"THE UNION must be preserved," TE URSDAY MORNING, JUNE 25 1935 MURDER WILL OUT .- Leglise who had been suspected o the murder of the two individuals whose cornes were disco tered in Bank's Accade on Sunday morning, was arrested In Tuesday afternoon in Madisonville; and will arrive here eday in the steamboat Corsair. The circumstantial evidence ge not Legliee is strong. His menaces on Saturday; the parge disk lying beside the corsea being that he had borrowed atances combined may lead to his conviction. Joseph Bardwin Esq has resigned the cashiership of the Garlight bank; ascigning as his reasons that the accentary duties of the office would be prejudicial to his health, and that they would militate against his other pursuits. Mr B's financial talents and acknowledged integrity would no doubt have assured confidence in all the fiscal transactions of the bank; and to secure them, he was to have been awarded a respectable remuneration for his services-about 6,000 dollars yearly.

We may regret this resignation without being surprized for we were rather astonished that one of his reputation, influence and income should have contemplated the acceptance of such an office, so different in its duties and requirements from his wonted active and independent habits.

The Pordras Asylum for female orphans is certainly an interesting institution, highly deserving the patronage of the public. We paid it a visit yesterday; and were delighted with the order, neatness and cleanliness throughout the essublishment. There are now S sisters of charity there; and they wonted occupations otherwise. The dormitories are emfortable and well ventilated; although they are not sufficiently capacious for the number of inmates. The same objection is more feasible against the infirmary room, where the patients are compelled from want of room to sleep two an a bed.

The girls are taught needle work in its most useful varietice; and their work is so neatly done that many ladies and gentlemen honor them with their custom. We inspected many specimens of their work; and of their writing.

The sisters of charity complain of the reputation of the Institution for wealth, as it deprives it of the support really required. After 12 or 15 years, it is expected that the property of the institution being newly leased, will support the estab-I'hir eni without subsidiary aid; but now there are ni ite inmates than can be conveniently lodged or adequately sup Pesides several failures have occurred of its subscribersand the usual support of the state has been this year derred.

We have therefore been earnestly solicited to acquire sub ser ptions; which we shall cheerful receive and publicly acknowledge.

Corros - Desirous of supporting the interests of the plan ters we have twice or thrice advised them plainly and pa'pably of the state of the foreign markets, as regards cotton .-Unfortunately the printed circulars emanuting from and di gested by particular houses in Liverpool and Havre who have commission agents here, cannot be depended on for correct nformation. The fact however is that this year the produce is less than fast; and that the consumption has been increased-thus rendering the demand much greater than the supply.

Now in the environs of Havre large cotton manufactorie are established, so that the consumption is increased; and although there was a greater importation of cutton in Hasre this year than the proceeding one, the balance of stock remaining on hand (as obtained from private authentic sour ces) is proportionably less than this year: hence a merchan. of integrity has written that the supply will be deficient; and that holders of cotton should not be induced lightly to part with their stock. Holders should be firm; for prices will be maintained or be advanced,

We have received a letter more prompt than polite from the collector of the port in consequence of a rumour which we gave yesterday on the authority of our news-collectorthat the reveaue cutter Ingham had captured one of the civil officers at Brazoria. We certainly did not shy that the capsure was by the order of the collector; and we must wait further intelligence to ascorta n whether the rumour was idle or authentic. The collector had previously informed the public through this journal, that he had despatched the revenue cutter Inghain on a cruise to capture American vessels etc. * nd to that information atone was reference vesterday made But if the collector had the courtesy to afford us the official information which he publishes three each and every of the antiadministration journals of the city, we might have wait to have purposely neglected the Bee and Courier in all his official advertisements and advices; although those two journals have certainly reason if not right to expect the priege of a preference in all such instances, as had been given by the consistent supporter of Jackson and democracy-MARTIN Compon. But perhaps it is useless to expect the courteous manners and consistent conduct of that noble Virginian, from one who is not disposed to breed-lore smong the supporters of the administration; and who has actually published his official communications and advertisements in morning journals, containing same day aspersions on our venerable president. Our present collector has not attended a single meeting of the administration party since he accepted office; and he seems disposed to oppose rather than support all administration journals.

RAILROAD ROUTE HENCE TO NASHVILLE A REINIGHAM called at this office yesterday, relative to the route proposed hence through Missiesippi to Nashville; and has made out a very feasible case for a route different from that surveyed and contemplated by the New Orleans and Nashvi'le railroad company. He is the representative of the opinions of many junction of apposition thus effected of adverse views must materially militate against the contemplated route.

But most of the most influential citizens of Mississippi are in favour of a route hence by Modisonville or Pearlington, thence to Columbus and along the military road to Columbus; and so onward to Nashville:—a route that possesses many advantages over the other. That other passes through an uninhabited waste; this would pass through a country well populated, abounding in plantations and villages. That will posses through swamps and be circuitous; this will pass through swamps and be circuitous; this will pass through swamps and be circuitous; this will pass over level lands, and be almost 200 miles shorter. That will but set cure the trade by an inland direction to New Orlsans that is now received by the river; but this will secure the trade of the expenditure of them. That will but set the cure the trade of the castern part of Mississippi, which now goes to Mobile—being about 200,000 bales of cotton at present; while it would unite all of the state of Mississippi in its favor. That is intended to speculate on the lands west and no the Mississippi is intended to support the Mississippisms without offending their remaidabilities. The will be related to their remaining the passage of the Catholic Emancipation. He wish his numerous co-operators, joined the Whigs desired them well disposed towards from act. We have seen the stand taken by Mr O'Connell intended to speculate on the lands west and no the Mississippisms without offending their remaidabilities. In the wild be related to their former places, and the wild speculate of the third to their former places, and will never the other former places, and the contract of the whole population, demand and will instead to the whole in favour of a route hence by Madisonville or Pearlington, west of take Pontchartrain; this is intended to support the Mississippians without offending their sensibilities or infring-Mississippians without offending their sensibilities or infringing on their local privileges and prejudices. That is intended to benefit solely the upper part of the city; this is intended to benefit solely the upper part of the city; this is intended to benefit all.

And now let the company and public decide before they Commit themselves further. Let any disinterested capitalist of chiam accurate information of the comparative practicability and unlity of both routes; and at the sametime of the oppoand utility of both routes; and at the sametime of the opposition or support likely to be given to either by the citizens have been tried and all the frauds. The only experiment that of Mississippi, and then let him calmly calculate whether he will invest his funds in a circuitous route through waste lands, merely to cultance the value of those lands and bring the fullest and most interesting account we have ever them into market; or whether he would not prefer investing met with of the nature and culture of tea, a commodity a small port them in the stock of the New Orleans and Nashville railroad which forms the chief bond of connexion between the company, should that route pass through the centre of the empire of China with its population of three hundred and and and are state of Mississiph over a cultivated and populous country, where the means of constructing the road are overly access:

THE MEXICAN REPUBLIC!!

By the arrival yesterday of the schooner Crawford, 9 days from Vera Cruz, we have obtained regular files of the journals of that city and Mexico, to the 12th inst., from which we perceive that a radical change extensively supported has been included. The leaves of the tea plant are nicked by the cultivator's family, and conveyed at once picked by the cultivator's family, and conveyed at once in a fresh state to the market, where they are purchased a particular class of dealers, who dry them under a shed, and in this imperfect state of preparation dispose of them to a second and higher class of traders, who so t the teas according to their qualities, and after completing the process of manufacture pack them in chests. The tea arrives in Canton about the middle of October, and the busiest period of the trade extends f om that time to the end of December. The traders in green tea amount in number to about four hundred, the dealers in black are less numerous but more wealthy. They accompany their chests, carried mostly by porters from distances of soveral hundred miles, to Canton. In Canton the sorts quoted for expertation do not exceed lifteen in number, about eight of which are black and six green, the prices varying from welve to sixty cents a pound.

In regard to the consumption of ten in different cont tries, the writer remarks that all the nations of Asia east of Soam and Bamboja are what may be termed habitual and imm morial consumers of ten. With the Chinese themselves the tea put is in constant requisition, from morning till night, with persons of both sexes, of ages, and all conditions. They use it always with oretnment is no longer to be a foderal republic, but a comtitutional monorchy with Santa Anna at its head.
