TO

ROBERT JAMESON, ESQ. F.R.S. L. & E.

REGIUS PROFESSOR OF NATURAL HISTORY IN THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH,

&c. &c. &c.

MY DEAR SIR,

I am induced to dedicate the present volume to you, not from a belief that it is worthy of your patronage, nor because the subject of it is in any way allied to the studies and researches which have given to your name an undying celebrity, but because, humble as are its pretensions, its very nature is such as to ensure it a more lasting favour than any of my other literary labours are likely to obtain.

Composed with the view of filling an important and acknowledged blank in the medical literature of this country, and calculated, as I trust, in some degree at least, not merely to supply the present wants of the young medical inquirer, but to be useful to the students of future generations,—my little work can procure for its author no greater satisfaction than that of affording him an opportunity of thus publicly laying claim to your friendship and esteem.

Many years have elapsed since a spontaneous act of kindness on your part selected me from among your numerous pupils to fill a situation which has led to consequences most favourable to my happiness; and although I have never been forgetful of the obligation, I have long been desirous of testifying to the world, in a more formal manner and by the least perishable record which I might command, that the benefit was conferred on one not wanting at least in gratitude, however deficient he may have proved himself in qualifications to justify your preference.

Believe me, my dear Sir,

Your faithful and obliged friend,

JOHN FORBES.

PREFACE.

THE following Bibliographical Collections were originally formed to supply a deficiency in the individual articles of the Cyclopædia of Practical Medicine, and the greater portion of them was published in the Supplement to that work. They are now republished with additions, with the view of filling, in some degree at least, a very important blank in the medical literature of this country which has long been felt to exist. The plan followed in the Compilation is somewhat different from any with which I am acquainted; and I am in hopes that I have not altogether failed in the object I had in view throughout—of rendering it of easy reference and in every way practically useful. To the attainment of this object I have sacrificed all minor considerations, whether having reference to my own ease and convenience, or to the credit that might attach to the display of such erudition as I am master of, or which the extensive researches which my task imposed upon me might have easily supplied.

Had I been ambitious of such a display, I might have readily gratified it by the accumulation of references to the miscellaneous writings of physicians in every body's hands,—to the innumerable monographs which have been printed under the form of Inaugural Dissertations in the various European Universities,—and, lastly, to the individual cases of disease, which form so large a portion of medical periodical literature; and this I might have done with little or no personal research, by merely transferring to my little work—then little no longer—the pages of Haller and Ploucquet, the Bibliographical Notices in the Dictionnaire des Sciences Médicales, and a moiety of the Indexes of the periodical medical collections, now of almost unmanageable size, in this and other countries. But want of space as well as want of inclination, and the governing principle, practical utility, have alike prevented such a consummation; although I am free to confess that so desirable a result has not been attained without the sacrifice of hundreds of pages of manuscript, which had been compiled before what I regard as the proper plan, had been thoroughly matured.

Generally speaking, the reader will find the following pages to consist exclusively of BIBLIOGRAPHY, in the stricter sense of the word, that is, an account of books only. The sole exceptions to this, of a general kind, will be found to be the references to the great Medical Dictionaries (of which the individual articles have been regarded as distinct works), and to certain Collections of Inaugural Dissertations and Minor Works, which have attained high consideration and a general circulation. Few persons are aware of the very large space in Medical Bibliographies commonly occupied by the titles of Inaugural Dissertations, which have never, properly speaking, been published, and which are not, therefore, accessible to any reader, unless he visits the library of the particular university in which the authors obtained the doctorate. To reproduce, ad infinitum, these titular treatises in our bibliographies is not simply to dazzle the ignorant with the semblance of learning, and at no expense, but is to delude the unwary with the bare imagination of a feast which, in all probability, they can never possibly enjoy.

References to the slighter monographs, and observations and cases in the collected works of authors, or in treatises ostensibly dedicated to other objects, or in the Transactions of Societies and Periodical Journals, are not open to the same objections, and the only reason for excluding them from the following pages is the impossibility of admitting them without superseding others of greater moment, or extending the compilation beyond the prescribed bounds. It will, indeed, be found that the rule of excluding such references has by no means been rigidly adhered to, more particularly where the matter seemed of extraordinary importance, or where the number of works on the particular subject was very limited.

It may possibly appear to some that I have, on various occasions, given undue prominence to Foreign works; but I have, assuredly, in this particular, been influenced by no prepossession in their favour. I have noted the titles of such works as came before me, without regard to the language in which they were written; and if, in several instances, the German and French publications in the list are found to exceed the English in number, the true reason must be sought for in the fact of such publications being really more numerous in the preponderating language. While I have, in no one instance, sacrificed an English work for a Foreign one, I have, on numerous occasions, acted on the reverse principle; deeming it but proper, where the choice was limited, that the books in our vernacular tongue should have the preference in a work intended for the English reader. It is hardly necessary to observe that, in the present condition of medical literature in this country, a bibliographical collection that did not include a fair share of the publications of France, Germany, and Italy, would be deservedly regarded as most imperfect.

It has been after much consideration that the Chronological Order has been adopted in the arrangement of the titles of the different works; this plan appearing to possess important advantages over the alphabetical arrangement, more especially in such a collection as the present, where the list of works is, under no one head, very extensive. The placing the date of the publication in a conspicuous form before the title, will, it is hoped, render the advantages of the arrangement still more conspicuous. The adherence to the chronological order has led to one result which some may think not always satisfactory, that, namely, of recording preferably the earliest edition of the respective works. Many exceptions to this will, indeed, be met with; and, now the work is finished, I regret that while I prefixed this earliest date to the title, I did not also subjoin the dates of the subsequent editions. The omission, however, will scarcely be found a practical inconvenience, since it is always easier to procure a later than an early edition.

In a great majority of instances the exact words of the titles have been given, although it has been found necessary, for the sake of economising space, very generally to curtail them: in no case, I trust, will there be found any difficulty of recognising the work under the title given to it.

Independently of the imperfections of plan and arrangement which may be found in the Bibliography, I am prepared for the more serious charge of having committed important mistakes in its construction. No one who has had so much occasion to consult catalogues of books and bibliographical references of all kinds, and, consequently, to become acquainted with the manifold mistakes to be found in even the most accurate, can be so conceited as to believe that he has escaped the snares into which greater men have fallen; more especially as none else can be so well aware of the numerous and facile paths that lead to error. In truth, there is hardly any department of literature—if I may thus dignify my humble task—so beset with pitfalls which it is impossible oftentimes to escape. As a matter of course, the titles of a large portion of the books are transcribed from catalogues or the collections of preceding writers; and if the books are themselves inaccessible to the transcriber, any errors that may exist will, unless of an obvious kind, be copied also. And when it is further considered how difficult it is accurately to transcribe numerous dates,—particularly when different yet not very different,—and that the copy has to pass through the hands of fallible compositors, readers, and correctors,—it is no wonder, in a matter where the substitution of one single figure for another is of serious consequence, that blunders may and do occur. I can only say that I have taken all possible pains to be accurate, and I am not without hopes, all the difficulties of the case being considered, that my labours may even be found not undeserving the praise of accuracy.

The Etymology and Synonymy prefixed to the different articles is, I believe, a new feature in works of this kind. I think, however, it will be generally admitted to have a natural relation to the main subject, and, at all events, it cannot fail to be useful to students and the younger members of the profession. The greater number of the modern languages of which synonyms are given, are become, in these days, almost necessary acquisitions for the accomplished physician. If of this number the Dutch, Danish, and Swedish may be deemed less essential, I shall be less solicitous about the accuracy of the synonyms in these, and less concerned for my own ignorance of them: for the names of diseases in the two last-named languages I am entirely indebted to Nemnich's Lexicon Nosologicum Polyglotton, a work of some merit, but far from accurate.

Of the time and labour bestowed on the following pages it may be prudent not to speak, lest the actual scantiness of the harvest should appear still more conspicuous in relation to the extent of the workman's toil: I may, however, venture to say thus much—that no one who has not actually made the trial is likely to form an accurate estimate of either the one or the other.

SELECT MEDICAL BIBLIOGRAPHY,

ETC. ETC.

ABDOMEN, EXPLORATION OF—DISEASES OF.

DERIVATION. The derivation of the word abdomen is uncertain. It is commonly said to be formed from the Latin verb abdo, to conceal, either simply from this word (abdo, abdomen, as lego, legumen,) or from abdo and omentum conjointly. It does not, however, appear why this particular cavity should be so distinguished, seeing that its contents are not more hidden than those of the chest or head.

VERNACULAR SYNONYMS. Greek, Γαστήρ, υπογαστρία, υποκοιλία, υπητήρια. Latin, Abdomen, venter. English, Belly, stomach, paunch. German, Unterleib. Dutch, Onderbuik. French, Ventre, bas ventre. Italian, Ventre, pancia, abdomen. Spanish, Vientre, barriga, panza.

1696 Baglivi, G. M. De observatione hypochondriorum in acutis (Prax. Med. lib. i. c. 6.) Lond. 8vo.

1698 Stahl, G. E. De vena portae porta malorum hypochondriaco-splenetico-suffocativo-hæmorrhoidariorum. Hall. 4to.

AIR, CHANGE OF—INFLUENCE OF.

DERIV. This word is almost identical in the Greek and Latin, and in the four modern languages, more or less derived from the Latin, viz. the Italian, Spanish, French, and English; it is therefore fair to trace it to the most ancient. The German and other northern tongues have another word from another source.

BERIBERI.

DERIV. Bontius and Ridley say that this term is derived from the Indian word signifying a sheep, on account of the supposed resemblance of the gait of persons affected with it, to that of the sheep. Good derives it from βερβερι, the pearl oyster, or other shell, and hence figuratively for incurvation. Marshall derives it from the reduplication of the word beri, signifying, in the language of Ceylon, weakness or inability, as if to express intensity of weakness.

Nos. SYN. This disease and Barbiers have been almost universally confounded by nosologists. Hydrops asthmaticus: Rogers. Berri berri: Ridley. Ballismus beriberii: Swed.

(For Literature, see DROPSY, also CLIMATE.)

BILE AND BILIOUS DISORDERS.

DERIV. The English word bile is probably borrowed immediately from the French, but is unquestionably derived from the Lat. bilis.

CHEST OR THORAX, DISEASES OF.

DERIV. Chest is an old English word, the more literal meaning of which is known to all. It and its congenerous northern synonyms (Celt. kest, Goth. kista, Sax. Welsh, cyst, Scot. kist) are commonly traced to the Lat. cista and Gr. κιστη, of precisely the same import, but it is quite as probable that the southern vocables are derived from the northern. When it is considered that the same word was anciently used for a basinet, the appropriation of it to the human thorax will appear quite natural to any one who has ever seen a skeleton.

Thorax. Lat. thorax, Gr. θωραξ. The Greek word originally signified the cuirass or coat of mail, and subsequently came to be used for the part of the body which this covered.

SYN. Gr. θωραξ. Lat. Thorax, pectus. Eng. Chest, breast. Ger. Brust. Dut. Borst. Fr. Poitrine. Ital. Petto. Span. Pecho.

CHOLERA.

DERIV. Gr.  $\chiολερα$  or  $\chiολερη$ . This word is commonly derived from  $\chiολη$ , bile, and  $\rhoεω$ , to flow, quasi bile-flux\*.

Nos. SYN.  $\chiολερη$ : Hipp. Cholera: Cels. Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Cull. Cholera morbus: Sydenh. et Auet. Var. Diarrhæa cholera: Young. Cholerihagia: Swed. Passio cholericæ, Passio selliflua: Aret. Auet. Diarrhæa cholericæ: Junek. Dysenteria incruenta: Willis.

VERN. SYN. Gr.  $\chiολερα$ . Lat. Cholera, fluxus bilis. Eng. Cholera, cholera morbus. Ger. Brech-\* “ Bilis supra infraque erupit, primum aquæ similis, &c. Ergo eo nomine morbum hunc  $\chiολερη$  Graeci nominarunt.” Celsus, lib. iv. e. xi. —I think the conjecture stated by Donnegan (Lex. in voce) more probable: he derives it, by metonymy, from  $\chiολερα$ , a gutter for carrying off the rain from the roof of a house, precisely as we have seen the word Diabetes transferred, by a similar figure, from an instrument to the disease. Others derive the word (and Trallian among the rest, according to Good) from  $\chiολας$ , an intestine, and  $\rhoεω$ , to flow, quasi bowel-flux in place of bile-flux.

+ “ Qui metuunt ne cholera cum iracundia Gallicè dieta confundatur, vocant cholera-morbus.” Sauv. Nosol. Method.

- durchfall, brecchrühr, gallenfluss, gallenrühr. Dut.
Galbraken, boord, buikwec. Dan. Galdesot.
Swed. Gallsjuka. Fr. Choléra, trousse-galant, mort de chien. Ital. Colera, colera-morbus, es-

CYANOSIS.

DERIV. From κυανωσις, the colour of blue, from κυανος, a blue stone (lapis lazuli), or blue flower (blue-bottle).*

Nos. SYN. Icteria cyanæ: Paraeels. Cyanosis: Baumes. Morbus cœruleus: Schuler et Var. Cyanopathia: Marc. Exangia cyania: Good. Cyania: Crieht.

VERN. SYN. Gr. κυανωσις. Lat. Morbus cœruleus. Eng. Blue disease, blue skin. Ger. Blausueht. Fr. Cyanose, ietère bleu, ictere violet, eachezie bleue. Ital. Male ceruleo. Span. Azul enfermedad.

* This word is eommonly derived from κυανος and νοσος, morbas cœruleus, and I believe M. Baumes originally formed the terun in this manuer; but this derivation would lead to pronouneing it short instead of long. The word κυανωσις is elassical.

CYNANCHE (MITIS ET MALIGNA).

DERIV. Gr. κυναγχη, from κυνη, a dog, and αγχω, to throttle, to strangle: literally dog-choke. The disease is supposed by some to be so ealled from its occasioning a noise in breathing like that made by dogs when being strangled. By others it is said to be from the patient being obliged to breathe like a dog, with opeu mouth and protruised tongue.

ERETHISMUS.

DERIV. Gr. ερεθίσμας, ερεθίσμα, irritation, excitement; from ερεθίζω, to excite or irritate. Erethismus mercurialis, a peculiar state of irritation produced by mercury.

ERYSIPelas.

DERIV. Gr. ερυσιπέλας. The derivation of this word is unknown, although many attempts have been made by lexicographers and nosologists to explain it. The most ordinary derivation is from ερυς, to draw, and πέλας, near; but this is very fanciful and improbable. It is much more likely that ερυθρος, red, is the source.

Nos. SYN. Ερυσιπέλας: Hipp. Gal. Επιφλογισμα: Hipp. Ignis sacer: Cels. Febris erysipelacea: Hoffm. Vog. Febris erysipelatosus: Sydenh. Maeb. Rosa: Sennert. Erysipelas: Sauv. Linn. Cull. Sag. Young, Swed. Emphlysis erysipelas: Good. Ignis Sancti Antonii: Auet.

(For Literature, see SKIN, DISEASES OF.)

HICCUP—HICCOUGH—SINGULTUS.

DERIV. Hiccup and hiccough, original English words, no doubt formed from resemblance to the sound characteristic of the affection. The same is true of the now obsolete English words yex and yelk, and the Greek and Latin synouyms λυξ and singultus, as well as of the vernacular term in most languages.

Nos. SYN. Λυξ, Λυγμος, Λυγγος: Hipp. et Auet. Græc. Singultus: Plin. Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Pneusis singultus: Young. Clonus singultus: Good. Lygmus: Swed.

HOOPING-COUGH—CHINCOUGH—PERTUSSIS.

DERIV. Hooping or whooping-cough, a vernacular English term, derived from the verb to whoop or hoop, to call with a loud noise.

Chincough, perhaps more properly kincough, from kincken, to cough; (Johnson.)

Pertussis, from per, augment. and tussis, an intense cough.

Nos. SYN. Θοπιωδης βηξ? Hipp. Gal. Pertussis: Sydenh. Huxh. Cull. Darw. Crich. Swed. Tussis convulsiva: Sauv. Tussis ferina: Hofsim. DERIV. The word health is a modification of the original Saxon hael: it conveys only a part of the meaning conveyed by the Greek derivativatives given above. The want of an English term to convey this meaning has been long felt, and is not yet quite satisfactorily supplied, although the first of the Greek derivatives above given, hygiene, or hygieine, (Gr. ὑγίειν) adopted by us immediately from the French, seems now in a fair way to be naturalized. It is not, however, very English either in its form or sound; and but for its pretty general adoption by recent writers, one might be disposed to propose hygiology as a substitute of somewhat more vernacular aspect and sound. All these words are derived from the same root:—υγίειν, healthy; υγεία or υγεῖα, health; υγείως, υγείειν, relating to or conducive to health, wholesome; υγείη, hygiene, that part of medicine which regards the preservation of health.

VERN. SYN. Gr. ὑγίειν. Eng. Preservation of health, hygiene. Ger. Erhaltung der gesundheit. Dut. Bewaaring der gezondheit. Fr. Hygiène.

JAUNDICE—ICTERUS, AURIGO, MORBUS REGIUS.

DERIV. Jaundice, most probably a corruption of the French word jaunisse, itself from jaune, yellow: jaunisse, quasi yellow-ness.

Icterus. Gr. ἰκτερός. Various explanations have been attempted of the derivation of this word. By Pliny and Cælius Aurelianus it is derived from the bird, of a yellow colour, termed by the Greeks ἰκτερός, and the Romans galbulus or galbula, probably the oriolus galbula of Linnæus; the looking upon which bird by the jaundiced person is said by the first-named author to be a cure for the disease and at the same time death to the bird. Others, with certainly much less probability, would deduce the name from ἰκτης, a ferret, from the colour of this animal's eyes.

Aurigo or Aurugo. This term is in all probability derived from aurum, gold, on account of its colour, as stated by Varro.

Arquatus morbus. This name is formed on the same general principle of analogy of colour, from the supposed resemblance of the colour of jaundice to that of the rainbow—arquatus, arched, applied to the rainbow.

Regius morbus, royal disease; so called, according to Celsus, Varro, &c., because it is best cured by the appliances and means familiar in the palaces of kings—

“ Regius est vero signatus nomine morbus, Molliter hic quoniam celsa curatur in aula. ” Seren. Sammon.

MALFORMATION OF THE HEART,
See HEART, DISEASES OF.

MEASLES—RUBEOLA, MORBILLO.

DERIV. Measles. This is a very ancient English word, and, if not derived from some of the continental synonyms, is at least from the same original stock, and means essentially mottled, speckled, or of various colours. It is worthy of notice that measled or measly (pronounced mizzled, mizzly) is the term applied in Scotland to the mottled state of the skin produced by exposure of the bare limbs to a hot fire, while the word mirles given to the disease now under consideration has likewise the same meaning, mirly, mirled, or mirlet, being synonymous with the English adjectives speckled or spotted.

Rubeola. This term, according to Dr. Good, is derived from the Spanish rubio, red, and was originally written rubiola, but was afterwards changed to rubeola in order to entitle it to the claim of a Latin source, viz. rubeus, red, or rather rubeo, to be red, to blush. It may, however, be worthy of notice that the Italians give the name of rubiola to a species of grape.

Morbilli. This term also, or its congener morbillo, is, according to Dr. Good, Spanish, a diminutive of inorbo; and although he does not state his authority, it seems probable that the measles acquired this appellation when compared with the greater malady, the small-pox, with which they had long been confounded.

NOLI ME TANGERE—LUPUS.

DERIV. Noli-me-tangere, Lat. touch-me-not, so called from its impatience of all handling, and its being aggravated instead of relieved by most kinds of treatment. The same name is given to certain plants which shed their seeds on being touched, as the impatiens, noli-me-tangere of Linnaeus, but whether before or after the nomination of lupus I do not know.

Lupus, Lat. the wolf; the name applied from the rapid destruction of parts in this disease.

Nos. SYN. Cancer lupus: Sauv. Ulcus tuberculosus: Good. Phymatosis lupus: Young. Carcinoma faciei: Swed.

VERN. SYN. Eng. Lupus, cancer. Ger. Krebs, fressende worm, der wolf. Dut. Uret, wolf. Fr. Loup, chancre, dartre rongeante.

NOSTALGIA, NOSTOMANIA, NOSTRASSIA.

DERIV. Nostalgia. A nosological compound from νοστρεω, to return, or νοστρος, a return home or a journey homewards, and αλγεω, to be distressed, or αλγος, distress or sorrow—home-sorrow, home-sickness.

Nostomania, from νοστρος and μανία, is the same morbid desire aggravated to madness.

Nostrassia, from the Lat. nostras, of our country.

Nos. SYN. Nostalgia: Harder, Sauv. Linn. Sag. Cull. Darw. Swed. Melancholia: Vog. Nostomania, Pathopatridalgia: Zwinger. Philopatridomania: Harder. Nostrassia: Auct.

NYCTALOPIA, HEMERALOPIA.

DERIV. Nyctalopia. Gr. νυκταλωπία, from νύξ (gen. νυκτος), night, and οπτομαι, to see, or ωψ (gen. ωπος), the eye; literally night-seeing, night-sight.

Hemeralopia. Gr. ημεραλωπία (not in use), from ημέρα, day, and οπτομαι or ωψ; literally day-seeing or day-sight.

These two terms have been inextricably confused, by being taken respectively by different authors to mean the same thing, one terming night-blindness nyctalopia and another hemeralopia, while day-blindness has been equally designated by both terms. Looking to the simple etymology, nyctalopia should be confined to the affection wherein the patient sees comparatively well at night and badly by day, and reversely hemeralopia. It will be seen, however, from the list of synonyms, that this appropriation has not by any means been adhered to, and even that the preponderance of authorities is in favour of the reverse nomenclature. Some have thought that the apparent misappropriation of nyctalopia to night-blindness may be explained by admitting the use of the α priv. between νύξ and οπτομαι or ωπος, but this derivation does not seem probable.

I. Vision lost or obscure BY DAY, comparatively good AT NIGHT—night-sight, day-blindness.

Nos. SYN. Νυκταλωπία: Hipp.* Gal.† Νυκταλωψ (the disease): Paul.-Ægin. Νυκταλωπιασις: Oribas. Νυκταλωπης: Aristot. Nyctalopia (or rather nyctalops, the adjective in the same sense): Plin. VERN. SYN. Gr. Νυκταλωπία. Lat. Luscitio, nyctalopa. Eng. Day-blindness, night-sight. Ger. Tagblindheit, hühnerblindheit. Dut. Dagblindheid, nagtgezicht. Dan. Nattesyn. Swed. Nattesyn, kattögd. Fr. Nyctalopie, vue de hibou, vue de nuit. Ital. Nittalopia, cecita di giorno. Span. Ceguera de dia.

* Οι της νυκτος οφωντες, ους δη νυκταλωπας καλεομενοι.

Prædict. lib. ii.

† Galen also uses it in the opposite sense: In Isag. c. 15 ad fin. So also would seem to do Hippoc. (Porrhet.) and even Aristot.

‡ Pliny and others use the word in the reverse sense.

II. Vision lost or obscure BY NIGHT, good or comparatively good BY DAY—day-sight, night-blindness.

PLAQUE—PESTIS.

DERIV. The English word plague, which is not merely synonymous but identical with the German pluge, and the Dutch plaag,* is either derived directly from the Latin plaga, Gr. πληγη, a blow, stroke or wound, (from πληγω, to strike,) or both rise from a still remoter root.

The English words pest, pestilence, and their congeners in the other modern languages (see below), are entirely transferred from the Latin words pestis and pestilentia, having precisely the same meaning.

PLEURISY, PLEURITIS.

DERIV. The English word pleurisy is probably derived immediately from the French pleurésie, and both, obviously, from the Latin pleurisis, a classical word, but less common than pleuritis, which last is a mere transcription of the original Greek  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta$ , derived from  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\alpha$ , the side, and literally signifying lateral, but used absolutely and substantively as the name of the disease in lieu of  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta\ \nu\sigma\sigma$ , the side disease, or pleurisy.

Nos. SYN.  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta$ : Hipp. Morbus pleuriticus: Cels. Passio pleuritica: Cœl.-Aurel. Pleuresis: Gordoni, Sydenh. Pleuritica febris: Hoffm. Pleuritica: Linn. Pleura furens: Van-Helm. Mediastina: Vog. Morbus costalis: Verna. Pleuritis: Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Boerh. Junek. Swed. Pneumonia pleuritis: Cull. Cauma pleuritis: Young. Empresma pleuritis: Good. Pleuritis pulmonis, Pleuripneumonia, Pleuroperipneumonia, Peripneumo-pleuritis: Auct.

VERN. SYN. Gr.  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta$ . Lat. Pleuritis, pleurysis, dolor lateris, inflammatio pleurae. Eng. Pleurisy, pain in the side, side-ache, inflammation on the chest. Ger. Seitenwehe, seitenstechen, seitenstich, entzündung des rippenfells, brustfellentzündung. Dut. Zydewce, pleuris, steeking iu de zyde. Dan. Pleurits, hold og sting, side-sting. Swed. Häll och sting. Fr. Pleurésie, point de côté. ## PLETHORA.

DERIV. Gr.  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta$ , fulness, repletion; from  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\omega$ , to fill, to be full, or  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\theta\zeta$ , bulk, size.

Nos. SYN.  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta$ ,  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\theta\zeta$ ,  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta\ \sigma\omega\mu\alpha$ ,  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta\ \delta\iota\alpha\theta\iota\zeta\ \sigma\iota\zeta\iota\zeta$ : Gal. Plethora: Linn. Sag. Good. Polychymia: Swed.

VERN. SYN. Gr.  $\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\tau\iota\zeta$ . Lat. Pletura, repletura, repletio. Eng. Plethora, fulness, full habit of body, redundancy of blood. Ger. Vollblütigkeit. Dut. Bloedrykheid, overvloed van bloed. Dan. Fuldblodighed, blodfylde. Swed. Blodfylla. Fr. Pléthore, plénitude de sang, surabondance de sang. Ital. Pletora, abbondanza di sangue. ### PNEUMONIA, PERIPNEUMONIA, PNEUMONITIS.

DERIV. Gr. πνευμονία and περιπνευμονία, from πνευμα, gen. πνευμονος, the lung, from πνεύμα, the breath, from πνεύω, to breathe. Πνευμονία and περιπνευμονία are synonymous, although the etymology of the latter word would seem to imply either a more intense degree of the disease, or else a more superficial affection.

NOS. SYN. πνευμονία : Aret. Πεπνευμονία, Περιπνευμονίη νοσος : Dioscor. Vehemens morbus περιπνευμονία : Cels. Pneumonia : Cull. Crich. Parr. Peripneumonia : Coel.-Aurel. Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Boerh. ### PNEUMOTHORAX.

DERIV. A nosological compound, framed by Itard, from πνεύμα, air, and θώραξ, the chest—air in the chest. The construction of the term pneumothorax has been criticised as not being in accordance with the more common mode of formation of Greek compounds. It is alledged that the dative, and not the nominative, of the first term is properly employed, and consequently that the word should have been pneumatothorax. In making this objection, it seems to be overlooked that the Greeks themselves in their best days frequently used the nominative in place of the dative in compounding words. This is abundantly obvious from many of our most ancient compound medical names, as hydromyia, haemoptysis, and the other compounds of αιμα and νερον. (See note by Laennec, De l'Auscult. Méd. 2nd ed. t. ii. p. 240; and note by Dr. Houghton, Cyc. of Pract. Med. vol. iii. p. 451.)

It must, however, be admitted that, as we had previously many terms relating to the lungs commencing with pneumo, and several relating to air commencing with pneumato, it might have been better for the sake of uniformity to have employed the term pneumato-thorax.

RICKETS—RHACHITIS—RACHITIS.

DERIV. Rickets. An original English word of unknown derivation. May it not possibly be derived from the Dutch ruggegraat, or the German rückgrath, the spine, from this part being that which is most conspicuously affected by the disease? A very slight modification of the pronunciation of either of these words would produce the English word; but it is an obvious objection to this origin that the word is naturalized in England and neither in Holland nor Germany. Dr. Good thinks it probably derived from the verb rucken, to rock, reel.

Rhachitis is a nosological term introduced by Glisson, and derived from ράχης, the spine, or rather ράχιτης, spinal, or dorsal, quasi ράχιτης νοσος. Rachitis is merely a variety of spelling of Glisson's term.

NOS. SYN. Tabes pituitosa: De Bart. Rhachitis: Glisson, Ploucq. Rachitis: Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Boerh. Hoffm. ### ROSEOLA.

DERIV. This term, which has been at different times applied to various diseases, as scarlatina, measles, and purpura, is no doubt derived from rosa, a rose, on account of its colour. As rossalia, however, is one of its Italian synonyms, it is possible that its immediate descent may be from rosso, rossa, red.

Nos. SYN. Roseola: Severin. Willan, Batem. Rubeola: Frank. Exanthisma roseola: Young. Exanthesis roscola: Good. Rossalia, Rossania, Purpura, Scarlatina: Auct.

VERN. SYN. Eng. Red-rash, rose-rash. Ger. Rothlen, wiebelsucht, wiebelen, ritteln feurmäsern, rother hund. Pol. Kur. Dut. Roodvonk. Fr. Eruption rosacée, rougeole. Ital. Rossalia, rossania.

RUBEOLA. See MEASLES.

RUPIA.

DERIV. From ρυπός, sordes or filth, from the ill smell and sordid condition of the diseased parts. Bateman.

Nos. SYN. Rupia: Batem. Ecpysis rhypia: Good.

SCORBUTUS—SCURVY.

DERIV. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the origin of the word scorbutus, but it seems at least certain that it is only a Latinized variation of the vernacular name of the disease among northern nations, whether seorb, schorbuk, scharbock, or skorbut. The English term, anciently scorbie, is obviously another branch of the same stock.

NOS. SYN. Scorbutus: Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Boerh. Hoffm. Junck. Cull. Swed. Scorbutus nauticus: Young. Porphyra nautica: Good. Morbus polyrrhinos et polymorphos: Maynwaring (Swed.)

VERN. SYN. Eug. Scurvy. Ger. Scharbock, skorbut. Dut. Scheurbuik, blaaweschuit, schim-melziekte, blaawzugt. Dan. Skörbug, skiorbug. Swed. Skörbjug, gastkramod. Fr. Scorbute. Ital. Scorbuto. Span. Escorbuto, berben, mal de Loanda.

SCROFULA—SCROPHULA—STRUMA.

DERIV. We find the word scrofula, or rather scrofulae in the plural, employed for the first time to signify the present disease, or one supposed analogous to it in cattle, by Vegetius in his work De Re Veterinaria.* It is generally admitted to be derived from the Latin scrofa, (also written scrophu,) a sow, although the reason of the derivation is by no means clear. The same analogy, whatever it may have been, influenced the Greek writers (and doubtless the Romans borrowed it from them) in naming the disease, as their term for scrofula, χοιρας, is a mere diminutive of χοιρος, a sow.† Struma is the classical Latin name of the disease, and is synonymous with χοιρας: its derivation is unknown.

Nos. SYN. χοιρας, χοιραδες: Hipp. Struma: Cels. Plin. Linn. Good. Scrophula: Sauv. Vog. Sag. Cull. Macb. Darw. Young. Scrophulæ: Pinel. Choiras: Swed.

VERN. SYN. Gr. χοιρας, χοιραδες. Lat. Struma, scrofulæ. Eng. Sciotula, the king's evil, the evil. Scot. The cruels. Ger. Kropf, skropheln, skrofelkrankheit. Dut. Klieren, kropzweren, kiergezwellen. Dan. Skofer, kiertelknuder.

* “ Plerumque strumæ, vel parotides, aut scrofulæ jumentorum guttur infestant.” lib. ii. cap. 23.

† Might I hazard the following conjecture as at least not more improbable than some that have been proposed, as to the reason of the application of the terms χοιρας and scrofula, i. e. a little pig, to the strumous disease? viz. that the smooth, rouuded, conglomerated swellings of the submaxillary glands (to which the term was at first restricted) suggested the name from their fanciful resemblance to a litter of young pigs lying huddled together, or even from the form of a single swelling, bearing some resemblance in its rounded outline to the animal? This notion may seem to derive greater plausibility from the fact that the Greeks actually gave the same name of a young pig (χοιρας) to small rocks just rising above the surface of the sea, from their fancied resemblance to the back of a pig when swimming; and it may not be altogether irrelevant to add, that the swelling produced by a blow upon the face or head is vulgarly termed a mouse.

Swed. Körtelvulster, krofer, krittlar. Switz. Scrovole. Fr. Ecrouelles, glandes. Ital. Scrofula, scrofola, scrofe. Span. Lamparones, escrofulas.

SMALL-POX—VARIOLA.

DERIV. The source of the term variola is still conjectural. Dr. Good is of opinion that the Latinised word is derived from the Spanish, either from "an old Spanish word vario, a pock or pimple," or from the present vernacular Spanish name for the disease, viruelas, which he derives from the Latin virus. It seems, however, much more likely that the Spanish name was derived from the modern Latin one, variola, whatever may have been the source of this,—whether varius, variegated or party-coloured, or varus, a spot or pimple, as is differently conjectured.

The origin of the term pox, originally pocks, and of small-pox, is evident from the very word, pock, or pox, signifying in the ancient Saxon, as in its modern branches, a bag or ponch. The prefix small was not added until the introduction of the great-pox (syphilis) into Europe. Indeed in secluded parts of the country, where syphilis is unknown, as in some of the rural districts of Scotland, the variolous disease is still known among the peasantry by the term of the pox or pox, exclusively.

SOFTENING (OF ORGANS).

The derivation of this term is self-evident. I introduce it with the view of deprecating the employment of the French synonym ramollissement, when our vernacular name is at once equally expressive, and certainly more euphonous and convenient.

SOMNAMBULISM.

DERIV. From somnus, sleep, and ambulo, to walk, sleep-walking. The state is also called, though less appropriately, noctambulism, from nox, night, and ambulo. The subject or patient is called in the modern Latin somnambulus or noctambulus.

SYPHILIS—LUES VENEREA— VENEREAL DISEASE.

DERIV. The real origin of this term is unknown, although we find numerous conjectures and theories propounded by etymological writers respecting it. Swediaur has, very clumsily, I think, imagined it to be derived from συν, a swine, and φιλεω, to love, quasi, the fruit of a swinish or impure congress;—others from συν, with, and φιλια, love, simply, an attendant on venereal gratification; others, again, have traced it from σιφλος, disfigured, more particularly in the face, and certainly with more probability; while a still more numerous class have adopted the classical legend of Fracastorius, and derive the name directly from a certain shepherd of king Alcithous, Syphilis by name, who was made the first victim of this disease as a punishment for certain sacrilegious acts of his against Sol or Apollo—

Syphilidemque ab eo labem dixere coloni.”*

The origin of the phrases, lues Venerea, the venereal infliction, morbus Venereus, the venereal disease, morbus Gallicus, the French disease, &c. is sufficiently manifest.

Nos. SYN. Syphilis: Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Cull. Darw. Pinel, Parr, Young, Swed. Lues renerea: Fernel. Boerh. Hoffni. Junck. Astruc. Macb. ## TETANUS.

DERIV. Gr. τετανος, literally stretched, strained, or stiff, but used substantively as the name of the disease, from τιτανω or τεινω, to stretch. It has obtained particular appellations according to the particular manner in which the body is bent—viz.

Emprosthotonus. Gr. εμπροσθοτονος, or εμπροσθοτονια, when the body is bent forwards, from εμπροσθειν, forwards, and τεινω, to stretch.

Opisthotonus. Gr. οπισθοτονος or οπισθοτονια, when the body is bent backwards, from οπισθειν, backwards, and τεινω.

Pleurosthotonus, from πλευροθειν, side-wards, and τεινω, when the body is bent laterally.

Trismus. Gr. τρισμος, literally gnashing of the teeth, when the flexor muscles of the jaws are chiefly affected, from τριξω, to grind the teeth.

THROAT, DISEASES OF—PHARYNGITIS—

CYNANCHE PHARYNCEA; — Isthmitis — Paristhmitis; — Tonsillitis — CYNANCHE TONSILLARIS—Antiaditis.

DERIV. Pharyngitis. Gr. φαρυγξ, gen. φαρυγγος, pharynx, the interior and lower part of the throat, and the particle itis.

Cynanche pharyngæa. For the derivation of cynanche, see the word in letter C.—Pharyngæa, adj. relating to the pharynx.

Isthmitis. Gr. ισθμος, the throat, and the particle itis: inflammation of the throat.

Paristhmitis. Gr. παρα, about, ισθμος, and the particle itis: inflammation about the throat.

Tonsillitis. From Lat. tonsillæ, the tonsils, with the terminal particle itis—“denominatio dannanda,” as Kühn says, since it presents a Latin word with a Greek termination.

Cynanche tonsillaris. Gr. subst. κυναγχη, and Latin adj. tonsillaris. This combination is liable to the same objection as tonsillitis.

Antiaditis. Gr. αντιας, gen. -αδος, plur. αντιαδες, the tonsils, and the terminal particle itis. This is a word formed on better principles, but at present it is very little used.

TOXICOLOGY—POISONING.

DERIV. From τοξικον, a poison (plur. τοξικα), and λόγος, a discourse. Τοξικον itself is commonly derived from τοξον, a bow,—either, as Dioscorides says, because barbarians were accustomed to anoint their arrows with poison; or, as others think, because poison destroys life as rapidly and certainly as an arrow from the bow; or, lastly, because Hercules dipped his arrows in the (poisonous) blood of the hydra. Some, however, are of opinion—and I own this to me seems the most probable conjecture—that the word τοξικον is the name of a poisonous plant, growing in Syria or Africa. ## VARICELLA—CHICKEN-POX.

DERIV. Dr. Good says varicella is of Spanish origin, being altered from varizella, the diminutive, he says, of variz, a cutaneous tumour. It must be acknowledged, however, that this derivation is not very satisfactory. It would seem as likely to be the Italian diminutive of rario or variola. (See Small-Pox.)

Nos. SYN. Chrystalli: Vid. Vid. Varicella: Cull. Plenck, Heberd. Batem. Swed. Variolæ pusillæ: Heberd. Variolæ benignæ: Morton. Variola lymphatica: Savv. Pemphigus variolodes resicularis: Frank. Exanthema varicella: Parr. Synochus varicella: Young. Emphlysis varicella:

* Only a few of the immense number of publications on cow-pox have been selected.

Good. Hydrachnis: Cusson. Variola spuriae, Variola lymphatica, Variola volutica: Auet.

VERN. SYN. Eng. Chicken-pox, swine-pox, water-pox. Ger. Unaehlten kindspoeken, falsche poekeu, fliegenden pocken, windpocken, hünerpocken, seuhspocken. Dut. Windpokken. Dan. Skoldekopper. Swed. (For Literature, see SKIN, DISEASES OF.)

VIGILIA—AGRYPNIA— WAKEFULNESS.

DERIV. Vigilia. Lat. vigilia, wakefulness, or rather watching, from vigilo.

Agrypnia. Gr. ἀγρυπνία, the same sense; by pleouasm used for αυπνία; from α, priv. and πνεύσις, sleep.

Nos. SYN. Αγρυπνία, Αυπνία: Auet. Græe. Vigilia: Cels. Agrypnia: Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Good, Swed. Erethismus agrypnus: Young. Pervigilium: Boerh. Vigiliae immodicæ, Vigilium morbosum: Auet.

VERN. SYN. Gr. ἀγρυπνία. Lat. Vigilia, insomnia, insomnias, pervigilium, pervigilia. Eng. Wakefulness, sleeplessness. Ger. Schlaflösigkeit. Dut. Slaapeloosheid, waaken, waking. Dan. Sövnlöshed. Swed. Sömnlöshet. Fr. Insomnie, veille. Ital. Vegghia. Span. Vigilia, desvelo.

VOMICA.

DERIV. Lat. vomica, an abseess, commonly supposed to be derived from vomo, because it vomits or pours out its fluid contents. Triller, however, thinks that it is more probably derived from the Greek word φυμα, which is synonymous with the Latin vomica, by the formation, first, of an adjective φυμικός, φυμικη, and then taking this substantively, φυμικη, from which, he says, “sponte naseitur vomica.” This is all very doubtful. Formerly the term vomica was applied to any internal or viscerel abseess, it being only of late years that it has been restricted to abseess in the lungs.

Nos. SYN. Vomica: Cels. Linn. Vog. Cull. Boerh. Junek. Apostema vomica: Sauv. Good.

VERN. SYN. Eng. Imposthume in the lungs, abseess in the lungs. Ger. Lungengesehwür, eitersack. Dut. Longezweer, etterzak, etterbuil. Dan. Lungebyld. Swed. Lungböld, etterböld, varsäck. Fr. Vomique, abeës dans le poumon. Ital. Vomica. Span. Vomica.

(See LUNGS, DISEASES OF, and PHTHISIS PULMONALIS.)

VOMITING.

DERIV. Lat. vomitus, vomitio, vomilium, vomiting, from vomito, to keep vomiting, from vomo, to vomit.

Nos. SYN. Εμεσία: Hipp. Vomitus: Cels. Sauv. Linn. Vog. Sag. Palpus vomitus: Young. Emesis vomitus: Good. Hyperemesis: Swed.

VERN. SYN. Gr. Εμετός, Εμετία. Lat. Vomitus, vomitio, vomitinm. Eng. Vomiting, puking, spewing. Ger. Erbreihen, übergeben, brechen. Dut. Braaking, spouwing. Dan. Brækning, opkastelse, spyening. Fr. Vomissement. Ital. Vomizione, vomito. Span. Vomito.

WATERS, MINERAL.

DERIV. The term mineral, as applied to waters, is derived from the unclassical Latin adjective mineralis, signifying metallic, and this from the equally barbarous word minera, a metallic vein.

SYN. Aquæ minerales, aquæ medicatæ, aquæ soteriae, (Gr. σωτηριος, salutaris, οδατα σωτηρια): Auct. Lat. rec. Ger. Mineralwasser. Dut. Bergwerk-wateren, mineraal-wateren. Fr. Eaux minérales. Ital. Acque minerali. Span. Aguas minerales.

WORMS—VERMES—ENTOZOA— VERMINATION.

DERIV. The English and Dutch worm and the Latin vermis are probably derived from the same original souree. The disease implying the presence of these animals in the human body, is frequently indicated by the plural of the vernacular term.

Entozoa, a modern term, is derived from the Gr. εντος, within, and ζωα, plural of ζων, an animal, quasi inside-animals.

Vermilion, Lat. verminatio, a breeding of worms, from vermino, to breed worms, from vermis.

Nos. SYN. Verminatio: Plin. Helminthia: Good. Parasitismus intestinalis: Young. Helminthiasis: Swed.

YAWS—FRAMBÆSIA.

DERIV. Yaw, or yaws, is said to be the African name for raspberry, and was given to the disease by the natives of Africa from the supposed resemblance of the eruption to the fruit.

Frambæsia is a sort of Latinised form of the French word for the same fruit, framboise, and was applied to the disease by the French nosologists after translating the name into their own language.

NOS. SYN. Frambæsia: Sauv. Sag. Cull. Ploucq. Batem. Phymatosis framboesia: Young. Anthracia rubula (from rubus, the raspberry): Good. Lepra fungifera: Cartheus. Thymiosis (θυμίων, a kind of warty tumour): Swed.

SECTION I.

*The works of the principal writers on Medicine, which have been published in a collected form.**

B. C. 400-300? Hippocrates.

There are a great many editions of the collected works of Hippocrates, as well as of particular portions of them published separately. One or two of the former can alone be noticed here, together with some translations of them into modern languages.

Hippocratis Coi opera omnia, Græce. Venet. (apud Aldum) 1526. fol.

Hippocratis Coi opera omnia quæ extant, Gr. Lat. interp. Anut. Fœsio, cum ejusdem et variorum annotationibus. 2 vol. Frankf. 1595. fol.

Magni Hippocratis Coi opera omnia, Græce et Latine edita Joann. Ant. Vander Linden. 2 vol. Lugd. Bat. 1665. 8vo.

Hippocratis opera omnia, Gr. et Lat. edit D. C. G. Kühn. 3 vol. Lips. 1827. 8vo.

Besides the above there are very many Latin translations of the complete works and the separate treatises.

English.—There is no English translation of the complete works by one author, but there are numerous translations of different treatises:—Of the Aphorisms, by Humfrie Lloyd, Lond. 1585. 8vo.; by S. H. Lond. 1610. 12mo.; by Th. # THE HEALTH OF THE METROPOLIS DURING THE YEAR OF THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE PHILOSOPHER'S MITE."

(Reprinted from the February number of "Tait's Edinburgh Magazine.")

It is recorded, in the "Life of Nelson," that while he was in command of the Channel Fleet, he received from the Naval Secretary a despatch containing a reprimand for the expenditure of certain moneys, defrayed for sanitary improvements on his own mere authority. That truly great man, in the presence of his officers, throwing down the letter with contempt, thus relieved the honest indignation of his heart: "There, gentlemen, read that! They taunt me with extravagance; but I will dare to tell these economising lords that it is impossible for any expenditure to be extravagant that is successfully incurred for the health and comfort of the brave fellows under my command." It were well for the population of London, and for that of the entire kingdom, if this generous sentiment could find an echo in the breasts of our political commanders at the helm of state. In each single week, more public money is expended by them, in the present Baffre war, than would suffice to arrest the formidable progress of taint-of-blood disease, in this our large metropolis of London:—"Whip me such economists, thou great God of nature." It is the object of the present statement to show, by conclusive and unanswerable statistics, that for even years, making all due allowances for real increase of population, zymotic or blood-taint-disease has notably and alarmingly increased; notably and alarmingly increasing; and, unless we content to renew the horrors of 1849, ought, by very human means, to be diminished. The object is no less than to arouse and instruct authority; to enlist the philanthropist and the statistician; to withdraw the film from the eyes of the blind, and the veil which has been thrown over a subject second in importance to none. Will the public believe that 3000 persons died of cholera last year, within the districts comprised in the metropolitan returns—little more than 200 only being recorded in the registrar's weekly returns? The reader, indeed, will find the larger proportion under the head of diarrhoea; but let him ask his medical adviser if this so-called diarrhoea be not the same disease in essence. Nay, let him refer to the registrar's own published opinion of the identity of the two diseases.

The superficial thinkers, the gossips, and therefore the many, are content to say, "Oh, it is no new malady! it is only the usual summer disease!" Let them look to the winter returns, week by week, and they will find more deaths occasioned by this so-called summer disease, with the thermometer at an average mean of 35 deg., than are recorded in the earlier weekly returns of the summer. So much for calling it exclusively a summer disease. Some of the faculty in London were schooled by the deputy-registrars not to use the word cholera, but many of them were too independent to truckle to authority. Again, they were told, if they used the word at all, to preface it with the prænomen "English;" though, in point of fact, the registrar himself dates it, no matter from what cause, from a period of only a few years past. Nothing can well be more puerile than a studied concealment of this sort. The beardless boy may be pardoned for pernicious secrecy in his first troubles, but not an adult and overgrown nation.

Obsta principiis, sero medicina paratur
Cum mala per longas convaluerat moras.

The fifty-two weekly returns ending December 27th, 1851, shows in the aggregate a mortality within the London districts of 55,359. The deaths in 1849 were 48,579. The year last expiring presents us with an increase of nearly one-sixth upon the total of its predecessor. But to state the matter more plainly, the mortality of 1851 exceeds the mortality of any and every preceding year, save and except that of the two years which prefaced the calamity of 1849, and that of 1849 itself. If we exclude the year 1849, and make a proper allowance for real increase of population, whether we calculate upon a sexennial, decennial or duodecimal aggregate, we shall find the deaths of 1851 exceeding any fairly-deducted annual average. But it is not merely by reference to such a mean that the true character of the future is to be fore-shadowed. If we find that blood-taint diseases generally are taking on the same character, and increasing numbers respectively as they did in 1847-48, and that their march responds in all their chief movements and courses to the progress characteristic of those specified years, we shall be led unmistakeably to look out for an outburst parallel with that of 1849. By reference to the official tables it will be seen that it took five years, namely, from 1844 to 1849, to develop that growing intensity of blood-taint which at last crowned the years of incubation. We no longer require a quinquennial incubation. With a condition of health by comparison clearing and satisfactory in 1850, we have managed somehow or other to do five years' work of deterioration in twelve months. Let him who doubts look at the tables. We will not stop to inquire how this has happened. What is done cannot be undone. Only let us know and understand the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and though it is impossible to obtain indemnity for the errors of the past, let us at least look out for some security for the future. To those who would inquire in what proportion the deaths of the transitory visitors of 1851 were ingredient in the totals, it may be answered, not more than a few, perhaps two or three hundred. Before the general reader can comprehend the various important truths it is our business to supply, it will be expedient to enlighten him on the subject of the census of 1851. We imagine him prepared to say, "Oh, we know very well that the population of London was declared in 1831 to be a million and a half, last year to be 2,362,236, and in the census of 1841 it was declared to be 1,948,417, showing an increase upon the last decennial period of 413,819."

Softly, softly, my single-hearted reader; do not be too sure of your calculation. Government authorities have another sort of arithmetic. Hear the truth. The census of 1851 includes the population of Hampstead, 11,986, not included in 1831; the population of Wandsworth, 50,764, not included in 1831; that of Lewisham, 34,835, not included in 1831; and the immense population of our docks and of our river, not included in 1841.* Add to this many of the straggling outside portions of the suburban parishes, lazily excluded in 1841, with an immense enlargement of the area; and no inconsiderable portion of parishes in the very heart of the metropolis, where the blank forms for return were left, indeed, but never called for: in a word, they have enlarged their area at each census, and the word London has therefore three different meanings. What was the extent of the neglect of subordinate agents, occasioned by the pitifully cheap system of taking districts by contract, and letting out the work again to untrustworthy persons, can only be known by reference to the returns of 1841 in detail; or, rather, by ascertaining the extent of the deficiency. Hundreds of housekeepers can testify that, even at open shops, the forms were left and the returns never called for. The period at which the census was more rigidly taken, in the third month of the Exhibition year, would also tend to increase the deception. The greatest approximation to the truth is that there has been, during the decennial period, a gradual increase of little more than 1 per cent. per annum. Now see the fallacy of taking a decennial weekly average of our weekly mortality, and then deducting for the docks and river population. At all times throughout the ten years, the deaths derived from the docks or the river must have found their way to the bills of mortality just as surely as if the floating population had been included in the census of 1841. They do not bury in the docks; they do not bury in the river.

If the increase of population has only been two hundred thousand in ten years, why put it down at four hundred thousand? Is it to bolster up the prosperous character of the port and metropolis of London? As well might we saddle our noses with magnifying spectacles, that our cherries and small fruit may appear larger to the eye. With all deference to our officials, to use the language of the East, "they make us eat dirt." Never was a more gigantic error diffused among the people, at the expense of the people, with a tendency, if not with the object, to deceive the people. These observations are not voluntarily made in a malign spirit of cavilling with authority. It will be seen that they are unavoidably forced upon us. The traveller whose progress is arrested by erratic brambles must either cut them away or be content to quit the path of his induction. It will be obvious that it is only upon a tolerably near approximation to a correct census that any inferences as to the improving or deteriorating condition of a community can be safely grounded although mere numbers only, without reference to other matters, will be found to be unavailing.

Amid the shuffling conflict of jarring interests which in city phraseology are called gigantic because banded, but which, when correctly analysed, and contrasted with the interests of society at large, will be found to be peddling and selfish ministers rise and fall, successively assailed puzzled, stupefied, and palsied, leaving, as the vestiges of their creation, some half-and-half lopsided measure of abortive legislation, sufficient indeed, to show to posterity that their attention has been turned to the public health, but plainly betraying that they have never been brought to an adequate conviction or conception of its true importance. Hence want of zeal, want of energy and the utter absence of any broad, intelligible basis, or of harmony in their legislative enactments. The sanitary bills brought into Parliament, as recorded in the public inventory, and the parsimonious authorisation of expenditure to work them out, have usually crept in at the fag-end of session. Contrasted with the sums lavished in the budget of state vagaries, the amounts voted must remind thousands of certain items of mine Hostess' bill against the big-belted Knight:—

Item, sack, two gallons . . . . .	5 8
Item, anchovies, and sack after supper . . . . .	2 6
Item, bread . . . . .	0 0½

Oh, monstrous! but one halfpenny worth of bread to all this intolerable deal of sack! The contrast, in spite of ourselves, forces upon us a very unfavourable idea of the morals and habits of the consumers, as it does also of the character of the house itself, notwithstanding that we hear so often vaunted through parliamentary committed that we are the first moral nation in the world.

But we pronounce each and all of these halfpenny items in the public expenditure to be extravagant, because the measures are inefficient. Wellington was looked up to as wisdom personified when in his place as a peer he remarked that the great country ought to have no petty wars. We know well that he meant to say that they are of a the most extravagant. He did but apply a general truth to one department of the State, which is equally applicable to measures for the public health. Magnificence on a scale ample enough to insure success is real economy. Insufficient power, petty ways, and contracted means, whether exerted against an enemy in the field, or directed to arrest a great social evil, will, in the end, be equivalent to senseless extravagance. We confess that although we can see clearly the magnitude of the evil, and can indicate the only effective remedy for it, we for the present, despair of finding a state-physician of capacity sufficiently enlarged, of humanity sufficiently general, with firmness, zeal, power, sagacity, and knowledge sufficiently tempered to enable him to take that lofty and magnificent attitude at the right hand of the throne which shall avail to dismay the selfish and overawe the turbulent representatives of jobbing speculators on the public health and the public credulity. When such a man, Heaven's best gift to society, shall appear in the descendant, and, throwing his heart into his acts, shall feel and diffuse the holy flame of benevolence and true patriotism throughout the ranks of the many, class-legislators shall hide their diminished heads, and banded companies shall be taught that to render their operations more wholesome is a charity even to themselves, though the change be effected at some reduction of their yearly dividends. When such a man shall have completed his task, what an exhaustless legacy shall he leave to the world? Millions shall admire the impression of his expanded soul, everywhere appearing in the memorials he shall have left for the alleviation of their miseries. In them still shall his genius breathe; in them still shall burn the consecrated Promethean fire of true knowledge; thence shall it dart into the breasts of succeeding statesmen, and infuse new life into posterity. Would that we could arouse the ex-nimate statesmen of our own time, and awaken their regret for having lost an opportunity so precious! Would that we could inflame their hearts with a noble emulation of the grandeur and magnanimity of the by-gone sanitary "Magnificent" of Europe, Popes, Emperors, Kings, Grand Dukes and humbler philanthropists, the Atlases who still support the name and dignity of State Hygieia, though it be now ranked among the inferior cares of modern statesmen, among whom, however, there is not one who has the eye to contemplate the sublime eminence once so advantageously occupied for the good of mankind, and from which they and their predecessors have lamentably fallen, generation after generation. If arguments are to be tolerated by the moneyed-interests of our House of Commons, except those which show them how to grasp their present or to enlarge their future profits, let them recollect that the seal of magnificence for which Sir Hugh Fiddleton was reproached as a mad spendthrift projector, ultimately brought to every hundred-bound shareholder upwards of ten thousand pounds; and let them refer to those rich proprietors who will reap the harvest of his exertions. When a long ministry shall be headed by such a premier

we desiderate, with the fire and energy of aatham, exerted for the purposes of peace instead of war, then we shall no longer be pestered, session after session, with fruitless speeches and abortive bills on the supply of water, with tirades on the own deleterious effects of gas and of smoke, with denunciations about crowded lodging-houses and the foul condition of our river, with disgusting tails of intramural interment, or of the inadequate construction or deficiency of our common sewers, on the seeming disrepancies and contradictory testimonies of the magnates of chemical philosophy; for the statesman's eye, glancing from subject to subject, pierces through the darkness and clouds attempted to be thrown over them, shall recognise the great truth that all these matters constitute only integral parts of the difficulty with which he has to grapple, and that as "it is the last keystone makes the arch," so all must be designed and constructed in harmony, before we can have the bridge that will carry us safe over.

With respect to the Cabinet as at present constituted, the amount of their intelligence, their capacity, and their sanitary exertions to lessen the growing sum of human misery presented to us in the form of zymotic diseases, is about on a par with that of the London costermonger who, under the wholesome dread of the vigilant eye of the peripatetic humanist, eases the collar of his shoulder-galled ass, and liberally expends a halfpenny for flour to cover the sores of the overworked brute, his chief productive spring of industry and emolument. The working men of the two Boards of Registration and Health would do good, if they could. Their present ministerial employers could not, if they would; for they lack the requisite conception for the undertaking, without which no set of men can ever be in earnest, and they lack the humility indispensable to their enlightenment. "Tell me, gentlemen," says the nominal chief of their staff to sombre deputations complaining of the social evil—"tell me what plan you have got—what practicable scheme by way of remedy, and I will give it my best consideration. In other words, teach me my business as the prime adile officer of health, and in process of time I will not fail to consider upon the eligibility of setting up prætice for myself." Meanwhile onward flies time, and onward flows the formidable current of pest, while listless at its margin declines the Registrar-General, counting the ripples, and numbering the putrid bubbles as they burst, with the same credulity and the same solidity of hope with which the simple swain of the fable awaited the exhaustion of another stream. Verily, verily, for anything he or the worthies at the corner of Parliament-street are allowed to effect, "labitur et labetur in omne volubilis ævum." Labouring in his vocation, the portly President of the London Physicians stumbles on the group, and approaching them with an air of offended dignity, thus, in his wonted suavity, expresses his disgust: "Gentlemen, why be content listlessly to repose on this unwholesome bank? What a beastly mess you are making with your swishings and swashings, your chlorides, your pumps and your hoses! Quid ad rem? Don't you see the current flow faster and stronger? What says your Registrar? Does not the poor, unhappy man tell you, that out of fifty-two weekly returns for 1851, forty-seven are unfavourable?—Oh, there he is—Please, sir, to attend to me.—You find health deteriorating for twenty-five or six weeks, and then, if your numbers be favourable but for fourteen days, you announce to your fellow-citizens that the health of London is favourable! In the present state of your knowledge, you will have to do this twice or even thrice a year, be the annual mortality however great. Don't you see why? Were you ever at the sea-side? Do you know what is a tide? As there is a tide in the affairs of men, so is there one in those of pest. These weeks you vaunt of are the weeks of transition. Pray, now, study the doctrine of epidemic transitions. We know the awkward bashfulness which induces grown-up gentlemen who have neglected to learn to dance to stipulate for taking their lessons in private. For the honour of English state medicine, pray send for some smart scion of the London University to give you a grind. The thing is easily done. Every pupil's medical primer will tell you, 'When the body corporate becomes suddenly and temporarily healthy beyond its wonted bearing, such phenomena are suspicious, and indicative of danger.' And the English Hippocrates gives you the reason. One autumnal epidemic always stamps its dominion over all the rest of the year: when it rages, it has the mastery—when it declines, but never wholly disappears, other maladies severally come in to play their parts. Between the two phases there are two, or at most three, weeks of transition with a diminished mortality; and 'priore scilicet diathesi confecta nova ne dum satis stabilita,' &c. &c. You know, gentlemen, that your predominant tyrant in our time is 'London Blood-taint'—call it cholera, call it diarrhoea, or, when the weather gets cold, call it bronchitis. In various forms it is now poisoning five thousand per annum. They cannot be said to die of natural disease. When the weather is hot, you tell the people it is English old-fashioned summer flux; when it is cold, you can trace never less than two hundred deaths per week by it; and placing twenty under the two flux heads of your catalogue, you know the rest escape public animadversion. When matters get very bad, you enlarge your figure for correcting your average, and taking in periods of pestilence, you put the best face you can upon your miseries. By-and-by, you will have to retreat on the numbers of 1665, with a round allowance of two per cent. per annum for increased population; a decrease upon the average, or, at all events, the smallest increase, you will have, if you can get it. Extracted, however, as you extract it, such an occasional exposition of the smallness of the public sore tempts a parody on the old couplet—

Your wound is great because it is so small?

Then 'twill be greater when there's none at all.

So now, gentlemen, I wish you good morning. You are all too old to be whipped, but not too old to be laughed at; and if your Grand Master, Lord John, has the same confidence to direct you how to avoid an evidently approaching national calamity, as he would have in manœuvring a Channel fleet or cutting for the stone, at least do not next, on the inevitable recurrence of cholera, advise folks to salivate themselves with calomel and opium, or to exclude from their tables even a moderate proportion of good wholesome vegetables. If he and Sir George disdain to consult us, at least do you avoid making English Hygieia the laughing-stock of the savans of Europe. Rest upon your oars if you like—take your pitiful salaries, with smothered resentment at your crippled condition; but have the wisdom just to hold your tongues for the future; look grave, and read Rochefoucault. Meantime, at parting, let me do the Registering-officer the justice to say, his weekly returns are not useless; for, when he gives two favourable weekly reports of London health, the faculty confidently prepare for increase of business."

We have an imperfect recollection of an anecdote told of that eccentric political constellation, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, whom we rejoice to have had as our godfather, though the fine which our Stafford paternity paid for that honour, in union with the mishaps of most of his general friends who had the honour of his acquaintance, an example of which occurs in our autograph-book, in the form of a dishonoured check on Hammersley's, marked "No effects." Walking down St. James's, two young brothers, noblemen, each took an arm and, after the usual inquiries after health, foppishly demanded his opinion of the virtues of asses' milk which, it should seem, had been recommended to them both as a remedy for their delicate chests.

"My dear young friends," replied Sherry, "I am not competent to interfere in such matters; but by all means, if you want to avoid the sad inference of domestic infirmity which the public appearance of these animals at your door never fails to indicate, go home and suck one another."

Our faith, not otherwise very implicit in the genuineness of the anecdote, received strength from our investigations of the school whence he derived his political creed. We can trace in it the principle inculcated at the light and soap-taxing academy where such men as Fox, Pitt, and, at a later period, Canning and Henry Brougham imbibed their prejudices against any interference in matters of hygiene. The founder of that school taught his pupils that these inferior cares belonged to the many, and not to state geniuses; and poet-laureate of the time embodied the opinion in their regades. Do thousands pine from over-work, foul air and the effluvia of factories? Society has plenty of benevolence, let them all suck one another. Does famine stalk over the land? Society has plenty of wealth, let the members of it suck one another. Are the many condemned, in a huge metropolis, to try to feed like Ghoulies, on putridity and like spiders, on poison? There are plenty of round, rosy-faced, rich citizens, let the community suck one another. Do the many complain that they are three in a bed? "The last rose in summer" of this political school pronounced that Government had better leave emigration to private philanthropy; by all means let them suck one another. Does the population complain of a general water-dread, and of having to swallow down Noah's Ark-full of newly discovered lilliputian organics, animal and vegetable? The answer still ready. Social efforts and social competition are the best remedies; if thirsty, let them suck one another. Are the gas-collectors instructed to impress on the consumers that forty-six per cent. of their horrible mixture of sulphurated hydrogen, light carbureted hydrogen, bicarbureted hydrogen, quadricarbureted hydrogen, escape unconsumed, partly ascending to poison the air we breathe, and partly, through their pipe-seam, lissolved by the rains descending to poison the waters of our old town and suburban wells—what is that to your statesman of the oratorical school? Let society rectify the error; and, still, we say, let them suck one another.

Do the faculty complain that they are utterly without order, without law, in a chaotic state of confusion, without protection, and without being able to define their own qualifications to practise?

Monstrum horrendum, informe, ingens, cui lumen ademptum? Oh, says Sir James Graham, let them agree or no with their eyes out. Do they complain that society is poisoned by quacks and licensed patentees of injurious universal nostrums, with whom the successive Governments have been engaged? Do they complain that Government, so far from repressing, has shared in their spoils by their stamps and licenses, to the amount of millions sterling, diverted from the legitimate current of honest, scientific labour? Oh, says the same worthy,

Doubtless the pleasure is as great,
Of being cheated as to cheat.

There are plenty of them deriving a large income from the residuary practice, with which we do not meddle; let the asses suck one another! Do the philosophers of the art utter piercing regrets at new hospitals, in the face of evidence given the committees of the House, are so built, so stituted, and so wretchedly managed, that the mortality has been one hundred and twenty-five per cent. of the average number of inmates, according to the authority of the Registrar General? What's that to us? Let private benevolence see that; and for the funds to do it with, let them suck one another. Besides, the idea pleases us, dawn of new light at last pierces the dark political horizon. We recognise a new method of plying private benevolence to a cheap system of everlasting emigration, and one much more effective both to diminish surplus population and to relieve the gorge of our thoroughfares, than any proposed by Mr. Charles Pearson.

Does any Christian philosopher urge upon the Government, that while in some parishes of the metropolis the mortality of workhouses is less than eight per cent. of the average number of inmates, looking to others we find them reported by the same officer to respectively present all intermediate degrees of mortality up to thirty per cent.? Let the successful edify the unsuccessful and not plague us. Let the guardians settle it, and for information let them suck one another. Do the rural, most industrious, and, in the aggregate, by far the most important members of the healing art, absurdly called general practitioners, but really the general physicians of the public, do these, we say, in a mixed tone of sorrow and indignation, declare that the scales of their remuneration will not allow of their discharging their duty to the poor commensurately with progressed science? Still comes the convenient answer; they have only to refer to my Lord Brougham's speeches on the Poor-laws, and to suck one another! Verily they have sucked one another, and a pretty devil's mess they have made of it!

Ohe! jam satis! Boy! give us our bottle of eau-de-Cologne, and sprinkle us with roses!

Wherever our professional avocations call us, still the great social evil stares us in the face! If haply we are led to the enlarged suburbs which modern proprietors choose to call a something "New-Town," we pretty generally find a new church, or Catholic chapel; and, while we rejoice at the charity that points the way to heaven, we heartily desiderate as we move through the organic mud of the footpaths and contemplate the gulfs of knee-deep slough sarcastically called streets, that some consideration is not given to making more pleasant the ways on earth; for a march through filth to godliness, even in the "Pilgrim's Progress," seems to us most unnecessary.

We now have to solicit attention to our investigation into the history of the extraordinary new malady which from year to year appears under the various forms of flux-disease and bronchitis, and which might not be inaptly called "London blood-taint." We will perform this task with a simplicity and truthfulness that shall challenge and secure at once the comprehension and conviction of the miscellaneous reader. But first we must ask a careful notice of the table below:—

NOTE.—Fifty-three weeks were included in the weekly returns of 1847. The figures of the third head represent the mortality by rheumatism and dysentery, exclusive of summer cholera, which we do not take into account. We call diarrhoea bowel-flux on London blood-taint. The parallel progress of the two forms of blood-taint is modified by the weather in the summer and winter of any two years, but in the aggregate it is sufficiently striking to show the connexion. Such progress is in an inverse ratio with respect to the seasons of summer and winter, the climax of the one occurring after the descensus of the other; but in their annual aggregate, owing for modification by reason of intensity of either season, they have ascended together.

The reader will compare the relative mortality of each year from 1840 to 1851 inclusive. The diseases there selected for illustration are those in which such new blood-taint are most obvious; but, as might be expected, the many other heads under which fatal maladies are comprised are found to be swelled out in a minor degree during the years when such blood-taint is most rife. When we were young men, it was a very unusual thing in London for persons to die merely of flux or looseness, unless consecutive on some previous chronic decay of vital parts. We ourselves were in practice for years before we saw such a case. It was about the year 1826 when first such instances strewed themselves in our path every now and then. From that period up to 1831-1832, slowly, but surely, bowel-flux gained ground. In these years we were visited by the foreign stranger, malignant cholera; and the impress left on the general character of disease in this country permanently gave a somewhat greater impulse to the home product. Yet, up to 1841, we find that in the third week in August, the rifest period for bowel-flux, it destroyed only at the weekly rate of about twelve persons of all ages. Year after year it proceeded by gradual increments up to 1846, when, as the table will show, it suddenly pushed on its virulent energies to the extent of destroying 2,308, independently of those cases located by the Registrar under the head of cholera, which are not here included. 1846 was followed by nearly a similar extent of destruction occurring in 1847 and 1848; and these three years gave unmistakeable forewarnings of what might be expected in 1849, the year of the great calamity. In that year the Asiatic cholera was superinduced on our now yearly social evil, and its impress on the existing blood-taint of London increased the joint numbers of diarrhoea and dysentery to 3,833, and of the more virulent form of cholera to 14,125. Its utmost hebdomadal ascent in the summer of 1841 did not exceed 28, and occurred in the week ending October 2. Its lowest descensus of the same year was in the week ending November 27, when only 3 persons died of it. Please to observe that zymotic, or ferment disease, is tidal; and, like the tide, has its highest and lowest point. In 1846 the tide of London blood-taint flux rose highest in the week ending August 8th, when it carried off 201; and in the same year it completed its utmost fall in the week ending November 28, the lowest figure being 13, exclusive of three cases of dysentery. The tidal points in 1847 were—highest 171, in week ending August 14; lowest 14, in week ending December 25. In 1848—highest 187, in week ending July 29; lowest 15, in week ending December 23. In 1849—highest fatal tidal point indicated, 263, and this in the week ending August 25; the lowest was 11, in week ending December 29. In 1851, its highest tidal point of fatality was 200, in week ending September 6; and its lowest 19, in week ending December 20. We again repeat, that we above represent only London blood-taint flux, and exclude those more violent cases enumerated by the registrar under the term cholera, which was superadded in 1849, a year preface and foreshadowed by the phenomena of 1846-47-48, as it will again be superadded in a year, or two years, because again foreshadowed by the same phenomena. Let any man look at the tides, and he cannot fail to see what is coming. We have happily escaped the greater calamity in the year 1851, and, for the honour of an illustrious person, no man is more gratified than ourselves. Still it looks more like an escape than a cure. The form of the blood-taint invariably gives way at the end of autumn, to be replaced by another form that of bronchitis, in the winter. We are the first to enunciate this fact, although we can imagine no one looking at the table we supply without being convinced of it. The form is only determined by the season. In hot weather the tainted blood is determined to the bowels, in cold to our air-tubes. The extreme of heat aggravates the one, as the extreme of cold the other. Doubtless we have always had summer flux,* but in former years it was rarely fatal. Doubtless we have always had cholera. Yes; but the old English disease was wont only to take off at the rate of about 50 in the year from a population of 1,800,000, and we exclude it from our reckoning. Doubtless we have always had winter bronchitis; but not the fatal type which in 1846 suddenly lifted up its head as a winter continuation of the summer blood-taint. Again we say, look at the table. The experienced physician will discover the same essence, the same vital prostration by secret poisons, and the same microscopical condition of the blood. We have had no scarcity to account for our sudden increase of mortality; no severe winters, such as we know notwithstanding vulgar prejudice, are the most destructive to animal as to vegetable life. If we include the relative increase of bronchitis fatal to our blood-tainted population, we shall find that 5000 were cut off by the summer and winter forms of bowel and air-tube flux. The first severe winter will show how mercifully we have hitherto been spared in this particular. The mortality of the Exhibition year, great as it is, had probably been greater, but for the efforts made by all who wished well to the undertaking:

Forsitan et nostrum nomen miscebitur istis.

But whether or not, we shall always feel to our dying day a serene satisfaction, not unmixed with thankfulness, that all our suggestions were carried out to a tittle. Were we one of the chief philanthropists at the Board of Health we would rouse our whole staff, and say to the Minister, "Give us the power to serve the public; dismiss us, if you like, but you shall not degrade us. Either make us effective, or take our resignation and all the responsibility along with it. What great and enlarged system of operation can we carry out when we are so straitened as hardly to have authority to pay for a cab to follow out the suggestions of a registrar?" The witches of Macbeth boasted of a deed without a name. The gentlemen of Parliament-street and Somerset House can only vaunt in their establishment of health "a name without a deed;" for it is a resting-board, watching t unchecked progress of death by poison rather than by natural disease.

* Under twenty deaths per annum from all forms up to 1820

No new natural epidemic was ever recorded in the annals of medicine as having dogged the steps of the victims, like the hound that never quits the scent, with the silent but sure increase of pace from year to year, and with the invariable uniformity observable in London blood-taint. Every novice of our academies reads in the works of the fathers of medicine that it is the Protean changes of natural epidemics, their inflections, their chameleon-like transitions, both as to symptoms and degree of admissibility of cure, that constitutes their greatest difficulty. Such is the characteristic of natural disease. But arsenic, mephitic gases, and all other poisons, ever have acted, and ever will act, in the ratio of dose and resisting power of the body corporate, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever. Infinitesimal doses will purge, gripe, taint the blood and destroy life. This is the grand test whereby natural disease may be distinguished from death by poison. The evil cannot be rectified by the course taken by our Registrar-General in 1851. In vain will he augment his allowance for increase of population. In vain, after wriggling with slow increments, will he boldly approach to a duplication of his figures for allowance for increase of population, as he has done only within a time very recent. The laudable object of these changes, to show an average decrease, still escapes his grasp, if to mock his pursuit. It will be a source of melancholy amusement to pursue him in his awkward attempts to put the best face upon growing sease during the Exhibition year. After giving twenty-seven unfavourable weekly returns excessive of his regret, surprise and alarm; in his twenty-eighth (July 12) he takes courage and announces a favourable aspect; in his twenty-ninth, again raising his allowance for increase of population, he again finds material on which to repeat his favourable opinion. Here ends his fortnight's triumph. The Chairman of the Board of Health is then told what was seen clearly, that these two weeks were the weeks of natural transition, agreeably with a law of epidemics well understood. Accordingly, out comes his return for July 26, 1 with it an increase of mortality from 873 to 6, and onward flowed the tide of death till the next weeks of transition, which began in the week ending November 1; although it will be seen that increasing his figure for supposed increases of population, just in proportion as town had become pesty, he tries to anticipate nature by several weeks. Again he has his fortnight's period of transition and rests. Again he congratulates his readers; but on the 15th of November he is again impelled to announce a sudden and formidable rease, which week by week maintains the character for the remainder of the year, and will go maintaining it. Now this is pitiful, and the more so from men who have the presumption to incise Sydenham, a perusal of whose pages would save them for the future from such humiliation. The reader, if conversant with the nature and spirit of evidence, will observe a feverish anxiety in the reports (amiable perhaps), inducing him to overprove his case. Thus he commences the present year, 1852, by announcing 1,297 deaths; and not content to deduce in his own way an agreement in amount with the corrected average, he adds, moreover, by way of clinching his assertion, that he has included various deaths in which coroners held inquests, which properly belong to previous weeks, as if such additional numbers did not usually come in at the first week of the year.* Supposing his second view to be correct, then his average is wrong. If the average be correct, the sentence which follows is a mere delusion. Let the reader refer to the first week of the previous year, and he will find the same inquest-items, and let him recollect that the comparison and average is upon the first inquest-items—including weeks of ten years. Thus he will discover the value and object of this supplementary official remark.

In these remarks we have no desire to derogate from what has been done in former years, but to exclaim against official indifference at the last year's alarming retrogress of health. The history of former and earlier years, from the first organisation of their board, will convince any person who has patience to make the research that the increased mortality of London has never so much depended on increase of population as it has on sanitary neglect; and that, under sanitary exertions, the largest diminution of it has occurred under the greatest increase of population. Can we forget that when the census of London the less stood at 1,594,890, the annual mortality of 1837-38 presented (independently of the cholera of 1832) 53,597? Assuming the rate of mortality of earlier periods before and in the infancy of the existence of the Board of Health, with such a corrected average for increase as that adopted by our Registrar, the mortality of London ought to be 70,000 a-year. If such a system of altering their scale for increase, almost to a duplex, be their only remedy, God help the inhabitants of London!

To use their own words, "The metropolis has in itself all the elements of a healthy city. If the tides leave the banks of the Thames exposed, that great river sweeps through the city from west to east, and the winds rush fresh over its waters. The land rises in undulations to Hampstead-heath and the Surrey hills; pure water is abundant (?), and would flow under almost every street; the artificial heat and gas, noisome as it sometimes is, ascends in a vast column to the sky, and is replaced by under-currents from the surrounding country. Their wealth enables the citizens to take advantage of all the suggestions, discoveries and resources of modern science; so that the metropolis need neither be fatal to so large a portion of its inhabitants, nor undermine or damage the health of those who are collected every year within its circuit." (Vide Hare's Letter in the Second Annual Report of the Registrar-General, 1840.) So far as Nature's bounty is concerned, all he says is true; but as to the purity of the water, or the successful riddance of the gas, or any confidence in the wealthy of the metropolis being able, even, if willing, "to seeure the discoveries and resources of modern science," &c. &c., credat qui vult. When our sanitarian officer wrote thus, all to him appeared couleur de rose. Newly-installed and newly-salaried, he had no gloomy reflections that it is to the wealthy projectors and manufacturers, in a word to the marriage of enormous wealth to that productive but mischievous bride, that artful hand-maiden, Modern Chemistry, that we owe more than half the mischief. The reporter seems to have been enjoying that félicité parfaite, rudely but frankly expressed in the happy man's song :

The smoke is good, and the gas is good,
And the winds are good in hot weather;
The water is good, and our river is good,
And we're all good fellows together.

Parody on Old Song.

When we read his eulogium we are tempted to exclaim, By Heaven! we have deceived ourselves this livelong time! We had thought that in our long experience of external agents on the body-corporate, we could recollect public wells tainted by the gas—ourselves, for example, insisting upon the poisonous character of that which erst graced the foot of the statue at Charing-cross, and to the south of that statue, where it is seen no more; for the once-celebrated pump is removed and replaced by one at the north. We thought we could recollect, whenever we have examined the disturbed earth of the streets, finding it uniformly saturated with street gas! and year after year we thought we had heard complaints in the suburbs, of roads noisome with it, of ornamental plantations destroyed by it, of pipes, when replaced by those of larger calibre to meet increased demand, being a cause, inter alia, of local outbreaks of flux and cholera. We had thought that our own well at our suburban residence, and several public wells founded by charity, had been thus tainted, and that there existed irrefragable proofs that the London street surface is one mass of poisonous earth. "That great river, too, that sweeps through the city from west to east, with the wind rushing fresh over its waters," we thought it had smelt of rotten eggs; and for the abundant supply of pure water—how this world is given to error! The eels were said to get used to being skinned, and the apprehensions here expressed in the Registrar-General's Report, in a sickly year, indeed, but yet at a time when by all the three forms of blood-taint, London folk only died at the rate of ten a week, the year round, are converted, as the gentleman grows older and less sensitive, to a serene satisfaction in the year 1851; when, from their own figures, as here shown, the destruction by London poisons, independently of natural disease, amounts to 5000 deaths per annum, or about 100 per week, to say nothing of the other thousands, whose health being undermined become less able to resist the various maladies which flesh is heir to. The ordinary ills are bad enough; but we, no more than legitimate heirs, are bound to accept and act upon the fatal legacies of jobbing companies and smoke-and-filtheliminating factors, nor constrained to act upon their will to our own destruction, contra bonos mores. The Registrar-General may get used to it, and so may the Board of Health; but we will tell them it were better for society if both boards, instead of singing their own paeans, and magnifying the superiority of numerical arguments over Sydenham's natural method, would first learn the laws of epidemics, as inferable from that great authority. It would enable them to see a little further than a fortnight, as it enabled one to tell their noble chairman, at the earlier part of the year, that flux-disease would necessarily be severe; and the deaths rose one-fourth accordingly, by the bowel-flux alone, on the yearly aggregate amount of 1851, compared with that of 1850. The law was extracted and supplied, and a pledge given for the result. Lord Seymour and Professor Owen, an ex-Commissioner of Health, have the vouchers. These laws have for years been before the scientific world, and we know that not one has ever yet been disproved. We extract a paragraph from that code as being illustrative and instructive of the nature of London blood-taint flux :

The atmosphere of organic matter thrown off insensibly by every population, more or less dense as a district may be more or less open or close, and rendered more poisonous by the exhalation from common sewers, churchyards, vaults, slaughter-houses, cesspools, factories, gas-illumination, &c. &c., all commingling therein, may be sufficient to impress destructive force on the living, so as to receive and impart the processes of reaction in the zymotic principles necessary to the spread of typhus fever; but it is insufficient to develop epidemic disease, unless aided by that epidemic influence to which all progressive epidemic have been traced.

In the capricious visits of an exotic, as in sweating sickness, the earlier visitations may prove fatal to the poor: in the latter the poor shall escape altogether, and the highest classes shall be the victims. Thus in the three first visits of the sweating-sickness the rich escape; in the fourth they began to suffer; in the fifth severely; and in the sixth extensively and exclusively, the poor escape universally. So, in our own time, this capricious character of new epidemics is still preserved. The Irish typhus, new epidemic, which first appeared in 1816, was for many years limited to the poor; but in the progression of its unhappy naturalisation it has found its way to the upper classes, and when contagiously introduced among the families it is growing proportionably more fatal to the than to the poor themselves.*

As in common poisons some, as for example tobacco hydrocyanic acid, foxglove, or the ancient state poison Athens, subdue and extinguish the powers of life without exciting reaction; others equally fatal excite violent inflammatory reaction and excessive heat; as corrosive sublimate, arsenic, cantharides; so it is with atmospheric poisons developed by chemical and epidemical forces manufacturing towns — some are remarkable for their relaxing and prostrating effects on the nerves and tissues as cholera superadded on London blood-taint, others rapidly developing violent, active, and destructive inflammations, as plague; and some forces also, like common poisons, produce mixed effects, as that of violent influenza.

Reference to the registry of disease all over the world, just as special reference to the registry of disease in Great Britain, and to our army and navy medical returns for all our possessions, will show that bowel-flux when epidemic arrests catarrh; and, vice versa, the number of cases of catarrh or bronchitis will gradually ascend in an exact ratio with the descent of bowel-flux. In all epidemics, ordinary and extraordinary, naturalised and exotic, in proportion as the forces relax the bowels they will manifest less energetic action on the skin and on the air-passages; not excepting the poisonous epidemic forces of small-pox, for this last has at one time manifested its influence by inducing all ordinary febrile symptoms, except the eruption, for which in 1668 a diarrhoea or spontaneous aliviation was substituted. This explains why, in Asiatic cholera superadded upon its ally epidemic diarrhoea, the ever of reaction is languid and indistinct.—From "The Laws of Epidemics, or Code of Safety, by G. F. Collier, M.D."

* The mortality (according to a Government report) has been much greater among the higher ranks of society whom the disease has attacked, than in the labouring-classes; and the physicians and other attendants, as well as the clergy, have felt its destructive force in much more than an ordinary proportion.

It is but reasonable that as we have spoken so freely of the extent of a great social evil, and of the reprehensible listlessness with which it is allowed to spread, that we should be prepared with hints for the correction and remedy.

We will do this with the confidence and facility that can only result from long acquaintance with the subject in all its bearings. We speak with the use of an enteritus professor. Happy the Government, if they will listen and receive knowledge. Thus, if we had their ear, we would address them:

My lords and gentlemen,—Thirty years ago not twenty people died annually of diarrhoea. Now, ear 3000 die of it, not from natural disease, but undermined and poisoned.

The appearance of a new epidemical disease in my country ought not to excite surprise; for good reasons were proffered by John Hunter, and by others after him, for believing that under the modifing force of epidemical influence new poisons are constantly produced among the poor of great cities. collection of causes concurring produce malignant and fatally acute disease, simulating epidemical sease, without epidemical influence; but it is contrary to the experience of ages that such disease could permanently spread itself over a great extent of country, unless aided by meteorologic fluence, and developed by the like combined isonous forces.

These poisonous forces have more than doubled since 1846, and they are undermining your manufacturing population. The remedy is not in a gle panacea, but in the judicious use of the state materia Medica. In 1776 the evil was anticipated Dr. Samuel Johnson, and his friend Dr. Brockby. Even then (Vide Gentleman's Magazine & the Annual Register for 1776) the Government of that time were told that they could not for ny years longer be allowed to remain blind to evil, or deaf to an appeal for the remedy. We but repeat the advice then given without any siderable enlargement or merit of our own. ate your proper ædilian officers, incorporate ir duties with those of the inspectors of build-s of all kinds above and below the street earth, Greece and Rome did in their best times. Let public buildings, whether for worship, amusement, or utility, be erected agreeably with the laws health, and not at the lawless caprice of wealth anatism. Abolish and prohibit all intramural interment, and let the numerous places hitherto appropriated to that use be converted, after being treated with a stratum of quick-lime, into lawns, walks, gardens, squares, and such-like useful and ornamental objects; but by no means let them be built upon. Replace your foul street-earth with a more salubrious material.

To supply the defect of burying-places, other grounds should be chosen, at proper distances, on the north side of a city, as southern winds are more sultry and likely to convey to the inhabitants any noxious exhalation; the diffusion of which, it is well known, northern winds tend rather to check than to promote. See that the increase of trade, and crowded assemblage consequent thereon, be allowed to produce the least possible damage, whether where merchants most do congregate or in the more fashionable atmosphere of a court. Control, as far as you can, the extent and impurities of illuminations and lighting; encourage early closing; supply an ædilian prosecutor to compete with the companies who saturate our street-soil and our wells with noisome gas—our water with organic debris. Lose no time in purifying our river; let the chemistry of manufacture be compelled to make obeisance to the Goddess of Health. Trust not the duties of an ædile to a mock analysing commission, with one commissioner doing his own duty, and secretary besides, at his own solitary board, not entirely useless under the premiership of Mr. Thomas Wakley, M.P. In short, neither let your army, nor your navy, nor the civil population, be poisoned with unwholesome food. Condescend to think for the many, and supply them with some guarantee that they be not dearly and generally supplied with unwholesome liquids. Bear in mind that tainted air is poisonous, as well as tainted food. Look to your hospitals, and to all your benevolent and parochial institutions, and see that they be not made hot-beds of pest, as some of them are now, without the slightest sanitary control, and with a mortality of 130 per cent. Give the mechanics more room for reereation; give them ball-courts to their baths and wash-houses; and do not be afraid of driving them mad, even if they have music and reading-rooms there; it would be better for them than the hot, reeking coffee-shops, where they seek relaxation, and more worthy of a great nation. In short, my lords and gentlemen, look to fire, earth, air and water. The first is hourly made an instrument for poisonous evolutions; the second is a mass, saturated with poison, which we daily tread upon; the third is tainted; and the fourth is corrupt. Learn that, as twelve pence make a shilling, a sufficing number of causes create pest; and do not amuse and stultify the people with brass-farthing, abortive, and, because abortive, expensive attempts at sanitary legislation. Again we say, "it is the last key-stone that makes the arch."
