been held to be a breaking, and the prisoner's lowering himself down the chimney, though he never enters the room, has been held to be an entry. R. v. Brice, Russ. & Ry. 450.

Entry—Introduction of Fire-arms or Instruments.—Where no part of the offender's body enters the house, but he introduces an instrument, whether that introduction will be such an entry as to constitute a burglary depends, as it seems, upon the object with which the instrument is employed. Thus if the instrument be employed not merely for the purpose of making the entry, but for the purpose of committing the contemplated felony, it will amount to an entry, as where a man puts a hook or other instrument to steal, or a pistol to kill, through a window, though his hand be not in, this is an entry. 1 Hale P. C. 555; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 11; 2 East P. C. 490; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 366.

But where the instrument is used, not for the purpose of committing the contemplated felony, but only for the purpose of effecting the entry, the introduction of the instrument will not be such an entry as to constitute burglary. Thus where thieves had bored a hole through the door with a centre-bit, and part of the chips were found inside the house, by which it was apparent that the end of the centre-bit had penetrated into the house, yet as the instrument had not been introduced for the purpose of taking the property, or committing any other felony, the entry was ruled to be incomplete. R. v. Hughes, 2 East P. C. 491; 1 Leach, 406; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 12; Walker v. State, 63 Ala. 49; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 1; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 366.

A glass sash-window was left closed down, but was thrown up by the prisoners; the inside shutters were fastened, and there was a space of about three inches between the sash and the shutters, and the latter were about an inch thick. It appeared that after the sash had been thrown up, a crowbar had been introduced to force the shutters, and had been not only within the sash, but had reached to the inside of the shutters, as the mark of it was found there. On a case reserved, the judges were of opinion that this was not burglary, there being no proof that any part of the prisoner's hand was within the window. R. v. Rust, 1 Moody C. C. 183.

Introducing a knife between the upper and under sash of an outside window of a dwelling-house with the felonious intent to break and enter is enough to sustain a conviction for an attempt at burglary. Harris v. People, 44 Mich. 305.

A person who, with the intent to steal shelled corn heaped up in a crib on the floor, bores a hole through the floor, through which the loose corn runs down into his sack below, is guilty of burglary (Code, § 4343); the use of the auger in such case, with the intent to steal the corn, and effecting that purpose, constitutes both the breaking and the entry which are necessary elements of the offence. Walker v. State, 63 Ala. 49; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 1. See Miller v. State, 77 Ala. 41.

Entry—by Firing a Gun into the House.—"It has been already stated that if a man breaks a house and puts a pistol in at the window with intent to kill, this amounts to burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 555. 'But,' says Lord Hale, 'if he shoots without the window, and the bullet comes in, this seems to be no entry to make burglary—quære.' Hawkins, however, states that the discharging a loaded gun into a house is such an entry as will constitute burglary; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 11. And this opinion has been followed by Mr. East and Mr. Serjeant Russell. 'It seems difficult,' says the former, 'to make a distinction between this kind of implied entry and that by means of an instrument introduced between the window or threshold for the purpose of committing a felony, unless it be that the one instrument by which the entry is effected is held in the hand, and the other is discharged from it. No such distinction, however, is anywhere laid down in terms, nothing further appearing than that the entry must be for the purpose of committing a felony.' 2 East P. C. 490; 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 11. It was ruled by Lord Ellenborough, that a man who from the outside of a field discharged a gun into it, so that the shot must have struck the soil, was guilty of breaking and entering it. Pickering v. Rudd, 4 Camp. 220; 1 Stark. 58." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 367.

Constructive Entry—by One of Several. It is not necessary in all cases to show an actual entry by all the prisoners; there may be a constructive entry as well as a constructive breaking. A, B, and C come in the night by consent to break and enter the house of D to commit a felony; A only actually breaks and enters the house; B stands near the door, but does not actually enter; C stands at the lane's end, or orchard-gate, or field-gate, or the like, to watch that no help come to aid the owner, or to give notice to the others if help comes; this is burglary in all, and all are principals. 1 Hale P. C. 555; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 367.

So where a man puts a child of tender years in at the window of the house, and the child takes goods and delivers them to A, who carries them away, this is burglary in A, though the child that made the entry be not guilty on account of its infancy. 1 Hale P. C. 555.

And so if the wife, in the presence of her husband, by his threats or coercion break and enter a house in the night, this is burglary in the husband, though the wife, the immediate actor, is excused by the coercion of the husband. 1 Hale P.

6. Consent.—If the entry is made by consent of the person occupying the house, it is not a breaking and entering.[1]

7. What Premises are the Subject of Burglary.—The breaking and entering must take place in a mansion or dwelling-house or in a building designated by statute. Every house for the dwelling and habitation of man is taken to be a mansion-house in which burglary may be committed. A portion only of a building may come under this description.[2]

C. 556; and see R. v. Jordan, 7 C. & P. 432.

1. A banker, suspecting defendant of an intention of robbing his bank, employed detectives to act as decoys and induce him to enter the bank, with intent to rob it. Held, that the defendant could not be convicted of burglary therefor, the consent of the detectives being consent of their employer. Speiden v. State, 3 Tex. App. 156; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 126. See Allen v. State, 40 Ala. 334; R. v. Johnson, Car. & M. 218; R. v. Egginton, 2 Leach 913.

A employed a detective to discover who had robbed his store. At the suggestion of A the detective associated with B and C, who were the suspected parties. It was arranged between them to break in and rob the store again. A furnished the detective with a key, and made arrangements to arrest the parties when they entered. Held, that the conspiracy was complete when B and C agreed with the detective to perpetrate the crime, and therefore their guilt was not affected by the subsequent consent of A and co operation of the detective unless A or the detective suggested the offence or originated the criminal intent or agreement. Johnson v. State, 3 Tex. App. 590.

Where the owner, by direction of the police, leaves a door unfastened in order that an intended "breaking and entering" may be facilitated, it is not consent on the part of the owner to the entry. State v. Jansen, 22 Kan. 498.

A married woman is incapable in law to give consent to the breaking and entering the dwelling of her husband for an unlawful purpose. Forsythe v. State, 6 Ohio, 20.

Consent of some authorized person other than the occupant is purely matter of defence to an indictment which negatives the consent of the occupant. Mace v. State, 9 Tex. App. 110. See, generally, Saunders v. People, 38 Mich. 218; Thompson v. State, 18 Ind. 386; Allen v. State, 40 Ala. 334.

2. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 367; 2 Russell on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 15; Hollester v. Commonwealth, 60 Pa. St. 103; Fisher v. State, 43 Ala. 17.

A mere tent or booth erected in a market or fair is not a dwelling-house for the purpose of burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 557; 4 Bl. Com. 225.

But where the building was a permanent one of mud and brick on the down at Weyhill, erected only as a booth for the purpose of a fair for a few days in the year, having wooden doors and windows bolted inside, it was held that, as the prosecutor and his wife slept there every night of the fair (during one of which it was broken and entered, this was a dwelling-house. R. v. Smith, 1 Moo. & Rob. 256.

Upon an indictment for burglary charging the breaking of and entry into the mansion-house, a conviction is proper, the evidence showing that the house broken and entered was a smoke-house. Mansion or dwelling-house includes all such houses as are appurtenant thereto, as kitchen, laundry, smoke-house, and dairy. Fletcher v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 338.

Occupancy.—It is not essential to constitute the felony that a person should be actually in the house at the time the crime is committed. State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 413; State v. Meerchouse, 34 Mo. 344. See State v. Dan, 18 Nev. 345; s. c., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 93.

An information, under the Michigan statute, for an attempt to commit burglary by one who was armed must allege that there was some one lawfully in the dwelling-house which he attempted to enter or the allegation that respondent was armed is mere surplasage, and conviction can only be had for the common-law offence of burglary. Harris v. People, 44 Mich. 305.

A storehouse, in which a clerk or servant of the owner sleeps, although to protect the property, is a dwelling-house as to burglary. State v. Williams, 90 N. Car. 724; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 541; State v. Pressley, 90 N. Car. 730; State v. Mordecai, 68 N. Car. 207; U. S. v. Johnson, 2 Cranch C. C. 21. Compare State v. Potts, 75 N. Car. 129.

A log-cabin belonging to the owners of a tobacco factory, in which the superintendent usually slept, is a dwelling-house in which burglary may be committed. State v. Jake, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) No. 2. L. 80.

Temporary Absence.—A house is no less a dwelling-house because at certain periods the occupier quits it, or quits it for a temporary purpose. "If A. has a dwelling-house, and he and all his family are absent a night or more, and, in their absence, in the night a thief breaks and enters the house to commit felony, this is burglary." 1 Hale P.C. 556; 3 Inst. 64; Wilde v. Commonwealth, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 408 So, if A. have two mansion houses, and is sometimes with his family in one and sometimes in the other, the breach of one of them, in the absence of his family, is burglary. 3 Inst. 4, Rep. 40, a. Again, if A. have a chamber in a college or inn of court, where he usually lodges in term time, and in his absence in vacation his chamber or study is broken open, this is burglary. R. v. Evans, Cro. Car. 473; 1 Hale P. C. 556. The prosecutor being possessed of a house in Westminster in which he dwelt, took a journey into Cornwall, with intent to return and move his wife and family out of town, leaving the key with a friend to look after the house. After he had been absent a month, no person being in the house, it was broken open and robbed. He returned a month after with his family, and inhabited there. This was adjudged burglary. R. v. Murry, 2 East P. C. 496; Foster, 77.

In these cases the owner must have quitted his house animo revertendi, in order to have it still considered as his mansion, if neither he nor any part of his family were in at the time of the breaking and entering. 2 East P. C. 496. The prosecutor had a house at Hackney, which he made use of in the summer, his chief residence being in London. About the latter end of the summer he removed to his town house, bringing away a considerable part of his goods. The following November his house at Hackney was broken open, upon which he removed the remainder of his furniture, except a few articles of little value. Being asked whether at this time he had any intention of returning to reside, he said he had not come to any settled resolution, whether to return or not, but was rather inclined totally to quit the house and let it. His house was broken open in the January following. The court (at the Old Bailey) were of opinion, that the prosecutor having left the house and disfurnished it, without any settled resolution to return, but rather inclining to the contrary, it could not be deemed his dwelling-house. R. v. Nutbrown, Foster, 77; 2 East P. C. 496. See R. v. Flannagan, Russ. & Ry. 187.

A house which the owner visits once or twice a year, and in which, during his visits, he sleeps and eats for about a week, but which at all other times is unoccupied by any person, is not a "dwelling-house," the breaking and entering of which when no one is therein, is burglary. Scott v. State, 62 Miss. 781. See State v. Jenkins, 5 Jones L. (N. Car.) 430.

Where a person had moved his furniture into a house, intending to reside in it upon his return from the country, neither he nor his family having slept in the house, held, that a breaking and entering of such house was burglary. Com. v. Brown, 3 Rawle (Pa.). 207. See Wilde v. Com., 2 Metc. (Mass.) 408.

Mr. Roscoe says (Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 370):

"It must appear that the premises in question were, at the time of the offence, occupied as a dwelling-house. Therefore, where a house was under repair, and the tenant had not entered into possession, but had deposited some of his goods there, but no one slept in it, it was held not to be a dwelling-house, so as to make the breaking and entering a burglary. R. v. Lyon, 1 Leach, 185; 2 East P. C. 497. Nor will the circumstance of the prosecutor having procured a person to sleep in the house (not being one of his own family) for its protection, make any difference. Thus where a house was newly built and finished in every respect, except the painting, glazing, and flooring of one garret, and a workman, who was constantly employed by the prosecutor, slept in it for the purpose of protecting it, but no part of the prosecutor's domestic family had taken possession, it was held at the Old Bailey, on the authority of R. v. Lyon (supra), that it was not the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Fuller, 1 Leach, 186 (n). So where the prosecutor took a house, and deposited some of his goods in it, and not having slept there himself, procured two persons (not his own servants), to sleep there for the purpose of protecting the goods, it was held at the Old Bailey, that as the prosecutor had only in fact taken possession of the house so far as to deposit certain articles of his trade therein, but had neither slept in it himself, nor had any of his servants, it could not in contemplation of law be called his dwelling-house. R. v. Harris, 2 Leach, 701; 2 East P. C. 498. See

At common law the mansion or dwelling-house in which burglary might be committed was held to include the out-houses, such as warehouses, barns, stables, cow-houses, or dairy-houses, though not under the same roof, or joining contiguous to the dwelling-house, provided they were parcel thereof, or within the curtilage.[1] also R. v. Hallard, coram Buller, J., 2 Leach, 701 (n); R. v. Thompson, 2 Leach, 771.

"The following case, decided upon the construction of the statute 12 Anne, c. 7 (repealed), is also an authority on the subject of burglary. The prosecutor, a publican, had shut up his house, which in the daytime was totally uninhabited, but at night a servant of his slept in it to protect the property left there, which was intended to be sold to the incoming tenant, the prosecutor having no intention of again residing in the house himself. On a case reserved, the judges were of opinion, that as it clearly appeared by the evidence of the prosecutor that he had no intention whatever to reside in the house, either by himself or his servants, it could not in contemplation of law be considered as his dwelling-house, and that it was not such a dwelling-house wherein burglary could be committed. R. v. Davies, alias Silk, 2 Leach, 876; 2 East P. C. 499.

"Where some corn had been missed out of a barn, the prosecutor's servant and another person put a bed in the barn, and slept there, and upon the fourth night the prisoner broke and entered the barn; upon a reference it was agreed by all the judges, that this sleeping in the barn made no difference. R. v. Brown, 2 East P. C. 497.

So a porter lying in a warehouse, to watch goods, which is solely for a particular purpose, does not make it a dwelling-house. R. v. Smith, 2 East P. C. 497.

"Where no person sleeps in the house it cannot be considered a dwelling-house. The premises where the offence was committed consisted of a shop and parlor, with a staircase to a room over. The prosecutor took it two years before the offence committed, intending to live in it, but remained with his mother, who lived next door. Every morning he went to his shop, transacted his business, dined, and stayed the whole day there, considering it as his home. When he first bought the house he had a tenant, who quitted it soon afterwards, and from that time no person had slept in it. On a case reserved, all the judges held that this was not a dwelling-house. R. v. Martin, Russ. & Ry. 108.

"It seems to be sufficient if any part of the owner's family, as his domestic servants, sleep in the house. A died in his in his house. B, his executor, put servants into it, who lodged in it, and were at board wages, but B never lodged there himself. Upon an indictment for burglary, the question was, whether this might be called the mansion-house of B. The court inclined to think that it might, because the servants lived there; but upon the evidence there appeared no breach of the house. R. v. Jones, 2 East P. C. 499."

A and B were partners, and in their business used and occupied as stores the lower stories of two adjacent buildings opening into each other. A, with other persons, lived in the upper rooms, and was there at the time of the burglary, but there was no internal communication between the stores and the upper rooms, the latter being accessible only through a fenced yard and a staircase leading thence. The breaking was into one of the stores. Held, that the entry was into a "dwelling-house," within the statute of burglary, which enacts that no building shall be deemed a dwelling-house unless joined to, immediately connected with, and part of a dwelling-house; that phraseology being intended only to exclude isolated, uninhabited out-houses. Quinn v. People, 71 N. Y. 561; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 87.

Under the Nevada statute it is immaterial whether the house was inhabited or not. State v. Dan., 18 Nev. 345. See State v. Cody, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) No. 1, 197.

1. 2 Russell on Crimes (9th Am. Ed.), 15. See Gibson's Case, Leach Cr. Cas. 357; R. v. Gibbons, Russ. & Ry. 442; Robertson's Case, 4 City Hall Rec. 63; R. v. Stock, Russ. & Ry. 185; R. v. Witt; 1 M. C. C. 248. Ex parte Vincent, 26 Ala. 145; State v. Langford, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 253; State v. Twitty, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 102; State v. Wilson, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 102; State v. Mordecai, 68 N. Car. 207; State v. Ginns, 1 N. & McC. (S. Car.) 585; State v. Williams, 90 N. Car. 724; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 541; State v. Evans, 18 S. Car. 137; State v. Sampson, 12 S. Car. 567; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 512; Fletcher v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 338; Palmer v. State, 7 Coldw.

(Tenn.) 82; Bryant v. State, 60 Ga. 358; Pitcher v. People, 16 Mich. 142; People v. Parker, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 424.

Breaking and entering a store-house in the night-time with intent to steal is not burglary. Conners v. State, 45 N. J. L. 340; State v. Dozier, 73 N. Car. 117.

Mansion or dwelling-house includes all such houses as are appurtenant thereto, as kitchen, laundry, smoke-house and dairy. Fletcher v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 338.

The breaking and entering a store-house not part of a dwelling-house is not burglary by the common law. Hollister v. Com., 60 Pa St. 103.

Breaking and entering a building, the front and door of which are in the yard of a dwelling-house, but the rear is not within the yard, and the breaking was in the rear, is within a statute defining burglary as breaking and entering "into a dwelling-house or any building within the curtilage of a dwelling-house, etc." Fisher v. State, 43 Ala. 17.

It is not burglary to break and enter a smoke-house, thirty-five steps from the dwelling-house, the latter having no inclosure around it. State v. Jake, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) No. 2, L. 80.

A mill in which no one sleeps, 75 yards from the owner's dwelling-house, separated therefrom by a public road, and not proved to be appurtenant to the dwelling-house, was not the subject of burglary at common law, and is not under a statute covering houses, out-houses, buildings, sheds, and erections within 200 yards of and appurtenant to such dwelling-house. State v. Sampson, 12 S. Car. 567; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 512.

At Common Law, Buildings adjoining the Dwelling-house.—Mr. Roscoe says (Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 368): "At common law, in cases where buildings were attached to a dwelling-house, and were more or less connected with it, it was frequently a matter of dispute whether they formed a part of the dwelling-house, so that entering them would be burglary. The different tests proposed were principally three: (1) whether the building in question was within the same curtilage; (2) whether it was under the same roof; (3) whether it had an internal communication with the principal building.

"By the provisions of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. s. 53, supra (replacing the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29. s. 13, to the same effect), it is absolutely necessary that the building entered should have a covered and inclosed internal communication with the principal building. The statute does not, however, say that every building having such a communication should be included; it only excludes those which have it not.

"The following cases were decided previous to the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 13, which has prescribed what shall be considered a dwelling-house for the purpose of burglary.

"The mere fact of a building in the neighborhood of a dwelling-house being occupied, together with the dwelling-house, by the same tenant (not taking into consideration the question of the building being within the same curtilage, as to which vide post), will not render the former building a dwelling-house in point of law. The prisoner broke and entered an out-house in the possession of G. S., and occupied by him with his dwelling-house, but not connected therewith by any fence inclosing both. The judges held that the prisoner was improperly convicted of burglary. The out-house being separated from the dwelling-house, and not within the same curtilage, was not protected by the bare fact of its being occupied with it at the same time. R. v. Garland, 2 East P. C. 493. So where a manufactory was carried on in the centre building of a great pile, in the wings of which several persons dwelt, but which had no internal communication with these wings, though the roofs of all the buildings were connected, and the entrance to all was out of the same common inclosure: upon the centre building being broken and entered, the judges held that it could not be considered as part of any dwelling-house, but a place for carrying on a variety of trades, and no parcel of the house adjoining, with none of which it had any internal communication, nor was it to be considered as under the same roof, though the roof had a connection with the roofs of the houses. R. v. Eggington, 2 East P. C. 494. The house of the prosecutor was in High Street, Epsom. There were two or three houses there, insulated like Middle Row, Holborn. At the back of the houses was a public passage nine feet wide. Across this passage, opposite to his house, were several rooms, used by the prosecutor for the purposes of his house, viz., a kitchen, a coach-house, a larder, and a brewhouse. Over the brewhouse a servant boy always slept, but no one else; and in this room the offence was committed. There was no communication between the dwelling-house and these buildings, except a canopy or awning over the common passage, to prevent the rain from falling on the victuals carried across. Upon a case reserved, the judges were of opinion that the room in question was not parcel of the dwelling-house in which the prosecutor dwelt, because it did not adjoin to it, was not under the same roof, and had no common fence. Graham, B., dissented, being of opinion that it was parcel of the house. But all the judges present thought that it was a distinct dwelling of the prosecutor. R. v. Westwood. Russ. & Ry. 495.

"In the following case the building, though not within the curtilage, and having no internal communication, was held to constitute part of the dwelling-house. The prosecutor, a farmer, had a dwelling-house in which he lived, a stable, a cottage, a cow-house, and barn, all in one range of buildings, in the order mentioned, and under one roof, but they were not inclosed by any yard or wall, and had no internal communication. The offence was committed in the barn, and the judges held this to be a burglary, for the barn, which was under the same roof, was parcel of, and enjoyed with, the dwelllng-house. R. v. Brown, 2 East P. C. 493. So where the premises, broken and entered, were not within the same external fence as the dwelling-house, nor had they any internal communication with it, yet they were held to be part of it. The prosecutor's dwelling-house was situate at the corner of two streets. A range of workshops adjoining the house at one side, and standing in a line with the end of the house, faced one of the streets. The roof of this range was higher than the roof of the house. At the end of this range, and adjoining to it, was another workshop projecting further into the street, and adjoining to that a stable and coach-house used with the dwelling-house. There was no internal communication between the workshops and the dwelling-house, nor were they surrounded by any external fence. Upon a case reserved, the judges were unanimously of opinion that the workshops were parcel of the dwelling-house. R. v. Chalking, Russ. & Ry. 334. See also R. v. Lithgo, Russ & Ry. 357. In the case about to be mentioned, the premises broken and entered were within the curtilage, but without any internal communication with the dwelling-house. It does not appear whether the decision proceeded upon the same ground in the last case, or whether on the ground that the building in question was within the curtilage. The prosecutor had a factory adjoining to his dwelling-house. There was no internal communication, the only way from the one to the other (within the common inclosures) being through an open passage into the factory passage, which communicated with a lumber-room in the factory, from which there was a staircase which led into the yarn-room, where the felony was committed. On a case reserved, all the judges held, that the room in question was properly described as the dwelling-house of the prosecutor. R. v. Hancock, Russ. & Ry. 170. See also R. v. Clayburn, Russ. & Ry. 360.

"The following cases have been decided on the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 13, and will be applicable to the present statute: The prosecutor's house consisted of two long rooms, another room used as a cellar and wash-house on the ground floor, and three bedrooms upstairs. There was no internal communication between the washhouse and any of the other rooms of the house, the door of the washhouse opening into the back yard. All the buildings were under the same roof. The prisoner broke into the washhouse, and the question reserved for the opinion of the judges was, whether this was burglary. Seven of their lordships thought that the wash-house was part of the dwelling-house, the remaining five thought it was not. R. v. Burrowes, 1 Moody C. C. 274. The ground for holding the building not to be excluded by the statute appearing to be that the statute only applied to such buildings within the curtilage as were not part of the dwelling-house, and that this building was part of the dwelling-house. Such a construction of the statute would seem to leave the question much as it stood before.

"Behind the dwelling-house there was a pantry; to get to the pantry from the house it was necessary to pass through the kitchen into a passage; at the end of the passage there was a door, on the outside of which, on the left hand, was the door of the pantry. When the passage door was shut, the pantry door was excluded, and open to the yard; but the roof or covering of the passage projected beyond the door of the passage, and reached as far as the pantry-door. There was no door communicating directly between the pantry and the house, and the two were not under the same roof. The roof of the pantry was a 'to-fall,' and leaned against the wall of an inner pantry, in which there was a lachet window common to both, and which opened between them; but there was no door of communication. The inside pantry was under the same roof as the dwelling-house. The prisoner entered the outer pantry by a window which looked towards the yard, having first cut away the hair-cloth nailed to the window-frame. Taunton, J., held that the outer pantry was not part of the dwelling-house within the above clause, and consequently that no burglary had been committed. R. v. Somerville, 2 Lew. C. C. 113. See also R. v. Turner, 6 C. & P. 407.

By statute in most States, the buildings which are the subject of burglary have been made to include almost every kind of construction used by man, the only difference being the degree of the crime.[1]

"In R. v. Higgs, 2 C. & K. 322, it appeared that adjoining to the prosecutor's dwelling-house was a kiln, one end of which was supported by the end wall of the dwelling-house, and that adjoining to the kiln was a dairy, one end of which was supported by the end wall of the kiln. There was no internal communication from the dwelling-house to the dairy, and the roof of the dwelling-house, kiln, and dairy were of different heights. Wilde, C. J., held that the dairy was not a part of the dwelling-house.

"It would seem from the latter case that the decision in R. v. Burrowes has not been very strictly followed."

1. See 1 Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) §§ 792–797; New York Penal Code, § 504; State v. Bishop, 51 Vt. 287; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 690; State v. Canney, 19 N. H. 135; State v. Wilson, 47 N. H. 101; Com. v. Whalen, 131 Mass. 419; Com. v. White, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 181; State v. Bailey, 10 Conn. 144; State v. Clark, 5 West'n Repr. (Mo.) 417; Ratekin v. State, 26 Ohio St. 420; Bauer v. State, 25 Ohio St. 70; Thalls v. State, 21 Ohio St. 233; Barnett v. State, 38 Ohio St. 7; Wilson v. State, 34 Ohio St. 189; Blackford v. State, 11 Ohio St. 327; Orrell v. People, 94 Ill. 456; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 241; Pitcher v. People, 16 Mich. 142; Bryant v. State, 60 Ga. 358; McElreath v. State, 55 Ga. 562; Bethune v. State, 48 Ga. 505; Fisher v. State, 43 Ala. 17; Exp. Vincent, 26 Ala. 145; Conoly v. State, 2 Tex. App. 412; Stevenson v. State, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 681; Palmer v. State, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 82; State v. Sampson, 12 S. Car. 567; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 512; State v. Evans, 18 S. Car. 137; State v. Branham, 13 S. Car. 389; State v. Ginns, 1 N. & McC. (S. Car.) 585; State v. Hughes, 86 N. Car. 662; Terry v. Stokes, 2 N. Mex. 161.

Curtilage as used in a statute in relation to burglary means an enclosed space immediately surrounding the dwelling-house and contained within the same inclosure. State v. Hecox, 83 Mo. 531; s. c., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 98. See Pitcher v. People, 16 Mich. 142; Pond v. People, 8 Mich. 150; People v. Taylor, 2 Mich. 251; Armour v. State, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 379; State v. Fletcher, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 338; State v. Shaw, 31 Me. 523; State v. Twitty, 1 Hawy. (N. Car.) 102; 2 Bish. St. Cr. (2d Ed.) § 286.

A stable, as the word is commonly used, is a building, and may be included in the class of structures denominated in the statute as "other buildings." Orrell v. People, 94 Ill. 457.

The proof showed that the building, which had been broken and entered, had been erected by its owner on his farm, for a dwelling-house, but had never been occupied or used as such; that its owner had for several years, and ever since its erection, used it to store wheat after it was threshed, and corn after it was husked, such grain being the products of the farm on which the building was erected. Held, that this building was a barn within the meaning of the statute. Barnett v. State, 38 Ohio St. 7. See Ratekin v. State, 26 Ohio St. 420.

Under an indictment for burglary of a granary in which there were goods and valuable things and larceny therein, it is immaterial whether or not the granary is within the curtilage of the dwelling-house. State v. Hecox, 83 Mo. 531; s. c., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 98.

An out-house is not necessarily within the curtilage. A house contiguous to and used in connection with a hotel, both belonging to and controlled by the same person, is an out-house. Shotwell v. State, 43 Ark. 345.

Defendant was convicted under an indictment that alleged a burglary in "a gin-house, situate within the curtilage of the dwelling-house." Held, that judgment should be arrested, because the indictment failed to allege that the gin-house was within two hundred yards of the dwelling-house and appurtenant to it, two averments that were essential under the statute. State v. Evans, 18 S. Car. 137.

Where a cellar of a building, the upper part whereof is occupied by families, is used as an ice-house and beer-cellar, with no communication with the rest of the building, an access thereto being only obtainable from outside the building, it is not such a house, in contemplation of R.

8. As to Ownership of Building—How it may be Laid.—In an indictment for burglary, the ownership of the building entered may be laid in the occupant whose possession is rightful, as against the burglar. Rooms rented to a person constitute his dwelling-house, when they are occupied as such.[1]

S. 1879, § 1309, as makes it grand larceny to steal therefrom. State v. Clark, 5 West. Repr. (Mo.) 417.

A railroad depot is a warehouse within the meaning of the Vermont Gen. Stat., although such building was unknown when the statute was enacted. State v. Bishop, 51 Vt. 287; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 690.

An office built in the corner of a warehouse is a "house," which may be broken and entered by lifting the latch. Anderson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 305.

A ticket-office partitioned off in a railroad depot. People v. Young, 65 Cal. 225.

A banking-house is a store, shop, or warehouse. Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57.

The word "house," as used in Cal. Stat. 206, 1858, includes every structure which has sides, walls, and a roof, regardless of the fact whether it is at the time, or ever had been, inhabited by members of the human family. People v. Stickman, 34 Cal. 242.

An indictment which charges that the accused broke and entered "a gin-house, the property of W. R., in which was kept, for use, sale, or deposit, seed-cotton, a thing of value," etc., is sufficient, without an additional averment that the gin-house was specially constructed for the use to which it was applied. Under the statute (Code, § 4343), only structures of a temporary character, erected for special purposes or occasions, require such additional descriptive averment. Stone v. State, 63 Ala. 115.

The prisoner was charged with the statutory burglary of breaking and entering a store not adjoining to or occupied with a dwelling-house, with felonious intent. Under such a charge, if it turns out that the store does adjoin or is occupied with a dwelling-house, there can be no conviction. The evidence showed that the store was the first story of a building; that the proprietors were a co-partnership, composed of two persons who leased the building; that one of the partners occupied the upper part of the building as a dwelling-house, and the other partner lodged with him. Held, that the evidence did not support the information. Moore v. People, 47 Mich. 639.

An indictment alleged that the defendant "feloniously did break and enter a certain building, to wit, the store of A., with intent then and there in said store to commit the crime of larceny." The evidence was that A. occupied a building, in which were a saloon, a kitchen, two dining-rooms and a bedroom, and in one of the dining rooms, which was a front room into which a door opened from the street, there was a bar; that he kept and sold lager beer, cigars and oysters, and cooked meals for customers; and that the defendant entered by a back door which opened directly into the kitchen, one of the dining-rooms and the bedroom being between the kitchen and the bar-room. Held, that there was evidence for the jury that the building was a "store," within the ordinary meaning of that word as used in this Commonwealth; and that the defendant had no ground of exception to a ruling that he was not entitled, as a matter of law, to an acquittal on the ground of a variance between the allegation and the proof. Com. v. Whalen, 131 Mass. 419. See Moore v. People, 47 Mich. 639; Barth v. State, 18 Conn. 432; State v. Canney, 19 N. H. 135.

A house used exclusively for storing goods is a warehouse within the Ohio statute, although the building had been constructed and formerly used for another purpose. Allen v. State, 10 Ohio St. 287. See Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57.

An indictment charging that the prisoner broke into a "store-room," is insufficient under a statute making it an offence to break into a "store-house," and the defect is available to him although the objection was not made until the verdict had been rendered. Hagar v. State, 35 Ohio St. 268.

1. 1 Whar Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 798; Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 137; Smith v. People, 115 Ill. 17; State v. Rivers, 21 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 781; Quinn v. People, 71 N. Y. 561; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 87; People v. Parker, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 424; People v. Snyder, 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 23; Com. v. Carroll, 8 Mass. 490; Com. v. Lindsey, 10 Mass. 153; State v. Rand, 33 N. H. 216; Sullivan v. State, 13 Tex. App. 462.

The question of lawful occupancy, as against the landlord, or other person claiming title, cannot be raised. Houston v. State, 38 Ga. 165.

The name of the owner of the dwelling-house or of the building which was broken and entered must be stated with accuracy. Heard's Cr. L. 436; 1 Whart. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 816; Beale v. State, 53 Ala. 460; State v. Fockler, 22 Kan. 542; State v. Morrissey, 22 Iowa, 158; Wallace v. People, 63 Ill. 451; Doan v. State, 26 Ind. 495; Wilson v. State, 34 Iowa St. 199; Jackson v. State, 55 Wis. 589; Com. v. Perris, 108 Mass. 1; Pells v. State, 20 Fla. 774; Sullivan v. State, 13 Tex. App. 462; People v. Edwards, 59 Cal. 359.

Evidence that a dwelling-house in which a burglary was committed is the "Drake House," is a "house kept by Mr. Drake," and that "Mr. Drake lives there," is insufficient to sustain a conviction under an information charging a burglarious entry of the dwelling-house of William Drake. In such case there is not a mere variance which can be remedied by amendment. If the Christian name of the owner of the dwelling-house were stricken out in order to make the pleading and proof correspond, the information would then be bad, because it did not state the name of such owner with certainty to a common intent. Jackson v. State, 55 Wis. 589.

An indictment charging that "the prisoner, on, etc., a certain mill-house not adjoining to or occupied with the dwelling-house of F.," etc., sufficiently alleges the ownership of the mill-house to be in F., and is sufficient in law. Webster v. Commonwealth, 80 Va. 598.

Where A erects a building on the ground of B for their mutual convenience and use, the ownership is properly laid in A and B jointly. Webb v. State, 52 Ala. 422.

A description of the premises as the "warehouse of W. M., of Scioto County," is sufficient. Spencer v. State, 13 Ohio, 401.

A building may be described as "the shop of J. S.," although J. S. occupies only one room in it. Com. v. Bowden, 14 Gray (Mass.), 104.

An indictment is sufficient which alleges that the house belonged to the estate of R., and that his surviving widow and children being his heirs-at-law, kept goods and valuable things therein, instead of alleging that the house was the dwelling of those who dwelt therein. State v. Franks, 64 Iowa, 40. Compare Beall v. State, 53 Ala. 460.

House Divided, without Internal Communication, and Occupied by Several.—Where there is an actual severance in act of the house, by a partition or the like, all internal communication being cut off, and each part being inhabited by several occupants, the part so separately occupied is the dwelling-house of the person living in it, provided he dwell there. If A lets a shop, parcel of his dwelling-house, to B for a year, and B holds it, and works or trades in it, but lodges in his own house at night, and the shop is broken open, it cannot be laid to be the dwelling-house of A, for it was severed by the lease during the term; but if B or his servants sometimes lodge in the shop, it is the mansion-house of B, and burglary may be committed in it. 1 Hale P. C. 557. See R. v. Sefton, Russ. & Ry. 203; 2 Russ. Cr. (5th Ed.) 16.

The prosecutors, S. and K., were in partnership, and lived next door to each other. The two houses had formerly been one, but had been divided, for the purpose of accommodating the families of both partners, and were now perfectly distinct, there being no communication from one to the other, without going into the street. The housekeeping, servants' wages, etc., were paid by each partner respectively, but the rent and taxes of both the houses were paid jointly out of the partnership fund. The offence was committed in the house of the prosecutor S. On the trial it was objected that the burglary ought to have been laid to be in the dwelling-house of the prosecutor S. only; and of this opinion was the court. R. v. Martha Jones, 1 Leach, 537; 2 East P. C. 504.

But it is otherwise where there is an internal communication. Thus where a man let part of his house, including his shop, to his son, and there was a distinct entrance into the part so let, but a passage from the son's part led to the father's cellars, and they were open to the father's part of the house, and the son never slept in the part so let to him, the prisoner being convicted of a burglary in the shop, laid as the dwelling-house of the father, the conviction was held by the judges to be right, it being under the same roof, part of the same house, and communicating internally. R. v. Sefton, 2 Russ. Cr. (5th Ed.) 16; Russ. & Ry. 203.

Chambers in the inns of court are to all purposes considered as distinct dwelling-houses, and therefore whether the owner happens to enter at the same outer door or not, will make no manner of difference. The sets are often held under distinct titles, and are, in their nature and manner of occupation, as unconnected with each other as if they were under separate roofs. 2 East P. C. 505; 1 Hale P. C. 556.

Where there is an Internal Communication, but the Parts are Occupied by Several, under Distinct Titles.—Although in the case of lodgers and inmates who hold under one general occupier, the whole of the house continues to be his dwelling-house, if there be an internal communication, and the parties have a common entrance, vide infra, yet it is otherwise where several parts of a building are let under distinct leases. The owner of a dwelling-house and warehouse under the same roof, and communicating internally, let the house to A (who lived there), and the warehouse to A and B, who were partners. The communication between the house and warehouse was constantly used by A. The offence was committed in the warehouse, which was laid to be the dwelling-house of A. On a case reserved, the judges were of opinion that this was wrong, A holding the house in which he lived under a demise to himself alone, and the warehouse under a distinct demise to himself and B. R. v. Jenkins, Russ. & Ry. 244.

In a tenement-house severed by lease into distinct habitations, each room or suite of rooms occupied by a tenant is his dwelling-house, and a door of such room is an outer door, so that a breach of it is burglary, though the common door, for passage into the street, be open. Mason v. People, 26 N. Y. 200; People v. Bush, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 552; People v. Bouget, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 11.

Where Different Portions of the Same Room are Occupied by Separate Tenants.—Where a shop is occupied by A and B, each of whom pay rent to C, and by arrangement occupy a distinct portion, an indictment which charges the breaking and entering the shop of A is good, although it is not shown that the prisoner broke and entered the part occupied by A. Com. v. Thompson, 9 Gray (Mass.), 108. Compare Saxton's Case, 2 Harr. (Del.) 533.

Lodgers.—Where separate apartments were let in a dwelling-house to lodgers, it seems formerly to have been doubted whether they might not in all cases be described as the mansion-house of the lodgers. 2 East P. C. 505; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, ss. 13, 14. But the rule is now taken to be, according to the opinion of Kelynge, 84, that if the owner, who lets out apartments in his house to other persons, sleeps under the same roof, and has but one outer door common to himself and his lodgers, such lodgers are only inmates, and all their apartments are parcel of the dwelling-house of the owner. But if the owner do not lodge in the same house, or if he and his lodgers enter by different outer doors, the apartments so let are the mansion, for the time being, of each lodger respectively. And accordingly it was so ruled by Holt, C. J., at the Old Bailey, in 1701, although in that case the rooms were let for a year, under a rent, and Tanner, an ancient clerk in court, said that this was the constant course and practice. 2 East P. C. 505; 1 Leach, 90 (n).

Where one of two partners is the lessee of a shop and house, and the other partner occupies a room in the house, he is only regarded as a lodger. M. and G. were partners; M. was the lessee of the whole premises, and paid all the rent and taxes for the same. G. had an apartment in the house, and paid M. a certain sum for board and lodging, and also a certain proportion of the rent and taxes for the shop and warehouses. The burglary was committed in the shop, which was held to be the dwelling-house of M., and the judges held the description right. R. v. Parmenter, 1 Leach, 537 (n).

In the following cases, the apartments of the lodger were held to be his dwelling-house: The owner let the whole of a house to different lodgers. The prosecutor rented the first floor, a shop and a parlor on the ground floor, and a cellar underneath the shop, at £12, 10s. a year. The owner took back the cellar to keep lumber in, for which he allowed a rebate of 40s. a year. The entrance was into a passage, by a door from the street, and on the side of the passage one door opened into the shop, and another into the parlor, and beyond the parlor was the staircase which led to the upper apartments. The shop and parlor doors were broken open, and the judges determined that these rooms were properly laid to be the dwelling-house of the lodger, for it could not be called the mansion of the owner, as he did not inhabit any part of it, but only rented the cellar for the purpose before mentioned. R. v. Rogers, 1 Leach, 89, 428; 2 East P. C. 506, 507; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 29.

The house in which the offence was committed belonged to one N. who did not live in any part of it himself, but let the whole of it out in separate lodgings from week to week. J., the prosecutor, had two rooms, viz., a sleeping-room, and a workshop in the garret, which he rented by the week as tenant at will to N. The workshop was broken and entered by the prisoner. Ten judges, on a case reserved, were unanimously of opinion, that as N., the owner of the house, did not inhabit any part of it, the indictment properly charged it to be the dwelling-house of J. R. v. Carrell, 1 Leach, 237, 429; 2 East P. C. 506.

The prisoner was indicted under the repealed statute 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 9, s. 1, for breaking and entering a dwelling-house and stealing therein. The house was let out to three families, who occupied the whole. There was only one outer door, common to all the inmates. J. L. (whose dwelling-house it was laid to be) rented a parlor on the ground floor, and a single room up one pair of stairs, where he slept. The judges were of opinion, that the indictment rightly charged the room to be the dwelling-house of J. L. R. v. Trapshaw, 1 Leach, 427; 2 East P. C. 506, 780.

It follows from the principle of the above cases, that if a man lets out part of his house to lodgers, and continues to inhabit the rest himself, if he breaks open the apartment of a lodger, and steals his goods, it is felony only, and not a burglary; for it cannot be burglary to break open his own house. 2 East P. C. 506; Kel. 84.

Personal property of a boarder left in B.'s saloon or bar-room during the night, while the boarder slept in some other part of the house, was in the actual possession of B. during that time; and proof of the intent to steal such property would sustain an averment of an intent to steal the property of B. Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89. See Rodgers v. People, 86 N. Y. 360; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 548.

An indictment is good which charges the ownership of a room to be his who rents and occupies it as a lodger, from one who has the general supervision and control of the house. People v. St. Clair, 38 Cal. 137.

The room of a guest at an inn must be laid as the dwelling-house of the innkeeper, and not of the guest. Rodgers v. People, 86 N. Y. 360; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 548. But a landlord may commit burglary in his guest's chamber. State v. Fish, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 323; R. v. Ball, 1 Moody C. C. 30.

By Wife or Family.—"The actual occupation of the premises by any part of the prosecutor's domestic family will be evidence of its being his dwelling-house. The wife of the prosecutor had for many years lived separate from her husband. When she was about to take the house in which the offence was afterwards committed, the lease was prepared in her husband's name; but he refused to execute it, saying he would have nothing to do with it; in consequence of which, she agreed with the landlord herself, and constantly paid the rent herself. Upon an indictment for breaking open the house, it was held to be well laid to be the dwelling-house of the husband. R. v. Farre, Kel. 43, 44, 45. In a similar case, where there was the additional fact that the wife had a separate property vested in trustees, the judges were clear that the house was properly laid to be the dwelling-house of the husband. It was the dwelling-house of some one. It was not the wife's; because, at law, she could have no property; it was not the trustee's, because they had nothing to do with it; it could then only be the husband's. R. v. French, Russ. & Ry. 491. So where the owner of a house who had never lived in it permitted his wife, on their separation, to reside there, and the wife lived there in adultery with another man, who paid the expenses of housekeeping, but neither rent nor taxes, this was held by the judges to be properly described as the dwelling-house of the husband. R. v. Wilford, Russ. & Ry. 517; and see R. v. Smith, 5 C. & P. 203; Ducher v. State, 18 Ohio, 308. Where a prisoner was indicted for breaking into the house of Elizabeth A., and it appeared that her husband had been convicted of felony, and was in prison under his sentence when the house was broken into, it was held, on a case reserved, that the house was improperly described, although the wife continued in possession of it. R. v. Whitehead, 9 C. & P. 429. But if a case should arise in which the law would adjudge the separate property of the mansion to be in the wife, she having also the exclusive possession, it should seem that in such case the burglary would properly be laid to be committed in her mansion-house, and not in that of her husband. 2 East P. C. c. 15, s. 16; 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 25. If the house were the separate property of the wife under the 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, it would be sufficient to describe it as her house." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 375.

In a case of burglary, the dwelling-house was occupied by husband and wife, but leased by the wife, who had a separate estate, and the goods in the house belonged to the wife. Held, that the indictment properly laid the ownership of the house in the wife. The ownership might properly have been laid in either husband or wife. State v. Trapp, 17 S. Car. 467; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 614.

It is sufficient to lay the ownership in a married woman who lives apart from her husband, and has the occupancy and control of the dwelling. Ducher v. State, 18 Ohio, 308.

Where a quilt which was stolen was the separate property of A.'s wife, and was laid in the indictment as the property of A., held, not to be error; that while a husband and wife live together, the husband has a special property as bailee in the wife's separate personal estate. State v. Wincroft, 76 N. Car. 38. See State v. Matthews, 76 N. Car. 41.

By Agents.—A., the agent of W., hired and paid the rent of a shop in which the business of the agency was conducted. Held, that the ownership was properly laid in A. People v. Smith, 1 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 329.

By Clerks and Agents in Public Offices, Companies, etc.—An agent or clerk employed in a public office, or by persons in trade, is in law the servant of those parties; and if he be suffered to reside upon the premises which belong to the government or to the individuals employing him, the premises cannot be described as his dwelling-house. Three persons were indicted for breaking into the lodgings of H., at Whitehall, and the judges were of opinion that it should have been laid to be the king's mansion-house at Whitehall. R. v. Williams, 1 Hale P. C. 522, 527.

The prisoner was indicted for breaking into a chamber in Somerset House, and the apartment was laid to be the mansion-house of the person who lodged there; but it was held bad, because the whole house belonged to the queen-mother. R. v. Burgess, Kel. 27.

The prisoner was indicted under the 12 Anne, c. 7 (repealed), for stealing a gold watch in the dwelling-house of B. The house was the invalid office at Chelsea, an office under government. The ground-floor was used by the paymaster-general, for the purpose of conducting the business relating to the office. B. occupied the whole of the upper part of it; but the rent and taxes of the whole were paid by the government. The court (at the Old Bailey) held that it was not the dwelling-house of B. R. v. Peyton, 1 Leach, 324; 2 East P. C. 501.

The prisoner was indicted for burglary in the mansion-house of S. It appeared that the house belonged to the African Company, and that S. was an officer of the company, and had separate apartments, and lodged and inhabited there; but Holt, C. J., Tracy, J., and Bury, B., held this to be the mansion-house of the company, for though an aggregate corporation cannot be said to inhabit anywhere, yet they may have a mansion-house for the habitation of their servants. R. v. Hawkins, 2 East P. C. 501; Foster, 38. So it was held with regard to the dwelling-house of the East India Company, inhabited by their servants. R. v. Picket, 2 East P. C. 501.

The prisoner was indicted for breaking and entering the house of the master, fellows, and scholars of Bennet College, Cambridge. The fact was he broke into the buttery of the college, and there stole some money, and it was agreed by all the judges to be burglary. R. v. Maynard, 2 East P. C. 501.

The governor of the Birmingham workhouses was appointed under contract for seven years, and had the chief part of the house for his own occupation; but the guardians and overseers who appointed him reserved to themselves the use of one room for an office, and of three others for storerooms. The governor was assessed for the house, with the exception of these rooms. The office being broken open, it was laid to be the dwelling-house of the governor; but, upon a case reserved, the judges held the description wrong. R. v. Wilton, Russ. & Ry. 115. So a club-house is wrongly described as the dwelling-house of the house-steward who sleeps in the club-house, and has the charge of, and is responsible for, the plate in it. R. v. Ashley, 1 C. & K. 198.

The following case appears to be at variance with previous authorities, and it may be doubted whether it is to be considered as law. The prosecutor, S., kept a blanket warehouse in Goswell street, and resided with his family in the house over the warehouse, which was on the ground-floor and consisted of four rooms, the second of which was the room broken open. There was an internal door between the warehouse and the dwelling-house. The blankets were the property of a company of blanket manufacturers at Witney, in Oxfordshire, none of whom ever slept in the house. The whole rent, both of the dwelling-house and warehouse, was paid by the company, to whom S. acted as servant or agent, and received a consideration for his services from them, part of which consideration, he said, was his being permitted to live in the house rent free. The lease of the premises was in the company. The court were clearly of opinion that it was rightly charged to be the dwelling-house of S.; for though the lease of the house was held, and the whole rent reserved paid by the company in the country, yet as they had never used it in any way as their habitation, it would be doing an equal violence to language and to common sense to consider it as their dwelling-house, especially as it was evident that the only purpose in holding it was to furnish a dwelling to their agent, and warerooms for the commodities therein deposited. It was the means by which they in part remunerated S. for his agency, and was precisely the same thing as if they had paid him as much more as the rent would amount to, and he had paid the rent. The bargain, however, the court observed, took another shape. The company preferred paying the rent of the whole premises, and giving their agent and his family a dwelling therein toward the salary which he was to receive from them. It was, therefore, essentially and truly, the dwelling of the person who occupied it. The punishment of burglary was intended to protect the actual occupant from the terror of disturbance during the hours of darkness and repose; but it would be absurd to suppose that that terror which is of the essence of this crime could, from the breaking and entering in this case, have produced an effect at Witney. R. v. Margett, 2 Leach, 930. It has been observed, that the accuracy of the reason given in the above judgment, with regard to protecting the actual occupant, may, perhaps, be questionable. The punishment of burglary will attach equally, and the actual occupant will not be less protected, though the offence should be laid in the indictment as committed in the dwelling-house of the real owner. And with respect to the terror in this case not having affected the company at Witney, the same might have been said of the terror to the East India Company or the African Company, in the cases of burglary in their houses. In the course of this case, Mr. Justice Grose inquired if there had not been a prosecution at the Old Bailey for a burglary in some of the halls of the city of London, in which it was clear that no part of the corporation resided, but in which the clerks of the company generally lived; and Mr. Knapp informed the court that his father was clerk to the Haberdashers' Company, and resided in the hall, which was broken open, and in that case the court held it to be his father's house. 2 Leach, 931, n ; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 377. The case of R. v. Margett, however, appears to be supported by a more recent decision. The prosecutor was secretary to the Norwich Union Insurance Company, and lived with his family in the house used as the office of the company, who paid the rent and taxes. The burglary was in breaking into a room used for the business of the company. The recorder, on the authority of R. v. Margett, and the case of the clerk of the Haberdashers' Company there mentioned, thought the indictment correct, but reserved the point for the judges, who were of opinion that the house was rightly described as the prosecutor's, since he, his family, and servants were the only persons who dwelt there; and they only were liable to be disturbed by a burglary. Though their lordships would not say that it might not have been described as the company's house, they thought it might, with equal propriety, be described as the prosecutor's. R. v. Witt, 1 Moody (C. C.), 248.

By Servants Occupying as Such.—Where a servant occupies a dwelling-house, or apartments therein, as a servant, his occupation is that of his master, and the house is the dwelling-house of the latter. But it is otherwise where the servant occupies suo jure as tenant. Thus, apartments in the king's palaces or in the houses of noblemen for their stewards and chief servants can only be described as the dwelling-house of the king or noblemen. Kel. 27; 1 Hale, P. C. 522, 527.

G., a farmer, had a dwelling-house and cottage under the same roof, but they were not inclosed by any wall or court-yard, and had no internal communication. T., a servant of G., and his family resided in the cottage by agreement with G. when he entered his service. He paid no rent, but an abatement was made in his wages on account of the cottage. The judges held that this was no more than a license to T. to lodge in the cottage, and did not make it his dwelling-house. R. v. Brown, 2 East P. C. 501.

The prosecutors were partners as bankers, and also as brewers, and were the owners of the house in question, used in both concerns. There were three rooms with only one entrance by a door from the street. No one slept in these rooms. The upper rooms of the house were inhabited by S., the cooper employed in the brewing concern. He was paid half a guinea a week, and permitted to have these rooms for the use of himself and family. There was a separate entrance from the street to these rooms. There was no communication between the upper and lower floor, except by a trap-door (the key of which was left with S.) and ladder not locked or fastened and not used. S. was assessed to the window-tax for his part of the premises, but the tax was paid by his masters. It being objected that the place where the burglary was committed was not the dwelling-house of the prosecutors, the point was reserved, when eight of the judges thought that S. was not a tenant, but inhabited only in the course of his service. Four of the judges were of a contrary opinion. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said: "S. certainly could not have maintained trespass against his employers if they had entered these rooms without his consent Does a gentleman who assigns to his coachman the rooms over his stables thereby make him a tenant? The act of the assessors, whether right or wrong in assessing S. for the windows of the upper rooms, can make no difference; nor is it material which of the two trades the prosecutor carried on; S. was servant, for the property in both partnerships belonged to the same persons. As to the severance, the key of the trap-door was left with S., and the door was never fastened, and it can make no difference whether the communication between the upper and lower rooms was through a trap-door or by a common staircase." R. v. Stockton & Edwards, 2 Leach, 1015; 2 Taunt. 339; s. c., under the name of R. v. Stock and another, Russ. & Ry. 185. See 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 27; R. v. Flannagan, Russ. & Ry. 187, infra.

In order to render the occupation of a servant the occupation of the master it must appear that the servant is, properly speaking, such, and not merely a person put into the house for the purpose of protecting it. The prosecutor left the dwelling-house, keeping it only as a warehouse and workshop, without any intention of again residing in it. In consequence of his thinking it not prudent to leave the house without some one in it, two women, employed by him as workwomen in his business, and not as domestic servants, slept there to take care of the house, but did not take their meals there or use the house for any other purpose than that of sleeping there. Upon an indictment for stealing goods to the amount of more than 40s., in the dwelling-house of the prosecutor, the judges held that this could not be considered his dwelling-house. R. v. Flannagan, Russ. & Ry. 187. It is difficult to distinguish this case from that of R. v. Stockton, 2 Leach, 1015, supra, which received an opposite decision. Still, though the object of the owner of the house in putting in his servants be to protect his property only, yet if they live there their occupation will be deemed his occupation, and the house may be described as his dwelling-house. The shop broken open was part of a dwelling-house which the prosecutor had inhabited. He had left the dwelling-house and never meant to live in it again, but retained the shop and let the other rooms to lodgers; after some time he put a servant and his family into two of the rooms lest the place should be robbed, and they lived there. Upon a case reserved, the judges thought that putting in a servant and his family to live was very different from putting them in merely to sleep, and that this was still to be deemed the prosecutor's house. R. v. Gibbons, 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 23.

J. B. worked for one W., who did carpenter's work for a public company, and had put J. B. into the house in question to take care of it and of some mills adjoining, J. B. receiving no more wages after than before he went to live in the house; it was held that the house was not rightly described as the house of J. B. R. v. Rawlins, 7 C. & P. 150. See R. v. Ashley, 1 C. & K. 198, ante, p. 681.

Where a dwelling-house was occupied by one in charge of a plantation, and he ordinarily slept in one room of it, the entire house was his dwelling-house, although another room may have been occasionally occupied as an office or bedroom by another, who while there was the master. Ashton v. State, 68 Ga. 25.

By Servants, as Tenants.—Where a servant occupies part of the premises belonging to his master, not as in the cases above mentioned, ante, in the capacity of servant, but in the character of tenant, the premises must be described as his dwelling-house. G. & Co. had a house and building where they carried on their trade. M., their warehouseman, lived with his family in the house and paid £11 per annum for rent and coals (the house alone being worth £20 per annum). G. & Co. paid the rent and taxes. The judges were of opinion that this could not be said to be the dwelling-house of G. & Co. They thought that as M. stood in the character of tenant (for G. & Co. might have distrained upon him for his rent, and could not arbitrarily have removed him), M.'s occupation could not be deemed their occupation. R. v. Jarvis, 1 Moody C. C. 7.

Nor is it necessary, in order to invest the servant with the character of tenant, that he should pay a rent, if from other circumstances of the case it appears that he holds as tenant. The prosecutor (G.), a collier, resided in a cottage built by the owner of the colliery for whom he worked. He received 15s. a week as wages, besides the cottage, which was free of rent and taxes. The prisoner being indicted for burglary in the dwelling-house of the prosecutor, Holroyd, J., was of opinion that though the occupation and enjoyment of the cottage were obtained by reason of G. being the servant of the owner, and were coextensive only with the hiring, yet that his inhabiting the cottage was not, as in the cases referred to (2 East P. C. 500), correctly speaking, merely as the servant of the owner, nor was it either as to the whole or any part of the cottage, as his (the owner's) occupation or for his use or business or that of the colliery, but wholly for the use and benefit of G. himself and his family, in like manner as if he had been paid the rent and taxes; and though the servant's occupation might in law, at the master's election, be considered as the occupation of the master and not of the servant, yet with regard to third persons it might be considered either as the occupation of the master or servant. The point was, however, reserved for the opinion of the judges, who held that the cottage might be described as the dwelling-house of G. R. v. Jobling, Russ. & Ry. 525.

A toll-house was occupied by a person employed by the lessee of the tolls at weekly wages as collector, and as such he had the privilege of living in the toll-house. The judges were unanimously of opinion that the toll-house was rightly described as his dwelling-house; for he had the exclusive possession of it, and it was unconnected with any premises of the lessee, who did not appear to have any interest in it. R. v. Camfield, 1 Moody C. C. 42.

So where a person who has been servant remains, on the tenant's quitting, upon the premises, not in the capacity of servant, they may be described as his dwelling-house. S. let a house to T., who underlet it The sub-lessee failed and quitted, and no one remained in the house but P., who had been servant to the sub-lessee. T. paid her 15s. a week till he died, when she received no payment, but continued in the house. At Michaelmas it was given up to S., but P. was permitted by the steward to remain in it. Bayley, J., thought P. might be considered tenant at will, but reserved the point for the opinion of the judges, who held that the house was rightly laid in the indictment as the dwelling-house of P., as she was there, not as a servant, but as a tenant at will. R. v. Collet, Russ. & Ry. 498. Where a gardener lived in a house of his master, quite separate from the dwelling-house of the latter, and had the entire control of the house he lived in and kept the key, it was held that it might be laid either as his or as his master's house. R. v. Rees, 7 C. & P. 568.

By Tenants.—Where the building is in possession of a lessee or tenant it may properly be charged to be his property or that of the landlord. Kennedy v. State, 81 Ind. 379. See People v. Smith, 1 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 329. Compare McCrillis v. State, 69 Ind. 159.

The indictment having named the owner of the house, the naming therein also of another person as tenant, when as a fact the tenant had surrendered the premises a few hours before the commission of the crime, is not a fatal defect. The latter allegation was immaterial. State v. Dan, 18 Nev. 345; s. c., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 93. See Com. v. Reynolds, 122 Mass. 454; Anderson v. State, 48 Ala. 665.

By Guests, etc.—If several persons dwell in one house, as guests or otherwise, having no fixed or certain interest in any part of the house, and a burglary be committed in any of their apartments, it seem clear that the indictment ought to lay the offence in the mansion-house of the proprietor. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 26. Therefore, where the chamber of a guest at an inn is broken open, it shall be laid to be the mansion-house of the innkeeper, because the guest has only the use of it, and not any certain interest. 1 Hale P. C. 557.

Where an indictment charged the accused with an attempt to burglariously break into and enter the dwelling-house of S., and it appeared upon the trial that the attempt was to break into a chamber in a hotel assigned to and occupied by S. as a guest, held, that the indictment was fatally defective. Rodgers v. People, 86 N. Y. 360; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 548. See Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89.

It has been said that if the host of an inn break the chamber of his guest in the night to rob, this is burglary. Dalton, c. 151, s. 4. But it has been observed that this may be justly questioned; for that there seems no distinction between this case and the case of an owner residing in the same house breaking the chamber of an inmate having the same outer door as himself, which Kelynge says cannot be burglary. Kel. 84; 2 East P. C. 582.

It is said by Lord Hale, that if A be a lodger in an inn, and in the night opens his chamber door, steals goods in the house, and goes away, it may be a question whether this be burglary; "and," he continues, "it seems not, because he had a special interest in his chamber, and so the opening of his own door was no breaking of the innkeeper's house; but if he had opened the chamber of B, a lodger in the inn, to steal his goods, it had been burglary." 1 Hale P. C. 554.

It has been observed that the reasoning in the following case is opposed to the distinction taken by Lord Hale, and that the case of a guest at an inn breaking his own door to steal goods in the night, falls under the same consideration as a servant under like circumstances. 2 East P. C. 503. The prosecutor, a Jew pedler, came to the house of one L., a publican, to stay all night, and fastened the door of his chamber. The prisoner pretended to L. that the prosecutor had stolen his goods, and under this pretence, with the assistance of L. and others, forced the chamber-door open, and stole the prosecutor's goods; Adams, B., doubted whether the chamber could be properly called the dwelling-house of the prosecutor being really a part of the dwelling-house of the innkeeper. Upon a case reserved, the judges all thought that though the prosecutor had for that night a special interest in the bedchamber, yet it was merely for a particular purpose, viz., to sleep there that night as travelling guest, and not as a regular lodger; that he had no certain and permanent interest in the room itself, but both the property and possession of the room remained in the landlord, who would be answerable civiliter for any goods of his guest that were stolen in the room, even for the goods now in question, which he could not be, unless that room were deemed to be in his possession; and that the landlord might go into the room when he pleased, and would not be a trespasser to his guest. R. v. Prosser, 2 East P. C. 502.

A landlord may commit burglary in his guest's chamber. State v. Fish, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 323.

Partners.—Where one of several partners is the lessee of the premises where the business is carried on, and another partner occupies an apartment there, and pays for his board and lodging, the latter, as already stated, will be considered as a lodger only. R. v. Parmenter, 1 Leach, 537 (n), ante, p. 679. But where the house is the joint property of the firm, and one of the partners and the persons employed in the trade live there, it is properly described as the dwelling-house of the firm. R. v. Athea, 1 Moody C. C. 329.

In an indictment for burglary, where the house broken into and entered belongs to several partners, joint owners, or tenants in common, the ownership may be laid in any one or more of them. White v. State, 72 Ala. 195.

The information charged that the burglary alleged was committed in breaking and entering the store of John C. Clark and Frank G. Sutton, partners doing business under the firm-name of Clark & Sutton. The court, in its charge to the jury in regard to the ownership of the building, directed upon this point that it was sufficient to find that the building broken and entered belonged to Clark & Sutton. There was no contest over the ownership of the store building, and the evidence clearly established that the building in which the burglary was committed belonged to John C. Clark and Frank G. Sutton, partners as Clark & Sutton. Held, the court committed no material error in not repeating the full names of each member of the firm in its charge upon the question of the ownership of the building. State v. McAnulty, 26 Kan. 533.

Where the building broken into was in possession of the three members of a firm, but was owned by only two of them, it is not material that the indictment averred the ownership and possession to be in all three. Burglary being an offence against the possession, and that being proved as stated, the matter of the ownership was not important. State v. Rivers, 27 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 781.

An indictment charged the breaking, etc., "dwelling-house of A and B, being co-partners in business under the firm-name and style of A & B." It was shown on the trial that A and B were partners, and in their business used and occupied as stores the lower stories of two adjacent buildings, opening into each other. A, with other persons, lived in the upper rooms, and was there at the time of the burglary, but there was no internal communication between the stores. The breaking was into one of the stores. Held, that the ownership was properly charged as being a partnership. Quinn v. People, 71 N. Y. 561; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 87. See R. v. Athea, R. & M. C. C. 329.

Corporations.—An indictment charging that the accused burglariously broke and entered into "a certain dwelling-house, to wit, the infirmary of Morgan county," is not insufficient as failing to aver the fact of ownership. Davis v. State, 38 Ohio St. 505.

An averment in the indictment that

9. Night-time.—At common law, both the breaking and the entering must take place at night. The breaking may take place on one night, and the entering on another, provided that the breaking the burglary was committed in "the St. Bridget's Church and Meeting House" is merely descriptive of the church, and has no reference to ownership. Wilson v. State, 34 Ohio St. 199.

The corporate character of the company may be shown by proof that it was a corporation de facto. Burke v. State, 34 Ohio St. 79.

An indictment for breaking, etc., "the storehouse of the Oxford Iron Co.," with intent, etc., sufficiently avers ownership, and it need not aver that the corporation was duly incorporated. Fisher v. State, 40 N. J. L. 169. See, as to proof of incorporation, Burke v. State, 34 Ohio St. 79; Hamilton v. State, 34 Ohio St. 82; Johnson v. State, 73 Ala. 83.

"The city hall of the city of Charlestown" is a sufficient averment that the property of the building alleged to be broken and entered is in the city of Charlestown. Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582 (see vol. i. p. 771, note).

An indictment charging that the accused broke and entered, with intent to commit a felony, "a certain building, to wit: the Main Exhibition Building of the Middle Florida Agricultural and Mechanical Fair Association," is fatally defective in not alleging that the building is the property of a corporation or persons. Pells v. State, 20 Fla. 774. See State v. Clifton, 30 La. Ann. Pt. 2, 951.

The indictment alleged that the principal broke and entered "a building, called a bank, being the bank of the New Hampshire Savings Bank in Concord." On trial it appeared that the Merrimack County Bank owned the building in which the Savings Bank had their banking-rooms; that the owners occupied a distinct part of the building, entered by a separate outer door; that the Savings Bank had the exclusive occupation of their rooms, as tenants to the owners, and entered by another outer door, which also led to the other rooms in the building occupied by tenants. No part of the building was occupied as a dwelling-house. Held, that the rooms occupied by the Savings Bank were properly described as their bank. State v. Rand, 33 N. H. 216.

Testimony was given that the car, which the defendant was charged with burglariously entering, was upon the track of the C. P. R. Co., attached to its train, and in its possession, occupancy, and control. Held, that the ownership of the car was properly laid in the C. P. R. Co., although the legal title was in another. State v. Parker, 16 Nev. 79.

Where a railroad depot is in the exclusive control and possession of two corporations, but the ownership is in a third corporation, an indictment is good which describes it as the depot of the corporations in possession. State v. Scripture, 42 N. H. 485.

Under a statute declaring that the breaking and entry into a railroad car, in which goods, merchandise, or other valuable thing is kept for use, deposit, or transportation as freight, with the intent to steal, or to commit a felony, is burglary, it is essential that the indictment should allege the ownership of the car. Where, at the time of the breaking and entry, the car was the property of one railroad company, the ownership is properly laid in that company, although another railroad company may have had the possession and use of it. Where, in such case, the ownership is laid in a railroad company, averred to be a corporation, the fact of incorporation must be shown; and when that is derived from a statute of which the courts do not take judicial knowledge, the statute must be produced. Johnson v. State, 73 Ala. 483.

The allegation that the goods were taken from the possession of the railroad company is sufficient, as showing special property in the company, to designate the person injured by the crime. State v. McIntire, 59 Iowa, 267.

Variance as to Ownership of Property.—In an information for burglary the property entered was described as a certain building in the town of Gilroy, Santa Clara County, known as "the store of one S. Loupe." The evidence showed that the store in question was known as "Loupe's store;" that there was no other store and no other premises in the county which answered to that description: and that the store belonged to S. Loupe, L. Loupe, and A. Haas, who were partners doing business therein. Held, the variance was immaterial. People v. Edwards, 59 Cal. 359.

Evidence that a dwelling-house is the "Drake house," is a "house kept by Mr. Drake," and that "Mr. Drake lives there," is insufficient to sustain a conviction under an information charging a burglarious entry of the dwelling-house of William Drake. Jackson v. State, 55 Wis. 589. See Doan v. State, 26 Ind. 495.

is with intent to enter, and the entering is with intent to commit a felony.[1]

1. Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 806; 2 Bish. Cr. L. (7th Ed.) 101. See Davis v. State, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 77; Com. v. Mark, 4 Leigh (Va.), 658; Earhart v. Commonwealth, 9 Leigh (Va.), 671; State v. Seymour, 36 Me. 225; State v. Mather, N. Chip. (Vt.) 32; State v. Ruby, 61 Iowa, 86; Brown v. State, 59 Ga. 456; Houser v. State, 58 Ga. 78; Waters v. State, 53 Ga. 567; Williams v. State, 46 Ga. 212; Wood v. State, 46 Ga. 322; Com. v. Glover, 111 Mass. 395; Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582; State v. Robinson, 35 N. J. L. 71; People v. Arnold, 6 Park Cr. (N. Y.) 638; Butler v. People, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 68; People v. Taggart, 43 Cal. 81; Com. v. Kaas, 3 Brews. (Pa.) 422; Holl'ster v. Commonwealth, 60 Pa. St. 103; State v. Leaden, 35 Conn. 515; Lewis v. State, 16 Conn. 32; Thomas v. State, 6 Miss. 20; State v. Whit. 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 349.

With regard to what shall be esteemed night, it is said by Lord Hale to have been anciently held, that after sunset, though daylight be not quite gone, or before sun-rising, is noctanter, to make a burglary (Dalt. c. 99; Cromp. 22, b); but he adds, that the better opinion has been, that if the sun be set, yet if the countenance of a party can be reasonably discerned by the light of the sun, or crepusculum, it is not night. 1 Hale P. C. 550; 3 Inst. 63.

This rule, however, does not apply to moonlight, otherwise many burglaries might pass unpunished. 1 Hale, 551; 4 Bl. Com. 224. By the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, § 1, "for the purposes of this Act, the night shall be deemed to commence at nine of the clock in the evening of each day, and to conclude at six of the clock in the morning of the succeeding day."

The night-time consists of the period from the termination of daylight in the evening to the earliest dawn of the next morning. State v. Bancroft, 10 N. H. 105; Com. v. Kaas, 3 Brews. (Pa.) 422; Methard v. State, 19 Ohio St. 363.

The New York Penal Code defines "night-time" as the period between sunset and sunrise. N. Y. Penal Code, § 500.

In order to avail the defence it is not sufficient that there was light enough caused by the moon, street lights, or lights from buildings, aided by newly-fallen snow, to enable one to discern the features of another; there must be daylight enough left for that purpose. State v. Morris, 47 Conn. 197.

Where the burglary was committed between six and seven o'clock, the sun setting at half-past six o'clock, and there was light enough to discern a man's features across the street. Held, that it was not proved that the crime was committed in the night-time. People v. Griffin, 19 Cal. 578.

An indictment charging the crime to have been committed "on the 16th day of March, in the year, etc., in the night season of the same day, to wit, about the hour of two o'clock at night," the allegation as to time is sufficiently definite and certain. Methard v. State, 19 Ohio St. 363.

Where a burglary was charged to have been committed "on the second day of February, A.D. 1881, and in the night-time of said day," the words "and in the night-time of said day" limit the allegation of time to the night of the day mentioned, and all the language together charges burglary in the night-time, and not in the day-time, of February 2, 1881. State v. Ruby, 61 Iowa, 86.

The prosecutor must prove that both the breaking and entering took place in the night-time, but it is not necessary that both should have taken place on the same night. It is said by Lord Hale, that if thieves break a hole in the house one night, to the intent to enter another night, and commit a felony through the hole they so made the night before, this seems to be burglary; for the breaking and entering were both noctanter, though not the same night, and it shall be supposed they broke and entered the night they entered, for the breaking makes not the burglary till the entry. 1 Hale P. C. 551.

This point was decided in the following case: During the night of Friday, the side-door of the prosecutor's house, which opened into a public passage, had all the glass taken out by the prisoner, with intent to enter, and on the Sunday night the prisoner entered through the hole thus made. On a case reserved, the judges were of opinion that the offence amounted to a burglary, the breaking and entry being both by night. And although a day elapsed between the breaking and entering, yet the breaking was originally with intent to enter. R. v. Smith, Russ. & Rv. 417. See R. v. Jordan, ante, p. 669.

"If the breaking of the house," says Lord Hale, "were done in the day-time, and the entering in the night, or the breaking in the night and the entering in the day, that will not be burglary; for both make the offence, and both must be noctanter. 1 Hale, P. C. 551, citing Cromp. 33, a. ex. 8 ed. 2.

10. Intent.—To constitute burglary, there must be an intent to commit some felony in the house, otherwise the breaking and entry will amount to a trespass. It must be either proved from evidence of the actual commission of the felony, or implied from some overt act if the felony is not actually carried out. It is none the less burglary because the felony which is intended is not perpetrated.[1]

Upon this the annotator of Lord Hale observes, that "the case cited does not fully prove the point it is brought for, the resolution being only, that if thieves enter in the night at a hole in the wall which was there before, it is no burglary; but it does not appear who made the hole." 1 Hale P. C. 551 (n).

It is observed by Mr. Serjeant Russell, that it is elsewhere given as a reason by Lord Hale why the breaking and entering, if both in the night, need not be both in the same night, that it shall be supposed that the thieves broke and entered in the night when they entered; for that the breaking makes not the burglary till the entry; and the learned writer adds, that "this reasoning, if applied to a breaking in the day-time, and an entering in the night, would seem to refer the whole transaction to the entry, and make such breaking and entry a burglary." 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 37; and see 2 East P. C. 509.

It would seem, however, to be carrying the presumption much further than in the case put by Lord Hale; and it may well be doubted whether, in such a case, the offence would be held to amount to burglary. Roscoe's Cr. Ed. (10th Ed.) 382.

An interval between two successive entrances of the same house on the same night by the same burglar does not prevent proof of what took place at the second visit in a prosecution for the crime; the two breakings constitute one continuous burglary, even though it began to be light before the burglar left the house the second time. But even if the second entrance were a separate transaction the fact could be shown by way of accounting for the whereabouts of respondent during the night. People v. Gibson, 58 Mich. 368.

Where the evidence leaves the time in which the offence was committed exactly balanced between day and night; that is, that it was committed within a period of about 40 or 45 minutes, one half of which was day and one half of which was night, the defendant should have the benefit of the doubt necessarily arising, and ought not to be convicted of a breaking in the night-time. Waters v. State, 53 Ga. 567; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 367.

Evidence that the prosecutor discovered between daylight and sunrise that his house had been broken into, that the house was on a public street in a town, and that a dry-goods box and chair had been placed beneath the window where the entry was effected, is sufficient evidence to be submitted to the jury that the breaking was in the night-time. State v. McDonald, 73 N. Car. 346; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 368.

An information which simply charges the commission of the crime of burglary, without stating whether the act was committed in the night-time or the day-time, embraces both degrees of the crime; and under such an information it is competent for the jury to find the defendant guilty of the crime in either degree. People v. Barnhart, 59 Cal. 381.

Indictment charging burglary, but not specifying either the day-time or the night-time, is demurrable upon arraignment. The defect, however, is not cause for arresting the judgment after verdict finding burglary in the day-time. Jones v. State, 63 Ga. 141.

An indictment for burglary with intent to commit theft which charged the entry to have been effected by "breaking" is not bad for failing to charge that it was effected in the night-time, or that the defendant, having so entered in the day-time, remained concealed therein till night; but the indictment will be held to charge a day-light breaking, which would render it necessary to prove the breaking to have been actual. Summers v. State, 9 Tex. App. 396.

An information alleging a breaking and entry of a store not occupied as a dwelling, but not stating whether it was done either in the night-time or in the day-time, does not allege any offence under Michigan laws. Hall v. People, 43 Mich. 417.

1. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.), 382;

Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 810; Jones v. State, 11 N. H. 269; State v. Squires, 11 N. H. 37; State v. Ayer, 23 N. H. 301; State v. Scripture, 42 N. H. 485; State v. Cooper, 16 Vt. 551; State v. Brady, 14 Vt. 353; State v. Colter, 6 R. I. 195; Josslyn v. Commonwealth, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 236; Com. v. Tuck, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 356; Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582; McCourt v. People, 64 N. Y. 583; People v. Larned, 7 N. Y. 445; Osborne v. People, 2 Park. C. C. (N.Y.) 583; People v. Marks, 4 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 153; Stoops v. Commonwealth, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 491; Hackett v. Commonwealth, 15 Pa. St. 95; State v. Eaton, 3 Harr. (Del.) 554; State v. Manluff, 1 Houst. C. C. (Del.) 208; State v. Carpenter, 1 Houst. C. C. (Del.) 367; State v. Cody, Winst. (N. Car.) 197; Lowder v. State, 63 Ala. 143; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 9; Barber v. State, 78 Ala. 19; Burke v. State, 5 Tex. App. 74; France v. State, 42 Tex. 276; People v. Beaver, 49 Cal. 57; People v. Soto, 53 Cal. 415; People v. Young, 65 Cal. 225; People v. Jenkins, 16 Cal. 431; State v. Cowell, 12 Nev. 337; Olive v. Com., 5 Bush (Ky.), 376.

The intent with which a prisoner breaks and enters is a question of fact for the jury. Woodward v. State, 54 Ga. 106; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 366. See Brown v. State, 59 Ga. 456; France v. State, 42 Tex. 276; State v. Woods, 31 La. Ann. 267; Johnson v. Commonwealth, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 796; State v. Manluff, 1 Houst. C. C. (Del.) 208; Hackett v. Commonwealth, 15 Pa. St. 95; Osborne v. People, 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 583; People v. Larned, 7 N. Y. 445; Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582; People v. Beaver, 49 Cal. 57.

The intent to commit a felony, and the actual commission of it, may both be alleged; and in general this is the better mode of statement. Such, indeed, are all the precedents, when a theft immediately following the entry is expected to be proved. Upon such an indictment the prisoner may be acquitted of burglary and convicted of the theft, whilst a general verdict of guilty will cover both offences. 2 Archbold's Cr. P. & P. (Pomeroy's Ed.) 1072.

A count which fails to charge the felonious intent, and fails to charge an asportation sufficient to constitute larceny, is fatally defective. Barber v. State, 78 Ala. 19

One who enters with burglarious intent a room of a house, enters the house with such intent. 2 Bish. Cr. L. § 97; Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 1536; State v. Scripture, 42 N. H. 485; People v. Young, 65 Cal. 225.

Under an information for burglary, which charges that the breaking and entry were with intent to steal the goods of B., no conviction can be had without proof of such particular intent. Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89.

The prosecutor must prove that the dwelling-house was broken and entered with intent to commit a felony therein. Evidence that a felony was actually committed is evidence that the house was broken and entered with intent to commit that offence. 1 Hale P. C. 560; 2 East P. C. 514.

It was at one time doubted whether it was not essential that the felony intended to be committed should be a felony at common law. 1 Hale P. C. 562; Crompton, 32; Dalt. s. 151, c. 5.

But it appears to be now settled, according to the modern authorities, that it makes no difference whether the offence intended be felony at common law or by statute; and the reason given is, that whenever a statute makes an offence felony, it incidentally gives it all the properties of a felony at common law. Hawk. P. C. b, 1, c. 38, s. 38; R. v. Gray, Str. 481; 4 Bl. Com. 228; 2 East P. C. 511; 2 Russ. Cri. (5th Ed.) 40; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 383.

It is an essential element of the crime of burglary that the breaking and entering should be accompanied with an intent to steal or to commit some felony, and this intent must usually be alleged and proved; but where there is an averment of a completed larceny, or of some felony actually committed, it is unnecessary to aver the felonious intent. Barber v. State, 78 Ala. 19.

An indictment for burglary which charges that the defendant entered, etc., with intent to commit a felony, without stating what particular felony, does not state any offence. People v. Nelson, 58 Cal. 104. See Price v. People, 109 Ill. 109.

An indictment for burglary charging that the defendant entered "with the felonious intent then and there to commit arson" sufficiently specifies the felony intended to be committed. Shotwell v. State, 43 Ark. 345. See State v. Ely, 35 La. Ann. 895.

Where an information charges a burglary, in that defendant "did feloniously . . . enter the building, to wit, the ticket-office of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation, . . . with intent then and there to commit larceny," the court may properly refuse to charge the jury that defendant could not be convicted unless he entered the building known as the ticket-office with intent to commit "some felony," since such instruction would imply that he could be convicted if he entered with intent to commit any felony. People v. Young, 65 Cal. 225.

If it appear that the intent of the party in breaking and entering was merely to commit a trespass, it is no burglary, as where the prisoner enters with intent to beat some person in the house, even though killing or murder may be the consequence, yet, if the primary intention was not to kill, it is still not burglary. 1 Hale P. C. 561; 2 East P. C. 509; Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 247; State v. Cooper, 16 Vt. 551; Com. v. Taylor, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 281; Hackett v. Commonwealth, 15 Pa. St. 95.

Where a servant embezzled money intrusted to his care, ten guineas of which he deposited in his trunk, and quitted his master's service, but afterwards returned, broke and entered the house in the night, and took away the ten guineas, this was adjudged no burglary, for he did not enter to commit a felony, but a trespass only. Although it was the master's money in right, it was the servant's in possession, and the original act was no felony. R. v. Bingley, Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 38, s. 37, cited 2 Leach, 841, as R. v. Dingley; 2 East P. C. 510; s. c., as Anon.

Where goods had been seized as contraband by an excise officer, and his house was entered in the night, and the goods taken away, upon an indictment for entering his house, with intent to steal his goods, the jury found that the prisoners broke and entered the house with intent to take the goods on behalf of the person who had smuggled them; and, upon a case reserved, all the judges were of opinion that the indictment was not supported, there being no intent to steal, however outrageous the conduct of the prisoners was in thus endeavoring to get back the goods. R. v. Knight & Roffey, 2 East P. C. 510.

If the indictment had been for breaking and entering the house, with intent feloniously to rescue goods seized, that being made a felony by statute 19 Geo. II. c. 34 (repealed), the chief baron and some of the other judges held it would have been burglary. But even in that case some evidence must be given, on the part of the prosecutor, to show that the goods were uncustomed, in order to throw the proof upon the prisoners that the duty was paid; but their being found in oil-cases, or in great quantities in an unentered place, would have been sufficient for this purpose. 2 East P. C. 510.

The prisoner was indicted for breaking, etc., with intent to kill and destoy a gelding there being. It appeared that the prisoner, in order to prevent the horse from running a race, cut the sinews of his fore legs, from which he died. Pratt, C.J., directed an acquittal, the intent being not to commit felony by killing and destroying the horse, but a trespass only to prevent his running, and therefore it was no burglary. But the prisoner was afterwards indicted for killing the horse, and capitally convicted. R. v. Dobb, 2 East P. C. 513.

Two poachers went to the house of a gamekeeper who had taken a dog from them, and, believing him to be out of the way, broke the door and entered. Being indicted for this as a burglary, and it appearing that their intention was to rescue the dog and not to commit a felony, Vaughan, B., directed an acquittal. Anon. Matth. Dig. C. L. 48. See R. v. Holloway, 5 C. & P. 524.

Evidence that the respondent entered the prosecutor's house between twelve and one o'clock at night by raising a window of the room in which the prosecutor and his wife were sleeping, and when discovered went out through the window, there being money and clothing in the room, is sufficient to sustain a conviction for burglary, although it does not appear that respondent stole anything. Woodward v. State, 54 Ga. 106; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 366.

If two persons break into a house, one with intent to commit a felony and another with an innocent purpose, the party having the intent to commit a felony is guilty without reference to the secret purpose which the other party may have had. Gale v. State, 13 Lea (Tenn.), 489.

Sufficiency of Evidence as to the Absence of a Felonious Intent.—Three persons were indicted for burglary, and convicted. It appeared in evidence that one of them, before the burglarious act was committed, gave information of the intended crime to a justice of the peace, and on the day the crime was in fact committed informed a constable and others of the same, giving the names of all the persons concerned, and of the time and place of the proposed crime, and requested the constable to take steps to have the other defendants arrested, and that he accompanied his co-defendants to the place assigned and seemingly participated with them in their acts, and that on the following morning he gave such full information of their affair as led to the arrest of the parties. The jury found all the defendants guilty. Held, that under the facts of the case the conviction of the party giving such information, and who claimed to have acted as a detective, could not be sustained. Price v. People, 109 Ill. 109.

A burglariously entered the shop of B and stole a brace, which A used to break in the house of C. A left the brace on the ground outside of C's house. Held, that, in the absence of intent of permanent appropriation, A could not be convicted for larceny of the brace. Wilson v. State, 18 Tex. App. 270; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 309.

R. was indicted for feloniously and burglariously breaking and entering in the night-time the dwelling-house of one M., with intent the goods and chattels of M., then and there being, feloniously to steal, take, and carry away. At the trial R. offered to prove that M. was a lewd woman, and that he had had improper intimacy with her; which evidence the court below refused to admit. On exception, it was held that it was material to show for what object R. broke and entered the house; and that, if he entered the house solely for the purpose of having illicit connection with M., he could not be found guilty of burglary. Robinson v. State, 53 Md. 151; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 399. Compare People v. Soto, 53 Cal. 415.

The prisoner requested P. to burglarize a building with him. P. informed the sheriff, and it was arranged between them that the burglary should be carried out. P. entered the building, robbed it, and divided the money with the prisoner, who was thereupon arrested by the sheriff. Held, that P. having no felonious intent in entering the building and taking the money, there was no crime committed, and the prisoner could not be convicted of burglary. People v. Collins, 53 Cal. 185.

An indictment alleged that the defendant attempted to break and enter a certain dwelling house in the night-time, with the intent to steal therein, and in such attempt broke and opened three windows in said house, but was intercepted and prevented in the execution of said offence. At the trial a police officer, who arrested the defendant, testified that, on the night in question, he saw the defendant on the piazza in front of said house; that the defendant turned the corner of the house, and the witness followed; that the defendant then ran into the yard and hid; that the witness searched for him with a lantern, and found him lying on the ground, apparently asleep, and with his face covered with a handkerchief; that he made conflicting statements to the witness as to his name and residence; and that three windows in the lower part of the house, which had been shut, were open, and the fastenings, which were on the inside, were turned aside. Held, that the judge properly declined to instruct the jury, as requested by the defendant, that, on the evidence, they would not be warranted in finding a verdict of guilty. Com. v. Shedd, 140 Mass. 451.

Intent—Variance in the Statement of.—The intent must be proved as laid. If it is laid that the intent was to commit one sort of felony, and it is proved that the intent was to commit another, it is a fatal variance. 2 East P. C. 514; Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89.

Where the prisoner was indicted for burglary and stealing goods, and it appeared that there were no goods stolen, but only an intent to steal, it was held by Holt, C. J., that this ought to have been so laid, and he directed an acquittal. R. v. Vandercomb, 2 East P. C. 514.

The property in the goods which it is alleged were intended to be stolen must be correctly laid. 2 Russ. Cr. (5th Ed.) 41.

The fact that the indictment charged an intent in the burglary to steal the property of one man, and the proof showed an actual stealing of the property of another, was wholly immaterial. 2 Bish. Cr. Pro., §§ 95, 96; Whart. Cr. L. § 820; Harris v. State, 61 Miss. 304.

An indictment for burglary charged the prisoner with breaking, in the night-time, into the dwelling-house of E. B., with intent the goods and chattels in the same dwelling-house then and there being feloniously and burglariously to steal, and stealing the goods of E. B. It was proved that it was the house of E. B., but that the goods the prisoner stole were the joint property of E. B. and two others. It was held that if it was proved that the prisoner broke into the house of E. B. with intent to steal the goods there generally, that would be sufficient to sustain the charge of burglary contained in the indictment, without proof of an intent to steal the goods of the particular person whose goods the indictment charged that he did steal. R. v. Clarke, 1 C. & K. 431.

A. was charged with breaking into the house of K. and stealing the goods of M. It was proved by M. that K., his brother-in-law, had taken the house, and that M.

(who lived on his property) carried on the trade of a silversmith for the benefit of K. and his family, having himself neither a share in the profits nor a salary. M. stated that he had authority to sell any part of the stock, and might take money from the till, but that he should tell K. of it; and that he sometimes bought goods for the shop, and sometimes K. did it; it was held that M. was a bailee, and that the goods in the shop might properly be laid as his property. R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44.

It seems sufficient in all cases where a felony has been actually committed, to allege the commission without any intent. 1 Hale P. C. 560; 2 East P. C. 514; State v. Squires, 11 N. H. 37; Com. v. Tuck, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 356; People v. Marks, 4 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 153; Stoops v. Commonwealth, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 491. And in such case no evidence, except that of the committing of the offence, will be required to show the intention. Barber v. State, 78 Ala. 19; Woodward v. State, 54 Ga. 106; Whar. C. L. § 818.

It is a general rule, that a man who commits one sort of felony in attempting to commit another, cannot excuse himself on the ground that he did not intend the commission of that particular offence. Yet this, it seems, must be confined to cases where the offence intended is in itself a felony. 2 East P. C. 514, 515; State v. Boon, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 244; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 555.

The defendant was accused of the crime of burglary. The information charged that he feloniously and burglariously entered a certain house with intent to commit a rape, but did not state under which set of circumstances, specified in the Penal Code, the crime was committed. Held, that the information was sufficient. People v. Burns, 63 Cal. 614.

Where the indictment charged burglary with intent to commit an assault and battery, and the body of the crime was established, it was competent, for the purpose of identifying defendant as the criminal, to show that he knew that there was a sum of money in the house at the time, even though it tended to prove the commission of a distinct crime from that charged in the indictment, or a different motive from that alleged. State v. Kepper, 65 Iowa, 745.

The intent of the parties will be gathered from all the circumstances of the case. Three persons attacked a house. They broke a window in front and at the back. They put a crowbar and knife through a window, but the owner resisting them, they went away. Being indicted for burglary with intent to commit a larceny, it was contended that there was no evidence of the intent; but Park, J., said that it was for the jury to say whether the prisoner went with the intent alleged or not; that persons do not in general go to houses to commit trespasses in the middle of the night; that if was matter of observation that they had the opportunity, but did not commit the larceny, and he left it to the jury to say whether, from all the circumstances, they could infer that or any other intent. Anon., 1 Lewin C. C. 37.

Where it is shown, on an indictment for burglary, that the defendant broke and entered the house set out in the indictment, the intention with which the breaking and entering were done will be presumed from the act itself. State v. Teeter, 27 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 485.

It is immaterial if the intent be not executed if it can be inferred. Olive v. Commonwealth, 5 Bush (Ky.), 376; State v. McDaniel, Winst. (N. Car.), No. 1, 249.

A burglar entered the room of B., who was asleep. He took hold of her ankle, when she screamed, whereupon A. escaped. Held, that this was evidence of intent to commit rape. State v. Boon, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 244; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 555.

The intent alleged was to commit a rape by force, and the evidence relied on to prove it tended to show that one of the three females in the house was awakened by something touching her foot, and, screaming, saw a man running away through an open door. Held, not sufficient to prove the intent alleged. Hamilton v. State, 11 Tex. App. 116.

In an indictment for burglary in the night-time, with intent to commit larceny of money, goods, and chattels, it is not necessary to aver what specific money, goods, or chattels were intended to be stolen, or the name of the owner thereof. Jones v. State, 18 Fla. 890.

One who breaks and enters a building with intent to steal money from a safe is guilty of burglary, although there is no money in the safe. State v. Beal, 37 Ohio St. 108; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 490. See Olive v. Com., 5 Bush (Ky.), 376.

Where a person was found drunk in the house of another, the question of intent is for the jury. State v. Bell, 29 Iowa, 316.

A agreed with B to commit a burglary at a particular time and place. A came as appointed, bringing a set of burglar's tools. He went to a blacksmith's shop to procure a crowbar to break in the door of the store intended to be robbed.

11. Evidence—Possession of the Stolen Property.—The mere possession of stolen goods, without other evidence of guilt, is not regarded as prima facie evidence of burglary. The rule in larceny does not apply to burglary.[1]

While gone, an alarm was raised and the burglary prevented. Held, that this was sufficient evidence of an attempt to support a conviction. People v. Lawton, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 126. See Wilson v. State, 24 Conn. 57; State v. McDaniel, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) No. 1, L. 249.

Where defendants broke into a tool-house of a railroad company, took from it a hand-car, put it on the track and rode in it twelve miles, and then removed it to and left it at the side of the track; held, that this did not establish the larcenous intent essential to constitute burglary. State v. Ryan, 12 Nev. 401; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 802.

Where the defendant was indicted for an attempt to commit burglary, it is competent to show that he broke and entered the gate adjoining the dwelling-house. State v. Smith, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 305.

An indictment which charges that defendant "feloniously and burglariously . . . did break into the storeroom, . . . with intent the goods . . . then and there being, then and there feloniously and burglariously to steal, . . . and did then and there burglariously steal, take and carry away," etc., sufficiently charges the felonious intent. State v. McGraw, 87 Mo. 161.

The indictment need not allege intent, where the felony is alleged to have been committed after the breaking and entering. Com. v. Brown, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 207; Com. v. Hope, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Jones v. State, 11 N. H. 269; State v. Moore, 12 N. H. 42.

1. 1 Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 763; 1 Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 813; Com. v. McGarty, 114 Mass. 299; Davis v. People, 1 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 447; Jones v. People, 6 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 126; State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 413; State v. Tilton, 63 Iowa, 117; State v. Hayden, 45 Iowa, 11; State v. Shaffer, 59 Iowa, 290; People v. Gordon, 40 Mich. 716; Stuart v. People, 42 Mich. 255; Ingalls v. State, 48 Wis. 647; Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89; People v. Noregea, 48 Cal. 123; People v. Beaver, 49 Cal. 57; People v. Mitchell, 55 Cal. 236; Walker v. Commonwealth, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 969; Taliaferro v. Commonwealth, 77 Va. 411; State v. Reece, 27 W. Va. 375; Fuller v. State, 48 Ala. 273; White v. State, 72 Ala. 195.

Under an indictment for burglary, the prosecution having proved that a valise, part of the property stolen from the house at the time the offence was committed, was found in the defendant's house a short time afterwards, while the defendant's evidence tended to show that he was in Georgia when the alleged burglary was committed; held, that it was permissible for him to prove, by a witness who was present, "that on his return home, and so soon as he first discovered the valise, he asked his wife, Whose valise is that? and how came it here?" Henderson v. State, 70 Ala. 23; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 72.

K.'s dwelling is broken open and her goods stolen therefrom. Next day the goods are found on a bed in a room occupied by prisoner and another woman, P., whose friend often came and spent the night there. On the second day prisoner sold the goods, worth $9, for seventy-five cents, and said she got them of P., but made contradictory statements. Prisoner was indicted for burglary, and convicted of house-breaking. Held, even in cases of simple larceny, in order to raise the presumption of guilt from the possession of stolen goods, it is necessary that they be found in the exclusive possession and subject to the exclusive control of the accused. Such was not so here. Prisoner's conflicting statements as to how she came by the goods certainly excite a strong suspicion against her, yet the testimony is insufficient to establish her guilt of burglary or house-breaking. Taliaferro v. Commonwealth, 77 Va. 411.

On a trial for burglary, the fact that the goods were found in a room occupied by two or three or more persons, was not conclusive evidence that the goods were in the possession of any one of them. Shropshire v. State, 69 Ga. 273.

An instruction that the burglary "could not be inferred" from the fact that the stolen property was found in defendant's possession, was properly refused, where there was proof, not only that the property was so found shortly after the burglary, but also of other suspicious circumstances. Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89; Ingalls v. State, 48 Wis. 647.

Where defendant was indicted for the burglary of a store, committed in February, and the only evidence against him was that some of the goods taken from the store were found in July following, in a trunk used jointly by defendant and another, and that defendant was at the store the evening before the crime was committed, held, that this was not sufficient to justify a verdict of guilty, and, under the instructions of the court, defendant should have been acquitted. State v. Tilton. 63 Iowa, 117.

The presumption of guilt which arises, in a case of larceny, from the possession of goods recently stolen, does not apply with equal force to the crime of burglary with intent to steal. Such possession is evidence tending to show that the defendant committed the burglary, but is not of itself sufficient, even if unexplained, to warrant a conviction. State v. Shaffer, 59 Iowa, 290.

Possession of Stolen Goods by Accused.—Possession of stolen goods by the accused, even though unexplained and exclusive, does not authorize the inference of his complicity in the larceny or burglary charged, unless it is also recent, or soon after the commission of the offence; and while the word "recent," in this connection, is not capable of any exact definition, but varies within a certain range with the conditions of each particular case, and though there may be cases in which the court may, as matter of law, pronounce the possession recent; yet the question is usually one of fact for the determination of the jury, and a charge which ignores it, or withdraws it from their consideration, is erroneous. (Overruling Maynard v. State, 46 Ala. 85.) White v. State, 72 Ala. 195.

Where it appears that B was the owner of the house at the time of the criminal act, and had personal property therein, which might be the subject of larceny, and which was in the same room with property of C, and was stolen and carried away at the same time with the latter, the State may show that the property of C was afterwards found in defendant's possession. Neubrandt v. State, 53 Wis. 89.

The possession of property which has been stolen from a building which has been broken into and entered, is prima facie evidence of larceny, though not of the burglary. But where it is shown that the burglary and larceny were committed at the same time, and by the same person, then such possession is equally prima facie evidence of both crimes. State v. Rivers, 27 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 781.

The facts that a building was burglariously entered, goods stolen therefrom, and the possession by the accused soon thereafter of the goods stolen, are competent evidence to go to the jury, and with other circumstances indicative of guilt, such as giving a false account, or refusing to give any account, of the manner in which or the means by which he came into possession of the stolen goods, may afford a strong presumption of fact of the guilt of the accused, and warrant the jury in finding him guilty of both the burglary and larceny. Methard v. State, 19 Ohio St. 363; State v. Owens, 79 Mo. 619; State v. Kennedy, 88 Mo. 341; State v. Butterfield, 75 Mo. 297; Lundy v. State, 71 Ga. 360; Brown v. State, 59 Ga. 454; 61 Ga. 311; Bryan v. State, 62 Ga. 179; Smith v. State, 62 Ga. 663; Walker v. Commonwealth, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 969; Com. v. Hall, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 593; Com. v. McGorty. 114 Mass. 299; Com. v. Chilson, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 15; Davis v. People, 1 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 447; Knickerbocker v. People, 43 N. Y. 177; Stuart v. People, 42 Mich. 255.

An instruction that one found in the possession of property recently stolen is presumed to be the thief, and if he fails to account for his possession in a manner consistent with his innocence, the presumption becomes conclusive against him, is properly given in a case where there is no evidence as to the good character of the defendant. State v. Kennedy, 88 Mo. 341.

Recent Possession of a part of the stolen property is presumptive evidence that the possessor stole the whole of it. State v. Owens, 79 Mo. 619.

Where a burglary has been committed, and money, goods, or other property which was in the house at the time of the burglary is soon thereafter found in the possession of a person who is unable to account for his possession, it raises a presumption of his guilt, and the jury would be authorized to find a verdict of guilty. Lundy v. State, 71 Ga. 360.

An instruction that the jury may find the prisoner guilty of burglary, if they believe from the evidence that a burglary was committed in the store of M., and that a pistol was stolen at the time of the commission of such burglary, and that said pistol was thereafter found in the possession of the prisoner, and that it does not appear from the evidence how the prisoner came into the possession of said pistol otherwise than by such burglary or stealing, and that he has not accounted for the recent possession thereof, is correct. Harris v. State, 61 Miss. 304; Stokes v. State, 58 Miss. 680.

On an indictment for burglary, it appeared that the owner of a store left the defendant and two other persons lying on the piazza thereof when he went home; that he tried to get them to go to their dinner, but they declined; that, on his return an hour or two later, he found the store broken open and goods stolen; that he caused the three to be followed, and found them that night, seven or eight miles away, with the stolen goods in their possession, the defendant having some of the stolen snuff. Held, that this was sufficient to authorize a conviction of burglary. Wilkerson v. State, 73 Ga. 799.

Possession of Burglarious Tools.—To connect the defendant with the crime, burglars' tools, found on his person, in his dwelling, or otherwise in his possession may be produced, together with evidence of the attending circumstances. Even tools not adapted to the particular burglary may be exhibited when found with those which are. Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 151. See Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582; Com. v. Tivnon, 8 Gray (Mass.), 375; People v. Larned, 7 N. Y. 445; Knickerbocker v. People, 43 N. Y. 177; State v. Harrold, 33 Mo. 496; Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705; People v. Winters, 29 Cal. 658.

Where defendants were arrested only a few hours after the commission of the burglary with which they were charged, it was competent to prove that burglars' tools were found upon one of them when arrested. State v. Franks, 64 Iowa. 39.

The defendant was charged with burglary for entering the house, room, shop, warehouse, store, and building of S., with intent then and there to commit larceny, and was convicted of attempting to commit the crime. It appeared that S. owned the building, and that he occupied the first floor as a banking office and rented the second and third floors to tenants; that in consequence of the discovery of supposed indications of a design on the part of some person or persons to force an opening into the vault of the bank located in said building, certain police officers had been stationed where they could readily detect any one entering the building on the night of the arrest of the defendant, and that the defendant entered the building and was arrested on the second floor in a closet; and from an inspection of the premises, it appeared that in a closet over the bank vault, a trap-door about two feet wide and two and a half feet long had been sawed out of the floor and then fastened down with screws, so that it might be opened without making much, if any noise; and under the trap-door and on top of the vault there was found a large quantity of burglars' tools and a hole in the vault of the depth of two feet; and other tools, of a similar character, were found in the defendant's trunk in a room occupied by him in San Francisco. Held, the tools found in the excavation over the vault, and also those found in the appellant's trunk, were admissible in evidence. People v. Hope, 62 Cal. 291. See Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 582.

Nature of Offence of Having Possession of Implements of Housebreaking.—This offence consists in the possession merely without lawful excuse of the implements mentioned. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 387. It is not necessary to allege or to prove at the trial an intent to commit a felony. R. v. Bailey, 1 Dears. C. C. R. 244; 23 L. J., M. C. 13. Where only one is in possession of the implements, the possession by him is possession by all. R. v. Thompson, 11 Cox, C. C. 362 (C. C. R.).

If a man is found with an implement of housebreaking in his possession, a general burglarious intent is sufficient to constitute an offence against the second clause of the 58th section, 24 and 25 Vict. c. 96, but if he is armed with any other weapon, there must be proof of an intent to break into some particular house in order to constitute an offence against the first branch of the 58th section. R. v. Jarrald, per Crompton, J., 1 L. & C. 306.

What are Implements of Housebreaking.—Keys are implements of housebreaking; for though commonly used for lawful purposes, they are capable of being employed for purposes of housebreaking, and it is a question for the jury whether the person found in possession of them by night had them without lawful excuse, and with the intention of using them as implements of housebreaking. R. v. Oldham, 2 Den. C. C. R. 472; 21 L. J., M. C. 134.

Value of Property.—It is not necessary that an indictment for burglary with intent to commit theft should describe the property it was the intention of the accused to steal. Summers v. State, 9 Tex. App. 392; Kelly v. State, 72 Ala. 244.

That the use of corn as food for horses and mules constitutes value, is a fact which all men are presumed to know; and the court may charge the jury that they may conclude the corn was valuable, if the proof shows that it was used to feed horses or mules; and cir-

12. Minor Offence—Larceny.—If the prosecutor fail in his attempt to prove the breaking and entry of the dwelling-house, but the indictment charge the prisoner with a larceny committed there, he may be convicted of the larceny, simple or compound, according to the circumstances of the case.[1] cumstantial proof being sufficient, if strong and convincing to the satisfaction of the jury, may refuse to instruct them that the fact that the corn had value must "be positively proved by the evidence." Miller v. State, 77 Ala. 41.

Where an information for larceny states only the collective value of sundry silver coins alleged to have been stolen, and then describes the coins as follows, to wit: "Current as money in the State of Kansas, consisting of five-cent pieces of nickel, commonly called 'nickels;' of quarter-dollar silver pieces, commonly called 'quarters;' of ten-cent silver pieces, commonly called 'dimes;' of half-dollar pieces, commonly called 'half-dollars;' of one-dollar silver pieces, commonly called 'dollars;' of certain foreign coins of various denominations;" and further alleges that "a more particular description of any and of all such money cannot be given, as informant has no means of obtaining knowledge." Held, the information contains a sufficiently definite description of the property alleged to have been stolen, and if the defendant is convicted of stealing only a part thereof, and the jury find and in their verdict return the value of the part so stolen, judgment may be legally rendered upon the verdict. State v. McAnulty, 26 Kan. 533.

1. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 385; 1 Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 449; Whar. C. L. (9th Ed.) § 819; Whar. Cr. Pl. & Pr. (8th Ed.) §§ 244, 289; Harris v. State, 61 Miss. 304; Barber v. State, 78 Ala. 19; Bell v. State, 48 Ala. 684; Wolf v. State, 49 Ala. 359; Bush v. State, 65 Ga. 658; Berry v. State, 10 Ga. 511; Davis v. State, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 77; State v. Owens, 79 Mo. 619; State v. Alexander, 56 Mo. 131; State v. Turner, 63 Mo. 436; State v. Barker, 64 Mo. 282; State v. Davis, 73 Mo. 129; State v. Bruffey, 75 Mo. 389; State v. Martin, 76 Mo. 337; State v. Kelsoe, 76 Mo. 505; State v. Brandon, 7 Kan. 106; State v. Hayden, 45 Iowa, 11; Tobin v. People, 104 Ill. 565; s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 555; State v. Colter, 6 R. I. 195; State v. Squires, 11 N. H. 37; Com. v. Hope, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Crowley v. Commonwealth, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 575; Dunham v. State, 9 Tex. App. 330; Shepherd v. State, 42 Tex. 501; Wilcox v. State, 31 Tex. 586; Clarke v. Commonwealth, 25 Gratt (Va.) 908; Speers v. Commonwealth, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 570; Com. v. Brown, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 207; Stoops v. Commonwealth, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 491; Breese v. State, 12 Ohio St. 146; State v. Ah Sam, 7 Nev. 127. Compare People v. Garnett, 29 Cal. 622.

Mr. Roscoe says: "Where the prisoner was charged with breaking and entering the house of the prosecutor, and stealing 60l. therein, and the jury found that he was not guilty of breaking and entering the house in the night, but that he was guilty of stealing the money in the dwelling-house; upon a case reserved, it was resolved by the judges, after some doubt, that by this finding the prisoner was ousted of his clergy, for the indictment contained every charge necessary upon the statute 12 Anne c. 7 (repealed), viz., a stealing in the dwelling-house to the amount of 40s., and the jury had found him guilty of that charge. R. v. Withal, 2 East P. C. 517; 1 Leach, 88. In a similar case the verdict given by the jury was, 'not guilty of burglary, but guilty of stealing above the value of 40s. in the dwelling-house,' and the entry made by the officer was in the same words. On a case reserved, the judges held the finding sufficient to warrant a capital judgment. They agreed that if the officer were to draw up the verdict in form, he must do so according to the plain sense and meaning of the jury, which admitted of no doubt; and that the minute was only for the future direction of the officer, and to show that the jury found the prisoner guilty of the larceny only. But many of the judges said that when it occurred to them they should direct the verdict to be entered, 'not guilty of the breaking and entering in the night, but guilty of the stealing,' etc., as that was more distinct and correct. It appeared, upon inquiry, to be the constant course on every circuit in England, upon an indictment for murder, where the party was only convicted of manslaughter, to enter the verdict, 'not guilty of murder, but guilty of manslaughter,' or, 'not guilty of murder, but guilty of feloniously killing and slaying,' and yet murder includes the killing. The judges added that the whole verdict must be taken together, and that the jury must not be made to say that the prisoner is not guilty generally, where they find him expressly guilty of part of the charge, or to appear to speak contradictory by means of the officers using a technical term, when the verdict is sensible and intelligent in itself. R. v. Hungerford, 2 East P. C. 518.

"It was formerly thought that if several were jointly indicted for burglary and larceny, and no breaking and entering were proved against one, he could not be convicted of larceny and the others of burglary. R. v. Turner, 1 Sid. 171; 2 East P. C. 519. But in a later case, where one prisoner pleaded guilty and the other two were found guilty of the larceny only, the judges, on a case reserved, differed in opinion. Seven of them resolved that judgment should be entered against all the three prisoners, against him who had pleaded guilty for the burglary and capital larceny, and against the other two for the capital larceny. Burrough, J., and Hullock. B., were of a different opinion, but Hullock thought that if a nolle prosequi were entered as to the burglary, judgment might be given against all the three for the capital larceny. The seven judges thought that there might be cases in which, upon a joint larceny by several, the offence of one might be aggravated by burglary in him alone, because he might have broken the house in the night, in the absence and without the knowledge of the others, in order to come afterwards and effect the larceny, and the others might have joined in the larceny without knowing of the previous breaking. R. v. Butterworth, Russ. & Ry. 520.

"Although a prisoner may be convicted of the larceny only, yet if the larceny was committed on a previous day, and not on the day of the supposed burglary, he cannot be convicted of such larceny. This point having been reserved for the opinion of the judges, they said: 'The indictment charges the prisoner with burglariously breaking and entering the house and stealing the goods, and most unquestionably that charge may be modified by showing that they stole the goods without breaking open the door; but the charge now proposed to be introduced goes to connect the prisoners with an antecedent felony committed before three o'clock, at which time, it is clear, they had not entered the house. Having tried without effect to convict them of breaking and entering the house, and stealing the goods, you must admit that they neither broke the house nor stole the goods on the day mentioned in the indictment; but to introduce the proposed charge, it is said that they stole the goods on a former day, and that their being found in the house is evidence of it. But this is surely a distinct transaction; and it might as well be proposed to prove any felony which these prisoners committed in this house seven years ago, as the present.' R. v. Vandercomb, 2 Leach, 708."

An indictment for burglary with intent to steal is not bad for duplicity because it contains allegations of facts constituting larceny. The charge of stealing may be regarded as a mere pleading of evidence or surplusage which might properly have been introduced to support the charge of an intent to steal. State v. Shaffer, 59 Iowa, 290.

A party cannot be guilty of robbery and of having received the same goods obtained by the robbery, knowing them to have been so obtained, where there is but a single transaction involved; and a verdict finding him guilty of the robbery, and of the larceny of the goods so taken, and of receiving them, knowing them to have been stolen or acquired by robbery, is inconsistent. The latter offence imports a subsequent and distinct transaction from the robbery, and involves some other person who had previously obtained the property by robbery. Tobin v. People, 104 Ill. 565; s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 555. See Gilbert v. State, 65 Ga. 449.

It is no objection to an indictment that it charges both burglary and theft, but a conviction cannot be had for both offences when thus charged in the same indictment, nor can a separate punishment be assessed for each, nor a joint punishment be assessed for both. Miller v. State, 16 Tex. App. 417; s. c., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 94.

An indictment for burglary and theft, though consisting of but one count, may be insufficient to charge the burglary, and yet be sufficient to charge the theft; and it was not error to allow the prosecution, after the evidence was closed, to dismiss as to the charge of burglary and proceed as to that of theft. Burglary and theft may be conjointly charged in a single count, and it is immaterial that the theft is alleged to have been committed from a house. Dunham v. State, 9 Tex. App. 330.

A verdict in a prosecution for burglary and larceny declared defendants "guilty in manner and form as charged in the indictment," and assessed the punishment, but failed to say of which offence the defendants were found guilty. Held,

13. Plea of Autrefois Acquit.—In considering the evidence upon the plea of autrefois acquit in burglary, some difficulty occurs from the complex nature of that offence, and from some contrariety in the decisions. The correct rule appears to be, that an acquittal upon an indictment for burglary in breaking and entering and stealing goods cannot be pleaded in bar to an indictment for burglary in the same dwelling-house, and on the same night, with intent to steal, on the ground that the several offences described in the two indictments cannot be said to be the same.[1] (See JEOPARDY.)

BURIAL. See SEPULTURE.[2]

BURIAL-GROUNDS. See CEMETERIES.

BURLAPS, as used in the revenue statutes, does not in commercial usage, by which descriptive terms applied to articles of commerce must be construed, mean "oil-cloth foundations" or "floor-cloth canvas."[3]

BURN. See ARSON.

BURNING-FLUID, in a policy of insurance, does not mean every fluid that will burn. It does not include kerosene.[4] It denotes a mixture of camphene and alcohol, and means a recognized article known as "burning-fluid," and a different article from naphtha or kerosene."[5] that it was nevertheless good. State v. Butterfield, 75 Mo. 297. Compare Roberts v. State, 55 Miss. 421.

On a trial for burglary, the reasonable doubt which would acquit the prisoner is whether or not he is guilty of that offence, and not whether he is guilty of larceny from the house. Bush v. State, 65 Ga. 658.

In a prosecution for burglary with intent to commit theft, it is incumbent on the court to give in charge to the jury the law of theft, as well as that of burglary. Castenada v. State, 11 Tex. App. 390.

1. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 386. A full discussion of autrefois acquit will be found under the title JEOPARDY.

Authorities for Burglary. — Roscoe's Cr. Ev.; Russell on Cr.; Bishop's Cr. L.; Bishop's Cr. Proc.; Desty's Cr. L.; Wharton's Cr. L.; Wharton's Cr. Ev.; Wharton's Cr. Pl. & Pr.; Chitty's Cr. L.; Harris Cr. L. (Force's Ed.) Malone's Cr. Briefs; Am. Cr. Rep.; Heard's Cr. L.; Archbold's Cr. Pr. & Pl. (Pomeroy's Ed.).

2. Places of Burial, in a statute empowering the queen in council to order certain acts under the directions of church-wardens or such other persons as may have the care of "any vaults or places of burial," means "those which may be called public burial-places, and which still retain the character of burial-places, and have that permanent impress upon them, by reason of their having been devoted, either by consecration, by trust deed, or otherwise, to the purpose of interment, and which are kept and taken care of as such. The terms which the legislature have used in giving power to make the order on 'the church-wardens or such other persons as may have the care of any vaults or places of burial,' point to places irrevocably devoted to that particular purpose." Foster v. Dodd, 7 B. & S. 169.

Used for Burials, in an act declaring that "no ground not already used as or appropriated for a cemetery shall be used for burials," etc., "are words commonly understood to refer, and which properly refer, to actual burials within the ground," and do not mean merely "used as a cemetery." Lord Cowley v. Byas, 5 Ch. Div. 951.

3. Arthur v. Cumming et al., 1 Otto (U. S.), 362.

4. Mark v. Nat'l Fire Ins. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.), 569.

5. Putnam v. Com. Ins. Co., 4 Fed. Repr. 764, 766.

Camphene, Spirit-Gas, or any Burning-Fluid.—In this construction the words

BURST. See note 1.

BUSHEL.—According to the standard of weights and measures prepared for the use of custom-houses, a bushel is a measure containing 77.6274 pounds avoirdupois of distilled water at the temperature of the maximum density of water and barometer 30 inches at 62 deg. Fahr. This is the same as the Winchester bushel, and contains 2150.42 cubic inches.[2]

BUSINESS.—The word "business" embraces everything about which a person can be employed.[3] It is a word of large signification and denotes the employment or occupation in which a person is engaged to procure a living.[4] It is frequently used as synonymous with "occupation," and signifies more than the mere doing of acts which are usually done by persons engaged in the pursuit of a particular calling.[5] In the Sunday laws the terms "business" and "employment" as used are synonymous, signifying that which occupies the time, attention, and labor of men for the "burning-fluid" must be held to mean only such burning-fluids as are in their nature like camphene or spirit-gas, and the court will not take judicial notice that "benzine" is such a fluid. It is a question of fact for the jury. Mears v. Humboldt Ins. Co., 92 Pa. St. 19; Wheeler v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co., 6 Mo. App. 235.

1. Bursting of Boiler, in an insurance policy, is synonymous with "explosion." "Notwithstanding learned authors and scientific men may make a distinction, there is no difference in the ordinary understanding of the meaning of these words. When it is stated that there has been an explosion of the boiler of a steamboat or a locomotive, the fact is stated in either or both forms. It is a common, perhaps not a refined expression, that the boiler has burst. Others would say that there has been an explosion. The ordinary idea I take to be, that the explosion is the cause while the rupture is the effect. It would be quite unsafe, in construing a commercial instrument, where strict technical terms are not looked for, to hold these two words as having different meanings. I think the parties understood them as synonymous, and supposed, when they interpreted the peril from the bursting of a boiler, that they thereby included that of an explosion of a boiler. Webster gives the definition thus: 'To explode; to burst forth as sound; to burst and expand with force and a violent report, as an elastic fluid.' He defines burst, 'to break or rend by force or violence.' There is no difference in these definitions." Case quoted in Browne's "Judic. Interp. of Com. Wds. & Phr.," "Bursting."

2. Caldwell, Hunter & Co. v. Dawson, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 123.

3. Parker Mills v. Comm'rs of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 244. "It is true, the doing of a single act pertaining to a particular business will not be considered engaging in or carrying on the business; yet a series of such acts would be so considered." Harris v. State, 50 Ala. 130.

4. Goddard v. Chaffee, 2 Allen (Mass.), 395. "The plaintiff is a musician and has for some years been employed in playing upon musical instruments, as a member of military and quadrille bands. He has in that way obtained his whole support and livelihood, has been engaged in no other pursuit, and has had no other trade or employment. That therefore is his business."

5. Hoagland v. Segur, 38 N. J. L. 237. "The sum of $10,000 is made payable on the breach by the defendant of his covenant 'to abandon, abstain from, and not engage in the business of banking.' The term 'business' is not used here to denote the single act of receiving deposits, but the aggregation of acts which fairly constitute the occupation of a banker." Where a statute defines a broker as one "whose business it is" to make sales, purchases, etc., "it is only when making sales and purchases in his business, his trade, his profession, his means of getting his living, or of making his fortune, that he becomes a broker within the meaning of the statute." Warren v. Shook, 1 Otto (U. S.), 711.

purpose of a livelihood or profit. Business is here used in the sense of a calling for the purpose of a livelihood.[1]

1. Moore v. State, 16 Ala. 413.

Labor, Business, Work.—The loaning of money comes within the prohibition against "labor, business, or work" on Sunday. Troewert v. Decker, 51 Wis. 47; Meader v. White, 66 Me. 91. And the making of contracts generally: "Could there be clearer evidence that the words 'work' and 'labor,' one or both of which are found in each of these acts save that of Pennsylvania, were not, in the opinion of law-makers, synonymous with, or so comprehensive as, the word 'business,' and that, consequently, this last word was employed to embrace what the two former did not include? And when it is remembered that neither in their strict sense nor popular signification are the words 'work' and 'labor' appropriate to describe the mere making of a contract, can it reasonably be doubted that it is the word 'business,' in these several laws, by which it was intended to embrace contracts, and which has had the effect to prohibit them?" Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 402. So of the execution of a bond. Pattee v. Greely, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 286.

There is nothing in the position of the word "business" between "work" and "labor" to show that its meaning should be confined to such business as is manual. Fennell v. Ridler, 5 B. & C. 407, 408.

Trade, Business.—Where a lessee covenanted not to exercise any "trade or business" on the demised premises, it was held that using them for a schoolhouse was a violation of his covenant. "I do not think that the meaning of the parties can be fairly confined to trade, because they have used in addition the word 'business,' which must be intended of something not falling within the description of 'trade'." Doe v. Keeling, 1 M. & S. 100.

A covenant in a lease not to exercise specified "trades or businesses" is not broken by the use of the house as a private lunatic asylum. "Now it commences with prohibiting trades as well as businesses, two words which may be synonymous or may have a different meaning. . . . Every trade is a business, but every business is not a trade; to answer that description it must be conducted by buying and selling, which the business of a lunatic asylum is not." Doe dem. Wetherill v. Bird, 2 Ad. & El. 161. But a hospital the patients of which make small payments according to their means was held a "business" in the construction of a similar lease. "The question whether it is a business carried on for the purposes of profit or not is not, in my opinion, material. Even if it is not strictly a 'business,' it is, at all events, 'in the nature' of a business. But I am distinctly of opinion that this is a 'business' within the terms and meaning of the covenant." Bramwell v. Lacy, 10 Ch. Div. 695.

Farming is a "business that has for its object the acquisition of gain" within the meaning of the Companies Act, 1862, 25 and 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 4. "With respect to the word 'business' it is needless to refer to authorities, though they might be easily produced to show that the word has a more extensive meaning than 'trade.' Farming is a 'business,' though it cannot properly be called a 'trade,' which word has a technical meaning connected with buying and selling for gain and is so limited." Harris v. Amery, Harr. & Ruth. 366; s. c., L. R. 1 C. P. 154.

The provisions in a statute with reference to a married woman engaging in "trade or business as a feme sole" contemplate trade or business other than that specifically regulated by the statute, and "contracts made in the course of such trade or business" are distinct from those enumerated in the statute as within her capacity as a feme covert. Duncan v. Robertson, 58 Miss. 396.

The opening of a public-house is not a breach of a covenant in a lease against carrying on certain specified "trades or businesses" or any other business that might be offensive, etc. Jones v. Thorne, 1 B. & C. 715.

Business, Occupation.—A debtor employed as a clerk in a bank is one "carrying on business." "If I had to decide whether this man's employment was more properly described as a 'business' or an 'occupation,' I might think that the latter would be the more appropriate term. But 'business' is the larger term, and I think it includes his employment." Ex parte Breeull, 16 Ch. Div. 488.

All Business.—In a submission "of all business of whatever kind in dispute between the parties," prosecutions for assaults and batteries are included. Noble v. Preble, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 322; 1 Wheel. Am. C. L. 423.

A power of attorney made to B to act in "all my business as if I were personally present, and to stand good in law, on all my lands and other business," does not authorize the sale of land and the making of binding covenants in relation thereto. "The power does not give the least hint as to what this business is. . . . There is such a thing as a power being void for uncertainty; and this one is nearly so." Ashley v. Bird, 1 Mo. 457.

Business of a Court.—A judicial sale is not the "business" of a court within the meaning of the Rev. Stat. declaring that no court shall be opened or transact any business in any city or town on the day of elections. King v. Platt, 37 N. Y. 155.

The regulation of fees is a matter relating to the "business of a court of civil judicature" within the meaning of a statute. "There is nothing to limit the words . . . to that which is strictly the judicial business of such court." Palmer v. Powell, 6 M. & W. 636.

Business Corporation.—A railroad corporation is a "business corporation" within the meaning of the thirty-seventh section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867. "'The provisions of this act shall apply to all moneyed business or commercial corporations.' To attempt to limit the word 'business' in this clause of the statute so as merely to be synonymous with 'trading' would deprive it of any meaning beyond that included in the other words 'moneyed and commercial.' A trading corporation is a commercial corporation. The word 'business' has a broader meaning as applied to corporations." Adams v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S.), 35; Winter v. Iowa, etc., R. Co., 2 Dill. (U. S.) 487.

So is an insurance company. In re Independent Ins. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S.), 103; Sibline v. Hercules Assur. Soc., 5 Am. L. T. Rep. 400; s. c., 16 Int. Rev. Rec. 148. See also 5 Abb. Nat. Dig. 71, § 431.

Doing Business.—An insurance company that has ceased to issue new policies, but collects premiums and pays losses on old ones, is to be considered as "doing business" within the meaning of a statute. Smyth v. Intern. Life Assur. Co. of London, 35 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 126; s. c., 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 11.

A railroad 455 miles long, 42 miles of which are in a State other than that in which it was incorporated, is "doing business" in the former State. Erie R. Co. v. Pa., 21 Wall. (U. S.) 492.

In People v. Horn Silver Mining Co. (N. Y.), 7 Cent. Rep. 223, the court says: "We cannot construe the words 'doing business in this State' to mean the whole business of the corporation within this State; and while we are not prepared to hold that an occasional business transaction—that keeping an office where meetings of the directors are held, transfer books kept, dividends declared and paid, and other business merely incidental to the regular business of the corporation is done—would bring a corporation within this act; yet when, as in this case, all these things are done, and in addition thereto a substantial part of the regular business of the corporation is carried on here, then we are unable to say that the corporation is not brought within the act as 'one doing business in this State.'"

A married woman who owns a farm and carries it on for the support of her family or her husband's family is one doing "business on her separate account" within the meaning of a statute. Snow v. Sheldon, 126 Mass. 334.

In and about Business.—Things not peculiar to a business, but kept really and bona fide for the purpose of the trade and not for pleasure, pass under a settlement of "all things belonging to A in and about his or her business." Dean v. Brown, 5 B. & C. 338.

Mercantile Business.—"The phrase 'mercantile business' has a definite meaning. It refers to the buying and selling of articles of merchandise as an employment. It implies operations conducted with a view of realizing the profits which come from skilful purchase, barter, speculation, and sale." Graham v. Hendricks, 22 La. Ann. 524, where it was held not to apply to the purchase of a lot of cotton by a Mississippi railroad company from a Louisiana party.

More Hazardous Business.—A stipulation in a policy of insurance that if the building be devoted to a "more hazardous business" the policy should be void is not infringed upon by lighting the building with gasoline, named as increasing the risk. "If a means of lighting the building in which the business of the assured is carried on can be deemed the business itself, then the rule covers the case and the policy is avoided. But this cannot be held to be the meaning of the parties." Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Coatesville Shoe Factory, 80 Pa. 407.

Office of Business, within the 6 and 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, means "the place where the party sought to be charged with the bill actually carries on his business,

BUT.—The word "but" has two meanings. It may be synonymous with "in addition," "to boot," "moreover," or be used in the sense of "without this" or "except." [1]

BUTCHER.—See note 2.

BUY. (See also CHAMPERTY; MAINTENANCE; PURCHASE.)—To acquire the property, right, or title to, by paying a consideration or an equivalent, usually in money; to purchase; to negotiate or treat about a purchase.[3] either by himself or by an agent." Blandy v. De Burgh, 6 C. B. 639.

Other Business.—The words "other business" refer to business ejusdem generis as that mentioned before. Allen's Appeal, 81* Pa. St. 304; Reichard v. Duryea, 10 W. N. C. (Pa.) 189.

The phrase "transact such other business as may be prescribed by law," in a statutory power given to judges, "certainly includes such duties pertaining to judicial business as the legislature may deem it necessary for the judges to perform with a view to the efficient administration of justice or for the protection of the rights of litigants and others who are to be affected by legal proceedings." State v. Tolle, 71 Mo. 650.

See also notes under CARRY; COURSE; OFFENSIVE; PLACE; UNDERTAKE; and the titles of the various professions.

1. Abbott v. Middleton, 7 H. L. Cas. 116. See also Union Pap. Bag Mac. Co. v. Newell, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 383.

2. The business of a butcher may include in it the cutting up and selling by retail the carcasses of animals slaughtered by him; but proof that a person buys the bodies of animals slaughtered for meat, and cuts them up and retails them at a market stall, is not of itself sufficient to constitute him a butcher, within the meaning of a revenue law requiring any person engaged in that business to take out a license. "We have to disregard the true meaning and origin of the word, as explained in dictionaries, if we hold that he who buys the bodies of animals that have been slaughtered for meat, and cuts them up and retails them, without more, becomes thereby a butcher or engaged in the business of a butcher." Henback v. State, 53 Ala. 523.

But a covenant in a lease that the lessee shall not exercise "the trade or business of a butcher" upon the premises is broken by there selling raw meat by retail, although no beasts were there slaughtered. "There are in many markets butchers' shops where no animal ever is or can be slaughtered, and yet without doubt the persons occupying them carry on the trade of butchers there." "These acts [the 24 Hen. VIII., c. 3 & 27 Hen. VIII., c. 9] appear to have used the term 'butchers' and 'person selling flesh by retail' as synonymous." Doe v. Spry, 1 B. & Ald. 617.

3. Web. Dict.

Buy Off.—(a) To influence to compliance; to cause to bend or yield by some consideration. (b) To detach by a consideration given; as, to buy off one from a party.

Buy Out.—(a) To buy off or detach from. (b) To purchase the share or shares of stock in a fund, or partnership, by which the seller is separated from the company, and the purchaser takes his place.

Buy In.—To purchase stock in any fund or partnership.

Buy on Credit.—To purchase on a promise, in fact or in law; to make payment at a future day.

Buy the Refusal.—To give money for the right of purchasing at a fixed price at a future time. Web. Dict.

Power to Buy.—Where an agent is employed to buy goods, his acknowledgment of having received them is evidence of delivery to the buyer. Biggs et al. v. Lawrence, 3 T. R. 454.

Proposals to Buy, sell, or procure lottery tickets, in statute. State v. Sykes, 28 Conn. 226.

Buyer.—The duties of one employed as a "lace buyer." Price v. Mouat, 11 C. B. N. S. 508.

Buyer's Option.—The order of a customer to a broker to buy stock "on a sixty days' buyer's option" does not authorize the broker to buy the stock himself and hold it on his customer's account for sixty days. Pickering v. Demerritt, 100 Mass. 416.

Buying.—The words of the statute, 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2, ". . . trade of living by buying and selling," include every species of buying and selling, whether legal or illegal. Cobb v. Symonds, 5 B. & Ald. 518.

BY.—Near ;[1] besides; passing; in presence ; along ;[2] through ; with. It is a term of exclusion.[3]

Attorneys forbidden to buy things in action. See ATTORNEY AND CLIENT ; CHAMPERTY ; MAINTENANCE.

Buying Counterfeits.—Under a statute against buying "a false or counterfeit coin, . . ." the offence is possible only when the counterfeits have been furnished ready for circulation. R. v. Bradford, 2 Craw. & Dix. C. C. 41.

Buying of Pleas.—See MAINTENANCE.

Buying Office.—See OFFICERS.

Buying Pretended Titles.—See ADVERSE POSSESSION; CHAMPERTY, sec. 8; DEED.

Buying Stolen Property.—See RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

Buying Wife.—The public selling and buying of a wife has been held in England to be a common-law crime. Rex v. Delaval, 3 Burr. 1434. 1438; 4 Blk. Com. 64. note; Comm. v. Sharpless, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 91, 102.

1. Rankin v. Woodworth, 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 48. "The word 'by,' when used descriptively in a grant, does not mean 'in immediate contact with,' but 'near' to the object to which it relates. And 'near' is a relative term, meaning, when used in land patents, very unequal and different distances." Wilson v. Inloes, 6 Gill (Md.), 121.

2. Peaslee v. Gee, 19 N. H. 273; Bailey v. White, 41 N. H. 337.

3. Rankin v. Woodworth, 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 48; Boadley v. Rice, 13 Me. 201; Bonney v. Morrill, 53 Me. 253; Wells v. Iron Co., 48 N. H. 491.

Abide By.—A stipulation in an arbitration bond that the parties will abide by the award of the arbitrators means only that the parties will await the award, without revoking it, and not that they will acquiesce in it when made. Shaw v. Hatch, 6 N. H. 162. See Haubert v. Haworth, 78 Pa. St. 78.

By his Agent —In a suit on a promissory note, an averment in the declaration that A by his agent B made it is a sufficient averment that A is the maker. Childress v. Emory, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 642.

Authorized by Law, in a statute, means by the law of the State where the statute is enacted. Com. v. Dean, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 329.

By Authority.—A volume of the laws of another State with "by authority" printed upon the title-page is admissible in evidence to prove the laws of that State. Merrifield v. Robbins, 8 Gray. 150.

In a dissenting opinion, Rogers, J., in Com. v. Binns, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 237, held that the printing of "by authority" at the head of the laws of the United States in a newspaper was an assertion of the official character of the editor inconsistent with the holding of the office of alderman under the State.

Bound by Surety.—A statute requiring a party appealing to be "bound with surety" was construed "bound by surety," so that it was not necessary for him to join in the recognizance. Cavence v. Butler, 6 Binn. 52; Boyce v. Wilkins, 5 S. & R. 329.

By a Certain Time.—A contract to finish work by November must be completed before November. When a thing is ordered by a particular day, it is with a view of having the use of it on that day. The import of the word as explained by our great lexicographer is 'near; besides; passing; in presence'—all of which denote exclusion." Rankin v. Woodworth, 3 P. & W. 48.

Where the contract was to deliver goods by a certain day, and the declaration stated that they were to be delivered on or before that day, there was held to be no variance. Coonley v. Anderson, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 519.

An order of court to file certain papers by a certain day is complied with by filing them on that day. Higley v. Gilmer, 3 Montana, 433.

In a rule to plead by a particular day, that day was construed to continue until the office was open next morning. Oxley v. Bridge, 1 Doug. 67. See Jemmet v. Voyer, Barnes 296.

By the Consent of the Company.—Where an insurance policy can only be assigned by the consent of the company, an assignment with the consent of the secretary is good. Conover v. Ins. Co., 1 N. Y. 290.

By the Court.—This phrase appended to a chamber order does not make it an order of the court. Marty v. Ahl, 5 Minn. 27.

By the Drink.—Retailing spirituous liquors by the drink must be in quantities not exceeding a quart, and no jury would fail to understand that such was the meaning of a judge using the expression. Sappinton v. Carter, 67 Ill. 482.

By Estimation.—A phrase frequently used in conveyances in reference to the quantity of land intended to be conveyed where it is not accurately ascertained by measurement. Rapalje's Law Dict.; Bouv. Law Dict. See MORE OR LESS.

By the Final Judgment.—An agreement to stay suit, and that it shall be settled and determined by the final judgment in another pending suit, is not a bar to the first.

By Force.—Where this term is used in a statute defining rape, the substitution of "violently" for it in an indictment vitiates the latter. State v. Blake, 39 Me. 322. Contra, Com. v. Fogerty, 8 Gray (Mass.), 489.

In an information alleging the seizure of a certain foreign vessel for being found within a league of the coast with certain spirits on board, "whereby and by force of the statute, etc., said vessel became forfeited," the last clause is surplusage. Atty.-Gen. v. Le Revet, 6 M. & W. 405.

By, From, or Under.—The entry and seizure of the goods of a vessel by a tax-collector is not a breach of a covenant of quiet enjoyment without let, etc., by the lessor or any person lawfully claiming by, from, or under him. Stanley v. Hayes, 3 Q. B. 105.

By a Highway.—By the use of this term as a boundary in the description in a deed, the land to the middle of the highway, if the grantor owns so far, passes. Angell on Highways, 315; Railroad Co. v. Gould (Md.), 10 Eastern Rep. 780; s. c., 7 Cent. Rep. 379.

By Him.—The bond of a contractor, required by statute, that he will pay all laborers employed by him does not provide for the payment of laborers employed by a person to whom the work is sublet by him. McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 593.

Known by.—An indictment is sufficiently precise and formal which avers that the accused is known by the complainant instead of known to. Com. v. Griffin, 105 Mass. 175.

By Land of.—To express a boundary in a deed is a term of exclusion, unless by necessary implication manifestly used in a different sense. Wells v. Iron Co., 48 N. H. 491. It does not mean over or across, but along the line of. Peaslee v. Gee, 19 N. H. 273; Bailey v. White, 41 N. H. 337. But see Wilson v. Inloes, 6 Gill (Md.), 121.

By Means.—Allegations in an indictment that goods were obtained "under color and pretence of a purchase" and "under the false and fraudulent pretence" are substantially equivalent to an averment that they were obtained "by means of false pretence." Com. v. Walker, 108 Mass. 309.

"By whose means," in an act making the person by whose means a pauper is brought into a State liable for his support, means "by whose procurement or instigation." A common carrier who transports the pauper is not within the act. Fitchburg v. R. Co., 110 Mass. 210.

By Night.—In an indictment for burglary under a statute a general description "by night" is sufficient; it is not necessary to allege any particular hour of the night. State v. Robinson, 6 Vr. (N. J.) 71.

Where night is defined in a statute "to commence at the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and conclude at the beginning of the first hour before sunrise," an indictment is good which says, "by night, after the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and before the beginning of the first hour before sunrise." Cureton v. The Queen, 1 B. & S. 218.

By the People.—The canvassing of the votes for a constitutional amendment, and the declaration of the result by the board of canvassers, is its adoption by the people within the meaning of an article providing when an amendment to the constitution shall go into effect. Real v. People, 42 N. Y. 270; People v. Gardiner, 45 N. Y. 812.

By a Sea.—Where a steamer encountered a storm and the waves caused it to roll tremendously, so that cattle on board were violently thrown down and killed, the loss was held to be "caused directly by a sea" within the meaning of a marine-insurance policy. The risk contemplated was some effect of a sea upon the vessel, and was not limited to mean a blow by one or more particular waves on the vessel. Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458.

By a Stream.—A grant of land bounded by a fresh-water stream, whether navigable or not, conveys the land ad medium filum aquæ. Steamboat Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 109. But see Thomas v. Hatch, 3 Sumner (C. C.), 170; Bowman v. Wathen, 2 McL. (C. C.), 376.

By Virtue of his Employment.—A clerk intrusted to receive money at home from out-door collectors, but who received it abroad from out-door customers, receives it "by virtue of his employment" within an embezzlement statute. Rex v. Beechey, Russ. & Ry. 319.

By the Year.—A lease by the year is a lease for a year, and is not binding on the parties for a longer time. Pleasants v. Claghorn, 2 Miles (Pa.), 302.

BY-LAWS. (See also BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS; BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS; CORPORATIONS; DIRECTORS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; ORDINANCES; SOCIETIES.)

1. Definition.—A by-law is a law made by a corporation under authority of its charter or statute, or by an unincorporated association with the consent of its members, governing the members and all others over whom the corporation or association has a legal jurisdiction.[1]

The distinction between a by-law and a regulation of a private corporation is that a by-law binds the members only, while a regulation affects third persons dealing with the corporation.[2]

The by-laws of a municipal corporation are usually called ordinances, and they affect not only members, but all persons within the jurisdiction of the municipal authority.[3]

The by-laws or ordinances of a municipality are in effect local laws, enacted by the municipal authorities in the exercise of legislative powers.[4]

But the authority conferred upon a municipal corporation to make by-laws does not give it a general authority to make laws.[5]

2. Authority to Make By-laws.—The right to make by-laws is not always essential to a corporation; it is not even generally incident to a charitable corporation, for in that case they are supposed to emanate from its founder.[6]

But where there is a voluntary association for religious, chari-

1. "A by-law is a rule or law of a corporation for its government." Jones, P. J., in Drake v. Hudson R. R. Co., 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 539.

"This term has a peculiar and limited signification; being used to designate the orders and regulations which a corporation, as one of its legal incidents, has power to make, and which is usually exercised to regulate its own action and concerns, and the rights and duties of its members amongst themselves." Shaw, C. J. Comm. v. Turner, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 496.

"The office of a by-law is to regulate the conduct and define the duties of the members towards the corporation and between themselves." Flint v. Pierce, 99 Mass. 70.

"A by-law is a law made with due legal obligation by some authority less than the sovereign and Parliament, in respect of a matter specially or impliedly referred to that authority, and not provided for by the general law of the land." An Essay on By-laws, W. G. Lumley, Q C.

2. Morris & Essex R. Co. v. Ayers, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 393; State v. Overton, 24 N. J. L. 440; Compton v. R. Co., 34 N. J. 134.

3. Robinson v. Mayor, 1 Humph. 56; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 625; Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96; Dillon on Mun. Corp. § 244; Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 6 Cal. 190; St. Paul v. Coulter, 12 Minn. 41; Ashton v. Ellsworth, 48 Ill. 299; Mobile v. Yuille, 36 Am. Dec. 441; Tanner v. Trustees, 40 Am. Dec. 337; Floyd v. Comm'rs, 58 Am. Dec. 559.

4. Morawitz on Corp. 491; Village of St. Johnsbury v. Thompson, 9 Atl. Repr. 571.

5. Comm. v. Turner, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 493

6. Taylor on Private Corp. § 19; Angell & Ames on Corp. 330; Phillips v. Berry, 1 Lord Raymond. 8; Reg. v. Dulwich Coll., 8 E. L. & E. 385; Phillips Academy v. King, 12 Mass. 546.

table, or social purposes, or a chartered stock corporation, the majority of the members of the association or the stockholders have the right to pass any reasonable by-law within the corporate or associate purpose.[1]

Every stock corporation has implied authority to make by-laws.[2]

The power to make by-laws includes also the power to repeal them.[3]

The power to make by-laws resides in the members of the corporation, not in the directors, unless there be a law or usage to the contrary.[4]

But the stockholders or members may delegate this power to a select body,[5] consisting of an even less number than a majority of the members, and the by-laws may prescribe how many of these shall constitute a quorum.[6]

The directors are bound by the by-laws, and cannot alter or amend a by-law imposing limitations on their power.[7]

3. Validity.—In the case of a corporation, the by-laws must be adopted in the State where the charter is in force.[8] They must not conflict with the law of the land, whether constitutional,[9]

1. Came v. Brigham, 39 Me. 35; State v. Tudor, 5 Day (Conn.), 329; People v. Sailors' Snug Harbor, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 532; Poultney v. Bachman, 31 Hun (N. Y.), 49; German, etc., Congregation v. Pressler, 17 La. Ann. 128; Harrington v. Workingmen's Benev. Assoc., 70 Ga. 340; Security Loan Assoc. v. Lake, 69 Ala. 456; Dickenson v. Chamber of Commerce, 29 Wis. 45; State v. Milwaukee Ch. of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670; White v. Brownell, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 162; s. c., 2 Daly (N. Y.), 329; People v. Bd. of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; Fisher v. Bd. of Trade, 80 Ill. 85; Baxter v. Bd. of Trade, 83 Ill. 146; Sturges v. Bd. of Trade, 86 Ill. 441; People v. N. Y. Com. Assoc., 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 271; People v. Miller, 39 Hun (N. Y.), 557; St. Mary's, etc., Soc. v. Burford, 70 Pa. St. 321.

2. Martin v. Nash. Bldg. Assoc., 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 418; Child v. Hudson's Bay Co., 2 P. Wms. 207; Cahill v. Kalamazoo, etc., Co., 43 Am. Dec. 457; Drake v. Hudson R. R. Co., 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 508; City of London v. Vanacre, 1 Lord Raymond, 496; Dunston v. Imp. Gas Co., 3 B. & Ald. 125; Kearney v. Andrews, 2 Stock. Ch. (N. J.) 70.

3. Rex v. Westwood, 7 Dowl. & R. 267; s. c., 4 B. & C. 781; Rex v. Ashwell, 12 East, 22; Smith v. Nelson, 18 Vt. 511.

4. Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. 129; Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assoc., 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 418; Bank of Holly Springs v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421; State v. Curtis, 9 Nev. 335; Morton Gravel Rd. Co. v. Wysong, 51 Ind. 4; Carroll v. Mullanphy Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 249; Rex v. Westwood, 7 Bing. 1; Union Bank of Md. v. Ridgeley, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 324; People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183.

5. Ex parte Wilcocks, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 402; Cahill v. Kalamazoo Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Doug. 24; Rex v. Head, 4 Burr. 2521.

6. Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207.

7. Stevens v. Davison, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 819.

8. Mitchell v. Copper Mining Co., 8 Jones & S. 406; s. c., 67 N. Y. 280.

9. U. S. v. Hart, 1 Peters C. C. 390; Stuyvesant v. New York, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 588.

Ex post facto laws and laws retrospective in their operation are no more lawful for corporations than for individuals. People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112; Pulford v. Fire Dept., 31 Mich. 458; Howard v. Savannah, Charlt. 173.

Where under the charter of a mutual fire-insurance association the incorporators are authorized to make such by-laws as they may deem advisable for the management of their corporate affairs, such by-laws can have no effect to modify contracts entered into between the corporation and the assured. Stewart v. Lee Mut. Fire Ins. Assoc. (Miss.) 1 So. 743; Great Falls Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Harvey, 45 N. H. 292.

A corporation cannot pass a by-law in conflict with the constitution of the State. Mayor v. Beasley, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 232.

statutory,[1] or common law,[2] nor with the charter[3] of a corporation; and they must be reasonable.[4]

And by-laws imposing excessive penalties for a breach, as a forfeiture of all profits or shares, are void. Adley v. Reeves, 2 M. & S. 53; s. c. in equity, Adley v. Whitstable, 17 Ves. Jr. 315; In Matter of Long Island R. Co., 32 Am. Dec. 429; s. c., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37.

1. Where the statute of the State expressly forbids the taking of more than 6 per cent interest by a bank, the by-laws cannot provide for the taking of a larger amount. Seneca Co. Bank v. Lamb, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 595.

The national banking act forbidding a lien upon the shares for the indebtedness of a stockholder, no by-law can create it. Re Bigelow, 1 Bank. R. 667; Sec. Natl. Bank v. State Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.), 367; Del. R. Co. v. Oxford Iron Co., 38 N. J. Eq. 340, and notes; Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (C. C. U. S.) 369; Bullard v. Bank, 18 Wall. (C. C. U. S.) 589; Evansville Natl. Bank v. Metropolitan Natl. Bank, 2 Biss. (C. C. U. S.) 527; Hagar v. Union Natl. Bank, 63 Me. 509; Rosenback v. Salt Springs Natl. Bank, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 495; Conklin v. Sec. Natl. Bank, 45 N.Y. 655; Lee v. Citizens' Natl. Bank, 2 Cin. 398, 306.

By-laws of a corporation in contravention of a statute under which it is organized are ultra vires and of no effect. A corporation organized for cooperative insurance under Stat. 1877, c. 204, for the purpose of assisting the widows, orphans, or other dependents of deceased members, has no authority to create a fund for other persons than the class named. Legion of Honor v. Perry, 1 New Eng. Repr. 715.

2. Gosling v. Veley, 12 Q. B. 473; Hayden v. Noyes, 5 Conn. 391.

By-laws which are in restraint of trade are void. Sayre v. Louisville M. Benev. Assoc., 85 Am. Dec. 613; Butchers' Benev. Assoc., 35 Pa. St. 151; Moore v. Bank of Commerce, 52 Mo. 377; Clark v. Lecren, 9 B. & C. 52; Hesketh v. Braddock, 3 Burr. 1858. See also Mayor v. Yuille, 3 Ala. 137; People v. N. Y. Board of Underwriters, 54 How. Pr. 240; Cal. St. Nav. Co. v. Wright, 65 Am. Dec. 511; Goddard v. Merch. Ex., 9 Mo. App. 290; s. c., 78 Mo. 609. And a by-law may be void simply as being against public policy. People v. Benev. Soc., 3 Hun (N. Y.), 361.

A by-law that would deprive a stockholder of vested rights is invalid. Kent v. Quicksilver Mining Co., 78 N. Y. 159; Pentz v. Citizens' Fire Ins. Co., 35 Md. 73; Moore v. Bank of Commerce, 52 Mo. 377; Spurlock v. Pac. R. Co., 61 Mo. 319; Taylor v. Griswold, 14 N. J. Law, 222; Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 24; People v. Phillips, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 388; Comm. v. Gill, 3 Whart. (La.) 228; Petty v. Tooker, 21 N. Y. 267; Rex v. Head, 4 Burr. 2515.

The majority cannot by a by-law impose upon shareholders individual liability for corporate indebtedness. Reid v. Eatonton Manufacturing Co., 40 Ga. 103; Trustees v. Flint, 15 Metc. (Mass.) 539; Kennebec R. Co. v. Kendall, 31 Me. 470.

3. A corporation can only pass such by-laws as can fairly be said to come within the authority conferred by the charter. Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assoc., 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 418; State v. Curtis, 9 Nev. 325; Andrews v. Un. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 37 Me. 256; Bergman v. St. Paul Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 29 Minn. 275; Am. Leg. of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580; Pres. Mut. Assoc. Fd. v. Allen, 106 Mass. 593; Mayor v. Ordrenan, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 122; McMullen v. City of Charleston, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 46; Karney v. Andrews, 2 Stock. Ch. (N. J.) 70; Herzo v. San Francisco, 33 Cal. 134; Carr v. St. Louis, 9 Mo. 191. Presbyterian Assoc. Fd. v. Allen, 4 W. Rept. 712.

A form prescribed by the charter must be followed in adopting a by-law. Dunston v. Imp. Gas Lt. Co., 3 B. & Ad. 135.

4. The members of a corporation or association may adopt any reasonable by-laws within the scope of the purpose, and regulating the manner of voting and of holding meetings, and directing the order of proceedings. Juker v. Com., 20 Pa. 484; Com. v. Woelper, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 29; Newburg v. Francis, 3 T. R. 189. Cf. Rex v. Spencer, 3 Burr. 827; People v. Kip, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 382.

But such by-laws must reasonably and equally operate on all. Comm'rs v. Gas Co., 12 Pa. St. 318; Cartan v. Fr. Matthew Soc., 3 Daly (N. Y.), 20; State v. Merch. Ex., 2 Mo. App. 96; Amesbury v. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.), 596; Ellwood v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383; Palmetto Lodge v. Fleming, 49 Am. Dec. 604; Goddard v. Merch. Ex., 9 Mo. App. 290; Stewart v. Fr. Matthew Soc., 41 Mich. 67; People v. Med. Soc., 24 Barb. (N.Y.) 570; Buecking v. Lodge of O. F., 1 City Ct. R. 31; Scriveners' Co. v. Brooking, 3 Q. B. 95; s. c., 2 Gall & D. 419; Wood v. Searle, 3 Leon. 8. But see Framework Knitters' Co. v. Green, 1 Ld. Ry. 113; Waln's Case, Cro. Jac. 555; Taverner's

The validity of a by-law is a question for the court.[1]

Public and private corporations are governed by the same law in these respects.[2]

But a by-law may be void as to part and good as to the rest.[3]

4. Unincorporated Societies.—But in the case of the by-laws of an unincorporated voluntary association the court has no visitorial power and cannot determine whether they are reasonable or unreasonable; the only question for it to determine is whether they have been adopted in the way which has been agreed upon by the members of the association.[4]

But they are nevertheless bound to observe their constitution and by-laws.[5]

Case, T. Raym. 446; Jeffrey's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 66a; Mayor v. Phelps, 27 Ala. 55. Re Frazee 6 Westn. Repr. 140.

By-laws authorizing voting by proxy are valid. State v. Tudor, 5 Day (Conn.), 329; People v. Crossley, 69 Ill. 195; Phillips v. Wickham, 1 Paige (N. Y.), 590; People v. Twaddell, 18 Hun (N. Y.), 427.

State v. Merchants' Ex., 2 Mo. App. 96, was a proceeding by mandamus to compel the defendants to reinstate the relator as a member of the Union Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis. The defendants' by-laws provided for the submission of all questions in dispute to arbitration, and the relator declined to comply with an award of arbitrators made in pursuance of the by-law. He was consequently suspended from membership. It was in evidence that the privilege of membership was a very valuable one. Bakewell, J., said: "In view of the character and objects of this corporation, and the manifest inconvenience to which every trader must necessarily be subject who is not permitted to join, or is expelled from, the chief mart of commerce in the place of which he is a citizen and a trader, we think a by-law compelling the members of the Union Merchants' Exchange to submit their controversies to arbitration on pain of suspension or expulsion is unreasonable in the legal and technical sense of that term, and that it cannot be sustained." See also Savannah Cotton Ex. v. State, 54 Ga. 668.

In the case of an unincorporated association a by-law agreeing to submission to arbitration is considered to be in the nature of a contract, and like any other agreement to arbitrate is revocable. Heath v. Pres. of Gold Ex., 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. 251; 38 How. Pr. 168.

Mutual-benefit societies may provide modes of asserting rights or redressing grievances, which if properly and fairly administered may oust the jurisdiction of the court altogether. Poultney v. Bachman, 31 Hun (N. Y.), 49; Harrington v. Workingmen's Benev. Assoc., 70 Ga. 340; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 329; Lafond v. Deems, 81 N. Y. 508; Anacosta Tribe v. Murbach, 13 Md. 91; Osceola Tribe v. Schmidt, 57 Md. 98; Foran v. Howard Benev. Assoc., 4 Pa. 510; Black- & White-smiths' Soc. v. Vandyke, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 309. But the intention to surrender a legal right to resort to the court in the first instance must very clearly appear. Bauer v. Samson Lodge K. of P., 102 Ind. 262; Supreme Court v. Garrigues, 104 Ind. 133.

1. Hibernia Fire Eng. Co. v. Harrison, 93 Pa. St. 264; Com. v. Worcester, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 462; Queen v. Sadlers Co., 10 H. of L. C. 404; Vedder v. Fellows, 20 N. Y. 126; State v. Overton, 61 Am. Dec. 671.

2. Mayor v. Winfield, 8 Humph. 767; Dunham v. Rochester, 5 Cow. 462; St. Louis v. Weber, 44 Mo. 547; Pedrick v. Bailey, 12 Gray (Mass.), 161.

3. Rand v. Mather, 59 Am. Dec. 131, and note 135; Rogers v. Jones, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 237; Skelton v. Mayor, 30 Ala. 540; Amesbury v. Bowditch Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.), 596; Cleve v. Financial Co., L. R. 16 Eq. 363.

4. Kehlenbeck v. Logeman, 10 Daly (N. Y.), 447; Elsas v. Alfred, 1 City Ct. R. 113.

For a valuable note on the subject of judicial interference in the affairs of incorporated societies, see note to Loubat v. LeRoy, 15 Abb. N. Cas. 45.

5. Labouchere v. Earl of Warncliffe, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 346; Waechtel v. Noah Widows' Soc., 84 N. Y. 28; People v. Ben Soc., 24 How. Pr. 216; Downing v. St. Columba's Soc., 10 Daly (N. Y.), 262; Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. 69; Fisher v. Kane, L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 353; Loubat v. LeRoy, 40 Hun (N. Y.), 546;

5. Adoption.—By-laws may be adopted without the use of a corporate seal, and no entry in writing is necessary. Their existence may be established by custom or by the acquiescence in a course of conduct by those authorized to enact them.[1]

Where a by-law has been formally adopted by a corporation the reason for its adoption need not be stated in the preamble.[2]

6. Who are Bound.—The by-laws of every corporation bind its members.[3]

But persons not members of a private corporation are, as a general rule, not bound by the by-laws as such; they may, however, be bound by them as being written into a contract with the corporation.[4]

But by reason of prescription or statute by-laws may regulate persons who are not members.[5]

Lehman v. Dist. No. 1 B. B., 39 Hun (N. Y.), 658.

1. In the case of the Union Bank v. Ridgely, 1 H. & G. 324–413, it was shown by oral testimony alone that for many years the rules and regulations headed "by-laws," and contained in one of the books of the bank, had been uniformly acted upon as the by-laws of the bank, although no entry in writing anywhere appeared showing their adoption; it was, however, said by Buchanan, C. J.: "No reason has been shown in argument, nor can we perceive any, why their adoption may not be proved, as well by the acts and uniform course of proceeding of the corporation as by an entry or memorandum in writing."

In Bank of Holly Springs v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421, a by-law provided that the bank should have a lien upon its stock for the debts of its shareholders, but nothing appeared on the face of the certificate which they uniformly issued to place a purchaser upon notice. George, J., said: "This uniform conduct, at least as to all who are not members of the corporation, will be held as making a by-law repealing the other. By-laws need not be in writing." But see Sills v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601. To the same effect see State v. Curtis, 9 Nev. 335; Langsdale v. Bouton, 12 Conn. 467; Henry v. Jackson, 37 Vt. 431; Fairfield T. Co. v. Thorp, 13 Conn. 173; Haven v. N. H. Asylum, 38 Am. Dec. 512; Lumbard v. Aldrich, 8 N. H. 35; Sell v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601; Dunston v. Imp. Gas Lt. Co., 3 B. & Ad. 125; Rex v. Ashwell, 12 East, 22; Rex v. Miller, 6 T. R. 280; Rex v. Westwood, 4 B. & C. 786; Taylor v. Griswold, 2 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 223; Herzo v. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. 120; Northrop v. Curtis, 5 Conn. 246.

2. Rex v. Harrison, 3 Burr. 1322; Stuyvesant v. Mayor, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 588–606.

Every reason for a by-law need not appear. Colchester v. Goodwin, Cart. 119; Poulterers' Co. v. Phillips, 6 Bing. N. C. 314; Hibernia Fire Eng. Co. v. Harrison, 93 Pa. St. 264.

3. Cummings v. Webster, 43 Me. 192; Weatherly v. Med. & Surg. Soc., 76 Ala. 567; Kent v. Quicksilver Mining Co., 78 N. Y. 179; Came v. Brigham, 39 Me. 35; German, etc., Cong. v. Pressler, 17 La. Ann. 128; Harrington v. Workingmen's Ben. Assoc., 70 Ga. 341; Poultney v. Bachman, 31 Hun (N. Y.), 49; Security Loan Assoc. v. Lake, 69 Ala. 456; Anacosta Tribe v. Murbach, 13 Md. 91; McDermot v. Board of Police, 5 Abb. Pr. 422; Sassenscheidt v. Ben., etc., Union, 1 City Ct. R. 8; Flint v. Peirce, 99 Mass. 68.

4. "The by-laws of a private corporation bind the members only by virtue of their assent, and do not affect third persons." Green, C. J., in State v. Overton, 24 N. J. L. 440.

Regulations affecting persons not members are not by-laws, properly speaking. Green, C. J., in State v. Overton, 24 N. J. L. 440. See also Co. of Horners v. Barlow, 3 Mod. 159; Bank of Wilmington v. Wollaston, 3 Har. (Del.) 90, Samuels v. Cent. Ex. Co., McCahon, 214.

A depositor in a savings bank is bound by the contract contained in the bank-book which he received at the time he made his first deposit, and by the by-laws of the institution, to which he subscribed at the time, but he is not bound by a change in the by-laws subsequently adopted without his knowledge or consent and of which he has received no notice. Kimins v. Boston Five-cent Sav. Bank, 2 New Eng. Repr. 33.

5. Rex v. Col. of Phys., 3 Burr. 2740;

By-laws which regulate the mode of making transfers of shares are perfectly valid.[1] But a by-law making the right to transfer depend upon the approval of the board of directors, or other agent is invalid.[2]

7. Notice.—The members of a corporation are presumed to know its by-laws;[3] and it is no objection to a by-law that a member of a corporation had no notice or was not a member when it was passed.[4] The by-laws are evidence against the officers of a corporation even though they may not be members.[5] The members of a corporation are bound to observe the forms prescribed by the by-laws.[6] But mere informalities will not be allowed to

Kirk v. Nowell, 1 T. R. 118; Marietta v. Fearing, 5 Ohio, 427; Vaudine's Case, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 187.

The by-laws of a corporation regulating the admission into it bind those who seek to become members. The most pertinent example of this, perhaps, is in those cases where the by-laws, passed in pursuance of the charter or statutory authority, reserve to the corporation a lien upon the shares of a stockholder for his debt to the corporation. Such a by-law is binding upon a purchaser with notice, and he cannot obtain a transfer until the debt is paid. Prendergast v. Bank of Stockton, 2 Sawy. 108; Geyer v. West. Ins. Co., 3 Pitts. 41; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. 616; St. Louis, etc., Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 45 Mo. 513; Cunningham v. Ala. L. Ins. Co., 4 Ala. 652; Bank of Holly Springs v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421–35. In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bank, 223; Tuttle v. Walton, 1 Ga. 43; McDowell v. Bank of Wilmington, 1 Har. (Del.) 27; Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; Morgan v. Bank of N. A., 8 S. & R. 73; Child v. Hudson's Bay Co., 2 P. Wms. 207; Quiner v. Marblehead Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 476; Spurlock v. Pacific R. Co., 61 Mo. 319.

But this right of lien can only be secured by the by-laws in pursuance of authority derived from the act of incorporation or the general statutory law; it does not exist at common law. "When such a lien exists it is by statutory authority, either expressed in the act of incorporation or by by-laws made by authority of the act." Thompson, J., in Steamship Dock Co. v. Heron's Admx., 52 Pa. St. 280. See also Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 102; Carroll v. Mullanphy, Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 249; Nesmith v. Washington Bank, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 324. Cf. Bryon v. Carter, 22 La. Ann. 98; Moore v. Bank of Commerce, 52 Mo. 377; Merchants' Bank v. Shouse, 102 Pa. St. 488.

And it is not binding upon a purchaser without notice. Anglo-Cal. Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359.

1. Northrop v. Newton, etc., I. Co., 3 Conn. 544; Union Bk. v. Laird. 2 Wheat. 390; Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 6 M. & W. 200; Merrill v. Call, 15 Me. 428; Weyer v. Second Nat. Bk., 57 Ind. 198; Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132; Bates v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.), 251; Stockwell v. St. Louis Mercantile Co., 9 Mo. App. 133; Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.). 373; Corden v. Universal Gas Lt. Co., 6 Dowl. & L. 379; State v. Petinelli, 10 Nev. 641; Marlb. Mfg. Co v. Smith. 2 Conn. 579; Oxford Turnpike Co. v. Bunnell, 6 Conn. 552; Farmers' Bank v. Wasson, 48 Iowa. 339; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 383.

2. Farmers' Bk. v. Wasson, 48 Iowa, 339; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90.

3. Inhabitants v. Morton, 25 Mo. 593; Buffalo v. Webster, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 99.

By-laws contained in a book issued to shareholders are evidence against a shareholder in an action by the receiver of a corporation to collect a subscription. Frank v. Morrison, 58 Md. 423.

4. Susquehanna Ins. Co. v. Perrine, 7 W. & S. 348; Treadway v. Hamilton Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 68; London v. Vanacre, 12 Mod. 273; Cudden v. Eastwick, 6 Mod. 124.

5. In the case of the Bank of Wilmington v. Wollaston, 3 Harr. (Del.) 90, there was a suit brought on the official bond of the cashier, and the by-laws of the bank were offered in evidence, but objected to as not binding on the defendant, who was not a member. of the corporation, but they were admitted in evidence by the court.

6. Dunston v. Imp. Gas Lt. Co., 3 B. & Ad. 125; State v. Petinelli, 10 Nev. 141; Johnston v. Jones, 23 N. J. Eq. 216; render an act invalid if the sense of the by-law has been maintained.[1]

8. Construction of By-Laws.—The ordinary rules of construction are to be applied,[2] and the courts will construe by-laws reasonably.[3]

9. Enforcement.—Questions arising under attempts to enforce by-laws usually occur in the case of municipal corporations. Thus it is held that without express power a corporation cannot imprison an offender against its by-laws;[4] nor impose a forfeiture of goods;[5] nor disfranchise a member;[6] nor avoid a contract made in contradiction of the by-law.[7] The power to enforce by fine excludes the right to enforce in any other way.[8] As a general rule the penalty can only be given to the corporation,[9] and it is usually recoverable in the name of the corporation[10] in an action of debt or assumpsit.[11] A third party can only enforce a by-law when he has some privity.[12] The courts do not readily interfere to prevent the enforcement of the by-laws of moral, religious, or social corporations.[13] But their enforcement must be at the peril of the members.[14]

10. Waiver.—Corporations may waive their by-laws,[15] or by a continued course of business render them nugatory.[16]

People v. Albany R. Co., 55 Barb. (N.Y.) 344; Comm. v. Woelper, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 29.

1. Philip v. Wickham, 1 Paige (N. Y.), 590; Downing v. Potts, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 66; People v. Albany R. Co., 55 Barb. (N.Y.) 344; Wheeler's Case, 2 Abb. Pr. N.S. 361; People v. Peck. 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 641; People v. Campbell, 2 Cal. 135; Hardenburgh v. Farmers', etc., Bk., 3 N. J. Eq. 68; Hughes v. Parker, 20 N. H. 58; Blanchard v. Dow, 32 Me. 557; Ashtabula R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 328.

2. Re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. 227.

3. Vintner's Co. v. Passy, 1 Burr. 235.

In Rex v. Bailiffs, 4 Barn. & Ald. 271 s. c., 2 Dowl. & R. 172, the court construed the words "shall be lawful," and in Breneman v. Franklin Benef. Assoc., 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 218, the words "on application."

4 London v. Wood, 12 Mod. 686; Hart v. Mayor of Albany, 9 Wend. (N.Y.) 571; Barter v. Comm., 6 P. & W. 253; Ex parte Burnett, 30 Ala. 461.

5. Cotter v. Doty, 5 Ohio, 395; Kirk v. Nowell, 1 T. R. 118; Phillips v. Allen, 41 Pa. St. 481.

6. Rex v. London, 2 Lev. 201. But see Bab v. Clerk. F. Moore, 412.

7. Doggerell v. Pokes, F. Moore, 411.

8. Kirk v. Nowell, 1 T. R. 125; Nightingale v. Bridges, 1 Show. 135; Heise v. Town Council, 6 Rich. (S.Car.) 404; Miles v. Chamberlain, 17 Wis. 446.

9. London v. Wood, 12 Mod. 686.

10. Totterdeep v. Glazby, 2 Wils. 266. Cf. Graves v. Colby, 9 Ad. & E. 356; Piper v. Chappell, 4 Mees. & W. 624.

11. Woolley v. Idle, 4 Burr. 1951; Feltmakers v. Davis, 1 Bos. & P. 98.

12 Anacosta Tribe v. Murbach, 13 Md. [illegible]; Flint v. Pierce, 99 Mass. 68; Trustees v. Flint, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 543.

13. People v. Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; Hussey v. Gallagher, 61 Ga. 86; Dawkins v. Antrobus, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 615; Lafond v. Deems, 81 N. Y. 507; s.c., 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 41; s. c., 1 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 318; Savannah Cotton Ex. v. State, 54 N. Y. 668; People v. St. George's Soc., 28 Mich. 261; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92.

14. Where the ceremony of expulsion from a voluntary association involved an assault and battery upon a member unwilling to submit to the ceremony, it was held not sufficient to exonerate the defendant from a conviction for assault and battery. State v. Williams, 75 N. Car. 134.

15. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Keyser, 32 N. H. 313; Campbell v. Merch. & Farm. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 37 N. H. 35.

16. Bank of Holly Springs v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421.

BY-ROAD.—"An obscure or neighborhood road in its earlier existence, not used to any great extent by the public, yet so far a public road that the public have free access to it at all times."[1]

BY-STANDER.—Under a statute authorizing tales to be returned from the bystanders, bystander is one actually in court.[2]

CABIN.—A small room; an inclosed place; a cottage, hut, or small house; an apartment in a ship for officers or passengers.[3]

CABINET.—I. A private room in which consultations are held.[4]

II. An advisory council of a sovereign or chief executive officer of a nation.[5]

III. A piece of furniture, consisting of a chest or box, with

1. Wood v. Hard, 5 Vr. (N. J.) 89. "A road used by the inhabitants and recognized by our statute, but not laid out." They are roads of necessity in newly-settled countries. Whether a road is a by-road is a question for the jury. Van Blarcom v. Frike, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 316.

2. Simon v. Gratz, 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 412; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 1.

3. Web. Dict.

A suit for forcible entry and detainer is for the possession of real property; and where the record in such a proceeding showed that the suit was for the possession of "a certain cabin situate, standing, and being upon the southwest quarter section," etc., held, that the action included not merely the cabin, but the ground inclosed by it. Harvie v. Turner, 46 Mo. 444.

A charter-party of a ship with two cabins, separated by a partition, one used as a dining-room and the other as a sitting-room, placed the whole ship, "with the exception of the cabin," at the disposal of the charterers. Held, that the charterers must pay freight beyond the amount of the charter-money for goods carried in either cabin. Leckie v. Sears, 109 Mass. 424.

4. Web. Dict.

5. Abbott's Law Dict.

In the United States.—In the organization of the United States government there is a Cabinet, whose action and influence are of great practical importance. Yet it exists as a collective body by custom and the will of the President merely. The constitution provides that the President may require the opinion in writing of the principal officer of each of the executive departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, but leaves it wholly to Congress to say what executive departments shall be created; and it places the responsibility of official action upon the President or upon the heads of departments as individual officers, nowhere presenting them as a body authorized to decide questions by a vote of a majority of a quorum. There are at present seven executive departments created by Congress—the state, war, treasury, justice, post-office, navy, and interior. U. S. Rev. St. § 158.

A practice has grown up, commencing from the time of Washington's administration, of the heads of these departments meeting in cabinet council at the executive mansion by direction of the President, who presides over its deliberations and directs its proceedings. No record of its doings is kept, and it has as a body no legal authority. Its action is advisory merely. Bouvier's Law Dict.

Individually they (the Cabinet officers) are empowered to appoint numerous "heads of bureaus" and inferior officers to assist in transacting the business of their respective departments. The head of the so-called "department of agriculture" is not a member of the Cabinet. Rev. Stats. §§ 158, 159.

In England there is a similar council of high officers of state advisory to the king or queen in theory, though practically these officers in their several functions administer the government and hold the responsible charge. Abbott's Law Dict.

Where the maxim "the king can do no wrong" prevails the sovereign is not responsible, and the Cabinet (which is a select body of the privy council, q. v.) is. The members, called the ministers, are chosen by the sovereign, or rather the premier or prime minister is, and he selects the others—forms a government, as it is termed—from members of either House of Parliament. If displeased, the sovereign may dismiss the ministers, but the practice is for them to resign when unable to obtain for their measures a majority in the House of Commons. Rapalje & Lawrence's Law Dict.

drawers and doors. The word is also used to denote a valuable collection, the contents of such chest or box.[1]

CABLE.—A large, strong rope or chain, used to retain a vessel at anchor, and for other purposes.[2]

CADET [Fr. cadet, the younger or youngest son or brother [3]].—A youth under tuition and drill with a view to his becoming an army or navy officer.[4]

CALCULATED.—Suited or adapted by design.[5]

CALCUTTA.—The capital of the presidency of Bengal and metropolis of British India.[6]

The British Cabinet usually consists of from ten to fifteen members, and it is said to have been the invariable practice that the following ministers should be members: the prime minister, as first lord of the treasury; the lord chancellor; lord president of the council; lord privy seal; and chancellor of the exchequer; the secretaries of state (of late five), for the home department, foreign affairs, war, colonies, and India. In addition to these, from five to eight of the other ministers are usually admitted. Abbott's Law Dict.

1. Cabinet or Collection of Curiosities.—"Diamonds and pearls made up for wear will not pass by a devise of a cabinet or collection of curiosities, consisting of coins, medals, gems and oriental stones, and other valuable things. 'Valuable things' must mean ejusdem generis." Cavendish v. Cavendish, 1 Cox Ch. 77; 1 Brown, Ch. 467; State Cabinet of Natural History, Rev. St. of N. Y. (7th Ed.) 607.

Cabinet Ware.—Held, that an insurance on cabinet ware simply had reference to keeping the articles in a finished state; that no process of manufacture or completion of the articles was contemplated or covered by the policy. Appleby v. Astor Fire Ins. Co., 54 N. Y. 254.

Cabinet Ware-rooms.—The words "to be used as cabinet ware-rooms," following the description of the premises in a lease for years, do not imply a covenant on the part of the lessee not to use the premises for any other purposes than as cabinet ware-rooms. Brugman v. Noyes, 6 Wis. 1.

Cabinet Council.—A private and confidential assembly of the most considerable ministers of state to concert measures for the administration of public affairs, first established by Charles I. Wharton's Law Lexicon.

2. The proof and sale of chain-cables and anchors is regulated by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 27, and 37 & 38 Vict. c. 51.

A specification in a patent for a particular construction of windlasses stated that the object was "to hold without slipping a chain-cable of any size." Hastings v. Brown, 1 El. & Bl. 454.

Where a wire cable was laid across a river as a guy on which to run a ferry-boat, it was deemed not unlawful unless actually hazardous to the navigation of the river. The Vancouver, 2 Sawy. C. C. 381.

3. Web. Dict.

4. Rapalje & Lawrence's Law Dict.

In the United States laws, students in the military academy at West Point are styled cadets; students in the naval academy at Annapolis, cadet midshipmen. U. S. Rev. St. §§ 1309, 1512.

5. Gerrish v. Norris, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 170. "If he used language intended and calculated to convey to the plaintiff the idea that he waived all other objections, he would be estopped from setting up other objections." . . . If the party uses language suited or adapted by design (both of which are definitions by lexicography of the word 'calculated') to express to the hearer his purpose of waiver, the jury might find such waiver it would seem."

Hughes v. State, 9 Eng. (Ark.) 131. It is no violation of sec. 7, art. 3, div. 5, chap. 44 of Rev. St. p. 269, prohibiting the conveying to any person lawfully imprisoned any instrument, arms, or other thing calculated to aid his escape, for a person to convey to such prisoner an instrument of writing informing him that he has a friend and can be released from confinement.

Wootton v. Dawkins, 2 C. B. N. S. 413. To entitle plaintiff to recover under the statute it was not enough that the instrument was one calculated to create alarm, but that it must be calculated to destroy human life or inflict grievous bodily harm. . ."

6 Calcutta Linseed.—A bought of B a cargo of "Calcutta linseed, tale quale."

CALENDAR, which originates from the verb calare, means the division of time into years, months, weeks, and days, and a register of them.[1] Also a list of cases arranged for trial or argument in court.

CALL.—Under a statute empowering a railway company to make "calls," the word "call" is capable of three meanings. It may either mean the resolution itself, or the time of its notification, or the time when the money is made payable. It must mean one of these three.[2] A "call" within the meaning of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 8 Vict. c. 16, s. 16, means the resolution formally come to by those who have the power to determine that those who are bound to contribute, i.e., the shareholders, shall pay a certain instalment.[3] A call, in the language of stockbroking, is an option to claim stock at a fixed price on a certain day.[4]

Held, that the contract was not satisfied by the delivery of linseed, though coming from Calcutta, which contained so large an admixture of other inferior seeds as to have lost its distinctive character of Calcutta linseed. Wieler v. Schilizzi, 17 C. B. *619.

1. Rives v. Guthrie, 1 Jones L. (N. Car.) 86.

One Calendar Month's Notice.—In the computation of such notice under 24 Geo. II. c. 44, s. 1, the day of giving the notice and the day of suing out the writ are both to be excluded. Young v. Higgon, 6 M. & W. 49.

2. Railroad Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Exch. 543; s. c., 6 Eng. R. & Can. Cas. 238.

3. Ex parte Tooke, 6 Eng. R. & Can. Cas. 3. See Shaw v. Rowley, 5 Eng. R. & Can. Cas. 49, where counsel admitting that the call had been resolved upon by the directors, and a circular announcing it sent to each shareholder, Parke, B., remarked, "that, in this instance, constitutes the call." See also Newry, etc., R. Co. v. Edmunds, 5 Eng. R. & Can. Cas. 277, in which Parke, B., said: "It is clear that the word "call" is used in the act in two different senses. In one part it means the applications to the shareholders to pay, and in another the amount to be paid."

4. Biddle on Stock Br. 70; Pixley v. Boynton, 79 Ill. 353.

Call Forth, with respect to militia, is not synonymous with "employ in service." "To suppose them used to signify the same thing in the Constitution, and acts of Congress, would be to defeat the obvious purposes of both. The Constitution, in providing for the calling forth of the militia, necessarily supposes some act to be done before the actual employment of the militia; a requisition to perform service, a call to engage in a public duty. From the very nature of things, the call must precede the service; and to confound them is to break down the established meaning of language, and to render nugatory a power without which the militia can never be compelled to serve in defence of the Union." Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 64. See also Duffield v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 593.

Called Lurchers, in an information against one for keeping dogs "called lurchers" to kill game, must be taken to indicate that they "were rightly so called, and that they were lurchers." Rex v. Earnshaw, 15 East, 458.

Called to Testify.—Where the defendant was introduced as a witness in his own behalf, it is competent for the plaintiff to cross-examine him as to certain transactions, such a witness being one "called to testify by the opposite party," within the meaning of the code. "The court below seems to have construed the phraseology of the section of the code above quoted to mean that neither party can, under any circumstances, call upon his adversary to testify as to any transaction with or statement by the testator or intestate, unless he makes such adversary his witness. We cannot yield our assent to this interpretation. The defendant having been introduced and examined as a witness in his own behalf, it was competent for the plaintiffs to ask the defendant, on cross-examination, the question which was propounded to him, and he should have been required to answer it; for he was then called by the opposite party, within the meaning of the statute, to testify as to a transaction with the plaintiff's intestate." Thomas's Adm'x v. Thomas, 42 Ala. 120.

On Call.—There is no legal distinction between an obligation payable "on de-

CALUMNY.—An unjust prosecution or defence of a suit. See note 1.

CAMEO. (See also JEWELRY.)—Any carved work, in relief; usually applied to precious stones, but also used generally.[2]

CAMPHENE. (See also BURNING-FLUID; FIRE INSURANCE.)—A chemical compound consisting of eight parts of hydrogen and ten of carbon; used for burning in lamps, and also as the common solvent in varnishes.[3]

mand" or "when demanded," and one payable "on call" or "when called for." In each case, under the laws of Virginia, the debt is payable immediately, and the obligors are bound to pay interest from the date of the obligation. 22 Gratt. (Va.) 612.

Ordinary Calling.—See ORDINARY.

1. In Lanning v. Christy, 30 Ohio St. 117, Wright, J., says: "There was a word called "calumny" in the civil law, which signified an unjust prosecution or defence of a suit, and the phrase is still said to be used in the courts of Scotland and the ecclesiastical and admiralty courts of England, though we do not find cases of the kind in the reports."

2. In an action against the collector of the port of New York to recover back an alleged excess of duty paid, under protest, on "coral cameos," not set, the court, Nelson, J., said: "The cameos in question were charged with a duty of twenty-four per cent ad valorem, under the act of March 3d, 1857 (11 U. S. Stat. at Large, 192), which reduces the duties imposed by Schedule C of the act of July 30th, 1846 (9 U. S. Stat. 44). The plaintiffs claim that the proper duty was only eight per cent ad valorem, under Schedule G of the act of 1846, as amended by the act of 1857, on the ground that the article is 'cameos, not set.' It is invoiced as 'coral cameos.' Schedule C of the act of 1846 imposes a duty on 'coral, cut or manufactured.' The article in question is coral, cut into the form of a cameo, and not set; and the question is whether the commercial designa- of the article which prevailed at the time of the passage of the act of 1846, shall govern, or the construction of the words of the statute. I am inclined to think the latter. As the article is 'coral, cut or manufactured,' although it may have had a fixed designation previously, from its shape and fashion, yet it was quite competent for Congress to designate it by a specific material description, which necessarily takes it out of the one known to the trade. This has been a not unusual mode adopted by Congress for the very purpose of taking away the power of fixing any other designation in commercial language. Inasmuch as the article comes within the very words of the specific description, I do not see that the evidence of the commercial designation can be allowed to prevail." Bailey v. Schell, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 195.

3. Where a policy of insurance against loss by fire to goods in a store contained a provision that in case the premises containing the goods should be appropriated, applied, or used for the purpose of storing or keeping therein any of the articles included in the memorandum of special rates in the terms and conditions annexed, unless by special agreement, the policy should be void; and under the class of special rates, after an enumeration of articles, there was a statement that camphene when used in stores, subjected the goods therein to an additional charge of ten cents on the hundred dollars, and that the premium for such use must be indorsed in writing on the policy,—it was held that the use of camphene to light the store was prohibited, and that its use without a compliance with the special provision in reference to it avoided the policy. Westfall v. Hudson River Fire Ins. Co., 12 N. Y. 289; Mead v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 3 Selden (N. Y.), 530.

But the use of camphene for cleaning type, a purpose customary among printers, is not a violation of a fire policy upon the printing and book materials and stock in a building "privileged for a printing-office, bindery, and bookstore," the printed conditions of the policy describing booksellers' stocks as extra-hazardous, subjecting camphene on sale and printers of books to special rates, and prohibiting the use of camphene, spirit-gas, or burning-fluid without permission, and requiring such conditions to be indorsed on the policy. Harper v. Albany Mutual Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 194; Harper v. New York City Ins. Co., 22 N. Y. 441.

A stipulation in an insurance policy against "keeping or using camphene,

CAMP-MEETING. (See also ASSEMBLE; ASSEMBLY; MEETINGS.) —A temporary gathering of a large number of persons intents or booths for the purpose of holding frequent religious services.[1]

CAN.—An auxiliary verb, used as part of the verb to be able, to denote power and possibility.[2] spirit-gas, burning-fluid, or chemical oils" is not violated by the use of a fluid for illuminating purposes not in its nature like camphene or spirit-gas. Wheeler v. American Central Ins. Co., 6 Mo. App. 235.

A policy of insurance against fire upon a steamboat provided that "if gunpowder, camphene, spirit-gas, naphtha, benzine or benzole, chemical, crude, or refined coal or earth oils be kept or used on the premises without written consent," the policy should be void. In an action on the policy it appeared that kerosene oil was used to light the cabin and saloon of the boat after such policy was issued. Held, that this did not void the policy and prevent a recovery. Morse v. Buffalo Fire and Marine Ins. Co., 30 Wis. 534; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 587.

1. In a criminal complaint for a violation of the Public Laws of Rhode Island by selling, etc., within one mile of the place of holding a camp-meeting, the court said: "We think a camp-meeting is ex vi termini a religious meeting, and therefore, inasmuch as the society named is alleged to be a religious society, that it was not necessary to allege that the meeting was held for 'a purpose connected with the object for which the society was organized,' that being implied." State v. Read, 12 R. I. 135

The right to pass such acts forms part of the police power of the State, and the acts are constitutional. Com. v. Bearse, 132 Mass. 542; State v. Read, 12 R. I. 137.

The various statutes prohibiting the disturbing of religious meetings protect camp-meetings. The construction of them, however, has not been uniform. Thus in Missouri it has been held that it must appear that the acts charged as constituting the offence took place when the congregation were assembled for worship. State v. Edwards, 32 Mo. 548. And that an indictment for disturbing a congregation met for religious worship, etc., is not sustained by evidence of a disturbance after the congregation had been dismissed. State v. Jones, 53 Mo. 486. See Richardson v. State, 5 Tex. App. 470. Nor where the proof shows that the congregation, though disturbed, was assembled exclusively for business purposes, even though the proceedings were opened with religious exercises. Wood v. State, 11 Tex. App. 318.

But if the business for which the congregation is assembled is connected with their interests as a church, as the trial of an offending member, they are within the act. Hollingsworth v. State, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 518.

On the other hand, in Alabama it has been held that to constitute an interruption or disturbance of an assemblage of people met for religious worship it is not necessary that the disturbance should be made during the progress of the religious services; if made after the conclusion of the services and the dismissal of the congregation, but while a portion of the people still remain, and before reasonable time has elapsed for their dispersion, the offence is complete. Kinney v. State, 38 Ala. 224.

So in North Carolina it is sufficient if the congregation are actually assembled for the purpose of worship, and are prevented therefrom by the acts of the defendant, although no act of worship is being performed at the time of the disturbance. State v. Ramsay, 78 N. Car. 448. But the people must be actually assembled. It is not sufficient that they are gathering and coming together. State v. Bryson, 82 N. Car. 576. Contra, Lancaster v. State, 53 Ala. 398, where it was held that the protection of the act extended to the assemblage when in the act of gathering together at the place appointed for worship while the exercises were in progress, and until there is a dispersion of the persons who have come together and they cease to be an assemblage or congregation. See Kinney v. State, 38 Ala. 224; Dawson v. State, 7 Tex. App. 59; Williams v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 313; State v. Lusk, 68 Ind. 264.

In Virginia an indictment for disturbing a camp-meeting was sustained though the disturbance took place at night after the religious services were closed for the day and the congregation had retired to rest. Com. v. Jennings, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 624.

But the camp-meeting must be held on a piece of ground set apart for that purpose. Assemblages gathered within a house or place of worship are within the act, but not upon public squares and streets. Wilcox v. State, 64 Mo. 386.

2. It has been held that a note for money, "which I promise to pay as soon as I can," is due in presenti; the court, Boyle, J., saying: "A promise to pay as soon as the debtor possibly can is, in the contemplation of law, a promise to pay presently. The law supposes every man able to pay his debts; and if the ability to pay was a question to be tried, the only practicable mode of trial is per execution; and of this it is not yet too late for the defendant in the court below to have full benefit." Kincaid v. Higgins, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 396.

CANADA.—A British province directly north of the United States.[1]

Where an act which read, "A party may be examined on behalf of his co-plaintiff or co-defendant as to any matter in which he is not jointly interested or liable with such co-plaintiff or co-defendant, and as to which a separate and not joint verdict or judgment shall be rendered," was amended so as to read "as to which a separate and not joint verdict or judgment can be rendered," it was held that the meaning was not altered; that the prior act could not mean that the competency of the witness or the admissibility of the testimony is to be determined according to the verdict or judgment afterwards to be rendered. Beal v. Finch, 11 N. Y. 128.

Where a declaration set forth that the alleged promise was made "in consideration that the plaintiffs would delay the service of the execution," etc., and on the trial a writing was offered in evidence which read "if said execution can be delayed," etc., the defendants claimed that there was a variance, and that the writing contained no promise on the part of the plaintiffs to delay the service. But the court, Jackson, J., held otherwise, saying: "As to the other supposed variance, we are equally satisfied that the declaration comports with the legal effect of the writing. The expression 'if the execution can be delayed, as introduced in this paper, is equivalent to saying 'if you will delay it,' or in 'consideration that you will delay it.'" Lent v. Padelford, 10 Mass. 230.

Best You Can.—In an action to recover damages for a loss arising from the repudiation of a contract under a telegraphic order to "buy one hundred and fifty bales of cotton best you can," with a limit of forty-two cents per pound, the court, Ames, J., said: "The defendant's instructions were substantially to buy 'the best you can,' a form of expression which apparently left to the plaintiffs the largest possible discretion to buy as opportunities should offer, at prices not exceeding the prescribed limit." Marland v. Stanwood, 101 Mass. 470.

Cannot.—The provisions of the Pennsylvania statute of 18th March, 1775, § 6, "that where the grantors and witnesses of any deed are deceased, or cannot be had, it shall be lawful," etc., are sufficiently complied with when it has been proved that no such person as the subscribing witness could be heard of although diligent search had been made. Powers v. McFerran, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 44.

Where a mandamus was applied for to appoint separate overseers for the several districts of a certain parish under the St. 13 & 14 Car. II., c. 12, § 21, which provides for cases in which the inhabitants of counties, by reason of the largeness of their parishes, "have not, nor cannot," reap the benefit of the statute of 43 Eliz. in regard to the provision for the poor, on the ground that if a parish had once begun to act as this parish had done for a long course of years, both before and at the time of passing the stat. 13 & 14 Car. II., under that act, it was not competent for the inhabitants by any agreement to revert back again to the provisions of the stat. 43 Eliz., the court refused the mandamus, Ellenborough, C. J., saying: "There is nothing in the language of the act which imports that parishes were, in this respect, then immediately to adopt that mode of maintenance for their poor from which they should not afterwards be at liberty to depart. No decided case has excluded this provision from receiving a prospective construction. The words 'have not' were of themselves sufficient to cover any then actually existing case in which parishes did not reap the benefit of the statute 43 Eliz. The word 'cannot,' though in its strictest grammatical sense it applies properly to present time, yet familiar instances occur in which the word is used prospectively; and as the varying circumstances of parishes may make the provisions of the statute of Car. II. as necessary in respect to future cases as those which existed at the passing of the act, we think sound construction requires that it should be deemed applicable to both descriptions of cases. . . . According to the construction of the statute now adopted by us, the word 'cannot' must be read as 'may not.'" King v. Palmer, 8 East, 416.

1. Canada Money. — A note for the payment of money, made, negotiated, CANALS. See HIGHWAYS; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

CANCEL—CANCELLING—CANCELLATION. (See also DEEDS; REVOCATION OF INSTRUMENTS; WILLS.)—To cross and deface[1]

and payable in the United States, in "Canada money" is not a negotiable note within the meaning of the statute relative to bills of exchange and promissory notes, inasmuch as Canada money is not current here. Thompson v. Sloan, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 71.

Canada Currency.—But a note made and indorsed in Michigan, and payable in Canada "in Canada currency," is payable in money, and is therefore negotiable. Black v. Ward, 27 Mich. 191.

1. On the question as to whether a will had been revoked by cancelling, the court, Barrett, J., said: "But what amounts to cancelling? How, with reference to the text of the instrument, must the act be done,—not as to the shape or character of the marks, but where must they be located,—is the main point of debate in the present case. The proponent claims that the cancelling marks must be made upon some part of the written text of the will. The Latin verb from which the term 'cancel' is derived means to make lattice-work, and the corresponding noun in Latin, in the plural, cancelli, signifies lattice-work. How this term came to be applied to marks made upon written instruments, for the purpose of destroying their validity, is obvious both from general and judicial history not ony as taught by the books, but as derived from observation. To draw cross-lines over the face of a written instrument has been, and is, a common mode of showing the intent thereby to make an end of it as an instrument in force. In earlier times when the ability to write was possessed by very few, the great mass of persons of all grades, from the highest lord to the lowest peasant, could manifest their intent with pen and ink only by unlettered marks. While they would be dependent on the few skilled in the art to draw their instruments of contract in making disposition of their property, they could and did resort to various modes by which, without clerkly aid, to make an end of their validity. From the fact that cross-marks were so easily made, and when made upon the face of a written instrument were so significant that thereby the maker of them designed to put an end to the continuing validity of the instrument, this mode was recognized and adopted into the statute in common with tearing, burning, and obliterating, as one by which wills might be revoked. In some instances this mode might be preferable to either of the others, as when it should be desirable to preserve the legibility of the entire instrument, which might not happen as the result of burning, tearing, or obliterating. While, therefore, a common and customary mode of manifesting the intent to abrogate the instrument by drawing cross-lines over the face of it gave rise to the use of the term 'cancel,' still the entire judicial history of the subject shows that that manner of marking an instrument is by no means essential in order to answer to the full force and effect of the term in its legal sense. The net result of all the cases and all the text books, as well as the reason of the thing and the appropriate analogies, seems to be this: that, where the instrument is so marked by the maker of it as to show clearly, whenever it is produced, that the act was designed by him to be a cancelling, that act becomes effectual, by force of the statute, as a revocation of the will, by cancelling. Warner v. Warner's Estate, 37 Vt. 356, 361.

"Revocation by cancellation, then is not to be understood to mean exclusively drawing crossed lines upon the paper, but it means any act done to it which in common understanding is regarded as cancellation when done to any other instrument. Undoubtedly it must be an act done to the will itself, and it must be done animo cancellandi." Evans's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 238.

Under the English Statute of Frauds, providing "that no devise in writing of lands shall be revocable otherwise than by some other will, or by burning, cancelling, tearing, or obliterating the same by the testator, etc.," the act of tearing, etc., must be complete; and where a testator after tearing his will puts the several pieces aside, and expresses his satisfaction that no material part of the writing has been injured, and that it is no worse, it was held to have been properly left to the jury to say whether he had completely finished all that he intended to do for the purpose of destroying the will. Doe dem. Perkes v. Perkes, 3 B. & Ald. 489.

Cancellation of a Will is not a revocation thereof, under the words "otherwise destroying" the same, in the Stat. 1 Vict. c. 26, § 20, that statute having omitted the word "cancelling" which appeared a writing; to annul or destroy[1] by cross marks or other obliteration, or by burning or tearing the material on which the writing is.

in the Statute of Frauds. Here the court, Sir Herbert Jenner, said: "It is admitted that prior to the first of January, 1838, this would have been a good revocation, for, under the old law, cancellation animo revocandi was a mode of revoking a will. The Act 1 Vict. c. 26, however, has made a very considerable alteration in the testamentary law. . . . Cancellation and revocation are different terms, though sometimes confounded, cancellation being an equivocal act. It appears to me that the legislature, having advisedly omitted cancelling amongst the modes of revocation, and substituted words of more equivocal meaning, cannot have intended that striking through with a pen should have been a mode of revocation, and that if they did consider cancellation to be a mode of revocation, they would have taken care to render their meaning clear. Stephens v. Taprell, 2 Curt. 458.

Where a will has been revoked by cancelling, it cannot be thereafter revived by parol declarations of such a purpose or desire on the part of the testator. Warner v. Warner's Estate, 37 Vt. 356.

In Pennsylvania, under the Wills Act, a will may be revoked by cancellation. Evans's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 238.

Cancelling Deeds.—The cancellation of a deed will not divest property which has once vested by transmutation of possession. Co. Litt. 225 b, note 136, citing 1 Rep. in Ch. 100; Gilbert Rep. 236; Lewis v. Payn, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 71; Holbrook v. Tirrell, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 105; Hatch v. Hatch, 9 Mass. 311; Marshall v. Fisk, 6 Mass. 32; Jackson v. Chase, 2 Johns, (N. Y.) 84; Bolton v. Carlisle, 2 H. Bl. 259; Roe v. Archbishop of York, 6 East. 86. See 4 Wheel. Am. C. L. 273.

A conveyed a piece of land to B in fee simple. B went into possession and paid about half the purchase-money, but, finding himself unable to pay the residue, sent back the deed, which had not been recorded, to A to be cancelled. A went again into possession, and gave up the notes for the residue of the purchase-money; C, a creditor of B, then levied an execution on the land, as B's property, and brought ejectment against A for it. Held, that the title did not revest in A by the return and cancellation of the deed, and that C was therefore entitled to recover. Botsford v. Morehouse, 4 Conn. 550; Gilbert v. Bulkley, 5 Conn. 262.

But as between the original parties the case is different; thus an unrecorded deed of lands voluntarily given up and cancelled by the parties to it with intent to revest the estate in the grantor as between them and as to all subsequent claimants under them, operates as a conveyance and revests the estate in the grantor. Tomsnn v. Ward, 1 N. H. 9.

A mere agreement, however, to cancel a deed, without actually cancelling it cannot have this effect. Farrar v. Farrar 4 N. H. 191; Dana v. Newhall, 13 Mass. 498; Cross v. Powell, Cro. Eliz. 483.

Cancellation of Stamps.—A neglect to cancel the stamps on an instrument by initials and the date indorsed thereon will not invalidate the instrument. Ballard v. Burnside, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 102.

Where a promissory note made by three or more has the requisite stamps upon it, and is cancelled only by the initials of the first in order of the signers, with the date of the instrument, this is a sufficient cancellation within the meaning of the United States Revenue Law. Spear v. Alexander, Exr., 42 Ala. 572.

1. An agreement by one person to cancel the indebtedness of another to a third person is an agreement to pay it. In this case the court, Johnson, J., said: "As a stranger having no interest in the indebtedness, the only way in which he could cancel it would be by payment, and the agreement to cancel must be held to include the promise to do whatever should be necessary to effect the cancellation. To cancel is to blot out or obliterate; to annul or destroy; and as this could only be accomplished lawfully by a third person, by payment, it is clearly an undertaking to pay." Auburn City Bank v. Leonard, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 119, 134.

Where A and B gave a sealed note to C, and A afterwards gave a bond and mortgage to C for the amount due on the note, in consideration of which C covenanted to procure and cancel the note, it was held that though the bond and mortgage were not an extinguishment of the note, yet the covenant made with A enured to B, and was a covenant not to sue, which amounted to a release of the note. Phelps v. Johnson, 8 John. (N. Y.) 54; s. c., 7 Wheel. Am. C. L. 514.

So where one entered into a contract for the purchase of land and paid part of the purchase-money, and subsequently the parties indorsed on the contract this agreement, to wit: "For value received, we hereby cancel the annexed and within agreement, and mutually agree and discharge each other from all the covenants and agreements therein contained; and the said Winton, the purchaser, hereby surrenders possession of the within described premises to said Spring, in a suit to recover the purchase-money paid,"—the court, Baldwin, J., said: "The agreement of cancellation evidently was intended to effect a complete settlement in regard to the subject; it discharges the parties from all covenants and agreements in the original contract, and provides for a surrender of the premises. Nothing is said or done in reference to the refunding of the $4000. If the intention was to place the parties in statu quo, and this were supposed to be effected by the use of the word 'cancel,' as equivalent to the word 'rescind,' it is probable that language more unequivocal would have been employed. The latter clause of the agreement in respect to the possession would be tautological in this view; for the restoration of possession would follow from the use of the word 'cancel' in the first line. Besides, it is to be supposed that the party in possession, having paid his money, would not abandon the possession until he got a return of it, or some provision was made for securing it. He would scarcely have left so large an amount a matter of open account. Nor is it probable that the question as to the rents and profits of the land would be left unliquidated. It is much more probable that when parties come to an arrangement of a business matter they settle all the terms of the contract than that they leave them unadjusted. The word 'cancel' applied to the agreement, under the circumstances, means no more than 'doing away with' an existing agreement upon the terms and with the consequences mentioned in the writing. What is not said is excluded; and whatever was meant to be obligatory was expressed." Winton v. Spring, 18 Cal. 451.

CANDIDATE. (See also ELECTIONS; LIBEL; LIBERTY OF THE PRESS; SLANDER.)—One who offers himself, or is offered by others, to the suffrages of the electors.[1]

1. Where in a qui tam action of debt under the statute for bribery at an election verdict was given for the plaintiff; on a motion that verdict be entered for the plaintiff because, inter alia, it did not appear by any evidence given "that Lord Egmont (who was charged to be a candidate, and for whom these persons, alleged to have been bribed were to give their votes) was there declared a candidate," Lord Mansfield, C. J., said: "Candidate is a vague term; no certain idea is fixed, by law, to it. But Mr. Lockyer was certainly a candidate; and this was a bribe to induce White to vote for him, at least. Surely asking a vote for a man is enough to make him a candidate. Lockyer was clearly a candidate himself; and the bribe was, 'to vote for him and his friend.'" Combe v. Pitt, 3 Burrow, 1586, 1590. And in the same case reported by Wm. Blackstone: "The second objection goes upon the vague idea of what is a candidate previous to the day of election. The poll is then the only evidence. The House of Commons in the case of Gore of Tring, candidate for Bucks, determined that nothing was evidence of being a candidate but the poll-books. Before the time of election any one is a candidate for whom a vote is asked. This very fact makes the person in whose behalf the bribe was given a candidate." Combe v. Pitt, 1 Wm. Blackstone, 523.

But in holding that a person who is nominated and elected to serve in Parliament for the city of Westminster without being present at, or in any way interfering himself, or by his agents, with the election, or holding himself out, or authorizing any one else to hold him out as a candidate, but afterwards takes his seat in the House of Commons, is not chargeable under the stat. 51 G. III, c. 126 with the expenses of the hustings, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said: "I own, upon consideration of this act of Parliament, I cannot bring myself to doubt what is the natural sense and meaning of the word 'candidate' as it is used by the legislature. The legislature has directed that convenient booths shall be erected by the bailiff for holding the election; and there can be no doubt that they assumed that upon every occasion of an election there would be found a 'candidate or candidates' in the ordinary sense of that word; that is, persons offering themselves to the suffrages of the electors. That I take it is, strictly speaking, the correct sense of the word 'candidate.' Therefore a person cannot be in that sense of the word a 'candidate' by the mere act of others, who propose him without his assent. The legislature, indeed, assumed that it would always be the case of every person who should be proposed, that he would be so far assenting as to answer the description of a candidate, and therefore they thought

CANDLES.—A wick composed of linen or cotton threads, and dipped or drawn through tallow, wax, spermaceti, or similar substances, so as to form a cylindrical body when hardened; used to furnish light.[1]

CANNOT. See CAN.

CANON.—I. A rule, law, or ordinance in general;[2] particularly a rule or precept of ecclesiastical law.[3]

II. A dignitary of the English Church; a person possessing a prebend or revenue allotted for the performance of divine service in a cathedral or collegiate church.[4]

III. (Spanish Law.) "The annual charge or rent which is paid on recognition of the dominium utile by the person who holds the dominium utile."[5]

CANT, or LICITATION.—A mode of dividing property held in common by two or more persons.[6]

it sufficient to impose the burthen of recompensing the bailiff on persons answering that description. But a case has arisen not within their contemplation; for here there is not any evidence that the defendant tendered himself in any way as the object of choice; but he was merely passive; the electors of themselves having brought him forward without any consent on his part. The question then is whether the legislature intended to throw on such a description of person, whom we must take to be an unwilling candidate, the charge of making this reimbursement. The legislature have not so said; they said only that the expenses shall be defrayed by the candidate, that is, by the person who offers himself. And really there might be infinite hardship in imposing this burthen on any others. Suppose a person from motives of spleen or in jest should think fit to put forward another as a candidate, shall it be in his power to cast so heavy a burthen on the other because he may choose to indulge his malice or pleasantry? I do not see anything in the act of Parliament which makes it susceptible of a construction leading to so mischievous a result, or which affords a reason for extending the word 'candidate' beyond its ordinary import." Morris v. Burdett, 2 M. & S. 212.

On the other hand, it has been held in Canada that a candidate for office who is proposed and seconded at the nomination meeting can only withdraw from his candidature with the consent of his proposer and seconder and of the electors present; the court saying: "It seems to me very clear, whatever may be the derivation of the word, that a candidate in the sense of the statute is one put forward for election, no matter whether with or against his own will; from which it would seem to follow that he cannot, without the consent of others, resign. His assent is not necessary to his candidature, but he must have a proposer and seconder. He need not be present at the meeting, and his dissent from the proceeding is unavailing." Reg. ex rel. Coyne v. Chisholm, 5 U. C. Pr. Rep. 328.

1. Candles one-eighth made are within the meaning of the statute 11 Geo 1. ch. 30, § 30, prohibiting candle-makers to mix unweighed with weighed candles. Atyt.-Gen. v. Barrell, 1 Younge & Jerv. 495.

The business of a tallow-chandler is a nuisance for which an action will lie. See 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.) 694, § 10; Morley v. Pragnell, Cro. Cas. 510; Allen v. State, 34 Tex. 230. Contra, Aldred's Case, 9 Co. 57 b.

2. Webster; Abbott's Law Dict.

E.g., canons of descent or inheritance, the legal rules by which inheritances are determined, and according to which estates are transmitted by descent from the ancestor to the heir. 2 Bl. Com. 208; 4 Kent. Com. 374.

3. In this sense canon is defined by Rapalje & Lawrence (L. Dict.) to be (1) any rule of the jus canonicum contained in the Decretum Gratiani, or (2) a rule of ecclesiastical conduct promulgated by the Convocation of the Church of England, whether it has legal force or not.

4. 1 Bl. Com. 382; 2 Steph. Com. 67.

All members of chapters, except deans, in every cathedral or collegiate church in England are to be styled Canons according to 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 1.

5. Hart v. Bennett, 15 Cal. 556.

6. It is a judicial sale made at the CANVAS.—A coarse cloth made of hemp or flax.[1]

CAPABLE.—Endued with power competent to the object; qualified for; susceptible of.[2]

CAPACITY.—Power; competency; qualification; ability, power or qualification to do certain acts.[3] request of the parties, and it may be avoided by the consent of all those interested, in the same manner in which any other contract or agreement may be avoided, which is entered into by consent. Hayes v. Curry, 9 Mart. (La.) 87. See Webster.

1. Webster.

In a revenue statute "floor-cloth canvas" and "oil-cloth foundation" were held to mean the same thing, and not burlaps, but a thing entirely distinct and different from that article. Arthur v. Cumming, 1 Otto (U. S.), 362.

2. Webster.

An unripe growing crop is personal property not capable of manual delivery, and is subject to attachment as such. Raventas v. Green. 57 Cal. 254.

Capable of Raising a Weight of 2000 lbs. without Risk, in a contract, means having strength or power enough to lift and sustain that weight during the lifting, and it does not amount to a stipulation that that capacity will exist with the application of any specified power. Hamilton v. Myers, 24 U. C. C. P. 309.

3. "The test of capacity to make an agreement or conveyance is that a man shall have the ability to understand the nature and effect of the act in which he is engaged and the business he is transacting." Eaton v. Eaton, 8 Vr. (N. J.) 113.

In any Office or Capacity.—In a statute providing for fixing the salaries of deputy collectors, by which it was provided that no such deputy should receive more than a certain amount "for any services he may perform for the United States in any office or capacity," the true intent of the last clause is to limit the emoluments of the deputy collector in that office, and "to make no allowance to him on account of any incidental services he may perform, or emoluments he may receive beyond that sum." "In any office or capacity" is equivalent to "in any such office or capacity." United States v. Morse, 3 Story (C. C.), 87.

Misdemeanor in his Professional Capacity.—This expression in a statute in reference to attorneys-at-law is not used in the technical sense of offences punishable by fine and imprisonment in jail, but as equivalent to professional misbehavior. In re Bowman, 8 Cent. L. J. 250; s. c., 7 Mo. App. 569.

Fiduciary Capacity.—Under an act providing process of arrest in an action for money had and received by "a factor, agent, broker, or other person in a fiduciary capacity," only those are subject to arrest "who received moneys purely in a fiduciary capacity as simple agents, to apply it as directed or agreed." All those are excluded "who may have a personal interest in such money or its use, and a right to control it independently of any appropriation of it according to instructions of the owner, or where liability for repaying such moneys grows out of a transaction in which credit appears to have been given to the pecuniary responsibility of the recipient rather than confidence placed in his personal character." McBurney v. Martin, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 502.

Accordingly the following have been held to be within the act: A commission merchant. Schudder v. Shiells. 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 420; Ostell v. Brough, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 274. An agent employed to collect moneys for his principal. Stoll v. King, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 298. An agent employed to sell goods, who was to account weekly. Turner v. Thompson, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 444. A factor who receives money to be invested in goods, with the condition that he is not to use it for any other purpose. Noble v. Prescott, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 139. An auctioneer who receives goods for sale under an agreement that he is to receive as compensation all obtained over a certain price. Holbrook v. Homer, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 86. One intrusted by the plaintiffs with their acceptances of his drafts, to be procured by him to be discounted and the proceeds to be returned, for which service he was to receive a commission. Wolfe v. Brouwer, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 601. A broker employed to buy and sell gold and stocks, with whom a deposit had been made to secure him against loss by such transactions, who had rendered an account showing a balance due by him, but who on demand had refused to pay it. Clark v. Pinckney, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 226. An assignee for the benefit of creditors who had received money, of which by the CAPE.—The termination of a neck of land extending some distance into the sea beyond the common shore.[1]

CAPIAS (see ARREST; BAIL; EXECUTION; WRIT).—Capias, take. Writ for the arrest of a defendant in a civil action. (See Bouvier Law Dict.)

CAPIAS AD RESPONDENDUM (abbreviation, Capias.)—A writ by means of which under the common law the body of a defendant in a civil action was taken into custody for the purpose of compelling him to answer the complaint of his adversary.[2]

"Rex —— vicecomiti salutem!

"Præcipimus tibi quod capias —— Si fuerit in balliva tua, et eum salvo terms of the assignment the plaintiff was entitled to a share, which the assignee, though requested, had refused to pay over. Roberts v. Prosser, 53 N. Y. 260. And where goods were consigned to one firm for sale and another firm guaranteed such notes as the first should take in payment for the goods, these notes to be placed in their hands for collection, the latter firm were held to be in a fiduciary capacity. Chaine v. Coffin, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 441. See also Angus v. Dunscomb, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 14.

The following are not within the act: One who was to take charge of a ship, pay the expenses of every kind connected with her, sell her, pay the expenses of sale, and account for the balance which he might owe the owner after deducting the payments of all kinds made by him and whatever the owner had previously owed him. Goodrich v. Dunbar. 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 644. A banker who is allowed to use moneys deposited and collected. Bussing v. Thompson, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 97.

Under a similar act, a son who in the course of the management of his father's farm sold a portion of the stock and retained the proceeds was held to be acting in a fiduciary capacity, when suit was brought against him after his father's death, by those interested in the latter's estate. Morris v. Ingram, 13 Ch. Div. 338.

The U. S. Bankrupt Act of 1841 provided that all persons owing debts which had not been created in consequence of defalcation as a public officer, or as an executor, administrator, guardian, or trustee, or while acting in another fiduciary capacity, should, on complying with its requisites, be entitled to discharge under it. Under this act it was held that the cases enumerated were "not implied but special trusts, and the 'other fiduciary capacity' mentioned must mean the same class of trusts. The act speaks of technical trusts and not those which the law implies from the contract." A factor is consequently not within the meaning of the act. Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How. (U. S.) 202; Hayman v. Pond, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 328. Nor one who receives notes for collection and retains amounts collected. Bank v. Buckner, 2 La Ann. 1023. A collector of city taxes is. Morse v. Lowell, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 152.

The corresponding section (33) in the Bankrupt Act of 1867 limited the exception to persons "while acting in a fiduciary capacity." In construing this act Chapman v. Forsyth was followed in Cronan v. Cotting, 104 Mass. 245. But one who received goods to be sold on commission and was to transmit the proceeds to his principal, less his commissions, was held to be acting in a fiduciary capacity in Treadwell v. Holloway, 46 Cal. 547.

1. Webster.

"The terms 'beyond the Cape of Good Hope' (in tariff acts) are employed as descriptive of the locality of certain countries, not their relative position with respect to ports of import. They are used to avoid the necessity of enumerating the countries which lie east of the Cape. 'Beyond the Cape' and 'east of the Cape' are often used in the acts of Congress as equivalent expressions." Hadden v. Collector, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Campbell v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 221.

Countries beyond the Cape of Good Hope are those with which the United States, at the time of the passage of the act, ordinarily carried on commerce by passing around the cape. The existence of the Suez Canal furnishes no indication of an intention by Congress to give a new significance to the expression. Powers v. Comly, 11 Otto (U. S.), 789.

2. Bouvier, Tomlins, Wharton, and Abbott Law Dict.; Sellon Pr., Introduction; Archb. New Pr. 216; Chitty Pr. pt. iii. chap. 8; 1 Tidd Pr. 128.

custodias, ita quod habias corpus ejus coram justiariis nostris apud Westmonasterium —— tali die —— ad respondendum: de placito quod," etc. [1]

The history of the writ is inseparably connected with the history of the law of arrest in civil cases. At common law a person could not be arrested except in cases of injury committed vi et armis,[2] but by successive enactments the right of arrest came to be allowed in all actions for the recovery of money, damages, or personal property.[3] It is now limited to cases involving fifty pounds or more, where the defendant is about to leave England to the serious prejudice of the plaintiff's right of recovery.[4]

Originally the right of capias issued only in the event that the defendant failed to appear in response to the original writ, and was part of the mesne process to compel his appearance. In the course of time, however, it became the original writ in all cases where the right of arrest was allowed.[5] At present suits cannot be commenced in this manner. The original writ of capias has been abolished, and the writ of capias on mesne process restored.[6]

As will appear from the form given, a capias was a command issued in the name of the king to a sheriff or coroner of the county in which the defendant resided, commanding him to take and hold the body of the defendant, and have the same before the court on a certain day, there to answer the demand of the plaintiff. It was executed by the arrest and imprisonment of the person named. The return in such a case was, Cepi corpus et committitur (C. C. et C.). If the defendant could not be found, a return of Non est inventus (N. E. I.) was made, and the plaintiff might thereupon have an alias, or pluries capias. If the defendant still could not be found, the plaintiff was allowed an exegi capias, and might proceed to outlawry, the effect of which was to deprive the defendant of his rights of liberty and property, and subject him to various other penalties.[7] In early days, a defendant arrested for debt was kept in confinement until the return day of the writ. The great hardship of the law led to the adoption of a statute which permitted all persons arrested under such circumstances to be discharged on reasonable bail.[8] Further protection against the oppression of creditors has been afforded by recent statutes.[9] A defendant may also procure his release by showing that the writ is irregular, or by defeating the plaintiff at the trial of the cause, or by satisfying the demand against him.

In America the right of arrest on mesne process in civil actions, and the process by which the right is enforced, are regulated by the statutes of the various States. In most of the States such

1. 2 Reeves Hist. Common Law, 439.
2. Tidd Pr. 126–993; Sellon Pr. 52.
3. Stat. of Mortbridge, 2 Hen. III. c. 23; of Acton & Burrell, 2 Edw. I.; of Merchants, 13 Edw. I. and 25 Edw. III. c. 17, 19 Hen. VII. c. 9, 23 Hen. VIII. c. 14, 21 Jac. I. c. 4; Sellon Pr. and Tidd Pr., tit. Capias.
4. 32 & 33 Vict., c. 62, s. 6.
5. Sellon Pr., Introduction; Wharton Dict.
6. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. s. 3.
7. Tidd Pr. 126–128; Bouvier Dict., Ca. sa.
8. Sellon Pr. 57–58; 23 Hen. VII. c. 9.
9. 12 Geo. I. c. 29; 22 Geo. II. c. 3; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 4; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 83, s. 20.

right has been abolished. Where it is allowed, it is restricted to special cases of fraud or probable injury to the plaintiff by reason of the removal of the defendant for the purpose of avoiding process. The word capias is still used to denote the writ by which an arrest is procured.

CAPIAS AD SATISFACIENDUM (Ca. sa.)—Writ of execution, issued after judgment against the body of the defendant for the purpose of compelling him to make the satisfaction awarded.[1]

"Rex —— vicecomiti salutem!

"Præcipimus tibi quod capias —— Si inventus fuerit in balliva tua, et eum salvo custodias, ita quod habias corpus ejus coram justiariis apud Westmonasterium —— tali die —— ad satisfaciendum —— tam de —— quos idem —— in curia nostra adjudicata fuerunt pro damnis suis, quæ habuit occasione detentionis debiti prædicti."[2]

The writ issued in all cases where the plaintiff might have procured the arrest of the defendant under a capias ad respondendum,[3] and was executed by the arrest and imprisonment of the person therein named, until the judgment of the court was complied with. The return of the officer was Cepi corpus (C. C.) if the defendant was found, or Non est inventus (N. E. I.) if he was not found.[4] A defendant taken under a ca. sa. could not procure his release by giving bail. The annals of Fleet prison afford many pathetic illustrations of the hardships inflicted upon debtors under this process.[5]

So long as the defendant was kept in confinement, an execution might not issue against his real or personal property. If he escaped he might be retaken. If he died in prison, or was released at the instance of the plaintiff, the judgment was held to have been satisfied, and no further proceedings could be had against his person or estate.[6] In the reign of James I., however, it "appearing that divers persons of sufficiency in real and personal estate, minding to deceive others of their just debts, have obstinately chosen to live and die in prison rather than make satisfaction," a statute was passed allowing in such cases a writ of execution to issue against their estates.[7]

The only modes by which a debtor might release himself from imprisonment were by showing an irregularity in the writ, by satisfying the judgment against him, or by reversing it.[8]

A ca. sa. also issued at the instance of a defendant if the plaintiff failed to make good his complaint for the costs of the suit.[9]

At present, both in England and the United States, process against the person of a defendant in a civil action is regulated by statute. In England the right to arrest a defendant against whom

1. Bouvier, Abbott, Tidd Pr.; Chitty Pr., tit. Capias.
2. 2 Reeves Hist. Com. Law, 439.
3. Tidd Pr. 1025.
4. Bouvier Dict.
5. Bouvier Dict.; Tidd Pr. 1029.
6. Tidd Pr. 1029.
7. 21 Jac. I. c. 24.
8. For irregularities see Peacock v. Day, 3 D. P. C. 291: Bastard v. Gutch, 4 D. P. C. 6; Rose v. Tomlinson, 3 D. P. C. 49; In re Cobbitt, 10 W. R. 40.
9. Tidd Pr. 1025; Newton v. Conyngham, 17 L. J. C. P. 288.

a judgment has been obtained is confined to cases where the defendant can pay but will not.[1]

CAPITA (pl. of caput).—Heads; entire bodies of persons or animals; persons individually considered, as distinguished from stocks of descent.[2]

CAPITAL.—I. The actual estate, whether in money or property, which is owned by an individual or a corporation.[3]

II. The sum of money which a merchant, trader, or other person or association adventures in any business requiring the expenditure of money, with a view to profit.[4]

III. The property or means contributed by the stockholders of a corporation or association as the fund or basis for the business or enterprise for which the corporation or association was formed.[5]

1. Wharton Lexicon; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62

2. Burrill's L. Dict.

Per Capita.—When descendants take as individuals share and share alike, and not by right of representation (per stirpes) they are said to take per capita. 2 Bl. Com. 218.

3. People v. Commissioners, 23 N. Y. 219

The words "the whole of my capital which shall remain with me after my death in ready money and in bank billets," used in a will, do not include consols. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. 1.

Moneyed Capital, in the act of Congress of Feb 10, 1868 (Rev. Stat. § 5219), permitting taxation of national bank stock by a State provided it be at no greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State. "The terms of the act of Congress include shares of stock or other interests owned by individuals in all enterprises in which the capital employed in carrying on its business is money, where the object of the business is the making of profit by its use as money." Merc. Nat'l Bank v. City of New York, 121 U. S. 138; s. c., 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

It includes money at interest, shares in a national or other bank or trust company. Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 480; Merc. Nat'l Bank v. City of New York, 121 U. S. 138. But not shares in railroad, ferry, canal, manufacturing or other industrial corporations. McMahon v. Palmer, 102 N. Y. 176. Nor insurance companies. Merc. Nat'l Bank v. City of New York, 121 U. S. 138. See Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322.

4. Capital is "the fund dedicated to a business to support its credit, to provide for contingencies, to suffer diminution from losses, and to derive accretion from gains and profits." Lyon v. Zimmer, 30 Fed. Repr. 410.

Capital employed by a banker in the business of banking does not include, under sec. 110 of the Revenue Act of 1866, moneys borrowed by him temporarily from time to time in the ordinary course of his business. It applies only to the property or moneys of the banker set apart from other uses and permanently invested in the business. Bailey v. Clark, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 284.

Where A and B each contributed $20.-000 to a partnership, by the articles of which none of the capital of the firm nor of the accrued but undivided profits were to be used except in the business, and at dissolution each was to draw out the amount of capital originally contributed by him, and A died, directing his executors by his will to leave in the business for two years his "present capital" therein, held, that the word "capital" had the same meaning in the will as in the articles; it was to be distinguished from profits and applied only to the original contribution. Dean v. Dean, 54 Wis. 23.

5. Bailey v. Clark, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 284.

In this sense the word "stock" is sometimes added. Rapalje & Lawrence L. Dict., v. infra.

Capital, in an Internal Revenue Act, means in reference to a bank the amount of capital fixed by its charter, and does dot include its surplus earnings. Bank v. Townsend, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 318.

Where a foreign corporation is required to deposit a certain amount of securities before it can do business in a State, those securities are capital for purposes of taxation. Assurance Co. v. Commissioners, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 318.

Where a mutual insurance company is authorized to accumulate from its profits a fund to continue liable for its losses during the term of its existence, and to issue certificates to its members setting forth their interest therein, the accumulation becomes capital and is taxable as such. Insurance Co. v. Mayor, etc., of New York, 8 N. Y. 241. See Bank v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 281.

In a statute providing for the taxing of "all real estate of railroads not used for the ordinary and usual purposes of operating the roads and all real estate so used for which no part of the capital was expended," capital means "money used in the construction and equipment of the road whether obtained from the issuing of stock or by loan." Sawyer v. Nashua, 59 N. H. 404.

Where the directors of a company were authorized to borrow on the security of the company's property any sum not exceeding two thirds of the capital of the company not called up, the term "capital" was held to mean nominal capital and to include shares not yet issued. Steamship Co. v. Rolt, 17 Ch. Div. 715.

Capital Stock, used in a charter, means "the amount of capital to be contributed by the stockholders for the purposes of the corporation," and is never used "to indicate the value of the property of the company." State v. Morristown Fire Assoc., 3 Zab. (N. J.) 195.

It is "the whole undivided fund paid in by the stockholdders, the legal right to which is vested in the corporation to be used and managed in trust for the benefit of the members." Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490; Bank v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 281.

The original sum upon which a corporation "commences." Bank v. City Council, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 346.

"The capital stock of a corporation is, like that of a copartnership or joint-stock company, the amount which the partners or associates put in as their stake in the concern." It includes neither debt nor profits. Barry v. Merchants' Exchange Co., 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 280; Reid v. Eatonton Mfg. Co., 40 La. 98.

It "consists of the sums due by virtue of the subscriptions or collected from the subscribers and invested for the benefit of the corporation." State v. Railroad Co., 30 Conn. 290.

The phrase is used convertibly with "capital." People v. Commissioners, 23 N. Y. 222; State v. Railroad Co., 30 Conn. 290.

It must be distinguished from stock and stock certificates, which are the individual interest of the stockholder and the evidence of such interest in the dividends as they are declared and the effects of the corporation on hand at its dissolution. Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490.

Hence, a statute forbidding a corporation to divide any portion of its capital stock among its stockholders does not prevent the issuing and division among the stockholders of stock certificates. Williams v. W. U. Tel. Co., 9 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 437.

In Statutes and Charters. — The term "capital stock," in an act exempting the capital stock of a railroad from taxation, does not include the property into which the capital has been converted. Railroad Co. v. Gaines, 97 U. S. 697. Nor are lands granted by Congress within such an act. Railroad Co. v. Loftin, 30 Ark. 693.

But in Railroad Co. v. Shacklett, 30 Mo. 550, the term was held to include the road-bed, machinery, depots, and other property used in operating the road, though this was recognized as an unusual extension of its meaning required by the particular act construed. So where the capital stock of a bank was exempted from taxation by its charter, all its property, real and personal, was held to be exempt. New Haven v. City Bank, 31 Conn. 106.

But accumulated profits which have not been divided among the stockholders are not a part of the capital stock so as to be exempt from taxation. Bank v. City of Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 281. See also Insurance Co. v. Mayor, etc., 8 N. Y. 241.

Increases of stock authorized by the legislature are within the meaning of the term "capital stock" as used in the act of incorporation, and as such are exempt from taxation. State v. Railroad Co., 30 Conn. 290.

Under a statute imposing a tax on the franchises and capital stock of corporations, in which it was provided that "the capital stock of all companies and associations . . shall be so valued . . as to ascertain and determine, respectively, the fair cash value of such capital stock, including the franchise, over and above the asssesed value of the tangible property," etc., the term "capital stock" was held to mean not the shares of stock, but the aggregate capital of the company. State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575; Railroad Co. v. Vance, 96 U. S. 450. All the property belonging to the corporation, of whatever kind, wherever located. Pacific Hotel Co. v. Lieb, 83 Ill. 602; Railroad Co. v. Weber. 96 Ill. 443. It was held to have reference to the actual value and not to the nominal

IV. Punishable with death; affecting life.[1]
V. Large; of great size.[2]

CAPITATION.—A tax laid upon persons as individuals irrespective of property; a poll-tax.[3]

CAPTAIN.—The military officer who commands a company or troop; the commander of a ship; the foreman of a body of workmen, and the like.[4] amount of the capital, in People v. Commissioners, 69 N. Y. 91.

Capital stock was held to mean capital paid in and not amount of authorized capital, in an act of incorporation which provided that when the dividends exceeded six per cent per annum on the capital stock, six per cent on the dividends should be paid to the municipality. Philadelphia v. Railway Co., 52 Pa. 177.

On the other hand, the amount of the shares subscribed and not the sum actually paid in was held to constitute the capital stock of a corporation, in Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486.

But the "whole capital stock" means the capital stock actually subscribed for and issued in an act enabling a stockholder of a railroad sold on foreclosure to acquire the same relative interest in the road as he had before the sale, by paying to the purchasers a sum equal to such proportion of the price paid on the sale and the costs and expenses as his stock bears to the whole capital stock. Pratt v. Munson, 17 Hun (N. Y.), 475.

In a statute prohibiting the trustees of a corporation from dividing, withdrawing, or in any way paying to the stockholders any part of the capital stock, the latter means the "capital of the corporation in which it transacts its business, whether such capital consist of money, property, or other valuable commodities." Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300. See Williams v. W. U. Tel. Co., 9 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 437.

Available Capital.—A prospectus of a railway company describing the contract for the construction of the line as having been entered into at a price "considerably within the available capital of the company" was held not an honest and fair representation, but deceptive where the price was £420 000 and the capital was £500,000 less £50,000, the price of the concession to make the road. Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, L. R. 2 H. L. C. 99.

1. Capital Cases, in a statute requiring all the judges of a court to sit in such cases, includes the whole proceeding from the impanelling of the grand jury to the execution of final sentence; and an indictment cannot be found in the absence of the president of the court. Cook v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 165.

Capital Offence.—Although under the Penal Code of Alabama the jury have the power of determining whether the punishment for murder in the first degree shall be death or not, this does not make the offence any the less capital. Murder is still within the act forbidding bail to one charged with a capital offence. Ex parte McCrary, 22 Ala. 65.

Charged with a Capital Offence means charged in legal form. State v. Duncan, 9 Port. (Ala.) 260.

2. Capital Letters.—Letters of large size, though of small Roman character, are sufficient to comply with a statute requiring toll-boards to be erected bearing the rates of toll in large or capital letters. The object is legibility. Nichols v. Bertram, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 342.

3. Abbott's L. Dict.

A tax on "deadheads" is not a capitation tax, for it is a tax upon the privilege of a free ride in a railroad car. "A capitation tax is one upon the person simply, without reference to his property, real or personal, or to any business in which he may be engaged, or to any employment which he may follow." Gardner v. Hall, Phill. L. (N. Car.) 21.

4. Web. Dict.

There is a great necessity to give effect to a custom of captains of steamboats at a large river-port to insure their boats and give premium notes therefor; the perils of navigation being so well known that a due regard for some indemnity against loss is justly recognized as a necessary precaution. "That a custom so general and notorious may exist as to authorize the captain of a steamboat to effect an insurance on it for the benefit of the owners without their express direction we think well settled by authority." Adams v. Pittsburg Ins. Co., 14 Nor. (Pa.) 348.

Where it was made felony for a soldier to depart from his captain, the majority of the judges held that it was felony for him to depart from a conductor who was

CAPTION (see also INDICTMENT) is that part of the record which comprehends the history of the cause to the time of finding the indictment.[1]

CAPTURE (see also PRIZE and SEIZURE) includes every species of taking by force and violence from without to which a vessel may be exposed during a voyage, whether by a lawful government in the exercise of belligerent rights or the enforcement of municipal laws, or by mere pirates, or by vessels sailing under a pretended but illegitimate authority, such as cruisers of the Confederate States during the Civil War.[2] taking him to the sea-side—a conductor being a captain within the meaning of the statute. Wilberf. Stat. L. 258; The Soldier's Case, Cro. Car. 71.

1. 1 Bish. Cr. Pr. § 657.

"All that part of the record which precedes the recital of the indictment is called the caption, and may as well as the indictment itself furnish matter of plea or ground for motion to quash," etc. State v. Gibbons, 1 South. (N. J.) 46.

"The caption of the indictment is no part of the indictment itself, but is the style or preamble or return that is made from an inferior court to a superior, from whence a certiorari issues to remove, or when the whole record is made up in form." People v. Bennett, 37 N. Y. 123.

"The title or caption of the bill is no part of the bill and does not remove the objection to the defects in the pleadings." Jackson v. Ashton, 8 Peters (U. S.). 148.

An indictment is good when the day of the commission of the offence is laid by reference to the caption. Jacobs v. Comm., 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 314. See also Wharton's Am. Cr. Law, 63.

The history of the proceedings, as copied or extracted from the schedule, is called the caption, and is entered of record immediately before the indictment. Taylor v. Clemson, 2 A. & E. (N. S.) 1010.

Caption of indictment need not state that the jury were sworn at the time when and the place where they presented it. Rex v. Pheasant, 2 Raym. R. 548.

The title of a deposition taken before a magistrate is also called the caption. Rosc. Cr. Ev. 71. And a certificate of the taking of a commission subscribed by the commissioners. Blount.

A taking, a seizure, an arrest. 2 Salk. 498. The word in this sense is now obsolete in English law. Burrill's Law Dict.

In Scotch law caption is an order to incarcerate a debtor who has disobeyed an order given him by what are called "letters of horning" to pay a debt or to perform some act enjoined thereby. Duncan v. Houston, 7 Wilson & Shaw, 519.

2. Dole v. New Eng. Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 6 Allen (Mass.), 373.

"A taking by the enemy of vessel or cargo as prize in time of war, or by way of reprisal, with intent to deprive the owner of it. Mawran v. Ins. Co., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 10; Rodocanachi v. Elliott, L. R. 8 C. P. 670; Richardson v. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 109; Dole v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 51 Me. 476.

Capture, in technical language, is a taking by military power; seizure is a taking by civil authority. U. S. v. Athens Armory. 35 Ga. 344.

In order to constitute a capture some act must be done indicative of an intention to seize and to retain as prize; it is sufficient if such intention is fairly to be inferred from the conduct of the captor. The Grotius, 9 Cranch (U. S.), 368.

It is not strictly necessary to a complete capture that the prize should be carried into the territory of the captors and there condemned. Moxon v. The Fanny, 2 Pet. Adm. 309; Firfield v. Ins. Co., 47 Pa. 187; Whitfield v. U. S., 11 Ct. of Claims R. 456.

Boarding and destroying a frigate under peremptory orders to set her on fire, and after blowing out her bottom to abandon her, was held not a capture. The duty performed was that of destruction, not of capture. Decatur v. U. S., 33 Dev. (U. S. Ct. of Cl.) 200.

Capture, as used in a policy of marine insurance, means a seizure as prize, with the intent or expectation of obtaining a condemnation. Richardson v. Maine Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 102.

The taking of a vessel with intent to make prize of her, as is proved by her being libelled, is a capture within the principles laid down by eminent writers. Lee v. Boardman, 3 Mass. 238.

The words "capture," "detention," etc., in the memorandum in a policy mean illegal seizure, arrest, etc. Archibald

CAR.—A carriage for running on the rails of a railway.[1]

v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 3 Pick. (Mass.) 70.

In international law the strict rule is that when two nations are at war with one another the movable property of the individual subjects of each nation is liable to capture by the other. In modern times, however, this rule has been subject to two qualifications: (1) that the capture must be effected by persons holding a commission or authority from their government; and (2) that the property of those subjects of the enemy who are within the dominions of the other State at the time of the declaration of war is exempt from capture, except by way of reprisals. The latter qualification is considered by some not to be a matter of strict right; it is provided for by treaties between the principal states of the world. It follows from the first qualification that persons seizing an enemy's property on the high seas without a commission are guilty of piracy. Mann. L. of N. 166 et seq.

Capturing Merchant-vessel as Pirate.—Since the vessels of all nations may capture pirates on the high seas, if an innocent merchant-vessel conducts in a way to induce the commander of another vessel to believe her piratical, this one by capturing her does not become subject to forfeiture. The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; 2 How. (U. S.) 210.

Captured Property.—Property which has been seized or taken from hostile possession by the military and naval forces of the United States. U. S. v. Padelford, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 540.

Booty.—Property captured by an army on land is called "booty of war" and belongs to the sovereign; but it has long been usual to grant it to the captors.

Prize.—Property captured at sea.

The Captors, whether of booty or prize, are of two classes, actual, and constructive or joint. When a prize is taken at sea there is usually no doubt as to who is the actual captor, namely, the ship to which the prize strikes its flag. But the phrase "actual captors" includes many others besides those who actually have taken part in the capture. The whole of the ship's crew may not be on board the ship at the time of the capture, or the prize may have been taken out of sight of the ship, and at a great distance from it, by the ship's tender, or by a boat's crew detached from the ship, that is held to take the prize. The whole ship's crew share.

In the case of booty a similar principle is applied by drawing the line between division and division, treating the division of an army as analogous (for this purpose) to a ship of war, so that when booty has been captured by any portion of a division, that division is in the first instance to be regarded as the actual captor.

Joint or constructive captors are those who have assisted, or are taken to have assisted, the actual captors. The leaning of the courts is against claim by joint captors, except in the two cases of association and co-operation. Association takes place when two or more ships or divisions of an army are associated under the same immediate commander. Co-operation is where the joint captors have assisted the actual captors by conveying encouragement to them or intimidation to the enemy. In the case of naval prize the joint captor must be in sight both of the prize and the actual captor to substantiate her claim; but in cases of booty a wider application is allowed to the term "co-operation," owing to the difference between the nature of naval and military operations, and between the surface of the sea and that of the land; hence the rule of sight is inapplicable to capture on land, and each case must be judged on its own grounds, subject to the rule that services, to base a claim of joint capture, must have a direct and immediate effect in influencing the capture.

Conjunct Capture.—Where a capture is effected by naval or military forces in conjunction with an ally, the capture is said to be conjunct, and is divided between the allied forces. Rapalje & Lawrence Law Dict.

Recapture.—By the doctrine of post-liminium (q.v), property which has been captured by an enemy and recaptured within twenty-four hours, or before being taken to a place of safety, reverts to its original owner; the rule, however, varies with different nations. Mann. Int. Law, 190.

1. The indictment charging the offence as having been committed in "the freight and express car of the American Express Company" sufficiently describes "a railroad freight or passenger car" within the meaning of section 4410, Rev. St. "One of the definitions of a car given by Webster is 'a carriage for running on the rails of a railway,' illustrating by the picture of a 'railway car,' with these two words beneath it. Every 'express car' must be a 'freight car,' and to make it certain the charge is 'the freight and

CARDINAL.—I. In ecclesiastical law, a dignity of the court of Rome, next in rank to the pope.[1]

II. Points in surveying.[2]

CARDING. See note 3.

CARDS.—Small pieces of pasteboard, generally rectangular in form, used in playing certain games.[4]

CARE. (See also NEGLIGENCE.)—This word is generally used in jurisprudence in the sense of attention, heed, vigilance, watchfulness; its opposite being carelessness, heedlessness, negligence, rashness. The decisions defining its meaning have arisen mainly in cases involving the duties and liabilities of carriers, bailees, professional persons, etc., and turn almost uniformly on the question of negligence (q. v.).[5] express car;' but it does not follow that every 'railroad freight car' is an 'express car.' Both courts and juries may take judicial notice of what everybody knows respecting the common incidents of railway and express carriage." Nichols v. State, 32 N. W. Repr. 546; Downey v. Hendie, 46 Mich. 498; The Queen v. Ruscoe, 8 Ad. & El. 386.

"An express car is a railway car," etc. The Queen v. Stroulger, L. R. 17 Q. B. Div. 327.

1. Rapalje & Lawrence Law Dict.

2. A contract to lay off a tract of land to the cardinal points shall be executed according to the magnetic meridian. Where an expression in a contract has a technical and a popular meaning it shall be taken in the latter sense. Finnie v. Clay, 2 Bibb (Ky.). 351.

3. "They should have submitted to the jury upon the evidence the question whether the words 'carding and fulling mill,' as used in the contract, did not mean the building on the farm in which the business of carding wool and dressing cloth had been carried on; and if so, whether the phrase 'fixtures belonging to the fulling-mill and carding-machine' did not mean the carding-machine and other machinery that had been used in said building, though detached and stored elsewhere at the date of the contract." Martin v. Cope, 28 N. Y. 180.

4. Estes v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 496; Com. v. Arnold, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 251.

Indictment against an innholder for suffering persons "to play at cards and other unlawful games" sufficiently certain. Com. v. Bolkom, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 281.

Under statute to punish those who should "set up or keep" the forbidden device, or "induce or permit any person or persons to bet any money or other thing" thereon, it was held that one to be within the inhibition need not personally bet; and if he deals the cards he commits the offence, though he had no interest in the profits of the game. Com. v. Burns, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 177; State v. Younger, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 357.

"There is no doubt that cards are a gambling device within the meaning of sec. 15 of the act," etc. State v. Herryford, 19 Mo. 377; State v. Lewis, 12 Wis. 434.

"The game of cards commonly called 'poker' is the result produced by the use of the device." Slab v. Mann, 2 Oregon. 238.

Dominos used as a device and substitute for cards. Windham v. State, 26 Ala. 69; Bryan v. State, 26 Ala 65.

Where the charge was an unlawful playing with cards, to wit, at the game of "all fours," of "loo," and of "whist," it was held that the defendant must be shown to have played at some one of the games specified. Windsor v. Com., 4 Leigh (Va.), 680.

Business Card.—In an action on a written agreement to pay plaintiff for inserting business card on two hundred copies of his advertising chart, to be paid when the chart is published, parol evidence is admissible for the interpretation of the contract and its application to the subject-matter. Stoops v. Smith, 100 Mass. 63.

5. There are different degrees of care, the several meanings of which, as defined by various courts, seem to be as follows:

Slight Care, such as is usually exercised by persons of common-sense but careless habits, under circumstances similar to those of the particular case in which the question arises, and where their own interests are to be protected from a similar injury. Johnson v. Rail-

CARELESSLY. See note 1.

CARGO.—A cargo of a vessel is the lading of a ship or vessel; the merchandise or wares contained and conveyed in a ship or vessel.[2] In an enlarged sense it signifies "all the merchandises and effects which are laden on board a ship, exclusive of the soldiers, crew, rigging, ammunition, provisions, guns, etc., though all these things load it sometimes more than the merchandises."[3] A road, 20 N. Y. 65; Grant v. Bank, 8 Ohio St. 1; Todd v. Cochell, 17 Cal. 97; Fallon v. City, 3 Allen (Mass.), 38.

Ordinary Care is such as is usually exercised in the like circumstances by the majority of the community, or by persons of careful and prudent habits. Ernst v. Hudson River R. Co., 35 N. Y. 9; State v. Railroad, 52 N. H. 528; Old Colony & N. R. Co., 10 R. I. 22.

Party not bound to guard against want of ordinary care on part of another; he has a right to presume that ordinary care will be used to protect the property from injury. Brown v. Lynn, 31 Pa. St. 512.

Due Care.—It is erroneous to leave the question of due care to the jury, since it is the province and duty of the court to advise them on that point, supposing them to be satisfied of certain facts. Heathcock v. Pennington, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 640; Jones v. Inhabitants of Andover, 10 Allen (Mass.), 20; B. & W. R. Corp., 10 Allen (Mass.), 532.

Reasonable and Proper Care.—"Want of care," when used in instructions to a jury, means "want of reasonable and proper care." Warner v. Dunnavan, 23 Ill. 380. "Reasonable care." Neal v. Gillett, 23 Conn. 443; South, etc., R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606.

Great Care is such as is exercised by persons of unusually careful and prudent habits. Brand v. S. & T. R. Co., 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 368

Especial Care.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Clark, 2 Bradw. (Ill.) 116.

Extraordinary Care.—Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Baddeley, 54 Ill. 19.

Utmost Care.—"The phrase 'utmost care and diligence' means all the care and diligence possible in the nature of the case. . . . The injury was the result of an accident or act against which human care and foresight could not guard." B. & O. R. Co. v. Worthington, 21 Md. 275; Brand v. Railroad Co., 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 368.

Care and Management.—Boodle v. Dames, 3 Ad. & El. 207; Taylor v. Clay, 9 Q. B. 713; Duke of Somerset v. Inhabitants, 4 Barn & C. 167; State v. Buffington, 20 Kan. 599.

Support and Take Care of (in contract).—Bull v. McCrea, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 422.

Care and Skill.—Cunningham v. Hall, 4 Allen (Mass.), 268.

A, Care of B.—Where a package is delivered to an express company directed to "A, care of B," a delivery to B at the proper place discharges the company's liability. Ely v. American, etc., Express Co., 29 Wis 611.

1. Locomotive, etc., so Carelessly Managed.—Railroad company only required to use reasonable and ordinary care, i e., such care as prudent men skilled in the business would ordinarily exercise in the circumstances. Old Colony & Newport R. Co., 10 R. I. 22.

2. The Gov. Cushman, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 17.

"The word 'cargo' ex vi termini means goods on board of the vessel." Seamans v. Loring, 1 Mas. (U. S.) 142.

3. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 433; s. c., 6 Wheel. Am. C. L. 200, where it was held, however, that mules on deck and their provender were not protected by a policy of insurance as "cargo." "But this food for the cattle was not laden on board as merchandise; and the circumstance that some of it might remain to be sold at the end of the voyage does not make it cargo, any more than the remnants of fishing-lines, harpoons, etc., in the whale-fishery would make the outfits to become cargo within the common meaning and understanding of merchants and underwriters. Then it is to be considered whether mules can be considered as cargo. According to Postlethwaite, cargo signifies [quoting the definition in the text]. In that enlarged sense the mules might be considered as cargo, and there should seem to be no distinction whether they were on or under deck. But the word has a much more limited meaning in this contract. The mules on deck would not be protected as cargo, because they would be exposed to greater risk, if there were no other objection. . . . But there is another objection, applicable both to the mules on deck and to those under deck, which is, that they are the subjects of particular insurance, policy of insurance on "cargo" will not ordinarily cover goods stowed upon deck, or live stock.[1] Generally speaking, the term and are not included under the general word 'cargo' or goods. . . . There were, however, ten doubloons on board, which we think may be considered as within the word 'cargo.' . . There is no evidence that this money was intended particularly for the expenses of the captain, and not as cargo to be laid out at the port of discharge; as dollars carried to India are to be invested for the use of the owners. . . . In the enlarged sense, it [viz., the word 'freight'] would apply to live stock, as well as to merchandise, on deck as well as under deck, and is coextensive with the word 'cargo' in the enlarged sense of that word."

"Cargo," in a policy of insurance on the cargo, freight, and profits, means "not the property on board exclusively belonging to the ship-owner, but all the property constituting the ship's lading, all the property on which freight and profits were to accrue." Bayard v. Ins. Co., 4 Mas. (U. S.) 264.

Oil and other articles which are the ordinary products of a whaling voyage, and the procuring of which constitutes its direct object, are undoubtedly included under the term "cargo" and covered by a policy on cargo, though it is doubtful whether the outfits, such as provisions, whaling gear, etc., would be. Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 230.

In a policy of insurance on a ship, a warranty "not to load more than her registered tonnage" with either or all of certain articles, including coal, applies only to articles laden as cargo, and is not broken by taking on board a quantity of coal for dunnage, when no more than reasonably necessary. "It is argued by the learned counsel for the defendants that an insurance on cargo would have covered the coal in question. But we are by no means sure that such would be the construction of such a policy. . . But if the word 'cargo,' in the description of the subject-matter insured, could be held to include merchandise shipped as ballast or for dunnage, it would only be upon the rule of liberal construction by which the general terms of a policy are interpreted, but which is never applied to a clause of warranty." Thwing v. Gr. West. Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 406, 407.

"A question has also been started and may be necessary to be settled, whether the word 'cargo' includes within its meaning the outfits as well as the catchings. . . . The word 'cargo' is not of such common occurrence in English policies of insurance as with us. They use in lieu thereof the words 'goods and merchandise.' But 'cargo' is a word of large import, and means the lading of the ship of whatever it consists; and we see not, in principle, why it may not cover the outfits, which are goods of value, as well as the 'catchings,' which is the technical word that includes the blubber taken on board, the oil, and the casks. But whether it should be so applied is not free from doubt, because the word 'outfits' is so generally used to express the outward lading; from which it may be reasonably inferred that the word 'cargo' is limited by the parties to the catchings of the ship. But on this point we do not now feel called upon to express an opinion." Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Metc. (Mass.) 366.

In construing a bill of sale of a cargo by owners of the vessel, the court said: "The bill of sale undoubtedly gave the latter [i.e., the purchasers] a right to take to their own use whatever articles did or should constitute the homeward cargo of the ship Henry, when she should return from the voyage in which she was then engaged; that is, such lading as she should have which, independently of the bill of sale, would have been the property of the owners of the vessel; a sense latterly and not incorrectly given to the term 'cargo,' as exclusive of any other lading, or goods taken on freight." Ilsley v. Stubbs, 9 Mass. 67, 68.

1. Allegre's Admrs. v. Md. Ins. Co., 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 162, 163; s. c., 6 Wheel. Am. C. L. 195. "On account of this great diversity in the rates of premium, a policy on 'cargo' or 'goods and merchandise' will not cover articles which are stowed upon deck. . . . An uniformity of decision among the several States of the Union on subjects of this nature is of vast importance to the mercantile community; and that consideration alone, in the absence of all motive or obligation to embrace a contrary doctrine, should induce us to sanction the principle established in one of the most enlightened and commercial States in the Union that a policy on cargo, goods, or merchandise will not cover live stock." It was held, however, that if live stock constitute the only article of exportation from the port from which the vessel carrying the insured property is to sail to her point of destination; or if, according to the mercantile usage of the place of effecting the "cargo," unless there is something in the context to give it a different signification, means the entire load of the ship which carries it;[1] but it is a word susceptible of different meanings, and must be interpreted with reference to the context.[2] (See also MARINE INSURANCE.)

insurance, the word "cargo" was understood to cover live stock, then an insurance under that general denomination would cover live stock. See also Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 433, cited in note 2, supra.

Convicts are not to be considered as "cargo" in estimating average. Quære, as to slaves. Brown v. Stapyleton, 4 Bing. 122.

1. Borrowman v. Drayton, 2 Ex. Div. 19, where it was held that a defendant who contracted for "a cargo of from 2500 to 3000 barrels" of petroleum was not obliged to accept them when delivered as a portion of 3300 barrels shipped on the same vessel. "It may fairly be assumed that when one man undertakes to sell and another to buy a cargo, the subject-matter of the contract is to be the entire load of the ship."

In giving a similar decision in Kreuger v. Blanck, L. R. 5 Ex. 183, the court said: "What then does the word 'cargo' mean? It means the cargo of the ship, that is, what is put on board the ship, or what the ship carries. If I were myself of a different opinion, I would not be guided by the meaning given in the dictionaries; but I find in Webster's Dictionary cargo defined as 'the lading or freight of a ship; the goods, merchandise, or whatever is conveyed in a ship or other merchant-vessel;' and Richardson gives its meaning as 'the freight or lading of a ship.' The question as to the meaning of the word arose also in the case of Sargent v. Reed [2 Str. 1228], to which my lord has referred. . . . It was there argued that the word was uncertain and might mean only a small parcel of goods on board, but the court said that 'the word "cargo" as referred to ship was very intelligible, and must mean the whole loading.' Here, however, on my own reading of the word, and upon authority, I think it means the whole cargo." Compare Benj on Sales, §§ 589, 590.

The purchaser of a "cargo of about 9000 bushels" is not bound to accept less in part performance of the contract. "A cargo is the lading of a ship or other vessel, the bulk or dimensions of which is to be ascertained from the capacity of the ship or vessel; and where the name of the ship or vessel is in the contract, her capacity for carrying, or the bulk of her cargo, need not be stated, for the word 'cargo' embraces all that the vessel is capable of carrying. . . . Neither less nor more than a 'cargo of barley' could be tendered as performance by the vendors. Nor were the vendees bound to accept a 'cargo' of less than about 9000 bushels. A vessel with capacity to carry ten thousand bushels, freighted with only five thousand bushels, would not have been a 'cargo' within the meaning of the contract. . . . A contract to sell a 'cargo' or 'boat-load' does not admit of the delivery of less than a cargo or boat-load, irrespective of any quantity which constitutes its bulk." Flanagan v. Demarest, 3 Robertson (N. Y.), 182.

But it is admissible to show by extrinsic evidence that the term "cargo," as used in a policy of insurance, means not the whole cargo, but an undivided share or interest in it. Catlett v. Pac. Ins. Co., 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 576.

2. Col. Ins. Co. of New Zealand v. Ad. Mar. Ins. Co., 12 App. Cas. 134; s. c., 56 L. T. N. S. 175, 35 W. R. 638, where it was held that where a contract of insurance related to a wheat cargo "now on board or to be shipped in the D. of S.," the risk commenced as soon as any portion thereof was on board. Lord Bramwell said: "'Cargo' is a word with different meanings. It may mean one thing in a charter-party, another in a policy, another in a contract of sale." In the opinion of their lordships it was said: "Their lordships interpret the meaning of the words 'wheat cargo' or 'cargo of wheat to be shipped on board' to be such a quantity of wheat to be shipped at Timaru as the ship could properly carry, and as the defendant's contract was to insure a wheat cargo then 'on board or to be shipped in the Duke of Sutherland,' etc., the insurance must be construed in the same manner as if it had been on 13,000 bags of wheat to be shipped, etc., at and from Timaru. The risk, therefore, in their lordships' opinion, commenced as soon as any portion of the wheat was on board."

Full and Complete Cargo must be taken to mean such a cargo as the ship could safely carry. Hunter v. Fry, 2 B. & Ald. 425.

In a contract to load "a full and complete cargo of sugar and molasses" it

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE.—From very early times, in the law, as in common speech, the meaning of the words "carnal knowledge" of a woman by a man has been sexual bodily connection; and these words without more have been used in that sense by writers of the highest authority on criminal law when undertaking to give a full and precise definition of the crime of rape, the highest crime of this character.[1] They are equivalent to "sexual intercourse,"[2] and seem to include in their meaning all that is signified by the word "abuse."[3] (See ABUSE; RAPE.)

CARRIAGE.—That which carries, especially on wheels; a vehicle. This is a general term for a coach, chariot, chaise, gig, sulky, or other vehicle on wheels,—as, a cannon-carriage on trucks; a block-carriage for mortars; and a truck-carriage. Appropriately the word is applied to a coach, and carts or wagons are rarely or never called carriages.[4] It is understood to refer to vehicles for may be shown that this means a full and complete cargo of sugar and molasses packed in the ordinary way in which sugar and molasses are packed to be carried, in this case according to a custom by loading the sugar in hogsheads and the molasses in puncheons. Cuthbert v. Cumming, 10 Ex. 809; s. c., 11 Ex. 405. "We think that the custom does nothing more than explain the meaning of the term 'full and complete cargo.'"

Where a practice prevailed of compressing bales of cotton-wool by machinery, to improve their stowage, the furnishing of a cargo of cotton-wool in uncompressed bales, as they came from the grower, was held not to be a compliance with a contract to load a "full and complete cargo." Benson v. Schneider, 7 Taunt. 272; s. c., 1 Moore, 21; 1 Holt N. P. 416.

For construction of contract to load a "full and complete cargo, say about 1100 tons," see vol. 1, p. 34, n. 1.

Profit on Cargo, in a policy of insurance, means the improved value of the cargo when it has been landed at its destined point. Halhead v. Young, 6 El. & Bl. 324.

1. Com. v. Squires, 97 Mass. 61.

2. Noble v. State, 22 Ohio St. 545.

3. Dawkins v. State, 58 Ala. 378; Reg. v. Holland, 16 L. T. N. S. 536; s. c., 15 W. R. 879; 10 Cox Cr. C. 478.

4. Cream City R. Co. v. Chic., M. & St. P. R. Co., 63 Wis. 98; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 70, where it was held that the term "carriage," in a bill of lading, does not include a street-railroad car. The court says: "To the ordinary mind, in this country at least, the word 'carriage' alone does not convey the idea of a railroad car, or of a street-railroad car, nor does it even convey the idea of a wheeled vehicle used for the transportation of merchandise or products used in ordinary business. The idea conveyed is a vehicle used for the transportation of persons either for pleasure or business, and drawn by horses or other draught animals over the ordinary streets and highways of the country, and not cars used exclusively upon railroads or street railroads expressly constructed for the use of such cars. As yet in this country the vehicles used for the transportation of passengers on railroads and street railroads are generally called cars, and occasionally coaches; seldom, if ever, 'carriages.' The definition given by the older lexicographers of the word 'carriage' was of the most general and indefinite kind; but that given by those writing in our own times is more in consonance with the restricted and more definite meaning of the word as understood by people in general. Johnson, in his dictionary, dating back 130 years, defines the word 'carriage' as 'a vehicle;' 'that in which anything is carried.' In later years Worcester defines it as 'any vehicle on wheels; especially a vehicle of pleasure, or for the conveyance of passengers;' Webster, as 'that which carries or conveys on wheels; a vehicle, especially for pleasure or for passengers; sometimes for burdens, as a close carriage, a gun-carriage.' In the Imperial Dictionary, which is the latest authority, 'carriage' is defined as [giving the definition in the text]. If the definition given by Johnson was the true definition of the word in his time, it will be seen by a reference to the definition in the Imperial Dictionary that its common and ordinary meaning has been restricted to those vehicles which are used for the carriage of persons, such as a coach, etc., and does not include those wheeled vehicles which are used for the carriage of burdens only, such as wagons

the conveyance of persons rather than for the transportation of property.[1] or carts, and most clearly does not include railroad cars, which can be used only on roads properly constructed for their use. Neither Webster, Worcester, nor the Imperial Dictionary mention railroad cars as coming within the common and ordinary meaning of the word 'carriage.' It is undoubtedly true that the word 'carriage' might sometimes be construed to include railroad cars and other vehicles not coming under the denomination of coach, chaise, chariot, gig, or sulky. The meaning to be given a word which may be used to designate a variety of things must in all cases depend upon its associations, and the subject-matter in relation to which it is used. The association in which the word is found in the bill of lading in question in this case, to our minds, clearly points to a meaning which excludes the idea of a railroad car or street-railroad car. All its associates are things either fragile in their nature or such as are easily damaged by exposure or perishable. Railroad and street cars are not the natural associates of the other articles mentioned in the exemption clause. We must therefore hold that the street car which was injured in this case was not a carriage within the meaning of the bill of lading, and so the plaintiff was entitled to recover upon proof of the injury while in the possession of the defendant as common carriers." It may be added that the list of articles taken at the owner's risk as enumerated in the bill of lading in this case were as follows: "Carriages and sleighs, eggs, furniture, looking-glasses, glass and crockery ware, acids, machinery, stoves and castings, rough marble, musical instruments, liquors put in glass or earthen ware, and all other frail and brittle articles, fruit, and all other perishable goods."

1. Snyder v. North Lawrence, 8 Kans. 84. and see opinion quoted in preceding note. In the Kansas case it was held that a vehicle described as a "certain wagon drawn by four horses and used in the transportation of property and for transferring goods of grocers and merchants" could not be considered as a "hackney-coach, carriage, omnibus, or dray." "The most general term of the four is 'carriage.' . . . The term 'wagon' is itself far more of a generic term than either of these four. It may indeed, without any great impropriety, be held to include them all. But it also includes many other kinds of vehicles."

The conductor of a street railroad car is not the driver of a "carriage" within the meaning of a statute making the owners of carriages running upon the highway for the conveyance of passengers liable for all injuries and damages done by the driver. "By section 7 (1 R. S. 696), enacted at the time of the revision of the statutes, a 'carriage,' as used in the act, is declared to include stage-coaches, wagons, carts, sleighs, sleds, and every other carriage or vehicle used for the transportation of persons and goods, or either. . . Notwithstanding the comprehensiveness of the term 'carriage,' as defined by the statute, it is very doubtful whether it includes a car used for the carriage of passengers over a street railroad. Such a vehicle was not within the spirit of the act, and is not within the general classification and specification of vehicles mentioned." Isaacs v. 3d Ave. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 122; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 418.

A sled carrying a load of coal was held a "carriage" within the meaning of a statute providing for the recovery of damages against a town for injury done to any one's "person, or to his team or carriage." "By the term 'carriage' they [i.e., the legislature] intended to include whatever carried the load, whether upon wheels or runners, and also that which was carried, whether on wheels or runners or on horseback. I have looked in vain for legal authorities upon the use and construction of these words [team and carriage]. But the dictionary, the only authority I have found, justifies, I think, the construction I have given them. See Webster's Dictionary, Unabridged (Ed. 1865), titles 'Team' and 'Carriage.'" Conway v. Jefferson, 46 N. H. 523.

A bicycle was held to be a "carriage" within the meaning of a statute inflicting a penalty on any person "driving any sort of carriage furiously." "The question is whether a bicycle is a carriage within the meaning of the act. I think the word 'carriage' is large enough to include a machine, such as a bicycle, which carries the person who gets upon it, and I think that such person may be said to 'drive' it." Taylor v. Goodwin, 4 Q. B. D. 229. But a bicycle was held not to be a "carriage" within the meaning of an act imposing tolls. "I am of opinion that the conviction was right, and that a bicycle is not a 'carriage' within the meaning of the Local Turnpike Act. Where the words employed by the legislature do not directly apply to the particular case, we must consider the object of the act, and therefore in Taylor v. Goodwin, 4 Q. B. D. 229, it was held that the words 'furiously driving any sort of carriage' applied to a bicycle, for it was the object of the act to prevent injury from the furious driving of any kind of vehicle. The present act begins with imposing a toll upon particular carriages which are described 'or other such carriage;' and then imposes a further toll upon 'every carriage of whatever description, and for whatever purpose, impelled by steam or any other power not being that of horses.' The carriages here referred to must be carriages ejusdem generis with the carriages previously specified. If a bicycle were held liable to pay toll as a carriage, I do not know where we could draw the line." Williams v. Ellis, 5 Q. B. D. 176.

Carriages belonging to a circus and used for carrying the band and other performers in a parade through the town are not "carriages used solely for the conveyance of any goods or burden in the course of trade." Speak v. Powell, L. R. 9 Ex. 25.

A statute requiring carriages when meeting in the highway to turn to the right has no application to the meeting of railroad cars with common vehicles in the streets of a city. Hegan v. 8th Ave. R. Co., 15 N. Y. 380.

Other Such Carriage, in a statute requiring the owner of a "wagon, cart, or other such carriage" to have his name painted thereon, are words referring to vehicles ejusdem generis with what has gone before, viz., with a wagon, and were held not to apply to a light spring cart with two wheels used by the owner in his business as an agricultural-implement maker, in which he frequently carried agricultural implements to market, and drove his family about from place to place. Danby v. Hunter, 5 Q. B. D. 20.

Other Four-wheel Spring Carriage.—In a statute imposing the payment of a toll "for each coach, chariot, phaeton, or other four-wheel spring carriage," the latter words do not qualify the former, so that no coach is chargeable unless it is also a spring carriage, but any species of carriage known as "coach" is chargeable. Housat. Turnpike Co. v. Frink, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 443.

Pleasure Carriage.—"A pleasure carriage is one for the more easy, convenient, and comfortable transportation of persons." Middlesex Turnpike Co. v. Wentworth, 9 Conn. 374. In this case it was held that a four-wheeled carriage, drawn by two horses, constructed like a stage-coach, except that the sides were not swelled or panelled, and the body was connected with the axle-trees by curved bars and chains, and was not as much elevated from the ground as the body of a stage-coach ordinarily is—used for the transportation of the U. S. mail and of passengers with their luggage, and passing regularly twice a week a distance of twenty-six miles and back—was a "pleasure carriage" and "stage" within the meaning of a charter.

A vehicle on four wheels drawn by four horses, constructed and used like the common stage-coach, is a four-wheeled pleasure carriage. Talcott Mt. Turnpike Co. v. Marshall, 11 Conn. 185. "The private individual keeps his coach to be used by himself, his family, or his friends, as his business may require or his pleasure dictate. Its principal use consists in the conveyance of persons; for that purpose it is built, and to that object it is mainly devoted. It is not the less a 'pleasure carriage' because it carries the baggage of the owner when on a journey; nor does it lose its distinctive characteristic when the business pursuits of its owner require its use. It is equally a pleasure carriage whether he rides in it for health, amusement, recreation, or business, and with or without luggage. The object for which it was built, and the use to which it is ordinarily applied, give to it the character of a pleasure carriage or the reverse. If it is constructed for the more easy and convenient transportation of the person of the owner, and is employed with reference to this original design, it is obviously a pleasure carriage, although it may never be used solely for the purposes of pleasure and amusement. . . We cannot doubt, therefore, that a private coach, built and used for the conveyance of persons, is a pleasure carriage, although in its actual use pleasure may be neither designed nor realized. A stage-coach is a carriage built and designed to accommodate persons who wish to pass from place to place. It is offered to them as a cheap, easy, and convenient mode of travelling. . . It is also true, a stage or stage-coach is a carriage which runs regularly from one place to another, in which respect it differs from a private coach. This, however, can make it the less a pleasure carriage. The same may be said of the coach of an individual, which may be, and sometimes is, employed regularly in conveying its owner from his place of residence to his place of business, and back again in different towns. The uniformity of the employment in running from place to place cannot constitute it a pleasure carriage, nor deprive it of that character

CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS. (See also ACCIDENT; ACT OF GOD; BAGGAGE; COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE; CONTRACT; DAMAGES; MASTER AND SERVANT; NEGLIGENCE; RAILROAD COMPANIES; STREET RAILWAY COMPANIES; TICKETS OF PASSENGERS.)

1. Contractual Liability.—If there be a legally enforceable contract between the carrier and the passenger, the terms of that contract must, if they so far extend, determine the liability of the carrier for personal injuries suffered by the passenger. If the contract contain no stipulation as to such liability, or if its stipulation be of such a character that it is against the policy of the law to enforce it, the liability of the carrier will be dependent solely on the duty raised by the law.

if, without such use, it is entitled to that appellation. Without impropriety, therefore, it may be said that stage-coaches are pleasure carriages, used by the public. The coach of the private gentleman and the coach of the stage proprietor are alike built to accommodate persons only; and to that purpose are appropriated. . . . No inquiry can or ought to be made, in either case, whether, on the occasion when it is used, business or pleasure has led to its use, or whether the traveller has luggage or is without any, or whether he receives pleasure or suffers pain from the journey. The carriage in which he rides is still one designed to convey his person, and is appropriated to that object, is built for his more comfortable conveyance, and used with reference to that design."

A one-horse wagon with a spring seat and panelled sides, used only for the carriage of persons, is a "pleasure carriage." Moss v. Moore, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 128. But a light one-horse wagon, with a frame-box, swelled sides, painted in imitation of panel-work, a crooked bolster, a chair-seat with wooden springs in which were two passengers, a trunk, a box, a bag of oats, and a bottle, was held not to be a chair or pleasure carriage, in Pardee v. Blanchard, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 442.

A clause imposing tolls upon "coaches, chariots, and other four-wheeled pleasure carriages" includes stage-coaches used for the conveyance of the mail or of passengers. Cin., etc., Turnpike Co. v Neil, 9 Ohio, 11. Lane, C. J., in his dissenting opinion, said: "A stage-coach is a vehicle sui generis, but used for business, and in no sense a 'pleasure carriage,' notwithstanding its ambitious name."

2. The General Rule.—The general principle on which rests the liability of carriers to passengers is that wherever one party enters into relations with another party upon the basis of a contract made upon a valuable, though not necessarily a pecuniary, consideration, and those relations bring one of the parties into contact with a material agency which the contract requires the other party to supply, the law then exacts of him who supplies that material agency the duty of exercising care in its selection, maintenance in repair, and operation; and this duty must be so performed as to protect not only the contracting party, but also those agents, servants, and assistants whom the nature of the relation between the contracting parties justifies him in employing.[1]

3. Persons to whom Liable.—Under the general principle last stated, carriers are liable to attendants of passengers;[2] passengers of another carrier received for transportation in the defendant's cars;[3] passengers of another carrier transported in a means of transportation furnished by the defendant;[4] passengers of another carrier with whom a station is jointly occupied;[5] servants of another carrier while upon the line or premises of the defendant in the performance of their duty to that other carrier;[6] consignors, con-

1. Parnaby v. L. Canal Co., 11 Ad. & El. 223; 39 E. C. L.; Mersey Docks Co. v. Gibbs, 3 H. & N. 164; 11 H. L. C. 686, L. R. 1 H. L. 93; Marfell v. S. W. Ry., 8 C. B. N. S. 525, 98 E. C. L.; Winch v. Conservators of the Thames L. R., 9 C. P. 378; Hartnall v. Ryde Commrs., 4 B. & S. 361, 116 E. C. L.; Ohrby v. Ryde Commrs., 5 B. & S. 743, 117 E. C. L.; Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B. N. S. 556, 93 E. C. L.; Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 470, 100 E. C. L.; Chapman v. Rothwell, E. Bl. & E. 168, 96 E. C. L.; Thompson v. N. E. R., 2 B. & S. 106, 110 E. C. L.; Indermaur v. Dames, L. R. 1 C. P. 274, 2 C. P. 311; Smith v. L. & St. K. Docks Co., L. R. 3 C. P. 326; White v. France, L. R. 2 C. P. D. 308; Francis v. Cockrell, L. R. 5 Q. B. 184, 501; Lax v. Corporation of Darlington, 5 Ex. Div. 28; Briggs v. Oliver, 4 H. & C. 408; Heaven v. Pender, 11 Q. B. D. 502; Godley v. Haggerty, 20 Penn. St. 387; Carson v. Godley, 26 Penn. St. 111; Waldon v. Finch, 70 Penn. St. 460; McKee v. Bidwell, 74 Penn. St. 218; N. O. M. & C. R. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. 649; Bennett v. L. & N. R., 102 U. S. 577; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 71; Carleton v. F. I. Co., 99 Mass. 216; L. & B. R. v. Chenewith, 52 Penn. St. 382; Fries v. Cameron, 4 Richardson, 228.

2. McKone v. M. C. R., 51 Mich. 601; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 29; Langan v. St. L. I. M. & S. R., 72 Mo. 392; s. c., 3 Am. Eng. R. R. Cas. 355; Stiles v. A. & W. P. R., 65 Ga. 370; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 195; Tobin v. P. G. & P. R., 59 Me. 183; Dogs v. M. K. & T. R., 59 Mo. 27; Hamilton v. T & P. R., 64 Tex. 251; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 336; Lucas v. N. B. & T. R., 6 Gray (Mass.), 65; Griswold v. C. & N. W. R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 463; T. & P. R. v. Best, 6 Tex. Law Rev. 232.

3. Foulkes v. M. D. R., 4 C. P. D. 267; 5 C. P. D. 157.

4. Grote v. C. & H. R., 2 Ex. 251; Reynolds v. N. E. R., Roscoe's Nisi Prius, 591; Dalyell v. Tyrer, 28 L. J. Q. B. 52; El. Bl. & El. 899; 96 E. C. L.; Martin v. G. I. P. R., L. R. 3 Ex. 9; Gill v. M. S. & L. R., L. R. 8 Q. B. 186; Schopman v. B. & W. R., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 24; W. St. L. & P. R. v. Peyton, 106 Ill. 534; P. C. & St. L. R. v. Spencer, 98 Ind. 126; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 478; Patterson v. W., St. L. & P. R., 54 Mich. 91; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 130.

5. Tebbutt v. B. & E. R., L. R. 6 Q. B. 73.

6. Vose v. L. & Y. R., 2 H. & N. 728; Graham v. N. E. R., 18 C. B. (N. J.) 229; 114 E. C. L.; Snow v. H. R. R., 8 Allen (N. Y.), 441; C. R. v. Armstrong, 49 Penn. St. 186; 52 Penn. St. 282; Brown v. G. W. R., 40 Up. Can. Q. B. 333; 2 Ont. App. Cas. 64; 5 Can. S. C. 159; Swainson v. N. E. R., 3 Ex. D. 341; Abraham v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 193; Warburton v. S. W. R., L. R. 2 Ex. 30; P., W. & B. R. v. State, 58 Md. 372;

signees, and their agents personally assisting in the reception or delivery of their freight;[1] persons entering under special contract upon the defendant's line or premises;[2] post-office employees carried under contract between the carrier and the government or under a statutory duty imposed upon the carrier;[3] soldiers carried under contract with the government;[4] express agents;[5] vendors of newspapers, refreshments, etc., and passengers.[6]

4. Pennsylvania Act of 1868.—The application of the rule as stated in § 3 is, in Pennsylvania, limited by the act of April 4, 1868,[7] which provides "that when any person shall sustain personal injury or loss of life while lawfully engaged or employed about the roads, works, depots, and premises of a railroad company, or in or about any train or car therein or thereon, of which company such person is not an employee, the right of action and recovery in all such cases against the company shall be such only as would exist if such person were an employee; provided that this section shall not apply to passengers." The constitutionality of this statute has been sustained in Kirby v. P. R.[8] And it has been held that the stat-

I. C. R. v. Frelka, 110 Ill. 498; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 7; Penn. Co. v. Gallagher, 40 Ohio St. 637; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 341; In re Merrill (C. V. R.), 54 Vt. 200; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 680; Zeigler v. D. & N. R., 52 Conn. 543; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 400.

1. Holmes v. N. E. R., L. R. 4 Ex. 254; 6 Ex. 123; Wright v. L. & N. W. R., L. R. 10 Q. B. 298; 1 Q. B. D. 252; A. V. R. v. Findlay, 4 Weekly Notes of Cases (Penn.), 438; Foss v. C. M. & St. P. R., 33 Minn. 392; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 113; Watson v. W., St. L. & P. R., 66 Iowa, 164; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 114; I. C. R. v. Hoffman, 67 Ill. 287; Newson v. N. Y. C. R., 29 N. Y. 383; N. O., J. & G. N. R. v. Bailey, 40 Miss. 395; S. L. B. R. v. Lewark, 4 Ind. 471; Same v. Lynch, 4 Ind. 494; Dufour v. C. P. R., 7 Pac. Repr. 769; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 141 n.; Mark v. St. P. R., 32 Minn. 208.

But the railway is not liable to a volunteer who, while assisting a consignee in removing his freight, is injured by the breaking of a crane erected by the railway on its premises, and permitted to be used by the consignee, for the railway owes no duty to the volunteer. Blakemore v. B. & E. R., 8 El. & Bl. 1035; 92 E. C. L. In Heaven v. Pender, 11 Q. B. D. 516, Cotton and Bowen, L. JJ., question the propriety of considering the plaintiff in Blakemore's case as a volunteer. Nor is the railway liable to a consignee who is contributorily negligent, as, for example, in driving a wagon into a passage-way on the side of a canal so narrow that in attempting to pass another wagon he is thrown into the canal. Goldstein v. C. M. & St. P. R., 46 Wis. 404. Or in going on the line between the cars of a freight train for the purpose of uncoupling the cars. Burns v. B. & L. R., 101 Mass. 50. Or in carelessly crossing the tracks in a railway yard. Rogstad v. St. P., M. & M. R., 31 Minn. 208; s. c., 14 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 648. Or in walking on the line in a railway yard in front of a locomotive and train which is obviously ready to move. B. & O. R. v. Depew, 40 Ohio St. 121; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 64.

2. Marfell v. S. W. R., 8 C. B. (N. J.) 525; 98 E. C. L.; B. & O. R. v. Rose (Md.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 125.

3. Collett v. L. & N. W. R., 16 Q. B. 984; 71 E. C. L.; P. R. v. Price, 96 Penn. St. 256; Nolton v. W. R., 15 N. Y. 444; Seybolt v. N. Y., L. E. & W. R., 95 N. Y. 562; Hammond v. N. E. R., 6 S. C. 130; H. & I. C. R. v. Hampton, 64 Tex. 427; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 291. Cf. Turrestine v. R. & D. R. 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 460.

4. Truax v. E. R., 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 198.

5. Blair v. L. R., 66 N. Y. 313; Chamberlain v. M. & M. R., 11 Wis. 238; Penn. Co. v. Woodworth, 26 Ohio St. 585.

6. Commonwealth v. V. C. R., 108 Mass. 7; Yeomans v. C. C. S. N. Co., 44 Cal. 71.

7. Pamph. Laws, 1868, p. 58.

8. 76 Pa. St. 508.

ute bars recovery, in the case of a plaintiff who, while engaged in the service of another party in loading coal on a siding which was in the sole possession and under the exclusive control of the defendant, was injured by the disengagement from their engine of some cars which were not equipped with a sufficient number of train hands to control them, and which, running upon a down grade, came upon the siding, the switch connecting the siding with the main line having been left open by the negligence of the railway's servants;[1] where the defendant had running powers over the line of another company, and theplaintiff, a freight brakeman in the employment of that other company, having left his train to turn a switch, while walking on the line was run over by a train of the first-mentioned railway, of whose approach no notice was given;[2] where the plaintiff, having gone to a station to receive freight consigned to him, and having, by permission of the railway's agent, and for the purpose of unloading his freight, entered a car upon a siding, was injured by the negligence of the railway's servants in shunting cars to the siding;[3] where a person, while unloading freight from a ship lying at a wharf owned and controlled by the railway, was injured by the negligence of the railway's servants in permitting an unusual escape of steam from an engine and so frightening the plaintiff's horses;[4] where the plaintiff, being the employee of a coal dealer, and engaged in unloading cars upon a siding constructed by the dealer upon his own land, and used by the railway, not as part of its line, but only for the purpose of delivering coal to the dealer, was injured by a collision caused by the negligent shifting of cars from the defendant's main line;[5] and where the plaintiff, a mail agent of the Post-office Department travelling on defendant's line in the performance of his duties as such mail agent, was injured by the negligence of the railway's servants in disobeying orders and thus causing a collision.[6]

The statute has been held not to bar recovery in the case of a plaintiff who, while employed in and about a rolling-mill in hauling ashes in a barrow across a siding upon his employer's premises, found the way blocked by some empty cars unattached to any engine or train, and in uncoupling and attempting to move the cars was killed by a movement of the cars, caused by the negligence of an engine-driver of the defendant in moving the cars without notice;[7] nor in the case of a servant of the owner of a lumber-yard adjoining the railway line, in which yard there was a siding from the railway, who was killed by cars run on the siding and striking against a car with a defective brake and unblocked, which had by

1. Kirby v. P. R., 76 Pa. St. 508.
2. D., L. & W. R. v. Mulherrin, 81 Pa. St. 366.
3. Ricard v. N. P. R., 89 Pa. St. 193.
4. Gerard v. P. R., 12 Phila. 394; s. c., 5 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 251.
5. Cummings v. P., C. & St. L. R., 92 Pa. St. 82.
6. P. R. v. Price, 96 Pa. St. 256 (affirmed in 113 U. S. 219, on the ground that the record raised no question of which the Supreme Court of the United States could take cognizance on appeal from a State court).
7. Richter v. P. R., 104 Pa. St. 511.

the negligence of the railway been permitted to remain on the siding.[1]

5. Passenger Defined.—A passenger is a person whom a common carrier has contracted to carry from one place to another, and has, in the course of the performance of that contract, received under his care either upon the means of conveyance, or at the point of departure of that means of conveyance.[2]

6. Liability Dependent on Contract.—The relation of carrier and passenger is dependent on the existence of a contract of carriage between the carrier and the passenger, made by themselves, or by their respective agents. Carriers are not liable to one who has not been accepted as a passenger, and the intention of the person to pay his fare is immaterial when there has been no contract of the carrier with him.[3]

A fortiori, where the person injured is a trespasser the carrier owes him no duty, and is not bound to indemnify him for anything less than injuries wilfully inflicted.[4]

Nor can one recover who fraudulently induces the carrier's servants to carry him gratuitously.[5]

7. Passengers on Freight Cars, etc.—Where the person injured has been permitted by the carrier's servants to ride without paying fare, the carrier is liable if the servant was expressly or impliedly authorized to grant such permission.[6] But where the carrier's regulations, publicly made known, do not authorize the servant to accept passengers, the carrier is not liable.[7] Conductors in charge of passenger trains have an implied authority to accept passengers,[8] but as freight trains are run by railways for the transportation of freight, not passengers, the servants of the railway when in charge of such trains have no implied authority to invite strangers to become passengers thereon, and in the absence of proof of express authority vested in the conductor of a freight train the acceptance of his invitation to ride thereon does not make a stranger a passenger;[9] nor have railway servants an implied authority to accept persons as pas

1. N. P. R. v. Kirk, 90 Pa. St. 15; 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 45.
2. Price v. P. R., 96 Pa. St. 267.
3. Gardner v. N. H. & N. Co., 51 Conn. 143; 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 170.
4. Duff v. A. V. R., 91 Pa. St. 458; T., W. & W. R. v. Brooks, 81 Ill. 245, 292; C. & B. R. v. Michie, 83 Ill. 427; Brown v. M. K. & T. R., 64 Mo. 536; T., W. & W. R. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 80; Duff v. A. V. R., 91 Pa. St. 458.
5. T., W. & W. R. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 80; T., W. & W. R. v. Brooks, 81 Ill. 245, 292.
6. Sherman v. H. & St. J. R., 72 Mo. 62; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 589; Wilton v. M. R., 107 Mass. 108; Same v. Same, 125 Mass. 130; P., A. & M. P. R. v. Caldwell, 74 Pa. St. 421; Gradin v. St. P. & D. R., 30 Minn. 217; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 644; Secor v. St. P., M. & M. R., 18 Fed. Rep. 221; Lucas v. M. & St. P. R., 33 Wis. 41; Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St. 139; St. J. & W. R. v. Wheeler, (Kans.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 173.
7. T., W. & W. R. v. Brooks, 81 Ill. 245; C. & B. R v. Michie, 83 Ill. 427; Duff v. A. V. R., 91 Pa. St. 458; Jenkins v. C., M. & St. P. R., 41 Wis. 112; H. & T. C. R. v. Moore, 49 Tex. 31; Gardner N. H. & N. Co., 51 Conn. 143; 18 & Eng. R. R. Cas. 170.
8. P. R. v. Books, 57 Pa. St. 345; Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St. 139.
9. Eaton v. D., L. & W. R., 57 N. Y. 382; Waterbury v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 17 Fed. Rep. 671. Cf. Dunn v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 187.

sengers on pay-cars,[1] or on hand-cars,[2] but if it be proven that the railway servant was authorized to accept the person as a passenger on a hand-car,[3] or on a freight train,[4] the railway will, by reason of such acceptance, be liable to him as a passenger.

8. Servants as Passengers.—Where an individual is carried by a railway in performance of the conditions of a contract of service he is to be regarded as a servant, not as a passenger.[5] A passenger will not, by the performance of a casual service on a train, cease to be a passenger and become an employee of the railway.[6]

To constitute one a paying passenger, the payment of fare in money is not essential,[7] for any valuable consideration moving from the person injured to the railway will render him a paying passenger, such as the fact that he was travelling as a drover in charge of his cattle, which the railway was transporting for hire;[8] or that he, as the owner of a patented coupler, was travelling on the defendant's line at its invitation in the course of negotiations for the adoption of his patent;[9] or that he was a detective carried over the line on a hand-car in the performance of a special duty, for which the railway had entered into a contract with him;[10] or that he was with the consent of the railway travelling on a freight train in charge of stock or goods carried by the railway for him;[11] or that he was with the consent of the railway travelling on a hand-car.[12]

1. S. W. R. v. Singleton, 66 Ga. 252.
2. Hoar v. M. C. R., 70 Me. 65.
3. Pool v. C., M. & St. P. R., 56 Wis. 227; 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 360; Prince v. I. & G. N. R., 64 Tex. 144; 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 152.
4. Dunn v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 187; Lucas v. M. & St. P. R., 33 Wis. 41; Secord v. St. P., M. & M. R., 18 Fed. Rep. 221; Sherman v. H. & St. J. R., 72 Mo. 621; 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 580; O. & M. R. v. Mahling, 30 Ill. 9; T. & P. R. v. Garcia, 62 Tex. 285; 21 Am. & E. R. R. Cas. 384.
5. Tunney v. M. R., L. R. 1 C. P. 291; Ryan v. C. V. R., 23 Pa. St. 384; Il. & St. J. R. v. Higgins, 36 Mo 418; Gillshannon v. S. B. R., 10 Cush. 228; Seaver v. B. & M. R., 14 Gray, 466; Russell v. H. R. R., 17 N. Y. 134; Ross v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 74 N. Y. 617; N. Y. C. & H. R. R. v. Vick, 95 N. Y. 267; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 609; K. P. R. v. Salmon, 11 Kans. 83; McQueen v. C. B. U. P. R., 30 Kans. 689; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 226. Sed cf. O'Donnell v. A. V. R., 50 Pa. St. 490; 59 Pa. St. 239; Torpy v. G. T. R, 20 Up. Can. Q. B. 446; B. & O. R. v. Trainor, 33 Md. 542; Abell v. W. M. R., 63 Md. 433; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 503.
6. C. V. R. v. Myers, 55 Pa. St. 288; Mcl. R. v. Bolton, 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 501; P. P. R. v. Green, 56 Md. 84; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 168. Cf. Degg v. M. R., 1 H. & N. 773; Potter v. Faulkner, 1 B. & S. 800; 101 E. C. L.; Everhart v. T. H. & I. R., 78 Ind. 292; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 599; Sherman v. H. & St. J. R., 72 Mo. 62; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 589.
7. Cleveland v. N. J. G. Co., 68 N. Y. 306; Hart v. G. R., 40 Miss. 391.
8. N. Y. C. R. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357; I. & St. L. R. v. Horst, 95 U. S. 291; C. P. & A. R. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1; O. & M. R. v. Selby, 47 Ind. 471; Mastin v. B. & O. R., 14 W. Va. 180; L. R. & F. S. R. v. Miles, 40 Ark. 298; P. R. v. Henderson, 51 Pa. St. 315; Goldey v. P. R., 30 Pa. St. 242; O. & M. R. v. Nickless, 71 Ind. 271; Flinn v. P., W. & B. R., 1 Houst. (Del.) 469; T. & P. R. v. Garcia, 62 Tex. 285; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384; Carroll v. M. P. R. (Mo.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 268.
9. G. T. R. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655.
10. Pool v. C., M. & St. P. R., 54 Wis. 657; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 332; s. c., 56 Wis. 227; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 360.
11. I. R. v. Beaver, 41 Ind. 493; Lawson v. C., St. P., M. & O. R., 64 Wis. 447; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 249.
12. I. G. N. & M. P. R. v. Gray (Tex.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 318.

Where the carrier has contracted to carry an individual whose fare is paid, or is agreed to be paid, by the person with whom the contract is made, the carrier is liable to the individual, who is so received for carriage, to the same extent as if he had personally paid fare before coming upon the carrier's premises or entering its cars.[1]

9. Free Passengers.—Where a contract of carriage has been in fact made between the carrier and the passenger, and the carrier has agreed to transport the passenger gratuitously, it is liable to him to the same extent as if he had paid his fare before coming upon the carrier's premises or entering its cars. The existence of the contract of carriage, as a fact, fixes the liability, and the law finds an adequate consideration for such a contract in the doctrine that "the confidence induced by undertaking any service for another is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in the performance of it."[2] The carrier is, therefore, liable to persons whom it accepts for transportation over its line, and from whom it demands no fare, to the same extent that it is liable to passengers who pay fare.[3]

10. When Relation Begins and Ends.—The relation of carrier and passenger begins when, a contract of carriage having been made or the passenger having been accepted as such by the carrier, he has come upon the carrier's premises, or has entered upon any means of conveyance provided by the carrier.[4]

Of course, the mere purchase of a ticket does not make the purchaser a passenger; he must also come upon the carrier's premises or upon its means of conveyance before the relation can be said to have begun. Nor is it enough that he has come to the carrier's station with the intention of taking passage at some indefinite time in the future. He must come to the station a

1. Austin v. G. W. R., L. R. 2 Q. B. 442; G. N. R. v. Harrison, 10 Ex. 376; Marshall v. Y. N. & B. R., 11 C. B. 655; s. c., 73 E. C. L.; Skinner v. L. B. & G. C. R., 5 Ex. 787; O. & M. R. v. Muhling. 30 Ill. 9; N. & C. R. v. Messino, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 220; Hurt v. S. R., 40 Miss. 391.

2. Coggs v. Bernard, 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. 293.

3. P. & R. R. v. Derby, 14 How. 468; Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. 469; P. R. v. Butler, 57 Penna. St. 335; B., P. & W. R. v. O'Hara. 12 Weekly Notes of Cases (Penna.), 473; Todd v. O. C. R., 3 Allen, 18; 7 Allen, 207; Jacobus v. St. P. & C. R., 20 Minn. 125; Rose v. D. M.V. R., 39 Iowa, 246; F. & P. M. R. v. Weir, 37 Mich. 111; Lemon v. Chanslor, 68 Mo. 340; O. & M. R. v. Selby, 47 Ind. 471; Waterbury v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 17 Fed. Rep. 671; Abell v. W. M. R., 63 Md. 433; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 503; Gillenwater v. M. & I. R., 5 Ind. 339; O. & M. R. v. Nickless, 71 Ind. 271; Prince v. I. & G. N. R., 64 Tex. 144; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 152; G. C. & S. F. R. v. McGowan (Tex.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 274; Arnes v. M. & N. R. (Wis.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 102. Sed cf. Griswold v. N. Y. &c. R., 26 A. & E. R. R. Cas. 280. 37 Ill., 484; 34 N. J., 513; 24 N. Y., 181; 21 Ind., 48.

4. Brien v. Bennett, 8 C. & P. 724, 34 E. C. L.; Warren v. F. R., 8 Allen, 227; Davis v. C. L. R., 10 How. Pr. 300; Gordon v. G. St. & N. R., 40 Barb. 546; Smith v. St. P. C. R., 32 Minn. 1, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 310; Allender v. C. R., 37 Iowa, 264; W., St. L. & P. R. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; C. R. v. Perry, 58 Ga. 461; Cleveland v. N. J. Steamboat Co., 68 N. Y. 306; H. & St. J. R. v. Martin, 11 Bradwell, 386. Sed cf. I. C. R. v. Hudelson, 13 Ind. 325; Smith v. St. P. C. R., 32 Minn. 1; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 310. Sed cf. Merrill v. E. R., 139 Mass. 238.

reasonable time before the departure of the train by which he is to travel.[1]

But if a person has the bona-fide intention of taking passage by a train, and if he goes to a station at a reasonable time, he is entitled to protection as a passenger, not only from the moment he enters upon the carrier's premises, but also while en route to the station in an omnibus run by the railway to take passengers to their trains.[2]

The relation of carrier and passenger having been constituted continues until the journey, expressly or impliedly contracted for, has been concluded, and the passenger has left the carrier's premises; thus, one who has been accepted as passenger is entitled to protection as such while he is in the railway's station, journeying on its line, in transit from one means of conveyance to another provided by the railway, and while he is temporarily absent from the cars at a way station for a proper purpose.[3]

A person who has been rightfully ejected from the cars for misconduct or non-payment of fare, cannot become a passenger by subsequently entering the car and tendering his fare.[4] A passenger who has, by mistake, taken a wrong train, is, so far as regards protection from injury, a passenger on that train.[5]

The relation of carrier and passenger ends only when the journey contracted for has been concluded, and the passenger has left the carrier's premises;[6] or, if a reasonable time has elapsed after the arrival of the train at the passenger's destination, which was sufficient for the passenger to leave the railway premises.[7]

11. Act of God.—The duty of a common carrier to his passengers requires him to exercise the highest degree of care for their safety.[8]

1. Harris v. Stevens, 31 Vt. 79.
2. Buffett v. T. & B. R., 40 N. Y. 166.
3. Clossman v. L. I. R., 73 N. Y. 606; J., M. & I. R. v. Riley, 39 Ind. 568; K. N. L. Packet Co. v. True, 88 Ill. 608. Sed cf. State v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 176; Com. v. B. & M. R., 129 Mass. 500; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 457; Johnson v. B. & M. R., 125 Mass. 75.
4. O'Brien v. B. & W. R., 15 Gray, 20; Hibbard v. N. Y. & E. R., 15 N. Y. 455. Cf. Dietrich v. P. R., 71 Pa. St. 432; State v. Overton, 4 Zab. 438; Pease v. D. & L. R. (N. Y.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 185.
5. C., C. & I. R. v. Powell, 40 Ind. 37
6. P., C. & St. L. R. v. Krouse, 30 Ohio St. 222.
7. Imhoff v. C. & M. R., 20 Wis. 344.
8. White v. Boulton, Peake, 113; Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79; Harris v. Costar, 1 C. & P. 636; 11 E. C. L.; Bremner v. Williams, 1 C. & P. 414; 11 E. C. L.; Sharp v. Gray, 9 Bing. 457; Fowler v. Locke, L. R. 7 C. P. 272; 9 C. P. 751 n; Searle v. Laverick, L. R. 9 Q. B. 122; Kopitoff v. Wilson, 1 Q. B. D. 377; Randall v. Newson, 2 Q. B. D. 102; Hyman v. Nye, 6 Q. B. D. 685; White v. F. R., 136 Mass. 321; Sales v. Western Stage Co., 4 Iowa, 547; Wilson v. N. P. R., 26 Minn. 280; Warren v. F. R., 8 Allen, 233; Taylor v. G. T. R., 48 N. H. 229; T., H. & W. R. v. Baddeley, 54 Ill. 19; Dunn v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 157; Tuller v. Talbot, 23 Ill. 357; P. & C. R. v. Thompson, 56 Ill. 138; I. & St. L. R. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; T. H. & I. R. v. Jackson, 81 Ind. 20; Sherlock v. Alling, 44 Ind. 184; Penna. Co. v. Roy, 102 U. S. 451; M. R. v. Blakely, 59 Ala. 477; Tanner v. L. & N. R., 60 Ala. 621; Wheaton v. N., B. & M. R., 36 Cal. 593; P. P. C. Co. v. Barker, 4 Colo. 344; Derwort v. Loomer, 21 Conn. 253; Flinn v. P., W. & B. R., 1 Houston (Del.), 499; U. P. R. v. Hand, 7 Kans. 392; Sherley v. Billings, 8 Bush (Ky.), 151; Black v. C. R., 10 La. Ann. 38; B. & O. R. v. Worthington, 21 Md. 275; McClary v. S. C. P. R., 3 Neb. 54; Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. St. 482; Meier v. P. R., 64 Pa. St. 230; P. & R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 351; I. & G. N. R.

But carriers are not insurers of the safety of their passengers; nor are they to be held liable for injuries to their passengers resulting from such defects in their buildings or means of transportation as could not have been guarded against by the exercise of care on their part,[1] nor for injuries caused solely by an "act of God," without negligence on the carrier's part.[2] But where the carrier has been in any respect negligent the concurrence of an "act of God" in causing the injury will not relieve the carrier from responsibility.[3]

12. Act of Public Enemy.—Nor are carriers to be held liable for injuries caused without fault on their part by an act of the public enemy.[4]

13. Accident.—Nor are carriers to be held liable for injuries caused by inevitable accident, not due in any way to negligence on the part of the carrier, and such as no human foresight on his part could avert.[5]

v. Halloren, 53 Tex. 46; V. C. R. v. Sanger, 15 Gratt. 236; P. & R. R. v. Derby, 14 How. 468; Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. 469; N. Y. C. R. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357; Stockton v. Frey, 4 Gill, 406; State v. B. & O. R., 24 Md. 84; McElroy v. N. & L. R. 4 Cush. 400; Shopman v. B. & W. R., 9 Cush. 24; Knight v. P., S. & P. R., 57 Me. 202; Fairchild v. C. S. Co., 13 Cal. 604; Jamison v. St. J. & S. C. R., 55 Cal. 593; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 350; P. C. & St. L. R. v. Williams, 74 Ind. 462; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas., 457. Cf. L. C. R. v. Weams, 80 Ky. 420; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 399; Moore v. D. M. & F. D. R. (Iowa), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 315.

1. Ingalls v. Bills, 9 Metc. 1; Redhead v. M. R., L. R. 2 Q. B. 412; L. R. 4 Q. B. 379; Meier v. P. R., 64 Pa. St. 225; Gilson v. J. C. H. R., 76 Mo. 282; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 132; Smith v. C., M. & St. P. R., 42 Wis. 520; De Graff v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 76 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 125; McPadden v. N. Y. C. R., 44 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 478; Caldwell v. N. J. S. Co., 47 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 290; Carroll v. S. J. R., 58 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 126; G. R. & I. R. v. Boyd, 65 Ind. 526; Lemon v. Chanslor, 68 Mo. 340; Sawyer v. H. & St. J. R., 37 Mo. 240. Sed cf. Alden v. N. Y. C. R., 26 N. Y. 102.

2. Withers v. N. K. R., 3 H. & N. 969; P. & R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 351; B. & A. R. v. School District, 96 Pa. St. 65; P., F. W. & C. R. v. Brigham, 29 Ohio St. 374; G. W. R. v. Braid, 1 Moore P. C. N. S. 101; Nichols v. Marsland, 2 Ex. D. 1; P., F. W. & C. R. v. Brigham, 29 Ohio St. 374; Lehigh Bridge v. L. C. & N. Co., 4 Rawle, 9; P. & R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 351; B. & O. R. v. School District, 96 Pa. St. 65; s.c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 166; Foster v. Juniata Bridge Co., 16 Pa. St. 393; P., F. W. & C. R. v. Gilleland, 56 Pa. St. 445; Livezey v. Philadelphia, 64 Pa. St. 106; Welker v. N. C. R., 1 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 210; Hayes v. Kennedy, 41 W. N. C. 378; Morrison v. Davis, 20 W. N. C. 171; Gould v. McKenna, 86 W. N. C. 297; Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. D. 423; I. & G. N. R. v. Halloren, 53 Tex. 46; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 343; M. & C. R. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. 176; Gates v. S. M. R., 28 Minn. 110; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 237; Denny v. N. Y. C. R., 13 Gray, 481; H. & T. C. R. v. Fowler, 56 Tex. 452; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 504; O. & R. V. R. v. Brown, 14 Neb. 170; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 501; Ely v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 77 Mo. 34; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 342; McClary v. I. C. R., 3 Neb. 44; McPadden v. N. Y. C. R., 44 N. Y. 478; N. P. & O. W. v. Docks Co., 9 Ch. D. 515. Sed cf. K. P. R. v. Meller, 2 Colo. 442.

3. P. & R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 356; Davis v. C. V. R., 55 Vt. 84; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 173; Lambkin v. S. E. R., 5 App. Cas. 352; Ellet v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 76 Mo. 518; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 183; Dixon v. M. Board of Works, 7 Q. B. D. 418; Truitt v. H. & St. J. R., 62 Mo. 527; B. & O. R. v. School District, 96 Pa. St. 65; s.c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 166; Straoss v. W., St. L. & P. R., 17 Fed. Rep. 209; L., N. A. & C. R. v. Thompson (Ind.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 88.

4. Sawyer v. H. & St. J. R., 37 Mo. 240.

5. Aston v. Heaven, 2 Esp. 533; Hammack v. White, 11 C. B. N. S. 588; s. c.,

14. Act of Injured Party.—Nor are carriers to be held liable for injuries caused solely by the act of the injured person, and without fault on the carrier's part.[1]

15. Third Parties.—Nor are carriers liable for injuries solely caused by the acts of third parties unconnected with the carrier by any relation of agency.[2] But where the passenger's injury can be traced to negligence on the part of the carrier as its primary and proximate cause, the concurrence of the negligence of a person unconnected with either the carrier or the person injured will not relieve the carrier from responsibility for the consequences of its negligence.[3]

16. Ultra Vires.—Where a corporation, acting as a carrier, has injured a passenger by negligence on its part, it is no defence to the carrier that the injury was done in the prosecution of a business which the corporation had, under its charter, no power to conduct.[4]

It is the duty of the carrier, whatever be the means of conveyance which it uses, to provide everything which is essential to the safety of the passenger and reasonably consistent with the transportation of the passenger by the particular means of conveyance so used; thus one who has been accepted as a passenger 103 E. C. L.; Beach v. Parmeter, 23 Pa. St. 197; A., T. & S. F. R. v. Flinn, 24 Kans. 627; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 240; Hallihan v. St. J. R., 71 Mo. 113; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 117; Maschek v. St. L. R., 71 Mo. 276; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 38; H. M. & F. P. R. v. Kelley, 102 Pa. St. 115; Woodbridge v. D., L. & W. R., 105 Pa. St. 460; s. c., 16 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 55; Meyer v. M. P. R., 2 Neb. 320; State v. B. & O. R., 24 Md. 84.

1. Caswell v. Worth, 5 El. & Bl. 849, 85 E. C. L.; Woolf v. Beard, 8 C. & P. 373. 34 E. C. L.; E. & C. R. v. Hiatt, 17 Ind. 102; Kleimenhagen v. C., M. & St. P. R. (Wisc.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 179; G. C. & S. F. R. v. Wallen (Tex.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 219. Sed cf. Eckert v. L. I. R., 43 N. Y. 502.

2. Reedie v. L. & N. W. R., 4 Ex. 243; Curtis v. R. & S. R., 18 N. Y. 534; Harris v. U. P. R., 13 Fed. Rep. 591, 4 McCrary, 454; Latch v. R. R., 27 L. J. Exch. 155, 3 H. & N. (Am. Ed.) 930; Keeley v. E. R., 47 How. Pr. 256; Jones v. G. T. R., 45 Up. Can. (Q. B.) 193; Daniel v. M. R., L. R. 3 C. P. 216, 591, 5 H. L. 45; Taylor v. G. N. R., L. R. 1 C. P. 385; Wright v. M. R., L. R. 8 Ex. 137; P., F. W. & C. R. v. Hinds, 53 Pa. St. 512.

3. Scott v. Shepherd, 3 Wils. 403, 2 W. Bl. 892, 2 Sm. Lead. Cas. 797; Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198; Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 C. & P. 190, 24 E. C. L.; Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29, 41 E. C. L.; Daniels v. Potter, 4 C. & P. 262, 19 E. C. L.; Hughes v. Macfie, Abbott v. Macfie, 2 H. & C. 744; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628, 15 E. C. L.; Hill v. N. R. Co., 9 B. & S. 303; Collins v. M. L. Commrs., L. R. 4 C. P. 279; Harrison v. G. N. R., 3 H. & C. 231; Sneesby v. L. & Y. R., 1 Q. B. D. 42; Clark v. Chambers, 3 Q. B. D. 327, disapproving Mangan v. Atterton, L. R. 1 Ex. 239; Smith v. L. & S. W. R., L. R. 5 C. P. 98; Pittsburgh v. Grier, 22 Pa. St. 54; Scott v. Hunter, 46 Pa. St. 192; P. R. v. Hope, 80 Pa. St. 373; O. C. Gas Co. v. Robinson, 99 Pa. St. 1; Hey v. Philadelphia, 2 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 466; Raydure v. Knight, 2 W. N. C. 713; Fawcett v. P., C. & St. L. R., 24 W. Va. 755; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1; Smith v. N. Y. S. & W. R., 46 N. J. L. 7; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 399; L. & M. R. v. McKenna, 13 Lea (Tenn.), 280; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 276; Brown v. P. R., 8 Rob. (La.) 45. Sed cf. Nicholson v. E. R., 41 N. Y. 525.

4. N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Haring, 47 N. J. L. 137; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 436; Bissell v. M. S. & N. J. R., 22 N. Y. 258; Hutchinson v. W. & A. R., 53 Tenn. 634; Gruber v. W. & J. R., 92 N. Car. 1; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 438; C. R. & B. Co. v. Smith, 76 Ala. 572; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25. Sed cf. Hood v. N. Y. & N. H. R., 22 Conn. 1; s.c., 23 Conn. 609.

to be carried in a freight train is entitled to the same character, though not to the same degree, of protection as if he were carried in a passenger train.[1]

The stringent obligations which the law imposes upon common carriers of passengers are not applicable to individuals occasionally carrying passengers gratuitously, or upon such special contracts as constitute them private carriers.[2]

17. Contributory Negligence.—Where the person injured, or the plaintiff, or any person whose negligence is attributable to the plaintiff, has so far contributed to the injury by his want of ordinary care, that, but for such want of ordinary care on his part, the injury would not have been done, the carrier is not liable to the plaintiff in damages for such injury.[3]

Although negligence upon the part of the plaintiff may have in fact contributed to his injury, the carrier will nevertheless be liable, if its servants could by the exercise of ordinary care have avoided the injury to the plaintiff.[4]

1. Murch v. C. R., 29 N. H. 9; C., B. & Q. R. v. Hazzard, 26 Ill. 373; I. R. v. Beaver, 1 Md. 493; I. & St. L. R. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; C. & G. R. v. Fay, 16 Ill. 568; Edgerton v. N. Y. & H. R. R., 39 N. Y. 227; Dunn v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 187; Tibby v. M. P. R., 82 Mo. 292. As to the restricted statutory liability of railways in Mississippi to passengers on freight trains, see Code, 1880. § 1054; Perkins v. C., St. L. & N. O. R., 60 Miss. 726; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 242.

2. Moffatt v. Bateman, L. R. 3 P. C. 115; Shoemaker v. Kingsbury, 12 Wall. 369; Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553.

3. Butterfield v. Forrester, 11 East, 60; Bridge v. G. J. R., 3 M. & W. 244; Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B. N. S. 573, 94 E. C. L.; Holden v. L. N. G. & C. Co., 3 M. G. & S. 1, 54 E. C. L.; Illott v. Wilkes, 3 B. & Ald. 304, 5 E. C. L.; Ellis v. L. & S. W. R., 2 H. & N. 424; B. & P. R. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439; P. R. v. Aspell, 23 Pa. St. 147; Hice v. Kugler, 6 Wh. 336; Simpson v. Hand, 6 Pa. St. 311; Wynn v. Allard, 5 W. & S. 524; Gould v. McKenna, 86 Pa. St. 303; 13th & 15th Sts. P. R. v. Boudrou, 92 Pa. St. 480; Heil v. Glanding, 42 Id. 493; Sills v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601, 38 E. C. L.; Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St. 139; Cremer v. Portland, 36 Wis. 92; H. & T. C. R. v. Gorbett, 49 Tex. 573; Mackey v. M. P. R., 18 Fed. Rep. 236; K. C. R. v. Thomas, 79 Ky. 160; s. c, 1 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 79; Harper v. E. R., 3 Vroom, 88; Deyo v. N. Y. C. R., 34 N. Y. 9; J. R. v. Hendricks, 26 Ind. 228; Higgins v. H. & St. J. R., 36 Mo. 418; Sullivan v. L. Bridge Co., 9 Bush, 81; O. & N. H. R. v. Ward, 47 N. J. L. 560; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 359.

4. Davies v. Manor, 10 M. & W. 546; Radley v. L. & N. W. R., L. R. 9 Ex. 91, 10 Ex. 100; s. c., 1 App. Cas. 754; Dowell v. G. S. Nav. Co., 5 E. & B. 195, 85 E. C. L.; Witherly v. Regent's Canal Co., 12 C. B. N. S. 2, 104 E. C. L.; Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B. N. S. 573, 94 E. C. L.; Morrisey v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 43 Mo. 380; Hulsencamp v. C. R., 37 Mo. 537; Kennedy v. N. M. R., 36 Mo. 351; Boland v. Missouri R., 36 Mo. 484; Meyer v. Pacific R., 40 Mo. 153; Liddy v. St. Louis R., 40 Mo. 506; Scott v. D. & W. R., 11 Irish Com. Law, 377; C. & A. R. v. Gretzner, 46 Ill. 76; C. & A. R. v. Pondrum, 51 Ill. 333; K. C. R. v. Dills, 4 Bush, 593; L. & C. R. v. Siekings, 5 Bush, 1; M. & W. R. v. Davis, 18 Ga. 679; 19 Ga. 437; M. & W. R. v. Winn, 19 Ga. 440; Raisin v. Mitchell, 9 C. & P. 613, 38 E. C. L.; Mayor of Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339, 378, 53 E. C. L.; Clayards v. Dethick, 12 Q. B. 439, 64 E. C. L.; Thompson v. N. E. R., 2 B. & S. 106, 110 E. C. L.; Wyatt v. G. W. R., 6 B. & S. 709, 118 E. C. L.; Isbell v. N. Y. & N. H. R., 27 Conn. 393; Meeks v. S. P. R., 56 Cal. 513; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 314; Needham v. S. F. & S. J. R., 37 Cal. 409; C. C. R. v. Holmes, 5 Colo. 197; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 410; State v. B. & O. R., 24 Md. 84; Trow v. V. C. R., 24 Vt. 487; N. H. S. & T. Co. v. Vanderbilt, 16 Conn. 421; Kerwhacker v. C., C., C. & I. R., 3 Ohio St. 172; Burnett v. B. & M. R., 16 Neb. 332; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25; M. C. R. v. Neubeur, 62 Md. 391; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas.

18. Comparative Negligence.—In Illinois, Georgia, and Tennessee a contributorily negligent plaintiff is, under certain conditions, held to be entitled to recover damages against a carrier.[1]

There are, however, many cases in other jurisdictions disapproving the theory of comparative negligence.[2]

A person is not chargeable with contributory negligence who is injured in the effort to escape from an imminent peril to which he has been exposed by the negligence of the carrier.[3]

Nor is a person chargeable with contributory negligence who is injured in the attempt to obviate by an act not essentially dangerous an inconvenience to him caused by negligence on the part of the carrier.[4]

But it is contributory negligence if, in the attempt to avoid that which is merely inconvenient and in no sense dangerous the per-

261; Kean v. B. & O. R., 61 Md. 154; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 321; Johnson v. H. R. R., 5 Duer, 27; Button v. H. R. R., 18 N. Y. 248; B. & O. R. v. State, 33 Md. 542; L. C. & L. R. v. Mahony, 7 Bush (Ky.), 235; L. & N. R. v. Filbern, 6 Bush (Ky.), 574; Thayer v. St. L., A. & T. H. R., 22 Ind. 26; C. St. R. v. Steen, 42 Ark. 321; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 30. Sed cf. Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St. 139; Heil v. Glanding, 42 Pa. St. 493; C. R. v. Armstrong, 49 Pa. St. 193; Railroad v. Boudrou, 92 Pa. St. 475; Nelson v. A. & P. R., 68 Mo. 593; Price v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 72 Mo. 414; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 365; Isabel v. H. & St. J. R., 60 Mo. 482; Harlan v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 65 Mo. 22; Scoville v. H. & St. J. R., 81 Mo. 434; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 534; Zimmerman v. H. & St. J. R., 71 Mo. 476; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 191.

1. W., St. L. & P. R. v. Wallace, 110 Ill. 114; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 359; L., N. A. & C. R. v. Shires, 108 Ill. 617; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 387; C., B. & Q. R. v. Van Patten, 74 Ill. 91; I. C. R. v. Patterson, 93 Ill. 290; G. & C. U. R. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 478; C. & N. W. R. v. Sweeny, 52 Ill. 330; R. R. I. & St. L. R. v. Delaney, 82 Ill. 198; A. & R. A. L. R. v. Ayers, 53 Ga. 12; C. R. v. Gleason, 69 Ga. 200; A. & S. R. v. McElmurry, 24 Ga. 75; A. & W. P. R. v. Wyly, 65 Ga. 120; Thompson v. C. R., 54 Ga. 509; Campbell v. A. R., 53 Ga. 488; Hendricks v. W & A. R., 52 Ga. 467; M. & W. R. v. Davis, 27 Ga. 113; Beach on Contributory Negligence, p. 97; N. & C. R. v. Carroll, 6 Heisk. 347; R. R. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. 383; L. & N. R. v. Flemming, 14 Lea (Tenn.), 128; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 347.

2. L. S. N. R. v. Norton, 24 Pa. St. 465; Heil v. Glanding, 42 Pa. St. 493; Reeves v. D. L. & W. R., 30 Pa. St. 464; Stiles v. Geesey, 71 Pa. St. 439; C. R. v. Armstrong, 49 Pa. St. 193; Wilds v. H. R., 24 N. Y. 432; Pa. Co. v. Roney, 89 Ind. 453; O'Keefe v. C. R. I. & P. R., 32 Iowa, 467; P. R. v. Righter, 42 N. J. Law, 180; Gothard v. A. G. S. R., 67 Ala. 114; Potter v. C. & W. N. R., 21 Wis. 372; Marble v. Ross, 124 Mass. 44; H. & T. C. R. v. Gorbett, 49 Texas, 573; K. P. R. v. Peavey, 29 Kans. 170; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260.

3. Jones v. Boyce, 1 Starkie, 493; s. c., 2 E. C. L.; Stokes v. Saltonstall, 13 Pet. 181; N. & C. R. v. Erwin, 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 465; Caswell v. B. & W. R., 98 Mass, 194; E. T., V. & G. R. v. Gurley, 12 Lea (Tenn.), 46; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 568; C. R. v. Rhodes, 56 Ga. 645; C. R. v. Roach, 64 Ga. 635; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 79; P. B. & W. R. v. Rohrman, 13 Weekly Notes of Cases, 258; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 176; Smith v. St. P., M. & M. R., 30 Minn. 169; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 262; Iron R. v. Mowery, 36 Ohio St. 418; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 361; Buel v. N. Y. C. R., 31 N. Y. 314; S. W. R. v. Paulk, 24 Ga. 356; Twomley v. C. P., N. & E. R. R., 69 N. Y. 158; Mark v. St. P., M. & M. R., 30 Minn. 493; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 86; Woolery v. L., N. A. & C. R. (Ind.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 210. Sed cf. G. C. & S. F. R. v. Wallen (Tex.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 219; S. C. & C. St. R. v. Ware (Ky.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 206.

4. Gee v. Metropolitan R., L. R. 8 Q. B. 161; Clayards v. Dethick, 12 Q. B. 439, 64 E. C. L.; Wyatt v. G. W. R., 6 B. & S. 709, 118 E. C. L.; the judgment of Kelly, C. B., in Siner v. G. W. R., L.

son injured encounters a danger obviously apparent to the minds of reasonable men.[1]

19. Infants, etc.—Lunatics, idiots, and children are to be held only to the exercise of that degree of care and discretion which ought reasonably to be expected of persons of their age and capacity;[2] and in general it is for the jury to determine, under the circumstances of the particular case, what amount of reason and discretion ought to have been exercised by the injured infant.[3] But where the injured person is confessedly of average capacity and an infant only in legal theory, it ought not to be left to the jury to determine what amount of discretion ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to have been exercised by the injured person.[4]

A carrier owes to an infant, or to an adult of known mental or physical incapacity, a higher measure of duty than that which it owes to an adult of average mental and physical capacity; but the fact of the infancy, or other incapacity, of the injured person will not supply the want of proof of negligence on the part of the carrier.[5]

R. 3 Ex. 150; Johnson v. W. C. & P. R., 70 Pa. St. 357; W. P. P. R. v. Whipple, 5 Weekly Notes of Cases, 68.

1. Adams v. L. & Y. R., L. R. 4 C. P. 739; Siner v. G. W. R., L. R. 3 Ex. 150, 4 Ex. 117; G. H. & S. A. R. v. Le Gierse, 51 Tex. 189; Damont v. N. O. & C. R., 9 La. An. 441; I. C. R. v. Able, 59 Ill. 131; Gavett v. M. & L. R., 16 Gray, 501; J. R. v. Hendricks, 26 Ind. 228; Judgment of Bramwell, L. J., in Lax v. Darlington, 5 Ex. D. 28; P. R. v. Aspell, 23 Pa. St. 147.

2. Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29, 41 E. C. L.; Rauch v. Lloyd, 31 Pa. St. 358; P. R. v. Kelly, 31 Pa. St. 372; Oakland R. v. Fielding, 48 Pa. St. 320; Smith v. O'Connor, 48 Pa. St. 218; H. M. & F. R. v. Gray, 3 Weekly Notes of Cases, 421; P. & R. R. v. Spearen, 47 Pa. St. 300; Kay v. P. R., 65 Id. 269; P. C. P. R. v. Hassard, 75 Id. 367; Crissey v. H. M. & F. R., Id. 83; Gray v. Scott, 66 Pa. St. 345; W. & G. R. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. 401; Mangan v. B. C. R., 30 N. Y. 445; W. P. R. v. Gallagher, 16 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 413; Barry v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 92 N. Y. 289, 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 615; Dowling v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 90 N. Y. 670; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 73; Thurber v. H. B. M. & F. R., 60 N. Y. 326; Reynolds v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 58 N. Y. 248; Byrne v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 83 N. Y. 620; O'Connor v. B & L. R., 135 Mass. 352; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 362; McMahon v. N. C. R., 39 Md. 438; Schmidt v. M. & St. P. R., 23 Wis. 186; C. & A. R. v. Gregory, 58 Ill. 226; Boland v. M. R., 36 Mo. 484; S. C. & P. R. v. Stout, 17 Wallace, 657; Elkins v. B. & A. R., 115 Mass. 190; Walter v. C. D. & M. R., 39 Iowa, 33.

3. Johnson v. C. & N. W. R., 49 Wis. 529; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 155; Ewen v. C. & N. W. R., 38 Wis. 614; Townley v. C. M. & St. P. R., 53 Wis. 626; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 562; Evansich v. G. C. & S. F. R., 57 Tex. 123; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 182; Vickers v. A. & W. P. R., 64 Ga. 306; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 337; M. & M. R. v. Crenshaw, 65 Ala. 566; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 340; Johnson v. C. & N. W. R., 56 Wis. 274; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 471; Nagel v. M. P. R., 75 Mo. 653; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 702; P. & M. R. v. Hoehl, 12 Bush (Ky.), 41; Reynolds v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 58 N. Y. 248; Ihl v. F. S. St. R., 47 N. Y. 317; Mulligan v. Curtis, 100 Mass. 512; O'Connor v. B. & L. R., 135 Mass. 352; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 362.

4. Nagle v. A. V. R., 85 Pa. St. 35; Colgan v. W. P. P. R., 4 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 400; Dietrich v. B. & H. S. R., 58 Md. 347; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 115. Sed cf. Haycroft v. L. S. & M. S. R., 64 N. Y. 636.

5. A., T. & S. F. R. v. Flinn, 24 Kans. 627; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 240; Snyder v. H. & St. J. R., 60 Mo. 413; P. & R. R. v. Heil, 5 Weekly Notes of Cases, 91; H. M. & F. P. R. v. Kelley, 102 Pa. St. 115; Flanders v. Meath, 27 Ga. 358; Roller

20. Intoxication.—The fact of the intoxication of the injured person at the time of the injury will not only not relieve him from the legal consequences of his contributory negligence, but also, if his intoxicated state contributed to the happening of the injury, will be admissible in evidence as proof of contributory negligence.[1]

An incapacity on the part of the injured person will not render the carrier liable to him under circumstances in which it would not be liable to a person of average capacity, unless that incapacity be known to the carrier's servants.[2]

The plaintiff's own contributory negligence will bar his recovery when he sues for damage to himself resulting from the personal injuries of some one else.[3]

21. Attributed Negligence.—Where a passenger sues for injuries done by other than that passenger's carrier, negligence upon the part of that carrier is, in some jurisdictions, attributed to the passenger as contributory negligence upon his part, but in other jurisdictions this attribution of contributory negligence is not recognized. The reason of the rule is, not that the servant of the passenger's carrier, who, by his negligence, has contributed to the accident, is pro hac vice the servant of the passenger, but that the carrier is so far the agent of the passenger that his negligence is the passenger's negligence, or, in other words, that the passenger, having intrusted his person to the carrier, and having been injured by the negligence of that carrier, combined with the negligence of a third party who was not under any contractual duty to him, cannot be permitted to recover from that third party for an injury which would not have happened if it had not been for negligence on the part of that carrier co-operating in bringing the passenger into a position of danger. For the rule there can be cited some cases.[4]

v. S. S. R., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 333; Hogan v. C., M. & St. P. R., 59 Wis. 139; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 439; Maschek v. St. L. R., 71 Mo. 276; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 38; C. & A. R. v. Becker, 76 Ill. 25.

1. Kean v. B. & O. R., 61 Md. 154; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 321; T. P. & W. R. v. Riley, 47 Ill. 514; C., R. I. & P. R. v. Bell, 70 Ill. 102; I. C. R. v. Hutchinson, 47 Ill. 408; Weeks v. N. O. & C. R., 32 La. An. 615; Milliman v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 66 N. Y. 642; Herring v. W. & R. R., 10 Ired. 402; I. C. R. v. Hutchinson, 47 Ill. 408; Weeks v. N. O. & C. R., 32 La. An. 615; Davis v. O. & C. R., 8 Oreg. 172; S. W. R. v. Hankerson, 61 Ga. 114; H. & T. C. R. v. Waller, 56 Tex. 331; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 431; C. & P. R. v. Sutherland, 19 Ohio St. 151.

2. C., C. & C. R. v. Terry, 8 Ohio St. 570; Poole v. N. C. R., 8 Jones (N. Car.), 340; I. C. R. v. Buckner, 28 Ill. 299; Johnson v. L. & N. R., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 623; Zimmerman v. H. & St. J. R., 71 Mo. 476; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 191; Purl v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 73 Mo. 168; 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 27; C. & N. W. R. v. Miller, 46 Mich. 532; 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 89; Laicher v. N. O., J. & S. R., 28 La. Ann. 320; Cogswell v. O. & C. R., 6 Oregon, 417.

3. Glassey v. F. & P. R., 57 Pa. St. 172; Smith v. H. M. & F. R., 92 Pa. St. 450; Cauley v. P. C. & St. L. R., 95 Pa. St. 398; P. R. v. Bock, 93 Pa. St. 427; Roller v. S. S. R., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 333; B. & I. R. v. Snyder, 24 Ohio St. 670; P., F. W. & C. R. v. Vining, 27 Ind. 513.

4. Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 115; 65 E. C. L.; Bridge v. G. J. R., 3 M. & W. 244; Catlin v. Hills, 8 C. B. 123; 65 E. C. L.; Armstrong v. L. & Y. R., L.

Against the rule there can be cited more recent cases.[1]

Upon the same principle it has been held that where a wife is injured by collision with a train, while travelling in a vehicle driven by her husband, his contributory negligence bars her recovery.[2]

But the Supreme Court of Ohio has refused to attribute the contributory negligence of a father to a daughter.[3]

The contributory negligence of a person who has been killed will bar a recovery by those who sue for damages for his death.[4]

Where the action is brought to recover damages for a tort founded upon a contract, the contributory negligence of the contracting party will bar a recovery by the person upon whose behalf the contract was made.[5]

The contributory negligence of persons unconnected with the plaintiff will not be imputed to the plaintiff as contributory negligence.[6]

22. Liability of Carrier for Acts of Others.—Where the injury is done by the omission of a particular act of care which the duty of

R. 10 Ex. 47; Child v. Hearn, L. R. 9 Eq. 176; The Bernina, 11 P. D. 31; Simpson v. Hand, 6 Wh. 311; Lockhart v. Lichtenthaler, 46 Pa. St. 151; P. & R. R. v. Boyer, 97 Pa. St. 91; Smith v. Smith, 2 Pick. 621; C., C. & C. R. v. Terry, 8 Ohio St. 570; Puterbaugh v. Reasor, 9 Ohio St. 484; Bryan v. N. Y. C. R., 31 Barb. 335; Nicholls v. G. W. R., 27 Up. Can. (Q. B.) 382; Payne v. C., R. I. & P. R., 39 Iowa, 523; Mooney v. H. R. R., 5 Robertson (N. Y.), 548; L. S. & M. S. R. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 274.

1. Little v. Hackett, 116 U. S. 366; The Bernina, 12 P. D. 58; Colegrove v. N. Y. & N. H. R., 20 N. Y. 492; Bennett v. N. J. R., 32 N. J. Law, 225; Tompkins v. Clay St. H. R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144; Chapman v. N. H. R., 19 N. Y. 341; W., St. L. & P. R. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 364; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 166; Dyer v. Erie R., 71 N. Y. 228; Danville Turnpike Co. v. Stewart, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 119; L. R. v. Case, 9 Bush, 728; Eaton v. B. & L. R., 11 Allen, 500; Transfer Co. v. Kelly, 36 Ohio St. 86; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 335; Masterson v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 84 N. Y. 247; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 408; Robinson v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 66 N. Y. 11; Malmsten v. M. H. & O. R., 49 Mich. 94; s.c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 291; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Steinbrenner, 47 N. J. L. 161; Perry v. Lansing, 17 Hun, 34; Busch v. B. C. R., 29 Hun, 112; Gray v. P. & R. R. (U. S. C. C. N. D. N. Y.), 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 351; Webster v. H. R., 38 N. Y. 260; P., C. & St. L. R. v. Spencer, 98 Ind. 186; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 478; St. C. St. R. v. Eadie, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 269.

2. Carlisle v. Sheldon, 38 Vt. 440; Peck v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R., 50 Conn. 379; 14 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 633; G. C. & S. F. R. v. Greenlee, 62 Tex. 344; 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas 322.

3. St. C. St. R. v. Eadie, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 269.

4. Witherley v. Regents' Canal Co., 12 C. B. N. S. 2; 104 E. C. L.; Lofton v. Vogles, 17 Ind. 105; Rowland v. Cannon, 35 Ga. 105; Gerety v. P., W. & B. R., 81 Pa. St. 274; Karle v. K. C., St. J. & C. B. R., 55 Mo. 476; Dewey v. C. & N. W. R., 31 Iowa, 373; Kelly v. Hendrie, 26 Mich. 355.

5. Waite v. N. E. R., El. Bl. & El. 719, 96 E. C. L.

6. Eaton v. B. & L. R., 11 Allen, 500; Scott v. Shepherd, 2 W. Bl. 892; Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198, Stark. 287, 2 E. C. L.; Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 C. & P. 190, 24 E. C. L.; Hughes v. Macfie, 2 H. & C. 744; Hill v. New River Co., 9 B. & S. 303; Burrows v. March G. & C. Co., L. R. 5 Ex. 66, 7 Ex. 96; Collins v. Middle Level Commrs., L. R. 4 C. P. 279; Harrison v. G. N. R., 3 H. & C. 321; Watling v. Oastler, L. R. 6 Ex. 73; Daniels v. Potter, 4 C. & P. 262, 19 E. C. L.; Clark v. Chambers, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 327, criticising Mangan v. Atterton, L. R. 1 Ex. 239; P. R. v. Mahoney, 57 Pa. St. 187; Railroad v. Caldwell, 74 Pa. St. 421.

the carrier to the person injured requires it to do for his protection, the fact of the omission fixes the liability of the carrier; and the relation between the carrier and the person who has omitted to perform the duty is immaterial; but where the injury is done by an act of commission, the liability of the carrier depends upon the fact of the relation of agency between the carrier and the actual wrongdoer.[1]

23. Respondeat Superior.—The general rule is that a carrier, like other masters, is legally responsible for an injury done by an act of its servant if the particular act be within the scope of, and be done in the exercise of, the servant's delegated authority.[2]

The rule does not apply to cases where the carrier does not stand in the character of employer to the person by whose act the injury has been occasioned. A carrier is, therefore, not liable for the acts of a volunteer assisting its servants, as, for instance, for the negligence of passengers in assisting other passengers to alight; nor for advice given by passengers to another passenger to leap from a moving train; or to leave a train at a place other than a station; nor is the carrier to be held liable for the negligent act of a person engaged as his assistant by a servant to whom the carrier has not delegated the power of employing an assistant. Whether or not the person causing the injury be a servant of the carrier is, of course, a question of fact for the jury. The test of the existence of the relation of master and servant is to be found not in the payment of the servant's wages by the carrier, but in the exercise by the carrier of authority in appointing the servant, in directing his acts, in receiving the benefit of those acts, and in reserving the power of dismissing the servant.[3]

Where the relation of master and servant exists, and where

1. The Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs, L. R. 1 H. L. 115; Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 470, 100 E. C. L.; Bower v. Peate, 1 Q. B. D. 326; Reedie v. L. & N. W. R., Hobbitt v. Same, 4 Ex. 243; Bartonshill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. 282.

2. Bartonshill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. 266, 4 Jur. N. S. 767; Randleson v. Murray, 8 A. & E. 109, 35 E. C. L.; Yarborough v. Bank of England, 16 East, 6; Whitfield v. S. E. R., 1 El. Bl. & El. 115, 96 E. C. L.; Limpus v. London Genl. Omnibus Co., 1 H. & C. 526; Green v. Same, 7 C. B. N. S. 290, 97 E. C. L.; Seymour v. Greenwood, 6 H. & N. 359; Lawson v. Bank of London, 18 C. B. 84, 86 E. C. L.; E. C. R. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314; Chilton v. L. & C. R., 15 M. & W. 212; Smith v. B. & S. Gas Light Co., 1 Ad. & El. 526, 28 E. C. L.; Patten v. Rea, 2 C. B. N. S. 606, 89 E. C. L.; Goodman v. Kennell, 3 C. & P. 167; 14 E. C. L.; Page v. Defries, 7 B. & S. 137; Shaw v. Reed, 9 W. & S. 72; N. Y. & W. Tel. Co. v. Dryburgh, 35 Pa. St. 298; P. & R. R. v. Derby, 14 How. 469.

3. Burrows v. Erie R., 63 N. Y. 556; Morrison v. Erie R., 56 N. Y. 302; O. & N. R. v. Stratton, 78 Ill. 88; Filer v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 59 N. Y. 351; Frost v. G. T. R., 10 Allen, 387; C. & I. R. v. Farrell, 31 Ind. 408; Jewell v. G. T. R., 55 N. H. 84; P. R. v. Spicker, 105 Pa. St. 142; Laugher v. Pointer, 5 B. & C. 547, 12 E. C. L.; Quarman v. Bennett, 6 M. & W. 499; Purnell v. G. W. R., mentioned by Melish, L. J., in 2 C. P. D. 210; Holmes v. Onion, 2 C. B. N. S. 790, 89 E. C. L.; Fenton v. City of Dublin Steam Packet Co., 8 A. & E. 835, 35 E. C. L.; Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. Bl. & El. 890, 96 E. C. L., 28 L. J. Q. B. 25; Jones v. Mayor, etc., of Liverpool, 14 Q. B. D. 890; Fletcher v. Braddick, 5 Bos. & Pul. 182; Sproul v. Hemmingway, 14 Pick. 1: Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co., 2 C. P. D. 205; Little v. Hacket, 116 U. S. 366.

the act causing the injury is within the scope of the servant's employment, it is not material that the master did not order or even know of the doing of the particular act, or that in doing the act, or in the manner of its performance, the servant disobeyed the express injunctions of the master.[1]

Nor will the carrier escape liability if in doing the act or in the manner of its performance the servant disobey the express injunctions of his superior officers, provided that the act be of that class with whose performance the servant is charged.[2]

Where the particular act is done in furtherance of the general purpose of the carrier, and is within the scope of the servant's authority, the carrier is liable, even though the act be a trespass.[3]

But carriers are not liable for a mistaken exercise of judgment upon the part of their servants in an emergency; nor, for a failure upon the part of their servants to act with the utmost possible promptitude when the circumstances are such as to afford no time for deliberation.[4]

A carrier is not liable for the wilful act of its servant beyond the scope of that servant's general authority, unless it be proven that there was an antecedent special authorization or subsequent ratification.[5]

1. Barwick v. English Joint Stock Bank, L. R. 2 Ex. 259; Huzzey v. Field, 2 C. M. & R. 432; The Thetis, L. R. 2 Ad. & Ec. 365; Johnson v. C. V. R., 56 Vt. 707.

2. Bayley v. M. G. & L. R., L. R. 7 C. P. 415, 8 C. P. 148; Peck v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 70 N. Y. 587; P. R. v. Vandiver, 42 Pa. St. 365.

3. Yarborough v. Bank of England, 16 East, 6; Whitfield v. S. E. R., 1 El. Bl. & El. 115, 96 E. C. L.; Green v. L. G. Omnibus Co., 7 C. B. N. S. 290, 97 E. C. L.; Limpus v. Same, 1 H. & C. 526; Roe v. B. L. & C. J. R., 7 Ex. 36; Seymour v. Greenwood, 7 H. & N. 354; Bayley v. M. S. & L. R., L. R. 7 C. P. 315, 8 C. P. 148; P. R. v. Vandiver, 42 Pa. St. 365; Railroad v. Finney, 10 Wis. 388; Weed v. P. R., 17 N. Y. 362; Moore v. F. R., 4 Gray, 465; Holmes v. Wakefield, 12 Allen, 580; L., N. A. & C. R. v. Dunkin, 92 Ind. 601; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 422; State v. Ross, 2 Dutcher, 224; Coleman v. N. Y. & N. H. R., 106 Mass. 160; Brokaw v. N. J. R., 3 Vroom. 328; C. & A. R. v. Flagg, 43 Ill. 364; E. & C. R. v. Banin, 26 Ind. 70; G. W. R. v. Miller, 19 Mich. 305; Jackson v. S. A. R., 47 N. Y. 274; Kline v. C. P. R., 39 Cal. 587; Higgins v. W. T. & R. R., 46 N. Y. 23; C., C. & I. R. v. Powell, 40 Ind. 37; Sanford v. E. A. R., 23 N. Y. 343; Marquette v. C. & N. W. R., 33 Iowa, 562; Carter v. L., N. A. & C. R., 98 Ind. 522; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 360; Kline v. C. P. R., 37 Cal. 400; Schultz v. T. A. R., 89 N. Y. 242; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 579; N. Y. C. & H. R. R. v. Hoffman, 87 N. Y. 25; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 537; Benton v. C., R. I. & P. R., 55 Iowa, 496.

4. Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. B. N. S. 568, 98 E. C. L.; Brown v. French, 14 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 412; Gumz v. C., M. & St. P. R., 52 Wis. 672; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 583; Maschek v. St. L. R., 71 Mo. 276; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 38; Dunleavy v. C., R. I. & P. R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 542; Brown v. C. & B. St. R., 49 Mich. 153; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 385; C. & N. W. R. v. Smith, 46 Mich. 504; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 535; Jenkins v. C., M. & St. P. R., 41 Wis. 112.

5. McManus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106; Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & Ald. 590, 6 E. C. L.; Lawson v. Bank of London, 18 C. B. 84, 86 E. C. L.; Edwards v. L. & N. R., L. R. 5 C. P. 445; Walker v. S. E. R., L. R. 5 C. P. 640; E. C. R. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314; Roe v. B. L. & C. J. R., 7 Ex. 36; Smith v. B. & S. Gas Light Co., 1 A. & E. 526, 28 E. C. L.; Hays v. H. G. N. R., 46 Tex. 280; G. H. & S. A. R. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 162; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287; Isaacs v. T. A. R., 47 N. Y. 122; R. T. Co. v. Vanderbilt, 2 N. Y. 479; C. & N. W. R. v. Bayfield, 37 Mich. 205; I. C. R. v. Downey, 18 Ill. 259.

24. Independent Contractors.—A carrier is not liable for the negligence of an independent contractor or of his servants in the course of the prosecution of a lawful work. The modern doctrine is that if an independent contractor is employed to do a lawful act, the employer not reserving a control over the manner of its performance, and in the course of the work he or his servant commits some casual act of negligence, the employer is not answerable.[1] But where a passenger is injured while being transported over a line which is in process of construction by contractors, and which has not been formally received from the contractors, but the train is manned by servants of the railways, and the passenger's injuries are caused by the negligence of those servants, the railway must be held liable therefor.[2]

Where a carrier has contracted for the performance of a work, and has reserved to itself control both of the result and of the means by which that result is to be accomplished, the contractor and his servants are the servants of the carrier, and the carrier is held liable as master for their acts.[3] The fact that the contract requires the contractor to do the work in accordance with the plans, specifications, and instructions furnished by a railway will not render the railway liable,[4] nor that the contract reserves to the railway power to insist on the removal of careless or incompetent workmen employed by the contractor;[5] nor that the contract reserves to the railway power to direct changes in the time and manner of doing the work;[6] nor that the contract reserves to the railway the right to direct as to the quantity of work to be done, or as to the condition of the work when completed;[7] nor that the

1. Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 480, 100 E. C. L.; Overton v. Freeman, 11 C. B. 867, 73 E. C. L.; Knight v. Fox, 5 Ex. 721; Allen v. Hayward, 7 Q. B. 960, 53 E. C. L.; Steel v. S. E. R., 16 C. B. 550, 81 E. C. L.; Peachey v. Rowland, 13 C. B. 181, 76 E. C. L.; Brown v. A. C. S. & M. Co., 3 H. & C. 511; Pearson v. Cox, 2 C. P. D. 369; Rapson v. Cubitt, 9 M. & W. 710; Hilliard v. Richardson, 3 Gray, 349; Scammon v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 424; School District of Erie v. Fuess, 98 Pa. St. 600; Smith v. Simmons, 13 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 242; Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. St. 374; Wray v. Evans, 80 Pa. St. 102; Milligan v. Wedge, 12 A. & E. 737, 40 E. C. L.; Murray v. Currie, L. R. 6 C. P. 24; Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co., L. R. 2 C. P. D. 205; Hall v. Smith, 2 Bing. 156; as explained by Alderson, B., in Scott v. Mayor of Manchester, 1 H. & N. 59; Wiggett v. Fox, 11 Ex. 832; as explained by Channell, B., in Abraham v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 143, and dissented from by Cockburn, C. J., in Rourke v. Colliery Co., 2 C. P. D. 205; Painter v. Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Ardesco Oil Co. v. Gilson, 63 Pa. St. 146; Erie v. Caulkins, 85 Pa. St. 247; Borough of Susquehanna Depot v. Simmons, 17 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 362; Reed v. Allegheny, 79 Pa. St. 300; Barry v. St. Louis, 17 Mo. 121; Blake v. Ferris, 5 N. Y. 58; N. O. & N. E. R. v. Reese, 61 Miss. 581; Hughes v. C. & S. R., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 100, and note, Ohio St.; Linton v. Smith, 8 Gray, 147; DeForrest v. Wright, 2 Mich. 368; McCafferty v. S. D. & P. M. R., 61 N. Y. 178; Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469; Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 358; Hofnagle v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 55 N. Y. 608; King v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 66 N. Y. 181; Hexamer v. Webb, 101 N. Y. 377.

2. Burton v. G. H. & S. A. R., 61 Tex. 526; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas 218.

3. Randleson v. Murray, 8 A. & E. 109, 35 E. C. L.; Speed v. A. & P. R., 71 Mo. 303; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 77; M. & A. R. v. Mayes, 49 Ga. 355.

4. Hunt v. P. R., 51 Pa. St. 475; Smith v. Simmons, 103 Pa. St. 32.

5. Reedie v. L. & N. W. R., 4 Ex. 243.

6. Erie v. Caulkins, 85 Pa. St. 247.

7. Hughes v. C. & S. R., 39 Ohio St.

contractor is paid by the day;[1] nor that the contractor's servant whose negligence caused the injury is paid by the railway while directed and controlled in his action by the contractor.[2]

The doctrine of the independent contractor will not exempt an employer from liability where the act which occasions the injury is one which the contractor was engaged to do, and which he has done in pursuance of his contract, and where the act in itself is a wrong. In such cases the employer is, of course, liable, for the contractor in fulfilling his contract is the employer's agent.[3]

So also the employer is liable where the contractor, having been intrusted with the performance of a duty incumbent upon the employer, neglects its fulfilment, whereby an injury is occasioned.[4]

An employer is not bound to anticipate that a carefully-selected and experienced contractor will do his work negligently, and therefore is not liable if he fails to take precautions against possible negligence on the part of the contractor or of his servants.[5]

25. Lessors and Lessees.—A railway is liable for the negligent acts of a lessee of its line, when the lease has not been expressly authorized by statute,[6] and in such case both the lessor and lessee railways are liable for injuries done by the lessee's negligent operation of the line.[7]

On the other hand, where a railway, under due authority of law, has leased its line to another railway, the lessor railway is not liable for torts committed by the lessee railway in the operation of the line.[8]

A railway operated on joint account by receivers of part of its line, and also by lessees of the remaining part thereof, is liable

461; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 100.

1. Harrison v. Collins, 86 Pa. St. 153; Hexamer v. Webb, 101 N. Y. 377.

2. Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co., L. R. 2 C. P. D. 205.

3. Hole v. S. & S. R., 6 H. & N. 488; Ellis v. Sheffield G. C. Co., 2 E. & B. 767, 75 E. C. L.; Blake v. Thirst, 2 H. & C. 20; Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 470, 100 E. C. L.; Tarry v. Ashton, 1 Q. B. D. 314; Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657; Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 359; Lowell v. B. & L. R., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 24; St. P. Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 566; R. R. I. & St. L. R. v. Wells, 66 Ill. 321; C. & St. L. R. v. Woolsey, 85 Ill. 370.

4. Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 483, 100 E. C. L.; Bower v. Peate, 1 Q. B. D. 326; Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 740; Trustees v. Gibbs, L. R. 1 H. L. 116; Homan v. Stanley, 66 Pa. St. 464.

5. Daniels v. M. R., L. R. 5 H. L. 61. Sed cf. V. C. R. v. Sanger, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 230.

6. Gardner v. L. C. & D. R., L. R. 2 Ch. 201; W. A. & G. R. v. Brown, 17 Wall. 445; Y. & M. L. R. v. Winans, 17 How. (U. S.) 30; Beman v. Rufford, 1 Sim. N. S. 550; Winch v. B. L. & C. J. R., 5 DeG. & S. 562, 16 Jur. 1035; G. N. R. v. E. C. R., 9 Hare, 306; Black v. D. & R. Canal Co., 22 N. J. Eq. 130; M. R. v. B. & C. R., 115 Mass. 347; Thomas v. W. J. R., 101 U. S. 71.

7. I. C. R. v. Barron, 5 Wall. 90; C. & St. L. R. v. McCarthy, 20 Ill. 385; C. & R. I. R. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 105; Nelson v. V. C. R., 26 Vt. 717; McElroy v. N. R., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 400; Y. & M. L. R. v. Winans, 17 How. (U. S.) 30; Freemann v. M. & St. L. R., 28 Minn. 443; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 410; Speed v. A. & P. R., 71 Mo. 303; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 77.

8. Mahony v. A. & St. L. R. 63 Me. 68; Ditchett v. St. P., D. & P. M. R., 67 N. Y. 425. Sed cf. Singleton v. S. W. R., 70 Ga. 464; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 226; Langley v. B. & M. R., 10 Gray (Mass.), 103.

where the railway has permitted tickets to be issued in its name for transportation over the whole line.[1]

26. Mortgage Trustees.—A railway cannot, without express statutory authority, mortgage its franchise or line. But where a mortgage has been duly executed under such authority, and the mortgage trustees have entered into possession of the line in accordance with the terms of such a mortgage, the railway is not liable for injuries done by the mortgage trustees or their servants.[2]

Mortgage trustees in possession are liable for injuries caused by their neglect or that of their servants, and this liability is enforceable in any jurisdiction in which they may be properly served with process.[3]

27. Receivers.—A railway whose line is in the custody of and operated by a receiver is not liable in damages for injuries resulting from the negligence of the receiver or his servants.[4]

28. Connecting Lines.—A carrier is liable to its passengers for negligence in the construction, maintenance in repair, or operation of means of transport which are under the immediate control of third parties.[5]

A carrier is liable to one whom it has contracted to carry to a point beyond the terminus of its own line and over the line of a connecting carrier for injuries done on that connecting line.[6]

A carrier who, by contract, voluntarily permits another party to run trains over its line is liable to its passengers for the negligence of that railway or individual.[7] But a carrier railway, where there has been no negligence upon its part, or upon the part of its agents or servants, is not to be held liable for an injury caused to its passenger solely by negligence on the part of another railway which, under statutory authority, uses its line.[8]

1. W. A. & G. R. v. Brown, 17 Wall. 445.

2. State v. E. & N. A. R., 67 Me. 479.

3. Sprague v. Smith, 29 Vt. 421; Barter v. Wheeler, 49 N. H. 9; Lamphear v. Buckingham, 33 Conn. 237; Rogers v. Wheeler, 43 N. Y. 598; Smith v. E. R., 124 Mass. 154.

4. Ballou v. Farnum, 9 Allen (Mass.),47; O. & M. R. v. Davis, 23 Ind. 553; Bell v. I. C. & R. R., 53 Ind. 57; Metz v. B. C. & P. R., 58 N. Y. 61; Rogers v. M. & O. R., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 442; Davis v. Duncan (U. S. C. C., So. Dist. Miss.), 17 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 295; M. & L. R. R. v. Stringfellow, 44 Ark. 322; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 374; Turner v. H. & St. J. R., 74 Mo. 603; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 38.

5. Bullett v. T. & B. R., 40 N. Y. 168; N. J. R. v. Palmer, 4 Vroom (N. J.), 90; John v. Bacon, L. R. 5 C. P. 437; Knight v. P. S. & P. R., 56 Me. 234; Gruber v. W. & J. R., 92 N. Car. 1; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 438; Pennsylvania Co. v. Roy, 102 U. S. 451; C., C. & I. R. v. Walrath, 38 Ohio St. 461; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371; Kinsley v. R., 125 Mass. 54; Thorpe v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 76 N. Y. 402; Combe v. Railroad, 31 L. T. N. G. 613.

6. G. W. R. v. Blake, 7 H. & N. 987; Birkett v. W. H. J. R., 4 H. & N. 730; Buxton v. N. E. R., L. R. 3 Q. B. 549; Thomas v. Railroad, L. R. 6 Q. B. 266; Murch v. C. R., 9 Foster, 9; Stetler v. C. & N. W. R., 49 Wis. 609; W., St. L. & P. R. v. Peyton, 106 Ill. 534; Quimby v. Vanderbilt, 17 N. Y. 306; Bissell v. M. S. & N. I. R., 22 N. Y. 258. Sed cf. Sprague v. Smith, 29 Vt. 421.

7. I. C. R. v. Barron, 5 Wall. 90; C. & St. P. R. v. McCarthy, 20 Ill. 385; O. & M. R. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623; C. & R. I. R. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 105; Nelson v. V. & C. R., 26 Vt. 717; M. & A. R. v. Mayes, 49 Ga. 355; Aycock v. Railroad, 89 N. Car. 321.

8. Wright v. M. R., L. R. 8 Ex. 137.

Where, however, the carrier railway is in any respect negligent, it is liable, although the injury was, in part, caused by negligence on the part of a railway which exercises statutory running powers over its line.[1]

A railway corporation which, by means of a subscription to stock, or bonds, or to a contract of guaranty, promotes the organization of an auxiliary corporation for the purpose of constructing a line which shall serve as a feeder of the main line, is not, by reason of such subscription or guaranty, to be held liable for injuries done in the operation of the subsidiary line by the auxiliary corporation.[2]

Where injury to a passenger results from an imperfection in the line, or in the means of transportation, due to the negligence of the party who built the same and furnished it to the carrier, the carrier is liable therefor.[3]

29. Duty of the Carrier.—The duty of the carrier requires it not only to test its machinery and appliances before they are put into use, but also to test them from time to time subsequently, in order that it may be known if they are deteriorating by wear and tear. The criterion of negligence in such cases is, not whether the particular defect which was the cause of the injury could possibly have been detected by the use of scientific means of investigation, but whether the defect ought to have been observed practically and by the use of ordinary and reasonable care.[4]

1. McElroy v. N. & L. R., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 400.

2 A. I. & S. F. R. v. Davis. 8 Pac. Repr. 530; 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 312.

3. Grote v. C. & H. R., 2 Ex. 251; Francis v. Cockrell, L. R. 5 Q. B. 501; Hegeman v. W. R. Corporation, 13 N. Y. 9; Readhead v. M. R., L. R. 4 Q. B. 379; Burns v. C. & Y. R., 13 C. L. (N. S.) 543.

4. Manser v. E. C. R., 3 L. T. N. S. 585; T. & St. L. R. v Suggs, 62 Tex. 323; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 475; Stokes v. E. C. R., 2 F. & F. 691; Robinson v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 9 Fed. Repr. 877; s. c., 20 Blatchf. 338.

As to negligence of railways in construction and inspection, consult the following cases:

Roadway.—G. W. R. v. Braid, 1 Moo. P. C. N. S. 101; P., C. & St. L. R. v. Williams, 74 Ind. 462; O'Donnell v. A. V. R., 59 Pa. St. 259; V. C. R. v. Sanger, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 230; Mattison v. N. Y. C. R., 35 N. Y. 487; P., P. & J. R. v. Reynolds, 88 Ill. 418; N. & T. R. v. Johnson, 15 Lea (Tenn.), 677.

Rails.—Brignoli v. C. & G. E. R., 4 Daly (N. Y.). 182; M. S. & N. J. R. v. Lantz. 29 Ind. 528; C., C., C. & I. R. v. Newell, 75 Ind. 542; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 377; George v. St. L., I. M. & S. R., 34 Ark. 613; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 294; McPadden v. N. Y. C. R., 44 N. Y. 478; Reed v. N. Y. C. R., 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 493; V. & M. R. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 291.

Ties.—P., C. & St. L. R. v. Thompson, 56 Ill. 138; T. & P. R. v. Hardin, 62 Tex. 367; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 460.

Bridges.—Grote v. C. & H. R., 2 Ex. 251; T. W. & W. R. v. Conroy, 68 Ill. 560; Oliver v. N. Y. & E. R., 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. 589; Locke v. S. C. & P. R., 46 Iowa, 109; K. P. R. v. Miller, 2 Colo. 442; Jamison v. St. J. & S. C R., 55 Cal. 593; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 350; B. S. O. & B. R. v. Rainbolt, 99 Ind. 551; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 466; D. & W. R. v. Spicker, 61 Tex. 427; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 160.

Embankments.—Henley v. H. R., 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. 359; P. & R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 351; I. & G. N. R. v. Halloren, 53 Tex. 46; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 343.

Level Crossings.—Graham v. G. W. R., 41 Up. Can. (Q. B.) 324.

Switches.—N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Daugherty, 11 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 437; P. & R. I. R. v. Lane, 83 Ill.

30. New Appliances.—The duty of the carrier to its passengers requires it to adopt such improved appliances and methods of operation as, having been tested and found to materially contribute to the safety of its operations, are in practical use and can be in fact adopted.[1]

31. Railway Regulations.—It is both the right and the duty of the carrier to make regulations for the safe conduct of its business, but those regulations must be reasonable in themselves, and must be so published that all persons who are to be affected thereby may have an opportunity of learning the existence and effect of such regulations.[2]

It is for the jury to determine whether or not any particular regulation is reasonable.[3]

It is the duty of a carrier to enforce its regulations; and servants, by permitting the passengers to disobey regulations, will make the carrier liable for injuries caused to passengers by such 449; B. & O. R. v. Worthington, 21 Md. 275; McElroy v. N. & L. R., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 400; Smith v. N. Y. & H. R., 19 N. Y. 227; Caswell v. B. & W. R., 98 Mass 194.

Rolling Stock—Cars.—Penna. Co. v. Roy. 102 U. S. 451; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 225; C., C., C. & I. R. v. Walrath, 38 Ohio St. 461; Lyon v. Mells, 5 East, 428; P. P. R. v. Weiller, 4 Eastn. Repr. 832.

Axles.—Hegeman v. W. R., 13 N. Y. 9; Alden v. N. Y. C. R., 26 N. Y. 102; McPadden v. Same, 44 N. Y. 478; G. R. & I. R. v. Boyd, 65 Ind. 525; Richardson v. G. E. R., L. R. 10 C. P. 486, 1 C. P. D. 342.

Brakes.—N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Daugherty, 11 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 437; Costello v. S. & R. R., 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 92.

Wheels.—T. W. & W. R. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 80; Readhead v. M. Ry., L. R. 2 Q. B. 412, 4 Q. B. 379; Meier v. P. R., 64 Pa. St. 225; T. & P. R. v. Hamilton (Tex.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 182.

Locomotives.—Robinson v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 20 Blatchf. 338; Manser v. E. C. R., 3 L. T. N. J. 585.

1. Freemantle v. L. & N. W. R., 10 C. B. N. S. 95, 100 E. C. L.; Ford v. L. & S. W. R., 2 F. & F. 730; Hegeman v. Western R. Corporation, 13 N. Y. 9; Smith v. N. Y. & H. R., 19 N. Y. 127; Brown v. N. Y. C. R., 34 N. Y. 404; Taylor v. Railroad, 48 N. H. 304; B. & O. R. v. State, 29 Md. 252, 420; Warren v. Fitchburg R., 8 Allen, 227; LeBaron v. East Boston Ferry Co., 11 Allen, 312; Meier v. P. R., 64 Pa. St. 225; F. & B. Turnpike Co. v. P. & T. R., 54 Pa. St. 345; L. & B. R. v. Doak, 52 Id. 379; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Daugherty, 11 W. N. C. 437; I. & G. N. R. v. Halloren, 53 Tex. 46; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 343; Bowen v. N. Y. C. R., 18 N. Y. 408; K. C. R. v. Thomas, 79 Ky. 160; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 79; Randall v. B. & O. R., 109 U. S. 478; Bartley v. G. R., 60 Ga. 182; N. & J. R. v. McNeil, 61 Miss. 434; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 518.

2 McDonald v. C. & N. W. R., 26 Iowa, 124; Sullivan v. P. & R. R., 30 Pa. St. 238; P. R. v. Zebe, 32 Pa. St. 326; P. R. v. McClurg, 56 Pa. St. 294; Powell v. P. R., 32 Pa. St. 414; C. R. v. Green, 86 Pa. St. 421; O'Donnell v. A. V. R., 59 Pa. St. 239; Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St. 139; B. & M. R. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 253.

3. Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumner, 221; State v. Overton, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 435; Bass v. C. & N. W. R., 36 Wis. 450; Day v. Owen, 5 Mich. 520; McDonald v. C. & N. W. R., 26 Iowa, 124; P. R. v. Zebe, 33 Pa. St. 326; P. R. v. Langdon, 92 Pa. St. 21; Creed v. P. R., 86 Id. 139; P. & C. R. v. McClurg, 56 Pa. St. 294; Wills v. L. & B. R., 129 Mass. 351; A. G. S. R. v. Hawk, 72 Ala. 112; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194; Trollinger v. E. T., V. & G. R., 11 Tenn. 533; Beauchamp v. I. & G. N. R., 56 Tex. 239; Murch v. C. R., 29 N. H. 9; B. & M. R. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 253; I. & St. L. R. v. Kennedy, 77 Ind. 507; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 467; Arnold v. I. C. R., 83 Ill. 273; C. & A. R. v. Flagg, 43 Ill. 364; C., C. & C. R. v. Bartram, 11 Ohio St. 457; Law v. I. C. R., 32 Iowa, 534.

disobedience;[1] but the servant's dispensing power does not apply to regulations which forbid a passenger to occupy a position of danger.[2]

32. Stations.—A carrier is liable for negligence in its construction or maintenance in repair of its station approaches,[3] station buildings,[4] urinals,[5] and station platforms.[6]

A carrier is also liable for negligence in permitting snow and ice to remain on its station platforms,[7] or on the approaches to its cars,[8] or on the steps of its cars.[9]

A carrier is also liable for a failure to adequately light its stations and platforms,[10] and for negligent obstructions on station platforms;[11] for injuries caused by objectsn egligently thrown or falling from passing trains;[12] or for the careless handling of baggage by the carrier's servants.[13]

Railways are liable to passengers on station platforms if they are struck by a passing train any part of whose engine or cars projects over the platform.[14]

1. Britton v. A. & C. A. L. R., 88 N. Car. 536; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 391; Creed v. P. R., 86 N. Car. 139.

2. P. R. v. Langdon, 92 Pa. St. 21.

3. Burgess v. G. W. R., 6 C. B. N. S. 923, 95 E. C. L.; Hulbert v. N. Y. C. R., 40 N. Y. 145; C. & I. C. R. v. Farrell, 31 Ind. 408; Bennett v. L. & N. R., 102 U. S. 577; Hartwig v. C. & N. W. R., 49 Wis. 358; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 65; Tobin v. P. S. & P. R., 59 Me. 183; Forsyth v. B. & A. R., 103 Mass. 510; Dillaye v. N. Y. C. R., 56 Barb. 30; Hoffmann v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 75 N. Y. 605; C. & N. R. v. Fillmore, 57 Ill. 265; Quimby v. B. & M. R., 69 Me. 340; Longmore v. G. W. R., 19 C. B. N. S. 183, 115 E. C. L.; Mooreland v. B. & M. R., 1 New Engl. Repr. 909; Davis v. L. R., 2 F. & F. 588.

4. See the charge of Maule, J., to the jury, as reported in Martin v. G. N. R., 16 C. B. 179, 81 E. C. L., and also the judgment of Dillon, J., in McDonald v. C. & N. W. R., 26 Iowa, 124; and the note of Judge Redfield to the last cited case in 2 Redf. R. Cas. 532.

5. McKone v. M. C. R., 51 Mich. 601; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 29.

6. Brassell v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 84 N. Y. 241; Dobiecki v. Sharp, 88 Id. 203; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 485; C. & N. W. R. v. Scates, 90 Ill. 586; McDonald v. C. & N. W. R. 26 Iowa, 124, 29 Id. 170; St. L., I. M. & S. R. v. Cantrell, 37 Ark. 519; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 198; P. R. v. Henderson, 51 Pa. St. 315; L. & N. R. v. Wolfe, 80 Ky. 82; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 625; T. W. & W. R. v. Grush, 67 Ill. 262; Liscomb v. N. J. R., 6 Lans. 75; C. R. v. Martin, 112 Ill. 16; Keefe v. B. & A. R. (Mass.), 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 137.

7. Seymour v. C. B. & Q. R., 3 Biss. 43; Sheppard v. M. R., 20 Weekly Reporter, 705; Weston v. N. Y. E. R., 73 N. Y. 595.

8. Dixon v. B. C. & N. R., 100 N. Y. 170; s. c., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 203, 207.

9. Neslie v. S. & T. Sts. P. R. (Pa.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 180.

10. Renneker v. S. C. R., 20 Shand (S. Car.), 219; Stewart v. I. & G. N. R., 53 Tex. 289; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 497; Forsyth v. B. & A. R., 103 Mass. 510; Beard v. C. & P. R., 48 Vt. 101; Knight v. P. S. & P. R., 56 Me. 234; Patten v. C. & N. W. R., 32 Wis. 524; Patten v. C. & N. W. R., 36 Id. 413; Peniston v. C., St. L. & N. O. R., 34 La. Ann. 777; Buenemann v. St. P., M. & M. R., 32 Minn. 390; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 153; Quaife v. C. & N. W. R., 48 Wis. 513.

11. Martin v. G. N. R., 16 C.B. 179, 81 E. C. L.; Nicholson v. L. & Y. R., 3 H. & C. 534. Sed cf. Cornman v. E. C. R., 4 H. & N. 781.

12. J. M. & I. R. v. Riley, 34 Ind. 368; T. W. & W. R. v. Maine, 67 Ill. 298; Snow v. F. R., 136 Mass. 552; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 161; Carpenter v. B. & A. R., 24 Hun (N. Y.), 104; s. c., 97 N. Y. 494; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 331. Sed cf. Muster v. C. M. & St. P. R., 61 Wis. 325; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 113; Walton v. N. Y. C. S. C. Co., 139 Mass. 556; O. & M. R. v. Gullett, 15 Ind. 487.

13. Tebbutt v. B. & E. R., L. R. 6 Q. B. 73.

14. Dobiecki v. Sharp, 88 N. Y. 203;

Where the arrangement of a station is such that a passenger has to cross a track either before entering or after leaving the cars, he has a right to assume that that track may be crossed safely, and the railway is liable if he be struck by a train moving on that track when he is approaching or leaving the cars or station.[1] Of course a carrier is not to be held liable to the passenger at its stations or on its premises for injuries which do not result from its negligence;[2] nor for injuries which are, in part, caused by the contributory negligence of the passenger.[3]

33. Boarding and Leaving Trains.—It is the duty of a railway to give to passengers at its stations reasonable notice of the starting of its trains,[4] and to give to its passengers in its trains reasonable notice of the approach of the train to its stations, in order that the passengers who are to leave the cars may prepare to alight.[5]

In cases of injuries to passengers in leaving trains, it is, in general, for the jury to determine what effect, if any, is to be attributed to the calling of the name of a station before the train comes to a stop.[6]

It is the duty of the railway to stop its trains for a reasons. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 485; Langan v. St. L., I. M. & S. R., 72 Mo. 392; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 355; C. & A. R. v. Wilson, 63 Ill. 167.

1. Rogers v. R. R., 26 L. T. N. S. 879; Warren v. F.R., 8 Allen (Mass.), 227; Gaynor v. O. C. & N. R., 100 Mass. 208; Terry v. Jewett, 78 N. Y. 338; Brassell v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 84 N. Y. 241; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 380; Green v. E.R., 11 Hun (N.Y.), 333; P. R. v. White, 88 Pa. St. 327; Klein v. Jewett, 25 N. J. Eq. 474; Armstrong v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 64 N. Y. 635; B. & O. R. v. State, to use of Hauer, 60 Md. 449; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149; Chaffee v. B. & L. R., 104 Mass. 108; Wheelock v. B. & A. R., 105 Mass. 203; Phillips v. R. & S. R., 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 644; Sed. cf. I. C. R. v. Hudelson, 13 Ind. 325; D. W. & W. R. v. Slattery, 3 App. Cas. 1155; Sonier v. B. & L. R., 1 New Eng. Repr. 493; Magone v. Little, 25 Fed. Repr. 627.

2. Cornman v. E. C. R., 4 H. & N. 781; Crafter v. M. R., L. R. 1 C. P. 300; Crocheron v. Ferry Co., 56 N. Y. 656; Toomey v. L. B. & S. C. R., 3 C. B. N. S. 146, 91 E. C. L.; Potter v. W. & W. R., 92 N. Car. 541; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 328; Welfare v. L. & B. R., L. R. 4 Q. B. 693; Smith v. G. E. R., L. R. 2 C. P. 54; C., St. L. & N. O. R. v. Trotter, 61 Miss. 417; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 159.

3. Renneker v. S. C. R., 20 Shand (S. Car.), 219; Forsyth v. B. & A. R., 103 Mass. 510; Rigg v. M. S. & L. R., 12 Jur. N. S. 525; Watkins v. G. W. R., 37 L. T. N. S. 193; P. R. v. Zebe, 33 Pa. St. 318; s. c., 37 Pa. St. 420; Bancroft v. B. & W. R., 97 Mass. 275; McQuilkin v. C. P. R., 64 Cal. 463; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 353; Forsyth v. B. & A. R., 103 Mass. 510. Cf. P. R. v. White, 88 Pa. St. 327; M. C. R. v. Coleman, 28 Mich. 440; Harvey v. E. R., 116 Mass. 269; s.c., 12 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 348. See also Wheelwright v. B. & A. R., 135 Mass. 225; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 315; C., B. & Q. R. v. Dewey, 26 Ill. 225.

4. Perry v. C. R., 58 Ga. 461; s. c., 66 Ga. 746.

5. Dawson v. L. & N. R., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 134.

6. Lewis v. I. C. & D. R., L. R. 9 Q. B. 71; Weller v. L. B. & S. C. R., L. R. 9 C. P. 132, 134; Whittaker v. M. & S. R., L. R. 5 C. P. 464, note; Bridges v. N. L. R., L. R. 7 H. L. 224; P. R. v. Aspell, 23 Pa. St. 147; P. R. v. White, 88 Pa. St. 327; C. R. v. Van Horn, 38 N. J. L. 133; Mitchell v. C. & G. T. R., 51 Mich. 236; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 176; Taber v. D., H. & L. R., 71 N. Y. 489; C. I. R. v. Farrell, 31 Ind. 408; Pabst v. B. & P. R., 2 McArthur (D. C.) 42; Nicholls v. G. S. & W. R., 7 Ir. C. L. 40; Thompson v. B., H. & H. R., 5 Ir. C. L. 517; Brooks v. B. & M. R., 135 Mass. 21; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 345; Edgar v. N. R., 4 Ont (Can.) 201; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 347; Penna. Co. v. Hoagland, 78 Ind.

able time at way stations in order that passengers may get on or off the cars with safety.[1]

Of course the railway is liable when its conductor, or other servant, gives a signal to start while a passenger is obviously in the act of getting on or off its train.[2]

But if the train has stopped a reasonable time, and the passenger has given no notice of an intention to alight, and the conductor does not see him in the act of alighting, the railway is not liable for the act of its conductor in starting the train.[3]

A passenger who is carried past the station, or who is not taken up at the station, to or from which the railway had contracted to carry him, is entitled to recover compensatory damages.[4]

When a passenger not having been set down or taken up at the station to or from which the railway has contracted to carry him is injured in the attempt to board or leave a moving train, the railway is liable if the person injured in getting on or off the train did not incur a danger obviously apparent to the mind of a reasonable man.[5]

203; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 436.

1. Bucher v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 98 N. Y. 128; Wood v. L. S. & M. S. R., 49 Mich. 370; Brooks v. B. & M. R., 135 Mass. 21; D. & M. R. v. Curtis, 23 Wis. 152; 27 Wis. 158; S. R. v. Kendrick, 40 Miss. 374; Imhoff v. C. & M. R., 20 Wis. 344; N. O. R. v. Statham, 42 Miss. 607; Millimann v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 66 N. Y. 642; P. R. v. Kilgore, 32 Pa. St. 292; J., M. & I. R. v. Parmalee, 51 Ind. 42; Keller v. S. C. & St. P. R., 27 Minn. 178; Swigert v. H. & St. J. R., 75 Mo. 475; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 322; W., St. L. & P. R. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 264; Penna. Co. v. Hoagland, 78 Ind. 203; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 436; T. W. & W. R. v. Baddeley, 54 Ill. 19; Fuller v. N. R., 21 Conn. 557; Davis v. C. & N. W. R., 18 Wis. 175; Paulitsch v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 162.

2. Swigert v. H. & St. J. R. 75 Mo. 475; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 322; Bucher v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 98 N. Y. 128; Keating v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 49 N. Y. 673; Mitchell v. W. & A. R., 30 Ga. 22; C. W. D. R. v. Mills, 105 Ill. 63; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 128; Conner v. C. S. R. (Ind.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 210; Eppencorll v. B. C. & N. R., 69 N. Y. 195; Vance v. Railroad, 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 223; Straus v. K. C., St. J. & C. B. R., 86 Mo. 421; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 170.

3. Strauss v. K. C., St. J. & C. B. R., 75 Mo. 185; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384; H. & St. J. R. v. Clotworthy, 80 Mo. 220; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371.

4. Hobbs v. L. & S. W. R., L. R. 10 Q. B. 111; C., St. L. & N. O. R. v. Scurr, 59 Miss. 456; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 341; Trigg v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 47 Mo. 147; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 345; I. & G. N. R. v. Terry, 62 Tex. 380; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 323.

5. Bucher v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 98 N. Y. 128; Swigert v. H. & St. J. R., 75 Mo. 475; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 322; C. R. v. Perry, 58 Ga. 461; s. c., 66 Ga. 746; Johnson v. W. C. & P. R., 70 Pa. St. 357; P. R. v. Kilgore, 32 Pa. St. 292; C. V. R. v. Maugans, 61 Md. 53; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 182; Edgar v. N. R., 4 Ont. (Can.) 201; Doss v. M., K. & T. R., 59 Mo. 37; Loyd v. H. & St. J. R., 53 Mo. 509; Curtis v. D. & M. R., 27 Wis. 158; D. & M. R. v. Curtis, 23 Wis. 152; Filer v. N. Y. C. R., 49 N. Y. 47; Delamatyr v. M. & P. M. C. R., 24 Wis. 578; Davis v. C. & N. W. R., 18 Wis. 175; Price v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 72 Mo. 414; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 365; St. L., I. M. & S. R. v. Cantrell, 37 Ark. 519; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 198; C. & A. R. v. Bonifield, 104 Ill. 223; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 443; Lambeth v. N. C. R., 66 N. Car. 494; U. P. R. v. Diehl, 33 Kans. 422; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 350; Boss v. P. & W. R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 364; H. & St. J. R. v. Clotworthy, 80 Mo. 220;

But when the train is moving at so high a rate of speed, or where the place of the passengers' ascent or descent is so obviously perilous that a person of ordinary prudence would not attempt to get on or off the train then and there, the act of the person injured in so doing is such contributory negligence as will bar his recovery.[1]

While it is the duty of a carrier to provide reasonably safe and convenient means of ingress and egress from its cars and carriages, the railway is only to be held liable for accidents happening to its passengers in descending from a car when at rest at a station if the circumstances are such as to induce the passenger to believe that he has reached his point of destination, and that it is safe for him to get out.[2]

On the other hand, where a passenger, in the exercise of rea-

s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371; M. & L. R. R. v. Stringfellow, 44 Ark. 32; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 374; Leslie v. W., St. L. & P. R., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 229; D. & H. C. Co. v. Webster (Pa.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 160.

1. Phillips v. R. & S. R., 49 N. Y. 177; Harper v. E. R., 32 N. J. L. 88; D., S. P. & P. R. v. Pickard, 8 Colo. 163; M. C. R. v. Coleman, 28 Mich. 440; Harvey v. E. R., 116 Mass. 269; P. R. v. Aspell, 23 Pa. St. 147; G., H. & S. A. R. v. Le Gierse, 51 Tex. 189; Lindsey v. C., R I. & P. R., 64 Iowa, 407; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 179; L. S. & M. S. R. v. Bangs, 47 Mich. 470; C. R. v. Letcher, 69 Ala. 106; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 115; Burrows v. E. R., 63 N. Y. 556; J. R. v. Hendricks, 26 Ind. 228; Gavett v. M. & L. R., 16 Gray (Mass.), 501; Hickey v. B. & L. R., 14 Allen (Mass.), 429; Davis v. C. & N. P., 18 Wis. 175; Nelson v. A. & P. R., 68 Mo. 595; Kelly v. H. & St. J. R., 70 Mo. 604; Strauss v. K. C., St. J. & C. B. R., 75 Mo. 185; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384; H. & T. C. R. v. Leslie, 57 Tex. 83; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384; S. W. R. v. Singleton, 67 Ga. 306; Jewell v. C., St. P. & M. R., 54 Wis. 610; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 379; I. C. R. v. Chambers, 71 Ill. 519; I. C. R. v. Lutz, 84 Ill. 598; Dougherty v. C., B. & Q. R., 86 Ill. 467; R. & D. R. v. Morris, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 200; Gonzales v. N. Y. & H. R. R., 50 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 126; Secor v. T. P. & W. R., 10 Fed. Repr. 15; Blodgett v. Bartlett, 50 Ga. 353; Haldan v. G. W. R., 30 Up. Can. C. P. 89; Knight v. P. R., 23 La. Ann. 462; Hubener v. N. O. & C. R., 23 La. Ann. 492; Mitchell v. C. & G. T. R., 31 Mich. 266; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 176; McCorkle v. C., R. I. & P. R., 61 Iowa, 555; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 156; W., St. L. & P. R. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 264; R. & D. R. v. Morris, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 200; Damont v. N. O. & C. R., 9 La. Ann. 441; I. C. R. v. Able, 59 Ill. 131; J. R. v. Swift, 26 Ind. 459; E. & C. R. v. Duncan, 28 Ind. 441; I. C. R. v. Slatton, 54 Ill. 133; O. & M. R. v. Schiebe, 44 Ill. 460; H. & T. C. R. v. Schmidt, 61 Tex. 282; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 345; Adams v. L. & N. R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 380; S. & N. A. R. v. Schaufler, 75 Ala. 136; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 405; E. T. V. & G. R. v. Messengill, 15 Lea (Tenn.), 328; Beattie v. C. P. R. (Pa.), 1 Cent. Repr. 633; Solomon v. M. R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 155.

2. Foy v. L. B. & S. C. R., 18 C. B. N. S. 225, 114 E. C. L.; Praeger v. B. & E. R., 24 L. T. N. S. 105; Cockle v. L. & S. E. R., L. R. 5 C. P. 457, 7 C. P. 321; Weller v. L. B. & S. C. R., L. R. 9 C. P. 126; Bridges v. N. L. R., L. R. 7 H. L. 213; Robson v. N. E. R., L. R. 10 Q. B. D. 371; Rose v. N. E. R., 2 Ex. D. 248; Foulkes v. M. D. R., 4 C. P. D. 267, 5 C.P.D. 157; P.R. v. White, 88 Pa. St 327; T. H. & I. R. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 234; Cartwright v. C. & G. T. R., 52 Mich. 606; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 321; C. & I. C. R. v. Farrell, 31 Ind. 408; Gaynor v. O. C. & N. R., 100 Mass. 208; Brooks v. B. & M. R., 135 Mass. 21; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 345; Edgar v. N. R., 4 Ont. 201; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 347; C. R. v. Van Horn, 38 N. J. Law, 133; Edgar v. N. R., 11 Ont. App. 452; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 433; E. T. V. & G. R. v. Conner, 15 Lea (Tenn.), 254; Delamatyr v. M. R., 24 Wis. 578.

sonable care, can see that by getting out then and there, in his own way, he is encountering a peril, the carrier is not liable.[1]

A carrier is liable to passengers injured by its negligent operation of its line or conduct of its business, as, for instance, collisions, derailment, boiler explosions, etc.[2]

34. Disorderly Passengers.—It is both the right and the duty of a carrier to remove from its cars disorderly passengers whose misconduct endangers the safety of their fellow-passengers;[3] but the duty of the carrier to its passengers does not require it to maintain a police force, either at its stations or on its cars, for the suppression of riots or the prevention of any possible breach of the peace.[4] Nevertheless, the duty of the carrier requires it to protect its passengers from the disorderly acts of other passengers and of strangers, provided that the parties causing the disorder are not sufficiently numerous or strong to overthrow the authority of

1. Siner v. G. W. R., L. R. 3 Ex. 150, 4 Ex. 117; Lewis v. L. C. & D. R, L. R. 9 Q. B. 66; D., L. & W. R. v. Napheys, 90 Pa. St. 135; P. R. v. Zebe, 33 Pa. St., 318; s. c., 37 Pa. St. 420; E. & C. R. v. Duncan, 28 Ind. 441; Mitchell v. C. & G. T. R., 51 Mich. 236; Frost v. G. T. R., 10 Allen (Mass.), 387; Eckerd v. C. & N. W. R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 114.

2. C. C. R. v. Mumford, 97 Ill. 560; Wardle v. N. O. C. R., 35 La. Ann. 202; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 60; Knowlton v. M. C. R., 59 Wis. 278; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 330; Ward v. C. C. R., 19 Shand (S. Car.), 521; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 356; Mulhado v. B. C. R., 30 N. Y. 370; Oram v. M. R., 112 Mass. 38; Nichols v. M. R., 106 Mass. 463; C. W. D. R. v. Mills, 105 Ill. 63; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 128; Rathbone v. U. R., 13 R. I. 709; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 58; Skinner v. L. B. & S. C. R., 5 Ex. 787; I. R. v. Mowery, 36 Ohio St. 418; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 361; N. O., J. & G. N. R. v. Albertson, 38 Miss. 242; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Seybolt, 95 N. Y. 562; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 162; Farlow v. Kelly, 108 U. S. 288; Smith v. St. P. C. R., 32 Minn. 1; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 310; Carpue v. L. & B. R., 5 Q. B. 747, 48 E. C. L.; Dawson v. M. R., 7 H. & N. 1037; Sullivan v. P. & R. R., 30 Pa. St. 234; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Daugherty, 11 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 437; Edgerton v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 39 N. Y. 227; Festal v. M. R., 109 Mass. 720; George v. St. L., I. M. & S. R., 34 Ark. 613; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 294; P., C. & St. L. R., v. Williams, 74 Ind. 462; C., C., C. & I. R. v. Newell, 75 Ind. 542; Curtis v. R. & S. R., 18 N. Y. 534; Tuttle v. C., R. I. & P. R., 48 Iowa, 236; Brignoli v. C. & G. E. R., 4 Daly (N. Y.), 182; C., B. & Q. R. v. George, 19 Ill. 510; L. R. & F. S. R. v. Mills, 40 Ark. 298; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 10; Yonge v. Kenney, 28 Ga. 111; T. & St. L. R. v. Suggs, 62 Tex. 323; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 475; K. C. R. v. Thomas, 79 Ky. 160; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 79; Brown v. N. Y. C. R., 34 N. Y. 404; C., R. I. & P. R. v. McAra, 52 Ill. 296; N. & C. R. v. Massino, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 220; Robinson v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 20 Blatchf. 338; White v. F. R., 136 Mass. 321; Tyrrel v. E. R., 111 Mass. 546; B. & Y. T. Road v. Leonhardt, 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194; T. H. & I. R. v. Jackson, 81 Ind. 19; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 178; Gruber v. W. & J. R., 92 N. Car. 1; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 438; Dickinson v. P., H. & N. W. R., 53 Mich. 43; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 456; Lambkin v. S. E. R., 5 App. Cas. 352; Matteson v. N. Y. C. R., 35 N. Y. 487; Dixon v. B., C. & N. R., 100 N. Y. 171.

3. R. v. Valleley, 32 Ohio St. 345; P., C. & St. L. R. v. Vandyne, 57 Ind. 576; B., P. & C. R. v. McDonald, 68 Ind. 316; Lemont v. W. & G. R., 1 Mackey (D. C.), 180; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 263.

4. P. N. R. v. Hinds, 53 Pa. St. 512; Cannon v. M. G. W. R., 6 Ir. C. L. 199; Putnam v. B. & S. A. R., 55 N. Y. 108; C. & A. R. v. Pillsbury (Ill.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 241; Simmons v. N. B., V. & N. S. S. Co., 97 Mass. 361; Spohn v. M. P. R. (Mo.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 252; Felton v. C., R. I. & P. R. (Iowa), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 229.

its servants; for in such a case the servants are negligent in not removing or controlling the disorderly persons.[1]

35. Sudden Jolts.—A carrier is liable for injuries to passengers in its cars caused by a sudden jolting of the car in starting or coming to a stop, and in such cases it is for the jury to say whether or not the plaintiff was contributorily negligent in rising from his seat before the car stopped.[2]

The carrier's duty requires it to provide seats for its passengers,[3] but the mere failure to provide a seat for a passenger is not such negligence as will render a carrier responsible to the passenger if he, while standing, be thrown down without negligence upon the part of the carrier.[4] A carrier is liable for injuries caused to a passenger by the falling of a package upon him from a rack in a car, the carrier's servants having negligently permitted the package to remain in a dangerous position.[5]

36. Contributory Negligence of Passengers.—A passenger who voluntarily and unnecessarily places himself in a position of danger cannot hold the carrier responsible for injuries of which his position was the efficient cause; as, for instance, crossing the line in front of a train moving or likely to move,[6] or riding on an engine[7] or on the platform of a moving car,[8] or putting his head or arm out of the window of a car in motion,[9] or riding in a

1. P. & C. R. v. Pillow, 76 Pa. St. 510; Flint v. N. & N. Y. T. Co., 34 Conn. 554; Britton v. A. & C. R., 88 N. Car. 536; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 391; Hendricks v. S. A. R., 44 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 8; N. O., St. L. & C. R. v. Burke, 53 Miss. 200; King v. O. & M. R. (U. S. C. C. Ind.), 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 386.

2. N. J. R. v. Pollard, 22 Wall. 341; C. & P. S. Ferry Co. v. Monaghan, 10 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 46; W. P. P. R. v. Whipple, 5 W. N. C. 68; Barden v. B., C. & F. R., 121 Mass. 436; Worthen v. G. T. R., 125 Mass. 99; Geddes v. M. R., 103 Mass. 391; Spearman v. C. St. R., 57 Cal. 432; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 193; M. P. R. v. Marten (Tex.), 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 409; Dougherty v. M. R., 81 Mo. 325; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 497; N. H. R. v. May (N. J.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 151; Bartholomew v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. (N. Y.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 154; Condy v. St. L., I. M. & S. R., 85 Mo. 79; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 282. Sed cf. Harris v. H. & St. J. R. (Mo.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 216.

3. L. & N. R. v. Kelly, 92 Ind. 371; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1.

4. Burton v. Ferry Co., 114 U. S. 474.

5. Morris v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 411.

6. B. & O. R. v. State, 60 Md. 449; Henry v. St. L., K. C. & N. R., 76 Mo. 288; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 136; Hallihan v. H. & St. J. R., 71 Mo. 113; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 117; Johnson v. B. & M. R., 125 Mass. 75.

7. Robertson v. E. R., 22 Barb. (N.Y.) 91; B. & P. R. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439; Rucker v. M. P. R., 61 Tex. 499; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 245; Daggett v. I. C. R., 34 Iowa, 284. Cf. W., St. L. & P. R. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 364; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 166.

8. Secor v. T., P. & W. R., 10 Fed. Repr. 15; I. C. R. v. Green, 81 Ill. 19; Blodgett v. Bartlett, 50 Ga. 353; A. G. S. R. v. Hawk, 72 Ala. 12; C. & A. R. v. Hoosey, 99 Pa. St. 492; Hickey v. B. & L. R., 14 Allen (Mass.), 429; Quinn v. I. C. R., 51 Ill. 495; M. & W. R. v. Johnson, 38 Ga. 409; P., R. I. & St. L. R. v. Coultas, 67 Ill. 398.

9. Todd v. O. C. R., 3 Allen (Mass.), 18, 7 Id. 207; P. R. v. McClurg, 56 Pa. St. 294; I. & C. R. v. Rutherford, 29 Ind. 83; P. & C. R. v. Andrews, 39 Md. 329; Holbrook v. U. & S. R., 12 N. Y. 236; Dun v. S. & R. R., 78 Va. 645; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 363; L. & N. R. v. Siekings, 5 Bush (Ky.), 1; Dale v. D., L. & W. R., 73 N. Y. 468. Sed cf. N. J. R. v. Kennard, 21 Pa. St. 203; C. & A. R. v. Pondrom, 51 Ill. 333; Spencer v. M. & P. I. C. R., 17 Wis. 487; Winters v. H. & St. J. R., 39 Mo. 368; Summers v. C. C. R., 34 La. Ann. 139.

baggage or other car not intended for the carriage of passengers,[1] or riding on a platform car with his legs hanging over the side of the car,[2] or standing or sitting while the train is in motion near to an open side door of a car,[3] or riding on an open platform car and thus exposing himself to risk of injury from cinders,[4] etc.

If the passenger assumes a position of danger at the invitation of a servant of the carrier, or under an express or implied representation that he may safely occupy the position, the carrier will, in general, be held liable for the injuries resulting therefrom.[5] The fact that a servant of the carrier invited, or even directed, the passenger to occupy a position of danger will not render the carrier liable for injuries resulting therefrom, if the danger was so obvious that a reasonable man would not have obeyed the servant, or accepted his invitation.[6] Nor will a carrier be held responsible if the servant was not expressly or impliedly authorized to give the invitation. In particular is this the case when the general regulations of the carrier for the protection of the passenger forbid him to occupy a position of danger, as, for instance, to ride in the baggage car.[7]

It is not contributory negligence in a passenger to ride in a passenger car other than that in which he has been assigned to a seat.[8]

The carrier is, of course, liable, if the passenger's arm resting within the window is jolted out by a collision and injured.[9]

The conditions of travel on a street car are, of course, different from those on lines of railway whose cars are propelled at the higher rate which the use of steam as a motor makes possi-

1. H. & T. C. R. v. Clemmons. 55 Tex. 88; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 396; K. C. R. v. Thomas, 79 Ky. 160; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 79; P. R. v. Langdon, 92 Pa. St. 21; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 87; P. & R. I. R. v. Lane, 83 Ill. 448; Higgins v. H. & St. J. R., 36 Mo. 418. Cf. Watson v. N. R., 24 Up. Can. (Q. B.) 98; Jacobus v. St. P. & C. R., 20 Minn. 125.

2. St. L. R. v. Marker, 41 Ark. 542; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 296.

3. N. & W. R. v. Ferguson, 79 Va. 241; Thompson v. Duncan, 76 Ala. 334.

4. Higgins v. C. R., 73 Ga. 149; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 218.

5. O'Donnell v. A. V. R., 59 Pa. St. 239; Dunn v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 187; Edgerton v. N. Y. C. R., 39 N. Y. 227; N. & C. R. v. Erwin (Tenn.), 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 465; I. & St. L. R. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; L. & N. R. v. Kelley, 92 Ind. 371; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1; Pool v. C. R., 56 Wis. 227; St. L., I. M. & S. R. v. Cantiell, 37 Ark. 519; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 198; G. R. & B. Co. v. McCurdy, 45 Ga. 288; Lambeth v. N. C. R., 66 N. Car. 494; Filer v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 59 N. Y. 351; Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St. 139; Colegrove v. N. Y. & H. & N. Y. & N. H. R., 20 N. Y. 492; C., C., C. & I. R. v. Manson, 30 Ohio St. 451; Waterbury v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 17 Fed. Repr. 671; C., B. & Q. R. v. Sykes, 96 Ill. 162; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 254; H. & St. J. R. v. Martin, 111 Ill. 210; B. & O. R. v. Leapley (Md.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 167.

6. Hazzard v. C. B. & Q. R., 1 Biss. 503; C. & A. R. v. Randolph, 53 Ill. 510; B. & P. R. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439; S. W. R. v. Singleton, 67 Ga. 306, 66 Id. 252; S. & N. A. R. v. Schaufler, 75 Ala. 136; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 405.

7. P. R. v. Langdon, 92 Pa. St. 21.

8. Penn. Co. v. Roy, 102 U. S. 451.

9 Farlow v. Kelly, 108 U. S. 288; G. P R. v. Brophy, 105 Pa. St. 38; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 361; Dahlberg v. M. St. R., 32 Minn. 404; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 202. See also Dickinson v. P., H. & N. W. R., 18 N. W. Repr. (Mich.) 553; P. P. R. v. Lauderbach (Pa.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas.

ble, and it is not necessarily contributory negligence to ride on the platform of a street car.[1]

37. Infirm Passengers.—Where the railway voluntarily accepts as a passenger one whose physical disability is apparent or is made known to its servants, and renders special assistance necessary, the railway is negligent if such assistance be not afforded.[2]

The fact that the passenger was in a state of health predisposing him or her to suffer in case of injury more seriously than would otherwise have been the case will not relieve the carrier from liability for the injury and its consequences.[3]

A carrier owes to an infant passenger a higher measure of duty than it owes to an adult passenger.[4]

38. Burden of Proof.—The burden of proof is, in general, upon the plaintiff of showing, in a case of personal injury, negligence on the part of the carrier.[5]

But it is not necessary that the party on whom the burden of proof rests should establish a case free from any doubt, and it is sufficient to justify a verdict for him that the evidence preponder-

166; Hollahan v. N. Y., L. E. & W. R. (N. Y.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 169.

1. Meesel v. L. & B. R., 8 Allen, 234; Spooner v. B. C. R., 54 N. Y. 230; G. P. R. v. Walling. 97 Pa. St. 55; Maguire v. M. R., 115 Mass. 237; Sheridan v. B. & N. R., 36 N. Y. 39; Clark v. 8th Ave. R., N. Y. 135; Burns v. B. R., 50 Mo. 139; Nolan v. B. C. & N. R., 87 N. Y. 63; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 463; 13th & 15th Sts. P. R. v. Boudrou, 92 Pa. St. 480; s. c., 8 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 244; Fleck v. U. R., 134 Mass. 480; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 372.

2. T., W. & W. R. v. Baddely, 54 Ill. 19; C. C. I. R. v. Powell, 40 Ind. 37; Millimann v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 66 N. Y. 642; Sheridan v. B. C. R., 36 N. Y. 39; N. O., J. & G. N. R. v. Statham, 42 Miss. 607.

3. Stewart v. Ripon, 38 Wis. 364; J. & M. R. v. Riley, 39 Ind. 568; Fitzpatrick v. G. W. R., 12 Upp. Can. Q. B. 645; B. C. R. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 220; L., Na. & C. R. v. Falvey, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 522; R. C. P. R. v. Eckert (Pa.), 4 Atl. Repr. 530.

4. As illustrations of liability to infant passengers, see I. P. & C. R. v. Pitzer, 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 313; Love v. H. S. R., 9 Allen (Mass.), 557; Kline v. C. P. R., 37 Cal. 400; Biddle v. St. M. & F. P. R. (Pa.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 208.

5. Stephen Dig. of Ev. arts. 93–95; Daniel v. M. R., L. R. 3 C. P. 216; Hayes v. M. C. R., 111 U. S. 228; P., W. & B. R. v. Stebbing, 62 Mo. 504; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; C. & N. W. R. v. Smith, 46 Mich. 504; Brown v. C. & B. St. R., 49 Mich. 153; Henry v. L. S. & M. S. R., Mich. 495; Mitchell v. C. & G. T. R., 51 Mich. 236; C., St. L. & N. O. R. v. Trotter, 61 Miss. 417; Parrott v. Wells, 15 Wall. 524; P. & R. R. v. Heil, 5 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 91; Clark v. P. & R. R., W. N. C. 119; P. & R. R. v. Hummel, 44 Pa. St. 375; P. & R. R. v. Spearen, 47 Pa. St. 300; Holbrook v. U. & S. R., 12 N. Y. 236; Curtis v. R. & S. R., 18 N. Y. 524; P., W. & B. R., v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; C., C. & I. C. R. v. Troesch, 68 Ill. 545; Robinson v. F. & W. R., 7 Gray (Mass.), 92; Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. B. N. S. 568, 98 E. C. L.; Hammack v. White, 11 C. B. N. S. 588, 103 E. C. L.; Toomey v. L., B. & S. C. R., 3 C. B. N. S. 146, 91 E. C. L.; Gallagher v. Piper, 16 C. B. N. S. 692, 111 E. C. L.; Welfare v. L. & B. R., L. R. 4 Q. B. 693; Manzoni v. Douglass, 6 Q. B. D. 145; Allyn v. B. & A. R., 105 Mass. 77; Lane v. Crombie, 12 Pick. 177; Corcoran v. B. & A. R., 133 Mass. 507; B., C., R. & N. R. v. Dowell, 62 Iowa, 629; Carter v. C. & G. R., 19 S. Car. 20; B. & O. R. v. State to use of Allison, 62 Md. 479; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 83; Ford v. C. I. R., 17 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 599; C. & A. R. v. Mock, 88 Ill. 87; Cordell v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 75 N. Y. 330; Warner v. E. R., 44 N. Y. 465; T., W. & W. R. v. Branagan 75 Ind. 490; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 630; Willoughby v. C. & N. W. R., 37 Iowa, 432. Cf. Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. St. 347; Simpson

ates in his favor, and that the jury would not act unreasonably in finding a verdict for him.[1]

While all of the authorities agree that the burden is upon the plaintiff of showing that the defendant was negligent, or, in other words, that the injury resulted prima facie from the negligence of the defendant, it is nevertheless held in some jurisdictions that the burden is on the plaintiff of showing affirmatively that the person injured was without fault, but that that may be shown, either by direct evidence or by proof of circumstances reasonably establishing that the injury may have been occasioned without contributory negligence upon the part of the person injured.[2]

Other authorities hold that if the plaintiff's case has shown that under the circumstances the defendant owed him a duty, and that that duty has not been performed, and that the injury has resulted therefrom, the obligation is then upon the defendant to prove plaintiff's contributory negligence, if he relies upon that contributory negligence as a defence to the action.[3]

39. Presumption of Negligence—Where circumstances are proven from which it may fairly be inferred that there is a reasonable probability that the injury resulted from the want of some precaution which the carrier might, and ought to, have resorted to, there is, in the absence of explanation by the carrier, a presumption of negligence upon its part.[4]

This presumption of negligence has been applied in stage-

v. L. G. Omnibus Co., L. R. 8 C. P. 390; Mitchell v. Alestree, 1 Ventr. 295.

1. Johnson v. Agricultural Ins Co., 25 Hun, 251; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Seybolt, 95 N. Y. 562.

2. Per Brett, M. R., in Davey v. L. & S. W. R., 12 Q. B. D. 71; Murphy v. Deane, 101 Mass. 466; Mayo v. B. & M. R., 104 Mass. 137; Hinckley v. C. C. R., 120 Mass. 262; Tolman v. S. B. & N.Y. R., 98 N. Y. 198; Lee v. Troy Co., N. Y. 115; Warren v. F. R., 8 Allen, 227; Gleason v. Bremen, 50 Me. 222; State v. G. T. R., 58 Me. 176; State v. M. C. R., 76 Me. 357; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 313; Pzolla v. M. C. R., 54 Mich. 273; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 334; Murphy v. C., R. I. & P. R., 45 Iowa, 661; Starry v. D. & S. W. R., 51 Iowa. 419; Raymond v. B., C., R. & N. R., 65 Iowa, 152; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 217, reversing s.c., 13 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 6; Behrens v. K. P. R., 5 Col. 400; s.c., 8 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 184; Penna. Co. v. Galentine, 77 Ind. 320; s.c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 517; P., C. & St. L. R. v. Noel, 77 Ind. 110; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 524; T., W. & W. R. v. Branagan, 75 Ind. 490; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 630; Hawes v. B., C., R. & N. R., 64 Iowa, 315; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 220; L., N., A. & C. R. v. Shanks, 94 Ind. 598; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 28.

3. D., W. & W. R. v. Slattery, 3 App. Cas. 1155; W. & G. R. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. 401; L. & St. L. R. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; Oldfield v. N. Y. & H. R., 14 N. Y. 310; Johnson v. H. R. R., 20 N. Y. 65; Button v. H. R. R., 18 N.Y. 248; Wilds v. H. R. R., 24 N. Y. 230; Buesching v. Gaslight Co., 73 Mo. 229; Sweigert v. H. & St. J. R., 75 Mo. 475; Waters v. Wing, 50 Pa. St. 213; Canal Co. v. Bentley, 66 Pa. St. 32; P. R. v. Weber, 76 Pa. St. 157; K. C., St. J. & C. B. R. v. Flynn, 78 Mo. 195; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 23; D. & W. R. v. Spicker, 61 Tex. 427; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 160; P. R. v. McTighe, 46 Pa. St. 316; P. R. v. Warner, 89 Pa. St. 59; C. & P. R. v. Rowan, 66 Pa. St. 393; Abbett v. C., M. & St. P. R., 30 Minn. 482; Mares v. N. P. R., 17 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 620; Wilson v. N. P. R., 26 Minn. 278; McQuilken v. C. P. R., 50 Cal. 7; McDougall v. C. R., 63 Cal. 431; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 143; P., C. & St. L. R. v. Wright, 80 Ind. 182; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 628.

4. Scott v. L. & St. K. Docks Co., 3 H. & C. 596; W. T. Co. v. Downer, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 129; Railroad v. Mitchell, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 400.

coach accidents resulting from the breaking of an axle,[1] reckless driving;[2] or coming off of a wheel,[3] and in railway accidents in cases of collision;[4] boiler explosion,[5] breaking down of bridges and embankments,[6] derailment of cars,[7] sudden jerks in starting or stopping car or ferry-boat,[8] falling of berth in sleeping-car,[9] falling of a bale of cotton down a hatchway,[10] and in a case of injuries received by a passenger in the course of a fight between other passengers.[11]

40. Presumption Regulated by Burden of Proof—Rebuttal.—In those jurisdictions where the burden is on the plaintiff of proving affirmatively that he was not contributorily negligent, the presumption necessarily is that the plaintiff was contributorily

1. Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79.
2. Stokes v. Saltonstall, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 181.
3. Ware v. Gay, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 106.
4. Skinner v. L. B. & S. C. R., 5 Ex. 787; I. R. v Mowery, 36 Ohio St. 418; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 361; N. O., J. & G. N. R. v. Allbritton, 38 Miss. 242; Smith v. St. P. C. R., 32 Minn. 1; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 310; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Seybolt, 95 N. Y. 562; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 162; B. & Y. T. Road v. Leonhardt (Mo.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.
5. Robinson v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 338.
6. G. W. R. v. Braid, 1 Moore P. C. N. S. 101, 9 Jur. N. S. 339; P. & R. R. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. St. 251; B. S. O. & B. R. v. Rainbolt, 99 Ind. 551; s. c., 21 Am & Eng. R. R. Cas. 466; K. P. R. v. Miller, 2 Colo. 442; L. N. A. & C. R. v. Thompson (Ind.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 88; L. N. A. & C. R. v. Pedigo (Ind.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 310.
7. Carpue v. L. & B. R., 5 Q. B. 747, 48 E. C. L.; Dawson v. M. R., 7 H. & N. 1037; Sullivan v. P. & R. R., 30 Pa. 234; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. v. Daugherty, 11 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 437; Edgerton v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 39 N. Y. 227; Festal v. M. R., 109 Mass. 720; George v. St. L., I. M. & S. R., 34 Ark. 613; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 294; P., C. & St. L. R. v. Williams, 74 Ind. 462; C., C., C. & I. R. v. Newell, 75 Ind. 542; Curtis v. R. & S. R., 18 N. Y. 534; Tuttle v. C., R. I. & P. R., 48 Iowa, 236; Brignoli v. C. & G. E. R., 4 Daly (N.Y.), 182; C., B. & Q. R. v. George, 19 Ill. 510. Pollock, C. B., in Bird v. G. W. R., 28 L. J. Exch. 3, doubts as to the applicability of the presumption of negligence on the part of the railway in case of simple derailment. See also Heazle v. I. B. & W. R., 76 Ill. 501; Curtis v. R. & S. R., 18 N. Y. 543; L. R. & F. S. R. v. Miles, 40 Ark. 298; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 10; Yonge v. Kinney, 28 Ga. 111; T. & St. L. R. v. Suggs, 62 Tex. 323; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 475; C., C., C. & I. R. v. Newell, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 492; R. C. P. R. v. Eckert, 4 Atl. Repr. 530; Hipsley v. K. C., St. J. & C. B. R. (Mo.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287; C. R. v. Sanders, 73 Ga. 513; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 300.
8. N. J. R. v. Pollard, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 341; C. P. R. v. Swayne, 13 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 41; Ferry Co. v. Monaghan, 10 W. N. C. 46; Dougherty v. M. R., 81 Mo. 425; s.c. 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 325; Condy v. St. L., I. M. & S. R., 85 Mo., 282; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 282.
9. C., C., C. & I. R. v. Walrath, 38 Ohio St. 461; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371.
10. O. & M. Packe & Co. v. McCool, 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 390.
11. P. & C. R. v. Pollard, 76 Pa. St. 510.

For illustrations of cases in which the presumption has been held to be inapplicable, see Daniel v. M. R., L. R. 3 C. P. 216, 591, 5 H. L. 45; Welfare v. L. & B. R., L. R. 4 Q. B. 693; LeBaron v. E. B. Ferry Co., 11 Allen (Mass.), 312; F. S. & P. V. R. v. Gibson, 96 Pa. St. 83; Corcoran v. B. & A. R., 133 Mass. 507; State, to use of Barnard, v. P. W. & B. R., 60 Md. 555; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 481; Holbrook v. U. & S. R., 12 N. Y. 236; P. & R. v. Boyer, 97 Pa. St. 91; D., L. & W. R. v. Napheys, 90 Pa. St. 135; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 52; C., St. & L. N. O. R. v. Trotter, 60 Miss. 442; Mitchell v. C. & G. T. R., 31 Mich. 266; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng R. R. Cas. 176. Cf. Fuller v. N. R., 21 Conn. 557; Muster v. C. M. & St. P. R., 61 Wis. 325; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 113; Eldredge v. M. & St. L. R., 32 Minn. 253; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 494.

negligent; but in other jurisdictions where the burden is not on the plaintiff of proving affirmatively that he was not contributorily negligent, the presumption, of course, is that he was not contributorily negligent. This presumption is rebutted when testimony to the contrary is adduced, and the jury should be directed that if they believe the testimony they should find for the defendant.[1]

72. Conclusive Presumption—Laws of Nature.—There is a conclusive and unrebuttable presumption of the accuracy and certainty of the operation of the laws of nature.[2]

CARRIERS OF GOODS. (See also ACT OF GOD; BAILMENTS; BILL OF LADING; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK; CHARTER-PARTY; DAMAGES; EXPRESS COMPANIES; FREIGHT; INTERSTATE COMMERCE; NEGLIGENCE; RAILROAD COMPANIES; SHIPPING; STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU; WAREHOUSEMEN.)

1. P. R. v. Weber, 76 Pa. St. 157; Weiss v. P. R., 79 Pa. St. 387; s. c., 87 Pa. St. 447; L. V. R. v. Hall, 61 Pa. St. 361; C. & P. R. v. Rowan, 66 Pa. St. 393; Longenecker v. P. R., 105 Pa. St. 328; Schum v. P. R., 107 Pa. St. 8; Buesching v. St. L. G. L. Co., 73 Mo. 229; K. C., St. J. & C. B. R. v. Flynn, 78 Mo. 105; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 23. Sed cf. Corcoran v. B. & A. R., 133 Mass. 507; Riley v. C. R. R., 135 Mass. 292; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 181; Chase v. M. C. R., 77 Me. 62; s.c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 356.

For illustrations of minor rebuttable presumptions, see Ayler v. S. E. R., L. R. 3 Ex. 146; Ferguson v. W. C. R., 63 Wis. 145; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 285; P. R. v. Books, 57 Pa. St. 345; Creed v. P. R., 86 Pa. St., 139; Eaton v. D., L. & W. R., 57 N. Y. 382; Waterbury v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 17 Fed. Repr. 671; Giles v. T. V. R., 2 El. & Bl. 822, 75 E. C. L.; Goff v. G. N. R., 3 E. & E. 672, 107 E. C. L; Hughes v. N. T. & N. H. R., 36 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 222; Hoffman v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R., 44 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 1; H. & B. T. R. v. Decker, 84 Pa. St. 424; C., B. & Q. R. v. Warner, 108 Ill. 538; s c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 100; T. W. & W. R. v. Moore, 77 Ill. 217; I. C. R. v. Houck, 72 Ill. 286.

2. Briggs v. Taylor, 28 Vt. 180; Cauley v. P. C. & St. L. R., 98 Pa. St. 498.

1. Definition.—Three classes of carriers are recognized by law: Carriers without hire; Carriers for hire but not Common Carriers; and Common Carriers. While in great measure the names given explain the difference between them, and would suggest a difference in the extent of their liability, many complications have arisen in the application to them of the principles of the law of bailments. The legal responsibility of one who undertakes to carry the goods of another will depend primarily upon his classification among carriers, and this classification will result from such considerations as the kind of business in which he is engaged, the character in which he holds himself out to the world, the terms of his contract to carry and deliver, and generally his legal relations with the consignor, the consignee, and third persons. A further measure of liability is based upon what he undertakes to carry and deliver—whether goods, animals, or passengers. While the principles applicable to carriers of goods are of ancient origin, those applied to carriers of animals and passengers, while not new, have risen to their present importance since the introduction of railroads. We are now concerned with the first class alone. Since the questions involved will all hinge upon the liability of carriers who have undertaken to carry goods shipped by the consignor for delivery to the consignee, the natural and logical order of treatment would seem to be as follows: first, a classification of the kinds of carriers; second, principles of liability arising out of consignment to the carrier; third, principles of liability arising out of the acts of the carrier while the goods are in his possession; fourth, principles of liability arising out of delivery to the consignee; fifth, actions against carriers. Whatever collateral questions arise at any of these stages should find a place for consideration in which the temporary possession of the goods is of the essence of liability.

2. Classes of Carriers.—1. CARRIERS WITHOUT HIRE.—Carriers without hire and Carriers for hire but not Common Carriers are defined by the authorities as those who have assumed simply the duties and liabilities of bailees. (See BAILMENTS.)

Since the duties and liabilities of carriers without hire are simply those of bailees, it will be seen that their responsibility does not necessarily arise from an undertaking to carry. A discussion of the law of bailments is therefore out of place here. The application of that law to the facts of cases involving carriers without hire is all that need be attempted. Its cardinal principles are thus tersely stated: When the bailment is for the sole benefit of the bailor the law requires only slight diligence on the part of the bailee, and he is consequently responsible for nothing less than gross neglect. When the bailment is for the sole benefit of the bailee an extraordinary degree of care is demanded, and the bailee is therefore responsible for slight neglect. When the bailment is reciprocally beneficial to both parties (as in the case of the carriage of goods for hire) such care is exacted of the bailee as every prudent man commonly takes of his own goods; or, in other words, the law requires ordinary diligence on the part of the bailee, and makes him responsible for ordinary neglect.[1]

The well-known and most important distinction between carriers without hire and common carriers is found in the measure of liability they respectively assume in their undertaking to carry and deliver; that of the former is determined by the degree of negligence of which he is guilty, while the latter is an insurer. The common-law doctrine on the subject is said to date from the celebrated case of Coggs v. Bernard,[2] where the defendant gratuitously

1. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 11.

2. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. (12th Am. Ed.) 96. The elaborate judgment of Lord Holt in this case is justly celebrated and contains, says Mr. Wallace (1 Sm. Lead. Cas. 293), undertook to remove certain casks of brandy from one cellar to another, but did it so carelessly that one of the casks was burst and the brandy spilled, and the defendant was held liable. The doctrine, as commonly stated, is that if a man undertakes to carry goods safely he is responsible for damage sustained by them in the carriage through his neglect, though he was not a common carrier and was to have nothing for his carriage. It is further said that the confidence induced by undertaking any service for another is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in the performance of it.[1] While perhaps few propositions of law can be considered as better settled, difficulties have arisen in its application through a division of the degree of negligence necessary to render a gratuitous bailee liable into "slight," "ordinary," and "gross." The fact that such distinctions were ever made has often been regretted,[2] but their existence is recognized by the authorities at "the first well-ordered exposition of the English law of bailments." See also Southcote's Case, 4 Rep. 84; Cro. Eliz. 815; Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 72.

1. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 20; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. (12th Am. Ed.) 96; Whitehead v. Greetham, 2 Bing. N. C. 464; Shilliber v. Glyn, 2 M. & W. 143; Robinson v. Threadgill, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 89; Mobile & Ohio R. Co. v. Hopkins, 44 Ala. 486.

2. "The theory that there are three degrees of negligence described by the terms 'slight,' 'ordinary,' and 'gross' has been introduced into the common law from some of the commentators on the Roman law. It may be doubted if these terms can be usefully applied in practice." Curtis, J., in Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 474; Holladay v. Kennard, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 254; Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357; Wells v. New York, etc., R., 24 N. Y. 181; Perkins v. New York, etc., R., 24 N. Y. 196; Carter v. Holbrook, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 331; M. & St. P. R. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 495; Briggs v. Taylor, 28 Vt. 180; Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. 443; Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113; Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 646, where Lord Chief Justice Denman remarks: "Where we find 'gross negligence' made the criterion to determine the liability of a carrier who has given the usual notice, it might perhaps have been reasonably expected that something like a definite meaning should have been given to the expression. It is believed, however, that in none of the numerous cases upon this subject is any such attempt made; and it may well be doubted whether, between gross negligence and negligence merely, any intelligible distinction exists." Austin v. Manchester R. Co., 10 C. B. 454; 11 Eng. L. & Eq. 512; Armistead v. Wilde, 17 Q. B. 261; Beal v. South Devon R., 3 H. & C. 341; Grill v. Iron Screw Collier Co., L. R. 1 C. P. 612.

"Any negligence is gross in one who undertakes a duty and fails to perform it. The term 'gross negligence' is applied to the case of a gratuitous bailee who is not liable unless he fails to exercise the degree of skill he possesses." Willes, J., in Lord v. Midland R. Co., T. R. 2 C. P. 340; Cashill v. Wright, 6 E. & B. 891; Giblin v. McMullen, L. R. 2 P. C. 317.

On this point Hutchinson remarks: "It is true it has been said that it may be doubted whether the terms 'slight,' 'ordinary,' and 'gross' can be usefully applied in practice to distinguish the different degrees of negligence on account of their ambiguous and inexact meaning. But while this may be true, it does not follow that all distinction between the degrees of negligence should be ignored. All negligence is not the same, although it has been said, and perhaps rightly, that where human life is at stake, as in the carriage of passengers by the dangerous agency of steam, it will admit of no degrees. But the case is different when the subject of bailment is property, and its propriety in such case has never been practically denied. The objection is to the terms used to describe the difference in the degrees of the diligence or negligence, and not that the distinction does not exist in fact. Their uncertainty, however, arises from the nature of the subject, and until others are suggested not liable to the objection, we must continue to use them as familiar least to the extent of qualifying the common-law doctrine. It is now considered, therefore, that the most accurate statement of the liability of a carrier without hire is that he becomes liable for gross negligence if not liable for other kinds of negligence.[1]

Cases determining the liability of carriers without hire have most frequently involved a real or an alleged theft of the bailor's property from the bailee. From the uncertain character of the rule already laid down, it is evident that each case must turn upon its particular facts, the question being whether under the circumstances the bailee's conduct could be construed as gross negligence, negligence of a lesser degree, or not negligence at all. The facts may create a presumption of fraud,[2] or such gross negligence may appear as to be inexcusable even in the absence of fraud.[3]

The factors which naturally enter into a determination of the question are the acts and declarations of the bailee immediately preceding and directly following the alleged theft, which are admissible in evidence;[4] the bailee himself is a competent witness;[5] whether or not the bailee lost articles of his own at the same time, which fact has sometimes been held sufficient evidence of good faith and therefore a valid defence,[6] and that where he has been legal terms and as suggestive of the ideas intended to be conveyed by them with tolerable certainty." Hutchinson on Carriers, § 11.

1. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 20; Hutchinson on Carriers, §§ 19, 22.

2. Bland v. Womack, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 373; Rooth v. Wilson, 1 B. & Ald. 59; Stanton v. Bell, 2 Hawks (N. Car.), 145; Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 Ad. & El. 256.

3. In Colyar v. Taylor, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 372, A intrusted a sum of money to B, an acquaintance, upon the latter's promise that upon his return home he would deliver it as requested. Upon finding that he could not return as soon as expected, B turned the money over to C, a neighbor, who was about to start for home, with similar directions as to its delivery, but did so in the presence of witnesses upon a race-track. C's pocket was picked during the journey home and the money was lost. In an action by A against B, the latter was held liable, first, because the unauthorized delivery was a conversion, and, second, because he had been guilty of gross negligence. His conduct evinced such a degree of heedless incaution and disregard of common prudence as might justly be considered to amount to the grossest negligence. See also Tompkins v. Saltmarsh, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 275; Tracy v. Wood, 3 Mason (U. S.), 132; Bland v. Womack, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 373.

Where a box belonging to one who intended going upon a vessel, but was casually left behind, was broken open by the captain on suspicion that it contained contraband goods, and its valuable contents were exposed to the view of the passengers, but were then placed in the captain's chest in the cabin with his own valuables, and upon the vessel's arrival in port the captain and one mate went ashore, leaving the other mate in charge of the vessel, but in the captain's absence the money was stolen and never recovered, and it appeared that the night preceding the loss an excise officer and two young men belonging to the ship slept in the captain's cabin, it was held that the captain had been guilty of negligence, and a verdict was found for plaintiff for the full value of the property. Nelson v. Mackintosh, 1 Stark. 237. See also Jenkins v. Motlow, 1 Sneed (Miss.). 248; Adams Exp. Co. v. Cressap, 6 Bush (Ky.), 572. Compare Pender v. Robbins, 6 Jones Law (N. Car.), 207.

4. Tompkins v. Saltmarsh, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 275; Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528; Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Andersen v. Foresman, Wright (Ohio), 598.

5. Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528; Sandowsky v. McFarland, 3 Dana (Ky.), 205; Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479; Fulton v. Alexander, 21 Tex. 148.

6. Coggs v. Bernard, 1 Ld. Raymond, 909; 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. 96; Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 A. & E. 256; Rooth v. Wilson, 1 B. & Ald. 59; McLean v. Rutherford, guilty of an act of gross negligence in regard to his own goods as well as those bailed to him and they are both lost, he cannot be held liable;[1] but while this may repel a presumption of fraud, it need not always excuse;[2] the value of the goods and consequent temptation;[3] the character of the goods whether perishable, or for any reason requiring an especial sort of care.[4]

What is gross negligence, and how far the carrier is liable under the circumstances, is a question of fact for the jury,[5] though it may be a mixed question of facts and law.[6] The burden of proof is usually upon the party who alleges the negligence, because the law presumes that every person does his duty until the contrary is established.[7]

2. CARRIERS FOR HIRE BUT NOT COMMON CARRIERS.—Definition.—Carriers for hire but not common carriers, who form the second of the three classes of carriers, are defined as those who, without being engaged in carrying as a public employment, undertake to deliver goods, in a particular case, for hire or reward.[8] With the difference in the measure of the reward the law exacts a greater degree of diligence, and holds the carrier responsible for a less degree of negligence. Accordingly this class of carriers must act with ordinary diligence and good faith, and are responsible for ordinary

8 Mo. 109; Tracy v. Wood, 3 Mason (U.S.), 132. Compare Bland v. Womack, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 373; Stanton v. Bell, 2 Hawks (N. Car.), 145; Andersen v. Foresman, Wright (Ohio), 598; Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479.

1. Knowles v. Railway, 38 Me. 55. Compare Giblin v. McMullen, L. R. 2 P. C. 317; Eddy v. Livingston, 35 Mo. 487; Smith v. First Natl. Bank, 99 Mass. 605.

2. McLean v. Rutherford, 8 Mo. 109.

3. Nelson v. Mackintosh, 1 Stark. 237; The Rendsberg, 6 Rob. Adm. 142; Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Schumacker, 29 Md. 175; State v. Meagher, 44 Mo. 356.

4. Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) 67; Mytton v. Cock, 2 Stra. 1099; Carpenter v. Branch, 13 Vt. 161.

5. In Storer v. Gowen, 18 Me. 174, the court observed that how much care will, in a given case, relieve a party from the imputation of gross negligence, or what omission will amount to the charge, is necessarily a question of fact, depending upon a great variety of circumstances which could not be exactly defined. Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Beatty v. Gilmore, 16 Pa. St. 463; Beauchamp v. Powley, 1 M. & Rob. 38; Tracy v. Wood, 3 Mason (U. S.), 132.

6. Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 Ad. & El. 261.

7. Clark v. Spence, 10 Watts (Pa.), 335; Graves v. Ticknor, 6 N. H. 537; Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Newstadt v. Adams, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 43; Stewart v. Frazier, 5 Ala. 114; Williams v. East India Co., 3 East, 192.

8. Samms v. Stewart, 20 Ohio, 69; Pennewill v. Cullen, 5 Harr. (Del.) 238; Sheldon v. Robinson, 7 N. H. 157; Pike v. Nash, 1 Keyes (N. Y.), 335; s. c., 3 Abb. Ct. App. 610; Moriarty v. Herndon's Exp. 1 Daly (N. Y.), 227.

In Brind v. Dale, 8 Car. & P. 207, where the goods which the carrier undertook to carry in his carts were lost, the court remarked: "I take it that if a man agrees to carry goods for hire, although not a common carrier, he thereby agrees to make good the losses arising from the negligence of his own servants, although he would be liable for losses by thieves, or by any taking by force, or if the owner accompanies the goods to take care of them and was himself guilty of negligence; for it is a rule of law that a party cannot recover if his own negligence was as much the cause of the loss as that of the defendant." See also Rogers v. Head, Cro. Jac. 262.

All persons who carry under a special contract, as the driver of a stage-coach occasionally taking packages to carry for compensation, are private carriers. Beekman v. Shouse, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 179.

One who is the owner of a vessel, and who is specially employed to transport a cargo of grain, is not a public carrier, but only a private carrier for hire. Allen v. Sackrider, 37 N. Y. 341.

negligence, and this diligence is such as every prudent man commonly takes of his own goods, and ordinary negligence is the want of such diligence.[1] Here, again, the undertaking to carry serves to produce a difference of facts rather than of legal principles,[2] and a determination of the degree of negligence presents the same difficulties whether the undertaking is gratuitous or for hire.[3]

Such carriers are not liable for loss or injury which could not have been prevented by the use of ordinary diligence;[4] nor where occasioned by unavoidable accident;[5] or by robbery,[6] though a distinction has been drawn between a robbery by force and one by stealth.[7]

Where the owner of the goods has by his misconduct conduced to the loss, the carrier is released;[8] if he accompanies the goods to care for them, and the negligence causing the loss may as well be attributed to him as to the carrier, the latter is excused.[9]

The responsibility of the carrier may be increased or diminished by special contract,[10] but he does not thereby change his character as a carrier.[11]

The burden of proof is considered by the weight of authority to rest upon the party alleging the negligence,[12] but some facts have been held to raise a prima-facie presumption of negligence

1. In Tompkins v. Saltmarsh, 14 S. & R.(Pa.) 280, Duncan, J., remarks: "There is a marked difference in cases where ordinary diligence is required, and where a party is only accountable for gross neglect. Ordinary neglect is the want of that diligence which the generality of mankind use in their own concerns; and that diligence is necessarily required where the contract is reciprocally beneficial." Penobscot Boom Corp. v. Baker, 16 Me. 233; White v. Winnisimmet Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 155; Verner v. Sweitzer, 32 Pa. St. 208; Dover v. Mills, 5 Car. & P. 175; Gilbart v. Dale, 1 Nev. & P. 22; 5 A. & E. 543; Raphael v. Pickford, 2 Dowl. N. S. 916; Freeman v. Birch, 3 Q. B. 483.

2. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), c. iii.; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 35 et seq.

3. Supra, this title, CARRIERS WITHOUT HIRE.

4. Ferguson v. Brent, 12 Md. 9; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 239; Beekman v. Shouse, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 179.

5. Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 239; Hodgson v. Fullarton, 4 Taunt. 787; Hatchwell v. Cooke, 6 Taunt. 577.

6. Coggs v. Bernard. 2 Ld. Raym. 909; 1 Sm. Lead Cas. (12th Am. Ed.) 96; Brind v. Dale, 8 Carr. & P. 207; Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 457. Compare Whitney v. Lee, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 91; Foster v. Essex Bk., 16 Mass. 479.

7. Hodgson v. Fullarton, 4 Taunt. 787; Montagu v. Jauverin, 3 Taunt. 442: Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), §§ 47, 48; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 39.

8. Robinson v. Dinsmore, 2 Bos. & P. 417; Whalley v. Wray, 3 Esp. 74; Cailiff v. Danvers, 1 Peake N. P. 114.

9. Brind v. Dale, 8 Car. & P. 207; Robinson v. Dunmore, 2 Bos. & P. 417. Compare Bowman v. Teall, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 306.

10. Calye's Case, 8 Co. 33; Paradine v. Jane, Alleyn, 27; Hadley v. Clark, 8 T. R. 259; Brecknock Canal Nav. v. Pritchard, 6 T. R. 750; Robinson v Dunmore, 2 Bos. & P. 417; Hand v. Baynes, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 214; Fish v. Chapman. 2 Ga. 349; Alexander v. Green, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 9; Wells v. Steam Nav. Co., 2 N. Y. 204.

In Ross v. Hill, 2 C. B. 877; 3 Dowl. & L. 788, was considered the question whether the undertaking to carry "safely and securely" did not import a more extended liability, and it was held that it did not. This is no more than an undertaking implied by law to carry free from ordinary negligence.

11. Kimball v. Railroad, 26 Vt. 247.

12. Brind v. Dale, 8 Car. & P. 207; Cooper v. Barton, 3 Camp. 5; Finacune v. Small, 1 Esp. 314; Harris v. Packwood, 3 Taunt. 264, Marsh v. Horne, 5 B. & C. 322; Clay v. Willan, 1 H. Bl. 298.

which the carrier must rebut.[1] The carrier's contemporaneous acts and statements are admissible in evidence.[2]

The questions involved are in great measure those of fact and for a jury.[3]

Whether the carrier has a lien upon the goods is not settled,[4] but text writers, arguing by analogy to the lien of other bailees, agree that such a lien should exist.[5]

3. COMMON CARRIERS.—A common or public carrier is one who undertakes as a business to carry from one place to another the goods of all persons who may apply for such carriage, provided the goods be of the kind which he professes to carry and the persons so applying will agree to have them carried upon the lawful terms prescribed by the carrier; and who, if he refuses to carry such goods for those who are willing to comply with his terms, becomes liable to an action by the aggrieved party for such refusal.[6]

1. Rogers v. Head, Cro. Jac. 262; Mackenzie v. Cox, 9 Car. & P. 632; Ross v. Hill, 2 C. B. 877; 3 Dowl. & L. 788; Hodgson v. Fullarton, 4 Taunt. 787; Hatchwell v. Cooke, 6 Taunt. 577; Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), §§ 48, 49.

2. Stores v. Gowen, 18 Me. 174; Tompkins v. Saltmarsh. 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 275; Deorman v. Jenkins, 2 Ad. & El. 256.

3. Walker v. Johnson, 10 M. & W. 161; Green v. Hollingsworth, 5 Dana (Ky.), 173; Whitney v. Lee, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 91; supra, this title, CARRIERS WITHOUT HIRE.

4. Steimman v. Wilkins, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 466; Miller v. Mansfield, 112 Mass. 260; Story on Bailments (9th Ed.) § 453, a; Dresser v. Bosanquet, 4 Best & S. 460. Compare Fuller v. Bradley, 25 Pa. St. 120.

5. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 66; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 46.

6. Hutchinson on Carriers (1882), § 47.

An examination of the various definitions which have been from time to time advanced will show no small conflict of opinion. This seems to arise not so much from the difficulty of determining in a given case whether or not a carrier is a common carrier, but because it is not easy to present in so concise a form all the principles applicable; and also because there is plainly a difference of ideas as to the relative importance of these principles.

English Definition.—A common carrier is one who plies between certain termini and openly professes to carry for hire the goods of all such persons as may choose to employ him. He may profess to carry all descriptions of goods or particular descriptions only. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed. 1880), 1.

A common carrier is one who undertakes for hire to transport the goods of such as choose to employ him from place to place, and such undertaking may be carried on at the same time with other business. Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 50; The Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. (U. S.) 7.

Any man undertaking for hire to carry the goods of all person indifferently. Gisbourn v. Hurst, 1 Salk. 249. Approved, Jeremy on Carriers, 4; Gordon v. Hutchinson, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 285 (C. J. Gibson); Orange County Bank v. Brown, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 161.

Common carriers undertake generally, and not as a casual occupation, and for all people indifferently, to convey goods and deliver them at a place appointed for hire as a business, and with or without a special agreement as to price. 2 Kent's Com. 598.

The liability to an action for a refusal to carry is perhaps the safest criterion of the character of the carrier. Nesbit, J., in Fish v. Chapman, 2 Kelly (Ga.), 352; Fish v. Clark, 49 N. Y. 122. Compare Gordon v. Hutchinson, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 285; Steinman v. Wilkins, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 466.

"The real test whether a man is a common carrier, whether by land or water, therefore, really is whether he has held out that he will, so long as he has room, carry for hire the goods of every person who will bring goods to him to be carried. The test is not whether he is carrying as a public employment or whether he carries to a fixed place, but whether he holds out, either expressly or by a course of conduct, that he will carry for hire, so long as he has room, the goods of all persons indifferently who

The distinction between common carriers and all others is of paramount importance because of the liability they assume in their undertaking, and it seems that distinction might well play a part in any definition of a common carrier. First, and most important, is the fact that he insures the goods he carries against loss or injury from whatever cause arising, excepting only acts of God and the public enemy.[1] Second, he is a public or common carrier send him goods to be carried. If he does this, his first responsibility naturally is that he is bound by a promise, implied by law, to receive and carry for a reasonable price the goods sent to him upon such an invitation. This responsibility is not one adopted from the Roman law on grounds of policy; it arises according to the general principles which govern all implied promises. And his second responsibility, which arises upon reasons of policy, is that he carries the goods upon a contract of insurance. This policy has fixed the latter liability upon common carriers by land and water, not because they hold themselves out to carry for all persons indifferently; if that were all, there would be no ground for the policy; it would be without reason. Many other persons hold themselves out to act in their trade or business for all persons indifferently who will employ them, and the policy in question is not applied to such trades; the policy is applied to the trade of common carriers, because when the common law adopted that policy the business of common carriers in England was exercised in a particular manner and subject to particular conditions, which called for the adoption of that policy." Brett, J., in Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 19, 423.

"It is exceedingly clear that no person is a common carrier, in the sense of the law, who is not a carrier for hire, that is, who does not receive, or is not entitled to receive, any recompense for his services. The known definition of a common carrier in all our books fully establishes this result. If no hire or recompense is payable ex debito justitiæ, but if something is bestowed as a mere gratuity or voluntary gift, then, although the party may transport either persons or property, he is not in the sense of the law a common carrier, but he is a mere mandatary or gratuitous bailee, and, of course, his rights, duties, and liabilities are of a very different nature and character from those of a common carrier. It is not necessary that the compensation should be a fixed sum or known as freight, for it will be sufficient if a hire or recompense is to be paid for the service in the nature of a quantum meruit to or for the benefit of the company." Story, J., in Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., 2 Story C. C. 35; Kirtland v. Montgomery, 1 Swan, 452.

"The true test of the character of a party as to the fact whether he is a common carrier or not is his legal duty and obligation with reference to transportation. Is it optional with him whether he will or will not carry? or must he carry for all? If it is his legal duty to carry for all alike who comply with the terms as to freight, etc., then he is a common carrier, and is subject to all those stringent rules which for wise ends have long since been adopted and uniformly enforced both in England and in all the States upon common carriers. If, on the contrary, he may carry or not as he deems best, he is but a private individual, and is invested, like all other private persons, with the right to make his own contracts, and when made to stand upon them. While the law has imposed duties and heavy responsibilities upon common carriers which they cannot avoid, limit, or shake off, yet it has never attempted to hamper and surround those who are not common carriers with the stringent rules applicable to carriers, or to prevent them from exercising their own judgment as to the responsibilities which they are willing to assume in a special case." Simpson, C. J., in Piedmont Mfg. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.

1. South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 419; Texas Exp. Co. v. Scott, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 111; Houston, etc., R. v. Burke, 55 Tex. 323; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 59; Davis v. Wabash, etc., R., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 315; Hart v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 59.

In Gales v. Hailman, 11 Pa. St. 515, C. J. Gibson remarks: "But a carrier is not an insurer, though he is sometimes inadvertently called so. In respect to the extent of his responsibility, not the nature of it, he is said to be effectually such; for the law raises a conclusive pre-for hire, who is obliged by law to carry for all persons indifferently. The only limitations upon this duty are that he need not profess to carry every possible description of goods, and he may prescribe certain lawful terms or conditions. The liablity thus imposed was not a part of the ancient common law, but grew up with the extension of commercial relations in England, and found a reason for its existence in an imperfect police, imperfect protection from the government, and frequent losses by robbery.[1] The early decisions relate, of course, to the methods of transportation in use at the time, while in modern litigation the carriers chiefly involved are railroad and express companies and the various kinds of carriers by water. In spite, however, of the necessary difference in the facts of cases, there has been, for the most part, a consistent application of principles by the courts.

In view of the serious additional liability assumed by common carriers as distinguished from other bailees, it becomes important to know the test to be applied to determine their character, and to point out what classes of persons are held, from the nature of their occupation, to assume this liability.

As is obvious from the various definitions, it is perhaps impossible to state in few words a conclusive test. In England what is perhaps the latest decision on the point establishes the following: Whether the carrier has held out that he will, so long as he has room, carry for hire the goods of every person who will bring him goods to be carried.[2] In Lord Holt's view he must undertake to carry goods for persons generally, and he must hold himself out as ready to engage in the transportation of goods for hire as a business, and not as a casual occupation pro hac vice.[3]

In the United States the test is thus stated: Whether the carrier has held himself out or has advertised himself in his dealings or course of business with the public as being ready and willing, for hire, to carry particular classes of goods for all those who may desire the transportation of such goods between the places between which he professes, in this manner, his readiness and willingness to sumption of misconduct against him in relation to every loss not caused by either of the perils excepted by implication from the terms of his contract. But his is not a contract of indemnity independent of the care and custody of the goods. It is a contract of transportation and safe delivery in consideration of a premium, not merely for a risk incurred, but for labor expended. Unlike an underwriter, a carrier is not entitled by the conditions of his contract to have notice given him of a loss, or to be furnished with preliminary proofs of it, or to receive a cession of the fragments of the property, or to have the loss adjusted on principles peculiar to the contract of insurance. These and other discrepancies show that he is not in any sense an insurer." It was accordingly held in this case that the carrier cannot, in case of his own liability, call upon the insurer for contribution upon the principle of double insurance; for the carrier is not an insurer, though he is sometimes inadvertently called so. See also Hall v. Railroad Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 367; Hart v. Western, etc., R., 13 Metc. (Mass.) 99.

1. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 47, note; Van Santvoord, v. St. John, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 157.

2. Brett, J., in Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 19. See supra, DEFINITION, note.

3. Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), § 495; Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., 2 Story C. C. 32.

carry.[1] The liability to an action for a refusal to carry is perhaps the safest criterion of the character of the carrier.[2] The decisions are not uniform, however, as to whether a casual undertaking to carry by one not engaged in carrying as a business imposes the liability of a common carrier, though it is said by an accepted authority that it is considered well settled in this country that such liability is thereby assumed.[3] Such, at any rate, is the law in Pennsylvania,[4] Indiana,[5] NewHampshire,[6] Tennessee,[7] Alabama,[8] South Carolina,[9] Texas.[10]

The contrary is held in Georgia,[11] Mississippi.[12]

There is no substantial difference, in the principles of law applicable, between carriers by land and carriers by water.[13]

A feature in modern litigation involving common carriers, and, in one sense, a point of distinction between them and other carriers, arises from the fact, already adverted to, that they are for the most part corporations. As such, railroad companies are endowed with certain rights and privileges, the gift of the public, and intended to be used for its convenience and advantage. It is well settled that they, therefore, exercise a quasi-public employment, and are subject to legislative and judicial control to prevent an abuse of their powers and privileges. This distinction, it is evi-

1. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 48.

2. Nesbit, J., in Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 352. See also Piedmont Mfg. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.

3. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 70; Coggs v. Bernard, 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. (12th Am. Ed.) 96, note. Compare Hutchinson on Carriers, § 52.

4. Gordon v. Hutchinson, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 285.

But one who holds himself out to the public to carry for hire is a common carrier as much in his first trip as in any subsequent one. Fuller v. Bradley, 25 Pa. St. 120.

5. Powers v. Davenport, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 497.

6. Moses v. Morris, 4 N. H. 304; Elkins v. Boston, etc., R., 3 Fost. (N. H.) 275.

7. Turney v. Wilson, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 340; Craig v. Childress, Peck (Tenn.). 270; Johnson v. Friar, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 48; Gordon v. Buchanan, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 71; Moss v. Bettis, 4 Heisk. (Tenn) 661.

8 State v. McTyler, 31 Ala. 667.

9. McClure v. Hammond, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 99. Compare Piedmont Mfg. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.

10. Chevallier v. Strahan, 2 Tex. 115. See also Haynie v. Baylor, 18 Tex. 408.

11. Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349.

12. In Harrison v. Roy, 39 Miss. 396, under the circumstances of the case the wagoner was held liable, but it was observed that there was force in the position that he could not have been so held if the transaction had been a mere isolated undertaking, such as the carrier had not been in the habit of engaging in, and which was foreign to his regular and usual business.

13. Jones on Bailments, 107; Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 19; Jeremy on Carriers, 9; Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), §§ 489, 508; Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 50; Hastings v. Pepper, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 41; Moses v. Norris, 4 N. H. 304; Williams v. Grant, 1 Conn. 487; Clark v. Richards, 1 Conn. 54; Richards v. Gilbert, 5 Day (Conn.), 415; Colt v. McMechen, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 160; Schiefflin v. Harvey, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 170; Elliott v. Rossell, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 327; McArthur v. Sears, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 190; Bell v. Reed, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 127; Harrington v. McShane, 2 Watts (Pa.), 443; Craig v. Childress, Peck (Tenn.), 270; Gordon v. Buchanan, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 71; Turney v. Wilson, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 340; Murphy v. Stanton, 3 Munf. (Va.) 239; McClure v. Hammond, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 99; Miles v. Johnson, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 157; Cohen v. Hume, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 439; Jones v. Pitcher, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 135. Compare Aymar v. Astor, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 266; Gordon v. Little, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 533.

dent, owes its existence very little, if at all, to the principles applied to common carriers as such, but is based upon the duty which may fairly be demanded of them as corporations in return for their franchises. While the doctrine is still in course of development to suit the exigencies of modern times and methods, it is of great and growing importance.[1]

(a) Who are Common Carriers.—The following classes of carriers have been held to be common carriers: railroad companies;[2]

1. Public Character of Duties of Common Carriers.—Peik v. Chicago, etc., R., 94 U. S. 164; Chicago, etc., R. v. Ackley, 94 U. S. 179; Winona, etc., R. v. Blake, 94 U. S. 180.

While the law affords railroad corporations adequate and complete protection in the exercise of their chartered rights, it also holds them to a strict performance of the public duties enjoined upon them as a consideration for the rights and powers thus granted. In cases of apparent conflict between the rights and powers conferred, and the duties imposed, the solution may oftentimes be rendered easy by regarding the admitted right of public use as the touchstone of judicial interpretation. Railroad Comm'r v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 63 Me. 269. See State v. Railroad Co., 29 Conn. 538; Comm'r v. Eastern R. Co., 103 Mass. 258.

"Whenever a charter is granted for the purpose of constructing a railroad, and the corporation is clothed with the power to take private property in order to carry out the object, it is an inference of law, from the extent of the power conferred, and subject-matter of the grant, that the road is for the public accommodation. The right to take tolls is the compensation to be received for the benefits conferred. If the public are entitled to these advantages, it results from the nature of the right that the benefits should be extended to all alike, and that no special privileges should be granted to one man or set of men, and denied to others." Sandford v. Railroad Co., 24 Pa. St. 378.

"In my opinion a railroad company, constituted under statutory authority, is not only by force of its inherent nature a common carrier, . . . but it becomes an agent of the public in consequence of the powers conferred upon it. A company of this kind is invested with important prerogative franchises, among which are the rights to build and use a railroad, and to charge and take tolls and fares. These prerogatives are grants from the government, and public utility is the consideration for them. Although in the hands of a private corporation they are still sovereign franchises, and must be used and treated as such, they must be held in trust for the general good. If they remained under the control of the State, it could not be pretended that in the exercise of them it would have been legitimate to favor one citizen at the expense of another. If a State should build and operate a railroad, the exclusion of everything like favoritism with respect to its use would seem to be an obligation that could not be disregarded without violating natural equity and fundamental principles. . . . In their very nature and constitution, as I view the question, these companies become, in certain aspects, public agents, and the consequence is must, in the exercise of their calling, observe to all men perfect impartiality." Messenger v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 36 N. J. Law, 407.

"A railroad corporation, in view of its origin, objects, uses, and the control of the government over it, is a public corporation, though its shares may be owned by private individuals. It is a governmental agency for public purposes." Tallcott v. Township of Pine Grove, 1 Flippin, 120. See also McDuffee v. Portland & R. R., 52 N. H. 430.

"The above authorities abundantly show that railroad companies are common carriers, receiving from the State a delegation of a portion of its sovereign powers for the public good; that being public agents, and, in the place and stead of the government, exercising public duties, they are therefore subject to the legislative and judicial authority to correct the abuse of their privileges and powers." Scofield v. Lake Shore, etc., R. (Ohio), 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 612. See also People v. New York Central, etc., R. (New York General Term, 1882), 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1; McGowan v. Wilmington, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 64.

2. Who are Common Carriers.—Railroad companies. Pegler v. Monmouthshire R. Co., 30 L. J. Ex. 249; 6 H. & N. 644; Palmer v. Grand Junction R. Co., 4 M. & W. 749; Crouch v. London & North-street railway companies under certain circumstances;[1] receivers of a railway operating it under order of a court;[2] trustees of mortgage bonds of a railway who have possession and control and actually operate the road;[3] one railroad transporting the cars of another railroad for hire, though the cars are on their own trucks;[4] ferrymen;[5] draymen, cartmen, and porters who undertake to western R. Co., 23 L. J. (C. P.) 73; 14 C. B. 255; Richards v. London & South Coast R. Co., 18 L. J. (C. P.) 251; 7 C. B. 839; Southwestern R. Co. v. Webb, 48 Ala. 585; Kimball v. Rutland & Burlington R. Co., 26 Vt. 247; Southern Exp. Co. v. Thornton, 41 Miss. 216; Southern Exp. Co. v. Moon, 39 Miss. 822; Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 41 Miss. 671; Thomas v. Boston, etc., Co., 10 Metc. (Mass.) 472; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 444; Fuller v. Naugatuck R. Co., 21 Conn. 570; Eagle v. White, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 505; Weed v. Saratoga R., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 534; Root v. Railroad, 45 N. Y. 524; Camden R. v. Burke, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 488; Dill v. South Carolina R., 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 158; Jones v. Railroad, 27 Vt. 399; Roger Locomotive Works v. Railroad, 5 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 379; Noyes v. Railroad. 27 Vt. 110; Contra Costa, etc., R. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323; Scofield v. Lake Shore, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas 612. Compare Piedmont Mfg. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.

"The introduction of railroads into the State has been followed by their construction over the great lines of travel of passengers and transportation of merchandise; and the proprietors of these novel and important modes of travel and transportation which have received so much public favor, have become the carriers of great amounts of merchandise. They advertise for freight; they make known the terms of carriage; they provide suitable vehicles, and select convenient places for receiving and delivering goods; and, as a legal consequence of such acts, they have become common carriers of merchandise, and are subject to the provisions of the common law which are applicable to carriers." Thomas v. Boston & Providence R., 10 Metc. (Mass.) 472.

A railroad company which occasionally carries goods or freight in passenger trains is not a common carrier of goods in such trains. Elkins v. Boston & Maine R. Co., 3 Fost. (N. H.) 275. And the same rule applies to a railroad which occasionally carries passengers in its freight trains. Murch v. Concord R. Co., 9 Fost. (N. H.) 9. See also Lawrenceburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Montgomery, 7 Ind. 474; Pennewill v. Cullen, 5 Harr. (Del.) 238. But see 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. (8th Ed.) vol. i., pt. 1, p. 418.

1. Street-railway companies. Levi v. Lynn & Boston, etc., R., 11 Allen (Mass.), 300.

2. Receivers running a railroad under an appointment of a court of chancery are liable as common carriers. Blumenthal v. Brainerd, 38 Vt. 402; Paige v. Smith, 99 Mass. 395; Nichols v. Smith, 115 Mass. 332.

3. Trustees of mortgage bonds of a railroad who have possession and control and actually operate the road are liable as common carriers. Sprague v. Smith, 29 Vt. 421; Rogers v. Wheeler, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 486; affirmed, 43 N. Y. 598.

4. Mallory v. Tioga, etc., R., 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; s. c., affirmed, 32 How. (N. Y.) 616; New Jersey, etc., R. v. Pennsylvania R., 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 100; Vermont, etc., R. v. Fitchburg, etc., R., 14 Allen (Mass.), 462; Peoria, etc., R. v. Chicago, etc., R., 109 Ill. 135; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 506.

5. Ferrymen are common carriers. Albright v. Penn, 14 Tex. 298; Richards v. Fuqua, 28 Miss. 793; Powell v. Mills, 37 Miss. 691; Self v. Dunn, 42 Ga. 528; Clark v. Union Ferry Co., 35 N. Y. 485; Harvey v. Rose, 26 Ark. 3; Griffith v. Cave, 22 Cal. 535; White v. Winnissimmet Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 155; Joy v. Winnissimet Co., 114 Mass. 63; Miller v. Pendleton, 8 Gray (Mass.), 547; Wilson v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Ferris v. Union Ferry Co., 36 N. Y. 312; Wyckoff v. Ferry Co., 52 N. Y. 32; Fisher v. Clisbee, 12 Ill. 344; Claypool v. McAlister, 20 Ill. 504; Pomeroy v. Donaldson, 5 Mo. 36; Hall v. Renfro, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 51; Sanders v. Young, 1 Head (Tenn.), 219; Babcock v. Herbert, 3 Ala. 392; Cohen v. Hume, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 439; Littlejohn v. Jones, 2 McMullan (S. Car.), 365; Smith v. Seward, 3 Pa. St. 342; Cook v. Gourdin, 2 Nott & McC. 19; Whitmore v. Bowman, 4 Greene (Iowa), 148; Slimmer v. Merry, 23 Iowa, 90; Pate v. Henry, 5 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 101. Compare Wyckoff v. Queens Co. Ferry Co., 82 N. Y. 32; Wilson v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Fisher v. Clisbee, 12 Ill. 344.

carry goods for hire as a common employment, from one part of a town to another,[1] or from one town to another;[2] express companies;[3] transportation companies;[4] express freight lines;[5] wagoners;[6] omnibus proprietors who carry passengers and bag-

1. Draymen, cartmen, and porters who undertake to carry goods for hire as a common employment from one part of a town to another are common carriers. Robertson v. Kennedy, 2 Dana (Ky.), 431; Powers v. Davenport, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 497; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 100; McHenry v. R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 448; Campbell v. Morse, Harper (S. Car.). 468. So a city expressman. Richards v. Westcott, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 589.

2. Gordon v. Hutchinson, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 285; Lecky v. McDermott, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 500.

3. Express companies. Stadhecker v. Combes, 9 Rich. Law (S. Car.), 193; Southern Express Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; U. S. Exp. Co v. Bockman, 28 Ohio St. 144; Southern Exp. Co. v. Womack, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 256; Southern Exp. Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174; Southern Exp. Co. v. McVeigh, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 264; Sherman v. Wells, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 403; Lowell Wire Fence Co. v. Sargent, 8 Allen (Mass.), 189; Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co., 97 Mass. 124; Read v. Spaulding, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 395; Haslam v. Adams Exp. Co., 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 235; Baldwin v. American Exp. Co., 23 Ill. 197; 26 Ill. 504; American Ins. Co. v. Pinckney, 29 Ill. 392; Gulliver v. Adams Exp. Co., 38 Ill. 503; Christenson v. Am. Exp. Co., 15 Minn. 270; Verner v. Switzer, 32 Pa. St. 208; Sweet v. Barney, 23 N. Y. 335.

Express companies cannot limit their liability by alleging that they are not common carriers but simply forwarders, and therefore not liable for the negligence of those whom they employed to actually carry. Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174; Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co., 97 Mass. 124; Russell v. Livingston, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 346; Place v. Union Exp. Co., 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 27; U. S. Exp. Co. v. Backman, 28 Ohio St. 144. Compare Hersfield v. Adams, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 577.

Nor by contracting in that capacity. Christenson v. Am. Exp. Co., 15 Minn. 270; Read v. Spaulding, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 404; South. Exp. Co. v. McVeigh, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 264; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174.

4. Transportation Companies.—Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 115.

5. Express Freight Lines.—Read v. Spaulding, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 395.

6. Wagoners.—In Gordon v. Hutchinson, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 285, it was held that a wagoner who, upon his own request, carries goods for hire, is a common carrier, whether the transportation be his principal and direct business or an occasional and incidental employment even where the principal business of the wagoner is that of a farmer. Powers v. Davenport, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 497; Chevalier v. Straham, 2 Texas, 115. In Moss v. Bettis, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 661, a farmer "after his crops were laid by" would run boats for himself or any one else who would employ him. He had built a flatboat to transport to market a cargo of his own staves, but at the instance of plaintiff abandoned that project and loaded his own and another boat furnished by plaintiff with the latter's lumber, and undertook to carry it by river to market. The boats struck an obstruction causing a partial loss of the lumber, and it was held that defendant was liable as a common carrier. Craig v. Childress, Peck (Tenn.), 270; Johnson v. Friar, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 48; Gordon v. Buchanan, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 71; Turney v. Wilson, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 340; Moses v. Norris, 4 N. H. 304; Elkins v. Boston, etc., R., 3 Fost. (N. H.) 275; McClure v. Hammond, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 99.

Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 353, is the leading authority to the contrary. Here the farmer had never held himself out as a carrier generally, but was employed by the plaintiff to carry goods which, in crossing a stream upon the way, were injured by the upsetting of the wagon. The court observes, speaking of Gordon v. Hutchinson, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 285: "This decision no doubt contemplates an undertaking to carry generally without a special contract, and does not deny to the undertaker the right to define his liability. There are cases in Tennessee and New Hampshire which favor the Pennsylvania rule, but there can be little doubt that that case is opposed to the principles of the common law, and its rule wholly inexpedient." Compare Harrison v. Roy, 39 Miss. 396. See also Fish v. Clark, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 176; s. c., 49 N. Y. 122; Allen v. Sackrider, 37 N. Y. 341.

Where the undertaking is an unauthorgage for hire;[1] owners of canal-boats;[2] towboats used in towing barges or other water craft loaded with freight, from one point to another on the Mississippi river;[3] owners and masters of ships or steamboats employed as general ships or vessels;[4] owners of vessels usually engaged in transporting goods from one port of the United States to another.[5] An established practice of carrying parcels for hire on a stage-coach which do not belong to passengers imposes the liability of common carriers.[6]

(b) Who are not Common Carriers.—The following classes of carriers have been held not to be common carriers: the owner of a toll-bridge;[7] a company owning a canal which they allow boatmen to use upon payment of tolls;[8] "forwarding merchants,"—persons who act as agents and warehousemen in assuming the expense of transportation and forwarding goods to their destinaized act of the agent of the owner of the wagon no liability attaches. Jenkins v. Pickett, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 480; Satterlee v. Groat, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 272; Haynie v. Baylor, 18 Tex. 498.

1. Dibble v. Brown, 12 Ga. 217; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234; Cole v. Goodwin, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 251; Clark v. Faxton, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 153; Powell v. Myers, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 591; Jones v. Voorhees, 10 Ohio, 145; Camden, etc., Transpr. Co. v. Belknap, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 354.

2. Owners of canal-boats are common carriers when they hold themselves out as willing to carry for all persons indifferently. Fuller v. Bradley, 25 Pa. St. 120; Humphrey v. Read, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 435; Spencer v. Daggett, 2 Vt. 92; Arnold v. Hallenbake, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 33; Bowman v. Teal, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 306; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 562; Parsons v. Hardy, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 215; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 521; De Mott v. Laraway, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 225; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 523; Fish v. Clark, 49 N. Y. 122.

In Fish v. Clark, 49 N. Y. 122, it was held that the owner of a canal-boat used generally in transportation of freight for himself, who is not in business as a common carrier, applying to a common carrier, possessed with full knowledge of these facts, to carry a load of freight, does not thereby assume the liability of a common carrier. Nor will such owner's knowledge of the fact that the carrier contracted with others for the carriage of freight affect the question. His liability is to be determined by the business in which he is engaged and the character of his own employment, and not by that of his employer.

In Flautt v. Lashley, 36 La. Ann. 106, it was held that a boat used by its owners for their own purposes and those of others who agree to pay certain rates for the transportation of their goods from one point to another, and which is not shown to have been held out as a common carrier, cannot be declared to be such at the instance of one of the agreeing parties.

3. Bussey v. Mississippi Valley Transportation Co., 24 La. Ann. 165; Clapp v. Stanton, 20 La. Ann. 495; White v. Tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462.

4. Hall v. Connecticut River Steamboat Co., 13 Conn. 324; Peters v. Rylands, 20 Pa. St. 497; Tuckerman v. Brown, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 191; Saltus v. Everett, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 267; Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumner (C. C.), 221; Dibble v. Brown, 12 Ga. 217; Wilsons v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Dunseth v. Wade, 2 Scam. (Ohio) 285. Compare Smith v. Pierce, 1 La. 349; Adams v. New Orleans Towboat Co., 11 La. 46; Walston v. Myers, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 174; White v. The Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462; Ashmore v. Penn. Steam Tow Co., 28 N. J. Law 180; and cases cited under WHO ARE NOT COMMON CARRIERS, infra.

5. Clark v. Richards, 1 Conn. 54; Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 327; 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 335; Elliott v. Rossell, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Garrison v. Memphis Ins. Co., 19 How. (N. Y.) 312; Gage v. Tirrell, 9 Allen (Mass.), 299. Compare authorities cited in preceding note and under WHO ARE NOT COMMON CARRIERS, infra. Compare Aymar v. Astor, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 266; Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410.

6. Powell v. Mills, 30 Miss. 231; Beckman v. Shouse, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 179; Merwin v. Butler, 17 Conn. 138; McHenry v. R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 448; Jones v. Voorhees, 10 Ohio, 145.

7. Owner of a Toll-Bridge.—Grigsby v. Chappell, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 443.

8. Exchange Ins. Co. v. Delaware Canal Co., 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 180.

tion,—provided they have no concern in the vehicle by which the goods are sent and have no interest in the freight, though they are liable as warehousemen;[1] postmasters and mail contractors;[2] owners of steamboats employed in the business of towing, but the decisions hereon are not uniform;[3] owner of a mill operating a ferry for his own use and his customers' convenience, and who charges no ferriage;[4] a contractor undertaking to cut timber and carry it to the place of delivery to be there used;[5] sleeping-car companies;[6] telegraph companies;[7] telephone com-

1. Platt v. Hibbard, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 497; Ackley v. Kellogg. 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 223; Sage v. Gittner, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 120; Cowles v. Pointer, 26 Miss. 253; Maybin v. So. Car., etc., R., 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 240; Denny v. New York, etc., R., 13 Gray (Mass.), 487. See also Nichols v. Smith, 115 Mass. 332.

2. Postmasters and Mail Contractors.— By the common law and in the days of private posts a liability as common carriers naturally attached to postmasters. Jones on Bailments, 109, 110.

When the Government assumed control of the Post-Office (Stat. 12 Car. II.) it was held that the postmaster was not liable for the loss of a letter with exchequer bills in it, and that postmasters enter into no contract with individuals, and receive no hire, like common carriers, in proportion to the value of the letters under their charge, but only a general compensation from government, and are, therefore, not liable as common carriers. Lane v. Cotton, 1 Ld. Raym. 546.

The same rule obtains in the United States. Schroyer v. Lynch, 8 Watts (Pa.), 453; Dunlop v. Munroe, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 242; Bolan v. Williamson, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 551; Conwell v. Voorhees, 13 Ohio, 523; Wiggins v. Hathaway, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 632; Foster v. Metts, 55 Miss. 77; Hutchins v. Brackett, 22 N. H. 252; Central R., etc., Co v. Lampley, 76 Ala. 357; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 720; 2 Kent's Com. 610; Story on Bailm. § 462. But see Sawyer v Corse, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 230. Compare Fitzgerald v. Burrill. 106 Mass. 446; Ford v. Parker, 4 Ohio St. 576; Bishop v. Williamson, 11 Me. 495; Christy v. Smith, 23 Vt. 663.

3. Owners of steamboats who undertake to tow freight-boats for hire, or to tow vessels in and out of port for hire, are not common carriers. Leonard v. Hendrickson, 18 Pa. St. 40; Brown v. Clegg, 64 Pa. St. 51; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 522; Hays v. Millar, 77 Pa. St. 238; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 445; Wells v. Steam Nav. Co., 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 204; Caton v. Rumney, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 387; Alexander v. Greene, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 9; s. c., 7 Hill (N. Y.), 533; Wooden v. Austin, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Arctic Fire Ins. Co. v. Austin, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 559; Varble v. Bigley (Ky.), 9 Cent. L. J. 153; Penn Nav. Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 248; Hinter v. Steamer Napoleon, 3 Wall. (U.S.) 5. Compare cases cited supra under heading WHO ARE COMMON CARRIERS.

4. Self v. Dunn, 42 Ga. 528; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 544; Littlejohn v. Jones, 2 McMullan (S. Car.), 366.

A ferryman is not chargeable with the liability of a common carrier as to the property of passengers retained within their own control. Wyckoff v. Queens County Ferry Co., 52 N. Y. 32; Wilson v. Hamilton, 4 Oh.o St. 722; Fisher v. Clisbee, 12 Ill. 344.

5. Pike v. Nash, 3 Abb. Ct. App. (N. Y.) 610.

6. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Smith, 73 Ill. 360; Blum v. Southern Pullman Palace Car Co., 3 Cent. L. J. 591. Compare Nevin v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 92; Pullman, etc., Co. v. Gardner, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 324; Heenrich v. Pullman, etc., Co., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 379.

7. Telegraph Companies. — Although there has been some conflict upon the question of whether or not telegraph companies could be considered as common carriers, it is now well settled and almost undisputed that the common-law principles governing common carriers are wholly inapplicable to telegraph companies. Leonard v. Tel. Co., 41 N. Y. 544; Baldwin v. Allen, 45 N. Y. 744; s. c., 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 505; Ellis v. Am. Tel. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.), 226; N. Y. Tel. Co. v. Dryburg, 35 Pa. St. 298; Passmore v. W. U. Tel. Co., 78 Pa. St. 238; Tel. Co. v. Carew, 15 Mich. 525; Tyler v. W. U. Tel. Co., 60 Ill. 421; Breese v. U. S. Tel. Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; s. c., 48 N. Y. 132; Wann v. W. U. Tel. Co., 37 Mo. 472; Birney v. N. Y., etc., Tel. Co., 18 Md. 341; Washington Tel. Co. v. Hobson, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 122; Bartlett v. W. U. Tel. Co., 62 Me. 209; W. U. Tel. Co. v. Fontaine, panies;[1] boom companies;[2] railroad company contracting with circus to furnish men and motive-power to transport cars owned and managed by a circus;[3] in South Carolina a railroad company is a common carrier over its own line, but not beyond its termini and over connecting lines, unless it has become so by usage, character of business, or contract;[4] a railroad company carrying a dog in its baggage car for the accommodation of a passenger, although the baggageman accepted compensation for his trouble;[5] a contractor undertaking to carry goods subject to a contract exempting him from liability for "river risks" where the goods were destroyed by fire.[6]

58 Ga. 433; Camp v. W. U. Tel. Co., 1 Metc. (Ky.) 164, De Rutte v. N. Y., etc., Tel. Co., 30 How. Pr. 403; s. c., 1 Daly (N. Y.), 547; Aiken v. Tel. Co., 5 S. Car. 358; Tel. Co. v. Gildersleeve, 29 Md. 246; Sweatland v. Tel. Co., 27 Iowa, 458; W. U. Tel. Co. v. Neill, 57 Texas, 283; Hibbard v. Tel. Co., 33 Wis. 565; Berry v. N. Y., etc., Tel. Co., 18 Md. 341; Grinnell v. W. U. Tel. Co., 113 Mass. 299; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 485; Schwartz v. Atlantic, etc., Tel. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.). 157; Pinckney v. Tel. Co., 19 S. Car. 71; Tyler v. W. U. etc., Tel. Co., 60 Ill. 421; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 38; Baxter v. Dominion Tel. Co., 37 Upper Can. Q. B. 470; Bell v. Dominion Tel. Co., 3 Leg. News, 405; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, 3; Gulf, Colorado & S. F. R. v. Levy, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas., 96, note; Abraham v. W. U. Tel. Co. (U. S. C. C. Dist. Oregon), 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 130; Smith v. W. U. Tel. Co., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 15. But see Parks v. Alta California Tel. Co., 13 Cal. 422; Bowen v. Lake Erie Tel. Co., 1 Am. Law Reg. 685; Bryant v. Amer. Tel. Co., 1 Daly (N. Y.), 575; McAndrew v. Electric Tel. Co., 17 C. B. 3; Shearm. & Redf. on Negligence, sec. 554 et seq.

1. See American Rapid Telegraph Co. v. Connecticut Telephone Co., 49 Conn. 352; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp Cas. 378 and note; State ex rel. v. Nebraska Telephone Co., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 1.

2. Mann v. White River Log & Booming Co., 46 Mich. 38.

3. Coup v. Wabash, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 542.

4. Piedmont Mfg. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.

5. In Honeyman v. Oregon, etc., R., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 380, it was held that a common carrier who does not assume to act as such in the carriage of dogs, but, upon the request of a party, consents to carry a dog on a particular occasion, cannot be sued as a common carrier for the subsequent death of the dog while under his charge, even though money may have passed to defendant's agent for the carriage. The action must be upon a private contract, if recovery is sought. Lord, J., observed: "The facts disclose that the defendant did not hold itself out as a common carrier of dogs, or assume their transportation in that character, but that the defendant expressly refused to accept hire and furnish tickets for their transportation. The evidence shows that when the party having in charge the dogs applied to the ticket agent of the defendant for transportation for himself and dogs that the agent refused tickets for the dogs, and referred him to the baggage-master, who told him, 'You know the rules about dogs;' but, as an accommodation, consented to take the dogs in his car, and promised to look after them, for which he received two dollars. These circumstances do not show that it was the business of the defendant to carry dogs, or to receive pay for their transportation, but that, as a matter of accommodation to a passenger, it permitted the baggage master, after the party was notified of the rules, to carry them in his car, and to accept pay for them." A contrary conclusion was, however, reached in Cantling v. Hannibal, etc., R., 54 Mo. 585. The owner having a dog on a railroad train, being informed by a brakeman and a baggage-master that the animal would not be allowed in the passenger car, placed him in charge of the baggage-master, and paid the latter for his transportation. By the regulations which were posted and printed at the various stations, "live animals" were "allowed as baggageman's perquisites." No special notice of this rule was brought home to the owner. Held, that the company was liable for the loss of the dog by the baggageman.

6. A person entered into a contract with the United States to transport cer-

3. Consignment to Carrier.—1. CARRIER'S DUTY TO RECEIVE GOODS.—The carrier's first duty is to accept and carry the goods consigned. He is bound to receive and carry all the goods offered for transportation, subject to all the responsibilities incident to his employment, and is liable to an action in case of refusal.[1]

(a) Exceptions to Duty to Receive.—Certain exceptions to this general principle have been admitted. These find an explanation in modifications—already explained—of the general duty and liability of common carriers to carry for all persons indifferently all the goods consigned. Thus the carrier may choose by public profession the kind of conveyance, the time for transit, and the articles to be received. And the duty to receive is always limited by the convenience to carry.[2] The carrier may have a reasonable time to make up trains, and may refuse to receive goods not offered in reasonable time before the departure of trains: or at a place other than that which he has appointed for delivery to him.[3] Where goods are defectively packed, and from their character and the nature of the journey extra care and extra risk would be imposed, the carrier may refuse to receive.[4] Or where the consignor refuses to pay reasonable charges for carriage.[5] He may refuse to receive tain goods to points in Montana. The contract provided that no liability for loss by river risks was assumed by the contractor. Held, that the person so contracting was but a private carrier, whose liabilities were limited, and that loss by fire on board the steamer transporting the goods fell within the exemption from liability for loss by river risks incorporated in the contract. As a private carrier he was only bound to the exercise of ordinary care. United States v. Power (Montana), 12 Pacific Rep. 639

1. Duty to Receive Goods—New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344; Merriam v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 20 Conn. 354; Jordan v. Fall River, etc., R., 5 Cush. (Mass.) 69; Messenger v. Pennsylvania R., 8 Vroom (N. J.), 531; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 754; East Tennessee R. v. Nelson, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 271; Fish v. Clark, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 176; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 334; Cole v. Goodwin, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 261; Hamel v. Owens, 1 Dev. & Bat. (N. Car.) 273; Anon. v. Jackson, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 14.

English Authorities.—Crouch v. Great Northern R., 11 Exch. 742; 34 Eng. L. & Eq. 573; Morton v. Tibbett, 15 A. & E. 428; Crouch v. London & N. W. R. Co., 23 L. J. C. P. 73; 14 C. B. 255; Garton v. Bristol & Exeter R. Co., 30 L. J. Q. B. 273; 1 B. & S. 112; Lane v. Cotton, 12 Mod. 472.

There is no distinction in this respect between the liability of a common carrier whose business is entirely within the country, and that of a carrier who transports goods to a place without the country. Crouch v. London, etc., R., 14 C. B. 255; 25 Eng. L. & Eq. 287.

2. Exceptions to Duty to Receive.—McManus v. Lancashire, etc., R., 28 L. J. Exch. 343; 4 H. & N. 327; Johnson v. Midland R., 18 L. J. Exch. 366; 4 Exch. 371; Illinois Cent., etc., R. v. Cobb, 64 Ill. 128; Lake Shore, etc., R. v. Perkins, 25 Mich. 329.

Need not carry goods from every station (such as coal) unless they have conveniences therefor, unless they have made public profession of so doing. This even though they may carry same goods past such stations from through points. Johnson v. Midland R. Co., 18 L. J. Exch. 366; 4 Exch. 371. Compare Oxlade v. Northeastern R., 9 W. R. 272. But see Thomas v. North Staffordshire R., 21 Sol. Jour. 183.

3. Palmer v. London & S. W. R., 35 L. J. C. P. 289; L. R. 1 C. P. 588; Garten v. Bristol, etc., R., 28 L. J. C. P. 306; Lane v. Cotton, 1 Ld. Raym. 652; Pickford v. Railway, 12 M. & W. 766; Cronkite v. Wells, 32 N. Y. 247.

4. Munster v. Southeastern R., 27 L. J. C. P. 308; 4 C. B. N. S. 676; Hart v. Baxendale, 16 L. T. N. S. 396; Union Exp. Co. v. Graham, 26 Ohio St. 595.

5. Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. 443; Bastard v. Bastard, 2 Show. 81; Galena, etc., R. v. Rae, 18 Ill. 488.

But company cannot sue for price of dangerous articles; where there is reasonable ground to suspect their character he may demand to examine them. But without such reasonable ground for suspicion he cannot force the consignor to disclose their nature.[1] He may refuse because his coach is full.[2] Where he does not carry to the place of consignment.[3] Where at the time goods are offered the way is exposed to particular danger, such as the fury of a mob, etc.[4] Where goods are perishable, and the carrier has not the means to forward them, he should peremptorily decline to receive them.[5]

(b) Waiver.—The acceptance of goods without asserting his right to refuse is a complete waiver by the carrier.[6]

(c) Preferences and Facilities.—In England the whole matter of preference given consignors by a carrier has been carefully regulated by statute. These statutes have been frequently and carefully construed. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act provides that railway and canal companies shall, according to their respective powers, "afford all reasonable facilities" for receiving, forwarding, and delivering traffic; and, further, that "no company shall make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to or in favor of any particular person or company or any particular description of traffic in any respect whatsoever." It may be that the commissioners appointed under this act have authority to interfere even with the construction of the railway and to direct the providing of any new and improved structural accommodations. Their power certainly extends to the compelling a railway company to so use and manage its institutions and works and to so conduct its business as to afford accommodation reasonably to be expected of it with the means at its disposal for receiving, forwarding, and delivering traffic; and possibly even to the extent of determining the number of trains to be run or the times of departure or the like.[7] But to induce the interference of the court carriage until goods are delivered. Barnes v. Marshall, 18 Q. B. 785; 21 L. J. Q. B. 388.

1. The Nitro-glycerine Case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524; Boston & Albany R. v. Shanley, 107 Mass. 568; s. c., 12 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 500.

Persons shipping dangerous articles without informing carriers of their nature must in England forfeit 20*l.* for every such offence. (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 105.) See also Hearne v. Garton, 28 L. J. M. C. 216, 2 Ell. & Ell. 66. See Brass v. Maitland, 6 Ellis & B. 470; Farrant v. Barnes, 11 C. B. N. S. 553; Williams v. East India Co., 3 East, 192; Alston v. Herring, 11 Ex. 822; George v. Skivington, 5 L. R. Ex. 1.

2. Lovett v. Hobbs, 2 Show. 127. See also Riley v. Home, 5 Bing. 217; Peet v. Railway, 20 Wis. 594.

3. Pitlock v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 109 Mass. 452.

4. Edwards v. Sherratt, 1 East, 604; Pearson v. Duane, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 605.

5. Tierney v. New York Central, etc., R., 76 N. Y. 305.

6. Pickford v. Railway, 12 M. & W. 766; Great Northern, etc., R. v. Shepherd, 8 Exch. 30; 14 Eng. L. & Eq. 367; Hannibal, etc., R. v. Swift, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 262; The David, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 266; Porcher v. Railroad, 14 Rich. Law (S. Car.), 181.

7. Preferences and Facilities.—In England. Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, s. 2 (Railway and Canal Traffic Act), provides that railway and canal companies shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable facilities for receiving, forwarding, and delivering traffic; and further that, "no company shall make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to or in favor of any particular person or company, or any particular description of traffic in on a question of "reasonable facilities" under this act it is necessary to show a public inconvenience and not merely an individual grievance.[1] Examples of the English decisions upon the question of undue preference are the following: Failing to require certain consignors to sign conditions demanded of others;[2] receiving goods of certain consignors after the carrier's offices were closed and refusing to receive those of others;[3] admitting into the carrier's stations their own vans at a later hour than they admitted those of other persons.[4]

In the United States, until the passage of the Interstate Commerce Act, cases involving questions of preference have been decided for the most part upon common-law principles. It has been said that common carriers could not legally give undue and unjust preferences nor make unequal or extravagant charges. Having the means of transportation, they are liable to an action if they any respect whatsoever." It further provides for the appointment of certain railway commissioners. This act underwent a full and elaborate examination in South Eastern R. v. Railway Commissioners, 41 L. T. N. S. 760; 28 W. R. 464. "The clause as to 'affording reasonable facilities' is in itself wide enough to give authority to interfere even with the construction of the railway, and to direct the providing of new or improved structural accommodations. This view of its scope seems to have been adopted by the judges in the case of Caterham R. Co. v. London & Brighton R. Co. (26 L. J. C. P. 161; 1 C. B. N. S. 410), in granting a rule nisi, which, however, was never drawn up." Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 20. It was, however, held by Lord Cockburn, that the commissioners referred to could not make an order directing a company to execute certain structural works in respect of this railway, amongst others, to extend the limits of stations, to widen a bridge so as to admit two instead of one double set of lines, to increase existing platforms and yards, to cover with roofs certain platforms and yards, etc.; such statute merely gave power to compel a railway company to so use and manage its stations and works, and so conduct its business as to afford accommodation reasonably to be expected of it with the means at its disposal for receiving, forwarding, and delivering traffic, and possibly even to the extent of determining the number of trains to be run, or the times of departure or the like. South Eastern R. v. Railway Commissioners, L. R. 5 Q. B. D. 217; 28 W. R. 464.

1. It has been held that in order to introduce the interference of the court on a question of 'reasonable facilities' in the English Railway and Canal Traffic Act, it is necessary to show a public inconvenience, and not merely an individual grievance. Barret v. Great Northern, etc., R., 26 L. J. C. P. 83; 1 C. B. N. S. 423; Beadell v. Eastern Counties R., 26 L. J. C. P. 250; 2 C. B. N. S. 509.

2. In Baxendale v. Bristol, etc., R., 11 C. B. N. S. 787, it was held, where a railway company permitted a carrier (who acted as superintendent of their goods traffic) to hold himself out as their agent for the receipt of goods to be carried on their line, and his office as the receiving office of the company, and goods were received by him at that place without requiring the senders to sign conditions which the company required all other carriers who brought goods to their station to sign, that this amounted to undue preference.

3. In Garton v. Bristol, etc., R., 30 L. J. Q. B. 273; 1 B. & S. 112; Garton v. Bristol, etc., R., 28 L. J. C. P. 306; 6 C. B. N. S. 639, it was held, where a company closed their offices at a certain hour, and refused to receive goods tendered to them after, with the proper amount of carriage, while at the same time they continued to receive goods of the same class, prepared in the same manner, from a particular individual, that this amounted to undue preference.

4. In Palmer v. London, etc., R., 40 L. J. C. P. 133; L. R. 6 C. P. 194, it was held, where a company admitted into their stations their own vans, with goods to be forwarded that night at a later hour than they admitted those of other persons, that this amounted to undue preference. See Palmer v. London, etc., R., 35 L. J. C. P. 289; L. R. 1 C. P. 588.

refuse to carry freight or passengers without just ground for such refusal. The very definition of a common carrier excludes the right to grant monopolies or to give special or unequal preferences. It implies indifference as to whom they may serve, and an equal readiness to serve all who may apply in the order of their application.[1]

A carrier is bound to provide sufficient facilities and means of transportation for all freight which it should reasonably expect will be offered. But it is not bound to provide in advance for extraordinary occasions, nor for any unusual influx of business which is not reasonably to be expected. Should, however, a carrier accept the property for transportation without any agreement to the contrary, he thereby undertakes to carry and deliver it within a reasonable time regardless of any extraordinary or unexpected pressure of business upon it.[2] When delay occurs in consequence of

1. "Common carriers are bound to carry indifferently, within the usual range of their business, for a reasonable consideration, all freight offered and all passengers who apply. For similar equal services, they are entitled to the same compensation. All applying have an equal right to be transported or to have their freight transported, in the order of their application. They cannot legally give undue and unjust preferences, nor make unequal and extravagant charges. Having the means of transportation, they are liable to an action if they refuse to carry freight or passengers without just ground for such refusal. The very definition of a common carrier excludes the right to grant monopolies, or to give special or unequal preferences. It implies indifference as to whom they may serve, and an equal readiness to serve all who may apply in the order of their application." Appleton, C. J., in New England Exp. Co. v. Maine Central R., 57 Me. 188.

In Houston, etc., R. v. Smith, 63 Tex. 322; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 421, it was held that railway companies must take and transport property in the order in which it is offered, and they cannot exercise partiality in accepting the property tendered by some, and rejecting that offered by other persons. If this rule is violated the company is liable for all damages resulting therefrom.

Chicago, etc., R. v. People, 67 Ill. 11; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 599; Wheeler v. San Francisco, etc., R., 31 Cal. 46; Messenger v. Pennsylvania R., 8 Vroom (N. J.), 531; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 754; 13 Am. Rep. 457; McDuffee v. Railroad, 52 N. H. 730; Kenney v. Grand Trunk, etc., R., 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 104; s. c., affirmed, 47 N. Y. 525. Compare Fitchburg, etc., R. v. Gage, 12 Gray (Mass.), 393; Branley v. Southeastern, etc., R., 12 C. B. N. S. 74; Baxendale v. Eastern Counties, etc., R., 4 C. B. N. S. 78.

2. "A common carrier is not bound to supply more carts than he is in the habit of employing, because more goods are tendered than usual. Johnson v. Midland R. Co., 18 L. J. C. P. 368, per Parke, B. But, as regards railway companies, this must, it is suggested, be received with some qualification. If the pressure of traffic is such as the company might reasonably have anticipated and provided for, it is assumed they would not be released from the liability to receive goods on the ground of want of convenience. See Wallace v. Great Southern & Western R. Co., 17 W. R. 464." Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 14.

In Chicago, etc., R. v. Dawson, 70 Mo. 296; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 521, it was held that a contract by which a railroad company undertakes to relieve itself of all liability for damages occasioned by any delay in transportation, and to impose them upon the shipper, will be effectual to protect the company only against the consequences of delays not caused by its own negligence. It is the duty of a railroad company to provide sufficient facilities and means of transportation for all freight which it should reasonably expect will be offered, but it is not bound to provide in advance for extraordinary occasions, nor for an unusual influx of business which is not reasonably to be expected. If a railroad company receives property for transportation without any agreement to a lack of cars, the company is liable where occasioned through its fault,[1] but not otherwise.[2] When the delay is shown to be partly not the fault of the carrier, the plaintiff must, in order to recover, specifically show the damage to him following from delay which was the carrier's fault.[3] It has been held that where there is a lack of cars or a blockade or stoppage of any kind rendering it impossible to forward goods, it is the carrier's duty to inform the consignor so that he may elect to sell his goods at the intended point of shipment or forward them by some other route.[4] It appears, however, that such notice is not the duty of the carrier where the obstruction is beyond his own line and on a connecting road.[5] Perhaps the weight of authority, however, holds that no rule of law requires such notice. It is said that in such a case if the consignor has not all the information he desires as to the circumstances or causes which will expedite or delay the delivery of goods it would be more reasonable that he should make inquiry than to impose on the company or its agents the duty of giving unasked a statement of such circumstances.[6]

the contrary, it thereby undertakes to carry and deliver it within a reasonable time, regardless of any extraordinary or unexpected pressure of business upon it. Hough, C. J., observed: "It is the duty of a common carrier to provide sufficient facilities and means of transportation for all freight which it should reasonably expect will be offered, but it is not bound to provide in advance for extraordinary occasions, nor for an unusual influx of business which is not reasonably to be expected. When an emergency arises, and more business is suddenly and unexpectedly cast upon a carrier than he is able to accommodate, unless the carrier decline to receive the excess offered, some shippers must necessarily be delayed; yet if the carrier do receive the goods without notice to the shipper of the circumstances likely to occasion delay, or fail to obtain his assent, express or implied, to the delay, he will be bound to transport the goods within a reasonable time, notwithstanding such emergency. When the facilities of the carrier are adequate to the business reasonably to be expected, the delay caused by the emergency cannot of course be regarded as a delay caused by the negligence of the carrier."

1. When delay occurs in the transportation of goods in consequence of a lack of cars of the road, the company is liable for the delay where it is occasioned through its fault. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cobb, 64 Ill. 128; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Thrapp, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) App. 502.

2. But not when the delay is not the carrier's fault. Taylor v. Great Northern R. Co., L. R. 1 C. P. 385.

3. And when the delay is shown to be partly not the fault of the carrier, the plaintiff must, in order to recover, specifically show the damage to him following from delay which was the carrier's fault. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. McKenzie, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 15.

4. Great Western R. Co. v. Burns, 60 Ill. 284; Halliwell v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 10 Biss. C. C. 170.

5. McCarthy v. Terre Haute & Ind. R. Co., 9 Mo. App. 159.

6. It is conceded that a railroad company is not liable for delay in transportation of goods caused by a sudden and unexpected press of freight not known to the railroad company at the time it received the goods for carriage. But where there is a blockade of freight well known to the railroad at the time it receives the goods for transportation, there is some doubt whether the railroad company is liable for a delay in case it receives the goods without notifying the shipper of the blockade. Some cases hold that the railroad company must give notice to shippers of facts within its knowledge likely to cause delay, and, in case of failure so to do, assumes the responsibility of transporting the goods within the usual time. This was held in Halliwell v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 10 Biss. (U. S. C. Ct.) 170. In Faulkner v. South Pacific R. Co., it was held that unusual pressure of business will justify a railroad company in refusing to accept freight, but not in delaying promptly to forward freight received for carriage. Faulkner v. South

Two of the States, North Carolina and Texas, have regulated the duty of the carrier to receive and immediately forward freight or goods by statute. In the former State a penalty is imposed upon the carrier for allowing any freight they may receive for shipment to remain unshipped for more than five days unless otherwise agreed between the company and the shipper. This statute has been declared constitutional.[1] It was at first held in construing the act that the carrier was not relieved from liability for the penalty imposed by reason of his alleged inability to procure the necessary transportation on account of the accumulation of freight.[2] But this decision was subsequently modified, and it was held that where, by the terms of the bill of lading, the goods are to be forwarded at "carrier's convenience," and, owing to the fault of a connecting line, the company is unable to furnish cars to Pacific R. Co., 51 Mo. 311. See Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cobh, 64 Ill. 128, 140. But the weight of authority seems to favor the view that the railroad company is under no duty to the shipper to inform him at the time of shipment of a blockade that may cause delay in transportation. According to this view the only duty the company is under is to transport the goods with such despatch as is reasonable; all the facts of the case, including the fact of the freight blockade, being considered. Thus it was held that where, during the month of January, there was a great press of freight, which the defendant did his best to accommodate by running freight trains as frequently as possible, and plaintiff's goods, shipped January 18th, were delayed in consequence of the press of freight, defendant was not liable, notwithstanding a statute requiring railroad companies to furnish sufficient accommodation for the transportation of all property offered for transportation. Wilbert v. New York & Erie R. Co., 12 N. Y. 245; s. c., below, 19 Barb. 36. In Peet v. Chicago & Northwestern R. Co., 20 Wis. 594, the court below instructed the jury that "press of freight will not excuse failure to carry in ordinary time in cases where such press was known to the company when they received the freight, and had existed a long time when the goods were received, unless they notified the shipper of the necessity of delay." This charge was held, on appeal, to be erroneous. The court say: "We are also of opinion that there is no rule of law requiring the notice mentioned in the third instruction. We have seen that the general rule is that the common carrier is to transport and deliver the goods within a reasonable time; and what is a reasonable time is to be determined by all the circumstances of each particular case. If the shipper has not all the information he desires as to the circumstances or causes which will expedite or delay the delivery of the goods, it would be more reasonable that he should make inquiry than to impose on the company or its agents the duty of giving unasked a statement of such circumstances." Peet v. Chicago & Northwestern R. Co., 20 Wis. 594; Galena, etc., R. v. Rae, 18 Ill. 488; Thayer v. Burchard, 99 Mass. 508.

1. Texas.—See Houston, etc., R. v. Smith, 63 Tex. 322; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 421.

In North Carolina, a statute imposes upon a railroad company a penalty for allowing any freight they may receive for shipment to remain unshipped for more than five days, unless otherwise agreed between the company and the shipper. This statute has been declared constitutional. Branch v. Wilmington, etc., R., 77 N. Car. 347; Katzenstein v. Raleigh, etc., R., 86 N. Car. 688; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 464; Whitehead v. Wilmington, etc., R., 87 N. Car. 255; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 168; McGowan v. Wilmington, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 64.

2. In Keeter v. Wilmington, etc., R., 86 N. Car. 346; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 165, it was held that a railroad company is not relieved of liability to the penalty of $25 per day, under the North Carolina act of 1875, ch. 240, for delay of shipment of goods beyond five days after receipt of same, by reason of its alleged inability to procure the neces sary transportation on account of the large accumulation of freight. It is the duty of the company to provide a sufficient number of cars.

meet an unusually heavy demand, it is not liable to the statutory penalty.[1]

(d) Order of Transmission.—Where there is a blockade of freight, goods should be sent forward in the order of time in which they are received by the carrier for transportation.[2] Nor can the carrier exercise partiality in such cases in accepting goods tendered by some and rejecting those offered by others.[3]

In exceptional instances—as, for example, when it is important to forward relief for sufferers from a flood or fire—the rule may be dispensed with.[4]

2. DECLARATION OF VALUE.—The liability imposed upon common carriers by the common law for all losses except those caused by the act of God or the public enemy was early found to work in-

1 In an action to recover the penalty provided by the said act, the provisions thereof are to be construed strictly in favor of those charged with violating its provisions. The rigid rules of the common law with reference to the liability of common carriers should not be applied where in such case it appears that the delay in shipping the goods has been caused by circumstances which the railroad company could not have been expected to provide for, and which have occurred entirely without fault on the company's part, semble that it will be held excused from liability. A railroad company accustomed to transport cotton owned 120 flat cars, which were usually ample to carry on all its business in that line. In the autumn of 1881 the cotton crop was very heavy, and there were many delays in consequence. At the same time a connecting line over which much of the cotton was forwarded gave notice that it would thereafter transport cotton only in box cars, and not in flat cars. The company first above named had not sufficient box cars to carry on its business, and was wholly unable at once to obtain more. At this juncture, A. & Co. delivered certain cotton to the railroad for transportation, receiving a through bill of lading over the connecting line, which bill contained a clause providing that the cotton was received for transportation "at the company's convenience." A. & Co., although well able to read, did not notice said clause until after the bringing of the suit hereinafter mentioned. The cotton was not shipped for more than five days, owing to the circumstances above mentioned. In a suit by A. & Co. against the railroad company to recover the statutory penalty, held, that under the circumstances of the case, the clause above cited in the bill of lading was a valid one, and might be taken advantage of by the company, and that therefore plaintiffs could not recover. Whitehead v Wilmington, etc., R., 87 N. Car. 255: s.c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 168.

2. Order of Transmission of Freight.—Where there is a blockade of freight, goods should be sent forward in the order of time that they were received by the carrier for transportation. Acheson v. New York Central & H. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 652; Page v. Great Northern R. Co., 2 Ir. Rep. (C. L.) 288.

3. Houston, etc., R. v. Smith, 63 Tex. 322; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 421, where it was held that in such case where the carrier, from an unexpected and unprecedented press of business, is unable to furnish sufficient transportation to carry all property offered, this will in general furnish a legal excuse for refusal to receive. This in spite of a statute regulating the forwarding thereof. But that the carrier is bound to transport in the order in which the freight is offered, and cannot exercise partiality in accepting the property tendered by some and rejecting that offered by other persons.

4. Michigan Central, etc., R. v. Burrows, 33 Mich. 6. See, generally, Richardson v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 530

Contracts to Furnish Care to Forward Live Stock.—As to the construction of contracts on the part of a railroad company to furnish rolling-stock to forward cattle by a certain time, and as to the liability of the company under such contracts, see the following authorities: Philadelphia, etc., R. v. Lehman, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194; Harrison v. Missouri, etc., R., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 382; Ayres v. Chicago, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 171; Richardson v. Chicago, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 172; Richardson v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 530.

justice if unrestricted. Where the carrier assumed the liability of an insurer as to all goods of whatever description consigned to his care, it was thought reasonable that the difference in the value of the articles should produce a difference in the degree of liability. The care which a bailee would naturally take of any article of value, and the disproportion in the responsibility he assumed for precisely the same services, were naturally taken into consideration. It was thought that in the case of packages of value he might reasonably charge a higher rate than for others. Having such a privilege, however, he was constantly exposed to the risk of the fraudulent concealment of the value of the consignment by the consignor. The admission of any limitation upon his liability resulted in an uncertainty as to the law on the subject, and led to the passage of the English Carriers Act. Under this statute common carriers are not liable for the loss, etc., of specified articles above 10*l.* in value, unless their nature and value are declared at the time of consignment.[1] The valuation fixed by the consignor is not, however, conclusive. But the carrier may require proof of the actual value, and is only liable for such damages, so

1. Declaration of Value under English Carriers Act.—Under the Carriers Act (1 Will. IV., c. 68), common carriers are not liable for the loss, etc., of specified articles above 10*l.* in value, unless the nature and value are declared at the time of consignment. These articles are specified as follows: Gold or silver coin; gold or silver, manufactured or unmanufactured; precious stones, jewelry, watches, clocks or timepieces of any description (held to include a ship's chronometer). Le Conteur v. London, etc., R., 35 L. J. Q. B. 40; L. R. 1 Q. B. 54). Trinkets (held to include ornamented portemonnaies and ladies' smelling-bottles, ivory bracelets, ornamental shirt-pins, bracelets, rings, brooches. Bernstein v. Baxendale, 28 L. J. C. P. 265; 6 C. B. N. S. 251. And ivory fans. Attorney-Gen. v. Harley, 7 L. J. Ch. 31; 5 Russ. 173. But not an eye-glass and gold chain. Davey v. Mason, Car. & M. 45. Nor a plain, unornamented German-silver fusee-box, or other articles, the principal object of which is utility, and whatever ornament they may possess is only accessory to their use. Bernstein v. Baxendale, 28 L. J. C. P. 265; 6 C. B. N. S. 251). Bills (an accepted bill not assigned by the drawer is not within the act as a "bill," though it might be as a writing. Stoessiger v. South-Eastern R., 23 L. J. Q. B. 293; 3 E. & B. 549). Notes of the Governor and Company of the Banks of England, Scotland, and Ireland, respectively, or of any other bank in Great Britain or Ireland; orders, notes, or securities for payment of money; English or foreign stamps; maps. Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. 443. Writings. Piancini v. London, etc., R., 18 C. B. 226. Title-deeds; paintings (and artist's pencil sketches). Mytton v. Midland R., 28 L. J. Ex. 285; 4 H. & N. 615. But they must be articles of artistic value, as paintings, and not mere designs or patterns. Woodward v. London, etc., R., 47 L. J. Exch. 263; L. R. 3 Ex. Div. 121. Engravings. Boys v. Pink, 8 C. & P. 361. Pictures (and their frames). Anderson v. London, etc., R., 39 L. J. Exch. 55; s. c., sub nom. Henderson v. London, etc., R., L. R. 5 Exch. 90. Gold or silver-plated articles; glass (including looking-glasses). Owen v. Burnett, 2 Cr & M. 357; 3 L. J. Exch. 76. China; silks, in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, and whether wrought up or not wrought up with other materials (including silk hose). Hart v. Baxendale, 6 Exch. 769; 20 L. J. Exch. 338. Elastic silk web. Brunt v. Midland R., 33 L. J. Exch. 187; 2 H. & C. 889. A truss of silk. Butt v. Great Western R., 20 L. J. C. P. 241; 11 C. B. 140. And a silk dress made up for wearing. Flowers v. South Eastern R., 16 L. T. N. S. 329. Furs (does not include hat-bodies made partly of fur and partly of wool). Mayhew v. Nelson, 6 C. & P. 58. Lace. Treadwin v. Great Eastern R., 37 L. J. C. P. 83; L. R. 3 C. P. 308. But not machine-made lace. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 94; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 45.

proved, not exceeding the declared value, together with the increased charges.[1] "Value," under this act, means intrinsic value at the time the parcel is delivered.[2] In England the consignor is bound by his declaration of value, and will not be permitted to show subsequently that the value of the goods exceeded that declared.[3] In both countries it is well settled that where the value of articles shipped is deliberately and intentionally concealed by the consignor, the carrier is not liable except for the value of what he supposed he undertook to carry.[4] In a leading case it was pointed out that if any means are used to conceal the nature of the article, and thereby the owner avoids paying a reasonable compensation for the risk, this unfairness and its consequence to the carrier, upon the principles of common justice, will exempt him from responsibility. For such a result is alike due to the carrier who has received no reward for the risk, and to the party who has been the cause of it by means of disingenuousness and unfair dealing.[5]

The following are instances of such concealment of the nature or value of the articles as have been held to release the carrier from liability. Where bank-notes were packed in a chest with clothes, and the fact of their existence was not disclosed to the

1. It is also provided in section nine of this act that the carrier shall not be concluded as to the value of any parcel or package so declared, but may require proof of the actual value of the contents by the ordinary legal evidence, and that the carrier shall be liable to such damages only as shall be so proved, not exceeding the declared value, together with the increased charges. See, generally, Millen v. Brasch, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 143; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 326. See also Anderson v. London, etc., R., 39 L. J. Exch. 55; L. R. 5 Exch. 90; Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. 443; Bernstein v. Baxendale, 28 L. J. C. P. 265; Treadwin v. Great Eastern, etc., R., 37 L. J. C. P. 83; L. R. 3 C. P. 308.

2. Thus a bill of exchange, if it is in an imperfect state, is only a writing of which the value is that of the paper on which it is written. Stoessiger v. South-Eastern R., 23 L. J. Q. B. 293; 3 E. & B. 549.

3. McCance v. London, etc., R., 34 L. J. Exch. 39; 3 H. & C. 343; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.). p. 51. See also, Edwards v Sherratt, 1 East, 604; Batson v. Donovan, 4 Barn. & Ald. 2; Tichburne v. White, 1 Strange, 145; Kenny v. Eggleston, Aleyn, 93; Tyly v. Morrice, Carth. 485; Harris v. Packwood, 3 Taunt. 264.

4. Tyly v. Morrice, 3 Carth. 485; Tichburne v. White, 1 Strange, 145; Miles v. Cattle, 6 Bing. 943; Edwards v. Sherratt, 1 East, 604; Batson v. Donovan, 4 B. & Ald, 21; Kenny v. Eggleston, Aleyn, 93; Belfast, etc., R. v. Keys, 9 H. L. Cas. 556; Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298; Walker v. Jackson, 10 M. & W. 161; Sleat v. Tagg, 5 B. & Ald. 342; Bradley v. Waterhouse, M. & M. 154; Great Northern R. v. Shepherd, 14 Eng. L. & Eq. 367; McCance v. London, etc., R., 7 H. & N. 477; Earnest v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 579; St. John v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 612; Orange Co. Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 85; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234; Hawkins v. Hoffman, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 586; Pardee v. Drew, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 85; Richards v. Westcott, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 6; Cole v. Goodwin, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 251; Warner v. W. T. Co., 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 490; Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 266; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 62 N. Y. 35; Cincinnati, etc., R. v. Marcus, 38 Ill. 219; Chicago, etc., R. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578; Oppenheimer v. U. S. Exp. Co., 69 Ill. 62; Chicago, etc., R. v. Shea, 66 Ill. 471; Southern Exp. Co., v. Everett, 37 Ga. 688; Everett v. Southern Exp. Co., 46 Ga. 303; Cooper v. Berry, 21 Ga. 526; Coxe v. Heisley, 19 Pa. St. 243; Relf v. Rapp, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 21; The Ionic, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 538; Hayes v. Wells, 23 Cal. 185; Houston, etc., R. v. Burke, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 59; Texas Exp. Co. v. Scott, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 111; Missouri Pacific R. v. York, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R., Cas. 623; Rosenfeld v. Peoria, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 87.

5. Nelson, J., in Orange County Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 116.

carrier;[1] where two hundred sovereigns were packed in six lbs. of tea;[2] where a sum of money was concealed in a bag of hay;[3] or placed in a box with articles of small value;[4] where a diamond ring was sent in a small paper bag, tied up with a string;[5] where valuable jewelry was sent under circumstances which naturally led the carrier to conclude that it was of trifling value;[6] where a check indorsed in blank was sent in a letter;[7] where money was sent in a package, not indorsed and sealed in the particular manner required by the carrier;[8] where articles of a brittle nature were sent without any intimation of the peculiarly delicate care necessary for their transportation, and they were broken in consequence;[9] where a trunk containing jewelry was shipped marked "glass," and represented to be so, in consequence of which a low rate of freight was paid;[10] where the value of horses shipped was wilfully understated in order to procure a cheaper rate of freight.[11] In another case, however, a distinction was drawn with regard to money carried as part of freight and when carried as a part of baggage. In the latter case the passenger may place money in a trunk without communicating the fact to the carrier, but is guilty of fraud in so doing, if such trunk is shipped as freight.[12]

The weight of authority holds that the consignor is not bound to state the value of the goods unless asked.[13]

1. Chicago, etc., R. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578.

2. Bradley v. Waterhouse, 1 Moo. & M. 154.

3. Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298.

4. Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 266; Earnest v. Exp. Co., 1 Woods, 573; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 62 N. Y. 35; Chicago, etc., R. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578.

5. Everett v. Southern Exp. Co., 46 Ga. 303.

6. Oppenheimer v. United States Exp. Co., 69 Ill. 62.

7. Hayes v. Wells, 23 Cal. 185.

8. St. John v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 612.

9. Chicago, etc., R. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578.

10. Relf v. Rapp, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 21.

11. McCance v. London, etc., R., 7 H. & N. 477.

12. In Missouri Pacific R. v. York, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 623, it was held that where goods are shipped as freight, the shipper shall use no fraud or artifice to deceive the carrier, whereby his risk is increased or his care and vigilance lessened. If there be such fraud or concealment the carrier is relieved from liability. There is a distinction with regard to money carried as part of freight and when carried as part of baggage. In the latter case the passenger may place money in a trunk without communicating the fact to the carrier. But he is guilty of fraud in so doing if such trunk be shipped as freight.

13. Brooke v. Pickwick, 4 Bing. 218; Lebeau v. General Steam Nav. Co., L. R. 8 C. P. 88; Batson v. Donovan, 4 B. & Ald. 21; Sleat v. Tagg, 5 B. & Ald. 342; Walker v. Jackson, 10 M. & W. 168; Relf v. Rapp, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 21; Camden, etc., R. v. Baldauf, 16 Pa. St. 67; Southern Exp. Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; Adams Exp. Co. v. Boskowitz, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 102; Texas Exp. Co. v. Scott, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 111; Gulf, etc., R. v. Clark, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 628; Gorham Manuf. Co. v. Fargo, 45 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 90; Sewall v. Allen, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 349; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234; Baldwin v. L. & G. W. S. S. Co., 74 N. Y. 125; Warner v. Western Transp. Co., 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 490; Phillips v. Earle, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 182; Parmelee v. Lowitz, 74 Ill. 116; Merchants' Disp., etc., Co. v. Bowles, 80 Ill. 473; Lewis v. Gale, 17 La. Ann. 302. Compare Fassett v. Ruark, 3 La. Ann. 694; Lewis v. Gale, 17 La. Ann. 302; Baldwin v. Collins, 9 Rob. (La.) 468; Merchants' Dispatch, etc., Co. v. Bolles, 80 Ill. 473; Phillips v. Earle, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 182; Little v. Boston, etc., R., 66 Me. 239; Brown v. Camden, etc., R., 83 Pa. St. 316; Magnin v. Dinsmore,

There is no ground to impute fraud to a consignor who informs the carrier that a certain package dispatched by him is very valuable, but fails to tell him that it contains money;[1] the consignor must state the specific nature of the articles consigned,[2] but is not bound to make any express and formal declaration of their value;[3] where the consignor gave a warning as follows: "Take care: these are pictures of the value of 100*l.*;"[4] where the consignor inserted the word "silks" as a description of the goods, and remarked: "There are about 100*l.* worth of goods in the parcel."[5] These were held sufficient declarations of value under the Carrier's Act.[6]

Where the consignor is asked the value of goods he must give correct and truthful answers.[7]

62 N. Y. 35; Macklin v. Waterhouse, 5 Bing. 212; 2 M. & P. 319.

1. In Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 327, it was held that where a shipper informs a carrier that a certain package dispatched by him is very valuable, but fails to tell him that it contains money, there is no ground to impute fraud to the consignor.

In Lebeau v. General Steam Nav. Co., L. R. 8 C. P. 88, it was held that where a consignor, knowing that the freight for linen was less than that for silk, dispatched certain bales of the latter material, receiving for them a bill of lading in which they were termed "linen," but bearing on its face a stamp "weight, value, and contents unknown," there was not, under the circumstances, any ground to exempt the carrier from liability in case of loss for the full value of the silk.

2. Owen v. Burnett, 2 Cr. & M. 353; 3 L. J. Exch. 76.

3. Bradbury v. Sutton, 19 W. R. 800; 21 W. R. 128.

4. Behrens v. Great Northern R., 30 L. J. Exch. 158.

5. Bradbury v. Sutton, 19 W. R. 800; W. R. 128.

6. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 52.

In Walker v. Jackson, 10 M. & W. 168, the plaintiff went on board the defendant's steamboat with his horse and carriage, paying the defendant's usual ferry charge for his vehicle. Underneath the seat he had stored watches and jewelry of great value, which much increased the weight, and of which he said nothing to defendant. In running the wagon off the boat upon the slip two of defendant's servants were overpowered by its weight, let it fall, and in consequence it ran into the river. The carrier was held liable. Baron Parke used the following language: "I take it to be now perfectly well understood, according to the majority of opinions upon the subject, that if anything is delivered to a person to be carried, it is the duty of the person receiving it to ask such questions about it as may be necessary. If he asks no questions and there be no fraud to give the case a false complexion, on the delivery of the parcel, he is bound to carry the parcel as it is. It is the duty of the person who receives it to ask the questions; if they are answered improperly so as to deceive him, then there is no contract between the parties; it is a ground which vitiates the contract altogether."

In Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217, the court remarked: "A carrier has a right to know the value and quality of what he is required to carry. If the owner of the goods will not tell him what his goods are and what they are worth, the carrier may refuse to take charge of them; but if he does take charge of them, he waives his right to know their contents and value." It was, however, pointed out in a later case that this was the only authority which could be found or relied upon for the contention that the carrier had the right to require the consignor to inform him of the nature of the contents of packages offered for carriage; and that the law as thus stated would not bear the test of reason. Crouch v. Railway, 7 Exch. 705. See also The Nitro-Glycerine Case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524.

7. Walker v. Jackson, 10 M. & W. 168; Graves v. Lake Shore, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 108; Texas Express Co. v. Scott, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 111; Boskowitz v. Adams Exp. Co., 5 Cent. L. J. 58; Phillips v. Earle, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 182; Camden, etc., R. v. Baldauf, 16 Pa. St. 67; Little v. Boston, etc., R., 66 Me. 239.

As will subsequently appear, it is the almost universal rule in the United States that the carrier cannot limit by contract his liability for the negligence of himself or his servants.[1] This rule has given rise to a conflict of decision upon the question as to whether, if a contract is made fixing a value upon the goods consigned and a rate of freight is established based upon the agreed valuation, the carrier shall be liable, where a loss occurs through his negligence, for any greater sum than such valuation. In a late and leading case[2] in the United States Supreme Court it

1. See infra this title, CONTRACTS LIMITING LIABILITY.

2. In Hart v. Pennsylvania R., 112 U. S. 331; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 604, it was held that where a contract of carriage, signed by the shipper, is fairly made with a railroad company, agreeing on a valuation of the property carried, with the rate of freight based on the condition that the carrier assumes liability only to the extent of the agreed valuation, even in case of loss or damage by the negligence of the carrier, the contract will be upheld as a proper and lawful mode of securing a due proportion between the amount for which the carrier may be responsible and the freight he receives, and of protecting himself against extravagant and fanciful valuations. H. shipped five horses, and other property, by a railroad, in one car, under a bill of lading, signed by him, which stated that the horses were to be transported "upon the following terms and conditions, which are admitted and accepted by me as just and reasonable: First, to pay freight thereon" at a rate specified, "on the condition that the carrier assumes a liability on the stock to the extent of the following agreed valuation: If horses or mules, not exceeding $200 each. . . . If a chartered car, on the stock and contents in same, $1200 for the car-load. But no carrier shall be liable for the acts of the animals themselves, . . . nor for loss or damage arising from condition of the animals themselves, which risks, being beyond the control of the company, are hereby assumed by the owner, and the carrier released therefrom." By the negligence of the railroad company or its servants, one of the horses was killed and the others were injured, and the other property was lost. In a suit to recover the damages, it appeared that the horses were race-horses, and the plaintiff offered to show damages, based on their value, amounting to over $25,000. The testimony was excluded, and he had a verdict for $1200. On a writ of error, brought by him, held, (1) the evidence was not admissible, and the valuation and limitation of liability in the bill of lading was just and reasonable, and binding on the plaintiff; (2) the terms of the limitation covered a loss through negligence. In this case, Blatchford, J., delivering the opinion of the court, observes:

"To the views announced in these cases we adhere; but there is not in them any adjudication on the particular question now before us. It may, however, be disposed of on principles which are well established, and which do not conflict with any of the rulings of this court. As a general rule, and in the absence of fraud or imposition, a common carrier is answerable for the loss of a package of goods, though he is ignorant of its contents, and though its contents are ever so valuable, if he does not make a special acceptance. This is reasonable, because he can always guard himself by a special acceptance, or by insisting on being informed of the nature and value of the articles before receiving them. If the shipper is guilty of fraud or imposition, by misrepresenting the nature or value of the articles, he destroys his claim to indemnity, because he has attempted to deprive the carrier of the right to be compensated in proportion to the value of the articles and the consequent risk assumed, and what he has done has tended to lessen the vigilance the carrier would otherwise have bestowed. 2 Kent Comm. 603, and cases cited; Relf v. Rapp, 3 Watts & S. 21; Dunlap v. Steamboat Co., 98 Mass. 371; Railroad Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24. This qualification of the liability of the carrier is reasonable, and is as important as the rule which it qualifies. There is no justice in allowing the shipper to be paid a large value for an article which he has induced the carrier to take at a low rate of freight on the assertion and agreement that its value is a less sum than that claimed after a loss. It is just to hold the shipper to his agreement, fairly made, as to value, even where the loss or injury has occurred through the negligence of the carrier. The effect of the agreement was held that where a contract of carriage signed by the shipper is fairly made with a railroad company, agreeing on the valuation is to cheapen the freight and secure the carriage, if there is no loss; and the effect of disregarding the agreement, after a loss, is to expose the carrier to a greater risk than the parties intended he should assume. The agreement as to value, in this case, stands as if the carrier had asked the value of the horses, and had been told by the plaintiff the sum inserted in the contract.

"The limitation as to value has no tendency to exempt from liability for negligence. It does not induce want of care. It exacts from the carrier the measure of care due to the value agreed on The carrier is bound to respond in that value for negligence. The compensation for carriage is based on that value. The shipper is estopped from saying that the value is greater. The articles have no greater value for the purposes of the contract of transportation between the parties to that contract. The carrier must respond for negligence up to that value. It is just and reasonable that such a contract, fairly entered into, and where there is no deceit practised on the shipper, should be upheld. There is no violation of public policy. On the contrary, it would be unjust and unreasonable, and would be repugnant to the soundest principles of fair dealing and of the freedom of contracting, and thus in conflict with public policy, if a shipper should be allowed to reap the benefit of the contract if there is no loss, and to repudiate it in case of loss. This principle is not a new one. In Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298, the sum of £100 was hidden in some hay in an old nail-bag and sent by a coach and lost. The plaintiff knew of a notice by the proprietor that he would not be answerable for money unless he knew what it was, but did not apprise the proprietor that there was money in the bag. The defence was upheld, Lord Mansfield saying: 'A common carrier, in respect of the premium he is to receive, runs the risk of the goods and must make good the loss, though it happen without any fault in him, the reward making him answerable for their safe delivery. His warranty and insurance is in respect of the reward he is to receive, and the reward ought to be proportionable to the risk. If he makes a greater warranty and insurance, he will take greater care, use more caution, and be at the expense of more guards or other methods of security, and therefore he ought, in reason and justice, to have a greater reward.' To the same effect is Batson v. Donovan, 4 Barn. & Ald. 21.

"The subject-matter of a contract may be valued, or the damages in case of a breach may be liquidated, in advance. In the present case, the plaintiff accepted the valuation as 'just and reasonable.' The bill of lading did not contain a valuation of all animals at a fixed sum for each, but a graduated valuation according to the nature of the animal. It does not appear that an unreasonable price would have been charged for a higher valuation. . . . Applying to the case in hand the proper test to be applied to every limitation of the common-law liability of a carrier—its just and reasonable character—we have reached the result indicated. In Great Britain, a statute directs this test to be applied by the courts. The same rule is the proper one to be applied in this country, in the absence of any statute."

"The distinct ground of our decision in the case at bar is that, where a contract of the kind, signed by the shipper, is fairly made, agreeing on a valuation of the property carried, with the rate of freight based on the condition that the carrier assumes liability only to the extent of the agreed valuation, even in case of loss or damage by the negligence of the carrier, the contract will be upheld as a proper and lawful mode of securing a due proportion between the amount for which the carrier may be responsible and the freight he receives, and of protecting himself against extravagant and fanciful valuations. Squire v. New York Central, etc., R. R., 98 Mass. 239, 245, and cases there cited."

In Oppenheimer v. U. S. Express Co., 69 Ill. 62, it was pointed out that a distinction exists between the effects of those notices by a carrier by which it is sought to discharge him from duties which the law has annexed to his employment and those designed simply to insure good faith and fair dealing on the part of his employer. In the former, notice without assent to the attempted restriction is ineffectual, while, in the latter, actual notice alone will be sufficient. See also Orange Co. Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 86; 2 Greenlf. Ev., sec. 215; Ang. on Carriers (5th Ed.), sec. 245; Farmers & M. Bank v. Champlain Trans. Co., 23 Vt. 186; Moses v. Boston & M. R., 4 Foster (N. H.), 85; Western Trans. Co. v. Newhall et al., 24 Ill. 466.

of the property carried, with the rate of freight based on the condition that the carrier assumes liability, only to the extent of the agreed valuation, even in case of loss or damage by the negligence of the carrier, the contract will be upheld as a proper and lawful mode of securing a due proportion between the amount for which the carrier may be responsible, and the freight he receives, and of protecting himself against extravagant and fanciful valuations. Another line of cases maintains that where the clause in a bill of lading limits the amount of the common carrier's liability, it shall not be construed to release the carrier from liability for loss or damage occurring through his negligence, but that in such case there may be a recovery for the entire loss.[1]

M. delivered to an express company for transportation a trunk with contents of the value of $4172, taking a receipt exempting the company from loss by fire and from liability beyond $50, "at which sum said property is hereby valued, unless the just and true value thereof is stated herein." The value of the trunk and contents was not stated in the receipt. Through the negligence of the employees of a railroad company employed by the express company to transport the property, it was destroyed by fire. In a suit by M. against the express company for the value of the property, held, that the limitation of the liability to $50 is binding on M., as a reasonable condition. Muser et al. v. Holland, Treas. Am. Ex. Co., 17 Blatchf. C. C. 412.

In Elkins v. Empire Transportation Co., 81* Pa. St. 315, by a bill of lading of a transportation company, loss occurring during the transportation was to be "computed at the value of the cost of the goods at the time and place of shipment." A tariff of rates of freight put "high-wines" in the first class, and in the fourth class "high-wines" . . . "at an agreed valuation, not exceeding $20 per barrel;" the freight for first class was $1.60. for fourth class 50 cents, per 100 pounds, the rate of freight written in the bill was "50 cents per 100 pounds;" and "valuation $20 per barrel." Held, that this valuation and rate were controlling parts of the bill, and loss occurring to the goods was to be estimated at $20 per barrel.

In Harvey v. Terre Haute, etc., R., 74 Mo. 538; s. c., 6 Am & Eng. R. R. Cas. 293, it was held that where the consignor fixes a stated value upon the article shipped he cannot recover a larger amount.

In Graves v. Lake Shore, etc., R., 137 Mass. 33; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 108, it was held that if a consignor voluntarily represents and agrees that the goods delivered to the carrier are of a certain value, and the carrier is thereby induced to grant him a reduced rate of compensation for the carriage, such shipper is bound by his representation and agreement. See also Dunlap v. Inter. Steamboat Co., 98 Mass. 371; Judson v. Western, etc., R., 6 Allen (Mass.), 486; Squire v. New York Central, etc., R., 98 Mass. 239; Railroad Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 26; Muser v. American Exp. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 382; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 56 N. Y. 168, and 62 N. Y. 35, and 70 N. Y. 410; Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 166; Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatchf. C. C. 64; Earnest v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 573; South, etc., R. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; s.c., 56 Ala. 368.

1. American Exp. Co. v. Sands, 55 Pa. St. 140; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542; Lamb v. Camden, etc., R., 46 N. Y. 271; United States Exp. Co. v. Backman, 28 Ohio St. 144; Orndorff v. Adams Exp. Co., 3 Bush (Ky.), 194; Mobile, etc., R. v. Hopkins, 41 Ala. 486; Chicago, etc., R. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 117; Southern Exp. Co. v. Moon, 39 Miss. 822; Kirby v. Adams Exp. Co., 2 Mo. App. 369; Adams Exp. Co. v. Stettaners, 61 Ill. 184; Judson v. Western R. Corp., 6 Allen (Mass.), 486; Steamboat City of Norwich, 4 Ben. C. C. 271; Morrison v. Construction Co., 44 Wis. 405; Black v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 55 Wis. 319; Moulton v. St. Paul, etc., R., 31 Minn. 85; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 13; Kansas City, etc., R. v. Simpson, 30 Kans. 645; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 158.

In McCune v. B., C. R. & N. R. Co., 52 Iowa, 600, a regulation of a railway company to the effect that no valuable live-stock shall be received for shipment until a contract is signed by the owner releasing the company from all liability for injury to such stock in shipment, above the value of ordinary stock, is

In another case, where the bill of lading stipulated that in case of loss the value or cost at the point of shipment should measure void under section 1308 of the Iowa Code.

In Minnesota, by the terms of a contract for the transportation of a car-load of horses, the railway company was discharged from any liability for any cause, excepting the wilful negligence of its agents. By other terms of the contract it was agreed that in case of total loss the damage should in no case exceed the sum of $100 per head. The contract was construed as, in effect, an agreement for absolute exemption from liability except for wilful negligence; and in case such contract of exemption should not be sustained, then that the liability should be limited to the sum named. Held, not valid as exempting the railway company in whole or in part from liability for its own negligence, to the extent of the value of the property. Moulton v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co., 31 Minn. 86; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 13.

In Kansas, where a horse was shipped by rail, and the bill of lading was signed by the carrier and by the agent of the shipper, and provided that "value not to exceed $100," which was arbitrarily inserted in the bill of lading by the carrier, and the horse was injured by the carrier's negligence, it was held that the recovery was not limited to $100. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. v. Simpson, 30 Kans. 645; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 158. Horton, C. J., observed: "James, J., used the following language in an unreported case of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia: 'The principle of law which, for considerations of public welfare, forbids a common carrier to bargain in particular cases for complete exemption from responsibility for a violation of his duties, forbids him to impair his obligations to the community by bargaining in particular cases for an exemption from a considerable part of that responsibility. The ground on which the rule is based, that even the shipper's perfect consent cannot relieve the carrier, is that the object which he undertakes to regulate by contract is not his own, but a public right. . . . The principle of the rule is, that any agreement which operates to interfere with a public right, touching the character and good faith of common carriers, is an agreement against public policy and welfare, and is therefore void; and as an agreement that his negligence shall be cheap, must operate in this way, it necessarily falls within that principle.' Galt v. Express Co. (S. C. D. C.), MS.; Lawson on Carriers, 434, 435. See also Goggin v. Railroad Co., 12 Kans. 416; Railroad Co. v. Caldwell, 8 Kans. 244; Railroad Co. v. Reynolds, 8 Kans. 623; Kallman v. Express Co., 12 Kans. 21; Railroad Co. v. Nichols, 9 Kans. 225; Railroad Co. v. Piper, 13 Kans. 505; Railroad Co. v. Maris, 16 Kans. 333; The Emily v. Carney, 5 Kans. 685; Railroad Co. v. Peavey, 29 Kans. 169. While the provision in a bill of lading or contract between the shipper and carrier, that the latter will not be liable beyond a certain sum expressed in the contract, may be valid to limit the liability of the carrier as an insurer, a condition of this character which seeks to cover the negligence of the carrier is void; therefore, the direction of the trial court was not erroneous. The present case furnishes a strong illustration of the oppression and injustice of a contrary doctrine. Simpson, the owner of the horse, sent his rider, Towne, a young boy, to ship the horse to St. Joseph, Mo., and enter him in the races there. He did not authorize him to fix any limitation on the value, in transporting him, and the horse was worth more than $300. The agent of the company shipping the animal supposed the horse was fancy stock, or a race-horse, and without any inquiry as to its actual value, arbitrarily inserted in the bill of lading 'value not to exceed $100.' Towne told the agent that he did not want the contract limited, but afterward signed it with the clause inserted According to the testimony of the agent, the rules of the company required him to insert this clause in transporting fine stock, whether the shipper wanted it or not. At St. Joseph the car containing the horse was run up into the yard of the company, a flying switch made, and the car run about 200 yards without any brakeman or other person on the car to stop or control it, at such a speed that the horse was knocked down upon his knees and injured."

In Wisconsin it was held that the words "liquor carried at val. $20 per bbl." stamped upon the face of a receipt, if they can be construed into a contract to limit the liability of the carrier to the sum of $20 in case of loss, must be so construed as to limit such liability only in case of loss without the fault of the carrier. Even the transportation of goods at an agreed valuation, if it can be construed into a simple agreement limit-the amount of recovery, and certain letters and figures were illegibly written thereon, without the shipper's knowledge, and he was ignorant of the meaning thereof, he was entitled to recover the value of the goods at the point of shipment.[1]

It has been held in England, that the carrier would not be liable for his knowledge of the nature and value of the parcel not derived from the declaration of the consignor or his agent.[2] That it is not sufficient for the carrier to have a conviction as to the contents of the parcel,[3] nor that its appearance, or something written on it, indicates that it is of value. It was so held where a looking-glass was marked "Plate-glass, looking-glass; keep this edge upwards," but no actual declaration was made, or increased value paid.[4] So where pictures were so exposed that their nature could be easily seen by the carrier's servants.[5] On the ing the liability of the carrier, will have no application when goods are lost through the carrier's negligence.

1. In Rosenfeld v. Peoria, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R Cas. 87, it was held, that common carriers may limit their liability as insurers, but cannot relieve themselves from liability for negligence or fraud to a specified sum. But if a shipper, for the purpose of getting a reduced rate on his goods, misrepresents their value to the carrier, this is a fraud which will preclude his recovery for their loss at a greater valuation. If a carrier claims that by contract or the misconduct of a shipper his common-law liability has been limited, the burden is upon him clearly to show it, and all such contracts will be interpreted most strictly against the carrier.

A bill of lading stipulated that in case of loss the value or cost at the point of shipment should measure the amount of recovery. In the bill were also the letters and figures "L. & O. Ex. $20 R. R. Val." These letters and figures were placed there without the shipper's knowledge, were illegibly written, and their meaning. "Leaks and outs excepted, $20 railroad valuation," was unknown to him. Held, that he was entitled to recover the value of the goods at the point of their shipment. The court, in an able opinion by Zollars, J., thus comments upon the facts: "Tested by these rules of the law, how stands the case before us? As we have seen, there is an express and definite stipulation in the bill of lading that in case of loss the value or cost at the point of shipment shall measure the amount of recovery. To overthrow this specific stipulation, appellee relies upon the figures and letters in the blank, which, as we have seen, are so written that no one could read or interpret them, unless he had previous knowledge of their import. We think that it would not be reasonable to hold that these shall overthrow the express and plainly printed stipulations above referred to, and that the only proper and reasonable construction of the contract is that it fixes the amount of recovery, in case of loss, at the value of the barrel of whiskey at the point of shipment. The evidence shows that the agents of appellee put the letters and figures upon the bill of lading without the knowledge or consent of appellant. He had no understanding, or knowledge of their import, except what they of themselves import, and that was practically nothing. He made no representations as to the value of the barrel of whiskey, nor was he asked to make any. The testimony by the agents of appellee tends to show that less freight was charged than would have been charged had the value been stated at a greater amount; but there is no evidence that appellant was a party to such an arrangement, nor that he had any knowledge of it. There is evidence that he had accepted several like bills of lading for barrels of whiskey shipped, but they of themselves would not furnish any information that the carrier, by such letters and figures, was limiting its liability—first, because the letters and figures could not be intelligently deciphered by the shipper; and, second, if they could, they would not be sufficient to overthrow and destroy the plainly printed stipulation that the damages should be measured by the value at the point of shipment."

2 Robinson v. South-Western R., 34 L. J. C. P. 234.

3. Boys v. Pink, 8 C. & P. 363.

4. Owen v. Burnett, 2 Cr. & M. 353.

5. Morritt v. North-Eastern R., 45 L.

other hand, it has been held in the United States that the character and value of the goods may be inferred from their appearance. And in such case an acceptance by the carrier imposes a liability for their value, even though the contract of carriage may stipulate against a liability beyond a specified amount. In one case,[1] the court pointed out that when a small package contains an article of great value, there is great propriety that the carrier should have information thereof. But in large bulky articles, such as barrels of flour, bales of cotton, and the like, there appears to be no necessity for giving information of the value, as the carrier can determine that for himself. The design is to insure good faith. If an inquiry were made of the shipper of the value of the goods about to be shipped, he would be bound to state truly the value. But when the value appears in the package itself, such an inquiry would be useless, and a voluntary statement unnecessary.

3. WHAT CONSTITUTES CONSIGNMENT.—The carrier's liability begins from the moment of complete delivery.[2]

A delivery at the usual place of consignment is constructive notice to the carrier of the consignment of the goods, and such delivery binds him.[3] A carriage is delivered into the charge of

J. Q. B. 289; L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 302; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers, (2d Ed.) p. 53. See also Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 279; Marsh v. Horne, 5 B. & C. 322; Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 572. Compare, however, Beck v. Evans, 3 Camp. 267; Down v. Fromont, 4 Camp. 40; Levi v. Waterhouse, 1 Price Ex. 280; Thorogood v. Marsh, Gow. 105; Alfred v. Horne, 3 Stark. 136; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 93.

1. In Boskowitz v. Adams Exp. Co., 5 Cent. L. J. 58 (Illinois), the court observes: "When a small package contains an article of great value, there is great propriety the carrier should have information thereof; but in large bulky articles, such as barrels of flour, bales of cotton, and the like, there appears to be no necessity for giving information of the value, as the carrier can determine that for himself. The design is to insure good faith. Was an inquiry made of a shipper of the value of the goods about to be shipped, he would be bound to state truly the value; but when the value appears in the package itself, such an inquiry would be useless, and a voluntary statement unnecessary." Boskowitz v. Adams Exp. Co., 9 Cent. L. J. 389; Van Winkle v. Adams Exp. Co., 3 Robt. (La.) 59; Southern Exp. Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 24 N. H. 71; Orndorff v. Adams Exp. Co., 3 Bush (Ky.), 194; Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 50. Compare Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), § 572; Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 279; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 93.

Family Portrait.—A clause in a bill of lading, "specie, bank-bills, and other articles of great intrinsic or representative value, will only be taken upon a representation of their value, and by a special agreement," was held not to apply to a family portrait inclosed in a wooden case. Green v. Boston & Lowell R. Co., 128 Mass, 221. See Michigan Central R. Co. v. Boyd. 91 Ill. 268.

2. English Laws.—Randleson v. Murray, 8 A. & E. 109; Evershed v. London, etc., R., 47 L. J. Q. B. 284; L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 134; Bergheim v. Great Eastern, etc., R., 47 L. J. C. P. 318; L. R. 3 C. P. Div. 22; Hart v. Baxendale. 6 Exch. 769.

3. American Cases.—Blanchard v. Isaacs, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 389; Grosvenor v. New York Central, etc., R., 39 N. Y. 34; Rogers v. Wheeler, 52 N. Y. 262; McHenry v. Philadelphia, etc., R., 4 Harring. (Del.) 448; Williams v. Peytavin, 4 Mart. (La.) 304; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Smyser, 38 Ill. 354; Merritt v. Old Colony R., 11 Allen (Mass.), 80; Hickox v. Naugatuck, etc., R., 31 Conn. 281; Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Barrett, 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 256; Marquette, etc., R. v. Kirkwood, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 85.

Delivery at usual place is constructive notice. Salinger v. Simmons, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 513. Compare Packard v. Get-the ferryman as soon as it is fairly on the slip or drop of the flat, though driven by consignor's servant.[1] If the landing-place at a ferry is not safe through the culpable negligence of the carrier, he becomes liable.[2]

The deposit of goods in a warehouse as accessory to the carriage and for the purpose of being carried, imposes upon the carrier the liability of a carrier, and not that of a warehouseman.[3] In such case, if they are lost by fire while awaiting shipment, the carrier is liable to the same extent as if the goods were in transit, unless his liability has been modified, limited, or restricted with the consent of the shipper or owner of the goods.[4] A wharfinger conveying goods to a vessel in his own lighter is liable as a common carrier.[5] The taking of goods upon a barge or lighter by direction of the ship's agent to be conveyed to the ship, is a good delivery to the ship.[6] The sending of goods to a particular place such as a booking office, by direction of the carrier or his agent, renders the carrier liable as a common carrier.[7] Receipt of the goods at a place or time,[8] different from the usual manner, or an agreement[9] to so receive them, imposes the liability of a common man, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 757; Fitchburg, etc., R. v. Hanna, 6 Gray (Mass.), 539; Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 4 Fost. (N. H.) 71; Merriam v. Hartford, etc., R., 20 Conn. 354; Trowbridge v. Chapin, 23 Conn. 598; Houston, etc., R. v. Hodde, 42 Tex. 467; Woods v. Devin, 13 Ill. 746. Wells v. Wilmington, etc., R., 6 Jones Law (N. Car.), 47; Southern Exp. Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635; Clarke v. Needles, 25 Pa. St. 338.

1. Miles v. James, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 157; Cohen v. Hume, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 439; Wilsons v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Cook v. Gourdin, 2 Nott & McCord (S. Car.), 19; Blakeley v. Le Duc, 19 Minn. 187. Compare White v. Winnisimmet Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 155; Wyckof v. Ferry Co., 52 N. Y. 32.

2. Hayman v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., 50 N. Y. 53; Willoughby v. Horrige, 16 Eng. Law & Eq. 437; 12 C. B. 742.

3. Moffat v. Great West. R., 15 L. T. N. S. 630; Blossom v. Griffin, 3 Kern. (N. Y.) 569; Ladue v. Griffith, 25 N. Y. 264; Wade v. Wheeler, 47 N. Y. 658; Rogers v. Wheeler, 52 N. Y. 262; Whitbeck v. Holland, 45 N. Y. 13; Shelton v. Merch. Desp. Trans. Co., 36 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 527; s. c., 59 N. Y. 258; Clarke v. Needles, 25 Pa. St. 338; Fitchburg, etc., R. v. Hanna, 6 Gray (Mass.), 539; Hickox v. Naugatuck, etc., R., 31 Conn. 281; Michigan, etc., R. v. Shurtz, 7 Mich. 515.

4. Merriam v. Hartford & New Haven R. Co., 20 Conn. 354; Trowbridge v. Chapin, 23 Conn. 595; 2 Redfield on Railways, 63, § 174; Ford v. Mitchell, 21 Ind. 54; Gleason v. Transportation Co., 32 Wis. 85; O'Bannon v. Southern Express Co., 51 Ala. 481; Grosvenor v. New York Central R. Co., 39 N. Y. 34; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Smyser, 38 Ill. 354; Burrell v. North, 2 Car. & Kir. 680; Schouler on Bailments, 381, ch. 4.

Where goods are delivered to a common carrier for shipment, and received by him to be forwarded in the usual course of business, the liability of a common carrier immediately attaches; and if they are lost by an accidental fire while in the carrier's warehouse awaiting transportation, he is liable, unless his common-law liability has been limited by an agreement with the shipper. Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Barrett, 36 Ohio St. 448; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 256; Little Rock, etc., R. v. Hunter, 42 Ark. 200; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 527.

5. Maving v. Todd, 1 Stark. 72. See also Cobban v. Downe, 5 Esp. 41; British Columbia, etc., Co. v. Nettleship, L. R. 3 C. P. 499.

6. The Bark Edwin, 1 Sprague's Dec. 477; Bulkley v. The Naumkeag, etc., Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 386; The Oregon, Deady, 179; Greenwood v. Cooper, 10 La. Ann. 796.

7. Culpepper v. Good, 5 Car. & P. 380; Camden, etc., R. v. Belknap, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 354; Merriam v. Railroad, 20 Conn. 354; Converse v. Transp. Co., 33 Conn. 166; Green v. Railroad, 38 Iowa, 100; s. c., 41 Iowa, 410.

8. Phillips v. Earle, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 182.

9. Dale v. Hall, 1 Wils. 281.

carrier. A delivery to the clerk of an agent of an express company outside the office of such agent is not a good delivery to the company.[1] A consignment to the authorized agent[2] of the carrier, or where such agent is sent to receive the goods at the consignor's request,[3] imposes such liability.

(a) Who are Agents Authorized to Receive.—The following have been held to be agents of the carrier authorized to accept a consignment of goods: The mate of a ship accustomed to receive goods;[4] the baggage-master of a railroad receiving on behalf of a connecting road at his own station;[5] the captain of a steamboat, though there was a freight agent of the boat in the same place, but the consignor was ignorant of the fact;[6] officials at a railway station;[7] drayman of a railroad company collecting goods at the houses of the consignors;[8] servants of another carrier engaged by a company under a special contract to deliver and collect goods.[9] A person acccustomed to book for the company, although a servant of and deriving his authority from a connecting carrier.[10]

(b) Powers of Agents to Accept.—Since most of the carrier's business, both as to the receipt of goods, and the making of contracts for their transportation, must be conducted by agents, there is necessarily a large delegation of authority to them, and it is reasonable that the consignor should have the right to presume that they have the necessary authority to act for the carrier. It has been held that such agents exercising the police power of the company appointing them may make reasonable regulations for the conduct of passengers and others having business at their stations.[11] Where a railroad places an agent in charge of its business at a station, and empowers him to contract for the shipment of produce and freight, it holds him out as possessing the authority to contract with reference to all the necessary and ordinary details of the business, and, within the range of such business, he is a general agent.[12] It has been pointed out that such agents are of the carrier's own selection; are employed to represent and act

1. Cronkite v. Wells, 32 N.Y. 247. See Southern Exp. Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635.

2. Cobban v. Downe, 5 Esp. 41; Taff Vale R. v. Giles, 23 L. J. Q. B. 43; 2 E. & B. 823; Riley v. Horne, 1 C. & P. 610; Winkfield v. Packington, 2 C. & P. 599; Pickford v. Grand Junction R., 12 M. & W. 766; Wilson v. York, etc., R., 17 L. T. 223; Davey v. Mason, Car. & M. 45; Baxendale v. Hart, 21 L. J. Exch. 123; 6 Exch. 769; Machin v. London, etc., R., 17 L. J. Exch. 271; 2 Exch. 415; McCourt v. London, etc., R., 3 Ir. C. L. 107.

3. Boys v. Pink, 8 Car. & P. 361; Lloyd v. Barden, 3 Strob. 343; Davey v. Mason, 1 Car. & M. 45.

4. Cobban v. Downe, 5 Esp. 41.

5. Jordan v. Fall River, etc., R., 5 Cush. (Mass.) 69.

6. Whitbeck v. Schuyler, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 469.

7. Pickford v. Grand Junction R., 12 M. & W. 766; Wilson v. York & Newcastle R., 17 L. T. 223; Quarrier v. Baltimore, etc., R., 24 W. Va. 424; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 535.

8. Davey v. Mason, Car. & M. 45; Baxendale v. Hart, 21 L. J. Exch. 123; 6 Exch. 769.

9 Machin v. London & S. W. R., 17 L. J. Exch. 271; 2 Exch. 415.

10. McCourt v. London & N. W. R., 3 Ir. C. L. 107, 402.

11. Powers of Agents to Contract.—Commonwealth v. Burr, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 596.

12. Pruitt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 62 Mo. 527; Deming v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 48 N. H. 455.

for him; and to hold that contracts entered into by them within the apparent scope of their authority may be defeated by secret limitations upon their authority, would impose, in many cases, very grievous hardships upon those who are compelled to deal with them. The soundest considerations of public policy demand that the rule should be otherwise.[1]

Station agents will not be presumed to have authority to bind the company by a contract beyond its line. But may bind the company by a contract to deliver goods at an unusual place upon its own line.[2] A general agent, however, has authority to contract for the delivering of goods beyond the company's line. But the mere fact that the goods were billed through, or that freight was paid in advance, will not amount to such a contract.[3] A carrier's agents cannot bind the company beyond the authority presumed

1. In Wood v. Chicago, etc., R., 59 Iowa, 196; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36, it was held where a freight agent having power to contract for the carriage of freight, agreed with a party to furnish cars at a given point on a certain day, and then telegraphed to headquarters for the cars which were not furnished, that there was nothing in the above evidence to show that the agent had power to contract to furnish special cars, or that he was held out to the public by the railroad company as having such power.

But this decision was subsequently overruled in Wood v. Chicago, etc., R., 24 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 91, and it was held that where a station agent has power from his principal to contract for the shipment of freight or produce he has also power to contract for the performance of whatever is reasonably necessary to be done to protect the merchandise or produce from injury, unless restricted by special instructions. Where a railroad places an agent in charge of its business at a station, and empowers him to contract for the shipment of produce and freight, it holds him out as possessing the authority to contract with reference to all the necessary and ordinary details of the business; and within the range of such business he is a general agent. Where a railroad company, by its local agent, contracts to ship potatoes from a given point, at a given date, and fails to do so for a reasonable time thereafter, and by reason of such delay the potatoes are frozen, the company will be liable in damages. The court, in an opinion by Reed, J., remarks: "We are aware that what is here said is not in harmony with our holding in Wood v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 59 Iowa, 196; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36. We entertained such grave doubts, however, as to the correctness of our holding in that case, that we announced to counsel, when this rehearing was granted, that we would review the question upon the final hearing. Our conclusion is that that case, in so far as it holds that the defendant, for the purpose of defeating its liability upon a contract made by a station agent within the apparent scope of his authority, may show that in making it the agent acted in violation of instructions of which the shipper had no notice, ought not to be followed. Shippers, as a rule, are required to deal with these agents in making contracts for the shipment of property. They are agents of the company's own selection, and are employed to represent and act for it; and to hold that contracts entered into by them, within the apparent scope of their authority, may be defeated by secret limitations upon their authority, would impose, in many cases, very grievous hardships upon those who are compelled to deal with them. The soundest considerations of public policy demand that the rule should be otherwise; and this view is well sustained by the authorities. See 2 Redf. Rys. 139–141; Hutch. Carr. § 269; Deming v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 48 N. H. 455; Pruitt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 62 Mo. 527; Harrison v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 74 Mo. 364."

2. What Station Agents Cannot Do.—Southern Express Co. v. McVeigh, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 264; Grover & Baker S. M. Co. v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 70 Mo. 672; Mann v. Birchard, 40 Vt. 326; Phillips v. North Carolina R. Co., 78 N. Car. 294; Cummings v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; Webber v. Great Western R. Co., 3 H. & C. 771.

3. Armstrong v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 2 P. & B. (N. B.) 445; Mullarky v. Phila-from their employment.[1] Nor even then, if the consignor have notice of a more limited authority.[2] Nor do they bind the company when acting in contravention of their duty and in fraud of the company by acknowledging the receipt of goods never received.[3] Nor when acting in defiance of the known course of business of the company.[4] It has been held that if such agents do any act beyond their ordinary power, special authority from the carrier must be shown in order to bind him.[5] But customary authority cannot be restricted by special instructions of which the consignor is ignorant.[6]

(c) Agents Not Authorized to Receive Consignments.—The following have been held not to be agents authorized to accept consignments of goods: drivers of wagons and stage-coaches acting on their own account;[7] the master of a steamboat known to receive goods on his own account;[8] deck hands of a steamboat.[9]

It is a well-settled general principle that goods must be delivered into the actual custody of the carrier or his servants in order to impose liability. It was early held that the deposit of goods in the yard of an inn from which the carrier starts was not a consignment.[10] The mere delivery of articles at or near the point from which a railroad company runs its trains does not amount to a delivery to the company which will bind it in the absence of a custom to that effect.[11] In Texas, it has been held that the mere delphia, etc., R. Co., 9 Phila. (Penn.) 114.

In an action for damages against a railroad company, where it appeared that the plaintiff had employed one C., who was a depot agent of the defendant, to purchase cotton for him, and to hold and ship it under his directions, it was held, that C., in so dealing in cotton for the plaintiff, acted solely as the plaintiff's agent, and there was no liability on the defendant from any loss from the failure of C. to perform his duty as such agent. The law does not favor double agencies. Sumner v. Charlotte, Columbia & Augusta R. Co. 78 N. Car. 289. See also Mulligan v. Northern Pacific R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 33.

1. Great Western R. v. Willis, 34 L. J. C. P. 195; 18 C. B. N. S. 748; Horn v. Midland R., 42 L. J. C. P. 59; L. R. 8 C. P. 131.

2. Walker v. York, etc., R., 23 L. J. Q. B. 73; 2 E. & B. 750.

3. Coleman v. Riches, 24 L. J. C. P. 125; 16 C. B. 104.

4. Slim v. Great Northern, etc., R., 23 L. J. C. P. 166; 14 C. B. 647; Belfast & Ballymena R. v. Keys, 9 H. L. C. 556. See also Little Rock, etc., R., v. Hunter, 42 Ark. 200; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 527.

5. Taff Vale R. v. Giles, 23 L. J. Q. B. 43.

6. Page v. London, etc., R., 16 W. R. 566.

7. Who are not Agents Authorized to Receive Goods.—Butler v. Basing, 2 Car. & P. 613; Bignold v. Waterhouse, 1 Maule & S. 259; Williams v. Cranston, 2 Stark, 48; Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., 2 Story C. C., 32; Bean v. Sturtevant, 8 N. H. 146; Shelden v. Robinson, 7 N. H. 157; Blanchard v. Isaacs, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 388.

8. Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 327; 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 335; King v. Lenox, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Walter v. Brewer, 11 Mass. 99. Compare Whitbeck v. Schuyler, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 469; Missouri Coal Co. v. Hannibal, etc., R., 35 Mo. 84.

9. Trowbridge v. Chapin, 23 Conn. 595; Ford v. Mitchell, 21 Ind. 54. See Leigh v. Smith, 1 Carr. & P. 638. See, generally, Wright v. Caldwell, 3 Mich. 51; Freeman v. Newton, 3 E. D Smith (N. Y.), 246; Butler v. Hudson River, etc., R., 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 571; Merriam v. Hartford, etc., R., 20 Conn. 354; Wells v. Wilmington, etc., R., 6 Jones (N. Car.). 47; Gleason v. Goodrich Trans. Co., 32 Wis. 85.

10. Goods Must be Delivered into the Actual Custody of the Carrier or his Servants.—Selway v. Holloway, 1 Ld. Raym. 46; Buckman v. Levi, 3 Camp. 414.

11. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Hodde, permission by the agent of a railroad company to an owner of cattle to place the cattle in the company's yards where no bill of lading is given does not render the company liable for any damages caused by the escape of the cattle.[1] Where the consignor, after paying freight charges and notifying the carrier of an intention to send the goods, dispatched them by a servant, who placed them upon the depot platform, and called the baggage-master's attention to them, but failed to notify the freight agent, and they were injured by a passing train, it was held that this did not constitute a consignment.[2]

A carrier was held liable, however, for goods deposited alongside of the platform in his yard, although no receipt was given for such goods, where it was the common custom of the carrier's servants to construe this a delivery.[3] "Wayside deposits" made to save the trouble of delivery at a regular station are at the risk of the consignor until the goods are put upon the train.[4]

(d) Incomplete Consignment and Retention of Control.—Where something remains undone by the consignor to complete the consignment, or where the circumstances show his retention of the control over the goods, the carrier's liability is not that of a common carrier.[5] Where goods are consigned with instructions

42 Tex. 467; O'Bannon v. Southern Express Co., 51 Ala. 481; Brown v. Atlanta & C. Air-Line Co., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 479. And see Pickford v. Grand Junction R. Co., 12 M. & W. 766; Lovette v. Hobbs, 2 Show. 127; Leigh v. Smith, 1 Carr. & Payne, 640; Marquette, etc.. R. Co. v. Kirkwood, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 85.

1. In Fort Worth, etc., R. v. Riley, 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 49. But in Texas a statute provides that the carrier's liability begins from the signing of the bill of lading. See infra, INCOMPLETE CONSIGNMENT, etc.

2. Grosvenor v. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 34. But see Rogers v. Railroad Co., 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 269; s. c., 56 N. Y. 620; s. c., 49 N. Y. 655; Ouimit v. Henshaw, 35 Vt. 605.

3. In Montgomery, etc.. R. v. Kolb, 73 Ala. 396; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 512, the carrier was held liable as a common carrier for goods deposited alongside of a platform in its yard, although no receipt was given for such goods, when common custom of company's servants was to consider this a delivery. The fact that the rules of company required a receipt to be given, and that knowledge of the custom was not traced to superintendent of company, made no difference.

4. Wells v. Railroad, 6 Jones (N.Car.), Law, 47.

A deposit of goods upon a platform or in the warehouse of a company, with its agent's permission, to await a permit from military authorities then in control, and also until cars could be had to transport them, imposes upon a carrier only the liability of a warehouseman. Though it was observed that additional liability might have been imposed by the agent undertaking to transport them unconditionally or by his giving a shipping receipt. Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Ashmead, 58 Ill. 487; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. McClellan, 54 Ill. 58; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Hornberger, 77 Ill. 457.

5. Incomplete Consignment and Retention of Control.—Where the circumstances show a retention of control of the goods by the consignor, or that something remained undone by him to complete the delivery, the carrier's liability is not that of a common carrier. Barron v. Eldredge. 100 Mass. 455; Watts v. Boston, etc., R., 106 Mass. 467; Nichols v. Smith, 115 Mass. 332; White v. Winnissimmet Co.,7 Cush. (Mass.) 155; Clark v. Burns, 118 Mass. 275; Judson v. Western R., 4 Allen (Mass.), 520; Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 32 N. H. 71; Reed v. Philadelphia, etc., R., 3 Houst. (Del.) 176; Orange Co. Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. (N.Y.) 85; Tower v. Utica, etc ,R., 7 Hill (N. Y.), 47: Blanchard v. Isaacs, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 388; Cohen v. Frost, 2 to await further orders from the consignor before carriage, the carrier incurs, at the utmost, the liability of a warehouseman.[1]

Duer (N. Y.), 335; Rogers v. Wheeler, 52 N. Y. 262; O'Neil v. New York Central, etc., R., 60 N. Y. 138; Gilbert v. New York Central, etc., R., 4 Hun (N. Y.). 378; McDonald v. Western, etc., R., 34 N. Y. 497; Cohen v. Hume, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 439; Michigan, etc., R. v. Schurtz, 7 Mich. 515; Gleason v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 32 Wis. 85; Lawrence v. W. & St. P. R., 15 Minn. 390; St. Louis, etc., R. v. Montgomery, 39 Ill. 335; Pittsburg, etc., R. v. Barrett, 36 Ohio St. 448; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 256. Compare Tower v. Utica, etc., R., 7 Hill (N. Y.), 47; Ford v. Mitchell, 21 Ind. 54; Trowbridge v Chapin, 23 Conn. 595; Michaels v. New York, etc., R., 30 N. Y. 564; Gatterne v. Adams, 12 C. B. N. S. 560; Boys v. Pink, 8 Car. & P. 361; Syms v. Chaplin, 5 A. & E. 634; Miles v. Cattle, 6 Bing. 743; East India Co. v. Pullen, 1 Stra. 690; Brind v. Dale, 8 Car. & P. 207.

In Hart v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 59, the owner of certain property, by agreement with the carrier, undertook to care for it in the course of transportation. The property was destroyed through the act of the owner. Sec. 1308 of the Code of Iowa provides that "no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt any corporation engaged in transportation of persons or property by railway from liability of common carrier." Held, first, that the carrier was not liable for the loss, although the agreement between the owner and carrier may have been in violation of the above section. Second, that a railroad company is not liable for the injury or destruction of property in the course of transportation when the injury is occasioned by the owner's own act, and whether the act of the owner which caused the injury amounted to negligence or not, is immaterial. Reed, J., observes: "The carrier is held to be an insurer of the safety of the property while he has it in possession as a carrier. His undertaking for the care and safety of the property arises by implication of law out of the contract for its carriage. The rule which holds him to be an insurer of the property is founded upon considerations of public policy. The reason of the rule is that as the carrier ordinarily has the absolute possession and control of the property while it is in course of shipment, he has the most tempting opportunities for embezzlement or for fraudulent collusion with others. If it is lost or destroyed while in his custody, the policy of the law therefore imposes the loss upon him. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; Forward v. Pittard, 1 Durn. & E. 27; Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217; Thomas v. R. Co., 10 Metc. (Mass.) 472; Roberts v. Turner, 12 Johns. (N.Y.) 232; Moses v. R. Co., 24 N. H. 71; Rixford v. Smith, 52 N. H. 355. His undertaking for the safety of the property, however, is not absolute. He has never been held to be an insurer against injuries occasioned by the act of God or the public enemy, and there is no reason why he should be; and it is equally clear, we think, that there is no consideration of policy which demands that he should be held to account to the owner for an injury which is occasioned by the owner's own act, and whether the act of the owner by which the injury was caused amounted to negligence is immaterial also. If the immediate cause of the loss was the act of the owner, as between the parties, absolute justice demands that the loss should fall upon him rather than upon the one who has been guilty of no wrong, and it can make no difference that the act cannot be said to be either wrongful or negligent. If, then, the fire which occasioned the loss in question was ignited by the lantern which plaintiff's servant, by his direction, took into the car, and which at the time was in the exclusive control and care of the servant, defendant is not liable, and the question whether the servant handled it carefully or otherwise is not material. This view is abundantly sustained by the authorities. See Hutch. Carr., § 216, and cases cited in the note; also Lawson Carr. §§ 19, 23."

1. In Little Rock, etc., R. v. Hunter, 42 Ark. 200; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 527, it was held that a railroad company is liable as a common carrier when goods are delivered to and accepted by it for immediate transportation in the usual course of business. If they are to await further orders from the shipper before carriage, it incurs, at the utmost, the liability of a warehouseman. When goods are left with a railroad company's agent at their depot to be kept until the owner should be prepared to proceed on his journey, and to be returned on request if he should not go, then the company becomes a mere gratuitous bailee, provided the agent can bind it at all by

The giving of a bill of lading, entry of goods upon the freight-list, etc., are not essential to a consignment unless by statute.[1]

In Texas a statute provides "that the trip or voyage shall be considered as having commenced from the time of signing of the bill of lading, and the liability of common carrier shall attach as at common law from and after such signing." In that State it is accordingly held that the liability of the common carrier for freight does not attach until a receipt or a bill of lading for the same has been given by the carrier; and that a custom of the carrier to receive freight on its platform without giving a bill of lading cannot be pleaded to change or modify the plain provisions of the statute.[2]

The undertaking by the carrier to transport the property received by him to its destination may be implied from the circumstances under which it comes into his possession. In that case he is charged with the same responsibility for its safety as though his obligation to transport it was created by express agreement.[3]

(e) Marking Goods.—The consignor is charged with the duty of seeing to it that the goods consigned are properly marked, and cannot hold the carrier responsible in such case for errors.[4]

(f) Presumption from Consignment.—Where goods are consigned to a consignee he must be regarded by the carrier as the prima-facie owner unless the carrier has notice that the right of the consignee to receive the goods is disputed.[5] Where goods the reception of goods under such circumstances. See also cases cited in preceding note.

1. Parker v. Great Western R., 7 Man. & G. 253; Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., 2 Story C. C. 16; Shelton v. Merchants' Desp. Transp. Co., 4 Jones & Sp. (N. Y.) 527; Landes v. Pacific R., 50 Mo. 346.

2. Missouri Pacific, etc., R. v. Douglass & Sons, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 98.

In Merritt v. Earle, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 38; s. c., affirmed, 29 N. Y. 115, it was held that a contract for the transportation of property on a steamboat, followed by delivery to carrier on the same dav. is not void because made on Sunday, and the carrier could not claim exemption from liability because of these facts.

3. In Aiken v. Chicago, etc., R., 25 Am & Eng. R. R. Cas. 377, it was held that the undertaking by the carrier to transport the property received by him to its destination may be implied from the circumstances under which it comes into his possession, and in that case he is charged with the same responsibility for its safety as though his obligation to transport it was created by express agreement.

4. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 136; The Huntress, Davies, 83; Bradley v. Dunipace, 1 H. & C. 521; 7 H. & N. 200. Compare Finn v. Western, etc., R., 100 Mass. 283; Kreuder v. Woolcott, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 223; Rome, etc., R. v. Sullivan, 25 Ga. 228.

In McGowan v. Wilmington, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 64, where a bill of lading provides against any liability of the carrier for "wrong carriage or wrong delivery of goods that are marked with the initials, unnumbered or imperfectly marked," and it is not a part of the plaintiff's complaint that the rice was wrongly carried or wrongly delivered, and no defence is set up that the goods were not marked with the proper directions, nor any imperfection in that respect brought to the attention of the plaintiff, but the sole ground of action is that the goods were not shipped at all, the only question at issue is whether the goods were shipped or not.

5. Presumption from Consignment.—Brower v. Peabody, 13 N. Y. 121; Angle v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 9 Iowa, 487; are delivered to a common carrier by the vendor in pursuance of an order for delivery to the buyer, the consignment to the carrier passes the property.[1] The legal presumption is that, upon the delivery of the goods by the consignor to a common carrier, the title thereto vests in the consignee.[2]

4. NOTICES LIMITING LIABILITY.—Closely allied to the subject of the declaration of the value of goods consigned, is that of notices limiting liability. Whether a carrier by a public notice stipulating that he will not assume responsibility for articles of a value beyond a specified sum unless their value be declared at the time of shipment, and an increased charge be paid, is a proper and reasonable limitation of his common-law liability as an insurer, is the first question; whether the carrier by the publication of a notice which contains a limitation upon his common-law liability, where such notice is not confined to the question of the value of the articles, but is, in effect, an exoneration of the carrier from liability for negligence, can thereby screen himself, is the second question.

Notices to limit the carrier's liability for goods beyond a certain value were considered in many early English cases. A review of these, with the comments of the judges will be found in the notes.[3] A learned commentator, whose remarks have frequently

Webb v. Winter, 1 Cal. 417; Glidden v. Lucas, 7 Cal. 26; Decan v. Shipper, 35 Pa. St. 329; Green v. Clark, 12 N.Y. 343; Dows v. Greene, 24 N. Y. 638; Dows v. Perrin, 16 N. Y. 325; Fitzhugh v. Wiman, 9 N. Y. 559; Rowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 308; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Bangs, 102 Mass. 291; Foster v. Roper, 111 Mass. 10; Upton v. Sturbridge Mills, 111 Mass. 446; Harrison v. Hixson, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 226; Gurney v. Behrend, 3 Ellis & B. 622; Miner v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 32 Conn. 91; Mosely v. Lord, 2 Conn. 389; Cox v. Harden, 4 East, 211.

1. Wait v. Baker, 2 Ex. 1; Dawes v. Peck, 8 T. R. 330; Dutton v. Solomonson, 3 B. & P. 582; London, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 7 H. & N. 400; Dunlop v. Lambert, 6 Cl. & Fin. 600; Johnson v. Stoddard, 100 Mass. 306; Stanton v. Eager, 16 Pick. 367; Magruder v. Gage, 33 Md. 344; Waldron v. Romaine, 22 N. Y. 368; Rodgers v. Phillips, 40 N.Y. 519; Garland v. Lane, 46 N. H. 245; Arnold v. Prout, 51 N. H. 587; Griffith v. Ingledew, 6 Serg. & Rawle (Pa), 429; Cross v. O'Donnell, 44 N. Y. 661; Watkins v. Paine, 57 Ga. 50; Ranny v. Higby, 5 Wis. 62; Putnam v. Tillotson, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 517; Whitcomb v. Whitney, 24 Mich. 486; Terry v. Wheeler, 25 N. Y. 520; Hyde v. Lathrop, 2 Abb. (N.Y.) App. Dec. 436; South-Western Freight Co. v. Stanard, 44 Mo. 71; Dexter v. Norton, 55 Barb. (N.Y.) 272; Bradley v. Wheeler, 44 N. Y. 495; Dyer v. Libby, 61 Me. 45.

2 Pennsylvania Co. v. Holderman, 69 Ind. 18; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 285.

3. The cases usually cited as originating the doctrine are: Southcote's Case, 4 Coke, 84; Morse v. Slue, 1 Ventris, 238; Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298; Forward v. Pittard, 1 T. R. 27; Smith v. Horne, 8 Taunt. 144.

In Nicholson v. Willan, 5 East. 507, the carrier had posted a notice upon a board in his office that he would not be liable for goods beyond the value of £5, unless insured and paid for at the time of consignment, and unless its value should be demanded within one month after damage had occurred. The plaintiff knew of such notice, and consigned a package containing £58 without giving information of its value. Upon proof of loss the jury awarded him £5, but Lord Ellenborough refused him even this amount, and said: "Considering the length of time during which and the extent and universality in which the practice of making such special acceptances of goods for carriage by land and water has now prevailed in this kingdom, under the observation and with the allowance of courts of justice, and with the sanction and countenance of the legislature itself, which is known to have rejected a bill brought in for the purpose of narrowing the carrier's responsibility in certain cases, on the ground that such a measure being unnecessary, inasmuch as carriers were deemed fully competent to limit their own responsibility in all cases by special contract; considering also that there is no case to be met with in the books in which the right of the carrier thus to limit his own responsibility by special contract has ever been by express decision denied, we cannot do otherwise than sustain such right, however liable to abuse and productive of inconvenience it may be, leaving to the legislature, if it shall think fit, to apply such remedy hereafter as the evil may require."

In Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217, Ch. J. Best observes: "As the law makes the carrier an insurer, and as the goods he carries may be injured or destroyed by many accidents, against which no care on the part of the carrier can protect them, he is as much entitled to be paid a premium for his insurance of their delivery at the place of destination, as for the labor and expense of carrying them there. Indeed, besides the risk that he runs, his attention becomes more anxious, and his journey more expensive, in proportion to the value of his load. If he has things of great value contained in such small packages as to be the objects of theft or embezzlement, a strong and more vigilant guard is required than when he carries articles not easily removed, and which offer less temptations to dishonesty. He must take what is offered to him to carry to the place to which he undertakes to convey goods, if he has room for it in his carriage. The loss of one single package might ruin him. By means of negotiable bills, immense value is now compressed into a very small compass. Parcels containing these bills are continually sent by common carriers. As the law compels carriers to undertake for the security of what they carry, it would be most unjust if it did not afford them the means of knowing the extent of their risk. Other insurers, whether they divide the risk, which they generally do, amongst several different persons, or one undertakes for the insurance of the whole, always have the amount of what they are to answer for specified in the policy of insurance."

In Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298, the carrier had given notice by advertisement and handbills that he would not be answerable for money, jewels, or other valuables, unless he had notice of them. The consignor, who was proved to have been cognizant of this limitation of liability, concealed £100 in some hay in an old nail-bag. The bag and hay were carried safely, but the money was lost. The plaintiff was not permitted to recover. Yates, J., considered the notice equivalent to a special acceptance, and Aston, J., hinted at the same ground. Lord Mansfield made no distinct reference to the question of notice, but said: "The party undertaking ought to be apprised what it is that he undertakes, and then he will or at least may take proper care. But he ought not to be answerable where he is deceived. Here he was deceived."

In Batson v. Donovan, 4 Barn. & Ald. 21, the carrier had given notice that he would not be liable for parcels of value unless entered and paid for accordingly. The consignor delivered for shipment a box containing bills and bank notes of the value of £4072, but he was not asked and did not disclose the value of the articles. The box was stolen, and in an action by the consignor against the carrier, the jury found for the defendant upon the question as to whether the facts constituted fair dealing with the carrier. The judges, with the exception of Best, C. J., decided the effect of the notice by the carrier to be to prevent the necessity for a particular inquiry by him as to value, the inference being, in such a case, that the consignor who fails to pay for the extraordinary value impliedly holds out the goods as articles of ordinary value. Under such circumstances the contract itself becomes a nullity. Bayley, J., observed: "The risk upon a parcel of great value is greater than that upon a small one. The value is a temptation to thieves to make attempts which, but for that value, they would not make. The omission, therefore, to apprise the coach proprietor of the value operates in two ways. It deprives the proprietors of the extra compensation they ought to have, and it prevents them from taking that extraordinary caution which, upon a parcel of extraordinary value, they naturally would take. The value is an ingredient to be taken into consideration, because that may be gross negligence in the case of a parcel of large value which would be ordinary care in the case of a parcel of small value. The plaintiffs having pre-been quoted with approval, has shown that there seems to be only one point to which legitimately notices of carriers could be admitted, which is the regulation of the consideration for risk. In other words, that the carrier may lawfully stipulate by public notice that his insurance must be properly compensated, and the value of what he undertakes to carry must be declared, but that in other respects a notice cannot serve to release him from liability for negligence.[1] In England what was practically this result vented this extra care being taken by the carrier, should bear the loss." Best, C. J., considered that when the carrier had given notice of the limited liability which he would assume in such cases, he was bound to inquire the value of the consignment, but that the owner was not bound to disclose the value unless asked. He distinguished the case from Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298, and declared that a carrier who has given no notice is an insurer. If the carrier had given no notice and did not inquire the value, the consignor was not bound to say a syllable as to the value of the goods. The effect of such a notice as that in this case was to prevent the necessity of a particular inquiry in each case; its effect was not to limit the carrier's responsibility in case of misfeasance or negligence. The carrier having given the notice, was no longer an insurer of parcels of value, but was still liable for negligence or misfeasance even if their value be not declared. Silence did not amount to fraud, "and to this opinion," says Angell, "he has steadily adhered, and so strenuously, that in one case (Brooke v. Pickwick, 4 Bing. 218) he said he must continue to retain his opinion till the twelve judges decided he was wrong." Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 266 citing Sleat v. Fagg, 5 B. & Ald. 342; Butt v. Great Western R., 11 C. B. 140; 7 Eng. L. & Eq. 443; Garnett v. Willan, 5 B. & Ald. 53; Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217; Bignold v. Waterhouse, 1 Maule & S. 255.

Further reviews of the English cases may be found in Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234; Cole v. Goodwin, 19 Wend. 251; New York Cent., etc., R. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357; Sager v. Railroad, 31 Me. 228.

1. One carrier frees himself from responsibility for fire. Maving v. Todd, 1 Stark. 79. Another from the common responsibility of the contract for negligence. Leeson v. Holt, 1 Stark. 186. One man is bound by a notice which has appeared in a newspaper that he is accustomed to read. Leeson v. Holt, 1 Stark. 186. Another person because a large board was stuck up in his office. Clark v Gray, 4 Esp. 177. Another is freed from the effect of the notice in the office because handbills were circulated of a different import Cobden v. Bolton, 2 Camp. 108. "Then, it is said, what if he cannot read? or if he does not go himself, but sends a porter, and he cannot read? or, what if he be blind and cannot see the placard? and thus difficulties multiply; the courts are filled with questions, and the public left in uncertainty." 1 Bell's Com. 382.

The same writer has pointed out the true foundation and limit of the carrier's limitation of liability by notice, and his remarks are frequently quoted with approval. "The unhappy consequences of this doctrine are to be ascribed, as it would seem, to a wrong bias unfortunately admitted in the progress of its establishment from not keeping a steady eye upon the principles which ought to have regulated the practice of giving notices. There seems to be only one point to which, legitimately, notices of carriers could be admitted, viz., the regulation of the consideration for risk. Saving always the power of making an express contract, the effect of mere notice ought justly to be restricted to this point; as to which alone it is competent for a carrier to refuse employment. Had this been attended to, the law on this subject would have been conformable to the general system of jurisprudence, and a sort of legislative power never would have been assumed by common carriers. Any exorbitancy of charge would at once have been brought to a true standard by judicial determination; while the responsibilities of the carrier, under the common law of his contract, and on the principles of public policy, would have remained untouched but by positive agreement in each individual." 1 Bell's Com. 382; approved in Southern Exp. Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635.

It is probable that the effect of these and other decisions involving the carrier's right to limit his common-law liability by contract was to permit him to was accomplished by statute. The Carrier's Act[1] and the Railway and Canal Traffic Act[2] brought about what was substantially a return to the rules of the common law. The provisions of the former regarding the declaration of the value of specific articles have been already set forth.[3] The latter[4] contains, inter alia, the following provisions: It renders the carrier liable for the loss of or injury to animals and goods by the neglect or default of the company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice, condition, or declaration made and given by such company contrary thereto, or in any wise limiting such liability; and declares such notices, conditions, or declarations to be null and void. The carrier, however, is permitted to make such conditions with respect to the receiving, forwarding, and delivering what is consigned, as may be construed by the courts to be just and reasonable.

(a) In England.—It is accordingly accepted as the settled law of England, that no general notice given by the carrier, however published, will limit his liability.[5]

(b) In Canada.—In Canada, under statutes modelled upon the English, and containing substantially the same provisions, it is settled that notices, conditions, or declarations where the damages arises from any negligence or omission of the carrier or his servants are ineffectual to limit his liability.[6] provide by special contract against liability even for gross negligence. Carr v. Lancashire R., 7 Exch. 704; Austin v. Manchester R., 10 C. B. 454; Great Northern R. v. Morville, 21 Law Jour. N. S. Q. B. 319; York R. v. Crisp, 14 C. B 527; Hughes v. Great Western, etc., R., 14 C. B. 637; Slim v. Great Northern, etc., R., 14 C. B. 647; Chippendale v. Lancashire, etc., R., 21 Law Jour. N. S. Q. B. 22; Austin v. Manchester R., 16 Q. B. 600; Shaw v. York R., 13 Q. B. 547.

1. The Carriers Act (11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV. c. 68), to which attention has been called above (supra, DECLARATION OF VALUE), restored to some extent the operation of the common law. Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N.Y.) 234; Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 554; Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357.

2. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31.

3. See supra, this title, DECLARATION OF VALUE.

4. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act (1854), 17 and 18 Vict. cap. 31, contains, inter alia, the following provisions: Every such company as aforesaid shall be liable for the loss of or for any injury done to animals and goods by the neglect or default of the company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice, condition, or declaration made and given by such company contrary thereto, or in anywise limiting such liability; every such notice, condition, or declaration being hereby declared to be null and void. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the said companies from making such conditions with respect to the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of any of the said animals, articles, goods or things as shall be adjudged by the court or judge before whom any question relating thereto shall be tried, to be just and reasonable. The act goes on to provide that the carrier shall not be liable beyond a limited amount in certain cases unless the value is declared and extra payment made by the consignor. Proof of the value is placed upon the person claiming compensation. No special contract is binding unless signed by the consignor or his representative. A final proviso declares that nothing contained in the act shall alter or affect the rights, privileges, or liabilities of any such company under the Carriers Act, with respect to articles of the descriptions mentioned in the said act.

5. Peik v. North Staffordshire R., 52 L. J. Q. B. 241; 10 H. L. C. 473; Cohen v. South-Eastern R., 46 L. J. Ex. 417; L. R. 2 Exch. Div. 253; Doolan v. Midland R., L. R. 2 H. L. 792; 25 W. R. 882. Compare Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 54; Bodenham v. Bennett, 4 Price, 31; Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. 461; Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 646.

6. Grand Trunk R. v. Vogel, 11 Supreme Court of Canada, 612; s. c., 27

(c) In the United States.—In the United States it is the generally accepted doctrine that the carrier may limit his liability by public notice of a reasonable requisition as to manner of consignment and entry of goods, their character, their value, and his own charges.[1] It has also been held that a notice by the carrier stipulating that he shall not be liable for any loss unless the claim therefor shall be made in writing at his office within a limited time after the date of the contract is reasonable and valid.[2] The

Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 18. See also, Fitzgerald v. Grand Trunk R., 4 Ontario App. 601; s. c., 5 Supreme Court of Canada, 209.

1. 2 Greenleaf on Evidence, sec. 215; Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 166; Fibel v. Livingston, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 179; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 62 N. Y. 35; Oppenheimer v. U. S. Exp. Co., 69 Ill. 62; Boorman v. Express Co., 21 Wis. 152; Kallman v. Express Co., 3 Kans. 205; Brehone v. Adams Exp. Co., 25 Md. 328; Snider v. Adams Exp. Co., 63 Mo. 376; Ketchum v. Am. Exp. Co., 52 Mo. 390; Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349; McMillan v. Michigan, etc., R., 16 Mich. 79; Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 24 N. H. 71; Farmers' Bank v. Champlain Transp. Co., 23 Vt. 186; Lawrence v. New York, etc., R., 36 Conn. 63; Judson v. Western R., 6 Allen (Mass.), 485; Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatchf. C. C. 64; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344.

In Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 166, the receipt for a trunk read as follows: "In no event shall the holder hereof demand beyond the sum of fifty dollars, at which the article forwarded is hereby valued, unless herein otherwise expressed or unless specially insured by him and so specified in this receipt, which insurance shall constitute the limit of the liability of the Adams Express Company." The court observes: "The plaintiff in this case must be assumed to have paid freight on the trunk in question and its contents, worth $467, at the rate prescribed for an article not exceeding fifty dollars in value. He was then willing and agreed to assume all risks for the excess in value, and to relieve the company from all liability on account thereof beyond that sum. He can with no more propriety or justice claim remuneration therefor than the company could demand additional freight therefor."

2. Provision for Thirty Days' Notice Construed.—The Southern Express Co. received for carriage a package of money, for which it gave a receipt in which was the following stipulation: "This company is not liable in any manner, or to any extent, for any loss, damage, or detention of such package or of its contents, or of any portion thereof, occasioned by the acts of God, the public enemy, mobs, riots, and other casualties mentioned, unless specially insured by this company, and so specified in this receipt. In no event is this company to be liable for a greater sum than that above mentioned, nor shall it be liable for any such loss unless the claim therefor shall be made in writing at this office within thirty days from this date." A loss of $200 occurred, and suit was brought to collect this deficit. No notice of the loss was given to the company until six or seven months after the date of the receipt. The court charged the jury that the stipulation in the receipt for thirty days' notice of the loss need not be considered by them, because that stipulation applied only to the case of a loss by the act of God, or of a mob, or the other specified causes of exception for which defendant was not to be liable unless it was so specified in the contract. This was held erroneous; that the words "such loss" have reference to the loss of the package of money, and not to the means by which the loss was occasioned. The court say: "We think the obvious construction of the contract is that the company is not to be liable for loss, damage, etc., by the act of God, by mobs, riots, etc., unless it expressly undertakes to be so liable in the receipt, and no such undertaking was entered into in this case; and, further, that for loss, damage, or detention by means other than those specially mentioned as exonerating the company from liability, the company is entitled to thirty days' notice from the date of contract, of such loss, by the express terms of said contract." Southern Exp. Co. v. Glenn, 1 S. W. Repr. 102. See also Nicholson v. Willan, 5 East, 507; Lewis v. Railway, 5 H. & N. 867; Express Co. v. Caldwell, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 264; Rice v. Railroad, 63 Mo. 314; U. S. Exp. Co. v. Harris, 51 Ind. 127; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 551; Black v. Wabash, etc., R., 111 Ill. 351; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 388. Compare Adams Exp. Co. v. Reagan, 29 Ind. 21.

weight of authority in the various States is clearly to the effect, however, that the carrier cannot limit his liability for negligence by notice. The law upon the subject in the various States is as follows: In Alabama[1] carriers cannot limit their liability by notice in a receipt unless assented to by the consignor. To the same effect is the law of Connecticut.[2] In Illinois[3] notices by advertisement, conditions printed on the back of a bill of lading, receipt ticket, or other voucher of the carrier, are ineffectual to limit his liability. In Indiana,[4] Kentucky,[5] and Louisiana[6] it is settled that the carrier cannot limit his liability by notice. In Maine[7] the common-law liability of the carrier may be restricted by notice, but not unless the consignor has knowledge of the notice, and either expressly or impliedly assents thereto. This is also the law of New Hampshire.[8] In Michigan[9] and Mississippi[10] the carrier cannot limit his liability by notice. In New York[11] the carrier cannot screen himself by notice whether brought home to the consignor or not. It is said that notice is no evidence of assent on the part of the consignor, and he has a right to repose on the common-law liability of the carrier who cannot relieve himself from such liability by any act of his own. In North Carolina,[12] although a general notice of "baggage at owner's risk" will not avail the carrier, he may by special notice, brought to the knowledge of

1. Alabama.—Southern Exp. Co. v. Caperton, 44 Ala. 101; Southern Exp. Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; Southern Exp. Co. v. Armstead, 50 Ala. 350; Steele v. Townsend, 37 Ala. 247.

"At owner's risk" only affects carrier's liability as an insurer. Mobile, etc., R. v. Jarboe, 41 Ala. 644.

2. Connecticut.—Peck v. Weeks, 34 Conn. 145; Hale v. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co., 15 Conn. 539; Derwoort v. Loomer, 21 Conn. 245.

3. Illinois.—Western Transp. Co. v. Newhall, 24 Ill. 466; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Frankenberg, 54 Ill. 88.

In Western Transp. Co. v. Newhall, 24 Ill. 466, the court observes: "He may qualify his liability by a general notice to all who employ him of any reasonable requisition to be observed on their part in regard to the manner of delivery and entry of parcels, and the information to be given him of their contents, the rates of freight, and the like; as, for example, that he will not be responsible for goods above the value of a certain sum unless they are entered as such and paid for accordingly." Compare Adams Exp. Co. v. Stettaners, 61 Ill. 184; Oppenheimer v. United States Exp. Co., 69 Ill. 62; Boskowitz v. Adams Exp. Co., 9 Cent. L. J. 389 (1879), dissenting opinion of Sheldon, J.

4. Indiana.—Evansville, etc., R. v. Young, 28 Ind. 516; Indianapolis, etc., R. v. Cox, 29 Ind. 360.

5. Kentucky.—Adams Exp. Co. v. Nock, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 562; Louisville, etc., R. v. Hedger, 9 Bush (Ky.), 645.

6. Louisiana—Baldwin v. Collins, 9 Rob. (La.) 468; Roberts v. Riley, 15 La. Ann. 103; New Orleans Mut. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, etc., R., 20 La. Ann. 302; Simon v. The Fung Shuey, 21 La. Ann. 363.

7. Maine.—Bean v. Green, 12 Me. 422; Sager v. Portsmouth, etc., R., 31 Me. 228; Fillebrown v. Grand Trunk R., 55 Me. 462; Willis v. Grand Trunk R., 62 Me. 488; Little v. Boston, etc., R., 66 Me. 239.

8. New Hampshire.—Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 24 N. H. 71. See also Bennett v. Dutton, 10 N. H. 481.

9. Michigan.—American Transp. Co. v. Moore, 5 Mich. 368; McMillan v. Michigan, etc., R., 16 Mich. 79.

10. Mississippi.—Mobile, etc., R. v. Weiner, 49 Miss. 725.

11. New York.—Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. 234; Cole v. Goodwin, 19 Wend. 251; Camden, etc., Transp. Co. v. Belknap, 21 Wend. 354; Rawson v. Pennsylvania R., 48 N. Y. 212; Blossom v. Dodd, 43 N. Y. 264.

12. North Carolina.—Williams v. Branson, 1 Murphey, 417; Smith v. North Carolina, etc., R. 64 N. C. 235. Compare Capehart v. Seaboard, etc., R., 77 N. Car. 355.

the owner, reasonably qualify his liability for the loss of particularly perishable or unusually valuable articles. In Ohio [1] the carrier cannot restrict his liability by notice, verbal, written, or printed, even when brought to the knowledge of the consignor. In Tennessee [2] the carrier cannot limit his liability at common law by a general notice. In Texas [3] a statute prevents the carrier from limiting or restricting his liability as it exists at common law by any general or special notice, or by inserting explanations in the bill of lading or memorandum given upon the receipt of the goods for transportation, or in any other manner whatever. And no special agreement made in contravention of the foregoing is held valid. In Vermont [4] the carrier cannot restrict his liability by general notice, unless clearly proved to have been assented to by the employer. In the United States courts [5] it is the settled doctrine that the carrier cannot limit his liability by notice. And the acceptance by a consignor without objection of a receipt containing notice of exemptions printed on its back does not amount to such a contract as under the rule here established is required. In Massachusetts [6] the rule is that the carrier may limit his responsibility for property entrusted to him by notice containing reasonable and suitable restrictions, if brought home to the owner of the goods delivered for transportation, and assented to clearly and

1. Ohio.—Davidson v. Graham, 2 Ohio St. 131. See Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indianapolis, etc., R., 1 Disney, 480; Jones v. Voorhees, 10 Ohio, 145.

In Gaines v. Union Transp. Co., 28 Ohio St. 418, Johnson, J., declares the following to be the settled law in that State: "That a special exception of the liability of a common carrier for any loss which may arise from damage by fire happening without his neglect or fault, may be lawfully created by special contract between the parties, though it cannot be made by general notice known or unknown to the party engaging the services of the common carrier. Davidson v. Graham, 2 Ohio St. 131; Graham & Co. v. Davis & Co., 4 Ohio St. 362; Welsh v. Pittsburgh, etc., R., 10 Ohio St. 65; Cincinnati, etc., R. v. Pontius, 19 Ohio St. 221."

2. Tennessee.—Walker v. Skipwith, Meigs, 502.

3. Texas.—A statute provides "that railroad companies and other common carriers of goods, wares, and merchandise for hire, within this State, on land, or in boats or vessels on the waters entirely within the body of this State, shall not limit or restrict their liability, as it exists at common law, by any general or special notice, nor by inserting exceptions in the bill of lading or memorandum given upon the receipt of the goods for transportation, nor in any other manner whatever; and no special agreement made in contravention of the foregoing provisions of this section shall be valid." Paschal's Digest, art. 4253.

4. Vermont.—Farmers', etc., Bank v. Champlain Transp. Co., 18 Vt. 131; s. c., 23 Vt. 186; Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R., 26 Vt. 247; Blumenthal v. Brainerd, 38 Vt. 402; Mann v. Birchard, 40 Vt. 326.

5. United States Court.—Railroad Co. v. Manufacturing Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 318; Ayres v. Western Co., 14 Blatchf. C. C. 9; The Pacific, 1 Deady C. C. 17; The May Queen, 1 Newb. C. C. 465.

In New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344, the court observes: "We lay out of the case the notices published by the respondents seeking to limit their responsibility, because the carrier cannot in this way exonerate himself from duties which the law has annexed to his employment."

6. Massachusetts.—In Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co., 97 Mass. 124, the court remarks: "It is no longer open to controversy in this State that a common carrier may limit his responsibility for property intrusted to him by a notice containing reasonable and suitable restrictions, if brought home to the owner of the goods delivered for transportation, and assented to clearly and unequivocally by unequivocally by him. In Pennsylvania[1] the carrier may limit his liability by a clear and explicit general notice brought home to the consignor. In Maryland[2] and New Jersey[3] the question has arisen, but decision upon it was avoided. In South Carolina[4] it is unsettled.

5. CONTRACTS LIMITING LIABILITY.—Whether the common carrier's contract is "just and reasonable" in the eyes of the law may be said to be the hinge upon which it turns. This result has been reached in England after a long and determined contest between the carrier who has strenuously resisted the burden of his common-law responsibility and his employer, who has with equal earnestness urged that this burden should not be lightened. It must be conceded that the exceptional measure of responsibility imposed upon common carriers, as contrasted with other bailees, cannot find a satisfactory reason for existence in the principle which gave it birth, viz.: imperfect police, imperfect protection from the government, and frequent losses by robbery. Founded alone upon this basis the rule must have died. The latest cases, writers and statutes make it evident, however, that whatever part the principle stare decisis may have played, the present development of the law finds its explanation in the public nature of the carrier's employment, and in his public character as a corporation. This is clearly illustrated by the long line of cases in which his contracts have been construed, and in the statutes by which they have been regulated. In one of the leading American cases, Railroad Co. v. Lockwood,[5] the able and elaborate opinion of Mr. Justice Bradley points out that it was for the reason that the limitations of liability first introduced by common carriers into their notices and contracts were just and reasonable that the courts sustained them. Limitations against liability for acts of God and the public enemy, for valuable packages contained in small compass, for perishable articles, for live animals liable to become frightened and unruly and thus to injure themselves, were just and reasonable, and were therefore sustained. For what is, in effect, precisely the same him." See Thomas v. Boston R., 10 Met. 499; Judson v. Western R., 6 Allen, 486; Perry v Thompson, 98 Mass. 249; Gott v. Dinsmore, 111 Mass. 45.

1. Pennsylvania.—Beckman v. Shouse, 5 Rawle, 179; Bingham v. Rogers, 6 W. & S. 495; Camden, etc., R. v. Baldauf, 16 Pa. St. 67; Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. St. 479; Verner v. Sweitzer, 32 Pa. St. 208; Pennsylvania R. v. Schwarzenberger, 45 Pa. St. 208; Farnham v. Camden, etc., R., 55 Pa. St. 53.

In Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. St. 479, Bell, J., observes: "The expediency of recognizing in him (the carrier) a right to do so by general notice, such as was given here, has been strongly and justly questioned, and in some of our sister States altogether denied. Were the question an open one in Pennsylvania, I should, for one, unhesitatingly follow them in repudiating a principle which places the bailor absolutely at the mercy of the carrier, whom, in the vast majority of cases, he cannot but choose to employ."

2. Maryland.—Barney v. Prentiss, 4 H. & J. 317; Brehme v. Adams Exp. Co., 28 Md. 328. But see Baltimore, etc., R. v. Brady, 32 Md. 333.

3. New Jersey.—Gibbons v. Wade, 8 N. J. Law, 255.

4. South Carolina.—Levy v. Southern Exp. Co., 4 S. Car. 234; Patton v. Magrath, Dudl. 159.

5. Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357.

reason the limitations upon the common carrier's right to contract are imposed. A mere inequality in the position of a shipper who wishes his goods transported and the carrier who monopolizes the best and perhaps the only outlet, is a matter which, it has been said, in no way affects the public morals or conflicts with the public interests, and does not justify a court or legislature in saying that the parties may not themselves limit the precise extent of their respective risks and liabilities.[1] But that there are well settled restrictions both in England and the United States upon the carrier's freedom to contract can be satisfactorily explained upon the ground that his duties are public, that the nature of those duties places him in a position where he can take an undue advantage of the shipper, and that his character as a corporation—usually powerful and wealthy—serves to add new strength to his position, but, at the same time, makes him subject to legislative and judicial control to prevent an abuse of his powers and privileges.[2]

The cases which will show the historical development of the English law have already been cited, and many of them abstracted, under prior subdivisions of this title. The particular terms of the carrier's contracts and their effect will be found treated under another title.[3] The exact present status of the English law seems to have been occasionally misunderstood and misstated. The effect of the Carriers Act[4] has been already noted. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act,[5] and subsequent statutes extending its operations, under certain circumstances, to sea transit, declared that special contracts limiting the carrier's liability must be "just and reasonable" in order to be valid. These words have been frequently construed, and the deductions to be made from the cases seem to be as follows:

Any stipulation or condition, framed without limitation or exception, to exempt a company from liability for its own negligence or misconduct, or that of its servants or agents, is unjust and unreasonable.

A condition is reasonable which reduces a company's liability to a minimum if it is coupled with compensating advantages to the customer (such as cheapness of carriage), and the latter has the alternative of getting rid of the condition by paying a reasonably higher rate.

A condition is reasonable which exempts a company from any liability for extraordinary loss to the customer (such as that of market or profit, or deterioration from innate infirmity) caused by those ordinary detentions to which goods traffic is subject; especially if the goods are such as the company only profess to carry on special trains, and are peculiarly liable to deterioration.[6]

1. Smith v. New York Central R., 24 N.Y. 222; Parsons v. Monteath, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 353; Dorr v. New Jersey Steam Nav Co., 11 N. Y. 485.

2. Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357; and cases cited infra.

3. See BILLS OF LADING.

4. (1 Will. IV. cap. 68.) See supra, this title, DECLARATION OF VALUE.

5. (17 & 18 Vict. cap. 31.)

6. In his admirable little epitome of the Law of Carriers Mr. Redman has deduced the following principles from the decisions upon this act and subsequent statutes extending its operation to sea transit (31 & 32 Vict. c. 119, s. 14 & 16, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 78, s. 12):

1. That all general notices to limit the liability of a company are ineffectual.

2. That the company can only limit its common-law liability by contracts which are signed by the sender or his agent delivering the goods or live stock to the company.

3. Even if the contract is so signed, it is not binding upon the customer unless it is just and reasonable in its terms.

4. These rules apply whether the transit is by sea or land, in vessels belonging to the company or in those not belonging to them, but by which they procure the traffic to be carried. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers, pp. 8, 69, 75.

Reasonable Conditions Exempting Carriers from Liability.—In the following cases the conditions of the carrier's contract were held to be reasonable: Goods carried at special rates. Simons v. Great Western, etc., R., 26 L. J. C. P. 25, 18 C. B. 805. Loss of market. White v. Great Western R., 26 L. J. C. P. 158, 2 C. B. N. S. 7; see also Lord v. Midland R., L. R. 2 C. P. 339, 36 L. J. C. P. 170. Injury to live stock. Pardington v. South Wales R., 26 L. J. Exch. 105, 1 H. & N. 392; but see Rooth v. North Eastern R., 36 L. J. Exch. 83. Claim to be made within limited time. Simons v. Great Western R., 26 L. J. C. P. 25, 18 C. B. 805; and see Lewis v. Great Western R., 29 L. J. Exch. 425, 5 H. & N. 867. Incorrect description. Lewis v. Great Western, etc., R.; 29 L. J. Exch. 425, 5 H. & N. 867. Detention of fish. Bell v. South Devon R., 29 L. J. Exch. 441; affirmed, 3 H. & C. 337. Liability for damage to horses and dogs. Harrison v. London, etc., R., 31 L. J. Q. B. 113, 2 B. & S. 152; but see Ashenden v. London, etc., R., 28 W. R. 511. Goods to be carried beyond company's line. Aldridge v. Great Western R., 33 L. J. C. P. 161, 15 C. B. N. S. 582. Low rates of carriage. Robinson v. Great Western R., 35 L. J. C. P. 123; approved and followed, D'Arc v. London, etc., R., L. R. 9 C. P. 325, 22 W. R. 919. Reasonable alternative. Great Western R. v. Glenister, 22 W. R. 72. Wilful misconduct of company's servants. Lewis v. Great Western R., 47 L. J. Q. B. 131, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 45; Harris v. Midland R., 25 W. R. 63; Haynes v. Great Western R., 41 L. T. N. S. 436. Fair option of alternative must be allowed. Lloyd v. Waterford, etc., R., 15 Ir. C. L. 37; Foreman v. Great Western R., 38 L. T. N. S. 851.

A contract which is on its face apparently unjust and unreasonable may be considered valid if the party forwarding the goods had an option which he has declined to forward them on just and reasonable terms. Gallagher v. Great Western R. Co., 18 Ir. C. L. N. S. 326.

In Manchester, etc., R. v. Brown, L. R. 8 H. L. Cases, 703; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 174, where a fish merchant delivered fish to a railway company to carry upon a signed contract relieving the company as to all fish delivered by him "from all liability for loss or damage by delay in transit or from whatever other cause arising," in consideration of the rates being one fifth lower than where no such undertaking was granted; the contract to endure for five years. The servants of the company accepted the fish, although from pressure of business they could not carry it in time for the intended market, and the fish lost the market. Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, that upon the facts the merchant had a bona fide option to send fish at a reasonable rate with liability on the company as common carriers, or at the lower rate upon the terms of the contract; that the contract was in point of fact just and reasonable within the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 31,) s. 7, and covered the delay; and that the company were not liable for the loss.

Unreasonable Conditions Exempting Carrier from Liability.—In the following cases the conditions of the carrier's contract were held to be unreasonable: Conditions framed to exempt the company from loss or injury, however caused, including therefore gross negligence and even fraud or dishonesty on the part of the company's servants, are bad. Ashenden v. London, etc., R., 28 W. R. 511. Company not to be liable for their own defaults or defects of station. Rooth v. North Eastern R., 36 L. J. Exch. 83, L. R. 2 Eq. 173. Company not to be liable for negligence of their servants. Doolan v. Midland R., L. R. 2 App. Cas. 792, 32 L. T. N. S. 317. Company not to be liable for hazardous goods unless insured. Peek v. North Staffordshire R., 32 L. J. Q. B. 241, 10 H. L. Cas. 473. Not liable for loss, etc., of goods imperfectly packed. Simons v. Great Western R., 26 L. J. C. P. 25, 18 C. B. 805; and see Garton v. Bristol, etc., R., 30 L. J. Q.

It is sometimes said that in the United States the English cases have no application, because they involve constructions of statutes which are of no force here. But in almost every State it is the

B. 273, 1 B. & S. 112. Conveyance to be entirely at the owner's risk. McManus v. Lancashire, etc., R., 28 L. J. Exch. 353, 4 H. & N. 327; Gregory v. West Midland R., 33 L. J. Exch. 155, 2 H. & C. 944; McCance v. London, etc., R., 31 L. J. Exch. 65, 7 H. & N. 477. Company not liable for "empties." Aldridge v. Great Western, etc., R., 33 L. J. C. P. 161, 15 C. B. N. S. 582. Overcarriage, detention or delay in conveying or delivering animals, however caused. Allday v. Great Western R., 34 L. J. Q. B. 5, 5 B. & S. 903; Kirby v. Great Western R., 18 L.T.N. S. 658. "Packed parcels"—that is, packages of common carriers containing several parcels of different persons packed together—to be charged 50 per cent above ordinary rates. Garton v. Bristol, etc., R., 30 L. J. Q. B. 293, 1 B. & S. 112.

"There is no such thing as reasonableness in the abstract, and in dealing with conditions by which a company limit their liability it is necessary to take into consideration the facts with reference to which they would be reasonable or unreasonable. (Lewis v. Great Western R., 47 L. J. Q. B. 131, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 45, per Cotton, L. J.) For a condition reasonable as to one state of facts may be applied to another state of facts which makes it unreasonable. (Gregory v. West Midland R., 33 L. J. Exch. 155, 2 H. & C. 944.) And a condition applying to live animals and dead stock may be good as to the one and void as to the other. (Rooth v. North Eastern R., 36 L. J. Exch. 83, L. R. 2 Exch. 173, per Channell, B.) The reasonableness or unreasonableness of a condition will materially depend upon the nature of the articles to be conveyed, the degree of risk attendant upon their conveyance, the rate of charge made, and whether the railway company were bound by the common law or by statute to carry the articles on being paid the customary hire, or whether it was in their power to reject them altogether, and refuse to carry them on any terms, and whether or not the customer had a reasonable alternative offered of having the goods carried free from such restrictive conditions."

The burden of proving the reasonableness of a condition lies upon the company. The most cogent evidence in favor of reasonableness is to show that the condition was not forced upon the customer, but that he had a fair alternative of getting rid of the condition, and yet agreed to it. Lewis v. Great Western R., 47 L. J. Q. B. 131, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 45.

In Rooth v. North Eastern R.—36 L. J. Exch. 83, L. R. 2 Exch. 173—it was doubted whether a condition can be severed so as to allow it to be good in part and bad in part; and in a case at nisi prius—Kirby v. Great Western R., 18 L. T. N. S. 658—Martin, B., held that a whole set of conditions in a consignment note is bad if any part of it is unreasonable. A contrary rule has, however, been acted upon in other cases, and in Simons v. Great Western R., 26 L. J. C. P. 25, 18 C. B. 805, Jervis, C. J., said: "I think we are bound to look at the particular matters relied on to see if they are just and reasonable; and we are not entitled to look through the whole of the regulations, some of which are not relied upon, to see if any of them may be considered unjust or unreasonable." Redman's Law of Railway Carriers, p.65.

Certain cattle were forwarded upon a railway, the freight being prepaid. The bill of lading provided that they were to be "at the owner's own risk." Through the negligence of the carrier's servants the fact that the freight had been prepaid was not known at the point of destination. The cattle were accordingly detained there some time and injured in consequence. Held, that the clauses of the bill of lading had no application, and that the carrier was liable. Gordon v. Great Western R. Co., 45 L. T. R. N. S. 509; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 619.

Where a carrier, in consideration of a reduced rate of freight, entered into a special contract stipulating for a limitation of liability, and a "risk note" to that effect was signed by the shipper, it was held that the contract was reasonable and binding; it appearing that the carrier was also accustomed to carry goods without any limitation, and that the shipper knew that fact when he signed the "risk note." Brown v. Manchester S. & L. R. Co., 46 L. T. Rep. N. S. 389. See also Doolan v. Midland R. Co., L. R. 18, 10 C. L. 47; Moore v. Midland R. Co., I. R. 8 C. L. 234, 9 C. L. 20.

well-settled rule that the carrier cannot by contract relieve himself from liability for negligence. In determining whether or not a given contract has that effect, its character for justice and reasonableness, in view of the principles already adverted to, public policy, and the like, is the practical test applied. Several of the States have enacted laws adopting some of the essential features of the English statutes, and the recent passage of the Inter-State Commerce Act will still further tend to establish the law in the two countries upon substantially the same basis.[1]

By the clear weight of authority in England,[2] Canada,[3] and the United States, and almost without exception in the States of the Union, the rule has been adopted that the common carrier can make no contract the effect of which will be to exempt him from liability for negligence. In the United States courts the rule is thus stated: no contract by a common carrier for an exemption from responsibility can be sustained as being lawful unless it is just and reasonable in the eye of the law, and a contract by

1. See the "Annotated Interstate Commerce Act," with full text of the English and American statutes and complete annotation, by Adelbert Hamilton, Esq., Editor of American and English Railroad Cases, 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas., Appendix (Edward Thompson, publisher, 1887).

2. See cases cited supra.

3. In Grand Trunk R. v. Vogel, 11 Supreme Court of Canada, 612; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 18.

A dealer in horses hired a car from the Grand Trunk R. Co. for the purpose of transporting his stock over their road, and signed a shipping note by which he agreed to be bound by the following, among other, conditions:

"1. The owner of animals undertakes all risks of loss, injury, damage, and other contingencies, in loading, etc.

"3. When free passes are given to persons in charge of animals, it is only on the express condition that the railway company are not responsible for any negligence, default, or misconduct of any kind on the part of the company or their servants, or of any other person or persons whomsoever, causing or tending to cause the death, injury, or detention of any person or persons travelling upon any such free passes—the person using such pass takes all risks of every kind, no matter how caused."

The horses were carried over the Grand Trunk Railway in charge of a person employed by the owner, such person having a free pass for the trip; through the negligence of the company's servants a collision occurred by which the said horses were injured.

Held, per Ritchie, C. J., and Fournier and Henry, JJ., that under the General Railway Act, 1868 (31 Vict. ch. 68), sec. 20, subsec. 4, as amended by 34 Vict. ch. 43, sec. 5, re-enacted by Consolidated Railway Act, 1879 (42 Vict. ch. 9), sec 25, subsecs. 2, 3, 4, which prohibited railway companies from protecting themselves against liability for negligence by notice, condition, or declaration, and which applies to the Grand Trunk Railway Co., the company could not avail themselves of the above stipulation that they should not be responsible for the negligence of themselves or their servants.

Per Strong and Taschereau, JJ., that the words "notice, condition, or declaration," in the said statute, contemplate a public or general notice, and do not prevent a company from entering into a special contract to protect itself from liability.

Sir W. J. Ritchie, C. J., observes, after commenting upon the various statutes: "I think the object of the legislation was to prevent railway companies from escaping liability by entering into contracts whereby they could free themselves from liability for the neglect of themselves or their servants, whether by way of notice or condition or declaration, be the same by way of contract or otherwise; in other words, to prevent them from contracting themselves out of liability for negligence. To limit the clause as contended for would, in my opinion, entirely frustrate the intention of the which a carrier would stipulate for exemption from responsibility for the negligence of himself or his servants is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law.[1] The general rule already stated legislature, or enable the companies to do so with impunity."

1. "It is a favorite argument in the cases which favor the extension of the carrier's right to contract for exemption from liability, that men must be permitted to make their own agreements, and that it is no concern of the public on what terms an individual chooses to have his goods carried. Thus in Dorr v. New Jersey Steam Navigation Co., 11 N. Y. 485, the court sums up its judgment thus: 'To say the parties have not a right to make their own contract and to limit the precise extent of their own respective risks and liabilities in a matter no way affecting the public morals or conflicting with the public interests would, in my judgment, be an unwarrantable restriction upon trade and commerce, and a most palpable invasion of personal right.' Is it true that the public interest is not affected by individual contracts of the kind referred to? Is not the whole business community affected by holding such contracts valid? If held valid, the advantageous position of the companies exercising the business of common carriers is such that it places it in their power to change the law of common carriers in effect by introducing new rules of obligation. The carrier and his customer do not stand on a footing of equality. The latter is only one individual of a million. He cannot afford to higgle or stand out and seek redress in the courts. His business will not admit such a course. He prefers, rather, to accept any bill of lading, or sign any paper the carrier presents; often, indeed, without knowing what the one or the other contains. In most cases he has no alternative but to do this, or abandon his business. . . . If the customer had any real freedom of choice; if he had a reasonable and practicable alternative, and if the employment of the carrier was not a public one charging him with the duty of accommodating the public in the line of his employment—then if the customer chose to assume the risk of negligence it could with more reason be said to be his private affair, and no concern of the public. But the condition of things is entirely different, and especially so under the modified arrangements which the carrying trade has assumed. The business is mostly concentrated in a few powerful corporations, whose position in the body politic enables them to control it. They do, in fact, control it, and impose such conditions upon travel and transportation as they see fit, which the public is compelled to accept. These circumstances furnish an additional argument, if any were needed, to show that the conditions imposed by common carriers ought not to be adverse, to say the least, to the dictates of public policy and morality. The status and relative position of the parties render any such conditions void. Contracts of common carriers, like those of persons occupying a fiduciary character giving them a position in which they can take undue advantage of the persons with whom they contract, must rest upon their fairness and reasonableness. It was for the reason that the limitations of liability first introduced by common carriers into their notices and bills of lading were just and reasonable that the courts sustained them. It was just and reasonable that they should not be responsible for losses happening by sheer accident or dangers of navigation that no human skill or vigilance could guard against; it was just and reasonable that they should not be chargeable for money or other valuable articles liable to be stolen or damaged, unless apprised of their character or value; it was just and reasonable that they should not be responsible for articles liable to rapid decay, or for live animals liable to get unruly from fright and to injure themselves in that state when such articles or live animals became injured without their fault or negligence. And when any of these just and reasonable excuses were incorporated into notices or special contracts assented to by their customers, the law might well give effect to them without the violation of any important principle, although modifying the strict rules of responsibility imposed by the common law. The improved state of society and the better administration of the laws had diminished the opportunities of collusion and bad faith on the part of the carrier, and rendered less imperative the application of the iron rule that he must be responsible at all events. Hence the exemptions referred to were deemed reasonable and proper to be allowed. But the proposition to allow a public has been adopted in the following States: Alabama,[1] Arkansas,[2]

carrier to abandon altogether his obligations to the public, and to stipulate for exemptions that are unreasonable and improper, amounting to an abdication of the essential duties of his employment, would never have been entertained by the sages of the law. Hence, as we before remarked, we regard the English statute, called the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, passed in 1854, which declared void all notices and conditions made by common carriers, except such as the judge at the trial or the courts should hold just and reasonable, as substantially a return to the rules of the common law. It would have been more strictly so, perhaps, had the reasonableness of the contract been referred to the law instead of the individual judges. The decisions made for more than half a century before the courts commenced the abnormal course which led to the necessity of that statute giving effect to certain classes of exemptions stipulated for by the carrier may be regarded as authorities on the question as to what exemptions are just and reasonable. So the decisions of our own courts are entitled to like effect when not made under the fallacious notion that every special contract imposed by the common carrier on his customers must be carried into effect for the simple reason that it was entered into without regard to the character of the contract and the relative situation of the parties. Conceding, therefore, that special contracts made by common carriers with their customers limiting their liability are good and valid so far as they are just and reasonable; to the extent, for example, of excusing them for all losses happening by accident without any negligence or fraud on their part; when they ask to go still further and to be excused for negligence—an excuse so repugnant to the law of their foundation and to the public good—they have no longer any plea of justice or reason to support such a stipulation, but the contrary. And then the inequality of the parties, the compulsion under which the customer is placed, and the obligations of the carrier to the public operate with full force to divest the transaction of validity." Mr. Justice Bradley in Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174; Railway Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344; Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Nelson v. National Steamship Co., 7 Ben. C. C. 340; Rintoul v. New York Central, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144.

United States Courts.—A carrier cannot by stipulating against liability for a loss by fire exempt himself from liability for a loss occasioned by a fire caused by the negligence of himself or his servants. Muser v. Holland, 17 Blatchf. C. C. 412.

A carrier may lawfully limit its liability to a reasonable sum (e.g. $50) for the loss of a trunk or box, the contents of which is not revealed to it. Muser v. Holland, 17 Blatchf. C. C. 412.

Where a bill of lading stipulated that a carrier should not be responsible for loss or damage by fire, and the goods were stopped in transit by a mob, set fire to and consumed, held, that the burden of proof was on the consignor in an action against the carrier to prove that the loss was occasioned by the negligence of carrier or his servants. Wertheimer v. Penna. R. Co., 17 Blatchf. C. C. 421.

Where the shipper signs a bill of lading limiting the amount in which the carrier shall be liable, the provisions of such bill of lading are binding. Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 7 Fed. Repr. 630.

1. Alabama.—Steele v. Townsend, 37 Ala. 247; South & North Alabama R. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; s. c., 56 Ala. 368; Grey v. Mobile, etc., Trade Co., 55 Ala. 387; Mobile, etc., R. v. Hopkins, 41 Ala. 486; Montgomery, etc., R. v. Edmonds, 41 Ala. 667; Southern Exp. Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; M. & O. R. v. Jarboe, 41 Ala. 644.

In Alabama, etc., R. v. Little, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 37, Brickett, C. J., observes: "Public policy and every consideration of right and justice forbids that he should be allowed to stipulate for exemption from liability for losses or injuries occurring through the want of his own skill or diligence, or that of the servants or agents he may employ, or through his own or their wilful default or tort."

2. Arkansas.—In Taylor v. Little Rock, etc., R., 39 Ark. 148; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 590, it was held in an opinion by English, C. J., citing Taylor v. Little Rock, etc., R., 32 Ark. 398, that a common carrier may, by special contract and for a consideration, contract for exemption from liability as insurer upon its own or connecting line, but cannot contract for exemption from liability for losses occasioned by the negligence of itself or its servants. To same effect see Little Rock, etc., R. v. Talbot, 39 Ark. 523; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 598.

Colorado,[1] Connecticut,[2] Georgia,[3] Illinois,[4]

1. Colorado.—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Graham, 1 Col. 230; Merchants' Desp., etc., Co. v. Cornforth, 3 Col. 280.

2. Connecticut.—Hale v. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co., 15 Conn. 539; Welch v. Boston, etc., R., 41 Conn. 333; Camp v. Hartford, etc., Steamboat Co., 43 Conn. 333.

3 Georgia.—The leading case of Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349, held contracts limiting liability void as against public policy. This case was overruled in Cooper v. Berry, 21 Ga. 526. See also Berry v. Cooper, 28 Ga. 543. Subsequently a statute was passed which provides that no contract limiting the carrier's liability shall be valid unless it has the express assent of the consignor. It has been held in construing this statute that the contract might be by parol. Purcell v. Southern Exp. Co., 34 Ga. 315; Southern Exp. Co. v. Barnes, 36 Ga. 532.

Acceptance of a receipt for goods does not raise a presumption of assent except to the familiar provision that the carrier shall not be liable beyond a fixed sum unless a larger one is named in the receipt. Southern Exp. Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635; Mosher v. Southern Exp. Co., 38 Ga. 37.

The question of assent is for the jury. Wallace v. Sanders, 42 Ga. 486.

4. Illinois.—Chicago, etc., R. v. Montfort, 60 Ill. 175; Merchant's Disp. Trans. Co. v. Theilbar, 86 Ill. 71; Erie, etc., Trans. Co. v. Dater, 8 Cent. L. J. 293; Boskowitz v. Adams Exp. Co., 5 Cent. L. J. 58; Adams Exp. Co. v. Stettaners, 61 Ill. 184; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Sauper, 38 Ill. 354; Erie R. v. Wilcox, 84 Ill. 239.

In Black v. Wabash, etc., R., 111 Ill. 351; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 388, it was held that a stipulation in a shipping contract, voluntarily and understandingly entered into by a shipper of live-stock for transportation, that in consideration of a reduced rate no claim for damages accruing to the shipper shall be allowed or paid by the carrier, or sued for in any court, unless a claim for such loss or damage shall be made in writing, verified by the affidavit of the shipper or his agent, and delivered to the general freight agent of the carrier, at his office, within five days from the time such stock is removed from the cars, will be binding upon the shipper, and is not void as being contrary to any law or to public policy.

Where a party of mature years and sound mind, being able to read and write, without any imposition or artifice to throw him off his guard, deliberately signs a written agreement without informing himself of the nature of its contents, he will nevertheless be bound by it, for the reason the law will not permit him to allege, as a matter of defence, his ignorance of that which it was his duty to know, particularly when the means of information are within his immediate reach, and he neglects to avail himself of them.

In Wabash, etc., R. v. Peyton, 106 Ill. 534; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1, it was held that a common carrier cannot by contract with another road exempt itself from liability as a common carrier.

The mere fact that a shipper receives a bill of lading containing a clause limiting the carrier's responsibility does not of itself operate to exempt the carrier. In order to have that effect, it must appear that the shipper knew the contents of the bill of lading and assented thereto. Whether he has done so or not is a question for the jury. Merchant's Despatch Trans. Co. v. Leysor, 89 Ill. 43. Where in such case the shipper reads the receipt and makes no objection, his assent thereto will be presumed. The fact that the merchant of whom goods are purchased knew of such limitation of liability in the receipt given when they shipped the goods is not sufficient to lessen the common-law liability of the carrier, unless there be proof that such merchant had power to enter into such special contract with the carrier. In the absence of evidence it will be presumed that he had no such power. Merchant's Despatch Trans. Co. v. Jocsting, 89 Ill. 152.

Where no receipt is given by the carrier at the time of receiving the goods, he cannot subsequently limit his liability by a receipt afterwards given, when it appears that the shipper had no knowledge of the terms of such receipt or of any claim of right on the carrier's part to limit his liability. American Express Co. v. Spellman, 90 Ill. 195.

The assent of a shipper to the conditions of a bill of lading limiting the carrier's liability will not be inferred from the mere acceptance of the bill by him without objection, nor from the fact of his having formerly received similar bills. Both these facts are evidence of such assent, however, and may go to the jury. Erie & West Trans. Co. v. Dater, 91 Ill. 195.

Indiana,[1] Iowa,[2] Kansas,[3] Kentucky,[4] Louisiana,[5] Maine,[6] Massachusetts,[7]

Where a carrier seeks to limit his liability by special contract he is bound by the law of the State where the contract was made. Michigan Central R. Co. v. Boyd, 91 Ill. 268.

In Massachusetts, in order to render a clause in the bill of lading limiting the liability of the carrier effectual for that purpose, the bill must be taken by the consignor without dissent at the time of the delivery of the property for transportation. If such bill be given a few days after, and be dissented from by the consignee or owner, the carrier is not protected. Michigan Central R. Co. v. Boyd, 91 Ill. 268.

The fact that the owner of goods by himself or his clerk filled up a railway receipt for goods shipped, which receipt contains a clause limiting the carrier's liability, is evidence to go to a jury of an assent by such owner to the stipulations of the receipt. It is not, however, conclusive in that respect. Boscowitz v. Adams Express Co., 93 Ill. 523.

Where such receipt was the receipt of another company, held, that it was inoperative even for the purpose above designated. Boscowitz v. Adams Express Co., 93 Ill. 523.

A carrier gave a receipt for three bales of furs containing a clause exempting him from liability for any loss or damage "of any box, package, or thing" for over $50. The furs being lost, held, that the consignor could recover $50 for each bale. Boscowitz v. Adams Express Co., 93 Ill. 523.

Where an express company enters into a contract for carriage whereby it exempts itself from liability for loss, it will nevertheless be responsible for the negligence of a railroad company to whom it commits the goods. Boscowitz v. Adams Express Co., 93 Ill. 253.

1. Indiana.—Might v. Gaff, 6 Ind. 416; Adams Exp. Co. v. Fendrick, 38 Ind. 150; Ohio, etc., R. v. Selby, 47 Ind. 471; St. Louis, etc., R. v. Smuck, 49 Ind. 302; Adams Exp. Co. v. Reagan, 29 Ind. 21; Bartlett v. Pittsburgh, etc., R., 94 Ind. 281; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 549; Rosenfeld v. Peoria, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 87.

2. Iowa.—Laws 1866, c. 13, p. 121, provide as follows: "In the transportation of persons or property by any railroad or other company or by any person or firm engaged in the business of transportation of persons or property, no contract, receipt, rule or regulation shall exempt such railroad or other company, person or firm from the full liability of a common carrier, which in the absence of any contract, receipt, rule or regulation would exist with respect to such persons or property." The Iowa Code, § 1307, provides: "Every railroad company shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person, including employees of the company, in consequence of any neglect of the agents, or by any mismanagement of the engineers or other employees of the corporation to any person sustaining such damage, all contracts to the contrary notwithstanding." Brush v. S. A. & D. R., 43 Iowa, 554; McCoy v. Keokuk, etc., R., 44 Iowa, 424; Stewart v. Merchant's Desp. Co., 47 Iowa, 227; Bancroft v. Merchant's Disp. Co., 47 Iowa, 262.

3. Kansas. — Missouri, etc., R. v. Caldwell, 8 Kans. 244; Goggin v. Kansas, etc., R., 12 Kans. 416; St. Louis, etc., R. v. Piper, 13 Kans. 505; Kansas Pacific R. v. Reynolds, 17 Kans. 251; Railroad Co. v. Maris, 16 Kans. 333; Railroad Co. v. Peavey, 29 Kans. 169; Kansas, etc., R. v. Simpson, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 158; Sprague v. Missouri Pacific R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 684.

4. Kentucky.—Adams Exp. Co. v. Nock, 2 Duv. 562; Adams Exp. Co. v. Guthrie, 9 Bush, 78; Louisville, etc., R. v. Hedger, 9 Bush 645; Rhodes v. Louisville, etc., R., 9 Bush, 688.

5. Louisiana.—Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 43; Baldwin v. Collins, 9 Rob. 468; New Orleans, etc., Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, etc., R., 20 La. Ann. 302; Simon v. The Fung Shuey, 21 La. Ann. 363. Compare Higgins v. New Orleans, etc., R., 28 La. Ann. 133.

6. Maine.—Tillebrown v. Railroad, 55 Me. 462; Sager v. Railroad, 31 Me. 228; Willis v. Railroad, 62 Me. 488.

7. Massachusetts.—Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co., 97 Mass. 124; Perry v. Thompson, 98 Mass. 249; Gott v. Dinsmore, 111 Mass. 45; Grace v. Adams, Minnesota,[1] Mississippi,[2] Missouri,[3]

100 Mass. 505; School District v. Boston, etc., R., 102 Mass. 552; Hoadley v. Northern Transp. Co., 115 Mass. 304.

1. Minnesota.—Christenson v. Am. Exp. Co., 15 Minn. 270; Jacobus v. St. Paul, etc., R., 20 Minn. 125; s. c., 1 Cent. L. J. 125.

Moulton v. St. Paul, etc., R., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 13, where Dickinson, J., observes: "The recovery in this case rests alone upon the neglect of the defendant to transport the horses to their destination within a reasonable time, whereby from exhaustion and exposure to cold they died. The law has been determined in this State, and in most of the United States, as well as in the federal supreme court, to be that a common carrier of goods cannot by contract relieve himself from liability for his own negligence. Christenson v. Am. Exp. Co., 15 Minn. 270 (Gil. 208); Shriver v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 24 Minn. 506; Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174. Nor is there any reason why a different rule should prevail in respect to the transportation of live-stock, or of property under the care of the owner. The rule itself rests upon considerations of public policy, and upon the fact that to allow the carrier to absolve himself from the duty of exercising care and fidelity is inconsistent with the very nature of his undertaking. These reasons apply with undiminished force where the property is live-stock, or is under the care of the owner, who has not the direction or control of the agencies and the operation of the transportation. To whatever extent such facts might modify or affect the liability of the carrier for accidents, or for injuries not the result of his own negligence, they would not qualify his responsibility for his own neglect of duty. The agreement discharging the defendant from the liability of a common carrier cannot avail to divest the carrier of his real character, nor indirectly relieve him from responsibilities from which he cannot directly by contract free himself. Christenson v. Am. Exp. Co., 15 Minn. 270; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174. Our conclusion, therefore, is that the defendant was responsible in damages for its negligence, notwithstanding the contract."

A common carrier cannot by special contract limit his liability to cases of injuries caused by gross negligence. He will in any event be liable for his own negligence and that of his servants. Shriver v. Sioux City & St. Paul R. Co., 24 Minn. 506.

Where there is a contract limiting the liability of a common carrier of goods and a loss occurs, the burden is on the carrier to show from what cause the loss occurred. Shriver v. Sioux City & St. Paul R. Co., 24 Minn. 506.

2. Mississippi.—Southern Exp. Co. v. Moon, 39 Miss. 822; Mobile, etc., R. v. Franks, 41 Miss. 494; Mobile, etc., R. v. Weiner, 49 Miss. 725.

In New Orleans, etc., R. v. Faler, 58 Miss. 911; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas 96, it was held that wherever a loss of goods being transported by a railroad company results from a cause against which the company has by a special contract stipulated for immunity, the company is still liable, notwithstanding the special contract, unless it can be acquitted of all blame for the loss. If the loss be attributable to the omission of the carrier to provide the safest vehicle in use for the transportation of the particular goods lost, or to a failure to do anything that diligence and care would suggest was feasible to have been done, the company is liable, even though it may have made a special contract for immunity against the cause of the loss. Chicago, etc., R. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 1017; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 105.

3. Missouri. — Levering v. Union Transp. Co., 42 Mo. 88; Rice v. Kansas, etc., R., 63 Mo. 314; Sturgeon v. St. Louis, etc., R., 65 Mo. 569; Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R., 65 Mo. 629; Kirby v. Adams Exp. Co., 2 Mo. App. 369; s. c., 3 Cent. L. J. 435. Drew v. Red Line Transit Co., 3 Mo. App. 495; Read v. St. Louis, etc., R., 60 Mo. 199; Wolf v. American Exp. Co., 43 Mo 421; Ketchum v. American Merchants' Union Exp. Co., 52 Mo. 390; Snider v. Adams Exp. Co., 63 Mo. 376; Rice v. Railroad, 63 Mo. 314; Sturgeon v. Railroad, 65 Mo. 569; St. Louis, etc., R. v. Cleary, 77 Mo. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 122; Chicago, etc., R. v. Dawson, 79 Mo. 296; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 521.

In Harvey v. Terre Haute, etc., R., 74 Mo. 541; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 293, Hough, J., observes: "This court has repeatedly held that public policy will not permit a common carrier to contract for exemption from liability on account of the negligence of itself or its servants. The plaintiff contends that it is as much against the policy of the law to permit the carrier to limit its liability to a part of the loss, as it would be to permit it to stipulate against the entire loss. We do not regard a contract limiting a right of recovery to a sum expressly agreed upon by the parties as representing the true value of the property shipped as a contract in any degree exempting the carrier from the consequences of its own negligence. Such a contract fairly entered into leaves the carrier responsible for its negligence, and simply fixes the rate of freight and liquidates the damages. This we think it is competent for the carrier to do." Ball v. Wabash, etc., R., 83 Mo. 574; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384.

Nebraska,[1] New Hampshire,[2] New Jersey,[3] North Carolina,[4] Ohio,[5] Pennsylvania,[6] South Carolina,[7] Tennessee,[8]

1. Nebraska.—Atchison, etc., R. v. Washburn, 5 Neb. 117.

2. New Hampshire.—Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 24 N. H. 71; Barter v. Wheeler, 49 N. H. 9; Hall v. Cheney, 36 N. H. 26.

3. New Jersey.—Ashmore v. Pennsylvania, etc., Towing Co., 28 N. J. Law, 180. See also Gibbons v. Wade, 8 N. J. Law, 255. Compare Kinney v. Central R., 34 N. J. Law, 513; 32 N. J. Law, 407.

4. North Carolina.—Lee v. Raleigh, etc., R., 72 N. Car. 236; Smith v. Railroad, 64 N. Car. 235.

5. Ohio.—Davidson v. Graham, 2 Ohio St. 131; Graham v. Davis, 4 Ohio St. 362; Union Exp. Co. v. Graham, 26 Ohio St. 595; Gaines v. Union Transp. Co., 28 Ohio St. 418; Erie R. v. Lockwood, 28 Ohio St. 358; Jones v. Voorhies, 10 Ohio St. 145; Cleveland, etc., R. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1; Knowlton v. Railroad, 19 Ohio St. 260.

In Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Barrett, 36 Ohio St. 448; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 256, it was held that the assent of the shipper to conditions in a bill of lading, or other contract for the carriage of goods, limiting the carrier's liability, is binding upon him, when the loss happens without fault or negligence of the carrier; but such assent will not be implied or presumed from facts and circumstances which do not clearly show an assent to such conditions in the contract on which the action is founded. In the absence of satisfactory proof, showing that the shipper has, by assent and acquiescence, or otherwise, agreed to limit the liability of the carrier, the presumption is that he intended to insist on his common-law rights. Neither usage nor custom, though known to the shipper, which he has not clearly assented to as a condition of the contract of shipment, can be set up to absolve a carrier from his common-law liability.

6. Pennsylvania.—Camden, etc., R. v. Baldauf, 16 Pa. St. 67; Farnham v. Camden, etc., R., 55 Pa. St. 53; American Exp. Co. v. Sands, 55 Pa. St. 140; Empire Transp. Co. v. Wamsutta, etc., Oil Co., 63 Pa. St. 14; Adams Exp. Co. v. Sharpless, 77 Pa. St. 516.

A common carrier cannot by contract limit his liability for damages resulting from the loss of articles carried, when the loss is the result of his negligence, and an instruction by the court that he can is erroneous. Grogan v. Adams Exp. Co. (Pa.). 7 Atlantic Repr. 134.

7. South Carolina.—Patton v. Magrath, Dudl. 189; Porter v. Southern Exp. Co., 4 S. Car. 135; Levy v. Southern Exp. Co., 4 S. Car. 234. See also Gen. Stats. of South Carolina, 1872, p. 336, where it is provided that common carriers cannot limit their common-law responsibility by any notice or declaration or special contract for or in respect of any goods to be carried by them. Piedmont Manuf. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194.

8. Tennessee.—East Tennessee, etc., R. v. Nelson, 1 Cold. 272; Olwell v. Adams Exp. Co., 1 Cent. L. J. 186; Southern Exp. Co. v. Womack, 1 Heisk. 256; Nashville, etc., R. v. Jackson, 6 Heisk. 271.

In Dillard v. Louisville, etc., R., 2 Lea 288, it was held that a carrier may by special contract limit his liability, but cannot exempt himself from responsibility for the negligence of himself and his servants. The acceptance by the consignor on the day of shipment of a bill of lading containing valid stipulations against liability for loss, and the retention of the same by him without objection, raises a presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the shipper knew the contents of the receipt and assented to its terms.

In E. N. Va. & Ga. R. v. Bramley, 5 Lea 401, it was held that a railroad company receiving goods for shipment beyond the terminus of its line may by special contract protect itself from liability for loss occurring on its line. And such contract will be presumed from the fact that a clause thus limiting the liability is to be found printed in the bill of lading, even though the shipper's attention was not called to it, if it appears that he had previously shipped like articles and taken like bills of lading.

Texas,[1] Virginia,[2] West Virginia,[3] and Wisconsin.[4] The question remains an open one in the following States:

1. Texas.—Paschal's Dig., art. 4253, provides: "That railroad companies and other common carriers of goods, wares, and merchandise for hire, within this State, on land, or in boats or vessels on the waters entirely within the body of this State, shall not limit or restrict their liability, as it exists at common law, by any general or special notice, nor by inserting exceptions in the bill of lading or memorandum given upon the receipt of goods for transportation, nor in any other manner whatever, and no special agreement, made in contravention of the foregoing provisions of this section, shall be valid."

A former statute upon the subject, which prohibited notices limiting liability, but authorized a special agreement in writing, signed by the parties or their agents, was repealed by the later act.

In Houston, etc., R. v. Burke, 55 Tex. 323; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 59, Gould. J., remarks: "The defence that the company was exempt from liability because of the exceptions or stipulations in the bill of lading, seems to us plainly invalid under the statute. The claim is not only to limit and restrict the liability of the company by provisions inserted in the bill of lading, but to make these provisions relieve them from all liability. For reasons of public policy, and having regard, doubtless, to the 'inequality of the parties; the compulsion under which the customer is placed, and the obligations of the carrier to the public,' the legislation of this State, and the previous decisions of our courts, hold common carriers liable as at common law for all losses 'not occasioned by the act of God or public enemies,' and declare invalid any exceptions or special contract seeking to vary that liability. Chevallier v. Strahan, 2 Tex. 115; Arnold v. Jones, 26 Tex. 337. See also Heaton & Bro. v. Morgan's La. & Tex. R. & S. Co., Court of Appeals, 4 Tex. L. J., 375; Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357."

In Galveston, etc., R. v. Allison, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 28, it was held that where there is no express statute forbidding it, a carrier may contract not to be liable for damages which do not occur from the negligence of himself or his servants or agents. See, generally, Gulf, etc., R. v. Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 613.

2. Virginia.—Nelson v. Chesapeake, etc., R., 21 Gratt. 654; Virginia, etc., R. v. Sayers, 26 Gratt. 328.

3. West Virginia.—Carriers may contract for exemption from all liability resulting from any and every degree of negligence short of fraud, provided the contract is clear that such was the intention of the parties to it. Baltimore, etc., R. v. Rathbone, 1 W. Va. 87; Baltimore, etc., R. v. Skeels, 3 W. Va. 556.

In Brown v. Adams Exp. Co., 15 W. Va. 812, it was held that a common carrier cannot exempt himself from liability for loss or damage in any degree caused by the negligence or misfeasance of himself or his servants. It was further held, that where goods are committed to a carrier without an express contract limiting liability, the mere fact that the consignor had previously seen bills of lading issued by said carrier containing clauses limiting liability does not afford the carrier any ground for setting up that the particular contract in question was made on such terms. It was also doubted whether the acceptance of a bill of lading containing such clauses would of itself be enough to exempt the carrier.

4. Wisconsin.—See The Sultana v. Chapman, 5 Wis. 454; Falvey v. Northern Transp. Co., 15 Wis. 129; Detroit, etc., R. v. Farmers' Bank, 20 Wis. 122; Boorman v. American Exp. Co., 21 Wis. 152; Betts v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 21 Wis. 80.

In Cream City, etc., R. v. Chicago, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 70, it was held that a common carrier may, by express contract, limit his liability as a carrier, and when he does so he can only be held liable for a loss of goods intrusted to his charge, or for injury to the same while in his possession, upon proof that the loss or injury was the result of the negligence of himself, his agents, or employees. In construing a contract limiting the liability of a common carrier the provisions of the contract are not construed liberally in his favor.

California,[1] Delaware,[2] Florida,[3] Nevada,[4] Oregon,[5] Rhode Island.[6]

In Maryland[7] the question has several times arisen, and it has been said that the right of carriers to restrict their common-law liability by express contract was too well established to be any longer questioned, and that common carriers may, by special contract, limit their common-law liability by express contract where there seems to be reason and justice to sustain the exemption. But the contract ought to be in clear and distinct terms.

In Vermont[8] the liability of the carrier may be restricted by contract; but not by general notice unless clearly proved to have been assented to by the employer.

In Michigan an early case[9] to the effect that the common-law liability of a carrier could not be limited by contract was overruled.[10] It is now provided by statute that no railroad company shall be permitted to change or limit its common-law liability as a common carrier by any contract or in any other manner except by a written contract, none of which shall be printed, which shall be signed by the owner or shipper of the goods to be carried.[11] In this State a common carrier may limit his liability by contract, but not by notice.[12]

In New York,[13] while the decisions have shown some individual

1. California. — Hooper v. Wells, 27 Cal. 11.

2. Delaware. — Flinn v. Philadelphia, etc., R., 1 Houst. 469.

3. Florida. — Bennett v. Filyaw, 1 Fla. 403; Brock v. Gale, 14 Fla. 523.

4. Nevada. — Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 52.

5. Oregon. — Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 58.

6. Rhode Island. — Hubbard v. Harnden Express Co., 10 R. I. 244.

7. Maryland. — Brehme v. Adams Exp. Co., 25 Md. 328; Baltimore, etc., R. v. Brady, 32 Md. 333; Bankard v. Baltimore, etc., R., 34 Md. 197; McCoy v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 42 Md. 498; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 45.

8. Vermont. — Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 64; Blumenthal v. Brainerd, 38 Vt. 402; Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R., 26 Vt. 247; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Champlain Transp. Co., 18 Vt. 131; s. c., 23 Vt. 186; Mann v. Birchard, 40 Vt. 326; Cutts v. Brainerd, 42 Vt. 566.

In Hadd v. United States Exp. Co., 52 Vt. 335, a railway receipt for goods contained a clause limiting the liability of the company to its own line. The consignor could not read. The carriers' clerk read him the receipt, omitting said clause. Held, that as the clause was merely expressive of the common law no fraud had been practised on the consignor.

9. Michigan. — Michigan Central R. v. Ward, 2 Mich. 538.

10. Michigan Cent. R. v. Hale, 6 Mich. 243; McMillan v. Michigan, etc., R., 16 Mich. 79; Hawkins v. Great Western R., 17 Mich. 57; Great Western R. v. Hawkins, 18 Mich. 427. Compare Coup v. Wabash, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 542.

11. Mich. Comp. L. (1871) sec. 2386, p. 783.

12. Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 47.

13. New York. — The decisions in New York have shown quite a difference of opinion, but the law in that State may be regarded as settled in favor of allowing the carrier to contract for exemption from liability, by means of a plain and unmistakable special contract, for losses arising from any degree of negligence on the part of his servants.

In Gould v. Hill, 2 Hill 623, it was held that carriers could not limit their liability, or evade the consequences of a breach of their legal duties as such, by an express agreement, and that where the memorandum or receipt given by the carrier promised to forward the goods to their place of destination "danger of fire, etc., excepted," he was liable for a differences of opinion among the judges, the law is clearly settled that the carrier may, by means of a plain and unmistakable special contract, exempt himself from liability for losses arising from any loss by fire though not resulting from negligence.

In Parsons v. Monteath, 13 Barb. 358; Moore v. Evans, 14 Barb. 624; Dorr v. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co., 4 Sandf. 136, 1 Kern. 485; and Stoddard v. Railroad, 5 Sandf. 180, the case of Gould v. Hill, 2 Hill, 623, was expressly overruled. These cases followed the decisions of the United States Supreme Court in New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, where the court expressed themselves as unable to perceive any well-founded objection to a restriction of the carrier's liability, by a special contract, or any stronger reasons for forbidding it to exist than in the case of any other insurer of goods, to which his obligation is analogous, and which depends altogether upon the contract between the parties.

In Parsons v. Monteath, 13 Barb. 353, Welles J., observes: "If I have goods to transport, and the common carrier tells me he will carry them for a particular price, without incurring the risk of loss or damage by inevitable accident, but that if he takes such risks he must add a percentage to the price of transportation, I really cannot see what the public have to do with our negotiations, nor why we should not be permitted to make a valid contract, with such conditions and stipulations as we choose."

In Smith v. New York Central, etc., R., 24 N. Y. 222, Allen, J., observes: "No principle is better settled than that a party to whom any benefit is secured by contract, statute, or even by the constitution may waive such benefit, and the public are not interested in protecting him or benefiting him against his wishes. The public have no interest in the question which of the two, A or B, shall take the risk of the seaworthiness of a ship, or the fitness of a railway carriage, or the care and faithfulness of a third person employed in the performance of a duty, in which either or both have an interest, although by certain general rules the law has declared that, in the absence of any contract, the risk shall be upon A and not upon B. But if B elects to relieve A, and to assume his risks and liabilities, the public are not at all concerned, and have no occasion to forbid such contracts. If the contract is induced by fraud or duress, it is of course void, and the common-law liabilities of the parties will remain unchanged. The character of the liability which one contracting party assumes in relief of the other cannot affect the validity of the contract, it being wholly personal to the parties. If one is unwise enough deliberately to excuse another from liability for gross and very gross neglect, there is no good reason why he should not be permitted to do so, even for personal neglect of that character; that is, there is no reason why the contracting party should not be estopped from setting up a claim against his express contract not to do so. If the public have any claim against the negligent party, either criminally or otherwise, it will not be affected by the contract, and if the contract be in violation of the law, or for the commission of a criminal offence, neither party can maintain an action against the other upon it or in respect to the transaction to which it relates. Such a contract will not be construed—except its terms compel such construction—as authorizing or contemplating a crime, and hence would not ordinarily be held to embrace acts of culpable negligence resulting in death under circumstances that would constitute manslaughter, that is, culpable negligence of that degree in the principal and the contracting party. But the reason does not extend to or prohibit a contract shifting the pecuniary liability of A for the acts of C to B, although such acts of C might be such as would subject him to punishment for manslaughter, for causing death by his culpable negligence, or for any other offence. A man should not be permitted to contract for impunity for his own criminal acts, but there is no reason why he may not contract for such impunity from the acts of his agents, for whom and for whose acts he is only pecuniarily responsible in the nature of a guarantor." To the same effect see Dorr v. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co., 11 N. Y. 485; French v. Buffalo, etc., R., 4 Keyes, 108; Wells v. New York Central, etc., R., 24 N. Y. 181; Perkins v. New York Central, etc., R., 24 N. Y. 196. See also Guillaunne v. Hamburg, etc., Packet Co., 42 N. Y. 212; Nelson v. Hudson River, etc., R., 48 N. Y. 498; Westcott v. Fargo, 63 Barb. 349; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542; Condict v. Grand Trunk, etc., R., 54 N. Y. 500; Nicholas v New York Central, etc., R., 89 N. Y. 370; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103. Compare Smith v.

degree of negligence on the part of his servants. Yet such contracts in order to have such effect must be plainly and distinctly expressed so that their purport cannot be misunderstood by the

New York Central, etc., R., 24 N. Y. 222; Stinson v. New York Central, etc., R., 32 N. Y. 333; Wells v. N. Y. Cent., etc., R., 24 N. Y. 181, dissenting opinion of Sutherland, J.

In Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357, the decisions in New York to the effect that a carrier may contract for exemption from liability for negligence were commented upon and disapproved. But the State courts have expressly refused to follow the weight of authority and have reaffirmed the doctrine above stated. Mynard v. Railroad, 7 Hun, 399; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 56 N. Y. 168; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542.

By the terms of a contract for the transportation of sheep over the line of the defendant company, it was released from liability originating in the viciousness or weakness of the animals, or from delays, or in consequence of heat, suffocation, or of being crowded, "or on account of being injured, whether such injury shall be caused by burning of hay, straw, or any other material used for feeding said animals or otherwise, and for any damage occasioned thereby," in consideration of a reduction in the charges for freight. There were no words expressly and definitely exempting the company from liability for its own negligence. Held, under the doctrine of Mynard v. S. B. & N. Y. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 180, that when general words limiting the liability of a carrier may operate without including his negligence or that of his servants, such negligence will not lie within the exemption of the agreement. The carrier was liable for injury done to the sheep by fire, which started in the bedding of their cars, which injury resulted from the negligence of the railroad company in omitting to supply the train in which the sheep were with such appliances as would have enabled those in charge of it to have put out the fire before the injury was done. Holsapple v. Rome, etc., R., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 487. In this case Finch J., observes: "The agreement contains no words expressly and definitely exempting the carrier from liability for his own negligence, and the question presented is whether, upon any just interpretation, it can be said to create such an exemption. The doctrine of Mynard v. S. B. & N. Y. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 180, is decisive upon this question. It was there held that where general words limiting the liability of a carrier may operate without including his negligence or that of his servants, such negligence will not be within the exemption of the agreement. To this extent, at least, we all concur. However broad or general may be the language of the contract which does not specifically and in express terms release the carrier from the consequences of his own negligence, it will not effect such release if the general words may operate without including such negligence. That is the case here. The precise injury might have occurred which actually happened, without fault or negligence on the part of the carrier. The sheep were burned by a fire which started in the bedding of their cars. That might have happened without the fault or negligence of the defendant or its servants. For such injury the carrier would have been liable at common law, and irrespective of the question of negligence, since it did not originate in the vitality of the freight or its inherent nature and condition. That liability was plainly asserted in the Mynard case and sustained by the authorities there cited."

In Nicholas v. N.Y.Cent.,etc., R.,89 N. Y. 370; s.c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103, it was held that although in the State of New York common carriers may by express contract exempt themselves from liability for their own negligence, yet such contracts in order to have such effect must be plainly and distinctly expressed so that their purport cannot be misunderstood by the shipper. A delivered certain trees to a railroad company for carriage and received a long printed shipping contract which he signed. This contract contained numerous provisions exempting the company from the extraordinary liabilities of carriers, and also from liability "for damage occasioned by delays from any cause or change of weather." Held, that the terms of the shipping contract were not effectual to exempt the company from liability for a loss occurring through an unreasonable detention occasioned by the company's negligence. Affirmed. McKinney v. Jewett, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 209; Canfield v. Baltimore, etc., R , 93 N. Y. 532; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 152.

New York Law as to Clauses in Bills of Lading Exempting Carriers from Liability for Loss occurring through Negligence.—

shipper. And however broad or general may be the language of the contract which does not specifically and in express terms release the carrier from the consequences of his own negligence, it will not effect such release if the general words may operate without including such negligence.

In spite of the well-established principle that a common car-

It is settled that a clause in a bill of lading by which a common carrier is exempted from liability for loss or injury caused by negligence of said carrier or its servants is valid. Nelson v. Hudson River R. Co., 48 N. Y. 498.

But a clause in a bill of lading exempting a carrier from losses resulting from certain specified causes will not exempt it from liability for damage or injury resulting from one of the causes specified, where the damage or injury was caused by negligence on the part of the carrier or its agents, unless the bill of lading expressly provides that the exemption shall extend to losses caused by the negligence of the carrier or its agents. Thus, where the bill of lading provided that the carrier should be released from liability "from damage or loss to any article from or by fire or explosion of any kind," it was held that the exemption did not extend to loss from a fire resulting from the negligence of the carrier. Steinweg v. Erie R., 43 N. Y. 123. The following cases illustrate the same principle: Condict v. Grand Trunk R. Co,, 54 N. Y. 500; Lamb v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 46 N. Y. 271; Rawson v. Holland, 59 N. Y. 611; Nicholas v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 89 N. Y. 370; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103; Holsapple v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co., 86 N. Y. 275; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 487.

Similarly, it was held that a clause in a bill of lading made by an express company which limited the recovery in case of loss to $50, where the value of the goods was not disclosed, did not apply to the case of a loss occurring through the negligence of the carrier. Magnin v. Dinsmore, 56 N. Y. 168. See Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542.

General Words not Enough to Exempt for Negligence —But the New York courts have gone further beyond this principle, and have held that general words are insufficient, though clearly covering the loss through the negligence of the carrier or its servants. This was squarely held in Mynard v. Syracuse, Binghamton & N. Y. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 180. In that case the bill of lading provided that the carrier was to be released "from all claims, demands, and liabilities of every kind and character whatsoever, for or on account of or connected with any damage or injury to or the loss of said stock, or any portion thereof, from any cause arising," and it was held that this clause would not exempt the carrier from liability for a loss caused by negligence. The decision in this case is explained by Andrews, Ch. J., in Nicholas v. New York Cent., etc., R., 89 N. Y. 370; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103, who said: "The words 'from whatsoever cause arising' were as broad and comprehensive as possible. The court, however, refused to construe them as covering a loss arising from negligence of the carrier, not, as I understand the decision, because the words in their ordinary signification and interpretation, did not include a loss of this character, but because it is a part of the rule, which in this State allows a common carrier to contract against his liability for negligence, that the contract must in terms and expressly exempt the carrier from liability on this account."

In Wilson v. N. Y. Cent., etc., R., 97 N. Y. 87; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 148, plaintiff shipped two horses by defendant's road under a contract by which he released the company from liability for damages resulting from the negligence of its servants or which should be occasioned by the insecurity of its cars. The horses were transported in a grain car, which was out of repair, and, while sufficient for the use for which it was intended, unsafe for the transportation of live stock. In consequence of such defect one of the horses was injured. In an action to recover damages it did not appear but that other safe and secure cars were provided by defendant, and were on hand ready for use, so that the injury might have been caused by carelessness on the part of the defendants in selecting an insecure car. Held, that the only negligence shown was that of defendant's servants, from the consequences of which it was released by the contract; and that plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

rier cannot limit by contract his liability for negligence, it is said that the extent to which he can limit his liability by an express or special agreement fairly and understandingly made with the consignor is almost unlimited. This upon the theory that the latter, for the consideration which it is supposed he always receives, may surrender if he will the obligation of the carrier as an insurer to any extent he may choose.[1]

In England, where there is a limitation of liability by contract, the suit must be upon the contract, and not against the carrier as a common carrier.[2] Nor can the carrier there force upon a consignor a contract limiting the carrier's liability if the goods are such as he professes to carry.[3] The consignor may refuse to sign such contract, and insist upon the company taking subject to the liability of a common carrier, tendering the proper hire to him.

It is also settled that the consignor of goods has implied authority from the consignee to stipulate as to terms of transportation. The carrier is authorized to act upon this presumption in contracting with the agent, and need not inquire into his authority to make the particular shipment.[4]

6. CONFLICT OF LAWS.—The contracts of carriers are governed by the law of the place where made.[5] Where in the case

1. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 248; Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 166; Kallman v. Express Co., 3 Kans. 205; Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatchf. C. C. 64; Brehme v. Adams Exp. Co., 25 Md. 328; Boorman v. Express Co., 21 Wis. 152; Oppenheimer v. U. S. Exp. Co., 69 Ill. 62; Levy v. Southern Exp. Co., 4 Rich. (S. Car.) N. S. 234, Snider v. Adams Exp. Co., 63 Mo. 376; Ketchum v. American Exp. Co., 52 Mo. 390; Roberts v. Riley, 15 La. Ann. 103; Wallace v. Matthews, 39 Ga. 617; Mobile, etc., R. v. Weiner, 49 Miss. 725; Reno v. Hogan, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 63; Grace v. Adams, 100 Mass. 505; Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R., 26 Vt. 256; Derwent v. Loomer, 21 Conn. 246; Express Co. v. Caldwell, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 264; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174; Railway Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655. See infra, this title, INSURANCE.

2. Where there is a limitation of liability by contract, the suit must be upon the contract, and not against the carrier as a common carrier. White v. Great Western R., 26 L. J. C. P. 158; 2 C. B. N. S. 7; Harris v. Midland R., 25 W. R. 63.

The contract must be proved and put in or plaintiff will be non-suited. Robinson v. Great Western R., 35 L. J. C. P. 123.

Parol evidence is admissible to show a contemporaneous parol contract not inconsistent therewith, but not to contradict the written agreement. Malpas v. London, etc., R., 35 L. J. C. P. 166; L. R. 1 C. P. 366. See also BILLS OF LADING.

3. The carrier cannot force upon a consignor a contract limiting the carrier's liability if the goods are such as he professes to carry. The consignor may refuse to sign such contract, and insist upon the company taking subject to the liability of common carriers tendering the proper hire to them. Carr v. Lancashire, etc., R., 21 L. J. Exch. 261; 7 Exch. 707.

4. The consignor of goods has implied authority from the consignee to stipulate as to terms of transportation. The carrier is authorized to act upon this presumption in contracting with the agent, and need not inquire into his authority to make the particular shipment. Ryan v. Missouri, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 703; Nelson v. Railroad, 48 N. Y. 498; Squire v. Railroad, 98 Mass. 239; York Co. v. Central R., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Morrity v. Harnden's Exp., 1 Daly (N. Y.), 227; Megu v. Harnden's Exp., 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 290.

5. First National Bank v. Shaw, 61 N. Y. 283. See also Dike v. Erie R., 45 N. Y. 113; Maghee v. Camden, etc., R., 45 N. Y. 514; Canter v. Bennett, 39 Tex. 303; Robinson v. Merchants' Dispatch Transp. Co., 45 Iowa, 470; McDaniel v.

of a contract by a carrier made in one State, and to be performed in another, there is a conflict in the law of the two States upon the question of his liability, the presumption will be that the parties have made the agreement with reference to the law favorable to its validity and performance. And in a choice among several laws applicable to a case, that must be preferred which is the most favorable for upholding it.[1]

In a case where a contract was made in a State under a law which was held to be a regulation of interstate commerce, and therefore unconstitutional, it was pointed out that the general rule already referred to, while correct when applied to a valid enactment of the legislature of the State where a contract is entered into, yet such unconstitutional law cannot enter into and become part of any contract.[2]

Chicago, etc., R., 24 Iowa, 412; Carton v. Illinois Central, etc., R., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 305; Pennsylvania Co. v. Fairchild, 99 Ill. 260; Michigan Central R. v. Boyd, 91 Ill. 268; Hale v. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co., 15 Conn. 539; Peninsular, etc., Steam Nav. Co. v. Shand, 11 Jur. N. S. 771; 13 W. R. 1049; 12 L. T. N. S. 808, 3 C. Compare Knowlton v. Erie R., 19 Ohio St. 260; Hoadley v. Northern Transp. Co., 115 Mass. 304.

1. In Talbot v. The Merchants' Transp. Co., 41 Iowa, 247, a contract was made in Connecticut for the delivery of goods in Iowa. By statute in the latter State the carrier was prevented from limiting his liability by contract; and in an action for a loss brought in Iowa, although such loss arose from a cause excepted by the contract, and although by the law of Iowa such contract was valid, it was held that the contract must be governed by the law of Connecticut. The principle of the decision was the fact that the parties must be presumed to have made the agreement with reference to the law favorable to its validity and performance, and in a choice among several laws applicable to a case that must be preferred which is the most favorable for upholding it.

In First National Bank v. Shaw, 61 N. Y. 283, the court observes: "In the more general case, where a contract is made in one country and to be performed in another, it is not always easy to determine according to the authorities whether the interpretation of the words is to be governed by the law of the place where the contract is made or by that where it is to be performed. The general principle is, that the law of the place where the contract is made is to govern, unless it is positively to be performed elsewhere. The fact that acts are to be done abroad under a contract does not necessarily make it a contract to be performed there in a legal sense. . . . The true inquiry is, what was the intent of the parties? It would seem that in a case like the present, where the contract was made in Ohio, by Toledo parties, the money being advanced there and the security there, that they had in view, in employing words, their own usages, even though the goods were to be sent to another State and ultimately sold there if the advances were not repaid."

In Ryan v. Missouri, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 703, it was held that where a contract of carriage is to be performed in several States, the lex loci contractus determines the validity of clauses for exemption from liability for loss of or damage to the goods.

2. In Carton v. Illinois Central R., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 305, it was held that a contract is subject to the laws of the State wherein it is made, and which are applicable thereto. But it was further held, that an interstate contract of shipment, entered into by a common carrier, is an entire contract, and the laws of the State wherein it is made, so far as they attempt to regulate interstate commerce, do not enter into it as a part of the contract, being repugnant to the federal constitution. The court observes: "It is urged with great earnestness that these contracts of shipment are entire contracts, and having been entered into in Iowa, the laws of this State entered into and become a part of the contracts, and the statute fixing the rate governed the price for the entire distance. This rule is, no doubt, correct when applied to a valid enactment of the legislature of the State where a contract is entered into, and no one doubts the power of a

The principle has also been applied, however, in other cases, that it is the law of the place of the performance of a contract by which the mode of its fulfilment and the measure of liability for its breach must be determined.[1]

In a Texas case, where a statute provides that carriers for hire within that State cannot limit their liability as it exists at common law, it was held that the provision in a contract of shipment as to notice of a claim for damages being given within a specified time, or the consignor to be precluded from a recovery, while valid and binding in contracts to be partly performed without that State, the statute is not valid or binding where the contract is to be wholly performed within the State.[2]

4. Carrier's Liability during Transit—1. LIABILITY AS INSURER.[3]—Throughout the United States the rule is that the carrier may by special contract limit his responsibility as insurer.[4]

common carrier to bind itself to ship freight beyond State lines, or even to foreign countries and beyond the terminus of its line of transportation. Under such a contract it is everywhere held that the carrier is bound to perform his contract and is liable for loss by negligence. But this position of counsel, it seems to us, begs the question, because if the law of Iowa under consideration is an unauthorized regulation of interstate commerce, it cannot enter into and become part of any contract. This position of counsel forcibly illustrates the correctness of our conclusions, that the law in question, if held to have been intended to operate upon interstate traffic, is directly and palpably contrary to the constitution of the United States. If the law entered into and became part of the contract of shipment, we would have a law of Iowa which would control and regulate the transportation of freight not only to the remotest parts of the States and Territories of this country, but extending to all the nations of the earth to which lines of common carriers extend, and to which local carriers may undertake to transport goods. That such legislation is national in its character it seems to us must be conceded."

1. In Brown v. Camden, etc., R., 83 Pa. St. 316, where a passenger upon a railroad purchased in Philadelphia from a New Jersey corporation a ticket to Atlantic City and checked his trunk to that point, and the trunk was lost, it was held that as the contract was to be performed in New Jersey by a corporation of that State, a statute of Pennsylvania limiting the liability of railroad companies for loss of baggage did not apply; the principle applied being that it is the law of the place of the performance of a contract by which the mode of its fulfilment and the measure of liability for its breach must be determined. See also Barter v. Wheeler, 49 N. H. 9; Gray v. Jackson, 51 N. H. 9; Rixford v. Smith, 52 N. H. 355; Dyke v. Erie R., 45 N. Y. 113.

2. In Gulf, etc., R. v Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 613, it was held that the provision in a contract of shipment as to notice of a claim for damages being given within a specified time, or the consignor is precluded from a recovery, while valid and binding in contracts to be partly performed without the State, is not valid nor binding where the contract is to be wholly performed within the State. See generally (as to discrimination in freight tariff by corporation of several States) Scofield v. Lake Shore, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 612.

3. See WHO ARE COMMON CARRIERS, ante, as to the principles of the liability of carriers as insurers.

4. The following are the leading authorities: Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357; Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Grey v. Mobile Trade Co., 55 Ala. 387; Merchant's Dispatch Co. v. Comforth, 3 Col. 280; Welch v. Boston. etc., R. Co., 41 Conn. 333; Flinn v. Phila., etc., R. Co., 1 Houst. (Del.) 469; Southern Express Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635; Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Frankenberg, 54 Ill. 88; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Smuck, 49 Ind. 302; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piper, 13 Kansas, 505; Adams Exp. Co. v. Guthrie, 9 Bush (Ky.), 78; Roberts v. Riley, 15 La. Ann. 113; Willis v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 62 Me. 488; McCoy v. Erie Trans. Co., 42 Ind. 498;

A carrier, like other bailees, has such an insurable interest in the goods consigned that he may insure them not only to the extent of his own liability, but to their full value.[1]

Subrogation.—Where the consignor has insured the goods and they are lost, the insurance company having paid the insurance is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the consignor against the carrier.[2] This doctrine of subrogation depends, not upon the effect of contract, but is worked out through the right of the creditor or owner. The primary liability is upon the carrier, the secondary upon the insurer. Though the contract of the carrier may not be the first in order of time, it is first and principal in ultimate liability. An analogous doctrine is applied in the case of the payment of a School Dist. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 100 Mass. 505; Gordon v. Ward, 16 Mich. 360; Christenson v. Am. Express Co., 15 Minn. 270; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Werner, 49 Miss. 725; Ketchum v. Am. Exp. Co., 52 Mo. 390; Moses v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 24 N. H. 71; Kenney v. Cent. R. Co., 32 N. J. Law, 407; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 542; Smith v. N. C. R. Co., 64 N. C. 235; Union Express Co. v. Graham, 26 Ohio St. 295; Farnham v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 53; Levy v. S. Express Co., 4 S. C., 234; Olwell v. Adams Exp. Co., 1 Cent. L. J. 186; Mann v. Burchard, 40 Vt. 326; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Sayers, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 328; Balt. & Ohio R. Co. v. Skeels, 3 W. Va. 556; Cream City, etc., R. v. Chicago, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 70.

1. Waters v. Monarch Insurance Co., 5 El. & B. 870; Crowley v. Cohen, 3 B. & Ad. 478; London, etc., R. v. Glyn, 1 Ellis & E. 652; Marks v. Hamilton, 7 Exch. 323; Wolff v. Horncastle, 1 B. & P. 316; Caruthers v. Sheddon, 6 Taunt. 14; Savage v. Corn Exchange Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 1; s. c., 36 N. Y. 635; Chase v. Washington Ins. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 595; Van Natta v. Insurance Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 490; Waring v. Insurance Co., 45 N. Y. 606; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co. (U. S. Dist. Ct. E. Dist. of Wisconsin, 1879); Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, 383; Vermont, etc., R. v. Fitchburg, etc., R., 14 Allen (Mass.), 462; Eastern, etc., R. v. Insurance Co., 98 Mass. 420; Commonwealth v. Insurance Co., 112 Mass. 136; Miltenberg v. Beacom, 9 Pa. St. 198; Rintoul v. New York Central, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144; Jackson Co. v. Boylston Ins. Co. 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 117.

2. Subrogation between Carrier and Insurer.—In the case of Hall & Long v. Railroad Cos., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 370, Strong, J., says: "It is too well settled by the authorities to admit of question, that as between a common carrier of goods and an underwriter upon them, the liability to the owner for their loss or destruction is primarily upon the carrier, while the liability of the insurer is only secondary. The contract of the carrier may not be the first in order of time, but it is first and principal in ultimate liability. In respect to the ownership of the goods, and the risk incident thereto, the owner and the insurer are considered one person, having together the beneficial right to the indemnity due from the carrier for a breach of his contract or for non-performance of his legal duty. Standing thus, as the insurer does, practically in the position of a surety, stipulating that the goods shall not be lost or injured in consequence of the peril insured against, whenever he has indemnified the owner for the loss he is entitled to all the means of indemnity which the satisfied owner held against the party primarily liable. His right rests upon familiar principles of equity. It is the doctrine of subrogation, dependent not at all upon privity of contract, but worked out through the right of the creditor or owner." See also Hart v. Western R. Corp., 13 Metc. (Mass.) 105; Gailes v. Hailman, 11 Pa. St. 515; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 10 Biss. C. C. 18; s. c., Lawson's Contracts of Carriers. 383; Mobile, etc., R. v. Jurey, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 132; Rintoul v. New York Central etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng R. R. Cas. 144; British, etc., Ins. Co. v. Gulf, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 112; Jackson Co. v. Boylston Ins. Co., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 117; Carstairs v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 142. See also Simpson v. Thompson, L. R. 3 App. Cas. 279.

loss by an insurance company occasioned by a fire negligently communicated by the sparks of a railroad locomotive to adjacent property.[1] But where a railroad company has negligently caused the death of a person an insurance company paying the amount of the policy upon the life of the deceased is held to have no claim against the railroad.[2]

The question has arisen whether, where the consignor, as a prudent business man, insures against the accidental injuries for which the carrier is not liable, and the carrier inserts a clause in the bill of lading claiming for himself the benefit of any insurance that may have been effected upon the damaged goods, the effect of such a contract is not to virtually protect the carrier from liability arising from his negligence; whether in such a case the carrier has not indirectly and covertly, but securely, protected himself against the injurious consequences of his want of care by an insurance for which he did not pay, and on account of which there is no evidence of reduction of the rates for freight. In a well-considered case it was held that such a contract was not an unreasonable and unjust exemption from liability for negligence, and would be enforced.[3]

1. Hart v. Western R. Corp., 13 Metc. 99; Peoria Marine & Fire Ins. Co. v. Frost, 37 Ill. 333; Bean v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co., 58 Me. 82; Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Erie R. Co., 73 N. Y. 399; Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 49 Wisc. 625; Brighthope R. Co. v. Rogers, 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 710.

2. Conn. Mutual L. I. Co. v. N. Y. & N. H. R. Co., 25 Conn. 265; Insurance Co. v. Brehme, 95 U. S. 754.

3. In Rintoul v. New York Central, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144, it was held that a clause in a bill of lading which provides that the carrier who is legally liable for any damage shall have the benefit of any insurance that may have been effected upon the damaged goods, is not an unreasonable and unjust exemption from liability for negligence, and may be enforced. Shipman, J., observes: "It does not seem to me that such a contract is unreasonable, because:

"(1) It is not one of exemption from liability. The owner is under no obligation to insure; he is not compelled to furnish indemnity to the carrier; and, if he insures, can make a limited contract of insurance which does not cover losses through the carrier's negligence. There is, therefore, no contract of exemption against liability for loss by negligence, no agreement that the carrier shall be protected or be indemnified, but the contract simply is that, in the contingency of insurance, a consequent benefit will, in case of loss, result to the carrier.

"(2) It is not unfair to the owner. The carrier is at liberty to insure his interest in the property intrusted to his care, and the fact that he may obtain an indemnity from a third person by means of the owner's policy is not unfair to the owner, unless the obtaining such indemnity is, in reality, made compulsory upon him, because the owner 'can equitably receive but one satisfaction' for the loss of his goods. Hart v. Railroad Corp., 13 Metc. (Mass.) 99. If it was a part of the bill of lading that the owner must insure for the benefit of the carrier, such condition would be unfair.

"(3) The contract is not necessarily unfair to the insurers. At common law the owner who has been paid in full or in part for his loss by the insurance company, may sue the carrier upon the contract of bailment, and as to so much of the amount recovered from the carrier as is in excess of a full satisfaction of the loss, the owner will be a trustee for the insurance company. It seems that the effect of the clause in the bill of lading which is now under consideration is to provide that the owner in such circumstances is not a trustee for the insurance company, but a trustee for the carrier. If such a contract is entered into, without fraudulent concealment of the facts from the insurers, of which there is no evidence in this case, it cannot properly be considered unjust or unreasonable, because the insurance company obtains its remedy, not by virtue of a contract of its own with the carrier, but through the owner's contract, and its right depends upon, or is subject to, the agreement made by the owner with the carrier, which he is at liberty to make to suit his own interest, provided there is no fraudulent concealment from the insurers. They can, in view of this provision in a bill of lading, modify the contract which they have heretofore customarily made with the insured, and the result will probably be that the insurers will also make provisions in their policies, by virtue of which insurance on property in transit will have a limited character. British, etc., Insurance Co. v. Gulf, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 112."

In a case where the insurance company stipulated in the policy that in case of loss it should be subrogated to all claims against

In Jackson Co. v. Boylston Ins. Co., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 117, it was held that the right of an insurance company insuring a property in transitu, to be substituted to the rights of the insured as against the common carrier upon paying a loss, is subject to the owner's contract of carriage with the railroad company provided there be no fraudulent concealment from the insurer. An insurance company insuring property in transitu, and making no provisions in regard to the nature of the contract of carriage, must be held to have insured subject to the actual contract of carriage so far it was a lawful contract. Devens, J., observes: "Subrogation is the substitution of one person in place of another, whether as a creditor or the possessor of any other rightful claim, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim and its rights, remedies, or securities. It does not necessarily depend upon contract, but grows out of the relation which two parties sustain to each other, and the party subrogated acquires no greater rights than those of the party for whom he is substituted. The contract of insurance being one of indemnity, the insurer, when he has indemnified the insured, is equitably entitled to succeed to the right which he had against the carrier. But, as the insurance company obtains its remedy against the carrier, not by virtue of any contract of its own with him, but through the contract of the owner of the goods, such owner may make the contract of carriage so as to suit his own interest, provided there be no fraudulent concealment from the insurer, and the right which the insurer obtains is subject to the agreement made with the carrier. Carriers have an insurable interest in the goods they transport, and may, therefore, effect insurance upon them for their own benefit. There is no reason why they may not insure them jointly with the owner, and, if so, why they may not contract for the benefit of insurance effected by the owner, in the absence of fraud or of any contract to the contrary, with the insurer.

In Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 132, it was held by the United States Supreme Court that the payment of a total loss by an insurer works an equitable assignment to him of all the remedies which the insured has against a common carrier for the destruction of property intrusted to its care. The suit may be brought in the name of the nominal plaintiff, and the party beneficially interested is only bound to establish the cause of action, without proof of his equitable right of recovery. Woods, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, remarked: "But we are of opinion that the ground upon which this assignment of error is based is not tenable, which is that the recovery must be limited to the amount paid by the insurance company to the defendants in error, and that the burden is on the insurance company to show how much it paid. Although the suit is brought for the use of the insurer, and it is the sole party beneficially interested, yet its rights are to be worked out through the cause of action which the insured has against the common carrier. The legal title is in the insured, and the carrier is bound to respond for all the damages sustained by the breach of his contract. If only part of the loss has been paid by the insurer, the insured is entitled to the residue. How the money recovered is to be divided between the insured and the insurer is a question which interests them alone, and in which the common carrier is not concerned. The payment of a total loss by the insurer works an equitable assignment to him of the property, and all the remedies which the insured had against the carrier for the recovery of its value. Mason v. Sainsbury, 3 Doug. 61; Yates v. Whyte, 4 Bing. N. C. 272; Clark v. Hundred of Blything, 2 Barn. & C. 254; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Tyler, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 385; Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Storrow, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 285."

the carrier, and goods were subsequently shipped under a bill of lading which provided that in case of loss by which the railroad company incurred any liability the railroad company should have the benefit of any insurance which might have been effected on the goods, it was held in an action by the insured against the insurance company that he could not recover, having by the bill of lading defeated the right of subrogation against the carrier to which the insurance company was entitled.[1]

In the absence of any contract on the subject, if the insured owner accepts payment from the insurers they may use the name of the insured in an action to obtain redress from the carrier whose failure of duty caused the loss. The right rests upon the doctrine of subrogation, depending not at all upon privy of contract, but worked out through the right of the creditor or owner. And suit cannot be in the name of the insurers.[2]

1. In Carstairs v. Mechanics, etc., Ins. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 142, it was held that under an open policy of insurance on goods while in transit by railroad, it was stipulated that the insurance company should, in case of loss, be subrogated to all claims against the carrier. Certain goods covered by the policy were destroyed in a railroad collision, having been shipped under a bill of lading which provided that in case of loss, by which the railroad company incurred any liability, the railroad company should have the benefit of any insurance which might have been effected on the goods. Held, in an action by the insured against the insurance company, that he could not recover, having, by the bill of lading, defeated the right of subrogation against the carrier, to which the insurance company was entitled. Morris, J., observes: "In Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Calebs, 20 N. Y. 173 (1859), the insurer who had paid the loss, and who would have been subrogated to all the rights of the shipper of the goods against the carrier, was defeated in an action against the carrier solely and distinctly upon the ground that such an agreement in the bill of lading was valid and binding. It is contended that this decision is not an authority in courts which do not (as the New York courts do) uphold contracts made by carriers exempting them from liability for negligence. This case is, however, cited with approval in several text-books on the law of carriers, and it does not appear that it has ever been questioned. The case of the Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Erie & Western Transp. Co., decided by Judge Dyer, in the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Wisconsin (1879), reported in Lawson Carr. 382, is a very carefully considered decision of a federal court, in which the question was distinctly made under circumstances most favorable for the insurance company. It was there conceded to be law that the carrier could not stipulate for exemption from liability for negligence, and it was a fact found by the court that the loss had occurred through the negligence of the carrier, against whom the owner might have recovered. But the court held that, as the carrier could have insured himself against the peril by which the loss happened, although the negligence of his servants was the cause of it, there was no rule of law which forbade his contracting for the benefit of the insurance effected by the shipper. These two cases would have to be disregarded by any court which should permit this defendant to be subrogated to the rights of the plaintiff, and to recover against the carrier after having paid the loss claimed in this suit; and I should therefore have not only to doubt the correctness of these two decisions,—which I am not prepared to say I do,—but to be clearly convinced that they were wrongly decided, before I could rule that the defendant, on paying the insurance claimed, could have the benefit of that subrogation which the plaintiffs expressly agreed it should have." Compare Jackson Co. v. Boylston Ins. Co., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 117.

2. Rintoul v. New York Central, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144; Hall v. Railroad Cos., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 367; Hart v. Railroad Corp., 13 Metc. (Mass.) 99; Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Calebs, 20 N. Y. 173; Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Railroad Co., 25 Conn. 265. See also Rockingham Mutual Fire Ins. Co.

2. CARRIER'S LIABILITY ARISING FROM DELAY.—Where the carrier makes an express contract for delivery within a specified time, he is bound to the fulfilment of that contract and is liable for delay from whatever cause the delay may have arisen.[1]

There is no rule of law which specifies the time within which the delivery must be made unless the contract was express. A promise to carry and deliver within a reasonable time will, however, always be implied.[2] It has been said that what is a reasonable time is not susceptible of definition. The circumstances of the particular case must be adverted to. The mode of conveyance, the distance, the nature of the goods, the season of the year, the character of the weather, and the ordinary facilities of transportation are to be considered in determining whether in the particular case there has been any unreasonable delay. The character of the freight, whether ordinary merchandise, such as iron, wool, cotton, grain, etc., or whether perishable goods such as live-stock, fish, oysters, fruit, vegetables, etc., must be considered, because in the first case their character would not suggest probable damage from delay, whereas in the second it would. The season of the year is also to be considered, because the same delay at one time might be harmless, whereas at another it would do serious injury.[3] The question as to the carrier's diligence and a reason-

v. Bosher, 39 Me. 253; Bean v. Atlantic, etc.. R. Co., 58 Me 82; Peoria Marine & Fire Ins. Co. v. Frost, 37 Ill. 333; Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Erie R., 73 N. Y. 399; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal, etc., R., 3 Dill. C. C. 1. But see Swarthout v. Chicago, etc., R., 49 Wis. 265.

1. Robinson v. Dunmore, 2 B. & P. 416; Great Northern R. v. Hawcroft, 21 L. J. Q. B. 178; Tirrell v. Gage, 4 Allen (Mass.). 251; Wareham Bank v. Burt, 5 Allen (Mass.), 113; Gage v. Tirrell, 9 Allen (Mass.), 299; Higginson v. Weld, 14 Gray (Mass.), 465; Knowles v. Dabney, 105 Mass. 437; Collier v. Swinney, 16 Mo. 484; Harmony v. Bingham, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 209; Place v. Union Exp. Co., 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 19; Hand v. Baynes, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 214; The Harriman, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 161; Texas Pacific R. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 133; Wood v. Chicago, etc., R., 24 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 91, overruling Wood v. Chicago, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; Ball v. Wabash, etc., R., 83 Mo. 574; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384.

2. Donohoe v. London, etc., R., 15 W. R. 792; Raphael v. Pickford, 5 M. & G. 558; Hales v. London, etc., R., 4 B. & S. 66; Robinson v. Great Western, etc., R., 35 L. J. N. S. C. P. 123; D'Arc v. London, etc., R., L. R. 9 C. P. 325; Hughes v. Great Western, etc., R., 14 C. B. 637; 25 Eng. L. & Eq. 283; Nettles v. South Carolina, etc., R., 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 190; Boner v. Merchants' Steamboat Co., 1 Jones (N. Car.), 211; East Tennessee, etc., R. v. Nelson, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 272; Nudd v. Wells, 11 Wis. 407; McLaren v. Detroit, etc., R., 23 Wis. 138; Illinois Central, etc., R., 41 Ill. 73; Michigan, etc., R. v. Day, 20 Ill. 375; Mann v. Birchard, 40 Vt. 326; Parsons v. Hardy, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 215; Wilbert v. New York, etc., R., 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 36; Rome, etc., R. v. Sullivan, 14 Ga. 277; Hill v. Humphreys, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 123; Ludwig v. Meyre, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 438; Eagle v. White, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 505; Chicago, etc., R. v. Dawson. 79 Mo. 296; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 521.

3 In McGraw v. Baltimore, etc., R., 18 W. Va. 361; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 188, Patton, J., observes: "The obligation of the common carrier is to transport the goods safely and within a reasonable time. What is a reasonable time is not susceptible of being defined by any general rule; but the circumstances of each particular case must be adverted to in order to determine what is a reasonable time in that case. But it may be said that the mode of conveyance, the distance, the nature of the goods, the season of the year, the character of the weather, and the ordinary facilities of transportation are to be considered in determining whether in the particular case able time is for the jury.[1] In North Carolina, where a statute imposes a penalty upon the carrier for the failure to ship goods within five days after their consignment, there is an implied agreement on the carrier's part to ship within a reasonable time, the limits of which are defined by the statute.[2]

In England the carrier may contract, but only by express stipulation, in modification of his common-law obligation to carry and deliver within a reasonable time, that he shall not be responsible for delivery within any certain or definite time.[3]

Where the carrier only professes to run trains for a certain class of traffic at stated intervals, it will be within a reasonable time if he carries in due course according to his profession. But in a case in which a company received cattle for carriage and it did not appear that there were any ordinary cattle trains on the line, it was held to be properly left to the jury to say what was a reasonable time within which to convey the cattle, and therefore whether the company were bound to send them by a special train.[4] The route which the carrier ordinarily uses may be considered in determining what is a reasonable time, and he is not bound to carry by the shortest route if that is not his custom.[5]

there has been an unreasonable delay. Vicksburg & Meridian R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458. It is obvious that ordinarily the delay in shipping articles not liable to decay or damage, such as iron, wool, cotton, grains and things of like character are liable to be injured by a few days' delay, would be no test in a case where the delay of a day in transportation would result in loss or damage by reason of their nature and inherent character, such as live-stock, fish, oysters, fruits, vegetables, and things of like character. In the one case there is nothing in the thing itself, which would induce a prudent business man to anticipate injury from a temporary delay in transportation, whereas in the other case any prudent business man from the nature of the thing itself might reasonably anticipate loss or damage from delay. So the season of the year is an element to be considered, some articles, as some kinds of vegetables, being of that nature that at certain seasons of the year a brief delay would be harmless, whereas at another season of the year the delay would result in loss or damage."

In St. Louis, etc., R. v. Heath, 42 Ark. 477; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 557, it was held that a railroad company is bound to deliver freight at its destination with reasonable expedition, and a delay of seventy days, unexplained, is an unreasonable delay. Compare, however, Greisмer v. Lake Shore, etc., R., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287, where it was held that in respect to the liability of a railroad company for delay in transportation and delivery of goods all that can be required of it is the exercise of due care to forward and deliver promptly. There is no absolute duty resting upon a carrier by railroad to deliver goods within what is, under ordinary circumstances, a reasonable time, and delay caused by a strike of employees and the forcible stopping by them of the running of trains was excused.

What is a "reasonable time" may depend upon a variety of circumstances, such as the nature of the goods and the ordinary course of business of the company. Wren v. Eastern Counties R., 1 L. T. N. S. 5.

1. Hales v. London, etc., R., 32 L. J. Q. B. 292; 4 B. & S. 66.

2. In McGowan v. Wilmington, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 64, it was held that in the absence of a contract between the consignor and the shipper to the contrary, there is an implied agreement on the part of the carrier to ship goods within a reasonable time, which the statute of North Carolina has fixed to be within five days next after the receipt of the goods.

3. Hughes v. Great Western R., 23 L. J. C. P. 153; 14 C. B. 637; Robinson v. Great Western R., 35 L. J. C. P. 123.

4. Donohoe v. London, etc., R., 15 W. R. 792; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed. 1880), p. 117.

5. Hales v. London, etc., R., 32 L. J. Q. B. 292, 4 B. & S. 66.

Where the carrier's ordinary course of business is inconsistent with reasonably early transit, it is no answer to an action for damages arising from delay that he carried at the ordinary rate at which he conducted his business.[1]

Where a carrier accepted perishable goods, but was detained at the port of consignment for two days by fog, and failed to take any care of the goods or to ship them by railroad as he had done in similar cases, he was held liable.[2] An instruction to the jury that the railroad company was bound to forward apples the same day they are received, and permitting no excuse whatever for delay, is erroneous.[3] In Wisconsin it was held that the railroad company, as a common carrier, and independent of any contract between it and a shipper, is not liable for loss and expense occasioned by its failure to have cars in readiness to ship live stock on the day that the consignor notified the agent of the company that he would tender them for shipment, when it is not shown that the notice given was a "reasonable notice" within the meaning of a statute, or what was the general custom of the company as to receiving and shipping live stock.[4]

Where by reason of a failure to deliver goods in a reasonable time the consignor is compelled to and does purchase other goods, he is not forced to receive the goods consigned when offered at another time.[5]

(a) Loss of Market.—In England it is held that a condition in the carrier's contract exempting itself from liability for loss of market, or other claim arising from delay or detention of any train, whether at starting or at any of the stations or in the course of the journey, is just and reasonable.[6]

1. Blakemore v. Lancashire, etc., R., 1 F. & F. 76; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers, p. 114.

2. Peck v. Weeks, 34 Conn. 145.

3. Dixon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 525.

4. Richardson v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 530.

5. Gulf, etc., R. v. Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 613.

6. Loss of Market.—In White v. Great Western R., 26 L. J. C. P. 158, 2 C. B. N. S. 7, it was held that a condition in the contract of a carrier was just and reasonable which provided as follows. "That the company will not, under any circumstances, be liable for loss of market, or other claim arising from delay or detention of any train, whether at starting or at any of the stations or in the course of the journey." See also Lord v. Midland R., L. R. 2 C. P. 339, 36 L. J. C. P. 170.

In Black v. Baxendale, 1 Exch. 410, the consignor sent certain goods for delivery at a certain place in time for market, but failed to notify the carrier of this purpose. The carrier did not deliver in time for market, and was held liable for his unreasonable delay, and the jury were permitted to award damages sufficient to cover the consignor's expenses in effecting a sale at another place. Compare Woodger v. Great Western R., L. R. 2 C. P. 318, where such expenses were held not to be properly allowed.

A fish-merchant delivered fish to a railway company to carry upon a signed contract relieving the company as to all fish delivered by him "from all liability for loss or damage by delay in transit or from whatever other cause arising," in consideration of the rates being one fifth lower than where no such undertaking was granted; the contract to endure for five years. The servants of the company accepted the fish, although from a pressure of business they could not carry in time for the intended market, and the fish lost the market. Held, reversing the decision of the court of appeal, that upon the facts the merchant had a bona-fide option to send fish at a reasonable rate, with

In a Michigan case, where unreasonable delay was complained of, and loss of market claimed, it was held not to be sufficient for the plaintiff to prove delay, and also a damage, when it appears from his proofs that there was other delay not chargeable to the carrier; but some damage must be traced to the delay for which the carrier was in fault. And where unexpected difficulties occur in the transportation of property by a carrier, and the consignor agrees in view of them to pay a sum for the carriage in addition to what had been previously fixed upon, and pays the same, he cannot recover it back as paid without consideration.[1]

In a Texas case, where the carrier failed to transport produce destined for market in the condition in which it was consigned, and without unnecessary delay, the owner could recover among other elements of damage, by way of indemnity, interest on the value of the consignment, running from the time it should have been delivered at its market destination by the carrier.[2]

(b) Excuses for Delay.—The following have been held to be such excuses for delay as will release the carrier from liability: Where the delay occurred through the negligence of another company, with running power over the carrier's line.[3] Where the carrier can show that the delay was necessary to insure the safety of the goods, upon the ground that the first duty of the carrier is to carry safely.[4]

(c) Act of God.—In general, a carrier is not liable for the delay caused by an act of God, where no negligence in the performance of his duties is shown. It has been held that he is not bound to use extra efforts or incur extra expense in order to surmount obstructions caused by a fall of snow.[5] It has also been held, however, that the carrier cannot excuse his delay by setting up an increased expense not unforeseen nor entirely unreasonable. He was excused where the loss or delay arose by action of the weather.[7] liability on the company as common carriers, or at the lower rate upon the terms of the contract; that the contract was in point of fact just and reasonable within the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, and covered the delay; and that the company were not liable for the loss. Manchester, etc., R. v. Brown, L. R. 8 H. L. Cas. 703; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 174.

1. Detroit, etc., R. v. McKenzie, 43 Mich. 609; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 15.

2. Houston, etc., R. v. Jackson, 62 Tex. 209; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 126. See, generally, Texas Pacific R. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 133.

3. Great Northern R. v. Taylor, 35 L. J. C. P. 210; s. c., sub nom. Taylor v. Great Northern R., L. R. 1 C. P. 385; Hadley v. Clarke, 8 T. R. 259.

4. Great Northern R. v. Taylor, 35 L. J. C. P. 210; s. c., sub nom. Taylor v. Great Northern R., L. R. 1 C. P. 385.

With reference to the time to be occupied in transporting the property the carrier is not held to the extraordinary liability to which he is held for its safety while it is in his custody, and he may excuse delay in its delivery by proof of misfortune or accident, although not inevitable or produced by act of God. Kinnick v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 55; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 330.

5. Briddon v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 L. J. Exch. 51; 32 L. T. 94.

6. Condict v. Railroad, 54 N. Y. 500; Deming v. Grand Trunk, etc., R., 48 N. H. 455.

7. Nor by action of the weather. Swetland v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 276; Curtis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. 18 Wis. 312; Ballentine v. North Missouri

Where a freshet swept away a railroad bridge [1]—where the carrier was delayed by the freezing of a canal.[2]

(d) Proximate and Remote Cause.—The question has arisen whether, where the loss or injury occurs by act of God following upon the carrier's delay, the carrier should be held liable upon the ground that but for the delay the loss would not have occurred. In some States it is held that under such circumstances the carrier is not liable. This is the law in New York,[3] Illinois,[4] Missouri,[5] and Tennessee.[6]

In other States it is held that the carrier's negligence or misconduct must be immediately or proximately connected with the accident or loss. If it is remotely the occasion of the loss or damage the carrier is not liable. He is answerable for the ordinary and proximate consequence of his negligence, and not for those that are remote or extraordinary. And this liability includes all those consequences which may have arisen from the neglect to make provision for those dangers which ordinary skill and foresight is bound to anticipate. This is the rule which has been expressly or in effect adopted in Pennsylvania,[7] Massachusetts,[8]

R. Co., 40 Mo. 491. But where perishable articles were frozen by reason of an unusual intensity of cold, the fact that the carrier had done what is usual is not sufficient to exempt him from a charge of negligence. Wing v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 1 Hilton (N. Y.), 235.

1. It may be stated in general terms that a carrier is not liable for loss of freight, when such loss is occasioned by an unexpected flood, and no negligence is shown in the performance of his duties. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. David. 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 261; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. King, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 269; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 271; Railroad Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 176; Read v. Spaulding, 30 N. Y. 630; Wallace v. Clayton, 42 Ga. 443; Denny v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.), 481; Lipford v. Charlotte, etc., R. Co., 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 409.

2. In Beckwith v. Frisbie, 32 Vt. 559, the carrier was delayed by the freezing of a canal, and, upon his storing the goods, it was held that their owner was liable for the storage. See also Parsons v. Hardy, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 215. But see O'Connor v. Foster, 10 Watts. (Pa.) 118.

3. New York.—In Read v. Spaulding, 30 N. Y. 630, the carrier delayed the transportation of the goods, and they were damaged by an extraordinary flood, which would not have overtaken them had not the delay occurred. The carrier was held liable because the delay was similar in effect to a deviation. A similar conclusion was reached in Michaels v. Railroad, 30 N. Y. 564. This doctrine has since been followed in New York Bostwick v. Railroad, 45 N. Y. 712; Condict v. Railroad, 54 N. Y. 500; Duncan v. Railroad, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 265.

4. Illinois.—Michigan, etc., R. v. Curtis. 80 Ill. 324.

5. Missouri.—Wolf v. American Express Co., 43 Mo. 421; Read v. Railroad, 60 Mo. 199; Pruitt v. Railroad, 62 Mo. 52. See also Davis v. Wabash, etc., R., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 315.

6. Tennessee.—Southern Express Co. v. Womack, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 256.

7. Pennsylvania.—In the case of Morrison v. Davis & Co., 20 Pa. St. 171, the goods were injured by a flood. The evidence showed that the canal-boat, by which the goods were transported, was drawn by a lame horse. The result was that the boat did not make its usual speed. If it had, it would have passed the point, where the goods were injured, before the flood. It was held that the carrier was not liable, because the lameness of the horse was the remote and not the proximate cause of the injury. See also Clarke v. Needles, 25 Pa. St. 338.

8. Massachusetts.—Denny v. New York Cent. etc., R., 13 Gray (Mass.), 481; Hoadley v. Northern Transp. Co., 115 Mass. 304.

In Denny v. New York Central R. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.), 481, the goods were unnecessarily delayed on the way for six days at an intermediate point, and were then carried to their destination and placed in the depot of the company. It was held that the company was liable for any injury resulting from the delay in transportation, but that it was not liable for the injury done by a flood after the goods were placed in the depot; that the delay was merely the remote cause of the injury by the flood.

Ohio,[1] Michigan,[2] Nebraska,[3] West Virginia,[4] Iowa,[5] New

1. Ohio.—Daniels v. Ballantine, 23 Ohio St. 532.

2. Michigan.—Railroad v. Burrows, 33 Mich. 6.

3. Nebraska.—McClary v. Sioux City, etc., R., 3 Neb. 44.

4. West Virginia.—In McGraw v. Baltimore, etc., R., 18 W. Va. 361; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 188, B. in Parkersburg delivered potatoes at the B. & O. R. Co.'s depot to be conveyed to McG. in Grafton on the 13th day of February, 1866, to be shipped on the 14th; there was a daily train between those points; the weather was mild and so continued on the 14th; the potatoes did not reach Grafton until the 16th, and arrived so frozen as to be worthless, the weather on the 15th and 16th having become cold. Held, under the circumstances of this case the company is liable in damages. Patton, J., observes: "If the question in this case depended solely on the question whether the plaintiff in error was liable for the loss of the property from freezing, because that was an act of God, I should have no hesitation in saying that the liability existed. But on the other hand, if the question of liability rested simply upon the question, whether they were liable for the freezing of the property, having been guilty of no negligence or misconduct, by which that injury resulted, I would have as little hesitation in saying that they were not liable; not because the freezing was an act of God or an inevitable accident, but because of the exception to that principle on account of the nature and inherent character of the property and its liability to freeze. Maslin v. B. & O. R. Co., 14 W. Va. 189. But whenever the common carrier is exempt from liability, either because of the act of God or because of the nature and inherent character of the property and its liability to loss and damage, he must be free from any previous negligence and misconduct, by which that loss or damage may have been occasioned. For though the immediate or proximate cause of a loss in any given instance may have been what is termed the act of God, or from the nature and inherent character of the property, yet if the carrier unnecessarily exposed the property to such accident by any culpable act or omission of his own, he is not excused. Williams et al. v. Grant et al., 16 Conn. 487. That previous negligence or misconduct, which makes the carrier liable for loss to property, must be immediately or proximately connected with the accident or loss. If it is remotely the occasion of the loss or damage, the carrier is not liable. He is answerable for the ordinary and proximate consequences of his negligence, and not for those that are remote and extraordinary, and this liability includes all those consequences which may have arisen from the neglect to make provision for those dangers, which ordinary skill and foresight is bound to anticipate. Morrison v. Davis & Co., 20 Pa. St. 171; Denny v. New York Central R. Co., 13 Gray, 481; R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. 176."

5 Iowa.—In Hewitt v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 568, a car of potatoes was delivered to the defendant on November 10th, to be shipped to Omaha. The car arrived at Council Bluffs, the defendant's terminus, November 11th, and was put in the yard of the connecting line to be forwarded. That line refused to receive the car, as it was out of repair. Defendant retook the car, repaired it, and redelivered it on the afternoon of the 13th, and it arrived in Omaha on the 15th. The weather was warm on the 10th, but before the 15th it turned cold, and the potatoes were frozen. Held, that the danger from cold was one which ordinary foresight could have apprehended and guarded against; that great diligence and dispatch were required of the company in the duty of forwarding these perishable articles, and that if they were exposed to the danger which injured them through the company's negligence, it is responsible for the damage. Where the evidence shows that the car was delivered on the 13th, but the receipt therefor was delivered on the 14th, it war error to exclude evidence that between the companies it was the custom that receipts for cars received by one from the other in the afternoon or evening are not delivered till the following day. Reed, J., observed: "In Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. St. 171, and Denny v. Railroad Co., 13 Gray, 481, it is held that the carrier is not responsible for injuries to the property while in his possession caused by sudden and extraordinary floods, notwithstanding the fact that it would not have been exposed to the danger if he had used proper diligence in forwarding it to its destination. But the

Mexico,[1] and has met with approval in the United States Courts.[2]

(e) Strikes, Riots, and Mobs—In the earliest cases in which the question arose as to how far a carrier was responsible, where the delay occurred through the acts of mobs, rioters, etc., the carrier was held liable. A mob, no matter how overwhelming in numbers, was never considered as coming within the terms "public enemy." Lord Mansfield objected to the reason at first given for this view, namely, that the carrier should have a sufficient force to repel a mob, and observed that there are cases in which that would be impossible. He suggested the true reason, namely, the fear that it may give room for collusion, that the carrier may contrive to do wrong on purpose to share the spoil.[3] In Blackstock v. New York, etc., Railroad,[4] the question arose as to whether, injury in these cases was occasioned by a cause which human foresight or sagacity could not have apprehended. The holding, therefore, is not in conflict with the rule as we have stated it."

1. New Mexico.—In MacVeagh v. Atchison, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 651, the carrier failed to forward the goods promptly in consequence of which delay they were attached. Held, that he was not liable, as his negligence was the remote and not the proximate cause of the injury. Seizure under legal process, like the act of God, will excuse the common carrier from delivering goods intrusted to his care for shipment.

2. Railroad v. Reeves, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 176.

3. "If," said Lord Holt in Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Salk. 919, "the force used be never so great, as if an irresistible multitude of persons should rob him (the carrier), he is, nevertheless, responsible." To the same effect are the remarks of Lord Mansfield in Forward v. Pittard, 1 T. R. 27: "If an armed force come to rob the carrier of his goods he is liable, and a reason is given in the books which is a bad reason, viz., 'that he ought to have a sufficient force to repel it.' But that would be impossible in some cases, as, for instance, in the riots of 1780 (the Lord George Gordon riots). The true reason is for fear it may give room for collusion, that the carrier may contrive to be robbed on purpose and share the spoil." It was, accordingly, held in Barclay et al. v. Cevailla y Gana, 3 Doug. 389, where a vessel lying in the Thames, with goods on board, was seized at night by a band of eleven armed men and plundered of her cargo, that the captain was liable to the shippers for the loss, and could not defend on the ground of vis major. In the United States a number of decisions have been rendered in which this interesting question has been touched upon. As to Indians, Holladay v. Kennards, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 254. Confederate forces in War of the Rebellion. Hubbard v. Hernden Exp. Co., 10 R. I. 244; Lewis v. Ludwick, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 368; Philadelphia, etc. R. v. Harper, 29 Md. 330; Gage v. Tirrell, 9 Allen (Mass.), 299; Bland v. Adams Exp. Co., 1 Duv. (Ky.) 232; Porcher v. Northeastern, etc., R., 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 181; Nashville, etc., R. v. Estes, 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 492. Compare McCrane v. Wood, 24 La. Ann. 406. United States troops in same war. Southern Exp. Co. v. Womack, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 256; Smith v. Brazelton, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 44.

5. In Blackstock v. N. Y. & Erie R. Co., 20 N. Y. 48, the facts were these: On May 15, 1874, the company defendant adopted a regulation whereby their engineers were made respectively accountable for running any train upon a switch at a station where it ought to stop. This regulation the referee found to be a reasonable one. In consequence thereof, however, one hundred and forty out of one hundred and sixty-eight engineers employed struck for a period of two weeks, during which time the transportation of certain potatoes belonging to the plaintiff was delayed. The court held the company liable for the damage thus occasioned, reasoning as follows: "Assuming, then, that abandoning their work was a breach of duty on the part of the engineers, they by this act became responsible to the defendants for all its direct consequences. The case, therefore, is one in which the actual delinquents were responsible to the defendants, but were not responsible to the plaintiff. This shows the equity of the rule which holds the master or employer answerable in such cases. Its policy is not less where the delay occurred through a strike of railroad employees, the carrier was liable. It was held that he was, and the court considered the railroad liable for the acts of its employees upon the ground that those who intrust their goods to carriers have no means of ascertaining the character or disposition of their agents or servants, have no voice in their selection, and no control over their actions. The latest cases upon the subject, however, have established a contrary doctrine, and the ruling in the case referred to has been overthrown in New York. In an Indiana case,[1] the apparent. Those who intrust their goods to carriers have no means of ascertaining the character or disposition of their subordinate agents or servants; they have no agency in their selection and no control over their actions. . . . The rule which the law has adopted, by which a master is held responible for the acts of his servants, is the best calculated to secure the observance of good faith on the part of persons intrusted with the property of others."

1. In Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Hollowell, 65 Ind. 188, it appeared that the railroad company was prevented from receiving and transporting cattle belonging to the plaintiff, as it had agreed to do, by reason of the forcible resistance of an armed mob, who prevented the company from moving its trains. Plaintiff urged that on principle a mob was not a "public enemy," and that therefore the company defendant was clearly liable. The court, however, said: "The strict rule contended for by the appellee is applicable to common carriers only after they have received the goods for transportation and fail to deliver them at their destination, or when they are lost. In cases like the present, for delay in receiving and carrying the goods, the carrier is not an insurer, and is bound only by the general rule of liability for the breach of his contract or of his public duty as a carrier, and may be excused for delay in receiving the goods or in transporting them after they have been received, whenever the delay is necessarily caused by unforeseen disaster, which human prudence cannot provide against, or by accident not caused by the negligence of the carrier, or by thieves and robbers, or an uncontrollable mob."

In Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago R. v. Hazen, 84 Ill. 36, plaintiff shipped certain cheese over the line of the defendant's road from Chicago to New York. While in transit a strike of the company's employees occurred, who refused to work. They were accordingly discharged and new hands were employed. The strikers, however, forcibly prevented the new hands from running the trains, in consequence of which the transportation of plaintiff's cheese was delayed and the cheese spoiled. Under the circumstances the court held the company absolved from liability. See also Lake Shore, etc., R. v. Bennett, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 391.

In Sherman, Hall & Co. v. Penn. R., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 274, the question was not fairly raised. Plaintiffs here shipped goods under a bill of lading which contained a clause relieving the carrier from liability in case of fire. While in transit a strike occurred. An armed mob prevented all cars from moving east of Pittsburgh, and when the car containing plaintiff's goods arrived there said mob forced the company to permit it to stand on the track. Within a few hours afterward some contiguous cars containing petroleum were fired by the mob. The flames communicated to plaintiff's goods and they were consequently destroyed. The court held that it was clear that the cause of the loss was within the exempting clause of the bill of lading, and entered judgment for the defendant accordingly.

A similar conclusion was reached in Wertheimer v. Penn. R., 17 Blatchf. C. C. 421, where goods were lost at the same time, shipped under a similar bill of lading. In this case, however, the court added the following: "Where it appears, as it did here, that the fire by which the plaintiff's goods were destroyed was the act of a mob, engaged in a struggle with the military authorities of the State without anything to show that the defendants were bound from the circumstances to anticipate such a result, the defence was affirmatively established."

In Seligman v. Armigo, 1 New Mex. 459, defendant undertook to carry certain liquor for the plaintiff across the plains. On the way he was stopped by a detachment of United States soldiers, and the liquor was taken from him and destroyed, it being alleged court pointed out that under such circumstances the carrier was not an insurer, and liable for delay in receiving and carrying the goods. He is bound only by the general rule of liability for the breach of his contract or of his public duty as a carrier, and may be excused for delay in receiving the goods or in transferring them after they have been received, whenever the delay is necessarily caused by unforeseen disaster which human prudence cannot provide against; or by an accident not caused by the negligence of the carrier; or by thieves and robbers, or an uncontrollable mob. In the latest case[1] on the subject, it was said that in respect to the liability of the railroad company for delay in the transportation and delivery of goods all that can be required of the carrier is the exercise of due care to forward and deliver promptly; that there is no absolute duty resting upon the carrier by railroad to deliver goods within what is, under ordinary circumstances, a reasonable time. The court rejected the reasoning that because the strikers were employees of the company and the carrier might have put an end to the strike and delay by yielding to their demands, upon the ground that it was shown the carrier held employees at hand who were able and willing to move the trains required for carriage of the goods, but were forbidden and prevented by the violent and lawless acts of the strikers; and that the lawless acts of employees adverse to the interests and contrary to the orders of the carrier could not be imputed to him as having been done by his agents and servants.

that he had been selling it to the troops and the Indians, though this was actually not the case. Suit being brought to recover the value of the liquor, defendant set up the doctrine of vis major. The strict rule of the common law was, however, applied, and he was held liable accordingly. See also I. & St. Louis R. v. Juntgen, 10 Brad. (Ill.) 295.

1. In Greisemer v. Lake Shore, etc., R. (New York), 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287, it was held that in respect to the liability of a railroad company for delay in transportation and delivery of goods, all that can be required of it is the exercise of due care to forward and deliver promptly. There is no absolute duty resting upon a carrier by railroad to deliver goods within what is, under ordinary circumstances, a reasonable time. When the misconduct of men acting unlawfully, such as incendiaries, mobs, etc., delays the running of trains, the only duty resting upon the carrier, if not otherwise in fault, is to use reasonable diligence to overcome the obstacles interposed, and forward the goods. The facts that persons who formed themselves into a mob and organized arrangements to hinder the running of railroad trains were employees of the company engaged by it to render the various services needful in operating the road, that they united in a "strike," and engaged in lawless acts of violence, injurious to the property and discipline of the company, and which for a time prevented the running of trains, as a means of coercing the company in yielding to their demands upon it, relative to hours of labor, rate of wages, and like matters, and that the company might have put an end to the strike and the detention by yielding to such demands, but did not do so, do not prevent the company from interposing the detention as a defence to a demand of shippers of goods over the road for damages for delay in transportation, especially if it had, throughout the detention, employees at hand who were able and willing to move the trains required for carriage of the plaintiff's goods, but who were forbidden and prevented by the violent, lawless acts of the strikers. Lawless acts of employees, adverse to the interests and contrary to the orders of the employer, cannot be imputed to it as having been done by its agents and servants.

(f) Delay Generally.—In a New York case[1] it was held that the carrier is liable for the negligent delay, notwithstanding an exemption from liability for delay in the bill of lading. Where a railroad company contracts to carry goods over its own and connecting routes, and deliver the same within a certain time at a distance beyond the terminus of its own line, it is liable to the consignor for damages caused by delay in transportation over such connecting road.[2] A clause in a bill of lading that the goods will be shipped "at the convenience of the company" will not protect it from liability for an unreasonable delay.[3]

(g) Measure of Damages for Delay.—In case of delay in the transportation of goods, the proper measure of damages is the difference between the market value of the goods when delivered and that at the time they should have been delivered.[4]

The damages recoverable from a carrier for an unreasonable delay are only such as are actual and legitimate. The carrier is not liable for hypothetical damages, nor for any supposed loss occurring in an illegal traffic.[5]

3. CARRIER'S LIABILITY ARISING FROM DEVIATION.—The carrier is liable for a deviation from his usual route where a loss occurs in consequence, whether or not such loss be attributable to an act of God.[6] In a leading case[7] it was urged that

1. Nicholas v. New York Central, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103.

2. Pereira v. New York Central, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103. Compare Hewitt v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 568.

3. In Branch v. Wilmington, etc., R., 88 N. Car. 573; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 621, it was held that the clause in a bill of lading that the goods will be shipped "at the convenience of the company," will not protect it from liability for an unreasonable delay. Smith, C. J., remarked in this case: "The clause in the receipt assenting to the conveyance of the goods at the convenience of the company cannot be permitted to protect the company from liability for an unreasonable detention of the goods in their warehouse, nor from the forfeiture incurred thereby. It would be against public policy to allow common carriers to free themselves from this common-law obligation by a stipulation that they should consult their own convenience about the time of carriage of goods intrusted to their custody for that purpose."

4. Measure of Damages for Delay in Transporting Goods.—Newell v. Smith, 49 Vt. 255; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cobb, 72 Ill. 148; Devereux, Receiver, v. Buckley, 34 Ohio St. 16; Rankin v. Pacific R. Co., 55 Mo. 167; Detroit & Bay City R. Co. v. McKenzie, 43 Mich. 209, Lindley v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 31; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Montgomery, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 195; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mason, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 116; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 241.

In St. Louis, etc., R. v. Mudford, 44 Ark. 439; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 139, it was held that a common carrier is liable in damages for negligent delay in the transportation of property; but the owner cannot, on account of unreasonable delay in the transportation and delivery, refuse to receive the goods and sue as for a conversion. He can claim only the damages sustained by the delay. See also Hutchinson on Carriers, § 775; 3 Sutherland on Damages, 215, Scovill v. Griffith, 12 N. Y. 509.

5. Gerhard v. Neese, 36 Tex. 635.

6. See cases cited in succeeding note.

7. In Davis v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 716, where a quantity of lime was lost, as plaintiff claimed, in consequence of a deviation from the usual and customary route of the carrier, without any justifiable cause, it was held that the carrier could not set up as a defence the possibility of a similar loss occurring in his regular route from similar causes; that no wrong doer could apportion or qualify his own wrong. Ch. J. Tindal remarks: "But the objection taken is, that there is there was no natural or necessary connection between the deviation and the loss, for the latter might have as well occurred on the direct route. But the court pointed out that the real answer to such a claim was, that no wrongdoer could be allowed to apportion or qualify his own wrong. As the loss had actually happened whilst his wrongful act was in operation, and was attributable to his wrongful act, he could not set up as an answer a bare possibility of a loss had the deviation not occurred. That it might admit of a different construction could the carrier show not only that the same loss might have happened, but that it must have happened, if the act complained of had not been done. The difficulty of such proof has been noticed by the various authorities, but it was said in one case that if the carrier could show that the loss must have certainly occurred had there been no deviation, he would not be liable.[1]

Consent of the owner to a deviation will excuse the carrier.[2] Such consent may be inferred where the carrier has a choice of two rontes which are equally safe, and the contract does not confine him to a stipulated route. But the carrier's choice of an unsafe route will not excuse him.[3] no natural or necessary connection between the wrong of the master in taking the barge out of its proper course and the loss itself; for that the same loss might have been occasioned by the very same tempest if the barge had proceeded in her direct course. But if this argument were to prevail, the deviation of the master, which is undoubtedly a ground of action against the owner, would never, or only under very peculiar circumstances, entitle the plaintiff to recover. For if a ship is captured in the course of deviation, no one can be certain that she might not have been captured if in her proper course. And yet in Parker v. James, 4 Camp. 112, where the ship was captured while in the course of deviation, no such ground of defence was even suggested. Or, again, if the ship strikes against a rock or perishes by storm in the one course, no one can predicate that she might not equally have struck upon another rock or met with the same or another storm if pursuing her right and ordinary voyage. . . . But we think the real answer to the objection is, that no wrong-doer can be allowed to apportion or qualify his own wrong; and that as a loss has actually happened whilst his wrongful act was in operation and force, and which is attributable to his wrongful act, he cannot set up as an answer to the action the bare possibility of a loss if his wrongful act had never been done. It might admit of a different construction if he could show not only that the same loss might have happened, but that it must have happened if the act complained of had not been done; but there is no evidence to that effect in the present case." Powers v. Davenport, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 497; Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410; Express Co. v. Kountze, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 342; Williams v. Grant, 1 Conn. 487; Lawrence v. McGregor, Wright (Ohio), 193; Phillips v. Brigham, 26 Ga. 617; Hand v. Baynes, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 204; Robinson v. Merchant's Disp. Transp. Co., 45 Iowa 470; Stewart v. Merchant's Disp. Trans. Co., 47 Iowa, 229; Johnson v. New York Central, etc., R., 33 N. Y. 610; Galveston, etc., R. v. Allison, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 28.

1. In Maghee v. Camden, etc., R., 45 N. Y. 514, it was said that if a carrier can show that the loss must have certainly occurred had there been no deviation, he will not be liable. "It is difficult to see how such proof would be possible." Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 11; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 210; Story on Bailments (9th ed.) § 413 d.

2. Hendricks v. The Morning Star, 18 La. Ann. 353; Harris v. Rand, 4 N. H. 289 (criticised in Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 143).

3. In Bird v. Georgia R., 72 Ga. 655; S. C. 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 39, it was held that a carrier who receives goods to be carried over its own lines and over successive lines of transportation connected therewith, to be delivered at some distant point, acts as the forwarding

The carrier may set up in excuse of a deviation a sudden emergency which justified it.[1]

In emergencies which justify a deviation, and when the owner's consent might fairly be presumed, the carrier may act in contradiction or modification of the letter of his instructions, but should give notice of such action as promptly as possible.[2]

The burden of proof lies upon the carrier to explain the necessity for a deviation.[3] The question of a necessity justifying a deviation is one of law for the court.[4]

4. CARE DURING TRANSIT.—The carrier must give all reasonable care and attention to the goods during the transit, where through accident they are, from their nature, peculiarly exposed to danger.[5] This principle has been held, however, not to be extended to the compelling a carrier to suspend his voyage to care for the damaged goods to the probable injury or delay of whatever else he may be transporting.

agent of the owner in giving instructions as to the transportation of the goods; and in case of a mistake by the first carrier in directing the goods, the last carrier will have a lien upon them for the freight earned by it, unless the owner gave notice of the route and the lines of road over which his goods were to be transported. If goods were shipped over a connecting line of roads, and there were two routes by which the terminal point could be reached, one of which was designated by direction of the consignee, who was also the owner, but they were, in fact, sent to the terminal point by the other route, if the road so wrongly receiving them knew of the direction as to their shipment when it received them, its transportation of the goods would be voluntary; it would have no right to charge freight for transportation, would have no lien on the goods for such charges, and could not retain possession for the purpose of collecting them. A demand by the consignee and refusal by the defendant to deliver the goods would be a conversion for which trover would lie; and the county where such demand and refusal occurred would be the proper venue of the action. Whether the carrier receiving and transporting the goods had knowledge of the direction that they should be transported by a different line, was a question of fact for the jury; and the marks on the goods, with other circumstances, could be considered in determining that question. See also Hand v. Baynes, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 204; Johnson v. New York, etc., R., 33 N. Y. 610; Sager v. Portsmouth, etc., R., 31 Me. 228; Ingalls v. Brooks, Ed. Sel. Cas. 104.

1. Maryland Ins. Co. v. Le Roy, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 26; Johnson v. New York, etc., R., 33 N. Y. 610; Sager v. Portsmouth, etc., R., 31 Me. 228.

2. Johnson v. New York Central, etc., R., 33 N. Y. 610; Fisk v. Newton, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 45; Goodrich v. Thompson, 44 N. Y. 324; Sager v. Portsmouth, etc., R., 31 Me. 228.

3. Hand v. Baynes, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 204; Ackley v. Kellogg, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 223; Le Sage v. Great Western, etc., R., 1 Daly (N. Y.), 306.

4. Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410; Read v. Spaulding, 30 N. Y. 630.

5. Poultry.—Peck v. Weeks, 34 Conn. 145.

Furs.—Chouteaux v. Leech, 18 Pa. St. 224.

Brandy Leaking.—Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244; Cox v. London, etc., R., 3 F. & F. 77. See also Hudson v. Bavendale, 6 W. R. 83.

Wet Coffee.—Bird v. Cromwell, 1 Mo. 58.

Wet Beans.—Notara v. Henderson, L. R. 52 B. 346; s. c., Exch. Ch. L. R. 7 Q. B. 225.

Failure to Wet Casks Containing Oil to Prevent Leakage.—Hunnewell v. Taber, 2 Sprague (R. I.), 1.

Neglect to Supply Ice for Meat.—Sherman v. Inman Steamship Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.), 107.

6. The Lynx v. King, 12 Mo. 272; Notara v. Henderson, L. R. 5 Q. B. 346. See also The Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. (U. S.) 7; Blocker v. Whittenburg, 12 La. Ann. 410; Rogers v. Murray, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 357; s. c., 1 Blatchf. C. C. 196; The Brig Gentleman, Olcott's Adm. 110; The America, 8 Ben. C. C. 491;

5. MEASURE OF CARE AFTER DISASTER.—Even though the loss of or damage to the goods may impose no liability upon the carrier, because occurring in the first instance through an act of God, he is still held to an account for his care of what remains uninjured.[1]

6. FELONY OF SERVANTS.—In England, under the Carriers Act,[2] which provides that it shall not be construed to protect the carrier from liability for the felonious acts of any of his servants, a defence by the carrier which shows that he has been guilty of no negligence is ineffectual.[3]

A carrier is no less liable for the fraud or felony of his servants than for their negligence.[4]

7. PERISHABLE GOODS.—The carrier is in general not liable for injury to goods occurring without his negligence, where from their intrinsic qualities or perishable nature they are peculiarly exposed to danger.[5] The carrier in a pressure of business may discriminate in favor of perishable goods.[6]

8. DEFECTIVE PACKING.—The carrier is not liable for loss or injury occurring through defective packing, where such defects are not apparent.[7] Patent defects to packing will justify the carrier

Davidson v. Guynne, 12 East, 381; Sherman v. Inman Steamship Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.), 107; The Brig Collenberg, 1 Black (U. S.), 170; Ship Howard v. Wissman, 18 How. (U. S.) 231; Warden v. Greer, 6 Watts (Pa.), 424; Leech v. Baldwin, 5 Watts (Pa.), 446; Gowdy v. Lyon, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 112; Burwell v. Railroad Co., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 410; Kinnick v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 55.

In Kinnick v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 55, it was held that a common carrier is an insurer of the safety of property in its charge for transportation, and is not released from that extraordinary liability for its care by an accident which causes delay, even though it offers an excuse for the delay.

1. See supra, LIABILITY FOR DELAY; Chouteaux v. Leech, 18 Pa. St. 224; Day v. Ridley, 16 Vt. 48; Craig v. Childress, Peck (Tenn.), 270; The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 435.

2. 1 Will. V. cap. 68.

3. The Carriers' Act (§ 8) provides that it shall not be construed to protect the carrier from liability for the felonious acts of any of his servants. A defence by the carrier which shows that he has been guilty of no negligence is ineffectual. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 55; Great Western R. v. Rimmel, 27 L. J. C. P. 201; 18 C. B. 575; explaining Butt v. Great Western R., 11 C. B. 149; 20 L. J. C. P. 241. See, generally, Vaughton v. London, etc., R., 43 L. J. Exch. 75; L. R. 9 Exch. 93; Kirkstall Brewery Co. v. Furness R., 43 L. J. Q. B. 142; L. R. 9 Q. B. 468; McQueen v. Great Western R., 44 L. J. Q. B. 130; L. R. 10 Q. B. 569; Turner v. Great Western R., 34 L. T. 22.

4. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 248, and see cases supra, CONTRACTS LIMITING LIABILITY.

Canada.—Grand Trunk, etc., R. v. Vogel, 11 Sup. Ct. Canada, 612; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 18. Compare Dodson v. Grand Trunk R., 7 Can. L. J. N. S. 263; Sutherland v. Great Western R., 7. U. C. C. P. 409; Alexander v. Toronto, etc., R., 36 U. C. Q. B. 453; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 27.

5. See, generally, Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), § 492*a*; Boyd v. Dubois, 3 Camp. 133; Hunter v. Potts, 4 Camp. 203; Kendall v. L. & S. W. R., L. R. 7 Exch. 573; 41 L. J. (Exch.) 184; Nugent v. Smith, 45 L. J. C. P. 697; L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 423. See also supra, this title, LIABILITY FOR DELAY. Wabash, etc., R. v. Jaggerman, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 680.

6. Michigan Central, etc., R. v. Burrows, 33 Mich. 6; Great Western etc., R., v. Burns, 60 Ill. 284; Peet v. Railroad, 20 Wis. 594; Marshall v. Railroad, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 502; Tierney v. Railroad, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 569.

7. Northeastern R. v. Richardson, 41 L. J. C. P. 60; L. R. 7 C. P. 75; Barbour v. Southeastern R., 34 L. T. N. S.

in refusing to receive.[1] Carrying in a manifestly unsafe condition is carrying without due care; and where the carrier has failed to exercise his right to refuse goods defectively packed where the defect is visible, he becomes liable if the goods are damaged, although partly through the packing; and the defective packing only goes in reduction of damages.[2]

9. SEIZURE OF GOODS BY LEGAL PROCESS.—Seizure of goods intrusted to a carrier under a valid and legal process of law constitutes a good and sufficient excuse for non-delivery.[3] If, however, the goods have been improperly attached and detained by legal process, the carrier cannot set this up as a defence.[4] In such case the carrier must notify the owner of such process.[5]

(a) Color of Title Adverse to Consignor.—The carrier is not excused for non-delivery where he has delivered the goods to persons setting up an adverse title to that of the consignor, no matter how good that title may be.[6]

(b) When Goods in the Carrier's Custody are Attachable.—Goods in the custody of a railroad company within the State and county where the writ is issued at the time of the issuing of the writ 67; Nelson v. Stephenson, 5 Duer (N. Y.). 538.

1. See supra, CARRIER'S DUTY TO RECEIVE.

2. Higginbotham v. Great Northern R., 10 W. R. 358.

3. Valid Attachment Good Excuse for Non-delivery.—Rogers v. Weir, 34 N. Y. 463. Compare Mierson v. Hope, 2 Sweeney, 561; Burton v. Wilkinson, 18 Vt. 186; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Wilcox, 48 Ga. 432; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Yohe, 51 Ind. 181; Bliven v. Railroad, 36 N. Y. 403; Stiles v. Davis, 1 Black (U. S.), 101; The Idaho, 93 U. S. 575; Edson v. Weston, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 278; Van Winkle v. Steamship Co., 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; Furman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 280; MacVeagh v. Atchison, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 651.

4. Invalid Attachment No Excuse for Non-delivery.—Kibb v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 117 Mass. 591; Edwards v. White Line Transit Co., 104 Mass. 159; Faust v. South Carolina R. Co., 8 S. Car., 118.

In McAllister v. Chicago, etc., R., 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 210, where certain cattle while in transportation were unloaded from the cars of the company, and were then illegally seized under a writ for an alleged violation of the statute of the State prohibiting the introduction of Texas, Mexican, or Indian cattle into the State, and subsequently were sold to satisfy the fine, the costs of the proceedings, and the forage and care of the cattle, held, that the company was not liable for the loss of the cattle, upon the allegation of a wrongful unloading, the damages being too remote.

In Furman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 280, goods belonging to the wife and consigned to her at Atchison, Kansas, were delivered to a carrier at Chicago by the husband, who had authority to so deliver the same and contract for their transportation. After their delivery to the carrier they were attached in an action against the husband and taken possession of by an officer, and upon the husband going to the office of the carrier to direct a change of place of shipment he was informed of the attachment, and after such notice had ample time to assert plaintiff's right to the goods. Held, that upon such showing a verdict against the carrier for failure to deliver the goods, pursuant to the contract for their carriage, should be set aside as against the evidence.

5. The liability of a common carrier ceases if the goods are taken from his possession by legal process, but he must notify the owner of such process. Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Wilcox et al., 48 Ga. 432; s. c., 11 Am. R. Rep. 375; Styles v. Davis, 1 Black (U. S.), 101; Bliven v. Hudson, etc., R. Co., 36 N. Y. 403; Burton v. Wilkinson, 18 Vt. 186; Edson v. Weston, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 278; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Yohe, 51 Ind. 181; Mierson v. Hope, 2 Sweeney (N. Y.), 561.

6. Color of Title Adverse to Consignor.—Western Transp. Co. v. Barber, 56 N. Y.

would seem clearly to be subject to attachment.[1] But where the property is not at the time in the State or county, it cannot be attached. This is the case because where the goods are not in the county they are not capable of manual seizure.[2]

10. STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.—Stoppage in transitu is the right of a vendor of goods upon credit, to reclaim and take possession of them while they are being carried to the vendee, whose bankruptcy or insolvency has occurred or become known after the sale.[3] It exists only where goods are sold on credit, where the consignee is insolvent, and where the goods are still in transit and have not been delivered to the consignee.[4]

Numerous remedies exist for the enforcement of this right in case of a demand for the goods and a refusal to deliver them. Thus trover,[5] trespass on the case[6] and replevin[7] may be employed. A bill in equity is an available remedy.[8]

(a) Who Possesses the Right to Stop in Transitu.—The right to stop belongs only to the vendor of goods on credit or to one who occupies a similar position.[9] But when the vendor has received 544; Rosenfeld v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 131; The Idaho, 93 U. S. 575.

1. When Goods in Custody of Carrier are Attachable.—Wheat v. Platte City & Ft. Des Moines R. Co., 4 Kans. 370; Sutherland v. Second Nat. Bank of Peoria, 78 Ky. 250; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 368; Western R. v. Thornton, 60 Ga. 300; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cole, 48 Ill. 402; Lawrence v. Smith, 45 N. H. 533.

2. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pollock, 51 Pa. St. 244.

3. Lickbarrow v. Mason, 1 Sm. Lead. Cas. 699; Whitehead v. Anderson, Tudor's Lead. Cas. 632 and notes; Chicago, etc., R. v. Painter, 15 Neb. 594; Bloomingdale v. Memphis, etc., R., 6 Lea (Tenn.). 618; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371.

The essential feature of a stoppage in transitu is that the goods should be at the time in the possession of a middleman, or of some person intervening between the vendor who has parted with and the purchaser who has not yet received them. Schotsman v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L. R. 2 Ch. App. 332.

The goods are liable to stoppage so long as they remain in possession of the carrier. Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457; James v. Griffin, 2 M. & W. 633; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 1 Smith's L. C. 699; Reynold's v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 591; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 154; White v. Mitchell, 38 Mich. 390; Chicago, etc., R. v. Painter, 15 Nev. 594. See Wigton v. Bowley, 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 328.

4. Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), § 581.

5. Morrison v. Gray, 2 Bing. 260; Clough v. London, etc., R., L. R. 7 Exch. 26; Bohtlingtk v. Inglis, 3 East, 381; Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454.

6. Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 281; Pottinger v. Hecksher, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 309.

7. Hay v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 48; Newhall v. Railroad, 51 Cal. 345; Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 515; Chicago, etc., R. v. Painter, 15 Neb. 396. See also Howe v. Stuart, 40 Vt. 145; Reynolds v. Railroad, 43 N. H. 580; Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kans. 251; McFetridge v. Piper, 40 Iowa, 627.

8. Hause v. Judson, 4 Dana (Ky.), 7; Ford v. Sproule, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 528; Schotsmans v. Railway, L. R. 1 Eq. 349; L. R. 2 Ch. App. 332. Compare Straker v. Erving, 34 Beav. 147.

9. Kinloch v. Craig, 3 T. R. 783; Feise v. May, 3 East, 93; Van Castell v. Booker, 18 L. J. Exch. 17; The Tigress, 32 L. J. Adm. 97; Newsom v. Thornton, 6 East, 17; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 93. Compare Siffken v. May, 6 East, 371; Sweet v. Pyne, 1 East, 4. See also Bachellor v. Lawrence, 6 C. B. N. S. 543; De Wolff v. Lindsell, L. R. 5 Eq. 209; Phillips v. Dickson, 8 C. B. N. S. 391; Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 786; Davis v. McWhirter, 40 Up. Can. Q. B. 598; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 93; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R., 43 N. H. 580; Gassler v. Schepler, 5 Daly (N. Y.), 476; Durgy Cement Co. v. O'Brien, 123 Mass. 12; Jenkins v. Jarrett, 70 N. Car. 255; Ober v. Smith, 78 N.

part payment for the goods he will still have the right of stoppage in transitu for the balance of purchase-money due.[1] The right will not be lost by his receipt of notes or bills of exchange as conditional payment, even though he may have negotiated the bills so that they are outstanding in third hands.[2] Persons not vendors of the consignee, and having no priority of contract with him, cannot stop goods in transitu.[3]

(b) Waiver of the Vendor's Rights.—The right of stoppage in transitu may be waived by the vendor, as, for example, where he knows of the vendee's insolvency at the time of the sale.[4]

An attachment of the goods by the vendor while they are in transit is a waiver of his right to stop.[5] A railroad receiving goods from a vendor consigned to the vendee is the agent of the latter, and liable to him only for its safe delivery. The vendor having no further authority over them, except the right of stoppage in transitu, they cannot be attached for his debt.[6]

But attachment of the goods in transit by a creditor of the vendee will not defeat the right.[7]

Car. 313; Gwyn v. Richmond, etc., R., 85 N. Car. 427; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 452.

1. Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 93; Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440; Feise v. Wray, 3 East, 75; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Van Casteel v. Booker, 2 Ex. 702.

2. White v. Welsh, 396; Arnold v. Delano, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 53; Donath v. Bromhead, 7 Pa. St. 301; Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 148; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Ga.) 189; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 93; Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 345; Kinloch v. Craig, 4 Brg. P. C. 47; Feise v. Wray, 3 East, 93; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Patten v. Thompson, 5 M. & S. 350; Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440; Miles v. Gorton, 2 C. & M. 504; Lewis v. Mason, 36 U. C. Q. B. 590.

But where the vendor has taken the vendee's acceptance in full payment, the goods cannot be stopped in transitu, unless the acceptances have been dishonored. Davis v. Reynolds; Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kans. 257; Eaton v. Cook, 32 Vt. 48.

A being indebted to B on balance of accounts, including bills still running, accepted by B for A, consigned goods to B on account of this balance. Held, that A had a right to stop the goods in transitu upon B becoming insolvent before the bills were paid. Vertue v. Jewell, 4 Camp. 31. Compare Patten v. Thompson, 5 M. & S. 350; Kinloch v. Craig, 3 T. R. 786; Wood v. Roach, 1 Yeates (Ga.), 177; Clark v. Mauran, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 373; Wood v. Jones, 7 D. & R. 126.

3. Memphis, etc., R. v. Freed, 38 Ark. 614; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 212.

4. Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137, Conyers v. Ennis, 2 Mason, 236; O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122.

In Mason v. Elliott, 30 La. Ann. 147, it was held that where cotton is nominally sold for cash but the price is not paid on delivery, and the vendor receives on the following day a part of the price and accepts security for the balance, the right to stop is waived. See also Valpy v. Gibson, 16 L. J. C. P. 241; 4 C. B. 837.

And generally where goods are purchased and paid for by the order, note, or accepted bill of a third party, without the indorsement or guaranty of the purchaser, the vendor has no right to stop. Eaton v. Cook 32 Vt. 58. But the commencement of an action against the vendee by the attorney of the vendor for the price of the goods sold on credit without the vendor's knowledge, and before either was apprised that the transit was not ended, is not a waiver of the right to stop, if it is asserted within a reasonable time and the improvident action be discontinued. Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 281.

5. An attachment of the goods by the vendor while they are in transit waives his right to stop them. Woodruff v. Noyes, 15 Conn. 235.

6. Louisville, etc., R. v. Spalding, 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 418.

7. But an attachment of the goods in transit by a creditor of the vendee will not defeat the right. Clark v. Sheriff, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 83; Buckley v. Furniss, 15

Nor will a sale of goods attached by order of court defeat the right.[1]

Nor will the wrongful delivery of the goods to one not entitled to receive them preclude the right to stop.[2]

(c) Notice to the Carrier.—The carrier is entitled to express notice from the consignor before he will be liable for not stopping goods in transit. To make such a notice effective it must be given at such a time and under such circumstances that the carrier may, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, communicate it to his servants in time to prevent the delivery of the goods to the consignee.[3] Where there is no general freight agent of a railroad, notice to station agent is sufficient.[4]

(d) When the Transit Ends.—The English rule to be collected from the cases is said to be that the goods are in transit so long as they are in the hands of the carrier as such, no matter whether he was or was not appointed by the consignee. To end the transit there must be an actual delivery of the goods to the vendee or his agent; not a mere constructive delivery, such as that of a shipmaster on the order of and engaged by the vendee.[5]

The transit was not considered to be ended under the following circumstances: Goods taken from carrier by agent of the purchaser, who was not held to be sufficiently a representative of his principal.[6] Mere arrival of a vessel at the wharf without delivery out of hold.[7] Where freight remained to be paid.[8] A promise

Wend. (N. Y.) 137; Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 515; Wood v. Yeatman, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 270; Woodruff v. Noyes, 15 Conn. 335; O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122; Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 48; Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 508; Aguirre v. Parmalee, 22 Conn. 473; Blum v. Marks, 21 La. Ann. 268; Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 281; Rucker v. Donavin, 13 Kan. 251; Morris v. Shryock, 50 Miss. 590; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 272; Smith v. Goss, 1 Camp. 282; Chicago, etc., R. v. Painter, 15 Neb. 394.

1. Neither will a sale of goods attached by order of court defeat the right. The effect of such sale is merely to convert the goods into money, which remains in the hands of the sheriff pending the determination of the attachment, and subject to any claims that might have been asserted against the goods themselves. O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122.

2 Kitchen v. Spear, 30 Vt. 545. See also Lentz v. Flint, etc , R., 53 Mich. 444; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 82.

3. Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518; Litt v. Cowley, 7 Taunt. 169; Ex parte Falk, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 446; Ascher v. Grand Trunk R., 36 U. C. Q. B. 609; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189; Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Denio (N. Y.), 629; Bloomingdale v. Memphis, etc., R., 6 Lea (Tenn.), 618; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371.

4. Poole v. Houston, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 197.

5. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 94; Ex parte Rosevear Clay Co., Re Cock, L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 560; 40 L. T. N. S. 730; Ex parte Cooper, Re McLaren, 48 L. J. Bkcy. 49; L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 68; Ex parte Golding, Davis & Co., Re Knight, 28 W. R. 481; 42 L. T. N. S. 270; Schotsmans v. Lancashire, etc., R., 36 L. J. Ch. 361, L. R. 2 Ch. 332; Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 M. & W. 328; Berndtson v. Strang, 37 L. J. Ch. 665, L. R. 3 Ch. 588; Coventry v. Gladstone, 37 L. J. Ch. 492, L. R. 6 Eq. 44; Chicago, etc., R. v. Painter, 15 Neb. 394. See also Bartram v. Farebrother, 4 Bing. 579; Coates v. Railton, 6 B. & C. 422; Benjamin on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), §§ 839, 844.

6. Bolin v. Huffnagle, 7 Rawle (Pa.), 9; Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; Cabeen v. Campbell, 6 Casey (Pa.), 254; Harris v. Hart, 6 Duer (N. Y.), 606; Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249. Compare James v. Griffin, 2 M. & W. 633; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 534; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 93; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 453.

7. Tucker v. Humphrey, 4 Bing. 516;

8. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 416. Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518.

by the carrier to deliver as soon as goods can be got at, but no actual delivery.[1] An authorized demand upon the carrier with which he fails to comply.[2] Where consignee, having no warehouse of his own, is accustomed so to employ that of the carrier, the transit ends when goods arrive, even though they immediately receive a fresh destination.[3]

But delivery, actual or constructive, of the goods to the vendee or his servant will defeat the right of stoppage in transitu.[4]

1. Coventry v. Gladstone, 37 L. J. Ch. 492; L. R. 6 Eq. 44.

2. Reynolds v. Railroad, 43 N. H. 480, Allen v. Mercier, 1 Ash, 103.

3. Scott v. Pettit, 3 B. & P. 469; Rowe v. Pickford, 8 Taunt. 83; Allan v. Gripper, 2 Cr. & J. 218; Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107; Hurry v. Mangles, 1 Camp. 512. See also Wentworth v. Outhwaite, 10 M. & W. 436.

4. A delivery, actual or constructive, of the goods to vendee or his servant or agent will defeat the right of stoppage in transitu. Ogle v. Atkinson, 5 Taunt. 759; Bolton v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 1 L. R. C. P. 431; Turner v. Liverpool Docks Co , 6 Ex. 543; Van Casteel v. Booker, 2 Ex. 691; Ellis v. Hunt, 3 J. R. 464; Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175; Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 521; Covel v. Hitchcox, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Denio (N. Y.), 629; Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249; Aguiree v. Parmelee, 22 Conn. 473; Moses v. Boston, etc.. R. Co., 24 N. H. 71; Smith v. Nashua R. Co., 27 N. H. 86; Clark v. Needles, 25 Pa. St. 338; McCarthy v. N.Y., etc., R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 247; Wood v. Crocker, 18 Wis. 345; Alabama, etc.. R. Co. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209; Michigan, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, 2 Mich. 539; Moses v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 32 N. H. 523.

Where the goods come into the hands of a shipping-agent of the vendee, who has no authority to dispose of them at his discretion, but only holds them to await further directions from the vendee as to the time and conveyance by which to ship them to such vendee at a place previously determined, the vendee's control over the goods is not terminated. Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249; Caheen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 254. Compare Parker v. McIvers, 1 Desau. (S. Car.) 274.

The actual delivery to the vendee or his agent, which puts an end to the transitu or state of passage, may be at the vendee's own warehouse, or at a place which he uses as his own, though belonging to another, for the deposit of goods. Scott v. Pettit, 3 B. & B. 469; Rowe v. Pickford, 8 Taunt. 83; Frazer v. Hilliard, 2 Strob. 309. At a place where he means the goods to remain until a new destination is communicated to them by orders from himself. . Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175; Rowe v. Pickford, 1 Moore, 526; Morley v. Hay, 3 M. & R. 696; Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249; Biggs v. Barry, 2 Curtis (U. S.), 259; Guilford v. Smith, 30 Vt. 49; Caheen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 254; Rowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 307. By the vendee's taking possession at some point short of the original intended place of destination. James v. Griffin, 1 M. & W. 20, 2 M. & W. 633; Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107; Mohr v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 106 Mass. 67; Durgy Cement Co. v. O'Brien, 123 Mass. 12; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio, 89; Wood v. Yeatman, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 270.

In Leeds v. Wright, 3 B. & P. 320, the London agent of a Paris firm had in the packer's hands in London goods sent there by the vendor from Manchester under the agent's orders; but it appeared that the goods were at the agent's discretion, to be sent where he pleased, and not for forwarding to Paris; and it was held that the transitu was ended.

In Scott v. Pettit, 3 B. & P. 469, the goods were sent to the house of the defendant, a packer, who received all of the buyer's goods, the buyer having no warehouse of his own, and there was no ulterior destination. Held, that the packer's warehouse was the buyer's warehouse, the packer having no agency except to hold the goods subject to the buyer's orders.

In Valpy v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 837, the goods were sent to a forwarding house in Liverpool by order of the buyer, to be forwarded to Valparaiso; but the Liverpool house had no authority to forward till receiving orders from the buyer. The buyer ordered the goods to be relanded after they had been put on board, and sent them back to the vendor, with orders to repack them into eight packages instead of four; and the vendors accepted the instructions, writing, "we are now repacking them in conformity with

(e) Stoppage in Transitu Defeated by Transfer of Bill of Lading.—The right of stoppage in transitu may be defeated by a transfer of the bill of lading to a bona-fide indorsee for value.[1]

11. CONNECTING CARRIERS.—(a) Rule in Muschamp's Case.—The leading English case of Muschamp v. Lancaster, etc., R. established the rule in England, which is there universally accepted, that the liability of one of several connecting carriers who receives goods for transportation consigned to a point beyond his own line extends throughout the journey and until there has been a complete delivery to the consignee, unless he has made a special contract limiting his liability to his own line.[2] The reasons urged in favor of this rule are various and forcible. It is said that the consignor cannot be supposed to know in the case of a continuous line who are the owners of its different portions. He may fairly assume either that the first carrier owns the continuous line, or that he intends to so represent and contracts upon that basis.[3] Further, that the consignor should only be obliged to make one your wishes." Held, that the right of stoppage was lost; that the transitu was at an end; and that the redelivery to the vendor for a new purpose could give him no lien. See also Dodson v. Wentworth, 4 M. & G. 1080; Cooper v. Bill, 3 H. & C. 722; Smith v. Hudson, 6 B. & S. 431; Rowe v. Pickford., 8 Taunt. 83; Sawyer v. Nash, 20 Vt. 172; Covell v. Hitchcock, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; Biggs v. Barry, 2 Curtis (U. S.). 259. See, generally, Macon, etc., R. v. Meador, 65 Ga. 705; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 450; MacVeagh v. Atchison, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 651.

If only a part of the goods are delivered, the right of stoppage in transitu will exist as to the balance. Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 313; Tanner v. Scovell, 14 M. & W. 28; Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; Caheen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 264; White v. Welsh, 38 Pa. St. 396. But stoppage of a portion of the goods will not affect the claim of the vendee to a portion of the consignment which comes into his possession. Wentworth v. Outhwaite, 10 M. & W. 436. But the delivery of a part will not operate as a delivery of the whole, or preclude the right of the vendor to stop any portion not actually reduced to possession by the purchaser. Mohr v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 106 Mass. 76; White v. Welsh, 38 Pa. St. 396; Buckley v. Furniss, 17 Wend. (N.Y.) 504; Mills v. Gordon, 2 C. & M. 509; Tanner v. Scovell. 14 M. & W. 28.

1. See title BILL OF LADING. supra, this volume. p. 244.

Stoppage in Transitu and Attachment.—In Louisville, etc., R. v. Spalding, 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 418, it was held that a railroad receiving freight from a vendor consigned to the vendee is the agent of the latter and liable to him only for its safe delivery. The vendor having no further authority over it except the right of stoppage in transitu, it cannot be attached for his debt.

2. In the absence of a special contract the receiving carrier's liability extends through the carriage and delivery by a connecting carrier. Muschamp v. Lancaster, etc., R., 8 M. & W. 421; Mytton v. Midland R., 28 L. J. Exch. 385, 4 H. & N. 615; Bristol, etc., R. v. Collins, 29 L. J. Exch. 41, 7 H. L. C. 194; Crouch v. London, etc., R., 23 L. J. C. P. 73, 14 C. B. 255; Wilby v. West Cornwall. etc., R., 27 L. J. Exch. 181, 2 H. & N. 703; Coxon v. Great Western R., 5 H. & N. 615; Bristol, etc , R. v. Cummings, 5 H. & N. 969; Collins v. Bristol, etc., R., 11 Exch. 790, 39 Eng. L. & Eq. 482, reversed in Exch. Ch., 1 H. & N. 57.

The rule established in Muschamp v. Lancaster, etc., R., 8 M. & W. 421, was that a carrier accepting goods consigned to a place beyond his own line, without a special contract limiting his liability to his own line, binds him for their safe delivery at the destination named. The decisions upon the point in England are uniform, and further hold the receiving carrier to be alone liable to an action, though the loss or injury may have occurred on the line of a connecting carrier, upon the ground of a want of privity of contract between the injured party and any connecting carrier. See cases cited in the preceding note.

3. Bristol, etc., R. v. Collins, 29 L. J. Exch. 41, 7 H. L. C. 194.

contract, and that with the carrier accepting the goods.[1] It is neither reasonable nor just to construe the agreement as a contract with several separate companies, and to force the consignor to seek his remedy against the carrier on whose line the loss occurred. Whether the connecting carriers are in reality partners, the effect of their private arrangement is to give them the advantages of that relation. Any rule which should have the effect to defeat or embarrass the consignor's remedy would be in direct conflict with the principles and whole policy of the common law. A consignor compelled to seek out the negligent carrier would find his task often difficult and sometimes impossible. He could hope for little aid from the associated carriers, and might be obliged to assert his claim for compensation against a distant party, among strangers, in circumstances such as would discourage a prudent man and induce him to bear the loss rather than incur the expense and risk of pursuing his legal remedy under another rule.[2] The construction should be that the first carrier is the responsible party, and the intermediate roads his agents.[3] Carriers possess facilities for tracing lost packages which the consignor does not have and cannot obtain. Their books are their own. They may properly, fairly, and without inconvenience charge the loss to the agent responsible for the negligence.[4]

This rule has not the sanction of the weight of authority in the United States.[5] It has been adopted, however, in the following

1. Wilby v. West Cornwall, etc., R., 2 H. & N. 707.

2. Perley, C. J., in Lock Co. v. Railroad, 48 N. H. 338.

3. Breese, J., in Illinois Central R. v. Frankenburg, 54 Ill. 88.

4. Freeman, J., in Western, etc., R. v. McElwee, 6 Smed. (Miss.) 208.

Carrier not Liable Beyond His Own Line.—There are many cases to the effect that where goods are received for transportation to a point beyond the carrier's line, he is not responsible for any loss occurring beyond said line in the absence of some special contract to that effect. Nutting v. Connecticut, etc., R. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.), 502; Darling v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.), 295; Burroughs v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 100 Mass. 26; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Champlain Trans. Co., 16 Vt. 52; Brintnall v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 32 Vt. 665; Cutts v. Brainerd, 42 Vt. 566; Perkins v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 47 Me. 573; Skinner v. Hall, 60 Me. 477; Inhabitants v. Hall, 61 Me. 517; Hood v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 502; Elmore v. Naugatuck R. Co., 23 Conn. 457; Converse v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 33 Conn. 166; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Schumacher, 29 Md. 168; McMillan v. Michigan, etc., R. Co., 16 Mich. 79; Phillips v. North Carolina R. Co., 78 N. Car. 294; Railroad v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Railroad v. Manufacturing Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 318; Crawford v. Southern R. Assoc., 521 Miss. 222; Irish v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 19 Minn. 376; St. John v. Van Santvoord, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 660, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 157; Root v. Great West. R. Co., 45 N. Y. 524; Lamb v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. 271; Reed v. U. S. Ex. Co., 48 N. Y. 462; Babcock v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 491; Condict v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 59 N. Y. 500; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Forsyth, 61 Pa. St. 81; St. Louis Ins. Co. v. St. L., etc., R. Co., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Larned, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 436; Hadd v. U. S. & C. Ex. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 443; Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. McKenzie, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 15; Michigan Central R. Co. v. Myrick, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25; Lindley v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 31; Cummins v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; Knight v. Providence, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 90

5. Carrier Liable for Goods Carried Beyond His Own Line.—It is held in some cases that where a carrier receives goods for transportation to a point beyond his own line, he is, in the absence of special contract, responsible for any loss or injury occurring to the point of destination. Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Copeland, 24 Ill. 332; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Cowles, 32 Ill. 316; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 34 Ill. 289; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Frankenburg, 54 Ill. 88; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 56 Ill. 365; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Montforth, 60 Ill. 175; U. S. Express Co. v. Haines, 67 Ill. 137; Field v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 71 Ill. 458; Adams Express Co. v. Wilson, 81 Ill. 339; Milwaukee, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 84 Ill. 239; Western, etc., R. Co. v. McElwell, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 208; East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 143; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 253; Carter v. Hough, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 203; East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Nelson, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 272; Kyle v. Railroad, 10 Rich. (S.Car.) 382; Bradford v. Railroad Co., 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 201; Lock Co. v. Railroad Co., 48 N. H. 339; Gray v. Jackson, 51 N. H. 9; Bennett v. Filyau, 1 Fla. 403; Mosher v. Southern Ex. Co., 38 Ga. 37; Southern Ex. Co. v. Shea, 38 Ga. 519; Cohen v. Southern Ex. Co., 45 Ga. 158; Angle v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 9 Iowa, 487; Mulligan v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 36 Iowa, 181; Balt. & Ohio R. Co. v. Campbell, 3 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 246; Harding v. International Nav. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 588; Cummins v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; Texas & Pacific R. Co. v. Fort, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 392; Same v. Ferguson, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 395.

States: Alabama,[1] Florida,[2] Georgia,[3] Illinois,[4]

Contract to Transport Beyond Company's Line.—In the United States the weight of authority is to the effect that the mere receipt of goods addressed to a point beyond the line of a railroad company does not throw upon the company any extra-terminal liability. Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Inhabitants v. Hall, 61 Me. 517; Skinner v. Hall, 60 Me. 477; Perkins v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 47 Me. 373; Brintnall v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 32 Vt. 665; Farmers & Merch. Bank v. Champlain Trans. Co., 16 Vt. 52; Cutts v. Brainerd, 42 Vt. 566; Burroughs v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 100 Mass. 26; Darling v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.), 295; Nutting v. Connecticut, etc., R. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.), 502; Elmore v. Naugatuck R. Co., 23 Conn. 457; Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 502; Converse v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 33 Conn. 166; Babcock v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 491; Root v. Great Western R. Co., 45 N. Y. 524; Reed v. U. S. Ex. Co., 48 N. Y. 462; Condict v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 59 N. Y. 500; Lamb v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 46 N. Y. 271; Jenneson v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 4 Am. L. Reg. 235; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Forsyth, 61 Pa. St 81; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Schumacher, 26 Md. 168; Phillips v. North Carolina R. Co., 78 N. Car. 294; McMillan v. Michigan, etc., R. Co., 16 Mich. 79; Irish v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 19 Minn. 376; Railroad Co. v. Mfg. Co., 16 Wall. (U.S.) 318; St. Louis Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260; Hadd v. U. S. & C. Ex. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 443; Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. McKenzie, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 15; Michigan Central R. Co. v. Myrick, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25; Lindley v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36; Knight v. Providence, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 90.

But by some authorities it is held that such is the law. Mulligan v. Illinois Central R. Co., 36 Iowa, 181; Angle v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 9 Iowa, 487; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cowles, 32 Ill. 116; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Johnson, 34 Ill. 389; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Frankenberg, 54 Ill. 88; Adams Ex. Co. v. Wilson, 81 Ill. 339; Milwaukee, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 84 Ill. 239; East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 143; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 253; Bennett v. Filyau, 1 Fla. 403; Lock Co. v. Railroad, 48 N.H. 339; Gray v. New Hampshire, 51 N. H. 9; Cohen v. Southern Ex. Co., 45 Ga. 148; East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Brumley, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 356; Cummins v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36.

1. Alabama.—Mobile, etc., R. v. Copeland, 63 Ala. 219; Montgomery, etc., R. v. Culver, 75 Ala. 587; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 411; Louisville, etc., R. v. Meyer, 78 Ala. 597; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 44.

2. Florida.—Bennett v. Filyau, 1 Fla. 403.

3. Georgia.—Mosher v. Southern Ex. Co., 38 Ga. 37; Southern Ex. Co. v. Shea, 38 Ga. 519; Rome, etc., R. v. Sullivan, 25 Ga. 228; Cohen v. Southern Ex. Co., 45 Ga. 148.

4. Illinois.—Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Copeland, 24 Ill. 332; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Johnson, 34 Ill. 389; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Frankenberg, 54 Ill. 88; Chicago, etc., R. v. People, 56 Ill. 365; U. S. Ex. Co. v. Haines, 67 Ill. 137; Adams Ex. Co. v. Wilson, 81 Ill. 339; Illinois Central, etc., R. v. Cowles, 32 Ill. 116; Chicago, etc., R. v. Montfort, 60

Iowa,[1] Kentucky,[2] New Hampshire,[3] and Tennessee.[4] In Kansas[5] the question has arisen in a case in which the court intimates an opinion in favor of the adoption of the English rule, but did not pass definitely upon the question. In South Carolina,[6] while two cases were supposed to have adopted the rule, it is not easy to reconcile a later authority with them.

In support of the contrary doctrine, it is said that the implied

Ill. 175; Field v. Chicago, etc., R., 71 Ill. 458; Erie, etc., R. v. Wilcox, 84 Ill. 239.

In Illinois Central R. v. Frankenberg, 54 Ill. 88, and Illinois Central R. v. Johnson, 34 Ill. 389, the court seems to hold that a railroad company which receives goods to carry, marked for a particular destination, though beyond its own line, is prima facie bound to carry them to that place and deliver them there; and that an agreement to that effect is implied from the reception of the goods thus marked. Michigan Central R. v. Myrick, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25; Wabash, etc., R. v. Jaggerman, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 680. See also St. Louis, etc., R. v. Larned, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 436. Compare Hewitt v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 568.

1. Iowa.—Angle v. Mississippi, etc., R., 9 Iowa, 487; Mulligan v. Illinois, etc., R., 36 Iowa, 181.

2. Kentucky.—Cincinnati, etc., R. v. Spratt. 2 Duval, 4.

3. New Hampshire.—Lock Co. v. Railroad, 48 N. H. 339. The court remarks: "The large business between the different parts of the country is done by parties who are associated in long continuous lines, receiving all fare through and dividing it among themselves by mutual agreement. They act together for all practical purposes so far as their own interests are concerned, as one united and joint association. In managing and controlling the business on their lines, they have all the advantages that could be derived from a legal partnership. They make such arrangements among themselves as they see fit for sharing the losses, as they do the profits, that happen on any part of their route. If by their agreement each party to their connected line is to make good the losses that happen on his part of the route, the associated carriers, and not the owner of the goods, have the means of ascertaining where the losses have happened; and if this cannot be known, there is nothing unreasonable or inconsistent in their sharing the losses, as in the case of a legal partnership, in proportion to their respective interests in the whole route. What, then, is the situation of the owner whose goods have been damaged or lost on a continuous line of three or any larger number of associated carriers, if he can look only to the carrier on whose part of the route the damages have happened? In the first place, he must set about learning where his loss happened. This would be difficult and often impossible. . . . He would have no means of learning himself, and he would not, unless of a very confiding disposition, rely on any very zealous aid in his search from the different carriers associated in the connected line. And if he should have the luck to make the discovery, he might be obliged to assert his claim for compensation against a distant party, among strangers, in circumstances such as would discourage a prudent man and induce him to sit down patiently under his loss rather than incur the expense and risk of pursuing his legal remedy under the rule set up by these defendants." Gray v. Jackson, 51 N. H. 9.

4. Tennessee.—Western, etc., R. v. McElwee, 6 Heisk. 208; East Tenn., etc., R. v. Rogers, 6 Heisk. 143; Louisville, etc., R. v. Campbell, 7 Heisk. 253; Carter v. Hough, 4 Sneed, 203; East Tenn., etc., R. v. Nelson, 1 Coldw. 272.

A railroad company receiving goods for shipment, marked to an extra-terminal point, is liable for all losses occurring beyond its own line. In the absence of a special contract limiting its liability such contract will be presumed from the fact that a clause thus limiting liability is to be found printed in the bill of lading, even though the shipper's attention was not called to it, if it appears that he had previously shipped like articles and taken like bills of lading. East Tenn., V. & G. R. Co. v. Brumley, 5 Lea, 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 356. See Sumner v. Southern R. Assoc., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 18.

5. Kansas.—In Berg v. Atchison, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 229, the court refuses to pass definitely upon the question, but intimates an opinion in favor of the adoption of the English rule.

6. South Carolina.—Bradford v. Railroad, 7 Rich. 201; Kyle v. Laurens, etc., R., 10 Rich. 382.

In Piedmont Mfg. Co. v. Columbia, etc., R., 19 S. Car. 353; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194, Simpson, C. J., draws the following distinction between contract which the law makes for the parties must be reasonable and such as is consistent with the receiving carrier's occupation and the usages of trade. Such implied contract would limit the first carrier's responsibility to his own line, and make him simply a forwarder beyond it. Carriers are frequently called upon to carry goods for every dealer and retailer, and for many of the consumers, throughout the wide extent of the country. To hold him responsible for the goods of others with whom he has no connection and over whom he has no control, and make him liable as a common carrier for the safety of each of these parcels until it reaches its ultimate destination, would be the short way to ruin him. His business could not be carried on under the operation of such a rule. The same principle which would make a carrier liable a short distance beyond his line, consistently applied, would continue his liability across the world. The just construction would be to limit the carrier's liability to his own route, which he controls, on which he selects his own servants and provides the facilities for caring for and guarding the goods.[1] This rule, sometimes called the American doctrine, has been adopted in Connecticut,[2] Indiana,[3] Maine,[4] Maryland,[5] Massachusetts,[6]

the English and American cases: "The argument of respondent, it appears to us, has assumed the real point at issue, to wit: that the defendant, as to the goods in question, was a common carrier. We do not think that the defendant was a common carrier beyond its termini under its charter. We hold that there was no legal duty on it to deliver goods beyond its line; that it might contract to do so, however, according to such terms as might be agreed upon between it and the shipper. This agreement might be either absolute or conditional. It might make the company substantially a common carrier, and therefore subject it to all the rules and principles contended for by the respondent, or it might contain limitation and restriction far short of this. But, whatever may be the contract in a given case is a question of fact for the jury, which, when found and properly construed, must become the law of the case. There is really no great difference between the English and American doctrine on this subject. The one holds that, to exempt a carrier from liability beyond its terminus there must be a special contract to that end. The other, that to make the first carrier responsible there must be a special contract to that end. Both admit that the carrier is not bound to go beyond the terminus, but that he may do so; and if he undertakes to do so he is bound by his undertaking. In the one case, if the contract contains no exemption it is absolute; in the other, if the conditions are specified they must govern. This is nothing more than saying that the whole thing is per contract, and that whatever the contract is that must be enforced—the legal construction being, that in the one case, in the absence of exemptions, the carrier has contracted, unconditionally, to deliver; the other, with conditions inserted, they must control." It was accordingly held in this case, while expressly affirming the decision in Kyle v. Laurens, etc., R., 10 Rich. 382, that while the first of several connecting carriers may assume a liability for the safe carriage of goods to the place of delivery, he does not assume the liability of a common carrier beyond his own line, unless by express contract, and that whether or not such contract was made, where it is uncertain whether a parol or written contract was the real one, is for the jury. McGowan, J., dissented.

1. Bockee and Rhoades, Senators, in Van Santvoord v. St. John, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 157.

2. Connecticut.—Elmore v. Railroad, 23 Conn. 457; Hood v. New York, etc., R., 22 Conn. 502; Naugatuck, etc., R. v. Waterbury, etc., Button Co., 24 Conn. 468; Converse v. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co., 33 Conn. 166.

3. Indiana.—Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Morton, 61 Ind. 539; Cummins v. Dayton, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36.

4. Maine.—Perkins v. Portland, etc., R., 47 Me. 573; Skinner v. Hall, 60 Me. 477; Plantation v. Hall, 61 Me. 517.

5. Maryland.—Baltimore, etc., R. v. Schmaker, 29 Md. 176.

6. Massachusetts.—Nutting v. Connec-

Michigan,[1] Minnesota,[2] Mississippi,[3] New York,[4] North Carolina,[5] Pennsylvania,[6] Rhode Island,[7] Vermont,[8] and in the United States courts.[9] In the latter the approved rule is thus stated: That each road confining itself to its common-law liability is only bound in ticut, etc., R., 1 Gray, 502; Darling v. Boston, etc., R., 11 Allen, 295; Burroughs v. Norwich, etc., R., 100 Mass. 26; Lowell Wire Fence Co. v. Sargent, 8 Allen, 189; Pendergast v. Adams Exp. Co., 101 Mass. 120; Pratt v. Ogdensburg, etc., R., 102 Mass. 557; Crawford v. Southern R. Assoc., 51 Mass. 222. See Washburn, etc., Mfg Co. v. Providence, etc., R., 113 Mass. 490; Hill Mfg. Co. v. Boston, etc., R., 104 Mass. 122.

In Argen v. Boston, etc., R., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 426, it was held that where freight is carried over connecting railroads, each road is liable for loss or injury occurring through its own negligence, even although the first carrier may also by express contract have assumed a responsibility for losses occurring on the lines of succeeding carriers.

1. Michigan.—McMillan v. Michigan Southern, etc., R., 16 Mich. 79.

In Detroit, etc., R. v. McKenzie, 43 Mich. 609; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 15, it was held that a railroad company receiving and receipting goods for transportation to a point beyond the terminus of its road is not to be understood as undertaking to carry the goods beyond such terminus, unless there is an express promise to that effect. But if the company receipts the goods to be transported to a point beyond its line for a definite sum named, and the consignor is charged a larger sum therefor, the receipting company is responsible to the consignor for the excess.

2. Minnesota.—Irish v. Milwaukee, etc., R., 19 Minn. 376; Lawrence v. Winona, etc., R., 15 Minn. 390; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 130.

3. Mississippi.—Crawford v. Railroad Assoc., 51 Miss. 222.

4. New York.—Root v. Great Western, etc., R., 45 N. Y. 524; Condict v. Grand Trunk, etc., R., 54 N. Y. 500; Van Santvoord v. St. John, 6 Hill, 158; Lamb v. Camden, etc., R., 46 N. Y. 271; Rawson v. Holland, 59 N. Y. 611; Reed v. United States Exp. Co., 48 N. Y. 462; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 561. But see Weed v. Railroad, 19 Wend. 534.

5. North Carolina.—Phillips v. North Carolina, etc., R., 78 N. Car. 294.

In Lindley v. Richmond, etc., R., 88 N. Car. 547; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 29, it was held that, in the absence of explanation as to how or where the loss or damage occurred, or which of the roads on the route is culpable, the receiving carrier must be held responsible for the injury, and that the non-delivery, or delivery in bad condition, by the last of the connecting lines is prima-facie evidence of default in the receiving carrier.

6. Pennsylvania.—Camden, etc., R. v. Forsyth, 61 Pa. St. 81; American Express Co. v. Second Nat. Bank, 69 Pa. St. 394; Pennsylvania v. Schwarzenberger, 45 Pa. St. 408.

In the absence of stipulation by a carrier to transport freight beyond its own line, it is not responsible for the default of those whom it employs to convey it the remainder of the distance. But if it make itself responsible by contract, or if an agreement to be so can be fairly inferred from the bill of lading, it will be liable for a loss or misdelivery beyond its own line. Where a company holds itself out as a "through freight line," and contracts to carry as such, it will be held liable for all losses occurring up to the point of destination. Clyde v. Hubbard, 88 Pa. St. 358. See also Baltimore Steamboat Co. v. Brown, 54 Pa. St. 77.

7. Rhode Island.—Knight v. Providence, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 90; Harris v. Grand Trunk R., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 323.

8. Vermont.—Brintnall v. Saratoga, etc., R., 32 Vt. 665; Farmers & Merchants' Bank v. Transportation Co., 23 Vt. 186; Noyes v. Rutland, etc., R., 27 Vt. 110; Cutts v. Brainerd, 42 Vt. 566; Sprague v. Smith, 29 Vt. 426.

In the absence of a special contract, a carrier receiving goods marked beyond his own line, and who has no special business connection with the next succeeding carrier, is not responsible for the safety of the goods after they leave his hands. It is no fraud to suppress a clause in the bill of lading limiting his liability to his own line from an ignorant and unlettered consignor, for such clause is only expressive of the common law. Hadd v. United States & Canada Ex. Co., 52 Vt. 335; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 443.

9. United States Courts.—Railroad Co. v. Mfg. Co., 16 Wall. 318; Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123; St. Louis Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260.

the absence of a special contract to safely carry over its own road and safely to deliver to the next connecting carrier; but that any one of the companies may agree that over the whole road its liability shall extend. In the absence of a special agreement to that effect such a liability will not attach, and the agreement will not be inferred from doubtful expressions or loose language, but only from clear and satisfactory evidence.[1] In Missouri[2] it was at first held that, in the absence of any special contract, a carrier receiving goods marked to a distant point is not liable for an injury occurring beyond his own line. A late statute provided in effect that whenever a common carrier received property to be transferred from one place to another within or without that State, or when a railroad or other transportation company issued receipts or bills of lading, such company should be liable for any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by its negligence or the negligence of another common carrier to which the goods were delivered or over whose line they passed. And the carrier receipting for the goods should be entitled to recover, in a proper action, the amount of any loss, damage, or injury it may be required to pay to the owner of such property from the company causing the loss.[3] It has since been held, in a case where a bill of lading was given which guaranteed the transportation and delivery of the goods to the terminus of the line or (if they were to be forwarded beyond this point) to any company receiv-

1. In Michigan Cent. R. v. Myrick, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25, Field, J., in delivering the opinion of the U. S. Supreme Court, said: "Although a railroad company is not a common carrier of live animals in the same sense that it is a carrier of goods, its responsibilities being in many respects different, yet when it undertakes generally to carry such freight it assumes, under similar conditions, the same obligations, so far as the route is concerned over which the freight is to be carried."

In Railway Co. v. McCartney, 96 U. S. 258, it was held that corporations, unless forbidden by their charter, have the power to contract for shipment the entire distance over any connecting line. The company is liable upon the other lines as upon its own.

2. Missouri.—The general freight agent of a railroad company has power to bind the company by a contract for transportation to points beyond its own line. A station agent has no such power, and such a contract entered into by him is void unless he has express authority from his proper superior officer, or there have been previous dealings from which such authority on his part may be reasonably inferred. Grover & B. Sewing M. Co. v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 70 Mo. 672.

A railroad company has power to contract with another corporation to complete the transportation of goods whose destination is beyond the terminus of its own line. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 73 Mo. 389; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1.

In the absence of any special contract a carrier receiving goods marked to a distant point is not liable for an injury occurring beyond its own line. The mere giving of a through rate to the shipper does not constitute an assumption on its part of such responsibility. McCarthy v. Terre Haute & Ind. R. Co., 9 Mo. App. 159.

Railroads doing business together, sharing profits and sending freight over one or the other of the combined lines, at their pleasure, or the shipper's request, make themselves jointly liable to the shipper. Testimony to show that such railroads form a line, have a common office, and employ a general freight agent may go to the jury to prove the existence of such a relation between them as will render them jointly liable. Barrett v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., 9 Mo. App. 226.

3. Rev. Stat. (Missouri) 1879, cap. 14, § 598, p. 95. Quoted in Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 238, note.

ing or which may receive freight from said company, that the railroad company receiving goods for transportation beyond the terminus of its line cannot by contract avoid its statutory liability for the loss of the goods through negligence of the connecting carrier.[1]

(b) Contract for Through Transportation.—It is well settled that the receiving carrier may contract for the entire transportation.[2] The company so contracting to deliver goods within a certain time at a destination beyond the terminus of its own line is liable to the consignor for damages caused by delay in transportation over such connecting roads. The terms of the contract in such case are for the jury.[3]

(c) Limitation of Liability to Carrier's Own Route.—It is well settled, even in those States where the acceptance of goods by a carrier marked to a destination beyond his own line is held to render him responsible for their safe through transportation, that it is competent for him by special contract to limit his liability to his own line. In such case, his full duty is discharged when he delivers the goods in safety to a connecting carrier.[4]

1. Liability for Loss of Goods through Negligence of Connecting Carrier.—A railroad company received goods for transportation beyond the terminus of its line. A bill of lading was given for the goods which guaranteed the transportation and delivery of the goods to the terminus of the line or (if they were to be forwarded beyond this point) to any company receiving or which may receive freight from said company. This was all the testimony bearing upon the question whether defendant had received the goods under contract to transport them to the terminus of its own line or to a point beyond that terminus. Held, that a railroad company that receives goods for transportation beyond the terminus of its line cannot, by contract, avoid its statutory liability for the loss of the goods through negligence of the connecting carrier. A shipper cannot recover of the receiving carrier for a loss occurring beyond the terminus of its line, without proving both a loss and a contract by the defendant to transport the goods beyond such terminus, where it proves that it delivered the goods in good order to the connecting carrier. Orr v. Chicago & Alton R. Co. (Mo. St. Louis Ct. Appeals, March, 1886).

In two North Carolina cases it has been held that a stipulation in a bill of lading, given by one of an associated through line, limiting liability for loss or damage to the common carrier in whose custody the goods were at the time of the loss is reasonable and binding. Phifer v. Railroad, 89 N. Car. 311; Weinburg v. Railroad, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 597.

2. Gray v. Jackson, 5 N. H. 9; Root v. Railroad, 45 N. Y. 532; Condict v. Grand Trunk R., 54 N. Y. 500; Hill Manuf. Co. v. Railroad, 104 Mass. 122; Pratt v. Railroad, 22 Wall. (U.S.) 132; Evansville, etc., R. v. Androscoggin Mills, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 894; Candee v. Pennsylvania R., 21 Wis. 582; Robinson v. Merchants' Desp. Transp. Co., 45 Iowa, 470.

3. A railroad company that contracts to carry goods over its own and connecting roads, and deliver the same within a certain time at a destination beyond the terminus of its own line, is liable to the shipper for damages caused by delay in transportation over such connecting roads. Whether the contract of shipment provided for a carriage beyond such terminus is a question for the jury. Upon the determination of this question the provisions of the receipt delivered by the carrier to the shipper are not conclusive upon the latter. Pereira v. Central Pacific R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 565.

In Hewitt v. Chicago, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 568, it was held, that where a railroad company takes property for shipment to a point beyond its own line, it is bound to deliver it in a reasonable time at its own terminus to another carrier to be forwarded, but is not liable for injuries which might be caused by the negligence of such other carrier after the property was delivered to it.

4 Limitation of Liability of Carrier's Own Route.—Aldridge v. Great Western

A railroad company cannot be compelled to give a bill of lading for delivery beyond its line. Such bills when given bind the company for safe delivery at the agreed point of destination. But this is a question of contract, and, in the absence of a special contract to deliver, the receiving railroad is not liable for loss or injury occurring after the goods have passed from its line.[1]

In England, where a special contract in limitation of the carrier's liability to his own line is made, the first carrier, in order to claim exemption under such a contract, must show that the goods passed uninjured into the custody of some other carrier who would be responsible, before, they were lost or injured.[2] The consequence of the English rule is, that the receiving carrier is the only one against whom an action lies. Where a special contract is made, an action will not lie against the connecting carrier on such a contract for loss or damage occurring on its line unless the carriers can be considered partners, or the receiving can be considered the agent of the connecting carrier.[3]

R. Co., 15 C. B. N. S. 582; Fowler v. Great Western R. Co., 7 Exch. 609; Kent v. Midland R.Co.,L.R. 10 Q.B.1; Garside v. Trust Nav. Co., 4 T. R. 581: Railroad Co. v. Androscoggin Mills, 22 Wall.(U.S.) 594; Railroad Co. v. Pratt. 22 Wall. (U.S.) 123; St. John v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 615; Sullivan v. Thompson, 99 Mass. 259; Pendergast v. Adams Express Co., 101 Mass. 120; Pemberton Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co , 104 Mass. 144; Burroughs v. Norwich R. Co., 100 Mass. 26; Gibson v. American Express Co., 1 Hun (N.Y.) 387; Ricketts v. Baltimore,etc., R.Co.,61 Barb. (N. Y.) 18; Witlock v. Holland, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 443; Hinkley v. New York Central R. Co., 3 T. & C. 281; Babcock v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 491; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Wheeler, 49 N. Y. 616; Reed v. United States Express Co., 48 N. Y. 462; Lamb v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 46 N. Y. 271; American Express Co. v. Second National Bank, 69 Pa. St. 394; Penna. R. Co. v Schwarzenberger, 45 Pa. St. 208; Mulligan v. Illinois R. Co., 36 Iowa, 180; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Frankenberg, 54 Ill. 88; Chicago. etc., R. Co. v. Montfort, 60 Ill. 175; United States Express Co. v. Haines, 67 Ill. 137; Erie R. Co. v. Willcox, 84 Ill. 239; Taylor v. Little Rock. etc., R. Co.. 32 Ark. 393; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Champlain Trans. Co., 23 Vt. 186; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Forsyth, 61 Pa. St. 81: Maghee v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 45 N. Y. 514; United States Express Co. v. Rush. 24 Ind. 403; Oakly v. Gordon, 7 La. Ann. 235; Martin v. American Express Co., 19 Wis. 336; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Pontius, 19 Ohio St. 221; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piper. 13 Kans. 505; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Brumley, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 356. But see Galveston H. & H. R. Co. v. Allison, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 28.

When by terms of bill of lading company was exempt from liability for loss by fire or beyond its own line, and delivered gonds at steamboat wharf, and while in storage awaiting transportation same were burned, held, company was not liable. Deming v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 16 Am. &. Eng. R. R. Cas. 232.

In Louisville, etc., R. v. Meyer, 78 Ala. 597, s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 44, it was held that the carrier may, by express contract, limit his liability to losses or damage occurring on his own route; but such limitation must be shown to have been brought to the notice of the consignor, and to have been accepted by or acquiesced in by him. If the consignor, contemporaneously with the delivery of the gonds to the carrier, receives a bill of lading limiting the liability of the carrier to losses occurring on his own route, "possibly he would be conclusively presumed to have read it, and to have acquiesced in it;" but this principle does not apply where it is shown that the carrier, receiving the freight for the entire route, made out a bill of lading, which, being incomplete as to the amount of the charges, was not delivered to the consignor at the time, but was afterwards forwarded to him by mail at the place of destination.

1. Lotspeich v. Central R. & Banking Co., 73 Ala. 306; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 490.

2. Kent v. Midland R., 44 L. J. Q. B. 18; L. R. 10 Q. B. 1. But see Midland R. v. Bromley. 25 L. J. C. P. 94; 17 C. B. 372.

3. An action will not lie against the (d) Inference of Through Contract.—A contract to carry throughout to the place of delivery may be inferred from certain circumstances: from the naming of the destination in the bill of lading,[1] though this, of course, is liable to be rebutted by other circumstances or stipulations in the bill; from the receipt of the entire freight, unless there be stipulation limiting the liability;[2] from various expressions or phrases more or less definite contained in the bill of lading, or verbally agreed upon between the parties.

connecting carrier on such a contract for loss or damage occurring on its line, unless the carriers can be considered partners, or the receiving can be considered the agent of the connecting carrier. Coxen v. Great Western R., 29 L. J. Exch. 165; 5 H. & N. 274; Foulkes v. Metropolitan District R., 28 W. R. 526.

This rule is followed in all its strictness in the State of Georgia. Southern Exp. Co. v. Shea, 38 Ga. 319: Mosher v. Southern Exp. Co., 38 Ga. 37; Cohen v. Southern Exp. Co., 45 Ga. 148.

1. Cutts v. Brainerd, 42 Vt. 566; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Merriman, 52 Ill. 123; Schroeder v. Hudson River R. Co., 5 Duer (N.Y.), 55. Though this, of course, is liable to be rebutted by other circumstances or stipulations in the bill. East Tenn. R. Co. v. Montgomery, 44 Ga. 278; St. John v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 612; American Exp. Co. v. Second Nat. Bank, 69 Pa. St. 394; Pendergast v. Adams Express Co., 101 Mass. 120; Witbeck v. Holland, 55 Barb. (N.Y.) 443; Coates v. U. S. Exp. Co., 45 Mo. 238; Reed v. U. S. Exp. Co., 48 N. Y. 462; Oakey v. Gordon, 7 La. Ann. 235; Penna. R. Co. v. Schwarzenberger, 45 Pa. St. 208; Collender v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 200; Converse v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 33 Conn. 166.

2. Reed v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 534; St. John v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 612; Berg v. Narragansett Steamship Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.), 394; Candee v. Penna. R. Co., 21 Wis. 582; R. Co. v. Androscoggin Mills, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 594.

3. Robinson v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 45 Iowa, 470; Root v. Great West. R. Co., 45 N.Y. 524; R. Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall.(U.S.) 123; Hill Mfg.Co. v. B., etc., R. Co., 104 Mass. 122; Quimby v. Vanderbilt, 17 N. Y. 306. And see, as to the effect of contracts made with express companies or with other railroad companies, Schulter v. Adams Express Co., 6 Cent. L. J. 175; Wilson v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 654; Carter v. Peck, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 203; Ellsworth v. Yartt, 26 Ala. 733; Briggs v. Vanderbilt, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 222; Gass v. N. Y., etc., Co., 99 Mass. 220; Cobb v. Allot, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 289.

It was said in Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall.(U.S.)123, that ordinarily it is the duty of the carrier in the absence of any special contract to carry safely to the end of its line, and to deliver to the next carrier on the route beyond. . . . In reference to contracts to transport over other lines, such may be shown by an express undertaking, or by showing that the company held itself out as a carrier for the entire distance, or received freight for the entire distance, or other circumstances indicating an understanding that it was to carry through the entire route. On the same points see Baltimore & Pa. Steamboat Co. v. Brown, 54 Pa. St. 77; Wheeler v. San Francisco & Alameda Railroad, 31 Cal. 46; Cincinnati, Hamilton, Dayton & Richmond R. v. Pontius, 19 Ohio St. 221; also Pierce on Railroads, 510, where the authorities are fully collected.

In Cummins v. Dayton, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36, it was held that railroad companies have the power to contract to carry goods beyond their their own line, and where they enter into such contract they will be liable as a common carrier throughout the whole transit. Three railroad companies, whose lines formed a continuous road between X and Y, held themselves out to the public as having formed a combination for the transportation of goods on the entire route. A at X shipped goods with one of the companies addressed to B at Y, and took a receipt whereby the company undertook to forward as per directions. Said receipt contained numerous provisions limiting liability, and provided that all the carriers transporting the property as a part of the through line should be entitled to all the exceptions and conditions therein mentioned. Held, that said carrier had contracted to carry the goods through to Y, and was liable

(e) Liability for Through Transportation in Spite of Contract.—It is held that where the first of several connecting lines contracts to transport goods over the whole line, but inserts a clause in the bill of lading providing that only the company in whose charge the goods might be at the time an injury occurred should be liable, was of no effect ,but that the companies were all jointly liable.[1]

(f) Delivery to Connecting Carrier.—The liability of a connecting carrier does not begin, and the duty of the first carrier is not completed, until there has been an actual delivery to the connecting carrier, or at least such a notification to him as, according to the course of business, is equivalent to a tender of delivery.[2] for a loss occurring in consequence of delay in said transit, although the same occurred beyond its own line.

In St. Louis Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R., 3 Am. & Eng. R R. Cas. 260, it was held that a common carrier is not in the absence of a special contract liable for injuries occurring on a connecting road beyond its own line. A special undertaking to assume such liability cannot be inferred from: 1. The entry of the carrier into an arrangement with the connecting line to carry freight at tariff rates, or at any special rates furnished by the other lines. 2. The giving of a way-bill which expressed the goods to be consigned to an extra-terminal point, but which purports to be a manifest of freight from one terminus of the road to another. See also Stewart v. Terre Haute, etc., R., 1 McCrary C. C. 312.

1. In Milne v. Douglass, 13 Fed. Rep. 37, where three railroad companies having connected lines of road and a steamship company connecting with the terminal line contracted to transport goods over the whole line, and said goods were damaged while in transit in the custody of one of the companies, it was held that the companies were all jointly liable, and that notwithstanding a clause in the bill of lading providing that that company alone should be liable in whose charge the goods might be at the time an injury occurred.

In Gulf, etc., R. v. Golding, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 732, Wilson, J., in delivering the opinion of the Texas Court of Appeals observed: "It is said by Mr. Lawson, in his work on Carriers, that 'when a carrier has contracted for the carrying of goods over another line beyond his route, a stipulation that his responsibility is to terminate at the end of his own line will be of no available effect.' This text has been quoted approvingly by the Supreme Court of this State in the case of G. H. & H. R. v. Allison, 59 Tex. 193, and in that case it is further said that the carrier will be held responsible for the negligence not only of himself and his servants, but of the connecting lines, they being considered his agents for carrying out the particular contract. This doctrine is well supported by authority, and is, we think, the just and true doctrine. Bank of Ky. v. Adams Exp. Co., 93 U. S. 174; Railroad v. Pontius, 19 Ohio St. 221; Condict v. Railroad, 54 N. Y. 500."

2. In Condon v. Marquette, etc., R., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 574, it was held that where a carrier receives goods to be transported over a connecting line to their final destination, its liability as a common carrier continues until the goods are delivered to the other carrier; and if they are destroyed by fire while in the warehouse of the first carrier, it will be liable for their loss, notwithstanding a custom that the connecting carrier shall inspect the books in which goods are entered as received, and take possession of and transport over its line goods intended to be so transported.

Cooley, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court observes: "We think these cases lay down a rule which is just to the shippers of goods, and not unreasonably burdensome to carriers. The shipper delivers his goods to a carrier, who becomes insurer for their safe transportation; and if the operations of one carrier cover a part only of the line of transit, and another is to receive the goods from him, the shipper has a right to understand that the liability of an insurer is upon some one during the whole period. The duty of the one is not discharged until it has been imposed upon the succeeding carrier, and this is not done until there is delivery of the goods, or at least such a notification to the succeeding carrier as, according to the course of the business,

There may be by express agreement, by usage and custom in a particular trade, or from a course of dealing between particular carriers, a constructive delivery from one carrier to a connecting carrier. But this cannot affect the owner of the goods, and he can be required to look for reparation of his loss only to the connecting carrier in actual possession when it occurred, and the carrier whose duty it was to make the delivery to the succeeding one will be presumed to have still had the possession until it be shown that it had actually been transferred to another.[1] is equivalent to a tender of delivery. There is nothing in this which is burdensome to the carrier, for this is the customary method in which the business is done; and the rule only requires that the customary method shall be pursued without unreasonable delay or negligence. The connecting carriers in this case appear to have established a custom of their own, under which actual delivery of the goods or notice to take them was dispensed with, and the one was to ascertained from the books of the other what goods were ready for reception and further carriage. This, as between themselves, was well enough while it worked well; but it was an arrangement to which the plaintiff was not a party, and the defendant could not, by means of it, relieve itself of any liability which duty to the plaintiff imposed. And it was clearly its duty to the plaintiff, as we think, to relieve itself of the responsibility of the goods remaining for an unreasonable time in its warehouse, and to do this it was necessary that the responsibility be transferred to the carrier next in line. But the mere permission to inspect its books and take whatever was ready for carriage would not do this; there should have been distinct notice which would apprise the other carrier that defendant expected the removal of the goods."

In Peterson v. Case, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 578, it was held that when goods are to be delivered by a railroad company to a second line of conveyance for transportation further on, the common-law liability of common carriers remains on the first carrier until he has delivered the gonds for transportation to the next one. Its obligation while the goods are in its depot does not become that of a warehouseman. Where, while goods received by the first carrier are in transit, the connecting line notifies it that it cannot receive the goods and transport them to their destination because of a block in freight, this will not relieve the first carrier from liability for damages caused by the delay, where it fails to notify the shipper and give him an opportunity to dispose of the property or take measures for its preservation. See also Lesinsky v. Great Western Disp. Co., 10 Mo. App. 134, where it was held that where a railroad company in such case is unable to forward the goods by the lines of the next connecting carrier owing to an obstruction thereof, it is bound to retain the goods and give notice to the owner so that he may reclaim them. If it fails to give such notice, the company is liable for the delay. Compare, however. Armstrong v. Grand Trunk, etc., R., 2 Pugs. & B. (N. B.) 445; Michigan Central, etc., R. v. Hall, 6 Mich. 243; Michigan Central, etc., R. v. Lantz, 32 Mich. 502; Deming v. Norfolk, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 232.

The liability of a connecting carrier does not begin until he has received possession of the goods. The receiving carrier cannot shirk his responsibility by simply unloading and storing them, but must actually deliver them to the connecting carrier, or at least attempt to do so. Railroad Co. v. Manufacturing Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 318; Brintnall v. Railroad, 32 Vt. 665; Gass v. Railroad, 99 Mass. 220; Blossom v. Griffin, 3 Kern. (N. Y.) 569; Michaels v. Railroad, 30 N. Y. 564; Root v. Railroad, 45 N. Y. 24; Mills v. Michigan, etc., R., 45 N. Y. 622; McDonald v. Western Railroad Corporation, 34 N. Y. 497; Rawson v. Holland, 59 N. Y. 611. See also Ladue v. Griffith, 25 N. Y. 364; Louisville, etc., R. v. Campbell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 253; Western Transp. Co. v. Newhall, 24 Ill. 422; Merchant's Disp. Transp. Co. v. Kahn, 76 Ill. 520; Indianapolis, etc., R. v. Strain, 81 Ill. 504; Conkey v. Milwaukee, etc., R. 31 Wis. 619; Irish v. Milwaukee, etc., R., 19 Minn. 376; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 340.

1. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 104. Conkey v. Milwaukee, etc., R., 31 Wis. 619; McDonald v. Western Railroad Corporation, 34 N. Y. 497; Irish v. Mil-

(g) Contract Limiting Liability Inures to the Benefit of Intermediate Carriers.—Where goods are to be transferred over a number of connecting lines, a contract entered into by the carrier receiving the goods, stipulating for exemption from liability in general terms, will inure to the benefit of all the various carriers over whose routes the goods may be carried.[1] A contract may, however, expressly stipulate that the immunity shall extend only to the single company entering into it.[2]

(h) Obligation of the Carrier to Notify the Consignor of Obstructions.—Where a railroad company is unable to forward freight by the next connecting lines owing to an obstruction thereof, it is bound to retain the goods and notify the owner so that he may reclaim them.[3]

(i) Transportation of Cars of other Companies.—In some States railroad companies are required by statute to receive and transport waukee, etc., R., 19 Minn. 376; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 340; Erie, etc., R. v. Lockwood, 28 Ohio St. 358; Brintnall v. Saratoga, etc., R., 32 Vt. 665; Louisville, etc., R. v. Campbell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 253; Packard v. Taylor, 35 Ark. 402; Michigan Central, etc., R. v. Manuf. Co , 16 Wall. (U. S.) 318; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R., 121 Mass. 291. But see Converse v. Transportation Co., 33 Conn. 166; Pratt v. Railroad, 95 U. S. 43. Compare Van Santvoord v. St. John, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 157; Mills v. Railroad, 45 N. Y. 622.

1. Contracts Limiting Liability Inure to Benefit of Intermediate Carrier.—Babcock v. Lake Shore. etc., R., 49 N. Y. 494; Camden, etc., R. v. Forsyth, 61 Pa. St. 81; Jurson v. Camden, etc., R., 4 Am. Law Reg. 234; U. S. Express Co. v. Harris, 51 Md. 127; Levy v. Southern Express Co., 4 S. Car. 234; Maghee v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 45 N. Y. 514; Manhattan Oil Co. v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 54 N. Y. 197; Lamb v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 2 Daly (N.Y.). 454; s. c., 46 N.Y. 271; Hall v. N. E. R. Co., L. R. 10 Q. B. 437; Whitworth v. Erie R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 349; Halliday v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 443; Whitehead v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 168; Taylor v. Little Rock, etc., R., 39 Ark. 148; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 590.

2. Bancroft v. Merchants' Despatch Trans. Co., 47 Iowa, 262; Babcock v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 491; Martin v. Am. Express Co., 19 Wisc. 336; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Forsyth, 61 Pa. St. 81; Merchants' Despatch Trans. Co. v. Bolles, 80 Ill. 473; Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Wheeler, 49 N. Y. 616.

When merchandise is shipped "at owner's own risk," the limitation of liability inures to protection of connecting lines. Kiff v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 618.

In Burwell v. Railroad Co., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 410, it was held that a railroad company is not bound to transport goods delivered to it for carriage in a box car. It is only required to keep them dry, and free from exposure and injury while the same are in its care and custody. Where goods are injured while in transit the receipt and manifest given by the railroad company are evidence going to prove a prima-facie case of liability against it. But they are not conclusive, and the defendant has the right to offer any competent evidence going to show that the property in question was not damaged while on its line of road. A box containing a theatre drop-curtain was injured by water while being carried from one place to another. The carriage was performed by several connecting lines of road. Held, that evidence that it did not rain while the box was in transit over defendant's road tended to prove that it did not get wet while in its custody; and an instruction that the jury might consider this fact in connection with other evidence was proper.

3. Company Bound to Notify Owner in Case of Obstruction of Connecting Lines.—If it fails to give such notice the company is liable for the delay. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Campbell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 253; Lesinsky v. Great Western Dispatch Co., 10 Mo. App. 134; Petersen v. Case, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 578. See Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R., 68 Mo. 268; Rice v. Kansas Pacific R., 63 Mo.

the cars of other companies.[1] When so requested, while so transporting them, and in complete and undisputed control of them, they are liable as common carriers in case any injury to them is occasioned.[2]

(j) Burden of Proof Where the Place of Loss is Unknown.—The weight of opinion is to the effect that if there be evidence of delivery to the first carrier, and evidence of non-delivery at the terminus, the burden of proof is on the first carrier to show that the loss did not take place while the goods were in his possession. In default of such evidence on his part he will be held liable.[3] In

314. But see Frank v. Memphis, etc., R., 52 Miss. 570.

1. Transportation of Cars of other Carriers.—Michigan Central R. Co. v. Smithson, 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 101; Rae v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 470; Texas & Pac. R. Co. v. Carlton, 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 350.

In Peoria, etc., R. v. Chicago, etc., R., 109 Ill. 135; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 506, it was held that a railway company engaged in the transportation of freights for hire as a common carrier is bound to transport or haul upon its road the cars of any other railroad company when requested so to do, and will hold the same relation as a common carrier to such cars as it does to ordinary freight received by it for transportation, and in case of loss will be held to the same measure and character of liability to the owner of the cars so received for transportation as would attach in respect to any other property.

In this case the defendant railroad company's principal business was switching cars for other railroad companies. Its tracks were connected with those of the other railroads by a transfer switch, and with mills, elevators, and manufactories in and around the city where its business was transacted. The plaintiff corporation brought a car loaded with freight to the city, and placed the same on the transfer track, with orders to the defendant to ship the same to a certain distillery, to which place it was taken and unloaded. When unloaded it was taken by the defendant, without orders from the plaintiff, to a sugar refinery, to be loaded, and then switched to the transfer track for shipment. On the same day the sugar refinery was burned, and also the car. Held, that the defendant was liable, as a common carrier, to the plaintiff for the value of the car so destroyed.

2. New Jersey, R. & T. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 100; Mallory v. Tioga R. Co., 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 488: Vermont & Mass. R. Co. v. Fitchburg R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.), 462. See also, as having some bearing on the question, Hannibal R. v. Swift, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 262; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & New Orleans R. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 57.

In Missouri Pacific R. v. Chicago, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 718, it was held that where a railroad company receives loaded cars from another road for transportation, it is liable as a common carrier in case they are destroyed en route by fire. But if destroyed by fire after delivery to the consignee, or after they have been tendered to him, the company is not liable if not in fault. In the latter case its duties are only those of warehousemen. See generally Bird v. Georgia R., 72 Ga. 655; s. c., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 39.

3. Brintnall v. Saratoga & W. R. Co., 32 Vt. 665. The doctrine of this case is amply supported in the opinion, thus: "The duty of the defendants was to safely transport the box to Castleton, the end of their road, and there deliver it to the next carrier. The negligence alleged in the declaration, the breach of duty complained of, is that they did not do this, and, of course, in order to establish a right of recovery against the defendants, there must be some proof offered to prove such negligence. It is an affirmative allegation by the plaintiff, and the burden is upon him, though it involves the proof of a negative. It is not enough for the plaintiff to show the box in the hands of the defendants and throw upon them the burden to prove that they delivered it to the plaintiff, or at its proper destination, under their contract of carriage. But in such cases a plaintiff is only bound to give such proof of the loss as the nature of the case admits of, and is fairly in his power to bring. The fact that he is thus really called upon to prove a negative is not to be lost sight of, nor

Georgia it is provided by statute that the last of a connecting line of railroads over which goods are shipped which receives them in good order shall be liable to the consignee for any damage occurring during the whole transit.[1]

Where goods have been transported by several successive carriers, and it appears that they were in good condition when delivered to the first carrier, the jury may presume, in absence of evidence to the contrary, that the goods reached the hands of the last carrier in the same condition as when delivered to the first.[2]

Where an arrangement is made between several connecting railroad companies, by which goods to be carried over the whole route are to be delivered by each to the next succeeding company, and such company is to pay to the preceding company the amount already due for the carriage, and the last one is to collect the whole from the consignee, the receipt of goods by the last company and the payment of all the charges of its predecessors will not render that ordinarily after the delivery of goods to a carrier, and especially to a railway company, the means of proving what has been done with them, or what has become of them, are wholly within their own power and knowledge, and out of that of the plaintiff. The plaintiff can, and ought always to be required to, show that he has not received his property; that it has been lost. The county court required this to be done by the plaintiff, and held that if this was shown, and that the goods never reached Boston, their ultimate destination, then the burden was on the defendants to show the box out of their hands. . . . We are satisfied, under the circumstances, that the instruction was correct." There have also been several cases where suits have been brought and recoveries permitted against the last carrier in the connecting line, the argument being that if the goods were delivered to the first carrier in good condition they must be presumed to have continued in that state."

In Dixon v. Richmond & Danville R. Co., 74 N. Car. 538, the facts were these: A piano was shipped in good order from Boston to Greensboro, N.C., over several connecting lines. It was in good order when it arrived at New York, but was greatly damaged when it was delivered by defendants, the last carrier in the line, at Greensboro. Under these circumstances it was held that the burden of proving that the piano was injured on some other of the connecting lines than their own was on defendants, and having failed to do this, they were held liable for the damage.

To precisely similar effect is the case of Laughlin v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 28 Wis. 204: Here goods in a box were shipped over connecting lines, consisting of three successive carriers, and finally, on delivery to the consignee, the box was found to have been opened, and various articles abstracted therefrom. It was held, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the jury might presume that the box remained unopened until it came into the custody of the last carrier, and that while in his custody the loss occurred. The last carrier was held liable accordingly. Laughlin v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 28 Wis. 204.

In New York the authorities are the same way. It has been expressly held that where goods are delivered to a railroad company to be transported by it and other connecting lines to the point of destination, it is enough for the owner in an action against the last carrier for an injury occasioned to the goods in transit to show a delivery of them in good order to the first carrier. The defendant can then only escape liability by proving affirmatively that the loss did not occur on his line. Smith v. New York Central R., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 228.

1. Wolf v. Central, etc., R., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R Cas. 441.

As to burden of proof see Elmore v. Naugatuck R., 23 Conn. 482.

2. Leo v. St. Paul, etc., R., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. See also Shriver v. Sioux City & St. Paul R. Co., 24 Minn. 506; Laughlin v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 28 Wis. 204; Smith v. N. Y. C. R. Co., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 225; Brintnall v. S. & W. R. Co., 32 Vt. 665; Dixon v. Richmond & Danville R. Co., 74 N. Car. 538.

it liable for any injury done to the goods before it received them, provided there has been no contract rendering one carrier liable for the negligence or default of the others.[1]

(k) Connecting Lines in Partnership.—Payment of freight in advance is generally inconvenient; and as the goods may be presumed to be of sufficient value to pay the freight, an arrangement is sometimes made by which each carrier subsequent to the first pays what is due when the goods are delivered to him, and the last carrier collects the whole bill from the consignee. Such an arrangement creates no partnership or joint liability. If a further arrangement is made between the carriers, that the freight bills shall not be paid on the receipt of each parcel of goods, but an account shall be kept on each line on a particular route, and periodically settled, this will not create a co-partnership or joint liability, for each line charges separately for its own freight. If it is further arranged that each line shall charge only a stipulated rate of freight, so that any customer can be informed beforehand what the amount of freight will be to a given place of destination, this does not create a partnership or joint liability.[2] Where

1. Darling v. Boston & Worcester R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.). 295; Gass v. New York R. Co., 99 Mass. 220. Cf. Brintnall v. Saratoga R. Co., 32 Vt. 665; Angle v. Mississippi R. Co., 9 Iowa, 487; Dillon v. New York R. Co., 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 231; Bradford v. South Carolina R. Co., 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 221; s. c., 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 307; Kyle v. Laurens R. Co., 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 382; Wilson v. Owners, etc., of Tuscarora, 32 Pa. St. 270; Carson v. Harris, 4 Greene (Iowa), 516. See also Montieth v. Kirkpatrick, 3 Blatchf. C. C. 279. And the last carrier has a lien in such case for his own freight, and for the back charges paid, the consignee being prohibited from setting off against this claim the damage done to the goods. Bowman v. Hilton, 11 Ohio, 303.

In the absence of such a contract no one of several carriers forming a connected and continuous line is liable for the loss or injury of goods occurring while such goods are in the hands of other carriers. Ricketts v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 59 N. Y. 637; Schiff v. N. Y. Central & Hudson R. R. Co., 16 Hun (N. Y.), 278. Each carrier in the line is bound to unload the goods and deliver them safely to the next succeeding carrier. But having done this, he has discharged his full duty. McDonald v. Western R. Corp., 34 N. Y. 501.

2. Connecting Railroad Lines as Partners.—An agreement among several railroad companies constituting a through freight line to divide receipts among them according to some fixed plan does not constitute them partners in any sense. Watkins v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 8 Mo. App. 570; Hill v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 21; Insurance Co. v. Railroad Co., 104 U. S. 146; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260; Deming v. Norfolk & Western R. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 332; Converse v. N. & N. Y. Trans. Co., 33 Conn. 166. See also Merrick v. Gordon, 20 N. Y. 96.

In Hot Springs, etc., R. v. Trippe, 42 Ark. 465, s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 562, it was held that an association among railroad companies for the transportation of through freights, and a division of the receipts in prescribed proportion, does not constitute a partnership, nor render the carriers jointly liable for loss or injury occurring to goods transported.

Smith, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, observed: "In Darling v. B. & W. R. Co., 93 Mass. 295, a similar question came before the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. . . Arrangements of this character are convenient to the public, because they enable carriers to transport goods at low rates. They are inconvenient in some respects. They render it difficult to obtain compensation for injuries to goods, because it is difficult for the owner to prove where the injury was done, and, if he can prove it, he may be obliged to carry on a litigation in a distant State. But if the law is adhered to and contracts are enforced according to their legal interpretation, several carriers constitute a through line, and each sells "through tickets," deducting its own share of the price paid for each for the same, and accounting to the other companies for their share, the price being fixed according to the tariff fixed by each company as to its own road, this does not constitute carriers partners.[1] Where a contract between a despatch company and a railroad company, whose route in connection with those of other companies business will regulate itself, and methods will be discovered to avoid inconveniences.' See also Converse v. N. & N. Y. Transp. Co., 33 Conn. 166, upon the point that an association among carriers for the transportation of freights and a division of the receipts in prescribed proportions, does not constitute a partnership, nor render the carriers jointly liable." See also Gass v. New York, etc., R., 99 Mass. 220; Burroughs v. Norwich, etc., R., 100 Mass. 26; Aigen v. Boston, etc., R., 132 Mass. 423; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 426.

In Deming v. Norfolk, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 232, it was held that an agreement between connecting carriers on a through route, each having exclusive control and ownership of its line, with arrangements for continuous transportation on through bills of lading at settled rates of compensation, each being by special provision in the bills of lading responsible only for his own acts or omissions, does not make such carriers partners and responsible for the acts and omissions of each other.

Butler, J., remarks: "The agreement between the several railroad companies did not make them partners, nor responsible in any respect for each other's acts or contracts. They were connecting carriers on a through route, each having the exclusive ownership and control of its line, with arrangements for continuous transportation on through bills of lading, at settled rates of compensation, each being alone responsible for its own acts or omissions, as specified in the bill before us. That such agreements do not render intermediate carriers responsible for the undertakings, representations, or misconduct of the carrier who receives merchandise from a shipper seems to be so fully settled by the authorities as to leave nothing for discussion. It was the point directly involved and decided in Insurance Co. v. Railroad Co., 104 U. S. 146; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260."

There was an arrangement between different railroads connecting with each other whereby each road agreed to carry the cars of the others having the name "Green Line" painted thereon over its own road without breakage of bulk, at such rates as might be agreed on, each company fixing its own rates of freight passing over its own road, and collecting the same as the freight passed over its road, and having no interest in freights not reaching its road. Each road being desirous of making a through rate over other roads via these "Green Line" cars, would ascertain the rates the intermediate road or roads charged, and, adding the same to its own rates, fix its own schedule of through rates, which it termed "Green Line rates." There was no joint expense, loss, or profits except that where a loss could not be located on any particular road a pro rata share of the loss was borne by all that carried the freight. It was decided that there was no partnership by the fact that the words "Green Line" were painted on the roof of a wharf-boat, and printed also upon the bills of lading. Irvin v. Nash., Chat. & St. L. R. Co., 92 Ill. 103. That an agreement to share pro rata losses that cannot be located does not make the connecting carrier partners, see Aigen v. Boston & M. R. Co., 132 Mass. 423; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 426. See Schiff v. N. Y. Cent. & Hudson Riv. R. Co., 16 Hun (N. Y.), 278.

Another arrangement very common among railway companies is this: several connecting railway companies form a "through line," agreeing that when goods are received to be carried over the whole route they shall be delivered by each to the next succeeding company, which shall "advance charges" thereupon; that is, pay to its predecessor the amount already due for the carriage, the last company collecting the whole from the consignee. This does not constitute the companies' partners, nor make the last company liable for goods lost or injured before it received them. Darling v. Bost. & Wor. R. Co., 11 Allen, 295; Hot Springs R. v. Trippe, 42 Ark. 465; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 562.

1. Croft v. Balt. & O. R. Co., 1 MacArth. (D. C.) 492; S. P. Straiton v. N. Y. & N. H. R. Co., 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 184. See also Converse v. Nor. & N. Y. Transp formed a continuous line, stipulated that the railroad should receive, load, unload, deliver, and way-bill all freight sent to it by the despatch company at such rates for the transportation as might be established by the railroad companies; and should, while assuming all the risks of a common carrier, pay for all damage to or loss of property while on its road or in its possession; and where the despatch company entered into a similar arrangement with each of the other companies, between which there was an agreement that the amount charged for the through freight should be divided between them according to the length of their respective roads; and that on such freight the last carrier should collect the charges from the consignee, deduct its share thereof, account in the same way to the next company, and so on to the first; and that settlement were to be made by the railroad company periodically upon accountings between them, and each settled separately with the despatch company,—it was held that by the agreement the despatch company imposed upon the railroad company neither an obligation to carry freight beyond its own road nor a liability for the negligence of either of the other companies; and that such arrangement did not constitute them partners, either as between themselves or as to third persons.[1] In an action against a common carrier seeking to hold it liable as partner of another road by which the goods were shipped, the mere facts that such roads were continuous, and that an association engaged in shipping goods between points connected by these roads, and using its own cars, and employing agents distinct from those of these roads, was in the habit of giving a through bill of lading between these points, and distributing the freight received among the roads actually engaged in the carriage in proportion to the freight earned by each road, it was held that there was no evidence of a partnership between the roads, or that the shipping association in question made the contract of affreightment in question as agent of the defendant.[2]

In these cases it is held that although in some of them the companies were doing business through a common agent,[3] or were regulating parts of their business by a joint committee,[4] there was in fact no joint expense, no joint property, no joint fund, no joint profits, and no arrangement to share loss and profit. A communion of profit is of the very essence of the contract of partnership. And without this communion of profit a partnership cannot in law exist.[5]

Co., 33 Conn. 167; Harton v. Eastern R. Co., 114 Mass. 44; Ellsworth v. Tartt, 16 Ala. 733.

1. Insurance Co. v. Railroad Co., 104 U. S. 146; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260.

2. Watkins v. Terre Haute, etc., R., 8 Mo. App. 569; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 614. See also Schiff v. N. Y. Cent., etc., R., 16 Hun (N. Y.), 278.

3. Ellsworth v. Tartt, 26 Ala. 733; Straiton v. New York, etc., R., 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 184; Watkins v. Terre Haute, etc., R., 8 Mo. App. 569; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 614.

4. Straiton v. New York, etc., R., 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 184.

5. Irvin v. Nashville, etc., R. 92 Ill. 103.

(l) Charter Power.—Railroad companies cannot enter into partnership unless authorized by their charter to do so.[1] It seems well settled that connecting railroad companies have no authority under their charters to form a partnership arrangement for the joint management of the two roads, and the division of profit and losses. The charter authorizes the company to manage and control its own road, and that alone, and that it must govern and control without the intervention or co-operation of another railroad.[2]

(m) When connecting Carriers are Partners.—If several carriers, each having its own line, associate and form what to the shipper is a continuous line, and contract to carry goods through for an agreed price which the consignor or consignee pays in one sum, and which the carriers divide among them, then as to third parties, with whom they contract, they are liable jointly for a loss taking place on any part of the whole line.[3]

1. Railroad companies cannot enter into partnership unless authorized by their charters so to do. Burke v. Concord R. Corp., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 94; State ex rel. v. Concord R Corp. et al., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 94. See Silver v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 72 Mo. 193, in which a contract between connecting lines as to certain freight, which contract was alleged to amount to a partnership, was discussed and commented upon.

2. Burke v. Concord R. Co., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 552; Pearce v. Mad. & Ind. R. C. & Peru & Ind. R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 441. See also Bissell v. Mich. South. & North. Ind. R. Co., 22 N. Y. 259. But through freight line partnerships involve considerations somewhat different from those involved in the cases just cited. Such a partnership does not involve a joint management of the road. The management of each road is kept entirely distinct and is not affected by the partnership arrangement. The partnership relates only to through business, and each road contributes to the partnership its services as a carrier over its line. It is objected that a railroad has no authority under its charter to assume a liability for the defaults or torts of another road, but it seems well settled that a road may contract for the carriage of goods or passengers beyond its own termini. Nashua Lock Co. v. Worc. & Nashua R. Co., 48 N. H. 339; Stewart v. Erie & West. Transp. Co., 17 Minn. 372.

3. Barton v. Wheeler. 49 N. H. 25; Bradford v. Railroad Co., 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 201; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Spratt, 2 Duval (Ky.), 4; Nashua Lock Co. v. Railroad Co., 48 N. H. 339; Quimby v. Vanderbilt, 17 N. Y. 306; Chouteaux v. Leach, 18 Pa. St. 224; Boston, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Brown, 54 Pa. St. 77; Hart v. Railroad Co., 4 Seld. (N. Y.) 37; Railroad Co. v. Androscoggin Mills, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 594; Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S) 123; Wyman v. Chicago, etc., R., 4 Mo. App. 39; Erie, etc., Despatch v. Cecil, 112 Ill. 180; Rice v. I. & St. L. R., 3 Mo. App. 31; Coates v. United States Exp. Co., 45 Mo. 238; Barton v. Wheeler, 40 N. H. 11; Bostwick v. Champion, 11 Wend. (N.Y.) 571; Champion v. Bostwick, 18 Wend. (N.Y.) 175; Briggs v. Vanderbilt, 19 Barb. (N.Y.) 222; Hart v. Rensselaer, etc., R., 8 N.Y. 37; Gass v. New York, etc., R., 99 Mass. 220; Converse v. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co., 33 Conn. 166; Ellsworth v. Tartt, 26 Ala. 733; Montgomery, etc., R. v. Moore, 51 Ala. 394; Wilson v. Chesapeake, etc., R., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 654; Schulter v. Adams Exp. Co., 6 Cent. L. J. 175; Gill v. Manchester, etc., Ry., L. R. 8 Q. B. 136.

In Block v. Erie & North Shore Despatch Fast Freight Line, 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1, it was held that several railway companies forming a fast freight line are partners liable jointly and severally for goods lost or damaged in transportation by such line. By a bill of lading "The Erie & North Shore Despatch" contracted to carry plaintiff's goods from Boston by the Fitchburg R. and thence by the Erie & North Shore Despatch to Chicago, and there to deliver them to connecting railroad lines to be forwarded to Denver, their destination—not naming the several railroad companies forming the association, but providing that in case of loss or damage of the goods "that company shall alone be held answerable therefor in whose actual custody the same may be at the time of the

Where several carriers unite to complete a line of transportation and receive goods for freight, and give a through bill of lading, each carrier is agent of the others, and is liable for any damage to the goods on whatever part of the line the damage is received.[1]

5. Carrier's Liability as Warehouseman.—1. RECEIPT OF GOODS IN WAREHOUSE FOR TRANSPORTATION.—Where goods are received to be forwarded in the usual course of business, the liability of the common carrier immediately attaches. Where they are lost by an accidental fire while in the carrier's warehouse, awaiting transportation, he is liable as a common carrier unless his common-law liability has been limited by an agreement with the shipper.[2] Where goods are left by the consignor with the carrier awaiting orders to forward the same, the liability of the company is that of a warehouseman and not that of a common carrier.[3]

2. MEASURE OF WAREHOUSEMAN'S DUTY.—The measure happening thereof." Held, that the words "that company" referred only to the companies named in the contract, and that plaintiff need not sue the member of the Despatch Line on whose road the goods were lost, the Despatch Co. being liable as a partnership. Morton, C. J., observes: "So far as the question in this case is concerned, it is unlike those cases where a railroad forming one link in a line of connecting roads between two points receives goods to be transported over its line and delivered to the connecting road, in which it has been held in this commonwealth that each railroad in the continuous line is liable only for loss or damage happening on its own road. Darling v. Boston & W. R. Co., 11 Allen, 295; Gass v. New York, P. & B. R. Co., 99 Mass. 220; Burroughs v. Norwich & W. R. Co., 100 Mass. 26; Aigen v. Boston & M. R., 132 Mass. 423; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 426."

1. Texas & Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 14 Rep. 319.

2. Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Barrett, 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 256. See also Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), § 536.

Where goods are such as company only carry by particular trains and at certain intervals, the acceptance in a warehouse before time for starting imposes the liability of common carrier, not of warehouseman. Moffat v. Great Western R., 15 L. T. N. S. 630.

3. Cairns v. Robins, 8 M. & W. 258.

If the delivery of goods at a carrier's warehouse is accompanied with instructions not to forward until further orders, or if anything remains to be done to the goods by the shipper before they are to be forwarded, liability as a common carrier does not attach. Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Barrett, 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 256.

Where goods are left by the owner, with the railway company, pending orders to transport the same, the liability of the company is that of a warehouseman, and not that of a common carrier. Michigan Southern & Northern Ind. R. Co. v. Schurtz, 7 Mich. 515; O'Neill v. N. Y. Cent., etc., R. Co., 60 N. Y. 138.

In Missouri Pacific, etc., R. v. Douglass, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 98, it was held that in Texas, where a statute provides that the liability of a common carrier shall not attach to a carrier until he has given a receipt or a bill of lading, if the company has a depot or warehouse for storing goods it is responsible for all goods in its care as a warehouseman until the commencement of the trip or voyage; and the trip or voyage is not to be considered as having commenced until the signing of the bill of lading.

In Barron v. Eldredge, 100 Mass. 455, it was held that after goods are consigned for transportation, where it appears that something remained undone by the consignor prior to their shipment, the carrier has not assumed the liability of a common carrier, but that of a warehouseman only. To the same effect are various cases holding that the same rule applies where the consignor directs that the goods be held for future orders. Platt v. Hibbard, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 499; Ackley v. Kellogg, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 223; Dickinson v. Winchester, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 114. See also Nichols v. Smith, 115 Mass. 332; Michigan, etc., R. v. Shurtz, 7 Mich. 515; St. Louis, etc., R. v. Montgomery, 39 Ill. 335.

of the warehouseman's duty is that degree of care which a reasonably prudent man takes of his own property of a like description.[1] He is not an insurer.[2] Where he has exercised ordinary care he is not liable for loss or injury of goods by rats ;[3] nor, in such case, for goods stolen ;[4] nor, in such case, for goods destroyed by accidental fire ;[5] nor for casualties ;[6] nor for the loss of goods by the explosion of dangerous goods; when their character was unknown ;[7] nor for loss by the leakage of a defective cask ;[8] nor for the depreciation of goods in market value.[9]

Where the warehouseman's storage is gratuitous he is only liable for gross negligence ;[10] he may charge reasonable rates for storage ;[11] he may first give notice of such fact and the owner will be liable to pay storage, whether actually informed of the contents of the notice or not.[12]

Although the carrier makes no charge for warehouse storage of goods held to await future orders whether at the beginning or end of the transit, he is not to be considered a gratuitous bailee but a bailee for hire.[13]

1. Giblin v. McMullen, 38 L. J. P. C. 25; L. R. 2 P. C. 517; Heugh v. London, etc., R., 39 L. J. Exch. 48; L. R. 5 Exch. 51; Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209; Mobile, etc , R. v. Prewitt, 46 Ala. 63; Leland v. Chicago, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 108; Kennedy v. Mobile, etc., R., 74 Ala. 430; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 145; Gashweiler v. Wabash, etc., R., 83 Mo. 112; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 403.

2. Searle v. Laverick, 43 L. J. Q. B. 43; L. R., 9 Q. B. 122.

3. Cailiff v. Danvers, Peake, 114.

4. Finucane v. Small, 1 Esp. 315; Neal v. Railroad, 8 Jones L. (N. Car.) 482.

Where the plaintiff, in an action against a railroad company to recover damages for goods lost while in store, alleges that they have been stolen, the burden of proof is upon him to show a lack of ordinary care on the part of the defendant in guarding the goods. Lamb v. Western, etc., R., 7 Allen (Mass.), 98.

5. Chapman v. Great Western R., 28 W. R. 566; Garside v. Trent Nav. Co., 4 T. R. 581; Fenner v. Railroad, 44 N. Y. 505.

6. Mackenzie v. Cox, 9 C. & P. 632.

7. Weed v. Barney, 45 N. Y. 344.

Where the carrier had stored powder in the same warehouse with goods, and the latter were destroyed in consequence, this was held to constitute negligence on the part of the carrier for which he was held liable. White v. Colorado Central R., 5 Dill. C. C. 428.

8. Hudson v. Baxendale, 2 Hurl. & N. 575.

9. Kremer v. Southern Exp. Co., 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 356; Fisk v. Newton, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 45.

A railroad company which has assumed the duties of a warehouseman is liable for negligence only, in the care of the goods stored by it. McCarty v. N. Y. & Erie R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 247.

10. If the storage be gratuitous on his part, he is liable only for gross negligence. McCombs v. North Carolina R. Co., 67 N. Car. 163; Michigan G. & N. R. Co. v. Schurtz, 7 Mich. 515.

11. Railroad companies are, however, generally held entitled to charge reasonable rates for storage,—Illinois Central R. Co. v. Alexander, 20 Ill. 23,—and are therefore generally held as warehousemen to the liabilities of other bailees for hire.

12. Where a railroad company had posted a notice that storage would be charged upon all goods left with it for more than two days after arrival, it was held that a consignee leaving goods for a greater length of time became liable to pay storage whether he was actually informed of the contents of the notice or not, and hence that the company was liable as a bailee for hire. Dimmick v. Milwaukee v. St. Paul R. Co., 18 Wis. 471.

Where goods at end of transit are tendered at consignee's residence and refused, liability of carrier is that of warehouseman or involuntary bailee. Heugh v. London, etc., R., 39 L. J. Exch. 48; L. R. 5 Exch. 51; Store v. Crowley, McClel. & Y. 129.

13. Cairns v. Robins, 8 M. & W. 258; White v. Humphrey, 11 Q. B. 43; Mit-

3. SPECIAL CONTRACTS OF WAREHOUSEMEN.—A carrier fulfilling the duties of a warehouseman is not obliged to accept the goods subject to his ordinary liability. He may impose such terms as he pleases, and the consignor, with notice thereof, will be bound. Whether such terms are or are not reasonable is an irrelevant inquiry.[1]

4. CONNECTING CARRIERS AS WAREHOUSEMEN.—Where, by the terms of a special contract, or by the law of a State, a railroad company receiving goods for transportation to a point beyond its own line assumes no extra terminal liability, it is, nevertheless, not exempted from liability until it has actually delivered the goods to the next carrier in the line, and, while stored in its warehouse or station awaiting transportation by such connecting carrier, the liability is that of a common carrier, and not that of a warehouseman.[2] Where, at the end of the transit, the carrier retains the chell v. Railway Co., L. R. 10 Q. B. Div. 256; Brown v. Railroad, 54 N. H. 535.

1. Van Toll v. South Eastern R., 31 L. J. C. P. 241; 12 C. B. N. S. 75; Harris v. Great Western R., 45 L. J. Q. B. 729; L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 515.

A railroad company is not required by law to keep a warehouse or depot at every station along the line of its road, and may lawfully stipulate, either expressly or by implication, that it will assume no liability as a warehouseman at a "flag station," where it has no depot or agent; and when the consignee is fully advised, at the time of the shipment, that the company has no depot nor agent at such station, and it is not shown that the exigencies of its business required that it should have an agent or depot at the place, the liability of the company as a common carrier terminates with the safe delivery of the goods on the side track at that point, and it assumes no liability as a warehouseman. Southern, etc., R. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 419. In this case Somerville, J., observed: "We can see no reason why a railway company, acting as a common carrier, cannot stipulate, by a contract express or implied, that their liability as a carrier shall terminate with a delivery at a particular point, and that they will assume no liability at all, in such case, as warehousemen. If the consignee is fully advised, at the time of shipment, that the company has no agent at the particular station or place to which the consignment is made, and the failure to employ such agent is not shown to be unreasonable in view of the condition of the company's business, there is, in the absence of rebutting circumstances, an implied consent that the carrier's responsibility shall be dissolved, when he has done all that the nature of the case permits him to do, according to the reasonable and proper usages of his business." See also Gashweiler v. Wabash, etc., R., 83 Mo. 112; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 403, where it was held that a warehouseman may restrict his liability by contract, except as to loss occurring through his fraud or want of good faith.

In Mitchell v. Lancashire, etc., R., 44 L. J. Q. B. 107, L. R. 10 Q. B. 2566, a railway company, on the arrival of goods at a station, gave notice to the consignee that they held the goods "not as common carriers, but as warehousemen at owner's sole risk, and subject to the usual warehouse charges," in which notice the consignee acquiesced. It was held upon the construction of the terms of this notice, that it did not qualify the duty of the company as warehousemen and free them from the ordinary liability to take reasonable care, and that they were therefore liable for damage happening through their negligence. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 133. See also Kimball v. Western, etc., R., 6 Gray (Mass.), 542.

2. Railroad Company is Liable as Common Carrier for Goods in Storage at Terminus Awaiting Transportation Over Connecting Lines.—Railroad Co. v. Manufacturing Co., 16 Wall. (U.S.) 318; Conkey v. Railroad Co., 31 Wis. 619; Railroad Co. v. Mitchell, 68 Ill. 471; Irish v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 19 Minn. 376; Reynolds v. Boston & Albany R. Co., 121 Mass. 291; McDonald v. Western R. Corp., 34 N. Y. 497; Ladue v. Griffith, 25 N. Y. 364; Mills v. Michigan Central R. Co., 45 N. Y. 622; Brintnall v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 32 Vt. 665; Erie R. Co. v. Lock-goods in his own possession according to custom or previous usage, and for the consignee's convenience, to hold them until called for, his liability is that of a warehouseman only.[1] This limited liability may arise from various circumstances, among which are the following: Where the consignee has been duly notified of the arrival of the goods and is not ready to receive them.[2] Where the consignee resided a long distance from the railway station and failed to have an agent awaiting their arrival.[3] Where the car-wood, 28 Ohio St. 358. But see Armstrong v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 2 Pugs. & B. (N. B.) 445; Michigan Central R. Co. v. Hall, 6 Mich. 243; Michigan Central R. Co. v. Lantz, 32 Mich. 502; Deming v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 232.

Carrier cannot assume to be a warehouseman at some point during the transit, and thus escape the liability of a common carrier. In McDonald v. Western, etc., R., 34 N. Y. 497, a carrier deposited goods in his warehouse at the end of the journey, awaiting, according to custom, a connecting carrier assuming charge of them, but neglecting to notify such carrier and making no effort to divest himself of liability, and in holding him liable as a common carrier the court observed: "The owner loses sight of his goods when he delivers them to the first carrier, and has no means of learning their whereabouts till he or the consignee is informed of their arrival at destination. At each successive point of transfer, from one carrier to another, they are liable to be placed in warehouses, there perhaps to be delayed by the accumulation of freight or other causes, and exposed to loss by fire or theft, without fault on the part of the carrier or his agents. Superadded to these risks are the dangers of loss by collusion, quite as imminent while the goods are thus stored at some point unknown to the owner as while they are in actual transit. As a general rule the storing of the goods under such circumstances should be held to be a mere accessory to the transportation, and they should be under the protection of the rule which makes the carrier liable as an insurer from the time the owner transfers their possession to the first carrier until they are delivered to him at the end of the route." See also Railroad Co. v. Mfg. Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 327.

Where goods are shipped over various lines, and lie in warehouse at the connecting point of one line with another, they are nevertheless considered qua the owners as continuing in transit. Hence the liability of the railroad company who has contracted to transport them remains that of a common carrier. Conkey v. Milwaukee & St. Paul R. Co., 32 Wis. 319; Wood v. Milwaukee & St. Paul R. Co., 398.

But where a number of mules were forwarded over various connecting lines, and were stored at a point of intersection, and, while so stored, escaped, it was held proper to submit to the jury the question whether under the contract of transportation the carrier was liable as warehouseman or as a common carrier. North Missouri R. Co. v. Akers, 4 Kans. 453.

1. In re Webb, 8 Taunt. 443; Garside v. Trent Nav. Co., 4 T. R. 581; Chapman v. Great Western R., 42 L. T. N. S. 252, 28 W. R. 566; Rowe v. Pickford, 8 Taunt. 83; Hathorn v. Ely, 28 N. Y. 78; McCarty v. New York, etc., R., 30 Pa. St. 247; New Albany, etc., R. v. Campbell, 12 Ind. 55; Hilliard v. Wilmington, etc., R., 6 Jones (N. Car.), 343. See, further, Michigan Central, etc., R. v. Hale, 6 Mich. 243; Mills v. Michigan Central, etc., R., 45 N. Y. 626; Railroad Co. v. Mfg. Co., 16 How. (U. S.) 318.

2. Rothschild v. Michigan, etc., R. Co., 69 Ill. 164; Stowe v. N. Y., Bost., etc., R. Co., 113 Mass. 521; Mohr v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 40 Iowa, 579.

Where goods are stored on a platform, and notice given to the consignee to remove them, and he fails to do so for two days, and they are then burned by fire originating in a steam compress on the carrier's grounds, held, the carrier is not liable. Nicholas v. New York Central, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 103. See also Leland v. Chicago, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 108.

3. Where the distance over which the goods had been transported was very short, and the consignee resided a long distance from the railway station, and fail to have an agent awaiting their arrival, it was held that the railroad company having stored the goods was thenceforth liable as warehouseman only. Hilliard v. Wilmington & Weldon R. Co., 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 343.

Where the consignee of goods refuses to accept them, and thereupon the rail-rier's agent was considered to have no authority to make a contract to retain the goods.[1] No other liability is imposed by an act in force in Tennessee, requiring the company to give a prescribed notice to the consignee.[2] Where the consignee or any agent to receive for him was absent.[3] Where the carrier had orders to hold the goods until paid for, and received the promise of the consignee to pay for and take them in a few days.[4]

5. LIABILITY AS COMMON CARRIER CONTINUING AFTER TRANSIT.—Where a railroad company receives loaded cars from another road for transportation it is liable as a common carrier in case they are destroyed en route by fire.[5] Where goods were at road company states to him that it has no accommodation for the storage of said goods, notwithstanding which said consignee leaves them in the hands of the company by which they are stored, said company is liable as a warehouseman. Smith v. Nashua & Lowell R. Co., 27 N. H. 86.

1. In Mulligan v. Northern Pacific R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 33, a railway company delivered to the owner certain goods which were in its warehouse, taking his receipt therefor. By an arrangement between the owner and the warehouseman and baggageman a part of the goods were left in the warehouse, and subsequently lost. The baggageman had no authority to make any contract for the company. Held, that the company was not liable for the goods lost; that the baggageman permitting part of the goods to remain in the warehouse was his private arrangement, to which the company was not a party.

2. The duty of a railroad company is to carry freight to the place directed, and to deliver it to the party entitled if there ready to receive it, and, if not, to store it for him. The liability of the company as a common carrier ceases when the freight is deposited in a warehouse, and is not extended by the Tennessee act of 1870, c. 17 (Code, § 1993j), requiring the company to give a prescribed notice to the consignee. Butler v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 8 Lea (Tenn.), 32; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 249. See also Rankin v. Memphis Packet Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 564; Express Co. v. Kaufman, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 161.

3. Clendaniel v. Tuckerman, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 184; Roth v. Railroad, 34 N. Y. 548; Adams Exp. Co. v. Darnell, 31 Ind. 20; Marshall v. Am. Exp. Co., 7 Wis. 1; Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209.

It is the duty of a railroad company, after transporting goods to the point of destination, to put them in store, when the consignee is not on hand to receive them. McHenry v. Phila., W. & Balt. R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 448.

Some authorities hold that the liability of a railroad company for goods thus stored remains that of a common carrier. Buckley v. Great Western R. Co., 18 Mich. 121. But the great weight of authority is to the contrary. In almost every State it is held that when once the transportation has been completed the company may terminate its liability as common carrier by storing the goods, and thereafter is bound only to the duties of a warehouseman. Rice v. Boston & Worcester R. Co., 98 Mass. 212; Cincinnati & Chicago R. Co. v. McCool, 26 Ind. 141; Northrop v. Syracuse & C. R. Co., 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 425; Jackson v. Sacramento Valley R. Co., 23 Cal. 269; Judson v. Western R. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.), 520; McCarty v. N. Y. & E. R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 247; Davis v. Michigan Southern & North Ind. R. Co., 20 Ill. 412; Mobile & Girard R. Co. v. Prewitt, 46 Ala. N. S. 63; Bansemer v. Toledo & Wabash R. Co., 25 Ind. 434; Ayres v. Morris & Essex R. Co. 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 393. Francis v. Dubuque, etc., R., 25 Iowa, 60; Mohr v. Chicago, etc., R., 40 Iowa, 579; Leland v. Chicago, etc., R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 108.

4. A carrier under orders to hold goods until paid for, receiving the promise of the consignee to pay for and take them in a few days, is only liable as a warehouseman while the goods are so held, although he fails to notify the consignor. In this case the custom of carriers to so extend the time for delivery, and the distance to the place of first consignment, were regarded as important factors in the conclusion. Weed v. Barney, 45 N. Y. 344. See also Great Western R. v. Crouch, 3 H. & N. 183; Storr v. Crowley, McClel. & Y. 129; Marshall v. American Exp. Co., 7 Wis. 1.

5. In Missouri Pacific, etc., R. v. Chicago, ect., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas.

once called for by the consignee, but delivery thereof was refused until the next day ;[1] where a special contract was made to deliver goods at a particular place[2]—in such cases liability continued.

6. NEGLIGENCE OF WAREHOUSEMAN.—A carrier as warehouseman may be guilty of such negligence as will render him liable.[3]

7. ADMIXTURE OF GOODS BY WAREHOUSEMAN.—Where grain delivered to a warehouseman by various parties without any contract of sale is, without the knowledge or consent of the owners, mixed with other grain of the same quality in one common mass, the owners become tenants in common of the entire amount in store of like quality. And where such grain is destroyed by negligence of a railroad company in setting fire to the elevator, an owner may recover in an action against the railroad the value of the grain delivered by him for storage.[4]

718, it was held that where a railroad company receives loaded cars from another road for transportation it is liable as a common carrier in case they are destroyed en route by fire. If destroyed by fire after delivery to the consignee, or after they have been tendered to him, the company is not liable if not in fault. In the latter case its duties are only those of a warehouseman.

1. Faulkner v. Hart, 82 N. Y. 413. Where a railroad company has knowingly received and transported goods which could legally be deposited only in a bonded warehouse, and, upon their arrival at the point of destination, stores the same, neglecting to notify either the revenue officers or the consignee, the duty of the company as a common carrier will be held to continue. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Sawyer, 69 Ill. 285.

In Illinois, railroad companies are expressly forbidden by statute to store grain transported by them in any other warehouse than that to which it is specially consigned. Vincent v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 49 Ill. 33; People ex rel. v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 55 Ill. 95.

2. Moore v. Michigan, etc., R., 3 Mich. 23.

3. Aland v. Boston, etc., R., 100 Mass. 31; Parker v. Lombard, 100 Mass. 405; Barron v. Eldredge, 100 Mass. 455; Lamb v. Western, etc., R., 7 Allen (Mass.), 98; Lane v. Boston, etc., R., 112 Mass. 455; American Express Co. v. Baldwin, 26 Ill. 504. A carrier may have his liability as a common carrier continued by unloading coal in an unsuitable place. The court observed: " A railroad corporation does not discharge itself of its duty as a carrier by merely bringing goods to the terminus of its road; it is bound also to unload them with due care, and put them in a place where they will be reasonably safe and free from injury. Until this is done, the duty and responsibility which attach to a corporation as carriers do not close." Rice v. Boston, etc., R., 98 Mass. 212; Chicago, etc., R. v. Scott, 42 Ill. 132; Milwaukee, etc., etc,, R. v. Fairchild, 6 Wis. 403. For cases in which is considered the effect of knowledge on the part of the owner of goods of the mode in which a warehouseman keeps them, see Mitchell v. Lancashire, etc., R., 10 Q. B. 256; Conway Bank v. American Exp. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.), 512. A railroad company which has assumed the functions of a warehouseman is liable if it negligently deliver the goods to the wrong person, but only in case it does so negligently. Lichtenhein v. Boston, etc., R., 11 Cush. (Mass.) 70; Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209.

4. Arthur v. Chicago, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 283. In such action, as the amount of damages is capable of exact computation, plaintiff will be entitled to recover interest thereon. The mixture of grain of like quality, as delivered by different owners, in one common mass, by a party operating an elevator, will not constitute a wrongful conversion, and will not divest the owners of their property, whether the admixture be made with or without their knowledge.

Admixture of Goods.—Where the goods of one person are mixed indiscriminately with those of another so that separation is impossible, the respective owners are to be considered as tenants in common of the whole mass. Sexton v. Graham, 53 Iowa. 181; Cushing v. Breed, 14 Allen (Mass.), 376; Bryant v. Clifford, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 138; Keller v. Godwin, 111 Mass. 490: Wingate v. Smith, 20 Me. 287; Pratt v. Bryant, 20 Vt. 333; Forbes v. Fitch-

8. EVIDENCE.—Evidence is admissible in an action to charge a carrier with negligence as warehouseman, to prove the degree of care usually exercised by warehousemen in the vicinity in the care of such property.[1]

9. BURDEN OF PROOF.—In case of loss or injury to goods in the possession of the warehouseman it has been said that it lies upon him to show that he was not in fault.[2]

10. MEASURE OF DAMAGES.—The measure of damages, in case of loss through the negligence of the warehouseman, is the value of the article itself, not the consequential damages resulting from such loss.[3]

11. LIEN OF WAREHOUSEMAN.—A railroad company acting as warehouseman has a lien upon goods stored by it until all the back charges thereon are paid.[4]

6. Carrier's Liability Arising out of Delivery.—1. DELIVERY GENERALLY.—The carrier's duty to deliver according to the terms of his expressed or implied contract is as essential and binding as is his duty to carry safely.[5] The question of negligence in the per-burg R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 80. But see Ryder v. Hathaway, 21 Pick. 298; Stephenson v. Little, 10 Mich. 433.

1. Cass v. Boston, etc., R., 14 Allen (Mass.), 448.

2. Mackenzie v. Cox, 9 C. & P. 632; Wardlaw v. South Carolina, etc., R., 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 337. Compare Lamb v. Western, etc., R., 7 Allen (Mass.), 98.

Where a railroad company is sued to recover the value of goods lost by it while discharging the duty of a warehouseman, it may exempt itself from liability by simply showing that the loss occurred without the want of any ordinary diligence on its part. It need not prove exactly how the loss did occur. Lichtenheim v. Bost. & Prov. R. Co., 11 Cush. (Mass.) 70.

It was proved on the trial that the respondent had stored in appellant's warehouse sixty-four bales of wool of a certain value per pound, which, on demand and tender of the storage due upon it, the appellant refused to deliver to the respondent, assigning as a reason that the warehouse and all it contained, including the wool of the respondent, except about three bales, which were returned to him, had been consumed in the fire. Held, a prima-facie case of negligence is made out against a warehouseman who refuses to deliver property stored with him, upon proof of demand and refusal. Upon such proof alone the burden is on him to account for the property, otherwise he shall be deemed to have converted it to his own use. But if it appears that the property when demanded was consumed by fire, the burden of proof is then on the bailor to show that the fire was the result of the negligence of the warehouseman. Wilson v. S. P. R., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 400; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 161. See also Harris v. Packwood. 3 Taunt. 264; Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 26; Brown v. Johnson, 29 Tex. 43; Lamb v. Camden, etc., R., 46 N. Y. 271; Jackson v. Sacramento Valley R., 23 Cal. 269.

Where a carrier has received and stored all the goods and subsequently delivers to the consignee only a part of them, having in the meantime lost the rest, the burden of proof is upon the carrier to show that the loss has not been occasioned by his negligence. Boies v. Hartford, etc., R., 37 Conn. 273.

3. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 134; Henderson v. Northeastern R., 9 W. R. 519. See also Hiort v. London, etc., R., 27 W. R. 778, 48 L. J. Exch. 545; L. R. 4 Exch. Div. 188.

4. Alden & Co. v. Carver, 13 Iowa, 253.

5. Carrier's liability continues until actual or constructive delivery is made to consignee or his agent at the stipulated or authorized place of delivery. Moffat v. Great Western, etc., R., 15 L. T. N. S. 630; Fowles v. Great Western, etc., R., 22 L. J. Exch. 76, 7 Exch. 699; Erskine v. Thames, 6 Miss. 371; Smith v. Nashua, etc., R., 7 Fost. (N. H.) 86; Parker v. Flagg, 26 Me. 181; Groff v. Bloomer, 9 Pa. St. 114; American, etc., Co. v. Baldwin, 26 Ill. 504.

A subsequent acquiescence by the consignee in a wrong delivery exempts the carrier from liability therefor. O'Dougherty v. Boston, etc., R., 1 N. Y. S. Ct. 477.

The defence to an action by a consignor against the carrier for the conversion of formance of this duty is immaterial, for his warranty as insurer is broken by non-delivery.[1] In England, and in those of the United States where the rule in Muschamp's Case is enforced, the obligation of the carrier receiving the goods to deliver safely extends through a delivery by a connecting carrier.[2]

Where a delivery is made impossible by the absence or death of the consignee, or because he cannot be found, or because he neglects or refuses to receive the goods, the carrier is only liable as a warehouseman if he has done all that could reasonably be required of him.[3] certain sewing machines which had been consigned to K. at M., was, in substance, that K. did not live at M., and did not expect to be there to receive the machines; that it was understood between plaintiff and defendant that on arrival at M. they were to be delivered to B. & S., who were plaintiff's agents and dealt in sewing machines of plaintiff's manufacture at M., and that they were so delivered. Among the evidence offered by defendant was testimony tending to show that B. & S. had obtained the machines by representing to defendant's agents that they were intended for them. For the plaintiff the court instructed the jury, in substance, that defendant was bound to deliver the machines to K., and that the mere fact that B. & S. had made such representations and had thus obtained the machines was no defence, if the representations were untrue in fact; and further instructed that the fact that K. was not and did not intend to be at M. did not of itself justify defendant in delivering the machines to B. & S. For defendant the court instructed, in substance, that if they found that the understanding alleged in the answer existed, their verdict should be for defendant. Held, that these instructions, taken together, put the case fairly before the jury. Wilson Sewing M. Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 71 Mo. 203.

Carrier's engagement is to deliver safely as well as to carry safely. Bodenham v. Bennett, 4 Price, 31; Duff v. Budd, 3 B. & D. 177. See also Richards v. London, etc., R., 18 L. J. C. P. 251, 7 C. B. 839; South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 419.

1. Richards v. London, etc., R., 18 L. J. C. P. 251, 7 C. B. 839; Hall v. Boston, etc., R., 12 Allen (Mass.), 439; Forbes v. Boston, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 76.

2. See supra, this title, CONNECTING CARRIERS. Rule in Muschamp's Case.

3. Stephenson v. Hart, 4 Bing. 476, Cairns v. Robins, 8 M. & W. 258; Heugh v. London, etc., R., 39 L. J. Exch. 48, L. R. 5 Exch. 51; Garside v. Trent Nav. Co., 4 T. R. 581; White v. Humphrey, 11 Q. B. 43; Hurd v. Hartford, etc., R., 40 Conn. 49; Fenner v. Buffalo, etc., R., 44 N. Y. 505; Mayell v. Pather. 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 371; Clendaniel v. Tuckerman, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 184; Roth v. Railroad, 34 N. Y. 548; Hirsch v. Quaker City, 2 Disney (Ohio), 144; Marshall v. American Exp. Co., 7 Wis. 1; Bartholomew v. St. Louis, etc., R., 52 Ill. 106, Ill. Central, etc., R. v. Friend, 64 Ill. 303; Adams Exp. Co. v. Darnell, 31 Ind. 20; Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209; Dean v. Vacaro, 2 Head (Tenn.), 490; Rankin v. Memphis Packet Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 564; Express Co. v. Kaufman, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 161; Cope v. Cordova, 1 Rawle (Penn.), 203; Kennedy v. Mobile, etc., R., 74 Ala. 430; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 145. See supra, this title, LIABILITY AS WAREHOUSEMEN.

"The precise degree of care which it is the duty of a carrier to use in delivering the goods entrusted to him must depend upon and vary with the nature and condition of the thing carried, and the ever varying circumstances under which the delivery takes place. Some goods require much more tender handling than others; some animals much more care and management than others, according to their nature, habits, and conditions; and the line of conduct which the carrier should propose to himself is that which a prudent owner would adopt if he were in the carrier's place, and had to deal with the goods or animals under circumstances and subject to the condition in which the carrier is placed, and under which he is called on to act." Gill v. Manchester, etc., R., 42 L. J. Q. B. 89, L. R. 8 Q. B. 186; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 103.

In Newcomb v. Boston, etc., R., 115 Mass. 233, B sent certain goods by railroad taking therefor a railroad receipt in which he was named as consignor and consignee. He indorsed on this receipt an order to deliver to C, drew a draft on C for the price, attached the receipt to the draft, and sent both to a bank for collection. C accepted the draft, and afterwards sold the goods to D. A, at the request of C, afterwards took up the draft, and C thereupon indorsed on the receipt an order to deliver the goods to A. The railroad company, however, delivered the goods to D upon their arrival. This was held a misdelivery, and the company was held liable to A for the conversion accordingly. See also Alderman v. Eastern R. Co., 115 Mass. 233; The Thames, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 98; Forbes v. Boston, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 70. See also Peoria, etc., R. v. Buckley, 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 94.

2. DELIVERY TO AGENT OF CONSIGNEE.—A delivery to a drayman, cartman, or any other person unauthorized by the consignee to receive goods is made at the risk of the carrier.[1]

In the case of the Jeffersonville, Madison & Ind. R. Co. v. Irvin et al., 46 Ind. 180, the facts were these: J. & Co., of Indianapolis, shipped to C. & Co., of Columbus, certain flour, receiving a bill of lading containing a stipulation that the company undertook to deliver the flour on presentation of the said bill. J. & Co. then drew a draft on C. & Co. attached the bill of lading to it, and had the same discounted. C. & Co. accepted the draft, but failed to meet it on maturity. J. & Co then took up the draft, and presented the accompanying bill of lading to the railroad, demanding the goods. It appeared, however, that the goods had been already delivered to the consignee without demanding the bill of lading. This was adjudged to be a conversion by the railroad company. See McEwen et al. v. Jeffersonville, Madison & Ind. R. Co., 33 Ind. 368.

Where there has been an erroneous delivery of goods, and subsequently the person to whom they have been delivered accounts for their full value to the consignee, said consignee can recover only nominal damages from the carrier. Rosenfeld v. Express Co., 1 Woods, 131.

Where through a mistake in the way-bill of a carrier goods are delivered to the wrong factor, and by him sold, the proceeds being accounted for to the consignor, the receipt of such proceeds does not estop the consignor from bringing his action against the carrier. His damages in such case will be the highest price attained by the goods between the time of sale and the time of suit brought. Arrington v. Wilmington & Weldon R. Co., 6 Jones Law (N. Car.), 68.

Where the carrier is guilty of no negligence, but the consignee refuses to receive goods partly on account of alleged delay and partly because they were not as ordered, the carrier is not liable to the consignor. Adams Exp. Co. v. McConnell, 27 Kans. 32; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 240.

In Houston, etc., R. v. Harry, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 502, a Texas statute was held constitutional which subjected a railroad company to a penalty equal in amount to the freight charges for every day the goods were withheld after payment or the offer of payment of the charges due as shown by the bill of lading. Independently of such statute a consignee would have a right of action under such circumstances.

But he cannot abandon the goods upon the wharf, and if he does so he is responsible to the owner for their loss or injury. Rowland v. Miln, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 150; McAndrew v. Whitlock, 52 N. Y. 40; Mobile, etc., R., 46 Ala. 63; Gulliver v. Adams Exp. Co., 38 Ill. 502; Bartholomew v. St. Louis, etc., R., 53 Ill. 227; Chicago, etc., R. v. Fairclough, 51 Ill. 106. See also Mote v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Iowa, 22; Mattison v. New York, etc., R., 57 N. Y. 552.

It has been held that the responsibility of a common carrier on the Ohio River does not cease by the delivery of the goods on the wharf and notice given to the consignee, but that the duty of the carrier is to attend to the actual delivery. Hemphill v. Chenie, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 62. And see Blin v. Mayo, 10 Vt. 56; Galloway v. Hughes, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 553.

1. Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209; Bartlett v. Steamboat Philadelphia, 32 Mo. 316; Sultana v. Chapman, 5 Wis. 454; Herman v. Goodrich, 21 Wis. 356; Dean v. Vacaro, 2 Head (Tenn.), 488. Williams v. Holland, 22 How. (N. Y.) 137.

Where goods are directed to the consignee the carrier cannot discharge himself from liability by delivering them to the consignor's general agent at the point of destination. Ela v. American Merchant's Union Ex. Co., 29 Wis. 611; and this even though no such person as the consignee lives at the point of destination. Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 71 Mo. 203.

3. DELIVERY TO REAL CONSIGNEE.—An essential part of the carrier's undertaking is that of making delivery only to the real consignee or his authorized agent.[1] The measure of his duty in this regard is said to be the reasonable diligence which a prudent business man would be expected to exercise in any important business affair of his own, in searching for and delivering to the consignee at his house or place of business.[2]

It has been held that the presentation of an order from the consignee, or the bill of lading with his indorsement, was sufficient evidence of ownership to authorize the carrier to make the delivery.[3] Or if the goods are delivered to one to whom it has been customary to make delivery. although the bill of lading is to the order of another party.[4] Where goods have been shipped to a consignee and he indorses and sells the bill of lading, but, before the carrier has notice of such transfer of title. the consignee sells the goods to another party who is a bona fide purchaser and the goods are delivered to such bona fide purchaser on an order of the consignee, the carrier cannot be held liable for the value of the goods.[5]

Where certain dutiable goods were sent in bond from a point in Canada to a point in Massachusetts. directed to a special agent who was to discharge the duties thereon, it was held that the agent's authority did not extend so far as to authorize him to change the destination of the goods. Where accordingly the carrier, knowing such agent's limited authority, delivered the goods on his order to a third person, it was held liable for a conversion. Claflin v. Boston & Lowell R. Co., 7 Allen, 341.

An express company, being informed and knowing that certain goods received by it for transportation were the property of the shipper, delivered them without his knowledge to a third person at the place of shipment on the order of the consignee. This was held a misdelivery, and the company was liable accordingly. Southern Express Co. v. Dickson, 94 U. S. 549.

1. Carrier is liable for a delivery to any other person than the real consignee. Hoare v. Great Western R., 25 W. R. 631; Youl v. Harbottle, Peake N. P. 49; Duff v. Budd, 3 B. & B. 177; see cases cited infra.

2. Quinn v. Steamboat Co., 49 N. Y. 442; Schroeder v. Railroad, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 55; Witbeck v. Holland, 40 N. Y. 13.

In Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209, it was held that if a railroad company contracts to deliver goods to its own agent it becomes liable as carrier for their transportation and as warehouseman for their subsequent safe keeping and delivery. And if the agent deposits the goods in the warehouse of a third person who by mistake delivers them to a person not authorized to receive them, the railroad company is liable. See also Hathorne v. Ely, 28 N. Y. 78.

When the usual course of business was for a carrier, on the arrival of goods at the place to which they were consigned, to send a notice to the address of the consignee requesting the goods to be removed, and stating that that notice must be produced by the person who was sent for the goods, indorsed as a delivery order; and, this notice having been sent, it was afterwards produced so indorsed by a person who was not the intended consignee, whereupon the goods were delivered to him, it was held that the carrier was not liable as for a misdelivery, since, following his usual course of business, he had obeyed the directions given to him. McKean v. McIver, 40 L. J. Exch. 30. L. R. 6 Exch. 36; and see Heugh v. London, etc., R. 39 L. J. Exch. 48, L. R. 5 Exch. 51; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 112.

3. Newhall v. Railroad, 51 Cal. 345; The Argentina, 1 L. R. Adm. 370; The Emilien Marie, 32 L. T. N. S. 435; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63; Coombs v. Bristol, etc., R. Co., 3 H. & N. 1.

4. Ontario Bank v. Steamboat Co., 59 N. Y. 510.

5. Newcomb v. Railroad, 115 Mass. 230; Alderman v. Railroad, 115 Mass. 233; The Argentina, 1 L. R. Adm. 370.

Carriers are bound in all cases to be diligent in their efforts to secure a delivery to the parties entitled. Where

4. FRAUD, IMPOSITION, OR MISTAKE.—Fraud, imposition, or mistake to which the carrier is subjected will not excuse a misdelivery.[1] The carrier is responsible for a mistake in the marking marks on the goods differed from those on way-bill, the carrier may delay to make sure of propriety of delivery to the consignee. Whether the delay was reasonable or not is for the jury. Baltimore, etc., R. v. Humphrey, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 331.

As to delivery of goods without requiring the presentation of the bill of lading. Finn v. Western R. Co., 102 Mass. 283; Libby v. Ingalls, 124 Mass. 503; McEwen v. Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co., 33 Ind. 368; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Adams, 49 Tex. 748.

1. Devereux v. Barclay, 2 B. & Ald. 702; Duff v. Budd, 3 Bod. & B. 177; Winslow v. Vermont, etc., R., 42 Vt. 700; Viner v. Steamship Co., 50 N. Y. 23; Price v. Oswego, etc., R., 50 N. Y. 213; Hawkins v. Hoffman, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 586; Powell v. Myers, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 591; McEntee v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 45 N. Y. 34; Guillaume v. Packet Co., 42 N. Y. 212; Collins v. Burner, 63 N. Y. 212; American Merchants' Exp. Co. v. Miller, 73 Ill. 224; Meyer v. Chicago, etc., R., 24 Wis. 566; American Exp. Co. v. Fletcher, 25 Ind. 492; Jeffersonville, etc., R. v. Cotton, 29 Ind. 498; American Exp. Co. v. Stock, 29 Ind. 27; Southern Exp. Co. v. Cook, 44 Ala. 468; Houston, etc., R. v. Adams, 49 Tex. 748; Little Rock, etc., R. v. Glidewell, 39 Ark. 487; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 539. Compare Bush v. St. Louis, etc., R., 3 Mo. App. 62; Ten Eyck v. Harris, 47 Ill. 268; Edmunds v. Merchants' Desp. Transp. Co., 135 Mass. 233; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 250.

In Duff v. Budd, 3 Brod. & B. 177, a swindler ordered goods shipped to J. Parker, High Street, Oxford. The consignor found upon investigation that Mr. Parker of High Street was a tradesman of respectability. It subsequently proved, however, that W. Parker was the only tradesman of that name on that street. The latter was known to the servants of the carrier, who had been accustomed to deliver parcels to him, and upon the arrival of the goods informed him of that fact. But the reply was that he had expected no goods. Subsequently a man to whom the carrier's agents had before delivered parcels under the name of Parker called at the carrier's office and claimed the package, which was delivered to him. The carrier was held liable upon the finding of the jury that he had been guilty of negligence.

In Stephenson v. Hart, 4 Bing. 476, a swindler ordered goods which by his direction were consigned to one J. West, Great Winchester Street, London. The carrier attempted delivery at this address, but finding no such person, retained the goods. He subsequently received a letter from the swindler informing him that the former address was an error, and directing that the goods be reshipped to him at another address. At the latter place the swindler called for and received the goods. The court, in an opinion by Burrough, J., observes: "At the outset, no doubt, the contract was between the carrier and the consignee; but when it was discovered that no such person as the consignee was to be found in Great Winchester Street, that contract was at an end, and the goods remaining in the hands of the carrier are the goods of the consignor, and an implied contract arose between the carrier and the consignor to take care of the goods for the use of the consignor. It is clear that the property in them never passed out of the plaintiff, the consignor. The whole transaction was a gross fraud. The goods were procured by a bill with a false drawer, a false acceptor, and no such person as the consignee ever heard of at the place to which he had addressed the goods. That circumstance ought to have awakened the suspicions of the defendants, and they are guilty of gross negligence in parting with them without further inquiry. They had the goods of the plaintiff in their possession, and they are liable to him if they delivered them wrongfully."

In Heugh v. London, etc., R., L. R. 5 Exch. 50, the facts were as follows: A swindler ordered goods which were consigned to the carrier directed to a particular number and street. An offer of delivery at that address was declined; and the carrier, in accordance with its method of business, sent an advice note to the place of delivery. Subsequently the swindler appeared at the company's office with an order purporting to come from the consignee, and obtained the goods. The court held that the carrier, having tendered the goods at the place of delivery and sent the advice note, according to the usual course of its business, ceased to hold the goods as carrier. The question was whether under the circumstances the delivery amounted in law to a conversion or whether the carrier was only bound to act and did act with reasonable caution. Kelly, C. B., observed: "The plaintiffs contend that this was a misdelivery on the part of the defendants, amounting to a conversion. But no sufficient authority has been cited in support of this position. It is true that a misdelivery by a carrier has been held to amount to a conversion, but the defendant's character of carriers had ceased, and whatever character they were, it was not that. Their position has been not inaptly described as that of involuntary bailees without their own default. They find these goods in their hands under circumstances in which the character of carriers under which they received them had ceased. Did they then as involuntary bailees become subjected to an absolute duty to deliver to the proper person, so as to be liable for misdelivery, for that negligence? The only authorities in the courts of this country cited in support of that proposition are Stephenson v. Hart, 4 Bing. 476 and Duff v. Budd, 3 Brod & B. 177. But in neither case was it held or even contended that the misdelivery amounts as a matter of law to conversion. But in both cases it was deemed to be a question for the jury, and the question was in fact left to them whether under all the circumstances the defendant had acted with reasonable care. It is plain, then, on the authority of these cases that misdelivery under such circumstances is not as a matter of law and conversion, but that it is a question of fact for the jury whether the defendants have exercised reasonable and proper care and caution. The jury have answered this question in favor of the defendants, and they are therefore entitled to keep their verdict." Hutchinson on Carriers, § 353.

In Price v. R. Co., 50 N. Y. 213, a swindler ordered goods to be shipped to the address of a fictitious firm. This firm was unknown to the carrier's agents at the place of delivery, but the carrier nevertheless delivered them to a stranger who called at the office and paid the freight charges. It subsequently proved that the person who represented himself to be the consignee was the same person who had ordered the goods. The court held that the carrier must at his peril deliver property to the true owner. Delivery to the wrong person either by innocent mistake or through fraud constitutes a conversion. The carrier's duty involved an investigation or inquiry as to the existence of the consignee. And had this been made, the fraud would have been discovered, in which case the carrier should have warehoused the goods. Had a delivery been made to any other person than the real swindler under the same circumstances, the defendants would have been clearly liable. The question was therefore, whether the swindler who wrote the order acquired a right so far as the carrier was concerned to a delivery of the goods; in other words, whether as to the carrier he was the consignee. If he was, then the delivery to him discharged the carrier upon the principle that any delivery valid as to the consignee is a defence for the carrier as to all persons. But the plaintiff did not intend that the goods should be delivered to the writer of the order, but to the firm to which they were directed, and the writer of the order was not the consignee. The delivery was therefore made to one who was neither the consignee nor the owner of the goods; and the defendants were liable for their value."

In Dunbar v. Boston, etc., R., 110 Mass. 26, A sold goods to B; he gave his name as C. The goods were sent by the carrier addressed to B, and a bill of lading sent by mail to the same address. B obtained the goods of the carrier without producing the bill of lading, by signing a receipt in his own name. There was no person by the name of C in the place to which the goods were sent. Held, that an action would not lie by A against the carrier.

In Edmunds v. Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co., 135 Mass. 233; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 250, it was held that if A, fraudulently assuming the name of a reputable merchant in a certain town, buys, in person, goods of another, the property in the goods passes to A, and the seller cannot maintain an action against a common carrier to whom the carriage of the goods is intrusted, for delivering them to A. If A, representing himself to be a brother of a reputable merchant in a certain town, buying for him, buys, in person, goods of another, the property in the goods does not pass to A; and in an action by the seller against a common carrier to whom the carriage of the goods is intrusted, for delivering them to A, the carrier cannot justify on the ground that he has delivered them to the owner.

The carrier is bound to exercise great care in searching out the proper person indicated as the consignee, and cannot excuse himself by setting up the fact that he has been imposed upon. Where, for example, certain goods were shipped without any bill of lading marked to the consignee or order the carrier is not justified in delivering the goods to a third of goods made by himself,[1] but not for one made by the owner.[2] A misdelivery by the carrier is held to amount to a conversion of the property.[3] party on the presentation by him of a letter from the consignor alluding to the shipment of goods to him similar to those in question upon the same day. Viner v. New York, Alex., Georgetown & W. S. Co., 50 N. Y. 23. The same principle applies where the carrier is deceived by fraud and false personation as to the identity of the consignee. Winslow, Ward & Co. v. Vt. & Mass. R. Co., 42 Vt. 700. And that no matter how plausible the fraud and false personation may be. Houston & Tex. Cent. R. Co. v. Adams, 49 Tex. 748. The carrier is likewise liable if it delivers the goods on a forged order purporting to be given by the consignee. American Merchants' Union Express Co. v. Miller, 73 Ill. 224. Even though the person presenting the order has formerly been the clerk of the consignee. This doctrine was carried to an extraordinary length in Price v. Oswego & Syracuse R. Co., 50 N. Y. 213 (reversing 58 Barb. 599). Here a person wrote ordering goods in the name of a fictitious firm. The goods were accordingly forwarded on the line of the defendant company directed to the fictitious firm. They were claimed by the person who had ordered them and were delivered to him by the company, he signing the pretended firm name. This person afterwards proving entirely irresponsible, the consignor sued the company for a misdelivery. The court held that they were entitled to recover. Where there are two persons of the same name in one place the carrier is not liable for a misdelivery in giving the goods to one of the two when the other was intended by the consignor, and this even though the person to whom the goods are delivered is a comparative stranger in the town. The blame falls upon the shoulders of the consignor for not more specifically marking the goods. Bush v. St. Louis R. C. & N. R. Co., 3 Mo. App. 62. Where the goods are delivered by the carrier to a person professing to be the consignee, and who is identified as such by a trustworthy party, and who calls for the goods at about the proper season, this state of facts raises a reasonable prima-facie presumption that a proper delivery has been made, and the burden of proof is on the party alleging a misdelivery. Ten Eyck v. Harris, 47 Ill. 268.

1. Meyer v. Chicago, etc., R., 24 Wis. 566; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 207. Or where he accepts goods defectively addressed he waives any right to plead such defect when he fails to deliver as contracted. Gulf, etc., R. v. Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 613.

2. Conger v. Chicago, etc., R., 24 Wis. 157; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 164; Bush v. St. Louis, etc., R., 3 Mo. App. 62. See also Baltimore, etc., R. v. Humphrey, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 331. Compare Gulf, etc., R. v. Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 613. See, generally, Chicago, etc., R. v. Bovine, 61 Miss. 288; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 644. Where goods addressed to the cashier of a bank are accepted by the clerk or receiving teller acting behind the counter of the bank in the discharge of his duties as teller, this is a delivery to the real consignee sufficient to discharge the carrier. Hotchkiss v. Artisans' Bank, 2 Abb. Ct. App. (N. Y.) 403; Ela v. American M. U. Exp. Co., 29 Wis. 611; Winslow v. Vermont, etc., R., 42 Vt. 700. Where through mistake the carrier refuses to deliver to the real consignee, and while deposited in his warehouse they are destroyed by fire, he is liable. Meyer v. Chicago, etc., R., 24 Wis. 566; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 207.

3. Bowlin v. Nye, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 416; Devereux v. Barclay, 2 B. & A. 702; Hawkins v. Hoffman, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 586; Rosenfield v. Express, 1 Woods, 131; Winslow Ward & Co. v. Vermont & Mass. R. Co., 42 Vt. 700; Newhall v. Central Pac. R. Co., 51 Cal. 345; Price v. Oswego, etc., R., 50 N. Y. 213.

Where, therefore, a railroad company stored certain barrels of flour at the point of destination, and upon presentation of an order from the consignee gave in exchange flour checks, it was held that it was guilty of a conversion in having subsequently delivered a portion of the flour to other persons than those holding the checks. Hall v. Boston & Worcester R., 14 Allen (Mass.), 439.

Where goods were destroyed through bad packing, and the carrier by mistake misdelivered them, he was held liable in nominal damages only. Baldwin v. London, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 175. See also Forbes v. Boston, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 76; Jelletts v. St. Paul, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 246; Cunningham v. Great Northern R., 49 Law Times N. S.,

5. USAGE.—An established custom or usage with regard to delivery, general orders previously given and until countermanded, will release the carrier.[1] The place of delivery may be determined by usage in the absence of contract or special orders.[2] But custom or usage will not relieve the carrier from liability for negligence.[3]

6. NOTICE TO CONSIGNOR.—It has been held that where the carrier finds that the consignee is not known at the address given, or the address is only a general one and the consignee cannot be found, it is the carrier's duty to notify the consignor and await orders before delivering to anybody.[4] Other authorities are to the effect that no rule of law requires such notice.[5] It is said that the obligation of the carrier to give notice to the consignor of the non-acceptance of the goods can only arise where the carrier is required to make a personal delivery. Where his orders are to deposit the goods to await the call of the consignee such obligation does not exist.[6]

7. NOTICE TO CONSIGNEE.—The question has arisen as to whether the liability of the carrier as a common carrier should end when the transit was completed, and nothing further remained to be done by him, or whether such liability should continue until the consignee had been given a reasonable opportunity, by the use of due diligence, and, perhaps, after notice from the carrier of the arrival of the goods, to remove them. The authorities are conflicting upon the point. The leading cases upon the first proposition were decided in Massachusetts.[7] They established the doctrine that as regards carriers by railroad, liability should end upon the completion of the transit, the unloading of the goods from the cars, and their safe deposit upon the platform or in the warehouse of the company. They refused to impose upon the

394; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 254.

1. London, etc., R. v. Bartlett, 31 L. J. Exch. 92; 7 H. & N. 400; Quiggin v. Duff, 1 M. & W. 174; Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 119; F. & M. Bank v. Champlain Transp. Co., 23 Vt. 186; Loveland v. Burk, 120 Mass. 139; Van Santvoord v. St. John, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 157; Huston v Peters, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 558; Broadwell v. Butler, 6 McLean, 296.

2. Merriam v. Hartford, etc., R., 20 Conn. 354; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Champlain Transp. Co., 23 Vt. 186; Noyes v. Rutland, etc., R., 27 Vt. 110; Barstow v. Murison, 14 La. Ann. 335; Hosea v. McCrory, 12 Ala. 349; Garey v. Meagher, 33 Ala. 630; Vincent v. Chicago, etc., R., 49 Ill. 33; South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 71 Ala. 215; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 267.

As to the effect of custom or usage generally see the following cases: Haynie v. Waring, 29 Ala. 263; Garey v. Meagher, 33 Ala. 630; Chicago, etc., R. v. People, 56 Ill. 365; Strong v. Grand Trunk R., 15 Mich. 206; Forbes v. Boston, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 76.

3. Higler v. McCartney, 31 Ala. 501.

4. Stephenson v. Hart, 4 Bing. 476; Birkett v. Willan, 2 B. & Ald. 356; Green, etc., Nav. Co. v. Marshall, 48 Ind. 596; The Eddy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 481; American, etc., Exp. Co. v. Wolf, 99 Ill. 430. Compare Sweet v. Barney, 45 N. Y. 344.

5. Mayel v. Potter, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 371; Fisk v. Newton, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 45; Fenner v. Railroad, 44 N. Y. 515; Zinn v. Steamboat Co., 49 N. Y. 442; Neal v. Railroad, 8 Jones Law (N. Car.), 482.

6. Merchants', etc., Co. v. Hallock, 64 Ill. 284; Sweet v. Barney, 45 N. Y. 344.

7. Massachusetts.—Norway Plains Co v. Boston, etc., R., 1 Gray (Mass.), 263; Rice v. Boston, etc., R., 98 Mass. 212; Thomas v. Boston, etc., R., 10 Metc. (Mass.) 472; Barron v. Eldredge, 100 Mass. 455; Stowe v. New York, etc., R., 113 Mass. 521.

carrier the onerous duty of sending express notice of arrival of all the various consignments of goods to the numerous consignees, but placed upon the latter the duty of ascertaining whether or not his goods had arrived, and only permitted him to charge the carrier after such arrival with the liability of a warehouseman. This rule has been adopted in the following States: Alabama,[1] California,[2] Georgia,[3] Illinois,[4] Indiana,[5] Iowa,[6] Missouri,[7] North Carolina,[8] Pennsylvania.[9]

The contrary doctrine was established in New Hampshire, and is founded substantially upon the reasoning that the time of arrival was at best uncertain, and it was not just to require of the consignee attendance at the depot; that the mere unloading was not equivalent to delivery, because as yet the consignee has nothing to do with the goods; and that the application, during such a time, of precisely the same principle of liability as that applied during the transit, and for the same reasons, was just to both parties.[10] In a Michigan case[11] it was pointed out that the doctrine requiring notice to the consignee of the arrival of goods owed its origin to certain English decisions as to carriers by water. Originally the carrier was required to make the delivery from his vehicle at the consignee's residence or place of business. In the case of a vessel or a railroad this was impracticable, unless the carrier also assumed the duties of a drayman. In modern times a notice to the consignee of the arrival of the goods was a just and reasonable substitute for such delivery. In the absence of any special agreement imposing upon the carrier what were practically the duties of a warehouseman, or unless the consignee by his own negligence delayed to remove the goods, or implied assent in permitting them to remain, it was just to both parties, and burdensome to neither, to require that the carrier should notify the consignee of the arrival of the goods and should hold them subject to a common carrier's liability until the consignee was given a reasonable opportunity to remove them.

1. Alabama.—Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209; Mobile, etc., R. v. Prewitt, 46 Ala. 63; South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 419. Compare Southern Exp. Co. v. Armistead, 50 Ala. 350; Kennedy v. Mobile, etc., R., 74 Ala. 430; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 145.

2. California.—Jackson v. Sacramento Valley R., 23 Cal. 268.

3. Georgia.—South Western R. v. Felder, 46 Ga. 433. See also Rome, etc., R. v. Sullivan, 14 Ga. 277.

4. Illinois.—Porter v. Railroad, 20 Ill. 407; Richards v. Railroad, 1 Ill. 404 Chicago, etc., R. v. Scott, 47 Ill. 132; Merchants' Despatch Co. v. Hallock, 64 Ill. 284; Rotchild v. Railroad, 69 Ill. 164.

5. Indiana.—Bansenner v. Toledo, etc., R., 25 Ind. 434; Chicago, etc., R. v. McCool, 26 Ind. 140.

6. Iowa.—Mohr v. Chicago, etc., R., 40 Iowa, 579; Francis v. Railroad, 25 Iowa, 60.

7. Missouri.—Gashweiler v. Wabash, etc., R., 83 Mo. 112; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 403; Hotzclaw v. Duff, 27 Mo. 395; Cramer v. Express Co., 56 Mo. 528; Rankin v. Pacific, etc., R., 55 Mo. 168. Compare Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Louisville, etc., R., 71 Mo. 203, s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 593.

8. North Carolina.—Neal v. Railroad, 8 Jones Law (N. Car.), 482.

9. Pennsylvania.—McCarthy v. Railroad, 30 Pa. St. 247; Shenk v. Propeller Co., 60 Pa. St. 109. But see Union Exp. Co. v. Ohleman, 92 Pa. St. 323.

10. New Hampshire.—Moses v. Boston, etc., R., 32 N. H. 523.

11. McMillan v. Michigan, etc., R., 16 Mich. 79.

The New Hampshire rule has been adopted in the following States: Kansas,[1] Kentucky,[2] Lousiana,[3] Michigan,[4] Minnesota,[5] New Jersey,[6] New York,[7]

1. Kansas.—Leavenworth, etc., R. v. Maris, 16 Kans. 333.

2. Kentucky.—Jeffersonville, etc., R. v. Cleaveland, 2 Bush (Ky.), 468.

3. Louisiana.—Maignan v. Railroad, 24 La. Ann. 333.

4. Michigan.—Buckley v. Railroad, 18 Mich. 121; McMillan v. Railroad, 16 Mich. 79.

In McMillan v. Railroad, 16 Mich. 79, Cooley, J., observes: "The rule that the liability of the carrier shall continue until the consignee has had reasonable time after notification to take away his goods, is traceable to certain English decisions having reference to carriers by water; whose mode of doing business resembles that of railroad companies in the inability to proceed with their vehicles to every man's door and there deliver his goods. It is a modification in favor of the carrier by land of the obligation formerly resting upon him, and which required in the absence of special contract an actual delivery to the consignee of the goods carried. The modern modes of transportation render this impracticable unless the carrier shall add to his business that of drayman also, which is generally a distinct employment. In lieu of delivery therefore the carrier is allowed to discharge himself of his extraordinary liability by notifying the consignee of the receipt of the goods, who is then expected, in accordance with what is the almost universal custom, to remove them himself. It is insisted, however, that this rule, so far as it can be considered as established by authority, is applicable only to carriers who have no warehouses of their own but make the wharf or platform their place of delivery, and who therefore never become warehousemen and are held to a continued liability as carriers as the only mode of insuring watch and protection over the goods until the owner can have opportunity to receive them. This distinction would not be entirely without force, but would seem to be acted upon in one State at least. Compare Scholes v. Ackland, 14 Ill. 474, and Crawford v. Clark, 15 Ill. 561, with Richards v. M. F. & N. J. R., 20 Ill. 404, and Porter v. Same, 20 Ill. 407. See also Chicago, etc., R. v. Warren, 16 Ill. 502, where the railroad company was held to the same measure of responsibility as a carrier by water, where the property carried, instead of being placed in their warehouse, was left outside. . . . A critical examination of the cases on this subject would scarcely be useful, as they cannot be reconciled. The court must follow its own reasons. I am unable to discover any ground which to me is satisfactory on which a common carrier of goods can excuse himself from personal delivery to the consignee except by that which usage has made a substitute. To require him to give notice when the goods are received so that the consignee may know when to call for them, imposes upon him no unreasonable burden. If by understanding with the consignee the goods were to remain in store for a definite period or until he should give directions concerning them, the rule would be different, because the relation of warehouseman would then be established by consent. In the absence of such an understanding sound policy, I think, requires the carrier to be held liable as such until he has notified the consignee that the goods are received. If the nature of the bailment then becomes changed through the neglect of the consignee to remove the goods, it will be by his implied assent. Such a rule is just to both parties and burdensome to neither, and it will tend to promptness on the part of carriers in giving the notices which, whether compulsory or not, are generally expected from them."

5. Minnesota.—Pinney v. St. Paul, etc., R., 19 Minn. 251; Derosia v. Railroad, 18 Minn. 133.

6. New Jersey.—Morris, etc., R. v. Ayres. 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 393.

7. New York.—Mills v. Michigan, etc., R., 45 N. Y. 622; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 152; Hedges v. Hudson River, etc., R., 49 N. Y. 223; Rawson v. Holland, 59 N. Y. 611; McKenney v. Jewett, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 209. Compare Nicholas v. New York Central, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 113.

Carrier must give notice of the arrival of goods and allow reasonable time for the consignee to call and take them away. At the expiration of a reasonable time the carrier's liability ceases. But if the consignee is absent, unknown, or cannot be found the carrier may store them. McDonald v. Railroad, 34 N. Y. 497; Fenner v. Railroad, 44 N.Y. 504; Hedges v. Railroad, 49 N. Y. 223; Sprague v. Railroad, 52 N. Y. 637; Pelton v. Railroad, 54 N. Y. 214.

In Sherman v. Hudson River, etc., R.,

Ohio,[1] South Carolina,[2] Tennessee,[3] Vermont,[4] Wisconsin.[5]

In England[6] there is at least one decision in which the majority of the court adopted the rule as laid down in Massachusetts.

What is a reasonable time for the carrier to hold the goods subject to this responsibility where there is no dispute as to the facts is a question of law for the court.[7] Where the consignee is unknown to the carrier, or refuses to receive the goods, or is absent and has no agent to whom notice can be given, want of notice will be excused.[8]

Even where no notice of arrival is required, the carrier is bound to unload the goods with due care and deposit them in a safe and suitable place, and perhaps to put them in store.[9]

8. WAIVER BY CONSIGNEE.—A waiver by the consignee of the 64 N. Y. 254, the court observed: "A carrier has not performed his duty until he has delivered or offered to deliver the goods to the consignee, or done what the law esteems equivalent to delivery. When the consignee is unknown to the carrier, a due effort to find him and notify him of the arrival of the goods is a condition precedent to the right to warehouse them." See also Spears v. Spartanburg, etc.. R., 11 S. Car. 158; Union Exp. Co. v. Ohleman, 92 Pa. St. 323.

1. Ohio.—Hirsch v. Quaker City, 2 Disney (Ohio), 144; Tanner v. Railroad, 53 Pa. St. 411; Chicago, etc., R. v. Scott, 42 Ill. 133.

2. South Carolina.—Spears v. Spartanburg, etc., R., 11 S. Car. 158.

3. Tennesses.—Dean v. Vacaro, 2 Head, 490; Rankin v. Memphis Packet Co., 9 Heisk. 564; Express Company v. Kaufman, 12 Heisk. 570; Butler v. East Tennessee, etc., R., 8 Lea, 32; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 249.

In Tennessee common carriers are required by statute (Act 1870, ch. 17, Rev. Stat. sec. 1993j), to give the consignee notice of the arrival of goods. In Dean v. Vacaro, 2 Head, 490, it was held that such was the duty of the carrier irrespective of the statute. In Butler v. East Tennessee, etc., R., 8 Lea, 32; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 249, the consignee had no fixed residence and the carrier had no knowledge of his temporary stopping-place. It was held that the statute cited did not, by prescribing a particular form and manner of notice, change the character of the carrier's liability, and that he was not liable for the loss of a trunk stored in his warehouse and burned under such circumstances.

4. Vermont.—Oumit v. Henshaw, 35 Vt. 604; Blumenthal v. Brainard, 38 Vt. 402; Winslow v. Vermont, etc., R., 42 Vt. 700.

5. Wisconsin.—Wood v. Crocker, 18 Wis. 345; Lemke v. Chicago, etc., R., 39 Wis. 449.

6. England.—Shepherd v. Bristol, etc., R., 37 L. J. Exch. 113, L. R. 3 Exch. 189. See also Rowth v. North Eastern R. Co, 36 L J. Exch. 83, L. R. Exch. 173; Chapman v. Great Western R. Co., 42 L. T. N S. 252. See, further, comments in Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 104.

7. Roth v. Buffalo, etc., R., 34 N. Y. 548.

Where goods arrived at carrier's station, but consignee was repeatedly informed that they had not arrived, and they were then destroyed by fire, the company was held liable as a common carrier. Burlington, etc., R. v. Arms, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 272.

8. Kremer v. Southern Exp. Co., 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 356; Northup v. Syracuse, etc., R., 3 Abb. Ct. App. 386; s. c., 5 Abb. N. S. 425; Pelton v. Rensselaer, etc., R., 54 N. Y. 214.

Where, after goods reached the station to which they were consigned, the carrier sent a notice to the consignee to come and remove his goods, or they would be unloaded at his risk and expense, and the consignee sent a servant, who removed a small portion of the goods and gave directions to have the trucks placed on a siding near his premises, which was done, it was held that the notice to remove the goods amounted to a delivery, and that, the consignee having had a reasonable time for removal, the duty of the company as common carrier was at an end. Bradshaw v. Irish Northwestern R., 21 W. R. 581; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 108.

9. Hutchinson on Carriers, paragraph 371; Porter v. Railroad, 20 Ill. 407; Chicago, etc., R. v. Beasley, 69 Ill. 630; Alabama, etc., R. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 209.

rights or privileges he enjoys as to delivery may occur, and will release the carrier. A waiver may be brought about by a direct request for delivery at some other than the stipulated or authorized place;[1] by the conduct of the consignee, in spite of the universal custom to deliver at his residence or place of business;[2] by an order of the consignee as to delivery which conflicts with the general instructions given by the consignor;[3] by acceptance by the consignee of goods delivered at an unreasonable time or an improper place.[4] But the acceptance by the consignee of a portion of the goods at a place other than that specified for their delivery does not release the carrier from his obligation as to the remainder.[5]

1. London, etc., R. v. Bartlett, 31 L. J. Exch. 92; 7 H. & N. 400; Cork Distillery Co. v. Great Southern, etc., R., L. R. 7 H. L. 269; Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 181; Sparrow v. Caruthers, 2 Str. 1236; Strong v. Natally, 1 Bos. & P. N. R. 16.

In Gulf, etc., R. v. Clark, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 628, it was held that a consignee is not bound to receive his freight at any other point than that of its destination. He may do so, however, and relieve the carrier from liability. See also Houston, etc., R. v. Harn, 44 Tex. 628; Houston, etc., R. v. Adams, 49 Tex. 748.

2. Strong v. Natally, 1 B. & P., N. R. 16; In re Webb, 8 Taunt. 443; Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 119.

3. An order by the consignee as to delivery which conflicts with the general direction given by the consignor may be followed by the carrier, and the latter's liability be thereby ended. This even though the consignor could not recover the price of the goods from the consignee in consequence of there being no acceptance by the latter within the Statute of Frauds. London, etc., R. v. Bartlett, 31 L. J. Exch. 92; 7 H. & N. 400. See also Dobbin v. Michigan Central R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 85.

4. Sweet v. Barney, 23 N. Y. 335; Richardson v. Goddard, 23 How. (N. Y.) 28; Haslaine v. Express Co., 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 235; Goodwin v. Railroad, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 195; Parsons v. Hardy, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 306; Hill v. Humphries, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 123; Bartlett v. Steamboat Philadelphia, 32 Mo. 256; Cleveland, etc., R. v. Sargent, 19 Ohio St. 438; Lewis v. Railroad, 55 N. H. 84.

5. Cox v. Peterson, 30 Ala. 608; Home Ins. Co. v. Western Transp. Co., 51 N. Y. 93; Bissell v. Campbell, 54 N. Y. 353. See also Jelletts v. St. Paul, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 246.

In Abbe v. Eaton, 51 N. Y. 410, it was held that unless the bill of lading expressly provides otherwise, a carrier is discharged by a delivery of the quantity of goods received by him, though less than that specified in the bill.

Orders for Delivery.—The defendants, who were common carriers, had a written order from the plaintiff "to deliver to F. or Dane County Bank any packages that might come for him." They received at their express office, which was in the same building with the bank, a package of $1000 for the plaintiff, and the bank clerk being in while defendants were distributing their goods, they said to him: "Here is a package for D. J. B." (the plaintiff); "will you take it?" He answered, "I will ask the bank;" and, returning immediately, said, "Let F. have it." The defendants' agent left word at the store of F. that the package was at the office; F.'s clerk said that F. was absent, but that he would come over and see about it. He afterwards went over and said that "F. was away and had the key of the safe, and that the defendants would have to keep it." The package was not offered to him, nor was it entered on the delivery book, according to the custom of the company. Held, that the package was not delivered, and that the company was liable. Baldwin v. American, etc., Co., 23 Ill. 197.

"Delivered at the depot at Whitewater free" was held to mean that the consignees were not to be at any expense for packing and hauling the goods to the depot. Congar v. Galena C. U. R. Co., 17 Wis. 477.

A statement by a teamster that certain flour owned by his employer was for a third person does not authorize delivery of the flour to such person. Sawyer v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 22 Wis. 403.

Where a railway company issued two delivery orders for the same grain, both orders being in the same form, and con-

A waiver also occurs by the owner's resumption of the charge of the goods.[1]

9. DELIVERY AT RESIDENCE.—The ordinary obligation of the carrier is to deliver directly to the consignee at his residence or place of business, even though such place of business is the upper story of a building.[2] But this rule is apparently modified in its application to railroad companies.[3] taining nothing to show that they related to the same consignment, it was held liable to third persons making advances upon both orders. Coventry v. Great East. R. Co., L. R. 11 Q. B. Div. 776.

Where goods are sent "order A. B. & Co., notify C.," if the company delivers to C. without an order from A. B. & Co. it is liable for a misdelivery. Wright v. North Cent. R. Co., 8 Phila. 19.

Where an order was given to a firm of warehousemen authorizing them to receive from a railway company all goods shipped to the drawer, after which the firm was dissolved, and a new firm composed of a part of the members of the old firm was formed, held, that the new firm derived no authority from the order to receive the goods of the drawer. Angell & Co. v. Mississippi & Missouri R. Co., 9 Iowa, 487.

The owners of a lot of flour which had been brought to B. by a railroad company, and which remained at the railroad depot, sold fifty barrels thereof, and gave to the purchasers an order upon the company for the delivery thereof, and the purchasers upon presenting the same received another order, or "flour check," for the same, which, according to the usual course of business, was delivered to a clerk who had charge of the actual delivery of flour from the depot, and who was accustomed to keep such "flour checks," and take receipts upon the back thereof for flour actually delivered. This clerk delivered twenty-two barrels of flour to the purchasers, and twenty-eight barrels to other persons not authorized to receive them. Held, that the company was liable to the purchasers for the value of the twenty-eight barrels without regard to the question of its due care or negligence. Hall v. Boston & Worcester R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.), 439. See also Dobbin v. Michigan Central R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 85; Furman v. Chicago, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 730.

1. Delivery Waiver.—Stone v. Waitt, 31 Me. 409. See also Dobbin v. Michigan Central R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 85; Furman v. Chicago, etc., R., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 730. Compare Atkinson v. Steamboat Castle Garden, 28 Mo. 124; Cleveland, etc., R. v. Sargent, 19 Ohio St. 438.

2. Duff v. Budd, 3 Brod. & B. 137; Birket v. Illan, 2 Barn. & Ad. 356; Storr v. Crowley, 1 McClel. & Y. 129; Hyde v. Trent, etc., Nav. Co., 5 T. R. 389; Gibson v. Culver, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 305; Schroeder v. Railroad, 5 Duer (N.Y.). 55; Fisk v. Newton, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 45; Witteck v. Holland, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 443; s. c., 45 N. Y. 13; Merwin v. Butler, 17 Conn. 138; Eagle v. White, 6 Whart (Pa.) 505; Hemphill v. Chenie, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 62; Graff v. Bloomer, 9 Pa. St. 114; Bartlett v. Steamboat Philadelphia, 32 Mo. 256.

Delivery to the consignee whose place of business is in the upper story of a building cannot be made by leaving the goods, with notice to the consignee, on the ground floor. Haslam v. Adams Exp. Co., 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 235; Mierson v. Hope, 2 Sweeney (N. Y.). 561.

3. When it is the usual custom of a carrier to deliver goods, or particular classes of goods, at the consignee's residence or place of business, the liability as a common carrier continues until such delivery takes place. Where he is not bound to so deliver them, it is his duty, within a reasonable time, to give notice of their arrival to the consignee, and his liability as a common carrier continues during such a period as the consignee might, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, remove them. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 105; Golden v. Manning, 2 W. Bl. 916; Duff v. Budd, 3 B. & B. 177; Bourne v. Gatliffe, 11 Cl. & F. 45; 4 Bing. N. C. 314; Storr v. Crowley, McCle. & Y. 129; Mitchell v. Lancashire, etc., R., 44 L. J. Q. B. 107; L. R. 10 Q. B. 256. See also Birket v. Illan, 2 Barn. & Ad. 356; Hyde v. Trent Nav. Co., 5 T. R. 389. See cases cited supra, this title and subdivision, NOTICE TO CONSIGNEE.

A tender of the goods to be delivered upon payment of freight is sufficient to discharge the carrier. Storr v. Crowley, McCle. & Y. 129.

A carrier may or may not deliver at the edge of their rails. Evershed v. London, etc., R., 47 L. J. Q. B. 284.

Goods must be dealt with in delivery ac-

10. CHANGE IN DESTINATION OF FREIGHT BY THE CONSIGNOR OR CONSIGNEE.—The right to demand a re-delivery by the carrier, or to change the original destination of freight, depends upon the ownership of the goods, and the notice to the carrier of such ownership. The rule is said to be that where the consignor is known to the carrier to be the owner, the carrrier must be understood to contract with him only for his interest, upon such terms as he dictates in regard to the delivery, and that the consignee is to be regarded simply as an agent selected by the consignor to receive the goods at a place indicated. Where the carrier has no notice of the ownership of the property other than that implied from the relation of the parties to each other as consignor and consignee, the latter is the implied owner, and the carrier is justified in taking his directions as to the manner of delivery.[1] cording to their nature and the usual and known course of business of the carrier. Taff Vale R. v. Giles, 23 L. J. Q. B. 43; 2 E. & B. 823; Wise v. Great Western, etc., R., 25 L. J. Exch. 258; 1 H. & N. 63.

1. Change in Destination of Freight by Consignee.—As the consignee is the presumptive owner of goods shipped, he may change their destination, unless the carrier is informed that the title to them has not passed from the consignor. London, etc., R. v. Bartlett, 7 H. & N. 400; Hutch. Carr. § 394.

But where the carrier has notice that the title has not passed to the consignee, the carrier has no right to deliver to him at any other destination than that fixed by the consignor. This was held in Southern Express Co. v. Dickson, 94 U. S. 549, where the court say: "In the case before us the proof was given, and the jury found that the goods did not belong to the consignees, but were the property of the shipper, and that this was known to the carrier. . . . We think the rule is, that where the consignor is known to the carrier to be the owner, the carrier must be understood to contract with him only, for his interest, upon such terms as he dictates in regard to the delivery, and that the consignees are to be regarded simply as agents selected by him to receive the goods at the place indicated; where he is an agent merely, the rule is different. . . . The numerous cases cited by the plaintiff in error, to the effect that any delivery to the consignee which is good as between him and the carrier is good against the consignor, are cases where the carrier has no notice of the ownership of the property other than that implied from the relation of the parties to each other as consignor and consignee. This gives the consignee the implied ownership of the property, and hence justifies the carrier in taking his direction as to the manner of delivery." The court then proceed to discuss some of the cases where it was held that the consignee might change the destination of goods. Among other cases discussed was Sweet v. Barney, 23 N. Y. 335, where a package of money was sent by express directed to "The People's Bank, 173 Canal Street, New York City." The package was delivered to an agent of the People's Bank at the express office, and was stolen from him. It was held that the delivery exonerated the express company from responsibility, since it had no notice that the money was not the property of the bank, the consignee.

Another case was London & Northwestern R. Co. v. Bartlett, 7 H. & N. 400, where wheat was held at the station, by order of the consignee, instead of being delivered at consignee's mill according to the contract contained in the bill of lading. It was held that the carrier was exonerated for injury to wheat caused by delay in station in the absence of knowledge by it that the wheat belonged to the consignor. The court observes: "It is, I think, quite clear that the consignee of goods may receive the goods at any stage of the journey, and I think that if the consignor directs the goods to be delivered at a particular place, it is no contract to deliver the goods at that place and not elsewhere. The contract is to deliver the goods there, unless the consignee shall require them to be delivered at some other place." Other cases were those of Mitchel v. Ede et al., 11 A. & E., 888; Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107, which are decided on similar principles.

In Southern Express Co. v. Dickson, 94 U. S. 549, it was held that where the

11. TIME OF DELIVERY.—The essential requirements as to delivery are that it shall be made at a proper time, in a proper manner, and at a proper place.[1] An offer to deliver after business hours, and after the consignee has dismissed his servants, is not made at a proper time.[2]

12. DELIVERY OF GOODS ON HOLIDAYS, FAST-DAYS, ETC.—The carrier is excused from giving the consignee notice of arrival where the latter's place of business is closed, because the day of arrival is carrier, who is informed that the consignee is merely the agent of the real owner of the goods, permits such agent to take back the goods, or deliver, them to another upon his order at the place of shipment, or at any other place than the one to which they were consigned, the carrier is liable,

Change in Destination of Freight by Consignor.—"So long as the goods remain the property of the bailor he may countermand any directions he may have given as to their consignment, and may at any time during the transit require of the carrier their re-delivery to himself; and if such re-delivery can be made without too much inconvenience or expense to the carrier, he will be bound to make it. 'A carrier is employed as bailee of a person's goods for the purpose of obeying his directions respecting them, and the owner is entitled to receive them back at any period of the journey when they can be got at. To say that a carrier is bound to deliver goods according to the owner's first directions, is a proposition wholly unsupported, either by law or common sense. I can well understand the case of goods being placed in such a position that they cannot easily be got at, though it is usually otherwise.' (Per Martin B. in Scothorn v. Railway Co., 8 Exch. 341. See also Michigan, etc., R. Co. v. Day, 20 Ill. 375.) But if the goods are demanded by the owner during the transit, when the carrier is willing and able to fulfil the contract on his part, the latter will be entitled to his full freight for the whole distance to the destination to which they were originally directed, and any expense he may be put to in unloading. (Violett v. Stettinius, 5 Cranch C. C. 559; Shipton v. Thornton, 9 Ad. & El. 314; Thompson v. Small, 1 C. B. 328.) If this be tendered and he refuse to restore the goods, it will amount to a conversion." Hutchinson on Carriers, § 337.

Unless the carrier has notice that the goods belong to the consignor, he will not be warranted in delivering to his order. Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 71 Mo. 203. See generally Wabash, etc., R. v. Saggerman, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 680.

1. In Eagle v. White, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 505, the carrier's cars reached the place of delivery about sundown on Saturday evening, and were placed on a side track. The consignee declined receiving the goods, on the ground that it was too late. When the carrier's agents opened the cars on Monday morning, it was found that some of the goods had been stolen, and the carrier was held liable to the consignee for the value of the goods. The court considered that the offer of delivery was wanting in any one of the essential requirements of a proper time, a proper manner, and a proper place, and the responsibility as carrier still continued.

2. Hill v. Humphreys, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 123.

The following cases decide that a delivery of specie to a bank after banking hours, and after the bank has been closed, is not a good delivery. Merwin v. Butler, 17 Conn. 138; Young v. Smith, 3 Dana (Ky.), 92; Marshall v. American Exp. Co., 7 Wis. 1; Pate v. Henry, 5 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 101.

In Marshall v. American Exp. Co., 7 Wis. 1, the carrier delivered a package of money to the teller of a bank at half-past five in the afternoon. He refused it, on the ground that the cashier had gone home, and the vault was locked up. The carrier put it in his own safe, and in the night the money was stolen. Banking hours closed at 4 P.M. Held that the carrier was not liable. It appeared in evidence that the bank had been accustomed to receive money from the carrier after banking hours.

The extraordinary liability of a railroad company as carrier of goods extends until the consignee has a reasonable time to inspect the goods and remove them in the usual hours of business, and in the ordinary course of business. Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. Morris, 16 Kan. 333; Pinney v. First Div. St. Paul & Pacific R. Co., 19 Minn. 251; The Mary Washington, 1 Abb. C. C. 1; Solomon v. Philadelphia Steamboat, etc., Co.,

the Fourth of July.[1] Where there is no evidence that the unloading of goods on Sunday is unlawful,[2] and since there is no general usage in commercial law forbidding the unloading of goods on such a day as a church festival, fast-day, or holiday, the carrier is not liable for unloading at such times.[3] A consignee is not bound to risk injury to the goods by their receipt on a stormy day.[4]

13. C. O. D. GOODS.—Where the carrier accepts a consignment of goods with the undertaking to collect on delivery, he is the agent of the consignor for such a purpose, and is bound to an exact compliance with his undertaking.[5]

14. GOODS TO BE HELD TILL CALLED FOR.—A carrier's acceptance of goods with an undertaking that they are to be left till called for is bound to hold them a reasonable time for the consignee to demand and receive delivery, and thereupon his liability as common carrier ceases.[6]

Where he agrees with the owner of goods after their arrival to keep them a certain time for him, he may after the expiration of that time deliver them to a warehouseman, and if he does so the latter is not his agent, and he is not liable for the negligence of the warehouseman.[7]

15. EXCUSES FOR NON-DELIVERY.—The following have been held valid excuses for non-delivery by the carrier: Where occa-

2 Daly (N. Y.), 104; Lamb v. Camden, etc., R. Co., Id. 454; Shenk v. Philadelphia Steam Propeller Co., 60 Pa. St. 109; Winslow v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 42 Vt. 700; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Beasley, 69 Ill. 630. See also McKinney v. Jewett, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 209.

1. Ely v. New Haven Steamboat Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 207.

2. Shelton v. Merchants' Desp. Transp. Co., 59 N. Y. 258.

3. Richardson v. Goddard, 23 How. (U. S.) 27; Sleade v. Pyne, 14 La. Ann. 453. In Goddard v. Bark Tangier, 23 How. (U. S.) 28, goods were placed upon the wharf, and notice given to the consignee on a fast day, and while on the wharf were destroyed by fire. It was held that as the evidence did not show that there was a general usage at that port for vessels to unload on a fast day, and there was no law of the State making the transaction of business on that day illegal, the master had a right to deliver his cargo.

4. The Grafton, 1 Blatchf. C. C. 173.

5. Meyer v. Lemcke, 31 Ind. 208; American Exp. Co. v. Leseur, 39 Ill. 312; Murray v. Warner, 55 N. H. 546; Jelletts v. St. Paul, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 246. See, generally, Old Colony, etc., R. v. Wilder, 137 Mass. 546; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 41.

This duty of the carrier is not an obligation arising from the nature of his duty, but is founded upon a special contract. American Exp. Co. v. Leseur, 39 Ill. 312; Union, etc., R. v. Reigel, 73 Pa. St. 72.

In the absence of such a contract none will be implied. Chicago, etc., R. v. Merrill, 48 Ill. 425.

After such tender of goods to the consignee the carrier becomes a mere warehouseman. Storr v. Crowley, McClell. & Y. 129; Marshall v. American Exp. Co., 7 Wis. 1.

Where the carrier takes C. O. D. goods under a contract to collect he must allow the consignee a reasonable time in which to make payment, and would be liable for an immediate return of the goods to the consignor without giving reasonable time for payment. Gr. Western R. v. Crouch, 3 H. & N. 183.

A peremptory refusal of the goods by the consignee imposes a duty upon the carrier to notify the consignor and await his instructions, and would justify his immediate return of the goods. Hutchinson on Carriers. § 392.

Inspection by Consignee.—The consignee has the right to inspect the goods, and the carrier is bound to furnish him the opportunity. Lyons v. Hill, 46 N. H. 49; Herrick v. Gallagher, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 566.

6. Chapman v. Great Western, etc., R., 12 L. T. N. S. 252.

7. Bickford v. Metropolitan Steamship Co., 109 Mass. 181.

sioned by the illegal acts of the consignor.[1] By an act of the consignor discharging the carrier from further responsibility.[2] Where the carrier surrenders possession of the goods to the person whom he ascertains in the course of the transit, or before final delivery, to be their real owner.[3] Where the consignor exercises his right of stoppage in transitu.[4] Where goods are attached in the carrier's hands by due process of law.[5] Where a carrier by water is obliged to throw goods overboard to lighten the vessel and preserve life.[6]

16. DELIVERY ON WHARF.—An accepted authority has said that the doctrine appears to be established in this country that in the absence of a special contract or a well-established usage, the mere landing of goods from the vessel on the wharf is not such a delivery to the consignee as will discharge the carrier.[7]

1. Hastings v. Pepper, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 41; Gosling v. Higgins, 1 Camp. 451; Southern Exp. Co. v. Kauffman, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 161; Bush v. St. Louis, etc., R., 3 Mo. App. 62.

2. Todd v. Figley, 7 Watts (Pa.), 542; Sanderson v. Lambert, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 129; Bowman v. Teall, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 306; St. Louis, etc., R. v. Montgomery, 39 Ill. 335; Boyce v. Anderson, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 150.

3. Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 582; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 404; King v. Richards, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 418; Floyd v. Bovard, 6 W. &. S. (Pa.) 75; Blivin v. Hudson River, etc., R., 36 N. Y. 403; Bates v. Stanton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 79; Western Transp. Co. v. Barber, 56 N. Y. 544; Barker v. Dement, 9 Gill (Md.), 7; Rosenfield v. Express Co., 1 Woods C. C. 131; The Idaho, 93 U. S. 575, 11 Blatchf. C. C. 218; Hardman v. Willark, 9 Bing. 382; Biddle v. Bond, 6 Best & S. 225; Cheesman v. Ex All, 6 Exch. 341; Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 340.

It is well settled, however, that the carrier, like other bailees, cannot set up a jus tertii, nor in any way dispute the bailor's title. Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 450, 582; Great Western R. v. Crouch, 3 H. & N. 183; Vurroughes v. Vayney, 5 H. & N. 296; Gesling v. Birnie, 7 Bing. 339; Kiernan v. Sanders, 6 Ad. & El. 515; Launch v. Towle, 3 Esp. 114; Western Transp. Co. v. Barber, 56 N. Y. 544; The Idaho, 93 U. S. 575, 11 Blatchf. C.C. 218.

Where the goods are claimed from the carrier by another person than the consignor or consignee, such person asserting ownership, the carrier is justified in holding the goods a sufficient time to satisfy a reasonable doubt. Green v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 215; Solomons v. Dawes, 1 Esp. 83; Dunlap v. Hunting, 2 Denio (N.Y.), 643; Holbrook v. Wight, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 169; Rogers v. Weir, 34 N. Y. 463.

4. Oppenheim v. Russel, 3 Bos. & Pul. 42; Morley v. Hay, 3 Man. & Ryl. 396; Stiles v. Holland, 31 N. Y. 309. See supra, this title, STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.

5. Barnard v. Kobbe, 54 N. Y. 516; Bates v. Stanton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 79; Ohio, etc., R. v. Yohe, 51 Ind. 181; Savannah, etc., Co. v. Wilcox, 48 Ga. 432; Wallace v. Matthews, 39 Ga. 617; Hayden v. Davis, 9 Cal. 573; Sheridan v. New Quay Co., 4 C. B. N. S. 618; Wilson v. Anderton, 1 B. & Ald. 450; Walker v. Detroit, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 251. See supra, this title, SEIZURE OF GOODS. Compare Great Western, etc., R. v. McComas, 33 Ill. 185.

In Keiff v. Old Colony, etc., R., 117 Mass. 591, it was held that if goods exempt from attachment are taken from the carrier by an officer who attaches them as the property of the owner, it is no defence to an action against the carrier by the owner for failure to deliver the goods that they were taken from him against his will, and without fraud or collusion on his part, and that he was ignorant of the nature of the goods and supposed the attachment to be valid. Angell on Carriers, paragraph 335, note.

In Edwards v. White Line Transit Co., 104 Mass. 159, it was held to be no defence against a common carrier for breach of his contract to deliver goods that they were taken from him by an officer under an attachment against a person who was not their owner. See also The Mary Ann Guest v. Olcott 498, 1 Blatchf. C. C. 358.

6. Smith v. Wright, 1 Caines, 43; Monzes Case, 12 Co. 63.

7. Angell on Carriers, paragraph 300; Ostrander v. Brown, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 39; Hemphill v. Chenie, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 62; Galloway v. Hughes, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 553; Blin v. Mayo, 10 Vt. 56; Row-

17. FACILITIES FOR DELIVERY AT TERMINUS—DISCRIMINATION.—Questions as to discrimination by carriers in facilities for delivery have chiefly arisen in England, and some examples of the decisions will be found cited in the notes.[1] land v. Miln, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 150; Stead v. Payne, 14 La. Ann. 453. See also Morgan v. Dibble, 29 Tex. 107.

1. Terminal Facilities. Discrimination. —Where a common carrier that acted as superintendent of goods traffic for a railway company at a particular station was allowed by the railroad company to hold himself out as its agent for the receipt of goods to be carried by its line, and goods thus received by him were received without conditions which the company required of other shippers at that station, held, that these facts showed undue discrimination in favor of company's agent. Baxendale v. Bristol, etc., R. Co., 11 C. B. N. S. 787. So where the railway company received goods from a particular individual later than it did from the general public. Garton v. Bristol, etc., R. Co., 1 B. & S. 112. So where the railway company admitted its own vans with goods to be forwarded at a later hour than it admitted the vans of others. In re Palmer, London, Brighton & South Coast R. Co., L. R. 6 C. P. 194; Ragan v. Aiken, 9 Lea (Tenn.). 609; Johnson v. Pensacola, etc., R. Co., 16 Fla. 623. It was doubted if the railway company had any right to make such an arrangement even if it was for the convenience of the public, by giving an opportunity for sending parcels later than would otherwise be possible. In re Palmer, London, Brighton & South Coast R. Co., L. R. 1 C. P. 588.

Again, where a railway company employed an agent to receive goods at a particular station and to deliver them to consignees, and refused to deliver goods at that station to any other carriers without a written order specifying the particular goods, this was held to be an undue discrimination. Parkinson v. Great Western R. Co., L. R. 6 C. P. 554; Fishbourne v. Great Southern, etc., R. Co., 19 Sol. Jour. 859.

It is important to bear in mind that in determining whether an undue discrimination exists, the convenience of the railroad company is to be considered. Thus where by reason of increase of business the railway company was obliged to separate its mineral from its goods traffic at its station at O., and to handle its mineral traffic at another station, but still continued to deliver coal at O. to a large gas works near the station which had sidetracks, so that coal consigned to it could be removed at once, held, that this did not constitute an undue preference. Lees v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 18 Sol. Jour. 629.

In McCoy v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 3, it was held that a railroad company cannot bind itself to deliver to a particular stock-yard all live-stock coming over its line to a certain point, but it is bound to transport over its road and deliver to all stock-yards at such point, reached by its tracks or connections, all live-stock consigned, or which the shippers desire to consign, to them upon the same terms and in the same manner as under like conditions it transports and delivers to their competitors. McCoy v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 3.

The case of Audenried v. Phil. & Reading R. Co., 68 Pa. St. 370, involves an interesting question of the obligation of a railroad in regard to terminal facilities. In that case it was alleged that the plaintiff was a shipper of coal over defendant's road, that it had for many years allotted to shippers of coal certain spaces or parts of a wharf owned by the road at its terminus on the Delaware River; that such wharfage facility was necessary to the plaintiff for the reason that the coal was to be shipped in boats and had to lie on the wharf until it could be loaded on the boats; that defendant regularly furnished such wharfage facilities to all shippers of coal over its road, and its wharf was large enough to furnish such facilities to all shippers; that plaintiff had formerly enjoyed such facilities, but that the company had cut them off in order to coerce him as to another matter in dispute between them. Plaintiff sought to enjoin defendant from refusing him such facilities. Sharswood, J., on p. 379, says: "It is very doubtful whether the defendants, under their charter, are bound to provide any wharf accommodations for the coal dealers at Port Richmond (the terminal point on the Delaware River) and equally doubtful whether, having done so to a limited extent, not sufficient to supply the entire business, they are subject to any trust to use or dispose of that property in any particular way. . . . Transportation by a common carrier is necessarily open to the public upon equal and reasonable terms. An exclusive right

18. BURDEN OF PROOF.—The burden is ordinarily upon the carrier to show a valid excuse for the non-delivery of goods.[1]

7. Actions against Carriers.—1. PARTIES TO THE SUIT.—It is not always easy to determine the proper parties to sue in actions against carriers for damage to or loss of goods. The general rules are thus stated: That the proper person to sue the carrier is the person who employs him; that in the absence of any express contract, it is presumed that the carrier is employed by the person at whose risk the goods are carried; that is, the person whose goods they are, and who would suffer if they were lost.[2] Many authorities maintain that the person making the contract of transportation with the carrier is the person entitled to bring an action in case of a failure to deliver the goods or any injury thereto, and this irrespective of the question whether or not he has any title thereto.[3]

2. SUIT BY CONSIGNEE.—Where the consignor has parted with his interest in the goods, and the actual owner is the consignee, the latter alone is entitled to bring suit.[4] When, however, the consignor retains any contingent interest whatever in the goods other than the mere right of stoppage in transitu, he is entitled, in case of loss or non-delivery, to recover damages from the carrier.[5] Where both the consignor and the consignee have an interest in the goods, one having a general and the other a special property, either may granted to any one is inconsistent with the rights of all others. This was not transportation but wharfage, the nature of which requires exclusive possession temporarily. The railroad company as trustees of the public have a necessary discretion in the management of such interests, and the motives of their proceeding cannot be reviewed by the court." Audenried v. Philadelphia, etc., R., 68 Pa. St. 370. See, generally, Rhodes v. Northern Pacific R., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 31.

1. Chapman v. New Orleans, etc., R., 21 La. Ann. 224; Wallace v. Sanders, 50 Ga. 134; Green, etc., Nav. Co. v. Marshall, 48 Ind. 506. See infra, this title, ACTIONS AGAINST CARRIERS.

2. Dicey, Parties to Actions, 87.

3. Party Contracting with Carrier may Bring Suit for Loss of Goods.—It is in many cases held that the person making the contract of transportation with the carrier is the party entitled to bring an action in case of a failure to deliver the goods, or an injury thereto, and this irrespective of the question whether or not he has any title thereto. Blanchard v. Page, 8 Gray, 281; Finn v. Railroad Co., 112 Mass. 524; Southern Express Co. v. Craft, 49 Miss. 480; Hooper v. Railway, 27 Wis. 81; Dunlop v. Lambert, 6 Cl. & Fin. 600; Davis v. James, 5 Burr. 2680; Moore v. Wilson, 1 T. R. 659; Mead v. Southeastern R. 18 W. R. 735. See, generally, Snider v. Adams Exp. Co., 77 Mo. 523; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 261.

4. Consignee Must Bring Suit.—But where the shipper has parted with his interest in the goods, and the actual owner is the consignee, the latter alone is entitled to bring suit. Blum et al. v. The Caddo, 1 Woods, 64; Griffith v. Ingleden, 6 S. & R. 429; Potter v. Lansing, 1 Johns. 215; Green v. Clark, 12 N. Y. 343; Krulder v. Ellison, 47 N. Y. 36; Canfield v. Northern R. Co., 18 Barb. 586; Gwyn v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 452; Everett v. Saltus, 15 Wend. 474; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Wood, 72 Ala. 451; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 634; Denver, etc., R. v. Frame, 6 Colorado, 382; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 637; Dunlop v. Lambert, 6 Cl. & Fin. 600; Dutton v. Solomson, 3 Bos. & P. 582; Dawes v. Peck, 8 T. R. 330; Cork Distillery Co. v. Great Western, Southern, etc., R., L. R. 7 H. L. 269.

The mere fact of payment of freight by the consignor will not prevent the property and risk from passing to the consignee. King v. Meredith, 2 Camp. 639.

5. Consignor Retaining Interest Must Bring Suit.—When, however, the consignor retains any contingent interest whatever in the goods, other than the mere right of stoppage in transitu, he is entitled in case of loss or non-delivery to recover damages from the carrier. Sweet v. Barney, 33 N. Y. 335; Conger v. Rail-sue; but a recovery by one constitutes a bar to an action by the other.[1]

3. ACTIONS IN TORT AND ON CONTRACT.—It was at first the almost universal practice to make the action one of tort for a breach of the carrier's public duty.[2] This is explained as an application to carriers of the strict principles of the common law which regarded them as the agents or servants of the public, and bound them to a measure of duty to the public distinct from that which would arise out of contract. In modern times the distinction is not regarded as of importance, particularly in view of the changes wrought in the forms of action and manner of pleading.[3] road Co., 17 Wis. 447; W. & A. R. Co. v. Kelly, 1 Head, 158; Sanford v. Railroad Co., 11 Cush. 155; Price v. Powell, 3 N. Y. 322; O'Neill v. Railroad Co., 60 N. Y. 138; Wilson v. Wilson, 26 Pa. St. 393; Snider v. Adams Exp. Co., 77 Mo. 523; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 261; Denver, etc., R. v. Frame, 6 Colorado, 382; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 637; Sargent v. Morris. 3 B. & Ald. 277; Swain v. Shepherd, 1 M. & Rob. 223; Goodwin v. Douglas, 1 Cheves, 174; Coates v. Chaplin, 3 Q. B. 483; 11 L. J. Q. B. 315; Coombs v. Bristol, etc., R., 27 L. J. Exch. 401; 3 H. & N. 510; Hoare v. Great Western R., 37 L. T. (N. S.) 186; 25 W. R. 631. Heugh v. London, etc., R., 39 L. J. Exch. 48; L. R. 5 Exch. 51.

1. Recovery Either by Consignor or Consignee Bars Recovery by the Other.—Where both the consignor and the consignee have an interest in the goods, one having a general and the other a special property, either may sue, but a recovery by one constitutes a bar to an action by the other. Green v. Clark, 12 N. Y. 343; Steamboat Farmer v. McCraw, 26 Ala. 189; Denver, etc., R. v. Frame, 6 Colorado, 382; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 637. See also Metcalfe v. London, etc., R., 26 L. J. C. P. 333; 4 C. B. N. S. 317.

2. Ansell v. Waterhouse, 6 M. & S. 385.

3. The party injured by the breach of the carrier's duty may therefore elect at the present day either to sue in tort on the custom of the realm, or to waive the tort and bring assumpsit. Tattan v. Great Western R. Co., 2 Ell. & Ell. 344; Salstonstall v. Stockton, Taney's Decisions, 11.

The mere fact of there being a contract of carriage does not preclude the bringing of an action of tort for breach of the public duty of the carrier. "If the relation in which the carrier and passenger stand to one another—to wit, that of bailor and bailee—can be said to be created by contract, yet, as soon as that relation subsists, the law interposes and prescribes the rights and duties and liabilities of both parties. It regulates the degree of skill and care with which the passenger is to be carried, and any negligence on the part of the carrier is an unlawful act, is a breach of legal duty." Salstonstall v. Stockton, Taney's Dec. 11.

Where the action sounds in tort, such facts must be alleged as show that the defendant is bound to a public duty and has been guilty of a breach thereof. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Wilson, 31 Ohio St. 555. But a declaration which avers such facts distinctly, and bases its ground of action on a breach of the custom of the realm, is good. Pozzi v. Shipton, 8 Ad. & Ell. 963.

Where a declaration in tort averred that the carrier had received goods to be safely conveyed, but was careless and negligent, in consequence of which the goods were injured, it was held that such a declaration was good, and set forth a valid cause of action. Brotherton et al. v. Wood, 6 J. B. Moo. 141.

An action sounding in tort lies on the part of a master against a carrier for injuries done to the servant of the plaintiff, while being transported as a passenger by the defendant. Havens v. Hartford & New Haven R. Co., 28 Conn. 69; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dabby, 19 Ill. 353; Ames v. Union R. Co., 117 Mass. 541.

So an action in tort will lie by a passenger for a personal injury received through the negligence of the carrier while riding in a stage coach. Salstonstall v. Stockton, Taney's Dec. 11; Frink et al. v. Potter, 17 Ill. 406.

A mail agent transported by a railroad company in pursuance of a contract with the government may maintain an action against the company in tort for breach of its public duty. Hammond v. North Eastern R. Co., 6 S. Car. 130.

In those States where all forms of

4. EVIDENCE.—Whatever the form of action, the party bringing suit must show a delivery of the goods to the carrier, the latter's express or implied contract to carry and deliver, and his failure to perform it.[1]

The defence of the carrier, as is evident from principles and authorities already set forth, must be based upon evidence that the loss or injury occurred through causes which impose no liability upon him, because they are within the exceptions allowed to him generally by law, or by the terms of his special contract.

pleading are abolished, the court will look to the nature of the cause of action in order to determine whether the suit sounds in tort or contract. Heim v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hurst, 36 Miss. 660.

An action by a husband against a carrier for injuries done to the plaintiff's wife while travelling as a passenger on the line of defendant, will be considered as sounding in tort. Cregin v. Brooklyn & Crosstown R. Co., 75 N. Y. 192.

An action against the owner of a steamboat for failing to stop as specified in its time-table to take the plaintiff aboard, will be deemed to sound in tort. Heim v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17.

So an action for forcibly ejecting plaintiff from a railroad train will be deemed to sound in tort. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hurst, 36 Miss. 660.

The true test to apply in all cases to determine the nature of the action is thus laid down in the case of Frink v. Potter, 17 Ill. 406.

"There is a class of cases arising out of contract where, by reason of the contract, the law raises a duty, for the breach of which duty an action on the case may be maintained; and in such cases the contract, being the basis and gravamen of the suit, must be alleged and proved. . . . But when the gist of the action is a breach of duty and not of contract, and the contract is not alleged as the cause of action, and when from the facts alleged the law raises the duty by reason of the calling of the defendant —as in case of innkeepers and common carriers—and the breach of duty is solely counted upon, the rules applying to actions ex delicto determine the rights of the parties." The question under consideration as to the form of action is frequently a matter of very great practical importance, as will be seen from a consideration of the following circumstances: Where the action is in tort a non-joinder of all the defendants cannot be taken advantage of. A recovery may be had against such as are sued. Ansell v. Waterhouse, 6 M. & S. 385; s. c., 2 Chitt. 1; McCall v. Forsyth, 4 W. & S. 179. Moreover, if the action be tort, proof need not be adduced that the defendants are all liable. A recovery may be had against such as the evidence discloses to be liable. Frink et al. v. Potter, 17 Ill. 406.

The form of action also makes a great difference as to the damages recoverable. Where the action is in contract, compensatory damages only can be recovered; where it sounds in tort, punitive or vindictive damages will be allowed. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hurst, 36 Miss. 660; Walsh v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 42 Wis. 23; Hamlin v. Great Northern R. Co., 1 H. & N. 408.

Further, formal variances between the allegata and the probata are much less noted in actions sounding in tort than in those sounding in contract. Hence it was formerly deemed safest to declare always in tort on the special custom. In modern practice, however, this matter is of little importance, as mere formal variances are generally disregarded, or at least readily cured by amendment. Weed v. Saratoga & Schenectady R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y) 534.

It seems that no recovery can be had from a carrier in an action sounding in tort for failure to perform a contract of carriage on Sunday. The general public duty of carriers does not extend to that day. Walsh v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 42 Wis. 23.

Where a party sues in contract, he can have none of the advantages of the action of tort above enumerated. Bayliss v. Lintott, L. R. 8 C. P. 345.

As to what will be deemed an action sounding in contract and not in tort, see School District v. Boston, Hartford & Erie R. Co., 102 Mass. 552. See, generally, St. Louis, etc., R. v. Heath, 42 Ark. 477; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 557.

1. Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.), § 461

5. BURDEN OF PROOF.—Where there is a clause in the contract limiting liability on the part of the carrier, and it appears that the loss has been occasioned by fire, or some other cause, then the question and burden is upon the plaintiff to prove negligence on the part of the carrier in causing the loss.[1] Where a carrier fails to deliver to the consignee goods intrusted to his charge, a presumption of negligence arises which it is for him to rebut.[2]

The burden of proof however is upon the carrier in the first instance to show that the cause of the loss was within the terms of the limitation.[3]

Where the loss is unexplained, or the apparent cause of it is not of such a character as fails to give rise to any prima facie presumption of negligence, the burden of proof is on the carrier to disprove negligence.[4]

When the facts establish that the cause of the loss is such as might or might not have been occasioned by the carrier's negligence, the question is for the jury.[5]

6. MEASURE OF DAMAGES.—When a common carrier fails to transport goods to the point of destination, the damages usually recovered are the value of the goods at that point with interest et seq.; Hutchinson on Carriers, § 759 et seq. See, generally, Hot Springs, etc., R. v. Hudgins, 42 Ark. 485; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 643.

1. Burden of Proof where Carrier's Liability is Limited by Contract.—Where there is a clause limiting the liability on the part of the carrier, and it appears that the loss has been occasioned by fire, or some other cause within the exception, the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove negligence on the part of the carrier in causing the loss. Transportation Co. v. Downer, 11 Wall. 133; Boskowitz v. Adams Ex. Co., 9 Cent. L. J. 389; Cochran v. Dinsmore, 49 N. Y. 249; French v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 4 Kerzes (N. Y.), 108; Whitworth v. Erie R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 349; Little Rock, etc., R. v. Talbot, 39 Ark. 523; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 598; Little Rock, etc., R. v. Corcoran, 40 Ark. 375; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 602. See also South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 71 Ala. 215; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 269.

2. American Express Co. v. Sands, 55 Pa. St. 140; Murphy v. Staton, 3 Munf. 239; Riley v. Horn, 5 Bing. 217; Clark v. Spence, 10 Watts, 335; Colt v. McMechen, 6 Johns. 160. See Farnham v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 53. Alabama, etc., R. v. Little, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 37; Rintoul v. New York Central, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144. Compare South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 71 Ala. 215; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 267; Little Rock, etc., R. v. Talbot, 39 Ark. 523; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 598.

3. Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Little, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 37.

4. Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Little, 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 37; Rintoul v. New York C. & H. R. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 144.

5. Canfield et al., v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 152.

In Canfield v. Baltimore, etc., R., 93 N. Y. 532; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 152, the court observe: "Had it not been for the rulings of the court below in this case, we should have considered the law to have been settled, beyond controversy, that proof of the non-delivery of property by a bailee upon demand, unexplained, makes out a prima facie case of negligence against such bailee in the care and custody of the thing bailed, and, in the absence of any evidence on his part, excusing such non-delivery, presents a question of fact as to the negligence of the bailee for the consideration of the jury. Burnell v. N. Y. C. R. Co., 45 N. Y. 185; 6 Am. Rep. 61; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 56 N. Y. 168; Steers v. Liverpool, N. Y. & P. Steamship Co., 57 N. Y. 6; 15 Am. Rep. 453; Fairfax v. N. Y. C. & Hudson R. R. Co., 67 N. Y. 11; Claflin v. Meyer, 75 N. Y. 260; 31 Am. Rep. 467; Schmidt v. Blood, 9 Wend. 268; Moore v. Evans, 14 Barb. 524. The principle upon which this rule is founded embraces as well the case of a partial a-from the time they should have been delivered less the amount of freight.[1]

(a) Measure of Damages in Case of Delay.—Where the goods are unreasonably delayed the measure of damages is the difference between the market value of the goods at the time they should have arrived and their actual value when they did arrive, with interest from the former date less the freight.[2]

(b) Measure of Damages in Case of Refusal to Transport.—The measure of damages for breach of the contract to transport goods where they have never been taken into the carrier's possession is the difference between the value of the goods at the time they were to have been delivered at the point of destination and the value of goods of the same quality at the same time in the same place of shipment, together with interest on said amount from the time the goods should have arrived less the cost of transportation.[3] of a total failure to deliver the subject of a bailment.

1. Damages for Failure to Deliver Goods.—Whitney v. Railroad Co., 27 Wis. 327; Chapman v. Railroad Co., 26 Wis. 295; Northern Transportation Co. v. McClary, 66 Ill. 233; Sturgess v. Bissell, 46 N. Y. 462; Gray v. Packet Co., 64 Mo. 47; Perkins v. Railroad Co., 47 Me. 573; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dickman, 74 Ill. 249; Hackett v. Railroad Co., 35 N. H. 390; O'Hanlon v. Railroad Co., 6 Best & S. 484; Erie R. Co. v. Lockwood 28 Ohio St. 358; Colt v. Illinois R. Co., 38 Iowa, 601; Robinson v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 45 Iowa, 470; Forbes v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 76; Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Humphrey, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 331; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mason, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 116; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 241. See also Jelletts v. St. Paul, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 246; Leader v. Northern R., 3 Ontario C. P. Div., 92; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287; Quarries v. Baltimore, etc., R., 20 W. Va. 424; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 535; Gulf, etc., R. v. Clark, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 628; South & North Alabama R. v. Wood, 72 Ala. 451; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 634.

2. Measure of Damages in Case of Delay.—Peet v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 20 Wis. 594; Cutting v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 13 Allen, 381; Ward v. New York Central R. Co., 47 N. Y. 29; Sisson v. Cleveland & Toledo R. Co., 14 Mich. 489; Spring v. Haskell, 4 Allen, 112; Dean v. Vaccaro & Co., 2 Head, 488; Ingledew v. Northern R., 7 Gray, 86; The Vaughan & Telegraph, 14 Wall. 258; Wilbert v. New York & Erie R. Co., 19 Barb. 36; Lakeman v. Gunnell, 5 Bosw. 625; McHenry v. Phila., W. & B. R. Co., 4 Harring. 448; Scott v. Boston & New Orleans S. Co., 106 Mass. 468; Rice v. Baxendale, 7 H. & N. 96; British Columbia, etc., Co. v. Nettleship, L. R. 3 C. P. 499; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 8 Kans. 623; Michigan S. & N. Ind. R. Co. v. Carter, 13 Ind. 164; Holden v. New York Central R. Co., 54 N. Y. 662; Illinois Central R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Ill. 58; Blumenthal v. Brainerd, 38 Vt. 402; Faulkner v. South Pac. R. Co., 51 Mo. 311; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dickinson, 74 Ill. 249; Weston v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 54 Me. 376; Bailly v. Shaw, 24 N. H. 297; Ringgold v. Haven, 1 Cal. 108; Hart v. Spalding, 1 Cal. 213; Galena & Chicago R. Co. v. Rae, 18 Ill. 488; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Stambro, 87 Ill. 195.

And the rule as to delay applies even when there has been no contract by the carrier to transport and deliver the goods within a specified time, for the law in such case always implies an undertaking to perform the transportation within a reasonable time. Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Thrapp, 5 Ill. App. 502.

The carrier defendant cannot complain that evidence as to the value of the goods is confined to the place of shipment, as the presumption is, in the absence of other evidence, that their value there is less than at the point of destination. Rome R. Co. v. Sloan, 39 Ga. 636; Lindley v. Richmond, etc., R., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 31; Evansville, etc., R. v. Montgomery, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 195; Louisville, etc., R. v. Mason, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 116; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 241; Peterson v. Case, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 578.

3. Refusal to Transport.—Galena, etc., R. v. Rae, 18 Ill. 488; Cowley v. David-

(c) Measure of Damages in Case of Refusal to Deliver.—Where the carrier refuses to deliver the goods, except upon an unreasonable condition, this is equivalent to conversion, and the measure of damages will be the value of the goods at the time of the conversion.[1]

(d) Measure of Damages for Delivery at Wrong Destination.—Where the carrier delivers at the wrong destination, the measure of damages is the difference between the value of the goods where they are delivered and the value at the point where they should have been delivered.[2]

(e) Contract of Sale as a Criterion of Damages.—Where goods are forwarded by the carrier in pursuance of a contract of sale between the consignor and consignee, the contract price furnishes the measure of damages in case of loss or delay.[3] Where in consequence of such delay the consignee refuses to accept the goods and they are therefore sold, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the value on the day when they are actually delivered.[4] This rule applies even where the consignee has under the contract the condition to refuse or accept the goods.[5]

(f) Damages for Delay where Goods remain Salable.—The mere fact that the goods are injured by delay does not render the carrier liable for their full value if they are still applicable to the intended use.[6] Where goods are delayed and further expense is necessarily incurred to put them in salable condition, the carrier must also bear this expense.[7] son, 13 Minn. 92; Harvey v. Connecticut, etc., R., 124 Mass. 421.

Where the article which the carrier refuses to carry is perishable, the shipper must not remain supine, but must adopt whatever means are at hand to forward the goods at once. He cannot at his leisure send them forward in parcels, and hold the carrier liable for the difference in freight. Ward's Central & Pacific Lake Co. v. Elkins. 34 Mich. 439.

1. Refusal to Deliver.—Loeffler v. Keokuk, etc., Co., 7 Mo. App. 185; Rice v. Indianapolis, etc.. R., 3 Mo. App. 27.

2. Wrong Destination.—Galena, etc., R. v. Rae, 18 Ill. 488.

3. Sale as Criterion.—Illinois, etc., R. v. McClellan, 54 Ill. 58; Medbury v. New York, etc., R., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 564.

4. Deming v. Grand Trunk, etc., R., 48 N. H. 455.

5. Magnin v. Dinsmore, 62 N. Y. 35.

6. Delay.—Hackett v. B., C. & M. R., 35 N. H. 390.

7. Winne v. Illinois Central R., 31 Iowa, 583. .See, generally, Jones v. Grand Trunk R., 74 Me. 356; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 265.

Effect of Notices of Special Circumstances.—Where a carrier is notified, either expressly by the nature of the articles, or by custom, of any special circumstances which make delay or loss of particular moment to the consignee, he is liable to respond in damages for all injury which he might reasonably have foreseen would occur; but, unless such notice is given, he is not liable further than is indicated above. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cobb et al., 64 Ill. 128; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458; Gee v. Lancashire & Yorkshire R. Co., 6 H. & N. 211; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Lockhart, 71 Ill. 627; King v. Woodbridge, 34 Vt. 565; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hale, 83 Ill. 360; Great Western R. Co. v. Redmayne, L. R. 1 C. P. 329.

Where a saw-mill is delayed in transportation, the expense of idle hands and the loss of profits from contracts actually on hand is recoverable. The carrier might, from the nature of the article, have foreseen the loss. Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458. And so where the delay was occasioned in carrying live-stock to market, where the carrier had contracted to deliver them on a certain day, which was market-day, it was held that the said carrier was liable for the expenses of keeping the cattle till the next market-day. Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Lockhart, 71 Ill. 627; King v. Woodbridge, 34 Vt. 565.

In Priestly v. Northern I. & C. R. Co., 26 Ill. 205, certain machinery was unduly delayed, and suit was brought against the carrier. The court, in its opinion, says: "Had the plaintiffs notified the defendants for what purpose they designed the machinery and the circumstances of their necessities, they might have brought forward other topics and elements of damage, such as they attempted to show on the trial—that a large number of hands were of necessity under pay and idle, loss of promised custom out of which profits would have been made. In the absence of notice proof of this kind was properly rejected."

And where the carrier knew that certain corn intrusted to its care was to be sold to the government at a certain price, it was held liable, having lost the corn, for the amount which the government would have paid. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cobb et al., 64 Ill. 128.

But the notice will not be construed to extend the carrier's liability any further than it may be inferred from its terms to have informed the carrier of the probable results of failure on his part punctually to fulfil his contract. Home v. Midland R. Co., L. R. 8 C. P. 131. See, generally, Missouri Pacific, etc., R. v. Nevin, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 252; Cunningham v. Great Western R., 49 L. T. N. S. 394; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 254; Gulf, etc., R. v. Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 613.

Business Profits—Existing Contracts.—The loss of mere speculative profits in consequence of the delay of the carrier, or his failure to deliver the goods, is not an element of damage. The recovery is limited to compensation for loss of profits on existing contracts. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hale, 83 Ill. 360; Frazer v. Smith, 64 Ill. 128; Priestly v. Northern Ind. & C. R. Co., 26 Ill. 205; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458. Where, therefore, in an action for an injury to a jack, plaintiff endeavored to include in his damages the amount of profits he might have recovered from letting the animal out to serve mares, it was held that, there being no evidence that plaintiff had made contracts to that effect, or notified the defendant thereof, his damages must be confined to the value of the jack. On the other hand, where there was unreasonable delay in transporting a saw-mill, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover for loss on contracts actually entered into and on hand pending the delay. Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458.

Consequential and Remote Damages.—In some cases the damages sought to be recovered are so evidently consequential that there is no room for question. A consignee cannot recover for his loss of time in waiting for delayed goods. Ingledew v. Northern R. Co , 7 Gray, 86. Nor for his hotel expenses during the same period. Woodger v. Great Western R. Co., L. R. 2 C. P. 318.

In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Titusville Plank Road Co., 71 Pa. St. 350, the railroad company undertook to carry certain planks from one station to another, which were to be used in making a plank road. They were not carried according to agreement, and the consignee was allowed to recover the difference between the prices of plank at the two stations. The court held, however, that it was error to instruct the jury that plaintiff was entitled, in addition, to recover the increased expense of putting down the plank road consequent upon the non-delivery. As to this point Sharswood, J., remarked: "To say that the increased expense of labor in putting down the planks in consequence of such delay would be such an immediate and proximate effect as ought to be charged to the common carriers seems to be entirely too indefinite. It would include a rise of wages, stormy weather, bad roads in consequence, which would have been entirely beyond what would naturally have been within the view of the parties, and might well have happened even had the railroad company punctually performed its duty. The natural consequences of delay and stoppage of work and payment of wages and expenses arising therefrom, and the loss from not having the work finished at the time it otherwise would have been, but for the rule."

Executory Contracts.—In an action against a carrier for breach of an executory contract to carry goods, the measure of damages is the difference between the market value of the goods at the intended points of shipment and delivery, less the freight. The fact that the owner of the goods informed the carrier at the time of making the contract that he did so because he wished to make contracts with third persons for the sale of the goods to them, does not entitle him to recover of the carrier the profits which he would have made out of such contracts but for the breach of the contract of carriage. Harvey v. Connecticut & P. R. Co., 124 Mass. 421.

How Value is Estimated.—In order to Measure of Damages where Special Damage is Occasioned by Loss or Delay.—It is said that compensation for the actual loss sustained is the fundamental principle upon which our law bases the allowance of damages. It will not indeed make this allowance upon a calculation of speculative profits, for this would be proceeding upon contingencies, and would involve the subject in too much uncertainty. It would be too difficult for practical application. Nor will the law indemnify for remote or indirect losses. The loss must be the natural and proximate consequence of the act. And when this can be ascertained without uncertainty the principle of comparison will be adopted.[1] It is said to be impossible determine the value of the goods at the point of destination, the current newspapers, giving the general state of the markets, are admissible in evidence, and are deemed far more reliable than private memoranda. Sisson v. Cleveland, etc., R., 14 Mich. 489.

Where the only evidence of value is the price stated in the bill when the goods were purchased the jury is confined to this. Blumenthal v. Brainerd, 38 Vt. 402.

Where the liability of the first carrier has terminated short of the point of destination by handing the goods over to a connecting line, the condition of the goods at the point of destination is nevertheless admissible in an action against the first carrier for an unreasonable delay occurring on his line. Marshall v. New York Central, etc., R., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 502.

Interest.—Interest is allowed on the amount recovered from the time when the goods should have been delivered. Kyle v. Laurens, etc., R., 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 382; Robinson v. Merchants' Desp. Co., 45 Iowa, 420. Interest runs from date of judgment, not from date of verdict. Quarrier v. Baltimore, etc., R., 20 W. Va. 424; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 535. See, generally, Arthur v. Chicago, etc., R., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 283.

But the allowance of interest is to some degree within the discretion of the court, and where there has been no negligence on the carrier's part, the recovery of interest is not permitted. Gray v. Missouri River Packet Co., 64 Mo. 49.

Factor's Commissions.—The amount of the factor's commission on the value of the goods is not allowed as an abatement. Kyle v. Laurens, etc., R., 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 382.

Freight.—Although the amount of the freight is generally deducted from the damages, yet there can be no such deduction when the amount of the freight does not appear. Gray v. Missouri River Packet Co., 64 Mo. 47.

Notice of Intention to Claim Damages for Loss of Goods.—A clause in a bill of lading exempting a company from liability for loss of goods, unless a claim for damages is presented within a specified time after the loss, is ordinarily held to be reasonable and valid, provided the specified time is not unreasonably short. Express Co. v. Caldwell, 21 Wall. 264; Southern Express Co. v. Hunnicutt, 54 Miss. 566; Weir v. Express Co., 5 Phila. 355; United States Express Co. v. Harris, 51 Ind. 127; Capenart v. Seaboard, etc., R. Co., 77 N. Car. 355; Lewis v. Great Western R. Co., 5 H. & N. 867; Texas Central R. v. Morris, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 259; Gulf, etc., R. v. Maetze, 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 613. But see, contra, Adams Express Co. v. Reagan, 29 Ind. 21; Southern Express Co. v. Caperton, 44 Ala. 101.

Where an unreasonably short time is given within which to present the claim, the clause is held to be invalid. Memphis R. Co. v. Holloway, 4 L. & Eq. R. 425; Browning v. L. I. R. Co., 2 Daly, 117.

Presentation of Claim Before Withdrawal of Goods.—In certain cases where the injury, if any, is in its nature patent, it has been held that a stipulation is not unreasonable requiring the presentation of a claim for damages before the goods are taken away. Goggin v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 12 Kans. 416; Bill v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 63 Mo. 314; Capenart v. Seaboard, etc., R. Co., 77 N. Car. 355.

Notice of Claim not Condition Precedent.—A clause requiring a claim for loss or damage to be presented within a specified time after the goods are delivered has no application in a case where there has been no delivery of the goods. Porter v. Southern Express Co., 4 S. Car. 135.

Such a clause has in some cases been held not a condition precedent to plaintiff's right of action. If relied on as a defence, it must therefore be specially set up. Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 452.

1. Special Damages from Loss or De- to lay down any fixed rule for estimating the damages in such cases. In a well-considered case the following principles were established: 1st. The proximate and natural consequences of the breach must be always considered. 2d. Such consequences as from the nature and subject-matter of the contract may be reasonably admitted to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was entered into may be considered. 3d. Damages which may fairly be supposed not to have been the necesnecessary and natural consequences of the breach cannot be recovered unless by the terms of the agreement or by express notice they were brought within the expectation of the parties. 4th. Loss of property in business cannot be allowed unless the data of estimation are so definite and certain that they can be ascertained reasonably by calculation, and then the carrier must have notice either from the nature of the contract itself, or by explanation of the circumstances at the time the contract was made that such damages would inure from non-performance. 5th. If the contract is made with reference to embarking in a new business, the speculative profits therein which may be supposed to have been defeated by the breach, cannot be recovered. 6th. Where the articles in question are to be applied to a particular use, and this is known to the carrier, he is liable for damages fairly attributable to the delay. 7th. The party injured must not remain supine, but must take such steps to reduce his loss as lie in his power.[1]

Liability when Goods are Shipped at a Fixed Valuation.—When the goods are transported at a fixed valuation, this will control in any event.[2]

Carrier's Lien.—As to the lien of carrier for charges of freight, see FREIGHT.

Carriers of Animals.—As to carriers of animals, see CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK.

lay.—Medway v. New York, etc., R., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 564.

1. Vicksburg, etc., R. v. Ragsdale, 46 Miss. 458.

Loss of Household Goods, Furniture, etc.—In cases where the articles lost are household goods or the like, the same strict rule cannot be applied, as such articles cannot be said to have a fixed market value. Marsh v. Union Pacific R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 359; Denver & South Park R. Co. v. Frame, 6 Col. 382.

See particularly Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Burke, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 59, where the question arose as to the measure of damages for the loss of a family picture.

Evidence of Value of Goods at Destination.—In an action against a carrier for causing the loss of goods, the shipper may testify as to their value, though he is ignorant of their value at their destination. Marsh v. Union Pacific R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 359.

2. Carrier Bound by his Valuation.—Atchison, etc., R. v. Miller, 16 Neb. 661; s. c., 18 Am. &. Eng. R. R. Cas. 545; Hart v. Pennsylvania R., 112 U. S. 331; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 604.

Authorities for Carriers of Goods.—Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.); Hutchinson on Carriers; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed., Lond. 1882), which is a valuable and admirably condensed epitome of the English law upon the subject; American and English Railroad Cases, vols. 1 to 27 inclusive, with annotations.

INDEX.

WHOLE NUMBER OF PAGES, 1001.