THE

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH

ENCYCLOPÆDIA

OF

LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

JOHN HOUSTON MERRILL,

Late Editor of the American and English Railroad Cases and the American and English Corporation Cases.

VOLUME II.

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON, LAW PUBLISHER.
1887.

DRUMMOND & NEU,
Printers,
1 to 7 Hague Street,
NEW YORK.

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS TO VOLUME II.

Bailment,	LOUIS M. GREELEY of the Chicago Bar.
Bankruptcy,	WILLIAM M. ROCKEL of the Springfield (O.) Bar.
Banks and Banking,	HENRY B. BARTOW of the Philadelphia Bar.
Beneficial Associations,	ISAAC H. LIONBERGER of the St. Louis Bar.
Bill of Discovery,	LOUIS M. GREELEY of the Chicago Bar.
Bill in Equity,	THOMAS REATH of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Exceptions,	JOHH H. INGHAM of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Lading,	WILLIAM W. PORTER of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Particulars,	CHAS. CHAUNCEY BINNEY of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Peace,	CHARLES K. ZUG of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill Quia Timet,	CHARLES T. CRESSWELL of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Review,	CHAS. CHAUNCEY BINNEY of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Revivor,	JOHN S. ADAMS of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bill of Sale,	H. CAMPBELL BLACK of the Williamsport (Pa.) Bar.
Bill to Perpetuate Testimony, / Bill to take Testimony De Bene Esse,	JAMES M. KERR of the Rochester (N. Y.) Bar.
Bill to Remove Clouds on Title,	CHARLES T. CRESSWELL of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bills and Notes,	CHAS. MERRILL HOUGH of the New York Bar.
Board of Health, / Board of Supervisors,	EDWARD P. ALLINSON and BOIES PENROSE of the Philadelphia Bar.
Books as Evidence,	CHARLES T. CRESSWELL of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bonds,	C. B. ELLIOTT of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Bar.
Boundaries,	C. G. TIEDEMAN, Prof. of Law, University of Missouri.
Boroughs,	EDWARD P. ALLINSON and BOIES PENROSE of the Philadelphia Bar.
Bottomry,	THEODORE M. ETTING of the Philadelphia Bar.
Breach of Promise,	DAVID STEWART of the Baltimore Bar.
Bridges,	JOSEPH A. JOYCE of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Bar.
Building Associations,	HOWARD WURTS PAGE of the Philadelphia Bar.
By-laws,	N. DUBOIS MILLER of the Philadelphia Bar.
Capias,	ISAAC H. LIONBERGER of the St. Louis Bar.
Carriers of Passengers,	C. STUART PATTERSON of the Philadelphia Bar.
Carriers of Goods,	JNO. HOUSTON MERRILL of the Philadelphia Bar.
Words and Phrases,	JOHN H. INGHAM, SAMUEL HINDS THOMAS, JOHN S. ADAMS, JOHN P. CROASDALE, of the Philadelphia Bar.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See Index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

THE

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

BAIL. (See also ARREST; CRIMINAL LAW; ESCAPE; FORFEITURE; HABEAS CORPUS; RECOGNIZANCE; SCIRE FACIAS; SHERIFF; and the several criminal-law titles generally.)

BAIL IN CRIMINAL CASES.—1. Definition.—Bail is a delivery of a person to his sureties, upon their giving, together with himself, sufficient security for his appearance; he being supposed to continue in their friendly custody, instead of going to jail.[1]

1. State v. McNab, 20 N. H. 161; People v. Kane, 4 Denio (N.Y.), 535; 1 Black. Com. 297.

Taking bail in personal actions was made compulsory upon sheriffs by the statute 23 Hen. VII. chap. 8; and this privilege was made more definite and secure by subsequent enactments. The statute Hen. VII. related to bail on mesne process only. The right of the sheriff to take bail for the appearance of defendants to answer a writ or process is said, in Dive v. Maningham, 1 Plowden, 67, to have existed before the statute at common law, although this is denied in Beawfage's Case, 10 Co. 426.

The statute required sheriffs to let to bail prisoners arrested in personal actions, upon their giving reasonable surety to keep their days, etc., and prescribed the form of the bond, and that it should be on condition that the prisoner appear at the day contained in the writ, etc., and in such place as the writ requires; and then followed the provision that if any sheriffs take any obligation in other form, by color of their offices, it should be void. This was the original of the statutory enactments found in this and most of the States prohibiting and making void bonds taken colore officii.

The statute of Hen. VII. was strictly construed by the English courts; and securities or agreements taken by sheriffs, not in strict conformity with its provisions, were held to be void. Scryven v. Dyther, Cro. Eliz. 672; Rogers v. Reeves, 1 Term R. 418; Fuller v. Prest, 7 Term R. 110.

These decisions have been followed in analogous cases in our courts. Sullivan v. Alexander, 19 Johns. (N.Y.) 233; Bank of Buffalo v. Boughton, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 57; Barnard v. Viele, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 88; People v. Meighan, 1 Hill (N.Y.), 298.

It is said by Blackstone (1 Bl. Com. 137) that if a man be lawfully arrested,

A recognizance is an obligation of record entered into before some court of record or magistrate, duly authorized, conditioned for the performance of some particular act. It is equal in solemnity to, and in some respects at common law takes priority over, an ordinary bond. A recognizance differs from a bond in this: that while the latter, which is attested by the signature and seal of the obligor, creates a fresh or new obligation, the former is an acknowledgment on record of an already existing debt. To be a recognizance it is essential not only that the instrument be in writing, but also that it be a matter of record.[1] and, either to procure his discharge or on any other fair account, seals a bond or a deed, this is not by duress of imprisonment, and he is not at liberty to avoid it. This principle of the common law has been applied in several cases, in actions upon agreements claimed to be void under the statute Hen. VII.; and it has been held that where the agreement to discharge a party from arrest was between the parties to the action, it could be enforced by the plaintiff, although it did not conform to the statute. It is competent for the parties, independently of the statute, to agree upon the terms and conditions upon which the discharge shall be had.

In Milward v. Clerk, Cro. Eliz. 190, the defendant having been arrested at the plaintiff's suit, in consideration that he should be permitted to go at large, and that the plaintiff would give his warrant to the bailiff to suffer him to go at large, promised the plaintiff to appear at the day of the return of the process, or pay him ten pounds. In an action upon this promise the defendant pleaded the statute 23 Hen. VII.; but the court said: "It is a good assumpsit, being made to the party who had authority to dispense with the appearance; but if the promise had been made to the sheriff, or to any one to his use, it had been within the equity of the statute."

In Hall v. Carter, 2 Mod. 304, the action was upon a bond executed by the defendant to the plaintiff, conditioned that if a third person (who had been arrested at the suit of the plaintiff) should give security for the payment of the plaintiff's debt, or should render his body to prison at the return of the writ, the obligation should be void. The defendant pleaded the statute, and the plaintiff demurred. The court sustained the demurrer, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, saying, "There is no law that makes the agreement of the parties void; and if the bond was not taken by such agreement, it might have been traversed."

The same principle was recognized and applied in Winter v. Kinney, 1 N. Y. 365. The court reversed the judgment below, on the ground that the question should have been submitted to the jury whether the agreement under which the plaintiff paid the money, which he sought to recover back, was made with the sheriff or with the party at whose suit he was arrested; the court saying the party may make such agreement or take such security as he pleases, on discharging his debtor from arrest. See Harp v. Osgood, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 216.

Bail by Strangers.—Strangers cannot become bail for a prisoner without his consent. The giving of bail constitutes a contract between the principal and his sureties, and the principal has a right to determine for himself whether he will assume the obligations of such a person or not. They cannot be imposed upon him against his will. People v. Davidson, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 416.

1. State v. Crippen, 1 Ohio, St. 401; State v. Dailey, 14 Ohio, 91; King v. State, 18 Neb. 375.

A statutory undertaking for bail is not a recognizance; it is a simple promise to pay money on certain conditions. State v. Hays, 2 Oregon, 314.

In People v. Kane, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 535, Beardsley, J., says: "The definition of a recognizance would seem to import that it is necessarily a record as soon as entered into; but, strictly speaking, this is incorrect, for a recognizance is not a record until duly enrolled and filed. This rule is universal, for no proceeding can be regarded as matter of record before it has been enrolled and filed in a court of record." Again he says: "And the same principle applies to recognizances taken by a court or magistrate for the appearance of a party charged with a criminal offence; the recognizance, although complete, is not in strictness a record until made out in form and filed in a court of record."

In People v. Van Eps, 4 Wend. (N. Y.)

By the common law, all offences, including treason, are bailable, though the high crimes are so not of right but only in the discretion of the court.[1]

The giving and taking of bail is now limited, regulated, and controlled by statute. A bail bond partakes very little of the nature of a contract between the parties in whose names it is taken, but is rather a legal proceeding in the course of justice, the effect of which is regulated by statute.[2]

Both at common law and by statute, to refuse or delay to bail any person bailable is a misdemeanor in the magistrate.[3] But it has been held that the duty of a magistrate in respect of admitting to bail is a judicial duty; and therefore that not even an action can be maintained against him for refusing to admit to bail, where the matter is one as to which he may exercise his discretion.[4]

393, the action was upon a recognizance taken before the first judge of the common pleas court for the appearance of the recognizor at the next court of oyer and terminer. In discussing the subject of recognizances, the court said: "It does not, strictly speaking, become a recognizance or a debt of record until it is filed or recorded in the court in which it is returnable." See State v. Walker, 56 N. H. 176.

The case of People v. Huggins. 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 464. was an action upon a recognizance taken before two justices of the peace for the appearance of the recognizor at the next court of general sessions of the county. The court said: "It is undoubtedly necessary that it should appear that the recognizance was filed in or made a record of the court in which it is returnable."

The case of Bridge v. Ford, 4 Mass. 641. was an action on a recognizance taken before a justice of the peace, conditioned for the prosecution of an appeal to the court of common pleas. Chief Justice Parsons says: "The recognizance does not appear to have been delivered to and entered of record in the common pleas. Debt, as well as scire facias, will lie on a recognizance to a party; but this recognizance must be matter of record, and in debt upon it the defendant may plead nul tiel record. Whenever, therefore, a justice recognizes a party to appear at any court of record. it is his duty to transmit the recognizance to that court, that it may be entered of record."

State v. Smith. 2 Greenl. (Me.) 62, was a scire facias upon a recognizance entered into before a justice of the peace for the appearance of the recognizor at the court of common pleas. It was held that it must appear that the recognizance had been legally taken, and "returned to the court where the party recognizing is bound to appear, and such proceedings of that court as form the basis of the suit."

By the provisions of the Nebraska statute a recognizance taken by a justice of the peace, acting as an examining magistrate, becomes an obligation of record when returned by the justice of the peace to the clerk of the district court, and is by him entered of record. King v. State, 18 Neb. 375.

1. 1 Bac. Abr. 588–596; R. v. Barronet, Dears. C. C. 51; 1 Bish. Cr. Pr. § 256.

The bailing a person not bailable by law is punishable at common law as a negligent escape. Bac. Abr. (Bouvier's Ed.) 595; R. v. Brooke, 2 Term R. 190.

The constitutions of most of the States provide that all persons shall, before conviction, be admitted to bail upon giving sufficient sureties, except (where proof of their guilt is evident or the presumption great) for capital offences. Stimson's Stat. Law, § 122.

2. Crane v. Keating, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 342.

3. 3 Edw. 1, c. 15; 31 Car. 2, c. 2 (Habeas Corpus); 1 Wm. & M. st. 2, c. 1 (Bill of Rights); Evans v. Foster, 1 N. H. 374; State v. Campbell, 2 Tyler (Vt.), 177; Boyer v. Potts, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 158; State v. Johnson, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 385; Lining v. Bentham. 2 Bay (S. Car.), 1; Gregory v. Brown, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 28.

4. Linford v. Fitzroy, 18 L. J. M. C. 108; R. v. Badger, 12 L. J. M. C. 66.

As bailing is a matter resting solely upon the discretion of the court, the decision of the court will not be interfered with on appeal unless the discretion has been evidently abused. Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 192.

2. Authority to take—Jurisdiction.—Bail may be taken by a magistrate who has power to issue a warrant for the arrest of the prisoner; by any justice of a court which has jurisdiction of the crime; by any justice who has power to issue the writ of habeas corpus, and by any justice of a court having appellate jurisdiction;[1] and also by such officers as may be designated by statute.

1. People v. Van Horne, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 158; People v. Goodwin, 1 Wheel. Cr. (N. Y.) 434; Matter of Goodhue, 1 Wheel. Cr. (N. Y.) 427; People v. Jefferds, 5 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 518; People v. Cole, 6 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 695; People v. Hyler, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 570; People v. Cunningham, 3 Park. Cr. 520; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; State v. McNab, 20 N. H. 160; Young v. Shaw, 1 Chip. (Vt.) 224; State v. Rockafellow, 1 Halst. (N. J.) 332; Com. v. Keeper, etc., 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 227; Lynch v. People, 38 Ill. 494; Matter of Alexander, 59 Mo. 598; State v. Grant, 10 Minn. 39; Com. v. Salyer. 8 Bush (Ky.). 461; State v. Hill, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 89; Ex parte Gilchrist, 4 McC. (S. Car.) 233; Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1; State v. Abbott, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 244; Corbett v. State, 24 Ga. 391; Callahan v. State, 60 Ala. 65; Ex parte Chaney, 8 Ala. 424; U. S. v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 17; U. S. v. Stewart, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 343; U. S. v. Davis, Chase's Dec. (U. S.) 1; U. S. v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 17; U. S. v. Faw, 1 Cranch C. C. 486; R. v. Higgins, 4 Up. Can. O. S. 83; In re Barronet, 1 El. & Bl. 1; R. v. Lord Baltimore, 4 Burr. 2179; R. v. Barthelemy, Dears. C. C. 60; R. v. Morgan, 1 Bulst. 84; R. v. Wyndham, 1 Strange, 2; Mohun's Case, 1 Salk. 103; Herbert's Case, Latch, 12.

In some States the sheriff is authorized to take bail. Dickinson v. Kingsbury, 2 Day (Conn.), 1; Kearns v. State, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 334; McCole v. State, 10 Ind. 50; Com. v. Reed, 3 Bush (Ky.), 516; McClure v. State, 56 Ga. 439; Kellogg v. State, 43 Miss. 57; Merrill v. State, 46 Ala. 82; State v. McKeown, 12 La. Ann. 596.

A sheriff making an arrest for misdemeanor under a capias is authorized to take bail of the accused either in termtime or in vacation of the court. Ellis v. State, 10 Tex. App. 324. Compare State v. Miller, 31 Tex. 564.

An order to the sheriff to take bail and approve the sureties of a party arrested for error, held, error. Jacquemine v. State, 48 Miss. 46.

Power to bail is incident to the power to try the offence. People v. Shattuck, 6 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 33; Bac. Abr. tit. Bail, 581.

A United States commissioner, as respects the taking of bail, has the same power as a State magistrate, and no greater. U. S. v. Horton, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 94; U. S. v. Rundlett, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 41. Compare U. S. v. Case, 8 Blatchf. (C. C.) 250.

Where the jurisdiction of a judge of the county court, or of a judge of the supreme Court, to take a recognizance is conferred by statute, it is special, and limited to those cases named in the statute. No intendment is to be made in favor of the jurisdiction of the tribunal in such cases; but the jurisdiction must appear from the record itself. Treasurer v. Merrill, 14 Vt. 64; State v. Lamoine, 53 Vt. 568; State v. Smith, 2 Me. 62; Dodge v. Kellock, 13 Me. 136; Bridge v. Ford, 4 Mass. 641.

The power to admit a prisoner to bail, pending an appeal taken by him from a judgment of conviction of felony, will not be exercised by the supreme court in the first instance, nor until after the determination upon its merits of an application for bail before the judge who tried the cause. People v. January, 11 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 326.

In an action upon a recognizance, taken before a special justice, as security for one who had been arrested upon an execution for costs, upon a claim against him as administrator personally, no affidavit being required to justify an arrest upon the execution, and the arrest being warranted without special instruction,—held, that the special justice could take the recognizance at other times than the regularly appointed sessions of the court. Gibbs v. Taylor, 3 N. Eng. Repr. (Mass.) 304.

The power to admit a prisoner to bail after conviction, pending an appeal on writ of error, conferred by the Tenn. Code, sec. 5142, upon the trial court or the judge thereof, and upon the supreme court, can only be exercised by the supreme court while sitting in the grand division in which the case is to be tried, but may be exercised by the trial court, or the judge thereof, at any time when the supreme court is not sitting. Holcomb v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 668.

Where a criminal cause, brought into court by appeal from a judgment of conviction of felony, is reversed for an apparently fatal defect in the transcript of the record, and the defendant remanded to the court below for a new trial, that court has jurisdiction to provide for the safe-keeping of the prisoner, and a recognizance taken for his appearance will be good although upon a more perfect transcript the order of reversal of this court is afterwards, during the same term, set aside and the cause reinstated on the docket. Brewer v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 198.

A recognizance taken by a court without jurisdiction, or by an officer without authority, is void.[1]

Bail should only be taken in the territorial jurisdiction, where the crime was committed and must be tried;[2] but the prisoner

Bail taken by two justices, where but one had authority to act, is not invalid. Chase v. People, 2 Colo. 528.

Where a judge has jurisdiction, he may order a recognizance to be taken by two justices of the peace designated by him in a fixed sum. State v. Edney, 2 Wins. (N. Car.) 71.

The mere signing of an order for bail outside of his circuit for a prisoner of his circuit does not show that the judge heard the application beyond the limits of his own circuit. State v. Satterwhite, 20 S. Car. 536.

Under the Gen. Sts. c. 152, § 7, authorizing a justice of the peace to take the recognizance of a debtor "in any case where it might be taken before the clerk of the court," and § 2, providing that "the recognizance may be taken before the superior court in any county in term time, or before the clerk of the court in vacation," a justice of the peace has no authority to take such a recognizance on a day when the superior court stands adjourned to another day in the same term; and an execution issued on the recognizance is void. Brayman v. Whitcomb, 134 Mass. 525.

A bail commissioner may take bail during the session of the court which appointed him. Com. v. Merriam, 9 Allen (Mass.). 371.

Under the N. Y. Rev. Stat. a justice of the supreme court may admit the prisoner to bail although he is a justice in the county where the arrest is made and not in the county where the indictment was found, provided the court having cognizance of the offence and jurisdiction to try the same is not sitting at the time the application for bail is made. People v. Clews, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 90, 77 N. Y. 39.

1. State v. Winninger, 81 Ind. 51; Dickinson v. State, 29 N. W. Repr. (Neb.) 184; State v. Jones, 3 La. Ann. 10; State v. Harper, 3 La. Ann. 598; Gray v. State, 43 Ala. 41; Jacquemine v. State, 48 Miss. 46; Branham v. Commonwealth, 2 Bush (Ky.). 3; Com v. Roberts, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 199; Com. v. Fisher, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 376; Dugan v. Commonwealth, 6 Bush (Ky.), 305; Harris v. Simpson, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 165; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 101; State v. McCoy, 57 Tenn. 111; Wallenweber v. Commonwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 68; Schneider v. Commonwealth, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 409; Tharp v. Commonwealth, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 411; Williams v. Shelby. 2 Oregon, 144; Blevins v. State, 31 Ark. 53; Cooper v. State, 23 Ark. 278; State v. Nelson, 28 Mo. 13; State v. Hays, 4 La. Ann. 59; State v. Vion, 12 La. Ann. 688; Holmes v. State, 44 Tex. 631; State v. Russell, 24 Tex. 505; State v. Berry, 8 Me. 179; Com. v. Loveridge, 11 Mass. 337; Com. v. Otis, 16 Mass. 198; Com. v. Canada, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 86; Powell v. State, 15 Ohio, 579; State v. Clark, 15 Ohio, 595; People v. McKinney, 9 Mich. 444. Compare State v. Cannon, 34 Iowa, 325; Furgison v. State, 4 Greene (Iowa), 302; Dennard v. State, 2 Ga. 137.

A recognizance for the appearance of an accused person to answer to an indictment for felony, taken before and approved by an officer or person unauthorized by law, or where, under the facts of the case, the taking thereof is unauthorized by law, so that the same fails to be binding under the statute, is void, and is also void as a common-law obligation. Dickinson v. State, 29 N. W. Repr. (Neb.) 184.

A court has no power to deputize its clerk to take bail. Morrow v. State, 5 Kan. 563; Butler v. Foster, 14 Ala. 323; Antonez v. State, 26 Ala. 81; Wallenweber v. Commonwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 68. Compare State v. Sewall, 3 La. Ann. 575; State v. Wyatt, 6 La. Ann. 701.

A justice of the peace cannot take bail in case of homicide. Com. v. Loveridge, 11 Mass. 337.

2. People v. Harris. 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 83; People v. Chapman, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 202; Matter of Goodhue, 1 Wheel. Cr. (N. Y.) 427; Com. v. Jailer, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 218; Com. v. Taylor, 11 Phila. 386; State v. Woolery, 39 Mo. 525; Ex parte Erwin. 7 Tex. App. 288; R. v. MacIntosh, 1 Strange, 308; R. v. Leason, may be bailed de die in diem pending the inquiry.[1]

When it appears that the presiding judge has acted, no other judge would be warranted in discharging the prisoner or admitting him to bail, unless it clearly appeared that the presiding judge had acted arbitrarily in the premises, and thereby abused his discretion.[2]

The official character of the magistrate taking the recognizance cannot be put in issue in a collateral proceeding.[3]

3. Who may Give.—In civil actions all persons are entitled to give bail to secure their release.[4] (See BAIL IN CIVIL CASES, post, p. 35.

In criminal cases the prisoner may of right give bail for his appearance, to answer the charge or indictment, except in capital offences, where the proof is evident or the presumption great. In these cases bail should be refused where a judge would sustain a capital conviction, if pronounced by a jury, on such evidence of guilt as is exhibited on the hearing for bail. If the evidence is clear and strong, leading a well-guarded and dispassionate judgment to the conclusion that the offence has been committed, that the accused is the guilty agent, and that he would probably be punished capitally if the law be administered, bail is not a matter of right.[5]

1 Strange, 308; s. c., 1 Ld. Raymond, 61; R. v. Bishop, Fort. 102; R. v. Gates, Fort. 101.

Where by statute the jurisdiction of the court is coextensive with the limits of the State, a court in one county or district can bail a prisoner for an offence committed in another county or district. Parrish v. State, 14 Md. 238.

C. was arrested in Cortland County by virtue of an indorsed warrant issued in Seneca County, and was released from custody on giving bail in Cortland County, conditioned for his appearance at the next Seneca general sessions. He appeared accordingly, but the complainant did not appear, nor were any subsequent steps taken under the warrant. Held, that the recognizance was a nullity, and as C. still remained liable to be arrested under the warrant, he could not maintain an action for malicious prosecution. Clark v. Cleveland, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 344; Matter of Gorsline, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 85.

1. In re Kaine, 14 How. (U. S.) 103, 134.

2. Ex parte Isbell, 11 Nev. 295; People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 483; People v. Restell, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 251; Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 192; Ex parte Jones, 20 Ark. 9; Ex parte Osborn, 24 Ark. 185.

3. People v. Meacham, 74 Ill. 292; Compton v. People, 86 Ill. 176.

4. Richards v. Porter, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 137.

5 Ex parte Foster, 5 Tex. App. 625; Ex parte Randon, 12 Tex. App. 145; Ex parte Beacom, 12 Tex. App. 318; Ruston v. State, 15 Tex. App. 324; Ex parte Coldiron, 15 Tex. App. 464; Moore v. State, 31 Tex. 572; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 6; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33; Drury v. State, 25 Tex. 45; Ex parte Wray, 30 Miss. 673; Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1; Beall v. State, 39 Miss. 715; Ex parte Fortenberry, 53 Miss. 428; Ex parte Bridewell, 57 Miss. 39; Ex parte McAnally, 53 Ala. 495; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 646; Ex parte Bryant, 34 Ala. 270; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 89; Ex parte Hammock, 78 Ala. 414; Ex parte Vaughan, 44 Ala. 417; Ex parte Croom, 19 Ala. 561; Ex parte McCrary, 22 Ala. 661; Ex parte Johnson, 18 Ala. 414; State v. Wicks, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 139; State v. Howell, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 120; State v. Holmes, 3 Strob. (S. Car.) 272; State v. Arthur, 1 McMul. (S. Car.) 456; State v. Hill, 1 Treadw. (S. Car.) 242; State v. Brusle, 34 La. Ann. 61; State v. Brewster, 35 La. Ann. 605; In re Bennoit, 1 Mart. (La.) 142; Ex parte White, 9 Ark. 222; People v. Tinder, 19 Cal. 539; Ex parte Hoge, 48 Ala. 3; People v. Perdue, 48 Cal. 552; People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9; Com. v. Semmes, 11 Leigh (Va.), 665; Com. v. Archer, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 705; Green v. Com., 11 Leigh (Va.), 677; Com. v. Keeper of Prison, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 227; State v. Rockafellow, 1 Halst. (N. J.) 332; People v. Van Horne, 8 Barb. (N. Y.)

158; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; People v. Dixon, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 651; People v. Hyler, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 570; People v. Perry, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 27; People v. Shattuck, 6 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 33; State v. McNab, 20 N. H. 160; State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139; Kendle v. Tarbell, 24 Ohio St. 196; Lumm v. State, 3 Ind. 293; Ex parte Walton, 79 Ind. 600; Ex parte Jones, 55 Ind. 176; Ex parte Colter, 35 Ind. 109; Foley v. People, 1 Ill. 32; Shore v. State, 6 Mo. 640; In re Alexander, 59 Mo. 599; Ullery v. Commonwealth, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 3; Ready v. Commonwealth, 9 Dana (Ky.), 38; U. S. v Hamilton, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 17; U. S. v. Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. 209; U. S. v. Stewart, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 343. Compare People v. Dixon, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 651.

In felonies not capital, bail under the common-law rules is more freely granted, yet still cautiously and not as of course. 1 Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 256.

Where capital punishment has been abolished, the prisoner is entitled to be bailed. In re Perry, 19 Wis. 676.

If the guilt or innocence of the prisoner appear to be indifferent, he may be bailed. Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; Ex parte Bridewell, 57 Miss. 39. See Tyler v. Greenlaw, 5 Rand. (Va.) 711.

The accused is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable doubt. Ex parte Bird, 24 Ark. 275.

It is a safe rule, where malicious homicide is charged, to refuse bail in all cases where a judge would sustain a capital conviction if pronounced by a jury on such evidence of guilt as was exhibited to him on the hearing of the application to admit to bail. Com. v. Keeper of Prison, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 227; Matter of Troia, 64 Cal. 152; State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139. Compare Ex parte Bridewell, 57 Miss. 39.

It is only when the testimony of the material witnesses for the people, taken before a committing magistrate, is clearly shown to be false in a capital case that a prisoner should be discharged on habeas corpus with or without bail. In re Troia, 64 Cal. 152.

An indictment for murder duly returned implies prima facie that the parties indicted have no right to bail. Ex parte Jones, 55 Ind. 176; Ex parte Randon, 12 Tex. App. 145; Ex parte McGlawn, 75 Ala. 38; Ex parte Rhear, 77 Ala. 92; Ex parte Hammock, 78 Ala. 414.

The burden is upon appellants to show that the proof of their guilt is not evident, and that the presumption of their guilt is not strong. Ex parte Jones, 55 Ind. 176; Ex parte Heffren, 27 Ind. 87; Ex parte Kendall, 100 Ind. 599.

Appellant sued out habeas corpus for allowance of bail. At the hearing it appeared that he was in jail under a capias emanating from an indictment which charged him with murder in the first degree. He procured process for all the witnesses named on the indictment, and he examined such of them as appeared. The evidence tended to show that the deceased had been killed, but neither identified him as the man for whose murder the appellant was indicted nor connected the appellant with the homicide. Held, that the appellant should have been admitted to bail. Ex parte Randon, 12 Tex. App. 145.

Where the evidence shows that the crime is probably manslaughter, but the indictment is for murder, bail should be allowed. Ex parte Matlock, 18 Tex. App. 227; Brown v. State, 18 Tex. App. 326. See State v. Wicks, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 139. Compare Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39.

The prisoner is not required to introduce the witnesses who were before the grand jury, although they are present in court; and if the evidence adduced by him leaves it doubtful whether the deceased came to his death by accident, by suicide, or by violence at the hands of another, no witnesses being introduced on the part of the prosecution, he is entitled to bail. Ex parte Hammock, 78 Ala. 414.

F., being under indictment for murder, applied by habeas corpus for release on bail. At the hearing of his application fourteen witnesses were examined for the State. The names of seven of them had been marked upon the indictment as witnesses for the State; and two others were said by counsel for the State to be important witnesses. There were marked upon the indictment the names of nineteen witnesses; twelve of whom were not examined. The testimony adduced failed to disclose any circumstance criminating F., but the chancellor refused to allow him to give bail. Held. that F. should have been admitted to give bail, unless the chancellor was led to believe that there was other procurable and important evidence, and then he should have postponed the further investigation of the matter until such evidence could be had. Ex parte Floyd. 60 Miss. 913.

On appeal, the court should consider the evidence without reference to the finding of the court below. Ex parte Sutherlin. 56 Ind. 595.

Where the evidence tended to show

4. After Indictment.—An indictment for a capital offence implies prima facie that the prisoner has no right to bail.[1]

Bail may sometimes be taken after indictment found in capital cases where no special and extraordinary circumstances exist; as where the public prosecutor admits that the evidence which he can produce will not warrant a conviction for a capital offence, or where he admits facts from which it is evident no such conviction can take place. So where upon trial the evidence for the prosecution and defence has been produced, and the jury have disagreed, or where, after verdict, a new trial has been granted for the insufficiency of the evidence to warrant a conviction. In such cases the court may allow bail in its discretion, without hearing other evidence as to the guilt or innocence of the accused. Independently of any consideration of the merits of the prosecution, circumstances frequently arise which will justify the allowance of bail after indictment found; as where the trial of the prisoner is unreasonably delayed, or where the trial is postponed from term to term, even upon sufficient reasons. So where any event has happened postponing indefinitely the further prosecution of the ac-that the accused killed deceased in an altercation provoked and brought on by the deceased, held, that the accused was entitled to be let to bail. Ex parte Allen, 2 S. West'n Repr. (Tex.) 588.

Although the grand jury fails to indict, the accused is not of right entitled to bail, as a new bill may be brought against him. Fitch v. State, 2 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 558. See Fleece v. State, 25 Ind. 384.

Murder in the second degree is not a bailable offence. Ex parte Colter, 35 Ind. 109.

Where the charge is assault and battery only, bail cannot be refused, although the person assaulted is in danger of death. Dunlap v. Bartlett, 10 Gray (Mass.), 282. Compare Ex p. Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39

Bail being improperly refused, and the right to it being declared on review, additional evidence cannot be adduced by the prosecution, but the only open question is as to the amount of bail. Ex parte Hammock, 78 Ala. 414.

1. Ex parte Jones, 55 Ind. 176; Ex parte Randon. 12 Tex. App. 145; Ex parte McGlawn, 75 Ala. 38; Ex parte Rhear, 77 Ala. 92; Ex parte Hammock, 78 Ala. 414; People v. Van Horne, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 158.

The presumption of guilt, created by the indictment, precludes further inquiry into the merits of the prisoner's defence on application for bail. State v. Brewster, 35 La. Ann. 605. Compare Com. v. Rutherford, 5 Rand. (Va.) 646; Ex parte Tayloe. 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39.

The applicant must show that, though held to answer a charge of a capital offence, the proof is not evident. In this the prisoner must take the initiative. . . . The question whether he is guilty of murder in the first degree, and therefore not bailable should be determined without reference to whether the evidence was introduced by the applicant or by the State, and without reference to the prima-facie case which would, in the absence of proof, be made by the production of a capias and a valid indictment. Church on Habeas Corpus, § 404.

One duly committed upon a regular indictment for murder cannot be discharged upon habeas corpus by proving his innocence merely, however clear the proof may be; but must abide a trial by jury. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 377.

In Ex parte Vaughan, 44 Ala. 417, the court said: "On an application for bail by a prisoner who is shown to be under indictment for murder, he is presumed to be guilty of the charge in the highest degree, and that presumption must be overcome by proof."

If the evidence is conflicting, bail should be refused. Ex parte Beacom, 12 Tex. App. 318.

A prisoner charged with a capital felony, being entitled to bail as a matter of right, before conviction, except "when the proof is evident or the presumption great," should not be refused bail when the evidence against him is entirely circumstantial, unless it excludes to a moral certainty every reasonable hypothesis but that of his guilt. Ex parte Acree, 63 Ala. 234.

tion; as the repeal of the statute giving the jurisdiction to try the indictment (where such jurisdiction depends on statute) without provision for its transfer to any other tribunal. So where the law creating the offence charged has been repealed without a reservation of the penalty for past offences.[1]

1. People v. Tinder, 19 Cal. 539; Zembrod v. State, 25 Tex. 519; Ex parte Randon, 12 Tex. App. 146; Ex parte Mosby, 31 Tex. 566; Ex parte White, 9 Ark. 222; Ex parte Vaughan, 44 Ala. 417; Ex parte Bryant, 34 Ala. 270; Ex parte Carroll, 36 Ala. 300; Ex parte Croom, 19 Ala. 561; Ex parte Bridewell, 57 Miss. 39; Ex parte Floyd, 60 Miss. 913; Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1; Ex parte Wray, 30 Miss. 673; State v. Wicks, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 139; State v. Abbott, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 244; Lynch v. People, 38 Ill. 494; State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139; Ex parte Heffren, 27 Ind. 87; Lumm v. State, 3 Ind. 293; State v. Hill, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 89; State v. Hill, 1 Const. R. (S. Car.) 242; Com. v. Lemley, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 362; State v. McNab, 20 N. H. 160; People v. Van Horne, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 158; People v. Cole, 6 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 695; People v. Hyler, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 70; People v. Perry, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 27. Compare People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 377; s. c., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 483, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

The petitioner was indicted for murder, and the evidence showed that the death resulted from certain acts of the petitioner done with intent to procure an abortion, but there was no evidence to show actual intent to kill. Held, that the petitioner should be admitted to bail. Ex parte Wolff, 57 Cal. 94.

In Lumm v. State, 3 Ind. 293, it was held that after indictment the prisoner would be allowed bail upon his showing that he was guilty of a bailable offence, or upon his showing that the proof was not evident, or the presumption strong that he was guilty of a non-bailable offence. Ex parte Wray, 30 Miss. 673; State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139. See Ex parte Heffren, 27 Ind. 88.

In State v. Mills, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 420, the court said: "After indictment found, a defendant is presumed guilty for most, if not all, purposes, except that of a fair and impartial trial before a jury. This presumption is so strong that in a capital felony the party cannot be let to bail."

In Lynch v. People, 38 Ill. 494, it was held that the mere fact that a grand jury has found an indictment for murder does not preclude an inquiry into the facts of the case to ascertain whether the offence may not be of such a grade as to entitle the prisoner to bail. The application in such case may be made upon motion in term time, or by habeas corpus in term time or vacation.

A prisoner under an indictment for murder cannot be admitted to bail under the writ of habeas corpus, as the provisions of the act regulating the same, so far as it provides for the hearing of original testimony concerning the detention, contemplates cases where no indictment has been found. Hight v. U. S., Morris (Iowa), 407; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 111; People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 377; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 328.

In Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1, the court held that as regards all intermediate proceedings between indictment and trial, the indictment furnishes the strongest possible presumption of guilt.

In People v. Shattuck, 6 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 33, the court held that it would not look beyond the minutes of the grand jury; and if it there appears that the case was properly considered, bail would be refused.

Mere inability of the court to try the case promptly is not ground for granting bail. State v. Roger, 7 La. Ann. 382. See Ex parte Chaney, 8 Ala. 424.

Depositions taken before the committing magistrate cannot be looked into. People v. Dixon, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 651.

If it appears that the prisoner will probably be deemed insane, he is entitled to bail in cases of homicide. Zembrod v. State, 25 Tex. 519.

Evidence may be heard to show that an indictment for murder was procured by malice or mistake. State v. Hill, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 89.

Where the evidence shows that the killing was not premeditated, and was the result of a sudden affray, bail may be taken. Ex parte Hock, 68 Ind. 206.

The court will not act on ex-parte affidavits taken by an unauthorized person. State v. Drew, 1 Taylor (N. Car.), 142.

Proof is evident if the evidence would suffice to sustain a verdict against the appellant of murder in the first degree. If the evidence is of less efficacy the proof is not "evident," and bail should be allowed. Ex parte Beacom,

5. After Conviction.—Admission to bail pending an appeal, after conviction of felony, is a matter of discretion merely; and in gen-

12 Tex. App. 318; Ex parte Foster, 5 Tex. App. 625; Com. v. Keeper of Prison, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 227; State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139; Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1.

In Ex parte Floyd, 60 Miss. 913, the court said: "On hearing this application, seven of the witnesses, whose names are marked on the indictment, and two others said by the counsel for the State to be important and whose names are not on the indictment, and five others, were examined as witnesses for the State, and not a single circumstance criminating the appellant was disclosed. The names of nineteen witnesses are indorsed upon the indictment, and as seven of them and seven others failed to testify to anything inculpating the appellant, the chancellor should have admitted him to bail, or, if he was led to believe that there was other testimony procurable and important in the investigation, he should have postponed the further hearing of the matter until it could be had. There is nothing to suggest that witnesses not in attendance have any knowledge of the case not possessed by those examined, and, if not, the sooner the prosecution is abandoned the better."

Burden of Proof.—An indictment for murder implies prima facie that the accused has no right to bail, and the burden is upon him to show that the proof of his guilt is not evident, and that the presumption of his guilt is not strong. Ex parte Kendall, 100 Ind. 599; Ex parte Jones, 55 Ind. 176; Ex parte Scoggin, 6 Tex. App. 546; Ex parte Randon, 12 Tex. App. 145; Ex parte Vaughan, 44 Ala. 417.

Sickness.—Slight or even considerable sickness is not sufficient. There must be strong grounds for apprehending a fatal result or a permanent impairment of health. Ex parte Pattison, 56 Miss. 161; Com. v. Semmes, 11 Leigh (Va.), 665; Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 192; Harvey of Comb's Case, 10 Mod. 334; Kirk's Case, 5 Mod. 454. Compare Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 192; People v. Cole, 6 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 695; Archer v. Commonwealth, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 705.

The ailment must be a present indisposition, arising from the confinement; a distemper incident to the family will not do. R. v. Wyndham, 1 Strange, 2; Lester v. State, 33 Ga. 192; U. S. v. Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. 224. In the last case the court said: "It is proved that the prisoners health is bad, his complaint pulmonary, and in the physician's opinion confinement during the summer might so far increase the disorder as to render it ultimately dangerous. It is not necessary in our view of the subject that the danger which may arise from his confinement should be either immediate or certain. If in the opinion of a skilful physician the nature of his disorder is such that confinement must be injurious and may be fatal, we think he ought to be bailed." See Com. v. Archer, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 705; Com. v. Semmes, 11 Leigh (Va.), 665; Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1; Ex parte Pattison, 56 Miss. 161; Ex parte Bridewell, 57 Miss. 39; People v. Cole, 6 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 695.

What facts make out a case under the Texas Code determined. Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 6.

Failure to Try.—If the prisoner is not promptly tried he is entitled to bail, unless the prosecution offers good reasons, such as the failure to procure the attendance of witnesses, or he assents to the postponement. Ex parte Simonton, 9 Port. (Ala.) 390; Ex parte Chaney, 8 Ala. 424; Ex parte Stiff, 18 Ala. 464; Ex parte Croom, 19 Ala. 561; State v. Buyck, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 563; Logan v. State, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 415. See State v. Abbott, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 244.

A single disagreement of the jury in a case of murder does not entitle the prisoner to bail. Webb v. State, 4 Tex. App. 167; Ex parte Cole, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 280; State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139; Ex parte Pattison, 56 Miss. 161. See People v. Tinder, 19 Cal. 539; Ex parte McLaughlin, 41 Cal. 211; People v. Cole, 6 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 695.

The failure to convict on one indictment where two were found does not entitle the prisoner to bail. Com. v. Summerfield, 2 Rob. (Va.) 767. Compare Green v. Com. 11 Leigh, (Va.) 67-.

After Trial and Failure to Convict.—A was tried twice for murder, but the jury disagreed in each trial. Subsequently the jail wherein he was confined was broken and other prisoners escaped, but A refused to go. Held, a proper case for allowing the privilege of bail. Petition of Alexander, 59 Mo. 598; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 393.

In People v. Perry, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 27, it was held that where the prisoner was tried twice for murder and the jury in each case disagreed, it was a proper case for exercising the power to bail. See State v. Summons, 19 Ohio, 139; In re Alexander, 59 Mo. 599.

eral should not be allowed, except where circumstances of an extraordinary character have intervened.[1]

1. Davis v. State, 6 How. (Miss.) 399; Ex parte Dyson, 25 Miss. 356; Lumm v. State, 3 Ind. 293; People v. Lohman, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 450; People v. Folmsbee, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 480; People v. Bowe, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 393; State v. Satterwhite, 20 S. Car. 536; State v. Connor, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 34; State v. Frink, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 168; State v. Ward, 2 Hawks (N. Car.), 443; State v. Rutherford, 1 Hawks (N. Car.), 453; State v. Daniel, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 21; Miller v. State, 15 Fla. 575; Ex parte Dyson, 25 Miss. 356; Corbett v. State, 24 Ga. 391; Ex parte Ezell, 40 Tex. 451; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 32; Ex parte Voll, 41 Cal. 29; Ex parte Smallman, 54 Cal. 35; Ex parte Marks, 49 Cal. 681; Ex parte Hoge, 48 Cal. 3; People v. Perdue, 48 Cal. 552; Ex parte Brown, 9 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 829. See Ex parte Longworth, 7 La. Ann. 247; R. v. Reader, 1 Strange, 531; R. v. Saltash, 2 Shower, 93. Compare Warnock v. State, 6 Tex. App. 450; State v. Connor, 2 Bay (S. Car.). 34; Ex parte Longworth, 7 La. Ann. 247; Governor v. Fay, 8 La Ann. 490; Davis v. State, 6 How. (Miss.) 399.

In People v. Lohman, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 454, the court said: "On a question of bail, before indictment, the magistrate may inquire as to the guilt of the prisoner. After indictment he may, in cases not capital, look at the evidence upon which it was obtained. But at each step of the proceeding, the grounds upon which the prisoner can be let to bail diminish as the evidences of his guilt increase, because bail is not based on the grace or favor of the court, but solely on the doubt which may exist as to his guilt. After conviction and sentence his claims to be let to bail are further diminished; but, as he may still be innocent, as he may have something to urge against the legality of his sentence, he may apply to be bailed, and if it appear that his conviction was unjust, or there is a serious doubt of his guilt, his appplication may be granted. . . . But, at this stage of the proceeding, the legal doubts concerning the guilt of the prisoner ought to be considered as so well settled against him that the application for bail, if made to a judge at chambers, should be very cautiously entertained, and only granted in cases of great question and difficulty." State v. Daniel, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 21; State v. Ward, 2 Hawks (N. Car.). 443; State v. Connor, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 34; State v. Hill, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 89; Corbett v. State, 24 Ga. 391; Ex parte Dyson, 25 Miss. 356; Davis v. State, 6 How. (Miss.) 399; Ex parte Hoge, 48 Cal. 3; People v. Perdue, 48 Cal. 552.

Application for bail after conviction and pending appeal must be made in first instance to the judge who tried the case. People v. January, 11 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 326.

A territorial statute which authorizes an appeal by a defendant in a criminal action from a final judgment of conviction; which provides that an appeal shall stay execution upon filing with the clerk a certificate of a judge that in his opinion there is probable cause for the appeal; and further provides that after conviction a defendant who has appealed may be admitted to bail as of right when the judgment is for the payment of a fine only, and as matter of discretion in other cases,—does not confer upon a defendant convicted and sentenced to pay a fine and be imprisoned the right, after appeal and filing of certificate of probable cause, to be admitted to bail except within the discretion of the court. Clawson v. U. S., 113 U. S. 143.

Where the appeal is not frivolous, and is taken in good faith, bail ought to be allowed. Ex parte Hoge, 48 Cal. 3; People v. Perdue, 48 Cal. 552.

A prisoner will not be admitted to bail pending a writ of error to reverse a judgment of conviction for larceny unless it is very clear there can be no conviction upon another trial. Bennett v. People, 94 Ill. 581. Compare State v. Levy, 24 Minn. 362.

Where, on an indictment for murder, the defendant has been convicted of manslaughter, and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, it is error to release him on bail pending his appeal, on the grounds that he had a crop which needed his attention, and that he would be ruined financially by being confined, and that his wife was frail and delicate. Hill v. State, 1 Southn. Repr. (Miss.) 494.

In a criminal case "except for capital offences where the proof is evident or the presumption great" (Const. art. 1, § 9), after a verdict of guilty and before sentence, the court may, in its discretion, take a recognizance for the appearance of the prisoner to abide the judgment of the court. Hampton v. State, 42 Ohio St. 401.

After Sentence or Commitment.—The prisoner cannot ordinarily be bailed; for then punishment itself would fail, as in a case of commitment for contempt. And

6. Examination of Evidence.—After indictment found, the facts as to probable guilt may be inquired into on an application for bail.[1]

In cases previous to indictment the court will look into the deposition before the magistrate or coroner; and though the commitment be full and in due form, yet if the testimony proves no crime, the court will discharge on bail; and though the commitment be defective, yet if the depositions contain evidence of an offence not bailable, the prisoner will be remanded.[2]

7. Amount.—The national and the state constitutions provide that unreasonable bail shall not be required. But what is reasonable is necessarily left to the discretion of the officer who is empowered to fix it.[3] In fixing the amount of bail the pecuniary the common-law doctrine seems to be that after the prisoner is committed in execution of the sentence he cannot have bail pending proceedings to have the sentence reversed. But in cases not capital, prisoners may now be allowed bail in England, under recent statutes, when they are taking such proceedings as in justice demand the acceptance of bail in the mean time. This is also the law in many of the States. Church on Hab. Cor. § 419; 1 Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d ed.) § 254; Corbett v. State, 24 Ga. 391; Ex parte Percy, 2 Daly (N. Y.). 530; People v. Lohman, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 450; People v. Folmsbee, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 480; Miller v. State, 15 Fla. 575.

1. 1 Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 257; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; Com. v. Rutherford, 5 Rand. (Va.) 646; Lumm v. State, 3 Ind. 293; Lynch v. People, 38 Ill. 494; Ex parte Bramer, 37 Tex. 1; Street v. State, 43 Miss. 1.

2. 1 Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 257; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; People v. Lohman, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 454. See In re Troia, 64 Cal. 152. Compare Dunlap v. Bartlett, 10 Gray (Mass.), 282.

Before indictment the right of inquiry as to guilt or innocence is limited to the depositions or proofs on which the commitment was ordered. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 377.

3. 4 Cooley's Black. Com. 298, note; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; People v. Dixon, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 651; Smith v. Trawl, 1 Root (Conn.), 165; Ex parte Bryant, 34 Ala. 270; State v. Ward, 2 Hawks (N. Car.), 443; State v. Hill, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 398; Ex parte Ryan, 44 Cal. 555; In re Perry, 19 Wis. 676.

The provision in the U. S. Constitution is not binding on the States. Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.), 482.

Bail should not be fixed at a sum so large as purposely to prevent giving bail. U. S. v. Lawrence, 4 Cranch C. C. 518.

In fixing the amount of bail, the sole purpose which should guide the court or judge should be to cause the appearance of the accused to answer the charge against him. Ex parte Duncan, 54 Cal. 75.

Upon an application of a prisoner, after commitment upon a writ of habeas corpus, for reduction of bail, the court or judge before whom he is brought is not authorized to interfere unless the bail demanded is per se unreasonably great, and clearly disproportionate to the offence charged. A mere difference of opinion between the court or the judge and the committing magistrate or court is not sufficient to justify such interference. Ex parte Duncan, 54 Cal. 75.

An order may be made in advance fixing the amount of bail in all of a particular class of cases at a uniform sum, subject to modification in any case where the exercise of a discriminating judgment is by some means specially invoked, or some question is made upon the alleged injustice of its operation. Carmody v. State, 105 Ind. 547.

The authorities generally hold that if the accused has property obtained by the commission of the crime, the bail should be for a larger amount than the value of such property; otherwise the offender might make the crime itself an instrument for escape. This is rather indicating the minimum amount of bail to be required than determining that an amount greater than the value of the property obtained would be excessive in the sense forbidden by the constitution. It is said for the prisoner that at the time of the indictment the value of the forged stock was $29,860, and its present value $31,700, and that $113,000, the bail demanded, is therefore disproportionate to the sum taken by the prisoner. But if the inquiry is to be gone into in detail, it does not distinctly appear by the petition what was the sum involved in the indictment for grand larceny, nor what sum, if any, was circumstances of the defendant should be considered.[1] The test to be adopted by the court is the probability of the accused ap-

realized by the prisoner by reason of the making of false returns as an officer of the Pioneer Land and Loan Association. Besides, it was suggested at the argument upon the part of the people that, in some way, $1,200,000 of the money of the depositors of the association had disappeared through the criminal mismanagement of the prisoner. Ex parte Duncan, 54 Cal. 75.

Prima facie, the sum of $500 is not an unreasonable or excessive amount to require as bail upon a charge of felony. Ex parte Hutchings, 11 Tex. App. 28.

Nor $10,000 under indictment for murder. McConnell v. State, 13 Tex. App. 390.

Nor $112,000 for ten distinct felonies, where the accused was charged as having secured that sum. Ex parte Duncan, 53 Cal. 410.

Nor $2000 for perjury. Evans v. Foster, 1 N. H. 374.

Nor $25,000 for embezzling $70,000. Ex parte Snow, 1 R. I. 360.

Nor $15,000 for attempt to kill. Ex parte Ryan, 44 Cal. 555.

A justice admitted to bail a person accused of an offence punishable by confinement in the penitentiary in a sum less than $500, contrary to statute. Held, the recognizance so taken was void. State v. McCown, 24 W. Va. 625.

In Waugh v. People, 17 Ill. 561, the circuit court made an order fixing the amount of bail to be taken by the sheriff at $100: and he admitted the accused to bail in the sum of $200. The appellate court held this recognizance as absolutely void and as not binding on the security. The court said: "The sheriff was ordered to take bail in the sum of $100, and this was his only authority for taking bail in any amount. This is no more authority for him to require bail in the sum of $200 than it was to require him to leave his right hand in pledge for his appearance at court. The sheriff was bound to pursue his authority strictly, and when he departed from it he acted without authority, and the recognizance was as void as if he had no authority whatever to require bail."

In State v. Buffum, 22 N. H. 267, it was decided: "Upon a complaint for stealing, a prisoner was ordered by a magistrate to recognize for his appearance at the court of common pleas in the sum of $400, with two securities in the sum of $200 each. He recognized in the sum of $400 with ten securities in the sum of $40 each. Upon scire facias it was held that the order of the magistrate was not complied with, and that the securities were not bound." The court said: "The securities are liable, in any case, only upon the ground that they have entered into a recognizance ordered by a tribunal having authority to act in the premises. . . . They have not recognized according to the order, and compliance with the order is the only ground upon which the validity of the recognizance can be placed." This cause was decided on a demurrer to the scire facias; the facts rendering invalid the recognizance appearing on its face.

Reduction of Bail.—Mitigation of unreasonable bail may be obtained by simple application to the court. Bunting v. Brown, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 425; Beldens v. Cromelines, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 107.

Or by habeas corpus. Evans v. Foster, 1 N. H. 374.

The judge of the district to whom application is made for a warrant of removal to another district for trial may, under sec. 1014 of the U. S. Rev. Stats., review, without a writ of habeas corpus, the action of the committing magistrate, and reduce the bail required by him, if it shall appear to be excessive. U. S. v. Brawner, 7 Fed. Repr. 86.

In California and Texas no appeal can be had from the ruling of the judge fixing the amount of bail. People v. Schuster, 40 Cal. 627; Miller v. State, 43 Tex. 579.

1. Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 89; U. S. v. Lawrence, 4 Cranch C. C. 518.

Whether excessive in fact depends largely upon the pecuniary condition of the accused. A sum which would be trivial to a wealthy man might be oppressive to a poor one. To authorize an appellate court to reduce an ostensibly reasonable amount of bail fixed by the court below, the pecuniary circumstances and ability of the applicant should be shown in the record. Ex parte Hutchings, 11 Tex. App. 28.

It is substantially a denial of bail, and a violation of the constitutional guaranty against excessive bail, to require a larger sum than, from his circumstances, the prisoner can be reasonably expected to give. U. S. v. Brawner, 7 Fed. Repr. 86.

When under all the circumstances of the case it clearly appears from the evidence that the defendant is unable to give such bail as the court believes sufficient to insure his appearance, the court will not merely for the sake of the reducpearing to stand his trial. This probability is to be tested in part by the strength of the evidence against the defendant, in part by the nature of the crime charged, and by the severity of the punishment which may be imposed, and in part by the character and means of the defendant.[1]

If unreasonable bail is required, the magistrate or judge is liable to indictment or impeachment.[2]

8. Deposit of Money.—Money in lieu of bail is not to be taken,[3] unless authorized by statute. Where, in lieu of bail in a criminal action, money is deposited as authorized by statute, it is for the purposes of the action to be considered as the money of the defendant; and although it was in fact furnished by a third person, it may be applied in payment of any fine imposed upon the defendant.[4] Where money is deposited as bail, and default made, the court may treat the money as if it had been recovered upon a recognizance taken for the appearance of the prisoner.[5]

9. Character of Persons offered as Bail.—Where the crime charged is bailable, bail, if otherwise sufficient, ought not to be refused on account of the personal character or opinions of the party proposed.[6]

10. Validity.—A recognizance or bond must be taken before an officer duly authorized, and in its form and attending formalities it must fill the requirements of the statutes and unwritten law of the particular State or it will be void.[7] A bail bond, to be substantially in accordance with the statute of 23 Hen. VI. ch. 9, must be made to the sheriff in the name of his office, and not personally; and the condition must be for the appearance of the defendant at the return of the writ, and for that only. It must be sealed, and it is essential that it be executed after the condition has been filled up; it must include all the obligations imposed, and allow all the defences given by the statute; and it will not be void for a misnomer of the plaintiff, if there is a sufficient description by which he may be known.[8]

tion reduce the bail. People v. Town, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 19.

1. Whart. Cr. Pl. & Pr. (8th Ed.) § 76; People v. Cunningham, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 531; People v. Dixon, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 651; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 39.

2. Evans v. Foster, 1 N. H. 374.

3. U. S. v. Faw, 1 Cranch C. C. 486; State v. Lazarre, 12 La. Ann. 166. See Morrow v. State, 6 Kan. 222; Wash v. State, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 91; Dean v. Commonwealth, 1 Bush (Ky.), 20.

Unless authorized by statute, a sheriff cannot receive money for bail. Smart v. Cason, 50 Ill. 195.

4. People v. Laidlaw, 102 N. Y. 588.

5. Rock Island County v. Mercer County, 24 Ill. 35.

Where money is deposited, a recognizance in form cannot be exacted. Morrow v. State, 6 Kan. 222; Wash v. State, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 91.

6. R. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. 468; s. c., 1 Benn. & H. Cr. Cas. 236.

7. 1 Bish. Cr. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 264, and cases cited.

8. Murfree on Sheriffs, § 184.

A parol recognizance has no validity. 67 Ill. 278.

Informalities in a recognizance are immaterial after a party appears and has answered. Bookhout v. State, 28 N. W. Repr. (Wis.) 180.

Where a person accused of a crime is an infant, or a married woman, or is sick, or in jail, and therefore absent, a recognizance may be taken from a surety alone, without joining the accused. Schultze v. State, 43 Md. 295.

Some judgment should be entered, or memorandum made in writing, signed by the magistrate or justices, showing that an examining court was held, and that the defendant was admitted to bail. Morgan v. Commonwealth, 12 Bush (Ky.), 841.

The fact that persons offered as bail have received transfers of property without consideration, from friends of the defendant, to enable them to qualify, is not an objection to them. People v. Ingersoll, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 23.

An infant is not liable on a recognizance when he signs as surety for another, unless he ratify and confirm it after attaining his majority, whether a recognizance be regarded as in the nature of a judgment or not. State v. Satterwhite, 20 S. Car. 536.

But an infant may be bound upon a recognizance when given to procure his own release. State v. Weatherwax, 12 Kan. 463; Weatherwax v. State, 17 Kan. 427; McCall v. Parker, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 372.

While it is the duty of the magistrate in all cases to strictly pursue the statute, it is by no means indispensable to the validity of a recognizance that the language of the act should be literally followed. If the time and place of appearance be shown with reasonable certainty, the statute in those particulars is complied with, and slight omissions and inaccuracies will not, ordinarily, affect the validity of the recognizance. Proseck v. State, 38 Ohio St. 606; Kellogg v. State, 43 Miss. 57; Dean v. State, 2 S. & M. (Miss.) 200; Mooney v. People, 81 Ill. 134; Brite v. State, 24 Tex. 219; Pickett v. State, 16 Tex. App. 648; State v. Bradley, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 83; Com. v. Emery, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 431; State v. Wellman, 3 Ohio, 14; Williamson v. Hall, 1 Ohio St. 190; s. c., 9 Ohio St. 24; Clark v. Petty, 29 Ohio St. 452; R. v. Hodgson, Dears. 14; s. c., 7 Ex. 915.

If a condition prescribed by statute is omitted in the recognizance it is void, although the surety is benefited. Alexander v. Bates, 33 Ga. 125; State v. McCown, 24 W. Va. 625. Compare State v. Benton, 48 N. H. 551.

If conditions are inserted in the recognizance not authorized by statute, thus making it more burdensome, it is invalid. Turner v. State, 14 Tex. App. 168; Loyd v. McTeer, 33 Ga. 37. Compare State v. Edgerton, 12 R. I. 104.

If the recognizance is not authorized by law, or if the court had no authority to take it, it is void. Nicholson v. State, 2 Ga. 363; Keppler v. State, 14 Tex. App. 173; Cassaday v. State, 4 Tex. App. 96; Phelps v. Parks, 4 Vt. 488. See p. , note .

The recognizance may be either to appear and answer the particular charge set forth, or to appear and answer what shall be objected against the party. People v. Koeber, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 39.

A recognizance should state the ground on which it is taken, and show a case in which the court or magistrate was authorized to take bail. State v. Smith, 2 Me. 62; People v. Koeber, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 39; People v. Kane, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 531; Com. v. Downey, 9 Mass. 520; Com. v. Loveridge 11 Mass. 337; Com. v. Daggett, 16 Mass. 447; Com. v. Gordon, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 193; Com. v. McNeill, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 127; Kerns v. Schoonmaker, 4 Ohio, 331; Nicholson v. State, 2 Ga. 363; Com. v. West, 1 Dana (Ky.), 165; Simpson v. Commonwealth, 1 Dana (Ky.), 523. Compare Champlain v. People, 2 N. Y. 82.

If the offence is not made a crime by law, the recognizance is void. Montgomery v. State, 33 Tex. 179; Stroud v. State, 33 Tex. 650; Moore v. State, 34 Tex. 138; State v. Hotchkiss, 30 Tex. 162; Davis v. State, 30 Tex. 352.

The offence should be mentioned. People v. Rundle, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 506; Kerns v. Schoonmaker, 4 Ohio, 331; Goodwin v. Governor, 1 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 465; Simpson v. Commonwealth, 1 Dana (Ky.), 523; Com. v. West, 1 Dana (Ky.), 165; State v. Gibson, 23 La. Ann. 698; State v. Brown, 34 Tex. 146; Goldthwaite v. State, 32 Tex. 599; Stroud v. State, 33 Tex. 650; Patton v. State, 35 Tex. 92; Horton v. State, 30 Tex. 191; Payne v. State, 30 Tex. 397; Tierney v. State, 31 Tex. 40. Compare Gildersleeve v. People, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 35; People v. Freeman, 20 Mich. 413; State v. Nicol, 30 La. Ann. pt. 1, 628.

It is not necessary in a criminal recognizance to describe the offence in detail, or to state facts in detail sufficient to show that a public offence was committed. All that is necessary is that the recognizance should either state or show that the defendant was charged with the commission of a public offence. Tillson v. State, 29 Kan. 452; State v. Randolph, 22 Mo. 474; State v. Rye, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 386; State v. Merrihew, 47 Iowa, 112; State v. Marshall, 21 Iowa, 143; State v. Brown, 34 Tex. 179; Tierney v. State, 31 Tex. 40; Vanwey v. State, 44 Tex. 112; State v. Tennant, 30 La. Ann. pt. 2, 852; U. S. v. Dennis, 1

Bond (U. S.). 103. Compare State v. Gibson, 23 La. Ann. 698; Com. v. West, 1 Dana (Ky.), 165.

If the name of the offence is indorsed upon the recognizance it is sufficient, although not named in the instrument. Tillson v. State, 29 Kan. 424.

Where the crime is recited as "for the offence of being a common gambler," it is sufficiently described. Chase v. People, 2 Colo. 528.

The offence should be so described as to be capable of being identified with the one named in the indictment. Vanwey v. State, 44 Tex. 112.

The offence named in the recognizance may be of a lower grade than that named in the indictment. State v. Tennant, 30 La. Ann. pt. 2, 852.

It is not sufficient that a bail bond named some offence known to the laws of the State. The offence named in it must be the offense of which the principal obligor stands charged. If it names a different one, the sureties may avail themselves of the variance. Smalley v. State, 3 Tex. App. 202, and authorities cited; McAdams v. State, 10 Tex. App. 317; Keppler v. State, 14 Tex. App. 168; Addison v. State, 14 Tex. App. 568; State v. Hotchkiss, 30 Tex. 162; Barrera v. State, 32 Tex. 644; Moore v. State, 34 Tex. 138; Duke v. State, 35 Tex. 424; State v. Rogers, 36 Mo. 138; Foster v. State, 27 Tex. 236; Gray v. State, 43 Ala. 41.

If the offence charged is not specifically named in the statutes, the recognizance must set out all its statutory ingredients. Morris v. State, 4 Tex. App. 554.

The degree of the crime need not be stated. Thompson v. State, 31 Tex. 166; State v. Tennant, 30 La. Ann. pt. 2, 852.

Where the statute defined the offence as "knowingly" passing, as true, a forged instrument, a recognizance which recites the crime to be "passing a forged instrument of writing" is invalid. Stancel v. State, 6 Tex. App. 460.

If the offence charged is substantially, although not technically, set forth, the recognizance is valid. People v. Blankman, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 252; Browder v. State, 9 Ala. 58; Hall v. State, 9 Ala. 827; State v. Weaver, 18 Ala. 293; Cotton v. State, 7 Tex. 547; Thompson v. State, 31 Tex. 40; Goldwaite v. State, 32 Tex. 599; Barrera v. State, 32 Tex. 644; State v. Hotchkiss, 30 Tex. 162; Fowler v. Commonwealth, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 120; Wood v. People, 16 Ill. 171; Besimer v. People, 15 Ill. 439; State v. Marshall, 21 Iowa, 143; Daniels v. People, 6 Mich. 381; Hampton v. Brown, 32 Ga. 251; State v. Loeb, 21 La Ann. 599; Dillingham v. U. S., 2 Wash. C. C. 422; U.S. v. Dennis, 1 Bond (U. S.), 103. Compare Bailey v. State, 4 Tex. 417.

The recognizance need not contain every condition provided in the statute to be valid. It is good for the conditions found in the statute that are also embodied in the recognizance. Gallagher v. People, 91 Ill. 590.

Where no form is prescribed by statute it is not material what language is used, so that it appears that the officer took and accepted the recognizance for the purposes contemplated. Lawrence v. People, 17 Ill. 172.

A penalty and a condition are indispensable to constitute a recognizance. Caldwell v. Brindle, 11 Pa. St. 293.

A recognizance which states that the charge was preferred by a justice is invalid. Murphy v. State, 17 Tex. App. 100.

Where two persons are jointly accused and brought before a magistrate, bail should be taken of each for his individual appearance. Ferry v. Burchard, 21 Conn. 597.

A provision in a statute that "any officer authorized to execute a warrant in a criminal action may take the recognizance and approve the bail" does not confer upon a constable authority to take a recognizance in cases where there is no judicial order fixing the amount or directing that bail may be taken. State v. Wininger, 81 Ind. 51.

Where a party was arrested by the sheriff outside of his jurisdiction, a recognizance taken upon such arrest is void. Blevins v. State, 31 Ark. 53.

A justice of the peace has no authority to decline to try a misdemeanor, and bind the accused over to the circuit court for trial; and a bail bond taken by him in such case is void. Thomm v. State, 35 Ark. 327.

If the defendant is illegally arrested, bail given for his release is void. Brown v Way, 33 Ga. 190; Pauer v. Simon, 6 Bush (Ky.), 514.

A recognizance on an appeal from a justice's court cannot be said to have been given voluntarily when the judgment is void. People v. Carroll, 44 Mich. 371.

A recognizance is not invalid because one of the sureties is a married woman. Pickett v. State, 16 Tex. App. 648. See Mills v. Rodewald, 17 Hun (N. Y.), 297.

The fact that a bond was taken under

Gen. St. Ky. § 23, in open court, instead of before the judge in person, does not impair its obligatory force. Com. v. Wetzel, 2 S. Westn. Repr. (Ky.) 123.

Where the indictment is quashed the recognizance is void. State v. Lockhart, 24 Ga. 420.

A recognizance taken by an examining magistrate and signed by all the obligors is sufficient and will bind all, whether their names are entered in the body of the same or not, provided it complies with the law in other respects. Holmes v. State, 17 Neb. 73.

In such case the authority of a deputy to act for and in the name of the sheriff will be presumed. If in fact he had no authority to so act, it will constitute matter of defence. Carmody v. State, 105 Ind. 546.

A recognizance entered into and approved by the clerk of court, under the order of the judge, is in effect the taking of such recognizance by the judge himself, and is legal and binding. State v. Satterwhite, 20 S. Car. 536; Bodine v. Commonwealth, 24 Pa. St. 69.

Where there are two recognizances, one taken before and the other after the execution had been issued, only the first one, though defective, will be considered by the court; and parol evidence is admissible to prove that, after the sale on the execution, the defendant procured the magistrate to take and certify as a part of the record a new and enlarged recognizance. The recognizance must be taken before execution. Hill v. Warren, 54 Vt. 73.

A bond taken by the sheriff in a sum fixed by the court and made payable to the State, with condition to be void if the defendant make his personal appearance, etc., is valid as a recognizance. Where the defendant in such case failed to appear and judgment nisi was entered, and the sureties to the bond appeared in answer to a notice by sci. fa. and defended the action, held, that the judgment absolute rendered against them is not irregular. State v. Jones, 88 N. Car. 683.

The indorsement upon a bail bond of the approval of the officer taking it is not essential to its validity. Adler v. State, 35 Ark. 517.

When the offence of which the principal obligor is accused is named in the bail bond, and it appears therefrom that he is accused of an offence against the laws of this State, it is not necessary that the bond shall disclose the mode of the accusation—i.e., whether it is by indictment, information, or otherwise. McGee v. State, 11 Tex. App. 520.

It is no objection to a bond of recognizance when offered in evidence in a suit upon it, that it was written out, after the suit was brought by the clerk of the court who took it, from an entry made by him at the time on the docket of the court. Such a document is a record of the court and imports verity. It is also a complete record in itself, and not a part of the record of the judgment. And as it imports verity, evidence is not admissible on the part of the defendant, in a suit upon it, of a variance between the bond as extended and the original entry on the docket. It is enough that it was duly certified by the clerk of the court in which it was taken and was in the proper custody when it was produced at the trial. Bradley v. Vail, 48 Conn. 375.

Where several indictments are found for the same offence on the same day, it is not necessary that the recognizance in any one of them should specify to which one it refers. Devlin v. Court, 14 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 114.

A variance between the recognizance and the warrant of arrest will not invalidate it. State v. Rowe, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 17.

A criminal recognizance requiring a person who has been charged with the commission of a felony and held to bail by an examining magistrate to appear before the district court, on a day certain, to answer the charge preferred against him, is a sufficient compliance with the criminal code, if the date fixed in the recognizance for the appearance of the accused is in fact the first day of the next term of said court. Holmes v. State, 17 Neb. 73.

When one is convicted of a crime by a justice and appeals, and in default of security for his appeal is committed to jail, and is then bailed, but his recognizance is conditioned only for his appearance at court, and not that he would prosecute his appeal with effect, no action can be sustained on the recognizance, if the case has never been entered in the county court. State v. Miller, 58 Vt. 21.

Where the statute requires two sureties, and only one executes the recognizance, it is no defence. State v. Benton, 48 N. H. 551.

Return Day.—If no day is fixed for the appearance of the accused, the recognizance is void. State v. Casey, 27 Tex. 111. See Brite v. State, 24 Tex. 219; State v. Allen, 33 Ala. 422; Wheeler v. State, 21 Ga. 153; Henry v. Commonwealth, 4 Bush (Ky.), 427; Mooney v. People, 81 Ill. 134; Sheets v. People, 63 Ill. 78; State v. Bradley, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 83; People v. Carpenter, 7 Cal. 402.

If a wrong day is named for the defendant to appear, the recognizance is void. State v. Sullivan, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 281; Com. v. Bolton, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 328; Butler v. State, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 470; Thurston v. Commonwealth, 3 Dana (Ky.), 225. Compare Curry v. State, 39 Miss. 511.

When the Defendant is not in Legal Custody.—After the examining magistrate had adjudged upon a preliminary examination that an offence had been committed, that there was probable cause to believe the defendant guilty, and had fixed the amount of bail required of the defendant for his appearance at the trial court, without issuing a warrant of commitment or taking bail, upon the word of his father and with the consent of the constable, he permitted the defendant to go with his father, promising that he would release him upon his giving a good bond. Within five days thereafter the magistrate accepted and approved a bond signed by the father of the defendant and four other sureties, to the effect that the defendant would appear before the district court for trial for the offence alleged against him. Held, that the permission to the defendant to go with his father did not oust the justice of jurisdiction, or release the defendant; and the recognizance having been accepted and approved with the understanding of the parties that by reason thereof the accused was to be discharged, such bond is not invalid or void on the ground that the defendant was not legally in custody at the time it was given and accepted. State v. Terrell, 29 Kan. 563.

Amount—Being committed by a justice of the peace on a charge of bailable felony, the bail of the accused was fixed by the justice at $1000, but subsequently the State's counsel and the acccused agreed that the sheriff should release the accused on a bond for $500; which being executed by the present appellants, the accused was released. In defence to scire facias on the forfeiture of the bond the appellants contend that it was void because taken by the sheriff in a sum different from that fixed by the justice. But held that appellants are estopped. Such agreements, however, are highly reprehensible on the part of officials representing the State, and especially so on the part of the officer having the custody of the accused. Peters v. State, 10 Tex. App. 302.

The order for bail conditioned that it should be for $400, given by two sureties for $200 each. Held, that bail taken in two sureties for $40 each was contrary to the condition, and consequently invalid. State v. Buffum, 22 N. H. 267; U. S. v. Goldstein, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 413; Cooper v. Commonwealth, 13 Bush (Ky.), 654. Compare Com. v. Porter, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 44.

An order for bail fixed the amount at $100, but a recognizance was taken for $200. Held, that the recognizance was void. Waugh v. People, 17 Ill. 561; Neblett v. State, 6 Tex. App. 316.

Where a statute provided that bail should not be less than $500, and the prisoner was admitted to bail for a less sum, held, that the recognizance was void. State v. McCown, 24 W. Va. 625.

Where the sheriff, after an arrest had been made, under an order which specified, as prescribed by the Code of Procedure (§ 183), the sum for which defendant should be held to bail, and after declining to accept a bond executed by one instead of by two or more sufficient bail as prescribed by said Code (§ 187), did agree, at defendant's solicitation, to take to plaintiff's attorneys an undertaking executed by one in double the amount specified in the order, and if it should be approved and accepted by them that defendant should be discharged, the latter agreeing that if they should decline to accept he would, on being notified, give a new undertaking, as prescribed by the Code, and in the mean while should remain in the custody of his bail, and where said attorneys accepted the undertaking so executed,—held, that the undertaking, when thus accepted, might be regarded as an agreement made between the parties to the action, and not as an undertaking taken by the sheriff under claim or in the exercise of official authority; and that, so considered, it became operative and binding, though not as a statutory obligation. Toles v. Adee, 84 N. Y. 223.

Where the purported indictment was a presentation to a grand jury composed of thirteen persons, it was in fact no indictment at all, and conferred no jurisdiction upon the trial court, or its officers, to require a bail bond or recognizance of the defendant, and hence the recognizance and other proceedings based upon the purported indictment were void. Wells v. State, 2 S. Westn. Repr. (Tex.) 806.

Change of Terms.—The circuit courts of Illinois have the power to regulate the terms of court, and to set aside certain terms for civil and criminal business, respectively; and a scire facias requiring the accused and his surety to appear "on the first day of the then next term" must be taken to mean that they shall appear "at the first or next term" at which, under the law and rules of court, the accused could be lawfully tried. Petty v. People, 8 N. Eastn. Repr. (Ill.) 304.

Where the recognizance is for the next term of court, and the date of the term is changed, the bail will not be invalidated. Walker v. State, 6 Ala. 350.

"Term"—What Is.—The word "term" means the period of time prescribed by law during which the court is to be held, unless the business is sooner disposed of, and not the time during which the court may actually be in session. Ex parte Croom. 19 Ala. 561.

Adjournment—A postponement of the trial without the knowledge and consent of the sureties renders the recognizance void. Reese v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 13. Compare State v. Smith, 66 N. Car. 620.

An adjournment of the term, without a committal of the prisoner, or measures being taken to secure his appearance, releases his sureties. State v. Mackey, 55 Mo. 51.

Where one arrested on a charge of bastardy has given the bond for appearance, and after examination is begun the hearing is adjourned, his sureties are liable if he does not appear on the adjourned day. It seems that a different rule might apply when, before the commencement of the examination, a postponement to a later day is made. People v. Millham, 3 N. Eastn. Repr. (N. Y.) 196.

Where a statute requires that the time, place, and court when, where, and before which the defendant is bound to appear must be stated, a recognizance binding him to appear "at the next term of this court and there remain," etc., is invalid. Williamson v. State, 12 Tex. App. 169.

A statute of Missouri provided that a magistrate may adjourn the examination of a prisoner for a period not exceeding ten days at one time. At the request of a prisoner charged with violating the revenue law, a U.S. commissioner adjourned the examination for nineteen days, and took bail for his appearance at the end of that time. Held, that the recognizance was invalid. U. S. v. Horton, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 94.

The time of appearance is sufficiently specified when the recognizance requires the defendant to appear instanter. Fentress v. State, 16 Tex. App. 79.

A recognizance to appear upon a day on which no term of court can be legally held is invalid. Burnett v. State, 18 Tex. App. 283.

Description of the Court.—Where the condition of a recognizance is that the accused shall appear at a named time "before the criminal court" of a specified county, and, under the law, there is no such court, but the circuit court of the said county is alone vested with jurisdiction of the offence with which the accused is charged, there is a sufficient notification in the recognizance of the court at which the accused is bound to appear. Petty v. People, 8 N. Eastn. Repr. (Ill.) 304.

If the court at which the defendant is to appear is not stated in the recognizance, it is void. State v. Rye, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 386. Compare People v. Carpenter, 7 Cal. 402.

A mistake in the designation of the court invalidates the recognizance. Sherman v. State, 4 Kan. 570.

Where the defendant was recognized by a justice of the peace to appear at the next term of oyer and terminer, and a term of a court of sessions is held in the same county at a prior day, the recognizance is invalid. People v. Mack, 1 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 567.

A condition for the appearance of the prisoner before the court of common pleas, "on the first day of the next term thereof, to wit, on the 10th day of February, 1868," does not render the instrument invalid, although it was executed during the term of the court of common pleas which began October 15th and finally adjourned January 27th, 1868. Millikin v. State, 21 Ohio St. 635.

A recognizance cannot be made returnable before a judge at chambers; it must be returnable in court. Corlies v. Waddell, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 355.

A recognizance which binds the prisoner to appear at a term of court not authorized by law is invalid. Thomas v. State, 13 Tex. App. 496.

Sunday.—A recognizance taken on Sunday is valid. Watts v. Commonwealth, 5 Bush (Ky.), 309; Salter v. Smith, 55 Ga. 244; Johnson v. People, 31 Ill. 469; Hammons v. State, 59 Ala. 164; State v. Wyatt, 6 La. Ann. 701.

A recognizance taken on Sunday to prosecute an appeal in a criminal case is void. State v. Suhur, 33 Me. 539.

Bond Signed in Blank.—Where a bail bond is signed in blank and subsequently filled up, it is void. Com. v. Ball, 6 Bush (Ky.), 291. Compare Madden v. State, 10 Pac. Repr. (Kan.) 469.

In an action upon a forfeited recognizance the defendant, by a verified answer, averred that he signed the instrument when it was yet incomplete and what is commonly known as a "blank recognizance"—the blank spaces left therein for the name of the county, the offence charged, the amount in which the prisoner was held, and the court before which he was required to appear, being left unfilled—and that he attached his name to it upon the condition that another person should join him in signing the recognizance, and, when so signed, the blanks should be filled out by the co-surety, and the instrument delivered, and that, unless it was so executed, he was not to become liable thereon. He also alleged that the recognizance was not signed or completed by the other party, and therefore that he was not liable thereon. Held, that this answer was in substance and effect a denial that the recognizance sued on had been executed by him, and a verified reply by the plaintiff denying the allegations of the answer was unnecessary. Madden v. State, 10 Pac. Repr. (Kan.) 469.

Where several criminal recognizances were to be given, and the same surety agreed to sign all of them, and did so, some of them being filled out at the time, and some of them having the name of the obligee and the amount blank, and the surety instructed the sheriff to fill such blanks, knowing the amount and the obligee, and thereupon left, and the blanks were filled accordingly, the bond was not invalid, but was binding on the surety. Brown v. Colquitt, 73 Ga. 59.

Escrow.—A bail bond cannot be delivered as an escrow to the obligee. Brown v. State, 18 Tex. App. 326.

Seal.—Where a county judge, acting as an examining magistrate, requires the accused to enter into a recognizance for his appearance at the next term of the district court, and such recognizance is given with sureties which are approved by such county judge, the indorsement of such approval upon the recognizance is not required to be attested by the seal of the county judge. Holmes v. State, 17 Neb. 73; Kearns v. State, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 336; Grinestaff v. State, 53 Ind. 238; Slaten v People, 21 Ill. 28; Hall v. State, 9 Ala. 827; State v. Foot, 2 Mill (S. Car.), 123.

Execution—Signatures.—An acknowledgment signed and sealed by the accused and two others, at the foot of which the judge wrote the words "attested and approved," is not a recognizance, but is unauthorized and void. Where no discharge followed the taking of such a paper, although it was filed, and the judge, disregarding that acknowledgment, proceeded to take a recognizance in form, the latter was not invalidated by the mistake or inadvertence of the judge in taking and filing the former. State v. West, 3 Ohio St. 510.

Where the name of the surety is signed to the recognizance, the omission to mention it in the instrument will not render it invalid. Cunningham v. State, 14 Mo. 402; Hall v. State, 9 Ala. 827; Badger v. State, 5 Ala. 21. Compare U. S. v. Pickett, 1 Bond (U. S.), 123.

At common law it was never necessary for any person to sign the recognizance; and under the statutes it is necessary only for those to sign the recognizance who are to be bound thereby; and it is never necessary under the statutes for the accused to sign the recognizance, unless the statutes absolutely require the same to be done. Tillson v. State, 29 Kan. 452; Ingram v. State, 10 Kan. 630.

It is essential to the validity of a bail-bond that it be signed or executed by the principal himself or in his name by some one authorized by him. The facts that his attorney wrote out the bond, setting forth in the body of it his (the principal's) name, and procured sureties to sign and execute it, do not constitute a valid execution of the bond by the principal, notwithstanding he obtained his liberty by virtue of it. Price v. State, 12 Tex. App. 235.

The defendant Masterson, being arrested in pursuance of a complaint, and being brought before the justice, and being in legal custody, the case was continued; and thereupon the defendant Masterson was discharged upon the following recognizance, to wit: "The State of Kansas, Plaintiff, v. Philip Masterson, Defendant.—Before George M. Everline, Justice of the Peace of Monroe Township, Anderson County, Kansas.—Whereas, the above-entitled action is this 29th day of July, 1881, continued to the 6th day of August, 1881, now, therefore, I, the undersigned, bind myself to the State of Kansas in the sum of three hundred dollars for the appearance of the said Philip Masterson, defendant, before the above-named justice of the peace, on said last-named date, at 9 o'clock A.M., for examination in said cause. William S. Tillson.—Approved by me, this 29th day of July, 1881. George M. Everline, J. P." This recognizance contained the following, among other indorsements: "Assault with intent to commit rape." Held, that the recognizance is not void as to Tillson, because the defendant Masterson did not himself sign the recognizance. Tillson v State, 29 Kan. 454.

A recognizance executed by the sureties alone, and giving only the initials of the principal's name, is valid. Ingram v. State, 10 Kan. 630. The signature may be by marks or initials. Hammons v. State, 59 Ala. 164. Compare Dresser v. Fifield. 12 R. I. 24.

Where a recognizance had been executed by the sureties, and subsequently another surety executes it, but his name was not written in the instrument, held, that he cannot be joined with the other sureties in a suit upon the recognizance. U. S. v. Pickett, 1 Bond (U. S.), 123.

A bail bond present in the record was executed before a clerk, who wrote at the foot of it, "Signed, sealed, and acknowledged, and approved by," signing his name thereto. It did not appear from the bond or otherwise that the defendant was brought before the clerk for examination and bail as a magistrate. The court was in session that day. Held, that it would be presumed to have been taken by the clerk under the immediate direction of the court. U. S. v. Evans, 2 Fed. Repr. 147.

Where a recognizance was executed before the clerk of the district court of one county for the appearance of the defendant before the court of another county wherein the indictment is pending and where the bond is filed, held, not invalid. State v. Wells, 36 Iowa, 238.

Where a recognizance was taken in open court, and entered on the order book, but was not signed or sealed by any of the cognizors, held valid. Grinestaff v. State, 53 Ind. 238.

Alteration.—Where the amount after signature was altered from $1000 to $2000, held, that the recognizance was not thereby rendered invalid. Com. v. Henry, 13 Phila. 451.

Where alterations were alleged to have been made in a recognizance, but proof was not given to sustain the charge, held, that the recognizance was valid. Harris v. State, 54 Ind. 2.

Clerical Errors — Surplusage, etc. — A material mistake in a bail bond cannot be corrected in equity. Wallen v. State, 18 Tex. App. 414; State v. Loeb, 21 La. Ann. 599.

Inaccurate language is not to be strictly construed. If it will admit of a legal construction it will receive it. Hendee v. Taylor. 29 Conn. 448; Smith v. State, 36 Tex. 317.

That the offence for which bail was taken was described in the bond as "assault and attempt to murder," while the indictment, when found, described the offence as being assault with intent to murder, did not render the recognizance void as a voluntary bond. Colquitt v. Bond, 69 Ga. 351. See Wills v. State, 4 Tex. App. 613.

Where a statute, in prescribing the terms and conditions of a recognizance, requires that the accused shall be bound to appear at the next term, a recognizance omitting the word "next," but strictly pursuing the statute in all other respects, will not be deemed invalid for such omission. Proseck v. State, 38 Ohio St. 606. See also Williamson v. State, 12 Tex. App. 169.

Following a judgment in the usual form against the defendant in bastardy, there was a recognizance of replevin bail, not attested or approved by the clerk, but in the form prescribed by statute, save that the word "security" was used instead of "bail." Held, that it was made good by sec. 1221, R. S. 1881, and applied to the judgment in gross. McAllister v. State, 81 Ind. 256.

A mistake in the year by which no one could have been misled, will not vitiate a recognizance. People v. Welch, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 420.

The indictment charged the theft of certain cattle, the property of "J. P. and A. C." The bail bond described them as the property of J. P. Held, a fatal variance. McAdams v. State, 10 Tex. App. 317.

The condition of a bail bond stipulated that the principal obligor should make his appearance before the proper court at its next ensuing term, and should there remain from day to day and from term to term until discharged, but omitted to stipulate that he should answer the accusation against him. Held, that the omission does not impair the validity of the bond. Gray v. State, 11 Tex. App. 527.

Including in the condition of a recognizance more than the order of the court required is void of legal effect; the part added is mere surplusage. State v. Cobb, 71 Me. 198. See Howie v. State, 1 Ala. 113; McCarty v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 338.

In a recognizance to appear and answer, the words "in case said party was legally imprisoned on said charge" are surplusage. State v. Wellman, 3 Ohio, 14.

When a recognizance has a condition for the doing of some act for which such an obligation may be properly taken, and the tribunal or magistrate taking it has authority in cases of that general description, it will be prima facie valid, even though it

I. and others entered into a recognizance, signed by the parties before M., for the appearance of I. The recognizance was stated to be in the sum of "three hundred," and was certified by M. as J. P. Held, that the signatures did not vitiate the instrument, but that the failure to designate the denomination of the debt, and the official character of the officer certifying the recognizance, rendered the same void. Irwin v. State, 10 Neb. 325. Compare Shattuck v. People, 5 Ill. 477.

A bail bond was conditioned for the payment of "$500 five hundred ———," and its validity is contested on the ground that it expresses no sum of money. But held that the dollar-mark and figures sufficiently express the amount. Roberts v. State, 11 Tex. App. 26. Compare Townsend v. State, 7 Tex. App. 74.

An immaterial addition to the title of the court may be rejected as surplusage. People v. Hawkins, 5 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 1.

The omission of the word "unlawful" where the charge was for "unlawfully carrying a pistol," invalidates the recognizance. Massey v. State, 4 Tex. App. 580.

In an action on a forfeited criminal recognizance where everything appears regular and in form, except a supposed irregularity which appears from the following words indorsed on the recognizance, to wit: "Taken and acknowledged before me, this 3d day of August, 1880. Webb McNall, notary public.—Approved by me, this 4th day of August, 1880. Jerry Brisbin, sheriff; Benjamin F. Closson, under-sheriff;" and the petition sets forth and alleges everything that is necessary to be set forth or alleged, and among other things that the "recognizance was duly taken and approved by the sheriff," and that the principal recognizor, for whose benefit the recognizance was entered into, was duly discharged "by reason of the acceptance of said recognizance," held, that the petition states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, and that the words above quoted as being indorsed on the recognizance do not render the recognizance illegal or void. State v. Kurtz, 27 Kan. 223.

Where the word "appear" was omitted in the condition and recognizance, held, to be fatally defective. Carroll v. State, 6 Tex. App. 463.

Where the name of the magistrate before whom the accused is to appear is omitted, the recognizance is invalid. Crowder v. State, 7 Tex. App. 484.

A recognizance which recites the defendant's name, but omits it in the clause "Now if the above bounden ——" is not invalid. Gorman v. State, 38 Tex. 112; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 29.

If the name of the prisoner differs slightly in the indictment and recognizance, it does not release the sureties. People v. Eaton, 41 Cal. 657; Steen v. State, 27 Tex. 86. See State v. Rhodius, 37 Tex. 165.

"Little" for "Lytle" held an immaterial variance. Lytle v. People, 47 Ill. 422.

An error in stating the Christian name of the defendant will not invalidate the recognizance. State v. Rhodius, 37 Tex. 165; Bulson v. People, 31 Ill. 409.

Where the indictment was for selling liquor in quantities "less" than one gallon, a recognizance to answer for selling in quantities "larger" than one gallon is void. Reese v. People, 11 Ill. App. 346.

Where the date of the recognizance was omitted, held, that the date of approval cured the omission. Ake v. State, 4 Tex. App. 126.

An omission to state the day, year, and term at which the indictment was found is immaterial. Mooney v. People, 81 Ill. 134.

An alteration of the figure denoting the year, as changing "180" to "1880," will not invalidate the recognizance. Gragg v. State, 18 Tex. App. 295. Nor writing 1873 instead of 1874 where the bail was taken in December, 1873. People v. Welch, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 420.

The omission to state the year, the recognizance being otherwise regular, is not a fatal defect. Kellogg v. State, 43 Miss. 57.

A recognizance to appear and testify is not vitiated by the addition of the words "as well to the grand as the petit jury, and not depart the said court without leave." People v. Millis, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 511.

Where the recognizance states that the crime was committed in the county different from that to the court of which the bail is taken, it is not invalid. Dean v. State, 2 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 200.

If the offence is differently charged in does not set forth all the particular facts required to give jurisdiction, for the reason that giving a recognizance is a voluntary act, and it may therefore be presumed that it would not have been the bail bond and the indictment, the recognizance is void. Duke v. State, 35 Tex. 424; Pack v. State, 23 Ark. 235.

Where a recognizance imposed a condition not required by law, held, that the condition might be rejected as surplusage. State v. Edgerton, 12 R. I. 104; State v. Crowley, 60 Me. 103; Howie v. State, 1 Ala. 113. Compare Turner v. State, 14 Tex. App. 168; Loyd v. McTeer, 33 Ga. 37. See for particular facts People v. Millis, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 511; Underwood v. Clement, 16 Gray (Mass.), 169, State v. Hatch, 59 Me. 410; State v. Eastman, 42 N. H. 265; Hill v. State, 15 Tex. App. 530; Heath v. State, 14 Tex. App. 213; Gorman v. State, 38 Tex. 112; Patton v. State, 35 Tex. 92; Doughty v. State, 33 Tex. 1; State v. Glaevicke, 33 Tex. 53; Smith v. State, 36 Tex. 317; State v. Crowley, 60 Mo. 103; State v. Marshall, 21 Iowa, 143; State v. Patterson, 23 Iowa, 575; State v. Davidson, 20 Miss. 212; Kellogg v. State, 43 Miss. 57; State v. Adams, 3 Head (Tenn.), 259; People v. Freeman, 20 Mich. 413; State v. Hiney, 24 Ind. 381; U. S. v. Evans, 2 Fed. Repr. 147.

Waiver.—A surety signed a blank bail bond and delivered it to his principal to be filled up with the penal sum of $300. The principal, being required to give bail in $1000, presented the blank bond with the surety's signature, and the examining magistrate filled it with the sum of $1000, conditioned for the appearance of the principal. The principal failed to appear and the bond was forfeited, and the surety, in defence to the scire facias, alleged the facts and pleaded non est factum to the bond. Held, that the act of the surety in signing and delivering the blank bond, knowing its purpose, made him liable for the amount inserted in it by the examining magistrate, who accepted it in ignorance of any limit to the surety's authorization. See the opinion in extenso on the question. Gray v. State, 11 Tex. App. 527.

A recognizance of bail in error defective in form may derive validity from the consent, express or implied, of the parties intended to be affected thereby. Allen v. Kellam, 94 Pa. St. 253.

Ambiguity.—Where the names of the sureties are similar, their identity may be established from the whole tenor of the recognizance. State v. Cherry, Meigs (Tenn.), 232.

Where the name in the condition of a recognizance differs from any of the names in the obligatory part, evidence is admissible to identify the party. Gay v. State, 7 Kan. 394.

Where the justice affixed "J. P." to his signature, held, that these characters were well understood to mean "Justice of Peace." Shattuck v. People, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 477. Compare Irwin v. State, 10 Neb. 325.

Although it would generally be better for a recognizance itself to state and show in definite and explicit terms the nature and character of the offence with which the accused is charged, yet where the recognizance fails to do so, but still shows, though indefinitely, obscurely, and inferentially only, that the recognizance was given in a criminal case, and in a case in which the defendant was charged with the commission of a public offence, the recognizance will not be held to be fatally defective and void merely because of its indefiniteness in this respect, and especially so where the previous portions of the record show definitely, explicitly, and in detail the nature and character of the offence with which the accused was charged. Tillson v. State, 29 Kan. 452.

Identity of Persons.—The records of the circuit court showed that on the 8th day of October, 1875, Roach Millsaps was arrested on a charge of stealing certain property described in the warrant; that on the 20th day of October, 1875, Pharris Millsaps, Jr., as principal, with others as sureties, entered into a recognizance for the appearance of said Pharris Millsaps, Jr., at the next January term of the circuit court to answer to the charge of larceny; that at the January term Roach Millsaps was indicted for the larceny of the property described in the warrant, and that at a subsequent day of the same term a forfeiture was ordered of the recognizance of Pharris Millsaps, Jr. On appeal from a judgment on a demurrer to a scire facias issued on the recognizance, held, first, that this court would presume in favor of the acts of the circuit court that Roach Millsaps and Pharris Millsaps, Jr., were one and the same person; second, but at any rate, since this was a matter of fact and not of law, a demurrer would not lie. State v. Millsaps, 69 Mo. 359.

given unless the facts were such as would authorize it to be taken.[1]

When an indictment is quashed for insufficiency and the defendant ordered to answer to a new indictment, his bail is bound for his appearance to the new indictment, though it be for a higher offence, if it includes the offence described in the bail bond, or grows out of the same act or transaction.[2]

A recognizance proper is not signed. But where it is, and duly certified by the officer before whom it is taken as having been taken and acknowledged before him, the signatures of the obligors may be treated as surplusage and the recognizance held valid.[3]

11. Amendment.—The magistrate before whom are cognizance is taken may, by leave of court, amend the one returned or make a

1. People v. Kane, 4 Denio (N.Y.), 530; Champlain v. People, 2 N. Y. 82; Gildersleeve v. People, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 35; State v. Edgerton, 12 R. I. 104; People v. Dennis, 4 Mich. 609; State v. Hamer, 2 Ind. 371; Gallagher v. People, 91 Ill. 590; State v. Grant, 10 Minn. 39; State v. Williams, 17 Ark. 371; U. S. v. George, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 431.

The recital in a bail bond that the defendant was in custody when it was executed cannot be contradicted by his bail. Hortsell v. State, 45 Ark. 59.

2. Hortsell v. State, 45 Ark. 59; Pack v. State, 23 Ark. 235; Adams v. Governor, 22 Ga. 417.

3. Irwin v. State, 10 Neb. 325; Madison v. Commonwealth, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 131; Com. v. Mason, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 456; State v. West, 3 Ohio St. 509; State v. Patterson, 23 Iowa, 575. Compare State v. Doax, 19 La. Ann. 77; State v. Taylor, 19 La. Ann. 145; Cunningham v. State, 14 Mo. 402; Shattuck v. People, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 477. Littleton v. State, 46 Ark. 413.

In Com. v. Emery, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 434, it is said: "The manner of taking a recognizance is, that the magistrate repeats to the recognizors the obligation into which they are to enter, and the condition of it at large, and asks them if they are content. He makes a short memorandum, which it is not necessary that they should sign, although a custom has lately taken place for the recognizors to sign their names. From this short minute the magistrate may afterwards draw up the recognizance in full form and certify it to the court. This is the most regular and proper way of proceeding."

In the case of State v. West, 3 Ohio St. 515, an instrument purporting to be a recognizance concluded as follows: "In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals this twentieth day of April, A.D. 1850.

"JOHN M. WEST, [L.S.]
"S J. MCCLURE, [L.S.]
"D. WEST. [L.S.]

"Attested and approved.

"JOHN A. LAZELLE, Associate Judge."

A recognizance in proper form was afterwards taken, which it was claimed was invalid for want of power in the judge to take a second recognizance. The court said: "Was the supposed recognizance in the declaration invalid by reason of the taking of the acknowledgment, bond, or obligation, signed and sealed by these defendants, and filed with the clerk as a recognizance? In other words, was the first writing a valid recognizance? And did the powers of the judge exhaust themselves when he 'attested and approved' it? We think not. The first was not a recognizance; it was a mere bond, such as the judge had no power to take. All his authority to take bail is expressed by a provision of law, in which he is empowered 'to admit such person to bail by recognizing such person,' etc. The paper which he (the judge) is to sign is a recognizance which, when it comes before the court of which he is a member, becomes completely what its name imports—an acknowledgment of record. All its solemnity and authenticity depend upon his own certificate that the acknowledgment it sets forth was made openly before him by the parties in person. No parol proof can vary, enlarge, or explain it. Having a high legal character, it must be so framed as to be certain, and must show itself to have all the qualities which warrant courts in acting on it as a record not to be contradicted. No such loose words as 'attested and approved' can give it these characteristics. . . . The first pa-new one, so as to set out more accurately and fully the contract of the parties recognizing.[1]

12. Rights and Liabilities of Bail.—When a surety indorses a writ of attachment as bail, the statute makes it the duty of the officer to deliver out a bail-piece. But this is a matter between the surety and the officer, and the surety must see to it that he has a bail-piece if he desires one, and its non-delivery will not discharge him. The indorsement of the process is, in effect, the recognizance of bail, and goes into court, and constitutes the ground of liability; while the bail-piece goes into the hands of the surety, and is merely evidence of the obligation he has assumed, whereby he is enabled to obtain a warrant for the arrest of his principal. Bail thus given answers the purposes of bail below and bail above at common law, though the obligation it imposes is substantially like that imposed by a recognizance of bail by bill in the King's Bench when taken before judgment.[2]

The liability of sureties on a recognizance is limited to the precise terms of their contract, and any change in the contract made by the principals without the assent of the sureties discharges them; nor does it matter how trivial the change, or even that it may be of advantage to the sureties.[3] If the bail is unauthorized or illegally taken, the sureties are not bound.[4]

The sureties are liable severally as well as jointly, whether the recognizance expressly so stipulates or not.[5]

If the recognizance was extorted from the accused upon any illegal compulsion, he may set it up by way of defence.[6]

It is an implied condition of a bail bond that the State through her peace officers will arrest the principal, if within the State, when the bail shall desire it to be done. If this is not done when the surety makes the effort, under the statute he is released.[7] per, then, was not a valid recognizance—and we have seen, if it was a mere bond, the judge could not take it, and it was a nullity."

1. Wright v. Blunt. 74 Me. 92; State v. Young, 56 Me. 219; Ingalls v. Chase, 68 Me. 113; Com. v. Field, 11 Allen (Mass.), 488.

A defective recognizance may be amended by the prothonotary of the supreme court. Hosie v. Gray, 73 Pa. St. 502.

2. 1 Tidd's Pr. 250; Darling v. Cutting, 57 Vt. 218.

3. Reese v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 13.

Where the sheriff, after the prisoner had been duly bailed, but the bond was not as yet returned to the clerk's office, entered into a stipulation with the sureties that other sureties should be added to the bond, held, that this stipulation and a failure on the part of the sheriff to comply with it does not constitute a defence. McClure v. Smith, 56 Ga. 439.

4. Governor v. Fay, 8 La. Ann. 490; State v. Vion, 12 La. Ann. 688. Compare Littleton v. State, 46 Ark. 413. See p. 5, n. 1.

5. Mathena v. State, 15 Tex. App. 460. See Hildreth v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 80; Ellison v. State, 8 Ala. 273; Madison v. State, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 131.

6. Champlain v. People, 2 N. Y. 82. Compare Huggins v. People, 39 Ill. 241.

In the absence of allegations of duress or constraint, it will be presumed that the principal and sureties desired to enter into the recognizance to which their names are found attached, and the execution of which is admitted. Carmody v. State, 105 Ind. 546.

It is no defence to an action on the bond against the bail that the accused was illegally in custody at the time it was taken. Littleton v. State, 46 Ark. 413.

7. Com. v. Overby, 80 Ky. 208; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 471.

If the principal is unable to appear by act or fault of the obligee, the bail will be exonerated.[1]

In all bail bonds there is an implied obligation on the part of the commonwealth that the bail shall not be hindered by any authority within the limits of the State from surrendering his principal at any time before forfeiture. Where one has been arrested and given bond to answer for a criminal offence, the sureties on such recognizance are not discharged by the subsequent arrest of their principal on another charge, and the giving of a bond, with other sureties, to answer therefor. If the State should keep him in continued custody, so as to render his production easy for it, but impossible for the sureties, they would be relieved; but the mere temporary restraint, prior to the giving of the second bond, would not work a discharge.[2]

1. Reese v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 13; Steelman v. Mattix, 38 N. J. 247; Buffington v. Smith, 58 Ga. 341.

Sureties on bail bond or recognizance are relieved from liability by a second arrest, and bail or recognizance of their principal, on the same indictment. Roberts v. State, 2 S. Westn. Repr. (Tex.) 622; Peacock v. State, 44 Tex. 11; Lindley v. State, 17 Tex. App. 120.

Upon a recognizance being entered into in a criminal cause, there is an implied covenant on the part of the government that it will not in any way take proceedings with the principal which will increase the risks of the sureties or affect their remedies against the principal. State v. Spear, 54 Vt. 503; Reese v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 13.

The fact that a party who has forfeited his bail bond could not appear without danger of losing his life by mob-violence will not exonerate the bail, unless the proper authorities were applied to and were unable or unwilling to extend to the accused the protection necessary to enable him to appear. Weddington v. Commonwealth, 79 Ky. 582.

A stipulation to postpone the trial until after the final disposition of other cases, without the consent of the sureties, is inconsistent with the condition of the recognizances, and discharges the sureties. Reese v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 13.

The failure on the part of the government to hold the term of court at which the accused is required to appear does not discharge the sureties. State v. Brown, 16 Iowa, 314.

2. West v. Colquitt, 71 Ga. 559; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 277. In this case the court said: "The meaning of the fundamental provisions in the organic laws of the American Union and of this state is, that a party accused of any and every bailable offence shall have the inestimable privilege of giving security for his attendance at court, and shall not be imprisoned if he can give security in a reasonable sum of money for his appearance. The guarantee is not that he may give such security for one or for two offences, but for every offence he may commit, so long as he has friends who are willing to bind themselves and their property to assure his presence for trial. But if the re-arrest and the new trial on a second offence discharged the sureties on the first bond, no court or sheriff or other officer of the law could ever permit, in justice to the State, a second bond which would thus annihilate the first. Especially would he not do so if the first were a bond to answer for a heinous offence, in a correspondingly large sum of money as penalty, and the second in a trifling bond, for a trivial offence. Nor is the answer a good one, that the officer must bring all parties before him and renew all the bonds by having all the sureties before him. Such proceeding would take time; sureties might be scattered, and before they could all be got together the defendant would be in jail, and his constitutional right would be annulled to the extent of that imprisonment. If it be answered, again, that no officer dare delay accepting bail when tendered under these constitutional provisions, and the right to give bail would still exist in full force and be unimpaired, then see how disastrous the operation would be for the interests of the State and the people. Whenever one was bailed to answer for a grave crime, in a heavy penalty, all he would have to do would be to commit a light offence and give bail to answer that in a small sum—for it must not be excessive, under the constitutions, but proportionate to the offence—and, ipso facto, the bail for the grave offence are discharged, and the principal is beyond seas, having only to pay a small trifle. The law is sense, and this result is nonsense. It cannot be law, any more than nonsense can be sense, so far as the American and Georgia constitutions are of force. When the bail agree to produce their principal at court, they do so in full view of the fact that the principal may commit another offence, and may give bail for that, under another arrest; and that, because they have agreed to produce his body to answer for the first offence, the State does not bargain with them not to arrest him if he sins again, and then that her highest law guarantees to him the right to give other bail to answer that. The state does an act perfectly lawful when she so arrests him for a second offence. If she should keep him in her own custody, of course the bail in the first case would be discharged; because she could produce him, but they could not; and it would be against all reason to punish the sureties for what she did, and by so doing prevent them from keeping their bargain with her, and when all reason for the bail ceased, because she had the man in her own jail or her own penitentiary. But when, under a right the man exercised, other people had enough faith in him to bail him for another offence to be answerable to court then two sets of sureties contract with the State to produce him for two offences. If they conflict, and one is tried and imprisoned by the State, then the sureties are discharged, because the State has the principal in her own custody, and can produce him and try him on the other offence, if she wishes to do so. And whichever case is tried first, if it result in imprisonment, the sureties for the other are discharged; but so long as the State has not the man in her custody, the bail in each case is bound. The mere arrest, discontinued by the bail in the second case, does not annul the first bond. The moment the principal is released on other bail, that bond is operative again. Momentarily it may have been stunned by the second arrest, and would remain insensible as long as that arrest lasted, but the instant the principal breathed free breath again, under the great constitutional guarantees of easy bail, that which he gave before to be free revives by the new breath of the second bail, and as both gave him liberty, both are bound for the exercise of that liberty, on the terms each bargained for, and nothing short of the continued custody of the State can relieve either, and that only so long as it continues." See Hartley v. Colquitt, 72 Ga. 351; Buffington v. Smith, 58 Ga. 341; Smith v. Kitchens, 51 Ga. 158; State v. Burnham, 44 Me. 278; Taintor v. Taylor, 36 Conn. 242; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 58; Bigelow v. Johnson, 16 Mass. 218; Way v. Wright, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 380; People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill, 571; Cathcart v. Cannon, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 28; Loflin v. Fowler, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 335; People v. Manning, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 297; People v. Stager, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 431; Steelman v. Mattix, 9 Vroom (N. J.), 247; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 389; Canby v. Griffin, 3 Harr. (Del.) 333; Caldwell v. Commonwealth, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 698; State v. Allen, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 258; Devine v. State, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 629; State v. Adams, 3 Head (Tenn.), 260; Medlin v. Commonwealth, 11 Bush (Ky.), 605; Brown v. People, 26 Ill. 28; Ingram v. State, 27 Ala. 17; Peacock v. State, 44 Tex. 11; Wheeler v. State, 38 Tex. 173; Cooper v. State, 5 Tex. App. 215; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 571; Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366. Compare State v. Merrihew, 47 Iowa, 112; s. c., 29 Am. Rep 464; Lindley v. State, 17 Tex. App. 120.

It does not matter that the sureties on the second bond advised the principal to flee the country. Hartley v. Colquitt, 72 Ga. 351.

Whether relief will be granted by bringing up the principal on habeas corpus, or by extending the time for surrender, or by granting a discharge on motion, will depend upon the fact whether the one mode will be more beneficial to the plaintiff than the other. Steelman v. Mattix, 9 Vroom (N. J.), 247; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 389.

In an action on a bail bond for the appearance of an indicted person, it is a good defence that the person was in prison in another county in the same State, on conviction for another offence. Cooper v. State, 5 Tex. App. 215; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 571; Buffington v. State, 58 Ga. 341. Compare State v. Merrihew, 47 Iowa, 112; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 464.

K. was charged with assault to kill; he gave bail, but was subsequently indicted and arrested again upon a bench warrant, and brought into court for trial, whence he escaped. Held, that the bail was discharged by the arrest upon the bench warrant. Smith v. Kitchens, 51 Ga. 158; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 232; State v. Orsler, 48 Iowa, 343. Compare Chappell v. State, 30 Tex. 613.

H., as principal, with W. and S., as sureties, entered into a recognizance before an examining court, conditioned "that the said H. shall be and appear at said March term of said district court, on the first day thereof, and not depart said court without leave, and shall abide the order of said court," etc. The said H. appeared at said court on the first day thereof, and was indicted for the crime for which he was bound over. Thereupon the district attorney procured a warrant in due form for his arrest to answer to said indictment, and placed the same in the hands of the sheriff, who arrested H. thereon. Thereupon, almost immediately, the said H. applied to the court to be discharged from arrest, on the ground that he was under bond, etc. Thereupon the court ordered his discharge, and notified the sheriff that such arrest was illegal, etc. The securities, W. and S., were present, and made no objection to the discharge. Upon the case being reached for trial, and the said H. called, he did not answer, and was defaulted. Held, that the securities were discharged from liability. Smith v. State, 12 Neb. 309.

If the principal is allowed by his bail to go into another State,

W., who was confined in the G. county jail, under a mittimus from the district court of C. county, was allowed bail and gave the required bond with sureties approved by the sheriff of G. county, who accepted the bond and sent it to the clerk of said court, as directed by the order allowing the bail. Meanwhile the said sheriff had received a capias from the district court of B. county for the arrest of W. to answer a different charge there pending, and without setting W. at large, arrested and detained him by virtue of the capias until the sheriff of B. county conveyed him to the jail of that county, and he subsequently escaped therefrom. At the next term of the district court of L. county, to which the venue had been changed, W. failed to appear, and judgment nisi was entered against him and his sureties on the bond; and in defence to the scire facias the sureties pleaded that the bond had never become operative or binding, because their principal had not been set at liberty or placed in their custody, but was continuously detained by the State until he made his escape. But held, that the plea sets up no defence. Inasmuch as the bail bond took effect from its delivery and acceptance, and W. was not thereafter detained by virtue of the mittimus from C. county, but by virtue of the capias from B. county, and inasmuch as he was not in custody at all when he forfeited his bond, his arrest and detention by virtue of the capias had no effect on the validity of the bond or the liability of the sureties. The case would be different if, notwithstanding the allowance of bail and acceptance of the bond, W. had been held in custody under the mittimus from C. county, or if, at the time the bond was forfeited, the State prevented his appearance by detaining him on any charge, or if the sureties had surrendered him, as they could have done notwithstanding his detention on the capias. Stafford v. State, 10 Tex. App. 46.

Where the defendant, subsequent to the execution of the recognizance, was arrested, tried and convicted for another crime, but escaped, held, that the sureties were not released. Wheeler v. State, 38 Tex. 173.

Where a defendant who has been arrested under a capias ad respondendum in a civil suit, and has given bail to the sheriff, is afterwards, and before the return-day of the process, arrested on a criminal charge, and is afterwards indicted and convicted and sentenced to the State prison, the bail to the sheriff may obtain an exoneration of their liability on the bail bond by first filing special bail and then surrendering the principal by means of a habeas corpus, while the principal is in jail under commitment upon the criminal charge, or by motion after he is put under sentence. Atkinson v. Prine, 41 N. J. 28.

In Alguire v. The Commonwealth, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 349, there was an attempt to excuse by the act of the State. The principal failed to appear in the circuit court of Kenton county, as required by the recognizance. The plea of the surety to the scire facias on the forfeiture was, that on the day the principal was required to appear, he was arrested for a felony in Louisville, and imprisoned there. The plea was held bad. The court said it was the duty of the surety to see that the principal was at Kenton circuit court and not at Louisville, on the appearance day, when he was arrested at the latter place; and, moreover, that the surety should have made known the arrest to the court at the appearance term, and obtained its process for the principal, and for respite of the recognizance, etc. See Mix v. People, 26 Ill. 32; Brown v. People, 26 Ill. 28. Compare Ingram v. State, 27 Ala. 17.

Bail in a criminal case are discharged from liability by the arrest of the principal upon the same charge, in the same State, by the federal authorities, and his incarceration in another State. Com. v.

and while there is arrested and imprisoned under the laws of that State, the bail is not released.[1]

If the arrest is made after the forfeiture, the sureties are not discharged.[2]

Where the defendant obtains a change of venue and he is committed to the custody of the sheriff to be transmitted to the custody of the sheriff of the county to which the venue is changed, the right of the bail to the custody of the defendant is impaired and the liability is at an end.[3]

Where the performance of the condition of the recognizance is rendered impossible by the act of God, such as sickness, death, etc., a default is excused.[4]

Overby, 80 Ky. 208; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 471; Peacock v. State, 44 Tex. 11.

Where the principal was arrested by the federal authorities but escaped, held, that the bail was not released, but it was assumed that if he had not escaped the bondsmen would have been discharged. State v. McAllister, 54 N. H. 156. Compare Com. v. House, 13 Bush (Ky.), 679.

In Com. v. Terry, 2 Duvall (Ky.), 383, it was held by this court that, in a proceeding against the surety upon a forfeited recognizance, it was a sufficient defence that the defendant, being a soldier in the federal army, was refused a furlough, and by reason thereof was unable to appear in discharge of the recognizance. Compare Huggins v. People, 39 Ill. 241.

Where the principal was arrested as a deserter, held, that the surety was not discharged. Shook v. People, 39 Ill. 443.

C. was arrested on a criminal charge in the State court and was bailed. He was subsequently arrested and imprisoned for another crime by the military authorities of the United States, and could not be produced in the State court according to the terms of the recognizance. Held, that the sureties were discharged. Belding v. State, 25 Ark. 315; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 26; Com. v. Webster, 1 Bush (Ky.), 576.

1. Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366; State v. Horn, 70 Mo. 466; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 437; Devine v. State, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 623; Withrow v. Commonwealth, 1 Bush (Ky.), 17; King v. State, 18 Neb. 375; State v. Scott, 20 Iowa, 63; Harrington v. Dennie, 13 Mass. 92; U. S. v. Van Fossen, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 406

A. was arrested in Connecticut and gave bail. He then went to New York, and while there was arrested and taken to Maine, and imprisoned for a crime committed there. Held, that the bail were not released. Taintor v. Taylor, 36 Conn. 242; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 58.

Where the government has consented that the principal might depart out of the territory of the United States to a foreign country, beyond the reach of his bail, and remain abroad for an indefinite time, without the concurrence or even knowledge of the sureties, they are released. Reese v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 13.

Enlistment of Principal.—If the principal enlists in the military service of the United States, and is taken out of the State and prevented by his officers from appearing, it is a circumstance to be considered in exoneration of his bail. People v. Cushney, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; People v. Cook, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 110. Compare Gingrich v. People, 34 Ill. 448; Huggins v. People, 39 Ill. 241; Shook v. People, 39 Ill. 443; Winninger v. State, 23 Ind. 228.

2. State v. Emily, 24 Iowa, 24.

3. State v. Jones, 29 Ark. 127.

4. State v. Traphagen, 45 N. J. 134; Steelman v. Mattix, 9 Vroom (N. J.), 247; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 389; State v. McNeal, 18 N. J. 333; Bigelow, v. Johnson, 16 Mass. 218; Way v. Wright, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 380; Parker v. Bidwell, 3 Conn. 84; People v. Manning, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 297; People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 570; People v. Tubbs, 37 N. Y. 586; Scully v. Kirkpatrick, 79 Pa. St. 324; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 62; Caldwell v. Commonwealth, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 698; Com. v. Craig, 6 Rand. (Va.) 731; Pynes v. State, 45 Ala. 52; State v. Cone, 32 Ga. 663; McLelland v. Chambers, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 366; State v. Allen, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 258; Woolfolk v. State, 10 Ind. 532; Brown v. People, 26 Ill. 28; State v. Scott, 20 Iowa, 62; Chase v. People, 2 Colo. 481; Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366; U. S. v. Van Fossen, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 406. Compare State v. Edwards, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 226; Piercy v. People, 10 Bradw. (Ill.) 219.

Where the bail on recognizance in a criminal case could not reasonably anticipate and prevent a default, and with proper diligence find and surrender his

Whatever judicial act in a case deprives a defendant's bail of the right to arrest and surrender him discharges the bail; and so where an indictment is quashed upon demurrer and the defendant discharged, the bond is discharged, and a reversal of the judgment by the appellate court does not revive it.[1]

On a verdict of acquittal the bail is ipso facto discharged;[2] so also by the quashing of the indictment;[3] so also by the entry of a nolle prosequi upon the record.[4] If the court before which the principal obligor is bound to appear has not authority to require him to answer the charge against him, it has no power to adjudge a forfeiture of his bail bond.[5] It is no defence that the principal was indicted for a crime different from that for which he was bailed,[6] or that he was convicted of a lesser offence than that principal after default, before death intervened to prevent it, a proper case is made for the court, in its discretion, to relieve the surety, on petition. State v. Traphagen, 45 N. J. 134. See U. S. v. Van Fossen, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 406; State v. Cone, 32 Ga. 663.

In State v. Traphagen, 45 N. J. 134, the court said: "It is within the powers of the court, incidental to its general jurisdiction in criminal causes, to grant relief to bail where the default was caused by the sickness or death of the accused before forfeiture, and where the death of the principal occurs after forfeiture, when the bail is fixed. It is, in either case, an appeal to the discretion of the court, which will be exercised where justice to the bail demands it, and public justice and policy do not prohibit it."

Principal confined for Insanity in another State.—That the defendant, at the time he was required by the conditions of his bail bond to appear to an indictment, was insane, and had been taken out of the State and confined in an insane asylum of another State, to be treated for his insanity, is no defence for his sureties, in a prosecution on the bond. Adler v. State, 35 Ark. 517; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 38; Bowerbank v. Payne, 2 Wash. C. C. 464.

1. State v. Glenn, 40 Ark. 332; Butler v. Bissell, 1 Root (Conn.), 102; Lyons v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 309; People v. Felton, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 429.

2. Mills v. McCoy, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 406; People v. Felton, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; Lafleur v. Mouton, 8 La. Ann. 489; Butler v. Bissell, 1 Root (Conn.), 102; Lyons v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 309; State v. Glenn, 40 Ark. 332.

3. People v. Felton, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; State v. Mathis, 3 Ark. 84.

4. State v. Langton, 6 La. Ann. 282. Compare State v. Hackett, 3 Hill (S. Car.), 95.

5. State v. Winninger, 81 Ind. 51; McGee v. State, 11 Tex. App. 520.

6. Pack v. State, 23 Ark. 235; Duke v. State, 35 Tex. 424.

A recognizance given in the lower court to appear before the superior court to answer to a complaint for the crime of adultery is forfeited by the departure of the principal without leave of court, although he was in fact indicted in the superior court, not for adultery, but for lewd and lascivious cohabitation. Com. v. Teevens, 9 N. Eastn. Repr. (Mass.) 524. In this case the court said: "The recognizance bound the principal to appear before the superior court to answer to a complaint for the crime of adultery. He was not in fact indicted in the superior court for that crime, but for lewd and lascivious cohabitation. Had an indictment been substituted for the complaint for the same offence as that therein described? The argument of the defendant contends that, as the principal could not have been tried in the superior court upon the complaint (the offence being one of an indictable character), the lower court had no authority to require the defendant to answer thereto, but should have required him to answer an indictment for the offence, and that the recognizance is therefore invalid. This contention cannot be maintained. The cases of Com. v. Slocum, 14 Gray, 395, and Com. v. Butland, 119 Mass. 317, are quite decisive that a recognizance in this form is valid and sufficient, and binds the defendant to appear and answer any indictment for the same offence charged in the complaint. Nor should we be prepared to say that if the recognizance was limited to appearing and answering to a specified offence, it did not equally bind the defendant to appear and answer to any charged in the indictment,[1] or that the criminal charge in the case in which it was taken was not sufficient,[2] or that the indictment against the principal was bad.[3] The loss of the indictment[4] or the failure to find an indictment is no defence.[5]

The fact that an indictment was found against a respondent and properly presented in open court at one term, but not entered upon the docket until the succeeding term, is not a cause for discharging his bail.[6] It is no defence that the grand jurors were disqualified.[7] It is a defence that the recognizance was taken by an officer who had no authority.[8] Where the principal and bail are jointly bound, the release of the principal from his liability does not discharge his surety.[9] If the bond recites no crime against the law, it is void.[10] Where the principal is required to give bail in separate and distinct sums, a single bond covering the aggregate amount is void.[11]

Bail are discharged where the sheriff has released defendant from custody on plaintiff's refusal to pay the expenses of his board and keeping in advance.[12]

Failure to present the indictment at the next term of court after execution of the bond will release the bail.[13] It is not a defence offence which might substantially be included in the offence described in the complaint, even if of less grade, as in the case at bar, if the defendant were charged in the indictment with lewd and lascivious cohabitation with the same person with whom he was alleged in the complaint to have committed adultery."

Bail bond described the offence as an "assault with intent to rob." It is urged that this expression designates no offence under the law of the State, because not tantamount to "assault with intent to commit the offence of robbery." But held that the designation used in the bond is correct. Robinson v. State, 11 Tex. App. 309.

1. Campbell v. State, 18 Ind. 375.

2. Friedline v. State, 93 Ind. 366.

3. Reeve v. State, 34 Ark. 610; Brown v. State, 6 Tex.App. 188; Com. v. Skeggs, 3 Bush (Ky.), 19; Little v. Commonwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 22; U. S. v. Reese, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 629.

4. Crouch v. State, 25 Tex. 755.

5. State v. Cocke, 37 Tex. 155; State v. Stout, 6 Halst. (N. J.) 124; Pack v. State, 23 Ark. 235. Compare Brown v. State, 6 Tex. App. 188.

6. State v. Spear, 54 Vt. 503.

7. Sharpe v. Smith, 59 Ga. 707.

8. State v. Winninger, 81 Ind. 51; Com. v. Roberts, 1 Duvall (Ky.), 199. Compare Pack v. State, 23 Ark. 235.

9. State v. Davidson, 20 Miss. 212.

10. Foster v. State, 27 Tex. 236; Nicholson v. State, 2 Ga. 363. See Robinson v. State, 11 Tex. App. 309.

11. U. S. v. Goldstein, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 413; State v. Buffum, 2 Fost. (N. H.) 267.

12. Prior v. Bodrie, 49 Mich. 200; Ex parte Badgley, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 472; Johnson v. Smith, 1 Root (Conn.), 373.

Under the Texas Code the expense of keeping prisoners indicted within its limits devolves upon each county notwithstanding any change of venue, and as a recompense for this the amount collected on a forfeited bail bond should be paid to such county. Galveston v. Noble, 56 Tex. 575.

13. State v. Rhodius, 37 Tex. 165.

Plaintiff in error was surety for one S. on the latter's bond for appearance in the county court to answer the State on a charge of theft. Indictment was subsequently found in the district court against S. for petty theft, but neither it nor an information was presented in the county court at its first term after the execution of the bond, nor did the State's attorney show cause and obtain an order of court preventing the lapse of the bond, as provided in article 592, Code of Procedure. Nevertheless, forfeiture of the bond was entered in the county court and such further proceedings had as resulted in final judgment against the plaintiff in error as surety. Held, that the sureties on the appearance bond were discharged from liability by reason of the non-presentment of an indictment or information against their principal at the first term of the county court after the execution of the bond. Jones v. State, 11 Tex. App. 412.

that the bail was given under duress.[1] An undertaking for bail entered into on Sunday during vacation is a case of necessity and valid.[2] Where the judgment of forfeiture is erroneous, the bail is not forfeited.[3] Where the principal is not served with the process after indictment and as a consequence does not appear, the bail is not forfeited.[4]

The failure of an officer to deliver a bail-piece will not discharge the bail.[5]

If the name in the recognizance differs immaterially from the name in the indictment, it is no defence.[6] Where the name in the condition differs from that in the obligatory part of the bond, extrinsic evidence is admissible to identify them.[7]

If the bail bond contains conditions which are not required by statute, it is no defence.[8]

If the office of the justice is changed after bail is given and before the time set for appearance, and the parties, without any knowledge of such change, innocently appear at the former place, the bail is thereby released.[9]

Where a defendant appears before a justice of the peace for examination for a felony at a time fixed by his temporary bail bond, and the justice from press of other business postpones the examination to an unfixed day, and tells the defendant that he will have him notified of the day when fixed, he cannot afterwards appoint a day and forfeit the bond without giving the defendant the promised notice.[10]

Where the bail was raised and a new order of arrest issued, and the accused, hearing of the proceedings through the negligence of the officers, absconded, it was held that the bail was not released.[11]

13. Appearance of Principal.—The principal is bound to appear not only at the term mentioned in the recognizance, but at each succeeding term thereafter until acquitted, or otherwise legally discharged, or, if guilty, until sentence is passed upon him, if not permitted to depart sooner by leave of the court. If he fails to do so, his sureties are bound to produce him, and in event of their failure so to do the bail is forfeited.[12]

Failure to enter the indictment at the term at which it was found will not discharge the bail. State v. Spear, 54 Vt. 503.

1. Archer v. Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 627; Toles v. Adee, 84 N. Y. 222. Compare People v. Shaver, 4 Park. Cr.(N. Y.) 45.

2. Hammons v. State, 59 Ala. 164; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 13; Watts v. Commonwealth, 5 Bush (Ky.), 309; Rice v. Commonwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 14; Johnson v. People, 31 Ill. 469.

3. People v. Budd, 57 Cal. 349. Compare People v. Wolf, 16 Cal. 385.

4. People v. Slayton, 1 Ill. 257.

5. Darling v. Cutting, 57 Vt. 218.

6. People v. Eaton, 41 Cal. 657.

7. Gay v. State, 7 Kan. 394. See p. 21 note CLERICAL ERRORS, etc.

8. State v. Crowley, 60 Me. 103.

9. Hannum v. State, 38 Ind. 32.

10. Flynn v. State, 42 Ark. 315.

11. People v. Eaton, 41 Cal. 657.

12. Gentry v. State, 22 Ark. 544; Moore v. State, 28 Ark. 480; State v. Ryan, 23 Iowa, 406; Lee v. State, 51 Miss. 665; State v. Smith, 66 N. Car. 620; Chase v. People, 2 Colo. 528. Compare Townsend v. People, 14 Mich. 388.

A appeared as recognized, plead to the indictment, and was by order of the court placed in custody of the sheriff, but escaped during his trial. Held, that the bail was discharged. Com. v. Cole-

The departure of the defendant without leave of court is a distinct breach of the recognizance. The provision of a statute that man, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 382; Askins v. Commonwealth, 1 Duvall (Ky.), 275.

The court at which the prisoner is to appear must be mentioned in the recognizance. State v. Rye, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 386. See Grigsby v. State, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 354; Crowder v. State, 7 Tex. App. 484.

The date on which the defendant is to appear must be stated in the recognizance. If a wrong date is given, and the court is not in session upon that day, the recognizance is void. State v. Sullivan, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 281; Com. v. Bolton, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 328.

A condition in a recognizance that the principal shall be and appear before the court on the first day of the term, etc., and then and there answer and abide the order and judgment of said court, etc., is sufficiently broad to require his appearance from time to time, and from term to term, until the case is disposed of. Gallagher v. People, 91 Ill. 590.

Accused failed to appear at the first term in discharge of the bail bond, and under the Criminal Code it was the duty of the court to direct that the fact be entered of record, and thereupon his bond was, as a matter of law, forfeited. His trial and conviction afterwards did not affect the forfeiture of the bond. Walker v. Commonwealth, 79 Ky. 292.

Where the condition in a criminal recognizance was that a principal should appear at a particular term of court, but it contained no provision as to appearing from term to term, or other like provision, the appearance of the principal at the specified term was a compliance with the condition, and her failure to appear at a subsequent term to which the case was continued would not subject the sureties to a forfeiture. Colquitt v. Smith, 65 Ga. 341.

In Gentry v. State, 22 Ark. 544, it was ruled that a recognizance to appear at the next term of court and not to depart thence without leave binds the conusor to appear not only at that time, even if no term of court is held and no notice is given, but at each succeeding term until acquitted or otherwise legally discharged, or, if found guilty, until sentence is passed on him, unless he is permitted to depart sooner by leave of the court.

If the principal appears and the court does not order him into custody, the bail is discharged. Com. v. Coleman, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 382; Billings v. Avery, 7 Conn. 235.

A recognizance conditioned "that the prisoner appear at the next term and thereafter from day to day," etc., binds the surety for the appearance of the prisoner during the first term of court only, and if the court adjourns without making any order the sureties are discharged. Swank v. State, 3 Ohio St. 429; Keefhaver v. Commonwealth, 2 Pa. St. 240; State v. Mackey, 55 Mo. 51; Smith v. People, 1 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 317.

The bail is not released by the commencement of the trial. A surrender or re-arrest is necessary. People v. McCoy, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 73; State v. Brown, 16 Iowa, 314.

Judgment Nisi.—The principal in a bail bond appeared according to its terms, and was placed upon his trial, but the jury failed to agree upon a verdict and was discharged. The court proceeded with the regular call of the docket, but before the call was completed recalled the case against the defendant, without previous order for its recall as prescribed by statute. He failing to appear, judgment nisi was entered against him and his sureties. Held, that the judgment nisi was without the authority of law and void. Johnson v. State, 12 Tex. App. 415; Lyons v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 309.

Misdemeanors.—The defendant having failed to appear and plead to an indictment for misdemeanor, his recognizance may then be estreated, before trial, sentence, and issue of bench warrant. State v. Minton, 19 S. Car. 280.

In this case the court said: "It is conceded that in misdemeanors, unlike felonies, the defendant may be tried in some cases in his absence, and as the object of the recognizance is to secure his presence so as to receive sentence, it has been unusual, if not unknown, in this State, before this case, for the bond to be adjudged forfeited till after conviction and failure to appear for sentence evidenced by bench warrant and a return of non est inventus. The question, however, is not what has been the custom and practice, but what is the law on the subject. We have been unable to find any case in our own reports bearing directly on this point. In the case of State v. Rowe, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 21, Judge Glover, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: 'In misdemeanors, the defendant's obligation compels appearance on the first day of the term, and de die in diem until he has been discharged or until he has pleaded. After he has pleaded he appears by his

the conusor shall not depart without leave is separate and distinct from those which bind him to answer to the specified charge, and to stand to and abide the final order and decree of the court; its object is that he may be held to answer any charge which may be alleged against him, even if it be different from the specific charge originally made.[1] attorney, and his recognizance will not be estreated although he should fail to appear at each succeeding term, provided that after conviction he be present to receive the sentence.' But that question was not directly involved in the case then before the court, as that was a case of felony. These remarks, therefore, though falling from the lips of a learned judge, cannot be recognized as controlling authority, as they were merely obiter. Nor have we been able to find any decisions in our sister States, except in the State of Kentucky. In that State, in the case of Walker v. Commonwealth, 79 Ky. 292, the precise question was made and adjudged, the court holding that trial and conviction was not necessary in order to forfeit bail in a misdemeanor, and that the liability of the surety was fixed when the defendant failed to appear."

In Walker v. Commonwealth, 79 Ky. 292, the court said: "The law governing the question is in this language: 'If the defendant fail to appear for trial or judgment, or at any other time when his presence in court may be lawfully required, or to surrender himself in execution of the judgment, the court must direct the fact to be entered on the record, and thereupon the bail bond, or the money deposited in lieu of bail, is forfeited.' The conditions of the bond of the accused, which conforms to the Code, are that he should appear at the first term of the court after his examining trial, to answer the charge, and to render himself amenable to the orders and process of the court in the prosecution of the charge against him; and if convicted render himself in execution thereof. The accused has not complied with a single condition of his bail bond, and for his failure to perform any of its conditions his sureties became bound for its amount. He did not appear at the first term of the criminal court. When the time for hearing the trial came, the court ordered the accused to be called into its presence to stand his trial; but he failed to appear, although his presence in court was lawfully required. And when he thus failed to appear for trial, the section of the Code quoted made it the court's duty to direct the fact to be entered on the record, and thereupon his bail was, as matter of law, forfeited."

A surety cannot plead to the indictment and offer to pay the fine and costs to save a forfeiture. Warren v. State, 19 Ark. 217.

Under the California Code it is held that the defendant in a charge of misdemeanor is not required to be personally present at the trial; and therefore a failure to be personally present in court when his case is called is not a breach of the condition of the undertaking of his bail. People v. Budd, 57 Cal. 349.

1. In Com. v. Teevens, 3 New Eng. Repr. (Mass.) 350, the court said: "The condition of the recognizance is in the form provided by Pub. Stat. chap. 212, § 43, and the provision that the conusor shall not depart without leave of court is very ancient and has been many times held to be separate and distinct from those which bind him to answer to the specified charge, or to all matters which may be alleged against him (a clause which is found in many recognizances), or to stand to and abide the final order and decree of the court thereon. Even if the principal would be entitled to discharge on indictment being found against him, he has no right to decide the question for himself, even if his decision is such as the court would have made. He must apply to the court, or wait until, by proclamation at the end of the term—which is the custom of some tribunals—or in some other mode, he is informed that he has leave to depart. Crown Cir. Comp. 46. To hold otherwise, as said Chief Justice Ewing in State v. Stout, 6 Halst. (N. J.) 124, 'is to substitute cause for effect, a ground of discharge for the actual discharge, a reason for absolving him from the recognizance for the absolution itself. Again, the object of the provision that the conusor shall not depart without leave of court is that he may be held to answer any charge which may be alleged against him, even if it be different from the specific charge originally made. As bail is substituted for imprisonment, the court still retains over the party giving bail the same rights which it would have had even in actual custody. It was formerly urged that if the conusor, being brought into court, should stand mute, his sureties

BAIL IN CIVIL CASES.—1. Definition.—The persons into whose custody or keeping a defendant under arrest is supposed to be delivered upon their becoming sureties for his appearance, and in case he be condemned in the action that he shall pay the amount recovered against him, or render himself a prisoner, or that they will do it for him.[1] were liable.' In answer to this view it is said (Bacon Abr. title Bail): 'If a man's bail, who are the jailers of his own choosing, do as effectually secure his appearance and put him as much under the power of the court as if he had been in the custody of the proper officer, they seem to have answered the end of the law.' It is said by Mr. Chitty: 'If, however, the sureties are bound by recognizance that a defendant shall appear the first day of such term to answer to a particular information against him, and not to depart until he shall be discharged by the court, and afterwards the attorney-general enters a nolle prosequi as to that information, and exhibits another on which the defendant is convicted and refuses to appear in court after personal notice, the recognizance is forfeited by the default; for, being express that the party shall not depart till he be discharged by the court, it cannot be ratified unless he be forthcoming and ready to answer to any information exhibited against him before he receives his discharge, as much as to that which he was particularly bound to answer.' Chitty. Cr. L. 10 Mod. 152; Hawkins, P. C. book 2, chap. 15, § 84; Bacon Abr. title Bail. This rule has been repeatedly followed. Indeed, it would seem that if the only object of the clause that defendant should not depart without leave was to detain a party who had been properly held to bail to answer a specific charge, so far as that charge is concerned it would be unnecessary. It is necessary because, having been held to bail, the defendant is deemed to be as much in the custody of the court as if actually imprisoned. See also People v. Stager, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 433; People v. Clary, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 374; Keefhaver v. Commonwealth, 2 Pen. & W. (Pa.) 240; Starr v. Commonwealth, 7 Dana (Ky.), 243. If the provision that the conusor shall not depart without leave is a substantive part of the recognizance, in an action upon it for forfeiture by reason of such departure it is not an answer to say that defendant might have obtained his discharge from the court either because nothing was alleged against him by indictment, or because he was not indicted for the same offence as that upon which he had been bound over. Certainly, had the conusor been in actual imprisonment, he would not have been released when other offences were alleged against him by indictment without recognizing to answer the same; nor, under similar circumstances, when brought into court by his bail or appearing there in person, would leave to depart have been given except upon similar terms. We are therefore of opinion that the superior court correctly ruled that by the default of the conusor the recognizance was forfeited, as he was bound not only to appear and answer the specific charge, but also not to depart without leave."

The term is also frequently applied to the undertaking or obli-

In People v. Felton, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 429, it was ruled that quashing the indictment which the accused had given bail to appear and answer was a discharge of the obligation, released the surety, and authorized the prisoner's departure from court without special leave.

1. Bouvier's Law Dict. (15th Ed.); Tomlins' Law Dict.; 3 Blackstone Com. 290; Burrill's Law Dict.; Bac. Abr., tit. Bail; 4 Inst. 178.

Bail Below.—Sureties taken by the sheriff for the defendant's appearance in court at a place and time certain. This kind of bail is obsolete.

Bail Above.—See SPECIAL BAIL.

Bail to the Action.—Same as SPECIAL BAIL.

Civil Bail.—That taken in civil actions. Bouvier's Law Dict.

Common Bail.—Fictitious sureties. Entering common bail is tantamount to entering an appearance.

The bail bond is invariably taken by the sheriff, and in modern practice is conditioned not only for defendant's appearance, but also that he will abide the judgment of the court, thus answering the purpose both of bail above and bail below at common law, so that all species of bail in civil actions are virtually reduced to one, to wit, special bail to the action. Hale v. Russ, 1 Maine, 336; Hamilton v. Dunklee, 1 N. H. 173; Pierce v. Read, 2 N.H. 360; Noyes v. Leonard, 2 Mass. 484; Fetler v. Bryson, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 566; Freeman v. Hayes, 2 Clark (Pa.), 253.

gation entered into by the bail; although this is more properly designated as a bail bond or recognizance.

2. In What Actions Required.—Since imprisonment for debt has been abolished by legislative enactments both in the United States and England, the actions in which bail is required to be furnished by the defendant are very few. The power to arrest a defendant in a civil action has been greatly abridged and is now almost entirely regulated by statute and rules of court.

It is only in actions ex delicto or for torts in no wise connected with a contract that the defendant may be arrested and held to bail.[1]

A capias or warrant of arrest may issue and defendant be held to bail in actions for libel, slander,[2] malicious prosecution,[3] conspiracy,[4] deceit,[5] false imprisonment,[6] trover and conversion,[7] criminal conversation,[8] trespass vi et armis.[9]

In many of the States a warrant of arrest may issue upon an order granted by a judge with the same force and effect as a capias ad respondendum and defendant held to bail.

This is the method employed in cases where there has been fraud in contracting an indebtedness, or where defendant fraudulently conceals his property, or disposes of it with a view of defrauding his creditors, or when he is about to abscond with the purpose of cheating his creditors.

Factors, brokers, and agents, as well as all other persons acting in a fiduciary capacity, may be arrested and held to bail.

1. Whenever it appears that the debt or obligation has arisen out of a contractual relation between the parties, the capias ad respondendum is prohibited, and the defendant will be discharged on common bail, or in case an order of arrest has been issued, the same will be vacated. Hammer v. Ladner, 41 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 376; Bowen v. Burdick, 3 Clark (Pa.), 227; New York Code, sec. 179; Donovan v. Cornell, 13 Daly's Rep. (N.Y.) 339.

2. In actions for libel and slander special damage must be shown to have been sustained by the plaintiff, otherwise defendant will be discharged on common bail, or the order for his arrest will be vacated on motion. McCawley v. Smith, 4 Yeates (Pa.), 193; Life Insurance Co. v. Ecclesine, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 23.

A defendant is held to bail in an action by a trader who shows that by reason of certain libellous and slanderous reports he has been deprived of customers and has thus sustained special damages. Scott v. Crum, 1 Pearson (Pa.), 196.

3. Dempsey v. Lepp, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 11; Orton v. Noonan, 32 Wis. 220.

4. Troub. & H. Pr. 172.

5. Redfield v. Frear, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 449.

6. In an action for deceit defendant was held to bail, and in judgment upon such action he is not entitled to the benefit of the statutes exempting property from execution for debt, and if he has no property he may be arrested and imprisoned. Cox v. Highley, 100 Pa. St. 252.

7. In actions for trover and conversion defendant may be held to bail. Arnold v. Thomas, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 246; Duguin v. Edwards, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 290; Lopeman v. Henderson, 4 Pa. St. 232.

The defendant, a lady broker, being charged with having fraudulently converted to her own use certain money and stocks left with her for investment, was arrested and held to bail, and a motion to discharge her on common bail was refused because it was held that the relations between the parties was not a contractual one. Emerson v. Dow, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 270.

8. Also in an action for crim. con. Dyott v. Dunn, 2 Chit. Rep. 72; Petersdorff on Bail, 38.

9. Defendant may be held to bail in action for damages for an assault and battery, but the assault must be an outrageous one. Davis v. Scott, 15 Abb. Pr. 127; 1 Tidd's Pr., 172 (9th Lond. Ed.); Roberts v. Slingsby, Sid. 307; Moll v. Witmer, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 498.

3. Special Bail.[1]—These must be responsible persons able to justify in double the amount of bail required,[2] residents of the county or district,[3] and freeholders. Two or more persons are usually required, although the number as well as the sufficiency of bail, unless fixed by statute, is a matter for the discretion of the court. Their undertaking is joint and several and conditioned that the principal shall satisfy the judgment and costs or render his body in execution, or that they will do it for him.[4]

4. Liability of.—Bail under the common law were regarded as the jailers of their principal, whom they were supposed to have in charge, for the reason stated by Lord Coke—"because the court of justice doth deliver him unto them to be safely kept."[5] It has also been quaintly said that "Bail have their principal on a string, and may pull the string whenever they please, and render him in their own discharge."[6] This being the relationship existing between the principal and his bail, the latter can at any time surrender the former into the custody of the sheriff, or other proper officer in discharge of their liability.[7] In order to hold bail liable

1. The obligation of special bail is contingent and not the same as that of a surety. Neither is a surety of a principal who has discharged the obligation of the principal entitled to an assignment of the bail bond, if such payment was made before a ca. sa. had been issued and the bail had become fixed by a return of non est inventus. Creager v. Brengle, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 241.

2. Special bail must each justify in double the amount demanded. Chapin v. White, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 105; Petersdorff on Bail, 276.

3. Special bail should reside in the county where the action is brought. People v. New York C. P., 19 Wend. (N.Y.) 132.

4. Petersdorff on Bail, 267.

5. 4 Inst. 178.

6. Anonymous, 6 Mod. 231; Toles v. Adee, 84 N. Y. 240.

7. Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. Rep. (N. Y.) 145, is one of the leading cases on the rights of the bail over the principal. The court say: "Bail have a right to surrender the principal in their own discharge whenever they please. They may take him up even on a Sunday and confine him until the next day, and then surrender him. It is the constant language of courts (Lord Hardwicke in Ex parte Gibbons, 1 Atk. 237) that bail are their principals' jailers, and that it is upon this notion that they have an authority to take them. and in case a man absconds and his bail cannot find him, they shall have a warrant to take him out of any pretended place of privilege in order to surrender him, because he is a prisoner to the court, and they may call him at pleasure . . . It will thus be seen that as between the bail and his principal the controlling power of the former over the latter may be exercised at all times and in all places." To the same effect are Parker v. Bidwell, 3 Conn. 84; Koch v. Coots, 43 Mich. 30; Com. v. Brickett, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 140; Johnson v. Boyer, 3 Watts (Pa.), 378; Ruggles v. Correy, 3 Conn. 421; Respublica v. Gaoler, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 263.

The executor of bail may surrender the principal. Meadowscraft v. Sutton, 1 Bos. & Pull. 62.

Bail may recover from his principal the expenses of sending after him to take him for the purpose of making a surrender. Fisher v. Fellows, 5 Esp. Cas. 171.

Bail may delegate their power to arrest the principal to another who may act with the same force and effect that the bail could have done. Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. Rep. (N. Y.) 146; Holsey v. Trevillo, 6 Watts (Pa.), 402; Parker v. Bidwell, 3 Conn. 84.

An agent thus deputed by bail went to the principal's house in a neighboring State, about 12 o'clock at night while the principal and his family were in bed, and demanded the house to be opened or that he would break it open, and soon after broke open the outer door and entered, and found the principal rising and commanded him to dress. He was immediately hurried along the river and pushed into a boat. On demanding the cause of such rough treatment, he was informed that he was upon their undertaking, the proceedings must not only be regular and conform in every respect to the statutory requirements,[1] but the recognizance itself must also be such as the law defines, and any material variation will render the bond void and discharge the bail as bail, although they may be held liable on the undertaking as a voluntary agreement.[2]

But bail cannot discharge themselves by surrendering their principal after default made unless permitted to do so by some statutory enactment or by rule of court.[3] The death of the principal after a return to a ca. sa. fixes definitely the liability of the bail, but a principal's death before bail is legally fixed discharges their obligation.[4] arrested on a bail-piece. Held, that special bail have a right to enter by force into the house of the principal after a reasonable demand of entrance and refusal, and the party making the arrest would not be liable in an action for damages unless for undue force or unnecessary severity. Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 147; Pease v. Burt, 3 Day (Conn.). 485.

The rights of bail in civil and criminal cases are the same. Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366; Harp v. Osgood, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 218.

If the principal is surrendered by the bail before the bail is fixed, the latter may be discharged on motion, and is entitled to have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece. Ruggles v. Correy, 3 Conn. 421.

Bail may doubtless permit the principal to go beyond the limits of the State within which he is to answer, but it is unwise and imprudent so to do; and if any evil ensue, they must bear the burden of the consequences, and cannot cast them upon the obligee. Devine v. State, 5 Sneed. 625; Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366.

Bail may surrender his principal by procuring a certified copy of the bail bond and delivering it to the sheriff, and have him to arrest the principal. The actual arrest by the sheriff is equivalent of a delivery of the principal by the bail, and releases the bail from liability. Sternberg v. State, 42 Ark. 127.

The power of bail to arrest the defendant and keep him imprisoned is derived from the right of the plaintiff to have satisfaction of the body, and ceases with it. But a temporary stay of execution by agreement of plaintiff, in consideration of a confession of judgment by the defendant, will not exonerate the special bail in the action. Johnson v. Boyer, 3 Watts (Pa.), 376.

Bail are discharged where there are long delays in the prosecution of a suit, and where the cause of action in the amended declaration differs from that stated in the affidavit to hold to bail. Fish v. Barbour, 43 Mich. 19.

In an action against special bail, it is for the court to determine whether the declaration in the original suit set up grounds of action not covered by the affidavit for bail. Wilkinson v. Nichols, 48 Mich. 354.

An undertaking containing any material alteration from the order of arrest is void, as having been taken by the sheriff colore officii and incapable of enforcement against the bail. Cook v. Freudenthal, 80 N. Y. 202; Toles v. Adee, 84 N. Y. 232.

2. The sureties on a bail bond, reciting that the principal was in custody by virtue of a writ of capias ad respondendum, are discharged when as a matter of fact the principal was in custody by virtue of a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum. Bail are entitled to a strict construction of the obligation creating their responsibility and measuring its extent. Gunn v. Geary, 44 Mich. 615.

The sheriff must take a bond in conformity with the order of arrest, otherwise it is void as a statutory obligation, and cannot be enforced as such against the bail, although if the sureties have agreed to the form and manner of the obligation as taken by the sheriff, it may be enforced as a common-law agreement, and the estate of such deceased surety will be liable. Toles v. Adee, 84 N. Y. 232.

3. In case a scire facias issue against special bail, they have until the quarto die post to surrender their principal, and have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece. Cowles v. Brawley, 4 Watts (Pa.), 358; McClurg v. Bowers, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 24.

1. Ruggles v. Berry, 76 Me. 262.

4. Olcott v. Lilly, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 407;

As a rule, bail can only be discharged from liability by the performance of the conditions of the recognizance entered into by them unless that becomes impossible by the act of God, or of the law, or of the obligee.[1]

BAILIFF.—A person put in charge of something; a sheriff's officer;[2]

White v. Blake, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 612; Petersdorff on Bail, 389.

1. Kelly v. Henderson, 1 Pa. St. 495; Gillespie v. Hewlings, 2 Pa. St. 492; Newton v. Tibbetts, 7 Ark. 150; Beers v. Haughton, 9 Peters (U. S.), 358; Mannin v. Partridge, 14 East, 599.

It is a well-settled principle that whereever the law takes the principal out of the custody of his bail, either by the operation of an insolvent or bankrupt law, or otherwise, so as to prevent his surrendering, it is tantamount to a surrender. The moment the plaintiff loses his right to take or hold the principal, the bail is discharged, for the latter cannot keep where the former cannot take the body. Bail for some purposes are said to be fixed by the return of non est inventus upon the capias ad satisfaciendum; but if they have by the indulgence of the court time to render the principal until the appearance day of the scire facias against them, they cannot be considered as completely and definitely fixed until that period. And so much are proceedings against bail deemed a matter subject to the regulations and practice of courts that they will not hesitate to relieve them in a summary manner and direct an exoneretur where justice seems to demand it. Where bail are entitled to be discharged ex debito justitiæ, they may not only apply for an exoneretur by way of summary proceedings, but they may plead the matter as a bar to a suit in their defence. But where the discharge is matter of indulgence only, the application is to the discretion of the court, and an exoneretur cannot be insisted on except by way of motion. Where a principal would be entitled to an immediate and unconditional discharge if he had been surrendered there, the bail are entitled to relief by entering an exoneretur without any surrender. Beers v. Haughton, 9 Peters (U. S.), 355. See also note to the above case in Book 9, U. S. S. C. 145.

But otherwise if liability of bail was fixed before principal was entitled to be discharged under the insolvent laws of a State. Lyon v. Auchencloss, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 234.

The allowance of bail to surrender the principal after the return of a capias ad satisfaciendum is considered as a matter of favor and indulgence, and not of right. But courts will allow bail to surrender the principal within a limited period after the return of the scire facias against them as matter of favor. In certain cases even a formal surrender has not been required where the principal was living and capable of being surrendered, and an exoneretur would be entered and the principal discharged immediately upon the surrender. But this rule has never been applied to cases where the principal dies before the return of the scire facias. In such a case the bail is considered as fixed by the return of the ca. sa, and his death afterwards does not entitle the bail to an exoneretur. Davidson v. Taylor, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 604; Dowlin v. Standifer, Hempst. (Md.) 290; Hamilton v. Dunklee, 1 N. H. 172; Noyes v. Leonard, 2 Mass. 484.

2. Bailiff signifies an officer concerned in the administration of justice in a certain province. Coke Lit. 168 b. Thus, the sheriff is called the king's bailiff. 1 Black. Com. 344.

Bailiffs or sheriff's officers are either bailiffs of hundreds or special bailiffs. Bailiffs of hundreds are officers appointed over their respective districts by the sheriff, to perform various duties therein. The sheriff being answerable for the misdemeanors of these bailiffs, they are therefore usually bound in an obligation with sureties for the due execution of their office, and thence are called "bound bailiffs." 1 Black. Com. 345.

Special Bailiffs are officers appointed by the sheriff, at the application of a party in a civil suit and named by such party, for the purpose of executing some particular process therein. Whenever a party thus chooses his own officers, it is held to discharge the sheriff from all responsibility for what is done by them in the execution of the process. 2 Stephen's Com. 633. See Ford v. Leche, 6 Ad. & El. 699; Balson v. Megat, 4 Dowl. 557; Alderson v. Davenport, 13 M. & W. 42; Botten v. Tomlinson, 16 L. J. C. B. 138.

Where an act provided that the judges of certain courts should appoint "bailiffs" who alone, and no others, should execute the process, and enacted that no suit should be brought against such bailiff for anything done in pursuance of his duty, a person who has the care and custody and management of lands or goods for the benefit of their owner.[1]

BAILMENT. (See also AUCTIONEERS; BILLS OF LADING; CARRIERS; CHATTEL MORTGAGES; CONDITIONAL SALES; INNKEEPERS; SALES; WAREHOUSEMEN; WHARFINGERS.)

1. Definition.—A bailment is a transfer of the possession of personal property from one person to another without a transfer or the ownership of it.[2]

it was held, that one who de facto executes the process of the court, under the sergeant-at-mace, but who has not been appointed by the judge of said court, is not a "bailiff" within the statute, so as to be entitled to the notice prescribed by the act. Tarrant v. Baker, 5 Scott, 199.

In the United States, the officer corresponding to a bailiff is generally called a deputy-sheriff. There are two kinds of deputies of a sheriff: a general deputy, or under-sheriff, who by virtue of his appointment has authority to execute all the ordinary duties of the office of sheriff; and a special deputy, who is an officer, pro hac vice, to execute a particular writ on some certain occasion. The former is bound to take an oath of office and file his appointment, but the latter is not. Allen v. Smith, 7 Halst. (N. J.) 159.

No deputy can transfer his general powers, but he may constitute a servant or bailiff to do a particular act; hence an under-sheriff may depute a person to serve a writ. Hunt v. Barrel, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 137.

The sheriff is liable for the acts of his deputies, and it is not necessary to show a particular warrant to his officer, nor that the sheriff adopts the deputies' acts. Hazard v. Israel, 1 Binney (Pa.), 240.

This liability extends to all acts done under color of his office. Wilbur v. Strickland, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 458. See Satterwhite v. Carson, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 549; Knowlton v. Bartlett, 1 Peck (Tenn.), 271.

But for personal torts, though committed while about the execution of official duties, the deputy alone is liable. Smith v. Joiner, 1 Chip. (New Brunswick) 62. See Harrington v. Fuller, 6 Shep. (Me.) 277.

On admissions and declarations of a deputy as affecting the sheriff, see State v. Allen, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 36; Wheeler v. Hambright, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 390.

1. By bailiff is understood a servant that hath administration and charge of lands, goods, and chattels, to make the best benefit for the owner. Coke on Litt. 172 a.

A bailiff is defined to be one who has charge of lands, goods, and chattels of another to make the best profit for the owner, and to have his reasonable charges and expenses deducted; and is accountable for the profits he reasonably might have had. Bredin v. Kingland, 4 Watts (Pa.), 420. See Barnum v. Landon, 25 Com. 137, 149; Elwell v. Burnside, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 447, 453; Huff v. McDonald, 22 Ga. 131, in which last case it was decided that a bailiff must pay interest, as he is bound to his principal for the actual profits.

2. For a collection of various defini-

nitions of bailment, see Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 2 and note 2.

A bailment is distinguished from a sale by the fact that in the former only the right of possession and not the title to the article delivered is transferred. Benjamin on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), §§ 1 and 2 and note p. 6; Ex parte White, L. R. 6 Ch. App. 397; South Australian Ins. Co. v. Randall, L. R. 3 P. C. 101.

Grain in Elevator.—In many cases it is difficult to determine whether a given transaction is a bailment or a sale. Thus, in the case of grain stored in an elevator, where the understanding of the parties is that the grain is to be mingled with other grain, and it is not contemplated that the keeper of the elevator shall return the identical grain stored, but only that he shall return an equal amount of grain of the same kind and grade, the courts have not been unanimous as to whether the transaction is a bailment or a sale. The following cases held that the transaction was a sale: South Australian Ins. Co. v. Randall, L. R. 3 P. C. 101; Chase v. Washburn, 1 Ohio St. 244; Lonergan v. Stewart, 55 Ill. 44; Richardson v. Olmstead, 74 Ill. 213; Bailey v. Bensley, 87 Ill. 556; Johnston v. Beaver, 37 Iowa, 200; Nelson v. Brown, 44 Iowa, 455; Carlisle v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 252; Rahilly v. Wilson, 3 Dill. (U. S. C. C.) 420.

The following cases, on the contrary, held the transaction to amount to a bailment: Sexton v. Graham, 53 Iowa, 181; Nelson v. Brown, 53 Iowa, 555; Ledyard v. Hibbard, 48 Mich. 421; Andrews v. Richmond, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 20. See 6 Am. Law Rev. 450.

The theory upon which the transaction is sustained as a bailment is that the depositors of grain stored in any particular bin became tenants in common of the entire mass of grain contained in that bin, with the right to sever their undivided interests at any time. See 6 Am. Law Rev. 450; Andrews v. Richmond, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 20.

In November, 1882, one K., a miller and warehouseman, received of W. five hundred bushels of wheat, and agreed verbally to store such wheat until July 1, 1883; that before that date W. might sell the wheat when he pleased, or that wheat would be returned if called for. The wheat was mingled with other wheat purchased by K., in his flouring-mill, which ground, when running, about two hundred bushels of wheat per day, and thereafter, until March 3, 1883, ran about one half of the time. In February, 1883, W. received from K. a writing in evidence of the aforesaid verbal contract. On March 3, 1883, K. ceased to run the mill, and between that date and July 1, 1883, he executed to the defendant S. and others a chattel mortgage on all the wheat in the mill, amounting at the time to nineteen hundred bushels. On June 30, 1883, W. demanded of K. the wheat or the money on his contract, but received neither; and on July 3, 1883, W. demanded of the defendants S. et al., while they were removing the wheat from the mill, that they should leave five hundred bushels thereof in the mill for him, which they refused to do, and afterwards converted all the wheat, and the proceeds thereof, to their own use. Held, upon the foregoing facts, that the contract of K. with W., verbal or written, was not a mutuum or exchange, nor a sale of the wheat, but that it was a contract of bailment, pure and simple. Held, also, that, under such contract, K. and W. became and were tenants in common of the nineteen hundred bushels of wheat remaining in the mill, W. to the extent of his five hundred bushels, and K. as to the residue; and that K. could not sell or mortgage W.'s wheat to the defendants, so as to divest the plaintiff's title thereto, or to authorize its removal from the mill, after W.'s demand that it should be left there. Held, also, that when, after such demand, the defendants removed the wheat from the mill and converted the same to their own use, they became and were liable in damages to the plaintiff, as the owner of the wheat so converted, for its fair value. Schindler v. Westover, 99 Ind. 395.

When grain is delivered to a warehouseman, and a miller also, and it is understood that the grain is to be deposited with other grain in one bin, and that the miller is to have the right to draw from that bin for the purpose of grinding. held, that the transaction is a sale. Andrews v. Richmond, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 20.

The written receipt given by the elevator owner to the depositor is often decisive as to whether the transaction shall be deemed a bailment or a sale, the courts refusing to admit any evidence for the purpose of altering the effect of the writing. Sexton v. Graham, 53 Iowa, 181; Nelson v. Brown, 53 Iowa, 555, and 44 Iowa, 455; Wadsworth v. Alcott, 6 N. Y. 64.

Delivery of Goods for Manufacture.—In general, raw materials delivered to be manufactured are bailed and not sold. Foster v. Pettibone, 7 N. Y. 433.

Where raw materials are delivered to be manufactured, the manufacturer to have a share of the product for his compensation, held, that the transaction is a bailment, not a sale, and the owner retains title until the division of the product is actually made. Gregory v. Stryken, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 628.

Plaintiff sent wheat to a miller to grind, he to receive a barrel of flour for every five bushels of wheat furnished. Held, a bailment, not a sale of the wheat. Seymour v. Brown, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 44; Slaughter v. Green, 1 Rand. (Va.) 3; Mallory v. Willis, 4 N. Y. 76.

When A delivered to B cotton yarn to be manufactured into cloth, B to find the filling, and to weave so many yards of cloth, at an agreed price per yard, as was equal to the value of the yarn at 65 cents a pound, held, that this was a sale of the yarn to B, and not a mere bailment. Buffum v. Merry, 3 Mason (U. S. C. C.), 478.

Mutuum.—A loan of things to be used in consumption, such as corn, oil, etc., where the borrower was to return, not the specific thing borrowed, but an equal quantity of the same kind of thing, was, in the Roman law, called a mutuum. It differed from a gratuitous loan in that the title to the specific thing borrowed passed to the borrower. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 47, 228

Goods Delivered to be Paid for in Futuro.—A contract read: "Received of G. one sewing-machine, which I agree to safely keep and carefully use, and not remove from W. county, and at the end of three months return the same free of charge and unincumbered: provided, always, and it is expressly understood, that if, on or before the expiration of the above time, I shall pay to the said G. the sum of $60, then this receipt shall be null and void." Held, a contract of bailment, not of sale. Dunlap v. Gleason, 16 Mich. 158. See Sargent v. Gile, 8 N. H. 325; Porter v. Pettengill, 12 N. H. 299; Clark v. Jack, 7 Watts (Pa.). 375; Whitney v. McConnell, 29 Mich. 12; Kohler v Hayes, 41 Cal. 455; Partridge v. Philbrick, 60 N. H. 556.

An hotel was leased for five years. At the same time the lessor agreed "to furnish to the lessee, with the said hotel, under this lease, all the stock and furniture therein, and upon payment therefor, in full, to execute to him a bill of sale therefor, the title thereto to be and to remain in the lessor until the said payment." Under this agreement $4000 had been paid on account of the price of the furniture. Held, that the transaction amounted to a bailment only, and not a conditional sale, and that no title passed to the lessee which could be levied upon by his creditors. App. of Edwards, 105 Pa. St. 103.

Miscellaneous Cases.—The Weir Plow Co. made an agreement in writing with H., by the terms of which it was to manufacture and furnish to him certain farming implements; it also agreeing not to sell such implements to any one else in a designated county for the year 1876. H. was to sell the implements at a certain price, and to have a certain fee or commission for every sale; was required, when he sold on credit, to take notes of a particular character payable to the company, to which notes he was to add his own guaranty of payment; was to keep the notes of the company and business separate, and to remit the cash received by him each month for each implement sold for cash, and to hold himself ready for settlement by the 1st of July, 1876, or any time thereafter, when called upon by the company. It was further provided that if H. failed or neglected to sell all the implements so delivered to him, he was to settle for those remaining on hand by paying for them in notes, or to store them subject to the order of the company, whichever method of disposition the company might choose to accept, the whole agency being subject to revocation upon the failure of said H. to discharge his duties. Held, that the unsold implements did not vest in H., and that the contract as to them was one of bailment and not of sale, unless the company chose to make him vendee upon his offering his paper for their price, and did not choose to order the implements on storage for the future disposition of the company. Weir Plow Co. v. Porter, 82 Mo. 23.

A leased to B certain machinery for one year at a specified rental. He agreed to sell to B the said machinery at the expiration of the lease for a stipulated price, and B agreed to purchase it at that time. B further agreed that at any time, on thirty days' notice from A, he would purchase the machinery for the said price; that if he failed to do so A might sell the machinery at any time thereafter, and should the proceeds of such sale be less than the price aforesaid, B would pay A the amount of the deficiency. B entered into possession, and C, one of his creditors, levied on the machinery as his property. In a feigned issue between A and C to determine their respective rights in said property, held, that the agreement constituted a bailment and not a conditional sale; that in the absence of collusion between A and B it was not void as against C under the Statute of Fraudulent Conveyances; that

2. Kinds of Bailment.—Bailments are ordinarily classified into Deposits, Mandates, Gratuitous Loans, Bailments for hire, and Pledges or Pawns.

(a) DEPOSIT.—A deposit is a bailment of goods to be kept without reward and delivered according to the object or purpose of the original trust.[1]

(b) MANDATE.—A mandate is similar to a deposit. Like the deposit, it is a bailment without compensation to the bailee.[2] But while the storage of the goods is the chief object of a de-

A was therefore entitled to recover. Dando v. Foulds. 20 Fla. 74.

A delivered to B two colts, under a contract that B should safely keep and sell them, if possible, for A, he fixing a minimum price, before a certain date; and if not, to return them in good condition. Held, that this was not a sale, but a bailment. Middleton v. Stone, 111 Pa. St. 589.

Where it is agreed that the goods delivered are to be returned, or other goods of the same kind, this is not a bailment, but a sale. Hurd v. West, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 752; Marsh v. Titus, 6 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 29.

A consignment of cotton to defendant held to import a bailment, not a sale. Furlow v. Gillian, 19 Tex. 250.

Where property is delivered by A to B to sell, pay a debt owing from C to B, and return the surplus, the transaction is a bailment, not a sale. Bourg v. Lopez, 36 La. Ann. 439.

Where a sale is made on a void consideration, no contract of bailment can be implied. Green v. Hollingsworth, 5 Dana (Ky.), 173.

A vendor who agrees to store the goods sold in consideration of the purchase-money is a bailor. Oakley v. State, 40 Ala. 372.

Loan—Special Deposit.—A special deposit is a deposit of money with another upon the understanding that the identical money is to be returned. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 84.

A deposit for "safe-keeping" of a certain number of gold coins "to be returned whenever called for" is presumptively a special deposit, and not a loan. Wright v. Paine, 62 Ala. 340.

Where gold coin was originally bailed as a special deposit, and subsequently the parties agree that the bailee shall pay interest, the special deposit is presumptively changed into a loan. Howard v. Roeben, 33 Cal. 399.

The privilege granted to a bailee of gold-dust of converting it into coin does not change his liability into that of debtor to the consignee. Goodenow v. Snyder, 3 G. Greene (Iowa), 599.

Where money of A is left by him for safe-keeping with B, with the understanding, not that the identical money shall be kept for and returned to him, but only that a like sum shall be repaid him by B, this is not a bailment or special deposit, but a general deposit, in the nature of a loan; and B is absolutely liable to A, in assumpsit, for an equal sum, although the money may have been lost without his fault. Shoemaker v. Hinze, 53 Wis. 116.

A merchant who receives money subject to call, without reward, and keeps it separate from his own, is not liable for a theft of the deposit without his fault or negligence, although he has permission, of which he never avails himself, to use it, and his book-keeper, with the depositor's acquiescence, and the merchant's, occasionally withdraws for a short time small amounts to make change. Caldwell v. Hall, 60 Miss. 330; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 410.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 4.

The principal object of a deposit is the keeping or storage of the thing delivered. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 56.

The custody must be gratuitous. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 57.

Title-deeds and instruments evidences of debts may be the subject of a deposit. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 51.

A depositary may terminate the bailment by giving the bailor notice and a reasonable opportunity to remove the goods. If the bailor then neglects to remove the goods, the depositary may put them out upon the sidewalk. Roulston v. McClelland, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 60.

A deposit of money for the benefit of another may be countermanded by the depositor at any time before the money has been actually appropriated. Winkley v. Foye, 33 N. H. 171.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §153; Wilson v. Wilson, 16 La. Ann. 155; Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (N.Y.) 84; McGee v. Bast, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 453.

posit,[1] in the case of a mandate the object of the bailment is to give the bailee possession in order that he may perform some acts upon or in reference to the bailed goods.[2]

(c) GRATUITOUS LOAN.—A gratuitous loan (commodatum) is a bailment of an article for a certain time, to be used by the borrower without paying for the use.[3]

To constitute a bailment a gratuitous loan, its chief object must be that the bailee may have the use of the bailed article.[4]

(d) BAILMENT FOR HIRE.—Bailments for hire comprise all those classes of bailments where the bailee hires the use of the bailed article,[5] and also those where the bailor hires the bailee to

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 56.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 5, 137, and 140.

A mandate being without consideration, the mandatary cannot be compelled to perform the act for the purpose of which the goods were delivered to him. Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 84; McGee v. Bast, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 453; Story Bailm. (9th Ed) §§ 166–169. A mandatary may, however, be held liable in tort for a misfeasance. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 170; Ferguson v. Porter, 3 Fla. 27.

In a mandate, the act to be done must be lawful and not against sound morals. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 158.

He must render his mandator a full account of his proceedings. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 191. He may recover his actual disbursements and expenses about the thing bailed. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §154. And may credit himself in his account with all necessary expenses and charges. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 193, 197. A mandatary may bind his mandator by all contracts necessary to the performance of the mandate. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 198. He is entitled to be remunerated for all losses incidental to the mandate. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 200.

3. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 220, 6.

A gratuitous loan may be put an end to at any time by the lender. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 258; Orser v. Storms, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 687.

In the case of a gratuitous loan, the borrower has no right to let any third person use the borrowed article. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 235.

A borrower is bound to return the article in a "reasonable time" if no time is fixed. Green v. Hollingsworth, 5 Dana (Ky.), 173.

The borrower (without compensation) must bear all expenses which he is put to in using the borrowed article. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 256. But not extraordinary expenses not connected with the use of the borrowed article. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 256, 273.

A lender of a chattel is responsible for defects in it with reference to the use for which the loan is accepted, of which he is aware, and owing directly to which the borrower is injured. Blakemore v. Bristol, etc., R. Co., 8 El. & Bl. 1035. See MacCarthy v. Young, 6 H. & N. 329.

4. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 226.

A gratuitous loan must, as its name indicates, be without compensation. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 6, 220.

5. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 370, 383.

Where A delivers cattle to B, which B promises to redeliver within one year, with the natural increase, and paying for such as were lost, this is a letting for a valuable consideration. Putnam v. Wiley, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 432.

Where the bailee takes a horse to take care of, he to have the use of the horse in consideration of his keep, this is a bailment for the mutual benefit of both parties. Chamberlain v. Cobb, 32 Iowa, 261.

Property bailed for hire for a specific term is not subject to attachment for debts of the bailor during the term. Hartford v. Jackson, 11 N. H. 145.

The lettor is bound to allow the hirer the unobstructed use of the thing let during the time for which it is let. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 385.

The lettor may, it is said, take possession of it during the time in order to make necessary repairs. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 385.

A lettor of an article to be put to a particular use impliedly warrants that it is fit for that use. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 390.

Where a horse hired to perform a certain journey and return becomes disabled by lameness while on the return, without hirer's fault, and hirer has to procure other means of returning and incur expenses in consequence thereof, he may recoup such expenses against the bailor's store or carry the bailed article or perform some work or act upon it.[1]

(e) PLEDGE.—A pledge or pawn is a bailment of goods by one person to another to secure the performance of some legal obligation.[2]

claim for hire. Harrington v. Snyder, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 380.

A livery-stable keeper is liable for an injury caused by the unsuitableness of the horse for the purpose for which he was hired. Horne v. Meakin, 115 Mass. 326.

Where a hirer is by inevitable casualty deprived of the use of the thing during the term for which it was let, it seems that the price to be paid for hire must be apportioned. Wilkes v. Hughes, 37 Ga. 361; Muldrow v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 13 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 69. See Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 417, 418.

The hirer is bound to provide food for the hired animal. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 393.

Whether the lettor or the hirer is bound to keep the hired article in repair depends upon the special facts of the hiring. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 388, 392.

The lettor is liable to the hirer for all extraordinary expenses necessarily incurred upon the thing let. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 389.

A lettor of goods for hire is, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, bound to deliver the goods to the borrower. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 384.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 370, 421, 422.

One engaging to perform work upon goods impliedly warrants that he possesses and will exercise the degree of skill necessary to perform the work in a workmanlike manner. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 43.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 7, 286, 300.

It is of the essence of the contract that the goods should be delivered as security for some debt or engagement. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 300. But the engagement need not necessarily be to pay money. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 300.

A pledge cannot be recovered back on the ground of illegal consideration, where the plaintiff is a party to the illegal consideration. Taylor v. Chester, L. R. 4 Q. B. 309.

A pledge made to secure a contract, legal because made on Sunday, is valid. King v. Green, 6 Allen (Mass.), 139.

Goods pledged to secure a usurious loan cannot be recovered without a tender of the amount actually due. Causey v. Yeates, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 605. Compare Beecher v. Ackerman, 1 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 141.

A pledge may be given to secure advances of money to be made in the future. Wolf v. Wolf, 12 La. Ann. 529; Macomber v. Parker, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 497; Badlum v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 398; Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 448.

Property pledged to secure future advances cannot be held to secure a prior debt. Robinson v. Frost, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 536. See St. John v. O'Connel, 7 Port. (Ala.) 466; Gilliat v. Lynch, 2 Leigh (Va.), 493; Mahoney v. Caperton, 15 Cal. 313; Baldwin v. Bradley, 69 Ill. 32.

Pledge Distinguished from Mortgage — A pledge differs from a mortgage in that the title to the goods does not pass to the person secured in the case of the pledge, but does in the case of the mortgage. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 287; Sims v. Canfield, 2 Ala. 555; Eastman v. Avery, 23 Me. 248; Day v. Swift, 48 Me. 368; Ward v. Sumner, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 59; Homes v. Crane, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 607; Walker v. Staples, 5 Allen (Mass.), 34; Kimball v. Hildreth, 8 Allen (Mass.), 167; Cortelyou v. Lansing, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 200; Brown v. Bement, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 197; M'Lean v. Walker, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 471; Lewis v. Stevenson, 2 Hall (N. Y.), 63; Fletcher v. Howard, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 115; Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 449.

A bill of sale absolute upon its face, but intended only as collateral security, amounts only to a pledge, which is lost on giving up possession of the property. Walker v. Staples, 5 Allen (Mass.), 34; Kimball v. Hildreth, 8 Allen (Mass.), 167.

A transaction in form a sale may actually be merely a pledge. Bright v. Wagle, 3 Dana (Ky.), 252.

In the case of a pledge of shares of capital stock of a corporation, the legal title passes to the pledgee. Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443. A pledgee of shares is not regarded as owner so as to be entitled to notice of meetings. McDaniels v. Flower Brook Mfg. Co., 22 Vt. 274.

An indorsement of a note held merely intended as a pledge and not as a mortgage. M'Lean v. Walker, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 471.

Delivery.—Delivery is essential to the creation of the pledge.[1]

Loss of Possession Defeats.—Where possession of the goods is given up to the pledgor the pledge is defeated.[2]

Sale.—A pledgee has an implied power to sell the pledged goods after a default by the pledgor.[3]

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 297; First, etc., Bank v. Nelson, 38 Ga. 391; Nevan v. Roup, 8 Iowa 207; Foltier v. Schroder, 19 La. Ann. 17; Walcott v. Keith, 22 N. H. 196 Propst v. Roseman, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 130; Owens v. Kinsey, 7 Jones (N. Car.), 245; Thompson v. Andrews, 8 Jones (N. Car.), 453.

A pledge obtained by false pretences, although unredeemed, vests no interest in the pledgee. Mead v. Bunn, 32 N. Y. 275.

When the goods are already in the possession of the pledgee, they may be pledged by a mere verbal arrangement without any further delivery. Van Blarcom v. Broadway Bank, 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 532; Tibbetts v. Flanders, 18 N. H. 284.

Delivery of possession may be to a third person for the benefit of the pledgee. This third person may even be a servant of the pledgor. Sumner v. Hamlet, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 76.

One who has a contract for a pledge ineffectual for want of delivery of the goods may obtain a subsequent delivery, and thus validate the pledge, even as against an intermediate creditor. Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18.

Constructive Delivery.—Where an actual delivery cannot be had there may be a constructive delivery. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 297.

According to the law of Louisiana, nothing can be pledged save what is susceptible of a delivery actual, fictitious, or symbolical. Caffin v. Kirwan, 7 La. Ann. 221.

A savings-bank deposit may be pledged by a delivery of the pass-book. Boynton v. Payrow, 67 Me. 587.

Goods in a warehouse may be pledged by a delivery of the warehouse receipt unindorsed when there is a general custom to transfer possession of goods in this manner. Whitney v. Tibbets, 17 Wis. 359.

Indorsement is not requisite to a valid pledge of a bill of exchange. Sanders v. Davis, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 432; Petitt v. First, etc., Bank, 4 Bush (Ky.), 334.

In order to pledge shares of stock there should be such a delivery of possession as the thing is capable of. The pledgee must be clothed with all the usual indicia of ownership. Pinkerton v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 42 N. H. 424.

A pledge may be created by a written transfer where the property is not capable of manual delivery and possession, as in the case of shares of stock. Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443; Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15.

The delivery of the certificate with a blank power of attorney as collateral security will constitute a pledge and not a mortgage. And this is probably true of a transfer on the books, absolute in form, but intended in fact as collateral security; because, although a transfer is absolute in form, parol evidence can be introduced in equity to show that it was, in fact, intended only as collateral security. Lowell Transfer of Stocks, § 53. citing Brick v. Brick, 98 U. S. 514; Ginz v. Stumph. 73 Ind. 209; Newton v. Fay, 10 Allen (Mass.), 505; McMahon v. Macy, 51 N. Y. 155.

In New York it is held that the legal title passes to the pledgee. Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443; Hasbrouck v. Vandervoort, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 74; Hill v. Newichawanick Co., 48 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 427; Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 364; Barret v. Cole, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 40; Smith v. Sasser, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 43; Bodenhammer v. Newson, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 107; Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467.

Where the pledgee is deprived of possession by the pledgor, equity will compel a redelivery. Coleman v. Shelton, 2 McCord Ch. (S. Car.), 126.

Loss of possession defeats the pledge. But where the pledgee delivers back the property to the owner for a temporary purpose, and is to receive the goods again when that purpose is accomplished, the pledge is not defeated. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 299; Hays v. Riddell, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 248; Thayer v. Dwight, 104 Mass. 254; Hutton v. Arnett, 51 Ill. 198; Babcock v. Lawson, 5 Q. B. D. 284.

Where goods are pledged by the vendee while in the vendor's warehouse, and subsequently the vendor removes them to another warehouse with the vendee's consent, held, the pledge is not destroyed. Jones v. Baldwin, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 316.

3. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 308; Pigot v. Cubley, 15 C. B. N. S. 701; Mauge v.

Heringhi, 26 Cal. 577; Parker v. Brancker, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Washburn v. Pond, 2 Allen (Mass.), 474; Wilson v. Little, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 351; Wheeler v. Newbould, 5 Duer (N.Y.), 29; Milliken v. Dehors, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 325; Haskins v. Patterson, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 120; Gennet v. Howland, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 560; Lewis v. Graham, 4 Abb. Pr. (N.Y.) 106; Mowry v. Wood, 12 Wis. 413; Stevens v. Hurlburt Bank, 31 Conn. 146; Hyatt v. Argenti, 3 Cal. 151. Davis v. Funk, 39 Pa. St. 243; Diller v. Brubaker, 52 Pa. St. 498; Conyngham's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 474; Brightman v. Reeves, 21 Tex. 70.

The pledgee may also effect a sale by virtue of foreclosure proceedings. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 310.

A pledgee is liable to the pledgor if he sells more than enough of the pledged goods to pay his debt. Fitzgerald v. Blocher, 32 Ark. 742; Conyngham's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 474.

The power of sale is a right, not a duty. A pledgee is not obliged to sell, and is not liable for the depreciation of the pledged property while unsold in his hands. Rozet v. McClellan, 48 Ill. 345; Badlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 400; Granite Bank v. Richardson, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 407; Robinson v. Hurley, 11 Iowa, 410; Richardson v. Ins. Co., 27 Gratt. (Va.) 749; Williamson v. McClure, 37 Pa. St. 402.

A court of equity will in some cases interfere and compel the sale by the pledgee of the pledged goods. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 320; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. 278.

A court will not order the sale of deposit at a bank pledged for a debt, but will appoint an officer to receive the deposit and make a proper disposition of it. Boynton v. Payrow, 67 Me. 587.

The subsequent bankruptcy of the pledgor does not deprive pledgee of his right to sell. Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734.

Notice.—A pledgee may sell after the debt has become due without judicial process, but must first demand payment of the debt, and give notice of the time and place of the sale. Mauge v. Heringhi, 26 Cal. 577; Parker v. Brancker, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Washburn v. Pond, 2 Allen (Mass.), 474; Wilson v. Little, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 351; Wheeler v. Newbould, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 29; Milliken v. Dehon, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 325; Haskins v. Patterson, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 120; Gennet v. Howland, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 560; Lewis v. Graham, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 106; Mowry v. Wood, 12 Wis. 413; Stevens v. Hurlburt Bank, 31 Conn. 146; Hyatt v. Argenti, 3 Cal. 151; Davis v. Fink, 39 Pa. St. 243; Diller v. Brubaker, 52 Pa. St. 498; Conyngham's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 474; Brightman v. Reeves, 21 Tex. 70.

Pledgee must demand debt and give notice of sale before he is authorized to sell. Bryan v. Baldwin, 52 N. Y. 232; Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443; France v. Clark, L. R. 22 Ch. D. 830; Diller v. Brubaker, 52 Pa. St. 498; Conyngham's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 474.

But it seems that no demand is necessary where there is a stipulated day for payment and the pledgor makes default. Pigot v. Cubley, 15 C. B. N. S. 701.

A pledgee has no right to sell without notice to pledgor. McNeil v. Tenth National Bank, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 59; Strong v. National, etc., Banking Assoc., 45 N. Y. 718; City Bank of Racine v. Babcock, 1 Holmes (U. S. C. C.), 180; Gay v. Moss, 34 Cal. 125; Alexandria, etc., R. Co. v. Burke, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 254.

Where shares are pledged with a stock-broker under a written agreement which states that the pledgee is to have the right to sell on default of payment without notice, held, that the pledgee, who had sold the shares before the debt became due, could not prove a custom among stock-brokers to sell pledged stock at any time, returning to the pledgor an equal amount of the same stock on payment of the debt, such a custom being contrary to the express terms of the written contract. Allen v. Dykers, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 593, and 7 Hill (N. Y.), 497. See also Lawrence v. Maxwell, 53 N. Y. 19.

Where, by the terms of the agreement, the pledgee is given authority "to use, transfer, or hypothecate the stock at his option," and is not required to return the specific shares deposited, but only an equal amount of the same stock, held, that the pledgee could sell the pledged shares before the maturity of the debt. Ogden v. Lathrop, 65 N. Y. 158.

Notice of the time and place of the sale may be waived by the express terms of the contract of pledge. Maryland, etc., Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 242; Baltimore, etc., Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 269.

A private sale, without notice, of pledged bonds cannot be sustained even where the owner could not be found for the purpose of making a demand or giving notice. Strong v. National, etc., Banking Assoc., 45 N. Y., 718.

Where it becomes impossible to give notice of sale to the pledgor, the necessity of notice is waived. City Bank of Racine v. Babcock, 1 Holmes (U. S. C. C.). 180.

Power to Collect.—A pledgee of commercial paper has implied power to collect the same at maturity.[1]

Redemption.—A pledgor has the right to redeem goods pledged for a debt at any time before they are sold.[2]

Notice of sale must be given even when the debt is payable in futuro. Stearns v. Marsh, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 227.

In case of a sale of pledged stock the pledgee need not give notice of the place of sale to the pledgor. Worthington v. Tormey, 34 Md. 182.

Notice to redeem a pledge must allow a reasonable time for redemption. Gennet v. Howland, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 560; Gay v. Moss, 34 Cal. 125.

Notice of the time and place of the sale is not necessary if the pledgor has actual knowledge thereof. Alexandria, etc., R. Co. v. Burke, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 254.

A broker buying stocks on margin is liable for a conversion if he sells the shares before default and without notice. Read v. Lambert, 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 428; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N.Y.235.

The pledgee has no right to sell at private sale. Baltimore, etc., Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 269; Rankin v. McCullough, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 103. Unless by express agreement. Bryson v. Rayner, 25 Md. 424.

The proper place for a sale of stock is at the broker's board. Baltimore, etc., Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 269. See Rankin v. McCullough, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 103.

The pledgee cannot himself purchase the pledge at the sale. Stokes v. Frazier, 72 Ill. 428; Bank of Old Dominion v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa, 277; Lewis v. Graham, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 106; Baltimore, etc., Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 269; Bryson v. Rayner, 25 Md. 424.

Stock pledged as collateral and wrongfully sold for non-payment without proper notice, cannot be pursued in the hands of a bona-fide purchaser for value without the clearest proof of notice that the shares were pledged. Little v. Barker, 1 Hoffm. (N. Y.) 487.

Where the pledge is sold for the debt of the pledgor, the pledgee may recover the value of the goods and not merely the value of his lien. Soule v. White, 14 Me. 436.

Where a pledgee purchases at his own sale, and such sale is invalid by reason of defective notice, the sale is a mere nullity, and does not affect the relation of the parties. Bryan v. Baldwin, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 174.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 321; Nelson v. Wellington, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 178; Brookman v. Metcalf, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 429, 445. Compare Lewis v. Varnum, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 305; Richards v. Davis, 5 Clark (Pa.). 471.

An express authority to sell does not take away the pledgor's implied authority to collect. Nelson v. Wellington, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 178; Brookman v. Metcalf, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 429, 445.

The pledgee not only has the right to collect, but it is his duty to do so May v. Sharp, 49 Ala. 140; Burrows v. Bangs, 34 Mich. 304; Reeves v. Plough, 41 Ind. 204; Goodall v. Richardson, 14 N. H. 567; Cardin v. Jones, 23 Ga. 175; Word v. Morgan, 5 Sneed, 79; Hanna v. Holton, 78 Pa. St. 334.

A pledgee of a note must sue on it when due, and is liable in damages for failure to do so. He may, however, excuse himself by showing that the parties to the note were insolvent. Grove v. Roberts, 6 La. Ann. 210.

In Wheeler v. Newbould, 16 N. Y. 392, it was held that the pledgee of negotiable paper had no power to sell it, but must collect it and apply the proceeds upon his debt. See also Fletcher v. Dickinson, 7 Allen (Mass.), 23; Nelson v. Edwards, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 279; Lamberton v. Windom, 12 Minn. 232; Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 321, note 4. In Wheeler v. Newbould, 16 N. Y. 392, the negotiable paper had but a short time to run. In Fraker v. Reeve, 36 Wis. 85, it was held that pledged negotiable paper could be sold. In that case the note was not to mature till long after the debt became due. This distinction is pointed out in Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 321, note 4, and seems to reconcile the two cases.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 345, 346; Huntington v. Miller, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 538; White Mountains R. Co. v. Bay State Iron Co., 50 N. H. 57; Jones v. Thurmond, 5 Tex. 318.

A pledgor may redeem a pledge in equity after default and before sale. The fact that he may sue in trover for the goods, after a tender of the amount due and demand, does not deprive equity of jurisdiction. White Mountains. R. Co. v. Bay State Iron Co., 50 N. H. 57.

Extinguishment of.—A pledge is extinguished by payment of the debt,[1] or the recovery of a judgment for the debt,[2] or by the destruction of the pledged goods.[3]

Suit on Debt.—A creditor who has a pledge may sue upon the debt without relinquishing the pledge or selling it.[4]

Levy.—Pledged goods cannot be levied upon in an action by a third person against the pledgor.[5]

Warranty.—By giving a pledge the pledgor impliedly warrants his title to the pledged goods.[6]

Trover will not lie against the pledgee for goods pledged to secure a note payable upon a fixed day, unless the pledgor tendered the amount of the note upon the day fixed. Butts v. Burnett, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 302.

The right to redeem passes to the personal representatives of the pledgor. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 348.

A pledgor's right to redeem at any time before sale cannot be cut off by an agreement between the parties. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 318, 345; Lucketts v. Townsend, 3 Tex. 119.

Property pledged may be redeemed, at any time after default, until sold, but property mortgaged cannot be redeemed after the Statute of Limitations has run from the time of default. Huntington v. Mather, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 538.

The Statute of Limitations does not run against the right to redeem a pledge until the pledgee shows by some act that he has put an end to the relation of pledgor and pledgee. Jones v. Thurmond, 5 Tex. 318.

Where a pledgor leaves the pledged goods in the hands of the pledgee for many years after default, and long after the debt they were given to secure is barred by the Statute of Limitations, an abandonment of the goods to the pledgee will be assumed, and a court of equity will refuse to allow the pledgor to redeem. Waterman v. Brown, 31 Pa. St. 161. But see Hancock v. Franklin Bank, 114 Mass. 155.

The maker of a note, who has pledged goods to secure it, is not entitled to a return of the goods when the Statute of Limitations has run upon the note. Jones v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 162. See Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 362.

Pledgors of bonds secured by mortgage may redeem the bonds, if still in the possession of the pledgee, although the mortgage has been foreclosed. White Mountains R. Co. v. Bay State Iron Co., 50 N. H. 57.

In a pledge of stock, the identical stock need not be returned, as between pledgor and pledgee. Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99; Hawks v. Hinchliff, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 492; Prall v. Tilt, 27 N. J. Eq. 393; Berlin v. Eddy, 33 Mo. 426. Compare Langton v. Waite, L. R. 6 Eq. 165.

A demand for a return of an equal number of shares of stock pledged must be made during the existence of the company, or no damages can be recovered for a failure to comply with the demand. Fosdick v. Greene, 27 Ohio St. 484.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 359.

A payment of a part of the debt does not release any part of the pledge. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 301.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 361.

An attachment by the pledgee of the goods pledged to enforce his lien and as a mode of sale does not defeat the pledge. Arendale v. Morgan, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 703.

A pledgee suing upon the debt secured may attach other property of the pledgor without returning the pledged goods. Beckwith v. Sibley, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 482; Taylor v. Cheever, 6 Gray (Mass.), 146.

A pledge is not released by the pledgor's committing the debtor's body to prison upon an execution for the debt. Morse v. Woods, 5 N. H. 297.

3. Where the pledged property has undergone transmutations without the consent of the pledgee it is still subject to the pledge. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 363.

4. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 315; Whitwell v. Brigham, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 117.

A pledgor, in an action by the pledgee to recover his debt, cannot recoup damages to the pledge by the pledgor's want of diligence. May v. Sharp, 49 Ala. 140.

5. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 353; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 L. D. Raym. 909; Badlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 389.

In Stief v. Hart, 1 Comst. (N. Y.) 20, it was held that the right of the pledgor in the pledged goods was subject to levy and sale.

6. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 354; Mairs v. Taylor, 40 Pa. St. 446.

A pledgor of goods that he does not

Alienation.—The pledgee may alienate his right to possession of the pledged goods.[1]

3. Lien.—A lien is a right, arising by operation of law and not by agreement of the parties, to hold possession of goods to secure the payment of a debt.[2] own cannot set up a subsequently-acquired title to defeat the pledge. Goldstein v. Hort, 30 Cal. 372.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 324; Bullard v. Billings, 2 Vt. 309; Belden v. Perkins, 78 Ill. 449; Allen v. Dykers, 3 Hill (N.Y.), 593; Read v. Lambert, 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N.Y.) 428.

Where the pledgee before default attempts to alienate more than his special property in the goods, his act amounts to a conversion, and the pledgor may immediately sue him in trover. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 322.

The pledgee may, however, recoup the amount of his debt. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 315; Fant v. Miller, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 187; Brightman v. Reeves, 21 Tex. 70; Lane v. Bailey, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 395; Johnson v. Stear, 15 C. B. N. S. 330. Compare Cortelyou v. Lansing, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 200; Dykers v. Allen, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 497; Wilson v. Little, 2 N. Y. 443; Lewis v. Graham, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 106.

The purchaser or pledgee from the pledgee is also liable in trover, although he was ignorant of the pledge. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 323; Newsom v. Thornton, 6 East, 17; Martini v. Coles, 1 M. & Selw. 140; Shipley v. Kymer, 1 M. & Selw. 484; Pickering v. Busk, 15 East, 38; Queiroz v. Trueman, 3 B. & Cr. 342.

The purchaser may, in such a case, if he purchased in ignorance that the goods were pledged, hold as against the original pledgor, until the original debt is paid. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 327; Jarvis v. Rogers, 15 Mass. 389; Donald v. Suckling, L. R. 1 Q. B. 585; Halliday v. Holgate, L. R. 3 Exch. 299.

Where a pledgee is allowed to retain possession after a tender of the amount due, the pledgor is estopped to claim the goods as against a bona-fide purchaser from the pledgee who was ignorant of the pledge. Bradley v. Parks, 83 Ill. 169.

A, a dealer in whiskeys, bought a lot of whiskeys through B, another dealer, and suffered B to keep the goods as apparent owner. B pledged the goods to C, his creditor, still retaining possession of them, but giving C a receipt stating that he held the goods as bailee for C. The goods were subsequently delivered to A by a clerk of B in B's absence. Held, C could not assert his pledge as against A. Geddes v. Bennett, 6 La. Ann. 516.

2. Every bailee for hire who by his labor or skill imparts additional value to the goods has a lien thereon for his charges. Morgan v. Congdon, 4 N. Y. 552; King v. Humphreys, 10 Pa. St. 217; Eaton v. Lynde, 15 Mass. 242; Burdict v. Murray, 3 Vt. 302.

One who has bailed goods to an artisan to have work done upon them may reclaim them before the work is completed, and the artisan has a lien only for what he has done. Lilley v. Barnsley, 2 M. & Rob. 548.

Where goods are delivered to have work performed on them, which is to be paid for at a future day, the bailee has no lien upon the goods bailed. Tucker v. Taylor, 53 Ind. 93.

The lien for work performed upon a chattel is lost by a delivery of the chattel to a common carrier for the owner. Morse v. Androscoggin R. Co., 39 Me. 285.

No lien can be imposed upon bailed property without the bailor's consent. Small v. Robinson, 69 Me. 425.

A person having a lien on a chattel for a debt cannot add to the debt the expense of keeping the chattel until the debt is paid. Somes v. British Empire Shipping Co., 8 H. L. C. 338.

An agister has, in the absence of special agreement, no lien for care and feeding. McDonald v. Bennett, 45 Iowa, 456.

Wharfingers have a general lien for the balance of their accounts. Naylor v. Mangles, 1 Esp. 109; Spears v. Hartley, 3 Esp. 81; Rushforth v. Hadfield, 6 East, 519; 7 East, 224; Moet v. Pickering, L. R. 8 Ch. D. 372; Rex v. Humphrey, M'Clel. & Y. 173; Grant v. Humphrey, 3 F. & F. 162.

An innkeeper has a lien on all goods brought by the guest, although they turn out to be the property of a third party. Snead v. Watkins, 1 C. B. N. S. 267; Johnson v. Hill, 3 Stark. 172; Mulliner v. Florence, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 484.

A common carrier, on the contrary, does not appear to have a lien, as against the true owner, on goods delivered to him by one who does not own them. Fitch v. Newberry, 1 Mich. 1; Robinson v. Baker, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 137; Stevens v.

Sale.—One having a lien upon goods has no right to sell them after default in the payment of the debt.[1]

4. Contract.—A bailment is often, though not invariably, accompanied by a contract express or implied.[2]

But in the absence of, and independently of, any contract, the law imposes certain duties upon the parties.[3]

Thus the duty of taking proper care of the bailed goods devolves upon the bailee, even where there is no contract of bailment.[4]

5. Degree of Care.—The degree of care of the bailed goods required of the bailee is fixed by the provisions of the contract of bailment, if there are any provisions upon the subject.[5] In the Railroad Co., 8 Gray (Mass.), 262; Clark v. Railroad Co., 9 Gray (Mass.), 231; Gilson v. Gwinn, 107 Mass. 126; Travis v. Thompson, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 236.

An innkeeper who accepts security from his guest for the payment of hotel charges does not, in general, waive thereby his common-law lien upon the goods of the guest for the amount of such charges. Angus v. McLachlan, L. R. 23 Ch. D. 330.

A finder has no lien at common law for his reasonable expenses in the case of the found article. But it seems he has an action for them against the owner. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 121.

The finder of an article who deposits the same for safe-keeping has an action against his bailee for a loss of the same through negligence. Tancil v. Seaton, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 601.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 311.

2. In the case of a deposit or mandate it would seem that generally there is no contract, for the reason that there is no consideration. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 5, 137, 140, 166–169; also n. 4 to § 2; Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 84; McGee v. Bast, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 453.

The delivery of the goods is, no doubt, a sufficient consideration for a contract by the depositary or mandatary, if accepted by him as such. McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; McCauley v. Davidson, 10 Minn. 418.

But, inasmuch as he is to receive no benefit from the delivery of the goods, it would seem that the presumption is against his having intended to accept the delivery as an exchange or consideration for any promise, expressed or implied. The contract of bailment, where there is one, fixes the rights and duties of the bailor and bailee. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 31 et seq.

3. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 10.

4. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 10.

One who hires a horse under a contract, void because made on Sunday, is liable in tort for an injury caused to the animal by misuse or carelessness. Stewart v. Davis, 31 Ark. 518; Frost v. Plumb, 40 Conn. 111; Fisher v. Kyle, 27 Mich. 454; Hall v. Corcoran, 107 Mass. 251.

5. The legal responsibility of a bailee may be narrowed or enlarged by contract. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 33; Mariner v. Smith, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 203.

A bailee cannot by contract exonerate himself from liability for losses caused by his own fraud, but he may from those arising from his own negligence, even gross. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 32.

A clause in a lease of furniture binding the lessee to return the property in as good a condition as reasonable use and wear thereof would permit, does not vary the duty imposed by the law of bailments; and therefore a loss by fire, without fault on the part of the hirer, falls upon the owner. Hyland v. Paul, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 241. One hiring a piano and agreeing to return it "in as good order as when received, customary wear and tear excepted," is liable for an injury to the piano caused by inevitable accident. Harvey v. Murray, 136 Mass. 377; Drake v. White, 117 Mass. 10; and see Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 36.

A barge was hired by a steamboat under an agreement that the barge should be given up on notice "in good order, the usual wear and tear excepted." The barge was destroyed by the ice in the Mississippi without fault by the hirer. Held, that the hirer was not liable under the terms of the contract for the value of the barge. McEvers v. Steamboat Sangamon, 22 Mo. 187.

By agreement between two railroad companies, the first was to forward loaded cars of the second to certain points on its road, paying the second road for the use of the cars, both roads to share profits. The first road agreed to return the cars to the second in as good condition as when received, ordinary wear and tear by use excepted. Held, the first absence of such provisions, the degree of care imposed by law upon the bailee depends upon the circumstances of the case.[1] Where the bailment is solely for the benefit of the bailor, the bailee is, in general, held to only a slight degree of diligence in the care of the bailed article.[2] road was not liable for injury to cars caused by inevitable accident. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. 26 Minn. 243; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 404.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 239.

A bailee is not, in general, liable for losses resulting from inevitable accident, such as losses by earthquake, storms, etc., or from irresistible force, such as robbery. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 25; Conwell v. Smith, 8 Ind. 530; Mein v. West, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 170.

Seizure of the bailed goods by the military forces of the government without the fault of the bailee exonerates the latter from liability. Watkins v. Roberts, 28 Ind. 167. See Levy v. Bergeron, 20 La. Ann. 290; also James v. Greenwood, 20 La. Ann. 297. So does attachment for the bailor's debt. Perley v. Brawn, 18 N. H. 404.

A loss by theft is not by inevitable accident, and whether it excuses the bailee or not depends upon whether the bailee was guilty of negligence or not. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 27, 407. A bailee of goods for hire is not responsible if they are stolen by his servants without negligence on his part. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 407; Finucane v. Small, 1 Esp. 315.

Defendant owned a building in the city of New York, used and occupied as a storehouse. Under an agreement with plaintiff, who desired to store for safe-keeping certain household furniture, a space was allotted to her in said building, and defendant assured her that her goods would be safe, and would be guarded day and night. The allotted space was inclosed by wooden partitions with a door, upon which were two locks, the key of one of which was kept by plaintiff. When money was paid by plaintiff it was receipted for, generally as paid for storage. Most of the property was stolen by those in charge of the building. In an action to recover damages the court charged, in substance, that the contract was one of bailment; that defendant, if liable at all, was liable as a warehouseman, and bound to exercise ordinary care and prudence. Held, no error. Jones v. Morgan, 90 N. Y. 4; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 131.

Bonds gratuitously deposited in a bank to be kept without reward, were placed in a fire-proof safe where the bank kept its own valuable securities, and no one but the cashier and the authorities of the bank had access thereto. The cashier was a man who was highly respected by the community, and had the entire confidence of the directors. Held, that there was no evidence of such negligence on the part of the bank as to make it liable for a loss through the dishonesty of the cashier. Comp v. Carlisle Deposit Bank, 94 Pa. St. 409.

A bailee of goods to perform work upon them is bound to exercise ordinary care to protect them from depredations by his servants. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 429; Clarke v. Earnshaw, Gow. 30; Halyard v. Dechelman, 29 Mo. 459.

A depositary is not liable for losses occasioned by theft without negligence. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 68–72. Giblin v. McMullen, L. R. 2 P. C. 317; Scott v. National Bank of Chester Valley, 72 Pa. St. 471.

Inn-keepers and common carriers are, at common law, held liable for damage to the goods, even where caused by inevitable casualty, unless such damage results from an act of God. See INN-KEEPERS and CARRIERS.

A public miller is not liable, like a common carrier or an inn-keeper, but he is bound to exercise a high degree of care in respect of grain left in his custody. Wallace v. Canaday, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 364.

2. Story Bailm. § 23; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; Chase v. Mayberry, 3 Harr. (Del.) 266; Gulladge v. Howard, 23 Ark. 61; Dart v. Lowe, 5 Ind. 131; Dougherty v. Posegate, 3 Iowa, 88; Johnson v. Reynolds, 3 Kan. 257; Green v. Hollingsworth, 5 Dana (Ky.), 173; Mechanics' Bank v. Gordon, 5 La. Ann. 604; Dunn v. Branner, 13 La. Ann. 452; Hills v. Daniels, 15 La. Ann. 280; Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 500; Whitney v. Lee, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 91; McKay v. Hamblin, 40 Miss. 472; Eddy v. Livingston, 35 Mo. 487; Edson v. Weston, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 278; Patterson v. McIver, 90 N. Car. 493; Monteith v. Bissell, Wright (Ohio), 411; Spooner v. Multoon, 40 Vt. 300; Carrington v. Ficklin's Exec., 32 Gratt. (Va.) 670.

Deposit.—A depositary is held only to a slight degree of care of the bailed goods. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 62.

In fixing the degree of care required of a depositary, the law does not regard the capacity of the particular depositary, but requires such degree of care as the average man would exercise in the premises. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 66.

Where the depositor knowingly intrusts his goods to a depositary notoriously weak or infirm of judgment, the depositary will not be held responsible for as high a degree of care as is ordinarily required of depositaries. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 66.

The fact that the depositary took no better care of goods of his own similar to the bailed goods will not exonerate him from liability if grossly negligent in respect to both. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 63, 64, and 64a; Giblin v. McMullen, L. R. 2 P. C. 317; Doorman v. Jenkins, 4 N. & M. 170. But see Bland v. Womack, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 373.

The plaintiff delivered to the defendant bank $4000 of U. S. bonds, and received this writing: "Received of J. D. Whitney four thousand dollars, for safe-keeping as a special deposit. S. M. Waite, C." Held, that it was a naked deposit without reward; that the defendant would not be liable for the robbery or larceny of the bonds, unless there was complicity or bad faith; that it was answerable only for fraud or for gross negligence; that the law demands good faith and the same care of the plaintiff's bonds as defendant took of its own of like character. Whitney v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Vt. 154; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 598.

Where one engaged to collect rents for another without reward, except the use of the money, collects it in the daytime and puts it in the money-drawer of his store-room at night, and the next morning the room and the money were destroyed by an accidental fire, he is not bound to exercise more than ordinary care, and is liable for gross negligence only. In such case, proof that the money collected was placed in the money-drawer, among the money and accounts of the defendant, was proper. Bronnenburg v. Charman, 80 Ind. 475.

A ticket-agent who, for the convenience of passengers, receives and stores their baggage is not liable except for losses of such baggage occasioned by his want of ordinary care. Green v. Birchard, 27 Ind. 483.

Goods received at the cloak-room of a railway company are not received by them in the capacity of carriers, but simply as bailees for hire. Van Toll v. South East. R. Co., 31 L. J. C. P. 241; 12 C. B. N. S. 75.

A man lent a flag to his employer, helped him to hoist it, and left it flying when he went away. It was afterwards damaged by a hail-storm. Held, that the employer was not liable for the damage done, without proof, at least, that he had failed to take due care of it. A borrower of property is not an insurer of it, even when it is gratuitously lent. An action does not lie for the value of property gratuitously lent, on a showing merely that the lender had sent for it and had not received it back; it is not presumable without proof that the borrower wrongfully withheld it. Beller v. Schultz, 44 Mich. 529; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 280.

In an action for negligently keeping the plaintiff's goods, the report of an auditor stated that the defendant was the proprietor of a building which he let in suites to tenants for housekeeping purposes, furnishing them with attendance, heat, and water; that the plaintiff had a lease of one of the suites, and desired more room for storing trunks; that the defendant told him there was a general store-room in which he might put them; that the assistant janitor slept there, and he thought they would be safe; that he had employed a competent man, who would guard the goods; that the plaintiff afterwards put his trunks there; that afterwards the assistant janitor went away and did not return; and that then the contents of the plaintiff's trunks were found to have been stolen. The report further stated that the auditor found that, on these facts, the defendant was not an innholder, and was not guilty of gross negligence; and that the plaintiff could not maintain his action. Held, that no error of law appeared. Davis v. Gay, 141 Mass. 531.

S., being a guest of N., deposited with him for safe-keeping, without reward or profit, four United States coupon bonds of the value of $1000 each, and a bond of the value of $500. N. agreed to take care of the bonds solely for the accommodation of S.; he placed them in a box in which he kept his own valuable papers, and locked it, and put the box in a bureau drawer in his bedroom, and locked the drawer. This disposition of the bonds was made with the knowledge and consent of S. Some time afterward, S., being desirous of obtaining the coupons then due, went to the house of N., where he had ceased to reside, and they going upstairs together, N. unlocked the bureau drawer, took out the box, unlocked it, and handed the bonds to S., who cut off the coupons and returned the bonds to N., who replaced them in the box and locked it, and put the box in the bureau drawer, and then locked the drawer. Subsequently a female thief entered the house of N., "went upstairs and found the doors open, went first into the front room and found the bureau drawers open, then went into the adjoining room and found the second drawer of the bureau in that room locked; she broke the lock, and took out the box, broke the lock of the box, and took out the four $1000 bonds of S., and the papers of N., and left the house without seeing any one." Some time before the theft N., without the knowledge of S., had withdrawn the $500 bond and deposited it with certain brokers as collateral security for money borrowed by a friend, whose note he had indorsed. He subsequently, however, paid to S. $526.25, the amount due on the face of the bond with interest to date. An action was brought by S. against N. to recover the value of the bonds. The narr. contained three counts—one in trover, and two in case for negligence. Held, that the evidence offered by the plaintiff was not legally sufficient to warrant a jury in finding that the bonds were lost by the actionable negligence of the defendant. Schermer v. Neurath, 54 Md. 491; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 397.

Where the bailment is for the sole benefit of the bailee, he is held to a very high degree of diligence.[1] When it is for the mutual benefit of both parties, he is held to an ordinary degree of diligence.[2]

A finder of goods is held to the same degree of care as a gratuitous loan. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 87.

Mandatary.—A mandatary is liable for gross negligence only. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 174; Nabb v. Lockhart, 18 Ga. 495; Skelley v. Kahn, 17 Ill. 170; Kemp v. Farlow, 5 Ind. 462; Connor v. Winton, 8 Ind. 315; Jourdan v. Reed, 1 Iowa, 135; Sodowsky v. McFarland, 3 Dana (Ky.), 204; Storer v. Gowen, 18 Me. 174; Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528; McLean v. Rutherford, 8 Mo. 109; Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Anderson v. Foresman, Wright (Ohio), 598; Tompkins v. Saltmarsh, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 275; Bland v. Wormack, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 373.

Bailees of money without recompense are liable for its loss during transmission by mail or private conveyance to the owners, where the owners have not authorized its transmission in such manner. Stewart v. Frazier, 5 Ala. 114.

One gratuitously undertaking to convey money is guilty of gross negligence in giving it to another to convey for him, and will be liable if the money is stolen from the latter person. Colyar v. Taylor, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 372.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 23; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; Doorman v. Jenkins, 4 N. & M. 170.

A borrower without compensation is bound to take extraordinary care of the borrowed article. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 237.

More than ordinary care is required of a borrower. Green v. Hollingsworth, 5 Dana (Ky.), 173.

One who borrows a horse is held to a higher degree of care of the animal than one who merely hires a horse. Howard v. Babcock. 21 Ill. 259; Bennett v. O'Brien, 37 Ill. 250; Hagebush v. Ragland, 78 Ill. 40.

A borrower is responsible for injury arising from neglect on his part, however slight, but not for an injury occurring wholly without his default. Wood v. McClure, 7 Ind. 155; Scranton v. Baxter, 4 Sandf. (N.Y.) 5.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 23; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; Bakewell v. Talbot, 4 Dana (Ky.), 217; Fulton v. Alexander, 21 Tex. 148.

A hirer is only bound to exercise ordinary diligence in the care of the hired article. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 379; Mayor of Columbus v. Howard, 6 Ga. 213; Swigert v. Graham, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 661; Jackson v. Robinson, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; Brown v. Waterman, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 117; Millon v. Salisbury, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 211; Angus v. Dickerson, 1 Meigs (Tenn.), 459.

The hirer of a horse is liable for want of reasonable care and skill in driving him. Mooers v. Larry, 15 Gray (Mass.), 451.

One hired to drive horses is liable similarly to a bailee for hire. Newton v. Pope, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 109.

One taking a horse on trial, to purchase if satisfactory, is only liable for ordinary care. Colton v. Wise, 7 Bradw. (Ill.) 395; Laborde v. Ingraham, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 419.

Agisters of cattle are bound to exercise ordinary care. Umlauf v. Bassett, 38 Ill. 96; Hally v. Murkel. 44 Ill. 225; McCarthy v. Wolfe, 40 Mo. 520; Eastman v. Patterson, 38 Vt. 146.

A livery-stable keeper taking care of

Other circumstances besides the nature of the bailment affect the degree of diligence required of a bailee. The nature of the article bailed, and other facts surrounding the bailment, may also be important factors in determining the degree of care required of him.[1] horses and carriages for hire is bound to take only reasonable care of the bailed property. He is bound to take care that any building in which the property is kept should be reasonably safe and proper for the purpose. But where he employs a competent contractor to build a shed in which carriages are stored, he is not liable for an injury caused to them by the shed being blown down owing to defective construction. Searle v. Laverick, L. R. 9 Q. B. 122.

The liability of one who negligently receives goods not directed to him is the same as that of a bailee for hire. Newhall v. Paige, 10 Gray (Mass.), 366.

An overseer is held to such care of the property intrusted to him as an ordinarily prudent man would exercise over his own property. McCracken v. Hair, 2 Spears (S Car.), 256.

The master of a vessel is liable to the owner for loss of boats belonging to the vessel only in case of gross negligence. Burrows v. Reeves, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 427.

A bailee of property to be worked upon is liable for ordinary neglect. McCaw v. Kimbrel, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 220.

Where A received post notes to collect if possible and credit the amount upon the debt of the owner to A, and, if not collected, to return to said owner, A must seasonably present the notes for payment and notify the owner of non-payment. Medomack Bank v. Curtis, 24 Me. 36.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 182, 186; Kirtland v. Montgomery, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 452; Griffith v. Zipperwick, 28 Ohio St. 388.

The division of negligence into three classes, gross, ordinary, and slight, has been much criticised by eminent judges.

In Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113, Baron Rolfe said that he could see no difference between negligence and gross negligence; that gross negligence was the same thing as negligence with the addition of a vituperative epithet.

In Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 661, Lord Denman said: "It may well be doubted whether between gross negligence and negligence merely, any intelligible distinction exists."

In Lord v. Midland R. Co., L. R. 2 C. P. 344, Wills, J., said: "Any negligence is gross in one who undertakes a duty and fails to perform it. The term 'gross negligence' is applied to a gratuitous bailment." It would seem that negligence was a negative term, meaning simply want of due care—a failure to exercise that degree of care which the law imposes upon the person deemed negligent. If so, any bailee who has been guilty of negligence, i.e., failure to exercise the degree of care which the law requires of him, is answerable in damages for injuries resulting from his want of care, whether the bailment be gratuitous or not. It cannot be said that such a bailee is answerable only for gross negligence, unless negligence and gross negligence mean the same thing. The degree of care which the law requires of bailees doubtless depends upon the circumstances of the case, and varies with particular facts. Story Bailm. § 11. The fact that the bailment was without benefit to the bailee, is an important factor in fixing the degree of care required of the bailee, a less degree of care being required than when the bailment is wholly or partly for his benefit. When the courts say that a gratuitous bailee is only responsible for gross negligence, the meaning seems to be that he is only answerable for a failure to exercise that lesser degree of care which the law requires of a gratuitous bailee.

It is competent to show a usage of trade to qualify a bailee's liability. Kelton v. Taylor, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 264; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 284.

A party riding a horse at the request of the owner, for the purpose of exhibiting him for sale, without any compensation, is bound to exercise such care and skill as he possesses. Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113.

The fact that the owner knew and acquiesced in the kind and degree of care exercised by the bailee, will not excuse the latter for failure to exercise a proper degree of care. Conway Bank v. American Express Co., 8 Allen (Mass.), 512. Compare Knowles v. A. & St. L. R. Co., 38 Me. 55.

The measure of the bailee's responsibility is to be determined in each case by a comparison with the conduct of classes of men, not of individuals. First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 79 Pa. St. 106.

6. Duty of Restitution Independent of Contract.—The duty of the bailee to make restitution of the bailed goods is one which the law imposes, and does not depend on the existence of any contract.[1]

7. Bailee Must Account for Profits.—The obligation of the bailee to account for and return all increase and profits of the bailed goods is also one that exists independently of any contract.[2]

8. Use of Bailed Article.—The right of the bailee to use the bailed article depends upon the special facts of the bailment.[3]

9. Restitution: To whom Made.—Where the bailment is made by several jointly, the bailee is not justified in returning the goods to one of them.[4]

Where the bailor has sold the goods during the bailment, the bailee is not obliged to return the goods to the vendee.[5]

10. Restitution: How Made.—The duty of the bailee as to the time, manner, and place of return is governed largely by the special circumstances of each particular case.[6]

1. A bailee who wrongfully refuses to deliver up goods upon demand to his bailor is liable in an action of tort. Hill v. Wiggin, 31 N. H. 292; Brown v. Cook, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 361; Phelps v. Bostwick, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 314; West v. Murph. 3 Hill (S. Car.), 284; Jackman v. Partridge, 21 Vt. 558.

Where the bailee contracts to restore the goods at a fixed time and fails to do so, he becomes liable in an action of tort (detinue). Lay v. Lawson, 23 Ala. 377; Clapp v. Nelson, 12 Tex. 370.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 99, 194, 260, 339, 343; Geron v. Geron, 15 Ala. 558; Hunsacker v. Sturgis, 29 Cal. 142; Houton v. Holliday, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 111; Gilson v. Martin, 49 Vt. 474. See ANTICHRESIS.

3. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 89, 90, 329, 330; Thompson v. Patrick, 4 Watts (Pa.), 414.

In the case of a gratuitous loan or a hiring for use, the use of the article is, of course, the object of the bailment. See GRATUITOUS LOAN and BAILMENT FOR HIRE, p. 44.

In the case of deposits and persons, the right to use the bailed article depends (in the absence of express agreement) upon the nature of such article. If it is of such a nature that a user of it will benefit it, a right of user will be implied; otherwise where the use of it would involve risk or cause deterioration. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 89, 90, 329, 330.

Where the care of the bailed article is the object of the bailment, the right of user is restricted by the terms of the contract of bailment, express or implied. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 232, 413.

4. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 114; Harper v. Godsell, 5 L. R. Q. B. 422; May v. Harvey, 13 East, 197; Brandon v. Scott, 7 El. & Bl. 234.

Where the bailment was by two and subject to their joint order, both must join in a possessory action against the bailee. Rand v. State National Bank, 77 N. Car. 152.

In Brandon v. Scott, 7 El. & Bl. 234, it was held that although a bailee of goods received from several bailors jointly had no right to deliver the goods to one of them, yet that such a delivery barred an action of assumpsit brought in the names of all the bailors. It was stated that the other bailors would have a remedy in equity against the bailee.

5. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 103. But see Hodges v. Hurd, 47 Ill. 363; Willner v. Morrel, 40 N. Y. Super Ct. 222.

It seems a purchaser of the lender may maintain detinue against the borrower. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 282.

Where goods are in the possession of a bailee, notice of a pledge thereof by the owner, in order to render the bailee liable to the pledgee, in trover and conversion, for delivering the goods to a bona-fide purchaser from the pledgor who took title discharged of the pledge, must be such as to convey information to the bailee or his authorized agent that the pledgee had loaned or would certainly loan money on the security of the goods. People's Bank v. Etting, 108 Pa. St. 258.

Where a deposit is made to a party in a special character, as in the character of guardian, etc., then, if the trust has terminated, the delivery should be to the party entitled to the property. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 109.

6. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 117, 415.

11. Term of Bailment.—In the case of mandates, deposits, and gratuitous loans, the bailee has no right to possession as against his bailor. The latter may determine the bailment at any time by a demand.[1] In the case of a bailment for hire for use the bailee is given the right to possession of the bailed goods for a specified time.[2]

12. Detinue.—The common-law remedy peculiarly appropriate in a case where the bailee wrongfully refused to make a restitution of the bailed goods was the action of detinue.[3]

In general the borrower should return the goods to the lender at his house. This, however, depends largely upon the circumstances of the case. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 261.

In June A loaned his carriage to B, the carriage then being stored at a stable. In December following B returned the carriage to the same stable, the stable-keeper having ceased to be A's agent. Held, that B should have returned it at A's residence, and that he was guilty of a conversion. Esmay v. Fanning, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 176.

A demand for delivery must be made at a reasonable and proper time. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 120.

A bailee instructed not to deliver save on bailor's written order has no authority to deliver to bailor's wife. Kowing v. Manly, 49 N. Y. 192.

Although by original agreement with bailor bailee is not bound to deliver goods except upon written order, he must deliver them upon verbal demand to any person succeeding to the ownership. Willner v. Morrel, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 222.

A naked bailee cannot be held answerable for delivering the goods held by him to the wrong person, if the agent of the person properly entitled thereto has given him to understand they were for the one to whom they were delivered. Brant v. McMahon, 56 Mich. 498.

A bailment terminates when its objects are accomplished; it then devolves upon the bailee to return the goods without waiting for a demand. Lay v. Lawson, 23 Ala. 377. Accord, Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 414; Syeds v. Hay, 4 T. R. 260.

No demand is necessary where the goods are to be returned at a fixed time which has passed. Clapp v. Nelson, 12 Tex. 370.

Where there has been a mere temporary exchange of articles of property, the owner of the one article is not required to return the article borrowed before he can maintain trover for his own article. Hoell v. Paul, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 75.

The town of Forsyth issued $30,000 in bonds, bearing two per cent interest. It entered into a contract with P. & Son, brokers, to give them the use of bonds of the nominal value of $7500, provided they would keep $7500 more at par as a circulating medium in the town, and redeem them when presented; when the town by taxation should redeem $7500, the other $7500, were to be delivered up to be cancelled. P. & Son became bankrupts, having on hand $4900 of the bonds. The town claimed that these should be delivered up for cancellation; the assignees claimed them as assets. Held, that the contract created a trust in the nature of a bailment, and when it became impossible for the bankrupts to comply with their contract, the town was entitled to recover the bonds. Cabaniss v. Ponder, 65 Ga. 134.

Where no time for the return of the goods is specified in the contract, a "reasonable" time is understood, and this is for the jury to fix. Cobb v. Wallace, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 539.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 93–93h, 150, 279, 280; McLain v. Huffman, 30 Ark. 428; Montgomery v. Evans, 8 Ga. 178; Carle v. Bearce, 33 Me. 337; Hill v. Wiggin, 31 N. H. 292; Brown v. Cook, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 361; Phelps v. Bostwick, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 314; West v. Murph, 3 Hill (S. Car.), 284; Jackman v. Partridge, 21 Vt. 558; Cranch v. White, 1 Bing. N. C. 414; Wilson v. Anderton, 1 B. & Ad. 450; Gunton v. Nurse, 2 Brod. & B. 447; Verrall v. Robinson, 2 Cr. M. & R. 495.

A depositary may also determine the bailment by giving the bailor reasonable notice to remove the goods. Roulston v. McClelland, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 60.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 368, 372, 395.

Where no time for the return of loaned goods is specified, a "reasonable" time is understood, and this is for a jury to fix. Cobb v. Wallace, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 539.

3. Bac. Abr. tit. Detinue; Bouvier Law Dict. tit. Detinue.

13. A Conversion Terminates Bailment.—A wrongful conversion by the bailee of the bailed goods determines the bailment instantly, and makes the bailee's possession wrongful.[1] Thus, where a bailee assumes to pledge or sell the bailed goods as his own, such act amounts to a conversion, and the bailor may immediately bring replevin or trover.[2] But a pledgee or a hirer of chattels may

Where the bailee contracts to return the goods, a refusal to do so of course renders him liable in assumpsit. McEvers v. Steamboat Sangamon, 22 Mo. 187; Harvey v. Murray, 136 Mass. 377; Drake v. White, 117 Mass. 10; Hyland v. Paul, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 241.

The action of detinue was largely superseded by the more practical and less technical action of trover. Bouvier Law Dict. tit. Detinue. There are, however, certain classes of cases where detinue is the only remedy. The theory on which trover lies is that the refusal of the bailee to restore the goods amounts to a conversion of them. A refusal to restore the goods is no doubt evidence of a conversion of the goods when they are in the bailee's possession at the time of the refusal; but not, it would seem, where the goods have been converted or have been lost or destroyed owing to the bailee's negligence prior to the time of refusal. In such a case detinue and not trover would seem to be the bailor's remedy. Williams v. Archer, 5 C. B. 318; Reeve v. Palmer, 5 C. B. N. S. 84; Williams v. Gesse, 3 Bing. N. C. 849; Wilkinson v. Verity, L. R. 6 C. P. 206. See Stewart v. Frazier, 5 Ala. 114.

In Wilkinson v. Verity, L. R. 6 C. P. 206, the bailee had converted the bailed goods, and the Statute of Limitations had run upon such conversion. The bailor then made a demand upon the bailee, and upon his refusal to restore the goods brought an action of detinue. The court held that the action would lie notwithstanding the fact that the Statute of Limitations had run upon the original conversion at the time the demand was made, for the reason that the conversion and the refusal or omission, without proper excuse, to return the goods were separate causes of action.

Demand.—Ordinarily no action of tort lies for the failure to return the bailed goods until after a demand by the bailor. Cothran v. Moore, 1 Ala. 423; Spencer v. Morgan, 5 Ind. 146; Smith v. Stewart, 5 Ind. 220; Alden v. Pearson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 342; Hill v. Wiggin, 31 N. H. 292; Brown v. Cook, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 361; Phelps v. Bostwick, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 314; West v. Murph, 3 Hill (S. Car.), 284; Jackman v. Partridge, 21 Vt. 558.

Where the bailee contracts to return the bailed goods at a fixed time and fails to do so, he becomes liable in tort, as well as in assumpsit, without a demand. Lay v. Lawson, 23 Ala. 377; Clapp v. Nelson, 12 Tex. 370.

Where, by the terms of the contract, the goods are to be returned at a particular place, a general refusal to return the goods amounts to a conversion, although the demand was made in another place. Dunlap v. Hunting, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 643.

1. Cothran v. Moore, 1 Ala. 423; Warner v. Dunnavan, 23 Ill. 380; Spencer v. Morgan, 5 Ind. 146; Smith v. Stewart, 5 Ind. 220; Alden v. Pearson, 3 Gray (Mass.), 342; Setzar v. Butler, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 212; Morse v. Crawford, 17 Vt. 499.

Where the bailee denies the bailor's right to the goods, no tender of storage is necessary. Long Island Brewery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 18 Hun (N. Y.), 389.

A declaration made by the bailee to the bailor that the former claims the property in his own right will not, in all cases, instantly terminate the bailment and render the bailee's possession adverse. Green v. Harris, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 210.

Possession by a bailee adverse to his bailor can only be shown by some unequivocal act known to the bailor. Knight v. Bell, 22 Ala. 198.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §413; Sargent v. Gile, 8 N. H. 325; Lovejoy v. Jones, 10 Fost. (N. H.) 164; Bailey v. Colby, 34 N. H. 29; King v. Bates, 57 N. H. 446; Swift v. Moseley, 10 Vt. 208; Dunham v. Lee, 24 Vt. 432; Crump v. Mitchell, 34 Miss. 449; Cooper v. Willomat, 1 C. B. 672; Marner v. Bankes, 16 W. R. 62; Bryant v. Wardell, 2 Exch. 479; Fenn v. Bittleston, 7 Exch. 152.

A sale by a bailee is a conversion, and the Statute of Limitations begins to run from that time. Crump v. Mitchell, 34 Miss. 449.

If a bailee for hire for a limited term, with a right to purchase the goods upon payment of a certain price, sells the goods without having completed payment therefor, the bailment is thereby assign his right of possession to another. Such assignment is not a conversion.[1]

In some cases an unauthorized user of the bailed article may amount to a conversion.[2]

14. Actions by Bailor against Bailee.—A bailor may maintain an action of tort against the bailee when the latter has converted the goods.[3] Detinue and, in most cases, trover will lie in case of a refusal by the bailee to return the goods after a demand.[4]

15. Negligence: Burden of Proof.—Where goods are destroyed or injured while in the possession of a bailee, it seems that the bailor, in order to recover against the bailee, must prove that the loss or injury was owing to the bailee's negligence.[5]

Where the bailee detains the bailed goods, or puts them to an ended, and the owner may maintain replevin for the goods. Partridge v. Philbrick, 60 N. H. 556.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 350; Baily v. Colby, 34 N. H. 29. See ALIENATION, ante, p. 50, n. 1.

2. Wentworth v. McDuffie, 48 N. H. 402; Frost v. Plumb, 40 Conn. 111; Fisher v. Kyle, 27 Mich. 454; Wheelock v. Wheelwright, 5 Mass. 104; Hall v. Corcoran, 107 Mass. 251; Stewart v. Davis, 31 Ark. 518; Schenck v. Strong, 4 N J. L. 87; M'Neills v. Brooks, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 73; Murphy v. Kaufman, 20 La. Ann. 559.

One who hires a horse is liable in trover for wilful immoderate fast driving by which the horse is injured. Wentworth v. McDuffie, 48 N. H. 402.

Receiving back a horse from the hirer that has been injured by hard driving does not waive the right of action for the injury. Austin v. Miller, 74 N. Car. 274.

3. Cothran v. Moore, 1 Ala. 423; Warner v. Dunnavan, 23 Ill. 380; Spencer v. Morgan, 5 Ind. 146; Smith v. Stewart, 5 Ind. 220; Alden v. Pearson, 3 Gray (Mass.), 342; Sezar v. Butler, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 212; Morse v. Crawford, 17 Vt. 499.

4. See DETINUE, ante, p. 57.

A depositary is not held liable for the full value of articles deposited, where such value is far in excess of what, from the circumstances of the case, he was justified in assuming their value to be. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 78.

A warehouseman is liable for damage to goods resulting from his negligence, although the goods are subsequently destroyed by fire without his fault, and although the goods would in any event have been destroyed by such fire. Powers v. Mitchell, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 545.

5. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 278, 410; Harrington v. Snyder, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 380. See Boies v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 37 Conn. 272.

Where property bailed in a good condition is returned in a damaged condition, it is said that this affords a presumption of negligence. Logan v. Mathews, 6 Pa. St. 417; Bennett v. O'Brien, 37 Ill. 250; Cumins v. Wood, 44 Ill. 416; Funkhouser v. Wagner, 62 Ill. 59; Goodfellow v. Meegan, 32 Mo. 280; Wiser v. Chesley, 53 Mo. 547; Boies v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 37 Conn. 272; Collins v. Bennett, 46 N.Y. 490; Brown v. Waterman, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 117. Compare Lamb v. Western R., 7 Allen (Mass.), 98; Runyon v. Caldwell, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 134.

But where there is any evidence to rebut such presumption, the plaintiff must fail in his action unless the jury believe that the evidence showing negligence on the part of the bailee preponderates.

A went to the shop of B, a tailor, to try on a suit of clothes which he had ordered to be made for him. He was directed by a clerk of B to a closet in which to hang up the clothes he was wearing and put on the new suit. This closet was used by the clerks of the shop as a place in which to hang up their coats, and as a dressing-room for customers. A hung up his clothes in the closet, put on the new suit, and went to a mirror about thirty feet distant and in the farther end of the room therefrom, to have his suit fitted, no one being present in the room but A and the clerk. A then returned to the closet, meeting a person coming out as he entered it, and found that his pocket-book, watch, and other personal property, which he had left in his clothes hanging in the closet, had been stolen. A brought an action against B to recover the value of the property so stolen. The judge, who tried the case without a jury, found and ordered judgment for the defendant.

unauthorized use, he is liable in damages for any injury which may happen to them after the time when the goods should have been returned or during the unauthorized user, although such injury may result from inevitable casualty.[1]

16. Action by Bailor against Third Person.—A bailor cannot maintain an action of trover or replevin against a third person during the existence of the bailment.[2] But where the bailment has been determined by a sale or pledge of the bailed article by the bailee, the bailor may maintain trover against the purchaser or pledgee.[3]

A bailor may, during the continuance of the bailment, recover against a third person, in a special action upon the case, for a permanent injury done to the bailed goods.[4]

Held, that no error of law appeared. Rea v. Simmons, 141 Mass. 561.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 188, 254, 413, 413c, 413d; Lewis v. McAfee, 32 Ga. 465; Rotch v. Hawes, 12 Pick. 136; Pattison v. Wallace, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 48.

Where the misuser or detention amounts to a conversion, the bailee is of course liable in trover for the full value of the goods, because of the conversion. It is wholly immaterial, as far as the question of damages is concerned, what becomes of the goods after the conversion. If the goods were returned to the bailor after the conversion, this fact would go in mitigation of damages. But if the bailee does not return the goods after the conversion of them, the mere fact that he was prevented from so doing by the destruction of the goods through inevitable casualty, is immaterial. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 413; Wheelock v. Wheelwright, 5 Mass. 104; Homer v. Thwing, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 492; Lane v. Cameron, 38 Wis. 603; Fisher v. Kyle, 27 Mich. 454.

Where the misuser or detention does not amount to a conversion, it seems that the bailee is liable for any loss or injury resulting from the misuser or detention as a proximate cause, but not for a loss or injury only remotely connected with the misuser or detention. Pattison v. Wallace, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 48; Jones v. Gilmore, 91 Pa. St. 310; Cullen v. Lord, 39 Iowa, 302; Martin v. Cuthbertson, 64 N. Car. 328.

In Pattison v. Wallace, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 48, it was held that a bailee in mora was liable for the destruction by fire of the bailed goods.

In Jones v. Gilmore it was held that where bailed property is not seasonably returned, owing to the negligence of the bailee, and is afterwards destroyed by an extraordinary and wholly unforeseen cause, the bailee will not be liable. Jones v. Gilmore, 91 Pa. St. 310. See In re United Service Co., Ex parte Johnson, L. R. 6 Ch. App. 212; First Nat. Bank v. Ocean National Bank, 60 N. Y. 278.

The defendant contracted to warehouse goods in a particular warehouse; instead of that he warehoused them in another place, where they were destroyed by inevitable casualty. Held, that the defendants were liable on their contract for the value of the goods. Lilley v. Doubleday, 7 Q. B. D. 510.

A bailee agreeing to forward goods to New Orleans is liable if he ships them to Charleston, instead, and they are lost, without negligence, while on the voyage to the latter place. Ferguson v. Porter, 3 Fla. 27.

2. Clarke v. Poozer, 2 McMull. (S. Car.) 434; Steele v. Williams, Dudley (S. Car.), 16; Railroad v. Kidd, 7 Dana (Ky.), 245; Drake v. Redington, 9 N. H. 243; Swift v. Moseley, 10 Vt. 208; Mears v. London, etc., R. Co., 11 C. B. N. S. 850.

3. Sargent v. Gile, 8 N. H. 325; Cooper v. Willomat, 1 C. B. 672; Marner v. Bankes, 16 W. R. 62.

Where a note is delivered in escrow, an action may be maintained upon it by the payee upon performance of the condition, although the escrowee wrongfully refuses to deliver up the note. Chase v. Gates, 33 Me. 363.

Where the property in the possession of the bailee was seized and tortiously sold, and was returned to him immediately after such tortious sale, while the bailor might perhaps maintain an action of trespass against the person who seized and sold it, and recover therein at least nominal damages, he cannot, without proof of actual damage, maintain an action against such third person as for a conversion, and recover even nominal damages therein. Enos v. Cole, 53 Wis. 235.

4. Mears v. London & S. W. R. Co., 11 C. B. N. S. 850; Howard v. Farr, 18 N. H. 457; White v. Griffen, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 139; Railroad v. Kidd, 7 Dana (Ky.), 245.

17. Bailee against Third Person.—A bailee may maintain trover against a third person for a conversion of the goods.[1]

A bailee may maintain a special action upon the case against a third person for negligently injuring the bailed goods, where the bailee is thereby made liable to respond in damages to the bailor.[2]

The measure of damages in an action of trover or in a special action on the case by a bailee against a third person is the actual value of the goods, not the value of the bailee's possessory interest in them.[3]

18. Bailee vs. Bailor.—A bailee entitled to the possession of the bailed goods for a specific time may recover in trover against the bailor for a wrongful retaking of them.[4]

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 280, 303; 2 Black. Com. 453; Bac. Abr. Trover, c. Waterman v. Robinson, 5 Mass. 303; Ludden v. Leavitt, 9 Mass. 104; Warren v. Leland, 9 Mass. 265; Com. v. Morse, 14 Mass. 217; Hurd v. West, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 752; Barker v. Miller, 6 Johns. (N.Y.) 195; Moran v. Portland Steam Packet Co., 35 Me. 55; Hyde v. Noble, 13 N. H. 494; Hopper v. Miller, 76 N. Car. 402; Nicholls v. Bastard, 2 Cr. M. & R. 659; Burton v. Hughes, 2 Bing. 173; Gordon v. Harper, 7 T. R. 9; Sutton v. Buck, 2 Taunt. 302.

Some authorities distinguish between the right of possession which a gratuitous bailee has prior to a demand by his bailor, and the right of possession which a hirer or pledgee has before the expiration of the term of bailment or the payment of the debt. It is said that the gratuitous bailee has a mere right of possession, while the hirer or pledgee has a "special property" in the bailed goods; and that a gratuitous bailee cannot maintain an action of replevin, the plaintiff being required to have a special property in order to maintain that action. See Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 93–93i. See also Waterman v. Robinson, 5 Mass. 303; Ludden v. Leavitt, 9 Mass. 104; Warren v. Leland, 9 Mass. 265; Com. v. Morse, 14 Mass. 217; Brownell v. Manchester, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 232.

It seems to be conceded that a depositary may maintain trover. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 93c, 93d; Waterman v. Robinson, 5 Mass. 303; Giles v. Grover, 6 Bligh, 277; Sutton v. Buck, 2 Taunt. 302; Burton v. Hughes, 2 Bing. 173; Moran v. Portland Steam Packet Co., 35 Me. 55; Hyde v. Noble, 13 N. H. 494.

In some States it is held that a receiptor for goods from an officer who has levied upon them is a mere servant of the officer and has no possession of the goods independent of that of his master. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 133; Ludden v. Leavitt, 9 Mass. 104; Warren v. Leland, 9 Mass. 265; Com. v. Morse, 14 Mass. 217; Dillenback v. Jerome, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 294.

In others it is held that the receiptor is a bailee, and that his possession is therefore independent of the officers, and that therefore he may sue in trover for their conversion by a third person. If a chattel, while in the possession of a bailee for hire, is injured by the negligence of a third person, and is repaired by the bailor, and the cost of the repairs is charged to the bailee, at his request, the latter, although he has not paid such cost, may maintain an action of tort against the person causing the damage. Brewster v. Warner, 136 Mass. 57; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 3.

A bailee has no such control over the property that if he consents to the larceny of it the act ceases to be criminal. Oakley v. State, 40 Ala. 372.

A bailee of money may charge an embezzlement of it as his own money. Fireman's Ins. Co. v. McMullen, 29 Ala. 147.

2. Such an action will lie although the third person has not been guilty of a conversion. Bliss v. Schaub, 48 Barb. (N.Y.) 339; Woodman v. Nottingham, 49 N. H. 387; Rindge v. Colerain, 11 Gray (Mass.), 157; Hare v. Fuller, 7 Ala. 717; McGill v. Monette, 37 Ala. 49.

3. 2 Hilliard on Torts, 571; Rindge v. Colerain, 11 Gray (Mass.), 157; Woodman v. Nottingham, 49 N. H. 387; King v. Dunn, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 253; Stanley v. Gaylord, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 536; Barron v. Cobleigh, 11 N. H. 557; Littlefield v. Biddeford, 29 Me. 320.

4. Burdict v. Murray, 3 Vt. 302; Angus v. McLachlan, L. R. 23 Ch. D. 330.

Where a bailee sues his bailor in trover, he can only recover the value of his special property in the goods; but where he sues a stranger, he can recover their whole value and hold the balance above his special interest in trust for his bailor. Benjamin v. Stremple, 13 Ill. 466.

19. Jus Tertii.—A bailee cannot, in general, set up title in a third person in defence to an action by the bailor to recover possession of the bailed goods.[1] But where the bailor is not the owner of the goods and the owner demands them from the bailee, the claim of the true owner, thus asserted, justifies the bailee in refusing to return the goods to the bailor.[2]

A delivery by the bailee to his bailor after notice of the claim of the real owner renders the bailee liable to the real owner in trover.[3]

Where a third person asserts a title in the bailed goods adverse to that of the bailor, the bailee is justified in refusing to deliver the goods to either party until he has had a reasonable time to ascertain which of the two is entitled.[4]

Where a third person claims the goods in the bailee's possession,

A sheriff seizing pledged goods under a valid writ against the pledgor, will be liable only for the value of the special property. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601.

1. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 52, 230, 266; Vosburgh v. Huntington, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 254; Lund v. Seamen's Savings Bank, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 129; Estes v. Boothe, 20 Ark. 583; Simpson v. Wren 50 Ill. 222; Maxwell v. Houston, 67 N. Car. 305; Barnard v. Kobbe, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 35.

A depositary must deliver up the goods to the vendee of the bailor, although the sale was in defraud of creditors. Brown v. Thayer, 12 Gray (Mass.), 1; Hendricks v. Mount, 5 N. J. L. 738.

Where a warehouseman has attorned to an indorser of the warehouse receipts, he is estopped to dispute the indorsee's title. Holl v. Griffen, 10 Bing. 246; Stonard v. Dunkin, 2 Camp. 344.

Where a receiptor takes property from the sheriff, it is no excuse in an action by the sheriff that the title to the goods was not in the defendant named in the writ. Clark v. Gaylord, 24 Conn. 484; Foltz v. Stevens, 54 Ill. 180.

A receiptor for property taken on attachment is discharged from his obligation if the attachment is dissolved by an assignment of the debtor's property. Butterfield v. Converse, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 317.

The officer cannot demand restitution of the goods from the receiptor when discharged from all liability to either the debtor or the creditor. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 126.

2. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) §§ 102, 340; Thorne v. Tilbury, 3 H. & N. 534; Biddle v. Bond, 6 B. & S. 225; Batut v. Hartley, L. R. 7 Q. B. 594.

A bailee may not set up the claim of the true owner when the true owner has abandoned such claim. Betteley v. Reed, 7 E. & D. 561.

A bailee cannot, in an actinn brought against him by his bailor, set up the title of a third person except by the authorization of that person. Dodge v. Meyer, 61 Cal. 405.

One borrowing property on promise to return it cannot release himself from his promise by purchasing a title adverse to that of the lender. Nudd v. Montayne, 38 Wis. 511.

Where a bailee is sued in trover by the real owner and compelled to pay the value of the goods, he may assert the title thus acquired in defence to an action of his bailor. Cook v. Holt, 48 N. Y. 275.

A bailee is not permitted to dispute the title of his bailor, but he may show that the bailor has assigned his title to another since the property was intrusted to him. If legally assigned, and the bailee has notice of the fact, the bailee must account to the assignee. The rule that a bailee should not attorn to a stranger does not apply; the assignee is not a stranger. Roberts v. Noyes, 76 Me. 590.

Although in certain cases a bailee may set up the jus tertii, yet if he accepts the bailment with full knowledge of an adverse claim, he cannot afterwards set up the existence of such a claim as against his bailor. Ex parte Davies, In re Sadler, L. R. 19 Ch. D. 86.

3. Batut v. Hartley, L. R. 7 Q. B. 594.

A bailee of goods who returns them to his bailor according to the terms of the bailment is not liable to a third person of whose claims he had no notice during the bailment. Dickson v. Chaffee, 34 La. Ann. 1133.

4. Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 120; Tuttle v. Gladding, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 157.

A wrongful levy by a sheriff upon goods in the hands of a bailee does not warrant the bailee in refusing to deliver the goods to his bailor on demand. Rogers v. Weir, 34 N. Y. 463.

the bailee may interplead such claimant with his bailor if his claim is under a title derived from that of the bailor, but not where he claims under a title adverse to that of the bailor.[1]

BAITING.—To bait is to attack with violence; to provoke and harass.[2]

BALANCE.—Excess of one thing over another when the two are compared; that which is wanting to make the two sides of an account even;[3] the remainder of anything.[4]

1. Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1326, 1327, and § 1327. n. 2; Story Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 110; First Nat. Bank v. Bininger, 26 N. J. Eq. 345; U. S. v. Vietor, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 153; Crawshay v. Thornton, 2 My. & Cr. 1.

2. Where a match took place between the owners of two dogs, as to which could kill the greatest number of rabbits by running after them, and the match took place in a field containing an area of three acres, walled in so that the rabbits could not escape, it was held that this was not "baiting" animals within the meaning of the statute 12 and 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 3, prohibiting such baiting. In this case the court said, by Cockburn, C. J.: "I am clearly of the opinion that the pursuit of rabbits by dogs is not 'baiting' animals. That term is usually applied when an animal is tied to a stake, or confined so that it cannot escape;" and by Quain, J.: "The facts stated do not amount to baiting, but to hunting rabbits. I find that in Johnson's Dictionary the word 'bait' is said to mean 'to attack with violence,' or 'to harass by the help of others; as, we bait a boar with mastiffs, but a bull with bull-dogs.' This conviction cannot be sustained." Pitts v. Millar, L. R. 9 Q. B. 380.

3. Where a statute authorizing a mechanics' lien required to be filed "a just and true account of the demand," it was held insufficient to file a claim for a "balance" thereby, without stating the antecedent elements of the demand; the court, Currier, J., saying: "There is a broad distinction between an account and the mere 'balance' of an account, resembling the distinction in logic between the premises of an argument and the conclusions drawn therefrom. A balance is but the conclusion or result of the debit and credit sides of an account. It implies mutual dealings and the existence of debit and credit, without which there could be no balance. What the legislature evidently intended was that the lienor should exhibit his demand fully, giving debit and credit where the two elements existed in the lien claim, and thereby show the balance sought to be imposed as a lien. In other words, it was intended that the lienor should file an account, and not the mere result, 'balance,' or conclusion of an account." McWilliams v. Allan, 45 Mo. 573.

The "balance" due on a general account by a correspondent is, in mercantile language, a fund in his hands. And where one has authorized his agent to draw bills and throw them on the market, but limits the agent in his purchases to the funds in his hands, if the agent overdraws his account the principal is justified in not accepting his bills. Parsons v. Armor, 3 Peters (U. S.). 413, 430.

Net Balance.—As applied to the proceeds of the sale of stock, the phrase "net balance" means, in commercial usage, the balance of the proceeds after deducting the expenses incident to the sale. Evans v. Wales, 71 Pa. St. 69.

Balance of Probabilities.—Where in a civil case the jury were instructed that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff, and was sustained "if upon the whole proof there was a preponderance of evidence, that is to say, a balance of the probabilities of the case, in his favor," it was held that the explanation was indefinite, and tended to mislead the jury; the court, Bigelow, J., saying: "The 'weight' or 'preponderance of proof' is a phrase constantly used, the meaning of which is well understood and easily defined. It indicates clearly to the jury that the party having the burden of proof will be entitled to their verdict if, on weighing the evidence in their minds, they shall find the greater amount of credible evidence sustains the issue which is to be established before them. But the phrase 'balance of probabilities,' used by the judge in his instructions as equivalent to the words 'preponderance of proof,' has no well-settled or clearly-defined meaning. It is at best a vague and indefinite phrase, and would rather lead the jury to infer that they might form their verdict on a guess at the truth, gathered from the evidence, than on a real solid conviction of it founded on a careful scrutiny and examination of the proof." Haskins v. Haskins, 9 Gray (Mass.), 390.

4. A plaintiff in ejectment, claiming

BALE.—A bundle, as of goods.[1]

BALLAST. (See also DUNNAGE.)—Material used for trimming a ship and bringing it down to a draught of water proper and safe for sailing.[2]

BALLET.—A theatrical representation of actions, characters, sentiments, and passions by means of mimic movements and dances, accompanied by music. It consists of three parts—the entry, the figure, and the retreat.[3] under a deed conveying "the balance of a tract of land," must show what the balance is, and where situate, or he cannot recover; for said the court, Boyle, C. J.: "The term 'balance' has, in law, no technical signification. It is, however, a word which is in popular use. In its literal import it is, perhaps, only applicable to weights; but it is frequently, in a figurative sense, applied to other things. In this sense we speak of the balance of an account; and we may, no doubt in the same sense, and with the same propriety, speak of the balance of a tract of land. But the word, when thus used, evidently does not signify the whole thing of which we speak. It always implies that there is something to be deducted or subtracted; and it is only applied to signify what remains after the deduction or subtraction is made. Nor is the term 'balance' ever used to signify any precise quantity or definite proportion of a thing. It is equally applicable to a small as to a large quantity or proportion." Taylor v. Taylor, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 18; s. c., 5 Wheeler's Am. Common Law, 14.

A theatrical exhibition or pantomime in which a story is told, or actions, characters, and passions are represented, by gestures, accompanied by characteristic or illustrative music, dancing, decorations, etc.[4]

Balanced.—In an action for money had and received, the defendant gave in evidence a memorandum written and signed by the plaintiff as follows: "Balanced up to this day, as per cash book, S. F., 19th Nov." This memorandum was on the back of a receipt which was ruled out of evidence because unstamped. The memorandum was admitted, although the plaintiff claimed that it also was inadmissible, for want of a stamp, as an admission by the plaintiff against himself. On verdict for defendant a new trial was moved for, but refused; the court, Wilde, C. J., saying: "Balanced is an ambiguous word. It is sometimes used to denote an ascertained state of accounts, but more often in the sense of all being cleared off and adjusted between the parties. It was the province of the jury to say in which of these senses the word was to be taken here. And, accordingly, the learned judge left it to them, and the inference they drew was that 'balanced' meant 'all is settled and adjusted between us.'" Finney v. Tootell, 5 C. B. 504. 508.

1. This word has in the course of trade acquired special meanings which are applied in construing contracts. Thus in an action on a charter-party where the words used were "cotton in bales," the court left the meaning of these words to the jury, who found that a "bale" meant a compressed bale and not a bag. Taylor v. Briggs, 2 C. & P. 525.

So also evidence is admissible to show that in the gambier trade a "bale" means a compressed package weighing about 2 cwt. Gowissen v. Perrin, 2 C. B. N. S. 681.

2. Insurance Co. v. Ihwing, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 672. This case will be found cited fully under the word DUNNAGE.

It has been held that the owner of a vessel who had agreed to load for the charterer a full and complete cargo of teas might take merchandise as "ballast" and receive freight therefor, provided it occupied no more room than other ballast would have done. Towse v. Henderson, 4 Exch. 890.

3. Worcester's Dictionary.

4. Webster's Dictionary.

Where a summons was issued under the act for the regulation of theatres, 6 and 7 Vict. c. 68, §§ 2, 23, against the respondent for representing at a place of public entertainment in London called the Alhambra, which was licensed only for music and dancing under the act 25 Geo. II. c. 36, an entertainment called a ballet divertissement, the police magistrate submitted a case stated for the opinion of the court under the 20 and 21 Vict. c. 43, and found the following facts: "There is an orchestra with a full band of musical performers, a stage and proscenium lighted by foot and side lights, a curtain, side-scenes, drops, and flies. There are various platforms so supported and inclined as to enable persons to come down from a considerable height at the back of the building to the stage, painted to represent rocks, with a cascade of water falling among them from a place thirty feet high. On the wings and at the scenes at the back are painted palm-trees, the whole representing an oriental landscape. From sixty to seventy females in the ordinary costume of theatrical ballet-dancers came through a large opening at the top of the platform painted as rocks and danced down them to the stage. Those who first descended danced on the stage in a serpentine figure so as to occupy the whole front of the stage till all had come down. When all were down they defiled to the right and left. Four were placed on each side in front of the proscenium, with sham musical instruments in their hands, supposed to be played by them to the dancers. The dancers began to dance the Pas des Poignards (a dance which was originally brought out at Drury Lane Theatre in an Egyptian scene), each female armed with two daggers, charging through each other's ranks, striking right and left with the daggers in mimic warfare, then in front as far as the footlights. This performance of the dagger-dance ended in several of the females standing over others as if in triumph and retiring, when others came forward, holding palm-leaves in their hands, and danced, waving them, and formed an avenue, as if expecting an arrival; then a female dancer, who at regular theatres would be called a première danseuse, passed down the avenue formed by the other dancers, who retired while she performed a pas seul with gestures." Upon these facts it was held that the court could not, as matter of law, hold that the performance thus described was an "entertainment of the stage" within the 23d sectionof the 6 and 7 Vict. c. 68. The majority of the court, however, thought that, if they were dealing with it as a matter of fact, it would be. In this case the police magistrate found among the facts the following: "This performance is in the theatrical profession called a ballet divertissement, and could not be represented as such without the stage accessories. Without them it would be a mere rehearsal. A witness from the Lord Chamberlain's office, called a reader of plays, styled it 'an entertainment of the stage.' A ballet d'action has a story; a ballet divertissement has none, but cannot be performed without pantomimic action and gestures. It is not confined to the steps of the dancers. Dancing quadrilles on the stage would be without such gestures. Also, a ballet divertissement can be described so as to enable a copy of the directions for it to be sent to the Lord Chamberlain according to the 6 and 7 Vict. c. 68, s. 12. The ballet of 'Ondine' with all its details has been so described." The respondent claimed that it was not every entertainment of the stage that the statute was intended to apply to, but only such as fall within the fair and legitimate definition of stage-plays. This, by the 23d section, is to be taken to include 'every tragedy, comedy, farce, opera, burletta, interlude, melodrama, pantomime, or other entertainment of the stage," ejusdem generis. That the only word within which this ballet divertissement could be suggested to come is pantomime. But a representation is not a pantomime merely because it involves some action and gestures. In each case it must be a question of degree. Upon this the court, Erle, C. J., said: "The magistrate uses two terms of art, viz., ballet d'action and ballet divertissement. The former, it is said, has a story; the latter has none. I rather incline to think that the line is to be drawn between the two. The ballet divertissement involves no consecutive train of ideas, but consists merely of poses and evolutions by a number of persons elegant in shape and graceful in action. On the other hand, the ballet d'action has a regular dramatic story which may give rise to all manner of emotions incident to tragedy, comedy, or farce, accompanied by elegance of form and grace of motion. With the highest possible respect for the learned magistrate, if I were called upon to decide, as a matter of law, whether or not that which he has described as a ballet divertissement and as not coming up to his notion of a ballet d'action came within the meaning and definition of a stage-play in the statute, I could not come to the conclusion that it was, even if I had gone to see the performance. But upon the description here given of the entertainment I am unable to say that the point at which the authority of the music and dancing license stops has been overstepped." The other three judges, viz., Willes, Byles, and Keating, agreed with the chief justice upon the question of law, but stated that were the matter of fact before them to decide

BALLOTS. See ELECTIONS.

BALL-ROOM.—A room for assemblies or balls; a hall for dancing. Not necessarily a place where a ball or dancing is actually going on.[1] upon the statement, they would draw the inference that this was an entertainment of the stage within the statute. Wigan v. Strange, L. R. 1 C. P. 175.

BALUSTRADE.—A range of balusters joined by a rail on the top.[2]

1. An indictment which charges that the defendant "did unlawfully and wilfully go into a ball-room, being at Mrs. Simpson's, where an assembly was then and there congregated for social purposes," and specifically negatives that the accused was then and there within any of the exceptions defined in the act of 1871 "to regulate the carrying and bearing of deadly weapons," was held good; the court, White, J., saying: "The indictment was good in the charge, either that the offence was committed in 'a ball-room' or at 'a social gathering,' and it was not necessary, as is contended, to allege that a ball or dance was going on in the room, or that the social gathering was composed of men and women, or of human beings as contradistinguished from other animals—these things being matters of proof. The indictment simply followed the statute in defining the offence, and ordinarily that has been held sufficient. It would scarcely be contended by any one, we imagine, that the act of carrying a pistol into 'a ball-room,' when no persons were present there would per se constitute an offence any more than to carry the pistol into any other unoccupied house or room. The intention was specially to inhibit the act when persons were assembled at the places or for the purposes named in the law." Owens v. State, 3 Texas App. 404.

2. Where a statute authorized cities to "make such rules and regulation for the erection and maintenance of balustrades, or other projections upon the roofs or sides of buildings therein, as the safety of the public requires," it was held that such a statute did not give power to pass an ordinance prohibiting the erection and maintenance of doorsteps in the highway without the permission of the mayor and aldermen. In this case the court, Endicott, J. said: "We are of opinion that these statutes did not authorize Charlestown to pass such an ordinance. The power conferred by the Gen. Sts. ch. 9, § 13, is limited to 'balustrades or other projections upon the roofs or sides of buildings;' and undoubtedly, under this provision, they may be allowed or forbidden as each city may determine. The words 'balustrades or other projections,' as applied to the roof of a building, would seem to refer to those additions or structures upon the roof which might under certain circumstances render a highway unsafe for travellers; but it is unnecessary in this case to determine precisely what projections on a roof are included in these words. As applied to the sides of a building, which is the only matter to be considered here, the words 'other projections' clearly refer to those portions of, or attachments to, the sides which are near the line of a highway, or which project over and therefore, in one sense, into the highway, such as balconies, canopies, windows, cornices, gutters, signs, or other additions supported by the building itself, which do not obstruct the travel on the highway. These may project so far as to be insecure, or by reason of the use to which they may be put, or through want of proper repair, may fall and endanger the safety of travellers; and the legislature might well consider them a proper subject of regulation by the authorities of cities. But the words of the statute are not broad enough to authorize cities to make rules and regulations for the erection and maintenance of doorsteps within the actual limits of a highway. Such doorsteps, though connected with and a part of the building, are not necessarily supported by it, and are not, properly speaking, projections on the side of it, but are rather structures erected in and occupying a part of the highway itself. The fair construction of the language of this section is that it intends to deal with those parts of a building which may project near or over the line of a highway, and which, if not properly constructed and maintained, may endanger the safety of the public; and that it does not attempt to deal with those additions to or parts of a building which may occupy the highway itself, or obstruct travel thereon, and thus constitute a nuisance in the highway, if not authorized by law. In

BANKRUPTCY. (See also ASSIGNMENT FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS; INSOLVENCY.)

1. Definition.—Bankruptcy is the state or condition of being a bankrupt.[1] It is a proceeding or suit in its nature equitable—a sequestration of a debtor's property that the creditors may resort to, instead of an ordinary suit at law or equity.[2] It is the condition following upon the commission of certain acts defined by law.[3]

Voluntary bankruptcy is where the debtor is financially in such a condition that upon his own petition he can be declared a bankrupt. Involuntary bankruptcy is where the debtor has committed some such act, or is financially in such condition, that he may be declared a bankrupt on the petition of a creditor.

2. United States Bankrupt Laws.—(A) POWER OF CONGRESS TO PASS.—It is provided in the constitution of the United States that "Congress shall have power to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States."[4] The power to enact a bankrupt law implies the power to make it effi-other words, cities are authorized to regulate the erection and maintenance of such projecting parts of a building standing upon or near the line of a highway which do not in any way obstruct the use of the highway, or constitute a defect therein, although under some circumstances they may endanger the safety of the public but they are not authorized to regulate the erection and maintenance of permanent structures or additions to a building which stand in the way itself, or create an obstruction therein." Cushing v. City of Boston, 128 Mass. 330.

1. 1 Bouv Dict., 188.

2. In re Weitzel, 7 Biss. (C. C.) 290.

In a looser sense it is an inability to pay one's debts; the stopping and breaking up of business because a man is insolvent and utterly unable to carry it on. Burrill Law Dict. vol. i. p. 191.

The words "insolvent" and "insolvency" are not synonymous with the words "bankrupt" and "bankruptcy." Insolvency means an inability to pay debts in the ordinary course of business. Bankruptcy means a particular legal status to be ascertained by judicial decree. In re Black & Secor, 1 B. R. 353; s. c., 2 Ben. (D. C.) 196; Morse v. Godfrey, 3 Story (C. C.), 507.

3. 2 Steph. Com. 191, 192.

In common parlance the term bankruptcy is distinguished from insolvency in that an act of the former releases the debtor from all future liability for his then debts, while an act of the latter does not.

4. Const. U. S. art. 1, sec. 8.

"The word bankruptcy is employed in the constitution and in the plural, and as a part of the expression 'the subject of bankruptcies.' The ideas attached to this word in this connection are numerous and complicated; they form a subject of extensive and complicated legislation. Of this subject Congress has general jurisdiction, and the true inquiry is, To what limits is that jurisdiction restricted? I hold it extends to all cases where the law causes to be distributed the property of the debtor among his creditors. This is its least limit. Its greatest is a discharge of the debtor from his contracts. And all intermediate legislation affecting substance and form, but tending to further the great end of the subject—distribution cient. The end implies the means.[1] And Congress may establish a system of voluntary as well as involuntary bankruptcy.[2] It not only has the power to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies, but also to commit the execution of the system to such federal courts as it may select, and to prescribe such modes of procedure and means of administering the system as it may deem best suited to carry the law into successful operation.[3] Congress may define what and how much of the debtor's property shall be exempt from the claims of his creditors.[4] It also has the power to pass a law which will have the effect to make void an assignment which is valid under the State laws.[5] And it is not intended by the framers of the constitution that the power is to be limited to any particular class of persons in the application of an act of bankruptcies.[6] But the law must be uniform throughout the United States. A law which prescribes one rule in one district and a different one in another cannot be regarded as uniform.[7] and discharge—are in the competency and discretion of Congress." (Justice Catron) In re Klein, 1 How. (U. S.) 227.

(B) ACT OF 1800.—Congress has, at different times, passed three bankrupt acts,[8] the first being the act of 1800, which was in force only until 1803.

The grant is a grant of plenary power over "the subject of bankruptcies." The subject of bankruptcies includes the distribution of the property of the insolvent debtor among his creditors, and the discharge of the debtor from his contracts and legal liabilities, as well as the intermediate and incidental matters tending to the accomplishment or promotion of these two principal ends. Congress has full power over this subject, with the one qualification that its laws must be uniform throughout the United States. In re Silverman, 4 B. R. 523; In re Reiman & Friedlander, 11 B. R. 21.

The peculiar terms of the grant certainly deserve notice. Congress is not authorized merely to pass laws the operation of which shall be uniform, but to establish uniform laws on the subject throughout the United States. Sturges v. Crowninsheild, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 193.

1. Russell v. Cheatham, 16 Miss. 703.

2. Kunsler v. Kohans, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 317; Lalor v. Wattles, 8 Ill. 225; Morse v. Hovey, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 187; Thompson v. Alger, 53 Mass. 428; State Bank v. Wilborn, 6 Ark. 35; Keene v. Mould, 16 Ohio. 12; Rowan v. Holcomb, 16 Ohio, 463; Hasting v. Fowler, 2 Ind. 216; Reed v. Vaughan, 15 Mo. 137.

3. Goodal v. Tuttle, 3 Biss. (C. C.) 219; Mitchell v. Mfg. Co., 2 Story (C. C.), 648.

4. In re Reimen & Friedlander, 11 B. R. 21; s. c., 13 B. R. 128; s. c., 7 Ben. (D. C.) 445; s. c., 12 Blatchf. (C. C.) 562.

5. In re Brenneman, Crabbe (U. S.), 456.

6. Morse v. Hovey, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 187.

7. Kittridge v. Warren, 14 N. H. 509.

8. History of U. S. Bankrupt Law.

This law was the first enactment of a bankrupt law by the general government. The colonies had, on several occasions prior to this, enacted such laws. The act was passed on April 4, 1800, and was limited to five years, but was repealed on Dec. 19, 1803. For the reason, as Pres. Adams explains: "As this law authorized a majority of the creditors to discharge a bankrupt trader from all his preceding debts, it was regarded by many of the other classes of men as an invidious privilege to the mercantile community, especially in the Southern States, where the agricultural pursuits are predominant; and as it was found that by the power of making discriminations in favor of some creditors, and in fact of making surreptitious creditors, there was no difficulty in obtaining the sanction of the requisite majority for the debtor's discharge, the law was condemned as affording but too much encouragement to fraud, waste, and a rash spirit of adventure." These reasons, perhaps, caused its repeal. In 1840 an effort was again made to pass a bankrupt law, but was violently opposed, and for that session the measure was defeated. Its friends, however, were not discouraged by defeat, and renewed the effort and were successful. But the measure did not meet that degree of popularity which insured it long life, and the entire statute was defeated on March 3, 1843, having been in full operation but little over 13 months. The next was that which, through the indefatigable efforts and industry of Representative Jenks, resulted in the law of 1867. In 1874 it was amended and considerably changed in minor matters, and in 1879 the law was repealed. There have been several attempts to pass new laws on the subject but so far all have failed. In the last Congress (1887) Mr. Seney (of Ohio) introduced a measure which was somewhat different from the former laws, in that it gave the State courts jurisdiction of matters arising under it instead of the United States district or circuit courts. This met with some favor, but did not pass.

(C) ACT OF 1841.[1]—This act was for voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy,[2] and provided that certain payments and conveyances were void;[3] that preferences prevented a discharge;[4] that the property of the bankrupt vested in the assignee;[5] that the court might appoint or remove assignee;[6] that the assignee had certain duties to perform;[7] that a discharge might be granted;[8] that only certain persons were entitled to discharge;[9] that creditors should share pro rata in dividends;[10] that the discharge would relieve debtor from certain liabilities;[11] that laborers, etc., were entitled to preference;[12] that mutual set-offs were to be allowed;[13] that corporations might become bankrupts;[14] that district courts should have original jurisdiction,[15] and should adopt rules;[16] that proceedings should be held in the district in which the debtor resides;[17] how debts should be proved;[18] how property of bankrupt to be disposed;[19] that a second discharge should not be granted;[20] that partners might become bankrupts;[21] and in what manner the assets should be distributed.[22]

(D) ACT OF 1867.—(a) Jurisdiction.—This act provided that the United States district courts should be courts of bankruptcy, and always be open for the transaction of business, with power to sit anywhere in the district;[23] and that the circuit courts should have a general superintendence and jurisdiction of all questions arising under the act, and should have concurrent jurisdiction with the district court in certain cases.[24] That in each congressional district registers in bankruptcy should be appointed to assist the

1. This act was passed Aug. 19, 1841, went into effect Feb. 1, 1842, and was repealed March 3, 1843. 5 Story, 2829.
2. Sec. 1.
3. Sec. 2.
4. Sec. 2.
5. Sec. 3.
6. Sec. 3
7. Sec. 3.
8. Sec. 4.
9. Sec. 4.
10. Sec. 5.
11. Sec. 4.
12. Sec. 5.
13. Sec. 5.
14. Sec. 5.
15. Sec. 6.
16. Sec. 6.
17. Sec. 7.
18. Sec. 7.
19. Sec. 9.
20. Sec. 12.
21. Sec. 14.
22. Sec. 14.
23. Sec. 7, Rev. Stat. U. S. 4974 (Act 1841, § 6).
24. Sec. 2, Rev. Stat. 4984 (Act 1841, § 8).

An appearance and answer do not waive any question affecting the jurisdiction of the court, for no voluntary act of the defendant can give jurisdiction, and it is never too late at any stage of the cause to consider it. Jobbins v. Montague, 6 B. R. 509; Marsh v. Armstrong, 11 B. R. 125; People v. Brennen, 12 B. R. 567.

The circuit court may enjoin State courts from proceeding in cases involv-

United States district judge to attend to his duties under the act.[1] That this register should have the power to receive the surrender of the bankrupt, to make adjudications of bankruptcy, etc.,[2] and should attend at such places as the district judge might direct, to receive applications, proof of debts, etc.[3] That appeals and writs of error might be taken from the district courts to the circuit court in all cases in equity, and where the amount exceeded $500;[4] and that an appeal or writ of error could not be taken to the United States supreme court unless the amount exceeded $2000[5] (amended to $5000). That the justices of the supreme court might make rules and orders regulating the duties of the various officers under the act.[6]

(b) Voluntary.—That any person owing $300 and being a denizen of the United States might file a petition for voluntary bankruptcy.[7] The register should preside at the first meeting of the

ing the administration of the bankrupt law. McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean (C. C.), 185.

The circuit court may review the whole case and decide on it, or it may assume jurisdiction of any particular question arising in the progress of the case. This jurisdiction can only arise and be exercised over proceedings in bankruptcy already pending in the district court. Ruddick v. Billings, 3 B. R. 61; In re Alexander, 3 B. R. 29; Bill v. Beckworth, 2 B R. 241; Littlefield v. Del. & Hud. Canal Co., 4 B. R. 77.

1. Sec. 3, Rev. Stat. 4993.

2. Sec. 4, Rev. Stat. 4998.

A register cannot delegate to his clerk any authority to take and pass upon proofs, or determine the sufficiency of schedules, or do any other act than such as is purely clerical. Ex parte Binswanger, East. Dist. Missouri.

In proper case the register may appoint a watchman to take charge of the property. In re Bogert et al., 2 B. R. 585.

The proceedings before a register are to be conducted by him with the exercise of proper legal discretion, and, subject to that rule, are entirely within his control. If a party refuses to proceed, the case must proceed without him. In re Hyman, 2 B. R. 333; s. c., 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 282.

3. Sec. 5, Rev. Stat. 5001; In re Sherwood, 1 B. R. 334.

4. Sec. 8, Rev. Stat. 4980 (Act 1841, § 7); In re York & Hoover, 4 B. R. 479; Samson v. Blake, 6 B. R. 401.

Questions of fact cannot be re-examined on a writ of error. Cragin v. Thompson, 12 B. R. 8.

And no writ will lie from the district to the circuit court when the case is tried before the court without the intervention of a jury. Blair v. Allen, 3 Dill. (C. C.) 101; Strain v. Gourdin, 11 B. R. 156; Babbitt v. Burgers, 7 B. R. 561.

5. Sec. 9, Rev. Stat. 4989.

An appeal lies only from a final decree, and no appeal lies from a decree of the circuit court rendered in the exercise of its special supervisory jurisdiction. Morgan v. Thornhill, 5 B. R. 1; s. c., 11 Wall. 65; Hall v. Allen, 9 B. R. 6; s. c., 12 Wall. 452; In re William Christy, 3 How. (U. S.) 292; Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. (U. S.) 151; Crawford v. Points, 11 How. (U. S.) 185.

6. Sec. 10, Rev. Stat. 4990; In re Glaser, 1 B. R. 336; s. c., 2 Ben. (D. C.) 180; s. c., 1 L. T. B. 57; In re Dean, 1 B. R. 249; In re Robinson, 1 B. R. 285.

7. Sec. 11, Rev. Stat. 5014 (Act 1841, § 1).

Resident aliens may take the benefit of the act. In re Goodfellow, 3 B. R. 452.

It not only embraces those who resided in the United States at the time when the bankrupt law was passed, but such as at any subsequent period became resident in the United States. Cutter v. Folsom, 17 N. H. 139; Kuntzler v. Kohans, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 317.

An infant may file a petition in his own name. In re Samuel Book, 3 McLean (C. C.), 317; In re Samuel S. Cotton, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 370

If a person, while sane, has committed an act of bankruptcy, he may be made bankrupt after he has become lunatic. The rights of a bankrupt will be fully protected by his guardian. In re Pratt, 6 B. R. 276.

A feme covert who is a sole trader may apply for the benefit of the law. In creditors,[1] at which a majority in amount and in number of the creditors who had proved their debts should select an assignee; and if there were no selection, the register should appoint one, unless there were opposing interests, in which case the appointment should be made by the judge.[2]

As soon as the assignee was appointed, the register or judge should convey all the estate of the bankrupt to him, and such assignment should relate back to the commencement of the proceedings, and should vest all the title of all the bankrupt's property in said assignee; except household furniture not to exceed $500 in value, and exemptions allowed by the laws of the State in which the bankrupt resides.[3]

re Harriet E. Collins, 10 B. R. 335; La-Vie v. Phillips, 1 W. Black, 570.

But married women, generally speaking, are not liable to become bankrupt. Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545.

A surety on the bond of a public officer is within the act, and is entitled to a discharge. United States v. Davis, 3 McLean (C. C.), 483.

"Residence" is a fact easily ascertained; "domicile," a question difficult of proof. It is true the two terms are often used as synonymous, but in law they have two distinct meanings. Proceedings in bankruptcy should be instituted with reference to the actual residence of the party or his place of business, and not with reference to his domicile. In re Watson, 4 B. R 613; Styles v. Lay, 9 Ala. 795; In re Israel Kinssman, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 307.

1. Sec. 12, Rev. Stat. 5033.

2. Sec. 13, Rev Stat. 5034; In re J. O. Smith, 1 B. R. 243.

Corporations may vote by their officers or any person specially authorized. Ex parte Bank of Eng., 1 Swanst. 10.

One partner may prove and vote or authorize another to vote. Ex parte Mitchell, 14 Ves. 597.

An opposing interest which precludes the register from appointing an assignee is not merely an interest contending by vote, but an interest in opposition to the power of appointment by the register; and when the register announces that he has the right to appoint an assignee unless there is an opposing interest, distinct disclosures should be made if there is any opposing interest. In re Geo. Jackson, 14 B. R. 449.

3. Sec. 14, Rev. Stat. 5044 (Act of 1841, sec. 3.)

The expression "estate of a bankrupt" means such property and rights of property of the bankrupt as the bankrupt act vests in the assignee. In re Hambright, 2 B. R. 498.

The words "all the estate, real and personal," are broad enough to cover every description of vested right and interest attached to and growing out of property. Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 193.

The title to real estate situated in a foreign country does not vest in the assignee, for a statutory conveyance can have no extraterritorial effect upon real estate. Oakey v. Bennett, 11 How. (U. S.) 33; Barnett v. Pool, 23 Tex. 517.

Assignees in bankruptcy do not, like heirs and executors, take the whole legal title in the bankrupt's property. They take such estate only as the bankrupt had a beneficial, as well as legal, interest in, and which is to be applied for the payment of his debts. Rhoades v. Blackiston, 106 Mass. 334; Blinn v. Pierce, 20 Vt. 25; Ontario Bank v. Mumford, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 596; Hynson v. Burton, 5 Ark. 492.

The interests and rights of the bankrupt under contracts are transferred to the assignee. Whatever the rights are the assignee can claim and enforce. It is not the purpose of the bankrupt law to interfere with or avoid contracts made by the bankrupt with other parties or prevent their execution. Foster v. Hackley, 2 B. R. 406.

The assignee succeeds to the rights of the creditors as well as to those of the bankrupt, and may contest the validity of a conveyance, even though the bankrupt could not. He may institute a suit to recover property conveyed in fraud of creditors, as well as to recover property or its value which has been transferred in fraud of the bankrupt act. In re Metzer, 2 B. R. 355; Foster v. Hackley, 2 B. R 406; Bradshaw v. Klein, 1 B. R. 542; Buckingham v. McLean, 3 McLean (C. C.), 185.

The assignee is not entitled to any of the exempted property, and it is no concern of his who may have the right to it.

(c) Powers of Assignee.—Such assignee should have the right to defend and prosecute suits at law;[1] and should sell all property of said bankrupt,[2] and should deposit the money derived from

Upon the death of the bankrupt the title to such property vests in the executor or administrator. In re Hester, 5 B. R. 285.

A sale made after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, of property exempt both by the bankrupt act and the State law, under a levy made prior to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, will be set aside. In re Griffin, 2 B. R. 254.

Property cannot be exempted to the prejudice of a creditor who holds a valid vendor's lien thereon. The lien must prevail. Congress did not intend that the bankrupt act should override cases of that nature. In re Perdue, 2 B. R. 183; In re Whitehead, 2 B. R. 599; In re Brown, 3 B. R. 250.

The bankrupt cannot claim any exemption in property conveyed by him prior to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy in fraud of his creditors, and afterward recovered to the estate. The sale is good as against him, and in attempting to place his property beyond the reach of his creditors he has placed his exemption beyond his own reach. In re Graham, 2 Biss. (C. C.) 449; Keeting v. Keefer, 5 B. R. 133. Compare Bartholemew v. West, 8 B. R. 82; s. c., 2 Dill. (C. C.), 29; Mc. Farland v. Goodman, 1⅞ Am. L. Reg. 697.

The system of bankruptcy is, in a relative sense, uniform throughout the United States, since the assignee takes in each State whatever would have been available to the recourse of execution creditors if the bankrupt law had never been passed. Though the States vary in the extent of their exemptions, yet what remains the bankrupt law distributes equally among the creditors. The bankrupt law does not in any way vary or change the rights of the parties. All contracts are made with reference to existing laws, and no creditor could recover from his debtor more than the unexempted part of his assets. In re Beckford, 4 B. R. 203; In re Jordan, 8 B. R. 180; In re Appold, 1 B. R. 621; In re Ruth, 7 Am. L. Reg. 157.

Congress, in the enactment of a bankrupt law, has the power to make exemptions embracing past as well as future debts. In re Wylie, 5 L. T. B. 330; In re Smith, 8 B. R. 401.

When Congress chooses to add to its own list of exemptions further exemptions under the State laws, it refers the federal courts in their action thereupon to the State laws. A statute consists not merely of its terms, but of the judicial expositions thereof. If a law has been construed by the highest authority of the State, the federal courts are bound by that construction. In re Wylie, 5 L. B. 330.

1. Sec. 14, Rev. Stat. 5047 (Act 1841, sec. 11).

In proceedings in bankruptcy the legal title vests in the assignee under the assignment. Whatever right the bankrupt had is assigned to and vests in the assignee, who thereby becomes, for the purpose of maintaining or defending suits, possessed, as if of his own property, of the estate assigned to him. It is true, he holds the title of the property when recovered in trust for certain purposes specified in the statute; but as between him and a stranger, he holds the title, and may assert it in the same form of action as though he owned the fee. Dambman v. White, 12 B. R. 438; s. c., 48 Cal. 439.

A bankrupt has the exclusive right to sue for trespass committed upon the exempt property prior to the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy. Seiling v. Gunderman, 35 Tex. 345.

The words he "may prosecute" are permissive. It only becomes a duty for an assignee to prosecute when the interest of the estate demands it, of which the assignee is in the first instance the judge. Reade v. Waterhouse, 10 B. R. 277; s. c., 52 N. Y. 587; s. c., 35 N. Y. Sup. 78; Traders' Bank v. Campbell, 3 B. R. 498; s. c., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 87.

Neither the bankrupt nor his attorney has the power or authority to settle a suit in the name of a bankrupt after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Home Ins. Co. v. Hollis, 53 Ga. 659.

If the adjudication of bankruptcy is established, the appointment of an assignee may be presumed. Morris v. Swartz, 10 B. R. 305; Jones v. Beach, 1 Mich. N. P. 94.

2. Sec. 14 and 15, Rev. Stat. 5046 (Act 1841, sec. 15).

The assignee has the authority to sell unincumbered assets without an order from the court. In re White, 1 B. R. 218.

An assignee in one State can sell real estate lying in another State. Oakey v. Corry, 10 La Ann. 502.

such sale.[1] That the court might remove such assignees upon notice and hearing,[2] or said assignee might resign with the consent of the judge,[3] and such vacancies be filled by appointment or election, at the discretion of the judge.[4]

All debts due and payable from the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, and all debts then existing, might be proved against the bankrupt.[5]

Rent might be apportioned and approved,[6] and unliquidated damages assessed and approved.[7]

That mutual debts and credits between debtor and creditor should be stated, and one debt set off against the other.[8]

A creditor proving a debt could not maintain an action at law or in equity on the debt against the bankrupt,[9] and pending suits and unsatisfied judgments were discharged.

Resident creditors were to prove their claims before a register

If an assignee makes a sale of property, but refuses to deliver the possession thereof, he may be sued at law if the sale has never been brought to the attention of the bankrupt court nor in any manner acted on by it. Ives v. Tregent, 29 Mich. 390.

The bankrupt may purchase property at an assignee's sale. Arnold v. Leonard, 20 Miss. 258.

A purchaser of a note at an assignee's sale takes it subject to a prior lawful transfer thereof by the bankrupt. Converse v. Sorley, 39 Tex. 515.

1. Sec. 17, Rev. Stat. 5059 (Act 1841, sec. 9).

If the assignee does not deposit the money in bank within the time fixed by statute, he is charged with interest if he has not a reasonable excuse. In re Thorp, 4 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 337.

2. Sec. 18, Rev. Stat. 5039 (Act 1841, secs. 3 and 8); Ex parte Binswanger, E. D. Mo.; Blodgett v. Sanford, 5 B. R. 427; In re Blodgett & Sanford, 5 B. R. 472; In re Mallory, 4 B. R. 153.

3. Sec. 18, Rev. Stat. 5038.

4 Sec. 18, Rev. Stat. 5040, 5041.

5. Sec. 19, Rev. Stat. 5067 (Act 1841, sec. 5).

The time of the adjudication of the bankruptcy is the time of filing the petition. In re Patterson, 1 B. R. 125; Bailey v. Loeb, 11 B. R. 271; 2 Cent. Law J. 42.

Equitable debts are within the scope of the act. In re Blandin, 5 B. R. 39.

6. Sec. 19, Rev. Stat. 5071.

7. Sec. 19, Rev. Stat. 5068.

A claim for damages for purely personal injury is not provable unless liquidated and transmitted into a legal debt by judgment obtained before the adjudication of bankruptcy. In re Hennocksburgh & Black, 7 B. R. 37; Black v. McClelland, 12 B. R. 481.

Where the claim is for unliquidated damages, there must be an assessment of the damages by the court before the claim can be proved. In re Clough, 2 B. R. 151.

8. Sec. 20, Rev. Stat. 5073 (Act 1841, sec. 5). This section was not intended to enlarge the doctrine of set-off or to enable the party to make a set-off in cases where the principles of legal or equitable set-off did not previously authorize it. The debts must be mutual and must be in the same right. Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 610.

The term "mutual credits" in the bankrupt act is more comprehensive than the term "mutual debts" in the statutes relating to set-off. The term "credit" is synonymous with "trust," and the trust or credit need not be of money on both sides. Where a creditor has goods or choses in action of the bankrupt put in his hands before the bankruptcy, by a valid contract by the terms of which the deposit will result in a debt, as if they are deposited for sale or collection, the case of mutual credit has arisen within the meaning of the bankrupt act. Murray v. Riggs, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 571; Ex parte Caylus, Lowell, 550; Marks v. Barker, 1 Wash. (C. C.) 178; Tucker v. Oxley, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 34.

9. Sec. 21, Rev. Stat. 5105 (Act 1841, sec. 5).

The proof of the debt does not extinguish the action, but merely suspends the right. Hamlin v. Hamlin, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 191; Cook v. Coyle, 113 Mass. 252; Smith v. Dispatch A., 35 N. J. 60; Brendon Mfg. Co. v. Frazer, 13 B. R. 362.

of the district in which they reside.[1] Such claim must be verified, and no claim could be allowed unless it appeared to be true.[2] The court might on application of the assignee or any creditor, or without application, examine upon oath the person presenting the claim, or any other person, in reference thereto.[3]

Claims presented at the first meeting were suspended until after the election of an assignee.[4]

Creditors might act at all meetings by attorneys.[5]

No suit could be maintained against the assignee by any person claiming an adverse interest in property transferable to such as-

1. Sec. 22, Rev. Stat. 5076 (Act 1841, sec. 5).

The section was amended in 1874 so that the oath could be administered by a notary public. Rev. Stat. 5076a, June 22, 1874.

2. Sec. 22, Rev. Stat. 5077 (Act 1841, sec 7).

The statement of the debt in the schedule is not a proof of it. It may be stated in fraud, and may not exist. The bankrupt may have made payments or may have counterclaims and offsets. The debt must be proved by the oath of the creditor. This applies to lien creditor as well as unsecured creditors. Davis, Assignee of Bittel, 2 B. R. 392.

The proof of a debt against a firm should state that the firm or company, describing it by its firm-name and the individuals who compose it, was indebted to the creditor, and how and for what amount. It should not be uncertain whether the demand is a firm debt or a joint claim against the individuals who compose the firm. In re Walton, 1 Deady (C. C.), 510.

The proof should contain at least one full Christian name of the creditor as well as his surname. In re Valentine, 4 Biss. (C. C.) 317.

It is the policy of the act to do equal and exact justice between the estate of the bankrupt and creditors. The court has ample power to investigate a claim at any stage of the proceedings, and to make any correction equity and justice demand, not only to reduce the amount if it is too large, but also to increase it if, through inadvertence, it is smaller than by right it should be. Questions of amendment address themselves to the equitable consideration of the court, and great discretion is exercised in disposing of them. In re Montgomery, 2 B. R. 429; 3 Ben. (D. C.) 565. In re Elder, 3 B. R. 670.

3. Sec. 22, Rev. Stat. 5081.

Under this clause the court has at all times full control of all proofs of the debts, and the right to entertain objections to the validity of the debts or the proofs thereof. In re Patterson, 1 B. R. 100. In re Jones, 2 B. R. 59.

The court has the power to pass an order requiring a creditor to show cause why proof should not be vacated and annulled. The register cannot make such order. Comstock v. Wheeler, 2 B. R. 561. In re Lathup, 3 B. R. 413.

A proof of a judgment which is subsequently set aside should be expunged. In re Cosmore G. Bruce, 6 Ben. (D. C.) 515.

4. Sec. 23, Rev. Stat. 5083.

A claim of questionable character and in dispute should be postponed. In re Jones, 2 B. R. 59; In re Stevens, 4 B. R. 367.

The claim of a creditor who has accepted a preference should be postponed. In re Walton, 1 Deady (C. C.), 442; In re Herman, 3 B. R 618.

In order to justify the postponement of a claim until after the election of an assignee, it is not necessary that the register shall be satisfied or have before him the positive evidence that the claim is invalid, or that the creditor has the right to prove it. In re George Jackson, 14 B. R. 449.

5. Sec. 23, Rev. Stat. 5095.

In order to vote for an assignee, the attorney must be an attorney in fact, and must be appointed by a power of attorney. In re Purvis, 1 B. R. 163; s. c., 1 L. T. B. 19.

The statement of an attorney in regard to his authority must be taken as conclusive, unless proof to the contrary is shown. Ala. B. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 B. R. 97.

The register cannot at the instance of the bankrupt inquire into the authority given to an attorney at law who has been admitted to practice in the circuit or district court. In re W. H. Hill, 1 B. R. 16.

signee, unless brought within two years of the accruing of the right of action against the assignee.[1]

The bankrupt might at all times be examined as to his property and his business,[2] and upon refusal or neglect might be fined for contempt.[3]

Creditors whose debts had been proved, shared pro rata without preference,[4] except in case of wages due clerks, operatives, and house-servants, not exceeding $50.[5]

At the expiration of six months a meeting should be called at which a final dividend was declared.[6]

(d) Discharge.—The bankrupt might apply for his discharge any time after six months from adjudication of bankruptcy;[7] but no discharge will be granted[8] if he had sworn falsely as to petition,[9] schedules, or on his examination, or concealed any part of his estate,[10] been guilty of fraud or negligence in care or delivery to assignee of his property, or permitted waste thereof,[11] or removed,

1. Sec. 24, Rev. Stat. 5057. This is a separate and independent provision, and has no connection with any State statute on the subject. It may extend or it may contract the time provided in the State Statute of Limitations. Thus if at the time of the appointment of the assignee but a few days remain to complete the bar, the time will be extended; or if the statute has just commenced running, and under the State law would have ten years to run, it would be complete in ten years. Freelander v. Holloman, 9 B. R. 331.

2. Sec. 26, Rev. Stat. 5086 (Act 1841, sec. 4); In re Adams. 2 B. R 272; s. c., 36 How. Pr. (N. Y) 270; In re Gilbert, 3 B. R. 152; s. c., Lowell, 340.

3. Sec. 26, Rev. Stat. 5104; In re Carpenter, 1 B. R. 299; In re Salkey & Gibson, 11 B. R. 423.

4. Sec. 27, Rev. Stat. 5091 (Act 1841, secs. 5, 10); In re Byrne, 7 Am. L. Reg. 499.

5. Sec. 27, Rev. Stat. 5101. This section does not refer to any part of the estate derived from the sale of property on which creditors may have a specific lien. Operatives cannot therefore claim a priority over lien creditors in the distribution of such fund. In re William Connell, 9 B. R. 387.

6. Sec. 28, Rev. Stat. 5096, 5097, 5098 (Act 1841, sec. 10).

7. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5108 (Act 1841, sec. 4).

If there are no assets within sixty days, the six months is to be computed from the date of adjudication, not from the date of the filing the original petition. In re Bodenheim, 2 B. R. 419; In re D. K. Holmes, 14 B. R. 209.

8. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110 (Act 1841, sec. 4); In re Goodfellow, 3 B. R. 452; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 510.

9. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110 (Act 1841, sec. 4).

The specification must aver that the false oath was wilful. Omissions in the schedule must be alleged to be intentional. A false oath on examination must be alleged to have been wilful and in regard to a material fact. In re Rathbone, 1 B. R. 324; In re Beardsley, 1 B. R. 304; In re Wyatt, 2 B. R. 288; In re Sidle, 2 B. R. 220; In re Robt. Shoemaker, 4 Biss. 245; In re Wm. Achenbaum, 12 B. R. 17.

10. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110 (Act 1841, sec. 4).

The specification should state with some particularity what property has been concealed. In re Mawson, 1 B. R. 437; In re Rathbone, 1 B. R. 324; In re Freeman, 4 B. R. 64.

The term "concealment" implies something wilful, intentional. One cannot be said to conceal property unless he knows that he owns it, but unless he also intentionally, not inadvertently, conceals the same from his assignees or creditors. The act of concealment must be shown to be intentional. In re George Wilson, 6 Law Rep. 272; In re Mark Banks, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 274; Dresser v. Brooks, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; In re Renslow S. Parker, 4 Biss. (C. C.) 501.

An omission of property by mistake will not prevent discharge. Loud v. Pierce, 25 Me. 233; Suydam v. Walker, 16 Ohio, 122; Steene v. Aylesworth, 18 Conn. 244.

11. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110 (Act 1841, sec. 4); In re Rogers, 3 B. R. 564; In re or caused to be removed, his property out of the district with intent to defraud creditors,[1] or given fraudulent preference, or fraudulent gift or credit,[2] or lost property by gaming,[3] or admitted false debts,[4] or had not kept proper books,[5] or had procured assent of creditor by pecuniary consideration,[6] or in contemplation of bankruptcy had made any preference, or had disposed of property to prevent it from coming to the assignee,[7] or had been convicted of a misdemeanor under the act, or been guilty of fraud contrary thereto.[8]

A person having once been discharged under this act could not be discharged a second time unless his estate paid 70 per cent dividend.[9]

If a bankrupt conformed to his duty under the act, he was entitled to a discharge;[10] but no discharge was granted unless 30 per

Rosenfield. 2 B. R. 117; 8 Am. L. Reg. 44; In re Michael Finn, 8 B. R. 525.

1. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110 (Act 1841, sec. 4); In re Hammond & Coolidge, 3 B. R. 273; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 381.

2. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110.

By the term "fraudulent preference" is meant a preference contrary to the provisions of this act. In re Rosenfield, 8 Am. Law Reg. 44; In re Aspinwall, 3 Penn. L. J. 212; In re Perry & Allen, 20 Pitts. L. J. 184; In re Warner, 5 B. R. 414.

An assignment exacting a release as a condition of receiving a dividend is a ground for refusing a discharge, because it is a preference. In re Aspinwall, 3 Penn. L. J. 212. Contra, In re Chas. W. Holmes, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 211.

3. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110; In re Marshall, 4 B. R. 106; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 462.

4. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110.

In order to bar the discharge, the debt must be falsely admitted in proceedings under the act. Merely giving a preference to a fictitious debt in an assignment is not sufficient. In re Chas. H. Delaven, 5 Law Rep. 370.

The language of the statute does not embrace a claim admitted to be just in its origin, but against which the bankrupt insists upon the rights of set-off or assets that it has been satisfied. The distinction is between fabricating a debt where none exists in fact, and stating a debt unquestionably outstanding with the claim of defence to it. In re Mark Banks, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 274; In re Orcutt, 4 B. R. 538.

5. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110.

The intent of the non-keeping of the books is of no importance. The mere omission is the thing plainly interdicted. Such omission prevents a discharge whether the intention is fraudulent or not. In re Solomon, 2 B. R. 302; In re Shumpert, 8 B. R. 415; In re George & Procter, Lowell (D. C.), 409.

A cash account is necessary to understand a trader's business; and where one has not been kept, a discharge will be refused. In re Gay, 2 B. R. 358; In re Littlefield, 3 B. R. 57; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 331.

The question is whether the bankrupt did all that a prudent business man, intending to keep his accounts accurately, would do. A temporary omission in good faith and for a reasonable time to make entries would not be a failure to keep books. But neglect to keep them on purpose for a reasonable time would. In re Hammond & Coolidge, 3 B. R. 273; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 381.

6. Sec. 29 Rev. Stat. 5110; In re Freeman, 4 B. R. 64; s. c., 4 Ben. (D.C.) 245; Coates v. Blush, 55 Mass. 564; Chamberlain v. Griggs, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 9; Fox v. Paine, 10 Ala. 523; In re Palmer, 14 B. R. 432; In re Whitney, 14 B. R. 1.

7. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors by a party in contemplation of becoming bankrupt is good ground for refusing a discharge in a case of voluntary bankruptcy. The fact that the assignment is one of all the debtor's property and creates no preference among his creditors makes no difference. It is as repugnant to the act as if he had assigned a part of his property or had created preferences. In re Goldsmith, 3 B. R. 165; s. c. 3 Ben. (D. C.) 379.

8. Sec. 29, Rev. Stat. 5110.

9. Sec. 30, Rev. Stat. 5116 (Act 1841, sec. 12).

10. Sec. 32, Rev. Stat. 5114.

cent dividend was paid, unless a majority in value and number of creditors assented in writing.[1]

This discharge, if duly granted, discharged or released the bankrupt from all debts which were provable; and creditors might contest at any time within two years.[2]

1. Sec. 30, Rev. Stat. 5112.

2. Sec. 34, Rev. Stat. 5119 (Act 1841, sec. 4).

It is competent for Congress to declare what shall be the force and effect of a discharge. Reed v. Vaugh, 15 Mo. 137.

Where the discharge is pleaded, the court will presume that the requirements of the law were complied with. Lathrop v. Stuart, 5 McLean (C. C.), 167.

The certificate of discharge is a bar only to debts and demands which were or might have been proved, but not as against personal covenants and engagements which were not provable. If the demand is not provable, it is not barred by the certificate. This is the just and settled rule. Murray v. DeRottenham, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 52.

Debts due the United States are not within the law. U. S. v. King, Wall. Sr. (C. C.) 12.

A discharge does not release the bankrupt from his liability as surety for money paid on a judgment rendered against them both, after the granting of the discharge. Leighton v. Atkins, 35 Me. 118.

As affecting sureties, see Kerr v. Hamilton, 1 Cranch (C. C.), 546; Loring v. Kendall, 67 Mass. 305; Fowler v. Kendall, 44 Me. 448; Pogue v. Joiner, 6 Ark. 141; Fullwood v. Bushfield, 14 Pa. St. 90; Tobias v. Rodgers, 13 N. Y. 59; Mace v. Wells, 17 Vt. 503.

A discharge releases the bankrupt from all judgments rendered against him prior to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, for a judgment is a debt of record. Blake v. Bigelow, 5 Ga. 437.

It also releases the bankrupt from a judgment for a provable debt entered after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy and before the granting of a discharge. Harrington v. McNaughton, 20 Vt. 293; Dresser v. Brooks, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; McDonald v. Ingraham, 30 Miss. 389; Clark v. Rowling, 3 N. Y. 216. Compare Bradford v. Rice, 102 Mass. 472; Ellis v. Ham, 28 Me. 385; Roden v. Jaco, 17 Ala. 344.

Other cases affecting judgments: Levitt v. Baldwin, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 289; Rees v. Butler, 18 Mo. 173; Haggerty v. Armory, 89 Mass. 458; Hollister v. Abbott, 31 N. H. 442; Stewart v. Colwell, 24 Pa. St. 97; Wilkins v. Warren, 27 Me. 438; Comstock v. Grout, 17 Vt. 512; Alling v. Egan, 11 Rob. (La.) 244.

A discharge in bankruptcy bars a foreign as well as a domestic creditor. Ruiz v. Eickerman, 12 Cent. L. J. 60; Murray v. De Rottenham, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 52; McMenony v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 435; Pattison & Co. v. Wilbur, 12 B. R. 193. Compare McDougal v. Carpenter, 17 Cent. L. J. 476.

A discharge constitutes no defence to an action to foreclose a mortgage, but no judgment can be rendered against the bankrupt for any deficiency. This applies to mortgage of personal as well as real property. Pierce v. Wilcox, 40 Ind. 70; City Bank v. Walton, 5 Rob. (La.) 158; Stewart v. Anderson, 10 Ala. 504; Roberts v. Woods, 38 Wis. 60.

It does not affect the lien of a judgment. McCance v. Taylor, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 580; McColloch v. Caldwell, 5 Ark. 237; Jones v. Lellyett, 39 Ga. 64.

There is no law that requires a new promise to pay a debt discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy to be made in writing to be valid; therefore such a promise may be proved by parol, and when proved is binding. Barron v. Benedict, 44 Vt. 518; Hill v. Robbins, 22 Mich. 475; Appersen v. Stewart, 27 Ark. 619.

The new promise must be distinct, clear, and unequivocal. There must be an expression by the debtor of a clear intention to bind himself to the payment of the debt. Allen v. Furgeson, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 1; Fraley v. Kelley, 67 N. Car. 78; Stern v. Nusbaum, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 489.

There is no precise form of words required. The true test is, did the party mean that he would pay the debt? If he did, and the words used by him were susceptible of no other construction, then they amount in law to an express promise. Evans v. Carey, 29 Ala. 99; Bennett v. Everartt, 3 R. I. 152; Meech v. Lamm, 103 Ind. 515; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 540; Elwell v. Cumner. 136 Mass. 102; Hubbard v. Farrell, 87 Ind. 215 (believed to be overruled by Meech v. Lamm, 103 Ind. 515); Bolton v. King, 105 Pa. St. 78; s. c., 18 Cent. L. J. 458; Bigelow v. Norris, Mass. Sup. C. 1886.

The new promise must be express and unconditional, and must be absolute.

Any fraudulent preference made in contemplation of insolvency or by an insolvent within four months before the filing of the petition was void; and if the purchaser or person to be benefited had reasonable cause to believe such person to be insolvent, etc., such property could be recovered by the assignees.[1] Or if Mason v. Haughart, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 480; Samuel v. Cravens, 10 Ark. 380; Sherman v. Hobart, 26 Vt. 60; Taylor v. Nixon, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 352; La Tourette v. Price, 28 Miss. 702.

It is not necessary that the new promise be made to the creditor or his authorized agent. It may be made to a third person. Haines v. Stauffer, 13 Pa. St. 541; Evans v. Carey, 29 Ala. 99.

The Statute of Limitations only commences to run from the time of the new promise. Horner v. Speed, 2 Pat. & H. (Va.) 616.

If the words are capable of being construed as a promise, it is for the jury to determine whether the bankrupt, by the words, intended to promise to pay the debt. Pratt v. Russell, 61 Mass. 462; Bennett v. Everartt, 3 R. I. 152.

The mere payment of interest on a note does not revive the debt. Cambridge Institution v. Littlefield, 60 Mass. 210.

Neither are partial payments on a debt in law a new promise to pay the debt, nor do they constitute evidence from which a jury may infer a new promise to pay the debt. Stark v. Stimson, 23 N. H. 259; Viele v. Ogilvie, 2 Greene (N. J.), 326.

The State court does not lose jurisdiction of the person of the defendant by his being adjudicated a bankrupt; and if he does not plead his discharge, a judgment can be rendered against him. Manwarring v. Kouns, 55 Tex. 171; Seymour v. Browning, 17 Ohio St. 362; Stewart v. Green, 11 Paige (N. Y.), 535; Fellows v. Hall, 3 McLean (C. C.), 487; Horner v. Spellman, 78 Ill. 206.

A plea of a discharge in bankruptcy is sufficient if it sets out a discharge duly authenticated. Lathrop v. Stewart, 5 McLean (C. C.), 167; White v. How, 3 McLean (C. C.), 291; McNeil v. Knott, 11 Ga. 142; Rowan v. Holcomb, 16 Ohio St. 463; Downer v. Chamberlain, 21 Vt. 414.

A garnishee cannot plead the discharge of the defendant. Frazier v. Banks, 77 La. Ann. 31.

1. Sec. 35, Rev. Stat. 5128 (Act 1841, sec. 2).

It is the intention of the bankrupt act to prevent all preferences by an insolvent person, and, as far as possible, to insure the equal distribution of his property to all his creditors. It differs in a material point from the act of 1841. By the second section of that act, to render a transfer void it must have been made "in contemplation of bankruptcy." The present act only requires "insolvency or contemplation of insolvency." In re Arnold, 2 B. R. 168; Foster v. Hackley & Sons, 2 B. R. 406; In re Kingsbury, 3 B. R. 318.

Facts Required.—To make a transfer void, the following facts must concur: (1) the debtor making the transfer must be insolvent; (2) if the transfer gives a preference, it must be made with a view to give a preference to the creditor; (3) in any event, the person receiving the transfer must at the time have reasonable cause to believe the person making the transfer to be insolvent; (4) must also know that such transfer was in fraud of the provisions of the bankrupt act; (5) and the payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, or conveyance must be made within four months before the filing of the petition by or against the bankrupt. Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 45; Forbes v. Howe, 102 Mass. 427; Dow v. Sargent, 15 N. H. 115; Rice v. Melendy, 41 Iowa, 395.

If the debtor did not intend to give a preference, and the creditor did not have reasonable cause to believe the debtor to be insolvent, the transfer is valid, although the debtor was then insolvent. Mays v. Fritton, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 414; Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 360.

Intent to Prefer.—When a debtor is insolvent, and knows it, any payment then made by him to a creditor in full must be made with an intent to prefer, as the intention of the parties is to be judged from the legal effect of their acts. Traders' Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 87; In re Gregg, 4 B. R. 456; Rison v. Knapp, 4 B. R. 349.

A mortgage of all the property of a trader, or of so much as will make him insolvent, when given for a pre-existing debt is such an apparent preference that it would be almost impossible to explain it away. In re McKay & Aldus, 7 B. R. 230; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 561.

The mere omission by an insolvent debtor, when he is sued for a just debt, to file a petition in bankruptcy is not suffipayment or conveyance, etc., were made within six months to any person knowing the same to be made for the purpose of prevent-cient evidence of an intent to prefer or defeat the operation of the act. Wilson v. City Bank, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 473.

A preference within the meaning of the act is an advantage in the payment of the debt due him, acquired by one creditor over the other creditors of the debtor. In re Joseph Horton, 5 Ben. (D. C.) 562.

A mortgage is not a preference where the debt is secured by a prior mortgage covering goods subsequently acquired, where both mortgages cover the same goods. Brett v. Carter, 14 B. R. 301.

The preference at which the law is directed can only arise in case of an antecedent debt. The giving of security where the debt is created is not within the law; and if the transaction is free from fraud in fact, the party who loans the money can retain it until it is paid. Tiffany v. Boatmans, 4 B. R. 691; s. c., 18 Wall. (U. S.) 376; Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 360.

A transfer of property to a factor with intent to give him a preference by enabling him to claim a factor's lien thereon is void. Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 420.

Likewise a transfer of property within the United States to prefer an alien creditor. Olcott v. McLean, 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 455.

A transfer of firm property with the intent to prefer an individual creditor may be set aside. Encker v. Levy, 3 Stob. Eq. (S. Car.) 197; Collins v. Hood, 4 McLean (C. C.), 186.

The word "conveyance" in the bankrupt act is a generic term, including all proceedings to dispose of or incumber property in derogation of the equality of creditors, with intent by such disposition to give a preference or to defeat or delay the operation of the act. Bingham v. Frost, 6 B. R. 135.

Testimony of the parties as to their intention is inexpressibly weak, and can rarely avail against stronger proof which the transaction itself affords. Oxford Iron Co. v. Slafton, 14 B. R. 280.

Insolvency.—Insolvency, as used in the bankrupt act, does not mean an absolute inability to pay one's debts, at a future time, upon a settlement and winding up of all a trader's concerns; but a trader may be said to be in insolvent circumstances when he is not in the condition to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business, as persons carrying on trade usually do. Sawyer v. Turpin, 91 U. S. 114; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 584; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 40.

The words "in contemplation of bankruptcy," as used in the bankrupt law, mean a contemplation of a state of bankruptcy merely, and not an intention to take the benefit of the bankrupt law, and this means more than an inability to pay debts promptly. It contemplates a thorough breaking up of business. McLean v. Lafayette, 3 McLean (C. C.), 587; Everett v. Stone, 3 Story (C. C.), 446.

The commission of an act of bankruptcy is considered as a test of insolvency, showing conclusively the inability of the debtor to pay his debts. Shawhan v. Wherritt. 7 How. (U. S.) 627.

The question whether or not the preference was made at a time when the bankrupt was insolvent is a question for the jury. Pierce v. Evans, 61 Pa. St. 415.

Judgments.—Merely allowing a creditor to obtain a judgment by default in an action for a debt to which there is no defence does not, as a conclusion of law, raise an implication of a motive or intent to prefer. Wilson v. City Bank, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 473; Haughy v. Altin, 2 B. R. 399; Ballow v. Minard, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 560; Clark v. Piet, 3 McLean (C. C.). 494. Compare Catlin v. Hoffman, 9 B. R. 342; Linkman v. Wilcox, 1 Dill. (C. C.) 161.

The mere entry of a judgment by virtue of a warrant of attorney given when the debtor was solvent is not such a preference as the statute avoids, although it is entered just before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy and when the creditor knows that the debtor is insolvent, and though it is followed by an execution. Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 360; Sleek v. Turner, 76 Pa. St. 142; Watson v. Taylor, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 378; Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. (U. S.) 157; Love v. Love, 21 Pitts. L. J. 101. Compare Hood v. Harper, 5 B. R. 358; In re Terry v. Cleaver, 4 B. R. 126; s. c., 2 Biss. (C. C.) 356.

There is no distinction in this respect between a voluntary and an involuntary bankruptcy. Haskell v. Ingalls, 5 B. R. 205; In re C. A. Davidson, 3 B. R. 418.

What may be Recovered.—The amount which the assignee is entitled to recover from a creditor who has received a preference by means of a judgment is the gross amount obtained on execution, without any deduction for the costs and expenses of the creditor. Traders' Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 3 B. R. 498; s. c., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 27; Street v. Dawson, 4 B. R. 207.

When the proceedings are in the nature

ing the same from falling into the hands of the assignee, it could be recovered by the assignee.[1]

of equity proceedings, the court may, in its discretion, make a decree for the net instead of the gross amount received. Brock v. Terrell, 2 B. R. 643; Wilson v. Brinkman, 2 B. R. 468. Other authorities: Rohrer's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 498; Clarion Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 325; Anderson v. Strausburger, 6 Ben. (D. C.) 372; Winslow v. Clark, 47 N. Y. 261.

Reasonable Cause.—The bankrupt act does not require that the party receiving the transfer shall know, etc., but that he shall have reasonable cause to believe, such reasonable cause as would induce the belief in the mind of an intelligent, capable business man. Otis v. Hadley, 112 Mass. 100; Graham v. Stark, 3 B. R. 357.

"Reasonable cause to believe" means a state of facts and circumstances which would lead any prudent man to make inquiries. It will not do to ask protection on account of ignorance, when a small amount of inquiry would have given all the necessary information. In re J. B. Wright, 2 B. R. 490; White v. Raftery, 3 B. R. 221.

The proposition of "reasonable cause to believe" is one of fact to be found by the jury. Forbes v. Howe, 102 Mass., 427.

The existence of a financial crisis constitutes of itself a reasonable cause for believing doubtful men insolvent. In re Clark & Dougherty, 10 B. R. 21.

A creditor may be affected by rumors which he has heard about the debtor's embarrassment. Post v. Corbin, 5 B. R. 11; Golson v. Nichoff, 5 B. R. 56.

Where an execution must necessarily stop the debtor's business, the execution in general is reasonable cause to believe the debtor to be insolvent. Hood v. Karper, 5 B. R. 358; Zahm v. Fry, 9 B. R. 546.

The debtor's remonstrance, that the giving of the security will injure his business, is sufficient to put the creditor upon inquiry. Wager v. Hall, 5 B. R 181; s. c., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 584; Hyde v Corrigan, 9 B. R. 466.

Bona-fide Purchaser.— Morse v. Godfrey, 3 Story (C. C.), 364; In re Kansas City Mfg. Co., 9 B. R. 76; Rison v. Knapp, 4 B. R. 22; s. c., 1 Dill. C. C. 186; Zahm v. Fry. 9 B. R. 546.

Voidable Transfer.—Atkins v. Spear, 49 Mass. 490; Everart v. Stone, 3 Story (C. C.), 446; Whipps v. Ellis, 7 Bush (Ky.), 268; Avery v. Hackley, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 407; Burnbisel v. Firmen, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 170; Nudd v. Montange, 38 Wis. 511; Hathaway v. Brown, 18 Minn. 414; Frenzel v. Miller, 37 Ind. 1.

1. Sec. 35, Rev. Stat. 5129 (Act 1841, sec. 2). This and the preceding sections differ mainly in their application to two different classes of recipients of the bankrupt's property or means. The preceding section is limited to a creditor or person having a claim against the bankrupt, and who receives the money or property by way of preference, and this section applies to the purchase of the property of the bankrupt by a person who has no claim against him and is under no liability for him. Bean v. Brookmire, 4 B. R. 196; s. c., 1 Dill. (C. C.) 24.

The preceding section was intended to refer to the past, and this section to the present. Gibson v. Warden, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 244. And the two sections must be construed together, and a scope of operation given to each, if possible. Hubbard v. Allaire, Works, 4 B. R. 623; Babbitt v. Walbrun & Co., 4 B. R. 121.

A sale made by a debtor will be fraudulent if the following facts occur: (1) if the debtor is insolvent or contemplates insolvency or bankruptcy; (2) if the purchaser has, when he buys the goods, reasonable cause to believe the debtor to be insolvent or to be acting in contemplation of insolvency; (3) and knows that the sale was made by the debtor with a view to prevent, etc., defeat, etc., or evade, etc., the provisions of the bankrupt act. Sales so made are void and in fraud of creditors and their right under the bankrupt act; and as against the immediate vendee and actual participators, such sales, if made off the usual and ordinary course of business,—as where an insolvent merchant sells out all his stock and property.—are prima-facie evidence of fraud; that is, of the foregoing elements constituting a fraudulent sale. But it is only prima facie, and the presumption may be rebutted by evidence aliunde to be produced by the vendee. Andrews v. Graves, 5 B. R. 279; s. c., 1 Dill. (C. C.) 108.

An assignment is only voidable, and cannot be impeached unless proceedings in bankruptcy are commenced within six months after its execution. Maltbie v. Hotchkiss, 5 B. R. 485; s. c., 38 Conn. 80; Reed v. Taylor, 4 B. R. 710; s. c., 32 Iowa, 209; Thrasher v. Bentley, 59

Contracts made to induce creditors to forbear opposing discharge were void.[1]

(e) Corporations and Partnership.—Corporations and joint-stock companies by a vote of a majority of the incorporators could be declared bankrupt.[2] And partnerships might be adjudged bankrupt upon petition of any member of the firm or any creditor.[3]

N. Y. 649; Weiner v. Farnum, 2 Pa. St. 146.

If it should turn out on examination that the transfer was made by the bankrupt in good faith for the honest purpose of discharging his indebtedness, and in the confident expectation that by so doing he could continue his business, it will be upheld. Tiffany v. Lucas, 5 B. R. 437; s. c., 15 Wall. (U. S.) 410.

A fair exchange may be made at any time, even if one of the parties to the transaction is insolvent. The bankrupt's dealings will stand if they leave his estate in as good plight and condition as previously. Cook v. Tullis, 9 B. R. 433; s. c., 18 Wall (U. S.) 332.

1. Sec. 35, Rev. Stat. 5131.

The payments which the law makes void are those which reduce the means of the debtor to pay his debts ratably. O'Conner v. Parker, 4 B. R. 713; s. c., 23 Mich. 22; Noble v. Schofield, 44 Vt. 281; Dalrymple v. Hallenbrand; 62 N. Y. 5; Rice v. Maxwell, 21 Miss. 289. Claflin v. Tolina, 55 Mo. 369.

2. Sec. 37, Rev. Stat. 5122 (Act 1841, sec. 14); Rankin & Pullen v. Florida, Atlantic & G. C. R. Co., 1 B. R. 647; s. c., 1 L. T. B. 85.

Only such portions of the bankruptcy system as are expressly or impliedly adopted by this section are applicable to corporations or joint-stock companies. New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co., 13 B. R. 109; s. c., 53 N. Y. 123; s. c., 91 U. S. 656.

Railways are included. Sweet v. Boston R. Co., 5 B. R. 234; Ala. & Chat. R. v. Jones, 5 B. R. 97; In re Cal. Pacific R., 11 B. R. 193; s. c., 1 Cent. Law Jour. 582.

Also insurance companies. In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 6 B. R. 43; s. c., 3 Biss. 162.

But not national banks. Smith v. Manuf. Nat'l Bank, 9 B. R. 122.

Voluntary Petition.—No other petition on behalf of the corporations can be recognized under the act than one which has been duly authorized by a vote of a majority of the corporators at a legal meeting called for the purpose. A "corporator," as understood both in the law respecting corporations and in common speech, is one who is a member of the corporation; that is to say, one of the constituents or stockholders of the corporation. New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Brass & Copper Co., 91 U. S. 656; In re Lady Bryan Mining Co., 4 B. R. 144, 394; Davis v. Railroad, 12 B. R. 258; Newman v. Fisher, 37 Md. 259.

Effect of Bankruptcy.—A corporation for all essential purposes is as effectually dissolved by the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy as if a solemn judgment were pronounced to that effect. It is such a dissolution as will afford creditors a remedy against the individual shareholders where they are made liable upon the dissolution of the corporation. State Savings Assoc. v. Kellogg, 52 Mo. 583.

3. Sec. 36, Rev. Stat. 5121 (Act 1841, sec. 14). The provisions of this section clearly contemplate that persons who are copartners may be adjudged bankrupts on three descriptions of petitions: (1) the petition of all copartners; (2) the petition of one of the copartners; (3) the petition of a creditor of one of the copartners. The proceeding by the petition of all the copartners is purely voluntary, and where they all unite the jurisdiction of the court over all of them, either by residence or by carrying on the business, must appear in the petition. The proceeding by the petition of a creditor of the copartners is a purely involuntary proceeding, and requires the adjudication to proceed on the commission of some act of bankruptcy. The proceeding by the petition of one of two or more of the copartners to have such copartners adjudicated bankrupt is a proceeding which necessarily is partly voluntary and partly involuntary. So far as the petition is concerned it is voluntary; so far as the copartners not petitioning are concerned it is not involuntary within sec. 39, Rev. Stat. 5021, unless the adjudication is asked for on the ground of the commission of an act of bankruptcy, although it may be involuntary in the sense of not being voluntary under sec. 11, Rev. Stat. 5014. Where it is not involuntary in the sense of sec. 39, Rev. Stat. 5021, the adjudication may be asked on the ground that the members of the copartnership are unable to pay all their debts, and no allegation that an act of bankruptcy has been committed either by the firm or by the copartners who are proceeded against is necessary. A partner may also petition to have himself adjudged bankrupt because of his inability to pay his debts, and to have his copartners adjudged bankrupts because of the commission by them of an act to which he was not a party. In re Joseph Noonan, 10 B. R. 331; s. c., 2 Biss. (C. C.) 491; In re Penn. et al., 5 B. R. 30; s. c., 5 Ben. (D. C.) 89.

No number less than the whole of a firm can file a voluntary petition. In re Moritz v. Plummer, 5 Law Rep. 325.

Partners are not liable to be adjudged bankrupt upon the petition of their creditors upon the mere proof of their insolvency without other proof of the commission of an act of bankruptcy. In re Ralph Johnson, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 166.

Assignee of Individual Partner.—Upon the bankruptcy of one partner his private property and his interest in the firm pass to the assignee. Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 289.

The partnership property cannot be taken and administered by the bankrupt court unless all the persons who have an interest as copartners in such property are adjudged bankrupt. An assignee of the individual and separate estate of one partner has no title to call third persons to an account for partnership property. In re T. S. Shepherd, 3 B. R. 172; s. c., 3 Ben. (D. C.) 347; Amsinck v Bean, 10 Blatchf. (C. C.) 361; s. c., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 395.

Where one partner becomes bankrupt his assignee can only take that portion of the partnership assets which would belong to the bankrupt after payment of all the partnership debts, and the solvent partners have a lien upon the partnership assets for all the partnership debts, and also for their own shares. Parker v. Muggsidge, 2 Story (C. C.), 334; Buckner v. Calcote, 28 Miss. 432; Murray v. Murray, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 60.

Distribution of Assets.—If the partners conduct business in two different places under different names, the two firms, in the distribution of the assets, will be treated as one, and no notice will be taken of the indebtedness of one firm to another. Buckner v. Calcote, 28 Miss. 432; In re Theo. H. Vetterlein et al., 4 B. R. 599; s. c., 5 Ben. (D. C.) 311.

If any surplus remains after the individual creditors are paid, it must be distributed pro rata among all the creditors who have proved their claims and to whom the partner was liable either as a member of the bankrupt firm or any other firm. In re R. K. Dunkerson, 12 B. R. 391; s. c., 4 Biss. 323.

The firm creditors cannot have recourse to the separate estate for goods advanced by the firm to one of the partners. In re McEwen & Son, 12 B. R. 11; s. c., 6 Biss. (C. C.) 294.

Real estate purchased with the intention that it shall be held as partnership property will be deemed to be personalty as far as creditors are concerned, and will be applied to pay firm debts, even as against individual creditors who have obtained judgments which would otherwise be liens thereon. Marrett v. Murphy, 11 B. R. 131; s. c., 1 Cent. Law J. 554; Hiscock v. Green, 12 B. R. 507, Osborn v. McBride, 11 Pac. Law R. 105.

Where there are partnership assets the partnership creditors cannot share the individual estate, although the partners were declared bankrupts on separate petitions. In re Edward P. Morse, 13 B. R. 376.

A creditor holding a judgment against one partner acquires no lien upon the firm property transferred to that partner at a time when the firm was insolvent. In re Cook v. Gleason, 3 Biss. 122. See Thenson v. Spittle, 102 Mass. 207; Taylor v. Rash, 5 B. R. 399; Tucker v. Oxley, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 34; Collins v. Hood, 4 McLean (C. C.), 186.

Discharge.—Upon an application for a discharge there are in reality two cases, and the petition of each partner for a discharge, and the objection made to it, must be considered severally. Each bankrupt must stand or fall by his own acts. Those of his copartner committed without his knowledge will not affect him, excepting that a neglect to do what the law positively requires, such as keeping proper books, will affect both, though it should actually be the neglect of one. In re George & Prostor, Lowell (D. C.), 409; In re George M. Garwood, Crabbe (D. C.), 516.

Specifications which apply to one partner alone will not prevent the discharge of the other parties. The discharge is to be granted or refused to them the same as it would be if the defaulting partner were not a party to the proceedings. In re Schofield et al., 3 B. R. 551

Involuntary Bankruptcy.—Sec. 39, Rev. Stat. 5021 (Act 1841, sec. 1). This section is highly remedial and should be liberally construed. It is not to be construed strictly as if it were an obscure or special penal enactment. The act establishes a system and regulates in all their

(f) Involuntary.—The act declared that any person owing debts[1] as aforesaid who after the passage of this act shall depart from the State of which he is an inhabitant with intent to defraud his creditors, or being absent shall conceal himself with such intent to avoid the service of legal process,[2] or shall conceal or remove any of his property to avoid its being attached, etc.,[3] or shall make any assignment, gift, or sale of his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors,[4] or who has been arrested details the relative rights and duties of debtor and creditor. It does not attempt to punish the bankrupt, but to distribute his property fairly and impartially, and between his creditors to whom in justice it belongs. It is remedial and seeks to protect the honest creditor from being overreached and defrauded by the unscrupulous. It is intended to relieve the honest but unfortunate debtor from the burden of liabilities which he cannot discharge, and allow him to commence the business of life anew. Such an act must be construed according to the fair import of its terms, with a view to effect its objects and to promote justice. In re Locke, 2 B. R. 382; s. c., Lowell (D. C.) 293: In re Silverman, 4 B. R. 523; s. c., 7 Sawyer (C. C.), 410; In re Wm. Ellis, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 85.

But that part of the statute which enumerates the acts of bankruptcy is in the nature of a penal statute and must be strictly construed. Jones v. Sleeper, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 131. See Wilson v. City Bank, 5 B. R. 270; s. c., 17 Wall. (U. S.) 489; Wadsworth v. Tyler, 2 B. R. 316; s. c., 2 L. T. B. 28; Perry v. Langley, 1 B. R. 559.

1. The language "owing debts as aforesaid" has reference to the following words in Rev. Stat. 5014: "owing debts provable in bankruptcy exceeding the amount of $300." From this the following conclusions must be deduced: (1) the foundation of voluntary proceeding is indebtedness due and payable under the act against the debtor; (2) whatever debts may be proved in a voluntary may be proved in an involuntary case; (3) whenever an indorser's liability becomes fixed, such liability constitutes a debt due and payable from the indorser which may be made the foundation of an involuntary as well as voluntary proceeding in bankruptcy. Of course there must be shown in an involuntary case, in addition to such indebtedness, at least one of the acts of bankruptcy enumerated in this section. In re Nickodemus, 3 B. R. 230; s. c., 16 Pitts. Law J. 233.

2. Concealment from a denial of service to creditors is not an act of bankruptcy if it does not prevent the service of summons or process. Barnes v. Bellington, 1 Wash. (C. C.) 29; s. c., 4 Day (Conn.), 81 n.

An order for examination of a debtor upon the proceedings supplemental to an execution is a legal process within the meaning of the act. Brock v. Hoppick, 2 B. R. 7.

3. Procuring an attachment upon a fictitious debt in order to prevent an attachment by a creditor comes fairly within the language of this clause; because the words mean not only the physical removal or concealment, but the concealment of the actual title and position of the property of whatever kind. In re Williams & Co., 3 B. R. 286; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 406.

The secrecy and concealment of goods which constitutes an act of bankruptcy distinct from a fraudulent conveyance of them must be an actual, not a constructive, concealment of them by the bankrupt himself, or by his procurement, while they continue, in his intention, his own goods. Livermore v. Bagley, 3 Mass. 487; Fox v. Eckstein, 4 B. R. 373.

4. Fraudulent Conveyances.—The "intent" means an actual design in the mind and must be proved as a question of fact. Perry v. Langley, 2 B. R. 596; s. c., 8 Am. Law Reg. 427.

The question of intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors must be solved by looking at what the debtor says or does and the effect thereof. Ecfort v. Greeley, 6 B. R. 433; In re Thomas Ryan, 2 Sawy. (C. C.) 411.

Allowing property to be taken upon a false and fictitious judgment is a transfer with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors. In re Schick, 7 B. R. 177.

If an insolvent firm is dissolved and the assets transferred to one of the partners, who immediately executes a mortgage to secure a separate debt, the mortgage may be charged as a conveyance to hinder and delay creditors. In re Waite et al., Lowell (D. C.), 407. See In re Picton, 11 B. R. 420; s. c., 2 Dill. (C. C.) 548; In re W. B. Alexander, 4 B. R. 178;

or held in custody under or by virtue of mesne process or execution issued in any United States, State, district, or Territorial court, etc.,[1] or who being a bankrupt or insolvent, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, shall make any payment, gift, etc.,[2] with intent to give a preference to one or more of his creditors,[3] or with the

s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 470; In re Williams & Co., 3 B. R. 286; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 406.

To make a general assignment for the benefit of creditors an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of this clause, it must be made with the intent to delay, defraud, or hinder creditors within the meaning of the statute of 13 Eliz. as exemplified in Twyne's case and other subsequent decisions following it. It becomes a question of fact. The innocence or guilt of the act depends on the mind of him who did it, and it is not fraud within the meaning of the bankrupt act unless it was meant to be so. Perry v. Langley, 1 B. R. 559; s. c., 8 Am. Law Reg. 427; Wells et al., 1 B. R. 171; s. c., 7 Am. Law Reg. 163.

1. The arrest and imprisonment are both necessary to constitute the act of bankruptcy. Either alone is insufficient. Both do not exist until the term limited for that purpose has expired. Nelson v. Pugh, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 149. See In re Davis, 3 B. R. 339; s. c., 3 Ben. (D. C.) 482; Hunt v. Pooke, 5 B. R. 161.

2. Mere insolvency is not, of itself, ground for voluntary bankruptcy; for a man actually insolvent may continue his business for years by renewals and extensions and indulgences on the part of his creditors, and ultimately not only pay all indebtedness with interest, but achieve success. Doan v. Compton & Doan, 2 B. R. 607.

The words "in contemplation of bankruptcy" mean in contemplation of committing what is made by the act of bankruptcy, or of voluntarily applying to be decreed a bankrupt. In re Craft, 1 B. R. 378; s. c., 2 Ben. (D. C.) 214; Jones v. Howland, 49 Mass. 377; Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. (U. S.) 151.

Inability to pay one's debt in the ordinary course of business is sufficient. The ordinary "course of business" does not mean an inability to turn out goods, or bills receivable, or assets or securities to pay that one particular debt at the same time, leaving other debts which are certain to become due unprovided for, and not leaving sufficient assets in the hands of the debtor to meet them when they become due. That is an extraordinary course of business. Driggs v. Morse, 3 B. R. 602; s. c., 1 Abb. C. C. 440; In re Dibble et al., 2 B. R. 617; s. c., 3 Ben. (D. C.) 283. See Curran v. Munger, 4 B. R. 295; s. c., 6 B. R. 33; Miller v. Keyes, 3 B. R. 224; Farran v. Crawford, 2 B. R. 602; In re Or. Printing Co., 13 B. R. 503; s. c., 3 Cent. Law J. 515; In re Thomas Ryan, 2 Sawy. (C. C.) 411; In re Craft, 1 B. R. 378; s. c., 6 Blatchf. (C. C.) 177.

3. In an act of bankruptcy under this clause there are the following ingredients, to wit: (1) the debtor must be either insolvent or contemplate insolvency; (2) he must make a conveyance or transfer of money or property, or he must procure his property to be taken in legal process; (3) he must do this with intent, on his own part, to defeat or delay the operation of the act. In re Dibble et al., 2 B. R. 617; s. c., 3 Ben. (D. C.) 283.

Mere honest inaction, when the creditor seeks to make a just debt by law, is not of itself an act of bankruptcy. The debtor's failure through inability to go into voluntary bankruptcy when he was sued is not of itself an act of bankruptcy. Wright v. Filley, 4 B. R. 611; s. c., 1 Dill. (C. C.) 171; Love v. Love, 21 Pitts L. J. 101.

There is a clearly-recognized distinction between procuring and suffering. The word "suffer" is different from the word "procure." "Suffer" implies passive condition, so to speak, as to allow, to permit; not a demonstrative, active course like the word "procure." In re Black & Secor, 1 B. R. 353; Traders' Nat'l Bank v. Campbell, 3 B. R. 498; s. c., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 87.

As to what acts will constitute an act of bankruptcy under the section, see Jones v. Sleeper, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 131; Fisher v. Currier, 1 Penn. L. J. 270; In re Isaac Scull, 10 B. R. 165; In re A. B. Gallinger, 4 B. R. 729; In re Leeds, 1 B. R. 521; 7 Am. Law Reg. 693; Hilton v. Telegraph Co., 1 Cent. Law J. 75.

Intent to Prefer.—The definition of a preference is a payment or transfer to one creditor which will give him an advantage over the others, or which may possibly do so. In re Hapgood et al., 7 Am. Law Reg. 664.

Where the probable consequence of an intent by such disposition of his property to defeat or delay the operation of this act,[1] or who being a banker, broker, merchant, trader, manufacturer, or miner, has stopped or suspended payment and not resumed payment within forty days of his commercial paper,[2] or who being a banker shall fail for forty days to pay any depositor upon demand of payment lawfully made, shall be act is to give a preference, the debtor will be conclusively presumed to have intended to give such preference. In re Drummond, 1 B. R. 231; In re Wells, 3 B. R. 371; Curran v. Munger, 6 B. R. 33.

The intent is an element of the objectionable transaction according to the letter of the law; and though a person is presumed to intend the natural results of his acts, the intent is essential and must be shown by his acts and the circumstances. Miller v. Keyes, 3 B. R. 224.

And this intent must be upon the part of the debtor. In re Dibble, 2 B. R. 617.

The intent of the debtor to prefer, coupled with an attempt to do it, is an act of bankruptcy, although the instrument is so defective as to be void. In re S. Mendelsohn, 12 B. R. 533; s. c., 9 Pac. L. R. 193.

If there is a preference, it is an act of bankruptcy, no matter how small the amount or meritorious the creditor. In re J. A. & H. W. Shouse, Crabbe (D. C.). 482.

If a debtor is insolvent at the time of making a payment he is presumed to know it until the contrary appears. In re Silverman, 4 B. R. 523; s. c., 1 Sawy. (C. C.) 410.

1. The motives of the debtor in committing the act are immaterial. It is no defence that other considerations were the moving cause. Motive should not be confounded with intent. When he intends to do a thing which necessarily hinders and defeats the act, he, in judgment of law, knows, when he does it, that it will have that effect. Knowing the effect, he must intend to produce it when he voluntarily chooses to do the act. Whatever his motive is, he acts voluntarily in choosing, and therefore in intending all the legal results which flow from his actions in the matter. Hardy v. Binninger, 4 B. R. 262; s. c., 7 Blatchf. (C. C.) 262.

And it is immaterial that he had in contemplation the provisions of the bankrupt act. Foster v. Hackley & Sons, 2 B. R. 406; Haughey v. Albin, 2 B. R. 399.

2. Who is a Trader.—The commercial deposition of a trader is one who makes it his business to buy and sell merchandise or other things ordinarily the subject of traffic. Love v. Love, 21 Pitts. L. J. 101.

A livery-stable keeper is not. Hall v. Cooley, 3 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 282.

A person who merely sells the produce of his own land is not. In re Chandler, 4 B. R. 213; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 478.

Or of his own labor. Wakeman v. Hoyt, 5 Law Rep. 309.

Neither is a manufacturer and vendor of sleighs, carriages, etc. In re Rufus Hoyt, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 132.

Who is a Manufacturer.—The publisher of a newspaper is. In re Kenyon & Teuton, 6 B. R. 238.

Also a person who works up lumber. In re Chandler, 4 B. R. 213; s. c., Lowell, 478.

The words "stopped or suspended" are sometimes used to denote not only the act of stopping, but also not resuming payment; and if they were the only words used in the statute they would express both ideas. The words "stopped" and "not resumed" have distinct significations. There cannot be a condition of non-resumption without a previous stopping of payment, but the words as used have a different relation as to the time in the transaction. A fraudulent stopping of payment is an immediate act of bankruptcy, and no subsequent resumption will free the fraudulent debtor from an adjudication of bankruptcy, if proceedings are commenced within six months. Mendenhall v. Carter, 7 B. R. 320.

The term "commercial paper" is used in the bankrupt act to denote bills of exchange, promissory notes, and negotiable bank checks,—paper governed by those rules which have their origin in and are established upon the custom of merchants in their commercial transactions known as the law merchant. Such paper is usually denominated commercial paper, and it should be presumed that Congress used the term in its common acceptation, rather than in its restricted sense. In re Chandler, 4 B. R. 218; s. c., Lowell (D. C.), 478; In re Carter, 6 B. R. 299; s. c., 3 Biss. (C. C.) 195; In re Clemens, 8 B. R. 279; s. c., 2 Dill. (C. C.) 534.

deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy; and upon the petition of one or more of his creditors, who shall constitute one fourth thereof in number, and whose debts provable under the act shall aggregate one third,[1] an adjudication of bankruptcy may be made. The court might by injunction prevent the debtor and any other person in the mean time from making transfer or disposition of the goods.[2]

(g) Superseded by Arrangement.—The bankrupt proceedings might be superseded by arrangement. By agreement of three fourths of the creditors who had proved their claims the estate might be settled by trustees, under the direction of a committee of creditors. This had to be determined upon at the first meeting of the creditors.[3]

(h) Criminal Liability.—The act provides that if any debtor,

1. The petition must show affirmatively that the requisite creditors in number and amount have united therein. In re J. Young Scammon, 10 B. R. 146; s. c., 1 Cent. Law J. 328; In re James R. Keeler, 20 I. R. R. 82; In re Isaac Scull, 10 B. R. 232; s. c., 7 Ben. (D. C.) 371.

The verification is no part of the petition. In re Solomon Simmons, 10 B. R. 253; s. c., 1 Cent. Law J. 440.

The same number and amount of creditors must join in a proceeding to force a corporation into bankruptcy as are required for an individual. In re Leavenworth Savings Bank, 14 B. R. 92; In re Oregon B. & P. Co., 10 Pac. L. R. 103.

Involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy are not in any sense proceedings merely for the collection or security of the particular debt of the petitioning creditors. They are for the benefit of all the creditors. The fact that the petitioning creditor has a provable debt to the requisite amount is necessary to be shown, for two purposes: (1) to show that the alleged debtor occupies that relation; (2) to show that the petitioner has the requisite qualifications to commence the proceedings. Its office is then exhausted. In re Daniel Sheehan, 8 B. R. 345.

A creditor who has taken the property of a debtor upon a legal process can throw him into bankruptcy for that act. Coxe v. Hale, 8 B. R. 562; 10 Blatchf. (C. C.) 56.

2. Sec. 40, Rev. Stat. 5024 (Act 1841, sec. 1).

The injunction is temporary only, and is intended to restrain the disposition of the goods and property of the debtor until an adjudication can be had and an assignee appointed to take charge of the assets for the benefit of the creditors. Creditors v. Cozzens, 3, B. R. 281; Irving v. Hughes, 2 B. R. 62; s. c., 7 Am. Law Reg. 209.

But it continues until vacated by order of the court. In re Findley, 10 B. R. 21; s. c., 1 Cent. L. J. 433. See In re Bloss, 4 B. R. 147; Blackburn v. Stannard, 5 Law Rep. 250; In re Muller v. Bretano, 3 B. R. 359; s. c., 1 Deady (C. C.), 513.

3. Sec. 43, Rev. Stat. 5103.

The creditors may avail themselves of the provisions of this section either at the first meeting or at any time subsequent to the first meeting. In re Jones, 2 B. R. 59.

The title vested in the trustee chosen under this section is the same in all respects as the title vested in the assignee regularly appointed in proceedings in bankruptcy. In re Williams, 2 B. R. 229; s. c., Quar. L. Rev. 374.

If the committee exercise their discretion mala fide they may be controlled, but in the absence of fraud their direction to the trustee in regard to the settlement of the estate is conclusive. Certainly the discretion vested in them cannot be controlled by any meeting of the creditors called after their appointment. In re Jay Cooke & Co., 11 B. R. 7; s. c., 1 Cent. Law J. 580.

The trustees, under the direction of the committee, may, if so ordered by the court, proceed to settle the estate just as if there had been no adjudication of the bankruptcy, and the bankrupt was managing his own affairs, taking care always to secure legal protection to each of the creditors. If, under such a general order, the interposition of the court is needed for the examination of witnesses under oath, etc., the application therefor may be made to the register or judge. In re Darby, 4 B. R. 211, 309; In re Zinn, 4 B. R. 436; s. c., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 461.

after the passage of the act,[1] secretes or conceals his property,[2] or mutilates or destroys it, or disposes or removes it with the intent to prevent it from coming into the hands of the assignee, or makes any payment, gift, etc., with like intent,[3] or spends any part of his estate in gaming, or fraudulently conceals property from his assignee, or if any fictitious debt be proved to be known to the bankrupt and he does not disclose the fact to the assignee, or if he attempts to account for property by fictitious losses or expenses, or within three months before commencement of proceedings he obtains credit by false pretences with intent to defraud,[4] or fraudulently pawns, etc., goods bought on credit and not paid for,[5] he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction be punished by imprisonment.

3. Effect upon State Laws.—All laws of the State which come within the provisions of the act passed by Congress are suspended during the existence of such act of Congress.[6]

The passage of such law by Congress does not repeal State laws, and on repeal of the federal law the State law is revived and need not be re-enacted.[7]

State insolvent laws are suspended even as between citizens of the same State.[8]

But if a State court has acquired jurisdiction, under a State law, of a case in insolvency, and is engaged in settling the debts and distributing the assets of the insolvent before or at the date at which the act of Congress upon the same subject takes effect, the State court may nevertheless proceed with the case to its final conclusion, and its action in the matter will be as valid as if no law upon the subject had been passed by Congress.[9]

1. Sec. 44, Rev. Stat. 5132.

2. In re Brooks, 5 Pac. L. R. 191; U. S. v. Smith, 13 B. R. 61.

3. U.S. v. Latorre. 8 Blatchf.(C.C.) 134.

4. To constitute the offence the accused must (1) obtain goods and chattels from some person or persons on credit, under the false pretence of carrying on business and dealing in the ordinary course of trade (2) such credit must be obtained within three months before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy; (3) such goods and chattels must be obtained on credit as aforesaid with intent to defraud. The obvious purpose of the statute is to prevent persons from obtaining goods on credit with the expectation on the part of those who give the credit that they will be disposed of in the ordinary course of business. U. S. v. Geary, 4 B. R. 534; U. S. v. Thomas, 7 B. R. 188; U. S. v. Penn., 13 B. R. 464.

5. The scope of this act is to punish frauds on creditors generally, and not on the particular creditor who sold the goods; and an indictment which charges fraud on one creditor only cannot be sustained. If the goods were obtained upon credit with the intent of disposing of them to raise money, the fraud on the seller would be the most obvious one; but the object of the statute seems to be to punish frauds on creditors generally, and it does not refer the intent to the time of disposing of the goods out of the usual course of trade, and at that time the fraud would not be of one creditor more than the rest. U. S. v. Clark, 4 B. R. 59; U. S. v. Penn., 13 B. R. 464.

The intent to defraud may be established by facts and circumstances. U. S. v. Smith, 13 B. R. 61; U. S. v. Bayer, 13 B. R. 88.

6 Commonwealth v. O'Hara, 1 B. R.; s. c., 6. A. L. Reg. 765; Perry v. Langley, 1 B. R. 559; s. c., 7 Am. L. Reg. 429; Van Nostrand v. Carr, 30 Md. 128; Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208; Griswold v. Pratt, 49 Mass. 16; Rowe v. Page, 54 N. H. 190.

7. Lavender v. Gosnell, 12 B. R. 282.

8. Cassard v. Kroner, 4 B R. 569.

9. Longis v. Creditors, 20 La. Ann. 15; Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208.

But the United States bankrupt act does not ipso facto supersede State laws for the collection of debts.[1] Nor does it supersede the State laws relating to the insolvent estates of lunatics, spendthrifts, or deceased persons.[2]

A law allowing assignments for the benefit of creditors is not superseded.[3] Neither is an insolvent law which merely protects the person from imprisonment.[4]

The law did not deprive State courts of jurisdiction over suits brought to decide rights of property between the bankrupt and his assignee and third persons.[5]

4. Power of States to Pass Bankrupt Laws.—Since the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, a State has authority to pass a bankrupt law, provided such law does not impair the obligation of contracts within the meaning of the United States Constitution, art. 1, sec. 10, and provided there be no act of Congress in force to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy, conflicting with such law.[6]

But such laws can have no effect on contracts made before their enactment or beyond their territory.[7]

Nor do they apply to contracts made within the State between the citizen of that State and a citizen of another State.[8]

A discharge granted in one State has no effect over debts contracted in another State or by a citizen of such State.[9]

In Sanford v. Sanford, 58 N. Y. 241; s. c., 14 Am. R. 206, it was held that where, after the recovery of a judgment in the New York Supreme Court and an appeal to the General Term, the defendant was declared a bankrupt on his own application, the defendant could sustain a further appeal to the Court of Appeals.

1. Chandler v. Siddle, 10 B. R. 236; s. c., 3 Dill. (C. C.) 477.

2. Hawkins v. Learned, 54 N. H. 333; Mayer v. Hillman, 91 U. S. 496; Beck v. Backer, 65 Pa. St. 262; Maltbie v. Hotchkiss, 38 Conn. 80.

3. Cook v. Rodgers, 31 Mich. 391; s. c., 14 Am. L. Reg. 603.

4. Sullivan v. Haskell, Crabbe (D. C.), 525; s. c., 4 Penn. L. J. 171.

5. In Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, the court said: "The debtor of the bankrupt, or the man who contests the right to real or personal property with him, loses none of these rights by the bankruptcy of his adversary. The same courts remain open to him in such contests, and the statute has not directed these courts of jurisdiction in such actions. If it has for certain classes of actions conferred a jurisdiction for the benefit of the assignee in the circuit and district courts of the United States, it is concurrent with and does not divest that of the State courts." These propositions are supported by the following cases decided by this court. Smith v. Mason, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 419; Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 551; Mays v. Fritton, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 414; Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 642; See also Bishop v. Johnson, Woolw. (C. C.) 324.

6. See opinions of C. J. Marshall in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.), 196, and of J. Clifford in Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 222.

7. Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 308.

8. Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 243; 2 Sto. Const. sec. 1390; Boyle v. Zacharie 6 Pet. (U. S.) 643.

9. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213; Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 411.

A debt contracted and payable in England to one domiciled there has been held not to be affected by a colonial discharge. Bartley v. Hodges, 1 Best & Sm. 375.

Authorities for Bankruptcy.—Avery & Hobbs, Bankrupt Law of 1867; James, Bankrupt Law of 1867; Owen on Bankruptcy; Bump's Bankruptcy; 2 Kent Com.; 2 Black. Com.; Story on Constitution; Chitty on Bankruptcy.

BANKS AND BANKING. (See also AGENCY; BILLS AND NOTES; CHECKS; CORPORATIONS; NATIONAL BANKS; OFFICERS, PRIVATE CORPORATIONS; SAVINGS BANKS.)

1. Definition.—A bank is an institution, generally incorporated, authorized to receive deposits of money, to lend money, and to issue promissory notes,—usually known by the name of bank-notes,—or to perform some one or more of these functions.[1]

2. The Franchise and Powers thereunder.—At common law, the right of banking belongs to individual citizens and may be exercised by them at their pleasure, until restrained by legislative enactment.[2] This right may, however, be regulated and restrained by legislation, and the business of banking be made a corporate

1. Bouvier's Law Dict.

In 1866 the Congress of the United States thus defined a bank or banker: "Every incorporated or other bank, and every person, firm, or company having a place of business where credits are opened by the deposit or collection of money or currency, subject to be paid or remitted upon draft, check, or order, or where money is advanced or loaned on stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange, or promissory notes, or where stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange, or promissory notes are received for discount or for sale, shall be regarded as a bank or as a banker." Revised Statutes, sec. 3407, p. 669. And in Warren v. Shook, 91 U. S. 704, Mr. Justice Hunt says: "Having a place of business where deposits are received and paid out on checks, and where money is loaned upon security, is the substance of the business of a banker." See also Selden v. Equitable Trust Co., 94 U. S. 419.

In Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9, 166, the court say: "Borrowing money to lend again is a part of the legitimate business of banking. A banker is a dealer in capital, an intermediate party between the borrower and lender. He borrows of one party and lends to another, and the difference between the terms at which he borrows and lends is the source and measure of his profits." The principal attributes of a bank are said to be the right to issue negotiable notes, discount notes, and receive deposits. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358, 390; N. Y. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 678; Bank for Savings v. The Collector, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495. See also Phila. Loan Co. v. Towner, 13 Conn. 249; People v. The Railroad, 12 Mich. 389; Pratt v. Short, 79 N. Y. 440.

In Oulton v. Savings Institution, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 109, 118, Mr. Justice Clifford says: "Banks in the commercial sense are of three kinds, to wit, (1) of deposit, (2) of discount, (3) of circulation. Strictly speaking, the term 'bank' implies a place for the deposit of money, as that is the most obvious purpose of such an institution. Originally the business of banking consisted only in receiving deposits, such as bullion, plate, and the like, for safe-keeping until the depositor should see fit to draw it out for use; but the business, in the progress of events, was extended, and bankers assumed to discount bills and notes and to loan money on mortgage, pawn, or other security, and at a still later period to issue notes of their own intended as a circulating currency and a medium of exchange instead of gold and silver. Modern bankers frequently exercise any two or even all three of those functions, but it is still true that an institution prohibited from exercising any more than one of those functions is a bank in the strictest commercial sense."

2. Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet.

franchise.[1] When laws upon the subject have been passed, the business must be conducted strictly in accordance with the provisions thereof.[2] Banking powers to be exercised by corporations must be expressly granted,[3] and only those powers can be exercised which are specifically granted by the act of incorporation or are necessary to carry into effect the powers expressly granted.[4]

(U. S.) 519, 596; Nance v. Hemphill, 1 Ala. 551. Compare Anderson v. Alexander, 7 Am. Law Reg. 173.

1. Atty.-General v. Utica Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 371; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 596.

2. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9, 52; People v. Bartow, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 290; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358.

Generally, banks come into existence either under a charter or special act of incorporation, or under a general organic law. See State v. Helmes, 2 Penn. (N. J.) 764; Anderson v. Alexander, 7 Am. Law Reg. 173; Commonwealth v. U. S. Bank, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 349; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679; Bank of the State v. Smith, 33 Mo. 364; Robinson v. Bank of Attica, 21 N. Y. 406.

3. State v. Washington Social Library Co., 11 Ohio, 96; State v. Stebbins, 1 Stewart (Ala.), 299; State v. Granville Alexandrian Society, 11 Ohio, 1.

A grant of power, in an act of incorporation, "to hold any estate, real or personal, and the same to sell, grant, or dispose of, or bind by mortgage, or in such other manner as they shall deem most proper, for the best interest of the corporation," does not confer upon such corporation banking privileges. State v. Granville Alexandrian Society, 11 Ohio, 1.

4. State v. Stebbins, 1 Stewart (Ala.), 299; Barnes v. Ontario Bank, 19 N. Y. 152; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; Duncan v. Maryland Sav. Inst., 10 Gill & J. (Md) 299.

In Weckler v. First Nat'l Bank, 42 Md. 581, 590, Miller, J., says: "In deciding whether a corporation can make a particular contract, it must be considered, in the first place, whether its charter or some statute binding upon it forbids or permits it to make such a contract; and if the charter and valid statutory law are silent upon the subject, in the second place, whether the power to make such a contract may not be implied on the part of the corporation as directly or incidentally necessary to enable it to fulfil the purpose of its existence; or whether the contract is entirely foreign to that purpose; a corporation has no other powers than such as are specifically granted, or such as are necessary for the purpose of carrying into effect the powers expressly granted."

It has been held not to be incidental to the banking business, nor an implied power pertaining to a bank, to purchase State or other stocks for the purpose of selling them for profit. Talmage v. Pell, 3 Seld. (N. Y.) 328; Sackett's Harbor Bank v. Lewis County Bank, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 213; Weckler v. First Nat'l Bank, 42 Md. 581. See, however, Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Champlain Trans. Co., 18 Vt. 131. But it may take and hold them as collateral security for a loan or debt, and sell them if necessary to save the debt. Third Nat'l Bank of Baltimore v. Boyd, 44 Md. 47; Talmage v. Pell, 3 Seld. (N. Y.) 328; Dearbourn v. Union Nat'l Bank, 53 Me. 273; Scott v. Crews, 2 S. Car. 522.

In First Nat'l Bank of Charlotte v. Nat'l Exch. Bank of Baltimore, 39 Md. 600, 611, the court say: "If, instead of purchasing the stocks in question for speculation or as an investment, the plaintiff acquired them by way of a compromise of a claim of $55,000, alleged to be due the defendant, and for the purpose of averting an apprehended loss on account of said claim, there is nothing either in the letter or spirit of the banking act to prevent, under such circumstances, a transfer of the stocks to the plaintiff."

A bank, chartered under the laws of the State of New York, has no implied power to subscribe for railroad stock. Nassau Bank v. Jones, 95 N. Y. 115; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 14.

A bank empowered to discount negotiable notes has no power to purchase such notes. Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Baldwin, 23 Minn. 198; First Nat'l Bank of Rochester v. Pierson, 24 Minn. 140; s. c., 16 Alb. L. J. 319; Niagara County Bank v. Baker, 15 Ohio St. 68.

In Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Baldwin, 23 Minn. 298, the bank was authorized "to carry on the business of banking by discounting bills, notes, and other evidences of debt, by receiving deposits, by buying and selling gold and silver bullion, foreign coin, and foreign and inland bills of exchange, by loaning money on real and personal securities, and by exercising such incidental powers as may be necessary to carry on such business." In a suit by the bank upon a promissory note, the defence was that the bank had no title in the note, since it had purchased it outright, instead of discounting it. Held, that the bank had no capacity to purchase promissory notes, and the attempted act of purchase was ultra vires and conferred no rights whatever. The court distinguish between purchasing and discounting, and say: "The power 'to carry on the business of banking, by discounting notes, bills, and other evidences of debt,' is only an authority to loan money thereon, with the right to deduct the legal rate of interest in advance. This right can be fully enjoyed without the possession of the unrestricted power of buying and dealing in such securities as choses in action and personal property. Though, as is urged by plaintiff, the bank acquires a title to discounted paper, and hence may, in a certain sense, be said to have purchased it, yet it is a purchase by discount —which is permitted—and does not involve the exercise of a power of purchase in any other way than by discount." The term "discounting" has, however, in other cases, been held to include purchase as well as loan, and the purchase of negotiable notes by a bank empowered to discount notes has been sustained. Pape v. Capitol Bank of Topeka, 20 Kans. 440; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 183; Smith v. Exchange Bank, 26 Ohio St. 141. See also Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338.

In Smith v. Exchange Bank, 26 Ohio St. 141, the defence was that the bank—a national bank—purchased the paper of the payees, and that it had no authority to make such purchase. But the court say: "It seems to be the idea of counsel making the objection, that negotiable paper, perfect and available in the hands of the holder, is not the subject of purchase by a national bank at any rate of discount. This view we think entirely erroneous. We see nothing in the act of Congress, nor in reason, why a borrower may not obtain the discount by a bank of the existing notes and bills of others of which he is the holder, as well as of his own paper, made directly to the bank."

In Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338, the bank purchased from another bank a note which had passed to it through several parties from the original holder. The bank was forbidden by the ninth rule of the fundamental articles to deal or trade in anything except bills of exchange, gold or silver bullion, or to purchase any public debt whatsoever, or take more than six per cent on its loans or discounts. It was claimed that the purchase of this note was ultra vires, but the court held that such purchase was but a discount. Mr. Justice Story said: "The very clause now under consideration recognizes the power of the bank to make loans and discounts and restricts it from taking more than six per cent on such loans or discounts. But in what manner is the bank to loan? What is it to discount? Has it not a right to take an evidence of the debt, which arises from the loan? If it is to discount, must there not be some chose in action, or written evidence of a debt, payable at a future time, which is to be the subject of the discount? Nothing can be clearer than that by the language of the commercial world, and the settled practice of banks, a discount by a bank means, ex vi termini, a deduction or drawback made upon its advances or loans of money, upon negotiable paper, or other evidences of debt, payable at a future day, which are transferred to the bank. . . If, therefore, the discounting of a promissory note according to the usage of banks be a purchase, within the meaning of the ninth rule above stated (upon which serious doubts may well be entertained), it is a purchase by way of discount, and permitted by necessary inference, from the last clause in that rule."

Banks have implied power to borrow money, when necessary, in the prosecution of their business, and may issue the usual evidences of debt therefor. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9, 53; Barnes v. Ontario Bank, 19 N. Y. 152; Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moore's P. C. C. 152, 194; Magee v. Mokelumne Hill, etc., Co., 5 Cal. 258.

In Rockwell v. Elkhorn Bank, 13 Wis. 653, the plaintiff sued the bank as the maker of a note given to him to secure a balance due for moneys deposited and for his salary as one of its officers. The defence was that the note was void because the bank had no authority to make and issue it. Held, that the bank was liable. Dixon, C. J., said: "It is a universally accepted principle that corporations authorized generally to engage in a particular business have, as an incident to such authority, the power to contract debts in the legitimate transaction of such business, unless they are restrained by their charters, or by statute, from doing so It is likewise an equally well acknowledged rule that the right to con-

Discounting and Usury.—Discounting or loaning money, with a deduction of the interest in advance, is a part of the general business of banking, and may be done even without specific authority conferred in the incorporating act.[1] And although a bank tract debts carries with it the power to give negotiable notes or bills in payment or security for such debts, unless the corporations are in like manner prohibited. These positions are abundantly sustained by the authorities cited."

Dealing in checks, whether payable to bearer or to order, is also a part of the usual business of banking and is within the general powers of a bank without special mention. First Nat'l Bank v. Harris, 108 Mass. 514. And a bank has power to appoint an agent to transact the business which it may lawfully do. Bates v. Bank of State of Alabama, 2 Ala. 451; Planters', etc., Bank v. Andrews, 17 Ala. 404.

Banking Hours.—A banking house may prescribe reasonable rules and hours of business, within which its peculiar business with the public shall be done; but the reception or delivery of packages is not a matter peculiar to the banking business, and a bank has no right to declare that it will not receive packages from a common carrier after what it pleases to call "banking hours," and thereby thrust upon him a further continuance of his extraordinary responsibility. Marshall v. American Express Co., 7 Wis. 1: s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 381.

Power to Select Customers.—A bank is not bound to receive on deposit the money and funds of every person who offers, but may arbitrarily select its customers from among those that apply. Thatcher v. Bank of State, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 121.

Power to Hold Real Estate.—A bank is usually authorized by its charter to acquire, hold, and sell real estate that may be necessary for its banking purposes, or conveyed to it in satisfaction of a debt contracted in the course of its dealings, or purchased by it at a sale under a mortgage held by the bank. See Thomaston Bank v. Stimpson, 21 Me. 195; Jackson v. Brown, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 590. But the holding, acquiring, and selling to any greater extent or for any other purpose than is therein set forth is illegal. Metropolitan Bank v. Godfrey, 23 Ill. 579; Morse on Banking (2d Ed.), 9.

The power to convey real estate includes the power to mortgage it; and the power to purchase real estate involves the power of subsequently selling it. Jackson v. Brown, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 590.

In The Banks v. Poitiaux, 3 Rand. (Va.) 136, a bank authorized to hold as much real property as might be requisite for its immediate accommodation was held to have the right to buy up the land in the neighborhood of its banking house, to erect fire-proof buildings thereon, for the greater security of its own building, and then to sell these out to third persons.

In Baird v. Bank of Washington, 11 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.), 411, a bank was empowered to hold "such lands as are bona fide mortgaged or conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealing." Held, that the bank had a general power to commute debts really due for real estate, and was not limited to cases where any doubt existed as to the perfect safety of the debt.

Location.—As a general rule, a bank can only carry on its business in the place where it is authorized to do so by its charter. City Bank of Columbus v. Beach, 1 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 425. In this case the court say: "It is essential to the convenience and security of the public that every bank should have a fixed, known, and permanent place of business, where it is bound to fulfil all its engagements, and where those who have dealings with it may safely resort for the purpose of fulfilling theirs. Bank charters, moreover, are not granted for the benefit of stockholders, but for the sake of those engaged in the productive and in mercantile pursuits; and though a bank may be wanted at one place, it may be unnecessary in another."

But it seems that agencies for specific purposes, such as the purchase of bills of exchange and the redemption of bills, may be established in other places. City Bank of Columbus v. Beach, 1 Blatchf. (C. C.) 425; Tombigbee R. R. Co. v. Kneeland, 4 How. (U. S.) 16.

In Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519, it was held that a bank incorporated by the State of Georgia and established in that State at Augusta, having power under its charter to deal in bills of exchange, could lawfully buy bills of exchange in the State of Alabama, through an agent employed there for that purpose.

1. Fleckner v. U. S. Bank, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338. See Bank of Savings v. The

is no more exempt from the operation of the usury laws than an individual, yet taking the legal interest upon loans in advance is not usurious.[1]

3. Depositors and Customers.—Deposits, General and Special.—Deposits made with bankers are either general or special.[2] A special deposit is the placing of something in the charge or custody of the bank, of which specific thing restitution must be made.[3] A deposit is deemed general unless there are circumstances to show it was meant to be special.[4] In the case of a general deposit the depositor parts with the title to his money and loans it to the bank, and the latter, in consideration of the loan and the right to use the money for its own profit, agrees to refund the same amount, or any part thereof, on demand.[5] As regards general deposits, the relation of banker and customer is that of debtor

Collector, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; State v. Boatmen's Sav. Inst., 48 Mo. 189.

1. Maine Bank v. Butts, 9 Mass. 49; Bates v. State Bank, 2 Ala. 451; N. Y. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N.Y.) 678.

In Fleckner v. U. S. Bank, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338, it was held that the bank, on discounting notes and bills, had a right to deduct the legal interest from the amount of the note or bill at the time it is discounted. Mr. Justice Story said: "The sole objection is the deduction of the interest from the amount of the note at the time it was discounted; and this, it is said, gives the bank at the rate of more than six per cent upon the sum actually carried to the credit of the Planters' Bank. If a transaction of this sort is to be deemed usurious, the same principle must apply with equal force to bank discounts generally, for the practice is believed to be universal; and probably few, if any, charters contain an express provision authorizing in terms the deduction of the interest in advance upon making loans or discounts. It has always been supposed that an authority to discount or make discounts did, from the very force of the terms, necessarily include an authority to take the interest in advance. . . Indeed, we do not know in what other sense the word 'discount' is to be interpreted. Even in England, where no statute authorizes bankers to make discounts, it has been solemnly adjudged that the taking of interest in advance by bankers upon loans in the ordinary course of business is not usurious."

The provision in the charter of a bank that it may discount notes and lend money "upon such terms and rates of interest as may be agreed upon" does not authorize the bank to charge more than the legal rate for money loaned. Simonton v. Lanier, 71 N. Car. 498. See also Creed v. Commercial Bank, 11 Ohio, 489; Seneca Co. Bank v. Lamb, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 595.

Calculating interest upon the principle that ninety days are the fourth of a year and three days the tenth of a month, and discounting a note upon such a calculation, has been held usurious. That this principle of calculation was the one in general or universal use among banks cannot alter the law of the case. N. Y. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N.Y.), 678, 704. See also Niagara Co. Bank v. Baker, 15 Ohio St. 68.

A bank, in discounting drafts at the highest rate allowed by law, may also charge the current rate of exchange as a compensation for collecting the drafts, provided this is not resorted to as a device to evade the statute against usury. Central Bank of Wisconsin v. St. John, 17 Wis. 157. See also Merchants' Bank v. Lassee, 33 Mo. 350; Bank of the United States v. Davis, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 451.

2. In Keene v. Collier, 1 Metc. (Ky.), 417, the court say: "Deposits of money with banking corporations, or with bankers, are either general or special. A special deposit is where the specific money, the very gold or silver coin, or bills deposited, are to be restored, and not an equivalent. A general deposit is said to amount to a mere loan, and the bank is to restore, not the same money, but an equivalent sum, whenever it is demanded."

3. Morse on Banking, 66.

4. Brahm v. Adkins, 77 Ill. 263; In the Matter of the Franklin Bank, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 249; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 413.

5. Marine Bank v. Fulton Bank, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 256, per Mr. Justice Miller, who also says: "It is every-day busineand creditor, and not that of trustee and cestui que trust.[1] But in the case of a special deposit, the bank is merely the bailee of the depositor, has no authority to use the thing deposited, and for bankers, who have vaults and safes, to receive on special deposit small packages of valuables, and even money, until the owners call for them."

1. Commercial Bank of Albany v. Hughes, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 94; Marsh v. Oneida Central Bank, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 298; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9; Ætna National Bank v. Fourth National Bank, 46 N. Y. 82; Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479; Bullard v. Randall, 1 Gray (Mass.), 605; Downes v. Phœnix Bank, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 297; Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 152; Bank of Northern Liberties v. Jones, 42 Pa. St. 536; Crosskill v. Bower, 32 Beav. 86; Carr v. Carr, 2 Meriv. 541; Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321; Sims v. Bond, 6 Barn. & Ad. 392.

In Foley v. Hill, 2 H. of L. Cas. 28, it was held that a bill in equity would not lie in favor of the depositor, against the banker, to adjust the account between them, when such account was neither long nor complicated, because there was no fiduciary relation between the parties. Lord Chancellor Cottenham said: "Money, when paid into a bank, ceases altogether to be the money of the principal. It is then the money of the banker, who is bound to return an equivalent by paying a similar sum to that deposited with him when he is asked for it. The money paid into the banker's is money known by the principal to be placed there for the purpose of being under the control of the banker; it is then the banker's money; he is known to deal with it as his own; he makes what profit out of it he can, which profit he retains to himself, paying back only the principal, according to the custom of bankers in some places, or the principal and a small rate of interest, according to the custom of bankers in other places. The money placed in the custody of a banker is, to all intents and purposes, the money of the banker, to do with it as he pleases; he is guilty of no breach of trust in employing it; he is not answerable to the principal if he puts it into jeopardy, if he engages in a hazardous speculation; he is not bound to keep it or deal with it as the property of his principal, but he is, of course, answerable for the amount, because he has contracted, having received that money, to repay to the principal, when demanded, a sum equivalent to that paid into his hands. That has been the subject of discussion in various cases, and that has been established to be the relative situation of banker and customer. That being established to be the relative situation of banker and customer, the banker is not an agent or factor, but he is a debtor."

So, in Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 152, Mr. Justice Davis says: "It is no longer an open question in this court, since the decision in the cases of the Marine Bank v. The Fulton Bank, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 252, and of Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 663, that the relation of banker and customer, in their pecuniary dealings, is that of debtor and creditor. It is an important part of the business of banking to receive deposits, but when they are received, unless there are stipulations to the contrary, they belong to the bank, become part of its general funds, and can be loaned by it as other moneys. The banker is accountable for the deposits which he receives as a debtor, and he agrees to discharge these debts by honoring the checks which the depositors shall from time to time draw on him. The contract between the parties is purely a legal one, and has nothing of the nature of a trust in it."

The money becomes the property of the depositary, and the depositor's claim is a mere chose in action. Marsh v. Oneida Central Bank, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 298; Lund v. Seaman's Bank, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 129; Chapman v. White, 6 N. Y. 412.

It is impressed with no trust in favor of the depositor, and there is no relation of cestui que trust and trustee between him and the banker. Carr v. National Security Bank, 107 Mass. 45; Farm Oil Co. v. Woodman, 1 Hun (N. Y.). 639; In re Bank of Madison, 5 Biss. (C. C.) 515.

A testator's bequest "of all my debts," meaning all debts owing to him, carries the balance standing to his credit with his banker. Carr v. Carr, 1 Mer. 541 n.

But a bank balance, although a simple contract debt, has been treated as equivalent to cash in hand, and a bequest of the testator's "money," or "money in hand," or "ready money," has been held to carry his balance at his banker's. Parker v. Marchant, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 290: affirmed, 1 Phil. C. C. 356; Varsey v. Reynolds, 5 Russ. 12; Beck v. Gillis, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 35; Mann v. Mann, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 231; Fryer v. Ranken, must return it in individuo to the depositor.[1] Where a bank receives a special deposit, without compensation, it is bound only for slight care, and is responsible only for gross negligence.[2] But

11 Sim. 55; In re Powell's Trusts, 5 Jur. N. S. 331.

1. Story on Bailments (9th Ed.), § 88; Dawson v. The Real Estate Bank, 5 Ark. 283; Boyden v. Bank of Cape Fear, 65 N. C. 13; Marine Bank of Chicago v. Rushmore, 28 Ill. 463.

2. Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 168; Smith v. First Nat Bank, 99 Mass. 605; Chattahoochee Nat. Bank v. Schley, 58 Ga. 369; National Bank of Lyons v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 279; Pattison v. Syracuse Nat. Bank, 80 N. Y. 82; Lancaster Co. Bank v. Smith, 62 Pa. St. 47; Scott v. Nat. Bank of Chester Valley, 72 Pa. St. 471; First. Nat. Bank v. Graham, 79 Pa. St. 106; De Haven v. Kensington Nat. Bank, 81 Pa. St. 95; First Nat. Bank of Allentown v. Rex, 89 Pa. St. 308; First Nat. Bank of Carlisle v. Graham, 85 Pa. St. 91; Hale v. Rowallie, 8 Kans. 137; Manry v. Coyle, 34 Md. 235; Ray v. Bank of Kentucky, 10 Bush (Ky.), 344; Dunn v. Kyle, 14 Bush (Ky.), 134; Giblin v. McMullin, L. R. 2 P. C. App. 317; Whitney v. First Nat. Bank of Brattleboro, 55 Vt. 154; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 266.

In Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479, a cask of gold doubloons was deposited with the bank and weighed in the presence of the president and cashier, who gave a receipt therefor which stated that it was "Left at Essex Bank for safe-keeping." It had been the practice of the bank to receive special deposits, but no statement of special deposits was ever made by the cashier to the directors. The money was kept in the bank vaults, and with the same care with which the funds and property of the bank were kept. But the cashier of the bank, with the connivance of a subordinate clerk, stole a considerable amount of the money. Held, that the bank, being a gratuitous bailee, was not liable for the loss. The court said: "If this contract amounts only to a naked bailment, without reward and without any special undertaking, which in the civil and common law is called depositum, the bailee will be answerable only for gross negligence, which is considered equivalent to a breach of faith, as every one who receives the goods of another in deposit impliedly stipulates that he will take some degree of care of it. The degree of care which is necessary to avoid the imputation of bad faith is measured by the carefulness which the depositary uses towards his own property of a similar kind. . . . This was a mere naked bailment for the accommodation of the depositor, and without any advantage to the bank which can tend to increase its liability beyond the effect of such a contract. No control whatever of the chest, or of the gold contained in it, was left with the bank or its officers." The court further said that from such special bailments, even of money, in packages for safe-keeping, no consideration can be implied. The bank cannot use the deposit in its business, and no such profit or credit from the holding of the money can arise as will convert the bank into a bailee for hire or reward of any kind. The bailment in such case is purely gratuitous and for the benefit of the bailor, and no loss can be cast upon the bank for a larceny, unless there has been gross negligence in taking care of the deposit.

In Scott v. National Bank of Chester Valley, 72 Pa. St. 471, a bank received bonds on special deposit for safety from one of its customers and at his risk, and placed them in a safe with similar deposits from others, and with its own securities. The bonds were stolen by a teller who absconded, and it was then discovered that his accounts were false, and that he had robbed the bank during two years. Held, that the bank was a gratuitous bailee, and, not having been guilty of gross negligence, was not liable. Agnew, C. J., said: "This teller was both clerk and teller, but the taking of the bonds was not an act pertaining to his business as either clerk or teller. The bonds were left at the risk of the plaintiffs, and never entered into the business of the bank. Being a bailment merely for safe-keeping for the benefit of the bailor and without compensation, it is evident the dishonest act of the teller was in no way connected with his employment. Under these circumstances, the only ground of liability must arise in a knowledge of the bank, that the teller was an unfit person to be appointed or to be retained in its employment. So long as the bank was ignorant of the dishonesty of the teller, and trusted him with its own funds, confiding in his character for integrity, it would be a harsh rule that would hold it liable for an act not in the course of the business of the bank, or of the employment of the officer. There was no undertaking to the bailor that the officers should not steal. Of course there was a confidence that they would not, but not a promise that they should not. The case does not rest on a warranty or undertaking, but on gross negligence in care taking. Nothing short of a knowledge of the true character of the teller, or of reasonable grounds to suspect his integrity, followed by a neglect to remove him, can be said to be gross negligence without raising a contract for care higher than a gratuitous bailment can create." But see Leach v. Hale, 31 Iowa, 69, where a bank received on deposit United States bonds of one class, under an agreement to exchange them for those of another, and was held liable to the depositor for the value of the bonds on its refusal to deliver them, although acting without compensation.

if the bank receives compensation for the care and custody of the deposit, then its duties are those of an ordinary bailee for hire,

In Whitney v. First National Bank of Brattleboro, 55 Vt. 154; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 266, the plaintiff delivered to the defendant bank $4000 of U. S. bonds and received this writing: "Received of J. D. Whitney $4000 for safekeeping as a special deposit. S. M. Waite, C." Held, that it was a naked deposit without reward; that the defendant would not be liable for the robbery or larceny of the bonds unless there was complicity or bad faith; that it was answerable only for fraud or for gross negligence; that the law demands good faith, and the same care of the plaintiff's bonds as defendant took of its own property of like character. The facts that the safe was left open during the transaction of business, that there was no gate in the passage-way from the rear of the banking-room behind the counter, that only one person was left in charge of the bank about noon each day, held, not to constitute gross negligence.

In an action against a bank for the loss of property intrusted to it as a gratuitous bailee, evidence of independent acts of negligence, not connected with the loss, is inadmissible. First Nat. Bank of Lyons v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 278.

In Lancaster Co. Nat. Bank v. Smith, 62 Pa. St. 47, the plaintiff, a stranger and unknown to the officers of the bank, left bonds in care of the bank, retaining a list of minute description. The bonds were inclosed in an envelope, indorsed with his name and residence, and put into a vault with valuable securities of the bank and others. Some time afterwards a stranger, representing himself to be the plaintiff, demanded the bonds from the teller, describing the bonds, giving the name and address accurately, but produced no other evidence of his identity. The teller delivered the bonds to him. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff. Held, that the bank was liable upon proof of gross negligence or want of ordinary care, and that the question whether there was want of ordinary care was for the jury.

In First Nat. Bank of Carlisle v. Graham, 85 Pa. St. 91, a special deposit of bonds was left by a customer with the cashier of a bank for safe-keeping, with the knowledge of its directors, and the cashier gave a receipt therefor. The bonds were subsequently stolen, and the bank offered no satisfactory explanation of the manner of the theft. Held, that there was sufficient evidence of gross negligence to be submitted to the jury.

If a bank be accustomed to take special deposits of valuables, and this is known and acquiesced in by the directors, and the property deposited is lost by the gross carelessness of the bank, a liability ensues as though the deposit had been authorized by the terms of its charter. Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479; Lancaster Co. Nat. Bank v. Smith, 62 Pa. St. 47; First Nat. Bank of Carlisle v. Graham, 79 Pa. St. 106; Turner v. First Nat. Bank of Keokuk, 26 Iowa, 562; Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Westfield, 69 Mass. 605. But see Willey v. First Nat. Bank, 47 Vt. 546; Whitney v. First Nat. Bank, 50 Vt. 389.

And it is now well settled that national banks may receive such deposits, either gratuitously or otherwise. Pattison v. Syracuse Nat. Bank, 80 N. Y. 82; First Nat. Bank of Carlisle v Graham, 100 U. S. 699; Chattahoochee Nat. Bank v. Schely, 58 Ga. 369.

In Pattison v. Syracuse Nat. Bank, 80 N. Y. 82, Rapallo, J., says: "A reference to the history of banking discloses that the chief, and in some cases the only, deposits received by the early banks were special deposits of money, bullion, plate, etc., for safe-keeping, to be specifically returned to the depositor; that such was the character of the business done by the Bank of Venice (the earliest bank) and the old Bank of Amsterdam, and that the same business was done by the Goldsmiths of London and the Bank of England, and we know of none of the earlier banks where it was not done. . . And although in modern times the business of and it is bound to use ordinary care, and is liable for ordinary negligence.[1]

Lien of Bank on Funds of Depositor.—The bank has a general lien on all moneys, funds, and paper securities of a depositor in its possession for the amount of the general balance.[2] But no receiving general deposits has constituted the principal business of the banks, it cannot be said that the receiving of special deposits is so foreign to the banking business that corporations authorized to carry on that business are incapable of binding themselves by the receipt of such deposits. The numerous cases in the books relating to special deposits in banks disclose how extensively, even in modern times, this business has been and is carried on, and the general understanding in respect to it." In the case last cited, plaintiff delivered to the bank for safe keeping a package of railroad bonds, which the evidence tended to show were stolen in the daytime, when the bank was open. They were kept in a safe so situated as to be accessible to a person entering the bank from the street, while those in the bank were so placed that at times the safe was not in their view, and sometimes the door of the safe was left open. Held, that leaving the property thus exposed was gross negligence, and the fact that property of the bank was stolen at the same time from the same place was not conclusive against the allegation of gross negligence.

It is not negligence for a bank to intrust its cashier to select, hire, and pay out of his salary all the clerks and other servants employed in the banking-room, no negligence being shown in the selection of the cashier. Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Mass. 605.

Where an employee of a bank occupies a position of trust and great importance, it is gross negligence in his employers not to discharge him when they discover that he has been engaged in speculating in stocks and grain. Prather v. Kean (C. C.), 26 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 92 (not yet reported).

1. Second Nat. Bank of Erie v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 11 Blatchf. (C.C.) 362; Prather v. Kean (C. C.), 26 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 92 (not yet reported); Story on Bailm. (9th Ed.) § 398.

In Second Nat. Bank of Erie v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 11 Blatchf. (C. C.) 362, the plaintiff, a bank, applied to the defendant, another bank, to perform the service of loaning some money for it, requesting that a proper charge be made to it for the service. As the plaintiff kept a large balance with the defendant, the latter decided to make no charge for the service, but did not communicate to the plaintiff the fact that it declined compensation. The loan was made on a deposit of securities with the defendant bank, which, while in its custody, were stolen from it. Held, that the latter bank was not a gratuitous bailee of the securities. Shipman, J., said: "As the plaintiff coupled the request to transact the business with a promise to pay a reasonable charge therefor, and the defendant accepted the agency without communicating to the plaintiff the fact that it declined compensation, the plaintiff had a right to assume that it accepted the position of an agent for hire. It is too late, after the enterprise has miscarried, for the defendant to repudiate this relation, and set up the claim that it was a mere voluntary or gratuitous service which it undertook to perform, and thus shelter the miscarriage under the rule of inferior duty which the law applies to agents who act without compensation."

Deposits as Collateral.—Where valuables are deposited as collateral for a loan, the bank is only bound to take ordinary care of them, and will accordingly not be held liable where burglars break in and steal the securities. Jenkins v. National Village Bank, 58 Me. 275; Fleming v. Northampton Bank, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 177. But see Third Nat. Bank v Boyd, 44 Md. 47.

2. Ford v. Thornton, 3 Leigh (Va.) 695; McDowell v. Bank of Wilmington, 1 Harring. (Del.) 369; Beckwith v. Union Bank, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 604; Commercial Bank v. Hughes, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 94; Marsh v. Oneida Bank, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 298; State Bank v. Armstrong, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 519; Bank of U. S. v. Macalester, 9 Pa. St. 475; National Bank v. Insurance Co., 104 U. S. 54; Scott v. Franklin, 15 East, 428; Bank of Metropolis v. New England Bank, 17 Pet. (U. S.) 174.

In Davis v. Bowsher, 5 Term R., 492, Lord Kenyon stated the general rule to be "that no person can take any paper securities out of the hands of his banker without paying him his general balance, unless such securities were delivered under a particular agreement which enables him so to do."

But in Fourth Nat. Bank v. City Nat.

lien arises on securities deposited with a bank for a special purpose. Such special purpose is inconsistent with the existence of a general lien.[1]

Bank, 68 Ill. 398, a banker's lien was said not to extend to the money left on deposit with him, but is confined to securities and valuables which may be in the banker's custody as collateral.

In Louisiana a banker cannot apply funds on deposit to the payment of the debts of the depositor without the latter's consent. Gordon v. Müchler, 14 Repr. 520; Morgan v. Lathrop. 12 La Ann. 257.

Right of Set-off against a Deposit.—A bank has the right of set-off as against a deposit only where the individual who is both depositor and debtor stands in both these characters alike in precisely the same relation toward the bank. Hence an individual deposit cannot be set off against a partnership debt. International Bank v. Jones, 7 Westn. Repr 693 (Sup. Ct. Ill.). See also Falkland v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 84 N. Y. 145.

1. Bank of U. S. v. Macalester, 9 Pa. St. 475; Jarvis v. Rogers, 15 Mass. 397; Davis v. Bowsher. 5 T. R. 492; Brandao v. Barnett, 12 Cl. & Fin. 787. See also Grant on Bankers and Banking (4th Ed.) 244.

In Bank of United States v. Macalester, 9 Pa. St. 475. the bank received funds from the State of Illinois for the special purpose of paying the principal and interest of the debt contracted for constructing the Illinois and Michigan Canal. Held, that the bank could not refuse to apply the money to the holders of coupons issued by the State on the credit of the fund on the ground of a prior undischarged indebtedness of the State to the bank. The court say: "As long as the deposit is permitted to remain in their hands, they are the agents of the holders of the coupons to the amount of the fund set apart for their payment. It would be a culpable breach of trust to appropriate the fund to any other purpose, and especially to apply it to their own use." So in England a banker's lien does not attach on securities placed in his hands for a special purpose.

Where a customer deposited with his bankers a deed comprising two distinct properties, giving to them at the same time a memorandum pledging one of the properties as a security for a specific sum advanced, and also for his general balance, it was held that as the deposit of the deed was for a special purpose of giving a security upon one property only, the bankers could not claim a general lien, by virtue of the custom of bankers, on the other property. Wylde v. Radford, 33 L. J. Ch. 51.

And a banker has no lien on securities left with him by mistake or casually. Thus, where a lease was left with a banker as security for a further loan which was applied for but refused, no lien attached. Lucas v. Dorrien, 7 Taunt. 279.

So a bank upon declining to discount a note has no right to retain it for a general balance of account arising out of previous dealings with the customer. Petrie v. Myers, 54 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 513.

And a customer's security, specifically stated to be for the amount "which shall or may be found due on the balance of his account," was held to be security for the then existing balance only, and not to be applicable upon the subsequent floating balance. In re Medewe, 26 Beav. 588.

And it seems that in England bankers have no lien for the balance of their account against a customer on his plate deposited in his chest with them for safe custody. Ex parte Eyre, 1 Phillips Ch. 235; Brandao v. Barnett, 12 Cl. & Fin. 809; O'Connor v. Majoribanks, 4 M. & G. 435; Grant on Bankers and Banking (4th Ed.). 246.

And the banker has no lien upon property subject to a trust and improperly left with him by the trustee without notice of the trust, unless the cestui que trust has been guilty of such negligence as will deprive him of his right to the trust fund. Manningford v. Toleman, 1 Collyer, 670; Stackhouse v. Countess of Jersey, 30 L. J. Ch. 421; Locke v. Prescott, 32 Beav. 261; Murray v. Pinkett, 12 Cl. & Fin. 764.

Bankers have no lien upon railway stock deposited or pledged with them by a customer after notice that the stock is the property of another person. Locke v. Prescott, 32 Beav. 261.

Where trust funds were invested in shares of a banking company in the name of one of the trustees, who agreed to assign some of the shares standing in his name to the banking company, as security for repayment of advances which had been made to him by them, but no formal transfer was made. He afterwards became bankrupt. Held, that the banking company had no lien on any of the shares which had been held in trust. The Lord

If the depositor is credited for the amount deposited as so much money, the bank is liable to respond for that amount, although the funds deposited have in the mean time depreciated; and bills similar to those received, or even the identical ones, cannot be forced upon the customer in payment. The indebtedness can only be discharged in funds which the law makes a legal tender.[1]

Chancellor said: "The bank say 'you are a shareholder in this concern in respect of these shares, but we have advanced you money, not as a shareholder, not as a partner, but as a person borrowing money of the bank; and because you owe us money we insist upon retaining these shares standing in your name to repay the balance which is due from you to the bank.' Whether that might or might not prevail if these shares belonged to him individually is another matter; but is that to prevail on the assumed fact, which is now established, that he had not these shares beneficially, but that he was a trustee of them for others? The doctrine would be this, that if property be vested in a person in trust, if that property in any way comes under the control of persons to whom he is indebted, those persons can pay the trustee's debt out of the trust money!" Murray v. Pinkett, 12 Cl. & Fin. 764, 785.

But if the trust property consist of bills or notes payable to bearer, or other negotiable instruments which pass by delivery and come into the banker's hands bona fide and without notice of the trust, and without being appropriated to any special purpose, the general lien of the banker attaches. Barnett v. Brandao, 6 M. & G. 630; s. c., 12 Cl. & Fin. 787; Collins v. Martin, 1 Bos. & Pull. 648; Rumball v. Metropolitan Bank, L. R. 22 Q. B. D. 194.

In Barnett v. Brandao, 6 M. & G. 666, Lord Denman, C. J., says: "Negotiable securities, the title to which is transferred by delivery to a bona-fide holder for value, . . are to be deemed, with respect to such holders, and to the extent of the rights acquired by them by the transfer, as the property of the person transferring, whether the transfer be express or implied; and the bona-fide holder acquires a title which did not belong to the person who gave it to him. The same rule which prevails as to bills or notes payable to bearer, placed in the hands of a banker to be received, would apply to exchequer bills transferable to bearer: in both, if the banker is a creditor on a general balance, and bona fide receives them as the property of the customer, he is entitled to a lien."

And in Rumball v. Metropolitan Bank, L. R. 2 Q. B. D. 197, the court recognized the general principle that "if a party possessed of a security purporting on the face of it to be transferable by delivery chooses to leave such security in the hands of a third party, and the latter makes it over to a bona-fide holder for value, the true owner must be taken to have brought about his own loss, and cannot recover it back."

No lien will attach on funds of a depositor until some indebtedness is actually in existence and matured. Thus, if a bank holds the note of a depositor, which it discounted for him, it has no valid lien until the note matures. Beckwith v. Union Bank, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 604; Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12, per Lord Ellenborough; Jordan v. National Bank, 12 Hun (N. Y.), 512.

But in Ford's Admr. v. Thornton, 3 Leigh (Va.), 695, the bank had discounted a note of a depositor who died before its maturity. At the time of his death the amount of his deposit exceeded the amount of the note. Held, that upon proof of danger of insolvency of the estate the bank had a right in equity to retain enough of the deposit to meet the note.

After a lien has been established, the bank will lose it by taking security for the debt payable at a distant day. Hewison v. Guthrie, 2 Bing (N. Car.) 755; Cowell v. Simpson, 16 Ves. Jr. 278.

1. Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 663; Corbit v. Bank of Smyrna, 2 Harring. (Del.) 235; Marine Bank of Chicago v. Chandler, 27 Ill. 525; Marine Bank of Chicago v. Birney, 28 Ill. 90; Marine Bank of Chicago v. Rushmore, 28 Ill. 463; Willetts v. Paine, 43 Ill. 433; Levy v. Bank of United States, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 27.

Where a bank undertakes to collect for a customer, and upon receipt of the funds mixes them with the general funds of the bank, the money collected becomes a deposit to the credit of the customer, and if the funds become depreciated the bank must suffer the loss. Marine Bank of Chicago v. Rushmore, 28 Ill. 463.

In Bank of the Commonwealth of Kentucky v. Wister, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 318, the deposit was made in bills of the bank itself, which were at the time greatly

Deposits in Forged Bills or Base Coin.—A deposit in forged bills or base coin creates no indebtedness, although credited to the depositor's account; for payment in such material could not discharge a debt and cannot create one.[1]

But a bank is bound to know its own notes; and where it receives and gives credit for notes purporting to be its own, it cannot, after the lapse of a reasonable time, repudiate them on the ground that they were forged or fraudulently altered.[2] depreciated, and a certificate given that so much money had been deposited. When the certificate was presented to the bank, the cashier offered to pay the amount in the notes of the bank, which offer was refused. The act of incorporation provided that the bank should pay its bills in gold or silver. Held, that payment must be made in full in lawful money of the United States.

The right of the depositor is not, however, necessarily to be paid in gold or silver, but only in such money as is by the law of the land legal tender at the time. Carpenter v. Northfield Bank, 39 Vt. 46; Sandford v. Hays, 52 Pa. St. 26; Gumbel v. Abrams, 20 La. Ann. 568.

In Sandford v. Hays, 52 Pa. St. 26, a certificate of deposit of gold, payable "in like funds with interest," was held to be redeemable in treasury notes of the United States.

1. Bank of United States v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 333; Markle v. Hatfield, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 455; Willson v. Foree, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 110; Corbit v. Bank of Smyrna, 2 Harring. (Del.) 235; Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 33; Young v. Adams, 6 Mass. 182; Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488.

2. Bank of United States v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 333; Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 33.

In Bank of U. S. v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 333, notes of the Bank of Georgia which had been fraudulently altered were presented to it by the Bank of the United States, the bona-fide holders. The notes were received as genuine, and placed to the general account of the Bank of the United States. The forgery was not discovered until nineteen days afterwards, when notice thereof was given, and a tender of the notes made and refused. Held, that the Bank of the United States was entitled to recover the amount of this deposit. Mr. Justice Story said: Under such circumstances, the receipt by a bank of forged notes, purporting to be its own, must be deemed an adoption of them. It has the means of knowing if they are genuine; if these means are not employed, it is certainly evidence of a neglect of that duty which the public have a right to require. And in respect to persons equally innocent, where one is bound to know and act upon his knowledge, and the other has no means of knowledge, there seems to be no reason for burthening the latter with any loss in exoneration of the former. There is nothing unconscientious in retaining the sum received from the bank in payment of such notes, which its own acts have deliberately assumed to be genuine. If this doctrine be applicable to ordinary cases, it must apply with greater strength to cases where the forgery has not been detected until after a considerable lapse of time. The holder, under such circumstances, may not be able to ascertain from whom he received them, or the situation of the other parties may be essentially changed."

In Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 33, forged notes of the latter bank had been paid to the former, and upon a subsequent discovery the amount was sought to be recovered back, but no notice of the doubtful character of the notes was given until fifteen days after their receipt. Held, that by receiving and paying the notes the plaintiffs had adopted them as their own and could not recover. The court said: "The true rule is that the party receiving such notes must examine them as soon as he has opportunity, and return them immediately. If he does not, he is negligent; and negligence will defeat his right of action. This principle will apply in all cases where forged notes have been received, but certainly with more strength when the party receiving them is the one purporting to be bound to pay. For he knows better than any other whether they are his notes or not; and if he pays them, or receives them in payment, and continues silent, after he has had sufficient opportunity to examine them, he should be considered as having adopted them as his own."

Right of Depositor to Inspect Books.—In Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 108, the court say: "We are of opinion that the books are to be open for the several depositors, and that the bank is bound to produce them on all proper occasions. The officers of the bank having the charge of the books are to be so far considered as agents for both parties." See also Watson v. Phœnix Bank, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 221. And the state of the customer's account must not be disclosed, except on a reasonable and proper occasion.

Repayment of Deposits.—The customer cannot maintain an action for his deposit without a previous demand for its repayment either by check or otherwise.[1]

Hardy v. Veasey, L. R. 3 Exch. 107. In this case the plaintiff had an overdrawn account at the bank of the defendants, who had in their hands certain checks of the plaintiff's, which there were no assets to meet. The defendant's manager communicated with the plaintiff, who promised before the evening of that day to deposit a sufficient sum to meet the checks, but failed to do so. The manager afterwards, without the plaintiff's authority, communicated to one Mutton, a money-lender of the neighborhood, the state of the account, with a view of obtaining assistance for the plaintiff. The court below stated to the jury that the question for them was, "whether the communication to Mutton of the state of the plaintiff's account was an officious and unjustifiable one," and added: "If it was made with a reasonable hope and an honest intention of getting assistance for the plaintiff, I should doubt whether the action is maintainable." Held, that the question whether the disclosure was made upon a reasonable and proper occasion was rightly left to the jury, and that they had not been misdirected.

Where a check is presented for payment, and there are not sufficient assets of the drawer's in the banker's hands, the banker has no right to disclose the amount of the deficiency, but cannot go further than say, "Not sufficient assets." Foster v. Bank of London, 3 Foster & Finlason, 214.

It has been doubted, however, whether an action will lie at all against a banker, unless the customer has been injured by the act of disclosure. Hardy v. Veasey, L. R. 3 Exch. 107.

But a banker as a witness must declare what the balance of his customer was at any given date, as the knowledge cannot be regarded as a "confidential communication." Loyd v. Freshfield, 2 C. & P. 325. See also Forbe's Case, 41 L. J. Ch. 467.

1. Downes v. The Phœnix Bank, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 297; Adams v. Orange Co. Bank, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 514; Johnson v. Farmers' Bank, 1 Harring. (Del.) 117; Girard Bank v. Bank of Penn. Township, 39 Pa. St. 92; Union Bank v. Planter's Bank, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 439; Bellows Falls Bank v. Rutland Co. Bank, 40 Vt. 377; Branch v. Dawson, 23 N. Westn. Repr. 552.

In Branch v. Dawson, 33 Minn. 399, the court say: "By universal understanding on the part of bankers and depositors there is a condition attached to the undertaking of the bank. It is not its duty, as it is that of an ordinary debtor, to seek the creditor and pay him wherever found; it does not undertake to pay without respect to place,—to pay absolutely and immediately. But its engagement is to pay at its banking-house, when payment shall be called for there. Everybody understands that to be what it assumes to do. . . . This being the understanding upon which the deposit is made, it is parcel of the bank's contract to repay that, as a condition precedent to its duty to repay, the depositor shall call upon it to do so at its banking-house, and there is no default of the bank until such call is made."

In Downes v. The Phœnix Bank, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 297, it was held that where a bank receives money on deposit in the ordinary way from one of its customers, the latter cannot maintain an action for it without a previous demand either by check or otherwise. The court say: "We are reminded that where the promise is to pay on demand, the bringing of the action is a sufficient request. If that were a new question I think the courts would not again fall into the absurdity of admitting that there must be a demand, and still holding that a suit may be commenced without any prior request. They would either say that no demand was necessary, or else that it was a condition precedent to the right of action. It is an anomaly in the law that the breach of the defendant's contract should be made out by the very fact of suing him upon it. In all other cases there must be a breach before suit brought. The rule ought not to be extended to cases which do not fall precisely within it. Here the contract to be implied from the usual course of the business is that the banker shall keep the money until it is called for."

The Statute of Limitations runs against the indebtedness of the banker like any other debt.[1]

Bank books.—The entry in the bank-book by the proper officer of the amount and date of the deposit is prima-facie evidence that the bank received the amount, and binds the bank like any other

But where the bank suspends payment and closes its doors against its creditors, it waives the necessity of a demand, and a depositor may maintain an action to recover the mount of his deposit without first making a demand of payment. Watson v. Phœnix Bank, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 217. In this case the court say: "When money is deposited in a bank to be drawn at the pleasure of the depositor, the bank is not liable to an action without a previous demand. The request is parcel of the contract, and must be proved. The bank agrees to pay to the order of the depositor; but if it were liable to a suit without previous demand, it would be under the necessity of refusing all deposits, or of making special contracts in every case. The duties of the parties are reciprocal; the one to pay on demand, the other to make such demand before a right of action accrues. But where the bank has suspended payment and closed its doors, and refuses to admit its creditors, there a demand would be unavailing, and the bank, by its acts, has waived the necessity of a demand." See also Cooper v. Mowry, 16 Mass. 7.

And notice by the bank to the depositor that his claim will not be paid—Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Planter's Bank, 10 Gill & J (Md.) 422—and rendering him an account claiming the money as its own—Bank of Mo. v. Benoist, 10 Mo. 519—and discontinuing banking operations with knowledge thereof by the depositor—Planter's Bank v. Farmers & Mechanics' Bank, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 449—have been held to be acts on the part of the bank which waive demand by the depositor.

The bank has authority to pay its customers' bills, notes, and acceptances drawn on or made payable at the bank. Kymer v. Laurie, 18 L. J. (Q. B.) 218; Thatcher v. Bank, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 121; Griffin v. Rice, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 184; Mandeville v. Union Bank, 9 Cranch (U. S.), 9.

The customer may draw out his funds in such sums as he may find convenient. Munn v. Burch, 25 Ill. 35.

In Chicago Ins. Co. v. Stanford, 28 Ill. 168. Caton, C. J., says: "But until the account is thus closed the agreement to pay in parcels continues, and each check drawn bona fide and not for the mere purpose of creating separate demands does create a separate demand for which a separate action may be brought by the holder of the check whether that holder be the depositor or another as distinct and separate from the general account as would be separate promissory notes for the same amounts. Where there is a real controversy as to the account between the bank and the depositor, and the latter for the mere purpose of vexation and not in the regular course of business should draw small checks that he might commence separate suits upon them, the courts would no doubt find an efficient remedy."

1. Branch v. Dawson, 33 Minn. 399; Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321.

But when the statute begins to run is not conclusively settled. The weight of authority seems to be that it begins to run only from the time the depositor has demanded payment, when his right of action accrues, or until some act of the depositor or some act of the bank made known to the depositor has dispensed with such demand. Girard Bank v. Bank of Penn. Township, 39 Pa. St. 92; Planter's Bank v. Farmers and Mechanics' Bank, 8 Gill & J (Md.) 449; Farmers and Mechanics' Bank v. Planter's Bank, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 422; Branch v. Dawson, 33 Minn. 399.

It has been held, however, that it begins to run from the date of the last balancing of accounts. Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 96. See also Pott v. Clegg, 16 Mee. & W. 321; Bridgman v. Gill, 24 Beav. 302.

In Adams v. Orange County Bank, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 514, the publication of a list of unclaimed deposits, in pursuance of a statute requiring such publication, was held to be an acknowledgment of indebtedness to the depositors therein named from which a new promise could be implied to prevent the running of the Statute of Limitations; and the court added that the defendants, not having accompanied their published statement with notice of any defence, must be deemed to have waived it.

In case of the suspension of the bank, the statute runs from the time the suspension is known to the depositors Union Bank v. Planter's Bank, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 439.

form of receipt.[1] But the entry is only a receipt, and is open to explanation by evidence aliunde, and if shown to be a mistake is no longer binding upon the bank.[2]

The receipt is also open to correction in favor of the depositor, if it be erroneous.[3]

1. Asher v. Park Bank, 7 Alb. L. J. 43; Shaw v. Dartnall, 6 B. & C. 57; Commercial Bank v. Rhind, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 643; Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 96.

2. Shaw v. Picton, 4 B. & C. 715; Mechanics and Farmers' Bank v. Smith, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 115.

Where a mistake is alleged to have been made in a customer's bank-book by the banker's clerk, the question is for the jury upon the evidence. Snead v. Williams. 9 L. T. (N. S.) 115.

But in Manhattan Co. v. Lydig, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 377, 389, the court say: "If the dealer's book accompany the deposits, and the credit be then given when the deposit is made, it becomes an original entry, and would be conclusive on the bank; if, however, the book is sent to be written up afterwards, it is not an original entry, and may be examined into."

3. In Mechanics & Farmers' Bank v. Smith, 19 Johns. (N.Y.) 115, the teller had entered in plaintiff's bank-book the sum of $123.18 as the amount of the deposit, which was the sum mentioned on the deposit slip, but plaintiff claimed $100 more had actually been deposited. A rule of the bank was: "All payments made or received at the bank must be examined at the time." Held, that the entry of the teller was not conclusive, and that the rule of the bank did not prevent the depositor from showing afterwards that there had been a mistake. See also Anderson v. Leverick (Sup. Ct. Iowa), 30 N. Westn. Repr. 39.

In Weisser v. Denison, 10 N. Y. 68, checks forged by the confidential clerk of the depositor were paid by the bank, charged to the depositor in his pass-book, the book balanced, and, with the forged vouchers among others, returned to the clerk, who examined the account at the request of the depositor and reported it correct. The depositor did not discover the forgeries until several months afterwards, when he immediately made them known to the bank. Held, in an action to recover the balance of the deposit, that the bank could not retain the amount of the forged checks. Johnson, J., said: "The entry of debits for payments made in a bank-book and striking a balance is undoubtedly a statement of the account, and the delivery of it to the dealer and his retention of it without objection, as in other cases of accounts rendered, gives to this statement of accounts the character of a stated account. But a stated account is liable to be opened by evidence of fraud or of mistake; and when the payments represented by the checks in question were sworn by Weisser's representatives not to have been made to him or by his order or authority, the proof of payment afforded by the stated account was overthrown and Weisser's right to the money remained unaffected. . . . He was under no contract with the bank to examine with diligence his returned checks and bank-book. In contemplation of law the book was balanced and the checks returned for his protection, not for theirs, and when he failed to examine it the whole consequence was that the burden of proof was shifted. He became bound to show that the account was wrongly stated. This right he preserved so long as his claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations."

In Manufacturers' National Bank v. Barnes, 65 Ill. 69, a depositor's clerk who had a power of attorney to draw checks against the depositor's account for fifteen days only continued to draw checks without the knowledge of the depositor after the time had expired, all of which were honored by the bank. The bank-book was several times written up and returned to the depositor, who did not detect the fraud until several months afterwards. Held, that the bank was liable for the amount of the checks drawn by the clerk after his agency ceased. It was urged that the bank was only liable for the amount checked out by the clerk before the bank-book of the plaintiff was written up the first time, as from that date the bank had a right to presume the clerk had authority to draw checks But the court said: "The bank knew, by a document in its own possession, and which had been made the subject of a special conversation with one of its officers, that the clerk had authority to draw checks only for fifteen days. . . . The bank was guilty of great negligence in paying checks of the clerk drawn after that period, and cannot be excused merely because the plaintiff failed to examine the returned checks, which he had a right to

Certificates of Deposit.—A certificate of deposit is the written acknowledgment of the bank that it has received from a certain person a certain sum on deposit.[1] Ordinarily it is a simple receipt of the bank, in negotiable form, for so many dollars, and has been held to be in fact equivalent to a promissory note.[2] presume had been drawn by himself alone." See also Welsh v. German American Bank, 73 N. Y. 424.

In Williamson v. Williamson, L. R. 7 Eq. 542, a depositor had largely overdrawn his account, and the banker, in writing up the bank-book at the end of six months, had made certain charges for interest and commissions on his advances, which were explained to the agent of the depositor, who was sick at the time. Held, that the lapse of several months without complaint on behalf of the depositor was conclusive evidence of his acquiescence in the charges made.

Deposit Ticket.—A deposit ticket or memorandum stating the amount deposited with and assumed to be received by the bank is only prima-facie evidence of the fact it recites, and may be contradicted by parol evidence. Weisinger v. Bank of Gallatin, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 330; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 248.

1. Morse on Banks and Banking, 63.

2. Leavitt v. Palmer, 3 Comst. (N. Y.) 19; Barnes v. Ontario Bank, 19 N. Y. 152; Bank of New Orleans v. Merrill, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 295; Pardee v. Fish, 60 N. Y. 265; Cate v. Patterson, 25 Mich. 191; Craig v. State of Missouri, 4 Pet. (U. S.), 433; Miller v. Austen, 13 How. (U. S.) 218; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 362; Cushman v. Ill. Starch Co., 79 Ill. 281; Nat. State Bank v. Ringel, 51 Ind. 393; Johnson v. Henderson, 76 N. Car. 227; Lindsey v. McClelland, 18 Wis 481; White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 181.

In Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118, the court say: "A certificate of deposit, issued by a bank or other depositary to a depositor upon his paying to the former a sum of money on general or, as it is sometimes called, irregular deposit, stating that the depositor has deposited that sum payable to himself or order on demand, or on return of the certificate properly indorsed, is a promissory note." And in Miller v. Austen, 13 How. (U. S.) 218, 228, Catron, J., says: "The established doctrine is that a promise to deliver or to be accountable for so much money is a good bill or note. Here the sum is certain and the promise direct. Every reason exists why the indorser of this paper should be held responsible to his indorsee, that can prevail in cases where the paper indorsed is in the ordinary form of a promissory note."

It has, however, been held in some cases that a certificate of deposit is not a promissory note so as to make an indorser liable on his indorsement to the holder, but is a special agreement to pay the deposit to any one who should present the certificate and the depositor's order. Patterson v. Poindexter, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 227; Chamley v. Dulles, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 353; Lebanon Bank v. Mangan, 28 Pa. St. 452; O'Neill v. Bradford, 1 Pinney (Wis.), 390; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 574; Talladega Ins. Co. v. Woodward, 44 Ala. 287; Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 23.

In Patterson v. Poindexter, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 227, an action was brought against an indorser upon a certificate worded as follows: "No. 716. Mississippi Union Bank, Jackson, Miss., July 2, 1839. I hereby certify that C. S. Tarply has deposited in this bank, payable twelve months from 1st May, 1839, with five per cent interest till due per annum, $3,691.63 for the use of R. Patterson & Co., and payable only to their order upon the return of this certificate. C. W. Clifton, Ass't Cashier." Held, that the certificate was not a promissory note. "Nothing is a promissory note," said Gibson, C. J., "in which the promise to pay is merely inferential; or as Mr. Justice Bosanquet expressed it in Home v. Redfearn, 6 Scott, 267, in which there is 'no more than a simple acknowledgment of the debt, with such a promise to pay as the law will imply.' . . . That the instrument before us is not a commercial one is decisive of the cause. For purposes of transfer merely, it was payable to order; for purposes of commercial responsibility, it was not negotiable. It was a special agreement to pay the deposit to any one who should present the certificate and the depositor's order."

In Miller v. Austen, 13 How. (U. S.) 218, the certificate was similarly worded, but the court reached a different conclusion. The weight of authority, accordingly, is that making a certificate of deposit payable to bearer or order denotes an intention that the obligation shall be negotiable, which can only be carried into effect by treating it as a promissory note. It was held in Curran v. Witter

Where the certificate is in the nature of a promissory note, it is subject to the same rules that control other negotiable paper.[1]

(Wis.), 31 N. Westn. Repr. 705, that a certificate of deposit issued by a banker in the ordinary form of such instrument is in substance and legal effect a negotiable promissory note. Gregg v. Union County Bank, 87 Ind. 238; Brown v. McElroy, 52 Ind. 404; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 362; Lynch v. Goldsmith, 64 Ga. 42; Cassidy v. First Nat'l Bank of Fairbault, 30 Minn. 86; Thayer v. Briggs, 1 Clarke (Iowa), 434; B. R. v. Maryland, 2 Hilton (N. Y.), 295. See also Jacquin v. Warren, 40 Ill. 459; Cummings v. Freeman, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 143; Fleming v. Burge, 6 Ala. 373; Hart v. Life Assoc., 54 Ala. 495. And in Lang v. Straus, 7 N. Eastn. Repr. 763. it was held that a certificate of deposit contains, by implication of law, a promise to repay the depositor his money, and is a written contract for the payment of money. See also First Nat'l Bank v. Clark, 42 Hun (N. Y), 16.

1. Johnson v. Henderson, 76 N. Car. 227; Pardee v. Fish, 60 N. Y. 265; Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118; Hunt v. Divine, 37 Ill. 137.

A certificate of deposit is negotiable, if expressed in negotiable words. Nat. Bank v. Ringel, 51 Ind. 393; Johnson v. Henderson, 76 N. Car. 227; Bank of Peru v. Farnsworth, 18 Ill. 563; Laughlin v. Marshall, 19 Ill. 390; Carey v. McDougald, 7 Ga. 84; Drake v. Markle, 21 Ind. 433.

A certificate of deposit in the usual form, payable to the depositor's order, "in current bank-notes," is negotiable, and the indorser thereof is liable as upon a note. Pardee v. Fish, 60 N. Y. 265. The court said the phrase "current bank-notes" meant "notes or bills used in general circulation as money, and constituted the general currency of the country recognized by law at the time and place where payment was to be made and demanded." But it has been held that if the certificate be payable "in current funds" it is not negotiable, because it is not made payable in money, but in that which at the time of payment may or may not be money. National State Bank v. Ringel, 51 Ind. 393; Johnson v. Henderson, 76 N Car. 227; Platt v. Bank, 17 Wis. 223; Lindsey v. McClelland, 18 Wis. 481. So, if payable in "United States six-per-cent interest-bearing bonds," it is a mere contract to deliver such bonds, and not negotiable. Easton v. Hyde, 13 Minn. 90. And a certificate of deposit payable to order "in currency" is not negotiable. Ford v. Mitchell, 15 Wis. 304; Huse v. Hamblin, 29 Iowa, 501. But in Klauber v. Biggerstaff, 47 Wis. 551, a certificate of deposit payable "in currency" was held to be negotiable, and Ford v. Mitchell, 15 Wis. 304, was explained and criticised. Ryan, C. J., said: "Almost all civilized countries, including this country, have a mixed circulation of coin and bank-notes. These constitute the currency of the country — its money; and the general term 'currency' includes both. Currency, therefore, means money—coined money and paper money equally. But it means money only; and the only practical distinction between paper money and coined money, as currency, is that coined money must generally be received, paper money may generally be specially refused, in payment of debt; but a payment in either is equally made in money—equally good. . . . In the use of the term, currency does not necessarily include all bank-notes in actual circulation, for all bank-notes are not necessarily money. In this use of the term, currency includes only such bank-notes as are current de jure et de facto at the locus in quo; that is, bank-notes which are used for circulation by authority of law, and are in actual and general circulation at par with coin, as a substitute for coin, interchangeable with coin; bank-notes which actually represent dollars and cents, and are paid and received for dollars and cents at their legal standard value. Whatever is at a discount—that is, whatever represents less than the standard value of coined dollars and cents at par—does not properly represent dollars and cents, and is not money; is not properly included in the word 'currency.' In this sense, national bank-notes, which are not legal tender, are now as much currency as treasury notes, which are legal tender. This construction of the term 'currency' might, perhaps, properly be extended to the term 'current funds.' It must extend to the latter term whenever it is used in the legal sense of money." So, in Drake v. Markle, 21 Ind. 433, the certificate stated that "J. M. has deposited in this bank $7584, payable to the order of himself, in currency, on return of this certificate." Held, that the instrument was a promissory note and negotiable by indorsement.

In Nat. Bk. of Fort Edward v. Washington Co. Nat. Bk., 5 Hun (N. Y.), 605, a bank issued a certificate of deposit

4. Usages and Customs.—Reasonable and long-established usages and customs of banks enter into and constitute a part of contracts payable on its return properly indorsed, on which it made a payment to the original holder, who transferred it for value to the plaintiff without knowledge or notice on his part of said payment. Held, that the bank was liable for the full amount of the certificate, notwithstanding the payment to the original depositor. The court said: "It was urged by the defendants that the certificate was payable forthwith; that after the lapse of an unreasonable time (in this case seven years) it was presumed to be dishonored, and therefore that the assignee took it subject to all equities. We think not. The very nature of the instrument and the ordinary modes of business show that a certificate of deposit, like a deposit credited in a pass-book, is intended to represent moneys actually left with the bank for safe-keeping, which are to be retained until the depositor actually demands them. Such a certificate is not dishonored until presented." But in Tripp v. Curtenius, 36 Mich. 494, it was held that certificates of deposit are not intended for long circulation or for more than a temporary convenience, and that no one can become a bona-fide purchaser who does not take them within some reasonably short period; and the court declined to follow the doctrine laid down in Nat. Bank of Fort Edward v Washington Co. Nat. Bk., 5 Hun (N. Y.), 605.

A certificate of deposit being evidence of an indebtedness, in the nature of a receipt, parol evidence is admissible to explain it. Hotchkiss v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 478. Compare Lang v. Straus, 7 N. E. Rep. 763, where Hotchkiss v. Mosher is said not to be a well-considered case, "for no authorities are cited in support of the conclusion announced."

Demand of Payment before Suit.—Upon the question whether demand of payment must be made before an action can be brought upon a certificate of deposit, made payable "on return of this certificate" or "on presentation of this certificate," the decisions are conflicting. It has been held, on the one hand, that the holder is not obliged to demand payment of the certificate before suit is brought upon it, because it is a promissory note payable on demand, and the bank like any maker of such a note is obliged to find out the payee and pay the certificate. Hunt v. Divine, 37 Ill. 137; Cate v. Patterson, 25 Mich. 191; Tripp v. Curtenius, 36 Mich. 495; Brummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503; Curran v. Witter (Wis.), 26 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 272.

In Hunt v. Divine, 37 Ill. 137, it was held that the words "on return of this certificate" do not change the legal effect of the undertaking or require the holder to present the note at the banking-house of the makers. The court say: "This instrument being a promissory note, it must be governed by the rules and principles applicable to that class of paper. What did the makers of it engage to do? They engaged to pay Chase 280$\frac{50}{100}$ dollars three months after the date of the certificate. It is not payable at any particular place nor on demand, but three months after date at no particular place. Now do the words 'on return of this certificate' change the legal effect of this undertaking or require the holder to present it at the banking-house of the makers? There is no promise to pay at the banking-house, consequently no obligation rested on the holder to present it there. The rule is, in regard to this kind of paper, that the maker is to find his paper and take it up. The demand is by the maker on the holder, which, when made, will be the time to return the certificate. . . . The fact that it is payable at a certain time, is for a certain sum, and payable to a certain person, gives it its character of a promissory note—it comes up to all the conditions required of such paper. A promissory note payable on demand, as against the maker, can be prosecuted to judgment without averring or proving any demand."

In Brummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503, a certificate of deposit and promissory note were said to be in substance and legal effect the same, and it was held that the Statute of Limitations begins to run against a certificate of deposit, payable on demand, from the date of the same, and no special demand is necessary to put it in motion. And in Tripp v. Curtenius, 36 Mich. 499, the court approve the decision in Brummagim v. Tallant, 29 Cal. 503, and say: "We think this is the safer and better doctrine, and is correct in principle. To hold such instruments to be in legal effect promissory notes payable on demand, and yet not apply the principles applicable to demand promissory notes, either because of the peculiar form of the instrument or because issued by a firm engaged in the business of banking, would be to create a distinction unsound in principle and one not warranted by any reason or necessity that made with, and are binding on, persons dealing with them, whether known to such persons or not.[1] But to give a usage of

we can discover." On the other hand, the certificate has been considered so far like an ordinary deposit that no cause of action accrues to the holder until payment thereof has been demanded. Bellows Falls Bank v. Rutland County Bank, 40 Vt. 377; Payne v. Gardiner, 29 N. Y. 146; Pardee v. Fish, 60 N. Y. 265; Smiley v. Fry, 100 N. Y. 262; Fells Point Savings Inst. v. Weedon, 18 Md. 320.

In Bellows Falls Bank v. Rutland County Bank, 40 Vt. 377, the certificate was payable "on the presentation of the certificate properly indorsed." Held, that no action could be maintained thereon until a special demand had been made. The court say: "The provisions of the instrument constitute an agreement to pay the money when Clark, or his indorsee, presents the certificate to the bank for payment, properly indorsed. The time when the instrument is due, by its terms, is ascertainable only by an actual presentation of it to the defendant's bank, properly indorsed, and call for the money. There is nothing in the transaction to distinguish it from a naked bailment, for the exclusive benefit of the depositor, and in such cases a demand is generally necessary to perfect a right of action against the depositary. In this case it is clear, upon principle, that no action should be allowed against the defendants without a previous demand, and we think this view of the subject will give operation to the instrument according to its legal effect and the obvious intention of the parties."

In Smiley v. Fry, 100 N. Y. 262, the certificate read: "Due S. K. Ashton, M. D., Trustee, $4000, returnable on demand. It is understood this sum is especially deposited with us, and is distinct from the other transactions with said Ashton." In an action upon the same wherein the Statute of Limitations was set up as a defence, held, that it was in the nature of a certificate of deposit, not a promissory note; that no cause of action arose thereon until a demand was made for the sum deposited, and as no demand was made until 1880, the action was not barred by the statute. Miller, J., said: "The word 'due' does not import an obligation or promise which can be enforced without a demand, for it is expressly limited to the time when demanded. . . . As the instrument in question was not a promissory note but a certificate of deposit, the defence of the Statute of Limitations, interposed by the defendant, was not available for the reason that a demand of the money deposited was not made prior to six years before the commencement of the action."

And in Howell v. Adams, 68 N. Y. 314, the court say: "The fact that a certificate is given on a deposit being made, payable on the return of the certificate, instead of leaving the deposit subject generally to check or draft, does not change the reason of the rule that the banker must first be called upon for payment before an action can be maintained." So, in Maryland, it has been held that on a certificate of deposit "payable with interest, on demand, on the return of the same," the Statute of Limitations begins to run only from the time of demand actually made. Fells Point Savings Inst. v. Weedon, 18 Md. 320.

1. Mills v. Bank of the United States, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 431; Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Dorchester Bank v. New England Bank, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 177; Warren Bank v. Suffolk Bank, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 582. See also Lincoln & Kennebeck Bank v. Page, 9 Mass. 155; Smith v. Whiting, 12 Mass. 6; Chicopee Bank v. Eager, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 583; Bank of Columbia v. Fitzhugh, 1 H. & G. (Md.) 239; Hartford Bank v. Stedman, 3 Conn. 489; Lawson on Usages and Customs, 53; Gindrat v. Mechanics' Bank of Augusta, 7 Ala. 324.

In Mills v. Bank of the United States, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 431, the question arose whether the usage and custom of the bank, not to make demand of payment of a note until the fourth day of grace, bound the defendant, an indorser, unless he had personal knowledge of that usage and custom. Mr. Justice Story said: "There is no doubt that, according to the general rules of law, demand of payment ought to be made on the third day, and that it is too late if made on the fourth day of grace. But it has been decided by this court, upon full consideration and argument, in the case of Renner v. The Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. Rep. 582, that where a note is made for the purpose of being negotiated at a bank, whose custom, known to the parties, it is to demand payment and give notice on the fourth day of grace, that custom forms a part of the law of such contract, at least so far as to bind their rights. In the present case, the court is called upon to take one step farther; and, upon the principles and reasoning of the former case, it has come to the conclusion that when a note is made payable or negotiable at a bank whose invariable usage it is to demand payment, and give notice on the fourth day of grace, the parties are bound by that usage whether they have a personal knowledge of it or not. In the case of such a note, the parties are presumed by implication to agree to be governed by the usage of the bank at which they have chosen to make the security itself negotiable." But in Peirce v. Butler, 14 Mass. 303, it is said that the usage of the bank is sufficient to bind the customer if he is conversant with it. And in Central Bank v. Davis, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 373, 375, the court say: "An established usage of a bank, known to its customers, would be evidence against them. All who transact business at a bank must be presumed to agree to conform to their modes of doing business, so far as they are known to them. They incorporate its known usages into, and make them a part of, their contracts." See also Jones v. Fales, 4 Mass. 252.

a bank, the force of law requires an acquiescence and notoriety

The usages of banks as to demand and notice govern and make valid acts otherwise invalid. Lawson no Usages and Customs, 206; Planters' Bank v. Markham, 5 How. (Miss.) 397; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 162; Commercial, etc., Bank v. Hamer, 7 How. (Miss.) 448; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 80; Boston Bank v. Hodges, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 420; Godden v. Shipley, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 579; Bridgeport Bank v. Dyer, 19 Conn. 136; Isham v. Fox, 7 Ohio St. 317.

Thus, by usage, a notice by mail, where the party resides in the same town, is sufficient. Gindrat v. Mechanics' Bank, 7 Ala. 325; Bell v. Hagerstown Bank, 7 Gill (Md.), 227; Gunnan v. Walker, 9 Iowa, 426. Or a demand of payment on the fourth instead of the third day after due. Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 582: Mills v. Bank of United States, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 431; Patriotic Bank v. Farmers' Bank, 2 Cranch (C. C.), 560; Rabnrg v. Bank of Columbia, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 231. Or a demand on a day preceding a day which is not a holiday, as Commencement-day at Harvard. City Bank v. Cutler, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 414.

In Ellis v. Ohio Life Ins. & Trust Co., 4 Ohio St. 628, plaintiffs sued to recover money paid by them to defendants on a check drawn upon plaintiffs payable to the order of S. T. & Co. or bearer. The check was presented to defendants by a stranger, who was paid without being questioned as to his identity or right to the check, which was afterwards discovered to be a forgery. Evidence was introduced of a custom in Cincinnati for the cashier or teller of a bank to whom a check drawn upon another bank was presented, and payment or purchase requested by an unknown bearer, to take means to assure himself that all was right, and for the drawee bank, upon receiving a check through another bank, to assume, relying upon the custom, that such inquiries had been made. Held, that under these facts the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. The court say: "If this custom, in both its branches, was established to the satisfaction of the jury, the fair presumption arising would be that the defendants had been negligent in failing to comply with an established custom of the business, necessary not only to their own security, but also to that of the bank upon which the check was drawn, and that the plaintiffs, not being informed to the contrary, paid the check upon the supposition that the custom had been observed. . . . The custom which the plaintiffs sought to establish seems to have been one of the most reasonable character. It is a great error to suppose that the drawee of a bill or check is bound to rely alone upon his knowledge of the handwriting of his customer or correspondent. The testimony in the case, as well as every day's experience, shows this alone to be an insufficient security when dealing with strangers and in large amounts against the ingenuity with which forgeries are now committed. The next most effective precaution is that of requiring the holder to furnish some reliable information of himself, and of his right to the paper. But when another bank intervenes and takes the check, this cannot be resorted to by the drawee. As between the banks, therefore, the observance of the custom becomes a matter of mutual protection, and saves to the drawee the benefit of this precaution." On the other hand, in individual cases, usages and customs inconsistent with the rules of law have been rejected by the courts. Thus, the rule of law that negotiable paper not payable instantly is entitled to days of grace cannot be altered by evidence of a different custom. Woodruff v. Merchants' Bank, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 673; s. c., 6 Hill (N. Y.), 172; Morrison v. Bailey, 5 Ohio St. 13. In the latter case the paper was in this form: "$300. Cleveland, O., June 30, 1853. Wicks, Otis & Brownell: Pay to L. F. Burgess on the 13th day of July, '53, or order, from which an inference may be drawn that it is known to the three hundred dollars. R. B. Bailey." The testimony of a number of bankers showed a uniform custom on their part in Cleveland to regard drafts in this form as checks, and not entitled to days of grace. But the court held that "any supposed usage of banks in any particular place to regard drafts upon them, payable at a day certain after date, as checks, and not entitled to days of grace, is inadmissible to control the rules of law." Compare Bowen v. Newell, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 584, and Champion v. Gordon, 70 Pa. St. 476, where Sharswood, J., says: "The usage of the banks in the commercial metropolis of the State ought to have great weight in determining a question of this character." The rule of law that where a bank receives a sum on a general deposit it is bound to respond to the depositor when called on for a like sum, in good money, cannot be altered by evidence of a different custom. Marine Bank of Chicago v. Chandler, 27 Ill. 526; Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 663. In Marine Bank of Chicago v. Chandler, 27 Ill. 526, Walker, J., said: "Nor can the special custom of banks in a particular locality change the laws of the land regulating the value of the currency and fixing the standard value of the current coins. That parties may contract to receive any commodity in lieu of money, in payment of indebtedness, is undeniably true. This can only be done by special agreement and not by usage. No custom can compel a creditor, in the absence of a special agreement, to receive anything but the constitutional currency of the country. The fact that the business men of a particular place have been in the habit of receiving depreciated paper money in payment of their demands by no means proves that all creditors in that locality have agreed to receive the same, much less a person residing hundreds of miles distant. To have such an effect, a special agreement must be proved." So the rule that the holder of a bank bill who has voluntarily cut it in two for the purpose of transmitting it by mail with greater safety, whereby one part is lost, may recover the full amount from the bank upon presenting the one half and proving the loss of the other, cannot be affected by a custom of the bank to pay one half to the holder of a half-note. Bank of United States v. Sill, 5 Conn. 106; s c., 13 Am. Dec. 44; Allen v. State Bank, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. Car.) 3. See also Armat v. The Union Bank, 2 Cranch (C. C.), 180.

In Vermilye v. Adams Express Co., 21 Wall. (U. S.) 139, a usage of brokers in opposition to the rule of law that the purchaser of negotiable paper past due takes it subject to the equities of other parties was set up, but without success. Mr. Justice Miller said: "Bankers, brokers, and others cannot, as was attempted in this case, establish by proof a usage or custom in dealing in such paper which, in their own interest, contravenes the established commercial law. If they have been in the habit of disregarding that law, this does not relieve them from the consequences nor establish a different law." So also the rule that money paid under a mistake of fact can be recovered back cannot be affected by a custom among banks generally that no mistakes shall be rectified in the receipt or payment of money, unless the mistake is discovered before the person paying or receiving departs. Gallatin v. Bradford, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 209. In this case the court say: "If such a custom does exist, it is contrary to law, and ought not to meet with the sanction of a court of justice. The law declares that money received through mistake shall be refunded; and this rule of law is founded in morality, which makes part of the law of the land. Would it not be as immoral and unjust, if a mistake were made in the receipt or payment of money at a bank, to hold the money obtained by such mistake, although not discovered until after the person paying or receiving had got out of the door, as if the mistake had before been discovered? There surely can be no difference in morality; and the law makes none." See also Mechanics & Farmers' Bank v. Smith, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 115. A custom of banks to pay the occasional overdrafts of customers whose standing is good is unreasonable. Oakland Bank of Savings v. Wilcox, 60 Cal. 126. In Lancaster Bank v. Woodward, 18 Pa. St. 357, 362, the court say: "Such a custom should be abolished. Malus usus abolendus est. . . . That the practice of paying overdrafts has prevailed to some extent is quite likely; and it may be true that boards of directors have in some instances sanctioned it; but it has no authority in sound usage or in law."

In Mahaiwe Bank v. Douglass, 31 Conn. 170, it was held that if any custom prevails among banks regarding erasures of printed matter in negotiable paper as no evidence of an unauthorized alteration, when the same erasures of written matter would be so, it has not existed so public, and especially to those who do business at the bank.[1] Particular and local usages of banks will not be judicially noticed by the courts, but must be proved like other facts.[2] long, or become so general, as to be a part of the law merchant; and the defendant would not be affected by it, unless he was shown to have known of the custom and to have acquiesced in it. Sanford, J., observed: "It seems more in accordance with principle and with reason to hold that the effect of apparent erasures and alterations in exciting distrust and 'putting upon inquiry' depends more upon the significance and importance of the words erased than upon the way in which they were first impressed upon the paper; and such, we are satisfied, is the rule of law."

By-laws affecting the Rights of Third Parties.—By-laws of a bank cannot affect the rights and interests of third persons. A by-law, therefore, that all payments made or received at the bank must be examined at the time does not prevent a party dealing with the bank from showing afterwards that there was a mistake in his account of deposits and receipts. Mechanics & Farmers' Bank v. Smith, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 115. See also Gallatin v. Bradford, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 209; Central Bank v. Davis, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Samuels v. Central, etc., Exp. Co., McCahon (Kans.), 214; Seneca County Bank v. Lamb, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 595; Driscoll v. Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 96, 102.

A by law, authorized by the charter of a bank, requiring every depositor when demanding any payment of his deposit to produce the original pass-book, and assented to by the depositor by signing the rules and regulations of the bank, is not unreasonable and is binding. Warhus v. Bowery Savings Bank, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 67; s. c., 21 N. Y. 543. See also Heath v. Savings Bank, 46 N. H. 78; Levy v. Franklin Savings Bank, 117 Mass. 448.

1. Adams v. Otterback, 15 How. (U. S.) 539.

In this case a certain practice had been adopted by the bank but two years, and in that time only four instances under it had occurred, and it was held that the requisite notoriety was wanting. The court say: "In the case before us the usage relied on, and under which notice to the indorser was given, had been adopted by the bank two years before the note in question was discounted, but it seems only four cases had occurred under it. No public notice was given at the time of its adoption, and no presumption can arise from the facts stated that the indorser could have had notice of the usage. It is said if a bank may establish a usage it may change it, and that there must be a beginning of acts under it. This may be admitted, but it does not follow that a usage is obligatory from the time of its adoption. To give it the force of law it requires an acquiescence and a notoriety from which an inference may be drawn that it is known to the public, and especially to those who do business with the bank. It is unnecessary to consider whether a usage adopted might acquire force from public notices generally circulated. No such notice was given in this case. But to constitute a usage it must apply to a place rather than to a particular bank. It must be the rule of all the banks of the place or it cannot consistently be called a usage. If every bank could establish its own usage, the confusion and uncertainty would greatly exceed any local convenience resulting from the arrangement." See also Duvall v. The Farmers' Bank of Maryland, 9 G. & J. (Md.) 31.

In Citizens' Bank of Baltimore v. Grafflin, 31 Md. 507, the court say: "To permit usage to govern and modify the law in relation to the dealings of the parties, it must be uniform, certain, and sufficiently notorious to warrant the legal presumption that the parties made their contract with reference to the usage and not according to the general and established law applicable to the case. The evidence for such purpose should be very strong and conclusive to authorize the usage, to regulate and control the contract between the parties, in derogation of the established law."

In Smith v. Wright, 1 Caines, 43, the true test of a commercial usage is said to be its having existed long enough to have become generally known and to warrant a presumption that contracts are made in reference to it.

2. Planter's Bank v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 449; Bank of Columbia v. Fitzhugh, 1 Harr. & Gill (Md.), 239; Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 582. See also Eager v. Atlas Ins. Co., 14 Pick. (Mass.) 141; Gordon v. Little, 8 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.), 557; Ward v. Everett, 1 Dana (Ky.), 429.

General customs of the country, however, will be noticed by the courts ex

5. Collections.—Power to make collections upon business paper is incidental to the banking business and need not be expressly conferred.[1] The bank, upon accepting the agency, is bound to exercise reasonable care and diligence in the discharge of its assumed duties.[2] The measure of damages resulting from its officio. Thus, "the usage of making the demand on the third day of grace has become so general that courts of justice will notice it ex officio." Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 582, per Mr. Justice Thompson. And the usage of "banking hours," it seems, has been judicially noticed. See Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 65; Parker v. Gordon, 7 East, 385; Salt Springs Nat. Bank v. Burton, 59 N. Y. 430; Morse on Banking, 434. And the usage of banks to allow their depositors to withdraw their funds in parcels. Munn v. Burch, 25 Ill. 35. In the last case cited the court say: "Such customs and usages as are universally known to exist enter into and form a part of every contract to which they apply, although not mentioned nor alluded to in the terms of the contract Some of these commercial customs the courts will take notice of as a matter of law, and others have to be proved as matters of fact. Where a custom is so universal and of such antiquity that all men must be presumed to know it, courts will not pretend to be more ignorant than the rest of mankind, but will recognize and act upon it. Such is the custom governing checks on bankers. The general rule is that the creditor cannot divide up his demand against the debtor and require the latter to pay it in parcels. But everybody knows, and courts no less than commercial men, that an exception to this rule exists as to deposits in bank."

In Bank of Columbia v. Fitzhugh, 1 Harr. & Gill (Md.), 239, Earle, J., says: "A usage of universal prevalence becomes a part of the existing law, and is to be noticed ex officio by the courts of justice; but a particular usage has a circumscribed and limited application, and must be supported by proof," and special usages were held to control and govern the general law repugnant to them.

As to the objection that receiving proof of a particular usage is, in effect, altering and varying by parol evidence the written contract of the parties, the court say, in Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 582: "If this is the light in which it is to be considered, there can be no doubt that it ought to be laid entirely out of view. . . . Evidence of usage or custom is, however, never considered of this character, but is received for the purpose of ascertaining the sense and understanding of parties by their contracts, which are made with reference to such usage or custom; for the custom then becomes a part of the contract, and may not improperly be considered the law of the contract, and it rests upon the same principle as the doctrine of the iex loci." But in Piscataqua Exchange Bank v. Carter, 20 N. H. 246, it was held that, the contract between the indorser and indorsees of negotiable paper being a written contract, parol evidence of a usage of a bank was not admissible to vary it. See also Central Bank v. Davis, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 373.

1. Tyson v. State Bank, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 225; Smedes v. Bank of Utica, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 372; Jockusch v. Towsey, 51 Tex. 129.

Where the payee of a note which is made payable at a bank indorses the same and deposits it with the bank for collection, the bank becomes the agent of the payee, and not of the maker; and after the note has been paid, no misapplication of the money by the bank can prejudice the maker, he being, by such payment, absolutely discharged from the debt. Smith v. Essex County Bank, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 627; Ward v Smith, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 447; Alley v. Rogers, 19 Grat. (Va.) 366.

Where, on receiving a check for collection, the amount is credited to the depositor in his pass-book, if it is not paid the check may be returned and the credit cancelled. National Gold Bank, etc., Co. v. McDonald, 51 Cal. 64; Freeholders of Middesex v. State Bank, 32 N. J. Eq. 467.

Banks sometimes charge a commission for collection; but the probable temporary use of the money when collected and the advantages arising from business association are a sufficient consideration for the undertaking to collect it. Smedes v. Utica Bank, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 372; Bank of Utica v. McKinster, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 475; Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 13; Hall v. Bank of State, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 366; Titus v. Mechanics' Nat. Bk., 6 Vroom (N. J.), 588.

2. Nat. Bank of Commerce v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 92, 104; Fabens v. Mercantile Bank, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 330; Warren Bank v. Suffolk Bank, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 582; Pahquoque Bank v. Bethel Bank, 36 Conn. 325.

In Fabens v. Mercantile Bank, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 330, Shaw, C. J., said: "When a bank receives a note for collection, it is bound to use reasonable skill and diligence in making the collection, and for that purpose is bound to make a seasonable demand on the promisor, and in case of dishonor, to give due notice to the indorsers, so that the security of the holder shall not be lost or essentially impaired by the discharge of indorsers." The bank must use due diligence in taking all necessary steps, by presentment, demand, protest, and notice, to fix the liability of all the parties to whom its principal has a right to resort for payment; and if the bank fail in any of these duties, it becomes liable in damages. Bank of Mobile v. Huggins, 3 Ala. 206; Merchants' Nat. Bk. v. Stafford Nat. Bk., 44 Conn. 567; Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 215; Montgomery Co. Bank v. Albany City Bank, 7 N. Y. 460; First Nat. Bk. v. Fourth Nat. Bk., 77 N. Y. 320; Blanc v. Mutual Nat. Bk., 28 La. Ann. 921. And it will be no defence that the bank was unaccustomed to undertake collections, and that its error arose from ignorance of the ordinary course of proceedings. Ivory v. Bank of State, 36 Mo. 475. See also Georgia Nat. Bk. v. Henderson, 46 Ga 493.

Instructions given to the bank taking the note or bill for collection, where the collection is to be made in a distant place, must be transmitted to its correspondent. Borup v. Nininger, 5 Minn. 523.

Demand of Payment.—Neglect by a bank having a note for collection to make demand of payment, whereby the indorser is discharged, renders the bank liable. Durnford v. Patterson, 12 Am. Dec. 514; Thompson v. Bank of S. Car., 3 Hill (S. Car.), 77; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 354; Branch Bank v. Knox, 1 Ala. 148. See also Bank of Delaware Co. v. Broomhall, 38 Pa. St. 135; Georgia Nat. Bk. v. Henderson, 46 Ga. 487; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 590.

If a note is payable at the bank to which it is indorsed for collection, no demand is necessary. Goodloe v. Godley, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 233.

Bank's Liability for Money Collected.—After collection, the bank may either keep the money separate from its other funds, as a special deposit, for which it will be liable as a mere bailee, after notice to the owner—Marine Bank v. Fulton Bank, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 252—or it may place the amount to the depositor's credit, and mingle it with its other funds, when it will be liable to the holder as a simple contract debtor. Tinkham v. Heyworth, 31 Ill. 519; Jockusch v. Towsey, 51 Tex. 129; In re West of England Bank, L. R., 11 Ch. Div. 772.

Liability of Banks for the Defaults of their Correspondents.—How far the bank is liable for the negligence of a correspondent bank to which it has sent commercial paper to be collected is a question upon which there is a great conflict of authority. It is held, on the one hand, that the bank first receiving the paper is answerable for the neglect, omission, or other misconduct of the bank or agent it may employ, following the general rule of law that an agent is liable for the acts of a sub-agent employed by him. This is the doctrine established by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the courts of New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, and several other States, and the courts of England. Exchange Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 276; Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 215 (reversing s. c., 15 Wend. 482); s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 289; Smedes v. Utica Bank, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 384; Montgomery Bank v. City Bank, 7 N. Y. 459; Commercial Bank v. Union Bank, 11 N. Y. 203; Ayrault v. Pacific Bank, 47 N. Y. 570; Titus v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 6 Vroom (N. J.), 588; Reeves v. State Bank, 8 Ohio St. 465; Tyson v. State Bank, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 225; Abbott v. Smith, 4 Ind. 452; Kent v. Dawson Bank, 11 Blatchf. (C. C.) 237; Van Wart v. Woolley, 3 Barn. & Cress. 439; Mackersy v. Ramsays, 9 Cl. & Fin. 818.

In Exchange Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 276, a bank in Pittsburg sent to a bank in New York for collection a number of unaccepted drafts bearing different dates, payable in four months, drawn on Walter M. Conger, Secretary Newark Tea Tray Co., Newark, N. J. The New York bank sent them for collection to a bank in Newark, and in its letter of transmission recognized them as drafts on the company. The Newark bank took acceptance from Conger individually on his refusal to accept as secretary, but no notice of that fact was given to the Pittsburg bank until after the first draft had matured. At that time the drawers and an indorser had become insolvent, having been in good credit when the Pittsburg bank discounted the drafts. Held, that the New York bank was liable for the negligence of its agent, the Newark bank. Mr. Justice Blatchford said: "The bank is not merely appointed an attorney, authorized to select other agents to collect the paper. Its undertaking is to do the thing, and not merely to procure it to be done. In such case the bank is held to agree to answer for any default in the performance of its contract; and whether the paper is to be collected in the place where the bank is situated, or at a distance, the contract is to use the proper means to collect the paper, and the bank, by employing sub-agents to perform a part of what it has contracted to do, becomes responsible to its customer."

In Titus v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 6 Vroom (N. J.), 588, 596, Chancellor Zabriskie says: "A dealer who deposits a draft on a distant city, in a bank in his own town, has no choice of their agent or correspondent. It is the business of a bank to provide proper agents or correspondents for this service, when they adopt it, as most banks do, as part of their regular business. If they have no such correspondent, they should refuse to take paper for collection, and then the holder could choose whether he would leave it for transmission. He would then be led to inquire about the agent to whom it would be transmitted. The English and New York rule is much better adapted to the convenient dispatch of business. It is no hardship on the bank; it can always look to its correspondent bank to which transmission is made for indemnification from its neglect."

But it is held, on the other hand, that the liability of a bank taking a note or bill for collection which is payable at a distance extends merely to the selection of a suitable and competent agent at the place of payment, and to the transmission of the paper to such agent with proper instructions, and that the correspondent bank is the agent of the holder, and that the transmitting bank is not liable for the defaults of its correspondent when selected with due care.

This doctrine has been adopted by the courts of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Louisiana, Missouri, and several other States. Fabens v. Mercantile Bank, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 330; Dorchester & Milton Bank v. New England Bank, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 177; East Haddam Bank v. Scovil, 12 Conn. 303; Lawrence v. Stonington Bank, 6 Conn. 521; Mechanics' Bank v. Earp, 4 Rawle. (Pa.) 384; Bellemire v. United States Bank, 1 Miles, 173; 4 Whart. (Pa.) 105; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Alton City Bank, 25 Ill. 243; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 328; Baldwin v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 La. Ann. 13; s. c., 45 Am. Dec. 72; Daly v. Butchers' & Drovers' Bank, 56 Mo. 94. See also Guelich v. National Bank, 56 Iowa, 434; Stacy v. Dane Co. Bank, 12 Wis. 629; Bank of Louisville v. First Nat. Bank, 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 101; Jackson v. Union Bank, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 146.

In Fabens v. Mercantile Bank, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 330, Shaw, C. J., says: "It is well settled that when a note is deposited with a bank for collection which is payable in another place, the whole duty of the bank so receiving the note in the first instance is seasonably to transmit the same to a suitable bank or other agent at the place of payment."

In East Haddam Bank v. Scovil, 12 Conn. 303, 313, the court say: "The bill was payable in the city of New York. It was necessary that it should be transmitted to the latter place for collection. These were facts known to the defendant, who also must have known that the plaintiffs could do no more than transmit to the city of New York to a reputable correspondent, and according to their usual course of business, to be collected. All this was done by the plaintiffs. Under such circumstances it cannot justly be claimed that the plaintiffs should have become insurers against the defaults of their correspondents. Such a doctrine would be as inequitable as it might be oppressive and ruinous to banks, who are merely the medium through which the holders of bills and drafts payable in other States transmit them for collection. If they act in good faith in the selection of an agent to protect the interests of the holder of the bill, in cases where it is obvious an agent must be selected for that purpose, what principle of justice or commercial policy requires that they should be held liable for any neglect of duty on the part of such agent?"

Mr. Morse, in his work on Banks, approves the latter doctrine, while Mr. Daniel, in his work on Negotiable Instruments, prefers the former. See Morse on Banks (2d Ed.), 414; 1 Daniel on Negotiable Instruments (3d Ed.), sec. 342.

Liability of Banks for the Defaults of their Notaries.—The weight of authority is that banks are not liable for the default of the notaries whom they employ, provided they use due negligence in their selection. Warren Bank v. Suffolk Bank, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 582; Citizens' Bank v. Howell, 8 Md. 530; Britton v. Nicolls, 104 U. S. 757; Baldwin v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 La. Ann. 13; Bellmire v. Bank of U. S., 4 Whart. (Pa.) 105. Compare Miranda v. City Bank, 26 Am. Dec. 493; Thompson v. Bank of South Carolina, 3 neglect of duty will be the amount of actual loss the party interested has sustained.[1]

6. Bank Officers.—The officers of a bank are held out to the public as having authority to act according to the general usage, practice, and course of business of such institutions, and their acts, within the scope of such usage, practice, and course of business, bind the bank in favor of third persons, having no knowledge to the contrary.[2]

Directors.—The directors of a bank have the general control and government of its affairs and constitute the corporation.[3]

Hill (S. Car.), 77; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 354; Geerhardt v. Savings Inst., 38 Mo. 60; Ayrault v. Pacific Bank, 47 N. Y. 570.

The ground upon which some of these decisions rest is that the notary is a public officer in whose competency and integrity the bank has a right to trust. Hyde v. Planters' Bank, 17 La. 560; Baldwin v. Bank of La., 1. La. Ann. 13; Agricultural Bank v. Commercial Bank, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 592.

In New York a distinction appears to be made between the official and non-official acts of the notary, and the bank is held liable for the default of its notary in any matter which is not part of his official duty. Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 215. See also Ayrault v. Pacific Bank, 47 N. Y. 570.

In Bowling v. Arthur, 34 Miss. 41, it was held that it was not sufficient proof of a notary's unfitness to show that he was a man of habitually dissipated character, but that it must be shown "that he was drunk at the time he took the note." See also Agricultural Bank v. Commercial Bank, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 592.

1. Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Tyson v. State Bank, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 225; McKinster v. Bank of Utica, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 46; s. c., 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; Bank of Mobile v. Huggins, 3 Ala. 206; Merchants' Bank v. Stafford Bank, 44 Conn. 567.

It is not within the scope of the collecting bank's agency to bring suit upon paper left with it for collection. Crow v. Mechanics', etc., Bank, 12 La. Ann. 692. See also Wetherill v. Bank of Pa., 1 Miles (Pa.), 399

2. Story on Agency (8th Ed.), sec. 114; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46, 70; Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 360; Frankfort Bank v. Johnson, 24 Me. 490; Cooke v. State Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 96.

3. Burrill v. Nahant Bank, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 163; United Society of Shakers v. Underwood, 9 Bush (Ky.), 609, 616. See also McDougald v. Bellamy, 18 Ga. 411.

In Bank of Pittsburgh v. Whitehead, 10 Watts (Pa.), 397; s. c., 36 Am. Dec. 186, Gibson, C. J., says: "The government of a bank resides in a select body, called president and directors; and no matter how the duties of its individual members may be parcelled out among themselves, it is still the president and directors in the aggregate with whom strangers have to do, and by whom all corporate acts are to be performed."

The directors may delegate an authority to a committee of their own number to mortgage the real estate of the bank to secure a debt. Burrill v. Nahant Bank, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 163. And may authorize the president and cashier to borrow money or obtain discounts for the use of the bank. Ridgway v. Farmers' Bank, 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 256; Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338.

All discounts are made under the authority of the directors, and it is for them to fix any conditions which may be proper in loaning money. An agreement, therefore, by the president and cashier of a bank that the indorser of a promissory note should not be liable on his indorsement does not bind the bank. Bank of United States v. Dunn, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 51.

The bank is bound by the action of a majority of the board of directors, expressed in the usual mode which they adopt in the transaction of the business of the board. Bank of Middlebury v. Rutland & Washington R. Co., 30 Vt. 159, 169. In this case, Redfield, C. J., observes: "The case shows the express assent of the majority of the board of directors. And the directors, in the absence of restrictions in the charter or by-laws, have all the authority of the corporation itself in the conduct of its ordinary business. And it is not important that this authority be conferred at an assembly of the directors, unless that is the usual mode of their doing such acts. If they adopt the practice of giving a separate assent to the execution of contracts by their agents, it is of the same force as if done at a regular meeting of the board. If this were not so it would lead to very great injustice, for it is notorious that the transaction of the ordinary business of railways, banks, and similar corporations in this country is without any formal meetings or votes of the board." But in Elliot v. Abbot, 12 N. H. 549, it was held that the separate assent of a majority of the directors, without any meeting, is not sufficient to confer upon the cashier authority to do an act which without their authority would be invalid. Parker, C. J., says: "There seems to be no sufficient evidence on which to sustain an indorsement through the acts of the directors. A majority of them assented, it is said, but this was at no regularly notified meeting, nor in fact at a meeting of those who did assent, although that would not have been sufficient to have given it the character of an act of the board. There should have been either the act of all (and it is not settled whether that would be sufficient, unless they met together), or there should have been a stated or regularly notified meeting, at which all might have been present, in which case the act of a majority of a quorum might have been good."

They are bound to exercise ordinary skill and diligence, and are liable for losses resulting from mismanagement of the affairs and business of the bank;[1] but for excusable mistakes concerning the

The relationship existing between the directors and the stockholders is that of trustees and cestuis que trustent. Butts v. Wood, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 181; Cumberland Coal & Iron Co. v. Parish, 42 Md. 598; Commissioners, etc., v. Reynolds, 44 Ind. 509; Eupropean, etc., R. Co. v. Poor, 59 Me. 277. And the directors can only use the funds of the bank for legitimate banking purposes. Frankfort Bank v. Johnson, 24 Me. 490, 502; Bedford R. Co. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 29; Bank of Australasia v. Breillatt, 6 Moore P. C. C. 197.

Directors, apprehensive of a suit from the stockholders dissatisfied with their conduct, cannot legally appropriate money of the bank to the employment of counsel in their defence. Percy v. Millandon, 3 La. 568.

The directors of a bank have authority to make a settlement with the cashier whose accounts exhibit a deficit in the funds. Frankfort Bank v. Johnson, 24 Me. 490.

1. United Society of Shakers v. Underwood, 9 Bush (Ky.), 609; Dunn v. Kyle, 14 Bush (Ky.), 134; Brinckerhoff v. Bostwick, 88 N. Y. 52; Chester v. Halliard, 34 N. J. Eq. 341; Spering's App., 71 Pa. St. 11.

In United Society of Shakers v. Underwood, 9 Bush (Ky.), 609, an action was brought against the former directors of an insolvent bank to hold them individually liable for the loss of certain bonds placed on special deposit with the bank and abstracted and sold by its officers, and the proceeds used in the business of the bank. Held, that if the deposit was lost by reason of the gross negligence or wilful inattention of the directors, they were liable; and further, that if they could have had notice of the conversion of the bonds by the use of the most ordinary diligence and investigation, they were liable; and that paying out the proceeds in the shape of dividends to the stockholders, including themselves, was a ratification of the conversion. The court say: "Bank directors are not mere agents, like cashiers, tellers, and clerks. They are trustees for the stockholders; and as to their dealing with the bank, they not only act for it and in its name, but, in a qualified sense, are the bank itself. It is the duty of the board to exercise a general supervision over the affairs of the bank, and to direct and control the action of its subordinate officers in all important transactions. The community have the right to assume that the directory does its duty, and to hold them personally liable for neglecting it. Their contract is not alone with the bank. They invite the public to deal with the corporation, and when any one accepts their invitation he has the right to expect reasonable diligence and good faith at their hands. . . . It is the duty of bank directors to use ordinary diligence to acquaint themselves with the business of the bank, and whatever information might be acquired by ordinary attention to their duties they may, in controversies with persons transacting business with the bank, be presumed to have. They cannot be heard to say that they were not apprised of facts shown to exist by the ledgers, books, accounts, correspondence, reconcilements, and statements of the bank, and which would have come to their knowledge except for their gross neglect or inattention. . . . If it shall turn out upon the trial of these actions that the ledgers, books, etc., of the bank showed that the special deposits of these appellants were being sold, and that this fact would have been discovered by appellees by the use of ordinary diligence, then the presumption of actual knowledge will arise." The decision in this case has been criticised in Zinn v. Mendel, 9 W. Va. 580, 597, and by Mr. Redfield in 13 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 218.

law, and for errors of judgment when acting in good faith, they are not liable.[1]

In an action under a statute providing that an officer of a bank receiving a deposit with knowledge of its insolvent condition shall be personally liable therefor, it is only necessary to prove that the bank was insolvent. The burden of proof of the want of knowledge of insolvency is on the officer sued. Dodge v. Mastin, 17 Fed. Repr. 660.

Discretionary Powers.—Where the charter leaves it to the discretion of the board of directors to require security or not from the officers, and in the exercise of their discretion they omit to take security from the president and a loss is sustained as the result, the directors are not liable. Williams v. Hilliard, 38 N. J. Eq. 373.

1. Spering's App., 71 Pa. St. 11; Dunn v. Kyle, 14 Bush (Ky.), 134; Godbold v. Branch Bank at Mobile, 11 Ala. 191; Hodges v. New England Screw Co., 1 R. I. 312.

Where the directors have acted in good faith and exercised ordinary diligence, they are not liable to the stockholders for losses sustained by the bank by the fraud and default of the cashier; the directors do not insure the fidelity and honesty of those employed by them. Dunn v. Kyle, 14 Bush (Ky.), 134, 140. The court say: "The experience of life with reference to the selection of directors in banks, and particularly the character of directors now under consideration, is that the directors are selected from the stockholders more on account of their proximity to the banking-house, or the amount of capital invested, than their fitness for the office, and this conclusion is certainly warranted from the facts in this case. The stockholders knew their qualifications for the place, and therefore when the directors undertook to act they agreed to discharge their duties faithfully to the extent of their ability. . . . Bad faith or gross negligence is certainly necessary to render the director liable to a stockholder in a case like this. The directors were interested in the bank as shareholders. Their own interests prompted them to use at least ordinary diligence, and when trusting to the honesty and fidelity of their cashier, and at the same time exercising that character of vigilance that is usual and customary with bank-directors, it cannot be said that there was nevertheless an absence of ordinary care and such bad faith on their part as made them liable to the appellants."

In Godbold v. Branch Bank at Mobile, 11 Ala. 191, it was held that the giving compensation to one of the directors for extra services as an agent of the bank, though unlawful, is not such an act as will expose the directory to liability, if done in good faith and with the honest intention of benefiting the bank. Referring to the responsibility of directors, the court said: "The undertaking implies a competent knowledge of the duties of the agency assumed by them, as well as a pledge that they will diligently supervise, watch over, and protect the interests of the institution committed to their care. They do not in our judgment undertake that they possess such a perfect knowledge of the matters and subjects which may come under their cognizance that they cannot err, or be mistaken, either in the wisdom or legality of the means employed by them. . . . The inevitable tendency of such a rule would be hostile to the end proposed by it, as no man of ordinary prudence would accept a trust surrounded by such perils."

In Spering's App., 71 Pa. St. 13, 24, Sharswood, J., in considering the responsibilities of the directors to the stockholders, states, as the result of all the cases, that "while directors are personally responsible to the stockholders for any losses resulting from fraud, embezzlement, or wilful misconduct or breach of trust for their own benefit and not for the benefit of the stockholders, for gross inattention and negligence by which such fraud or misconduct has been perpetrated by agents, officers, or co-directors, yet they are not liable for mistakes of judgment, even though they may be so gross as to appear to us absurd and ridiculous, provided they are honest and provided they are fairly within the scope of the powers and discretion confided to the managing body."

Directors are not personally responsible for a violation of the charter, where such violation resulted from a mistake as to their powers, provided such mistake did not proceed from a want of ordinary care and prudence. Hodges v. New England Screw Co., 1 R. I. 312.

President.—The president, by virtue of his office, has authority to take charge of the litigation of the bank, and may answer and defend suits against it, and employ counsel in its behalf.[1] His admissions, relative to matters within the scope of his authority, bind the bank.[2]

1. Savings Bank of Cincinnati v. Benton, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 240; American Ins. Co. v. Oakley, 9 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 496; Oakley v. Benevolent Society, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 487; Mumford v. Hawkins, 5 Denio (N. Y.). 355. But see Citizens' Bank v. Keim, 16 Phila 311.

Powers of the President.—In the absence of authority, the president cannot dispose of the cash or credits of the bank for the purpose of settling the demands of its creditors. Gibson v. Goldthwaite, 7 Ala. 282. See also Hoyt v. Thompson, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 320. And he cannot, by virtue of his office, surrender or release any claims of the bank against any one. Olney v. Chadsey, 7 R. I. 224. See also, as to his powers generally, National Bank v. Bennett, 33 Mich. 520; Spyker v. Spence, 8 Ala. 333; Turnpike Road Co. v. Looney, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 550.

Where, however, the president is sometimes permitted by the directors to do acts not within the sphere of his official duties, and is thus held out to the public as having authority to do such acts, the bank will be bound on the ground of implied authority. Hoyt v. Thompson 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 320, 333; Parker v. Donnally, 4 W. Va. 648; Dougherty v. Hunter, 54 Pa. St. 380. And where a usage is shown for the president to draw checks when the cashier is absent, his exercise of the power will be upheld, even though a cashier pro tem. has been chosen. Neiffer v. Bank of Knoxville. 1 Head (Tenn.). 162. See also Fulton Bank v. Canal Co., 4 Paige Ch. (N.Y.) 127.

2. Spalding v. Bank, 9 Pa. St. 28.

He has authority to receive a deposit and issue a certificate, and his statements and representations made when transacting the business are binding upon the bank. Hazleton v. Union Bank of Columbus, 32 Wis. 34, 49.

Compensation of the President.—In the absence of a provision for compensation, either by contract or by a vote of the directors, it is presumed that the services of the president are gratuitously performed. Sawyer v. The Pawners' Bank, 6 Allen (Mass.), 207; Holland v. Lewiston Falls Bank, 52 Me. 564; Olney v. Chadsey, 7 R. I. 224.

In Sawyer v. The Pawners' Bank, 6 Allen (Mass.), 209, the court say they know of no instance "in which the president of a bank has recovered, or even attempted in a suit at law to recover, compensation for his official services, where there was neither a special contract nor some vote of the corporation or of its directors providing for its payment. Such officers are undoubtedly often paid for such services, but always, we believe, under the sanction of some express agreement or some vote of the directors allowing or assenting to it. In the absence of any such provision the presumption would therefore be that the service was gratuitously performed."

Where a statute provides that the directors shall make the president such compensation "as they think reasonble," and no compensation is fixed, he cannot recover pay for his services upon a quantum meruit. Holland v. Lewiston Falls Bank, 52 Me. 564.

Liabilities of the President.—Where the charter provides that the bank shall not at any time be indebted in excess of its paid-up capital, the president is personally liable for the amount of a bill which he indorses when the bank is indebted in excess of that amount. The court, speaking of the president, say: "While there is no evidence of mala fides upon his part, and while no motive of personal gain can be imputed to him, yet he was not only a director, but the chief officer of the company, and a higher degree of diligence is required of the president of a bank than of the other directors. He is expected to exercise a more constant and immediate supervision over its affairs than one who is merely a director. . . If he did know its condition and the provision in its charter and created the indebtedness, then he is certainly liable; and if he did not have such knowledge, then there was such a want of information as was absolutely necessary to the proper performance of his duty, and he is responsible for assuming to act without it." Brannin v. Loving (S. C. Ky.), 6 Ky. Law. Rep. 328, 331; s. c., 20 Cent. L. J. 57. But in Dunn v. Kyle, 14 Bush (Ky.), 142, the liability of the president was placed upon the same footing as that of the directors, and the court say that he should not be held "to a stricter account than the use of ordinary care."

Cashier.—The cashier is the chief executive officer through whom the whole financial operations of the bank are conducted.[1] His acts within the scope of the general usage, practice, and course of business conducted by the bank will bind the bank in favor of third persons possessing no other knowledge.[2] The

The ostensible president of a bank not legally constituted is liable for money lost through the cashier's mismanagement, and cannot escape this liability by showing that he supposed himself the president of a legally constituted bank if he has contributed the influence of his reputation to give undeserved credit to a spurious corporation. Hauser v. Tate, 85 N. Car. 81.

The president is liable for overdrafts which he has directed or allowed. Oakland Bank of Savings v. Wilcox, 60 Cal. 126. And for a loss caused by his permitting a customer to take away for inspection securities of the bank deposited as collateral; and evidence that such was the usual custom among banks, and that the president in so doing acted honestly and with competent skill. is inadmissible. Citizens' Bank v. Wiegand, 12 Phila. Rep. (Pa.) 496.

1. Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 650; Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338; Caldwell v. Mohawk, etc., Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 333; Bissell v. First Nat. Bank of Franklin, 69 Pa. St. 415.

He has charge of all its property, money, securities, and valuable papers. Wild v. Bank of Passamaquoddy, 3 Mason (C. C.), 505; Franklin Bank v. Steward, 37 Me. 519. And the superintendence of its books of accounts. Sturges v. Bank of Circleville, 11 Ohio St. 153; Baldwin v. Bank of Newbury, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 234.

In Morse v. Mass. National Bank, 1 Holmes (C. C.), 209, 211, Shepley, J., says: "The ordinary duties of a cashier are well known. They are to keep the funds, notes, bills, and other choses in action of the bank to be used from time to time for the exigencies of the bank; to receive directly, and through subordinate officers, all moneys and notes of the bank; to surrender notes and securities upon payment; to draw checks; to withdraw funds of the bank on deposit; and generally to transact as the executive officer of the bank the ordinary routine of business."

2. Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46, 70; Matthews v. Mass. National Bank, 1 Holmes (C. C.), 396, 405; Burnham v. Webster, 19 Me. 232; Wakefield Bank v. Truesdell, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 602.

In Lloyd v. West Branch Bank, 15 Pa. St. 172, 174, the court say: "The officers of a bank are held out to the world as having authority to act according to the general usage, practice, and course of the business of such institutions. If it were otherwise there would be no safety for the public in doing business with any one of such institutions; because their charters differ in some respects, and individuals cannot be presumed to carry these documents in their pockets as a vade mecum. Their acts, therefore, within the scope of such usage, practice, and course of business, will bind the corporation in favor of third persons transacting business with them and who did not know at the time that the officer was acting beyond and above the scope of his authority."

And in Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 650, Mr. Justice Swayne says: "The directors may limit his (the cashier's) authority as they deem proper, but this would not affect those to whom the limitation was unknown."

So in Caldwell v. National Mohawk Valley Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 342, Morgan, J., says: "Any verbal understanding between the cashier and the directors will not avail to limit his authority when the acts of the cashier are performed over the counter of the bank, and are of a public character and numerous and long continued. In such a case it is reasonable to presume that they are in conformity with the instructions of the directors." See also Clarke National Bank v. Bank of Albion, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 592; Case v. Bank, 100 U. S. 446, 454.

But in State of Mississippi v. Commercial Bank, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 218, 237, the court make a distinction between the acts of a bank officer and a mere private agent in this that persons dealing with a bank are presumed to know the extent of the agency, because it is limited by the charter or by the proceedings of the directors, which are subject to the inspection of every one.

Powers of the Cashier.—To Collect Debts.—The cashier has authority to take such measures for the security and eventual collection of debts owing to the bank as he may deem proper. Bridenbecker v. Lowell, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Badger v. Bank of Cumberland, 26 Me. 428; Corser admissions and declarations of the cashier in relation to matters

v. Paul, 41 N. H. 24; Bank of Pennsylvania v. Reed, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 101. And may release a debt secured by a mortgage. Ryan v. Dunlap. 17 Ill. 40. But in the absence of special authority he has no power to discharge the surety on a note. Savings Association v. Sailor, 63 Mo. 24. See also Merchants' Bank v. Rudolf. 5 Neb. 527; Bank v. Haskell, 51 N. H. 116. And the cashier, except by special authority or estabilshed usage, has no power to compromise claims due to the bank. This is a power which belongs to the board of directors. Chemical Nat. Bank of N. Y. v. Kohner, 8 Daly (N.Y.), 530.

In the last-cited case the court say: "A cashier is the business officer of a bank, but only in the sense of one who transacts and not of one who regulates or controls its affairs. His duty has reference to daily routine business and not to matters involving discretionary authority, which belongs. unless delegated, to the board of directors; as has been quaintly said, 'they are the minds and he is the hands of the corporation.' . . . It will not be disputed that where a special authority is conferred upon him, or where he acts in conformity with a general usage or an established acquiescence of his board of directors, the bank will be responsible for such acts, though beyond the ordinary scope of his duties. Elwell v. Dode, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 336; City Bank of New Haven v. Perkins, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 420. But where is the proof in this case of authority to compromise a debt, either by resolution, parol. or usage? Such a power, it is said, 'is discretionary, calling oftentimes for the exercise of considerable reflection and a high degree of judgment. It is simply a sacrifice at least of nominal property of the bank, and is a function of the board of directors and not of an executive officer.'" Compare Bank of Pennsylvania v. Reed, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 101, 106.

To Borrow Money.—The cashier has authority to borrow money in the ordinary course of the daily business of the bank, and may bind the bank by a promissory note executed therefor. Ballston Spa Bank v. Marine Bank, 16 Wis. 120; Sturges v. Bank of Circleville, 11 Ohio St. 153; Barnes v. Ontario Bank, 19 N. Y. 152

Other Powers of Cashier.—And to draw checks or drafts upon the funds of the bank deposited elsewhere. Mechanics' Bank v. Bank of Columbia. 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 326; United States v. City Bank of Columbus, 21 How. (U. S.) 356; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Kohner, 8 Daly (N. Y.), 534; Northern Bank v. Johnson, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 88.

The cashier has, also, full charge and control over the specie, notes, bills, and other personal property of the bank. Wild v. Bank of Passamaquoddy, 3 Mason (C. C.),505; Franklin Bank v. Steward.37 Me. 519. And has authority to indorse its negotiable paper and securities. State Bank v. Wheeler, 21 Ind. 90; City Bank v. Perkins, 29 N.Y. 554; Elliott v. Abbott, 12 N. H. 549; Cooper v. Curtis, 30 Me. 488; Pratt v. Topeka Bank, 12 Kans. 570. And transfer its shares of stock. Smith v. Northampton Bank, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 1; Commercial Bank of Buffalo v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348. And conduct its correspondence. New Hope, etc., Bridge Co. v. Phœnix Bank, 3 Comst. (N. Y.) 166; Branch Bank v. Steele, 10 Ala. 915.

The cashier is the proper officer to accept or refuse the account of one who wishes to become a depositor in the bank. Thatcher v. Bank of State of New York, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 121.

He has, also, authority to certify checks drawn on the bank by its customers. Clarke National Bank v. Bank of Albion, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 592; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Butchers & Drovers' Bank, 16 N. Y. 125; Cooke v. State Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 96. Compare Mussey v. Eagle Bank, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 306.

He may also deliver notes to an attorney for collection, and bind the bank for the costs of suit. Eastman v. Coos Bank, 1 N. H. 23. And may employ an attorney to collect a claim, without any resolution of the board of directors, although the board has appointed an attorney to attend to its legal affairs. Root v. Olcott, 42 Hun (N. Y.), 536.

The cashier cannot, however, transfer non-negotiable paper without special authority from the directors. Holt v. Bacon, 25 Miss. 567; Barrick v. Austin, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 241.

Thus, in Holt v. Bacon, 25 Miss. 567, it was held that he could not transfer a judgment belonging to the bank without special authority. And he has no unplied authority to bind the bank by an official indorsement of his individual note. Savings Bank v. Shawnee Co. Bank, 95 U. S. 557; s. c., 3 Dill. (C. C.) 403.

Neither can he appear and defend suits on behalf of the bank, and consequently he cannot answer even where within the scope of his ordinary duties bind the bank.[1] He is bound to exercise reasonable skill and ordinary care and diligence in the performance of his duties.[2]

the bank is summoned as garnishee. Branch Bank v. Poe, 1 Ala. 396. Nor can he execute a mortgage on the real estate of the bank. Leggett v. N. J., etc., Banking Co., 1 Saxton Ch. (N. J.) 541. Nor certify post-dated checks. Clarke Nat. Bank v. Bank of Albion, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 592. Nor bind the bank to indemnify an officer for levying upon property on an execution in favor of the bank. Watson v. Bennett, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 196.

1. Sturges v. Bank of Circleville, 11 Ohio St. 153; Haughton v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Wis. 663; Gould v. Cayuga County Nat. Bk., 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 505. See also Franklin Bank v. Stewart, 37 Me 519; Bank of Monroe v. Field, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 445; Bank of Metropolis v. Jones, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 12.

Thus, in Cochico Nat. Bank v. Haskell, 51 N. H. 116. where the cashier, on inquiry, informed the surety on one of its notes that the same had been paid, with the intention that he should rely upon it, and the surety did so, and was prejudiced thereby, it was held that the bank was estopped to deny that the note was paid.

But the declarations of the cashier not within the scope of his ordinary duties are not binding upon the bank. Merchants' Bank v. Marine Bank, 3 Gill (Md.), 96; United States v. City Bank of Columbus, 21 How. (U. S.) 356; Mapes v. Second Nat. Bank of Titusville, 80 Pa. St. 163.

Thus, his mere admissions of the legality of void debts or the genuineness of forged bills do not bind the bank. Merchants' Bank v. Marine Bank, 3 Gill (Md.), 96; Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. 1.

And where the indorser, before indorsing the note, was told by the cashier that he considered the maker, for whose accommodation the indorsement was made, perfectly good financially, and that he would be safe in indorsing, by which statements the indorsement was procured, it was held that although wilfully false, they did not bind the bank. Mapes v. Second Nat. Bank of Titusville, 80 Pa. St. 163.

If the directors, through inattention or otherwise, suffer him to pursue a particular line of conduct for a considerable period, without objection, the bank will be bound by his acts. Caldwell v. Mohawk, etc., Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 333; City Bank v. Perkins, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 420.

2. Austin v. Daniels, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 299; Commercial Bank v. Ten Eyck, 48 N. Y. 305.

Liabilities of the Cashier.—If he fails to exercise reasonable skill and ordinary care and diligence, and the bank suffers in consequence, he is liable. Commercial Bank v. Ten Eyck. 48 N. Y. 305.

Where the condition of the cashier's bond is that he shall ' well and truly" execute the duties of his office, it includes not only honesty, but reasonable skill and diligence. If the duties are performed negligently or unskilfully, the condition of his bond is broken, and his sureties are liable. Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46; Barrington v. Bank of Washington, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 405; Batchelor v. Planters' Nat. Bank, 78 Ky. 435; American Bank v. Adams, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 303. Compare Union Bank v. Clossey, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 271.

Where a loss occurs to the bank through the cashier's permitting overdrafts, his sureties are liable, although the directors knew of and sanctioned the overdrafts. The directors have no power to sanction overdrafts. Market Street Bank v. Stumpe, 2 Mo. App. 545. See also. as to liabilities of his sureties, Huntsville Bank v. Hill. 1 Stew. (Ala.) 201; Graves v. Lebanon Nat. Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.), 23; Taylor v. Bank of Kentucky, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 568.

A cashier is not liable for erroneous information, given in good faith to a party, respecting the amount of money deposited to his credit by a third person, which mistake causes him a loss. Herrin v. Franklin Co. Bank, 32 Vt. 274.

And where the duty is imposed upon the cashier of carrying on the bank's business, he cannot be held responsible for a neglect of duty in not consulting other officers of the bank or committees whom by the by-laws he is required to consult in making discounts, where such committees hold no meetings, and the officers systematically absent themselves from the performance of their duties. Second Nat. Bank of Oswego v. Burt, 93 N. Y. 233.

Tellers.—Where there is a receiving as well as a paying teller, the former alone has any authority from the bank, by vir-

BAR. (See also ATTORNEYS; COURTS; FINES; PLEADING.)—This word has several meanings. At law, its most common use is in reference to the railing which incloses the place which counsel occupy in courts of justice.[1] In pleading, a special plea constituting a sufficient answer to an action at law.[2] This word is also used in various meanings in common language.[3]

tue of his office, to receive deposits. Thatcher v. Bank of State of New York, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 121; Manhattan Co. v. Lydig, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 377. But in East River Nat. Bank v. Gove, 57 N. Y. 597, the bank employed a paying and a receiving teller, the general duty of the latter being to receive money paid to or deposited in the bank. In his absence other officers or clerks acted in his place. Defendant, having overdrawn his account by mistake, received a letter from the paying teller requesting him to call; he went to the bank, and at the request of the paying teller paid him over the counter the amount required to rectify the error; this was not entered on the books of the bank. It did not appear that the receiving teller was in the bank. In an action to recover the amount overdrawn, held, that the bank was bound by the payment. The court limit and distinguish the cases of Manhattan Co. v. Lydig, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 377, and Thatcher v. Bank of State of N. Y., 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 121, and say: "Banks must be held responsible for the conduct of their officers within the scope of their apparent authority. When one goes into a bank and finds behind the counter one of its officers employed in its business, and upon his demand pays a debt due the bank in good faith, without any knowledge that the officer's authority is so limited that he has no right to receive it, he must be protected, and the bank must be bound by the payment."

A bond for the "faithful" performance of the duties of a teller of a bank is a security for competent skill and ordinary diligence, as well as for integrity in the discharge of the duties of the office. American Bank v. Adams, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 303.

Authorities for Banks and Banking.—Morse on Banks and Banking (2d Ed.); Boone on Corporations; Lawson on Usages and Customs; Powers of Bank Cashiers (L. K. Mihills), 20 Cent. Law. Jour. 126; Personal Liabilities of Bank Officers (L. K. Mihills), 23 Cent. Law. Jour. 172; Responsibility of Banks for their Correspondents and Notaries (Francis B. Patten), 20 Am. Law. Rev. 889; Certificates of Deposit (A. J. Donner), 24 Cent. Law. Jour. 196.

1. Hence the expressions "at bar," "call to the bar," "admitted to the bar," to denote the court itself and the operation of being admitted to practice therein. R. & L. Law Dict. sub voce. The members of the legal profession collectively are figuratively called "the bar" from the place which they usually occupy in court. Burrill's Law Dict. sub voce. So also a case "at bar" is a case presently before the court; a case under argument. See Bresnen v. Bristol, 66 Me. 354, 356.

2. Plea in Bar.—In the old books "bar" frequently means a "plea in bar," and is so called "because it barreth the plaintiff of his action." Co. Litt. 303 b.

A "bar," in a legal sense, is a plea or peremptory exception of a defendant, sufficient to destroy the plaintiff's action. Norton v. Winter, 1 Oreg. 47.

Where a New Jersey statute has defined a "plea in bar" as a "plea that the action is illegal," it was held to limit the general construction given to it in the books of English practice, and not to include the "general issue." Austin v. Nelson, 1 Halst. (N. J.) 381.

3. Saloon and Bar.—The jury doubtless understood the words "saloon and bar," taken in their connection, as meaning dram-shop or grocery. Brockway v. State, 36 Ark. 629, 636.

Barkeeper.—The wages of a "barkeeper" in a tavern are to be considered as servant's wages, and are entitled to a preference, as such, under the intestate act of 19th April, 1794. Boniface v. Scott, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 351.

Crossing the Bar.—On a question of boundary lines it was held "crossing the bar," etc., means passing clear across the width of the bar on the line of low water, and when the western edge or limit of the bar on the line of low water is reached, then a straight line from that point "to the first-mentioned bound" is the true line. Bresnen v. Bristol, 66 Me. 354.

Bar-iron.—Under a policy on all iron, effected on "808 bundles of rods," which provided that insurer should not be liable for any partial loss on bar-iron, the court, Ames, C. J., held that the question was for the jury whether bundles of rods are "bar-iron," saying: "Bar-iron is a term of trade, including, it may be, what those out of the trade would not deem to be 'bars of iron,' and excluding, it may be, what they would. At all events, this is a question of facts, and as such could not properly be decided by the court. If, as terms of trade, 'bar-iron' and 'bundles of rods' meant, in general, different forms of iron, it was certainly not for the court to say that in the clause in question the one nevertheless included the other, because it was within the same reason. The court, as a matter of law, cannot know that they are within the same reason; and if the judge did, as a matter of fact, he must nevertheless leave it to the jury." Evans v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 6 R. I. 47, 53. See U. S. v. Sarchet, Gilpin (U. S.), 273, 292.

BARE.—Mere; unaccompanied; naked; nothing more.[1]

BARGAIN.—Arrangement of terms upon which one party buys and another sells anything; any agreement or stipulation.[2]

1. Bare Trustee.—Jessel, M. R., after commenting on the opinions as to the meaning of the words "bare trustee" in the act of Parliament expressed by Messrs. Dart and Barber in their book (5th Ed. 517), and by Vice-Chancellor Hall in Christie v. Ovington, said that his own conclusion on the meaning of the expression was different. He should have thought, from the analogy of the bankruptcy, that the term "bare trustee" meant a trustee without a beneficial interest. Whether trustees who had active duties to perform were or were not "bare trustees" it was unnecessary to decide; but his lordship was clear in his opinion that a trustee who had a beneficial interest was not a "bare trustee" within the meaning of the act. The present case was one of an unpaid vendor, who was not bound to convey until he had been paid the purchase-money, and who had a lien on the estate for that money. It was impossible that such a man could be properly described as a "bare trustee" within section 48 of the Land Transfer Act, 1875, and his lordship should decline so to hold. Morgan v. Swansea Urban Sanitary Authority, 27 Weekly Reporter, 283.

The opinion of Messrs. Dart and Barber cited above is as follows: The act does not define what is meant by a "bare trustee" in §§ 5 and 6 of the 37 and 38 Vict. c. 78; and the term is generally considered to be ambiguous; but it will probably be held to mean a trustee to whose office no duties were originally attached, or who, although such duties were originally attached to his office, would, on the requisition of his cestuis que trustent, be compellable in equity to convey the estate to them or by their direction, and has been requested by them so to convey it. Dart on Vendors and Purchasers (5th Ed.), 517.

The opinion of Vice-Chancellor Hall cited above is as follows: "Where there is a trustee to convey, and the time has arrived for conveyance by him, the person to convey is a 'bare trustee,' whether considered in reference to the Vendor and Purchaser Act of 1874 or the Land Transfer Act of 1875." Christie v. Ovington, 24 Weekly Reporter, 204; s. c., L. R. 1 Ch. Div. 279.

Bare Naked Lie.—In a case in which the court held that a false affirmation made by the defendant with intent to defraud the plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff receives damage, is the ground of an action upon the case in the nature of deceit, Judge Buller said: "But it is contended that this is a 'bare naked lie;' that as no collusion is charged, it does not amount to a fraud; and if there were any fraud, the nature of it is not stated. And it was supposed by the counsel who originally made the motion [in arrest of judgment] that no action could be maintained, unless the defendant, who made this false assertion, had an interest in so doing. I agree that an action cannot be supported for telling a 'bare naked lie;' but that I define to be, saying a thing which is false, knowing or not knowing it to be so, and without any design to injure, cheat, or deceive another person." Parley v. Freeman, 3 Term Reports (Durnford and East), 51, 56.

2. A memorandum signed by the defendants whereby they agreed to give so much for goods was held to take the case out of the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, 29 Car. 2, c. 3, which reads: "No contract for the sale of any goods, etc., shall be allowed to be good except the buyer shall accept, etc., or give something in earnest to bind the bargain;" the court, Ellenborough, C. J., observing that the words of the statute were satisfied if there were "some note or memorandum in writing of the bargain signed by the parties to be charged by such contract." And this was a memorandum of the bargain, or at least of so much of it as was sufficient to bind the parties to be charged therewith, and whose signatures to it is all that the statute requires. Egerton v. Matthews et al., 6 East, 307. This case was distinguished from one under the 4th clause of the same statute, in which it was held that no person can by the Statute of Frauds be charged upon any promise to pay the debt of another unless the agreement upon which the action is brought, or some note or memorandum thereof, be in writing, in the 17th clause the word "bargain" being used, and in the 4th "agreement;" by which word "agreement" must be understood the consideration for the promise as well as the promise itself. Wain v. Walters, 5 East, 10.

The difficulty of reconciling these two cases has not been allowed to pass in silence. Thus in a Massachusetts case Chief Justice Parsons says: "These two decisions are not easily to be reconciled. A 'bargain' is a contract or agreement between two parties, the one to sell goods or lands, and the other to buy them. A contract of this sort is void in law unless made on sufficient consideration. And the consideration of a 'bargain' seems to be as necessary a part of it as of any other contract or agreement; and there is the same danger of perjury in proving the consideration of a 'bargain' by parol as of any other agreement. But if the word 'agreement' may be understood in the popular sense, as intending the undertaking the party charged, and as not necessarily including the consideration for it, we may approve of the decision in the latter case, while we may doubt as to the former case." Hunt, Admr., v. Adams, 5 Mass. 358.

In commenting on these cases Parker, C. J., said: "If the word 'agreement' imports a mutual act of two parties, surely the word 'bargain' is not less significative of the consent of two. In a popular sense the former word is frequently used as declaring the engagement of one only. A man may agree to pay money or to perform some other act; and the word is then used synonymously with 'promise' or 'engage.' But the word 'bargain' is seldom used unless to express a mutual contract or undertaking. If, then, the technical meaning of the word 'agreement' made it necessary to insert the consideration in a collateral promise to pay, why not the word 'bargain' also, as Lord Ellenborough at first supposed? But the court, Lord Ellenborough consenting, overruled the decision at nisi prius, and decided that a contract for the sale of goods was valid without any consideration expressed in the contract. Packard v. Richardson et al., 17 Mass. 122, 131; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 123.

So in a Connecticut case Hosmer, C. J., after discussing at large the meaning of the word "agreement," says: "In the case of Egerton v. Matthews et al., 6 East, 307, it became necessary to fix the meaning of the term 'bargain' in the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds: and, with Lord Ellenborough at their head, the court determined that this word was not coextensive with 'agreement,' and that the consideration of the contract need not be in writing. To this opinion I cannot accede. The word 'bargain' is equivalent to the expression 'mutual agreement;' and if I were disposed to make a diversity of signification between the two words under consideration, I should be inclined to say that the term 'bargain' more prominently brings into view the mutuality of contract between parties than the word 'agreement.' If the determination in Egerton v. Matthews was right, I am persuaded that the decision in Wain v. Walters was wrong." Sage v. Wilcox, 6 Conn. 81, 91.

Corrupt Bargain.—On a petition that the applicant might be substituted as petitioner for the petitioners in each of two election cases, and that the deposit made in each case might remain "as security" for any costs that might be incurred by him as directed by the Controverted Elections Act of 1874, sec. 54, and ch. 10, sec. 2, of the act of 1875, supported by affidavits that the petitioners were about to withdraw by reason of a corrupt "bargain" or consideration, which affidavits were denied by the affidavits of the petitioners in answer, the court, Wilson, C. J., said: "Upon the facts stated in the affidavits filed on behalf of the parties who showed cause to the rule that the parties made an agreement by which the petitions 'shall be allowed to lapse,' each petitioner withdrawing the charges by him respectively preferred, was an illegal 'bargain.' They were public prosecutions, not private suits, and the parties after originating them on behalf of the public have no longer any personal control over their final settlement. In law, whatever the motives and intentions of the parties may have been, such a bargain would be esteemed a 'corrupt bargain.' But that is not all which we would have to consider. The statute does not say that any agreement to compound or withdraw from an election petition shall, for the purpose of retaining the deposit money to enable the petition to be carried on by the substituted party, be deemed to be a corrupt bargain, although prima facie it certainly would be so; but that the deposit money may be ordered to remain for the benefit of the substituted party 'if the proposed withdrawal is, in the opinion of the court, induced by any corrupt bargain or consideration.' That is, it is left to the court to inquire into and determine what the motives and intent of the parties were, as a matter of fact, in making such an arrangement, and not to deal with the motives and intent as a matter of presumption and inference of law which cannot be rebutted. If the parties have violated the general law, they may be made to answer for it; but before their money can be taken from them and delivered over to another to disport with it as he pleases, the fact of a 'corrupt bargain' must be proved and not inferred from the mere act itself." In re Kingston Election Case, 30 N. C. C. P. 389.

BARGAIN AND SALE. See SALE.

BARGE.—A large boat for pleasure or for state occasions; a flat-bottomed boat for burdens.[1]

Bargain For.—A power of attorney "to sell, dispose of, contract, and bargain for land, etc., and to execute deeds, contracts, and bargains for the sale of the same," did not authorize a relinquishment of the land in question to the State of Kentucky under an act of the legislature which allowed persons who held lands subject to taxes to relinquish and disclaim their title thereto; because, says the court, Story, J.: "The language here used is precisely that which would be used in cases of intended sales or contracts of sale of the land for a valuable consideration to third persons in the ordinary course of business. In the strict sense of the term a relinquishment of the lands to the State under the act of 1794 is not a sale." Clarke's Lessee v. Courtney, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 319, 347.

Close the Bargain.—A broker who is empowered to "close the bargain" for the sale of real estate is not authorized to sign the name of his principal to a contract for the sale of property. In this case the court, Mitchell, J., says: "In dealing in real estate the authority to sign the contract is never understood to be granted from a mere authority to make a bargain." Coleman v. Garrighes, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 60.

Contracts, Bargains, and Agreements.—These words used in the charter of an insurance company by which "all contracts, bargains, agreements, policies, and other instruments" are required to be in writing and signed by the president, etc., have reference only to executed contracts or policies of insurance, and not to the initial or preliminary arrangements for insurance which precede the execution of the formal instrument by the officers of the company. Insurance Company v. Colt, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 560.

1. Where a limited-liability act which provided for a limitation of the liability of the owners of vessels, as common carriers, for injuries to passengers or merchandise, had this restriction (U. S. Rev. Stat. 4289): "This act shall not apply to the owners of any canal-boat, barge, or lighter, or to any vessel of any description whatsoever used in rivers or inland navigation:" it was held that this act only applied to vessels engaged in what is ordinarily known as maritime commerce, and therefore the owners of a small steam pleasure yacht, engaged in navigating the Detroit river, running in and out of the port of Detroit, was not entitled to the benefits of the act. For, said the court, Brown, D. J.: "The act is limited by the intention of Congress in enacting it, which was to encourage commerce and to enable American vessels to compete with those of other maritime nations, whose laws extended a like protection to shipowners." "The exceptions in the act itself indicate the intention of Congress to restrict its benefits to what is generally known as maritime commerce, though it may also happen to be commerce between the States. They are: (1) "Canal-boats." These are ordinarily, though not always, used upon artificial waters, within the limits of a single State. (2) "Barges" were defined by Webster in his dictionary of 1851, the year the act was passed, as (a) "pleasure boats, or boats of state, furnished with elegant apartments, canopies, and cushions, equipped with a band of rowers, and decked with flags and streamers used by officers or magistrates;" and (b) "a flat-bottomed vessel of burden for loading and unloading of ships." In the latter sense it was undoubtedly used by Congress, and in that sense barges are synonymous with lighters, and are used wholly in local navigation. In later years the word has been used to designate a class of large vessels, sometimes costing from $15,000 to $50,000, carrying large cargoes, and depending for their motive power wholly or in part upon steamers to which they are attached by tow-lines, and employed to a very large extent in interstate commerce upon the lakes. Whether the owners of such large barges would not be entitled to the benefit of the limited-liability act is an open question. Undoubtedly they are within the letter of the exception, but as they are a class of vessels which were unknown at the time the act was passed, it would seem they are not within its spirit. I see no reason in principle why they are not as much within the act as the propellers which furnish them their motive power. It is possible, however, that the use of the word 'barges' in the Revised Statutes of 1873 may indicate an intention on the part of Congress to extend the exemption to this class of vessels, etc." The Mamie, 5 Fed. Repr. 813.

BARLEY.—A kind of grain or corn.[1]

Where a marine policy upon a vessel described as a "steam barge" was warranted by the assured "to be free from any contribution by jettison of property laden on deck of any sail vessel or barge," and there was nothing else in the policy as to the vessel insured carrying a deck load, it was held that the barge mentioned in the policy did not mean the insured vessel, nor did it refer to a steam barge. Steinhoff v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 42 N. C. Q. B. 307.

A canal boat laden with coal for transportation, having on board the master with his family, is not a "barge carrying passengers" within the meaning of section 4492 of the Revised Statutes, which requires that such a barge, while in tow of a steamer, shall be provided with fire-buckets, axes, life-preservers, and yawls. Transportation Line v. Cooper, 99 U. S. 79.

1. Where an indictment, under the statute of 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 30. s. 17, in which the words creating the offence are "any stack of corn or grain," charged a party with setting fire to a stack of barley, the indictment was held good; the court, Patteson, J., saying: "The only question is whether I am bound to take judicial notice that barley is either corn or grain." Rex v. Swakkies, 4 C. & P. 548, 552. Appended to this case is the following note: "It may be proper to observe that barley is mentioned as corn in several acts of Parliament which relate to the importation of corn; for example, by the stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 26. s. 3, it is enacted that foreign corn, meal, or flour may be imported for home consumption, 'whenever the average prices of the several sorts of British corn made up and published in the manner now by law required shall be at or above the prices hereafter mentioned, that is to say, whenever wheat shall be at or above the price of eighty shillings per quarter; whenever rye, peas, and beans shall be at or above the price of fifty-three shillings per quarter; when-barley, beer, or bigg shall be at or above the price of forty shillings per quarter; and whenever oats shall be at or above the price of twenty-seven shillings per quarter.'" See also Robinson v. U. S., 13 Wall. 363

Prime Barley.—In a contract for the delivery of barley, the quality called for may be ascertained by mercantile usage of the terms employed; and the parties are presumed to use them according to the meaning attached to them by the mercantile community. This case was on a contract for the delivery of 3000 bushels of "prime barley." The main question before the court and jury was in relation to the words "prime barley." There was testimony tending to show the distinctions used among merchants in the quality of barley. These were choice, prime, good, fair, and inferior. The proof showed that the first quality was called choice, the next prime, etc. These distinctions were clearly shown by the testimony of merchants who had been in the habit for years of trading in this and other grains. There also was some evidence on the part of the brewers which tended to show that they used the word "prime" in relation to "barley" as the first quality. Upon this evidence the court left the question to the jury, who found for the plaintiff, holding that "prime barley" was not first-quality barley. Whitmore & Pegram v. Coats, 14 Mo. 9.

Seed Barley.—In an action for a breach of warranty in a sale of certain seed barley, the plaintiff contended that "seed barley" implied such a description of barley as when sown would produce a crop of barley available for malting purposes. The defendant contended that "seed barley" implied no more than that the barley when sown would produce a crop. The learned judge, Pollock, C. B., was of opinion that there was no evidence; that "seed barley" meant any particular kind of barley, and nonsuited the plaintiff. A rule taken to set aside the nonsuit was discharged, Martin, B., saying: "I think that 'seed barley' means barley ordinarily sown by farmers and which will produce seed." Bramwell, B.: "The ordinary meaning of 'seed barley' is barley which will germinate. If by a custom in the trade 'seed barley' means anything more, viz., barley used for malting purposes, that ought to have been proved." And finally, Pollock, C. B., said: "At the trial I was of opinion, and still think, that if a party seeks to make out that certain words used in a contract have a different acceptation from their ordinary sense, either for the purposes of trade, or within a certain market or a particular county, he must prove it; not by calling witnesses, some of which say it is one way and some the other, and then leaving it to the jury to say which they believe, but by clear, distinct, and irresistible evidence." Carter v. Crick, 4 H. & N. 412.

BARN.—A building for containing grain, hay, and other produce of a farm, and also for stabling cattle.[1]

1. The cases in which this word has been construed have been chiefly those arising upon an indictment for arson, wherein decisions have been given as to whether the building burned was or was not a barn.

Thus upon an indictment for the felonious burning of a barn with grain or corn in it, it was held that a prisoner cannot be convicted upon proof that he burnt a crib with corn in it; and a new trial was granted. State v. Laughlin, 8 Jones Law (N. Car.), 354. At the second trial the jury found a special verdict as follows: "That the prisoner did burn a house sitting on blocks, built of logs and roofed in, with good floor, and door fastened with padlock, seventeen feet long by twelve feet wide, with two rooms, one about three times as large as the other—the small room used for storing the nubbins or refuse corn, the other used for storing the peas, oats, or other products of the farm." It was held that this was not a barn within the meaning of the statute, Rev. Code (N. Car.), chap. 34, sec. 2, the burning of which is made a felony. In this case the court, Battle, J., said: "Our statute upon which the indictment in the present case is founded is as highly penal as any known to our law, and must therefore receive a construction which will prevent the possibility of the prisoner's losing his life for an offence not within the contemplation of the legislature. He is charged with burning a barn, and the special verdict finds that he burnt a house of the description therein particularly set forth. If such a house be a barn, he is guilty; if not, he is not guilty. In Webster's Dictionary, a barn is said to be 'a covered building for securing grain, hay, flax, and other productions of the earth.' Bouvier, in his Law Dictionary, defines it to be 'a building on a farm, used to receive the crop, the stabling of animals, and other purposes.' The house described in the special verdict certainly does not come within the meaning of either of these definitions; but it does come within the meaning of a crib, which, according to Webster, is a term used in the United States to signify 'a small building, raised on posts, for storing Indian corn,' or a granary, which, according to the same authority, is 'a store-house or depository of grain, after it is threshed; a corn-house.'" State v. Laughlin, 8 Jones Law (N. Car.), 455. Following this it was held by the same judge, Battle, J., that a house eighteen feet long, built of logs notched up, the cracks covered inside with rough boards, roofed with rough boards, with a good plank floor, and a door about four feet high, containing, at the time of the burning, a quantity of corn, peas, and oats, though the only building on the farm used for storing the crop, is not a barn within the meaning of the statute. Rev. Code, chap. 34, sec. 2; State v. Jim (a slave), 8 Jones Law (N. Car.), 459.

A building intended for, and constructed as, a dwelling-house, but which had not been completed or inhabited, and in which the owner had deposited straw and agricultural implements, was held not to be a house, out-house, or barn within the meaning of the statute 9 Geo. I. c. 22, s. 7, so as to entitle the owner to maintain an action against the hundred for an injury sustained by him in consequence of malicious setting fire to the same. Elsinore v. Inhabitants of the Hundred of St. Briavells, 8 B. & C. 461.

Barn of Another.—Under a statute which made it arson to set fire to the dwelling-house or barn of another, it was held that the burning of an unfinished house or barn in process of construction which had never been actually occupied or used for the purposes for which it was being erected was not included. State v. Wolfenberger, 20 Ind. 242.

On the other hand, a building of hewn logs (twenty-six feet by fifteen), divided by a partition of the same, upon one side of which were horses, and upon the other corn, oats, and wheat (threshed and unthreshed), also hay, fodder, etc., having sheds adjoining, under which were wagons and other farming utensils, is a barn within the meaning of that word in the Rev. Code, chap. 34, sec. 2, punishing with death the burning of barns having grain in them. In this case the court, Pearson, C. J., said: "The building described by the witness is a barn, both according to the legal acceptation of the BARRATRY.—Criminal Law.—A barrator is defined to be a common mover, exciter, or maintainer of suits or quarrels either in courts or in the country, and it is said not to be material whether the courts be of record or not, or whether such quarrels relate to a disputed title or possession or not; but that all kinds of disturbances of the peace, and the spreading of false rumors and calumnies, whereby discord and disquiet may grow amongst neighbors, are as proper instances of barratry as the taking or keeping possession of lands in controversy. But a man is not a barrator in respect of any number of false actions brought by him in his own right, unless, as it seems, such actions should be entirely word and also its popular meaning. Ask any man if this building is a barn. He will reply: 'If it is not one, I don't know what you would call a barn.' The circumstance that a part of the building was used as a stable does not affect its character as a barn. Indeed that is usually the case in the middle and western parts of the State. Some people are not fortunate enough to have a barn; as an old out-house used to keep shucks, peas, and nubbins in does not rise to the dignity of a barn in legal acceptation or in common parlance. Laughlin's Case, 8 Jones L. (N. Car.) 454. But in our case there was a substantial building, large enough to hold the horses, and the hay and grain, in the straw and after it was threshed, and also the wagons and other utensils of the farm. It matters not whether the house was built of logs or of stone, or was a frame-house and weather-boarded; such a building is a barn and is under the protection of the law." State v. Cherry, 63 N. Car. 493.

Under the Iowa statute which punishes the wilful and malicious burning of any "barn, stable, out-house, or any building whatever" of another (Rev. Stats. 4226), the court, Wright, J., was of opinion that to constitute a barn within the meaning of this statute it was not necessary that it should be designed or used, in whole or in part, for the storage of hay, corn, or produce of any kind, and at any rate, since the indictment described the property burned as a "certain building there situate called a barn," it might be shown that the structure burned, though but an out-building used solely for sheltering cattle, was in fact called and known as a barn by people in that vicinity; and on such proof the indictment would be sustained. State v. Smith, 28 Iowa, 565.

In Ohio it has been held that a tobacco-house, a building erected upon a farm for the purpose of storing and drying tobacco, and used for that purpose, may be the subject of burglary under the act defining that crime, and may be described in the indictment as a barn; the court saying: "The fact, the building was used for the purpose of storing products of the farm, we think, entitles it to that statutory designation." Ratekin v. State, 26 Ohio, 420.

Contained in a Barn.—Where a policy of insurance covered a phaeton described as "contained in a frame barn," and the phaeton was destroyed by fire while at a carriage-shop undergoing repairs, it was held that the words describing the location of the phaeton constituted a warranty that it would be "contained in a barn" when not absent therefrom for temporary purposes incident to the use and enjoyment of the property. In this case the court said: "The words which are used must be construed with reference to the property to which they are applied. Carriages which are kept for sale and are insured as contained in a certain warehouse could not be removed to a different warehouse without avoiding the policy. There is nothing in the nature of the property to indicate that they will be removed, and the insurance is not made with reference to such fact. But where a person procures a policy upon his horses, harness, buggy, and phaeton, as contained in a certain barn, the presumption must be that they are in use, and that the policy is issued with reference to such use. This doctrine was held substantially not only by this court in Peterson v. Miss. Valley Ins. Co., 24 Iowa, 494, but in Massachusetts in Fitchburg R. Co. v. Charlestown Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.), 64." McCluer v. Girard Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 43 Iowa, 349.

Demise of a Barn.—A demise or conveyance of a barn, without other words being superadded to extend its meaning, will pass no more land than is necessary for its complete enjoyment. Bennet v. Bittle et al., 4 Rawle (Pa.), 339; s. c., 6 Wheeler's Am. Common Law, 408.

groundless and vexatious, without any manner of color. Nor is an attorney a barrator in respect of his maintaining his client in a groundless action, to the commencement of which he was in no way privy.[1]

Shipping.—Any act of the master or of the mariners of a ship which is of a criminal or fraudulent nature, tending to the prejudice of the owners of the ship, without their consent or privity, as by running away with the ship, sinking her, deserting her, or embezzling the cargo. (See SHIPPING.)

BARRATRY, IN MARITIME LAW. See SHIPPING.

BARTER.—A contract by which the parties exchange goods.[2]

1. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 81, §§ 1–4; 1 Russ. Cr. (5th Ed.) 362; Com. v. Davis 11 Pick. (Mass.) 432; Com. v. McCulloch, 15 Mass. 227; R. v. Urlyn, 2 Saund. 308 and note.

Common barratry is the practice of exciting groundless judicial proceedings. N. Y. Penal Code, § 132.

Barratry is a cumulative offence, and the party must be charged as a common barrator. It is, therefore, insufficient to prove the commission of one act only. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 81, § 5. These instances seem necessary. See State v. Chitty, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 379; Com. v. Pray, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 359; Com. v. Davis, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 432; Com. v. Tubbs, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 2; Com. v. Mohn, 52 Pa. St. 243; Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126; Voorhees v. Dorr, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 580; N. Y. Penal Code, § 134. For this reason the prosecutor is bound, before the trial, to give the defendant a note of the particular acts of barratry intended to be insisted on, without which the trial will not be permitted to proceed. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 81, § 13. The prosecution will be confined by these particulars. Goddard v. Smith, 6 Mod. 262.

The punishment of this offence is fine and imprisonment and being held to good behavior, and in persons of any profession relating to the law the further punishment is added of being disabled to practise for the future. Hawk. P. C. b. 1. c. 81, § 14; 34 Edw. III. c. 1; State v. Chitty, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 379.

Common barratry is a misdemeanor. N. Y. Penal Code, § 133.

By the 12 Geo. I. c. 29, § 4, if any person convicted of common barratry shall practise as an attorney, solicitor, or agent, in any suit or action in England, the judge or judges of the court where such suit or action shall be brought shall, upon complaint or information, examine the matter in a summary way in open court, and if it shall appear that the person complained of has offended, shall cause such offender to be transported for seven years. This act was revived and made perpetual by 21 Geo. II. c. 3, which is repealed, but the above enactment is now made perpetual by the repeal of the section which provided for its expiration, viz., the last section of the act.

There must be a corrupt or malicious intent to vex and annoy. N. Y. Penal Code, § 134; Voorhees v. Dorr, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 580; Com. v. McCulloch, 15 Mass. 227.

Information of an outstanding title to land, in the adverse possession of another, constitutes a good consideration for a promissory note, and the sale of such information is not barratrous. Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126.

Where one purchased three promissory notes made by the same person, and left them with an attorney for collection, and the attorney brought three several suits thereon before a justice of the peace (any two of the notes amounting to more than $20), when they might have been joined in one action if brought to the court of common pleas; and the creditor afterwards took the executions, and caused them to be levied under circumstances that indicated a disposition to oppress the debtor, and received the money thereon,—it was held that this conduct, though it constituted an indictable offence, did not make the creditor a common barrator. Com. v. McCulloch, 15 Mass. 229.

A justice of the peace may be indicted as a common barrator for exciting prosecutions for offences; and it is not a sufficient defence that the prosecutions were not groundless, if he excited them with a view of exacting fees for afterwards suppressing them. State v. Chitty, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 379.

2. Speigle v. Meredith, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 123.

The term is not applied to contracts concerning land, but to such only as relate to goods and chattels.[1]

BASE FEE.—A base or qualified fee is such a one as hath a qualification subjoined thereto, and which must be determined whenever the qualification annexed to it is at an end, as in the case of a grant to A and his heirs, tenants of the manor of Dale. In this instance, whenever the heirs of A cease to be tenants of that manor, the grant is entirely defeated.[2]

BASIN.—A part of the sea inclosed in rocks.[3]

BASTARDY. (See also PARENT AND CHILD; POOR AND POOR LAWS.)

1. Definition.—Bastards are persons born out of wedlock, lawful or unlawful, or not within competent time after termination of coverture, or if born out of wedlock, whose parents do not afterwards intermarry and the father acknowledges them, or who are born in wedlock when procreation by the husband is impossible.[4]

1. Speigle v. Meredith, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 123.

Barter and Sell.—In an indictment, an averment that the defendant did unlawfully "barter and sell" certain intoxicating liquor for the price of ten cents was held to import a sale and not a barter, and the word "barter" was regarded as surplusage. Massey v. State, 74 Ind. 368.

A sale differs from a barter in this, that in the latter the consideration instead of being paid in money is paid in goods or merchandise susceptible of a valuation. Com. v. Davis, 12 Bush (Ky.), 241.

2. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. O. & M. Ry. Co., 94 Ill. 93, quoting Bl. Com.

3. U. S. v. Morel, 13 Am. Jur. 286.

4. Smith v. Perry, 80 Va. 563.

A child born out of lawful wedlock. This definition includes all those born of parties under disability; e.g., slaves, who cannot exercise the freedom of consent essential to the contract. Timmins v. Lacy, 30 Tex. 115, 135.

The presumption of law is in favor of legitimacy of children, but it will not be made where the question to be determined is one of fact. Blackburn v. Crawford. 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175; s. c., Bk. 18, L. C. P. 186. See Strode v. Magowan, 2 Bush (Ky.), 621; Canjolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Dinkins v. Samuel, 10 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 66; Vaughan v. Rhodes, 2 McC. (S. Car.) 227; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 713.

The law presumes legitimacy where husband recognizes the child as his, and impossibility of procreation is not established. Smith v. Perry, 80 Va. 563.

The civil law declares that marriage legitimizes children born before marriage. The common law is different: a subsequent marriage does not legitimize such children. Brock v. State, 85 Ind. 397.

In many of the States the subsequent marriage of the parents and acknowledgment works by statute the legitimacy of the child. Ark.: Gresley v. Jackson, 38 Ark. 487; Ga.: Adams v. Adams, 36 Ga. 236; Ind.: Brock v. State, 85 Ind. 397; Ky.: Dannelli v. Dannelli, 4 Bush (Ky.), 51; La.: Succession of Caballero, 24 La. Ann. 573; Talbot v. Hunt, 28 La. Ann. 3; Md.: Hawbecker v. Hawbecker, 43 Md. 516; Mass.. Ross v. Ross, 129 Mass. 243; N. H.: Morgan v. Perry, 51 N. H. 559; Pa.: Brightly's Purdon's Dig. 1004, § 9; Texas: Carroll v. Carroll, 20 Tex. 731; Va.: Sleigh v. Strider, 5 Call (Va.), 439.

A prosecution for bastardy cannot be afterwards instituted and maintained, though the marriage was entered into by the father in bad faith, merely to escape a pending prosecution for bastardy, and then to abandon the mother. Brock v. State, 85 Ind. 397.

A husband is not bound to support a child born before marriage. Overseers v. Cox, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 235; People v. Volksdorf, 112 Ill. 292.

Law of Domicile.—When an illegitimate child has, by the subsequent marriage of his parents, become legitimate by virtue of the laws of the State or country where such marriage took place and the parents were domiciled, it is thereafter legitimate everywhere, and entitled to all the rights flowing from that status, including the right to inherit. Miller v. Miller, 91 N. Y. 315; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 669; Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 505; Ross v. Ross, 129 Mass. 243; Smith v. Kelly, 23 Miss. 170; Scott v. Key, 11 La. Ann. 232; In re Goodman's Trust, L. R. 17 Ch. 266. Compare Lingen v. Lingen, 45 Ala. 410; Smith v. Derr, 34 Pa. St. 126; Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251.

Plaintiff was born illegitimately in Würtemberg, in 1845, where his parents then resided; they removed, with plaintiff, to the State of Pennsylvania, and his father there became a naturalized citizen. In 1853, while domiciled in said State, the parents were married. In 1857 a law was passed by the legislature of that State legitimizing children, born out of wedlock, of parents who shall thereafter marry, which act, by an act of 1858, was made applicable to all cases arising prior to 1857, save where some interest had become vested. In 1862 plaintiff removed, with his parents, to New York; his father thereafter became owner of certain real estate, and in 1875 died seized thereof, and intestate. In an action of ejectment, held, that the provision of the Revised Statutes (1 R. S. 754, § 19) disinheriting illegitimate children did not apply; and that plaintiff was entitled to inherit equally with the children of the deceased born in wedlock. Miller v. Miller, 91 N. Y. 315; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 669.

The status of any person, with the inherent capacity of succession or inheritance, is to be ascertained by the law of the domicile which creates the status, at least when the status is one which may exist under the laws of the State in which it is called in question, and when there is nothing in those laws to prevent giving full effect to the status and capacity acquired in the State of the domicile. Ross v. Ross, 129 Mass. 243.

In this case Gray, C. J., said: "By the rule of the common law, which is the law of England to this day, and formerly prevailed throughout the United States, a child not born in lawful matrimony is not deemed the child of his father, although the parents subsequently intermarry, but is indelibly a bastard. By the rule of the civil law, on the other hand, which has been adopted in Scotland, as well as in France, Germany, and other parts of Europe, and more recently in many States of the Union, such a child may become legitimate upon the subsequent marriage of his parents.

"The leading case in Great Britain on this subject is Shedden v. Patrick, briefly reported in Morison's Dict. Dec. Foreign, Appx. I. No. 6, and more fully in 5 Paton, 194, which was decided by the House of Lords, on appeal from the Scotch Court of Session, in 1808, and in which a Scotchman, owning land in Scotland, became domiciled in New York, and there cohabited with an American woman, had a son by her, and afterwards married her, and died there; and the son was held not entitled to inherit his land in Scotland. Two questions were argued: 1st. Whether the plaintiff, being by the law of the country where he was born, and where his parents were domiciled at the time of his birth and of their subsequent marriage, a bastard, and not made legitimate by such marriage, could inherit as a legitimate son in Scotland, the law of which allows legitimation by subsequent matrimony. 2d. Whether, being a bastard, and therefore nullius filius at the time of his birth in America, he was an alien and therefore incapable of inheriting land in Great Britain; the act of Parliament of 4 Geo. II. c. 21 making only those children, born out of the ligeance of the British crown, natural-born subjects, whose fathers were such subjects 'at the time of the birth of such children respectively.' The Court of Session decided the case upon the first ground. In the House of Lords, after full argument of both questions by Fletcher and Brougham for the appellant and by Romilly and Nolan for the respondent, Lord Chancellor Eldon, speaking for himself and Lord Redesdale, said that, 'as it was not usual to state any reasons for affirming the judgment of the court below, he should merely observe that the decision in this case would not be a precedent for any other which was not precisely the same in all its circumstances,' and thereupon moved that the judgment of the Court of Session should be affirmed, which was accordingly ordered. On a suit brought forty years afterwards by the same plaintiff against the same defendant to set aside that judgment for fraud in procuring it, the House of Lords in 1854, without discussing the first point except so far as it bore upon the question whether there had been any fraudulent suppression of facts relating to the father's domicile, held that the plaintiff was an alien at the time of his birth, and could not be afterward naturalized except by act of Parliament. Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. 535.

"But the remark of Lord Eldon, above quoted, in moving judgment in the original case, and the statements made in subsequent cases by him, by Lord Redesdale, who concurred in that judgment, and by Lord Brougham, who was of counsel in that case, clearly show that the judgment in the House of Lords, as well as in the Court of Session, went upon the ground that the child was illegitimate because the law of the foreign country in which the father was domiciled at the time of the birth of the child and of the subsequent marriage of the parents did not allow legitimation by subsequent matrimony. Lord Eldon's judgment in the Strathmore Peerage Case, 4 Wils. & Sh. Appx. 89–91, 95; s. c., 6 Paton, 645, 656, 657, 662. Lord Redesdale's judgment in s. c., 4 Wils. & Sh. Appx. 93; 94, and 6 Paton, 660, 661; expounded by Lord Lyndhurst, in the presence and with the concurrence of Lord Eldon, in Rose v. Ross, 4 Wils. & Sh. 289, 295–297, 299; s. c. nom., Munro v. Saunders, 6 Btigh N. R. 468, 472–475, 478. Lord Brougham in Doe v. Vardill, 2 Cl. & Fin. 571, 587, 592, 595, 600; s. c., 9 Bligh N. R. 32, 75, 80, 83; in Munro v. Munro, 7 Cl. & Fin. 842, 885; s. c., 1 Robinson H. L. 492, 615; and in Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. 622.

"That decision is wholly inconsistent with the theory that upon general principles, independently of any positive rule of law, the question whether a person claiming an inheritance in real estate is the lawful child of the last owner is to be determined by the lex rei sitæ; for, if that law had been applicable to that question, the plaintiff must have been held to be the legitimate heir; and it was only by trying that question by the law of the domicile of his father that he was held to be illegitimate. The decision receives additional interest and weight from the fact that the case for the appellant (which is printed in 1 Macq. 539–552) was drawn up by Mr. Brougham, then a member of the Scotch bar, and contained a very able statement of reasons why the lex rei sitæ should govern.

"In later cases in the House of Lords, like questions have been determined by the application of the same test of the law of the domicile. In the case of the Strathmore Peerage, 6 Paton, 645, which was what is commonly called a Scotch peerage, having been such a peerage before the union of the two kingdoms, the last peer was domiciled in England, had an illegitimate son there by an Englishwoman, and married her in England; and it was held that by force of the law of England the son did not inherit the peerage. So in Rose v. Ross, 4 Wils. & Sh. 289, where a Scotchman by birth became domiciled in England, and had a son there by an Englishwoman, and afterwards went to Scotland with the mother and son, and married her there, retaining his domicile in England, and then returned with them to England and died there, it was held that the son could not inherit the lands of the father in Scotland, because the domicile of the father, at the time of the birth of the child and of the subsequent marriage, was in England. On the other hand, where a Scotchman, domiciled in Scotland, has an illegitimate son born in England, and afterwards marries the mother, either in England, whether in the Scotch or in the English form, or in Scotland, the son inherits the father's land in Scotland, because, the father's domicile being throughout in Scotland, the place of the birth or marriage is immaterial. Dalhouse v. McDouall, 7 Cl. & Fin. 817; s. c., 1 Robinson H. L. 475; Munro v. Munro, 7 Cl. & Fin. 842; s. c., 1 Robinson H. L. 492; Aikman v. Aikman, 3 Macq. 854; Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441.

"In the well-known case of Doe dem. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 2 Cl. & Fin. 571, it was indeed held by the Court of King's Bench in the first instance, and by the House of Lords on a writ of error, after two arguments, at each of which the judges attended and delivered an opinion, that a person born in Scotland, and there legitimate by reason of the subsequent marriage of his parents in Scotland, they having had their domicile there at the time of the birth and of the marriage, could not inherit land in England. 5 B. & C. 438; 8 D. & R. 185; 2 Cl. & Fin. 571; 9 Bligh N. R. 32; 7 Cl. & Fin. 895; 6 Bing. N. C. 385; 1 Scott N. R. 828; West H. L. 500.

"One curious circumstance connected with that case is, that, under the English usage which allows counsel in a cause, if raised to the bench during its progress, to sit as judges in it, Chief Justice Tindal, who had argued the case for the plaintiff in the King's Bench, gave the opinion of the judges in the House of Lords in accordance with which judgment was finally rendered for the defendant; and Lord Brougham, who had taken part as counsel for the defendant in the first argument in the House of Lords, was most reluctant, for reasons which he stated with characteristic fulness and power, to concur in that judgment. 5 B. & C. 440; 2 Cl. & Fin. 582–598; 7 Cl. & Fin. 924, 940–957.

"But that case as clearly appears by the opinions of Chief Justice Abbott and his associates in the King's Bench, as well as by that of the judges, delivered by Chief Justice Tindal, and those of Lord Brougham and Lord Cottenham, after the rehearing in the House of Lords, was decided upon the ground that, admitting that the plaintiff must be deemed the legitimate son of his father, yet, by what is commonly called the Statute of Merton, 20 Hen. III. c. 9, the Parliament of England, at a time when the English Crown had possessions on the Continent in which legitimation by subsequent matrimony prevailed, had, although urged by the bishops to adopt the rule of the civil and canon law, by which children born before the marriage of their parents are equally legitimate as to the succession of inheritance with those born after marriage, positively refused to change the law of England as theretofore used and approved. The ratio decidendi is most clearly brought out by Mr. Justice Littledale and by Chief Justice Tindal.

"Mr. Justice Littledale said: 'One general rule applicable to every course of descent is that the heir must be born in lawful matrimony. That was settled by the Statute of Merton, and we cannot allow the comity of nations to prevail against it. The very rule that a personal status accompanies a man everywhere is admitted to have this qualification, that it does not militate against the law of the country where the consequences of that status are sought to be enforced. Here it would militate against our statute law to give effect to that status of legitimacy acquired by the lessor of the plaintiff in Scotland. He cannot, therefore, be received as legitimate heir to land in England.' 5 B. & C. 455.

"Upon the first argument in the House of Lords, Chief Baron Alexander, adopting the sentiment and the language of Sir William Scott in Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. 58, 59, 'varied only so far as to apply to a question of legitimacy what was said of a question respecting the validity of a marriage,' said, in the name of all the judges who attended at that argument: 'The cause being entertained in an English court must be adjudicated according to the principles of English law applicable to such a case; but the only principle applicable to such a case by the law of England is that the status or condition of the claimant must be tried by reference to the law of the country where the status originated; having furnished this principle, the law of England withdraws altogether, and leaves the question of status in the case put to the law of Scotland.' The learned Chief Baron added: 'The comity between nations is conclusive to give to the claimant the character of the eldest legitimate son of his father, and to give him all the rights which are necessarily consequent upon that character.' 2 Cl. & Fin. 573–575. The grounds upon which, notwithstanding this, he undertook, without alluding to the Statute of Merton and the practice under it, to maintain that, by the rules of inheritance and descent which the law of England had impressed upon all land in England, the plaintiff could not recover, were so unsatisfactory to the Lords, that Lord Brougham, at that stage of the case, declared that he entertained a very strong opinion that the case was wrongly decided in the court below, and Lord Lyndhurst and Lord Denman concurred in his motion that the case should be reargued. 2 Cl. & Fin. 598–600.

"In delivering the opinion of the judges after the second argument, Chief Justice Tindal said: 'The grounds and foundation upon which our opinion rests are briefly these: That we hold it to be a rule or maxim of the law of England with respect to the descent of land in England from father to son, that the son must be born after actual marriage between his father and mother; that this is a rule juris positivi, as are all the laws which regulate succession to real property, this particular rule having been framed for the direct purpose of excluding, in the descent of land in England, the application of the rule of the civil and canon law, by which the subsequent marriage between the father and mother was held to make the son born before marriage legitimate; and that this rule of descent, being a rule of positive law annexed to the land itself, cannot be allowed to be broken in upon or disturbed by the law of the country where the claimant was born, and which may be allowed to govern his personal status as to legitimacy, upon the supposed ground of the comity of nations.' 7 Cl. & Fin. 925.

"The Chief Justice then proceeded to make an elaborate statement of the provisions of the Statute of Merton, and of the circumstances under which it was passed, particularly dwelling upon the facts that at the time of its passage Normandy, Aquitaine, and Anjou were under the allegiance of the king of England, and those born in those dominions were natural-born subjects and could inherit land in England, and that many of the peers who attended appeared to have been of foreign lineage if not of foreign birth, and were, at all events, well acquainted with the rule of law which was then so strongly contested, 'yet, notwithstanding the rule of the civil and canon law prevailed in Normandy, Aquitaine, and Anjou, by which the subsequent marriage makes the antenatus legitimate for all purposes and to all intents; and notwithstanding the precise question then under discussion was whether this rule should govern the descent of land locally situate in England, or whether the old law and custom of England should still continue as to such land, under which the antenatus was incapable to take land by descent,—there is not the slightest allusion to any exception in the rule itself as to those born in the foreign dominions of the Crown, but the language of the rule is, in its terms, general and universal as to succession of land in England.' And he fortified his position that no such exception was intended, by referring to the forms of writs before and after the passage of the statute, and to Glanville, Bracton, and other early authorities. 7 Cl. & Fin. 926–933.

"It was upon the 'very great new light' thus thrown upon the question, and the 'very important additions' thus made to the former arguments, that Lord Brougham, though not wholly convinced, waived his objections to judgment for the defendant. 7 Cl. & Fin. 939, 943–946, 956. And Lord Cottenham, the only other law lord present, in moving that judgment, said: 'I am extremely satisfied with the ground upon which the judges put it, because they put the question on a ground which avoids the difficulty that seems to surround the task of interfering with those general principles peculiar to the law of England, principles that at first sight seem to be somewhat at variance with the decisions to which the courts have come.' 7 Cl. & Fin. 957. And see Lord Brougham, Lord Cranworth, and Lord Wensleydale in Fenton v. Livingstones, 3 Macq. 497,532, 544,550.

"In the case of Don's Estate, 4 Drewry, 194, Vice-Chancellor Kindersley declared that the general principle was that 'the legitimacy or illegitimacy of any individual is to be determined by the law of that country which is the country of his origin; if he is legitimate in his own country, then all other countries, at least all Christian countries, recognize him as legitimate everywhere;' and that the ground of the decision in Doe v. Vardill was, that, admitting the personal status of legitimacy, the law of England attached to land certain rules of inheritance which could not be departed from. And he therefore held that, assuming that a son born in Scotland before the marriage of his parents domiciled there, and there legitimate in consequence of their subsequent marriage, was legitimate all over the world, at any rate in England, yet, as he could not inherit land in England from his father or from any other person, so no other person could succeed to him by inheritance except his own issue.

"So in Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55, 70. Lord Cranworth said of Doe v. Vardill: 'The opinions of the judges in that case, and of the noble lords who spoke in the House, left untouched the question of legitimacy, except so far as it was connected with succession to real estate. I think they inclined to the opinion that for purposes other than succession to real estate, for purposes unaffected by the Statute of Merton, the law of the domicile would decide the question of status. No such decision was come to, for no question arose except in relation to heirship to real estate. But the opinions given in the case seem to me to show a strong bias towards the doctrine that the question of status must, for all purposes unaffected by the feudal law, as adopted and acted on in this country, be decided by the law of the domicile.'

"In Skottowe v. Young, L. R. 11 Eq. 474, the proceeds of lands in England were devised by a British subject domiciled in France, in trust to sell and to pay the proceeds to his daughters born of a Frenchwoman before marriage, but afterwards legitimated according to the law of France; and it was held by Vice-Chancellor Stuart, in accordance with a previous dictum of Lord Chancellor Cranworth, in Wallace v. Attorney-General, L. R. 1 Ch. 1, 8, that the daughters were not 'strangers in blood' within the meaning of the English legacy duty act. The Vice-Chancellor observed that in Doe v. Vardill the claimant was admitted to have in England the status of the eldest legitimate son of his father, and failed in his suit only because he could not prove that he was heir according to the law of England in which the land was; that this will was that of a domiciled Frenchman, and his status and that of his children must be their status according to the law of France, which, according to Doe v. Vardill, constituted their English status; and that 'the status of these ladies being that of daughters legitimated according to the law of France by a declaration of the father, it is impossible to hold that they are for any purpose strangers in blood, on the mere ground that, if they had been English, and their father domiciled in England, they would have been illegitimate.'

"It may require grave consideration, when the question shall arise, whether the legitimacy of a child, depending upon marriage of its parents or other act of acknowledgment after its birth, should not be determined by the law of the domicile at the time of the act which effects the legitimation, rather than by the law of the domicile at the time of the birth, or even of the marriage, when some other acknowledgment is necessary. See Sir Samuel Romilly's argument in Shedden v. Patrick, 5 Paton, 205; printed more at length in 1 Macq. 556–558; Lord Brougham in Munro v. Munro, 7 Cl. & Fin. 882; s. c., 1 Robinson H. L. 612; Lord St. Leonards in Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. 641; Stevenson v. Sullivant, 5 Wheat. 207, 259; 2 Toullier Droit Civil (5th Ed.), 217; Savigny's Private International Law, § 380; (Guthrie's Ed.) 250 and note, 260.

"These authorities do not appear to have been considered in those English cases in which, under a bequest in an English will to 'the children' of an Englishman who afterwards became domiciled in a foreign country, and there married the mother of his illegitimate children born there, whereby they became legitimate by the law of that country, Vice-Chancellor Wood (afterwards Lord Hatherley) and Vice-Chancellor Stuart were of opinion that those children born before the change of domicile could not take, and differed upon the question whether those born after the change could take, Vice-Chancellor Stuart holding that they could, and Vice-Chancellor Wood holding that they could not. Wright's Trust, 2 K. & J. 595; s. c., 25 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 621; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 465; Goodman v. Goodman, 3 Giff. 643; Boyes v. Bedale, 1 Hem. & Mil. 798; Lord Hatherley in Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, 447. See also Kindersley, V. C., in Wilson's Trusts, L. R. 1 Eq. 247, 264–266; Lord Chelmsford in s. c., nom. Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55, 80. But those opinions proceeded upon the construction of wills of persons domiciled in England; and Vice-Chancellor Wood appears to have admitted that if the father had never been domiciled in England the rule would have been different. Wright's Trust, 25 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 632; s. c., 2 Jur. (N. S.) 472; citing Ashford v. Tustin, before Parker, V. C., reported only in Lovell's Monthly Digest, 1852, p. 389; Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 448.

"The dictum of Vice-Chancellor Wood in Boyes v. Bedale, 1 Hem. & Mil. 805, and the decision of Sir George Jessel, M. R., in the case of Goodman's Trusts, 14 Ch. D. 619, that the word 'children' in the English statute of distributions means only children according to the law of England, and that therefore children born in a foreign country, and legitimated by the law of that country upon the subsequent marriage of their parents there, could not take by representation under that statute as children of their father, although he was domiciled in that country at the time of their birth and of the subsequent marriage, can hardly, as it seems to us, be reconciled with the general current of judicial opinion in England, as shown by the cases already referred to.

"The most accomplished commentators on the subject, English and American, are agreed that the decision in Doe v. Vardill, which has had so great an influence with English judges, does not rest upon general principles of jurisprudence, but upon historical, political, and constitutional reasons peculiar to England. Westlake's Private International Law (ed. 1858), §§ 90–93, (ed. 1880) intro. 9, §§ 53, 168; 4 Phillimore's International Law (2d Ed.), § 538, note; Dicy on Domicile, 182, 188, 191, pref. iv; 2 Kent Com. 117, note a, 209, note a; 4 Kent Com., 413, note d; Story Confl. §§ 87, 87 a and note, 93 i, 93 m; Redfield, in Story Confl. § 93 w and note; Whart. Confl. § 242. Upon questions of comity of States, considerations derived from the feudal law, from an act of Parliament of the time of Henry III., and from the constitution and policy of the English government, have no weight in Massachusetts at the present day.

"Almost fifty years ago the legislature of this commonwealth enacted that children born before the marriage of their parents and acknowledged by their father afterwards, and legitimate children of the same parents, should inherit from each other as if all had been born in lawful wedlock; but did not make such illegitimate children capable of inheriting from their father. St. 1832, c. 147. Whether this was accidental or designed, the commissioners on the revision of the statutes in 1835 reported to the legislature that they had no means to conjecture, not knowing the reasons on which the statute itself was founded, 'the whole of it being an innovation upon the law as immemorially practised and transmitted to us by our ancestors;' and therefore proposed a section making no change in this respect, but only expressing what they supposed to have been the intention of the framers of that statute; 'leaving it to the wisdom of the legislature, if they should think fit to continue this law in force, to modify it in such manner as shall be thought proper.' Report of Commissioners on Rev. Sts. c. 61, § 4 and note.

"The legislature solved the doubt of the learned commissioners by making the statute more comprehensive, and enacting it in this form: 'When, after the birth of an illegitimate child, his parents shall intermarry, and his father shall, after the marriage, acknowledge him as his child, such child shall be considered as legitimate to all intents and purposes, except that he shall not be allowed to claim, as representing either of his parents, any part of the estate of any of their kindred, either lineal or collateral.' Rev. Sts. c. 61, § 4.

"In Loring v. Thorndike, 5 Allen, 257, a testator domiciled in this commonwealth, by a will admitted to probate before the Revised Statutes were passed, bequeathed a sum in trust to pay the income to his son for life, and the principal at his death 'to his lawful heirs.' After the Revised Statutes took effect, the son, whose domicile always was and continued to be in this commonwealth, had two illegitimate children in Germany by a German woman, and afterwards married her there in a form authorized by the law of the place, and there acknowledged them as his children. This court held that by the Rev. Sts. c. 61, § 4, such children must be deemed legitimate for all purposes, except of taking by inheritance as representing one of the parents any part of the estate of the kindred, lineal or collateral, of such parent; and that the children took directly under the will of their grandfather, and not as the representatives of their father; and were therefore not within the exception of the statute, but were entitled to the benefit of the bequest.

"Still greater changes in the rules of the law of England as to the descent of real estate have been made by subsequent legislation in this commonwealth. If the parents of an illegitimate child marry, and the father acknowledges him as his child, the child is to be deemed legitimate for all purposes whatsoever, whether of inheritance or settlement or otherwise. St. 1853, c. 253; Gen. Sts. c. 91, § 4; Monson v. Palmer, 8 Allen, 551.

"In Smith v. Kelly, 23 Miss. 167, it was held that the status or condition of a person as to legitimacy must be determined by reference to the law of the country where such status or condition had its origin, and that the status so ascertained adhered to him everywhere; and therefore that where, at the time of the birth of an illegitimate child and of the subsequent marriage of its parents, they were domiciled in South Carolina, in which such marriage did not make the child legitimate, and afterwards removed with the child to Mississippi, by the law of which State subsequent marriage of the parents and acknowledgment of the child by the father would legitimate it, and the child was always recognized by the father as his child, yet the child, having had the status of illegitimacy in South Carolina, retained that status in Mississippi, and could not inherit or succeed to either real or personal property in Mississippi. That decision is a strong application of the law of the domicile of origin, and perhaps did not give sufficient effect to the father's recognition of the child in Mississippi after they had established their domicile in that State.

"In Scott v. Key, 11 La. Ann. 232, while a father and his illegitimate son, whose mother he never married, were domiciled in the Territory of Arkansas, the legislature of that Territory passed a special statute enacting that the son should be made his father's legal heir and representative in as complete a manner as though he had been such from his birth, and should be as capable of inheriting his father's estate in a full and complete manner as if his father had been married to his mother at the time of his birth, and should be known and called by his father's name; and the father and son afterwards removed to Louisiana. The majority of the court held that the heritable quality of legitimacy, which the son had received from the legislature of the State of his residence, accompanied him when he changed his domicile, and that he was entitled to inherit his father's immovable property in Louisiana, to the exclusion of the father's brothers and sisters. Chief Justice Merrick dissented, but only upon the ground that to allow such an act to have an extraterritorial effect would be to allow another State to provide a new class of heirs for immovables and successions in Louisiana; and that, in order that personal statutes should be enforced in another country, there must be something in common between the jurisprudence of the two countries; and, speaking of the conflicting rules of the civil law and the common law in regard to legitimation by subsequent matrimony, said: 'The doctrine of the civil law ought to be enforced, doubtless, in those cases where our own statute recognizes a mode of legitimation by acknowledgment by notarial act and subsequent marriage, although the form in which it had been done in another State differs from our own.' 11 La. Ann. 239. And see 4 Phillimore, § 542; Savigny (Guthrie's Ed.) 258, 260, 264, and note.

If a child is born after the marriage, no matter how soon, it will

"In Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251, on the other hand, it was said, in the opinion of the majority of the court, that a special statute of the legislature of Arkansas, enacting that one person be constituted the heir of another, both of whom had a domicile there, making no reference to any marriage, and not even depending on the one being the child of the other, could have no extraterritorial operation whatever. See pp. 305, 307, 325. But the point decided was that the former was not an "heir" of the latter, within the meaning of the will of the latter's father, who, nine years before the passage of the Arkansas statute, died domiciled in Maryland, the law of which does not appear to have permitted the creation of an heir in that manner.

"The cases on this topic in other States, so far as they have come to our notice, afford little assistance. The decision in Smith v. Derr, 34 Pa. St. 126, that a child born out of wedlock, and legitimated by the law of another State where the father and child were domiciled, could not inherit land in Pennsylvania in 1855, was, as the court said, covered by the principle decided in Doe v. Vardill; for the Statute of Merton was then in force in Pennsylvania, although since repealed there. See Report of the Judges, 3 Binn. 595, 600; Purd. Dig. (10th Ed.) 1004. The decision in Harvey v. Ball, 32 Ind. 98, allowing a bastard child of parents who at the time of its birth and of their subsequent intermarriage, and until their death, had their domicile in Pennsylvania, to inherit land in Indiana under a statute of Indiana enacting that "if any man shall marry a woman who has, previous to the marriage, borne an illegitimate child, and after marriage shall acknowledge such child as his own, such child shall be deemed legitimate to all intents and purposes," was put exclusively upon the meaning attributed by the court to that statute, without regard to general principles or cases decided elsewhere; and upon any other ground would be inconsistent with the decision in the leading case of Shedden v. Patrick, before cited. In Lingen v. Lingen, 45 Ala. 410, in which it was held that a child, born in France of parents who never intermarried, and there acknowledged by his father according to the forms of the French law, and so made legitimate by that law, could not take a share in the father's estate in Alabama, the father's domicile was always in Alabama, and the child had not been legitimated in any manner allowed by the laws of that State."

The Virginia statute providing that "if a man having had offspring by a woman shall afterwards intermarry with her, such offspring, if recognized by him before or after the marriage, shall be deemed legitimate," and that "the issue of marriages deemed null in law, or dissolved by a court, shall, nevertheless, be legitimate," does not apply to and legitimate the offspring of a cohabitation in this State between a white person and a negro, when the parents subsequently have celebrated between them a ceremony of marriage, outside of this State, in some place where marriage between such persons is lawful. Greenhow v. James, 80 Va. 636.

Gen. St. Ky. c. 31, § 6, providing that if a man, having had a child by a woman, shall afterwards marry her, such child, or its descendants, if recognized by him before or after marriage, shall be deemed legitimate, does not apply to the children of a married man begotten and born of another woman than his wife during his wife's life. Sams v. Sams, 3 S. Westn. Repr. (Ky.) 593.

The laws of most of the States on the continent of Europe admit legitimation generally, though with distinctions in respect of certain illegitimate children, or in respect of the form of the acknowledgment by the parents. It is also the law in the Isle of Man, Guernsey and Jersey, in Lower Canada, St. Lucia, Trinidad, Demerara, Berbice, at the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Mauritius, as well as some of the United States (see post). In Ireland, England, and those of its dependencies in the West Indies and North America which have not been named, as well as in the other United States (not named post), legitimation by subsequent marriage is not admitted at all. Dicey on Domicile, 182.

Child Born on the High Seas.—According to the rule that a ship on the high seas is part of the territory of the State to which she belongs, a bastard child of which a woman has been delivered on board an English ship is to be deemed born in England, and the mother is entitled to an order of affiliation against the putative father resident in England, under 8 and 9 Vict. c. 101. Marshall v. Murgatroyd, 6 Q. B. 31.

be presumed to be legitimate,[1] and children born in wedlock are

Marriage of Colored Persons—Legitimacy of Children.—Under a statute to legalize marriage of colored persons living together as husband and wife at the time of its passage, children of such persons are deemed legitimate whether born before or after the passage of said act, and whether any sort of marriage ceremony had taken place between the parents or not. In such cases the question of bastardy must be considered as in any case where bastardy is alleged as to a child born during coverture, or born before and recognized afterwards. Smith v. Perry, 80 Va. 563.

1. Rhyne v. Hoffman, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 335; State v. Wilson, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 131; State v. Herman, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 502; Stegall v. Stegall, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 256; State v. Romaine, 58 Iowa, 46; Doyle v. State, 61 Ind. 324; Moran v. State, 73 Ind. 208; Brock v. State, 85 Ind. 397; Bowles v. Bingham, 2 Munf. (Va.) 442, 3 Munf. (Va.) 599; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 497; Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beav. 552; R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 198; Dennison v. Page, 29 Pa. St. 420; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 644; Wilson v. Babb, 18 Shand (S. Car.), 59.

Although he may have been begotten while his parents were unmarried, yet if afterward they married together, and he is born during the coverture, or after it shall have been determined, he is legitimate. Bouvier's Inst. 322.

Where a man marries a woman knowing that she is already with child by another man, he is held to adopt the child into his family, and the law holds him liable for its support as one standing in loco parentis. State v. Shoemaker, 62 Iowa, 343; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 196; Miller v. Anderson, 3 N. Eastn. Repr. (Ohio) 605; Miller v. Anderson, 43 Ohio St. 473; Tioga Co. v. South Creek, 75 Pa. St. 433. See Bracy v. Kibbe, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 273. Compare Keniston v. Rowe, 16 Me. 38; Hyde v. Chapin, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 77; Raby v. Batiste, 27 Miss. 731; Austin v. Pickett, 9 Ala. 102; O'Neal v. State, 2 Sneed (Tenn.), 218; Roth v. Jacobs, 21 Ohio St. 646.

The supreme court of Iowa, in State v. Romaine, 58 Iowa, 48, lays down the rule that "if a woman be pregnant at the time of the marriage, and if the pregnancy be known to the husband, he should be conclusively presumed to be the father."

In North Carolina the supreme court held that "a child born in wedlock, though born within a month or a day after marriage, is legitimate by presumption of law; and where the mother was visibly pregnant at the marriage, it is a presumption juris et de jure that the child was the offspring of the husband." Rhyne v. Hoffman, 6 Jones Eq. 335. The court quoted with approval a quotation from 1 Rolls Abr. 358 and 2 Bac. Abr. 84, as follows: "That if a woman, big with child by A, marry B, and then the child be born, it is the legitimate child of B." It has been held in a large number of cases, both in England and America, that the wife is not a competent witness to prove non-access of the husband, whether the child was begotten before or after marriage.

In Rex v. Reading, Lee Temp. Hardw. 83, Lord Hardwicke said: "It must be of very dangerous consequence to lay it down in general that a wife should be a sufficient sole evidence to bastardize her child, and to discharge her husband of the burden of its maintenance."

Similar language is used by Lord Ellenborough in King v. Luffe, 8 East, 193, and in various English authorities. The reason for this rule is stated in Tioga Co. v. South Creek Tp., 75 Pa. St. 433, in the following language: "That issue born in wedlock, though begotten before, is presumptively legitimate, is an axiom of law so well established that to cite authorities in support of it would be mere waste of time. So the rule that the parents will not be permitted to prove non-access for the purpose of bastardizing such issue is just as well settled. Many reasons have been given for this rule. Prominent among them is the idea that the admission of such testimony would be unseemly and scandalous, and this not so much from the fact that it reveals immoral conduct upon the part of the parents as because of the effect it may have upon the child, who is in no fault, but who must nevertheless be the chief sufferer thereby. That the parents should be permitted to bastardize the child is a proposition which shocks our sense of right and decency, and hence the rule of law that forbids it." This doctrine is recognized in Parker v. Way, 15 N. H. 45; Davis v. Houston, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 289; Page v. Dennison, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 377; s. c., 29 Pa. St. 420; and in the last case the court, in addition, hold that "whether the child is begotten in or out of wedlock, if marriage precedes the birth, the presumption of paternity is the same, and can only be bastardized by proof of non-access. The wife is not a competent witness to prove non-access on the part of her husband, and that her child, begotten before, but born during, wedlock, was not begotten by him." On the same point, see State v. Wilson, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 131, and State v. Herman, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 502, in both of which cases the pregnancy preceded the marriage. The cases are collected on this point in 1 Phil. Ev. 87, note, and the reason of the rule stated in the text as follows: "This rule is established, independently of any possible motives of interest in the particular case, upon principles of public policy and decency."

The court, in Roth v. Jacobs, 21 Ohio St. 646, held that after a woman pregnant with child had filed her sworn complaint in bastardy, charging the defendant with the paternity of her unborn child, her subsequent marriage with another did not necessarily work a discontinuance of the action, for the reason, as the court say, that it cannot be conclusively presumed that the man who marries a pregnant woman is the father of the child. He may not have known that she was in that condition when he married her, and therefore, if born alive, it may be a bastard. There was no suggestion in that case of what the result would have been had the marriage been contracted by a man with full knowledge of the pregnancy.

In Howorth v. Gill, 30 Ohio St. 627, it was attempted to make a defendant liable under the bastardy act, by showing that while complainant was the wife of another he became the father of her unborn child. After the child was born, the complainant procured a divorce from her former husband, and the court held that, to make defendant liable, the delivery and pregnancy, as well as the making of the complaint, must be predicated as of an unmarried woman. The court in that case suggestively say: "But no complaint could have been made in this case, either during pregnancy or for eight months after delivery. The child was, during all this time, the innocent and honest child of a married woman; and in any proceeding under this act would have been conclusively presumed to be legitimate. The subsequent divorce of the mother may have changed her status, but not that of her child. It dissolved the marital relation, but did not bastardize the issue begotten and born during its continuance."

The declaration of a man that he begot before marriage a child, which was born after marriage, is not sufficient to rebut the presumption that the husband was the father. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 132.

Presumptions.—"It is a præsumptio juris et de jure that a child born after wedlock, of which the mother was, even visibly, pregnant at the time of marriage, is the offspring of the husband. So every child born during wedlock, where the married parties are neither infra nubiles annos nor physically disqualified for sexual intercourse, is presumed legitimate, according to the maxim, "Pater est quem nuptiæ demonstrant,"—a presumption which holds even when the parties are living apart by mutual consent, but not when they are separated by a sentence pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction, in which case obedience to the sentence of the court will be presumed. In very ancient times this presumption of legitimacy was only præsumptio juris, but it was subsequently raised into a conclusive presumption, if the husband was within the four seas at any time during the pregnancy of the wife. In later times, however, this has been very properly relaxed; and it is now competent to negative the fact of sexual intercourse between the parties during the time, when, according to the course of nature, the husband could have been the father of the child. But if the fact of sexual intercourse between the husband and wife within that time has been established to the satisfaction of the tribunal, the presumption cannot be rebutted by proof of adultery, as the law will not, in that case, allow a balance of evidence as to who was most likely to be the father of the child." Best on Ev. (Chamberlayne's Ed.) 349.

A child born eight months after marriage will be presumed to be legitimate, although, when born, it has all the physical appearances of a full-grown and natural child; and the proof of a statement by the mother that she had no connection with her husband before marriage, and that her reputation for chastity was bad at the time of her marriage, and that for some months previously thereto she had been intimate with other men, if competent, is sufficient to rebut this presumption. Phillips v. Allen, 2 Allen (Mass.), 453.

A child born three months after the mother's marriage is presumed legitimate, but this presumption may be rebutted in either a civil or criminal case by evidence of non-access or other proof. Wright v. Hicks, 12 Ga. 155; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 451, 15 Ga. 160; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 687; Sullivan v. Hugley, 32 Ga. 316; Baker v.

presumed to be legitimate;[1] but a child born during marriage may be proved a bastard, by evidence of the husband's impotence, by proof of non-access to his wife, or by proof that it was born during her open cohabitation with another man.[2]

Baker, 13 Cal. 87; Wilson v. Babb, 18 Shand (S. Car.), 59.

Husband or wife is incompetent witness to prove non-access in order to establish the illegitimacy of a child born in wedlock but begotten before. Dennison v. Page, 29 Pa. St. 420; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 644; Bowles v. Bingham, 2 Munf. (Va.) 442; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 497; Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J. Chan. 125; Cope v. Cope, 5 C. & P. 604. Compare Barnum v. Burnum, 42 Md. 251; Wright v. Hicks, 12 Ga. 155; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 45 1,15 Ga. 160; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 687.

1. Hemmenway v. Towner, 1 Allen (Mass.), 209; Phillips v. Allen, 2 Allen (Mass.), 453; Page v. Dennison, 1 Grant (Pa.), 377; Senser v. Bower, 1 Pa. 450; Van Aernan v. Van Aernan, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 378; Strode v. Magowan, 2 Bush (Ky.), 621; Remington v. Lewis, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 611; Cannon v. Cannon, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 410; Dinkins v. Samuel, 10 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 66; Vaughan v. Rhodes, 2 McC. (S. Car.) 227; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 713; Wilson v. Babb, 18 S. Car. 59; Gurvin v. Cromartie, 13 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 174; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 406; Eloi v. Mader, 1 Rob. (La.) 581; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 192; Stegall v. Stegall, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 256; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550; Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. (U. S.) 553; Sullivan v. Hugley, 32 Ga. 316; Illinois Land Co. v. Bonner, 75 Ill. 315; Stoke v. Worthington, 23 Minn. 528; Herring v. Goodson, 43 Miss. 392.

Where a certified copy of a birth and baptism record containing a statement of illegitimacy is produced, together with evidence of general reputation, nothing further is required to justify a finding of such illegitimacy. App. of Goerman, 1 Atl. Repr. 446. See Canjolle v. Ferrié, 23 N. Y. 90.

Whenever, upon an issue of bastardy, a question arises concerning the existence of a marriage between the parents of the alleged bastard direct proof of a marriage in fact, as contradistinguished from one inferrible from circumstances, is not required. State v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528; Canjolle v. Ferrié, 23 N. Y. 90.

A child born within the wedlock of a regular marriage, which, for any reason (as that the woman has another husband living), is null in law, is nevertheless the legitimate child and heir of both parents. Watts v. Owens, 62 Wis. 512. See Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 391; Lincecum v. Lincecum, 3 Mo. 441; Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563; Hartwell v. Jackson, 7 Tex. 576; Graham v. Bennet, 2 Cal. 503; Hiram v. Pierce, 45 Me. 367; Earle v. Dawes, 3 Md. Ch. 230; Brower v. Bowers, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 214; Harrington v. Barfield, 30 La. Ann. pt. 2, 1297; Pratt v. Pratt, 5 Mo. App. 539.

Presumptions in favor of the legitimacy of children will not be made where the question is to be determined as one of fact and not of law. Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175; s. c., Bk. 18, L. C. P. Co. 186. See Gaines v. Relf, 12 How. (U. S.) 534; Viall v. Smith, 6 R. I. 417.

The legitimacy of a child born in wedlock cannot be contested by either the mother or her heirs, nor by the child himself. The right to such a contest abides only with the putative father. Eloi v. Mader, 1 Rob. (La.) 581; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 192.

2. Com. v. Stricker, 1 Browne (Pa.) Appx. 47; State v. Britt, 78 N. Car. 439; Wilson v. Babb, 18 S. Car. 59; Herring v. Goodson, 43 Miss. 392; Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beav. 552; Banbury Peerage Case, 1 Sim. & S. 153. See Sharboro's Estate, Myr. Probate (Cal.), 255; Bussom v. Forsyth, 32 N. J. Eq. 277; Haworth v. Gill, 30 Ohio St. 627; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush (Ky.), 636, 647; Kleinert v. Ehlers, 38 Pa. St. 439; Van Aernan v. Van Aernan, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 378; Shuler v. Bull, 15 Shand (S. Car.), 421; Canjolle v. Ferrié, 23 N. Y. 90.

The fact that at the time of the conception of the child the husband and wife did not cohabit with each other is a negative fact which cannot be established directly alone. It is established indirectly by proving the impossibility of a contrary fact. For example, it cannot be proved directly that the husband and wife did not cohabit; but if proved that the wife was in the United States at the time of conception, and that the husband was travelling in Europe for two years immediately before the birth of the child; if it be proved that the wife was free, and the husband was in prison and remained unseen by the wife, the fact of non-access will be made out by the proof of the absence or the imprisonment. Bouvier's Inst. 308.

Any competent testimony bearing upon this question is admissible, and, if it satisfies the mind, is sufficient. Wilson v. Babb, 18 S. Car. 59; Shuler v. Bull, 15 S. Car. 421.

The most clear and conclusive evidence of non-access is required. Watts v. Owens, 62 Wis. 512; Egbert v. Greenwalt, 44 Mich. 245; Boykin v. Boykin, 70 N. Car. 262; Chamberlain v. People, 23 N. Y. 88; Sullivan v. Kelly, 3 Allen (Mass.), 148; Cross v. Cross, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 39; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 778; State v. Shumpert, 1 Shand (S. Car.), 85; Wright v. Hicks, 12 Ga. 155; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 450, 15 Ga. 160; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 687. Shuler v. Bull, 15 S. Car. 421; Kleinert v. Ehlers, 38 Pa. St. 439; Herring v. Goodson, 43 Miss. 392; Phillips v. Allen, 2 Allen (Mass.), 453; Wilson v. Babb, 18 Shand (S. Car.), 59; Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. (U. S.) 553; s. c., Bk. 16, L. C. P. 770.

Neither husband nor wife is a competent witness to give evidence of non-access so as to bastardize a child. Mink v. State, 60 Wis. 583; Watts v. Owens, 62 Wis. 512; Tioga v. South Creek Township, 75 Pa. St. 436; Dennison v. Page, 29 Pa. St. 420; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 644; Boykin v. Boykin, 70 N. Car. 262; State v. Pettaway, 3 Hawks (N. Car.), 625; Chamberlain v. People, 23 N. Y. 88; People v. Overseers, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 286; Cross v. Cross, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 39; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 778; Hemmenway v. Towner, 1 Allen (Mass.), 209; Phillips v. Allen, 2 Allen (Mass.), 453; Carson v. Carson, 44 N. H. 587; Egbert v. Greenwalt, 44 Mich. 245; Goodright v. Moss, Cowper, 591; R. v. Book, 1 Wils. 340; R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 203; R. v. Kea, 11 East, 132; R. v. Mansfield, 1 Q. B. 444; R. v. Sourton, 5 Ad. & E. 180; Wright v. Holdgate, 3 C. & K. 158; Anonymous v. Anonymous, 22 Beav. 481, 23 Beav. 273. Compare Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251. See Cross v. Cross, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 139; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 778; Com. v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 283; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 449; Parker v. Way, 15 N. H. 45; Vernon v. Vernon, 6 La. Ann. 242; Viall v. Smith, 6 R. I. 417.

Sexual intercourse will be presumed when personal access is not disproved. Cross v. Cross, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 139; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 778. See Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J. Chan. 125.

It is not necessary to prove non-access impossible; if the evidence places the non-access beyond all reasonable doubt it is sufficient. Van Aernan v. Van Aernan, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 375. See R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193; R. v. Mansfield, 1 Q. B. 444.

Where the husband lived in New York, and the wife near Philadelphia, the parties having separated some years before, held, evidence of non-access. Com. v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 283; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 449. See Queen v. Inhabitants, etc., 1 Q. B. 444; Barony of Saye & S., 1 H. L. Cas. 507; Morris v. Davies, 5 C. & F. 163; Heathcote's Divorce Bill, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 535; R. v. Maidstone, 12 East, 550; Sibbet v. Ainsley, 3 L. T. N. S. 583.

Where husband and wife have been in such a situation that access may have taken place, the presumption of law is in favor of the issue, but may be rebutted on strong evidence. If access is proved, no inquiry can be made whether the husband or any other person be the parent. Morris v. Davies, 5 C. & F. 163. Compare R. v. Mansfield, 1 Q. B. 444; Sibbet v. Ainsley, 3 L. T. N. S. 583.

Where the established non-intercourse between husband and wife was for more than a year, continuing until a period within five months of the birth, held, to establish bastardy. Dean v. State, 29 Ind. 483.

Where the husband has access, the impotence must be clearly proved. Com. v. Wentz, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 269. See Moody v. Goode, 10 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 49; State v. Broadway, 69 N. Car. 411; Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J. N. S. Ch. 125; Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beav. 552.

Where the husband was absent from his wife from January, 1864, until June, 1865, and the child was born in November, 1865, held, sufficient to establish its illegitimacy. Dean v. State, 29 Ind. 483.

The presumption, thus established by law, is not to be rebutted by circumstances which only create doubt and suspicion, but it may be wholly removed by showing that the husband was, first, incompetent; secondly, entirely absent, so as to have no intercourse or communication of any kind with the mother; thirdly, entirely absent at the period during which the child must, in the course of nature, have been begotten; fourthly, only present under such circumstances as afford clear and satisfactory proof that there was no sexual intercourse. Such evidence as this puts an end to the question, and establishes the illegitimacy of a child of a married woman. Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beav. 552.

But the illegitimacy of a child born of a married woman is established beyond all dispute by evidence of her living in adultery at the time when the child was begotten, and of her husband then residing in another part of the kingdom, so as to make access impossible. Barony of Saye & S., 1 H. L. Cas. 507.

2. Child Born after Divorce.—Where a married woman becomes pregnant, during coverture, of a child, which is born less than eight months from the time she obtains a divorce, the presumption is that her husband is its father, especially in the absence of proof of no cohabitation by him within the proper period to beget the child.[1]

The presumption of law arising from the fact of husband and wife sleeping together is irresistible as to the legitimacy of a child of the wife, unless there is clear and satisfactory evidence that some physical incapacity existed. Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J. Chan. 125.

Where such physical incapacity is satisfactorily made out according to the opinions of the medical witnesses, evidence of the adultery of the wife is still an important ingredient in determining the legitimacy of the child; because, if the wife were of irreproachable character, it would go far to modify the opinions as to the husband's incapacity. Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J. Chan. 125.

Non-access of the husband need not be proved during the whole period of the wife's pregnancy; it is sufficient if the circumstances of the case show a natural impossibility that the husband could be the father, as where he had access only a fortnight before the birth. R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193.

If there was an opportunity of access, but the wife was notoriously living in adultery, it does not necessarily follow that a child begotten while such opportunity existed was not the husband's. R. v. Mansfield, 1 Q. B. 444.

Husband and wife, after living together for ten years, and having one child, agreed to separate. They accordingly afterwards lived apart, but within such distance as afforded them opportunities of sexual intercourse, the husband not being impotent. Held, that the presumption of law in favor of the legitimacy of a child begotten and born of the wife during the separation may be rebutted, not only by evidence to show that the husband had not sexual intercourse with her, but also by evidence of their conduct; such as that the wife was living in adultery, that she concealed the birth of the child from the husband, and declared to him that she never had such a child; that the husband disclaimed all knowledge of the child, and acted, up to his death, as if no such child was in existence; and also that the wife's paramour aided in concealing the child, reared and educated it as his own, and left it all his property by his will. Morris v. Davies, 5 C. & F. 163; 1 Jur. 911.

When husband and wife have been in such a situation that access may have taken place, the presumption of law is in favor of the issue, but may be rebutted on strong evidence. If access is proved, no inquiry can be made whether the husband or any other person be the parent. Lord Coke's doctrine of inter quatuor maria is exploded. Morris v. Davies, 5 C. & F. 163; 1 Jur. 911.

Where a husband, after a long absence, did not rejoin his wife till the 24th November, 1849, and when she, nevertheless, produced a full-grown child on the 18th May, 1850, held, that he could not have been the father. Heathcote's Divorce Bill, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 535.

A was summoned under 5 Geo. IV., c. 83, s. 3, for wilfully refusing to maintain his child. He and his wife had lived separately for about three years before the birth of the child, though in the same town; she led a disreputable and profligate life, and he always avoided her, and she had been seen as a prostitute in company with several men, and the child was born in jail. The justices dismissed the summons, holding that the legal presumption that the husband was the father of the child was rebutted by this evidence. Held, that they came to a right conclusion. Sibbet v. Ainsley, 3 L. T. N. S. (Q. B.) 583.

If a husband is found to have gone beyond seas above two years before the birth of a child borne by his wife, she remaining at home, the conclusion is irresistible that such child is a bastard. R. v. Maidstone, 12 East, 550.

Where the child is a mulatto, and the husband and wife are white persons, evidence is admissible to prove that the child of white parents cannot be a mulatto. Watkins v. Carlton, 10 Leigh (Va.), 560.

The presumption is, in the absence of proof of guilt or wrong conduct, that a child born in wedlock is legitimate. Fox v. Burke, 31 Minn. 319; State v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528; Viall v. Smith, 6 R. I. 417.

1. Drennan v. Douglas, 102 Ill. 341.

3. Children of Void Marriages.—At common law the issue of marriages rendered null and void are illegitimate,[1] but by statute in most of the States the issue of such marriages when entered into in good faith are made legitimate.[2]

4. Custody and Control.—The mother of a bastard has the right of custody and control.[3] If the mother be dead, then her right passes to the putative father.[4]

At common law the duty to support and control is upon the mother; the putative father cannot be held liable to contribute except by proceedings under statute.[5]

5. Inheritance.—A bastard in esse, whether born or unborn, is competent to be a devisee or legatee of real or personal estate. The only question in such a case is whether, when in esse, the bastard is sufficiently designated as the object of the bequest.[6]

As to the status of children born after divorce partial or complete, little can be stated from the books; for such divorces hardly existed at the common law. They are probably illegitimate prima facie if born of the divorced mother within an unreasonable time after separation. Schouler Dom. Rel. (3d Ed.) § 227. See Patchett v. Holgate, 15 Jur. 308. In re Rideout, L. R. 10 Eq. 41.

1. Harrison v. State, 22 Md. 468; Zule v. Zule, 1 N. J. Eq. 96; Daniel v. Sams, 17 Fla. 487; Plant v. Taylor, 7 Hurl. & N. 211.

2. Stimson's Stat. Law, § 6115. See Lee v. Smith, 18 Tex. 141; Hartwell v. Jackson, 7 Tex. 576; Harrington v. Barfield, 30 La. Ann. pt. 2, 1297; Greene v. Greene, 2 Gray (Mass.), 361; Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563; Hiram v. Pierce, 45 Me. 367; Graham v. Bennet, 2 Cal. 503; Allen v. Maclellan, 12 Pa. St. 328; Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407; Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 391; Crouch v. Crouch, 30 Wis. 667; Watts v. Owens, 62 Wis. 512; Brower v. Bowers, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 214; Earle v. Dawes, 3 Md. Ch. 230; Gaines v. New Orleans, 6 Wall. (U.S.) 642; Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. (U. S.) 553.

Kentucky act 1796, providing that "the issue of a marriage deemed null and void in law shall nevertheless be legitimate," applies to issue of marriage with a man who had a former wife living and undivorced. Workman v. Harold, 2 S. Westn. Repr. (Ky.) 679.

The only exceptions to the provision of Gen. St. Ky. c. 52, art. 1, § 3, that "the issue of an illegal or void marriage shall be legitimate," are found in that section, and they are the issue of incestuous marriages, and of marriages between a white person and a negro or mulatto. The provision in section 4 that "where the marriage is contracted in good faith, and with the belief of the parties that a former husband or wife, then living, was dead, the issue of such marriage, born or begotten before notice of the mistake, shall be legitimate issue of both parents," not specifically declaring that issue born after notice shall be illegitimate, issue born both before and after notice are legitimate. Harris v. Harris, 2 S. Westn. Repr. (Ky.) 549.

3. People v. Landt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 375; Carpenter v. Whitman, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 208; People v. Kling, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Canajoharie v. Johnstown, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 41; Wright v. Wright, 2 Mass. 109; Petersham v. Dana, 12 Mass. 429; Hudson v. Hills, 8 N. H. 417; Com. v. Fee, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 255; App. of Pote, 106 Pa. St. 574; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 540; Lower Augusta v. Selinsgrove, 64 Pa. St. 166; Nine v. Starr, 8 Oregon, 49. Compare Bethlem v. Roxbury, 20 Conn. 298; Smith v. State, 1 Houst. Cr. Cas. (Del.) 107.

The marriage of the mother of an illegitimate child to one not the father will not render him liable for its support. People v. Volksdorf, 112 Ill. 292; Overseers v. Cox, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 235.

If the father has legitimated the child under statute, the custody still remains in the mother. Lawson v. Scott, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 92.

4. Com. v. Anderson, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 55. See Wright v. Wright, 2 Mass. 109.

5. Overseers v. Cox, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 235; Carpenter v. Whitman, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 208; People v. Landt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 375; People v. Kling, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Robalina v. Armstrong, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 247; Simmons v. Bull, 21 Ala. 501; Nine v. Starr, 8 Oregon, 49; Wiggins v. Keizer, 6 Ind. 252.

6. Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. (U. S.) 553. See LAW OF DOMICILE, ante, p. 129.

"The most important disability of an illegitimate child at the common law is that he has no inheritable blood; that he is incapable of becoming heir either to his putative father or to his mother or to any one else; that he can have no heirs but those of his own body. This was likewise the doctrine of the civil law; the language of the Institutes as to spurious offspring, patrem habere non intelliguntur, dealing rather more gently with a fact so extremely delicate and painful. At the old canon law a bastard was treated as also disqualified from holding dignities in the church. . . . The civil law, while offering in certain cases a hope of legitimation, made a distinction between spurious offspring born of promiscuous intercourse, and such as were conceived or born during the marriage of one of the natural parents; presuming that while the former might be rendered legitimate, the latter never could become so. And the rule was more severe with one class than the other. This principle is to be traced in the provisions of the Louisiana Code; children whose father is unknown, and adulterous or incestuous children, having no right of inheritance, while other natural or illegitimate children succeed to the estate of their mother in default of lawful children or descendants, and under certain conditions to the estate of the father who has acknowledged them. The well-settled American rule, however, differs considerably from that of both civil and common law. Legitimation by subsequent marriage is a principle admitted very generally in the legislation of the different States. So, too, are there various statutes which permit even bastard children to inherit from the father under certain restrictions; while the generally recognized doctrine is partus sequitur ventrem, and that the illegitimate child and his mother shall mutually inherit from each other." Schouler Dom. Rel. (3d Ed.) § 277.

The mother of illegitimate children, by the Pa. act of 1855, is rendered competent to inherit from them as though they were legitimate. The act does not render the children legitimate for any other purpose than to take and transmit the real and personal estate so taken and inherited according to the intestate laws of the State. O'Neil's App., 92 Pa. St. 193.

The will of a testator contained the following clause: "Item second, I give and bequeath to my following named illegitimate sons by M. E. C. as follows: to H. C. C., A. C., and J. C., all my real and personal property, to be equally divided among them, after reserving property enough to rent or hire yearly for the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars, for the support of M. E. C. during her lifetime, or so long as she lives a life of a virtuous woman, and all my just debts are paid. I also make this provision in my will, that in case one or more, or all, of the above-named children should die before deceased shall arrive at the age of maturity, or after they have arrived at the age of maturity, and die without issue or lawful heirs, the property, both real and personal, belonging to the deceased one to be equally divided among the other two surviving children; and in case that one more should die before he arrived of age, or without issue or lawful heirs, the surviving child to have all of the two deceased ones' property, both real and personal; and I furthermore provide, that if all the children named in this will shall die without heirs, then the property contained in this will I devise and bequeath to the heirs of John C. Estep and the heirs of Margaret P. Shaw, to be equally divided among them, share and share alike." The will was dated the 6th day of August, 1861, and was admitted to probate on the 13th day of April, 1864. Held, that H. C. C. was entitled to the real estate, he being the son of the testator and of the said M. E. C., and only heir-at-law of the survivor of the three devisees, his brothers. Estep v. Mackey, 52 Md. 593.

A limitation of an estate to illegitimate children of the grantee thereafter to be begotten is void as against good morals and public policy. Kingsley v. Broward, 19 Fla. 722.

An illegitimate child, claiming title to real estate of its father, must prove that he died intestate, without heirs resident in the United States. Cox v. Rash, 82 Ind. 519.

A bastard in the State of Illinois cannot inherit from its father unless he shall have married the mother and acknowledged the child as his own; but the child may, under the statute, inherit from its mother. Although a bastard may be entitled in Germany, where born, to inherit from his father, he cannot inherit real estate from him situate in Illinois. Stoltz v. Doering, 112 Ill. 234.

Mother's Estate—No Lawful Issue.—In New York and New Jersey illegitimate children are heirs of the mother, and inherit real and personal estate in default of lawful issue. In North Carolina they inherit real property only. Stimson's Stat. Law, § 3151.

Mother's Estate — Lawful Issue.—In

6. Abatement.—Where an action was properly begun, but the child was afterwards born dead, the action should be dismissed.[1] The death of the mother does not abate a proceeding commenced during her life;[2] nor does the birth of twins,[3] nor the marriage of the prosecutrix with another man.[4]

8. Evidence.—The weight of authority declares the action to be a civil proceeding.[5] It is therefore governed by its

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington Ter., Dakota, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi. and Florida, the illegitimate children inherit the mother's estate with the legitimate children, share and share alike. Stimson's Stat. Law, § 3151 (B).

From Mother's Kin.—In Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Virginia, West Virginia, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, and Florida the illegitimate children both inherit from the mother and represent her so as to inherit from her kin share and share alike with the legitimate children. But in Maine, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Carolina, Kentucky, California, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and Louisiana bastards do not represent the mother so as to claim any intestate estate from the kindred, either lineal or collateral, though in Washington Ter., Dakota, Idaho, and Montana they may do so if legitimated before the death of the person from whom such estate descends. Stimson's Stat. Law, § 3151 (C) (D).

A bastard cannot inherit through his mother from her ancestors. Jackson v. Jackson, 80 Ky. 390; In re Mericlo, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 62. Compare Dickinson's App., 42 Conn. 491.

By and from Bastards.—In North Carolina, Ohio, Maryland, Kentucky, and Georgia bastards inherit from each other children of the same mother as if legitimate. Stimson's Stat. Law, § 3153.

Subsequent Marriage of Parents.—An illegitimate child, made legitimate by the subsequent marriage of his parents, according to the law of the State or country of the marriage and the parents' domicile, is thereafter legitimate everywhere and entitled to inherit. Miller v. Miller, 91 N. Y. 315; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 669.

A, the natural child of B and C, was born April 4, 1883; on August 7, 1883, B made his will, in which he gave nothing to A; on August 9, 1883, C was married to B; on December 14, 1883, B died. Held, A could not be regarded as an after-born child within the purview of the act of Pennsylvania, April 8, 1833, section 15—in connection with the act of May 14, 1857—and, therefore, be entitled to a child's share of the real and personal estate of B. App. of McCulloch, 10 Eastn. Repr. (Pa.) 251.

1. State v. Beatty, 61 Iowa, 307. See Mobley v. State, 83 Ind. 92. Compare Satterwhite v. State, 32 Ala. 578; Hinton v. Dickinson, 19 Ohio St. 583.

The defendant is not liable for the lying-in expenses. State v. Beatty, 61 Iowa, 307. Nor for costs of suit where plaintiff causes its discontinuance by reason of miscarriage. Eagen v. Bergen, 56 Vt. 589.

An action for the support of a bastard child, during its life, may be brought after the death of the child. Meredith v. Wall, 14 Allen (Mass.), 155; Smith v. Lint, 37 Me. 546; Maxwell v. Campbell, 8 Ohio St. 265; Hauskins v. People, 82 Ill. 193; Evans v. State, 58 Ind. 587.

2. People v. Nixon, 45 Ill. 353. Compare Rollins v. Chalmers, 49 Vt. 515.

3. Connelly v. People, 81 Ill. 379.

4. Roth v. Jacobs, 21 Ohio St. 646; McFadden v. Frye, 13 Allen (Mass.), 472; State v. Wilson, 16 Ind. 134; Allen v. Davidson, 16 Ind. 416.

5. Millet v. Baker, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 215; Mahoney v. Crowley, 36 Me. 486; Smith v. Lint, 37 Me. 546; Mariner v. Dyer, 2 Me. 165; Low v. Mitchell, 18 Me. 372; Robie v. McNiece, 7 Vt. 419; Coonies v. Knapp, 11 Vt. 543; Spears v. Forrest, 15 Vt. 435; Marston v. Jenness, 11 N. H. 156; Parker v. Way, 15 N. H. 45; Harris v. County, 15 N. H. 81; State v. Bowen, 14 R. I. 165; Hinman v. Taylor, 2 Conn. 357; Glenn v. State, 46 Ind. 368; Byers v. State, 20 Ind. 47; Harper v. State, 101 Ind. 109; State v. Brown, 44 Ind. 329; Carter v. Krise, 9 Ohio St. 402; Lewis v. People, 82 Ill. 104; People v. Christman, 66 Ill. 162; Pease v. Hubbard, 37 Ill. 257; Mann v. People, 35 Ill. 467; McFarland v. People, 72 Ill. 368; rules,[1] and is within the statutes allowing amendment,[2] and depositions,[3] and compelling parties in civil proceedings to testify.[4] The paternity of the child may be established by a preponderance of evidence.[5] The evidence of the mother should be corroborated, Willets v. Jeffries, 5 Kan. 470; Baker v. State, 65 Wis. 50; Altschuler v. Algaza, 16 Neb. 631; State v. Snure, 29 Minn. 132; Com. v. Turner, 4 Dana (Ky.), 513; Francis v. Commonwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 6; State v. McIntosh, 64 N. Car. 607; State v. Crouse, 86 N. Car. 617; People v. Harty, 49 Mich. 490; People v. Phalen, 49 Mich. 492. Compare Van Tassel v. State, 59 Wis. 351; Baker v. State, 56 Wis. 568; Bake v. State, 21 Md. 422; Paulk v. State, 52 Ala. 427; Hill v. Wells, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 101. Hyde v. Chapin, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 77; Smith v. Hayden, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 111; Cummings v. Hodgdon, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 246.

Imprisonment may be had for debt in bastardy proceedings. Paulk v. State, 52 Ala. 427; State v. Becht, 23 Minn. 1; Musser v. Stewart, 21 Ohio St. 353; Ex parte Cottrell, 13 Neb. 193; In re Wheeler, 34 Kans. 96; Lower v. Wallack, 25 Ind. 68. Compare Holmes v. State, 2 Green (Iowa), 501.

The requirement that a jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused before they can convict does not apply to bastardy cases. Semon v. People, 42 Mich. 141.

1. Wilbur v. Crane, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 284.

2. Bailey v. Chesley, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 284.

3. State v. Hickerson, 72 N. Car. 421; Richardson v. People, 31 Ill. 170.

4. Booth v. Hart, 43 Conn. 480.

5. Lewis v. People, 82 Ill. 104; McFarland v. People, 72 Ill. 368; People v. Starr, 50 Ill. 50; Allison v. People, 45 Ill. 37; People v. Christman, 66 Ill. 162; Malony v. People, 38 Ill. 62; Mann v. People, 35 Ill. 467; Harper v. State, 101 Ind. 109; Semon v. People, 42 Mich. 141; State v. Romaine, 58 Iowa, 46; State v. Bowen, 14 R. I. 165; Richardson v. Burleigh, 3 Allen (Mass.), 479; State v. Rogers, 79 N. Car. 609; Satterwhite v. State, 28 Ala. 65; Stovall v. State, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 597; Robbins v. Smith, 47 Conn. 182. Compare Van Tassel v. State, 59 Wis. 351.

In a bastardy proceeding the mother and the defendant are not of equal credibility as witnesses, the latter having a pecuniary interest in denying the paternity of the child. McClellan v. State, 66 Wis. 335.

Where the mother swears that the defendant is the father, and the defendant swears that he is not, and they are of equal credibility, the one offsets the other, and unless there is other testimony given, or circumstances proved which give the preponderance to the plaintiff, the defendant should be acquitted. McFarland v. People, 72 Ill. 368. Compare State v. Rogers, 79 N. Car. 609; McClellan v. State, 66 Wis. 335.

The uncorroborated testimony of complainant was held insufficient to sustain a verdict against the defendant, who denied the paternity, and was supported in his evidence by the testimony of others. McCoy v. People, 65 Ill. 439

The relatrix may prove that the defendant was frequently in her company. Marks v. State, 101 Ind. 353.

Letters of the defendant written before the child was begotten referring to indelicate liberties, and expressing a desire for sexual intercourse thereafter, are admissible. Walker v. State, 92 Ind. 474. See Beers v. Jackman, 103 Mass. 192.

Under the Iowa Code, the unsupported evidence of the mother is sufficient to convict. State v. McGlothlen, 56 Iowa, 544.

A bastardy proceeding is quasi criminal, and the defendant must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt to be the father of the child before he can be compelled to contribute to its support. A finding by the court, in such a case, that the defendant is guilty "upon a preponderance of the evidence, but not beyond a reasonable doubt," is equivalent to an acquittal. Van Tassel v. State, 59 Wis. 351.

Admissions of Relatrix.—In a prosecution for bastardy, admissions of the relatrix are not competent evidence, except to impeach her in a proper case. Houser v. State, 93 Ind. 228.

Evidence of a rumor that the mother had been improperly intimate with the defendant is inadmissible. Saint v. State, 68 Ind. 128. Also a rumor that the child was illegitimate. Haddock v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.), 298.

The record of a judgment in an action for seduction by the relatrix against the defendant is not admissible to prove the fact of sexual intercourse. Glenn v. State, 46 Ind. 368. Nor that she had had at a previous time a child by the defendant. Boyle v. Burnett, 9 Gray (Mass.), 251. But sexual intercourse had three years in some material particular, by other testimony,[1] but the charge previous to the time of the alleged intercourse when the child was begotten is admissible, as tending to show the intimacy and relation of the parties to each other at the time the child was conceived. Thayer v. Davis, 38 Vt. 163.

Evidence as to who was the father of an illegitimate child born some fourteen months before the birth of the second child, with whose paternity the defendant is charged, is admissible as tending to corroborate his testimony denying that he is the father. State v. Woodworth, 65 Iowa, 141.

1. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 388.

Corroborative Evidence.—Mr. Saunders in his work on Affiliation (8th Ed.), 55, says: "Supposing no preliminary objection to be taken, the woman will have to substantiate her complaint by proving that the defendant is the father of the child. This proof she must give not only by her own direct and positive testimony, but by some corroborative evidence, in some material particular, apart from herself. In Reg. v. Armitage, 27 L. T. 41; L. R. 7 Q. B. 773, it was held that the evidence of the mother cannot be dispensed with. As the corroborative evidence thus required is to be given merely to the satisfaction of the justices, and as what will satisfy some minds will make little impression upon others, it is impossible to lay down any general rules upon the subject; but it will occur to almost every one that if the woman swear positively to the fact of the defendant being the father of the child, and give her evidence circumstantially, that evidence will be corroborative in a material particular which shows that the defendant has been seen with the woman under very suspicious circumstances indicating close and indecent intimacy between them at or about the time when the sexual intercourse must have taken place. So, too, evidence by other parties of conversations between the woman and the man, in which he has been treated as the father, which he has not denied, or any admission on the part of the defendant that he has had connection with the woman, unless, indeed, her habits in life are notoriously lewd, in which case the latter evidence would be of little weight. Justices will, however, do well to bear in mind that the corroborative evidence is to be of some material particular, guiding their minds to the belief of the fact that the man's being the father of the child: direct evidence of intercourse by such testimony cannot reasonably be expected (indeed, this evidence is supplied by the mother), but the corroboration should be of that nature as, when coupled with the previous evidence of the mother, to lead their minds to the reasonable conclusion that the man is the father of the child. Upon the question of what is sufficient corroborative evidence to justify the justices in making an order, the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench in the case of The Queen v. Pearcy, 16 Jur. 193, Q. B.; 18 L. T. 238; 17 Q. B. 902, note, is in point. There, upon an appeal to the sessions against an order of affiliation, the corroboration consisted of the evidence of the woman's sister (one J. M.), who deposed to a conversation between herself and the defendant, when the latter, in answer to an observation of the mother that he was the father of the child and he must keep it, replied 'he should not, and he would rather go to America.' Upon a case reserved the second question was, whether the evidence given by the said A. M. was or was not corroborated in some material particular by the other witness, the said J. M., who was called on behalf of the said respondent. In giving judgment upon this part of the case, Lord Campbell said: 'As to the question whether there was evidence in corroboration of the mother, the 3d section of the stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101 requires that the evidence of the mother be corroborated in some material particular by other testimony to the satisfaction of the justices. Looking at the evidence set out, we may well suppose that it did corroborate the evidence of the mother to their satisfaction;' and Mr. Justice Patteson remarks, 'Secondly, the evidence of the mother is to be corroborated in some material particular to the satisfaction of the justices, not to our satisfaction.' The corroborative evidence in this case, it must be admitted, was exceedingly slender; still, there may have been circumstances to have given it a weight and an importance beyond what it would appear to be entitled to upon the face of the case as it then stood. But, as Mr. Justice Patteson very truly put it, the statute merely requires the corroboration to be to the satisfaction of the justices; and it was not for the Court of Queen's Bench, therefore, to interfere and say what ought or ought not to have satisfied them. See also Lawrence v. Ingmire, 20 L. T. 391.

"Upon this subject reference may be made to the case of Bessela v. Stern, L. R. 2 C. P. D. 265; 46 L. J. C. P. 467; 42 J. P. 197, in the Court of Appeal.

This was an action for breach of promise of marriage, and the question was whether or not there was coroborative evidence of the promise, the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 68, s. 2, providing 'that no plaintiff in any action for breach of promise of marriage shall recover a verdict unless his or her testimony shall be corroborated by some other material evidence in support of such promise.' Upon the trial the plaintiff gave evidence that the defendant, who had seduced her, had given her a promise of marriage. To corroborate her evidence her sister was called, who deposed, among other things, that on one occasion she had overheard a conversation between the plaintiff and the defendant, in which the plaintiff had said to the defendant, 'You always promised to marry me, but you never kept your word,' and that the defendant had neither denied nor admitted the promise, but offered the plaintiff money, asking her how much she would take to go away. The jury having found for the plaintiff, and on a motion in the court below to enter the verdict for the defendant on the ground that there was no corroborative evidence, and the court having made the rule absolute, Cockburn, C.J., in reversing such judgment in the Court of Appeal, said: 'I think there was corroborative evidence here. The corroboration need not go to the extent of establishing the contract, that is for the principal witness; but it must be something to show that the story told by the principal one is a probable one. Here the plaintiff's sister gives evidence of a conversation overheard between the plaintiff and the defendant, in which the plaintiff says: "You always promised to marry me, and you do not keep your promise," saying it either as a matter of reproach, or to induce the defendant to fulfil the promise. To this assertion there appears to have been no contradiction, but the defendant asked the plaintiff how much money she would take to go away. The jury seem to have believed the plaintiff's sister. If that conversation took place, no doubt it is not conclusive; for a man might not think it worth while to contradict the assertion of the promise, and raise a dispute. On the other hand, it might be said he made no reply to the accusation because he could not with truth deny it. . . . All we have to decide is, whether there was confirmatory evidence, and we can only say that there was, for there was evidence that the woman had taxed the man with the promise, and he had not denied it.' Bramwell, L.J., also said: 'I rather fancy that it has somewhere been said that the word "material" makes no difference in the meaning of the section; and I can only say that, if this is not evidence of some sort, we should get rid of a great mass of evidence daily received in all the courts, and in all kinds of actions for goods sold and delivered, and everything else, namely, evidence that a claim was made under circumstances in which the defendant could have denied the truth of it, and he did not deny it. If in such a case it would not have been natural to deny it, it is no evidence of an admission that he does not. But if a denial is what one would naturally expect, it is strong evidence of an admission, and must be considered as corroboration of the claim set up.' Brett, L. J., also expressed himself in the following words: 'The first question is, Did the jury believe the witness? If they did, the next question is, Would it have been natural at the time when the woman made the statement that the man should have contradicted it? If so, the jury had a right to consider 'his not denying it' evidence of the truth of what she said. This is a kind of evidence which is admitted every day, and if it is admitted here, it is corroborative evidence of the promise of marriage.' It will be observed that in this case the only question was as to whether or not there was in fact corroborative evidence, not whether or not such evidence ought to have been deemed to be conclusive, it being for the jury, as in the case of an affiliation summons it would be for the justices, to estimate the value and weight of such evidence.

"In dealing with the question of the existence and effect of corroborative evidence, the justices will not be confined to the consideration of facts which occurred at or about the time when the child must have been begotten; but they may consider any circumstances, though long antecedent to such time, if they are of opinion that they lead to a moral conviction of their corroborating the woman's evidence. Upon this subject the recent case of Cole (appellant) v. Manning (respondent), 46 L. J. M. C. 175, is of considerable value. This case was one stated by a metropolitan police magistrate upon a refusal by him to make an order of affiliation upon the ground of a want of corroborative evidence. In his statement of facts he set out that at the hearing it was proved that the appellant had been delivered of a bastard child on the 10th October, 1875, and that she swore that the respondent was the father of such child, the connection having taken place at his house on an evening in January,

1875; that of that meeting and that intercourse there was no corroborative evidence. But it was proved to his entire satisfaction that during the summer of 1874, several months before the child could have been begotten, the parents of the appellant, with whom previously to that date the respondent had been on terms of trust, friendship, and intimacy, refused him the house, and quarrelled with him, owing to their suspicions with regard to his conduct towards the appellant; that they deposed that they surprised the appellant and respondent together on more than one occasion; that the door of the parlor where they were was closed for a minute or two against them; that the appellant sat on the knee of the respondent; and to other circumstances which would have had great effect on his (the magistrate's) judgment, had they occurred at or about the time when the child might have been begotten; that the appellant was rather of weak intellect, but that there was no evidence of any similar misconduct on her part with other men than the respondent. The magistrate stated that, after taking time to consider, he was of opinion that he was not at liberty so to interpret the words of the statute, "if the evidence of the mother be corroborated in some material particular," as to include evidence of facts long antecedent and having no direct relation to the actual begetting of the child, however strong might be the moral conviction such facts might convey to his mind, but that the word 'material' must be taken to imply a closer connection of the 'particular' in question than was in this case apparent with occurrences at or about the time when the child must have been begotten, or with subsequent words or actions of respondent tending to fix the paternity. In his judgment, Mellor, J., said: 'I think the magistrate was mistaken here. It was within his competency to receive the evidence, and to consider it. And, if I rightly understand him, he would, if he had thought himself at liberty to entertain this evidence at all, have found in favor of the complainant. There is no rule of law that he could not consider evidence of this character, though anterior to the time of the conception of the child, yet to show as a probability that sexual intercourse might have taken place. Nothing appears to show that the statements of what occurred in the summer of 1874 were not bona fide. Indeed, the magistrate says they satisfied him as to the facts to which they related. The effect then of such evidence on the question of paternity was entirely for him. If he thinks it did materially corroborate the mother's statement, he was entitled to receive and act upon it; and the case must be remitted to him.' Also Field, J., said: 'I also think that the case should be remitted to the magistrate to hear and determine; and he is quite at liberty to consider the evidence of the facts proposed to be given before him as corroborating the mother's statement. The object of the act of Parliament was to give to a woman the right to have her bastard infant maintained by the father; but on account of the danger of setting the evidence of a woman singly against that of a man singly in reference to a transaction which always takes place in secret, the act said that her evidence must be corroborated in some material particular. It is admitted that evidence of these facts would be material if they had occurred at a different time. The magistrate thinks so, and any reasonable person would say the same. Those facts are, that the appellant is a woman of weak intellect, and the respondent, being very intimate with her parents, was found taking advantage of her, and was forbidden the house in consequence. All such evidence must be entirely for the magistrate to consider the weight of. There is no rule of law that, because the circumstances took place some months before, they are not to be considered in the light of corroboration. I am very clearly of opinion that they ought.'

"When the summons is taken out more than twelve months from the birth of the child, it will be a necessary part of the applicant's proof that the putative father has, within such twelve months, paid money for the maintenance of the child; and such proof will be corroborative evidence, if given by testimony other than that of the woman. Reg. v. Berry, 28 L. J. M. C. 86, in which case Lord Campbell, C. J., said: 'As to the second objection, we never entertained the smallest doubt, clearly thinking that it was necessary to prove at the hearing the payment of money by the defendant as alleged; and further, that his payment of money for the maintenance of the child was corroborative evidence of the paternity.' It is not, however, necessary that this proof of the payment of money, if given by the mother, should be corroborated in order to give jurisdiction. Hodges v. Bennett, 29 L. J. M. C. 224.

"When the application has not been made within the twelve months after the birth of the child, in consequence of the man having ceased to reside in England within such twelve months, though made need not be established beyond a reasonable doubt.[1] The mother is a competent witness to prove her own adultery,[2] but the evidence of a married woman is not admissible to prove non-access by her husband.[3] Evidence of the mother's reputation for chas-

within the twelve months next after his return, the woman must give some affirmative evidence of these facts, and if unable to prove them by other testimony she may call the man himself as a witness to prove them.

"The putative father himself may be called as a witness for the complainant (14 and 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 2), though for obvious reasons it will generally be undesirable for her to run the risk of the testimony he may give."

Where the mother swears that the defendant is the father of the child, and he denies it, it is not necessary, in order to warrant a verdict of guilty, that the other evidence, by itself and independent of the mother's testimony, should satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. McClellan v. State, 66 Wis. 335; State v. Rogers, 79 N. Car. 609. Compare McFarland v. People, 72 Ill. 368.

A complaint under the Massachusetts bastardy act need not allege that the complainant, during travail, accused the defendant of being the father of her child, or that she had continued constant in that accusation; and, without such allegation, the fact may be shown to corroborate her testimony at the trial. Bowers v. Wood, 9 N. Eastn. Repr. (Mass.) 534.

Declarations made by the complainant to her mother, before the birth of the child, as to its paternity, in which she was constant in her accusation of the defendant as the father, were admissible in corroboration of her testimony. Robbins v. Smith, 47 Conn. 182.

1. Maloney v. People, 38 Ill. 62; Young v. Makepeace, 103 Mass. 50; People v. Cantine, 1 Mich. N. P. 140; Semon v. People, 42 Mich. 141. Compare Baker v. State, 47 Wis. 111; Van Tassel v. State, 59 Wis. 351.

2. Scott v. Ely, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 555; Com. v. Wentz, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 269; Baxter v. Columbia, 16 Ohio, 56; State v. Adams, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 279; State v. Barrow, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 121.

The testimony of the wife that a man other than her husband is the father is not admissible. Stegall v. Stegall, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 257; Dennison v. Page, 29 Pa. St. 420; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 644; Com. v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 283; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 449.

The mother has an interest in the result, which may be considered by the jury in weighing her evidence. Keating v. State, 44 Ind. 449.

At a trial of a complaint under the bastardy act, testimony of the complainant's accusation of the defendant is competent, where it appears that the accusation was made after the child was born, but before the umbilical cord was cut. Tacey v. Noyes, 9 N. Eastn. Repr. (Mass.) 830.

3. Mink v. State, 60 Wis. 583; Watts v. Owens, 62 Wis. 512; Dennison v. Page, 29 Pa. St. 420; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 644; Tioga v. South Creek, 75 Pa. St. 436; Com. v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 283; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 449; Boykin v. Boykin, 70 N. Car. 262; State v. Pettaway, 3 Hawks (N. Car.), 625; State v. Wilson, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 131; Chamberlain v. People, 23 N. Y. 88; People v. Overseers, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 286; Cross v. Cross, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 139; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 778; Hemmenway v. Towner, 1 Allen (Mass.), 209; Corson v. Corson, 44 N. H. 587; Parker v. Way, 15 N. H. 45; Egbert v. Greenwalt, 44 Mich. 245.

"Great difficulties often arise in proving the non-access of the husband, since, notwithstanding the woman is a competent witness to prove her own adultery, she is not such to prove the non-access of her husband. The testimony of the husband or wife that, though living together, they have had no connection, and that therefore the offspring is spurious, has, on the general ground of decency, morality, and policy, been uniformly rejected. Goodright v. Moss, 2 Cowp. 594; Cope v. Cope, 1 Moo. & Rob. 269; 2 C. & P. 604; R. v. Mansfield, 1 Q. B. 444; Corn v. Shepherd, 6 Bing. 283. And that rule excludes not only all direct questions, but all questions which have a tendency to prove or disprove that fact unless they are put with a view to prove a different point in the case. R. v. Sourton, 5 Ad. & Ell. 180; Wright v. Holdgate, 3 Car. & Kir. 158. Nor is it affected by the circumstance that at the time of the examination of one of the parents the other is dead, because the rule has been established not simply on the ground that the tendency of such evidence is to promote connubial dissension, but on the broad basis of general public policy. R. v. Kea, 11 East, 132. If, therefore, it is necessary to prove non-access, such as that arising from the fact of the husband being abroad, imprisoned, or ill in a hospital or the wife living notoriously separate from her husband and in a state of abandoned prostitution at the time when the child must have been conceived, such evidence must be given by other testimony than that of either the husband or the wife.

"When a married woman has a child, the presumption is in favor of its legitimacy. Formerly, indeed, the presumption was that if the husband continued within the four seas, and was alive at the child's birth, such child would not be a bastard. But now the law allows inquiry, the rule, however, being that those who dispute the fact of the child's legitimacy are bound to make out the contrary. Per Creswell, J., in Wright v. Holdgate, 3 Car. & Kir. 158. In Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beav. 552, Lord Langdale, M. R., said: 'A child born of a married woman is in the first instance presumed to be legitimate. This presumption thus established by law is not to be rebutted by circumstances which only create a doubt and suspicion; but it may be wholly removed by showing that the husband was, first, incompetent; second, entirely absent so as to have had no intercourse or communication of any kind with the mother; thirdly, entirely absent at the period during which the child must, in the course of nature, have been begotten; fourthly, only present under such circumstances as afford clear and satisfactory proof that there was no sexual intercourse. Such evidence as this puts an end to the question, and establishes the illegitimacy of the child of a married woman.' In Saye and Sele Barony, 1 Ho. Lords Cas. 507, it was held that the illegitimacy of a child born of a married woman is established beyond all dispute by evidence of her living in adultery at the time when the child was begotten, and of her husband then residing in another part of the kingdom, so as to make access impossible. In Cope v. Cope, 5 C. & P. 604; 1 Moo. & Rob. 269, Alderson, B., said: 'If a husband have access, and others at the same time are carrying on a criminal intimacy with his wife, a child born under such circumstances is legitimate in the eye of the law. But if the husband and wife are living separate, and the wife is notoriously living in open adultery, although the husband have an opportunity of access, it would be monstrous to suppose that under these circumstances he would avail himself of such opportunity.' See also Morris v. Davies, 5 Cl. & Fin. 163; 3 C.& P. 215; Rex v. Luffe, 8 East, 193; Gurney v. Gurney, 32 L. J. Ch. 456; 8 L. T. 380. In Plowes v. Bossey, 31 L. J. 681, Ch.; 7 L. T. 306, Vice-Chancellor Kindersley thus clearly enunciates the law upon the subject. He says: 'A child born of a married woman is presumed, prima facie, to be legitimate—that is, to have been procreated by the husband—and our law respects and supports the legitimacy of such child; and although it does not prohibit any person interested from making out the illegitimacy, it throws the onus probandi entirely upon such person. If the case is that the husband and wife never were together within the period during which, according to the law of nature, they must have been to make the child the child of both, or that they were together either in company with others or under circumstances making the fact impossible, the onus is on the person alleging such a fact to prove it. . . . And further, when a person alleges the illegitimacy of the child of a married woman, and brings forward evidence to show that such child was not procreated by the husband, the law will not allow the presumed status of the child to be taken away merely on the balance of probability. The evidence must, on the contrary, not only be such as to raise in the mind of a judge or jury strong doubts, but it must be such as to produce a judicial conviction that the child was not procreated by the husband.' See also Atchley v. Sprigg, 33 L. J. 345, Ch.; 10 L. T. 16; also the recent cases of Hawes v. Draeger, L. R. 23 Ch. D. 173; 31 W. R. 576; 48 L. T. 518; 52 L. J. Ch. 449; Inglis v. Inglis, 16 L. T. 775." Saunders on Affiliation (8th Ed.), 66.

On the question of the legitimacy of her children, the wife cannot give evidence, even as to collateral facts, tending to show non-access of her husband during the time in which they must have been begotten. Mink v. State, 60 Wis. 583. In this case the court said: "Asking the prosecutrix 'who came with her from Iowa,' where she had lived with her husband, included her husband, and implied the inquiry whether he came with her; and the answer, 'I came alone,' established the fact that he did not come with her. The question, 'Where was your husband at any particular time,' whether during the time within which the child was begotten or not, was held in King v. Inhabitants, etc., 5 Ad. & El. 180, to be a collateral fact directly connected with the main fact, and objectionable. The second of the above questions comes directly within this decision. 'Where was your husband when you came from Iowa?' and her answer, 'I don't know where he was,' implied that they were estranged from each other, or that they had permanently separated; or, at least, that they were not together or near each other. By the rule of evidence in ordinary cases such a condition of their relations as husband and wife would be presumed to have continued to that time, the contrary not being proved. The last of the above questions, and the answer, were positive and direct proof that the husband had had no access to her during the time in which the child must have been begotten. 'Have you ever had connection with any other man?' 'No, sir; I never did.' This question was understood to refer to the time within which some other man might have begotten the child, and 'any other man' embraced all men, including the husband, except the defendant. All these questions were very strongly objectionable, and the answers more so." Dennison v. Page, 29 Pa. St. 420; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 644; People v. Overseers, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 286; Com. v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 283; State v. Pettaway, 3 Hawks (N. Car.), 625; Cope v. Cope, 1 Moo. & R. 269; King v. Inhabitants, etc., 5 Ad. & El. 180.

tity is admissible;[1] it is competent to prove that she had intercourse with other men about the time the child was begotten.[2]

1. Short v. State, 4 Harr. (Del.) 568; Com. v. Moore, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Sword v. Nestor, 3 Dana (Ky.), 453; State v Coatney, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 210; Walker v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind) 1; Rawles v. State, 56 Ind. 433; Duffries v. State, 7 Wis. 672; Fall v. Overseers, 3 Munf. (Va) 495; State v. Karver, 65 Iowa, 53. See Morse v. Pineo, 4 Vt. 281; State v. Pratt, 40 Iowa, 631. Compare Sidelinger v. Bucklin, 64 Me. 371; Eddy v. Gray, 4 Allen (Mass.), 435; Bookhout v. State, 66 Wis. 415.

In a bastardy proceeding, especially where the complainant claims to have been ravished, where the only question is that of paternity, and the circumstances are such as not to preclude the possibility that one other than the defendant may be the father of the child, it is proper to show the unchaste conduct of the woman with such other person, and that, on account of such conduct, trouble arose between her and the family of defendant, thus showing a motive on her part for falsely charging the defendant. State v. Karver, 65 Iowa, 53.

2. Bowen v. Reed, 103 Mass. 46. See Kinner v. State, 45 Ind. 175; Walker v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 1; Whitman v. State, 34 Ind. 360; State v. Pratt, 40 Iowa, 631; State v. Wilson, 16 Ind. 134; O'Brian v. State, 14 Ind. 469; Ginn v. Commonwealth, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 300; Paull v. Padelford, 16 Gray (Mass.), 263; Knight v. Moore, 54 Vt. 432; Holcomb v. People, 79 Ill. 409; State v. Britt, 78 N. Car. 439. See State v. Read, 45 Iowa, 469. Compare State v. Bennett, 75 N. Car. 305.

On cross-examination she may be required to answer if she had connection with other men about the time the child was begotten. Walker v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 1; Benham v. State, 91 Ind. 82; Ginn v. Commonwealth, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 300; Duffries v. State, 7 Wis. 672; U. S. v. Collins, 1 Cranch C. C. 592. Compare Low v. Mitchell, 18 Me. 372; Sterling v. Sterling, 41 Vt. 80; State v. Parish, 83 N. Car. 613; State v. Bryan, 83 N. Car. 611.

Although she may, on cross-examination, answer without objection questions as to lewd conduct with other men outside of the time in which the child might have been begotten, this does not render admissible evidence to discredit her answers. Sterling v. Sterling, 41 Vt. 80.

Evidence of her intercourse with other men within the period in which she might become pregnant with the child in controversy is admitted, because it would show that she could not know who was the father of the child; but if the defendant admitted that he also had intercourse with her about the same time, the proof may be rejected. Fall v. Overseers, 3 Munf. (Va.) 495.

If the alleged acts occurred more than ten months prior to the birth they cannot be shown, unless it be also proved that the period of gestation was longer than usual. Duck v. State, 17 Ind. 210; Eddy v. Gray, 4 Allen (Mass.), 435; Sabin v. Jones, 119 Mass. 167; Parker v. Dudley, 118 Mass. 602; Bowen v. Reed, 103 Mass. 46; Knight v. Morse, 54 Vt. 432.

The acts must have occurred between the first of the tenth month and first of the sixth month before the birth of the child. Crawford v. State, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 41. See State v. Smith, 61 Iowa, 538; Benham v. State, 91 Ind. 82; O'Brian v. State, 14 Ind. 469.

Evidence that the mother had intercourse with a man other than the respondent, less than seven and a half months before the birth of the child, is inadmissible in the absence of evidence that the birth was premature. Ronan v. Dugan, 126 Mass. 176.

The usual period of gestation is nine calendar months, but there is very com-

Declarations of a deceased mother that her child was born before her marriage, and corroborating statements by her of the circumstances and history of her life, are competent evidence to prove that the child was illegitimate.[1]

Evidence tending to show the motive of complainant in charging upon the defendant the paternity of a child which should have been charged upon another is admissible.[2] She may testify that the defendant had procured medicines for her for the purpose of procuring an abortion.[3] Declarations made by the mother, before the birth of the child, are admissible;[4] also, monly a difference of one, two, or three weeks. For some cases of an extraordinarily long period see Com. v. Hoover, cited in Am. Jour. of Med. Sci., No. 24 (N. S.), Oct. 1846, p. 535; Lewis Cr. L. 50.

If a doubt is raised as to the paternity by reason of the mother's connection with other men at about the time it was begotten, other facts may be shown sufficient to satisfy the jury that the accused is the father. Altschuler v. Algaza, 16 Neb. 631; State v. Pratt, 40 Iowa. 631.

Where a complainant testifies that the defendant had sexual intercourse with her at a certain time and is the father of her bastard child, and two witnesses swear that they had connection with her about the same time, it is not error for the court to refuse to give an instruction that if they believe the last witnesses they should find for the defendant. Altschuler v. Algaza, 16 Neb. 631.

The defendant in a bastardy proceeding may ask the relatrix whether she has had sexual connection with others about the time the child was begotten, and when the relatrix testifies that she had connection with him at several different times within four or five days of each other, about a certain time, and a fully developed child is born in less than nine months thereafter, the court should not limit the time within which such inquiry may be made to two weeks preceding the time she thinks the child was begotten. Benham v. State, 91 Ind. 82.

Evidence contradicting the mother's statements denying her intercourse with other men is admissible for the purpose of affecting her credibility before the jury. Altschuler v. Algaza, 16 Neb. 631; State v. Read, 45 Iowa, 469; McCoy v. People, 65 Ill. 439.

Evidence that the prosecutrix slept with her son, who might have been the father of the child, is admissible to impeach her testimony. State v. Reed, 45 Iowa, 469.

Evidence that the mother kept company with other men at a time when the child might have been begotten is not competent for the defendant, though she has denied the fact, unless it is offered for the purpose of proving sexual connection with such men. Houser v. State, 93 Ind. 228. Compare State v. Read, 45 Iowa, 469.

The time of the alleged intercourse with another man must be fixed. Meyncke v. State, 68 Ind. 401.

Where it appeared that the prosecutrix had had intercourse with two men within such short time as to make it doubtful as to which caused the pregnancy, held, that her positive testimony as to the paternity should not control. Baker v. State, 47 Wis. 111.

Where the complainant was the mother of another bastard child, born some fourteen months prior to the one in question, it was competent, under the facts of this case (see opinion), to ask her, when on the stand, who the father of the first child was. State v. Woodworth, 65 Iowa, 141.

1. Haddock v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.), 298.

2. State v. Karver, 65 Iowa, 53; S. C., 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 88.

3. McIlvain v. State, 80 Ind. 69. See Young v. Makepeace, 103 Mass. 50; Sweet v. Sherman, 21 Vt. 23.

The defendant cannot show that the mother endeavored to procure an abortion. Sweet v. Sherman, 21 Vt. 23.

The fact that during the woman's pregnancy, which was well known in the neighborhood, defendant made inquiries and offers to pay for the means of making a woman miscarry is relevant and competent evidence against him, though he professed to make such inquiries and offers for another person. Nicholson v. State, 72 Ala. 176. See Marston v. Jenness, 11 N. H. 156; Davis v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 494.

4. Robbins v. Smith, 47 Conn. 182; Fuller v. Hampton, 5 Conn. 417; Manye v. Holmes, 7 Allen (Mass.), 136. See Reed v. Haskins, 116 Mass. 198.

Declarations made by the relatrix out

declarations made at the time of travail.[1] The father of the mother who is a minor is a competent witness.[2] Statements and acknowledgments of the putative father as to the relation he sustained to the mother are competent.[3]

The resemblance of the child to the putative father is not admissible to show paternity.[4] The health of the child and mother and the wealth of the father should be considered in awarding the amount of judgment.[5] Impotence of the putative father may be proved as a defence.[6] The declaration of the putative father that the child was illegitimate is competent evidence.[7]

The defendant's reputation for morality cannot be admitted in evidence in a bastardy prosecution, where he has not been impeached as a witness.[8] of court are competent evidence. Welch v. Clark, 50 Vt. 386.

1. Hauser v. Gustin, 2 Allen (Mass.), 402; Reed v. Haskins, 116 Mass. 198; Robbins v. Smith, 47 Conn. 182; Wilson v. Woodside, 57 Me. 489. See Booth v. Hart. 43 Conn. 480. Compare Richmond v. State, 19 Wis. 307; Sidelinger v. Bucklin. 64 Me. 371.

She will not be allowed to prove that she has been constant in an accusation which she never made in travail. Ray v. Coffin, 123 Mass. 365; Sidelinger v. Bucklin, 64 Me. 371.

2. Smith v. State, 1 Houst. Cr. Cas. (Del.) 107.

The defendant may prove them for the purpose of impeaching her testimony. Tholke v. State, 50 Ind. 355.

3. Woodward v. Shaw, 18 Me. 304; Sale v. Crutchfield, 8 Bush (Ky.), 647. See Walker v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 1.

In a prosecution for bastardy, letters of the defendant, written before the child was begotten, stating the intimacy of their relations, referring to the fact that he had taken indelicate liberties with her person, and expressing a desire for sexual intercourse thereafter, are proper evidence against him. Walker v. State ex rel., 92 Ind. 474.

4. People v. Carney, 29 Hun (N. Y.). 47; Young v. Makepeace, 103 Mass. 50; Eddy v. Gray, 4 Allen (Mass.), 435; State v. Danforth, 48 Iowa, 43. See Keniston v. Rowe, 16 Me. 38; U. S. v. Collins, 1 Cranch C. C. 592; Paulk v. State, 52 Ala. 427; Petrie v. Howe, 4 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 85. Compare State v Britt, 78 N. Car. 439; Finnegan v. Dugan, 14 Allen (Mass.), 197; Gilmanton v. Ham, 38 N. H. 108.

In State v. Smith, 54 Iowa, 104; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 192, the court said: "The child in this case was two years and one month old. The defendant claims that any resemblance, if it should be thought to exist, between such a child and a man alleged to be its father is too unreliable to constitute legal evidence of the alleged paternity. It is a well-known fact that resemblances often exist between persons who are not related, and are wanting between persons who are. Still, what is called family resemblance is sometimes so marked as scarcely to admit of a mistake. We are of the opinion, therefore, that a child of the proper age may be exhibited to a jury as evidence of alleged paternity. Precisely what should be deemed the proper age we need not determine. . . . A child which is only three months old has that peculiar immaturity of features which characterizes an infant during the time it is called a babe. A child two years old or more has to a large exent put off that peculiar immaturity. In allowing a child of that age to be exhibited we think the court did not err."

It seems that it is proper to show on behalf of the defendant that the child resembles a third person who has had opportunity for illicit intercourse with the mother, but not that it resembles a man who had been seen with the prosecutrix. Paulk v. State, 52 Ala. 427; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 67.

Evidence of the color of the child's eyes is not admissible to show its paternity. People v. Carney, 29 Hun (N. Y.), 47.

5. Mills v. Hamaker, 11 Iowa, 206.

6. State v. Broadway, 69 N. Car. 411. See Com. v. Wentz, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 269; Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beav. 552.

7. Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251. Compare Bowles v. Bingham, 2 Munf. (Va.) 442; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 497.

8. Houser v. State, 93 I. S. 228.

Entry in a baptismal register is competent to prove only the fact and date of baptism.[1]

The testamentary recognition of a child as legitimate is of the highest legal authority. All presumptions are to be taken in favor of such a declaration.[2]

When bastardy proceedings are instituted by the mother, proof that the child is likely to become a public charge is not necessary to support a judgment against the defendant.[3]

1. Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175. See Morrissey v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 47 Mo. 521; Clark v. Trinity Church, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 266; Kennedy v. Doyle, 10 Allen (Mass.), 161; Whitcher v. McLaughlin, 115 Mass. 167. Compare App. of Goerman, 1 Atl. Repr. (Pa.) 446; Canjolle v. Ferrie, 23 N. Y. 90; Morris v. Davies, 3 C. & P. 215.

2. Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. (U. S.) 553.

3. Baker v. State, 65 Wis. 50.

Defences.—The gist of the offence of bastardy is the refusal of the putative father to give bond for the support of the child. A prosecution for bastardy is a species of protective measure to prevent counties becoming chargeable with pauper bastards. Therefore the county to which the bastard is likely to become chargeable has jurisdiction of a bastardy case, and not the county in which the child was begotten or born. Williams v. State, 67 Ga. 187; s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 65.

If it can be proved that, at the time of the supposed connection, the man was under fourteen years of age, the case cannot be supported, the law presuming that up to that age the man is impotent; and upon this point the law as applicable to rapes is strictly analogous, under which it has been frequently held that no infant under the above age can be indicted for this offence, even though evidence can be adduced of his competency. 1 Hale, 620, 630; Reg. v. Bromilow, 2 Moo. C. C. 122; Reg. v. Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582; Reg. v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118.

Death of a bastard child pending the prosecution of the reputed father does not abate the action. Hinton v. Dickinson, 19 Ohio St. 583. Compare State v. Beatty; 61 Iowa. 307. Nor does the marriage of the mother. Roth v. Jacobs, 21 Ohio St. 646.

Proof that the reputed father is impotent is a complete defence. State v. Broadway, 69 N. Car. 411.

To an indictment for bastardy, N. pleaded: 1st. Not guilty; 2d. That the prosecution was not commenced within a year from the commission of the offence as alleged in the indictment; 3d. That the prosecution was not commenced within a year from the birth of the child; 4th. That the warrant issued by the justice was not a proper warrant; 5th. That he was arrested on a warrant issued by one O. J. M., justice, and was tried by one J., another justice, and judgment was rendered against him, from which he appealed to the circuit court, and was indicted, and the indictment quashed; that he was arrested again and taken before O. J. M., justice, and judgment was again rendered against him, from which he appealed; and that he now appeared to answer to the indictment found on this appeal. The State demurred to the second, fourth, and fifth pleas, and joined issue upon the first and third pleas. Held, that the second plea was bad; a good plea would have alleged that the prosecution was not begun within a year from the birth of the child; that the fourth and fifth pleas were also bad; that the fifth plea, if intended as a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, was bad, because it showed that all that was required to give jurisdiction to the court was done, and that having jurisdiction, the regularity or irregularity of the proceedings before the justice did not affect the questions at issue upon the indictment; and that if the fifth plea was intended as a plea of former acquittal, it was defective because it did not allege that N. had been tried and acquitted, and the quashing of the indictment did not operate as an acquittal, nor did it prevent N. from being again indicted. Neff v. State, 57 Md. 385.

A statute providing for the maintenance of bastard children does not apply to the case of a child which is still-born, and which, if born alive, would be a bastard. Schramm v. Stephan, 133 Mass. 559; Canfield v. State, 56 Ind. 168.

Where, in a prosecution for bastardy, the relatrix introduces evidence tending to prove efforts on the part of the defendant, after knowledge of her pregnancy, to induce the marriage of the relatrix to another man, the defendant may prove that he, in fact, discouraged such marriage. Beaver v. Bottorff, 82 Ind. 538.

Where an action was properly begun against the defendant for bastardy, but the child was afterwards born dead, the action should have been dismissed. The defendant is not liable for the lying-in expenses of the mother, and a judgment against defendant, even for costs, was erroneous. State v. Beatty, 61 Iowa, 307.

It is not proper to join the mother of a bastard child with the State in a proceeding to fix the paternity upon the putative father. State v. Collins, 85 N. Car. 511.

A prosecution for bastardy must be commenced within two years from the birth of the child, notwithstanding the relatrix is an infant. State v. Pavey, 82 Ind. 543.

In March, 1874, the respondent in a bastardy process was adjudged to be the father of the child and ordered to pay the mother seventy-five cents a week for its support. In September, 1878, the town where such child had a legal settlement applied to the court praying that an execution might issue for the amount due under the order. Held, that an execution cannot issue in such a case. Madison v. Gray, 72 Me. 254.

Period of Gestation.—A defence very frequently set up is that, notwithstanding the defendant has had sexual intercourse with the applicant at some time, none has taken place which could have led to the conception of the child. This defence is often productive of great difficulty, since it not uncommonly occurs that the woman is unable to speak with certainty to the exact time when the connection occurred which she alleges resulted in her pregnancy; and in all such cases where the intercourse has been upon one occasion only, or at long intervals, serious embarrassments may arise in tracing it back to the period when conception must have taken place. The uncertainty, too, of the natural length of the period of gestation presents in many cases very great difficulties in the way of coming to a correct decision. By the common consent and experience of mankind the term of gestation is considered to be ten lunar months or forty weeks (280 days), equal to nine calendar months and a week. Beck's Med. Jour. 356. This period has been adopted because general observation in cases which allowed of accurate observation has proved its correctness. It is not to be denied, however, that differences of one or two weeks often occur. The shortest period at which gestation may terminate consistently with the life of the child has not been precisely ascertained. There are satisfactory cases on record in which, from the degree of development of the infant at birth, as well as from other circumstances, it may be certainly known not to have attained twenty-six or twenty-seven weeks, and in which by careful treatment the infant was reared in a condition of health and vigor. Gestation may be occasionally prolonged for one or two, even three, weeks beyond the ordinary period. Carpenter's Man. Phys. 478. The Prussian civil code declares that an infant born 302 days after the death of the husband shall be considered legitimate; and by the Code Napoleon it is declared that "The legitimacy of a child born 300 days after the dissolution of marriage may be disputed." The ordinary period, therefore, of gestation being forty weeks, the justices will naturally look with great suspicion at evidence of paternity which dates the intercourse said to have produced conception at a period some weeks beyond or within that time. If the period exceeds by three weeks the ten lunar months (forty weeks), they may fairly reject the proof; but, on the contrary, if the period be two or three months within it, they will hardly be justified in such a course, though they may fairly require evidence on the part of the mother showing that the birth was in fact premature.

Where the time between the alleged intercourse, as testified to by the prosecutrix, and the birth of the child, was only about seven months, it was error to instruct the jury that evidence tending to show that the child was prematurely born was corroborative of the testimony of the prosecutrix that defendant was the father of the child. The most that should have been said was, that the premature birth was not inconsistent with such testimony. State v. Smith, 61 Iowa, 538.

In a prosecution under the bastardy act it appeared that the time intervening between the date at which the mother testified the child was begotten by the defendant and the date of its birth was forty days less than the usual period of gestation. The physician who attended at its birth having testified that he thought the child was not fully developed, because, among other things, it had no hair and its finger and toe nails were not fully developed, other physicians, examined as experts on behalf of the defendant, were asked if a scientific medical opinion as to the maturity or immaturity of a child could be based on the lack of hair, eyebrows, toe nails, etc. An objection to the question was sustained. Held, error. Daegling v. State, 56 Wis. 586.

The following table may assist the inquiry.

PERIODS OF GESTATION.

IF THE DATE OF BIRTH BE	1	2	3	4
	9 Cal. Mos. or 10Lnr.Mos. 40 weeks, or 280 days previously would be	8 Cal. Mos. or 9 Lnr. Mos. 36 weeks, or 252 days previously would be	7 Cal. Mos. or 8 Lnr. Mos. 32 weeks, or 224 days previously would be	6 Cal. Mos. or 7 Lnr. Mos. 28 weeks, or 196 days previously would be
1st Jan.	27th Mar	24th Apr.	22d May	18thJune
10th "	9th April	4th May	1st June	28th "
20th "	16th "	14th "	11th "	8th July
1st Feb.	27th Apr.	25th May	22d June	20thJuly
10th "	7th May	4th June	2d July	30th "
20th "	17th "	14th "	12th "	9th Aug.
1stMar.	25th May	22d June	20thJuly	17thAug.
10th "	4th June	2d July	30th "	27th "
20th "	14th "	12th "	9th Aug.	6th Sept.
1st Apr.	25thJune	23d July	20thAug.	17thSept.
10th "	5th July	2d Aug.	30th "	27th "
20th "	15th "	12th "	9th Sept.	7th Oct.
1st May	25thJuly	22d Aug.	19thSept.	17th Oct.
10th "	3d Aug..	1st Sept.	29th "	27th "
20th "	13th "	11th "	9th Oct.	6th Nov.
1stJune	25thAug.	22d Sept.	20th Oct.	17th Nov.
10th "	4th Sept.	2d Oct.	30th "	27th "
20th "	14th "	12th "	9th Nov.	7th Dec.
1st July	24th Sep.	22d Oct.	19thNov.	17th Dec.
10th "	4th Oct.	1st Nov.	29th "	27th "
20th "	14th "	11th "	9th Dec.	7th Jan.
1stAug.	25th Oct.	22d Nov.	20th Dec.	17th Jan.
10th "	4th Nov.	2d Dec.	30th "	27th "
20th "	14th "	12th "	9th Jan.	6th Feb.
1st Sept	25thNov.	23d Dec.	20thJan.	17th Feb.
10th "	5th Dec.	2d Jan.	30th "	27th "
20th "	15th "	12th "	9th Feb.	9th Mar.
1st Oct.	25th Dec.	22d Jan.	19th Feb.	19thMar.
10th "	4th Jan.	1st Feb.	1st March	29th "
20th "	14th "	11th "	11th "	9th April
1stNov.	25th Jan.	22d Feb.	22d Mar.	19th Apr.
10th "	4th Feb.	4th March	1st April	29th "
20th "	14th "	14th "	11th "	9th May
1st Dec.	24th Feb.	24th Mar	21stApril	19th May
10th "	6th March	3d April	1st May	29th "
20th "	16th "	13th "	11th "	8th June

Practice.—The entry of a plea of not guilty upon the refusal of the accused to plead to a complaint in bastardy, though unauthorized and unnecessary, is not ground for a reversal of the judgment. Informalities in a recognizance to answer the complaint in bastardy proceedings are immaterial after the party has appeared and been tried. Bookhout v. State, 66 Wis. 415.

In bastardy proceedings if no new recognizance is entered into, the one taken before the magistrate continues in full force, and is held as a security that the defendant shall perform the orders of the county court in the premises. Nor will a surrender of the principal in court, after judgment has been rendered against him, discharge such surety. Garvin v. Walsh, 54 Vt. 367.

The defendant in a prosecution for bastardy escaped from the constable who had arrested him, before the warrant had been returned; whereupon the justice, without any appearance by the defendant, tried the cause and certified it up to the circuit court, where, without the issuance of any summons, warrant, or notice, and without any appearance by the defendant, except specially to move to dismiss the cause, the court defaulted the defendant, tried the cause, found the defendant guilty, assessed a recovery for the maintenance of the child, and ordered that, on failnre of the defendant to replevy the judgment, a warrant be issued by the clerk, to the sheriff, for his arrest and commitment. Held, on a special finding of the foregoing facts, made on a petition by the defendant against the sheriff for release from commitment on such warrant, that the judgment was unlawful and the commitment illegal. Patterson v. State, 70 Ind. 94.

Where a defendant in a bastardy case has been arrested and escapes, and the case certified to the circuit court, the defendant may thereafter be arrested though more than four years have elapsed since the institution of the proceedings before the justice. Patterson v. State, 91 Ind. 364.

The fact that the defendant in a bastardy proceeding has no property, and no means of obtaining money except by his labor, will not justify the reversal of a judgment of five hundred dollars, payable in instalments, for the support of the child. Scott v. State, 102 Ind. 277.

In bastardy proceedings under the statute, when the plaintiff causes the suit to be discontinued by reason of miscarriage, the defendant is not entitled to costs. Eagen v. Bergen, 56 Vt. 589.

The recovery in bastardy proceedings is allowed, not for the benefit of the mother, but for that of the child. State v. Wing, 75 Ind. 142.

In a complaint under the law relating to bastardy, it should be stated, affirmatively on oath, that the mother of the bastard child is a single or unmarried woman. The recital by the magistrate is not sufficient. E. P. D. v. State, 18 Fla. 175.

Complaint during pregnancy, and before delivery of the child, can only be made by an unmarried woman; but after delivery while she is single, the subsequent marriage of the mother will not prevent her from making complaint against the reputed father of the child. People v. Wilmers, 112 Ill. 292.

An affidavit made by the complainant in a case of bastardy, alleging that she is a single woman, has been delivered of a child, which by law is held a bastard, and that the person charged is the father, is sufficient under the statute to authorize the issuing of the process provided thereby. It is not necessary to allege that she was a single woman prior to such delivery; that is a matter for proof upon the trial. W. H. T. v. State, 18 Fla. 883.

BATTERY. See ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

BATTURE.—In the law of Louisiana, a marine term used to denote a bottom of sand, stone, or rock mixed together and rising towards the surface of the water; derived from battre, to beat, because it is beaten by the water; an elevation of the bed of a river under the surface of the water, since it is rising towards it; sometimes, however, used to denote the same elevation of the bank when it has risen above the surface of the water, or is as high as the land on the outside of the bank.[1] In this latter sense it is synonymous with alluvion, which is defined to be an insensible increment brought by the water. It means, in common-law language, land formed by accretion.[2]

BAWD.—One who procures opportunities for persons of opposite sexes to cohabit in an illicit manner,—who may be, while exercising the trade of a bawd, perfectly innocent of committing in his or her own proper person the crime either of adultery or of fornication.[3]

BAWDY-HOUSE. See DISORDERLY HOUSE.

BAY.—An opening into the land where the water is shut in on all sides except at the entrance;[4] a bending or curving of the shore, of the sea, or of a lake; derived from an Anglo-Saxon word, signifying to bow or bend. For a similar reason, the word "bay" is in Latin termed sinus, which expresses a curvature or recess in the coast.[5]

A recognizance conditioned that defendant appear at the next term of the district court to answer the complaint, and not depart without leave, and abide the judgment and orders of such court, is not satisfied when the defendant appears at the court and remains in attendance during the trial, but requires that he comply with and perform the judgment that shall be rendered against him. Jackson v. State, 30 Kan. 88.

The Connecticut bastardy act provides that the justice before whom a complaint under it is brought, if he find probable cause, shall order the defendant to become bound with surety to the complainant to appear before the higher court and abide its order, and on his failing to give such bonds shall commit him to jail. The defendant in a suit under the act had entered into a recognizance with surety on an adjournment of the court to appear before the court and abide its order, and was present in court when the justice ordered the bond to be given on the binding over. This bond the defendant refused to give. Held not to constitute a forfeiture of his recognizance to appear and abide the order of the justice court. The only course allowed the justice by the statute in such a case is to commit the defendant to jail. Naugatuck v. Bennett, 51 Conn. 497.

When the defendant in bastardy proceedings has given a recognizance for his appearance in the circuit court to stand trial, that court has jurisdiction both of his person and of the subject-matter, and if he fails to appear the trial may proceed to judgment without his presence. Baker v. State, 65 Wis. 50.

In order to justify a judgment against the reputed father, it is not necessary in a proceeding instituted by the mother to prove that the illegitimate child is likely to become a public charge, as it is when the State prosecutes. Baker v. State, 65 Wis. 50.

1. Morgan v. Livingston, 6 Mart. (La.) 216. See also Municipality No. 2 v. Orleans Cotton Press, 18 La. R. 122; 3 Kent Com. 428, n. b; Hollingsworth v. Chaffe, 33 La. Ann. 551.

2. City of New Orleans v. Morris, 3 Woods (U. S.), 117.

3. Dyer v. Morris, 4 Mo. 216.

4. U. S. v. Morel, 13 Am. Jur. 286.

5. State v. Gilmanton, 14 N. H. 477.

Bay or Harbor.—A conveyance of land "bounded westerly by the beach" does not include the space between ordinary high- and low-water mark. "Had the BAY-WINDOW.—A bay- or bow-window, both in the ordinary and technical acceptation of the word, indicates the formation of a bow or bay in the room to which it is attached, and which to that extent enlarges the capacity of the room.[1]

BE—BEING.—The word "be" is of the widest import. Thus, a commercial traveller may in one sense be said to "be" in every county or parish through which he travels in the performance of his duties. But the legislator no doubt (in the Assessed Taxes Act, requiring lists to be delivered to the assessor by every person where he shall "reside or be") considered that this word would receive a judicial construction founded upon what was reasonable. The true mode of interpreting it is, where a man shall "be" or "abide" so as to be liable to duty. If the word "be" has any meaning, it must include that abiding which consists in the occupation of a shop for the purposes of business.[2]

"Shall be," in a charter providing that "no person or persons who are not free white citizens, etc., shall be" stockholders, means "shall become," "shall be made to be."[3] term been . . . 'bay or harbor,' it might have . . . carried the beach or flats, if the grantor owned it." Niles v. Patch, 13 Gray (Mass.), 257.

Bays and Inlets.—In construing a statute authorizing a railroad company to build drawbridges over bays and inlets in a river, it was said: "The word 'inlet' seems to be used by the statute to denote the indentation in the shore at the mouth or outlet of a navigable stream falling into the Hudson River, and the word 'bay' to describe an indentation or curve where there is no such stream." Tillotson v. Hudson River R. Co., 5 Seld. (N. Y.) 580.

1. Com. v. Harris, 10 Weekly Notes Cases (Pa.), 13. The court says: "We think in all the acts referred to the word 'jut window' was considered the equivalent of 'bay' or 'bow' window. They are 'encroachments of mere pleasure or fancy,' as distinguished from 'bulk-windows,' which are 'shop-windows,' erections for purposes of business, and not for mere convenience or adornment."

2. Pollock, C. B., in Atty.-Gen. v. M'Lean, 1 H. & C. 760. Martin, B., adds: "A man is not in Fleet Street within the meaning of this act simply because he walks from Temple Bar to St. Paul's; but a man who is staying, abiding, and to be found there, so that if any one desired to see him on business he would go there to see him, must be said to 'be' there. That would, both according to ordinary good sense and the meaning of this section of the act, be the place where he resided."

3. Boisdere & Goule v. Bank, 9 La. 511; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 453.

Being in Advance, as the consideration for the giving of a guarantee, does not necessarily mean "in advance at the time of giving the guarantee." It may possibly be intended as prospective. Haigh v. Brooks, 10 Ad. & Ell. 309.

Being at One Half the Expense.—Where a contract in writing executed by one party only stipulated to convey part of certain lands, the other party "being at one half the expense in land or otherwise for procuring a title to the same," this constitutes payment of the expenses a condition precedent to be paid as incurred or right perfected. Hutcheson v. Heirs, 1 Ohio, 14.

Being of Sound Wind and Limb and Free from all Disease, in the bill of sale of a slave, are an averment of a fact and import an agreement. They are not used as a mere description, but amount to an express, not an implied, covenant; to a warranty of the soundness of the slave. Cramer v. Bradshaw, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484.

Being Married, in a statute, implied a perfect and binding marriage. The Queen v. Allen, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 371.

Being Surveyors, in an indictment, was held a sufficient averment that they were so. Rex v. Royal, 2 Ld. Ken. 552. See also Rex v. Moor, 2 Mod. 128, 130.

Being, in an indictment, will rather relate to the time thereof than to that of the offence, unless necessarily connected with some other matter. 1 Bish. Crim. Proc. § 410.

BEACH.—The shore or strand; the space between high- and low-water mark.[1] Land washed by the sea and its waves,—synonymous with shore.[2] Land lying between the lines of high water and low water over which the tide ebbs and flows. This is a fixed and definite meaning of the word "beach" when used in reference to places anywhere in the vicinity of the sea or the arms of the sea,[3] but not inflexibly so.[4] A devise of a "beach for driftwood and timber" is limited by that line of shore inward from the sea to which seaweed and driftwood are usually carried by the sea in ordinary seasons by the highest winter floods, and which is usually marked on the land by the line of such sea-drift. But it will not include lands occasionally covered by sea-water by extraordinary inundations.[5]

BEACON.—A light-house or sea-mark formerly used to alarm the country in case of the approach of an enemy, but now used for the guidance of ships at sea by night as well as by day.[6]

BEACONAGE.—Money paid as the expenses of maintaining a beacon or signal-light.[7]

BEAR. See ARMS.

BEARER. (See also BILLS AND NOTES.)—The bearer of a challenge is a third person who carries a challenge for his friend, and not the challenger himself.[8]

BEARING. See ARMS; BEARING INTEREST;[9] BEARING THE SURNAME.[10]

BEAST.—A general designation of the four-footed land animals which are of use or value for work, food, or sport.[11] A horse is a beast;[12] and so a cow,[13] and a hog.[14] A dog was held not to be

1. Cutts v. Hussey, 15 Me. 241; Niles v. Patch, 13 Gray (Mass.), 257.

2. Littlefield v. Littlefield, 28 Me. 184.

3. Hodge v. Boothby, 48 Me. 71; Doane v. Willcut, 5 Gray (Mass.), 335. In the latter case it is said: "The term 'beach,' however, is usually applied to this part of the coast when not covered with water when the tide is out."

4. Merwin v. Wheeler, 41 Conn. 14; s. c., 14 Am. L. Reg. (N. S.) 606.

5. Brown v. Lakeman, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 447.

Bounded by the Cliff or Beach.—Land so conveyed was held to extend to high-water mark. East Hampton v. Kirk, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 259. See also Niles v. Patch, 13 Gray (Mass.), 257, where a conveyance of land "bounded westerly by the beach" was held not to include the land between high- and low-water mark. "Had the term been 'sea' or 'salt water' or 'bay or harbor,' it might have . . . carried the beach or flats if the grantor owned it. We would not say that there might not be such terms in the deed as connected with the term 'beach' would indicate an intention to include the beach; and such intent, if anywhere manifest in the deed, would govern its construction and convey the beach. But in this deed there is no such qualification."

6. Whart. Law Lex.

7. Abb. L. Dict.

8. State v. Gibbons, South. (N. J.) 49.

9. Bearing Interest.—Under these words in a bill of exchange, the plaintiff is entitled to recover interest from the date of the bill, since without any such words he would be entitled to interest from the time when the bill became due. Kennerly v. Nash, 1 Stark. 453.

10. Bearing the Surname.—A bearing de facto, though by voluntary assumption, was held sufficient to satisfy the general and ordinary meaning of the words "bearing the surname" in a devise. Doe dem. Luscombe v. Yates, 5 B. & Ald. 544.

11. Abb. L. Dict.

12. State v. Pearce, Peck (Tenn.), 66; Winfrey v. Zimmerman, 8 Bush (Ky.), 587.

13. Taylor v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 285.

14. State v. Enslow, 10 Iowa, 115.

a "beast" within the meaning of a statute providing for the punishment of persons for wilfully killing "horses, cattle, or other beasts of another person."[1] An unnatural connection with an animal of the fowl kind is not sodomy, a fowl not coming under the term "beast."[2] (See also ANIMALS; CATTLE.)

BEAT—BEATING.—The "beating" of a horse by a man refers to the infliction of blows.[3] On an indictment for "wilfully, maliciously, and cruelly beating a horse," the distinction was made between that chastisement which is really administered for purposes of training and discipline and the beating and needless infliction of pain which is dictated by a cruel disposition, by violent passions, a spirit of revenge, or reckless indifference to the sufferings of others.[4] Pulling a man to the ground and holding him there is not a "beating."[5]

BECOME.—"Shall become an inmate" was held to mean "shall be an inmate," in a statute giving a remedy to the commonwealth for the support of "any pauper who shall become an inmate of the State alms-houses."[6]

BED.—I. The bed of a river is that soil so usually covered by water as to be distinguishable from the banks by the character of the soil or vegetation or both, produced by the common presence and action of flowing water. But neither the line of ordinary high-water mark nor of ordinary low-water mark, nor of a middle stage of water, can be assumed as dividing the bed from the banks. This line is to be found by examining the bed and banks, and ascertaining where the presence and action of water are so common and usual, and so long continued in all ordinary years, as to mark upon the soil of the bed a character distinct from that of the banks in respect to vegetation, as well as in respect to the nature

1. U. S. v. Gideon, 1 Minn. 292. The court says: "It may be difficult to determine in all respects what animals the term 'beasts' as used in the statute includes; but it may be fairly assumed, as it seems to me, that all such as have, in law, no value were not intended to be included in that general term. Horses and cattle have an intrinsic value which their names import, and it is but reasonable to suppose that the intention of the law was, in using the term 'beasts,' to include such other animals as may properly come under the name of beasts, and as have an intrinsic value in the same sense that there is value in horses, oxen, and cows. The term 'beasts' may well be intended to include asses, mules, sheep, swine, and perhaps some other domesticated animals, but it would be going quite too far to hold that dogs were intended."

2. 1 Russ. Cr. & M. 938.

3. Com. v. McClellan, 101 Mass. 35.

4. State v. Avery, 44 N. H. 396. See also Com. v. Lufkin, 7 Allen (Mass.), 579.

Maim, Beat, or Torture.—Tying brush and boards to the tail of an animal does not come within the meaning of this expression in an indictment, unless an averment is made declaring the effects of the act to have been pain and torture. State v. Pugh, 15 Md. 511.

5. Reg. v. Hale, 2 C. & H. 327.

6. Com. v. Inhab. of Dracut, 8 Gray (Mass.), 458.

Rent to become Due.—This expression in a condition to "pay all rent due and to become due, and all intervening damages and costs," was held to mean "intervening rent." Martin v. Campbell, 120 Mass. 130.

Shall have become an Habitual Drunkard, in a statute allowing a divorce for this cause, means that the defendant must have become an habitual drunkard after the marriage. Porritt v. Porritt, 16 Mich. 141.

of the soil itself.[1] That portion of the soil of a river which is alternately covered and left bare, as there may be an increase or diminution in the supply of water, and which is adequate to contain it at its average and mean stage during the entire year, without reference to the extraordinary freshets of the winter or spring, or the extreme droughts of the summer or autumn.[2]

II. Matrimonial connection; marriage; lawful cohabitation.[3] A divorce a mensa et thoro—from bed and board—signifies a separation by which the right of sexual intercourse and the conjugal relations are suspended.

BEEF.—sometimes is used meaning an animal of the cow species, and not beef prepared for market or for use as meat.[4]

BEER.—I. A fermented liquor made from any malted grain, with hops and other bitter flavoring matters.

II. A fermented extract of the roots and other parts of various plants, as spruce, ginger, sassafras, etc. Beer has different names, as small beer, ale, porter, brown stout, lager beer, etc., according to its strength or other qualities.[5] Lager beer is a malt liquor of the lighter sort, and differs from ordinary beers or ales not so much in its ingredients as in its processes of fermention.[6] Strong beer is a malt inebriating liquor, and Dutch beer is another, not differing substantially from strong beer, thus understood, in the kind of materials used or the mode of its manufacture, but only in its strength, being less intoxicating.[7] (See also INTOXICATING LIQUORS.)

BEER-HOUSE.—A place where beer is sold to be consumed on the premises.[8]

BEER-SHOP.—I. A beer-shop means a place where beer is sold

At the Time he becomes Bankrupt, in a statute empowering the commissioners to dispose of goods in the possession of the bankrupt as reputed owner, has reference to the act of bankruptcy and not to the time of the commission or fiat. Fawcett v. Fearne, 6 Q. B. 28.

1. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 427.

2. Luco v. U. S., 23 How. (U. S.) 515.

The bed of a river is the space contained between its banks. Pulley v. Munic. No. 2, 18 La. 282.

In all cases the bed of a river is a natural object, and is to be sought for not merely by the application of any abstract rules, but as other natural objects are sought for and found, by the distinctive appearances they present; the banks being part land, on which vegetation appropriate to such land in the particular locality grows wherever the bank is not too steep to permit such growth, and the bed being soil of a different character and having no vegetation, or only such as exists when commonly submerged in water. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 428.

3. Web. Dict

To go to bed with is "to be in bed with" and in the language of the law, as well as by universal usage, these words, except as between man and wife, significantly impute illicit intercourse, and are actionable. Walton v. Singleton, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 452.

4. Davis v. The State. 40 Tex. 135.

Beef is not included in the expression "produce of a farm" in a statute. The ox is the produce of the farm; beef is the produce of the slaughter-house and the shambles. Mayor v. Davis, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 279.

5. 6 West. Rep. (Ill.) 329.

6. State v. Goyette, 11 R. I. 592; Watson v. State, 55 Ala. 160.

7. People v. Wheelock, 3 Park. Cr. C. (N. Y.) 15.

8. Holt v. Collyer, 16 Ch. Div. 721; 44 L. T. (N. S.) 214.

by retail, and it does not matter whether the beer is consumed on the premises or not.[1] II. A place where beer is sold to be consumed off the premises.[2]

BEES. See ANIMALS.

BEFORE.—I. Anterior to; preceding. II. In the presence of.[3]

1. London & Sub. L'd and B'g Co. v. Field, 16 Ch. Div. 648.

2. Holt v. Collyer, 16 Ch. Div. 721; Bishop of St. Albans v. Battersby, 3 Q. B. D. 362; 26 W. R. 679.

3. Before Conviction.—One who is charged with an offence, breaks jail, and is afterwards acquitted is guilty of the offence of escaping from jail "before conviction." State v. Lewis, 19 Kan. 265.

Before Me, in a commissioner's certificate as to the swearing of witnesses and taking of depositions, is equivalent to "by me." Ludlam v. Broderick, 3 C. C. Greene (N. J.), 274.

Before Said Court.—The fact that a certificate attached to a complaint is made by a clerk and recites that the complaint was sworn to "before said court" gives rise to the presumption that this was done in court. Tacey v. Noyes, 3 New Eng. Repr. (Mass.) 524.

At Least Fourteen Days Before the First Day of the Court, in a rule as to service of notice, excludes the first day of the court. Small v. Edrick, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; Columbia T. R. v. Haywood, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 424.

Ten Days Before the First Day of the Term, as the time within which an appeal is allowed, is not to be reckoned as exclusive of both days. "When, as in the present case, it is said that an act is to be done a certain number of days before a given date, we do not think that, in the plain meaning of the phrase, it is intended that both the date named and the day of doing the act should be excluded. What is to be done one day before the tenth of the month, according to the plain, ordinary meaning of the phrase, is to be done on the day before,—that is, on the ninth. But, as is said by Sir William Grant in Lester v. Garland, 15 Ves. Ch. 256, it is not necessary to lay down a general rule (as to excluding the day of the act); and whichever way the rule should be laid down, cases would occur the reason of which would require an exception to be made. It is impossible to reconcile the cases as to the computation of time. . . . What seems to us clear is that where a time is limited to do an act before a date named, where nothing in the reason of the thing plainly requires the exclusion both of the day of the act and of the day before which the act is to be done, the meaning of the legislature will not be taken to be that both the days shall be excluded." Bailey v. Lubke, 8 Mo. App. 60. Compare O'Connor v. Towns, 1 Tex. 107, where a requirement that process be served "five days before the return day" was held to mean that five full days should elapse between the day of service and the return day.

Before the Sheriff and Suitors.—A declaration stating the court to have been held as above. held, bad on special demurrer. "The words 'before such and such persons,' I think, necessarily imply that the cause was heard before the persons who were the lawfully constituted judges of the court; the words 'before the sheriff and suitors,' therefore, imply that the sheriff is a judge of the county court, which certainly is not the case." Jones v. Jones, 5 M. & W. 526.

Before Trial.—These words have been uniformly held to mean "before plea pleaded." Winship v. People, 51 Ill. 298.

"The application for removal must be made, and the law of Congress be fully complied with by the party, before trial. This means before the trial has begun. . . . The calling of the jury is a part of the trial. In this case, when the trial commenced, the defendant had not complied with the law of Congress." St. Anthony, etc., Co. v. King, etc., Co., 23 Minn. 188.

A statute authorizing an offer to confess judgment, to be made at "any time before trial," is not to be construed to include time before the commencement of the suit. Horner v. Pilkington, 11 Ind. 442.

"On or before" a Certain Day, as the time when a payment is to be made, means that the payment may be made at any indefinite time, no matter how long before that time, and necessarily implies that the ground or cause of payment, the consideration or indebtedness, was, prior to the limit, complete. People v. Walker, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 644.

A promise to pay "on or before" a day named states the time of payment with sufficient certainty for the purposes of a promissory note. "It is payable

BEG—BEGGING.—The act of a cripple in passing along the sidewalk and silently holding out his hand and receiving money from passers-by is "begging for alms or soliciting charity" within the meaning of a statute.[1]

BEGIN—BEGINNING.—To "begin" a military expedition or enterprise is to do the first act which may lead to the enterprise; i.e., any overt act which shall be a commencement of the expedition, though it should not be prosecuted.[2] "Beginning to demolish" a house is rightly charged only when the ultimate object of the accused persons was to demolish the house and when, if they had carried their intentions into full effect, they would, in point of fact, have demolished it.[3]

BEGOTTEN.—The words "to be begotten," in wills and settlements, mean the same as "begotten," embracing all those whom the parent shall have begotten during his life, quos procreaverit.[4] "Shall be begotten," in a settlement, extends to a child in esse at the time the settlement was made.[5] "Shall have lawfully begotcertainly, and at all events, on a day particularly named; and at that time, and not before, payment might be enforced against the maker. . . . True, the maker may pay sooner if he shall choose, but this option, if exercised, would be a payment in advance of the legal liability to pay, and nothing more." Mattison v. Marks, 31 Mich. 423; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 197.

1. In re Haller, 3 Abb. N. C. (N.Y.) 65. The court says: "There is nothing in either of these statutes that necessarily requires proof of spoken words to constitute begging for alms or soliciting charity, although such words might in many instances be the best evidence of the offence. The act of begging alms or soliciting charity is the offence condemned by the law, in whatever form the act may be committed, and in many instances words are far less effective to accomplish the end than simple acts. The deaf and dumb man, real or pretended, who stands with a placard on the breast, and with extended hat or hand, is a solicitor of charity as completely as though he spoke to the passers-by. And so is every one whose diseased or crippled condition appeals to sympathy if he places himself in a position to attract attention, or passes along the street calling attention by sign, act, or look to his unhappy condition, and receives from those who observe him the charity which he is obviously seeking. Indeed, the class of silent beggars who exhibit deformities, wounds, or injuries which tell plainer than words their needy and helpless condition are the most successful solicitors for charity, and especially is this so when the object of alms is a young and helpless child. . . . The poor boy in this case, while creeping through the throng of people on Broadway and Wall Street, and raising his hand to receive their alms, was accomplishing the purpose of begging in a mode far more effective than to have sat at a corner and cried out to every passer-by for charity."

The widow of a medical man, dependent on charity, going to a house for pecuniary aid, although with a general letter of introduction, is a "beggar." Mrs. Arthur's Case, Eng. County Ct., 1881, cited in Browne's Jud. Interp. of Com. Wds. & Phr., "Begging."

2. Charge to Grand Jury, 5 McLean (U. S.), 307.

3. Rex v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 238. The court adds: "Now here that is not so, for they come and do a great deal of mischief and then go away, having manifestly completed their purpose and done all the injury they meant to do." See also Rex v. Batt, 6 C. & P. 329.

4. Doe v. Hallett, 1 Man. & Sel. 135; Cook v. Cook, 2 Vern. 545.

"The words 'begotten' and 'to be begotten,' procreatis and procreandis, have always been held to have the same import, unless a contrary intent plainly appears." Wager v. Wager, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 377.

5. Slingsby v. ———, 10 Mod. 398. The Lord Chancellor declared that "the futurity meant by the settlement did not relate to the time of the birth of the daughters, but to the death of the husband."

ten at the time of her death," in a will, was held synonymous with "shall have lawfully borne in her lifetime."[1]

BEHALF.—A witness who is called by a party, but whose testimony proves unfavorable to that party's cause, is nevertheless his witness testifying "in his behalf."[2] A contract made by one "on behalf of" another prima facie imports that the former made the contract only as agent.[3] A statute which limits an attorney's right to recover for "appearing or acting on behalf of any other person" does not make any distinction between his right to recover from the opposite party and from his own client.[4]

BEHAVIOR.—Conduct; personal carriage and demeanor; one's whole manner of deporting one's self.[5] The expression "a breach of good behavior," for which a clerk can be removed, cannot be confined to official or legal misdemeanors. A gross breach of moral good behavior (unequivocally evincing an absolute dereliction of principles, the extinction of the moral sense or the absence of that integrity of mind without which one cannot hope to enjoy public confidence) satisfies the words of the constitution.[6] (See also LEWD; LASCIVIOUS.)

BEHIND.—In a devise to A, his heirs and assigns, and if he die "leaving no issue behind him then over," the limitation "over" is good by way of executory devise. The above words necessarily import that the testator meant "no issue living at the time of A's death."[7]

BELIEF—BELIEVE.—Belief is the conviction of the mind, founded on evidence, that a fact exists; that an act was done; that a statement is true. And when one says, I believe that a fact exists, or that an act was done by another, he must be understood to assert that there is present to his mind evidence sufficient to convince him that the fact does in reality exist, or that the act was done. The evidence may be more or less; it may be of one kind or another—the evidence of the senses, hearsay, or of circumstances.[8] The word "belief," in its ordinary sense, means an actual conclusion, drawn from information. There is a clear distinction between positive knowledge and mere belief, and they cannot both exist together.[9] The difference between "knowledge" and "belief" is nothing more than in the degree of certainty. With regard to things which make not a very deep im-

1. Doe v. Provost, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 64.

2. Richerson v. Sternburg, Admx., 65 Ill. 274.

3. Lewis v. Nicholson, 18 Q. B. 512.

4. In re Clipperton, 12 Q. B. 693. "We are further of opinion that the words 'acting on behalf of any other person' in the county court include everything that is done by the attorney in regard to a suit in that court, whether before, or at, or after the hearing."

5. Abb. L. Dict.

6. 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 700. Procuring the means of producing an abortion was held a sufficient breach in this case.

7. Porter v. Bradley, 3 Term, 143.

8. Giddens v. Mirk, 4 Ga. 369.

9. Humphreys v. McCall, 9 Cal. 62. "The belief of a witness is a conclusion from facts. The witness should state facts, and the conclusion to be drawn from them rests with the jury." Ventress v. Smith, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 171.

pression on the memory, it may be called "belief." "Knowledge" is nothing more than a man's firm belief.[1]

In most jurisdictions, a pleading required to be sworn to may be verified either on knowledge or partly on knowledge and partly on "knowledge and belief;" i.e., that as to the matters stated in the pleading upon information and belief, the affiant believes the pleading to state the truth.[2]

BELLIGERENT.—In the law of nations, a nation engaged in war, as distinguished from a neutral.[3] To create belligerent rights it is not necessary that there should be war between separate and independent powers. They may exist between the parties to a civil war.[4] It is, however, a contradiction in terms to speak of a citizen of a loyal State, remaining in such State, and not engaged in the war, as a belligerent. A belligerent is a subject of the hostile power, and his character, in that regard, depends upon that of the community to which he belongs. This is the settled doctrine: that the status of any person, as to the question of belligerency, depends upon his citizenship or nationality. The late rebellion grew to such consistency and magnitude that our own as well as foreign governments recognized the people of the rebel States as belligerents; but the citizen and resident of a Northern State did not become a belligerent, whatever may have been his sympathies, or however wicked his plots.[5]

1. Hatch v. Carpenter, 9 Gray (Mass.), 274.

Best of his Belief.—One who makes a statement to the "best of his belief" imports that he is entitled to entertain the belief he expresses, and that we must not take him to mean that the "best" of his belief is no belief at all. A man's belief and the best of a man's belief are really the same things. Roe v. Bradshaw, L. R. 1. Ex. 108–9.

"Find" and "Believe."—An instruction to the jury beginning, "If you believe from the evidence," is not erroneous, the word "believe" in this connection being synonymous with "find." State v. O'Hagan, 38 Iowa, 505.

Firmly Believe.—A statute requiring an affidavit that a party "firmly believes" is not satisfied by one that he "believes." "I have a firm belief that the moon revolves around the earth. I may believe, too, that there are mountains and valleys in the moon; but this belief is not so strong, because the evidence is weaker. I firmly believe that Bonaparte is in the island of St. Helena; but as to the state of his health, I may have my belief, but it cannot be called firm, because the evidence is not clear." Thompson v. White, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 137.

"Imagine" and "Believe."—It imports a more certain and fixed conviction to say I believe than it does to say I imagine. Giddens v. Mirk, 4 Ga. 370.

"Suppose and "Believe."—In an instruction that "if the plaintiff supposed he had a good cause of action," etc., a compromise resulting constituted a good consideration for a note. The word "supposed" was held to mean substantially the same thing as "believed," or, at all events, so nearly so that a jury could not be misled by its use. Suppose (citing Webster's Dict.) means "to imagine, believe, receive as true;" and believe, "to think, to suppose." Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 277.

"Suspect" and "Believe."—To authorize the issuing of a warrant, the complainant must swear that "he believes;" it is not sufficient to state that "he has reasonable cause to suspect, and does suspect." "Suspecting is not believing. That may be a ground for suspicion which will not induce belief." Com. v. Lottery Tickets, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 374.

2. Rap & Law. Law Dict.

3. Burr. L Dict.

4. Swinnerton v. Col. Ins. Co., 37 N. Y. 178.

5. Johnson v. Jones, 44 Ill. 151–2.

BELONGED—BELONGING—BELONGS.—The verb to belong denotes property, or conveys the idea of relation or connection;[1]

1. Where a testator devised his manor of Barrow Minchin with the mansion-house called Barrow Court thereunto belonging, and the park, and also all his freehold messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditament, thereunto belonging, it was held, it appearing manifestly from the whole of the will that the testator's intention was to dispose thereby of all his real estate, that a certain farm and premises which adjoined to and were in some parts intermixed with the Barrow estate passed by the devise, although purchased by the testator only shortly before his death while the estate had been in the family for several generations; the court, Tenterden, C. J., saying: "It will therefore be proper to consider in what sense the words 'thereunto belonging' are to be understood in this will: and the sense that will best accord with the intention of the testator, as it may be collected from other circumstances and other parts of the will, is the sense that ought to prevail. These words are, in common speech, of different import, according to the subject of which they are spoken. If we speak of a farm or a field with reference to the ownership, we say it belongs to such a one, meaning thereby that it is the property of that person; if with reference to any estate of a particular name, we say it belongs to such an estate, as to the Britton Ferry estate, meaning that it is a parcel of that estate; if with reference to its locality, we say it belongs to such a parish or township, meaning that it is situate in and a part of that parish or township; and so with reference to a manor, we say it belongs to such a manor, meaning that it is situate in or part of that manor, in the ordinary or popular sense of the word 'part' and not in the strict legal sense, as part of the demesnes of the manor, or as holden of the manor or of the lord thereof." Doe d. Gore v. Langton, 2 B. & Ad. 680, 692.

Points where a highway comes in contact with a navigable stream are not parts of the highway, unless the highway is laid out to navigable water, and there terminates, in which last case the point of contact would become a public landing as an incident to a public highway. Therefore the statute (Rev. Stat. tit. 38, § 3) which provides that no person shall acquire title by adverse possession to land "belonging" to a highway does not apply to those cases in which a highway running from place to place incidentally comes in contact with tide-water and runs along the beach for a considerable distance, so as to prevent the owner of the soil from appropriating any part of the shore to his own purposes. Burrows v. Gallup, 32 Conn. 493.

Where A and B submitted a controversy between them respecting the title of a piece of land to arbitrators, who found and awarded that such piece of land belonged to A. it was held that the import of the award was that A had the whole interest or estate in the land; the court, Williams, C. J., saying: "It was further urged that the award was not operative, because it found no fact, or did not find it in such a manner as ought to be regarded. The submission was of a controversy respecting the title to a piece of land. The arbitrators find and award that said land 'belongs' to the plaintiffs, and award it to them accordingly. Now their award is as broad as the submission; and the question arises, can we ascertain with sufficient certainty what these parties intended to submit? The ancient strictness in construing submissions is passed away; and they are now to be construed according to the true intent of the parties. When these parties submitted the title to this property, they must have intended to use the word in its ordinary sense—the right to, or ownership in, this land. When these parties were contesting as to the title or ownership of this farm, they must have meant precisely what the arbitrators meant when they found to whom it belonged." Shelton v. Alcox, 11 Conn. 240, 249.

So on a submission to arbitrators to determine whether a pew "legally belongs to the estate of a testatrix, to those who claim under her, or to the defendant," and if they shall determine that it "legally belongs to the estate of the testatrix or to those who inherited said estate, then the defendant is to deliver to the plaintiff a proper deed of conveyance of all his present interest, right, title, or estate in and to the same," and the award was that the pew "belonged to and was the property of the testatrix at the time of her decease: the arbitrators do therefore award that the defendant shall deliver to the plaintiff a proper deed of conveyance of all his present interest, right, title, and estate in and to the same," it was held that the award followed substantially the submission, and that it was sufficient. Spear v. Hooper, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 144.

to appertain to; to be a part of.[1] It also signifies to have a legal

The act 14 Geo. III. c. 96, which was passed for improving the navigation of certain rivers and provided that "if any person or persons shall wilfully throw any soil . . . into any part of the said rivers . . . or of any drains, trenches, or water-courses thereunto belonging, every such person shall for every such offence forfeit" a certain sum of money, only applies in the words "drains, trenches, or water-courses thereunto belonging" to artificial streams made for the purpose of improving the navigation of the rivers, and not to natural streams. Smith v. Barnham, L. R. 1 Ex. Div. 419.

An insurance policy on a building used for many years as a place for public exhibitions, and also upon certain property in the building, as "belonging" to exhibitors, was held not to be vitiated by the introduction into the building of certain articles declared as hazardous in the policy, but which formed part of contents necessary for an exhibition, inasmuch as the insurance company must have been acquainted with the business to which the building was appropriated. Mayor, etc., v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co., 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 537.

Where a person appointed for the State for the county of New London gave a bond with surety to the State treasurer, conditioned that such attorney should annually account for and pay over, according to law, all moneys belonging to the State which he might receive as such attorney; and in an action on such bond against the surety it appeared that the moneys received by such attorney on all bonds made payable to the State treasurer had been properly accounted for, but that on bonds and fines by law made payable to the county treasurer certain sums received by him were not accounted for; it was held that moneys arising from bonds taken in criminal prosecutions and payable to the county treasurer, and from forfeitures and fines imposed by the county court, were moneys belonging to the State, within the meaning and terms of the bond, and consequently that the surety defendant was liable. Gilbert v. Isham, 16 Conn. 525.

The act 4 Geo. II. c. 32 enacted that "every person who shall steal, rip, cut, or break, with intent to steal, any lead, iron bar, iron gate, iron palisade, or iron rail whatsoever, being fixed to any dwelling-house, out-house, coach-house, stable, or other building used or occupied with such dwelling-house, or thereunto belonging, or to any building, whatsoever or fixed in any garden, orchard, court-yard fence, or outlet belonging to any dwelling-house or other building, shall be deemed to be guilty of felony. In an indictment for stealing certain lead under this statute, it appeared that the lead stolen consisted of three images, which at the time they were taken by the prisoners were standing on three pedestals, to which they were fastened with irons, and the pedestals were fixed in the ground. The images were standing near a brick building, called the Temple of Pan, which was erected in an inclosed field belonging to the Earl of Clarendon, about half a mile from his dwelling-house and without the park palings, from which it was separated by a public road. The Temple of Pan was occasionally used by Lord Clarendon as a tea-drinking place. The building had doors and windows, which were kept shut when the family of Lord Clarendon were not using it. The doors opened into the place where the images stood. The only other building within the enclosure was an open building, which was once a barn, but it was then only used as a coach-house when the family came to the Temple of Pan. On this evidence it was held that the stealing of lead situate as these images were was not a felony, this being no outlet or garden belonging to any house or building. Rex v. Richards, Russ & Ry. C. C. 28.

1. In the case of Barlow v. Rhodes, 3 Tyrw. Ex. 280, the Duke of Devonshire, in 1825, put up to sale by auction, in separate lots, certain property, including the locus in quo, in the town of Wetherby, where he was the owner, and lot 20 was purchased by the plaintiff and lot 24 by the defendant. The conveyance to the defendant, after describing the premises purchased by him as bounded on the north by lot 20, contained the usual words, "together with all ways, paths, passages, etc., thereunto appurtenant or belonging." Lots 20 and 24 had been formerly in the occupation of the same person, and the passage in question, which had been previously used with lot 24, although now comprised in the conveyance of lot 20, led from the defendant's house to an ash-hole. For the defendant it was urged at the trial that, the way having been formerly used with the same premises, the right of it now passed under the general words "appurtenant or belonging;" but the learned judge, Bolland, B., who tried the cause, being of a different opinion, the plaintiff obtained a verdict.

A rule having been obtained for setting aside this verdict, it was contended before the Court of Exchequer for the defendant, on the case of Morris v. Edginton, 2 Bingham 76, in the Common Pleas, that the defendant was entitled to a verdict, for that the word "belonging" clearly gave the right of way in question. But the court held, Lyndhurst, Ch. B., that neither the words "appurtenant" nor "belonging," which were synonymous, were sufficient to pass the right of way, unless, indeed, it were a way of necessity, which was the case in Morris v. Edginton; and there they held the plaintiff entitled to judgment, and discharged the rule. See 1 Chitty's Gen. Prac. 157, 475, note; Maitland v. MacKinnon, 1 H. & C. 607.

Where the plaintiff assigned to the defendant, by bill of sale, "all and singular the 104 power looms, and other effects and things belonging thereto, now being in, upon, or about the mill, particularly set forth in the schedule," and the schedule was as follows, "Looms made by S.," it was claimed, in an action of trover for "healds, reeds, beams, and weaving utensils and pieces of machinery for weaving, and articles belonging thereto and strapping, that these goods had passed by the bill of sale. At the trial it appeared that the looms were in use at the date of the execution of the bill of sale; that healds, reeds, weft, and waste-cans are attached to the looms when in use, and the looms are not complete for the purpose of weaving till they are supplied, but that they form no part of the looms as they come from the makers. They are made and often sold at sales separately from the looms. Different healds and reeds are used in weaving cloth of different degrees of fineness. They do not ordinarily belong to any particular loom, but can be detached and used with any loom indifferently. For the plaintiff it was contended that "belonging thereto" meant necessarily and permanently belonging thereto; and that the schedule which specified "looms" only governed the construction of the bill of sale. The defendant claimed that by "looms" the bill of sale meant, not the mere framework, but all that is necessary for weaving; that if the word "looms" was not sufficient to include these matters, the bill of sale contained the words "effects and things belonging thereto, now being in, upon, or about the mill;" that in Bacon's Abridgment, tit. Grant, I-4, it is said: "If a man grant his saddle with all things thereunto belonging, stirrups, girths, and the like do pass. So if a man grant his viol, the strings and bow will pass," citing Price v. Braham, Vaugh. 109. "So by the grant of a mill cum pertinentiis, a kiln at the end of the close whereon the mill stood would pass, if the kiln was necessary to the mill;" citing Archer v. Bennett, 1 Lev. 131. The court held, Bramwell, B., that the meaning of the words "all effects and things belonging thereto" must be construed with reference to the extrinsic facts. The articles in question, though separate from the looms, were attached to them when the looms were in use, so that an ordinary observer would say that they belonged to the looms. A reasonable meaning would not be given to the language of the deed unless they were held to pass by it. Cort v. Sagar, 3 H. & N. 370.

S. and C. entered into an agreement in writing by which S. agreed to sell to C. his house, farm, and premises, etc., all the tools belonging to the saw-mill, all the apparatus belonging to the grist-mill, "together with all the fixtures belonging to the fulling mill and carding-machine, together with every article attached to the freehold." It was proved that a building on the farm which had been used in the wool-carding and cloth-dressing business was called and known, at the date of the contract, as the fulling-mill and carding-machine. But the building had not been used for that business for several years, and the carding-machine itself had been taken from the building and stored in the grist-mill. Upon the evidence it was held that S. intended to sell and C. to purchase, by the contract, not only the fulling-mill and carding-machine building, but all the machinery on the farm which had been used in such building as fixtures; and that such machinery was what they meant by the words "fixtures belonging to the fulling-mill and carding-machine." Said the court, Balcolm, J.: "The meaning of the contract cannot be satisfactorily ascertained without the aid of extrinsic evidence; and such evidence establishes, or at least strongly tends to establish, that the words 'fulling-mill and carding machine' were used in the contract to designate the building in which the carding-machine in question and the fulling-mill had been situated and used; and that the former had been removed and stored in the grist-mill upon the same farm prior to the making of the contract; and by assuming that the words 'fulling-mill and carding-machine' were employed to designate the building I have mentioned, the presumption is that the phrase 'fixtures belonging to the fulling-mill and carding-machine,' as used in the residence or inhabitancy[1] in the sense which would imply a home or domicile.

BELOW.—Inferior;[2] in a lower place; under.[3]

BENCH.—The elevated seat on which the judges sit, and hence the court itself.[4]

BENEFICIAL.—Receiving, or entitled to have or receive, advantage, use, or benefit: advantageous; profitable. In its technical legal sense this word does not always have the idea of a benefit or profit.[5] contract, means the carding-machine itself and other machinery that had been used in the carding-machine and fulling-mill building, and belonged therein when in their proper place." Martin v. Cope, 28 N. Y. 180.

Under a devise of the rectory or parsonage of M., with the messuages, lands, etc., thereunto belonging, it was held that lands passed which had been acquired by the owners of the rectory between the fifth year of James I. and 1632, and had always afterwards been occupied with the rectory. Ongley v. Chambers, 1 Bingham, 483. In commenting on this case, Cockburn, C. J., says: "There is a marked distinction between the expressions 'thereunto belonging' and 'thereunto adjoining.'" Josh v. Josh. 5 C. B. N. S. 454.

1. The town to which a slave "belongs," within the meaning of the statute, tit. 150, c. 1, s. 11, is that alone in which he has a legal settlement. Columbia v. Williams, 3 Conn. 467.

The Maine Revised Statutes, c. 14, c. 1, provides for furnishing nurses and necessaries to an infected person, at his charge . . . if able, otherwise that of the town to which he belongs. Held, that the phrase "at the charge of the town to which he belongs" means the town where he has his pauper settlement, and not the town where he might happen to reside at the time. Hampden v. Newburgh, 67 Me. 370. See Kennebunk v. Alfred, 19 Me. 221; Reading v. Westport, 19 Conn. 561; Waterbury v. Bethany, 18 Conn. 425.

2. Used in the expressions "court below," "bail below," i.e., to the sheriff; denoting a lower or subordinate tribunal, and a bail bond given to a subordinate officer. See Rap. & Law. Law Dict., sub voce.

3. Below High-water Mark.—A proprietary grant in 1680 of "a piece of land below high-water mark to set a shop upon, not exceeding forty feet in width," was construed to extend to low-water mark, although there had been considerable addition to the shore by alluvion since that time. Adams v. Frothingham, 3 Mass. 352.

4. Bench and Bar.—Used of the judges and lawyers to denote the whole legal profession.

Benchers.—The members of an Inn of Court (which see), to whom is committed the government thereof.

Bench Warrant.—A warrant issued by or from a "bench" or court. A process for the arrest of a party against whom an indictment has been found. Burrill's Law Dict., sub voce.

In the case of Shaw v. Com., 1 Duvall (Ky.), 1, it was held, under the Criminal Code, §§ 140, 141, that upon an indictment being found, if the defendant is not in custody or on bail, the court should forthwith order process, either a "bench warrant" or a summons; but until such order be made the clerk has no authority to issue process; and if he does, it will confer on the sheriff no authority to arrest the defendant or to take bail.

Where one was arrested and gave bond to appear, and upon the finding of a true bill the judge issued a "bench warrant" under which he was arrested and continued in the custody of the sheriff until the trial, during the progress of which he escaped from the custody of the sheriff, it was held that the securities of the bond taken by the magistrate were discharged by the subsequent arrest under the "bench warrant," and are not liable on their bond. Smith v. Kitchens, 51 Ga. 158. Contra where the arrest was under a capias issued by the clerk of the court and not under a "bench warrant." Chappell v. State, 30 Tex. 613.

A "bench warrant" directed to the sheriff cannot be executed by one having only verbal authority from the sheriff, and such an arrest does not discharge the recognizance. People v. Moore, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 1.

A "bench warrant" is bad which does not direct that the party shall be brought before some judge or justice. Queen v. Downey & Jones, 7 Q. B. 281.

5. Thus in deciding that governors of the poor hiring a house without their district for the purpose of setting their own paupers to work there, and using it for that purpose only, are ratable in the parish in which the house is, as occupiers, whether the employment of the paupers there be profitable or not, Denman, C. J., said: "The absence of 'beneficial occupation' was also much insisted upon; and it was contended that that is the true criterion to ascertain whether property be ratable or not. It is not to be denied but that the phrase 'beneficial occupation' has been in frequent use; and, generally speaking, it serves tolerably well to convey rather a popular notion than to give a certain rule for deciding the question of ratability in every instance. Because if by 'beneficial' is meant profitable or anything like it, the expression is obviously fallacious; and upon this point all discussion is superfluous, because the case of an unprofitable and losing occupation (expressly so found) of a coal-mine has been held no exemption from ratability (see Rex v. Parrot, 5 T. R. 593) a coal-mine, by the words of stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2; s. 1, being subject to a rate." Bristol Poor v. Wait, 5 Ad. & El. 1. So again in Queen v. Vauge, 3 Ad. & El. N. S. 242, the same judge says: "We will only here again observe that 'beneficial' and 'profitable,' in the ordinary sense of the words are not convertible terms; that a party holding property in its nature ratable is not discharged from his legal liability because he does it at a loss"

Beneficial Powers.—The Revised Statutes of New York, sec. 79, define a beneficial power as follows: "A general or special power is beneficial when no person other than the grantee has by the terms of its creation any interest in its execution." In construing a clause of a will, which was, "I give full power and authority and control to sell my property in Brooklyn to my sister," where there was nothing in the will indicative of an intent on the part of the testator that any other person should have the proceeds of sale, it was held that the clause created a valid beneficial power of sale; the court, Earl, J., saying, "The meaning of sec. 79 is plain. If, by the terms of the creation of the power, no other person than the donee has an interest in its execution, then it is beneficial; or to the same purpose, if the instrument creating the power does not by its terms give an interest in its execution to any one else, the donee is the sole beneficiary. It is claimed, however, that this section must be read as if it provided that when, by the terms of the creation of the power, the donee has an interest in its execution, and no other person has such interest, then it is beneficial. If this had been the meaning of the section, why were other persons named and such bungling phraseology used? It would have been much more direct and natural simply to have provided that 'a general or special power is beneficial where the donee thereof is, by the terms of its creation, the sole person interested in its execution.' The other form was used because it was intended to make the power beneficial both when by its terms the donee was solely interested in its execution and when it was entirely silent as to the beneficiary; and the language was the most apt and sententious to express such intention. It is said that, according to this construction, the words 'by the terms of its creation' have no meaning and were unnecessary. This is a mistake. Persons may become interested in the execution of a power in many ways after its creation, or by virtue of other instruments than that creating the power. Although there are such interested in its execution, the power is still beneficial. It is only deprived of that character when such persons take their interest by the terms of the instrument creating the power." Jennings v. Conboy, 73 N. Y. 230. See Cutting v. Cutting, 20 Hun (N. Y.), 360; s. c., 86 N. Y. 522.

Beneficial Enjoyment.—In construing the 21st section of the Succession Duty Act, 16 and 17 Vict. c. 51, which provides that the succession duty shall be calculated at the value of an annuity equal to the annual value of the property, and shall be paid in eight equal half-yearly instalments, the first to be paid twelve months next after the successor has become entitled to the 'beneficial enjoyment' of the real property, the court, Wensleydale, said: "The beneficial enjoyment means no more than in his own right and for his own benefit, not as trustee for another." Atty.-Gen. v. Earl of Sefton, 3 H. & C. 1023, 1030; s. c., 11 H. L. Cas. 256.

Beneficial Owner.—A party named as a promisee in a contract for payment of money, and having the instrument in his possession, may maintain an action and recover thereon in his own name, although another has a half-interest in the contract. The promisee, having possession and the legal title, may receive payment, and give an acquittance to the debtor, and is therefore the 'beneficial owner' within the meaning of § 2523 of the Revised Code. Hirschfelder v. Mitchell, 54 Ala. 419.

Beneficial Devise.—The General Stat-

BENEFICIAL OR BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATIONS. (See also AMOTION; CHARITIES; CORPORATIONS; DISFRANCHISEMENT; INSURANCE.)

1. Definition.—Associations of individuals, few or many, for the purpose of mutual benefit or advantage either to the members themselves or to those dependent on them. The purposes for which such associations are usually organized are to provide against sickness, loss by fire, storm, or theft, and to care for widows and orphans of deceased members. They are distinguished from charities in that they are maintained and supported exclusively by the members thereof; neither are they organizations for purely business purposes. A beneficial organization usually provides social advantages to its membership, and this is one of the peculiar features of these organizations as distinguished from those whose purposes are similar but in which the pecuniary benefits are received by the officers or managers alone.

utes of Massachusetts, c. 92, § 10, which provide that "all beneficial devises, etc., made or given in any will to a subscribing witness thereto shall be wholly void unless there are three other competent witnesses to the same, will not make a wife a competent witness to a will containing a devise to her husband, on the ground that a devise to her husband is a 'beneficial' devise to her, and that therefore the devise is void, leaving her a competent attesting witness to the will, and the will itself valid in all other respects. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 106 Mass. 474; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 356. See, on this subject, Jackson v. Woods, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 163; Jackson v. Durland, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 314; Winslow v. Kimball, 25 Me. 493, where a contrary doctrine is upheld.

Beneficially.—By an act 22 Geo. III. c. 56, trustees for the parish of St. Luke were empowered to purchase land in the parish of St. Leonards, Shoreditch, for the purpose of building a work-house thereon for their own parish; and (by sec. 11) the land and any work-house to be built thereon were not to be rated more highly to the poor, while used and occupied for the above purpose, than the lands and hereditaments to be purchased were rated at the time of purchase. Land was taken accordingly, and a work-house built thereon. By stat. 48 Geo. III. chap. 17, § 1, the former act was repealed; but a later section (74) enacted that all work-houses, etc., should be vested in, etc., under this act as fully, beneficially, etc., and to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as the former trustees were entitled to or possessed of the same; and it was held that, notwithstanding the general words of repeal, the 74th section of that act kept alive the exemption from increased rating; the court, Patteson, J., saying: 'The word beneficially alone might not have the effect of preserving the exemption, but coupled with the words 'to all intents and purposes whatsoever' we think that they may fairly be considered to have that effect." Queen v. St. Leonards, 13 Q. B. 964.

Beneficially Interested.—A tax-payer is a party beneficially interested in having all the property in the district assessed, and is therefore a proper party to make the affidavit for the issuance of the writ of mandamus to the assessor to compel him to assess property subject to assessment. Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353.

A person who brings and prosecutes a suit in the name of another, under an agreement with the nominal party to carry on the suit at his own expense and have a portion of the expected recovery, is a person "beneficially interested" in a recovery sought to be had in the name of another, and is liable for the costs recovered against the nominal party, under 2 Rev. Stat. (N. Y.) 619, sec. 44. Giles v. Halbert, 12 N. Y. 32.

2. Formation.—They are formed by the voluntary association of individuals for certain definite purposes usually set forth in the constitution or fundamental law of the organization to which the members severally subscribe. They are either incorporated or unincorporated bodies.

(a) Incorporated Societies.—The method of incorporation is regulated by statutory enactments in the several States and the rules of court where the society or its main office is located. The articles of incorporation must state fully and clearly the objects of the organization, and public notice of an application for a charter is usually required.[1]

(b) Unincorporated Societies may be formed in any manner agreeable to the promoters. The organization may be quite informal, provided the purposes of the association be sufficiently well defined.

3. Constitution and By-laws.—It is customary in all societies to adopt a constitution and by-laws which set forth the objects of the society, the qualifications for membership, designate the number and character of its officers, and contain such other rules and regulations as may be necessary or may be deemed convenient for the management of its affairs. These, together with the charter in cases of incorporated societies, constitute its fundamental law, and are the source and limit of its life and authority. In their construction the same principles of law are applicable that govern and control other kinds of corporations and associations. A society will not be permitted to do that which is either expressly or

1. English Statutes.—The laws now in force in England relating to benevolent and beneficial associations are collated in the Friendly Societies Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63 Such societies may be formed for the following purposes: (1) For insuring a sum of money to be paid on the birth of a member's child, or the death of a member, or for the funeral expenses of the wife or child of a member; (2) for the relief or maintenance of the members, their husbands, wives, children, brothers or sisters, nephews or nieces, in old age, sickness, or widowhood; or the endowment of members, or nominees of members, at any age; (3) for any purpose which shall be authorized by any of Her Majesty's principal secretaries of state, as a proper purpose to which the powers and facilities of the act ought to be extended. In order to establish such a society the promoters should frame and agree upon a set of rules for its regulation, government, and management, in which provision should be made for a general committee of management, upon whom shall be conferred all the powers granted to such societies by the aforesaid act. These rules should also set forth the name of the society and its place of meetings; the whole purpose for which the society is to be established; the objects to which its funds shall be applicable; the conditions under which the benefits shall be payable, and the fines and forfeitures which may be imposed upon the members; the manner of making, altering, amending, or rescinding the rules; provisions for the appointment and removal of the trustees or committee of management, or officers of the society; provisions for the investment of the society's funds and a periodical audit of its accounts; the manner in which disputes between the members and the society, or any person claiming under the rules or through the members, shall be settled. A copy of these rules must be signed by three of the members and the secretary of the society, and transmitted to a registrar, who will, provided the rules be in proper form and the purposes of the society be approved by a secretary of state, issue a certificate of the formation of the society, which shall thereupon be invested with the rights and powers and charged with the responsibilities of a friendly society.

impliedly prohibited by its charter and by-laws, and any effort so to do will be restrained by injunction at the instance of any one interested.[1] The charter or constitution may not be altered, amended, or rescinded, except with the consent of all the members of the association, in the absence of any agreement or provision of law to the contrary.[2]

By-laws should contain only such regulations as are necessary for the good government and support of the association and in accord with its charter or constitution and the purposes of its formation. If they go beyond this they are invalid ;[3] they must be reasonable ;[4] they must not be unlawful, nor opposed to public policy, nor inconsistent with the charter of the association.[5] By-

1. The members of a subordinate lodge may not dissolve and divide its property, where the charter provides that on dissolution the property should go to the superior lodge. State Council v. Sharp, 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 620. And if they attempt to do so, they may be restrained by injunction. Abeles v. McKeen, 18 N. J. Eq. 462; Torrey v. Baker, 1 Allen (Mass.), 120.

Society may be restrained by injunction from illegally expelling a member. Luch v. Committee of Board of Brokers, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92; Smith v. Smith, 3 Des. (S. Car.) 557; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 98; Hall v. Sup. Lodge K. of H., 24 Fed. Repr. 450; Altman v. Berry, 27 N. J. Eq. 331.

2. Livingston v. Lynch, 4 John Ch. (N. Y.) 573; Smith v. Smith, 3 Des. (S. Car.) 557.

3. An incorporated association had a by law which made it an offence subject to expulsion for one member to "vilify" another. The court reinstated a member who had been expelled for violating this by-law, upon the ground that such a law was not necessary for the good government and support of the corporation, saying: "The right of membership is valuable, and is not to be taken away without an authority fairly derived either from the charter or the nature of corporate bodies. . The offence of vilifying a member or a private quarrel is totally unconnected with the affairs of the society, and taking cognizance of such offences will have the pernicious effect of introducing private feuds into the bosom of the society and interrupting the transaction of business." Commonwealth v. St. Patrick's Benevolent Society, 2 Binney (Pa.), 448.

A by-law imposing dues greatly in excess of the object for which demanded and not in proportion to the requirements of the society is invalid. Pulford v. Detroit F. D., 31 Mich. 458.

4. A by-law changing the rates of dues from twelve and a half cents to two dollars per month was decided to be unreasonable, and a member who did not assent thereto was not bound to pay them. Whether a by-law is reasonable or not is a question for the court solely. But its unreasonableness should be demonstrably shown. Courts in construing by-laws will interpret them reasonably and will not scrutinize their terms for the purpose of making them void and invalid, in case every particular reason for them does not appear. Hibernia Fire Engine Co. v. Harrison, 93 Pa. St. 264; Angell & Ames on Corp. sec. 357; Commonwealth v. Worcester, 3 Pick. (N. Y.) 462.

By-law authorizing expulsion of member without notice is unreasonable. Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 69.

Regulating right of member to sue is valid. Bauer v. Samson Sup. Lodge K. of P., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 618; Osceola Tribe v. Schmidt, 57 Md. 98; S. Council v. Garrigan, 1 W. R. 562. That member not entitled to benefits allowed in case of sickness, where sickness result of drunkenness, debauchery, etc., is reasonable. Harrington v. Workingmen's Soc., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 651; Black & White, etc., Soc., v. Vandyke, 2 Whart. 309; St. Mary's Ben. Soc. v. Burford, 70 Pa. St. 321. Forbidding member to trade in neighborhood of Chamber of Commerce, reasonable, as tending to preserve quiet and keep access to building free. State v. Milwaukee Ch. of Com., 47 Wis. 685. For expulsion of member who violates his contracts is reasonable Dickinson v. Mil. Ch. of Com., 29 Wis. 45.

5. By-law of workingmen's association forbidding member to take the place of another discharged by his employer for upholding the rules of society, void, be-laws are to be reasonably construed, except where they involve a forfeiture or suspension of the rights of a member, in which case they are to be strictly construed.[1]

4. Beneficial Associations Distinguished from Charities.—Where the exemption of property from taxation is involved, this distinction is sharply drawn. Laws of exemption are to be strictly construed. A charity is held to mean a public charity—one whose benefits are extended to needy persons generally, without regard to their relation to the members of the society, or to the fees paid. A beneficial society whose beneficence is confined to the members, their families, dependents, or friends, and depends upon the contributions made, is not a charity, but a private institution for the mutual advantage of the members. The property of such a society is therefore not exempt from taxation, under a law exempting the property of charities.[2] Where, however, the right of taxation is not involved, the line is less sharply drawn. It has been held that a member of a benevolent society is not disqualified to served on a jury in a case involving the property of the society, because it is a charity, and therefore the members have no pecuniary interest in the suit;[3] also that the property of a benevolent society may not be divided among the members, after a vote to dissolve, on the ground that the funds of a charity may not be diverted to a use which is not charitable.[4] On the other hand, it was held that a devise which would have been void if made to a charitable use is yet good if made to a society organized for the relief of indigent and distressed worthy masons, their widows or orphans.[5]

5. Distinguished from Insurance Companies.—The distinction between certain classes of benevolent societies and mutual insurance companies is by no means clear. It is important as determining whether or not such societies come within the operation of the cause against public policy. Doyle v. New York Ws. Soc., 3 Hun (N. Y.), 360. Forbidding member to bring suit at law against the society in any event, void. Bauer v. Samson, etc., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 618.

1. Sup. Lodge v. Abbott, 82 Ind. 1; Georgia Mas Lodge v. Gibson, 52 Ga. 640; Folmer's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 133; Berlin Ben. Soc. v. March, 82 Pa. St. 166

Where rule provides that notice should be given verbally or by circular, a member may not be suspended unless the notice was received. Costner v. Farmers', etc., 15 N. Westn. Repr. Mich. 452. Compare Gregir v. McLin, 78 Ky. 233; Schunck v. Gw. & W. Fund, 44 Wis. 369; Scheu v. Grand Lodge, 17 Fed. Repr. 214; McNumay v. K. of H., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas 616; Bauer v. Samson, etc., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 618.

2. Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 536; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 158; Morning Star Lodge v. Hayslip, 23 Ohio St. 144; Bangor v. Mas. Lodge 73 Me. 429; County of Hennepin v. Brotherhood, etc., 38 Am. Rep. 298, and note; Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen (Mass.). 470; Donohue's Ap., 86 Pa. St. 306; Delaware Co. Inst. v. Delaware Co., 94 Pa. St. 163; Humphries v. Little Sisters. 29 Ohio St. 205; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. S. Cas. (Pa.) 98. Compare City of Petersburg v. Mechanics' Assoc., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Va) 484; Indianapolis v. G. M., 25 Ind. 518; Mayor, etc., of Savannah v. Solomon's Lodge, 53 Ga. 93; State v. Addison, 2 S. Car 499.

3. Bardine v. Grand Lodge, 37 Ala. 478.

4. Duke v. Fuller, 9 N. H. 536; Penfield v. Skinner, 11 Vt. 296.

5. Swift v. Easton Ben. Assoc., 73 Pa. St. 362; Clark's Trust, 16 Eng. Rep. Moak, 624.

statutes of the various States requiring insurance companies to deposit securities, etc., for the protection of policy-holders. Where the whole purpose of the association is the mutual insurance of the members, and no qualifications are required for membership, except that the applicant should be in a certain condition of health and within a certain age, the society is an insurance company, and must conform to the laws governing such associations. The mere fact that the amount payable by the society on the death of a member is not fixed, but dependent upon the number of members at the date of the death, does not change the character of the company; nor does the fact that there is no obligation on the part of a member enforceable in a court of law to pay any sum by way of premium.[1] It is equally true that a society formed for the purpose of rendering assistance to members or their families in case of sickness, and to insure the payment of a certain sum to the widow or dependents of a member at death, is not an insurance company.[2] It has been held that certificates of membership in mutual-aid associations are, in effect, life-insurance policies, and governed by the rules thereof as to insurable interest.[3] The question depends more upon the laws of the various States, and the evils against which they are directed, than upon the professed purposes of associations.

6. Rights and Responsibilities of Members, with relation to third persons, depend upon the character of the association. If the society has been incorporated the members are not personally responsible for its obligations, in the absence of a law to the contrary. The powers of the members depend upon the powers of the corporation. A majority, or even the whole number, cannot do an act ultra vires.[4] Members of unincorporated societies are usually treated as individuals, and have the same powers and responsibilities so far as others are concerned. But the members of unincorporated benevolent associations have for certain purposes the capacity of acting as bodies politic, and enjoy some of the privileges and immunities which belong to corporations. They are not personally liable for the debts of the society, unless the debts have been contracted with their consent,[5] and they may take gifts

1. State v. Browner, 15 Mo. Ap. 597; Commonwealth v. Weatherbee, 105 Mass. 160; State v. Merchants' Ex. Soc., 72 Mo. 146. Compare People v. Nelson, 46 N. Y. 477.

2. State v. Mut. Pro. Assoc., 26 Ohio St. 19; Commonwealth v. Nat. Mut. Aid Assoc., 94 Pa. St. 481; Com. League v. People, 90 Ill. 166; Chosen Friends v. Fairman, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 386; State v Iowa Mut. Assoc. 12 N. Westn. Repr. 782.

3. Elkhart Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Houghton, 98 Ind. 149.

4. See notes 1 and 2, p. 173.

5. Park v. Spaulding, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 131; Coldicot v. Griffiths, 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 527; Cockerell v. Ancompte, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 284; Ferris v. Thaw, 72 Mo. 446; Volger v. Ray, 131 Mass. 439; Sizer v. Daniels, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; Downing v. Mann, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 36; Ridgley v. Dobson, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 118.

A partnership involves "community of profit and loss, and the right of one partner to bind the rest." Flemgorg v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172. "Community of interest for business purposes." Ash v. Gine, 97 Pa. St. 493. "Trade and profit." Lafond v. Deems, 81 N. Y. 514.

which would be void for uncertainty if made to individuals by the same description.[1] The mutual rights of members of both incorporated and unincorporated societies depend upon the constitution and by-laws, which have the effect of a contract whose provisions are equally binding upon all. Members must take notice of these laws and act accordingly.[2] A usage to the contrary cannot be relied on.[3] An officer cannot suspend a law in favor of a member without the consent of the society.[4] These laws not only control but protect the rights of members. The society is bound by them. If a right guaranteed by them to a member is denied, he may resort to the courts and compel satisfaction.[5] If, however, the laws of the society provide a tribunal for the determination of controversies, a member cannot sue in a court of justice unless he can show that the proceedings against him were irregular.[6] A majority of the members of a beneficial association cannot change nor depart from the constitution or charter of the society unless the authority to do so is given to them in the charter.[7] By-laws, however, may be altered, amended, or rescinded at the pleasure of a majority, provided the charter contain nothing to the contrary, and the principles already indicated, which control the adoption of such laws, be observed.[8] Most of the adjudicated questions affecting the rights of members grow out of ambiguities existing in the laws of particular societies. No general rule may be affirmed with reference to them. The rules of construction have already been set forth.[9]

7. Beneficiaries.—A beneficiary is one entitled to the benefit of

In re St. James Club, 13 Eng. L. & Eq. 589. Compare Gorman v. Russell, 15 Cal. 536; Cockburn v. Thompson, 16 Ves. 321; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 158; Beaumont v. Meredith, 3 Ves. & B. 180; Pierce v. Riper, 17 Ves. 15; Elison v. Reynolds, 2 Jac. & W. 511.

1. Beatty et al. v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. (U.S.) 566; Swansey v. Am. Ben. Soc., 57 Me. 523; Banks v. Phelan, 4 Barb. Sup. Ct. R. (N. Y.) 80.

2. Bauer v. Samson Lodge K. of H., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 618; Madeira v. Merchants' Ex. Soc., 16 Fed. Repr. 749; Mitchell v. Lycoming Mut. Ins. Co., 51 Pa St. 402; Walsh v. Ætna, etc., 30 Iowa, 145; Treadway v. Hamilton, 29 Conn. 68; Penfield v. Skinner, 11 Vt. 296; Karcher v. Knights of Honor Sup. Lodge, 137 Mass. 368.

3. Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 252.

4. Where at date of death a member was under rules of society suspended for non-payment of dues, beneficiary cannot show that an officer of the society had continued to treat him as a member in good standing. Borgraefe v. Knights of H., 22 Mo. Ap. 263. Compare Folmer's Ap., 87 Pa. St. 133; Scheu v. Grand L., 17 Fed. Repr. 214.

5. Dolan v. Court G. M., etc., 128 Mass. 439; Birmingham v. Gallagher, 112 Mass. 190; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92; Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 69. Compare Foram v. Howard B. Assoc., 4 Pa. St. 519.

6. Bauer v. Samson Lodge K. of P., 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Ind.) 618; Leech v. Committee Board of Brokers, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Oseeola Tribe v. Schmidt, 57 Md. 98; Black and White Soc. v. Vandyke, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 308; Anacosta Tribe v. Murbach, 13 Md. 91; Harrington v. Workingmen's Assoc., 27 Alb. L. J. 438.

7. Livingston v. Lynch, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 573; Abeles v. McKeen, 18 N. J. Eq. 462; Torrey v. Baker, 1 Allen (Mass.), 120; State Council v. Sharp, 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 620; Smith v. Smith, 3 Des. (S. Car.) 557: Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 98; Duke v. Fuller, 9 N. H. 536; Hall v. Sup. Lodge K. of H., 24 Fed. Repr. 450; Altman v. Berry, 27 N. J. Eq. 331.

8. Field on Corp. § 305.

9. Note 1, p. 174.

the society. No one who is not of the class for whose benefit the association was formed can be a beneficiary.[1] The right to the benefit depends upon the rules of the society, and is usually, but not necessarily, evidenced by a certificate or beneficiary policy, the effect of which is determined by these rules. Beneficiaries are either members of the society or those nominated by or dependent upon members. The rights of beneficiaries not members are governed by the same principles as those of members, so far as they depend upon the adoption, amendment, rescission, and interpretation of rules.[2] One nominated as a beneficiary by a member has no vested right in the benefit by virtue of such nomination. The member may at any time substitute another person or class of persons, unless restrained by the rules of the association.[3] Moreover, if the beneficiary dies before the member, the beneficiary's representatives have no interest in the benefit, even though the member die without making another nomination.[4] A beneficiary

1. Ky. Mas. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.), 489; McClure v. Johnson, 56 Iowa, 620; Elkhart Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Houghton, 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 587; Nat. Aid Soc. v. Gouser, 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 594. Compare Folmer's App., 87 Pa. St. 133; Gundlach v. Germania Assoc., 4 Hun (N. Y.), 339.

2. Benefit payable to widow, children, mother, father, etc., of deceased member vests in beneficiaries in order named if members fail to name beneficiary. Arthur v. O. F. B. Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 557.

Where benefit payable to "devisees of member," and he dies intestate, his administrator is not entitled to it. It belongs to society. Worley v. Nat. Mas. Aid Soc., 3 McCrary U. S. C. C. (Iowa) 53.

Benefit payable to "heirs of member" payable to his widow, children, etc., for whose benefit society formed, rather than administrator, representing his creditors. Ky. M. M. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.), 489.

Benefit payable to "widow, children, or devisee" does not go to residuary legatee, but to widow, etc. Wiel v. Trafford, 3 Tenn. Ch. 108; Greene v. Greene, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 481; Smith v. Covenant Mut. Benefit Assoc., 24 Fed. Repr. 685.

Where the certificate entitled beneficiary to one dollar for "each contributing member," held, that amount realized from an assessment, and one dollar for each member of the society, was payable by society. Nerskin v N. W. E. L. Assoc., 15 N. W. R. 683; Burland v. N. W. B. Assoc., 47 Mich. 424.

Where, under rule, benefit payable to person whose name entered for that purpose by a member in the books of the society, yet if member enter a name and afterward by will leave benefit to some one else, the latter is entitled to benefit. Sup. Council v. Priest, 46 Mich. 429.

Where, by rule, widow of member allowed $25 for funeral expenses, she is not entitled to benefit when her husband was buried by some one else during her absence at his own expense. Berlin Ben. Assoc. v. March, 82 Pa. St. 166.

On whole subject see Hirschl on Fraternities: Forfeiture.

3. Dolan v. Court Good Sam., 128 Mass. 437; Mas. Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Burkhart, 7 W. Rep. 527; Exp. Aid Soc. v. Lewis, 9 Mo. Ap. 415; Gambs v. Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 48; Gentry v. Knights of Honor Supreme Lodge, 23 Fed. Repr. 718.

In Highland v. Highland, 109 Ill. 366, a member of a voluntary benevolent association named his sister as the person whom he desired to receive the benefit due on his death. Held, that his subsequent marriage and written notification to his wife that he desired her to have all his effects did not operate to divest the sister of her right to the amount.

In Raub v. Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc., 3 Mackey (Dist of Col.), 68, a by-law of a mutual-benefit society prohibited the change of the beneficiary without the approval of the directors. The charter provided for payment, among others, "to assigns or legatees." Held, that the by-law was contrary to the provisions of the charter, and that the appointment of a new beneficiary by will was valid. See also Stephenson v. Stephenson, 64 Iowa, 534; Daniels v. Pratt (Mass.), 10 N. Eastn. Repr. 166.

4. Exp. Aid Soc. v. Lewis, 9 Mo. Ap.

has, however, a vested right when the event upon which the benefit was made to depend has happened; and this right may not be impaired by a change in the rules of the society.[1] A beneficiary, like a member, may sue for a benefit wrongfully withheld from him.[2]

8. Dissolution.—A beneficial association may be dissolved as provided in its charter or constitution. In the absence of any provision on the subject, it cannot be dissolved except by the unanimous consent of its members;[3] and if the association is charitable in its nature, even the unanimous vote of the members will not authorize a dissolution, provided it involve a diversion and division of the funds of the society.[4]

415; Mas. Mut., etc., Soc. v. McAulay, 2 Mackey (D. C.), 70.

1. Where, under by-law in force at death of a member, his widow entitled to $4 a month during widowhood, she may not be deprived of this monthly allowance by change in by-law substituting lump sum for periodical payments. Gundlach v. Germania Assoc., 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 190. Compare Fugure v. Mut. Soc. St. J., 46 (Vt.) 326.

2. Knights of Honor v. Sup. Lodge, 82 Ind. 1.

3. Altman v. Berry, 27 N. J. Eq. 331; State Council v. Sharp, 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 629; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 98. Compare Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 19.

4. Fund accumulated "for good of craft and relief of indigent worthy masons, their widows and orphans," may not be divided among members of society. Duke v. Fuller, 9 N. H. 536.

Forfeiture.—The right to the beneficiary fund is lost by failing to pay the requisite dues or assessments at the times fixed by the rules, charter, or by-laws of the association. The members of such a society are absolutely bound by the rules thereof, although they may be ignorant of their terms, and although there may be a usage and custom contrary thereto. Thus, if by the rules payments are to be made at certain fixed times, and that the company is not required to make any further demand for them or give any further notice that they are due, if a member fails to make payment he will be deemed in default, and will lose his insurance, although the association usually sent a notice informing member that such payment was due, but failed to do so at this time. Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Miller Lodge, 58 Md. 463; Thompson v. Knickerbocker L I. Co., 104 U. S. Rep. 252.

Where a rule provides that if a member fails to pay within thirty days after publication of notice of assessment his policy is forfeited, such rule has been held to be valid, for, "stringent as are the rules in ordinary life policies, they should be more rigidly applied in mutual associations." Madeira v. Merchants' Society, 16 Fed. Repr. 749.

An association cannot assert the existence of a custom against a member; thus it was held that payments made to the treasurer or collector outside the lodge were valid, though there was a custom that they should be made in the lodge meeting, and though the officers of theorder had decided that they must be so made. Munson v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., Minn., 16 N. W. R. 395; Walsh Ætna, 31 Iowa, 145.

Where a charter provides that members should be notified of assessments, "either by a circular or verbal notice," before they should be in default for non-payment, it is necessary for the association to prove not only that the notice was mailed to, but also received by, such member. Castner v. Farmers' M. F. I. A., 15 N. W. R. 452.

Where the only means which a subordinate lodge or a member of a beneficial association has of knowing when an assessment is due to the supreme lodge is by a notice from the supreme lodge, unless notice is given no rights are lost. Hall v. Knights of Honor Sup. Lodge, 24 Fed. Repr. 450.

Where a member transmitted money in payment of all his dues and the amount was insufficient, the association cannot, for the first time, after the member's death, claim a forfeiture of the policy by reason of the dues not being paid in full. Georgia Masonic Co. v. Gibson, 52 Ga. 640.

An association knowing that certain statements in an application for membership are false if it continues to receive assessments from the assured will not be permitted afterwards to declare the policy forfeited for this reason. Excelsior M. A. O. v. Riddle, 16 Cent. Law Jo. (Ind.) 407; Illinois Masonic, etc., v.

BENEFICIARY. (See also CESTUI QUE TRUST.)—A word proposed by Chief Justice Story to denote the equitable or beneficial owner of property, the legal title to which is in another.[1]

BENEFIT.—Advantage; gain; profit; use.[2]

Baldwin, 86 Ill. 482; Masonic, etc., v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203.

A mutual-relief society organized under New York Laws 1875, ch. 267, for rendering relief to members and their families, cannot, after having issued a certificate in favor of one not belonging to the family of a member, contend that it was without power to pay him according to the terms of the certificate. Massey v. Rochester Mut. Relief Soc., 34 Hun (N. Y.), 254.

An association having issued its policy to a member, wherein he was declared to be in good standing, and having assessed him twice, will not be permitted to invalidate the policy by reason of the nonpayment of a portion of the preliminary fees. Roswell v. Equitable Aid Union, 13 Fed. Repr. 840.

The lower lodge is usually the agent of the supreme lodge for the purpose of collecting assessments and transmitting the same, and a member who has paid to a lower lodge will be protected, although the money was never sent to the supreme or higher lodge. Schunck v. Wittwen & Waisen Fund, 44 Wis. 369; Erdman v. Mutual Ins. Co., 44 Wis. 376.

At the time of a member's death his assessments were not all paid, and by the rules of the association his insurance was forfeited, but afterwards the unpaid assessments were paid to the lodge, and by it remitted to the higher lodge; this was declared to be a waiver of the forfeiture on the part of the association. Erdman v. Mutual Ins. Co., 44 Wis. 376.

Assignment.—Insurance in a mutual-benefit association taken out, under the rules, in favor of an heir or a beneficiary cannot be divested by sale or assignment. Basye v. Adams, 81 Ky. 368. Compare Briggs v. Earl, 139 Mass. 473.

1. "The phrase cestui que trust," says the Chief Justice, "is a barbarous Norman-French law phrase; and is so ungainly and ill adapted to the English idiom that it is surprising that the good sense of the English legal profession has not long since banished it and substituted some phrase in the English idiom furnishing an analogous meaning. In the Roman law the trustee was commonly called 'hæres fiduciarius;' and the cestui que trust 'haeres fidei commissarius,' which Dr. Halifax has not scrupled to translate 'fide-committee.' Halifax Anal. of Civil Law, ch. 6, § 16, p. 34. I prefer 'fide-commissary' as at least equally within the analogy of the English language. But beneficiary, though a little remote from the original meaning of the word, would be a very appropriate word, as it has not yet acquired any general use in a different sense." Story's Eq. Juris. (13th Ed.) sec. 321 n.

2. Where C., a musical composer, assigned by deed his copyright in two musical compositions, together with all property and benefit therein, the right to exclusive performance thereof passed; the said right having been made the property of the composer by the act 5 and 6 Vict. c. 45. Ex parte Hutchins, L. R. Q. B. Div. 483.

A policy of insurance which contained the following clause, "Warranted free from all average and without benefit of salvage, but to pay loss on such part as shall not arrive," was held void under the act 19 Geo. II. c. 37, sec. 1, which enacts that "No assurance, etc., shall be made on any ship, etc., interest or no interest, or without further proof of interest than the policy, or by way of gaining or wagering, or without benefit of salvage to the assurer; and every such assurance shall be null and void to all intents and purposes," on the ground that such an insurance confers upon the insured a right to more than an indemnity. Atkins v. Jupe, 2 L. R. C. P. Div. 375.

Benefit of Children.—The Customs Annuity and Benevolent Fund was established by act of Parliament in the nature of an insurance fund for the benefit of the widows, children, etc., of officers of the customs. One of the rules provided that of the portion payable on the death of a subscriber two thirds, or the whole if be left no widow, "should be applied or paid in any manner or proportion which he might propose for the benefit of his children, relatives, or his nominees who should have been duly admitted by the directors." A subscriber appointed his share of the fund to the trustees of his daughter's marriage settlement, and directed the trusts to be for his daughter for life, with remainder for her husband for life, with remainder for their issue. He afterwards sent in the names of the trustees as his nominees for admission by the directors; but neither they nor the husband were formally admitted. It was held that the settlement on the daughter, her husband and issue was a valid application of the fund "for the benefit of his daughter" within the meaning of the rules, and that no admission of the trustees or the husband as nominees, nor any consent by the directors to the settlement, was necessary. In re Pocock's Policy, L. R. 6 Ch. Ap. 445.

Where a father had made certain marriage settlements for his daughter during his lifetime upon trusts to the daughter for life, and after her death to her husband for life, and after the decease of the survivor to the children, and if there should be no children then to such person as the daughter should appoint; and in default of appointment then to her next of kin; and by his will made a further provision for them in the following terms: "to be held and disposed of by them upon the same trusts in all respects for the benefit of my daughter and her children and grandchildren as thereby declared as to the property thereby settled."—it was held that these words were to be construed as words of reference incorporating the trusts of the settlements in the will; and that the trusts for the husband were not excluded, and therefore that a legacy duty was payable thereon; the court, Pollock, C. B., saying: "The question is whether these words are words of reference only, or whether their operation is to create different trusts from those in the settlement. The language admits of no doubt; it is only by an ingenious construction that any doubt has been suggested. The testator, 'in addition to the property settled,' gives 'the further sum of £8000 to the trustees of the settlement,' and 'for the benefit of my daughter.' The word 'benefit' is not a technical word, but a general expression. The gift, therefore, may well be read: Whereas certain moneys were settled by means of trustees for the benefit of my daughter and her children, I give an additional sum of £8000 upon the same trusts in all respects. The settlement was in effect for the benefit of the wife and children." In re Palmer, 3 H. & N. 26.

Benefit of Wife.—A conveyed to B one half of certain capital stock "in trust for the sole benefit of the wife of C and her children;" also one half of the profits arising from the stock "to be applied by B for the benefit of C's wife and her children." Held, that this language was sufficient to exclude C's marital right to the profits, although the words "sole and separate use" are omitted. Clark v. Maguire, 16 Mo. 302.

To constitute a conveyance to a trustee for a married woman one for her "sole and separate use," no technical language is necessary. Where a conveyance was made to a trustee in trust "for the entire use, benefit, profit, and advantage" of the feme covert, held, that by these words a "sole and separate" estate in the property was conveyed to her. Heathman v. Hall, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 414. See Adamson v. Armitage, 19 Ves. Jr. 416.

But a legacy to a married woman "to and for her own use and benefit" does not give a separate estate where, in the same will, in respect to another gift to the same person, the testator has appointed a trustee and expressly directed the application of it to her "sole and separate use." Wills v. Sayers, 4 Mad. Ch. 409; Roberts v. Spicer, 5 Mad. Ch. 491.

By a devise to a testator's wife of all the benefits of his real estate until his children come of age, grain growing in the ground at the time of the testator's death passes to the widow. Appeal of Grubb's Ex., 4 Yeates (Pa.), 23.

Where a testator gave the character of heirlooms to a part of his household furniture, namely, his pictures, and then bequeathed to trustees all household goods, furniture, etc. (except his family pictures), to sell such parts as they should think proper, and then as to his family pictures, and such of his effects as should remain unsold, in trust for L. if living, for his own proper use and benefit,—it was held that the family pictures were heirlooms, but that L. was absolutely entitled to the remaining personalty; Plumer, M. R., saying: "The form of gift to R. Lumley is too clear to admit of doubt. The words "for his own use and benefit" are the common language to express the largest right that can be given over personal property, and are used throughout the will when rents and profits are to be enjoyed absolutely. Saville v. Earl of Scarborough, 1 Swanst. Ch. 537, 547.

Benefit of Survivorship.—A testator gave a fund to trustees upon trust to pay the income to A during his life, and after the decease of A, leaving issue, upon trust to pay, apply, assign, and transfer both principal and interest to and amongst all and every the child and children of A, equally to be divided between them, and if but one, then to such only child, to be paid to them, if sons at twenty-one, and if daughters at that age or marriage, "with benefit of survivorship," etc. A had eight children, of whom three died infants in their father's lifetime, two attained twenty-one and died in his lifetime, and three attained twenty-one and survived him. It was held that the words "with benefit of survivorship" referred to the period when the shares became absolutely vested and not to the time of payment, and therefore the two children who attained twenty-one and died in their father's lifetime took vested interests, and that their representatives were entitled to share in the fund along with the children who survived their father. Cornect v. Wadman, L. R. 7 Eq. Cas. 80.

Person for whose Immediate Benefit.—A person who is interested in the event of a suit, in that he is bound to pay half the damages and costs in the case of a recovery by plaintiff, is not "a person for whose immediate benefit" the action is defended, and consequently is a competent witness. Laumier v. Francis, 23 Mo. 181.

Nor is a "stockholder" of a corporation rendered incompetent for it where he is not named as a party to the action. Pack v. The Mayor of N. Y., 3 Comst. (N. Y.) 489, 493; Washington Bank v. Palmer, 2 Sandf. Sup. Ct. (N. Y.) 686; N. Y. & Erie R. Co. v. Cook, 2 Sandf. Sup. Ct. (N. Y.) 732; Montgomery County Bank v. Marsh, 3 Selden (N. Y.), 481.

But one who has indemnified the sheriff for taking property by virtue of an execution is not a competent witness for the sheriff in defence to a suit against him for such taking. The person indemnifying the sheriff in such case is the "person for whose immediate benefit the suit is defended." Howland v. Willetts, 5 Selden (N. Y.), 170.

The child or next of kin of an intestate is a competent witness for the administrator in an action brought by the latter to recover a demand claimed to be due the estate. Such a person is not a party for whose immediate benefit the action is prosecuted. Butler v. Patterson, 13 N. Y. 292.

In a suit upon a promissory note the party for whose accommodation the note was made and indorsed is not a competent witness, since the suit is defended for his immediate benefit. Gildersleeve v. Martine, 19 N. Y. 321.

Benefit of Herself, her Family, or her Estate.—A note made by a married woman and her husband for a loan of money procured and used to pay his creditors under a compromise is not a contract for the "benefit of herself, her family, or her estate." National Bank of New England v. Smith, 43 Conn. 327. See Smith v. Williams, 43 Conn. 409.

Nor is a contract made by a married woman to sell her land. Gore v. Carl, 47 Conn. 291.

Public Use or Benefit.—The owners and occupiers of grist-mills are not required by the statutes of Vermont to receive grain for grinding against their wills; therefore the exercise of a claim of right to overflow lands for the benefit of a grist-mill under the Flowage Acts of 1866–7–9 is not a taking for public use within the meaning of the Constitution. Tyler v. Beacher, 44 Vt. 648; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 398.

In opening streets in the city of New York, property-owners can only be assessed for the benefit and advantage which they will derive from the improvement, over and above their loss and damage. Matter of Fourth Avenue, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 452.

The owner of property taken for public streets is entitled to a full compensation for the damage he sustains thereby; but if the taking of his property for the public improvement is a benefit rather than an injury to him, he certainly has no equitable claim to damages. Livingstone v. Mayor of New York, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 85, 101.

In proceedings under the act relative to streets in the city of Albany, if in the opinion of the jury the damages or recompense to which the owners of ground required for an improvement exceeds the benefit which will accrue to the owners or occupants of such houses and lots of ground as in their judgment ought to be assessed, the jury must so certify, and all further proceedings will be suspended. Canal Bank of Albany v. Mayor of Albany, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 244.

An incorporated company who own a lot in the vicinity of a public improvement are not liable to be assessed for benefits, if by the terms of the grant by which the lot is held it can be appropriated only to a specific use, which by possibility cannot be rendered more advantageous by the opening of a street or square in its neighborhood; but the company may be assessed for benefit to adjoining grounds not so restricted. Owners of Ground v. Corp. of Albany, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 374.

Benefit of Law.—A Massachusetts statute (Stat. 1818, c. 113) provided "that no person should be entitled to the benefit of law for the recovery of any debt or fee accruing for his professional services," unless properly licensed. In an action by an unlicensed physician, after the repeal of the statute for services rendered before the repeal, it was held by Shaw, C. J.: "Taking the terms together, the word 'recovery' with that of 'benefit of law,' the construction, we think, is 'benefit of legal proceedings,' including all words in which payment of a debt may be obtained by process of law. It results from this that the policy of the statute was intended to be reached and effected, not by providing that a debt should not accrue, by force of the common law, from services done on request, but that the debt should not be enforced by legal proceedings of any kind. It therefore affected the remedy, but not the right." Hewitt v. Wilcox, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 154.

BENEVOLENCE.—In old European law, an extraordinary aid granted by freemen to their sovereign as a voluntary gratuity;[1] good-will; kindness; humanity;—a word of wider meaning than charity, with which, however, it is often found.[1]

BENEVOLENT. See CHARITABLE; HUMANE; KIND.[2]

Benefit of Exemption.—The constitutional provision relating to the exemption of a homestead to the head of a family residing in Florida, providing that "this exemption shall accrue to the heirs of the party having enjoyed or taken the benefit of such exemption," is operative to secure to the heirs the benefit of the homestead exemption, notwithstanding that the deceased head of the family had not resorted to the statutory method of defining and placing on record the description of the property he intended should constitute his homestead. Baker v. State, 17 Fla. 406.

1. Burrill's Law Dict., sub voce; 1 Robertson's Chas. V., Appendix, note 38.

2. In construing a bequest in aid of objects and purposes of benevolence or charity, the court, Gray, J., said: "Whatever, therefore, may be the meaning, in the law of Massachusetts, of the word benevolence by itself, there can be no doubt that when used in connection with 'charity,' as in this will, it is synonymous with it; and the connecting 'or' must be taken in the sense of defining and limiting the nature of the charity intended, and of explaining one word by the other." Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen (Mass.), 446, 470.

3. In the case of Norris v. Thomson's Ex., 19 N. J. (Eq.) 307, the court, Zabriskie, Ch., said: "The word benevolent is certainly more indefinite and of far wider range than charitable or religious; it would include all gifts prompted by good-will or kind feeling towards the recipient, whether an object of charity or not. The natural and usual meaning of the word would so extend it. It has no legal meaning separate from its usual meaning. The word 'charitable' has acquired a settled limited meaning in law which confines it within known limits. In all the decisions on this subject it has been held that a devise or bequest in England for benevolent objects, or in trust to give to such objects, is too indefinite and therefore void, and not being within the scope of the statute of Elizabeth is not saved by it." See Thomson's Ex. v. Norris, 20 N. J. (Eq.) 489; Williams v. Kershaw, 5 Cl. & Fin. 111; Ellis v. Selby, 1 Myl. & Craig, 286; Williams v. Williams, 5 Law Journal; 2 Roper on Leg. 1237; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 151; James v. Allen, 3 Merivale, 17; Morice v. Bishop of Durham, 9 Ves. Jr. 399; Vezey v. Jameson, 1 Sim. & Stew. 69; Kenall v. Granger, 5 Beav. 300.

In the case of Chamberlain v. Stearns, 11 Mass. 267, Gray, C. J., said: "The question presented by this case is whether a devise in trust to be applied solely for benevolent purposes in the discretion of the trustees creates a public charity. And we are all of the opinion that it does not. The word benevolent of itself, without anything in the context to qualify or restrict its ordinary meaning, clearly includes not only purposes which are deemed charitable by a court of equity, but also any acts dictated by kindness, good-will, or a disposition to do good the objects of which have no relation to the promotion of education, learning or religion, the relief of the needy, the sick or the afflicted, the support of public works or the relief of public burdens, and cannot be deemed charitable in the technical and legal sense. The only difference of opinion in the adjudged cases on this subject has been upon the question how far the word benevolent when used to describe the purposes of a trust could be deemed limited in its meaning by being associated with other words more clearly pointing to a strictly charitable disposition of the fund."

And in Adye v. Smith, 44 Conn. 60; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 424, it was said by Loomis, J.: "While it is true that there is no charitable purpose which is not also a benevolent purpose, yet the con-

BEQUEATH. (See also BEQUEST.)—The word bequeath, which in its primary legal signification is applicable to personal property only, may be shown by the context of the will to be used synonymously with devise or devise and bequeath, and in that sense it must be interpreted in giving a construction to the instrument.[1]

BEQUEST. See DEVISE; LEGACY.

BERRIES.—An exemption from duty of "berries used principally in dyeing or composing dyes" applies to the berries in their native state and not after they are transmuted, by manufacture, into a substance which takes a different denomination in trade and commerce.[2]

BESOT.—"To besot" is to stupefy; to make dull or senseless; to make to dote: and "to dote" is to be delirious, silly, or insane.[3]

BEST.—Things may be "best" in the sense of ranking in the very first class, without being superior to each other—one thing being best for one purpose, and another for another.[4] verse is not equally true, for there may be a benevolent purpose which is not charitable in the legal sense of the term. But if the character of a gift can be definitely determined and it appears that it is charitable in a legal sense, the use of terms which would, if unexplained, render the gift void, will not defeat the donor's purpose. Thus a bequest of "the residue of my estate to the North Reformed Church of Newark, in trust, that they may use the same to promote the religious interests of the said church and to aid the missionary, educational, and benevolent enterprises to which said church is in the habit of contributing," is a good charitable bequest. De Camp v. Dobbins, 29 N. J. Eq. 36.

1. Dow v. Dow, 36 Me. 216; Laing v. Barbour, 119 Mass. 525; Lasher v. Lasher, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 109; Ladd v. Harvey, 21 N. H. 528; O'Toole v. Browne, 3 El. & Bl. 584.

So of "bequeathment." Blackwell v. Blackwell, 3 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 389.

The expression "property and effects not otherwise herein bequeathed" was held to signify a disposition by will, and to show that the instrument in which it was contained was a will and not a deed. Jordan v. Jordan's Admr., 65 Ala. 307.

2. Schneider v. Lawrence, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 116.

3. Gates v. Meredith, 7 Ind. 441.

4. Whittemore v. Weiss, 33 Mich. 354.

Best Endeavors.—Where one covenants to use his "best endeavors," there is no breach if he has been prevented by causes wholly beyond his control and without any default on his part. Vickers v. Overend, 7 H. & N. 92. Compare BEST OF HIS ABILITY infra.

Best Evidence.—The term "best evidence" is confined to cases where the law has divided testimony into primary and secondary. And there are no degrees of evidence except where some document or other instrument exists, the contents of which should be proved by an original rather than by other testimony, which is open to danger of inaccuracy. Elliott v. Van Buren, 33 Mich. 53.

Nothing more is intended by the rule which requires the production of the best evidence than that evidence which is merely substitutionary in its nature shall not be received so long as the original evidence can be had. It does not allow secondary evidence to be substituted for that which is primary. It will not permit the contents of a deed or other written instrument to be proved by parol when the instrument itself can be produced. It has nothing to do with the choice of witnesses. It never excludes a witness upon the ground that another is more credible or reliable. State v. McDonald, 65 Me. 467. See also EVIDENCE.

Best Information.—Under a statute authorizing the assessors to make out a list of the taxpayer's property where the latter fails to do so, and which requires them to act upon "the best information they can obtain," held, that they may obtain this information by inquiring of those who would be likely to know, and from their own judgment upon the facts of the case, and that it is sufficient if they ascertain enough to found upon it an honest belief that the taxpayer has taxable property which he keeps back from taxation. "If they get at the property thus concealed by using their best judgment in the matter, and by inquiries that bring them to an honest belief on the subject, the taxpayer is, in the circumstances, in no position to make a reasonable complaint if they misjudge in the matter." Town of Hartford v. Champion, 3 New Eng. Repr. (Conn.) 543.

Best of His Ability.—The words "to the best of his ability" in an officer's bond were held not to protect his bondsmen from their liability for non-fulfilment of the terms of the bond occasioned by inevitable accident. "It would indeed be an extraordinarily liberal construction of these words that would discover in them a condition exempting the officer from performance of his duty on the ground of accident or inability brought about by accident . . . Without the words it must be admitted that defendants would be liable for the money, though it were destroyed by inevitable accident. Certainly the words express no condition restricting such liability." Dist. Tp. of Union v. Smith, 39 Iowa, 9.

Best of his Belief. See BELIEF.

Best Oil.—On a sale of "50 tons best palm oil," with allowance for "wet, dirty, and inferior oil, if any," in an action for not accepting, held, that oral evidence was admissible to show an established usage in the trade as to what proportions will satisfy a contract to deliver "best" palm oil. Lucas v. Bristow, El., Bl. & El. 907.

Best Picture.—Where prizes for oil-paintings were offered by an institution in a circular in which a "jury of awards" were also announced, and at the time of the exhibition the jury found that no picture merited the first or second prizes and awarded the third prize to the plaintiff, and the latter thereupon brought suit for the amount of the first prize as painter of the "best picture," held, that the jury of awards constituted the tribunal to pass upon the merits of the paintings, and that unless a prize were awarded by them none was demandable. Trego v. Pa. Academy of Fine Arts, 18 Weekly Notes Cases (Pa.), 98.

Best Rent.—In a lease for lands for which the lessor is bound to reserve the best rent that can be got, he must reserve the best rent that can be got at the time the lease is made. Doe ex dem. Griffiths v. Lloyd, 3 Esp. 79. Semble, that "best rent" means the best rack-rent that can reasonably be required by a landlord, taking into account all the requisites of a good tenant for the permanent benefit of the estate. Doe ex dem. Lawton v. Radcliffe, 10 East, 278. See Hood & Challis Co. v. Acts (2d Ed.), 151.

Best you Can.—In an order to buy cotton, "best you can," at not more than a certain price, the above phrase was held a "form of expression which apparently left to them the largest possible discretion to buy as opportunities should offer, at prices not exceeding the prescribed limit." Marland v. Stanwood, 101 Mass. 477.

Where butter was put into the hands of an agent on his way to a certain place for sale, with instructions to do the "best you can with it," it was held that the judge was not authorized to inform the jury that it was to be sold at that place and not elsewhere. "We cannot but see that the plaintiff intended to give the defendant a very large discretionary power." McMorris v. Simpson, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 189.

For the Best.—A letter stating that the writer had sold the Knabe pianos "for the best" was held not to warrant a construction which would make of it an admission that he had sold them as superior to the Steinway pianos. "One piano may be best for one purpose, and another for another." Whittemore v. Weiss, 33 Mich. 354.

If it is Deemed Best.—A power given to executors to sell a house "if it is deemed best," means that the house shall be sold if in the course of the administration of the estate it should be found necessary or advisable to take that course. Chandler v. Rider, 102 Mass. 271.

Seem Best.—A power given to trustee, in a will, to be exercised "as to them shall seem best," was held to mean, in other words, according to their discretion and not that of the cestuis que trustent. "Suppose the trustees had carefully examined the facts in relation to the purchase of the furniture, and had come to the conclusion, perfectly satisfactory to their minds, that such purchase was not best for their sister and her children, and therefore should refuse their approbation of the purchase, can a court of equity review their decision, and reverse it if they find it to be wrong? We think the court has no such power." Leavitt v. Beirne, 21 Conn. 10. Compare THINK BEST, infra.

Think Best.—A clause in a deed of trust authorizing the trustee to sell the premises "entire, without division, or in parcels," as he may "think best," will not prevent the owner from insisting that it was the trustee's duty to offer the property in parcels; and when it is shown that a sale in parcels would have been

BESTIALITY.—A connection between a human being and a brute of the opposite sex.[1] (See SODOMY.)

BET—BETTING. (See also GAMING; WAGER.)—A bet or wager is ordinarily an agreement between two or more that a sum of money or some valuable thing, in contributing which all agreeing take part, shall become the property of one or some of them, on the happening in the future of an event at the present uncertain.[2] A bet is a wager; and the betting is complete when the offer to bet is accepted.[3] One person alone cannot be guilty of the offence of betting. There must be always at least two parties engaged in it. It is a joint act; and when the chance of gain and the chance of loss are created, it matters not how those chances are distributed between the parties, there exists all that is necessary to constitute a bet.[4] Bet and wager are synonymous terms, and are applied both to the contract of betting and wagering, and to the thing or sum bet and wagered. For example, one bets or wagers, or lays a bet or wager of so much upon a certain result. But these terms cannot properly be applied to the act to be done or event to happen upon which the bet or wager is laid.[5] Betting more advantageous, and that the trustee was requested to offer the property in parcels, a sale en masse will be set aside, on bill by the grantor in the trust deed. "The power given, by its very terms, implies that the trustee assumed the duty of thinking on the subject, and that he should adopt that course which he should think would be best to secure a good price. It does not mean that the trustee may do as he may please, or that he may do that which should be the most convenient for him. . . . When it is shown that the attention of the trustee was called to the true condition of this property, and that he was requested to offer it in separate parcels, and suggestions were made that purchasers desired an opportunity to bid on certain parts of the property, we cannot doubt that it was his duty to have offered the property in separate parcels." Cassidy v. Cook, 99 Ill. 388.

1. Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 356.

2. Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 539.

3. State v. Welch, 7 Port. (Ala.) 465. "The placing of money, or, as in this case, what is its representative, on the gaming-table is such an offer; and if no objection be made by the player or owner of the table or bank, it is an acceptance of the offer, and the offence against the statute is complete although from any cause whatever the game should never be played out, and the stake be neither lost nor won. The offence which the act designed to punish is betting, not the winning or losing."

4. Shumate's Case, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 661. "It is true that a bet does imply risk, but it does not necessarily imply risk in both parties. There must be between them a chance of gain and a chance of loss; but it does not follow that each of the parties to the bet must have both these chances. If, from the terms of the engagement, one of the parties may gain but cannot lose, and the other may lose but cannot gain, and there must be either a gain by the one or a loss by the other, according to the happening of the contingency, it is as much a bet or wager as if the parties had shared equally the chances of gain and of loss. The amount bet by them is the amount which the one may win and the other may lose."

5. Woodcock v. McQueen, 11 Ind. 16.

Betting of Money.—Where parties bet upon a game of cards with the understanding that the loser shall pay the bill of the company, it is in effect a "betting of money." Bachellor v. State, 10 Tex. 258. So, also, where bets on an election were made to be paid by a present of a coat by the losing party, but money was actually paid. Cane v. State, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 456.

Bet and Premium.—A premium offered by a corporation that a horse shall make the best time is not a bet or wager. "There is a clear distinction between a wager or bet and a premium or reward. In a wager or bet there must be two parties, and it is known before the chance or uncertain event upon which it is laid is accomplished who are the parties who must either lose or win. In a premium or reis the putting at hazard of a certain sum ascertained, and a bet is a wager, though a wager is not necessarily a bet.[1]

BETTER EQUITY.—The right which in a court of equity a second encumbrancer has who has taken securities against subsequent dealings to his prejudice which a prior encumbrancer neglected to take although he had an opportunity.[2]

BETTERMENT.—An improvement made upon an estate more expensive in its nature than a mere repair; also applied to express the additional value of property occasioned by the making of some public improvement on, by, or near thereto. (See IMPROVEMENT.)

BETWEEN.—Of space: I. Between indicates an intermediate space, which excludes and cannot include that to which it refers. If land is granted between one township and another, both are excluded from the grant. If land is conveyed lying between lot number one and lot number three, it could not be pretended that either of these lots passed by the deed.[3] II. In common use, between does not always exclude the places to which it relates. A grant of power to construct a railroad "between" two places would very clearly include the right of carrying such road into each place.[4] ward there is but one party until the act or thing or purpose for which it is offered has been accomplished. A premium is a reward or recompense for some act done; a wager is a stake upon an uncertain event. In a premium it is known who is to give before the event; in a wager it is not known till after the event. The two need not be confounded." Alvord v. Smith, 63 Ind. 62. Compare Comley v. Hillegass, 94 Pa. St. 132, in which such a premium was held a wager.

Betting on Elections.—A promissory note payable provided a certain officer is elected, otherwise to be null and void, is a bet on an election. Gordon v. Casey, 23 Ill. 70. See also Guyman v. Burlingame, 36 Ill. 203; Sipe v. Finarty, 6 Iowa, 394.

It is not necessary to constitute "betting on an election" that the accused person should have bet on the success of any particular candidate. It is sufficient if he bet that a candidate would receive a certain number of votes. Com. v Kirk, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1. Or that the bet was made upon the event of the election. State v. Cross, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 301. Or that one candidate would beat some other. Com. v. Pash, 9 Dana (Ky.), 31.

The deposit of an entrance-fee to enable the depositor to compete for a prize in an athletic contest is not a bet. Costello v. Curtiss, N. Y. Sup. Ct. 1881, cited in Browne's Jud. Int. of Com. Wds. & Phr. 516.

1. Cassard v. Hinman, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 212.

2. Bouv. L. Dict.

3. State v. Godfrey, 12 Me. 366, where it was held that by a charter to erect a dam "between the fort of Rose's or Treat's Falls in Bangor and McMahon's Falls in Eddington" the latter falls were excluded and an erection above their foot was a nuisance. "That which lies between one given place and another is something distinct from the place given on either side." Where a highway is described as leading "between Guildford and Oakingham," both places are necessarily excluded. 2 Saund. 158 b, n. 6.

The words in a deed "between A and B" are necessarily exclusive of the termini mentioned in the deed. Revere v. Leonard, 1 Mass. 93.

4. Morris & Essex R. Co. v. Central R. Co. of N. J., 31 N. J. L. 212, where it was held that a charter to build a road "between Phillipsburg and Elizabethport" did not exclude the termini, but authorized the line to be laid in Phillipsburg.

A grant of the wagon way "between the houses" in a deed, where the way had been described as extending to the whole depth of the lot, will not be confined to that part of the way

Of time: If an act is to be done between two certain days, it must be performed before the commencement of the latter day. In computing the time in such a case, both the days named are to be excluded.[1] Between in a will constitutes which lies between the houses. If the phrase "between the houses, etc.," used in the description of the alley, were designed as a strict limitation of the extent of the grant, the position is sound. But the phrase, it is obvious, may have been used either by way of limiting the grant, or as a mere description of the thing granted, as words of limitation or of description. The grant of the use of the "wagon alley between the houses" will include the whole extent of the alley, and not that part of it merely lying directly between the buildings. Dunn v. English, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 126.

1. Richardson v. Ford, 14 Ill. 333, where an offer to deliver on September 1 was held not to be in accordance with a contract to deliver "between the date of the contract and the 1st of September then next."

"'Between,' when properly predicable of time, is intermediate, and strictly does not include, in this case, either the 7th of December or 1st of March. 'Between two days' was exclusive of both." Bunce v. Reed, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 352.

Under a contract to purchase merchandise to be delivered at seller's option between the date of the contract and a specified day, the last day for the delivery is the day before the specified day. Fowler v. Rigney, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 182.

A policy of insurance on goods to be shipped between two certain days does not cover goods shipped on either of those days. Atkins v. Boylston Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 439. The court say: "It is undoubtedly true that the word 'between' is not always used to denote an intermediate space of time or place. . . We speak of a battle between two armies, a combat, a controversy, or a suit at law between two or more parties; but the word thus used refers to the actions of the parties, and does not denote locality or time. But if it should be said that there was a combat between two parties between two buildings, the latter word would undoubtedly refer to the intermediate space between the buildings, while the former word would denote the action of the parties. But it was agreed that the word 'between' is not always used as exclusive of the termini, when it refers to locality. Thus we speak of a road between one town and another, although the road extends from the centre of one town to the other; and this, in common parlance, is a description sufficiently intelligible, although the road in fact penetrates each town. But if all the land between two buildings or between two other lots of land be granted, then certainly only the intermediate land between the two lots of land, or the two buildings, would pass by the grant. And we think the word 'between' has the same meaning when it refers to a period of time from one day, month, or year to another. If this policy had insured the plaintiff's property to be shipped between February and the next July, it would clearly not cover any property shipped in either of those months. So we think the days mentioned in the policy are excluded." See also Kendall v. Kingsley, 120 Mass. 95.

A stipulated to deliver to B fifty hogs at any time "between the 10th and 20th of November" that B might choose to call for them. Held, that a demand by B on the 19th for the delivery of the hogs on the 20th of November was not sufficient under the contract. "The word 'between,' where it occurs in the present agreement, does not possess any technical import. It must therefore be taken in the sense in which it is used in ordinary parlance, and that being done, the intent expressed by the words 'between the 10th and 20th' seems to be sufficiently plain and explicit. To say that the words just quoted include either the 10th or 20th would be equivalent to saying that the month of July included June and August, because it lay between them." Cook v. Gray, 6 Ind. 335.

Where there are to be "ten days between the day of service and the first day of the next term," ten clear days are meant. "The clear language is that there must be ten days between the day of service and the first day of the term to which the notice is returnable, and that in counting that time we are not to include the first day of the term. Time between two days is that which is intermediate, without computing any part of either of those days to make the same. And it would do great violence to the language used to say that ten days are left between the service and the term, and yet count one of those days to make the intermediate time. . . . These ten days are to be complete, and are not to be added to, nor diminished by, the day of the acts done, nor yet by the first day of the term to which the process is returnable." Robinson v. Foster, 12 Iowa, 186.

a tenancy in common,[1] and strictly implies but two parties to the division.[2]

For other uses of the word and phrases in which it occurs see the note.[3]

1. Lashbrook v. Cock, 2 Meriv. 70, where testator devised to his two daughters "all his right in B and C between them." See also Morley v. Bird, 3 Ves. 631; Atty.-Gen. v. Fletcher, L. R. 13 Eq. Cas. 128.

2. Haskell v. Sargent, 113 Mass. 343. But in Ward v. Tomkins, 30 N. J. Eq. 3, it was held that evidence of an intention to confine the gift to two children existing at the time of the testator's death—drawn from the fact that he had used the word "between"—was "too slight to be of any value."

Equally to be Divided Between Them ordinarily means an equal division per capita. Purnell v. Culbertson, 12 Bush (Ky.), 370, and comments therein on Lachland v. Downing, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.). In Louisiana such a legacy is a conjoint one, and if but one of the legatees survives the testator, he is entitled to the whole, by accretion. Mackie v. Story, 93 U. S. 589.

3. Between Two Counties.—Where a bridge is constructed over navigable waters, and connects two opposite shores lying in different counties, such a bridge is "between" two such counties and they are jointly answerable for its maintenance, even though the counties, as respectively containing the townships between the shores of which the current flows, reach to the middle of the water and are divided only by the invisible, untraceable line called medium filum aquæ. Harold v. Corp. County Simcoe, 18 U. C. C. P. 13. Van Koughnet, C., says in his dissenting opinion: "These two counties embrace certain townships which touch and adjoin one another, separated only by a geographical line, unsubstantial and invisible. They are not divided by any bridge, and strictly speaking nothing does or can lie between them. When you speak of something lying between two other places or things, you mean, in the accurate use of language, something lying between the boundaries or limits of the other two places or things; something dividing them, or within the borders of that which does divide them. You don't in such a case employ the word 'between' as meaning something common to two parties or places, as when you speak, in the common ordinary terms of a well or a stable as in use between two parties, or common to both, and which, consistently with the meaning of the words thus employed, may be wholly on the premises of one of the parties. . . . The legislature here, I think, show clearly that what is meant is a road or bridge running along or between the borders of two counties."

Between Two Days, which are specified is, in an indictment, an inadequate allegation of the time when the offence was committed. 1 Bish. Crim. Proc. §. 396. But see U. S. v. Smith, 2 Mas. (U. S.) 143.

Between Two Cities.—Where an act was passed to protect the business of a company "between the cities of New York and Philadelphia," it was held to protect only the through business from city to city and not between intermediate places and over any and every part of the route between the said cities. "The ambiguity of the enactment is occasioned by the various senses in which the word 'between' is appropriately used. It may mean in the intermediate space, without regard to distance, or it may mean extending or passing from city to city. The prohibition, therefore, may be limited to the through business alone, or it may extend to transportation over any and every portion of the route. . . I am of opinion that the grant of exclusive privileges made by the legislature to the the complainants operates to protect only the through business from city to city against competition. Del. & Rar. Can. Co., etc., v. Rar., etc., Co., 16 N. J. Eq. 321, 368.

Between Two Rivers.—The territory lying between two rivers is the whole country from their sources to their mouths; and if no fork of either of them has acquired the name, in exclusion of another, the main branch to its source must be considered as the true river. Doddridge v. Thompson, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 473.

Between Points within the State.— A statement of gross earnings made by the use of cars "between points within the State" means a statement only of earnings derived from the use of the cars

BEVERAGE.—Sales of liquor to be used as a "beverage" signify sales of liquor to be drunk for the pleasure of drinking, as distinguished from sales of liquor to be drunk in obedience to doctor's advice.[1]

BEYOND THE SEAS.—In England, before the union, the meaning of this expression was, "out of the realm of England." Since the union Ireland was held to be "beyond seas" within the meaning of the Statute of Limitations of 21 Jac. I. ch. 16.[2] But now by stat. 3 & 4 William IV. c. 27, no part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, nor the Isle of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, or Sark, nor any island adjacent to any of them (being part of the dominions of Her Majesty), are to be regarded as "beyond the seas."

The words generally occur in this country in the provisos of Statutes of Limitations. They have been variously interpreted in the different States. They have been decided to mean "without the limits of the jurisdiction of the State in which the statute was enacted" in New Hampshire,[3] Maryland,[4] South Carolina,[5] Georgia,[6] Indiana,[7] Ohio,[8] Alabama,[9] Arkansas,[10] and in the Supreme Court of the United States.[11] On the other hand, they in transporting passengers who both get on and off at points within the State. "The words 'between points within the State' are not apt words to describe the crossing of the State from an adjoining State on one side into an adjoining State on another side; nor does it aptly describe the act of going from a point within the State to a point outside thereof, nor from a point outside to a point within the State." State v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 64 Wis. 99.

An Account Between Two Persons.—A plea stating that an "account in writing was made out and stated between this defendant and A" does not allege that A was present when the account was made out and stated, or that he ever saw or examined it, or, in short, that A and the defendant "made up, stated, and settled an account in writing." Meeker v. Marsh, 1 Saxt. Ch. (N. J.) 203.

1. Com. v. Mandeville, 7 East. Rep. (Mass.) 383.
2. Lane v. Bennett, 1 M. & W. 70.
3. Galusha v. Cobleigh, 13 N. H. 86.
4. Pancoast v. Addison, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 353.
5. Forbes v. Foot, 2 McCord (S. C.), 333: s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 732.
6. Denham v. Holeman, 26 Ga. 182.
7. Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 515.
8. Richardson's Admrs. v. Richardson's Admrs., 6 Ohio, 126; West v. Hymer, 7 Ohio, pt. ii. 235; Smith v. Bartram, 11 Ohio St. 691.
9. Thomason v. Odum, 23 Ala. 486.
10. Wakefield v. Smart, 8 Ark. 489, in which the expression was held to apply to "persons beyond the jurisdiction of the State, as well as to foreigners who have never come within the jurisdiction, as to our own citizens who may be absent, and against whom the statute never commenced running."
11. Bank of Alexandria v. Dyer, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 145, in construing the Maryland statute; Piatt v. Vattier, 1 McLean (U. S.), 157, on the Ohio statute; Faw v. Roberdeau's Exr., 3 Cranch (U. S.), 177; Murray v. Baker, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 545, on the Georgia statute; Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 368, in which the court say: "It was this consideration, as well as the obvious absurdity of applying the terms 'beyond seas' in their literal signification, that induced this court, and has induced so many State courts, to give it the meaning of beyond the commonwealth."

In Davie v. Briggs, 97 U. S. 637, a case on the North Carolina statute, the court say, quoting 6 Pet. 291: "But suppose the same question should be brought before this court from a State where the construction of the same words had been long settled to mean literally 'beyond seas,' would not this court conform to it? The question was answered by saying that 'an adherence by the federal courts to the exposition of the local law, as given by the courts of the State, will greatly tend to preserve harmony in the have been held to mean "without the limits of the United States" in North Carolina,[1] Illinois,[2] Missouri,[3] and Pennsylvania,[4] and as to the Supreme Court of the United States, see note 11, p. 189, and note 1, infra.

BIAS. (See also JURY AND JURY TRIALS; WITNESS.)—A state of mind in either a juryman or a witness which in the one case disqualifies him to act as a juror, and in the other tends to discredit the evidence he has given.[5] exercise of the judicial power in the State and federal tribunals.' The decision in this case was founded, in fact, on such an interpretation, following the North Carolina cases."

1. State v. Harris, 71 N. Car. 176. And see Davie v. Briggs, 97 U. S. 637, and n. 11, p. 189.

2. Mason v. Johnson, 24 Ill. 159, a decision on the Statute of Wills limiting the time within which claims could be presented against the estates of deceased persons.

3 Fackler v. Fackler, 14 Mo. 433. "The term or the words 'beyond seas' in that statute, to our minds, clearly mean 'without the United States.'" See also Keeton's Heirs v. Keeton's Admr., 20 Mo. 543. "It is now settled that the term beyond seas in the act of 1825 does not mean out of the limits of the State; consequently if a person is absent from this State in one of the United States he is not within the exception of the statute."

4. Ward v. Hallam, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 217; s. c., 1 Yeates (Pa.), 331; Thurston v. Fisher, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 291; Gonder v. Estabrook, 9 Cas. (Pa.) 375, in which it is said: "This phrase has the same meaning in both acts. With us it has always been understood to mean outside of the United States."

A person in Alexandria County, D. C., is not "beyond seas" in regard to persons residing in Washington County. Suckley v. Slade, 5 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 617.

But the State of Delaware is "beyond seas." Ferris, etc., v. Williams, 1 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 475.

Beyond Sea, without any of the United States, is not applicable to a citizen of another State who has never been in this commonwealth. Whitney v. Goddard, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 304. See also 6 Wheel. Am. C. L. 496, and Bishop on Stat. Cr. §. 261 b.

Beyond the Cape of Good Hope.—These terms, in an act regulating duties on imports, are employed as descriptive of the locality of certain countries, not their relative position with respect to ports of import. They are equivalent to "east of the cape," and indicate the locality of certain countries with reference to the position of the law-makers at the national capital. Hadden v. Collector, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 113.

Beyond the Life of the Offender, as the limitation of the period of forfeiture, means that the proceedings for condemnation and sale shall not affect the ownership of the property after the termination of the offender's natural life. Wallach v. Van Riswick, 92 U. S. 209.

5. In Willis v. State, 12 Ga. 444, the court, Nisbet, J., says: "A disqualifying prejudice, then, is a judgment or opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a criminal of the crime with which he is charged, no matter how attained. It ought to be a fixed opinion—a present conviction of the mind,—not an indistinct floating impression. Bias is not synonymous with prejudice; and by the use of this word, the legislature intended to describe another and somewhat different ground of disqualification. A man cannot be prejudiced against another without being biased against him; but he may be biased without being predjudiced. I find no definition of bias more satisfactory than the following, by Bouvier: 'A particular influential power which sways the judgment; the inclination of the mind towards a particular object.' It is not to be supposed that the legislature expected to secure in the juror a state of mind absolutely free from all inclination to one side or the other. This would be expecting what in many instances could not be attained. But they did intend to exclude from the jury box every man who could not bring to the hearing of the case a mind fully open to any conviction which evidence might produce; a moral and intellectual capacity to decide according to the evidence delivered upon oath. I cannot say that such capacity may not exist when there is some leaning, before the evidence is heard, to the one side or the other. Practical tests were what it was the purpose of the legislature to apply. And they have declared, according to the views

BICYCLE. (See also CARRIAGE.)—A two-wheeled velocipede, the fore and hind wheels of which are in a line with each other. The fore wheel is driven and made to revolve by the pressure of the foot upon a treadle attached to the axle.[1]

BID—BIDDER—BIDDING. See AUCTIONS; CONTRACTS.

BIENNIAL—BIENNIALLY.—Biannually, or every two years.[2]

BIG.—Great; large in bulk.[3]

thus given of bias and prejudice, that if a juror has formed a judgment for or against the prisoner before the evidence is heard on the trial, and entertains that judgment at the trial, he shall not try his cause; and further, that if he is under such an influence as so sways his mind to the one side or the other as to prevent his deciding the cause according to the evidence, then, also, he is incompetent." On this subject generally, see Bishop's Crim. Procedure, vol. i. §§ 901–919.

On the interest of a witness as affecting his credibility, see Wharton on Evid. § 408.

1. Cook on Highways, cited in 24 Alb. L. J. 282, says: "The use of the bicycle as a means of travel is so recent that in this State (N. Y.) there is as yet no adjudication as to the rights of travellers employing it upon the highway. In England it has been held that one riding a bicycle on the highway at such a pace as to be dangerous to passers-by may be convicted of furiously driving a 'carriage,' under a statute forbidding such an act. Taylor v. Goodwin, L. R. 4 Q. B. Div. 228. The right to use a bicycle in a proper manner upon the highway was not questioned in the case, and the court by its decision indirectly admits such right. In the absence of any legislative enactment forbidding them, riders of bicycles would seem to have the same right upon highways as those using any other vehicles; and the validity of any municipal ordinance prohibiting the use of bicycle in those parts of the public streets where carriages may go would be very doubtful."

The decision in Taylor v. Goodwin, L. R. 4 Q. B. Div. 228, was put on the fact that a bicycle was a carriage within the mischief of the act 5 and 6 Will. IV. c. 50, viz., to prevent people being hurt by furious driving of vehicles. But where one was riding a bicycle through a toll-gate and toll was demanded of him, and, on his refusal to pay, the bicycle was detained until the toll was paid, it was held that a bicycle was not a carriage within the act which gave a right to levy "for every carriage, of whatever description and for whatever purpose, which shall be drawn or impelled or set or kept in motion by steam or by any other power or agency than being drawn by any horse or horses, or other beast or beasts of draught, any sum not exceeding 5*s*." Williams v. Ellis, L. R. 5 Q. B. Div. 175; s. c., 42 Law Times Rep. 249.

2. Where a statute provided (Gen. Stat. 1865, p. 109) that an officer appointed "shall serve as such until the next biennial appointment of officers of registration," the court, Wagner, J., said: "The law seems very clear, and there is no room left for construction. The word biennial is derived from the Latin words bis, twice, and annus, year, meaning the happening or taking place of anything once in two years." State ex rel. Shields v. Smith, 42 Mo. 506.

"Biennially does not, in its ordinary and proper use, signify duration of time, but defines a period for the happening of some event." Bockes, J., in People v. Tremain, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 573. See People v. Kilbourn, 68 N. Y. 479.

3. In an action of slander, the words "all W.'s girls are big," without a colloquium by which any other than the ordinary meaning can be given to them, will not warrant an innuendo that big means big with child. Watts v. Greenlee, 2 Dev. Law. (N. Car.) 115.

Big with Child.—In the criminal law, apart from any statute, there is a difference between a woman being big with child, or pregnant, and being quick with child, and it is not a punishable offence at common law to perform an operation upon a pregnant woman with her consent for the purpose of procuring an abortion, and thereby to effect such purpose, unless the woman be quick with child. Com. v. Parker, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 263.

But the distinction between a woman being pregnant or big with child and being quick with child is applicable mainly, if not exclusively, to criminal cases, and does not apply to cases of descents, devises, and other gifts. Hall v. Hancock, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 255; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 598.

BIGAMY—POLYGAMY.

1. Definition.—Bigamy consists in going through the ceremony of marriage with another while a former husband or wife is still alive and not divorced, knowing at the time, or reasonably believing, that such former consort is still alive.[1]

2. Accessories.—Accessories who aid and abet the commission of bigamy are guilty as principals.[2]

3. Marriage in Another State.—A marriage sufficient in form to be valid under the laws of the State where the offence is prosecuted, though celebrated in another State, will be presumed to be sufficient under the laws of that State when there is no evidence to the contrary.[3]

1. Brown's Law Dict.

The offence of having a plurality of wives at the same time is more correctly denominated polygamy. Originally this offence was considered as of ecclesiastical cognizance only; and though the 4 Edw. I. stat. 3, c. 5, treated it as a capital crime, it appears still to have been left of doubtful temporal cognizance, until the 1 Jac. I. c. 11 declared that such offence should be felony. 1 Russell on Crimes (9th Am. Ed.) 268.

Bigamy, in its proper signification, is said to mean only being twice married, and not having a plurality of wives at once. According to the canonists, bigamy consisted in marrying two virgins successively, one after the death of the other; or in once marrying a widow. 4 Black Com. 163, note b.

The expression "being married" means being legally married. The word "marries" means, goes through a form of marriage which the law of the place where such form is used recognizes as binding, whether the parties are by that law competent to contract marriage or not, and although by their fraud the form employed may, apart from the bigamy, have been insufficient to constitute a binding marriage

Illustrations.—A marries B, a person within the prohibited degrees of affinity, and during B's lifetime marries C. A has not committed bigamy.

A marries B, and during B's lifetime goes through a form of marriage with C, a person within the prohibited degrees of affinity. A has committed bigamy.

A marries B in Ireland, and during B's lifetime goes through a form of marriage with C in Ireland, which is invalid because both A and C are Protestants, and the marriage is performed by a Roman Catholic priest. A commits bigamy.

A, married to B, marries C in B's lifetime by banns; B (the woman) being married, for purposes of concealment, under a false name. A has committed bigamy.

A, married to B, marries C in B's lifetime, in the colony of Victoria. In order to show that A committed bigamy, it must be proved that the form by which he was married was one recognized as a regular form of marriage by the law in force in Victoria. Stephen's Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 193. 194.

The offence is complete although there be immediate separation, without cohabitation at all. Gise v. Commonwealth, 81 Pa. St. 428; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 346.

If a plea in abatement would be admissible at any time, in a proceeding in bastardy, it is not admissible after the defendant has recognized to appear in the circuit court and answer to the complaint. People v. Smith, 8 Westn. Repr. (Mich.) 99.

Advice of counsel that there is no impediment to a second marriage is no defence. People v. Weed, 29 Hun (N. Y.), 628. State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165.

It is no defense that the defendant's religion authorized polygamous marriage. Reynolds v. U. S., 98 U. S. 145; Miles v. U. S., 103 U. S. 104.

The offence of cohabitating with more than one woman, created by § 3 of the act of Congress of March 22, 1882, c. 47, 22 Stat. 31, is a continuous offence, and not one consisting of an isolated act. In re Snow, 120 U. S. 274.

2. Boggus v. State, 34 Ga. 275.

3. State v. Nadal, 29 N. Westn. Repr.

4. Void Marriages.—If the former marriage is void, then a subsequent marriage by one of the parties to a third person is not bigamous.[1] Though a second marriage may be void, yet the offence is complete.[2]

5. Marriage after Divorce.—Where the statute prohibits one who has been divorced from marrying again "until the death of the complainant," and also declares that "every person having a husband or wife living" who shall marry again shall, except in specified cases, be adjudged guilty of bigamy, a person against whom a divorce has been obtained is regarded as having a husband or wife living, so long as the party obtaining the divorce lives. A person, therefore, so divorced who marries again, within the State, in violation of said prohibitory provision, is guilty of the crime of bigamy.[3]

(Iowa) 451. See State v. Sloan, 55 Iowa, 217.

1. Halbrook v. State, 34 Ark. 511; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 17; State v. Goodrich, 14 W. Va. 834; People v. Chase, 27 Hun (N. Y.), 256; Shafher v. State, 20 Ohio, 1; Breakey v. Breakey, 2 Up. Can. Q. B. 353.

Where a marriage is voidable on account of the parties not being of legal age, and such marriage is not confirmed by the parties after arriving at the legal age, a subsequent marriage by either party is not bigamous. Shafher v. State, 20 Ohio, 1. See Begg v. State, 55 Ala. 108; Cooley v. State, 55 Ala. 162; People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193; Lewis v. People, 37 Mich. 518; R. v. Gordon, Russ. & R. 48.

Where A married B, and afterward during B's life marries C, and still afterward, when B is divorced, but during C's life, marries D, the last marriage is not bigamous, because the second was void. Halbrook v. State, 34 Ark. 511; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 17; State v. Goodrich, 14 W. Va. 834.

If an unmarried man attempt, by one ceremony, to become the husband of two women, he becomes the husband of neither, and a woman married by him subsequently becomes his lawful wife, the same as if the first ceremony had never taken place. U. S. v. Snow (Utah), 9 Pac. Repr. 501; s. c., 120 U. S. 274.

Positive evidence of non-assent to a marriage ceremony that had been irregularly performed weighs against the presumption of its validity. Kope v. People, 43 Mich. 41.

The former marriage must be void, and not merely voidable. State v. Barefoot, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 209; R. v. Jacobs, 1 Moody C. C. 140.

A civil marriage performed under a license irregularly issued, and under such circumstances that all concerned must be presumed to know that it gave no authority, cannot furnish ground for a prosecution for bigamy if not based on the voluntary consent of both parties, or followed by cohabitation or some recognition of a marriage entered into in good faith. Kope v. People, 43 Mich. 41.

2. People v. Brown, 34 Mich. 339; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 72. Compare R. v. Fanning, 10 Cox C. C. 411.

It is no defence that the second marriage was between persons forbidden by statute to intermarry, as between a negro and a white woman. People v. Brown, 34 Mich. 339; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 531. See R. v. Brown, 1 C. & K. 144; R. v. Penson, 5 C. & P. 412. Compare R. v. Fanning, 10 Cox C. C. 411.

In R. v. Brown, 1 C. & K. 144, the court said: "It is the appearing to contract a second marriage, and the going through the ceremony, which constitutes the crime of bigamy; otherwise it never could exist in ordinary cases, as a previous marriage always renders null and void a marriage that is celebrated afterwards by either of the parties during the lifetime of the other."

Bigamy is committed in marrying a woman under an assumed name, though by law such a marriage between persons capable of contracting would be void. R. v. Penson, 5 C. & P. 412.

Even if a marriage between persons of color in December, 1865, was illegal, which is by no means apparent, yet, if they were living together as man and wife at the date of the act of 1866, the marriage relation was thereby established, and bigamy could be predicated thereon. Kirk v. State, 65 Ga. 159.

3. People v. Faber, 92 N. Y. 146; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 357.

6. Marriage after Supposed Death of Legal Wife.—One who remarries, not having a reasonable belief of his first wife's death, or if he honestly believes her to be dead, the statutory time not having elapsed, is guilty of bigamy, without other proof of intent.[1] (See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 38, note.)

Marriage in another State.—The wife of M, a resident of New York, procured a divorce from him on account of his adultery; the judgment forbade him from marrying again. He thereafter went into the State of New Jersey, and there married during the life of his first wife, returning with his second wife to New York and continuing to reside there. The statute law of New Jersey declares that "all marriages, where either of the parties shall have a former husband or wife living at the time of such marriage, shall be invalid, . . . and the issue thereof shall be illegitimate." In an action to test the right of plaintiff, a son born of the second marriage, to inherit, as the lawful heir of M., held, that at the time of the second marriage the latter had no former wife living within the meaning of said statute; that the laws of New York and the provision of the judgment prohibiting marriage had no effect, and M. had a right to marry in another State whose laws did not prohibit a second marriage by one divorced; and that plaintiff was legitimate and so entitled to inherit. Also held, that as there were statutory provisions on the subject, there was no presumption that the rule of the common law still existed in New Jersey; that the statute superseded and took the place of such rule. After the dissolution of the first marriage M. and his first wife were again married, but in an action brought by her it was adjudged that the second marriage was prohibited by the statutes of New York, and was void; after the entry of this judgment the marriage in New Jersey took place. It was urged here that such remarriage was valid. Held, that the judgment not having been reversed, and having been made by a competent court having jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter, was conclusive. Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 408; Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 505; Thorp v. Thorp, 90 N. Y. 602; State v. Weatherby, 43 Me. 258; Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; Com. v. Lane, 113 Mass. 458; Reed v. Hudson, 13 Ala. 570; Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 110.

Under a statute which provides that a divorced person "who is the guilty cause of such divorce" shall be deemed guilty of bigamy if he marries again during the lifetime of his divorced wife, such a one cannot be convicted of bigamy under an indictment which merely charges bigamy in the ordinary manner. In such a case the indictment must allege the divorce, and that the defendant was the guilty cause thereof. Com. v. Richardson, 126 Mass. 34; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 612.

If the defendant relies upon a divorce as a justification of a second marriage, it is incumbent on him to prove it. Com. v. Boyer, 7 Allen (Mass.), 306.

An honest belief that there has been a valid divorce is no defence. Davis v. Commonwealth, 13 Bush (Ky.), 318; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 163; State v. Whitcomb, 52 Iowa, 85; State v. Goodenow, 65 Me. 30; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 165; Com. v. Mash, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 472; People v. Smith, 20 Hun (N. Y.), 414. See People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247. Compare Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459.

1. Dotson v. State, 62 Ala. 141; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 2; Valleau v. Valleau, 6 Paige (N. Y.), 207; Kenley v. Kenley, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 207; People v. Feilen, 58 Cal. 218; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 258; Com. v. Mash, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 472; Davis v. Commonwealth, 13 Bush (Ky.), 318; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 163. Compare Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 433; Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459.

An honest belief that a husband who has been absent less than the statutory period is no defence. Com. v. Mash, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 472; in this case sentence was suspended and the party was subsequently pardoned); Jones v. State, 67 Ala. 84.

It is necessary to show that the first wife is alive at the time of the second marriage. Although a statute sanctions a presumption that a person who has not been heard of during seven years is dead, yet there is no presumption of law that when a person has been seen within seven years he is alive, and he must be shown to be alive as a matter of fact from the circumstance of the case. R. v. Lumley, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 196; 38 L. J. M. C. 86. See Phené's Trust., L. R. 5 Ch. 150.

The prisoner was indicted for bigamy in 1880. It was proved that he was married to Charlotte Lavers in 1879, and that his wife was alive. It was held that this must be presumed (or rather should be inferred by the jury) to be a good marriage. But the prisoner showed that in 1864 he had married Ellen Earle, and that at all events in 1868 she was alive. Therefore there were two conflicting inferences: 1st. That the marriage in 1879 was a good one; 2d. That it was not a good marriage, as Ellen Earle might be presumed to have been still alive. It was held to be a question for the jury which inference should have the greater weight. Reg. v. Willshire, 6 Q. B. D. 366; 50 L. J. M. C. 57.

Proof after Statutory Absence.—Where the wife is proved to have been continually absent for the statutory period it is for the prosecution to show not only that the wife is alive, but that the prisoner knew it at the time he contracted the second marriage. Johnson v. Johnson, 114 Ill. 611; Gibson v. State, 38 Miss. 313; R. v. Curgerwen, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 1; 35 L. J. M. C. 58; R. v. Jones, 11 Cox C. C. R. 358. But the law laid down in R. v. Curgerwen does not apply in the absence of evidence that the parties were continually absent. R. v. Jones, 11 Q. B. D. 118; 52 L. J. M. C. 96.

In an action by one town against another for the support of a female pauper, the agreed facts on which the case was submitted stated that the pauper contracted a valid marriage with a person in a town in another State, where they both resided, and they lived there as husband and wife for three years, when he left his home and family, and had not been heard from by her since; that, in the next month after he left her, she removed to the defendant town, where, five years and eight months afterwards, she married a person who had a legal settlement therein, and they lived together as husband and wife in the plaintiff town, where he soon after deserted her and removed out of the commonwealth. Held, that the agreed facts did not warrant a finding that the pauper's first husband was dead when she contracted her second marriage. Hyde Park v. Canton, 130 Mass. 505. In this case the court said: "If a man leaves his home and goes into parts unknown, and remains unheard from for the space of seven years, the law authorizes, to those that remain, the presumption of fact that he is dead; but it does not authorize him to presume therefore that any one of those remaining in the place which he left has died. This is well illustrated in the case of Commonwealth v. Thompson, which was before this court twice, 6 Allen, 591, and 11 Allen, 23. In 6 Allen, 591, it appeared that, under the instructions of the judge of the Superior Court, the defendant had been convicted of adultery by reason of his cohabitation, under the forms of marriage, with one whom, in good faith, he supposed to be a widow, whose husband had absented himself from her and had been in parts unknown, and had not been heard from for more than seven years. The court held such conviction erroneous, and ordered a new trial. Upon the second trial of the case it appeared, not that the husband had deserted the wife for the space of seven years, but that the husband 'was of dissipated habits and neglected to provide for her, in consequence of which she left him and lived in various places until her marriage with the defendant; that before her second marriage she read in a newspaper of the killing of William B. Carlton' (her husband's name) 'in a drunken row in Billerica in this commonwealth, and believed it to be her husband; that she had no knowledge that he was alive, and had not seen or heard from him for more than eleven years.' The Chief Justice of the Superior Court instructed the jury 'that when a wife departs from her husband and remains absent and distant from him, as in the present case, without knowledge or inquiry respecting him, no presumption of his death arises from the fact that she had not heard from him for seven years;' and this ruling was approved by this court. These decisions are both based upon well-recognized principles."

Mr. Roscoe says (Ros. Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 34: "The prisoner may prove that the other party to the first marriage has been continually absent from home for the space of seven years last past, and was not known to be living within that time. The question whether a prisoner setting up this defence ought to show that he has used reasonable diligence to inform himself as to the other party being alive, and whether, if he neglects the palpable means of availing himself of such information, he will stand excused, was, until lately, an undecided point. See R. v. Cullen, 9 C. & P. 681; R. v. Jones, Carr. & M. 614; R. v. Briggs, Dears. & B. C. C. 98. But where the wife was absent for seven years, it was decided that the burden of proving that the prisoner did know that his wife was alive within the seven years is on the prosecution, and that in the absence of evidence to that effect he must be acquitted. R. v. Curgerwen, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 1. The mere fact that there are no circumstances leading to the inference that the absent party has died does not raise a presumption of law that such party is alive. The prosecution must satisfy the jury that as a matter of fact such party is alive, and it is a question entirely for them. Where the only evidence is that the party was alive more than seven years ago, then there is no question for the jury, and it is a presumption of law that he is dead. R. v. Lumley, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 196; 38 L. J. M. C. 86. It is submitted that it is good defence that the prisoner at the time of the second marriage honestly and bona fide believed that his first wife was dead, and had reasonable grounds for so believing. Per Cleasby, B., in R. v. Hoxton, 11 Cox C. C. 670, following Martin, B., in R. v. Turner, 9 Cox C. C. 145; but although these two decisions were cited, Brett, J., after consulting Willes, decided the contrary in R. v. Gibbons, 12 Cox C. C. 237; and see R. v. Jones, 11 Cox C. C. R. 358. In the case of R. v. Moore, reported in 13 Cox C. C. 544, tried at Lincoln before Mr. Justice Denman, the learned judge, after taking time to consider the above authorities, and after consulting Amphlett, J. A., said that if he had intended to inflict any punishment he should reserve a case; and that he and his brother judge were of opinion that a reasonable belief was a good defence. In this case evidence was given of a letter having been received announcing the death of the prisoner's first husband. In a still more recent case (Reg. v. Bennett, 14 Cox C.C. 45) Bramwell, L. J., ruled the other way; but it should be noticed the case Reg. v. Moore, 13 Cox C.C. 544, was not cited, and the prisoner was also found guilty of forgery and false pretences, so that no doubt his belief on the subject of his first wife's death did not appear to be very material. It is immaterial for how long or how short a time the first wife has been absent, except in so far as length of absence may tend to show the reasonablesness of the belief. It is remarkable that in the elaborate judgment of Brett, J. A., in R. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. 154, in which he maintained the doctrine actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea, that learned judge does not allude to his reported ruling in R. v. Gibbons, 12 Cox C.C. 237. The doctrine would seem to be even more applicable in the latter case, because the act of marriage is in itself innocent, but in abduction the act itself is wrong. It has been suggested, however, that in R. v. Gibbons it was not clearly shown that the prisoner reasonably believed in the death, but it seems she was simply ignorant on the subject. See Stephen's Dig. of Crim. Law, p. 21."

7. Evidence.—The first marriage may be proved by the admissions of the defendant,[1] or by his admissions, together with evidence of

The only evidence to show the life of the first wife was testimony showing that she was alive about three years prior to the second marriage. Held, to be insufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. People v. Feilen, 58 Cal. 218; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 258.

The statute does not render legal a marriage contracted after the statutory period of absence; it merely purges the felony. Fenton v. Reed, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 52; Williamson v. Parisien, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 389; Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563.

Where the evidence as to the first wife showed only that she was alive three years before the second marriage, held, that there could be no conviction. People v. Feilen, 58 Cal. 218; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 258.

An absence of either husband or wife for the statutory period, the party absent not being heard from, will exonerate the party remaining if he or she marries again. The period is limited to two years in Pennsylvania; to five years in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Texas; to seven years in Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, Wisconsin, and England. See R. v. Jones, 1 C. & M. 614; Barber v. State, 50 Md. 161; Gise v. Commonwealth, 81 Pa. St. 428; Jones v. State, 67 Ala. 84; Com. v. Mash, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 472.

Divorce Decree as Evidence of Life of Divorced Party.—In a prosecution for bigamy, a decree divorcing from the accused his former wife, rendered after the alleged bigamous marriage, and awarding to her the custody of their infant child, is prima-facie evidence that she was living at the time of the bigamous marriage. State v. Ashley, 37 Ark. 403.

1. Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; State v. Seals, 16 Ind. 352; Stanglein v. State, 17 Ohio St. 453; Wolverton v. State, 16 Ohio, 173; O'Neal v. Com., 17 Gratt. (Va.) 582; Warner v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 95; State v. Britton, 4 McC. (S. Car.) 256; State v. Hilton, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 434; Finney v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.), 544; Arnold v. State, 53 Ga. 574; Cook v. State, 11 Ga. 53; Brown v. State. 52 Ga. 574; Langtry v. State, 30 Ala. 536: Williams v. State.

cohabitation.[1] A certificate of marriage is competent evidence, although it does not show on its face that the person whose name is subscribed thereto was a person authorized to celebrate marriage.[2] It must be shown that the first marriage was valid by the law of the place where it was contracted.[3] If the first marriage was in a foreign country, it may be proved by a properly authen-

44 Ala. 24; Cameron v. State, 14 Ala. 546; State v. Abbey, 29 Vt. 60; Cayford's Case, 7 Me. 57; Ham's Case, 2 Fairf. (Me.) 391; State v. Hodgskins, 19 Me. 155; State v. Libby, 44 Me. 469; Forney v. Hallacher, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 159; Com. v. Murtagh, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 272; Com. v. Henning, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 209; Com v. Jackson, 11 Bush (Ky.), 679; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 225; State v. McDonald, 25 Mo. 176; State v. Nadal, 28 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 451; Arnold v. State, 53 Ga. 574; Miles v. U. S., 103 U. S. 304. Compare Clayton v. Wardell, 4 N. Y. 230; People v. Humphrey, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 314; State v. Roswell, 6 Conn. 446; Com. v. Littlejohn. 15 Mass. 163; Tucker v. People, 117 Ill. 88.

The date of the lawful marriage is immaterial and need not be stated in the indictment. State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165.

Identity.—Where the first wife was known by two names, the question to be considered by the jury is the identity of the woman, and not her name, and it is proper for the court to so instruct the jury. Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 13.

1. State v. Gonce, 79 Mo. 600; Cameron v. State, 14 Ala. 546; Langtry v. State, 30 Ala. 536; Williams v. State, 54 Ala. 131; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 665; Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; State v. Seals, 16 Ind. 352; Wolverton v. State, 16 Ohio, 173; Carmichael v. State, 12 Ohio St. 553; Stanglein v. State, 17 Ohio St. 453; Halbrook v. State, 34 Ark. 511; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 17; Com. v. Murtagh, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 272; Forney v. Hallacher, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 159; Com. v. Henning, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 109; State v. Britton, 4 McC. (S. Car.) 256; State v. Hilton, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 434; Warner v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 95; O'Neale v. Commonwealth, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 582; Langtry v. State, 30 Ala. 536; Brown v. State, 52 Ala. 340; Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24; Cook v. State, 11 Ga 53; Moore v. State, 7 Tex. App. 608; Steward v. State, 7 Tex. App. 326; Gorman v. State, 23 Tex. 646; Dumas v. State, 14 Tex. App. 464; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 241; Jackson v. People, 3 Ill. 231; State v. Sanders, 30 Iowa, 582; West v. State, 1 Wis. 209; Finney v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.), 544; State v. Hughes, 35 Kan. 626; State v. Abbey, 29 Vt. 60; State v. Libby, 44 Me. 469; Com. v. Jackson, 11 Bush (Ky.), 679; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 225; Robinson v. Commonwealth, 6 Bush (Ky.), 309; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598; Breakey v. Breakey, 3 Up. Can. Q. B. 165; R. v. Smith, 14 Up. Can. Q. B. 567; R. v. Creamer, 10 Low. Can. 404. Compare State v. Roswell, 6 Conn. 446; Gahagan v. People, 1 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 378; People v. Humphrey, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 314; Clayton v. Wardell, 4 N. Y. 230; Hayes v. People, 25 N. Y. 390; State v. Johnson, 12 Minn. 476; People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349; Cayford's Case, 7 Me. 58; Com. v. Littlejohn, 15 Mass. 163.

To prove first marriage evidence was given that the defendant and the woman lived together and held themselves out to the world as man and wife for years; that they had a family of children living with them as their children; that she had signed and acknowledged deeds as his wife; and that after the bigamous marriage she had sued for a divorce, he had answered, and the court had granted her a divorce. Held, that this evidence was all competent. State v. Gonce, 79 Mo. 600.

A defendant cannot be convicted of bigamy where the only evidence of the first marriage is proof of the cohabitation of the parties as man and wife, and their statements that such marriage had taken place. People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349.

2. Moore's Case, 9 Leigh (Va.), 639. See Carmichael v. State, 12 Ohio St. 553; Robinson v. Commonwealth, 6 Bush (Ky.), 309; Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 13.

It is improper to charge the jury that "a marriage was good without any ceremony, and by mere consent of the parties, if the parties intended marriage, and that intent sufficiently appears." It is deficient in not adding that such consent and intent must be followed up by actual cohabitation thereunder as man and wife. Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 13. See Hayes v. People, 25 N. Y. 390.

3. Weinberg v. State, 25 Wis. 370; Bird v. Commonwealth, 21 Gratt. (Va.)

ticated copy of the foreign registry.[1] A decree of divorce, granted upon notice to the defendant, is evidence of the marriage.[2]

Evidence of the unchaste character of the complaining witness, with whom the illegal marriage is alleged to have been contracted, is inadmissible to discredit her testimony.[3]

The legal wife is not a competent witness against the defendant.[4] The testimony of the woman with whom the illegal marriage is alleged to have been contracted, corroborated by proof of cohabitation, raises a presumption of the marriage.[5] Where the marriage is complete, proof of cohabitation is unnecessary.[6]

8. Jurisdiction.—The offence must be prosecuted in the county of the second marriage or cohabitation;[7] but by statute the

800. Compare State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165.

1. Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; State v. Dooris, 40 Conn. 145; Bird v. Commonwealth, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 800; Stanglein v. State, 17 Ohio St. 453.

The marriage may be proved by persons who were present. Murphy v. State, 50 Ga. 150; Arnold v. State, 53 Ga. 574; Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 13; Warner v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 95; Com. v. Putnam, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 136; State v. Clark, 54 N. H. 456; Wolverton v. State, 16 Ohio, 173; People v. Calder, 30 Mich. 85; State v. Williams, 20 Iowa, 98.

A transcript of the record or registry of a marriage in a foreign country, however well authenticated the same may otherwise be, is not competent prima-facie evidence of the marriage therein declared and recorded, without proof of the laws of such foreign country requiring that such record or registry be made and kept. Stanglein v. State, 17 Ohio St. 453.

A prior marriage in another State may be sufficiently proved by the defendant's admissions, without production of the record or other evidence, if the jury believed that the prisoner admitted the validity of such marriage. Williams v. State, 54 Ala. 131; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 665.

On the trial of one for bigamy, the prosecution, to prove the second marriage in another State, offered in evidence a certificate of a clerk of the district court of such State that there was in his office a record of a marriage license and certificate of marriage, giving a copy thereof, to which was attached a certificate of the judge of the court that the clerk's attestation was in due form, which the court admitted, over the defendant's objection. Held, in the absence of proof that such entries were required to be kept by some law of the State from which they came, the certificate and exemplification were not admissible in evidence. Tucker v. People, 117 Ill. 88.

2. Halbrook v. State, 34 Ark. 511; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 17; State v. Gonce, 79 Mo. 600.

Parol evidence is admissible to show that a paper offered as a certified copy of a decree is a forgery. State v. Gonce, 79 Mo. 600.

3. State v. Nadal, 29 N. Westn. Repr. (Iowa) 451.

4. Whart. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 397; Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24; State v. McDavid, 15 La. Ann. 403; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 346; Wilson v. Hill, 13 N. J. Eq. 143; R. v. Madden, 14 Up. Can. Q. B. 588; R. v. Tubbee, 1 Up. Can. P. R. 103. Compare State v. Sloan, 55 Iowa, 217; State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165; Dumas v. State, 14 Tex. App. 464; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 241.

5. State v. Nadal, 29 N. W. Repr. (Iowa), 451.

6. Gise v. Commonwealth, 81 Pa. St. 428; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 346; Begg v. State, 55 Ala. 108.

In a prosecution for bigamy, it is not necessary to allege in the information or indictment the exact time and place of the first marriage. It is sufficient in that respect to allege and prove that the marriage relation existed between the accused and his first wife at the time of the second marriage. State v. Hughes, 35 Kan. 626.

7. Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24; Brewer v. State, 59 Ala. 101.

An indictment for bigamy, when the unlawful marriage was contracted in Missouri, is cognizable only in the courts of the county where it was contracted, not where the parties may have afterward cohabited. State v. Fitzgerald, 75 Mo. 573.

Place where Void Marriage took Place.—An allegation in an indictment for bigamy which charges that a void marriage offence may be prosecuted wherever the party was married the second time.[1]

Where the second marriage takes place in another State, the courts of the State where the first marriage was celebrated have not jurisdiction unless conferred by statute.[2]

BIJOU. See JEWELRY.

BILAN.—A term used in Louisiana, derived from the French. A book in which bankers, merchants, and traders write a statement of all they owe and all that is due them; a balance-sheet.[3]

BILATERAL. (See also CONTRACTS.)—A term used chiefly in the civil law to designate a contract in which both the contracting parties are bound to fulfil obligations reciprocally towards each other; a contract executory on both sides; as a contract of sale, where one becomes bound to deliver the thing sold, and the other to pay the price of it.[4]

BILL OF COSTS. See COSTS.

BILL OF CREDIT. See MONEY.

BILL OF DISCOVERY. (See also EQUITY; EVIDENCE; WITNESSES.)

1. Nature and Scope of.—Discovery and Relief.—A bill of discovery is a bill in equity, filed for the sole purpose of obtaining discovery to be used in another and independent judicial controversy.[5] It differs from a bill of relief in that it seeks no relief.[6] was celebrated in a particular place in another State need not be proven as laid. State v. Nadal, 29 N. Westn. Repr. (Iowa) 451.

1. State v. Palmer, 18 Vt. 570; Com. v. Bradley, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 553; Collins v. People, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 77; People v. Mosher, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 195; State v. Johnson, 12 Minn. 476. Compare Begg v. State, 55 Ala. 108; Scroggins v. State, 32 Ark 205; Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565.

A person may be indicted for bigamy in the county where the unlawful marriage took place, or in a county where he cohabited under the marriage. State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165.

It is not necessary that an information for bigamy should state at what place the defendant was first married. People v. Giesea, 61 Cal. 53.

2. State v. Barnett, 83 N. Car. 615; Begg v. State, 55 Ala. 108; Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24; Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565; Scroggins v. State, 32 Ark. 205.

3. Dauphin v. Soulie, 3 Mart. (La.) N. S. 446.

4. Abbott's Law. Dict., sub voce.

5. Hare on Discovery, p. 111; Story Eq. Jur. § 1483; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 191.

6. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1556; Bispham's Equity, § 557; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 191.

In some States a court of equity, upon bill of discovery being filed in aid of a cause of action, purely legal in its nature, will assume jurisdiction over the cause of action for purposes of relief, as well as of discovery. Warner v. Daniels, 1 Wood & Min. (U. S. C. C.) 90, 111; Traip v. Gould, 15 Me. 82; Lyons v. Miller, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 427, 438; Sims v Augherty, 4 Strobh. Eq. (S. Car.) 102, 121; Holmes v. Holmes, 36 Vt. 525; Laight v. Morgan. 1 John. Cas. 429; Le Roy v. Veeder, 1 John. Cas. 417; Le Roy v. Servis, 2 Caines Cas. (N. Y.) 175; Livingston v. Livingston, 4 Johns. Ch. 294; Long v. Beard, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 337.

It consequently contains no prayer.[1] It may, however, pray an injunction of the trial of the cause until the discovery sought can be obtained and made available.[2] It may pray that the defendant may abide by such order as the court may enter.[3] But if it prays that the defendant may abide by such decree as the court may enter, it will be regarded throughout as a bill for relief, although in all other respects it is properly framed for a bill of discovery.[4]

This practice is clearly opposed to principle, and to the established English practice. Fry v. Penn, 2 Bro. C. C. 280; Price v. James, 2 Bro. C. C. 319; Collis v. Swayne, 4 Bro. C. Cas. 480; Hodgkin v. Longden, 8 Ves. 2; Mellish v. Richardson, 12 Price, 530; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 143. Although it seems to have been in vogue in England at an early period. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 192; 4 Coke Inst. 84, 85. Some American authority is also opposed to it. Peck v. Ashley, 12 Metc. 478; Mitchell v. Green, 10 Metc. 101.

It seems to have arisen from a misapplication of the maxim, that a court of equity, having assumed jurisdiction of a cause for one purpose, will retain jurisdiction to grant complete relief. 1 Story Eq. Jur. (13th Ed.) p. 78, note on Jurisdiction for Discovery.

As this practice would enable the transfer of all legal causes of action into equity, the following limitations have been imposed upon it. First, that the bill must contain an allegation, verified by affidavit, that the discovery sought is indispensable to the plaintiff in the bill in proving his case. Gelston v. Hoyt, 1 John. Ch. 543; Merchants' Bank v. Davis, 3 Kelly (Ga.), 112; Emerson v. Staton, 3 T. B. Mon. 116. 118; Bullock v. Boyd, 2 A. K. Marsh. 322; Stacy v. Pearson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 148, 152; Lyons v. Miller, 6 Gratt. 427, 438; Sims v. Augherty, 4 Strobh. Eq. 102, 121. This limitation, applied at first to all bills of discovery, has been abandoned as to those that do not seek to transfer a merely legal cause of action into equity. Story Eq. Jur. (13th Ed.), note to pp. 78, 80. Second, if a court of law has already taken jurisdiction of the cause of action, a court of equity will not assume jurisdiction of it on bill of discovery. No relief can be had on a bill for discovery unless relief is prayed. Dixon v. Campbell, 3 Dana (Ky.), 603.

Where the transfer of a legal cause of action into equity is sought on a bill for discovery, and an answer is filed denying all the material averments of the bill, the court of equity will not retain jurisdiction and hear evidence to disprove the answer, but will dismiss the suit and leave plaintiff to his legal remedy. Ferguson v. Waters, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 303; Russell v. Clarke's Execrs., 7 Cranch, 69; Robinson v. Gilbraith, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 183; Nourse v. Gregory, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 378.

1. Adams Eq. 20; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 170.

2. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1557; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 195; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 191; Lovell v. Galloway, 17 Beav. 1; Garle v. Robinson, 3 Jur. N. S. 633; Lloyd v. Adams, 4 K. & J. 467; Mollett v. Enequist, 25 Beav. 609; Harris v. Collett, 26 Beav. 222.

3. Baker v. Bramah, 7 Sim. 17; Southeastern Ry. Co. v. Submarine Tel. Co., 18 Beav. 429; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 195; Story Eq. Pl. §§ 313, 314, 315, 316.

4. Rose v. Gannel, 3 Atk. 439; Ambury v. Jones, Younge, 199; James v. Herriott, 6 Sim. 428; Little v. Cooper, 10 N. J. Eq. 273; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 195; Story Eq. Pl. §§ 313, 314, 315, 316.

Hence a bill in all respects properly framed for a bill of discovery, but containing a prayer for a decree, must stand or fall as a bill of relief. It cannot be sustained as a bill of discovery by ignoring the prayer; nor can the plaintiff claim discovery on a demurrer being sustained to the prayer of the bill. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 195; Story Eq. Pl. § 312; Fry v. Penn, 2 Bro. Ch. Cas. 280; Price v. James, 2 Bro. C. C. 319; Collis v. Swayne, 4 Bro. C. C. 480; Hodgkin v. Longden, 8 Ves. 2; Mellish v. Richardson, 12 Price, 530; Reddington v. Lanahan, 59 Md. 429; Pool v. Lloyd, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 525; Preston v. Smith, 26 Fed. Repr. 884.

In Schroeppel v. Redfield, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 245, it was held that the inadvertent

The common and most important use of a bill of discovery is in aid of an action at law.[1] It may be filed by either a plaintiff or a defendant to an action at law.[2] It may be filed in aid of a case arising at any stage of the pleadings at law. It may be filed by a plaintiff to aid in proving his declaration or replication, or by a defendant to aid in proving his plea or rejoinder. It may also be filed in aid of a negative case, as by a defendant to disprove a declaration, or by a defendant to disprove a plea.[3] A bill of discovery may also be filed in aid of an answer to a bill in equity. Such a bill is called a cross-bill.[4]

2. When Bill of Discovery will not Lie.—A bill of discovery will not lie in aid of a criminal proceeding.[5] A bill of discovery will not lie in aid of any jurisdiction which could originally (without the aid of statute) compel discovery. Hence equity will not grant discovery in aid of proceedings in an ecclesiastical court.[6] Nor will it lie in aid of proceedings in an inferior court;[7] nor in aid of proceedings before arbitrators,[8] unless compulsory;[9] nor insertion of the word "decree" into the prayer for process did not convert a bill of discovery into one for relief.

In some cases it has been held that where relief is sought on a bill, otherwise a proper bill of discovery, a demurrer sustained to the relief did not relieve from the necessity of giving the discovery sought. Higginbotham v. Burnet, 5 John Ch. 184; Livingston v. Story, 9 Pet. 632; Wright v. Dame, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 237, 241; Conant v. Warren, 6 Gray (Mass.), 562; Brockway v. Copp, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 539; Atwill v. Ferrett, 2 Blatch. (U. S. C. C.) 39; Metler's Admrs. v. Metler, 3 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 270; Metler v. Metler's Admrs., 4 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 457.

Regarding a bill of discovery but praying relief, as one for relief, only such discovery as is incidental to the relief sought can be compelled. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 195; Story Eq. Pl. § 312.

1. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1556.

The common law had no means of compelling discovery, and furthermore the parties to an action could not testify as witnesses. Hence a party to an action at law had no means of availing himself of the knowledge of his adversary of facts favorable to his case. Again, the common law had no adequate means of compelling the production of documents in the possession of a party. It was to mitigate these hardships of the common law that equity assumed jurisdiction to compel discovery by means of a sworn answer, and the production of documents. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 190; 1 Spence Eq. Jur. 677; Com. Dig. Ch. 3, B.; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 167.

2. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 191, 198; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 170.

3. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 170; Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Lunar, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) Ch. 9.

4. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1553; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 191, 196; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 171.

Owing to the existence, in most jurisdictions, of statutory methods of compelling discovery on motion on filing of interrogatories, cross-bills of discovery have become unusual. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1553.

5. Hare on Disc. 116; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 197.

Quære: Will it lie in aid of a civil action based on a wrong punishable criminally? The following authorities hold that it will: Hare on Disc. 116; Thorpe v. Macaulay, 5 Mad. 218; 230; Wilmot v. Maccabe, 4 Sim. 263; Macauley v. Shakell, 1 Bligh. N. S. 96. But contra, see 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 197.

It would seem on principle that a bill would lie in such a case, but that discovery could not be compelled of such facts as would tend to criminate the defendant. See Story Eq. Jur. § 1494, and note; Story Eq. Pl. §§ 553 (and n. 4) and 597, and notes; Leggett v. Postley, 2 Paige (N. Y.) Ch. 599; Glynn v. Houston, 1 Keen, 329.

6. Hare on Disc. 119; Adams Eq. 18 and 19; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1556; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 197.

7. Hare on Disc. p. 120; Story Eq. Jur. § 1495; Story Eq. Pl. § 555; Dunn v. Coates, 1 Atk. 288; Anon., 2 Ves. (Sen.) 451.

8. Story Eq. Jur. § 1495; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 196; Adams Eq. 18.

9. British Empire Shipping Co. v.

in aid of an issue directed by a court of bankruptcy.[1] It is doubtful if discovery will be compelled in aid of a foreign jurisdiction.[2]

3. Discovery, How Obtained.—Discovery is compelled on bills of discovery in the same way as on bills of relief, i.e., by compelling the defendant to answer under oath the material allegations and interrogatories in the bill, and to produce such documents in his control as he admits to be relevant to the case in the bill.[3] The answer, when filed, can be used as the admission of the party making it, in the trial in aid of which the discovery was sought.[4] The answer, when offered in evidence in a court of law, is regarded as a single admission; consequently the whole of it must be read.[5]

The legality of evidence obtained by bill of discovery must be determined at the trial at law.[6] The answer need not be used in evidence at the trial.[7]

Averments in the answer favorable to defendant's case are evidence in his behalf if responsive to the bill.[8] A defendant must use all means within his power to obtain the information necessary to enable him to give the required discovery.[9] The object of a bill of discovery being to obtain an answer under oath, as soon as a complete answer is filed the suit comes to an end—there is no hearing or decree.[10] On filing a full and satisfactory answer, the defendant is entitled to costs.[11]

4. Essential Parts of Bill—Necessary Averments.—The bill of discovery does not differ, as to its essential parts, from a bill for relief, except that it has no prayer.[12] Like the bill of relief, it contains a statement of the case in aid of which discovery is sought, and averments of fact or interrogatories (or both) in support of the case stated.[13]

As a bill of relief must state a good case for relief in equity, so a bill of discovery, if filed in aid of a case at law, must state a good case at law, or, if in aid of a defence, a good legal defence.[14]

Somes, 3 K. & J. 433; Fuller v. Ingram, 7 W. & R. 302; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 196.

1. Cooke v. Marsh, 18 Ves. 209.

2. Crowe v. Del Rio et al., cited in Ld. Rede's Tr. 186 n. q.; Daubigny v. Davallon, 2 Anst. 467, 468; Mitchell v. Smith, 1 Paige (N. Y.), 287; Dykers v. Wilder, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) 496, hold that it will. Contra, see Bent v. Young, 9 Sim. 180; Reiner v. Marquis of Salisbury, 2 Ch. Div. 378.

3. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 191; Bispham Eq. § 557; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 167.

4. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 167.

It cannot be used in evidence against a co-defendant. Dykers v. Wilder, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) 496; 3 Phillips Evidence, 931, note.

5. Adams Eq. 21; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 200; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 208; Brown v. Thornton, 1 My. & Cr. 243; Hart v. Freeman, 42 Ala. 567; Fant v. Miller, 17 Gratt. 187; Strawn v. Norris, 23 Ark. 542. This does not apply to an answer to a bill of relief. Adams Eq. 21.

6. Price v. Tyson, 3 Bland (Md.), 392.

7. Conway v. Turner, 8 Ark. 356; Kidder v. Barr, 35 N H. 235. But see Hadley v. Upshaw, 27 Tex. 547.

8. Jones v. Cunningham, 7 W. Va. 707.

9. Green v. Carey, 12 Ga. 601; Beall v. Blake, 10 Ga. 449.

10. Story Eq. Jur. § 1483; Mitford Eq. Pl. 16; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 175; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1558; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 191; Townsend v. Odam, 1 Walk. (Miss.) 356; Dennis v. Riley, 21 N. H. 50. But see Pryor v. Adams, 1 Call (Va.), 382.

11. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1558; Adams Eq. 389, 22; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 175.

12. See DISCOVERY AND RELIEF, p. 199.

13. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 170; Wigram on Disc. 5, 6.

14. Story Eq. Jur. § 1493, a; Cal. Cas. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 170; Debigge v. Ld.

It is not necessary to aver in the bill that, without the discovery sought, the plaintiff will be unable to prove his case.[1] Except where a transfer of the legal cause of action into equity is sought on a bill for discovery,[2] in which case the bill must aver that the discovery will be indispensable to plaintiff in proving his case.[3] The bill must also aver the indispensability of the discovery, when filed in aid of a defence at law, and an injunction is asked until the discovery can be had.[4] The bill need not be sworn to,[5] unless relief is sought on the ground of the necessity of discovery.[6]

If a bill of discovery is filed by a plaintiff in aid of a legal title to real estate, he must state in his bill a present legal title in himself. A mere possibility of a future title will not entitle the plaintiff to any discovery.[7]

5. Extent of Discovery Obtainable.—As to the extent of the discovery obtainable, a bill of discovery follows strictly the analogy of a bill of relief. As in the case of a bill of relief, the defendant may be compelled to give discovery as to all facts stated in the bill and all interrogatories therein relevant to the plaintiff's case.[8] But the plaintiff cannot compel discovery as to the defendant's case.[9] Nor as to immaterial matters.[10]

6. Parties.—Only parties to the proceeding or contemplated proceeding in aid of which the bill of discovery is filed, are proper parties to the bill.[11] Except where one of the parties against

Howe, cited in Mitford Eq. Pl. 187; Newkerk v. Willett, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 296; Wallis v. Duke of Portland, 3 Ves. Jr. 494; Williams v. Harden, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 298; Lord Kensington v. Mansell, 13 Ves. 240; Macauley v. Shackell, 1 Bligh (N. S.), 120; Thomas v. Tyler, 3 Y. & Coll. 255.

In Hinckle v. Currin, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 74, it was held that the pleadings need not be set out, but merely the issue stated. Where a bill of discovery is in aid of a replication at law, plaintiff must state a good original case at law, as well as a good replication, since, if the declaration is bad, the plaintiff must lose on demurrer even though the replication be good. Similarly, a bill in aid of a rejoinder must state a good defence. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 170.

1. 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 1483 (cf. 1 Story Eq. Jur. § 74); Marsh v. Davidson, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 580; Peck v. Ashley, 12 Met. 478; Continental Ins. Co. v. Webb, 54 Ala. 697; Many v. Beekman Ins. Co., 9 Paige, 188.

2. See note 6, pp. 199, 200.

3. Bullock v. Boyd, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 322; Emerson v. Staton, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 116, 118; Stacy v. Pearson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 148, 152; March v. Davidson, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 580; Continental Ins. Co. v. Webb, 54 Ala. 688, 697; Laight v. Morgan, 1 Johns. Cas. 429.

If the bill omits such averment where a transfer of the cause of action into equity is sought, the defendant may demur as to the relief sought, but must answer and give discovery. March v. Davidson, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 580.

4. March v. Davidson, 9 Paige, 580; Turner v. Dickerson, 1 Stockt. (N. J. Eq.) 140; cf. Appleyard v. Seton, 16 Ves. 223.

5. Buckner v. Ferguson, 44 Miss. 677.

6. Story Eq. Pl. §§ 288, 313, 314.

7. Story Eq. Jur. § 1490; Story Eq. Pl. § 318; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 198; Brownsword v. Edwards, 2 Ves. Sen. 243, 247; Baxter v. Farmer, 7 Ired. Eq. 239; Turner v. Dickerson, 1 Stockt. (N. J.) Ch. 140.

8. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 204, and note 2, p. 204, and cases there cited; Primmer v. Patten, 32 Ill. 528.

9. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 201; Nigilby v. Shufte, 9 Jur. N. S. 1141.

10. Dickenson v. Lewis, 34 Ala. 638; 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 1497.

11. Story Eq. Jur. § 1499; Mitf. Eq. Pl. (Jeremy's Ed.) 188; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1558; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 199; Newman v. Godfrey, 2 Bro. Ch. Cas. 332, 334; Cookson v. Ellison, 2 Bro. Ch. Cas. 252; Fenton v. Hughes, 7 Ves. 287.

which discovery is sought is a corporation, in which case an officer of the corporation may be joined as a party defendant.[1] Therefore no discovery can be compelled against a person who, by reason of some disability, cannot be a party to an action, e.g., an infant or a lunatic without committee.[2] Non-joinder of parties defendant is no defence to a bill of discovery.[3] An amendment to add parties to a bill of discovery will not ordinarily be allowed.[4]

7. Time when Obtainable.—Discovery in aid of a case at law may be obtained either before or after action is brought, and without reference to the state of the pleadings.[5] It will not lie in aid of a defence till the plea is filed.[6] It will not lie after judgment.[7] An answer could not be compelled to a cross-bill of discovery until after the plaintiff had answered in the original suit, although the cross-bill could be filed before then.[8]

8. Defences.—Defences to a bill of discovery may be divided into two classes—defences to the case in aid of which discovery is sought, and defences to the discovery itself. If the bill does not state a good case in aid of which discovery is sought, or if the defendant has a good defence to the case stated, discovery may be avoided.[9] But even where a valid cause of action is stated, and the defendant has no defence to it, equity will not necessarily grant the discovery sought. Thus where discovery is sought to impeach defendant's legal title, a plea of purchaser for value and without notice is a complete defence.[10] So also it seems that

A party in interest, though not of record, may be joined. Carter v. Jordan, 15 Ga. 76.

1. Story Eq. Jur. § 1501; Adams Eq. 20; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 199; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 78; Glasscott v. Company of Copper Miners, 11 Sim. 305, 314.

Former officers of the corporation may also be joined. Fulton Bank v. Sharon Canal Co., 1 Paige (N. Y.), 219. The reason for this exception lies in the fact that a corporation cannot be subjected to the pains and penalties of perjury for false swearing. The oath of the officers is therefore added to give the answer an increased sanction.

In certain cases an agent may be joined as party defendant with his principal where the principal is not a corporation. Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546.

An officer of a corporation may be joined for discovery only as to matters coming to his knowledge while acting in his official capacity. McComb v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 19 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 69.

2. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 199; Hare on Disc. 121.

3. Hare on Disc. 124; 1 Dan. Ch. Pr. 290; Sangosa v. East India Co., 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 170, Pl. 28.

This is because the discovery obtained is only the admission of the party answering. Adams Eq. 20.

But it would seem that the non-joinder, as plaintiffs, of all persons properly plaintiffs to the action at law is a good defence.

4 Dan. Ch. Pr. 495.

5. Story Eq Jur. § 1495. But see Story Eq. Jur. § 1483; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 169; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 197; Wolf v. Wolf, 2 Harr. & G. (Md.) 382.

But the bill must state that the discovery sought is in aid of judicial proceedings pending, or contemplated or threatened.

6. Harris v. Galbraith, 43 Ill. 309.

7. McCullum v. Prewitt, 37 Ala. 573; Powell v. Stewart, 17 Ala. 719; Norris v. Denton, 2 Cal. 378. Lansing v. Eddy, 1 Johns. Ch. 49; Faulkner v. Harwood, 6 Rand. (Va.) 125.

8. 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1551; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 173; Harris v. Harris, T. & R. 165; Van Valtenburg v. Alberry, 10 Iowa, 264.

9. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 176; Story Eq. Pl. § 319.

10. Story Eq. Jur. § 1502; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 200; Cooper Eq. Pl. ch. 5, p. 300; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 188; McNeil v. Magee, 5 Mason, 269, 270; Stanhope v. Earl of Varney, 2 Eden, 81; Bassett v. Nosworthy, 2 White & Tud. L. C. in Eq. 1; equity will not grant discovery in aid of a good legal cause, unless in attainment of an object which the court approves.[1] Discovery cannot be compelled against a defendant incompetent as a witness for any other reason than interest.[2]

The foregoing defences are defences to the whole of the discovery. There are also defences as to the whole or some part of the discovery. Thus the defendant may refuse to answer any allegations or interrogatories which he could refuse to answer if called as a witness. Hence discovery may be refused if it would tend to criminate the defendant or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture.[3]

9. Defences—How Taken.—Demurrer.—If the bill omits material averments or discloses a defence upon its face, it is demurrable.[4]

Where the defendant wishes to take advantage of his privilege as a witness as to a part or the whole of the discovery, he may do so by demurrer.[5]

Plea.—Any ground of defence, not apparent on the face of the bill, may be taken advantage of by plea.[6] The plea may be either affirmative, i. e., setting up new matter in answer to the case made by the bill, or negative, i. e., traversing material averments of the bill. Negative pleas are sometimes styled anomalous pleas, and affirmative pleas, pure pleas.[7] Anomalous pleas are required to be supported by answers giving discovery as to the averments traversed, and all averments of fact and interrogatories in their support.[8]

Burlace v. Cook, 2 Freem. 24; Pennington v. Beechy, 2 Sim. & Stu. 282; Jerrard v. Saunders, 2 Ves. 187; Wallwyn v. Lee, 9 Ves. 24.

1. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 202; Jeremy Eq. Jurisd. 268; King v. Burr, 3 Meriv. 693; Cousins v. Smith, 13 Ves. 542; Rejah v. East India Co., 35 Eng. L. & Eq. 283; Lansing v. Starr, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150.

2. 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 1496; Cooper Eq. Pl. ch. 5, § 3, p. 196; Le Texier v. Margrave of Anspach, 5 Ves. 322; s. c., 15 Ves. 159; Barron v. Grillard, 3 V. & Beam. 165; Cartwright v. Green, 8 Ves. 405, 408.

3. Hare on Disc. 131; Adams Eq. 3; Livingston v. Tompkins, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 432; United States v. Twenty-eight Packages, Gilpin, 306; Livingston v. Harris, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 528; Skinner v. Judson, 8 Conn. 528; Hayes v. Caldwell, 5 Gil. (Ill.) 33; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Fields, 2 Story, 59; Union Bank v. Barker, 3 Barb. Ch. 358; Marshall v. Riley, 7 Ga. 367; Poindexter v. Davis, 6 Gratt. 481.

If the plaintiff in the bill of discovery be solely entitled to take advantage of the penalty or forfeiture, he may, by waiving the right in his bill, obviate the objection to the discovery and compel the defendant to answer. Hare on Disc. 137; Skinner v. Judson, 8 Conn. 528; Brand v. Cumming, 22 Vin. Abr. 315, pl. 4; Mason v. Murray cited 3 Bro. C. C. 40.

The mere fact that the discovery sought would tend to make defendant infamous is no excuse for not answering. Hare on Disc. 132; Story Eq. Pl. § 595; Glyn v. Houston, 1 Keen, 229.

4. Story Eq. Pl. § 605; 1 Dan. Ch. Pr. § 542. But see Langdell Eq. Pl. § 129.

5. Story Eq. Pl. § 575; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 97.

It seems he may do so even though the objection to the discovery does not appear on the face of the bill. Langdell Eq. Pl. §§ 97, 69 and note; Bolton v. Liverpool, 3 Sim. 467.

In such case the demurrer must state why and how the discovery would subject him to a penalty. Sharp v. Sharp, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 407.

6. Story Eq. Pl. §§ 605, 647; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 176.

7. Story Eq. Pl. § 651.

8. Story Eq. Pl. § 670; Langdell Eq. Pl. § 102; Bains v. Goldey, 35 Pa. St. 51.

Answer.—The answer being the object of a bill of discovery, and being the means by which discovery is obtained, defences to bills of discovery are never taken by answer.

Pro Confesso.—In the absence of statutes, bills of discovery were not taken pro confesso.[1]

10. Statutory Provisions on the Subject of Discovery. In England.—In England the matter of discovery was regulated by the Judicature Act, 36 and 37 Vict. ch. 66, Schedule Rules 25, 26, and 27.[2]

Rule 25 provides that either party to an action may exhibit interrogatories to and obtain discovery from the other party.

Rule 26 provides that either party must allow his adversary the right to inspect and copy any document referred to by him in his pleadings or affidavits, unless he shall satisfy the court that it relate wholly to his own title.

Rule 27 provides that the court or judge during the pendency of any action may order the production "by any party upon oath of such documents in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question in such suit or proceeding, as the court or judge shall think right; and the court may deal with such documents when produced in such manner as shall appear just."

In the United States.—The majority of our States and Territories have statutory provisions regulating discovery and the production of documents, similar in their general object and scope to those of the English Judicature Act. These statutes, while they present little variety in the results they accomplish, do present a certain variety in the methods they adopt. Subjoined is a classification of all statutory provisions in the States and Territories relating to discovery and the production of documents, all statutory provisions which are substantially identical being included in a class, the substance of the provisions of some one State in each class being first given as the type of its class.

NEW YORK.—The Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 870, 872, and 873, provides for the taking of depositions on oral interrogatories, at any time prior to the trial, of a party to a pending action, or of one who expects to be a party to an action to be brought, at his own instance or that of an adverse party. The party desiring to take the deposition must present an affidavit setting forth, among other things, the nature (or probable nature) of the action pending or to be brought, and that the discovery sought is material and necessary. Sections 803 to 807 make provision for compelling a party to a pending action to give his adversary an inspection with the right to make copies of any documents in his possession relating to the merits of the action or defence.

1. Langdell Eq. Pl. § 180; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1559.

In Nancy v. Trammel, 3 Mo. 306, it was held that a demurrer to a bill of discovery amounted to an actual admission of the truth of the averments of the bill.

2. The rules contained in the schedule have been annulled by the Supreme Court Rules of 1883; but it is believed that these new court rules are not materially different from the rules for discovery as provided in the schedule of the Judicature Act.

The following States and Territories have statutory provisions relating to discovery and the production of documents similar to the provisions of the New York Code, with this important difference—that they do not provide for discovery where an action has not yet been begun:

Arizona.—Comp. Laws 1877, ch. 48 (Civil Code), §§ 430 et seq., 448.

California.—Code Civil Procedure, §§ 2021 et seq., 1000.

Colorado.—Code 1884, §§ 367 et seq., 381.

Dakota.—Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 439 et seq., 437.

Idaho.—Rev. Laws 1875, ch. 30, §§ 646 et seq., and 475.

Montana.—Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 656 et seq., 535a; Laws 1881.

Nebraska.—Comp. Laws 1873, §§ 1468 et seq., 1487 et seq.

Nevada.—Comp. Laws 1873, §§ 1468 et seq., 1487.

North Carolina.—Code of Civil Procedure (Tourgee), §§ 333, 334, 331.

Oregon.—Civil Code, §§ 804 et seq., 511.

South Carolina.—Code Civil Procedure, §§ 392 et seq, 389.

Utah.—Comp. Laws 1876, title xx. (Civil Practice Act), §§ 405 et seq., 424.

Wisconsin.—Rev. Statutes, §§ 4096 et seq., 4183.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Publ. Statutes, ch. 167, §§ 49 et seq., provide that the plaintiff, at any time after beginning suit, and the defendant at any time after filing his answer, may file written interrogatories for the discovery of facts and documents material to the support or defence of the suit, to be answered on oath by the adverse party. The interrogatories must be accompanied by an affidavit that the discovery will be of material benefit. The answer to the interrogatories must be in writing.

Arkansas.—Statutes 1884, §§ 5089 et seq., § 2843.

Connecticut.—Gen. Statutes 1875, title 19, ch. 11, § 30.

Florida.—McClellan's Digest (1881), ch. 101, §§ 14, 18.

Indiana.—Rev. Stats. 1881, §§ 359, 480.

Iowa.—Rev. Code, §§ 2693, 3685.

Louisiana.—Code of Practice, §§ 140, 347.

Texas.—Rev. Stats. 1879, §§ 2238 et seq.

Virginia.—Code (1873), ch. 172, §§ 44, 45.

Washington Ty.—Code, §§ 428, 403 et seq., 428.

Wyoming Ty.—Civil Code, §§ 365, 162 et seq.

ALABAMA.—Code 1876, § 3084, provides for discovery on filing written interrogatories pending the action. But there appears to be no provision made for compelling a production or inspection of documents.

New Mexico.—Compiled Laws 1884, § 2094.

NEW JERSEY.—Revision, "Practice:" § 155 provides for discovery on written interrogatories filed in the action. § 159 provides for the oral examination of a party to an action pending the action, but before trial. §§ 157, 158 provide for compelling an inspection of documents.

OHIO.—Rev. Stats. 1886: § 4293 provides an action of discovery similar to the common-law suit for discovery, when necessary to enable the party filing it to prepare his pleadings in some other action brought or to be brought. § 5099 provides for discovery on interrogatories annexed to the pleadings. § 5289 provides for the production of documents in all cases and under all circumstances where compellable by the ordinary rules of chancery proceeding. § 5290 provides for inspection of documents pending the action.

Mississippi.—Rev. Code 1880, §§ 1643 and 1644, provides for discovery and production of documents at law by petition "whenever, by the rules of equity, a discovery would be compelled in a court of chancery."

Maryland.—Code of Procedure, article 70, § 18.

Tennessee.—Code 1884, §§ 4649 et seq.

GEORGIA.—Code (1882), part ii. title ix. ch. ii., provides for discovery by bill filed in equity. It practically re-enacts or reaffirms the common law of bills of discovery.

New Hampshire.—Gen. Laws (1878), ch. 209, § 1, give the Supreme Court jurisdiction to compel discovery.

Michigan.—Howell's Statutes (1882), §§ 6, 411 et seq., provide that the Supreme Court may assume jurisdiction to compel discovery of documents in suits pending therein. There appear to be no other statutory provisions relating to discovery.

ILLINOIS.—Starr. & Curt. Stats. ch. 51, § 9, provide that courts may compel parties to pending actions to give their adversaries inspection of documents, with the right to make copies. There is no statute relating to discovery by parties of facts lying within their knowledge.

Delaware.—R. S. 1874, ch. 598, vol. ii. § 1, p. 652.

Kansas.—Comp. Laws 1881, ch. 80, § 368.

Missouri.—Code of Procedure, § 3644 et seq.

Pennsylvania.—Brightly's Purdon's Digest, "Evidence," 1.

Rhode Island.—Publ. Stats. ch. 214, § 45.

West Virginia.—Amended Code, 1884, ch. 130, § 43.

In MAINE, MINNESOTA, and VERMONT there appear to be no statutes relating to discovery or production or inspection of documents.[1]

1. Discovery under Statutes.—It is to be noticed in regard to these various statutes, that they affect the means and instrumentality of compelling discovery rather than the principles of discovery itself. They all recognize and are based on the theory that a party to an action has a right to compel an admission from his adversary of facts within his adversary's knowledge favorable to his case. They all enforce discovery by compelling the party from whom it is sought to answer questions or interrogatories under oath. They all recognize the right of a party to have the discovery prior to the trial. At common law discovery could be obtained by a plaintiff prior to commencing action, and, in general, without regard to the state of the pleadings. Statutes relating to discovery do not ordinarily provide for discovery except pending the action, and generally not until after the party seeking discovery has filed his pleadings. Vide "Statutory Provisions on the Subject of Discovery," supra.

The chief difference between the different statutes is as to the mode of interrogating the party from whom discovery is sought, some statutes providing for an examination on oral interrogatories, others for an examination on written interrogatories.

11. When Bill of Discovery is Abrogated by Statutory Provisions for Discovery.—The question whether the jurisdiction of equity to compel discovery has been abrogated by the various statutes relating to discovery, is often one of much difficulty. In some States and Territories the action or bill of discovery is abolished by express statutory provision. This is the case in Arizona, Dakota, New York, Montana, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Wisconsin.[1]

In Arkansas and Iowa the action of discovery is abolished by statute, except against a contractor to discover the names and addresses of his co-contractors.[2]

In jurisdictions where there are no statutes regulating the matter of discovery, the existence of statutes enabling a party to an action to call an adverse party as a witness probably does not deprive equity of jurisdiction to compel discovery on bill of discovery.[3]

Inspection of Documents — Statutory Provisions.—To obtain a production of documents on a bill of discovery, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to describe or specify the documents which he desires the defendant to produce, or to state what he expects to prove by them. The bill need only aver that the defendant possesses documents relevant to the plaintiff's case as made in his bill, and defendant is thereupon required, by answer, to admit or deny the charge of possession of relevant documents, and, unless he can deny the charge in toto, he must schedule and produce all relevant documents. Combe v. Corporation of London, 15 L. J. Ch. 80; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1819.

To obtain inspection of documents under statutory provisions, the party desiring inspection is ordinarily required to file an affidavit describing with some particularity the documents he desires to inspect, and stating that the inspection is necessary to enable him to file his pleadings or prepare for trial. This statement must show what evidence the document is supposed to contain. Pegram v. Carson, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 340; Walker v. Granite Bank, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 39; Opdyke v. Marble, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Bolles v. Duff, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 448.

It is evident, therefore, that production could be compelled by bill of many documents of which an inspection under statutory provisions could not be obtained because of the inability of the party desiring inspection to describe the document and its contents. British Empire Shipping Co. v. Somes, 3 K. & J. 433.

It is to be noticed that inspection alone does not take the place of production. Inspection is had prior to the trial and enables the party obtaining it to ascertain the documents in the possession of his adversary which he desires to have produced at the trial. The production at the trial is accomplished by serving the party in possession of the documents with a subpœna duces tecum to produce them at the trial.

1. Comp. Laws Ariz. 1877, § 2855; Code Civ. Pr. of Dakota (1877), § 438; Code Civ. Pr. of New York (1885), § 1914; Code of Montana, 1873, § 647; Code Civ. Pr. North Car. (Tourgee) ch. v. § 332; Code Civ. Pr. South Car. § 390; Rev. Stats. of Wis. § 4096.

2. Arkansas Stats. 1884, §§ 4921, 4922; Iowa Revised Code § 2523.

3. There is a conflict of authority on this point. Riopelle v. Doellner, 26 Mich. 102; Phillips v. Kern, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 9; Milne's Appeal, 2 Atl. Rep. 534; Bond v. Worley, 26 Mo 253; Heath v. Erie R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 316; Hurd v. Duchess Co. Bank, 1 Morr. (Ia.) 291, are against the statement of the law in the text. Elliston v. Hughes, 1 Head (Tenn.), 225; Cannon v. McNab, 48 Ala. 99; Millsaps v. Pfeiffer, 44 Miss. 805; Russell v. Dickeschied, 24 W. Va. 61, support it. See also Nussbaum v. Heilbron, 63 Ga. 312; Hoppock v. United States, etc., R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 286.

The cases holding that the jurisdiction of equity over bills of discovery is abrogated, proceed upon the ground that a court of equity will not compel discovery

Even where some statutory provision is made for obtaining discovery, but such provision does not afford as full and adequate means of compelling discovery as a bill of discovery would afford, it is probable that a bill of discovery will lie.[1]

But where the intention of the statute is evidently to cover the entire ground of discovery, it is probable that discovery cannot be compelled except under the provisions of the statute, even though the statute does not, in point of fact, provide for all cases which could be reached by a bill of discovery.[2]

12. Principles of Discovery by Bill Applicable to Discovery under Statutes.—All the principles of the law of discovery not modified or abrogated by statute remain in full force, even where the bill of discovery has been abolished by statute.[3]

Thus the principles of equity procedure in regard to the nature and extent of the discovery and production of documents that can be compelled are ordinarily applicable to proceedings for discovery under statutory provisions.[4]

BILL IN EQUITY. (See also BILL OF DISCOVERY; BILL OF PEACE; BILL QUIA TIMET; BILL TO PERPETUATE TESTIMONY; BILL TO REMOVE CLOUDS; BILL TO TAKE TESTIMONY DE BENE ESSE; CREDITOR'S BILLS; EQUITY; FRAUD; INJUNCTION; MORTGAGE; TRUSTS; PARTNERSHIP; RECEIVER; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.)

1. Definition.—A complaint in writing addressed to the chancellor, containing the names of the parties to the suit, both comin aid of a tribunal which can itself compel the discovery. But it would seem that the jurisdiction to compel discovery in aid of an action at law, having become established at a time when parties were incompetent as witnesses, the mere enactment of statutes removing the disability of parties as witnesses should not by implication abrogate this jurisdiction. Moreover, allowing a party to be examined as a witness at the trial does not supply the place of the bill of discovery, since by bill the discovery would be obtained before trial.

It would seem, however, that the jurisdiction assumed by courts of equity in some States to grant relief on bills of discovery has been by implication abrogated by the statute enabling parties to testify. Since, in order to invoke the aid of a court of equity for purposes of relief, the plaintiff must aver and prove that the discovery sought is absolutely indispensable to enable him to prove his case, and this can rarely, if ever, be the case where the plaintiff can call the adverse party as a witness. Kearney v. Jeffries, 48 Miss. 343. But see Continental Life Ins. Co. v. Webb, 54 Ala. 688.

1. Shotwell's Admx. v. Smith, 20 N. J. Eq. 79; British Empire Shipping Co. v. Somes, 3 K. & J. 433.

2. This is probably the case in those jurisdictions which have statutory provisions for compelling discovery, by interrogatories or otherwise, prior to or pending the action, and also for ordering an inspection of documents pending the trial, and a production at the trial by means of the process of subpœna duces tecum. See 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 193.

3. Shoe and Leather Reporter Assoc. v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 385; Anderson v. Bank of Br. Columbia, L. R. 2 Ch. Div. 644; Cashin v. Craddock, L. R. 2 Ch. Div. 140; Hoffman v. Postill, L. R. 4 Ch. 673.

4. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 194.

plainant and defendant, a statement of the facts on which the complainant relies, and the allegations which he makes, with an averment that the acts complained of are contrary to equity, and a prayer for relief and proper process.[1]

2. General Nature of the Bill.—It is analogous to a declaration in an action at law, and is in the nature of a petition, setting forth the material facts and concluding with a prayer for relief or other thing required, and for process to compel defendants to appear and make answer.[2] Whatever the object of the bill, it must state a case within the appropriate jurisdiction of a court of equity, and a failure to do so is a fatal error.[3] It should state the right, title, or claim of plaintiff with accuracy and clearness, the injury complained of and the relief asked.[4] All facts should be positively averred by the plaintiff in the bill.[5]

3. Component Parts of the Bill.—A bill formerly consisted of (1) the address; (2) the introduction; (3) the statement; (4) the confederacy clause; (5) the charging clause; (6) the jurisdiction clause; (7) the interrogating clause; (8) the prayer for relief; (9) the prayer for process.[6] As generally framed now, however, the bill consists merely of the statement, the charges, the interrogatories, the prayer for relief, and the prayer for process.[7]

Statement.—The statement begins with a heading addressing the bill to the proper court, and gives the name and residence of the plaintiff;[8] it then proceeds to narrate plaintiff's case for relief. As its object is to show plaintiff's right to relief, it must state his case in direct terms and with reasonable certainty.[9] If there are several plaintiffs, their claims must be consistent.[10]

1. Bouvier's Law Dict.

2. Story's Eq. Pl. § 7.

3. Story's Eq. Pl. §§ 10, 32; 2 Anstr. R. 543.

4. Story's Eq. Pl. § 241; East India Co. v. Henchman, 1 Ves. Jr. 287; Cresset v. Milton, 1 Ves. Jr. 449; Wormald v. De Lisle, 3 Beav. 18; Houghton v. Reynolds, 2 H. R. 264; Balls v. Margrave, 3 Beav. 284; Armisted v. Durham, 11 Beav. 422; Frietas v. Dos Santos, 1 Y. & J. 574.

5. Egremont v. Cowell, 5 Beav. 620; Cameron v. Abbott, 30 Ala. 416; Lucas v. Oliver, 34 Ala. 626; Wells v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co., 30 Conn. 316; Campbell v. Paris R. Co., 71 Ill. 611.

A complainant who wishes to avail himself of material facts in the records of previous cases must state in his bill the facts he relied upon. Ramsey v. Temple, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 252.

6. Story's Eq. Pl. §§ 26–44.

7. Adams Eq. *302.

8. Howe v. Harvey, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 73.

In Sterrick v. Pugsley, 1 Flip. (U. S.) C. C. 350, the address "To the circuit court in chancery sitting" held sufficient.

9. Adams Eq. *303.

To allege that a sale is simulated and if not simulated is fraudulent may be consistent, but it is not certain. Socola v. Grant, 15 Fed. Repr. 487.

A complaint to annul a contract on account of mental unsoundness and incapacity to transact business of the contracting party need not allege the kind of unsoundness or the kind of business. Fulweider v. Ingels. 87 Ind. 414.

If a description of a deed is material, the omission in the bill of the grantee's name renders it defective. Natron v. Cameron, 2 Dak. 347.

Fraud must be specifically charged; a general allegation of fraud is not sufficient. Story's Eq. Pl. § 251; Palmer v. Mure, 2 Dick. 489; Munday v. Knight, 3 Hare, 497; Gilbert v. Lewis, 1 De G. J. & S. 38; Hallows v. Fernie, L. R. 3 Ch. 467; Bryan v. Spruill, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 27; Nicholls v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 146; McHan v. Ordway, 76 Ala. 347; Jackson v. Reeve, 44 Ark. 496.

10. Adams Eq. *302; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, T. & R. 117; King of Spain v. Machado, 4 Russ. 215; Lambert v. Hut-

It is not requisite to state matters of which the court takes judicial notice, as statutes, general customs, etc.[1]

Charges.—The charges are used for meeting the defence by matter in avoidance,[2] or by inquiries to sift its truth; for giving notice of evidence which might otherwise operate as a surprise;[3] and for obtaining discovery as to matters of detail which could chinson, 1 Beav. 277; Richardson v. McKinson, Litt. Sel. Cas. 320; Ferrill v. Craig, Halst. Dig. 223; Thurman v. Shelton, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 383; Mix v. Hotchkiss, 14 Conn. 32; Swayze v. Swayze, 1 Stockt. (N. J.) 273; Ellicott v. Ellicott, 2 Md. Ch. 468.

Unconnected parties with a common interest in the point at issue may unite in one bill. Comstock v. Rayford, 1 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 423; Armstrong v. Athens Co., 10 Ohio, 235; Ohio v. Ellis, 10 Ohio, 456; Dawson v. Lawrence, 13 Ohio, 543; Tilford v. Emerson, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 483; Scrimeger v. Buckhannon, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 219; Tilman v. Searcy, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 487; Morris v. Dillard, 4 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 636; Wood v. Barringer, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 67.

Proper averments of facts are those of such matters as must be established by evidence to enable a court to act. Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Shepard v. Shepard, 6 Conn. 37; Lingan v. Henderson, 1 Bland (Md.). 249. 255; Russ v. Hawes, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 18; Caton v. Willis, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 355; Salmon v. Clagett, 3 Bland (Md.), 134; Townsend v. Duncan, 2 Bland (Md.), 45; Fowler v. Saunders, 4 Call (Va.), 361; Yancy v. Fenwick, 4 Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 423; Cruger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.). 314; Hobart v. Frisbie, 5 Conn. 592; Davis v. Harrison, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 262; Harding v. Handy. 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 103; Knox v. Smith, 4 How. U. S. 298; Spence v. Duren, 3 Ala. 251.

1. Adams Eq. *303; Story Eq. Pl. § 24; Wormald v. De Lisle, 3 Beav. 18; Edwards v. Edwards, Jac. 335; Seddon v. Connell, 10 Sim. 79; Williams v. Earl of Jersey, C. & P. 91; 1 Dan. Ch. P. 303–310, 346–9; Walburn v. Ingilby, 1 M. & K. 61.

Thus in a case under the Statute of Frauds it is not necessary to allege that the contract was in writing. Otherwise in Georgia. Logan v. Bond, 13 Ga. 192.

Where on the face of the bill the Statute of Limitations would be a bar to the claim, the facts relied on to take the case out of the statute must be stated. Wisner v. Barnet, 4 Wash. C. C. 631; Dunlap v. Gibbs, Yerg. (Tenn.) 94; Humbert v. Rector Trin. Ch., 7 Paige (N. Y.), 197; 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 595; Maxwell v. Kennedy, 8 How. (U. S.) 210; Field v. Wilson, 6 B. Monr. (Ky.) 479; Ingraham v. Regan, 23 Miss. 213; Bank of U. S. v. Biddle, 2 Pars. Eq. (Pa.) 31; Pratt v. Northam, 5 Mason (U. S.), 95; Williams v. Presb. Soc., 1 Ohio St. N. S. 478; Nimmo v. Stewart, 21 Ala. 682.

Material matters are not necessarily impertinent, because they are such as the court may judicially take notice of. Wells v. Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 561.

2. Adams Eq. *303; McCrea v. Purmont, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 460; Stafford v. Brown, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 88.

A false statement in the charging part of a sworn bill constitutes perjury. Smith v. Clark, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 368. Under Rule 21 of the U. S. courts, the charging part is unnecessary.

3. It is not necessary to set out the evidence in detail, since the facts proved, not the evidence, constitute the case for relief. Russ v. Hawes, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 18; Dilly v. Heckrotte, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 171; Jackson's Assignees v. Cutright, 5 Munf. (Va.) 314; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 177; White v. Yaw, 7 Vt. 357; Crocker v. Higgins, 7 Conn. 342; Skinner v. Bailey, 7 Conn. 496; Hayward v. Carroll, 4 Harr. & J. (Md.) 518; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; Miller v. Furse, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 187; Lingan v. Henderson, 1 Bland (Md.), 236; Townsend v. Duncan, 2 Bland (Md.), 45; Anthony v. Leftwich, 3 Rand. (Va.) 263; Morrison v. Hart, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 4; Lemaster v. Burkhart, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 26; Bank of U. S. v. Schultz. 3 Hamm. (Ohio) 62; Lovell v. Farrington, 50 Me. 239; Camden, etc., R. v. Stewart. 4 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 343.

Evidence of confessions, conversations, or admissions of defendant is receivable to prove a fact put in issue by a bill, although they are not expressly charged in the bill as evidence of the fact. Smith v. Burnham, 2 Sumner (U. S. C. C.), 612; Jenkins v. Eldredge, 3 Story (U. S. C. C.), 183; Cannon v. Collins, 3 Del. Ch. 132.

It is not necessary to file as an exhibit to a bill a paper which is only evidence of not be conveniently introduced in the statement,[1] to which they are supplemental.

The statement and charges include all material allegations. Any matter alleged, which is not material, is impertinent, and may be struck out of the bill on application to the court.[2] Likewise if criminatory of the defendant or any other person it may be struck out as scandalous, though not if material.[3]

Interrogatories.—The interrogatories are a series of questions directed to facts previously stated or charged, and accompanied with a prayer that defendant may, if he can, show why plaintiff is not entitled to the relief asked, and may answer the questions on oath.[4]

The defendant was formerly obliged only to answer the allegations of the bill, but the interrogatories were added to prevent by specific inquiries and misapprehension or evasion by the defendant. The interrogatories must be founded on the matters contained in the bill, since the defendant is not obliged to answer an interrogatory not warranted by something in the prior part of the bill.[5] In the United States courts and in Pennsylvania the interrogatories are filed separately from the bill.[6]

Prayer for Relief.—The prayer for relief is the next part of the bill, and is a statement by the plaintiff of the relief required.[7] Formerly the bill only contained a prayer for general relief, and the special statement was added to acquaint the defendant with the use to be made by the plaintiff of the facts stated in the bill. The general prayer, however, cannot safely be omitted, since if the plaintiff should in his special prayer mistake the due relief, it may be given under the general prayer, if consistent with what is actually prayed.[8] an admission by defendant. Trapnall v. Byrd, 22 Ark. 10.

1. Adams Eq. *305.

2. Adams Eq. *306; Hawley v. Wolverton, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 522; Hood v. Inman, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 437; Williams v. Sexton, 19 Wis. 42; Wells v. Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 561.

3. Disparaging or abusive words are not scandalous unless they are also impertinent. Henry v. Henry, Phill. (N. C.) Eq. 334.

An unnecessary allegation bearing cruelly on one's moral character is scandalous and impertinent. Ralston v. Ralston, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 175.

4. Adams Eq. *307.

5. Story's Eq. Pl. § 36; Adams Eq. *308; Langdell's Eq. Pl. § 64; Mechanics' Bank v. Lynn, 1 Pet. 376; McDonald v. McDonald, 16 Verm. 630; Morris v. Parker, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 297; Smith v. Lasher, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 247; Pettit v. Candler, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 618; Phillips v. Prevost, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 205.

6. Adams Eq. *308.

7. Adams Eq. *308; Story's Eq. Pl. § 40.

8. Adams Eq. *309; Story's Eq. Pl. § 40; Colton v. Ross, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 396; Wilkin v. Wilkin, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 111; Allen v. Coffman, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 469; Brown v. McDonald, 1 Hill's Ch. (S. Car.) 302; Barr v. Haseldon, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 53; Kelly v. Paine, 18 Ala. 371; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Eq. (Pa.) 99; Stone v. Anderson, 6 Foster (N. H.), 506.

The relief must be agreeable to the case made by the bill. Chalmers v. Chambers, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 29; Franklin v. Osgood, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 527; English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 595; McCosker v. Brady, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Smith v. Trenton Falls Co., 3 Green Ch. (N. J.) 305; Danforth v. Smith, 23 Vt. 247; Hillary v Hurdle, 6 Gill (Md.), 105; Dunnock v. Dunnock,

If the plaintiff doubts his title to the relief he wishes to pray, he may frame his bill with a double aspect, to have either one relief or the other, as the court may decide.[1] The prayer should point out with reasonable clearness the relief sought, and should not be multifarious, i.e., combine distinct claims against the same defendant or unite in the same suit several defendants, some of whom are unconnected with a great portion of the case.[2] The objection to a misjoinder of claims is that the defendant would be compellable to unite unconnected matters in his answer, and the proofs applicable to each would be liable to confusion; delays would be caused, and different decrees might be required. The rule, however, is for convenience merely, and may be dispensed with if the claims are so connected that a single suit is more con-

3 Md. Ch. 140; Hitch v. Davis. 3 Md. Ch. 266; Land v. Cowan, 19 Ala. 297; Cawley v. Poole, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 50; Cloud v. Whitman, 2 Del. Ch. 23; Appeal of Passyunk Bdg. Assoc., 83 Pa. St. 44; Lingan v. Henderson, 1 Bland (Md.), 251; McGlothlin v. Hemery, 44 Mo. 350; Kirksey v. Means, 42 Ala. 426; Miltenberger v. Morrison, 39 Mo. 71; Bailey v. Burton, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 339; Slemmer's App., 8 Smith (Pa.), 155. See also Pensacola R. v. Spratt, 12 Fla. 26.

In Galloway v. Galloway, 58 Tenn. 328, it was held that an account might be granted under the prayer for general relief, though not prayed for specifically.

1. Adams Eq. *309; Story Eq. Pl. § 42; Strange v. Watson, 11 Ala. 324; Colton v. Ross, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 396; Foster v. Cook, 1 Hawks (N. C.), 509; Lingan v. Henderson, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 252; McConnell v. McConnell, 11 Vt. 290; Pensenneau v. Pensenneau, 22 Mo. 27; Foulkes v. Davies, L. R. 7 Eq. 42; Collins v. Knight, 3 Tenn. Ch. 183; Polhemus v. Emson, 29 N. J. Eq. 583; Terry v. Rosell, 32 Ark. 478; Gordon v. Ross, 63 Ala. 363.

If the kind of relief depends upon the existence of a fact of which complainant is ignorant, the prayer may be framed so as to obtain the appropriate relief as the fact shall appear at the hearing. Lloyd v. Brewster, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 537; McCosker v. Brady, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Durling v. Hammar, 20 N. J. Eq. 220.

2. Adams Eq. *309; Story Eq. Pl. §§ 271–286.

The determination of the question rests in the judicial discretion, and depends on the circumstances of each case. Lewis v. St. Albans Steel Co., 50 Vt. 477; Warren v. Warren, 56 Me. 360; Eastman v. Savings Bank, 58 N. H. 421.

A bill is multifarious where there is a misjoinder of distinct and independent causes of action. Brady v. McCosker, 1 Comst. (N. Y.) 221; Carmichael v. Browder, 3 How. (Miss.) 252; Savage v. Benham, 17 Ala. 119; Marshall v. Means, 12 Ga. 61. See also Canley v. Lawson, 5 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 132; Allen v. Miller, 4 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 146; Hughes v. Cook, 34 Beav. 407; Bent v. Yardley, 2 Hem. & M. 602; Taylor v. King, 32 Mich. 42; Bonck v. Bonck, L. R. 2 Eq. 19; Cumberland Valley R.'s Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 218.

In Daniel v. Morrison's Ex'r, 6 Dana (Ky.), it was held that unconnected demands against different estates could not be united in the same bill against the executor of both estates. See also Griffin v. Morrell, 10 Md. 364; Carter v. Treadwell, 3 Story (C. C.), 25; Bryan v. Blythe, 4 Blackf. (C. C.) 249; Davone v. Fanning, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 196; May v. Smith, 1 Busb. Eq. (N. C.) 196; Carter v. Balfour, 19 Ala. 814.

In Arnold v. Arnold, 11 W. Va. 449, a bill by four of the children of a deceased grantor to set aside six deeds of property made by their father at one time to his six other children, alleged to have been procured by undue influence, held not multifarious.

The fact that the bill is filed to obtain the direction of the court will not authorize the joining of defendants for relief as to independent transactions with which many of them have no necessary connection or interest. Clay v. Gurley, 62 Ala. 14.

In Stuart v. Blair, 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 141, a bill for an account of expenditure of taxes under order of court, and for an injunction to prevent the removal of the county seat under an unconstitutional act, held multifarious. See also State v. Brown, 58 Miss. 835; Bobb v. Bobb, 8 Mo. App. 257; Robinson v. Robinson, 73 Me. 170.

venient.[1] The question whether a prayer is multifarious by reason of joining as defendant in the suit a person who is unconnected with a large portion of the case is also within the discretion of the court.[2]

Prayer for Process.—The prayer for process is the last part of the bill, and asks that a subpœna may issue directed to the defendant, and requiring him to appear and answer the bill, and to abide by the decree when made. Any other writ wanted, e.g., of injunction or of ne exeat regno, is asked for in the prayer for process, which is followed by a note specifying the interrogatories which each defendant is required to answer.[3]

Signing.—The bill should be signed by counsel.[4]

1. Adams Eq. *309-10.

In Hinton et al. Exr's v. Cole, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 656, a bill by executors against a devisee charged that they had disbursed their private funds in the payment of the debts of the estate, that they had improved the estate, and that they had claims against the devisee, and prayed an adjustment of these matters and a sale of the real estate for the satisfaction of the debts due themselves and others. Held, not multifarious. See also Whitney v. Whitney, 5 Dana (Ky.), 327; Carroll v. Roosevelt, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 211; Dunn v. Cooper, 3 Md. Ch. 46.

In Sanderson v. Sanderson, 17 Fla. 820, a bill by distributors against two administrators for mismanagement on the part of one, and an account from both, embracing in the demand a debt alleged to be due the estate by one of the defendant, held not multifarious.

In Goodwin v. Goodwin, 69 Mo. 617, a bill to compel a trustee to account, to remove him, and appoint a new one, held not multifarious. See also Sapp v. Phelps, 92 Ill. 588; Miller v. Balt. Co. Marble Co., 52 Md. 642; Petty v. Fogle, 16 W. Va. 497; Simpson v. Wallace, 83 N. C. 477; Woodruff v. Young, 43 Mich. 548.

In Baird v. Jackson, 98 Ill. 78, a bill praying a partition of parcels of land held by different claimants, and to have forged deeds in plaintiff's name set aside, held not multifarious.

2. Adams Eq. *310; Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. (U. S.) 333; Marshall v. Means, 12 Ga. 61; Butler v. Spann, 27 Miss. 234; Fogg v. Rogers, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 290.

In Fleming v. Gilmer, 35 Ala. 62, a bill filed by a married woman against the executor and sole legatee of her deceased trustee, seeking from the executor an account of the hire and profits of the trust property during his own possession and that of his testator, and from the legatee an account of the hire and profits during his possession, with the property itself, and also the appointment of another trustee, was held not multifarious. See also Warren v. Warren, 56 Me. 368.

In Chase v. Searles, 45 N. H. 520, a bill by an execution creditor against his debtor and several persons to whom he had conveyed distinct parcels of land, out of which plaintiff sought satisfaction of his debt, was held not multifarious. See also on this point Newland v. Rogers, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 432; Ryan v. Shawneytown, 14 Ill. 20; Stuart's Heirs v. Coalter, 4 Rand. (Va.) 74; Coe v. Turner, 5 Conn. 86; Boyd v. Hoyt, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 65; Swift v. Eckford, 6 Paige (N. Y.), 22; Jackson v. Forrest, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 566; Silcox v. Nelson, 1 Ga. Decis. 24; Johnson v. Brown, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 327; Clamorgan v. Guisse, 1 Miss. 141; Ingersoll v. Kirkby, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 65; Nail v. Mobley, 9 Ga. 278; Felder v. Davis, 17 Ala. 418; Ayers v. Wright, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 229; New England Bank v. Newport Steam Factory Co., 6 R. I. 154; Williams v. Neel, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 338; Hunton v. Platt, 11 Mich. 264; Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 139; Metcalf v. Cady, 8 Allen (Mass.), 587; Waller v. Taylor, 42 Ala. 297; Kennebec R. v. Portland, 54 Me. 173; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420; Oliva v. Bonaforza, 31 N. J. Eq. 395.

3. Adams Eq. *311.

A prayer for process "against the said defendants," without naming any person, if it does not appear elsewhere in the bill who are referred to, is defective. Howe v. Robins, 36 N. J. Eq. 19.

A bill is not necessarily defective because it does not contain a prayer for process. Alley v. Quinter, 4 MacArthur (D. C.), 390.

4. Story Eq. Pl. § 47; Rules of Eq., U. S., Rule 24; Carey v. Hatch, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 190.

A bill purporting to be brought by ten persons, named as plaintiffs, but signed

4. The Different Kinds of Bills.—Bills are divided into (1) original bills, which relate to some matter not before litigated in the court by the same persons standing in the same interests; (2) bills not original, which relate to some matter already litigated in the court by the same persons, and which are either an addition to or a continuance of an original bill, or both.[1] Original bills are divided into those which pray relief, i.e., seek a decision upon the whole merits of the case as set forth by the plaintiff, and a decree which shall ascertain and protect present rights or redress past wrongs. All other bills, asking aid against possible future injury or to support or defend a suit in another court of ordinary jurisdiction, are bills not for relief.[2] Original bills praying relief are of three kinds: (1) Those which pray a decree touching some right claimed by the plaintiff in opposition to some right claimed by the defendant or touching some wrong done in violation of the plaintiff's right; (2) bills of interpleader, which pray a decree touching the rights of plaintiff and defendant, for the safety of the plaintiff; (3) bills of certiorari, praying a writ of certiorari for the removal of a cause from an inferior to a superior court of equity: this bill is rarely used.[3] Original bills not praying relief are: (1) bills to perpetuate testimony or to examine witnesses de bene esse; (2) bills of discovery.[4] Bills not original are (1) an addition to or continuance of an original bill, which are divided into (a) supplemental bills, (b) bills of revivor, (c) bills of revivor and supplement, and (2) bills for the purpose of cross litigation, or of controverting, suspending, or reversing some decree or order of court, or carrying it into execution; which are divided into (a) cross-bills, (b) bills of review, (c) bills to impeach a decree on the ground of fraud, (d) bills to suspend the operation of a decree or to avoid it on the ground of matter arisen subsequent to it, (e) bills to carry a former decree into execution, (f) bills in the nature of one or more of these bills.

5. Who are Proper Parties to a Bill.—As a general rule, all persons interested in the relief sought, who are not already joined as plaintiffs, should be made defendants, since a decree is asked which shall be a final settlement of the controversy.[6] The interests requiring joinder of those who are incidentally connected with the relief asked against others are of three kinds: (1) Interests in the subject-matter which the decree may affect, and for the protection of which the owners are joined;[7] concurrent claims with the only by two, is the bill of the two only. Chapman v. Banker & Tradesman Pub. Co , 128 Mass. 478. See also Stinson v. Hildrup, 8 Biss. (U. S.) Cir. Ct. 376; Eveland v. Stevenson, 45 Mich. 394.

A bill will not be dismissed as not signed where the signature of counsel appears on its back. Litton v. Armstead, 9 Baxter (Tenn.), 514.

1. Story Eq. Pl. § 16.

2. Story Eq. Pl. § 17.

3. Story Eq. Pl. § 18.

4. Story Eq. Pl. § 19.

5. Story Eq. Pl. §§ 20, 21; 1 Dan. C. P. 405–408.

6. Adams Eq. *312.

7. Adams Eq. *314.

All cotenants of land are necessary parties to a bill for partition. Borah v. Archer, 7 Dana (Ky.), 176; Newman v.

plaintiff, which, if not bound by the decree, may be afterwards litigated;[1] and (3) liability to exonerate the defendant, or to contribute with him to the plaintiff's claim.[2] In case the persons interested are too numerous or indefinite to be individually joined, the rule is modified so that one or more members of a class may sue or be sued on behalf of the whole, provided the interests of the absent members are identical with those of the members before the court.[3] Where persons interested are out of the jurisdiction of the court, the fact should be stated, and if substantiated at the hearing, their appearance will be dispensed with.[4]

Kendall, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 234. So also as to chattels. Ramey v. Green, 18 Ala. 771.

In Young v. Bilderback, 2 Green Ch. (N. J.), it was held that all the heirs must be parties to a bill by an heir to avoid the deed of the ancestor.

In Moore v. Murrah, 40 Ala. 573, it was held that in a bill for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land made by a deceased person his heirs must be made parties. To a bill for foreclosure and sale of mortgaged premises, all encumbrances or persons having an interest existing at the commencement of the suit, subsequent as well as prior in date to the plaintiff's mortgage must be made parties. Haines v. Beach, 3 John's Ch. (N. Y.) 459; Porter v. Clements, 3 Ark. 364; Huggins v. Hall, 10 Ala. 283. See also Youngman v. Elmira & W. R., 65 Pa. St. 278.

1. Adams Eq. *317.

This is illustrated by cases in which plaintiff sues on an equitable title, and the legal title is vested in a trustee for him. The trustee must be made a party, since he has a legal right against the defendant, which would not otherwise be bound. Malin v. Malin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 238; Cassiday v. McDaniel, 8 B. Monr. (Ky.) 519; Carter v. Jones, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 196; Everett v. Winn, 1 Sm. & M. Ch. (Miss.) 67; McKinley v. Irwin, 13 Ala. 681; Swan v. Dent, 2 Md. Ch. 111; Sayre v. Sayre, 2 Green (N. J.), 349.

The assignor of a debt or other chose in action must be joined as a party in a suit therenn by the assignee. Walburn v. Ingilby, 1 M. & K. 61. See also Thompson v. McDonald, 2 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. C.), 463; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 4 Strob. Eq. (S. C.) 207; Montague v. Lobdell, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 111; Bell v. Schrock, 2 B. Monr. (Ky.) 29; Beals v. Cobb, 51 Me. 348.

The assignor of a judgment is a necessary party to a bill by the assignee thereof. McKinney v. Rutherford, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. C.) 14; Elliott v. Waring, 5 Monr. (Ky.) 338. See also Morey v. Forsyth, Walk. Ch. (Miss.) 465.

The assignor of a note in controversy who has no interest in it and against whom no relief is prayed, is not a necessary party. Everett v. Winn, 1 Sm. & M. Ch. (Miss.) 67. See also Polk v. Gallant, 2 Dev. & Bat. Eq. 395; James River Co. v. Littlejohn, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 53; Cole v. Lake Co., 54 N. H. 242; Walker v. Brooks, 125 Mass. 241; Jameson v. Myles, 7 W. Va. 311; Omohundro v. Henson, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 511)

2. Adams Eq. *319.

Co-obligors on a bond are all necessary parties in a suit thereon. Bland v. Winter, 1 S. & S. 246. See also Pollard v. Collier, 8 Ham. (Ohio) 43.

Formerly a bill could not be filed against a surety without joining the principal, but, now, if plaintiff's demand be several as well as joint, he may proceed against both or either. See 32d order of August, 1841, and Rules of Eq. U. S. Courts, Rule 51; Roane v. Pickett, 2 English (Ark.), 510; Hart v. Coffee, 4 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 322; Vilas v. Jones, 1 Comst. (N. Y.) 284

3. Adams Eq. *320; Clements v. Bowes, 1 Drewr. 684; McBride v. Lindsay, 9 Hare, 574; Long v. Storie, 22 L. J. Ch. 200; Salomons v. Laing, 12 Beav. 377; Harmer v. Gooding, 3 De G. & Sm. 407; Carey v. Hoxey, 11 Ga. 645; Putnam v. Sweet, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 287; Hill v. Commissioners, 1 Pars. Eq. (Pa.) 501; Smith v. Swormstekt, 16 How. U. S. 288; Whitney v. Mayo, 15 Ill. 251; Thornton v. Hightown, 17 Ga. 1; Stimson v. Lewis, 36 Vt. 91; Hendrix v. Money, 1 Bush (Ky.). 306; Davis v. Clabaugh, 30 Md. 508; Douglass Co. v. Walbridge, 38 Wis. 179.

4. Adams Eq. *322; Burton v. Eggington, 1 Hare, 488; Munoz v. De Mastet,

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS. (See also APPEAL; AUDITA QUERELA; CERTIORARI; ERROR; JUDGMENT; NEW TRIAL.)

1. Definition.—A bill of exceptions is a statement in writing of an objection made by a party to the decision of the court on a point of law, clearly stating the objection, with the facts and circumstances upon which it is founded, and, in order to attest its accuracy, signed and sealed by the judge or court who made the decision; the object thereof being to put the decision objected to upon record for the information of the court having cognizance of the cause in error.[1]

2. History.—At common law the only objections that could be taken to errors in law were to those which appeared on the face of the record proper, consisting ordinarily of the process, pleadings, verdict and judgment. The evidence and the rulings on questions relating thereto not appearing on the record, no objections as to admissibility, competency, the charge, etc., could be considered. But by Stat. Westm. 2 (13 E. I. c. 31) it was provided that "when one impleaded before any of the justices alleges an exception praying they will allow it; and if they will not, if he that alleges the exception writes the same, and requires the justices will put to their seals, the justices shall so do; and, if one will not, another shall; and if, upon complaint made of the justice, the king cause the record to come before him, and the exception be not found in the roll, and the plaintiff show the written exception, with the seal of the justices thereto put, the justice shall be commanded to appear at a certain day, either to confess or deny his seal; and if he cannot deny his seal, they shall proceed to judgment according to the exception, as it ought to be allowed or disallowed."[2] Bills of exceptions are a part of the procedure in all States governed in their jurisprudence by the principles of the common law.[3] But they have been abolished in England.[4]

3. Where it Lies.—It lies generally, as has been said, to errors of law alleged by the counsel taking the exceptions to have been made during the course of the trial or in relation thereto by the

1 Beav. 109; Spivey v. Jenkins, 1 Ired. Eq (N. C.) 126; Milligan v. Milledge, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 220; Lainhart v. Reilly, 3 Dessaus. (S. C.), 590; Rule 47, U. S. Courts in Eq.; Eller v. Bergling, 3 MacArthur (D. C.), 189.

Authorities for Bill in Equity.—Story's Equity Pleading; Langdell's Equity Pleading; Adams' Equity.

1. Powell on App. Proc. 211.
2. Bac. Abr., tit. "Bill of Exc."
3. Endicot v. Petitioner, 24 Pick. 339; Courser v. Vermont Central R. Co., 25 Vt. 476; Ohio Code, §§ 291–295; Wheeler v. Winn, 53 Pa. St. 122; Seibright v. State, 2 W. Va. 591.
4. By the Sup. Ct. of Judic. Act, 1873, 36 and 37 Vict. c. 66.

judge in deciding incidental questions or in his charge to the jury, and, in some of the States, by statute or rule of law, to the decision of the court on a motion for a new trial.[1] The errors are such as may have been made in deciding as to the admissibility and competency of evidence;[2] in orders made upon incidental matters unfavorable to the party excepting;[3] in instructions to or refusing to instruct the jury;[4] in accepting or rejecting witnesses,[5] etc.

4. Where it Does Not Lie.—It does not lie, or at least is unnecessary, where the record itself shows the matter and the decision of the court thereon, as to judgment upon a demurrer or on certain motions founded upon the record.[6] Nor will it lie to a decision on a matter discretionary with the court;[7] nor to the finding of a court on questions of fact submitted to it;[8] nor

1. Johnson v. State, 43 Ark. 391; Allen v Levy, 59 Miss. 613; Munde v. Lambie, 125 Mass. 367. Compare Eidemiller v. Kump, 61 Mo. 340. But see Com. v. Morrison, 134 Mass. 189; Burke v. Young, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 383.

2. Clemson v. Kruper, 2 Ill. (1 Breese) 62; Storer v. White, 7 Mass. 448; Foster v. Mackay, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 531; Keyes v. Throop, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 276.

Where the refusal of evidence is excepted to, and the evidence is afterwards admitted, the rejection ceases to be a ground of objection. Massey v. Walker, 10 Ala. 288; Ligget v. Bank of Penn., 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 219.

The admission of immaterial testimony is no ground of exceptions. Flint v. Rogers, 15 Me. 67; Fowler v. Middlesex, 6 Allen (Mass.), 92.

3 Purple v. Clark, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 206.

As where a nonsuit is ordered. Feyler v. Feyler, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 310. See also, Heffron v. State, 8 Fla. 73; Syme v. Butler, 1 Call (Va.), 123.

4. Douglass v. M'Allister, 3 Cranch (U. S.), 300; Fletcher v. Howard, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 115; Exp. Bailey, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 479; Gilmore v. McNeil, 45 Me. 399; Sowerwein v. Jones, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 335; Com. v. Packard, 5 Gray (Mass.), 101; Forest v. Crenshaw, 81 Ky. 51. But see McKinsey v. McKee (Ind.), 9 N. E. Rep. 771.

But not where they operate in favor of the party excepting. March v. Portsmouth, etc., R. Co., 19 N. H. 372; Bailey v. Campbell, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 47.

The entry of the clerk on the order-book that the court instructed the jury to return the following verdict (setting it out) will not take the place of a bill of exceptions. Hall v. Durham (Ind.), 9 N. E. Rep. 926.

5. Marquand v. Webb, 16 Johns. (N.Y.) 89; Powell v. Waters, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 669.

6. Hamlin v. Reynolds, 22 Ill. 207; Com. Bank v. Buckingham, 12 Ohio St. 402. But see Fox v. Monticello, 83 Ind. 483; Powell on App. Pro. 211, 215.

Nor where the record shows fatal error, as want of jurisdiction. Fields v. Maloney, 78 Mo. 172.

7. Reynard v. Brecknell, 4 Pick (Mass.) 302; Moody v. Henckley, 34 Me. 200; Thayer v. Elliott, 16 N. H. 102; Jenkins v. Brown, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 454; Edwards v. Hopkins, 5 R. I. 138; Fairfield v. King, 41 Vt. 611.

As to the granting or refusing of amendments. Bruce v. Fairbanks, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 273; Binney v. Spring, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 470.

Or the refusal of a nonsuit. Ballentine v. White, 77 Pa. St. 20.

But refusal to set aside a judgment of compulsory nonsuit is in Pennsylvania the subject of exception. Act 11, Mar. 1875, P. L. 6.

So also a refusal to order a judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defence. Act Apr. 18, 1874, 6 P. L. 64.

To questions of continuance. People v. Colt, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 432; Caldwell v. Cole, 13 Me. 120. But see Murphy v. Simonds, 14 La. Ann. 322; Harrison v. Cotton, 25 Tex. 53.

To matters having reference to the conduct of the trial, as the order in which witnesses are called or the number of them. Cushing v. Billings, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 158.

8. Lansing v. Wiswall, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 213; Emerson v. Young, 18 Vt. 603; Kettell v. Foote, 3 Allen (Mass.), 212; Doe v. Shraggins, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 330; to comments upon evidence not involving direction in matter of law.[1]

5. What it should Contain.—It should set forth the facts on which the adjudication to be reviewed is founded, and only those to which the decision applies,[2] except in special cases, on questions depending upon the evidence, as where the exception is to the overruling of a motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence.[3] On these cases the whole evidence must be set out with an averment that it is all the evidence.[4] The error must be set forth distinctly, and must appear to be prejudicial to the party excepting.[5] Exceptions should not be made to the judge's charge generally, if any portion thereof is correct, but the special portions objected to should be specified.[6] Documents referred to in the bill, an understanding of which is essential to the court of appeal in coming to a decision on the errors excepted to, should be annexed to the bill and made a part thereof, or else so particularly described as to render their identity conclusive.[7]

6. When it must be Taken.—Technically speaking, it should be

Fletcher v. Clarke, 29 Me. 485; Norwich, etc., R. Co. v. Kay, 22 Conn. 603. Compare Stearns v. Fiske, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 24.

1. Loud v. Pierce, 25 Me. 233; Donnelly v. State, 26 N. J. L. 463; Curl v. Lowell, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 25; Sawyer v. Phaley, 33 Vt. 69; Crawford v. Wilson, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 504.

2. Wallace v. Boston, 10 Mo. 660; Muirhead v. Muirhead, 16 Miss. 211; Hamilton v. Moore, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 570. See Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 15.

3. Hopkins v. Dowd, 11 Ark. 627; Swain v. Cawood, 2 Cam. (Ill.) 505; Buckmaster v. Cool, 12 Ill. 74; Lurton v. Carson, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 464.

4. Nay v. Byers, 13 Ind. 412; Barnes v. Blackistow, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 376; Fuller v. Ruby, 10 Gray (Mass.), 285; Snowden v. Warder, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 101; Ballentine v. State (Ark.), 2 S. W. Rep. 340; Fellenzer v. Van Valzah, 95 Ind. 128.

In the absence of such an averment, the appellate court may indulge any reasonable presumption that other evidence was given, of a character to support the decision or verdict. Pullen v. Lane, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 249; Southern, etc., Ins. Co. v. Holcombe, 35 Ala. 327; Ingram v. State, 7 Mo. 293; Wolf v. Hanver, 1 Gill (Md.), 84; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Murdock, 82 Ind. 381.

And the averment will be disregarded where an omission is apparent. Collins v. Collins, 100 Ind. 266; Cosgrove v. Cosby, 86 Ind. 511.

5. Taylor v. Flint, 35 Ga. 124; Hoyt v. Williams, 41 Mo. 270; State v. Cowan, 7 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 239; Armstrong v. Clark, 17 Ohio, 495; Webster v. Calden, 55 Me. 165; Fry v. Bennett, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 200; Holmes v. Gayle. 1 Ala. 517; Tipper v. Com., 1 Metc. (Ky.) 6; State v. Bennett, 75 Me. 590.

6. Cronk v. Canfield, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 171; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580; Oliver v. Philips, 21 N. J. L. 597; Mobile & Mont'y R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584.

This is especially provided for in Rules of Sup. Ct. U. S. r. 4, p. 8.

A general exception is of no effect if any portion of the charge be correct. Cooper v. Schesinger, 111 U. S. 148; Smith v. Sweeney, 69 Ala, 524.

7. Taylor v. Spears, 8 Ark. 429; Keith v. Hirschberg Optical Co. (Ark.), 2 S. W. Rep. 777; Quigley v. Campbell, 12 Ala. 58; Pearce v. Clements, 73 Ala. 256; M'Laughlin v. Walsh, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 185; Humphrey v. Burge, 1 Greene (Iowa), 223; Reed v. Hubbard, 1 Greene (Iowa), 153; Walrath v. Viley. 1 Bush (Ky.), 266; Wright v. Bank of Ala., 14 Miss. 251; Stafford v. Stafford, 27 Pa. St. 144; Vaughn v. Mills, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 633; Acheson v. Sutliff, 18 Ohio, 122; Fish v. Benson (Cal.), 12 Pac. Rep. 454; Joyner v. Van Alstyne (Neb.), 30 N. W. Rep. 944; Shimer v. Butler Un'y, 87 Ind. 218.

presented to the judge at the time of the decision excepted to,[1] but usually it is in time if reduced to form at any time during the trial term.[2] In practice, the judge is requested to note down the exception at the time the decision is given, and afterwards the bill is made out and handed to him for any corrections or amendments he may suggest at some time during the term.[3]

7. Formal Requisites.—The bill, if a proper one, should be signed and sealed by the trial judge,[4] and he may be compelled thereto in case of refusal by mandamus.[5] The time within which this and the subsequent filing and serving may be done depends to a great extent on statute or rule of court in the different States.[6]

8. Waiver.—It has been decided in some of the States that a party waives his bill of exceptions by subsequently moving for a new trial and not inserting his exceptions in the motion.[7] But in

1. Low v. Goldsmith, R. M. Charlt. (Ga.) 288; Armstrong v. Mock, 17 Ill. 166; Joannes v. Underwood, 6 Allen (Mass.), 241; Croft v. Ferrell, 21 Ala. 351; Vance v. Cowing, 13 Ind. 460; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Risley, 14 Md. 424; Mattingville v. Moranville, 11 Mo. 604.

If reduced to form after the trial it should be signed nunc pro tunc, and purport on its face to be the same as if actually reduced to form and signed during the trial. Walton v. U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 651.

2. Byrd v. Tucker, 3 Ark. 451; Wilcox v. Mitchell, 5 Miss. 272; Ligget v. Bank of Pa., 7 S. & R (Pa.) 219; Camp v. Tompkins, 9 Conn. 545; Walton v. U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 651; Brown v. Clarke, 4 How. (U. S.) 4; Sweet v. Perkins, 24 Fed. Rep. 777; Marye v. Strouse, 6 Sawy. C. Ct. (U. S.) 204. See Nyce v. Shaffer (Neb.), 30 N. W. Rep. 943; Huff v. Brantley, 66 Ga. 599.

3. Powell on App. Proc. 222; State v. Powers, 14 Ga. 388; Shepard v. Hull, 42 Me. 577; Busby v. Finn, 1 Ohio St 409; State v. Laliyer, 4 Minn. 368; Longworth v. Higham, 89 Ind. 352; Holle v. Foltz, 74 Ind. 54; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Bond, 13 Ill. App. 328. Compare Dean v. Gridley, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 254; Ash v. Marlow, 20 Ohio, 119; Frasier v. Laughlin, 6 Ill. 185.

After sealing by the court and adjournment the bill cannot be altered or amended by the judge. Branch Bank v. Kinsey, 5 Ala. 9; Dudley v. Chilton Co., 66 Ala. 593.

4. If the bill contain matter false or untruly stated the judges are not obliged to affix their seals, for that would be to command them to attest a falsity. Bull, N. P. 316; 3 Bl. Com. 362. See, as to signing and sealing, Morse v. Evans, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 445; Donnelly v. State, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 463; Gordon v. Browne, 3 H. & M. (Va.) 219; Clark v. Johnson, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 246; Darling v. Gill, Wright (O.), 73; Thompson v. Backenstos, 1 Oreg. 17; Riker v. Scofield, 6 W. 367.

5. People v. Judges of Wash'n, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 511; 2 Caines (N. Y.), 96. See, contra, Conrow v. Schloss, 55 Pa. St. 28, where it was held that the remedy was by a special writ on the Stat. West. 2, setting forth the circumstances of the case, and commanding the judge, if they be true, to affix his seal; if in his return he confess the fact and seal the bill the exceptions become a part of the record; if he deny them, the party has his action for a false return.

6. See Wood v. Brown, 8 Ala. 563; Truluck v. Peeples, 1 Ga. 1; Bush v. Keaton, 65 Ga. 296; Ill. R. Co. v. Palmer, 24 Ill. 43; People v. Blades, 10 Ill. App. 17; Ex parte Gwartney, 27 Ind. 189; Joseph v. Mather (Ind.), 10 N. Eastn. Repr. 78; Colee v. State, 75 Ind. 511; Corlev v. Evans, 4 Bush (Ky.), 499; Meaux v. Meaux, 81 Ky. 475; Nesbitt v. Dallam, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 494; Brown v. Bissell, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 273; Gray v. Thomas, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 111; Hassinger v. Pye, 10 Mo. 156; Givens v. Van Studdiford, 13 Mo. App. 168; Spencer v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 79 Mo. 500; Agnew v. Campbell, 2 Harr. (N. J. L.) 291; Sikes v. Ransom, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 279; Kirkpatrick v. Lex, 49 Pa. St. 122; State v. Gale, 7 Wis. 693; Burdick v. Briggs, 11 Wis. 124; Clement v. State (Tex.) 2 S. W. Rep. 379; Farrar v. Bates, 55 Tex. 193.

7. Bixby v. State, 15 Ark. 395; Ferguson v. Ehrenberg, 39 Ark. 420; Sec-

other States a motion for a new trial is no waiver of the bill.[1] A bill will not be sustained where the party's subsequent course is inconsistent with his prior exceptions, nor where the proceedings excepted to took place by his request or with his assent.[2]

9. Effect of.—The bill of exceptions does not of itself operate as a stay of proceedings.[3] It draws into examination only the specific points to which the attention of the court is directed by their having been subjects of exception.[4] It is conclusive evidence as between the parties, but in that particular suit only, of the facts stated therein;[5] but the omission of facts which should have appeared upon the record cannot be remedied by a bill of exceptions afterwards filed in the case.[6]

10. Construction of.—Error must be made to appear affirmatively by the bill,[7] and where there are two possible constructions that one will be taken which is most favorable to the validity of the judgment in the court below;[8] and it is a general principle that the bill will be taken most strongly against the party taking the exceptions.[9]

11. In Criminal Cases.—Formerly the right to a bill of exceptions did not exist in criminal proceedings, except in cases of misdemeanor which did not amount to treason or felony.[10] The right to a bill on the part of the defendant now, however, exists in most of the States, though not generally on the part of the State.[11]

BILL OF EXCHANGE. See BILLS AND NOTES.

BILL OF INFORMATION. See CRIMINAL LAW; INDICTMENT; INFORMATION.

BILL OF INTERPLEADER. See INTERPLEADER.

comb v. Prov. Ins. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.), 152.

1. West v. Cunningham, 9 Port. (Ala.) 104; U. S. v. Hodge, 6 How. (U. S.) 279.

2. Nixon v. Hammond, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 285; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 264; Random v. Toby, 11 How. (U. S.) 493; Merriman v. McManus, 102 Pa. St. 102.

3. Seymour v. Slocum, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 509; Holcombe v. Roberts, 19 Ga. 588; Irwin v. Jackson, 34 Ga. 101.

4. Frier v. Jackson, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 495; Bull N. P. 316.

5. Law v. Merrills, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 276; Shotwell v. Hamblin, 23 Miss. 156; Bingham v. Cabbot, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 38.

6. Bowen v. State of Indiana, 6 West. Rep. 897, where the record, failing to disclose that a plea to an indictment had been entered, was held to show on its face a mistrial, and not to be helped by a recital in the bill of exceptions that "not guilty" was pleaded.

7. Robin v. State, 40 Ala. 72; Poultney v. Glover, 23 Vt. 328; Bingham v. Cabbot, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 38; Doebler v. Waters, 30 Ga. 344; Higgins v. Downs, 75 Me. 346.

8. McReynolds v. Jones, 30 Ala. 101.

9. Thompson v. Drake, 32 Ala. 99; Rogers v. Hall, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 5.

10 1 Bac. Abr. 528; Hill. N. Trials, 93 §§ 6 and 6a; Com. v. Cummings, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 212.

11. 3 Whart. Cr. L. § 3050; 1 Bish. Cr. L. §§ 840–1; U. S. v. More, 3 Cranch (U. S.), 174; State v. Johnson, 2 Iowa, 549; State v. Jones, 7 Ga. 422; People v. Coming, 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 1; Com. v. Cummings, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 212. But see Fife v. Com., 29 Pa. St. 429; State v. Buchanan, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 317. See in general Powell on Appellate Proceedings, chap. 5; Bacon's Abr., "Bill of Exceptions;" Troub. & Hal. Pr. §§ 694–701

BILL OF LADING. (See also ACT OF GOD; CARRIERS; CONTRACTS; NEGLIGENCE; SALES; STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU; SHIPPING.)

(For the topics Freight, Stoppage in transitu, Delivery to Consignee, Delivery to Carrier, Connecting Carriers, Negligence, and Actions against Carriers, etc., etc., see CARRIERS.)

1. Definition.—A bill of lading has been judicially defined to be "a written acknowledgment, signed by the master, that he has received the goods therein described from the shipper, to be transported, on the terms therein expressed, to the described place of destination, and there to be delivered to the consignee or parties therein designated."[1] Again, it has been defined to be "a formal acknowledgment of the receipt of goods, and an engagement to deliver them to the consignee or his assigns."[2] The Indian Stamp Act, 1 of 1879, sec. 3, cl. 3, defines a bill of lading to be

1. The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579, opinion of Clifford, J.

2. Cope v. Cordova, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 203. For other judicial definitions, see Empire Transportation Co. v. Wallace, 68 Pa. St. 302; Merchants' Bank v. Hewitt, 3 Iowa, 93; Covill v. Hill, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 323.

"any instrument signed by the owner of a vessel or his agent, acknowledging the receipt of goods therein described, and undertaking to deliver the same at a place and to a person therein mentioned or indicated." [1]

2. The Bill of Lading as a Receipt.—A bill of lading is a receipt for the goods shipped; and, as between the original parties to it, is prima-facie evidence of the truth of the statements contained in it. Its recitals are, however, susceptible of explanation, modification, and contradiction by parol proof.[2] It is competent for the carrier to show that the shipper had no such goods as those receipted for, or that, having the goods, they were never delivered to the carrier.[3]

Receipt Evidence of Actual Delivery.—The bill is prima-facie evidence of the actual delivery of the goods to the carrier.[4] If a bill of lading, through inadvertence or otherwise, be signed before the goods are actually shipped, and afterwards certain goods are delivered to the carrier as and for the goods receipted for, the bill will operate on these goods as between the shipper and the carrier by way of relation and estoppel.[5]

Receipt for Goods Improperly Described.—When a misdescription of the goods covered by the bill injuriously affects the rights of the parties, the consequences must ordinarily fall upon him who has made the misdescription.[6]

1. A "clean" bill of lading is one issued for the transportation of goods by water, which is silent as to the mode of stowing the goods. Such a bill imports that the goods are to be carried under deck, and has the same effect as an express agreement that they shall be so carried. The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579; Creery v. Holly, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 26.

2. Cox v. Peterson, 30 Ala. 608; Wayland v. Mosely, 5 Ala. 430; Myer v. Peck, 28 N. Y. 590; O'Brien v. Gilchrist, 34 Me. 554; Cafiero v. Welsh, 8 Phil. Rep. (Pa.) 130; Steamer Wisconsin v. Young, 3 Green (Iowa), 268; The Lady Franklin, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 325; Glass v. Goldsmith, 22 Wis. 488; Wood v. Perry, 1 Wright (Ohio), 240; Witzler v. Collins, 70 Me. 290; Kirkman v. Bowman, 8 Rob. (Ala.) 246; White v. Van Kirk, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 16; The J. W. Brown, 1 Bissell (C. C.), 76; Fitzhugh v. Wyman, 9 N. Y. 558; Fowler v. Stirling, 3 L. C. Jurist, 103. See also, contra, Peck v. Dinsmore, 4 Porter (Ala.), 212.

3. Berkley v. Watling, 7 Adolphus & Ellis, 29; The Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 Howard (U. S.), 182; The Delaware, 14 Wallace (U. S.), 579; Hubbersty v. Ward, 8 Ex. 330; Sears v. Wingate, 3 Allen (Mass.), 103; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkins, 44 Md. 11, The Lady Franklin, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 325; Ferne v. Richardson, 12 La. Ann. 752; Fragano v. Long, 4 B. & C. 219; Hunt v. M. C. R. Co. 29 La. Ann 446.

4. Flower v. Downs, 12 Rob. (La.) 101; Southern Express Co. v. Hess, 53 Ala. 19; Southern Express Co. v. Craft, 49 Miss. 480; Jones v. Walker, 5 Yerger (Tenn.). 427; Northern Trans. Co. v. McClary, 66 Ill. 233; Graham v. Penna. Insurance Co. 2 Wash. (C. C.) 113. The bill is not objectionable as evidence because it acknowledges the receipt of other goods besides those forming the subject-matter of the suit. Wallace v. Vigus, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 260.

5. Rowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 307; The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579; The Idaho, 3 Otto (U. S.), 575; The Brig Edwin, 1 Sprague (R. I.) 477.

6. Fassett v. Ruark, 3 La. Ann. 694; C. & A. R. Co. v. Shea, 66 Ill. 471; B. C. R. & N. R. Co. v. McCune, 52 Iowa, 600; N. J. R. & Trans. Co. v. P. R. Co., 3 Dutcher (N. J.), 100; Southern Exp. Co. v. Womac, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 256.

For cases in which goods have been improperly described, see C. & A. R. Co. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578; Amer. Exp. Co. v. Perkins, 42 Ill. 458; C. & A. R. Co. v. Shea, 66 Ill. 471; B. C. R. & N. R. Co. v. McCune, 52 Iowa. 600; Southern Exp. Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; McCoy v. E. & W. T. Co., 42 Md. 499.

Receipt for Specific Quantity and Weight.—Where the bill receipts for a specific quantity or specific weight, it is prima-facie evidence that the carrier received the quantity or weight named.[1]

Receipts for Goods of Specified Value.—As a general rule, the statement of value of a cargo in a bill of lading (without fraud) is conclusive between the owner of the cargo and the owner of a ship, in the adjustment of general average at the home port.[2] There is no obligation upon the shipper, when tendering goods for transportation, to inform the carrier of their value, unless he is asked to do so.[3]

Also, Hyde v. N. Y. & N. O. S. S. Co., 17 La. Ann. 29.

Baggage does not embrace samples of merchandise, or money, carried in a trunk, or other articles not usually carried as baggage. Hawkins v. Hoffman, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 586; But bank-bills have been held to be goods. Allen v. Sewell, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 327. See BAGGAGE.

Misdescription of the goods by the carrier is not binding on the shipper, and the carrier cannot, in such a case, shield himself behind the strict letter of the recital, where he recites generally, but with a knowledge of the contents. Harmon v. N. Y. & E. R. Co., 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 323; Bancroft v. Peters, 4 Mich. 619.

1. McLain v. Fleming, 2 L. T. N. S. 317; Hall v. G. T. R. Co., 34 Up. Can. Q. B. 517.

Such an acknowledgment is not, however, conclusively binding as between the original parties. Steamboat Wisconsin v. Young, 3 Green (Iowa), 268; Myer v. Peck, 28 N. Y. 590; Abbe v. Eaton, 51 N. Y. 411; Kirkman v. Bowman, 8 Rob. (La.) 246; Erb v. Keokuk Packet Co., 43 Mass. 53; The J. B. Brown, 1 Biss. 76; Goodrich v. Norris, Abbott's Adm. 196; L. R. & F. S. R. Co. v. Hall, 32 Ark. 669; Hall v. Mayo, 89 Mass. 454; Dean v. King, 22 Ohio State, 119; Manchester v. Milne, 1 Abbott's Adm. 115; Strong v. G. T. R. Co., 15 Mich. 206; Blanchet v. Powells Colliery Co., 9 L. R. Exch. 74; Bates v. Todd, 1 Moody & Rob. 106; Glass v. Goldsmith, 22 Wis. 488; Naugatuck R. Co. v. Beardsley Scythe Co., 33 Conn. 218; Lane v. B. & A. R. Co., 112 Mass. 455.

The onus of rebutting the presumption raised by the statement of quantity or weight rests upon the carrier. McLean v. Fleming, 2 L. T. N. S. 317; McCready v. Holmes, 6 Am. Law Reg. 229.

A custom to treat statement of quantity as conclusive has been held to be unreasonable and void. Strong v. G. T. R. Co., 15 Mich. 206.

But the statement may be made conclusive by the use of the words "Quantity guaranteed." Bissell v. Campbell, 54 N. Y. 353; Burne v. Weeks, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 372.

The use of the words "more or less" indicates that the carrier does not intend to be bound by the statement of quantity or weight, and that it is to be regarded as an estimate rather than an exact measurement. Kelley v. Bowker, 11 Gray (Mass.), 428; O'Brien v. Gilchrist, 34 Maine, 554; Shepherd v. Naylor, 5 Gray (Mass.), 591; Dean v. King, 22 Ohio St. 119; Winterport G. & B. Co. v. Schooner Jasper, 1 Holmes (C. C.), 99; Peebles v. B. & A. R. Co., 112 Mass. 498.

2. Putnam, J., in Tudor v. Macomber et al., 31 Mass. 34.

Where the carrier, knowing the value of the goods, fails to enter it in his receipt, he cannot rely upon a stipulation contained therein, limiting his liability to a specific amount (in reality less than the true value of the goods), because the value has not been declared by the shipper. Kember v. So. Exp. Co., 22 La. Ann. Rep. 158; So. Ex. Co. v. Newby, 36 Ga. 635; Stoneman v. Erie R. Co., 52 N. Y. 429.

3. Levois v. Gale, 17 La. Ann. Rep. 302; Phillips v. Earle, 25 Mass. 182; Brooke v. Pickwick, 4 Bing. 218; So. Exp. Co. v. Crook, 44 Ala. 468; Gorham Manuf. Co. v. Fargo, 45 How. Pr. 90; C. & A. R. Co. v. Baldeauf, 16 Pa. St. 67; Relf v. Rapp, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 21; Baldwin v. L. & G. W. S. S. Co., 74 N. Y. 125; Parmelee v. Lowitz, 74 Ill. 116; Warner v. West. Transp. Co., 5 Rob. (La.) 490; Merchants' Dispatch Trans. Co. v. Bowles, 80 Ill. 473.

If he be asked, he must answer truly. See foregoing authorities, and Boskowitz v. Adams Exp. Co., 5 Cent. Law Jour. 58; Green v. So. Exp. Co., 45 Ga. 305; Little v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 66 Maine, 239.

A concealment or a misleading answer may absolve the carrier from liability. Muser v. Amer. Exp. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 382;

Receipt "in Good Order and Condition."—The acknowledgment in the bill that the goods have been received "in good order and condition" refers to the external or to the apparent condition of the goods.[1] The statement of condition is not conclusive as between the original parties, but may be explained or contradicted by parol evidence.[2] The bill is, however, prima-facie evidence that, so far as the goods were visible, and open to inspection, Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatch. (C. C.) 64; Mather v. Amer. Exp. Co., 2 Fed. Rep. 49; H. & T. C. R. Co. v. Burke, 55 Tex. 323; Cole v. Goodwin, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 251; Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234.

The shipper must not deceive the carrier by concealing the value of the goods, nor delude him by a careless treatment of them, nor by the manner of shipping them. C. & A. R. Co. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578; H. & T. C. R. Co. v. Burke, 55 Tex. 323; Cooper v. Berry, 21 Ga. 526; Great Nor. R. Co. v. Shepherd, 14 Eng. Law and Equity Rep. 367; Lebeau v. Gen. Steam Nav. Co., 8 L. R. C. P. 88; Orndorff v. Adams Exp. Co., 3 Bush (Ky.), 194; Amer. Exp. Co. v. Perkins, 42 Ill. 458; Ernest v. Exp. Co., 1 Wood, 579; Coxe v. Heisley, 19 Pa. St. 243; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234; Everett v. So. Exp. Co., 46 Ga. 303; C. & C. R. Co. v. Marcus, 38 Ill. 219; Orange Co. Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 85.

Thus, the shipper must not mislead by sending a check indorsed in blank, in an ordinary letter. Hayes v. Wells, 23 Cal. 185.

By sending money in a package by an express company, whose rules the shipper knew required money to be put up and indorsed, and sealed in a particular way. St. John v. Exp. Co., 1 Woods, 612.

By sending money concealed in a bag of hay. Gibbons v. Paynton, 4 Burr, 2298.

Or in a box with articles of no value. C. & A. R. Co. v. Thompson, 19 Ill. 578; Magnin v. Dinsmore, 62 N. Y. 35; Ernest v. Exp. Co., 1 Woods, 573; Belger v. Dinsmore, 51 N. Y. 166.

Or by sending valuable jewelry or other merchandise as property of apparently small value. Everett v. So. Exp. Co., 46 Ga. 303; Everett v. So. Exp. Co., 37 Ga. 688; Oppenheimer v. U. S. Exp. Co., 69 Ill. 62; Pardee v. Drew, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 459.

Where money is transported under a bill containing the statement "Said to contain" a given amount, the recital is not even prima-facie evidence that the amount stated was received by the carrier. Fitzgerald v. Adams Exp. Co., 24 Ind. 447. See Weil v. Exp. Co., 7 Phila. Rep. (Pa.) 88.

1. Hastings v. Pepper, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 41; Nelson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.), 156; The Delaware, 14 Wall. 579; The Prosperino Palasso, 29 L. T. N. S. 622; West v. Steamer Berlin, 3 Iowa, 532; Currell v. Johnson, 12 La. 290; Moore v. Harris, 2 Que. L. Rep. 147; The Peter der Grosse, 34 L. T. N. S. 749; Vaughn v. 630 Casks Sherry Wine, 7 Bened. (C. C.) 506; Blaine v. Moller, 2 Cape of Good Hope, 133; Porter v. Robinson, 2 Cape of Good Hope, 16.

External appearance is not a true test of internal condition. Carson v. Harris, 4 Greene (Iowa), 516. And the clause of the bill can be applied to the latter only so far as may be inferred from the former. Keith v. Amende, 1 Bush. (Ky.) 455.

2. Mitchell v. U. S. Exp. Co., 46 Iowa, 214; Barrett v. Rogers, 7 Mass. 297; The Adriatic, 16 Blatchf. C. C. 424; Neilson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.), 156; Clark v. Barnwell, 12 How. (N. J.) 272; Hastings v. Pepper, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 41; C. & A. R. Co. v. Benjamin, 63 Ill. 283; Bradstreet v. Heron, 1 Abbott's Adm. 209; Richards v. Doe, 100 Mass. 524; Choate v. Crowninshield, 3 Cliff. (C. C.) 184; Ellis v. Willard, 9 N. Y. 529; Wetzler v. Collins, 70 Maine, 290.

It is competent to show by evidence aliunde that the goods were not in good order when shipped. Kimball v. Brander, 6 La. 711; Ship Howard v. Wiesman, 18 How. (U. S.) 231.

Or show that they were damaged before the carrier received them. O'Brien v. Gilchrist, 34 Maine, 554; Bissell v. Price, 16 Ill. 408.

Whether that damage was done by the shipper, or by any previous carrier. G. W. R. Co. v. McDonnald, 18 Ill. 172.

Or show that the casks in which liquids were shipped were unsound, or badly made, so as to cause leakage. Nelson v. Stephenson, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 538.

Or even that the carrier wished to receipt for the goods as in poor condition, but was not allowed to do so. Tierney v. N. Y. C. & H. R. Co., 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 538.

they were in good order and condition when shipped. The presumption thus raised throws the burden on the carrier of showing that the goods were not in the condition stated in his bill.[1]

Receipt Modified by Words "Contents Unknown" or Similar Phraseology.—If the carrier guards his acknowledgment of the receipt of the goods by saying "Contents unknown," he does not charge himself with the receipt of any goods in particular, and the bill is not evidence of the quantity or weight of the goods.[2]

Receipt and its Effect in Hands of Assignee for Value.—Generally speaking, where the bill of lading has come into the hands of a bona-fide assignee for a valuable consideration, and without notice, its recitals as to the quantity and quality of the goods shipped, their condition, the payment of freight, and the like, are conclusive upon the carrier signing it, and the terms of the bill may not be contradicted; the ground being that the superior equity is with the bona-fide assignee, who has parted with his money upon the faith of the recitals contained in the bill of lading.[3]

1. I. C. R. Co. v. Cowles, 32 Ill. 116; Tarbox v. East. S. B Co., 50 Me. 339; Breed v. Mitchell, 48 Ga. 533; Montgomery v. Ship Abbey Pratt, 6 La. Ann. 410; Hart v. Ship Jane Ross, 5 La. Ann. 264; Ship Rappahannock v. Woodruff, 11 La. Ann. 698; Whitney v. Gauche, 11 La. Ann. 432; Austin v. Talk, 20 Tex. 164; Richards v. Doe, 100 Mass. 524; Arend v. Liverpool S. B. Co., 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; Nelson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.), 156; The Adriatic, 16 Blatchf. (C. C.) 424; M. & W. P. R. v. Moore, 51 Ala. 394; Archer v. The Adriatic, 9 Cent. Law J. 201; Carson v. Harris, 4 G. Green, 516; Mitchell v. U. S. Exp. Co., 46 Iowa, 214; West v. The Berlin, 3 Iowa, 532; The Freedom, L. R. 3 P. C. 594; The Olbers, 3 Ben. 148; Vaughn v. 630 Casks, 7 Ben. (C. C.) 506; Price v. Powell, 3 N. Y. 322; C. & A. R. Co. v. Benjamin, 63 Ill. 283; The Ship Black Hawk, 9 Ben. (C. C.) 207; The Pacific, Deady, 17.

The insertion of the word "apparent" in regard to the good order and condition, does not change the legal effect of the clause. The Oriflamme, 1 Sawyer (C.C.), 176; Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Cobb, 72 Ill. 148; Blade v. C., St. P. & F. du L. R. Co., 10 Wis. 4.

2. Haddow v. Parry, 3 Taunton, 303.

He is, however, responsible for such goods as he may have received. Fassett v. Ruark, 3 La. Ann. 694; Levois v. Gale, 17 La. Ann. 302.

For the effect of the words "contents unknown" upon the clause "good order and condition," see Clarke v. Barnwell, 12 How. (U. S.) 272; The Colombo, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 521; Baxter v. Leland, Abbott's Adm. Rep. 348; Vernardo v. Hudson, 3 Sumn. (C. C.) 405.

For the effect of the words "contents and gauge unknown," see Nelson v. Stephenson, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 538.

For the effect of the words "contents and value unknown," see Miller v. H. & St. J. R. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.), 607; The California, 2 Sawyer (C. C.), 12.

For the effect of the words "weight unknown," see Sheppard v. Naylor, 5 Gray (Mass.), 591.

For the effect of the words "contents and weight unknown," see The Andover, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 303; The Colombo, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 521; Wentworth v. Ship Realm, 16 La. Ann. 18; The Energie, 2 Asp. Mar. Law Cases, 296; Brig May Queen, Newbyth's Adm. 464.

For the effect of the words "quantity and quality unknown," see Campart v. S. S. Prior, 2 Fed. Rep. 819; The Prosperino Palasso, 29 L. T. N. S. 622; The Ida, 32 L. T. N. S. 541; Tully v. Terry, L. R. 8 C. P. 684.

For the effect of the words "contents, weight, and value unknown," see Nickel v. Cassel, 9 Bom. H. C. Rep. 321; Jessel v. Bath, 2 L. R. Exch. 267; English v. Ocean S. S. Co., 2 Blatchf. (C. C.) 425; The Peter der Grosse, 34 L. T. N. S. 749; Lebeau v. Ocean S. Nav. Co., 42 L. J. C. P. 1.

3. Dickerson v. Seelye, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 99; Bradstreet v. Heran, 2 Blatchf. (C. C.) 116; Backus v. Schooner Marengo, 6 McLean, 487; Miller v. H. & St. J. R. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.), 607; Byrne v.

3. Bill of Lading as a Contract.—GENERAL RULES FOR ITS INTERPRETATION AND CONSTRUCTION.—The bill of lading is a contract to transport certain goods to a specified place, and there to deliver them to a person named in the bill. Parol evidence is inadmissible to vary its terms or legal import, when free from ambiguity.[1]

A bill of lading, expressing the terms and conditions of transportation in the absence of proof of fraud or mistake, is to be taken as the sole evidence of the final agreement of the parties, and by it their duties and liabilities must be regulated. Resort cannot be had to prior or contemporaneous parol negotiations and agreements to vary its terms. They are regarded as merged in the written contract.[2]

Parol evidence may, however, be received in explanation of the terms of the contract, where they are ambiguous.[3]

Weeks, 4 Abb. Dec. 657; Howard v. Tucker, 1 Barn. & Adolph. 712; Armour v. M. C. R., 65 N. Y. 111; Valieri v. Boyland, 1 L. R. C. P. 382; Berkeley v. Watling, 7 Adol. & Ellis, 29.

Section 32, Bills of Lading Acts, 18 and 19 Vic. c. 111, enacts that in the hands of a consignee, or indorsee for value (without notice), bills of lading shall be conclusive evidence against the master, or other person signing them, that the goods were shipped, though in fact they were not shipped, "provided that the master, etc., may exonerate himself in respect to such misrepresentation by saying that it was caused without any default on his part, and wholly by the fraud of the shipper, or of the holder, or some person under whom he claims." See Meyer v. Dresser, 33 L. J. C. P. 289.

Where, however, advances were made on the faith of the bill of lading, but without any intention of acquiring property in, or ownership of the goods shipped, the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the statement in the bill of lading of the condition of the goods is not conclusive upon the carrier. Nelson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.), 156.

1. The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579, and cases cited; Bank v. Shaw, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 221; Wayland v. Mosley, 5 Ala. 430; C. N. W. R. Co. v. N. L. Packet Co., 70 Ill. 217; Lawrence v. McGregor, Wright (Ohio), 193; Knowles v. Dabney, 105 Mass. 437; Wallace v. Matthews, 39 Ga. 617; Wilde v. Mer. Dis. Trans. Co., 47 Iowa, 272; Collander v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 200; Sprout v. Donnell, 26 Me. 187; I. & C. R. Co. v. Remmy, 13 Ind. 518; Arnould v. Jones, 26 Tex. 335; Wayne v. The Gen. Pike, 16 Ohio, 421.

Parol evidence is not admissible to show with whom the contract of carriage is made. Centre v. Torrey, 8 Mart. La. Rep. 206; Pecks v. Dinsmore, 4 Porter (Ala.), 212. But see McTyer v. Steele, 26 Ala. 487.

2. The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579; Long v. N. Y. C. R. Co., 15 N. Y. 76; O'Bryan v. Kinney, 74 Mo. 125; The Lady Franklin, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 325; I. & C. R. Co. v. Remmy, 13 Ind. 518; Cox v. Peterson, 30 Ala. 608; May v. Babcock, 4 Ohio, 334; Shaw v. Gardner, 12 Gray (Mass.), 488; Arnould v. Jones, 26 Tex. 335.

The parties are presumed to have written all that they deemed necessary to give full expression to their intention. Thus where it was not claimed that there was anything on the face of the instrument which required the master of the vessel to take the inside rather than the outside route from New York to Baltimore, there could be no proof allowed of a preliminary conversation to establish such an obligation. White v. Van Kirk, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 16; White v. Ashton, 51 N. Y. 280.

But a bill of lading containing a modification of a verbal contract previously made by the parties and accepted by the shipper without noticing the changes does not supersede the prior verbal contract, which may be proved by the shipper in an action against the carrier. M. P. R. Co. v. Beeson, 30 Kan. 298.

In a Pennsylvania case it has been held that where a bill was signed in the usual form, and certain verbal arrangements as well were made at the same time, both should be submitted to a jury from which to discover the contract. Union T. Co. v. Riegel, 23 P. F. Smith (Pa.), 72. And see Atwell v. Miller, 11 Md. 357.

3. The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579.

Parol evidence is admissible to prove the meaning of "C.O.D." (to be collected

The contract evidenced by the bill must be gathered from the whole instrument, in order to determine the true intent of the parties.[1]

Where the bill refers in terms to a charter-party or other instrument as a completion of itself, the provisions of the former become part of the bill of lading.[2]

Where there are written and printed clauses in the bill, which are at variance with each other, the written portions must prevail, and only so much of the printed matter in the blank form as is consistent therewith is to have effect; all the rest is to be rejected.[3]

EXECUTION OF THE BILL.—The bill of lading is signed only by the carrier or some one on his behalf, and is usually handed to the shipper on the delivery of the goods to the carrier. Where a shipper with knowledge of the contents of the bill assents to it, or accepts its terms, it is a binding contract, and defines the rights and liabilities of the parties;[4] and cannot be contradicted by parol proof.[5]

Where the bill is printed or made out by himself, the shipper's assent will be presumed.[6]

In most of the States, in the absence of fraud, deceit, or mistake, the acceptance of the bill is conclusive evidence of assent to its terms.[7] on delivery). Am. Exp. Co. v. Lesem, 39 Ill. 312.

While parol evidence is admissible to exolain the meaning of "C.O.D.," additional words, not technical, but ordinary and well-defined in meaning, cannot be explained or varied. Collender v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 200.

1. Robinson v. M. D. T. Co., 45 Iowa, 470; Stewart v. Same, 47 Iowa, 229; Ashmore v. Penna. S. Trans. Co., 4 Dutcher (N. J.), 180; Lawrence v. McGregor, Wright (Ohio), 193; Heineman v. G. T. R. Co., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 430.

Thus the caption of the bill was held to be a part of the instrument, and to be construed in determining the effect of the contract. See Robinson v. Merch. D. T. Co., and Stewart v. Same, supra. Examine also U. S. v. Kimball, 13 Wall. 636.

2. Certain Logs of Mahogany, 2 Sumner C. C. 589; Cobb v. Blanchard, 11 Allen (Mass.), 409; Russell v. Wieman, 17 C. B. N. S. 163; Bags of Linseed, 1 Black (U. S.), 108.

3. Babcock v. L. S. M. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 491; Miller v. H. & St. J. R. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.). 607; Elkins v. Emp. Trans. Co., 2 Weekly Notes Cases (Pa.), 403; Lebeau v. Gen. S. Nav. Co., 42 L. J. C. P. 1, 8 L. R. C. P. 88.

4. M. D. T. Co. v. Leysor, 89 Ill. 43; U. S. Exp. Co. v. Hames, 67 Ill. 137; Falconer v. Fargo, 3 Jones & Sp. (N. Y. Sup. Ct.) 332.

5. C., H., D. & M. R. Co. v. Pontius, 19 Ohio, 221.

6. Lawrence v. N. P. B. R. Co., 36 Conn. 63.

7. Steele v. Townsend, 37 Ala. 247; The Emily v. Karney, 5 Kansas, 645; Milligan v. Ill. R. Co., 36 Iowa, 181; Robinson v. M. D. T. Co., 45 Iowa, 470; Hoadly v. N. T. Co., 115 Mass. 305; C., H., D. & M. Co. v. Pontius, 19 Ohio, 221; Dillard v. Louisv. R. Co., 2 Lea (Tenn.), 288; Farnham v. C. R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 53; Maghee v. C. & A. R. Co., 45 N. Y. 514; Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. M. & C. R. Co., 72 N. Y. 90; Newman v. Smoker, 25 La. An. 303.

In Massachusetts, assent must be shown. Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co., 97 Mass. 124; Perry v. Thompson, 98 Mass. 249.

In Wisconsin, possession by the shipper of the receipt restricting the liability of the carrier is only prima-facie evidence of his assent. Boorman v. Exp. Co., 21 Wis. 152. White v. G. T. Co., 46 Wis. 493.

In Illinois, the assent to the terms of the bill must be affirmatively shown. M. D. T. Co. v. Joesting, 89 Ill. 152.

Bill Executed by Agent of Shipper.—Generally the agent of the shipper has power to make a special contract with the carrier limiting the latter's responsibility.[1]

In those States, however, in which the assent of the shipper to limitations of the liability of the carrier by the terms of the bill must be affirmatively shown, the knowledge and assent of the agent of the shipper to such terms are not always sufficient to free the carrier from liability; and a drayman, who was intrusted by the shipper with the delivery of the goods to the carrier, has been held to be a mere bailee for hire to take the package to the wharf and obtain a receipt.[2]

A carrier, however, contracting with a party as agent of the consignor, cannot afterwards deny such agent's authority as against such consignor.[3]

By Agent of Consignee.—Where the consignor who is the vendor,[4] or the bailee of goods, or a forwarding carrier, ships goods at the direction of the consignee, he acts as the agent of the consignee for the purpose of obtaining transportation, and as such agent has authority to make such a contract with the carrier as in the honest exercise of his discretion he sees fit. But where there has been a previous contract between the consignee and the carrier, the consignor, acting as the agent of the consignee, has no authority to vary that contract.[5]

By Agent of Carrier by Land.—A carrier, whether by water or rail, is bound by all acts or contracts done or made by its agents within the scope of their authority and by the knowledge of its agents obtained in the course of the transaction.[6] Carrier's agents are therefore authorized to sign and issue bills

(See also legislation of the State of Illinois.)

So in Georgia. Wallace v. Sanders, 42 Ga. 486.

And Michigan. 7 Am. Law Reg. (O. S.) 352; M. C. R. Co. v. Hale, 6 Mich. 244.

In Maryland, agreement to the terms of the bill must be proven. B. & O. R. Co. v. Brady, 32 Md. 333; McCoy v. E. & W. T. Co., 42 Md. 498.

In Mississippi, where, if it is merely doubtful whether the consignor intended to waive his legal rights, it was held that public policy requires that the waiver should be presumed and upheld. Mobile & Ohio R. Co. v. Weimer, 49 Miss. 725; Southern Exp. Co. v. Moon, 10 George (Miss.), 822.

In Ohio, assent to the limitation of liability must be expressed. Gaines v. U. T. Co., 28 Ohio, 418.

1. Knell v. U. S. & Brazil SS. Co., 1 Jones & Spencer (23 N. Y. Sup. Ct.), 423. See also Nelson v. Hudson Riv. R. Co., 48 N. Y. 498; McCan v. B. & O. R. Co., 20 Md. 202; York Co. v. Central R. Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Grace v. Adams, 100 Mass. 505; Dows v. Green, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 72.

2. Falvey v. N. T. Co., 15 Wis. 129; The Pacific, Deady (D. C.), 17; M. D. T. Co. v. Joesting, 89 Ill. 152; Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co., 97 Mass. 124; Gaines v. U. T. Co., 28 Ohio, 418; American Trans. Co. v. Moore, 5 Mich. 368; Fillibrown v. Grand Tr. R. Co., 55 Maine, 462. See also Ames v. St. P. R. Co., 12 Minn. 412; Patterson v. Clyde, 67 Pa. St. 500; N. J. S. N. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Howard (U. S.), 344.

3. Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14 Iowa, 214.

4. Wiggins v. Erie R. Co., 5 Hun (N. Y.), 185; Gordon v. Ward, 16 Mich. 360; Squire v. N. Y. C. R. Co., 98 Mass. 239; Patterson v. Clyde, 67 Pa. St. 500; Shelton v. M. D. T. Co., 59 N. Y. 258; Robinson v. M. D. T. Co., 45 Iowa, 470. See, contra, Am. Trans. Co. v. Moore, 5 Mich. 368; M.T.Co. v. Joesting, 89 Ill. 152.

5. Wiggins v. Erie R. Co., 5 Hun (N. Y.), 185.

6. Harmon v. N. Y. & E. R. Co., 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 323.

of lading;[1] and in the absence of fraud or imposition the receipt so delivered by the agent of the carrier to the shipper must be held to be the contract between the parties.[2] The agents of the carrier, however, are only authorized to issue bills of lading for goods actually received.[3] The agents of carriers are not only authorized to receive goods and to contract for transportation simply, but it is within the scope of their authority to make special contracts modifying the ordinary relations between the shipper and the carrier. Thus the agents of express companies and railroad companies may contract to collect on delivery,[4] or to deliver in covered cars.[5]

By the Master of a Vessel.—It is presumed, from the nature of his employment, that the master of a vessel which is a common carrier is authorized to make contracts for the carriage of freight.[6] The terms of a bill signed by the master, therefore, constitute an engagement or contract of the owner[7] wholly irrespective of the ownership of the vessel, or whether the master is the agent of the general or the special owner.[8]

The master of the ship has no authority to sign the bill of lading for goods not actually put on board; and therefore the owner of the ship is not responsible to parties taking or dealing with, or making advances on the faith of such an instrument, which is untruthful in reciting that certain goods have been shipped.[9]

1. Rawle v. Deshler, 42 N. Y. 572; Putnam v. Tillotson, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 517.

2. Huntingdon v. Dinsmore, 4 Hun (N. Y.), 66; Scoville et al. v. Griffith, 12 N. Y. (Ct. of App.) 509.

3. Union, etc., R. Co. v. Yeager, 34 Ind. 1; Ryder v. Hall, 7 Allen (Mass.), 456; B. & O. R. Co. v. Wilkins, 44 Md. 11; Dean v. King, 22 Ohio St. 119; Kirkman v. Bowman, 8 Robinson (La.), 246; The Lady Franklin, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 325.

For the law relating to bills of lading issued for goods never received by the carrier, when such bill has passed into the hands of one who has made advances upon it in good faith and without notice, see post this article, under caption THE BILL AS A MUNIMENT OF TITLE.

4. American Exp. Co. v. Lesen, 39 Ill. 312; Minter v. Pac. R. Co., 41 Mo. 503.

5. G. T. R. v. Fitzgerald, 5 Duval (Can.), 204.

Contract for immediate delivery of goods made by a station agent binds the company. Deeming v. G. T. R. Co., 48 N. H. 455.

An agreement to transport goods in a certain time is within the scope of the employment of the carrier's agent. Strohn v. D. & M. R. Co., 23 Wis. 126.

But a mere promise of the agent without additional consideration to forward freight then en route by an earlier train than was usual, is not binding upon the carrier. Railroad Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 176.

6. Bell v. Wood, 1 Dana (Ky.), 146; Moseley v. Lord, 2 Conn. 389.

7. Ferguson v. Cappeau, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 394.

8. The Schr. Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. (U. S.) 182.

It is not necessary that the bill should be signed in the name of the owner; for while it is the general rule that to make a party personally liable on a written contract made by his agent it should be executed in his own name, and appear to be his own contract, a bill of lading signed by the master in his own name in the usual course of the employment of the ship will bind the owner. McTyer v. Steele, 26 Ala. 487.

When he signs as master of the vessel he is considered as signing as the agent of the owners. Slark v. Broom, 7 La. Ann. 337.

Nor is it necessary that he should write himself down as master if in fact he fills that position, or if he is described in the body of the contract as master. Fox v. Holt, 36 Conn. 558.

9. B. & O. R. Co. v. Wilkins, 44 Md. 11; Sears v. Wingate, 85 Mass. 103; Fel-

CONDITIONS AND EXCEPTIONS.—The bill of lading is a contract for a limited liability. It contains a list of cases and causes of loss for which the carrier shall not be held liable. These are enumerated in the bill under the head of "Conditions" or "Exceptions." These exceptions have been the subject of judicial interpretation.

Act of God. (See title ACT OF GOD.)

The Public Enemy.—Carriers are not liable at common law for loss or damage caused by the public enemy. It is, however, customary to make it one of the expressed exemptions from liability for loss written in the bill. "The king's enemies," "the queen's enemies," "the enemies of the state," are equivalent phrases, and include all those with whom the state is at open war.[1]

Restraint of Princes—of People.—Restraint of princes has been defined to be the forcible interference of the state or government of the country taking possession of the goods manu forti.[2]

Restraint by Legal Process.—A carrier is not liable for goods attached in his custody he cannot give them up to the assignee taken out of his hands by legal process; and when goods are while the attachment is pending, and this without regard to the provisions of the bill of lading.[3]

lows v. Steamer R. W. Powell, 16 La. Rep. 316; The Delaware, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 579; Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. (U. S.) 182; The Brig Edwin, 1 Sprague, 477; Hubbersty v. Ward, 8 Exch. 330; Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63.

For further discussion of the responsibility on bills of lading signed by the master for goods not received, when the bill has passed into the hands of a bona-fide assignee for value, see post, BILL OF LADING AS A MUNIMENT OF TITLE.

1. Story on Bills, § 99; Angell on Carriers, § 200.

Pirates are covered by the phrase. Gage v. Tirrel, 9 Allen (Mass.), 299; Barton v. Wolliford, Comb. 56. So are privateers. Schouler on Bailments, § 408. So are hostile tribes of Indians. Holliday v. Kennard, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 254. So also the Confederate insurgents, with whom the Federal government is waging war. Hubbard v. Express Co., 10 R. I. 244; Lewis v. Ludwick, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 368; McCranie v. Wood, 24 La. Ann. 406; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Harper, 29 Md. 330; Thornington v. Smith, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 1.

Damage or loss by mob, however numerous—Story on Bills, § 526; Angell on Carriers, § 200—by thieves or robbers—Sutton v. Mitchell, I. T. R. 18; Kemp v. Coughtry, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 107; Hall v. Cheney, 36 N. H. 26—or by embezzlement—Watkinson v. Laughton, 8 Johns. N. Y. 164; Schieffelin v. Harvey, 6 Johns. N. Y. 170—or by rioters or insurgents—Forward v. Pittard, 1 T. R. 27; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hallowell, 65 Ind. 188; Boon v. The Belfast, 40 Ala. 184—is not within the exception.

2. Findlay v. Liverpool Steamship Co., 23 L. T. N. S. Exch. 251.

Embargo, blockade, neutral edicts, and laws may come within the exception. Geipil v. Smith, L. R. 7 Q. B. 404.

The mere information by a belligerent to a neutral vessel of the blockade has been said not to be a restraint. Richardson v. Maine, etc., Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 102.

The meaning of the words "restraint of people" differs in no material way from that of "restraint of princes." See Nesbitt v. Lushington, 4 Term Rep. 783.

3. Stiles v. Davis, 1 Black (U. S.), 101; Bliven v. Hudson, etc., R. Co., 36 N. Y. 403; Van Winkle v. U. S. Mail Co., 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; Burton v. Wilkinson, 18 Vt. 186; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Yohe, 51 Ind. 181.

If the language of Findlay v. Liverpool, etc., Steamship Co., 23 L. T. N. S. Exch. 251, is authoritative, a stipulation releasing the carrier from the restraint of courts of law or by legal procedure should be contained in the bill of lading. When the seizure is made under process of law, the carrier must assure himself that the proceedings are regular and valid. Bliven v. R. Co. 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 188. And he must immediately notify the assignor of the fact of seizure. Scrantom v. Farm-

Perils of the Sea.—This phrase has been judicially defined. It has been said that "by dangers of the sea are meant unavoidable accidents from which common carriers by the general law are not excused, unless they arise from the act of God." [1] And again, as those accidents "peculiar to navigation that are of an extraordinary character, or arise from an irresistible force or from overwhelming power which cannot be guarded against by the ordinary exercise of human skill and prudence." [2]

Dangers of the Roads.—The phrase is somewhat ambiguous. It has been said that the word "roads" in this connection is ordiers' Bank, 24 N. Y. 424. But he is not bound either to litigate for his bailor or to show that the decision of the court issuing the process is correct, or to assert the title of the bailor, or to follow the goods. See cases just cited.

1. Dibble v. Morgan, 1 Woods, 406.

2. Stevens Trans. Co. v. Tuckerman, 33 N. J. 543.

The following have been held to be within the exception Perils of the sea (or its equivalents): The unavoidable stranding of the vessel. Hahn v. Corbitt, 2 Bing. 205; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. E. & W. T. Co., 10 Biss. (C. C.) 18. The running upon an unknown rock. Fletcher v. Ingliss, 2 B. & Ald. 315. Or upon a hidden obstruction in a river, such as a tree recently fallen. Hibernia Ins. Co. v. St. Louis Trans. Co., 5 McCrary (C. C.), 397. Or a snag recently carried into the channel. The Favorite, 2 Biss. (C. C.) 502; Redpath v. Vaughn, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 489; Steele v. McTyer's Admrs., 31 Ala. 667. Storm or stress of weather. The Neptune, 6 Blatchf. (C. C.) 193. A sudden squall. Slocum v. Fairchild, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 329; The Lady Pike, 2 Bis. (C. C.) 141. The tossing of the ship in tempestuous weather. Gebay v. Lloyd, 3 B. & C. 793. The shipping of water in a storm. Lemaitre v. Merle, 2 Robinson (La.) 402; Letchford v. The Golden Eagle, 17 La. Ann. 9. The necessary jettison of the cargo in a storm. Lawrence v. Mintern, 17 How. (U. S.) 100; Ins. Co. v. Sherwood, 14 How. (U. S.) 351. Delay caused by storm. U. S. v. Hall, 2 Wash. C. C. 366; Louis v. The Success, 18 La. Ann. Rep. 1; The Portsmouth, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 682. Piracy. Barton v. Walliford, Comb. 56. The wilful but not the barratrous act of the crew. Dixon v. Sadler, 9 L. T. Exch. 48. The sweating of the cargo. Clark v. Barnwell, 1 How. (U. S.) 272; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 203. Dampness, caused by the changes of climate. Rich v. Lambert, 12 How. (U. S.) 347. The accidental sinking of the ship. Kirk v. Folsome, 23 La. Ann. 584. The breaking of tackle. Laurie v. Douglass, 15 M. & W. 745. Collision. Plaisted v. B. & K. Nav. Co., 27 Me. 132; Peters v. W. Ins. Co., 14 Peters (U. S.), 99; Daggett v. Shaw, 3 Mo. 189; Hays v. Kennedy, 3 Grant (Penn.), 351. The deflection of the needle of the compass. The Rocket, 1 Biss. (C. C.) 354. The "blowing" of a vessel. Crosby v. Grinnell, 9 N. Y. Legal Obs. 281. The opening of the seams of the ship, caused by the strain in rough weather. Rich v. Lambert, 12 How. (U. S.) 347. But see Bearse v. Ropes, 1 Sprague, 331.

The following have been held not to fall within the exception of Perils of the sea (and its equivalents): Loss by fire. Garrison v. Memphis Ins. Co., 19 How. (U. S.) 312; Cox v. Peterson, 30 Ala. 608. By rats. Kay v. Wheeler, 2 L. R. C. P. 302; The Isabella, 8 Ben. 139. By vermin. The Miletus, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 335. By worms destroying the ship's bottom. Rohl v. Parr, 1 Esp. 445. Embezzlement. King v. Shepherd, 3 Story (C. C.), 349. By theft or robbery, which is not piracy. King v. Shepherd, 3 Story (C. C.), 349. By barratry. The Chasca, L. R. 4 Adm. 446; s. c., 44 L. T. Adm. 19 (1875). The Gold Hunter, 1 Blatchf. & H. 300. By the injurious effects of other goods. The Freedom, L. R. C. P. 594. By the shifting of a buoy. Reeves v. Waterman, 2 Speers, 197. By the desertion or insubordination of seamen. The Ethel, 5 Ben. (C. C.) 154. By the explosion of the boiler of a steamboat. The Mohawk, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 153; Bark Edwin v. Naumkeag, etc., Co., 1 Cliff. (C. C.) 222. But see Adams Exp. Co. v. Fendrick, 38 Ind. 150. By the plundering of the ship by the custom-house officers while in charge of it. Schieffelin v. Harvey, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 170. By the depredations committed on the ship's stores or cargo by the passengers and crew, in consequence of a scarcity of provisions during a long voyage. The Gold Hunter, 1 Blatchf. & H. 300.

narily to be construed to mean marine roads or harbors; but where it is applied to land carriage it may mean such dangers as are immediately caused by the condition of highways on land, as the overturning of carriages in rough or precipitous places.[1]

Fire.—The exception that the carrier shall not be liable for loss or damage by fire is found in all modern bills of lading. Such a loss is not within the exception Act of God, except in the one case of fire caused by lightning.[2] Nor is loss by fire included in the exceptions Unavoidable dangers,[3] Perils of the sea,[4] or Perils of the river.[5] The effect of the exception is to release the carrier from liability in all cases of loss by fire, except for such loss as is directly traceable to his own or his servants' negligence.[6] Fire originated by the explosion of the boiler of the engine of a steamboat,[7] or by an explosion among the cargo,[8] is within the exception. Where, however, fire is merely an incident of loss by other means, the exception does not apply; as where the proximate cause of the loss was a collision, and after the collision the wreck took fire.[9] Where the carrier excepts himself from liability for loss by fire, and damage is caused secondarily or primarily by his own or his servants' negligence, the exception has no application. It is not sufficient that negligence be merely shown; it must be shown to have been the proximate cause of loss.[10] It must be shown to have caused, or at least contributed, to the injury.[11] The exception Fire is to be strictly interpreted.[12]

1. De Rothschild v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 21 L. J. Exch. 273. As applying to such as are incident to roadsteads or harbors, the addition of the phrase to the ordinary excepted perils of the bill of lading seems unnecessary. See Trans. Co. v. Downer, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 129

2. Forward v. Pittard, 1 T. R. 27; Hyde v. Trent Nav. Co., 5 T. R. 389; Parsons v. Monteath, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 353; Hall v. Cheney, 36 N. H. 26; Moore v. Mich. Cent. R. Co., 3 Mich. 23; Cox v. Peterson, 30 Ala. 608; Chevallier v. Straham, 2 Tex. 115.

Fire started by the bursting of a steam boiler is not within the Act of God. Bulkley v. Naumkeag Cotton Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 386. Neither is fire caused by machinery of vessel. Hale v. N. J. Steam Nav. Co., 15 Conn. 539. Or by the bursting of a cask containing chloride of lime. Brousseau v. The Hudson, 11 La. Ann. 427.

3. Union Mutual Ins. Co. v. Indianapolis R. Co., 1 Disn. (Ohio) 480.

4. Merrill v. Arey, 3 Ware (U. S. D. C.), 215.

5. Cox v. Peterson, 30 Ala. 608; Gilmore v. Carman, 1 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 279; Garrison v. Memphis Ins. Co., 19 How. (U. S.) 312; The N. J. Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344.

6. York Co. v. Central R. Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Muser v. Holland, 17 Blatchf. (C. C.) 412; Ins. Co. v. St. L. R. Co., 3 McCrary (C. C.), 233; Farnham v. Camden R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 53; Grace v. Adams, 100 Mass. 505; Erie R. Co. v. Wilcox, 84 Ill. 239; Mich. S., etc., R. Co. v. Heaton, 37 Ind. 448; Montgomery, etc., R. Co. v. Edmonds, 41 Ala. 667; New Orleans Mut. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans R. Co., 20 La. Ann. 302.

7. Bulkley v. Naumkeag Cotton Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 386.

8. Brosseau v. The Hudson, 11 La. Ann. 427.

9. The City of Norwich, 3 Ben. (C. C.) 575.

10. Chalk v. Charlotte, etc., R. Co., 85 N. Car. 423.

11. Cochran v. Dinsmore, 49 N. Y. 249.

Where the fire is the work of strikers, formerly employees of the company, the fact that the loss was actually due to the acts of the defendant's servants must be shown. Wertheimer v. Penna. R. Co., 17 Blatchf. (C. C.) 421.

12. Where the goods were sent by the carrier over a line necessitating carriage both by rail and by water, and the bill excepted "dangers of navigation, fire,

The exception does not entitle the carrier to freight on the goods destroyed, but simply protects him from liability for their loss.[1] The exception, however, is coextensive with the liability; it is coextensive in point of time.[2]

Jettison.—Jettison is the heaving overboard of goods or cargo in order to save the ship.[3] Every water-bill of lading contains a limitation of liability for goods lost by jettison. It is probable that the loss would be covered by the exception Perils of the sea; but its presence in the bill necessarily adds to the safety of the carrier. In case of jettison, the shipper, though deprived of his remedy against the carrier by the exceptions of the bill, has, nevertheless, a right to compel contribution from the owners of the ship and cargo under the principle of general average. General average, however, does not apply to the jettison of a deck-load, unless the other parties have assented to such stowage.[4]

Collision.—This clause only protects the carrier from loss by unavoidable collision, to which his negligence has in no way contributed.[5]

Sweat.—By sweat or sweating of the hold is meant that damage done to goods in transit by the dampness which invariably, in greater or less degree, pervades ships. If injury is caused by sweating, the carrier is protected under the limitation of liability and collision on the lakes and river, and on the Welland Canal," it was held that the limitations did not extend to loss by fire on the railroad. Barter v. Wheeler, 49 N. H. 9.

1. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. Co. v. S. O. Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.), 39.

2. The master of a vessel transporting goods under a bill exempting him from liability for loss by fire, and landing them at a port of discharge, is, so long as the goods remain in his custody after being landed, protected by the exception in the bill. Hong Kong, etc., Corp. v. Bake, 7 Bom. H. C. Rep. 207.

In England the Merchants' Shipping Act, 1854, provides (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, sec. 503): "That no owner of any sea-going ship or share therein shall be liable to make good any loss or damage that may happen, without his actual fault or privity of or to any of the following things, that is to say: I. Of or to any goods, merchandise, or other things whatsoever taken or put on board any such ship by reason of any fire happening on board said ship."

The Act of Congress of March 3, 1851 (c. 43, sec. 1, p. 635, Rev. Stats. U. S. p. 827, sec. 4282), substantially follows the British statute. "No owner of any vessel shall be liable to answer for or make good to any person any loss or damages which may happen to any merchandise which shall be shipped, taken in, or put on board any such vessel by reason of or by means of any fire happening to or on board the vessel, unless such fire is caused by the design or neglect of such owner."

The effect of these acts would seem to be to superadd to the exceptions existing at common law the exceptions contained in the statute, and as a contract is supposed to be made with a view to the general law relating to the subject-matter, such an exception is to be regarded as written into all contracts to carry to which the statutes apply. See Walker v. Transportation Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 150, where it is held that the act relieves owners from responsibility for the negligence of their officers or agents in which the former have not directly participated.

3. The Neptune, 16 L. T. Adm. 36. See Kent's Com. vol. iii. p. 233.

4. Smith v. Wright, 1 Caines, 43; Lenox v. Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 178. See also Chappel v. Comfort, 31 L. T. C. P. 58; Johnson v. Chapman, 35 L. J. C. P. 23.

5. Smith v. Scott, 4 Taunt. 125; The Kathleen, 43 L. T. Adm. 39; Plaisted v. Boston, etc., S. Nav. Co., 27 Maine, 132; Hays v. Kennedy, 3 Grant (Pa.), 351; Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 14 Peters (U. S.), 99. See also Mutual Ins. Co. v. Miss. Trans. Co., 4 McCrary (C. C.), 636.

in his bill, provided it is not caused by his carelessness or negligence.[1]

Rust.—The exception Rust has, like Leakage and breakage, reference to the direct injury to goods, and will not cover an indirect injury to them from the rusting of other goods; and the exception is no protection to the carrier where the rust is due to negligence or unskilfulness in stowing.[2]

Leakage and Breakage.—The word leakage refers to loss by the leaking of the goods themselves. It does not include damage done to other packages by the escaping liquid. So breakage does not cover the injury done to other goods by the cutting or rubbing of the broken article.[3]

Leakage and breakage within the meaning of the exception is not mere average leakage and breakage.[4]

The general rule may be thus stated: The exceptions include all such leakage and breakage as reasonable care and diligence on the part of the carrier could not prevent.[5]

Freezing.—The general rule is that the freezing of perishable articles is not, when it might have been prevented by the exercise of due diligence and care, such an intervention of vis major as excuses the carrier.[6]

Perishable Goods—Inherent Defect—Deterioration—Decay.—At common law, a carrier could not be held for such loss as was the result of the nature, vice, or defect inherent in the goods carried, and not of his own negligence.[7]

Perishable property has been defined to be "that which from its nature decays in a short space of time, without reference to the

1. Mendelsohn v. The Louisiana, 3 Wood's Rep. 46.

Sweat or sweating would probably be included in the general exception Perils of the sea, and kindred phrases. See Star of Hope, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 203; McKinlay v. Morrish, 21 How. (U. S.) 343; Clark v. Barnwell, 12 How. (U. S.) 272. But see Baxter v. Leland, 1 Abb. Adm. 348.

2. Dedekim v. Vose, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 44. See also The Martha, Olcott's Adm. 140.

The exception does not cover loss by such chemical precipitates as are not properly rust, and are not produced in the same way. McKinnon v. Taylor, Com. Ca. 514. See also Krohn v. Nurse, 5 Buch. (Cape of Good Hope) 85.

3. Thrift v. Youle, 46 L. J. C. P. 402.

Where the accumulation of molasses drainage upon the floor of the hold of the vessel was so deep that certain casks of sugar were half submerged in it, and were thereby caused to heat, it was held that this did not come within the exception "Not liable for leakage." The Neptune, 38 L. J. Adm. 63.

4. The Invincible, 1 Lowell Decisions, 225. In some cases, however, the bill excepts "average leakage and breakage." In such cases the burden rests upon the claimants to show that the leakage is greater than the average. 630 Casks of Sherry Wine, 14 Blatchf. (C. C.) 517.

5. Phillips v. Clark, 2 C. B. N. S. 156; Oriflamme, 1 Sawyer (C. C.), 176: The David and Caroline, 5 Blatchf. (C. C.) 266; Vitrified, etc., Sewer Pipes, 5 Ben. (C. C.) 402; Carey v. Atkins, 6 Ben. (C. C.) 562; Thompson v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 27 Iowa, 561; M. V. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 8 Kansas, 244.

6. Wolf v. Am. Exp. Co., 43 Mo. 421; Read v. St. L., etc. R. Co., 60 Mo. 199.

Where the bill of lading read "not accountable for freezing" and "to be delivered without delay," and the goods were delayed and frozen, the carrier was held liable. Whicher v. Steamboat Ewing, 21 Iowa, 240; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hazen, 84 Ill. 36. But the delay must be unreasonable and unnecessary. Mich. Central R. Co. v. Curtis, 80 Ill. 324.

7. Story on Bailments, § 492a.

care it receives. Of that character are most varieties of fruit, some kinds of liquors, and numerous vegetable productions." [1]

The exoneration of the exception does not, however, extend to a loss to which the carrier's own negligent acts or misconduct have contributed.[2]

To determine what is to be expected of the carrier, regard must be had to the character of the goods and the circumstances of each case.[3]

Escapes—Viciousness—Injuries to Unruly Animals.—Carriers of live animals have been held in England,[4] Kentucky,[5] and Michigan[6] not to be common carriers. Elsewhere in the United States they are regarded as subject to the common-law liability.[7]

Whichever way the liability may be held to apply, the insertion of the exception as to escapes, etc., is additional protection to the carrier, and the limitation is sustainable on the principle that he is not to be liable for inherent defects.[8]

Heat—Suffocation—Fermentation.—Loss or damage occasioned

1. Merchantable corn was held not to be within the exception. Ill., etc., R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Ill. 58.

2. The decay of fruit or grain, though ordinarily within the exceptions, will not excuse the carrier, if he has failed to secure proper ventilation for the goods. Davidson v. Gwynne, 12 East, 381; The America, 8 Ben. (C. C.) 491. And the loss of meat will not be within the relief of the exception "decay," in the event of the failure of the carrier to provide sufficient ice to keep it during the voyage. Sherman v. Inman SS. Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.), 107.

3. If the goods have become wet, and are liable to be injured thereby, he should, if possible, unpack and dry them. Chouteau v. Leech, 18 Pa. St. 224; The Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. (U. S.) 7; Blocker v. Whittenburg, 12 La. Ann. 410.

If a cargo of hides is liable to be destroyed by worms, he should have the skins beaten and ventilated. The Brig Gentleman, Olcott's Adm. 110; Rogers v. Murray, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 357; s. c., 1 Blatchf. (C. C.) 196.

If a horse be left in the carrier's custody, he is bound to feed it, though he may recover from the owner the cost of its keep. Great Northern R. Co. v. Swaffield, L. R. 9 Exch. 132.

But the carrier is not bound either to repair goods or to delay the voyage for the sake of saving them. The Lynx v. King, 12 Mo. 272; Notara v. Henderson, L. R. 5 Q. B. 346.

4. Palmer v. Grand Junction R. Co., 4 M. & W. 749; Kendall v. L. & S. W. R. Co., 7 Exch. 373; Pardington v. South Wales R. Co., 38 Eng. L. & Eq. Rep. 432.

5. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Hedger, 9 Bush (Ky.), 645; Hall v. Renfro, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 51.

6. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Perkins, 25 Mich. 329; Michigan, etc., R. Co. v. McDonough, 21 Mich. 165.

7. Cragen v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61; Conger v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.), 375; Powell v. Penn. R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 414; Wilson v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623; Kimball v. Rutland R. Co., 26 Vermont, 247; Rixford v. Smith, 52 N. H. 355; S. & N. A. R. Co. v. Henlein, 56 Ala. 368; East Tenn. R. Co. v. Whittal, 27 Ga. 535.

8. Rhoads v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 688. Loss "by viciousness of the animals" was included among the exceptions in the bill of lading, but it was held that the proof of viciousness would not exonerate the carriers if the cars in which the animals were placed were defective.

In Gill v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 Q. B. 186, the carrier was by contract released from liability for loss or injury in the delivery of the cow shipped by the plaintiff, occasioned by kicking, plunging, or restiveness. When the cow arrived at the place of destination, a servant of the defendants was about to unfasten the car, when he was warned not to do so. He persisted, and the animal ran out, and after rushing about the yard violently for some time, ran upon the railway tracks and was killed by a passing train. Here the court held that the carrier was liable.

by heat, suffocation or fermentation, under this exception, does not fall upon the carrier, unless his negligence has contributed to the loss or damage.[1]

Loading and Unloading.—Where the carrier stipulates in the bill that loading and unloading shall be done at the shipper's risk, the stipulation puts upon the shipper all risk of damages to the goods in loading them upon or unloading them from the vessel, car, carriage, stage, or other vehicle of transit.[2] It clearly has, however, no application to damage to goods while being transported. Nor to personal injuries to the shipper received in loading them.[3]

Pirates and Rovers.—Loss by pirates has been held to fall under each of the exceptions Perils of the sea and The king's enemies,[4] but is generally set out as one of the expressed exceptions in the bill.[5]

Robbers and Thieves.—Prior to the reign of Elizabeth, it would seem that loss by robbery was not included within the common-law exception. In that reign it was said, "If the carrier be robbed of the goods delivered to him he shall answer for the value of them."[6]

The exception is now usually included among those set forth in the bill. It is, however, to be construed strictly and most favorably to the shipper.[7]

The term "robbers" means loss by violence. Mere removal without force is not within the exception.[8]

Authorities differ as to whether the term "thieves" is restricted

1. Ill., etc., R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Ill. 474; Sturgeon v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 569; Lewis v. Dudgeon, L. R. 3 C. P. 17 N.; Mendelsohn v. The Louisiana, 3 Woods, 46.

2. Indianapolis R. Co. v. Allen, 31 Ind. 394.

3. Stinson v. N. Y. Central R. Co., 32 N. Y. 333.

Where, in loading, the bottom of the car furnished by the railroad company dropped out, and a loss thus occurred, the carrier was held liable. Hawkins v. G. W. R. Co., 17 Mich. 57; G. W. R. Co. v. Hawkins, 18 Mich. 427.

4. See, supra, PERILS OF THE SEA and THE PUBLIC ENEMY.

5. Robbery on a river where the tide ebbs and flows is not piracy within the terms of a bill of lading, even though it be punishable as such under the laws. Boon v. The Belfast, 40 Ala. 184.

The following cases have been held to come under the exception:

Where a vessel was taken out of her course by the crew and the goods were seized and part of them sold. Dixon v. Reid, 5 B. & Ald. 597.

Where emigrant coolie passengers murdered the captain and part of the crew, took possession of the vessel, and ran her ashore, whereby the goods were destroyed. Palmer v. Naylor, 23 L. J. Exch. 323.

Where a ship or a vessel laden with a cargo of corn was forced by the stress of weather into a harbor where the people came on board, took the control of the ship from the captain, drove the vessel aground, and would not leave her until they had compelled the captain to sell the corn to them at a very low price. Nesbitt v. Lushington, 4 T. R. 783.

6. 1 Inst. 89a; Mo. 462; 1 Rs. Abr. 2, cited Jones on Bailments, p. 103.

7. Taylor v. L. & G. W. R. Co., 43 L. J. Q. B. 205.

8. De Rothschild v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 21 L. J. Exch. 273.

Where the carrier received a parcel of goods to be carried from London to Dover, under contract to deliver them next day, "fire and robbery excepted," and the parcel was deposited by the defendants in a desk in their office in London, and was afterwards missing, it was held that this was not a loss within the exception. Latham v. Stanbury, 3 Stark. 143.

to theft by parties who are not directly connected with the ship, or applies equally to theft committed by one of the crew or by a passenger.[1]

Barratry.—Barratry has been defined by a learned author to be "any wrongful act of the master, officers, or crew done against the owner," and the bill usually contains an exemption from liability for loss of goods due to this cause.[2]

Riots, Strikes, and Stoppages of Labor.—This exception is modern, and has not been fairly before the courts for interpretation. Some light may be thrown upon the subject by the cases cited in the note.[3]

Accidents to Machinery; to Boiler; to Engine—Steam.—The presence of this exception in the bill does not give immunity to the carrier from liability for loss occurring within the letter of the exception, but in reality by his negligence.[4]

Risk of Boats.—The necessities of trade in certain ports require that goods shall be transferred from the vessel in which they have been carried and landed in boats, barges, or lighters. The best

1. Taylor v. Liverpool, etc., S. Co., 9 L. R. Q. B. 546; Spinetti v. Atlas S. S. Co., 80 N. Y. 71.

2. Parsons on Marine Ins., vol. i., c. xxii., sec. 6.

The following acts have been held to be barratrous: Attempting to run a blockade. Robinson v. Ewer, 1 T. R. 127. An attempt to recapture a vessel illegally taken. Dederer v. Del. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. C. C. 61; Wilcox v. Un. Ins. Co., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 574. Collusion between the master and the captain of a privateer as to the capture of the ship. Arcangelo v. Thompson, 2 Camp. 620. Smuggling. Stone v. National Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 34; Haverlock v. Hancill, 3 T. R. 277. Stealing the cargo by mariners. Am. Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 463. Delay for fraudulent purposes. Ross v. Hunter, 4 T. R. 33. Wilfully running the ship ashore. Lawton v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 500.

Barratry may be committed by the master in respect to the cargo, though the owner of the cargo is at the same time owner of the ship, and though the master is also the supercargo or consignee for the voyage. Cook v. The Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 43.

A master who is an owner cannot commit barratry. Nutt v. Bourdieu, 1 T. R. 323.

3. An action was brought for delay in the carriage of certain potatoes. It was shown that the engineers in the employ of the railroad company had abandoned their engines for the purpose of compelling the company to rescind certain regulations. It did not appear that the officers of the company were in fault. It was held that the company was liable. Blackstock v. N. Y. & E. R. Co., 20 N. Y. 48.

In Reed v. St. L., etc., R. Co., 60 Mo. 199, it was said by the court: "We think the court (below) declared the law accurately in requiring that in order to amount to an excuse for delay the obstruction to the running of trains should have been the work of persons other than the employees or servants of the road. The company will be responsible for damages resulting from a delay to transport freight in the usual time, when it is caused by its servants suddenly and wilfully refusing to work. Because the employees refuse to work or perform their usual employments will not release the company or the carrier from the responsibility of his contract."

In Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hazen, 84 Ill. 36, the company offered to show that the sole cause of a certain delay was the obstruction to the passage of trains resulting from the irresistible violence of numbers of lawless men, some of whom had been previously employed by the company, but had been discharged. This evidence was held, on appeal, to be admissible. See also Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hallowell, 65 Ind. 188; Bartlett v. R. Co., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 549, and note.

4. C. v. Gen. Steam Nav. Co., 37 L. T. 37 C. P. 3.

Ordinarily, however, the leaking of a boiler by which goods are injured, where negligence cannot be shown on the part of the carrier, is within the exception. Moosum v. Brit. Ind. Steam Nav. Co., 8 Cal. W. R. C. R. 35.

opinion would seem to be that no greater liability exists when goods are in such boats, than when in the hold of the ship.[1]

Rats—Vermin.—This exception would seem to be necessary for the protection of the carrier, since it has been repeatedly decided that damage by rats does not fall within the meaning of the phrase "perils of the sea."[2]

Obliteration of Marks.—The carrier is not responsible for the misdelivery of goods consequent upon their being improperly marked.[3]

Goods carried on Deck solely at Shipper's Risk.—The presumption in every contract for carriage by water is that the goods shall be stowed below decks.[4] Deck stowage is, therefore, prima facie negligence on the part of the carrier, unless authorized by the bill of lading.[5]

4. Bill of Lading as a Muniment of Title to the Goods.—A bill of lading is the means of securing to the owner his title to goods while the ownership and the actual possession are severed during transportation. The bill represents the goods, and as effective a transfer of ownership and of right to possession may be made by the transfer of the bill as can be made by a physical delivery of the goods themselves. The bill is a representative of the goods, and may be made the vehicle of the transfer of title so long as they are in transit.[6] Where a bill is issued by an agent of a carrier for goods never received for transportation, the carrier cannot be held by a holder of the bill for the goods receipted for.[7]

1. Johnson v. Benson, 4 Moore, 90; Leggett on Bills of Lading, p. 218.

2. Dale v. Hall, 1 Wis. 281; Hunter v. Potts, 4 Camp. 203; Laveronia v. Drury, 8 Exch. 166; The Bark Carlotta, 3 Asp. Mar. Law Cas. (N. S.) 456; 3 Kent Com. 300.

A loss by vermin is not within the exception Perils of the sea.

In The Miletus, 3 Blatchf. (C. C.) 335, it was shown that the labels on an invoice of tea had been eaten by cockroaches, thus occasioning loss to the shippers. The court held that this was not the result of perils of the sea. Numerous cases have decided that the destruction of the bottom of the vessel by worms is not within the exception Perils of the sea. Rohl v. Parr, 1 Esp. 444; Martin v. Salem Marine Ins. Co., 2 Mass. 420; 1 Phillips on Ins., § 1101; Hazzard v. New England Marine Ins. Co., 1 Sumn. (C. C.) 218 See vol. 1, p. 84. ACCIDENTS.

3. Angell on Carriers, sec. 136, and note.

Where the bill properly describes the consignee, the carriers, it would seem, are then bound to see that the goods are properly marked, and to deliver them to the proper consignee. Bradley v. Dumpace, 1 H. & C. 521; The Huntress, Davies, 82. See Leggett on Bills of Lading, 255.

4. The Neptune, 16 L. T. Admr. 36.

5. The Peyton, 2 Curtis, 21; The Delaware, 14 Wall. 579; Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. 9. See supra, JETTISON.

6. Meyerstein v. Barber, L. R. 4 H. L. 317; Blackburn on Sales, 297; Hatfield v. Phillips, 9 M. & W. 649.

Where goods are to be transported over several lines of railroad or water carriers the bill may by custom or contract remain in force during the whole transit. Forbes v. B. & L. R. Co., 133 Mass. 154.

7. This is based upon the principle that the agent has authority to sign bills of lading for goods actually received for transportation only, and if he sign for goods not received, he exceeds his authority, and the carrier is not liable for his acts. Grant v. Norway, 10 C. B. 665; Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 103; McLean v. Fleming, L. R. 2 H. L. S. & D. App. 128; Jessel v. Bath, L. R. 2 Ex. 267; Berkeley v. Watling, 7 Ad. & Ellis, 29.

The doctrine laid down in Grant v. Norway, 10 C. B. 665, has been followed.

5. Negotiability of the Bill.—A bill of lading is not a negotiable instrument in the same sense that a promissory note or bill of exchange is negotiable.[1] It represents specific goods, and not money value. Rights and duties arise by reason of the possession of the goods themselves, as well as by the holding or transfer of their representative, the bill of lading. The effect of the indorsement and delivery of a bill of lading is to transfer to the indorsee or holder such right to or property in the goods represented by it as it was the intention of the parties to pass, and the intention is to be gathered from all the circumstances attending the indorsement and delivery.[2]

Bills Issued in Sets.—Where bills are issued in sets of two or more, and the several parts of the bill are transferred to different parties who respectively make advances upon the faith of the bill, the property in the goods passes to the first transferee, unless a subsequent transferee has a superior equity to that of being like the first—a bona-fide transferee for value.[3] in many of the State courts and in the courts of the United States. See The Schooner Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. 182; Pallard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7; Sears v. Wingate, 3 Allen (Mass.), 103; Stone v. W., St. L. & P. R. Co., 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 48; Dean v. King, 22 Ohio, 118; B. & O. R. Co. v. Wilkens, 44 Md. 11; Hurst v. M. C. R. Co., 29 La. Ann. 446; Louisiana Bank v. Laveille, 52 Mo. 380.

A contrary view seems to obtain in others of the States. Brooke v. N. Y., L. E. & W. R. Co., 16 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 514; Armour v. M. C. R. Co., 65 N. Y. 111; Wichita Bank v. A., T. & S. R. Co., 20 Kan. 519; S. C. & P. R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 10 Neb. 556.

In some of the States legislation has provided that bills of lading shall be conclusive evidence of the receipt of goods. Maryland, 1876, c. ii. s. 1; Rev. Code, 1878, p. 298; Pennsylvania Act, 1866, P. L. 1363; Pur. Dig. 115; Missouri R. S. 1879. s. 557, p 88; Wisconsin R. S. 1878, s. 4424; New York R. S., vol. iii. (7th Ed.) p. 2259; L. 1858, c. 326.

In England the Bill of Lading Act (18 and 19 Vict. c. cxi. s. 3) provides "that every bill of lading in the hands of a consignee or indorsee for valuable consideration, representing goods to have been shipped on board a vessel, shall be conclusive evidence of such shipment as against the master or other person signing the same, notwithstanding that such goods or some part thereof may not have been so shipped unless such holder of the bill of lading shall have had actual notice at the time of receiving the same, that the goods had not been in fact laden on board, provided that the master or other person so signing may exonerate himself in respect of such misrepresentation by showing that it was caused without any default on his part and wholly by the fraud of the shipper or some person under whom the holder claims." For the construction of this act, see Jessel v. Bath, L. R. 2 Ex. 267; Brown v. Powell Coal Co., L. R. 10 C. P. 562; Hubbersty v. Ward, 8 Ex. 330.

1. In several of the States statutes have been enacted with a view to making bills of lading absolutely negotiable or quasi-negotiable. California: Civ. Code, §§ 2127, 2128. Maryland: 1876, c. 262, § 1; Rev. Code 1878, p. 298. Missouri: R. S. 1879, §§ 558, 559, p. 88. New York: R. S. vol. iii. (7th Ed.) p. 2260; L. 1858, c. 326, § 6, as amended by L. 1859, c. 553. Pennsylvania: Purd. Dig. p. 160; pl. 6, act of April 5, 1849. Wisconsin: R. S. 1878, §§ 4194, 4424. These statutes have been subjected to judicial construction in the following cases: Shaw v. Railroad Co., 101 U. S. 557, construing the Pennsylvania statute; Tiedman v. Knox, 53 Md. 612, construing the Maryland statute. See also B. & O. R. Co. v. Wilkens, 44 Md. 27.

2. Sewell v. Burdick, 52 L. T. 445, and cases therein discussed.

3. Meyerstein v. Barber, L. R. 44 L. 317; Fearon v. Bowers, 1 H. Bl. 364; Kent's Comm. 308; Skilling v. Bollman, 6 Mo. App. 76; Glynn v. E. & W. India Dock Co., L. R. 7 App. 600.

In Sanders v. McLean, 11 Q. B. Div. 327, it was held that a purchaser of goods to be paid for on delivery of the bills of lading is bound to pay upon the tender Transfer of the Bill by one having Ownership in the Goods.—A bill of lading cannot, generally speaking, represent the goods which it purports to represent, unless it has been issued to their true owner.[1] If the carrier be compelled by legal proceedings to deliver the goods to their true owner, such a delivery is a complete justification for a failure to deliver according to the directions of the bailor.[2]

Bill as Evidence of Title in Consignee.—Where goods are consigned without reservation on the part of the consignor the prima-facie legal presumption is that the consignee is the owner.[3] of a duly indorsed bill which is effective to pass the property, notwithstanding that the bill was drawn in triplicate, and that all the copies were not tendered or accounted for.

The fact of consignment does not vest an absolute title in the consignee. His title is not complete until the bill of lading comes into his hands.[4]

1. The Idaho, 3 Otto (U. S.), 575; Blossom v. Champion, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 554; Dows v. Perrin, 16 N. Y. 325; Moore v. Robinson, 62 Ala. 537; Saltus v. Everett, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 267; Traders' Bank v. F. & M. Bank, 60 N. Y. 40; Richardson v. Smith, 33 Ga. Suppl. 95; Union Trans. Co. v. Yeager, 34 Ind. 1; Craven v. Ryder, 6 Taunt. 433.

2. Bliven v. Hudson Riv. R. Co., 36 N. Y. 403; King v. Richards, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 418; Bates v. Stanton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 79; Hardman v. Wilcock, 9 Bing. 382; Biddle v. Bond, 6 Best. & S. 225; Cheeseman v. Exall, 6 Exch. 341.

"The modern and best-considered cases treat as a matter of no importance the question how the bailor acquired the possession he has delivered to his bailee, and adjudge that if the bailee has delivered the property to one who had the right to it as the true owner, he may defend himself against any claim of his principal." The Idaho, 3 Otto, 575.

A special agent authorized to deliver a bill of lading only upon payment of a bill of exchange drawn against the goods and attached to the bill of lading cannot bind his principal by a delivery of the bill made without such payment, and a party obtaining possession of the bill with the assent of such agent, but without the assent of the principal, acquires no title to the goods as against the latter. Stollenwerck v. Thatcher, 115 Mass. 224.

Where, however, the owner causes a bill to be issued in the name of another, for the purpose of clothing the latter with an apparent ownership, a bona-fide purchaser will be protected. Saltus v. Everett, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 267; Pickering v. Buck, 15 East, 44.

3. Congar v. C. & G.U. R. Co., 17 Wis 477; Griffith v. Ingledew, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 429; McCaulley v Davidson, 13 Minn. 162; Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. (U.S.) 100; Krulder v. Ellison, 47 N. Y. 36; Watkins v. Paine, 57 Ga. 50; Merchants', etc., Co. v. Smith, 76 Ill. 542; Sedgwick v. Cottingham, 54 Iowa, 512; Torrey v. Corliss, 33 Me. 333; Arnold v. Prout, 51 N. H. 587; Schlessinger v. Stratton, 9 R. I. 578.

Such a shipment vests in the consignee a right to bring suit against the carrier for any breach of the latter's duty in respect of the goods, even through the consignor has paid the carrier for the transportation. See Griffith v. Ingledew, and other cases cited supra, and Fowler v. Cooper, 3 La. 215; Madison, etc., R. Co. v. Whitesel, 11 Ind. 55; Vallé v. Carré, 36 Mo. 575; Butler v. Smith, 6 George, 457.

Where the consignee has parted with his bill, as by indorsing it to one making an advance upon it, its reindorsement to him upon his repaying the advance will reinvest him with his right under the original contract, to bring suit against the carrier. Short v. Simpson, L. R. 1 C. P. 248.

4. Bruce v. Andrews, 36 Mo. 593; Hauseman v. Nye, 62 Ind. 485; Mitchell v. Ede, 11 Ad. & Ellis. 260; Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Peters (U. S.), 444; Pratt v. Parkman, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 42; Bank v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497; Bank v. Crocker, 111 Mass. 163; Taylor v. Turner, 87 Ill. 296.

Where the consignee does not accept the consignment, and disclaims interest in it, the title is held to be revested in the consignor. Ezell v. English, 6 Porter (Ala.), 311; Chapin v. Clark, 31 La. Ann. 846; Ela v. Express Co., 29 Wis. 611; Audenreid v. Randall, 3 Cliff. (C. C.) 99.

Where the bill is indorsed in blank, and sent to the consignee to fill up the blank,

Bill Drawn to Shipper's Order.—Where the bill makes the goods deliverable to the vendor's order it is strong prima-facie evidence of the vendor's intention to reserve to himself the jus disponendi, and prevent title to the goods shipped from passing to the vendee.[1]

Where a bill is drawn to the order of the consignor and assigned by him to one who discounts a draft drawn against the consignment, it is a clear presumption that the consignor intended that no title to the goods should pass to the vendee until the acceptance or payment of the draft.[2]

Bill as Collateral Security.—Where a bill is transferred or delivered as collateral security the rights of the pledgee thereunder are the same as those of an actual purchaser of the goods for value, so far as the exercise of those rights is necessary for the holder's protection.[3] The rights under the bill may be transferred by the person to whom it is issued to another by indorsement,[4] and where there is clear evidence of an intention to pass title by the delivery of the bill, the title under it will not be invalidated by the mere omission of a formal indorsement or other written assign-the consignment can vest property in no one until the blank is filled. Chandler v. Sprague, 46 Mass. 306.

1. Mason v. Great Western R. Co., 31 Up. Can. Q. B. 73; Alderman v. Eastern R. Co., 115 Mass. 233; Security Bank v. Luttgen, 29 Minn. 363; Jenkyns v. Brown, 14 Q. B. 496; Elleshaw v. Magniac, 6 Ex. 569; Ogg v. Shuter, L. R. 1 C. P. 47.

The same construction is given where the goods are made deliverable to an agent of the consignor. The St. Joze Indiano, 1 Wheat. 208; Dows v. Nat. Exchange Bank, 1 Otto (U. S.), 618.

2. Dows v. Nat. Exchange Bank, 1 Otto (U. S.), 618; Alderman v. Eastern R. Co., 115 Mass. 233; Stollenwerck v. Thatcher, 115 Mass. 224; Security Bank v. Brown, 14 Q. B. 496; Mason v. Great Western R. Co., 31 U. Can. Q. B. 73; People's Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 3 P. & B. (New Bruns.) 268.

But in Dows v. Nat. Exchange Bank, 1 Otto (U. S.), 618, it is said "that where a bill of lading has been taken containing a stipulation that the goods shipped shall be delivered to the order of the shipper or to some person designated by him other than the one on whose account they have been shipped, the inference that it was not intended the property in the goods should pass except by subsequent order of the person holding the bill, may be rebutted, though it is held to be almost conclusive: and we agree that where there are circumstances pointing both ways, some indicating an intent to pass the ownership immediately, notwithstanding the bill of lading,—in other words, where there is anything to rebut the effect of the bill—it becomes a question for the jury whether the property has passed." See also Joyce v. Swan, 17 C. B. N. S. 83; Hobart v. Littlefield, 13 R. I. 341.

Where a shipment is made by an owner to his factor, the title to the goods is in the consignee only as agent of the shipper. The consignee, so far as third parties are concerned, may, however, be dealt with as the owner.

Where a bill of lading is delivered to a factor, having a balance of account in his favor it is equivalent to actual possession of the goods. Rice v. Austin, 17 Mass. 197; Vallé v. Carré, 36 Mo. 575; Davis v. Aubin, 24 Vt. 55; Wade v. Hamilton, 30 Ga. 450.

The claim of a consignee for advances is preferred to that of an attaching creditor, when the former receives the bill previous to the levy. Vallé v. Carré 36 Mo. 575; Park v. Porter, 2 Robinson, 342.

But it must be affirmatively shown that he did receive before the levy. Hyde v. Smith, 12 La. 144.

3. Dows v. National Exchange Bank, 1 Otto. 618; Tilden v. Minor, 45 Vt. 195; F. & M. Bank v. Logan, 74 N. Y. 568; Marine Bank v. Wright. 48 N. Y. 1.

The pledgee is entitled to maintain an action of replevin for the possession of the goods. Fifth Nat. Bank v. Bayley, 115 Mass. 228; Bank Green Bay v. Dearborn, 115 Mass. 219.

4. The Thames, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 98, and cases cited in the opinion of Mr. Justice Strong.

ment.[1] The insertion of the consignee's name in the bill gives him no right to the goods which can be asserted against the superior equity of a bona-fide advance to the consignor upon the security of the bill, even though the consignor be indebted to the consignee upon a general account in a sum greater than the value of the goods.[2] A bill of lading attached and forwarded with a time draft for the price of the goods is, in the absence of special conditions, a security for the acceptance of the draft rather than for its payment, and the consignee is entitled to the possession of the bill on the acceptance of the draft.[3]

The Title of the Holder of the Bill and the Right of Stoppage in Transitu.—The right of stoppage of the goods in transitu inheres in a consignor who is an unpaid vendor, and is exercisable in the case of the insolvency of the vendee. This right of stoppage may be defeated by a transfer of the bill to a bona-fide indorsee for value.[4]

BILL OF PARTICULARS. (See also ACCOUNT; ASSUMPSIT; DEBT; LIBEL; SET-OFF; TORT.)

1. Definition.—A bill of particulars is a written statement of the

1. Bank of Green Bay v. Dearborn, 115 Mass. 219; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497; Holmes v. Germ. Sec. Bank, 87 Pa. St. 525; Campbell v. Alford, 57 Tex. 159; M. C. R. Co. v. Phillips, 60 Ill. 190; Davenport Bank v. Homeyer. 45 Mo. 145; Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co. v. Irvin, 46 Ind. 180; Fowler v. Meikleham, 7 Low. Can. 367; Glidden v. Lucas, 7 Cal. 26.

In California it is provided by statute (Civ. Code, § 2128) that when a bill of lading is made to "bearer," or in equivalent terms, a simple transfer thereof by delivery conveys the same title as an indorsement.

2. Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497; Allen v. Williams, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 297; First Nat. Bank v. Crocker, 111 Mass. 163.

3. Nat. Bank Commerce v. Merchants' Nat. Bank. 1 Otto, 92; Shepherd v. Harrison, L. R. 4 Q. B. 493; Coventry v. Gladstone, L. R. 4 Eq. 493.

4. Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63; 1 H. Bl. 357; 6 East, 21, is the leading case upon this principle, decided 1793. See also Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 386; Becker v. Hallgarten, 86 N. Y. 167; Lee v. Kimball, 45 Me. 172; Schumacher v. Eby, 24 Pa. St. 521; Relyea v. N. H. Rolling Mill Co., 42 Conn. 579; Newhall v. C. P. R. Co., 51 Cal. 345; Halliday v. Hamilton, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 560.

The transfer must be for value and without fraud. Rosenthal v. Dessau, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 49.

Proof that the assignee of the bill from the original vendee had knowledge at the time of the transfer of the latter's insolvency is admissible in a contest with the vendor to show that the bill was not transferred in good faith. Loeb v. Peters, 63 Ala. 243; Ilsley v. Stubbs, 9 Mass. 65; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 275; Kitchen v. Spear. 30 Vt. 545.

One who makes a temporary advance to the vendee, taking the bill as his security, or one who by any similar transaction becomes a technical purchaser for value, has the same rights as a buyer of the goods. Becker v. Hallgarten, 86 N. Y. 167; Dows v. Rush, 28 Barb. 157; Dows v. Greene, 24 N. Y. 638.

A transfer of the bill in payment of an antecedent debt destroys the consignor's right of stoppage. Leash v. Scott, L. R. 2 Q. B. 376; Lee v. Kimball, 45 Me. 172. See also Chartered Bank v. Henderson, L. R. 5 P. C. 501.

To defeat the right of stoppage, the bill must not only be assigned or indorsed, but actually delivered to the purchaser of the goods, the assignee of the bill. Ex parte Golding Davis. L. R. 13 Ch. 628. See also Kemp v. Falk, 7 App. Cas. 582.

details of the claim [1] or defence in an action at law,[2] expressed informally,[3] but with greater particularity than is usual in pleadings, and furnished by one party to the other in compliance with a statute, or a rule or special order of court.[4]

2. Under what Circumstances Required.—In some States bills of particulars must be furnished with the pleadings or on request in certain classes of actions. Apart from such provisions, a court's discretionary power to order such a bill extends to all descriptions

1. This word is used in the broadest sense, as in Orvis v. Dana, 1 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 268, 281.

2. The practice of requiring a bill of particulars, a thing unknown to the early common law (Dempster v. Purnell, 3 Man. & Gr. 375), was necessitated by the use of the common counts in actions of debt and assumpsit, but has been extended "to all descriptions of actions where the circumstances are such that justice demands that a party should be apprised of the matters for which he is put on trial with greater particularity than is required by the rules of pleading." Tilton v. Beecher, 59 N. Y. 176. See also 3 Chitty's Gen. Prac. 612.

The practice is strictly confined to common-law actions, whether under the old forms of pleading, or those of a modern code of procedure. It has no place in suits in equity. In a suit against a surviving partner and the representatives of a deceased partner to recover the amount of notes due by the partnership, and the balance of an account, the suit being brought in equity because of the surviving partner's insolvency, a bill of particulars was asked for, but Walworth, C., said: "I have not been able to find any case in which the court of chancery has made an order for a specification of the complainant's demand in the nature of a bill of particulars at law. Upon the first view of this case I was inclined to think this was a case in which the defendants were entitled to a specification of the definite amount and particular nature of each item of the account claimed against them under the general charges in the bill, on the same principle which governs courts of law in requiring the plaintiffs to furnish a particular of his demand upon a general declaration. But upon further examination and reflection, I am satisfied that such a course is not necessary for the attainment of justice, and that the adoption of such a practice would in many cases lead to great and unnecessary delay and expense. The forms of pleading in this court are such as to furnish the defendant in most cases all the information as to the particular nature of the claim made against him, which can be necessary to enable him to meet it by an appropriate defence. And if, as in this case, the complainant seeks to recover a book account against the defendant upon a general allegation of indebtedness in the bill, and without a specification of the items, the court at the hearing will not undertake to settle the account. It will in that case be referred to a master with liberty to the defendant to introduce new testimony or to make any legal or equitable defence which he may have to each and every item thereof." Cornell v. Bostwick, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 160.

3. That is, without the technical formality of pleadings, but it must not be vague or unspecific. See note 1, p. 246.

4. By the New York Code of 1877, § 531, the items of an account alleged in a pleading need not be set out therein, but within ten days after a written demand by the other party a verified copy of the account must be furnished him; otherwise the account cannot be given in evidence. This form of a bill of particulars is obtained as of course only in cases of an account in the strict sense of the term, i.e., an entry of debits and credits in a book, or upon paper, of things bought and sold, or services performed, with date and price or value. Dowdney v. Volkening, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 313.

And the fact that the plaintiff has furnished a bill, without an order of court, in a case where the code did not require this, does not affect the court's discretionary power to order another bill. Langdon v. Brown, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 367.

See the various State codes, which in general conform to that of New York in making the bill essential in suits founded on accounts.

In Pennsylvania, a rule for a bill of particulars under the common counts is of course, but in all other cases it requires a special allocatur. Mitchell on Motions and Rules, 17, 40. Except that the respondent in divorce can always have a rule on the libellant to furnish a bill of the particulars of the cause of action, in default of which a judgment of non-pros. will be entered thirty days after service of actions, and may be exercised as well in behalf of the plaintiff as of the defendant.[1]

A bill will be ordered on the defendant's motion whenever the complaint or declaration is too general, not stating the cause of action with sufficient fulness to enable him to prepare his defence.[2] of notice of the rule. Act of 25th May, 1878; 1 Purd. Dig. 615, pl. 14.

1. U. S. v. Tilden, 10 Ben. (U. S. D. C.) 547; Commonwealth v. Giles, 1 Gray (Mass.), 466; Blackie v. Neilson, 6 Bos. (N. Y.) 681; Schile v. Brokhahne, 9 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 353; Moore v. Belloni, 10 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 184; Fullerton v. Gaylord, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 551; Ives v. Shaw, 31 How. (N. Y.) 54; Claflin v. Smith, 66 How. (N. Y.) 168; Tilton v. Beecher, 59 N. Y. 176; Dowdney v. Volkening, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 313; Powers v. Hughes, 39 N. Y. Super. Ct. 482; Clegg v. American Newspaper Un., 7 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 59; Butler v. Mann, 9 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 49; McDonald v. Barnhill, 58 Ia. 669.

The right to call for a bill of particulars does not affect the right to demur for insufficiency in the pleading. Wolf v. Schofield, 38 Ind. 175.

2. McCarney v. McCamm, 2 Bro. (Pa.) 40; Tilton v. Beecher, 59 N. Y. 176.

"Whenever the form of the declaration is so general as not to apprise the defendant of the nature, character, and extent of the claim set up against him, he may demand a bill of particulars. Such a bill is not only proper by way of limiting the plaintiff in his proof to the specific demands made by him, but is essential to enable the defendant to prepare fully his defence, and to guard him against surprise. The right is not only sanctioned by authority, but by reason and propriety." Brown v. Calvert, 4 Dana (Ky.), 219.

For example, in an action on a policy of marine insurance, a bill of particulars of the articles destroyed or damaged will be ordered. Cockcroft v. Ins. Co., 9 Bos. (N. Y.) 681.

So in an action against a collecting agent, particulars of the claims which he had negligently failed to collect. Wetmore v. Jennys, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 53.

So in an action on a bond with collateral conditions, there being a general averment of non-compliance. Bancroft v. Freeman, 5 Weekly Notes (Pa.). 98.

So in an action for a fraudulent conspiracy to procure money on false vouchers, particulars of the false accounts and the bills alleged to have been paid. Mayor v. Marrener, 49 How. (N. Y.) 36.

So in an action for damages for conspiring to withhold evidence in a previous action, particulars of the evidence withheld, stating the names of the witnesses and what they would have testified to, the documents suppressed, etc. Leigh v. Atwater, 2 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 419.

Particulars may be called for in real actions. Vischer v. Conant, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 396. And also in mixed actions, as ejectment. Den v. Phillips, 21 N. J. L. 436.

Even where there are special counts, if they are not more precise than the usual common counts, the defendant is entitled to particulars. Norris v. Hanson, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 507; Wetmore v. Jennys, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 53.

In a criminal case, a bill of particulars is required when the indictment fails to give notice of the special matters intended to be proved. Williams v. Commonwealth, 91 Pa. 493. As in a general indictment for embezzlement. People v. McKinney, 10 Mich. 54.

The information sought must be necessary. Hence, if the claim be fairly described in the pleadings, no bill of particulars will be ordered. Vila v. Weston, 33 Conn. 42; Bangs v. Ocean Bank, 53. How. (N. Y.) 51; Nevitt v. Rabe, 6 Miss. 653; Tierney v. Duffy, 59 Miss. 364.

The defendant must satisfy the court that he has no knowledge of the case the plaintiff intends to set up at the trial, and no means of knowledge without the aid of the court. It is not enough merely that his defence is embarrassed by the want of such knowledge. Brown v. G. W. R., 26 L. Times, 398; s. c., 20 Weekly R. 585.

Some special ground for the demand must be shown. Horlock v. Lediard, 10 Mee. & W. 677; s. c., 12 L. Jour. Ex. 33; Orvis v. Dana, 1 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 268.

The particulars required are those of the matter in dispute only, and not of collateral matters. Hence, in a suit on an agreement, the consideration for which was stated to be 'sums of money, pieces of property, and accounts, no particulars of these could be ordered. Crane v. Crane, 82 Ind. 459.

So in an action for a false representation of the credit of a third party, the defendant was refused particulars of the dealings between the plaintiff and the third party. Luck v. Handley, 4 Wels. H. & G. 486.

So, if the defence be indefinite the plaintiff has a right to call for particulars,[1] and this most frequently happens in cases of set-off.[2]

Where the defendant's means of ascertaining the items of the claim are as good as the plaintiff's, no bill of particulars will be ordered,[3] and the same is true where from the nature of the case the items of the claim or the details of the defence cannot be expected to be given with certainty.[4]

While a bill may now be ordered in an action of tort,[5] this happens much less frequently than in cases of contract, the general rule in tort being that if a pleading is not sufficiently specific the remedy is by demurrer.[6]

Only particulars of matters of fact can be obtained, not of matters of law. Roberts v. Rowlands, 3 Mee. & W. 543.

1. Diossy v. Rust, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 374.

2. For example, Reed v. Church, 7 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 79; Mercer v. Sayre, 3 John. (N. Y.) 248.

Where the defendant, an administrator, put in a cross-claim for services rendered the plaintiff by the intestate, particulars were ordered. Mason v. Ring, 10 Bos. (N. Y.) 598.

3. Butler v. Mann, 9 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 49; Young v. De Mott, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 30; Blackie v. Nelson, 6 Bos. (N. Y.) 681; Powers v. Hughes, 39 N. Y. Super. Ct. 482; Hayes v. Davidson, 15 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 85; 33 Hun (N. Y.), 446; U. S. v. Tilden, 10 Ben. (U. S. D. C.) 547; Heft v. Jones, 9 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 541.

In a suit for an account, between partners after dissolution, it was held that unless the claim was for moneys contributed to or paid for the firm, not evidenced by or intelligible from the entries upon the books of the firm, one partner was presumed to have as much knowledge of the details as the other, and a bill of particulars was refused. Depew v. Leal, 5 Du. (N. Y.) 663.

4. U. S. v. Tilden, 10 Ben. (U. S. D. C.) 547. This action was for arrears of income-tax, the amounts to be recovered depending upon the amount of the defendant's income, of which the plaintiff had not yet had discovery.

So in an action for damages to a house by an explosion in the defendant's oil works, it was said: "This is not a case where the plaintiff should be required to furnish particulars. The action is for damages which the plaintiff cannot specify with certainty; the amount will depend on proof to be furnished after examination of the injuries, and may well consist of the testimony of experts." Muller v. Bush Mfg. Co., 15 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 88.

In an action for breach of warranty of a horse, particulars of the unsoundness complained of will not be required. Pylie v. Stephen, 6 Mee. & W. 814. Nor when the cause of action is work done in a series of acts, and there is no mode of measuring the compensation for each. Johnson v. Mallory, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 681.

Where the defendant, by inducing his confederates to destroy the books and papers from which the bill of particulars would have been prepared, has made the preparation impossible to a great extent, he is not entitled to call for it. People v. Tweed, 63 N. Y. 194.

So where the items are, if in existence at all, in the public documents of a municipal corporation or the private books and papers of the defendant's confederates. People v. Tweed, 63 N. Y. 194.

In a suit against a railway company for overcharges on many items, it was held that the defendant must first furnish a copy of the tariff and charges before he could call for particulars. Sutton v. G. W. R., 10 Weekly Rep. 563.

In an action by a member against a stock exchange for expulsion, the answer relied on the provision of the constitution of the exchange, authorizing expulsion for "obvious fraud." The plaintiff was held not entitled to particulars of the fraud. Solomon v. McKay, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138.

5. Tilton v. Beecher, 59 N. Y. 176; Orvis v. Dana, 1 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 268, 280; Lagan v. Gibson, 9 Ir. R. C. L. 507.

6. Furbush v. Phillips, 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 198; Peters v. City, 12 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 51.

In an action for consequential damages resulting from a sheriff's illegal seizure of merchandise, whereby the plaintiff became unable to fulfil his contracts, the court refused to order a bill of particulars of the contracts. People v. Marquette Circ. Judge, 39 Mich. 437.

In an action for negligence which caused the death of the plaintiff's intes-

The application to the court must always be accompanied by an affidavit of the necessity of the particulars sought.[1] The pendency of an order for a bill of particulars is not a stay of proceedings unless so expressed and served on the other party.[2]

3. Time of Moving For.—A bill of particulars may usually be moved for at any time before trial, even before appearance entered,[3] or after issue joined,[4] or a reference to arbitrators.[5] At the trial it is too late,[6] and if a party delay to move for a bill, it should be at his own costs.[7]

4. Form and Contents.—A bill of particulars must be specific, so as fairly to apprise the other party of the nature of the claim or defence made, and of the evidence to be offered.[8] It is tate, particulars of the damage suffered were refused. Murphy v. Kipp, 1 Du. (N. Y.) 659.

So with particulars of the pretences, in an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences. U. S. v. Ross, 1 Morr. (Ia.) 164.

In an action for slander or libel, the plaintiff may be required to furnish particulars of the facts constituting his right of action. Clark v. Munsell, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 373. And of the persons to whom the defendant had communicated, and the occasions when he had uttered the slander. Wood v. Jones, 1 Fost. & Fin. 301; Slator v. Slator, 8 L. Times, N. S. 856.

So if justification is pleaded, particulars of the facts on which the defendant relies may be ordered. Wren v. Weild, L. R. 4 Q. B. 213; Jones v. Bewicke, L. R. 5 C. P. 32; Commonwealth v. Snelling, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 321. But in these and like cases special ground for the motion must be shown. Horlock v. Lediard, 10 Mee. & Well. 677; Lagan v. Gibson, 9 Ir. R. C. L. 507.

1. Willis v. Bailey, 19 John. (N. Y.) 268.

2. Roberts v. Roe, 10 Mee. & W. 691; s. c., 14 L. Jour. Ex. 101; Wilson v. Hunt, 1 Chitty, 641; Academy v. Landon, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 620. But in Pensylvania the rule either for a bill or a more specific bill works a stay during its pendency. Mitchell on Motions and Rules, 41; Pfaelzer v. Car Co., 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 324.

3. Derry v. Lloyd, 1 Chit. 724; Roosevelt v. Gardenier, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 463.

In such case, a plea to the jurisdiction may be made after the bill is obtained, for the moving for it is not such an appearance as would prevent this. Watkins v. Brown, 5 Ark. 197; Forbes v. Smith, 10 Wel. H. & G. 717; s. c., 24 L. Jour. Ex. 167.

On the other hand, a request for particulars can be deferred until after discovery is had. Young v. De Mott, 1 Barb. S. C. (N. Y.) 30.

4. Marcus v. Boling, 5 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 542.

So late an application is, in any case, looked on with suspicion. Andrews v. Cleveland, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 437.

In Florida the statutory right to a bill of particulars is held waived by pleading, so that it then becomes discretionary with the court to order it. Waterman v. Mattair, 5 Fla. 211.

In Indiana a failure to demur or move for a bill is a waiver of the right to do so. Chamness v. Chamness, 53 Ind. 301.

After a judgment for the plaintiff had been opened by the court of appeals so far as to allow the defendant, as administrator, to introduce a cross-claim for services rendered by his intestate, particulars of these were ordered. Mason v. Ring, 10 Bos. (N. Y.) 598.

5. Weller v. Weller, 4 Hun (N. Y.), 195.

But not to interrupt a trial actually proceeding before a referee. Cadwell v. Goodenough, 28 How. (N. Y.) 479.

Under the old English practice it was too late after a reference, as that took the case out of the court. Ashworth v. Heathcote, 4 Moo. & Pay. 396; s. c., 6 Bing. 596; but this is not the modern rule. Gibbs v. Knightly, 2 Hur. & N. 34.

6. Preston v. Neale, 12 Gray (Mass.), 222; Finlay v. Stewart, 56 Pa. 183.

If a further bill is necessary, it should be ordered before the trial. Kellogg v. Paine, 8 How. (N. Y.) 329.

7. Casterline v. Day, 26 Kan. 306.

8. Prichard v. Nelson, 16 Mee. & W. 771; Gilpin v. Howell, 5 Pa. 41; C., St. L., etc., R. v. Provine, 16 Miss. 288; M., K. & T. R. v. Brown, 14 Kan. 557; Drake v. Thayer, 5 Rob. (N. Y.) 694; Brown v. Williams, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 368; Smith v. Hicks, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 48; Bangs v. Bank, 53 How. (N. Y.) 51; Tillow v. Hutchinson, 15 N. J. L. 178; important that the date,[1] as well as the amount,[2] and the gen-

Stothoff v. Dunham, 19 N. J. L. 121; McVane v. Williams, 50 Conn. 548; Moore v. Estes, 23 Ark. 152; Canal Co. v. Knapp, 5 Pet (U. S.) 541.

If the plaintiff's bill do not give as much information as a declaration, it will be insufficient, and ground for a nonsuit unless leave to amend is obtained. Babcock v. Thompson, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 446; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 235.

But it need not show a cause of action, as the complaint (or declaration) must do that. Stead v. Kehrman, 16 Phila. (Pa.) 79.

A mistake in a bill of particulars, not calculated to deceive, is immaterial, and it is sufficient if it indicate the transaction out of which the demand arose, without specifying a technical description of the right of action. Jacobi v. Pfar, 25 Ark. 4.

The adverse party cannot object to the particulars, or move to strike out any items, for any other cause than a failure to give him due information. "The plaintiff has a right to present his case according to his own view of the facts. The responsibility of proving the items rests with him, and he is entitled to an opportunity of so doing." Matthews v. Hubbard, 47 N. Y. 428.

1. Quin v. Astor, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 577; Kellogg v. Paine, 8 How. (N. Y.) 329; Humphry v. Cortelyou, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 54; Wetmore v. Jennys, 1 Barb. S. C. (N. Y.) 53; Goodwin v. Walls, 52 Ind. 268.

It is not sufficient to lay the time with a videlicet. Livingston v. Enochs, 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 244.

But the date may be stated as "on or about a certain day," and in that case the plaintiff is not restricted to proof of that special day. Duncan v. Ray, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 530.

Where the claim is for work and labor done, an omission to state the time has been held not fatal. Mugan v. Haley, 16 Kan. 68.

An error in the date is unimportant, if it do not mislead. Millwood v. Walker, 2 Taunt. 224.

2. Where the items were given as "damages, $5000; balance due on settlement, $5000; money received at New Orleans on account of plaintiff, $5000," and without dates, this was held an insufficient bill. Wetmore v. Jennys, 1 Barb. S. C. (N. Y.) 53.

A bill is sufficiently definite if it set forth the foundation of the claim, and apprise the other party of the evidence to be offered, so that there can be no mistake as to the preparation to be made to resist the claim. Hence where the bill stated $605 as due, a recovery of $644 was allowed for $605. Smith v. Hicks, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 48.

The bill should state the sums claimed, when and how they arose, and the items of the demand. They should not be stated as "amount claimed." Moran v. Morrissey, 18 Abb. (N. Y.) 131; s. c., 28 How. (N. Y.) 100.

A statement, "1873, Aug. 30. To merchandise, $114.50;" has been held a sufficient bill of particulars. Hays v. Samuels, 55 Tex. 560.

An item of "balance from former account" is insufficient. Buckner v. Meredith, 1 Brew. (Pa.) 306.

So is a bill stating a claim "for cash" (but not stating whether it was lent or paid by the plaintiff, or received by the defendant), also on several notes but without describing them, and on certain items of goods sold, giving dates and sums with particularity, but adding, "The same items as above in every respect in each year and on every day of the same (Sundays and 4th of July excluded) from Sept. 1, 1838, to Jan. 1, 1840." Stanley v. Millard, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 50.

So is a bill in this form:—"A. W. to C. B., Dr. To moneys received by the said W. for and belonging to the said B. at different times during the years 1840, 1841, . . . and in various sums, viz., $200, $100, . . . in all amounting to $1400, . . . but in what particular months or on what particular days of such months the said B. is unable to state, as he kept no account of the days, nor is he able to ascertain the same, but he believes the said W. well knows the dates at which the said sums were respectively received as he left the said W. to keep the accounts, being himself unable to read or write." Bates v. Wotkyns, 2 How. (N. Y.) 18.

In an action for money had and received, the bill specified certain bank-bills, but described the rest as "bank-bills current in this commonwealth amounting to $500," and included a claim on "two checks on Boston banks, amounting to $250." This was held wholly insufficient, and ground for a nonsuit. Babcock v. Thompson, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 446.

In a suit on notes, the bill of particulars usually states the money due on them and describes them, but it may eral character[1] of each item be given with all the exactness attainable; but no claims not made in the pleadings should be included,[2] and, as a general rule, credits need not be stated.[3]

Where the pleadings are required to be sworn to, the bill of particulars must be verified in like manner.[4]

5. Use and Effect.—The object of a bill of particulars is to amplify a pleading and to indicate specifically the claim set up.[5] It give copies of the notes. Stowits v. Bank, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 186.

If a copy of the note be filed with the declaration or complaint, no bill of particulars is necessary. Tebbetts v. Pickering, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 83; People v. Pearson, 2 Ill. 458, 473; Galloway v. Trout, 2 Ia. 595.

But this does not entitle the plaintiff to disregard an order for a bill of particulars unless the note is expressly stated to be the only demand. Reynolds v. Woods, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 642; Garrett v. Teller, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 643.

Where an item is for cash paid on a draft, no copy need be added. Howard v. Bohn, 27 Ga. 174.

In an action for the balance of a bank-account, a schedule of the dates and amounts of the deposits is sufficient. Insurance Co. v. Bank, 12 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 251.

A charge for interest need not be stated. Lanning v. Swarts, 9 How. (N. Y.) 434.

And a bill stating that certain notes were "with interest," did not prevent a recovery on notes proved to be due without interest. McNair v. Gilbert, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 344.

Where the damages are unliquidated, it is enough to state the damages claimed. Dean v. White, 5 Clarke (Ia.), 266.

In cases of contract, precision as to values and amounts can be readily acquired; aliter in cases of tort. Hence, in trespass, a bill giving the gross amount of each of five classes of damage was sufficient. Schile v. Brokhahne, 4 N. Y. Super. Ct. 354.

1. It is enough that the bill be as full as is customary among merchants when they have previously sent invoices. Frechling v. Ketchum, 39 Mich. 299.

On a claim for a way-going crop, the bill of particulars should state the kind of crop and the number of acres cultivated. O'Connell v. Summers, 5 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 149.

A bill of particulars for work done and materials furnished to a building need not specify the time when each piece of work was done, but should specify the parts of the building to which the work was done. Nichols v. Edwards, 8 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 470.

A statement of work as done "per contract" is not too indefinite. Johnson v. Cummiskey, 8 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 357; Newlin v. Armstrong, 8 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 255.

A bill of particulars of a physician's claim for services need state only the number and dates of the visits. Van Bibber v. Merritt, 12 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 272.

2. Drake v. Thayer, 5 Rob. (N. Y.) 694; People v. Monroe Common Pleas, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 200.

A bill of particulars in an action for wages cannot include a claim for money returned to the defendant as a loan after it had been received in payment of wages. Judd v. Burton, 51 Mich. 74.

In an action for the non-delivery of cotton shipped in Nov. 1879, and March 1881, it was held that the bill of particulars could not be amended so as to include a charge for cotton lost "during the cotton season of 1879–80." C., St. L. etc., R. v. Provine, 61 Miss. 288.

Where the complaint contained only the common counts, with a bill of particulars as follows: "1882, Feb. 6, to cash lent and money had and received, $350;" it was held that there could be no recovery for money paid under duress. McVane v. Williams, 50 Conn. 548.

3. Ryckman v. Haight, 15 John. (N. Y.) 222.

Nor any set-offs. Williams v. Shaw, 4 Abb. (N. Y.) 209; Giles v. Betz, 15 Abb. (N. Y.) 285.

Where the action is for the balance of an account, credits are essential to show what the claim is, and must be stated. Adlington v. Appleton, 4 Camp. 410.

In England, since the judicature acts, the plaintiff must give particulars of credits, if required. Godden v. Corsten, L. R. 5 C. P. D. 17; s. c., 41 L. Times, 527.

4. Objection to non-verification is waived by delay. Paine v. Smith, 32 Wis. 335. And must in any event be made before the trial. Dennison v. Smith, 1 Cal. 437.

5. Landon v. Sage, 11 Conn. 302; restricts the proof and limits the demand,[1] but it is not intended to disclose to the adverse party the evidence relied on.[2] It is

Dean v. Mann, 28 Conn. 352; People v. Monroe, C. P. 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 200; Matthews v. Hubbard, 47 N. Y. 428; Melvis v. Wood, 4 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 438; Higenbotam v. Green, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 214; Davis v. Freeman, 10 Mich. 188.

Its object is to inform the adverse party of the nature of the claim, and to limit the proof to the amount therein mentioned. Dempster v. Purnell, 3 Man. & Gr. 375.

It is intended to furnish "that information which a reasonable man would require respecting the matters against which he is called upon to defend himself. Rennie v. Beresford, 15 Mee. & W. 78; s. c., 15 L. Jour. Ex. 78.

But it cannot enlarge, alter, or amend the pleading. Pickering v. De Rochemont, 45 N. H. 67.

1. Brown v. Williams, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 368; Bowman v. Earle, 3 Du. (N. Y.) 691; Melvin v. Wood, 4 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 438; Com'th v. Giles, 1 Gray (Mass.), 466; Williams v. Sinclair, 3 McL. (U. S. C. C.) 289; Hall v. Sewell, 9 Gill (Md.), 146; Harding v. Griffin, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 462.

A bill of particulars for "money advanced" restricts the plaintiff to proof of a technical loan of money. Steinman v. Slaymaker, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 132.

Where there were counts in assumpsit for the price of certain horses sold, and also for money had and received, the bill of particulars comprised claims for a balance of an account stated, and for the price of horses sold and delivered. The plaintiff sought to introduce evidence of a sale by the defendant as agent for the plaintiff under the count for money had and received. Lord Eldon held that the plaintiff had limited his claim by the bill of particulars, which was not sufficiently large to let in the evidence. Holland v. Hopkins, 2 Bos. & Pul. 243.

The plaintiff can, however, recover all that appears due on the defendant's evidence. Williams v. Allen, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 316; D & H. C. Co. v. Dubois, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 87.

In an undefended action, the verdict cannot be for a larger amount than that claimed in the bill of particulars. Walker v. Wadsworth, 1 Fos. & Fin. 397.

A defendant is likewise restricted to proof of the items of the particulars of his set-off. Harding v. Griffin, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 462.

Adding the words "per agreement" to the items of a charge, does not, however, limit the plaintiff to a recovery on an agreement for a specific sum. Robinson v. Weil, 45 N. Y. 810.

The fact that a bill of particulars has been given does not operate to exclude evidence of matters not stated therein, but collateral to the main issue. Thus a debt not stated in the bill can be proved to show that a credit claimed was specifically appropriated. Wilson v. Deacon, 9 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 47.

So in a suit charging certain physicians with conspiracy in putting the plaintiff in an insane asylum, a bill of particulars of the plaintiff's actions, conduct, and habits upon which the defendants had based their opinion was called for. It was held that evidence of matters justifying their opinion, but occurring after the incarceration, and therefore not in the bill, could not be excluded. Higenbotam v. Green, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 214.

Variances between the bill of particulars and the proof which are not calculated to mislead are, however, disregarded. Substantial conformity is the requisite. Barney v. Seeley, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; McNair v. Gilbert, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 344; Brown v. Williams, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 368; Hayes v. Wilson, 105 Mass. 21.

The plaintiff may even recover an amount greater than that stated in his bill of particulars, if the defendant has not been misled, but has had a full opportunity to contest the amount of the claim. Dubois v. D. & H. C. Co., 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 334; Bell v. Puller, 2 Taunt. 285.

If the bill specify documentary evidence on which the party relies, including a will, he is not restricted to proof of title by devise, but may prove by parol title by descent. Not so, if he specify title by devise. Graham v. Whitely, 26 N. J. L. 254.

After a bill has been furnished under order of court, a second one, given without order of court, cannot include any claim not made in the first bill. Brown v. Watts, 1 Taunt. 353.

If the specifications do not accord with the facts, or omit essential matters, the other party can take advantage of this on the trial. Matthews v. Hubbard, 47 N. Y. 428.

2. It is neither given nor required for the purpose of disclosing to an adverse party the case relied upon, nor the proof to substantiate the same. Higenbotam v. Green, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 214.

It is not its office to furnish a defendant with the facts whereon to found an now usually regarded as a part of the pleading to which it belongs, but is not a part of the record.[1]

It has been held that a bill of particulars is admissible in evidence to explain the pleading to which it relates,[2] and in England,[3] but not in America,[4] even as against the party who furnished it.

6. More Specific Bill.—If the party to whom a bill of particulars is furnished think it insufficient, he may call for a more specific or further bill.[5] The party making it may himself move for permission to amend his bill.[6] affirmative defence in his behalf. Fullerton v. Gaylord, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 551.

It need not state the grounds on which the plaintiff claims, but only items and particulars. Seaman v. Low, 4 Bos. (N. Y.) 338.

Hence, as already seen, it need not show a cause of action. See note 1, p. 246.

1. Originally it was regarded as neither a part of the pleading nor a part of the record. Hence where the declaration stated a demand exceeding forty shillings, it was held that the bill of particulars could not be resorted to to show that the demand was really under that amount and within the jurisdiction of the county court. Dempster v. Purnell, 3 Man. & Gr. 375.

And in Davis v. Hunt, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) 412, it was held to follow that where the evidence fully sustains the count, it is immaterial that it does not agree with the bill of particulars. See also Blunt v. Cooke, 4 Man. & Gr. 458; Vidal v. Clark, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 359; Lapham v. Briggs, 27 Vt. 26.

In Fleurot v. Durand, 14 John. (N. Y.) 329, however, it was deemed a part of the declaration so far as to be ground for a judgment of non pros. if not furnished; and in Dibble v. Kempshall, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 124, it was held that the defendant could not treat the bill as separate from the declaration and plead to it. The same principle was applied to the code practice in Kreiss v. Seligman, 8 Barb. S. C. (N. Y.) 439, and in both that case the prior case of Starkweather v. Kittle, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 20, and the later one of Melvin v. Wood, 4 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 438, it was distinctly stated that the bill was a part of the pleading to which it was annexed or belonged. For the same rule in other States see Benedict v. Swain, 43 N. H. 33; McDonald v. Barnhill, 58 Ia. 669.

In Kreiss v. Seligman, 8 Barb. S. C. (N. Y.) 439, and Orvis v. Dana, 1 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 268, the bill was, however, stated not to be part of the record.

2. Buckmaster v. Meiklejohn, 8 Wels. H. & G. 634; McCreary v. Hood, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 316.

3. Colson v. Selby, 1 Esp. 452; Rymer v. Cook, Moo. & Mal. 86. The latter decision seems inconsistent with Short v. Edward, 1 Esp. 374; Miller v Johnson, 2 Esp. 602; and Harrington v. MacMorris, 5 Taunt. 228; but was approved in Burkett v. Blanchard, 3 Wels. H. & G. 89. In that case, however, it was held that a bill of particulars of a set-off could not be put in evidence to take the case out of the statute of limitations.

4. Brittingham v. Stevens, 1 Hall (N. Y.) 379; Hartell v. Seybert, 1 Trou. & Ha. Prac. § 475.

The bill cannot be used as evidence against the party in another suit. Starkweather v. Kittle, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 20.

5. Hunter v. Burnham, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 74; Winpenny v. Winpenny, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 90; O'Connell v. Summers, 5 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 149; Schile v. Brokhahne, 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 354; Goodrich v. James, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 289; Goodwin v. Walls, 52 Ind. 268.

A defective bill cannot be treated as a nullity without a call for a more specific one. Providence Tool Co. v. Prador, 32 Cal. 634; McCarthy v. Mooney, 41 Ill. 300.

The objection must be taken by a motion for a more specific bill, not by a demurrer. Bartholomew Co. v. Ford, 25 Ind. 17.

The order for a more specific bill should show the points in respect of which further specification is required. Kellogg v. Paine, 8 How. (N. Y.) 329; Conner v. Hutchinson, 17 Cal. 279.

6. Hartell v. Seybert, 1 Trou. & Ha. Prac. § 473; Phillips v. Negus, 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 508; Babcock v. Thompson, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 446.

The plaintiff cannot amend it without leave of court. Wager v. Chew, 15 Pa. 323.

Where the plaintiff framed his bill of particulars from an account rendered by the defendant, he was allowed, after a suspension of proceedings during his ten

7. Proceedings on Failure to Furnish it.—If the plaintiff do not furnish a bill of particulars as required by statute or order of court, the defendant may refuse to plead,[1] and, in general, an appropriate remedy (as by motion for judgment or to dismiss the action) is given by statute or rule of court, if either party be in default.[2]

BILL OF PEACE. (See also BILL QUIA TIMET; BILL TO REMOVE CLOUD FROM TITLE; BILL TO PERPETUATE TESTIMONY.)

1. Definition.—A bill of peace is a bill in equity which prays an injunction to restrain repeated attempts to litigate the same right.[3] years' absence beyond seas, to amend his bill by inserting fresh items discovered after the defendant's account had been rendered. Staples v. Holdsworth, 4 Bing. N. C. 717; s. c., 6 Sc. 605.

2. Nature of the Remedy.—The principle on which this equitable remedy is based is that courts of equity will grant relief in order to (a) suppress useless litigation, (b) prevent multiplicity of suits, (c) restrain oppressive litigation, and (d) prevent irreparable mischief.[4] It bears a close resemblance to bills quia timet and to remove clouds from title, but it may be distinguished from them, generally, in this, that while they are used to prevent wrongs and mischiefs anticipated before the actual commencement of proceedings at law, bills of peace are only allowed after legal proceedings which will affect the right sought to be preserved have begun.[5]

1. Davis v. Hunt, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) 416; Whittle v. Vauch, 3 N. J. L. 636.

2. See May v. Richardson, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 56; 1 Tron. & Ha. Prac. (Pa.) § 476; Kimball v. Kent, 3 Ill. 217.

3. Bispham's Equity (3d Ed.), § 415.

4. Bond v. Little, 10 Ga. 395, 400.

5. It is frequently stated that bills of peace are founded on the equity that if the right be established at law, it is entitled to adequate protection. This is clearly erroneous, as the prior establishment of the right at law is not necessary to prevent multiplicity of suits, and courts of equity exercised jurisdiction to prevent multiplicity of suits some years before they prevented the further litigation of a claim which had already been unsuccessfully prosecuted at law, as will appear later in the text. That the right need not be first established at law is well illustrated in a case where A contracted to sell certain lots of land to B in payment of certain debts due by A to B. At the time the contract was made A had not received the patents to the land, so it was agreed that the deeds should be made on request after he had received the patents. Creditors of A having levied on the lands in B's possession, B filed a bill in equity against A, and these execution creditors praying a specific performance by A and an injunction to restrain the sale of the lands by the execution creditors. The bill was allowed, Collier, J., saying: "Now each of these [lots of land] may be purchased by different persons, and the complainants subjected to an action at the suit of each purchaser to try the title. In this point of view the case is clearly within the principle on which chancery entertains bills of peace. . . . It is no objection in such case to the interference of chancery that the complainant has not established at law the right which the bill seeks to quiet; if the parties who controvert it are so numerous as to render an issue indispensable, to save multiplicity of suits chancery will entertain a bill." Morgan v. Morgan, 3 Stewart (Ala.), 383.

3. Division into Classes.—Bills of peace are, strictly speaking, of two kinds, and are filed either, first, to prevent the vexatious recurrence of litigation by a numerous class insisting upon the same right, or, second, to prevent the same individual from reiterating an unsuccessful claim.[1]

4. Jurisdiction in Cases of the First Class.—This equitable jurisdiction was evidently well established in England in 1681, when in a dispute between the lord of a manor and his tenants, as to a grant of free warren, a bill of peace was expressly allowed to prevent multiplicity of suits.[2] This remedy was of frequent application in England in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in controversies of the same or a similar nature.[3] In all such cases courts of equity having the power to bring all parties before them will at once proceed to the ascertainment of the general right, if necessary by an action or issue at law, and then make a decree finally binding upon all the parties.[4] This remedy will be allowed whether one claims or defends a right against many, or many claim or defend a right against one.[5] But it must be clear that there is a right claimed which affects many persons, and that a suitable number of parties in interest are brought before the court; for if the right is disputed between two persons only, not for themselves and all others in interest, but for themselves alone, the bill will be dismissed, for it cannot then conclude any persons but the very defendants.[6] The complainant must in all

See also Mitf. Eq. Pl. (5th Ed. by Smith) §§ 146, 147; Hodges v. Griggs, 21 Vt. 280.

1. Bispham's Equity (3d Ed.), § 415; Adams' Equity, § 199; Story's Equity, vol. ii. §§ 854, 859.

2. How v. Bromsgrove, 1 Vernon, 22. See also Fitton v. Macclesfield, 1 Vernon, 287, 293 (1684), and Brown v. Vermuden, 1 Ch. Ca. 272 (1677).

3. Thus in controversies between the lord of a manor and his tenants see Pawlet v. Ingres, 1 Vernon, 308; Weeks v. Staker, 2 Vernon, 301; Arthington v. Fawkes, 2 Vernon, 356; Conyers v. Abergavenny, 1 Atkyns, 285; Poore v. Clark, 2 Atkyns, 515; Chaffin v. Gawden, Freem. 191; Cowper v. Clerk, 3 P.Wms. 155, 157.

So in controversies between a parson and his parishioners. Brown v. Vermuden, 1 Ch. Ca. 272; Rudge v. Hopkins, 2 Eq. Abridg. 170, pl. 27; Mayor of York v. Pilkington, 1 Atkyns, 282.

It was also held to lie by a party in interest to establish a toll due by custom. Duke of Norfolk v. Myers, 4 Madd. Ch. Rep. 83. The right to the profits of a fair, there being several claimants. Emeline Hospital v. Andover, 1 Vernon, 266. And the right to a fishery. Mayor of York v. Pilkington, 1 Atkyns, 282; New River Co. v. Graves, 2 Vernon, 431. Compare Tenham v. Herbert, 2 Atkyns, 483.

4. Story's Eq. vol. ii. § 854; Trustees of Huntington v. Nicoll, 3 Johns. Rep. (N. Y.) 566, 589–591. 595, 601–603; Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black (U. S.), 352.

5. Conyers v. Abergavenny, 1 Atkyns, 285.

6. Story's Eq. vol. ii. § 857. See Fines v. Cobb, 2 Vernon, 116; Whitchurch v. Hide, 2 Atkyns, 391; Tenham v. Herbert, 2 Atkyns, 483; Welby v. Duke of Rutland, 2 Br. Par. Ca. (Tomlin) 39; Disney v. Robertson, Bunb. 41; Weller v. Smeaton, 1 Br. Ch. Rep. 572.

Kent, C. J., says in Eldridge v. Hill, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.), 281: "No case goes so far as to stop these continued suits between two single individuals so long as the alleged cause of action is continued, and there has been no final or satisfactory trial and decision at law upon the merits." See also Woodward v. Seely, 11 Ill. 157; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 445; Moses v. Mobile, 52 Ala. 198; Nevitt v. Gillespie, 1 Howard (Miss.), 108; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 696.

While the language used in the text expresses the well-established equitable rule on this subject, and is supported by the weight of authority, yet Lord Redescases file his bill in behalf of himself and of all the other persons whose rights are involved.[1] The right of these different persons must be one common to all, and therefore a bill of peace will not lie against independent trespassers having no common claim to distinguish them from the rest of the community.[2] This jurisdiction will not be exercised by a court of equity in a case where a dale is careful to say that "a bill can scarcely be sustained where a right is disputed between two persons only, until the right has been tried and decided upon at law." Mitf. Eq. Pl. (5th Ed. by Smith) § 146. And in a case where a municipality had brought numerous actions against the same defendant to recover penalties for the breach of one particular ordinance, they were restrained from prosecuting more than one action. Third Avenue R. Co. v. New York, 54 N. Y. 159.

1. Phillips v. Hudson, L. R. 2 Ch. Ap. 243.

But certain inhabitants of a town cannot file a bill in behalf of themselves and all others who may come in and contribute to the expense of the suit, or in behalf of the town, to try or establish the rights of the town in regard to its common property. The town corporation must itself proceed. Denton v. Jackson, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 320. See also Miller v. Grandy, 13 Mich. 540; Mt. Zion v. Gillman, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 479; s. c., 14 Fed. Repr. 123.

2. Adams' Eq. §§ 200, 201; Bispham's Eq. (3d Ed.) § 417.

So it has been decided that the bill will not lie where the rights and responsibilities of the several defendants neither arise from, nor depend upon, nor are in any way connected with each other. Dilly v. Doig, 2 Vesey, 486; Weale v. West Middlesex Water-works, 1 Jac. & W. 358; Cutting v. Gilbert, 5 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 259; Wilkerson v. Walters, 1 Idaho (N. S.), 564; Lapeer County v. Hart, 1 Harr. Ch. (Mich.) 157; Miller v. Grandy, 13 Mich. 540; Marselis v. The Morris Canal, etc., Co., Saxton (N. J.), 31; McHenry v. Hazard, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 75; Randolph v. Kinney, 3 Rand. (Va.) 394.

Lord Redesdale, however, says that the bill may be brought "where one general legal right is claimed against several distinct persons." Mitf. Eq. Pl. (5th Ed. by Smith) § 145. And recent cases have clearly made the distinction that where the rights, though not strictly identical, are similar, and all involve the decision of one particular question, the bill is allowable. Thus where a county treasurer, having authority to issue county obligations to the amount of $20,800.44, actually issued 73 notes to 53 different persons, amounting to $138,631, and 31 of the holders of these notes had brought separate suits thereon, a bill of peace on behalf of the board of supervisors of the county and against all the holders of these notes was allowed, so that the respective rights of the holders of the notes and the liability of the county could be determined in one action. Board of Supervisors of Saratoga County v. Deyoe, 77 N. Y. 219; s. c., 57 How. Pr. 134.

And in another case where a railroad company was sued by a number of persons in different actions to recover land damages, a bill was allowed to settle the rights of all parties in one case and prevent multiplicity of suits. Guess v. Stone Mt., etc., R. Co., 67 Ga. 215.

To the same effect are New York and New Haven R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592; Schley v. Dixon, 24 Ga. 273; Sheffield Water-works v. Yeomans, L. R. 2 Ch. Ap. 8; Powell v. Powis, 1 Younge & Jervis, 159.

It has been expressly decided in one case that a bill of peace would lie though there was no privity or connection between the defendants. Morgan v. Morgan, 3 Stewart (Ala.), 383. See Hodges v. Griggs, 21 Vt. 280.

This question has been considered at great length by Mr. Pomeroy, and probably the true rule is the one laid down by him as the result of his investigations, to wit, that "the weight of authority is simply overwhelming that the jurisdiction [of courts of equity to prevent multiplicity of suits] may and should be exercised either on behalf of a numerous body of separate claimants against a single party, or on behalf of a single party against such a numerous body, although there is no 'common title,' nor 'community of right,' or of 'interest in the subject-matter' among these individuals, but where there is and because there is merely a community of interest among them in the questions of law and fact involved in the general controversy, or in the kind and form of relief demanded and obtained by or against each individual member of the numerous body." Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. vol. i. § 269.

court of law can give relief by an order consolidating the actions,[1] nor where repeated suits have already been brought and judgments obtained thereon.[2]

5. Jurisdiction in Cases of the Second Class.—The right of a court of equity to restrain a suitor from reiterating an unsuccessful claim was first recognized in 1709, when, after five trials in ejectment, and a verdict each time in favor of the defendant, the House of Lords decreed a perpetual injunction against the plaintiff, on the application of the defendant, restraining any further proceedings at law.[3] The principle is now thoroughly established that when the right of the complainant has been satisfactorily established at law he is entitled to this relief.[4] No fixed number of trials is necessary to establish the right.[5] It is, however, necessary that there should be an actual trial and decision at law.[6] The institution of any number of actions, if they are all abandoned before trial, is not sufficient.[7] Not only must the claimant have satisfactorily established his title at law, but he must also be in actual possession of the land or some part of it.[8] Bills of peace of this class are

1. Peters v. Prevost, 1 Paine (U. S. C. C.), 64.

But in a case where a court of law could not give such relief a bill was allowed. Third Avenue R. Co. v. New York, 54 N. Y. 159. Compare Lapeer County v Hart, 1 Harr. Ch. (Mich.) 157.

2. Mt. Zion v. Gillman, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 479; s. c., 14 Fed. Repr. 123. In this case one Gillman owned certain bonds issued by the town of Mt. Zion. Some coupons having fallen due thereon, he brought suit. The town contested the case, but Gillman obtained judgment. Afterwards he brought four other suits on other coupons as they fell due, and obtained judgment by default. Certain taxpayers of the town then filed a bill alleging that one of these judgments was paid and the others remained unpaid, and praying an injunction against the judgments obtained and for quieting the title of the complainants, whose property was liable to be taxed to pay these judgments. The petition was dismissed.

3. Earl of Bath v. Sherwin, Prec. Ch. 261; s. c., 10 Mod. 1; s. c., 4 Br. Par. Ca. (Tomlin) 373. This right was a few years later exercised by the court of chancery in a similar case in Barefoot v. Fry, Bunb. 158.

4. Nicoll v. Trustees of Huntington, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 166; Trustees of Huntington v. Nicoll, 3 Johns. Rep. (N. Y.) 566, 589–591, 595, 601–603; Alexander v. Pendleton, 8 Cranch, 462; Morris v. Boley, 1 Weekly Notes of Cases (Pa.), 303; Primm v. Raboteau, 56 Mo. 407; Douglass v. McCoy, 5 Ohio, 522.

5. Two were held sufficient in Leighton v. Leighton, 1 P. Wms. 671; s. c., 4 Br. Par. Ca. (Tomlin) 378; Marsh v. Reed, 10 Ohio, 347. One in Hanner v. Gwynne, 5 McLean (U. S. C. C.), 313; Patterson & Hudson R. R. Co. v. Jersey City, 1 Stockt. (N. J.) 434.

6. Eldridge v. Hill, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 281; Woodward v. Seely, 11 Ill. 157; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 445; Lyerly v. Wheeler, Busbee's Eq. (N. Car.) 267; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 596; Lowe v. Lowry, 4 Ohio, 77; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 585.

Where, however, a right appears on record as in case of letters patent, of copyrights, etc., it is not necessary to establish the right at law before filing the bill Mitf. Pl. (5th Ed. by Smith) 147; Hill v. Thompson, 3 Merivale, 622; Ogle v. Ege, 4 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 584; Universities v. Richardson, 6 Ves. (Sumner's Ed.) 689 and note a.

7. Patterson v. McCamant, 28 Mo. 210; Marmaduke v. Hannibal & St. Joe R. Co., 30 Mo. 545; Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212; Bond v. Little, 10 Ga. 395; Gunn v. Harrison 7 Ala. 585.

Where, however, the city of New York brought 77 actions against a railroad company to recover penalties for running cars without license, they were restrained from prosecuting more than one of said actions until that one could be finally heard and determined. Third Avenue R. Co. v. New York, 54 N. Y. 159. But compare Eldridge v. Hill, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 281; Woodward v. Seely, 11 Ill. 157; s. c., 50. Am. Dec. 445.

8. Herrington v. Williams, 31 Tex. 448; Orton v. Smith, 18 Howard (U. S.), 263;

practically obsolete in many of the States where the proceeding in such cases has been controlled by statute.[1] But the provision of a State statute that a certain number of verdicts shall be conclusive in any proceeding will not interfere with the right of United States courts sitting within that State to entertain a bill of peace in any such proceeding within its jurisdiction without regard to the number of trials.[2]

6. Jurisdiction in Analogous Cases.—By analogy to bills of peace, courts of equity will entertain bills praying relief in a variety of other cases. Thus they will restrain further litigation of a boundary line when satisfactorily established at law,[3] or entertain jurisdiction to establish the line in the first instance.[4] Trespasses also will be restrained to prevent multiplicity of suits.[5] So where mines and collieries would be ruined before the right can be established at law, equity will interfere.[6]

7. When Equity Will Not Exercise Jurisdiction.—In addition to the cases already referred to,[7] this remedy will be refused by a court of equity where the bill seeks to establish a private right in contradiction to and in derogation of the rights of the public.[8] And the fundamental principle that equity will not interfere where the complainant has a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law applies as well to bills of peace as to all other equitable remedies.[9]

8. Costs.—Where the defendants in a bill of peace asserted in good faith a title in themselves which appeared by the records to be valid, they were awarded their costs, though a decree was

1. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. vol. iii. § 1396 and notes.

2. Craft v. Lathrop, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S. C. C.) 103.

But the courts of the United States will not entertain a bill of peace upon a title in actual litigation in a State court. Orton v. Smith, 18 How. (U. S.) 263.

3. Primm v. Raboteau, 56 Mo. 407.

4. The bill will be only entertained to prevent multiplicity of suits, or where the title to the soil is in question. Kinder v. Jones, 17 Vesey, 110; Wake v. Conyers, 1 Eden, 331. 335; Kilgannon v. Jenkinson, 51 Mich. 240; Parish of St. Luke v. Parish of St. Leonard, 1 Br. Ch. Rep. 40.

Where the boundary is alleged to have been established in a partition proceeding. the partition proceeding must have been completed. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 43 Pa. St. 443; s. c., 82 Am. Dec. 574.

Where the court exercises jurisdiction it may effectuate its decree by requiring a disputed boundary to be surveyed and marked in a permanent manner. Primm. v. Raboteau, 56 Mo. 407. See also BOUNDARIES.

5. Hanson v. Gardiner, 7 Vesey, 305; Livingston v. Livingston, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 497.

Also interference with or obstruction of water-courses. Corning v. Troy Iron and Nail Factory, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 311; s. c., affirmed, 40 N.Y. 191; Scheetz's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 88. See also INJUNCTIONS; TRESPASSES; WATER-COURSES.

6. Story's Eq. vol. ii. § 860.

7. See text infra and note 6, p. 254; nn. 1, 2, p. 255; nn. 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, p. 256; nn. 2, 3, p. 257.

8. Because that would be contrary to public policy. Story's Eq. vol. ii. § 858. Where, however, a private individual has been granted by law the exclusive privilege of exercising what would otherwise be a public right, violations of this franchise may be restrained by bills of peace, e.g. in the case of ferry franchises. McRoberts v. Washburne, 10 Minn. 23; Letton v. Goodden, L. R. 2 Eq. 123.

9. Ritchie v. Dorland, 6 Cal. 33; Lapeer County v. Hart, 1 Harr. Ch. (Mich.) 157; Bouverie v. Prentice; 1 Br. Ch. Rep. 200; Cutting v. Gilbert, 5 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 259; Gunn v. Harrison, 7 Ala. 585.

entered against them owing to the record being proved to be defective.[1]

BILL QUIA TIMET. (See also BILL TO PERPETUATE TESTIMONY; BILL TO REMOVE CLOUDS FROM TITLE; DEBTOR AND CREDITOR; EQUITY; INDEMNITY; INJUNCTION; RECEIVERS; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE; SURETY.)

1. Definition.—Bills quia timet are bills in equity entertained to guard against possible or prospective injuries and to preserve the means by which existing rights may be protected from future or contingent violations: differing from injunctions in that the latter correct past and present or imminent and certain injuries.[2] These bills will not lie where a statutory remedy is provided.[3]

2. When Maintainable.—(a) Covenants to Indemnify.—They lie for the specific performance of a general covenant to indemnify, though sounding only in damages,[4] but not where a purchaser takes land

1. Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238. But on their appealing unsuccessfully from that decree, no costs in the appellate court were given to either party. See also Nicoll v. The Trustees of Huntington, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 166.

2. Bispham's Equity, § 568.

History.—These bills are analogous to the brevia anticipantia of common law. Coke says: "There be six writs in law that may be maintained, quia timet, before any molestation, distress, or impleading. As: (1) a man may have a writ of mesne (whereof Littleton here speaks) before he be distrained; (2) a warrantia chartæ before he be impleaded; (3) a monstraverunt before any distress or vexation; (4) an audita querela before any execution sued; (5) a curia claudenda before any default of inclosure; and (6) a ne injuste vexes before any distress or molestation." Co. Litt. 100a.

Complainant's title to have an instrument cancelled as relief must be clearly shown beyond all reasonable doubt. Shotwell v. Shotwell, 24 N. J. Eq. 378.

Unless there is danger that the plaintiff will be subjected to loss by the neglect, inadvertence, or culpability of another, the remedy will not lie. Randolph v. Kinney, 3 Rand. (Va.) 394; Green v. Hawkinson, Walker (Mich.), 487; Sanderson v. Jones, 6 Fla. 430; Tipping v. Eckersley, 3 K. & J. 264.

A bill quia timet should state facts showing wrongs or anticipated mischiefs which should be forestalled and prevented. Bailey v. Briggs, 56 N. Y. 407.

3. Buchanan v. Noel, 35 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 490.

4. In Ranelaugh v. Hayes, 1 Vern. 189, the assignee of three shares of the Irish excise covenanted with the assignor to save him harmless touching the payments to the king and other matters. The assignor having been sued for money which the assignee should have paid, and the former having then filed his bill, the court decreed specific performance, with reference to a master, directing him to report toties quoties any breach should happen, and that the assignee should clear the assignor of all suits or incumbrances in a reasonable time. See also Hemming v. Maddick, L. R. 7 Ch. 395.

Where the administrators of a vendee of land assigned a contract for the purchase of land to defendants, who covenanted to take up the contract and indemnify and save harmless the administrators from all damages which they might sustain by reason of the contract, held, that the administrators were entitled to specific performance, and that the defendants could not set up a want of personal assets. Champion v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 406.

Where defendant had executed to an executor a bond of indemnity for all loss on account of the hire of certain slaves subject to an incumbrance of which he is aware, and against which he has taken the vendor's covenant.[1] of executor's decedent, defendant having taken by agreement said slaves to keep until they and their hires should be called for by the persons entitled, on petition filed by next of kin against the executor, held, that he could file his bill quia timet, without waiting to sue on the bond when it should become due. Burroughs v. McNeill, 2 Dev. & Bat. Eq. (N. C.) 297.

Where one partner of a firm assumes the liabilities of the firm, having bought out the business, but has not paid off such liabilities, a bill quia timet will lie against him by the others to specifically perform his contract. Griffin v. Orman, 9 Fla. 58.

A court of equity will be extremely tender in exercising this jurisdiction, because it materially varies the agreement of the parties at the time of the transaction. Flight v. Cook, 2 Ves. 620.

As a general rule, no preference is given to the covenant against incumbrances over any of the other covenants for title, and relief will not be granted on mere apprehension of damage. Tallman v. Green, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 437. See Rector of Trinity Church v. Higgins, 4 Rob. (N. Y.) 372; Tinte v. Miller, 10 Ohio, 382; Watkins v. Owen, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 142; Barnett v. Montgomery, 6 Monr. (Ky.) 327.

1. Where a purchaser contracted to buy land on which there was a mortgage, of which he was aware, for the amount of the owner's indebtedness, not ascertained, as a shareholder in an insolvent bank, payments to be made by instalments, the owner binding himself to convey "by a good and sufficient deed, with general warranty of title," after last instalment, and on presentation of such a deed refused to accept, alleging the existence of the mortgage as a ground, and filed his bill praying that the title be examined and the incumbrance removed or effectual indemnity given him against it; held, that the purchaser must rely upon his remedy at law under the covenant of warranty. Refeld v. Woodfolk, 22 How. (U. S.) 318.

Where the only covenants in the deed are those for quiet enjoyment or of warranty, and so long as there has been no eviction, actual or constructive, equity will, as a general rule, refuse to entertain a bill to enjoin the collection of purchase-money. Busby v. Tredwell, 24 Ark. 457; Barkhamsted v. Case, 5 Conn. 528; Whitworth v. Stuckey, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 408; Beale v. Seiveley, 8 Leigh (Va.), 658; Clanton v. Burges, 2 Dev. Eq. 15; Merritt v. Hunt, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 406; Wilkins v. Hogue, 2 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 479; Henry v. Elliott, 6 Jones' Eq. (N. C.) 175; Miller v. Long, 3 Marsh. (Ky.) 334; Rawlins v. Timberlake, 6 Marsh. (Ky.) 233; Percival v. Hurd, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 670; Hall v. Priest, 6 Bush (Ky.), 14; Young v. Butler, 1 Head (Tenn.), 646; Middlekauff v. Barrick, 4 Gill (Md.), 290; Timms v. Shannon, 19 Ind. 296; Harris v. Ransom, 24 Miss. 234; Glenn v. Whipple, 1 Beasley's Ch. (N. J.) 50; Akerly v. Vilas, 21 Ohio, 88; Weaver v. Wilson, 48 Ill. 128; Rawle on Covenants for Title (4th Ed.), 681.

A court of equity will grant relief when a purchaser would be entitled at law to defend from payment of purchase-money either whole or partially, and has had no opportunity of doing so. Where judgment was obtained on a bond given for payment of a residue of purchase-money, and the vendor had, before the execution of the deed, which contained covenants for right to convey and of warranty, become surety upon a judgment, under which, after the execution of the deed, the use of the property for seven years was levied on and sold, and possession recovered by the sheriff's vendee, the court, upon bill, answer, and exhibits, having by a writ of inquiry ascertained the damages which complainant had sustained by reason of the incumbrance, decreed a perpetual injunction against the judgment to the amount of the assessments and costs. Selby v. Marshall, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 385.

In some cases, exceptional, although the prosecution of the adverse title may not of itself be a sufficient ground to entitle the purchaser to relief, yet such prosecution, when coupled with the insolvency or non-residence of the party bound by the covenants, will bring the case within the quia timet jurisdiction of equity. Where a purchaser's personal representatives filed a bill against the vendor to enjoin a collection by him of a judgment obtained for a balance of purchase-money due by their intestate, on the ground that a judgment had been recovered against them by a subsequent alienee on the covenants of their intestate, and that the vendor was insolvent, the relief was granted. Jones v. Waggoner, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 144.

(b) Agent or Trustee.—Where property in the hands of a trustee or agent for specific uses, express or implied, is in danger of misuse to the prejudice of any one having a present or future fixed title, such a bill will lie.[1]

(c) Sureties.—In cases of sureties against debtors and others.[2]

(d) Life Estates.—In cases where personal property is limited for life, with remainders over, where there is danger of injury from the life-tenant,[3] but not merely to declare future rights, un-

1. Allegations that complainants fear the removal of property bequeathed by a will alleged to be void does not give jurisdiction in the absence of allegations that complainants have applied or will apply for letters of administration. Watson v. Bothwell, 11 Ala. 650.

Under a devise of land to be sold for debts, the surplus to the heir, a bill to perfect title cannot be filed unless with an allegation that the debts have been paid or there will be a surplus if the title is cleared. Blalock v. Hardy, 37 Miss. 615.

A bill quia timet, or for the performance of a contract for the sale of lands by an administrator with the will annexed under a power given by the will, should not be entertained where the allegations of the bill show that the title of complainant is either good or void, there being in either case an adequate remedy at law. Camp v. Elston, 48 Ala. 81.

An executor whose acts showed an unequivocal disposition to convert the assets of the testator to his own use, and who had no property, was restrained from further intermeddling with the estate as a coexecutor. Elmendorf v. Lansing, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 562. See Rous v. Noble, 2 Vern. 249; Batten v. Earnley, 2 P. Wms. 163; Taylor v. Allen, 2 Atk. 313; Utterson v. Mair, 4 Bro. Ch. 277; Middleton v. Dodswell, 13 Vesey, 266.

Under the N. Y. Revised Statutes, if the circumstances of the executor are such as not to afford adequate security for the faithful discharge of his trust, and objection is made by an interested party, security may be required from the executor, though the testator had knowledge of the responsibility of the executor. Wood v. Wood, 4 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 299.

Where there is no danger, however, to the trust funds, even if the executor does not possess property to the value of the estate, he cannot be required to give security. Mandeville v. Mandeville, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 475. See Shields v. Shields, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 56.

2. A surety, the debt being due, and apprehending loss or injury from the creditor's delay to enforce the debt against the principal debtor, may bring his bill to compel the debtor to discharge his debt. Cox v. Tyson, 1 Turn. & Russ. 395; Nisbet v. Smith, 2 Bro. Ch. 579.

Or the creditor may be compelled to sue the debtor, the surety indemnifying him against the delay and expense. Where a creditor who held a bond and mortgage taken in New Jersey, where all the parties resided, as security for a note indorsed by the plaintiff and transferred by B. to the creditor on an usurious loan, instead of resorting to the mortgage or the principal debtor, sued the plaintiff while in New York as an indorser, an injunction was granted to stay the suit at law until the creditor had pursued his remedy on the mortgage. Hayes v. Ward, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 123. See Stephenson v. Taverners, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 398; King v. Baldwin, 2 Johns. Ch. 561; Wright v. Simpson, 6 Ves. 734; Rees v. Berrington, 2 Ves. Jr. 540.

A indorsed for B notes given in part payment for a steamer. B. to secure A, mortgaged the boat and agreed to insure and assign the policy to A. B failing, assigned all his estate to C. A filed a bill against B and C alleging the assignment, B's insolvency and neglect to insure and assign; that the assignee claimed the boat exclusively. Held, that equity could intervene on the principle quia timet, though neither of the notes was due. Walker v. Miller 11 Ala. 1067.

3. Gibson v. Jayne, 37 Miss 164; Collins v. Barksdale, 23 Ga. 602; Champlain v. Champlain, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 228; Pattison v. Gilford, L. R. 18 Eq. 259; Clark v. Clark, 8 Paige, 152; 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 843; Emmons v. Cairns, 2 Sandf. Ch. 369; Covenhaven v. Shuler, 2 Paige, 123; James v. Scott, 9 Ala. 579; Flight v. Cook, 2 Ves. Sr. 619.

The remedy for children who are remaindermen after a marriage settlement, fearing a waste of their property, is a bill quia timet. Sanderson v. Jones, 6 Fla. 430.

A remainderman cannot maintain a bill against a life-tenant to prevent his denying the former's interest in the es-less occurring in the construction of a will or direction of the court as to disposition of property by executors or trustees.[1]

(e) Pendente Lite.—Property claimed by several parties may be protected in equity from an apprehended danger by one, or from irreparable mischief.[2]

(f) To Perpetuate Testimony. See BILL TO PERPETUATE TESTIMONY.

(g) To Remove Clouds from Title.[3] See BILL TO REMOVE CLOUDS FROM TITLES.

tate, and from making leases extending beyond the term of his natural life. Preston v. Smith, 23 Fed. Repr. 737.

Where an agreement was made by an uncle with the father of his infant nephew that he should adopt the nephew and leave him all his property at the death of himself and wife, and the uncle subsequently conveyed to another on the consideration of support for the rest of his life, the court decreed the grantee to hold in trust for the infant, the complainant, and to account at the death of the uncle. Vanduyne v. Vreeland, 1 Beasl. (N. J.) 142.

Where there are reasons to apprehend that a remainder in slaves will be defeated or its value impaired by the misconduct of the owner of the particular estate, a court of chancery will interpose for the protection of the rights of the remaindermen. McDougal v. Armstrong, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 428; Bowling v. Bowling, 6 B. Monr. (Ky.) 31; McNeill v. Bradley, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 41.

Where a husband created a trust fund for his wife on separation from her, providing that a portion was to be kept invested for her during her life, and that she should have power to will any unexpended balance, it was held that the husband had sufficient legal and equitable interest in the trust fund to intervene by an action against the wife and trustees, if there was any reason to fear its diversion from the purpose for which it was provided. Cranston v. Plumb, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 59.

1. A bill quia timet to have rights declared, and an act requiring certain clerks to pay over an excess of fees above a fixed amount, construed and pronounced unconstitutional, will not lie. Black v. Fleece, 2 Lea (Tenn.), 566.

A cross-bill filed by heirs at law as against devisees, for the purpose of having their rights declared, will not be sustained. Cross v. DeValle, 1 Wall. 14.

Bills may be filed, however, for the construction of a will, and the direction of the court as to the disposition of the property by executors or trustees. In such cases, from necessity, the courts are compelled to settle questions as to the validity and effect of contingent limitations in a will, even to persons not in esse. Lorillard v. Coster, 5 Paige, 172; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige, 442.

A bill quia timet will not lie by the heirs at law where the decedent has bequeathed the income of property in trust primarily for one object, and any surplus to others, to have the surplus awarded to them in anticipation, on the ground that the other trusts were incapable of execution, there having been no surplus at the time. Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. 1. See Grove v. Bastard, 2 Phillips, 621; Langdale v. Briggs, 39 Eng. Law & Eq. 214; 8 De G., M. & G. 391.

A bill in equity cannot be maintained to establish simply the facts of a trust, no other relief being sought, and even if its existence be denied. The court will entertain the bill, and declare the trust, if proved, if the trustee is about to leave the jurisdiction, so no relief can be had. Perry on Trusts, § 17; Baylies v. Payson, 5 Allen (Mass.), 473; Price v. Minot, 107 Mass. 62.

2. A petition will lie to enjoin cutting timber on land claimed by both parties, and seeking reparation for former cutting and conversion under equity's quia timet jurisdiction. Peak v. Hayden, 3 Bush (Ky.), 125.

A purchaser of a property sold at sheriff's sale made an agreement with the holder of a prior mortgage that he would pay it off. His counsel read a notice of the prior mortgage at the sheriff's sale, and purchased at a low price in consequence. After the sale it was alleged that the lien of such mortgage was discharged. The court enjoined the purchaser from alienating until the suit on the mortgage was determined. Build'g Assoc. v. Ashmead, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 272.

3. This jurisdiction is not confined to the cancellation of void or voidable instruments, but is applicable where justice requires that the title of a party in

(h) To Establish Wills.[1]

3. Relief.—The relief depends upon the circumstances. The general forms are: (a) By the appointment of a receiver[2] (see RECEIVER); (b) By payment of money into court;[3] (c) By giving security;[4] (d) By injunction (see INJUNCTION).

BILL OF REVIEW. (See also APPEAL; DECREE; EQUITY; FRAUD; REHEARING.)

1. Definitions.—A bill of review[5] is a bill in the nature of a writ of error, intended to procure the examination and consequent repossession must be quieted, and the evidence of such title is clear. Alexander v. Pendleton, 8 Cranch (U. S.), 462; Alsop v. Eckles, 81 Ill. 424.

Equity will not try conflicting titles. Handy v. Noon, 51 Miss. 166; Phelps v. Harris, 51 Miss. 789.

Some equity must be apparent, or a cloud would otherwise exist against the title of complainant. Eckman v. Eckman, 58 Pa. St. 269; Haines' Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 169; Orton v. Smith, 18 How. (U. S.) 263; Munson v. Munson, 28 Conn. 582; Gamble v. Loop, 14 Wis. 465; Farnham v. Campbell, 34 N. Y. 480.

1. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 251; Dorset (Duke of) v. Girdler, Prec. Ch. 531; Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & Stu. 83; Beavan v. Carpenter, 11 Sim. 22; Wright v. Tatham, 2 Sim. 459.

A devisee in possession may file such a bill against an heir who has brought no action of ejectment, though there are no trusts and the court of chancery is not needed in the administration. Boyse v. Rossborough, Kay, 71; 3 De G., M. & G. 817; s. c., Colclough v. Boyse, 6 A. L. Cas. 1.

The same relief will be afforded against parties claiming under another will. Lovett v. Lovett, 3 K. & J. 1.

2. It is a matter resting in the discretion of the court, subject to certain well-defined rules, as follows: (1) The power is a delicate one, to be exercised with great caution. (2) The claimant must have a title to the property, and the court must be satisfied by affidavits that a receiver is necessary to preserve the property. (3) That a receiver is never appointed because he can do no harm. (4) Fraud or imminent danger must be clearly shown if the intermediate possession should not be taken by the court. (5) Unless absolutely necessary, the defendant will be heard before appointment. Blondheim v. Moore, 11 Md. 364. See Verplank v. Caines, 1 Johns. Ch. 57; Skip v. Harwood, 3 Atkinson, 564; Voshell v. Hynson, 26 Md. 83; Tomlinson v. Ward, 2 Conn. 391; Orphan Asylum v. McCarter, Hopkins, 429; Maynard v. Bailey, 2 Nev. 313; Crawford v. Ross, 39 Ga. 44; Chappell v. Akin, 39 Ga. 177.

3. There must usually be danger shown, but the order has been made without any reason being given to show any abuse or danger—Rothwell v. Rothwell, 2 Sim. & Stu. 217; Clarkson v. DePeyster, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 274; Mandeville v. Mandeville, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 475—where a court takes upon itself the settlement of an estate.

4. Security is not required unless there is danger that the life-tenant may waste or otherwise lose the property to the remainderman. Covenhoven v. Shuler, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 122; Henderson v. Vaulx, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.); Kinnard v. Kinnard, 5 Watts (Pa.), 109; Lippincott v. Warder, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 118; Smith v. Ostrand, 5 N. Y. S. C. 664.

5. Bills of review of the three kinds here treated of belong strictly to the old chancery practice, and are therefore only now employed in courts where that system of practice is in its essential features still retained. Where, as in England and many of our States, modern codes have supplanted both common law and equity systems of procedure, the object of bills of review is usually attained by other means. See Durant v. Philpot, 16 S. Car. 116.

In some States the term "bill of review" is used in another sense from that to which it was originally confined, and designates a mode of proceeding applicable to all cases where the defendant has not been afforded an opportunity of making a defence. See Sequin v. Maverick, 24 Tex. 526. The nature and uses of bills versal, alteration, or explanation of a final decree in equity which has been signed and enrolled.[1]

Besides bills of review proper, there are other species of bills intended for a similar purpose, but appropriate to different circumstances.[2]

A supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review is one which is brought before the decree is enrolled.[3]

The term "original bill in the nature of a bill of review" is used in two senses:

(a) A bill brought by one who is injuriously affected by a decree made in a suit to which he was not a party.[4]

(b) A bill to impeach a decree on the ground of fraud.[5]

2. Parties.—Bills of review can only be brought by persons who have been aggrieved by the decree,[6] and a bill of review proper or a supplemental bill only by parties to the original suit, or their privies in representation.[7] Other parties in interest and of review as they are employed where the old procedure is retained, and not those of the modern substitutes for them, are here treated.

1. It does not constitute a part of the original cause, and, though it has reference to it, is an independent proceeding. The filing of it cannot make that a "cause depending" which was at the time of filing a determined cause, over which the jurisdiction of the court had ended. Hence such a bill was not affected by a statute transferring all cases belonging to a certain district, and then undetermined, to a new court. Cole v. Miller, 32 Miss. 89, 101.

The object sought by such a bill is to reverse the decree as far as it is erroneous, and to retry the cause. McCall v. McCurdy, 69 Ala. 65.

The filing of such a bill does not deprive the party of the rights that he would have had on a rehearing. The only distinction is that rehearing precedes and review follows enrolment. Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

It is always founded on equitable principles, and proceeds according to them, and is never allowed to stand on strict law and against equity. Stevenson's Ex'r's App., 32 Pa. 318; Yeager's App., 34 Pa. 173.

2. As these other species of bills resemble bills of review proper, both in their object and their form, they are all best treated together, the differences, where they exist, being noted.

3. See supra, I.

4. Adams Eq. *419; Kidd v. Cheyne, 18 Jur. 348.

5. Story Eq Pl. § 426; Mussell v. Morgan, 3 Bro. Ch. 79; Ex parte Smith, 34 Ala. 455; Edmondson v. Mosely's Heirs, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 497; Person v. Nevitt, 32 Miss. 180; Eliott v. Balcom, 11 Gray (Mass.), 286; Adair v. Cummin, 48 Mich. 375.

6. McCall v. McCurdy, 69 Ala. 65; Lindley v. Kline, 25 W. Va. 208.

A bill of review cannot be brought for a matter of form by which the party has not been injured. George v. George, 67 Ala. 162.

A bill brought for error in the decree can only be brought by parties aggrieved by the particular errors assigned, however injuriously the decree may affect the rights of third persons. Thomas v. Harvies, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 146; Whiting v. Bank of U. S., 13 Pet. (U. S.) 6.

"No person can file a bill of review who has no interest in the question intended to be presented by such bill, or who cannot be benefited by the reversal or modification of the former decree." Walworth, C., in Webb v. Pell, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 368.

7. "None but parties and privies, as heirs, executors, or administrators, can have this bill of review, since nobody else can be aggrieved by such decree, because it can only be revived upon such privies." Gilbert's For. Rom. (Am. Ed. 1874) 182.

A devisee is not in privity to a decree against his testator, and therefore cannot bring a bill of review. Slingsby v. Hale, 1 Ch. Cas. 122.

A minor is bound by a decree against his next friend, and cannot bring a bill of review on the ground that the next friend was not a guardian ad litem, unless the latter has acted fraudulently. Watkins v. Lawton, 69 Ga. 671.

privies as to title or estate can maintain a bill in the nature of a bill of review, as far as concerns their own interest.[1]

All parties to the original bill, and all those who have become interested in the subject-matter, ought to be made parties to a bill of review.[2]

3. Under what Circumstances Brought.—Bills of review proper, and original bills of that nature, are brought after a final[3] decree has been signed and enrolled (or deemed to be enrolled[4]) and (in the case of bills of review proper) complied with,[5] on account of error

If the record shows a defence by one acting as a guardian ad litem, it is no ground for review that he was not really such. McCall v. McCurdy, 69 Ala. 65.

In Pennsylvania the act of Oct. 13, 1840, § 1 (2 Pur. Dig. 1286, pl. 61), provides for a petition of review for certain purposes in the Orphans' Court by the "executor, administrator, or guardian, or their legal representatives, or by any person interested." This would seem to abolish the distinction between bills of review proper and original bills of the nature of bills of review in the cases to which the act applies. Under this act therefore, the sureties of an administrator may have a bill of review, where he has charged himself with the proceeds of the realty; and this after distribution decreed, and suits brought against them by creditors. Zinn's App., 10 Pa. 469; Hartz's App , 2 Gr. (Pa.) 83. So where the administrator has been charged in the account with claims which are not assets, and in other cases. Shallcross's Est., 35 Leg. Intell. (Pa.) 456; Smith's Est., 5 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 495.

A ward who excepts to a decree confirming a testamentary guardian's account as executor should petition for a review. Bessinger's Est., 5 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 320.

1. "Thus, if a decree is made against a tenant for life, a remainderman in bail or in fee cannot defeat the proceedings except by a bill showing the error in the decree, the incompetency in the tenant for life to sustain the suit, and the accrual of his own interest, and thereupon praying that the proceedings in the original cause may be reviewed, and that for that purpose the other party may appear to and answer this new bill, and the rights of the parties may be properly ascertained." Adams Eq. *419; Story Eq. Pl. § 409: Singleton v. Singleton, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 340.

Where a defendant in foreclosure retains part of the property in suit, and is responsible on his covenants for other portions, he is interested in having the mortgage foreclosed according to its terms, and if it is not he is a proper complainant in a bill to review the decree. Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

2. Bank of U. S. v. White, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 262; Singleton v. Singleton, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 340.

The reason is that "it is a principle of natural justice that no one ought to be affected by any decree without his first being heard." Story Eq. Pl. § 420. Mackay v. Bell, 2 Munf. (Va.) 523; Ellzay v. Lane, 2 Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 529.

3. It has been said that a bill of review could perhaps be brought where the decree, though interlocutory, could not be superseded. Clark v. Garrett, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 262. But in the same case it was held that a bill to review a decree of partition could not be brought when the suit was still pending as to matters of account, though partition had been made

A decree in a creditor's suit ascertaining amounts and priorities of all the debts sought to be established as liens on the real estate, and ordering the sale of the property for payment of the debts, is a final decree to which a bill of review will lie. Core v. Strickler, 24 W. Va. 689.

4. In England the actual enrolment of the decree was always essential to a bill of review proper. Gilbert's For. Rom. 179; Cooper's Eq. Plead. 91; Story's Eq. Plead. § 403.

In the first of Lord Bacon's Ordinances in Chancery, respecting bills of review, it is declared that "No decree shall be reversed, altered, or explained, being once under the great seal, but upon bill of review." Beames' Ord. in Ch. 1.

In the United States all decrees in equity are matters of record and deemed to be enrolled, whether actually enrolled or not. Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C. C. U. S.) 303.

Under the old New York practice, the filing of a copy of the decree in the register's office thirty days after it was pronounced took the place of the old enrolment. Wiser v. Blachly, 2 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 488.

5. Partridge v. Usborne, 5 Russ. 195.

in law apparent on the face of the record,[1] or of new matter

While the rule is that the decree must first be performed, a bill may be maintained on an uncontradicted affidavit of ability to perform. Davis v. Speiden, 104 U. S. 83.

Where the party seeking a review is in execution for the non-payment of the money and costs awarded to be paid by him, and which he is unable to pay, leave to file a bill of review will not be refused on the mere ground of non-performance. Livingston v. Hubbs, 3 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 124.

So where he is insolvent. Stalling v. Goodloe, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 159. Or has given security for the performance. Stalling v. Goodloe, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 159; Taylor v. Pearson, 2 Hawks (N. Car.), 298.

1. That is, the bill, answer, and other pleadings, and the decree, but not the evidence.

In England the rule always was that the error must appear on the face of the decree. The difference between the English and American rules was only formal, however, and is thus explained by Story, J.: "In England the decree always recites the substance of the bill and answer and pleadings, and also the facts on which the court founds its decree. But in America the decree does not ordinarily recite either the bill, or answer, or pleadings; and, generally, not the facts on which the decree is founded. But with us the bill, answer, and other pleadings, together with the decree, constitute what is properly considered as the record. And, therefore, in truth, the rule in each country is precisely the same in legal effect; although expressed in different language, viz., that the bill of review must be founded on some error apparent upon the bill, answer, and other pleadings, and decree; and that you are not at liberty to go into the evidence at large in order to establish an objection to the decree, founded on the supposed mistake of the court in its own deductions from the evidence." Whiting v. Bank of U. S , 13 Pet. (U. S.) 6, 14. For authorities on the American rule, see also Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C. C. U. S.) 303; Putnam v. Day, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 60; Davis v. Speiden, 3 McA. (D. C. U. S.) 283; Brown v. White, 16 Fed. Repr. 900; Saum v. Stingley, 3 Cl. (Ia.) 514; Webb v. Pell, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 368; Ludlow v. Kidd. 20. 372; Stevens v. Hey, 15 Ohio, 313; Holman v. Riddle, 8 Ohio St. 384; Riddle's Est., 19 Pa. 431; Given's Est., 6 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 434; Cremer's Est., 7 Weekly Notes (Pa.). 544; Burdine v. Shelton, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 41.

Whether there is evidence to support the decree or whether the court has misjudged the evidence cannot be considered on a bill of review. Bank v. Dundas, 10 Ala. 661; Ashford v. Patton, 70 Ala. 479; Eaton v. Dickinson, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 397.

Instances.—A decree against the statute law is a subject for a bill of review, e.g., a decree directing the legacy belonging to a child who had died an infant, intestate, without wife or children, to be distributed among his mother, brothers, and sisters equally, whereas by the Statute of Distributions it vested entirely in the father, who had survived the child. Story Eq. Plead. § 405.

So is a decree against a person who, on the face of it, appears to have been an infant at the time. Story Eq. Plead. § 405.

It is ground for a bill of review that the decree was not warranted by the allegations in the bill. Goodhue v. Churchman, 1 Barb. Ch. (N.Y.) 596

If a solicitor enter an appearance for a defendant without authority, and a decree be rendered against him, without any service, a bill of review may be brought. Griggs v. Gear, 3 Gil. (Ill.) 2.

Where a foreclosure decree has been made contrary to the terms of the mortgage, and an application for the correction of the error, made within a reasonable time, has been refused, a bill of review may be brought. Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

Instances where such Bill is not Allowed.—A bill of review is not needed to correct an error in figures in a decree. Massie v. Graham, 3 McL. (C.C. U.S.) 41.

But where the purpose of the original suit is to declare and enforce a lien on realty and recover an interest therein, a bill of review cannot be maintained by minor heirs, on the ground that the claim was barred by the Statute of Non-claim, because, the claim not being within the influence of the statute, it was not error in law to sustain it. And where a bill of review for error in law is brought, it is the court's duty to presume everything in favor of the rulings of the court in the original suit which are not disproved by the bill. George v. George, 67 Ala. 190.

The error in law must arise on the facts admitted in the pleadings, or stated as facts in the decree. If the error be in the determination of the facts, such error can be corrected only on appeal. Rawlings v. Rawlings, 75 Va. 71.

which has arisen or been discovered since the decree,[1] or (in the case of some original bills) where the decree has been obtained by fraud.[2] In the first and third cases they are matters of right,[3] but in the second they require special leave of court.[4] The new evidence must be relevant and material, and such as could not sooner have been discovered.[5] Bills of review for error in law

The matters must appear in the decree itself. Where a fact is mistaken, it should be rectified by rehearing before enrolment. Combs v. Proud, 1 Ch. Cas. 54.

Neither errors in the regularity of the proceedings nor erroneous deductions from the evidence call for a bill of review. Ward v. Kent, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 128.

Neither does the fact that the plaintiff is old and feeble and mentally infirm, he being represented by counsel, and there being no imputation of fraud or mismanagement of which the court can take notice. Carmichael v. Snodgrass, 6 Lea. (Tenn.) 183.

Nor can such a bill be brought when the relief sought is such as could have been obtained in the suit, if proper. Clark v. Garrett, 6 Lea (Tenn), 262.

The plaintiff's laches in bringing suit is no ground for a bill of review where no defence has been set up. Putnam v. Day, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 60.

1. Lord Bacon's Ordinance, referred to above, also provided that "No bill of review shall be admitted except it contain either error in law, appearing in the body of the decree without further examination of matters of fact, or some new matter, which hath arisen in time after the decree, and not any new proof, which might have been used when the decree was made. Nevertheless, upon new proof, that is come to light after the decree was made, which could not possibly have been used at the time when the decree passed, a bill of review may be grounded by the special license of the court, and not otherwise." Beames Ord. in Ch. 1. In Norris v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 26, Lord Hardwicke said of these ordinances, "Lord Bacon's rules have never been departed from since the making of them;" and in Massie v. Graham, 3 McL. (C. C. U. S.) 41, it was said, "The ordinances of Lord Bacon still govern bills of review." See also Taylor v. Sharp, 1 P. Wms. 371; Davis v. Bluck, 6 Beav. 393; Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C.C.U.S.) 310; Putnam v. Day, 22 Wall. (U.S.) 60; Irwin v. Meyrose, 7 Fed. Repr. 533; Wiser v. Blachly, 2 John. Ch. (N.Y.) 488; Greenwich Bank v. Loomis, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 70; Edwardson v. Maseby, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 500; Hollingsworth v. McDonald, 3 Harr. & John. (Md.) 230; Iler v. Routh, 3 How. (Miss.) 276; Foy v. Foy, 25 Miss. 207; Bledsoe v. Carr, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.), 55; Hill v. Maury, 21 W. Va. 162.

The two causes may properly be joined in the same bill. Winchester v. Winchester, 2 Head (Tenn.). 460.

2. Story's Eq. Plead. § 426. See the cases cited under the definition.

3. Perry v. Phelips, 17 Ves. 178; Gould v. Tancred, 2 Atk. 534; Denson v. Denson, 33 Miss. 560.

The same is true of an original bill in the nature of a bill of review. Nor. Ill. Coal Co. v. Young, 11 Biss. (C. C. U. S.) 331; Webb v. Pell, 1 Pai. (N. Y.) 564; Edwardson v. Maseby, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 500; Bleight v. McIlroy, 4 Mon. (Ky.) 145.

4. Story's Eq. Plead. § 412; Riddle's Est., 19 Pa. St. 431; Hartman's App., 36 Pa. St. 70; Green's App., 59 Pa. St. 235; Hamill's App., 88 Pa. St. 363; Fidelity Co. v. Gould, 12 Weekly Notes (Pa.), 63.

If it do not appear on the face of the bill that leave was granted, it should be struck from the files, not demurred to. Webster v. Diamond, 36 Ark. 532.

5. Standish v. Radley, 2 Atk. 178; Gilbert's For. Rom. (Am. Ed. 1874) 186; Simpson v. Downs, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 421; Reese's Est., 37 Leg. Intell. (Pa.) 15.

The new matter must be not only new, but also relevant and material, such as, if known before, might probably have produced a different determination of the suit. Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C. C. U. S.) 303; Hatcher v. Hatcher, 77 Va. 600.

Matter which merely goes to impeach the character of witnesses examined in the original suit is insufficient Livingston v. Hubbs, 2 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 124.

After a decree of sale in a foreclosure suit, new matter relating to proceedings in making the sale is insufficient. Shelton v. Van Kleeck, 106 U. S. 532.

It was formerly held that the new evidence must go to prove what was in issue, not to prove a title which was not in issue. Patterson v. Slaughter, Amb. 293; Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C.C.U.S.) 303.

cannot be brought in the court below after the decree has been affirmed in the court of last resort.[1]

A supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review is brought before the enrolment and on account of new matter only.[2] It also requires leave of court and should always be accompanied by a petition for a rehearing.[3] As to the character of the new matter, it is governed by the rules given above.[4]

4. Time for Bringing.—A bill of review for error apparent on the record must be brought within the time in which a writ of error could be brought at common law.[5] The allowance of a bill of

But it is now established that matter discovered after a decree has been made, though not capable of being used as evidence of anything previously in evidence in the cause, but constituting an entirely new issue, may be the subject of a bill of review or of a supplemental bill of that nature. Partridge v. Usborne. 5 Russ. 195; Massie v. Graham, 3 McL. (C. C. U. S.) 41.

The matter must have been in existence when the decree was rendered, but not known to the party till afterwards. Bledsoe v. Carr, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 55; Winchester v. Winchester, 1 Head (Tenn.), 460.

The matter must be such as the party, by the use of reasonable diligence, could not have known before the decree was made. Ord v. Noel, 6 Mad. Ch. 127; Young v. Keighly, 16 Ves. 348; Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C.C.U.S.) 312; Massie v. Graham, 3 McL. (C. C. U. S.) 41; Jenkins v. Brewitt, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 329; Robinson v. Sampson. 26 Me. 11; Hughes v. Jones, 2 Md. Ch. Dec. 293; Pendleton v. Fay, 3 Paige (N. Y.). 204; Stevens v. Hey, 15 Ohio, 313; Milligan's App., 82 Pa. 389; McDowell v. Morell, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 278; Hatcher v. Hatcher, 77 Va. 600.

The discovery of the whereabouts of a material witness is insufficient if his existence and materiality were known before. Putnam v. Clark, 36 N. J. Eq. 33.

Where a deed material to the evidence had been sent to the solicitor, but had been overlooked by him on account of its not having been indorsed, this was held sufficient to support a bill of review. Ex parte Vandersmissen, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Ca.) 519.

Where fraud in suppressing evidence is the ground of a bill of review, it must appear in addition that there was a legal obligation to reveal it and that artifice was used to conceal it. Maddox v. Apperson, 14 Lea (Tenn.), 596.

So is the after-discovery of an instrument in writing, where no proof of the contents was offered at the time nor any evidence presented of a diligent search for it. Conrad v. Conrad, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 510.

1. Southard v. Russell. 16 How. (U. S.) 547; Watkins v. Lawton, 69 Ga. 671; Calmes v. Ament, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 342; Stafford v. Bryan, 2 Paige (N. Y.). 46; Dennison v. Goehring, 6 Pa. 402; Haskell v. Doane, 1 McCord Ch. St. (S. Car.) 29; Cox. v. Breedlove, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 499.

This is so even where the affirmance was by dismissal of the writ of error for want of proper parties. Rice v. Carey, 4 Ga. 558.

It has been held in Pennsylvania that a bill of review does not lie in the Orphan's Court to review an account which had been contested before an auditor, and confirmed by the court after a full hearing. Cunningham's App., 2 Pitts. (Pa.) 177.

Under the Pennsylvania statute providing for petitions of review in the Orphans' Court (2 Pur. Dig. 1286, pl. 61, ed. of 1885) it is held that the Orphans' Court can entertain such a petition for error even after the supreme court has affirmed the decree. Parker's App., 61 Pa. St. 478.

2. Young v. Keighly, 16 Ves. 350; Wortley v. Birkhead, 3 Atk. 809; Singleton v. Singleton, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 340; Pendleton v. Fay, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 204; Greenwich Bk. v. Loomis, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 70; Dansman v. Hooe, 3 Wis. 466.

If the ground of complaint be error of law alone, it may be corrected on a rehearing before enrolment, and a supplemental bill is unnecessary. Adams' Equity, *419.

3. Story's Eq. Plead. § 422; Moore v. Moore, 2 Ves. Sr. 596; Phelps v. Phelps, 17 Ves. 176; Pendleton v. Fay, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 204.

4. Spill v. Celluloid Mfg. Co., 22 Fed. Repr. 94.

5. Smith v. Clay, Amb. 645; Lytton v.

review for after-discovered matter is wholly within the discretion of the court as to time, as well as in other respects. As a general rule, it clearly ought not to be allowed after the time allowed for a writ of error has elapsed since the evidence was discovered.[1]

5. Form and Contents.—A bill of review must contain a statement of the original bill in the cause, the proceedings thereon, the decree, the matters in which the party considers himself aggrieved by it,[2] and the error in law[3] or new matter discovered upon which he seeks to impeach it.[4] If the decree has not been carried into execution, the bill of review may pray simply for a review of the decree and a reversal of the point complained of. If it has been carried into execution, the bill may also pray for a further decree which shall place the party in the situation in which he would have been had the decree been unexecuted.[5] A bill to set aside a decree for fraud must also state the circumstances of fraud.[6]

A supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review should state positively that the decree has not been enrolled.[7]

The prayer of a bill of review proper is that the decree be reviewed and reversed; that of a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, that the cause be reheard.[8]

6. Other Matters of Practice.—Leave to file a bill of review for Lytton, 4 Bro. Ch. 441; Taylor v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 3 McCr. (C. C. U. S.) 484; s. c., 17 Fed. Repr. 566.

The time is computed from the date when the decree becomes final. Hence, in the case of service by publication on absent defendants, not till a year after it is pronounced. Beach v. Mosgrove, 16 Fed. Repr. 305.

By the Pennsylvannia act of Oct. 13, 1840, § 1 (2 Pur. Dig. 1286, pl. 61, Ed. 1885) a petition of review may be presented in the Orphans' Court within five years after a decree confirming an account of an executor, administrator, or guardian. In a case where this act did not apply it was followed by analogy, and thirteen years held too great a lapse of time, though during a minority. Littleton's App., 93 Pa. St. 177.

1. The point was left undecided in Thomas v. Harvie, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 146.

To impeach a decree on the ground of fraud, a bill of review must be brought within the time for a writ of error, unless there be some very cogent reason for delay. Sloan v. Sloan, 102 Ill. 581.

The objection on account of delay is waived by appearance and demurrer. Hyde v. Lamberson, 1 Idaho N. S. 539.

In the case of bills to impeach a decree on the ground of fraud, of course the time is computed from the date of the discovery of the fraud. See FRAUD, LIMITATIONS.

2. Story's Eq. Pl. § 420.

The decree must be fully set forth, or appended as an exhibit, and not merely referred to as a paper on file in the court. Groce v. Field, 13 Ga. 24.

The bill should not merely recite the decree, but must state the proceedings in the original suit. Hatcher v. Hatcher, 77 Va. 600.

It should not attempt to state the evidence on which the court found the facts on which the decree was rendered. Goldsby v. Goldsby, 67 Ala. 560.

3. The error must be specified, and not charged generally. Rodgers v. Dibirell, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 69; Kachlein's App., 5 Pa. 95; Yeger's App., 34 Pa. 173; Russell's App., 34 Pa. 258.

Where there has been a decree of foreclosure and a personal judgment at the same time, the validity of both must be denied or the bill will be demurrable. Shoaf v. Joray, 86 Ind. 70.

4. Story's Eq. Pl. § 420.

The bill should describe the new evidence distinctly and specifically, state when it was discovered, and its effect on the decree. Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C. C. U. S.) 303; Massie v. Graham, 3 McL. (C. C. U. S.) 41.

5. Story's Eq. Pl. § 420.

6. Story's Eq. Pl. § 428.

7. Story's Eq. Pl. § 425.

8. Perry v. Phelips, 17 Ves. 173, 178; Story's Eq. Pl. § 425.

after-discovered matter is sought by a petition,[1] verified by affidavit[2] containing a statement of the new matter and an allegation that it could not sooner have been discovered.[3] Counter-affidavits are sometimes admitted at the hearing on the petition.[4]

The usual defence to bills of review is by demurrer.[5]

At the hearing of a bill of review for error apparent, the facts determined by the decree are supposed to have been sufficiently proved.[6]

BILL OF REVIVOR. (See also EQUITY; PARTIES; REVIVAL OF ACTIONS.)

1. Definition.—A bill of revivor is a continuance of an original bill in equity, to bring some new party before the court when, by death or otherwise, the original party has become incapable of prosecuting or defending the suit and it is abated, that is, suspended in its progress.[7]

1. Boucher v. Boucher, 3 McA. (D. C. U. S.) 453.

After the decree has been entered in the court above, and the record remitted, the application should be to the court below. Putnam v. Clark, 35 N. J. Eq. 145.

2. Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C. C. U. S.) 503.

3. See § 3, p. 264. There is no practice authorizing rights accruing after the decree to be introduced into the controversy, except by some affirmative pleading in the shape of an original or supplemental bill bringing the new parties into court. Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

4. Norris v. LaNeve, 3 Atk. 35; Livingston v. Hubbs, 3 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 124.

The counter-affidavits are admitted, "not for the purpose of investigating or absolutely deciding upon the truth of the statements in the petition, but to present, in a more exact shape, some of the circumstances growing out of the original proceedings, which may assist the court in the preliminary hearing whether leave ought to be granted to file the bill of review. This course, though not very common, is, as I conceive, perfectly within the range of the authority of the court, and may be indispensable for a just exercise of its functions in granting or withholding the review." Story, J., in Dexter v. Arnold, 5 Mas. (C. C. U. S.) 453.

The finding of facts by the court on the petition is not conclusive at the hearing of the bill. Elliott v. Balcom, 11 Gray (Mass.), 286.

5. Irwin v. Meyrose, 2 McCr. (C. C. U. S.) 244. The decree may also be pleaded, but this is unnecessary. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pl.*

The demurrer does not admit the truth of the matters alleged in a bill for error apparent. Shelton v. VanKleeck, 106 U. S. 532.

6. Wallamet Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 19 Fed. Repr. 347.

Authorities for Bill of Review.—Gilbert's Forum Romanum (Am. Ed. 1874), pp. 179, 186; Story's Equity Pleading (9th Ed. 1879), §§ 403, 428; 2 Daniell's Chancery Pleading and Practice (5th Am. Ed. 1879), pp. 1575, 1585; Adams' Doctrine of Equity (7th Am. Ed. 1881), pp. 416–420; Cooper's Equity Pleading (Am. Ed. 1813); Mitford's Equity Pleading (Tyler's Am. Ed. 1876).

7. Story's Equity Pleadings, § 20; Mitford's Chancery Practice, 129; Cooper's Equity Pleading, 62.

It is not the commencement of a new suit, but the mere continuance of an old one. Fitzpatrick v. Domingo, 14 Fed. Repr. 216; Marlatt v. Smith, 4 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 446; Clarke v. Mathewson, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 164. In the last case it was held to be error to dismiss a bill of revivor for want of jurisdiction be-

2. When a Suit in Equity Abates.—Abatement in equity does not amount, as at law, to a determination of the suit, but only to a present suspension of the proceedings from the want of proper parties capable of proceeding therein.[1] A suit becomes abated when, by some event subsequent to the filing of the original bill, there is no person before the court by whom, or against whom, the suit in whole or in part can be prosecuted.[2] The death of one of the original parties and the death of a female plaintiff are the most common causes of the abatement of a suit in equity.[3] The death of a party does not always abate a suit, but only when his interest or that which he represents survives. If the decedent is a sole plaintiff or defendant, and his interest dies with him, there is an end to the suit.[4] There is likewise no abatement where the decedent's whole interest survives to other parties in the suit, or the surviving parties have sufficient interest to sustain a suit without the decedent.[5] But if the husband of a female plaintiff, suing in her right, dies, the bill is considered abated.[6]

Upon the marriage of a female defendant, the proceedings do cause the plaintiff in the bill of revivor was a citizen of the same State as the defendant. Hone v. Dillon, 29 Fed. Repr. 465.

1. Story's Eq. Pl. § 354; Clarke v. Mathewson, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 164; Zoellner v. Zoellner, 46 Mich. 513.

2. Story's Eq. Pl. § 328.

The death of one of several plaintiffs or defendants causes an abatement as to him only, and the suit continues as to the rest. Williamson v. Moore, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 647. But if anything is to be done by or against his interest, the proper representative must be brought before the court. Story's Eq. Pl. § 369; Neale v. Hagthrop, 3 Bland (Md.), 599.

A suit does not abate by the death of a relator. Waller v. Hanger, 2 Bulstr. 154; 1 Swanst. 305 n. But the court suspends further proceedings until a new relator is appointed. Atty.-Genl. v. Powell, 1 Dick. 355.

3. Story's Eq. Pl. § 354; Glenn v. Clapp, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Boynton v. Boynton, 21 N. H. 246; Peer v. Cookerow, 1 McCar. (N. J.) 361; Douglass v. Sherman, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 358; Feemster v. Markham, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 303; Stephenson v. Prescott, 2 Hay. (N. Car.) 163.

In many of the States it is provided by statute that a suit in equity shall not abate by the death or marriage of any of the parties. Mass. Pub. Sts. c. 165, § 24; Md. Code of 1878, art. 65, §§ 12 and 24; Neb. Code, § 45.

4. Story's Eq. Pl. § 356.

5. Story's Eq. Pl. § 357. There is no abatement where one of two defendant's trustees dies, and the whole power and trust survive to the co-trustee. Buchanan v. Malins, 1 Beav. 52; Shaw v. Railroad Co., 16 Gray (Mass.), 407. Nor on the death of one of several creditors suing in behalf of themselves and other creditors. Boddy v. Kent, 1 Meriv 364. Nor where the bill is against husband and wife in her right, and he dies under circumstances which allow of no demand by or against his personal representatives. Nor where the decedent is one of several joint tenants, parties to the bill; but otherwise of tenants in common. Boddy v. Kent, 1 Meriv. 364; Fallowes v. Williamson, 11 Ves. 306. Nor where one of several partners who are parties dies. Pingree v. Coffin, 12 Gray (Mass.), 288; contra, Wilson v. Seligman, 10 Repr. (U. S.) 651. Nor where one plaintiff was a life tenant, and the second tenant in fee of an undivided third of an estate, and the defendants were adverse claimants, and the first plaintiff died. Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 9 Eq. 452. Nor where one of several residuary legatees, co-plaintiffs in an administration suit, dies. Hinde v. Morton, 2 H. & M. 368. Nor where one of several joint heirs dies, leaving the others as his heirs. Shields v. Craig's Admr., 6 Mon. (Ky.) 374. But contra in New York, where it is necessary to revive as to a deceased defendant whose interest passes to surviving defendants. Harrington v. Decker, 2 Barb. Ch. 75.

6. Story's Eq. Pl. § 361. But she need not proceed if she does not choose, and she is not liable for the costs.

not abate, although the husband ought to be named in the subsequent proceedings.[1]

3. In what Cases a Simple Bill of Revivor is Necessary for the Continuance of a Suit.—If the suit abates by death and the decedent's interest is transmitted to a representative given or ascertained by law, so that the title cannot be disputed, at least in a court of chancery, and the person of the representative is the sole fact to be ascertained; or if the suit abates by the marriage of a female plaintiff and no act is done to affect the rights of the party except the marriage, and the person of the husband is the sole fact to be ascertained, the suit may be continued by bill of revivor merely. The purpose of the bill is to substitute the person in whom the decedent's interest has vested as a party to the suit. It is founded on privity of blood, or representation by operation of law.[2]

A suit brought merely for discovery cannot be revived after answer and discovery.[3] Nor can a suit be revived for costs merely, unless they are taxed and report thereof made in the lifetime of the party.[4]

4. A Bill in the Nature of a Bill of Revivor is necessary where there are other facts which may be brought into litigation besides the mere question of the identity of the new party. Where on the abatement of a suit there is such a transmission of the interest of the incapacitated party that the title to it, as well as the person entitled, may be the subject of litigation in a court of chancery, the suit cannot be continued by a mere bill of revivor, but an original bill upon which the title may be litigated must be filed.

1. Story's Eq. Pl. § 354.

And if a female plaintiff marries pending suit, but the husband dies before revivor, there is no abatement. Story's Eq. Pl. § 361.

2. Story's Eq. Pl. § 364; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1501; Duval v. McLoskey, 1 Ala. 708; Bowie v. Minter, 2 Ala. 412; Cullum v. Batre, 2 Ala. 415; Price v. Sanders, 39 Ark. 386; Grace v. Neel, 41 Ark. 163; Feemster v. Markham, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 303; Meek v. Ealy, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 29; Putnam v. Putnam, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 139; Glenn v. Clapp, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Green v. Hibbs, 17 Md. 260; Hawkins v. Chapman, 36 Md. 83; Webster v. Hitchcock, 11 Mich. 56; Zoellner v. Zoellner, 46 Mich. 513; Fox v. Abbott, 12 Neb. 328; Boynton v. Boynton, 21 N. H. 246; Ross v. Hatfield, 1 C. E. Greene (N. J.) 363; Peer v. Cookerow, 1 McCar. (N. J.) 361; Douglass v. Sherman, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 358; Campbell v. Browne, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 34; Randolph v. Dickerson, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 517; Pell v. Elliot, 1 Hopk. (N. Y.) 186; Stephenson v. Prescott, 2 Hay. (N. Car.) 163; Thompson v. Hill, 5 Yerger (Tenn.), 418; Curtis v. Hawn, 14 Ohio, 185.

If a suit abates by the death of the defendant, the plaintiff may revive or file a new original at his election. Spencer v. Wray, 1 Vern. 463; Anon., 3 Atk. 485; Lyle v. Bradford, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 112; doubted in Nicholl v. Roosevelt, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 60.

Where a defendant dies after service, but before appearance, his personal representatives must be brought in by a new original. Hardy v. Hull, 14 Sim 21. But in Massachusetts an executor may be brought in by bill of revivor although his testator was not served. Heard v. March, 12 Cush. 580.

Where suit is brought by husband and wife in her right and she dies, he must revive as her personal representative. Brook v. Jones, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 244.

The principle applies to the demise of a public corporation. Where, pending a suit against a levee board, the legislature abolished the board, and devolved their duties and liabilities upon the State treasurer and auditor, the plaintiffs may maintain a bill of revivor against these latter. Hemingway v. Stansell, 106 U. S. 399.

3. Horsbury v. Baker, 1 Pet. (U.S.) 232.

4. Jenour v. Jenour, 10 Ves. 562; Dodson v. Juda, 10 Ves. 31; Troup v. Troup,

This bill is founded on privity of estate or title by the act of the party. And the nature and operation of the whole act by which the privity is created is open to controversy.[1] By this bill a devisee or legatee may obtain the benefit of original proceedings by his testator.[2] This is also the proper bill to bring in an administrator de bonis non when an administrator party dies;[3] and also it has been held to bring in an assignee in bankruptcy or insolvency.[4]

5. Parties to the Bill.—If any property or right in litigation, vested in a plaintiff, be transmitted to another, he is entitled to continue the suit; and if any such property or right, vested in a defendant, be transmitted to another, the plaintiff is entitled to continue against that other.[5] Therefore, if a party die, a bill of revivor lies only by or against his proper representatives, who are, if the subject of the suit is personalty, his executors or administrators; if realty, his heirs.[6] And a bill in the nature of a bill of

18 L. T. 178; Travis v. Waters. 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 85; Johnson v. Thomas, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 377.

But this is a hard rule, whose enforcement courts have always tried to evade. Johnson v. Peck, 2 Ves. 465; Morgan v. Scudamore, 3 Ves. 195; Flenham v. Stutwell, 1 Dick. 14. It was rejected in Owing's Case, 1 Bland (Md.), 409. In Alabama it has been abrogated by the legislature. Rule 101, R. C. 838.

Where there are an original and a cross bill there must be a revivor of each, except in regard to an account where there has been a decree, in which case one bill will revive both. Story's Eq. Pl. § 363.

1. Story's Eq. Pl. §§ 378–380; Jones v. Jones, 3 Atk. 217; Douglass v. Sherman, 2 Paige (N. Y.). 358; Atty.-Genl. v. Foster, 2 Hare, 82; Peer v. Cookerow, 1 McCarter (N. J.). 361; Slack v. Walcott, 3 Mason (C. C.). 508.

2. Brady v. McCosker, 1 N. Y. 214; Slack v. Walcott, 3 Mason (U. S.). 508; Russell v. Craig, 3 Bibb (Ky.). 377; Anderson v. McNeal, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 303.

In such a bill the heir and devisee must both be made parties, in order to give the former an opportunity to dispute the validity of the will. Peer v. Cookerow, 1 McCar. (N. J.) 361; Lyons v. Piper, 11 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 337; McCardy v. Agnew, 4 Hal. Ch. (N. J.) 727.

In Tennessee a devisee is made a party by means of a supplemental bill. Thompson v. Hill, 5 Yerg. 418.

3. Phelps v. Sproule, 4 Sim. 318; Huggins v. York Bldgs. Co., 2 Eq. Abr. 3, p. 14.

In Whyte v. Gibbes, 20 How. (U. S.) 541, an administrator de bonis non was brought in by bill of revivor, but the question was not raised.

4. Harrison v. Ridley, Com. 589. Lord Eldon in Randall v. Mumford, 18 Ves. 424, speaks of the bill by which an assignee is made a party as "a bill of revivor or supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of revivor." See Lowrey v. Morrison, 11 Paige, 327.

"Perhaps it may be more appropriately termed an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor and supplement. It is an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor in so far as it seeks to revive or continue the former proceedings in the name of a new complainant upon whom the right to continue is not cast by the operation of law merely, but one upon which an alleged act of the former complainant, the validity of which may be controverted by the defendant. And it certainly is supplemental in its nature as far as it seeks to supply defects in a suit," etc. Sedgwick v. Cleveland, 7 Paige, 289; Webster v. Hitchcock, 11 Mich. 56; Griggs v. Railroad Co., 10 Mich. 117; Brewer v. Dodge, 28 Mich. 359.

It has been held, however, that bankruptcy only renders a suit defective, but does not abate it, and that consequently it is to be continued by a supplemental bill. Bank v. Fowler, 42 Md. 393; Lee v. Lee, 1 Hare, 617; Robinson v. Southgate. 5 Hare, 223; Johnson v. Fitzhugh, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.). See note 6, p. 274.

5. Story's Eq. Pl. § 330.

6. Story's Eq. Pl. § 355; Price v. Sanders, 39 Ark. 386; Grace v. Neel, 41 Ark. 163; Martin v. Tyree, 41 Ark. 314; Green v. Hibb's Admr., 17 Md. 260; Hawkins v. Chapman, 36 Md. 83; Putnam v. Putnam, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 139;

revivor can be brought only by one who claims in privity with the party in the original bill.[1] Where there are several plaintiffs or defendants, some may revive, but all should be made parties.[2] It was originally laid down that a defendant could revive only after a decree to account. But the principle has been extended to every case in which he has an interest and can derive a benefit from further proceedings.[3]

6. Form and Contents.—The bill should state the original bill, the parties to it, its object or prayer, the several proceedings, and the abatement.[4] It should show the plaintiff's title to revive,[5] and contain such new matter and no more as is requisite to show how the plaintiff becomes entitled to revive, and to charge that the cause ought to be revived, and must pray that it be revived accordingly. The bill in the nature of a bill of revivor should further charge the validity of the transmission of interest and state the rights acquired by it.[6]

7. The Defence.—The sole questions before the court on a bill of revivor are the competency of the parties to revive and the correctness of the frame of the bill.[7] A demurrer will accordingly

Kincart v. Sanders, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 26; Lannin v. Cole, 2 Hal. Ch. (N. J.) 102.

If a suit affecting both real and personal property abates, it may be revived by either the heirs or the personal representatives to the extent of their interest, or by both. Owing's Case, 1 Bland (Md.), 409; Grace v. Neel, 41 Ark. 163. Or as to part by one bill by the heirs, and as to the rest by another by the personal representatives. Ferrers v. Cherry, 1 Eq. Abr. 4, p. 11.

1. Oldham v. Eboral, 1 Cooper Sel. Cas. 27; Rylands v. Latouche, 2 Bligh, 566; Tonkin v. Lethbridge, Cooper, 43.

Where, on revivor against an assignee in bankruptcy, the validity of the discharge is to be disputed, the assignee and bankrupt should both be made parties; but if the object is only to charge the property in the hands of the former, the bill should be against him alone. Penniman v. Norton, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 246.

2. Buchanan v. Malins, 11 Beav. 52.

If surviving plaintiffs will not join in reviving, they should be made defendants. Finch v. Winchelsea, 1 Eq. Abr. 2, p. 7; Boddy v. Kent, 1 Meriv. 364; Fallowes v. Williamson, 11 Ves. 306.

A bill for the revivor of a joint judgment should itself be joint. Fox v. Abbott, 12 Neb. 328.

3. Devaynes v. Morris, 1 Myl. & Cr. 213; Williams v. Cooke, 10 Ves. 406; Griffin v. Spence, 69 Ala. 393; Ridgely v. Bond, 18 Md. 433; Peer v. Cookerow, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 136; Thompson v. Hill, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 418; Ried v. Stuart, 20 W. Va. 384.

Where a sole plaintiff or defendant dies after decree, either party may revive. Benson v. Woolverton, 1 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 110.

The right of a defendant to revive is not limited to cases in which he might himself file an original bill. Devaynes v. Morris, 1 Myl. & Cr. 213.

4. By U. S. S. C. Eq. Rule 58 it is not necessary "to set forth any of the statements in the original suit, unless the special circumstances of the case require it." 49th of Eng. orders of 1841: Griffiths v. Ricketts, 3 Hare, 476. A similar provision is contained in Rule 98, R. C. of Ala. 838.

5. Phelps v. Sproule, 4 Sim. 318; Vigers v. Audley, 9 Sim. 72.

6. Story's Eq. Pl. § 386. For forms see Eq. Draft. 413 sq.

It sometimes becomes necessary in a bill of revivor to call for an answer, as in the case of an executor or administrator, to ascertain whether he has assets to pay the complainant's demand. Story's Eq. Pl. 374; Browlow v. Duke of Chambers, Vern. & Scriv. 109; Douglass v. Sherman, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 361. So the bill should pray an answer to the original bill, where it remains unanswered, or, where it has been answered and exceptions have been filed, to so much of it as the exceptions extend to, or, where it has been amended, to so much of it as the unanswered amendments require. Story 375; Eq. Draft. 415.

7. Story's Eq. Pl. §§ 374. 377; Bettes v. Dana, 2 Sumn. (C. C.) 383; Fretz v.

lie to such a bill (1) for want of privity, (2) for want of sufficient interest in the party seeking to revive, or (3) for some imperfection in the frame of the bill.[1] If the bill be brought without sufficient cause, and this is not apparent on the face of the bill so that the defendant cannot demur, he may plead the matter necessary to show that the plaintiff is not entitled to revive against him; or if the plaintiff have no title to revive, but a title is stated in the bill, objection may be taken by plea.[2] Defence may also be made by answer; but allegations therein which raise a defence not set up in the original bill are impertinent and cannot be used as evidence for the defendant.[3] If the person entitled to revive does not proceed in due time, he is barred by the Statute of Limitations.[4]

8. The Effect of a bill of revivor is to substitute for the incapacitated party in the original proceedings the person to whom his interest is transmitted, and the latter then is equally bound by and has advantage of those proceedings. The same is the case of a bill in the nature of a bill of revivor when the validity of the alleged transmission of interest has been established.[5]

9. Bill of Revivor and Supplement.—This bill lies where not only an abatement has taken place in a suit, but defects are to be supplied, or new events are to be stated which have arisen since the commencement of the suit. It is a compound of a bill of revivor and a bill of supplement, and its separate parts are governed by the same rules as those bills themselves.[6]

Stover, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 198; Grant v. Chambers, 3 Hal. Ch. (N. J.) 223.

1. Griffith v. Ricketts, 3 Hare, 476; Metcalf v. Metcalf, 1 Keen, 74.

Although the defendant does not demur, yet if the plaintiff does not show title to revive, he will take nothing by his suit at the hearing. Nanney v. Totty, 11 Price, 117; Harris v. Pollard, 3 P. Wms. 348.

2. Story's Eq. Pl. § 829; Fallowes v. Williamson, 11 Ves. 306; Merriwether v. Mellish, 13 Ves. 435; Gould v. Barnes, 1 Dick. 133.

3. Fretz v. Stover, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 198.

Where a bill of revivor is filed after decree, the merits of the decree cannot be disputed in an answer, and matter which existed before the decree or which has arisen since, if stated, will be treated as impertinent. Arnold v. Styles, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 391; Devaynes v. Morris, 1 Myl. & Cr. 213.

A formal replication is not necessary to avoid the effect of the answer as evidence. Fretz v. Stover, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 198.

4. Hollinshead's Case, 1 P. Wms. 551; Perry v. Jenkins, 1 Myl. & Cr. 118; Murray v. The Co., 5 B. & A. 204; Ala. Code of 1876, § 2908. Contra, Lyle v. Bradford, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 115.

5. Story's Eq. Pl. §§ 376, 380; Douglass v. Sherman, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 361.

Where the bill is brought after decree, it merely substantiates the suit and brings before the court the parties necessary to see to the execution of the decree.

6. Merriwether v. Mellish, 13 Ves. 161; Bampton v. Bichall, 1 Phill. 568; Bowie v. Minter, 2 Ala. 412; Westcott v. Cady, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 342; Pendleton v. Fay, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 204; Eastman v. Batchelder, 36 N. H. 141; Manchester v. Mathewson, 2 R. I. 416.

Where in addition to the fact that the transmission of interest is not by operation of law, but by act of the party, there are also defects to be supplied, a bill in the nature of a bill of revivor and supplement is the proper proceeding. Kennedy v. Bank, 8 How. (U. S.) 586.

This is the proper bill where on marriage the wife's property becomes vested in trustees, or any third persons are made interested in it. Merriwether v. Mellish, 13 Ves. 161. And in New York to bring in a devisee. Brady v. McCosker, 214.

Where the subject matter of the suit is

10. Modern Substitutes.—The practice by bill of revivor has in many places been found inconvenient and expensive, and has been replaced, through statutory enactments, by orders of revivor, revivor by motion, by petition, by scire facias, and by amendment.[1] The object of these is chiefly formal simplification; and the substantial part of the law relating to bills of revivor is applicable to them, except where modified or changed by statute.[2] As these statutory substitutes are seldom applicable to all cases of revivor, the bill of revivor, and more particularly the bill in the nature of a bill of revivor, though rare, is not entirely obsolete, where these substitutes prevail.[3]

BILL OF RIGHTS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

BILL OF SALE. (See also CHATTEL MORTGAGES; CONDITIONAL SALES: SALES.)

1. Definition.—A bill of sale is a written agreement under seal, by which one person transfers his right to or interest in goods and personal chattels to another.[4] assigned, the assignee must revive by a bill in the nature of a bill of revivor and supplement. Perkins v. Perkins, 16 Mich. 162; Van Hook v. Throckmorton, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 33. See note 4, p 272.

A bill to revive may be joined with one to enforce a decree, where, in addition to abatement, the rights of parties have been so embarrassed by neglect to proceed that no ordinary process of the court will serve to enforce the decree. Griffin v. Spence, 69 Ala. 393.

1. By 15 and 16 Vict. c. 86, § 52, on the abatement of a suit by death, marriage, or otherwise, an order of revivor may be obtained from the court as of course. For the practice under this act see Pemberton on Revivor and Supplement, and Dan. Ch. Pr. c. xxxiii. Similar provisions have been adopted in the following States: Ala., Rule 96, R. C. 837 sq.; Ark., Mansf. Dig. § 5240 sq.; Ky., Code of Prac. § 500 sq.; Mich, Howell's Stats. § 6656 sq.; Neb., Code, §§ 458–72; N. J., R. S., Abatement, 4–7. In New York orders were introduced in certain cases by 2 R. S. 184, § 107 sq., but the whole subject is rendered obsolete in that State by the adoption of the Code of Civ. Procdr.

The object of a bill of revivor is accomplished by a suggestion on the record and a summons subpœna or notice to bring in the substituted parties in the following States: Ill., R. S. of 1882, p. 94, §§ 9–13; Md., Code of 1878, art. 65, § 13 sq.; Mass., Pub. Stats. c. 165, § 19.

The bill of revivor is superseded by scire facias in Tenn., Code of 1884, §§ 5170–73; Va., Code of 1873, c. 167, § 4; W. V., Code, c. 127, § 4. In Rhode Island the court may by general rule or special order provide for accomplishing the purpose of a bill of revivor by amendment. Pub. Stats. tit. xxv. c. 192, § 14. The same practice prevails in Pennsylvania, S. C. Eq Rule 54.

2. The statute has not changed the practice except by a more expeditious mode of proceeding. Benson v. Woolverton, 1 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 110; Russell v. Craig, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 377.

3. The bill of revivor may generally be used if it is preferred to the statutory proceeding, but this is seldom the case. Md., Code of 1878, act 65, § 23; N. J., R. S., Abatement, 9; Tenn., Code of 1884, § 1574; Reid v. Stuart, 20 W. Va. 392. In this case it was held that the statutory provision did not prevent the use of a bill of revivor, if the party desired it. Bock v. Bock, 24 W. Va. 586.

Authorities for Bills of Revivor.—Story's Eq. Pl. §§ 328–87; Daniell's Ch. Pr. c. xxxii.i; Mitford's Pl. & Pr. in Eq. 166–177; Cooper's Pl. 63–73; Ld. Redesdale's Treatise upon Equity Pleading; White on Revivor and Supplement (1843); Pemberton's Practice by Way of Revivor and Supplement (Lond. 1867).

4. Bouvier's Law Dict.

In the English practice a bill of sale used to transfer the title to a ship at sea was called a grand bill of sale, as distinguished from those in vogue for ordinary purposes; but there is no such distinction recognized in this country. Portland Bank v. Stacey, 4 Mass. 661.

In England.—Under the English "Bills

2. Form, Contents, and Effect.—A bill of sale is presumed to have been executed on the day of its date.[1] It is in general sufficient if it contains the names of the parties, the consideration, and a description of the property conveyed, and is signed by the vendor and dated.[2] A bill of sale implies a warranty of the vendor's title without any express covenant to that effect.[3] Bills of sale, if absolute in form, are not generally required to be recorded, whatever may be the purposes for which they are intended, except where they are properly construed as chattel mortgages.[4] of Sale Acts" of 1878 and 1882, an extensive body of learning has grown up in reference to conveyances of this character. By § 4 of the act of 1878, the term is made to include bills of sale proper, assignments, transfers, declarations of trust without transfer, inventories of goods with receipt attached, receipts for purchase-money of goods, and other assurances of personal chattels, and also powers of attorney, authorities, or licenses to take possession of personal chattels as security for any debt, and also any agreement, whether intended or not to be followed by the execution of any other instrument, by which a right in equity to any personal chattels, or to any charge or security thereon, shall be conferred. The subject is fully discussed in Benjamin on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), 648 et seq. These acts cover practically the same classes of transactions as are provided for in this country by the legislation concerning chattel mortgages. See CHATTEL MORTGAGES, infra.

The general rule in America is, that upon a sale of personal property the title passes to the purchaser by a delivery of the goods sold, and no bill of sale or other conveyance in writing is necessary. But such evidence of the purchase is not improper or illegal in itself, nor is the fact that a witness may be called to attest it; such precautions are of frequent occurrence and cannot be deemed badges of fraud. Kane v. Drake, 27 Ind. 29.

An instrument which acknowledges the payment of the consideration for certain personal property therein described, though in form a receipt, is in effect a bill of sale. Bush v. Bradford, 15 Ala. 317.

1. Scott v. Winship, 20 Ga. 429.

The fact that the date of the acknowledgment of a bill of sale is long subsequent to the date of its execution raises no presumption that the instrument was antedated. Thomas v. Hillhouse, 17 Iowa, 67.

A bill of sale is not necessarily the best evidence of the time when a sale was made that is alleged to be in fraud of creditors. Osen v. Sherman, 27 Wis. 501.

2. See Md. Rev. Code, art. 44, § 46. A general bill of sale purporting to transfer all the assignor's interest in all the assets belonging to his partnership suffices to pass an item of assets the existence of which was unknown to the parties. Cram v. Bank, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 461.

Description of Property—An uncertainty in the description of the property sold forms no objection to the admissibility of the bill of sale in evidence. Carpenter v. Featherston, 15 La. Ann. 235.

A bill of sale covering the whole of the vendor's stock of general merchandise, but reserving goods to the amount exempted by statute, held to convey no title to any part of the goods until the vendor should have selected the portion reserved as exempt. Block v. Maas, 65 Ala. 211.

Where a purchaser of property takes a bill of sale in the name of a third person without the previous assent, authority, or knowledge of such person, or any delivery of the bill of sale or property to him, actual or constructive, no title passes to the person named in the bill of sale. Dudley v. Deming, 34 Conn. 169.

Consideration.—A bill of sale absolute on its face, which was given in consideration that the vendee should pay a debt of the maker, is founded upon a sufficient consideration to vest the title in the vendee. Hackley v. Cooksey, 35 Mo. 398; Richardson v. Kimball, 28 Me. 463.

3. Miller v. Van Tassel, 24 Cal. 458.

But this presumption may be rebutted by parol evidence. Miller v. Van Tassel, 24 Cal. 458.

A person holding chattels under a bill of sale has a good title, which cannot be impeached for fraud by the vendor or any one claiming under him, except a bona fide creditor having a legal lien. Evans v. Herring, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 243.

4. Knight v. Nichols, 34 Me. 208. Compare Neeley v. Wood, 10 Yerg.

BILL TO PERPETUATE TESTIMONY. (See also BILL IN EQUITY; BILL TO TAKE TESTIMONY DE BENE ESSE; EQUITY; EVIDENCE; WITNESSES. As to Notice, Service, Publication, Costs, etc., see BILL TO TAKE TESTIMONY DE BENE ESSE.)

1. Definition.—Perpetuating testimony is the taking of evidence provisionally under the order of some competent court, and reducing it to writing in order that it may be preserved and read in evidence in some suit or legal proceeding to be thereafter instituted, in the event that the witness whose evidence is taken shall be out of the country, ill, or otherwise unable to attend court, or be dead.[1]

2. Object.—The object of all bills to perpetuate testimony is to secure and preserve such testimony as may be in danger of being lost before the matter to which it relates can be made the subject of judicial investigation,[2] and thereby to assist other courts, as well as prevent future litigation.[3]

(Tenn.) 486. See CHATTEL MORTGAGES, infra.

Authorities for Bills of Sale.—Benjamin on Sales; Indermaur on Bills of Sale; Jones on Chattel Mortgages.

1. 1 Bouv. L. Dict. (14th Ed.) 326; 1 Whart. Ev. sec. 181.

2. Cooper Eq. Pl. 52; 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 1505; Com. Dig. tit. Chancery.

Judge Story says (Eq. Jur. sec. 1505), that "bills of this sort are obviously indispensable for the purpose of public justice, as it may be utterly impossible for a party to bring his rights presently to a judicial decision; and unless in the intermediate time he may perpetuate the proofs of those rights, they may be lost without any default on his side. The civil law adopted similar means of preserving testimony which was in danger of being otherwise lost." Domat. b. 3, tit. 6, sec. 3; Dig. Lib. 9, tit. 2, l. 40; Nov. 90, ch. 4; Gilb. For. Roman, ch. 7, pp. 118, 119; Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. temp. Finch, 391; 1 Whart. Ev. sec. 181.

Although this jurisdiction seems to be indispensable for the purposes of public justice, it has been said to be open to grave objections because "it leads to a trial on written depositions, which is deemed (at least in courts of common law) to be much less favorable to the cause of truth than the viva-voce examination of witnesses. But what is still more important, inasmuch as the depositions can never be used until after the death of the witnesses, and are not indeed published until after their death, it follows that whatever may have been the perjury committed in those depositions, it must necessarily go unpunished. The testimony, therefore, has this infirmity, that it is not given under the sanction of those penalties which the general policy of the law imposes upon the crime of perjury. It is for these reasons that courts of equity do not generally entertain bills to perpetuate testimony for the purpose of being used on a future occasion, unless where it is absolutely necessary to prevent failure of justice." Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83; Duke of Dorset v. Girdler, Prec. Ch. 531, 532; Cann v. Cann, 1 P. Wms. 723, 729.

3. Cooper Eq. Pl. 52; Barton, Suit in Eq. 53, 54; Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) sec. 300.

The origin of this practice has been traced to the canon law, which, taking hold of men's consciences, extended its right to all cases in which it was important in the interest of justice to register testimony which would otherwise be lost. Ch. 5, X. ut. lite non cont., Bockmer, n. 4; 8 Toullier, n. 422; c. 34, 41. 43, X. De test. (II. 20); 2 Bouv. L. Dict. (14th Ed.) 326.

There are statutes in most of the States regulating taking testimony in perpetuam

3. When Lies.—Where the subject-matter is likely to be litigated in the future, but cannot be made the subject of immediate judicial investigation,[1] and there is testimony in existence which rei memoriam, and the examination of witnesses de bene esse. 2 Bouv. L. Dict. (14th Ed.) 236; Stim. Stat.

Federal Statutes.—R. S. U. S. sec. 866. See note 2, p. 279.

Maine Statutes.—The provisions of the Maine Rev. Stat. ch. 170, secs. 26, 27, and 28, authorize the issuing of commissions by the supreme judicial court for the taking of depositions in other States or foreign countries, but do not limit the power of the court to issue these commissions to cases where some one or more of the persons supposed to be adversely interested reside within the State. The commission may issue though all the adverse parties reside out of the State. Ocean Ins. Co. v. Bilger, 72 Me. 469.

Depositions taken in perpetuam rei memoriam by a notary public under Maine Statute of 1821, ch. 101, sec. 4, must be recorded in the registry of deeds. Winslow v. Mosher, 19 Me. 151.

Massachusetts Statutes. — The Mass. Gen. Stats. ch. 131, secs. 54–58, provide that "depositions to perpetuate testimony of witnesses within or without the State, to be used as evidence against all persons, may be taken upon a commission to be issued after public notice by the supreme judicial or superior court. The court shall, in addition . . . require the applicant to state upon oath or otherwise all persons known or supposed to be interested in the case, and shall direct that the commissioner publish in such newspapers within or without the State as the court may consider most effectual, such notice of the time and place of taking the deposition, and the subject-matter thereof, as the court may think proper. This notice shall be addressed specially by name to all persons known or supposed to be interested in the case, and to all other persons generally, that they may attend and cross-examine the witnesses. The court may also direct personal notice of the time and place of taking, and the subject-matter thereof, to be given to such persons and in such manner as, under all the circumstances, seem proper." India Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bigler, 132 Mass. 171.

An application for a commission to take depositions in perpetuam of a witness residing out of the State can, if the only persons adversely interested also reside without the State, only be made under Mass. Gen. Stat. ch. 131, secs. 52–58. The notice required by these sections should be given, and not that required by secs. 46–51, and the court has no discretionary power to grant an application to issue under the latter sections. India Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bigler, 132 Mass. 171.

New York Statutes.—In New York bills to perpetuate testimony are seldom resorted to in the present day, since the Rev. Stats. have given a much cheaper and more expeditious method of proceeding to accomplish the object by a summary application to an officer authorized for that purpose. 2 Rev. Stat. 398, art. 5 of tit. 3, ch. 7, pt. 3.

The Code containing no provision respecting bills to perpetuate testimony, the provisions of the Rev. Stat. are therefore still in force, and furnish a sufficient remedy in most cases. Where a case occurs in which they do not, the party may still have recourse to a bill to perpetuate testimony. 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d) 144.

It is said in Paton v. Westervelt, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 399, that under the provisions of 2 Rev. Stat. art. 5, tit. 3. ch. 8, it must be made to appear to the officer before whom an application is made for the examination of witnesses in perpetuam that the object is in good faith to perpetuate testimony. The court say that "the officer must have some discretion, and may require the party on whose application the examination is made to explain the nature of the litigation so far as to enable him to judge whether such applicant is proceeding in good faith to perpetuate testimony against the adverse party, or is under that pretence only fishing for testimony to be used against the witness, or for other purposes." See to same effect In re Kip, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 601, 608. Courts will not tolerate fishing for testimony. See Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777.

Virginia Statutes —In Virginia formerly, on application by bill to take depositions in perpetuam, the plaintiff was required to obtain an order or commission authorizing him to take the deposition, and afterwards another perpetuating it. Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109. But by the act of 1849, p. 666, sec. 34, a new and simpler mode was provided.

1. Bills to perpetuate testimony can be maintained only when no present suit can be brought at law by the party seeking the aid of the court. See Cooper is in danger of being lost before the matter to which it relates can be brought to trial, a bill in equity lies to preserve and perpetuate such testimony in order to prevent the hardship which might occur to a party from an investigation at a remote period when he was deprived of his evidence by the death or removal of his witnesses;[2] and this is true whether the title or claim is to real

Eq. Pl. 57; Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) secs. 303, 307; 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 1513; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 145.

In every case in which a complainant has a vested interest in a matter which is likely to become the subject-matter of litigation, however small or contingent, and it cannot be investigated in a court of law or equity either from the party's inability from legal causes to institute a suit if he should be the plaintiff; or, having sued, he is impeded by act of the other party from prosecuting his suit, and his interest may be endangered if the evidence in support of it be lost,—he is entitled to have the testimony of the witness perpetuated. Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777, 782.

Where it is possible, however, for the matter in controversy to be made the subject of immediate judicial investigation by the party who seeks to perpetuate testimony, a bill will not lie because, under such circumstances, the party "has it fully in his power to terminate the controversy by commencing the proper action; and, therefore, there is no reasonable ground to give the advantage of deferring his proceedings to a future time, and to substitute thereby written depositions for viva-voce evidence." 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 1508.

1. The Commission, although usually granted almost as a matter of course without a stay of proceedings, does not issue as a matter of strict right. Ring v. Mott, 2 Sand. 683. And the court may impose such terms as to it shall seem just. See Clayton v. Yarrington, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 273 n.; Abton v. Barbey, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 154.

In New York the commission should be sealed. Ford v. Williams, 24 N. Y. 359; Tracy v. Suydam, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 110; Whitney v. Wyncoop, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 370. And should contain the names of the witnesses. Renwick v. Renwick, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 420.

A commission issued under statute will be sufficient if it contain the substance of what is provided for in that statute. Hall v. Barton, 25 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 274.

The Decretal Order of the court granting the commission to take the testimony directs that the depositions, when taken, shall remain to perpetuate the memory thereof, and to be used as there shall be occasion in case of the death or absence of the witnesses, or their inability to travel. Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. temp. Finch, 391, 392.

The order directing a commission to issue must be drawn up in writing, naming the commissioners and also the witnesses, in all cases where their names can be ascertained. Wright v. Jessup, 3 Duer (N. Y.), 642.

An order granted by a judge out of court, in which the witnesses are not named, is said to be of doubtful regularity. Renwick v. Renwick, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 420. But it seems that if the order be made by the court, it has power to dispense with this general rule. Nicol v. Alison, 10 Q. B. 1006.

2. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim & S. 83, 89.

Delaware.—Where plaintiff was in possession of lands of his deceased wife, claiming as tenant by courtesy, it was held that he was entitled to a bill to perpetuate evidence of his title resting exclusively in the knowledge of two witnesses, notwithstanding the heirs at law were contesting his title, and had brought ejectment, although the witnesses were neither aged nor infirm. Hall v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 269.

Federal.—Under U. S. Rev. Stat., sec. 866, wherein it is provided that "any circuit court, upon application to it as a court of equity, may, according to the usage of chancery, direct depositions to be taken in perpetuam rei memoriam if they relate to any matters that may be cognizable in any court of the United States," it has been held that a bill will be sustained to obtain a direction that the testimony of a witness be taken in perpetuam where the plaintiff alleges that he is employing or applying a process to the use of which the defendant claims an exclusive right under a patent; that the patent is void for want of novelty; that in case the defendant sues the plaintiff for infringment of said patent the plaintiff relies, for his defence, on the testimony of a certain witness; that the witness had made public use in the United States of the said process for upwards of twelve years before said patent was issued; that estate or personal property, or to mere personal demands, and whether the testimony is to be used in support of an action or as matter of defence to repel it.[1] A bill in perpetuam will be granted in cases of private penalty or forfeiture without waiving it where it may be waived, or in cases of waste or of the forfeiture of a lease, and also in cases of public penalties.[2] But one will not be granted after judgment, to preserve and perpetuate testimony which the party might lose by the death or absence of the witnesses, in the event of a reversal of the judgment and a new trial being ordered.[3] A bill to perpetuate testimony lies against a bona fide purchaser.[4]

4. What Bill Must Show.—In order to maintain a bill in perpetuam, it is necessary to state on its face all the material facts which are necessary to confer jurisdiction.[5] It must show that a said witness is upwards of ninety years of age, and that the defendant does not sue the plaintiff for infringement, and that the plaintiff cannot bring his rights to a judicial determination. The New York & Baltimore Coffee Polishing Co. v. The New York Coffee Polishing Co., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 174; s. c., 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 485.

If the attorney-general has power to institute a suit to annul the patent for want of novelty (see Atty.-Gen. v. Rumford Chemical Works, 9 Off. Gaz. 1062), this fact in no wise affects the right to maintain the bill, because the matter rests entirely in the discretion and control of the attorney-general. Mowry v. Whitney, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 441. And if he were to institute such an action, he is not obliged to call the plaintiff's witness. The New York & Baltimore Coffee Polishing Co. v. The New York Coffee Polishing Co., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 174; s. c., 62 How Pr. (N. Y.) 485.

1. Earl of Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450.

In order to be preserved, such testimony must be of an ephemeral character; and the rule applies not only to witnesses whose death may be looked forward to at any time, and whose testimony cannot be otherwise produced, but also to all proofs equally ephemeral. This principle is acted on by our courts when they direct particular articles, such as instruments of crime, which are liable to perish, to become lost or be spirited away, to be impounded and placed under the custody of the court; also when steps are taken under the direction of a competent officer to secure measurements and photographs of the locus delicti, and of all indications of guilt on soil or buildings where a crime has been committed. 1 Whart. Ev. sec. 181.

The canon law recognizes, in addition, the right of a party who has interests dependent upon a writing in process of decay or obliteration, to have such writing judicially perpetuated by exemplification. Ch. 4, xii. 6.

2. Earl of Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450.

Justice Blackstone says that bills of this kind are "most frequent where lands are devised by will away from the heir at law; and the devisee, in order to perpetuate the testimony of the witnesses to such will, exhibits a bill in chancery against the heir, and sets forth the will verbatim therein, suggesting that the heir is inclined to dispute its validity; and then, the defendant having answered, they proceed to issue as in other cases, and examine the witnesses to the will; after which the case is at an end, without proceeding to any decree, no relief being prayed by the bill; but the heir is entitled to his costs, even though he contests the will. This is what is usually called proving a will in chancery." 2 Black. Com. 450.

3. McCall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 34 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 310.

4. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 263, 264; Gordon v. Close, 2 Bro. Parl. Cas. 473, 477, 479.

5. Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) § 300.

Subject-matter.—It must, in the first place, state the subject-matter, touching which the plaintiff is desirous of giving evidence. Mitf. & Tyl. Pl. & Pr. in Eq. 149.

Facts in Pais.—If the object of the bill is to perpetuate the evidence of witnesses as to facts in pais, it is not sufficient to state generally that they can give evidence to certain facts; but the bill must state specially what those facts are. Knight v. Knight, 4 Madd. 8, 10.

Witness to Deed.—If the object is to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses to suit at law cannot be brought by the party filing the bill;[1] or that before the facts can be investigated in a court of law the evidence of a material witness is liable to be lost by his death or departure from the country.[2] It must show the matter touching which the plaintiff is desirous of giving evidence, so that it may point the proper interrogatories on both sides to the true merits of the controversy, and must show that the party has some interest in the subject.[3] a deed to real estate, the deed should be properly described, and the names of the witnesses who are to prove the same set forth. See Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. temp. Finch, 391.

Witness to Will.—Where the bill seeks to perpetuate testimony of witnesses to a will, it is not only advisable, but the better practice, to set forth in the bill the whole will in hæc verba. Wyatt Pr. Reg. 74; Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) § 305.

Right of Common, etc.—In Cresset v. Milton, 1 Ves. Jr. 449; s. c., 3 Bro. Ch. 481, where the object of the bill was to perpetuate testimony of witnesses respecting a right of common and of way, it was alleged that the tenants, owners and occupiers of the said messuage and lands, etc., in right of or otherwise, from time to time, etc., and of right ought to have common pasture in and upon a certain waste or common called Brownbee, for their horses, etc., and also a way or road for themselves, etc. Upon demurrer the bill was held bad because the charges were too general and not sufficiently descriptive of any particular right; because the manner in which the right of common was claimed was not set forth with any certainty, not having been set forth as common appurtenant or as common appendant, but as that "or otherwise," which simply amounted to no specification at all, and left any sort of right open to proof. There must be something substantial set forth in the bill; the party must claim something.

Supplemental Bill.—Upon a bill to perpetuate testimony, the examination of witnesses having been completed, and the commission closed, the plaintiff cannot file a supplemental bill to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses, on the ground of facts discovered since the filing of the original bill, without stating what those facts are. Knight v. Knight, 4 Madd. 1, 10.

1. Cox v. Colley, 1 Dick. 55; Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 114.

Ordinarily, the bill must set forth that the facts to which the testimony relates cannot be immediately investigated in a court of law; or if they can, that the sole right of the action belongs to the opposite party, or that such party has interposed obstacles to prevent the institution of an action. Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777. See Commonwealth v. Stone, Thach. C. C. (Mass.) 604; Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109; North v. Gray, 1 Dick. 14; Cox v. Colley, 1 Dick. 55; Duke of Dorset v. Girdler, Prece. Ch. 530.

The bill will be demurrable if it fails to state that the matter cannot be made the subject of immediate investigation. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 89; Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 114. Because where the plaintiff is entitled to bring an action, he is at most only entitled a commission under given circumstances to examine witnesses de bene esse. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 90.

2. Mitf. & Tyl. Pl. & Pr. in Eq. 150.

3. Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. temp. Finch, 391; Smith v. Attorney-General, cited in 6 Ves. 260.

Care should always be taken in drawing a bill of this kind not to mix up in it other matters, which may require very different decretal orders. Drew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 108. Otherwise the bill will be demurrable. Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) § 306.

As the object of this jurisdiction is to assist the courts of law, and by preserving evidence to prevent future litigations, there are few cases in which courts of equity will decline to exercise it. Mitf. & Tyl. Pl. & Pr. in Eq. 241. And demurrers to bills seeking it will seldom lie. Earl of Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 451; Philips v. Carew, 1 P. Wms. 117; Tirrell v. Co., 1 Roll. Abr. 383; Mendis v. Barnard, 1 Dick. 65; Lord Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 251–256. Compare Earl of Belfast v. Chichester, 2 Jac. & W. 439.

Where a bill sought a discovery, prayed relief, and asked to perpetuate testimony, the court held that although the defendant might demur to the discovery sought and the relief prayed, that he could not demur to so much of the bill as sought to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses. Earl of Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450,

(a) Plaintiff's Interest.—The bill should show that the plaintiff has some interest[1] in the subject-matter which may be endangered if the testimony in support of it be lost; for unless he has some interest he cannot maintain the bill.[2]

(b) Defendant's Interest.—The bill should show that the defendant has, or that he pretends to have, or that he claims, an interest to contest the title of the plaintiff in the subject of the proposed testimony.[3]

(c) Ground of Necessity.—The bill must show ground of necessity for perpetuating the evidence.[4] The rule is not to sustain a bill

Thorpe v. Macauley, 5 Madd. 218; Shackell v. Macaulay, 2 Sim. & S. 79. But where the case made by the bill appears to be such that the jurisdiction of the court does not arise.—as for instance if the matter to which the required testimony is alleged to relate can be immediately investigated in a court of law, and the witnesses reside within the jurisdiction of the court,—the demurrer will lie. North v. Gray, 1 Dick. 14; Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 89.

1. The court will not protect every interest, however, by perpetuating the evidence sustaining it; and where the interest is such a one that it may be immediately barred by the party against whom the bill is brought, the court will not sustain the bill, because it would be a fruitless exercise of power. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 261–263; Belfast v. Chichester, 2 Jac. & W. 451, 452.

2. May v. Armstrong, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 260; Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. temp. Finch, 391; Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 261, 262; Belfast v. Chichester, 2 Jac. & W. 449, 451.

A mere expectancy, however strong, is not sufficient to entitle plaintiff to maintain a bill; he must have a positive interest. Sackville v. Ayleworth, 1 Vern. 105, 106; s. c., 1 Eq. Abridg. 234.

It has been said that even where the party seeking to perpetuate the testimony is next of kin of a lunatic, although the lunatic be intestate and in the most helpless state, and his recovery a physical impossibility, even if he were in articulo mortis, and the bill was filed at that instant, the plaintiff would not have such an interest in the subject of the suit as would qualify him to maintain the bill. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 260; Sackville v. Ayleworth, 1 Vern. 105; s. c., 1 Eq. Abridg. 234; Smith v. Atty.-Gen., cited in 6 Ves. 260; Allan v. Allan, 15 Ves. 135, 136. But if the heir had entered into any contract with respect to his expectancies and possibilities, he might, upon the strength of such contract, maintain a bill to perpetuate testimony. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 260, 261; Cooper Eq. Pl. 53, 54. For such a bill may be maintained where there is any vested interest, however, slight or trifling in value; whether it be absolute or contingent, whether it be present or remote and future in enjoyment, and dependent upon the most remote and improbable contingency, is wholly immaterial; it is a present estate, although with reference to chances it may be worth little or nothing. Allan v. Allan, 15 Ves. 135, 136; Belfast v. Chichester, 2 Jac. & W. 451; Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 251.

3. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 251.

Unless the defendant has or claims some interest it is utterly fruitless to perpetuate the testimony, since it can have no operation or effect upon those who are the real parties in interest. Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) sec. 302.

It has been said that "it will be sufficient to bind all the parties in interest to bring before the court those who are judicially held to represent them all; as, for instance, the first tenant in tail, who represents all the subsequent interests." Finch v. Finch, 1 Ves. 534; Lloyd v. Johnes, 9 Ves. 37, 52–59; Cockburn v. Thompson, 16 Ves. 326; Reynoldson v. Perkins, Ambl. 565; Giffard v. Hort, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 408, 409, 411.

4. Such as that the facts, to which the testimony of the witnesses whom it is proposed to examine relates, cannot be immediately investigated in a court of law; or if these facts can be so investigated, that the sole right of action belongs exclusively to the other party; or that the other party has interposed some impediment, such as an injunction, to an immediate trial of the right in the suit at law. See Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777; Commonwealth v. Stone, Thach. C. C. (Mass.) 604; Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109; North v. Gray, 1 Dick. 14; Cox v. Colley, 1 Dick. 55; Dorset v. Girdler, Prece. Ch. 530.

if it is possible that the matter can, by the party exhibiting the bill, be made the subject of an immediate judicial investigation, because then there is no ground of necessity.[1]

5. Prayer.—The prayer to the bill should ask leave to examine witnesses touching the matter stated, to the end that testimony may be preserved and perpetuated.[2] It should also ask for a subpœna,[3] but not for relief.[4] If the bill prays relief, it is demurrable, and may be dismissed for this cause.[5]

6. Who May Maintain.—Any one interested may maintain a bill in perpetuam rei memoriam.[6] The right of action may be either in the plaintiff or the defendant in equity,[7] and may be maintained by a plaintiff out of possession as well as by one in possession, if he has no present right of action.[8] But the bill will not lie at the suit of the defendant in a pending action.[9]

7. Where Testimony to be Taken.—Examinations in perpetuam

1. The New York & Baltimore Coffee Polishing Co. v. The New York Polishing Co., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 174, 176; s. c., 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 485.

Where the facts can be immediately investigated in a court of law, the bill must allege the specific facts on which the plaintiff puts his case. Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. temp. Finch, 391 Such as that he has no present right to maintain an action; or where he has a title in remainder or reversion only after a present existing estate or life. Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 260, 261. Or he is himself in actual possession of the property or in the present possession of the rights he seeks to perpetuate by proofs. See Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83; Dorset v. Girdler, Prece. Ch. 531; Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 114; Com. Dig. tit. Chancery.

2. Cooper Eq. Jur. 52.

3. Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) sec. 306.

4. Because that would turn it into a bill for relief, which is inconsistent with the nature of a bill to perpetuate testimony. Rose v. Gannel, 3 Atk. 439; Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316.

5. Dalton v. Thompson, 1 Dick. 97; Rose v. Gannel, 3 Atk. 439; Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316.

Where a bill prays to perpetuate testimony and also for relief, the court may allow the plaintiff to amend by striking out the prayer for relief, even after the testimony has been taken under it, and thus give effect to such testimony. Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316.

6. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 89.

English Statute.—According to statute 5 and 6 Vict. Ch. 69, any person who would, under the circumstances alleged to exist, become entitled upon the happening of any future event to any honor, title, dignity, or office, or to any estate or interest in any property, real or personal, the right or claim to which cannot by him be brought to trial before the happening of such event, shall be entitled to file a bill in chancery to perpetuate any testimony which may be material for establishing such claim or right. See Starkie on Ev. (10th Ed.) 428.

Before this statute, upon petition of right, a commission issued, and an inquiry was thereupon found and returned to chancery. Before any other proceedings the suppliant filed a bill against the attorney-general to perpetuate testimony, reciting the petition and a commission to examine witnesses issued thereon ex parte, the crown declining to join. The crown traversed the inquisition, and the record was sent to the Queen's Bench. The court held that the depositions taken under this commission were taken in a proceeding substantially the same, and were admissible, the witness being out of the jurisdiction of the court. Baron de Bode's Case, 8 Q. B. 208; s. c., 55 Eng. C. L. 208.

7. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 89.

8. Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777, 781.

The bill to perpetuate testimony, strictly so called, could formerly be filed only by persons who were in possession under their title, and therefore could not sue at law; if the testimony were required by persons out of possession, it was obtainable only by bill to take testimony de bene esse, and the latter could be filed only when an action was actually pending. Starkie Ev. (10th Ed.) 428; 1 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 664.

9. Spencer v. Peek, L. R. 3 Eq. 415.

should be had in the county where the witness resides, but may be taken elsewhere if the witness chooses to submit thereto.[1]

8. Defences.—In bills to perpetuate testimony the defendant may allege any facts going to show that there is no occasion to perpetuate the testimony; and this may be done by way of plea, based either upon the ground that there exists no such dispute or controversy as alleged in the bill, or that the plaintiff has no such interest in it as will justify his application to perpetuate the testimony.[2]

9. Hearing.—A bill to perpetuate testimony is never brought to a hearing;[3] relief not being prayed by the bill,[4] the suit is terminated by the examination of the witnesses,[5] or is at least suspended until the anticipated action is brought; and then, at a suitable period, an order for the publication thereof may be obtained from the court upon a proper case made, such as the death or absence of the witnesses, or their inability from sickness or other cause to attend the trial.[6]

10. Statutory Requirements.—Statutes authorizing the taking of depositions are in derogation of the common law,[7] are to be strictly

1. Jackson v. Leek, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 105.

Examination of Witnesses.—The proceeding must, as far as practicable, be carried on in conformity with the ordinary laws of evidence. See Heffter Inst. 528; 1 Whart. Ev. sec. 181.

The witnesses are to be examined according to the rules and practice of courts of law in reference to witnesses going abroad. Tyler Ev. sec. 490.

The witness is obliged to give his evidence under commission in perpetuam in the same cases and to the same extent as he would were he called as a witness upon the trial of the cause. In re Kip, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 601.

Evidence of Defendant.—Where it is desirable to perpetuate the testimony of the defendant in regard to a matter in which his interest is adverse to that of the plaintiff, the proper mode of examination is the same as that of examining all other witnesses for the same purpose, and it is only by so examining him that his deposition can be made evidence at any future period, in another suit. Ellice Roupell, 9 Jur. (N. S.) 530.

2 Ellice v. Roupell, 9 Jur. (N. S.) 530.

Judge Story says that "if the defendant make answer to the bill as first presented, he cannot, after the same is amended and new points of inquiry presented, plead to the amended bill, that since the filing of the original the plaintiff had instituted another suit in equity, in which he had made the several matters raised by the amended bill the subject of judicial investigation; for although such a plea might be good to the original bill, the defendant having consented to answer, cannot afterwards plead to the amended bill." But it seems that if the amended bill change the nature of the original bill from one to perpetuate testimony so as to combine it with a claim for discovery from the defendant, that the defendant will not be bound to make further answer. Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) sec. 306a.

Where testimony has been perpetuated on a bill against a feme covert, with respect to her lands, to which her husband is not a party, it is too late to make the objection when the testimony is offered to be read. Couch v. Sutton, 1 Gr. (Pa.) 114.

3. Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316.

If the case should be improperly brought to a hearing, it would be dismissed; but this dismissal will not affect the depositions, which may still be used as evidence. Hall v. Hodderdon, 2 P. Wms. 162, 163; Anon., 2 Ves. Sr. 497; Anon, Ambl. 237; Acland v. Gaisford, 2 Madd. 37, note; Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316; Rose v. Gannel, 3 Atk. 439.

4. Dalton v. Thomson, 1 Dick. 97.

5. Morrison v. Arnold, 19 Ves. 670; Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316; Anon., Ambl. 237; Anon., 2 Ves. Sr. 497; Hall v. Hodderdon, 2 P. Wms. 162.

6. Morrison v. Arnold, 19 Ves. 671; Teale v. Teale, 1 Sim. & S. 385; Abergavenny v. Powell, 1 Meriv. 433.

7. Graham v. Whitely, 26 N. J. L. 254; construed,[1] and their requirements must be minutely complied with;[2] and this fact must appear on the face of the deposition.[3]

BILL TO TAKE TESTIMONY DE BENE ESSE. (See also BILL TO PERPETUATE TESTIMONY; EQUITY; EVIDENCE; WITNESSES.)

1. Nature.—Where a suit is already pending, a bill to perpetuate testimony is of a different character, to wit, a bill de bene esse,[4]

Winooskie Turnpike Co. v. Ridley, 8 Vt. 404.

1. Shutte v. Thompson, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 151; Bell v. Morrison, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 351; The Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Southgate, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 604; Carrington v. Stimson, 1 Curt. C. C. (U. S.) 437.

2. Dunkle v. Worcester, 5 Biss. C. C. (U. S.) 102; Jones v. Neale, 1 Hughes C. C. (U. S.) 268; Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Jackson, 1 Hughes C. C. (U. S.) 195; Patterson v. Fagan, 38 Mo. 70; Tayon v. Hordman, 23 Mo. 539; Wallace v. Mease, 4 Yeates (Pa.), 520; Bascom v. Bascom, Wright (Ohio), 632; Bradstreet v. Baldwin, 11 Mass. 229, 233; Davis v. Allen, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 313; Welles v. Fish, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 74; Fabyan v. Adams, 15 N. H. 371; Brighton v. Walker, 35 Me. 132; Parsons v. Huff, 38 Me. 137; Winooskie Turnpike Co. v. Ridley, 8 Vt. 404.

Where a party at whose request a deposition in perpetuam was taken omitted in his application for a commission to state that he was desirous of perpetuating the testimony of the witnesses, as prescribed by Mass. R. S. ch. 94, sec. 34, but no objection was made to it, for that reason, at the time of taking the deposition, and the notice of the magistrate to the defendant and the certificate to the instrument showed that the depositions were taken in perpetuam, it was held that the depositions were not from that cause inadmissible. Commonwealth v. Stone, Thach. C. C. (Mass.) 604.

3. Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 383; Williams v. Chadbourne, 6 Cal. 559.

Authorities for Bills to Perpetuate Testimony.—Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) §§ 299–311; 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 269–277; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 145–147; Mitf. & Tyl. Pl. & Pr. in Eq. 149, 241–243; Graham's Pr. (2d Ed.) 584–603; 2 Wait's Pr. 675–710.

4. Definition.—The phrase de bene esse is a term applied to such acts or proceedings as are done or permitted to take place in an action, but the validity or effect of which depends upon some subsequent act or fact, matter or proceeding. An examination of witnesses de bene esse is an examination of them out of court, before the trial, subject to the contingency of their death, removal, or inability to attend the trial; in which event such examination is good, and the deposition may be read in evidence on the trial; otherwise not. Graham Pr. 584; 1 Burr. L. Dict. (2d Ed.) 212, 447.

"The precise literal meaning of this very old, but still common technical expression (the practical import of which is well enough understood), seems to have been a matter of uncertainty and difficulty ever since the time of Cowell, who observes that 'de bene esse are common Latin words, but their meaning something more dark.' This obscurity has doubtless principally arisen from the peculiar structure of the phrase itself, which has rendered a literal translation into English a matter of so much difficulty that most interpreters follow Cowell's example, having contented themselves with expressing the same sense in terms of as close approximation as was supposed practicable." 1 Burr. L. Dict. (2d Ed.) 427.

The same author says that the phrase to take the testimony of the witnesses.[1] Bills to examine witnesses de bene esse bear a close analogy to bills to take testimony in perpetuam rei memoriam, and though often confounded with them, stand upon distinct considerations.[2] The general rules regulating bills in perpetuam are for the most part applicable to bills to examine witnesses de bene esse.[3]

2. Object.—The object of a bill de bene esse is to take the testimony of witnesses for the trial at law, where the testimony may otherwise be lost.[4]

3. Who May Issue.—By common law[5] courts of law have no authority to issue commissions to examine witnesses de bene esse in any case,[6] but courts of equity have ever exercised the authority to issue such commissions in aid of a trial at law, where the subject-matter admits of present judicial investigation, and a suit is at the time pending in some court.[7]

4. When Lies.—Bills to examine witnesses de bene esse can be brought only where an action is at the time pending.[8]

was not originally a Latin one, but a very literal translation of the law French del bien estre. This is assumed from the circumstance that the phrase is not to be found in Bracton,—the great source of most of the technical Latin of the English law,—while "in the law French of Britton it not only occurs in form, but its component words are constantly used in connections which throw an important light upon its meaning."

1. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83, 90; Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 108; Parry v. Rogers, 1 Vern. 441; Brandlyn v. Ord, 1 Atk. 571; Dursley v. Fitzhardinge, 6 Ves. 260.

An examination of witnesses de bene esse is not only incidental to every suit at law or in chancery, but may even be incidental to a suit to perpetuate testimony, where there is danger that the evidence of the witnesses whose testimony is intended to be perpetuated will be lost before the suit for perpetuating it is ripe for a regular examination. Frero v. Green, 19 Ves. 319; 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 270.

Where the witness is a party to the action it seems his testimony may be taken de bene esse, but not otherwise, before issue joined. Norton v. Abbott, 28 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 388; Bell v. Richmond, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 571; s. c., 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 44. Compare Fullerton v. Gaylord, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 551; McVickar v. Greenleaf, 4 Rob. (N. Y.) 657; s. c., 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 61; Duffy v. Lynch, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 509.

2. 3 Bl. Com. 438; Gilb. For. Roman. 140; Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) §§ 303, 307; 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) § 1513; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 145.

3. Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) § 252; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. 145.

New York Practice.—Bills to take testimony de bene esse are but rarely filed in New York, as the testimony of the witnesses may be taken in a much cheaper and simpler manner upon a summary application to an officer under provisions of the statute. See 2 Rev. Stat. 391, art. 1; 398, art. 5; 3 Rev. Stat. 673, § 1.

4. As where the witnesses are aged, infirm, ill, about to leave the country, or reside abroad. See Dicher v. Power, 1 Dick. 112; Shelley v. ——, 13 Ves. 56; Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 260.

5. In England authority is now conferred by statute upon courts of common law to take the depositions of witnesses broad. See Stat. 13, Geo. III. ch. 63, §§ 40, 44; and Stat., 1 Will. IV. ch. 22; Starkie Ev. (10th Ed.) 275, 276.

In America this defect has long since been cured, "and, indeed, the authority given to our courts of common law to take the depositions of witnesses both at home and abroad has been carried to an extent far beyond what has been exercised by courts of equity." 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) § 1514, note 1.

6. McCotter v. Hooker, 8 N. Y. 497; Macaulay v. Shackell, 1 Bligh N. S. 119, 130.

7. Brown v. Southworth, 9 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 351; Macaulay v. Shackell, 1 Bligh N. S. 119.

Lord Eldon said in Macaulay v. Shackell, 1 Bligh, 119, that "both the court of chancery and of exchequer, as courts of equity, have always entertained these bills as belonging to one of their great sources of jurisdiction to grant relief against such accidents as are beyond the power of courts of law to aid."

8. Howard v. Folger, 15 Me. 447; Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83.

Where it is certain or probable that the personal attendance of a witness cannot be procured at a trial, an examination de bene esse is proper, and should be encouraged.[1]

Examinations of witnesses de bene esse may be had at any stage of the cause,[2] before answer, provided the necessity for taking testimony is satisfactorily shown by affidavit,[3] before an issue of fact joined [4] and while a demurrer is pending and undetermined;[5]

The early case of Phillips v. Carew, 1 P Wms. 117, seems to hold that a bill for the examination of witnesses de bene esse may be brought where the plaintiff's witnesses are aged and infirm, although no action has been commenced and is at the time pending, but merely in contemplation of an action. In the later case of Angell v. Angell, above cited, the court say respecting that decision that "the principle of that case, supposing it to be correctly reported, is not very satisfactory. Written depositions, on account of the infirmity above referred to, are never to be received, where, with reasonable diligence, viva voce testimony may be had, and the circumstances that the witnesses are aged and infirm should rather be a reason for the action being immediately brought, to give the better chance of their living till the trial, than a reason for permitting the action to be indefinitely delayed at the pleasure of plaintiff. Whenever such a case occurs again, the principle of Phillips v. Carew, 1 P. Wms. 117, will come to be reconsidered."

New York.—A practice sprang up in New York at an early date of taking testimony de bene esse in civil suits, which was afterwards read in evidence on proof of the death or absence of the witness. People v. Restell, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 289, 295; Mumford v. Church, 1 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 147; Sanford v. Russell, Anth. N. P. (N. Y.) 184; Jackson v. Kent, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 59; Packard v. Hill, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 489.

This practice has since been sanctioned by legislative enactment. 2 Rev. Stat. 391, art 1.

The New York statute governing the examination of witnesses de bene esse directs that whenever an action is pending in any court of law, being a court of record, shall have been commenced by the actual service of process, or where the defendant shall have appeared in the action, either party may have the testimony of any witness taken conditionally, to be used in the cause under the circumstances prescribed. See 3 Rev. Stat. (5th Ed.) 673, § 1.

In Criminal Cases.—But the present New York statute does not, nor did the former practice in that State, extend to criminal cases. See People v. Restell, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 289, 295.

The provisions of the Arkansas statute authorizing the taking of depositions of witnesses residing or about to move out of the State, extended so as to confer that privilege on defendants in criminal cases. Giboney v. Rogers, 32 Ark. 462.

Neither is there any authority at common law for taking depositions in criminal cases out of court, without the consent of the defendant. People v. Restell, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 289. See Ex parte Harkins, 6 Ala. 63.

But it seems that by the consent of the prisoner such testimony may be received in evidence against him, for he is bound by any explicit waiver of his constitutional privilege to be confronted with the witnesses. Wightman v. People, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 44.

1. Jackson v. Kent, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 59; Mumford v. Church, 1 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 147.

2. But an order for a commission to examine a foreign witness before issue joined will not be issued. Jackson v. Bankcraft, 3 John. (N. Y.) 259. Nor after the trial and judgment in the action, on the ground that the evidence, which is material, may be otherwise lost to the party in the event that the case should be reversed and a new trial ordered. McColl v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. Rep. 310.

3. Fort v. Ragusin, 2 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 146; Conner v. Mackey, 20 Tex. 747; Bagnold v. Green, 1 Dick. 2; s. c., Carey's Rep. 48; Byrne v. Byrne, 2 Moll. 440; Brown v. Greenly, 2 Dick. 504.

4. Packard v. Hill, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 489; Concklin v. Hart, 1 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 103; Odivene v. Hills, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 18.

5. Packard v. Hill, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 489. The court say in this case that "one important object of these examinations de bene esse is to enable the party to secure evidence at any time in the progress of the case, to be used on the trial if the witness shall happen then to be without the jurisdiction of the court, or unable to obey its process. The rule will be of little use if confined to any particular stage of the case. It is generally applied to or even before appearance, where the witness is ill, aged, or the only one.[1]

a. Witness Aged.—A court of equity will sustain a bill to examine de bene esse an aged witness.[2] And where an aged witness is examined on the trial of a cause, it is sometimes provided in granting a new trial that the judge's notes of such witness' evidence shall be read upon such new trial.[3]

(b) Witness Infirm or Ill.—If a witness is infirm or in ill-health, to an extent likely to endanger or destroy his life, or to prevent his attendance at the trial, his testimony may be taken at any age.[4] secure the testimony of transient or foreign witnesses, who are here accidentally, or come for the purpose of being examined, at the request of the party. The deposition may be taken before there is an issue of any kind."

1. Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 108. See also Convey v. Athill, 1 Dick. 355; Pritchard v. Gee, 5 Madd. 364.

Where the defendant has not yet appeared in the action, he will be entitled to a notice of the examination in order that he may have an opportunity to cross-examine the witness or witnesses. Tompkins v. Harrison, 6 Madd. 315; Loveden v. Milford, 4 Bro. C. C. 540; Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 261.

It seems that while the defendant may equally with the plaintiff examine witnesses de bene esse, yet until he has appeared and answered he is not entitled to a commission for that purpose. Sherward v. Sherward, 2 Ves. & B. 116; Williams v. Williams, 1 Dick. 92; Woodmar v. Warner, 2 Fowl. Ex. Pr. 131. Compare Brown v. Child, 3 Sim. 457.

2. Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 261; 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) § 1514.

A witness is not considered as being aged within the rule until he has attained the age of seventy years, when the commission issues, as a matter of course. Fitzhugh v. Lee, Ambl. 65; Prichard v. Gee, 5 Madd. 364; Shelley v. ——, 13 Ves. 56; Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 261.

But it seems that on the trial it will not be sufficient to admit the deposition as evidence to show simply the witness' extreme old age; his inability to attend the trial must be shown. Jackson v. Rice, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 180.

3. Shillitoe v. Claridge, 2 Chit. 426.

In the case of Wright v. Doe dem. Tatham, 1 Ad. & E. 19; s. c., 28 Eng. C. L. 191, a witness having died before the second trial of the action, his evidence given on the former trial was held admissible on the second, although there were other parties plaintiff, and some of the defendants in the former suit were not parties in the second. And in Doe v. Derby, 1 Ad. & E. 791; s. c., 28 Eng. C. L. 791, where the parties and the title were the same, although the lands sought to be recovered were different, the testimony of a witness on a former trial was received at a subsequent one. Yet the identity of title and of one of the parties is not sufficient, the other party not being the same or privy to him. Doe v. Derby, 1 Ad. & E. 791; s. c., 28 Eng. C. L. 791.

It seems that the testimony must be proven unless by agreement, by the judge's notes, or by a person present, who can prove what the witness said. Mayor of Doncaster v. Day, 3 Taunt. 262; Strutt v. Bovingdon. 5 Esp. 56; King v. Joliffe, 4 T. R. 290.

4. Phillips v. Carew, 1 P. Wms. 117; Fitzhugh v. Lee, 1 Ambl. 65; Shelley v. ——, 13 Ves. 56; Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 261; Bellamy v. Jones, 8 Ves. 31; Shirley v. Earl Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77; Palmer v. Aylesbury, 15 Ves. 176; Andrews v. Palmer, 1 Ves. & B. 21; Corbett v. Corbett, 1 Ves. & B. 335; Atkins v. Palmer, 5 Madd. 19; Drew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 108; Jepson v. Greenaway, 2 Fowl. Ex. Pr. 103.

English Practice.—Under the chancery practice in England, where the testimony of a material witness is likely to be lost by death or departure from the realm, a bill to perpetuate the testimony is granted to take the deposition of such witness. See Gresley Eq. Ev. 129; 1 Smith Ch. Pr. 765.

In 1842 the writ de bene esse was extended so as to enable any person, who, under the circumstances alleged by him to exist, would be entitled to certain legal remedies on the happening of a specified future event, though not before, to file a bill in chancery to perpetuate.

New York Practice.—See 2 Fay's Stats. div v., pp. 8–10.

Sickness in Family.—The deposition of a woman who had a sick child she could not leave admitted in Avery v. Woodruff, 1 Root (Conn.), 76.

(c) Witness the Only One.—Where a material witness is the only one[1] to the point, he may be examined de bene esse, although neither aged, infirm, or ill, nor going beyond the jurisdiction of the court.[2]

(d) Witness About to Leave Jurisdiction.—A commission will issue to examine a witness de bene esse who is material, and who is about to go beyond the jurisdiction of the court,[3] although only into another State or country, under the same general govern-

Pregnant Woman.—Deposition taken de bene esse of a woman in an advanced state of pregnancy, and who had probably been delivered about the time of the trial, held to be admissible in evidence in Barton v. Morphis, 4 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 240; Clarke v. Dibble, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 601. Yet under the English statute, providing for and regulating the examination of witnesses de bene esse, which is identical with that of New York, and similar to those of most of the other States, it has been doubted whether advanced pregnancy or imminent delivery be a cause for the examination of a witness de bene esse. Abraham v. Newton, 8 Bing. 274; s. c., 1 Moore & S. 384; 1 Dowl. Pr. Cas. 266. But it was there intimated that such a state of facts might be a sufficient cause, if the affidavit of a competent person were produced showing that the delivery would probably happen about the time of the trial.

1. Where a man was in possession of lands of his deceased wife, claiming as tenant by courtesy, and the evidence of his title rested exclusively in the knowledge of two witnesses, it was held that he was entitled to a bill perpetuating their testimony pending an action of ejectment brought by the wife's heirs, and that age and infirmity of the witnesses were not necessary. Hall v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 269.

2. May v. May, 28 Ala. 141; Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83, 92, 93; Shirley v. Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77, 78; Pearson v. Ward, 1 Cox, 177; s. c., 2 Dick. 648; 6 Madd. 315; Bridges v. Hatch, 1 Cox, 423; Hankin v. Middleditch, 2 Bro. Ch. 640; Cholmondeley v. Oxford, 4 Bro. C. C. 157.

It has been held that the rule does not extend to cases where there is more than one witness to the same fact, unless upon the ground of the age or infirmity of the witness; and where one of two surviving witnesses to a will was neither seventy nor in a state of dangerous illness, but was in prison charged with a capital felony, an application for a commission to examine him de bene esse was not granted. Anon., 19 Ves. 321.

But a bill for the examination of a single witness has been sustained where his evidence was of the utmost importance, and he was the only witness to the point, apparently upon the single ground that he was the only witness, because of the uncertainty of life, there being danger of losing all evidence of the matter before it could be given in a court of law. Pearson v. Ward, 2 Dick. 648; Shirley v. Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77; Bellamy v. Jones, 8 Ves. 32.

Upon a suggestion merely, there being no affidavit, that if certain persons should die, their death would be prejudicial to the plaintiff's title, a commission issued to examine witnesses de bene esse on the part of the defendant, although he had not answered. Bagnold v. Green, 1 Dick. 2; s. c., Corey's Rep. 48.

But it is held that a court of law will not grant a commission to examine a witness de bene esse on the ground that he is the only witness having knowledge of a fact material to the defence, it not being stated that he was sick or infirm; the practice of the English Chancery, in this particular, having never been adopted by the courts of law in this country. Carloss v. Colclough, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 462.

3. Byrne v. Byrne, 2 Moll 440; Shirley v. Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77; Palmer v. Aylesbury, 15 Ves. 176; Andrews v. Palmer, 1 Ves. & B. 21; Corbett v. Corbett, 1 Ves. & B. 335; Atkins v. Palmer, 5 Madd. 19; Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 108; Botts v. Verelst, 2 Dick. 454.

English Practice.—Under the English chancery practice, where the testimony of a material witness is likely to be lost by departure from the realm, a bill to perpetuate his testimony is granted to take his deposition. 1 Smith Ch. Pr. 765; Gresley Eq. Ev. 129; 1 Whart. Ev. sec. 181.

A commission will issue to take the deposition of an officer who is a material witness, and expects to be ordered away. Cardall v. Wilcox, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 266.

It has been held that under the New Jersey statute the deposition of a witness about to leave the State may be taken by a justice of the peace before whom a ment;[1] but not if it is in the power of the complainant to detain him until after the trial.[2]

A commission to examine witnesses de bene esse may be executed after the witness has left the State or jurisdiction.[3]

(e) Witness Resides Abroad.—A court of chancery will, upon a proper bill, grant a commission to examine material witnesses to the merits of the cause who reside or are abroad,[4] even though domiciled in the State.[5] Issuance of a commission to take testimony out of State is not of strict right,[6] and will be refused after trial and judgment.[7] Commissions to examine de bene esse wit-cause is pending. Burley v. Kitchell, 20 N. J. L. 305.

1. Botts v. Verelst, 2 Dick. 454.

In the United States, from one State to another. 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 308.

2. East India Co. v. Naish. Bunb. 320.

3. Boston v. Bradley, 4 Harr. (Del.) 524.

In Arkansas the provision of law authorizing the taking of depositions of a witness residing or about to remove out of the State extended so as to confer that privilege on defendant in criminal case. Giboney v. Rogers, 32 Ark. 462.

New York Practice.—It has been the practice in New York and elsewhere from an early period, when a witness was about to depart the State, and there was no probability of his returning so as to appear at the trial, to allow his testimony to be taken de bene esse upon application verified by affidavit and motion for that purpose, without previous notice of such motion. Rockwell v. Folsom, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 165. And this practice has ever received the sanction of the courts as tending to prevent unnecessary delay or the loss of evidence. Wait v. Whitney, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 69; Mumford v. Church, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 147, 150; Sandford v. Burrell, Anth. N. P. (N. Y.) 184.

This practice grew up without any statutory provision, and from analogy to the practice in English courts of examining witnesses, when going abroad, upon interrogatories provided the parties consented, and which has recently been incorporated into the statutes of that country. 1 Chit. Archb. 297; Grah. Pr. 584.

4. Brackett v. Dudley, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 209; Brockway v. Stanton, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 640; Matthews v. Dare, 20 Md. 248; Thorpe v. Macauley, 5 Madd. 218; Devis v. Turnbull, 6 Madd. 232; Cock v Donovan, 3 Ves. & B. 76; Angell v Angell, 1 Sim. & S., 83 93; Mendizabel v. Machado, 2 Sim. & S. 483; Mondalay v. Morton, 1 Bro. Ch. 469; Bowden v. Hodge, 2 Swanst. 258; Cheminaut v. De la Cour, 1 Madd. 208; Baskett v. Toopsey, 6 Madd. 261. See Block v. Hass, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 335; Bigelow v. Mallory, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 427; McCarty v. Edwards, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 236.

5. Pooler v. Maples, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 65.

This power is said to be inherent in courts of equity, independent of any power conferred by statute. Brown v. Southworth, 9 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 351. But courts of common law possess it only so far as given them by statute. M'Cotter v. Hooker, 8 N. Y. 497.

6. Ring v. Mott, 2 Sandf. 683.

An affidavit that some of the witnesses of the plaintiff reside out of the limits of the State, not sufficient to authorize a commission to take depositions de bene esse. Lesne v. Pomphrey, 4 Ala. 77.

It has been held that an order for a commission to take testimony out of the State will not be granted before issue joined in the cause. Jackson v. Bankcraft, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 259. And not at all on supplementary proceedings. Graham v. Colburne 6 Duer (N. Y.), 618; s. c., 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 52.

7. McColl v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. Rep. 310.

A commission to take testimony de bene esse will not be denied because the opposite party makes oath that he is not interested; that question will be determined on the trial of the cause. Graves v. Delaplaine, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 200.

Court will not grant a commission to examine foreign witnesses de bene esse, directing that their examination be oral, and not by interrogatories. It has ever been the uniform practice to annex interrogatories. Bank of Silver Creek v. Browning, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 272; Deshon v. Packwood, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 272, note. Compare Clayton v. Yarrington, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 273, note.

If the witness be found within the State where the commission was granted, his deposition may be taken. Cox v. Cox, 2 Port. (Ala.) 533.

nesses residing abroad, while grantable in civil actions only,[1] yet are not confined to cases purely ex contractu, or involving the rights of property, but are granted in cases of suits for torts, although such torts may be indictable.[2]

5. Who May Bring.—Like bills in perpetuam. bills de bene esse may be brought by persons having an interest in the subject-matter to which the evidence relates, whether they be in possession or out of possession,[3] in aid of the trial at law.[4]

6. What the Bill Must Show.—The bill must set forth all the material facts upon which the right to maintain it depends, whether it be the age or infirmity of witnesses, the fact that the witnesses are about to leave the country, or that there is but one witness to the fact[5] and that a suit is pending.[6]

7. Affidavit to Bill.—There should be an affidavit annexed to the bill showing the circumstances by which the evidence, intended to be perpetuated, is in danger of being lost by death, departure from the country, or otherwise.[7] Where the object is to

It has been held in Indiana that depositions de bene esse may be taken where the witness is out of the State, in an action pending in the mayor's court of a city. Reeves v. Allen, 42 Ind. 359.

It is said that in Michigan a probate court has power under Rev. Stat. 435, secs. 28, 30; 385, secs. 6, 7, to issue a commission to take the deposition of witnesses to a will, who reside out of the State. High, Appellant, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 515.

Under a law authorizing testimony of parties to an action to be taken, the testimony of one living out of the State may be taken by commission issuing by order of court. Huggins v. Caster, 7 Ala. 630.

It has been said by the Supreme Court of South Carolina that no witness residing within the State can be examined de bene esse by common law; and that there is no statute authorizing an examination of a witness residing within forty miles of the place of trial merely because he is president of a branch bank. English v. English, 2 McCord L. (S. Car.) 238.

1. See note 8, p. 286. CRIMINAL CASES.

At common law, a commission to take the deposition of a non-resident witness cannot issue at the instance of the defendant in a criminal case. Ex parte Harkins, 6 Ala. 63.

The provision of the laws in Arkansas authorizing taking the deposition of a foreign witness, have been extended to defendants in criminal trials. Giboney v. Rogers, 32 Ark. 462.

2. Macaulay v. Shackell, 1 Bligh N. S., 96, 126, 127, 129.

Thus it has been held that a commission would be granted to take the testimony of witnesses abroad, for the purpose of establishing a justification in a civil suit for libel, notwithstanding the fact that the justification involves a criminal charge against the plaintiff, and also that the bill may be the subject of indictment. Macaulay v. Shackell, 1 Bligh N. S., 96. 126, 127. 129.

3. It has been said that the broad distinction between bills de bene esse and bills in perpetuam is that "the latter are and can be brought by persons only who are in possession under their title, and who cannot sue at law, and thereby have an opportunity to examine their witnesses in such suit." 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 1513.

4. Cooper Eq. Pl. 57; 1 Mad. Ch. Pr. 153; Jeremy Eq. Jur. 277; 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 1513; Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed) sec. 307.

5. 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. 145; Story Eq. Pl. (8th Ed.) sec. 309.

6. Angell v. Angell. 1 Sim. & S. 83.

A bill for a commission to examine witnesses abroad in aid of a trial at law, where a present action might be brought. is held to be demurrable unless it averred that an action was pending. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 91. Compare Moodaley v. Morton, 2 Dick. 652; s. c., ——— ———, 1 Bro. P. C. 469; Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 91.

7. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83, 89; Phillips v. Carew, 1 P. Wms. 117; Andrews v. Palmer, 1 Ves. & B. 23; Shirley v. Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77; Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450.

It has been said that the principle on which it is required in these cases to an-examine witnesses de bene esse as well as to take depositions in perpetuam rei memoriam,[1] the affidavit should be positive as to the material facts and circumstances of the case,[2] but need not specify in detail the particular facts which it is sought to be proved by the witness.[3] It should also state the place of residence and description of witnesses to be examined,[4] as well as give their names where with reasonable diligence they can be ascertained.[5] The affidavit may be made before the clerk of the court where the cause is pending[6] by an agent,[7] or an attorney in fact, or any other person, cognizant of the facts, where no stay is desired,[8] without showing any excuse for its not being made by nex to the bill an affidavit of the circumstances which render the examination of witnesses proper in a court of equity seems to be the same as that on which the practice of annexing an affidavit of the loss or want of an instrument to a bill seeking to obtain in a court of equity the mere legal effect of the instrument is founded, namely that the bill has a tendency to change the jurisdiction of the subject-matter, from a court of law to a court of equity, which ought not to be permitted on the bare allegation of the plaintiff in the bill. Mitf. & Tyl. Pl. & Prin. Eq. 242, 243; Cooper Eq. Pl. 57.

Judge Story says (Equity Pl. 8th Ed. sec. 309) that this reason is "not quite satisfactory; because the aim of the bill is in no sort to change the forum in which the merits ot the cause are to be heard and tried, but merely to prevent the loss of the testimony at the trial. A better ground would seem to be, that the bill has a tendency to create delays, and may be used as an instrument unduly to retard the trial, and therefore an affidavit that the bill is well founded is required." See Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83, 92.

1. See Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & S. 83; Phillips v. Carew, 1 P. Wms. 117; Shirley v. Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77.

2. Infirm or Ill, etc., Witness. — As where the witness is seventy years old, or in a dangerous state of health, or about to leave the country. Ballamy v. Jones, 8 Ves. 31.

One Witness.—Where the bill is for the purpose of taking the testimony of a single witness who is the only one to a material fact, the affidavit annexed to the bill must state that the particular witness knows the fact, as well as the particular points to which his evidence is meant to apply. Pearson v. Ward, 1 Cox, 177; s. c., 2 Dick. 648. And that he is the only person who does know it; mere information or belief on the part of the party making the affidavit is not sufficient. Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 261. He must set forth grounds for his belief that the witness is the only one to the fact. Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. 261.

Where the application is made by the defendant, it may be expedient, although it is not required, to swear to merits. Baddeley v. Gilmore, 1 M. & W. 55; Westmoreland v. Huggins, 1 Dowl. (N. S.) 800.

Non-Residence of Witness.—An affidavit to show that a witness lives out of the State, to procure a commission to take his deposition, need not be taken on notice. Den v. Wood, 10 N. J. L. 62. The affidavit must show that the witness is material, and out of the jurisdiction of the court. Brackett v. Dudley, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 209; Franklin v. United Ins. Co., 2 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 285; Lansing v. Mickels, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248. But the affidavit has been said to be sufficient if it shows "to a common intent" that the witness is a non-resident. Boardman v. Ewing, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 293.

An affidavit of non-residence made five months before the commission issued is sufficient, because continued non-residence will be presumed until the contrary is shown. Pharr v. Bachelor, 3 Ala. 237.

3. Hynes v. McDermott, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 513, 520; s. c., 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 263.

4. O'Ferrell v. O'Ferrell, 2 Moll. 364.

5. Wright v. Jersup, 3 Duer (N. Y.), 642; Shaffer v. Wilcox, 2 Hall (N. Y.), 502.

It has been held to be sufficient if a part only of witnesses are named if the application appears to be in good faith. Beresford v. Easthope, 8 Dowl. P. C. 294; Dimond v. Vallance, 7 Dowl. P. C. 590.

6. Wolfe v. Palmer, 18 Ala. 441.

7. Johnson v. Lynch, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 199.

8. Demar v. Van Zandt, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 69.

the party himself.[1] The affidavit need not state that without such evidence the party cannot safely proceed to trial.[2]

8. Modes of Examination.—There are two methods of taking the testimony of witnesses examined de bene esse in most if not all of the States, to wit, (1) under order of the court, upon special application therefor; and (2) by summary proceedings under the statute.[3]

9. Defences.—The adverse party, by way of defence to the application, may show cause against such examination by proof of want of due notice or showing other irregularity,[4] by casting doubt upon or discrediting the good faith of the application,[5] by showing that the expense of the commission will be more than the amount involved,[6] or by showing that the witness is not about to depart from the State, or that he is not sick or infirm, or that the application for his examination is made collusively, to avoid his being examined on the trial; and upon any such cause being shown, the application will be dismissed. Or where it is made to appear that the application has been delayed until a very short time before the departure of the witness with a sinister intention to prevent

1. Murray v. Kirkpatrick, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 260; Eaton v. North, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 631; s. c., 3 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 234.

An order was made for a commission to issue to examine witnesses de bene esse, where the witness himself made affidavit that he was a mariner with his home at Havanna, that he was about to return home, that the complainant was out of the State, and that he was informed by the complainant's attorney that his evidence was material. Fort v. Ragussin, 2 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 146.

2. Brackett v. Dudley, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 209.

But if the party making the application wishes a stay of proceedings, he must make the usual affidavit of merits. Meech v. Calkins, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 534; Dreshan v. Hoyt, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 27.

New York Practice.—In a proceeding under the New York Act to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses, it is not necessary to state in the affidavit, on which the order for examination is founded, the probable inability of the witness sought to be examined to attend the trial. Jackson v. Perkins, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 308, 316. As to what affidavit shall contain, see N. Y. Code Civil Proc. secs. 872, 873.

3. 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 270.

Under Order of Court.—The ancient mode of examining witnesses de bene esse was by a commission under the order of the court. 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 270, 274. See Linau v. Henderson, 1 Bland, 283.

Form of Commission.—The form of the commission to examine witnesses de bene esse is about the same as that to examine witnesses in chief, except that the former specifies the particular witnesses to be examined, and does not authorize the examination of witnesses generally. 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 274.

Manner of Examination.—The manner of examination of witnesses de bene esse is the same as that of witnesses in chief before an examiner, or commissioner, or in a court of law. Ward v. Whitney, 8 N. Y. 442; Mallory v. Perkins, 9 Bosw. 572. See Brooks v. Schultz, 5 Rob. (N. Y.) 656; s. c., 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 124. And must be made upon notice to the opposite party, that he may have an opportunity to appear and cross-examine. Lovenden v. Milford, 4 Bro. C. C. 540; Heinde Pr. 313; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 275. See also, infra, 3. NOTICE.

Under Statute.—The examination of witnesses de bene esse by summary proceedings under statutory provisions is regulated in each case by the particular statute under which the examination is had.

4. Starbuck v. Hall, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 58; La Farge v. Luce, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 242.

5. See Vandervoost v. Columbia Ins. Co., 3 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 137; Rogers v. Rogers, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 514; Lloyd v. Key, 3 Dowl. P. C. 253; Adams v. Carfield, 28 L. J. (Exch.) 31.

6. Mitchell v. Montgomery, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 676.

the cross-examination of the witness, this would seem to be a sufficient cause for dismissing the application.[1]

10. Statute Must be Strictly Pursued.—Bills to examine witnesses de bene esse being, like bills in perpetuam, in derogation of the common law,[2] are to be strictly construed and minutely complied with.[3]

11. Notice.—In all cases of depositions to perpetuate testimony both in bills in perpetuam rei memoriam and bills to examine witnesses de bene esse, whether under statutory provisions or in the ordinary equity practice, all parties interested must have due or reasonable notice of the time and place of examination,[4] and will be compelled to appear and answer.[5]

(a) Service.—The rule as to the service of notice is not uniform throughout the States. In some cases it is held that the notice must be personally served,[6] while in others it is said that such

1. Pirie v. Iron, 8 Bing. 143; s. c., 1 Moore & S. 232; 1 Dowl. Pr. Cas. 252.

2. See STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS, p. 284.

3. Jackson v. Hobby, 2 John. (N. Y.) 361; Winooskie Turnpike Co. v. Ridley, 8 Vt. 404; Wallace v. Mease, 4 Yeates (Pa.), 520.

The power conferred by the commission cannot be delegated to another. Cappeau v. Baker, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 154. But the mere writing of the deposition may be done by a clerk, employed by and done under the direction of the commissioner. Keene v. Meade, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 1; MacDonald v. Garrison, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; s. c., 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 249.

4. Dearborn v. Dearborn, 10 N. H. 473; Welles v. Fish, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 74; Faunce v. Gray, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 243; Underwood v. Lacapere, 10 La. Ann. 766; Moses v. Gunn, 1 Root (Conn.), 307; Whiting v. Jewel, Kirby (Conn.), 1; Brooks v. Schultz, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 124; Wait v. Whiting, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 69; Middleton v. Taylor, 1 N. J. L. 445; Arnold v. Renshaw, 11 N. J. L. 317; Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

If depositions are taken ex parte, without notice, they will be suppressed. Loveden v. Milford, 4 Bro. C. C. 540.

The New York Statute authorizing the examination of witnesses de bene esse (2 R. S. 392), and the subsequent amendment thereto (2 R. S. 398, § 8), must, it has been held, be construed as requiring such notice to be given as will enable the party to be present at the examination either in person or by attorney. Elverson v. Vanderpoel, 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. Rep. 257.

Under the California Statute.—Upon an application for a commission to take depositions of foreign witnesses, the only notice required is a service upon the opposite party of the order of the court requiring the party to show cause on the day named in the commission. Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

In Massachusetts—In Faunce v. Gray, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 243, prior to the commencement of an action against an administrator, his deposition was taken in perpetuam, at the instance of the plaintiff, in relation to facts which came to his knowledge before he was appointed administrator; but notice was not given to him as a party interested, and the court held that the deposition was not admissible in evidence, as a deposition, in an action by the heir against such administrator, because such notice was not given.

Federal Practice.—It has been said that in taking depositions under the Federal Judiciary Act (R. S. § 866), notice is to be given by the magistrate and not by the party. Young v. Davidson, 5 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 515.

5. Ellice v. Roupell, 2 New Rep. 3, 150; s. c., 32 Beav. 299, 308, 318.

The complaint compels the appearance and answer of the defendant, and the suit is proceeded with in the usual way, by filing a replication and issuing a commission or subpœna for the examination of witnesses. 1 Smith Ch. Pr. 135; Welf. Eq. Pl. 147; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 143.

6. Carrington v. Stimson, 1 Curt. C. C. (U. S.) 437; McEwer v. Morgan, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 190.

Service of notice upon one partner, in an action against copartners, is a sufficient service. Cox v. Cox, 2 Port. (Ala.) 533.

service is not necessary.[1] And it has been held that service by leaving copy of notice at place of abode is not sufficient,[2] where the party swears that he did not receive it.[3]

(b) Must be Reasonable.—The notice should be reasonable; and what is reasonable notice will depend upon the circumstances a each particular case.[4]

(c) What Should Contain.—The notice must indicate the time and place of the examination, the name of magistrate or officer, and the parties to the action.[5]

1. Elverson v. Vanderpoel, 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. Rep. 257. This case was governed by New York statute regulating service of notice. See 2 Rev. Stat. 392, 398, § 8.

2. Carrington v. Stimson, 1 Curt. C. C. (U. S.) 437.

Manner of Service.—On the other hand, it has been held that service by leaving copy of notice at party's residence is sufficient. Kennedy v. Fairman, 1 Hayw. (N. C.) 404.

But proof that notice was left at the party's house, without stating that it was left with any person, it seems, is not sufficient evidence of service. Crozier v. Gano, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 257.

Service by reading notice is sufficient if no copy is demanded. Brewington v. Endersby, 4 Greene (Iowa), 263.

And even a verbal notice has been held to be good where the fact of notice was not denied. Milton v. Rowland, 11 Ala. 732.

Service of notice cannot be shown by parol evidence. Barnes v. Ball, 1 Mass. 73. And the oath of a party is not admissible to prove service of notice. Lockwood v. Adams, 10 Ohio, 397.

On Attorney.—The rule as to service of notice upon attorney of record of the party is conflicting. In some cases it is held that notice personally served upon such attorney is sufficient, even though he may have appeared without authority. Smith v. Bodwitch, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 137. Or has withdrawn from the case, and even though the party serving the notice was apprised of that fact before making the service. Herrin v. Libby, 36 Me. 350. And even where required by statute to be given to the party personally. Hunt v. Crane, 33 Miss. 669.

Other cases hold that notice served on the attorney of the party is irregular, and not sufficient service. See Middleton v. Taylor, 1 N. J. L. 445; Arnold v. Renshaw, 13 N. J. L. 317; Buddicum v. Kirk, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 293; Wheaton v. Love, 1 Cr. C. C. 429; Leipes v. Bickley, 1 Cr. C.C. (U. S.) 29. Where the party resides in the State. Williams v. Gilchrist, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 49. Though sufficient where he is a non-resident. Pettis v. Smith, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 194.

But it is said that notice directed to the party may be served upon his attorney. Barrel v. Limington, 4 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 70.

3. Hill v. Norvell, 3 McLean (U. S.), 583.

4. Atwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37; Ellis v. Jaszynsky, 5 Cal. 444.

One day's notice to take depositions in a place to a person residing two miles away, held to be reasonable in McGinley v. McLaughlin, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 302.

Notice to examine witness in the place where the notice was served at eight o'clock in the evening of same day on which the notice was served, where witness was going to leave the State the following morning, held good in Mumford v. Church, 1 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 147.

Five days' notice to take depositions eighty-three miles away held prima facie reasonable in Dean v. Tygert, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 172.

Any notice requiring exertion beyond usual mode of travelling is not reasonable. Shropshire v. Dickinson, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 20; Waters v. Harrison, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 87; Kincaid v. Kincaid, 1. J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 100.

In a commission to take depositions on omission to designate what notice shall be given, will not exclude the deposition, where it is made to appear that sufficient or reasonable notice was given. Parker v. Haggerty, 1 Ala. 632; Brahan v. Debrell, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 14; Lesne v. Pomphrey, 4 Ala. 77.

5. Kingsbury v. Smith, 13 N. H. 109.

A notice will not be sufficient if it omits the place where the depositions are to be taken. Hunter v. Fulcher, 5 Rand. (Va.) 126.

The notice should also contain the names of the witnesses whose depositions are to be taken. Robertson v. Campbell,

(d) Defective—Waiver.—Appearance, in person or by attorney, at the examination, without objection, is a waiver of all defects in or of want of notice, and all irregularities,[1] but does waive want of didimus.[2]

(e) Sufficiency—Indefiniteness.—The notice will be sufficient if it is in substance according to the form prescribed by the statute.[3]

12. Publication.—The publication of depositions taken in perpetuam is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the court, controlled by the special circumstances surrounding each case;[4] but, as a rule, publication will not be made while the witness is yet living,[5] or capable of attendance at court, and in support of an action.[6]

1 Overt. (Tenn.) 172; Minot v. Bridgewater, 15 Mass. 492; Barnes v. Ball, 1 Mass. 73. But need not state the residences of the witnesses. Hays v. Borden, 6 Ill. (1 Gilm.) 46.

Some cases also hold that the notice should state when the court, where the case is pending, is to be held. Eastman v. Coos Bank, 1 N. H. 23; Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Mathes, 5 N. H. 574.

1. Martin v. Brown, 8 Blackf (Md.) 443; Connersville v. Wadleigh, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 297; Nevan v. Roup, 8 Iowa, 207; Talbot v. Bradford, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 316; George v. Nichols, 32 Me. 179; Crooker v. Appleton, 25 Me. 131; Ragan v. Cargill, 24 Mass. 540; Goodfellow v. Landis, 36 Mo. 168; Taylor v. Ladew, 33 Mo. 205; Seymour v. Farrell, 51 Mo. 95; Jackson v. Perkins, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 308; Jackson v. Kent, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 59; Rushmore v. Hall, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 420; Kea v. Robinson, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 373; Shutte v. Thompson, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 151; Miller v. McDonald, 3 Wis. 673.

2. Seymour v. Farrell, 51 Mo. 95.

3. Dorrance v. Hutchinson, 22 Me. 357.

Actual notice is said to be sufficient notice under Michigan Rev. Stat. 1838, tit. 2, ch. 4; Pickard v. Polhemus, 3 Mich. 185.

Service of a copy of the order to show cause on day named in the commission, held to be a sufficient notice to take the depositions of foreign witnesses, under the California statute. Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

Notice to take depositions on a given day, and if not on that day, two weeks subsequent, held to be a legal notice in Moore v. Humphreys, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 54.

So is notice to take depositions on the fifth or sixth of a designated month. Kennedy v. Alexander, 1 Hayw. (N. C.) 25.

But a notice to take upon two successive days is irregular. Carmalt v. Post, 8 Watts (Pa.), 406.

And a notice to take depositions on fourth, fifth, and sixth days of a specified month, or on one or more of them, is indefinite and insufficient. Humphries v. McCraw, 5 Ark. 61; Caldwell v. McNicar, 9 Ark. 364; Reardon v. Farrington, 7 Ark. 364; Harris v. Hill, 7 Ark. 452.

A notice to take depositions on a particular day of each week for three successive months is not good. Bedell v. State Bank, 1 Dev. L. (N. C.) 483.

Notice to take depositions on Sunday is not good. Sloane v. Willford, 3 Ired. L. (N. C.) 307. But a notice to take depositions on the Fourth of July, that day not being a legal holiday, is good. Rogers v. Brooks, 30 Ark. 612.

4. Harris v. Cotterell, 3 Meriv. 678, 680.

To obtain an order to publish depositions, a notice of motion must be served, supported by an affidavit that they are necessary to be made use of in the complainant's behalf, or that the witnesses are dead, or so infirm that they cannot attend and give evidence at the trial without danger of life; or that they are, or will be at the time of the trial, out of the State. 1 Smith Ch. Br. 336; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. 144.

5. There are very few cases in which publication has been ordered during the lifetime of the witnesses. Barnsdall v. Lowe, 2 Russ. & Myl. 142. And as to some in which it has been ordered, doubts have been expressed. Barnsdall v. Lowe, 2 Russ. & Myl. 142.

The publication of depositions for the purpose of perfecting the title to an estate will not be allowed, even where the witnesses are dead. Teale v. Teale, 1 Sim. & S. 385.

6. Wequelin v. Wequelin, 2 Curt. C. C. (U. S.) 263; Morrison v. Arnold, 19

Rules.—The true rules of publication seem to be: First. In the examination of witnesses to a will per testes, none but subscribing witnesses being examined, and the question of the sanity or insanity of the testator being merely incidental, they stand upon distinct grounds, and publication is made as a matter of course.[1] Second. In the ordinary examination in perpetuam publication is not allowable until after the death of the witness, because of the dangers incident thereto, there being no limit respecting the points as to which the witnesses are examined.[2] Third. In examinations de bene esse the depositions will not be published, but by the consent of the parties, or on a strong case made to the court.[3]

13. Costs.—Where the devisee under a will exhibits a bill in chancery to perpetuate the testimony of the witnesses thereto, the heir is entitled to his costs, if he only cross-examines the witnesses,[4] but if he contests the will and uses the bill as a bill to perpetuate testimony on his part, he will not be entitled to his costs.[5] The costs of perpetuating the testimony of witnesses to a will have been allowed to a purchaser.[6]

The court will not impose upon a party applying for a commission to examine witnesses out of State the terms of payment of costs to his adversary.[7]

Ves. 670; Attorney-General v. Ray, 2 Hare, 518.

By the English practice the court will not allow a deposition taken under a bill in perpetuam to be published, except in support of a suit or action; and then only after the death of the witness, or in case of his being sick, or incapable of travelling, or being prevented by accident from attending to be examined. Morrison v. Arnold, 19 Ves. 669; Barnsdale v. Lowe, 2 Russ. & Myl. 142.

Depositions taken de bene esse are never used except for the purpose of supplying the want of an examination in chief, and where a witness who has been examined de bene esse testifies differently on an examination in chief in open court, the deposition cannot be introduced to show the contradiction. Cann v. Cann, 1 P. Wms. 567.

1. Harris v. Cotterell, 3 Meriv. 678–680.

2. Barnsdale v. Lowe, 2 Russ. & Myl. 142.

3. Harris v. Cotterell, 3 Meriv. 680; Gilb. For. Roman. 140.

If it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that the witness has died since the taking of his deposition, or is unable from any cause to attend the trial at law, the deposition will be ordered to be published. Webster v. Pawson, 2 Dick. 540; Price v. Bridgeman, 1 Dick. 144; Bradley v. Crackenthorp, 1 Dick. 182; Gason v. Wordsworth, 2 Ves. Sr. 336, 337; Dow v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & S. 108; Gilb. For. Roman. 140. But where the witnesses are living at the time of the trial, are within the jurisdiction of the court, and capable of attending the trial, they must be examined over in open court. Gilb. For. Roman. 140, 141; 2 Story Eq. Jur. (11th Ed.) sec. 1516, note 2.

When the deposition of one witness or any number of witnesses less than the whole number is to be published, the officers of the court will be directed not to publish the depositions of the other witnesses. 1 Smith Ch. Pr. 336; 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. (2d Ed.) 144.

Where depositions taken on a bill to perpetuate testimony are required to be used in a trial at law, not under the control of the court, the depositions are published and an officer of the chancery court attends and produces to the court of law the record of the whole proceedings, that the parties may make such use of them as they can. Attorney-General v. Ray, 2 Hare, 518

4. Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316; Bemey v. Eyre 3 Atk. 387.

5. Fouldes v. Midgley, 1 Ves. & B. 138; Vaughan v. Fitzgerald, 1 Sch. & Lefr. 316; Bemey v. Eyre, 3 Atk. 387.

6. Mackrell v. Hunt, 2 Madd. 34, 37, note; Acland v. Gaisford, 2 Madd. 28, 37, note.

7. Roumage v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 12 N.J. L. 95.

BILL TO REMOVE CLOUDS FROM TITLE. (See also BILL QUIA TIMET; CANCELLATION; EQUITY; INJUNCTION; RESCISSION.)

1. Definition.—A cloud upon title is a title or encumbrance apparently valid, but in fact invalid.[1]

2. When Maintainable.—Whenever a deed or other instrument exists which may be vexatiously or injuriously used against a party after the evidence to impeach or invalidate it is lost, or which may throw a cloud or suspicion over his title or interest, and he cannot immediately maintain or protect his right by any course of proceedings at law, a court of equity will afford relief by directing the instrument to be delivered up and cancelled, or by making any other decree which justice or the rights of parties may require.[2]

1. A party cannot maintain a suit to remove a cloud upon the title to land in which he has no interest, and upon the sole ground that he has warranted the title. Equity interferes to remove clouds upon titles because they embarrass the owner of the property clouded and tend to impede his free sale and disposition of it. Bissell v. Kellogg, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 617; Huntingdon v. Allen, 44 Miss. 654; Lyon v. Hunt, 11 Ala. 295; Anderson v. Hooks, 9 Ala. 704; Sanxay v. Hungar, 42 Ind. 44; Harford v. Chipman, 21 Conn. 488.

What is a Cloud.—A title which, if asserted by action and put in evidence, would compel the production of defendant's title as a defence, is a cloud which the latter can call upon equity to remove. Lick v. Ray, 43 Cal. 83.

2. Martin v. Graves, 5 Allen (Mass.), 661; Dull's Appeal, 113 Pa. St. 510.

Deed, Lease, etc.—(a) Non-joinder of Husband or Wife.—Where a husband during coverture abstains from managing or claiming in any way his wife's property, but constantly declares it to be hers, he is deemed to have waived his marital rights, and equity will interfere to remove a cloud from his widow's title growing out of an exchange during coverture of one tract of her land for another tract. Barclay v. Henderson, 44 Ala. 269.

Where a wife does not join in a conveyance of a homestead, such conveyance is absolutely void, so far as it abridges her homestead rights, and she may by her next friend file a bill to remove the cloud, though she has never parted with the possession or occupancy. Williams v. Williams, 7 Baxter (Tenn.), 116.

(b) Fraud.—Where judgment creditors who have redeemed land sold under a power in a mortgage asked that an action of ejectment brought against them by alienees of the mortgagor claiming under a prior deed, not recorded till three months after execution, be enjoined, and the deed cancelled as fraudulent, there is ground for equitable relief, notwithstanding the pendency of the action by which their respective titles could be ascertained. Lehman v. Shook, 69 Ala. 486.

A court of equity has jurisdiction to remove the cloud cast over complainant's title by decreeing that alleged fraudulent grants to defendants should be delivered up and cancelled, as well as to prevent a multiplicity of suits growing out of titles to lots held under said grants in a city. Dart v. Orme, 4 Ga. 376.

(c) Non-acceptance.—A and B being tenants in common of land, A made a deed of his undivided half to C, which was recorded, but which C refused to accept.

A and B afterwards executed releases to each other, and B conveyed a certain interest to defendants. Defendants afterwards obtained a deed from the heirs of C, but his agent was notified by one of the heirs that their ancestor never owned the property. Held, that the deeds to C and from C's heirs should be cancelled. Jennings v. Dixey, 36 N. J. Eq. 490.

(d) Forgery.—An occupant of one part of a house has a remedy in equity against one who with plaintiff's permission has entered another part, remains there, and claims title to the whole house under a deed alleged by plaintiff to be a forgery. Sullivan v. Finnegan, 101 Mass. 447. See Bunce v. Gallagher, 5 Blatch. (C. C.) U. S.) 481.

(e) Record—Delivery, etc.—A bill will lie to set up and establish an unrecorded deed which has been destroyed by grantor, notwithstanding there is a remedy at law, that not being fully adequate as long as the record title is in grantor. Allen v. Waldo, 47 Mich. 516.

A deed executed but never delivered constitutes a cloud. Brewton v. Smith, 28 Ga. 442; Eckman v. Eckman, 55 Pa. St. 269; Pratt v. Pond, 5 Allen (Mass.), 593.

A deed held in escrow, but accidentally placed upon record without being delivered, is a cloud upon title. Stanley v. Valentine, 79 Ill. 544.

(f) Conditions Unfilled.—Where a deed to a man and wife was made on condition that the wife should live with the husband; if not, then to the husband absolutely; and the wife having deserted the husband, who obtained a divorce,—it was held that the clause was a valid conditional limitation, and the deed was such a cloud upon his title as equity would cancel. Smith v. Smith, 23 Wis. 176.

A lease made and recorded by a purchaser during the pendency of a contract for sale of land, conditioned upon the payment of a draft upon a third party, the draft not being paid the contract to be void, and the draft not having been paid, is a cloud removable by bill. Skinner v. Baker, 79 Ill. 496.

Action.—Unless an action would be sustainable on a conveyance in the absence of proof to overthrow it, such conveyance cannot be said to be a cloud. Davidson v. Seegar, 15 Fla. 671.

Judgment.—Equity will set aside a regular conveyance made to the execution creditor after an execution sale on a satisfied judgment. Cowan v. Lapp, 74 Ala. 44.

A bill seeking to cancel a sheriff's deed as a cloud on the ground that the judgment under which the sale was made was rendered by a court not having jurisdiction, is not without equity. Graham v. Hall, 68 Ga. 354.

A judgment against one who has previously made a general assignment for creditors without preferences, recovered before an assignee in bankruptcy has procured the assignment to be set aside, is not a cloud on the title of the assignee under the general assignment. Belden v. Smith, 16 Bankr. Reg. 302.

Equity will retain jurisdiction to order cancellation of a judgment as a cloud upon title. Smith v. Hickman, 68 Ill. 314.

A judgment rendered against a defendant who has died previous to the commencement of the action, though void, is such a cloud upon the title to the real estate of decedent as may be set aside on motion of his heir at law having an interest therein. Blodget v. Blodget, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 19. See Foot v. Dillaye, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 521.

A plaintiff showing that he has a right in certain lands may maintain an action to remove, as a cloud upon his title, a judgment determining that defendant has a hostile right therein asserted in a lis pendens. Brown v. Goodwin, 75 N. Y. 409.

Where a party obtained judgment by scire facias on the foreclosure of a mortgage given to secure notes which had been paid by taking new notes and mortgage, and purchased the mortgaged premises, a portion of which he had previously released from the lien of his mortgage, the execution of a deed to him was enjoined, and the judgment set aside as a cloud upon the title of a subsequent purchaser. Tucker v. Conwell, 67 Ill. 553.

Act Establishing Interest.—Where an act in pais of itself, without concurring facts and circumstances, proved aliunde, does not establish any interest in or title to the premises, it is not such a cloud as equity will interfere with. Mulligan v. Baring, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 75.

Contracts for Sale, etc.—The recording of an agreement for the exclusive sale and option of purchase of land for sixty days upon certain conditions, without notification of acceptance or compliance with conditions, constitutes a cloud for which a bill will lie. Sea v. Morehouse, 79 Ill. 216.

An unrecorded contract for the exchange of lands is not a cloud upon the title. Howe v. Hutchison, 105 Ill. 501.

An agreement for the sale of land, not accepted in reasonable time, but afterwards accepted and recorded, is a cloud. Larmon v. Jordan, 56 Ill. 204.

A recorded executory contract for the sale of land by one claiming to act as agent for the owner, or even if executed by the owner, is not a cloud. Washburn v. Burnham, 63 N. Y. 132.

Where a bond has been executed to give a deed, and the agreement to sell had been rescinded, but the bond never returned, the owner is entitled to a decree quieting his title. Smith v. Campen, 40 Iowa, 411; Dahl v. Pross, 6 Minn. 89.

There being no allegation of fraud, accident, or mistake, a bill to set aside an agreement to convey as a cloud, will not lie. Meck's Appeal, 97 Pa. St. 313.

Levy.—A levy having been made on land the title to which is in a fraudulent grantee, a bill to clear the title is permissible. Harman v. May, 40 Ark. 146.

Under a void levy, as of one made thirty days after rendition of justice's judgment, a sale is a nullity, and will be set aside as a cloud in favor of one who has purchased under a valid levy under another judgment, which sale is void only for want of notice to debtor in possession, and this though such relief is not specifically prayed for. Shannon v. Erwin, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 337.

A title claimed under a sale and a deed in pursuance of a void levy will be relieved against. Stout v. Cook, 37 Ill. 283; Anderson v. Talbot, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 407.

Sale.—A sale made under power of sale in mortgage after payment of the debt, the purchaser being in possession, will be set aside and reconveyance decreed. Redmond v. Packenham, 66 Ill. 434.

The rule that the sale of land as the property of one from whom the owner in no way derives his title does not constitute a cloud, is applicable to the sale of a wife's separate estate under judicial process against the husband. Rea v. Longstreet, 54 Ala. 291.

A bill will lie to restrain in case of an actual or threatened sale to another. Guy v. Hermann, 5 Cal. 73; Burt v. Cassity, 12 Ala. 734; Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189; Norton v. Beaver, 5 Ohio, 178. Or a void decree for sale of real estate. Johnson v. Johnson, 39 Ill. 215.

It is discretionary with a court to enjoin a sheriff's sale because it will cast a cloud upon the title. Goldstein v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 301. See Key, etc., v. Munsell, 19 Iowa, 305; Bell v. Greenwood, 21 Ark. 249; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Groves v. Webber, 72 Ill. 606.

So where it is under a judgment against a former owner which never became a lien. Goodell v. Blumer, 41 Wis. 436.

A court of equity will enjoin a sheriff's sale under a mechanic's claim, in which the owner is not named, and who had no notice of the proceedings, as it may cast a cloud upon his title. Houston's Appeal, 6 W. N. C. (Pa.) 162.

Where a sheriff's sale is had of property, there being notice either actual or constructive of a bona-fide sale to another before the lien of the judgment, the owner can have the sheriff's sale set aside as a cloud upon his title. Phillips v. Pitts, 78 Ill. 72.

Where a sheriff's sale will not pass title to the purchaser, such sale will not be enjoined, on the ground that it might cast a cloud on a title. Drake v. Jones, 27 Mo. 428.

Under Wisconsin Statute.—Where land owned and possessed by plaintiff was levied on and sold to defendant by the sheriff under an execution against a third person, a certificate of sale delivered and duplicate filed, that defendant must be regarded as "setting up a claim" within the meaning of Wis. Rev. Stat. ch. 141, § 29.

Plaintiff cannot split up his case in a bill to quiet title, and if he omits to set forth all the grounds of his right or his adversary's want, he cannot bring another suit on the portion omitted. Starr v. Stark, 1 Sawyer, 270.

Patent.—An invalid patent for land may be set aside as a cloud. Danforth v. Morical, 84 Ill. 456.

Lunacy.—A vendee may have his title established when the vendor has been declared a lunatic, though after the passing of the title. Younger v. Skinner, 14 N. J. Eq. 389.

Lien.—A party having failed to answer to a petition enforcing a mechanic's lien and praying discovery of his interest, and is thereby defaulted, cannot complain because a lien was given on the premises generally, though a cloud on his title. Gould v. Garrison, 48 Ill. 258.

Devise.—A devise by a wife of her land in trust for another during her husband's life constitutes a cloud upon the title of the tenant by courtesy which equity will remove. Coit v. Grey, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 444.

Inadequacy of Price.—Gross inadequacy of price will justify a court in refusing to aid in removing clouds upon the title. Huntingdon v. Allen, 44 Miss. 654.

Mortgages. — The purchaser of the equity of redemption of real estate on which there are mortgage liens of different priorities if in possession under such purchase, may maintain an action to quiet his title against the junior mortgagee without alleging that he has paid the senior. Holton v. Commissioners of Lake Co., 55 Ind. 194.

A deed made without authority, or an unsatisfied mortgage, will be decreed a cloud and relief granted. Carter v. Taylor, 3 Head (Tenn.), 30; Clouston v. Shearer, 99 Mass. 209.

The mortgagee refused to execute a release of a mortgage debt paid before maturity unless other mortgages on other lands, but insufficient securities, should be paid. Held, that he could be compelled to execute such release in order to avoid the cloud on mortgagor's land. Brown v. Stewart, 56 Md. 421.

The assignee of a satisfied mortgage may be enjoined from foreclosing the mortgage in a suit to quiet title. Matheson v. Thompson, 20 Fla. 790.

The holder of a certificate of a mortgage sale, as a favor and for the purpose of permitting a redemption, accepted the amount due on it, and indorsed and delivered it to the owner of the equity of redemption, who had applied to him for leave to redeem after twelve months. Held, his so doing rendered the certificate functus officio, and it might be cancelled as a cloud. Frederick v. Eurig, 82 Ill. 363.

A mortgage made by a transferee of the franchises and property of a corporation, after the transfer has been set aside as having been made without authority, may be declared a cloud, the holders of bonds issued by the transferee and secured by the mortgage having notice of the want of authority. Knoxville v. Knoxville & Ohio R., 22 Fed. Rep. 758.

Where a vendor of land who has received payment by notes and is under bond to give a deed executes a mortgage to a third person, who has constructive notice before doing so, the purchaser can have the mortgage cancelled as a cloud. Doolittle v. Cook, 75 Ill. 354.

Where at a mortgage sale representations were made that nothing existed against the property by one who had at the time pending a petition to enforce a lien, and the mortgagor, the only party summoned, had been defaulted, the vendor can maintain a bill against the one so representing, to remove the cloud against his title. Hinchley v. Greany, 118 Mass. 595.

An outstanding mortgage, given without consideration and negotiated to one who had no knowledge of the facts, will be decreed to be cancelled as a cloud upon the title of a purchaser of the land at sheriff's sale. Clark v. Gibson, 10 W. N. C. (Pa.) 522.

A mortgage made by husband and wife of wife's property, which the husband without the wife's knowledge, after execution, altered so as to make another person mortgagee, and upon which he obtained loans, the transaction never having been ratified by the wife, and the defence being that the wife's title was derived through a deed from her husband in fraud of creditors, was set aside as a cloud. Smith v. Fellows, 41 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 37.

Attachment. — An attachment upon land sold before registration of the debtor's deed, with a decree pro confesso against the former holder of the legal title, under whose title the vendor claims, is such a cloud upon the title as will entitle the purchaser to rescission. Mullins v. Aiken, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 535.

An attachment on land which had been conveyed, but the deed for which had not been recorded, does not constitute a cloud on the grantee's title, the attachment being against the grantor. Wilson v. Kelly, 31 Hun (N. Y.), 75.

Claims.—A paper recorded with the register of deeds claiming that certain real estate is subject to a trust, and any title sought to be given would be disputed, is not a cloud. Nickerson v. Loud, 115 Mass. 94.

A claim by vendor of land for unpaid purchase-money is not a cloud upon the title of a judgment creditor of the purchaser who has obtained a decree that the purchaser holds the land as trustee for said judgment creditor. Bennett v. Hotchkiss, 17 Minn. 89.

Other Cases. — Where defendant is throwing suspicion on complainant's title by demanding rent of his tenants, and an action cannot be brought because claimant has not been dispossessed, such bill will lie. Polk v. Rose, 25 Mo. 153.

A court of equity will not intervene where such interference would be unnecessary, vexatious, or expensive, the instrument being void on its face or having been adjudged void. Hartford v. Chipman, 21 Conn. 488; Hotchkiss v. Elting, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 38; Butler v. Viele, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 166; Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31.

Where one is in possession of land against another who though as to him is dispossessed and disseised, but asserts an adverse title under a mortgage, the validity of which is disputed, a bill to remove the cloud may be instituted. Clouston v. Shearer, 99 Mass. 209.

Ejectment is the proper remedy for one

3. Extent of Danger.—The danger must be more than speculative.[1]

4. Jurisdiction.—Equity has jurisdiction of a bill to remove a cloud upon the plaintiff's title.[2] An action will lie to prevent a cloud being cast upon a title to real estate, as well as to remove one already created.[3] The question of title must be settled in a court of law where that of plaintiffs has long been claimed adversely by defendants.[4]

who claims title to lands by mesne conveyances from a former owner against one claiming title from a receiver appointed in supplementary proceedings against such owner. Bocker v. Lansing, 20 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 38.

Where a mortgagor released his equity of redemption to a mortgagee, and a purchaser from the latter brought a bill to prevent a cloud upon his title and to enjoin a sale of the supposed interest of the mortgagor upon an execution issued or a judgment rendered against him prior to the release, held, that the question whether the mortgagee had lost his security by taking a deed from the mortgagor in payment of the mortgage debt, and releasing the mortgage on record, was not within the proper scope of the bill. Walters v. Defenbaugh, 90 Ill. 241.

Where ejectment can be had equity will not aid. Odle v. Odle, 73 Mo. 289.

An adequate remedy in law bars a suit in equity. Greenwalt v. Duncan, 16 Fed. Repr. 35.

1. Sanders v. Village of Yonkers, 63 N. Y. 489.

A bill stating a pretended title in respondent, and asking relief on ground of an apprehended injury, cannot be maintained. Torrent v. Booming Co., 22 Mich. 354. See Cox v. Clift, 2 N. Y. 118; Farnham v. Campbell, 34 N. Y. 480.

Such relief will not be granted as a matter of course upon a state of facts showing an apprehended injury to title. An adequate remedy at law may be had where the only cloud on a title is the prior record of a deed made after petitioner's deed with notice, petitioner's deed not having been sooner recorded under an agreement with the grantor. Munson v. Munson, 28 Conn. 582.

When the bill discloses no more than an "unquiet and unfounded apprehension as to the validity" of complainant's title to lands of which he has possession, and "a false and clamorous assertion of a hostile title" by defendants, founded on supposed defects in a deed executed by their trustee to complainant's vendor, equity will not interfere. March v. England, 65 Ala. 275.

A purchaser of land who has paid part of the purchase-money, and given a mortgage for the residue, will not be relieved against the security given on the mere ground of a defect of title, where there is no allegation of fraud in the sale and he has not been evicted. He will be remitted to his remedy at law upon his covenants in his deed. As a general rule, unless the circumstances are such as to sustain an action for slander of title, the law regards the injury too speculative to warrant the interference of a court of equity, and the party affected must wait until the pretended title is asserted. Ryerson v. Willis, 81 N. Y. 277.

2. See Radcliffe v. Rowley, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 646; Low v. Staples. 2 Nev. 209; Standish v. Dow, 21 Iowa, 363; Walker v. Peay, 22 Ark. 103.

Setting up a trust, fraud, spoliation of deeds, imposition on a minor, and inability to bring a common-law action. Kelly's Appeal, 38 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 350.

This jurisdiction is independent of any relation of trust, or of fraud, accident, mistake, account, or other head of equitable jurisdiction. Dull's Appeal, 113 Pa. St. 510.

The jurisdiction of equity to quiet title is intended to reach persons out of possession, who cannot be compelled to defend their rights at law. Barron v. Robbins, 22 Mich. 42.

Jurisdiction does not extend to entertaining a bill which seeks to keep redemption open until a judgment can be had removing all clouds from the titles of the property held for redemption. Alexander v. Colcock, 58 Tenn. 282.

Jurisdiction extends to the cancellation of a deed which is a cloud upon title, though there is a remedy at law. Hall v. Fisher, 9 Barb. 17, 24; Almony v. Hicks, 3 Head (Tenn.), 39. See Lehman v. Shook, 69 Ala. 486; Allen v. Waldo, 47 Mich. 516.

3. Mann v. Utica, 44 How. (N. Y.) Prac. 334; McPike v. Pen, 51 Mo. 63; Petit v. Shepherd, 5 Paige, 493. See Scott v. Onderdonk, 14 N. Y. 9; Lounsbury v. Purdy, 18 N. Y. 515.

4 Cowman v. Colquhoun, 60 Mo. 127.

Where the main transaction has be-

5. Validity of Title.—There must be an apparently valid title to constitute a cloud. A deed, valid on its face, accompanied with a claim of title, under such circumstances that a court of equity can see that the deed is likely to work mischief to the real owner, is sufficient.[1]

6. Possession.—Complainant must have possession to maintain a bill to remove a cloud, unless the title is an equitable one, incapable of effectual assertion at law, or in some States unless the land is vacant.[2] come involved in the obscurities of time, so that there is no explanation why conflicting muniments of title from the same source are outstanding, each party will be left to make such use of his deed in a court of law as he can. To cancel as a cloud a deed that was on record forty years before the filing of the bill, it must appear that his is the better title in equity as well as in law. Jones v. Georgia R. Co., 62 Ga. 718.

1. Fonda v. Sage, 48 N. Y. 173; Scott v. Onderdonk, 14 N. Y. 9; Allen v. City, etc., 39 N. Y. 390; March v. City, etc., 59 N. Y. 280. See also Moore v. Cord, 14 Wis. 213; Dunklin Co. v. Clark, 51 Mo. 60: 14 Wis. 213; Gamble v. Loop, 14 Wis. 465.

An apparently valid but really invalid lease may constitute a cloud on title to land which a court may order removed. Townshend v. Williams, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 394.

The title alleged to constitute the cloud must be valid on its face. Where it requires extrinsic evidence to prove its validity equity will not interfere on the ground that the facts which are essential to sustain the pretended claim do not exist, but will leave the party in possession to his defence. Lehman v. Roberts, 86 N. Y. 232.

The title must be such that the defect only appears by extrinsic evidence. Crooke v. Andrews, 40 N. Y. 549.

A bill in equity will not be sustained to remove a cloud when the instrument constituting such cloud is void on its face. Briggs v. Johnson, 71 Me. 235.

A deed being void on its face, equity will not interfere to cancel as a cloud, because plaintiff is an infant in present need of money and the lot unproductive. Cohen v. Sharp, 44 Cal. 29. See Crooke v. Andrews, 40 N. Y. 547; Weller v. St. Paul, 5 Minn. 95; Herd v. James, 13 Wis. 641; Meloy v. Dougherty, 16 Wis. 269.

When complainant's title is based on judicial proceedings shown to be void for want of jurisdiction, a bill will not be sustained. Griswold v. Fuller, 33 Mich. 268.

While doubtful if equity extends its jurisdiction to the removal of an instrument void on its face, and therefore working no harm, the New Jersey act to quiet title confers jurisdiction and is applicable to a sale of land, ultra vires and void, but detracting from the market value of the land. Bogert v. City of Elizabeth, 27 N. J. Eq. 568.

If a trust be void under statute there is no ground for a claim by the grantor in the trust deed for the interposition of equity. Levy v. Hart, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 248.

A bill to remove a cloud and restrain a sale of land conveyed by deeds, whose description is not sufficiently comprehensive to cover the land referred to, cannot be maintained. St. Louis Bridge Co. v. Curtis, 103 Ill. 410.

The cancellation of a deed alleged to be void on its face as having an uncertain description of the land, will not be decreed as a cloud. Busbee v. Macy, 85 N. C. 329. Cf. Busbee v. Lewis, 85 N. C. 332.

Rule.—Where a defect in a claim to an interest in land can only be made to appear by extrinsic evidence, it presents a case for a court of equity. Sanxay v. Hunger, 42 Ind. 44; Longley v. City of Hudson, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 453; Marsh v. Brooklyn, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 413; 59 N. Y. 280; Douglass v. Nuzum, 16 Kan. 515; Daniel v. Stewart, 55 Ala. 278; Alden v. Trubee, 44 Conn. 455.

2. Thomas v. White, 2 Ohio St. 540; Bryan v. Winburn, 43 Ark. 28; Matthews v. Marks, 44 Ark. 436; Gage v. Schmidt, 104 Ill. 106; Kilgannon v. Jenkinson, 51 Mich. 240; Coolidge v. Forward, 11 Or. 118; Dyer v. Krackauer, 14 Mo. App. 39; O'Brien v. Creig, 10 Kan. 202; Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238; Bunce v. Gallagher, 5 Blatch. (C. C. U. S.) 48.

Plaintiff must be in possession when he brings his suit unless his title is an equitable one. He must proceed on the strength of his own title, and not the weakness of his adversary's. Lawrence v. Zimpleman, 37 Ark. 643. Also title of adversary must be good on its face, and require extrinsic testimony to establish its invalidity. Under the Minnesota statute authorizing an action to quiet claims, it must be alleged and proved either (1) that plaintiff is in possession, or (2) that the land was unoccupied. Conklin v. Hinds, 16 Minn. 457.

The remedy at law being inadequate, and other grounds of equitable jurisdiction being present, equity will take jurisdiction to remove a cloud on a title, notwithstanding the defendant is in possession. Sale v. McLean, 29 Ark. 612.

An equitable claimant of land who is not in possession cannot invoke the aid of a court to quiet his title and remove the cloud cast upon such title by other claimants. Herrington v. Williams, 31 Tex. 448. See Apperson v. Ford, 23 Ark. 746; Polk v. Pendleton, 31 Md. 118; Haythorn v. Margarew, 7 N. J. Eq. 324; Lake Bigler Road Co. v. Bedford, 3 Nev. 399; Almony v. Hicks, 3 Head (Tenn.), 39.

Where the title to an unused railroad track is in dispute, and neither party to the controversy is in actual physical possession, equity will not interfere in a suit to quiet title by appointing a receiver or by injunction, even where defendant has attempted to take forcible possession, until his right was established by law. St. Louis, Kansas City, etc., R. v. Dewers, 23 Fed. Rep. 519, 691.

A party in quiet, peaceable possession has such an interest, that though with a defective title he may maintain an action to quiet title against one who has a weaker title or none at all. Giltenan v. Lemert, 13 Kans. 476.

Where in an action to remove a cloud from title to land it is found that neither party has title, neither is entitled to judgment as against the other. Mere possession will not entitle to judgment. San Diego v. Allison, 46 Cal. 162.

In order to defeat plaintiff's title where plaintiff is in actual possession, in a bill to remove a cloud, defendant must show a paramount title in himself, not in a third party. Brenner v. Bigelow, 8 Kans. 496.

One in actual possession of land for three years may maintain an action to compel the determination of claims thereto, and evidence of possession is sufficient to compel defendant to show his title; but if he shows only possession under an unfounded claim of title, evidence of actual possession and occupation by defendant prior to the entry by plaintiff is a sufficient defence. Ford v. Belmont, 69 N. Y. 567.

Equity will not entertain a bill to quiet title against defendants in actual possession acquired by force, but will leave parties to their legal remedies. Gould v. Stemburg, 105 Ill. 488.

Under Oregon Code of Procedure it must appear that the party in possession has some legal or equitable interest in the property before bringing suit to quiet title. King v. Sawyer, 2 Sawyer (C. C. U. S.), 441.

In Alabama, possession is necessary. Land adversely held under color title must be recovered at law. Daniel v. Stewart, 55 Ala. 278.

Complainant cannot bring his bill unless in possession, and especially when there is a suit at law regarding possession. Page v. Montgomery, 46 Mich. 51.

Under the Oregon Code, a person to bring a suit must be in possession, and not an intruder or trespasser. Tichenor v. Knapp, 6 Oregon, 205. But one owning wild lands, which he holds by deed from one seized by deed, is in such possession as to enable him to bring a suit in equity to remove a cloud from the title under the Oregon Code, § 500. Thompson v. Woolf, 8.Or. 454.

One in possession and claiming title has sufficient estate to maintain proceedings to determine conflicting claims thereto. Schroeder v. Gurney, 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 413.

Under the New Jersey statute, certainty to a common intent in the pleading is all that is required. An allegation that complainant is owner in fee, and that he is in possession, sufficiently states that he is "in peaceable possession claiming to own the land." The claim which defendant is said to make need not be stated. Ludington v. Elizabeth, 32 N. J. Eq. 159.

Quiet occupation, under claim of title, entitles the occupant to an issue at law to try the validity of an adverse claim under the New Jersey "act to compel the determination of claims to real estate in certain cases, and to quiet the title to the same." Such occupation is peaceable possession within the meaning of the act, and the fact that the adverse claimant is a tenant in common does not qualify the possession or affect the right to an issue. Powell v. Mayo, 42 N. J. Eq. 178.

Under Wis. Rev. St., the plaintiff must be alleged to be in possession. Shaffer v. Whelpley, 37 Wis. 334.

Plaintiff must be in possession at time of commencing his action. Campbell v. Allen, 61 Mo. 581.

7. Plaintiff's Title.—A bill to remove a cloud from title must set forth the plaintiff's title[1] and show in some way that defendant is setting up a cloud on it.[2]

A bill to quiet title to land unoccupied and unimproved is demurrable in not showing that complainant is in possession. Gage v. Griffin, 103 Ill. 41.

Under the Minnesota statute to quiet title, the defeated party, not having been in possession of the premises in controversy, is not entitled to any relief on account of having paid taxes on such property. Dawson v. Gerard Life Ins. Co., 27 Minn. 411.

Proper Remedy.—A party not in possession cannot obtain the aid of a court of equity to supply a defect in his title, e.g., a lost deed. His proper remedy is ejectment. Burton v. Gleason, 56 Ill. 25; Clark v. Ins. Co., 52 Mo. 272.

Ejectment is the proper remedy where lands are improved and occupied by the adverse party. Gage v. Abbott, 99 Ill. 366; Oakley v. Hurlbut, 100 Ill. 204.

Sufficient Possession.—Merely securing and holding property as a homestead without inhabiting it, is not sufficient proof of actual possession. Byrne v. Hinds, 16 Minn. 521.

An allegation that plaintiff is in peaceable possession presumes that he is in the actual possession which need not be alleged. Cartwright v. McFadden, 24 Kan. 662; Douglass v. Hahn, 24 Kan. 766.

A statute enabling a person not in possession to sue to remove a cloud does not dispense with the necessity of showing that he has the legal title, and is entitled to possession. Emery v. Cochran, 82 Ill. 65; State v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 7 Neb. 357.

When Possession Unnecessary.—A person out of possession, whose land has been sold on execution, and where the infirmity of purchaser's title can only appear by extrinsic evidence, can maintain a bill to set aside the deed. Beeble v. Meade, 81 Mo. 297.

A person out of possession of realty may maintain an action in equity to quiet his title, and at the same time pray to recover possession. Lees v. Wetmore, 58 Iowa, 170. See Barrow v. Robbins, 22 Mo. 42; O'Brien v. Creig, 10 Kans. 202.

1. Parker v. Stevens, 59 N. H. 203.

2. Jenks v. Hathaway, 48 Mich. 536.

Where in the bill the alleged cloud seems supported by an equitable right in the defendant, the bill cannot be sustained. Torrent v. Booming Co., 22 Mich. 21.

The deed under which defendant claims and which plaintiff seeks to have set aside, need not be set out in the complaint. Stribling v. Brougher, 79 Ind. 328.

A complaint asking that a mortgage be satisfied of record, and to quiet title to real estate, need not set out a copy of the mortgage and notes secured thereby, or of a decree of partition mentioned therein. Heilman v. Schneck, 40 Ind. 93.

A bill alleging complainant to be the true and equitable owner of land by purchase must set forth the title of his vendor. If it shows that he once had the right to subject the land as his vendor's creditor, it must show that the right is still his. Harrill v. Robinson, 61 Miss. 153.

A complaint under the N. Y. Code, § 449. must state specially every fact necessary to enable the court to judge whether the plaintiff has a cause of action arising under the statute, and that the plaintiff has been in actual possession of the lands or tenements for three years, and that both parties claim an estate in fee for life or for a term not less than ten years. Austin v. Goodrich, 49 N. Y. 266.

Under the California statutes plaintiff can only obtain relief on the grounds alleged in his bill. If he alleges title in fee and possession in himself and an adverse claim, and his evidence fails as to his title and possession, he can have no relief, nor on such allegations can he have a decree of trust or a conveyance. Burton v. Le Roy, 5 Sawyer C. Ct. 510.

Under the New Jersey statute an allegation that every step of the proceeding under which the adverse title was claimed was without warrant of law, is not a sufficient allegation that they were taken under a void law. Bellows v. Wilson, 32 N. J. Eq. 481.

Where, because of an alleged breach of a condition subsequent contained in a conveyance of real estate, the heir of the deceased grantor seeks to recover possession of and quiet his title to such real estate, the complaint should allege that such grantor at the time of making such conveyance was seized in fee-simple of such real estate. The complaint in such action should also allege an entry upon or claim to the real estate made by the plaintiff prior to bringing the suit. Clark v. Holton, 52 Ind. 564.

Where complainant in a bill to remove

8. Defendant's Title.—Some color of title must be shown in defendant.[1]

9. By Whom Maintainable.—An innocent purchaser where the cloud is caused by a levy, a sale after condemnation under order by a circuit court, a purchase by the execution plaintiff, and a sheriff's deed;[2] a grantor of land in parcels to numerous parties with warranty, the cloud being a deed of the same land to a third a cloud from his title alleged every fact necessary to constitute seizin in the defendant except delivery, held that the presumption arose that defendant failed to acquire seizin through want of delivery of deed alone. Smith v. Dennett, 15 Minn. 81.

A complaint alleging that a conveyance of land with full covenants was made to plaintiff, who took possession; that defendant asserted title under a subsequent conveyance made under a sale by a State auditor on a mortgage executed to State treasurer by a prior owner to plaintiff's grantor; that though the mortgage had been recorded in the county before said grantor purchased the land, it had never been acknowledged or properly proved, and plaintiff had no notice—was held sufficient. Watkins v. Brunt, 53 Ind. 208.

A complaint to quiet title alleging that plaintiff held its title through "the Indianapolis Warm Air Co." is not bad, as such companies may sometimes hold land. Gabe v. Root, 93 Ind. 256.

An allegation that plaintiff as a corporation sole was seized in fee of land in which defendant claimed an interest, held to be sufficient to maintain an action to quiet title. Mora v. Le Roy, 58 Cal. 8.

Equity will not give relief to one having no title or a doubtful title. Ross v. Young, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 627; Huntingdon v. Allen, 44 Miss. 654; West v. Schnebley, 54 Ill. 523.

Statutory Requirement, Mississippi.—A bill under Miss. Code 1880. § 1833, to remove a cloud from title, need not set forth the complainant's claim, but the particular evidence of title sought to be cancelled should be described as known to him. On failure of such description the defendant cannot demur, but must plead his right to answer. Cook v. Friley, 61 Miss. 1.

Where Repayment of Purchase money, etc., Necessary.—A minor representing himself of age conveyed land, and subsequently after coming of age conveyed to another person. Held, that the latter could have a decree quieting his title without restoring the consideration paid by the former. Nettleton v. Morrison, 5 Dillon C. Ct. 503.

Offer should be made in bill seeking to divest a legal title obtained in good faith to reimburse defendant for money spent in improvements, etc. Cravens v. Moore, 61 Mo. 178.

Caveat emptor applies to a purchaser at a sale under an execution against a former owner, and repayment of the purchase-money need not be required of the owner seeking to have the cloud on his title removed. Nor is there need of a decree to convey. The removal of the deeds complained of is sufficient. Conwell v. Watkins, 71 Ill. 488.

What May be Included.—One who has a right to file a bill to quiet title may properly include parcels of land contracted to others and in their possession. Eaton v. Trowbridge, 38 Mich. 454. So also a bill to quiet title will lie even when an action of ejectment is pending against part of the land, if judgment for defendant therein would still leave the title in dispute.

1. A bill simply averring that defendant had conveyed away the lands without showing that he had a title to convey, is bad. Dunklin Co. v. Clark, 51 Mo. 60.

What is Sufficient.—The defendant's title need not be accurately described in Indiana. Marat v. Germania Bldg., etc., Assoc., 54 Ind. 37.

Complainant need not show that the defendant's claim is one which would be prima facie good at law; nor set out the ground upon which defendant asserts the validity of his title. Holbrook v. Winsor, 23 Mich. 394.

A complaint that defendant is making an unfounded claim of title to land, and allegation that plaintiff owns it in fee, shows sufficiently that defendant claims "adversely" to plaintiff. Gillett v. Carshaw, 50 Ind. 381.

A bill claiming that defendants have taken possession of land under a false and fictitious title, without stating such title, is bad. There is an adequate remedy at law. Speigle v. Meredith, 4 Biss. 120.

2. Anderson v. Talbot, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 407. See Stout v. Cook, 37 Ill. 283.

party;[1] a remainderman before the termination of the life estate;[2] a vendee where the vendor in possession claims the deed to be a mortgage;[3] one who has bought land from an executor having power under will to sell for heir's benefit, as against one who has purchased the land at a sale on an execution against the heir;[4] by a mortgagee;[5] by one getting title from Statute of Limitations to remove record title;[6] by a judgment creditor to enforce his judgment;[7] by a widow and heirs of a decedent upon whose estate no administration has been taken out and the homestead never set aside to them, to remove a cloud from said homestead.[8]

10. By Whom Not.—A judgment creditor, the lien of whose judgment has expired by statute, to remove a cloud from his debtor's land.[9] A grantee of an undivided third, the cloud being a claim by a third party to an undivided third of the same land.[10] A grantor cannot ask the grantee of part of his land who has set up an adverse title to the whole to surrender his title of that part.[11] One who has conveyed his interest cannot have his title thereto quieted on grounds existing prior to the conveyance.[12]

11. Defendants.—The necessity of making an infant a defendant will not prevent a decree setting aside an instrument as a cloud.[13] A claimant to title in land alleged to be a street cannot maintain an action to quiet the same against the street commissioner who is a mere agent of the city.[14]

1. Ely v. Wilcox, 26 Wis. 91; Chamblin v. Schlichter, 12 Minn. 276.

2. Aiken v. Suttle, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 103.

3. Unless he has the legal title and no intervention of equity renders the remedy at law incomplete. Hays v. Norton, 48 Ill. 100; Rich v. Doane, 35 Vt. 124.

4. The sheriff is a necessary defendant in order to prevent the execution of his deed. Haddon v. Hemingway, 39 Mich. 615.

5. Polk v. Reynolds, 31 Md. 106; Wofford v. Board of Police, etc., 44 Miss. 579.

6. Marston v. Rowe, 39 Ala. 722; Arrington v. Liscomb, 34 Cal. 365; Moody v. Holcomb, 26 Tex. 714.

7. Stowell v. Haslett, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 380.

8. Sassaman v. Powell, 21 Tex. 664.

9. Partee v. Matthews, 53 Miss. 141.

10. Hartmann v. Reed, 50 Cal. 485.

11. Dalton v. Hamilton, 50 Cal. 422.

12. Page Co. v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 40 Iowa, 520.

13. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Holloday, 13 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 16.

14. Leet v. Rider, 48 Cal. 623.

A party in possession of land claiming a fee-simple estate cannot maintain an action under section 557 of the Ohio Code which makes possession alone instead of legal title and possession a basis for such proceeding to quiet his title against persons claiming a remainder therein contingent upon the death of plaintiff without issue. There being no adverse present interest, the essential elements of a bill quia timet are wanting, for litigation would be impracticable. Collins v. Collins, 19 Ohio St. 468.

Who May be Intervened.—Where land is sold under an execution or a judgment whose lien has been lost, and a deed of trust executed by defendant which is foreclosed and the title passes to a bona-fide purchaser, the defendant in the execution and the person secured by the trust deed are not indispensable parties to a bill by the purchaser under the deed of trust to set aside the sale on execution as a cloud on his title. St. Joseph Manuf. Co. v. Daggett, 84 Ill. 556.

In an action to quiet title to distinct lots of land mortgagees of the land may properly ask to be made parties, and by cross-petition may seek a decree of foreclosure and the grantee of a purchaser at a subsequent tax sale alleged to be fraudulent may also be joined, and the validity of the tax sale determined therein. Switz v. Black, 45 Iowa, 597.

A sole legatee of her husband who has conveyed all his interest in lands which had previously been sold under a trust deed cannot intervene in an action by

12. Executors—Administrators.—No action for the purpose of removing a cloud from the real estate of a decedent can be brought by an executor or administrator, before a license to sell has been obtained from the probate court.[1]

A sale of land by an administrator without an order of a probate court, or under a void order, has been held not a cloud, while an unauthorized administration has been decided to be one.[2]

13. Cross-bill.—Defendant in a suit to remove a cloud has a right to file a cross-bill, and if found to have a superior title, a decree in his favor.[3]

14. Answer.—An answer showing a plausible title in defendant may cure a deficiency in complaint in not showing such color of title in defendant as would throw a cloud.[4]

15. Statutory Abolition.—Unless there has been a statutory abolition of the equitable remedy to remove a cloud, equity has jurisdiction, though there is also a legal remedy.[5]

16. Procedure.—The jurisdiction of courts of equity to remove the purchaser to quiet his title, and ask that the sale be set aside. Ingler v. Jones, 43 Iowa, 286.

1. Paine v. First Division of St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 14 Minn. 65; Gridley v. Watson, 55 Ill. 186; Shoemaker v. Lockridge, 53 Ill. 503. But see Laverty v. Sexton, 41 Iowa, 435, where it was held that executors having control and possession of real estate may maintain an action to quiet the title thereto.

Sufficient Title.—An order of a probate court directing a sale of land upon petition of administrator of deceased owner, for the payment of debts and distribution, the administrator's deed, the acquiescence and ratification of the heirs, and occupancy by complainant and his grantor undisturbed for ten years, show sufficient title to maintain the suit, and a citation to parties interested is presumed. Wilson v. Matheson, 17 Fla. 630.

A mere right to sell land for purposes of administration or distribution does not give sufficient title whereon to base a bill. Robinson v. Joplin, 54 Ala. 70.

2. A sale of land by an administrator without an order of a probate court or under an order void for want of jurisdiction, is not a cloud which equity will interfere to remove. Florence v. Paschal, 50 Ala. 28.

An unauthorized administration of an estate by the widow and another held a cloud on the title of the heirs. Damouth v. Klock, 29 Mich. 289.

3. Greenwalt v. Duncan, 16 Fed. Rep. 35, 612.

Upon a bill by vendee in possession of land under agreement to purchase, seeking to set aside the contract of sale as a cloud upon his title, the defendant vendor cannot, without cross-bill, have a decree for specific performance of the contract. Sandford v. Cloud, 17 Fla. 557.

4. Davis v. Hare, 32 Ark. 386.

Sufficiency of Answer.—An answer setting out that the deed under which plaintiff claims is merely a deed made to plaintiff, a tenant in common, for purposes of sale, and that grantor subsequently conveyed to defendant an undivided three fifths of the premises, contains a defence sufficient to prevent plaintiff from obtaining judgment on the pleadings. Garvey v. Willis, 50 Cal. 619.

Provided defendant has not denied making the claim in his answer, though he does not affirmatively set up a title, he is entitled to have the question of possession tried. Babe v. Phelps, 65 Mo. 27.

An answer disclaiming all adverse interest, estops defendant from denying the title, and the court should not enter upon the trial. Jordan v. Stevens, 55 Mo. 361.

An answer setting up title in a defendant, and praying award of the possession of the premises, does not contain such a counter-claim as prevents plaintiff from dismissing the action. Moyle v. Porter, 51 Cal. 639.

5. Harrington v. Utterback, 57 Mo. 519.

The provision of Miss. Code 1871, § 975, providing for the removal of a cloud upon titles, only enlarged the jurisdiction of the chancery court in the matter of bills quia timet. Carlisle v. Tindall, 49 Miss. 229.

a cloud from title is of common-law origin, independent of State statutes, but these may regulate the mode of proceeding and form of decree.[1]

17. Taxes, etc.—Equity will remove a cloud from a title occasioned by a void tax deed or certificate or other proceeding where it is apparently valid and endangers the owner's title,[2] and in some States where either it or the tax is illegal.[3]

1. Lamb v. Farrell, 21 Fed. Rep. 5.

Under 2 Ind. Rev. St. 1876, p. 254, § 612, the same rules apply to actions to quiet titles as to actions to recover possession of real estate. Green v. Glynn, 71 Ind. 336.

Pleadings and proceedings under the Iowa statute must be according to equity pleading and procedure. Balmear v. Otis, 4 Dill. 558.

Under the New Jersey act to quiet title where a claim is made to a lien on lands under an execution, equity can be invoked without waiting till after the land is sold and the deed delivered. Holmes v. Chester, 26 N. J. Eq. 79.

2. A lien must be apparently valid and endanger the owner's title to constitute a cloud. If a tax be unconstitutional, its invalidity will always appear. Townsend v. New York, 77 N. Y. 542. See also Crevier v. Mayor, etc., 12 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 340; Newell v. Wheeler, 48 N. Y. 486; Lee v. Ruggles, 62 Ill. 427; Hamilton v. Fond du Lac, 25 Wis. 490; Taylor v. Rountree, 28 Wis. 391; Loud v. Charlestown, 99 Mass. 208; Hunnewell v. Charlestown, 106 Mass. 350.

Equity will interfere where an illegal assessment for taxes has been made, a pretended sale had, a certificate given, and the comptroller threatens to give a deed. N. Y., Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Worcester, 65 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 484.

A bill will lie to remove a cloud occasioned by a judgment in ejectment founded upon a void tax deed. The facts showing the validity as well as the invalidity of the instrument stated to be a cloud should be set out. Hibernia S. & L. S. v. Ordway, 38 Cal. 679.

Equity will relieve a party in possession, claiming to be owner, from a claim arising from a collector's deed or a sale for taxes, which have in fact been paid before the sale. Gage v. Rohrbach, 56 Ill. 262; Gage v. Billings, 56 Ill. 268; Gage v. Chapman, 56 Ill. 311.

Under Wis. Laws 1861, ch. 240, a mortgagee of land, though not in possession, may maintain an action to prevent a cloud upon the title by restraining the issue of a tax deed thereof upon an illegal, void, or cancelled tax certificate; and this right continues after a judgment foreclosing his mortgage, and prior to a sale. Horn v Garry, 49 Wis. 464.

A treasurer's deed, valid on its face but shown by parol evidence to have been made under an invalid sale, was decreed to be cancelled as a cloud, though no adverse title had been asserted by the grantee, otherwise than by his answer in the case. Dull's Appeal, 113 Pa. St. 510.

Where a municipality has attempted to sell land for taxes after the expiration of the three years during which a lien exists, and within which time alone a sale may be lawfully made, equity will entertain a bill to quiet title. Field v. West Orange, 37 N. J. Eq. 434.

Where Held not Clouds.—A void tax deed not declared by statute prima-facie evidence of the regularity of the assessment and sale, is not such a cloud as equity would interfere to remove. Minturn v. Smith, 3 Sawyer, 142; Crane v. Randolph, 30 Ark. 579; Curtis v. East Saginaw, 35 Mich. 508.

As two years must pass after a tax sale before a deed can be executed and a six months' notice to redeem must be given, no cloud exists one month after the sale sufficient to justify an action. Clark v. Davenport, 30 Hun (N.Y.), 161.

An assignment of a State interest acquired at a tax sale held under a tax judgment by a court without jurisdiction is not a cloud, the assignment not being even prima-facie evidence of the regularity of antecedent proceedings. Gilman v. Van Brunt, 29 Minn. 271.

A tax deed does not necessarily constitute a cloud unless the statute authorizing the sale and conveyance has been strictly complied with. Eastman v. Thayer, 60 N. H. 408.

Courts of chancery will not take jurisdiction to try the validity of tax titles on the ground that they are a cloud. Springer v. Rosette, 47 Ill. 223.

3. Scofield v. Lansing, 17 Mich. 437; McPike v. Pen, 51 Mo. 63.

An illegal tax deed is a cloud upon the title of the owner of land in possession. Lee v. Ruggles, 62 Ill. 427.

A certificate issued by the State comptroller upon sale of land for taxes ille-

(a) Tender of Taxes Paid, Costs, etc.—As a rule, tax deeds or other instruments or proceedings in their nature will not be removed as a cloud unless there is a tender of the amount expended by defendant in payment of taxes, costs, or charges.[1]

gally laid does not constitute a cloud. Clark v. Davenport, 95 N.Y. 477.

Sufficiency of Title.—A minor who one year after he is twenty-one redeems land from a tax sale, for which deeds have been executed and recorded, is entitled to have such deeds cancelled, though he had only performed such slight acts of ownership as selling grass cut thereon. Taylor v. Rountree, 28 Wis. 391.

Where land conveyed by tax deed remains unoccupied until after the lapse of five years from the recording of the deed, a holder of the title under it may maintain an action to quiet the title. Lewis v. Soule, 52 Iowa, 11.

In an action to quiet the title to lands purchased at a delinquent tax sale, defendant filed a counter-claim alleging that he was the owner and in possession of the lands, and that plaintiff by virtue of the pretended deed or by some other writing, the character and nature of which was unknown, claimed an unfounded title and one which was a cloud upon defendant's, and asked to have his title quieted against plaintiff's. Held sufficient on demurrer under 2 Ind. Rev. St. 1876, § 611; Cooper v. Jackson, 71 Ind. 245.

Nor does a complaint averring title merely under a tax sale and deed, without further describing the proceedings under which the sale was made, show title upon which a decree can be based. Keepfer v. Force, 86 Ind. 81.

No prior tax deed where all tax deeds recite the date of levy, no matter when executed or recorded, stand in the way of title acquired by subsequent levy. Truesdale v. Rhodes, 26 Wis. 215.

Other Cases.—One cannot have an action to quiet title against one claiming no interest but that of purchaser at a tax sale. Porter v. Mitchell, 82 Ind. 214.

A trustee to whom land has been conveyed in trust for the payment of debts may, in order to remove a cloud upon the title of such land, file a bill in equity to set aside and have declared void a tax deed made under the provisions of the Va. Code 1849, ch. 37. Burlew v. Quarrier, 16 W. Va. 108.

A levy having been made on personal property, it is presumed satisfied, and a bill will not lie to restrain further proceedings to enforce a tax upon lands, as a bill to remove a cloud. Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68.

1. A bill will not lie where the invalidity of a tax title is involved without tender or offer to pay the tax interest and charges, if such tender is required by Me. St. 1874, ch. 234, when the deed is void on its face. Briggs v. Johnson, 71 Me. 225.

All taxes justly chargeable must be tendered before an action can be maintained to have a tax deed declared void as a cloud, on account of irregularities in the assessment. Boeck v. Merriam, 10 Neb. 199.

A lot-owner who has not offered to pay the taxes legally assessed cannot, after a legal levy and sale, maintain an action to quiet title against the holder of the tax-sale certificate. Knox v. Dunn, 22 Kan. 683.

A grantee from the real owner of land under an act of Congress cannot have his title quieted until he has tendered the amount of taxes paid by one who supposed himself an owner under another act. American Emigrant Co. v. Iowa R. Land Co., 52 Iowa, 323.

A decree quieting the title to one holding a patent title to land against the owner of a tax title will not be granted without payment of taxes paid by latter on the land. Crumb v. Davis, 54 Iowa, 25.

Where a party in possession brings a bill to cancel an invalid tax title and certificate of purchase, the court will require him to pay the purchase-money at the tax sale, and taxes subsequently paid, with interest, as condition to granting the relief sought; and the court should not require the holder of the tax title to release his title to complainant. Barnett v. Cline, 60 Ill. 205.

Unless the statute of limitations has run, one who tenders enough to cover all legal taxes and costs may obtain a decree quieting his title to land which has been sold for taxes part of which are illegal. Herzog v. Gregg, 23 Kan. 726.

Claimants having neglected to pay taxes, and a sale having been had and deed made, can only have relief as from a cloud by payment of taxes paid by party claiming under tax sale to him. Reed v. Tyler, 56 Ill. 288.

Before bringing action against a party claiming under a tax deed, the plaintiff is not bound to tender the amount of taxes and costs paid by defendant. Courtwright v. McFadden, 24 Kan. 662.

(b) Remedy.—The remedy may be taken away by statute. The owner is protected by the constitution only when the pretended lien is sought to be enforced by the taking of his property.[1]

(c) Evidence.—The burden of proof is on complainant, and he must show invalidity of tax deed which he complains of as a cloud.[2]

18. Assessments.—An assessment, a sale thereunder, or a certificate thereof, really invalid but apparently regular, so that proof aliunde must be made to obtain relief, may be set aside as a cloud.[3]

19. Evidence.—Plaintiff must establish his title,[4] and if a

1. Lennon v. Mayor, etc., 55 N. Y. 361; Astor v. Mayor, etc., 7 Jones & Sp. (N. Y.) 120; 62 N. Y. 580; Rae v. Mayor, etc., 7 Jones & Sp. (N. Y.) 192.

2 The only evidence being the tax deed under which plaintiff claims title, judgment cannot be recovered by him. Douglass v. Bishop, 24 Kan. 749.

Plaintiff is not bound to show that the recitals in a tax deed offered in evidence, under which he alleges defendant to make his adverse claim, are untrue before he can recover. Douglass v. Huhn, 24 Kan. 766.

Decree.—The proper decree against the holder of a void tax title in the absence of a contract, trust, or some equitable ground for requiring a conveyance, is to perpetually enjoin the assertion of the same. Reed v. Reber, 62 Ill. 241.

3. Clark v. Dunkirk, 19 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 181; S. P. Lewis v. Buffalo, 1 Buff. (N. Y.) Superior Ct. 80; Carroll v. Brown, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 79. See Kock v. Hubbard, 85 Ill. 533.

Either the present owner of land in possession or a grantor with warranty and full covenants may have an assessment, the invalidity of which is not a matter of record, set aside as a cloud. Pier v. Fond du Lac Co., 53 Wis. 421.

A certificate of sale on a void assessment may be cancelled, the defect not appearing on the face of the proceedings. Newell v. Wheeler, 48 N. Y. 486.

A sale of land under a void assessment is a cloud which equity will relieve. Chaffee v. Detroit, 53 Mich. 573.

A sale of land under an assessment for municipal purposes, apparently valid, though as a matter of fact void, by reason of an omission not appearing of record, will be adjudged void as a cloud. Rumsey v. Buffalo, 97 N. Y. 114.

Sales of lands under municipal assessments based on an unconstitutional statute, and sales for taxes to the city for a term of years exceeding that limited by the charter, are clouds on title. Ludington v. Elizabeth, 34 N. J. Eq. 357.

An assessment roll and tax certificate void for uncertainty of description do not create a cloud. Shepardson v. Milwaukee Co., 28 Wis. 593.

An assessment laid under an unconstitutional act is void on its face, and does not constitute a cloud. Wells v. Buffalo, 80 N. Y. 253.

Judicial intervention to remove the lien of an assessment or set aside an assessment sale as a cloud on title is not authorized where the record or conveyance is void on its face, or where the defects relied on to render it valid would necessarily be exposed by the proof required from one claiming under it, in proceedings to establish his claim. Guest v. Brooklyn, 69 N. Y. 507.

A bill to remove a cloud of an assessment and sale illegal because under an unconstitutional law, will not lie where by law a reassessment may be had. Newark v. Schut, 34 N. J. Eq. 262.

Jurisdiction.—The New Jersey statute compelling determination of claims to real estate and quieting title thereto does not warrant the filing of a bill to contest the legality of an assessment for municipal improvements on the ground of its being an incumbrance on land. Jersey City v. Lembeck, 31 N. J. Eq. 255.

Where the owner of land seeks to have a sale made on a municipal assessment where the lien has expired by lapse of the time within which the assessment should have been enforced, adjudged void, equity cannot compel the payment of the assessment, nor does the statute providing that assessments shall not be set aside for irregularities affect the case. Field v. West Orange, 39 N. J. Eq. 60.

Defect.—An averment that an assessor did not make any valid assessment does not point out a specific defect, nor is averment that he had no authority one of fact, or give any information of real ground of complaint. Gamble v. East Saginaw, 43 Mich. 369.

4. The plaintiff, in an issue at law under a bill to quiet title, must establish his deed constitutes the cloud on it, he must show clearly its hostility.[1]

20. Relief.—The relief depends upon the circumstances and rests generally in the discretion of the court.

It is given on the quia timet principle, and includes the cancellation of deeds and other instruments constituting clouds, as well as injunction, spoken of above. (See sec. 4.)[2] title, and if the issue allows him two, his selection of one is binding. Powell v. Mayo, 27 N. J. Eq. 440.

On bill to set aside a contract of sale and conveyance of land as a cloud on title, on the ground that the contract and deed are forgeries, or made by some one personating the complainant and assuming his name, the complainant must show title in himself when that fact is put in issue. The admission that a party of the same name, under whom defendant claims, was owner, is not an admission of complainant's ownership. Wing v. Sherrer, 79 Ill. 200.

1. Proofs must show clearly the hostility of a deed sought to be set aside as a cloud to the title. Hartman v. Reed, 50 Cal. 485

What is Admissible.—Only record evidence will be allowed in aid of a lien claim alleged to be a cloud. Raymond v. Post, 25 N. J. Eq. 447.

In an action by a fraudulent grantee to quiet the title against a subsequent purchaser for value, evidence of the fraudulent character of the prior conveyance is admissible, as is also the contract of purchase between the grantor and the subsequent purchaser. Hurley v. Osler, 44 Iowa, 642.

Where the answer does not deny allegations of petition, it is error to admit evidence of any other than the title pleaded. Where there is such denial, any legal evidence, such as plaintiff's voluntary deed, sheriff's or tax deed, tending to show that plaintiff is not owner as alleged, whether specifically set out in answer or not, is admissible. Morrill v. Douglass, 14 Kan. 293.

Variance.—Where both parties to a bill have treated a deed as applying to the specific lots in question, it is no variance that the deed should omit to state the county and State in the description. Smith v. Brown, 34 Mich. 455.

Unless there is an objection to evidence or surprise is pleaded at trial of issue directed under a bill to quiet title, a new trial will not be granted on the ground that the title differs from that set up in the answer, though otherwise it would be as a matter of course. Powell v. Mayo, 20 N. J. Eq. 120.

Burden of Proof.—The burden of proof is on him who asks that deeds of his ancestor, which he claims were never delivered, be set aside. Salisbury v. Salisbury, 49 Mich. 306.

Plaintiff having alleged that defendant had notice of a deed to plaintiff, though unrecorded, the burden of proof is on defendant to show himself a purchaser for a valuable consideration, without notice. Nolan v. Grant, 53 Iowa, 392.

The burden of proof is on complainant to show an original entry as claimed, and, failing this, he is not entitled to relief where his complaint is that he entered one tract, while the records, as far as undestroyed, show that he entered another, and he brings his action to quiet his title to the latter: White v. Chicago, etc., R., 46 Iowa, 222.

Where the complainant is in possession under a deed which he alleges defendant gave to him, but afterwards destroyed without recording, it must be shown by a preponderance of evidence that such a deed was executed, acknowledged, and delivered by defendants, or with their consent. Eiden v. Eiden, 41 Wis. 460.

2. Hamilton v. Cummins, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 517; Leigh v. Everhart's Exrs., 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 380; Apthorp v. Comstock, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 482; Petit v. Shepherd, 5 Paige (N. Y.), 493; Burt v. Cassety, 12 Ala. 734; Hall v. Fisher, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 17; Kimberly v. Fox, 27 Conn 307; Tucker v. Keniston, 47 N. H. 267. 270.

Authorities for Bill to Remove Clouds.—Bispham's Principles of Equity; Story's Eq. Pl. & Jur.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND PROMISSORY NOTES. (See also AGENCY; ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS; BANKS AND BANKING; CHECKS; CONTRACTS; DEVISE AND LEGACY; FORGERY; GUARANTY; INTEREST; ORDERS; PARTNERSHIP; PAYMENTS; SURETY; USURY.)

1. Definitions.—A bill of exchange is a written order or request by one person to another for the payment of money at a specified time absolutely and at all events.[1]

A promissory note is a written engagement by one person to pay another, therein named, absolutely and unconditionally a certain sum of money at a time specified therein.[2]

2. Origin and History.—The date of the invention of bills of exchange cannot be fixed, nor can their development be accurately traced. Mr. Justice Story has collected all the speculations of the older writers on this subject,[3] which are fairly embodied in the opinion of Cockburn, C. J., that "bills of exchange are known to be of comparatively modern origin, having been first brought into use, so far as at present known, by the Florentines in the twelfth, and by the Venetians in the thirteenth century. The use of them gradually found its way into France, and still later, but slowly, into England."[4]

The name (French—billet de change) reveals clearly the country from which they came to England,[5] but the date cannot be more definitely fixed than some time prior to 1381.[6]

Promissory notes are supposed to be more ancient than bills of exchange, and have been identified with the chirographa of the Roman law.[7]

Negotiable notes, however, are of later origin than bills,[8] and in the opinion of Lord Holt were unknown in England until the last half of the seventeenth century.[9]

Bills were held assignable and negotiable by the custom of merchants, as recognized and enforced by the common law, from the time of their introduction into England;[10] but negotiability having been denied to promissory notes in Buller v. Crips, 6 Mod. 29, the statute of 3 and 4 Anne, c. 9, expressly conferred it upon notes to order or bearer.[11] Upon this statute the negotiability of notes has generally been supposed to rest;[12] but the contrary opinion that

1. 3 Kent Com. 74.

This definition, taken by Chancellor Kent from Justice Bayley's work on Bills of Exchange (5th Ed., p. 1), is thought by Story incomplete in not mentioning negotiability as a characteristic of bills. Story on Bills, p. 3. But inasmuch as this is not a necessary characteristic, the definition has been recognized as sufficient. Pope v. Luff, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 577.

In California it would seem that negotiability is essential, since a bill is defined by statute as "an instrument negotiable in form, by which one, called the drawer, requests another, called the payee, to pay a specified sum of money." Civil Code, § 3171.

2. Story on Promissory Notes, p. 2.

"A written promise for the payment of money at all events." 3 Kent Com. 74.

Here, again, the general law is that words of negotiability are not essential. Smith v. Kendall, 6 T. R. 123; Bates v. Butler, 46 Me. 387. But the rule, in California is different by statute, a note being defined as "an instrument negotiable in form, whereby the signer promises to pay a specified sum of money." Civil Code, § 3244.

3. Story on Bills, p. 5. See Encyc. Britannica (9th Ed.), art. Exchange.

4. Goodwin v. Robarts, L. R. 10 Ex. 347.

5. Edwards on Bills, p. 1.

6. Daniel on Neg. Inst., p. 4.

7. Story on Notes, p. 8.

8. Story on Notes, p. 9.

9. Buller v. Crips, 6 Mod. 29.

10. 2 Black. Com. 467.

11. See 1 Parsons on Notes and Bills, p. 9, for the text of this famous act, with a full history of the difficulties that led to its passage.

12. Edwards on Bills, etc., p. 54.

notes were negotiable at the common law, of which 3 and 4 Anne was merely declaratory, has been most ably supported by great authority,[1] and some States of the Union where this statute had never been adopted have judicially held the same view.[2]

3. Kinds of Bills of Exchange.—Bills of exchange are either foreign or inland,—the latter often called domestic, and both kinds indifferently alluded to as drafts.

A foreign bill is one drawn in one State or country upon a foreign State or country, while inland or domestic bills are drawn and payable in the State or country whose jurisdiction is invoked.[3]

4. Technical Terms.—The drawer of a bill of exchange is the person making it; the drawee, the person upon whom it is drawn; and the person in whose favor it is, the payee.

The same person may be drawer and drawee, or drawer and payee. The acceptance of a bill is the drawee's promise to "pay it according to its terms,"[4] and upon making such promise the drawee becomes the acceptor.

If the payee transfers the bill by indorsement he becomes an indorser; and one in no way connected with the bill originally may become liable as guarantor or surety by putting his name upon it, or make himself acceptor supra protest, by promising payment after the drawee has refused.

Bills often contain a reference to persons who will pay if the drawee will not; such individuals are said to be designated au besoin, i.e., in case of need.

The act of offering the bill for acceptance or payment is termed presentment; and refusal of acceptance or payment is dishonor, which is usually attested by protest, i.e., a formal notarial certificate attesting such dishonor.[5]

Notice (usually in writing) of dishonor is in most cases necessary to fix the liability of all parties to a bill, and is often given by a notarial certificate contained in the protest and forwarded to the parties entitled to it.

The maker of a promissory note is the person who gives it, and the payee the one indicated as the recipient of the promised amount.

Indorsement is the transfer of any negotiable instrument by a

1. Cranch, J., in Appendix to 1 Cr. Rep., p. 367.

2. Irvin v. Maury, 1 Mo. 194; Dunn v. Adams, 1 Ala. 527.

3. Story on Bills, § 22; Randolph on Com'l Paper, § 3.

What States and countries are foreign to each other has been the subject of much controversy. For purposes of exchange, however, it is now settled that, despite the acts of union, England, Scotland, and Ireland are separate countries, and bills drawn in one on another foreign bills. Bayley on Bills, p. 26; Mahoney v. Ashlin, 2 B. & A. 478. So also it is well settled that for this purpose the States of the Union are foreign to each other. Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. 586; Bank of U. S. v. Daniel, 12 Pet. 32; Phœnix Bank v. Hussey, 12 Pick. 483; Ocean Nat'l Bank v. Williams, 102 Mass. 141.

4. Bonnell v. Mawha, 8 Vr. (N. J.) 200.

5. Byles on Bills, 262; Benj. Chal. Dig. § 176.

"Protest in a more popular sense includes all steps after the dishonor of negotiable paper necessary to charge a party to it." Ocoll Bank v. Hughes, 2 Coldw. 52.

writing on the paper itself, or upon an attached piece of paper called an allonge. It may be either blank or full. The former is effected by the holder's merely writing his name upon (usually) the back of the instrument to be transferred, while a full or special indorsement directs payment to the order of a particular person.[1]

An indorsement may be either absolute, e.g., "protest waived," or qualified, e.g., "without recourse;" conditional, ordering payment only upon a contingency, or restrictive as to the use to be made of the indorsed instrument, e.g., "pay A to the use of B."

Negotiation is the transfer of a bill or note in the manner prescribed by the law merchant.[2]

Holder is a title applicable to any one in actual or constructive possession of a note or bill, and entitled by law to sue and recover upon it.[3]

A bona-fide holder for value is a possessor of the negotiable paper in question who has paid value for it "really and truly without notice of any facts which, if known, would defeat his title to the note or bill."[4]

An accommodation party to a note or bill is one who has signed as drawer, maker, indorser or acceptor, without receiving value, and for the purpose of lending his name to some other person as a means of credit.[5]

The maturity, or due date, of a note or bill is usually given by the text of the instrument; if payable on demand it is instantly due, except in some States, where by statute the maturity of such bills and notes is fixed at a certain number of months.

Days of grace, usually three in number, are in most countries allowed by custom or statute as an addition to the time which the bill or note has to run according to its terms. Such days are now regarded as of right.[6]

Re-exchange is the loss resulting from the dishonor of a bill of exchange in a country different from that in which it was drawn or indorsed,[7] and is a part of the damages recoverable by the holder of a dishonored bill.

Foreign bills are sometimes drawn at so many usances, i.e., periods for payments fixed by custom at the place of drawing and payment. This term is now unknown in Anglo-American commercial usage.

5. Forms.—The ordinary form of a foreign bill of exchange is as follows:

Exchange for £500. NEW YORK, Jan. 2, 1886.

Six months after date of this first of exchange (second and third of

1. Indorsement is the "transfer of a negotiable note or bill by the indorsement of some person who has a right to indorse." 2 Parsons, N. & B. 1. As to the place for indorsement see. 2 Bish. Crim. L. §570 a; Clark v. Sigourney, 17 Conn. 511; Com. v. Buttrick, 100 Mass. 12; Com. v. Spilman, 124 Mass. 327; Higgins v. Bullock, 66 Ill. 37.

2. Benj. Chal. Dig. § 106.

3. Byles on Bills, 2.

4. Benj. Chal. Dig. § 85.

5. Benj. Chal. Dig. § 90; cf. Dunn v. Weston, 71 Me. 270; Lord v. Ocean Bank, 20 Pa. St. 384.

6. Ferris v. Saxton, 1 South. (N. J.) 17.

7. Benj. Chal. Dig. § 221; Story on Bills, § 400.

same date and tenor unpaid) pay to the order of I. S. five hundred pounds value received. A. B.

To C. D. Bank, London, England.

It is unusual to draw inland bills in triplicate, the dangers of transmission being thought so slight. An ordinary form is:

$500. NEW YORK, Jan. 2, 1886.

Ten days after sight pay to I. S. or order five hundred dollars value received, and charge to the account of A. B.

To the First National Bank of Phila., Pa.

The common method of acceptance is to write the word "Accepted" across the paper over the acceptor's signature. A sufficient acceptance supra protest is, "Accepted S. P., John Smith."

The protest of a bill cannot be too carefully drawn. The usual form is (for non-acceptance):

United States of America,
State of New York, } ss.:
City and County of New York,

On the 2d day of January, 1886, at the request of [the holder], I, James Burr, a notary public of the State of New York, duly commissioned and sworn, did present the original bill of exchange hereto annexed [or, of which a copy is hereto annexed] to [drawee] at his place of business in the city of New York [street and number usually given] and demanded acceptance, who refused to accept the same [reasons for refusal may be here inserted].

Whereupon I, the said notary, at the request aforesaid, did protest, and by these presents do solemnly and publicly protest, as well against the drawer and indorsers of the said bill as against all others whom it may concern for exchange, re-exchange, and all costs, damages, and interest already incurred and to be hereafter incurred for want of acceptance of the same.

Thus done and protested at New York City in the county aforesaid, in the presence of John Doe and Richard Roe, witnesses.

JAMES BURR, Notary Public.

[L.S.] In testimonium veritatis.

Notice of protest should be sent by the notary in the form following:

To A. B.:

Please take notice that a bill of exchange drawn by C. D. upon E. F. for $500, dated Jan. 2, 1886, payable one month after sight in favor of G. H., and by you indorsed, has been presented by me to said E. F. at his place of business, 17 Broadway, New York City, and acceptance being duly demanded was refused, whereupon by direction of the holder the same has this day been duly protested for such non-acceptance, and you are held liable therefor. JAMES BURR, Notary Public.

New York City, Feb. 15, 1886.

The notary's certificate of notice, which by the laws of most countries is evidence of protest and notice, may be as follows:

United States of America,
State of New York, } ss.:
City and County of New York,

I, James Burr, a notary public of the State of New York, duly commissioned and sworn, do hereby certify that on the 15th day of February, 1886, due notice of the protest of the annexed bill of exchange [or, of which a copy is hereunto annexed] was served upon the drawer C. D. personally at [state place exactly], and upon the indorser A. B. by [e. g.] putting the same into the post-office directed to him at Crestline, Ohio, said place being the reputed residence of the said A. B. and the post-office nearest thereto, the said notice being mailed at New York City, and the postage prepaid.

Witness my hand and official seal at New York City, this 15th day of February, 1886.

[L. S.] JAMES BURR, Notary Public.

These forms, mutatis mutandis, are equally applicable to protest for non-payment, and notice and certificate of dishonor of inland bills where formal protest is unnecessary.

Where the drawer has not been served with notice, the certificate should show just what diligent search has been made for him.

Almost any written promise of reimbursement will be regarded as a promissory note, but a prudent and orderly form is:

$500. BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 2, 1886.

Thirty days after date I promise to pay to the order of I. S. five hundred dollars value received. Payable at the Long Island Bank. A. B.

6. Essential Requisites of Notes and Bills.—(a) Materials and Signature.—It has never been doubted that a note or bill must be in writing;[1] a verbal note is a contradiction in terms.

Ink, however, is not the only medium of script; a pencilled note is good,[2] and printing, at least in the body of the instrument,[3] is a species of writing.

Though paper or parchment are the only substances for writing purposes which the courts have ever noticed, there is no reason to suppose that they are the only legal materials; the question has never been mooted.

Signature, i.e., a person's name written by himself or with his authority, is in general necessary to the completeness of a note or bill.[4]

Even where sureties have signed, the note is inchoate until the principal's signature is affixed.[5]

Even where a bill "to my order," though accepted, was unsigned by the drawer, it has been held invalid for any purpose.[6]

But the signature need not be full; initials are sufficient,[7] and the mark of a person unable to write is undoubtedly good.[8]

1. Thomas v. Bishop, 2 Stra. 955.

2. Geary v. Physic, 5 B. & C. 234; followed in Closson v. Stearns, 4 Vt. 11; Brown v. Butcher's, etc., Bank, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 443; Reed v. Roark, 14 Tex. 329.

3. Story on Notes, § 11.

A printed memorandum is part of a note. Zimmerman v. Rote, 75 Pa. St. 188. Even if on the back of the note. Farmer's Bank v. Ewing, 78 Ky. 264. And a fac simile autograph is a good signature to a coupon. Pennington v. Baehr, 48 Cal. 565.

4. The statutes of some States require that negotiable instruments be signed by the person to be holden thereby. Indiana, 1 R. S. c. 177, § 1; Iowa, R. C. § 2082; Nevada, 1 Comp. L. c. 5, § 9; New Jersey, Pat. Rev. p. 342, § 4; New York, 2 R. S. (Ed. 1875) p. 1160, § 1.

5. Knight v. Hurlbut, 74 Ill. 133.

So held where A signed but with agreement not to be held unless B "signed ahead of him." Miller v. Gambie, 4 Barb. 148. But this defence is unavailable against a bona fide holder for value. Smith v. Moberly, 10 B. Mon. 266.

6. Stoessiger v. S. E. R. Co., 3 El. & Bl. 553; Goldsmid v. Hampton, 5 C. B N. S. 108. Sed contra, Harvey v. Cane, 24 W. Repr. 400; Whitmore v. Nickerson, 125 Mass. 496.

7. Merchant's Bank v. Spicer, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 443; Palmer v. Stephens, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 479; Weston v. Myers, 33 Ill. 424.

The intent being clearly shown, the figures 1, 2, 8 have been held a signature. Brown v. Butcher's, etc., Bank, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 443.

8. George v. Surrey, 1 Mood. & M.

A seal is not the equivalent for a signature except in the case of a corporation note or bill,[1] but a hand-stamp is probably sufficient.[2]

The position of the signature is immaterial; the intent governs,[3] and this intent may be proved by parol.[4] The signatures of maker or drawer may even be on the back of the instrument,[5] or upon an allonge attached to it.[6]

An averment that A "made" a note is a sufficient allegation that he signed it,[7] but the execution must be proved as a fact;[8] the maker's admission of signature, however, is sufficient proof.[9]

The attestation of witnesses is not usual or desirable, unless required by statute, as in the case of parties who cannot write.[10]

(b) The Effect of a Seal.—There is no statute in any State of the Union requiring or prohibiting the sealing of bills or notes.

In many States, however, the distinction between specialties and simple contracts has been done away with by statute,[11] at least as far as commercial paper is concerned.

In these States a seal can confer neither benefit nor detriment upon the instrument bearing it.

In other jurisdictions absolute negotiability has been conferred upon sealed bills,[12] and in still others they are made assignable by indorsement subject to equities existing at the date of assignment against the assignor.[13]

516; Willoughby v. Moreton, 47 N. H. 205; Hilborn v. Alford, 22 Cal. 482; Shank v. Butsch, 28 Ind. 19; Handyside v. Cameron, 24 Ill. 588.

The Alabama statute requires a witness. Flowers v. Bitting, 45 Ala. 448. So in California. Civ. Code, § 5014.

1. Crouch v. Credit Foncier L. R., 8 Q. B. 382.

2. Randolph on Com'l Paper, § 64.

3. Thus "I, A. B., promise" has been held a good signature. Taylor v. Dobbins, 1 Stra. 399. But two persons signing in different corners are not prima facie joint makers. Steininger v. Hoch, 39 Pa. St. 263.

4. Watkins v. Kirkpatrick, 2 Dutch. 84.

5. Nat. Pemberton Bank v. Lougee, 108 Mass. 373; Rodocanachi v. Buttrick, 125 Mass. 134; Palmer v. Grant, 4 Conn. 389; Quinn v. Sterne, 26 Ga. 223; Schmidt v. Schmaelter, 45 Mo. 502.

6. Heister v. Gilmore, 5 Phila. 62; French v. Turner, 15 Ind. 59.

7. Elliot v. Cooper, 2 Ld. Ray. 1376.

8. Colbath v. Jones, 28 Mich. 280.

9. Hilborn v. Alford, 22 Cal. 482; Nichols v. Allen, 112 Mass. 23; Willoughby v. Moreton, 47 N. H. 205; Mauri v. Heffernan, 13 Johns. 57; Casco Bank v. Keene, 53 Me. 103.

But the admission must be explicit. "A note to B" is not sufficient. Shaver v. Ehle, 16 Johns. 201.

10. As in Alabama; Code, 2707, requiring also two witnesses to the transfer of a note by a feme covert. Walker v. Struve, 70 Ala. 167.

11. Kansas, Comp. L. 1879, c. 21, § 6; Nebraska, Gen. Stats. 1873, c. 71, § 1; Tennessee, Comp. Stats. 1871, § 1804; Arkansas, Constitution, art. 15, § 16; California, Civ. Code, § 6629; Indiana, 2 Rev. Stat. 1876. § 273, p. 146; Kentucky, Gen. Stats. 1877, c. 22, § 2; Michigan, Comp. L. §§ 5367–5384; New York, 1875, 1 R. S. 768. § 1; Ohio, Rev. Stat. 1880, §§ 3171–72; Texas, Pasch. Dig. § 5087.

12. Colorado, 1877, Gen. L. 110, § 91; Dakota, 1877, Rev. Code § 1829; Illinois, 1880, Rev. Stats. c. 98, §§ 3, 4; Massachusetts, 1859, G. S. s. 53, § 6; Missouri, 1 R. S. 1879, c. 10, § 547; Nevada, 1873, C. L. c. 5, § 9; Georgia, Code 1873, § 2776.

13. Alabama, 1876, Code, § 2100; Dist. Col., Laws Md. 1763, c. 23, § 9; Florida, 1870, Code Civ. Proc., part 2, tit. 3, §§ 62–3; Iowa, 1880, Rev. Code, §§ 2084–2546; Maryland, 1878, Rev. Code, 594, § 43; Minnesota, 1878, G. S. c. 66, § 27; Mississippi, 1871, Rev. Code, § 2228; New Jersey, 1874, Rev. 850; Pennsylvania, Purd. Dig. 1872, p. 161, § 1; South Carolina, 1873, R. S. §§ 134, 135, p. 594;

Aside from statute, however, a sealed bill or note is not a negotiable instrument.[1] If payable to bearer they are transferable by delivery,[2] otherwise by regular assignment, and in any case are subject to existing equities. A mere blank indorsement of a sealed bill confers no title at all.[3]

(c) The Date.—A date has been said to be necessary to "the free and uninterrupted negotiability"[4] of a bill or note, but no date at all is necessary by common law,[5] though common prudence will dictate its invariable insertion.

A date left blank may be filled up,[6] and the note in this way even antedated by a bona-fide holder.[7]

Notes take effect only on delivery,[8] yet when payable so many days after date the time begins to run from the expressed date regardless of delivery;[9] but the time of payment of such notes when no date is expressed is calculated from the day of delivery,[10] as shown by parol evidence if necessary.[11]

The expressed date is prima-facie evidence of the date of delivery, but as between immediate parties it may be shown to have occurred on any other day.[12]

But as against an innocent holder for value, the apparent date cannot be changed by parol to his disadvantage.[13]

Virginia, 1873, Code, c. 141, § 17; West Virginia, 1879, R. S. c. 12, § 14; Wisconsin, 1878, R. S. §§ 2605, 2606.

1. Brown v. Lockhart, 1 Mo. 289; Clark v. Farmers' Mfg. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 256; Foster v. Floyd, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 159; Frevall v. Fitch, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 325; Brown v. Jordhal, 32 Minn. 135; Burden v. Southerland, 70 N. Car. 528; Glyn v. Baker, 13 East, 509.

2. Merritt v. Cole, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 98; Porter v. McCollum, 15 Ga. 528.

3. Speer v. Post, Penn. (N. J.), 1032; Conine v. Junction, etc., R., 3 Houst. (Del.) 288.

That a note concludes with the phrase "witness our hand and seal" does not make it a sealed instrument; the words merely call attention to the attestation. Willhelms v. Partoine, 72 Ga. 898.

4. Mitchell v. Culver, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 336.

5. Giles v. Bourne, 6 M. & S. 73; Vandervere v. Ogburn, Penn. (N. J.) 67; Seldonridge v. Connable, 32 Ind. 375; Pierce v. Richardson, 37 N. H. 306; Dean v. De Lezardi, 24 Miss. 424.

6. Androscoggin Bank v. Kimball, 10 Cush. 373; Lennig v. Ralston, 23 Pa. St. 137; Shultz v. Payne, 7 La. Ann. 222; Witte v. Williams, 8 S. Car. 290; Fullerton v. Sturges, 4 Ohio St. 529.

7. Page v. Morrell, 3 Keyes, 417. But not if such holder knows the real date. Emmons v. Meeker, 55 Ind. 321; Goodman v. Simonds, 19 Mo. 106.

8. They are to be considered "as made or drawn when delivered." Lansing v. Gaine, 2 Johns. 303; Chamberlain v. Hopps, 8 Vt. 94; Clough v. Davis, 9 N. H. 500; Flanagan v. Meyer, 41 Ala. 132; Hill v. Dunham, 7 Gray (Mass.), 543; Hilton v. Houghton, 35 Me. 143; Fritsch v. Heisler, 40 Mo. 555; King v. Fleming, 72 Ill. 21.

9. Powell v. Waters, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 669; Luce v. Shoff, 70 Ind. 152. Even if postdated a year. Bumpass v. Timms, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 1856.

10. Richardson v. Ellett, 10 Tex. 190; Kenner v. Creditors, 10 Mart. (La.) 17.

11. Which, however, cannot be used to show that an undated indorsement was made on Sunday. Greathead v. Walton, 40 Conn. 226.

12. Cowing v. Altman, 71 N. Y. 435; Aldridge v. Branch Bank, 17 Ala. 45; Drake v. Rogers, 32 Me. 521; Dean v. De Lezardi, 24 Miss. 424; Buck v. Steffy, 65 Ind. 58; McSparran v. Neely, 91 Pa. St. 17. Even if such evidence shows that a note was actually delivered on a Sunday, although dated on a week day. Bank of Cumberland v. Mayberry, 48 Me. 198; Allen v. Deming, 14 N. H. 133.

13. Thus a note dated Monday but really executed and delivered on Sunday is good in the hands of a bona fide holder. Clinton Nat. Bank v. Graves, 48 Iowa, 228; Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 439; Greathead v. Walton, 40 Conn. 226; State

Post- or ante-dating notes and bills throws no suspicion upon the good faith of the taker.[1] Even if one of the parties to a post-dated note dies before the date day, the obligation remains valid.[2]

The place at which a note or bill is dated is prima facie the place of residence of the drawer or maker,[3] and may be used as evidence in the absence of any other proof of the place where it is payable.[4]

Indorsements are usually undated, but prima facie their date is that of the note or bill upon which they are made.[5]

The real date of indorsement may be proven by parol,[6] as may also the real date of an acceptance, which if undated is presumed to be of the same day as the drawing of the bill.[7]

The alteration of a date, as of any other material part of a note or bill, avoids it.[8]

(d) The Promise or Order must be Positive.—Although no set form of words is necessary,[9] a note must in legal effect promise, and a bill order, the payment of money.[10]

Words of politeness, e. g., "Please let bearer have money," do not deprive the instrument of its commercial character.[11]

Bank v. Thompson, 42 N. H. 369; Knox v. Clifford, 38 Wis. 651; Vinton v. Peck, 14 Mich. 287; Ball v. Powers, 62 Ga. 757.

1. Brewster v. McCardel, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 479,—providing it be not done for an illegal purpose, e.g. evade a prohibitory law,—Bayley v. Taber, 5 Mass. 286,—in which case the note is void.

2. Passmore v. North, 13 East. 517.

3. Duncan v. McCullough, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 480; Sasscer v, Whitely, 10 Md. 98; Branch Bank v. Pierce, 3 Ala. 321; Taylor v. Snyder, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 145. It has been held, however, that this simply shows the place of drawing. Lightner v. Will, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 140.

4. Moodie v. Moorall, 1 Mill (S. Car.), 307.

5. Smith v. Nevlin, 89 Ill. 193; Canal Bank v. Templeton, 20 La. Ann. 141; Collins v. Gilbert, 4 Otto, 753; Gray v. Brown, 49 Me. 544; Meadows v. Cozart, 76 N. Car. 450; Nat'l Pemberton Bank v. Longee, 108 Mass. 373; Patterson v. Carrell, 60 Ind. 128. But it has also been held that the presumption is merely that the indorsement was made before maturity. Sullivan v. Violett, 6 Gill (Md.), 181; Rahm v. Bridge Co., 16 Kans. 530; Rea v. Owens, 37 Ia. 362; Rhode v. Alley, 27 Tex. 443.

6. Anderson v. Weston, 6 Bing. N. Car. 296; Clendenin v. Southerland, 31 Ark. 20; Baker v. Arnold, 3 Caines (N.Y.), 279, and cases last cited. But evidence of delivery before and indorsement after dishonor will not overcome the presumption of indorsement before maturity. Ranger v. Cary, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 369. Nor will a payee's declarations. Hearson v. Grandine, 87 Ill. 115.

7. 2 Parsons N. & B. 489, 488 n.; Roberts v, Bethell, 12 C. B. 778.

8. Heffner v. Wenrich, 32 Pa. St. 423; Hamilton v. Wood, 70 Ind. 306; Le May v. Williams, 32 Ark. 166.

Thus if the date of maturity of a bill be changed, the acceptor is discharged. 6 Wall. 80.

9. Byles on Bills, 78; Story on Prom. Notes, § 12; Brooks v. Elkins, 2 M. & W. 74; Partridge v. Davis, 20 Vt. 499. Thus a note may be in form a bond. Woodward v. Genet, 2 Hilt. 526; Hitchcock v. Cloutier, 7 Vt. 22. And an order of payment indorsed on an account has been held a bill of exchange. Leonard v. Mason, 1 Wend. 522. Though not negotiable. Hoyt v. Lynch, 2 Sandf. 328; Falkenburg v. Clark, 11 R. I. 278. Sed contra Platzer v. Norris, 38 Tex. 1.

A lumberman's order in this form: [Date and address] Pay to the order of H. F. the sum of ten dollars, and charge the same to Camp 8. [Signature], is in essentials a draft, and must be accepted before it will sustain an action. Finan v. Babcock, 58 Mich. 301.

10. Daniel on Neg. Inst. § 35.

11. Bresenthal v. Williams, 1 Duvall (Ky.), 329; Gillilan v. Myers, 31 Ill. 525; Knowlton v. Cooley, 102 Mass. 233. But "we authorize"—Hamilton v. Spottiswoode, 4 Exch. 200—and "I allow"—Harmon v James, 7 Ind. 263—have been held insufficient.

But a mere due bill, or I O U, is not a note, for it does not promise payment.[1]

Some cases there are, however, holding that mere statements of indebtedness are promissory notes,[2] while the addition of the words "on demand," "payable on demand," "to be paid May 5th," have all been pronounced sufficient to convert due bills into notes.[3]

In accordance with the doctrine that makes a promissory note of any document that by fair intendment contains a promise to pay, certificates of deposit have been held notes, the necessary promise being inferred from the nature of the instrument,[4] and if payable to A "or bearer" they are considered negotiable promissory notes payable to the holder.[5]

Receipts for money when containing a promise of repayment are negotiable,[6] and interest coupons are practically notes payable to bearer.[7]

(e) The Promise or Order must be Unconditional.—It has often been held that notes and bills to be negotiable must be payable "at all events;" and however valid as contracts, if their currency is

1. Fesenmayer v. Adcock, 16 M. & W. 449; Gould v. Combs, 1 C. B. 543; Carson v. Lucas, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 213; Garland v. Scott, 15 La. Ann. 143; Currier v. Lockwood, 40 Conn. 349; Brenzer v. Wightman, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 264; Biskup v. Oberle, 6 Mo. App. 583. But in some States the rule is doubted. Russell v. Whipple, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 536; Huyck v. Meador, 24 Ark. 191; Cummings v. Freeman, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 143; Bacon v. Bicknell, 17 Wis. 523; Hussey v. Winslow, 59 Me. 170; McDonald v. Yeager, 42 Ind. 388. In these cases, however, the sum is admitted due to bearer or order, and an intent to pay is inferred, which is said to be the test as to whether the instrument is or is not a note. Daniel on Neg. In. § 37.

2. "Due B. $150." Brady v. Chandler, 31 Mo. 28. "Due W. $525." Jacquin v. Warren, 40 Ill. 459; Fleming v. Burge, 6 Ala. 373; Brewer v. Brewer, 6 Ga. 588.

3. Smith v. Allen, 2 Day, 337; Kimball v. Huntington, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 675; Mitchell v. Railroad Co. 17 Ga 574; Pepoon v. Stagg, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 102; Waithman v. Elzee, 1 C. & K. 35. But it is impossible to lay down a national rule on this point. See Smiley v. Fry, 1 Cent. Repr. 510, where "Due A. B. $4000, returnable on demand," was held not negotiable, and a mere evidence of special deposit in distinction from other transactions with A. B.

4 Miller v. Austin, 13 How. (U. S.) 218; Bank of Orleans v. Merrill. 2 Hill (N.Y.), 295; Pardee v. Fish, 60 N. Y. 265; Hart v. Life Assoc., 54 Ala. 495; Hunt v. Divine, 37 Ill. 137; Fells Point Savings Inst. v. Weedon, 18 Md. 320; Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 362; Fultz v. Walters. 2 Mont. 165; Howe v. Hartness, 11 Ohio St. 449; Gregg v. Union Co. Bk., 87 Ind. 238; Laughlin v. Marshall, 19 Ill. 390; Hazleton v. Union Bk., 32 Wis. 51; Tripp v. Curzenius, 36 Mich. 494. But contra London, etc., Soc. v. Hagerstown Sav. Bk., 36 Pa. St. 498; Patterson v. Poindexter, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 227.

And a bank-book is not even a due bill, much less a negotiable note. Mechanics Bank v. Railroad Co., 13 N. Y. 599.

5. Maxwell v. Agnew, 21 Fla. 1154.

6. Green v. Davies, 4 B. & C. 235.

So held of receipt for money to be "returned when called for." Woodfolk v. Leslie, 2 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 585. But otherwise when the receipt is merely for money "held subject to order." Roman v. Terna, 40 Tex. 306. Or "to be accounted for." Tomkins v. Ashby, 6 B. & C. 541.

7. Thompson v. Perrine, 16 Otto (U. S.), 589; Haven v. Railroad Co., 109 Mass. 108; Beaver Co. v. Armstrong, 44 Pa. St. 63; Burroughs v. Commissioners, 65 N. Car. 234; Evertsen v. Nat'l Bk., 66 N. Y. 14.

But a receiver's certificate is not. Turner v. Railroad Co., 95 Ill. 1889; Union Trust Co. v. Railroad Co., 7 Fed. Repr. 513. Nor municipal or county warrants. Dillon on Mun. Corp. § 406; People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537.

clogged by conditions, the qualities of commercial instruments are denied them.[1]

A somewhat similar doctrine is held as to documents not clearly conditional, but so encumbered with directions as to method of payment as to be clearly unsuited for business negotiation. Thus a promise to pay "all fines according to the rule," though unconditional, is not a note at all,[2] and a writing giving the maker the choice of paying a certain judgment or losing what had been already paid is no better.[3]

An absence of directions as to payment is as fatal as too great particularity.[4]

But if a time of payment must surely come, though the particular day is not mentioned, nor perhaps ascertainable at the inception of the contract, the note or bill is good and negotiable.[5]

Some notes containing statements of the time of payment which taken literally would enable the maker to refuse payment forever have been held to be due a reasonable time after their date.[6]

That a note payable at a certain date permits payment before maturity is no objection to it;[7] nor is a recital that on payment

1. Tradesmen's Nat'l Bk. v. Green, 57 Md. 602; Mast v. Matthews, 30 Minn. 441; Overton v. Tyler, 3 Pa. St. 346; Kingsbury v. Wall, 68 Ill. 311; Van Steenwyk v. Sackett, 17 Wis. 645; Carnahan v. Pell, 4 Col. 190; Third Nat'l Bk. v. Armstrong, 25 Minn. 531; Conover v. Stillwell, 5 Vroom (N. J.), 54; Worley v. Harrison, 3 Ad. & E. 699; Cook v. Satterlee, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 108.

Thus promises to pay "on or before two years after date," but if within one year no interest to be due—Story v. Lamb, 52 Mich. 525—"provided he proceed to sea"—Loftus v. Clark, 1 Hilt. 310—"provided a certain mortgage be paid and cancelled"—Hays v. Gwin, 19 Ind. 19—when maker's "old mill is sold"—Blake v. Coleman, 22 Wis. 415—"Interest only unless principal necessary for support" of payee—Light v. Scott, 88 Ill. 239—"After my advances are paid"—54 Miss. 716—and a bill payable "ninety days after sight or when realized"—Alexander v. Thomas, 16 Q. B. 333—are all bad as notes and bills, though good contracts.

2. Ayrey v. Fearnsides, 4 M. & W. 168.

Neither is a written order to pay a conditional note. Noyes v. Gilman, 65 Me. 589. Nor an order to pay "in accordance with a resolution of the police jury." Jenkins v. Caddo, 7 La. Ann. 559.

3. Draper v. Fletcher, 26 Mich. 164.

4. Thus an agreement to pay in instalments which does not state when the instalments fall due is not a promissory note. Moffatt v. Edwards, Car. & M. 16. But if the promise is to pay when the payee requires any instalment it is a good demand note. White v. Smith, 77 Ill 351.

5. So held of notes payable a certain time after a man's death. Bristol v. Warner, 19 Conn. 7; Conn v. Thornton, 46 Ala. 588.

In Capron v. Capron, 44 Vt. 412, where the promise was to pay in one year "if enough realized by good management," if not, to have more time "in the manufacture of the plaster bed on Stearn's land," the additional period was held to mean a reasonable time. To the same effect Ubsdell v. Cunningham, 22 Mo. 124.

"As soon as realized" and "to be paid during the coming season" occurring in same note and read together have been held not a condition, as payment must be due before the close (in this case) of harvest. Cota v. Buck, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 588.

6. "When convenient." Works v. Hershey, 35 Iowa, 340. "When I sell my place." Crooker v. Holmes, 65 Me. 195.

7. Thus a note at 12 mos. "or sooner if made out of a certain sale" is perfectly good. Ernst v. Steckman, 74 Pa. St. 13; Walker v. Woolen, 54 Ind. 164; Palmer v. Hammer, 10 Kans. 464.

Nor does "the right to pay this note before maturity in instalments." etc., destroy negotiability. Riker v. Sprague Mfg. Co., 14 R. I. 402; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 416. And the same is true of the phrase, "This note shall become due immethe payee shall sell a machine to the maker;[1] nor reservation of the right to pay in United States bonds.[2]

The words "payable on the return of this certificate," inserted in the document, if a condition at all, constitute a lawful one, being merely a demand for the surrender of the evidence of indebtedness.[3] Nor does a provision for attorney's fees in case of suit destroy negotiability.[4]

Conditions to affect negotiability must appear on the face of the written instrument,[5] and when not so appearing cannot be proven by parol.[6]

Where the condition expressed has been performed, an action will lie on a note containing it,[7] but its negotiability is not thereby restored.[8]

During the War of the Rebellion notes were common payable a certain time "after peace," or the "ratification of peace" between the United States and Confederate States. In some States these obligations have been held actionable upon the cessation of hostilities;[9] in others the view has prevailed that they were wagers on the success of insurrection and therefore void.[10]

(f) Indicated Mode of Payment regarded as a Condition.—It has been stated as a general rule that instruments made payable expressly or by implication out of a particular fund are not negotiable bills or notes, because their payment is conditioned upon the sufficiency of that fund.[11]

diately upon W. delivering possession to me" of certain land, when the note also states a fixed due day. Dobbins v. Oberman, 17 Neb. 163.

1. Hawley v. Bingham, 6 Or. 76.

2. Dinsmore v. Duncan, 57 N. Y. 573.

3. Smilie v. Stevens, 39 Vt. 316; Fells Point Sav. Inst. v. Weedon, 18 Md. 320; Frank v. Wessels, 64 N. Y. 155.

4. Houghton v. Francis, 29 Ill. 244: Trader v. Chidester, 41 Ark. 242. Yet the same court holds that such an agreement is not enforceable. Boozer v. Anderson, 42 Ark. 167; and see 50 Am. Rep. 451. In other States the agreement is valid, but destroys the negotiability of the note containing it. Sweeney v. Thickstun, 77 Pa. St. 131; Cayuga Co. National Bank v. Purdy, 56 Mich 6; First National Bank v. Larsen, 60 Wis. 206; Johnson v. Speer, 92 Pa. St. 227; First National Bank v. Bynum, 84 N. Car. 24.

5. Evansville R. Co. v. Dunn, 17 Ind. 603; Goddard v. Cutts, 11 Me. 440; Richards v. Richards, 2 B. & Ad. 447.

"This note given on condition" written in a note are immaterial words and may be erased. Palmer v. Sargent, 5 Neb. 223.

6. Cunningham v. Wardwell, 12 Me. 466; Brown v. Wiley, 20 How. (U. S.) 442; McSherry v. Brooks, 46 Md. 103; Gliddons v. Harrison, 59 Ala. 481; Jones v. Shaw, 67 Mo. 667; Rodgers v. Rosser, 57 Ga. 319; Rockmore v. Davenport, 14 Tex. 602; McGrath v. Barnes, 13 S. Car. 328.

7. As where the note was payable if certain banks resumed payment, as they did do. Walters v. McBie, 1 Lea (Tenn.), 364; Gordon v. Casey, 23 Ill. 70; Shackleford v. Hooker, 54 Miss. 716; Nagle v. Horner, 8 Cal. 353; Grimison v. Russell, 30 N. Westn. Repr. (Neb.) 249.

8. Hill v. Halford, 2 B. & P. 413; White v. Smith, 77 Ill. 351.

9. Brewster v. Williams, 2 S. Car. 455; Mostee v. Edwards, 20 La. Ann. 236; Knight v. McReynolds, 37 Tex. 204.

10. Harris v. Lewis, 5 W. Va. 576; McNinch v. Ramsey, 66 N. Car. 229.

11. Wadlington v. Covert, 51 Miss. 631.

Thus an order to pay "out of any funds belonging to me" is not a bill of exchange, for there may be no funds. Averett's Admr. v. Booxer, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 165. But one for "$450 amount due me for carrying the mail" has been held an absolute and unconditional draft not drawn upon any particular fund. Defee v. Smith, 43 Ark. 221. For the

If, however, the person having possession of the fund drawn upon accept the bill so drawn, the negotiability of the instrument is at once established,[1] and as between drawer and payee it operates even before acceptance as an equitable assignment of the fund it refers to.[2]

An instrument, however, in form a bill of exchange, drawn upon a fund named in the writing, may be either an assignment or a bill according as the fund designated is referred to as the "means of reimbursement or the measure of liability:" if the former, it remains a bill of exchange; if the latter, it is payable only if the fund prove large enough, and can be regarded only as an assignment.[3]

(g) Payment in Money only Must be Promised.—It is believed to be perfectly well settled that money is the only thing that a note or bill may require payment of, unless this rule at the common law is changed by statute.[4] Promises to pay in work or goods have therefore uniformly been held bad as promissory notes, though in all other respects drawn in proper form.[5] Words of description prefaced to the word "money" have been held not to vitiate the instrument containing them,[6] and notes payable in general rule see Richardson v. Carpenter, 47 N. Y. 661; Corbett v. State, 24 Ga. 287; West v. Forman, 24 Ala. 400; Mills v. Kuykendale, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 47; Harriman v. Sanborn, 43 N. H. 128; Strader v. Batchelor, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 168; Turner v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 95 Ill. 134; Tradesmen's National Bank v. Green, 57 Md. 602; Andrews v. Harvey, 39 Tex. 123; Dyer v. Covington Twp., 19 Pa. St. 200.

A draft for a certain sum, drawn by one person upon another, payable at sight to the order of a bank named, and containing the direction to charge the same to a certain account, is a negotiable bill of exchange, not payable out of a particular fund, and does not constitute an assignment of the fund. Whitney v. Eliot National Bank, 137 Mass. 351; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 316.

1. State Bank v. Gilson, 5 Duer (N.Y.), 574; Lambert v. Jones, 2 Pat. & H. (Va.) 144; Mandeville v. Welch, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 277.

2. Gibson v. Cooke, 20 Pick. 15.

But if only a portion of the fund be drawn on, it is not even an assignment until accepted. Harris v. Clark, 3 N. Y. 115; Wemslock v. Bellwood, 12 Bush (Ky.), 139; Robins v. Bacon, 3 Greenl. (Me.) 346; Hopkins v. Beebe, 2 Casey (Pa.), 85.

3. This distinction made as stated in Munger v. Shannon, 61 N. Y. 258, where the fund was the prospective profit of a business, has been recently applied in Schmittler v. Simon, 2 Cent. Repr. (N. Y.) 498, s. p., Macleod v. Snee, 2 Stra. 762; Redman v. Adams, 51 Me. 433; Corbett v. Clark, 45 Wis. 403; Early v. McCart, 2 Dana (Ky.), 414; Griffin v. Weatherby, L. R. 3 Q. B. 753.

4. Hosstatter v. Wilson, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 307.

5. Thus a written promise to pay in a given time "J. S. or bearer one ounce of gold" is in a sense a promissory note. Roberts v. Smith, 58 Vt. 492; s. p., Scudder v. Clarke, 1 Col. 192; Auerbach v. Pritchet, 58 Ala. 451; Hyland v. Blodgett, 9. Or. 166; Brown v. Richardson, 20 N.Y. 472; May v. Lansdown, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 165; Gwinn v. Roberts, 3 Ark. 72; McClellan v. Coffin, 93 Ind. 456; Lawrence v. Dougherty, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 435; Mingo v. McDowell, 8 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 446; Reynolds v. Richards, 14 Pa. St. 206; Clark v. King, 2 Mass. 524; Bailey v. Simond, 6 N. H. 159; Griffith v. Hanks, 46 Tex. 217; Perry v. Smith, 22 Vt. 361; Farnum v. Virgin, 52 Me. 578; Matthews v. Houghton, 11 Me. 377.

Even the indorsement "this note payable in wheat" has been held part of the note, making it a merchandise note. Polo Mfg. Co. v. Parr, 8 Neb. 379.

6. "Current money." Bainbridge v. Owen, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 463; Miller v. McKinney, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 93. "Lawful current money." Wharton v. Morris, 1 Dall. 124. "Good current money of this State." 5 Ark. 261. "Lawful money." 1 Yeates (Pa.), 349. "Good

"gold" or "specie" fulfil every requirement of the law, it being the obvious intention to pay them in money only.[1]

Under the present ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States it makes no difference that a note is expressed to be payable in some particular kind of money, as gold or silver; if to be paid in money at all, every obligation can be discharged by legal-tender notes of the United States.[2]

The words "current funds" and "currency" have been held to mean money, but the question is undecided.[3] Promises to pay bank-notes are obviously not agreements for money, and notes so drawn are not negotiable.[4]

Whatever the written note or bill promises to pay the holder will be bound to; parol evidence is not admissible to vary it.[5]

(h) The Time of Payment must be Certain.—If it is impossible to extract from a note any statement of the time of its maturity, the instrument loses its negotiable character;[6] but this rarely happens, solvent cash notes." Smith v. Folwell, 21 Tex. 466; Grant v. Burleson, 38 Tex. 214; sed contra, Williams v. Sims, 22 Ala. 512. And when the prefixed words clearly indicate that some circulating medium which is not money, though so called, is meant, the notes will be bad as commercial paper; e.g., "Tennessee money." Taylor v. Neblett, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 491; contra, Wilburn v. Greer, 6 Ark. 255. "New York funds." Hasbrook v. Palmer, 2 McL. 10. "Brandon money." Gordon v. Parker, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 495. "Canada Money." Thompson v. Sloan, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 71, where the note was made in the U. S.

1. Chrysler v. Renois, 43 N. Y. 209; Wood v. Bullen, 6 Allen (Mass.), 516. "Specie or its equivalent" means money. Rhyne v. Wacaser, 63 N. Car. 36.

2. "The obligation of a contract to pay money is to pay that which the law shall recognize as money when the payment is to be made." Strong, J. Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457. For the full history of this point, which is rather political than legal, cf. Griswold v. Hepburn, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 20; Hepburn v. Griswold. 8 Wall. 603; Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U. S. 449.

Yet it is impossible to reconcile this decision with the unreversed case of Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 687, holding that a note payable in specie must be paid in coin, which doctrine has met with approval in Poett v. Stearns, 31 Cal. 78; Phillips v. Dugan, 21 Ohio St. 466; Smith v. Wood, 37 Tex. 616; Bowen v. Darby, 14 Fla. 202; Churchman v. Martin, 54 Ind. 380; McCalla v. Ely, 64 Pa. St. 254.

3. That notes payable in "current funds" are money notes. Emigrant Co. v. Clark, 47 Iowa, 671; White v. Richmond, 16 Ohio, 5; Wood v. Price, 46 Ill. 435; contra, Platt v. Sauk Co. Bank, 17 Wis. 222; Nat'l State Bank v. Ringel, 51 Ind. 393; Johnson v. Henderson, 76 N. Car. 227; Haddock v. Woods, 46 Iowa, 433; Wright v. Hart, 44 Pa. St. 454; Hasbrook v. Palmer, 2 McLean, 10.

That notes payable in "currency" are negotiable. Klauber v. Biggerstaff, 47 Wis. 551; Swift v. Whitney, 20 Ill. 144. So of "paper currency." Fank v. Wessels, 64 N. Y. 155. "Greenback currency." Burton v. Brooks, 25 Ark. 215. And of State currencies. Ehle v. Chittenango Bank, 24 N. Y. 548; Lampton v. Haggard, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 149; Black v. Ward, 27 Mich. 191. Contra, Bank of Mobile v. Brown, 42 Ala. 108; Huse v. Hamblin, 29 Iowa, 501; Warren v. Brown, 64 N. Car. 381.

4. Gray v. Donahoe, 4 Watts (Pa.), 400; Little v. Phœnix Bank, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 425; McDowell v. Keller, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 258. "Current bills." Collins v. Lincoln, 11 Vt. 268. "Current bank-notes." Fry v. Rousseau, 3 McLean, 106. "North Carolina bank bills." Patton v. Hunt, 64 N. Car. 163.

5. Bradley v. Anderson, 5 Vt. 152; Linville v. Holden, 2 McArth. (D. C.) 329; Burns v. Jenkins, 8 Ind. 147; Taylor v. Turley, 33 Md. 500. Thus "current funds" cannot be shown to mean bank-bills. Marine Bank v. Berney, 28 Ill. 90. But the phrase may be shown to mean lawful money. Emigrant Co. v. Clark, 47 Iowa, 671. The latter phrase, however, cannot be changed by parol to lawful silver money. Alsop v. Goodwin, 1 Root, 196.

6. First Nat'l Bank v. Bynum, 84 N. Car. 24, where the note stated that pay-for indefinite expressions will be so construed as to sustain the note or bill,[1] while if absolutely nothing is said as to maturity it is by legal construction payable on demand, and valid and negotiable as a demand note.[2]

When, however, the time of payment is expressed, it must be pleaded and proved; failure so to do is a fatal variance.[3]

If a blank is left for the time, any bona fide holder has an implied authority to fill it up.[4]

Parol evidence is sometimes admitted to explain peculiar methods of stating time,[5] but a really careful examination of the instrument itself is usually sufficient.[6]

Bills and notes payable "on demand" are due immediately without grace, unless the rule is changed by statute.[7]

It is not necessary to express the time of payment by a date; a reference to any event, as death, certain to occur, is enough.[8]

ment might be demanded "at any time they (the payees) may deem this note insecure, even before the maturity of the same."

1. Thus "at sight, on demand" means on showing and demanding payment of the instrument. Dixon v. Nuttall, 6 C. & P. 320. "By Nov. 1st" means on that date. Preston v. Dunham. 52 Ala. 217; Massie v. Belford, 68 Ill. 290. So also does "on or before." Bates v. Leclair, 49 Vt. 229; Helmer v. Krolick, 36 Mich. 371; Jordan v. Tate, 19 Ohio St. 586; Curtis v. Horn, 58 N. H. 504.

2. Libby v. Nikelborg, 28 Minn. 38; Salinas v. Wright, 11 Tex. 572: Davenport Bank v. Price, 52 Iowa, 570; Meador v. Dollar Sav. Bank, 56 Ga. 604; Dodd v. Denny, 6 Oregon, 156; Keyes v. Fenstermaker, 24 Cal. 329; Huyck v. Meador, 24 Ark. 191; Porter v. Porter, 51 Me. 376; Jones v. Brown, 11 Ohio St. 601; Pindar v. Barlow, 31 Vt. 529; Cornell v. Moreton, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 12; Burthe v. Donaldson, 15 La. 382; Down v. Halling, 4 B. & C. 333.

A lost note is presumed to have been payable on demand. Tucker v. Tucker, 119 Mass. 79. But a postdated note silent as to maturity is not due until the date day. Mohawk Bank v. Broderick, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 304; 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 133.

3. Sebree v. Dorr, 9 Wheat. 558; McCreary v. Newberry, 25 Ill. 496.

4. Michigan Ins. Co. v. Leavenworth, 30 Vt. 11; McGrath v. Clark, 56 N. Y. 34.

Thus the insertion of the bracketed word has been upheld in Deshon v. Leffler, 7 Mo. App. 595. "Ninety (days) after date." Nichols v. Frothingham, 45 Me. 220. Six (months) after date. In these last cases recovery might have been had without filling the blanks at all. Pearson v. Stoddard, 9 Gray (Mass.), 199.

5. Kelsey v. Hibbs, 13 Ohio St. 340, holds that "payable on the 6/9 Jan." may be shown to mean that grace ended on the 9th. "Dec. next" has been explained as "Dec. instant." McCrary v. Caskey, 27 Ga. 54. And a trade term, as "when the lumber is run to market," is said to be explainable. Lamon v. French, 25 Wis. 37.

6. Thus the courts have said that "1 yr. Aug. 15 after date" means a year from the 15th of August next after the date of the note. Washington Co. Bank v. Jerome, 8 Mich. 490. Cf. Henschel v. Mahler, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 428; Wade v. Darrow, 15 Ind. 212.

7. Palmer v. Palmer, 36 Mich. 487; Caldwell v. Rodman, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 139; Wheeler v. Warner, 47 N. Y. 519.

"When called for"—Bilderback v. Burlingame, 27 Ill. 338—"On request"—Howland v. Edmonds, 24 N. Y. 307—"At such times as A may need for her support"—Corbett v. Stonemetz, 15 Wis. 187—are expressions equivalent to "on demand." And some phrases seeming to give the debtor an option as to paying at all have been similarly construed. "When both parties shall agree." Ramot v. Schotenfels, 15 Iowa, 457. "When convenient." Works v. Hershey, 35 Iowa, 340. "When my circumstances will admit." Salinas v. Wright, 11 Tex. 572.

8. Cooke v. Colehan, 2 Stra. 1217; Conn v. Thornton, 46 Ala. 587. Marriage, however, being uncertain is insufficient as a date. Beardsley v. Baldwin, 2 Stra. 1151. And the same is true of a person's coming of age, for he may die a minor. Goss v. Nelson, 1 Burr. 226.

A note is valid though payable in instalments,[1] and it is a valid proviso that the whole note fall due upon the maker's failure to pay a single instalment.[2]

A memorandum at the foot of a note or bill fixing the time of payment is a binding part of the contract,[3] and an indorsement may have the same effect;[4] but whether fixed in the body of the instrument or by indorsement or memorandum, no parol evidence is admissible to vary the written date of payment.[5]

(z) The Place of Payment Should be Certain.—Though it is usual to express in a note or bill the place where payment is to be made, it is not by common law essential to the negotiability or completeness of the instrument, and has been said to be "modal, forming no essential part of the contract."[6]

If, however, no place of payment is named, it is understood to be the place of residence of the maker or drawer,[7] who also is liable at that place if default is made at the place named in the note or bill.[8]

The place of payment is often expressed at the foot of the instrument by a memorandum which is considered no part of it, being merely for the holder's information;[9] and if a blank be left for the place of payment, a bona fide holder has implied authority to fill it up to suit his convenience.[10]

Though a place of payment may be agreed upon by parol,[11] that such agreement was omitted from the instrument by mistake and fraud cannot be so shown.[12]

It cannot be presumed that the place of payment is the place of date,[13] though some cases hold that in the absence of any express provision on this point the intent was prima facie to pay where the note was made.[14]

1. Wright v. Irwin, 33 Mich. 32; Rideout v. Woods, 30 N. H. 375.

2. Carlon v. Kenealy, 12 M. & W. 139; German Mut. Ins. Co. v. Franck, 22 Ind. 364. But no such proviso can be proven by parol. Blakemore v. Wood, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 470. Cf. Mayor v. City Bank, 48 Ga. 584; Sea v. Glover, 1 Bradw. (Ill.) 335.

3. Thus a mem. stating "one half to be paid in 12 months, balance in 24 months" will control, though the note be drawn at one day. Heywood v. Perrin, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 228. Cf. Franklin Sav. Inst. v. Reed, 125 Mass. 365; McCalla v. McCalla, 48 Ga. 503.

4. Round v. Donnel, 5 Kans. 54.

5. Eaton v. Emerson, 14 Me. 335; Graves v. Clark, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 183; Self v. King, 28 Tex. 552; Walker v. Clay, 21 Ala. 797.

6. Wolcott v. VanSantvoord, 17 Johns. 254; Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361; Craig v. Price, 23 Ark. 633; Holtz v. Boppe, 37 N. Y. 634; Kendall v. Galvin, 15 Me. 131.

7. Mitchell v. Baring, 10 B. & C. 4; 4 C. & P. 35.

8. Freese v. Brownell, 6 Vr. (N. J.) 285. So also of an indorser. Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20; Hicks v. Brown, 12 Johns. 142.

9. American National Bank v. Bangs, 42 Mo. 450.

Yet the intention with which such memorandum was made is for the jury's consideration. Tuckerman v. Hartwell, 3 Me. 147. And its addition has been held an alteration discharging an accommodation indorser. Woodworth v. Bank of America, 19 Johns. 391; Simpson v. Stackhouse, 9 Pa. St. 186; McCoy v. Lockwood, 71 Ind. 319.

10. McGrath v. Clark, 56 N.Y. 34; Marshall v. Drescher, 68 Ind. 359; Shepard v. Whetstone, 51 Iowa, 457.

11. Pearson v. Bank of Metropolis, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 89; Meyer v. Hibsher, 47 N. Y. 265.

12. Spitler v. James, 32 Ind. 202; Specht v. Howard, 16 Wall. 564.

13. Taylor v. Snyder, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 145; Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361; Pierce v. Whitney, 29 Me. 188.

14. Bullard v. Thompson, 35 Tex. 313,

If a note is payable at two or more places the choice is with the maker,[1] but when expressly payable at "any bank," or "either bank," in a given city, the holder may lawfully demand payment at the institution he selects.[2]

(j) The Amount to be paid Must be Certain.—It is necessary that a negotiable note or bill state with certainty the amount to be paid upon it. Thus a promise to account for proceeds[3] is not a good note, nor an order for "whatever you may collect for me" a good bill.[4]

A promise to pay a fixed sum, subject "to deductions" for some cause stated in the writing, is uncertain,[5] and a note stating on its face that it was collateral to a certain draft has been held within the rule and therefore not negotiable.[6]

If, however, the amount to be paid can be certainly ascertained, it is enough,[7] nor will mere clerical errors vitiate.[8]

While it is usual to express the amount payable both in letters and figures, the common law does not require it.

If there is a difference between the written amount and the figures, the writing controls;[9] and if figures only are used, with the place for the written amount blank, the holder can fill up the blank to correspond with the figures.[10]

7. Lex Loci Contractus.—Bills and notes, being merely written evidences of contracts, are in general governed by the law of the place where they are made, unless it is against the morals or policy of the forum to enforce such law.[11]

The liability of the maker of a note[12] or the drawer of a Orcutt v. Hough, 54 N. H. 472; Picketts v. Pendleton, 14 Md. 320.

But even if a note be "negotiable and payable" at a given place, it may be negotiated elsewhere. Schoharie Co. Bank v. Bevard, 51 Iowa. 257.

1. Wilcox v. Williams, 5 Nev. 206; Nomack v. Jenkins, 17 Ind. 137.

2. Allen v. Avery, 47 Me. 287; Boit v. Carr, 54 Ala. 112; Brickett v. Spalding, 33 Vt. 107.

3. Fiske v. Witt, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 83.

4. Legro v. Staples. 16 Me. 252. To the same effect, Stillwell v. Craig, 58 Mo. 24; Gaar v. Louisville Banking Co., 11 Bush (Ky.), 180; Hasbrook v. Palmer, 2 McL. (U.S.) 10; Jones v. Simpson, 2 B. & C. 318.

5. Barlow v. Broadhurst, 4 Moore, 471; Cushman v. Haynes, 20 Pick. 132.

So, too, is a note payable by a sum smaller than its face, if such sum is offered before a given time. Fralick v. Norton, 2 Mich. 130. See contra, Green v. Austin, 7 Iowa, 521.

6. American National Bank v. Sprague, 14 R. I. 410.

7. As where the promise was to pay a certain amount per acre for land. Smith v. Clopton, 4 Tex. 109; Knight v. Jones, 21 Mich. 161.

8. As "fife hundret" for five hundred. Ohm v. Young, 63 Ind. 432. Or the omission of a currency designation, as "dollars" or "pounds." Harman v. Howe, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 677; McCoy v. Gilmore, 7 Ohio, 268; Coolbroth v. Purinton, 29 Me. 469; Morrill v. Handy, 17 Mo. 406; Northrop v. Sanborn, 22 Vt. 433; Beardsley v. Hill, 61 Ill. 354; Petty v. Fleishel, 31 Tex. 169.

9. Payne v. Clark, 19 Mo. 152; Mears v. Graham, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 144.

But the question was left to the jury as one of intention in Riley v. Dickens, 19 Ill. 30.

10. Norwich Bank v. Hyde, 13 Conn. 279; Henderson v. Bondurant, 39 Mo. 369; Boyd v. Brotherson, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 93.

11. 1 Daniel on Neg. Inst. 721; Story Conf. of Laws, § 242.

Thus a mortgage given to secure a debt arising in New York, incurred in violation of the New Jersey statutes against stock-gambling, will not be enforced by a New Jersey court. Flagg v. Baldwin, 11 Stew. (N. J.) 219; 1 Randolph on Com. Paper, § 21.

12. Davis v. Clemson, 6 Mc. L. (U. S.) 622.

bill,[1] the formalities attending the execution of either,[2] and their validity[3] and effect[4] when completed, all depend upon the lex loci contractus.

In like manner the law of the place of acceptance or indorsement governs the rights and liability of an acceptor[5] or indorser.[6]

The application of these rules is difficult, because it is often hard to ascertain what the place of the contract is.[7]

It may, however, be asserted as settled that the place of a contract evidenced by a note or bill depends not upon where it is written, signed, or dated, but upon the place where it is delivered as consummating the bargain.[8]

From the date of a note, however, the place of delivery and therefore of the contract is often inferred.[9]

1. Thorp v. Craig, 10 Iowa. 461.

2. Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. 266; Evans v. Anderson, 78 Ill. 558.

3. Woodruff v. Hill, 116 Mass. 310; Armour v. McMichael, 7 Vr. (N. J.) 92.

4. Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134.

5. Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 1 Otto (U. S.), 406.

And a parol acceptance if good where made is good everywhere. Mason v. Dousay, 35 Ill. 424. Even if the drawee residing in a State where such acceptance is not good accepts by an agent in a State where it is. Bank of Rutland v. Woodruff, 34 Vt. 89; Bissell v. Lewis, 4 Mich. 450.

6. Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 15, where a blank indorsement, invalid in France, where it was made, was refused recognition in England.

7. What will be regarded as the place of a given contract depends upon the facts of each particular case. An agreement to sell liquor made in Massachusetts, the liquor to be delivered in New Hampshire, has been held a contract of the latter State. Nelson v. Stratton, 47 Me. 120. But a contract made in New Jersey for the sale of personalty then situated in another State is to be interpreted by the laws of New Jersey. Dacosta v. Davis, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 319.

That a note given in New Hampshire is secured by a mortgage in another State makes no difference. Chase v. Dow, 47 N. H. 405. See DeWolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 367.

Notes duly accepted in one State and discounted in another in violation of the usury laws of the latter State are contracts of that latter State. Akers v. Demond, 103 Mass. 318; and see Sands v. Smith, 1 Neb. 108; Bank of Ga. v. Lewin, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 340.

But notes signed and made payable in Kentucky, but delivered by mail to the payees in Boston, are Kentucky contracts. Shoe & Leather Nat. Bk. v. Wood, 8 N. Eastn. Repr. (Mass.) 753.

8. 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. 724; Jewell v. Wright, 30 N. Y. 259; Bell v. Packard, 69 Me. 105; Gallaudet v. Sykes, 1 McArth. (D. C.) 489; Lawrence v. Bassett, 5 Allen (Mass.), 140; Gay v. Rainey, 89 Ill. 221.

Thus a note drawn and dated in Maryland but handed to a vendor of goods in New York in payment for the goods is a New York contract. Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295.

So a note signed in blank and sent to a foreign State to be filled up is a contract of the State where it is completed. Fant v. Miller, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 47.

But sureties and accommodation indorsers who sign after the completion of a note in another State than that where the note was finished will be bound according to the law of the latter State. Stanford v. Prueb, 27 Ga. 243; Davis v. Clemson, 6 McL. (U. S.) 622; Young v. Harris, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 556; Dickinson v. Edwards, 77 N.Y. 573; Tilden v. Blair, 21 Wall. U. S. 241.

9. Longer v. Washburn, 16 N. H. 134.

A bill dated in Philadelphia with day and year blank was sent abroad and the blanks there filled. Held, that the intention to make it a Pennsylvania contract was shown by the date. Lennig v. Ralston, 23 Pa. St. 137. Compare Tillotson v. Tillotson, 34 Conn. 335.

Where a note was really written in a State different from that of its date, and prescribed a rate of interest usurious in the State where written, the place of the contract was held to be that of the date, ut res valeat. Bullard v. Thompson, 35 Tex. 313. Compare Second Nat. Bank v. Smoot, 2 McArth. (D. C.) 371.

And as against the place of date it cannot be shown to defeat a bona fide holder

8. Lex Loci rei Sitae.—Since a mortgage is merely a collateral security for money loaned, a note is not necessarily governed by the law of the State containing the land mortgaged to secure the note,[1] but "when the money is employed on the land" the rule is reversed.[2]

Interest, however, is computed by the lex rei sitae,[3] no matter where the written contract was executed or delivered.[4]

9. Lex Loci Salutionis.—If any contract is expressly or by implication to be performed in a place other than that of the contract, the lex loci salutionis governs.[5]

Since payment of a note or bill is performance of the contract evidenced thereby, the instrument is governed by the law of the place where it is payable.[6]

The place of payment once ascertained, the law of that place will govern the indorsement[7] of notes and bills, the days of grace,[8] that the note or bill was usuriously negotiated in another State. Towne v. Rice, 122 Mass. 67; Barker v. Sterne, 9 Exch. 684.

And in general the place of date will be presumed to be the maker's or drawer's residence and the place of their contracts, unless the contrary is affirmatively shown. Hefflebower v. Detrick, 27 W. Va. 16.

And against an innocent holder the maker of a note will not be permitted to aver or prove that it was not made at the place of its date. Quaker City Nat. Bank v. Showacre, 26 W. Va. 48.

1. Cotheal v. Blydenburgh, 1 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 17; Chase v. Dow, 47 N. H. 405; Newman v. Kershaw, 10 Wis. 333; Coke v. Alden, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 350.

2. DeWolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 367; Story Conf. Laws, §§ 305-510.

3. A note held in Wisconsin and secured by mortgage of lands there may lawfully provide interest at a rate usurious in New York, where the note is payable. Lyon v. Ewings, 17 Wis. 63; Arnold v. Potter, 22 Iowa, 194; Goodrich v. Williams, 50 Ga. 425.

4. Chapman v. Robertson, 6 Paige (N. Y.), 627. Sed contra, Sands v. Smith, 1 Neb. 108.

5. "The general principle as to contracts made in one place to be performed in another is well settled; they are to be governed by the law of the place of performance." Per Taney, C. J., Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65; Allen v. Bratton, 47 Miss. 119; Fordyce v. Nelson, 91 Ind. 447.

When in a note by a resident of one State to a resident of a different State the place of payment was left blank, the question what was the place of performance was left to the jury. Shillito v. Reineking, 30 Hun (N. Y.), 345. But the place of performance once fixed, all parties are presumed to know that law. Freese v. Brownell, 6 Vr. (N. J.) 287.

6. Story on Prom. Notes, § 172; Murphy v. Collins, 121 Mass. 6; Allen v. Bratton, 47 Miss. 119; Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Campbell v. Nichols, 4 Vr. (N. J.) 81; Bright v. Judson, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 29.

But by stipulation of parties either the law of the place of making a payment may govern. Arnold v. Potter, 22 Ia. 194; Pomeroy v. Ainsworth, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; and Vliet v. Camp, 13 Wis. 198, where the rate of interest of the place of making, which was usurious by the law of the expressed place of payment, was agreed upon and upheld.

If parts of the contract are to be performed in different States, each portion may be governed by its own law; e.g., the maker's liability was ruled by the law of the place where he made the note payable, and that of an accommodation indorser for the payee by the law of the place of indorsement, in Greathead v. Walton, 40 Conn. 226. See also Young v. Harris, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 556.

7. Lebel v. Tucker, L. R. 3 Q. B. 77.

Even though after indorsement the note be sent to a foreign State to be delivered in payment for merchandise. Lee v. Selleck, 33 N. Y. 615; and see Woodruff v. Hill, 116 Mass. 310.

8. Smith v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 29 Ind. 158.

and interest [1] to be allowed upon them, and the currency[2] in which they must be paid.

In like manner, the necessity of notices of dishonor,[3] and the sufficiency of such notices if sent, depend on the lex loci salutionis.

If the place of payment of a note or bill is mentioned in the instrument itself, no parol evidence is admissible to show that some other place was really agreed upon ;[4] but if it is not mentioned, the presumption as to notes is that the place of date is the place of payment ; [5] and as to bills, that the drawee's address [6] or residence [7] is such place.

10. Lex Fori.—It is perfectly well settled that the remedy for the enforcement of all contracts, including of course those evidenced by notes and bills, is governed by the law of the forum invoked.[8]

The lex fori also determines the proper person to bring the suit,[9] the competency of the witnesses produced,[10] and the admissibility of all evidence [11] offered, as well as the time within which the action must be begun.[12]

1. Jewell v. Wright, 30 N. Y. 259; Arnold v. Potter, 22 Iowa, 194; Bank of Illinois v. Brady, 3 McL. 268; Campbell v. Nichols, 4 Vr. (N. J.) 81.

Thus a bill may be drawn on a place where the rate of interest is such as would be usurious at the place of making, yet the higher rate be enforced at the place of drawing. Lines v. Mack, 19 Ind. 223. But a mere cover for usury, as a bill void where made, will be held void everywhere. Mix v. Madison Ins. Co., 11 Ind. 117; Tilden v. Blair, 21 Wall. 241. But in New York the place where the note or bill is negotiated, and therefore has its inception, governs. Dickinson v. Edwards, 77 N. Y. 573.

2. Benners v. Clemens, 58 Pa. St. 24.

3. Horne v. Rouquette, L. R. 3 Q. B. 514.

But an indorser will not be discharged by a notice bad in France, where given, but good in New York, the place of the indorser's residence. Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. 439.

4. Frazier v. Warfield, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 220. Sed contra, Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361.

5. Short v. Trabue, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 299; Backhouse v. Selden, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 581; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285.

6. Lizardi v. Cohen, 3 Gill (Md.). 430; Worcester Bank v. Wells, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 107.

Upon a general acceptance, the place of actually making it governs. Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 262.

7. Don v. Lippman, 5 Cl. & Fin. 12.

8. Thus, whether "debt" or assumpsit is the proper action—Bank of U. S. v. Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361—whether arrest is proper or not—Shaw v. Harvey, M. & M. 526—and generally all questions of practice and procedure, are settled by the law of the place where suit is brought. See, generally, Bulger v. Roche, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 36; Porter v. Munger, 22 Vt. 191; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338; Taberrer v. Brentnall, 3 Harr. (Md.) 262; Goodman v. Munks, 8 Port. (Ala.) 84; Armour v. McMichael, 7 Vr. (N. J.) 92.

That citizens of different States are involved makes no difference. Williams v. Haines, 27 Ia. 251. And every court will decide for itself as to its own jurisdiction. Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217. And the extent to which it will afford relief. Steele v. Curle, 4 Dana (Ky.), 381; Porter v. Munger, 22 Vt. 191.

9. Thus, at the place of the contract, the real party in interest may be the proper plaintiff, e.g., a transferee without indorsement, while the law of the forum may compel the transferror to sue as use plaintiff. Foss v. Nutting, 14 Gray (Mass.), 484; Pearsall v. Dwight, 2 Mass. 84.

10. Bain v. White Haven, etc., R. Co., 3 H. L. Cas. 1.

Thus, a convict may be admitted to testify, though disqualified where the note in suit was made or payable. Sims v. Sims, 75 N. Y. 466.

11. Downer v. Cheesebrough, 36 Conn. 39, where the intent of a blank indorsement was shown by parol, in violation of the law of New York, where the note was payable.

12. McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312; Atwater v. Townsend, 4 Conn.

11. Manner of Execution.—(a) Drawer or Maker must be Clearly Indicated.—It must appear from the note or bill itself by whom the instrument is drawn or made; the usual and proper method of effecting this is by signature at the foot, but at common law signing, though in the body of the instrument, is enough.[1]

(b) By Partners.—A partnership note should be signed by the firm name if the firm is to be bound;[2] if signed by the partners with their individual names it is no evidence of a partnership debt.[3]

But since every partner has prima facie equal power, a note signed with the firm name, though made by a single partner, is presumably a firm note.[4]

That the firm name does not contain all the partners' names makes no difference; all alike are bound.[5]

A partner may sign so as to bind the firm, though he vary slightly from the ordinary method of signature.[6] The question has been said to be simply one of intent.[7]

(c) By Agents and Officials.—The rule is generally that unless the principal for whom the agent acts appears upon the face of the instrument which the agent signs, the agent executing it will be held individually liable as upon his own contract,[8] while the 47; Ruckmaboye v. Mottichund, 8 Moo. P. C. 4.

Suit may even be brought after the Statute of Limitations of the place of contract or payment has barred an action there. Putnam v. Dike, 13 Gray (Mass.), 535; Power v. Hathaway, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 214; Brown v. Parker, 28 Wis. 21. Or it may be barred, though where the note was made there was no Statute of Limitations at all. Nicolls v. Rodgers, 2 Paine (U. S.), 437, holding that U. S. courts will apply the statute of the State where they are sitting. But some courts hold that the law of the debtor's domicile will govern the forum, if proved as a fact. Wernse v. Hall, 101 Ill. 423; Goodman v. Munks, 8 Port. (Ala.) 84.

1. Thus "I, A. B., promise" has been upheld. May v. Miller, 27 Ala. 515.

Though an assumed name signed to a note—Melledge v. Boston Iron Works, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 158—or an initial signature —vide ante § 5 (a)—will bind the real maker, such a subscription as "A. B. or else B. C." will not make a note at all, for it leaves the real maker uncertain, yet clearly indicates that two are not to be held. Ferris v. Bond, 4 B. & Ald. 679.

2. 1 Randolph on Comm. Paper, p. 177; 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. p. 291.

3. Gay v. Johnson, 45 N. H. 587.

But slight evidence will rebut the prima facie presumption that it is not a firm note. Richardson v. Huggins, 23 N. H. 106; McGregor v. Cleveland, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 475. But if men about to form a partnership sign a note jointly and then actually become partners, the instrument becomes a firm note. Littner v. Whitlock, 88 Ill. 513.

4. Whitaker v. Brown, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 507; Carrier v. Cameron, 31 Mich. 373; Hamilton v. Summers, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1851; Manning v. Hayes, 6 Md. 5; Adams v. Ruggles, 17 Kans. 237.

So with a firm indorsement. Morehead v. Gilmore, 77 Pa. St. 118. And even when there is no partnership, B.'s signing a note "A. & Co." with A.'s knowledge will bind both. Smith v. Hill, 45 Vt. 90.

5. Voorhees v. Jones, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 270.

For many partners may use one man's name for the firm style. Lloyd v. Ashby, 2 B. & Ad. 29; Macklin v. Crutcher, 6 Bush (Ky.), 401.

6. Thus "A. B. for A. B. C. & Co." has been held a firm signature. In re Clarke, 14 M. & W. 469. And that a partnership name concludes a note beginning "I promise" makes the instrument none the less a firm promise. Doty v. Bates, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 544. But the signature "J. B. & Co." has been held invalid to bind the firm of J. B. Kirk v. Blurton, 12 L. J. Ex. 117; and see Norton v. Seymour, 3 C. B. 792; Faith v. Richmond, 11 Ad. & E. 339.

7. Stephens v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 513; Brannon v. Hursell, 112 Mass. 63; Sherwood v. Snow, 46 Iowa, 481.

8. Thus a vendor's agent took a note payable to himself for merchandise sold, principal will not be liable, though he admits the agent's authority.[1] (See title AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 388 et seq.)

The rule as to public officers is that, in whatever way they sign obligations in their official capacity, they are not individually liable, the credit being presumably given to the government they represent. It is even unnecessary to add any title to the officer's signature.[2]

Though, where the principal is unrevealed, the mere addition to an agent's signature of the word "agent" will not avail to relieve him of personal liability;[3] an exception to the rule is made in favor of the custom of banks in using the word "cashier." A cashier is an agent of the bank employing him, but paper indorsed to or payable to "A. B., Cashier" is the property of the bank.[4]

A note or bill signed by an individual who adds to his name the title "administrator," "executor," or "guardian" will be considered his personal contract, and the addition a mere descriptio personæ.[5] indorsed it to his principal, and was held on the indorsement. Henback v. Mollman, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 227.

The knowledge of all parties that the maker of a note is merely an agent makes no difference. French v. Price, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 13; s. p., Bult v. Morrell, 12 Ad. & El. 750; Bars v. Randall, 1 Minn. 404; Graham v. Campbell, 56 Ga. 258; Hancock v. Fairfield, 30 Me. 299; Snelling v. Howard, 51 N. Y. 373; Stackpole v. Arnold, 11 Mass. 27.

Though the agent had express authority to make the note or bill—Bradlee v. Boston Glass Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 347—and the moving consideration be solely for the principal's benefit—Snow v. Goodrich, 14 Me. 235; Crum v. Boyd, 9 Ind. 289—the agent is still liable unless the principal's name appear.

1. Brown v. Parker, 7 Allen (Mass.), 337.

But if he ratifies the agent's act he may be held on the note. Paul v. Berry, 78 Ill. 158; First Nat. Bank v. Gay, 63 Mo. 33. And Judge Parsons thinks at all events on the original contract. 1 Pars. Notes & Bills, 93; and see Mechanics' Bank v. Bank of Columbia, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 326, where parol evidence was admitted to reveal and hold to liability the principal.

2. Amison v. Ewing, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 366; Hodgson v. Dexter, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 345; Gidley v. Palmerstone, 7 Moo. 91.

Fraud, however, will render the official liable. Freeman v. Otis, 9 Mass. 272. And so will exceeding his authority in attempting to bind his government. Savage v. Rix, 9 N. H. 263.

3. Manufacturers' Bank v. Follett, 11 R. I. 92; Bartlett v. Hawley, 120 Mass. 92; Anderton v. Shoup, 17 Oh. St. 125; Bank v. Cook, 38 Ohio St. 442; Pentz v. Stanton, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 271; Hall v. Bradbury, 40 Conn. 32.

The rule is the same as to the words "treasurer," "trustee," "secretary," etc. Trustees v. Rautenberg, 88 Ill. 219; Conn v. Scruggs, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 567.

Each word cited is merely descriptio personæ, and may be erased without material alteration. Thackera v. Hanson, 1 Cal. 365. But a promise "as trustees and not individually" has been held to convey no personal liability. Shoe, etc., Bank v. Dix, 123 Mass. 148

4. First Nat. Bank v. Hall, 44 N. Y. 395; Folger v. Chase, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 63.

5. So held where the signature was "E. F. A., executrix of the estate of J. S. A." Higgins v. Driggs, 21 Fla. 103; s. p., Livingston v. Taussen, 21 La. Ann. 286; Yerger v. Foote, 48 Miss. 62; Christian v. Morris, 50 Ala. 585; Kessler v. Hall, 64 N. Car. 60; Plimpton v. Goodell, 126 Mass. 119; Harrison v. McClelland, 57 Ga. 531; Comthwaite v. First Nat'l Bank, 57 Ind. 276; Hostetter v. Hoke, 17 Kans. 81; McGrath v. Barnes, 13 S. Car. 328; Gregory v. Leigh, 33 Tex. 813; Tassey v. Church, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 346; Nelson v. Serle, 4 M. & W. 799.

And the estate represented by the signer is not liable, though the executor may claim to be reimbursed upon the settlement of his accounts. Peter v. Beverly, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 532.

If, however, the promise to pay is expressly "out of the estate" represented,

If a note intended to bind a corporation or association be signed with the principal's name, it is the contract of the principal, though the name of the agent also appear;[1] but the mere insertion of the principal's name either in the body of the instrument or the signature will not make the contract even prima facie that of the principal.[2]

Courts, however, have been acute to discover an intent to bind the principal in such cases. It has often been inferred from the use of a corporate seal,[3] or of paper marked with a corporate name or place of business,[4] or because the promise was "on behalf of"[5] or "on account of" a company or association.[6]

(d) Joint and Several Notes.—A note signed by several makers

the rule is otherwise. Studebaker Mfg. Co. v. Montgomery, 74 Mo. 101.

And a promise as executor or guardian will not bind the signer personally. East Tenn. Iron Mfg. Co. v. Gaskell, 2 Lea. (Tenn.), 742; Ashby v. Ashby, 7 B. & C. 446.

1. Thus a note signed "St. bt. 'Ben Lee' & Owners, by W. R., Capt." will bind the owners. Sanders v. Anderson, 21 Mo. 402. And "for the M. Iron Works, A. B. Prest., C. D. Sec'y," is the signature of the Iron Works. Roney v. Winter, 37 Ala. 277. Cf. Aiken v. Marine Bank, 16 Wis. 713; May v. Hewitt, 33 Ala. 161; Castle v. Belfast Foundry Co., 72 Me. 167; Walker v. Bank of State of N. Y., 9 N. Y. 582; Whitney v. Stowe, 111 Mass. 368.

While unless the agent's name distinctly appears as a party to the instrument, he cannot be held liable upon it and is not even a necessary party to a suit upon it. Texas Land & Cattle Co. v. Carroll, 63 Tex. 48.

Of course this rule does not affect the principal's right to repudiate the authority of the agent to sign. Hall v. Auburn Turnpike Co., 27 Cal. 255.

2. But it cannot be said that the authorities are uniform. In Barker v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 94, the promise was by "I, J. F., President of the M. I. Co.;" in Powers v. Briggs, 79 Ill. 493, "We, the Trustees of the P. Church;" in Dutton v. Marsh, L. R. 6 Q. B. 361, "We, the Directors of the A. B. Co.:" and in each case the signers, who had subscribed nothing but their names, were held personally liable. S. p., Packard v. Nye, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 47; Davis v. England, 141 Mass. 587; Check v. Trevett, 20 Me. 462; Hypes v. Griffin, 89 Ill. 134. In Mears v. Graham, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 144, the signers were held individually though they made and signed as "Trustees of the M. E. Church." Sed contra, Newmarket, etc., Bank v. Gillet, 100 Ill. 254; Simpson v. Garland, 72 Me. 40; Bingham v. Stewart, 13 Minn. 106.

And where a note was signed "A., B., Trustees of the B. Society," the mention of the society did not prevent A. and B. being personally held. Brockway v. Allen, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 40. Though the consideration flowed directly to the company or association the signers acted for. Fiske v. Eldridge, 12 Gray (Mass.), 474; Hayes v. Brubaker, 65 Ind. 27; Fowler v. Atkinson, 6 Minn. 578; Chamberlain v. Pacific Wool, etc., Co., 54 Cal. 103; Scott v. Baker, 3 W. Va. 285; Sumwalt v. Ridgway, 20 Md. 107; McClellan v. Robe, 93 Ind. 298, 1 Pars. Notes and Bills, 168, maintains the opposite rule, citing Safford v. Wyckoff, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 442; but see 1 Rand. Com. Paper, p. 195.

3. Means v. Swormstedt, 32 Ind. 87, where the note began "We promise," was signed "A. B., Sec'y," and was held to bind the company whose seal was attached, and whose secretary A. B. was. See Hood v. Hallenbeck, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 362; Aggs v. Nicholson, 1 H. & N. 165.

4. Carpenter v. Farnsworth, 106 Mass. 561, where one signed as treasurer on paper bearing the name "Ætna Mills." See Olcott v. Tioga R. Co., 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 179 and 27 N. Y. 546.

5. "On behalf of D. M. Co. I promise," signed "A. B., Supt." Jones v. Clark, 42 Cal. 180.

6. Lindus v. Melrose, 3 H. & N. 177. In Texas Land & Cattle Co. v. Carroll a distinction is taken between negotiable and non-negotiable instruments, holding that in suits on the latter signed by an agent parol evidence is admissible to show that the liability was incurred in the principal's business, and that he alone, therefore, should be held liable.

For a remarkably full citation of cases on agents' signatures, see title AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 385 et seq., and 1 Rand. Com. Paper, pp. 204-222.

is a joint note unless otherwise indicated;[1] but if beginning "I promise," several persons signing it, it is joint and several;[2] nor does the addition of the word "surety" to the signature of some make any difference in their liability to the holder.[3]

(e) The Payee should be Named or Indicated.—While it is better to plainly name the payee of a note, if the person to whom the amount promised is due can be learned it is enough;[4] and a renewal note made after the payee's death has been held enforceable by his estate, though plainly a valid promise cannot be made to one deceased.[5]

Though no person or corporation be named at all to receive payment, notes have been sustained upon parol evidence showing the persons meant.[6]

That the payee or drawee is identical with the maker or drawer does not invalidate a note or bill;[7] nor does the fact that it is payable to several persons.[8]

If several persons are jointly named as payees the note or bill can only be negotiated by the indorsement of all;[9] but commercial paper payable in the alternative to one or some of many payees is not allowed.[10]

A note or bill is prima facie the property of the person named as payee, no matter what suffix or title may be added to that

1. Johnson v. King, 20 Ala. 270.

2. Rees v. Abbot, Cowp. 832; First Natl. Bank v. Fowler, 36 Ohio St. 524; Monson v. Drakeley, 40 Conn. 559; Ladd v. Baker, 26 N. H. 76; Maiden v. Webster, 30 Ind. 317; Ely v. Clute, 19 Hun (N. Y.), 35; Chaffee v. Jones, 19 Pick. (Mass). 263.

3. Keller v. McHuffman, 15 W. Va. 64; Dart v. Sherwood, 7 Wis. 523.

4. Thus, "Rec'd from A. B. $100, which I will repay," is a good note to A. B. as payee. Chitty on Bills, 161, 179; Ashby v. Ashby, 3 Moo. & P. 186; Cummings v. Gassett, 19 Vt. 308. And a new promise naming no one written on an old note sufficiently indicates the payee of the old note as the person to whom the money is due. Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Whitney, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 23; Leonard v. Mason, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 522.

5. Van Etten v. Hemann, 35 Mich. 513; Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204.

6 An "I O U." Kinney v. Flynn, 2 R. I. 329. A note to "Steamboat Inda and owners or order." Moore v. Anderson, 8 Ind. 18. Payees thus loosely described may always be identified by parol. Robertson v. Sheward, 1 Man. & G. 511; Buck v. Merrick, 8 Allen (Mass.), 123; Knight v. Jones, 21 Mich. 161; Adams v. King, 16 Ill. 109; Moody v. Threekeld, 13 Ga. 55; Cox v. Betzhoover, 11 Mo. 142.

7. Wildes v. Savage, 1 Story C. C. 29; Miller v. Weeks, 22 Pa. St. 89; Witte v. Williams, 8 S. Car. 290.

But such notes are incomplete until indorsed. Roby v. Phelon, 118 Mass. 541; Kayser v. Hall, 85 Ill. 513.

8. But if made, say, by A to A, B, and C, an action upon must run in the names of the co-payees only. Quisenbury v. Artis, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 30.

9. Ryhmir v. Feickert, 92 Ill. 305.

But the survivor may sue. Allen v. Tate, 58 Miss. 585. Yet not when payees were man and wife, and husband dying first made provision for his wife by will. The note then was held to belong to his estate. Sanford v. Sanford, 45 N. Y. 723.

One partner may, of course, indorse the firm name, but if that name is the name of a single man the note is prima facie his. Boyle v. Skinner, 19 Mo. 82.

10. A note to "A or B" is not a good promissory note. Carpenter v. Farnsworth, 106 Mass. 561; Walrad v. Petrie, 4 Wend. 575. In such cases "or" is sometimes construed "and," the note then being held joint. Parker v. Carson, 64 N. Car. 563; Knight v. Jones, 21 Mich. 161. And any payee may begin a joint suit. Westgate v. Healy, 4 R. I. 523; Spaulding v. Evans, 2 McL. (U. S.) 139; Willoughby v. Willoughby, 5 N. H. 244.

name ;[1] but the rule in the United States may be said to be that the real party in interest may sue on proving that the payee was his agent or officer.[2]

There is a difference, however, between public officers and private agents, when regarded as payees or indorsers, like that already stated when they are makers or drawers. A note to "A. B., Executor" may be sued on by A. B., the title being merely descriptive ;[3] but one to A. B., "Treasurer of the United States" must be sued out by the nation.[4]

Notes and bills are often made payable to bearer or "A. B. or bearer." Such instruments are prima facie the property of the holder,[5] are transferable by delivery, and if transferred by indorsement the indorsement need not be proved.[6]

An instrument payable to a fictitious name is in law payable to bearer,[7] and this although unintentionally the name of a real person has been used.[8]

1. Tooke v. Newman, 75 Ill. 215. And he may sue though described as "A. B., Agent." Toledo Agricultural Works v. Heisser, 51 Mo. 128; Walcott v. Standley, 62 Ind. 198; Anstell v. Rice, 5 Ga. 472; Whitcomb v. Smart, 38 Me. 264.

2. The corporation represented may sue on a note payable to "A. B., Treasurer." Babcock v. Beman, 11 N. Y. 200. "Or A. B., Agent." Bean v. Dolliff, 67 Me. 228; Natl. Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 116 Mass. 398; Black v. Enterprise Ins. Co., 33 Ind. 223; Eastern R. v. Benedict, 5 Gray (Mass.), 561. And the corporation intended may be shown by parol. Lovejoy v. Citizens' Bank, 23 Kans. 331.

"A. B., Cashier" is synonymous with the bank of which A. B. is that officer, and the bank may always sue. Bank of the State v. Muskinghum Branch, 29 N. Y. 619; Nave v. Hadley, 74 Ind. 155; Pratt v. Topeka Bank, 12 Kans. 570; Lacy v. Cent. Natl. Bank, 4 Neb, 179; Commercial Bank v. French, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 486; Stamford Bank v. Ferris, 17 Conn. 259. And the cashier may also sue. Johnson v. Catlin, 27 Vt. 87; Garton v. Union City Natl. Bank, 34 Mich. 279.

3. Moss v. Witcher, 35 Tex. 388; Carter v. Saunders, 2 How. (Miss.) 851; Speelman v. Culbertson, 15 Ind. 441; Cravens v. Logan, 7 Ark. 103; Thomas v. Rufe, 9 Mo. 373.

4. Dugan v. U. S., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 172. And see Crowell v. Osborne, 14 Vr. (N. J.) 335.

An assignee is regarded as a public officer, not personally liable on his indorsement. Bowne v. Douglass, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 312.

Notes payable to persons named as officials give notice of the fiduciary character of the payees, and an indorsee may find himself confronted with equitable defences. Renshaw v. Mills, 38 Mo. 201; Third Natl. Bank v. Lange, 51 Md. 138; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382. Sed contra, Bush v. Peckard, 3 How. (Del.) 385; Fletcher v. Shaumberg, 41 Mo. 501.

5. Ellis v. Wheeler, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 18; Eddy v. Bond, 19 Me. 461; McDonald v. Harrison, 12 Mo. 447.

6. Willbour v. Turner, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 526.

Nor need such a note be first delivered to the person named in it. Gage v. Sharp, 24 Ia. 15.

A note may even be made "to —— or bearer," and the blank need not be filled. Rich v. Starbuck, 51 Ind. 87. But one payable to "to A. B. bearer" is not negotiable and is payable to A. B. only. Warren v. Scott, 32 Iowa, 22.

7. Kohn v. Watkins, 26 Kans. 691; Farnsworth v. Drake, 11 Ind. 101; Phillips v. Im. Thurn, L. R. 1 C. P. 463.

So of a draft for "bills payable." Mechanics' Bank v. Straiton, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 365. And a note payable to "1658." Willets v. Phœnix Bank, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 121.

8. Foster v. Shattuck, 2 N. H. 446.

The holder may indorse the fictitious name. Blodgett v. Jackson, 40 N. H. 21. But a fraudulent indorsement is forgery. Chitty on Notes and Bills, 182; Callis v. Emmett, 1 H. Bl. 313.

The holder may aver and prove himself the person intended by the fictitious name, but the burden is upon him to do so. Lane v. Krekle, 22 Iowa, 399; Chenot v. Lefevre, 8 Ill. 637.

That a payee's name is misspelled is immaterial,[1] and generally any erroneous misstatement of name may be corrected by parol.[2] If several persons have the same name, and the note be payable to that name, possession of the instrument will confer prima-facie title.[3]

12. Negotiability and Manner of Transfer.—(a) Words of Negotiability.—In its proper commercial sense a "negotiable" instrument is one the assignee of which may bring action in his own name subject to no equities between prior parties.[4] In this sense negotiable is opposed to "non-negotiable," and it is now well settled that bills and notes may be either;[5] nor is there any presumption in favor of either class; and if suit is brought on a lost note, it lies upon the plaintiff to prove affirmatively to which class it belonged.[6]

The customary method of indicating negotiability is by the words "or order," "or bearer."[7] "To the order of A" is also common and valid.[8]

Notes payable to "A or bearer" are in most States transferable by delivery,[9] but in some by indorsement only.[10]

The character of an instrument may be changed by indorsement,

1. Colson v. Arnot, 57 N. Y. 253.

2. Taylor v. Strickland, 37 Ala. 642; Medway Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 10 Mass. 360; Jester v. Hopper, 13 Ark. 43.

Thus held where "Willis" was written for "Willison." Willis v. Barrett, 2 Stark. 29. "Charles V. Jacobs" for "Charles B. Jaques." Jacobs v. Benson, 39 Me. 132. And see Patterson v. Graves, 5 Blackf. 593; Hall v. Tufts, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 455. And a corporation may show by parol that it has changed its name since a note was made to it, and sue by its new name. Cumberland College v. Ish, 22 Cal. 640.

3. Stebbing v. Spicer, 8 C. B. 827.

If, however, it be intended to give a note to, say, "John P." and the name "Joseph P." (that of a real person) be inserted, "John P." cannot explain the matter by parol and sue on the note. Bolles v. Stearns, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 320. Cf. Rives v. Marrs, 25 Ill. 315.

A fraudulent indorsement by the person rightly named but not intended is forgery. Camp v. Tompkins, 9 Conn. 545.

4. And out of the assignment of negotiable paper grows "an orderly commercial relation and liability between the holder and all persons whose names are on the paper" 1 Rand. Com Paper, 265; Odell v. Gray, 15 Mo. 337.

5. Coursin v. Ledlie, 31 Pa. St. 506; Duncan v. Md. Sav. Bank, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 299.

And non-negotiable instruments between original parties are perfectly valid. Smith v. Kendall, 6 T. R. 123. And may be sued on as notes or bils. Downing v. Backenstoes, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 137. They are assignable, subject to defences between original parties. Dyer v. Horner, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 253; Wiggins v. Damrell, 4 N. H. 539. Even at law. Maxwell v. Goodrum, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 286. And in Georgia the assignee may sue in his own name. Goodman v. Fleming, 57 Ga. 350.

6. Yingling v. Kohlhass, 18 Md. 148.

7. But no particular words are necessary, and any equivalent for those given will be held sufficient. Raymond v. Middleton, 29 Pa. St. 529; Sinclair v. Johnson, 85 Ind. 527; Parker v. Riddle, 11 Ohio, 102; Bank of Sherman v. Apperson, 4 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 25. "A or holder" is enough. Putnam v. Crymes, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 9. And "executors, administrators, and assigns." Dutchess Co. Ins. Co. v. Hatchfield, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 675. Sed contra, In re Blakely Ordnance Co., L. R. 3 Ch. 154.

8. Huling v. Hugg, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 419; Howard v. Palmer, 64 Me. 86.

9. Cobb v. Duke, 36 Miss. 60.

Being exactly equivalent to those drawn to "bearer" simply. Bullard v. Bell 1 Mas. (U. S.) 252. Though early cases held them non-negotiable as containing no warrant to assign. Hopkins v. Seymour, 10 Tex. 202; Matthews v. Hall, 1 Vt. 317; Hutchings v. Low, 1 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 246; Tillman v. Ailles, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 373.

10. Garvin v. Wiswall, 83 Ill. 215; Avery v. Latimer, 14 Ohio, 542; Sprowl v. Simpkins, 3 Ala. 515.

e.g., a note payable to "order," if indorsed to "bearer," becomes transferable thereafter by delivery,[1] but the negotiable character of a note cannot be destroyed in the indorsement of a non-negotiable guaranty.[2]

Notes and bills are often expressed to be payable and negotiable at some specified bank. This phrase has no effect upon the commercial negotiability of the instrument.[3]

(b) Words expressing Consideration.—The phrase "value received," usually found in notes and bills, certainly imports a valid consideration;[4] but unless required by statute[5] they may be omitted, for the mere delivery of the instrument implies a consideration.[6]

But whether this usual phrase is employed or not, want of consideration may be always shown as between the original parties.[7]

(c) Power to Fill Blanks.—The delivery of a note or bill containing blanks impliedly authorizes the holder to fill them as he pleases, unless restrained by the instrument itself.[8] And this authority extends to all parts of the document delivered. E.g., the signature of the drawer after blank acceptance,[9] the drawee's name,[10] the payee's name,[11] the date,[12] the time of pay-

1. Shelton v. Sherfey, 3 Ia. 108.

But an indorsement "to A B" will not deprive a note of its negotiable character. Leavitt v. Putnam, 3 N. Y. 494. Otherwise of the indorsement, "This note not transferable." Friedman v. Wagner, 1 Tex. App. 734.

2. Upham v. Prince, 12 Mass. 14.

Nor can a guaranty be made negotiable by any indorsement. Leggett v. Raymond, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 639; Tuttle v. Bartholomew, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 452; McDoal v. Yeomans, 8 Watts (Pa.) 361.

3. 1 Edw. Notes & B. § 195.

They are simply payable by the bank out of makers' funds without set-off. Mandeville v. Union Bank, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 9. But in Kentucky no note is negotiable unless made payable at a bank. Stapp v. Anderson, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 398. And in Pennsylvania a note "payable and negotiable without defalcation at the K. Bank" has been held negotiable only at that bank. Raymond v. Middleton, 29 Pa. St. 529.

4. Delano v. Bartlett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 364; Hill v. Todd, 29 Ill. 101; Sawyer v. Vaughn, 25 Me. 337; Thompson v. Armstrong, 5 Ala. 383.

5. As in Missouri. Lowenstein v. Knopf, 2 Mo. App. 159.

6. Hughes v. Wheeler, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 83; Hook v. Pratt, 78 N. Y. 371; Kendall v. Galvin, 15 Me. 131; People v. McDermott, 8 Cal. 288; Hanley v. Lang, 5 Port. (Ala.) 154; Murry v. Clayborn, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 300.

Even where the note was left in an envelope to be opened after his death, and was intended as a gift to the payee. Dean v. Carruth, 108 Mass. 242. Sed contra, Harris v. Clark, 3 N. Y. 93. And that the intent to make the amount promised a gift destroyed the note. Williams v. Forbes, 114 Ill. 169.

7. Hill v. Buckminster, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 391; Schoonmaker v. Roosa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 301; Snyder v. Jones, 38 Md. 542; Sawyer v. Vaughn, 25 Me. 337; Raymond v. Sellick, 10 Conn. 479; Russel v. Hall, 10 Mart. (La.) 288.

8. Goodman v. Simonds, 20 How. (U. S.) 343; Androscoggin Bank v. Kimball, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 373; Redlich v. Dall, 54 N. Y. 234; Young v. Ward, 21 Ill. 223; Abbott v. Rose, 62 Me. 194; Lisle v. Rogers, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 537; Witte v. Williams, 8 S. Car. 290; Armstrong v. Harshman, 61 Ind. 52.

9. Moiese v. Knapp, 30 Ga. 492; Harvey v. Cane, 34 L. T. (N. S.) 64.

10. Wheeler v Webster, 1 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 1.

11. Even after indorsement. Armstrong v. Harshman, 61 Ind. 52. Or where there was an agreement to insert some other name than the one actually written in. Dinsmore v. Duncan, 57 N. Y. 573; Sittig v. Birkestack, 38 Md. 158; Weston v Myers, 33 Ill. 424; Van Etta v. Evenson, 28 Wis. 33; Brummel v. Enders, 18 Gratt. 873; Seay v. Bank of Tenn., 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 558; Schooler v. Tilden, 71 Mo. 580; Aiken v. Cathcart, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 133.

12. Mich. Ins. Co. v. Leavenworth, 30

ment,[1] the rate of interest,[2] the place of payment,[3] and the amount to be paid.[4] The power to fill blanks, however, does not extend to making additions[5] or erasures.[6] See ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS, vol. I, p. 515 et seq.

Blanks must be filled, if at all, within a reasonable time, and what time is reasonable is a question for the jury.[7] But instruments completed after indorsement,[8] maturity,[9] and maker's insolvency,[10] or any time before judgment,[11] have been upheld.

Blank indorsements are valid, and confer an implied authority to fill in any legal expression of the indorser's liability.[12]

(d) Agreements of Even Date.—Notes and bills are sometimes construed with reference to contemporaneous but separate agreements.[13] But such separate agreement, to be admissible, must have been made between the same parties.[14]

(e) Memoranda and Unusual Stipulations.—Memoranda when made at or before the completion of a note or bill are generally

Vt. 11; Fullerton v. Sturges, 4 Ohio St. 529; Mich. Bank v. Eldred, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 544; Page v. Morrell, 3 Keyes (N.Y.), 117; Schultz v. Payne, 7 La. Ann. 222.

1. McGrath v. Clark, 56 N. Y. 34; Conner v. Routh, 7 How. (Miss.) 176.

2. Visher v. Webster, 8 Cal. 109.

3 Redlich v. Dall, 54 N. Y. 234; Marshall v. Drescher, 68 Ind. 359; Shepard v. Whetstone, 51 Ia. 457.

4. Frank v. Lillienfried, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 377; Bank of Commonwealth v. Curry, 2 Dana (Ky.), 142; Griggs v. Howe, 31 Barb. 100

And as against a bona fide holder it is no defence that the authority has been exceeded and too large an amount inserted. Huntington v. Bank of Mobile, 3 Ala. 186; Waldron v. Young, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 777; Joseph v. Nat'l Bank, 17 Kans. 256; Abbott v. Rose, 62 Me. 194; Wilson v. Kinzie, 49 Ind. 35; Chemung Canal Bank v. Bradner, 44 N. Y. 680; Barker v. Stearne, 9 Exch. 684.

5. E.g., inserting "with interest" in the body of the note. Waterman v. Vose, 43 Me. 504. Adding "after maturity" to the interest clause. Coburn v. Webb, 56 Ind. 100.

The printed words "with interest at" found in a note do not create a blank, and to fill out the phrase is a material alteration. Holmes v. Trumper, 22 Mich. 427; s. p., Johnston v. Speer, 92 Pa. St. 227; Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Courtney, 60 N. Y. 134; Mahaime Bank v. Douglass, 31 Conn. 170.

6. Fontaine v. Gunter. 31 Ala. 258.

7. Temple v. Pullen, 8 Exch. 389.

8 Armstrong v. Harshman, 61 Ind. 52.

9. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Horsey, 2 Houst. (Del.) 385.

10. Fetters v. Muncie Nat'l Bank, 34 Ind. 251.

11. Rees v. Conococheague Bank, 5 Rand. (Va.) 326; Croskey v. Skinner, 44 Ill. 321.

But the authority to fill blanks terminates, it is said, with the maker's life. Canal, etc., R. Co. v. Armstrong, 27 La. Ann. 433; Michigan Ins. Co. v. Leavenworth, 30 Vt. 11.

12. Sweetser v. French, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 262.

But the insertion of a guaranty is not permissible. Hall v. Newcomb, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 426; Howe v. Merrill, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 80. Contra, Worden v. Salter, 90 Ill. 160; Chandler v. Westfall, 30 Tex. 475; Fuller v. Scott, 8 Kans. 25; Rivers v. Thomas, 1 B. J. Lea (Tenn.), 649. But the unauthorized guaranty will not release the indorser from his proper liability. Beattie v. Brown, 64 Ill. 360.

13. Thus a collateral mortgage will be construed as one instrument with the note it secures. Dobbins v. Parker, 46 Ia. 357. So of a trust deed securing notes. Brownlee v. Arnold, 60 Mo. 79; s. p., Meyer v. Graeber, 19 Kans. 165; Parks v. Cooke, 3 Bush (Ky.), 168; Richardson v. Thomas, 28 Ark. 387; Elliott v. Deason, 64 Ga. 63; Treadwell v. Archer, 76 N. Y. 196; Hill v. Huntres, 43 N. H. 480; Polo Mfg. Co. v. Parr, 8 Neb. 379; Goodwin v. Nickerson, 51 Cal. 166; Third Nat'l Bank v. Armstrong, 25 Minn. 531; Lawrence v. Griswold, 30 Mich. 410; Munro v. King, 3 Cal. 238; Rodgers v. Broadnax, 24 Tex. 538.

14. Thus a note by a contractor to his creditor cannot be construed with the written contract of the maker. Levally held to be a part of the instrument.[1] By such memorandum the time of payment may be fixed,[2] and the place of payment is very frequently indicated,[3] while the kind of currency[4] and rate of interest[5] intended are sometimes so stated. Memoranda stating that collaterals have been deposited to secure the note upon which the memorandum is written, or that the note itself is collateral, are in the U. S. part of the note, which may be rendered non-negotiable by them.[6]

A request to "charge" the amount of a draft to the drawer,[7] or a direction that a certificate of deposit be returned to the person issuing it, are immaterial additions which do not affect the negotiability of the instruments.[8]

Nor will a full statement of the consideration of the note or bill destroy its negotiability, if the consideration is executed.[9]

Stipulations to pay an attorney's fee in case suit is brought upon the instruments containing them are not uncommon, and no general rule can be laid down as to their effect.[10]

Rather from lack of authority than contradiction in cases the same doubt surrounds the effect of a warrant to confess judgments embodied in a note.[11]

v. Harmon, 20 Ia. 533; McDonald v. Elfes, 61 Ind. 279.

1. Dinsmore v. Duncan, 57 N. Y. 573; Shaw v. M. E. Soc., 8 Metc. (Mass.) 223; Falkenburgh v. Clark, 11 R. I. 278; Farmers' Bank v. Ewing, 78 Ky. 264; Corgan v. Frew, 39 Ill. 31; Krouskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis. 204.

2 Thus the memorandum "not to compel payment but to receive when convenient" will control the written due date. Barnard v. Cushing, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 230. Otherwise of a memorandum on the envelope containing the note. Central Bank v. Willard, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 151.

3. "Payable at the bank of A" written on the margin is part of the note. Woodworth v. Bank of America, 19 Johns. 391.

4. "To be paid in wheat, etc.," indorsed on the note is part of it, though it destroys the instrument as commercial paper. Polo Mfg. Co. v. Parr, 8 Neb. 379.

5. A note having "with lawful interest" written in the corner bears such interest. Warrington v. Early, 2 El. & B. 763.

6. Costelo v. Crowell, 127 Mass. 293; Benedict v. Cowden, 49 N. Y. 396.

In England a statement that collateral to the note has been put up is not considered a part of the note. Fancourt v. Thorne, 9 Q. B. 312.

7. Cornell v. Barnes, 26 Wis. 473; Petillon v. Lorden, 86 Ill. 361; Planters' Bank v. Evans, 36 Tex. 592.

8. Frank v. Wessels. 64 N. Y. 155; Cate v. Patterson, 25 Mich. 191.

So of words of thankfulness for the loan embodied in a note. Ellis v. Mason, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 295 n.

9. Wells v. Brigham, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 6, where a bill was drawn for an amount "due me for a wagon bought last spring." Cf. Shenton v. James, 5 Q. B. 199; Wright v. Irwin, 33 Mich. 32.

But otherwise when the consideration is executory, e.g. the future purchase of a machine. Hodges v. Hall, 5 Ga. 163.

10. Such agreements are valid and do not destroy negotiability. Davidson v. Vorse, 52 Iowa, 384; Hubbard v. Harrison, 38 Ind. 323; Gaar v. Louisville Banking Co., 11 Bush (Ky.), 180; Nickerson v. Sheldon, 33 Ill. 372; Peyser v. Cole, 19 Cent. L. J. (Oreg.), 236.

They do destroy negotiability. First Nat'l Bk. v. Jacobs, 73 Mo. 35; Johnston v. Speer, 92 Pa. St. 227; Maryland Fertilizing Co. v. Newman, 60 Md. 584; First Nat'l Bk. v. Larser, 18 Cent. L. J. (Wis.) 399; Jones v. Radatz. 27 Minn. 240; First Nat'l Bk. v. Bynum, 84 N. Car. 24.

They are even void as against public policy, being mere covers for usury. Bullock v. Taylor, 39 Mich. 137; Myer v. Hart, 40 Mich. 517; State v. Taylor, 10 Ohio, 378; Dorr v. Updike, 11 Neb. 95; Boozer v. Anderson, 42 Ark. 167.

11. It destroys negotiability. Sweeney v. Thickstun. 77 Pa. St. 131; First Nat'l Bk. v. Marlow, 71 Mo. 618. But a waiver of stay and exemption laws, etc., does not. Zimmerman v. Rote, 75 Pa. St. 188.

13. Delivery.—Generally.—A note or bill, however complete in appearance, takes effect only on delivery,[1] and the same is true of indorsement[2] and acceptance.[3]

While delivery will in general be presumed from possession,[4] no hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what will constitute a valid and sufficient delivery;[5] it is often a question of intent.[6]

Since the intent to deliver is necessary, if, for instance, the person named as payee should violently carry off the note given him for examination,[7] or the possessor of a sheet of paper bearing another's signature should fill it up as a note,[8] the apparent makers would not be liable.

Delivery to an agent of the payee or indorsee is sufficient,[9] even though such agent be an unauthorized one;[10] but to a mere stranger, e.g., one who discounts paper in which he is not named or intended as payee, a good delivery cannot be made.[11]

Bills and notes like other written contracts take effect from the time of delivery only,[12] which, however, is prima facie their date.[13] So an indorsement is presumed to have been made before maturity.[14]

A note or indorsement made and delivered on Sunday is, like any other Sunday contract, void; and it has been held that such

And so of a power to issue execution on non-payment. Fort v. Delee. 22 La. Ann. 181. While in Ohio the note remains negotiable, but not so the attached warrant of attorney; the payee only can take advantage of that. Osborn v. Hawley, 19 Ohio, 130. Cf. Cushman v. Welsh, 19 Ohio St. 536.

1. Howe v. Oned, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 1; Curtis v. Gorman, 19 Ill. 141; Thomas v. Watkins, 16 Wis. 549; Prather v. Zulauf, 38 Ind. 155.

2. Dana v. Norris, 24 Conn. 333; Richards v. Darst, 51 Ill. 140.

So, where a payee indorsed in blank and died, one taking the note from among his effects acquires no title. Foglesang v. Wickard, 75 Ind. 258.

3. Therefore an acceptance may be cancelled after it is written on the bill, and the acceptor will not be bound. Cox v. Troy, 5 B. & Ald. 474.

4. Kidder v. Horrobin, 72 N. Y. 150.

And when the paper was issued to bearer, the want of valid delivery will not be admitted as a defence as against a bona fide holder. Kinyon v. Wohlford, 17 Minn. 239.

5. It can be said, however, that physically handing it to some person is not necessary; mailing is sufficient. Kirkman v. Bk. of America, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 397; Mitchell v. Byrne, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 171. But intrusting it to an agent of the maker for delivery to payee—Muller v. Pondir, 55 N. Y. 325—or leaving it on the payee's desk—Kinne v. Ford, 52 Barb. 194—is not sufficient, unless the payee actually receives the note.

6. Worth v. Case, 42 N. Y. 362; Grimm v. Warner, 45 Iowa. 106.

7. Carter v. McClintock, 29 Mo. 464.

Or stolen from the maker. Hall v. Wilson, 16 Barb. 548—or obtained from him by any fraud—Taylor v. Atchison. 54 Ill. 196—unless he was guilty of negligence. Chapman v. Rose, 56 N. Y. 137.

8. Caulkins v. Whistler, 29 Iowa, 495; Shipley v. Carroll, 45 Ill. 285.

And because the intent must be that of the maker, no valid delivery can be made after the maker's death. Clark v. Sigourney, 17 Conn. 511. Nor in case of a partnership note after the dissolution of the firm. Gale v. Miller, 54 N. Y. 536.

9. Lysaght v. Bryant, 9 C. B. 46; Richardson v. Lincoln, 5 Metc (Mass.) 201; Bodley v. Higgins, 73 Ill. 375.

10. Bringing suit is a ratification. Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 686.

11. Prescott v. Brinley, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 233; First Nat. Bank v. Strang, 72 Ill. 559.

12. Baldwin v. Freydendall, 10 Bradw. (Ill.) 106; Lovejoy v. Whipple, 18 Vt. 379; Hill v. Dunham. 7 Gray (Mass.), 543.

13. Anderson v. Weston, 6 Bing. (N. Car.) 296.

14. Smith v. Edgeworth, 3 Allen (Mass.), 233.

instrument could not afterwards be ratified.[1] But a note dated on Sunday may always be shown to have been delivered on a week-day.[2]

There is no doubt that notes may be delivered conditionally[3] or in escrow,[4] and the maker held only upon the happening of the contingency; but the defence of an improper delivery or failure of the contingency under these circumstances, though good against the payee,[5] will not avail against a bona-fide holder for value.[6]

The defence of breach of condition or of escrow in delivery of the note may be proved by parol.[7]

(b) Of Sets of Bills.—All the parts of a set should be delivered together,[8] but the indorsement of one part transfers them all,[9] though if the parts be all indorsed to different parties, the indorser is liable on each,[10] nor does the payment of one part to an innocent holder under a forged indorsement relieve the acceptor from a second payment to the lawful holder of the other parts.[11]

14. Restrictions upon the Right of Making Notes and Bills.—(a) Civil Restrictions.—Any person who can lawfully make a contract may make a note or draw a bill, and rules regulating the validity of contracts generally are applicable to the interpretation of commercial paper.[12]

1. Day v. McAllister, 15 Gray (Mass.), 433. Contra, Love v. Wells, 25 Ind. 503; Clough v. Davis, 9 N. H. 500; Smith v. Case, 2 Or. 190. And see Winchell v. Carey, 115 Mass. 560.

2. Aldridge v. Branch Bank, 17 Ala. 45. And if delivered on Sunday, though dated on a week day, it is valid in the hands of a bona-fide holder. Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 439; Clinton Nat. Bank v. Graves, 48 Iowa, 228; Vinton v. Peck, 14 Mich. 287. If signed on Sunday, but delivered on a week day, it is valid in the payee's hand. King v. Fleming, 72 Ill. 21; Fretsch v. Heislen, 40 Mo. 555; Hilton v. Houghton, 35 Me. 143; Lovejoy v. Whipple, 18 Vt. 379. A note dated on Sunday is prima facie a Sunday contract. Sayre v. Wheeler, 31 Iowa, 112.

3. Benton v. Martin, 52 N. Y. 570; Sweet v. Stevens, 7 R. I. 375.

4. Couch v. Meeker, 2 Conn. 302; Taylor v. Thomas, 13 Kans. 217.

But not to the payee himself or his agent. Massmann v. Holscher, 49 Mo. 87; Johnson v. Branch, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 521.

If a promissory note placed in escrow, to be delivered upon the performance of conditions by the payee, is surrendered to him without the performance of the conditions, such surrender will not constitute a valid delivery. Stringer v. Adams, 98 Ind. 539.

5. Watkins v. Nash, L. R. 20 Eq. Cas. 262; McLean v. Nugent, 33 Wis. 353; Daniels v. Gower, 54 Ia. 319.

6. Vallett v. Parker, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 615; Fearing v. Clark, 16 Gray (Mass.), 474; Clarke v. Johnson, 54 Ill. 296. Contra, Chipman v. Tucker, 38 Wis. 43.

7. Watkins v. Bowers, 119 Mass. 383; Ricketts v. Pendleton, 14 Md. 320; Benton v. Martin, 52 N. Y. 570; Mosher v. Rogers, 20 Cent. L. J. (Ill.) 316.

And the declarations of the deceased depositary are evidence. Goodson v. Johnson, 35 Tex. 622. But some cases have rejected parol evidence even between the original parties, when the note was absolute in form. Massman v. Holscher, 49 Mo. 87; Roche v. Roanoke Seminary, 56 Ind. 198.

8. Story on Bills, § 67

9. Benj. Chalm. Dig. § 27; Walsh v. Blatchley, 6 Wis. 413.

10. 1 Daniel on Neg. Inst. 123; Wright v. McFall, 8 La. Ann. 120; Holdsworth v. Hunter, 10 B. & C. 449.

11. Cheap v. Harley, 3 T. R. 127.

12. The custom and convenience of merchants being the origin of exchange, it was formerly thought that none but traders could bind themselves by notes and bills. In England, this idea was early exploded. Fairley v. Roch Lutw. 891 (A.D. 1687). And in America it is doubtful if it ever prevailed. In many countries, however, the right of creating promissory paper is confined to the trad-

Those persons who from considerations of public policy are deemed civilly or politically incapable of making a valid contract are alien enemies, and to some extent felons, bankrupts, and governmental officers.

An alien enemy is "every resident of a hostile place or country, even though a subject" of the country of the forum.[1]

The war which gives rise to the relation of alien enemy need not be waged between independent nations. "A war may exist where one of the belligerents claims sovereign rights as against the other."[2] The principles of law on this point therefore apply in full force to the late Civil War in the United States.[3]

The general rule is that all contracts between alien enemies are void during the state of war,[4] although there are some exceptions, sustained by the necessity of every State protecting its own citizens.[5]

These principles are fully applicable to notes and bills, and the fact that the drawer,[6] payee or indorsee[7] of an instrument is an alien enemy will invalidate the paper, though not perhaps in the hands of an innocent holder for value.[8]

ing classes. See 1 Rand. Com. Paper, pp. 366–7.

Once made, however, the person drawing the bill or making the note is thereby estopped from contesting the capacity of the payee to receive and indorse the instrument. Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490; Camp v. Byrne, 41 Mo. 525; Nashua Fire Ins. Co. v. Moore, 55 N. H. 48; Brown v. Donnell, 49 Me. 421; Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 272. Even when the payee was fictitious. Lane v. Krekle, 22 Ia. 399. Or a foreign corporation doing business in defiance of a State statute. Shook v. Singer S. M. Co., 61 Ind. 520.

1. Wharton Conf. Laws, § 737 (a).

Thus an American domiciled in England is to home-keeping Americans an alien enemy during a war with England. The Francis, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 614. And so, as to Englishmen, is a British subject naturalized in a neutral State, but residing in a country at war with Great Britain. The Indian Chief, 3 C. Rob. 12; O'Mealey v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 482.

A corporation may be a alien enemy as well as an individual. Society for Propagation of the Gospel v. Wheeler, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 132.

2. Per Grier, J., in the Prize Cases, 2 Black (U. S.), 667.

3. Sanderson v. Morgan, 39 N.Y. 231; Montgomery v. United States, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 395; Hennen v. Gilman, 20 La. Ann. 240; Lacy v. Sugarman, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 354.

The war ended June 13, 1865, the day of the President's proclamation. Semmes v. City Ins. Co., 36 Conn. 543. But in South Carolina not until April 1st, 1866. Gooding v. Varn, Chase's Dec. 286.

But the act of attempted secession did not render citizens of the seceding States aliens before their endeavor; their alienage was reckoned only forward from that date. U. S. v. Boxes of Arms, 1 Bond, 446.

4. Scholefield v. Eichelberger, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 586; The Reform, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 617; Furtado v. Rogers, 3 Bos. & P. 191; Noblom v. Milbourne, 21 La. Ann. 641; Graham v. Merrill, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 622.

But a contract made to extend over a term of years is suspended, not annulled, by war for a shorter time. Hanger v. Abbott, 6 Wall. 540.

5. For example, contracts by a prisoner-of-war for necessaries. Story on Bills, § 101. Or a contract to pay for a license to prevent capture. Coolidge v. Ingler, 13 Mass. 26.

A special license to deal with alien enemies is valid, but must be affirmatively proved. In re Onachita Cotton, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 531.

6. Woods v. Wilder, 43 N. Y. 164, where the bill was drawn by a Georgian upon a New-Yorker after the outbreak of hostilities. Tarleton v. Southern Bank, 49 Ala. 229.

7. Craft v. United States, 12 Ct. Cl. 178; Billgerry v. Branch, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 393; Russell v. Russell, 1 McArth. (D. C.) 263.

8. Lacy v. Sugarman, 12 Heisk.

Felons and bankrupts have been regarded as incapable at least of taking or passing title by indorsement.[1] Their power to make notes and bills seems barely to have been considered.

The powers of governmental officers and agents are considered matters of public notoriety. The law defining those powers governs, no matter what the innocence of the taker and holder of apparently governmental notes or bills.[2] And such laws are strictly construed.[3]

(b) Natural Restrictions.—The property of idiots, imbeciles, lunatics, and even drunkards is preserved by the doctrine of law which pronounces their contracts certainly voidable, and in some cases absolutely void.

Generally the contracts of a lunatic are voidable merely,[4] but after inquisition duly found he can make no valid promise whatever.[5]

Yet as against an innocent holder for value, an inquisition finding the maker of a note to have been insane when he made it cannot be set up.[6]

An inquisition is not conclusive proof of insanity upon persons not parties to the proceedings,[7] but it is certainly strong evidence, (Tenn.) 354. permits the innocent holder to hold the instrument entirely free from its original taint, but Williams v. Mobile Savings Bank, 2 Woods (U.S.), 501, allows only the recovery of the amount actually paid. And see Morrison v. Lovell, 4 W. Va. 346.

But the making of an indorsement; though made in the enemies' lines is good, if it involves no transfer of funds to the enemies' country, but is a means of getting money into, e.g., the United States. Haggard v. Conkwright, 7 Bush (Ky.). 16; Morris v. Poillon, 50 Ala. 403. And a promise to pay made after the cessation of hostilities may be good. Ledoux v. Buhler, 21 La. Ann. 130.

1. Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & Ald. 258. But this case rests rather on the common-law doctrine of felony, involving forfeiture of goods.

A bankrupt may complete by indorsement a transfer made before petition filed. Hersey v. Elliot, 67 Me. 526.

But a bankrupt's check made but not presented before petition becomes void when the petition is filed. First Nat'l Bank v. Gish, 72 Pa. St. 13.

2. Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666, where an acceptance by "J. B. F., Sec'y of War" was held not to bind the United States.

3. Thus an authority to sell State bonds gives no right to sell on credit. State of Illinois v. Delafield, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 527.

4. Arnold v. Richmond Iron Works, 1 Gray, 434; Lilly v. Wagoner, 27 Ill. 395; Crouse v. Holman, 19 Ind. 30; Elston v. Jasper, 45 Tex. 409; Hovey v. Hobson, 53 Me. 451; Ingraham v. Baldwin, 9 N. Y. 45.

But on showing the lunacy a guardian may avoid the contract. Gibson v. Soper, 6 Gray (Mass.), 279. Or an heir or personal representative. Breckinridge v. Ormsby, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 236.

5. Nichol v. Thomas, 53 Ind. 42; Wadsworth v. Sharpsteen, 8 N. Y. 388.

6. Lancaster Co. Bk. v. Moore, 78 Pa. St. 407; Moore v. Hershey, 90 Pa. St. 196.

Yet the insanity of a surety is a defence against a bona fide holder. Van Patton v. Beals, 46 Iowa, 1877. And the least taint of fraud in the inception of the note will extend the defence to the maker. Sentance v. Poole, 3 C. & P. 1.

Even a bona fide holder cannot sustain an action against a lunatic accommodation indorser. Wisebach v. First Nat'l Bank, 97 Pa. St. 543. Or an imbecile who has indorsed for a wholly inadequate compensation. Jeneson v. Jeneson, 66 Ill. 259; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. 304.

It has even been held that a sane maker, as a defence to a suit by an indorsee, can set up the indorser's insanity. Burke v. Allen, 29 N. H. 106; Peaslee v. Robbins, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 164; Hannahs v. Sheldon, 20 Mich. 278.

7. Osterhout v. Shoemaker, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 516; Den v. Clark. 5 Halst. (N. J.) 217. But compare White v. Palmer, 4 and throws the burden of proving sanity upon the other side,[1] although usually sanity being the rule is presumed, and the burden is upon him who alleges lack of it.[2]

Drunkenness, unless of a kind far beyond occasional intoxication, is no defence to an action on a note or bill.[3]

But the fact that commercial paper has been made or transferred by one intoxicated will always cause the instrument to be viewed with suspicion, and be regarded as strong evidence of fraud.[4]

Where, however, the drunkenness is "excessive and absolute, so as to suspend the reason and create impotence of mind at the time of entering into the contract," [5] the drunkard with returning reason may avoid the effect of his promise.[6]

Habitual drunkards so found by inquisition are subject to the same rules of law as persons in like manner adjudged non compotes mentis.[7]

The burden of proving drunkenness is upon the party alleging it,[8] although as in the case of lunacy proof that the drunkard has been so found by inquisition is presumptive proof, and will shift the burden.[9]

(c) Legal Restrictions.—For the advantage of the persons restrained infants and married women are generally incapable of freely contracting and therefore of issuing valid and binding notes and bills, while corporations are subject to somewhat similar restraints, that their irresponsible power may be kept within limits.

As to infants, the rule is that their notes are voidable only,[10] and Mass. 150; Leonard v. Leonard, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 283; Wadsworth v. Sharpsteen, 8 N. Y. 388.

1. Hicks v. Marshall, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 327; Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371; McGinness v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 245; Ellars v. Mossbarger, 9 Bradw. (Ill.) 122.

But merely finding one insane creates no presumption that he was so when he made a certain note, the inquisition not alluding to that note. Smith v. Davis, 45 N. H. 566.

2. Jackson v. King, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 207.

But common report may rebut that presumption of sanity. Jackson v. Van Dusen, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 144; Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371.

3. Miller v. Finley, 26 Mich. 249; Bates v. Ball, 72 Ill. 108; Johns v. Fritchey, 39 Md. 258

4. Samuel v. Marshall, 3 Leigh (Va.), 567; Prentice v. Achorn, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 30; French v. Hickox, 8 O. 214; Pitt v. Smith, 3 Campb. 33.

And the fraud once established, the instrument so obtained is void even in the hands of a bona fide holder for value and before maturity. Gregory v. Frazer, 3 Campb. 454; Barrett v. Buxton, 2 Aik. (S. Car.) 167. Sed contra as to bona fide holders. Northam v. La Touche, 4 C. & P. 145; McSparran v. Neeley, 91 Pa. St. 17.

5. Cavender v. Waddingham, 5 Mo. App. 457.

It must temporarily resemble idiocy or insanity. Harbison v. Lemon, 3 Blackf. 51.

6. The contract is voidable only, not void. Joest v. Williams, 42 Ind. 565. Contra, Berkley v. Canon, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 136.

It can be ratified or rejected by the promisor when sober. L. R. 8 Exch. 132.

7. L'Amoureux v. Crosby, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 427; Clark v. Caldwell, 6 Watts (Pa.), 139.

8. Pitt v. Smith, 3 Campb. 33.

9. McGinness v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 245; Menkins v. Lightner, 18 Ill. 282.

Held conclusive in Devin v. Scott, 34 Ind. 67.

The question of drunkenness and its degree is always for the jury. Cummings v. Henry, 10 Ind. 109.

10. Trustees of La Grange Inst. v. An-may therefore be either avoided or ratified,[1] but without ratification such notes, even when given for necessaries, are no more than evidence of the value of the necessaries furnished.[2]

The acceptance of an infant is upon similar principles invalid,[3] and after action brought cannot be ratified,[4] though it may before.[5]

The indorsement of an infant is voidable,[6] but the liability of other parties to the instrument is not affected by the infant's personal disability.[7]

The defence of infancy is personal to the infant.[8] No one but himself and his representatives can raise it, and even his own false representations as to his age cannot take it from him.[9]

It has been shown that an infant's promises being voidable are capable of ratification, but that such ratification may be sufficient in law it must be "a promise to a party in interest or his agent, or at least an explicit admission of an existing liability from which a promise may be implied."[10]

Unless the new promise made after the infant comes of age amounts to an absolute promise to pay, it will not generally be considered a ratification.[11]

The ratification of an infant's note or other contract need not be in writing,[12] unless that formality be required by statute.[13]

derson, 63 Ind. 367; Thing v. Libbey, 16 Me. 55; Aldrich v. Graves, 10 N. H. 194; Font v. Cathcart, 8 Ala. 725; Everson v. Carpenter, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 419.

1. Lawson v. Lovejoy, 8 Me. 405; Cheshire v. Barrett, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 241.

2. Morton v. Steward, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 533; Ayers v. Burns, 87 Ind. 245.

But Bradley v. Pratt, 23 Vt. 378, holds that in such case a recovery may be had directly on the note.

3. Williamson v. Watts, 1 Campb. 552.

4. Thronton v. Illingworth, 2 B. & C. 824.

5. Hunt v. Massey, 5 B. & Ad. 902.

6. Semple v. Morrison, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 298.

7. Frasier v. Massey, 14 Ind. 382; Hastings v. Dallarhide, 24 Cal. 195.

But when the maker knows that an indorsee has wittingly derived title through a minor, and pays the indorsee, he has no defence to an action by the minor's guardian. Briggs v. McCabe, 27 Ind. 327. E converso, payment to the guardian will not be a defence against an innocent indorsee. Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 272.

8. Even a co-maker cannot use it. Taylor v. Dansby, 42 Mich. 82.

9. Fitts v. Hall, 9 N. H. 441; Jennings v. Rundall, 8 T. R. 335.

Unless by statute, as in Iowa R. C. 1880, § 2239.

But even then, if the other party was not misled by the infant's false statements, the plea of infancy is good. Bellar v. Marchant, 30 Iowa, 350.

10. Goodsell v. Myers, 3 Wend. (N.Y.) 479.

11. A promise to pay "as fast as he got able." Chandler v. Glover, 32 Pa. St. 509. Or "to take care that it was paid." Mawson v. Blane, 10 Exch. 206. Or to give "it attention, but not my first attention." Wilcox v. Routh, 12 Conn. 550. Are all insufficient. And see Smith v. Mayo, 9 Mass. 62; Hale v. Gerrish, 8 N. H. 374. But an absolute promise to "remit," without mentioning the amount, may be enough. Hartley v. Wharton, 11 Ad. & El. 934. And conduct often amounts to a ratification. E.g., sending an agent to get the note. Orvis v. Kimball, 3 N. H. 314. Retaining the goods for which it was given. Boyden v. Boyden, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 519. And an administration of an infant by retaining the goods his decedent bought may ratify the note given for them. Shropshire v. Burns, 46 Ala. 108.

12. Reed v. Boshear, 4 Sneed (Miss.) 118; West v. Penny, 16 Ala. 186.

13. As it is by New Jersey (1874, Rev. 446, § 7), Virginia (1873, Code, c. 140, § 1), Missouri (1879, R. S. § 2516), Maine (1871, R. S. c. 111, § 2), Kentucky (1881, G. S. c. 22, § 1). While in England the law

If the contract be disaffirmed when the infant comes of age, he must return if possible the consideration he received,[1] but this has been said not to be absolutely necessary.[2]

Though an infant may not make, he may take and sue on a note,[3] and if he is of a firm that own a note may sue with his partners.[4]

By common law the note or bill of a married woman is not merely voidable, but absolutely void.[5]

This rule has not been greatly relaxed in the United States, where most of the married women's acts have been construed to enable wives to hold and enjoy their separate property, and not to facilitate its transfer, at least by commercial contracts.[6] Therefore not only is a feme covert's accommodation note void,[7] but any promissory paper not made for the benefit of her separate property,[8] and that it was so made will not be inferred from the mere fact of her having a separate property.[9]

If husband and wife unite in giving a note, it is void as to the wife, if it would have been so had she signed alone.[10] There are decisions, however, giving women in the management of their now makes infants' contracts void, and incapable of ratification. 37 and 38 Vict. c. 62.

1. Heath v. West, 28 N. H. 101; Kilgore v. Jordan, 17 Tex. 341; Badger v. Phinney, 15 Mass. 359; Kitchen v. Lee, 11 Paige (N. Y.), 107; Bailey v. Bainberger, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 113.

2. Dill v. Bowen, 54 Ind. 204; Briggs v. McCabe, 27 Ind. 237.

3. Holliday v. Atkinson, 5 B. & C. 501.

4. Slocum v. Hooker, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 536.

And it has been said that if such firm made the note, he must be joined as a defendant pro formâ. Gibbs v. Merrill, 3 Taunt. 307.

5. Dandistel v. Beninghof, 71 Ind. 389; Kenton Ins. Co. v. McClellan, 43 Mich. 564; Griffith v. Clark, 18 Md. 457; Howe v. Wildes, 34 Me. 566; Pippen v. Wesson, 74 N. Car. 437; Hodges v. Price, 18 Fla. 342; Fry v. Hamner, 50 Ala. 52; Robertson v. Bruner, 24 Miss. 242; Bloomingdale v. Lisberger, 24 Hun (N. Y.), 355; Byles on Bills, 65.

Nor does the fact that the note was put in circulation under false representations that the maker was a spinster or widow confer upon it any validity. Cannam v. Farmer, 3 Exch. 698; Lowell v. Daniels, 2 Gray (Mass.), 161; Keen v. Coleman, 39 Pa. St. 399; Scudder v. Gori, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 661. Nor does the fact that the note is given for land conveyed to her. Dunning v. Pike, 46 Me. 461; Carpenter v. Mitchell, 50 Ill. 470; Dollner v. Snow, 16 Fla. 86; Pemberton v. Johnson, 46 Mo. 342.

6. In Kansas married women may carry on business with entire contractual freedom. 1881, Comp. L. § 3139. So in Mississippi. 1880, Rev. Code, § 1167. The following States permit the same liberty, either upon the order of the court, or after the insanity, desertion, or imprisonment of the husband: Indiana. 1861, P. L. 182. Tennessee. 1871, Comp. S. § 2486. Maine. 1871, R. S. 491, § 10. Connecticut. 1875, G. S. 187. North Carolina. 1873, Bat. Rev. 590, § 24. W. Virginia. 1879, R. S. c. 122, § 13. Pennsylvania. 1872, Purd. Dig. 701, § 22. Ohio. 1880, R. S. § 3111. Vermont. 1880, R. S. §§ 2328, 2334. Kentucky. 1881, G. S. 520, § 5. Missouri. 1879, R. S. 3284. California. 1876, Civ. Code, § 11, 811. Alabama. 1876, Code, § 2731. Michigan. 1872, Comp. L. 1474, § 4; 1477, § 25. Louisiana. 1876, R. S. § 1713.

7. Scudder v. Gori, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 661.

8. Conner v. Abbott, 35 Ark. 365; Mahon v. Gormley, 24 Pa. St. 80; Burr v. Swan, 118 Mass. 588; Dibrell v. Carlisle, 48 Miss. 691; Estabrook v. Earle, 97 Mass. 302.

9. Bass v. Bean, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 93.

10 Nelson v. Miller, 52 Miss. 410; Brown v. Orr, 29 Cal. 120; Wiley v. Hunter. 2 La. Ann. 806; Kimm v. Weippert. 46 Mo. 532; Thatcher v. Cannon, 6 Bush (Ky.), 541; Conrad v. Le Blanc, 29 La. Ann. 123.

These cases are often interpretations of statutes since superseded, but the principle is general.

separate property almost absolute liberty.[1] But in no State can a married woman obtain property by giving her worthless note, and then retain what she received; if she obtained land it is subject to a vendor's lien,[2] and restitution of any property will be compelled by a court of equity.[3]

A married woman is not liable at common law on her indorsement,[4] nor did it even effect a transfer of the paper.[5]

At the present time the right to indorse must rest on the same statutes that have created the right to make notes and bills.

So complete is the disability of coverture, that after the death or divorce of the husband a promise to pay a note made before such event is without consideration.[6]

No one but the woman herself or her representative can set up the defence of coverture, it being a purely personal incapacity.[7]

In many States the fact that a note or bill is drawn for the benefit of the married woman's separate estate must appear upon the face of the instrument,[8] yet this statement will not affect the negotiability of the paper.[9]

But other authorities hold that an intention to charge her

1. Thus in Massachusetts a woman's note given to raise money to lend her husband is good, though the payee knew the object with which it made. Wilder v. Richie, 117 Mass. 382.

She may be held on a partnership note, her husband not being a partner. Plumer v. Lord, 5 Allen (Mass.), 760. And so in New Jersey. Merritt adv. Day, 9 Vroom (N. J.), 32. On her acceptance of a bill of exchange. Pierce v. Kittredge, 115 Mass. 374. And in New York if it be affirmatively shown that the woman acted as a feme sole trader, for her separate benefit or that of her estate, she may be held as if unmarried. Hallock v. Demum, 2 T. & C. (N. Y.) 350. And so much as is shown to be for her benefit she may be held for and the rest disallowed. Spencer v. Humiston, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 71.

She is the judge of what is for her benefit, and an accommodation indorsement for her husband expressly charging her separate estate will bind her. Frecking v. Rolland, 53 N. Y. 422.

2. McDuff v. Beauchamp, 50 Miss. 531; Farr v. Wright, 27 Tex. 96.

3. Hendrick v. Foote, 57 Miss. 117.

4. Barlow v. Bishop, 3 Esp. 266.

5. Tillinghast v. Holbrook, 7 R. I. 230. Sed contra, Harding v. Cobb, 47 Miss. 599; Moreau v. Branson, 37 Ind. 195; Way v. Pierce, 51 Vt. 326.

And this is probably the modern doctrine irrespective of statute. Even at common law, if the wife was the payee and the husband consented, her indorsement was good. Nimes v. Bigelow, 45 N. H. 343; McClain v. Weidemeyer, 25 Mo. 364; Mudge v. Bullock, 83 Ill. 22; Stevens v. Beals, 10 Cush. 291; Smith v. Marsack, 6 C. B. 486.

6. Thus a note given by a widow for goods purchased during coverture is void. Goulding v. Davidson, 28 Barb. 438; Hetherington v. Hixon, 46 Ala. 297. Secus of a promise to renew a note given for antenuptial debts. Parker v. Cowan, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 518.

The rule after divorce is exactly the same. Watkins v. Halstead, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 311. Contra, that a promise after divorce will be enforced. Hemphill v. McClimans, 24 Pa. St. 367.

7. The maker's coverture cannot avail the indorser as against his indorsee. Prescott Bank v. Caverly, 7 Gray, 217; Erwin v. Downs, 15 N. Y. 575; Archer v. Shea, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 493; Leitner v. Miller, 49 Ga. 489.

8. Koontz v. Nabb, 16 Md. 549; Kirby v. Miller, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 3; Williams v. Huguenin, 69 Ill. 214; Vanderheyden v. Mallory, 1 N. Y. 452.

9. Loomis v. Ruck, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 385, which case also holds that a false statement that the note is for the benefit of her separate estate, obtained from her by duress, will avoid the instrument utterly.

A woman, by stating in a note that she charges her separate estate when she has none, cannot become personally bound for another's debt. Wilson S. M. Co. v. Fuller, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 480.

separate estate will be inferred from the delivery of the note or bill,[1] when the consideration moves to her, for there is no such presumption in favor of her accommodation indorsement, or note of hand for her husband's debts.[2]

It follows from the doctrines previously stated, that at common law a note by husband to wife or wife to husband was a nullity,[3] and even under the married woman's acts the rule cannot be said to be absolutely changed.[4]

The marriage of maker and payee of a note will not avoid it,[5] and after divorce a wife may sue her former husband on a note given her during coverture.[6]

Since a note or bill is a chose in action, the title to which was by common law vested in the husband,[7] a married woman cannot sue on a note belonging to her in her own name, unless expressly enabled so to do by statute.[8]

Wherever a husband is still regarded as having the right to reduce to possession his wife's choses in action, it follows that payment to him of the amount of a note due her is a perfect bar to

1. Dallas v. Head, 32 Ga. 604; Bachelder v. Sargeant, 47 N. H. 262; Coats v. Robinson, 10 Mo. 757; Chapman v. Foster, 6 Allen (Mass.), 136; Barnes v. De France, 2 Col. 294; Pope v. Hooper, 6 Neb. 178; Lillard v. Turner, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 374.

Even though executed in blank. Morrison v. Thistle, 67 Mo. 596. Rule same as to indorsement. Bill v. Kellar, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 381; Frank v. Lilienfeld, 34 Gratt. 377. Contra, Staley v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275.

2. Frecking v. Rolland, 53 N. Y. 422; Saulsbury v. Weaver, 59 Ga. 254; Bartington v. Bradley, 16 La. Ann. 310; Levi v. Earl, 30 Oh. St. 147.

But in Kansas under the statute an intent to charge separate estate will be inferred even when the note is given for a husband's debts. Wickes v. Mitchell, 9 Kans. 80.

3. Garner v. Sheriff, 26 La. An. 375; Sweat v. Hall, 8 Vt. 187, hold such a note incapable of ratification by the subsequent promise of the maker. Nor can the husband's indorsement pass a valid title to the wife's note. Gay v. Kingsley, 11 Allen (Mass.), 345; Seyfert v. Edison, 16 Vr. (N. J.) 393. Both the making and the indorsement are void. Roby v. Phelon, 118 Mass. 541. The rule is the same when the husband makes the note and the wife indorses it. Hooker v. Boggs, 63 Ill. 161; C. F. Jackson v. Parks, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 550; Phillips v. Frye, 14 Allen (Mass.) 361; and Ingham v. White, 4 Allen (Mass.), 412, where the note was payable to the wife or bearer.

4. Until the statute law expressly provides that husband and wife are legal strangers to each other, it is only possible to cite decided cases as exceptions to the general rule above stated.

It has been held that a transfer of a third person's note by husband to wife in consideration of a debt due her is good as against his creditors. Clough v. Russell, 55 N. H. 280.

A wife's note to her husband will bind her separate estate in the hands of an innocent holder for value. Morrison v. Thistle, 67 Mo. 596.

A wife may indorse for accommodation the firm note of her husband's firm. Kenworthy v. Sawyer, 125 Mass. 28. And even lend her husband money, or his note for it, and hold his estate after his death. Logan v. Hall, 19 Ia. 491; Bryant v. Bryant, 3 Bush (Ky.), 155. and even sue him in life on the note by statute in Nebraska. May v. May, 9 Neb. 16; G. S. 528 § 31.

5. Wright v. Wright, 59 Barb. (N.Y.) 505. Sed contra, Abbott v. Winchester, 105 Mass. 115; Chapman v. Kellogg, 102 Mass. 246; Govan v. Moore, 30 Ark. 667.

6. Webster v. Webster, 58 Me. 139.

7. Gaters v. Madely, 6 M. & W. 423.

8. Kimbro v. First Nat'l Bank, 1 MacArth. (D. C.) 61; Arnould v. Revoult, 4 Mo. 70; Sutton v. Warren, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 451, holding that the husband may sue alone, or conjointly with his wife.

The Kansas statute enables the wife to sue alone. Hadley v. Brown, 2 Kans. 416.

any action by her,[1] and by parity of reasoning that in a suit by both on a note to the wife any defence or set-off good against the husband can be sustained.[2]

Although it was at one time supposed that without special permission granted in their charters corporations could contract only over their corporate seals,[3] and could therefore not execute simple contracts like notes and bills, it is now established that such bills and notes as are incident to the business of incorporated companies they may execute without any special grant of such power.[4]

The test of this corporate power is said to be the right of the company to incur debts, for this presupposes the privilege of creating obligations for their repayment "in any form not expressly forbidden by law."[5]

A corporation may receive notes and bills for debts due,[6] and by consequence transfer them.[7]

Even where the act of indorsement was illegal the transfer is effectual to pass title, though the corporation cannot be held on its indorsement.[8]

But it cannot be incident or necessary to the business of a corporation to give accommodation paper; notes so given, therefore, are illegal and void.[9]

1. Thrasher v. Tuttle, 22 Me. 335. And such payment will be a bar even since the recent statutes if the note was made to the wife at the husband's request when the money was really due him. Dunn v. Hornbeck, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 629; Towle v. Towle, 114 Mass. 167; Long v. Walker, 47 Tex. 173. Secus when this fact is not shown. Carver v. Carver, 53 Ind. 241.

But such payment made after divorce will not bar a wife's action. Legg v. Legg, 8 Mass. 99.

2. Vance v. McLaughlin, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 289. Contra under statutes, Stannus v. Stannus, 30 Ia. 448; McCarty v. Mewhinney, 8 Ind. 514.

3. Angell & Ames on Corp. § 236; Byles on Bills, 70; Copper Mines Co. v. Fox, 16 Q. B. 229; Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204.

4. Union G. M. Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 2 Col. 248; McCullough v. Moss, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 577; Davis v. West Saratoga Bldn'g Union, 32 Md. 285; Bank of Chillicothe v. Chillicothe, 7 Ohio, 354; Came v. Brigham, 39 Me. 35; Oxford Iron Co. v. Spradley, 46 Ala. 98.

And notes may be considered incident to the business of a mill company. Smith v. Eureka Mills Co., 6 Cal. 1. A mining company. Moss v. Averell, 10 N. Y. 449. A turnpike company. Lebanon, etc., Road Co. v. Adair, 85 Ind. 244. A religious society. Davis v. Universalist Society, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 321.

5. Stratton v. Allen, 1 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 233.

Thus an officer who can purchase materials for a corporation may give the note of the corporation for them. Castle v. Belfast Foundry Co., 72 Me. 167. Cf. Cattron v. First Universalist Society, 46 Ia. 108; Auerbach v. Le Sueur Mill Co., 28 Minn. 291; Barnes v. Ontario Bank, 19 N. Y. 156; Hays v. Galion G. L. Co., 29 Ohio St. 330; Hamilton v. New Castle R. Co., 9 Ind. 359; Fay v. Noble, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 1.

6. Frye v. Tucker, 24 Ill. 180; Hardy v. Merriwether, 14 Ind. 203; German Congregation v. Stegner, 21 Ohio St. 488.

Even though expressly prohibited from "trading" in notes. John v. Farmers' Bank, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 267.

7. Savage v. Walshe, 26 Ala. 631.

8. Brown v. Donnell, 49 Me. 421; Smith v. Johnson, 3 H. & N. 222.

And a foreign corporation, though prohibited by statute from doing business in a State, may there receive. Bartlett v. Chouteau Ins. Co., 18 Kans. 369. And semble indorse. Clark v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 321. A note given for a stock subscription. If the company complies with the State laws, suit may be brought on the note obtained before compliance. American Ins. Co. v. Wellman, 69 Ind. 413.

9. Bank of Genesee v. Patchin Bank, 13 N. Y. 309; Ætna Nat'l Bank v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 50 Conn. 167.

These doctrines have been applied to municipal corporations, and their right to bind themselves by notes upheld,[1] but the question cannot be considered settled, and in view of the fact that any debt unlawfully contracted cannot bind a municipality,[2] and that even an innocent purchaser for value is not secure from the defence of unlawful issue,[3] it is of small importance. The charter privileges of the city or town in question must be carefully studied before the rules of commercial instruments can be applied.

15. Execution or Transfer.—(a) By Agents.—No special form is necessary in appointing an agent to make and issue commercial paper,[4] though in some States particular methods are pointed out by statute.[5]

Under a general parol authority an agent may also indorse a bill or note[6] even if it is sealed.[7]

But where the delegation of power is by several persons, the agent's authority only extends to rendering them jointly liable,[8] unless the further power of binding them severally is expressly stated.

When the power is delegated to several persons, they must all unite in its exercise or the principal will not be bound.[9]

It is a general rule that no agent can delegate his authority;[10]

Even in indorsee's hands. Smead v. Indianapolis R., 11 Ind. 109. Nor can they be ratified. Hall v. Auburn Turnpike Co., 27 Cal. 255.

1. Keeley v. Mayor, etc., 4 Hill (N. Y.), 263; Commonwealth v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; Williamsport v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 487; Dillon on Mun. Bonds, § 6; 1 Dan. on Neg. Inst. 394.

2. Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413.

3. Lindsay v. Rottaken, 32 Ark. 619; Chisholm v. City of Montgomery, 2 Woods (U. S.), 584; Cagwin v. Town of Hancock, 84 N. Y. 532.

4. Parol is sufficient. Trundy v. Farrar, 32 Me. 225; Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 209; Handyside v. Cameron, 21 Ill. 588; Humphreys v. Wilson, 44 Miss. 328. Even in appointing the agent of a corporation. Fleckner v. Bank of U. S., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338; Odd Fellows v. First National Bank, 42 Mich. 461; Hoag v. Lamont, 60 N. Y. 101; Union Bank v. Ridgely, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 324. Or the resolution of the board of directors appointing the agent may be orally proved. Preston v. Missouri, etc., Lead Co., 51 Mo. 43.

5. Oregon. 1872, G. L. p. 718, c. 48, § 2. New York. 2 R. S. Ed. 1875, p. 1160, § 2. New Jersey. 1874. Rev. p. 897. § 1. Nevada. 1873, 1 Comp. L. c. 5, § 10. Michigan. 1871. 1 Comp. L. p. 515, § 2. Idaho. 1875, Rev. L. p 652. § 2.

6. Woodbury v. Woodbury, 47 N. H. 11; Haven v. Hobbs, 1 Vt. 238.

So one of two payees may sign for both by parol authority. Cooper v. Bailey, 52 Me. 230.

7. Bailey v. Rawley, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 295. Sed contra, Ruffin v. Mebane, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 507.

8. In Bank of U. S. v. Beirne, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 234, 539, the agent had indorsed all his principals' names in succession. Held, that he had exceeded his authority; they could be held jointly only.

Nor can an agent to draw a bill draw one himself jointly with his principal. Bryan v. Berry, 6 Cal. 394; Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 281.

9. Ducarry v. Gill, 4 C. & P. 121; Rollins v. Phelps, 5 Minn. 463.

Thus one of several liquidators of a corporation cannot make a valid acceptance of a bill. In re London, etc., Bank, L. R. 5 Ch. 567.

10. Emerson v. Providence Hat Mfg. Co., 12 Mass. 237.

Yet the mere act of signature may be delegated. Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234.

And where B was the agent of A, and directed his clerk C to sign a note "A by C," it was held that since B had authority to make the note A was bound by the signature. Weaver v. Carnall, 35 Ark. 198.

and whatever the terms of that authority may be, they will be strictly construed by the courts.[1]

Where express written authority has been given, the scope of the agent's power must be gathered from that writing alone,[2] and the right to issue commercial paper will rarely be implied from any other expressly given power.[3]

Whenever this power is inferred, it must be by necessary implication,[4] either from the very nature of the agency in question, e.g. a factorship or general agency, where the factor is the alter ego of the principal in all things,[5] or from the official rank or station of the agent, e.g. the cashier of a bank is virtute officii the proper officer or agent to execute or transfer commercial instruments belonging to the bank.[6]

1. Rossiter v. Rossiter, 8 Wend. 494, where an authority to do "all other acts" was held to confer no power to draw a bill of exchange.

2. Byles on Bills, 33.

An agent to manage a store and purchase goods for it has no power to bind his principal by a note given for a loan. Perkins v. Boothby, 71 Me. 91.

An authority to "sign my name where expedient in the transaction and conduct of such business as to my attorney shall seem meet" covers a note given by the agent. Dollfus v. Frosch, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 367. Yet a power "to use and sign my name" will not cover a note with a stipulation for attorney's fee in case of non-payment. First National Bank v. Gay, 63 Mo. 33.

But where one said he would stand "whatever arrangement was made" by his agent, he was held bound by a note given by that agent. Tanner v. Hastings, 2 Bradw. (Ill.) 283.

And a power to transact "all the business" of the principal in a certain place has been thought to warrant the indorsement of a note. Newland v. Oakley, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 489. Cf. Frost v. Wood, 2 Conn. 23; Hurd v. Marple, 2 Bradw. (Ill.) 402; Layet v. Gano, 17 Ohio, 466; Merchants' Bk. v. Griswold, 72 N. Y. 472.

3. It cannot be implied from a general power to transact business and receive and pay debts. Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204; Beach v. Vandewater, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 277. Nor from an authority to pay a bill of exchange. Gould v. Norfolk Lead Co., 9 Cush. (Mass) 338. Nor authority to indorse a check from a power to receive rents, though the check was given for rent. Robinson v. Chemical National Bank, 86 N. Y. 407.

An agent to make a note payable at a particular bank can make it in no other way. Morrison v. Taylor, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 82. And if authorized to make a note at six months, he cannot give one at a shorter time. Batty v. Carswell, 2 John. (N. Y.) 48. Sed contra, Adams v. Flanagan, 36 Vt. 412. And semble that he may make the time longer. Bank of the State v. Herbert, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 89. And see generally, on this point, Tripp v. Swanzey Paper Co., 13 Pick. 291; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199; Bank of Deer Lodge v. Hope Mining Co., 3 Mont. 146; School Directors v. Sippy, 54 Ill. 287; State of Wisconsin v. Torinus, 24 Minn. 332; Grant v. Strutzel, 53 Iowa, 512; Templeton v. Poole, 59 Cal. 286; Goodfellow v. Landis, 36 Mo. 168.

But certainly nothing except the clearest authority will enable an agent to indorse for accommodation and bind his principal. Stainer v. Tysen, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 279; German National Bk. v. Studley, 1 Mo. App. 260.

4. As where an agent gave a draft for goods purchased and the principal received the goods with full knowledge of the transaction, the right to give the draft was inferred from the admitted power of purchasing the goods. Nutting v. Sloan, 59 Ga. 392. This is an extreme case. Cf. New York Iron Mine v. Citizens' Bk., 44 Mich. 344; Temple v. Pomroy, 4 Gray (Mass.), 128; Hogarth v. Whirley, L. R. 10 C. P. 630; Murrel v. Jones, 40 Miss. 565; Streeter v. Poor, 4 Kans. 412.

5. Tappan v. Bailey, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 529.

6. Safford v. Wyckoff, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 442; Northern Bank v. Johnson, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 88; Potter v. Merchants' Bank, 28 N. Y. 641; Folger v. Chase, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 63; Burkham v. Webster 19 Me. 232; Houghton v. First Nat. Bk. 26 Wis. 663; Kimball v. Cleveland, 4 Mich. 606; Harper v. Calhoun, 7 How. (Miss.) 203; Smith v. Lawson, 18 W. Va. 212.

Yet he has no power to put the bank's

Whether an agent's act was originally within the scope of his authority or not, a subsequent ratification by the principal will render it perfectly valid.[1]

What amounts to a ratification depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. It is certain that where an agent buys goods and gives a note for them without authority, that acceptance of the goods ratifies the note on the principal's part,[2] and that in any case long-continued silence on the part of the principal after acquaintance with all the facts will estop him from impugning the authority of the one who acted as his agent.[3]

An agent making a note, or accepting a bill without authority,[4] and in excess of his authority,[5] thereby becomes liable to payee and indorsees upon the instrument which he has wrongfully put in circulation.[6]

If a bill be drawn by an agent on his principal, the latter is not name on accommodation paper. West St. Louis Bk. v. Shawnee Bk., 5 Otto (U. S.), 557.

The president of a corporation is held to have the same powers. With the approval of the directors his note or acceptance will bind the company. Libby v. Union Nat'l Bk. 99 Ill. 622; Ferris v. Thaw, 72 Mo. 446. He can indorse for the company. State Bank of Ohio v. Fox, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 431. And authority so to do is inferred from his official position. Aspinwall v. Meyer, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 180.

In fact an indorsement by an officer of a corporation is prima facie the act of the company. Frye v. Tucker, 24 Ill. 180.

Where the company received the proceeds the indorsement of an ex-president has been held sufficient. Patten v. Moses, 49 Me. 255.

The power of making a valid acceptance, however, will not be inferred from the official position of an assistant cashier. Pope v. Bank of Albion, 57 N. Y. 126.

Nor does a treasurer, whose duty is to pay debts, possess the implied power of issuing promissory notes with which to pay them. Torry v. Dustin Mont. Association, 5 Allen (Mass.), 327. Nor of indorsing a note belonging to the company. Brandlee v. Warren, etc., Sav. Bk., 127 Mass. 107.

Other offices have been held not to confer upon their incumbents the privilege of acting as agents for the corporations appointing them: A secretary. Neale v. Turton, 4 Bing. 149; First Nat'l Bk. v. Hogan, 47 Mo. 472; Blood v. Marcuse, 38 Cal. 590. A general managing agent. N Y.. etc., Mine v. Negaunee Bank, 39 Mich. 644; Culver v. Leovy, 19 La. Ann. 202. The pastor and deacons of a church. Jefts v. York, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 1852.

1. Hatch v. Taylor, 10 N. H. 538; Bigelow v. Dennison, 23 Vt. 564; Lysle v. Beals, 27 La. Ann. 274. But the principal must know all the circumstances. Nixon v. Palmer, 8 N.Y. 398. A ratification so made needs no new consideration to support it. First Nat'l Bank v. Gay, 63 Mo. 33. And may extend even to a forged signature. Greenfield Bank v. Crofts, 4 Allen (Mass.), 477; Dow v. Spurney, 29 Mo. 386. Contra, Marks v. King, 6 Alb. L. J. (N. Y.) 193.

An admission of the genuineness of a signature made to save the forger from indictment will not bind the principal making it. Ex parte. Edwards, 5 Jurist, 706.

2. Moss v. Rossie Lead Mining Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.), 137; Gilbert v. Dent, 46 Ga. 238; Warden v. Partee, 57 Iowa, 515.

3. But what length of time is necessary cannot be stated. Two years held enough. De Land v. Nat'l Bank, 20 Cent. L. J. (Ill.) 196. Three years. Wardrop v. Dunlop, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 325. Seventeen days, that being the time between knowledge and the maturity of the note wrongfully given by the agent. Nat'l Bank of Orleans v. Fassett, 42 Vt. 432.

4. Lewis v. Nicholson, 18 Q. B. 509; Barry v. Pike, 21 La. Ann. 221.

5. Roberts v. Button, 14 Vt. 195.

6. Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114.

But the lack of authority must be made to affirmatively appear. Wilson v. Barthrop, 2 M. & W. 863.

He may be personally liable although he signed the principal's name as his own, so that his own name does not appear on the instrument at all. Baker v. Deming, 8 Ad. & El. 94; Jewett v.

liable as drawer,[1] nor is the agent himself if he disclose his principal at the time of drawing the bill, and properly describe himself as an agent in the instrument itself.[2]

So when the drawer of the bill is agent of the payee, e.g., when the drawee has purchased goods from the drawer, the agent-drawer is not personally liable.[3]

An agent who in pursuance of his duty indorses a note or bill cannot become thereby liable to his principal.[4]

Upon a note made by an agent without or in excess of authority the principal cannot be held; it is to all intents a forgery.[5]

When the agent receives from his principal a note or bill to be negotiated by indorsement for some special purpose, and he diverts it from that use, the conduct of the agent will not avail his principal as against a bona fide holder for value;[6] but against one having knowledge of the agent's dereliction in duty,[7] or holding for a usurious consideration, the defence is valid.[8]

(b) By Partners.—The general rule is that each partner in a mercantile firm has power to make or draw, transfer, and accept notes and bills in the firm name and about the firm business.[9]

As to indorsements the rule is the same.[10]

Persons who hold themselves out as partners, although not so inter sese, will be bound by a note on which their names appear as constituting a firm.[11]

A note signed with a firm name by an active partner will Whalen, 11 Wis. 124; Merchants' Bank v. Spicer, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 443.

1. Ducarry v. Gill, 4 C. & P. 121.

2. Roberts v. Austin, 5 Whart. (Pa.), 313; Newhall v. Dunlap, 14 Me. 180; Mayhew v. Prince, 11 Mass. 54.

3. Jones v. Lathrop, 444 Ga. 398; Mechanics' Bank v. Earp, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 390.

4. Byers v. Harris, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 652; Kimmel v. Bittner, 62 Pa. St. 203. Unless he procured and indorsed to his principal worthless paper, when instructed to procure and transmit good bills. Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645.

5. Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 757; Hotchkiss v. English, 4 Hun (N.Y.), 369; Ladd v. Town of Franklin, 37 Conn. 53. But notes signed by the principal upon agent's request cannot be avoided by evidence that the maker did not know his agent had been disobeying instructions, which if obeyed would have obviated the necessity for the note. Beall v. January, 62 Mo. 434.

6. Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161; Bird v. Daggett, 97 Mass. 494; Herbert v. Hine, 1 Ala. 18; Fullerton v. Sturges, 4 Ohio St. 529.

7. Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B.& C. 278. And if they know that the agent is acting for another they are bound to examine into his authority. East India Co. v. Tritton, 3 B. & C. 280. The use of such phrases as "per" and "pro"—Alexander v. McKenzie, 6 C. B. 766—is quite enough to put one on inquiry. Cf. Paulette v. Brown, 40 Mo. 52; Sigourney v. Lloyd, 8 B. & C. 622.

8. Kentgen v. Parks, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 60; Culver v. Bigelow, 43 Vt. 249; Bastable v. Poole, 1 Cr. M. & R. 410.

9. Drennen v. House, 41 Pa. St. 30; Stimson v. Whitney, 135 Mass. 591; Sherwood v. Snow, 46 Iowa, 481; Williams v. Conner, 14 S. Car. 621; Wells v. Masterman, 2 Esp. 731; Ex parte Bonbonus, 8 Ves. 542; Story on Prom. Notes, § 72; Byles on Bills, 44. Even where the partnership articles deny to a partner the right to issue commercial paper, a note given by him to settle a debt of the firm will bind it. Langan v. Hewett, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 122.

10. Walker v. Kee, 14 S. Car. 142; Barrett v. Russell, 45 Vt. 43; Mohawk Nat'l Bank v. Van Slyck, 29 Hun (N. Y.), 188.

11. Thus a note signed "A. & B." will bind both the persons named as partners, though they do not do business together. Smith v. Hill, 45 Vt. 90; Dickenson v. Valpy, 10 B. & C. 141.

bind a dormant partner or one having a special interest in the firm.[1]

A new partner coming into a firm does not become liable on the firm's paper already out.[2]

A partner's power to bind his firm by notes or bills in their name is, like his other contractual powers, limited to the business operations of the firm;[3] but the presumption is that the instrument in question, if signed with the firm name, was given about the firm's business.[4]

If a partner exceeding his lawful privileges issues paper in the firm name, but not in their business, the partnership is nevertheless bound at the suit of a bona fide holder.[5]

In all matters outside of firm business partners deal with each other as strangers, and the note, e.g., of one partner so given to another is enforceable by the usual methods.[6]

The rule that one partner may sign the firm name to notes and bills and thereby bind his copartners is limited to partnerships engaged in trade and commerce.[7]

The fact that a note is made payable to several persons jointly,

1. Swan v. Steele, 7 East, 210; Gurney v. Evans, 27 L. J. Ex. 166.

Though given for a debt of an old firm to which he did not belong. Lloyd v. Ashby, 2 B. & Ad. 23; Bradshaw v. Apperson, 36 Tex. 133.

That the taker of the note did not know of the dormant partner when note was negotiated to him makes no difference. Ex parte Norfolk, 19 Ves. 455, Etheridge v. Binney, 9 Pick. 272.

2. Shirreff v. Wilks, 1 East, 57.

But an obligation after he joins for the old firm's debt will bind him. Osborn v. Osborn, 36 Mich. 48; Saville v. Robertson, 4 T. R. 720.

Where A. and B. were intending to form a partnership, and one of them gave a note signed with the intended firm's name, got the money and used it in the partnership business, it was held nevertheless that the note was not a partnership note. Baxter v. Plunkett, 4 Houst. (Del.) 450.

3. Atlantic State Bk. of Brooklyn v. Savery, 82 N. Y. 291; Graves v. Kellenberger, 51 Ind. 66; Stegall v. Coney, 49 Miss. 761; Norton v. Thatcher, 8 Neb. 186, Newman v. Richardson, 9 T. R. 865.

4. Moorehead v. Gilmore, 77 Pa. St. 118; Sherwood v. Snow, 46 Iowa, 481; Lindh v. Crowley, 29 Kans. 756; Whitaker v. Brown, 16 Wend. 507; Thurston v. Lloyd, 4 Md. 283; Holmes v. Porter, 39 Me. 157.

5. Silverstein v. Atkinson, 45 Miss. 81; Sedgwick v. Lewis, 70 Pa. St. 217; First Nat'l Bk. v. Morgan, 73 N. Y. 593.

But one partner cannot sign the name of another partner and so bind him individually. McCauley v. Gordon, 64 Ga. 221.

6. Chamberlain v. Walker, 10 Allen (Mass.), 429; Jemison v. Walsh, 30 Ind. 167.

But in firm business they together make but one, so that a defence good against one partner affects the firm; as, e.g., where a note was made for the accommodation of one partner and he transferred it to his firm, held, that as the single partner could not have recovered, the firm could not. Jones v. Yates, 9 B. & C. 539; Sandilands v. Marsh, 2 B. & Ald. 673.

7. Thus it has been held that a firm of attorneys will not be bound by one partner's signing the firm name to a note without the express authority of the others. Garland v. Jacomb, L. R. 8 Ex. 219; Smith v. Sloan, 37 Wis. 285; Friend v. Duryee, 17 Fla. 111.

So held also of a firm of physicians. Crosthwait v. Ross, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 23. Brokers. Third Nat'l Bank v. Snyder, 10 Mo. App. 211. Tavern-keepers. Cocke v. Branch Bank, 3 Ala. 175; Farmers. Prince v. Crawford, 50 Miss. 344; Hunt v. Chapin, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 139.

But where the firm has knowingly received and used the goods for which the note was given, it will be considered a ratification. Jones v. Clark, 42 Cal. 180. Cf. Huguley v. Morris, 65 Ga. 666; Levy v. Payne, C. & M. 453; McCrary v. Slaughter, 58 Ala. 230.

does not render such payees partners pro hac vice, and an indorsement by one cannot bind the others.[1]

The powers of a partner do not extend to binding his firm by paper given or indorsed for the accommodation of others,[2] although if the firm consent, expressly or impliedly, to such use of their name, the partnership will be held.[3]

The dissolution of a partnership in general terminates the power of the individuals composing it to bind one another;[4] and when such dissolution is known, no partnership paper can be lawfully issued,[5] and the only person bound by it is the ex-partner who actually signs,[6] unless of course authority has

1. Even if the joint payees are executors. Johnson v. Mangum, 65 N. Car. 146; Sanders v. Blain, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 446. And see Wood v. Wood, 1 Harr. (N. J.) 428.

But one joint payee may make a valid indorsement with the consent of the others. Cooper v. Bailey, 52 Me. 230.

Upon the same principle joint ownership of property does not confer on one joint owner authority to bind those in interest with him by notes or bills. Ex parte Peale, 6 Ves. 604; Williams v. Thomas, 6 Esp. 18.

2. Stall v. Catskill Bank, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 466; Bloom v. Helm, 53 Miss. 21; Chenowith v. Chamberlain, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 60; Rollins v. Stevens, 31 Me. 454; Heffron v. Hanaford, 40 Mich. 305; Sweetser v. French, 2 Cush. 309; Vredenburg v. Lagan, 28 La. Ann. 941.

But this rule does not apply where a partner accepted for A in his firm's name, in consideration of A's accepting for his firm. Gano v. Samuel, 14 Ohio, 592.

3. Wilson v. Williams, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 146; First Nat. Bank v. Breese, 39 Iowa, 640.

A subsequent promise to pay is a sufficient consent and ratification by the firm. Butler v. Stocking, 8 N. Y. 408. And even a statement that the note "would have to take its course and be disposed of like other indebtedness" may go to the jury on the question of liability. First Nat. Bank v. Carpenter, 34 Iowa, 433.

And while the burden of proof to show consent or ratification on the part of the firm is on the holder of the note, such consent may be inferred from the course of business of the partnership. Sweetser v. French, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 309; Spurck v. Leonard, 9 Bradw. (Ill.) 174. But it cannot be inferred from blanks having been left for date and rate of interest, which the partner negotiating the instrument filled up. Wait v. Thayer, 118 Mass. 473; Hendrie v. Berkowitz, 37 Cal. 113. Nor from the firm's having given or indorsed accommodation paper before. Earley v. Reed, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 12.

4. But this does not affect a firm liability incurred before dissolution. Gulick v. Gulick, 1 Harr. (N. J.) 186. And the holder of a note, in ignorance of a dissolution after the note was made, may take a renewal note from one partner after dissolution and hold the old firm. Miller v. Miller, 8 W. Va. 542.

An agreement between the partners of a firm going out of business that one of them shall pay the firm debts cannot affect the holder of a partnership note; all the partners are liable to him. Chogelin v. Westhoff, 33 Tex. 788.

5. Bank of Montreal v. Page, 98 Ill. 109; Curry v. White, 51 Cal. 530; Ransom v. Loyless, 49 Ga. 471; Haddock v. Crocheron, 32 Tex. 276; Woodworth v. Downer, 13 Vt. 522; Mitchell v. Ostrom, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 520; Hurst v. Hill, 8 Md. 399.

Where a note is given in the name of a firm by one of the members, after dissolution, to one who extends credit to the firm and who has had no notice of such dissolution, and where no notice of any kind has been given, such note binds the firm notwithstanding the dissolution. The notice which a creditor must have is actual. The world would be bound by such notice as a publication in a public gazette. Ewing v. Trippe, 72 Ga. 776.

As to what constitutes "dissolution," see text-books on Partnership passim.

6. Robb v. Mudge, 14 Gray (Mass.), 534.

So held even where the debts of the dissolved firm had been assumed by a new firm containing one of the partners of the firm in dissolution, and he gave the note signing the old firm name. Brown v. Broad, 52 Miss. 536. And see Le Roy v. Johnson, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 186; Brown v. Chancellor, 61 Tex. 437.

But it has also been held that partnership continues until the firm affairs are wound up, so that a note given by one been properly conferred upon him,[1] or his act be subsequently ratified.[2]

But mere power to settle and close up the business of a partnership given to the liquidating partner does not include the right to issue notes or bills.[3]

If the cause of the dissolution of the firm is the death of a partner, a survivor cannot bind the estate of the deceased by a note made in the firm name.[4]

The rule is the same as to indorsements, and after dissolution partners cannot be held upon the indorsement of one member of the dissolved firm.[5]

(c) Personal Representatives.—A note or bill given by an executor or administrator does not bind the estate of his decedent,[6] nor has his acceptance of a draft any greater effect;[7] such instruments or acceptances are his individual acts for which he is personally liable.[8]

Similarly, instruments payable to "A, Executor" are the property of A individually, and the title is regarded as mere descriptio personæ.[9]

But the personal representatives of a holder of notes or bills are entitled, and are the only proper persons, to transfer such paper after his death, either by indorsement or delivery as may be proper.[10] partner to close up business will bind all, without any express authority. Robinson v. Taylor, 4 Pa. St. 242; Ward v. Tyler, 52 Pa. St. 393; McCowin v. Cubbison, 72 Pa. St. 358; Siegfried v. Ludwig, 102 Pa. St. 547.

1. Randoelph v. Peck, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 125.

2. Draper v. Bissel, 3 McL. (U. S.) 275.

An acknowledgment of liability and promise to pay is a ratification. Peets v. Riley, 26 La. Ann. 712. So is a payment on account. Eaton v. Taylor, 10 Mass. 54; Chase v. Kendall, 6 Ind. 304.

3. National Bank v. Norton, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 572; Lockwood v. Comstock, 4 McL. (U. S.) 383; Myatts v. Bell, 41 Ala. 222; Brown v. Chancellor, 61 Tex. 437. But compare the Pennsylvania rule, supra.

4. Bank of Port Gibson v. Baugh, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 290; Floyd v. Miller, 61 Ind. 224; Carleton v. Jenness, 42 Mich. 110.

5. Thomason v. Frere, 10 East, 418; Bank of New Orleans v. Matthews, 49 N. Y. 12.

But the indorsing partner will be individually liable. Fassin v. Hubbard, 55 N. Y. 465; White v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 561. And title to the paper transferred, though there can be no recourse to the firm whose name is upon it. King v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 108; Cony v. Wheelock, 33 Me. 366; Pitcher v. Barrows, 17 Pick. 361.

But after the death of a partner, the survivor has been held empowered to indorse and transfer notes belonging to the firm. Bredow v. Mutual Sav. Inst., 28 Mo. 181; Johnson v. Berlizheimer, 84 Ill. 54.

6. Dunne v. Deery, 40 Iowa, 251; Gregory v. Leigh, 33 Tex. 813; Curtis v. Nat. Bank, 39 Ohio St. 579; Kirkman v. Burham, 28 Ala. 501; Lynch v. Kirby, 65 Ga. 279.

7. Even though it be for the drawer's distributive share of the estate in the acceptor's hands. Wisdom v. Becker, 52 Ill. 342.

8. Christian v. Morris, 50 Ala. 585; Rittenhouse v. Amerman, 64 Mo. 197; Beatty v. Tete, 9 La. Ann. 129; Harrison v. McClelland, 57 Ga. 531.

9. Cravens v. Logan, 7 Ark. 103; Thomas v. Reefe, 9 Mo. 373.

Therefore he may sue on it in his own name. Carter v. Saunders, 2 How. (Miss.) 851. But suit in his representative capacity is also proper; even his successor, the administrator, d. b. n., may sue if the individual right of property is not asserted. Leach v. Lewis, 38 Ind. 155; Catherwood v. Chabaud, 1 B. & C. 150; Hemphill v. Hamilton, 11 Ark. 425.

10. Clark v. Moses, 50 Ala. 326; Make-

Therefore, even where the decedent had transferred the note by delivery, his administrator may indorse it and bind the estate.[1]

Cases relating to the powers of executors and administrators are applicable also to guardians and trustees.[2]

16. Consideration Generally.—In general every contract set forth in a note or bill, whether that of the maker, indorser, drawer, acceptor, or surety, requires a valid consideration to support it.[3]

The necessary consideration need not, however, move solely to the party who is to be bound;[4] nor need it be given by the party originally promising it.[5]

Where no fraud is alleged the adequacy or inadequacy of the consideration is perfectly immaterial.[6]

peace v. Moore, 10 Ill. 474; Cahoon v. Moore, 11 Vt. 604; Hamrick v. Craven, 39 Ind. 241; Owen v. Moody, 29 Miss. 79; Rawlinson v. Stone, 3 Stra. 1260.

1. Malbon v. Southard, 36 Me. 147.

But where the decedent had indorsed but not delivered a note his administrator cannot complete the transfer by delivery; he must indorse qua administrator. Clark v. Boyd, 2 Ohio, 57; Bromage v. Lloyd, 1 Exch. 32. Nor can he make a valid transfer by the mere delivery of a note payable to his decedent's order. Taylor v. Surget, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 116.

2. Thus the maker of a note does not escape personal liability by signing as "guardian." Forster v. Fuller, 6 Mass. 58; McGavock v. Whitfield, 45 Miss. 452. Though if it be really given for the ward's benefit he may after paying it charge the amount paid to the estate. Poole v. Williams, 42 Ga. 539.

In like manner he may sue in his own name upon a note made to him as guardian. Bingham v. Calvert, 13 Ark. 389; Zachary v. Gregory, 32 Tex. 452.

He may transfer such notes and give good title. Fountain v. Anderson, 33 Ga. 372; Thornton v. Rankin, 19 Mo. 193.

3. But the consideration or the lack of it between one party and his immediate assignor cannot in general concern the maker or other remote party sued; therefore it is no defence to a maker that the note on which he is sued was given for purposes of suit to the plaintiff. Shane v. Lowry, 48 Ind. 205; McWilliams v. Bridges, 7 Neb. 419; Frederick v. Winans, 51 Wis. 472.

In the case of accommodation paper the loan of credit is the consideration, and binding except at the suit of the party accommodated. Hawkins v. Neal, 60 Miss. 256; Harris v. Bradley, 7 Yerg. 310; Cady v. Shepard. 12 Wis. 713.

The contracts of an indorser in waiving protest upon agreeing to an extension of a note, or of a surety in consenting to a change in the note on which he is surety, require no fresh consideration. Pelton v. Prescott, 13 Iowa, 567; Sheldon v. Horton, 43 N. Y. 93.

4. Thus a joint note may be supported by debts due jointly and severally. Hapgood v. Polley, 35 Vt. 649. Or the consideration may be a debt by one only of two joint makers. Hoxie v. Hodges, 1 Or. 251.

5. Where the consideration of a transferable aid-note given to a railroad company is the benefit to be derived from the construction of its road, it is immaterial whether the road is built by one company or another so long as it is built over substantially the line originally laid out. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 55 Mich. 456.

6. Heath v. Silverthorn Mining, etc., Co., 39 Wis. 146; Rooker v. Rooker, 29 Ohio St. 1.

Clearly, where the moving consideration is service rendered or an agreement performed, the smallest service will support the largest promise, in the absence of fraud; e.g., a promise to pay $10,000 for labor as a housekeeper is binding on the promisor. Earl v. Peck, 64 N. Y. 596.

Mere inadequacy is no defence. Tricky v. Larne, 6 M. & W. 278; Miller v. McKenzie, 95 N. Y. 595; Wheelock v. Barney, 27 Ind. 462.

It has been said, however, that where the consideration is money it will support a promise only to the extent of the money paid. Sawyer v. McLouth, 46 Barb. 353.

If a note specify the number of dollars to be paid, that number must be forthcoming at maturity though they amount to more than the real debt, the note having been made with reference to a depreciated Confederate currency. Williams v. Boozeman, 18 La. Ann. 532.

Natural love and affection is not a sufficient consideration for a bill or note, and instruments so given are not enforceable against their makers.[1]

17. Pecuniary Considerations. — The ordinary consideration for notes and bills is an existing debt,[2] or a loan made at the time of issuing the bill or note.[3]

These considerations are clearly good, and even if paper is issued as collateral for a contemporaneous loan, the holder of it is prima facie a holder for value,[4] who may transfer it as collateral for a debt of his own.[5]

Credit given upon an unsettled account is a valid pecuniary consideration, and a note so given is enforceable,[6] and so is one

It has been held that, upon a note given for the purchase of land, failure of title to the land is not a good defence. 1 Parsons N. & B. 210; Hoy v. Taliaferro, 8 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 727; Perkins v. Bumford, 3 N. H. 522; Vining v. Lieman, 45 Ill. 248. But more authorities hold that it is a good defence, there having been a complete failure of consideration. Scudder v. McAndrews, 2 McL. (U. S.) 464; Frisbee v. Hoffnagle, 11 John. (N. Y.) 50; Fowler v. Shearer, 7 Mass. 22; Cook v. Mix, 11 Conn. 432.

Upon similar grounds notes given for perfectly worthless goods have been held without consideration. Sué v. Rood, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 230; Snyder v. Hargus, 26 Kans. 416; Arnold v. Wilt, 86 Ind. 367; Kelley v. Holderman, 11 Mich. 248. But very slight values have defeated this defence; e.g., a lottery ticket which had drawn a blank where purchased by the note in suit. Barnum v. Barnum, 8 Conn. 469. And see Johnson v. Titus, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 606; Lester v. Webb, 5 Allen, 569.

Notes given for worthless patent rights are also without consideration, and therefore not binding on their makers. National Bank v. Peck, 8 Kans. 661; Snyder v. Kurtz, 61 Iowa, 593; Dunbar v. Marden, 13 N. H. 317; Jolliffe v. Collins, 21 Mo. 338.

Aliter where the patent is valid though useless. Nash v. Lull, 102 Mass. 60; Myers v. Turner, 17 Ill. 179. Contra, Rowe v. Blanchard, 18 Wis. 441; Mooklar v. Lewis, 40 Ind. 1; Clough v. Patrick, 37 Vt. 423; Lester v. Palmer, 4 Allen (Mass.), 145; Moore v. Moore, 39 Ia. 461.

The same rules apply to the contract of indorsement, and mere inadequacy of consideration does not invalidate a transfer otherwise good. Brown v. Penfield, 36 N. Y. 473. But an indorsee can recover from his immediate indorser only the amount actually paid by him for the note. Braman v. Hess, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 52; Faut v. Miller, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 77.

1. Thus of a note by father to son. Fink v. Cox, 18 John. (N. Y.) 145. By son to mother. Kirkpatrick v. Taylor, 43 Ill. 207. So of a note made to a stranger by a son for necessaries furnished his father. Edwards v. Davis, 16 John. (N. Y.) 282. And see Foust v. Board of Publication, 8 B. J. Lea (Tenn.), 552; West v. Cavins, 74 Ind. 265; Rice v. Rice, 68 Ala. 216; Halliday v. Atkinson, 5 B. & C. 501.

There is an exception, however, in favor of notes given in aid of subscriptions to public charities, and such notes are held enforceable. Trustees v. Fleming, 10 Bush (Ky.), 234; Roche v. Roanoke Seminary, 56 Ind. 198; Wesleyan Seminary v. Fisher, 4 Mich. 515; Amherst Academy v. Cowles, 6 Pick. 427; Simpson College v. Bryan, 50 Iowa, 293; Roberts v. Cobb, 31 Hun (N. Y.), 158. But they must be made to persons duly authorized to receive such subscriptions. Pratt v. Trustees of Baptist Soc., 93 Ill. 475; Boutell v. Cowdin, 9 Mass. 254;

2. Bostwick v. Dodge, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 413; Harrell v. Tenant, 30 Ark. 684.

3. Money taken by an executor from the funds of the estate under his charge is a loan, and will support a note given by him to the estate for the money so taken. Faulkner v. Faulkner, 73 Mo. 327.

That an agent loaned out his principal's money in his own name is no defence to one who got some of the money, and gave the agent his note for it. Estes v. Simpson, 13 Nev. 472.

4. Curtis v. Mohr, 18 Wis. 645; Savings Ass'n v. Hunt, 17 Kans. 532; Griswold v. Davis, 31 Vt. 390.

5. Rowe v. Haines, 15 Ind. 445.

6. Griffiths v. Parry, 16 Wis. 231.

Even when the account is swelled by given as collateral for a balance due but unliquidated.[1]

A note given by a principal to his surety to indemnify the latter against his obligation of suretyship will be upheld as being for a valid consideration.[2]

The surrender of one negotiable instrument in consideration of receiving another in lieu of it is a sufficient consideration to support the new note or bill.[3]

Forbearance of suit, as where the holder surrendered a note upon which he might have brought an action, and received instead other paper indorsed to him by his debtor, is a valid pecuniary consideration, and the creditor in this instance was held to be a bona fide holder for value.[4]

It has been held that a debt due from one person was no consideration for a note by another to the creditor,[5] but there are certainly numerous exceptions.[6] fraudulent charges the note is good for the amount actually due. Haycock v. Rand, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 26; Coburn v. Ware, 30 Me. 202. Sed contra, that the note is void for the fraud. Brown v. North, 21 Mo. 528.

But the deposit of a stolen note in bank, where it is credited to the depositor but not drawn against, does not make the bank a holder for value. Fulton v. Phœnix Bank, 1 Hall (N. Y.), 619. Nor does a deposit for collection in a bank having a balance against the depositor. McBride v. Farmers' Bank, 26 N. Y. 450.

1. Richards v. Macey, 14 M. & W. 484; Bank of Metropolis v. New England Bank, 17 Pet. (U. S.) 174.

2. Little v. Little, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 426.

But the recovery will be limited to the amount actually paid by the surety. And see Blankenship v. Nimmo, 50 Ala. 506; Woodrow v. O'Conner, 28 Vt. 776.

3. Mechanics' Bank, v. Crow, 60 N. Y. 85; Cowing v. Altman, 71 N. Y. 435.

E.g., a note secured by mortgage was given up on condition of receiving a new note in O'Keefe v. Handy, 31 La. Ann. 832.

The rule is the same where the surrendered note was entirely unsecured. Dunn v. Weston, 71 Me. 270. Or was overdue. Pratt v. Coman, 37 N. Y. 440; Clary v. Surrency, 58 Ga. 83.

Where, in a sale of land, the agent of the seller executes to the buyer a receipt for the amount of his commission, to operate as part payment of the purchase-money, a promissory note executed by the buyer to the agent, in consideration of such receipt, is valid. Barcus v. Elliott, 95 Ind. 601.

In a suit upon a note payable in bank, brought by an assignee in good faith before maturity, the fact that the consideration of the note was the assignment by the payee to the maker of a forged note, is no defence. McCauley v. Murdock, 97 Ind. 229.

4. Muirheid v. Kirkpatrick, 21 Pa. St. 237.

So the renewal of a note, that being really a forbearance of suit, is a good consideration. Howard v. Hinckley Iron Co., 64 Me. 93; Gates v. Union Bank, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 325.

But if the original note was upon an insufficient consideration, or has really been paid, the renewal note can have no greater validity than its original. Smith v. Taylor, 39 Me. 242.

The obligation of an acceptor, even before he has paid anything, is sufficient to support a note given for the amount of his acceptance. Hodge v. First Nat'l Bank, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 51.

So is the release of a drawer from his liability for damages on dishonor. Pesant v. Pickersgill, 56 N. Y. 650.

5. Bingham v. Kimball, 17 Ind. 396.

And so held of a note by a married woman for her husband's debt. Alger v. Scott, 54 N. Y. 14; Williams v. Walker, 18 S. Car. 577.

6. Where the note given extinguishes the debt, the detriment to the creditor is thought to be enough to support the note, as where an action against the maker's brother was settled by the note in suit. Smith v. Richards, 29 Conn. 232. And see Crofts v. Beale, 11 C. B. 172; Leonard v. Duffin, 94 Pa. St. 218; Lines v. Smith, 4 Fla. 47.

But where the debt supposed to be extinguished did not really exist, the note was held void. Bullock v. Ogburn, 13 Ala. 346.

Where an executor or administrator gives his own note for a debt due by his decedent, such note is generally void as given for the debt of another.[1]

These rules have been applied to notes given by a widow for the debts of her husband.[2]

But the note of the committee of a lunatic for a debt of the estate was held good, the release of the lunatic himself being the consideration.[3]

Forbearance of suit or release of other securities by the creditor, will certainly validate a note given for the debt of another.[4]

18. Considerations other than Pecuniary.—It is obvious that the transfer of other things than money may lawfully move a man to execute a note or bill.

Notes for the purchase-price of land, even though encumbered by a mortgage, are valid;[5] nor does an agreement that title to the land is not to pass until the price is actually paid affect the note.[6]

1. Bank of Troy v. Topping, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 273; Rucker v. Wadlington, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 238.

But where the executor has assets of the estate when he makes the note, the consideration has been held sufficient. Stevenson v. Edwards, 27 La. Ann. 302; McGrath v. Barnes, 13 S. Car. 328; Byrd v. Holloway, 6 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 199.

Forbearance of suit by a creditor of the estate held enough in Rittenhouse v. Amerman, 64 Mo. 197; Thompson v. Maugh, 3 Ia. 342.

If assets exist, the fact that the debt was barred by the Statute of Limitations makes no difference. Wheaton v. Wilmarth, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 422; Didlake v. Robb, 1 Woods (U. S.), 680.

2. Williams v. Nichols, 10 Gray (Mass.), 83.

And a note by her in renewal of another on which she was her husband's surety is void, the estate of the husband being insolvent. Hetherington v. Hixon, 46 Ala. 297.

Even the possession of assets held not to validate her note for his debt. Watson v. Reynolds, 54 Ala. 192; Maull v. Vaughn, 45 Ala. 134.

3. Thacher v. Dinsmore, 5 Mass. 299.

So of the note of a guardian in extinguishment of his ward's debt. Wren v. Hoffman, 41 Miss. 616; Coleman v. Davies, 45 Ga. 489.

4. Thus where A gave B his note in consideration of B surrendering C's note to him (B), this inconvenience or detriment to B will render A liable on the note he gave for C's debt. Sherwood v. Archer, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 73; Carpenter v. Murphree, 49 Ala. 84; Railroad v. Chamberlain, 44 N. H. 497.

One who indorsed the note of his partner and brother-in-law, and afterwards, on condition that this note should be cancelled, indorsed another, and when the last note was about to outlaw joined the maker in admitting liability thereon and promising payment in order to save a suit, could not claim that such admission and promise were without consideration. Parsons v. Frost, 55 Mich. 230.

So if A gives his note to B in consideration of the latter's releasing an attachment he has levied against the goods of C, the note will be enforced. Bradbury v. Blake, 25 Me. 397. Cf. Compton v. Blair, 27 Mich. 397; Maine Mut. Ins. Co. v. Blunt, 64 Me. 95.

If the creditor of a corporation forbear suit in consideration of the note of a stockholder, the latter will be held. Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Nixson, 42 N. Y. 438.

So forbearance of suit against a principal has been held a sufficient consideration for a surety's indorsement. Chaddock v. Vanness, 6 Vr. (N. J.) 518; Hall v. Clapton, 56 Miss. 555.

And see generally, as to forbearance, Munson v. Adams, 89 Ill. 450; Thompson v. Gray, 63 Me. 228; Abbott v. Fisher, 124 Mass. 414; Silvis v. Ely, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 420.

5. Hoyt v. Bradley, 27 Me. 242; Fitzgerald v. Barker, 13 Mo. App. 192; Ervin v. Morris, 26 Kans. 664.

So of a note given for a quit claim deed. Bonney v. Smith, 17 Ill. 531; Bachelder v. Lovely, 69 Me. 33.

6. McMath v. Johnson, 41 Miss. 439.

Notes may also be given for the transfer of personal property.[1]

The exchange of notes, i.e., A giving B his note in consideration of B giving his to A, is a lawful transaction, and both notes will be upheld; each note being the consideration for the other.[2]

This is true, though the notes may be for different amounts.[3]

Contracts or agreements to do almost any legal act whereby the maker will be benefited or the payee suffer detriment have been held to sustain a note given to carry out such contract or agreement.[4]

The compromise of even a doubtful claim,[5] or the withdrawal

1. Fenby v. Pritchard, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 151. Or as collateral to the sale of goods. Fenby v. Pritchard, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 151. Or the good-will of a business. Searing v. Tye, 4 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 197. For a policy of insurance. Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Caldwell, 65 Ind. 138. Though the goods (whiskey) may have been sold under penalty of statutory punishment. Rahter v. First Nat. Bank, 92 Pa. St. 393.

2. Backus v. Spaulding, 116 Mass. 418; Cobb v. Titus, 10 N. Y. 198; Byrne v. Schwing, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 199; Savage v. Ball, 6 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 142; Williams v. Banks, 11 Md. 198; Trustees v. Hill, 12 Iowa, 462; Rose v. Sims, 1 B. & Add. 521.

3. Higginson v. Gray, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 212.

In such transactions the makers are not sureties for each other. Stickney v. Mohler, 19 Md. 506. Nor are the notes mere accommodation paper; it may be proved in bankruptcy. In re London, etc., Bank, L. R. 9 Ch. App. 686.

4. Thus a mere contract to deliver a deed or to convey land at some future time has been held enough. Carman v. Pultz, 21 N. Y. 547; Trask v. Vinson, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 105; Chapman v. Eddy, 13 Vt. 205; Bank of Salem v. Caldwell, 16 Ind. 469.

So of an agreement to sell a machine. Hawley v. Bingham, 6 Or. 76. Or to do work. Walker v. Walker, 29 N. Y. 375.

An agreement on the part of the payee to take the pledge of total abstinence. Lindell v. Ropes, 60 Mo. 249.

The payees promise to emancipate a slave. Thompson v. Thompson, 4 B. Mon. 502.

Information furnished the maker in a suit brought by him. Chandler v. Mason, 2 Vt. 193.

The promise of the payee to resign his office of president of a bank. Peck v. Requa, 13 Gray (Mass.), 407.

Services rendered in obtaining a pardon for a convict. Meadow v. Bird, 22 Ga. 246; McGill v. Burnet, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 640.

For other instances see Barthe v. Lacroix, 29 La. Ann. 326; Easton v. Easton, 112 Mass. 438; Eastman v. Brown, 32 Ill. 53; Barcus v. Elliott, 95 Ind. 661; Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126; Knowles v. Parker, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 30; Cowles v. Gridley, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 301; First Nat. Bank v. Hendrie, 49 Iowa, 402; Day v. Cutler, 22 Conn. 625; Dean v. Skiff, 128 Mass. 174; Roberts v. Frisby, 38 Tex. 319; Hogan v. Crawford, 31 Tex. 633; Banfield v. Rumsey, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 112; Paddleford v. Thacher, 48 Vt. 574; Wright v. Wright, 54 N. Y. 437; Anstell v. Rice, 5 Ga. 472.

5. Boone v. Boone, 58 Miss. 822; Richard v. Comstock, 21 Ark. 68; Stephens v. Spiers, 25 Mo. 386; Callisher v. Bischoffsheim, L. R. 5 Q. B. 449

Whether the claim was good or not makes no difference. Keefe v. Vogle, 36 Iowa, 87.

A market-house company, incorporated for twenty years, with power to purchase, hold, and convey any real or personal estate necessary to enable it to carry on its business, built a market-house on land owned by it in fee simple, and sold by public auction leases for ninety-nine years, renewable forever, of stalls therein at a specified rent. The highest bidder for one of the stalls gave the corporation several promissory notes in part payment for the option of that stall, received such a lease, and took and kept possession of the stall; and afterwards gave it a note for a less sum, in compromise of the original notes, and upon express agreement that if this note should not be paid at maturity, the corporation might surrender it to the maker, and thereupon the cause of action on those notes should revive. Held, that the new note was upon a sufficient legal consideration; and that the corporation, holding and suing upon all the notes, could recover upon this note only. Northern Liberty Market Co. v. Kelly, 113 U. S. 179.

of some proceeding which threatened the maker with liability,[1] furnishes a perfectly valid consideration for a note given to obtain a settlement or release.

Merely moral considerations have not generally been recognized as sufficient to uphold commercial paper,[2] but the cases are not uniform.[3]

19. Consideration of Accommodation Paper.—It has been said that accommodation paper is without consideration.[4]

That no legal benefit or detriment inures to the accommodating party is true, and the consideration to support the contract must be found, if at all, among the other parties to the note or bill.[5]

As between the parties accommodated and accommodating, the latter can be under no liability to the former, whatever the relation in which they are placed on the paper;[6] but as to third parties,

Therefore it is the settlement of the claim, and not any recognition of its validity, that gives life to the note. Russell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 504; Taylor v. Patrick, 1 Bibb (Ky.). 168.

Yet where the note was extorted for a wholly unfounded demand, the maker may show that he could not possibly have been liable. Gunning v. Royal, 59 Miss. 45; Ormsbee v. Howe, 34 Vt. 182; Briscoe v. Kinealy, 8 Mo. App. 26.

So held of a note given in compromise (sic) of a paid mortgage. Smith v. Boruff, 75 Ind. 412. And upon a promise to pay a note to which the maker's name had been signed without authority. Owsley v. Phillips, 78 Ky. 517.

1. A note in consideration of a release from damages for an assault is valid. Wallbridge v. Arnold, 21 Conn. 425. Secus where the sole consideration is the tort of a third person. Conmey v. Macfarlane, 97 Pa. St. 361.

That the damages demanded were grossly excessive is immaterial. Whitenack v. Ten Eyck, 2 Gr. Ch. (N. J.) 249.

So held of a note for the discontinuance of an action. Jones v. Rittenhouse, 87 Ind. 348. And generally of claims that might be pressed by legal action. Byington v. Simpson, 134 Mass. 145; Lyons v. Stephens, 45 Ga. 141; Prescott v. Ward, 10 Allen (Mass.), 203; Moody v. Leavitt, 2 N. H. 171; Friermood v. Rouser, 17 Ind. 461; Cràas v. Hunter, 28 N. Y. 389; Bender v. Pryor, 31 Tex. 341; Lea v. Cassen, 61 Ala. 312; Stewart v. Hidden, 13 Minn. 43; Seaman v. Seaman, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 381.

Settlements of mutual accounts by "accord and satisfaction" resemble compromises, and will sustain notes given for the balance agreed upon. Phelps v. Younger, 4 Ind. 450.

2. A son's accommodation note for his father's debt is invalid. Murphy v. Keyes, 7 J. & S. (N. Y.) 18.

So held of a son's note for necessaries furnished the father. Cook v. Bradley, 7 Conn. 57. Cf. Potter v. Earnest, 45 Ind. 416; Rowland v. Harris, 55 Ga. 141.

3. A father's note discharging his son's debt has been enforced. Seymour v. Prescott, 69 Me. 376. And so has a note to cover a son's defalcation. Popple v. Day, 123 Mass. 520. And to take up another note of an insolvent son. Myers v. Van Wagoner, 56 Mo. 115.

4. An accommodation party is one "who puts his name to a note or bill without any consideration, with the intention of lending his credit to the accommodated party." 1 Parsons N. & B. 195; Lenheim v. Wilmarding, 55 Pa. St. 75.

5. The benefit accruing to the drawer in case of an accommodation acceptance, or to the holder in case of an accommodation indorsement, is the consideration which supports the note or bill. Yeaton v. Bank of Alexandria, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 49.

An accommodation indorser's liability on a note is sufficient consideration to support a new note of his own to take up the first one. Spencer v. Ballou, 18 N. Y. 327.

6. Thompson v. Clubley, 1 M. & W. 212; Macy v. Kendall, 33 Mo. 164; Patten v. Pearson, 55 Me. 39.

Even if the party accommodated has released another indorser upon obtaining the accommodation indorsement the relation of parties is not changed. Larned v. Ogilby, 20 Iowa, 410.

But a deposit of money to cover the possible liability of the accommodating party deprives him of the character of an accommodator, and he becomes liable as any man who loans his credit on commercial paper must rest under the obligations of acceptor, indorser, etc., that he has himself assumed.[1]

But where an accommodation party is obliged to take up the note or bill he may recover from the persons accommodated by him the amount he has paid.[2]

Before the paper passes into the hands of a holder for value the accommodation may be revoked by the party giving it,[3] and his death is itself a revocation unless rights under such paper have accrued to a bona fide holder.[4]

Accommodation paper may be pledged,[5] but only the amount actually advanced upon it can be recovered from the party accommodating.[6]

The accommodation character of a note or bill is no defence at the suit of a holder for value,[7], though it has been diverted from the purpose for which the accommodation was given;[8] nor does mere knowledge of the accommodation on the part of a bona fide taker of the paper furnish a defence.[9]

20. Illegal Considerations.—If the consideration of a note or bill be against public policy or in contravention of some express statute, the instrument is void between the parties.[10]

Contracts with an alien enemy have been already considered,[11]

an ordinary party. Parker v. Lewis, 39 Tex. 394.

1. But as against persons not bona fide holders for value before maturity the defence of accommodation party may be made. 2 Rand. Com. Paper, 41; and see infra.

2. Such recovery was had by drawer against acceptor and indorser in Lewis v. Williams, 4 Bush (Ky.), 678. By maker against payee. Owens v. Miller, 29 Md. 144. By acceptor against drawer. Pomeroy v. Tanner, 70 N. Y. 547.

3. May v. Boisseau, 8 Leigh (Va.), 184; Dogan v. Dubois, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 85.

4. Smith v. Wyckoff, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 77.

But a bona fide holder who took the note of an accommodation maker after his death, but without knowledge of that, was held entitled to recover. Clark v. Thayer, 105 Mass. 216; Williams v. Bossor, 11 Ohio, 66.

5. Appleton v. Donaldson, 3 Pa. St. 386; Washington Bank v. Krum, 15 Iowa, 53; Ransom v. Turley, 50 Ind. 273.

6. Gordon v. Boppe, 55 N. Y. 665; Atlas Bank v. Doyle, 9 R. I. 76; Buchanan v. International Bank, 78 Ill. 500.

7. Monument Nat. Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 57; Mechanics' Banking Assoc. v. White Lead Co., 35 N. Y. 505; Bank of Ireland v. Beresford, 6 Dowl. 237.

8. Brooks v. Hay, 23 Hun (N.Y.), 372.

9. Fentum v. Pococke, 5 Taunt. 193; Grant v. Ellicott, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 227; Arnold v. Sprague, 34 Vt. 402; Washington Bank v. Krum, 15 Iowa, 53; Thatcher v. West River Nat. Bank, 19 Mich. 196.

Thus where a bill was accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, and the payee knew that fact, held, that he could recover against the acceptor. Israel v. Ayer, 2 S. Car. 344; Spurgin v. McPheeters, 42 Ind. 527.

Where an accommodation note is diverted from the purpose for which it was given, one who takes it with knowledge of that fact cannot recover of the accommodation party. Small v. Smith, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 583.

Nor can one who takes an over due note. Chester v. Dorr, 41 N. Y. 279.

10. Baker v. Collins, 9 Allen (Mass.), 253; Webster v. Sanborn, 47 Me. 471.

It must clearly appear that a commercial instrument is against public policy to render it void. Byles on Bills, 138; Richardson v. Mellish, 2 Bing. 229.

11. Ante, § 14. (a). The American cases on this subject have arisen out of the late Civil War, to which the rule of "alien enemy" could scarcely be rigidly ap-and notes evidencing such contracts are void, as calculated to injure the nation in times of special peril.

It is clearly to the detriment of the State that public offices should be bought or sold, and many commercial instruments made for the furtherance of the maker's desire for office have been declared utterly void, as against public policy.[1]

The composition of a felony has long been recognized as highly plied; but these have been held void, as against public policy.

Notes to procure substitutes for the Confederate army. Pickens v. Eskridge, 42 Miss. 114; Heidenreich v. Leonard, 21 La. Ann. 628; Critcher v. Holloway, 64 N. Car. 526; Chancely v. Bailey, 37 Ga. 532; Kingsbury v. Fleming, 66 N. Car. 524.

Notes for horses for the Confederate service. McMurtry v. Ramsey, 25 Ark. 350; Martin v. McMillan, 63 N. Car. 486. And for arms and other materials of war. Tatum v. Kelly, 25 Ark. 209. And even partly for such purposes with knowledge on the part of the payee and vendor. Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 342.

But the rulings in Tennessee have been exactly opposite on all these points. Puryear v. McGavock, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 461; Bank of Tennessee v. Cummings, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 465.

Such notes are good in the hands of a bona fide holder. Glenn v. Farmers' Bank, 70 N. Car. 191. And see, generally, Heard v. Swift, 32 Tex. 515; McKesson v. Jones, 66 N. Car. 258; Oxford Iron Co. v. Spradley, 51 Ala. 171; Ruddell v. Landers, 25 Ark. 328; Wallace v. Lark, 12 S. Car. 576; Ruckman v. Lightner, 24 Gratt. (Va.) 19; Hanauer v. Woodruff, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 439.

If the plaintiff hired a person of full age to the defendant, and received from him the note in suit for the services of the person so hired, this was an illegal transaction, and the note so given was void, as being contrary to public policy, and in violation of the thirteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, and of par. 17 of the bill of rights in the constitution of Georgia. Pitts v. Allen, 72 Ga. 69.

Upon the ground that Confederate currency was a device to subvert the Union, notes payable therein have been held absolutely void. George v. Terry, 26 Ark. 160; Scudder v. Thomas, 35 Ga. 364; Willis v. Johnson, 38 Tex. 303; Peltz v. Long, 40 Mo. 532; Hale v. Huston, 44 Ala. 134; Durbin v. McMichael, 22 La. Ann. 132; Robertson v. Shores, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 468. But other authorities hold that private contracts made within the lines of the de facto Confederate government and evidenced by notes payable in the only currency there obtainable were valid and enforceable. Simpson v. Lauderdale Co., 56 Ala. 64; Rivers v. Moss, 6 Bush (Ky.), 600; McMath v. Johnson, 41 Miss. 439; Gist v. Gans, 30 Ark. 285.

It has been held that unless expressly payable in Confederate currency national currency would be intended. Taylor v. Turley, 33 Md. 500; Dieltz v. Sadler, 37 Tex. 137. On the other hand, that parol evidence was admissible to show that Confederate funds were intended. Donley v. Tindall, 32 Tex. 43.

1. Blackford v. Preston, 8 T. R. 93; Layng v. Paine, Willes, 571; Commissioners of Johnson Co. v. Milliken, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 301; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136.

In this regard an administratorship is a public office. Porter v. Jones, 52 Mo. 399.

A note to procure the payee's influence in favor of the maker at election time is tainted with this fault. Swayze v. Hull, 3 Halst. (N. J.) 54. And one to induce the payee to resign and have the maker appointed in his stead is also void. Meacham v. Dow, 32 Vt. 721.

A note to a lobbyist in payment of services in securing legislation desired by the maker is invalid for similar reasons. Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 315; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. 441; Herman v. Edson, 9 Neb. 152.

A bona fide holder for value before maturity may, however, enforce a note given to influence the fixing of the county seat in a particular town. Thorne v. Yentz, 4 Cal. 321.

Contracts with a public officer to induce him to neglect his duty are void. Denny v. Lincoln, 5 Mass. 385 So held of a note to a sheriff for favors generally. Rogers v. Reeves, 1 T. R. 418. For delaying a sale or levy. Ashby v. Dillon, 19 Mo. 619; Goodale v. Holdridge, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 193. And of a note to procure payment of money to a contractor with a city before he was lawfully entitled. Devlin v. Brady, 36 N. Y. 531.

opposed to public policy, and notes given for that purpose are illegal and void.[1]

But private misdemeanors, for which an indictment might be brought, e.g., assault and battery, may be compounded, and a note which is really a release of damages for the civil action which might be brought will be upheld.[2]

Marriage being a domestic relation peculiarly favored by the law, notes the consideration of which are the prevention of marriage[3] or the procurement of divorce are void.[4]

So also are notes given in restraint of trade.[5]

1. Galton v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 475; Kirk v. Strickwood, 4 B. & Ad. 421; Hinesborough v. Sumner, 9 Vt. 23; Clark v. Ricker, 14 N. H. 44; Steuben Co. Bk. v. Matthewson, 5 Hill, 249; Sumner v. Summers, 54 Mo. 340; Breathwit v. Rogers, 32 Ark. 758; Collier v. Waugh, 64 Ind. 456; Wynne v. Whisenant, 37 Ala. 46; Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 90.

Even a note partly given to secure the acquittal of one prosecuted for a felony cannot be enforced. Ricketts v. Harvey, 106 Ind. 564. Cf. Haynes v. Rudd, 102 N. Y. 372.

Nor can a note to prevent the attendance of witnesses before the grand jury, and the consequent finding of an indictment for a felony. Henderson v. Palmer, 71 Ill. 579; Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 90.

No action can be maintained upon a promissory note, given by a person while under arrest on a complaint for larceny of property exceeding in value $100, to the owner of the property alleged to have been stolen, under an agreement that the complaint shall be placed on file, the plaintiff having received the note with notice of the circumstances; and the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person is not open in such action. Gorham v. Keyes, 137 Mass. 583.

Even without an agreement to prevent any prosecution a note given to procure a discharge from arrest for theft is illegal and void. McMahon v. Smith, 47 Conn. 223; Bowen v. Buck, 28 Vt. 308; Ozarne v. Haber, 30 La. Ann. 384; Couderman v. Hicks, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 108. Or one to prevent the prosecution for forgery of the son of the maker. National Bank of Oxford v. Kirk, 90 Pa. St. 49.

A promissory note, given to secure the restoration of stolen property, is void if a part of its consideration is an agreement not to search the house of the thief for the property before the next day, pending negotiations for a settlement of the matter. Merrill v. Carr, 60 N. H. 114.

The money for which the note was given may be actually due the payee, as in case of an embezzlement; but if the consideration for the note is even in part the abandonment or prevention of criminal proceedings, the instrument is illegal and void. Godwin v. Crowell, 56 Ga. 566; Taylor v. Jaques, 106 Mass. 291; Buck v. First Nat'l Bk., 27 Mich. 293.

But if there is no agreement to cheat the criminal law, and the money is really due, the note is good. Cohoes v. Cropsey, 55 N. Y. 685; Von Windisch v. Klaus, 46 Conn. 433.

2. Coppock v. Bower, 4 M. & W. 361; Price v. Summers, 2 South. (N. J.) 578.

But where a father took a note in settlement of an assault on his daughter, for which he had no private action, the note was held void as wholly without consideration. Loomis v. Cline, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 453.

And where the public has an interest, as in the opening of a road, a note for the withdrawal of opposition to the measure was held illegal. Smith v. Applegate, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 352.

And the public always has an interest in the fair trial of causes, so that notes in furtherance of agreements to suppress testimony are void. Fallows v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 475; Swan v. Chandler, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 97; Hoyt v. Macon, 2 Col. 502.

3. E.g., the acceptance of a bill on condition that the widowed drawer shall not marry again. Baker v. White, 2 Vern. 215; Sterling v. Sinnickson, 2 South. (N. J.) 756.

4. So held of a note for the withdrawal of a defence to a divorce suit. Stoutenburgh v. Lybrand, 13 Ohio St. 228; Adams v. Adams, 25 Minn. 72; Sayles v. Sayles, 21 N. H. 312.

But a note in consideration of procuring the marriage of the maker is also void. Roberts v. Roberts, 3 P. Wm. 66.

5. Chitty on Notes, etc., 99.

As to what contracts are in restraint of trade, see that title.

Gambling may be said now to be universally prohibited, and notes given upon gaming considerations to be void upon the broadest grounds of public policy.[1]

It may be asserted broadly that a note given for any purpose clearly opposed to sound morals is void, independent of any statutory prohibition.[2]

A fortiori notes issued in contravention of a statute are void even in the hands of a bona fide holder,[3] and the prohibition may be implied from the terms of the statute.[4]

Statutes passed for the collection of the revenue and the regulation of banking have furnished the most common examples of this species of illegal consideration.[5]

1. A promissory note given in a gambling transaction is void, although negotiable in form and in the hands of an innocent holder for value. Harper v. Young, 112 Pa. St 419; Traders' Bank v. Alsop, 64 Iowa, 97.

So is a note given by one loser to another for a share of the loss. Whitesides v. McGrath, 15 La. Ann. 401. Sed contra, Boggess v. Lilly, 18 Tex. 200.

And a note for money loaned to bet with at a horse-race. Ruckman v. Bryan, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 340.

Money so loaned cannot be recovered. Cannan v. Bryce, 3 B. & Ald. 179.

Stock-jobbing transactions, and the like, have been regarded as mere bets in some jurisdictions, and notes given to settle differences treated accordingly.

Thus "contracts for the purchase and sale of cotton futures are gaming contracts. They are immoral, illegal, and contrary to public policy; and all evidences of debt executed on such consideration are void in the hands of any person, even though it be a bona fide purchaser before due and without notice." Cunningham v. The National Bank of Augusta, 71 Ga. 400.

And a note given a broker for services in a gambling transaction in grain is utterly void. Barnard v. Backhaus, 52 Wis. 593.

Similar decisions on notes to cover operations in stocks are: Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. St. 89; Brua's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 294.

Cf. Hawley v. Bibb, 69 Ala. 52; Tenney v. Foote, 4 Bradw. (Ill.) 594; Shaw v. Clark, 49 Mich. 384; Sawyer v. Macauley, 18 S. Car. 543; Third Nat'l Bk. v. Tinsley, 11 Mo App. 498; Third Nat'l Bk. v. Harrison, 3 McCrary (U. S.), 316.

2. For example, a note for the rent of a house taken for purposes of prostitution is invalid even in the hands of a bona fide holder. Jennings v. Throgmorton, Ry. & M. 251. See 1 Parsons N. & B. 214; Story on Prom. Notes, § 198.

But a note by the father of an illegitimate child for its support is good, as being upon a meritorious consideration. Maxwell v. Campbell, 8 Ohio St. 265. Even if a part of the agreement be that bastardy proceedings be dropped. Jackson v. Finney, 33 Ga. 512.

So, too, is a note by a seducer to the parents or parent of the girl seduced. Merritt v. Fleming, 42 Ala. 234; Cutter v. Collins, 12 Cush. 233; Harter v. Johnson, 16 Ind. 271.

3. Nerot v. Wallace, 3 T. R. 17.

So held of a bill of credit issued by a State in violation of the constitution of the United Sates. Craig v. State of Missouri, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 410.

4. Story on Prom. Notes, § 189.

"In order to render a negotiable security void, by reason of its consideration being illegal, in the hands of an innocent holder for value, without notice, and before due, the statute which makes such contract illegal and void must also make the same a crime, or the act itself must be immoral and contra bonos mores." Rhodes v. Beall, 73 Ga. 641.

If the statute prescribe a penalty for doing any act, and a note be issued in consideration of the prohibited act, it is void. 1 Parsons N. & B. 213; Griffith v. Wells, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 226

5. Thus where banks were forbidden by statute to issue promissory notes, "post notes" were held illegal and void. Reynolds v. Nichols, 12 Iowa, 399; Brown v. Tarkington, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 377.

So, too, was an insurance company's note for an unauthorized loan. Utica Ins. Co. v. Caldwell, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 296.

Notes the consideration of which involved smuggling are utterly void. Biggs v. Lawrence, 3 T. R. 454; Hodgson v. Temple, 5 Taunt. 181; Taylor v. Crowland Gas Co., 10 Exch. 293.

The repeal of a statute which invalidated a note does not legalize a note made before such repeal,[1] and renewal notes are affected by the illegality of the original consideration.[2]

When part of the consideration is lawful and part illegal the whole instrument is in general void.[3]

21. Absence and Failure of Consideration.—Consideration may be wholly lacking for a note or bill, or it may fail either totally or partially. In each case a defence to the instrument is furnished, as against some at least of the parties to it.

Such defences are in general good between the original parties.[4]

But they are not admissible against a bona fide holder for value before maturity, and without notice.[5]

An acceptance to secure payment of moneys expended or received at an unlicensed theatre is also void. Sugars v. Brinkworth, 4 Camp. 46. But see Good v. Allen, 15 Bradw. (Ill.) 663. So is a note for the services of an unlicensed physician. May v. Williams, 27 Ala. 267. Sed contra of the services of an unlicensed auctioneer. Gunnaldson v. Nyhus, 27 Minn. 44.

The liquor laws have furnished many and diverse decisions. All instruments founded on a violation of them have been held void. Hubbell v. Flint, 13 Gray (Mass.), 277; Brigham v. Potter, 14 Gray (Mass.), 522; Griffith v. Wells, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 226; Caldwell v. Wentworth, 14 N. H. 431. So is a note in consideration of the assignment of a non-transferable license to sell liquor. Sanderson v. Goodrich, 46 Barb. 616.

But a note for liquor sold without a United States license has been upheld in Pennsylvania; the statute not making such sales expressly void Rahter v. First Nat'l Bank, 92 Pa. St. 393.

And a note for liquor sold in violation of statute is good in the hands of a bona fide holder, the burden being on him to prove his bona fides, according to Paton v. Coit, 5 Mich. 505; Cattle v. Cleaves, 70 Me. 256; Doolittle v. Lyman, 44 N. H. 608.

1. Bauchor v. Mansel, 47 Me. 58; Gorsuth v. Butterfield, 2 Wis. 237.

2. Chapman v. Black, 2 B. & Ald. 588; Southall v. Rigg, 11 C. B. 481.

3. Taylor v. Pickett, 52 Iowa, 467; Hoyt v. Macon, 2 Col. 502; Everhart v. Puckett, 73 Ind. 409; Cotten v. McKenzie, 57 Miss. 418; Wisner v. Bardwell, 38 Mich. 278; Carleton v. Woods, 28 N. H. 290; Saratoga Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87; Perkins v. Cummings, 2 Gray, 258; Woodruff v. Hinman, 11 Vt. 592; Potts v. Gray, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 468; Scott v. Gilmore, 3 Taunt.. 226.

But a renewal of a note, given partly for a valid consideration, for the valid part only is good. Boulton v. Coghlan, 1 Bing. N. C. 640; Hav v. Ayling, 20 L. J. Q. B. 171; s. c., 16 Q. B. 423.

And a partial payment made on a note partly for a valid consideration may be retained and appropriated to the payment of that part. Cruikshanks v. Rose, 5 C. & P. 19. Contra, Gammon v. Plaisted, 51 N. H. 444.

Where, too, the valid part can be distinguished from the illegal, a recovery can be had for that portion. Guild v. Belcher, 119 Mass. 257; McGuiness v. Bligh, 11 R. I. 94; Clopton v. Elkin, 49 Miss. 95; Brou v. Becnel, 20 La. Ann. 254; Merritt v. Merle, 22 La. Ann. 257. Although in general money paid on a note void for its illegal consideration may be recovered. Knowlton v. Spring Co., 57 N. Y. 518; Howson v. Hancock, 8 T. R. 575.

4. Thus a payee who has been accommodated by the maker or acceptor cannot recover. Darnell v. Williams, 2 Stark. 166; Patten v. Pearson, 55 Me. 39; Eastman v. Shaw, 65 N. Y. 522.

An acceptor may show as against the drawer that his acceptance was for too large a sum by mistake. Third Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 3 McCrary (U. S.), 316.

And on a note made to an agent such defence is good against his principal. Boyt v. Whitehead, 50 Ga. 76; Puget de Bras v. Forbes, 1 Esp. 117. And may be set up by the executor of the maker. Capp v. Sawyer, 6 N. H. 386.

5. Rahm v. Bridge Co., 16 Kans. 530; Scott v. Seely, 27 La. Ann. 95; Hawkins v. Neal, 60 Miss 256; Matthews v. Crosby. 56 N. H. 21; Polhemus v. Ann Arbor Sav. Bank, 27 Mich. 44; Daniels v. Wilson, 21 Minn. 530; Harris v. Bradley, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 310; Chicopee Bank v. Chapin, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 40.

Even if the note was originally issued as a mere gift. Whitaker v. Edmonds, 1 Ad. & E. 638; Disher v. Disher, 1 P.

Passing from the persons against whom defences relating to consideration may be set up, the character of such defences is limited only by the variety of contracts and services for which men may issue notes or bills.

It is well settled that total failure of consideration is a good defence.[1]

Partial failure is generally a good defence pro tanto,[2] and may

Wms. 204; Heydon v. Thompson, 3 Nev. & M. 319.

So a check for a greater amount than the depositor's balance certified by the bank-teller can be enforced by a bona fide holder, although the teller had no right to make such certification. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Butchers' Bank, 16 N.Y. 125.

The rule is just as stringent where the consideration has failed. Leather v. Simpson, L. R. 11 Eq. 398; Cowing v. Allman, 71 N. Y. 435; Blackmer v. Phillips, 67 N. C. 340; Hancock v. Hale, 17 Fla. 808; Morris v. White, 28 La. Ann. 855; Stone v. Young, 5 Kans. 229; Smith v. Rawson, 61 Ga. 208; Mobile Sav. Bank v. Supervisors, 22 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 580; Bearden v. Moses, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 459.

Therefore it cannot, as against such a holder, be shown that a commercial instrument was given for a bill of lading which proved a forgery. Robinson v. Reynolds, 2 Q. B. 196; Craig v. Sibbett, 15 Pa. St. 238. Or for a patent which proved worthless or even void. Smith v. Hiscock, 14 Me. 449. Or for goods which were but partly delivered. Baldwin v. Killian, 63 Ill. 550. Or for a vessel which was falsely represented to be seaworthy. Davis v. McCready, 17 N. Y. 230.

In some States bona fide holders are protected against such defences by statute. Colorado. 1877, G. L. § 112. Georgia. 1873, Code, § 3471. Illinois. 1880, Hurd's R. S. 727. Indiana. 1876, Davis, R. S. vol. ii. p. 76. Iowa. McClain's Stats. § 2114. Texas. 1879, R. S. art. 272.

Although in Vermont, where the statute provides for the defence of partial failure of consideration, it has been held not to affect bona fide holders. Farrar v. Freeman, 44 Vt. 63.

Even the defence of illegal consideration does not avail against a bona fide holder. So held of a note given for a wager. Shirley v. Howard, 53 Ill. 455; or to aid rebellion. Glenn v. Farmers' Bank, 70 N. Car. 191.

But if by statute the illegality has rendered the note absolutely void, then not even a bona fide holder can recover upon it. Tilden v. Blair, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 241; Great Falls Bank v. Farmington, 41 N. H. 32; Knox v. White, 20 La. Ann. 326; Smith v. Columbus State Bank, 9 Neb. 31; Hill v. Northrup, 4 T. & C. (N. Y.) 120.

Therefore when a statute declares that "no action shall be maintained . . . for the value" of liquor, a note for liquor sold cannot be sued on by a bona fide holder. Streit v. Sanborn, 47 Vt. 702. Though the general rule as to liquor notes is just the reverse. Doe v. Burnham, 31 N. H. 426; Taylor v. Page, 6 Allen (Mass.), 86.

So the statutes against gaming have prevented recoveries by bona fide holders in Craig v. Andrews, 7 Iowa, 17; Mordecai v. Dawkins, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 262; Tenney v. Foote, 4 Bradw. (Ill.) 594.

If the first indorsee takes the paper with notice of the absence or failure of consideration, this will not deprive a second indorsee who has no such knowledge of the character of a bona fide holder. Masters v. Ibberson, 8 C. B. 100; Hascall v. Whitmore, 19 Me. 102.

But in general no holder will be protected beyond the price paid by him. Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 261; DeWitt v. Perkins, 22 Wis. 451; Anderson v. Nicholas, 28 N. Y. 600.

1. Starr v. Torrey, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 190; Wells v. Hopkins, 5 M. & W. 7; Jackson v. Warwick, 7 T. R. 121. Even on a renewal note. Hooker v. Hubbard, 102 Mass. 239.

But it may be waived by the note having been given upon settlement of an account. Carruth v. Carter, 26 La. Ann. 331. Or by giving a new note upon the payee's promise to make good the consideration of the original note. Griffith v. Trabue, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 645.

Where the consideration expressed in a promissory note was "for value received," in a suit thereon, the defendant might plead and prove by parol that the consideration was a contract of hiring which had failed, according to its own terms, by reason of the death of the person; aliter, if the consideration had been stated in the note. Pitts v. Allen, 72 Ga. 69.

2. Jeffries v. Austen, Stra. 647; Wyck-consist of almost any act or omission of the promisee tending to the injury of the promisor.[1] off v. Runyon, 4 Vr. (N. J.) 107; Black v. Ridgway, 131 Mass. 80; Morgan v. Fallenstein, 27 Ill. 31; Petillo v. Hopson, 23 Ark. 196; Gamble v. Grimes, 2 Ind. 392.

1. That part of a note was for a firm debt contracted before the maker became a member of the firm, is a good partial defence. Guild v. Belcher, 119 Mass. 257.

So is the non-performance of part of the agreement, which was the consideration for the note. Payne v. Cutler, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 605; Coburn v. Ware, 30 Me. 202; Francis v. Miller, 8 Md 274; Bar v. Baker, 9 Mo. 840; Holzworth v. Koch, 26 Ohio St. 33; Stacy v. Kemp, 97 Mass. 166.

But at common law the unliquidated partial failure of consideration is no defence, even against the payee. Evans v. Williamson, 79 N. Car. 86; Stone v. Peake, 16 Vt. 218; Drew v. Towle, 27 N. H. 455.

So held where the note had been given for land, and a mortgage appeared, or the title partly failed; the purchaser-maker being left to the covenants in his deed. Chase v. Weston, 12 N. H. 413; Greenleaf v. Cook, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 13; Thompson v. Mansfield, 43 Me. 490; Reese v. Gordon, 19 Cal. 147; Martin v. Foreman, 18 Ark. 249.

But by statute such a defence may be pleaded in Texas (1879, R. S. p. 47, art. 272); Iowa (McC. Stat., § 2114); New Hampshire (1878, G. L. 509, § 13); Indiana (2 Dav. R. S. 1876, p. 76, § 81); Illinois (1880 R. S., p. 727, § 9); Georgia (1873, Code, § 3471); Florida (1850, P. L. 125); Colorado (1877, G. L. p. 112, § 97).

Where the amount of money called for by the expressed consideration is not fully paid, this is clearly a partial defence. McCord v. Crooker, 83 Ill. 556; Exchange Bank v. Butner, 60 Ga. 654.

But where the note is for goods sold, and they prove partly worthless—O'Neal v. Bacon, 1 Houst. (Del.) 215; Obbard v. Betham, M. & M. 483—or inferior in quality—Morgan v. Richardson, 1 Camp. 40 n.—these facts furnish no defence; the maker must resort to his cross-action.

Yet where the goods proved wholly valueless, as where a note was given for a supposed slave who was really free, this amounts to a total failure of consideration, and furnishes a defence. Livingston v. Bain, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 384; Johnson v. Titus, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 606; French v. Gordon, 10 Kans. 370. And the worthlessness may arise from the failure to deliver all the goods contracted for. Agra, etc., Bank v. Leighton, L. R. 2 Ex. 56. But this of course is a pure question of fact.

Where the consideration for a note is a patent, and it proves worthless, the failure is total, and affords a defence. Clough v. Patrick, 37 Vt. 421; Bierce v. Stocking, 11 Gray (Mass.), 174; Earl v. Page, 6 N. H. 477. Sed contra, Wilson v. Hentges, 26 Minn. 288. But that it turns out of less value than anticipated is no defence. Day v. Nix, 9 Moo. 159.

A good partial defence is furnished by a failure of part of consideration, in quantity, as where the note was for a lot of twenty-six acres of land, and it turned out to contain a less quantity. Hamilton v. Conyers, 28 Ga. 276. Cf. Marlow v. King, 17 Tex. 177.

Where the title to land for which a note has been given fails utterly, that is clearly a defence. Wright v. McDonald, 44 Ga. 452; Curtis v. Clark, 33 Mass. 509; Heaton v. Myers, 4 Cal. 59; Stewart v. Insall, 9 Tex. 397; Garrett v. Crosson, 32 Pa. St. 373. At least where the promisee has been evicted, and is therefore unable to fulfil his contract. Rice v. Goddard, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 293; Wilson v. Jordan, 3 Stew. & P. 92. But it has also been held that no eviction is necessary. Sumter v. Welsh, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 539.

But a mere litigated claim of title to the land furnishes no defence whatever. Baldridge v. Cook, 27 Tex. 565.

These cases are aside from any question of fraud, for a false assertion of seizing and possession on the part of the promisee will, of course, avoid the note. Stone v. Fowle, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 166; Coburn v. Haley, 57 Me. 346.

As to personal property, although inferiority of quality, has been held generally to furnish no defence. See supra, and Detrick v. McGlone, 46 Ind. 291; Bryant v. Pember, 45 Vt. 487; Richards v. Betzer, 53 Ill. 466.

Yet where there has been a warranty, as of a hedge to last five years—Edwards v. Pyle, 23 Ill. 354—or of a machine to do certain work—Thompson v. Wheeler Mfg. Co., 29 Kans. 476; Aldrich v. Stockwell, 9 Allen (Mass.), 45—a failure to fulfil the warranty will furnish a defence total or partial, as the case may be.

The consideration of a note or bill is often an executor's agreement to do or abstain from doing a certain thing, and when this agreement is not carried out, a defence at once arises, as where the

It is to be observed that there is a presumption of consideration in favor of all negotiable instruments,[1] and that therefore it is not necessary in the first instance either to aver or prove actual consideration,[2] the burden of proof being on him who denies it.[3] goods for which the note was given were never delivered. Mitchell v. Stinson, 80 Ind. 324. Or the balance of work on a contract for which an acceptance was made, never performed. Trickey v. Larne, 6 M. & W. 278.

When one note was given in consideration of the surrender of another, failure to make the surrender is a defence. Jeffries v. Lamb, 73 Ind. 202.

Failure to deliver possession of premises for the rent of which a note has been given is a defence to the note. Andrews v. Woodcock, 14 Iowa, 397. So is failure to deliver a policy of insurance for which a premium note has been given. Lawrence v. Griswold, 30 Mich. 410.

Where the discontinuance of a pending suit was the consideration, neglect to discontinue is a defence. Bookstaver v. Jayne, 60 N. Y. 145.

On a note given for services, a receipt in full subsequently given for the same services shows that the consideration has failed. Pope v. Hays, 19 Tex. 170. And see generally, Little v. Thurston, 58 Me. 86; Tillotson v. Grapes, 4 N. H. 444; Dubois v. Baker, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 556; Scotten v. Randolph, 96 Ind. 581.

But where the agreement, the failure to perform which is complained of, is entirely distinct from, or merely collateral to, the making of the note or acceptance, such failure is not a defence.

Therefore, when a note was given towards the endowment of a college, and an agreement made not to diminish the college funds, non-performance of that agreement furnishes no defence to the note; for the principal intent was to benefit the college. Simpson Centenary College v. Bryan, 50 Iowa, 293.

And where a note was given for the purchase-price of bonds, the seller agreeing to get them indorsed by a certain company, failure to procure the indorsement is no defence to the note, for the bonds which were the real consideration were delivered as agreed. Stanton v. Maynard, 7 Allen (Mass.), 335. And see on this point, Jones v. Council Bluffs Bank, 34 Ill. 313; Crawford v. Robie, 42 N. H. 162; Bourland v. Gibson, 91 Ill. 470; Henshaw v. Dutton, 59 Mo. 139; Howe Machine Co. v. Reber, 66 Ind. 498; Lester v. Fowler, 43 Ga. 190; Hodgkins v. Moulton, 100 Mass. 309.

It sometimes happens that after the consideration has been received, but before the maturity of the paper given, an apparent failure of consideration arises, as where a note was given for an animal which died before maturity; but this furnishes no defence, there having been no warranty. Winslow v. Wood, 70 N. Car. 430.

So the destruction by fire of premises for the rent of which a note has been given does not constitute a defence. Diamond v. Harris, 33 Tex. 634; Brooks v. Cutter, 119 Mass. 132.

So held also where the note was for the good-will of a business, which financial panic destroyed. Smock v. Pierson, 68 Ind. 405. Or for a patent which a patent subsequently granted rendered valueless. Crow v. Eichinger, 34 Ind. 65. Cf. Clark v. Smith, 21 Minn. 539. These are merely hard cases. See to the same effect Woodruff v. Webb, 32 Ark. 612; Dowling v. Blackman, 70 Ala. 303; Button v. Clark, 16 Ohio, 297; Kerchner v. Gettys, 18 S. Car. 521; Cook v. Whitfield, 41 Miss. 541.

1. Ingersoll v. Martin, 58 Md. 67; Campbell v. McCormac, 90 N. Car. 491; Caples v. Branham, 20 Mo. 244; Harris v. Cato, 26 Tex. 338; Matteson v. Morris, 40 Mich. 52; Hartman v. Shaffer, 71 Pa. St. 312; Townsend v. Derby, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 363; Holliday v. Atkinson, 5 B. & C. 501.

"Value received" is unnecessary; the presumption exists without such words. Kendall v. Galvin, 15 Me. 131.

This presumption is in favor of negotiability, therefore non-negotiable notes do not import a consideration. Buckleback v. Wilkins, 20 Pa. St. 26; Bristol v. Warner, 19 Conn. 7; Wingo v. McDowell, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 446. But it may be otherwise by statute. Rogers v. Maxwell, 4 Ind. 243.

2. Caples v. Branham, 20 Mo. 244; Friedman v. Johnson, 21 Minn. 12; Wilson v. Codman, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 195; James v. Scott, 7 Port. (Ala.) 30.

3. Trustees v. Hill, 12 Iowa, 462; Sawyer v. Vaughn, 25 Me. 337; Nevins v. Chapman, 15 La. Ann. 353; Martin v. Tucker, 35 Ark. 279; James v. Chalmers, 6 N. Y. 209; Brown v. Kinsey, 81 N. Car. 245; Robins v. Maidstone, 4 Q. B. 815; Pixley v. Boynton, 79 Ill. 351.

Proof is necessary to overcome this presumption, and a mere denial in the

22. Acceptance of Bills of Exchange.—(a) Presentment.—Although acceptance is in general the only means by which the holder of a bill can gain any rights against the drawee, no presentment for that purpose is necessary upon bills payable on demand or upon a day named.[1]

By waiver of acceptance also, presentment is waived.[2]

And where the drawee cannot legally accept, e.g., being an infant, or cannot be found, it is unnecessary.[3]

The usual and proper manner of making presentment is by exhibiting[4] the bill and unequivocally demanding acceptance.[5]

The proper person to make presentment is the lawful holder or his agent,[6] and the person to whom it must be made the drawee or his agent.[7]

The time within which presentment must be made is said to be a reasonable time,[8] and where the facts are undisputed the question of diligence is one of law,[9] to be decided by the courts upon the admitted or proven facts of each particular case.[10] pleadings is not enough. Gutwillig v. Stumes, 47 Wis. 428; Trustees v. Fleming. 10 Bush (Ky.), 234; Greer v. George, 8 Ark. 131; Long v. Spencer, 78 Pa. St. 303. Sed contra, Goodenough v. Huff, 53 Vt. 482.

1. Philpot v. Bryant, 3 C. & P. 244; Fall River Union Bank v. Willard, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 216; Townsley v. Sumrall. 2 Pet. (U. S.) 170; House v. Adams, 48 Pa. St. 261; Plato v. Reynolds, 27 N. Y. 586; Glasgow v. Copeland, 8 Mo. 268; Carmichael v. Bank of Pa., 4 How (Miss.) 567.

But a bill payable on a day certain may be presented at any time before that day. Bachellor v. Priest, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 399.

2. Carson v. Russell, 26 Tex. 452; Liggett v. Weed, 7 Kans. 273; Denegre v. Milne, 10 La. An. 324.

But waiver of protest does not waive presentment. Drinkwater v. Tibbetts, 17 Me. 16.

3. So provided by statute in California (1880, 1 Hitt. Codes, § 8218); Dakota (1877, Rev. C. §§ 1911, 1912); Utah (1882, Laws, 62, § 88).

But where the drawer and drawee are one person it is still necessary. Kaskaskia Bridge Co. v. Shannon, 6 Ill. 15. So too, where the drawee has been instructed by the drawer not to accept. Hill v. Heap, Dow & R. 57; Byles on Bills, 185.

4. Fall River Union Bank v. Willard, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 216.

Though this is said not to be absolutely necessary. Fisher v. Beckwith, 19 Vt. 31.

5. So that taking the bill away and agreeing to call again with it is no presentment. Case v. Burt, 15 Mich. 82.

6. Story on Bills, § 229.

Agency ends with death, and a presentment after the holder's death is invalid. Gale v. Tappan, 12 N. H. 145.

The ordinary agent in such cases is a notary, and in some States a notary's clerk may make the presentment. Lee v. Buford, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 7; Schuchardt v. Hall, 36 Md. 590.

7. Wiseman v. Chiapella, 23 How. (U. S.) 368.

Parol evidence may prove the agency. Nelson v. Fotterall, 7 Leigh (Va.), 179.

But presentment to any person found on the drawee's premises is not enough. Cheek v. Roper, 5 Esp. 175.

If the drawees are partners presentment to one is enough. Mt. Pleasant Branch Bank v. McLaran, 26 Pa. St. 306; Gates v. Beecher, 60 N. Y. 518. Aliter if they are not. Union Bank v. Willis, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 504.

Where the firm has gone out of business presentment at their former office is bad. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Henschen, 52 Mo. 207.

8. Prescott Bank v. Caverly, 7 Gray (Mass.), 217; Nichols v. Blackmore, 27 Tex. 586; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Allen, 11 Mich. 501; Knott v. Venable, 42 Ala. 186; Aymar v. Beers, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 705.

9. Chambers v. Hill, 26 Tex. 472.

But generally, the facts being disputed, the question goes to the jury under the instructions of the court. Walsh v. Dart, 23 Wis. 334; Salisbury v. Renick, 44 Mo. 554; Mellish v. Rawdon, 9 Bing. 416.

10. The distance of the place of acceptance from that of drawing is sometimes the test, and two and a half months' delay in presentment on a bill drawn in Geor-

The place where presentment for acceptance is to be made is usually mentioned in the bill itself, and presentment at the place so named is sufficient, unless to the knowledge of the holder the drawee's office or residence is in another place.[1]

Where the drawee has changed his residence since the drawing of the bill, it is incumbent on the holder to seek him with due diligence.[2]

(b) When and by Whom Made.—Since it is only by the act of acceptance that a drawee can in general incur any liability to a holder,[3] the means of creating this liability should be and are carefully guarded.

The drawee himself,[4] therefore, or his authorized agent[5] is the only person to give an acceptance.

gia on New York has been held reasonable. Robinson v. Ames, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 146. And five months on one drawn in Rio Janeiro on London. Mellish v. Rawdon, 9 Bing. 416.

But six years, when all parties reside in the same State, is unreasonable. Eling v. Brinkerhoff, 2 Hall (N. Y.), 459. And fourteen days in forwarding a sight draft from Wisconsin to New York has been so held. Walsh v. Dart, 23 Wis. 334. And see Vantrot v. McCulloch, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 272; Dumont v. Pape, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 367; Olshausen v. Lewis, 1 Biss. 419; Allen v. Suydam, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 321.

More time is allowed on a bill put in circulation than when it is retained by the payee. Wallace v. Agry, 4 Mason (U. S.), 336; Richardson v. Fenner, 10 La. Ann. 599; Straker v. Graham, 4 M. & W. 721.

And all the circumstances will be considered even when the payee himself superintends the collection, as where a bill was received by the corporation payee in due course of mail two days before their treasurer returned from an absence. On his arrival he at once forwarded it to the place of payment, where it was received three days later and presented two days later still. Yet it was held that due diligence had been used and the drawer liable, though the drawee failed the day of the bill's arrival at his place of business. Muncy Borough School District v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 464.

Valid excuses also for delay in presentment are: The outbreak of war. Dunbar v. Tyler, 44 Miss. 1. Loss of the original bill. Aboon v. Bosworth, 1 R. I. 401. Or the sudden illness of the holder. Aymar v. Beers, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 705. And generally, by some statutes, unavoidable circumstances over which the holder has no control. California, Code, § 8219; Utah, P. L. 1882, 62, § 89; Dakota, Rev. Code, §§ 1911–12—acts doubtless merely declaratory of the common law.

1. Wolfe v. Jewett, 10 La. 383.

So, though London is named and the drawee lived in Liverpool, presentment in Liverpool is good. Mason v. Franklin, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 202.

2. Hine v. Allely, 4 B. & Ad. 624; Bateman v. Joseph, 12 East, 433.

Diligence is for the jury. Smith v. Bank of N. S. Wales, 41 L. J. P. C. 26.

But where the drawee has absconded or cannot be found presentment at his last known residence is enough. Ratcliff v. Planters' Bank, 2 Sn. (Miss.), 425, and cases supra.

3. Wharton v. Walker, 4 B. & C. 163; Bailey v. South Western Bank, 11 Fla. 266; De Liquero v. Munson, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 15; New York, etc., Bank v. Gibson, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 574.

Nor does the fact that the drawee is indebted to the drawer create any obligation to accept. Grant v. Austen, 3 Price, 58; 1 Daniel on Neg. Inst. 442.

Nor is the drawee liable to the holder in damages for non-acceptance. New York, etc., Bank v. Gibson, 5 Duer (N. Y.). 574.

4. Davis v. Clarke, 6 Q. B. 16; May v. Kelly, 27 Ala. 497.

If a stranger accepts it, it may be regarded as his promissory note. Fielder v. Marshall, 9 C. B. 606.

Where no drawee is named, but merely the place of payment, one who writes "accepted" on the bill will admit himself to be meant, and be held as the acceptor. Wheeler v. Webster, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 1; Gray v. Milner, 3 Moore, 91; s. c., 8 Taunt. 739.

5. But on demand he must show his authority to accept. Sayer v. Kitchen,

If the bill is drawn on a firm, an acceptance by one partner is sufficient.[1]

The reasonable time within which acceptance must be made after presentment is twenty-four hours;[2] but after refusal, if the holder chooses to again present it, the drawee may change his mind and accept.[3]

The law merchant does not require that an acceptance be dated;[4] but when the bill is payable a time certain after sight it should be, although if omitted the real date may be shown by parol.[5]

(c) Methods.—There is no special form of words necessary to create acceptance;[6] it may even be implied from the conduct of the drawee.[7]

Perhaps the most common method is by writing the word "accepted" across the face of the bill.[8]

1 Esp. 209. And if he do so without authority he binds himself personally. West London, etc., Bk. v. Kitson, L. R. 13 Q. B. D. 360. Contra, Heenan v. Nash, 8 Minn. 407.

1. Even if he sign his individual name. Mason v. Rumsey, 1 Camp. 384.

2. Case v. Burt, 15 Mich. 82; Connelly v. McKean, 64 Pa. St. 113; Overman v. Hoboken City Bank, 2 Vr. (N.J.) 563; Wilcox v. Beal, 3 La. Ann. 404.

And if the drawee within twenty-four hours neglects to make any answer it becomes the holder's duty to protest for non-acceptance. Ingram v. Foster, 2 J. P. Smith, 243.

3. Exchange Bank of St. Louis v. Rice, 98 Mass. 288; Wynne v. Raikes, 5 East, 514.

An acceptance may be made after transfer of a bill. Bank of Louisville v. Ellery, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 630. Or after maturity. Grant v. Shaw, 16 Mass. 341. Or the death of the drawer. Cutts v. Perkins, 12 Mass. 206; Hammonds v. Barclay, 2 East, 227.

4. 1 Parsons Notes and Bills, 282.

A date affixed to the drawee's signature even in a different handwriting is presumptive evidence of the time when the acceptance was made. Glassop v. Jacob, 4 Camp. 227.

5. Kenner v. Creditors, 1 La. 120.

The presumption is merely that acceptance was after the date of the bill. Roberts v. Bethell, 12 C. B. 778.

6. Billings v. De Vaux, 3 M. & G. 565; Story on Bills, § 251.

7. As where A purchased goods for B, made advances on them and drew on B for the amount of the advances, who received the goods and their proceeds but refused the bill, it was held that an acceptance should be implied from his conduct. Nutting v. Sloan, 57 Ga. 392. And see Hoare v. Dresser, 7 H. L. Cas. 290; Rees v. Warwick, 2 B. & Ald. 113.

8. This certainly is sufficient at common law. Corlett v. Conway, 5 M. & W. 653; Spear v. Pratt, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 582; Kaufman v. Barringer, 20 La. Ann. 419. Though now bad in England, under 41 and 42 Vict. c. 13.

"Excepted" ignorantly written for "accepted" has been held enough. Miller v. Butler, 1 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 470.

Any equivalent of "accepted," e.g. "seen" or "presented," if the intention was to accept, would be enough. 1 Parsons N. & B. 282. Cf. Corlett v. Conway, 5 M. & W. 653.

"This is my signature and I will pay" amounts to an acceptance. Edson v. Miller, 22 N. H. 183; Leach v. Buchanan, 4 Esp. 226. But "the bill shall have my attention" does not. Rees v. Warwick, 2 B. & Ald. 113. And see Cook v. Baldwin, 120 Mass. 317; Block v. Wilkinson, 42 Ark. 253*.

The acceptor need not see the bill. First Nat'l Bk. v. Hatch, 78 Mo. 13. So that if he write saying "I am prepared to pay"—Billings v. De Vaux, 3 M. & G. 565—or, "the bill is correct and shall be paid"—Ward v. Allen, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 53—his letter amounts to acceptance.

But indefinite expressions, as "I will have to pay it"—Martin v. Bacon, 2 Mills 132—or, "it is all right"—Powell v. Jones, 1 Esp. 17—are not acceptances, for no promise to pay can be inferred.

Nor is part payment an acceptance, unless a promise to pay the rest be shown. Hunter v. Cobb, 1 Bush (Ky.), 239; Bassett v. Haines, 9 Cal. 260; Cook v. Baldwin, 120 Mass. 317.

Nor after once refusing acceptance will the drawee's promise "to try and save the amount" for the holder—Parkhurst v. Dickinson, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 307—

But by common law it is not necessary to signify acceptance in writing; a verbal acceptance is valid.[1]

Many recent statutes, however, require acceptances to be in writing.[2]

But where there is no statute to the contrary, the acceptance of bill will even be inferred from an authority given the drawer to draw it,[3] or an agreement made beforehand that it shall be accepted when presented.[4] or to "arrange to have it satisfactorily provided for"—Webb v. Mears, 45 Pa. St. 222—create acceptances.

If the drawee of a bill of exchange does anything with or to the bill, or writes anything thereon which does not clearly negative an intention to accept it, then he will be charged as an acceptor; but the words "Kiss my foot," written on the bill by the drawee and signed by him, can have no other meaning than a decided and contemptuous refusal to accept it, and on such words he cannot be holden as an acceptor. Norton v. Knapp, 64 Iowa, 112. And see, further, McEowen v. Scott, 49 Vt. 376; National Bank v. Second National Bank, 69 Ind. 479; Pridgen v. Cox, 13 Tex. 257; Gallagher v. Black, 44 Me. 99; Petersen v. Hubbard, 28 Mich. 197; Shaver v. W. U. Tel. Co., 57 N. Y. 459; Brinkman v. Hunter, 73 Mo. 172; Sturges v. Fourth Nat. Bk., 75 Ill. 595; Spaulding v. Andrews, 48 Pa. St. 411; Hatcher v. Stalworth, 26 Miss. 376.

1. Ward v. Allen, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 53; Bird v. McIlvaine, 10 Ind. 40; Dull v. Bricker, 76 Pa. St. 255; Phelps v. Northrup, 56 Ill. 156; Walters v. G. H., etc., Co., 1 Tex. App. 753; Jarvis v. Wilson, 46 Conn. 90; McCutcheon v. Rice, 56 Miss. 455; Whilden v. Merchants', etc., Bank, 64 Ala. 1; Mason v. Dousay, 35 Ill. 424; Arnold v. Sprague, 34 Vt. 402; Hunter v. Cobb, 1 Bush (Ky.). 239; Sproat v. Mathews, 1 T. R. 182; Walker v. Lide, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 249.

2. Alabama. 1876, Code, § 2101. Arizona. 1877, C. L. §§ 3469–71. Dist. Col. 1857, R. C. 134. Dakota. 1877, Rev. Code, § 1875. Idaho. 1874, R. L. 653. Kansas. 1879, Ch. c. 14, § 8. Maine. 1871, R. S. c. 32, § 10. Michigan. 1871, 1 C. L. 516, §7. Minnesota. 1878, G. S. 316, § 13. Mississippi. 1880, Rev. C. § 1133. Nevada. 1872, G. L. 718, § 7. Pennsylvania. P. L. 1881, 17. Utah. P. L. 1882, 60. § 73. Washington. 1881, Code, §§ 2302–2306. Wisconsin. 1878, R. S. § 1681.

3. Such authority, if explicitly referring to the bill actually drawn, amounts to an acceptance. Bayard v. Lathy, 2 McL. (U. S.) 462; Coolidge v. Payson, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 66; Ulster Co. Bank v. McFarlan, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 553; Gates v. Parker, 43 Me. 544; Lathrop v. Harlow, 23 Mo. 209; Merchants' Bank v. Griswold, 72 N. Y. 472.

Authority to draw for advances on grain in sums that may be necessary, "and on such terms as you may make advantageously for us," amounts to an unconditional acceptance of drafts for advances. Bissell v. Lewis, 4 Mich. 450. And power "to value against us for any cotton he may ship to us" is an unconditional acceptance of drafts for the price of cotton so shipped. Johnson v. Blakemore, 28 La. Ann. 140.

But the authority must be known to the holder of the bill, and relied on by him in purchasing it. Goodrich v. Gordon, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 6; Lewis v. Kramer, 3 Md. 265; Gates v. Parker, 43 Me. 544. Contra, that the mere existence of the authority is enough. Read v. Marsh, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 8.

Parol evidence showing lack of funds, and contradicting an authority given and relied upon, is inadmissible. Pollock v. Helm, 54 Miss. 1. But death—Michigan State Bank v. Leavenworth, 28 Vt. 209—or bankruptcy—Ogden v. Gillingham, 1 Baldw. 38—will terminate such authority.

4. Schimmelpennich v. Bayard, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 264; Savannah Bank v. Hoskins, 101 Mass. 370; Wakefield v. Greenhood, 29 Cal. 597.

Such agreements have all the force of acceptances, e.g., writing to one that "any drafts you may draw we guarantee to be paid," is the exact equivalent of actually accepting a bill drawn on the faith of the letter. Evansville National Bank v. Kaufmann, 24 Hun (N. Y.), 612.

But the holder must take the bill relying on the drawee's promise. Steman v. Harrison, 42 Pa. St. 49; Bank of Michigan v. Ely, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 508; Clarke v. Cock, 4 East. 57.

The promise need not be in writing; a telegram has been held sufficient. Central Savings Bank v. Richards, 109 Mass. 413; Molson's Bank v. Howard, 8 J. &

If a drawee to whom a bill has been presented for acceptance detain it beyond the reasonable time allowed him to decide whether to accept or not, he may be held as an acceptor by reason of the delay.[1]

(d) Qualified Acceptances.—If absolute acceptance of a bill be refused, the holder may protest it;[2] he cannot be compelled to accept a qualified or conditional acceptance.

If he does so, he must notify all prior parties to the paper.[3]

S. (N. Y.) 15. And verbal promises upheld. Scudder v. Union Nat'l Bank, 1 Otto (U. S.), 406; Spaulding v. Andrews, 48 Pa. St. 411. And a letter promising payment ex vi termini includes a promise to accept. Wynne v. Raikes, 5 East, 514.

A, who held wool of the value of less than $4000, consigned to him by B for sale, in reply to a demand for an advance, telegraphed to B as follows: "Draw fifteen hundred." B replied by telegraph as follows: "Will you accept draft two thousand dollars?" To this A responded as follows: "Think we can get fourteen cents for ninety-nine bales very best. If you decide to sell, draw twenty-five hundred dollars on demand; if not, draw not over fifteen hundred." B sent the following telegram in reply: "Sell ninety-nine bales, fourteen cents." On receiving the first telegram, B took it to a bank, and obtained the discount of his draft on A for $1500, but did not notify A that he had drawn the draft. On receiving the last telegram sent by A, B took it to the bank, and asked to have his draft, at sight, on A for $2500 discounted. In reply to the question whether B had authorized the sale of the wool proposed in that telegram, B answered that he had, and showed the last telegram from him to A; and the bank then discounted the draft. Afterwards the draft for $1500 was presented for payment, and paid by A. Upon presentation of the draft for $2500, A, who had not been previously notified that it had been drawn, refused acceptance and payment; and it was protested for non-payment, and returned to the bank. B drew out of the bank his entire balance before the bank had notice of the dishonor of the draft. Held, in an action on the draft by the bank against A that the telegrams did not authorize B to draw more than $2500 in all; and that the action could not be maintained. Nevada Bank v. Luce, 139 Mass. 488.

That the bill has not been drawn when a written promise is given makes no difference. Pillans v. Van Milrop, 3 Burr. 1669. Nor need the drawee have funds to be held upon his agreement. De Tastett v. Cronsillatt, 2 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 132. But verbal promises to accept for accommodation have been held to be within the Statute of Frauds, and therefore void. Flato v. Mulhall, 4 Mo. App. 476; Pike v. Irwin, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 14. And such promises to accept bills not yet drawn have been denied the force of acceptances in Mercantile Bank v. Cox, 38 Me. 500; Bank of Ireland v. Archer, 11 M. & W. 383. Contra; Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 170. But by statute verbal promises have been held invalid in Brinkman v. Hunter, 73 Mo. 172; Blakiston v. Dudley, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 373.

A drawee will be held on his promise, although when he made it the bill was not only drawn but dishonored. Wynne v. Raikes, 5 East, 514.

If it be obtained by fraud, none but a bona fide holder for value can hold him to it. Pillans v. Van Milrop, 3 Burr. 1669.

The acceptance until delivery is incomplete; writing an acceptance on a bill without the holder's knowledge is not enough. Dunaven v. Flynn, 118 Mass. 537.

1. Alabama. 1876, Code, § 2105. Arizona. 1877, C. C. § 3474. Arkansas. 1874, R. S. § 554. Idaho. R. L. 653. § 11. Dist. Col. 1857, Rev. C. 135, § 11. Kansas. 1879, Ch. c. 14, § 13. Nevada. 1873, 1 Ch. c. 5, § 11. Missouri. 1879, 1 R. S. § 538. New York. 1882, 3 R. S. 2243, § 11. Washington. 1881, Code, § 2307. California. 1880, 1 Hitt. Cod. § 8186. Dakota. 1877, Rev. C. § 1891. Utah. P. L. 1882, 59, § 68.

So held aside from statute in Hall v. Steele, 68 Ill. 231.

But not if detained for ten days awaiting promised funds. Mason v. Barff, 2 B. & Ald. 26. And six days' delay held not to be acceptance in Colorado Nat'l Bank v. Boettcher, 5 Col. 185; and cf. Yates v. Eno, 4 Hun (N. Y.), 96; Koch v. Howell, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 350.

2. Ford v. Angelrodt, 37 Mo. 50; Sebag v. Abithal, 4 M. & S. 466; Parker v. Gordon, 7 East, 387; Story on Bills, § 240.

3. Paton v. Winter, 1 Taunt. 422; Story on Bills, § 240.

It is therefore important to observe

The condition of the acceptance need not be indorsed on the bill, but may be contained in a separate instrument.[1] In such case the burden of proving it is on the acceptor,[2] and it will not be admitted to defeat a bona fide holder without knowledge ;[3] but with these exceptions the acceptance binds all parties,[4] and the drawer can only be rendered liable by the acceptor's failure to pay according to his qualified undertaking.[5]

A drawee may accept for a part only of the bill.

A holder cannot be compelled to take such acceptance, and if he does should promptly protest for the balance of the bill.[6]

(e) Liability of Acceptor.—By acceptance the drawee becomes, as to all parties other than the drawer, the principal debtor,[7] and if his acceptance has been given for value, this is true even as to the drawer.[8]

Acceptance is held to admit the genuineness of the drawer's signature [9] and his right to draw the bill.[10]

what acceptances are qualified or conditional. "Payable when house is ready" —Cook v. Wolfendale, 105 Mass. 401— "when in cash" from the cargo of a vessel—Julian v. Shobrooke, 2 Wils 9— "when collected"—Swanzey v. Breck, 10 Ala. 633—have all been held expressions rendering acceptances containing them conditional. Cf. Hoagland v. Erck, 11 Neb. 580; Newhall v. Clark, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 376.

But adding the word "administrator" does not. Tassey v. Church, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 346. Nor is an absolute acceptance rendered conditional by the order being to "pay if in funds." Kemble v. Lare, 3 McL. (U. S.) 272.

1. Gibbon v. Scott, 2 Stark. 286; Bowerbank v. Monteiro, 4 Taunt. 844.

2. Mason v. Hunt, Dougl. 296; Ford v. Angelrodt, 37 Mo. 50.

3. United States v. Bank of the Metropolis, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 377, and cases supra.

4. Wintermute v. Post, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 423; McCutcheon v. Rice, 56 Miss. 455; Green v. Raymond, 9 Neb. 295; Smith v. Abbot, 2 Stra. 1152.

5. Campbell v. Pettengill, 7 Me. 126; Gallery v. Prindle, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 186.

6. Wegerslosse v. Keene, 1 Stra. 214.

The rules of conditional acceptances have been applied also to a drawee's promise to pay in instalments. Rice v. Ragland. 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 545. Or provided the bill be renewed. Russell v. Phillips. 14 Q. B. 891; Clarke v. Gordon, 3 Rich (S. Car.) 311.

Nor can a holder be obliged to take an acceptance making the bill payable at a place different from that named. Niagara Dist. Bank v. Fairman Mfg. Co., 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 403. But a particular bank in the town or city named may be specified. Troy City Bank v. Lanman, 19 N. Y. 477; Myers v. Standart, 11 Ohio St. 29.

7. Philpot v. Bryant, 4 Bing. 720; Fentum v. Pocock, 5 Taunt. 192; Fuller v. Leonard, 27 La. Ann. 635.

Even after failure of consideration. Marsh v. Low, 55 Ind. 271.

But if the acceptance has been for the drawer's accommodation, the drawee is the principal debtor only as to subsequent holders. Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131; Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Dana (Ky.), 352; First Natl. Bank v. Morris, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 680.

8. Simmonds v. Parminter, 1 Wils. 185.

And if the accommodation acceptor subsequently receives funds to meet the bill, he becomes a debtor to the drawer as if he had originally received value. Parker v. Lewis, 39 Tex. 394; Darnell v. Williams, 2 Stark. 145.

9. Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 N. Y. 230; Williams v. Drexel, 14 Md. 566; Bank of U. S. v. Bank of the State of Ga., 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 333; Ellis v. Ohio Life Ins., etc., Co., 4 Ohio St. 628; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Neill, 16 Ill. 269; Hoffman v. Bank of Milwaukee, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 181; Beeman v. Duck, 11 M. & W. 251.

Therefore an acceptor who has paid a forged bill to an innocent holder for value cannot recover the amount so paid. Price v. Neal, 3 Burr. 1354. Cf. Horstman v. Henshaw, 11 How. (U. S.) 177.

But paying upon one forgery will not bind the acceptor to honor other similarly forged paper. Morris v. Bethell, L. R. 5 C. P. 47; Byles on Bills, 203.

10. Thus acceptance of a bill drawn by

But acceptance does not admit that the whole bill is genuine.[1]

A drawee, not being supposed to have the same familiarity with the signature of an indorser that he has with that of the drawer, does not by his acceptance admit the genuineness of an indorsement.[2]

Consideration moving to the acceptor is always presumed,[3] and after dishonor by the acceptor, the drawer, having paid the bill, may sue on the acceptance.[4]

An acceptance, or agreement to accept, may be revoked at any time before delivery,[5] but once delivered it can be extinguished only by payment, or its equivalent.[6] an agent admits his agency. Robinson v. Yanow, 7 Taunt. 455. By a firm, admits the partnership. Bass v. Clive, 4 M. & S. 13.

A drawee who accepts the bill of an infant cannot set up infancy against the bill. Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. 187. Nor coverture after acceptance of a married woman's draft. Smith v. Marsack, 6 C. B. 486. Cf. Aspmaie v. Wake, 10 Bing. 51; Halifax v. Lyle, 3 Exch. 446; Ashpitle v. Bryan, 3 B. & S. 474.

1. So where the bill had been raised by the drawer's agent, the drawee was held not to have admitted the larger amount to be correct by his acceptance. Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253; Ward v. Allen, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 53.

The drawee, who, without notice of any forgery, has paid a draft to the holder to whom it was negotiated by the forged indorsement of the payees' names, may recover of the holder the money paid upon the draft. The Star Fire Insurance Co. v. The New Hampshire National Bank, 60 N. H. 442.

But where the acceptor's negligence has given currency to a bill drawn for an excessive amount, he will for this reason be estopped from setting up the fraud as against a bona fide holder. Young v. Lehman, 63 Ala. 519.

2. Holt v. Ross, 54 N. Y. 472; Tucker v. Robarts, 16 Q. B. 560; Horstman v. Henshaw, 11 How. (U. S.) 177. Neither as to handwriting. Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654. Nor authority to indorse. Prescott v. Flinn, 9 Bing. 19.

3. Jarvis v. Wilson, 46 Conn. 90; Kendall v. Galvin, 15 Me. 131; Eastin v. Osborn, 26 La. Ann. 153; Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 183.

Even if the order is to pay "if in funds." Kemble v. Lull, 3 McL. (U. S.) 272.

But the presumption does not apply to a letter requesting but not ordering payment. Gillilan v. Myers, 31 Ill. 525.

As between drawer and acceptor it may be rebutted. Hidden v. Waldo, 55 N. Y. 294. But in favor of bona fide holders it is conclusive. Kelly v. Lynch, 22 Cal. 661; Boggs v. Lancaster Bank, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 331.

Debts due by the acceptor to either the drawer or payee form a sufficient consideration. Fisher v. Beckwith, 19 Vt. 31; Walker v. Sherman, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 170. And if the acceptance was for the drawer's accommodation to the knowledge of the payee, the latter may still recover from the acceptor, for the intent of the acceptance was to induce the payee to take the bill. Miggett v. Baum, 57 Miss. 22.

4. Davis v. McConnell, 3 McL. (U. S.) 391; Gage v. Kendall, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 640.

But not so, of course, when the acceptance was for the drawer's accommodation. Thurman v. Van Brunt, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 409. Or even for that of the payee, the acceptor agreeing to look to him only for reimbursement. Thurman v. Van Brunt, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 409.

An acceptance made upon goods of the drawer in the acceptor's possession is for a valid consideration, yet if the goods turn out insufficient in value to cover the bill, the acceptor may recover from the drawer the amount of his loss. Hidden v. Waldo, 55 N. Y. 294; Gihon v. Stanton, 9 N. Y. 476.

5. Trimmer v. Oddy, 6 East, 200; First Nat. Bank v. Clark, 61 Md. 401; Cox v. Troy, 5 B. & Ald. 474; Ilsley v. Jones, 12 Gray (Mass.), 260.

6. Bacon v. Searles, 1 H. Bla. 88.

The payment must be made after maturity. Stark v. Alvord, 49 Tex. 260.

A release from the party to whom the acceptor is liable is a discharge as valid as payment. Byles on Bills, 199. And so is a waiver of all claim against the acceptor by such party, if it amount to "an unconditional renunciation." Whatley v. Tricker, 1 Camp. 35. And such waiver may be by parol. Wintermute v. Post, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 420.

23. Indorsement—(a) Generally.—By the law merchant, indorsement is the only recognized method of transferring title to bills and notes.[1]

The rules before stated limiting the capacity of some persons to make or draw notes and bills are in general applicable to their power to indorse.[2]

Upon the death of the owner of a note or bill, the only proper method of transferring title, even to a specific legatee of the paper, is by the indorsement of the executor or administrator.[3]

An indorsement may be made at any time; before the creation of the note or bill,[4] when it is partly completed, blanks being left in it,[5] before or after acceptance,[6] after refusal to accept,[7] or after maturity.[8]

An indorsement after maturity is equivalent to drawing a new bill payable on demand,[9] which must be made within a reasonable

1. Chitty on Bills, 258; Byles on Bills, 235; Story on Bills, § 201; Story on Prom. Notes, § 120.

But it is obvious that a forged indorsement can pass no title. Indiana Nat. Bank v. Holtshaw, 98 Ind. 85; Rodgers v. Ware, 2 Neb. 29.

And if the indorsement be by one of the same name as the payee or owner, it is a nullity, and parol evidence is admissible to show the fraud. Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28.

2. See ante, §§ 14, 15.

Therefore several joint payees must unite in indorsing. Carrick v. Vickery, Dougl. 653. Contra, if they are joint owners, the indorsement of one will pass title. Snelling v. Boyd, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 172. But the indorsement "A and B," on a note to those two persons who are not partners is good. Cooper v. Bailey, 52 Me. 230.

As one partner may execute firm paper, so he may indorse it Burnham v. Whittier, 5 N. H. 334.

An unauthorized indorsement by an agent is void. Wilcox v. Turner, 46 Ga. 218. Unless ratified. Coykendall v. Constable, 1 East. Rep. (N. Y.) 166. And the instrument indorsed may be recovered by the principal.

But lack of authority in the payee's agent to make the indorsement is no defence to a maker, at the suit of a bona fide holder for value before maturity. City Bank of New Haven v. Perkins, 29 N. Y. 554.

An infant or corporation may make a valid indorsement of a note or bill payable to them, although they would not have had power to issue any such paper. Story on Bills, § 196; Smith v. Johnson, 3 H. & N. 222.

3. Stagg v. Linnenfelser, 59 Mo. 336; Peltier v. Babillion, 45 Mich. 384; Auerbach v. Pritchett, 58 Ala. 451.

If the owner die leaving the note indorsed in blank, his executor or administrator may sue upon it in his own name. Barlow v. Myers, 24 Hun (N. Y.), 286; Barrett v. Barrett, 8 Me. 353. But he cannot confer title upon another by mere delivery. Clark v. Sigourney, 17 Conn. 511; Clark v. Boyd, 2 Ohio, 57.

An indorsement to a deceased person is void, and will not vest title in his estate. Valentine v. Halloman, 63 N. Car. 475.

4. In which case the indorser is liable for any amount for which the instrument is subsequently drawn. Mitchell v. Culver, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 336; Putnam v. Sullivan, 4 Mass. 45; Schultz v. Astley, 2 Bing. N. C. 544.

5. Such an indorsement creates an indefinite letter of credit, and the indorsee is liable as in the preceding case. Russell v. Langstaffe, 2 Dougl. 514; Usher v. Dauncey, 4 Camp. 97.

6. Byles on Bills, 167.

7. If the payee presents for acceptance, is refused, fails to give notice to the drawer, and then indorses to an innocent purchaser, both he and the drawer are liable to such purchaser. O'Keefe v. Dunn, 5 M. & S. 282. Cf. Andrews v. Pond. 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65.

8. Leavitt v. Putnam, 3 N. Y. 494; Brown v. Hull, 33 Gratt. 23; Boehm v. Stirling, 7 T. R. 423.

9. Colt v. Barnard, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 260; Tyler v. Young, 30 Pa. St. 143; Brown v. Hull, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 23; Smith v. Caro, 9 Oreg. 278; Van Hoesen v. Van Alstyne, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 75; Goodwin v. Davenport, 47 Me. 112.

It is an indorsement, and the indorser liable as such, though the note was pay-time,[1] and the indorsee is bound to make such demand, and give his indorser notice of dishonor.[2]

The rights conferred by an indorsement after maturity are exactly those which the indorser had.[3]

There is a presumption that an undated indorsement was made at the time of making the note or bill,[4] or at least before maturity.[5] able to bearer. Allwood v. Haseldon, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 437.

1. Leavitt v. Putnam, 3 N. Y. 494.

2. Graul v. Strutzel, 53 Iowa, 712; Dwight v. Emerson, 2 N. H. 159; Swartz v. Redfield, 13 Kans. 550; Beche v. Brooks, 12 Cal. 308; Berry v. Robinson, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 121; Levy v. Drew, 14 Ark. 334.

As to the question what is a reasonable time, vide PRESENTMENT, infra.

3. Texas v. Hardenberg, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 68; Darling v. Osborne, 51 Vt. 148; Clark v. Dederick, 31 Md. 148; Diamond v. Harris, 33 Tex. 634; Williamson v. Doby, 30 Ark. 689; Bissell v. Gowdy, 31 Conn. 47.

If the indorser was a bona fide holder so is the indorsee. Woodman v. Churchill. 52 Me. 58; Peabody v. Rees, 18 Iowa, 571; Bradley v. Marshall, 54 Ill. 173; Miller v. Talcott, 54 N. Y. 114.

The right of the indorser to sue is the test of his right to do so. Wilson v. Mechanics' Savings Bank, 45 Pa. St. 488. Even if he takes with notice of the defence which is afterwards urged against him. Stamper v. Hayes, 25 Ga. 546.

But even equitable defences good against the indorser are good against the indorsee after maturity. Rothschild v. Corney, 9 B. & C. 391; Crippo v. Davis, 12 M. & W. 159; Smith v. Lawson. 18 W. Va. 212; Glasscock v. Smith, 25 Ala. 474; Wheeler v. Barret, 20 Mo. 573; Miller v. Bingham, 29 Vt. 82; Lord v. Favorite, 29 Ill. 149; Bower v. Hastings, 36 Pa. St. 285; Thomas v. Kinsey, 8 Ga. 421; Davis v. Bradley, 20 La. Ann. 555; Sprague v. Graham, 29 Me. 160; Sargent v. Southgate, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 312; Odiorne v. Howard, 10 N. H. 343; Green v. Louthaine, 49 Ind. 139; Stannus v. Stannus. 30 Iowa, 448; O'Callaghan v. Sawyer. 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 118.

But this rule does not apply to equities between the intermediate parties, as where the plaintiff's indorser (who indorsed after maturity) had agreed with the first indorser who was sued not to pursue him on the note, held, no defence. Hill v. Shields, 81 N. Car. 250. Cf. Etheridge v. Gallagher, 55 Miss. 458; Way v. Lamb, 15 Iowa, 79; Hayward v. Stearns, 39 Cal. 58.

Since accommodation paper is really a loan of credit, it has been thought that the loan expired at maturity, and that therefore an indorsement by the party accommodated after maturity left the indorsee open to the defence of want of consideration. Diamond v. Harris, 33 Tex. 634; Battle v. Weems, 44 Ala. 105; Whitwell v. Crehore, 8 La. 540; Coghlan v. May. 17 Cal. 515; Hoffman v. Foster, 43 Pa. St. 137; Simons v. Morris, 53 Mich. 155; Chester v. Dorr, 41 N. Y. 279. But other authorities place such paper on the same basis as ordinary commercial instruments. and unless the purpose of the accommodation has been disregarded the indorsee after maturity, even with knowledge of its accommodation character, may recover. Charles v. Marsden, 1 Taunt. 224; Lazarus v. Cowie, 3 Q. B. 459; Ex parte Swan, L. R. 6 Eq. 358; Seyfert v. Edison, 16 Vr. (N. J.) 393; Dunn v. Weston, 71 Me. 270.

The defences mentioned in §§ 14–21, supra, may, of course, be urged against the indorsee after maturity when they could have been used against his indorser; and it may be added that payment before such indorsement is a bar—Kellogg v. Schnaake, 56 Mo. 136; Schuster v. Marden, 34 Iowa, 181; Elgin v. Hill, 27 Cal. 372; Reichart v. Koerner, 54 Ill. 306; Halsay v. Lange, 28 La. Ann. 248—whether the indorsee knew it or not,—Capps v. Gorham, 14 Ill. 198,—or the note was for accommodation or value,—Blenn v. Lyford, 70 Me. 149,—because the payment of a negotiable instrument at maturity destroys its negotiability. Bartrum v. Caddy, 9 A. & E. 275; Pray v. Maine, 7 Cush. 253; Hopkins v. Farwell, 32 N. H. 425.

A release has the same effect as payment. Thoroughgood v. Clark, 2 Stark. 251.

But payment and subsequent indorsement, both before maturity, constitute no defence against a bona fide holder. Byles on Bills, 173.

4. Batch v. Onion, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 559; Good v. Martin, 5 Otto (U. S.), 90; Burnham v. Wood, 8 N. H. 334; Parker v. Tuttle, 41 Me. 349; Smith v. Ferry, 69 Mo. 142; White v. Weaver, 41 Ill. 409; Hayward v. Munger, 14 Iowa, 516; Bates v. Prickett, 5 Ind. 22; Watson v. Flanagan, 14 Tex 354.

5. Parkin v. Moon, 7 C. & P. 408;

The real date, however, may be shown by parol.[1]

If a person having an equitable title to a note or bill begin suit upon it, an indorsement to him even at the trial is sufficient.[2]

To complete an indorsement delivery is necessary;[3] so also is a consideration,[4] though prima facie every indorsement is upon consideration.[5]

(b) Form.—Indorsement is "the writing of one's name upon (a note or bill) with intent to incur the liability of a party who warrants payment, provided it is duly presented to the principal at maturity not paid by him, and such failure is duly notified to the indorser."[6]

The usual words of indorsement are "pay," "pay to," or "pay to the order of" the indorsee—but no especial words are necessary to make the act valid.[7]

Leland v. Farnham, 25 Vt. 553; Dickerson v. Burke, 25 Ga. 225; Hopkins v. Kent, 17 Md. 113; Mason v. Noonan, 7 Wis. 609; Rahm v. Bridge Co., 16 Kans. 530; Bearden v. Moses, 7 B. J. Lea (Tenn.), 429; Treadwell v. Blount, 86 N. Car. 33; Andrews v. Chadbourne, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 147. See 1 Dan. Neg. Inst. 665, and 2 Rand. of Com. Paper, where this view is preferred.

1. Clendenin v. Southerland, 31 Ark. 20; Mobley v. Ryan, 14 Ill. 51; Anderson v. Weston, 6 Bing. N. C. 296.

2. Brown v. McHugh, 35 Mich. 50; Hudson v. Morris, 55 Tex. 595; Ober v. Goodridge, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 878.

And the transfer of a note pending suit on it terminates the suit. Curtis v. Bemis, 26 Conn. 1; Vila v. Weston, 33 Conn. 42.

3. Denton v. Peters, L. R. 5 Q. B. 475; Wulschner v. Sells, 87 Ind. 71; Kettle v. Delamater, 3 Neb. 325.

The rules as to delivery of notes after execution apply. See § 13, ante. As to notes payable to bearer or under a blank indorsement of any note or bill, delivery is all that is necessary to pass title. Hutchings v. Low, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 246; Hall v. Allen, 37 Ind. 541; Cobb v. Drake, 36 Miss. 60; Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118; Story on Prom. Notes, § 118. And notes payable to a fictitious person are considered as payable to bearer. Foster v. Shattuck, 2 N. H. 446.

4. Craig v. Kittredge, 46 N. H. 57; Weston v. Hight, 17 Me. 287.

5. Lafayette Savings Bank v. Stoneware Co., 4 Mo. App. 276; Luning v. Wise, 64 Cal. 410; Frederick v. Winans, 51 Wis. 472.

But it cannot affect the maker of a note that it was indorsed without consideration; he is liable at all events. Therefore an indorsee who received a note as a gift or for collection may maintain suit on it. McPherson v. Weston 64 Cal. 275.

6. 1 Daniel on Neg. Inst. 593.

It can only be in writing. Mott v. Wright, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 53. But a mark is sufficient if intended as a signature. George v. Surrey, Moo. & M. 516. So are the indorser's initials. Story on Prom. Notes, § 121.

The signature may be in pencil. Closson v. Stearns, 4 Vt. 11. And it may be on the face of the instrument instead of the back. Haines v. Dubois, 1 Vr. (N. J.) 259; Herring v. Woodhull, 29 Ill. 92. Or on an allonge. Folger v. Chase, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 63; French v. Turner, 15 Ind. 59.

Delivery of negotiable paper without indorsement does not amount to a transfer of the title thereto unless by way of equitable assignment; and as such an assignment is not, like a negotiable transfer, discharged of equities any person in possession thereby cannot confer by delivery any better title than he owns, and is not authorized to sue on the paper in his own name. Minor v. Bewick, 56 Mich. 491.

7. Thus "Pay A on account of B" is a good indorsement to B. First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 132 Mass. 227.

"I this day sold to B the within note" is likewise a good indorsement to B. Adams v. Blethea, 66 Me. 19.

An assignment written on the note has a like effect. Dixon v. Clayville, 44 Md. 573; Henderson v. Ackelmire, 59 Ind. 540; Vanzant v. Arnold, 31 Ga. 210; Sears v. Lantz, 47 Iowa, 658. So has a guaranty of collection. Judson v. Goodwin, 37 Ill. 286; Russell v. Klink, 53 Mich. 161; Bissell v. Gowdy, 31 Conn. 47. So has a promise to pay damages on his honor. Blakely v. Grant, 6 Mass. 386. So has a statement that the note

A blank indorsement which consists merely of the indorser's name written upon the instrument renders it transferable by delivery,[1] and confers the title and right to sue upon the holder,[2] who may also fill the blank and make the indorsement special.[3]

Indorsements unnecessary to the holder's title may be stricken out by him.[4]

Where an indorser regains possession of a note or bill, he can of course maintain no action against any prior party who could have sued him on his original indorsement.[5] was given for value, and that there is no defence to it. Dunning v. Heller, 19 Cent. L. J. (Pa.) 96.

And see Richards v. Frankum, 9 C. & P. 222; Walker v. Krebaum, 57 Ill. 252; Trust Company v. National Bank, 11 Otto, 68; Robinson v. Lair, 31 Iowa, 9; Pickering v. Cording, 92 Ind. 306.

1. Murrell v. Marshall, 60 Ill. 289; McDonald v. Bailey, 14 Me. 101.

Further indorsement may be made if desired. Melton v. Gibson, 97 Ind. 158.

A blank indorsement may follow several special indorsements, and the instrument will thereafter be transferable by delivery. Story on Prom. Notes, § 139.

2. Burnap v. Cook, 32 Ill. 168; Brush v. Scribner, 11 Conn. 388; Habersham v. Lehman, 63 Ga. 380.

Any holder, however remote under such indorsement, may maintain suit in his own name. Emerson v. Cutts, 12 Mass. 78; Coy v. Stiner, 53 Mich. 42; Rich v. Starbuck, 51 Ind. 87. And cannot be compelled to show in what capacity he holds the note. Mauran v. Lamb, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 174.

He need not fill up the blank. Moore v. Pendleton, 16 Ind. 481. Possession is presumptive proof of title and right to sue. Palmer v. Nassau Bank, 78 Ill. 380; New Orleans Bk'g Co. v. Bailey, 18 La. Ann. 676; Hays v. Hathorn, 74 N. Y. 486; International Bk. v. German Bk., 71 Mo. 183; Robertson v. Dunn, 87 N. Car. 191.

3. Evans v. Gee, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 80; Chesley v. Taylor, 3 Gill (Md.), 251; Lovell v. Evertson, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 52; Maxwell v. Vanzant, 46 Ill. 58; Andrews v. Simms, 33 Ark. 771.

But he cannot write in a guaranty. Blatchford v. Milliken, 35 Ill. 434; Seymour v. Mickey, 15 Ohio St. 515; Clouston v. Barbiere, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 336, unless it was so agreed by the indorser, Leech v. Hill, 4 Watts (Pa.), 448; Windheim v. Ohlendorf, 3 Bradw. (Ill.) 436. Nor can he insert a waiver of demand and notice. Allen v. Coffil, 42 Ill. 293.

Even an equitable holder may fill up the blank. Moore v. Maple, 25 Ill. 341. Or the personal representative of a deceased holder. Lucas v. Bryne, 35 Md. 485.

Where there have been special indorsements following the blank one, a holder may fill up the blank and derive title from that, not regarding the subsequent special ones. Kiersted v. Rogers, 6 H. & J. (Md.) 282; 2 Rand. Com. Paper, 349.

A holder may fill in his own name, or that of some other person to whom he wishes to make title. Treuttel v. Barandon, 8 Taunt. 100; Fairfield v. Adams, 16 Pick. 381; Skinner v. Church, 36 Iowa, 91; Farwell v. Meyer, 36 Ill. 510. And may do so at any time. Hunt v. Armstrong, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 399; Nelson v. Dubois, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 175.

4. As where one has indorsed for collection and the note was dishonored and returned, the owner may strike out his own indorsement. Nevins v. De Grand, 15 Mass. 436. And this affords no ground for suspicion that he is not the bona fide owner. Bank of Montreal v. Denar, 6 Bradw. (Ill.) 294

But indorsements cannot be stricken out and the indorsers held also. Bartlett v. Benson, 14 M. & W. 733.

Nor unless one is the equitable owner of the paper can he strike out the name of a special indorsee and substitute his own. Porter v. Cushman, 19 Ill. 572; Morris v. Poillon, 50 Ala. 403. E.g., a bank may strike out the name of its cashier as special indorsee and substitute its own, the corporation being the real owner. Mechanics' Bk. v. Valley Packing Co., 4 Mo. App. 210.

And see Williams v. Potter, 72 Ind. 354; Merz v. Kaiser, 20 La. An. 377; Reading v. Beardsley, 41 Mich. 123; Witherell v. Ela, 42 N. H. 295; Pilmer v. Branch Bk., 19 Iowa 112; Chatauqua Co. Bk. v. Davis, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 584; Dugan v. U. S., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 172.

5. Bishop v. Hayward, 4 T. R. 470; Naglee v. Lyman, 14 Cal. 451; Bond v.

An ordinary method of transferring title without liability is by an indorsement "without recourse."[1]

Indorsers often facilitate their own liability by adding the words "protest waived" or the like,[2] or, on the other hand, may render their indorsements conditional.[3]

So they may restrict their indorsements, making the instrument indorsed payable to whom they please, and him only.[4]

(c) Effect.—Whatever the interest of the indorser may be, it is transferred by his indorsement to the indorsee.[5]

The negotiable qualities of the paper are transferred with it,[6] and the right of bringing suit in his own name vested in the indorsee.[7]

Upon indorsement a new contract arises governed by the law of the place where it is made.[8]

Storrs, 13 Conn. 412; Penny v. Innes, 5 Tyrw. 107; Morris v. Walker, 15 Q. B. 589.

1. Such an indorsement is equivalent to transfer by delivery; it passes title completely without commercial liability. Craft v. Fleming, 46 Pa. St. 140; Waite v. Foster, 33 Me. 424; Rayne v. Ditto, 27 La. Ann. 622; Welch v. Lindo, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 159. But it warrants that the paper is genuine and valid. Hannum v. Richardson, 48 Vt. 508. Not usurious. Challis v. McCrum, 22 Kans. 157. Nor paid off. Ticonic Bk. v. Smiley, 27 Me. 225. If any of these warrantees fail, an action for money had and received will lie against the indorser. Watson v. Cheshire, 10 Iowa, 202.

2. Chitty on Bills, 270.

3. Such indorsements do not affect negotiability. Tappan v. Ely, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 362.

4. But omitting the usual words "or order" or "to the order of" will not restrict the negotiability of the instrument indorsed. Leavitt v. Putnam, 3 N. Y. 494; Atcheson v. Fonntain, 1 Stra. 557.

"Pay A only" is a good restrictive indorsement which stops the negotiability of the note. Byles on Bills, 159; Edie v. East India Co., 2 Burr. 1227. So are all indorsements for collection. First Nat. Bk. v. Gregg, 79 Pa. St. 384; Sweeny v. Easter, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 166; Cecil Bk. v. Farmers' Bk., 22 Md. 148.

"Payable to A for me" is an indorsement for collection. Williams v. Potter, 72 Ind. 354. So in effect is "Pay A for my use." Brown v. Jackson, 1 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 512.

Such indorsements pass title as against prior parties, but do not render the indorser liable to subsequent holders; yet it has been held that one who indorsed "for account of" himself could no longer sue without proving his actual ownership of the note. Lawrence v. Fussell, 77 Pa. St. 460.

And see Fawsett v. National Life Ins. Co., 97 Ill. 11; Leland v. Parriott, 35 Iowa, 454; Mechanics' Bk. v. Valley Packing Co., 70 Mo. 643; Third Nat'l Bk. v. Clark, 23 Minn. 263; McDonald v. Bailey, 14 Me. 101; Carrillo v. McPhillips, 55 Cal. 130.

It may be noted of indorsements as of other written contracts, that they are incomplete until delivery, but once delivered become irrevocable. Dogan v. Dubois, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 85; Williams v. Smith, 21 Mo. 419; Beeson v. Lippman, 52 Ala. 276; Best v. Nokomis Nat'l Bk., 76 Ill. 608.

5. Hance v. Miller, 21 Ill. 636; Meriden Steam Mill v. Guy, 40 Conn. 163; Fay v. Sears, 111 Mass. 154.

6. Epler v. Funk, 8 Pa. St. 468.

And if collateral security was given for the note, that also is transferred. Vandercook v. Baker, 48 Iowa, 199; Woodruff v. King, 47 Wis. 261; Kansler v. Ford, 47 Miss. 289; Kurtz v. Sponable, 6 Kans. 395; Logan v. Smith, 62 Mo. 455.

7. Guilfort v. Parish of Ascension, 28 La. Ann. 413; Pitcher v. Burrows, 17 Pick. 361; Heywood v. Wingate, 14 N. H. 73.

Even if the indorsement is but for collection. Mayo v. Moore, 28 Ill. 428; McWilliams v. Bridges, 7 Neb. 419.

8. The indorsement of a bill is in effect a new bill by the indorser upon the acceptor in favor of the indorsee. Smallwood v. Vernon, 1 Stra. 479; Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 482; Van Staphorst v. Pearce, 4 Mass. 258; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 362. And the indorsement of a note in effect the drawing of a bill

Indorsers are liable prima facie in the order in which they have signed,[1] but this order may be varied even by parol.[2]

By indorsement the indorser promises that he will discharge the note according to its tenor upon due presentment and notice,[3] that the instrument itself and all prior signatures are genuine,[4] that he has the right to transfer it,[5] and that it is valid.[6]

by the indorser on the maker. 2 Parsons, N. & B. 25. Brown v. Harraden, 4 T. R. 149.

The contract of indorsement may be valid though the note indorsed was void as given to an alien enemy. Morrison v. Lovell, 4 W. Va. 346.

Or it may be void when the note is valid, as where a married woman's note was indorsed in a way invalid at the place of indorsement, though good where the note was made. Clanton v. Barnes, 50 Ala. 260. Compare Greathead v. Walton, 40 Conn. 226; Huse v. Hamblin, 28 Iowa, 501.

1. Camp v. Simmons, 62 Ga. 73.

And this is true even of accommodation indorsers. Shaw v. Knox, 98 Mass. 214; Pomeroy v. Clark, 1 McArth. 606. Or upon a renewal note. Hacket v. Lenares, 16 La. Ann. 204.

2. But a special agreement for a different order must be shown. McIntire v. Darley, 15 Mo. App. 583.

But if it is proven, apparent indorsers may be held, e.g., as co-sureties. Stillwell v. How, 46 Mo. 589; McCarty v. Roots, 21 How. (U. S.) 437; Hogue v. Davis, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 4; Kirschner v. Conklin, 40 Conn. 81.

A mistake in the order of signing, as of the second indorser writing his name over that of the payee, may be shown to vary the apparent liability. Brockway v. Comparee, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 355. And see Cahal v. Frierson, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 411; Slagle v. Rust, 4 Gratt. (Va.) 274.

3. Morley v. Boothby, 3 Bing. 107.

And the indorser of a bill undertakes also to pay damages upon dishonor. Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481; Byles on Bills, 153.

But an indorser is not a surety unless he indorse for accommodation. Ross v. Jones, 22 Wall. (U.S.) 576; Armstrong v. Harshman, 61 Ind. 52.

But if he add "surety" to his signature he is liable both as indorser and surety. Bradford v. Corey, 5 Barb. (N.Y.) 461.

Nor is he a guarantor at common law. Trust Co. v. Nat. Bank, 11 Otto (U. S.), 68.

Nor does he warrant the solvency of parties prior to himself. Smith v. Mercer, L. R. 3 Exch. 51; Mulliken v. Chapman, 75 Me. 306; Hurst v. Chambers, 12 Bush (Ky.), 155.

But he does undertake that he has no knowledge of any facts which show the note or bill valueless. If he has such knowledge and does not reveal it he is liable for the fraud. Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 757; Brown v. Montgomery, 20 N.Y. 287.

4. Heylyn v. Adamson, 2 Burr. 669; Aldrich v. Jackson, 5 R. I. 218; Williams v. Tishomingo Sav. Inst., 57 Miss. 633; Turnbull v. Bowyer, 40 N. Y. 456; Cochran v. Atchison, 27 Kans. 728.

That a prior indorsement was forged is therefore enough to fix the liability of an indorser. Chambers v. Union Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 205.

Even if he be an agent acting for an undisclosed principal, and knowledge of the forgery be brought to him after he had paid over the money received to his principal. Canal Bank v. Bank of Albany, 1 Hill (N. Y.). 287.

But an accommodation indorser, known as such to his indorsee, has been held not liable for a draft raised without his knowledge. Susquehanna Valley Bank v. Loomis, 85 N.Y. 207.

This warranty applies even to indorsers "without recourse." Dumond v. Williamson, 18 Ohio St. 515.

And to persons transferring bills and notes by delivery merely. Giffert v. West, 37 Wis. 115; Smith v. McNair, 19 Kans. 330; Terry v. Bissell, 26 Conn. 23; Thompson v. McCullough, 31 Mo. 224; Swanzey v. Parker, 50 Pa. St. 441; Bankhead v. Owen, 60 Ala. 457; Snyder v. Reno, 38 Iowa, 329; Allen v. Clark, 49 Vt. 390.

5. Fish v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Mich. 203; Lake v. Hayes, 1 Atk. 281.

So one who indorsed "without recourse" a note that had been stolen, was held. Frazer v. D'Invilliers, 2 Pa. St. 200.

6. If the note is void for illegality the indorser is liable without notice. Copp v. McDougal, 9 Mass. 1. Compare Huston v. First Nat. Bank, 85 Ind. 21; Tompkins v. Little Rock R. Co., 15 Fed. R. 6.

The indorsement guarantees the capac-

24. Nature of Indorser's Liability.—The distinguishing feature of an indorser's liability is that it is contingent upon due presentment for payment and notice of dishonor.[1]

The holder, therefore, is bound to make demand and give notice in order to hold any indorser to liability, but it is not his duty to notify all the indorsers; if he notify his own immediate indorser that is sufficient to hold the latter, who must protect himself by notifying prior parties.[2]

Where the indorser receives due notice of dishonor it is his duty to pay the note or bill at once, and then proceed against parties prior to himself.[3]

The indorser, however, even after notice given, may be exonerated from all obligation to pay by the conduct of the holder, e.g., in giving to the maker a definite and binding extension of time wherein to pay.[4] ity of the maker or acceptor. Prescott Bank v. Caverly, 7 Gray (Mass.), 217; Erwin v. Downs, 15 N.Y. 575.

And that the instrument is not usurious as to its consideration. Hazzard v. Citizens' State Bank, 72 Ind. 130; Stewart v. Bramhall, 74 N. Y. 85.

This rule applies also to the transfer of paper by delivery. Watson v. Cheshire, 18 Iowa, 202.

And all these incidents of indorsement are in California prescribed by statute. 1 Hitt. Codes, § 8116.

1. Suse v. Pompe, 8 C. B. (N. S.) 538; Lawrence v. Langley, 14 N. H. 70; Ray v. Smith, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 411; Chapman v. McCrea, 63 Ind. 360; Winston v. Richardson, 27 Ark. 34; Whitten v. Wright, 34 Mich. 92; Cammack v. Gordon, 20 La. Ann. 213; Flowers v. Bitting, 45 Ala. 448; Selover v. Snively, 24 Kans. 672; Shields v. Farmers' Bank, 5 W. Va. 254.

2. Struthers v. Blake, 30 Pa. St. 139.

3. He cannot require the holder to sue the maker first. Faulkner v. Faulkner, 73 Mo. 327. And therefore failure to bring such suit is no discharge of the indorser. Allen v. Brown, 124 Mass. 78; State Bank v. Wilson, 1 Dev. 484; Ross v. Jones, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 576. Nor delay in such suit after the indorser is fixed with due notice of dishonor. Moore v. Britton, 22 La. Ann. 64; Powers v. Waters, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 176; Cherry v. Miller, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 305. Nor taking collateral security for payment from the maker. Sterling v. Marietta, etc., Co., 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 179. Nor the fact that at maturity the maker had property that might have been seized in execution. Violett v. Patton, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 142.

For a comparison of existing State statutes regulating indorser's liability, see 2 Rand. Com. Paper, §§ 759–765.

4. Chitty on Bills, 472; Story on Prom. Notes, § 413; Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. 47.

An extension to the first and last indorsers will discharge all intermediate indorsers. Hall v. Cole, 4 Ad. & El. 577. But giving time to an indorser will not discharge prior parties. Claridge v. Dalton, 4 M. & S. 232; Whiting v. Western Stage Co., 20 Iowa, 555.

To discharge an indorser the agreement with the maker must be upon a valid consideration, and without the indorser's consent. Kittle v. Wilson, 7 Neb. 76. It must be for a definite time. Globe Mut. Ins. Co. v. Carson, 31 Mo. 218. "Twenty or thirty days" is a definite time. Hamilton v. Prouty, 50 Wis. 592.

When the extension is agreed upon, whether before or after maturity is immaterial. Veazie v. Carr, 3 Allen (Mass.), 14; Moore v. Folsom, 14 Minn. 340. And so is the question whether time was given upon a note for the principal debt, or merely collateral to it. Pomeroy v. Tanner, 70 N. Y. 547.

If, however, in giving time to the maker the holder expressly reserves his rights against the indorser the latter is not thereby discharged. Morse v. Huntington, 40 Vt. 488; Hagey v. Hill, 75 Pa. St. 108. And an indorser who has been discharged by an extension given the maker or acceptor may, upon learning the facts, promise to pay, nevertheless, and be held upon his promise. Hazard v. White, 26 Ark. 155.

The question frequently arises, what is an "extension" within the rule, and it has been held that mere indulgence or delay is not. Powers v. Waters, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 176. Nor is an agreement

An indorser may also be discharged by the release of a party prior to himself,[1] or by payment of the note or bill by such prior party.[2]

But even an accommodation indorser cannot require a holder to to "carry" a note for a certain time with a view to get it renewed. Second Nat'l Bank v. Poucher, 56 N. Y. 348. Nor is payment of interest in advance. St. Joseph, etc., Ins. Co. v. Hauck, 71 Mo. 465. But payment of interest after maturity, before such interest has accrued, is an extension given by the holder receiving it. Randolph v. Fleming, 59 Ga. 776. So is taking the note of a third person to hold as security until the maker pays the original note. Greene v. Bates, 74 N. Y. 333; Pomeroy v. Tanner, 70 N. Y. 547. Or taking as collateral before maturity securities that would not be due until after the due date of the note in question. Robertson v. Allen, 59 Tenn. 233.

As has been stated, the extension must be upon a valid consideration; if it is usurious it is invalid, and the indorser is not discharged. Williams v. Smith, 48 Me. 135. But the holder cannot show such usury; he is estopped after receipt of the usurious consideration. Billington v. Wagoner, 33 N. Y. 31.

Part payment before maturity is a valid consideration. Rigsbee v. Bowler, 17 Ind. 167. But not a payment already due. Stuber v. Shack, 83 Ill. 191. And an extension in consideration of payment of a higher rate of interest than was originally agreed upon has been upheld. Royal v. Lindsay, 15 Kans. 591.

1. Thus the release of the maker or acceptor of course ends the liability of all parties. Byles on Bills, 384; Story on Prom. Notes, § 416. So, too, the release of a maker who was coindorser with another person. Farmers' Bank v. Blair, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 641.

And releasing any indorser releases all subsequent indorsers. Newcomb v. Raynor, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 108. And the cancellation of an indorsement amounts to releasing the person who made it. Bank of Tennessee v. Johnson, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 217.

Where after judgment against a maker the holder withdrew a good and sufficient levy upon his property, this was held a release of the indorser. Priest v. Watson, 75 Mo. 310. Cf. Commonwealth v. Miller, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 457.

Discharging the maker from arrest on a writ of capias issued in a suit on the note has the same effect. McFadden v. Parker, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 275.

The surrender of the note to the maker upon receiving part payment discharges all parties. Streever v. Bank of Fort Edward, 34 N. Y. 413. And this is true, though prior to such surrender the holder proved the note against the estate of an insolvent indorser. Dearth v. Hide, etc., Nat. Bank, 100 Mass. 540.

Signing a composition deed as a creditor of the drawer of a bill will release the indorser from all liability to the holder who signed. Eggerman v. Henschen, 56 Mo. 123.

But the release of a maker with an express reservation of rights against the indorser will not discharge the latter. Stewart v. Eden, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 121; Kenworthy v. Sawyer, 125 Mass. 28. And if a release be given with the indorser's consent, he will still be held. Gloucester Bank v. Worcester, 10 Pick. 527; Bruen v. Marquand, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 58; Ludwig v. Iglehart, 43 Md. 39.

The involuntary discharge in bankruptcy of one party does not affect the liability of others. Pine River Bank v. Swazey, 47 N. H. 154. And if the note is not proved against his estate, an indorser may be voluntarily discharged by his creditors and subsequent parties not relieved from liability. Pratt v. Chase, 122 Mass. 262.

Obviously, the release of any party cannot release other parties prior to himself. Knight v. Dunsmore, 12 Iowa, 35; Bank of Kentucky v. Floyd, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 159; Love v. Brown, 38 Pa. St. 307. But where the first indorser was a mere surety, the surrender of the note to the second indorser was held to discharge him. Shelton v. Hurd, 7 R. I. 403.

2. Hayling v. Mulhall, 2 W. Bla. 1235; Macdonald v. Bovington, 4 T. R. 825.

But payment by a subsequent party will not release an indorser. Kennion v. McRea, 7 Port. (Ala.) 175.

An agreement with the maker by the holder to take pay in work, which was not carried out owing to the holder's default, has been held to discharge the indorser. Roberts v. Wilkinson, 34 Mich. 129. Cf. Cox v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 44 Ala. 611.

But where the holder held two notes of a certain person, and requested that a tendered payment be applied upon the first, this was held not to discharge the indorsers of the second. Second Nat. Bank v. Poucher, 56 N. Y. 348.

exhaust any collateral security he may hold, before having recourse to such indorser.[1]

In suits against either acceptors, drawers, makers, or indorsers, it is at common law necessary to aver all the indorsements requisite to complete title in the plaintiff,[2] and the burden of proving such indorsements is upon him.[3]

Where a note is payable to bearer, title will be inferred from possession,[4] even though special indorsements have been put upon it.[5]

The rule is the same where the note or bill has been indorsed in blank.[6]

1. First Nat. Bank v. Wood, 71 N. Y. 405. Though such security may be a vendor's lien. Sayre v. McEwen, 41 Ind. 109; Rogers v. Blum, 56 Tex. 1.

But where the holder permitted the collateral he held to become barred by the Statute of Limitations, it was decided that the indorser was thereby discharged. Fennell v. McGowan, 58 Miss. 261. And the surrender of the collateral to the maker has the same effect. Union Nat. Bank v. Cooley, 27 La. Ann. 202. So has an improper sale of the collateral and wrongful appropriation of the proceeds by the holder. Sitgreaves v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 49 Pa. St. 359. And it has been held that where a banker held a note, and had at its maturity a deposit by the maker sufficient to pay it, and failed to appropriate the deposit to that purpose, he thereby discharged the indorsers. Commercial Natl. Bank v. Henninger, 105 Pa. St. 496.

The discharge of the indorser of a collateral note will discharge the indorser of the note it secures. Stallings v. Bank of America. 59 Ga. 701. But a holder who merely ignores his collateral in proceedings against the maker does not thereby release his indorsers. Merchants' Natl. Bank v. Comstock. 55 N. Y. 24.

2. Chitty on Bills, 643; Bishop v. Hayward, 4 T. R. 471. But indorsements subsequent to the one to the plaintiff may be disregarded. Bank of America v. Senior, 11 R. I. 376.

An allegation of indorsement implies a transfer for sufficient consideration. Clay v. Edgerton, 19 Ohio St. 549. The date of indorsement need not be averred. Caldwell v. Lawrence, 84 Ill. 161.

3. Even where local law excuses their averment. Keeth v. Champer, 69 Ind. 477.

In a suit against a maker, the general issue puts the plaintiff to the proof of all the indorsements under which he holds. Wallace v. Reed, 70 Ind. 263; Stern v. Tallis, 24 La. Ann. 118; Blakely v. Grant, 6 Mass. 386.

One who sues his own immediate indorser need not prove the making of the note nor its transfer to the defendant. Woodward v. Harbin, 1 Ala. 104.

The method of proving indorsements is the same as that of proving any writing of the indorser, as by persons who have seen other signatures properly identified. Empire Mfg. Co. v. Stuart, 46 Mich. 482. Or have written letters to the indorser and received answers from him. Chaffee v. Taylor, 3 Allen (Mass.), 598.

4. Beekman v. Wilson, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 434; Jewett v. Cook, 81 Ill. 260; Booty v. Cooper, 18 La. Ann. 365; Rider v. Duvall, 28 Tex. 622; Crosthwait v. Misener, 13 Bush. (Ky.) 543; Texas Banking Co. v. Turnley, 61 Tex. 365; Lachance v. Loeblein, 15 Mo. App. 460.

5. Rider v. Taintor, 4 Allen (Mass.), 356.

6. Palmer v. Gardner, 77 Ill. 143; Bedell v. Carll, 33 N. Y. 581; Rubey v. Culbertson. 35 Iowa, 264; Hyde v. Lawrence, 49 Vt. 361; Eggan v. Briggs, 23 Kans. 710; Metcalf v. Yeaton, 51 Me. 198.

But this presumption of title may be rebutted. Hays v. Hathorn, 74 N. Y. 486; Herrick v. Swomley, 56 Md. 439; Hesser v. Doran, 41 Iowa, 468. Evidence of fraud in the inception or transfer of the instrument will put the holder to the proof of his title. Merchants' Bank v. Masonic Hall, 62 Ga. 271. And the plaintiff's suit may be abated by evidence that he obtained title after suit brought. Hovey v. Sebring, 24 Mich. 232.

Under a blank indorsement the holder may sue in his own name, irrespective of the character in which he received the note or bill. Baker v. Stinchfield, 57 Me. 363; Ricard v. Harrison, 19 La. Ann. 181.

Where a note payable to a firm and indorsed with its name was found among the papers of a deceased partner, it was held prima facie evidence of title in the

It is generally held that even blank indorsements cannot be explained or varied by parol,[1] but the authorities are not uniform.

In accordance with the weight of authority, it has been held that even at the suit of his immediate indorsee an indorser cannot show that his apparently absolute indorsement was really "without recourse," [2] or merely for the purpose of transfer.[3]

But an indorser may show as against his indorsee that his blank indorsement was merely for collection,[4] and any indorsement procured by fraud may of course be avoided by the indorser when sued by the indorsee.[5] decedent. Birkey v. McMakin, 64 Pa. St. 343.

The fact that the holder of a note or bill has indorsed it himself while retaining possession does not impair his title. Abbott v. Joy, 47 Me. 177; Leitner v. Miller, 49 Ga. 486; Mendenhall v. Banks, 16 Ind. 284; Dallfus v. Frosch, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 367; Chaffee v. Taylor, 3 Allen (Mass.), 598. But it has also been held that a holder must explain why his own and perhaps subsequent indorsements are found upon a note remaining in his possession. Hart v. Windle, 15 La. 265; Gorgerat v. McCarty, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 144.

1. Beattie v. Brown, 64 Ill. 360; Roberts v. Masters, 40 Ga. 461; Barnard v. Goslin, 23 Minn. 192; Skelton v. Dustin, 92 Ill. 49; Woodward v. Foster, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 200; Charles v. Denis, 42 Wis. 56; Barry v. Morse, 3 N. H. 132; Crocker v. Getchell, 23 Me. 392; Preslin v. Ellington, 74 Ala. 133; Doolittle v. Ferry, 20 Kans. 230; Johnson v. Ramsey, 14 Vr. (N. J.) 279; Gist v. Drakely, 2 Gill (Md.), 330; Stack v. Beach, 74 Ind. 571; Smith v. Caro, 9 Or. 278, where the indorsement was after maturity.

That as between the original parties a blank indorsement may be explained by parol is held by Castrigue v. Buttigieg, 10 Moo. P. C. 94: Susquehanna Bridge Co. v. Evans, 4 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 480; Ross v. Espy, 66 Pa. St. 481; Mendenhall v. Davis, 72 N. Car. 150; Taylor v. French, 2 Lea (Tenn.), 257; Smith v. Morrill, 54 Me. 48.

Indorsements of non-negotiable notes may certainly be thus explained. Jacques v. McKnight, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 92 n.

2. Martin v. Cole, 14 Otto (U. S.), 30; Mason v. Burton, 54 Ill. 349; Skinner v. Church, 36 Iowa, 91; Kern v. Von Phul, 7 Minn. 426; Campbell v. Robbins, 29 Ind. 271. A fortiori is this true at the suit of bona fide holders without notice. Bank of U. S. v. Dunn, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 51; Hill v. Shields, 81 N. Car. 250.

Any endeavor to show that the indorsement was not to hold the indorser is inadmissible. Courtney v. Hogan, 93 Ill. 101; First Nat'l Bank v. Nat'l Marine Bank, 20 Minn. 63.

On the other hand, it has been held that as between the immediate parties to any indorsement it might be explained by parol. Hays v. May, Wright (Ohio), 80; Lewis v. Williams, 4 Bush (Ky.), 678; Drummond v. Gager, 10 Bradw. 380. And that subsequent holders with notice might also be met with parol evidence. Van Valkenburgh v. Stupplebeen, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 99.

Agreements between indorsee and indorser that the latter should not be sued upon his indorsement were upheld upon parol evidence as between the parties to the agreement, in Pike v. Pike, M. & M. 226; Bruce v. Wright, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 548; Breneman v. Furniss, 90 Pa. St. 186.

But such agreements can certainly not be shown as against a subsequent bona fide holder. Lewis v. Dunlap, 72 Mo. 174. See, further, Davis v. Brown, 4 Otto (U. S.), 423; Dale v. Gear, 39 Conn. 89; Dunn v. Ghost, 5 Col. 134; Beal v. Wood, 5 Mo. App. 591.

3. Lee v. Pile, 37 Ind. 107; Day v. Thompson, 65 Ala. 369. Contra, Patterson v. Todd, 18 Pa. St. 426; Patten v. Pearsen, 57 Me. 428; Commissioners, etc., v. Wasson, 82 N. Car. 308; Lynch v. Goldsmith, 64 Ga. 42.

But a bona fide holder without notice is secure from this defence. Meador v. Dollar Sav. Bank, 56 Ga. 605.

4. 2 Parsons N. & B. 24; McWhirt v. McKee, 6 Kans. 412; Downer v. Chesebrough, 36 Conn. 39. Contra, Chaddock v. Vanness, 6 Vroom (N. J.), 521.

But in the face of a written indorsement for collection, the indorsee cannot prove that the transfer was absolute. White v. Miners' Bank, 12 Otto (U. S.), 658; Rock Co. Bank v. Hollister, 21 Minn. 385; Leary v. Blanchard, 48 Me. 269. Contra, First Nat'l Bank v. McCann, 4 Bradw. (Ill.) 250.

5. Hamburger v. Miller, 48 Md. 317;

As between the immediate parties to an indorsement, a parol waiver of demand and notice may be proven according to most authorities,[1] but there are cases the other way.[2]

25. Bona Fides.—(a) Elements of.—To constitute a bona fide holder of a note or bill, it must be obtained for value,[3] before the real or apparent maturity of the paper,[4] and in the due course of business and in good faith.[5]

It follows therefore that one may be a bona fide holder, despite bad faith on the part of his indorser.[6]

To make one a bona fide holder indorsement is necessary,[7] unless the paper is transferable by mere delivery.[8]

Van Buskirk v. Day, 32 Ill. 260; Hill v. Ely, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 363.

So it is a good defence against an indorsee or subsequent holder with notice that an indorsement was delivered in escrow only. Goggerly v. Cuthbert, 2 B. & P. N. R. 170; Ricketts v. Pendleton, 14 Md. 320.

But at the suit of bona fide holder for value before maturity and without notice an indorser cannot even show that the blank left by him was fraudulently filled with too large a sum. Diercks v. Roberts, 13 S. Car. 338.

1. Barclay v. Weaver, 19 Pa. St. 396; Fuller v. McDonald, 8 Me. 213; Boyd v. Cleveland, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 525; Taunton Bank v. Richardson, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 436; Andrews v. Simms, 33 Ark. 771; Wright v. Latham, 3 Murphy, 298.

But a waiver of notice is not a waiver of demand also. Burnham v. Webster, 17 Me. 50.

2. Rodney v. Wilson, 67 Mo. 123; Heidenheimer v. Blumenkron, 56 Tex. 308; Bank of Albion v. Smith, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 489; Barry v. Morse, 3 N. H. 132.

3. See §§ 4, 6.

4. See § 26.

5. One taking with knowledge of facts amounting to a defence stands in the position of the payee. Zabriskie v. Spielman, 17 Vr. (N. J.) 35. While a purchaser of coupons from a thief may act with perfect good faith and be protected as a bona fide holder. Spooner v. Holmes, 102 Mass. 503.

6. Thus the purchaser of a bill of exchange from a pledgee who had no right to dispose of it, is a bona fide holder. Merchants' Bank v. Comstock, 55 N. Y. 24.

Conversely, if the indorser is really a bona fide holder, one who has knowledge of defects in the paper may take it from such holder, provided he pays value, and himself be regarded as a holder in good faith. Commissioners of Marion Co. v. Clark, 4 Otto (U. S.), 278; Woodman v. Churchill, 52 Me. 58; Bassett v. Avery, 15 Ohio St. 299; Boyd v. McCann, 10 Md. 118; Riley v. Schwacker, 50 Ind. 592; Simon v. Merritt, 33 Iowa, 537; Glenn v. Farmers' Bank, 70 N. Car. 191; Kinney v. Kruse, 28 Wis. 183; Bank of Sonoma Co. v. Gove, 63 Cal. 355; Hogan v. Moore, 48 Ga. 156; Watson v. Flanagan, 14 Tex. 354; Shaw v. Clark, 49 Mich. 384.

In like manner, one who purchases after maturity from a holder who obtained the paper bona fide before maturity, will have all his vendor's rights. Cook v. Larkin, 19 La. Ann. 507; Peabody v. Rees, 18 Iowa, 571; Thomas v. Ruddell, 66 Ind. 326; Smith v. Hiscock, 14 Me. 449.

But the payee, by purchase from a bona fide holder, cannot obtain that holder's rights. Kost v. Bender, 25 Mich. 515.

7. Mills v. Porter, 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 63; Losee v. Bissell, 76 Pa. St. 459; Bilderbach v. McConnell, 48 Mich. 345; Sturges v. Miller, 80 Ill. 241; Boody v. Bartlett, 42 N. H. 558; Allum v. Perry, 68 Me. 232.

And indorsement must be accompanied by delivery; as that the assignment of a bill of exchange expected by steamer, though for value, does not make the assignee a bona fide holder. Muller v. Pondir, 55 N. Y. 325. Nor is one who takes as collateral a receipt for a bill such a holder. Evans v. Smith, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 366. And see Hull v. Swarthout, 29 Mich. 249; Peck v. Bligh, 37 Ill. 317.

8. But notes that are payable to bearer, though indorsed, continue to pay by delivery; the indorsement is unnecessary, and does not affect the bona fides of the holder. Smith v. Rawson, 61 Ga. 208; Lane v. Krekle, 22 Iowa, 399; Cone v. Baldwin, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 545.

Persons receiving notes or bills by legal order or process, as assignees [1] or receivers,[2] are not bona fide holders.

The effect of the nature or amount of consideration paid by the holder, as affecting his bona fides, has been already considered; [3] but it may be restated that mere inadequacy of consideration is wholly immaterial, except as evidence of bad faith.[4]

It is said that the mere fact of purchasing a bill from the acceptor,[5] or a note from the maker,[6] raises such a presumption of payment or bad faith on the vendor's part, that the vendee cannot be a bona fide holder.

That a holder obtained paper by way of pledge,[7] or as collateral security for advances,[8] does not affect his bona fides; but he can recover only the amount of the debt secured.[9]

In general, a bona fide holder may recover the amount he or some prior indorser through whom he claims title paid for the note or bill,[10] but as against an accommodation party he can obtain only the amount actually paid by himself,[11] and a bank which obtains a note by discounting for the indorser, and crediting it on

1. Billings v. Collins, 44 Me. 271; Fraker v. Collum, 21 Kans. 555.

Or as trustees to collect assets and pay creditors. Roberts v. Hall, 37 Conn. 205.

2. Briggs v. Merrill, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 389; Litchfield Bank v. Peck, 29 Conn. 384.

3. Ante, §§ 16, 18, 19, 20.

4. Tod v. Wick, 36 Ohio St. 370; Lay v. Wissman, 36 Iowa, 305; Hereth v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 34 Ind. 380.

The facts of the sale go to the jury; and where a $300 note was offered for sale for $5, that fact was held conclusive evidence that the purchaser could not be a bona fide holder. De Witt v. Perkins, 22 Wis. 451.

Where the note of a solvent maker was offered at a large discount, it was left to the jury to say whether reasonable inquiry would not have shown that it was given without consideration. Gould v. Stevens, 43 Vt. 125.

Where a note was sold for one eighth of its face, this was held to amount to notice of existing defences. Jones v. Gordon, L. R. 2 App. Cas. 617; affirming In re Gomersall, L. R. 1 Ch. D. 142.

Cf. Hunt v. Sandford, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 387; Boyce v. Geyer, 2 Mich. N. P. 71. In re Hook, 11 N. B. R. 282.

A discount of 3 per cent just before maturity, however, is no evidence at all of bad faith. Murray v. Beckwith, 81 Ill. 43. And one of 50 per cent has been held insufficient to prove it. Cannon v. Canfield, 11 Neb. 506. Contra, Baily v. Smith, 14 Ohio St. 396.

At a sheriff's sale, a purchase for one fifth of the face value is enough to make the purchaser a bona fide holder. Irby v. Blain, 31 Kans. 716.

Cf. Sully v. Goldsmith, 32 Iowa, 397; Vinton v. Peck, 14 Mich. 287; Brown v. Penfield, 36 N. Y. 473; Tilden v. Blair, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 241.

5. Central Bank v. Hammett, 50 N. Y. 158.

But the rule in England is the other way. Morley v. Culverwell, 7 M. & W. 174. And in South Carolina. Witte v. Williams, 8 S. Car. 304.

6. Hendrie v. Berkowitz, 37 Cal. 113.

7. Fisher v. Fisher, 98 Mass. 303.

8. Miller v. Boykin, 70 Ala. 469; Brown v. Callaway, 41 Ark. 418; Belmont, etc., Bank v. Hoge, 35 N. Y. 65; Curtis v. Mohr, 18 Wis. 616; Miller v. Pallock, 99 Pa. St. 202.

9. Stoddard v. Kimball, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 469; Smith v. Hiscock, 14 Me. 449; Stevens v. Campbell, 13 Wis. 419; Bealle v. Southern Bank of Georgia, 57 Ga. 274.

10. Dekay v. Hackensack Water Co., 11 Stew. (N. J.) 163; Huff v. Wagner, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 215; Petty v. Hannum, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 102. And see 2 Rand. Com. Paper, § 452.

11. Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 261; Holeman v. Hobson, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 107; Buckner v. Jones, 1 Mo. App. 538.

So where an accommodation note has been fraudulently diverted from its intended use, a purchaser in good faith can recover only his actual payment. Williams v. Smith, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 301.

his account, is held not to have paid or parted with anything, and cannot recover at all.[1]

(b) Transfer in Consideration of Existing Debt.—The general rule now is that one who takes a note or bill in payment of an existing debt is a bona fide holder for value.[2]

But it cannot be affirmed that this rule is universal, and many cases have required something in addition to the old debt to constitute a bona fide holder.[3]

Thus if upon the indorsement of a note or bill, in payment of the indorser's debt, the indorsee surrender collateral which he had held to secure such debt, this is clearly enough to render him a bona fide holder;[4] and if an agreement to forbear proceedings against the original debtor be added, the rule is still more plain.[5]

But in some States, New York especially, the opposite rule prevails, and a holder in consideration of an existing debt is open to all defences good against his indorser.[6]

In some cases the distinction has been taken, that although a transfer in consideration of an existing debt does not render the indorsee a bona fide holder where he still retains all his previous rights against his debtor, yet if he accepts the paper in complete extinguishment of his claim, this is a sufficient parting with value

1. Scott v. Ocean Bank, 23 N. Y. 289; Mann v. Second National Bank of Springfield, 30 Kans. 412.

But where the amount so credited is checked out before notice of defence, the bank becomes a bona fide holder. Southwick v. First National Bank, 84 N. Y. 420; Fox v. Bank of Kansas City, 30 Kans. 441.

2. Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Oates v. National Bank, 10 Otto (U. S.), 239; Currie v. Misa, L. R. 10 Ex. 153; Homes v. Smyth, 16 Me. 177; Knox v. Clifford, 38 Wis. 651; Hodges v. Black, 76 Mo. 537; Stevenson v. Heyland, 11 Minn. 198; Dixon v. Dixon, 31 Vt. 450; Draper v. Cowles, 27 Kans. 484; Russell v. Hadduck, 8 Ill. 233; Reddick v. Jones, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 107; Bridgeport City Bank v. Welch, 29 Conn. 479; Bush v. Peckard, 3 Harr. (Del.) 385; Carlisle v. Wishart, 11 Ohio, 172; Ives v. Farmers' Bank, 2 Allen (Mass.), 236; Russell v. Splater, 47 Vt. 273; Bardsley v. Deep, 88 Pa. St. 420; Farmers' Bank v. Willis, 7 W. Va. 31; Blum v. Loggins, 53 Tex. 121; Outhwite v. Miner, 13 Mich. 533; Smith v. Lockridge, 8 Bush (Ky.), 423.

A fortiori where the existing debt was but part of the consideration. Riggs v. Hatch, 16 Fed. Rep. 838.

3. See 2 Rand. Com. Paper, §§ 461–465 for a full collection of cases on this point.

4. Justh v. National Bank of the Commonwealth, 56 N. Y. 478; First National Bank v. Bentley, 27 Minn. 87; Stevens v. Campbell, 13 Wis. 375; Allaire v. Hartshorn, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 665; Le Breton v. Peirce, 2 Allen (Mass.), 8; Knox v. Clifford, 38 Wis. 651; Emanuel v. White, 34 Miss. 56.

So held also where the indorsee upon receiving the note surrendered collateral of little or no value. Park Bank v. Watson, 42 N. Y. 490.

5. Kingsland v. Pryor, 33 Ohio St. 19.

The rule is the same if the new paper be also taken as collateral. Worcester National Bank v. Cheeney, 87 Ill. 602.

And where the debt in question is due, the agreement for forbearance will be inferred from taking paper payable in the future. Holzworth v. Koch, 26 Ohio St. 33; York v. Pearson, 63 Me. 587.

6. Rosa v. Brotherson, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 86; Jones v. Schreyer, 49 N. Y. 674; Rhea v. Allison, 3 Head (Tenn.), 176; Union Bank v. Barber, 56 Iowa, 559; Comstock v. Hier, 73 N. Y. 269; Turner v. Treadway, 53 N. Y. 650; De La Chaumette v. Bank of England, 9 B. & C. 208. But see as to England, Percival v. Frampton, 2 C. M. & R. 180; Foster v. Pearson, 5 Tyrw. 255.

But even in New York "the surrender by a creditor of the past-due notes of a debtor, upon receiving from him in good faith, before maturity, the note of a third person in place of the note surrendered constitutes the creditor a holder for value of the note thus taken." Phœnix Insurto protect him from equitable defences and make him really a bona-fide holder.[1]

Since the indorsee has at least recourse upon the paper to his debtor, the indorser, this distinction seems more ingenious than solid, and late authorities certainly hold that the "transfer before maturity of negotiable paper as security for an antecedent debt merely, without other circumstances, if the paper be so indorsed that the holder becomes a party to the instrument," makes the indorser a bona fide holder unaffected by equities between prior parties of which he had no notice.[2]

(c) Negligence and Bad Faith.—An innovation in the law of commercial paper known as the rule in Gill v. Cubitt was introduced by Lord Tenterden in 1824, and caused an uncertainty of law which has hardly yet been dissipated.

It was held in that case that circumstances which ought to excite the suspicion of a prudent and careful man about to receive a note or bill rendered inquiry on his part necessary, and if he failed to make such inquiry he was guilty of negligence, which destroyed his character as a bona fide holder. Whether the circumstances were such as to render inquiry necessary was left for the jury's determination.[3]

In England this rule was overturned by the judgment of Lord Denman, in 1834, in the case of Goodman v. Harvey, declaring that even gross negligence would not deprive one of the character of bona fide holder unless the carelessness amounted to bad faith on his part, and this doctrine is now generally accepted by American courts.[4] ance Co. v. Church, 81 N. Y. 225, a case containing a review of the New York doctrine on this subject.

1. 3 Kent's Com. 81 n.; Smith v. Van Loan, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 659; Williams v. Little, 11 N. H. 66; Barney v. Earle, 13 Ala. 106; Bond v. Central Bank, 2 Ga. 92; Robinson v. Lair, 31 Iowa, 9; Cecil Bank v. Heald, 25 Md. 562; Bardley v. Delp, 88 Pa. St. 420. Cf. Stedman v. Carstairs, 97 Pa. St. 234; Royer v. Keystone Nat'l Bank, 83 Pa. St. 248. And see the notes upon Swift v. Tyson in 1 Amer. Cas. Bills and Notes, 650, for complete lists of cases.

2. Railroad Co. v. National Bank, 12 Otto (U. S.), 14.

To the same effect, Maitland v. Citizens' Nat'l Bank, 40 Md. 540; Giovanovich v. Citizens' Bank, 26 La. Ann. 15; Wormer v. Waterloo Agric. Works, 50 Iowa, 262; Harrison v. Pike, 48 Miss. 46; Mix v. National Bank of Bloomington, 91 Ill. 20.

3. Gill v. Cubitt, 3 B. & C. 466.

American cases adopting this rule are: Roth v. Calvin, 32 Vt. 125; Nicholson v. Patton, 13 La. 213; Greer v. Yosti, 56 Mo. 307; Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts (Pa.), 20; Russell v. Hadduck, 8 Ill. 233; Safford v. Wyckoff, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 11; Hall v. Hale, 8 Conn. 33; Cone v. Baldwin, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 545; Nutter v. Stover, 48 Me. 163; Merritt v. Duncan, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 156; Steinhart v. Boker, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 436.

Yet where such inquiry was made as opportunity afforded, and nothing wrong discovered, it was held that the taker was a bona fide holder. Williamson v. Brown, 15 N. Y. 354.

4. Goodman v. Harvey, 4 Ad. & El. 870; Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 110; Hamilton v. Vought, 5 Vr. (N. J.) 191; Phelan v. Moss, 67 Pa. St. 59; Comstock v. Hannah, 76 Ill. 550; Farrell v. Lovett, 68 Me. 326; Trustees v. Hill, 12 Iowa, 474; Fox v. Bank of Kansas City, 30 Kans. 441; Golson v. Arnot, 57 N. Y. 253; Bank of Sherman v. Apperson, 4 Fed. Rep. 25; Frank v. Lilienfield, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 377; Schoen v. Houghton, 50 Cal. 528.

But in Vermont the rule in Gill v. Cubitt is still adhered to. Gould v. Stevens, 43 Vt. 125.

Under the modern rule, therefore, negligence is only so far important as implying bad faith.[1]

It is obvious that taking a note or bill in the face of notice express or implied of defences to it is an act of bad faith.[2]

1. And the fact that railroad bonds had been stolen and sold for ten per cent of their face value has been held not to warrant a finding of bad faith in the purchaser, default having been made upon them at the time of purchase, and they having no known market value. Smith v. Harlow, 64 Me. 510.

But the purchase of a neighbor's note for a trifle from a stranger who was peddling patent rights has been held negligence amounting to bad faith. Taylor v. Atchison, 54 Ill. 196.

Mere knowledge on the purchaser's part of dishonest business methods on the seller's has been held evidence of bad faith. Ormsbee v. Howe, 54 Vt. 182. But knowledge of former usurious dealings by the payee from whom a note was purchased has been considered no evidence at all. Sherman v. Blackman, 24 Ill. 345.

Nor is it bad faith to take a note the maker of which is known to the purchaser to be a liquor-dealer, although that fact might raise the suspicion that the note was for liquors sold, and therefore illegal. Bottomley v. Goldsmith, 36 Mich. 27. Nor to purchase the note of a maker known to deal in options, though that fact might induce a similar suspicion. Mitchell v. Catchings, 23 Fed. Rep. 710.

The question of bad faith is for the jury, and evidence of honesty and good faith is always admissible. Skidmore v. Clark, 47 Conn. 20; Dutchess Co. Ins. Co. v. Hachfield, 73 N. Y. 226.

See generally, as to bad faith, Auten v. Gruner, 90 Ill. 300; London, etc., Bank v. Groome, L. R. 8 Q. B. D. 288; Edwards v. Thomas, 66 Mo. 468; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Hooper, 47 Md. 88.

That banks are held to no greater care than individuals. Bedell v. Burlington Nat. Bank, 16 Kans. 130.

2. But such notice must be received before purchase; notice after purchase cannot avail as a defence. Swan v. Steele, 7 East, 210; Perkins v. White, 36 Ohio St. 530.

Notice while the purchase is incomplete, e.g., before payment of consideration, is, however, sufficient. Delaware Co. Bank v. Duncombe, 48 Iowa, 488; De La Chaumette v. Bank of England, 9 B. & C. 208; Dresser v. Missouri, etc., Ry., 3 Otto (U. S.), 92.

Notice may be inferred from the note or bill itself, e.g., from marks upon it showing it had been offered for discount at a bank and refused. Brown v. Taber, 5 Wend. 566. Also from the fact of long arrears of interest, e.g., three years being due at the time of transfer. Bilderback v. McConnell, 48 Mich. 345. But one year's arrears of interest has been held not to amount to notice. Kelley v. Whitney, 45 Wis. 110, overruling Hart v. Stickney, 41 Wis. 630.

Notice cannot be implied from an indorsement without recourse. Epler v. Funk, 8 Pa. St. 468; Stevenson v. O'Neal, 71 Ill. 314.

A sealed note with payee's name blank, and negotiated for a different consideration from that specified in it, is so peculiar that any taker is affected with notice of defences to it. Mills v. Williams, 16 S. Car. 593. So too is a sealed note secured by a mortgage referred to in the note. Jewett v. Tucker, 1 East. Rep'r (Mass.), 430.

The words "to be held as collateral" written across a note have been held to import notice. Gibson v. Hawkins, 69 Ga. 355.

And an official signature, e.g., that of the Secretary of War, is notice that the government represented can only be held so far as the officer's authority extends. The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666.

Knowledge that a note signed with a firm name was made after the dissolution of the partnership is notice destroying the bona fides of one taking the note. Booth v. Quinn, 7 Price, 193. And knowledge that a firm note is given or renewed for the individual debt of a partner has a like effect. Eastman v. Cooper, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 276; Mecutchen v. Kennady, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 230; Gansevoort v. Williams, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 133.

But the fact that a note made and indorsed by a partner individually bears also the indorsement of his firm cannot affect the indorsee. Redlon v. Churchill, 73 Me. 146.

Knowledge that a note was given for a patent does not affect a purchaser's bona fides. Miller v. Finly, 26 Mich. 249; Gerrish v. Bragg, 55 Vt. 329; Woolen v. Ulrich, 64 Ind. 120; Sackett v. Kellar, 22 Ohio St. 554. But where a note was obtained by fraud, and the purchaser was told that it would be good if the consider-

But no purchaser of a note or bill is presumed to have acted in bad faith. The presumption is always in favor of bona fides.[1]

This presumption may of course be rebutted, and evidence of illegality or fraud in the inception of the paper will compel the holder to prove his good faith.[2] ation "had not been misrepresented," this information was held to amount to notice of defence. Studebaker Mfg. Co. v. Dickson, 70 Mo. 272.

Knowledge that the indorser held the note indorsed as a pledge is notice of lack of power to sell. Goldsmidt v. First Methodist Church, 25 Minn 202.

While the purchaser of a note or bill may know that it is accommodation paper, and be nevertheless a bona fide holder,—Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. 46; Thatcher v. West River Nat. Bank, 19 Mich. 196,—if he knows that the accommodating party lent his name for a special purpose which has not been fulfilled, he cannot be, for such knowledge is said to amount to notice of diversion. 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. 740.

The payee may be fictitious,—Lane v. Krekle, 22 Iowa, 399,—the maker dead, —Clark v. Thayer, 105 Mass. 216,—or the indorser an infant.—Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 272,—to the knowledge of a purchaser, and these facts will not be notice to him of defences; but knowledge of the maker's insanity is notice. McClain v. Davis, 77 Ind. 419.

An indorsee is not affected with notice by the pendency of a suit at law,—County of Cass v. Gillett, 10 Otto, 585; Board of Supervisors v. Paxton, 56 Miss. 679; Sawyer v. Phaley, 33 Vt. 69,—nor by newspaper articles or advertisements,—Kellogg v. French, 15 Gray, 354; Hagen v. Bowery Nat. Bank, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 490; Clark v. Ricker, 14 N. H. 44.—unless knowledge of the suit or advertisement is fixed upon him.

1. Solomons v. Bank of England, 13 East, 135; Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 271; Harger v. Worrall, 69 N. Y. 370; Dingman v. Amsink, 77 Pa. St. 114; National Bank of North America v. Kirby, 108 Mass. 497; Chicago, etc., R. v. Edson, 41 Mich. 673; Sperry v. Spaulding, 45 Cal. 544; Perkins v. Prout, 47 N. H. 387; Johnson v. McMurray, 72 Mo. 278; Shreeves v. Allen, 79 Ill. 553; Atlas Bank v. Doyle, 9 R. I. 76; Pugh v. Grant, 86 N. Car. 39; Liddell v. Crain, 53 Tex. 549; Ecton v. Harlan, 20 Kans. 452; Habersham v. Lehman, 63 Ga. 380; Lehman v. Tallassee Mfg. Co., 64 Ala. 567; Wyman v. Colorado Natl. Bank, 5 Col. 30. And see 2 Rand. Com. Paper, § 1024, for further cases.

2. Bailey v. Bidwell, 13 M. & W. 73; Smith v. Sac County, 11 Wall. 139; Chambers v. Faulkner, 65 Ala. 448; Wright v. Brosseau, 73 Ill. 381; Mitchell v. Tomlinson, 91 Ind. 167; Sullivan v. Langley, 120 Mass. 437; Exchange Natl. Bank v. Savings Inst., 4 Vr. (N. J.) 170; Crampton v. Perkins, 4 East. Repr. (Md.) 653; Meadows v. Cozart, 76 N. Car. 450; Battles v. Laudenslager, 84 Pa. St. 446, and cases cited in preceding note.

Proof of duress upon the drawer of a bill compels the holder to prove his bona fides. Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 100; Clark v. Pease, 41 Vt. 414. So does proof that the paper was delivered in escrow. Vallett v. Parker, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 615. Or that it is accommodation paper and has been fraudulently diverted from its purpose. Nickerson v. Ruger, 76 N. Y. 279. And it has been held that a mere allegation of fraud will have the same effect. Roberts v. Lane, 64 Me. 108; Reamer v. Bell, 79 Pa. St. 292. And so held of an averment of fraud, and notice of it at the time of purchase, in Totten v. Bucy, 57 Md. 446.

But the mere allegation that the paper was for accommodation does not shift the burden of proof. Harger v. Worrall, 69 N. Y. 370.

Proof of want of consideration for the paper at its inception has the same effect as proof of fraud. Ross v. Drinkard, 35 Ala. 434; Emerson v. Burns, 114 Mass. 248.

A plea that a note was given without consideration to the knowledge of the plaintiff has been held to put the burden of proof upon the latter. Zook v. Simonson, 72 Ind. 83. But in Ohio it was ruled that after proof of lack of consideration in the making of a note, and proof also of a purchase for value, the burden still rested on the defendant to show notice of the defence to the plaintiff. Davis v. Bartlett 12 Ohio St. 541.

But evidence of a failure of consideration, either total or partial, will not compel a holder to prove himself a bona fide holder for value. Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Crow, 60 N. Y. 85; Winstead v. Davis, 40 Miss. 785; Dingman v. Amsink, 77 Pa. St. 114.

26. Maturity.—When no time is specified at which a note or bill is to mature, it is considered to be payable on demand.[1]

Where a time is given, in terms of months, calendar months are understood.[2]

The due date of a note may be a public holiday, in which case maturity is regulated by the law of the place of payment.[3]

In reckoning time the date day is excluded;[4] but from that day, and not the day of delivery, the computation of time begins.[5]

The day of payment is included as the last of the currency of the note or bill,[6] so that a suit begun on that day is premature.[7]

For the same reason the Statute of Limitations does not begin to run until the day after the day of payment.[8]

A demand note is payable instantly,[9] but for purposes of trans-

1. 3 Rand. Com. Paper, 1; Herrick v. Bennett, 8 Johns. 189; Freeman v. Ross, 15 Ga. 252; First Natl. Bank v. Price, 52 Iowa, 570; Keyes v. Fenstermacher, 24 Cal. 329; Thrall v. Mead, 40 Vt. 540.

2. Byles on Bills, 208; 1 Dan. Neg. Inst. 556; Webb v. Fairmaner, 3 M. & W. 473; McMurchey v. Robinson, 10 Ohio, 496; Campbell v. Lane, 25 Tex. Sup. 93.

Thus a note dated Aug. 29th, at six months, matures (without grace) on Feb. 28th. Wood v. Mullen, 3 Rob. (La.) 595. And one dated Jan. 31st, at one month, is due the same day. Byles on Bills, 208.

But a note dated impossibly as Sept. 31st begins to run from the last day of September. Wagner v. Kenner, 2 Rob. (La.) 120.

The 29th of February is not counted. February can have but 28 days by the lex mercatoria. Kohler v. Montgomery, 17 Ind. 220.

3. Commercial Bank v. Barksdale, 36 Mo. 563.

The general rule is that paper maturing on Sundays and holidays must be presented on the day preceding. Bussard v. Levering, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 102; Barlow v. Planters' Bank, 6 How. (Miss.) 129; Reed v. Wilson, 12 Vr. (N. J.) 29. But where grace is not allowable, the rule is just the reverse—the paper matures the succeeding day. Avery v. Stewart, 2 Conn. 69; Kuntz v. Tempel, 48 Mo. 71; Barrett v. Allen, 10 Ohio, 426.

4. Ammidown v. Woodman, 31 Me. 580; McCoy v. Farmer, 65 Mo. 244; Roehner v. Knickerbocker, etc., Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 160.

Although payable in a certain number of days. Henry v. Jones, 8 Mass. 453.

When payable within a time certain or "on or before" a certain day, maturity does not arrive until the expiration of the time or arrival of the day. Helmer v. Krolick, 36 Mich. 371; Mattison v. Marks, 31 Mich. 421

5. Powell v. Waters, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 669; Luce v. Shaff, 70 Ind. 152; McSparran v. Neeley, 91 Pa. St. 17; Raefle v. Moore, 58 Ga. 94.

6. Young v. Van Benthuysen, 30 Tex. 762; Daly v. Proetz, 20 Minn. 411; Church v. Clark, 21 Pick. 310.

And after refusal to pay on that day, protest may be made at any hour, though the acceptor may make payment at an hour later still. King v. Holmes, 11 Pa. St. 456.

A transfer on the day of payment is before maturity. Continental Natl. Bank v. Townsend, 87 N. Y. 8.

7. Rudder v. Price, 1 H. Bl. 547; Gordon v. Parmlee, 15 Gray (Mass.). 413; Oothout v. Ballard, 41 Barb. 33; Bell v. Sackett, 38 Cal. 407; Walkins v. Willis, 58 Tex. 521; Benson v. Adams, 69 Ind. 353.

Some cases hold that after an express refusal to pay on that day, or where the paper is payable at bank, after banking hours, action may be brought at once. Holland v. Clark, 32 Ark. 697; Veazie Bank v Paulk, 40 Me. 109; Vandesaude v. Chapman, 48 Me. 262.

8. Blackman v. Nearing, 43 Conn. 56; Cornell v. Moulton, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 12, and cases supra.

9. Hirst v. Brooks, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 334; Hill v. Henry, 17 Ohio, 1; Darling v. Wooster, 9 Ohio St. 517.

A note payable "at any time called for" is a demand note. Bowman v. McChesney, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 609. So is one payable "on demand after date." Hitchings v. Edmands, 132 Mass. 338.

Upon such notes interest accrues, and the Statute of Limitations runs from date. Darling v. Wooster, 9 Ohio St. 517; Lavallette v. Wendt, 75 N. Y. 579; Pres-fer its maturity does not occur until a reasonable time after its date.[1]

Paper transferred after maturity becomes thereby due on demand in a reasonable time.[2]

Notes may be made payable in instalments, and as each instalment falls due an action may be brought for it without precipitating the maturity of the note.[3]

Interest upon notes so drawn does not become due until the note itself is due, unless the contrary is expressly provided.[4]

If payment of a note is conditional, maturity arrives upon the performance of the condition.[5]

27. Grace.—Though often expressly conferred by statute, grace is now generally recognized as a common-law right.[6]

The allowance of days of grace is regulated by the law of the place of payment,[7] and the presumption is that three days of brey v. Williams, 15 Mass. 193. Sed contra, that the statute only runs from demand, which must be made within a reasonable time. Thrall v. Mead, 40 Vt. 540.

1. Poorman v. Mills, 39 Cal. 345.

What is a reasonable time is for the court. Carll v. Brown, 2 Mich. 401; Sylvester v. Crape, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 92; Sice v. Cunningham, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 397. For the jury. Barbour v. Fullerton, 36 Pa. St. 105. A mixed question of law and fact. Salmon v. Grosvenor, 66 Barb. 160; Seaver v. Lincoln, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 267; Goodwin v. Davenport, 47 Me. 112; Woodruff v. Plant, 41 Conn. 344; Lindsey v. McClelland, 18 Wis. 481; Muncy School District v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 464.

As to the length of time which is reasonable no rule can be laid down; each case depends on its own facts. Where a draft ordered payment in "a few days," four months was held unreasonable. Chamberlyne v. Delarive, 2 Wils. 253. While a note given with mortgage security and transferred two years after its date was held to have been transferred before maturity. Tomlinson Carriage Co. v. Kinsella, 31 Conn. 268. See generally, for instances, Dennett v. Wyman, 13 Vt. 485; Stewart v. Smith, 28 Ill. 396; Seaver v. Lincoln, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 267; Herrick v. Woolverton, 41 N. Y. 581; La Due v. First Nat'l Bank, 31 Minn. 33; Carlton v. Bailey, 27 N. H. 230; Atlantic De Laine Co. v. Tredick, 5 R. I. 171; Cromwell v. Abbott, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 180; Jameson v. Jameson, 72 Mo. 640; Gregg v. Union Nat'l Bank, 87 Ind. 238.

2. Colt v. Barnard, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 260; Libbey v. Pierce, 47 N. H. 309.

So a note signed after maturity by one as maker is a demand note as to such maker. Frech v. Yawger, 18 Vr. (N. J.) 157. So a note delivered before, but indorsed after maturity, is a demand note as to such indorser. Clark v. Whitaker, 50 N. H. 474.

3. Tucker v. Randall, 2 Mass. 283; Bush v. Stowell, 71 Pa. St. 208.

A condition that upon non-payment of any instalment the whole shall become due is legal. Carlon v. Kenealy, 12 M. & W. 139; German Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Franck, 22 Ind. 364.

4. Tanner v. Dundee Land Imp. Co., 12 Fed. Repr. 646.

But if the note is drawn with "interest annually," suit may be brought for the amount of the interest without waiting for the maturity of the note. Greenleaf v. Kellogg, 2 Mass. 568.

5. Henry v. Coleman, 5 Vt. 402.

Upon a note payable "six months after peace declared between the U. S. & C. S." it was held that such time never arrived, and the note never became payable. Brewster v. Williams, 2 S. Car. 455; McNinch v. Ramsey, 66 N. Car. But a note to be paid "Jan. 1st, 1865, or when Tennessee banks resume specie payments," is due at any time after the date given at the option of the holder. Walters v. McBee, 1 Lea (Tenn.), 364. See Frisbie v. Moore, 51 Cal. 516; Glancy v. Elliott, 14 Ill. 456.

6. State Bank v. Smith, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 70; Barlow v. Gregory, 31 Conn. 261; Brown v. Harraden, 4 T. R. 148.

For a collection of the statutes of the various States see 3 Rand. Com. Paper, §§ 1063-1066.

7. Bank of Washington v. Triplitt, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Skelton v. Dustin, 92 Ill. 49; Thorp v. Craig, 10 Iowa, 461; Bowen v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 190; Bryant v. Edson, 8 Vt. 325.

grace are allowed by the laws of all the United States, until the contrary is proven.[1]

A special local custom as to grace, as, e.g., to allow four days instead of three, is good if proven.[2]

Originally grace was allowable on foreign bills only,[3] but now also on orders for money,[4] inland bills[5] and promissory notes,[6] but non-negotiable notes,[7] and checks (unless payable at a future day[8]), are not entitled to grace.

Grace has been allowed on a note at one day,[9] or at twelve months,[10] or even on a day certain named therein,[11] but a note drawn payable on the "1st day of May next fixed" excludes all idea of grace.[12]

Sight bills are entitled to grace, whether inland or foreign,[13] and the same has been held of a bill at one day after sight,[14] but demand notes are not.[15]

28. Demand.—(a) When Necessary.—The drawer of a bill or in-

1. Reed v. Wilson, 12 Vt. (N. J.) 29; Wood v. Corl, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 203.

2. Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 581; Jackson v. Henderson, 3 Leigh (Va.), 196; Adams v. Otterback, 15 How. (U. S.) 539.

And may bind even persons having no knowledge of it. Mills v. Bank of U. S., 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 431.

And such custom may be shown to have been abandoned. Cookendorfer v. Preston, 4 How. (U. S.) 317.

3. Byles on Bills, 210; Tassel v. Lewis, 1 Ld. Raym. 743.

4. Strader v. Batchelor, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 168.

5. Brown v. Harraden, 4 T. R. 148.

6. Since statute 3 and 4 Anne. Byles on Bills, 211; Shepard v. Hall, 1 Conn. 329; Chambliss v. Matthews, 57 Miss. 306; Burchell v. Slocock, 2 Ld. Raym. 1545.

7. Backus v. Danforth, 10 Conn. 297; Fletcher v. Thompson, 55 N. H. 308; Luce v. Shaff, 75 Ind. 152. So held of a due bill. McLain v. Rutherford, Hempst. C. C. (U. S.) 47. And a sealed note. Skidmore v. Little, 4 Tex. 301.

But in England notes not to order or bearer are still entitled to grace. Smith v. Kendall, 6 T. R. 123.

8. Georgia Nat'l Bank v. Henderson, 46 Ga. 487; Cutler v. Reynolds, 64 Ill. 321; Ivory v. Bank of Missouri, 36 Mo. 475; Morrison v. Bailey, 5 Ohio St. 13; Minturn v. Fisher, 4 Cal. 35; Brown v. Lusk, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 210; Bowen v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 190. So post notes of banks are entitled to grace. Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 13; Perkins v. Franklin Bank, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 483.

9. Alexander v. Parsons, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 333.

10. Thomas v. Shoemaker, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 179; Turk v. Stahl, 53 Mo. 437; Wooley v. Clements, 11 Ala. 220; Goddin v. Shipley, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 575; Sheppard v. Spates, 4 Md. 400; McMurchey v. Robinson, 10 Ohio, 496.

Contra as to a note payable "12 mos. from date." Ponsonby v. Nicholson, 4 Harr. & McH. 72.

11. Story on Prom. Notes, § 224; Story on Bills, § 342.

12. Durnford v. Patterson, 7 Mart. (La.) 460.

Grace may be waived by the party bound, e.g., refusing a tender before last day of grace on other grounds. Wyckoff v. Anthony, 90 N. Y. 442.

13. Hart v. Smith, 15 Ala. 807; Thornburg v. Emmons, 23 W. Va. 325; Knott v. Venable, 42 Ala. 186.

So by statute in England. Bills of Exch. Act, 1882, § 14.

Contra, Trask v. Martin, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 505; Commercial Bank v. Varnum, 49 N. Y. 269; Dalton City Bank v. Haddock, 54 Ga. 584.

14. Craig v. Price, 23 Ark. 634.

15. Story on Prom. Notes, § 224; First Nat'l Bank v. Price, 52 Iowa, 570; Crammer v. Harrison, 2 McC. (S. Car.) 246; Brown v. Chancellor, 61 Tex. 437.

Contra by statute in California. Bell v. Sackett, 38 Cal. 407.

It may be added that in reckoning days of grace the due date is excluded. Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 261.

See MATURITY, ante, for effect of Sundays and holidays, and time of beginning action.

dorser of a bill or note is in general liable only after a formal demand of payment made upon the acceptor or maker.[1]

One who indorses after maturity is nevertheless entitled to a demand upon the maker,[2] but a drawer or indorser for whose accommodation the paper has been drawn is liable without demand.[3]

Failure to make demand gives rise to a presumption of injury to the indorser or drawer, which is not rebutted even by proof that he is solvent and uninjured.[4]

But as against an acceptor or maker no demand is necessary; suit is a sufficient demand.[5]

It is said, however, that where a demand is averred it must be proven to hold a maker.[6]

There is no difference between foreign and inland bills, so far as the necessity of demand is concerned;[7] but as to non-negotiable paper the cases vary.[8]

1. Story on Prom. Notes, §§ 198, 492; Munroe v. Easton, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 75; Magruder v. Union Bank, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 87; Duncan v. McCullough, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 480; Brandt v. Mickle, 28 Md. 436; Winston v. Richardson, 27 Ark. 34.

An allegation that a drawee has often refused to pay though requested will not dispense with the necessity of a formal demand. Treadway v. Nicks, 3 McC. (S. Car.) 195.

An indorser merely for security can only be fixed by demand. Nicholson v. Gouthitt, 2 H. Bl. 609.

Upon a note payable in instalments demand upon each instalment is necessary to hold the indorser. Eastman v. Furman, 24 Cal. 379.

The law of the place of payment governs. Vanderdonckt v. Thellusson, 8 C. B. 812.

2. Swartz v. Redfield, 13 Kans. 550; Dwight v. Emerson, 2 N. H. 159; Graul v. Strutzel, 53 Iowa, 712; Bemis v. Mackenzie, 13 Fla. 553; Patterson v. Tod, 18 Pa. St. 426; Dixon v. Clayville, 44 Md. 573; Berry v. Robinson, 9 John. (N. Y.) 121; Beebe v Brooks, 12 Cal. 308; Branch Bk. v. Gaffney, 9 Ala. 153.

But where a protest was attached to the note when indorsed it was held that no further demand was necessary. Williams v. Matthews, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 252.

The fact that the note indorsed was non-negotiable is immaterial. Hunt v. Wadleigh, 26 Me. 271.

3. Beveridge v. Richmond, 14 Mn. App. 405; Shriner v. Keller, 25 Pa. St. 61; Black v. Fizer, 10 Heisk. (Tenn) 48.

4. Carter v. Flower, 16 M. & W. 743. Cf. Smith v. Miller. 43 N. Y. 171; Manney v. Cort, 80 N. Car. 300.

5. Rhodes v. Gent, 5 B. & Ald. 244; Johnson v. Packer, 13 Conn. 342; Blair v. Bank of Tenn., 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 83; Yeaton v. Berney, 62 Ill. 61; State Bk. v. Fox, 3 Blatch. (U. S.) 431.

But where the bill is payable at or after sight, no action will lie until demand has been made. Byles on Bills. 219; Dixon v. Mittall, 1 C M. & R. 307. And to hold an acceptor supra protest demand on the drawee is necessary. Schofield v. Taylor. 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 488.

Readiness to pay is a defence only so far as to reduce damages. Caldwell v. Cassidy, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 271.

Even on a demand note, suit is a sufficient demand. Norton v. Ellam, 2 M. & W. 461; Hill v. Henry, 17 Ohio, 1; Bell v. Salkett, 38 Cal. 407; Collins v. Trotter, 81 Mo. 275; Middleton v. Boston Locomotive Works, 26 Pa. St. 257.

6. Conn v. Gano, 1 Ohio, 483.

7. 2 Edwards N. & B., § 667; Wood v. Surrells, 89 Ill. 107.

Whether the bill or note is payable to order or bearer is immaterial. Galpin v. Hard, 3 McC. (S. Car.) 394.

8. Held unnecessary as to the indorser of non-negotiable note. Plimley v. Westley, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 249. Drawer of a sealed bill. Force v. Craig, 2 Halst. (N. J.) 272. Or order for goods. Platzer v. Morris, 38 Tex. 1. Or order on a corporation where the drawer was one of its own officers. Lyell v. Supervisors, 6 McL. (U. S.) 446.

But held necessary as to drawer of an order for cotton Fromme v. Kaylor, 30 Tex. 754. And an order upon a town treasurer, where the drawer was a selectman of the same town. Pease v. Cornish, 19 Me. 191.

Where a demand is necessary an indorser is entitled to strict proof of it,[1] but a subsequent promise to pay,[2] or waiver of notice of dishonor,[3] on his part is prima facie evidence of a sufficient demand.

(b) By and to Whom Made.—Either the holder[4] of a bill or note or his lawfully authorized agent[5] may make presentment for payment; and indorsement to the agent is not in general necessary to enable him to make the demand.[6]

An executor[7] or assignee[8] is regarded as the agent of the decedent or bankrupt for the purpose of making presentment.

It has been held that a foreign bill must be presented by a notary; who cannot procure a clerk or subordinate to make the demand, and then protest the bill himself.[9]

The obvious persons upon whom to make demand are the acceptor or maker; but upon an acceptance for honor, payment should be demanded both of the drawee and acceptor for honor.[10]

Upon a bill payable at a bank, demand upon the clerk in charge during banking hours is good;[11] and when the maker or acceptor

1. Martinis v. Johnston, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 239.

2. Brennan v. Lowry, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 253.

3. Matthey v. Gally, 4 Cal. 63; Camp v. Bates, 11 Conn. 487.

So, too, a letter by a drawer asking indulgence and promising payment. Tibbetts v. Dowd, 23 Wend. 379. And confessing a judgment to the holder. Richter v. Selin, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 425.

Even where a notarial certificate is made evidence by statute a drawer may be held by his own admission of liability or that of a co-drawer. Dickerson v. Turner, 12 Ind. 223.

The evidence of a bank clerk that he finds a memorandum of demand in his handwriting in the bank books, wherefore he believes he made a demand, that being his duty, although he has forgotten the incident entirely, is admissible in proof of demand. Shove v. Wiley, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 558. So is the memorandum of a deceased bank clerk coupled with proof of usage. Sheldon v. Benham, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 129. Cf. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 115 U. S. 339.

4. Sussex Bank v. Baldwin, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 487.

5. Coore v. Callaway, 1 Esp. 115.

Possession is prima-facie proof of authority when note indorsed in blank. Cone v. Brown, 15 Rich. (S. Car.) 262. But not so of a non-negotiable note. Story on Prom. Notes, § 247.

A notary public is a public agent and a proper person to make demand for a holder. Bank of Utica v. Smith, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 230. But any private person may also act as agent. Cole v. Jessup, 10 N. Y. 96.

6 Hartford Bank v. Barry, 17 Mass. 93.

But where the presentor is an early indorser to whom the note has not been reindorsed, possession is not enough. Welch v. Lindo, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 159. Such reindorsement must be made or subsequent indorsements stricken out. Dollfuss v. Frosch, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 367. But the blank indorsement of the owner will not prevent his making demand and receiving payment. Sprigg v. Curry, 7 Mart. N. S. (La.) 253.

7. 2 Edwards on N. & B. § 675.

8. Story on Bills, § 360; Hill v. Reed, 16 Barb. 280.

9. Bank of Cape Fear v. Steinmetz, 1 Hill (S. Car.), 44; Ocean Nat'l Bank v. Williams, 102 Mass. 141; Chenowith v. Chamberlain, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 60; Commercial Bank v. Barksdale, 36 Mo. 563; Donegan v. Wood, 49 Ala. 242; Locke v. Huling, 24 Tex. 311.

But a usage for a notary to make demand by his clerk is good, and if proven will be good even against an indorser who did not know of it. Commercial Bank v. Varnum, 49 N. Y. 269.

It seems that an inland bill may be presented by the notary's clerk and protested by the notary himself. Gawtry v. Doane, 51 N. Y. 90.

10. Mitchell v. Baring, 10 B. & C. 4; Hoare v. Cazenove, 16 East, 391; Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468.

11. Crenshaw v. McKiernan, Minor, 295.

But not a demand after bank hours on cannot be found at his office or residence, the person in charge is deemed an agent of the maker or acceptor for purposes of demand.[1]

If the maker or acceptor is dead, his personal representative is the proper person upon whom to make demand;[2] if a lunatic, his guardian;[3] but if he is a bankrupt, demand should still be made upon him, not his assignee.[4]

If demand is to be made upon a firm, it may be made of any partner.[5]

(c). When Made.—So far as the maker or acceptor are concerned, a demand may be made at any time before suit,[6] but drawers or indorsers are entitled to have a demand made on the day of maturity.[7]

A demand before maturity is ineffectual for any purpose;[8] while delay in making it, without excuse or waiver, discharges drawers and indorsers.[9]

Payment may be made at any time on the day of maturity, but after a refusal the maker or acceptor cannot expect a fresh demand; he must seek the holder and offer payment.[10] a clerk who had no authority to pay. Newark, etc., Co. v. Bishop, 3 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 48.

1. Matthews v. Haydon, 2 Esp. 509.

Thus there have been held good demands upon the clerk in charge of the drawee's counting-room. Draper v. Clemens, 4 Mo. 52. A bookkeeper. Branch Bank v. Hodges, 17 Ala. 42. A servant "accustomed to pay money" for the acceptor. Bank of England v. Newman, 12 Mod. 241.

Where the maker could not be found on the premises designated as the place of payment, a demand upon any one who could be found there was held good. Buxten v. Jones, 1 M. & G. 83. At least the burden is upon such maker or acceptor to show that he was ready to pay at the place and time. Foden v. Sharp, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 183. See, further, Sanford v. Norton, 17 Vt. 285; Kleekamp v. Meyer, 5 Mo. App. 444; Casco Bank v. Mussey, 19 Me. 20; Whaley v. Houston, 12 La. Ann. 585; Hunt v. Maybee, 7 N. Y. 266.

2. 1 Parsons N. & B. 364; Price v. Young, 1 Nott & McC. 438; McGruder v. Union Bank, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 87; Groth v. Gyger, 31 Pa. St. 271.

If no personal representative can be found, presentment should be made at the late residence of the maker or acceptor. Simon v. Reynaud, 10 La. Ann. 506; Bank of Washington v. Reynolds, 2 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 289.

3. 1 Parsons N. & B. 365.

4. Armstrong v. Thurston, 11 Md. 148.

5. Greatlake v. Brown, 2 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 541; Mt. Pleasant Bank v. McLevan, 26 Iowa, 306.

But if several sign as makers not being partners, presentment should be to all. Willis v. Green, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 232; Bank of Red Oak v. Orvis, 40 Iowa, 332; Nave v. Richardson, 36 Mo. 130.

6. Metzger v. Waddell, 1 N. Mex. 400.

Sed quære whether suit is not a sufficient demand. Meads v. Merchants' Bank, 25 N. Y. 143, and see ante.

7. Wilson v. Senier, 14 Wis. 380; i.e., if grace is allowed, on the last day of grace. Lenox v. Roberts, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 373; Wooley v. Clements, 11 Ala. 220.

On a note payable one day after grace, demand should be made upon the fourth day after its date. Plato v. Reynolds, 27 N. Y. 586.

The time of making demand is governed by the law of the place where it is made. Pierce v. Indseth, 106 U. S. 546. But a note dated in Vermont, and payable generally, is governed by the law of that State, no matter where it is presented to the maker. Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361.

8. Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Est. 261; Walsh v. Dart, 12 Wis. 635; Kobler v. Montgomery, 17 Ind. 220; McMurchey v. Robinson, 10 Ohio, 496.

9. Groton v. Dallheim, 6 Me. 476. Though presented the day after maturity. Anderton v. Beck, 16 East, 248. Or any time after that date. Bailey v. Bodenham, 16 C. B. (N. S.) 288; Estell v. Vanderveer, 2 South. (N. J.) 782; Freeman v. Boynton, 7 Mass. 483.

10. 1 Parsons N. & B. 374, 414.

Upon paper payable at a bank, demand should be made during banking hours;[1] upon other notes and bills during business hours.[2]

Presentment of instruments payable on demand or at or after sight, must be made within a reasonable time after their date.[3]

(d) Where and How Made.—If the bill or note to be presented names a place of payment, demand at that place is always sufficient.[4]

1. But presentment after hours is good if the officers of the bank are there to answer. Salt Springs Natl. Bank v. Benton, 58 N. Y. 431; Flint v. Rogers, 15 Me. 67; First Natl. Bank v. Owens, 23 Iowa, 185; Crook v. Jadis, 6 C. & P. 191; Shepherd v. Chamberlain, 8 Gray (Mass.), 225. But not if made to the cashier on the street. Swan v. Hodges, 3 Head (Tenn.), 251. And see Elford v. Teed, 1 M. & S. 28.

Generally, a demand at any time during bank hours is good. Ex parte Moline, 19 Ves. 216. But in Mississippi the note or bill must be left in bank till the close of such hours. Harrison v. Crowder, 6 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 464.

2. Or at all events before bedtime, Skelton v. Dustin, 92 Ill. 49; Nelson v. Fotterall, 7 Leigh (Va.), 179.

Three P.M. is a business hour. Stivers v. Prentice, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 461. So is 8 P.M. Barclay v. Bailey, 2 Campb. 527 And 9 A.M. Etheridge v. Ladd, 44 Barb. 69. But 11 P.M., the maker being in bed, is not. Dana v. Sawyer, 22 Me. 244. Yet where the maker got out of bed at 9 P.M., and refused payment, the demand being made to him personally, it was held good. Farnsworth v. Allen, 4 Gray (Mass.), 453.

3. Bull v. First Natl. Bank, 14 Fed. Rep. 612; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Gray, 13 Mich. 191; Thrall v. Mead, 40 Vt. 540; Merritt v. Todd, 23 N. Y. 28. So, too, must an order for money expressing no time for payment. Brower v. Jones, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 230.

Upon a bill payable in the same place where it is drawn or transferred, demand must be made during the next day after its receipt. Holme v. Barry, 1 Stra. 415. Piner v. Clary, 17 B. Mon. 645; Dyas v. Hanson, 14 Mo. App. 363.

But if the bill is intended for circulation, it need not be presented with such promptitude. Richardson v. Fenner, 10 La. Ann. 599. And the intent may be shown by parol. Hudson v. Wolcott, 39 Ohio St. 618; Tomlinson Carriage Co. v. Kinsella, 31 Conn. 268.

That a demand note bears interest raises a presumption that immediate presentment was not intended. Wethey v. Andrews, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 582. But a delay of three years has been held fatal even on an interest note. Crim v. Starkweather, 88 N. Y. 339. Cf. Perry v. Green, 4 Harr. (N. J.) 61.

In order to hold an indorser even of a time note after its maturity, demand must be made within a reasonable time. Prior v. Bowman, 38 Iowa, 92; Light v. Kingsbury, 50 Mo. 331; Sanborn v. Southard, 25 Me. 409; Union Bank v. Ezell, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 385; Gray v. Bell, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 71.

To decide, therefore, what is a reasonable time is important. See ante, MATURITY, and the following cases, where it was held that delay until two of three joint and several makers were discharged by the Statute of Limitations was not reasonable. Shutts v. Fingar, 3 East. Repr. (N. Y.) 110. Nor was five years. Thillman v. Gueble, 32 La. Ann. 260. Nor periods varying from eighteen months to four years. Perry v. Green, 4 Harr. (N. J.) 61; Mudd v. Harper, 1 Md. 110; Dixon v. Clayville, 44 Md. 573; Chambers v. Hill, 26 Tex. 472. Nor thirty days on a sight draft drawn in West Virginia on New York. Thornburg v. Emmons, 23 W. Va. 325.

Each case depends on the opportunity and difficulty of making the demand, as shown by its own state of facts. Darnall v. Morehouse, 45 N. Y. 64; Prescott Bank v. Caverly, 7 Gray (Mass.), 217; Lindsey v. McClelland, 18 Wis. 481; Nutting v. Burked, 48 Mich. 241; National, etc., Banking Co. v. Second Natl. Bank, 63 Pa. St. 404; Goodwin v. Davenport, 47 Me. 112; Montelius v. Charles, 76 Ill. 303; Nichols v. Blackmore, 27 Tex. 586; Chartered Bank v. Dickson, L. R. 3 P. C. 574.

4. Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. Bl. 509; Gillett v. Averill, 5 Denio (N. Y.), 85. No matter where the maker or acceptor resides. Lawrence v. Dobyns, 30 Mo. 190. Or where he actually is when demand is made. Pierce v. Struthers, 27 Pa. St. 249, 30 ib. 139.

Refusal by the person in charge of the place is enough. New Orleans, etc., R. v. McKelvey, 2 La. Ann. 359. If it is closed, presentment at the door is suffi-

Where the place named for payment is uncertain, as "any bank in Boston," the holder may select the bank, and demand there is sufficient.[1]

A maker of a note, however, being liable at all events, cannot complain that no demand has been made even where a place for payment has been named in the note.[2]

Where no place for presentment is specified, personal demand upon the maker or acceptor is always good, as against all parties.[3] cient. Hine v. Allely, 4 B. & Ad. 624.

If a bank is the place named, demand there is good. Freese v. Brownell, 6 Vr. (N. J.) 285. If a city where the drawee has an office but does not reside, demand at the office is sufficient. Cox v. National Bank, 10 Otto, 704.

If the bank is closed, that is dishonor. Ocoll Bank v. Hughes, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 52. Or presentment at another bank in same town will hold indorser. Spann v. Baltzell, 1 Fla. 301; Central Bank v. Allen, 16 Me. 41. See Seneca Co. Bank v. Neass, 5 Denio (N. Y.), 329; Swan v. Hodges, 3 Head (Tenn.), 251.

1. North Bank v. Abbot, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 465; Langley v. Palmer, 30 Me. 467; Malden Bank v. Baldwin, 13 Gray (Mass.), 154.

Nor is notice of selection necessary. Page v. Webster, 15 Me. 249.

If the place of payment is uncertain by misnomer or mistake, presentment at the place actually intended is good. Worley v. Waldran, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 548.

2. Bank of U. S. v. Smith, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 173; Hills v. Place. 48 N. Y. 520; Howard v. Boorman, 17 Wis. 459; Lyon v. Williamson, 27 Me. 149; Reeve v. Pack, 6 Mich. 240; Yeaton v. Berney, 62 Ill. 61; Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307; Connerly v. Planters', etc.. Ins. Co., 66 Ala. 433; Fitler v. Beckley, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 458; Hall v. Allen, 37 Ind. 541; Otis v. Barton, 10 N. H. 433; Letchford v Starns, 16 La. Ann. 252; Robinson v. Lair, 31 Iowa, 9; Armistead v. Armistead, 10 Leigh (Va.), 512; Mahan v. Waters, 60 Mo. 167.

But if by the failure of the holder to make demand at the place and time specified the maker has been injured, this is a defence to the extent of the damages proved, and the burden is upon the maker to prove such damage. Wallace v. O'Connell, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 136; Caldwell v. Cassidy, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 271; Baltzer v. Kans. R. Co., 3 Mo. App. 574; Thiel v. Conrad, 21 La. Ann. 217; Cook v. Martin, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 379; and cases cited supra.

Even where money was deposited at the place named to meet the note, and after its maturity withdrawn by the insolvency or fraud of the person with whom deposited, this is no defence to the maker. Ward v. Smith, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 447; Adams v. Hackensack Co., 15 Vr. (N. J.) 638; Wood v. Merchants', etc., Sav. Co.. 41 Ill. 267; Williamsport Gas Co. v. Pinkerton, 95 Pa. St. 62. But exactly the opposite conclusion is reached in Bank of Charleston v. Zorn, 14 S. Car. 444; Lazier v. Horan, 55 Iowa, 75; and see 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. 574.

3. Burrowes v. Hannegan, 1 McL. 309; Penn v. Watts, 11 La. Ann. 205; Herring v. Sanger, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 71.

If not objected to, personal demand is good even where a place of payment is designated. Baldwin v. Farnesworth, 10 Me. 414; King v. Crowell, 61 Me. 244.

The usual place to seek the maker or acceptor is at his place of business, and in his absence during business hours demand may properly be made there. Story on Prom. Notes, § 235; Williams v. Brailsford, 25 Md. 126; Branch Bank v. Hodges, 17 Ala. 42. Even if it is closed. Shed v. Brett, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 413; Bank of La. v. Salterfield, 14 La. Ann. 80.

But demand at the residence is also proper. Specht v. Howard, 16 Wall. 564; Gillett v. Averill, 5 Denio (N.Y.), 85; Sussex Bank v. Baldwin, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 487; Oakey v. Beauvais, 11 La. 487; Sanford v. Norton, 17 Vt. 285. Yet the maker or acceptor should be sought for at both office and residence. Union Bank v. Fowlkes, 2 Sneed (Tenn.), 555.

If he has no office, then his residence is the only proper place. Jarvis v. Garnett, 39 Mo. 268; Talbot v. Commonwealth Bank, 129 Mass. 67.

After the dissolution of a firm presentment at the residence of one partner is sufficient. Greatlake v. Brown, 2 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 541.

Where it is proper to make presentment at a residence, and that residence is known, the fact that it is abroad will not excuse demand. Bank of New Orleans v. Whittemore, 12 Gray (Mass.), 469; Gest v. Lybrand, 3 Ohio, 307; Gil-

Though no place of payment be named on the face of the note or bill, such place may be fixed upon by agreement between the parties, and presentment should be made there.[1]

It is obvious that diligence is incumbent upon a holder in discovering the residence or office of the party upon whom demand is to be made.

Whether diligence has been used depends upon the circumstances of each case, and is therefore a mixed question of fact and law;[2] but where the facts are undisputed it is for the court only.[3]

When demand is made it should be by actually producing the note or bill, or offering to do so,[4] and insisting upon immediate payment.[5]

A note or bill cannot be properly presented by mailing it to the acceptor or maker;[6] but when payable at a specified bank it is enough if the instruments are lodged at maturity in the bank, ready to be surrendered when paid.[7] more v. Spies, 1 Barb. 158. But the contrary was held where such foreign residence was acquired after the making of the note. Wheeler v. Field, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 290.

1. 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. 563; Pearson v. Bank of the Metropolis. 1 Pet. (U. S.) 89; Eason v. Isbell, 42 Ala. 456; West v. Brown, 6 Ohio St. 542.

Demand at a place agreed upon by maker and holder will bind the indorser. Meyer v. Hibscher, 47 N. Y. 265. A fortiori will it when the indorser is a party to the agreement. State Bank v. Hurd. 12 Mass. 172.

2. Story on Bills, § 299; Story on Prom. Notes, § 240; Oxnard v. Varnum, 3 East. Repr. (Pa.) 718.

3. Wheeler v. Field, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 290.

Where the maker removed to new place of residence which is known, inquiry at his old abode is not diligence. Anderson v. Drake, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 114; Louisiana Ins. Co. v. Shamburgh, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 511. Nor is mere inquiry at the place of the date of the note. Specht v. Howard, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 564; Smith v. Fisher, 24 Pa. St. 222; Hartford Bank v. Green, 11 Iowa, 476. Nor looking up the maker in a city directory. Ayrault v. Pacific Bank, 47 N. Y. 570.

But inquiry at maker's last place of business, and learning there that he was "out West," is sufficient. Adams v. Leland, 30 N. Y. 309. So is inquiry at his boarding-house eliciting the information that he was "down the river," to be gone "some days." Belmont Bank v. Patterson, 17 Ohio, 78. But failure to inquire for the maker's residence on learning that he was a steamboat captain and absent on his boat is negligence, and discharges the indorser. Mitchell v. Young, 21 La. Ann. 279.

And see further, Hultz v. Boppe, 37 N. Y. 634; Central Bank v. Allen, 16 Me. 41; Galpin v. Hard, 3 McCord (S. Car.). 394; Nailor v. Bowie, 3 Md. 251; Porter v. Judson, 1 Gray (Mass.), 175.

4. Hansard v. Robinson, 7 B. & C. 90; Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 242; Arnold v. Dresser, 8 Allen (Mass.), 435; Bank of Vergennes v. Cameron, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 143; Farmers' Bank v. Duvall, 7 G. & J. (Md.) 78.

If the certificate of protest duly sets out a demand, it is prima facie evidence of production of the paper. Bank of Vergennes v. Cameron, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 143.

If the note has been lost a copy should be produced. Hinsdale v. Miles, 5 Conn. 331; Story on Bills, § 348; 2 Edwards Notes and Bills, §§ 672, 697.

5. Merely taking a note to maker's residence is not a demand. Mechanics' Bank v. Lynn, 2 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 217. Nor presenting it to the maker's administrator "for allowance." Chase v. Evoy, 49 Cal. 467.

6. 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. 583; 1 Parsons N. & B. 371; Parker v. Stroud, 31 Hun (N. Y.), 578; Halls v. Howell, Harp. 426.

Yet a bill may be left in the acceptor's hands for payment early on the due day, to be called for and paid later. Turner v. Mead, 1 Stra. 416. And leaving a note at a maker's house which next day was returned with a distinct refusal to pay, has been held a sufficient demand. Woodin v. Foster, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 146.

7. Bank of U. S. v. Carneal, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 543; Gillett v. Averill, 5 Den.

A custom, common in some New England States, of sending word to the maker by mail in what bank his note was, and requiring him to come and pay it, has been held good, at least when known and consented to by the parties.[1]

(e) On Paper of Absconding Debtors.—The fact that before the maturity of a note or bill the maker or acceptor has departed from his residence, even for the purpose of avoiding his creditors, does not render presentment unnecessary; demand must be made at his last known residence or office, if with diligence it can be found.[2]

29. Protest.—The solemn declaration on the part of the holder of a bill of exchange against any loss sustained by him by reason of the non-payment or non-acceptance of the bill in question is known as protest.[3]

The proper person to make the protest is the notary who presented the bill,[4] but if no notary is obtainable, any private

(N. Y.) 85; Jenks v. Doylestown Bank, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 505; Lawrence v. Dobyns, 39 Mo. 196; Huffaker v. National Bank of Monticello, 13 Bush (Ky.), 644; State Bank v. Napier, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 270.

But where the note was lost in a crack in a desk, so that it was not known to be in bank on the day of maturity, it was held insufficient. Chicopee Bank v. Philadelphia Bank, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 641.

1. 1 Parsons N. & B. 369; Jones v. Fales, 4 Mass. 245; Shove v. Wiley, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 558; Maine Bank v. Smith, 18 Me. 99.

The knowledge of the maker will bind the indorsers. Warren Bank v. Parker, 8 Gray (Mass.), 221. So that presentment good against the maker is good against the indorser. Whitwell v. Johnson, 17 Mass. 449. Contra, Pierce v. Whitney, 29 Me. 188.

The presumption is that the general custom of all the banks in the place where the note is payable is known to the parties to it. 2 Edwards N. & B. § 700; Grand Bank v. Blanchard, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 305.

2. McGruder v. Bank of Washington, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 598; Taylor v. Snyder, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 145; Anderson v. Drake, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 114.

But where the holder learned, by inquiry at the last place of business of a firm, that they had failed and left town, and thereupon gave notice of dishonor, this was held insufficient. Granite Bank v. Ayres, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 392.

When the fact of absconding has been ascertained, and the holder learns that the absconder has left no attachable property, he must still go through the form of presentment. Pierce v. Cate, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 192.

Nor does notice by the maker to holder that demand would be useless, excuse presentment. Lee Bank v. Spencer, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 308.

But where neither the maker or acceptor, nor his residence, family, or office can be discovered, presentment is impossible, and therefore unnecessary. Lehman v. Jones, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 126; Plahto v. Patchin, 26 Mo. 389; Ratcliff v. Planters' Bank, 2 Sneed (Tenn.). 425; Galpin v. Hard. 3 McC. (S. Car.) 394.

3. 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 4; Walker v. Turner, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 536.

But in its popular sense protest includes all the steps necessary to fix the liability of a drawer or indorser. Coddington v. Davis, 1 N. Y. 186; Townsend v. Lorain Bank, 2 Ohio St. 345.

Protest is only necessary upon foreign bills. Union Bank v. Hyde, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 372; Smith v. Curlee, 59 Ill. 221; Ocean Nat'l Bk. v. Williams, 102 Mass. 141; Bank of U. S. v. Leathers, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 64.

Therefore, though it is customary to protest both promissory notes and inland bills, the cost of protest can only be recovered upon foreign bills. 1 Parsons N. & B. 646; Johnson v. Bank of Fulton, 29 Ga. 260.

4. Cribbs v. Adams, 13 Gray (Mass.), 597; Sacriber v. Brown, 3 McL. (U. S.) 481.

Presentment by the notary's clerk and protest by the notary himself is improper unless authorized by statute. Commercial Bank v. Varnum, 49 N. Y. 269; Commercial Bank v. Barksdale, 36 Mo. 563.

person of the place of dishonor,[1] which should be the place of protest,[2] may draw it up.

The act of protesting is said to comprise three steps, viz.: (1) presentment and demand; (2) noting; and (3) extending the protest.[3]

The protest completed, it is authenticated by the signature and seal of the notary.[4]

Although the form of protests already given[5] is the usual and proper one, if the facts are sufficiently set forth the words used are immaterial.[6]

A protest is evidence of all the statements properly contained in it,[7] but it is prima facie evidence only,[8] and any legal testimony may be offered to rebut it.

But at common law it is not part of a notary's duty to give notice of dishonor; therefore, unless by statute, a protest is not evidence of notice.[9]

1. Burke v. McKay, 2 How. (U. S.) 66; Read v. Bank of Kentucky, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 91.

2. Benj. Chalm. Dig. 175; Chitty on Bills, 170; Story on Bills, § 282.

3. 2 Danl. Neg. Inst. 10.

Although it has been said that noting, as distinguished from protest, "is unknown to the law,"—Leftly v. Mills, 4 T. R. 170,—it is now a well settled practice to make a "note" or minute of the dishonor on the very day when it occurs, from which the "extended" or formal protest may be drawn off at any future time. Bailey v. Dozier, 6 How. (U. S.) 23; Cayuga Co. Bk. v. Hunt, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 635.

But delay in noting will invalidate the protest. Dennistoun v. Stewart, 17 How. (U. S.) 606.

4. Of which seal the courts take judicial notice. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. 170; Bank of Ky. v. Pursley, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 240; Bradley v. Northern Bank, 60 Ala: 258.

If the seal be omitted or the protest be by a private person, the document must be proved by any legal evidence. Carter v. Burley, 9 N. H. 558; Chanoine v. Fowler, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 173.

5. See ante, § 5.

6. The essentials of a protest are the time, place, and manner of presentment, demand, and dishonor; the person by whom and to whom presentment was made. 2 Danl. Neg. Inst. 16.

A protest stating a demand before maturity is void. Walmsley v. Acton, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 312.

Where a bill is payable at a bank the protest must state a demand made there. People's Bank v. Brooke, 31 Md. 7.

A statement of presentment only is insufficient. Nave v. Richardson, 36 Mo. 130. But demand includes presentment. Nott v. Beard, 16 La. 308 Contra, Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 262.

Where demand is made at the office of the drawer or acceptor, in his absence, the person on whom demand was actually made may be described as the clerk or person in charge. Stainback v. Bank of Va., 11 Gratt. (Va.) 260.

7. Townsley v. Sumrall, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 170; Chase v. Taylor, 4 H. & J. (Md.) 54.

But this is true only of protests recognized by common law, i.e., those of foreign bills; for if a statute provide for protest of inland bills, and make such protests evidence, they still cannot be received by the courts of any other State or country. Dutchess Co. Bank v. Ibbottson, 5 Denio (N. Y.), 110.

8. Howard Bank v. Carson, 50 Md. 27; Spence v. Crockett, 5 Baxter (Tenn.), 576; Dickens v. Beal, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 582.

9. Miller v. Hackley, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 384; Bank of Rochester v. Gray, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 231; Walker v. Turner, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 534.

But even where by statute the protest is admitted as evidence of notice, its statements as to notice are strictly construed, and it has been held that where the protest showed a notice sent to an indorser at N. A. it was insufficient, there being no presumption that the indorser lived at N. A.; the protest should have stated that N. A. was the indorser's residence. Turner v. Rogers, 8 Ind. 140. Cf. Stiles v. Inman, 55 Miss. 472; Sprague v. Tyson, 44 Ala. 340; Bradshaw v. Hedge, 10 Iowa, 402.

30. Notice of Dishonor.—(a) When Necessary.—When acceptance[1] of a bill or payment[2] of either a note or bill has been refused, though protest has been made or noted, the liability of the drawer or indorser is generally not complete unless notice of dishonor is sent to him.

If this notice is neglected, the indorser or drawer is discharged,[3] even if they are accommodation parties.[4]

The time when the indorsement is made, whether before or

But in Bank of U. S. v. Smith, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 171, it was left for the jury to decide whether the place to which notice was sent was or was not the indorser's residence.

1. Rogers v. Stephens, 2 T. R. 713; Long v. Stephenson, 72 N. Car. 569; Leggett v. Weed, 7 Kans. 273.

But where a bill has been dishonored for non-acceptance, it is not necessary afterwards to make presentment for payment and serve another notice of dishonor. De La Torre v. Barclay, 1 Stark. 7; Whitehead v. Walker, 9 M. & W. 506.

2. If payable in instalments, notice of non-payment of each instalment must be served. Fitchburg Ins. Co. v. Davis, 121 Mass. 121.

3. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wh. (U. S.) 213; Hall v. Davis, 41 Ga. 614; Grieff v. Kirk, 15 La. Ann. 320,—as to drawers. Bridges v. Berry, 3 Taunt. 130; Magruder v. Union Bank, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 87; Stewart v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Mich. 348; Cayuga Co. Bank v. Warden, 1 N. Y. 413; Webber v. Matthews, 101 Mass. 481; Winston v. Richardson, 27 Ark. 34; Shields v. Farmers' Bank, 5 W. Va. 254, —as to indorsers.

Though the bill be drawn in payment for goods—Allen v. King, 4 McL. (U. S.) 128—or for an antecedent debt—Penn v. Pommeirat, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 541—the drawer is still entitled to notice.

Wherever the bill is drawn with authority, he is entitled to such notice. Walker v. Rogers, 40 Ill. 278; Johnson v. Flanagan, 26 La. Ann. 289. Or drawn against funds, actual or expected, in the drawee's hands. Blum v. Bidwell, 20 La. Ann. 153. Otherwise not. Lewis v. Parker, 33 Tex. 121.

And where the drawer and drawee are one and the same person to all intents and purposes, as where one officer of a corporation drew on another, notice is necessary. Warrensburg, etc., Assoc. v. Zoll, 20 C. L. J. (Md.) 36.

So, too, where drawer and drawee were the same persons carrying on business in two places under different partnership names. Hill v. Planters' Bank, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 670. Cf. Kaskaskia Bridge Co. v. Shannon, 6 Ill. 15; Bailey v. Southwestern Bank, 11 Fla. 266; Roach v. Ostler, 1 M. & Ry. 120.

In suits against both drawers and indorsers, notice must be averred and proven. Disborough v. Vanness, 3 Hals. (N. J.) 284; Treadway v. Nicks, 3 McC. (S. Car.) 195.

That a note is payable to bearer so that indorsement was unnecessary makes no difference; an indorser is still entitled to notice. Galpin v. Hard, 3 McC. (S. Car.) 394.

But where the name of the maker is forged, or the maker had no right to make the note, e.g., being an infant, notice is not necessary. Turnbull v. Bowyer, 40 N. Y. 456; Perkins v. White, 36 Ohio St. 530.

Nor is the indorser of a non-negotiable note entitled to notice. Ford v. Mitchell, 15 Wis. 334; Billingham v. Bryan, 10 Iowa, 317; Stix v. Matthews, 75 Mo. 96; Sutton v. Owen, 65 N. Car. 123; Seymour v. Vanslyck, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 403; Plimley v. Westley, 2 Bing. N. C. 249.

4. Cory v. Scott, 3 B. & Ald. 619; Bank of Louisiana v. Morgan, 13 La. Ann. 598,—as to drawers. Turner v. Samson, L. R. 2 Q. B. D. 23; Sawyer v. Brownell, 13 R. I. 141; Rea v. Dorrance, 18 Me. 137; Bradley v. Buchanan, 21 Kans. 274; Field v. New Orleans Newspaper Co., 21 La. Ann. 24,—as to indorsers.

Notice is necessary though both indorser and acceptor be accommodation parties. Foster v. Parker, L. R. 2 C. P. D. 18. Or the drawer be insolvent. Jackson v. Richards, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 343.

It has been held, however, that where a drawer is himself the party accommodated, he will not be discharged by lack of notice. Norton v. Pickering, 8 B. & C. 610; Legge v. Thorpe, 12 East, 171; Fulton v. McCracken, 18 Md. 528; Evans v. Norris, 1 Ala. 511; McLaren v. Marine Bank, 52 Ga. 131. Unless he prove damages from lack of such notice. New Orleans Bank v. Harper, 12 Rob. 231; Nicolét v. Gloyd, 18 La. 417.

after maturity, is immaterial; the indorser is still entitled to notice.[1]

Persons indorsing negotiable paper before its delivery have been variously regarded as indorsers, and therefore of course entitled to notice,[2] or as guarantors or co-makers, and consequently not so entitled.[3]

It may be added that the maker of a note,[4] even though an accommodation party,[5] and the acceptor of a bill [6] have no right to notice of dishonor.

(b) Requisites of Notice.—The sufficiency of the notice sent is determined by the law of the place of payment, if such place is specified in the instrument dishonored.[7]

If it is not mentioned, the law of the place of indorsement governs,[8] and the home of the indorser is prima facie the place of his indorsement.[9]

While it is desirable that notice should be in writing,[10] this is not necessary; verbal notice is sufficient.[11]

1. Shelby v. Judd, 24 Kans. 161; Stockman v. Riley, 2 McC. (S. Car.) 398; McCall v. Witkouski, 10 La. Ann. 179; Dwight v. Emerson, 2 N. H. 159; Tyler v. Young, 30 Pa. St. 143; McKeever v. Kirtland, 33 Iowa, 348; Beebe v. Brooks, 12 Cal. 308; Berry v. Robinson, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 121; Smith v. Caro, 9 Oreg. 278.

One who indorses a demand note eight months after its date comes within the rule. McKinney v. Crawford, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 351. And in Vermont it has been extended to the indorser of an overdue non-negotiable note. Aldis v. Johnson, 1 Vt. 136.

But in North Carolina an indorser at maturity is a co-maker and not entitled to notice. Baker v. Robinson, 63 N. Car. 191.

2. Hooks v. Anderson, 58 Ala. 238; Bronson v. Alexander, 48 Ind. 244; Taylor v. McCune, 11 Pa. St. 460; Bradford v. Pauly, 18 Kans. 216; Richards v. Warring, 1 Keyes (N. Y.), 576.

In Massey v. Turner, 2 Houst. (Del.) 79, such indorser was held entitled to notice, though the consideration for the note was received by him.

Notice is required by statute in Massachusetts. Cook v. Googins, 126 Mass. 410.

3. Perkins v. Barstow, 6 R. I. 505; Manufacturers' Bank v. Follett, 11 R. I. 92; Hardy v. White, 60 Ga. 454; Iser v. Cohen, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 421; Sibley v. Van Horn, 13 Iowa, 209. See articles on GUARANTY and SURETYSHIP.

4. Byles on Bills, 292; Pearse v. Pemberthy, 3 Camp. 261; Hays v. Northwestern Bank, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 127.

5. Hansbrough v. Gray, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 356.

6. Blair v. Bank of Tennessee, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 84.

Lack of notice to the acceptor cannot therefore avail the drawer as a defence. Edwards v. Dick, 4 B. & Ald. 212.

Though the drawee accepts payable at a specified bank, he is still not entitled to notice of non-payment. Smith v. Thatcher, 4 B. & Ald. 200; Sebags v. Abithal, 4 M. & S. 462.

For a full statement of the statutes of the various States as to notice of dishonor, see 3 Rand. Com. Paper, §§ 1212–1217.

7. Benj. Chalm. Dig. 202; Smith v. Hall, U. C. 3 Q. B. 315.

8. Story on Bills, § 285; Story on Prom. Notes, § 177.

9. Simpson v. White, 40 N. H. 540.

All questions relating to sufficiency of notice are for the court only. Hutchinson v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 542; Ricketts v. Pendleton, 14 Md. 320; Remer v. Downer, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 620; Townsend v. Lorain Bank, 2 Ohio St. 345; Routh v. Robertson, 11 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 382.

10. 2 Daniel Neg. Inst. 33; Story on Prom. Notes, § 348.

But a written notice need not be in any set form of words; a letter is sufficient. Shepard v. Hall, 1 Conn. 329; Howland v. Adrian, 1 Vr. (N. J.) 41. Provided it contain all the necessary information. Hartley v. Case, 4 B. & C. 339.

11. Phillips v. Gould, 8 C. & P. 355; Smith v. Mullett, 2 Camp. 208; Butt v. Hoge, 2 Hilt. 81; McKeever v. Kirtland, 33 Iowa, 348; Linville v. Welch, 29 Mo. 203; Thompson v. Williams, 14 Cal. 160; Stephenson v. Primrose, 8 Port. (Ala.)

A notice, however, when written, as is usual, should be signed by the party or person giving it;[1] should be addressed to the party to be notified;[2] should state, at least by fair implication, that the holder looks to such party for payment;[3] should contain an intelligible and sufficient description of the instrument dishonored;[4] should clearly state the facts of demand and dis-

155; Payne v. Winn, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 374.

Leaving word at the drawer's or indorser's office has been held enough. Crosse v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545. But notice of some kind is necessary. The fact that the drawer or indorser really knew that the bill or note had been dishonored does not amount to notice. Miers v. Brown, 11 M. & W. 372; Juniata Bank v. Hall, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 160; Lane v. Bank of West Tennessee, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 419.

1. Walker v. Bank of the State, 8 Mo. 704; Walmsley v. Acton, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 312.

But a statement by the messenger delivering the notice to the party notified, giving the name of the person from whom it came, has been held sufficient. Armstrong v. Christiani, 5 C. & B. 687. So has a notice unsigned but written on paper bearing a bank's letter-heading, the jury having found that the indorser notified was not misled. Maxwell v. Brain, 10 Jur. N. S. 777.

A printed signature is sufficient. Sussex Bank v. Baldwin, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 487.

2. Where a notice addressed at its foot to the wrong party was inclosed in an envelope correctly addressed, it was held insufficient. Remer v. Downer, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 620. Yet where the only address given was upon the envelope, and that was correct, it was held a good notice. Denegre v. Hiriart, 6 La. Ann. 100.

But where the indorser's illegible signature is shown to be the cause of indistinctness or incorrectness of address, he will still be bound. Hewitt v. Thompson, 1 Moo. & R. 543; Manufacturers' Bank v. Hagard, 35 N. Y. 226. But this must be clearly shown. Davey v. Jones, 13 Vr. (N. J.) 28.

A notice sent after an indorser's death may be addressed to any one of his executors. Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Wallace, 13 S. Car. 347. Or simply to his "legal representatives"—Pillow v. Hardeman, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 538; Boyd v. Savings Bank, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 501; Chrismas v. Fluker, 7 Rob. (La.) 13—when their names cannot be discovered. Smalley v. Wright, 11 Vr. (N. J.) 471.

A notice directed to the decedent himself has been held good when all information as to his estate was unobtainable. Barnes v. Reynolds, 4 How. (Miss.) 114; Mospero v. Pedesclaux, 22 La. Ann. 227. But a notice so addressed, yet sent to the person who was afterwards appointed administrator, is bad. Mathewson v. Strafford Bank, 45 N. H. 104.

A notice addressed "to the estate" of the deceased, without any inquiry, shows lack of diligence, and is therefore bad. Massachusetts Bank v. Oliver, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 557.

3. Townsend v. Lorain Bank, 2 Ohio St. 345; Burgess v. Vreeland, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 71.

Yet courts have refused to draw this implication from the statement that the bill "had been presented and not taken up." East v. Smith, 4 D. & L. 744. And made such inference from the words "please let me hear from you"—Clark v. Eldridge, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 96—and the statement that the indorser was looked to for "non-payment, interest, and costs." Fitchburg Bank v. Perley, 2 Allen (Mass.), 433.

But it is now held, at least by the best text-books, that the fact of the holder's sending notice implies that he looks for payment to the party notified. 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 45; Story Prom. Notes, § 353; 3 Rand. Com. Paper. § 1222, citing Cooke v. French, 10 Ad. & El. 131; Chard v. Fox, 14 Q. B. 200; Bank of U. S. v. Carneal, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 542.

4. Housatonic Bank v. Laflin, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 546; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 393; Saltmarsh v. Tuthill, 13 Ala. 390; Burkam v. Trowbridge, 9 Mich. 209; Young v. Bennett, 7 Bush (Ky.), 474.

A misdescription that does not mislead is immaterial. Thompson v. Williams, 14 Cal. 160; Wood v. Watson, 53 Me. 300; Youngs v. Lee, 12 N. Y. 55; Bromage v. Vaughn, 9 Q. B. 608. And the burden of proving that he was misled is upon the person alleging the misdescription. Hartley v. Case, 4 B. & C. 339; Byles on Bills, 277; 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 34.

Thus an error in calling a bill a note, or vice versa, is immaterial. Messenger v. Southey, 1 Man. & G. 76; Stockman v. Parr, 11 M. & W. 809. And parol evidence is admissible to identify the in-honor;[1] and, as a matter of form, it ought to be dated,[2] and construment as the one described in the notice. Johnson v. Cocks, 7 Eng. (Ark.) 672.

Where the error consisted in the omission of the name of the drawee, it was considered immaterial. Maine v. Spurlock, 9 Rob. (La.) 161. Otherwise where the maker's name was omitted. Home Ins. Co. v. Green, 19 N. Y. 518. But stating that a note was made by "S. H., Treasurer" when it was also signed by another officer has been held an immaterial omission, there being no other note to which the notice could refer. Hodges v. Shuler, 22 N. Y. 114.

An error caused by an illegible signature is excusable after diligence in trying to learn the indorser's real name; failure to inquire at a bank where the note was payable is negligence. McGeorge v. Chapman, 16 Vr. (N. J.) 395 Cf., as to mistakes in names, Underwood v. Huddlestone, 2 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 93; Moorman v. Bank of Alabama, 3 Port. (Ala.) 353; Smith v. Whiting, 12 Mass. 6; Sasscer v. Farmers' Bank, 4 Md. 409.

Errors of amount in describing the note or bill can only discharge a drawer or indorser when he proves to the satisfaction of a jury that he was thereby misled. Bank of Rochester v. Gould, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 279; McKnight v. Lewis, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 681; Snow v. Perkins, 2 Mich. 238; Bank of Alexandria v. Swann, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 33; Rowan v. Odenheimer, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 44. And the same rule has been applied to mistakes as to the date or maturity of the instrument. Cayuga Bank v. Warden, 1 N. Y. 413; Mills v. Bank of U. S., 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 431; Ross v. Planters' Bank, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 335.

Where the description of the notice applied equally well to two notes, one of which had been overdue for some months, it was held to refer with sufficient certainty to the other. Davenport v. Gilbert, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 532.

Whenever the notice containing the error of date cannot refer to any other instrument than the one to which it was intended to refer, the mistake is immaterial. Knopfel v. Seufert, 11 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 184; Tobey v. Lennig, 14 Pa. St. 483.

1. A legal demand upon the maker must be stated. Arnold v. Kinlock, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 44; Page v. Gilbert, 60 Me. 485.

That the bill was "duly presented" is enough. Ex parte Lowenthal, L. R. 9 Ch. App. 591. So is presented "at the office of the maker," without stating to whom in that office. Wallace v. Crilley, 46 Wis. 577.

From a statement that the instrument was presented at a bank, it will be inferred that demand was made during bank hours. Henry v. State Bank, 3 Ind. 216.

But a notice showing on its face an illegal demand, e.g., before or after maturity, on a Sunday or holiday, is insufficient, no matter when the demand was really made. De La Hunt v. Higgins, 9 Abb. Pr. 422; Tevis v. Wood, 5 Cal. 393; Ransom v. Mack, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 587.

Dishonor is sufficiently shown by stating that the bill or note is unpaid, and that the person notified is looked to for payment. Wolf v. Lauman, 34 Mo. 575; Hunter v. Van Bomhorst, 1 Md. 504; Armstrong v. Christiani, 5 C. B. 687. But simply stating that the instrument is unpaid is insufficient. Dale v. Gold, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 490; Fish v. Morse, 16 N. H. 271.

To say that the bill or note has been "protested" sufficiently states dishonor Burgess v. Vreeland, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 71; Youngs v. Lee, 12 N. Y. 55; Stephenson v. Dickson, 24 Pa. St. 148; Reynolds v. Appleman, 41 Md. 615. And a copy of the protest need not be sent to the person notified. Goodman v. Harvey, 4 Ad. & El. 870; Linville v. Welch, 29 Mo. 203; Dennistoun v. Stewart, 17 How. (U. S.) 606.

Adding to a statement of non-payment a threat of "proceedings" makes the notice good. Warthan v. Blackwell, 6 Jur. 738; Robson v. Curlewis, 2 Q. B. 421; Davis v. Burt, 7 Iowa, 56.

Writing that the paper has been "dishonored" or "returned and dishonored" sufficiently states demand and refusal. Edmonds v. Cates, 2 Jur. 183; King v. Bickley, 2 Q. B. 419; Lewis v. Gompertz, 6 M. & W. 400.

2. But this is not necessary. 3 Rand. Com. Paper, § 1221.

Where a notice was dated ahead of the time of its actual delivery, being in other respects good, the error was held immaterial. Tobey v. Lennig, 14 Pa. St. 483; Byles on Bills, 417.

But one with no date, stating a presentment "this day" made, is bad. Wynn v. Alden, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 163. So is one making the same statement, and dated before maturity. Etting v. Schuylkill Bank, 2 Pa. St. 355; Routh v. Robertson, 11 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 382.

tain the name of the holder[1] and the place where the note is to be found.[2]

(c) By and to Whom Given.—Notice of dishonor may always be given by the lawful holder of the note or bill in question,[3] and where several persons are joint holders, any one of them may give the notice.[4] But a mere stranger to the instrument cannot give a valid notice of dishonor.[5]

It is the duty of every party, upon receiving notice, to himself notify his own indorser without delay.[6]

Notice need not be given by the holder personally; his agent, either special[7] or general,[8] may give it, and in his (the agent's) own name.[9]

1. But this is not necessary. Reid v. Reid, 11 Tex. 585; Harrison v. Ruscoe, 15 M. & W. 231.

2. Nor is this necessary. Byles on Bills, 281; Rowlands v. Springett, 14 M. & W. 7; Bradley v. Davis, 26 Me. 45; Mills v. Bank of U. S., 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 431.

3 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 46; Cromer v. Platt, 37 Mich. 132; Payne v. Patrick, 21 Tex. 680.

Any lawful possessor, being a competent witness to prove the notice, can give it. Jex v. Tureaud, 19 La. Ann. 64.

One who holds the note as collateral can give notice. Cowperthwait v. Sheffield, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 416; Peacock v. Pursell, 14 C. B. (N. S.) 728.

4. Story on Prom. Notes, § 304.

The guardian of an infant is the proper person to give notice for such infant. Story on Prom. Notes, § 306.

5. The rule is said to be that "a party to the instrument who is at least contingently liable on it, although not the holder at the time of giving notice," is the only person other than the actual holder or his agent who may give notice. 3 Rand. Com. Paper, § 1234, citing Chapman v. Keane, 3 Ad. & El. 193; Lysaght v. Bryant, 9 C. B. 46; Jameson v, Swinton, 2 Taunt. 224; Haslett v. Poultney, 1 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 466.

But even a party if he has been discharged from liability at the time of giving notice cannot give a valid notice. Byles on Bills, 290. Cf. Miers v. Brown, 11 M. & W. 372; Smith v. Mullett, 2 Camp. 208.

It has been held that a maker may himself give notice of dishonor. Johnson v. Harth, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 482. Cf. First Nat'l Bank v. Ryerson, 23 Iowa, 508. And that an acceptor may do the same. Byles on Bills, 291; Rosher v. Kieran, 4 Camp. 87. But see Stanton v. Blossom, 14 Mass. 116; Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167.

6. Wilson v. Swabey, 1 Stark. 34; Edwards v. Dick, 4 B. & Ald. 212.

Yet, if the holder has notified all parties, the notice so given inures to the benefit of all, and a first indorser who has received notice from the holder may be sued by the second indorser, who has taken up the note, and give no notice of his own. Stafford v. Yates, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 327; Marr v. Johnson, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 1; Palen v. Shurtleff, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 581; Brailsford v. Williams, 15 Md. 150; 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 46.

So, too, the notice given by any indorser to his own indorser inures to the benefit of parties subsequent to them both. E.g., the third indorser may sue the first upon notice given by the second. Story on Prom. Notes, § 302; Newen v. Gill, 8 C. & P. 367; Bank of U. S. v. Goddard, 5 Mason (U. S.), 366. But this is not true where the second indorser was himself discharged by lack of due notice. Ex parte Barclay, 7 Ves. 597.

7. Story on Prom. Notes, § 301.

A collecting agent of the holder is specially authorized to give notice. Rowe v. Tipper, 13 C. B. 249; Bank of Mobile v. Huggins, 3 Ala. 206. And where a bank holds the paper for collection, its notary is the agent of the owner for this purpose. Tiernan v. Commercial Bank, 7 How. (Miss.) 648. So that the bank is not liable for such notary's negligence after due care exercised in selecting him. Agricultural Bank v. Commercial Bank, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 592.

8. McNeil v. Wyatt, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 125.

But such agent must be a competent witness to prove sending the notice. Walker v. Bank of the State, 8 Mo. 704. Where one bank is the agent of another bank in collecting a note indorsed by the cashier of the latter, its duty ends in giving notice to the indorsing bank, unless specially instructed to notify all parties. Phipps v. Millbury Bank, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 79

9. Woodthorpe v. Lawes, 2 M. & W. 109.

Notice must be given to all parties to whom the holder looks for payment, but he need not give notice to any other person.[1]

If he fails to give notice to any indorser, he thereby discharges all prior parties,[2] unless they receive due notice from some other party.[3]

One to whom paper is indorsed for collection is regarded as a holder, and his principal as an indorser entitled to notice.[4]

Joint indorsers are all entitled to notice unless they are partners;[5] but notice to one member of a partnership is sufficient.[6]

Upon the bankruptcy of an indorser, and before the appointment of an assignee, the bankrupt himself is the proper person to notify;[7] but the assignee when appointed should receive all notices of dishonor.[8]

The personal representative of a deceased indorser should receive all notices intended for his decedent;[9] and an agent if in-

1. Story on Prom. Notes, § 299; Peyroux v. Dubertrand, 11 La. 32; Westfall v. Farwell, 13 Wis. 563; Marsh v. Maxwell, 2 Camp. 210.

Thus the holder may choose to look only to some remote indorser, and notify him accordingly, and such notice binds that indorser though no other party be notified. Meyers v. Standart, 11 Ohio St. 29.

2. Story on Prom. Notes, § 334; Turner v. Leech, 4 B. & Ald. 451.

The holder satisfies the law merchant if he notify his own immediate indorser; it is the latter's duty to pass the notice on to prior parties. West River Bank v. Taylor, 34 N. Y. 128; Shelburne Falls Nat'l Bank v. Townsley, 102 Mass. 177; Struthers v. Blake, 30 Pa. St. 39; Seaton v. Scoville, 18 Kans. 433; Van Brunt v. Vaughn, 47 Iowa, 145; Renshaw v. Triplett, 23 Mo. 213.

Notice to the last indorser, however, does not fix any liability on prior parties. Stix v. Matthews, 63 Mo. 371.

3. Therefore a holder may sue an early indorser on a notice given by an intermediate indorser. Struthers v. Blake, 30 Pa. St. 139.

4. Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388; Warren v. Gilman, 17 Me. 360; Butler v. Duval, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 264; Howard v. Ives, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 263; First National Bank v. Smith, 132 Mass. 227.

Thus a collection agent upon the dishonor of a note on Saturday may notify his principal on Monday; and if he in turn notifies his indorser in time, the latter will be held. Farmers' Bank v. Vail, 21 N. Y. 485.

5. Sayre v. Frick, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 383; Boyd v. Orton, 16 Wis. 495; Miser v. Trovinger, 7 Ohio St. 281; Gantt v. Jones, 1 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 210.

The omission to notify one joint indorser will discharge those notified. Peoples' Bank v. Keech, 26 Md. 521. Cf. Willis v. Green, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 235.

Contra that notice to one joint indorser binds all. Higgins v. Morrison, 4 Dana (Ky.), 100.

6. Bignold v. Waterhouse, 1 M. & S. 259; Bouldin v. Page, 24 Mo. 594; New York, etc., Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 51 Ala. 305.

So, too, is notice to one of the surviving partners after the firm is dissolved by the death of one partner. Slocumb v. Lizardi, 21 La. Ann. 355. And notice to the liquidating agent upon an indorsement of "B. & H., old firm in liquidation." Fassin v. Hubbard, 55 N. Y. 465.

But notice sent to the trustees of a dissolved partnership when the ex-partners lived in same city where they had carried on business is bad. Howard Bank v. Carson, 50 Md. 18.

7. Ex parte Moline, 19 Ves. 216; Ex parte Tremont National Bank, 2 Lowell (U. S.), 409.

8. Camidge v. Allenby, 6 B. & C. 373; Ex parte Chappel, 3 Deac. 298.

If the assignee's appointment is unknown to the holder, notice to the bankrupt is good. Donnell v. Lewis County Sav. Bank, 80 Mo. 165.

Yet it has been held that the insolvent is absolutely entitled to notice, so that notice to the assignee will not bind the estate in insolvency. House v. Vinton National Bank, 43 Ohio St. 346.

9. Oriental Bank v. Blake, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 206; Hallett v. Branch Bank, 12 Ala. 193.

Notice to one of several executors is good. Lewis v. Bakewell, 6 La. Ann. 359; Beals v. Peck, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 245. Or notice to an executor named in the trusted with the general conduct of an indorser's business[1] is a proper person upon whom to serve notice of dishonor.

The nature of some persons' employment, or their relationship to or residence with the indorser, have been held to make them proper persons upon whom to serve notice of dishonor, without proof of any agency whatever.[2]

(d) Time for Giving.—The time when an indorser was notified should be stated in an action against him;[3] the burden of proof is upon the holder to show that he was notified in due time;[4] and what is due time is determined by the law of the place where the note or bill is payable.[5]

It is generally said that a holder is allowed a reasonable time within which to give notice to his indorser;[6] and this rule allows whatever time is necessary for making diligent inquiry for the indorser's residence,[7] and the reasonable time may be extended by will who afterwards refused to act. Goodnow v. Warren, 122 Mass. 179.

If the indorser's death is unknown, notice sent to that name at the decedent's usual post-office is good. Lindeman v. Guldin, 34 Pa. St. 54; Mathewson v. Strafford Bank, 45 N. H. 104; Weaver v. Penn, 27 La. Ann. 129; Barnes v. Reynolds, 4 How. (Miss.) 114. But not so where the fact of death was known. Cayuga Co. Bank v. Bennett, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 236.

1. Byles on Bills, 294; Story on Prom. Notes, § 307; Crosse v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545.

2. Thus notice for a bank is well served on the cashier. Caffman v. Bank of Kentucky, 41 Miss. 212. And for an indorser having an office by delivery, to the clerk in charge of it. Mercantile Bank v. McCarthy, 7 Mo. App. 318; Lord v. Appleton, 15 Me. 270; Smalley v. Wright, 11 Vr. (N. J.) 471; Jones v. Mausker, 15 La. 51.

Notice to a member of the indorser's family, given at his residence in his absence, is sufficient. Housego v. Cowne, 2 M. & W. 348; Moodie v. Morrall, 1 Mill (S. Car.), 367; Calms v. Bank of Tennessee, 4 Baxt. 422.

Notices delivered to an indorser's son —Westfall v. Farwell, 13 Wis. 563— daughter—Bank of Kentucky v. Duncan, 4 Bush (Ky.), 294—fellow-boarder—Bank of U. S. v. Hatch, 1 McL. (U. S.) 92 —and landlady—Stedman v. Gooch, 1 Esp. 3—have all been held to be "personally" served.

But giving the notice to the indorser's brother upon the latter's promise to deliver it—Paterson Bank v. Butler, 7 Halst. (N. J.) 268—or to a son-in-law when the indorser's own family were still in town, though he himself absent—Bank of New Orleans v. Millaudon, 25 La. Ann. 280—or to a servant in the indorser's house with instructions not to open the sealed envelope containing it until the indorser's return—Paine v. Edsell, 19 Pa. St. 178—is insufficient.

In Virginia, however, it seems notices must, in the indorser's absence, be delivered to a white servant over sixteen years of age. McVeigh v. Bank of the Old Dominion, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 785.

3. Halsey v. Salmon, 2 Penn. (N. J.) 916.

4. Lawson v. Sherwood, 1 Stark. 314; Cooley v. Shannon, 20 La. Ann. 548; Early v. Preston, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 228; Whiteford v. Burckmyer, 1 Gill (Md.), 127.

5. Rothschild v. Curry, 1 Q. B. 43; Snow v. Perkins, 2 Mich. 238.

6. Byles on Bills, 285; Benj. Chal. Dig. § 195; Haynes v. Birks, 3 B. & P. 611, Bryden v. Bryden, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 187; Bank of North America v. Vardon, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 78; Noble v. Bank of Ky., 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.), 262.

When the facts are undisputed, what is a reasonable time is for the court. Smith v. Poillon, 87 N. Y. 590; Walker v Stetson, 14 Ohio St. 89; Brenizer v. Wightman, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 264; Whitwell v. Johnson, 17 Mass. 449.

7. Thus if a note be dishonored on Saturday, and the notary spends Monday in discovering the indorser's address, sending the notice on Tuesday, it is in time. Smyth v. Hawthorn, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 355.

Where the indorser had no settled residence, and the holder gave the notice personally the next time he saw him, some months after dishonor, it was held enough. Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361.

Where the holder could not find the post-office address of the indorser, who war or disturbances impeding the usual channels of communication.[1]

There have been great fluctuations of opinion among judges as to what is the reasonable time within which notice must be given,[2] but the modern rule clearly is that the next day after maturity is the latest for that purpose,[3] and it may be given on the day of dishonor after payment or acceptance has been refused.[4]

"Next day," however, means next business day; so that if the day after that of dishonor is a legal holiday, the day succeeding is the proper one upon which to send notice.[5]

Each indorser upon whom notice has been served has a day after its receipt within which to notify parties prior to himself;[6] and he has no longer time on account of the service upon himself being made sooner than was necessary.[7]

If notice is served at an indorser's office, it must be done during was removing to another State, and procured the notice to be delivered to him on his arrival in such State, the notice was held good. Fugitt v. Nixon, 44 Mo. 295. Cf. Chapcott v. Curlewis, 2 M. & R. 484; Bateman v. Joseph, 12 East, 433; Browning v. Kinner, Gow, 81.

1. Where there was absolutely no mail communication between New Orleans and Pittsburg from the outbreak of the war until July 1, 1862, and it was then uncertain, notice received in Pittsburg on July 14, 1862, was held good. House v. Adams, 4 Pa. St. 261. But a delay of two years after the close of hostilities is fatal. Harp v. Kenner, 19 La. Ann. 63. Cf. Farmers' Bank v. Gunnell, 26 Gratt. 131; Morgan v. Bank of Louisville, 4 Bush (Ky.), 82.

2. See 3 Rand. Com. Paper, §§ 1254–1258, for a review of the old cases on reasonable time.

3. 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 90; 2 Edw. Notes & B. § 829; Langdale v. Trimmer, 15 East. 293; Chick v. Pillsbury, 24 Me. 458; Knott v. Venable, 42 Ala. 186; Grand Bank v. Blanchard, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 305; First Nat'l Bank v. Wood, 51 Vt. 471; Troy City Bank v. Grant, Hill & D. (N. Y.) 119; McKeever v. Kirkland, 33 Iowa, 348; Worden v. Mitchell, 7 Wis. 167.

4 Hine v. Allely, 4 B. & Ad. 624; Lindenberger v. Beall, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 104; McFarland v. Pico, 8 Cal. 626; Shed v. Brett, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 401; Simpson v. White, 40 N. H. 540; King v. Crowell, 61 Me. 244.

But notice sent before dishonor is always bad, though the error arose from a mistake in calculating the maturity of the paper. Kohler v. Montgomery, 17 Ind. 220.

5. Haynes v. Birks, 3 B. & P. 599; Farmers' Bank v. Vail, 21 N. Y. 485; Hartford Bank v. Stedman, 3 Conn. 489; Carter v. Burley, 9 N. H. 558; Commercial Bank v. Barksdale, 36 Mo. 563.

Notice sent on Sunday is void. Chrisman v. Tuttle, 59 Ind. 155; Rheem v. Carlisle, etc., Bank, 96 Pa. St. 132. Contra that it may be sent on Sunday. Deblieux v. Bullard, 1 Rob. (La.) 66.

6. Benj. Chal. Dig. 196; Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14; Seaton v. Scovill, 18 Kans. 433; Mead v. Engs, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 303; Renshaw v. Triplett, 23 Mo. 213.

A notice directed to first indorser by holder and sent to second indorser on account of ignorance of the former's address, and at once forwarded by the second indorser to the first, will bind the first indorser to both holder and second indorser. Palen v. Shurtleff, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 581.

In general if one holds a bill or note for collection, and on dishonor notifies his principal, the latter has a day within which to give notice to prior parties. Byles on Bills, 288; 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 51; Mead v. Engs, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 303; Church v. Barlow, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 547; Myers v. Courtney, 11 Phila. 343; Hill v. Planters' Bank, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 670. But this has been doubted obiter—In re Leeds Banking Co., L. R. 1 Eq. Cas. 1 —and held inapplicable where the agent was a branch of the principal (bank). Prince v. Oriental Bank Corporation. L. R. 3 App. Cas. 325. Contra, McNeill v. Wyatt, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 125.

7. Story on Prom. Notes, § 332; Farmer v. Rand, 16 Me. 453.

E converso, he has no shorter time because notice was delayed, e.g., by a storm. Linn v. Horton, 17 Wis. 151; Horne v. Rouquette, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 514.

business hours;[1] if at his residence, at any reasonable hour before the house closes for the night.[2]

Where notice is sent by mail, if it is posted on the day after dishonor or receipt, in time to go by a mail of that day which leaves within a reasonable time after the beginning of business hours, it is sufficient.[3]

Notice sent to one indorser to be forwarded to another must be remailed at once; and, if the other indorser lives in the same place, must be so mailed as to reach him the same day, in order to bind him to the original sender.[4]

If the notice of dishonor is to be sent to a foreign country, the sender may wait for the next regular mail vessel,[5] unless by such waiting he delays an unreasonable time, and might have availed himself of some ship bound to that country.[6]

(e) Place Where Given.—If the party to be notified actually receives in time the notice sent him, it is wholly immaterial where it was directed;[7] but ordinarily the burden is on the holder to show where it was sent,[8] and that it was directed to the proper place.[9]

1. 2 Edwards Notes and Bills, § 829; Adams v. Wright, 14 Wis 442; Stephenson v. Primrose, 8 Port. (Ala.) 155.

2. Adams v. Wright, 14 Wis. 442; Bonner v. City of New Orleans, 2 Woods (U. S.), 135.

Nine P.M. is reasonable. Jameson v. Swinton, 2 Taunt. 224. So is ten P.M. when a member of the family actually received the notice. Hallowell v. Curry, 41 Pa. St. 322.

3. 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 90–92; Sussex Bank v. Baldwin, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 487; Deminds v. Kirkman, 1 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 644; Minehart v. Handlin, 37 Ark. 276.

It has been said without limitation that the next day's mail is sufficient—Darbishire v. Parker, 6 East. 8; Seaton v. Scovill, 18 Kans. 433—if there is one on that day. Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & Ald. 500; Lenox v. Roberts, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 373. If there is none it must be sent by the next mail that leaves. Townsley v. Springer, 1 La. 122, 515.

Some cases hold that any mail of that next day is sufficient. Robinson v. Ames, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 146; Housatonic Bank v. Laflin, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 546; Manchester Bank v. White, 30 N. H. 456; Bell v. Hagerstown Bank, 7 Gill (Md.), 216. Other courts have declared that the notice must go by the first mail of the next day. Bank of U. S. v. Merle, 2 Rob. (La.) 117; Goodman v. Norton, 17 Me. 381. Or by the earliest practicable one. Haskell v. Boardman, 8 Allen (Mass.), 38. Or the first one in the usual course of business. Mitchell v. Cross, 2 R. I. 437.

A delay by the holder of one mail (four hours), occasioned by his seeking legal advice, will not discharge the indorser, the notice being actually mailed during the next day. Smith v. Poillon, 87 N. Y. 590. See also West v. Brown, 6 Ohio St. 542; Davis v. Hanley, 12 Ark. 645; Curry v. Bank of Mobile, 8 Port. (Ala.) 360.

4. Shelburne Falls Bank v. Townsley, 102 Mass. 177; Freeman's Bank v. Perkins, 18 Me. 292; Ohio Life Ins. Co. v. McCague, 18 Ohio, 54.

But such a notice served the day after it is received will bind the recipient to the indorser serving it. Stephenson v. Dickson, 24 Pa. St. 148.

5. Stainback v. Bank of Virginia, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 260.

He may, however, send the notice by any vessel which may be fairly expected to arrive before or as soon as the mail vessel. Byles on Bills, 284; Muilman v. D'Eguino, 2 H. Bl. 565.

6. Waiting four months for a mail vessel to Europe held unreasonable in 1804. Flemming v. McClure, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 428.

7. 2 Daniel Neg. Inst. 60; Bradley v. Davis, 26 Me. 45; First National Bank v. Wood, 51 Vt. 471; Dicken v. Hall, 87 Pa. St. 379.

8 Money v Casse, 20 La. Ann. 419; Carter v. Burley, 9 N. H. 558.

9. Turner v. Rogers, 8 Ind. 139; Stiles v. Inman, 55 Miss. 469.

The place named in the notary's certificate as the indorser's residence is presumed to be so until the contrary is

Notice may be served either at the residence[1] or office[2] of an indorser, or at the former office of a firm in dissolution if there is any one there representing the partnership.[3]

If the notice is sent by mail, addressing it to the post-office of the town in which he resides is enough;[4] in general the address should be to the post-office nearest the indorser's home.[5]

Notice sent the drawer of a bill at the place of date of the bill is prima facie good, the presumption being that that is his place of residence.[6]

Similarly it is presumed that a party has continued to reside in the same place as he did when he signed the note or bill dishonored.[7] shown. Linkon v. Hall, 27 Gratt. 668; Walmsley v. Rivers, 34 Iowa, 463; Yeatman v. Erwin, 5 La. 264. Contra that actual proof of residence is necessary on the part of the holder. Crawford v. Branch Bank, 7 Ala. 206.

1. Byles on Bills, 284; Grinnan v. Walker, 9 Iowa, 426.

2. The office is preferable. 1 Parsons Notes & Bills, 487.

The place where the indorser will get the notice most promptly should be chosen. Bank of Commerce v. Chambers, 14 Mo. App. 152.

If the indorser resides in one town and does business in another, notice may be sent to either. Sullivan v. Godwin, 20 La. Ann. 33.

An office for the purpose of serving notice is any place where the indorser does business, e.g., a room in a hotel. Howe v. Bradley, 19 Me. 31. A desk in a custom-house where the indorser has employment. Bank of the Commonwealth v. Mudgett, 44 N. Y. 514.

And see further, on this point, Davenport v. Gilbert, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 532; Kleinman v. Boernstein, 32 Mo. 311; Bank of U. S. v. MacDonald, 4 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 624; Bank of West Tenn. v. Davis, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 436; Commercial Bank v. Strong, 28 Vt. 316.

3. For example, a liquidating agent. Bliss v. Nichols, 12 Allen (Mass.), 443. Or trustee of an insolvent firm. Bank of North America v. Shaw, 7 East Rep. (Mass.) 779.

4. Lafitte v. Perkins, 21 La. Ann. 171; Fowler v. Warfield, 4 Cr. C. C. 71.

5. Union Bank of Louisiana v. Stoker, 1 La Ann. 269.

Where the indorser was in the habit of receiving mail at a post-office in another town from that in which he lived, but the sender did not know it, a direction to the town of his residence was held sufficient. Seneca County Bank v. Neass, 3 N. Y. 442. But where he habitually got his mail at two post-offices, one in the town of his residence and the other not, a notice directed to the latter office is bad without proof that the indorser actually received it. Shelburne Falls National Bank v. Townley, 107 Mass. 444.

Notice sent to a post-office discontinued is bad, at least when there was another nearer the indorser. Tyson v. Oliver, 43 Ala. 455.

If there are two places of the same name in different States, the name of the State must be given in the address Beckwith v. Smith, 22 Me. 125. And see Woods v. Neeld, 44 Pa. St. 86; Rogers v. Jackson, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 383.

6. Certainly so where inquiry by the holder fails to reveal any other address. Byles on Bills, 282; Clark v. Sharpe, 3 M. & W. 166; Pierce v. Struthers, 27 Pa. St. 249; Page v. Prentice, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 7.

If no inquiry is made, and the drawer does not live there, the notice is bad. Sprague v. Tyson, 44 Ala. 338; Carroll v. Upton, 3 N. Y. 272; Fisher v. Evans, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 541.

If after diligent inquiry the indorser's residence cannot be found, notice addressed to him at the place of the date of a note is good. Sasscer v. Whitely, 10 Md. 98; Godley v. Goodloe, 6 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 255.

7. Benj. Chal. Dig. § 193, n.; Requa v. Collins, 51 N. Y. 148; Ex parte Baker, L R. 4 Ch. Div. 795; Harris v. Memphis Bank, 4 Humph. 518.

Thus a notice sent to Troy, the indorser's old residence, was held good, though he had some time before removed to New York City; his name was not in the directory of the latter city, though he had advertised his entry into a partnership there. Bank of Utica v. Davidson, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 587.

So, too, of notice sent to indorser's old place of business, his name still being

But a holder who has any notice of the removal of his indorser must make reasonable inquiry for his new address, or notice sent to the old one will be invalid.[1]

Notice sent to an indorser at his residence during his temporary absence is good.[2]

There is no presumption in favor of the holder's having made diligent inquiry for the indorser's proper address; the burden of proving diligence is upon him.[3]

When facts are in dispute, the question of diligence is for the jury;[4] but when they are undisputed, it is for the court alone.[5]

Where all that can be discovered concerning the indorser is that he lives in a given county, notice sent to the county seat is good;[6] on the sign. Reier v. Strauss, 54 Md. 278.

1. Barker v. Clark, 20 Me. 156; Planters' Bank v. Bradford, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 39; Bank of Utica v. Phillips, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 408.

Where the indorser was a neighbor and had gone away to join the Confederate army, it was held that the circumstances were so notorious as to amount to notice of departure to the holder. McVeigh v. Bank of the Old Dominion, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 785; McVeigh v. Allen, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 588.

2. Curtis v. State Bank, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 312; Hager v. Boswell, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 61; Manadue v. Kitchen, 3 Rob. (La.) 261; Planters' Bank v. White, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 112.

Thus notice sent to a Congressman's home during his absence in Washington is good. Marr v. Johnson, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 1. But notice sent to Washington during the session of Congress is also good. Graham v. Sangston, 1 Md. 59; Walker v. Tunstall, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 638. Otherwise if sent during adjournment. Bayly v. Chubb, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 284.

3. Eaton v. McMahon, 42 Wis. 484; Miller v. Whitefield, 16 La. Ann. 10.

Diligence having been proven, the fact that notice was sent to the wrong address will not discharge the indorser. Carroll v. Upton, 3 N. Y. 272; Garner v. Downie, 33 Cal. 176. Nor does subsequent correct information affect the question. Brighton, etc., Bank v. Philbrick, 40 N. H. 506.

4. Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14, n.; Winans v. Davis, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 276; Thompson v. Bank of the State, 3 Hill (S. Car.), 77; Walker v. Stetson, 14 Ohio St. 89.

5. Bank of Utica v. Bender, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 643; Whitridge v. Rider, 22 Md. 548; Linville v. Welch, 29 Mo. 203.

It has been held that notice sent after inquiry of the indorser's immediate indorsee, when no other channel of information appeared, was sufficient. Ransom v. Mack, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 587.

Inquiry should be made of other parties to the paper, and several days may be occupied in doing so. Hill v. Varrell, 3 Me. 233; Wolf v. Burgess, 49 Mo. 583.

And asking the officers of the bank holding the note and consulting the city directory is clearly insufficient. Gilchrist v. Donnell, 53 Mo. 591.

But inquiry of the holder and the postmaster, and looking in the directory, has been held enough. Staylor v. Ball, 24 Md. 183.

Notice given by a notary upon information furnished by the cashier of the bank holding the note for collection has been held sufficient. Herbert v. Servin, 12 Vr. (N. J.) 225; s. p., Harris v. Robinson, 4 How. (U. S.) 336; Bartlett v. Isbell, 31 Conn. 296.

Notices sent upon positive though incorrect information furnished by the maker of the note have been held good in Sturgess v. Derrick, Wight. 96; Gawtry v. Doane, 51 N. Y. 84; Winans v. Davis, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 276.

Inquiry of a near relative of the indorser's is reasonable diligence. Requa v. Collins, 51 N. Y. 144.

Notice addressed to the indorser generally, at a large city, after inquiry of the maker and holder and consulting the city directory, is good, though the indorser lived a few miles out of town and had an office in the city. Sanderson v. Reinstadler, 31 Mo. 483. See, further, Saco Natl. Bank v. Sanborn, 63 Me. 340; Lambert v. Ghiselin, 9 How. (U. S.) 552; Phipps v. Chase, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 491; Barnwell v. Mitchell, 3 Conn. 101; Lawrence v. Miller, 16 N. Y. 238; Earnest v. Taylor, 25 Tex. 37.

6. Even if there be a nearer office. Bank of Manchester v. Slason, 13 Vt. 334; Cabot Bank v. Russell, 4 Gray (Mass.), 167; Rand v. Reynolds, 2 Gratt.

but if the sender knows the post-office at which the indorser usually receives his mail, he must be addressed at that place.[1]

If a drawer or indorser designates a place as his address, notice sent there is good, without regard to his place of residence or business.[2]

(f) Methods of Service.—Notice may be served personally by leaving it at the indorser's or drawer's residence or office, by mail or special messenger;[3] and if it is duly received, the particular method employed is wholly immaterial.[4]

As between persons living in different places, mailing is the usual and proper method.[5]

An indorser or drawer living in the place where the bill or note is protested or made payable is, however, entitled to personal notice; the mail cannot be used except by statute.[6]

(Va.) 171. But not if the holder has had previous communication with the indorser at a nearer post-office. Roberts v. Taft, 120 Mass. 169.

Notice directed simply to Boston has been held good, though indorser's name was in city directory. Tone v. Collins, 3 Allen (Mass.), 438.

1. 1 Parsons Notes and Bills, 498; 2 Daniel Neg. Inst. 76.

If the notice is sent to the usual post-office, it is immaterial whether it is the nearest. Mercer v. Lancaster, 5 Pa. St. 160; Sherman v. Clark, 3 McL. (U. S.) 91; Farmers' Bank v. Battle, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 85. The presumption is that it is the nearest. Bank of Columbia v. Magruder, 6 H. & J. (Md.) 172; Gist v. Lybrand, 3 Ohio, 307.

In a city having branch post-offices, a direction to the general post-office of that city is sufficient. Bank of Commerce v. Chambers, 14 Mo. App. 152.

2. Crowley v. Barry, 4 Gill (Md.), 194; Catskill Bank v. Stall, 15 Wend. (N.Y.) 364.

And such designation holds good until changed by the indorser. Eastern Bank v. Brown, 17 Me. 356.

An address written after the drawer's or indorser's signature is a sufficient designation. Burmester v. Barron, 17 Q. B. 828; Farmers' Bank v. Battle, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 86; Tomeny v. German Natl. Bank, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 493.

When such address was a street and number in New York City, it was held that notice directed to the indorser at "N. Y. City" merely was good. Bartlett v. Robinson, 39 N. Y. 187. But this was upon the construction of the statute of that State.

3. Story on Prom. Notes, § 340.

If the manner of service does not appear, personal service is presumed. Rives v. Parmley, 18 Ala. 255.

4. Ben. Chalm. Dig. § 193; Terbell v. Jones, 15 Wis. 278; Grinman v. Walker, 9 Iowa, 426.

Where the notice was put into a wrong post-office, and the indorser denied ever having received it, evidence that he had received it was accepted, and a verdict against him sustained, in Hill v. Norvell, 3 McL. (U. S.) 583.

5. Esdaile v. Sowerby, 1 East, 117; Bussard v. Levering, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 102; Manchester Bank v. White, 30 N. H. 456; Bell v. Hagerstown Bank, 7 Gill (Md.), 216.

But where an indorser lived in an unsettled country a long distance from any post-office, it was held that special messenger was the only method of service. Fish v. Jackman, 19 Me. 467.

Nor is mailing proper when postal facilities are stopped by war. Harden v. Boyce, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 425; James v. Wade, 21 La. Ann. 548; Farmers' Bank v. Gunnell, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 131.

A notice is mailed or posted by handing it properly inclosed and post-paid to a postmaster's clerk. Mount Vernon Bank v. Holden, 2 R. I. 467. Or a letter-carrier. Pearce v. Langfit, 101 Pa. St. 507. Or by putting it in a lamppost-box. Greenwich Bank v. DeGroot, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 210; Wood v. Callaghan, 28 N. Westn. Repr. (Mich.) 162.

Once mailed, the sender's duty is at an end. He is not responsible for delays if the envelope is properly addressed. Woodcock v. Houldsworth, 16 M. & W. 124; Lord v. Appleton, 15 Me. 270; Washington Banking Co. v. King, 2 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 45; Renshaw v. Triplett, 23 Mo. 213; Wilson v. Richards, 28 Minn. 337; U. S. Natl. Bank v. Burton, 58 Vt. 426.

6. Cabot Bank v. Warner, 10 Allen (Mass.), 522; Sheldon v. Benham, 4 Hill

But where there are several post-offices in the same town or city, notice may be sent by mail.[1]

The residence of the collection agent or notary who actually sends the notice, and not that of the owner of the paper, is considered in deciding whether or not the mail can be used.[2]

While a special messenger always may,[3] and, as has been shown, sometimes must, be employed to serve notice, if the messenger does not serve it on or before the day when it might reasonably have been expected to arrive by mail, it is bad.[4]

31. Waiver or Excuse of Demand and Notice.—Delay in making demand or giving notice may be excused by any circumstances over which the holder has no control, and which therefore cannot be attributed to his negligence.[5]

(N. Y.), 129; Tavis v. Gowen, 19 Me. 447; Hogatt v. Bingaman, 7 How. (Miss.) 505; Vance v. Collins, 6 Cal. 435; Swayze v. Britton, 17 Kans. 625; Miller v. Whitfield, 16 La. Ann. 10.

If the indorser is temporarily away, it should be served at the residence. Wilcox v. McMutt, 2 How. (Miss.) 776.

And if the notary finds the indorser's office closed, and thereupon mails the notice without trying to find him at his residence, it is bad. John v. City National Bank, 57 Ala. 96.

It has been held, however, that notice mailed after learning that the indorser was out of town during an epidemic of yellow fever, and that his house was locked, was good. Ogden v. Cowley, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 274.

Clearly, however, notice, though sent by mail improperly, which is received in due time is good. Ireland v. Kip, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 231; Scott v. Lifford, 9 East, 347; Hyslop v. Jones, 3 McL. (U. S.) 96; Spaulding v. Krutz, 1 Dillon (U. S.), 414; Carolina National Bank v. Wallace, 13 S. Car. 347.

1. 2 Edwards Notes & Bills, § 813.

Thus the mail may be used in notifying an indorser living at Kingsbridge of the dishonor of a note in New York, although the city limits extend beyond that place. Paton v. Lent, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 231.

And in cities having the carrier-delivery system it has been held that the mail may be used where the notice should be delivered on the day of its deposit in the post-office. Shoemaker v. Mechanics' Bank, 59 Pa. St. 79; Walters v. Brown, 15 Md. 285.

2. Story on Prom. Notes, § 312; Greene v. Farley, 20 Ala. 322; Wynn v. Schappert, 6 Daly, 558. Contra, Philipe v. Harberlee, 45 Ala. 597.

Where notary, holder, and indorser all lived in Brooklyn, and the note was protested in New York, where the notary had an office, it was held that he might mail a notice in Brooklyn to the indorser, it being shown that that was the quickest way to reach him. Price v. McGoldrick, 2 Abb. N. C. 69.

But a notary who, by taking a notice home with him from the place where he had protested the note and mailing it, instead of serving the indorser at the place of protest, caused a delay of three days, was held to have discharged the indorser. Fahnestock v. Smith, 14 Iowa, 561.

3. Jarvis v. St. Croix Mfg. Co., 23 Me. 287.

4. 1 Parsons Notes & B. 479; Darbishire v. Parker, 6 East, 3.

It is suggested that notice by telegraph or telephone would be good in 3 Rand. Com. Paper, § 1308.

5. Benj. Chalm. Dig. §§ 169, 201.

For example, the parties living in different towns with no postal communications. Haddock v. Murray, 1 N. H. 140. Or the bills being accepted, payable "out of any surplus realized," and the holders not knowing the exact time of funds becoming available. Gay v. Haseltine, 18 N. H. 530.

But a holder cannot delay in order to learn what funds to take in payment. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Gray, 13 Mich. 191.

War or riot obstructing communication between the parties is an excuse for the time being. Apperson v. Bynum, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 341; Bond v. Moore, 3 Otto (U. S.), 593. See ante, § 14 (a); and 3 Rand. Com. Paper, §§ 1324–5, for a full collection of cases relating to the American Civil War.

The yellow-fever epidemic in New York City was held a good excuse for delay in giving notice in Tunno v. Lague, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 1.

Error or mismanagement of the public

A drawer who has drawn a bill without having funds in the drawee's hands wherewith to pay, and without reasonable expectation that such funds will be provided at or before maturity, cannot expect that his bill will be presented, or that he will receive notice of its dishonor.[1]

Where the facts are undisputed, the question of what is a reasonable expectation is for the court.[2]

postal service is also an excuse for delay. Windham Bank v. Norton, 22 Conn. 213; Pier v. Heinrichshoffen, 67 Mo. 163; Jones v. Wardell, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 399.

The sickness or death of the holder will permit demand and notice to be made as soon as possible after recovery or the appointment of a personal representative. White v. Stoddard, 11 Gray (Mass.), 258; Duggan v. King, 1 Rice (S. Car.), 240; Smith v. Mullett, 2 Camp. 208. But, on the other hand, even mortal illness has been held not to excuse due presentment at maturity. Purcell v. Allemong, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 739; Wilson v. Senier, 14 Wis. 380.

If the place of payment named in a note or bill is found closed, presentment is unnecessary. Rahm v. Phila. Bank. 1 Rawle (Pa.), 335; Howe v. Bowes, 16 East, 112.

So notice is unnecessary if the indorser's office and residence are closed and no one can be found to answer for him. Howe v. Bradley, 19 Me. 31; Shed v. Brett, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 413.

If with reasonable diligence a party cannot be found, demand or notice, as the case may be, are thereby excused. Bateman v. Joseph, 2 Campb. 463; Cooley v. Shannon, 36 La. Ann. 548; Walker v. Stetson, 14 Ohio St. 89; Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361. As to diligence generally, see NOTICE OF DISHONOR AND DEMAND, ante, §§ 28, 30.

Where the note or bill in question is void for any reason, demand is useless, and therefore unnecessary; and indorsement becomes a warranty upon which the indorser may be sued without notice. 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 152; 1 Parsons Notes & B. 444; Copp v. McDugall, 9 Mass. 1.

So held where the note was forged. Perkins v. White, 36 Ohio St. 530. Cf. Turnbull v. Bowyer, 40 N. Y. 456; Morrison v. Lovell, 4 W. Va. 346.

If with diligence the holder cannot decipher the signature of a party, presentment or notice is impossible, and hence unnecessary. Hewitt v. Thompson, 1 Moo. & R. 543; Manufacturers' Bank v. Hazard, 35 N. Y. 226. But if the notary negligently misnames the indorser, he is discharged. McGeorge v. Chapman. 16 Vr. (N. J.) 395.

1. 2 Daniel Neg. Inst. 117; Byles on Bills, 220; Benj. Chal. Dig. § 168; Kimball v. Bryan, 56 Iowa, 632; Blum v. Bidwell, 20 La. Ann. 43.

The presumption is that all bills are drawn against funds to meet them. Bickerdike v. Bollman, 1 T. R. 406; Thompson v. Stewart, 3 Conn. 171.

And refusal to accept does not rebut the presumption. Galladay v. Bank of Union, 2 Head (Tenn.), 57. Nor does the insolvency of the drawee. Cole v. Wintercost, 12 Tex. 118.

Nor does mere absence of funds show that the drawer had not a reasonable expectation that funds would be provided; but it does shift the burden of proof to the drawer to show what his expectation was. 2 Daniel Neg. Inst. 128; Story on Bills, § 312; Walker v. Rogers, 40 Ill. 278; Dunbar v. Tyler, 44 Miss. 1; Baxter v. Graves, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 152; Carson v. Alexander, 34 Miss. 528.

But if it finally appear that he had no funds nor a reasonable expectation of any, demand and notice are excused. Terry v. Parker, 6 Ad. & El. 502; Dickens v. Beal, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 572; Miser v. Trovinger, 7 Ohio St. 281; Oliver v. Bank of Tenn., 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 74; McRail v. Rhodes, 22 Ark. 315; Wood v. McMeans, 23 Tex. 481; Harness v. Davis, etc., Assoc., 46 Mo. 357; Wollenweber v. Ketterlinus, 17 Pa. St. 389; Shaw v. Stone, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 228; Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 112 U. S. 696; Compton v. Blair, 46 Mich. 1.

Want of authority to draw the bill is equivalent to lack of funds or expectation of them. Aborn v. Bosworth, 1 R. I. 401; Armendiaz v. Terna, 40 Tex. 291.

The holder must prove want of authority. Adams v. Darby, 28 Mo. 162.

2. Cathell v. Goodwin, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 468; 1 Parsons Notes & Bills, 538.

A drawer has been held to have a reasonable expectation of funds when he has a running account with his drawee. Gardiner v. McDaniel, 26 La Ann. 472. Even when there was no balance to his credit when the bill was drawn. Urquhart

Though an accommodation indorser is usually entitled to notice,[1] yet if he indorse for the accommodation of the drawer of a bill or a later indorser, knowing that the paper will not be paid, he thereby excuses the holder from giving him notice.[2]

An express waiver of demand and notice made by the indorser in his indorsement is usual and valid, but waiver may also be inferred from a promise to pay made with full knowledge of facts amounting to a discharge.[3]

BILLIARDS.—In a statute making it an indictable offence for the owner of a billiard-table to allow a minor to play "billiards" thereon, the word "billiards" is not to be regarded as a generic term, broad enough to cover any game that may be played upon a billiard-table, but should be construed in its ordinary sense as it is commonly understood, and not to include a game commonly known, not by that name, but by another. "Pool" is not, in this sense, a game of billiards, as the former is played with fifteen balls, while billiards is played with three or four balls only.[4]

v. Thomas, 24 La. Ann. 95. When he has any, though insufficient, funds with the drawee. Robinson v. Ames, 25 Johns. (N. Y.) 146. When he believes he has funds, but is mistaken. Welch v. Taylor, 82 Ill. 579. When he had sent funds that had miscarried. Edwards v. Moses, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 433. When he had authority to draw given expressly by the drawee, although the latter had no funds of his. Austin v. Rodman, 1 Hawks, 194. When he had deposited title deeds with the drawee as security for the bill. Walwyn v. St. Quentin, 2 Esp. 515. When he has drawn before the arrival of the goods against a consignment and a bill of lading forwarded to the drawee. Robins v. Gibson, 3 Campb. 334; Orear v. McDonald, 9 Gill (Md.), 350; Shuchardt v. Hall, 36 Md. 590; Joseph v. Solomon, 19 Fla. 623.

On the other hand, it has been held that a drawer had no reasonable expectation of funds who drew his individual bill on one who owed him money qua executor. Yongue v. Ruff, 3 Strobh. 311. Or who, being utterly insolvent, drew upon an equally insolvent drawee. Mobley v. Clark, 28 Barb. 390. Or who drew expecting his bill to be paid without his providing funds, because similar previous bills had been paid. Dollfus v. Frosch. 1 Denio (N. Y.). 307.

Upon promissory notes demand and notice are necessary although the maker declares before maturity he will not pay. Applegarth v. Abbott, 64 Cal. 439. Or the indorser with a letter stating that the maker will be unable to do so. Hart v. Eastman, 7 Minn. 74.

1. Holland v. Turner, 10 Conn. 308; Carter v. Flower, 16 M. & W. 751.

2. Farmers' Bank v. Van Meter, 4 Rand. (Va.) 553.

3. Tebbetts v. Dowd, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 379.

Or the promise to pay may be regarded as evidence for the jury of the receipt of due notice, but in either view the indorser is held to liability. S. p., Loose v. Loose, 36 Pa. St. 538; Myers v. Standart, 11 Ohio St. 29; Hibbard v. Russell, 16 N. H. 410; Mense v. Osbern, 5 Mo. 544; McPhetres v. Halley, 32 Me. 72; Lewis v. Brehme, 33 Md. 412; Robbins v. Pinckard, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 51; Kilby v. Rochussen, 18 C. B. 357.

Authorities for Bills and Notes.—Of the innumerable text-books on this subject, Randolph on Commercial Paper (3 vols., 1886) and Daniel on Negotiable Instruments (2d Ed., 2 vols., 1882) are the latest and most valuable original works.

Books still standard are Byles on Bills (7th Am. Ed. 1883), Chalmers on Bills, Notes, and Checks (Benjamin's Am. Ed. 1881), Story on Promissory Notes (7th Ed. 1878), Story on Bills of Exchange (4th Ed. 1860), and Parsons on Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange (2d Ed., 2 vols., 1879).

A treatise on Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes, etc., by Isaac Edwards (3d Ed., 2 vols., 1882), is a work especially useful to practitioners in New York and States of similar procedure.

For a most valuable collection of references to articles on special topics see Abbott's National Digest, vol. 1, p. 390.

4. Squier v. State, 66 Ind. 318.

BILLIARD-TABLE.—Where a statute forbids the keeping of any "kind of gaming-table (billiard-tables excepted) at which faro or any other game of chance shall be played for money," it does not authorize the keeping of billiard-tables for the playing of faro for money; but the moment they are so appropriated they ipso facto, pro hac vice, lose the immunities conferred on them by the exception, and cease to be billiard-tables in the eye of the law.[1]

BIND. (See also BOUND.)—To bring under legal obligations, as those of a bond or covenant.[2]

BIND OUT.—To place under legal obligation to serve; as, to bind out an apprentice.

BIND OVER.—To require an accused person to enter into a bond or give bail to appear at the trial; to demand security of one complained against to keep the peace, etc., or of a witness to appear at court.

BIPARTITE.—In two parts; having two corresponding parts, as a deed or other instrument executed by two parties, one part for each.

BIRTH. — (See also ABORTION; BORN; CONCEALMENT OF BIRTH.) Being born must mean that the whole body is brought into the world; and it is not sufficient that the child respires in the progress of birth;[3] and there must be independent circulation;[4] the whole body of the child must have come forth from the body of the mother,[5] but the umbilical cord need not have been separated.[6]

BISHOP.—In English ecclesiastical law, the chief of the clergy

1. State v. Price, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 263.

Erects and Keeps a Billiard Table.—A tax to which every man is liable who "erects and keeps a billiard table" applies in the same way to a table kept merely for purpose of amusement as to one used for gaming purposes. Sears v. West. 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 291.

2. Bind such Debts in his Hands.—Under the Common Law Procedure Act, the service of an order on a garnishee by a judgment creditor "shall bind such debts in his (the garnishee's) hands;" this renders the creditor one "having security for his debt" within the meaning of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, but it does not give a lien, and consequently the judgment creditor cannot prevail against the assignees. "We construe the word 'bind' as not changing the property or giving even an equitable property, either by way of mortgage or lien, but as putting the debt in the same situation as the goods when the writ was delivered to the sheriff. We take the word 'bind' to mean that the debtor, or those claiming under him, shall not have power to convey or do any act as against the right of the party in whose favor the debt is bound; and we construe it as not giving any property in the debt in the nature of a mortgage or lien, but a mere right to have the security enforced; in other words, we think that the very distinction contemplated between securities and liens applies, and that the present is an instance of that species of security mentioned in the act as not being a lien." Holmes v. Tutton, 5 El. & Bl. 80.

Bindings, in 4 U. S. Stat. at Large, 584, imposing a duty on "mits, gloves, bindings, blankets, hosiery, and carpets and carpeting," refers exclusively to articles of that description when composed wholly or in part of wool. Chester v. Curtis, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 499.

3. Rex v. Poulton, 5 C. & P. 329.

4. Rex v. Enoch, 5 C. & P. 539.

5. Rex v. Crutchley, 7 C. & P. 814. In this and the two cases above the question was whether the child was "born alive" so that killing it constituted murder. As to child en ventre sa mère, see BORN.

6. Regina v. Reeves, 9 C. & P. 25.

in his diocese or jurisdiction in England, Wales, or Ireland, and the archbishop's suffragan or assistant.[1]

BISHOPRIC.—A diocese or see of a bishop.

BISSEXTILE. See LEAP YEAR.

BITCH.—The word "bitch," when applied to a woman, does not, in its common acceptation, import whoredom in any of its forms.[2]

BLACK.—In a statute providing that "no black or mulatto person or Indian shall be allowed to give evidence in favor of or agains a white man," "black person" must be taken as contradistinguished from "white," and necessarily excludes all races other than the Caucasian."[3] (See also COLORED.)

BLACKLEG.—A person who gets his living by frequenting race-courses and places where games of chance are played, getting the best odds and giving the least he can, but not necessarily cheating.[4]

BLACKMAIL. See THREATS.

BLANC SEIGN.—In Louisiana a blanc seign is a paper signed at the bottom by him who intends to bind himself, give acquittance, or compromise, at the discretion of the person whom he intrusts with such blanc seign, giving him power to fill it with what he may think proper, according to agreement, which power is personal, and, as all other powers, dies with the attorney.[5]

BLANK.—I. A void space on paper or in any written instrument. II. A paper containing the substance of a legal instrument, as a deed, release, writ, or execution, with vacant spaces left to be filled with names, date, descriptions, etc.[6]

BLANK ACCEPTANCE—INDORSEMENT. See BILLS AND NOTES.

BLANKS. See ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS, vol. 1, p. 497.

BLASPHEMY. (See also LIBEL.)—Blasphemy is an oral or written reproach maliciously cast upon God, his name, attributes, or re-

1. Whart. Law Lex.

In a statute the word "bishop" was made applicable to an archbishop with a view to cases where the archbishop would have to proceed in his own diocese; and in such case he is within the provisions affecting bishops. Reg. v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 6 El. & Bl. 562.

Bishop of Norwich, in the statute Circumspecte Agatis (13 Edw. I.) was put for an example, the act extending to all bishops. 2 Inst. 487; Bishop Stat. Cr. § 190, b, n. 3.

2. Schurick v. Holliman, 50 Ind. 336; K—— v. H——, 20 Wis. 242.

But the words "she is a bitch," when alleged in the complaint to have been spoken at a time and place where they were understood to mean, and did mean, an imputation of whoredom, are actionable. Logan v. Logan, 77 Ind. 558. And used in connection with other words, such as "bad woman" and "whore," they may of their own force import to the ordinary hearer the charge of want of chastity, or of the crime of adultery. Riddell v. Thayer, 127 Mass. 490.

3. People v. Hall, 4 Cal. 404.

4. Barnett v. Allen, 3 H. & N. 379.

5. Musson v. Bank U. S., 6 Mart. (La.) 718. The court says: "It is not to be expected that much may be found in law books upon this very unusual mode of transacting business which now and then, when men, in the simplicity of their manners, could rely on each other's honesty, was indulged in."

6. Webs. Dict.

ligion.[1] In general, blasphemy may be described as consisting in speaking evil of the Deity with an impious purpose to derogate from the divine majesty, and to alienate the minds of others from the love and reverence of God. It is purposely using words concerning God calculated and designed to impair and destroy the reverence, respect, and confidence due to him as the intelligent creator, governor, and judge of the world. It embraces the idea of detraction when used towards the Supreme Being, as "calumny" usually carries the same idea when applied to an individual. It is a wilful and malicious attempt to lessen men's reverence of God by denying his existence, or his attributes as an intelligent creator, governor, and judge of men, and to prevent their having confidence in him as such.[2]

1. 2 Bish. Cr. L. (7th Ed.) § 76.

2. Com. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 206, 218.

Statutes punishing blasphemy are constitutional. Com. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 206; People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 289; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 335; State v. Chandler, 2 Harr. (Del.) 553; State v. Steele, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 135; State v. Graham, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 134.

The two common-law offences of blasphemy and profaneness differ only in this, that blasphemy is the word of larger meaning, embracing more than the other. Our statutes do not much distinguish between them. 2 Bish. Cr. L. § 73.

Christianity being recognized by the law, therefore profanity, blasphemy against God, and profane ridicule of Christ or the Holy Scriptures are punishable at common law. Accordingly, where one uttered the following words, "Jesus Christ was a bastard, and his mother must be a whore," it was held a public offence, punishable by the common law. People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 289; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 335. See State v. Chandler, 2 Harr. (Del.) 553; Updegraph v. Commonwealth, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 394; Goree v. State, 71 Ala. 7; State v. Graham, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 134; State v. Steele, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 135; State v. Ellar, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 267; State v. Jones, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 38; State v Pepper, 68 N. Car. 259; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 637; State v. Powell, 70 N. Car. 67; Barker v. Commonwealth, 19 Pa. St. 412; Com. v. Pray, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 359; Com. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 206.

The utterance of the name of God is not necessary to constitute profane swearing. Gaines v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 410; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 64; Holcomb v. Cornish, 8 Conn. 375.

Any words importing an imprecation of future divine vengeance may constitute profane cursing. Holcomb v. Cornish, 8 Conn. 375. See Com. v. Spratt, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 365; Odell v. Garnett, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 549.

Public swearing is a nuisance at common law, but to be indictable it must be in a public place and an annoyance to the public. State v. Jones, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 38. See State v. Kirby, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 254; State v. Ellar, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 267; State v. Pepper, 68 N. Car. 259; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 637; State v. Powell, 70 N. Car. 67; State v. Brewington, 84 N. Car. 783; State v. Graham, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 134; State v. Steele, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 135; Bell v. State, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 42; Barker v. Commonwealth, 19 Pa. St. 412; State v. Chandler, 2 Harr. (Del.) 553.

A single act of profane swearing is generally not indictable as a nuisance. Gaines v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 410; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 64. See Goree v. State, 71 Ala. 7; State v. Powell, 70 N. Car. 67; State v. Jones, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 38.

Profane swearing in a public place and in the hearing of citizens, continued for five minutes, although only on a single occasion, is an indictable nuisance. State v. Chrisp, 85 N. Car. 528; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 713.

It is not necessary that the language used should be heard by a large portion of the community; it is sufficient if three or four persons were present and heard the words uttered. Goree v. State, 71 Ala. 7.

The words used need not be set forth in the indictment. Ex parte Foley, 62 Cal. 508: State v. Ratliff, 10 Ark. 530. Compare Young v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 165.

Drunkenness is no defence. People v. Porter, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 14.

The offence must be proved; the de-

BLENDED FUND. See CONVERSION.

BLOCK. See note 1, infra.

BLOCKADE.—A blockade is a sort of circumvallation round a place, by which all foreign connection and correspondence is, as far as human force can effect it, to be entirely cut off. It is intended to suspend the entire commerce of that place; and a neutral is no more at liberty to assist the traffic of exportation than of importation.[2] The modern practice does not require that the place should be invested by land, as well as by sea, in order to constitute a legal blockade; and if a place be blockaded by sea only, it is no violation of belligerent rights for the neutral to carry on commerce with it by inland communications.[3] A blockade only exists where the forces of one nation encompass the ports of another. A third nation then standing by which takes no part in the war has certain rights of communication and trade which are allowed by the belligerents. A blockade interrupts this trade and communication.[4] A simple blockade may be established by a naval officer, acting upon his own discretion or under direction of superiors, without governmental notification; while a public blockade is not only established in fact, but is notified by the government directing it to other governments.[5] (See INTERNATIONAL LAW.)

fendant's admission that he used the profanity charged is not sufficient. People v. Porter, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 14.

It is an indictable offence at common law to publish a blasphemous libel of and concerning the Old Testament. R. v. Hetherington, 5 Jur. 529.

A publication stating Jesus Christ to be an impostor and a murderer in principle is a libel at common law. R. v. Waddington, 1 B. & C. 26. See Cowan v. Milbourn, 2 L. R. Exch. 230; Odell v. Garnett, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 549; State v. Jones, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 38; State v. Ratliff, 10 Ark. 530; Johnson v. Barclay, 16 N. J. L. 1; State v. Kirby, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 254; State v. Ellar, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 267; People v. Porter, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 14; Foland v. Johnson, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 235.

1. Ten Tenement Frame Block.—A building so described in a policy of insurance is not "unoccupied" if two of the tenements are in actual use and occupation as residences. "There does not appear to be more than one building; or, if the phrase 'block' imports a separation into divisions, it does not of its own force import a separation into more than two divisions. The phrase 'tenement block' gives but slight indication of what portions of the block the tenements consist, whether a single room, a floor, or flat, or suite of rooms. It imports only of necessity that the building is designed for the accommodation of various families." Harrington v. Fitchburg Ins. Co., 124 Mass. 129.

2. The Vrouw Judith, 1 Rob. Adm. 151.

3. 1 Kent Com. 147.

4. U. S. v. The Wm. Arthur, 3 Ware (U. S.), 281. It was there held that the declaring by the U. S., by acts of July 13 and Aug. 6, 1861, of ports of entry and delivery and the placing armed ships before them were mere municipal regulations and not the establishing of a blockade.

5. The Circassian, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 150.

Blockaded Port.—Where a policy of insurance contained the clause, "The insurers take no risk of a blockaded port," it was held that such clause extended to every loss happening by reason of a blockaded port, whether such blockade was strictly legal or not. Radcliff v. Unit. Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 38, 45.

Where an insurance was "against all risks, blockaded ports and Hispaniola excepted," a vessel sailing ignorantly for a blockaded port was held to be covered by the policy. "Hispaniola is excepted absolutely from the policy; but other ports are within the terms of the voyage insured, if they be not blockaded. It is their character as blockaded ports which excludes them from the insurance. Their being excepted by this character is thought to justify the opinion that it is the risk attending this character which produces the exception, and which is the BLOOD.—The word "blood" in its technical and in its natural sense includes the half-blood;[1] and where none can inherit who are not "of the blood of the ancestor," those words exclude those only who have none of the blood, without reference to proportion or quantity: such, however, as have none of the blood are entirely excluded.[2] To be "of the blood" of a person is to be descended from him, or from the same common stock, or the same couple of ancestors.[3] "Next of kin" and "next of blood" are synonymous in the language of the law.[4] risk excepted. The risk of a blockaded port, as a blockaded port, is the risk incurred by breaking the blockade. This is defined by public law. Sailing from Tobego for Curaçoa, knowing Curaçoa to be blockaded, would have incurred this risk; but sailing from that port, without such knowledge, did not incur it," Yeaton v. Fry, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 342.

1. Baker v. Chalfant, 5 Whar. (Pa.) 481.

In Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 87, in interpreting the R. I. statute of descents, Justice Story says: "We think that the phrase 'of the blood' in the statute includes the half-blood. This is the natural meaning of the word 'blood' standing alone and unexplained by any context. A half brother or sister is of the blood of the intestate, for each of them has some of the blood of a common parent in his or her veins. A person is with the most strict propriety of language affirmed to be of the blood of another who has any, however small a portion, of the same blood derived from a common ancestor. In the common law, the word 'blood' is used in the same sense. Whenever it is intended to express any qualification, the word 'whole' or 'half' blood is generally used to designate it, or the qualification is implied from the context or known principles of law."

See also Beebee v. Griffing, 14 N. Y. 241, where the court say: "If one individual can be said to be of the half-blood of his brother and another to be of the whole blood to him, they both can with propriety be said to be of the blood of him; the term 'of the blood' does not indicate the quantity, but simply that there is some of that blood, whether the whole or the half, or a smaller portion. . . . In a treatise on descent by the common law, where the rule is imperative to exclude the half-blood, and to allow the estate to escheat rather than to admit them to the inheritance, the briefer expression 'the blood' might be used to denote those of the whole blood only, because the general rule excluding the half-blood would be assumed to be properly understood. But in a statute adopting new rules of descent materially changing the common law, and expressly intended to admit the half-blood on a par with the whole, except in a single case, no such inference could be drawn."

2. Cutter v. Waddingham, 22 Mo. 263, and cases cited in previous note.

3. Den v. Jones & Searing, 3 Halst. (N. J.) 346. "Again, they are of the blood of an ancestor, who, with the exception of the father and mother (whose exclusion in England is peculiar to the laws of that realm, 2 Bl. Com. 210, and is founded on feudal principles and policy, ibid. 211), are capable of taking by descent from such ancestor, because the law forbids from taking by descent, but those who are of the blood of the ancestor. This definition it will be perceived comprehends not only those on whom under actual circumstances a descent must be cast, as, for example, a son on the death of his father, but all on whom under other circumstances the descent may or might be cast, as the grandson who would take if his father were dead, and the uncle who would take at common law on failure of lineal descendants. In short, all are of the blood of an ancestor who may in the absence of other and nearer heirs take by descent from that ancestor. . . . The terms 'of the blood' and 'heir' are by no means convertible or synonymous, nor does the former naturally or ex vi termini mean next of blood. A grandson during the life of his father is of the blood, yet not heir, nor next of blood of his grandfather. A nephew is of the blood of his uncle, yet not heir, nor next of blood, if the uncle have a child or descendant of a child alive. . . . And if in the consideration of the proviso the quality of half-blood be not disregarded, as in my opinion it never should be, then the exposition which would make these terms of the same import might be safely indulged, for if the inheritance be given to the next of blood of the ancestor among the half-blood the design of the legislature will be accomplished."

4. Cooper v. Denison, 13 Sim. 295.

BLOOD-STAINS. See EVIDENCE.

BLOW WITH. See note 1, infra.

BLUDGEON. See OFFENSIVE WEAPONS.[2]

BOARD.—I. Meals furnished for a stipulated sum.[3]

But not "next of blood" and "of the blood." See previous note.

The devise of a house to three brothers, "provided always that the house be not sold but go unto the next of blood that are males," constitutes an estate tail to each successively. Chapman's Case, Dyer, 333 b.

Of My Name and Blood —A devise to the "first and nearest of my kindred being male and of my name and blood" was thus construed: "In a general sense the being of a man's kindred is being of his blood, as the word 'consanguinity,' which is the same as 'kindred,' imports; but when in addition to being of his kindred a testator requires that the object of his bounty shall be of his blood, he must be understood as speaking of that blood which with some propriety may be called his; namely, that which in tracing an heir is considered as the blood of the most dignity and worth." "Name" was understood as intended to exclude the female line of the stock or family described by "blood." Leigh v. Leigh, 15 Ves. 107.

Kindred of the Whole and the Half Blood.—A statute providing that "in no case shall there be a distinction between kindred of the whole and the half blood" is not confined to cases where the ancestor from whom the estate is derived leaves children by different mothers. "Surely those who are children of a common mother but have different fathers are no less brothers and sisters of the half-blood than those who are children of a common father but have different mothers. Had it been designed that only those were intended who were of the same blood as the ancestor from whom the estate descended, why was it not so said?" Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 166

Relations by Blood or Marriage, in a will, was confined to the Statute of Distributions and those who have married persons entitled under that statute. Devinne v. Mellish, 5 Ves. 529.

Spitting of Blood, in the application for a policy of insurance, means literally spitting blood, whether from the teeth, gums, or lungs, but it would be absurd to hold that it was used in that sense. Evidence is properly admissible to show in what sense it was used, but without such evidence "the court might properly have instructed the jury that 'spitting of blood' in consequence of a drawn tooth or a cut on the gums was not meant by that term." Singleton v. St Louis Mut. Ins. Co., 66 Mo. 76.

1. The owner of a water power and of a furnace and mills devised "the furnace and the privilege of using water to blow with." In an action against the devisee for using the water not only for blowing the bellows of the furnace, but also for drilling and grinding castings, it was held that the devisee gave only the right to use the power to blow the bellows of the furnace, and that evidence given of an understanding among furnace men that by "blow with" was meant all the operations of the furnace, and not merely to blow the blast, was not sufficient to enlarge the meaning of the expression. "The language of the will in its ordinary acceptation plainly relates to the mere blowing of the bellows, and not to the other operations mentioned, in which there is no blowing; and a usage among furnace men, and furnace men only, to adopt a wider signification in their conversations among themselves cannot be presumed to have been adopted by other persons." Lincoln v. Lincoln, 110 Mass. 449.

2. "What a 'bludgeon' is I do not know. It is a thick stick, and where the degree of thickness begins which makes it a bludgeon I cannot tell." Reg. v. Sutton, 13 Cox C. C. 649.

3. Where an indictment charged that the defendant "by false pretences did obtain board of the goods and chattels of the prosecutor," it was held insufficient and bad, the term "board" being too general; the court, Draper, C. J., saying: "It may well be doubted whether if the indictment had charged the defendant with having by false pretences obtained a dinner of the goods and chattels of the prosecutor, it would not be too general. But the term 'board' is more general still. It implies a succession of meals obtained from day to day, or from week to week, or from month to month, etc., etc., and it may be said that each meal obtained under false pretences is a distinct offence. The case of the Queen v. Gardner, 1 Dears. & B. 40, reported also in 2 Jur. N. S. 598, contains a form of indictment more suitable to the offence intended to be charged." Queen v. McQuarrie, 22 U. C. Q. B. 600.

In the Queen v. Gardner, cited above, although the indictment enumerated in detail the items furnished as board, where the prisoner, by falsely pretending that he was a naval officer, induced the prosecutrix to enter into a contract with him to lodge and board him at a guinea a week, and under this contract he was lodged and supplied with various articles of food, it was held that a conviction for obtaining the articles of food by false pretences could not be sustained, as the obtaining of the food was too remotely the result of the false pretence. Queen v. Gardner, 1 Dears. & B. 40.

II. A number of persons who have the management of some public or private business.[1]

Under the 17th section of the act of March 11, 1834, which provides "that every inn-keeper shall keep good entertainment for man and horse," it was held that a tavern- or inn-keeper may recover from a guest the amount of his bill for boarding, although the 23d section of the same act forbade the recovery of "tavern reckonings as aforesaid," which the court held to refer only to such tavern reckonings as were mentioned in the previous section of the act, viz., debts for liquors and debts contracted by apprentices, etc. For said the court: "The plain meaning of the 17th section is that the price of board at an inn or tavern is not prohibited as to its recovery. The term board includes the ordinary necessaries of life, and must be considered as being synonymous with the word 'entertainment' in the act." Scattergood v. Waterman, 2 Miles (Pa.), 323.

It has been held that an account for board, washing, mending, and finding a room may be filed by way of set-off, under statutes authorizing the filing of accounts by defendants in actions on simple contract; the court saying: "Board and lodging, washing, etc., are all included within the meaning of goods delivered and services performed." Witter v. Witter, 10 Mass. 223.

In Indiana, where a statute authorized the county commissioners to make an allowance to the sheriff for all accounts chargeable against the county, it was held that this included fuel furnished by him for the county jail, and that this provision was not repealed by the act fixing the sheriff's per diem compensation for boarding prisoners; for said the court, Worden, J.: "The word 'boarding' does not in its ordinary sense, or as used in the statute, include the furnishing of fuel." Board of Comm'rs v. Reissher, 58 Md. 260.

1. County Board.—Section 10, article 10, of the Illinois Constitution of 1870, provides that the county board shall fix the compensation of all county officers, etc. In construing this section, the court, Sheldon, J., said: "Now what is the proper construction of the phrase 'county board' as used in section 10, article 10, of the constitution? It evidently is not to be confined to any one particular body of persons. It will be acknowledged that it embraces both the 'board of supervisors' and the 'board of county commissioners,' bodies very differently constituted. Is it to be confined to those two particular bodies, or may it not also embrace the county court, in counties not under township organization, which in such counties was to be superseded by the board of county commissioners, and until so superseded would in such counties be the body for the transaction of the county business? The more natural construction no doubt would be that the term 'county board' referred to the above-named boards, as they were the only two bodies of county officers to whom, in such connection, the term 'board' had been applied by the constitution and the laws, or by usage; and that might well be held as the proper construction, were the county court to continue as a coexisting tribunal, or were it indifferent, as respects results, which one exercised the power given. But the adoption of this construction would lead to this consequence, that section 10, article 10, would take effect in the counties under township organization before it did in the counties not under such organization. The system of a fixed compensation of county officers would be in force in the former counties for a year or more, while in the latter counties the fee system would be prevailing." And farther on: "We perceive no such necessity as limits the term 'board' to the board of supervisors and the board of county commissioners, and excludes its application to the county court which then existed in counties not under township organization. Webster in his dictionary, gives this as one of the definitions of the term 'board:' 'A body of men constituting a quorum; a court or council, as a board of trustees, a board of officers.' Under this signification may well be embraced as the county board this county court, composed of a county judge and two designated justices of the peace—the body of officers which

III. The deck of a ship, as in the phrase "on board."[1]

BOARD OF HEALTH. (See also HOSPITALS; NUISANCES; OFFICERS, MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; QUARANTINE.)

1. Definition.—A board or commission directly or indirectly charged and invested by sovereign authority with certain duties and powers for the protection and improvement of the public health.

The powers and duties imposed are advisory, ministerial, in-existed in a county not under township organization, and which was by the law of February 12, 1849, constituted to sit as a county court for the transaction of county business." Broadwell et al. v. The People, etc., 76 Ill. 554. See Hughes et al. v. The People, 82 Ill. 78.

Where an agreement was entered into by B, a managing director of an insurance company, with the board of directors of the said company by which B was to be allowed to resign, and at the same time the board were jointly to relieve him of his shares and guarantee him against all calls thereon, this agreement having been made at a meeting of the board at which only four members out of a total of seven were present, it was held that an action was maintainable for a breach of the agreement against the four defendants who had assented to it, though it was not shown by the plaintiff that the remaining members of the board were bound; the court, Watson, B., saying: "The board of management of this company was composed of seven members. Four only (the defendants) were present when these resolutions were made. The term 'board' has two meanings: the 'board' consisting of all the members, or a 'board' consisting of a quorum. If it means the latter, no question can arise. If the whole board, then, inasmuch as the defendants in their communications held out that it was the agreement of the 'board' and 'the directors' to give their guarantee and were parties to the agreement, they were estopped from saying that only four were parties to the agreement. Indeed the four have been parties to this agreement under the name of 'the board,' and if they cannot give a guarantee they are liable in damages." Barker v. Allan, 5 H. & N. 61.

1. On Board.—In construing a policy of insurance which read "on freight on board ship Herald," etc., the court, Shaw, C. J., said: "The question is, what was intended by the words 'on board.' The sentence is obviously elliptical, considering 'freight' as the hire or price to be paid for the use of the vessel; 'freight on board' is unmeaning. Something must be supplied. The defendants insist that we must understand it freight of property when laden 'on board.' But this is certainly not the necessary or most probable meaning. It may as well mean freight of property 'expected or intended to be put on board' or 'agreed to be put on board,' as in the case of a charter-party. . . . It may be said that the words 'on board' have, upon this supposition, no effect, and mean the same as freight of ship Herald. We think the meaning is nearly or wholly the same." Robinson v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Metc. (Mass.) 143.

Where a contract for the conveyance of goods from Liverpool to Australia contained a clause as follows, "Goods to be taken on board at Liverpool at ship's expense," it was held that a declaration averring that, although the goods were in the care and custody of the defendants for the purpose of their being taken on board, and the defendants took them on board at the ship's expense, yet, by their wrongful act, neglect, and default, certain of them were damaged, etc., disclosed a breach of duty arising out of the contract for which the defendants were liable. Cook v. Wilson, 1 C. B. N. S. 153.

quisitorial, or executive, as the statute law in each case may provide.

2. Classification.—In the United States boards of health may be classified as national,[1] State, and local; and the fundamental law in each instance can only be arrived at by consulting the statutes of the United States or of the particular State.

In England.—Such boards are the creations of Parliament, and their powers and duties are defined by various acts.[2]

3. State Boards of Health.—State boards of health have been created by the legislatures of most of the States. The members are appointed by the governor, and serve for a term of years. The statutory provisions vary in the different States, but a uniformity of purpose is apparent. Such boards are charged with the general supervision of the interests of the health and lives of the citizens, and are directed especially to study vital statistics. They are frequently invested with the supervision of the State system of registration of births, marriages, and deaths, are charged with inquiry concerning prevalent diseases, and are required to make annual reports to the governor. They are authorized to make investigations, to make a collection of vital statistics, and to advise legislation on sanitary matters. The qualification of membership frequently prescribes that there be at least a certain proportion of members selected from the medical profession, and sometimes that at least one member shall be a civil engineer. As a rule, they are not invested with any enlarged executive duties which are usually relegated to the local boards.[3]

4. Local Boards.—Constitution of.—In England and most of the United States local boards are now provided for by general laws. Many towns and cities have boards of health established either by special enactment or by virtue of their charters or incorporating acts.[4]

1. The act of Congress of March 3, 1879, 20 Stat. L. 484, R. S. Suplt. ch. 202, 480, creates a national board of health, to consist of seven persons, to be appointed by the President, with one medical officer from the army, one from the navy, one from the Marine Hospital, and one officer from the Department of Justice.

It meets at Washington or elsewhere, at the call of its president, and frames rules to carry out this act. Its duties are to obtain information upon all matters affecting the public health, to advise the several departments, the executives of the several States, and commissioners of the District of Columbia on all questions submitted by them, or whenever in the opinion of the board such advice may tend to the preservation and improvement of the public health. It was also made its duty to prepare and report to Congress a plan for a national health organization; special attention to be given to all quarantine matters. A temporary act to remain in force for four years was passed June 2, 1879, 21 S. L. 5, R. S. Supplt. p. 485, giving certain enlarged powers and specified duties to the national board of health.

2. The foundation Public Health Act in England is 11 and 12 Vict. c. 63, amended by numerous subsequent acts, which were consolidated and amended in 1875 by 38 and 39 Vict. c. 55.

3. For the exact details of the health laws of any particular State it will be necessary to consult the statute law of such State. The statute law of Massachusetts, Rev. Stat. chap. 79; New York Laws, 1880, chap. 322; Laws, 1885, chap. 270, are very full; and the Pennsylvania act, June 3, 1885, P. L. 56, is perhaps the latest on this subject, and is fully and carefully drawn.

4. Chap. 270, Laws 1885 (N. Y.) repealing all acts inconsistent therewith, Sometimes the county commissioners are created ex officio a board of health for the county and invested with certain executive duties.

The judicial construction of the powers, duties, limitations, and liabilities of boards of health can be best considered under such heads respectively.

5. Police Powers of a Municipality.—Among what are known as the police powers of the State, comes the authority to suppress nuisances, preserve health, and prevent fires. Such powers are conferred upon a municipality either directly or by implication as an essential and primary object of their constitution.[1] The power to preserve the health and safety of the inhabitants is one of the chief purposes of local government, and reasonable by-laws in relation thereto have been sustained in England as within the incidental authority of corporations to ordain.[2] and requiring the common council of every city and the trustees of every incorporated village in the State, with certain specified exceptions, in which there was not then a board of health to appoint such a board for such city or village once in each year, repeals the provision in the charter of a village making the board of trustees the board of health of such village. The exceptions intended refer to villages in which there were boards constituted as separate bodies from the board of trustees. And when the board of trustees of a village fails to appoint a board of health as required by the act of 1885, any citizen and taxpayer of said village may institute proceedings to compel them to do so by mandamus. People ex rel. Boltzer v. Daley, 22 N. Y. W. Digest, 171.

Boards of health established by ordinance improperly passed may be a de-facto board, and its acts valid. Smith v. Treas. of Cuyahoga, 29 Ohio, 261.

The several acts of the New Jersey legislature relating to boards of health considered in relation to the board of health of Newark. Lozier v. Newark, 19 Vr. (N. J.) 453.

A board of health is legally organized if there has been a substantial compliance with the requirements of the law; although the statute provides that the board shall be nominated for a term of not less than three years; the fact that two of its members can hold office under the city charter for but one year will not constitute the board illegal. Hutchinson v. State, 39 N. J. Eq. 569.

The New Jersey law of 1880, and a supplement passed thereto in 1885, relative to local boards of health, provide the number of members, how appointed, and term of office of the members thereof. The Newark board of health being constituted by virtue of an ordinance in conformity to the above act, which changes the term of office, number of members, and methods of election or appointment, is illegal, and the board constituted thereby cannot exercise the powers intended to be conferred by the legislature referred to. State v. Board of Health, Newark, N. J., 2 Atlantic Repr. 815.

The board of health has not the capacity to sue or to be sued. Neither has it power to purchase and hold real estate for a hospital. People v. Supervisors of Monroe, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 567.

No penalty can be imposed for the violation of a special order of the board of health; the statute only extends to violations of the sanitary code. Health Department v. Knoll, 70 N. Y. 530; Health Department v. Pinckney, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 260.

1. Laws and ordinances relating to the comfort, health, convenience, and general welfare of the inhabitants, are generally styled police laws and regulations.

2. Dillon on Mun.Cor. (3d Ed.) §§ 141, 369.

A city may adopt measures of police to preserve the health and promote the convenience and general welfare of the inhabitants. So it may abate a manufactory as injurious to the public health. Kennedy v. Phelps, 10 La. Ann. 227.

As to the power of municipal corporations to make ordinances and regulations to preserve the public health and to prevent and remove nuisances, see Harrison v. Baltimore, 1 Gill (Md.), 264; Livingston v. Pippin, 31 Ala. 542; Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 184; Salem v. R. Co., 98 Mass. 431; Dingley v. Boston, 100 Mass. 544; Ureford v. People, 14 Mich. 41; Roberts v. Ogle, 30 Ill. 459,

Where a city government has the power, it is bound, so far as it can, to abate every nuisance dangerous to the public health.[1] The conference of power on a municipality to make quarantine regulations is not a delegation of legislative power. But it has been frequently decided that a mere failure on the part of a municipality to provide proper remedies for the prevention of nuisances and other annoyances to health and bodily comfort will not result in liability to the town or city.[3]

6. Powers and Limitations.—Powers conferred on a board of health are to be liberally construed.[4] Their functions are held to be executive, but not legislative;[5] the question whether a thing is or is not a nuisance is a jurisdictional fact, and a board cannot declare that to be a nuisance which is not such at common law.[6] The power to enact sanitary regulations which shall have the force of law, and for which a criminal prosecution will lie, may be conferred on a board by the legislature.[7]

State v. Jersey City, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 170; Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. 36; Dillon M. C. §§ 308, 309.

The power to relieve the indigent sick, especially in time of epidemic, is inherent in every municipal corporation. Vinet v. First Municipality, 4 La. Ann. 42.

1. Kennedy v. Phelps, 10 La. Ann. 227.

2. Such powers have been sustained as not contravening either the constitution of Missouri or of the United States. Metcalf v. St. Louis, 11 Mo. 102.

3. Roberts v. Chicago, 26 Ill. 249; Wilson v. New York, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 595; Mills v. Brooklyn, 32 N. Y. 489; Carr v. Northern Liberties, 35 Pa. St. 324; Detroit v. Michigan, 34 Mich. 125; Delphi v. Evans, 36 Ind. 90; Cotes v. Davenport, 9 Iowa, 227; Lamber v. St. Louis, 15 Mo. 610; White v. Yazoo, 27 Miss. 357.

4. Powers granted for so important an object as the preservation of the public health should receive a liberal construction for the advancement of the ends for which they were bestowed. Gregory v. New York, 40 N. Y. 273.

While the court of chancery has jurisdiction to enjoin action of township boards, yet these boards having large discretionary power, the exercise of such discretion will not be interfered with except in a clear case. Upjohn v. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 542.

5. A resolution passed by a New Jersey board of health declaring a certain tannery to be a nuisance, was held void. State Marshall v. Trenton, 7 Vr. (N. J.) 283.

6. The question whether a nuisance exists cannot be settled conclusively except in the regular courts of law or equity. Hutton v. City of Camden, 10 Vr. (N. J.) 122; Coe v. Schultz, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Weil v. Schultz, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 7; Hoffman v. Schultz, 31 How. Pr. 385; Schuster v. Met. Board of Health, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 450.

7. Polinsky v. People, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 390; People v. Special Sessions, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 214.

The board of health have final jurisdiction in determining the fact of a nuisance which they order to be removed. Kennedy v. Board of Health, 2 Pa. St. 366.

The license of a county board of health and vital statistics in New Jersey, to manufacture fertilizers and materials, cannot be pleaded in bar of an indictment for causing a noxious, offensive, and unwholesome nuisance by such manufacture. Garrett v. State of New Jersey, 7 Atl. Repr. 29.

In all actions against the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York, in which any action, order, regulation, ordinance, or proceeding of the board of health shall be called in question, the board of health shall be a necessary party. Bell v. New York, 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 23, 334.

By the act of June 30, 1885, P. L. 250, the board of health of cities of the first class in Pennsylvania were authorized to make and promulgate suitable rules and regulations for the construction of house drainage, and the disregard of such rules made a misdemeanor punishable with fine and imprisonment. In the case of Com. v. Lambrecht, decided in the Quarter Sessions for Philadelphia County (not.

The Massachusetts act relative to boards of health, which is explicit and carefully drawn, has received considerable judicial construction.[1]

General Powers.—The powers of boards of health have been recognized and defined in a number of cases in the different States. Where a business is so carried on in the city as to be a public nuisance per se, the board of health has power to abate it.[2] They have powers to pass laws prohibiting the sale of impure milk reported), May 6, 1887, the constitutionality of this act was called in question. The defendant was indicted for violating the provisions of the act, and demurred to the indictment on the ground that the act was unconstitutional, because it delegated the law-making power to a department of the municipality. The court held: "After a careful consideration of the matter, I am unable to find any conflict between the constitution and the act of June 30, 1885, authorizing the board of health in cities of the first class to regulate house drainage, the registration of master plumbers, and the construction of cesspools. The argument of the counsel of the defendants that the act delegates the law-making power to a department of the municipality is not well founded. By a public statute it is enacted that 'the boards of health in cities of the first class are authorized and directed to adopt and promulgate suitable rules and regulations for the construction of house drainage and cesspools, and to provide for the registration of master plumbers and persons engaged in the plumbing business in said cities.' The boards 'shall also establish a system of inspection and supervision over all house drainage and cesspools, and ventilation of the same.' Fine or imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of the court, may be imposed upon any person who shall refuse or neglect to comply with the requirements of said rules and regulations when promulgated. Thus it will be seen that the offence and the punishment are prescribed by the statute. The boards of health can do no more than to adopt and promulgate the rules and regulations, and by inspection and supervision see that the requirements thereof shall be complied with."

A city ordinance giving the board of health a general supervision over the health of the city held to include power to rent a building to be used as a hospital to protect the city from cholera. Aull v. Lexington, 18 Mo. 401.

1. It has been held that the Mass. stat. 1882, chap. 181, providing for placing neglected children under fourteen years of age in charge of the State board of health, lunacy, and charity is not a penal statute, and not contrary to the bill of rights. Farnham v. Pierce, 2 N. E. Repr. 225.

Selectmen as board of health may, without notice, forbid an offensive trade. Belcher v. Farrar, 8 Allen (Mass.), 325.

The order of selectmen to abate need not be served by an officer. The court may in its discretion refuse to enforce an order, and the selectmen may bring a bill in the name of the town. Winthrop v. Farrar, 11 Allen (Mass.). 398.

A board of health may give an order to remove a nuisance without previous notice. The order need not prescribe the mode of removal, and the owner is not restricted to the mode if prescribed. Salem v. R. Co., 98 Mass. 431.

A board of health may bring a bill in the city's name. City of Taunton v. Taylor, 116 Mass. 254.

The statute intended a summary abatement of a local nuisance. Cambridge v. Monroe, 126 Mass. 502.

A later case holds that an order undertaking to prescribe removal is void; also without previous notice. Watuppa Reservoir v. MacKensie, 132 Mass. 71.

The board may act by a committee in abating a nuisance Grace et al. v. Board of Health, 135 Mass. 490.

Keeping swine is held to be an employment entitling owner to notice by the board. Com. v. Young, 135 Mass. 526.

A person aggrieved by an order of the State board of health may appeal to a jury, and the jury may alter the order. Sawyer v. State Board of Health, 125 Mass. 182.

Notice must be given to the board of an appeal from its order. Pebbles v. Boston, 131 Mass. 197.

A woman, by statute 1879, c. 291, § 2, is eligible as a member of the State board of health. Opinion to Governor and Council, 136 Mass. 578.

2. The board may abate a nuisance per se after notice to show cause has been duly served and disregarded. Weil v. Schultz, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 7; Westheimer v. Schultz, 33 How. Pr. (N Y.) 11.

and to appoint a milk inspector. The power to regulate implies the power to restrict; and where a city has the power to regulate slaughter-houses it has the power of total prohibition.[2] It has the same rights as any other citizen to abate a public nuisance.[3]

They have power to fence a lot if necessary for the abatement of a nuisance.[4] Their action in fixing the compensation of a physician whom they were empowered to employ is conclusive.[5]

In New Jersey the board may proceed in the name of the State to procure an injunction to restrain a nuisance prejudicial to health without the intervention of the attorney-general.[6] Discretionary power, where given, will not be controlled.[7] Where a ministerial duty is imposed it must be exercised in a proper manner.[8]

Persons aggrieved by an order of the board of health are entitled to an appeal to the jury.[9] The boards of health may recover the expenses of healing sick passengers.[10] They may under certain restrictions take charge of the premises occupied by persons afflicted with an infectious disease.[11]

Limitations and Restrictions.—While a board of health may have power to declare a particular thing a nuisance as dangerous to

1. With power to seize and destroy such as is below the standard quality. Blazier v. Miller, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 435.

2. Board v. Heister, 37 N. Y. 66; Tugman v. Chicago, 78 Ill. 405.

3. The Metropolitan board of health having ordered a manufacture of poudrette to be discontinued until it could be made without allowing the odor or fumes to escape into the external air, the owner appealed for an injunction. Held, that such a manufacture was a public nuisance which the board had the same right as any other citizen to abate. Coe v. Schultz, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 64.

4. Wistar v. Addicks, 9 Phila. 145.

5. Williamsport v. Richter, 81 Pa. St. 508.

6. Hutchinson v. Board of Health, 39 N. J. Eq. 569.

7. Under a statute regulating the practice of medicine and surgery, an applicant for leave to practise, who has a diploma, must furnish the State board of health satisfactory evidence that it was granted by some legally chartered institution in good standing. Held, that the granting of leave by the board is discretionary, and will not be enforced by mandamus. State v. Gregory, 83 Mo. 123.

The authority of the corporation of New Orleans to prevent nuisances is of a very extensive character, and a strong case of abuse must be shown to induce the court to interfere with its exercise. Milne v. Davidson, 5 Mart. (La.) 410.

The court will not interfere to prevent a removal of a nuisance unless the complainant's rights are illegally threatened. In this case the city council acted as a board of health. Ferguson v. Selma, 43 Ala. 398.

8. The board of health of New York is bound to exercise in proper manner the power to record births conferred upon it. Ex parte Lauterzing, 16 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 308.

9. Although the Mass. statute does not expressly give to a person aggrieved by an order of the State board adjudging his business a nuisance a right of appeal therefrom to the jury, yet he has such right. Sawyer v. Board of Health, 125 Mass. 182.

Notice must be given, however, to the State board of an appeal from an order of that board. Pebbles v. Boston, 131 Mass. 197.

10. The expenses of sick passengers may be recovered though ordered to the hospital before the oath is made. Board of Health v. Cope, Purd. Dig. (11th Ed.) 1555.

11. A member of a town board of health has no authority without a warrant to take charge of premises where there is a case of small-pox to the exclusion of the owner thereof, or the person entitled to the lawful possession, even when the person is too sick to be removed; but he may subject the premises and the use thereof to stringent regulations to prevent the spread of the disease. Brown v. Murdock, 3 N. E. Repr. 208.

To similar effect is Haverty v. Bass, 66 Me. 71.

public health and order its removal, it may not assume in advance that a certain class of things, as privies and sinks, are or will become nuisances and bind the city by contract for their removal;[1] nor may it absolutely prohibit the carrying on of a lawful business.[2]

A town board cannot summarily execute its orders as to the abatement of a nuisance by going outside of the town for that purpose.[3]

Where the legislature has regulated the standard of petroleum and the mode of storage thereof it is not competent for a board of health under its general powers to impose further restrictions.[4]

It is only where a regulation of a board of health has been made and published that a person can be convicted of a misdemeanor for its violation.[5]

The regulations of a board of health may not conflict with powers conferred upon quarantine officers.[6]

A city cannot recover the expense of filling up lowlands of a citizen by the adoption of a resolution of a board of health and subsequent notification to the owner to do so.[7]

The principle of law applying to the exercise of summary powers on the part of boards of health, if at all capable of being summarized, is simply that boards of health are strictly confined to and by the statutory provisions of the acts by which they are created.[8]

1. Gregory v. Mayor, 40 N. Y. 273.

2. The board of health of the city of Newark in the legitimate exercise of its functions cannot absolutely prohibit the carrying on of a lawful business not necessarily a nuisance, but which may be conducted without injury or danger to the public health and without public inconvenience. They will be confined in their interference with the lawful business of any individual to such interruptions as may be reasonably necessary to enable them to abate any nuisance he may create in conducting it. Weil v. Ricord, 9 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 169.

3. Gould v. City of Rochester, 105 N.Y. 46. But where a city permits its sewage to be discharged upon its premises in an adjoining town, and the board of health of the town pass a resolution declaring such discharge of sewage to be a nuisance, orders it to be suppressed, and authorizes the commencement of an action to restrain the violation of the resolution, and a copy of the resolution was served upon the city authorities, the delivery being made in the city, held, that the action was maintainable, that the order related to a matter within the town and within the jurisdiction of the board. Gould v. Rochester, 39 Hun, 79; reversed 105 N. Y., 46.

4. Metropolitan Board of Health v. Schmades, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 283.

5. Reed v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) 481.

6. People v. Roff, 3 Park. (N. Y.) 216.

7. Hutton v. Camden, 10 Vroom (N. J.), 122.

8. The Massachusetts statutes in conferring on town boards of health power to provide for persons sick with infectious diseases in the houses where they may be, if they cannot be removed without danger, and to treat such houses as hospitals, do not authorize a board to take possession of such a house and its furniture to the exclusion of the owner and against his consent, and to use the house as a hospital for one found sick therein, and the owner of the house so taken has no claim against the town for use and occupation. Spring v. Hyde Park, 137 Mass. 554.

An order of a board of health declaring certain premises a nuisance, and ordering it to be abated under a penalty, is void as to the order, unless passed at a hearing appointed and on notice given. Rogers v. Barker, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 447.

An order of the board of health of a city under Mass. Gen. St. ch. 26, § 8, directing the owner to remove a nuisance in a specific manner is void. Watuppa Reservoir Company v. MacKensie, 132 Mass. 71.

The power of the board of health does not extend to the removal of tenants

4. Municipal Liability for Acts of.—A municipality seems to be liable for the acts of the board of health not ultra vires when it is a department of the municipal government.[1]

5. Individual Liability.—Members of a board of health, upon which has been conferred extended powers of abating nuisances, etc., are not liable for their action in removing that which in the exercise of reasonable caution they deemed injurious to the public health;[2] but the rule is otherwise when they are guilty of gross negligence.[3] and the closing up of their houses, unless justified by the existence of a pestilential disease. Eddy v. Board of Health, 30 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 392; s. c., 5 Leg. Gaz. 381.

To obtain a valid lien for the removal of a nuisance, the board of health must strictly pursue the provisions of the act of 1818; there must be a complaint of two householders, and a warrant from a justice. Baugh v. Sheriff, 7 Phila. 82.

A resolution declaring that a nuisance exists on lots north and south of Master, between Broad and Thirteenth streets will not sustain a claim against a lot at the Southwest corner of Thirteenth and Master streets. Philadelphia v. Houseman, 2 Phila. 349.

What will justify the hauling of a vessel to the wharf, before being visited by the port physician. Board of Health v. Miercken, Purd. Dig. (10th Ed.) 1326.

Neither the board of health nor any other department of the city of Philadelphia can make a debt or contract binding the city, unless an appropriation to pay the same has previously been made by councils.

By the procurement of the board of health certain nuisances were removed for the public good. There was not a sufficient appropriation to pay for the work done under the contract. Assessments were made on the property, and about one half thereof were paid into the city treasury. Held, that in equity the money belonged to the contractor, and that he had the right to recover the same from the city on the ground that the money was received for his use. Parker v. City of Philadelphia, 92 Pa. St. 401.

1. The board of health of a city has power to bind the county to pay for materials used in constructing a pest-house. Stoples v. Plymouth Co., 62 Iowa, 364.

Where a city charter requires common council to take measures for the preservation of the public health, and the statute makes the council the board of health, where no other board was appointed, a nurse employed by the council to care for a small-pox patient is entitled to compensation from the city, notwithing the patient was of sufficient ability to pay for the services himself. Such individual liability of the patient as between the city and himself does not affect the liability of the city in the first instance. Rae v. Flint City, 51 Mich. 526; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 201.

Where a board of health was constituted a separate body by the charter of a city, and authorized generally to make and enforce sanitary regulations for the care and preservation of health, held, that the city was not liable for the acts and negligence of such board in the discharge of its duties, the same being public, governmental, and not corporate in their character. And it is not material whether its members derive their appointment directly from the State, or are appointed by the city government. Bryant v. St. Paul, 33 Minn. 289; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 340.

An action was brought against the city to recover the value of rags destroyed by order of the board of health. Held, that the city was not liable in any event. Bamber v. City of Rochester, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 103.

A sanitary commission appointed by a board of health cannot recover for services rendered when that board had no authority to establish a commission. If they acted as agents for the city, the law presumes that their services were rendered gratuitously; if they acted as officers for the city, they then accepted a public trust to which neither fees nor emoluments were attached by any ordinance of the city. Barton v. New Orleans, 16 La. Ann. 317; Ferguson v. Selma, 43 Ala. 398; Mayor v. Toney, 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 400.

2. Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80.

3. While the board of health and the municipal officers may remove from the city infected persons, they are liable for negligence in doing so, and for removing them in stormy weather and putting them in an unsafe and unprotected tent, whereby they are so exposed that death ensues. Aaron v. Broiles, 64 Tex. 316.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS. (See also COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.)—A county board under a system existing in certain States, to whom the fiscal affairs of the county are intrusted, composed of delegates representing the several organized towns or townships of the county.[1]

This body performs in New York, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Iowa equivalent fiscal duties to those exercised by county commissioners in many other States, and is vested with like authority; and it can be most satisfactorily treated under the same head.[2]

BOARDER. (See also GUEST; LODGER.)—One who has food or diet and lodging in another's family for reward.[3] Boarder and guest distinguished.[4]

1. Bouvier's Law Dict.

2. Haines Township Laws of Michigan; Haines Town Laws of Illinois and Wisconsin.

3. Ambler v. Skinner, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 561. In this case there was a lease containing a covenant that the lessee would not assign the lease, nor let or underlet the whole or any part of the premises without the written consent of the lessor. By the said lease the whole of the first floor was reserved to the lessor, with a privilege or use to him, for the reception of company, of the front parlor, in common with the lessee; and it was held that even if, by the proper construction of the covenant against underletting, the lessee had a right to take boarders, yet the right to carry on a business was not included in a mere right to lodge and be fed, and that the lessor might have an injunction to restrain one claiming to be a boarder of the lessee from using the front parlor for the purpose of carrying on his business as a dentist.

The article 739 of the Texan Penal Code (Pasc. Dig. art. 2372), which provides that "an entry into a house for the purpose of committing theft, unless the same is effected by the actual breaking, is not burglary when the same is done by a domestic servant or other inhabitant of such house, and a theft committed by such person after entering a house is only punishable as simple theft," has been held not to apply to boarders in a boarding-house; for said the court, Ector, P. J.: "While our statute intended to deal more leniently with 'domestic servants and other inhabitants' of a house when guilty of a theft from the house occupied by them than with other persons, because of their generally recognized right freely to enter any part of the house at all times, the boarder has no such recognized and unlimited right of entry. He has the right to enter his own particular room at any time, day or night, but no such right of entry to the private room of a fellow-boarder. Except to the occupant and the domestic servants, or inhabitants of the house whose duties may require them to enter it, the private room of a boarder is, or should be, as sacred and as much protected by law from the intrusive entry of a fellow-boarder as from a stranger, or as would be his private residence." Ulman v. State, 1 Tex. App. 220.

4. "The distinction between a guest and a boarder seems to be this: 'The guest comes without any bargain for time, remains without one, and may go when he pleases, paying only for the actual entertainment which he receives; and it is not enough to make a boarder and not a guest that he has stayed a long time in the inn in this way.' 2 Parsons on Contracts, 162; Story on Bailments, § 447." By Beck, J., in Shoecraft v. Bailey, 25 Iowa, 553. See Berkshire Woolen Co. v. Procter, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417.

Boarded.—On a demurrer to an answer in replevin that the answer stated facts which avoided the cause of defence in setting out that the plaintiff as a boarder boarded and lodged with the defendant as an hotel-keeper, the court overruled the demurrer; Day, J., saying: "The allegation of the answer is that the plaintiff 'boarded' with defendant. 'Boarded' is the imperfect tense of the verb 'board,' which means to receive food as a lodger, or without lodging, for a compensation. A lodger is one who lives at board or in a hired room, or who has a bed in another's house for a night. Webs. Dict. The allegation that plaintiff boarded with defendant is merely an averment that he received food from defendant for a compensation. The answer does not state whether he received this food as a boarder or as a guest. Under

BOARDING-HOUSE. See INNKEEPER.

BOAT. (See also SHIPPING.)—A small vessel or water craft, usually open, and generally moved by oars, but sometimes by sails or steam.[1] the allegations of the answer he may have received it in either capacity; and the answer being thus uncertain might have been vulnerable to a motion for a more specific statement. But as it does not appear upon the face of the answer that the plaintiff was entertained as a boarder, the answer does not state facts which avoid the cause of action, and the demurrer was properly overruled." Pollock v. Landis, 36 Iowa, 651.

1. In deciding that an open boat is not a ship or vessel, within the United States statutes of 1820, chap. 122, and 1823, ch. 150, which prohibited commercial intercourse from the British colonies, and that notwithstanding those statutes open British boats might visit the United States, if not destined for trade, Story, J., said: "The argument of the district-attorney is, that the boat falls within the general description of the statutes, and is a 'vessel' within its terms and meaning; and that she is 'owned by a subject or subjects of his Britannic Majesty.' And if so, she is excluded from entry into our ports. There can be no doubt that in a general sense a boat is a vessel, for it is a 'vehicle in which men or goods are carried on the water,' which is one of the definitions of a vessel given in our lexicographies; and one of the definitions of a boat, given in like manner, is, that it is 'a vessel to pass the water in,' or 'a ship of small size.' In a nautical sense, it more usually designates an open vessel, without decks. Whether the word is used in the one sense or the other in a particular statute must depend upon the context and objects of the statute itself, which may and often do narrow down the general import to specific classes of cases. . . . I am not aware that in any of our laws respecting shipping the word 'vessel' is applied to any description of boats like the present. . . . There are, also, provisions in our laws, which contemplate importations from foreign countries in vessels of a smaller description. But in such cases the general term 'vessel' is not alone employed, but a more specific description is added. Thus by the 105th section of the act of 1799, ch. 128, importations are allowed on the northern and northwestern boundaries of the United States 'in vessels or boats of any burthen;' and the next section (§ 106) goes on to provide 'that all vessels, boats, rafts, and carriages of what kind or nature soever, arriving in the district aforesaid, containing goods, etc., shall be reported to the collector, etc.' A distinction between boats and vessels is here taken; and a distinction does in fact exist in common parlance and maritime usage. The term 'vessel' is never, or at least very rarely, used to designate any water craft without a deck; but the term 'boat' is constantly used to designate such small vehicles of this nature, as are without a deck. In Mortimer's Commercial Dictionary a boat is defined to be 'a small open vessel, commonly wrought by oars.' He says that the term 'ship' is 'a general name for all large vessels.' And it appears to me that the general sense in which the word 'vessel' is used in our laws is in contradiction to an open boat, and excluding the latter. Such is its meaning in the act of 1815, ch. 246, where it is declared lawful 'for any collector, etc., to enter on board, search and examine, any ship, vessel, boat or raft, etc.' And when the word is found in our laws without anything in the context to explain or enlarge its meaning, it appears to me a sound rule of interpretation to construe it as used in that sense, which is its most common sense in maritime usage. Especially ought it to receive such an interpretation when it interferes with no known policy of the legislature, and a different course would involve general inconvenience." U. S. v. An Open Boat, 5 Mason (U. S.), 120, 134.

Where a bond was taken in a proceeding under the statute authorizing the attachment of ships and vessels on account of liens for work, materials, etc., (2 R. S. 493, tit. 8), it was held that a canal-boat, navigating the canal between Albany and Troy, was not within the statute; the court, Bronson, J., saying: "The present statute is substantially like the former ones. It only applies to ships and vessels which navigate the ocean, and such as are required to have a coasting license under the laws of the United States. If this were a new question, I should be of that opinion. In common parlance, a canal-boat is not a 'ship or vessel.' But it is enough that the question is decided." Many v. Noyes, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 34.

In an action of trespass against magistrates, for taking and detaining a vessel, under the act 2 Geo. III. c. 28, called the Bumboat Act, which authorized the seizure of any boat suspected of having on board anything stolen or unlawfully procured from or out of any ship or vessel in the river Thames, it was claimed that the vessel in question, which was decked and of the burthen of thirteen tons, was unlawfully seized, inasmuch as the said vessel was not a boat within the meaning of the act; but the court would not admit evidence of the character of the vessel, and held that the conviction by the magistrates under this act was conclusive evidence that the vessel was a boat within the meaning of the act; Dallas, C. J., saying: "Now allowing, for the sake of argument, that 'boat' is a word of technical meaning, and somewhat different from a vessel; still it was a matter of fact to be made out before the magistrate, and on which he was to draw his own conclusion;" and Park, J.: "In the present case the whole argument has turned on that which, under the circumstances, it was impossible to give in evidence, namely, that the vessel in question was not a boat; but supposing that this point might have been entered into at the trial, has anything been stated to show that the vessel was not a boat? Upon such a point as this dictionaries are certainly good authority, and Dr. Johnson calls a boat 'a ship of small size, as a passage-boat, advice-boat, fly-boat.' Falconer's Marine Dictionary says, 'a boat is open or decked according to the purpose for which it is intended.'" Brittain v. Kennaird, 1 Brod. & B. 432, 438, 441.

In a Missouri case under the statute concerning "boats and vessels" against a barge for services rendered on board said boat as watchman, the court, Scott, J., said: "Another question in the cause is the liability of a boat of the character of the barge to the proceedings under the act 'concerning boats and vessels.' The words of the act are sufficiently comprehensive to embrace vessels of the class sued in this case. The statute does not say every steamboat, or all steamboats, but every boat or vessel navigating the waters of this State shall be liable to attachment. The barge is clearly within the letter of the law, and, there being no reason why it should not be subject to the same proceedings as a steamboat, it cannot be said that the General Assembly contemplated its exemption from this remedy." The Barge Resort v. Brooke, 10 Mo. 531.

The statute 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 75. empowering the court of Mayor and Aldermen of London to make by-laws for regulating "the boats, vessels, and other craft to be rowed or worked" between Windsor and Yantlet Creek has been held to extend to steamboats. Tisdell v. Combe, 7 Ad. & Ell. 788.

So in Virginia the words "bay or river craft or other boat," in § 17, ch. 95, of the Code, edition of 1860, was held to embrace steamboats of 500 tons burthen. Steamboat Wenonah v. Bragdon, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 685.

Where an act of the State of New York of May 6th, 1870 (Session Laws of 1870, p. 1696), fixed certain new rates of wharfage, with the exception "that all canal-boats engaged in navigating the canals in this State, and vessels known as North River barges, shall pay the same rates as before," it was held that a vessel propelled by steam power, for the sole purpose of towing boats on the canals, was a canal-boat within the meaning of the exception above stated; but as she occupied the wharf while in the process of construction only, she was not then engaged in navigating the canals, and was therefore liable to pay wharfage at the rate prescribed by the act of 1870. The Steamboat Vermont, 6 Benedict (U. S.), 112.

But canal-boats do not become steamboats, or anything but canal-boats, by being pulled or pushed by a steam-tug, or by performing a part of their voyage over tidal waters. Buckley v. Brown, 3 Wall. Jr. 199.

In an action to recover for certain materials furnished for the construction of the hull of a steam-tug, it was held that a boat or vessel named in the lien law (in section 17, chap. 13, page 656, Mis. Laws) is one that is complete and capable of being used to carry freight or passengers. The hull of a boat, without the other parts necessary to its use, is not a boat within the meaning of the statute, to which a lien could attach. Northup v. The Pilot, 6 Oreg. 297.

But a "wharf-boat" attached to the soil savors of the realty, and is subject to the mechanic's statutory lien. In this case Gregg, J., said: "When the term 'boat' is used, we are likely to catch the idea of locomotion—of passing, or transportation from one point to another—without hesitating to inquire whether that term is ever applied to other structures which have no power of locomotion, no propelling force, by which they can move or be moved from point to point. It may be said the fastenings are easily cut, and a wharf-boat can be readily towed or floated away. So may a house be placed on rollers and speedily hauled upon other lands, but no one doubts a house being a fixture simply because it is capable of being removed. The riparian owner has a just claim to all the soil composing the bank of a stream, and no one can hold or use such soil upon the margin of a river, whether navigable or not, for the purpose of fastening or making safe any structure or building, against the will of such owner; and should any one attempt to so lodge such building upon the private soil of another, forcibly and against his consent, we suppose no attorney would deny but such a one might be ejected therefrom. The location and maintaining of a 'wharf-boat' must depend upon its attachments to the soil. Such boat or building has no power to retain its position except its bank fastenings. It cannot be severed from the soil without destroying the structure—at least its present local utility. Cut such structure loose from its moorings—from its connections—and it is as effectually ruined for all practical purposes as is a house rolled away from its business location. To this extent it appertains to the realty. It rests against the bank. It supports upon the realty, and unlike vessels that 'plough the waters' it has no mobility—no apparatus to change place, or power to retain position, other than land fastenings. It is in fact but a floating business house, or rather a business house upon the surface of the water, and stationed by its cables. It is a building—a structure commonly used to facilitate the landing of boats, and the storing of freight, and it may have sleeping apartments, may be dwelt in, and it is embraced within the spirit and meaning of our statute declaring that such liens may be held on 'any building, edifice, or tenement.' Gould's Dig., sec. 1, p. 768." Galbreath v. Davidson, 25 Ark. 490.

BODY. (See also CORPORATIONS; HABEAS CORPUS; HEIRS; SEPULTURE.)—I. The main part or frame of anything, in distinction from parts subordinate or less important; as of a man, in opposition to his head and limbs,[1] or of places.[2]

In an action on a policy of insurance in the usual form on ship, boat, etc., evidence of a usage that the underwriters never pay for the loss of boats on the outside of the ship, slung upon the quarter, was held inadmissible, as contradicting the contract, not explaining it. Blackett v. Royal Exchange Assur. Co., 2 C. & J. 244; S. C. Lawson on Usages and Customs, 413.

Where a bill of lading contained the following clause of exception, "the act of God, etc., and all and every other dangers and accidents of the seas, rivers, and navigation of whatever nature and kind soever, save risk of boats, so far as ships are liable thereto, excepted," it was held that the ship owner was not liable for a loss incurred by the wreck of a boat which was carrying the goods to shore, according to the custom of the West India trade, as the saving clause only extended to the same risks as if the goods had been on board the ship. Johnston v. Benson, 4 Moore 90.

In a bill of sale of a vessel with its appurtenances, the boat does not pass. Starr v. Goodwin, 2 Root (Conn.), 71.

The words "house of ill-fame," as used in the statute punishing the keeping thereof as a nuisance, properly includes a boat on the river, when used as a habitation for such purposes. State v. Mullen, 35 Iowa, 199.

1. In deciding that in an indictment for murder the place of the mortal wound is sufficiently indicated by the allegation that it was "upon the body," the court, Welles, J., said: "The indictment, in my opinion, is sufficiently certain in this respect. By the word 'body,' in this connection, is to be understood the trunk of the man, in distinction from his head and limbs. This is the doctrine of the books on the subject." Long's Case, Coke's R. pt. 5, 120; Sanchez v. People, 22 N. Y. 147.

2. Body of the County.—In an indictment for an assault under the United States statute (Stat. of 1825, ch. 276, § 22) as follows: "If any person or persons upon the high seas, or in any arm of the sea, or in any river, haven, creek, basin, or bay within the admiralty jurisdiction of any particular State, on board of any vessel, etc., shall with a dangerous weapon, or with intent to kill, etc., commit an assault on another, such person shall," etc.,—it was held that the circuit courts of the United States had no jurisdiction under the said statute when the place in which the assault was committed was within the body of the county; the court, Story, J., saying: "But to bring the case within the purview of the present statute it is not sufficient that the place where the offence is committed is within the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States, whether it be an arm of the sea, creek, or bay, etc., but it must by the very words of the statute also be a place 'out of the jurisdiction of any particular state.' And it is out of the jurisdiction of the State, in the sense of this statute, if it be not within the body of some county within the State. This leads one to consider what is the proper boundary of counties bordering on the sea-coast, according to the established course of the common law, for to that I shall feel myself bound to conform on the present occasion, whatever might have been my doubts if I were called to decide upon original principles. The general rule, as it is often laid down in the books, is that such parts of rivers, arms and creeks of the sea are deemed to be within the bodies of counties where persons can see from one side to the other. Lord Hale uses more guarded language, and says, in the passage already cited, that the arm or branch of the sea which lies within the fauces terræ, where a man may reasonably discern between shore and shore, is, or at least may be, within the body of a county. Hawkins (Pl. Cr. b. 2, ch. 9, § 14) has expressed the rule in its true sense, and confines it to such parts of the sea where a man standing on the one side may see what is done on the other. And this is precisely the doctrine which is laid down by Stanton, J., in the passage in Fitz. Abridge. Corone, 399, 8 Edw. II., on which Lord Coke and the common lawyers have laid so much stress as furnishing conclusive authority in their favor." U. S. v. Grush, 5 Mason, 290, 300.

II. A collection of individuals united for some common purpose.[1]

Where an indictment stated that the grand jury were "inquiring in and for the county of D," it was held sufficient without the words "for the body of the county." In this case the court, Cole, J., said: "The next objection seems to us equally untenable as the one we have just considered. It is that it does not appear from the indictment that the grand jury were sworn and charged as a grand jury to inquire for the body of the county of Dodge, or that they were a grand jury sworn to inquire for the body of the county. The caption recites that the grand jury were sworn and charged 'inquiring in and for the county of Dodge.' The words 'body of the county' are omitted. It is claimed that these words have a fixed legal meaning, importing or signifying the county at large, as distinguished from any particular locality within it, and that they cannot be supplied by intendment. The county of Dodge is a civil division or a portion of the State of Wisconsin, organized as a body politic and corporate for certain judicial and political purposes; and a statement in the caption of the indictment that the grand jury were sworn to inquire 'in and for the county' certainly implies that they were making inquisitions for the entire county and not for some portion of it. Our statute provides that no indictment shall be deemed invalid by reason of any defect or imperfection in matters of form which shall not prejudice the defendant (sec. 13, c. 179); and it must be obvious that the omission of the words 'body of the county' in the caption was, at most, the merest informality, which could have prejudiced no one." Fizell v. State, 25 Wis. 364.

Body of Water.—In construing the act, General Laws 1878, c. 48, § 1, as follows: "Timber logs and lumber lying in or upon any body of water in this State, outside the boundary or limits of any town therein, shall be taxed its full value in the town nearest and opposite such property," the court, Bingham, J., said: "A river has been defined as a natural stream of water flowing betwixt banks or walls in a bed of considerable depth and width, being so called whether its current sets always one way or flows and reflows with the tide (2 Bouvier L. Dict. 487), and as water flowing in a channel between banks more or less defined. Rex v. Orfordshire, 1 B. & Ad. 289; State v. Gilmanton, 14 N. H. 467, 478. A river is a body of water in an ordinary sense, and there is nothing to show that it is not a body of water within the meaning of the act of 1878." Berlin Mills Co. v. Wentworth's Location, 60 N. H. 156.

1. Body Corporate or Politic.—It has been held in New York that the provision in the constitution of that State requiring the assent of two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the legislature to every bill creating, continuing, altering, or renewing any body corporate or politic does not apply to public corporations; it applies solely to private corporations, such as banking institutions and the like. Therefore laws affecting public corporations, such as cities and villages, may be passed by mere majority votes. People v. Morris, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 325.

But associations organized under the General Banking Law, and in conformity with its provisions, are not "bodies politic and corporate" within the spirit and meaning of the constitution. Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 103.

In this last case Senator Verplanck said, p. 141: "What, then, is the strict definition of the phrase 'bodies politic and corporate'? . . . Strict and essential definitions can generally be given of the terms of positive jurisprudence, and particularly so in the extreme technical and artificial system of the ancient English law. This is remarkably the case, for instance, in regard to our common-law terms of real estate, as fee, lease, warranty, grant, covenant, reversion, remainder, etc., all of which are defined precisely and essentially, not explained by mere attributes. Bodies corporate belong to that system, and thence do we immediately derive them. What, then, is a body corporate? What is its necessary and essential meaning? 'It is called a body corporate,' says Lord Coke, 'because the persons composing it are made into one body.' 'It is only in abstracto, and rests only in contemplation of law.' 10 R. 50. So again he says, 1 Inst. 202, 250, 'persons capable of purchasing are of two sorts—persons natural created of God and persons created by the policy of man, as persons incorporated into a body politic.' If, leaving the quaint scholastic teaching of the father of English law, we come to the clearer and directer sense of our own Marshall, we find the same prevailing idea. 'A body corporate is an artificial being, invisible, intangible, existing only in contemplation of law. Being the creature of law, it possesses only the properties conferred upon it by its charter. Among the most important of these are immortality, and, if the expression may be allowed, individuality.' 4 Wh. R. 636, 1 Peters R. 46. Again: 'It is precisely what the act of incorporation makes it; derives all its powers from that act, and is capable of exerting its faculties only in the manner which that act authorizes.' 'Within the limits of the properties conferred by its charter it can,' says Blackstone, 'do all acts as natural persons may.' 'In corporations,' says Prof. Woodeson, 'individuals are invested by the law with a political character and personality wholly distinct from their natural capacity.' 'A corporation,' says Kyd on Corporations, 'is not a mere capacity, but a political person in which many capacities reside.' Thus, then, the essential legal definition that covers the whole ground and expresses the very essence of a body corporate is this: 'It is an artificial legal person, a succession of individuals, or an aggregate body considered by the law as a single continuous person, limited to one peculiar mode of action, and having power only of the kind and degree prescribed by the law which confers them.' Such is the established notion of our common law. Such, too, as far as I can trace it, is the doctrine of the modern civil law, as modified by the jurisprudence of the European continent. 'Communities that are lawfully established (i.e., corporations),' says Domat, one of the great teachers of the ante-revolutionary French civil law, 'are in the place of persons, and their union, which renders common all their interest, makes them to be considered as one single person.' Domat Civil Law, lib. 1, tit. 15. To the same effect a somewhat older Italian civilian speaks, Oldradus De Ponte, as quoted by Sir Robert Sawyer in his very able and learned argument in the case of the City of London, 8 St. Tr. 1175: 'Licet non habent veram personam, habent personam fictione juris.' So the older German jurisprudence, as founded on the Roman law, also held the idea of personality as essential to corporations. Heineccius, one of the most distinguished civilians in the last century, in his instructive essay on the legal history of the corporate guilds or societies of trade so common in Germany, speaks of this personality as an attribute of all corporations: 'Universitates et contrahere possunt et delinquere, quippe quae moraliter unam representant personam.' De Collegiis Opificum, in Germania, cap. 77, § 19. This doctrine of the modern civilians of France, Italy, and Germany may be traced up even to the jurists of the Code and Pandects. 'Personae vice fungitur municipium et decuria.' Pan. 1, 22, de fide jus. I do not cite the secivilians as direct authorities, but mainly to show how deeply and generally this pervading idea of legal personality and artificial individuality entered into and formed the characteristic of all corporate bodies in those systems of law which might indirectly affect or govern our own, or tend to influence even the popular use of our legal terms."

It has been held in Pennsylvania that a school district is not a body corporate within the meaning of the act of March 31, 1860, Criminal Code, § 118, making it a misdemeanor for a director, etc., to falsify papers, etc., of such body corporate, inasmuch as school districts are not strictly municipal corporations, having neither seal nor legislative powers,

BOGUS.—False; spurious; counterfeit.[1]

BOHEA.—A term of commerce, used in the expression "bohea tea." It is not usually a distinct and simple substance, but is a compound made up in China of various kinds of the lowest-priced black teas.[2] but, like counties and townships, are quasi-corporations. Com. v. Beamish, 81 Pa. St. 389.

BOILING.—A condition produced by heat.[3]

1. A note or order given by any one which is signed by himself does not come within the meaning of the words "false or bogus checks," as used in the Illinois criminal code (R. S. 1874, § 98, page 366) entitled "confidence game," as it is genuine. Any one taking either does so upon the faith of the signature alone. Pierce v. People, 81 Ill. 98.

2. In reversing a decree of forfeiture of certain teas imported and entered as bohea which, it was claimed by the United States, differed in quality from the entry, the court, Story, J., said: "The argument on behalf of the United States is that the two hundred chests of tea now in controversy are in reality simple congo tea, and not bohea; that the latter is pure and unmixed tea, entirely distinct from congo, and known in China by an appropriate name; that it is to this pure and unmixed bohea tea that the successive acts of Congress refer, and not to any other mixed tea, though known by the common denomination of 'bohea.' If we were to advert to scientific classifications for our guide on the present occasion, it is most manifest, from the works cited at the bar, that 'bohea' is a generic term, including under it all the black teas, and not merely a term indicating a specific kind. But it appears to us unnecessary to enter upon this inquiry, because, in our opinion, Congress must be understood to use the word in its known commercial sense. The object of the duty laws is to raise revenue, and for this purpose to class substances according to the general usage and known denominations of trade. Whether a particular article were designated by one name or another in the country of its origin, or whether it were a simple or mixed substance, was of no importance in the view of the legislature. It did not suppose our merchants to be naturalists or geologists or botanists. It applied its attention to the description of articles as they derived their appellations in our own markets, in our domestic as well as our foreign traffic. And it would have been as dangerous as useless to attempt any other classification than that derived from the actual business of human life. 'Bohea tea,' then, in the sense of all our revenue laws, means that article which, in the known usage of trade, has acquired that distinctive appellation. And even if the article has undergone some variations in quality or mixture during the intermediate period from 1789 to 1816, when the last act was passed, but still retains its old name, it must be presumed that Congress in this last act referred itself to the existing standard, and not to any scientific or antiquated standard. The true inquiry, therefore, is whether, in a commercial sense, the tea in question is known and bought, and sold and used, under the denomination of 'bohea' tea. We think the evidence on this point is altogether irresistible. It establishes that the 'bohea' tea of commerce is not usually a distinct and simple substance, but is a compound made up in China of various kinds of the lowest priced black teas, and the mixture is of higher or lower quality according to the existing state of the market. Indeed, from the uniformity of its price in the midst of great fluctuation in the prices of all other teas, it seems rather to indicate the lowest quality of black teas than any uniform compound. It is accordingly in proof that old congo teas are often sold as 'bohea,' and have sometimes been imported into our market under that denomination. In short, whenever black teas are deteriorated by age, or are of the lowest price, they are mixed up to form 'bohea' for the market, and are suited to the demand and wishes of the purchasers. It is not meant to affirm that there is no such simple and distinct tea known as 'bohea.' All that the evidence justifies us in saying is that this is not the common 'bohea' of commerce. The latter may or may not be a simple substance, according to circumstances. The generic name 'bohea' comprehending under it all the varieties of black teas, whenever they are at the cheapest price in the market, or are of a very inferior quality, or are mixed up for sale, they lose their specific names and sink into the common denomination." Two Hundred Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 430, 438.

3. Boiling Water.—Where a woman,

BOLT. (See also BAR.) Used in phrase "bar or bolt iron." [1]

BONA. (See also PURCHASE; SALES.)—Goods; property. In common law confined to movable property; a more comprehensive term, however, than goods as comprehending chattels, real as well as personal. The word also occurs in several phrases, for examples of which see the notes.[3] while her husband was asleep, under the influence of jealousy boiled a quart of water in a coffee-pot and poured it over his face and into one of his ears, and ran off boasting she had boiled him in his sleep, whereby the man was for a time deprived of his sight and permanently lost the hearing of one ear, it was held that boiling water is a "destructive matter within the 5th section of the stat. 1 Vict. c. 85, which imposes a penalty upon him 'whosoever shall cast, etc., upon any person any corrosive fluid or other destructive matter,'" and the woman was convicted of a felony under the statute. Regina v. Crawford, 2 Car. & K. 129; s. c., 1 Den. C. C. 100.

1. U. S. v. Sarchet, Gilpin (U.S.), 273.

2. Goods, Biens, "Bona," includes all chattels, as well real as personal. Chattels is a French word, and signifies goods, which by a word of art we call catalla. Now, goods or chattels are either personal or real. Personal, as horses and other beasts, household stuff and such like; called personal because for the most part they belong to the person of a man, or else for that they are to be recovered by personal actions. Real because they concern the realty, as terms for years of lands or tenements, etc. But by the common law no estate of inheritance or freehold is comprehended under these words bona or catalla. Co. Lit. 118, b.

3. Bona et Catalla.—Goods and chattels; movable property. This expression includes all personal things that belong to a man. Knight v. Barber, 16 Mee. & W. 66.

Bona Mobilia.—Where one devised all his goods, on the question whether a debt by bond passed to the devisee it was held by Lord Chancellor Cowper that it did; that these words seemed at common law to pass a bond, and to extend to all the personal estate; but this being in the case of a will—and a will relating to personal estate, too—it ought to be construed according to the rules of the civil law. Now the civil law makes bona mobilia and bona immobilia the membra dividentia of all estates: bona immobilia are lands; bona mobilia are all movables, which must extend to bonds: and therefore by the devise of all the testator's goods a bond must pass. Anon., 1 P. Wms. 267.

But bonds (as a species of choses in action) admit of no locality, and therefore a devise of goods and chattels in a particular place will not pass bonds which happen to be in that place at the death of the testator. Chapman v. Hart, 1 Vesey, 273.

Bona Fide.—In good faith; honestly; with sincerity; a Latin expression frequently used to denote that some one has acted or something has been done "in good faith" in ignorance of any right or claim of a third party. As examples of its use we have:

Bona Fide Purchaser.—This Wilson. C. J., defines as "one without notice of a prior lien or incumbrance." Robinson v. Rowan, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 499. And Hand, J., as "one who purchases for a valuable consideration paid or parted with, and in the belief that the vendor had a right to sell, and without any suspicious circumstances to put him upon inquiry." Merritt v. Northern R. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 605.

In Jewett v. Palmer, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 65, Kent, Ch., held that to support the plea of a "bona fide purchaser," without notice, the defendant must aver and prove not only that he had no notice of the plaintiff's rights before his purchase but that he had actually paid the purchase-money before such notice. See DeMott v. Starkey, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 403; Blight's Heirs v. Bank, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 192; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 137; Jackson v. McChesney, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 360; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 521.

So, when a party has obtained the legal title, if he has paid but a part of the consideration or value of the property he is entitled to be considered a "bona fide purchaser" pro tanto only. Peabody v. Fenton, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 498; Stalker v. McDonald, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 93; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 389; Pickett v. Barron, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 505.

A bona fide purchaser must have received his purchase upon some new consideration, or must have relinquished some security for a pre-existing debt due him. Webster v. Van Steenbergh, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 211.

In Alden v. Trabee, 44 Conn. 455,

Park, C. J., quotes Perry on Trusts, p. 218, as follows: "A 'bona fide purchaser' is defined to be one who, at the time of his purchase, advances a new consideration, surrenders some security, or does some other act which leaves him in a worse position if his purchase should be set aside." See Spicer v. Waters, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 227; Kimball v. Hutchins, 3 Conn. 450; Jackson v. Cadwell, 1 Cowen (N. Y.), 622; Root v. French, 13 Wend. 570.

The term "bona fide purchaser" is borrowed from equity jurisprudence, and must be interpreted accordingly; and it is well settled that a grantee or incumbrancer who does not advance anything at the time takes the interest conveyed subject to any prior equity attaching to the subject. Wood v. Robinson, 22 N. Y. 564.

A good consideration in a general sense is not sufficient. Weaver v. Borden, 49 N. Y. 286.

Neither is a past consideration—as a precedent debt—when there is no change in the debt, surrender of securities, or the like. Cary v. White, 52 N. Y. 138.

Mere security to pay the purchase-price is not a purchase for a valuable consideration. Hardingham v. Nicholls, 3 Atk. 304; Maundrell v. Maundrell, 10 Vesey, 246-271.

Nor is an executory consideration to be paid on performance in the future. Wormly v. Wormly, 8 Wheat. 421; Dixon v. Hill, 5 Mich. 404; Worms v. Whittaker, 6 Mich. 133; Blanchard v. Tyler, 12 Mich. 339; Stone v. Welling, 14 Mich. 514.

Value must be paid at the time on the faith of the purchase or the security. Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Smith, 2 Utah, 39, 52.

A bona fide purchaser of land for a valuable consideration without notice is one who is the purchaser of the legal title or estate; and a purchaser of a mere equitable estate is not embraced in the definition. Wailes v. Cooper, 24 Miss. 208.

Nor is an assignee in bankruptcy who takes only the estate which the bankrupt had; nor can a purchaser from the assignee who succeeds only to his interest claim the protection which is accorded in equity to a "bona fide purchaser." Smith v. Perry, 56 Ala. 266.

Where a Georgia statute on marriage settlements declared, "If any such instrument be not recorded within the time prescribed by this act, the same shall not be of any force or effect against a bona fide purchaser without notice, or bona fide creditor without notice, or bona fide surety without notice, who may purchase, or give credit, or become surety before the actual recording of the same" Cobb's Dig. 180, 1847, the court, Benning, J., said: "The purchaser, creditor, surety, are to be without notice, and also bona fide. They are to be something more, then, than mere real purchasers, creditors, sureties, without notice. They are also to be something to adapt them to the 'bona fide.' What is there, to be that additional thing, except this: that they are to purchase, give credit, become sureties, relying 'bona fide'—'in good faith'—on the property contained in the marriage settlement? We see nothing. Therefore, not to hold that this is what was meant by the words 'bona fide' would seem to be equivalent to rejecting those words, or, at least, equivalent to rendering them inoperative and useless." Cloud et al. v. Dupree, 28 Ga. 170.

So, under the Georgia Revised Code, section 3525, which provides that where claimants have bought lands, subject to the lien of a judgment bona fide and for a valuable consideration, and have been in possession thereof for four years before the levy of the fi. fa., the lien of the judgment is discharged. The court, Lochrane, C. J., held that the term bona fide in this statute meant one who in the commission or participation of no fraud pays a full price for property which he continuously and openly holds in possession for four years after the sale, and that his actual notice of an existing judgment against the vendor at the time of his purchase is not sufficient, per se, to charge him with fraud, so as to render his title impotent for his protection, when he otherwise stands within the provisions of the law. Sanders v. McAffee, 42 Ga. 250.

In affirming a judgment in favor of the defendant in an action for the recovery of purchase-money paid at an illegal tax sale, the court, Niblack, J., said: "Cooley in his work on Taxation, at p. 328, says: 'A tax sale is the culmination of proceedings which are matters of record; and it is a reasonable presumption of law that, where one acquires rights which depend upon matters of record, he first makes search of the record in order to ascertain whether anything shown thereby would diminish the value of such rights or tend in any contingency to defeat them.' A tax purchaser, consequently, cannot be in any strict technical sense a bona fide purchaser, as that term is understood in the law, because a bona fide purchaser is one who buys an apparently good title, without notice of anything calculated to impair or affect it; but the tax purchaser is always deemed to have such notice when the record shows defects. He cannot shut his eyes to what has been recorded for the information of all concerned, and, relying implicitly on the action of the officers, assume what they have done is legal because they have done it. It is, indeed, a presumption of law that official duty is performed, and this presumption stands for evidence in many cases; but the law never assumes the existence of jurisdictional facts, and throughout the tax proceedings the general rule is that the taking of any one important step is a jurisdictional prerequisite to the next; and it cannot therefore be assumed, because one is shown to have been taken, that the officer performed his duty in taking that which should have preceded it. These general principles, and the cases supporting them, have led many of the courts to hold, and we think correctly, that a purchaser at a tax sale comes strictly within the rule caveat emptor. Hamilton v. Valiant, 30 Ind. 139; Jenks v. Wright, 61 Pa. St. 410; People v. Auditor-General, 30 Mich. 12. If his title fails, he has no remedy against the officer who made the sale. Hamilton v. Valiant, 30 Ind. 139. Neither can he demand indemnity from the corporation for the benefit of which the sale was made. Lynde v. Melrose, 10 Allen (Mass.), 49. See also Stevens v. Williams, 70 Ind. 536." Worley v. The Town of Cicero (Sup. Ct. of Ind.), 9 Western Rep. 50.

The following are late cases showing various circumstances under which a vendee, etc., has been held to be a bona-fide purchaser: Barber v. Richardson, 57 Vt. 408; Puffer v. Reeve, 35 Hun (N. Y.), 480; Wailes v. Couch, 75 Ala. 134; Sadler v. Lewers, 42 Ark. 148; Andrews v. Cox, 42 Ark. 473; s. c., 48 Am. Repr. 68; Frank v. Ingalls, 41 Ohio St. 560; Curnie v. Rauh, 100 Ind. 247; Brausen v. Oregonian R., 11 Oregon, 161; Western Land & Cattle Co. v. Plumb, 27 Fed. Repr. 598; Bradley v. Whitney, 108 Pa. St. 362; Dias v. Chickering, 64 Md. 348; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 770; Kingsland Ferguson Mfg. Co. v. Culp, 85 Mo. 548; Hutchinson v. Oswald, 17 Ill. App. 28; Perkins v. Anderson, 65 Iowa, 398; McNeil v. Finnegan, 33 Minn. 375; Hollis v. Smith, 64 Tex. 280; Mason v. Black, 87 Mo. 329; Fish v. Benson (Cal.) 12 Pacific Repr. 454; Maybee v. Moore (Mo.), 2 S. Westn. Repr. 471; Briggs v. Hodgdon (Me.), 7 Atlantic Repr. 387; Bryant v. Buckner (Tex.), 2 S. Westn. Repr. 452; Pancake v. Cauffman (Pa.), 7 Atlantic Repr. 67; Lamoreaux v. Meyer (Wis.), 31 N. Westn. Repr. 331; Hanold v. Owen (Mich.), 31 N. Westn. Repr. 420; Chicago, etc., R. v. Hay (Ill.), 10 N. Eastn. Repr. 29; Phillips v. South Park Comm'rs (Ill.), 10 Eastn. Repr. 230; Word v. Box (Tex.), 3. S. Westn. Repr. 93; Cable v. Ellis (Ill.), 11 N. Eastn. Repr. 188; Rush v. Mitchell (Iowa), 32 N. Westn. Repr. 367; McAdow v. Black (Mont.), 13 Pacific Repr. 377; People's Savings Bank v. Bates, 7 Sup. Ct. Repr. 679; Campbell v. Indianapolis, etc., R. (Ind.), 11 N. Eastn. Repr. 482; Hagerman v. Sutton (Mo.), 4 S. Westn. Repr. 73; Garrison v. Crowell (Tex.), 4 S. Westn. Repr. 69; Hegenmyer v. Marks (Minn.), 32 N. Westn. Repr. 785.

Bona Fide Possessor.—In a Texan case where suit was brought for the recovery of land, and the defendant claimed compensation for improvements on the ground that he had honestly settled thereon through a mistake in the boundary-line and was therefore a bona fide possessor, the court, Hemphill, C. J., in refusing his claim because he had been notified by the plaintiff that he was improving on his land, but had taken no legal steps to ascertain the true boundaries, said: "Mr. Sedgwick, in his learned treatise on the Measure of Damages, defines a bona fide possessor to be one who not only supposes himself to be the true owner of the land, but who is ignorant that his title is contested by any person claiming a better right to it (2d Ed. p. 126). This definition is supported by the authority to which he refers, viz., Bright v. Boyd, 1 Story (U. S.), 478. But if it be construed to restrict the quality of good faith to cases only where the tenant is ignorant that his title is contested by one who claims the land under a better right, I apprehend that it does not embrace all the elements which may constitute good faith, and that it would fail to secure rights which our statutes intended to protect. No doubt the definition, so far as it goes, is sound, and that a possessor holds in good faith who is justifiably ignorant of the rights of the true owner. But he may also have good faith where he makes an innocent mistake in point of law; for instance, as to the construction of a demise, the due execution of a power, and the like, where, though aware of the opposing claim, he may have entered in full confidence of the validity of his title. Adams on Eq. p. 386, referring to B. N. P. p. 88. Of course, when the tenant is cognizant of the claims of another, he must have reasonable and strong grounds to believe in the soundness of his own title, otherwise he cannot claim as a holder in good faith." Sartain v. Hamilton, 12 Tex 219. See Houston v. Sneed, 15 Tex. 307; Saunder v. Wilson, 19 Tex. 194; Dorn v. Dunham, 24 Tex. 366; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; McLaughlin v. Barnum, 31 Md. 425; Morrison v. Robinson, 31 Pa. St. 456; Dormer v. Fortescue, 3 Atk. 124; Hicks v. Sallitt, 3 DeG. M. & G. 782, 813. 18 Jur. 915; The Lord Advocate v. Drysdale, L. R. 2 Sc. App. 368; Stuart v. Baldwin, 41 U. C. Q. B. 446.

Bona Fide Debts.—In construing the fourth clause of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, which was as follows: "It is agreed that creditors on either side shall meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery in the full value in sterling money of all bona fide debts,"—in a suit upon a bond dated 7th July, 1774, the court, Chace, J., said: "Of all bona fide debts, that is, debts of every species, kind, or nature, whether by mortgage, if a covenant therein for payment, or by judgments, specialties, or simple contracts. But the debts contemplated were to be bona fide debts, that is, bona fide contracted before the peace, and contracted with good faith, or honestly, and without covin, and not kept on foot fraudulently. Bona fide is a legal technical expression, and the law of Great Britain and this country has annexed a certain idea to it. It is a term used in statutes in England and in acts of Assembly of all the States, and signifies a thing done really, with a good faith, without fraud or deceit, or collusion or trust. The words bona fide are restrictive, for a debt may be for a valuable consideration and yet not bona fide. A debt must be bona fide at the time of its commencement or it never can become so afterwards. The words bona fide were not prefixed to describe the nature of the debt at the date of the treaty, but the nature of the debt at the time it was contracted." Ware v. Hilton, 3 Dallas (Pa.), 199, 241

Bona Fide Mistake.—Under Order XVI. rule 2, of the Rules of Court, 1875, as follows: "Where an action has been commenced in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff, or where it is doubtful whether it has been commenced in the name of the right plaintiff or plaintiffs, the court or judge may, if satisfied that it has been so commenced through a bona fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person or persons to be substituted or added as plaintiff or plaintiffs upon such terms as seem just,"—the court, Jessel, M. R., held that the words "bona fide mistake" included a mistake of law as well as of fact. Duckett v. Gover, L. R. 6 Ch. Div. 82.

Bona Fide Paid.—Where A agreed with B to build a house according to certain specifications on land then belonging to B, in consideration of which undertaking, and of an annual rent charge of 25s., a lease of the land for three lives was to be granted; and the house was built by A according to the specifications, at the cost of £85, whereupon the lease was granted,—the grant of the rent charge and the erection of the house on the land conveyed being together of the pecuniary value to the grantor at the time of the conveyance of more than £30,—it was held that A hereby acquired a settlement under the act 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5, as follows: "No person or persons shall be deemed, adjudged, or taken to acquire or gain any settlement in any parish or place for or by virtue of any purchase of any estate or interest in such parish or place whereof the consideration for such purchase doth not amount to the sum of £30 bona fide paid," etc.; the court, Wrightman, J., saying: "The consideration was the building a house that cost £85, and therefore, unless to satisfy the statute, nothing but a pecuniary consideration in the strict sense, and money value is not enough, our judgment must be for the respondents. The decision which seems most in point is The Overseers of Wendron v. The Overseers of Stithians, 4 E. & B. 147 (E. C. L. R. vol. 82), which was in effect that if the value of £30 had there been paid for the purchase of the lease, the statute would apply; if not, it would not; and the only question appears to have been, had there been a payment, either pecuniary, or by what was equivalent to pecuniary or was the consideration for the lease mere love and affection? It was taken for granted there that an equivalent to money would have sufficed; and may not the building the house, in this case, at the expense of £85, be fairly taken as an equivalent to that sum?" Queen v. Belford, 3 B. & S. 662.

BONDS. (See also ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS; ATTACHMENT; BAIL; INJUNCTION; MORTGAGES; MUNICIPAL AID BONDS; OFFICERS, MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; OFFICERS, PRIVATE CORPORATIONS; PRINCIPAL AND SURETY, etc.)

1. Bonds in General.—1. DEFINITION.—A bond is a sealed obligation to pay money, either absolutely or conditionally.[1]

1. Coke Litt. (a); Cautey v. Duren, Harper, 434; Taylor v. Glaser, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 502; Harman v. Harman, 1 Baldw. C. C. 129; Skinner v. McCarty, 2 Port. (Ala.) 19; Deming v. Bullitt, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 241; Denton v. Adams, 6 Vt. 40; Wood v. Willis, 110 Mass. 454; Hargroves v. Cooke, 15 Ga. 321; State v. Thomson, 49 Mo. 188; Gilbert v. Anthony. 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 69; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 439.

"However complicated may be the condition or contingency, and however alien from pecuniary considerations may seem the inducements to its execution, or the circumstances surrounding the parties, a bond will always be found to resolve itself into an obligation to pay money sooner or later, either absolutely or upon some condition, or on the happening of some future event." Murfree on Official Bonds, § 1; Bouvier's Law Dict. (12th Ed.) 212.

2. FORM AND CONTENTS OF BOND.—At common law a bond must be written, sealed, and delivered.[1] But no certain form is necessary. Any form of words in writing, under seal, acknowledging a debt and naming an obligee, is as obligating as the most formal writing.[2] The name of the obligor need not appear in the bond if it is signed and sealed by him.[3]

3. PARTIES.—(a) Obligor.—All persons sui juris who have sufficient capacity to contract,[5] not including femes covert, unless their

1. Gilbert v. Anthony, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 69; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 439.

A party who signs a bond impliedly waives defects in form. State v. Winfree, 12 La Ann. 643; Peshon v. Griggs, 4 Ark. 141; Phelps v. Call, 7 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 262.

2. Examples held binding: "I, A. B., have borrowed 10*l.* of C. D." See Sawyer v. Mawgridge, 11 Mod. 218; Watson v. Snaed, Vent. 238; Bedows' Case, 1 Leon. 25.

The clause in cujus rei is not necessary to constitute an instrument a bond in Arkansas. Dardenne v. Bennett, 4 Ark. 458.

The date of a bond is not essential. It may be erroneous without affecting the validity of the bond. Pierce v. Richardson, 37 N. H. 306; Fournier v. Cyr, 64 Me. 32.

A statutory bond must be conditioned and executed according to all the statutory requirements. Howard v. Brown, 21 Me. 385.

3. Pequawkett v. Mathes, 7 N. H. 230; Martin v. Dorch, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 479; Williams v. Greer, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 239; Campbell v. Campbell, Brayt. (Vt.) 38; Stone v. Wilson, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 203; Joyner v. Cooper, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 199; Fulton's Case, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 484; Bartley v. Yates, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 398; Smith v. Crooker, 5 Mass. 538; Beale v. Wilson, 4 Munf. (Va.) 380; Van Hook v. Barnett, 4 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 272; Blakey v. Blakey, 2 Dana (Ky.), 463.

In chancery the names of parties executing a bond need not be recited in the body of it in order to bind them. Keeton v. Spradling, 13 Mo. 321; Johnson v. Steamboat Lehigh, 13 Mo. 539.

4. Bond of Femes Covert.—By the common law, a married woman cannot during coverture bind herself by a bond. Lewis v. Lee, 3 B. & C. 291; Marshall v. Rutter, 8 T. R. 545. Her bond is ipso facto void. Bac. Abr., Obligations, "D." See Concord Bank v. Bellis, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 276.

All questions growing out of personal qualities and disabilities are governed by the law of the place where the act is done or contract made. 2 Kent's Com. 455; Walker v. Witters, 1 Doug. 6; Thompson v. Ketchum, 3 Simon, 44.

A statute diminishing the disabilities of a feme covert, or infant, to the same extent validates a bond executed by such person.

The United States enforces the common law as the law of the State in which the action originates. United States v. Gurlinghouse, 4 Benedict C. C. 194, 199. And consequently, where a person under disability is relieved therefrom by a State, the United States may contract with such person by means of an official bond, providing it falls within the terms of the relieving or enabling statute. United States v. Gurlinghouse, 4 Benedict C. C. 194, 199. See also United States v. Haurell, 4 Wash. C. C. 620; United States v. Tingey, 30 U. S. (5 Pet.) 115; United States v. Bradley, 35 U. S. (10 Pet.) 343; United States v. Linn, 40 U. S. (15 Pet.) 290; Tyler v. Hand, 48 U. S. (7 How.) 573; United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock. C. C. 96.

Sureties on Bond of a Feme Covert.—The bond of a married woman, though void at common law, is valid as against the sureties. "The general rule is that the extent of the liability of the surety is measured by that of the principal, but it is not of universal application, and exceptions to it may arise when the matter of defence, pleaded by the principal, is wholly of a personal character, as coverture or infancy. The coverture of the principal, at the time a note or bond is given, may be interposed as a bar to a recovery against her, but it alone cannot effect the discharge of the surety; the surety, in such case, standing, in a certain sense, as a principal promissor." Weed & Co. v. Maxwell, 63 Mo. 486; Smiley v. Head. 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 590; Foxworth v. Bullock. 44 Miss. 457; Stillwell v. Bertrand, 22 Ark. 375: Davis v. Statts, 43 Ind. 103; Jones v. Crosthwaite, 17 Iowa, 395; Kimball v. Newell, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 116.

Infants.—The bond of an infant is void at law, though he represent himself of age. Colcock v. Ferguson, 3 Desau. (S. Car.) 482; Conroe v. Birdsall, 1 John.

disability has been removed, infants, partners, persons non compos mentis, etc., and not being under duress at the time,[1] may bind themselves by a bond.

Cas. (N. Y.) 127. May be confirmed after coming of age, but must be by an instrument of as high authority as the bond. Baylis v. Dineley, 3 Maule & Selw. 477.

If an infant feme covert enter into a bond with a stranger who is under no disability, the stranger is bound although the bond is void as to the infant. Bac. Abr., Obligations, "D."

The law governing contracts of infants is not well settled. The rule laid down by Mr. Justice Story in United States v. Bainbridge, 1 Mason C. C. 71, 82, (citing Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Blackst. 511, is as follows: "Where the court can pronounce that the contract is for the benefit of the infant, as for necessaries, then it shall bind him; when it can pronounce it to be to her prejudice, it is void; and where this is of an uncertain nature, as to benefit or prejudice, it is voidable; and it is at the election of the infant to affirm it or not." See also The King v. Sheerfield, 14 East, 541; Zouch v. Parsons, 2 Burr. 1794; Burgess v. Merrill, 4 Taunt. 468.

Bastardy Bond.—An infant is bound upon a bastardy bond. "The statute also obliges an infant to indemnify the city, town, or county against the expenses of supporting his illegitimate child, and makes it necessary for him to enter into a bond with sureties, as the only means by which he can obtain a discharge from arrest (1 R. S. 645, §§ 14, 15), and I think the statute has given him a legal capacity to make a binding obligation." People v. Moores, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 518; McCall v. Parker, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 372; Garvin v. Beston, 8 Ind. 69.

Infants are bound by all acts which they are bound by law to do. Baker v. Lovett, 6 Mass. 80; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 88.

An infant may enter into a recognizance to answer a criminal charge, or become principal in a bail-bond (but not surety). State v. Weatherwax, 12 Kan. 462.

Bonds of Partners and Partnership.—It is a general rule of the common law that one partner cannot bind another by a bond or obligation under seal, even though the obligation be contracted in the ordinary course of partnership business. Snyder v. May, 19 Pa. St. 235; Henry Co. v. Gates, 26 Mo. 315; Remington v. Cummings, 5 Wis. 138; Cummings v. Parish, 39 Miss. 412. See also Hoskinson v. Elliot, 62 Pa. St. 393; McNaughten v. Partridge, 11 Ohio, 223; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 741.

Authority to execute such an instrument can only be given under seal, and the fact that the articles of copartnership are under seal does not authorize one partner to bind the other by an instrument under seal. Particular power for that purpose must be given. Harrison v. Jackson, 7 Term, 207, 210.

One partner may bind another by a bond by parol authority where both are present at the time of its execution and consent to the signing. Ball v. Dunsterville, 4 Term, 313; Williams v. Walsby, 4 Esp. 229; Brulton v. Burton, 1 Chitty, 707; Swan v. Stedman, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 548.

In many States this rule has been modified so as to permit partners who do not execute a bond to ratify it by parol, and authority to execute a bond or deed may be given in the same manner. Swan v Stedman, 4. Metc. (Mass.) 548; Johns v. Battin, 30 Pa. St. 84; Smith v. Kerr, 3 N. Y. 144; Gwin v. Rooker, 24 Mo. 291; Ely v. Hair, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 230; Crady v. Sheperd, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 400; Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513; s. c.. 5 Am. Dec. 286; Gram v. Seaton, 1 Hall (N.Y.), 262; Bond v. Aitkin, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 165; s.c., 40 Am. Dec. 550; McDonald v. Eggleston, 26 Vt. 154; Drumright v. Philpot, 16 Ga. 424; Russell v. Annable, 109 Mass. 72; Holbrook v. Chamberlins, 116 Mass. 155; Gunter v. Williams, 40 Ala. 561; Gibson v. Warden, 81 U. S. (14 Wall.) 244. See also Cunningham v. Lamar, 51 Ga. 574; Mann v. Ætna, etc., Co. 40 Wis. 549; Kasson v. Brocker, 47 Wis. 79; Williams v. Gillies, 75 N.Y. 197; Hawkins v. Nat. Bank, 1 Dill. C. C. 462.

Persons Non Compos Mentis.—The bond of a person who is non compos mentis is void. Gate v. Boen, 2 Stra. 1104; Long v. Whidden, 2 N. H. 435; Rice v. Peet, 11 John. 503; Emery v. Hoyt, 46 Ill. 258.

Intoxication.—A bond may be avoided because of excessive intoxication at time of execution. Cole v. Robins, Bull. N. S. 172; Gare v. Gibbins, 13 M. & W. 625. Compare Hyman v. Moore, 3 Jones L. (N. Car.) 416; Cummings v. Henry, 10 Ind. 109; Caulkins v. Fry, 35 Conn. 170; Wilson v. Bigger, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 111. But if the party retain the consideration after becoming sober he confirms the bond. Williams v. Inabnet, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 343; Guy v. McLean, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 47; Seymour v. Delancy, 3 Conn. 454; Mathews v. Borter, L. R. 8 Ex. 132; Joest v. Williams, 42 Ind. 565.

1. Duress of Persons.—A bond entered

(b) Obligee.—Any person, whether sui juris or not,[1] other than the obligor,[2] and having legal identity,[3] may become the obligee in a bond.

4. BLANKS.—A bond may be executed in blank and afterwards filled up, provided it be done by the express authority of the obligor; and the authority to fill blanks is also authority to redeliver the instrument.[4] But a bond written above the signature of a party without his express authority is void,[5] unless he afterward deliver it or adopt it.

into while the obligor is restrained of his liberty, running to the person who caused the restraint, may be avoided for duress of imprisonment. Thompson v. Lockwood, 15 John. (N. Y.) 256; Gonenor v. Williams, Dudley (Ga.), 424; Eddy v. Herrin, 17 Me. 338.

A bond executed through fear of unlawful imprisonment may be avoided on account of duress. Whitefield v. Longfellow, 13 Me. 146.

A joint obligor cannot take advantage of the fact that his co-obligor executed the bond while under duress. Spaulding v. Crawford, 27 Tex. 155.

A bond variant from that prescribed by law, extorted from the principal obligor and his sureties, under color of office, as the condition of his remaining in office, is void. United States v. Tingey, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 129. See also Woolwich v. Forest, 2 N. J. L. 118.

A bond given to obtain discharge from an unlawful imprisonment is void. Bowker v. Lowell, 41 Me. 429.

Duress of Goods.—Under some circumstances a bond may be avoided for duress of goods. Collins v. Westbury, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 211; Sasportos v. Jennings, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 470; Sparets v. Barrett, 57 Ill. 289; s. c., 11 Am. R. 10. See Skeats v. Beal, 11 Ad & El. 983; Alte v. Backhouse, 3 Mees. & W. 650; Nelson v. Suddarth, 1 Hen. & Munf. (Va.) 350; Foshay v. Ferguson, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 158. See Giddy v. S., 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 476.

1. An infant, an idiot, or a feme covert may be the obligee in a bond; also an alien, "for since he is allowed to trade with us, it is but reasonable to give him the necessary security for his contracts." Co. Litt. 129, B; Wells v. Williams, 1 Ld. Raymond, 228.

2. A person cannot be bound to himself. Smith v. Lasher, 5 Conn. 688, 909. Even in connection with others. Davis v, Somerville, 4 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 382; Justices v. Bonner, 3 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 289. Compare Daniel v. Crooks, 3 Dana (Ky.), 64.

3. At common law a feme covert can be neither obligor nor obligee to her husband, they being but one person. Bac. Abr., Obligations, "D."

A bond given by a man to his intended wife before marriage, conditioned to pay money to her after his death, is not extinguished by coverture. Such bonds may be enforced against the heirs of the husband. Coge v. Acton, 1 Ld. Raymond, 515; Millbourn v. Ewart, 5 T. R. 381.

A bond to a municipal corporation, made payable to the mayor, alderman, and commonalty agreeable to statute, is valid, although the corporate name is "the mayor and commonalty." Fowle v. Common Council, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 398. See Tevis v. Randall, 6 Cal. 632.

A bond to the President of the United States and his successors is not a compliance with a statute requiring a bond to be given to the United States. The acceptance of such bond by the proper judge is not an acceptance by the United States. Jackson v. Simonton, 4 Cranch C. C. 255.

A deputy sheriff, appointed by a decree in chancery to sell certain property, may take a bond for the purchase money running to himself as deputy sheriff. Leavitt v. Goggin, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 229.

4. Gibbs v. Frost, 4 Ala. 720.

Where a judgment debtor went with his proposed sureties to the clerk's office for the purpose of executing a supersedeas bond in order to obtain a writ of error, and executed it in blank and instructed the clerk to fill up the form, the direction was held to be an express authority on the part of the sureties as well as the principal. Gibbs v. Frost, 4 Ala. 720. See Bell v. Keefe, 13 La. Ann. 524; Spencer v. Buchanan, Wright (Ohio), 583; Newhen v. Beard, 6 W. Va. 110.

5. Gilbert v. Anthony, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 69; Perminter v. McDaniels, 1 Hill (S. Car.), 267; Byers v. McClanahan, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 250; Boyd v. Boyd, 2 Not. & M. (S. Car.) 125; Ayers v. Harness, 1 Ohio, 368; —— v. Governor, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 149. Compare Wiley v. Moore, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 438. See, generally, Sigfried v. Levar, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 308;

When blank spaces are left to be filled after execution, the consent of the party executing that they shall be afterwards filled is to be implied.[1]

A person taking a bond in blank must prove the authority to fill it up and deliver it, and the slightest unauthorized alteration avoids it.[2] And this is a question of fact for the jury.[3]

But it has been held that a redelivery must be an act equal to the making of a new bond.[4]

The general rule is that a bond with the name of the obligee left blank is void unless afterwards filled in by express authority, and such authority cannot be given by parol.[5]

Franklin Bank v. Bartlett, Wright (Ohio), 742; Bartlett v. Board, 59 Ill. 364.

1. Wiley v. Moore, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 438; Smith v. Crooker, 5 Mass. 538; Duncan v. Hodges, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 239; Jordan v. Neilson, 2 Wash. (Va.) 164; Boardman v. Gore, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 517; Bank v. Curry, 2 Dana (Ky.), 142.

2. C. v. Hastings, 5 Harr. (Del.) 408; Church v. Noble, 24 Ill. 291; People v. Organ, 27 Ill. 27; Graham v. Halt, 3 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 300.

3. Richmond Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 412.

But it has been held that where a party, with the intention of entering into an obligation, signs the paper in blank entirely, there is an implied authority to any holder to fill it up, and that the name of a new obligor might be inserted without vitiating it, especially if the first signer is intended to be only a surety. Comeo Bank v. McCord, 4 Dana (Ky.), 491.

When a bond is executed in blank and given to a co-obligor to use, he may fill the blank with the amount. Spencer v. Buchanan, Wright (Ohio), 583.

4. So held where an obligor asked to see a paper signed by him in blank, and upon seeing it said: "There is my note —there it is," handed it back to the custodian after taking a memorandum of it. These circumstances were held to constitute neither an acknowledgment nor a redelivery such as would bind him. McNutt v. McMann, 1 Head (Tenn.), 98, citing Turbeville v. Ryan, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 113; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 622; Smith v. Dickinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 261; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 306; Mosby v. Arkansas, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 324.

5. Upton v. Archer, 41 Cal. 85; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 266; Barden v. Southerland, 70 N. Car. 128; Sacra v. Hudson, 59 Tex. 207.

In Preston v. Hall, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 600, decided in 1873. the question was squarely raised. M., as principal, and P., as surety, signed and sealed a bond to pay to —— $600. M. borrowed the money from H., and inserted his name in the bond and delivered it to him. The debt was not paid on maturity, and upon suit being brought P. pleaded non est factum. The court said: "A bond is a deed whereby the obligor promises to pay a certain sum of money to another at a day appointed. An obligor and obligee are essential to the existence and constitution of such an instrument. It is not indispensable that the party to whom the promise is made should be mentioned ad nomine—that his name at baptism and surname should be given; but he must be in some unmistakable manner designated in the instrument. A writing, though executed with all the solemnities of a deed, without such an obligee is a mere nullity. It imposes no obligation upon the party issuing it; it imposes no rights upon him who receives or holds it. It is not simply an imperfect deed; it is no deed at all. It only becomes a deed when the name of the obligee is inserted and delivery made by the obligor or some one legally authorized by him. His act binds a principal not before bound; it creates a contract having no previous existence. It is followed by all the consequences resulting from the execution of the most solemn instrument. . . . The stream can never be higher than its source. If the act of the agent is the execution and delivery of a deed, his authority must be by deed. It does not matter how much of the instrument may have been written by the principal, it is a mere nullity when it leaves his hands, and only becomes operative by act of the agent. Upon every principle of sound legal reasoning the result must inevitably be the same. Whenever the agent undertakes to bind his principal by an act, his authority must be coequal with the act." The court asks: "If the name of the obligee may be inserted, why may not the sum also; and if these may be sup

A bond with blanks for the amount and name of the obligor is not made valid by part payment.[1]

5. CONSIDERATION.—At common law, want of consideration was no defence to an action on a sealed instrument. The seal created a conclusive presumption of consideration.[2] But in some States this plied, why not the mere formal parts of the deed? If we once depart from the rule, how is the line to be drawn consistently with the preservation of any rule at all? If we say that the name or sum may be inserted by the agent, will it not lead us inevitably to the doctrine that the entire deed may be executed by the agent also?"

Conflicting Decisions — Missouri. — In Field v. Stagg, 52 Mo. 534 (citing Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (69 U. S.) 24; Burnsides v. Wrayman, 49 Mo. 365), the question presented by the record was "whether a deed regularly executed in other respects, with blank left therein for the name of the grantee, and placed in that condition in the hands of a third party, with verbal authority (but no authority under seal) from the person who executed it to fill up the blanks in his absence, and deliver the deed to the person whose name should be inserted as grantee, and when said deed was so filled up and delivered, whether the same was valid." The court held that the deed was valid, quoting the language of Mr. Justice Nelson in Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (69 U. S.) 24: "Although it was at one time doubted whether a parol authority was adequate to authorize an alteration or addition to a sealed instrument, the better opinion at this day is that the power is sufficient."

In Massachusetts.—The power of an agent acting under a parol authority is limited to making immaterial alterations in a sealed instrument. Such alterations will not invalidate, if not fraudulent, though made by the party claiming under it. But the court said: "The case is not within those in which it is held that blanks in a deed constituting a material part of the instrument itself cannot, in the absence of the maker, be filled by parol authority, because authority to make a deed must be given by deed." Vose v. Dolan, 108 Mass. 158; Brown v. Pinkham, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 172; Commonwealth v. Emigrant Sav. Bank, 98 Mass. 12; Chessman v. Whittemore, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 231; Adams v. Frye, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 103.

In Maryland.—It is held that "the name is a material part of the deed, and delivery in blank is an insufficient delivery unless recognized after the blank is filled. This is the general principle. There are some exceptions to it, but none of them applicable to the case before us." Edelin v. Sanders, 8 Md. 118, 387.

In Wisconsin.—A case where a note and mortgage, with blanks for names of payee and mortgagee, was given to an agent with parol authority to borrow money and fill the blanks. The court held the authority sufficient, and said: "The great weight of authority undoubtedly is that effect will be given to the plain intention of the parties notwithstanding the instrument may be under seal, and notwithstanding the rules of the early common law with respect to the execution and delivery of such instruments. If it be manifest that it was the intention of the party by whom the instrument was executed, at the time of the execution, that the name of the payee or mortgagee should be afterwards supplied and written in by the person to whom the instrument was delivered, then the rule of law is that the name may be so supplied and written in, and complete effect given to the instrument according to such intention." Van Etta v. Evenson, 28 Wis. 33, 38; Vliet v. Camp, 13 Wis. 221.

In Tennessee.—A constable's bond with blanks for name of constable and fact of his election was held valid. "The record shows that the bond of the constable was acknowledged in open court, and his oath of office is indorsement on the same, and he has been inducted into office on the faith of it. Having received the money by virtue of this bond, it is now too late to object to a mere verbal defect in it. The matter of the blanks thus filled up was not probably material anyway, as we think a recovery could well be had on the bond (which was otherwise complete) by proper averments, even if the blanks had never been filled." Rader v. Davis, 69 Tenn. (5 Lea) 536

1. Barden v. Southerland, 70 N. Car. 528.

2. Vrooman v. Phelps, 2 John. (N. Y.) 177; Dorr v. Munsell, 13 John. (N. Y.) 430; Lester v. Sachary, 1 Law R. (N. Car.) 380; Roper v. Stone, Cooke (Tenn.), 499; Cross v. Gobean, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 213; Guy v. McLean, 1 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 46; Cayle v. Fowler, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 473; Holdridge v. Allen, 2 Root (Conn.), rule has been relaxed and the presumption may be overcome by sufficient evidence of want of consideration.[1] It is always competent to show that the consideration for a bond is illegal, immoral, or against the policy of the law.[2] No consideration need 139; Harrell v. Watson, 63 N. Car. 454; Parker v. Flora, 63 N. Car. 474; Harris v. Harris, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 737.

1 McCarthy v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461.

A bond given in 1865 for the hire of slaves during that year is not subject to reduction owing to failure of consideration. Woodfin v. Suder, Phil. L. (N. Car.) 200; Mathew v. Dunbar, 3 W. Va. 138.

It is no consideration for a bond that it was taken for the cancelling of a deed of real estate given in payment of a former bond for which there was no consideration. McDaniels v. Grace, 15 Ark. 465.

An agreement by a State to locate the capital at a certain city provided the inhabitants would give their bond to raise a certain sum of money is a good consideration for such bond. Carpenter v. Mather, 4 Ill. 374.

An order of court, and issuance of a writ of supersedeas in accordance therewith, on condition that the party execute a bond, is a good consideration for such bond. Bosley v. Bruner, 24 Miss. 427.

If a note is given by A to B as the consideration of a bond from B to A, and before the note matures the bond is assigned to C, B cannot set up want of consideration. Cornish v. Bryan, 10 N. J. Eq. 146.

2. A bond given to a woman as a premium in consideration of future cohabitation is void. Trovinger v. McBurney, 5 Cow. (N.Y.) 253; Lady Cox's Case, 3 P. Wms. 339; Walker v. Perkins, Burr. 1568; Walker v. Gregory, 36 Ala. 180; Singleton v. Bramer, Harper (S. Car.), 108. Otherwise if the bond be given in consideration of past cohabitation. See Howel v. Fountain, 3 Ga. 176; Winnebeimer v. Weisiger, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 35; Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 John. Ch. L. 329; Given v. Driggs, 1 Cai. (N. Y) 450. Although the obligor be a married man during the period of cohabitation. Nye v. Mosby, 6 Barn. & C. 133; Lady Cox's Case, 3 P. Wms. 339. So a bond for the support of the mother of an illegitimate child and the child, is good. Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Brua v. Lee. 4 John. (N. Y.) 411; Trustees v. Gallatin, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 340; Morton v. Fletcher, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 138.

Void because of Illegal Consideration. —Bonds given for money won at play. Davidson v. Givins, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 200; Jones v. Jones, Yerm. (N. Car.) 110. For the price of tickets in an authorized lottery. Morton v. Fletcher, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 138. Bond for money to be given for the sale of an office concerning the administration of justice. Davis v. Hull, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 9; Lewis v. Knox, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 1453. To indemnify an officer for permitting an escape. Lawery v. Barney, 2 D. Chip. (Vt) 11. To induce an officer to perform his duty. Mitchell v. Vance, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 529. To indemnify an officer for not returning an execution. Greenwood v. Colcock, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 67.

A bond given an officer in consideration of an act that he had no legal authority to do. Moore v. Allen, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 621; Anderson v. Farns, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 343; s. p., Sampton v. Taylor, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 273; Marsh v. Gould, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 285.

To suppress a prosecution for malicious mischief. Cameron v. McFarland, 2 Car. L. Rep. 415.

A bond given in consideration of an obligee's withdrawing opposition to an insolvent debtor's discharge. Bruce v. Lee, 4 John. (N. Y.) 411; Uxbury v. Miller, 19 John. L. 311; Goodwin v. Blake, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 106. But see Price v. Summers, 5 N. J. L. 253.

A bond exacted by an officer when he had no authority to require it is void. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251.

An involuntary bond to procure prison liberties is void. Kavanaugh v. Saunders, 8 Me. 422.

A bond to indemnify a person who signs a draft made in violation of law is void. Hayden v. Davis, 3 McL. (U.S.) 276.

A bond executed in Michigan which relates to a New York transaction, void by the law of that State, is void. Hayden v. Davis, 3 McLean, (U. S.), 276.

A bond which shows an illegal consideration is void. Greathouse v. Dunlop, 3 McLean, (U. S.), 303.

A bond given to a constable to induce him to sell exempt property is void. Renfro v. Heard, 14 Ala. 23; s. p., Buffendean v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 641.

A bond given in accordance with an unconstitutional requirement of a statute is without consideration and void. Byers v. State, 20 Ind. 47; Cassel v. Scott, 17 Ind. 514.

pass between the obligee of a bond and the surety; the consideration which supports principal will support the surety.[1]

6. SEAL AND SIGNATURE.—At common law there cannot be a valid bond without a seal. The term "bond," or "obligation," or "writing obligatory," ex vi termini imports a sealed instrument.[2] The seal distinguishes a bond from an ordinary written contract, and imparts to it the presumption of a valid consideration.[3] The

A bond for ease and favor is void. To constitute such bond it must be given to the officer who makes the arrest as obligee. Kavanaugh v. Saunders, 8 Me. 422; Winthrop v. Dockerdorff, 3 Me. 156; Baker v. Haley, 5 Me. 240; Morse v. Hodsdon, 5 Mass. 317; Clap v. Cofran, 7 Mass. 101; Clasen v. Shaw, 5 Watts (Pa.). 468.

A bond conditioned that the obligee will not appear as prosecutor or as a witness against defendant in a criminal proceeding is null and void. Vanover v. Thompson, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 436; s.p., Gray v. Seigler, 2 Strobh. (S. Car.) 117.

A bond given as a pretext to enable one person to claim the property of another so as to defraud the creditors of that other is void even between the parties. Powell v. Minor, 8 Jones L. (N. Car.) 436; s. p., Goudy v. Gebhart, 1 Ohio St. 262.

A bond taken by the bank of the State of South Carolina is not illegal because not secured by mortgage. Bank v. Hammond, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 281.

A bond given by an infant to his father in consideration of permission to leave home is not valid. Geist v. Geist, 2 Pa. St. 441.

Prior to Va. act of 1792, a bond to a deputy sheriff in consideration of purchase of the benefit of his office was not legal. Noel v. Fisher, 3 Call (Va.), 215.

Against Public Policy.—Bonds in restraint of trade are void; as, not to carry on or be concerned in the business of founding iron. Alger v. Thaleton, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 51. That vendor or his assigns will not sell marl on adjoining lands. Brewer v. Marshall, 19 N. J. Eq., 537. Otherwise if the condition be not to trade within certain reasonable limits. McClurg's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 51; Noble v. Bates, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 307; Reese v. Hendricks, 1 Leg. Gaz. R. (Pa.) 79; Thompson v. Means, 19 Miss. 604. As, not to engage in business within sixty miles of Calais. Whitney v. Slayton, 40 Me. 224.

The rule that contracts in restraint of trade are void does not apply at a time when the policy of the law is to impose restrictions on trade and commerce; thus an embargo bond, made while the embargo laws were in force, would be binding as a common-law bond. Dixon v. United States, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 177.

A bond executed for the purpose of securing the creditors of the obligor is invalid and cannot be enforced as a voluntary bond. Lequeux v. Oliver, 3 Desau. (S. Car.) 535.

A bond given to a third party for the purpose of influencing the action of an alderman in the discharge of his duties is void. Cook v. Shipman, 24 Ill. 614.

A bond given by a debtor to induce a creditor to sign a release is voidable. McFarland v. Garber, 10 Ind. 157.

A bond not to sell intoxicating liquors within the limits of a town is not void as in restraint of trade, because the course of legislation shows that the settled policy of the law is to discourage such traffic. Harrison v. Lockhart, 25 Ind. 112.

A bond given for her support to a married woman who was separated from her husband, by her brother, is not invalid as being in contravention of good morals and tending to impair the obligation of the marriage covenant. Farnum v. Bartlett, 52 Me. 570.

A bond given by a sheriff to his deputy to pay the sheriff more than the statutory portion of the fees is invalid. Farrar v. Burton, 5 Mass. 395.

A bond taken in the name of the commissioners of highways of a town, virtute officii, for the benefit of the town in its corporate capacity, intended to relieve the taxable inhabitants from the payment of a tax for a public improvement, is illegal as against the general policy of the law. Webb v. Albertson, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 57.

1. Robinson v. Finley, 31 Mo. 384.

2. Cauty v. Duren, Harper (S. Car.), 334; Tayler v. Glaser, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 502; Denton v. Adams, 6 Vt. 40; Denning v. Bullett, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 241; Skinner v. McCarty, 2 Port. (Ala.) 19; Harmon v. Harmon, 1 Baldw. (C. C.) 129.

3. Harrel v. Watson, 63 N. Car. 454; Parker v. Flora, 66 N. Car. 474; Page v. Frufaut, 2 Mass. 159; s. c., 3 Am. Dec. 41; Dorr v. Munsell, 13 John. (N. Y.) 430; Harris v. Harris, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 737.

mere attaching of a seal or scroll after the signature to an instrument will not, without some recital in the body of the instrument, make it a writing under seal; nor are the words "witness my hand and seal" in a printed blank sufficient.[1]

By a seal was meant an impression upon wax, or wafer, or some other tenacious matter capable of receiving an impression.[2] In some of the United States an impression on the paper,[3] or a mere scroll, or "scroll by way of seal," is sufficient.[4] In some States no seal is required.[5] Several obligors may adopt one seal or scroll.[6] The seal, or signature, is what fixes the liability of the obligor.

1. Brooks v. Kiser, 69 Ga. 762. As to seal generally, see State v. Thompson, 49 Mo. 188; Turner v. Field, 44 Mo. 382; Pease v. Lawson, 33 Mo. 36.

2. Warren v. Lynch, 5 John. (N. Y.) 239; Coit v. Milligan, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 376.

3. Allen v. Sullivan R., 32 N. H. 446.

4. Throsher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234, 246; Force v. Craig, 2 Halst. (N. J.) 272; Jones v. Sorgwood, 1 Wash. (Va.) 42; Alexander v. Jameson, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 238; Vaublaricum v. Yeo, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 322; Hardin v. Webster, 29 Ga. 427; Pease v. Lawson, 33 Mo. 35.

The word "seal" printed between brackets on an attachment bond and adopted by the parties as their seal or scroll is a sufficient sealing of the instrument. Underwood v. Dallins, 47 Mo. 259; Ralph v. Gist, 4 McCord (S. Car.), 267.

5. Mich. Comp. Laws, § 4550, give to an unsealed instrument all the force and effect of a sealed instrument. McKinney v. Miller, 19 Mich. 142; Fish v. Brown, 17 Conn. 343.

By statute of 1838, Tenn. (Act of 1850, ch. 20, § 1, code, 1804), under this statute abolishing private seals, a bond is a deed, signed and delivered.

In Alabama an instrument purporting on its face to be sealed and duly signed is sealed although the actual seal is omitted. Bancroft v. Stanton, 7 Ala. 351.

In Illinois the absence of the actual seal or scroll is not cured by the words "sealed with my seal," etc., in the instrument. Chilton v. People, 66 Ill. 501; s. p., State v. Humbird, 54 Md. 327.

A bond without a seal has been held good by the supreme court of the United States. United States v. L——, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 290, 315. See Harmon v. Harmon, 1 Baldw. C. C. 129, 131.

By statute 1812, all instruments for payment of money, or for the performance of any act or duty, are placed on the same footing as other sealed instruments containing like conditions. Hughes v. Park, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 60; Handley v. Rankin, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 556

In Redwood v. Tower, 28 Minn. 45, 48, where the question was upon the effect of a paper purporting to be a bond, but which was without seals, the court said: "The instrument attached to the complaint is in the form of a bond, but it has no seal of any of the parties executing it. It is therefore not a bond. The statute requires a bond (Gen. Stat. 1878, ch. 8, § 145). But that there must be a seal to a bond is a mere technical requirement—a thing which does not affect the substance of the instrument; and we think that where parties assume to comply with the statute in such a case, it does not lie with them to object that they have omitted some mere matter of form. The substance of the instrument being what the statute requires, they ought not to be permitted to say that by reason of their neglect in matter of form it does not come under the technical designation given by statute. The liability of defendants on it is the same as though it had a seal." "All very reasonable and sensible, but nevertheless a trifle legislative," is Mr. Murfree's comment on this decision. Official Bonds, § 7. "The world is outgrowing the observance of the days when men used seals because they could not write their names; and the special obligations attaching to sealed instruments are gradually giving way under the influence of reason and commonsense. In this case, however, the judiciary is a little ahead of the legislature." Murfree on Official Bonds, § 7.

6. Hullis v. Pond, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 222; Martin v. Dorth, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 479.

A bond signed by "A [L. s.] for B, C, D." is sufficiently executed as the bond of B, C, and D, although one seal is used. Martin v. Dorth, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 479. But a bond signed in the name of a

7. EXECUTION.—There can be no objection to the manner or form in which an obligor makes his signature to a bond, provided it appears that he made it for the purpose of binding himself.[1] It is not necessary that the party should himself write his name and affix his seal, if he afterwards acknowledge it to be his act and deed.[2] But he is not bound by a bond to which his name was obtained by fraud or misrepresentation,[3] although the obligee was not aware of the fraud.[4]

An instrument purporting to be the joint bond of a principal and sureties, but signed by the latter only, is invalid,[5] as it is presumed that each undertook to become liable only if the other did.[6] But where two persons execute a bond, one as principal and the other as surety, they are equally bound to the obligee,[7] firm with one seal only is the bond of the one partner only. Bulton v. Thompson, Wright (Ohio), 93; Russell v. Annable, 109 Mass. 72.

By signing a bond which contains the usual allegation "signed with our seals," after it has been already signed by one or more obligors without affixing a new seal, a subsequent obligor adopts the seal already affixed. Pequawkett v. Waiters, 7 N. H. 230; Northumberland v. Cobleigh, 59 N. H. 250.

The onus is on the plaintiff to show that the party adopted the seal. Hullis v. Pond, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 222.

1. Hinsaman v. Hinsaman, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 510.

The fact that a man seals and delivers a bond as his in which he is named as surety, with the intent to become a party to it, is sufficient to justify a verdict that it is his bond, although his name is signed in the proper place for a witness. Richardson v. Boynton, 12 Allen (Mass.), 138. See also Algenbright v. Campbell, 3 Hen. & Mun. (Va.) 144.

So where the party signs in the space between the penal part of the bond and the condition. Reed v. Drake, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 345; Fournier v. Cyr, 64 Me. 35.

2. Hill v. Scales, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 401; Delins v. Cawthorne, 2 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 90; Rhode v. Louthain, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 413; Mayer v. Hutchinson, 7 Ill. 265; Ingraham v. Edwards, 64 Ill. 526.

Acknowledging his signature on being inquired of without intimating that he had not considered himself bound is sufficient to bind the party so signing and sealing. Byers v. McClanahan, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 250. See Manpin v. Whiting, 1 Call (Va.), 224.

A witness need not see the party sign; it is sufficient if he acknowledge it in the presence of the witness. Pequawkett v. Mathes, 7 N. H. 230; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 737.

When the name of a party appears in the body of a bond, but is not subscribed to it, he cannot be held to have executed the bond by adopting the name in the body of the bond as a signing of it, although the name is written there by him. Wildcat Branch v. Ball, 45 Ind. 213.

3. Green v. North Buffalo Township, 56 Pa. St. 110. See Williams v. Inabet, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 343. (Intoxicated.)

4. Sceiler Co. v. Copley, 5 Ohio St. 256. See Spaulding v. Crawford, 27 Tex. 155.

Where a bond is executed jointly and severally by three persons, and an alteration is made in it by consent of two in the absence of the third, and the obligee afterwards erases the signature and seal of the third without the consent of the others, the bond is void. Lane v. Shoape, Walk. (Ala.) 508; Dewey v. Bradbury, 1 Tyler (Vt.), 186.

5. Cutter v. Whittemore, 10 Mass. 442; Adams v. Bean, 12 Mass. 139; Wood v. Washburn, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 24; Sacramento v. Dunlop, 14 Cal. 421.

6. Sacramento v. Dunlop, 14 Cal. 421. See Sharp v. United States, 4 Watts (Pa.). 21; Hoskins v. Lombard, 16 Me. 140; Dair v. United States, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 1; Johnson v. Weatherwax, 9 Kans. 75; Loen v. Stocker, 68 Pa. St. 226; People v. Kneeland, 31 Cal. 288.

7. Wilson v. Campbell, 2 Ill. 493.

Where a bond is written as if two sureties were to execute it and one only does so, it will not bind him unless it be proved that he dispensed with the execution by the other. Sharp v. United States, 4 Watts (Pa.), 21; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 676.

A bond executed by the sureties only, and not by the party named as principal, does not bind the sureties. Wood v. Washburn, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 24; Bean v. Parker, 17 Mass. 591.

A bond executed by nine persons, on certain conditions and terms, and after-although the parties signed at different times before delivery and not in the presence of each other.[1] A bond may be executed by an attorney lawfully authorized under seal.[2] The authorized act of such an attorney can be ratified only by an instrument under seal.[3]

8. DELIVERY.—Delivery is essential to the validity of a bond.[4] No general definition of delivery can be given ;[5] it is a question of intention, which must be that the instrument shall be operative.[6]

wards delivered by five of them without the consent of the other four, does not bind the latter. Levett v. Adams, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 380.

Where it appears in the body of the bond that it was contemplated by the parties that several should sign it, and only one signs and seals it, annexing a condition that it shall not be binding upon him unless executed by the others, he will not be bound without their execution; but if he make no such condition he will be bound, though it is not executed by the others. Hoskins v. Lombard, 16 Me. 140.

A bond appearing to be duly executed by all whose names appear in it, and perfect upon its face, delivered by the several obligors without stipulation, reservation,or condition, cannot be avoided by the sureties, on the ground that they signed it only on the condition that it should not be delivered unless it should be executed by other persons, who did not execute it, when it appears that the obligee had no notice of such condition, and nothing to put him upon inquiry as to the manner of execution, and also that he was induced upon the faith of such bonds to act to his own prejudice. State v. Beck. 53 Me, 284.

Under the laws of Kentucky, a surety in a judgment debt who signed a bond by which the judgment was replevied is a principal in such bond. Miliken v. Dinning. 6 Bush (Ky.), 646.

1. Rundell v. La Fleur, 6 Allen (Mass.), 480.

2. McCordish v. Hopkins, 6 Call (Va.), 208; Delins v. Cawthorne, 2 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 90; McNutt v. McMahon, 1 Head (Tenn.), 98.

In the absence of proof to the contrary, a power of attorney to execute a bond will be presumed to have been executed on the day of its date. Roger v. Hutchinson, 7 Ill. 265.

3. Ingraham v. Edwards, 64 Ill. 526.

4. Wildcat Branch v. Ball, 45 Ind. 213; McPherson v. Meek, 30 Mo. 345; Stone v. Myers, 9 Minn. 303; Fournier v. Cyr, 64 Mo. 32.

As to what constitutes delivery, see Ward's Appeal, 35 Conn. 161.

A bond signed on Sunday and delivered on Monday is valid. Commonwealth v. Kerdig, 2 Pa. St. 448; Prather v. Harlin, 6 Bush (Ky.), 185.

A bond delivered conditionally is a valid bond from the day of its delivery, upon the performance of the condition. Seymour v. Van Slyck, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 414.

5. "To constitute delivery, the instrument must either pass into the power of the grantee or so as to be beyond the control of the grantor, or the grantor shall unequivocally indicate his intention that it shall take effect." Martindale on Conveyancing, 175; Fisher v. Hall, 41 N. Y. 416; Duer v. James, 42 Md. 492; Huey v. Huey, 65 Mo. 689

6. Steel v. Miller, 40 Iowa, 402; Burkholder v. Casad, 47 Ind. 418.

The delivery of a refunding bond to the clerk of the court of chancery, on the street, is a good delivery. It need not be in his office, nor is it necessary that all the signers be present and acknowledge it before him. Hansard v. Bank of Tennessee, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 53.

A delivery with a material part in blank, unless recognized after the blank is filled, is insufficient. Edelin v. Sanders, 8 Md. 118.

Where a bond was delivered to one who has no authority to deliver it to the obligee, the obligee cannot maintain an action upon it. Fay v. Richardson, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 91; Fitts v. Green, 3 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 291; Whitsel v. Mebane, 64 N. Car. 345.

A bond delivered to a third person to be delivered to the obligee is not binding. State v. Oden, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 108, n.

Where the terms of a bond have been assented to and the consideration paid, its delivery is complete as soon as placed in public conveyance, or in the hands of a third person to be delivered to the obligee. Alcalda v. Morales, 3 Nev. 132.

If the obligor after signing and sealing

A delivery to a third person for the use of the obligee is good unless repudiated by the obligee.[1] A bond may be delivered as an escrow; it cannot, however, be so delivered to the obligee, to one of several obligees, or to a member of a partnership.[2] A bond may be delivered to the principal obligor by the sureties as an escrow, subject to the condition that it shall be signed by other parties, and parol evidence is admissible to show that such was the intention.[3] The possession of a bond by the obligee is prima-facie evidence of delivery.[4] When a bond is once a bond holds it out in his hand and says to the obligee, "Here is your bond; what shall I do with it?" this is a good delivery, though it never came into the hands of the obligee. Fally v. Vantuyl, 9 N. J. L. 153. See Ward's Appeal, 35 Conn. 161.

A delivery of bonds by the obligor to a stranger, with instructions to deliver them to his (the obligor's) sons, in whose favor they run, in case the obligor died without a will, is not a delivery to the obligee, and they create no debt until the obligor dies intestate, and then only as testamentary papers. Carey v. Dennis, 13 Md. 1. See Brown v. Murdock, 16 Md. 521.

A delivery will be inferred from the acknowledgment of the execution of a bond which is presented to him by the agent of the obligee for approval, after certain blanks are filled. Blackwell v. Lane, 4 Dev. & B. L. (N. Car.) 113.

A bond was executed for the purpose of raising money on loan, and made payable to A, who refused to advance the money. One of the obligors afterwards sold it to B. Held, that these facts amounted to no evidence of a delivery to A. The delivery of a bond to a stranger, to become the delivery to a party, must be a delivery for the use and benefit of that party; and the fact that this bond was afterwards partly described in a deed of trust made to A as trustee, and signed by him, the object of which was to secure creditors, of which B was one, is no evidence that it was ever delivered to A or to B for his benefit. Whichard v. Jordan, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 54.

1. Fewell v. Kessler, 30 Ind. 195; Hatch v. Bates, 54 Me. 136; Hatch v. Hatch, 9 Mass. 307; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 67; Turner v. Whidden, 22 Me. 121; Guest v. Beesen, 2 Houst. (Del.) 246; Morrison v. Kelly, 22 Ill. 610. See Whichard v. Jordan, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 54.

2. Moss v. Riddle, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 351; Blume v. Bowman, 2 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 338; State v. Chrisman, 2 Ind. 126; Perry v. Patterson, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 133.

If a bond is perfect on its face, it cannot be delivered to the obligee, as an escrow, to be valid upon another person executing it. It is valid although the condition is not complied with. Miller v. Fletcher, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 405, citing 1 Shepherd's Touchstone, 58, 59; 4 Comyn, 276, 4 (A), fait; Coke Litt. (36 a); Simonston's Estate, 4 Watts (Pa.), 180; Duncan v. Pope, 47 Ga. 445; Cincinnati, etc., Co. v. Iliff, 13 Ohio St. 235; Ward v. Lewis, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 518; Currie v. Donald, 2 Wash. (Va.) 59; Brackett v. Barney, 28 N. Y. 333; Worral v. Munn, 5 N. Y. (1 Seld.) 229; Jackson v. Catlin, 2 John. (N. Y.) 248; s. c., 3 Am. Dec. 415; Black v. Shreve, 13 N. J. Eq. 456; Herdman v. Bratton, 2 Harr. (Del.) 396; Madison, etc., Co. v. Stevens, 10 Ind. 1; Brown v. Reynolds, 5 Sneed (Tenn.). 639; Gibson v. Partee, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.). 530; Granes v. Tucker, 10 S. & M. (Miss.) 9; Fireman's, etc., Co. v. McMillan, 29 Ala. 147, 161. Compare Stuart v. Livesay, 4 W. Va. 45, 46; Newlin v. Beard, 6 W. Va. 110.

3. Pawling v. United States, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 219; Fertig v. Bucher, 3 Pa. St. 308; Crawford v. Foster, 6 Ga. 202.

If a surety can show that he signed a bond and delivered it to the principal obligor on condition that it should not become obligatory until signed by another surety, and it was delivered to the obligee, who had notice of the condition, the instrument is an escrow as to such surety. United States v. Hammond, 4 Biss. C. C. 283, 285, citing Pepper v. State, 22 Ind. 399; Pawling v. United States, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 219; United States v. Liffler, 36 U. S. (11 Pet.) 86; Johnson v. Baker, 4 Barn. & Ald. 440; Leof v. Gibbs, 4 Carr. & P. 466. See, generally, Foy v. Blackstone, 31 Ill. 533; Furness v. Williams, 11 Ill. 229; Neely v. Lewis, 10 Ill. 31; White v. Bailey, 14 Conn. 210; Coe v. Turner, 5 Conn. 92; Jackson v. Rowland, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 666.

4. Clarke v. Ray, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 323; Union Bank v. Ridgely, 1 Harr. & G. (Md.) 324; Grim v. School Directors, 51 Pa. St.

delivered to the obligee or his agent it is absolute and cannot be affected by parol.[1] A delivery to one obligee is a delivery to all.[2] The validity and operation of a bond is governed by the laws of the place where delivered.[3] There may be a constructive delivery of a bond, though it remain in the possession of the obligor.[4] The mere fact that the name of a party appears in the body of the bond as one of the obligors but is not signed to the bond is not sufficient to show that the parties who did sign did so conditionally.[5] Whether an instrument was delivered as an escrow is a question for a jury.[6]

9. ACCEPTANCE.—It is essential to the validity of a bond that it be accepted by the grantee.[7] There is no delivery without acceptance.[8] Signing, sealing, and delivery is prima-facie evidence of acceptance and approval.[9]

10. CONSTRUCTION AND EFFECT—GENERAL RULES.—A simple bond will be construed strongly against the obligor, but a condition, being for the benefit of the obligor, will be construed in his favor.[10] Statutory bonds taken by court officers will be liberally construed.[11] In order to ascertain the true construction of a bond, the whole language of the condition must be considered.[12] Courts will look

219. See Keyser v. Keen, 17 Pa. St. 327; Blakeman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638. Compare Whitsell v. Meebane, 64 N. Car. 345.

1. Madison, etc., Co. v. Stevens, 10 Ind. 1.

If an obligee accepts a bond he cannot afterwards disagree to it so as to render it void. Bank v. Pugh, 1 Hawk. (N. Car.) 196; Pequawket v. Mathes, 8 N. H. 139.

2. Moss v. Riddle, 5 Cranch (U.S.), 351.

3. Alcalda v. Morales, 3 Nev. 132.

4. Folly v. Vantuyl, 9 N. J. L. 153.

5. Towns v. Kellet, 11 Ga. 286, citing Blume v. Bowman, 2 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 338; Elliott v. Mayfield, 4 Ala. 417.

6. State v. Bodley, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 355.

If the signer of a bond expressly stipulates that it shall not be delivered up until twelve names are obtained to it and the agent of the other party so promises, the bond is an escrow in the hands of the agent. Fertig v. Bucher, 3 Pa. St. 308.

Where B executes a bond as surety for A and delivers it as an escrow on condition that C shall execute it as co-surety, and C executes it and delivers it as an escrow on condition that D shall also join as co-surety, but D does not unite in the bond, neither B nor C are liable in law or equity. King v. Smith, 2 Leigh (Va.), 157; s. p., Tindal v. Bright, Minor (Ala.), 103.

A surety who executes a bond and delivers it to a stranger, or co-obligee as an escrow, on condition that another join in the bond, is not bound unless the condition is fulfilled. Ward v. Churn, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 801.

In the absence of all evidence of a condition, 'the presumption of law for the obligee's possession of the bond is that the sureties executing it consented to its delivery without the other signatures. Ward v. Churn, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 801. See Whitsell v. Meebane, 64 N. Car. 345.

Instances of conditional delivery. Bibb v. Reid, 3 Ala. 88; Hoboken City Bank v. Phelps, 34 Conn. 92; Carter v. Turner, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 178.

7. Commonwealth v. Jackson, 10 Bush (Ky.), 424; Woodbury v. Fisher, 20 Ind. 387; Cooper v. Jackson, 4 Wis. 537; Comer v. Baldwin, 16 Minn. 172; Mitchell v. Ryan, 3 Ohio St. 377.

When a bond upon its face is exclusively for the use of the State, an express acceptance by an agent of the State need not be shown. State v. Myram, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.), 441.

8. State v. Ogden, 2 Harr. (Del.), 108, note.

9. Wilson v. Ireland, 4 Md. 444.

Proper depository of bond of Canal Co. under its charter. Sheldon D. H. & C. Co., 29 N. Y. 634.

10. Bennthan v. Webb, 6 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 57.

11. Clayton v. Anthony, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 578.

12. Bank v. Willard, 10 N. H. 210.

Particular Words and Phrases.—The words "jointly and severally" in a bond must be construed distributively, so as to the meaning of the parties as collected from the instrument itself, and when the meaning is evident will reject or transpose into apply as well to the obligors as to their heirs. "We bind ourselves" makes them join obligors. "We bind our heirs, executors, administrators" binds them jointly, and "we bind each and every of them" binds them severally. Mitchell v. Darricott, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 145. See People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520.

A bond beginning "I hereby bind myself," but signed by several, is the joint obligation of all the signers or the several obligation of each. Knisely v. Shenberger, 7 Watts (Pa.), 193; and see Leith v. Bush, 61 Pa. St. 395; Short v. Lancaster, 17 Ohio, 96; Willey v. State, 3 Ind. 500; Supervisors v. Coffenbury, 1 Mich. 355.

A condition that the parties shall perform the decree of "the court" means that the court shall ultimately decide the cause. Archer v. Hart, 5 Fla. 234; United States v. Little Charles, 1 Brock. C. C. 381.

A bond to devise "all my personal estate of every description, as well what I now have in possession as what I may receive at the death of my mother," the obligor to remain in possession during his life, is not void for uncertainty. Jenkins v. Stetson, 9 Allen (Mass.), 128.

In a bond to A. B., administrator, "or" C. D. administratrix, the word "or" means "and." Brittin v. Mitchell, 4 Ark. 92. See Parker v. Carson, 64 N. Car. 563. The name "Wheeler" as obligor of a bond construed to mean "Woodward," where it appeared upon the face of the whole instrument to be a mistake. Richmond v. Woodward, 32 Vt. 833.

But where defendant's name was Thomas B. Hanly, a bond for costs to "Thomas B. Han," was held insufficient. Hanly v. Campbell, 4 Ark. 562.

Where the condition in a bond for plaintiff's maintenance requires the obligor to furnish the obligee "money necessary for him to spend, whenever he thinks proper to visit his friends," he must furnish the money whenever, in the exercise of a fair and honest judgment, and not wantonly and capriciously, the obligee thinks proper to make such visits. Berry v. Harris, 43 N. H. 376.

The words "the amount to be paid in notes on the Bank of K." written across the end of the bond constitutes a part of the bond. Osborne v. Fulton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 234.

The words "in these respects" in Code of Iowa, § 2506, refer to the person or body to whom the bond is made payable. Collins v. Ripley, 8 Iowa, 128.

A senseless condition, as "if the obligor do not pay," will not be allowed to affect the true intent of the bond. Stockton v. Turner, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 192.

Under a bond to perform the order or decree of a court of chancery, the condition is not broken by a failure to perform the decree of a county court sitting as a court of equity. Morgan v. Morgan, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 395.

A bond to pay a sum of money "in gold or silver coin of the standard by which the coins of the United States were regulated by the laws existing May 26, 1846," is a contract to pay a certain sum of money in a certain commodity at a certain valuation. Such contract gives the obligee no right to enforce payment in the commodity, but merely gives the obligor the option to pay in that way. Murray v. Harrison, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 484.

A bond dated April 23, 1850, was conditioned to pay "$300, that is to say, $150 in one year from this date, and the remaining sum of $150 on the 23d day of April, 1852, together with the lawful interest." Held, that the term, "together with the lawful interest" referred to the main condition, and that the whole sum drew interest from the date of the bond. Lanning v. Cole, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 148.

A bond to pay "$71 in current bank money" means current bank bills calling on their face for $71. Lackey v. Miller, Phil. L. (N. Car.) 26.

A bond to pay a certain sum for a gold-mine on or before a certain day conditioned that "should the mine prove valueless the bond to be null and void, otherwise of full effect," becomes absolute on the day named unless it had been ascertained before that time that the mine was valueless. Gamble v. Beeson, 5 Jones L. (N. Car.) 128.

On the dissolution of a partnership, a bond was given conditioned that one partner "should pay all debts and demands against the company contracted by him in the name of the company." Held, (1) that said condition did not cover debts which had been previously adjusted and a joint and several note in the name of the firm given for the same; (2) that debts jointly contracted by the members of the firm did not come within the condition. Raymond v. Bigelow, 11 N. H. 466.

sensible words and supply accidental omissions.[1] The whole language of a bond must be taken into consideration.[2] In construing a bond, papers referred to therein must be considered as a part of the bond.[3] An indorsement on a bond, if made at the same time, must be considered in construing the instrument.[4] But a subsequent indorsement is not part of the deed, but a new contract.[5] The true intent of a bond is not affected by a repugnant condition, as when the condition was that "if the obligor do not pay."[6]

11. PENALTY.—Where a bond contains a condition that it shall be void upon the performance or non-performance of a certain act, the presumption is that the sum of money mentioned is intended as security and not as liquidated damages.[7] This presumption can only be controlled by very strong evidence to the contrary. But this rule is to some extent controlled by the question whether

A stipulation in a bond to secure rent that the lessee shall "put the house in order and put up the fence" is not a condition precedent. Watters v. Smaw, 10 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 292.

"Or" construed as "and" in a bond payable "to Squire Parker or Thomas Parker." Parker v. Carson, 64 N. Car. 563.

Construction of Particular Bonds.—A bond conditioned for the payment of a sum certain, without specifying any time of payment, the money is due immediately, without demand, and bears interest from date. Purdy v. Phillips, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 369; affirmed, 11 N. Y. 406. See Omohundro v. Omohundro, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 626.

A bond to to pay money at the death of the obligor, unconditionally delivered, drawn in absolute terms, take effect as a present obligation, and is irrevocable. Mack's Appeal, 68 Pa. 231.

A bond to appear and abide by a judgment secures payment of the judgment. Cole v. Reilly, 28 Ga. 431. A bond joint and several in form, but signed by one party only, is a several bond, and the obligor cannot change the effect by signing the names of others without their authority. Wood v. Ogden, 16 N. J. L. 453.

1. Coles v. Hulme, 8 Barn. & Cr. 568.

Surplusage will be rejected provided the remaining words are sufficient to make it sensible. Iredell v. Barbee, 9. Ired. L. (N. Car.) 250; Fitts v. Green, 3 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 291; Vanhook v. Barnett. 4 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 268.

Necessary words obviously omitted by mistake will be inserted. DeSoto v. Dickson, 31 Miss. 150; Gully v. Gully, 1 Hawk. (N. Car.) 20; Whitsell v. Warnock, 8 Ala. 466.

2. New Hampshire Bank v. Willard, 10 N. H. 210.

3. United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock. C. C. 96.

4. Hughes v. Sanders, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 360. Williams v. Handley, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 19; Shermer v. Beale, 1 Wash. (Va.) 11; Nichols v. Douglass, 8 Mo. 49.

5. Williams v. Handley, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 10; Cook v. Remington, 6 Mod. 237; Nichols v. Douglas, 8 Mo. 49.

6. Stockton v. Turner, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 192. See Gibbs v. Halstead, 24 N. J. L. 366.

7. Davis v. Gillett, 52 N. H. 126; Astley v. Weldon, 2 Bos. & P. 346; Street v. Rigley, 6 Ves. Jr. 815; Price v. Green, 16 Mees. & W. 346; Davies v. Penton, 6 Barn. & C. 216; Higginson v. Weld, 14 Gray (Mass.), 165; Smith v. Wainright, 24 Vt. 97; Richards v. Edick, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 260. See Swift v. Crow, 17 Ga. 609; Hargroves v. Cooke, 15 Ga. 321; Lyon v. Clark, 8 N. Y. 148; Griffith v. Hardenburg, 41 N. Y. 464.

The rule is thus stated by Chief Justice Marshall: "In general, a sum of money in gross, to be paid for the non-performance of an agreement, is considered as a penalty, the legal operation of which is to cover the damages which the party in whose favor the stipulation is made may have sustained from the breach of contract by the opposite party. It will not, of course, be considered as liquidated damages; and it will be incumbent on the party who claims them as such to show that they were so considered by the contracting parties." Tayloe v. Sandeford, 20 U. S. (7 Wheat.) 13. See also, to same effect, Wallis v. Carpenter, 13 Allen (Mass.), 19, 25; Shute v. Taylor, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 61; Fisk v. Gray, 11 Allen (Mass.), 132.

the contingency is single or to perform several things, or pay the sum of money mentioned. In the former case it is held that in the absence of words evincing an intention that the sum shall be viewed as a penalty, it may be recovered as liquidated damages.[1]

If the contract is to perform several acts or pay the sum specified, that sum will be considered as a penalty and not liquidated damages.[2]

Where the sum specified is unjust and extortionate, the court will refuse to enforce it as a penalty even though it must disregard the intention of the parties. But where, from the nature of the case, the damages are uncertain, and only the parties are competent to compute them, the law will permit them to do so, and fix the amount as liquidated damages. The court will adopt their estimate of the damages. In such a case, if the parties mean liquidated damages, the court will so hold, although they use the words "penalty," "forfeit," "forfeiture," in the instrument.[3]

12. THE CONDITION.—The condition of a bond is the statement of the circumstances and contingencies upon which the bond shall become void. It must necessarily be in the alternative. At common law a bond may be absolute, contingent, or void by reason of the terms of the condition and character of the consideration. "If the condition of a bond be impossible at the time of making it, or be to do a thing contrary to some rule of law which is merely positive, or be uncertain and insensible, the condition alone is void, and the bond shall stand single and unconditional; for it is the folly of an obligor to enter into such an obligation from which he can never be released. If it be to do a thing that is malum in se, the obligation itself is void; for the whole is an unlawful contract, and the obligee shall take no advantage from such a transaction. And if the condition be possible at the time of making it, and afterwards become impossible by the act of God, the act of the law, or

1. Swift v. Crow, 17 Ga. 609; Leighton v. Wales, 3 Mees. & W. 545. See also Saniter v. Ferguson, 7 Mann Gr. & Se. 716.

2. Swift v. Crow, 17 Ga. 609; Astley v. Weldon, 2 Bos. & P. 345; Kemble v. Farren, 6 Bing. 141; Davies v. Parton, 6 Barn. & C. 2101; Nuir v. Rossman, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 50; Catheal v. Talmage, 9 N. Y. 551.

3. Jaquith v. Hudson, 5 Mich. 123, 138, citing Saniter v. Ferguson, 7 Mann. Gr. & S. 716; Jones v. Green, 3 Y. & Jer. 299; Pierce v. Fuller, 8 Mass. 223; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 102; Noble v. Bates, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 307; Fletcher v. Dycke, 2 Term, 32. See generally, as to this subject, Atkins v. Kinnier, 4 Exch. 776; Davies v. Penton, 6 Barn. & Cr. 216; Boyce v. Ancell, 5 Bing. N. C. 390; Shiell v. McNitt, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 101; Heard v. Bowers, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 455; Lampman v. Cochran, 16 N. Y. 275; Jackson v. Baker, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 471; Lynde v. Thompson, 2 Allen (Mass.), 456. 458; Beckman v. Drake, 8 Mees. & W. 846, 853; Homer v. Flintoff, 9 Mees. & W. 678; Gower v. Saltmarsh, 11 Mo. 271; Reilly v. Jones, 1 Bing. N. C. 302; Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 419, 534; Esmond v. Van Benschoten, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Beale v. Hayes, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 640; Randall v. Everest, 1 Moo. & M. 41; s. c., 1 Car. & P. 577; Penkerton v. Casslon, 2 Barn. & Ald. 704; Shute v. Taylor, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 61; Cirhsdee v. Bolton, 3 Car. & P. 240; Smith v. Coe, 1 Jones & Spencer (N. Y.) 480; Sloson v. Beadle, 7 John. (N. Y.) 72; Pearson v. Williams, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 240; Gray v. Crosby, 18 John. (N. Y.) 219; Upham v. Smith, 7 Mass. 265; Dwinel v. Brown, 54 Me. 468; Whitefield v. Levy, 35 N. J. L. 149.

the act of the obligee himself, there the penalty is saved; for no prudence or foresight could guard against such a contingency."[1]

13. RECITALS.—A recital in a bond is conclusive upon the parties as an admission of the facts recited, and may restrain and limit words in the condition implying a greater liability. The general words must be restrained by the particular recital.[2]

But a recital of matter immaterial to the object of the bond works no estoppel against the party executing it.[3] Nor is the party bound estopped by a recital of fact which is not founded on the instrument, but is collateral to it.[4]

2. Joint or Joint and Several Bonds.—A bond may be joint or joint and several. A bond is joint if its language distinctly shows it to be joint; it is joint and several if it so appears to be beyond a reasonable doubt. It must be determined primarily from the terms of the instrument and not its execution and delivery, and especially by the provision which it makes for its own satisfaction.[5] If the terms of the instrument are ambiguous it is joint or joint and several according to the interests of the parties.[6] With reference to covenantees the rule is somewhat different. "Where there is an obligation to pay money or perform a duty to two or more obligees the character of the instrument as joint, or joint and several, depends upon the interest of the covenantees."[7] But

1. 2 Blackstone Com. 340, 341. See criticism of this distinction, Murfree on Official Bonds, § 130. See, generally, Taylor v. Mason, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 345; Mitchell v. Reynolds, 1 P.Wms. 181; Page v. Trufant, 2 Mass. 159; s. c., 3 Am. Dec. 41; Trustees v. Gallatin, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 340; Davidson v. Givens, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 200; Lewis v. Knox, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 453; Tuxbury v. Miller, 19 John. (N.Y.) 311; Waite v. Harper, 2 John. (N.Y.) 386; Bruce v. Lee, 4 John. (N.Y.) 410; Mitchell v. Vance, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 529; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 96.

2. Payler v. Homesham, 4 Maule & S. 425; Pearsall v. Summersett, 4 Taunt. 523; Bennehan v. Webb, 6 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 57; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 169; Carpenter v. Buller, 8 M. & W. 209; Fletcher v. Jackson, 23 Vt. 581; and see Hoke v. Hoke, 3 W. Va. 561.

3. Reed v. McCourt, 41 N. Y. 435.

4. Carpenter v. Buller, 8 Mees. & W. 209; Reed v. McCourt, 41 N. Y. 435.

A recital in a bank cashier's bond that he was appointed cashier by the directors is conclusive in an action on the bond against the sureties. Lionberger v. Krieger (Mo.), 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87.

5. Hankinson v. Sandilaus, Croke Jac. 322.

6. The rule for distinguishing between a joint and a joint and several bond is thus stated in Sheppard's Touchstone, 375: "If two, three, or more bind themselves in an obligation thus, obligamus nos, and say no more, the obligation is and shall be taken to be joint only, and not several; but if it be thus, obligamus nos et etrumque nostrum, the obligation is both joint and several."

It was held in some of the old cases that the interest controlled the construction. Thus in James v. Emery, 5 Price (Exch.), 553, it was said: "Wherever the interest of the parties is separate the action may be several, notwithstanding the terms of the covenant on which it is founded may be joint; and where the interest is joint the action must be joint, although the covenant in language purports to be joint and several." But the true rule is stated by Mr. Preston: "By express words clearly indicative of the intention, a covenant may be joint, or joint and several to or with the covenantors, or covenantees, notwithstanding the interests are several." Sheppard's Touchstone (Preston's Ed., note), p. 166; Robinson v. Walker, 1 Salk. 393. "So they may be several although the interests are joint." Eccleston v. Clipsham, 1 Saund. 154, notes, and cases cited.

7. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 236.

An obligation to pay one sum of money in solido to several obligees is joint and must be jointly enforced. Lane v. Drinkwater, 1 Crompt. M. & K. 613; May v. May, 1 Carr. & P. 44; English v. Blun-where there are a number of obligees each entitled to a specific sum, as in a composition deed of debtor to creditors, each beneficiary is entitled to his separate action for the sum due him. The obligee in a joint and several bond may proceed against any one of the obligors without prejudice to subsequent legal proceedings against the other obligors, provided he fails to satisfy the demand from the first judgment; and he has the same remedy against the heirs or executor of a deceased obligor.[1] The liability of the obligors in a joint bond is aggregate, and a failure to join all such joint obligors is good ground for a plea in abatement. But if this plea is not interposed, judgment may be rendered against the defendant, the effect of which is to discharge all the obligors not joined in the action from all liability at law upon the bond.[2]

There is no legal remedy against the heirs or executors of a deceased joint obligor (principal or surety), and a failure to join them in an action is not ground for a plea in abatement. The remedy as against the estate is lost.[3] In equity, however, the rule is different. The representatives of a deceased principal obligor, who was under a moral obligation to perform the condition or pay the penalty, can be held in equity to perform the same obligation. But where the deceased was a surety under no moral obligation, and the bond joint only, he is bound only by the terms of the bond, and equity will not interfere to charge his estate. A surety who pays the debt of his insolvent principal cannot enforce the debt against the estate of his deceased co-surety, as his only right is to subrogation to the rights of the creditor.[4] The estate of a deceased obligor is not necessarily released by the legal extinction of the bond, as by the intermarriage of the obligor and obligee.[5] dell, 8 Carr. & P. 332; Osborn v. Harper, 5 East, 229.

1. Lay v. Mottram, 19 C. B. N. S. 479, 485; Gresty v. Gibson, L. R. 1 Exch. 112.

2. Higgins' Case, 6 Coke, 45; Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 Crompt. & Mees. 623.

Pleading—Parties in Action on Joint Bond.—If, however, the party crave oyer and demur, the court will presume that the other alleged obligor did not seal the bond. The defect is strictly matter in abatement. Gilbert v. Bait, 1 Strange, 503. If by craving oyer the bond is spread on the record and it appears thereby that the obligors were bound severally as well as jointly, a defect in the declaration is thereby cured. Newman v. Graham, 3 Munf. (Va.) 187; Meredith v. Duval, 1 Munf. (Va.) 76.

3. Tower v. Moore, 2 Vern. 98.

Before the heir of one of two joint obligors (both principals) can be held answerable he must be sued as heir, and it must be shown that he promised to pay the debt, and that he has inherited from his ancestor real estate of sufficient value to meet the demand. Preston v. Preston, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 366. "In other words, the cause of action upon which he can be charged at law is not the bond at all, for that merely becomes matter of inducement." Murfree on Official Bonds, § 239.

4. Walter v. Riley, 2 Harr. & Gill (Md.). 305.

5. Acton v. Pierce, 2 Vern. 480.

Grounds for Granting Relief in Equity to the Obligee of a Joint Bond against the Heir and Executor of Deceased Joint Obligors. — Lord Hardwick in Bishop v. Church, 2 Ves. Sr. 100, 371 (citing Acton v. Pierce, 2 Vern. 480; Probart v. Clifford, 2 Atkyns, 440), places this jurisdiction of equity upon the ground that although by the death of the obligor the obligation and penalty have become void at law, the condition, being "an agreement to pay money, and an agreement

Where two or more executors or administrators execute a joint bond they stand towards each other in the relation of principal under hand and seal," is obligatory against the heir or executor. But this is not sustained by reason or authority. "The truth is that although it is undoubtedly the law that the executor and heir of a deceased principal obligor of a joint bond are liable for the debt or duty secured by it, it is because courts of equity have so held them to be, and not upon any principle derived from the character of their obligation. Courts of law for technical reasons will not enforce these obligations; courts of equity will do so to compel the performance of a moral duty: and it is only in view of duties of that character that courts of equity have by a long series of rulings assumed the power of enforcing these among other imperfect obligations. That it is the moral obligation, and that only, upon which courts of equity base this jurisdiction is obvious from the fact that they will not enforce a bond of this character against the representatives of a surety." Murfree on Official Bonds, § 243.

Joint Bonds considered Joint and Several.—Another ground for such jurisdiction is that of mistake. A contract for a joint loan is presumed in equity to be joint and several, although the form of the obligation is strictly joint. In order that there may be equality of obligation, the court will presume "from slender premises or no premises at all" that a mistake has been made, and that from ignorance or want of skill on the part of the scrivener the bond was made joint instead of joint and several. See on this subject Thomas v. Frazier, 3 Ves. Jr. 399, 402; Thorpe v. Jackson, 2 Younge & Coll. Exch. 553; Wilkinson v. Henderson. 1 Mylne & K. 582; Richardson v. Horton, 6 Beav. 185; Weaver v. Shryock, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 262; Ex parte Kendall, 17 Ves. 525; Ex parte Halkett. 19 Ves. 475; Burn v. Burn, 3 Ves. Jr. 573; Ex parte Symonds, 1 Cox, 200; Simpson v. Vaughn, 2 Atkyns, 30; Ball v. Storie, 1 Sim. & Stu. 210; Card v. Jaffray, 2 Sch. & Lef. 374; Summer v. Powell, 2 Meriv. 30; Gray v. Chiswell, 9 Ves. Jr. 118, 125; Underhill v. Harwood, 10 Ves. Jr. 218, 225, 227.

The presumptions which apply when it is sought in equity to have a joint bond considered as being joint and several are stated as follows in Weaver v. Shryock, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 262, 264: "In the first place, then, it is a fair presumption, in the absence of all evidence to the contrary, that every man understands what he is doing, and that these obligors understood the long and well-established difference between a joint and joint and several obligation. But this presumption may be rebutted by circumstances; and one circumstance on which courts of equity have laid great stress is that the money for which the bond was given was borrowed by, or came to the use of, both obligors. In such case the very act of borrowing does, in itself, amount to a contract antecedent to their entering into a bond, that each and both should be bound to pay. When, therefore, the bond is afterwards so drawn as to constitute only a joint obligation, there is a reasonable presumption that either through fraud, ignorance, or inadvertence the meaning of the parties has not been carried into effect. Such has been the reasoning of those judges who have decided on points of this kind; and it must be confessed that this is carrying the matter far enough in favor of the obligee."

When not so Construed.—All the cases in which courts have construed joint bonds as joint and several and sustained them against the representatives of a deceased obligor have turned upon actual or presumed mistakes in drawing the instruments. Hunt v. Rousmanier, 21 U. S. (8 Wheat.) 212, 213, 214; Simpson v. Vaughn, 2 Atkyns, 33; Underhill v. Horwood, 10 Ves. Jr. 209, 227. A court of equity will not interfere in behalf of an obligee unless it be established that the true consideration for a joint bond was a joint original debt or liability. The presumptions and inferences adequate to establish the fact may be overcome by evidence. It has been held that although a mistake of fact will be presumed in every case in which a joint bond has been given, and a benefit received by the obligor, yet the relief will not be granted unless there was equity antecedent to the obligation. "When," says Sir William Grant, in Sumner v. Powell, 2 Meriv. 35, 36, "the obligation exists only by virtue of the covenants, its extent can be measured only by the words in which it is conceived. . . . So where a joint bond has in equity been considered as several, there has been a credit previously given to the different persons who have entered into the obligation. It is not the bond that first created the liability." Underhill v. Horwood, 10 Ves. Jr. 227; Thorpe v. Jackson, 2 Younge & Coll. Exch. 553.

and surety, each being considered as principal for his own acts

Ex parte Kendall, 17 Ves. Jr. 525; Cowell v. Sykes, 2 Russ. 191.

Presumptions in Favor of Joint Bonds being Joint and Several do not apply as against Sureties.—To charge the sureties on a bond there must be actual proof of an express agreement by them that the bond shall be several as well as joint. Weaver v. Shryock, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 262. An obligee in a joint and several bond who elects to consider the bond as joint and takes a joint judgment upon it cannot invoke the aid of a court of equity to enforce a several liability against the representatives of a deceased surety who originally incurred a several liability on the bond. "Where an obligee takes a joint and several bond," says Mr. Justice Grier in United States v. Price, 50 U. S. (9 How.) 83, 951, "he has nothing to ask of equity; his remedy is wholly at law. If he elects to take a joint judgment he voluntarily repudiates the several contract, and is certainly in no better situation than if he had originally taken a joint security only. Equity gives relief, not on the bond, for that is complete at law, but upon the moral obligation antecedent to the bond, when the creditor could have had no remedy at law. An obligee who has a joint and several bond, and elects to treat it as joint, may sometimes act unwisely in so doing, but his want of prudence is no sufficient plea for the interposition of a chancellor. Nor can the conscience of a mere surety be affected who, having tendered to the obligee his choice of holding him jointly or severally liable, has been released at law by the exercise of such election." Wright v. Russell. 3 Wills. 530; Waters v. Riley, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 310; Harrison v. Field, 2 Wash. (Va.) 135; Weaver v. Shryock, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 262; Sheehy v. Mandeville, 10 U. S. (6 Cranch) 253; United States v. Cushman, 2 Sum. C. C. 426; Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 Crompt. & M. 623.

Joint Bond.—Discharge of Estate of Deceased Surety.—In Pickergill v. Lahan, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.) 140, 146; s.c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. § 550, the Supreme Court of the United States (following United States v. Price, 50 U. S. (9 How.) 83, 108), held, if one of two joint obligors dies, the debt is distinguished as against his representatives; that, the remedy at law being gone, as a general rule a court of equity will not afford relief; that the court will vary the legal effect of the instrument only when it is clearly made to appear that it was intended by the parties to be several as well as joint, or in case of fraud or mistake; that this will be done only where there is a previous equity on the ground of a moral obligation on the part of the deceased to pay his debts; that a mere surety incurs no moral obligation, and that if a surety die before his principal his legal representatives cannot be sued at law or charged in equity. Simpson v. Field, 2 Ch. Cas 22; Sumner v. Powell, 2 Meriv. 30; s. c., 1 Turn. & R. 423; Weaver v. Shryock, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 262; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 21 U. S. (8 Wheat.) 212.

Cases of Actual Mistake.—The mistake we have been considering is mostly a presumption of law seized upon in order to do substantial justice. Where there is an actual mistake of fact in consequence of which a bond which should have been joint and several is made joint, a court of equity will relieve against the consequences of such mistake as fully against sureties and guarantors as against the principal obligor. Wiser v. Blackly, 1 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 607. "No doubt," says Lord Hardwicke in Henkel v. Royal, etc., Co., 1 Ves. Sr. 317, "but this court has jurisdiction to relieve in respect of a plain mistake in contracts in writing as well as against frauds in contracts. There is therefore no reason upon principle why an actual mistake in the language of the bond will not be relieved against, although the party be a surety. It is the mistake that gives the jurisdiction, not the merit of the parties. The object of the court in all such cases and the effect of its decrees is not to do justice or relieve hardship, but to place the parties precisely where they intended to be, and would have been but for the mistake."

In the absence of any statute authorizing a limitation of liability, a joint and several bond is not rendered several only by a stipulation on the part of sureties that they shall be liable only for an amount written after their signatures. This precaution is unavailing as against the obligee, unless the joint characteristic be wholly eliminated from the bond and it be made only a several obligation. People v. Slocum, 1 Idaho, 62.

A Joint Bond not Executed by the Principal is Invalid.—The absence of the signature of the principal obligor is not a defect which can be cured. People v. Hartley, 21 Cal. 585, citing Sacramento v. Dunlap, 14 Cal. 423; Bean v. Parker, 17 Mass. 591; Wood v. Washburn, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 24; Sharp v. United States, 4 Watts (Pa.). 21; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 676; and surety for those of the others.[1] This is true although the execution of the bond was purely voluntary, as when the will exempted the executors from giving any bond. But having given a bond they are bound by its terms, and it cannot be affected by a mere order of court reciting its execution.[2]

Partnership contracts are usually joint, but one partner cannot execute a joint bond which will bind his copartners without sufficient previous authority. Such a bond will bind the partner executing it only.[3]

In some States the subject of joint bonds has been regulated by statute.[4]

3. Negotiable Bonds.—1. IN GENERAL.—It is now well settled that coupon bonds of municipal and business corporations are negotiable, and that this extends to the coupons, which may be detached and sued on separately after the bond has been satisfied. Such bonds are protected and governed by the same principles as negotiable notes and bills.[5] Such bonds now stand not only

Fletcher v. Austin, 11 Vt. 447; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 698; Johnson v. Erskine, 9 Tex. 1; Cutter v. Whittemore, 10 Mass. 442; Adams v. Bean, 12 Mass. 139; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 44; s. c., 26 U. S. (1 Pet.) 16; Harrison v. Field, 2 Wash. (Va.) 136; Kennedy v. Carpenter, 2 Whart. (Pa.), 344; Octer v. Iveson, 3 Drewry, 177; Jones v. Beach, 2 DeGex & S. 886; Wilmer v. Curry, 2 DeGex & S. 347; Waters v. Riley, 2 Harr. & Gill (Md.), 311; Dorsey v. Dorsey, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 480, note; Bradley v. Burwell, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 65; Richardson v. Horton, 6 Beav. 85; Wilkinson v. Henderson, 1 Myl. & K. 582; Rawstone v. Parr, 3 Russ. 539.

The same principles apply when the bond is one given in the course of judicial proceedings, as to obtain an injunction. Where the statute is silent the bond will be joint or joint and several in the discretion of the court. There is no principle of equity by which a contract of indemnity can be construed so as to charge an estate, and an engagement to pay money may receive a contrary construction. Murfree on Official Bonds, § 255; Pickergill v. Lahen, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.) 140, 146; s. c., 4 Myers Fed. Dec. § 551.

1. Cosker v. Harrison, 76 Va. 85; s. c., 3 Am. Prob. R. 309, 316; Morrow v. Peyton, 8 Leigh (Va.), 54; Boyd v. Boyd, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 112; Cox v. Thomas, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 319; Green v. Hansborough, 2 Brock. C. C. 166; Seddens v. Robertson, 2 Brock. C. C. 402.

2. Cosker v. Harrison, 76 Va. 85; s. c., 3 Am. Prob. R 309, 317; Cecil v. Early, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 188; Franklin v. Depriest, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 257; Wanlath v. Comm'rs, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 157.

3. Green v. Beals, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 254.

A partnership can have no seal; and if a partner signs the firm note and affixes a seal, it is his seal. "The obligation declared on was executed by one of the partners in the partnership name. Such instrument obliges only the person who signs and seals it; it is his act and deed and not that of his copartners. . . . A case might exist where the individual seal of one of several obligors was used by each, which would be good against each, because when so used it was the seal of each, but that is not this case." Button v. Hampson, 1 Wright (Ohio), 93.

4. In Tennessee it has been enacted that all bonds which at common law would have been joint shall be held to be joint and several. Th. & Steg. Code Tenn., §§ 2789 et seq.; Claiburne v. Goodloe. Cooke (Tenn.), 391.

In 1818 it was enacted in Alabama "that every joint bond shall be deemed and construed to have the same effect in law as a joint and several bond, and it shall be lawful to sue out process and proceed to judgment against any one or more of the obligors." Whitsett v. Womack, 8 Ala. 482, citing Clay's Digest, 323, § 61.

5. White v. Vermont & M. R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 577; County of Beaver v. Armstrong, 44 Pa. St. 63; Thompson v. Lee Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 227; Mever v. Muscatine, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 384; Gelpecke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175; Marcer v. Hacket, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 83; Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 110; City v.

equal before the law to the negotiable paper pertaining to the commercial business of the country and to our circulating medium, but they are also, for their greater advantage, and for the purpose of causing them to be acceptable as desirable investments, regarded as chattels.[1] By the later English cases such bonds are held to be either promissory notes, or else analogous to the letter of credit.[2] Only the maker of a bond can supply an accidental omission the effect of which is to render it non-negotiable.[3]

2. RIGHTS OF A BONA-FIDE HOLDER.—The purchaser of negotiable bonds in good faith for value is unaffected by want of title in the vendor, and is presumed to act in good faith.[4] The burden of proof is on the party denying the right of the possessor.[5] He acquires a good title although the bonds were stolen from their true owner by his vendor.[6] Negligence alone, however gross on the part of the purchaser, will not impair his title.[7] Said Lord Denman: "I believe we are all of opinion that gross negligence only would not be a sufficient answer, where the party has given a consideration for the bill. Gross negligence may be evidence of mala fides, but it is not the same thing. We have shaken off the last remnant of the contrary doctrine; where the bill has passed to the plaintiff without any proof of bad faith in him, there is no objection to his title."[8] He is not obliged to make a critical exam-

Lamson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 477; Blake v. Livingston, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 149; Langston v. S. C. R. Co., 2 S. Car. 248; Craig v. City of Vicksburg, 31 Miss. 217; Clark v. City, 10 Wis. 140; Johnson v. County, 24 Ill. 92; Arents v. Com., 18 Gratt. (Va.) 750; Spooner v. Holmes, 102 Mass. 503; Nat. Exch. Bank v. H. R. Co., 8 R. I. 375; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 582. But see Diamond v. Lawrence Co., 37 Pa. St. 353; Myer v. Cum. R. Co., 43 Me. 239.

Interest warrants or coupons in a negotiable form draw interest after payment is unjustly neglected and refused. Mills v. Jefferson, 20 Wis. 50; San Antonio v. Lane, 32 Tex. 405; Aurora City v. West, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 82; North Pa. R. v. Adams, 54 Pa St. 94; Brainard v. N. Y. & Harlem R. Co, 25 N. Y. 469; Conn. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 332; New Albany Plank-road Co. v. Smith, 23 Ind. 353; 26 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 180; Canal, etc., Co. v. Lewis, 12 N. J. Eq. 323.

1. See Griffith v. Burden, 35 Iowa, 138. The doctrine of negotiability of bonds is of recent date. See Myers v. York & Co., 43 Me. 239. decided in 1857, and Diamond v. Lawrence Co., 37 Pa. St. 353–8, decided in 1861, holding strongly to contrary doctrine.

2. See In re Imperial Land Co. of Marseilles, L. R. 11 Eq. 478; In re General Estates Co., L. R. 3 Ch. App. 758.

3. Ledwich v. McKim, 53 N. Y. 307; Parsons v. Jackson, 99 U. S. 434.

4. Keeney v. Chiles, 4 Greene (Iowa), 416; Murray v. Gardner, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 110; Carpenter v. Rommell, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 34; Peacock v. Rhodes, 4 Doug. (Mich.) 633, language of Lord Mansfield. Miller v. Race, 1 Burr. 452; Grant v. Vaughn, 3 Burr, 1516; Anon., 1 Salk. 126.

5. Murray v. Gardner, 69 U. S. (2 Wall.) 110, 121.

Plaintiff claiming bonds from such a passenger must establish (1) that the bonds belong to him; (2) that the circumstances under which the defendant purchased them were not such as to protect his title. Birdsall v. Russell, 29 N. Y. 220.

