sides, except in the direction of the harbor, by an amphitheatre of hills, two of which, presenting rugged and perpendicular precipices from 300 to 400 feet in height, are called East and West rocks. These eminences consist principally of greenstone trap, and are conspicuous objects in the landscape. Three small streams, the Quinepiack on the E., with Mill river flowing into it about half a mile from its mouth, and the West river on the right, intersect this plain, discharging their waters into the bay. Of the two former, the first forms the eastern limit of the town, and the other of the city. Several bridges have been thrown across these streams, one of which, at the mouth of the Quinepiac, is a covered drawbridge, leading from the steamboat landing to East Haven. The chartered limits of the city extend 3 miles from E. to W., and 2 miles back from the harbor. This area is regularly laid out with streets, usually 4 rods broad, intersecting each other at right angles. Chapel street, the fashionable promenade, extends from Mill river in a W. N. W. direction, throughout the entire length of the city, and, with State street, is the seat of the principal business. New Haven is one of the handsomest cities in the United States. Nearly every portion exhibits a uniform neatness and elegance. The private residences are mostly detached, standing in court-yards, beautifully adorned with fruit-trees, gardens, and shrubbery. In Hill-house avenue, a delightful suburb on the N., the dwellings are nearly concealed from view, amid the profusion of foliage and flowers. Probably in no other city are to be found so many and such lofty elms. Temple street and several others are so thickly shaded as almost entirely to shut out the sun. From the great abundance of these trees, New Haven has been familiarly denominated the "city of elms." Another scarcely less prominent or attractive feature are the public squares, the principal of which, commonly called the "Green," and lying about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. W. from the steamboat landing, is, with its ornaments, one of the finest in New England. It includes an area of about 16 acres, bordered on all sides with majestic elms. Wooster square is a beautiful enclosure in the eastern part of the city, comprising 5 acres of ground, handsomely laid out and ornamented. Besides these, there are York square, and others of less prominence. The city burial-ground lies opposite the northern angle of the old town plot, and contains about 18 acres, divided by avenues and alleys into family lots, 32 feet long and 18 broad. It is beautifully adorned with various kinds of trees and shrubs, and in the summer season flowers are cultivated along the borders of the walks, and on many of the graves. The entire grounds are securely enclosed on three sides by a high wall of stone masonry, and in front by a massive iron fence. There are also three or four other cemeteries in different sections of the city.

Among the principal public edifices may be mentioned the state house, standing in the western section of the green. It is a large stuccoed building, modelled after the Parthenon, and contains, besides the legislative halls, apartments for the supreme, superior, and county courts. The new railroad depôt, recently erected in Chapel street, near State street, is a magnificent brick structure, with towers. It is the terminus of all the railroads conducting to the city. The state hospital, erected in 1832, is a handsome stone edifice, well situated on high ground, about half a mile S. W. from the central square. Many of the churches, of which the city contains about 22, are justly admired for their neatness and elegance. Trinity church and St. Paul's chapel, beautiful stone edifices, have their walls and roofs thickly covered with creepers. The Central church, North church, Court and College street churches, (Congregational,) and the Methodist church, are all fine brick buildings, with lofty spires. The three last have been erected within a few years.

New Haven has long been celebrated for its literary advantages, and for the intellectual and moral character of its citizens. At the college and the various female schools, there are probably not less than a thousand pupils from abroad, in regular attendance. Yale College, which at the present time, and for many years past, has imparted instruction to a greater number of academical students than any other institution of the kind in the United States, was originally founded at Killingworth in the year 1700, and named in honor of its principal foreign donor, Elihu Yale, governor of the East India Company. It was chartered in 1701; removed to Saybrook in 1707, and to New Haven in 1716. It has always sustained a high reputation, and at present embraces five departments, viz. an academical, a theological, a medical college, a law school, and a school for the cultivation of philosophy and the arts, each having its own faculty. The latter department has 4 professors and 46 students, who also receive instruction from members of the other faculties. The buildings of the institution occupy almost an entire square, which lies immediately W. of the public green, and is separated from it by College street. Fronting E. S. E. stands a row of eight brick edifices, five of them four stories high, containing study and sleeping rooms for the students. Of the remaining three, each of which is adorned with a tower or spire, one is the chapel, another the observatory, and the third, called the Lyceum, is used for recitations. In the rear of these is a second range, consisting of the chemical laboratory, Trumbull gallery, one apartment of which is occupied by the historical and other paintings of Colonel John Trumbull, the other chiefly by the portraits of the officers and benefactors of the college; and a large building, containing on the first floor the philosophical apparatus, and on the second the cabinet of minerals, one of the largest and choicest collections in America. Still farther in the rear, near the W. side of the square, stands the library building, a costly Gothic structure, (fire-proof,) 150 feet in length, devoted to college and societies' libraries. A little N. of this is another spacious stone edifice, nearly completed, called Alumni hall, in which are apartments for the Linonian and Brothers' societies, and a large hall for the general purposes of the institution. The analytical laboratory of the philosophical department is at present in a wooden building near the north college. The medical college, a handsome granite structure, containing the anatomical museum, library, lecture rooms, &c., is situated at the head of College street, about $\frac{1}{3}$ of a mile N. N. E. from the college proper. There are also several literary associations formed for the benefit of the citizens, one of which, called the Young Men's Institute, has a valuable library, and maintains an able course of lectures. Liberal means are likewise provided for the support of popular education. The Lancasterian school, under the management of John E. Lovel, has long been considered one of the best institutions of the kind in New England. There are 4 newspaper offices in the city, 3 of which issue daily, semi-weekly and weekly editions. The other publications are the American Journal of Science and Art, continued here since 1819, and edited by Professors Silliman and Dana; the New-Englander, a literary and religious quarterly of elevated character, and the Yale Literary Magazine, conducted by the students of the college. The American Journal of Science and Arts, issued six times per annum, is a work of high reputation, both at home and abroad. New Haven has extensive railroad communication with the interior and cities along the seaboard. A daily line of steamboats also connects it with New York. The facilities of the port for marine commerce, however, are somewhat limited, its harbor, though sufficiently capacious and well protected, being too shallow to admit vessels of a large class. To obviate as far as practicable this difficulty, a wharf, the longest in the United States, has been extended into it 3943 feet; yet from the filling up that is continually going on, there is said to be less depth of water now at its termination than when its length was only 20 rods. Further to facilitate the navigation of the harbor, the United States government are at the present time making considerable expenditures in removing the obstructions at its entrance. A lighthouse, exhibiting a fixed light 35 feet above the level of the sea, has also been erected on Fivemile Point, about 4 miles S. from the wharf. The foreign commerce of New Haven is chiefly carried on with the West India Islands, to which were formerly shipped great numbers of cattle, horses, and mules. Of late, however, this branch of trade has very much declined, no cattle, and but few horses, having been sent out for the last 15 years, though mules still constitute an important part of the foreign exports. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 6692 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons registered, and 13,425 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 13,070 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 1161 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 110, (tons, 21,356,) of which 77, (tons, 14,395,) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 108, (tons 20,580,) of which 13,874 were in American bottoms. During the year 3 ships, 4 schooners, and 2 sloops, with an aggregate burthen of 1195 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons, were admeasured. The manufactures of New Haven are extensive, and furnish employment to about one-fourth of the entire population. The principal articles produced are carriages and clocks, India-rubber goods, iron ware, boots, shoes, &c. There are 5 banks in the city, with an aggregate capital of upwards of \$2,000,000, and a savings' institution having \$835,112 on deposit. Gas is employed to light the streets. It is also contemplated to supply the city with water, to be brought by means of, an aqueduct, either from Mill river at Whitneyville, or some other available source. New Haven was settled as an independent colony in April, 1638, by a company from London, of whom Theophilus Eaton and the Rev. John Davenport were the leaders. In 1784 it was incorporated as a city. Population of the town in 1830, 10,678; in 1840, 14,390; in 1850, 22,529; of whom 20,341 resided in the city. Population of the city, September, 1853, about 23,000.

NEW HAVEN, a post-township of Oswego co., New York, on Lake Ontario; has a small village of the same name. Population, 2015.

NEW HAVEN, a post-village of Fayette co., Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Youghiogeny river, about 44 miles S. E. from Pittsburg. Glass and paper are manufactured here.

NEW HAVEN, a post-village of Nelson co., Kentucky, on the Rolling fork of Salt river, 54 miles S. W. from Frankfort, has 2 churches, several stores, and about 300 inhabitants.

NEW HAVEN, a village of Hamilton co., Ohio, about 17 miles N. W. from Cincinnati.

NEW HAVEN, a post-township in the S. W. part of Huron co., Ohio, intersected by the Mansfield and Sandusky railroad. Population, 1398.

NEW HAVEN, a post-village in the above township, on the Mansfield and Sandusky railroad, 83 miles N. by E. from Columbus. Population, about 600.

NEW HAVEN, a post-office of Macomb co., Michigan.

NEW HAVEN, a township in the N. part of Shiawassee co., Michigan. Population, 150.

NEW HAVEN, a post-office of Allen co., Ind.

NEW HAVEN, a post-township of Gallatin co., Illinois. Population, 126.

NEW HAVEN, a post-village of Gallatin co., Illinois, on the Little Wabash river, about 5 miles from its mouth.

NEW HAVEN, a post-office of Portage co., Wis.

NEW HAVEN MILLS, a post-village of Addison co., Vermont, about 40 miles S. W. by W. from Montpelier.

NEW HEBRON, a small post-village of Crawford co., Illinois.

NEW HILL, a post-office of Wake co., N. C.

NEW HOLLAND, a post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, 49 miles E. by S. from Harrisburg. It contains two or 3 churches, and several stores.

NEW HOLLAND, a post-office of Pickaway co., Ohio.

NEW HOLLAND, a post-office of Wabash co., Indiana.

NEW HOLSTEIN, a post-office of Calumet co., Wisconsin.

NEW HOPE, a pleasant post-borough of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, 44 miles above Philadelphia, and 15 miles above Trenton. It is the E. terminus of a projected railroad to Norristown, and is situated in a rich and populous farming district. A fine bridge connects the town with Lambertville on the opposite bank of the river, and with the Belvidere and Delaware railroad. New Hope has 1 academy, a Lyceum, and several factories. Pop. in 1850, 1144.

NEW HOPE, a post-office of Caroline co., Md.

NEW HOPE, a small post-village of Augusta co., Virginia, 114 miles N. W. from Richmond, has 1 church.

NEW HOPE, a post-village in Iredell co., N. C.

NEW HOPE, a post-village of Spartanburg district, South Carolina.

NEW HOPE, a post-village of Madison co. Ala.

NEW HOPE, a post-office of Tishemingo co., Mississippi.

NEW HOPE, a post-office of Nelson co., Ky.

NEW HOPE, a post-village of Brown co., Ohio, on White Oak Creek, about 7 miles N. from Georgetown; has about 200 inhabitants.

NEW HOPE, a post-office of Spencer co., Ind.

NEW HOPE, a post-office of Wabash co., Ill.

NEW HOPE, a post-village of Lincoln co., Missouri, 55 miles N. W. from St. Louis.

NEW HOPE RIVER, of North Carolina, rises in Orange co., and falls into Cape Fear river, about 10 miles S. E. from Pittsborough.

NEW HOUSE, a post-village of York dis., S. C.

NEW HUDSON, a post-township on the W. border of Alleghany co., New York. Pop., 1433.

NEW HUDSON, a post-office of Oakland co., Michigan.

NEW HURLEY, a post-village of Ulster co., N. Y., about 10 miles N. W. from Newburg.

NEW IBERIA, a post-village in St. Martin's parish, Louisiana.

NEWINGTON, a post-township of Rockingham co., New Hampshire, on the Piscataquis river, 40 miles E. by S. from Concord. Pop., 472.

NEWINGTON, a post-village station of Hartford co., Connecticut, on the New Haven and Hartford railroad, 10 miles S. from Hartford.

NEW IPSWICH, a post-township of Hillsborough co., N. H., about 40 miles S. W. by S. from Concord. The village contains a bank, 4 or 5 mills, and 1 academy. Pop., 1877.

NEW INSTITUTE, a post-office of Iredell co., North Carolina.

NEW JASPER, a post-office of Greene co., O.

NEW JEFFERSON, a village of Harrison co., Ohio, 11 miles N. N. E. from Cadiz.

NEW JERSEY, one of the Middle States, and one of the original thirteen, is bounded on the N. by New York; E. by New York, (from which it is separated by the Hudson river;) and the Atlantic ocean; S. by Delaware bay; and W. by the Delaware river, which separates it from the States of Delaware and Pennsylvania. It lies between about 38° 58' and 41° 21' N. latitude, and between 74° and 75° 33' W. longitude; being about 168 miles in extreme length from N. to S., and from 37 to 70 miles in breadth, including an area of 8320 square miles, or 5,324,800 acres, of which 1,767,991 only were improved in 1850.

Population.—New Jersey was originally settled by Dutch in the N. E., English in the central, and Swedes in the south-western part; but of these the English portion predominated, and gave tone to the rest. At present, with the same predominance, it partakes of the usual mixed character of the population of the Union. In 1790, it numbered 184,139 inhabitants; 211,949 in 1800; 245,555 in 1810; 277,575 in 1820; 320,823 in 1830; 373,306 in 1840, and 489,555 in 1850: of whom 233,442 were white males; 232,071 white females; 11,800 free colored males; 12,017 free colored females; 103 male, and 122 female slaves. This population was distributed into 89,080 families, occupying 81,064 dwellings. Of the entire population, 385,429 were born in the state; 45,012 in other states of the Union; 11,377 in England; 31,092 in Ireland; 2429 in Scotland and Wales; 581 in British America; 10,686 in Germany; 942 in France; 1257 in other countries, and 528 whose places of birth were unknown. In the twelve months preceding June 1st, 1850, 2392 paupers received aid, of whom 576 were foreigners, at an expense of near $40 for each person. There occurred in the same period, 6467 deaths, or about 13 in every 1000 persons. Of 203 deaf and dumb, 11 were colored persons; of 213 blind, 27 were colored; of 386 insane, 11 were colored, and of 426 idiotic, 16 were colored.

Counties.—New Jersey is divided into 20 counties, viz. Atlantic, Bergen, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Essex, Gloucester, Hudson, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean, Passaic, Salem, Somerset, Sussex, and Warren. Capital, Trenton.

Cities and Towns.—Notwithstanding New Jersey has on her borders, in the neighboring states of New York and Pennsylvania, the two greatest cities in America, she is studded over with populous and thriving towns and villages. The largest of these is Newark, population, in 1850, 38,893; besides which there are Paterson, 11,338; New Brunswick, 10,008; Camden, 9,479; Jersey City, 6,856;* Trenton, 6,460, and Burlington, 4,536. The other most important places are Hackensack, Hoboken,* Morristown, Gloucester, Elizabethtown, Rahway, Princeton, Freehold, Mount Holly, Bordentown, and Salem, with populations varying from 2000 to 4000.

Face of the Country.—The southern and middle portions of New Jersey are mostly flat and sandy, but in the north it becomes hilly, and even rises into low mountains. Some ridges of the Alleghany range cross from Pennsylvania, in a N. E. direction, into New York, bearing in New Jersey the local names of Schooley's mountain, Trowbridge, Ramapo, and Second mountains. The Blue mountains cross the extreme N. W. portion of the state. Below Raritan bay is a group of hills of from 300 to 400 feet high, called Nevisink hills, washed by an inlet from Raritan bay, commanding a wide sweep of ocean, and furnishing a beacon to mariners, to whom they are generally the first and last seen of the shore of New Jersey, on their voyages in and out of the port of New York. A range of trap rock, varying from 200 to 500 feet high, and known as the Palisades, coast the Hudson for 20 miles on the N. E. of the state. The shores of the Atlantic S. of Sandy Hook are lined with a series of inlets and islands, which are constantly changing. The country for some distance back of these is generally marshy or sandy.

Geology.—We abstract from Goodrich's Geography a portion of the following brief sketch of the geology of New Jersey:—The central and southern portions of the state are composed of the new secondary or cretaceous group, covered with sand and gravel, and containing valuable beds of green sand or marl, so important to the agriculture of this state, and which has worked such wonders in the improvement of the soil in latter years, and so enhanced the value of the land. In the central and western parts especially, the marl is abundant, and lies near the surface. In the secondary region are found occasional tertiary beds, composed of clays containing fossil shells. In one of these tertiary beds, near Long Branch, was found a nearly perfect skeleton of the mastodon. About the great bend in the Delaware, near Bordentown, commences a hilly and broken region, the prevailing rock of which is the red sandstone, containing shales, sandstones, and conglomerates in alternation, and covered by a calcareous conglomerate which forms a good building material, similar to the Potomac breccia. The palisade range is composed of gneiss, traversed by dikes of greenstone, while the valleys of West Jersey consist of alternating strata of slate, argillaceous sandstones, and limestone. The Blue mountains are composed of red and gray sandstones, and the valleys west of them of fossiliferous limestones and calcareous sandstones.

* Jersey City had (by a local census) more than 18,000, in 1853; and Hoboken, more than 5000.

Minerals.—The mineral resources of this state consist in the extensive beds of marl referred to above, in valuable iron deposits, (bog in the S., and hematite and magnetic in the N.) zinc and copper in the same region, besides a red sandstone, (much exported for building,) marble, limestone, slate, a very fine sand, (exported for making glass,) found in the S. W., near Maurice river, extensive beds of peat, copperas, and alum earth. The zinc mines of Sussex county are among the richest in the United States, and are now extensively worked; 950 tons were mined in the 6 months preceding June, 1853, and 4000 were expected to be taken out by the close of the year.

Rivers, Bays, Islands, &c.—Washed by the Delaware river and bay on the W. and S., and by the Hudson river and the Atlantic ocean on the E., New Jersey forms a sort of peninsula, so to speak. Were it not that its trade is monopolized by New York and Philadelphia, New Jersey has great advantages in position for a commercial state. The Delaware is navigable 120 miles from the sea for ocean craft of the smaller kind, and for ships for 96 miles; while on the Atlantic side, for more than half its extent, there are numerous inlets and lagoons admitting smaller vessels; and on the N. E., Raritan and Newark bays, and Hudson river, accessible to vessels of heavy tonnage; so that there is nothing but the circumstance mentioned above to prevent New Jersey becoming a great entrepot of foreign and coasting trade. Besides the rivers mentioned as laving the shores of the state, are a number of smaller streams traversing the interior; the most important of which are the Passaic and Hackensack, emptying into Newark bay, in the N. E.; Raritan river, draining the northern and central portions, and pouring its waters into the bay of the same name; Maurice river, in the S. W., discharging itself into the Delaware bay, and Great Egg Harbor river, emptying directly into the Atlantic ocean. These are severally navigable for coasters, in the order named, 10, 15, 17, and the last two 20 miles each. Raritan bay and Arthurkill sound cut off Staten Island from New Jersey. This island, politically, belongs to

New York, but by position, to New Jersey. There are a number of low sandy islands along the Atlantic, cut off from the mainland by lagoons. These are generally unfertile, and of little value.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—The Atlantic shores of New Jersey are renowned for their sea-bathing resorts. The most important of these is Cape May, at its southern extremity, which is probably more frequented than any bathing place in America. Its beach slopes gradually, and being covered with a fine, hard, white sand, forms a delightful promenade and drive when the tide is out. Here are about ten or twelve hotels, capable of receiving from 200 to 2000 guests; besides smaller hotels and boarding houses without number. Long Branch, a few miles below Sandy Hook, ranks next in the number of its visitors; but Deal, Squam Beach, and Tuckerton are also much frequented. A railroad is now in course of construction to Absecon, Beach, 40 miles N. E. of Cape May, which will probably become a great bathing resort. Schooley's Mountain, in Morris county, 1100 feet high, with a mineral spring on its summit, and commanding some very fine prospects, has long been much visited in the summer season. Brown's Mills, 20 miles E. of Burlington, situated among the pines, is considered particularly beneficial to consumptive patients. Among its natural objects, the Passaic falls, in the river of the same name, deserves particular mention. They are situated near the village of Paterson, which owes its importance as a manufacturing town entirely to these falls, which are 70 feet in perpendicular height, and form (when the river is full) an imposing scene. In the ordinary season of visiting, the water does not run over the falls to any great extent, being drained off by the mills. It has, however, at all times, a wild and romantic aspect. New Jersey shares with Pennsylvania another still more interesting object, in the passage of the Delaware through the Blue mountains—generally called the Delaware Water Gap.—See PENNSYLVANIA. In Warren county, 15 miles N. from Belvidere, there is a small mountain lake, perhaps 2 miles in circumference, at an elevation, it is said, of near 1400 feet above the level of the Delaware river. It is known to be very deep, and abounds with sunfish, perch, and other fish. The lake seems to lie almost on the summit of the mountain, and from its immediate vicinity is obtained a magnificent view of the river below, and of the surrounding country for a distance of many miles. The Neversink, or Nevesink hills, already noticed, near Sandy Hook, command extensive views both seaward and landward, and are crowned with a light-house. Weehawken Heights, near Hoboken, (the commencement of the celebrated Palisades,) are the termination of such a promenade as is seldom offered in the vicinity of any great capital. They command a near view of New York city and Harlem, and a more remote one of Staten Island and the Narrows, through which may be caught a faint glimpse of the ocean.

Climate.—The severity of the climate is somewhat mitigated in the southern portion by its proximity to the sea; while in the N. it partakes of the characteristics of the S. of New York and the N. of Pennsylvania. According to meteorological tables kept at Lambertville, by L. H. Parsons, in the year ending June 30, 1852, the mean height of the mercury at 2 P. M. for July, was 82°.43; August, 78°.40; September, 75°.11; October, 64°.83; November, 46°.15; December, 33°.29; January, 30°.74; February, 34°.23; March, 44°.88; April, 51°.76; May, 72°.04; and June, 79°.97. Average for the year, 57°.82; maximum, (June 16,) 97°; minimum, 16½° below zero, (December 27.) There were 37 clear days; cloudy, 40; and rain or snow on 114 days. Water fell 36.179 inches. The peach blossomed on the 6th of May; apple on the 9th, and cherry on the 6th. The present year, (1853,) between New York and Philadelphia, the peach was in bloom by the middle of April.

Soil and Productions.—The soil of New Jersey in the central and southern portions has much of it been underrated: though naturally light and sandy, and in many places poor, it is very easily improved, easily worked, and by the aid of the marl which it embowels in large quantities, may be made to produce good crops of wheat, Indian corn, and potatoes. Where the white sand prevails, as it does in some parts of the centre and S., and near the sea-coast, the soil is worth but little. The shore on Long Branch and Deal beaches is said to be the only fertile territory immediately on the coast from Maine to Georgia. The northern portion is well adapted both to tillage and pasturage, and is of moderate fertility. Some of the productions of this state are of particular importance to the great cities on her borders, as they furnish them with the greater portions of their musk and water melons, and a great quantity of sweet potatoes and market vegetables. The staple productions are wheat, rye, Indian corn, oats, Irish potatoes, and butter, besides large quantities of sweet potatoes, peas, beans, wool, buckwheat, orchard and market products, cheese, butter, hay, beeswax, honey, grass-seeds, and flax; and some tobacco, barley, wine, hops, silk, and maple sugar. In 1850 there were in New Jersey 23,905 farms, occupying 1,767,991 acres of improved land, (about 75 acres to each farm,) and producing 1,601,190 bushels of wheat; 1,255,578 of rye; 8,759,704 of Indian corn; 3,378,063 of oats; 14,174 of pea and beans; 3,207,236 of Irish potatoes; 508,015 of sweet potatoes; 878,934 of buckwheat; 91,331 of grass-seeds; 375,396 pounds of wool; 9,487,210 of butter; 365,756 of cheese; 182,965 of flax; 156,694 of beeswax and honey; 435,950 tons of hay; value of live stock, $10,679,291; orchard products, $607,268; market products, $475,242, (the last two the largest relatively in the Union;) slaughtered animals, $2,638,552.

Forest Trees.—There are extensive forests of pine in the southern and central parts of the state, much of which is converted into charcoal, and sold in the Philadelphia market. In the S. are some valuable cedar swamps. The other forest trees are those peculiar to the latitude, as various species of oak, hickory, sycamore, sassafras, dogwood, &c. New Jersey has long been celebrated for its peach, and the vicinity of Newark and Elizabethtown for its apple orchards. Plums, apricots, cherries, &c. are the other fruits.

Manufactures.—New Jersey is extensively engaged in manufactures, for which it enjoys great facilities in its abundance of water-power and fuel, and in its nearness to great markets. In 1850 there were in the state 4374 manufacturing establishments, each producing $500 and upwards annually; of these, 21 were cotton factories, employing $1,483,500 capital, 616 male and 1096 female hands, consuming raw material worth $666,645, and producing 8,122,580 yards of stuffs, and 2,000,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $1,109,524; 41 woollen factories, employing $494,274 capital, 411 male and 487 female hands, consuming raw material worth $548,637, and producing 771,100 yards of stuffs, and 350,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $1,164,446; 108 furnaces, forges, &c., employing $2,577,093, and 1996 male hands, consuming raw material worth $954,705, and producing 42,452 tons of castings, wrought iron, &c., valued at $1,876,247; 133 tanneries, employing $572,857 capital, consuming raw material worth $423,537, and producing leather valued at $724,466; and $409,655 invested in the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors, consuming 103,700 bushels of barley; 254,000 of Indian corn; 58,400 of rye; 409,700 of apples, and 42 tons of hops, producing 34,750 barrels of ale, &c., and 1,250,530 gallons of whiskey and wine. Homemade manufactures were produced, valued at $112,781.

Internal Improvements.—Lying in the direct line of communication between the two greatest cities of America, as well as in the regular route of travel between the North and South, New Jersey was among the first of the states to be traversed by a railway. Three lines of railroad cross the entire state; one of which unites Jersey City, (a suburb of New York,) through Trenton, with Philadelphia; a second, Elizabethtown with Easton; and a third, South Amboy with Camden, opposite Philadelphia. Another from Jersey City also intersects the New York and Erie railroad just beyond the N. boundary of the state; and yet another diverges from the same place to Dover in Morris county. Railroads have been projected connecting Absecon Beach and Cape May with Philadelphia, the former of which is already (September, 1853,) completed to Haddonfield; another, connecting Trenton with Belvidere, is in course of construction. There are some short side-roads branching from the main lines to different villages. In January, 1853, there were in New Jersey 348 miles of railroad completed, and 89 in course of construction. This state is also traversed by important canals, one of which, connecting New Brunswick with Bordentown, opens an internal navigation between New York and Philadelphia, and is the track of an immense transit trade between the two great cities and other towns further east and south. Easton and Newark are also united by a canal which is the channel of a great coal trade. These two give to New Jersey 145 miles of canal.—See Table of Railroads and Canals, APPENDIX.

Commerce.—The direct trade of New Jersey, though surrounded by navigable waters on all sides but one, is very small, being almost wholly carried on through the ports of New York and Philadelphia, though this state has several ports of entry. Her internal and transit trade, however, is very great, being, as before remarked, the highway between the two greatest cities in the Union. A large amount of coal, too, crosses the state from the mines of Pennsylvania to the city of New York and other places. The British line of steamers has its entrepot at Jersey City, in this state. The tonnage of New Jersey in 1852 was 95,716 $\frac{5}{8}$, and the number of vessels built, 38, with an aggregate tonnage of 3953 $\frac{5}{8}$. Value of imports, \$2491; exports, \$1439; tonnage entered, 2304; and cleared, 1393.

Education.—There were in New Jersey in 1851, between the ages of 5 and 16, 145,629 children, of whom only 88,810 attended the schools. In the same year the school fund amounted to $385,153, and $40,000 were appropriated by the legislature to school purposes, and $119,869 expended. New Jersey College, at Princeton, is one of the oldest colleges, and one of the best in reputation in the United States, having furnished some of the leading men in the nation. There are 3 colleges in the state, with an aggregate of 434 students, and 28,700 volumes in their libraries.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX.

Religious Denominations.—Of 807 churches in New Jersey in 1850, the different sects of Baptists owned 107; the Dutch Reformed, 66; the Episcopalians, 51; the Friends, 52; the Methodists, 312; the Presbyterians, 146, and the Roman Catholics, 21. The remaining churches belonged to the Africans, the Bethel Church, the Christians, the Congregationalists, the Free Church, the Independents, Lutherans, Mormons, the Second Advent Church, the Tunkers, the Union Church, the Unitarians, and Universalists—giving one church to every 606 persons. Value of church property, $3,540,436.—See Table of Religions, APPENDIX.

Public Institutions.—New Jersey has a fine state prison near Trenton, conducted on the solitary system, in which there were in December, 1850, 332 prisoners, of whom 58 were colored, and 54 foreigners. The prison yielded this year a revenue of nearly $7000 to the state. A house of refuge was commenced at Kingston, in Middlesex county, but after an expenditure of $20,331, the work was discontinued. The noblest institution in New Jersey is her insane asylum, which was opened in May, 1848, and is under excellent management. January, 1851, there were 126 patients in this institution, but during the year there had been under treatment 264 persons, of whom 73 were paupers, 113 indigent, and 78 private patients: 37 were dismissed cured, and 8 died. For the year above named, there was an excess of expenditures over receipts of more than $5000, provided for by legislative appropriation.

Government, Finances, Banks, &c.—The governor of New Jersey is elected for three years, by popular vote, and receives $1800 salary and fees. The senate is composed of 1 member from each county, elected for three years, and the house of representatives of 60 members, one from each district, elected annually. The judiciary consists—1. Of a court of errors and appeals, composed of a chancellor, the judges of the supreme court, and six other judges appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, for 6 years, one judge retiring each year. The pardoning power lies in this court in conjunction with the governor. 2. The court of chancery and prerogative court, the chancellor or judge of which is appointed by the governor for seven years; and, 3. Of the supreme court, composed of one chief and four associate justices, who are nominated by the governor, and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the senate. 4. Of circuit courts and courts of oyer and terminer, held by the justices of the supreme court in each county three times a year. 5. Of courts of common pleas, composed of 5 judges appointed by the legislature, one each year, who receive fees, but no salaries. The other judges receive from $1400 to $1800 per annum. Any white male citizen, 21 years of age, who has resided in the state one year, and in the county five months next preceding an election, is entitled to vote.

The assessed value of property in New Jersey in 1850, was $190,000,000, (the personal estate estimated.) The public debt in 1852, was only $76,346; school fund, $373,983; productive property, $279,540; unproductive property, $764,670; and annual ordinary expenses, exclusive of debt and schools, $90,000.

On the 1st of June, 1853, New Jersey had 24 incorporated banks, with an aggregate capital of $3,917,410, a circulation of $3,126,607, and $629,202.62 in coin.

History.—Settlements were made in New Jersey, soon after their arrival in New York, by the Dutch, at Bergen, between the years 1614 and 1624. A Swedish colony was founded in the S. W. in 1627, near the shores of the Delaware river. In 1664 this state fell with New York into the hands of the Duke of York, who assigned it to Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret. In compliment to the latter, who was an inhabitant of the Isle of Jersey, in the English channel, it received its name. Penn and Carteret divided the state into East and West Jersey, (more properly, North and South,) in 1676, Penn taking West, and Carteret East Jersey. The latter sold his share to twelve Friends in 1683. The first general assembly was held in New Jersey in 1681; East and West Jersey were united eleven years after, and formed part of New York till 1702, when they were restored to the crown. This colony escaped the bloody inroads of the savages, which so afflicted most of the older settlements. It was, however, the scene of several engagements in the Revolution, the most important of which were the capture of 900 Hessians by Washington, at Trenton, December 26th, 1776; the Battle of Princeton, a few days after; and the Battle of Monmouth, in June, 1778, all of which resulted favorably to the American cause, and in all of which Washington was present. The American army wintered at Morristown in 1776-77.

NEW JERUSALEM, a post-office of Berks co., Pennsylvania.

NEW KENT, a county in the E. S. E. part of Virginia, has an area of 190 square miles. The Pamunkey river forms its boundary on the N. E., and the Chickahominy on the S. W. The surface is moderately hilly, and the soil of middling quality. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, cattle and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 178,813 bushels of corn; 37,346 of oats; 13,650 of sweet potatoes, and 38,031 pounds of butter. There were 12 flour and grist mills, 10 churches, and 300 pupils attending public schools. The Pamunkey or York river is navigable on the border of the county. Formed in 1654. Capital, New Kent Court House. Population, 6064; of whom 2654 were free, and 3410, slaves.

NEW KENT COURT HOUSE, capital of New Kent co., Virginia, 30 miles E. from Richmond. It contains, besides the county buildings, a few stores.

NEW KINGSTON, a post-office of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

NEWKIRK'S MILLS, a post-office of Fulton co., New York.

NEW LANCASTER, a post-office of Tipton co., Indiana.

NEW LANCASTER, a post-village of Warren co., Illinois, on the road from Peoria to Burlington, in Iowa.

NEW LEBANON, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Columbia co., New York. Population, 2300.

NEW LEBANON, a post-office of Mercer co., Pa.

NEW LEBANON, a post-village of Camden co., North Carolina, near Pasquotank river, at the S. terminus of Dismal Swamp canal, 155 miles N. E. by E. from Raleigh.

NEW LEBANON, a post-village of Montgomery co., Ohio.

NEW LEBANON, a post-village of Sullivan co., Ind., 110 miles S. W. from Indianapolis.

NEW LEBANON, a post-village in De Kalb co., Illinois, 60 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

NEW LEBANON CENTRE, a post-village of Columbia co., New York.

NEW LEBANON, Shaker village of Columbia co., New York, 2 miles S. from New Lebanon Springs. It contains 10 or 12 large dwellings, occupied by the society in common; also various smaller dwellings and shops. The Shakers possess over 2000 acres of land in the vicinity of the village. They manufacture a number of small articles, which often exhibit much ingenuity and skill.

NEW LEBANON SPRINGS, a beautiful post-village of Columbia county, New York, 25 miles S. E. from Albany. Here are mineral springs and several hotels, much frequented as a summer resort. The village contains a bank, and a large manufactory of thermometers.

NEW LENOX, a post-township in Will co., Illinois. Population, 617.

NEW LEXINGTON, a post-office of Somerset co., Pennsylvania.

NEW LEXINGTON, a post-village in Tuscaloosa co., Alabama, 130 miles N. W. from Montgomery.

NEW LEXINGTON, a village of Highland co., Ohio, 60 miles E. N. E. from Cincinnati.

NEW LEXINGTON, a post-village of Perry co., Ohio, 50 miles E. S. E. from Columbus.

NEW LEXINGTON, a village in Van Buren co., Iowa, on Des Moines river, 80 miles S. by W. from Iowa City.

NEW LIBERTY, a post-village of Owen co., Ky., 33 miles N. from Frankfort. Pop., 400.

NEW LIBERTY, a small post-village of Pope co., Illinois, on the Ohio river.

NEW LIGHT, a post-village of Wake co., North Carolina.

NEW LIMERICK, a township of Aroostook co., Maine, 125 miles N. N. E. from Bangor. Population, 160.

NEWLIN, a township of Chester co., Pennsylvania, 8 miles W. S. W. from Westchester. Population, 738.

NEW LISBON, a post-township of Otsego co., New York, 15 miles S. W. from Coopers-town. Population, 1773.

NEW LISBON, a post-office of Burlington cc., New Jersey.

NEW LISBON, a thriving town, capital of Columbiana county, Ohio, on the Little Beaver river, and on the Sandy and Beaver canal, 155 miles N. E. from Columbus, and 56 miles N. W. from Pittsburg. The town is neatly and compactly built. The surrounding country is fertile, populous, and highly improved. The extensive water-power of the river is partially employed in mills, &c. The Sandy and Beaver canal extends from the Ohio canal at Bolivar to the Ohio river. This town is in the midst of the great wool-growing region of Ohio. It contains about 7 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 1 bank, and several woollen factories, iron foundries, and flouring mills. Laid out in 1802. Population in 1853, about 2500.

NEW LISBON, a post-village in Henry co. Indiana, 50 miles E. by N. from Indianapolis.

NEW LISBON, a small post-village of Randolph co., Indiana, 89 miles E. N. E. from Indianapolis, was laid out in 1850.

NEW LONDON, a county forming the S. E. extremity of Connecticut, has an area of about 650 square miles. It is partly bounded on the E. by the Pawcatuck, and on the W. by the Connecticut river, and is principally watered by the Thames river (which traverses it nearly N. and S.) and its branches. It borders on Long Island sound for about 25 miles, affording great facilities for navigation and the fisheries, the latter of which are carried on to a considerable extent. The surface is hilly, and in the S. W. part mountainous. The soil is fertile, but more adapted to grazing than tillage. Wool, Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 234,412 bushels of corn; 354,360 of potatoes; 53,181 tons of hay, and 668,052 pounds of butter. There were 17 cotton and 22 woollen factories, 5 foundries, 1 forge, 8 cordage manufactories, 6 machine shops, 22 grist, 6 paper, 1 rolling, 22 saw and planing mills, 26 shipwright establishments, and 14 tanneries. It contained 97 churches, 7 newspaper offices, 9393 pupils attending public schools, and 1215 attending academies and other schools. The Connecticut river is navigable for steamboats along part of the western border of this county, and the Thames river is navigable for sloops to Norwich city. The county is traversed by the New London, Willimantic, and Palmer railroad, and partly intersected by the Norwich and Worcester, and New Haven and New London railroads. Seats of justice, Norwich and New London. Pop., 61,821.

NEW LONDON, a post-township of Merrimack co., New Hampshire, 30 miles W. N. W. from Concord. Population, 945.

NEW LONDON, a city, port of entry, and semicapital of New London county, Connecticut, is situated on the right bank of the Thames river, 3 miles from the ocean, and 50 miles E. from New Haven; lat. 41° 22' N., lon. 72° 9' W. It is built on a declivity facing the S. and E. The site being considerably encumbered with granite rocks, it was not laid out with any great regard to regularity, though within a few years much has been done in the way of grading and other improvements to overcome the original inequalities of the surface. The elevation back of the city affords an extensive and varied prospect. Among the public buildings may be mentioned the custom house, a fine granite edifice, the court house, and the churches, of which the Baptists have 3; the Congregationalists, 2; the Methodists, 2; the Episcopalians, 1; the Catholics, 1, and the Universalists, 1; in all, 10. The educational institutions are the New London Normal Institute of Music, the New London Female Academy, the Bartlett High School, and 16 public schools. Increased attention has of late been paid to the subject of education, and the schools generally are in a flourishing condition. Five newspapers are published, of which 2 are dailies. The harbor of New London is one of the best in the United States. It is 3 miles long, 5 fathoms deep, and seldom obstructed with ice. It is environed by hills, and defended by Fort Trumbull and Fort Griswold, the former of which is garrisoned. The inhabitants have long been extensively engaged in the whale fishery, which employs 1505 men and a large amount of capital. The coast trade and the other fisheries are also very important. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 23,281 $\frac{3}{5}$ tons registered, and 18,229 $\frac{4}{5}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the former, 15,960 $\frac{3}{5}$ tons were employed in the whale fishery; of the latter, 11,517 $\frac{3}{5}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 6276 $\frac{4}{5}$ tons in the cod and mackerel fisheries; 12 steamers are also owned, with an aggregate burthen of 4253 tons. The receipts from the whale fishery for the past year were \$1,349,872. The value of the foreign imports was \$28,904, and of the exports, \$78,383. The vessels built the present year were 2 ships, 6 schooners, 4 sloops, and 1 steamer. Several extensive manufacturing establishments have recently commenced operations, among which may be mentioned the Alberton and Douglass machine company, with a capital of \$60,000; the New London foundry and machine works, organized in 1852, with a capital of \$45,000, and the Nameaug manufacturing company, organized in 1853, having a capital of \$70,000. The New London, Willimantic, and Palmer railroad company was organized in 1848, with a capital of \$1,500,000, all owned in New London. There are 4 banks, with an aggregate capital of about \$600,000, and a savings' institution with \$706,144.67 on deposit. Gas has been introduced during the past year. The city has railroad communication with New Haven and the principal towns of the interior. New London was settled in 1644, by John Winthrop, son of Governor Winthrop, of Massachusetts. Population in 1830, 4335; in 1840, 5519; in 1850, 8991, in 1853 about 10,000.

NEW LONDON, a post-village of Oneida co., New York, on the Erie canal, 7 or 8 miles W. from Rome. It has several warehouses.

NEW LONDON, a post-township on the S. border of Chester co., Pennsylvania. Population, 2042.

NEW LONDON, or NEW LONDON CROSS ROADS, a post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, 74 miles S. E. from Harrisburg.

NEW LONDON, a small village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

NEW LONDON, a post-village in Frederick co., Maryland.

NEW LONDON, a post-village of Campbell co., Virginia, 110 miles W. by S. from Richmond.

NEW LONDON, a post-township in the S. E. part of Huron co., Ohio. Pop., 1218.

NEW LONDON, or KING'S CORNERS, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the railroad from Cleveland to Columbus, 47 miles S. W. from the former. It is situated in a beautiful and fertile country, and is a place of rapid growth.

NEW LONDON, a small post-village of Howard co., Indiana, 8 or 9 miles S. W. from Kokomo.

NEW LONDON, a post-village, capital of Ralls co., Missouri, about 2 miles S. from Salt river, and 98 miles N. N. E. from Jefferson City. It contains a brick court house, 1 or 2 churches, and several stores.

NEW LONDON, a post-village of Henry co., Iowa, 20 miles W. N. W. from Burlington.

NEW LONDON LIGHTHOUSE, on the W. side of the entrance to the Thames river, Connecticut. It exhibits a fixed light 80 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 41° 18' 54" N., lon. 72° 5' 48" W.

NEW LYME, a post-township in the S. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Population, 628.

NEW LYME, a post-village of Ashtabula co., Ohio, 195 miles N. E. from Columbus.

NEW MADISON, a thriving post-village of Darke co., Ohio, about 100 miles W. from Columbus.

NEW MADISON, an improving village of Madison co., Indiana, on Pipe creek, 13 miles N. from Anderson.

NEW MADRID, a county near the S. E. extremity of Missouri, bordering on the Mississippi river, which separates it from Tennessee and Kentucky, has an area of 880 square miles. The Whitewater, an affluent of the St. Francis, flows along the W. border. The surface is an alluvial plain, which does not contain a rock of any description. The soil is highly productive, excepting the parts which are overflowed. Indian corn is the great staple. The county is well timbered with the oak, hickory, and cypress. In 1850 the county produced 586,260 bushels of corn. It contained 8 churches and 1 newspaper office; 332 pupils attending public schools, and 160 attending other schools. This county was severely injured by the earthquakes of 1811 and 1812, by which about half of its area was sunk several feet and covered with water. The shocks were attended with loud explosions; and chasms were opened in the ground, from which volumes of water and steam were discharged. Islands in the Mississippi were sunk; the current of the river was driven back for several hours by the elevation of its bed, and overflowed the adjacent land. One of the lakes formed at this time is said to be nearly 60 miles long, and several miles wide. The legislature of Missouri, during the session of 1830 and '51, made an appropriation for the purpose of reclaiming the sunken lands of this and the adjoining counties. Capital, New Madrid. Population, 5541, of whom 4060 were free, and 1481, slaves.

NEW MADRID, capital of New Madrid co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river, 280 miles S. E. from Jefferson City. It does a large business in shipping corn, lumber, and cattle for Southern markets. The houses are mostly built of wood, on account of the frequency of earthquakes, by which this town and county were greatly injured in 1811. A newspaper is published here. Settled in 1780.

NEW MAHONING, a post-office of Carbon co., Pennsylvania.

NEWMAN'S MILLS. See CANOE PLACE.

NEWMANSTOWN, a village of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania, 37 miles E. from Harrisburg. Population, 233.

NEWMANSVILLE, post-office, Greene co. Tenn.

NEW MARION, a post-village of Ripley co., Indiana, on Graham's creek, and on the Michigan road, 75 miles S. S. E. from Indianapolis. Population in 1851, near 300.

NEW MARKET, a post-township of Rockingham co., N. H., on the Boston and Maine, and Portsmouth and Concord railroads, 25 miles S. E. of Concord. Population, 1937.

NEW MARKET, or SNYDERTOWN, a little village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, 9 miles S. by E. from Flemington.

NEW MARKET, a post-village of Middlesex co., New Jersey.

NEW MARKET, a village of Baltimore co., Maryland, 30 miles N. from Baltimore.

NEW MARKET, a post-village of Frederick co., Maryland, near the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, 10 miles E. by S. from Frederick.

NEW MARKET, a small post-village of Nelson county, Virginia, on James river, at the mouth of Tye river, 108 miles W. from Richmond, contains a tobacco warehouse and 2 mills. The post-office is named Tye River Warehouse.

NEW MARKET, a post-village of Shenandoah county, Virginia, 150 miles N. W. from Richmond. It is delightfully situated in the Great Valley, between the Massanutten and North mountains. There are several forges and factories in the vicinity, which abounds in iron ore. It contains 3 or 4 churches.

NEW MARKET, a post-village in Randolph co., North Carolina.

NEW MARKET, a post-village in Abbeville district, South Carolina.

NEW MARKET, formerly GULETTSVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., Georgia, 35 miles N. W. from Macon.

NEW MARKET, a post-village in Madison co., Alabama, about 200 miles N. from Montgomery.

NEW MARKET, a flourishing post-village of Jefferson county, Tennessee, is pleasantly situated on the E. Tennessee and Virginia railroad, 26 miles E. N. E. from Knoxville. It stands in a long and very productive valley, and contains Holstein College, chartered in 1832; also a female institute. A railroad depôt will be established here.

NEW MARKET, a post-village of Marion co., Kentucky, on the Rolling fork of Salt river, 66 miles S. by W. from Frankfort.

NEW MARKET, a post-township forming the south central part of Highland co., Ohio. Population, 1302.

NEW MARKET, a thriving post-village in the above township, 68 miles S. S. W. from Columbus. Population, near 300.

NEW MARKET, a village of Harrison co., Indiana, on the Ohio river, 35 miles below Louisville. Population, about 300.

NEW MARKET, a post-village in Vigo co., Indiana, 80 miles W. S. W. from Indianapolis.

NEW MARKET, a post-village of Platte co., Missouri, 210 miles W. N. W. from Jefferson City.

NEW MARKET, a post-village in Van Buren co., Iowa, near Des Moines river, 70 miles S. W. by S. from Iowa City.

NEW MARLBOROUGH, a post-township of Berkshire co., Massachusetts, about 120 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 1847.

NEW MARTINSBURG, a small village of Fayette co., Ohio, on Walnut creek, about 50 miles S. W. from Columbus. Laid out in 1839.

NEW MARTINSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Wetzel co., Virginia, on the Ohio river, at the mouth of Fishing creek, 40 miles below Wheeling. It contains a court house, a few stores, and several hundred inhabitants.

NEW MASSILON, a small village of Wayne co., Illinois, on the Little Wabash river, is situated near the border of a fine prairie.

NEW MATAMORA, a post-office of Washington co., Ohio.

NEW MAYSVILLE, a post-village of Putnam co., Indiana, 14 miles N. E. from Greencastle.

NEW MAYSVILLE, a post-office of Pike co., Illinois.

NEW MEXICO, a Territory of the United States, and a portion of the tract acquired from Mexico by the treaty of peace concluded in 1848, is bounded on the N. by Utah and the Indian Territory, E. by the Indian Territory and Texas, S. by Texas and Mexico, and W. by California. It lies between 32° and 38° N. lat., and 103° and 117° W.

lon., being about 700 miles in extreme length from E. to W., and 430 in breadth from N. to S.; but with an average length of near 600 miles, and a mean breadth of 350 miles, including an area of some 219,744 square miles, or 140,636,160 acres, of which only 161,201 were improved in 1850.

Population.—The population of New Mexico is of a very mixed character, but composed for the most part of domesticated and nomad Indians, with an intermixture of Mexicans and Americans. According to the census of 1850, there were 61,547 inhabitants, exclusive of Indians, of whom 31,728 were white males, and 29,802 females; 14 free colored males, and 3 females; 28 were deaf and dumb; 98 blind; 11 insane, and 38 idiots. In the twelve months preceding June 1st, 1850, there occurred 1157 deaths, or nearly 19 in every one thousand persons.

Counties.—There are eight counties in New Mexico, viz. Bernallillo, Rio Arriba, Santa Anna, Santa Fé, San Miguel, Taos, and Valencia, Socorro. Capital, Santa Fe.

Towns.—The principal settlements (we use this term, because the limits of the towns are not defined with much accuracy) are Santa Fe, population, 4846; La Cuesta, 2278; St. Miguel, 1926; Las Vegas, 1559; Zuñi, or Tuñi, (an Indian pueblo or village,) 1312, and Tuckelata, 1311.

Face of the Country, Mountains, Minerals, &c.—This extensive territory is for the most part a high table-land, crossed by several ranges of mountains, and generally destined to hopeless sterility. The valleys of the Rio Grande and its tributaries occupy the eastern part of New Mexico, and lie between and among the different ranges of the Rocky mountains, which cross the territory in a direction nearly N. and S. The western limit of the Rio Grande valley is the Sierra Nevada, and the eastern the Jumanes and Sierra Blanco mountains. The larger portion of this territory lies W. of the Sierra Madre mountains, and partakes of the general character of the Fremont Basin, (see Utah.) The mountain ranges, commencing at the E., are first, the Gaudalupe mountains, which diverge from the main chain of the Rocky mountains, and pass S. E. into Texas, forming the eastern boundary of the valley of the Pecos; then the Sierra Hueca or Blanco, and some other detached ranges E. of the Rio Grande, with several ridges of the Sierra Madre W. of it. A broken ridge of mountains coasts the Gila river for a considerable distance, rising, according to computations of Major Emory, to 4347 feet and 5724 feet, in two places, estimated by him. Mount Taylor (in the Sierra Madre, a little S. W. of Santa Fe) is estimated at 10,000 feet. The valley of the Rio Grande itself is a high table land of 6000 feet elevation in the N. part, 4800 at Albuquerque, and 300 at El Paso, just beyond the limits of New Mexico.

Minerals.—It is highly probable that New Mexico abounds in the precious metals, but owing to the jealousy of the aborigines, and the unskilfulness with which, even when worked at all, they have been managed they have not, so far as is known, hitherto produced abundantly; yet gold and silver are both known to exist, and mines of both metals have been worked. Iron occurs in abundance, and gypsum in large quantities has been found near Algodones; copper is plentiful, some coal is found, and salt lakes, about 100 miles S. S. E. from Santa Fe, have been resorted to for that necessary culinary article. Recent reports state that rich silver mines have been discovered about 60 miles N. E. of Doña Ana. Lead is also found at the same place in abundance.

Rivers.—The Rio Grande, or Rio Bravo del Norte, as it was formerly called, which crosses the entire territory from N. to S., is the largest river of New Mexico, and drains the great valley which lies between the Sierra Madre mountains on the W., and the Jumanes and the Sierra Hueca mountains on the E. The Pecos river drains the eastern slope of the same mountains, and passes off into Texas. The Puerco, a river of more than 100 miles in length, is the principal tributary of the Rio Grande from the W.; but in the hot season it is often completely evaporated in the lower part of its course, rendering no tribute whatever to the parent stream. The Canadian river has its sources in the N. E. of New Mexico, from which it runs in a S. E. direction, to join the Arkansas. A large portion of the S. boundary is formed by the Gila river, which rises on the western slope of the Sierra Madre, and runs almost directly W. to its mouth in the Colorado. The Salt, its principal tributary, drains the central regions of the territory. The Colorado enters New Mexico from Utah, and running S. W. for about 150 miles, receives the Virgen, turns to the S., and forms the W. boundary from 35° N. lat. to the mouth of the Gila. These rivers are of very little importance to navigation, seldom being deep enough for any craft beyond a canoe or flat-boat. Indeed, for a great part of the year the tributary rivers have either dry channels or are a succession of pools. Major Emory found the Rio Grande itself but 25 yards wide, and hub-deep at Albuquerque, 300 miles from its source. He also states that it seldom rises more than two feet. Lieutenant Simpson found it 200 yards wide and four feet deep 150 miles farther S., in September, 1849. He afterwards mentions crossing in a ferry at Albuquerque.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—Crossed as New Mexico is by lofty chains of mountains, it cannot fail to possess many objects of striking interest in its scenery; but they have been hitherto imperfectly explored. West of the Rio Grande, and among and beyond the Sierra Madre mountains, are vast cañons, (kan-yōns.) i. e. deep channels in the earth, mostly forming the beds of streams, often two or three hundred feet in depth, and almost shut out from the light of day. In the same region are found steep bluffs of red and white sandstone rock, worn by the action of the elements into very striking resemblances of fortresses, castles, &c. Lieutenant Simpson has given some sketches of the most remarkable, in his recent work on New Mexico. One curiosity of the country is the deserted pueblos, or Indian villages, which, from the quantity of broken pottery around them, give evidence of having been the abode of a much more dense population than subsists there at present, probably supported by a system of irrigation. These pueblos are particularly numerous near the banks of the Gila. They generally consist of one building, forming three sides of a square, often several hundred feet in circuit, (sometimes as many as 800 feet,) two, three, and even four stories on the outer side, with a blank wall, while the inside receded (ascending) by steps or terraces, so that the fourth story has but one breadth of chambers, the second two, the third three, and the basement four. The wall of the latter was also blank on the inside, the entrance being by ladders, which were probably drawn up at night to prevent an attack. The present Indian pueblos are constructed on the same plan, but are not so extensive or well built.

Climate.—The habitable part of the valley of the Rio Grande lies in the latitude of the northern and central portions of the Southern States; but its climate is very much modified by its great elevation, giving it a temperate but constant climate. The mercury sometimes rises to 100°, but the evenings are always cool. Some of the higher peaks of the mountains are covered with perpetual snow. Considerable rain falls between July and October, but New Mexico has essentially a dry atmosphere, being most of the year parched where there is no irrigation.

Soil and Productions.—We have already characterized the soil as generally hopelessly sterile, but this generalization is not without considerable exceptions, as many parts of the valley of the Rio Grande, and of other streams, are highly productive, and yield fine crops of Indian corn, wheat, and other grains, besides apples, peaches, melons, apricots, and grapes. But everywhere irrigation is necessary to successful agricultural operations. During the dry season, however, in some districts, even this resource fails, from the total evaporation of the streams. On the table-lands, which are utterly useless for agriculture, there grows a peculiar grass, which in the dry season cures and preserves its nutritious qualities. On this, cattle, sheep, horses, and mules feed all the winter, and preserve themselves in good condition. The mutton of New Mexico is excellent. The Indians on the Gila cultivate cotton, wheat, Indian corn, beans, melons, and other vegetables, by means of irrigation, and a small quantity of buckwheat, wine, butter, potatoes, and molasses. According to the census of 1850, there were in New Mexico 166,201 acres of improved land, producing 196,515 bushels of wheat; 365,411 of Indian corn; 15,688 of peas and beans; 8467 pounds of tobacco; 32,901 of wool, and 5848 of cheese; live stock valued at $1,494,029; market garden products, $6679; orchard, $8231; and slaughtered animals, $82,125.

Forest Trees.—Only a small portion of the surface is covered with forests, and the country is almost entirely destitute of the hard woods! Some of the streams are fringed with cottonwood, and pine of an inferior quality occurs on the mountains. Sycamore, ash, cedar, walnut, evergreen, oak, and willow, are found in small quantities.

Animals.—Deer, mountain-sheep, wild hogs, turkeys, geese, brant, swans, ducks, scorpions, and lizards are met with in this territory, though animal does not appear to be more prolific than vegetable life in this region.

Manufactures.—Twenty manufacturing establishments, each producing $500 and upwards annually, were reported by the census of 1850; domestic manufactures were produced to the value of $6033.

Internal Improvements.—None; all that relates to facilitating travelling being in the most primitive state.

Education.—On this head there is little to be said at present, but to speak of its absence, and to urge its introduction.

Religious Denominations.—In 1850 there were 146 churches, all belonging to the Roman Catholics.

Government.—New Mexico, in common with all other territories of the United States, has a governor appointed by the president and senate of the general government, who is also superintendent of Indian affairs, and receives a salary of $2500 per annum. It has a senate, a council of 13 members elected for two years, and a house of representatives of 26 members, elected annually. The judiciary, appointed by the president of the United States, with the advice of the senate, is composed of a chief and two associate judges, receiving $2000 each per annum. Assessed value of property in 1850, $5,063,474. Banks, none.

History.—Lying in the interior, and possessing no very great inducements to tempt emigration thither, New Mexico has not been the theatre of many striking events in history. As elsewhere stated, traces exist in the deserted and ruined pueblos of a much more dense Indian or Aztec population in former times than at present. It formed a Mexican province or department, until the conquest of Mexico by the Americans, when, by the treaty of 1848, it became a part of the United States, and in September, 1850, was formed, with a portion of Upper California and Texas, into the present Territory of New Mexico.

NEW MICHIGAN, a post-office of Livingston co., Illinois.

NEW MIDDLETON, a post-office of Randolph co., Indiana.

NEW MIDDLETOWN, a post-village of Mahoning co., Ohio, 12 miles E. S. E. from Canfield.

NEW MILFORD, a flourishing post-village of Litchfield co., Connecticut, on the Housatonic river and railroad, near the intersection of the latter with the former, and 35 miles N. by W. from Bridgeport. It is a beautiful village, with broad streets, containing several churches and a bank. Pop. of the township, 4508.

NEW MILFORD, a post-office of Orange co., New York.

NEW MILFORD, a small village of Bergen co., New Jersey, on the Hackensack river, 18 miles N. from Jersey City.

NEW MILFORD, a post-township of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania, 8 miles E. from Montrose. Population, 1433.

NEW MILFORD, a post-village in the above township, about 11 miles N. E. from Montrose.

NEW MILFORD, a post-township in Winnebago co., Illinois. Population, 569.

NEW MILFORD, a small post-village in the above township, on the Kishwaukee river, about seven miles S. from Rockford. It has a flouring mill, and about 200 inhabitants.

NEW MILTON, a post-office of Doddridge co., Virginia.

NEW MILTOWN, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

NEW MOSCOW, a post-office of Coshocton co., Ohio.

NEW MOUNT PLEASANT, a post-office of Monroe co., Pennsylvania.

NEW MOUNT PLEASANT, a post-village in Jay co., Indiana, 80 miles N. E. by E. from Indianapolis.

NEWMAN, a thriving post-village, capital of Coweta county, Georgia, on the railroad from Atlanta to La Grange, 40 miles S. W. from the former. It contains a brick court house, 2 churches, 2 academies, and a newspaper office. The railroad, which was opened in 1852, connects at the city of Atlanta with the principal railways of the state.

NEWMANSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Alachua co., Florida, 120 miles E. S. E. from Tallahassee.

NEW OHIO, a post-office of Broome co., New York.

NEW ORLEANS, a city, port of entry, and seat of justice of Orleans parish, Louisiana, is situated on the left bank of the Mississippi river, about 100 miles from its mouth; 1663 miles S. W. from New York; 1438 S. W. from Washington; 879 S. W. by W. from Charleston; 2025 S. S. W. from Pittsburg; 1628 S. by W. from Chicago; 1200 S. from St. Louis; and about 2000 S. by E. from the Falls of St. Anthony. Lat. 29° 58' N., lon. 90° 7' W. New Orleans is built around a bend in the river, from which circumstance it has been denominated the "Crescent City." The site inclines gently from the margin of the Mississippi towards the marshy ground in the rear, and is from 2 to 5 feet below the level of the river at the usual spring freshets. To prevent inundations, an embankment or levee, about 15 feet wide and 6 feet high, has been raised, extending 120 miles above the city, and to Port Plaquemine, 43 miles below it. This forms a delightful promenade. In consequence of the change in the course of the river opposite New Orleans, large quantities of alluvion, swept from the north and held in suspension by the current, are here deposited. New formations from this cause in front of that portion of the quay most used for the purposes of commerce have been so rapid that it has been necessary within a few years to build piled wharves jutting out from 50 to 100 feet into the Mississippi. The levee here has also been gradually widened, so that an additional block of warehouses has been erected between the city and the river during the past year. The old city proper, originally laid out by the French, is in the form of a parallelogram, 1320 yards long and 700 yards wide. Above this are what were formerly the faubourgs of St. Mary, Anunciation, and La Course; below, Marigny, Dounois, and Delouet; and in the rear, Tremé and St. John's. Lafayette, till recently under a separate government, is immediately above the city. In 1836, New Orleans was divided into three municipalities by act of the assembly, each with distinct municipal powers. Again in April, 1852, these and Lafayette, with the faubourgs and other dependencies, extending from 6 to 7 miles along the river, and about 5 miles back to Lake Pontchartrain, were consolidated under one charter, the city assuming the debts. The streets of New Orleans are of convenient breadth, well paved, and usually intersect each other at right angles. Canal street is the broadest, being over 100 feet in width, with a grassplot in the centre about 25 feet wide, extending throughout its entire length. Most of the buildings are constructed of brick, and are generally low, except in the business portion, where they are usually 5 or 6 stories high. The dwellings in the suburbs, many of them, particularly in Lafayette, are surrounded with spacious yards, beautifully decorated with the orange, lemon, magnolia, and other ornamental trees. A basement about 6 feet high constitutes the only cellar, as none are sunl below the surface on account of the marshy character of the ground. In different sections of the city are several public squares, among which may be mentioned Jackson

Square, formerly Place d'Armes, occupying the centre of the river front of the old town plot, now the First District. It is ornamented with shell walks, shrubbery, statuettes, &c. and is much frequented for recreation. Lafayette Square, in the Second District, is finely laid out, and adorned with a profusion of shade-trees. Congo Square, in the rear of the city, is also a handsome enclosure.

Public Buildings.—The United States custom house now in process of erection at New Orleans, when completed will be the largest building in the United States, with the exception of the Capitol at Washington, covering an area of 87,333 superficial feet. Its dimensions are—Canal street front, 334 feet; Custom house street, 252 feet; New Levee street, 310 feet; Old Levee street, 297 feet; height, 82 feet. The general business room is 116 feet by 90, and has 50 windows. The material is from the Quincy quarries of Massachusetts. The United States branch mint in New Orleans is at the corner of Esplanade and New Levee streets, near the river. It is a massive structure, 282 feet long, 108 feet deep, and 3 stories high, with 2 wings, each 81 feet by 29. The Municipal Hall, at the corner of St. Charles and Hevia streets, opposite Lafayette square, is a beautiful marble edifice in the Grecian style of architecture. It is principally occupied with public offices, among which are several of the city government. The Odd Fellows' Hall, erected in 1852, on Camp street, opposite Lafayette square, and the Merchants' Exchange on Royal street, near Canal, are both extensive buildings, chiefly devoted to public uses. The latter contains the City Post Office and Merchants' Reading Room.

Many of the churches are large and costly structures. The Church of St. Louis, opposite Jackson square, is a splendid edifice, adorned with a lofty tower on either side of the main entrance. The building was erected in 1850, on the site of the old church, which was pulled down. On the right and left of this edifice are two handsome buildings in the Tuscan and Doric orders, devoted to various purposes of the city government. The Jewish synagogue, formerly the Canal-street Episcopal church, is ornamented in front with a handsome colonade. The Presbyterian church, opposite Lafayette square, the new Episcopal church, on Canal street, and St. Patrick's church, on Camp street, are elegant edifices, each adorned with a graceful spire. The latter is a conspicuous object to one approaching the city from the river. The erection of another Methodist church is also about to be commenced, at a proposed cost of $150,000. Of the 38 churches in the city in 1853, 12 are Roman Catholic, 7 Episcopal, 6 Presbyterian, 5 Methodist, 3 Lutheran, 2 Baptist, and 3 Jewish synagogues.

The hotels of New Orleans are conducted upon a scale of magnitude scarcely equalled in any city of the Union. The St. Charles Hotel, situated on St. Charles street, was completed in the autumn of 1852, at an entire cost of upwards of $590,000. It occupies the site of the former building, destroyed by fire. The house has been leased for a term of seven years, at the rate of $30,000 per annum, till 1855, and $40,000 for each succeeding year. The annual rent of the basement is estimated at $16,000. The St. Louis Hotel, on St. Louis street, and the Verandah Hotel, on Common street, are also costly establishments. The city contains 4 or 5 theatres, the principal of which are the St. Charles, the Orleans, or French theatre, and the American. The first of them, situated on St. Charles street, is 132 feet long, by 170 deep, and cost, at the time of its erection, about $350,000. At the Orleans theatre the dramatic representations are in French. Among the most remarkable bank edifices may be mentioned the City Bank, on Toulouse street, Canal Bank, on Magazine street, and the Bank of Louisiana. Several of the market-houses are deserving of notice. St. Mary's market, in the Second District, is 480 feet long, and 42 feet wide. The meat market, on the Levee, and Washington market, in the Third District, are also extensive buildings. The cotton presses of New Orleans, about 20 in number, are objects of much interest, each of which usually occupies an entire block. The centre building of the New Orleans cotton press is three stories high, and surmounted by a dome, the summit of which commands a fine view of the city. Not less than 150,000 bales of cotton, on an average, are annually pressed at this establishment.

Institutions.—The benevolent institutions of New Orleans are among the most extensive and best conducted in the United States. The Charity Hospital, situate on Common street, between St. Mary and Girond streets, is a magnificent structure, 290 feet long, and 3 stories high. It is adorned with a cupola, and enclosed by beautiful grounds. The admissions to the hospital for the year, as reported by the board of administrators, were 18,476, of which 15,989 were discharged, and 1884 died. Sixteen thousand medical cases were treated; there were also nearly 2500 surgical patients. The United States Naval Hospital is a handsome edifice, devoted to the purposes indicated by its title. It has a delightful situation on the opposite side of the river, a short distance above Algiers. Of the other medical establishments may be mentioned Stone's Hospital, in the rear of the city, on Canal street, and the Franklin Infirmary, fronting on the Pontchartrain railroad, each a fine building, affording excellent accommodations for the sick. The literary and educational institutions, many of which have been recently established, are for the most part in a highly prosperous condition. The University of Louisiana, organized in 1849, has connected with it a law school and a flourishing medical college. The buildings are situated on Common street, between Baronne and St. Philip's streets, and occupy the entire front of the block. The medical college standing in the centre is 100 feet front and 104 feet deep. More than 1200 matriculants for the coming season, September, 1853, are already enrolled on its lists. This department was founded in 1835, and has been fostered by the liberal acts of successive legislatures, among which may be mentioned an appropriation of $25,000 for the purchase of apparatus, paintings, drawings, plates, &c., illustrative of the various branches of medical science. Its museum of anatomy is very extensive. The pathological department is enriched by large collections from England and France, representing diseases of the eye and skin. The students of the college enjoy every facility for practice in the Charity Hospital, which is the largest institution in America for the reception and treatment of patients.

The number of school houses in the city, (as appears from the mayor's message,) is 40, attended by 16,885 pupils. The increase in the number of pupils for the last 12 months has been 2094, equal to 23.9 per cent. Number of teachers, 211. Of the 40 school houses, 17 belong to the city, and 23 are rented. The amount appropriated for school purposes the past year was $188,020.

New Orleans is distinguished for the ability displayed in the management of its public journals. About 20 newspapers are published in the city, 9 or 10 of which are dailies. Several are printed in the French language. De Bow's Review, a work of the highest character, devoted chiefly to the interests of commerce, is issued monthly.

The following statement represents the condition of the 9 banks of New Orleans on the 26th of June, 1853: Liabilities.—Aggregate circulation, of $7,933,533; deposits, $11,153,818; due to other banks, $1,276,270; other cash liabilities, $51,236; total liabilities, $21,214,859. Cash assets, specie, $7,478,438; loans on deposit, $11,977,386; foreign and domestic exchange, $5,630,633; other cash assets, $1,924,000; total assets, $27,010,373. The assessed value of real and personal property in New Orleans for 1852, amounted to $70,194,930. Of this, $56,103,475 was real estate, $10,494,755 capital, and $3,596,700 slave property. The revenue from the sale of licenses amounted to $105,181.

The deposits at the mint for the year ending December 31st, 1852, as given in Hunt's Magazine, were $7,656,909 of United States gold, and $140,352 of other gold; total, $7,797,261, against $3,585,032 the previous year.

Commerce.—New Orleans possesses unrivalled natural advantages for internal trade. The Mississippi river and its tributaries afford not less than 15,000 miles of navigable waters, communicating with a vast extent of country, illimitable in its resources, exhaustless in fertility, and embracing nearly every variety of climate. Every description of craft is employed in transporting the rich products of the upper regions of the "Father of Waters" to this great southern emporium. At one portion of its levee may be seen hundreds of flat-boats grounded on the "batture," and filled, some with fat cattle, horses, mules, hogs, and sheep; others with hay, corn, potatoes, butter, cheese, apples, and cider. The quay here is piled with lumber, pork, flour, and every variety of agricultural produce, as if the Great Valley had emptied its treasures at the door of New Orleans. Farther on is the steamboat landing, a distinctive feature of this metropolis. Here all is action; the very water is covered with life. Vessels of immense size move upon its bosom, acknowledging none of the powers of air. One is rounding-to in the stream, seeking a mooring. She is covered all over, a mountain of cotton—3000 bales, worth $180,000. Twenty more, freighted with the same national commodity, are discharging their cargoes at the wharves, while huge piles, bale upon bale and story above story, cover the levee. New Orleans is the greatest cotton market in the world. Immediately above and below the flat-boat and steamboat landings is the foreign and coastwise shipping, extending two and three tier deep for nearly four miles. Here may be seen vessels from all parts of the world, each bearing at its masthead the ensign of the respective nation to which it belongs.

The foreign and coastwise arrivals at the port of New Orleans for the year ending August 31st, 1853, were—ships, 782; barques, 447; brigs, 295; schooners, 596; steamships, 244, and steamboats, 3253; total, 5617; being an increase of 488 vessels over the previous year. In addition to the above, there were 1044 arrivals of flat-boats, laden with cattle, lumber, and other produce, 175 of which were from Pennsylvania. The foreign arrivals for the year ending June 30th, 1852, according to the statistics furnished by the Treasury department, were 972, (tons, 423,358,) of which 573, (tons, 253,009,) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 1115, (tons, 544,482,) of which 718, (tons, 370,741,) were by American vessels. The shipping of the district, at the above-named date, amounted to an aggregate of \$1,5007 $\frac{7}{8}$ tons registered, and 184,512 $\frac{9}{16}$ tons enrolled and licensed; total, 266,013 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons. Of the enrolled and licensed tonnage, 178,766 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 162,636 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons in steam navigation.

The annexed table exhibits the principal articles, with their estimated, averaged and total value, received at New Orleans from the interior, during the two years (inclusive) ending August 31st, 1853:—

ARTICLES.	Amount 1853.	Average.	Value. Dollars.	Amount 1852.	Value. Dollars.	ARTICLES.	Amount 1853.	Average.	Value. Dollars.	Amount 1852.	Value. Dollars.
Apples, bbls.	48928	3 00	144984	20856	61068	Lead, White.	725	4 00	2900	1363	4104
Bacon, as'd, hds., cks.	50347	3 00	3524290	46734	3505050	Molasses, Crop, gals.	2570000	20	51,0000	1830000	4026000
Bacon, as'd, bxs.	4009	30 00	120270	3626	126910	Oats, bbls, and sks.	44656	1 60	4,6856	46373	347454
Bacon hams, hds. & tcs	42868	65 00	2786420	38488	2694160	Onions, bbls.	17718	2 00	35438	17184	84968
Bacon in bulk, lbs.	154300	7 00	9401	281280	22502	Oil, Linseed, bbls.	508	36 00	18240	758	19703
Bagging, pieces.	64144	13 00	835782	60044	780572	Oil, Castor, bbls.	4742	38 00	180196	4291	120148
Bale Rope, coils.	121553	8 00	972424	90272	677040	Oil, Lard, bbls.	14653	32 00	469320	14114	395192
Beans, bbls.	9444	7 00	66458	6588	65380	Potatoes, bbls.	29427	2 00	408654	228265	451190
Butter, kgs and fms.	4444	6 00	266664	44786	358288	Pork, tcs, and bbls.	316592	14 00	4432238	276606	4256926
Butter, bbls.	2184	28 00	61152	1778	53340	Pork, boxes.	2974	30 00	62220	303	10605
Beeswax, bbls.	194	50 00	9700	171	7695	Pork, hds.	2547	70 00	178290	2173	198340
Leaf, bbls.	48565	13 00	631345	41227	494724	Pork in bulk, lbs.	12985810	6 1/2	84,977	8300000	616000
Beef, tierces.	39226	18 50	559181	11528	172845	Porter and Ale, bbls.	1140	10 00	11400	406	4060
Beef, dried, lbs.	18900	8 1/2	1606	26100	2068	Packing Yarn, recls.	2811	7 00	19677	2698	14651
Buffalo Robes, pks.	144	75 00	2775	1300	97500	Skins, Deer, packs.	29	15 00	17550	593	24850
Cotton, bales.	1664564	41 00	68259424	1429138	48592222	Skins, Bear, packs.	29	15 00	435	16	230
Cornmeal, bbls.	1768	3 00	5364	2514	7542	Shot, kegs.	2223	30 00	66690	2704	67600
Corn in ear, bbls.	14720	75	13215	163008	114105	Soap, boxes.	6911	3 00	20733	5308	15924
Corn, shelled, sacks.	1225031	1 30	1592400	1397132	1676558	Staves, M.	6000	40 00	240000	7319	278122
Cheese, boxes.	39197	4 00	157988	72441	254543	Sugar, est. crop, hds.	321931	48 00	15452688	286547	11827350
Caudles, boxes.	68796	6 50	447174	63936	323616	Spanish Moss, bales.	3702	10 00	37020	4372	34976
Cider, bbls.	132	36 00	408	340	900	Tallow, bbls.	4318	24 00	61632	1307	25140
Coal, Western, bbls.	700000	50	350000	850000	425000	Tobacco, leaf, bbs.	63260	8100	6526000	7532	5686200
Dr'd Apples, Peaches, "	2237	4 00	8948	804	4020	Tobacco, strips, hds.	10050	130.	1306500	11741	1467625
Feathers, bags.	2042	40 00	81680	2065	72275	Tobacco, stems, hds.	1700	20 00	34000	2118	42360
Flaxseed, tierces.	1279	8 00	10232	519	5190	Do. chewing, kgs & bxs.	10886	25 00	272150	4779	95528
Flour, bbls.	808672	4 50	3639024	927312	870848	Twine, bbls. and bxs.	4544	8 00	36352	2231	18720
Furs, hds, bbls, & bxs.	730		300000	2136	100600	Vinegar, bbls.	142	6 00	1452	92	252
Hemp, bales.	136	3 00	408	100	27295	Whiskey.	138515	8 00	1108120	146212	1095440
Hides, bbls.	101460	2 00	202920	123687	247374	Wine, 1848.	1308	40 00	53120	19251	48127
Hay, bales.	175000	3 00	525000	53434	160302	Wheat, bbls, and sks.	47238	1 75	82766	64918	129836
Iron, pig, tons.	121	40 00	4840	62	1860	Other various articles, estimated at.			6000000		5500000
Lard, bbls. and tcs.	118243	26 00	3074318	125496	3137400	Total value.				$134,223,735
Lard, kegs.	159672	5 50	878106	157689	788445	Total in 1851-2.				108,051,708
Leather, bundles.	6309	30 00	189270	7572	189300	Total in 1850-1.				106,924,083
Lime, Western, bbls.	32	1 25	4227	42905	52881	Total in 1849-50.				96,597,873
Lard, kegs.	210287	4 00	841148	26754	582494
Lead, bar, kgs and bxs	157	25 00	3925	1188	2760

These figures show in cotton an increase of 235,681 bales in quantity, and $19,667,202 in value; in the crop of sugar an increase of 85,384 hogsheads in quantity, and $3,625,338 in value; in the crop of molasses an increase of 7,400,000 gallons in quantity, and $1,114,000 in value; in leaf tobacco a decrease of 12,556 hogsheads in quantity, and an increase of $639,800 in value; in strips a decrease of 1691 hogsheads in quantity, and $161,125 in value; a decrease in flour of 118,540 barrels in quantity, and $69,824 in value; in corn a decrease of 172,141 sacks and 145,388 barrels in the ear in quantity, and $184,908 in value; in oats a decrease of 16,317 sacks, &c. in quantity, and an increase of $99,502 in value; in pork an increase of 39,986 barrels in quantity, and of $6592 in value; in bacon and bulk meat an increase of 8376 packages and 4,038,830 pounds in quantity, and $319,836 in value; in lard a decrease of 7253 barrels and tierces, and an increase of 1983 kegs, in quantity, and an increase of $26,669 in value; in lard oil an increase of 571 barrels in quantity, and $74,728 in value; in candles an increase of 14,860 boxes in quantity, and $123,558 in value; in whiskey a decrease of 7838 barrels in quantity, and $10,480 in value; and in bagging and balerope an increase of 4100 pieces and 31,281 coils in quantity, and $349,684 in value. The aggregate value of the products of the hog is $16,826,864, against $16,243,816, in 1851-2. The imports of coffee from July, 1852, to July, 1853, direct from Rio, were 344,515 bags; from Rio coastwise, 26,370 bags; and direct from Cuba, 10,628 bags; total, 381,513 bags—being an increase of 27,897 bags over the previous year. The first coffee brought from Rio de Janeiro to this port was in 1825. In 1852 the quantity of Rio coffee taken for consumption in the whole United States was estimated at 845,000 bags, nearly half of which was furnished through the New Orleans market. The aggregate sales for the year at this port amounted to upwards of $6,000,000.

The exports of cotton for the year ending August 31, 1852, were 772,242 bales to Great Britain; 196,254 to France; 75,950 to the N. of Europe; 134,657 to the S. of Europe and China; 128,629 to Boston; 101,938 to New York; 15,594 to Philadelphia, and 15,041 to other places in the United States; total, 1,435,815 bales, against 997,458 the previous year. The other leading exports were flour, 544,711 barrels; bacon, 50,303 hogsheads; lard, 792,543 kegs; corn, 874,774 sacks; tobacco, 93,715 hogsheads, (an increase of 39,214 hogsheads from the previous year,) of which 76,516 hogsheads were for foreign ports; sugar, 50,793 hogsheads and 6534 barrels; molasses, (up the river excepted,) 583 hogsheads and 94,107 barrels; pork, 172,748 barrels; beef, 38,207 barrels; lead, 256,939 pigs, of which 149,781 went to New York; and whiskey, 81,156 barrels. The total value of American produce exported from New Orleans during the year, according to the custom-house records, was $76,344,569, of which amount, $48,076,197 was to foreign countries, and $28,268,327 coastwise. The value of foreign merchandise exported during the same period was $4,780, making a sum total of $76,389,349. The following results have been obtained from an official statement of the exports of the growth, produce, and manufactures of the United States, and foreign merchandise from the district of New Orleans, for the year ending June 30, 1853:—Value of American produce exported to foreign countries in American vessels, $47,628,019; in foreign vessels, $20,140,607; total, $67,768,626. Coastwise, $80,695,466; exports of foreign produce to foreign countries in American vessels, $459,304; in foreign vessels, $64,630; total, $523,934; sum total, $98,988,026, against $76,389,349 for 1852, and $81,216,925 for 1851. These results, as compared with the previous year, show an increase of $19,692,429 in the exports to foreign countries, and $2,427,139 coastwise.

Notwithstanding these remarkable evidences of prosperity, the merchants and business-men of the South, for several years past, have seriously complained that in commercial importance New Orleans was continually falling behind her sister cities at the North and West, and that her former rank could only be regained by the wisest and most liberal management. Upon this subject one of her citizens, in January, 1852, held the following language:—"What, then, must be done for New Orleans? She must, by a wise and liberal stroke of policy, regain a part, if not the whole of the trade she has supinely lost, and open new sources of opulence and power, which are abundant all around her. She can do this by changing and modifying her laws bearing unequally and hardly upon capital and enterprise—by cheapening her system of government—by affording greater facilities and presenting less restrictions to commerce—by establishing manufactures, opening steamship lines to Europe, and conducting a foreign import trade; and finally, and what is of first importance, she should precede every effort by munificent appropriations to railroads branching to the West and the North and the East, from a terminus at her centre, or from termini on such interior streams and rivers as are necessarily tributary to her. Now is the accepted time for action. To-morrow will be too late!"

Much that is here recommended has already been accomplished. Her laws have been modified; the public debt, which in March, 1852, amounted to $7,702,329, $2,000,000 of which was past due, had, through the improved credit of the consolidated city, April 1, 1853, been reduced to $3,182,516, while $437,320 still remained in the hands of the commissioners. To the latter sum has since been added $327,043, making a sum-total, September 1, of $764,363. In addition to the several railroads communicating with various points in the state, are two extensive lines now in process of construction, one called the New Orleans, Opelousas, and Great Western railroad, extending through Louisiana into Central Texas, and the other the New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern railroad, designed to connect with the railway system of Tennessee and of the North-western States. A charter has also been granted and a company organized for constructing a road to communicate with Mobile through the Pontchartrain railroad. In all these New Orleans has a primary and paramount interest; and although the increased facilities of communication between the Western and the Northern Atlantic cities will doubtless divert a portion of the trade from its natural channel, this will probably be more than compensated by the growing wealth of the states west of the Mississippi, which will be constantly adding to the already inexhaustible resources of the vast Mississippi valley.

Algiers, a flourishing village, or rather suburb of New Orleans, is situated opposite to the city, with which it is connected by a ferry. It has several shipyards and manufacturing establishments. At New Orleans and at these yards were built, during the year ending June 30th, 1852, 1 brig, 11 schooners, and 4 steamers, with an aggregate burthen of 1284 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons.

Gas was first employed to light the city in 1834; and during the same year water was introduced from the Mississippi. It is raised from the river by steam to an elevated reservoir, whence 5 or 6 millions of gallons are daily distributed to various parts of the city.

Any description of New Orleans would be incomplete without some notice of its cemeteries, many of which are unique in plan and method of interment. "Each is inclosed with a brick wall of arched cavities, (or ovens, as they are here called,) made just large enough to admit a single coffin, and raised tier upon tier, to a height of about twelve feet, with a thickness of ten. The whole inclosure is divided into plats, with gravelled paths intersecting each other at right angles, and is densely covered with tombs built wholly above ground, and from one to three stories high. This method of sepulture is adopted from necessity, and burial under ground is never attempted, excepting in the 'Potter's Field,' where the stranger without friends and the poor without money find an uncertain rest; the water with which the soil is always saturated, often forcing the coffin and its contents out of its narrow and shallow cell, to rot with no other covering than the arch of heaven."

From its low situation and warm climate, New Orleans is subject to annual visitations of the yellow fever, which have had the effect of greatly retarding the growth and prosperity of the place. Statistical tables show that of those who are born and reared in the city, as large a proportion live to old age as of the inhabitants of other places that are generally deemed healthy. But the yellow fever is particularly fatal to the unacclimated, and especially to those who have been from infancy accustomed to a northern climate.

This circumstance operates as a formidable check on the influx of strangers, to which our great commercial cities owe so large a proportion of their population and activity. During the winter and spring, New Orleans may be regarded as a healthful residence for all, whether natives or strangers; and hopes were entertained that with the improvements in the sanitary regulations, there would be a gradual and steady advance in the health of the city during the warm months; but the present year has disappointed those hopes, the epidemic having appeared in a form more malignant than was ever before known. Its introduction, however, it is said, can be traced to an infected vessel from South America, where a fever of an unusually fatal character has prevailed. It is estimated that not less than 9500 persons have fallen victims to this terrible scourge during the present season. For several weeks the number of deaths have averaged near 200 per day. But at the present date, September 26th, 1853, the deaths do not average over 20 daily.

New Orleans was settled by the French in 1717. In 1723 it contained about 100 cabins, and a population not exceeding 200 souls. In 1727, the Jesuits and Ursuline nuns arrived; the former remained until the expulsion of their order from France, Spain, and Naples, in 1763, compelled them to leave Louisiana; their entire property was confiscated; their lands, which were then sold by the court for about $186,000, are now probably worth not less than $20,000,000. In 1769 occurred the first visitation of the yellow fever, which was introduced, it is said, by an English vessel with a cargo of slaves from Africa. The first regular commercial intercourse between New Orleans and the ports of the United States was commenced in 1777, by Oliver Pollock, a citizen of Baltimore. March 21, 1778, the city was visited by a fierce conflagration, which destroyed 900 houses and a vast amount of other property. In 1785, New Orleans had a population of 4700. The city militia, to the number of 700, were organized for drill in 1792. In 1794, the first newspaper, called "La Moniteur," was published. In 1762, New Orleans was conveyed to the Spanish, reconveyed to the French in 1800, and included in the purchase of Louisiana by the United States in 1803. At this time it contained a population of 8000. Its commerce extended to all the West, to the Eastern States, and to Europe. The exports of 1802 were 50,000 barrels of flour; 3000 barrels of beef and pork; 2000 hogsheds of tobacco; 34,000 bales of cotton; 4000 hogsheds of sugar, and 800 casks of molasses. New Orleans is famous in history as the place designated to become the seat of the monarchy intended to have been established by the treason of Aaron Burr. During the month of January, 1804, the citizens were in a state of continual alarm:

volunteer companies and other troops constantly patrolled the streets, ready to suppress the first attempt at insurrection. This year it was made a port of entry, and the next, (1805,) New Orleans was incorporated as a city. In 1810, seven years after it was received into the United States, its population had increased to 17,242. January 8, 1815, General Pakenham, commanding the English forces, made an attack on the city, approaching it through Lakes Borgne and Pontchartrain, and was signally defeated by the Americans under General Jackson. The loss of the English in killed and wounded was nearly 3000; the American loss was only 7 men killed and 6 wounded. It was not till after peace was established by the Treaty of Ghent, that New Orleans began to reap the full advantages of steam navigation on the Mississippi, and to hold that proud pre-eminence she now enjoys in wealth, commerce, and population. Named in honor of the Duke of Orleans, regent of France during the minority of Louis XV. Population in 1820, 27,176; 1830, 46,810; 1840, 102,193; 1850, 126,375; and by a local census in 1853, 145,449, of which 29,174 were slaves and free colored. During the business season the population is estimated at 175,000.

NEW OXFORD, a post-village of Adams co. Pa.

NEW PALESTINE, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

NEW PALTZ, a post-township in the S. part of Ulster co., New York. It contains a village of the same name on the Walkill river, and a bank. Pop. 2729.

NEW PALTZ LANDING, a post-village of Ulster co., New York, on the Hudson river opposite Poughkeepsie.

NEW PARIS, a flourishing post-village of Jefferson township, Preble co., Ohio, on the E. fork of Whitewater river, 57 miles N. N. W. from Cincinnati. It possesses fine water-power, and contains a woollen factory, and several flouring mills. Pop. estimated at 600.

NEW PARIS, a post-village of Elkhart co., Indiana, about 7 miles S. from Goshen. Population, 200.

NEW PATERSON, a small village of Sussex co., New Jersey, on Swartwout's lake, 5 miles W. from Newton.

NEW PENNINGTON, a post-office of Decatur co., Indiana.

NEW PETERSBURG, a post-village of Highland co., Ohio, 70 miles E. by N. from Cincinnati. Population, over 300.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, a small village of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, on the railroad which leads from Pottsville towards Tamqua, about 5 miles E. N. E. from the former.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, a handsome post-village of Goshen township, and capital of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, on the left bank of the Tuscarawas river, 100 miles E. N. E. from Columbus. It is situated on a beautiful plain, in the midst of a fertile, highly cultivated country. Within a few years past it has increased rapidly in population and business. The Ohio canal passes within a mile or two of the village. It has several manufactories and mills. Coal and iron ore are abundant here. It contains 3 or 4 churches, and 2 newspaper offices. Settled in 1804. Pop., in 1850, 1415; in 1853, about 2000.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, -a post-village in Washington co., Indiana, 90 miles S. by E. from Indianapolis.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, a post-office of Pike co., Illinois.

NEW PITTSBURG, a post-village in Wayne co., Ohio, about 90 miles N. E. from Columbus. Population in 1853, 250.

NEW PLYMOUTH, a small post-village of Vinton co., Ohio.

NEW POINT COMFORT, Chesapeake bay, the N. side of the entrance to Mobjack bay, about 18 miles N. from Old Point Comfort. On it is a fixed light, 60 feet above the level of the sea.

NEWPORT, a county forming the S. E. extremity of Rhode Island, has an area of about 125 square miles. It consists of several small islands in Narraganset bay, with a portion of the mainland on its eastern shore. It enjoys great facilities for navigation and the fisheries, and considerable attention has recently been paid to manufactures. The surface is moderately uneven, and the soil generally fertile. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 156,698 bushels of corn; 134,988 of oats; 78,688 of potatoes; 13,776 tons of hay, and 222,916 pounds of butter. There were 9 cotton, and 5 woollen factories, 1 saw and planing, and 8 flour mills, 2 cordage manufactories, 1 calico print-works, 3 cabinet-ware manufactories, and 1 coal mine. It contained 86 churches, 5 newspaper offices, 2951 pupils attending public schools, and 58 attending other schools. Large quantities of coal, and some blacklead are found in this county. Capital, Newport. Population, 20,007.

NEWPORT, a post-township of Penobscot co., Maine, 55 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 1210.

NEWPORT, a post-village, and capital of Sullivan co., New Hampshire, about 35 miles N. W. by W. from Concord; it has 1 bank. Pop. of the township, 2020.

NEWPORT, a post-township of Orleans co., Vermont, near Memphramagog lake, 55 miles N. E. from Montpelier. Population, 748.

NEWPORT, a post-town, port of entry, seat of justice of Newport county, Rhode Island, and semi-capital of the state, is situated on the W. shore of Rhode Island, 5 miles from the ocean by ship channel, and 28 miles S. by E. from Providence. Lat. 41° 29' N., lon. 71° 19' 12" W. The harbor is one of the best on the United States coast, being capacious, safe, easy of access, and of sufficient depth for the largest ships. It is defended by Fort Wolcott, on Goat Island, and Fort Adams, a fortification of great size and strength, on Benton's Point, about 1½ miles S. W. from the town. Newport has a beautiful site on an acclivity facing the harbor. Within a few years the town has been greatly improved, both with regard to its streets and buildings. Its fine sea air and varied scenery have rendered it one of the most celebrated watering places in New England. Several splendid hotels have been built, and wealthy persons from other cities have erected many handsome edifices for summer residence. The principal public buildings are the state house, a commodious brick structure, adorned with an octagonal cupola, and containing, besides the legislative halls, apartments for the several courts of the county, state, and United States, a custom house, and a market house. The Masonic hall, on School street, and armory hall, on Clark street, are also fine structures. The building of the Redwood Library and Athenæum is a handsome edifice with a portico and wings. The apartment devoted to the use of the library contains about 4000 volumes, besides numerous pictures and busts. There are about 15 churches in Newport of the various denominations. The Friends' meeting house was erected in the year 1700, at which date, it is said, that about one-half of the entire population were Quakers. Among the hotels the Ocean House, at the S. end of Bellevue street; the Atlantic House, at the head of Pelham street, and the Bellevue House on Catharine street, may be mentioned as the most extensive. For a long period after the first settlement of the colonies, Newport, in commercial importance, was the rival of Boston and New York, and, until the Revolution, it ranked among the first commercial cities of New England; but by that event its commerce was entirely destroyed, and its population reduced from about 10,000 to 5500. Since then it has never been able to recover its former rank. The shipping of this port, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 6301½ tons registered, and 4699¾ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the former, 1851½ tons were employed in the whale fishery; and of the latter, 3785½ tons were employed in the coast trade; 560½ tons in the cod and mackerel fisheries, and 255¾ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 28, (tons, 4833,) and the clearances, 20, (tons, 4337;) of which 4037 were in American bottoms. During the same period, 1 ship and 1 schooner, with an aggregate burthen of 272¾ tons, were admeasured. The town contains 7 banks, with an aggregate capital of $680,000; a savings' institution, having $291,813.25 on deposit; several extensive woollen and cotton manufactories, and 5 newspaper offices. The assessed value of taxable property is about $5,000,000. Newport has steamboat communication with Providence, Fall River, and New York. It is also proposed to construct a railroad, connecting it with Bristol, Fall River, and Providence.—For history, see RHODE ISLAND. Population of the township in 1830, 8010; in 1840, 8333; in 1850, 9563; in 1853, about 10,000.

NEWPORT, a post-township of Herkimer co., New York, 12 miles N. E. from Utica. Population, 2125.

NEWPORT, a post-village in the above township, on West Canada creek, about 85 miles W. N. W. from Albany.

NEWPORT, or NANTUXET, a small post-village of Cumberland co., New Jersey, 28 miles S. E. from Salem.

NEWPORT, a township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania, 10 W. S. W. from Wilkesbarre. Population, 868.

NEWPORT, a thriving post-village of Oliver township, Perry county, Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Juniata river, and on the Central railroad, 24 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It is a place of active business, and is a general depôt for grain, which is exported by the Pennsylvania canal. Population in 1853, about 600.

NEWPORT, a post-village of Newcastle co., Delaware, on the Wilmington and Baltimore railroad, 4 miles W. from Wilmington.

NEWPORT, a post-village in Charles co., Md., 50 miles S. W. by S. from Annapolis.

NEWPORT, a small village of Augusta co., Virginia, 18 miles W. from Staunton, the county seat, has 2 stores.

NEWPORT, a post-office of Giles co., Va.

NEWPORT, a post-village of Wakulla co., Florida, on Appalachee bay, at the mouth of St. Mark's river, about 6 miles S. from St. Mark's. A plank-road is in progress from this place to the boundary of Georgia. A newspaper is published here.

NEWPORT, a post-office of Franklin co., Ala.

NEWPORT, a post-office of Greene co., Ark.

NEWPORT, a post-village, capital of Cocke co., Tennessee, on the French Broad river, 47 miles E. from Knoxville, contains 2 or 3 churches and an academy.

NEWPORT, a flourishing and beautiful city of Campbell county, Kentucky, is situated on the Ohio river, opposite Cincinnati, 80 miles N. N. E. from Frankfort, and just above the mouth of Licking river, which separates it from Covington. It owes its rapid growth and importance chiefly to its proximity to Cincinnati, and the beauty of its situation. Newport and the villages of Jamestown and Brooklyn, occupying about 2000 acres, in a few years will be united as one town, a great part of which will be composed of elegant mansions and cottages of wealthy citizens, and persons who have retired from business. It contains several extensive rolling mills, iron foundries, and steam mills, and a manufactory of silk goods; also 1 bank, and 1 or 2 newspaper offices. Population in 1853, about 8500.

NEWPORT, a village of Shelby co., Ohio, on the Miami and Erie canal, 112 miles, by canal, N. from Cincinnati.

NEWPORT, a post-township in the S. E. part of Washington co., Ohio. Pop., 1228.

NEWPORT, a post-village in the above township, on the Ohio river, 14 miles above Marietta. It has an active business, and contains about 600 inhabitants.

NEWPORT, a post-village of Monroe co., Michigan, on Lake Erie, 8 miles N. E. from Monroe City. Oak timber and staves are shipped here.

NEWPORT, a post-village of St. Clair co., Michigan, on the St. Clair river, at the mouth of Belle river, 45 miles N. E. from Detroit. It contains several stores and mills.

NEWPORT, a post-village, capital of Vermilion co., Indiana, on Little Vermilion river, 1 mile from the Wabash river, and 75 miles W. from Indianapolis. It has 2 churches, and a flourishing seminary. Pop., 500.

NEWPORT, a flourishing post-village of Wayne co., Indiana, on the plank-road from Richmond to Winchester, 10 miles N. N. W. from the former.

NEWPORT, a small village of Calhoun co., Illinois.

NEWPORT, a small village of Greene co., Illinois, on the left bank of the Illinois river, 14 miles W. N. W. from Carrollton.

NEWPORT, a post-township in Lake co., Illinois. Population, 964.

NEWPORT, a small post-village of Franklin co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, 67 miles by land W. from St. Louis, was formerly the county seat.

NEWPORT, a post-office of Columbia co., Wis.

NEW PORTAGE, a post-village of Summit co., Ohio, on the Ohio canal, 119 miles N. E. from Columbus.

NEWPORT CENTRE, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

NEW PORTLAND, a township of Somerset co., Maine, 45 miles N. by E. from Augusta.

NEW PORTLAND, a post-office of Stewart co., Tennessee.

NEW PORTLAND, a post-village of Ralls co., Missouri, on Salt river, about 95 miles N. N. E. from Jefferson City.

NEWPORT NEWS, a post-office of Warwick co., Virginia.

NEWPORT RIVERS, North and South. Two small streams of Liberty co., Georgia, flowing into St. Catharine's sound.

NEWPORTVILLE, a post-village of Bucks co., Pa., 116 miles E. by S. from Harrisburg.

NEW POTOSI, a post-office of Macon co., Ala.

NEW PRESTON, a post-village of Washington township, Litchfield co., Connecticut, about 40 miles N. W. by W. from New Haven.

NEW PRINCETON, a post-office of Coshocton co., Ohio.

NEW PROSPECT, a post-village of Bergen co., New Jersey, 22 miles N. by W. from Jersey City.

NEW PROSPECT, a post-village of Spartanburg district, South Carolina.

NEW PROSPECT, a village in Green co., Alabama, 100 miles N. W. by W. from Montgomery.

NEW PROSPECT, a post-office of Winston co., Mississippi.

NEW PROSPECT, a post-office of Wayne co., O.

NEW PROSPECT, a small village of Orange co., Indiana, on the New Albany and Vincennes turnpike, 8 miles W. from Paoli.

NEW PROVIDENCE, a post-township of Essex co., New Jersey, on the right bank of the Passaic river, about 13 miles W. from Newark. Population, 1216.

NEW PROVIDENCE, a small post-village in the above township, 14 miles W. by S. from Newark.

NEW PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

NEW PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Pike co., Alabama.

NEW PROVIDENCE, a post-village of Montgomery county, Tennessee, on the Cumberland river, 47 miles by the road N. W. from Nashville. It is a depôt for tobacco and other produce, which is forwarded by steam boats down the river. Population, 600.

NEW PROVIDENCE, a post-village of Clarke co., Indiana, on the New Albany and Salem railroad, 19 miles N. N. W. from New Albany.

NEW RETREAT, a post-office of Washington co., Indiana.

NEW RICHLAND, a post-office of Logan co., O.

NEW RICHMOND, a post-office of Crawford co., Pennsylvania.

NEW RICHMOND, a flourishing post-village of Ohio township, Clermont county, Ohio, on the Ohio river, 20 miles above Cincinnati. It is the most populous village in the county, and is a place of rapid growth. It has several steam mills and carding machines. Population in 1853, estimated at 2500.

NEW RICHMOND, a small village of Montgomery co., Indiana, 12 miles N. N. W. from Crawfordsville.

NEW RIVER, of Virginia. See KANAWHA.

NEW RIVER, of North Carolina, a small stream which rises near the N. W. corner of Onslow county, and flowing southward, enters the Atlantic through New River inlet.

NEW RIVER, of Beaufort district, South Carolina, flows southward, and enters the Atlantic at the S. W. extremity of the state.

NEW RIVER, of Alabama. See SIPSEY.

NEW RIVER, of Louisiana, flows into Lake Maurepas from the W.

NEW RIVER, a post-office of Columbia co., Florida.

NEW RIVER, a post-office of Ascension parish, Louisiana.

NEW ROAD, a post-office of Delaware co. N. Y.

NEW ROCHELLE, a post-township in the S. part of Westchester co., N. Y. Pop., 2458.

NEW ROCHELLE, a post-village in the above township, on Long Island sound, and on the New York and New Haven railroad, 20 miles N. E. from New York. It contains several churches, boarding schools, and factories. Population estimated at 1000.

NEW ROCHESTER, a post-village of Wood co., Ohio.

NEW ROCKFORD, a village of Jackson co., Indiana, on the E. fork of White river, and on the railroad from Jeffersonville to Columbus, 60 miles S. from Indianapolis. Population in 1853, 200.

NEW ROE, a post-office of Allen co., Ky.

NEW ROSS, a post-village in Montgomery co., Indiana, 30 miles N. W. by W. from Indianapolis.

NEW RUMLEY, a post-village of Harrison co., Ohio, 128 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

NEW RUSSIA, a post-office of Essex co., N. Y.

NEWRY, a post-township of Oxford co., Me., 50 miles N. W. from Augusta. Pop., 459.

NEWRY, a post-village of Blair co., Pennsylvania, 125 miles W. from Harrisburg.

NEWRY, a small village of Jackson co., Indiana, on the Muscakituck river, 15 miles E. from Brownstown.

NEWS, a post-office of Calhoun co., Ill.

NEW SALEM, a post-township of Franklin co., Massachusetts, 70 miles W. N. W. from Boston. Population, 1253.

NEW SALEM, a post-office of Albany co., N. Y.

NEW SALEM, a post-village of Fayette co., Pennsylvania, about 50 miles S. from Pittsburg, and 190 miles W. by S. from Harrisburg, has about 50 houses.

NEW SALEM, a post-borough of Salem township, Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, on the Northern turnpike from Pittsburg to Harrisburg, 28 miles E. from the former. The post-office is called Salem Cross Roads. Population, about 300.

NEW SALEM, a post-office of Harrison co. Va.

NEW SALEM, a post-village in Randolph co., North Carolina.

NEW SALEM, a post-village of Rusk co., Texas, about 240 miles N. E. from Austin.

NEW SALEM, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, 11 miles N. E. from Lancaster.

NEW SALEM, a post-village of Rush co., Indiana, 47 miles E. S. E. from Indianapolis.

NEW SALEM, a small village of Edwards co., Illinois, 8 miles N. from Albion, the county seat, is settled by Germans.

NEW SALEM, a post-office of Pike co., Ill.

NEW SALISBURY, a post-village in Harrison co., Indiana, 110 miles S. from Indianapolis.

NEW SCOTLAND, a post-township of Albany co., New York, 9 miles W. by S. from Albany. Population, 3459.

NEW SCOTTSVILLE, a post-office of Beaver co., Pennsylvania.

NEW SEWICKLY, a township of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, about 5 miles E. N. E. from Beaver. Pop., 2131.

NEW SHARON, a post-township of Franklin co., Maine, 23 miles N. W. by N. from Augusta. Population, 1732.

NEW SHARON, a post-office of Monmouth co., New Jersey.

NEW SHEFFIELD, a small post-village of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles W. N. W. from Pittsburg.

NEW SHOREHAM, a post-township of Newport co., Rhode Island. This town comprises Block Island, which lies 30 miles S. S. W. from Newport. Population, 1262.

NEW SMYRNA, a post-office of Orange co., Florida.

NEW SOMERSET, a post-village of Jefferson co., Ohio, 143 miles E. by N. from Columbus.

NEWSOM'S DEPÔT, a post-office of Southampton co., Virginia.

NEWSON, a post-office of Bibb co., La.

NEW SPRINGFIELD, a post-village of Mahoning co., Ohio, 12 miles S. E. from Canfield.

NEW STAND, a post-office of Clayton co., Iowa.

NEW STANTON, a small post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 173 miles W. from Harrisburg.

NEWSTEAD, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Erie co., New York. Population, 2899.

NEWSTEAD, a post-office of Christian co., Ky.

NEW STORE, a post-office of Buckingham co., Virginia, 81 miles W. from Richmond.

NEW SWEDEN, a small manufacturing post-village of Clinton co., New York, on Au Sable river, about 130 miles N. from Albany.

NEW TEXAS, a small village of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, 5 miles from Allentown.

NEWTON, a county in the N. central part of Georgia, has an area of 360 square miles. It is bounded on the S. W. by South river, intersected by the Yellow and Alcevy rivers, and also drained by Cornish, Beaverdam and Haynes creeks. The surface is generally undulating, and the eastern part level. The most fertile lands are in the vicinity of the rivers. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, oats, and potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 6938 bales of cotton; 463,130 bushels of corn; 60,315 of oats, and 104,202 of sweet potatoes. There were 2 manufactories of agricultural implements, 1 cotton and 1 woollen factory, 3 sawmills, 2 flour mills, and 5 grist mills. It contained 30 churches, 1 newspaper office, 478 pupils attending public schools, and 101 attending other schools. The county contains an abundance of fine granite and iron ore. Gold is found in small quantities. It is intersected by the Georgia railroad. Named in honor of Sergeant John Newton, an officer in the war of the Revolution. Capital, Covington. Population, 13,296, of whom 8109 were free, and 5187 slaves.

NEWTON, a county in the S. E. central part of Mississippi, has an area of about 580 square miles. It is drained by a branch of Chickasawha river. Indian corn, rice, cotton, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 165,186 bushels of corn; 12,861 of oats; 58,047 of sweet potatoes; 1,474 bales of cotton, and 32,330 pounds of rice. It contained 1 church, and 180 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Decatur. Pop., 4465, of whom 3433 were free, and 1032 slaves.

NEWTON, a county in the E. central part of Texas, bordering on the Sabine river, which separates it from Louisiana, has an area of about 1200 square miles. It is drained by Caney and Big Cow creeks. The bank of the Sabine river is covered with timber. The soil produces Indian corn, sweet potatoes, and cotton. In 1850 this county yielded 34,135 bushels of corn; 19,890 of sweet potatoes; 152 bales of cotton; 23,570 pounds of rice; 10,218 of butter; 662 of wool, and 14 hogsheads of sugar. There were 84 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Burkeville. Population, 1689, of whom 1263 were free, and 426, slaves.

NEWTON, a county in the N. N. W. part of Arkansas, contains 800 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of Buffalo Fork of White river. The surface is diversified with hills and valleys, which are adapted to grain, fruit, to the pasturage of cattle, &c. In 1850 this county produced 94,125 bushels of Indian corn; 1345 of peas and beans, and 11,766 pounds of butter. It contained 3 churches, and 130 pupils attending public schools. A large part of the county is covered with forests. Capital, Jasper. Pop., 1758, of whom 1,711 were free, and 47, slaves.

NEWTON, a county in the W. S. W. part of Missouri, bordering on the Indian territory, has an area of 750 square miles. It is drained by Shoal, Oliver, and Centre creeks, which flow westward, and enter the Neosho river. The soil is moderately fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, grass, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 196,210 bushels of corn; 18,416 of wheat; 31,318 of oats, and 43,011 pounds of butter. It contained 2 churches, and 278 pupils attending public schools. Lead mines have recently been opened 6 miles from Neosho, and are thought to be rich. Shoal creek affords abundant water-power. Capital, Neosho. Pop., 4268, of whom 4027 were free, and 241, slaves.

NEWTON, a township of Rockingham co., New Hampshire. It is intersected by the Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth railroad, 40 miles S. E. from Concord. Pop., 685.

NEWTON, a post-township of Middlesex co., Massachusetts, intersected by the Boston and Worcester railroad, 10 miles W. from Boston, contains 1 bank. Pop. 5258.

NEWTON, a township of Camden co., New Jersey, on the Delaware river, 7 miles S. E. from Camden. Population, 1576.

NEWTON, a post-township of Sussex co., New Jersey, on the Paulinskill creek, about 65 miles N. from Trenton. Population, 3279.

NEWTON, a post-borough in Newton township, and capital of Sussex co., New Jersey, 68 miles N. from Trenton. It is pleasantly situated, and contains a new court house, 4 churches, viz. 1 Presbyterian, 1 Baptist, 1 Methodist, and 1 Lutheran, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, a public library, and several academies. Population, estimated at 1200.

NEWTON, a township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania. Population, 819.

NEWTON, a post-office of Kanawha co., Va. CATAWBA, a thriving post-village, capital of Catawba co., North Carolina, 175 miles W. from Raleigh, is situated in a fertile and beautiful country, and has an active trade. It has a commodious court house, and many handsome residences. The German Reformed church are about to establish a college at this place.

NEWTON, a small post-village, capital of Baker co., Ga., on the right bank of the Flint river, 180 miles S. S. W. from Milledgeville. It has 4 stores, and about 100 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a small village of Bibb co., Ga.

NEWTON, a post-office of Marion co., Fla.

NEWTON, a post-village, capital of Dale co., Alabama, about 85 miles S. S. E. from Montgomery.

NEWTON, a township in the E. central part of Licking co., Ohio, and intersected by the Columbus and Lake Erie railroad. Pop., 1247.

NEWTON, a township in the W. part of Miami county, Ohio. Population, 1242.

NEWTON, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Muskingum co., O. Pop., 2568.

NEWTON, a township in Pike county, Ohio. Population, 326.

NEWTON, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Trumbull co., Ohio. Pop., 678.

NEWTON, a thriving village of Union co., Ohio, 40 miles N. W. from Columbus. It has 1 or 2 churches and several stores. Pop., 400.

NEWTON, a post-township in the S. W. part of Calhoun co., Michigan. Population, 235.

NEWTON, a post-township in Jasper county, Indiana. Population, 435.

NEWTON, a small post-village, capital of Jasper co., Illinois, on the Embarras river, 130 miles E. S. E. from Springfield. It contains 1 or 2 churches, and several stores.

NEWTON, a small village of Greene co., Ill.

NEWTON, a small post-village, capital of Jasper co., Iowa, on a branch of Skunk river, 90 miles W. from Iowa City.

NEWTON, a township in Manitoowoc county, Wisconsin. Population, 545.

NEWTON CENTRE, a post-village in Newton township, Middlesex co., Mass., 10 miles W. from Boston. It is the seat of the Newton Theological Seminary, founded in 1825.

NEWTON CORNERS, a post-office of Jefferson county, Wisconsin.

NEWTON DEPÔT, a post-office of Rockingham county, New Hampshire.

NEWTON FACTORY, a post-office of Newton co., Georgia, about 50 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

NEWTON FALLS, a post-village of Newton township, Trumbull co., Ohio, on the Mahoning river, and on the Pennsylvania and Ohio canal, 50 miles S. E. from Cleveland. It has several mills and about 600 inhabitants.

NEWTON GROVE, a post-office of Sampson county, North Carolina.

NEWTON HAMILTON, or HAMILTONVILLE, a post-borough of Mifflin co., Pa., on the left bank of the Juniata river, 90 miles, by railroad, W. N. W. from Harrisburg. It is connected, by canal and railroad, with Pittsburg and Philadelphia. Population in 1850, 353.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS, a manufacturing post-village of Middlesex co., Mass., on the Charles river, 11 miles W. from Boston. It is connected, by a branch railroad, with the Boston and Worcester railroad.

NEWTON STEWART, a small village of Orange co., Indiana, 112 miles S. by W. from Indianapolis.

NEWTONSVILLE, a post-office of Attala co., Mississippi.

NEWTONSVILLE, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS, a post-village of Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on Charles river, 9 miles W. from Boston. It is the terminus of the Charles River railroad.

NEWTONVILLE, a post-office of Albany co., New York.

NEWTOWN, a small village of Duke's co., Mass., about 75 miles S. E. by S. from Boston. It contains a flourishing academy.

NEWTOWN, a post-borough of Fairfield co., Connecticut, on the Housatonic railroad, 24 miles W. N. W. from New Haven. It consists of one long street, and has 4 churches and about 80 dwellings. Population of the township, 3338.

NEWTOWN, a post-township of Queen's co., N. Y., on the East river. Population, 7208.

NEWTOWN, a post-village in the above township, about 150 miles S. from Albany. It has several churches, and perhaps 100 dwellings.

NEWTOWN, a post-township in the S. E. part of Bucks co., Penn. Population, 841.

NEWTOWN, a pleasant post-borough in the above township, is situated near Neshaminy creek, 20 miles N. E. from Philadelphia. Newtown was the county seat for several years previous to 1812. It has 2 or 3 places of worship, 1 academy, and several stores. Population, 580.

NEWTOWN, a township in the W. part of Cumberland co., Pa. Population, 1666.

NEWTOWN, a township of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 14 miles W. from Philadelphia. Population, 823.

NEWTOWN, a post-village of Greene county, Pennsylvania, on Whitely creek, about 10 miles S. E. from Waynesburg.

NEWTOWN, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

NEWTOWN, a flourishing post-village of Worcester co., Maryland, on the E. side of the Pocomoke river, 15 miles S. W. from Suow Hill. It is a place of active trade, containing 4 churches, 6 stores, 2 steam mills, and 2 hotels. Pop. in 1853, estimated at 800.

NEWTOWN, or STEPHENSBURG, a neat and thriving post-village of Frederick county, Virginia, on the turnpike leading from Winchester to Staunton, 8 miles S. by E. from the former. It is especially noted for the manufacture of wagons. The place was settled in 1758. It contains 2 churches, a market house, and over 100 dwellings.

NEWTOWN, a small post-village of King and Queen county, Virginia, 38 miles N. E. from Richmond, contains 1 church.

NEWTOWN, a post-village in Hinds county, Mississippi, on Pearl river, 15 miles S. by W. from Jackson.

NEWTOWN, a post-village of Scott county, Kentucky, 22 miles E. from Frankfort, has 2 or 3 churches and about 200 inhabitants.

NEWTOWN, a post-village of Hamilton co., Ohio, 10 miles E. from Cincinnati.

NEWTOWN, a pleasant post-village of Fountain co., Indiana, 14 miles E. N. E. from Covington, stands on the border of the large and rich Shawance prairie. Pop., about 500.

NEWTOWN ACADEMY, a post-office of Monroe county, Alabama.

NEWTOWN CREEK, of Long island, flows into the East river opposite New York.

NEWTOWN SQUARE, a post-village of Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

NEW TRENTON, a small village of Jefferson county, Ohio.

NEW TRENTON, a small post-village of Franklin county, Indiana, 30 miles N. W. from Cincinnati.

NEW TRIER, a post-office of Cook co., Ill.

NEW TRIPOLI, a small post-village of Lehigh co., Pa., 85 miles E. N. E. from Harrisburg.

NEW UPTON, a post-office of Gloucester co., Virginia.

NEW UTRECHT, a post-township of King's co., N. Y., forms the W. extremity of Long Island. Population, 2129.

NEW VERNON, a post-office of Orange co., New York.

NEW VERNON, a small post-village of Morris co., N. J., 5 miles S. from Morristown.

NEW VERNON, a post-office of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

NEW VIENNA, a post-village of Clinton co., Ohio, 11 miles S. E. from Wilmington.

NEW VILLAGE, a post-village of Suffolk co., New York.

NEW VILLAGE, a post-village of Warren co., New Jersey, 52 miles N. N. W. from Trenton.

NEWVILLE, a post-village of Herkimer co., N. Y., about 65 miles W. N. W. from Albany.

NEWVILLE, a post-borough of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, near the Cumberland Valley railroad, 12 miles S. W. from Carlisle. It contains 2 churches, and several stores. Population in 1850, 715; in 1853, about 900.

NEWVILLE, a post-office of Sussex co., Va.

NEWVILLE, a thriving post-village of Richland co., Ohio, is pleasantly situated on the Clear fork of Mohiccan river, 12 miles S. E. from Mansfield.

NEWVILLE, a post-township in De Kalb co., Indiana. Population, 396.

NEWVILLE, a post-village in De Kalb co., Indiana.

NEWVILLE, a small village of Wells county, Indiana, on the Wabash river, about 100 miles N. E. from Indianapolis.

NEW VINE, a post-office of Dubuque co., Io.

NEW VINEYARD, a post-township of Franklin co., Maine, about 48 miles N. W. from Augusta. Population, 635.

NEW WAKEFIELD, a small post-village of Washington co., Alabama, 164 miles S. by W. from Tuscaloosa.

NEW WASHINGTON, a post-village of Clearfield co., Pennsylvania, on the W. branch of the Susquehanna river, about 135 miles W. N. W. from Harrisburg.

NEW WASHINGTON, a small post-village of Crawford co., Ohio.

NEW WASHINGTON, a pleasant post-village of Clarke co., Indiana, 18 miles S. W. from Madison. It has a flourishing academy, and about 300 inhabitants.

NEW WAX, a post-office of Licking co., Ohio.

NEW WESTVILLE, a post-office of Preble co., Ohio.

NEW WILMINGTON, a post-township of Lawrence co., Pennsylvania, 7 miles N. from New Castle. Population, 1478.

NEW WILMINGTON, a village of Pennsylvania, on the line between Mercer and Lawrence counties, 8 miles S. W. from Mercer.

NEW WINCHESTER, a post-office of Crawford co., Ohio.

NEW WINCHESTER, a small post-village of Hendricks co., Indiana, 27 miles W. from Indianapolis.

NEW WINDSOR, a post-township of Orange co., New York, on the Newburg Branch railroad. Population, 2457.

NEW WINDSOR, a post-village in the above township, on the Hudson river, about 85 miles below Albany. It is said to be the birthplace of De Witt Clinton.

NEW WINDSOR, a post-village of Carroll co., Md., about 30 miles N. W. from Baltimore.

NEW WINDSOR, a small village of Carroll co., Missouri.

NEW WINE, a village in Dubuque co., Iowa, 25 miles W. by N. from Dubuque.

NEW WOODSTOCK, a post-village of Madison co., New York, 24 miles S. E. from Syracuse.

NEW YORK, one of the Middle States of the United States, and the most populous of the confederacy, is bounded on the N. by Lake Ontario, the St. Lawrence, and Canada East; on the E. by Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut; on the S. by the Atlantic, (if we include Long Island,) by New Jersey and Pennsylvania; and W. by Pennsylvania, Lake Erie, and the Niagara river. This state is separated on the W. and N. W. from Canada West, by Lakes Erie and Ontario, and by the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers; and partly from Vermont by Lake Champlain. It lies between 40° 30' and 45° N. lat., and between (if we include Long Island, a dependency of the state) 72° and 79° 55' W. lon. Its extreme length from E. to W., exclusive of Long Island, is about 335 miles, and its greatest breadth from N. to S. about 308 miles, including an area of about 46,000 square miles, or 29,440,000 acres, of which 12,408,968 only were improved in 1850, showing a great capacity for increase of population, even in the older and more densely inhabited states of North America.

Population.—Though originally settled by the Dutch, and having some of its oldest and most respectable families of that descent, the greater infusion of New-England population since the Revolution, has given to the inhabitants of New York more of the characteristics of New England than of Holland. According to the census of 1790, this state had 340,120 inhabitants; 586,756 in 1800; 959,049 in 1810; 1,372,812 in 1820; 1,918,608 in 1830; 2,428,921 in 1840, and 3,097,394 in 1850; of whom 1,544,489 were white males; 1,503,836 white females; 23,452 free colored males, and 25,617 females. This population was distributed in 566,869 families, occupying 473,936 dwellings. Of the entire population, 2,151,196 were born in the state, 288,100 in other states of the Union, 84,820 in England, 343,111 in Ireland, 23,418 in Scotland, 7582 in Wales, 118,398 in Germany, 12,515 in France, 14,757 in other countries, and 6261 whose places of birth were unknown; giving about 21 per cent. of foreign birth. In the twelve months preceding June 1st, 1850, there occurred 44,339 deaths, or nearly 14 persons in every one thousand. In the same year, aid was received by 59,855 paupers, of whom 40,580 were foreigners, at an expense of nearly $14 for each individual. The deaf and dumb numbered 1307, of whom 10 were colored persons; the blind 1272, of whom 51 were colored; the insane 2580, of whom 36 were colored; and the idiotic 1739, of whom 18 were colored.

Counties.—New York is divided into 59 counties, viz. Albany, Alleghany, Broome, Cattaraugus, Cayuga, Chautauque, Chemung, Chenango, Clinton, Columbia, Cortland, Delaware, Dutchess, Erie, Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Genesee, Greene, Hamilton, Herkimer, Jefferson, Kings, Lewis, Livingston, Madison, Monroe, Montgomery, New York, Niagara, Oneida, Onondaga, Ontario, Orange, Orleans, Oswego, Otsego, Putnam, Queens, Rensselaer, Richmond, Rockland, Saratoga, Schenectady, Schoharie, Seneca, St. Lawrence, Steuben, Suffolk, Sullivan, Tioga, Tompkins, Ulster, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Westchester, Wyoming, and Yates. Albany is the capital.

Cities and Towns.—New York is filled with populous and thriving towns, and her inland cities and villages exhibit, in their great warehouses and elegant private residences, such indications of wealth and taste as are only looked for in seaport towns or great capitals, in other countries. New York, her metropolis, and the most populous city of the Western continent, is the great centre of commercial operations, not only of the United States, but of all America. Though the population of New York city proper numbered in 1850 but 515,507, yet, added to its different suburbs—Brooklyn, (pop., 96,838,) Williamsburg, (30,780,) and Jersey City and Hoboken (though in another state)—it summed up a total of 653,000 inhabitants. The other most important towns are Albany, population, 50,763; Buffalo, 42,261; Rochester, 36,403; Troy, 28,785, (and in conjunction with West Troy, about 36,000;) Syracuse, 22,271; Utica, 17,565; Poughkeepsie, 13,944; Lockport, 12,323; Oswego, 12,205; Newburg, 11,415; Kingston, 10,232; Auburn, 9548; Fishkill, 9240; Schenectady, 8921; Rome, 7918; Ogdensburg, 7756; Owego, 7159; Ithica, 6909; Hudson, 6280; Canandaigua, 6143; Plattsburg, 5618; Catskill, 5454; Binghamton, Elmira, Dunkirk, Waterford, Batavia, Waterloo, Seneca Falls, Herkimer, Saratoga, Sackett's Harbor, and various other towns, numbering from 2000 to 5000 inhabitants each.

Face of the Country.—New York presents every variety of surface, from the rich plains of the western part of the state to the rugged mountains of the E. and N. E. The Appalachian or Alleghanian chain of mountains enters the S. E. of New York (in two separate ridges) from New Jersey and Pennsylvania. That from the former state crosses the Hudson river at and around West Point, about 50 miles from its mouth, and forms the far-famed Highlands of the Hudson, which have given this river a celebrity only second to the Rhine. After passing the Hudson river, this range pursues a northerly course, under the name of the Taconic or Tagkhannuc mountains, to join the Green mountains in Connecticut and Massachusetts. Where the Highlands are cut through by the Hudson river they are perhaps 20 miles in breadth, but seldom reach an altitude of 1500 feet; though in one instance, on the E. bank of the river, near Fishkill, they attain an elevation of nearly 1700 feet. N. W. of the Highlands, and running nearly parallel, are the Shawangunk mountains, which are followed in turn by the far-famed Catskill mountains, which approach the Hudson river from the S. W., run nearly parallel with it for perhaps 20 miles, then trend off to the N. W. toward the Mohawk river. In the latter part of their course they are known as the Helderberg hills. The highest summit of the chain is Roundtop, in Greene county, 3804 feet in altitude. Delaware county is traversed by a ridge called the Oquago branch. But by far the grandest chain of mountains (or rather assemblage of groups and ranges) lie N. of the Mohawk river, and between Lake Ontario on the W. and Lakes Champlain and George on the E. These traverse, under various local names, and in different directions, (but mostly N. and N. E.,) the counties of Herkimer, Fulton, Montgomery, Saratoga, Warren, Essex, Clinton, Franklin, Hamilton, and St. Lawrence. The most important group, chiefly lying in Essex county, is the Adirondack, the highest peak of which, Mount Marcy, or Tahawus, has an elevation of 5467 feet, and is the loftiest summit in the state. The Catskill or Helderberg mountains seem to resume their course beyond the Mohawk river, in Herkimer county, and to extend beyond the St. Lawrence into Canada, under the name of the Chateaugay range. There are other ranges of highlands in Oneida and Lewis counties. Speaking of the western portion of the state, (i. e. W. of Lake Cayuga,) Professor Hall remarks—"This district, bordering Lake Ontario on the N., is a low plateau, gradually rising to the S., for a distance varying from 4 to 8 or 9 miles, where we abruptly ascend a terrace, which at its western extremity attains a height of 200 feet, but which slope gently down almost to the general level farther E. From the top of this terrace, we pass over a broad plateau of nearly level country, slightly depressed towards the centre, but rising gently again to the S., till we come to the base of a second terrace, having a general height of 60 feet or more above the country on the N. Beyond the terrace last mentioned, the country is level, and generally even for several miles, when we commence a gradual ascent to higher ground. Although the country to the S. of this is hilly, and in some parts rising to an elevation of 2500 feet above the ocean, and from 600 to 1000 feet above the deepest valleys, yet it must be remembered that there are no ranges of mountains. We must fancy this whole southern border of the state as having once been a high and broad plateau, and that from denudation, the breaking up of the strata in some places, together with the action of waves and currents, has resulted this irregular and uneven surface." The first ridge, near Lake Ontario, forms the falls of the Genesee at Rochester, and the second ridge those in Alleghany county.

Geology.—Though New York has undergone the most complete geological survey of any state in the Union, by a corps of competent geologists and naturalists, who have ably reported their proceedings in a number of ponderous volumes, the character of our work does not admit of giving more than a brief outline of the geology of the state. Commencing in the N. E., the greater portion of the district N. of the Mohawk and E. of Lake Ontario is primary in formation, with, however, a belt of Potsdam sandstone on the N., which is in turn separated from the St. Lawrence by a second belt of calciferous (lime-producing) sandrock. Between Lake Ontario and the primary tract named above, in the order named, proceeding S. to Oswego, are groups of Potsdam sandstone, calciferous sandrock; Black river, Birdseye, and Trenton limestone; Utica slate, Helderberg limestone, (including grits and sandstones,) and gray sandstone. S. of Lake Ontario, narrow belts succeed each other in the following order:—1. Of the Medina sandstone, (usually a red sandstone, sometimes variegated, and giving origin to salt springs;) 2. Of the Clinton group, (a variable composition of sandstones, shales, impure limestones, iron ores, &c. ;) 3. Of the Niagara group, (a limestone resting upon shale, and forming the celebrated cataract of that name;) 4. Of the Onondaga salt group, (limestone and slate, with salt springs;) 5. Of Helderberg limestone; and 6. Of the Hamilton group, (composed of calcareous, sandy, or fossiliferous shales.) A wide zone of the Portage and Chemung groups (composed mainly, the former of flagstones and shales, and the latter of highly fossiliferous shales and thin bedded sandstones) occupy the S. W. portion of the state, extending into Pennsylvania, and sending off a narrow arm to near Catskill, on the Hudson, where it bends to the S. W., surrounding on the N. and S. E. a large tract of red sandstone lying between itself and the Susquehanna river. E. of the narrow arm just described, and between it and the Hudson, are narrow belts of the Hamilton group, Helderberg limestone, Medina sandstone, and gray sandstone. Washington, Rensselaer, Columbia, Schenectady, parts of Saratoga, Albany, Montgomery, Putnam, Orange, Ulster, and Dutchess counties, are occupied by the Hudson river group, (composed mostly of shales and shaly sandstone, with thin courses of limestone.) Westchester, most of Putnam, and parts of Dutchess and Orange counties, are primitive. Long Island is diluvial on the N., and alluvial on the S. side.

Minerals.—New York, though deficient in coal, (the geological formation being too old for its production,) abounds in that most useful of all minerals, iron, especially in the N. E. and S. E. counties, and in Wayne county. The magnetic ore is most plentiful in the N. E., and the hematitic in the S. E. counties. Bog ore is extensively diffused. Lead exists in great quantities in St. Lawrence county; and mines have been recently opened in Ulster. It is also found in Sullivan, Columbia, and Westchester counties. Zinc, copper, and titanium, exist in several counties. Molybdenum, manganese, arsenic, cerium, silver, and bismuth are occasionally found. The central and some of the western counties contain abundance of gypsum, which is largely used as a manure, and extensively exported. Our geological article shows there is no scarcity of lime, especially in the central and western counties. Marble of fine quality is exported from Sing-Sing. Sulphuret of iron is found in St. Lawrence, and carburet in Essex, Clinton, and Dutchess counties. Gneiss, sandstone, and limestone, suitable for building, are abundant. New York is especially celebrated for its mineral springs, particularly its medicinal springs, the most noted of which are those of Saratoga, Ballston, New Lebanon, Sharon, and Avon springs. Onondaga yields large quantities of table salt: about 4,000,000 bushels were produced in this county alone in 1850. There are also salt springs in Erie, Genesee, and Orleans counties. Natural issues of carbureted hydrogen exist in several counties. The village of Fredonia, in Chautauque county, is lighted from one of these, as is the lighthouse of Barcelona, in the same county.

Rivers, Lakes, &c.—New York possesses a greater amount of navigable waters than any other state of the Union. On the E. is the Hudson, traversing the state for about 350 miles, 150 of which are navigable for large steamers and schooners, and 120 for ships; on the N. E., Lake Champlain, navigable for 120 miles; and on the W. and N. W., Lakes Erie and Ontario, and the river St. Lawrence, all navigable for large steamers, and Ontario and Erie for ships of heavy tonnage. In the S. E. of the state rises the Delaware, and in the interior, the Susquehanna, which pass S. into Pennsylvania, and float down, in the high waters of spring and autumn, lumber and other products of New York, to the markets of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. The W. of the state is crossed by the Genesee, which furnishes, by its numerous cataracts, immense water-power, though it is only navigable for small steam or keel boats, and for those only by stages between the falls. The Oswego is the outlet of the central lakes, and affords valuable water-power. The two rivers last mentioned and the Black river flow into Lake Ontario. The Oswegatchee, Grass, Racket, and St. Rigis rivers, each of about 150 miles in length, join the St. Lawrence; and the Saranac and Au Sable empty themselves into Lake Champlain. All these rivers are in the N. E. of the state. The Mohawk, an affluent of the Hudson, about 200 miles in length, drains the central counties of Eastern New York. New York abounds in small and picturesque lakes. In the E. is Lake George, so celebrated for the grandeur of its scenery; in the centre are Lakes Oneida, Skeneateles, Owasco, Cayuga, Seneca, Crooked, and Canandaigua; in the S. W., Chautauque; and in the N. E., Black, Saranac, and Long lakes; besides many other small but beautiful sheets of water. The larger of these lakes vary in length from 10 to 36 miles. The principal bays are New York bay, opening into the Atlantic, and Sackett's harbor, at the E. end of Lake Ontario. Long Island sound, 120 miles long, separates Long Island from Connecticut.

Islands.—There are several important islands belonging to this state, chief among which is Long Island, about 115 miles in length, between Long Island sound and the Atlantic ocean; Staten Island, (embracing Richmond county,) between New York bay on the E., and Raritan bay and Arthurkill sound on the S. and W.; and Grand Island, in the Niagara river, belonging to the State of New York.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—Under this heading New York may justly claim a large space. On her western border, in a river or strait of 34 miles in length, running from Lake Erie to Ontario, and pouring the waters of the Great Lakes over a precipice of 165 feet in perpendicular height, thunders the far-famed and unrivalled cataract of Niagara, in whose presence all stand dumb, with no power to describe, but only to wonder and adore. The falls are about 20 miles below the entrance to the strait, at the N. E. extremity of Lake Erie, and 14 miles above its junction with Lake Ontario. About 3 miles below its commencement, the river divides into two arms, which embrace an island, called Grand Island, 12 miles long, and from 2 to 7 miles wide. The banks of the upper portion of Niagara river are low, not usually exceeding 20 or 30 feet, and the current is comparatively moderate. Near 3 miles below Grand island the rapids (scarcely less interesting than the falls themselves) commence, and after a course of rather more than a half-mile, terminate in the great cataract. Goat island, a quarter of a mile wide, and half a mile long from N. to S., extends to the very brow of the precipice, and divides the falls into two portions, the higher of which is on the American side, but the greater body of water on the Canadian. The American fall is again subdivided, very unequally, by Iris island, with the greater of these subdivisions nearest the New York shore. Below the falls, the river runs between perpendicular cliffs for three or four miles, in a channel of from 300 to 800 feet wide, with great force and impetuosity, now ruffled by rapids, and now eddying in whirlpools, till it is released from its narrow and rocky bed, below the Queenstown Heights, from whence it flows tranquilly into Lake Ontario. Between the falls and Queenstown (where navigation commences) occur two rapids, caused partly by the narrowing of the bed of the river, and partly by the rocks at the bottom. At the head of the first rapids, two miles below the falls, the river is spanned by a suspension bridge 800 feet in length, and 230 feet above the water. At the southern extremity of the first rapids, an angle in the river causes a reflex in the current, which forms a number of eddies, commonly called "The Whirlpool," more remarkable for the heaping up of the waters in the middle of the river, by the impetus of the current, than for any peculiar violence of the whirlpools themselves. Below this pool is another rapid of about half a mile in extent. Little has hitherto been said of the beauty of Niagara. When one has gazed till his senses are confused, at the more stupendous parts of the scene, there is a delightful relief in roaming about the larger and smaller islands, and viewing the numberless small cascades and rapids, which are accessible by means of the bridges from the American shore to Iris, Goat, and one of the smaller islands.

In any other state not possessing such an overwhelming object of natural grandeur as Niagara, the other falls of New York would rank as prime objects of interest. The Cohoes falls, in the Mohawk, about three miles from its mouth, have a perpendicular descent of 70 feet, and when the river is full, in the spring and autumn, form a grand cataract. Little falls, about 12 miles below Utica, are formed by the passage of the Mohawk through the mountains. The river descends 42 feet in one mile, tossing and foaming among the rocks, while it is frowned on from above by the rugged and picturesque walls of this mountain gorge. Fifteen miles N. of Utica, in West Canada creek, (a tributary of the Mohawk,) is a series of cascades and rapids, (known as Trenton falls,) that extend over a space of two miles, in a channel which the river has cut from the solid limestone rock to a depth varying from 100 to 150 feet, forming a clean limestone trough, the middle of which only (in summer) is occupied by a narrow stream of water, almost as black as ink. Proceeding up this narrow gorge, with perpendicular sides of solid rock, a series of rapids and falls are passed at considerable intervals, presenting a great variety of cascades, of from 8 or 10 to 100 feet in height. The great charm in these falls is not in the body of water, which (except in freshets) is not great, but in the variety and wildness of the views. Hemmed in from all the world in this recess, where the sun can penetrate but for a very few hours in the day—scrambling along the edge, where there is often barely room for a pathway, (and at one point not even for a full foothold,) the tourist is led on, if it be his first visit, from one agreeable surprise to another; and some hesitate not to give them the preference over Niagara in the amount of pleasure they produce. The Genesee river has a series of cataracts, surpassing in altitude those of the Rhine, the boast of Europe. The flourishing city of Rochester owes its importance to one of these, within the city limits, which has a perpendicular descent of 97 feet, and which gives motion to the machinery of its celebrated flour mills and factories. There are other falls within the vicinity of Rochester, making a total descent of 226 feet. But these are far inferior in wildness and picturesqueness to those nearer the sources of the river, in Alleghany county, where the Genesee descends by three falls of 60, 90, and 110 feet, within the space of two miles, through a gorge worn in the solid rock to the depth of 400 feet. In the neighborhood of Ithaca are a number of cascades, set off by highly picturesque accompaniments, one of which has a perpendicular pitch of 110 feet. Baker's, Hadley's, Jessup's, and Glen's falls, (the latter made classic in Cooper's "Last of the Mohicans,") all near the sources of the Hudson river, are well worthy of a visit. There are also two interesting falls in the strait leading from Lake George into Lake Champlain, also one near Hudson, and another near West Point. Lake George stands prominent among the lakes of the United States for the boldness of its shores, and the transparency of its waters. It is studded with beautiful islands, and shut in by precipitous highlands, reaching in one instance an elevation of 2000 feet. A steamer performs daily trips on this lake, going and returning the same day. A visit to the classic ground of Fort Ticonderoga, at the outlet of Lake George into Lake Champlain, may form a part of the same day's excursion.

We now come to the places of fashionable resort, first among which, on the continent of America, stands Saratoga, visited annually, during the summer months, by its thousands in pursuit of health, and by its tens of thousands seeking pleasure and excitement. Saratoga springs are in Saratoga county, in the E. of the state. Its waters are of great variety, and of very active properties. Sharon Sulphur springs, in Schoharie county, are much visited by invalids, and have the advantage over Saratoga in the picturesqueness of the surrounding scenery. New Lebanon, celebrated for its warm springs, is situated in Rensselaer county, near the boundary of Massachusetts. Avon springs, 20 miles S. of Rochester, are much resorted to. Ballston Spa, 7 miles from Saratoga, is less celebrated than formerly, partly from its waters having lost a portion of their virtues, but more probably from the greater attractions of Saratoga. (For full descriptions, see separate articles.) The scenery on the Hudson river has long constituted one of the great attractions of tourists to New York. Easily and pleasantly accessible, it is probably better known than any American scenery, except Niagara falls, and ranks second to no river in romantic interest in the known world. Directly after leaving New York, you come upon the Palisades, on the New Jersey shore, composed of perpendicular walls of trap rock, of from 200 to 500 feet in height. These lose themselves (about 35 miles up the river) in the Highlands proper, which have a base of about 20 miles. Here the Hudson has burst its way at some distant period through the mountains, leaving on each side a rampart of almost perpendicular hills, of from 600 to 1700 feet in elevation above the level of the river. About 100 miles above New York, we come abreast of the Catskill mountains, which present a very abrupt front to the river, and run nearly parallel to it for about 20 miles. These mountains are not of great elevation, but their grandeur consists in the extended and unbroken views afforded from the piazza of the Pine-orchard Mountain House, (2276 feet above the sea,) up and down the valley of the Hudson for 70 miles in each direction, and across to the Green mountains in Massachusetts. At Katerskill falls, three miles S. W. from the hotel, a small stream is precipitated 180 feet, into a circular amphitheatre of great wildness, from whence it takes a second leap into another chasm. The great charm of this fall is the wild scenery formed by the gorge, (the bed of the stream,) which winds round the mountains, and shuts out every view but that beneath your feet and over your head. The Adirondac mountains, the highest in the state, and only second to the White mountains of New Hampshire and Black mountain in North Carolina, have as yet been but little visited by fashionable tourists. Probably the best account of them is to be had in Headley's "Adirondac Mountains." Mount Tahawus, or Marcy, the highest peak, commands an extensive panorama of mountains, among which repose 30 visible lakes and ponds. The completion of the New York and Erie railway through the southern part of the state has laid open some fine scenery but little known to the public heretofore. The passage of the road along the shores of the Delaware river, and through Orange, Rockland, and Sullivan counties, offers the boldest scenery. In Manlius, Onondago county, are the "Green Lakes," supposed to be of volcanic production, one of which is on the top of a hill, with banks 200 feet high, and with beautifully green water to the depth of 400 feet. This lake was once known to rise suddenly and overflow its banks, but the water soon receded to its ordinary level.

Climate.—New York presents considerable diversities of climate. In the N. the winters are long and severe, somewhat mitigated in the western part by the proximity of the great lakes and the prevalence of S. W. winds, and varied again in the S. E., below the Catskill mountains, by the effect of the sea air, which tempers the heats of summer and chills the air of spring. At Buffalo there is great irregularity in the time of the ice leaving the harbor. "Some 12 or 15 years since," writes a correspondent, "their harbor was completely blocked up by ice till May, no steamboat having left the harbor till the 15th of that month; but this is very unusual."

According to observations kept by Leander Wetherell, Esq., at Rochester, during 10 years the average mean temperature was 47°.36; highest point of the mercury, 102°; lowest, 9° below zero; average fall of rain and melted snow, 33.30 inches.

Soil and Productions.—The soil of this great state is very various. The western parts, known as the Genesee flats, and the valleys of the Hudson and Mohawk, have excellent soils, while much of the N. E. of the state is poor and cold. No general description would give a correct idea of the soils, as in the same county may be found parts that are hilly or mountainous, and comparatively sterile, while the soil of the valleys is a rich alluvion. New York, however, on the whole, may be safely called a fertile state. The exceptions are mostly in the mountainous portions. The descriptions of the counties in this as well as in other states, will best give the qualities of the soil in particular localities. Long Island is easily improved in the western part, though it is not naturally very fertile. It is very important for its market products. The eastern portion is poor and sandy. Great attention is paid in this state to scientific agriculture, and endeavors made to introduce a better mode of culture; to promote which end, agricultural societies have been formed, and journals established devoted to this subject. New York is first of the states of the confederacy in the amount of live stock, oats, Irish potatoes, barley, buckwheat, grass-seeds, orchard products, products of market gardens, butter, cheese, hay, hops, maple sugar, beeswax, honey, and slaughtered animals produced; second in the amount of wool and rye, and third in that of wheat raised. Besides these, large quantities of Indian corn, beans, peas, flax, and maple molasses, with some sweet potatoes, tobacco, wine, hemp, and silk were produced. The fruits are apples, pears, cherries, plums, and peaches, with various kinds of berries. In 1850 there were 170,698 farms, containing 12,408,968 acres of improved land, producing 13,121,498 bushels of wheat; 4,148,182 of rye; 17,858,400 of Indian corn; 26,552,814 of oats; 741,636 of peas and beans; 15,898,362 of Irish potatoes; 3,585,059 of barley; 3,183,955 of buckwheat; 184,715 of grass-seeds; 10,071,301 pounds of wool; 79,766,094 of butter; 49,741,413 of cheese; 2,536,299 of hops; 940,557 of flax; 10,357,484 of maple sugar; 1,756,190 of beeswax and honey, and 3,728,797 tons of hay; live stock valued at $73,570,499; market products, $912,047; orchard fruits, $1,761,950, and slaughtered animals, $13,573,983.

Forest Trees.—The forest-trees are several varieties of oak and pine, and spruce, tamarack, larch, hemlock, fir, walnut, and sugar-maple, chestnut, ash, elm, beech, butternut, sycamore, alder, cedar, locust, laurel, mulberry, sassafras, birch, tilia, poplar, cherry, hornbeam, sumach, cucumber-tree, crabapple, and thorn. The forests about the sources of the Susquehanna and Delaware furnish large quantities of pine for the Philadelphia and Baltimore markets.

Animals.—The forests of New York were formerly ranged by the moose, stag, and reindeer; but these are now seldom if ever met with. Among the existing animals are the American deer, black bear, panther, wildcat, wolf, (gray and black,) wolverines, otters, minks, beavers, muskrats, ermine weasels, racoons, skunks, marmots, rabbits, hares, squirrels, and a number of the smaller quadrupeds. Among the birds are the golden and bald eagle, various species and varieties of hawks, owls, and buzzards, wild turkeys and pigeons, quail, grouse, woodcock, willet, snipe, coot, grebes, dipper, petrel, cormorant, pelican, gannet, skimmer, tern, gull, sheldrake, canvas-back and other wild ducks, teal widegone, wild goose, swan, and brant, with an endless variety of the order Passeres, or small birds.

Manufactures.—New York, though extensively engaged in manufactures, does not maintain the relative pre-eminence in this respect that she holds in commerce and agriculture; falling behind Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in absolute, and behind New Hampshire, Connecticut, and Rhode Island in relative amount. In 1850, there were in the state 23,823 manufacturing establishments, each producing $500 and upward annually; of these, 86 were engaged in cotton manufactures, employing $4,176,920 capital, and 2632 male, and 3688 female hands; consuming raw material worth $1,985,973, and producing 44,901,475 yards of stuff, and 2,180,600 pounds of yarn, valued at $3,591,989; 249 woollen establishments, employing $4,459,370 capital, and 4262 male, and 2412 female hands; consuming raw material worth $3,838,292, and producing 7,924,252 yards of stuff, and 261,700 pounds of yarn, valued at $7,030,624; and 401 furnaces, forges, &c., employing $6,358,782 capital, and 7467 male hands; consuming raw material worth $3,553,109, and producing 141,246 tons of pig, cast, and wrought iron, valued at $7,943,868; the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors employed $2,585,900 capital; consuming 2,062,250 bushels of barley; 1,647,266 of Indian corn; 909,067 of rye; 6707 of oats; 60,940 of apples; 24,500 hogsheds of molasses, and 581 tons of hops; employing 1380 hands, and producing 644,700 barrels of ale, &c.; 9,231,700 gallons of whiskey and wine, and 2,488,800 gallons of rum; 942 tanneries, employing $5,025,143; consuming raw material worth $6,065,221, and producing manufactured leather valued at $9,804,000. Home-made manufactures valued at $1,280,333 were produced.

Internal Improvements.—New York, headed by her great statesman, De Witt Clinton, has the honor of taking the lead in internal improvements, from which enterprise she is now reaping an ample reward in her commercial pre-eminence and wealth. In 1817 was commenced the great work of connecting the waters of the Atlantic with the great lakes, by breaking the soil for the Erie and Hudson canal, which is 364 miles long, and (originally) forty feet wide. It was completed in 1825, at a cost of about $7,000,000. In 1852, this and the branch canals delivered at tidewater property valued at $67,288,376, of which the Champlain and Erie canals alone left at Albany, (independent of other depôts,) products valued at $27,439,188, while the clearances from the same place were $31,476,375. Besides the Champlain canal, there were various branches connecting with the Erie and Hudson canal, viz. one from Utica to Binghamton; one from Syracuse to Oswego; one from Geneva to Montezuma, and one from Rochester to Danville. The other canals are the Delaware and Hudson, connecting the Hudson river with the coal mines in the N. E. of Pennsylvania; the Chemung, connecting Seneca lake with Elmira, and the Crooked Lake, uniting Pen Yan with Dresden. Besides these are the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, not yet completed. New York has, therefore, a total of nearly 700 miles of canal completed, and nearly 200 in course of construction, at an aggregate probable cost of not much less than $17,000,000, exclusive of the enlargements of the Erie and other canals, for which a debt of nearly $9,000,000 has already been contracted, although the work is not yet completed. The canal debt, September 30, 1852, was $17,001,109.16; receipts for canal tolls, the fiscal year ending the same date, $3,116,321.23, which is the interest of $52,985,763, at 6 per cent. The canalling of New York has been done by the state; but private enterprise has added a much greater amount of railway at an abundantly greater cost. In January, 1853, there were 2129 miles of railway completed in New York, and 925 in course of construction. Those already completed connect New York with Dunkirk and Buffalo via Albany, and also by a cross railroad from Elmira to Canandaigua. Besides these are various branch railroads, uniting Rome with Cape Vincent at the outlet of Lake Ontario; Syracuse with Oswego; Rouse's Point (at the head of Lake Champlain) with Ogdensburg; Whitehall with Albany and Troy; Hudson with the Massachusetts line; New York with Chatham Five Corners, (on the Boston and Albany railroad;) Albany with Rutland, Vermont; Corning with Blossburg, Pennsylvania, (coal mines;) Hornelsville with the Attica and Buffalo railroad; Rochester with Niagara falls, and Buffalo with Erie, Pennsylvania. Several branches from New York city connect with lines through Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island to Boston. In short, the great commercial metropolis of the state enjoys a connected intercourse, by railway, with almost every important town in this or in the neighboring states.—See Table of Canals and Railroads, APPENDIX. There were in New York, in October, 1852, 19 plank-roads, with an aggregate of 2106 miles, costing $3,860,298.

Commerce.—New York enjoys great facilities for both foreign and domestic commerce, and surpasses every other state in the United States in the absolute amount of tonnage owned by her citizens, though that of Massachusetts is relatively greater. The tonnage of New York in 1852 was 1,134,831.02; of which 111,144.62 was steam tonnage, more than one-fifth of that of all the United States. The number of vessels built in the same period was 179, 45 of which were steamers; total tonnage, 72,072 $\frac{7}{8}$. Great as is the tonnage of New York, it does not fairly represent her proportion of commerce, since many vessels built and owned in other states, are employed in the carrying trade of her commercial metropolis. The share of New York alone, in the trade of the lakes amounted in 1851 to more than \$132,000,000; consisting mainly of flour, wheat, corn, and other grains, lumber, staves, pork, lard, cheese, tallow, butter, and tobacco. An immense transit trade is done over her canals and railroads: 3,162,375 barrels of flour; 6,062,312 bushels of wheat; 5,176,419 of corn; 2,004,186 of barley; 5,382,992 of other grains; 5,821,076 pounds of butter; 9,736,593 of lard; 15,080,306 of cheese; 7,575,232 of wool; 9,985,615 of bacon; 64,311 barrels of beef; 69,423 of pork, and 35,975 of ashes were received at tidewater between the opening and closing of navigation, in 1852. While Buffalo received from the East by canal, imports to the amount of \$41,810,398, the property arriving at Dunkirk and Tonawanda amounted to more than \$5,000,000. In 1850 there arrived by canal at tidewater on the Hudson river, property valued at \$55,474,637; \$53,927,500 in 1851, and \$57,288,766 in 1852. At Buffalo, among the leading articles landed were 5,549,778 bushels of wheat; 5,136,231 of corn; 2,596,231 of oats; 1,299,513 barrels of flour; 95,194,590 feet of lumber; 13,954,552 staves; 9,796,590 pounds, and 74,092 barrels of pork; 7,028,700 pounds of lard; 9,796,590 of butter; 6,190,950 of cheese; 10,239,586 of tobacco, besides large quantities of beef, seed, wool, hides, lead, rye, ashes, whiskey, leather, and some fish, iron, and coal. The table of produce arriving at tidewater during 153 days of 1853, show a considerable increase in wheat, (but a diminution in most other grains,) a large one in wool, bacon, and butter, over 1852, but a great decrease in flour, Indian corn, and in other grains, and in cheese and ashes. The foreign imports of the state for 1852, amounted to \$132,329,306, and the exports to \$87,484,456. Tonnage entered, 2,900,062; cleared, 2,477,720.—See NEW YORK CITY.

Education.—This great state has taken an active interest in providing for the education of all classes in the elementary branches of learning; but her efforts have, latterly, been somewhat interfered with by religious jealousies. According to the governor's message, January, 1853, there was a school fund of $6,641,930.92; made up of the common school fund, $2,354,530.09; United States deposit fund, $4,014,520.70, and the literary fund, $272,880.12. According to the same report, there were in 1851, attending the public schools, 862,507 children; attending private schools, 31,767; number of volumes in the school libraries 1,570,131; amount paid to teachers, $1,681,316; for district libraries, $90,579.50, and for building and repairing school houses, &c., $477,918.51; making a total expenditure for school purposes of $2,249,814.02. There is a normal school for instruction in the art of teaching, at Albany, which is in a very flourishing condition, and had, in 1852, 274 pupils, from all parts of the state, of whom 9 were Indians. The free academy, or high-school, in New York city, is also educating a large number of youth in the higher branches. Other free academies are being formed in different parts of the state; one at Lockport had 400 pupils during the year 1852, and another is in process of organization at Utica. Geneva College has become a free college, under the name of the Hobart Free College. Columbia College receives a certain number of pupils from the free schools in New York city every year, and it is proposed to make other colleges and academies partially free by state appropriations. Among the educational institutions in New York, is the New York Conference Academy, in Charlotteville, Schoharie county, which gives a collegiate education at very moderate expense, and under such regulations as to be highly advantageous to youth of moderate means. There were in 1852, in New York state, 8 colleges, with an aggregate of about 896 students, and 75,400 volumes; six theological schools, with 248, and 3 medical schools with 700 students.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX.

Religious Denominations.—Of the 4084 churches in New York, in 1850, belonging to 34 different sects, the Baptists owned 776; the Christians, 62; Congregational, 214; Dutch Reformed, 232; Episcopalians, 275; Friends, 132; Lutherans, 80; Methodists, 1215; Presbyterians, 662; Roman Catholics, 174; Union, 74; Unitarians, 22, and Universalists, 110. The other churches were divided among Africans, Covenanters, Free Church, Jews, Mennonites, Moravians, Seceders, Shakers, and some others, giving 1 church to every 758 persons. Value of church property, $21,132,707.—See Table of Religions, APPENDIX.

Public Institutions.—New York has three penitentiaries on the silent system, one at Sing Sing, on the Hudson, one at Auburn, and one in Clinton county; in the latter the convicts are employed in digging, separating, and preparing iron ore for the neighboring furnaces. According to the governor's report, January, 1853, there had been, in the preceding year, 869 convicts at Sing Sing, 759 at Auburn, and 155 in Clinton county. The expenses at Auburn exceeded the income by $14,000, at Sing Sing by $7000, and at Clinton by $27,000. There is a house of refuge for juvenile offenders in New York city, and one at Rochester. There is a state lunatic asylum at Utica, which treated 825 patients during the year 1852, of whom 156 have been discharged cured, 53 improved, 152 unimproved, and 39 have died.* There is a deaf and dumb, and a blind asylum, in New York city, the former of which had 259 pupils in January, 1853, of whom 189 were supported by the state, and the latter had 153, of which number 42 are employed in workshops. A state asylum for idiots has been recently established near Albany, and had, in 1853, forty-two pupils under treatment, and so far the results have been encouraging. There are a great number of benevolent and other local institutions, which will be described in their respective localities.

Government, Finances, &c.—New York, almost an empire in resources and population within itself, is ruled by a governor and lieutenant-governor, each elected by the people for two years, and by a senate of 32, and a house of representatives of 128 members, the former elected for two years, and the latter annually, by the people. The governor receives a salary of $4000 per annum, and the lieutenant-governor $6 per diem during the sessions of the senate, of which he is ex officio president. The members of the legislature receive $3 per diem, and $1 for every ten miles travel. The judiciary consists—1. Of a court for the trial of impeachments, composed of the president of the senate, (who is also president of the court,) and the whole or a majority of the senate, and the whole or a majority of the court of appeals. If the governor is impeached, the lieutenant-governor cannot act as a member of the court. Two-thirds of the members present must concur for a conviction, and their judgment only extends to removal from office. 2. Of a court of appeals, which is composed of eight judges, of whom four are elected by the people, for 8 years, and four selected each year from the judges of the supreme court having the shortest time to serve. Of the judges elected by popular vote, one is chosen every second year, and the one having the shortest time to serve is chief judge. This court has power to reverse the decisions of the supreme court, or the old supreme court, and court of chancery. 3. Supreme and circuit courts, composed of 32 judges, for the election of whom the state is divided into 8 judicial districts, each one of which elects 4 judges for 8 years: one judge goes out of office every second year. Four terms of the supreme court, at least, are held in each district every year, and one special term and two circuit courts. The supreme court has jurisdiction in law and equity, and power to review judgments of the county courts, but the circuit courts are only for the trial of issues of fact. 4. County, or surrogates' courts, which have the usual jurisdiction of courts of probate. 5. Criminal courts, composed (except in the city and county of New York) of one of the judges of the supreme court, the county judge, and two justices of the peace, chosen members of the court of sessions. In New York city and county, to a judge of the supreme court, this court adds any two of the following officers, viz. judges of the court of common pleas, mayor, recorder, and aldermen. Courts of sessions are composed of one county judge and two justices of the peace. 6. Courts of New York city and county, viz. a superior court, a court of common pleas, and a marine court. The judges of the court of appeals and the supreme court have salaries of $2500 each; of the superior court of New York city, $3500; of the common pleas, $3000, and of the marine court, $2000. The judges of all these courts are elective. Every male citizen of the age of 21 years, who shall have been a citizen ten days, (i. e. all foreigners whose citizenship or probation of five years shall have been matured ten days,) and an inhabitant of the state one year, of the county four months, and of the election district 30 days, shall be entitled to a vote. But no man of color may vote, till he has been three years a citizen, and possessed of a freehold estate of the value of $250.

The assessed value of property in New York, in 1850, was $715,369,028, which, as in all the states, is much below the real value. The public debt in January, 1853, was $24,323,838.64, of which $15,501,109.16 was canal debt, and $1,500,000 canal revenue certificates. School fund, $6,612,851; productive public property, $35,115,237, and ordinary expenses, exclusive of schools and debt, $750,000. In September, 1852, New York had 277 banks, with an aggregate capital of $62,207,216, a circulation of $29,934,657, and $9,993,815 in coin.

History.—Henry Hudson, an Englishman in the employ of the Dutch East India Company, first ascended the Hudson river in 1609, but no permanent settlement was made till 1614, when the Dutch founded Fort

*There is also a lunatic asylum on Blackwell's Island, which will be described under NEW YORK CITY.

Orange, now Albany, and New Amsterdam, now New York city. The English claimed the right of prior discovery, which led to frequent conflicts. In 1664 the colony surrendered to the Duke of York, was retaken by the Dutch in 1673, but surrendered finally to the English in 1674. The first legislative assembly was convoked in 1683. New York suffered considerably from Indian depredations in the wars waged between France and England in 1690, 1702, and 1744. In 1690 Schenectady was taken and burnt by the savages, and many of the inhabitants massacred. The shores of Lake George and Champlain have been made classic by the struggles they witnessed between the French and English previous to the American Revolution. This state took an active part in the war of independence, was the theatre of many military engagements, and gave Jay and Hamilton to the councils of the nation in that period of trial and doubt. The defeat of Washington on Long Island and at White Plains in the autumn of 1776, the surrender of Burgoyne in October, 1777, and the taking of Stony Point by Wayne in July, 1779, are the most important actions that took place on the soil of this state during the Revolutionary contest. The sanguinary naval battle on Lake Champlain, in the war of 1812, in which McDonough defeated the British after a hard fought action, and several other minor engagements, took place within the limits of New York in the last struggle with Great Britain.

NEW YORK, the metropolis of the above state, the most populous city, and the greatest emporium in the New World, and (with its suburbs, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Jersey City, and Hoboken) the third in point of wealth and population of the cities of Christendom, is situated on the southern extremity of Manhattan island, at the junction of the Hudson and East rivers, about 18 miles from the Atlantic ocean; 87 N. E. of Philadelphia; 187 N. E. of Baltimore; 225 N. E. of Washington; 1428 N. E. of New Orleans; 1046 E. of St. Louis; 722 E. of Cincinnati; 340 S. of Montreal; 145 S. of Albany, and 207 S. W. of Boston. The city and county have the same limits, composing the whole of Manhattan island, 13½ miles in length, and about 2 in its greatest breadth. The densely inhabited parts of the city occupy about 3½ or 4 miles of the southern portion of the island. The City Hall is in lat. 40° 42' 40" N., and 74° 1' 8" W. lon. Though the site of New York is nearly level, there is sufficient descent in the ground from Broadway towards each river to furnish good drainage.

Population.—Perhaps no city in the world numbers so great a variety of foreigners among its resident population as New York, including among them active and enterprising men of all Christian nations, and of every portion of the United States. A large ma-majority of the foreign residents are from Ireland, Germany, England, France, and Scotland, who fill every station, from the laborer to the merchant and professional man. The population numbered 4302 in 1697; 8628 in 1731; 10,381 in 1756; 21,876 in 1771; 33,131 in 1790; 60,489 in 1800; 96,373 in 1810; 123,706 in 1820, (at which period it became the largest city in the Union;) 202,589 in 1830; 312,710 in 1840, and 515,507 in 1850. If, however, we include the suburbs named above, it will make a grand total of 652,649 inhabitants, showing an increase (unexampled except in our Western towns) of nearly 1500 per cent. in the last 60 years. The same ratio of increase as that between 1840 and '50 (and it has undoubtedly been greater) would give, in July, 1853, a population of about 850,000 to New York and its suburbs.

General Aspect.—In the old or southern quarter of the city, the streets are for the most part narrow and irregular, but crowded with immense hotels, warehouses, stores, and the public buildings necessary in a great mart of trade. Many of these are costly structures of marble, granite, or sandstone, and from three to eight stories in height; or, if public buildings, displaying various orders of architectural style, adorned with columns, porticos, &c. The northern or newer part of the city is regularly laid out with wide and spacious streets and avenues, which in the fashionable quarter, west of Broadway, are lined with palatial-like residences and sumptuous churches of brick, sandstone, and marble, giving a display of wealth nowhere to be found but in the imperial cities of Europe, and unequalled even there, except in the abodes of royalty and nobility. Broadway, the principal street, and one of the finest to be seen in any city, is 80 feet wide, and about 3 miles long. Commencing at the Battery, (an open space planted with trees at the southern extremity of the island,) it extends N. N. E. for about 2½ miles to Grace church, where it bends slightly to the N. W., and, with a short interruption, (from Union park,) continues on in this direction beyond the densely built portions of the city. Broadway may be compared to a great river; the streets which terminate in it, and those which it intersects, being tributaries that supply a constantly increasing throng of people and vehicles of every description, as we approach its southern extremity. Perhaps the most important of these affluents is Chatham street, which forms the outlet of the Bowery, East Broadway, and several other considerable streets, and terminates at the lower end of the Park. From the cupola of the City Hall, three-fourths of a mile from the Battery, a bird's-eye view may be had of New York, its harbor and environs. Looking to the S., we have beneath us the warehouses, banking establishments, insurance offices, custom house, exchange, and other buildings, wherein are transacted the commercial operations of this great centre of trade. Terminating this scene on the S. is the Battery, and beyond it stretches out New York bay for six miles, till the view is shut in by the picturesque heights of Staten Island on the S. W., while on the S. the Narrows open a vista to the Atlantic ocean. Turning to the S. E. and E., we look over a strait of from one-third to three-fourths of a mile in breadth, literally crowded (on the New York shore) with a dense forest of masts, bearing aloft the flags of every civilized maritime nation on the earth. Beyond this strait (commonly called the East river, and connecting New York bay with Long Island sound) is Brooklyn, itself a large city, presenting in one part a bold bluff crowned with stately dwellings, and overlooking the city of New York, its harbor and bay, and Staten Island—taking in a panorama unrivalled in the world, except at Naples, (if indeed we must make that exception,) and, perhaps, Rio Janeiro. Farther N., on the same shore with Brooklyn, we have Williamsburg, a suburb larger than New York at the Revolution, and between them the United States navy-yard and the United States naval asylum. On the W. is the noble Hudson, expanding itself to $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles in width ere it is lost in the bay, and separating New York from the flourishing suburbs of Jersey City and Hoboken. At the wharves on this side we may see a scarcely less crowded forest of masts than on the E. shore; and peering up amid this leafless forest, may be observed the black pipes of the greatest steamers on the globe, whether we regard those that navigate the river and sound, or those that traverse the ocean. Turning to the N., we have a sea of houses, churches, and public buildings of various kinds, extending for full three miles, terminated (1853) by the swelling dome of the Crystal Palace, and, on the Jersey shore, by the heights of Weehawken. This bird's-eye view, while it shuts out many defects, such, as filthy and irregular streets, mean houses, and squalid poverty and wretchedness, (that alloy the pleasure in visiting every great capital,) conceals also many beauties, such as the individual excellences of particular buildings and particular streets. Descending from our airy height, we will aim to lay aside mere fanciful description, and to deal, as becomes a work of this character, with facts—and, in the case of New York, they are sufficiently flattering to gratify any reasonable amount of local pride. As has been before intimated, the great seat of business is south of the City Hall, and its centre Broadway and the streets in its vicinity crossing it, which are almost wholly occupied by immense stores and warehouses of costly structure and imposing architecture. Among these cross streets, the most noted is a narrow one, named Wall street, running east from Broadway, about one-fourth of a mile above the Battery. This is the Rialto and Lombard street of New York—the grand heart whence pulsate the financial movements of North America. This street is lined with banking houses, insurance and brokers' offices; and here, too, are the exchange and custom house—all commanding, and some magnificent edifices. Broadway, above the City Hall, is occupied for two miles with vast hotels, (such as are seen nowhere but in America,) fashionable retail stores of every variety, (whose shelves groan with the most costly fabrics,) and with theatres, concert halls, lecture rooms, and other places of amusement and instruction. The newer or northern portion is traversed in a north and south direction by 19 spacious avenues of 100 feet in breadth, 10 of which (commencing at distances of from 2 to $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the Battery) extend the whole length of the island. Four of the shorter avenues, on the East river, are named A, B, C, and D. The rest, except Lexington avenue, are named numerically, commencing at the east side, and numbering to 14th avenue. These are crossed at right angles by streets from 80 to 100 feet in width, and at distances of about 200 feet from each other, also named numerically up to 229th street, though dense population does not (1853) extend much above 40th street. Fifth avenue, the very centre of fashion, is a street of sumptuous and costly dwellings of large size, a great portion of which are constructed of brownstone, and some of white marble; exhibiting architectural varieties sufficient to gratify the most diverse tastes. On this street, too, is a number of costly churches, with towering spires and turrets, and, with one or two exceptions, constructed of stone. There are striking contrasts, however, to this display of wealth and magnificence, and the most striking is to be found in the very heart of the city, in sight of its city hall, its courts of justice, and boards of education and benevolence. We allude, of course, to the Five Points, (so called from the intersection of several streets,) the abode of misery, crime, filth, and wretchedness of the most disgusting and degrading kind; though even here a ray of light has recently broken in, and steps have been taken to improve the dwellings, the morals, and comfort of their inmates. The S. E. and E. portions of New York are inhabited by substantial and useful citizens, many of whose residences are large and commodious, though they are generally moderate in dimensions, plain in appearance, and often absolutely mean. But the great defect of New York, out of the fashionable quarter, is a want of cleanliness in the streets, and more particularly in the great thoroughfares of business—the portion always seen by strangers, and often the only portion.

Defence.—New York is strongly defended both by nature and art. The entrance to the upper bay is through a strait called the Narrows, about one mile in width, and is commanded on the Long island side by two forts, one in the water, 200 yards from shore. On the Staten island side are also two other forts, one on the heights. Should these be passed, there are other defences within less than a mile of the city. These are by Fort Columbus, on Governor's island, on the east side, and by batteries on Bedloe and Ellis islands, on the west. The public walk called the Battery, at the extremity of the city, has also a fort. The entrance from Long Island sound is protected by fortifications on Throg's Neck.

Public Squares, Fountains, &c.—New York has a number of small parks or enclosed grounds. The Battery, one of the most delightful promenades offered by any city of a hot summer's evening, occupies an area of about 11 acres, at the extreme S. W. point of the city, which is planted with trees, laid out in walks, and furnished with plain seats. The Battery has recently been greatly enlarged. Castle Garden, an old fort, formerly connected with it by a bridge, is now continuous with the mainland. The interior of Castle Garden is now used as a place for public exhibitions, fairs, concerts, &c., and is capable of containing 10,000 persons. The view from the Battery and Garden commands the entire bay, Narrows, and Staten island. Bowling Green in Broadway, near the Battery, is a small circular space, enclosed by a railing and having a fountain. About three-fourths of a mile from the Battery is the Park, a triangular piece of ground, of about 11 acres, bounded by Broadway, Chatham, and Chambers streets, and containing the City Hall, Rotunda or Hall of Records, and New City Hall, occupied by courts, city offices, &c. Near the S. W. entrance is a basin with several jets, the centre one of which can throw a compact body of water a foot in diameter to the height of 60 feet. St. John's Park is a private square (belonging to the property holders around it) between Hudson and Varick, and Laight and Beach streets. Washington Square, a parallelogram of 12 acres, Tompkins Square, Stuyvesant Square, Union Park, an oval piece of ground with fine jets d'eau, interrupting Broadway at Fourteenth street; Gramercy Park, and Madison Square, in the N. part of the city, are all within the densely peopled portions of New York. They are not large, but are less needed in this long and comparatively narrow city, surrounded by its harbor, and refreshed by sea-breezes, than in most other towns of its size.

Croton Aqueduct.—Of all her public works, New York has most reason to be proud of, and to be satisfied with the Croton Aqueduct, whether we regard it as a proof of energy merely, or in its utilitarian aspects. This work is superior to any thing of the kind in modern times, and is only surpassed by those of ancient Rome. The water is brought to the city from Croton river, 40½ miles above the distributing reservoir, and 43½ miles from the City Hall. The dam on Croton river is 40 feet high, and 166 above tide. The water is conveyed in a covered canal of brick and stone, through 16 tunnels of an aggregate length of 6841 feet to Harlem river, which it crosses on a bridge 1450 feet long, elevated 114 feet above tide. About 5 miles above the City Hall is the receiving reservoir, covering 35 acres, and with a capacity for 150,000,000 gallons. Between 2 and 3 miles below this, on Fifth avenue, between Forty and Forty-second streets, is the distributing reservoir, a solid piece of masonry, covering 420 feet square, including four acres, in two divisions, with massive walls, 44½ feet high above the street, and 37 feet deep. Capacity, 20,000,000 gallons. In June, 1852, 220 miles of pipe had been laid. Total original cost of construction, $9,000,000. The aqueduct can supply 60,000,000 gallons daily.

Cemeteries.—About 3 miles S. E. from Fulton ferry, Brooklyn, is Greenwood Cemetery, occupying an area of 400 acres, forming the most extensive place of sepulture in modern times. It is an hour's ride simply to make the circuit of the grounds, without threading its alleys or examining its great variety of monuments and other testimonials to the dead. The grounds are as varied as extensive, composed of constant alternations of hill and dale, and wood and water: indeed, it would be difficult to conceive of any place combining so many attractions. It is covered with mounds that swell so gracefully as to bear the appearance of being artificial. In some parts the visitor is shut in by thick woods, hills, and foliage that enclose a contracted glen and embosom a secluded lake or pond. In others, he is on eminences such as Ocean hill, that command extensive views of the sea and the Rockaway beach, while from Battle hill he overlooks New York city and bay, Brooklyn, Staten island, Jersey City, and the Hudson river to the heights of Weehawken. The cemetery is traversed by winding paths and avenues, amid every variety of memorial, from the simplest tombstone to the gorgeous mausoleum.

Public Buildings.—New York is fast approaching the capitals of Europe in the stateliness of its private mansions, and the solidity and grandeur of its public buildings; though in many cases they fail in producing their proper effect from the badness of their location. Beginning at the Battery, and proceeding up Broadway, (omitting any mention of the immense warehouses and stores which line every step of the way, and extend for some distance along the cross-streets, in the vicinity of Broadway,) we come first to Wall street, running E. from Broadway, turning down which, a white marble building of the Doric order, after the model of the Parthenon, situated at the corner of Nassau and Broad streets, first attracts the eye. This is the Custom House, one of the most solid structures in the United States. It stands on sloping ground, fronting Broad street, and occupies the site of the old Federal Hall, from the balcony in front of which, Washington delivered his first inaugural address. It is ascended from Wall street by eighteen marble steps, while the Pine street front has but four. The length of the building is 200 feet on Nassau street, width on Pine and Wall streets 90 feet, and height 80 feet, with a portico at each end supported by eight massive columns. The best view of the Custom House is to be had coming up Broad street, which it faces. The great hall for the transaction of business is circular, surmounted by a dome (through which the hall is lighted) supported by sixteen Corinthian columns 30 feet high. Entire cost of the building, including the grounds, \$1,175,000. From the steps of the Custom House, looking E. in a slight bend on the opposite side of Wall street, a few hundred feet distant, stands the Merchants' Exchange, one of the most imposing buildings in the country. It occupies an entire block, 200 feet long by 144 to 177 feet wide, 77 feet high to the top of the cornice, and 124 to the summit of the dome, which is a prominent object in the view coming up the bay. This structure is of Quincy granite, no wood being used except in the doors and windows. The front has a recessed portico, with eighteen Ionic columns, twelve in the first row, four in the second, and two in the third; the latter forming the approach to the principal entrance. Each column is composed of a solid block of granite 38 feet high, 4 feet 4 inches in diameter, and weighing upwards of 40 tons. The great hall "where merchants most do congregate," is a rotunda 80 feet in diameter, in the centre of the building, with four recesses of 10 feet each. This chamber is 80 feet high, surmounted by a dome, with a skylight 25 feet in diameter, and supported by eight Corinthian columns of Italian marble, 41 feet high. The rotunda is surrounded by offices let out for various purposes. Entire cost of building and grounds about \$1,800,000. This building occupies part of the site of the old Exchange destroyed by the great fire in 1835. Leaving Wall street, with its compact mass of banking-houses, insurance and brokers' offices, mostly of marble, granite, or sandstone, we will return to Broadway. As we do so, we have the steeple of Trinity Church, the highest in the United States, if not in America, immediately in front of us, and obtaining the best view of the church anywhere to be had, though even here a part of the N. E. façade is concealed from view. This church, which is built of light red sandstone to the top stone of the steeple, is 189 feet long by 84 wide, and 64 high, and believed to be the purest specimen of Gothic architecture in this country. The tower, (which is furnished with a fine chime of bells and a clock,) including the spire, is 264 feet in height, and furnishes a splendid panoramic view of the city, bay, harbor, suburbs, and surrounding country. The cost of the building is stated at \$400,000—it is presumed independently of the grounds, which was previously owned by the church. Proceeding up Broadway, on the right, in the centre of the Park, stands the City Hall, an edifice of mixed Corinthian and Ionic orders, 216 feet long by 105 wide, and 65 feet high, including the attic. The S. front and the ends are of white marble, but the N. front is of red sandstone, (causing a want of harmony which considerably impairs the effect of the building.) It covers an area of 22,896 square feet, is two stories high above the basement, with an attic story in the centre of the building surmounted by a cupola, which contains a clock, and is crowned by a statue of Justice. This cupola is occupied by a person whose business it is to give alarm in case of fires, which he does by sounding a bell in a smaller cupola near by, which by the number of strokes indicates the ward in which the fire rages. There are 28 rooms in the City Hall, the most important of which is the governor's room, 52 feet by 20, which, as its name implies, is set apart for the use of the governor when he visits the city. It is also occasionally used by distinguished functionaries of the United States or State Governments, and foreign guests, as a reception room. Its walls are decorated with the portraits of men of eminence. The other rooms in this building are occupied as council chambers, mayor's office, superior and other court rooms, and city and county offices. Opposite the lower end of the Park is the Astor House, (see HOTELS,) the American and Irving houses, and, at the N. end, Stewart's store. Passing up Broadway, we have on the left the City Hospital, Prescott House, St. Nicholas and Lafarge houses, and New York Hotel, on the right the Masonic Hall, Broadway Theatre, Society Library, Carlton House, Church of the Divine Unity, the Metropolitan Hotel, and Church of the Messiah. At the angle made by the declination of Broadway to the N. W., and $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the Battery, stands Grace Church, an imposing structure of white marble, with a tower and spire surmounted by a cross of the same material, and producing a more marked effect than Trinity itself, by its peculiar position, visible from almost every part of Broadway. The Odd Fellows' Hall, a large building of brownstone, corner of Clinton and Grand streets, is an imposing structure, and the principal edifice belonging to the order of that name. The Bible House, occupying the space bounded by Third and Fourth avenues, and Eighth and Ninth streets, is more noted for its vast extent and the purposes to which it is devoted, than for any claims it has to architectural effect. This immense brick pile extends 232 feet on Ninth street, and 77 on Third avenue, being 6 stories high, and having a street frontage of 700 feet. In the colossal rooms of this vast structure are conducted all the operations of printing, stitching, gilding, binding, &c., necessary in book-making. Scattered over the city in various directions are different buildings of a public nature, which will be alluded to under the head of benevolent societies, churches, &c. The New Armory, built of bluestone, in the Gothic style, extending 131 feet on White, and 84 feet on Elm street, is intended for a receptacle of the artillery of the First Division of New York State Militia. It is constructed so as to be particularly available as a defence against mobs.

Hotels.—A peculiar feature of New York is its hotels, which, perhaps, surpass in number, extent, and in the expensiveness of their equipments, those of any city in the world. In our utilitarian age and country, the moneys expended on castles, fortresses, palaces, and such freaks of royalty in other countries, and in other ages, is expended on buildings more suited to the wants of our times, and the character of our people, such as hotels, great stores, warehouses, banks, &c. Among its threescore hotels of a high class, the most important are the Howard House, Astor House, American, Irving House, Carlton House, Taylor's Restaurant, Collamore House, St. Nicholas, Prescott House, the Metropolitan, Bond-street Hotel, New-York Hotel, Lafarge House, Astor-Place Hotel, St. Denis, Union-place Hotel, and Gramercy Hotel, all on Broadway. The Metropolitan occupies a new edifice of red sandstone, built in the Roman style, 300 feet on Broadway, and 200 feet on Prince street, at a cost, including the ground, of over $1,000,000. It has, besides 350 rooms, supplied with water, gas, &c., more than 100 suites of family apartments, with baths, water-closets, &c. attached. Altogether there are accommodations for more than 600 guests. The dining room is 150 feet by 40. There are 250 servants in the hotel, and, it is said, 12 miles of water and gas pipes. The St. Nicholas, when completed, (which it probably will be ere the close of 1853,) will present a front on Broadway of 300 feet, (200 of which will be of fine white marble, and 100 of red sandstone,) in a good style of architecture, and 200 feet on Spring street, containing 600 rooms supplied with cold water and baths, and 150 suites of family rooms, with baths, water-closets, &c.; total cost, according to contracts already made, including ground, $1,030,000. The Astor House, opposite the Park, is a massive structure, of Quincey granite, whose solidity will probably give it a duration beyond several successions of its more flaring rivals. It is 201 feet on Broadway, 185 and 186 on Vezev and Barclay streets, is six stories high, and has 326 chambers. The other hotels named, though less imposing in appearance, are many of them nearly equal in size, and not inferior in real comfort and accommodations. Besides these hotels in Broadway, there are many other superior hotels scattered along the cross streets, near it.

Stores and Warehouses.—It has not been usual in a work of this kind to take any particular notice of such buildings, but in our country, where the leading object of pursuit is commerce and trade, money is expended and taste displayed in such structures as in other countries is devoted to the erection of works of a different character. Great injustice would therefore be done to the appearance of our great cities to omit mention of these temples dedicated to trade by the wealthiest portion of our community, who are no longer content to transact their business in dark and narrow alleys and in mean warehouses. Prominent among the class of buildings referred to, is Stewart's store, a white marble building, 5 stories (83 feet) high, occupying an entire block, 152 feet on Broadway, and 100 feet on Reade and Chamber streets, (Park Place.) There is a great hall, 100 feet by 40, and 80 feet high; 2000 panes of plate glass are distributed over the building; those in the windows on each side the principal entrance are 134 by 84 inches. The store is lighted up by 400 gas-burners. Putnam's Magazine states their sales at about $7,000,000 annually, employing 300 salesmen and clerks. Another large store, second only to Stewart's, is now being erected by Lord & Taylor, in Grand street by Christie street, with an iron front to the first basement, surmounted by an immense story faced with red sandstone, and with windows apparently 40 feet high, reaching from near the floor almost to the cornice: judging by the eye, it has a front of from 80 to 100 feet. Broadway is such a mass of commercial palaces that it might seem invidious to particularize, which, however, we must do to give some definite idea of their vastness. Among the most extensive are an immense sandstone building, 50 feet on Broadway and 220 on Rector street, 6 stories high; and Trinity Buildings, N. of the church of that name, on the same street, built of Milwaukee yellow brick, 44 feet on Broadway and 262 on Thames street, has 365 windows, 350 doors, 1½ miles of gas-pipe, 2 miles of steam-pipe, and cost $460,000 and upwards. Though the largest at present, these are not the most striking for architectural effect, as there are scores of stores on Broadway and in the streets adjacent to it, with fronts of white marble, sandstone, and brick, that are inferior in size, but many superior in appearance.

Churches.—According to the Metropolitan Almanac of 1853, there were in New York 32 Baptist, 6 Congregational, 19 Dutch Reformed, 4 Friends', 13 Jews' synagogues, 6 Lutheran, 37 Methodist, 2 New Jerusalem, 37 Presbyterian, 4 Associate do., 2 Associate Reformed do., 4 Reformed do., 4 Primitive Christians, 44 Protestant Episcopal, 22 Roman Catholic, 2 Second Advent, 2 Unitarian, 5 Universalist, and 9 miscellaneous, making a total of 254 churches. The most conspicuous of these, for architectural effect, are (besides Trinity and Grace churches, already referred to) the Baptist, corner of Elizabeth and Broome; Trinity chapel, between Broadway and 6th avenue, fronting on 25th street, and extending through to 26th street, built of light-colored freestone, in the old English style. The following Episcopal churches are mostly of stone, either marble or brownstone, viz. Ascension, in 5th avenue by 10th street, with two towers and parsonage; Calvary, 4th avenue and East 21st street, with two towers and spires, and a parsonage adjoining; Holy Communion and parsonage, 6th avenue and West 20th street; Du Saint Esprit, corner of Franklin and Church streets, with a colonnade of white marble; St. George's, Rutherford place, near East 16th street, with two towers. The most noted Presbyterian churches are, one on 5th avenue and 12th street, University place and 10th street, and 5th avenue and 16th street; Congregational, Church of the Puritans, Union Square; Dutch Reformed, 5th avenue and West 29th street, 5th avenue and 21st street, and Washington square. The finest Roman Catholic church is St. Patrick's, corner of Mott and Prince streets; Unitarian, Church of Messiah, 728 Broadway; Universalist, Church of the Divine Unity, 548 Broadway, and a new church erecting corner of 3d street and 5th avenue. All these churches are of decided architectural pretensions, all but two of stone, mostly red or light sandstone, and, with one or two exceptions, with towers or spires, and often with both.

Hospitals, Public Charities, Prisons, &c.—While there is much of wretchedness and depravity in New York to depress the mind of the philanthropist, its numerous and richly endowed charitable institutions restore his equanimity, and present the redeeming side of human nature. First to be enumerated in this list is the New York Hospital, occupying a lot on Broadway opposite Pearl street, with an extensive yard in front. It is of graystone, 124 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 3 stories high, with accommodations for 200 patients, who receive here the most judicious nursing and the most skillful medical treatment. South of this is the Marine Department, recently demolished to give place for a new building now (1853) erecting, which is to be of graystone, 126 feet long by 88 wide, and 5 stories high. In 1852, there were admitted into New York Hospital 3877 patients, of whom 2862 were cured, 116 relieved, and 353 died, (110 from accidents and street affrays,) leaving in the institution, December 31st, 1852, 291 patients. Of the entire number, 1127 were paupers, and 1285 seamen. The expenses for the year were $51,997.73, and receipts, $42,459.63, of which $12,500 were contributed by the state, $19,104.14 by board of seamen, $10,467.97 by pay patients, $387.52 miscellaneous, and the balance from the funds of the Bloomingdale branch. Of those treated at this hospital, 2861 were foreigners, of whom 1875 were Irish. Total admitted in 23 years, 54,204, of whom 40,355 were cured, and 5228 died. The Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum, a branch of the above, is located near the Hudson river, on 118th street, about 7 miles N. W. of the City Hall, on an area of 55 acres, laid out into walks, pleasure-grounds, &c. The building is of hewn stone, composed of a centre and two wings, 211 feet long. There are two detached buildings of brick, one-third the size of the main building. The situation is healthful, and commanding a fine prospect, calculated to cheer and soothe the mind so far as scenery and air are concerned. This asylum had 226 patients during the year 1852, of whom 49 recovered, 25 improved, 15 unimproved, 18 died, and 119 remained in the institution, December 31st, 1852. Receipts, $41,137.47, viz. from state annuity, $10,000; board of patients, $30,942.67, and articles sold, $194.80. Expenses, $31,633.97. St. Luke's Hospital and St. Vincent's Hospital, in East 18th street, between 102d and 104th streets, are under the care of the Sisters of Charity. New York Institution for the Blind occupies the entire block between 8th and 9th avenues, and between 33d and 34th streets. The building is composed of a centre, 117 feet long by 60 wide, and two wings, each 130 feet long by 29 wide. The entire length is 175 feet, and height 3 stories. It is constructed of blue limestone, in the castellated Gothic style, at a cost, including grounds, of $88,832.29, of which the state contributed $42,000. A workshop of brick, 88½ feet long and 60 feet deep, has recently been erected on 8th avenue. At the close of 1852, there were 103 pupils in the institution, 95 from the State of New York, 4 from New Jersey, and one each from Alabama, Connecticut, Tennessee, and Michigan, of whom 86 were supported by the state, and 9 by the commissioners of emigration. The expenses of the year 1852 amounted to $51,186.30, of which the state contributed by appropriation, $10,000; the city of New York, $1000, and the state of New Jersey, $897.53, and $13,043.66 were received for fabrics made by the pupils of the asylum. Besides the 103 pupils, there are 42 blind operatives. The Deaf and Dumb Asylum, located on 50th street, near 4th avenue, is 210 feet long by 90, with wings 90 feet deep, 5 stories high, surmounted by an observatory, and surrounded by extensive grounds. There were in the institution,

December 31st, 1852, 260 pupils, 117 of whom were females, and 143 males; 182 were supported by the State of New York, 16 by the city, 13 by the State of New Jersey, 32 by their friends, 16 by the institution, and 1 by the commissioners of emigration. The expenses for 1852 were $47,552.65, and receipts, 42,309.75. New York abounds in institutions for the relief of suffering poverty, decrepitude, and misfortune of every kind: among them may be mentioned the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, where females out of employment or a home may find shelter, and have their children taken care of, till suitable places can be found for them. Since its opening in 1847, 2936 persons have been received, of whom 1146 were children; cost of the building, $18,000. The New York Orphan Asylum, at Bloomingdale, is a fine building, 120 feet by 60, with eight acres of ground. This institution received 184 children in 1852, and during the same period legacies amounting to $15,199 were received. The Leake and Watts Orphan House stands on a lot of 26 acres, and has an income sufficient to support 250 children. It had 194 inmates in 1852. The Colored Orphan Asylum had 258 inmates, and the Protestant Half Orphan Asylum 246 in 1852. Where the surviving parents are able, they pay 50 cents a week for each child. The Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, under the presidency of Archbishop Hughes, is in Prince street. The Asylum for Friendless Boys provides a home for the education and instruction in some employment of street-boys. Of 127 boys received the first year of its establishment, (1851,) 100 were foreigners. This institution is about being merged in a Juvenile Asylum, to be located on the N. E. side of the island, beyond the city. The Jews' Widows' and Orphans' Asylum, located in West 27th street; the Lying-in Asylum, in Marion street; Montefiore Widows' and Orphans' Asylum, in Beaver street; the Working Girls' Home, in Broome street, are the other principal asylums in New York. Closely allied to the asylums are the dispensaries, of which there are five, viz. the New York, with two branches, (the Northern and Eastern;) the Demilt, corner of 2d avenue and 23d street, and the Homœopathic Dispensary, in Broome street. The first relieved 48,547 patients in 1852; the Northern, 240,976 in the 26 years it has existed, and 17,831 in 1852, of whom 11,914 were foreigners. The Demilt treated 2197 patients, of whom 1376 were foreigners, in the year ending March 27th, 1853. The New York Eye Infirmary administered to 3007 patients, of whom 2003 were foreigners. 275 of the patients were treated for diseases of the ear. The New York Ophthalmic Hospital treated 444 patients in 1852. The People's Bathing and Washing Establishment, 141 Mott street, is furnished with all the materials for washing, drying, and ironing clothes, which are let out at three cents an hour to each individual. There are accommodations for 68 persons to wash at one time. In the first three months the bathing department was open, 38,600 baths were taken, at an expense to the bathers of about five cents for each bath. There are several institutions for the relief of disabled seamen, for providing comfortable and suitable boarding for them while in port, and for the education of their children; among these are the "Sailor's Home," which boarded 3027 mariners in 1852, and 33,527 since its establishment in 1842. "The Colored Sailor's Home" had 247 boarders in 1852. The Seaman's Savings' Bank has over $3,000,000 on deposit, all under the care of the American Seamen's Friend Society, which also sends out missionaries, opens reading rooms, and publishes the Sailor's Magazine, with a monthly circulation of 6000 copies. The Marine Society, founded in 1770, gave relief in 1853 to 56 widows, at an expense of from $40 to $60 each annually. The Seaman's Retreat, on Staten island, near the Quarantine Ground, gave relief in 1852 to 2956 patients, of whom 167 died. The trustees may levy $1.50 upon every master, $1 upon every mate, 50 cents upon each sailor arriving from a foreign port, and 25 cents from each of the crew of coasting vessels. "The Marine Hospital," also on Staten island, is devoted to invalid passengers and seamen from ships just arrived: it is supported by a fund arising from a tax of $2 on every foreign cabin, and 50 cents on every steerage passenger. "The Sailor's Snug Harbor," on the N. side of Staten island, founded in 1801, by a bequest of Robert Richard Randall, of an open field (then) near New York, now a valuable property yielding a rental of $100,000. The building has a front of white marble, and, including its wings, a length of 225 feet. There belong to the institution 160 acres of ground. In 1852 there were supported here 295 disabled and aged seamen. "The Home for Sailors' Children" is in the same neighborhood. The Mariner's Family Industrial Society furnishes work to the female relatives of seamen. The "Prison Association of New York," has for its object the improvement of prison discipline, and the encouragement of released convicts, by enabling them to procure employment. Since its organization in 1845, it has relieved 977 prisoners, of whom 225 are doing well, 470 hopeful, 126 doubtful, 19 returned to prison, and 137 whose condition is unknown. The "Home," founded by the female members of the same society, provides a temporary shelter for released female convicts from Blackwell's Island prison, till they can be supplied with places: 166 were received in 1852. The Magdalene Female Asylum had 70 inmates during 1852. Pease's Institution, at the Five Points, (the St. Giles of New York, a sink of all iniquity,) employs about 100 persons constantly in tailoring, straw-binding, &c., and since its establishment in 1848, has found places for 800 women in the country. Of the $15,000 expended in 1852, $12,000 were defrayed by the products of the women's labor. Altogether there are in New York, 22 asylums, 90 benevolent societies, 75 secret and beneficent societies, 8 hospitals, and 7 dispensaries.

Almshouse, &c.—The board of ten governors of the almshouse have under their charge, to some extent, the following institutions:—The Almshouse, Bellevue Hospital, City Prison, Colored Home, Colored Orphan Asylum, Nursery Hospital, the City Penitentiary, Penitentiary Hospital, one branch of Almshouse, Lunatic Asylum, and Workhouse, all on Blackwell's island; House of Refuge, and Nursery, on Randall's island; office of chief of police, out-door poor, prisons of 2d and 3d districts, Small-pox Hospital, &c. They report expended on all these institutions, for the year 1852, \$465,109.20, and relief given to 80,357 persons; of which number 15,869 were relieved at the department in the Park. The almshouse proper admitted 2624 persons in 1852, of whom only 618 were natives; and of the foreign paupers, 1654 were Irish. Deaths, 181. The hospital department (at Bellevue, on the East river, foot of 26th, 27th, and 28th streets) treated 5629 patients during the year, of whom 633 died; 3686 were foreigners, of whom 3482 were Irish. The Hospital on Blackwell's island (this island lies in the East river, about $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 miles from the City Hall, having the Penitentiary on the S. end, the Almshouse in the middle, and the Asylum on the N. end,) treated 3034 patients in 1852, of whom 1919 were foreigners, and 111 died. In the Small-pox Hospital, 159 were treated, of whom 25 died. In the Colored Home, 902 persons were under care, of whom 110 died. In the Colored Orphan Asylum, 258 had been admitted during 1852; 201 remained at the close of the year, and 15 died. There were treated in the Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's island, 1012 patients. Of 495 admitted in 1852, 393 were foreigners, and 130 died. The Nursery Hospital on Randall's island admitted 2184 children during the year, of whom 163 died, and 206 remained at its close. The Nursery on the same island admitted during the year, 1794 persons, which, added to those remaining December 31, 1851, made 3213. Of the admissions, 69 were men, 489 women, 733 boys, and 503 girls: 164 died. Average attendance at schools, 690. The commitments to the Penitentiary on Blackwell's island amounted to 4444, of whom 1042 were from the courts, and the rest police commitments. The workhouse department, on the same island, received during 1852, 515 persons. There were committed to the three city prisons in the same year, 25,365 offenders. The most important of these, (the First District Prison, Hall of Justice, or Tombs, as it is popularly called) occupies a low site near the City Hall, but is a building of considerable pretensions, being in the Egyptian style, 253 feet by 200, and constructed of light-colored granite. This prison only received 19,064 of the commitments. A very extensive building is now (1853) being erected on Randall's island, as a House of Refuge. The length of the boys' department is 590 feet, composed of a centre and two wings—the centre 86, and the wings 63 feet high; and a girls' department, 250 feet long, of like breadth and height. When completed, there will be two centre wings to the boys' department, besides end buildings to each wing, 56 by 50 feet, and a number of out-buildings, such as shops and kitchens, &c. The present House of Refuge is on First Avenue, between 23d and 24th streets. The Refuge had 345 boys and 76 girls, December 31st, 1852. Of 266 white children received, only 45 were American. Places were found for 225 children—97 on farms, and the rest at trades. Expenses for 1852, \$31,121.34; to which the state contributed \$8000, and the city \$4000; theatre licenses \$4698, and boys' labor \$9581; 277 boys and 76 girls attended schools.

Education.—The free schools of New York have consisted of two departments, one under the direction of the Public School Society, having 111 schools under their care; and 89 ward schools, under the direction of the Board of Education. This year (1853) the Public School Society was dissolved. The number of pupils on register attending the ward schools, January 1st, 1853, was 66,831, and average attendance 22,959; number on register in the schools of the Public School Society, 56,151; average attendance, 19,314. Number of night schools, 23; number of pupils on register, 8074; average attendance, 2736. Total number of pupils attending the public schools, 131,056, or more than one-fifth the population. The schools named below, and connected with the following institutions, draw more or less of their support from the public fund:—The New York Orphan Asylum, the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, the Roman Catholic Half-Orphan Asylum, the Protestant Half-Orphan Asylum, the Mechanics' Society, House of Refuge, Leake and Watts' Orphan House, Almshouse; also, the Hamilton freeschool, Colored Orphans', American Female Guardian, and colored schools. Crowning the system of public school education is, the Free Academy, established in 1848, and combining the characteristics of academy, high-school, Polytechnic school, and college; and, in the opinion of some, will give a more practical and useful education than any college. This institution is situated on the corner of Lexington avenue and 23d street. The ground was purchased, the building erected, furnished with the necessary apparatus, books, &c., at a cost of about $90,000. The edifice, though of brick, is large and imposing, being in the Gothic style, with turrets, &c. In the four years the Free Academy has been in operation, the entire expenses have varied between $10,782 and $19,898, per annum—so far keeping within the $20,000 allowed by law. On the 1st of January, 1853, there were 11,164 volumes in the library, and 571 students in the academy. The full course requires 5 years, but it is at the option of the student whether he will pursue a full or partial course; he may also choose between the ancient and modern languages. The faculty consists of 13 professors, aided by 8 tutors. The president, who is also one of the professors, receives $2500, the other professors receive from $700 to $1500 per annum, and the tutors from $500 to $700. There are in this city 2 colleges, 2 theological and 3 medical schools. Columbia College, the oldest of these literary institutions, occupies a pile of buildings, the main one of which is 200 feet by 50, with extensive wings, situated in beautiful open grounds, shaded by venerable trees, between Barclay and Church streets, and between Murray street and West Broadway. This ancient seat of learning was founded in 1754, and was called King's College till the Revolution. Alexander Hamilton was a graduate of this college. Number of alumni up to 1852, 1450; students in 1853, 157; and 6000 volumes in its library. The faculty consists of a president and 12 professors.

The University of the City of New York occupies a beautiful white-marble structure, on the E. side of Washington square, between Washington and Waverley Places. It is 180 feet long by 100 in width, of the English-College-Gothic style. It has a chapel, with oak carvings, which is lighted by a stained-glass window, 50 feet by 24. This college was founded in 1831, and the building occupied in 1836. The number of alumni in 1853 was 320; of professors and tutors, 11; students, 151, and volumes in the library, 4000. Connected with the university is a medical school, located in 14th street, between Irving place and Third avenue. This department was founded in 1837, had 6 professors and 421 students in 1852, and had sent forth 597 graduates. It has a fine library and physiological collection. The New York College of Physicians and Surgeons was founded in 1807, and is located at No. 57 Crosby street. It had 6 professors and 219 students in 1852, and had conferred 852 degrees of M. D. It has also a good library and anatomical museum. The New York Medical College, a new and flourishing institution, was founded in 1851, and is located on 13th street, between Third and Fourth avenues. It admits 5 students from the Free Academy gratuitously. The College of Pharmacy, for the graduation of apothecaries, closes the list of medical schools. The General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States is situated on 20th street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, and occupies two stone buildings, each 110 feet by 50. It was founded in 1817, had 5 professors, 64 students, and 11,000 volumes in its library, in 1852; and had educated a total of 417 students: number in 1853, 57. The Union Theological Seminary, No. 9 University Place, is under the direction of Presbyterians, though it receives students from all evangelical denominations. It was founded in 1836, and had 5 professors, 106 students, and 18,000 volumes in 1852, and had educated 211 young men. The Rutgers Female Institute occupies a fine building, with granite front, in Madison street, near Clinton. This institution was incorporated in 1838, and gives a thorough education to young ladies in history, general philosophy, astronomy, chemistry, mathematics, and belles-lettres. It has generally about 500 pupils. St. George's Parish School admits about 100 pupils of a lower grade than usually attend the public schools.

Libraries.—New York has a number of extensive libraries. The largest collection of books will be in the Astor Library, a new institution, founded by the late John Jacob Astor, who left a fund of $400,000 for that purpose. This library is about to be opened (1853) in a fine building (65 feet by 120) erected for the purpose, in the Moorish style, in Lafayette place. The building cost about $70,000, and will open with about 100,000 volumes, to be increased from time to time from the interest of the fund remaining after the library goes into operation. This library is to be free to all persons resorting thereto. The New York Society Library is one of the oldest in the United States, has about 42,000 volumes, and occupies a fine building with a sandstone front with Ionic columns, 50 feet on Broadway, and 100 upon Leonard street. It is, however, about to be removed, as the building is sold. It was founded in 1700. The New York Mercantile Library, founded in 1820, one of the most vigorously conducted and flourishing libraries in the United States, is at present located at Clinton Hall, corner of Beekman and Nassau streets, but it is soon to be removed to the Opera House, Astor Place. January 1, 1853, it had 37,485 volumes on its shelves, and 21 daily, 42 weekly, 80 monthly, and 45 quarterly journals on its reading-room tables. The number of members at the same time was 4194. This institution, though founded for merchants and their clerks, is open to any citizen complying with the terms of membership. Its income is $10,000 per annum. The Apprentices' Library, located at No. 32 Crosby street, in Mechanics' Hall, has about 17,000 volumes. The New York Historical Society has its rooms at present in the buildings of the New York University; but the society are about erecting a fireproof building for themselves. This institution was founded in 1804, when a grant was made it by the state of $12,000. The society has a valuable library of 12,000 volumes, including some rare books, pamphlets, maps, charts, and files of papers from 1730 to the present time, and a collection of antiquities, coins, medals, &c. The American Bible Society has recently erected an immense pile of buildings. Mr. Peter Cooper is about erecting a building for the purpose of public lectures, reading, and exhibition rooms, &c., which he intends to be free, and for which he appropriates about $300,000. The edifice is to be situated opposite the Bible House, to be 195 feet on Third Avenue, 155 on Fourth Avenue, 143 on Eighth and 86 on Seventh street, and five stories high. The basement and two lower stories are to be rented, the income of which is to support the "People's Union," as the establishment is to be called. The Lyceum of Natural History, in a part of the building occupied by the medical department of the New York University, Fourteenth street, near Fourth Avenue, has a valuable library and an extensive cabinet of beasts, birds, fishes, shells, minerals, and fossils. The American Institute of the City of New York was incorporated in 1829, for the encouragement of commerce, agriculture, and manufactures, and hold annual fairs or exhibitions in Castle Garden. It distributed $4000 in 1852, in the shape of medals and other rewards. The institute is located at 351 Broadway, where they have a meeting-room, library, repository for models, reading room, &c. The Mechanics' Institute, in the basement of the City Hall, has a fine library and reading room, and a valuable collection of philosophical and chemical apparatus, and a male and female school attached.

Banks.—New York had in September, 1853, 53 banks, with $45,117,900 capital, $9,566,723 circulation, and $11,860,235 in coin. The most conspicuous banking houses are the Bank of the Republic, corner of Broadway and Wall street, Metropolitan, Chemical, and Pacific, all in Broadway, and all of brown-stone, and the Ocean Bank, in Greenwich street, of the same material. The banking hall of the latter is beautifully frescoed. There are in Wall street a number of solid structures of Quincy granite and marble, occupied by the America, State of New York, Commercial, Union, Merchants', Exchange, and City Banks. There are 12 savings banks in New York: among these are the Emigrant, Industrial, and Seaman's Savings Banks. In January, 1853, there were in New York 43 insurance and trust companies, with an aggregate capital of $11,714,010.

Manufactures.—We have no regular statistics as yet of the particulars of the manufactures of New York; but if the census report is to be relied on, this city is not only the commercial, but the manufacturing centre of the United States. The census of 1850 gives to New York $34,232,822 capital, and 53,703 male and 29,917 female hands employed in manufactures, producing machinery, stuffs, &c. to the value of $105,218,308. Among these, the iron foundries and machine shops are conspicuous. From the Novelty and other works are certainly turned out the finest specimens of steam machinery for steam-boats and steamships produced in the United States, if not in the world. Sugar-refining is another extensive business. According to an article in the New York Tribune, there are refined 1000 hogsheads of raw sugar a day; and one house alone consumed 40,000,000 pounds of raw sugar in 1852. In the different refineries there are employed 1250 hands, and about $3,000,000 capital. Ship-building is carried to a degree of perfection unsurpassed in the world, both for beauty of model and speed, particularly in the steamers, acknowledged to be the largest and fleetest in the world, though the contest is very close between the American and British vessels in this respect.

Commerce and Trade.—It is as the great centre of commerce for half a continent that New York derives its highest claim to pre-eminence. Surrounded by one of the most capacious harbors in the world, within two hours sail of the Atlantic ocean, communicating with the New England States by Long Island sound, and with the interior of New York State by the Hudson river, which is in turn connected with the great lakes by the Erie canal, it presents facilities for internal and foreign navigation unrivalled by any commercial emporium of this or any former period. Nor have her merchants been satisfied to repose on her natural advantages, but they have connected her, by iron arms, with every great point, north, south, east, or west, which deposite on her docks and in her depôts the cotton and rice of the South, the grain, lead, tobacco, and pork of the West, and the wool, wheat, lumber, and flour of the North and East. New York is now only surpassed by London and Liverpool as a seat of trade, and in another century will probably be the commercial centre of the world. Along its wharves, in every direction, may be seen forests of masts, where countless vessels of every description, and from every quarter of the globe, pour their rich tribute into the lap of this queen of commercial cities. Steamers of such size, splendor, and speed as the world has never before seen, forming regular lines of packets to Liverpool, Southampton, Havre, Glasgow, Bremen, San Francisco, New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah, Charleston, and all other important points along the coast, arrive at and depart from its docks almost daily, freighted with merchandise and crowded with passengers. But we will let figures tell the facts of the case.

There arrived, in 1852, in New York, from foreign ports, 3847 vessels, (aggregate tonnage, 1,709,988,) bearing merchandise to the value of \$127,441,394, (including something more than \$2,000,000 in specie,) and 310,335 passengers. The exports to foreign countries, during the same period, amounted to \$71,523,609, including \$25,096,255 in specie. The leading articles imported are various species of dry goods, silk, woollen, linen, and cotton; earthen and hardware; iron in various stages of manufacture, figs, raisins, brandies, wines, &c. The imports of dry goods alone, for the first quarter of 1853, amounted to \$25,862,092, independent of \$1,500,000 warehoused. The imports for the year 1852, included 601,170 bags and packages of coffee; 1,443,949 hides; 41,986 tons of bar, 70,061 of pig, and 656,657 bundles of sheet and rod iron; 514,514 bales of cotton; 393,766 pigs of lead; 125,311 hogsheads, tierces, and barrels of molasses; 177,732 hogsheads, 1655 tierces, 48,209 barrels, 194,748 boxes, and 111,834 bags of sugar; 2,058,396 bushels of salt; 1456 butts and pipes, 21,282 hogsheads, 49,994 quarter casks, 12,172 barrels, 73,033 boxes of wine; 16,618 hogsheads, and 38,098 quarter casks and barrels of brandy; 6840 casks, 323,161 boxes, and 1098 drums of raisins; 106,652 drums of figs; 14,602 hogsheads, 43 bales and ceroon of tobacco, besides large quantities of cocoa, duck, queensware, hemp, olive oil, pepper, pimento, rags, rice, salt-petre, spelter, tin, wool, coal, and considerable cochineal, gin, and rum. Among the articles exported from January 1 to December 20, 1852, were 1,365,597 barrels of wheat flour; 44,819 of Indian meal; 3,012,718 bushels of wheat; 753,928 of Indian corn; 331,574 bales of cotton; 511,926 barrels of naval stores; 791,829 barrels of sperm, and 58,185 of whale oil; 38,747 barrels of pork, and 47,031 of beef; 1,497,599 pounds of cut beef, besides large quantities of pot and pearl ashes, beeswax, rye, candles, coal, butter, cheese, lard, rice, tallow, tobacco, whalebone, and some rye flour, oats, barley, hay, hops, lard, linseed oil, and 54,692 packages of domestic cottons. The tonnage in 1852 was 571,905 $\frac{9}{16}$ registered, and 444,643 $\frac{2}{3}$ enrolled and licensed; total, 1,016,599 $\frac{1}{3}$, being about one-fourth the whole tonnage of the United States. Losses covered by marine insurance, paid in New York, \$3,250,161, in 1851. The export and import trade of 1852 employed upwards of 106,000 seamen. There are 18 steamships, rating from 1700 to 3000 tons, engaged in the transatlantic trade; of which 10 are British, and 8 American. Of these, 13 run to Liverpool, one to Glasgow, two to Havre, and two to Bremen—the last four touching also at Southampton. A new line of steam propellers to Liverpool is also about being established. The lines to San Francisco employed recently 37 steamers, rating from 900 to 3000 tons, and about equally divided in number on the Atlantic and Pacific waters. These are crowded with passengers beyond all precedent in the history of ocean travel, and beyond all possibility of comfort for voyagers. The West Indies and Southern lines employ 17 steamers—making a total steam marine of 72 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 113,310. Of the steam tonnage of the United States, in 1852, (ocean, lake, and river,) more than one-fourth, viz. 64,447, belonged to New York city. In 1852, 124 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 56,179, were either on the stocks or launched. Of these, 16 were steamships, 64 steamboats, and 44 sailing vessels. The cash duties during the same period, amounted to \$31,332,737.81.

Miscellaneous Statistics.—In 1850 there were in New York, 37,730 houses, with an average of 13 $\frac{2}{3}$ persons to each dwelling. In the same year, 212,996 foreign emigrants arrived; 289,601 in 1851, and 298,604 in 1852; of whom 117,537 were Irish; 118,126, Germans; 31,275, English; 8778, French; 7640, Scotch, and 6455, Swiss: total number of passengers arriving from foreign ports, 310,335, and from California, 12,153. It may readily be seen what life and activity the landing of a daily average of nearly 1000 persons must give to New York, and what an amount of money must be left by this floating mass of population. The total number of deaths for 1852 was 21,553; of which number, 6712 were of foreign birth; 2462, by consumption; 1052, inflammation of the lungs; 1400, stillborn; 1676, by convulsions; 609, by scarlet fever; 659, by typhus fever; 19 were murdered; 35 committed suicide, and 169 died from accidents. There was expended on city prisons, almshouses, &c., exclusive of a host of private charities, \$492,564.26. The commitments to prison were 25,265; of whom 19,764 were foreigners. The police department employs 900 men, at an annual expense of \$500,000. There are 15 principal markets in different parts of the city, besides numberless licensed stalls and green groceries. The entire number of periodical publications issued in New York is between 140 and 150. Of these, about 20 are dailies, with an aggregate circulation of above 200,000, besides a great number of weekly prints—almost every sect and clique having its hebdomadal organ. There were in 1851, 6 theatres, besides the American Museum, where dramatic entertainments were offered to the public: Castle Garden and several halls are used for concerts and operas. The East river is constantly crossed from New York to Brooklyn and Williamsburg by the finest ferry-boats perhaps in the world, with comfortable seats, and in winter with well-warmed cabins. The ferriage is one cent to Brooklyn, and two and three cents to Williamsburg. There are 6 ferries to Brooklyn, and 3 to Williamsburg; 3 ferries to Hoboken; one to Jersey City, (boats running every 10 minutes;) 3 ferries to different points on Staten island, and to Greenwood Cemetery, besides boats innumerable running to all points on Long island, on the Hudson river, and in New Jersey. From May, 1852, to February, 1853, there were licenses issued to 41 pawnbrokers; 52 second-hand dealers; 115 junk shops; 26 intelligence offices; 47 carts and boats of junk shops; 673 omnibuses; 560 hackney coaches; 5980 taverns, (granted from January 1 to July 22, 1853,) 4550 public carts; 295 public porters; 4000 drivers of carts and trucks; 80 charcoal pedlars; 1500 dirt carts; 55 emigrant boarding houses; 67 runners, and 15 brokers. In 1852 there were 49 engine, 54 hose, (with 68,300 feet of hose,) and 13 hook and ladder companies, with 51 ladders and 136 hooks. Previous to January 1, 1853, there had been laid 229 miles of waterpipes. There were laid in the same year 229 miles of (main) gaspipes, lighting 7539 street-lamps. There are nearly 40 miles of sewers.

Government, &c.—New York is divided into twenty wards, and is governed by a mayor and common council. The mayor is elected by popular vote, and holds office for two years. The common council is composed of two boards, one called the board of aldermen, and the other the board of assistant aldermen, one member for each board being elected from every ward annually. Besides the state and United States courts, there are courts of oyer and terminer, of general sessions, and special sessions, the two latter held by the recorder, or city judge, and two almen. The city is divided into three police districts, each with a police court. There are also eight ward courts. There are twenty patrol districts, each with a station house, a captain, and two lieutenants, and with from about thirty to sixty policemen. The whole presided over by a chief of police. New York is also divided into eight fire districts, and in case of fire the number of strokes of the bell indicate the ward in which the fire is. A board of twelve firewardens receives complaints of all violations of law relative to fires, powder, construction, &c. The fire department in action is managed by a chief engineer and ten assistants. Total expenditures of the city government, including interest on debt for 1852, $8,294,241.45; for cleansing streets, $288,924.63; almshouse, $390,000; fire department, $105,635.47; lamps and gas, $269,068.91; police, $614,906.10; street expenses, $264,966.43; street paving, $663,176.45; street opening, $359,165.37; waterpipes, $150,651.25; salaries, $242,000; common schools for the city, $468,293; for the state, $185,641. The mayor, recorder, comptroller, county clerk, register, and surrogate, each receive $3000 per annum; the street commissioner, chief of police, assistant district attorney, and clerk of the superior court, each $2500. The clerk of the board of assistants, tax commissioners, receiver of taxes, the commissioner of repairs, chief of the fire department, assistant commissioner, engineer, and assistant engineer of Croton aqueduct department, and justices of police and ward courts, each $2000; judges of the superior and common pleas courts, $4000; marine court, $2000.

History.—The first knowledge we have of New York bay and Manhattan island, the site of the present city of New York, is from Henry Hudson, an English navigator in the employ of the East India Company of Holland, who visited them in 1609, and proceeded up the river which now bears his name. No settlement was however made till three years afterwards, when a fort was built on the southern extremity of Manhattan island by the Dutch, and thus commenced the settlement of New Amsterdam, which, in 1656, contained 120 houses and about 1000 inhabitants. In 1664 it was surrendered to the British, and came into the hands of the Duke of York, taking the name of New York; but it was retaken by the Dutch nine years afterwards, who however held it but a single year. In 1677 there were 384 houses, and in 1696 the city owned 40 ships, 62 sloops, and 60 boats. In 1700 the population was 6000. In 1711 a slave market was established in Wall street. The New York Gazette, a weekly paper, appeared in 1725. First stage-route to Philadelphia established in 1732, and stages departed for Boston monthly, taking a fortnight on the route. Negro insurrections occurred in 1712 and 1741–2. In the former the negroes fired the city, and killed a number of people, for which 119 of them were executed. The imports of 1769 amounted to $839,782. In 1783, after a long possession, the British troops evacuated New York. In 1807 the first steamboat was built at this port to navigate the Hudson. The opening of the Erie canal in 1825 gave a great impetus to New York, and made it the first city of the Union.

The years 1853–4 will be memorable in the history of the city of New York, for the exhibition denominated the World's Fair, held in a spacious iron and glass building, called the Crystal Palace, erected adjacent to the Distributing Reservoir, between 40th and 42d streets. The edifice was in the form of a Greek Cross. The length of each diameter of which was 365 $\frac{1}{2}$ feet. The dome was 100 feet in diameter and 123 feet high. The interior space was greatly enlarged by filling up the angles between the arms of the cross, so as to give it the form of an octagon. In the construction of the palace 1800 tons of iron, 55,000 square feet of glass, and 750,000 square feet of lumber were used. The aggregate flooring covered 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres. The proportions of this building are beautiful, and is thought by many to surpass the London Crystal Palace in architectural effect. The exhibition was officially opened July 15th, 1853, in the presence of the President of the United States, and other dignitaries of our country, and of the commissioners from foreign governments. The collection comprised specimens of the industrial and fine arts from almost every country of Europe, from the British Colonies, West Indies, and Mexico.

Fires.—New York has several times been visited by very destructive conflagrations; the most remarkable occurred on the night of December 16th, 1835, consuming 648 houses in the most valuable part of the city, and destroying property valued at $20,000,000; another in July, 1845, raged chiefly between Broadway and Broad street, involving a loss of property to the amount of $7,000,000.

NEW YORK, a post-office of Sumter co., Ala.

NEW YORK, a post-office of Chickasaw co., Mississippi.

NEW YORK, a small post-village of Montgomery co., Tennessee, on the Cumberland river, about 55 miles, by land, W. by N. from Nashville.

NEW YORK, a post-village of Switzerland co., Indiana, on the Ohio river, 8 miles E. from Veray.

NEW YORK, a small village of Brown co., Illinois, on Crooked river, 10 miles N. E. from Mount Sterling.

NEW YORK, a thriving settlement of Pierce co., Washington Territory, near Elliott bay, on the E. side of Admiralty Inlet.

NEW YORK MILLS, a post-village of Oneida county, New York, on Sadaquada creek, about 95 miles W. N. W. from Albany. It has several churches, and a cotton factory, said to be one of the largest in the state.

NEW ZION, a post-office of Sumter co., S. C.

NEY, a post-office of Defiance co., Ohio.

NEY, a small post-village of De Kalb co., Illinois.

NEZ PERCÉ (usually pronounced nay percy) or Saptin Indians, a tribe dwelling in the eastern part of Oregon, between Clark's river, and on the N. branch of Saptin or Lewis river. The name, nez percé, signifies, in French, "pierced nose." There does not, however, appear to be any peculiarity in their customs to justify this appellation.

NIAGARA, a river of North America, forming the outlet of Lake Erie and a part of the boundary between the United States and Canada. It commences at Black Rock, 2 miles N. of Buffalo, and, flowing northward, enters Lake Ontario after a course of about 34 miles. About 3 miles below its southern extremity it divides into two arms, which embrace an island, called Grand Island, 12 miles long, and from 2 to 7 miles wide. Two or three miles below Grand Island, the entire waters of the Niagara are precipitated over a ledge of rocks about 160 feet in perpendicular height, forming the Niagara falls, the most stupendous cataract on the globe. The rapids above the falls have a descent of 57 feet in about half a mile. The river is navigable 7 miles to Lewistown, and above the falls for small boats from the old fort Schlosser to Lake Erie, near 20 miles. Two miles below the cataract the river is spanned by a magnificent suspension bridge 800 feet in length. See SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

NIAGARA, a county in the W. part of New York, has an area of about 490 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by Lake Ontario, W. by Niagara river, and S. by Tonnewanda creek, and is drained by Willinks and Tuscarora creeks. The surface is undulating in some parts, in others nearly level. The soil is generally fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 917,738½ bushels of wheat; 345,257 of corn; 321,283 of oats; 35,724 tons of hay, and 793,206 pounds of butter. There were 13 flour and grist mills, 43 saw mills, 1 cotton and 2 woollen factories, 6 iron foundries, 1 glass manufactory, 1 paper mill, and 7 tanneries. It contained 60 churches, 5 newspaper offices, 11,561 pupils attending public schools, and 123 attending academies or other schools. Extensive beds of gypsum, or plaster, have been discovered in this county. The county is traversed by the Erie canal and by the Rochester Lockport and Niagara falls, and the Buffalo and Niagara falls railroads, and partly intersected by several shorter lines. Organized in 1808, having been formed out of part of Genesee county, and named from Niagara river and falls, which are situated on its western borders. Capital, Lockport. Population, 42,276.

NIAGARA, FALLS OF. See NEW YORK, p. 807.

NIAGARA, a township of Niagara township, New York, on the river of its own name, 16 miles N. N. E. from Buffalo. Pop., 1951.

NIAGARA FALLS, a post-village of Niagara county, New York, is situated in the immediate vicinity of the great cataract, to which circumstance it owes its origin and increase. Distance from Buffalo by railroad, 22 miles; from Rochester, 76 miles. It contains 1 Catholic and 4 Protestant churches, 5 dry goods stores and 9 hotels, of which 4 are styled "first class;" also a paper mill, iron foundry, a flouring mill, and a large public school house. Three or four railroads meet at this point. Population in 1853, estimated at 2200. See SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

NIANGUA, a river of Missouri, rises near the S. E. corner of Dallas county, and, flowing nearly northward, falls into the Osage at Erie, Camden county. It receives the Little Niangua from the left, a few miles from its mouth.

NICOTTOO, a post-village of Arkansas co., Arkansas.

NICHOLAS, a county in the W. central part of Virginia, has an area of 600 square miles.

The Kanawha river washes its S. W. border; it is traversed from E. to W. by the Gauley river, and also drained by Meadow river and Buffalo creek. The surface is hilly and mountainous, and covered with extensive forests. A large part of the land is unproductive. Indian corn, oats, grass, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 83,273 bushels of corn; 31,377 of oats; 2001 tons of hay, and 41,976 pounds of butter. It contained 9 churches, and 189 pupils attending public schools. A railroad is projected, which, when finished, will connect the county with the Ohio river. Formed in 1818. Capital, Summerville. Population, 3963, of whom 3890 were free, and 73, slaves.

NICHOLAS, a county in the N. E. part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 300 square miles. It is intersected by Licking river proper, and bounded on the S. W. by the South Licking. The surface is diversified; the S. part of the county is gently undulating, and very productive; the other parts are more broken. Indian corn, hemp, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 733,750 bushels of corn; 69,834 of oats, and 161 tons of hemp. It contained 13 churches, 1068 pupils attending public schools, and 160 attending an academy. The surface rock is limestone of good quality. The county is intersected by the Maysville and Lexington turnpike, and by the railroad lately commenced between the cities just named. On the bank of Licking river, in this county, is the Blue Lick spring, a watering place of much celebrity. Formed in 1799, and named in honor of Colonel George Nicholas, an officer in the War of the Revolution. Capital, Carlisle. Population, 10,361, of whom 8848 were free, and 1513, slaves.

NICHOLAS, a small town of Placer county, California, situated on the left bank of Feather river, below the mouth of Bear river, and 35 miles in a straight line nearly N. of Sacramento city.

NICHOLAS COURT HOUSE. See SUMMERVILLE.

NICHOLASVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Jessamine county, Kentucky, on a small affluent of Kentucky river, and on the railroad and turnpike from Lexington to Danville, 12 miles S. from the former. The surrounding country is fertile and well cultivated. It contains a fine court house, 4 churches, 2 academies, and several bagging factories. Population, estimated at 1000.

NICHOLS, a post-township in the S. border of Tioga co., New York. Population, 1905.

NICHOLS, a post-village in the above township, on Susquehanna river, about 8 miles S. W. from Owego. It has 2 or 3 churches.

NICHOLSON, a township in the S. W. part of Fayette co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1353.

NICHOLSON, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania. Population, 927.

NICHOLSON'S STORE, a post-office of Choctaw co., Alabama.

NICHOLSONVILLE, a post-office of Putnam co., Indiana.

NICHOLSVILLE, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, on the E. branch of St. Regis river, about 31 miles E. by N. from Canton.

NICHOLSVILLE, a post-village of Clermont co., Ohio, on the road from Batavia to the Ohio river, about 24 miles E. from Cincinnati.

NICKELSVILLE, a post-office of Scott co., Va.

NICKELL'S MILLS, a post-office of Monroe co., Virginia.

NICOJACK CAVE. See GEORGIA, p. 422.

NICOLAUS, a post-office of Sutter co., Cal.

NICOLLET, a county in the S. E. part of Minnesota, has an area of 1240 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the North fork of Crow river, on the S. by the Minnesota river, and intersected by the South fork of Crow river, and by the Wita Kantu. The county contains several small lakes. The surface is undulating or level; the soil in some parts is productive. This county is not included in the census of 1850. Capital, Traverse des Sioux.

NICOLLET LAKE, a small lake in the E. part of Fremont county, Utah, about 125 miles S. W. from Salt Lake city. Length, 26 miles; greatest breadth, 12 miles. It receives the waters of Nicollet river, but has no outlet.

NICONZA, a post-office of Miami co., Ind.

NIDRIAS, a village near the left bank of the Rio del Norte, in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico.

NIGHT'S PRAIRIE, a post-office of Hamilton co., Illinois.

NILE, a post-office of Alleghany co., N. Y.

NILE, a township in Scioto co., Ohio. Population, 1004.

NILES, a post-township in the S. E. part of Cayuga co., New York, bordering on Owasco lake. Population, 2053.

NILES, a post-village of Trumbull co., Ohio, on the Mahoning river, and on the Pennsylvania and Ohio canal, 5 miles S. E. from Warren, contains a furnace, a rolling mill, and a nail factory. Pop., in 1853, about 600.

NILES, a post-township in the S. E. part of Berrien co., Michigan.

NILES, a post-village in the above township, on the right bank of the St. Joseph's river, where it is crossed by the Michigan Central railroad, 191 miles W. by S. from Detroit, and 90 miles E. from Chicago. It is the largest town of the county, and the principal market in Western Michigan. The river is navigable for small steamboats, and affords abundant water-power. Niles contains a branch of the state university, and several churches. Four newspapers are published here. Settled in 1831. Population in 1853, about 2500.

NILES, a post-township in Delaware co., Indiana. Population, 924.

NILES, a post-township in Cook co., Illinois. Population, 403.

NIMMON'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Morrow co., Ohio.

NIMSHILLEN creek, of Stark co., Ohio, flows into the Tuscarawas river.

NIMSHILLEN, a township in the N. E. part of Stark co., Ohio. Population, 1927.

NIMISILA, a post-village of Summit co., O.

NIMROD, a post-office of Copiah co., Miss.

NINE EAGLES, a post-village in Decatur co., Iowa, 145 miles S. W. by W. from Iowa City.

NINEMILE, a post-office of Bledsoe co., Tenn.

NINEMILE PRAIRIE, a post-office of Perry co., Illinois.

NINETY-SIX, a post-office of Abbeville district, South Carolina.

NINEVEH, a post-village of Broome co., New York, on the Susquehanna river, 16 miles E. N. E. from Binghamton.

NINEVEH, a post-office of Warren co., Va.

NINEVEH, a township in Bartholomew co., Indiana. Population, 720.

NINEVEH, a post-township in Johnson co., Indiana. Population, 1649.

NINEVEH, a post-village in Johnson co., Indiana, 30 miles S. by E. from Indianapolis.

NINEVEH, a post-office of Adair co., Mo.

NIPPENOSE, a post-township in the S. W. part of Lycoming co., Pa. Pop., 351.

NIPPENOSE, the name of a remarkable valley in the S. W. part of Lycoming county. It is of a regular oval shape, being about 10 miles long and 4 broad, forming a basin surrounded by a rim of high and steep mountains. The only easy access to it is by a deep gap in the Bald Eagle mountain, opposite Jersey Shore. The bed of this valley is composed of limestone, containing fissures and caverns beneath the soil, into which the streams that descend from the mountain sink and disappear; but uniting their waters in those subterranean passages, the whole body gushes forth in one enormous spring near the gap in the mountain, producing a powerful stream, which passes through the gap, and falls into the river above Jersey Shore.

NISHNABATONA river, rises in the S. W. central part of Iowa; flowing south-westerly, it enters Missouri near its N. W. extremity, and then assuming a south-easterly direction, it falls into the Missouri river in Atchison county.

NISKAYUNA, a post-township forming the E. extremity of Schenectady co., New York. Population, 783.

NITTANY, a post-office of Centre co., Pa.

NITTANY MOUNTAIN, Pennsylvania, a ridge extending through the E. part of Centre co. into Union county.

NIVERVILLE, a post-office of Columbia co., New York.

NIXBURG, a post-village of Coosa co., Alabama, 37 miles N. by E. from Montgomery.

NOAH, a post-office of Shelby co., Indiana.

NOANK, a post-office of New London co. Conn.

NOBLE, a new county in the S. E. part of Ohio, has an area of about 440 square miles. It is drained by Wills, Seneca, and Duck creeks. The surface is undulating and well timbered; the soil, being of limestone formation, is durable and highly productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, cattle, and swine are the staples. The county contains quarries of building stone and large beds of stone coal. The Central Ohio railroad is in course of construction along the northern border. Noble county was formed in 1851 by a division of Monroe, Morgan, and Guernsey counties. Capital, Sarahsville.

NOBLE, a county in the N. E. part of Indiana, contains 430 square miles. It is drained by the Elkhart river. The surface is diversified with slight inequalities. The soil is a fertile, sandy loam. Wheat, corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county yielded 206,295 bushels of corn; 69,802 of wheat; 56,715 of oats, and 2487 tons of hay. It contained 5 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 1844 pupils attending public schools. Iron ore is found in large quantities. Organized in 1836. Capital, Albion. Pop., 7946.

NOBLE, a township in Defiance co., Ohio. Population, 389.

NOBLE, a township in Morgan co., Ohio. Population, 1308.

NOBLE, a township in Shelby co., Ohio. Population, 1394.

NOBLE, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Branch co., Mich. Pop., 451.

NOBLE, a township in Cass co., Indiana. Population, 743.

NOBLE, a township in Jay co., Indiana. Population, 745.

NOBLE, a township in Laporte co., Indiana. Population, 944.

NOBLE, a post-township in Noble co., Indiana. Population, 595.

NOBLE, a post-township in Rush co., Indiana. Population, 1386.

NOBLE, a township in Wabash co., Indiana. Population, 3489.

NOBLEBOROUGH, a post-township of Lincoln co., Maine, on the E. side of the Damariscotta river, 24 miles S. E. from Augusta. Population, 1408.

NOBLE CENTRE, a post-office of Branch co., Michigan, 105 miles S. W. from Lansing.

NOBLE IRON-WORKS, a post-office of Noble co., Indiana.

NOBLESTOWN, a post-village of Allegheny co., Pennsylvania, 13 miles S. W. from Pittsburg, has about 300 inhabitants.

NOBLESVILLE, a township in Hamilton co., Indiana. Population, 1644.

NOBLESVILLE, a flourishing post-village, capital of Hamilton co., Indiana, on White river, and on the Peru and Indianapolis railroad, 20 miles N. N. E. from Indianapolis. It is situated on an extensive and fertile plain, and is a place of active business, which has lately been increased by the opening of the railroad. The village has 3 or 4 churches, a county seminary, a newspaper office, and several hotels. Settled in 1824. Population, in 1850, 664; in 1853, about 1500.

NOBLEVILLE, a post-office of Noble co., O.

NOBOSQUE POINT, at the entrance of Buzard's Bay, on the S. E. coast of Massachusetts. It contains a fixed light, 80 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 41° 31' 5" N.; lon. 70° 39' 53" W.

NOCHWAY, a post-office of Randolph co., Ga.

NOCKAMIXON, a township in the N. part of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on Delaware river. Population, 2445.

NODAWAY, a small river of Iowa and Missouri. Rising in the S. W. part of Iowa, it flows southward into Missouri, and forms the boundary between Atchison and Holt counties on the right, and Nodaway and Andrew on the left, until it enters Missouri river, about 20 miles above St. Joseph.

NODAWAY, a new county in the N. N. W. part of Missouri, bordering on Iowa, has an area of about 600 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Nodaway river, from which the name is derived, and also drained by the head streams of the Little Platte and the One Hundred and Two river. All of these streams flow from north to south. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 167,113 bushels of corn; 10,208 of wheat; 16,485 of oats; and 64 tons of hay. Capital, Maryville. Pop., 2118, of whom 2048 were free, and 70, slaves.

NODAWAY, a post-office of Andrew co., Mo.

NODAWAY, a post-office of Page co., Iowa.

NOLACHUCKY, or NOLICHUCKY river, rises near the N. W. base of the Blue Ridge, in Yancey co., in the W. part of North Carolina. Flowing into Tennessee, it enters the French Broad river at the W. extremity of Greene county. Its general direction is westward, and its whole length is estimated at 150 miles. This river affords immense water-power, and flows among mountain ridges which abound in iron ore.

NOLAND'S FERRY, a post-office of Loudon co., Virginia, 161 miles N. from Richmond.

NOLAND'S FORK, of Indiana, rises in Randolph co., flows through Wayne co., and enters the W. fork of Whitewater river a few miles above Connorsville.

NOLAND'S RIVER, Texas, a small stream which rises near the S. line of Tarrant co., and flows southward into Brazos river.

NOLINSVILLE, or NOLENSVILLE, a post-village of Williamson co., Tennessee, 20 miles S. E. from Nashville.

NOLIN, a post-office of Hardin co., Ky.

NOLIN CREEK, in the W. central part of Kentucky, rises in Hardin co., flows S. W., and enters Green river at Brownsville, in Edmondson county.

NOMINY GROVE, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Virginia.

NONOGNER, a post-office of Fayette co. Tenn.

NONPAREIL, a post-office of Knox co., Ohio.

NORFOLK, a county in the E. part of Massachusetts, has an area of about 520 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by Massachusetts bay and Boston harbor, and is watered by the Charles, Newport, and other smaller rivers, which furnish valuable water-power. The surface is uneven, and in the N. E. mountainous. The soil is fertile, and in the eastern portions in a high state of cultivation, furnishing the principal sources for the supply of fruit and vegetables to the Boston markets. Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 112,132 bushels of corn; 253,158 of potatoes; 41,588 tons of hay, and 347,089 pounds of butter. There were 37 cotton and 3 woollen factories, 2 nail-works, 5 iron foundries, 2 iron forges, 2 manufactories of fire engines, 2 of white lead, 6 of carpets, 8 of edge tools, 2 of chemicals, 257 of boots and shoes, 1 of India rubber, 16 machine shops, 3 flour, 9 grist, 12 paper, and 12 saw and planing mills, 19 manufactories of saddles and harness, 5 of starch, 13 of straw braid and bonnets, 43 of cabinet ware, and 4 of farming implements, 16 stone quarries, 1 sugar refinery, 12 tanneries, and 70 carpentering and building establishments. It contained 106 churches, 5 newspaper offices, 14,086 pupils attending public schools, and 1350 attending academies and other schools. A fine granite is found at Quincy, and from the quarry a railroad (the first laid in the United States) extends to Neponset river. This county is traversed by railroads connecting Boston with Plymouth, with Providence, and with Worcester, and partly intersected by two or three other railroads. Organized in 1793, (having previously formed part of Suffolk,) and named from Norfolk, a county in England. Capital, Dedham. Pop., 78,892.

NORFOLK, a county in the S. E. part of Virginia, bordering on North Carolina, has an area of 480 square miles. It is situated on the western shore of Chesapeake bay, on the estuary of James river, which is called Hampton Roads. The county is drained by Deep creek and Elizabeth and North rivers. The surface is level, and the soil generally sandy or swampy. A large portion of the Dismal swamp is comprised within this county. Indian corn, oats, and sweet potatoes are cultivated; and cypress lumber is one of the principal exports. In 1850 this county produced 307,245 bushels of corn, and 21,303 of sweet potatoes. There were 3 ship-yards, 1 cordage and 3 saw manufactories, 2 iron foundries, and 1 machine shop. It contained 36 churches, 13 newspaper offices, 1924 pupils attending public schools, and 363 attending academies or other schools. The county is intersected by the Dismal Swamp canal, which connects the Chesapeake with Albemarle sound, and by the Portsmouth and Roanoke railroad. Capital, Portsmouth.

Population, 33,036; of whom 22,636 were free, and 10,400, slaves.

NORFOLK, a post-township of Litchfield co., Connecticut, about 35 miles N. W. by W. from Hartford. Population, 3953.

NORFOLK, a post-township in the N. part of St. Lawrence co., New York. Population, 1753.

NORFOLK, a city, and port of entry of Norfolk county, Virginia, is situated on the right or N. bank of Elizabeth river, 8 miles from Hampton Roads, 32 miles from the sea, 160 miles by water or 106 miles by land S. E. from Richmond. Lat. 36° 51' N. Lon., 76° 19' W. The river, which is seven-eighths of a mile wide, separates it from Portsmouth. Next to Richmond, Norfolk is the most populous city of Virginia. It has more foreign commerce than any other place in the state, and together with Portsmouth is the most important naval station in the Union. The harbor is large, safe, and easily accessible, admitting vessels of the largest class to come to the wharves. The tonnage of this port in 1851 was 23,661. The site of the city is almost a dead level; the plan is somewhat irregular; the streets are wide, mostly well built with brick or stone houses, and lighted with gas. The most conspicuous public buildings are the City Hall, which has a granite front, a cupola 110 feet high, and a portico of six Tuscan columns; its dimensions are 80 feet by 60: the Norfolk Military Academy, a Doric structure 91 feet by 47, with a portico of six columns at each end: the Mechanics' Hall, a Gothic building 90 feet by 60: Ashland Hall, and a Baptist church, with a steeple 200 feet high. It also contains 14 churches, 1 of which is Roman Catholic, 9 seminaries, a hospital, an orphan asylum, 3 banks, and 2 reading rooms. Five newspapers are published here. The trade of Norfolk is facilitated by the Dismal Swamp canal, which opens a communication between Chesapeake bay and Albemarle sound, and by the Seaboard and Roanoke railroad, which connects it with the towns of North and South Carolina. The canal, constructed with great labor through the Dismal Swamp is navigable by schooners, and brings to this place a very extensive trade in corn and lumber. Within a few years past many substantial warehouses and handsome dwellings have been erected, giving evidence of its increased prosperity, consequent on these internal improvements. Norfolk communicates with New York and Philadelphia by regular lines of ocean steamers. A railroad is projected from this city to Petersburg. The entrance of the harbor is defended by Forts Calhoun and Monroe. The capital invested in manufactures is about \$570,000, and the value of the annual productions is estimated at \$1,140,000. The reported value of real estate is \$5,000,000. The shipping of the port, June 30, 3852, amounted to an aggregate of 7716 $\frac{4}{5}$ tons registered, and 14,447 $\frac{7}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 13,083 $\frac{6}{8}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 936 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 85, (tons, 20,778,) of which 59 (tons, 13,580) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 129, (tons, 24,447,) of which 94 (tons, 17,886) were by American vessels. During the year, 6 vessels, with an aggregate burthen of 408 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons, were admeasured. Norfolk was laid out in 1705, incorporated as a borough in 1736, and as a city in 1845. In 1776 it was burnt by the British. Population in 1850, 14,326; in 1853, about 16,000.

NORMAL COLLEGE, a post-office of Randolph co., North Carolina.

NORMANDY, a post-village of Tipton co., Indiana, about 40 miles N. from Indianapolis.

NORMAN'S HILL, a post-office of Albany co., New York.

NORMAN'S KILL RIVER, Albany co., New York, enters the Hudson river, about 15 miles S. of Troy.

NORRIDGEWOCK, a post-village, capital of Somerset co., Maine, on the S. side of Kennebec river, about 28 miles N. of Augusta. It contains a church and an academy. Population of the township, 1848.

NORRIS CREEK, a post-office of Lincoln co., Tennessee.

NORRIS FALLS, a small manufacturing village of Cuyahoga co., Ohio, on a branch of Rocky river.

NORRIS FORK, a post-office of Henry co., Mo.

NORRISTOWN, a handsome town, capital of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Schuylkill river, 91 miles E. from Harrisburg, and 17 miles N. W. from Philadelphia, with which it is connected by railroad. The situation is elevated and beautiful; the town is regularly planned, and built in a neat and substantial manner. Brick and stone are the materials employed almost exclusively. The new court house, which was commenced in 1851, will be one of the most splendid and costly buildings of its class in the United States. The material is a native marble, of a light gray color, and the cost is estimated at $150,000. It contains a handsome county prison, a bank, a public library, 9 or 10 churches, and 3 or 4 flourishing boarding schools, 2 of which have large and elegant buildings situated on high ground in the S. E. part of the town; 4 newspapers are published here. The Schuylkill river is crossed by two substantial covered bridges, about 800 feet in length, one of which leads to the borough of Bridgeport, on the opposite bank. Gaslight has been introduced, during the present year, 1853. Norristown is the E. terminus of the Chester Valley railroad, 22 miles in length, which intersects the Columbia railroad at Downingtown. The improved navigation of the river affords facilities for the trade of this town, which is active and increasing. The Reading railroad which passes along the opposite bank of the river, opens a ready communication to the coal mines of Schuylkill county. The abundant water-power of the river is used in two large cotton factories, which employ several hundred operatives, and in several rolling mills and nail factories. Pop. in 1850, 6024.

NORRISTOWN, a post-village in Pope co., Arkansas, on Arkansas river, 65 miles N. W. by W. from Little Rock.

NORRISTOWN, a post-village of Carroll co., Ohio, 130 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

NORRISVILLE, a village in Wilcox co., Ala., 65 miles S. W. by W. from Montgomery.

NORRISON, a township of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river. It contains Norristown. Entire pop., 7618.

NORRITONVILLE, a small post-village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, 3 or 4 miles N. from Norristown.

NORTH, a township in the N. part of Harrison co., Ohio. Population, 1123.

NORTH, a township in Lake co., Indiana. Population, 97.

NORTH, a township in Cook co., Illinois. Population, 589.

NORTH ABINGTON, a village of Plymouth co., Massachusetts, on the Old Colony railroad, 18 miles S. S. E. from Boston.

NORTH ACTON, a post-office of York co., Me.

NORTH ADAMS, a post-village of Adams township, Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the Hoosick river, at the northern terminus of the Pittsfield and North Adams railroad, 20 miles N. by E. from Pittsfield, and by railroad 171 miles W. by N. from Boston. It is one of the largest manufacturing villages in the county. There are in the place a number of churches, a bank, several printing offices, and numerous mills and factories. Population, about 3000.

NORTH ADAMS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

NORTH ADAMS, a post-office of Hillsdale co., Michigan.

NORTH ADRIAN, a post-office of Lenawee co., Michigan.

NORTH ALBANY, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH ALMOND, a post-office of Alleghany co., New York.

NORTH AMENIA, a village of Dutchess co., New York.

NORTH AMERICA MINE, a post-office of Houghton co., Michigan.

NORTH AMHERST, a post-village of Hampshire co., Massachusetts.

NORTHAMPTON, a county in the E. part of Pennsylvania, bordering on New Jersey, has an area of 370 square miles. The Delaware river forms the entire E. boundary; the Lehigh flows through the S. part of the county, and it is drained also by Martin's, Monocacy, Saucun, and Bushkill creeks. The Kittatinny or Blue mountain forms its boundary on the N. W., and the South mountain on the S. E. The greater part of the county consists of the valley between these mountains. The surface of the valley is nearly level; the soil is highly productive and mostly well cultivated. Wheat, rye, Indian corn, and grass are the staples. In 1850 it produced 105,147 bushels of wheat; 136,668 bushels of corn; 7126 tons of hay, and 205,100 pounds of butter. There were 84 flour and grist mills, 2 iron furnaces, 7 foundries, 1 forge, 26 manufacturing of saddles and harness, and 3 of guns, 15 saw mills, 1 rolling mill, 1 cotton factory, 21 distilleries, and 24 tanneries. It contained 46 churches, 8 newspaper offices; 7243 pupils attending public schools, and 374 attending academies and other schools. The valley is occupied by beds of limestone of good quality; the county contains valuable quarries of slate, and several mines of iron are worked. It is liberally supplied with water-power. The Delaware canal and that of the Lehigh meet at Easton, and contribute greatly to the wealth and prosperity of the county. The central railroad of New Jersey extends from Easton to New York city, and another is in progress from Easton to Philadelphia. Organized in 1752, and named from Northampton county, England. Capital, Easton. Population, 40,235.

NORTHAMPTON, a county in the S. E. part of Virginia, is situated on the eastern shore of Chesapeake bay, and forms the S. extremity of the peninsula which extends between that bay and the sea. The length is 36 miles, and the area 320 square miles. It is indented by numerous inlets on each side. The surface is level; the soil light and sandy. Indian corn and oats are the staples; fish and oysters are abundant. In 1850 there were raised 364,967 bushels of corn; 184,087 of oats, and 44,189 of sweet potatoes. There were 3 castor-oil mills, and 3 coach manufacturing; 10 churches, and 622 pupils attending public schools. Northampton was one of the 8 original shires formed in 1634. Capital, Eastville. Population, 7498, of whom 3850 were free, and 3648, slaves.

NORTHAMPTON, a county in the N. N. E. part of North Carolina, bordering on Virginia, has an area estimated at 350 square miles. The Meherrin river washes the N. E. border, and the Roanoke forms the boundary on the S. W. for a distance of above 50 miles. The surface is diversified; the soil is generally fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1378 bales of cotton; 657,951 bushels of corn, and 27,100 pounds of tobacco. There were 6 stave manufacturing and 1 shingle mill. It contained 8 churches; 343 pupils attending public schools, and 173 attending academies and other schools. Roanoke river is navigated by steamboats on the border. The county is intersected by the Seaboard and Roanoke railroad, and by the Greenville and Roanoke railroad. Capital, Jackson. Formed in 1741. Population, 13,335, of whom 6824 were free, and 6511, slaves.

NORTHAMPTON, a beautiful post-village and seat of justice of Hampshire county, Massachusetts, on the Connecticut River railroad, 17 miles N. from Springfield. It is delightfully situated on rising ground, about a mile W. from Connecticut river, and contains, besides the county buildings, 4 or 5 churches, 2 banks, with an aggregate capital of $400,000, 2 newspaper offices, and a number of fine schools. West of the village the ground rises into a considerable elevation, called Round Hill, which is the site of several splendid residences, and has on its summit an extensive water-cure establishment. Northampton is celebrated for its healthy atmosphere and magnificent scenery—Mount Tom and Mount Holyoke being in full view. For several years past the rearing of the silkworm has been successfully prosecuted, and large quantities of sewing silk annually made. Population of the township in 1840, 3750; in 1850, 5278.

NORTHAMPTON, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Fulton co., New York. Population, 1701.

NORTHAMPTON, a township of Burlington co., New Jersey, about 18 miles S. S. E. from Trenton. Population, 3031.

NORTHAMPTON, Pa. See ALLENTOWN.

NORTHAMPTON, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles S. E. from Doylestown. Population, 1843.

NORTHAMPTON, a township of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania. Population, 332.

NORTHAMPTON, a township in the central part of Summit co., Ohio. Population, 1147.

NORTHAMPTON, a post-township in the S. part of Saginaw co., Michigan. Pop., 122.

NORTHAMPTON, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Peoria co., Illinois. Pop., 316.

NORTH ANDOVER, a post-village of Essex county, Massachusetts, 23 miles N. from Boston. Near the northern part of the village is Great Pond, covering about 450 acres. The outlet of this into the Merrimack affords good water-power, which is employed in manufacturing.

NORTH ANNA, a small river in the eastern part of Virginia, rises in Louisa and Orange counties, flows south-eastward, forming the boundary between Louisa and Hanover on the right, and Spottsylvania and Caroline on the left, and unites with South Anna river, near the southern extremity of the latter counties, a few miles above Hanover Court House. The river formed by this confluence is the Pamunkey. The North Anna affords a copious supply of water-power in the lower part of its course.

NORTH ANSON, a post-township of Somerset co., Maine, on the W. side of Kennebec river, about 40 miles N. by W. from Augusta. Population, 1168.

NORTH ANVILLE, a township in the W. part of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1321.

NORTH APPLETON, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH ARGYLE, a post-village of Washington co., N. Y., 50 miles N. N. E. from Albany.

NORTH ASHFORD, a post-village in Windham co., Connecticut.

NORTH ATTLEBOROUGH, a manufacturing post-village of Attleborough township, Bristol co., Massachusetts, 30 miles S. by W. from Boston.

NORTH AUBURN, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

NORTH AUGUSTA, a village in Des Moines co., Iowa, near Des Moines river, 70 miles S. by E. from Iowa City.

NORTH BANGOR, a post-village in Penobscot co., Maine.

NORTH BANGOR, a post-office of Franklin co., New York.

NORTH BARNSTEAD, a post-office of Belknap co., New Hampshire.

NORTH BARRINGTON, a post-office of Stratford co., New Hampshire.

NORTH BARTON, a post-office of Tioga co. N. Y.

NORTH BAY, a post-office of Oneida co., N. Y.

NORTH BEAVER, a township of Lawrence co., Pennsylvania, on Beaver river. Pop., 2404.

NORTH BECKET, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the Western railroad, about 70 miles from Boston.

NORTH BELGRADE, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH BELLINGHAM, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

NORTH BELLEVILLE, a village of Hendricks co., Indiana, on the Terre Haute and Indianapolis railroad, 19 miles W. by S. from Indianapolis.

NORTH BELMONT, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH BEND, a post-office of DeKalb co., Ala.

NORTH BEND, a post-township in Stark co., Indiana. Population, 141.

NORTH BEND, of Hamilton co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, 16 miles below Cincinnati. It is a beautiful spot, which derives its interest from having been the residence of General W. H. Harrison, late president of the United States. The house now occupied by his widow is of wood, and painted white. The tomb of Harrison is a few rods from the bank of the river.

NORTH BEND, a small village of Champaign co., Illinois.

NORTH BEND, a township in Washington co., Wisconsin. Population, 672.

NORTH BEND MILLS, a post-office of Tyler co., Virginia.

NORTH BENNINGTON, a post-village of Bennington township, Bennington county, Vermont, about 4 miles N. W. from Bennington. Centre, on Paran creek, a branch of the Wallomsoick. It contains 5 or 6 stores, a number of cotton and woollen mills, and 2 or 3 establishments for the manufacture of carpenters' steel squares. The first manufactory of the kind in the United States was established here in 1820. These squares are said to be superior to any imported, and to supersede the foreign article in the market. Population, about 300.

NORTH BENTON, a post-office of Mahoning co., Ohio.

NORTH BENTONSPORT, a village in Van Buren co., Iowa, on Des Moines river, 75 miles S. by W. from Iowa City.

NORTH BERGEN, a post-village of Genesee co., N. Y., 240 miles W. by N. from Albany.

NORTH BERGEN, a township of Hudson co., New Jersey, on the Hudson river, and on the Ramapo and Paterson railroad, nearly opposite New York city. Population, 3576.

NORTH BERNARDSTON, a post-office of Franklin co., Massachusetts.

NORTH BERWICK, a post-township in York co., Maine, on the Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth railroad, 90 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 1593.

NORTH BETHEL, post-office, Oxford co., Me.

NORTH BILLERICA, or BILLERICA MILLS, a thriving manufacturing post-village of Middlesex county, Massachusetts, on the Concord river, and on the Boston and Lowell railroad, 21 miles N. by W. from Boston.

NORTH BLACKSTONE, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

NORTH BLANFORD, a post-office of Hampden co., Massachusetts.

NORTH BLENHEIM, a post-village of Schoharie co., New York, on Schoharie river, about 40 miles W. S. W. from Albany.

NORTH BLOOMFIELD, a post-village of Ontario co., New York, on Honeoye creek, about 210 miles W. from Albany.

NORTH BLOOMFIELD, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Morrow co., Ohio. Population, 1443.

NORTH BLOOMFIELD, a post-office of Trumbull co., Ohio.

NORTH BLUE HILL, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH BOOTHBAY, a post-village in Lincoln co., Maine.

NORTHBOROUGH, a township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 35 miles W. of Boston. Population, 1535.

NORTH BOSQUE CREEK, Texas, enters the Brazos river from the N. W. in McLennan county.

NORTH BOSTON, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

NORTH BRANCH, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

NORTH BRANCH, a post-office of Sullivan co., New York.

NORTH BRANCH, or BAILIE'S, a small post-village and railway station of Bridgewater township, Somerset co., New Jersey, about 5 miles N. W. from Somerville. Pop., 130.

NORTH BRANCH, a post-office of Baltimore co., Maryland.

NORTH BRANCH, a post-office of Calaveras co., California.

NORTH BRANFORD, a post-township of New Haven co., Connecticut, 8 miles E. by N. from New Haven. Population, 998.

NORTHBIDGE, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, intersected by the Blackstone river and canal, and by the Providence and Worcester railroad. Pop., 2230.

NORTHBIDGE CENTRE, a post-village in the above township, 38 miles S. W. by W. of Boston.

NORTH BRIDGETON, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

NORTH BRIDGEWATER, a flourishing post-village of Plymouth co., Massachusetts, on the Fall River railroad, 21 miles S. from Boston. It contains 3 or 4 churches, and a newspaper office. Population of the township, 3940.

NORTH BRIDGEWATER, a post-office of Oneida co., New York.

NORTH BRIGHTON, a post-office of Livingston co., Michigan.

NORTH BROADALBIN, a post-office of Fulton co., New York.

NORTH BROOKFIELD, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 55 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 1939.

NORTH BROOKFIELD, a post-office of Madison co., New York.

NORTH BROWN, a township in Vinton co., Ohio. Population, 439.

NORTH BROWNSVILLE, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

NORTH BRUNSWICK, a township of Middlesex co., New Jersey, on the Raritan river, contains the city of New Brunswick. Population, 10,008.

NORTH BUCKSPORT, a post-village in Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH BUFFALO, a township in the W. part of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 916.

NORTH BUTLER, a township of Butler co., Pennsylvania, contains Butler, the county seat. Total population, 2581.

NORTH CAMBRIDGE, a post-office of Lamoille co., Vermont.

NORTH CAMBRIDGE, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

NORTH CAMDEN, a post-office of Lorain co., Ohio.

NORTH CAMERON, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

NORTH CAMERON, a post-office of Kent co., Michigan.

NORTH CANTON, a post-village of Hartford co., Connecticut.

NORTH CANYONVILLE, a post-office of Umpqua co., Oregon.

NORTH CAROLINA, one of the original states of the American confederacy, is bounded on the N. by Virginia, E. and S. E. by the Atlantic, S. by South Carolina and Georgia, and N. W. by Tennessee, from which it is separated by the Iron and other mountains of the Appalachian chain. It lies between about 33° 53' and 36° 33' N. lat., and between 75° 25' and 84° 30' W. lon., being about 450 miles in length, and 180 in its greatest breadth, including an area of 45,000 square miles, or about 28,800,000 acres, of which only 5,453,977 were improved in 1850.

Population.—At the first national census, in 1790, North Carolina had 393,751 inhabitants; 478,103 in 1800; 555,500 in 1810; 638,829 in 1820; 737,987 in 1830; 753,419 in 1840, and 868,903 in 1850, of whom 272,839 were white males, 280,189 white females, 13,298 free colored males, 14,165 free colored females, 144,679 male, and 143,733 female slaves, and 831 Indians. This population was divided among 106,023 families, occupying 105,542 dwellings. Of the free population, 394 were born in England, 567 in Ireland, 1019 in Scotland and Wales, 344 in Germany, 43 in France, 137 in other countries, and 217 whose places of birth were unknown. In the twelve months ending June 1st, 1850, there occurred 10,207 deaths, or nearly 12 in every 1000 persons. In the same period 1931 paupers received aid, of whom 18 were foreigners, at an expense of about $31 for each individual. Of 407 deaf and dumb, 4 were free colored, and 52 slaves; of 532 blind, 28 were free colored, and 117 slaves; of 491 insane, 5 were free colored, and 24 slaves; and of 774 idiotic, 32 were free colored, and 138 slaves.

Counties.—North Carolina is divided into 82 counties, viz. Alamance, Alexander, Anson, Ashe, Beaufort, Bertie, Bladen, Brunswick, Buncombe, Burke, Cabarrus, Caldwell, Camden, Carteret, Caswell, Catawba, Chatham, Cherokee, Chowan, Cleveland, Columbus, Craven, Cumberland, Currituck, Davidson, Davie, Duplin, Edgecombe, Forsythe, Franklin, Gaston, Gates, Granville, Greene, Guilford, Halifax, Haywood, Henderson, Hertford, Hyde, Iredell, Jackson, Johnston, Jones, Lenoir, Lincoln, McDowell, Macon, Madison, Martin, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Moore, Nash, New Hanover, Northampton, Onslow, Orange, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Person, Pitt, Randolph, Richmond, Robeson, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Sampson, Stanley, Stokes, Surry, Tyrrel, Union, Wake, Warren, Washington, Watauga, Wayne, Wilkes, Yadkin, Yancey. Capital, Raleigh.

Cities and Towns.—Wilmington is the largest and most commercial town in the state; population, in 1850, 7264. The other principal towns are Fayetteville, population, 4648; and Raleigh, population, 4518. The other important places are Beaufort, Newbern, Edenton, Warrentown, Washington, Tarborough, and Plymouth.

Face of the Country, and Mountains.—The S. E. and E. portion of North Carolina is level and sandy, and often marshy, interspersed with shallow lakes, especially between Albemarle and Pamlico sounds. A chain of low islands, or sandbanks, lines the whole coast, cutting off a series of shallow sounds, or lagoons, of difficult navigation. The Great Dismal Swamp, partly in the N. E. of this state, and partly in Virginia, is a spongy mass, that is said to be higher than the surrounding country, and to hold the water by capillary attraction. The Little Dismal Swamp lies between the two great sounds. The level region extends about 60 miles from the coast, and is succeeded by the hill country in the centre, which is followed, in turn, by the mountainous region of the west, formed by the passage of several ridges of the great Alleghany range in a S. W. direction through the state. These mountains vary from 800 to above 6000 feet in elevation. Mount Mitchell, or Black mountain, is in the N. W. part of the state, and is the highest summit E. of the Mississippi river.—See MOUNT MITCHELL. The other considerable peaks are Roan mountain, 6038 feet, Grandfather mountain, 5556 feet, and Grandmother mountain, 2500 feet high. That part of the Alleghany range which separates Tennessee from North Carolina goes under various local names, such as Iron, Stone, Smoky, Bald, and Unaka mountains. Between these and the Blue ridge is a tableland elevated from 2000 to 2500 feet above the sea.

Minerals.—North Carolina is rich in mineral treasures, especially in gold, copper, iron, and coal. The McCullock gold and copper mine, near Greensborough, has for some time attracted much attention. A recent report of the president of the company working the mines claims for it “that nothing on this continent, in the shape of mining enterprise, can compare with that of the McCullock Copper and Gold Company, in position and resources.” This is, no doubt, highly colored, but has, probably, considerable foundation in fact. The report also states that the gold refuse will yield, by aid of crushers, $2.75 per bushel on the average, and fresh gold ore $12, and that 3 negroes can take out 10 tons of copper ore in a day. Professor Jackson (a more impartial authority) considers the copper region of North Carolina unparalleled in richness. Between 1843 and 1851, at Gold hill, in the gold region W. of the Yadkin river, $801,665 were mined. Coal, both bituminous and anthracite, exists in large quantities, the former of the best quality. The greatest known coalfields in North Carolina are the Deep River, extending from Granville county S. W. into South Carolina, and the Dan River in Rockingham and Stoke counties. This coal, it is said, can be brought to tidewater at an expense of $1 per ton, whence it can be easily and cheaply transhipped to the different ports on the Atlantic coast. The coal, however, is most abundant on the Deep river, and extends at least for 30 miles, is near navigable water, and could be carried easily to any market on the coast. Professor Emmons says of the Deep River coal "its qualities are such as to give it the highest place in the market, being adapted to all purposes for which the bituminous coals are specially employed." The same authority remarks, "iron occupies an important place in North Carolina, and its advantages for making bar iron of the best quality are very great." Marl is also abundant, being found in the coast counties from Virginia to South Carolina, as far from the coast as Nash county. Large supplies of limestone, (from Danbury, in Stokes county, to King's mountain, South Carolina,) and freestone, (soft, and easy to work, but which hardens on exposure,) are furnished in inexhaustible quantities on the Dan and Deep rivers; grindstones of the best quality, and millstones, (as good as the French burr,) on Deep river. Magnetic iron ore, some silver, lead, manganese, gypsum, and salt have also been found.

Rivers, Lakes, and Sounds.—There are two shallow sounds—Albemarle in the N. E., and Pamlico in the E. of the state—which are cut off from the ocean by long and narrow sandbanks or islands, through which there are inlets to the sea; but these are constantly changing—the old filling up with the shifting sands, and new ones being opened by the beating of the surges. The principal at the present time are Ocracoke and Roanoke inlets. Albemarle sound extends about 60 miles westward, with a varying breadth of from 5 to 15 miles. It has several arms or bays, and communicates with Pamlico sound, which extends 86 miles in a S. W. direction, parallel with the coast, having a somewhat greater breadth than Albemarle sound, and 20 feet depth of water. The Hatteras banks, which cut it off from the ocean, extend far out to sea in the well known and dangerous point of Cape Hatteras. Further down the coast are the prominent points of Cape Lookout and Cape Fear. In the low marshy grounds between these sounds are several small lakes. A chain of low islands, or sandbanks, extends to the mouth of Cape Fear river, cutting off several small sounds and lagoons. North Carolina is traversed by several extensive rivers, all—with the exception of a few small tributaries of the Tennessee—running in a S. E. direction through the state and discharging themselves into the Atlantic, after courses of from about 200 to 400 miles. Commencing on the N. E., the Chowan and Roanoke rise in Virginia, and empty into Albemarle sound. The Tar and the Neuse rise in the N. of North Carolina, and empty into Pamlico sound. The Cape Fear, the largest river that has its whole course in the state, rises in the N., and empties into the Atlantic at the S. extremity of the state. The Yadkin and Catawba rise in the N. W. and pass into South Carolina, where the former takes the name of the Great Pedee, and the latter of the Wateree. The Wacamaw, also an eastern tributary of the Great Pedee, rises in the S. part of this state. Besides these, there are a number of tributaries of the Tennessee, Congaree, and other rivers, already named. The rivers of North Carolina are so obstructed by sandbanks at their mouths, and by rapids and falls farther up, as not to be navigable for vessels of a large class. The Cape Fear is navigable 40 miles to Wilmington for vessels drawing 10 or 12 feet water, and to Fayetteville for steamboats. Small craft ascend the Neuse to Newbern, and steamboats 120 miles to Waynesborough. The Tar is navigable for steamboats 100 miles to Tarborough; the Roanoke for small seacraft 30 miles, and for steamboats 120 miles to Halifax; and the Chowan for steamboats 75 miles.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—We cannot pretend to do any justice to North Carolina in this respect, as the facilities for travelling in that state are very poor in the region of her finest scenery. Of Black mountain or Mitchell's Peak, the highest point E. of the Mississippi, we have but little to state, except its situation between Yancey and McDowell counties, 20 miles N. E. from Asheville, and its height, 6476 ft. It commands a magnificent view of Swannanoa Gap, a pass in the mountains between Morgantown and Asheville. Near it are the picturesque Catawba falls. Pilot mountain, in Surrey county, rises in the midst of a nearly level country, in a cylindrical form. It received its name from having served as a beacon to guide the path of the Indians. In Buncombe county, on the French Broad river, in the midst of wild and romantic mountain scenery, are the Warm Springs. The principal hotel at this place is 280 feet in length. Painted Rock, a lofty precipice, from 200 to 300 feet high, and a rock called the Chimneys, are in the same vicinity. The Gingercake Rock, in Burke county, on the top of a mountain of the same name, is a curious pile of stone in the form of an inverted pyramid, 29 feet high, which supports a natural slab of stone 32 feet long and 2 feet thick, projecting about half its length beyond the edge of the inverted pyramid, and resting with the most perfect stability, though apparently just ready to fall. The view from this point is very fine, looking down a ravine of from 800 to 1200 feet in depth, with a river at its bottom, dashing over its rocky bed, and a cliff, called the Hawk's Bill, projecting over it, at an elevation of 1500 feet. About 5 miles from the same point may be seen Table Rock, a conical eminence of 2500 feet, rearing itself from the valley of the Catawba river.

Climate.—The climate in the low countries is hot and unhealthy in summer, bilious and intermittent fevers prevailing; but the middle and western sections are temperate and healthy. Wheat is harvested in June, and Indian corn in September. According to meteological observations made at Chapel Hill, by Professor Phillips, in 1851-2, the monthly mean for June was 72°.82; for July, 79°.46; August, 70°.05; September, 68°.07; October, 59°.18; November, 46°.92; December, 39°.45; January, 36°.02; February, 45°.58; March, 53°.72; April, 56°.50; May, 68°.84. Mean for the year, 58°.46. First frost, October 24th. Frogs singing, 11th February. Hottest day, July 27th—102° at 3 P. M.; coldest day, January 20th—22° at 3 P. M. It rained on 102 days; there were some clouds on 326; and perfectly clear 40 days. The apricot bloomed the 29th of February, and the apple the 12th of March.

Soil and Productions.—The soil possesses every variety, from the sands and marshes of the coast to the rich alluvions of the river bottoms. Some of the smaller marshes that have been drained have proved highly productive in rice, cotton, tobacco, and Indian corn. Much of the low sandy section, extending 60 miles from the coast, is covered with extensive forests of pitch pine, that furnish large quantities of lumber, tar, turpentine, and resin, which are exported to the Northern cities. In parts of this region, cotton, rice, and indigo grow well; but the higher grounds are better adapted to wheat, Indian corn, hemp, tobacco, rye, and oats. The staples are Indian corn, tobacco, and sweet potatoes. In the latter article North Carolina is only exceeded by three states; in tobacco, by five; while it exceeds every other state in peas and beans. Large quantities of wheat, rye, oats, Irish potatoes, cotton, wool, rice, fruits, butter, cheese, garden vegetables, hay, flax, grass-seeds, beeswax, honey, and some barley, buckwheat, wine, hops, hemp, silk, and maple sugar are produced. According to the census of 1850, there were in the state 56,916 farms, containing 5,453,977 acres of improved land, (or about 90 acres to each farm,) producing 2,130,102 bushels of wheat; 229,563 of rye; 27,941,051 of Indian corn; 4,052,078 of oats; 1,584,252 of peas and beans; 620,318 of Irish potatoes; 5,095,709 of sweet potatoes; 38,196 of flaxseed; 5,465,868 pounds of rice; 11,984,786 of tobacco; 29,589,600 of cotton; 970,738 of wool; 4,146,290 of butter; 95,921 of cheese; 145,662 tons of hay; 593,796 pounds of flax; 27,932 of maple sugar; 512,289 of beeswax and honey. Live stock valued at $17,717,647; orchard products at $34,348; market products at $39,462; and slaughtered animals at $5,767,866.

Forest Trees.—In the upland country are oaks of several species, hickory, maple, ash, walnut, and lime; in the low country, pine; and in the swamps also pine, cedar, cypress, with some maple, white oak, poplar, and an undergrowth of vines, briars, &c., so dense as to be impassable. In the drier parts, white and red oaks flourish. Among the fruits are apples, pears, peaches, cherries, grapes, and strawberries.

Manufactures.—Professor Emmons, in his geological report of 1852, remarks—“The water-power is immense, and the improvements on Cape Fear and Deep rivers will furnish water for several Lowells.” North Carolina, however, has not yet applied much of her great and extended supply of water-power to manufacturing purposes. By the census of 1850, she had 2523 manufacturing establishments, each producing $500 and upward annually: 28 of these were cotton factories, employing 1,058,800 capital, and 442 male, and 1177 female hands; consuming raw material worth $531,903, and producing 2,470,110 yards of stuff, and 2,267,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $831,342; one woollen factory, employing $18,000 capital, and 15 male, and 15 female hands, consuming raw material worth $13,950, and producing 34,000 yards of stuff, valued at $23,750; 26 furnaces, forges, &c., employing $139,500 capital, and 214 male hands, consuming raw material worth $64,355, and producing 1422 tons of wrought, cast, and pig iron, valued at $92,347; $21,930 were invested in the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors, consuming 64,650 bushels of corn, and 4700 of rye, employing 75 hands, and producing 153,030 gallons of wine and whiskey; and 151 tanneries, employing $251,055 capital, consuming raw material worth $191,237, and producing manufactured leather valued at $352,585. Homemade manufactures to the value of $2,086,522 were produced in 1850.—See Table of Manufactures, APPENDIX.

Internal Improvements.—The great Southern railroad crosses the entire State of North Carolina, having its terminus at Wilmington. There is also a railroad from Gaston to Raleigh, and one from Weldon to Portsmouth, Virginia. The Gaston and Raleigh road has been purchased by the state, to save its own mortgage on it. A road is in progress from the Wilmington and Raleigh railroad in Wayne county, to Charlotte, to which the state is to subscribe $2,000,000 when individuals shall have contributed $1,000,000. In January, 1853, North Carolina had 249 miles of railroad completed, and 223 in course of construction, since which time a road has been opened from Wilmington through Manchester, South Carolina, to Camden Branch railroad, and from Charlotte, North Carolina, to Columbia, South Carolina.—See APPENDIX. The Dismal Swamp canal unites the Pasquotank with the Elizabeth river, in Virginia. Companies have been formed for the improvement of the navigation of the Cape Fear, Roanoke, and Neuse rivers, to all of which the state is a subscriber. The Club-foot and Harlow creek canal, in which the state holds 30 shares, was projected in 1826 and connects the Neuse with Beaufort harbor. A board of internal improvement, consisting of two members, was established in 1825.

Commerce.—As has been elsewhere stated, the rivers of North Carolina are obstructed at their mouths by shifting sands, which prevent the entrance of large vessels; and hence the commerce of this state is limited to the export of her products to the ports of the neighboring states in coasting vessels. North Carolina exports large quantities of lumber, pitch, tar, resin, and turpentine, with some rice, cotton, and other products. The export of naval stores (pitch, tar, resin, and turpentine) exceeds that of any other, if not all the states in the Union combined. About 800,000 barrels of turpentine are annually exported, and (in 1851-52) 16,242 bales of cotton. The tonnage of North Carolina in 1851-52 was 50,621 $\frac{2}{3}$ of which more than three-fifths was in the coasting trade; tonnage entered, 32,295; tonnage cleared, 53,099; number of vessels built, 32, with a tonnage of 2,228 $\frac{3}{4}$. The foreign imports amounted to \$735,858, and the exports to \$576,399.

Education.—Common school education is at a low ebb in this state. According to Wheeler, her own historian, 1 out of every 7 white persons over 20 years of age can neither read nor write; and by the United States census of 1850, there were 71,150 white persons over 21 years of age in that state of ignorance. Yet their statesmen have not been indifferent to this subject. The state appropriates $100,000 a year from the literary fund for the payment of common-school teachers; and in 1850 there were 72,232 children in North Carolina, for whose education $124,300 was raised by taxation. There were in 1852, 3 colleges, with an aggregate of 335 students, and 23,000 volumes in their libraries. North Carolina University, at Chapel Hill, is the most important of these. There is one law school with 10, and one medical school with 158 students.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX.

Religious Denominations.—Of the 1678 churches in North Carolina in 1850, the Baptists owned 573; the Christians, 29; the Episcopalians, 47; the Free Church, 51; the Friends, 30; the German Reformed, 15; the Lutherans, 47; the Methodists, 727; the Presbyterians, 143; and the Roman Catholics, 4. The rest belonged to the Moravians, Tunkers, and Unionists—giving 1 church to every 517 persons. Value of church property, $889,392.—See Table of Religions, APPENDIX.

Public Institutions.—A state insane asylum is now in course of erection near Raleigh. A special tax has been levied for four years for this purpose, which is expected to yield $80,000. A deaf and dumb asylum is also being erected at the same place, towards which the state has contributed $30,000. In 1850 there were 8 public libraries, with 24,247 volumes.

Government, Finances, &c.—In addition to the usual division of the governmental power, there is in North Carolina a council of state, consisting of 7 persons, receiving $3 per day while in service, and a like sum for every 30 miles' travelling. The executive power is vested in a governor, elected by the people for two years, and receiving an annual salary of $2000, with fees. The senate is composed of fifty members, elected for two years, by freeholders possessing fifty acres of land; and a house of representatives, of 120 members, elected for 2 years also. Every white man over 21 years of age, who has resided in the state a twelvemonth, is a voter. The judiciary consists—1. Of a supreme court, composed of a chief-justice and two associate judges, receiving salaries of $2500 per annum; 2. Of superior or circuit courts, whose judges receive $1950 per annum. The judges of both courts are elected by the two houses of the legislature on joint ballot, and hold office during good behaviour. There are 7 circuits of 10 counties each. North Carolina is entitled to 8 members in the national house of representatives, and to 10 electoral votes for president. The state is undergoing a geological and botanical survey by direction of the government. The state liabilities, mostly arising from endorsements of internal improvement bonds, was in 1852, $977,000. The expenses of the state for 1850 were $228,173.24, of which $30,000 were for the judiciary; $45,000 for the legislature; $10,000 for the executive, and $70,000 for interest on internal improvement bonds endorsed by the state. Ordinary expenses, $75,000. Partial returns give the banking capital of North Carolina, in January, 1853, $3,050,000; circulation, $4,276,978.50, and coin, $1,388,545.73. Full returns in March, 1851, gave the capital as $3,650,000, and in January, 1852, $4,305,000. Assessed value of property in 1850, $212,071,413.

History.—Attempts were made, under the auspices of Sir Walter Raleigh, to settle North Carolina as early as between 1585 and 1589; but in one year after no trace of the colony could be found. The first permanent settlement was made on the banks of the Roanoke and Chowan by some emigrants from Virginia in 1653. John Culpepper rebelled against the arbitrary government of Miller in 1678, and held the government for two years. In 1693, North and South Carolina were separated. In 1711 the Tuscaroras, Corees, and other savages attacked and massacred 112 settlers, principally of the Roanoke and Chowan settlements; but the following year the united forces of the two Carolinas completely routed them, killing 300 savages. The same year the yellow fever raged. In 1729 the proprietors sold their rights to the crown. A party of malcontents in 1771 rose against the royal governor, but after two hours' contest, fled with considerable loss. A severe conflict with the North-west Indians occurred in 1774 on the Kanawha river, which resulted in the abandonment of the ground by the savages. North Carolina took an early and active part in the events of the Revolution, and within her borders took place sanguinary conflicts at Guilford Court House, Brier creek, Cedar spring, Fishing creek, and other places. The Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence was made May 20, 1775: so North Carolina has the honor to have first proposed a separation from Great Britain.

NORTH CARVER, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

NORTH CASTINE, a post-village of Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH CASTLE, a post-township of Westchester co., New York, 35 miles N. N. E. from New York. Population, 1800.

NORTH CENTRE HALL, a thriving village of Centre co., Pennsylvania, on the Bellefonte and Kishicoquillas turnpike, 78 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

NORTH CHARLESTON, a post-village, in Sullivan co., New Hampshire, on the Sullivan railroad, 50 miles W. by N. from Concord.

NORTH CHATHAM, a post-village in Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

NORTH CHATHAM, a post-village of Columbia co., N. Y., 15 miles S. E. from Albany.

NORTH CHATHAM, a post-office of Clinton co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH CHELMSFORD, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

NORTH CHELSEA, a post-township of Suffolk co., Massachusetts, on the Eastern railroad, 5 miles N. E. from Boston. Pop., 935.

NORTH CHEMUNG, a post-office of Chemung co., New York.

NORTH CHESTER, post-office, Windsor co., Vt.

NORTH CHESTER, a post-office of Hampden co., Massachusetts.

NORTH CHESTERTOWN, a post-office of Franklin co., Maine.

NORTH CHICHESTER, a post-village in Merrimack co., New Hampshire.

NORTH CHILL, a post-office of Monroe co. N. Y.

NORTH CLARENCE, a post-office of Erie co., New York.

NORTH CLARENDON, a post-office of Rutland co., Vermont.

NORTH CLARKSON, a post-office of Monroe co., New York.

NORTH CLAYTON, a post-office of Miami co., Ohio.

NORTH CODORUS, a township of York co., Pennsylvania, 7 miles S. W. from York. Population, 2126.

NORTH COHASSETT, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

NORTH COHOCTON, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

NORTH COLEBROOK, a post-office of Litchfield co., Connecticut.

NORTH CONWAY, a post-office of Carroll co., New Hampshire.

NORTH COPAKE, a post-office of Columbia co., New York.

NORTH CORNWELL, a post-office of Litchfield co., Connecticut.

NORTH COVE, a post-village of McDowell co., North Carolina.

NORTH COVE CREEK, of North Carolina, enters the Catawba from the N., in Burke county.

NORTH COVENTRY, a township forming the N. extremity of Chester co., Pa. Pop., 985.

NORTH CREEK, a post-office of Laurens district, South Carolina.

NORTH CREEK, a post-office of Beaufort co., North Carolina.

NORTH CREEK, a post-office of Phillips co., Arkansas.

NORTH CREEK, a township in Grundy co., Illinois. Population, 318.

NORTH CROSS CREEK, a small village of Stewart co., Tennessee.

NORTH CUTLER, a post-office of Washington co., Maine.

NORTH DANVILLE, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Livingston co., New York, contains the village of Dansville. Pop., 4377.

NORTH DANVER, a post-village in Essex co., Massachusetts, on the Essex railroad, 18 miles N. E. by E. of Boston, has 1 bank.

NORTH DANVILLE, a post-office of Caledonia co., Vermont.

NORTH DARTMOUTH, a post-village in Bristol co., Massachusetts.

NORTH DIGHTON, a post-office of Bristol co., Massachusetts.

NORTH DIXMONT, a post-village in Dixmont township, Penobscot co., Maine, about 44 miles N. E. from Augusta. It contains 2 stores.

NORTH DORSET, a post-office of Bennington co., Vermont.

NORTH DOVER, a post-office of Cuyahoga co., Ohio.

NORTH DUANESBURG, a post-office of Schenectady co., New York.

NORTH DUNBARTON, a post-village in Merrimack co., New Hampshire.

NORTH-EAST, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Dutchess co., New York. Population, 1555.

NORTH-EAST, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Erie co., Pennsylvania, on Lake Erie. Population, 2766.

NORTH-EAST, a flourishing post-borough in the above township, on the Erie and North East railroad, 16 miles N. E. from Erie. It is surrounded by a rich farming country. Population in 1850, 387.

NORTH-EAST, a post-village of Cecil co., Maryland, on the river of its own name, and on the railroad between Philadelphia and Baltimore, 46 miles N. E. from the latter.

NORTH-EAST, a township in Orange co., Indiana. Population, 1206.

NORTH-EAST, a township in Adams co., Illinois. Population, 499.

NORTH-EAST CENTRE, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

NORTH EASTHAM, a post-office of Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

NORTH EASTON, a post-office of Bristol co., Massachusetts.

NORTH EASTON, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

NORTH-EAST PASS, or BALIZE, a village of Plaquemine parish, Louisiana, is situated on the E. side of the pass of its own name. It is chiefly inhabited by pilots and their families.

NORTH-EAST RIVER, a small stream of Cecil co., Maryland, flows into the head of Chesapeake bay.

NORTH-EAST STATION, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

NORTH EATON, a post-office of Lorain co., O.

NORTH EDGECOMBE, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

NORTH EGREMONT, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts.

NORTH ELBA, a township of Essex co., New York. Population, 210.

NORTH ELLSWORTH, a post-village of Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH END, a post-office of Matthews co. Va.

NORTH ENFIELD, a post-office of Grafton co., New Hampshire.

NORTH ENGLISH, a post-office of Iowa co., Io.

NORTHERN LIBERTIES, a district of Philadelphia county, situated on the Delaware river, immediately N. of the city proper. Population, 47,223.—See PHILADELPHIA.

NORTH EVANS, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

NORTH FAIRFAX, a post-office of Franklin co., Vermont.

NORTH FAIRFIELD, a post-office of Somerset co., Maine.

NORTH FAIRFIELD, a post-office of Huron co., Ohio.

NORTH FAIRHAVEN, a post-village in Bristol co., Massachusetts.

NORTH FALMOUTH, a post-village in Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

NORTH FARMINGTON, a post-office of Oakland co., Michigan, 21 miles N. W. from Detroit.

NORTH FAYETTE, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH FAYETTE, a township in the W. part of Alleghany co., Pa. Pop., 1430.

NORTH FERRISBURG, a post-office of Addison co., Vermont.

NORTHFIELD, a township in Merrimack co., New Hampshire, on the Merrimack river, and intersected by the Boston Concord and Montreal railroad, 153 miles N. from Concord. Population, 1332.

NORTHFIELD, a post-township in Washington co., Vermont, 11 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 2922.

NORTHFIELD, a post-village in the above township, on the Vermont Central railroad, about 10 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. It contains 2 woollen factories, also a number of machine shops attached to the railroad, giving employment to a large number of men; 3 churches, 10 stores, and 1 academy.

NORTHFIELD, a post-township in Franklin co., Mass., on the Connecticut river, and on Brattleborough Branch railroad, 80 miles N. W. by W. from Boston. Population, 1772.

NORTHFIELD, or NORFIELD, a small village of Fairfield co., Connecticut, 28 miles W. S. W. from New Haven.

NORTHFIELD, a small post-village of Litchfield co., Connecticut, 27 miles W. by S. from Hartford, has 2 or 3 churches.

NORTHFIELD, a township in the N. W. part of Richmond co., New York, on Staten island. Population, 4020.

NORTHFIELD, a little village of Essex co., New Jersey, 8 miles W. from Newark, has 1 church.

NORTHFIELD, a post-township in the N. part of Summit co., Ohio. Population, 1031.

NORTHFIELD, a post-township in the N. E. part of Washtenaw co., Michigan.

NORTHFIELD, a small post-village of Boone co., Indiana, on the Michigan road, 19 miles N. by W. from Indianapolis.

NORTHFIELD, a post-township in Cook co., Illinois. Population, 1013.

NORTHFIELD, a small post-village in the above township, about 20 miles N. N. W. from Chicago.

NORTHFIELD FARMS, a post-village in Franklin co., Massachusetts, on the Brattleborough branch of the Vermont and Massachusetts railroad, 82 miles W. N. W. from Boston.

NORTH FLAT, a post-office of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania.

NORTHFORD, a post-village of North Branford township, New Haven co., Connecticut, 12 miles N. E. from New Haven.

NORTH FORK, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

NORTH FORK, a post-office of Ashe co., North Carolina, 214 miles W. by N. from Raleigh.

NORTH FORK, a post-township of Izard co., Arkansas. Population, 313.

NORTH FORK, a post-office of Mason co., Ky.

NORTH FORK, a township in Gallatin co., Illinois. Population, 504.

NORTH FORK, a post-office of Vermilion co., Illinois, 125 miles E. by N. from Springfield.

NORTH FRANKFORT, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH FRANKLIN, a post-office of New London co., Connecticut.

NORTH FRANKLIN, a post-village of Delaware co., New York.

NORTH FRYEBURG, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH GAGE, a post-office of Oneida co., N. Y.

NORTH GALWAY, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

NORTH GARDEN, a post-office of Albemarle co., Virginia.

NORTH GEORGETOWN, O. See GEORGETOWN.

NORTH GOSHEN, a post-village in Litchfield co., Connecticut.

NORTH GRANBY, a post-village in Hartford co., Connecticut.

NORTH GRANVILLE, a post-village of Washington co., New York, about 65 miles N. N. E. from Albany, has 2 banks.

NORTH GREECE, a post-office of Monroe co., New York.

NORTH GREENFIELD, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

NORTH GREENWICH, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

NORTH GREENWICH, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

NORTH GROTON, a post-office of Grafton co., New Hampshire.

NORTH GROVE, a small village of Ogle co., Ill.

NORTH GUILFORD, a post-village of New Haven co., Connecticut, 12 miles E. by N. from New Haven.

NORTH GUILFORD, a post-village of Cheshire co., New York.

NORTH HADLEY, a post-village in Hampshire co., Massachusetts.

NORTH HAMBURG, a post-office of Livingston co., Michigan.

NORTH HAMDEN, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

NORTH HAMPTON, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

NORTH HAMPTON, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 45 miles S. E. by E. from Concord, intersected by the Eastern railroad. Population, 822.

NORTH HAMPTON, a post-village of Clarke co., Ohio, 53 miles W. from Columbus. Population, about 200.

NORTH HAMPTON, a post-village of Peoria co., Illinois, 18 miles N. from Peoria.

NORTH HANCOCK, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH HARPERSFIELD, a post-village of Delaware co., New York, about 20 miles N. N. E. from Delhi.

NORTH HARTLAND, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

NORTH HAVEN, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH HAVEN, a post-village of New Haven county, Connecticut, on Quinepiack river, and on the Hartford and New Haven railroad, 5 miles N. from New Haven. It contains 3 or 4 churches, an academy, and several stores. Population of the township, 1325.

NORTH HAVERHILL, a post-village in Grafton co., New Hampshire, on the Boston, Concord, and Montreal railroad, 45 miles W. by N. from Concord.

NORTH HAVERSTRAW, a post-office of Rockland co., New York.

NORTH HEBRON, a post-village of Washington co., New York, about 60 miles N. N. E. from Albany.

NORTH HECTOR, a post-village of Tompkins co., New York, near Seneca lake, about 22 miles W. N. W. from Ithaca.

NORTH HEIDELBERG, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles W. N. W. from Reading. Population, 844.

NORTH HEMPSTEAD, a post-township of Queen's co., New York, on Long Island sound. Population, 4291.

NORTH HEMPSTEAD, a post-village in the above township, and capital of Queen's co., near the Long Island railroad, and about 20 miles E. from New York.

NORTH HENDERSON, a post-office of Mercer co., Illinois, 135 miles N. W. from Springfield.

NORTH HERMAN, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

NORTH HERO, a post-township in Grand Isle co., Vermont, 60 miles N. W. from Montpelier. It consists of an island in Lake Champlain. Population, 730.

NORTH HOGAN, a post-office of Ripley co., Indiana.

NORTH HOLLIS, a post-office of York co., Me.

NORTH HOOSICK, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

NORTH HOPE, a small post-village of Butler co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH HUDSON, a post-office of Essex co., New York.

NORTH HUNTINGDON, a township of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles W. from Greensburg. Population, 2570.

NORTH HYDEPARK, a post-village in Hyde-park township, Lamoille co., Vermont, about 30 miles N. of Montpelier.

NORTH INDUSTRY, a post-office of Franklin co., Maine.

NORTH INDUSTRY, a post-village of Stark co., Ohio, on the Nimishillen creek, 4 miles S. from Canton.

NORTHINGTON, a post-village of Cumberland co., N. C., 50 miles S. from Raleigh.

NORTH JACKSON, a post-office of Mahoning co., Ohio.

NORTH JANESVILLE, a post-office of Rock co., Wisconsin.

NORTH JAVA, a post-office of Wyoming co., New York.

NORTH JAY, a post-office of Franklin co., Me.

NORTH KENNEBUNK PORT, a post-office of York co., Maine.

NORTH KILLINGLY, a post-village in Windham co., Connecticut.

NORTH KINGSTON, a post-township in Washington co., Rhode Island, on Narraganset bay, intersected by the Stonington railroad, 18 miles S. from Providence. Pop., 2971.

NORTH KINGSTON, a post-office of De Kalb co., Illinois.

NORTH KORTRIGHT, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

NORTH LANSING, a post-village of Tompkins co., New York, about 14 miles N. from Ithaca.

NORTH LAWRENCE, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

NORTH LEBANON, a thriving village of Lebanon county, Pennsylvania, on the Union canal, 25 miles E. by N. from Harrisburg, and contiguous to the borough of Lebanon. The extensive furnace at this place is capable of producing near 200 tons of pig iron per week. Population estimated at 500.

NORTH LEEDS, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH LEOMINSTER, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

NORTH LEVERETT, a post-village in Franklin co., Massachusetts.

NORTH LEWISBURG, a post-office of Champaign co., Ohio.

NORTH LIBERTY, a post-office of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH LIBERTY, a thriving post-village of Adams co., Ohio, on the plank-road from Ripley to Locust Grove, 84 miles S. S. W. from Columbus. Laid out in 1847.

NORTH LIBERTY, a post-village in the N. part of Knox co., Ohio. It contains 1 church and 4 stores.

NORTH LIBERTY, a post-office of St. Joseph co., Indiana.

NORTH LIMA, a post-village of Mahoning co., Ohio.

NORTH LIMINGTON, a post-office of York co., Maine.

NORTH LINCOLN, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

NORTH LINKLAEN, a post-office of Chenango co., New York.

NORTH LITTLETON, a post-office of Grafton co., New Hampshire.

NORTH LIVERMORE, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH LONDONDERRY, a post-office of Rockland co., New Hampshire.

NORTH LOVELL, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH LYMAN, a post-office of Grafton co., New Hampshire.

NORTH LYME, a post-village in New London co., Connecticut.

NORTH MADISON, a post-village of New Haven co., Connecticut, 17 miles E. by N. from New Haven.

NORTH MADISON, a new and thriving post-village of Jefferson county, Indiana, on the railroad two miles N. from Madison city, and 84 miles S. S. E. from Indianapolis. The upper depôt of the railroad is at this place. Population in 1850, 676; in 1853, about 800.

NORTH MAHONING, a township on the N. border of Indiana co., Pennsylvania. Population, 840.

NORTH MANCHESTER, a post-village of Wabash co., Indiana, on Eel river, about 105 miles N. by E. from Indianapolis.

NORTH MANHEIM, a township of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, 3 or 4 miles S. from Pottsville. Population, 3006.

NORTH MANLIUS, a post-office of Onondaga co., New York.

NORTH MARSHALL, a post-office of Calhoun co., Michigan.

NORTH MARSHFIELD, a post-village of Plymouth co., Massachusetts, on North river, 21 miles S. E. from Boston, contains several churches.

NORTH MENDON, a village of Monroe co., New York, 10 miles S. by E. from Rochester.

NORTH MIDDLEBOROUGH, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

NORTH MIDDLESEX, a post-office of Yates co., New York.

NORTH MIDDLETON, a township of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, lies immediately N. from Carlisle. Population, 2235.

NORTH MIDDLETON, a post-village of Bourbon co., Kentucky, 10 miles E. from Paris. It contains 1 academy and 2 churches.

NORTH MONMOUTH, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH MONTPELIER, a post-office of Washington co., Vermont.

NORTH MORELAND, a township in the S. E. part of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania. Population, 756.

NORTH MOUNTAIN, Pennsylvania, is situated at the N. extremity of Columbia county, being partly in this and partly in Lycoming county. North mountain is also the name sometimes applied to the northernmost ridge of the Alleghanies, in Pennsylvania, as contradistinguished from the South mountain.

NORTH MOUNTAIN, a post-office of Berkeley co., Virginia.

NORTH MOUNT PLEASANT, a thriving post-village of Marshall county, Mississippi, on the stage-road from Memphis, Tennessee, to Holly Springs, 15 miles N. W. from the latter.

NORTH NEWBURG, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

NORTH NEWBURY, a post-office of Gauga co., Ohio.

NORTH NEWPORT, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

NORTH NEW PORTLAND, a post-office of Somerset co., Maine.

NORTH NEW SALEM, a post-office of Franklin co., Massachusetts.

NORTH NORWAY, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH NORWICH, a post-township in the N. E. part of Chenango co., New York, has a village of the same name on the Chenango canal, 45 miles S. S. W. from Utica. Population, 1172.

NORTH NORWICH, a post-office of Huron co. O.

NORTH ORANGE, a post-office of Franklin co., Massachusetts.

NORTH ORWELL, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH OXFORD, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts.

NORTH PALERMO, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH PARIS, a post-village of Oxford co., Maine, on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad, 55 miles N. by W. from Portland.

NORTH PARMA, a post-office of Monroe co., New York.

NORTH PARSONFIELD, a post-office of York co., Maine.

NORTH PEMBROKE, a post-office of Genesee co., New York.

NORTH PENN, a township of Philadelphia co., Pennsylvania, 3 or 4 miles N. from the city. Population, 2687.

NORTH PERRY, a post-office of Lake co., O.

NORTH PINE GROVE, a post-office of Clarion co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH PITCHER, a post-office of Chenango co., New York.

NORTH PITTSO, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH PLAINS, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Ionia co., Mich. Pop., 292.

NORTH PLYMPTON, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

NORTH POINT, on the N. side of the entrance to the Patapsco river, Maryland. On it are two lighthouses.

NORTH POINT, a post-office of Pulaski co., Arkansas.

NORTHPORT, a post-township in Waldo co., Maine, on the W. side of Penobscot bay, 44 miles E. from Augusta. Population, 1260.

NORTHPORT, a post-village of Suffolk co., New York, on the N. side of Long island, about 40 miles E. by N. from New York.

NORTHPORT, a post-village in Tuscaloosa co., Alabama, on Blackwarrior river, 105 miles N. W. from Montgomery.

NORTHPORT, a post-village of Noble co., Indiana, on the North fork of the Elkhart river, 9 miles N. E. from Albion.

NORTH PORTER, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH POTSDAM, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

NORTH POWNAL, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

NORTH POWNAL, a post-office of Bennington co., Vermont.

NORTH PRAIRIE, a post-village of Knox co., Illinois, 56 miles N. W. by W. from Peoria.

NORTH PRAIRIE STATION, a post-office of Waukesha co., Wisconsin.

NORTH PRESCOTT, a post-office of Hampshire co., Massachusetts.

NORTH PROSPECT, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH PROVIDENCE, a township of Providence county, Rhode Island, bordering on Massachusetts, 4 miles N. from Providence, intersected by the Boston and Providence railroad. It comprises the greater part of the town of Pawtucket. Pop. 7680.

NORTH RAISINVILLE, a post-office of Monroe co., Michigan.

NORTH RAYMOND, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

NORTH READING, a post-village of Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on Ipswich river, 14 miles N. from Boston, has 2 or 3 churches.

NORTH READING, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

NORTH REHOBOTH, a post-office of Bristol co., Massachusetts.

NORTH RIDGE, a post-office of Niagara co., New York.

NORTH RIDGEVILLE, a post-office of Lorain co., Ohio.

NORTH RIDGEWAY, a post-office of Orleans co., New York.

NORTH RIVER, a small stream formed by the junction of its E. and W. branches, which rise in Windham co., Vermont, falls into Deerfield river, in Franklin co., Massachusetts.

NORTH RIVER, a small stream of Plymouth county, in the E. part of Massachusetts, unites its waters with the Atlantic ocean.

NORTH RIVER, New York. See HUDSON RIVER.

NORTH RIVER, in the central part of Virginia, rises in Augusta county, among the Alleghany mountains, flows southward through Rockbridge county, passes by Lexington, and enters the James river immediately above its passage through the Blue Ridge, near the northern extremity of Bedford county. This stream, in its upper part, is called the Calf-pasture river. The whole length is about 100 miles.

NORTH RIVER, in the N. E. part of Virginia. This name is frequently applied to the Rappahannock, above the mouth of the Rapidan. It is formed by Hedgman's and Thornton's rivers, which unite on the boundary between Culpepper and Fauquier counties. See RAPPAHANNOCK.

NORTH RIVER, of Hampshire county, Virginia, is an affluent of the Great Cacapon river.

NORTH RIVER, of Rockingham county, Virginia, one of the head streams of the Shenandoah proper, flows south-eastward and unites with the Middle and South rivers, near Port Republic, in the county just named. It furnishes excellent water-power.

NORTH RIVER, a small stream of Alabama, flows into Blackwarrior river, a few miles above Tuscaloosa.

NORTH RIVER, Iowa, sometimes called UPPER THREE, rises in the W. central part of the state, and enters Des Moines river in Polk county.

NORTH RIVER, a post-office of Tuscaloosa co., Alabama.

NORTH RIVER MEETING HOUSE, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.

NORTH RIVER MILLS, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia, 178 miles N. W. from Richmond.

NORTH ROCHESTER, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

NORTH ROME, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH ROYALTON, a post-office of Cuyahoga co., Ohio.

NORTH RUSSELL, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

NORTH RUTLAND, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

NORTH SALEM, a post-office of Rockingham co., New Hampshire.

NORTH SALEM, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Westchester county, New York. Population, 1335.

NORTH SALEM, a post-village in the above township, about 110 miles S. by E. from Albany. It has 3 churches and several mills.

NORTH SALEM, a post-village of Hendricks co., Ind., 30 miles W. N. W. from Indianapolis.

NORTH SALUDA, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

NORTH SANBORTON, a post-office of Belknap co., New Hampshire.

NORTH SANDWICH, a post-village in Carroll co., New Hampshire.

NORTH SANDWICH, a post-village in Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

NORTH SCITUATE, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

NORTH SCITUATE, a post-village in Providence co., Rhode Island.

NORTH SEARSMONT, a post-village in Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH SEARSPORT, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

NORTH SEDGWICK, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

NORTH SEWICKLEY, a post-township in the N. part of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, on Beaver river. Population, 1018.

NORTH SHAPLEIGH, a post-office of York co., Maine.

NORTH SHEFFIELD, a post-office of Ashtabula co., Ohio.

NORTH SHELDON, a post-office of Wyoming co., New York.

NORTH SHENANGO, a township on the W. border of Crawford co., Pennsylvania. Population, 825.

NORTH SHERBURNE, a post-office of Rutland co., Vermont.

NORTH SHORE, a post-office of Richmond co., New York.

NORTH SLIPPERY ROCK, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Lawrence co., Pennsylvania. Population, 2254.

NORTH SMITHFIELD, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH SOMERS, a post-office of Tolland co., Connecticut.

NORTH SPARTA, a post-office of Livingston co., New York.

NORTH SPENCER, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts.

NORTH SPRING, a post-office of Jackson co., Tennessee.

NORTH SPRINGFIELD, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

NORTH SPRINGFIELD, a post-office of Summit co., Ohio.

NORTH STAMFORD, a post-village in Fairfield co., Connecticut, 40 miles S. E. by E. from New Haven.

NORTH STAR, a post-office of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH STAR, a post-office of Darke co., O.

NORTH STARKEY, a post-office of Yates co., New York.

NORTH STEPHENSON, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

NORTH STERLING, a post-office of Cayuga co., New York.

NORTH STOCKHOLM, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

NORTH STONINGTON, a post-township of New London co., Connecticut, 17 miles N. E. from New London. Population, 1936.

NORTH STRABANE, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, 6 miles N. E. from Washington. Population, 1210.

NORTH STRAFFORD, a post-office of Strafford co., New Hampshire.

NORTH SUDBURY, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

NORTH SWANSEA, a post-village in Bristol co., Massachusetts.

NORTH TEWKSBURY, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

NORTH THETFORD, a post-office of Orange co., Vermont.

NORTH TOWANDA, a post-office of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH TROY, a post-office of Orleans co., Vt.

NORTH TRURO, a post-village in Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

NORTH TURNER, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH TURNER BRIDGE, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH TWO RIVER, of Missouri, a small stream rising in the N. E. part of the state, and flowing through Marion county into the Mississippi, 3 miles above Marion City. The South Two river enters the Mississippi, half a mile farther down.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a county in the E. central part of Pennsylvania, has an area of 500 square miles. The West branch of Susquehanna river washes its W. border, and the North branch of that river flows through the middle; these two, uniting at Northumberland, form the Susquehanna proper. It is also drained by Shamokin, Mahanoy, and Mahantango creeks. The southern part of the county is traversed by barren mountain ridges, named Shamokin Hill, Mahanoy and Line mountains. Some of the valleys are highly productive. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 289,522 bushels of wheat; 282,087 of corn; 194,676 of oats; 20,310 tons of hay; and 501,619 pounds of butter. There were 26 flour and grist mills, 16 limekilns, 1 manufactory of fire-engines, 4 iron foundries, 2 furnaces, 1 forge, and 15 tanneries. It contained 52 churches, 4 newspaper offices; 3900 pupils attending public schools, and 927 attending academies and other schools. Extensive beds of anthracite coal are worked near Shamokin, in the S. E. part. Iron ore and limestone are abundant. The North Branch canal passes through the county, and connects near the county seat with the West Branch canal. A railroad extends from the coal mines of Shamokin to Sunbury; and a railroad is now in progress of construction from Sunbury to Erie on one hand, and to Philadelphia on the other. Organized in 1772, and named from Northumberland, a county in England. Capital, Sunbury. Pop., 23,272.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a county in the E. part of Virginia, bordering on Chesapeake bay and on the estuary of the Potomac river, has an area of 150 square miles. Its eastern outline is indented by several inlets, two of which are called the Coan and Wicomico rivers. The surface is somewhat undulating, and the soil of medium quality. Indian corn, wheat, potatoes, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 221,587 bushels of corn; 53,902 of wheat; 15,093 of sweet potatoes; and 29,773 pounds of butter. It contained 3 tanneries, 11 churches, and 279 pupils attending academies and other schools. Formed in 1648. Capital, Heathsville. Population, 7346; of whom 3591 were free, and 3755, slaves.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a post-village and station of Coos co., New Hampshire, on the E. side of Connecticut river, and on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad, about 110 miles N. from Concord. Population, 429.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a post-township on the E. border of Saratoga co., New York, on Hudson river, intersected by the Saratoga and Washington railroad. Population, 1775.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a post-borough of Point township, Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, is built on the point of land formed by the confluence of the two branches of the Susquehanna river, one mile above Sunbury. This town occupies one of the most beautiful situations in the state, combining the charms of river and mountain scenery in a high degree. It contains a town hall, 5 churches, 1 bank, and an academy. A handsome bridge crosses the river here. Railroads have been commenced which will connect the town with the principal markets of the state. Population in 1850, 1941; in 1853, 1100.

NORTH UNION, a post-office of Lincoln co. Me.

NORTH UNION, a post-office of Washington co., Ohio.

NORTH UNIONTOWN, a post-office of Highland co., Ohio.

NORTH URBANA, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

NORTH UXBRIDGE, a post-village of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

NORTH VASSALBOROUGH, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH VERNON, a post-office of Shiawassee co., Michigan.

NORTHVILLE, a post-village in Litchfield co., Connecticut, on the Housatonic river.

NORTHVILLE, a thriving post-village of Cayuga co., New York, 2 miles E. from Cayuga lake, and 20 miles S. by W. from Auburn. The name of the post-office is King's Ferry.

NORTHVILLE, a post-village of Fulton co., New York, on Sacondaga river, 55 miles N. W. from Albany.

NORTHVILLE, a post-village of Erie co., Pa.

NORTHVILLE, a post-village of Plymouth township, Wayne co., Michigan, on the W. branch of Rouge river, 27 miles W. N. W. from Detroit. The extensive water-power of the river gives motion to mills and factories of various kinds. The village has several churches.

NORTHVILLE, a post-township of La Salle co., Illinois. Population, 951.

NORTHVILLE, a post-village in La Salle co., Illinois, near Fox river, 65 miles S. S. W. from Chicago.

NORTH WAKEFIELD, a post-office of Carroll co., New Hampshire.

NORTH WALDOBOROUGH, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

NORTH WARDSEBOROUGH, a post-office of Windham co., Vermont.

NORTH WASHINGTON, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

NORTH WASHINGTON, a small village of Butler co., Pennsylvania, 14 miles N. E. by E. from Butler.

NORTH WASHINGTON, a post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 25 miles E. by N. from Pittsburg.

NORTH WATERFORD, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH WAYNE, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

NORTH WEARE, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

NORTH-WEST, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Williams co., Ohio. Population, 343.

NORTH-WEST, a township in Orange co., Indiana. Population, 1245.

NORTH-WEST BRIDGEWATER, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

NORTH-WESTERN, a post-office of Oneida co., New York.

NORTH WESTFIELD, a post-office of Wyoming co., New York.

NORTH-WEST MINE, a post-office of Houghton co., Michigan.

NORTH-WEST RIVER BRIDGE, a post-office of Norfolk co., Virginia.

NORTH WEYMOUTH, a post-village in Norfolk co., Massachusetts, on the South Shore railroad, 18 miles S. by W. from Boston.

NORTH WHARTON, a post-office of Potter co., Pennsylvania.

NORTH WHITE CREEK, a post-village of Washington co., New York, about 36 miles N. E. from Albany. It contains several churches.

NORTH WHITEFIELD, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

NORTH WHITEHALL, a post-township of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, 8 miles N. W. from Allentown. Population, 2955.

NORTH WILNA, a post-village of Wilna township, Jefferson co., New York, about 20 miles E. N. E. from Watertown.

NORTH WILTON, a post-office of Franklin co., Maine.

NORTH WILTON, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

NORTH WINDHAM, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

NORTH WINDHAM, a post-village in Windham co., Connecticut.

NORTH WINFIELD, a post-office of Herkimer co., New York.

NORTH WOBURN, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

NORTH WOLFBOROUGH, a post-office of Carroll co., New Hampshire.

NORTHWOOD, a township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 20 miles E. from Concord. Population, 1808.

NORTHWOOD, a village of Logan co., Ohio, 64 miles N. W. from Columbus, contains a college and female seminary.

NORTH WOODBERRY, a township forming the S. extremity of Blair co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1836.

NORTH WOODSTOCK, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

NORTH WOODSTOCK, a post-village in Windham co., Connecticut.

NORTH WHETHAM, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

NORTH YARMOUTH, a post-township in Cumberland co., Maine, on the Casco bay, 44 miles S. by W. from Augusta, intersected by the St. Lawrence and Atlantic railroad. Pop., 1121.

NORTON, a new township, Essex co., Vt., on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad.

NORTON, a post-village of Bristol co., Mass. on the Taunton Branch railroad, 27 miles S. W. of Boston. Pop. of the township, 1966.

NORTON, a post-village of Delaware co., Ohio, on the Whetstone river, 34 miles N. from Columbus.

NORTON, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Summit co., Ohio. Pop., 1479.

NORTON, a township in the N. W. part of Ottawa co., Michigan.

NORTON CENTRE, a post-office of Summit co., Ohio, 120 miles N. E. from Columbus.

NORTON HILL, a post-office of Greene co., N. Y.

NORTON'S MILLS, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.

NORTONSVILLE, a post-office of Albemarle co., Virginia.

NORTONVILLE, a post-office of Ottawa co., Mich., about 96 miles N. W. from Lansing.

NORVELL, a post-office of Jackson co., Mich.

NORWALK river, Connecticut, falls into Long Island sound, a few miles below Norwalk.

NORWALK, a post-borough of Fairfield county, Connecticut, on both sides of Norwalk river, at the junction of the Danbury and Norwalk railroad with the New York and

New Haven railroad, 32 miles W. S. W. from New Haven. Vessels drawing 6 ft. water come up to the borough. It has 3 churches, 2 newspaper offices, a bank, and a Union school numbering some 600 pupils; the edifice is one of the finest in the state. Manufacturing of various kinds is carried on in the township, which in 1850 had a population of 4651.

NORWALK, a post-township in the N. part of Huron co., Ohio. Population, 2618.

NORWALK, a handsome post-village of Norwalk township, capital of Huron county, Ohio, on the Cleveland, Norwalk, and Toledo railroad, 100 miles N. by E. from Columbus. It extends along a sandy ridge, and is built principally on a single street, which is shaded with a double row of maple trees. Much taste is displayed in the construction of churches and private residences. The village is also noted for its educational advantages: the Norwalk Institute and the Norwalk Female Seminary are well-conducted and flourishing institutions. It contains 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, and the machine shops of the railroad company. Population in 1850, 1440; in 1853, about 1600.

NORWALK LIGHT, at the entrance of Norwalk harbor, Connecticut. Lat. $41^{\circ} 2' 50''$ N., lon. $73^{\circ} 25' 35''$ W.

NORWAY, a post-village in Oxford co., Maine, 45 miles W. by S. from Augusta. Two papers are issued here. Pop. of the township, 1963.

NORWAY, a post-township of Herkimer co., N. Y., 20 miles N. E. from Utica. Pop., 1052.

NORWAY, a small village of White co., Indiana, on Tippecanoe river, 85 miles N. W. from Indianapolis.

NORWAY, a post-office of La Salle co., Ill.

NORWAY, a post-office of Miller co., Mo.

NORWAY, a post-township in the N. part of Racine co., Wisconsin. Population, 751.

NORWAY, a post-village in the above township, about 80 miles E. S. E. from Madison. The plank-road from Milwaukee to Rochester passes near the village.

NORWEGIAN, a township of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, lies immediately W. from Pottsville. Population, 2642.

NORWICH, a post-village and station in Windsor co., Vermont, on the W. side of the Connecticut river, 43 miles S. S. E. from Montpelier. The Connecticut and Passumpsic River railroad passes through this place. It is the seat of Norwich University, founded in 1834. Population of the township, 1978.

NORWICH, a post-township in Hampshire co., Massachusetts, 103 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 756.

NORWICH, a city and semi-capital of New London county, Connecticut, at the head of navigation on the Thames river, where it receives the Yantic, 13 miles N. from New London. Lat. $41^{\circ} 33'$ N., lon. $72^{\circ} 7'$ W. This is a beautiful city, built on a steep acclivity facing the S., the edifices rising in terraces street above street, making a delightful appearance as approached by the river. In wealth and population it ranks first in the county. It contains, besides the county buildings, a town hall, and 8 or 9 churches. Two newspapers are published. The financial institutions are 6 banks, a saving institution having on deposit \$1,115,169, and 3 insurance companies. The confluent streams which here form the Thames, afford excellent water-power, which is extensively used in manufacturing. The principal articles produced are paper, cotton and woollen goods, pottery, ropes, leather, &c. The city has communication with the seaboard and interior by two lines of railway—the Norwich and Worcester, and the New London, Willimantic, and Palmer railroads. A line of steamers also ply daily between Allyn's Point, 7 miles below, and New York. Population of the township in 1830, 5179; 1840, 7239; 1850, 10,265, in 1853 about 11,500.

NORWICH, a post-village, capital of Chenango county, New York, is situated in Norwich township, on the Chenango river and canal, 50 miles S. S. W. from Utica. It contains churches of 4 or 5 denominations, a bank, 2 newspaper offices, and several mills and factories. Population of the township, 3615; of the village, estimated at 2000.

NORWICH, a township in the E. part of McKean county, Pennsylvania. Pop., 265.

NORWICH, a post-village in the above township, about 190 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

NORWICH, a township in the N. W. part of Franklin co., Ohio. Population, 731.

NORWICH, a township in Huron co., Ohio. Population, 676.

NORWICH, a thriving post-village of Union township, Muskingum co., Ohio, on the National road, 66 miles E. from Columbus. It has 2 churches and several stores. Population, near 400.

NORWICHTOWN, a pleasant post-village of New London county, Connecticut, on the New London, Willimantic, and Palmer railroad, 2 miles N. W. from Norwich. In the centre is a large triangular public green, fronting which are the principal church, stores, and houses. The village contains several manufactories.

NORWOOD, a post-office of Bedford co., Va.

NORWOOD, a post-village in Stanley co., North Carolina.

NOTASULGA, a post-village of Macon co., Alabama, on the railroad which leads from Montgomery to West Point, 47 miles E. N. E. from the former.

NOTRE DAME, a post-office of St. Joseph co., Indiana.

NOTTAWAY, a post-township in the N. E. central part of St. Joseph county, Michigan. Population, 1226.

NOTTAWAY or NOTTAWA CREEK, of St. Joseph co., Michigan, flows into the St. Joseph river.

NOTTINGHAM, a post-township in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 23 miles E. S. E. from Concord. Population, 1268.

NOTTINGHAM, a township of Mercer co., New Jersey, on the Delaware river, and the Delaware and Raritan canal, about 3 miles S. from Trenton. Population, 4495.

NOTTINGHAM, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, 15 miles S. from Pittsburgh. Population, 1008.

NOTTINGHAM, a post-village of Prince George co., Maryland, near the Patuxent river, 25 miles S. E. from Washington.

NOTTINGHAM, a post-township in the S. W. central part of Harrison co., Ohio.

NOTTINGHAM, a post-township in Wells co., Indiana. Population, 523.

NOTTINGHAM, a post-office of Davis co., Io.

NOTTINGHAM SQUARE, a village of Mercer co., New Jersey, 6 miles E. from Trenton.

NOTTINGHAM TURNPIKE, a post-office of Rockland co., New York.

NOTTLA, a post-office of Cherokee co., N. C.

NOTTOWAY, or NOTTAWAY river, in the S. E. part of Virginia, rises in Nottoway county, and flowing in a winding course along the border of Dinwiddie, and through Sussex and Southampton counties, unites with the Meherrin, to form the Chawan river in Gates county, North Carolina, after a course of upwards of 110 miles.

NOTTOWAY, a county in the S. S. E. part of Virginia, has an area of 330 square miles. The Nottoway river forms its boundary on the S. The surface is uneven; the soil is moderately fertile. Tobacco and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 2,109,314 pounds of tobacco, and 216,991 bushels of corn. There were 18 grist mills, and 3 tanneries. It contained 13 churches; 260 pupils attending public schools, and 16 attending an academy. The Richmond and Danville railroad passes through the county. Formed in 1783, and named from the Nottoway Indians. Capital, Nottoway Court House. Population, 8437, of whom 2387 were free, and 6050, slaves.

NOTTOWAY COURT HOUSE, capital of Nottoway county, Virginia, on the Southside railroad, 8 miles from its junction with the Richmond and Danville railroad, 60 miles S. W. from Richmond. Population, about 200.

NOTTSVILLE, a small village of Daviess co., Kentucky, 13 miles E. from Owensborough.

NOVA, a post-office of Ashland co., Ohio.

NOVA-SCOTIA, a village of Ingham co., Michigan, on Grand river, about 20 miles S. of Lansing.

NOVI, a post-township in the S. W. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Population, 1351.

NOVI, a post-village in the above township, on the W. branch of Rouge river, 25 miles N. W. from Detroit.

NOXAPATTO, a post-office of Winston co., Miss.

NOXUBEE river, or RUNAWAY CREEK, of Mississippi and Alabama, rises in Choctaw co., of the former, and passing into Alabama enters the Tombigbee in Sumter county, near Gainesville. It is navigable by small steamboats about 50 miles.

NOXUBEE, a county in the E. part of Mississippi, bordering on Alabama, has an area of about 720 square miles. It is intersected by Noxubee river, (called also Runaway creek,) from which it derives its name. The surface is nearly level; the soil is a dark-colored, heavy, and adhesive loam, possessing great strength and fertility. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 12,555 bales of cotton, 895,713 bushels of corn, and 8699 pounds of beeswax and honey. It contained 23 churches, 894 pupils attending public schools, and 594 attending academies, or other schools. The Noxubee river is navigable by small steamers. The Mobile and Ohio railroad, now in progress, will probably pass through the county. Capital, Macon. Population, 16,299, of whom 4976 were free, and 11,323 slaves.

NOYES' TURN, a railroad station in Steuben co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 295 miles from New York city.

NOYESVILLE, a post-office of Cook co., Ill.

NOYESVILLE, a post-office of Dodge co., Wisconsin.

NUBBIN RIDGE, a post-office of Hardeman co., Tenn., 179 miles S. W. from Nashville.

NUECES, noo-á-cēs, a river of Texas, which rises in Bexar county, in the W. part of the state, and flows into a bay of its own name, near 27° 30' N. lat., and 98° W. lon. Its course is very circuitous, and the whole length is estimated at 350 miles. It is stated that boats can ascend it 100 miles from its mouth.

NUECES, a county in the S. part of Texas, bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, has an area of 6160 square miles. The Nueces river, from which the name is derived, forms its N. boundary; the Laguna del Madre washes its eastern border, and is separated from the Gulf of Mexico by a long narrow island. The surface is nearly level; the soil sandy and poor, excepting in the vicinity of the river. In 1850 this county produced 7150 bushels of corn. Capital, San Patricio. Pop., 698, of whom 651 were free, and 47 slaves.

NULHEGAN river, a small stream of Essex co., Vermont, falls into the Connecticut.

NULL'S MILLS, a post-office of Fayette co., Indiana.

NUMA, a small post-village of Parke co., Indiana, on the Wabash and Erie canal, 11 miles N. from Terre Haute.

NUMBER ONE, a post-office of Wayne co., O.

NUMBER TWO, a post-office of Marion co., Florida.

NUMBER THREE, a post-office of Aroostook co., Maine.

NUMIDIA, a village of Montour co., Pennsylvania, about 17 miles S. E. from Danville.

NUNDA, a post-township on the S. border of Livingston co., New York. Pop., 3128.

NUNDA, a beautiful post-village in the above township, on the Buffalo and New York City railroad, 67 miles E. S. E. from Buffalo. It contains 5 or 6 churches, an academy, a newspaper office, a machine shop, and a woollen factory. Population, in 1853, estimated at 2000.

NUQUIN, a river of Utah Territory, falls into Nicollet river.

NUTBUSH, a post-office of Warren co., N. C.

NYACK, a post-village of Rockland county, New York, on the W. bank of Hudson river, here called the Tappan sea, 29 miles N. from New York city. It contains 3 or 4 churches, and about 100 dwellings. Two newspapers are published here.

NYACK TURNPIKE, a post-office of Rockland co., New York.

NYATT POINT LIGHT, on the W. side of Narragansett bay, 9 miles S. from Providence, Rhode Island. Lat. 41° 43' 30" N., lon., 71° 20' 48" W.

O

OAK, a post-office of Williams co., Ohio.

OAKACHICKAMA, a post-village of Yallobusha co., Mississippi.

OAKALIMETAH, a post-office of Tippah co., Mississippi.

OAK BLUFF, a small post-village of Greene co., Arkansas.

OAK BOWERY, a post-office of Chambers co., Alabama.

OAK CREEK, a post-township in the S. E. part of Milwaukee co., Wis. Pop., 1259.

OAKDALE, a post-office of Worcester co. Mass.

OAKDALE, a post-office of Delaware co., Pa.

OAKDALE, a small post-village of Shelby co., Missouri, about 100 miles N. from Jefferson city.

OAKDAM, a post-office of Vanderburg co. Ind.

OAKFIELD, a post-village of Genesee co., New York, about 250 miles W. by N. from Albany. Population of the township, 1457.

OAKFIELD, a post-township in Perry co., Ohio. Population, 130.

OAKFIELD, a post-township in Kent co., Michigan. Population, 645.

OAKFIELD, a post-village of Franklin co., Missouri, 35 miles W. by S. from St. Louis.

OAKFIELD, a post-township in the S. W. part of Fond du Lac co., Wis. Pop., 769.

OAK FLAT, a post-office of Pendleton co., Va.

OAK FOREST, a post-office of Cumberland co., Virginia.

OAK FOREST, a post-office of Iredell co., N. C.

OAK FOREST, a post-office of Franklin co., Indiana.

OAKFUSKEE creek, of Alabama, flows into Tallapoosa river, near the S. W. extremity of Tallapoosa county.

OAKFUSKEE, or OAKFUSKY, a post-office of Randolph co., Alabama.

OAK GROVE, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Virginia.

OAK GROVE, a post-office of Union co., N. C.
OAK GROVE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Alabama.

OAK GROVE, a post-office of Titus co., Tex.
OAK GROVE, a post-office of Hempstead co., Arkansas.

OAK GROVE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Tennessee.

OAK GROVE, a post-village of Christian co., Ky., about 210 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

OAK GROVE, a post-office of Livingston co., Michigan.

OAK GROVE, a post-village of Jackson co., Missouri, 21 miles S. E. from Independence.

OAK GROVE, a post-office of Linn co., Iowa.

OAK GROVE, a post-township in the central part of Dodge co., Wisconsin. Pop., 1143.

OAK GROVE, a small post-village in the above township, about 40 miles N. E. from Madison.

OAKHAM, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 55 miles W. from Boston. Population, 1137.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

OAK HILL, a station on the Hudson River railroad, in Columbia co., New York, 6 miles S. S. W. from Hudson.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Greene co., N. Y.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Fauquier co., Virginia, 122 miles N. by W. from Richmond.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Granville co., North Carolina, 71 miles from Raleigh.

OAK HILL, a small post-village of Newton co., Georgia, 142 miles W. from Augusta.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Franklin co., Ala.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Overton co., Tenn.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Hardin co., Ky.

OAK HILL, a post-village of Jackson co., Ohio, on the Scioto and Hocking railroad, 87 miles S. S. W. from Columbus, has about 100 inhabitants.

OAK HILL, a post-office of De Kalb co., Ind.

OAK HILL, a post-village in Lake co., Illinois, near the W. shore of Lake Michigan, 32 miles N. N. W. from Chicago.

OAK HILL, a post-office of Jefferson co., Wisconsin.

OAKLAND, a county in the S. E. part of Michigan, contains 900 square miles. It is drained by the sources of Clinton, Shiawassee, Flint, and Rouge (or Red) rivers, and by Woodruff creek. The county is sprinkled over by multitudes of small lakes of pure water, the largest of which are 1 or 2 miles in extent. The number of these is not less than 50. The surface in the N. is hilly; the south part is rolling and heavily timbered. The soil is generally fertile, and well cultivated. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, potatoes, hay, wool, and pork are the staples. Water-power is abundant on the streams, and is used to a considerable extent. Oakland is the most populous county in the state excepting Wayne. By the census of 1850 it produced more wheat, corn, oats, hay, and wool than any other county of Michigan. There were raised in that year 586,346 bushels of wheat; 488,813 of corn; 278,382 of oats; 207,527 of potatoes; 53,206 of hay, and 293,981 pounds of wool. It contained 33 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 10,451 pupils attending public schools, and 50 attending an academy. A railroad extends from Detroit to Pontiac the county seat. Population, 31,270.

OAKLAND, a small village of Providence co., Rhode Island, about 25 miles N. W. of Providence. It contains 1 woollen mill, employing 110 hands.

OAKLAND, a post-village of Livingston co., New York, about 250 miles W. from Albany.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pa.

OAKLAND, a township in the N. W. part of Venango co., Pennsylvania. Population, 837.

OAKLAND, a station on the Philadelphia and Columbia railroad, 30 miles W. from Philadelphia.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Morgan co., Va.

OAKLAND, a post-village of Chatham co., North Carolina.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Lauderdale co., Ala.

OAKLAND, a small post-village of Yallobusha co., Mississippi, 139 miles N. from Jackson.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Lavacca co., Tex.

OAKLAND, a post-office of St. Francis co., Arkansas.

OAKLAND, a post-village in Fayette co., Tennessee.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Christian co., Ky.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Clinton co., Ohio.

OAKLAND, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, 12 miles S. W. from Lancaster. The post-office is Clear Creek. It has about 200 inhabitants.

OAKLAND, a post-township in the N. E. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Population, 978.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Spencer co., Ind.

OAKLAND, a small post-village of Coles co., Illinois, 95 miles E. by S. from Springfield.

OAKLAND, a post-office of La Clede co., Mo.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Dubuque co., Io.

OAKLAND, a post-township in the S. W. part of Jefferson co., Wisconsin. Population, 806. It contains a small village of the same name.

OAKLAND, a township of Contra Costa co., California.

OAKLAND, a post-office of Umpqua co., Ogn.

OAKLAND COLLEGE, a post-village of Claiborne co., Mississippi, about 70 miles S. W. from Jackson, is the seat of Oakland College, founded in 1831.

OAKLAND GROVE, a post-office of Prairie co., Arkansas.

OAKLAND MILLS, a post-office of Juniata co., Pennsylvania.

OAK LAWN, a post-office of Nelson co., Va.

OAK LAWN, a post-office of Cabarrus co., North Carolina.

OAK LAWN, a post-office of Baker co., Ga.
 OAK LEVEL, a post-office of Henry co., Va.
 OAK LEVEL, a post-office of Benton co., Ala.
 OAKLEY, a post-office of Mecklenburg co. Va.
 OAKLEY, a post-office of Macon co., Ill.
 OAKLEY, a post-office of Lewis co., Mo.
 OAKLEY, a post-office of Franklin co., La.
 OAKMULGEE RIVER. See OCMULGEE.
 OAKMULGEE, a post-office of Bedford co., Va.
 OAKMULGEE CREEK, of Ala., flows into Cahawba river, about 12 miles N. from Cahawba.
 OAKOHAY, a post-office of Covington co., Mississippi.
 OAK ORCHARD, a post-village of Orleans co., N. Y., on the creek of the same name, about 40 miles W. by N. from Rochester.
 OAK ORCHARD, a post-office of Frederick co., Maryland.
 OAK ORCHARD CREEK, in the W. part of New York, rises in Genesee county, flows through Orleans county, and falls into Lake Ontario about 10 miles N. of Albion.
 OAK PLAINS, a post-office of Livingston co., Michigan.
 OAK POINT, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.
 OAK POINT, a post-office of Van Buren co., Iowa.
 OAK POINT, a post-office of Lewis co., Ogn.
 OAK RIDGE, a post-office of Guilford co., N. C., 104 miles W. N. W. from Raleigh.
 OAK RIDGE, a post-office of Meriwether co., Georgia.
 OAK RIDGE, a small village of Newton co., Georgia.
 OAK RIDGE, a small post-village of Greene co., Arkansas.
 OAK RIDGE, a post-village of Graves co., Ky.
 OAK RIDGE, a post-office of Hancock co., O.
 OAKS, a small village of Limestone co., Ala.
 OAK'S CORNERS, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.
 OAK SHADE, a post-office of Culpepper co., Virginia.
 OAK SPRING, a post-office of Ballard co., Ky.
 OAK SPRING, a village in Davis co., Iowa, 85 miles S. W. from Iowa City.
 OAK'S SHOP, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.
 OAK'S SPRINGS, a post-office of Tuolumne co., California.
 OAKSVILLE, a post-office of Otsego co., N. Y.
 OAKTIBBEHA. See OKTIBBEHA.
 OAKTON, a small post-village of Massac co., Ill., 20 miles W. by S. from Golconda.
 OAKTUPPA CREEK, Alabama, flows through Washington co., and enters Tombigbee river from the right.
 OAKVILLE, a post-village of Otsego co., New York, about 70 miles W. from Albany.
 OAKVILLE, a post-office of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.
 OAKVILLE, a post-office of St. Mary's co., Md.
 OAKVILLE, a small post-village of Appomattox co., Virginia, 103 miles W. from Richmond.

OAKVILLE, a post-village of Union co., N. C., 180 miles W. S. W. from Raleigh.

OAKVILLE, a post-village in Lexington district, South Carolina.

OAKVILLE, a post-village of Lawrence co., Alabama, about 110 miles N. by E. from Tuscaloosa.

OAKVILLE, a small post-village of Madison co., Tennessee, 14 miles N. W. from Jackson.

OAKVILLE, a post-village in Monroe co., Michigan, 35 miles S. W. by W. from Detroit.

OAKVILLE, a village in St. Louis co., Missouri, near the Mississippi river, 15 miles S. S. W. from St. Louis.

OAKWOOD, a post-office of Weakly co., Tenn.

OAKWOODS, a post-office of Fleming co., Ky.

OAKWOODS, a post-office of Grant co., Ind.

OASIS, a post-township of Waushara co., Wisconsin.

OASIS, a small post-village in the above township, 30 miles N. W. from Sacramento.

OATLAND, a post-village of Loudon co., Virginia, on Goose creek, 150 miles N. from Richmond. It has several mills.

OBERLIN, a flourishing post-village of Lorain county, Ohio, on the Cleveland and Toledo railroad, 36 miles S. W. from Cleveland, and 8 miles from Elyria. It is remarkable for its collegiate institute, named in honor of John Frederick Oberlin, pastor of Walbach, Switzerland. This institution, founded in 1834, is under the direction of the Evangelical Congregationalists. It occupies 7 commodious buildings, has 12 instructors, with a library of 5000 volumes. It was attended in 1852 by 1200 students of both sexes. Its object is to afford an economical education by combining manual labor with study. No person is excluded from this institution on account of color. The Presbyterian church at this place is a large brick building, capable of holding 3000 persons. The Oberlin Evangelist and Quarterly Review are published here.

OBIES RIVER, sometimes written OBEY'S, or OBEY'S, of the N. part of Tennessee, rises in Fentress county, among the Cumberland mountains, and flowing north-westward, enters Cumberland river near the N. W. extremity of Overton county. It is navigable by steamboats 60 miles from its mouth, and its whole length is probably above 100 miles. In the upper part of its course it passes through a deep cut in the mountain, and is remarkable for beautiful scenery.

OBION, a river in the N. W. part of Tennessee, is formed by three branches, the North, South, and Rutherford forks, which unite in Obion county, a few miles S. E. from Troy. It flows thence south-westward through Dyer county into the Mississippi. Its whole length, including one of the branches, is estimated at 150 miles.

OBION, a county forming the N. W. extremity of Tennessee, bordering on Kentucky and Missouri; area estimated at 650 square miles. The Mississippi forms its entire W.

boundary, and Obion river, from which the name is derived, flows through the county. The surface is nearly level. The soil produces Indian corn, and tobacco. In 1850 there were raised 445,420 bushels of corn; 9413 of oats; 139,305 pounds of tobacco, and 54,379 of butter. It contained 6 churches, 50 pupils attending public schools, and 129 attending academies or other schools. Capital, Troy. Population, 7633; of whom 6576 were free, and 1057, slaves.

OBION, a post-office of Hickman co., Ky.

OBISPO, a post-office of San Luis Obispo co., California.

OBLONG, a post-village of Dutchess co., N.Y.

OBLONG, a post-office of Crawford co., Ill.

OBNOBBY, a township in Fulton co., Indiana. Population, 394.

O'BRIEN, a new county in the N. W. part of Iowa, has an area of about 580 square miles. It is drained by one of the branches and some of the affluents of the Little Sioux river, and also by Floyd's river, a tributary of the Missouri. This county is not included in the census of 1850. County seat not located. Named in honor of Smith O'Brien, the Irish patriot.

OCOQUAN river, in the N. E. part of Virginia, is formed by Broad run and Cedar run, which unite near Brentsville, in Prince William county. It flows first eastward to the boundary between that county and Fairfax, then runs south-eastward along the boundary until it enters the Potomac river, 25 miles below Washington. It has a fall of 72 feet in a distance of 1½ miles, affording fine sites for manufactories.

OCOQUAN, a post-village of Prince William county, Virginia, on the Occoquan river, 99 miles N. from Richmond. It has extensive water-power, with several mills and a cotton factory. Population, from 300 to 400.

OCCUPACIA, a post-office of Essex co., Va.

OCEAN, a county in the E. part of New Jersey, has an area of about 1150 square miles. It is drained by Metetecunk and Tom's rivers, and Cedar creek; its E. border is washed by the Atlantic Ocean, from whence it derives its name. The seacoast consists of a sandbeach from half a mile to a mile wide, through which the tide passes by Barnegat inlet, and forms two lagoons, or salt-water lakes, called Barnegat bay and Little Egg Harbor bay. The surface is generally level, and a large portion covered with pine forests. The soil is of alluvial formation, and consists of clay mingled with sand and gravel. Indian corn, rye, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 it produced 108,447 bushels of corn; 22,083 of rye; 38,219 of potatoes; 6679 tons of hay, and 78,059 pounds of butter. It contained 1 foundry, 1 forge, 3 flour mills, 2 grist mills, 16 saw mills, and 19 charcoal works; 22 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 2189 pupils attending public schools. Marl is abundant in various parts of the county, and iron is found in the northern part, where large quantities of the metal are manufactured. Organized in 1850, having been formed from the southern portion of Monmouth county. Capital, Tom's River. Population, 10,032.

OCEAN, a new township of Monmouth county, New Jersey, bordering on the Atlantic, about 40 miles E. by N. from Trenton. It includes Sandy Hook. Population, 3767.

OCEANA, a county in the W. part of Michigan, has an area of about 750 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by Lake Michigan, and intersected by White river, and also drained by Maskego river, (which flows through the S. E. corner,) with several smaller streams falling into Lake Michigan. It is said to contain excellent land. Pop., 300.

OCEANPORT, a post-office of Monmouth co., New Jersey.

OCEANVILLE, a small village of Galloway township, Atlantic co., New Jersey, about 16 miles E. from May's landing, has 1 church.

OCELLA, a small river which rises in the S. part of Georgia, passes into Florida, and forms the boundary between Jefferson and Madison counties, until it enters the Gulf of Mexico.

OCKLOCKONNEE, or OCKLOCKONY river, of Georgia and Florida, rises in Irwin county of the former, and passing through Florida, flows into Appalachee bay between Leon and Gadsden counties.

OCKLOCKNEY, a post-office of Thomas co., Georgia.

OCLAU CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Ocmulgee in Pulaski co.

Ocmulgee river, of the State of Georgia, a branch of the Altamaha, formed by three small branches, the South, Yellow, and Ucofawhachee, which rise in the N. central part and unite near the S. extremity of Newton county. Its general direction is S. S. E. It flows through a hilly, granitic region to the city of Macon, where there is a considerable fall, affording extensive water-power. Below this point it traverses a level and sandy country, in which extensive forests of pine are found. The length of this river probably exceed 300 miles. It is navigable by small steamboats to Macon. The little Ocmulgee enters the main stream from the N. W., about 10 miles above its junction with the Oconee.

Ocmulgeeville, post-village, Telfair co., Ga.

OCOA, a post-office of Polk co., Tennessee.

OCOLA, a post-village of Marion co., Fla., 180 miles S. E. from Tallahassee, has 2 newspaper offices.

OCONA LUFTY, post-office, Haywood co., N.C.

OCONEE, a river of Georgia, which rises in the auriferous highlands of Hall county, in the N. E. part of the state, and flowing in a general S. S. E. direction, passes by Athens and Milledgeville, and unites with the Ogeechee to form the Altamaha, at the W. extremity of Tatnall county. Small steamers once navigated the river to Milledgeville, which is about 300 miles from the sea; but the use of these is now superseded by railways.

OCONEE, a post-office of Washington co., Georgia, on the Central railroad, 150 miles N. W. from Savannah.

OCONEE STATION, a post-village of Pickens co., South Carolina.

OCONEWOC creek, of Wisconsin, rises among the small lakes of Waukesha co., and enters Rock river in Jefferson co., about 8 miles above Watertown.

OCONEWOC, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Waukesha co., Wisconsin. Population, 1216.

OCONEWOC, a post-village in the above township, on a creek and small lake of its own name, 35 miles W. by N. from Milwaukee, with which it is connected by a plank-road. It has 2 churches, 10 stores, 3 mills, and about 50 dwellings.

OCONTO, a small river of Oconto co., Wisconsin, rises in the N. E. part of the state, and flowing first southward and then eastward, enters Green bay.

OCONTO, a county in the N. E. part of Wisconsin, bordering on Michigan and Green bay, contains about 4000 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Menomonee river, on the W. by the Wolf river, and drained by the Oconto and Pishtego rivers. The surface is occupied by forests of pine. Oconto was separated from Brown county in 1850, and named from Oconto river. Capital, Jones' Mill.

OCONTO, a post-office of Oconto co., Wis.

OCOPILCO CREEK of Lowndes co., Georgia, flows S. E. into the Withlacoochee river.

OCRACOKE, a post-village and port of entry of Hyde county, North Carolina, on an island of the same name, 35 miles W. S. W. from Cape Hatteras. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 1540 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons, enrolled and licensed, all of which was employed in the coast trade.

OCRACOKE INLET, North Carolina, an entrance into Pamlico sound.

OCRACOKE LIGHTHOUSE, on the W. end of Ocracoke island. The light is elevated 75 feet above the level of the sea, and revolves once in two minutes. Lat. 35° 5' 30" N., lon. 75° 59' W.

OCTORARA creek, rises in the S. E. part of Pennsylvania, drains Chester and Lancaster counties, and enters the Susquehanna near Port Deposit.

OCTORARA, a small post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

ODDVILLE, a post-office of Harrison co., Ky.

ODEN, a township in Chicot co., Arkansas. Population, 1173.

ODESSA, a township in Ionia co., Michigan. Population, 121.

ODUM CREEK, a post-office of Macon co., Ala.

OGALLY, a small post-village of Chippewa co., Wisconsin.

OGDEN, a post-township of Monroe co., New York, 12 miles W. from Rochester, intersected by the Erie canal. Pop., 2598.

OGDEN, a township in the S. E. part of Lenawee co., Michigan. Population, 579.

OGDEN, a post-village in Henry co., Indiana, on the Indiana Central railroad, 42 miles E. from Indianapolis.

OGDEN, a small village of Cumberland co., Illinois.

OGDEN, a small post-village of New Madrid co., Missouri, about 140 miles S. S. E. from St. Louis.

OGDEN CITY, a village of Weber co., Utah, 185 miles N. from Fillmore City.

OGDENSBURG, a post-village and port of entry of Oswegatchie township, St. Lawrence county, New York, on the river St. Lawrence, at the mouth of the Oswegatchie, and opposite Prescott, in Canada, about 200 miles N. N. W. from Albany. The Northern railroad, of which this is the Western terminus, extends to Rouse's Point, on Lake Champlain, and connects it with Boston and New York. It is situated on a plain immediately N. of the Oswegatchie river, is regularly laid out, and handsomely built. The Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodists, Baptists, and Roman Catholics, have each one or more churches in the place. It contains three banks, an academy, several iron foundries, with machine shops, and other manufactories. Four weekly newspapers are published here. The commerce of this port is flourishing and extensive. Steamboats ply regularly to the various ports on Lake Ontario. The shipping of the district, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 1985 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons enrolled and licensed, all of which are propelled by steam, and employed in the coast trade. The foreign arrivals for the year were 830, (tons, 347,698,) of which 295 (tons, 213,343) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 798, (tons, 341,188,) of which 212,654 were in American bottoms. The river affords abundant water-power. Population in 1853, about 6500.

OGDENSBURG, a small village of Sussex co., New Jersey, about 22 miles N. N. W. from Morristown.

OGEECHEE river, of Georgia, rises in Taliaferro, or Greene county, flows south-eastward, and enters the Atlantic through Ossabaw sound, about 20 miles S. from Savannah. The whole length is estimated at 250 miles. It is navigable by sloops for 30 or 40 miles.

OGEECHEE, a post-office of Scriven co., Ga.

OGEMAW, a new county in the E. N. E. part of Michigan, contains 576 square miles. It is drained by the Rifle river. The county is not named in the census of 1850, and has few, if any, civilized inhabitants.

OOLE, a county in the N. part of Illinois, has an area of 760 square miles. It is intersected by Rock river, dividing it into nearly equal parts; and is also drained by Leaf river, and Elkhorn and Pine creeks. The surface is undulating, and the soil very fertile. The county contains extensive rolling prairies, with a fair proportion of timber. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and hay are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 480,758 bushels of Indian corn; 289,323 of wheat; 198,833 of oats; 13,019 tons of hay, and 199,368 pounds of butter. It contained 6 churches, 1 newspaper office, 2065 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending other schools. It is intersected by the Galena branch of the Central railroad, (not yet finished.) Named in honor of some member of the Ogle family which was distinguished among the early settlers of Illinois. Capital, Oregon City. Population, 10,020.

OGLE, a post-office of Butler co., Pa.

OGLE, a post-village of Ogle co., Illinois, about 178 miles N. by E. from Springfield.

OGLETHORPE, a county in the N. E. part of Georgia, has an area of 480 square miles. The Broad river forms part of the northern boundary; the Oconee washes its south-western border, and it is drained by the S. fork of Broad river, and by Beaverdam, Cloud's, Millstone, and Long creeks. The surface is hilly; the soil in some parts is fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 12,249 bales of cotton; 445,575 bushels of corn; 99,771 of oats, and 76,407 of sweet potatoes. There were 6 saw mills, 1 flour mill, and 2 tanneries. It contained 23 churches, 350 pupils attending public schools, and 212 attending other schools. Iron, jasper, agate, and abundance of fine granite are found. On the farm of Governor Gilmer there is an immense mass of granite, so nicely balanced on another rock of the same kind, that a child can move it. Gold has been found on Long creek. (White's Statistics.) The creeks above named furnish immense water-power. It is intersected by the Athens branch of the Georgia railroad. Organized in 1793, and named in honor of General James Oglethorpe, who founded the colony of Georgia in 1733. Capital, Lexington. Population, 12,259, of whom 4385 were free, and 7874, slaves.

OGLETHORPE, a flourishing city of Macon county, Georgia, on the Flint river, at the terminus of the South-western railroad, 50 miles S. W. from Macon. The railroad connects at Macon with two of the principal railways of Georgia, and it is proposed to extend it southward to Fort Gaines. Oglethorpe was commenced in 1850, and its growth has been very rapid. It is a place of active trade, and an important depot for cotton. Population in 1853, about 2500.

OGUNQUIT, a post-office of York co., Maine.

OHIO, one of the most important rivers in the United States, is formed by the confluence of the Alleghany and Monongahela at Pittsburg, in the western part of Pennsylvania, and flowing in a south-westerly direction, dividing Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois on the right from Virginia and Kentucky on the left, enters the Mississippi 1216 miles from its mouth. Lat. 37° N., lon. 89° 10' W. The French called this stream La Belle Rivière, "the beautiful river;" which signification corresponds, it is said, to that of the Indian appellation "Ohio." The entire length of the Ohio is upwards of 950 miles, and of the valley, not following the windings of the stream, about 614 miles. Its principal tributaries are the Muskingum, Great Kanawha, Big Sandy, Scioto, Miami, Green, Kentucky, Wabash, Cumberland, and Tennessee. Of these, the most important are the three last, of which the Tennessee is the largest. Immediately below the junction of the Alleghany and Monongahela, the Ohio is a placid and beautiful stream, 600 yards wide, which may be considered as near its medium breadth. At Pittsburg its elevation above the level of the sea is 680 feet; at the entrance of the Muskingum, 541 feet; at the mouth of the Scioto, 464 feet; opposite Cincinnati, 414 feet; and at its confluence with the Mississippi, 324 feet; making the average descent less than 5 inches to the mile. The current is very gentle, being about 3 miles per hour; at high water its velocity is greater, but during the dry season a floating substance would not move more than 2 miles an hour. The only falls of much note are those at Louisville, Kentucky. The obstruction to navigation here has been partially overcome by a canal admitting the passage of small steamboats. The descent is 22½ feet in two miles, producing a very rapid current, which, however, is sometimes ascended by steamboats at high water. The Ohio contains as many as 100 considerable islands, besides a great number of tow-heads, or low, sandy islands, covered with willows, and incapable of cultivation. The navigation of the river is usually more or less obstructed above Louisville during the dry season, by the numerous sandbars either extending across the stream or projecting into it. Steamboats becoming grounded on these, not unfrequently are obliged to remain until relieved by the periodical rise of the waters. Another obstacle is the floating ice, which usually continues 5 or 6 weeks during the winter season. Like other Western rivers, the Ohio is subject to great elevations and depressions. The average range between high and low water is generally about 50 feet; but in a few instances, as in 1832, the rise has been over 60 feet. When at its lowest stage, it may be forded in several places between Cincinnati and Pittsburg. The navigable waters of the Ohio and its tributary streams are estimated at not less than 5000 miles; and the extent of area drained, at 200,000 square miles. Descending the river from Pittsburg, the scenery is highly picturesque and beautiful. The hills, two and three hundred feet high, and covered with the verdure of an almost unbroken forest, approach the stream, and confine it on either side. But these fine features imperceptibly fade away, and long before reaching the Mississippi, entirely disappear.

OHIO, one of the Western States, is bounded on the N. by Michigan and Lake Erie, E. by Pennsylvania and Virginia, S. by Virginia and Kentucky, and W. by Indiana. The Ohio river forms the entire boundary between Kentucky and Virginia. It lies between 38° 32' and 42° N. lat., and between 80° 35' and 84° 40' W. lon., being about 200 miles in its greatest length from N. to S., and about 195 in extreme width, covering an area of about 39,964 square miles, or 25,576,960 acres, of which 9,851,493 were improved in 1850.

Population.—This state, now the third in point of population and wealth of the members of the American confederacy, had no white settlements till five years after the close of the American Revolution. In 1800 it numbered only 45,365 inhabitants; 230,760 in 1810; 581,434 in 1820; 937,903 in 1830; 1,519,467 in 1840, and 1,980,427 in 1850, of whom 1,004,095 were white males; 951,013 white females, 12,715 colored males, 12,604 colored females—forming altogether 348,523 families, occupying 336,098 dwellings. Of the residents of Ohio, 1,219,432 were born in the state, 538,124 in other states of the confederacy, 25,660 in England, 51,562 in Ireland, 11,081 in Scotland and Wales, 5889 in British America, 111,257 in Germany, 7375 in France, and 5697 in other countries, and 4393 whose places of birth were unknown, making about 11 per cent. of foreign birth. In the year ending June, 1850, 28,949 deaths occurred, or about 15 in every one thousand persons. During the same period 2513 paupers received aid, of whom 609 were foreigners, at an expense of about $38 for each pauper. Of the entire population, 947 were deaf and dumb, of whom 8 were colored persons; 665 blind, of whom 12 were colored persons; 1352 insane, of whom 17 were colored, and 1399 idiotic, of whom 19 were colored persons.

Counties.—There are in Ohio 88 counties, viz. Adams, Allen, Ashland, Ashtabula, Athens, Auglaize, Belmont, Brown, Butler, Carroll, Champaign, Clark, Clermont, Clinton, Columbiana, Coshocton, Crawford, Cuyahoga, Darke, Defiance, Delaware, Erie, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Fulton, Gallia, Geauga, Greene, Guernsey, Hamilton, Hancock, Hardin, Harrison, Henry, Highland, Hocking, Holmes, Huron, Jackson, Jefferson, Knox, Lake, Lawrence, Licking, Logan, Lorain, Lucas, Madison, Mahoning, Marion, Medina, Meigs, Mercer, Miami, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Morrow, Muskingum, Noble, Ottawa, Paulding, Perry, Pickaway, Pike, Portage, Preble, Putnam, Richland, Ross, Sandusky, Scioto, Seneca, Shelby, Stark, Summit, Trumbull, Tuscarawas, Union, Van Wert, Vinton, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Williams, Wood, and Wyandott.

Cities and Towns.—Ohio surpasses all the states of the Mississippi valley in the number and populousness of its towns. Cincinnati, called the Queen of the West, is, with the exception of New Orleans, the largest town W. of the Alleghany mountains; and if we include its suburbs in Kentucky, we probably need not make that exception. Its population in 1850 was 115,436. A local census in 1853 gave a population of 160,186. The other most important towns are Cleveland, population, 17,304, (including Ohio City, its suburb, 20,000,) more than 30,000 in 1853; Columbus, population, 17,883; Dayton, 10,977; Zanesville, 7929; Chillicothe, 7100; Steubenville, 6139; Springfield, 5108; Sandusky City, 5087, and Portsmouth, 4011; Toledo, Mount Vernon, Newark, Mansfield, Xenia, Circleville, Piqua, Akron, Tiffin, Wooster, Marietta, Delaware, Lancaster, Youngstown, Urbana, Gallipolis, and Lebanon, had each, in 1850, populations varying from 2000 to 4000.

Face of the Country.—Though Ohio has no mountains, the centre of the state is elevated about 1000 feet above the level of the sea, and there are other portions from 600 to 800 feet. A ridge of highlands, north of the middle of the state, separates the rivers flowing N. into Lake Erie from those running S. into the Ohio river. The tributaries of the Ohio have a much longer course and much greater volume of water than those flowing into Lake Erie. The Ohio slope is interrupted by a second ridge, about the middle of the state, south of which the surface is diversified by hills and valleys. The summits of the abrupt hills, several hundred feet high, which border the Ohio, (and the rivers of the Mississippi valley generally,) are nearly on a level with the surrounding country, through which the rivers have excavated their channels in the lapse of ages. The middle portion of the state is generally an elevated plain, with occasional marshes, which become more frequent and extensive farther north; but it is remarkable that these are on the high grounds, while the banks of the rivers are comparatively firm land. In the N. W. is an extensive tract of great fertility, called the Black Swamp, much of which is yet covered with forest. In the centre and N. W. are some prairies, though the state was originally well timbered. The plains of Ohio, as well as those of other Western States, are covered with large stones (almost rocks) called boulders, which appear to have been carried by the icebergs of an early sea, and dropped at random as the ice melted. The great coalfield of Pennsylvania,

Virginia, and Kentucky enters the S. E. of the state, and occupies an extensive district E. of the Scioto river.

Geology.—The great bituminous coalfield from Pennsylvania enters this state, occupying the eastern and S. E. portions of Ohio, from the N. angle of Trumbull county to near Portsmouth, on the Ohio river. The N. W. boundary of this great coal deposit runs near the villages of Wooster, Newark, and Lancaster, forming a slight curve. This is succeeded by a very narrow belt of the underlying coal conglomerate, which forms a rim round the coalbed. The great Chemung and Portage groups (the former composed of thin bedded sandstones or flagstones, with intervening shales, and frequently beds of limestone rendered impure by organic remains; and the latter of shale, and flagstones, and towards the upper part some thick bedded sandstone) enter the state from New York and Pennsylvania, and fill up the whole breadth between the coalbed (and the rim of conglomerate spoken of above) and Lake Erie to the mouth of the Huron river, where they turn almost directly S. and strike the Ohio river in the S. E. of Adams county. This is followed by a very narrow belt of the Hamilton group, (composed of dull olive or bluish-gray calcareous shales, sometimes changed by the atmosphere to an ashen, and at others to a brown tint,) which passes under Lake Erie from south of Buffalo, New York, and reissues in Ohio, W. of Huron river. All the state W. of this is occupied by the Helderberg limestone group, (which includes some grits and sandstones,) except in the S. W., in Warren, Butler, Hamilton, Clermont, and parts of Brown, Highland, Clinton, Greene, Montgomery, and Preble counties, which are covered with a bed of Black-river, Bird's-eye, and Trenton limestone, surrounded by a rim of the conglomerate coal formation.

Minerals.—The variety of minerals in Ohio is not great, but she possesses in great abundance those most important ones, coal and iron. There were sent to market in 1850-51, 6,489,299 tons of bituminous coal; but this is very imperfect evidence of the abundance of this mineral, in a state where wood as a fuel is still so cheap. This valuable mineral is found in 20 counties, and is at present mostly mined in Meigs, Athens, and Summit counties. The coal region commences at the Ohio river, and extends in a belt between the Scioto and Muskingum rivers, inclining a little E. of N. to near Lake Erie. Professor Mather computes the quantity embowelled beneath the soil in Tuscarawas county alone, at 80,000,000 bushels. The iron, which is found running through Lawrence, Gallia, Jackson, Meigs, Vinton, Athens, and Hocking counties, in a bed 100 miles long by 12 wide, is said to be superior to any other in the United States for the finer castings. In 1850 there were shipped by canal 16,179,227 pounds of iron from different points in the state. The coal underlies the same region as the iron, as well as in other localities. Salt springs are frequent, and marble and lime abound.

Rivers, Lakes, &c.—As has been already stated, the Ohio river coasts the entire southern and S. E. border of the state, opening to it, by its connection with the Mississippi river, the commerce of the great Mississippi valley. The Ohio comes abreast of the state to which it gives its name about 50 miles below Pittsburg, where the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers pour together their united tribute to form that beautiful and majestic stream; to whose volume the State of Ohio adds the waters of the Muskingum, Scioto, and Miami, besides several smaller streams. Each of these rivers has a course of from 150 to 200 miles. The Ohio river is navigable during half the year by steam-boats of the first class, to its head, at Pittsburg, and at all seasons, with short exceptions, for boats of lighter draught. The Muskingum river is navigable, by means of dams and locks, to Zanesville, 80 miles from its mouth, and at times of highwater, 30 miles farther to Coshocton. The Scioto river is navigable for boats 130 miles, and the great Miami river, 75 miles. The three rivers last mentioned enter the Ohio in the order named, (descending from Pittsburg,) and drain the centre and S. W. of the state. The chief rivers of the northern slope, beginning at the N. W., are the Maumee, the Sandusky, Huron, and Cuyahoga, all emptying into Lake Erie, and all (with the exception of the Maumee river, which rises in Indiana) having their entire course within the state. The Maumee river is navigable 18 miles for lake steamers, and still farther for small boats. The other rivers have rapid courses, and are chiefly valuable for mill sites. Lake Erie coasts the state for about 150 miles on the N. E. and N., affording several harbors. At the W. end of the lake are Maumee and Sandusky bays, the principal on the Ohio shore. Sandusky bay extends about 20 miles inland. There are several small islands in the W. end of the lake, belonging to Ohio.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—Though not lacking in picturesque beauty, Ohio has no striking natural phenomena within its limits, and is rather interesting for its economical resources than for its physical wonders. The shores of the Ohio river have been much admired by travellers for their gracefully rounded and lofty hills, and the interior streams have some pleasant cascades, which will be noticed in describing their respective localities. There are, however, some earth-works in the neighborhood of Circleville, (to which they give name,) which have claimed the attention of antiquarians for half a century or more. Works of a similar character, of greater or less extent, are scattered over the state. Among the most remarkable is a mound near Marietta, 30 feet high, enclosed by an elliptical wall 230 by 215 feet; Fort Ancient, in Warren county, has nearly 4 miles of embankment from 18 to 20 feet high; Clark's Works, in Ross county, in form of a parallelogram 2800 feet by 1800 feet, enclosing several smaller works and mounds, which altogether make 3,000,000 cubic feet of embankment, &c.; and many others which the nature of this work will not allow us to describe.

Climate, Soil and Productions.—It is under this heading that Ohio will exhibit the sources to which she owes a rise, (unexampled in the history of the world except in the United States,) in a little more than half a century, from a mere wilderness to rank among the first of the states of the American confederacy, and to equal some of the kingdoms of Europe in wealth and populousness. Ohio is possessed of that happy medium of soil and climate, which, while not so luxurious as to tempt to indolence and inertness, is yet sufficient to call forth and richly reward energy and industry. The climate in the S. part of the state is mild, and snow seldom lies long enough to make good sleighing, but in the N. the temperature is as rigorous as in the same latitude near the Atlantic. Ohio has sometimes suffered from great droughts, but perhaps not to a greater degree on the whole than the neighboring states.

There is very little of this state that is not available for agricultural purposes; so that it stands among the first in the products of the soil; the very first in wool and Indian corn; only second in wheat, barley, cheese, and live stock; and third in oats, Irish potatoes, buckwheat, orchard products, butter, hay, maple sugar, and grass-seeds. The soil may be generally characterized as fertile, and much of it highly so, especially on the river bottoms. Besides the products named, tobacco and oats are staple articles; barley, rye, peas, beans, buckwheat, fruits, grass-seeds, hops, molasses, beeswax, and honey are produced in large quantities, and sweet potatoes, wine, hemp, and silk to some extent. In 1850 there were in Ohio 143,887 farms, comprising 9,851,493 acres of cultivated land, producing 14,487,351 bushels of wheat; 59,078,695 of Indian corn; 13,472,743 of oats; 5,057,769 of Irish potatoes; 638,064 of buckwheat; 10,454,449 pounds of tobacco; 10,196,371 of wool; 446,932 of flax; 4,588,209 of maple sugar; 804,275 of beeswax and honey; 34,449,379 of butter; 20,819,542 of cheese, and 1,443,142 tons of hay. Value of live stock, $44,121,741; orchard products, $695,921; market products, $214,004; slaughtered animals, $7,430,243.

Forest Trees.—The forest trees of Ohio are several varieties of oak, hickory, sugar and other maples, beech, poplar, ash, sycamore, pawpaw, buckeye, (which gives its soubriquet to the state,) dogwood, cherry, elm, hornbeam, and some cypress, though ever-greens generally do not flourish in the state. Ginseng, (latterly an article of export to China, as a substitute for opium,) valerian, columbo, snake, and blood roots are medicinal plants indigenous to the state.

Manufactures.—Ohio has now attained that degree of advancement that enables a state to cultivate other than its agricultural resources. Though her manufactures are necessarily in their infancy, yet in 1850 there were 10,550 establishments in the state, producing each $500 and upwards annually; 8 of these were engaged in the manufacture of cotton, employing a capital of $297,000, and 2191 male and 2534 female hands, consuming raw material worth $237,060, and producing 280,000 yards of stuff, and 433,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $394,700; 130 in the manufacture of wool, employing a capital of $870,220, and 903 male, and 298 female hands, consuming raw material worth $578,423, and producing 1,374,087 yards of stuffs, and 65,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $1,111,027; 229 in the manufacture of iron, employing a capital of $4,187,450, and 5881 male hands, consuming raw material worth $2,434,320, and producing 104,473 tons of wrought, cast, and pig iron valued at $5,401,392. There was at the same time $1,262,974 invested in the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors, consuming 330,950 bushels of barley; 3,588,140 of Indian corn; 281,750 of rye; 19,510 of oats, and 178 tons of hops, employing 1033 hands, and producing 96,943 barrels of ale, &c., and 11,865,150 gallons of whiskey, wines, &c.; there were 706 tanneries, employing $1,340,380 capital, consuming raw material worth $1,118,080, and producing manufactured leather valued at $1,964,591. Homemade manufactures valued at $1,712,196 were produced in 1850.

Internal Improvements.—In respect to opening ways of internal communication, Ohio has shown a spirit of enterprise worthy her New England origin. In January, 1853, there were in the state 1385 miles of railway completed, and 1755 in course of construction, being the greatest amount of any state in the Union, except New York. A complete line of canal connects the Ohio river at Portsmouth with Cleveland, on Lake Erie, following the Scioto river nearly to Columbus, then crossing to the Muskingum, which it coasts (including the Tuscarawas, one of its sources) for perhaps 50 miles, when it crosses to the Cuyahoga, which it follows to Cleveland; thus opening an inland water communication between the commercial metropolis of the Union and the principal city of Ohio. About 100 miles of the canal connecting Toledo with Terre Haute, in Indiana, runs near the Maumee in the N. W.

of this state. Another canal connects Cincinnati, through Dayton with the Wabash and Erie canal. Altogether there are 596 miles of canal in this youthful state. Continuous lines of railway connect Cincinnati, viâ Cleveland, Erie, and Dunkirk, with New York city, and with Philadelphia viâ the Crestline and Pittsburg railway; and perhaps ere these sheets leave the press Cincinnati will be directly connected with Pittsburg and with Baltimore viâ Wheeling; and in a short time viâ Parkersburg, still lower on the Ohio. Cleveland also communicates entirely by railway with Chicago, through Toledo, S. Michigan, and N. Indiana. Cincinnati is indirectly united to Terre Haute, on the western border of Indiana, by lines of railway, intersecting with each other. So rapid is the course of improvement in this state, that any table of its railways one year would be antedated by that of the next. Besides the railways mentioned, one crosses the state from Cincinnati to Sandusky city, and various inter-connecting lines unite the more important towns of the state. For full particulars, see Table of Railways and Canals, APPENDIX. In 1850 there were shipped by the Ohio canals 34,563,156 pounds of merchandise.

Commerce.—The lake and river trade of Ohio is immense. According to Mr. Andrew's estimates, Ohio exported of domestic produce in 1851, wheat and flour equivalent to 3,000,000 barrels; corn, 5,000,000 bushels; small grains, 300,000; wool, 7,000,000 pounds; pork, 300,000 barrels; lard and lard oil, 130,000 barrels; beef, 50,000 barrels; 10,000,000 pounds of cheese, 8,000,000 of butter, 1,500,000 of candles, 300,000 of soap; whiskey, 300,000 barrels; to which if we add smaller articles and manufactures, we make a total amount of about \$40,000,000. The aggregate trade of all the ports of Ohio he computes at \$120,000,000. This is probably much too low for 1853, as the trade of the Sandusky district alone for 1853 has been given at \$65,099,487, an amount nearly treble that of 1851. The foreign exports of 1852 amounted to \$353,514; imports to \$914,826; tonnage entered, 37,703; cleared, 26,066; owned, 60,338 $\frac{1}{2}$; and 77 vessels (52 of which were steamers) with an aggregate tonnage of 18,329 $\frac{3}{4}$. For details see CINCINNATI, CLEVELAND, SANDUSKY, TOLEDO, &c.

Education.—A very active and healthy feeling pervaded Ohio till recently on the great question of public education; but sectarian jealousies have crept in, which, it is feared, may at least for a time retard the advancement of this cause, so necessary to the preservation of our republican institutions. Ohio has a school fund of $1,754,322, made up of certain trust funds, the interest of the sale of the salt-land, the balance of the surplus revenue fund, the interest of the same paid to counties, taxes on pedlers' and auction licenses, taxes on lawyers, physicians, banks, &c. The annual amount distributed by the state is about $300,000. The number of common schools in January, 1853, was 9916, attended by 437,412 children only, out of the 838,669 in the state. Volumes belonging to the school libraries in 1850, only 1595; paid to teachers in 1853, $771,145. There were 11 colleges in the state in 1852, with an aggregate of 677 students, and 69,450 volumes in their libraries; 7 theological schools, with 104, 1 law school with 25, and 4 medical schools with 518 students.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX.

Religious Denominations.—Of the 3890 places of worship in Ohio in 1850, the regular Baptists owned 384; Free-will Baptists, 22; Disciples, (Baptists,) 130; Church of God, (Baptists,) 9; the Methodists, 1520; Presbyterians, 659; Lutherans, 259; Moravians, 158; Roman Catholics, 130; Congregationalists, 100; Friends, 94; Christians, 90; Episcopalians, 79; German Reformed, 71; Universalists, 53, and Unionists, 48. The other churches were divided among the African, Associate, Bethel, Bible Christians, Comeouters, Dutch Reformed, Evangelical, Evangelists, Emanuel, Free, German United Protestant, German Evangelist, German Protestant, Independent, "Israel George, of Brotherly Love," Jewish, Mennonite, Mormon, Meinese, Mission, New Light, Reformed Protestant, River Brethren, Second Advent, Shakers, Swedenborgian, "Separatists of Zoar," Tunker, Unitarian, and Zion sects—giving 1 church to every 509 inhabitants. Value of church property, $5,765,149.

Public Institutions.—Ohio has a state lunatic asylum, at Columbus, which had 318 inmates, (170 males, and 148 females,) in November, 1850—discharged during the year, 300, of whom 163 were cured, and 46 improved—actual expenses of the year, $31,721.82; a deaf and dumb asylum, at Columbus, which has received 499 pupils in the 22 years of its existence; an institution for the blind, also at Columbus, which had 69 pupils in 1851, educated at an expense of $11,202; and a penitentiary, also at the state capital, which had 469 inmates, November 30, 1851—the receipts exceeded the expenditures by $3856.54. There is a library of 8000 volumes for the use of the convicts. In 1850 there were 48 public libraries in the state, with an aggregate of 104,634 volumes.

Government, Finances, Banks, &c.—The governor and lieutenant-governor of Ohio are elected by the people for two years, the former receiving $1800 per annum, and the latter, who is ex officio president of the senate, $5 per diem during the session of the legislature. The senate consists of 35, and the house of representatives of 100 members, elected for two years by the people. A board of public works, consisting of three members, is elected for three years, in such a manner that one new member comes in annually. The state cannot contract any debt for internal improvement, nor even for deficits in the revenue, or any other purposes, beyond $750,000; except to repel invasion, or to redeem the present outstanding debt. The secretary of state is also superintendent of public schools. The judiciary consists—1. Of a supreme court, composed of 5 judges, elected by the people for 5 years, one judge being elected each year. The judges receive $1700 per annum. 2. Of courts of common pleas, divided into nine districts, each of which is subdivided into three, presided over by one judge, elected by the inhabitants of his particular division for 5 years. 3. Of district courts, composed of the judges of the court of common pleas of the respective districts, and of the judges of the supreme court; any three of whom may hold a court in each county at least once a year. 4. Of a probate court in each county, held by one judge, chosen by the people for three years. Every white male citizen of the United States, 21 years of age, resident in the state one year next preceding an election, and in the county town or ward in which he lives such time as the law may prescribe, may be a voter. The assessed value of property in the state in 1850, was $433,872,632, and estimated value, $504,726,120, or $255 to each person. The public debt in 1852 was $17,339,216.88; the school fund, $1,754,322; productive property, $18,000,000; ordinary expenses, exclusive of debt and schools, $200,000, and income of state canals for 1851, $856,929.56. There were also, in January, 1852, 61 banking establishments, with an aggregate capital of $7,866,376; a circulation of $11,635,000, and $2,800,000 in coin. Ohio sends 21 members to the national house of representatives, and casts 23 electoral votes for president.

History.—Ohio fully bears out the adage, that prosperous communities have but few materials of history. The settlement of this state commencing subsequently to the Revolution, she had little to do but to subdue the forest, and develop her resources. In 1788, five years after the close of the Revolution, a company of New-Englanders made the first white settlement in Ohio, at Marietta, April 7th, 1788. A territorial government had been established in 1781 over this region, called the territory north-west of the Ohio river; from which, in 1802, the present sovereign State of Ohio was separated. The inhabitants were much annoyed by incursions of the Indians, who had successively defeated General Harmar and General St. Clair, (the latter with great slaughter of his troops, leaving scarcely one-fourth,) in 1791 and 1792, but were themselves in turn utterly routed by General Wayne, in August, 1794. Fort Sandusky in this state, in the war of 1812, was successfully defended by Major Croghan, a youth of 21 years, with 160 men, against an attack of General Proctor at the head of 500 regulars and as many Indians.

OHIO, a county in the N. W. part of Virginia, bordering on Pennsylvania, and on the Ohio river, contains about 140 square miles. The Ohio river separates it from the State of Ohio, and it is drained by Wheeling creek. The surface is hilly; the soil fertile, well watered, and adapted to pasturage. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, and wool are the staples. The hills contain rich mines of bituminous coal, which is extensively used in manufactories. In 1850 the county produced 214,020 bushels of corn; 57,709 of wheat; 76,767 of oats; 4111 tons of hay; 104,722 pounds of butter, and 98,590 of wool. There were 2 cotton factories, 3 nail factories, 5 glass factories, 1 woollen factory, 2 wire manufactories, 4 iron foundries, 3 iron forges, 17 collieries, 9 flour, 3 paper, and 2 planing mills. It contained 15 churches, 3529 pupils attending public schools, and 400 attending academies or other schools. Capital, Wheeling. Population, 18,006; of whom 17,842 were free, and 164, slaves.

OHIO, a county in the W. central part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 625 square miles. The Green river bounds it on the S. and W., and Rough creek flows through it. The surface is undulating, and partly covered with dense forests. The soil is moderately fertile. Indian corn, tobacco, oats, and potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 521,128 bushels of corn; 10,607 of wheat; 18,780 of oats, and 1,543,692 pounds of tobacco. It contained 23 churches, and 899 pupils attending public schools. Iron ore and stone coal are abundant. Green river is navigable by steamboats along the border. Organized in 1798. Capital, Hartford. Population, 9749; of whom 8617 were free, and 1132, slaves.

OHIO, a county in the S. E. part of Indiana, bordering on the Ohio river, is the smallest in the state, containing about 90 square miles. It is drained by Laughery creek. The surface is diversified by hills of considerable height, but mostly capable of cultivation, and the soil is good both on the hills and bottoms. The chief articles of export are flour, hay, pork, cattle, and horses. In 1850 this county produced 269,085 bushels of corn; 45,479 of wheat; 9718 of oats, and 2023 tons of hay. It contained 15 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 2022 pupils attending public schools, and 100 attending academies or other schools. The blue limestone is abundant. Organized in 1844. Capital, Rising Sun. Population, 5308.

OHIO, a post-township of Herkimer co., New York, 18 miles N. E. from Utica. Population, 1051.

OHIO, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the Ohio river, 10 miles below Pittsburg. Population, 2329.

OHIO, a township on the W. border of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, on the Ohio river. Population, 1660.

OHIO, a township in the S. W. part of Clermont co., Ohio. Population, 4479.

OHIO, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Gallia co., Ohio. Population, 504.

OHIO, a township in the S. E. part of Monroe co., Ohio. Population, 1444.

OHIO, a township in Bartholomew co., Indiana. Population, 292.

OHIO, a township in Warwick county, Indiana. Population, 924.

OHIO CITY, a post-village of Cuyahoga co., Ohio, on Lake Erie, separated by the Cuyahoga river from Cleveland, which see.

OHIO CITY, a thriving post-village of Mississippi co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river opposite the mouth of the Ohio, about 170 miles below St. Louis.

OHIO FARM, a post-village of Kendall co., Illinois, 50 miles S. W. from Chicago.

OHIO GROVE, a post-village in De Kalb co., Illinois, 55 miles W. by N. from Chicago.

OHIOPILE FALLS, on the Youghiogheny river, in Fayette co., Pennsylvania. These falls form the limit of navigation, and are about 60 miles from the mouth of the river.

OHIOVILLE, a small post-village of Beaver co., Pa., about 11 miles W. S. W. from Beaver.

OHL'S TOWN, a post-office of Trumbull co., O.

OHOOPTEE, a river of Georgia, which rises in Washington county, and flowing S. E., enters the Altamaha about 15 miles S. from Reidsville. The Little Ohooptee falls into it in Emanuel county.

OIL CREEK rises in the N. W. part of Pennsylvania, and enters the Alleghany river in Venango county. A substance called Seneca oil is collected in considerable quantities on the surface of this creek.

OIL CREEK, of Perry co., Indiana, flows into the Ohio, 10 miles above Rome.

OIL CREEK, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Crawford co., Pa. Pop., 811.

OIL MILLS, a post-office of Clark co., Ky.

OIL MILL VILLAGE, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

OIL TROUGH, a small post-village of Independence co., Arkansas.

OKAU, or OKAW, a post-village of Washington co., Ill., 14 miles W. N. W. of Nashville.

OKAUCHEE, a post-village of Waukesha co., Wisconsin, on the outlet of Okauchee lake.

OKEECHEE CREEK, of Alabama, flows eastward through Sumter co. into the Tombigbee.

OKEFONOKEE SWAMP. See GEORGIA, p. 421.

OKEWALKEE CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Oconee from the right in Montgomery county.

OKOLONA, a post-village of Chickasaw co., Mississippi, about 170 miles N. N. E. from Jackson, is on the route of the Mobile and Ohio railroad. It contains a newspaper office.

OKTIBBEHA, a small river of Mississippi, enters the Chickasawha from the N. in Clarke county.

OKTIBBEHA, a river in the N. E. part of Mississippi, rises in Pontotoc co., and flowing south-easterly, enters the Tombigbee in Lowndes co., a few miles above Columbus.

OKTIBBEHA, a county in the E. part of Mississippi, has an area of about 620 square miles. It is watered by the Noxubee river, and the Oktibbeha, from which it derives its name, flows along its N. E. border. The soil is productive. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 389,796 bushels of corn; 24,124 of oats; 66,490 of sweet potatoes, and 5479 bales of cotton. It contained 19 churches, and 511 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Starksville. Population, 9171, of whom 4327 were free, and 4844, slaves.

OLAMON, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine, on the left bank of the Penobscot river, 90 miles N. E. from Augusta.

OLCOTT, a post-village in Newfane township, Niagara co., New York, on Lake Ontario, at the mouth of Eighteen Mile creek, about 14 miles N. from Lockport. It has a harbor and several warehouses.

OLD ALEXANDRIA, a post-office of Lincoln co., Missouri.

OLD BRIDGE, a little village of Bergen co., New Jersey, on the Hackensack river.

OLD BRIDGE, a small post-village of Middlesex co., New Jersey, on South river, 6 miles S. E. from New Brunswick.

OLD CHURCH, a post-office of Hanover co., Virginia, 15 miles N. from Richmond.

OLD COURT HOUSE, a post-office of Bryan co., Georgia.

OLDENBURG, a post-village of Franklin co., Indiana, 12 miles S. W. from Brookville.

OLD FARM, a post-office of Lawrence co., Ill.

OLDFIELD FORK OF ELK, a post-office of Pocahontas co., Virginia.

OLDFIELD POINT LIGHTHOUSE, Long Island, opposite Stratford, Connecticut, shows a fixed light 67 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 40° 58' 30" N., lon. 73° 7' 30" W.

OLD FORGE, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pa.

OLD FORT, a small post-village of Centre co., Pa., 77 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

OLD FORT, a post-village of McDowell co., North Carolina.

OLD FRANKLIN, a post-office of Howard co., Missouri.

OLD FURNACE, a post-office of Gaston co., North Carolina.

OLDHAM, a county in the N. part of Kentucky, bordering on Indiana, has an area estimated at 220 square miles. The Ohio river forms its N. W. boundary. The surface near the river is hilly; the remainder mostly undulating. The soil is based on limestone, and produces good crops of wheat, Indian corn, hemp, and tobacco. Cattle and hogs are also exported. In 1850 this county produced 510,960 bushels of corn; 45,067 of wheat, and 36,620 pounds of tobacco. It contained 18 churches, 380 pupils attending public schools, and 25 attending an academy. The county is intersected by the Louisville and Frankfort railroad. Formed in 1823, and named in honor of Colonel William Oldham, who was killed at St. Clair's defeat by the Indians. Capital, La Grange. Pop., 7629, of whom 5205 were free, and 2424, slaves.

OLDHAM'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Virginia.

OLD HICKORY, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

OLD HICKORY, a post-office of Botetourt co., Virginia.

OLD HICKORY, a post-office of Simpson co., Mississippi.

OLD HICKORY, a post-office of Weakly co., Tennessee.

OLD HICKORY, a post-office of Wayne co., O.

OLD JEFFERSON, a village in Saline co., Mo., 75 miles N. W. by W. from Jefferson City.

OLDMAN'S, a village of Suffolk co., New York, on the harbor of its own name.

OLDMAN'S CREEK, of New Jersey, forms the greater part of the boundary between Gloucester and Salem counties.

OLDMAN'S CREEK, Iowa, flows into Iowa river, in Johnson co., about 12 miles below the capital.

OLD MINES, a post-village in Washington co., Missouri, about 100 miles S. E. by E. from Jefferson City.

OLD MISSION, a post-office of Winneshiek co., Iowa.

OLD POINT COMFORT, a post-village and watering place of Elizabeth City county, Virginia, 12 miles N. from Norfolk, situated at the entrance of Hampton roads, on the James river. The entrance is defended by Fort Monroe. The beach in the vicinity affords excellent bathing ground. Here is a fixed light, 50 feet above the sea. Lat. 37° N., lon. 76° 22' W.

OLD RIPLEY, a post-office of Bond co., Ill.

OLD RIVER, a township in Arkansas co., Arkansas. Population, 514.

OLD RIVER, a township in Chicot co., Arkansas. Population, 867.

OLD SAYBROOK, a township of Middlesex co., Conn. Incorporated in 1852. See SAYBROOK.

OLD TOWN, a thriving post-village of Penobscot county, Maine, on the right bank of the Penobscot river, at the northern terminus of the Bangor and Piscataquis railroad, 70 miles N. E. from Augusta. The village contains a bank, and is the seat of an extensive lumber trade. Population of the township, 3087.

OLD TOWN ISLAND, in Penobscot river, about a mile N. of the village of Old Town, Penobscot county, Maine. On it is an Indian settlement, containing a number of frame houses and a Catholic chapel.

OLD TOWN, a post-village of Alleghany co., Maryland, on the left bank of the Potomac river, 14 miles S. E. from Cumberland.

OLD TOWN, a post-village in Forsyth co., N. C.

OLD TOWN, a small post-village of Claiborne co., Tennessee, 40 miles in a direct line N. from Knoxville.

OLD TOWN, a post-office of Greenup co., Ky. OLD TOWN CREEK, of Mississippi, enters Tombigbee river from the N. W. near Cotton Gin Port, in Monroe county.

OLD TOWN CREEK, a post-office of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

OLD WASHINGTON, a small post-village, capital of Washington co., Alabama. The county seat was located here recently.

OLEAN, a post-village of Olean township, Cattaraugus co., New York, on the Alleghany river, at the southern terminus of the Genesee canal, and on the New York and Erie railroad, 404 miles from New York city. An extensive trade is carried on at this place with the surrounding country. Great quantities of lumber are sent annually, both over the New York and Erie railroad, and down the Alleghany to the Ohio river. Two unfinished railroads terminate at Olean, viz. the Corning and Olean, and the Alleghany Valley railroads. The earliest settlement made in this region was at Olean. Pop. of the township, 899, nearly all of which is in the village.

OLEAN, a post-office of Ripley co., Indiana.

OLEANDER, a small post-village of Marshall co., Alabama.

OLENA, a post-office of Huron co., Ohio.

OLENA, a small post-village of Henderson co., Illinois, 120 miles N. W. from Springfield.

OLENTANGY, or WHETSTONE RIVER, of Ohio, rises in the N. central part of the state, and flowing southward, enters the Scioto river at Columbus.

OLEONA, a Norwegian colony, recently founded by Ole Bull, the celebrated violinist. It is situated in the S. E. corner of Potter co., Pennsylvania, and comprises a tract of about 14 miles from north to south, and 12 from east to west, or 120,000 acres. Oleona and New Bergen are small villages belonging to the settlement on Kettle creek, an affluent of the West branch of Susquehanna river.

OLEY, a post-township of Berks co., Pa., 10 miles E. from Reading. Pop., 1799.

OLINDA, a post-office of Fayette co., Ala.

OLIO, a post-office of Hamilton co., Ind.

OLIO, a post-office of Stoddard co., Mo.

OLIVE, a post-township of Ulster co., New York, 12 miles W. from Kingston. Pop., 2710.

OLIVE, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Meigs co., Ohio. Population, 924.

OLIVE, a post-township in Morgan co., Ohio. Population, 2013.

OLIVE, a small village of Noble co., Ohio, about six miles S. from Sarahsville.

OLIVE, a township in Elkhart co., Indiana. Population, 337.

OLIVE, a post-office of Marion co., Indiana.

OLIVE BRANCH, a post-office of De Soto co., Mississippi.

OLIVE BRANCH, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

OLIVE BRANCH, a post-office of Holt co., Missouri.

OLIVE BRIDGE, a post-office of Ulster co. N. Y.

OLIVE GROVE, a post-office of Decatur co., Ga.

OLIVE HILL, a post-office of Person co., N. C.

OLIVE HILL, a post-office of Carter co., Ky.

OLIVER, a township of Mifflin co., Pennsylvania, on the Juniata river. The Central railroad passes through it. Pop., 1668.

OLIVER, a township of Perry co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Juniata river and Central railroad. Population, 870.

OLIVERIAN RIVER, a small stream of Graf-ton co., near the centre of New Hampshire, falls into the Connecticut river.

OLIVER'S, a post-office of Anderson co. Tenn.

OLIVER'S PRAIRIE, a small post-village of Newton co., Missouri, 12 miles E. by N. from Neosho.

OLIVESBURG, a small post-village of Rich-land co., O., 76 miles N. N. E. from Columbus.

OLIVET, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pa.

OLIVET, a post-office of Russell co., Ala.

OLIVET, a post-office of Eaton co., Mich.

OLMSTEAD, a post-township in the W. part of Cuyahoga co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati rail-road. Population, 1216.

OLNEY, a post-village of Philadelphia co., Pa., about 7 miles N. E. from Philadelphia.

OLNEY, a post-office of Montgomery co., Md.

OLNEY, a post-office of Pickens co., Ala.

OLNEY, a neat post-village, capital of Rich-land co., Illinois, on the railroad from St. Louis to Vincennes, 130 miles S. E. of Spring-field. It was settled about 1845, by people from the Eastern states. Pop., about 400.

OLNEYVILLE, a post-office of Providence co., Rhode Island.

OLUSTEE, a post-office of Columbia co., Fla.

OLUSTEE CREEK, a post-office of Pike co., Alabama.

OLYMPIA, a thriving town, seat of justice of Thurston county, and capital of Washing-ton Territory, is situated on the E. side of Tenalquets, or Shute's river, at its entrance into the head of Budd's inlet, at the S. ex-tremity of Puget sound. The surrounding country is regarded as one of the best parts of the whole territory. The town is rapidly rising in importance, and is probably des-tined, at no distant period, to be the com-mercial centre of an extensive region. Olym-pia is a port of entry.

OLYMPIAN SPRINGS, a post-office of Bath co., Kentucky.

OLYMPUS, a post-office of Overton co., Tenn.

OMAR, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, about 160 miles N. W. from Albany. It has several churches and mills.

OMEENA, a new and unorganized county in the N. W. part of Michigan. Area estimated at 500 square miles. Its northern border is washed by Grand Traverse bay of Lake Michi-gan. The census of 1850 furnishes no re-turns for this county.

OMEGA, a post-office of Pike co., Ohio.

OMPOMPANOSUCK RIVER, a fine mill stream of Orange co., in the E. part of Vermont, falls into the Connecticut river in Windsor co.

OMRI, or OMRO, a post-village of Winne-bago county, Wisconsin, on the Neenah or Fox river, 11 miles W. from Oshkosh. Pine lumber is manufactured here in large quan-tities. Omri has 5 stores and 3 mills. Po-pulation in 1853, about 600.

ONALASKA, a small village of La Crosse co., Wisconsin.

ONANCOCK, a post-village in Accomac co., Virginia, 100 miles E. by N. from Richmond.

O'NEAL'S MILLS, a post-village of Troup co., Georgia.

ONECHO, a post-office of Montgomery co., Tennessee, 30 miles N. W. from Nashville.

ONECO, a post-township in the N. part of Stephenson co., Illinois. Population, 882.

ONECO, a post-village in the above town-ship, 222 miles N. from Springfield.

ONE HORSE TOWN, a small mining settle-ment of Shasta co., California.

ONEIDA, a lake in the N. central part of New York. Its length is about 20 miles; great-est breadth, 6 or 7 miles. The outlet of this lake, called Oneida river, 16 miles long, flows westerly, and joins the Seneca, to form the Oswego river. Oneida lake abounds with fish, such as salmon, Oswego bass, trout, sal-mon-trout, pike, &c. The shores of the lake are generally low, and the surrounding lands level and fertile.

ONEIDA, a county in the N. E. central part of New York, has an area of about 1200 square miles. Oneida lake lies on part of its western border. It is drained by the Mohawk and Black rivers, and Oneida and Oriskany creeks, with several smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. The inhabitants of this county are largely engaged in manu-factures, and the agricultural interests are also in a flourishing condition. The Long Level on the Erie canal of 69½ miles passes through it. The surface is generally undu-lating, in some parts more hilly, and in others almost level. The soil is of various qualities, but everywhere rich. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 645,359 bushels of corn; 834,728 of oats; 539,985 of po-tatoes; 167,047 tons of hay; 3,963,392 pounds of butter, and 5,218,734 of cheese. The quantities of hay and butter were each the greatest produced by any county in the United States, and the quantity of cheese the greatest produced by any county in the United States except Herkimer county, New York. There were 39 flour and grist mills, 253 saw mills, 15 cotton, and 19 woollen factories, 18 iron foundries, 14 machine shops, and 46 tanneries. It contained 150 churches, and 20 newspaper offices, 23,453 pupils attending public schools, and 1346 attending academies or other schools. This county contains iron ore, potter's clay, gypsum, water-limestone, and marl. It is traversed by the Erie canal, and the Central New York railroad, and partly intersected by the Black River and Chenango canals, and by the Watertown and Rome, and the Utica and Black River railroads. Organized in 1786, having previously formed part of Herkimer county. Seats of justice, Rome and Whitesborough. Population, 99,566.

ONEIDA, a township in the N. E. part of Eaton co., Michigan. Population, 492.

ONEIDA, a small post-village of Brown co., Wisconsin, on Duck creek.

ONEIDA CASTLE, a post-village of Oneida co., New York, on Oneida creek, 20 miles W. from Utica. It has 2 or 3 churches.

ONEIDA CREEK, of Central New York, flows north-westward, and forms the boundary between Madison and Oneida counties, until it enters the Oneida lake. It is navigable a few miles.

ONEIDA DEPÔT, a post-village and station of Madison co., New York, on the Syracuse and Utica railroad, and on Oneida creek, 26 miles E. from Syracuse.

ONEIDA LAKE, a post-office of Madison co., New York.

ONEIDA MILLS, a post-office of Carroll co., O.

ONEIDA RIVER. See ONEIDA LAKE.

ONEIDA VALLEY, a post-office of Madison co., New York.

O'NEILSTON, a small village of Barnwell district, South Carolina.

ONE MULE TOWN, a small mining settlement of Shasta co., California.

ONEONTA, a post-township in the S. part of Otsego co., New York. Population, 1902.

ONEONTA, a post-village in the above township, on the Susquehanna river, about 75 miles W. S. W. from Albany. It contains several churches and factories. Population estimated at 500.

ONION RIVER, or WINOOSKI, in the northern part of Vermont, rises in Caledonia county, and running first in a north-westerly, then in a westerly course, after passing Montpelier, the capital, falls into Lake Champlain, about five miles N. W. of Burlington. It has several falls, in the most remarkable of which the water descends about 500 feet in thirty rods. That part of the Northern railroad between the capital and Burlington passes along the banks of this stream for nearly the whole distance.

ONION RIVER, of Wisconsin, rises in Sheboygan co., and falls into Sheboygan river, 6 miles from its mouth.

ONION RIVER, a post-office of Sheboygan co., Wisconsin.

ONO, a small village of Edgar co., Illinois, 120 miles E. from Springfield.

ONONDAGA* (on-on-dau'ga) lake, called also SALT LAKE, in the N. W. central part of

New York, and in the centre of the county to which it gives its name. It is a small collection of impure water, 5 or 6 miles long, and perhaps $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles wide. Near the N. E. border are the celebrated Saline Springs.—See SALINA.

ONONDAGA, a county near the centre of New York, has an area of about 800 square miles. It is partly bounded on the N. by the Oneida lake and river, and is drained by Seneca river, Chittenango, Onondaga, and Oneida creeks, and other smaller streams. It contains Cross, Onondaga and Otisco lakes, and includes a part of Skaneateles lake. The Long level, on the Erie canal, of $69\frac{1}{2}$ miles, has its western extremity near Syracuse, in this county. The surface is generally uneven, and in some parts hilly. The soil is principally a fertile calcareous loam. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 782,220 bushels of corn, (the greatest quantity raised in any county of the state except Dutchess county;) 427,535 of wheat; 891,331 of oats; 82,004 tons of hay, and 2,147,518 pounds of butter. There were 46 flour and grist mills, 111 saw mills, 192 salt works, 2 paper mills, 31 tanneries, 2 steam engine factories, 10 woollen factories, and 6 stove and furnace factories. It contained 103 churches, 21 newspaper offices, 20,847 pupils attending public schools, and 1483 attending academies and other schools. Gypsum, water cement, and limestone are found; and near Onondaga lake are numerous salt springs, from which great quantities of salt are manufactured.—See SYRACUSE. It is intersected by the Erie canal, and by several railroads, the names of which may be found under the head of Syracuse, the capital. Population, 85,890.

ONONDAGA, a post-township in the central part of Onondaga co., New York. Pop., 5694.

ONONDAGA, a post-village in the above township, is pleasantly situated on a hill, 132 miles W. by N. from Albany. It was formerly the county seat. It has 1 bank.

ONONDAGA, a post-office of Ingham co., Michigan.

ONONDAGA, a post-office of Marshall co., Ind.

ONONDAGA CASTLE, a post-office of Onondaga co., New York.

ONONDAGA CREEK, of Onondaga co., New York, flows northward, and enters the lake of the same name.

ONONDAGA VALLEY, a post-village of Onondaga co., New York, on Onondaga creek, 4 or 5 miles S. from Syracuse. It contains an academy, several churches, and mills. Population estimated at 900.

ONOVILLE, a post-office of Cattaraugus co., New York.

ONSLow, a county in the S. E. part of North Carolina, bordering on Onslow bay: area estimated at 600 square miles. It is intersected by New river. The surface is level, and extensively covered by marshes and pine forests. The soil is sandy. Indian corn, cotton, pine lumber, and turpentine are the chief staples. In 1850 this county produced 233,283 bushels of corn; 126,750 of sweet potatoes, and 53 bales of cotton. There were 24 tar and turpentine manufactories, and 6 turpentine distilleries. It contained 22 churches, 565 pupils attending public schools, and 45 attending another school. Capital, Onslow Court House. Formed in 1734, and named in honor of Arthur Onslow, speaker of the British House of Commons. Pop., 8683; of whom 5175 were free, and 3508, slaves.

* This is a purely Indian word, signifying a swamp at the foot of a hill.

ONSLow BAY, on the coast of North Carolina, between Cape Fear and Cape Lookout.

ONSLow COURT HOUSE, a post-village, capital of Onslow co., North Carolina, on New river, 145 miles S. E. from Raleigh.

ONTARIO, lake, the smallest and most easterly of the five great lakes which communicate with the River St. Lawrence, is situated between 43° 10' and 44° 10' N. lat., and 76° and 80° W. lon. It divides the State of New York from Canada on the N., the line of its greatest extent running nearly due E. and W. Length, about 190 miles; greatest breadth, 55 miles. The entire area is estimated at 5400 square miles. The surface is 334 feet below that of Erie, and about 230 above the tide-water in the St. Lawrence and Hudson. Its greatest depth is upwards of 600 feet, and it is navigable in every part for vessels of the largest class. It is never entirely closed with ice, and rarely freezes even in the severest weather, except in shallow places along the shore. Lake Ontario contains a great variety of fine fish, among which may be named the salmon and the Oswego bass.

ONTARIO, a county in the W. central part of New York, has an area of about 670 square miles. It is partly bounded on the E. by Seneca lake, and is drained by Canandaigua outlet, Mud, and Flint creeks, and other smaller streams, which supply motive-power to numerous mills. It contains Canandaigua and Honeoye lakes. The surface is undulating, and in the S. part somewhat hilly. The soil is generally a rich sandy loam, well adapted to the production of fruit. Wheat, Indian corn, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 929,342 bushels of wheat; 520,917 of corn; 62,478 tons of hay; 1,047,782 pounds of butter, and 462,955 of wool, (the greatest quantity produced by any county in the state.) There were 33 flour and grist mills, 29 saw mills, 7 woollen factories, 9 iron foundries, 2 breweries, and 28 boot and shoe factories. It contained 76 churches, and 5 newspaper offices; 13,086 pupils attending public schools, and 809 attending academies and other schools. Water limestone, gypsum, and some iron are found. The Rochester and Syracuse railroad traverses this county; the Canandaigua and Elmira railroad and the Canandaigua and Niagara Falls railroad meet at the county seat, and the Erie canal touches its northern border. The limits of this county originally comprised the territory of several of the now adjacent counties, and extended to Lake Ontario, whence its name. Capital, Canandaigua. Population, 43,929.

ONTARIO, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Wayne' co., New York, on Lake Ontario. Population, 2246.

ONTARIO, a small post-village of Richland co., Ohio.

ONTARIO, a post-office of La Grange co., Indiana.

ONTARIO, a post-village of Knox co., Illinois, 13 miles N. from Knoxville.

ONTWA, a township in the S. W. part of Cass co., Michigan. Population, 781.

ONTONAGON RIVER, or TENANGON, of Michigan, the largest affluent of Lake Superior from the S., rises in Ontonagon county in the Upper Peninsula, and flowing nearly N., enters the lake in lat. 46° 52'.

ONTONAGON, an unorganized county of Michigan, forms the western extremity of the Upper Peninsula, bordering on Lake Superior: area estimated at 2300 square miles. The Montreal river forms its S. W. boundary, and separates it from Wisconsin; and it is drained by the Ontonagon river, from which the name is derived. The surface is hilly or mountainous. The Porcupine mountains, in the N. part, rise about 1200 feet above the lake. The county contains an abundance of pure copper. Capital, Ontonagon.

ONTONAGON, a post-village, capital of Ontonagon, co., Michigan, on Lake Superior, at the mouth of Ontonagon river.

ONWARD, a post-office of Stewart co., Tenn.

ONWARD, a post-office of Cass co., Ind.

OOSOOLA, a post-office of Somerset co., Me.

OOSTENLAULA, a river in the N. part of Georgia, rises in Gilmer county, flows nearly south-westward, and unites with the Etowah at Rome to form the Coosa.

OPALIKA, a post-office of Walker co., Ga.

OPELIKA, a post-village of Russell co., Alabama, on the railroad between Montgomery and West Point, 67 miles N. E. from the former. Another railroad extends to Columbus.

OPELOUSAS, a post-village, capital of St. Landry parish, Louisiana, on the New Orleans, Opelousas, and Great Western railroad, 50 miles in a direct line W. from Baton Rouge, and 7 miles from the head of navigation on the Courtableau. It is situated in one of the most fertile and picturesque portions of Louisiana. It is the seat of Franklin College, founded in 1839, and contains a court house, a United States land-office, and two newspaper offices.

OPEN POND, a post-office of Alabama. See WOODVILLE.

OPEQUAN CREEK, in the N. E. part of Virginia, rises in Frederick county, flows north-eastward, forming the boundary of Clarke and Jefferson counties on the right, and Frederick and Berkeley on the left, until it falls into the Potomac.

OPHIR, a post-office of La Salle co., Ill.

OPHIR, a post-office of Mariposa co., Cal.

OPHIRVILLE, a post-office of Placer co., Cal.

OPORTO, a post-office of St. Joseph co., Michigan.

OPOSSUM CREEK, an affluent of Conewago creek, in Adams co., Pennsylvania.

OPPENHEIM, a post-township forming the W. extremity of Fulton co., New York. Population, 2315.

OQUAGO RIVER, New York. See COQUAGO.

OQUAKA, a flourishing post-village, capital of Henderson county, Illinois, on the E. bank of the Mississippi river, 132 miles N. W. from Springfield. A railroad has been commenced from Peoria to this place. Oquaka has an active business in shipping produce: 3 newspapers are issued here. Population in 1853, about 1000.

ORAMEL, a post-office of Alleghany co., N.Y.

ORAN, a post-village of Onondaga co., New York, about 120 miles W. from Albany.

ORAN, a post-office of Kosciusko co., Ind.

ORANGE, a county in the E. part of Vermont, has an area of about 640 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Connecticut river, and is watered by the First, Second, and Third branches of White river, and other smaller streams, which furnish motive-power to numerous mills. The surface is uneven and mountainous in the N. part. The soil is fertile, but more adapted to grazing than tillage. Indian corn, potatoes, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 176,586 bushels of corn; 599,925 of potatoes; 70,549 tons of hay; 869,042 pounds of butter, and 248,715 of wool. There were 2 woollen factories, 2 foundries, 4 flour mills, 2 paper mills, 13 saw mills, 1 manufactory of chemicals, 3 of farming implements, and 7 of boots and shoes. It contained 57 churches, 3 newspaper offices, 9212 pupils attending public schools, and 1356 attending academies or other schools. This county abounds in iron ore, slate, and granite, and some lead ore has been found. The Connecticut river, (navigable by means of canals round the falls,) and the Connecticut and Passumpsic Rivers railroad run along its border, and the Vermont Central railroad crosses its western extremity. Organized in 1781. Capital, Chelsea. Population, 27,296.

ORANGE, a county in the S. E. part of New York, has an area of about 770 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Hudson river, and on the S. by the State of New Jersey, and is drained by Walkill and Shawangunk rivers, and other smaller streams, which afford valuable water-power. The surface in the S. E. parts is mountainous, and the Shawangunk range passes through the western portion. The other parts of the county are usually, but moderately uneven. The soil is generally fertile, and well adapted to grazing, and the "Orange county butter" is highly esteemed in the New York markets. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 491,074 bushels of corn; 390,834 of oats; 146,331 of potatoes; 96,593 tons of hay, and 3,769,034 pounds of butter. There were 49 flour mills, 36 saw mills, 8 cotton, and 8 woollen factories, 3 iron furnaces, 3 paper mills, 18 tanneries, and 4 oilcloth factories. It contained 67 churches, 9 newspaper offices, 9492 pupils attending public schools, and 912 attending academies or other schools. Iron ore, marble, limestone, and sandstone are abundant. The Hudson river is navigable for ships along the entire eastern border. The Delaware and Hudson canal, and the New York and Erie railroad traverse this county, which is also partly intersected by the Newburgh Branch railroad. Seats of justice, Goshen and Newburg. Population, 57,145.

ORANGE, a county in the E. part of Virginia, has an area of 230 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the Rapidan, and drained by the head streams of North Anna river. The surface is hilly and the soil fertile and well watered. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, tobacco, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 267,140 bushels of corn; 121,825 of wheat; 30,750 of oats; 1881 tons of hay; 174,700 pounds of tobacco, and 54,814 of butter. There were 23 flour, grist, saw, and plaster mills, 1 woollen factory, and 5 tanneries: 9 churches, and 253 pupils attending public schools. The county contains limestone, iron ore, and small quantities of gold are found. It is intersected by the Orange and Alexandria railroad. The name of the county was derived from the color of the soil in the highlands, which were included in its original boundaries. Capital, Orange Court House. Population, 10,067, of whom 4146 were free, and 5921, slaves.

ORANGE, a county in the N. central part of North Carolina, has an area estimated at 650 square miles. The Neuse river flows through the N. E. part. It is also drained by the Eno and Newhope rivers. The surface is undulating; the soil fertile. Wheat, maize, oats, tobacco, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 this country produced 93,338 bushels of wheat; 459,088 of corn; 106,340 of oats; 194,275 pounds of tobacco, and 2305½ bales of cotton. There were 5 corn and flour mills, 1 saw mill, and 4 tanneries. It contained 29 churches and 2 newspaper offices; 4220 pupils attending public schools, and 350 attending academies and other schools. Sandstone underlies a part of the surface. The Central railroad of North Carolina is to pass through the county seat. Formed in 1751, and named in honor of William, Prince of Orange and king of England. Capital, Hillsborough. Population, 17,055, of whom 11,811 were free, and 5244, slaves.

ORANGE, a county in the E. part of Florida.

bordering on the Atlantic, has an area estimated at 3000 square miles. It is intersected by the St. John's river. The surface is level, and is covered with extensive pine forests, interspersed with numerous ponds, cypress swamps, and savannas or grassy plains. Many small eminences called "hummocks" occur, which produce the live-oak and other trees. The soil is generally sandy. The orange and lemon flourish, and the sugar-cane and Indian corn are cultivated. In 1850 this county produced 279 hogsheads of sugar, and 4865 bushels of corn. There were 33 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Mellenville. Population, 466, of whom 240 were free, and 226, slaves.

ORANGE, a new county in the E. S. E. part of Texas, has an area of about 300 square miles. The Sabine river forms its boundary on the E., the Neches on the W. and S. W., and Sabine lake on the S. The surface is nearly level and consists mostly of prairie. Orange county was formed since 1850, by a division of Jefferson county, which it resembles in soil and productions.

ORANGE, a county in the S. part of Indiana, has an area of 400 square miles. It is drained by Patoka and Lost rivers, and by Salt creek. The surface is hilly in the S., and undulating in the N. part. The soil is mostly fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 484,165 bushels of corn; 46,941 of wheat; 96,849 of oats, and 2298 tons of hay. It contained 25 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 1300 pupils attending public schools, and 40 attending other schools. The carboniferous limestone underlies the county, in which several caverns are found. It is plentifully supplied with springs, and the greater part of it is well timbered. The New Albany and Salem railroad passes through the N. E. part. Organized in 1816. Capital, Paoli. Population, 10,809.

ORANGE, a township in Grafton co., New Hampshire, 38 miles N. W. from Concord, intersected by the Northern railroad. Population, 451.

ORANGE, a post-township in Orange co., Vermont, 11 miles S. E. from Montpelier. Population, 1007.

ORANGE, a post-village in Franklin co., Massachusetts, on the Vermont and Massachusetts railroad, 70 miles N. W. from Boston. Population of the township, 1701.

ORANGE, a post-township of New Haven co., Connecticut, intersected by the Wopewang river, 6 miles W. from New Haven. Population, 1476.

ORANGE, a post-township on the E. border of Steuben co., New York. Pop., 2055.

ORANGE, a post-township of Essex co., New Jersey, on the Morris and Essex railroad, about 12 miles W. N. W. from Jersey City. Population, 4385.

ORANGE, a post-village in the above township, on the Morris and Essex railroad, contains 4 churches, about a dozen stores, one bank, and near 900 inhabitants.

ORANGE, a township near the centre of Columbia co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1077.

ORANGE, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pa.

ORANGE, a post-village in Cherokee co., Georgia, 110 miles N. W. by N. from Milledgeville.

ORANGE, a township in the N. part of Ashland co., Ohio. Population, 1472.

ORANGE, a village of Ashland co., Ohio, about 90 miles N. N. E. from Columbus. Population, about 300.

ORANGE, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Carroll co., Ohio. Pop., 1577.

ORANGE, a township in the N. E. part of Cuyahoga co., Ohio. Population, 1063.

ORANGE, a township in the S. part of Delaware co., Ohio. Population, 1150.

ORANGE, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Hancock co., Ohio. Pop., 704.

ORANGE, a post-office of Mahoning co., O.

ORANGE, a township in the N. E. part of Meigs co., Ohio. Population, 948.

ORANGE, a township in the S. E. part of Shelby co., Ohio. Population, 922.

ORANGE, a township in the S. E. part of Ionia co., Michigan. Population, 378.

ORANGE, a post-township in Fayette co., Indiana. Population, 1129.

ORANGE, a township in Noble co., Indiana. Population, 607.

ORANGE, a township in Rush co., Indiana. Population, 1672.

ORANGE, a small village of Benton co., Mo.

ORANGEBURG, a district in the S. W. central part of South Carolina, has an area of 1438 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Congaree and Santee rivers, on the S. W. by the South Edisto, and intersected by the North Edisto. The surface is somewhat diversified; the soil is moderately fertile. Cotton, rice, Indian corn, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 it produced 10,024 bales of cotton; 1,299,379 pounds of rice; 614,418 bushels of corn; 7299 of oats, and 189,915 of sweet potatoes. There were 37 saw and planing mills, 1 edge-tool, and 2 coach manufactories, and 1 turpentine distillery. It contained 66 churches, 628 pupils attending public schools, and 92 attending academies or other schools. Lumber and turpentine are procured from the pine forests of the district. It is intersected by the South Carolina railroad, and in part by the Columbia Branch railroad. Capital, Orangeburg Court House. Pop., 23,582; of whom 8198 were free, and 15,384, slaves.

ORANGEBURG, a post-village of Marion co., Mississippi, 80 miles S. by E. from Jackson.

ORANGEBURG, a small post-village of Mason co., Kentucky, 8 miles S. E. from Maysville.

ORANGEBURG COURT HOUSE, capital of Orangeburg district, South Carolina, on the left bank of North Edisto river, 44 miles S.

by E. from Columbia. It is connected by railroad with Columbia and Charleston, and has considerable business.

ORANGE COURT HOUSE, capital of Orange county, Virginia, 80 miles N. W. from Richmond, and 92 miles from Washington, contains 2 churches, and about 500 inhabitants. Four miles from this place is Montpelier, the former residence of James Madison.

ORANGE HILL, a post-office of Washington co., Florida.

ORANGEPORT, a post-office of Niagara co. N. Y.

ORANGE SPRINGS, a post-village of Orange co., Va., 104 miles N. N. W. from Richmond.

ORANGE SPRINGS, a post-office of Marion co., Florida.

ORANGETOWN, or ORANGE, a township of Rockland co., New York, on the left bank of the Hudson river, about 28 miles N. from New York. It is intersected by the New York and Erie railroad. Population, 4769.

ORANGEVILLE, a post-township of Wyoming co., New York, 7 miles W. from Warsaw. Population, 1438.

ORANGEVILLE, a post-village of Columbia co., Pennsylvania, on Fishing creek, about 80 miles N. N. E. from Harrisburg.

ORANGEVILLE, a post-office of Trumbull co., Ohio.

ORANGEVILLE, a township in the S. W. part of Barry co., Michigan. Population, 364.

ORANGEVILLE, a post-village of Orange co., Indiana, on Lost river, 8 miles N. W. from Paoli.

ORBISONIA, a small post-village of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, 81 miles W. from Harrisburg.

ORCUT CREEK, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

ORE CREEK, of Michigan, enters the Shiawassee river in Genesee county.

ORFIELD, a post-office of Lehigh co., Pa.

OREGON territory, the most western portion of the domain of the United States, as restricted by the recent act of Congress creating the Territory of Washington, is bounded on the N. by Washington Territory, (from which it is separated by the Columbia river and the 46th parallel of N. lat. ;) E. by the Rocky mountains, which divide it from Missouri or North-west Territory; S. by Utah Territory and the State of California; and W. by the Pacific ocean. It lies between 42° and 46° 20' N. lat., and between 109° 30' and 124° 30' W. lon., being about 750 miles in extreme length, and 278 miles in width, including an area of about 188,000 square miles, or 120,320,000 acres.

Population.—The population of Oregon, including the present Territory of Washington, was in 1850, 13,294, of whom 8142 were white males; 4946, females; 119 colored males, and 87 females; besides various tribes of Indians not enumerated. Notwithstanding the formation of Washington Territory from Oregon, so great has been the influx of emigration, that the figures given above very inadequately represent the population of the territory, which, if recent statements may be relied on, has nearly trebled since that time. Of the population, 3175 were born in the territory; 8817 in other states of the Union; 297 in England; 196 in Ireland; 115 in Scotland and Wales; 293 in British America; 155 in Germany; 45 in France; 148 in other countries; and 143 whose places of birth were unknown; 4 were insane, and 4, idiots.

Counties.—Oregon is divided into 10 counties, viz. Benton, Clackamas, Clatsop, Lane, Linn, Marion, Polk, Umpqua, Washington, and Yamhill. Capital, Salem.

Towns.—The principal towns are Portland, (population, 821,) Oregon City, Milton, (population, 692,) Salem, and Marysville.

Face of the Country, Mountains, and Minerals.—Oregon is usually divided into three portions, viz. the Lower country, or portion next the ocean; the Middle country, or that part which lies between the Cascade range and the Blue mountains; and the Upper country, or that portion which lies between the Blue and Rocky mountains. On approaching Oregon from the sea, it presents the same bold, ironbound coast as California, but with this difference, that the coast range, instead of running parallel with the Pacific, is composed of a series of highlands, nearly at right angles with the shore, through whose valleys the streams of the Callapuya or Callapooya mountains (the western limit of the Willamette valley) descend to the ocean. The first section is about from 75 to 120 miles in breadth, and includes the Willamette, Umpqua, and Rogue River valleys, the first running parallel with the sea, and the others at right angles to it. The last are S. of the Willamette valley. The large valleys vary in length from 40 to 150 miles, and from 5 to 85 miles in width. One remarkable feature of the Willamette valley is the buttes, high, conical insulated hills, of about 1000 feet in height. The Middle section covers a breadth of 160 miles, and is mostly an elevated plateau. The Upper country occupies the western slope of the Rocky mountains, and is mostly a sterile and dreary region, covered with lava, through which the rivers cut their channels to a great depth; in many places their rocky beds are inaccessible to man or beast. Oregon may be emphatically called a mountainous country. Beginning at the E., we have the lofty summits of the Rocky mountains—reaching (in Fremont's Peak) an elevation of 13,570 feet—separating the Mississippi valley from the Pacific region, and sending off spurs in a westerly direction. About halfway between the Rocky mountains and the Pacific are the Blue mountains, running nearly N. and S., but still sending off ridges in different directions. These mountains sometimes rise to the snow region, but are generally from 3000 to 4000 feet in height. The Cascade range, having the loftiest known peaks of any mountains in the United States, extend from 60° N. lat. (nearly parallel with the Pacific) to the southern part of Old California, at distances (in Oregon) varying from about 80 to 140 miles. Mount Hood, Mount Jefferson, Mount Pitt, or Mc Laughlin are the principal peaks in Oregon, of which the former, 14,000 feet in elevation above the sea level, is the highest. Finally comes the coast range, called in Oregon the Callapooya mountains: these, as has been stated, send off spurs at right angles with the ocean. The Three Buttes and Three Tetons, about the bases of the Rocky mountains, are conical elevations of considerable magnitude. The Salmon mountains cross the middle of the eastern portion of Oregon in an E. and W. direction. The mineral resources of Oregon have scarcely begun to be developed; but we have reports of rich "gold diggings" at Jacksonville and Rogue River valley, (where lumps are said to have been taken out worth from $300 to $400 each,) and at Port Orford.

Rivers, Bays, and Lakes.—There is no very considerable bay in Oregon. The Columbia, the greatest river on the Pacific slope of the continent, forms half the northern boundary, from the point where it strikes the 46th parallel to its mouth in the Pacific ocean. Its great branch, the Snake or Lewis river, and its tributaries, the Salmon, Henry, Malheur, and Owyhee, drain the great valley between the Rocky and Blue mountains. The Lewis rises in the S. E., and pursuing a N. W. course about 800 miles, passes into Washington Territory, where it joins the Columbia soon after. The Wallawalla, Umatilla, John Day's, and Fall, E. of the Cascade mountains, and the Willamette, W., are the other principal affluents of the Columbia from this territory. The Umpqua and Rogue's river, (entirely in Oregon,) and the Klamath, which passes into California, empty directly into the Pacific from the S. W. of this territory. There are several small lakes between the Cascade and Blue mountains, and near the base of the Rocky mountains. The principal of the former are Klamath, Abert, Pitt's, Salt, and Sylanilles; and of the latter, Godere and Jackson's. The Columbia is navigable to the Cascade range, about 130 miles from the sea, for large vessels, and above the Cascades for boats. The Willamette is navigable to Portland, and sometimes even to the Falls, for ocean craft. Above the Falls, small steamboats may run for nearly 100 miles. The Umpqua is navigable 25 miles for steamers, and vessels drawing 12 feet may enter its mouth. The Klamath is also navigable for a short distance. There are few capes or harbors on the coast of Oregon, which is remarkably free from great sinuosities. The most important capes are Cape Blanco, or Orford, Cape Foulweather, and Point Adams. The harbors are the Columbia river, much obstructed by sandbars and shoals, but admitting vessels of 16 feet draught, and the Umpqua river, which may be ascended by vessels drawing 8 feet water for a short distance.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—What we have already said of the mountains is perhaps sufficient, without this heading; but Oregon has other objects of interest independent of her sublime mountain scenery—first among which are the Dalles of the Columbia river, a narrowing of the channel to 100 yards between basaltic rocks, for the distance of half a mile, through which the river rushes with great violence, descending 50 feet in two miles. In freshets the water rises 60 feet, and at such times it is safe to pass in boats, but many serious accidents have occurred from attempts to pass them at low water. Forty miles below the Dalles, where the river breaks through the Cascade range, the channel again narrows to 150 yards, where the water descends 40 feet in two miles. The falls of the Willamette, on the river of the same name, are about 25 miles from its mouth, and the same number of feet in height. Here is a favorite salmon fishery, where that fish is stopped on its course up the Willamette in the spawning season. The American fall, in the Lewis river, near its head waters, is of considerable elevation. From one point in the Willamette valley, near the Rickreall river, seven peaks of the Cascade range can be seen at one view, covered with everlasting snow. According to Rev. G. Hines, "Mount St. Helen's, in the month of October, 1842, was discovered to be covered with a dense cloud of smoke, which continued to enlarge and move off, in dense masses, to the eastward, and filling the heavens in that direction, presented an appearance like that occasioned by a tremendous conflagration, viewed at a vast distance. When the first volumes of smoke had passed away, it could be distinctly seen from various parts of the country, that an eruption had taken place on the north side of St. Helen's, a little below the summit; and from the smoke that continued to issue from the chasm or crater, it was pronounced to be a volcano in active operation. When the explosion took place, the wind was N. W., and on the same day, and extending from 30 to 50 miles to the S. E., there fell showers of ashes or dust, which covered the ground in some places so as to admit of its being collected in quantities. This last phenomenon has been of frequent occurrence, and has led many to suppose that volcanic eruptions are not uncommon in this country."

Climate.—In common with the western shore of all continents, Oregon has a milder climate than the eastern side of North America. The Coast region is the mildest, and the Upper country the most rigorous in temperature. In the first, the winters generally are short, though some snow falls nearly every winter. S. and S. W. winds prevail at this season, mitigating the severity of the climate. From April to November but little rain falls. At Fort Vancouver, from June to September, the mean temperature was 67°, maximum 98°, minimum 51°. Of 106 days, 76 were fair, 19 cloudy, and 11 rainy. The winter of 1852-3 was very severe, and much snow fell, the stock dying by thousands, as they are unhoused, and no fodder is ever prepared. In the Middle region, the summers are much drier and the winters colder than E. of the Cascade mountains, the extremes varying from 18° to 108°. Daily range, 40°. No dews fall here. The Upper country is variable, having often in each day all the changes of the seasons, and is therefore unfitted for agricultural operations. Indian corn is liable to be caught by early frosts. The winter winds are from the S. and E., occasionally veering to S. W. The time of the setting in of these is very irregular, varying from October 1st to January 1st. They always bring with them copious rains, which last two or three, and even four or five months, from November to April, and constitute the rainy season. These storms are more violent on the coast, and more rain falls than in the Willamette valley. A period of fine weather often occurs in February, sometimes in March, but is generally followed by three or four weeks of cold, chilly rains from the S. W. During the latter part of winter there are light falls of snow. Though the winters are chilly, the thermometer seldom sinks to the freezing point. The mercury has sometimes fallen to 5° below zero in the Willamette valley, and to 15° at the Dalles, beyond the Cascade mountains. From what has been said it will be seen that there is great irregularity in the winters of Oregon, but mildness is the general characteristic. In the Middle region the rains are lighter and less constant, and continue for a shorter period. The country between the Blue and Rocky mountains is very dry, with a great difference between the temperature of day and night.

Soil and Productions.—It will be inferred from what has been said of the face of the country, that much of Oregon is unfit for tillage; in the Upper country or eastern portion it is almost wholly so, as far as known, both from the aridity of the soil and the irregularity of the climate. The central portion, though not generally cultivable, affords in many places excellent pasturage; but even the pastoral portion is but a small part of the whole. The great resource of the Oregonian farmers is the country W. of the Cascade range, especially in the Willamette, Umpqua, and Rogue's River valleys. The former is rarely surpassed in fertility. Wheat is here the staple; the cool evenings and the drought in the latter part of summer being unfavorable to Indian corn. Besides wheat, oats, barley, turnips, and most of the fruits and vegetables of the Middle States flourish. The indigenous fruits are the crabapple, a large red plum, strawberries, raspberries, and other berries. The bottoms of the Columbia are a very rich alluvion, but incapable of cultivation, from their liability to be overflowed; they may, however, form good pasture-lands for stock. Those portions which are beyond the reach of overflow (as the district about Fort Vancouver) are exceedingly productive. On the triangle formed by the Columbia on the N. and the Pacific on the W. is a tract of land of great fertility, extending back 25 miles to the mountains. This is not suited to wheat, but very fruitful in potatoes, oats, peas, turnips, and other vegetables, and is excellent for pasturage. According to the census of 1850, Oregon had under cultivation 132,857 acres of land, producing 211,943 bushels of wheat; 106 of rye; 2918 of Indian corn; 65,146 of oats; 6566 of peas and beans; 91,326 of potatoes; 29,680 pounds of wool; 211,464 of butter; 36,980 of cheese; orchard products valued at $1271; market do., $90,241; live stock, $1,876,189, and slaughtered animals, $164,530.

Forest Trees.—Oregon is particularly celebrated for its forests of gigantic pine. A species of fir, called Lambert's pine, grows in the lower region to an enormous size, sometimes attaining a height of nearly 300 feet, and a girth of 40 feet, often from 24 to 36 feet. This is the great timber of the country, and is largely exported to the Sandwich Islands and to California. The other timber is the hemlock, cedar, oak, ash, maple, laurel, pine, willow, balm of Gilead, dogwood, cottonwood, and alder. The oak, next to the fir, is the most valuable wood, and is found mostly in the Willamette and Umpqua valleys. In the Middle region timber is scarce, and consists mostly of soft wood; pine and fir grow on the Blue mountains.

Animals.—The wild animals are deer, black and grizzly bears, elks, foxes, wolves, antelopes, beavers, muskrats, and martens. The beavers are fast diminishing. In spring and fall, geese, ducks, and other waterfowl are abundant. Large quantities of salmon are caught in the Columbia river and its tributaries, and are of excellent quality. Among the other fish are sturgeon, cod, carp, sole, flounders, ray, perch, herring, and smelt, with crabs, clams, oysters, and mussels in abundance.

Manufactures.—In this department of industry it is hardly to be supposed that this new region has made much progress, though she has every facility for pursuing them when the time comes for doing so.

Internal Improvements are limited, as yet, to common and plank road making.

Commerce.—We have but few facts on this subject. Five steamers ply from Portland to different points on the Columbia, besides a regular line of steamers to San Francisco: tonnage, 10634½. Oregon exports to California, lumber, stock hogs, beef, butter, eggs, chickens, pork, flour, &c. Large quantities of cattle are driven S. to the mines of California. Trade is carried on with Rio Janeiro, Europe, and the Sandwich Islands.

Education.—The census report for 1850 gives to Oregon 32 academies. Oregon Institute, belonging to the Methodists, 6 miles from Salem, is a flourishing establishment, with about 100 students. The Presbyterians have an academy on Tualatin plains, and there are two female institutes at Oregon City.

Government.—The government is similar to that of all other territories.—See NEW MEXICO.

History.—Oregon seems to have been first trodden by European feet about 1775, when a Spanish navigator visited Juan de Fuca straits. Cook coasted along its shores in 1778. The Columbia river is believed to have been first made known to the civilized world in 1791, by Captain Gray, of the ship Columbia, of Boston, United States, who saw the mouth of the river, but did not enter it till May of the next year, when he gave it the name of his ship. From this time up to 1804, the coast of Oregon was occasionally visited by British and American fur-traders. In that year, President Jefferson sent out an exploring party under Lewis and Clarke, who passed the winter of 1805-6 at the mouth of the Columbia. After this period, overland expeditions by fur-traders became common, and these, with the British Hudson Bay Company, held joint possession of the country, (but not without jealous rivalries and bloody contests,) till the treaty of 1846, which gave all below 49° N. lat. to the United States. Emigration from the United States, for the purpose of settlement, commenced in 1839. Its growth for the time is probably retarded by the gold mines of California attracting nearly all travellers and settlers, but their ultimate prosperity will most likely be mutual, the mining population of the one furnishing a market for the agricultural products of the other. There is no doubt that in future times Oregon will play an important part in the commerce of the Pacific ocean, and particularly that of the Polynesian groups.

OREGON, a new county in the S. part of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas, has an area of 1700 square miles. It is drained by the sources of the Eleven Points and Spring rivers, which flow south-eastward into the Big Black river. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 69,201 bushels of corn; 2257 of wheat, and 5512 of oats. It contained 4 churches, and 83 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Thomasville. Population, 1432; of whom 1414 were free, and 18, slaves.

OREGON, a post-office of Chautauque co., New York.

OREGON, a small post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

OREGON, a post-office of Jefferson co., Ala.

OREGON, a small village of Yell co., Ark.

OREGON, a post-office of Lincoln co., Tenn.

OREGON, a thriving village of Mercer co., Kentucky, on the Kentucky river, at the head of slack-water navigation, about 20 miles S. W. from Lexington. Beef and pork are packed here and shipped in steamboats.

OREGON, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Lucas co., Ohio. Population, 436.

OREGON, a thriving post-village of Seneca co., Ohio, on the railroad from Cincinnati to Sandusky city, 168 miles from the former. Population, about 400.

OREGON, a post-office of Warren co., Ohio.

OREGON, a township in the N. W. part of Lapeer co., Michigan. Population, 205.

OREGON, a post-office of Clarke co., Ind.

OREGON, a post-township in Ogle co., Illinois. Population, 540.

OREGON, a township in Schuyler co., Illinois. Population, 747.

OREGON, a post-village, capital of Holt co., Mo., 210 N. W. by W. from Jefferson City.

OREGON, a small village of Lawrence co., Missouri.

OREGON, a post-village of Dane co., Wisconsin, 12 miles S. from Madison.

OREGON CITY, a thriving post-village, capital of Ogle co., Illinois, on the right bank of Rock river, 176 miles N. by E. from Springfield. It is handsomely situated between the shore and a bluff, which rises in the form of an amphitheatre, at the distance of about a mile, and meets the river a little below the town. Population in 1850, 540.

OREGON CITY, a post-town, capital of Clackamas county, Oregon, on the right bank of the Willamette river, about 50 miles below Salem. It is situated in a cañon, (pronounced kan-yōn'—a narrow river-valley shut in by high banks or walls,) and has great manufacturing facilities, a fall in the river at this place affording immense water-power. Oregon City was formerly the capital of the territory. One or two newspapers are published here. Population, from 900 to 1000.

OREGONIA, a post-office of Tuscaloosa co., Alabama.

ORE HILL, a post-office of Litchfield co., Connecticut.

OREL, a post-office of Irwin co., Georgia.

ORFORD, a post-township of Grafton co., New Hampshire, on the left bank of the Connecticut river, 66 miles N. N. W. from Concord. Population, 1406.

ORFORDVILLE, a small post-village in the above township, 60 miles N. W. from Concord.

ORGAN CHURCH, a post-office of Rowan co., North Carolina.

ORIENT, a post-township of Aroostook co., Maine, 100 miles N. N. E. from Bangor. Population, 205.

ORIENT, a post-village of Suffolk co., New York, on Oyster Pond harbor, 100 miles E. by N. from New York.

ORION, a small post-village of Pike co., Alabama, near the Conecuh river.

ORION, a post-office of Ashley co., Ark.

ORION, a post-township in Oakland co., Michigan. Population, 1119.

ORION, a post-office of Henry co., Illinois.

ORION, a small post-village in the S. part of Richland co., Wisconsin.

ORISKANY creek, in the central part of New York, rises in Madison co., and enters the Mohawk river at Oriskany

ORISKANY, a post-village of Oneida co., New York, on the Erie canal, and the Syracuse and Utica railroad, 7 miles N. W. from Utica. It has an extensive woollen factory.

ORISKANY FALLS, a post-village of Augusta township, Oneida county, New York, on Oriskany creek, and on the Chenango canal, 18 miles S. W. from Utica. It has several factories moved by water-power.

ORIZABA, a post-office of Tippah co., Miss.

ORLAND, a post-township of Hancock co., Maine, on the E. side of Penobscot river, 55 miles N. E. by E. from Augusta, contains a village of its own name. Pop., 1580.

ORLAND, a thriving post-village of Steuben co., Indiana, on Crooked creek, 10 miles N. W. from Angola.

ORLAND, a post-office of Cook co., Illinois.

ORLEANS, a county in the N. part of Vermont, has an area of about 700 square miles. It is drained by the head waters of the Lamoille and Missisquoi rivers, and by the Black, Barton, Clyde, and other smaller streams, which afford invaluable water-power. It contains numerous ponds, and a part of Lake Memphremagog lies within its borders. The surface is somewhat uneven, and the soil fertile and easily cultivated, and although almost too cold for Indian corn, produces the other grains, grasses, and fruits, in abundance. Wheat, Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 58,515 bushels of wheat; 70,306 of corn; 407,132 of potatoes; 45,288 tons of hay, and 645,160 pounds of butter. There were 4 woollen factories, 2 foundries, 15 saw mills, 9 starch factories, and 5 tanneries. It contained 24 churches, 1 newspaper office, 4274 pupils attending public schools, and 141 attending other schools. Orleans county abounds in iron ore, chromate of iron, and other valuable minerals. Capital, Irasburg. Pop., 15,707.

ORLEANS, a county in the W. N. part of New York, has an area of 379 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by Lake Ontario, and is principally drained by Oak Orchard, Johnson's, and Sandy creeks, which afford valuable water-power. The surface in the N. part is gently undulating, more elevated in the S., the Mountain ridge passing through it. The soil is generally fertile, and adapted to grass and grain. Wheat, Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 421,126 bushels of corn; 854,676 bushels of wheat; 141,157 of potatoes; 26,875 tons of hay, and 704,881 pounds of butter. There were 17 flour and grist mills, 43 saw mills, 2 woollen factories, 5 iron foundries, 2 linseed-oil mills, and 12 tanneries. It contained 44 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 7817 pupils attending public schools, and 517 attending academies or other schools. Bog iron ore, and some sulphur and salt springs are found. The Erie canal and the railroad connecting Rochester and Niagara falls traverse this county. Organized in 1824, having previously formed part of Genesee county, and named from Orleans, a town of France. Capital, Albion. Population, 28,501.

ORLEANS, a parish in the S. E. part of Louisiana, has an area of about 150 square miles. The Mississippi river forms its boundary on the S., Lake Pontchartrain on the N., and Lake Borgne on the East. The surface is level, the greater part consisting of a morass, covered with coarse grass, and overflowed daily by the tide. The river is bordered with fertile, arable land, which produces sugarcane, Indian corn, and fruits for the New Orleans market. In 1850 there were raised in the parish, 52,505 gallons of molasses; 1495 hogsheads of sugar, and 32,180 bushels of corn. There were 3 ship-yards, 6 iron foundries, 5 brass foundries, 4 brick manufacturing, 7 saw and planing mills, 1 grist mill, and 113 boot and shoe factories. It contained 30 churches, 19 newspaper offices, 6246 pupils attending public schools, and 2883 attending academies and other schools. Several railroads are in course of construction, a notice of which may be found in the article NEW ORLEANS. Capital, New Orleans. Population, 119,460; of whom 101,392 were free, and 18,068, slaves.

ORLEANS, a post-township in Barnstable co., Massachusetts, 77 miles S. E. by E. from Boston. Population, 1848.

ORLEANS, a township of Jefferson co., New York, 14 miles N. from Watertown. Population, 3265.

ORLEANS, a post-village of Ontario co., New York, on Flint creek, 190 miles W. from Albany.

ORLEANS, a post-office of Alleghany co., Maryland.

ORLEANS, a post-office of Fauquier co., Virginia, 112 miles N. by W. from Richmond.

ORLEANS, a township in Ionia co., Michigan. Population, 491.

ORLEANS, a post-township in Elkhart co., Indiana. Population, 1402.

ORLEANS, a pleasant post-village of Orange co., Indiana, on the New Albany and Salem railroad, 56 miles N. W. from New Albany.

ORLEANS, a post-office of Morgan co., Ill.

ORLEANS, a small post-village of Polk co., Missouri, on the E. fork of Sac river, about 120 miles S. W. from Jefferson City.

ORLEANS FOUR CORNERS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

ORME'S STORE, a post-office of Bledsoe co., Tennessee, 125 miles E. by S. from Nashville.

ORNEVILLE, a post-township of Piscataquis co., Maine, 70 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 424.

ORONO, a post-township in Penobscot co., Maine, on the W. side of the Penobscot river, 75 miles N. E. from Augusta, intersected by the Bangor and Piscataquis railroad. Pop., 2785.

ORONOCO, a post-office of Amherst co., Va.

ORONOKO, a township in the S. central part of Berrien co., Michigan, on the St. Joseph's river.

ORPHAN'S ISLAND, at the entrance to Penobscot river, opposite the town of Bucksport, Penobscot co., Maine. It is 4 miles long, and contains about 5000 acres.

ORRIN GLEN, a post-office of Delaware co., Iowa.

ORRINGTON, a post-township in Penobscot co., Maine, on the Penobscot river, 66 miles N. E. by E. from Augusta. It contains a village of the same name, which has considerable manufactures. Pop., 1852.

ORRSTOWN, a post-village of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles from Chambersburg. It is handsomely built, and contains about 350 inhabitants.

ORRSVILLE, a post-village of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

ORRSVILLE, a village of Gwinnett co., Georgia, on the Chattahoochee river, 105 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

ORRVILLE, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., North Carolina.

ORRVILLE, a post-office of Dallas co., Ala.

ORRVILLE, a post-office of Wayne co., Ohio.

ORTONVILLE, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

ORVAN, a township in Fulton co., Illinois. Population, 527.

ORWELL, a post-township in Rutland co., Vermont, near Lake Champlain, 46 miles S. W. of Montpelier, has 1 bank. Pop. 1470.

ORWELL, a post-township in the N. E. part of Oswego co., New York. Pop., 1106.

ORWELL, a post-township in the N. E. part of Bradford co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1241.

ORWELL, a post-township in the S. W. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Population, 825.

ORWIGSBURG, a post-borough of West Brunswick township, Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, on the turnpike leading from Reading to Pottsville, 8 miles S. E. from the latter. It was formerly the county seat. It contains 3 churches, 1 academy, and a newspaper office. Population in 1850, 909.

OSAGE, a large river, which rises in the E. part of the Indian Territory, and entering Missouri, near the N. W. corner of Bates co., falls into the Missouri river 10 miles below Jefferson City. Its general direction is nearly eastward, and its whole length is estimated at 500 miles. It is the largest affluent which the Missouri river receives in this state. Boats of moderate size can ascend 200 miles or more, when the water is high. The region drained by this river is occupied by fertile prairies interspersed with woodlands.

OSAGE, a county in the E. central part of Missouri, contains about 850 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the Missouri river, on the N. W. by the Osage river, and intersected by the Gasconade and Marais rivers. The surface is uneven. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 301,383 bushels of corn; 26,229 of wheat; 43,410 of oats, and 79,409 pounds of butter. It contained 3 churches, and 208 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Linn. Population, 6704; of whom 6434 were free, and 270, slaves.

OSAGE, a township in Benton co., Arkansas. Population, 1454.

OSAGE, a post-township in Carroll co., Arkansas. Population, 719.

OSAGE, a post-village of Crawford co., Missouri, 91 miles S. E. from Jefferson City.

OSAGE, a post-office of Fremont co., Iowa.

OSAGE FORK, of Gasconade river, Missouri, rises in Texas county, and unites with the main stream in the N. E. part of La Clede co.

OSAGE FORK of Maramec river. See MARAMEC.

OSAGE INDIANS, a tribe in the E. part of Indian Territory, S. of the Osage river.

OSAGE MILLS, a post-village in Benton co., Arkansas.

OSANIPPA, a post-office of Chambers co., Ala.

OSBORNE, a small post-village of Rock co., Wisconsin, about 28 miles S. E. from Madison.

OSBORN MILL, a district in Harris co., Ga.

OSBORN'S BRIDGE, a post-office of Fulton co., New York.

OSBORN'S FORD, a post-office of Scott co., Virginia.

OSBORN'S HOLLOW, a post-village of Broome co., N. Y., 130 miles W. by S. from Albany.

OSCEO. See OSSEO.

OSCEOLA, a new and unorganized county in the N. W. central part of Michigan, contains 576 square miles. It is intersected by the Maskegon river. It is not named in the census of 1850.

OSCEOLA, a county in the N. W. part of Iowa, bordering on Minnesota Territory, has an area of about 535 square miles. It is drained by the head waters of the Little Sioux river which flows into the Missouri. This county is not included in the census of 1850. County seat not located. Named in honor of the celebrated Seminole chief Osceola.

OSCEOLA, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Lewis co., N. Y. Pop., 412.

OSCEOLA, a post-office of Tioga co., Pa.

OSCEOLA, a post-office of Cherokee county, Alabama.

OSCEOLA, a small post-village, capital of Mississippi co., Arkansas, on the Mississippi river. 87 miles above Memphis.

OSCEOLA, a post-village of Crawford co., Ohio, 70 miles N. from Columbus.

OSCEOLA, a township in the N. E. part of Livingston co., Michigan. Population, 960.

OSCEOLA, a post-office of Stark co., Illinois.

OSCEOLA, a post-village of St. Clair co., Missouri, on the Osage river, 132 miles W. S. W. from Jefferson City, has 1 newspaper office.

OSCEOLA, a post-office of Clarke co., Iowa.

OSCEOLA, a post-office of Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin.

OSCEOLA CENTRE, a post-village of Livingston co., Michigan, 50 miles N. W. by W. from Detroit.

OSCEOLA MILLS, a small village of St. Croix co., Wisconsin.

OSCODA, a new and unorganized county in the N. E. part of Michigan, contains 576 square miles. It is intersected by the Aux Sable river, which flows from W. to E. The census of 1850 gives no returns for this county.

OSHAUKUTA, or HILL'S CORNERS, a small post-village of Columbia co., Wisconsin, 30 miles N. from Madison.

OSHKOSH, a flourishing post-village, capital of Winnebago county, Wisconsin, is situated on the Neenah or Fox river, at its entrance into Lake Winnebago, about 90 miles N. N. E. from Madison. The lumber trade is carried on here extensively, the river and lake being navigable by steamboats. It contains 3 churches, an academy, a land-office, 3 newspaper offices, 1 manufactory of pumps, 1 of threshing machines, 1 foundry, 6 mills, 9 dry-goods stores, and about 20 other stores. Plank-roads are projected from Oshkosh to Waupun and Neenah. Laid out about 1846. Population in 1853, estimated at 2500.

OSHTEMO, a township in Kalamazoo co., Michigan. Population, 587.

OSKALOOSA, a flourishing post-village, capital of Mahaska county, Iowa, 4 miles N. from the Des Moines river, and 70 miles W. S. W. from Iowa City. It has an elevated and healthy situation in the midst of an undulating and fertile country, in which prairies and forests of fine timber are distributed. Limestone and stoncoal abound in many parts of the county, and the streams furnish extensive water-power. It contained in 1851 several churches, a state normal school, 10 dry-goods stores, and 2 steam mills. A newspaper is published here. A plank-road about 100 miles long is in progress from Oskaloosa to Burlington. Four-horse coaches run daily from this place in several directions. Laid out in 1844. Population, June, 1851, 916; in 1852, about 1500.

OSNABURG, a post-township in the S. E. part of Stark co., Ohio. Population, 2225.

OSNABURG, a small post-village in the above township, 124 miles N. E. from Columbus.

OSOLO, a township in Elkhart co., Indiana. Population, 471.

OSSABAW ISLAND, of Bryan co., Georgia, at the mouth of Ogeechee river, is about 10 miles long. Ossabaw sound is situated immediately N. of the island.

OSSAWA, a post-office of Clinton co., Mich.

OSSAO, a village of Hillsdale co., Michigan, on the Southern railroad, 5 miles E. from Hillsdale, has about 100 inhabitants.

OSSIAX, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Alleghany co., New York. It contains a village of the same name. Pop., 1283.

OSSIAX, a small village of Wells co., Indiana, 11 miles N. from Bluffton.

OSSLAN, a post-office of Winneshiek co., Io.

OSSIN river, a small stream of Wisconsin, flows into Rock river, in Dodge co., near the S. end of Winnebago marsh.

OSSINING, a township of Westchester co., New York, on the Hudson river, 32 miles N. from New York. It contains the village of Sing Sing. Population, 4939.

OSSIPEE, a post-village, capital of Carroll co., New Hampshire, on the W. side of Ossipee lake, 45 miles N. N. E. from Concord. Population of the township, 2123.

OSSIPEE LAKE, in the E. part of New Hampshire, in Carroll co. It is nearly circular, being about 6 miles in its greater, and 4 or 5 miles in its smaller diameter.

OSSIPEE MOUNTAIN, of Grafton co., New Hampshire, a range lying immediately W. of Ossipee lake.

OSSIPEE RIVER forms the outlet of Ossipee lake, in Strafford co., New Hampshire, and flowing easterly into Maine, after forming part of the boundary between York and Oxford counties, falls into the Saco river.

OSTEND, a post-office of Washington co., O.

OSTEND, a post-office of McHenry co., Ill.

OSWAYO creek rises in the N. part of Pa., and joins the Alleghany river in New York.

OSWAYO, a post-township in the N. N. W. part of Potter co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 244.

OSWEGATCHIE river rises in Lewis co., New York, and flowing through St. Lawrence county, empties itself into the St. Lawrence river, at Ogdensburg. Its whole length is about 120 miles. The outlet of Black lake enters it about 4 miles from its mouth.

OSWEGATCHIE, a township of St. Lawrence co., New York, on the St. Lawrence river. Population including Ogdensburg, 7756.

OSWEGO river, New York, a stream forming the outlet of all the small lakes in Western New York. The Seneca river, after having received the Canandaigua, the Cayuga and Oswego outlets, the Oneida river, and many other smaller streams, all discharge their waters into the Oswego, which flows in nearly a straight course N. N. W. to Lake Ontario. Length, 24 miles; breadth, about 200 yards. It is a very powerful stream, and falls, during its entire course, above 120 feet.

OSWEGO, a county in the N. N. E. part of New York, has an area of about 960 square miles. It is bounded on the N. W. by Lake Ontario, and in part on the S. by Oneida lake and river, and is drained by the Oswego and Salmon rivers, and other smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. The surface in the southern portion is slightly undulating; in the N. E. more elevated and adapted to grazing. The soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 396,605 bushels of corn; 320,166 of potatoes; 60,930 tons of hay; 2,031,574 pounds of butter, and 1,340,545 of cheese. There were 45 flour and grist mills, 1 cotton factory, 5 woollen factories, 259 saw mills, 6 iron foundries, and 27 tanneries. It contained 64 churches, 8 newspaper offices, 14,710 pupils attending public schools, and 1078 attending academies or other schools. This county contains iron ore and sandstone, and some very valuable salt springs are situated in it. Its lake coast of upwards of 35 miles affords great facilities for navigation. It is traversed by the Oswego canal, by the Syracuse and Oswego railroad, and by the Rome and Watertown railroad. Organized in 1816. Seats of justice, Oswego and Pulaski. Population, 62,198.

OSWEGO, a city, port of entry, and semi-capital of Oswego county, New York, is situated on the S. E. shore of Lake Ontario, and on both sides of Oswego river, 35 miles N. N. W. from Syracuse, and 183 miles W. N. W. from Albany. Lat. 43° 28' N., lon. 76° 35' W. It is the most populous and flourishing town (belonging to the United States) on Lake Ontario, and is very advantageously situated for trade. The harbor formed by the mouth of the river is one of the best on the lake, and has been improved by the United States Government, with a substantial pier about 1200 feet in length. It is defended by Fort Oswego, on the eastern bank of the river. The water within the pier is from 10 to 20 feet deep. The Oswego canal, and the Oswego and Syracuse railroad, of which this is the northern terminus, connect at Syracuse with the Erie canal and the Central railroad. A bridge about 700 feet long connects the opposite banks of the river. The city is handsomely built with streets about 100 feet wide, intersecting each other at right angles. Oswego contains 11 churches; the First and Second Presbyterian, built of red sandstone, are large and beautiful edifices; a court house, custom house, 2 banks, several large hotels, an academy, and other seminaries. There are 4 or 5 newspapers published here, 2 or 3 of which are dailies. The falls of the river supply abundant water-power to the manufactories of Oswego, among which are 10 or 12 large flouring mills, and a starch factory, which employs about 100 men. The building called Doolittle's Block is very large and handsome, and contains one of the most extensive halls in the northern part of the state. The shipping of the port, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 26,107 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons enrolled and licensed, all of which was employed in the coast trade, and 3593 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 1784, (tons, 240,253,) of which 1140 (tons, 89,822) were by foreign vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 1731, (tons, 234,625,) of which 567 (tons, 142,397) were by American vessels. During the year 10 vessels were built, with an aggregate burthen of 765 $\frac{3}{4}$. The reported value of exports and imports in 1846 was \$9,502,980. In 1851, the imports coastwise amounted to \$6,083,036; from Canada, \$1,784,412; total, \$7,867,448. The exports coastwise were \$11,471,071; of domestic goods to Canada, \$2,291,911; foreign goods to Canada, \$915,900; total, \$14,678,882. Entire trade of the port in 1851, \$22,546,330. The Canadian trade of Oswego is nearly one-half of the entire commerce of the United States with Canada. Population in 1840, 4665; in 1850, 12,205; in 1853, about 25,000.

OSWEGO, a post-village of Kosciusko co., Indiana, at the outlet of Tippecanoe lake, 113 miles N. from Indianapolis. Population, in 1853, about 250.

OSWEGO, a post-township in Kendall co., Illinois. Population, 1599.

OSWEGO, a handsome and flourishing post-village of Oswego township, capital of Kendall county, Illinois, is finely situated on the left bank of Fox river, 45 miles W. S. W. from Chicago. Fox river is a beautiful and rapid stream, affording almost unlimited hydraulic power. Two plank-roads have been commenced, which will connect Oswego with Chicago and Joliet; and the Chicago and Aurora railroad passes near this village. Oswego contains a handsome stone court house, 2 or 3 churches, a large stone edifice for schools, 8 or 10 stores, a mechanics' hall, and several mills. Pop. in 1853, about 1000.

OSWEGO FALLS, a post-township of Oswego co., New York, on Lake Ontario, near the mouth of Oswego river. Population, 2445.

OSWEGO VILLAGE, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

OSWICHEE, a post-office of Russell co., Ala. OTEGO creek, of Otsego co., New York, flows southward into the Susquehanna river.

OTEGO, a post-township in the S. W. part of Otsego co., New York. Population, 1792.

OTEGO, a post-village in the above township, about 25 miles S. S. W. from Coopers-town. It has 3 churches.

OTIS, a post-township in Hancock co., Me., 70 miles E. N. E. from Augusta. Pop., 124.

OTIS, a post-township in Berkshire co.,

Massachusetts, 115 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 1224.

OTISCO, a small lake in Onondaga co., New York, about 4 miles E. from Skaneateles lake. Length, near 4 miles.

OTISCO, a post-township of Onondaga co., New York, 15 miles S. W. from Syracuse. Population, 1804.

OTISCO, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Ionia co., Mich. Pop., 1018.

OTISFIELD, a post-township in Cumberland co., Maine, 25 miles S. S. W. from Augusta. Population, 1171.

OTISVILLE, a post-village of Orange county, New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 85 miles from New York city. Named in honor of Isaac Otis, its first settler. The milk trains for New York start from this place.

OTSDAWA, a post-village of Otsego co., N. Y., about 85 miles W. by S. from Albany.

OTSEGO LAKE, in the E. central part of New York, and in the N. part of Otsego co., is about 9 miles long, and from 1 to 2 miles broad. It is the source of Susquehanna river.

OTSEGO, a county in the eastern part of New York, has an area of about 950 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Unadilla river, and drained by the E. branch of the Susquehanna, and by Butternuts, Shenevas, and Otego creeks, which supply motive-power to numerous mills. Canaderaga and Otsego lakes are comprised within its limits. The surface is broken and hilly. The soil is various; generally fertile, but rather better adapted to grass than grain. Oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 921,989 bushels of oats; 500,372 of potatoes; 113,209 tons of hay; 2,497,871 pounds of butter, and 2,049,673 of cheese. There were 8 cotton and 6 woollen factories, 12 iron foundries, 24 flour and grist mills, 1 paper mill, and 84 saw mills. It contained 113 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 14,515 pupils attending public schools, and 406 attending academies or other schools. Iron ore, sandstone, limestone, and marble are its principal mineral productions. Capital, Cooperstown. Population, 48,638.

OTSEGO, originally called OKKUDO, an unorganized county in the N. part of Michigan; area estimated at 576 square miles. It is drained by the Sheboygan river, which flows northward into Lake Huron. The census of 1850 furnishes no returns for this county.

OTSEGO, a township in the N. part of Otsego co., New York, on the W. side of Otsego lake. Population, 3901.

OTSEGO, a post-village of Muskingum co., Ohio, 73 miles E. from Columbus.

OTSEGO, a post-township in the S. E. part of Allegan co., Michigan, intersected by the Kalamazoo river. Population, 818.

OTSEGO, a township in Steuben co., Indiana. Population, 541.

OTSEGO, a post-village of Lake co., Illinois, 42 miles N. N. W. from Chicago.

OTSEGO, a post-office of Ray co., Missouri.

OTSEGO, a post-township of Columbia co., Wisconsin. Population, 420.

OTSEGO, a post-village in the above township, about 15 miles S. E. from Portage.

OTSELIC river rises in Madison co., near the centre of New York, and flowing nearly south-westward, falls into Tioughnioga river, in Broome county.

OTSELIC, a post-township in the N. W. part of Chenango co., New York. Pop., 1800.

OTSUAGO, a post-office of Montgomery co., New York.

OTTAWA river, of Ohio, rises near the N. line of Lucas co., and enters Maumee bay at the W. end of Lake Erie.

OTTAWA, a county in the N. N. W. part of Ohio, bordering on Lake Erie, has an area of 256 square miles. It is intersected by Portage river and Toussaint creek. Sandusky bay washes its S. E. border. The surface is nearly level; the soil fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 55,584 bushels of corn; 23,288 of wheat; 12,968 of oats, and 4445 tons of hay. It contained 5 churches, and 1294 pupils attending public schools. It is intersected by the railroad from Cleveland to Toledo. Capital, Port Clinton. Population, 3308.

OTTAWA, a county in the W. part of Michigan, bordering on Lake Michigan, contains about 800 square miles. It is intersected by the Grand and Maskego rivers, and also drained by Black river and Crockery creek. The surface is mostly undulating or rolling, and is covered with forests of pine and other timber. The soil is a rich sandy loam. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, hay, and wool are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 3314 bushels of wheat; 23,995 of corn; 25,152 of potatoes, and 1502 tons of hay. Lumber is one of the chief articles of export. Iron ore is found in the county. Steamboats navigate the Grand river. Capital, Grand Haven. Population, 5587.

OTTAWA, a post-office of Ottawa co., Ohio.

OTTAWA, a township in the N. N. W. part of Ottawa county, Michigan. Population, 430.

OTTAWA, a flourishing town, capital of La Salle county, Illinois, is situated on both sides of the Illinois river, just below the mouth of Fox river, and on the Chicago and Rock Island railroad, 88 miles W. S. W. from Chicago. The Illinois and Michigan canal connects it with Chicago. Improvements are being made in the rapids of the Illinois river, a few miles below the town, which will render it navigable for steamboats at all stages of water. The value of the grain, &c. shipped at this port in 1852 was estimated at $650,000. The Fox river at this place has a fall of about 29 feet, producing a water-power which is said to be unsurpassed by any in the state. Ottawa contains several churches, 1 bank, 2 newspaper offices, and a number of large flouring mills and factories. Rich beds of coal are found in the vicinity. The supreme court for the north division of the state is holden here. Population in 1850, 2783; in 1853, estimated at 3500.

OTTAWA, a post-township in the S. W. part of Waukesha co., Wisconsin. Pop., 793.

OTTAWA, a post-village in the above township, 30 miles W. by S. from Milwaukee.

OTTAWA CITY, a post-office of Ottawa co., O.

OTTAWA CREEK, Ohio, flows into the Auglaize river, near Kalida, in Putnam county.

OTTAWA LAKE, a post-office of Monroe co., Michigan.

OTTER BRIDGE, a post-office of Bedford co., Virginia.

OTTERBURNE, a small village of Lafayette co., Wisconsin.

OTTER CREEK rises in Bennington county, in the W. N. W. part of Vermont, and flowing in a N. N. W. course through Rutland county, falls into Lake Champlain in Addison county. At several of the towns on its banks there are excellent mill seats. Its whole length is about 90 miles, and it is navigable for large vessels from the lake to Vergennes, about 8 miles from its mouth.

OTTER CREEK, Texas, flows into Trinity river from the N. in Anderson county.

OTTER CREEK, of Indiana, flows into the Wabash about 10 miles N. from Terre Haute.

OTTER CREEK, of Monroe co., Missouri, flows eastward into the N. fork of Salt river a few miles above Florida.

OTTER CREEK, a post-office of Jackson co., Michigan.

OTTER CREEK, a township in Vigo co., Indiana. Population, 789.

OTTER CREEK, a post-village of Jersey co., Illinois, 38 miles N. N. W. from St. Louis.

OTTER CREEK, a post-office of Jackson co., Iowa.

OTTER PEAKS, Va. See PEAKS OF OTTER.

OTTER RIVER, a small stream in the S. part of Virginia, rises in Bedford co., at the base of the celebrated Peaks of Otter, and flowing south-eastward, falls into Staunton river in Campbell county.

OTTER RIVER, of Missouri. See LOUTRE.

OTTER VILLAGE, a small post-village of Ripley co., Indiana, about 50 miles W. from Cincinnati.

OTTERVILLE, a post-office of Orange co. N. Y.

OTTERVILLE, a post-village of Cooper co., Mo., 50 miles W. N. W. from Jefferson City.

OTTO, a post-township in the N. part of Cattaraugus co., New York. Pop., 2267.

OTTO, a post-village of Fulton co., Illinois, 57 miles S. by E. from Knoxville.

OTTOBINE, a post-office of Rockingham co., Virginia.

OTTOKEE, a post-office of Fulton co., Ohio.

OTTSVILLE, a small post-village of Bucks co., Pa., 112 miles E. from Harrisburg.

OTTUMWA, a thriving post-village, capital of Wapello county, Iowa, on the left bank of the Des Moines river, 75 miles N. W. from Keokuk. Improvements have been commenced on the river, which, when finished, will render it navigable for steamboats. The village is surrounded by a rich farming country. One or two newspapers are published here.

OUACHITA (pronounced, and sometimes written Washitaw) CITY, a post-village of Union parish, Louisiana, on the Washita river, about 200 miles N. N. W. from Baton Rouge. A newspaper is published here.

OULEOUT, a post-office of Delaware co., N. Y.

OURY'S, a post-office of Hamilton co., Ohio.

OUSLEY'S BAR, a small town of Yuba co., California, is situated on Yuba river, 14 miles above its junction with Feather river, and about 110 miles N. N. E. of Benicia. Population, 390.

OUTAGAMIE, a county in the N. E. central part of Wisconsin, contains 675 square miles. It is intersected by Neenah and Wolf rivers. The surface is nearly level, and mostly covered with forests of pine and other timber, from which large quantities of lumber are procured. The soil is moderately productive. Lumber, grass, potatoes, Indian corn, and oats are the staples. The Neenah river furnishes abundant water-power. Outagamie was separated from Brown county in 1850. Capital, Appleton.

OUTLET, a post-office of Lake co., Indiana.

OVERALLS, a post-office of Warren co., Va.

OVERFIELD, a post-office of Barbour co., Va.

OVERMAN'S FERRY, a post-office of Muscatine co., Iowa.

OVERSHOLZVILLE, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

OVERSLAUGH, New York, in the Hudson river, 3 miles below Albany. The channel of the river here is obstructed by sandbars which render the navigation difficult at low tide.

OVERTON, a county in the N. part of Tennessee, bordering on Kentucky; area estimated at 700 square miles. It is intersected by Obie's, or Obed's river, an affluent of Cumberland river, which flows along the N. W. border. The surface is mountainous, especially in the E. part. The soil is mostly fertile. Indian corn, oats, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 622,485 bushels of corn; 63,824 of oats; 104,885 pounds of butter, and 63,752 of tobacco. It contained 23 churches, and 1723 pupils attending public schools. Iron ore and stone coal are abundant. It is well timbered, and is amply supplied with water-power. Obed's river is navigable by steamboats 60 miles in this county. Capital, Livingston. Population, 11,211; of whom 10,146 were free, and 1065, slaves.

OVERTON, a small village of Claiborne parish, Louisiana.

OVID, a post-township in the S. part of Seneca co., New York. Population, 2248.

OVID, a post-village, semi-capital of Seneca county, New York, is pleasantly situated in the above township, on the dividing ridge between Cayuga and Seneca lakes, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from each, and about 190 miles W. from Albany. It has a beautiful view of Seneca lake, and contains a court house, an academy, 3 meeting houses, a newspaper office, and 8 stores. Population, about 700.

OVID, a post-office of Franklin co., Ohio.

OVID, a post-township in the S. E. part of Branch co., Michigan. Population, 710.

OVID, a post-village in Madison co., Ind.

OVID, a post-office of Lee co., Illinois.

OWASCO (o-wos'ko) lake, in the S. E. central part of Cayuga county, New York, is about 11 miles long, and from one-third to three-quarters of a mile wide.

OWASCO, a post-township of Cayuga co., New York, on the E. shore of Owasco lake. Population, 1254. It contains a village of the same name.

OWASCO CREEK, of Cayuga county, New York, is the outlet of Owasco lake, flowing into Seneca river.

OWASCO LAKE, a post-office of Cayuga co., New York.

OWASSO, a post-township in the N. W. central part of Shiawassee co., Mich. Pop., 392.

OWASSO, a post-village in the above township, on the Shiawassee river, 27 miles N. E. from Lansing. The village has 3 stores and several mills. Population, about 300.

OWEGO creek, of New York, is formed by the East and West branches, which unite in Tioga county. It flows nearly southward, and enters the E. branch of the Susquehanna river at Owego.

OWEGO, a handsome post-village in Owego township, and capital of Tioga county, New York, at the junction of the Owego creek with the Susquehanna river, where the former is crossed by the New York and Erie railroad, 247 miles from New York city. The lumber trade is extensively carried on. There are several, flour, plaster, and woollen mills in this place, a bank, a first-class hotel, and a number of stores. A wooden bridge unites the village with the opposite bank of the river. Owego is connected with Ithaca, 30 miles distant, by the Cayuga and Susquehanna railroad. Three newspapers are published here. Settled in 1791, and incorporated in 1827. Population of the township, 7159; of the village in 1853, about 4000.

OWEN, a county in the N. part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 360 square miles. The Kentucky river bounds it on the W., and the Eagle creek washes part of its eastern, and all of its north-western border. The surface is undulating, and the soil is fertile. Tobacco, corn, oats, and wheat are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 632,870 bushels of corn; 22,794 of wheat; 46,680 of oats, and 746,871 pounds of tobacco. It contained 20 churches, 585 pupils attending public schools, and 390 attending academies and other schools. The subjacent rock is the blue limestone. The navigation of the Kentucky river has been improved by locks and dams on the border. Formed in 1819, and named in honor of Colonel Abram Owen, who fell at the battle of Tippecanoe. Capital, Owenton. Population, 10,444, of whom 8930 were free, and 1514, slaves.

OWEN, a county in the S. W. central part of Indiana, contains about 400 square miles. It is drained by the West Fork of White river. The surface is mostly undulating, excepting the river bottoms, which are large and fertile. The soil of the uplands is also good, and adapted to wheat, corn, oats, and grass. In 1850 this county produced 764,029 bushels of corn; 60,327 of wheat; 58,789 of oats, and 2176 tons of hay. There were 20 churches, and 2656 pupils attending public schools. The county contains extensive beds of coal and iron ore, which yields about 40 per cent. of metal. The river is navigated by small steamers through this county, during high water. Organized in 1819. Capital, Spencer. Population, 12,106.

OWEN, a township in Dallas co., Arkansas. Population, 366.

OWEN, a township in Clarke co., Indiana. Population, 680.

OWEN, a township in Clinton co., Indiana. Population, 634.

OWEN, a township in Jackson co., Indiana. Population, 1257.

OWEN, a township in Vanderburg co., Indiana. Population, 728.

OWENBOROUGH, a thriving post-village, capital of Daviess county, Kentucky, is situated on the Ohio river, 155 miles below Louisville. The navigation is seldom obstructed either by ice or by low water below this place. Owenborough is the principal shipping port of the county, and is a place of active business. It contains a court house, 3 churches, an academy, and a branch bank. One newspaper is published here. Pop. in 1853, 1600.

OWENSBURG, a post-office of Greene co., Ind.

OWEN'S LAKE, near the centre of California, is situated in about $36^{\circ} 35'$ N. lat., and $117^{\circ} 50'$ W. lon. It is said to be about 16 miles long by 6 wide. It receives the waters of Owen's river.

OWEN'S RIVER, a small stream of Mariposa and Tulare counties, in the central part of California, flows into Owen's lake.

OWENSVILLE, a village of Westchester co., New York, on Croton river, about 112 miles S. from Albany.

OWENSVILLE, a post-village in Sampson co., North Carolina, 84 miles S. S. E. from Raleigh.

OWENSVILLE, a post-village in Saline co., Ark.

OWENSVILLE, a post-office of Clermont co., O.

OWENSVILLE, a post-village of Gibson co., Indiana, 9 miles S. W. from Princeton. Population in 1853, about 400.

OWENSVILLE, a small village of Clay co., Mo.

OWENTON, a thriving post-village, capital of Owen county, Kentucky, 28 miles N. from Frankfort. It is connected by turnpike with Warsaw, on the Ohio river: it contains 3 churches. Settled in 1828.

OWING'S LANDING, a small village of Warren co., Missouri.

OWING'S MILLS, a post-village of Baltimore co., Maryland, on the Westminster Branch railroad, 17 miles N. W. from Baltimore.

OWINGSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Bath co., Kentucky, about 45 miles E. by N. from Lexington, has a fine court house and 2 or 3 churches.

OWL CREEK, Ohio. See VERNON RIVER.

OWL PRAIRIE TOWN, a small post-village of Daviess co., Indiana, on the Wabash and Erie canal, 16 miles N. from Washington, the county seat.

OWL'S HEAD, a headland on the W. side of the entrance of Penobscot bay, Maine. On it is a fixed light, elevated 147 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 44° N., lon. 68° 58' W.

OWSLEY, a county situated in the E. central part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 460 square miles. It is drained by the Kentucky river and its three forks, which unite near the centre. The surface is hilly or mountainous, and mostly covered with forests; the soil is rather poor, excepting near the streams. Coal and lumber are the chief articles of export. In 1850 this county produced 164,021 bushels of corn; 796 of wheat, and 8843 of oats. It contained 6 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 200 pupils attending academies or other schools. Extensive mines of iron ore and stone coal have been found. Formed in 1842, and named in honor of William Owsley, late governor of the state. Capital, Booneville. Population, 3774, of whom 3638 were free, and 136, slaves.

OWYHEE RIVER, in the E. central part of Oregon, rises on the W. slope of the Blue mountains, and falls into the South branch of Lewis river.

OWBOW, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, on Oswegatchie river, about 28 miles N. N. E. from Watertown.

OWBOW, a post-office of Wyoming co., Pa.

OWBOW, a post-office of Putnam co., Ill.

OXFORD, a county in the W. part of Maine, has an area of about 1700 square miles. It is watered by the Androscoggin, Margalloway, Saco, and other smaller rivers. In the N. part are several lakes connected with Umbagog lake, one of the principal sources of the Androscoggin river. Some parts, especially in the N. and N. W., are rough and mountainous, but a large portion is fertile, and well adapted to cultivation, particularly along the banks of its many lakes and rivers. Indian corn, potatoes, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 227,439 bushels of corn; 488,168 of potatoes; 69,309 tons of hay; 837,475 pounds of butter, and 156,353 of wool. There were 4 woollen and 2 flannel factories, 1 cotton factory, 4 foundries, 19 grist mills, 1 powder mill, 45 saw and planing mills, 24 manufactories of shingles, 2 of wooden ware, and 11 tanneries. It contained 54 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 13,584 pupils attending public schools, and 908 attending other schools. The Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad passes through this county. Capital, Paris. Population, 39,763.

OXFORD, a post-township in Oxford co., Maine, 35 miles S. W. from Augusta, intersected by the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad. Population, 1233.

OXFORD, a thriving post-village of Worcester co., Massachusetts, on the Norwich and Worcester railroad, 11 miles S. by W. from Worcester. The village is built chiefly on one extended street, and contains a bank. Population of the township, 2380.

OXFORD, a post-township in New Haven co., Connecticut, 15 miles N. W. from New Haven, intersected by the Naugatuck railroad. Population, 1564.

OXFORD, a township in the S. central part of Chenango co., New York. Pop., 3227.

OXFORD, a post-village in the above township, on both sides of the Chenango river, and on the canal of that name, about 110 miles W. by S. from Albany. It contains 5 or 6 churches, an academy, and several mills and factories. Two newspapers are published here.

OXFORD, a post-village of Orange co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 62 miles from New York city.

OXFORD, a township of Warren co., New Jersey, on the Delaware river, about 48 miles N. N. W. from Trenton. Population, 1718. It contains a small village of the same name.

OXFORD, a township in the E. part of Adams co., Pennsylvania. Population, 931.

OXFORD a post-village of Adams co., Pennsylvania, on the turnpike from York to Gettysburg, 10 miles N. E. from the latter.

OXFORD, a post-borough of Chester co., Pennsylvania, 69 miles S. E. from Harrisburg. It is situated in a wealthy and populous neighbourhood, and contains about 60 dwellings.

OXFORD, a township of Philadelphia co., Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, 6 miles N. E. from Philadelphia. Population, 1787.

OXFORD, a post-village of Talbot co., Maryland, at the mouth of Treadhaven creek, a navigable arm of Chesapeake bay, 12 miles S. W. from Easton, has a flourishing military academy. It is one of the oldest ports of entry in the state. The shipping of Oxford, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 12,984 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed, of which 12,706 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons were employed in the coast trade. During the year 17 schooners, with an aggregate burthen of 914 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons were admeasured.

OXFORD, a post-office of Ritchie co., Va.

OXFORD, a flourishing post-village, capital of Granville county, North Carolina, 45 miles N. from Raleigh, and 12 miles W. from the Gaston and Raleigh railroad. The situation is beautiful and healthy. Oxford is a place of some importance for its educational establishments, having in successful operation an academy for each sex, and a Baptist female college, which was opened in 1851. It also contains 3 or 4 churches, and 1 newspaper office. Pop. in 1850, 1978; in 1853, 2500.

OXFORD, a handsome post-village of Newton co., Georgia, 2 miles N. from the Georgia railroad, and 132 miles W. from Augusta. It is the seat of Emory college, founded in 1837, by the Methodists.

OXFORD, a thriving post-village of Benton co., Alabama, on the route of the railroad now in progress from Selma to Gadsden, 110 miles N. by E. from Montgomery. Population in 1853, about 300.

OXFORD, a pleasant and thriving post-village, capital of Lafayette county, Mississippi, 180 miles N. from Jackson. It is considered one of the healthiest places in the state. The state university, which is situated one mile from the village, is well endowed and flourishing, and the buildings are excellent. Oxford has 4 or 5 churches, 2 seminaries for boys, and 2 for girls; 2 newspapers are published here. The Central railroad of Mississippi is to pass through this village.

OXFORD, a post-village of Scott co., Kentucky, 22 miles E. by N. from Frankfort.

OXFORD, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Butler co., Ohio. Pop., 3139.

OXFORD, a post-village in the above township, on the Junction railroad, 105 miles W. S. W. from Columbus. It is the seat of Miami University, founded in 1809, which has six professors, and a library of 8000 volumes. This institution is supported by the income arising from a large grant of land from the government. Oxford contains five churches, and a theological seminary of the Associate Reformed Church. Population, about 2200.

OXFORD, a township in the E. part of Coshocton co., Ohio, and intersected by the Tuscarawas river and Ohio canal. Pop., 1112.

OXFORD, Delaware co., Ohio. See ASHLEY.

OXFORD, a township in the N. part of Delaware co., Ohio, and intersected by the Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati railroad. Population, 828.

OXFORD, a township in the S. W. part of Erie co., Ohio, intersected by the Mansfield and Sandusky City railroad. Pop., 984.

OXFORD, a township in the N. E. part of Guernsey co., Ohio. Population, 2209.

OXFORD, a village of Holmes co., Ohio, on Killbuck creek, 82 miles N. E. from Columbus.

OXFORD, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, and intersected by the Tuscarawas river and Ohio canal. Population, 1436.

OXFORD, a post-township in the N. E. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Population, 1019.

OXFORD, a thriving post-village, capital of Benton co., Indiana, 88 miles N. W. from Indianapolis, is surrounded by extensive prairies.

OXFORD, a post-village of Henry co., Illinois, about 20 miles S. W. from Cambridge.

OXFORD DEPÔT, a post-office of Orange co., New York.

OXFORD FURNACE, a post-village in Oxford township, Warren co., New Jersey, on the Pequest river, has an iron furnace, and 8 or 10 dwellings.

OXFORD VALLEY, a post-office of Bucks co., Pennsylvania.

OYSTER BAY, of New York, extends from Long Island sound into Queen's county.

OYSTER BAY, a post-township of Queen's county, New York, extends from Long Island sound to Great South bay, and is intersected by Long Island railroad. Population, 6900.

OYSTER BAY, a post-village in the above township, on the bay of that name, about 30 miles E. from New York.

OYSTER CREEK, Texas, flows nearly parallel with Brazos river, through Fort Bend and Brazos counties, and enters the Gulf of Mexico.

OYSTER CREEK, a post-office of Brazoria co., Texas.

OYSTER POND, New York. See ORIENT.

OYSTERVILLE, a post-village of Barnstable township, Barnstable co., Massachusetts, on the S. side of Cape Cod, 70 miles S. E. from Boston.

OZAN, a township in Hempstead co., Arkansas. Population, 1547.

OZARK, a new county in the S. part of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas, contains about 1600 square miles. It is intersected by the North fork and Bryant's fork of White river, which unite in the S. part of the county, and also drained by the Little North fork of the same river, and Beaver creek. The surface is hilly or rather mountainous, and covered by extensive forests of the yellow pine, which attains a great size. The soil in the valleys and along the streams is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, grass, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 115,670 bushels of corn; 5090 of wheat; 6280 of oats, and 28,958 pounds of butter. The streams furnish a copious supply of water-power. Capital, Rockbridge. Population, 2294; of whom 2279 were free, and 15, slaves.

OZARK, a post-office of Itawamba co., Miss.

OZARK, a small post-village, capital of Franklin co., Arkansas, on the Arkansas river, 121 miles W. N. W. from Little Rock. It contains a court house and several stores.

OZARK, a thriving post-village of Greene co., Missouri, on Finley creek, 14 miles S. by E. from Springfield.

OZAUKEE, a county in the E. S. E. part of Wisconsin, bordering on Lake Michigan, contains about 225 square miles. It is intersected by the Milwaukee river, and also drained by Cedar creek. The surface is rolling and heavily timbered; the soil fertile. The productions are similar to those of Washington county, out of which it was formed in 1853. Capital, Ozaukee, or Port Washington.

OZAUKEE, Wis. See PORT WASHINGTON.

P

PACES, a post-office of Barren co., Ky.

PACHITLA creek, of Georgia, enters the Ichawaynochaway river in Baker county.

PACHITTA, a post-village of Early co., Ga.

PACIFIC, a county in the W. part of Washington Territory, has an area estimated at above 800 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Pacific, from which it takes its name, and on the S. by the Columbia river. Cape Disappointment is situated on its W. border. This county was formed since 1850, and consequently is not included in the census of that year. Capital, Pacific City.

PACIFIC, a post-village of Franklin co., N. C.

PACIFIC CITY, a post-town, capital of Pacific co., Washington Territory, on Baker's bay, an expansion on the N. side of the Columbia river, a mile and a half from the Pacific ocean.

PACK'S FERRY, a post-office of Monroe co., Virginia.

PACKSVILLE, a post-office of Sumter district, South Carolina.

PACKWAUKEE, a post-village of Marquette co., Wisconsin, on the N. shore of Buffalo lake, about 55 miles N. from Madison. It contains 3 stores, 1 mill, and about 300 inhabitants.

PACOLET, a small river which rises in the Blue Ridge, in the W. part of North Carolina, and flowing through Spartanburg and Union districts of South Carolina, enters the Broad river at Pinckneyville. Its general course is E. S. E., and its length perhaps 100 miles. The South Pacolet is a small stream which enters the former about 12 miles N. from Spartanburg Court House.

PACOLET MILLS, a post-office of Union district, South Carolina.

PACTOLUS, a post-office of Pitt co., N. C.

PADDINGTON, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

PADDOCK'S GROVE, a post-office of Madison co., Illinois.

PADDY MILLS, a post-office of Shenandoah co., Virginia.

PADDY'S RUN, a post-office of Butler co., O.

PADDYTOWN, a small village of Hampshire co., Virginia, on the N. branch of Potomac river, about 210 miles N. W. from Richmond.

PADITAS, a village in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico, on the right bank of the Rio Del Norte.

PADUA, a post-office of McLean co., Ill.

PADUCAH, a thriving post-village, capital of McCracken county, Kentucky, on the Ohio river, just below the mouth of the Tennessee river, and 340 miles below Louisville. The navigation of the river is seldom closed by ice or obstructed by low water below this point. Paducah is a place of active business, and the shipping port for the exports of the county, which consist of tobacco, pork, mules, horses, &c. It has a fine range of warehouses fronting the river, and contains 4 or 5 churches, 2 banks, and 2 or 3 newspaper offices. The name of Paducah was derived from an Indian chief who once resided in this vicinity. Population in 1850, 2428; in 1853, about 3000.

PAGE, a county toward the N. E. part of Virginia, contains about 300 square miles. This county occupies the entire breadth of the valley between the Massanutten mountain and the Blue Ridge, the direction of which is nearly N. and S. The Shenandoah river flows through its entire length. The soil is of limestone formation, and is highly productive. Wheat, Indian corn, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 128,430 bushels of wheat; 137,602 of corn; 2253 tons of hay, and 53,207 pounds of butter. There were 16 flour mills, 3 saw mills, 1 iron furnace, 2 iron forges, and 5 tanneries. It contained 11 churches, 463 pupils attending public schools, and 35 attending other schools. Iron ore and fine marble are abundant; copper and lead are also found. Formed in 1831, and named in honor of John Page, formerly governor of the state. Capital, Luray. Population, 7600; of whom 6643 were free, and 957, slaves.

PAGE, a new county in the S. W. part of Iowa, bordering on Missouri, has an area of about 550 square miles. The Nodaway river flows through it from N. to S. The soil is good, though not extensively cultivated. Indian corn and wool are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 28,270 bushels of corn; 1998 of wheat; 2190 bounds of wool, and 197 tons of hay. County seat not located. Named in honor of Colonel Page, who was mortally wounded at Palo Alto. Population, 551.

PAGE'S CORNERS, a post-office of Herkimer co., New York.

PAGESVILLE, a post-village of Newberry district, South Carolina.

PAGEVILLE, a small village of Erie co., Pennsylvania, 26 miles S. W. from Erie.

PAGEVILLE, a post-office of Barren co., Ky.

PAHAQUARRY, a township of Warren co., New Jersey, on the left side of the Delaware river, 66 miles N. by W. from Trenton. Population, 460.

PAH UTAH INDIANS, a tribe dwelling along the S. border of the Great Basin.

PAINCOURT, a post-village, capital of Assumption parish, Louisiana, on Bayou La Fourche, 15 miles below its egress from the Mississippi river, and 67 miles S. from Baton Rouge.

PAINE'S HOLLOW, a post-office of Herkimer co., New York.

PAINE'S POINT, a post-office of Ogle co., Ill.

PAINESVILLE, a post-office of Chittenden co., Vermont.

PAINESVILLE, a post-village of Amelia co., Virginia, 46 miles W. S. W. from Richmond.

PAINESVILLE, a handsome post-village in Painesville township, and capital of Lake county, Ohio, on the railroad from Erie to Cleveland where it crosses Grand river, 170 miles N. E. from Columbus, and 3 miles from Lake Erie. It is beautifully situated on the left bank, and at the lower rapids of the river, which flows in a deep and picturesque valley. Near the centre of the village is a handsome public square. Painesville is a place of active trade, and is rapidly increasing. The railroad crosses the river on a bridge 800 feet long, resting on 5 stone piers 75 feet high. A plank-road has been completed from this place to Mercer county, Pennsylvania, and is to be extended to Pittsburg. It has 5 churches, an academy, a bank, a newspaper office, 2 flouring mills, 2 machine shops, 1 iron foundry, and 20 stores. It is also the seat of the Geauga Furnace Company's iron works. The first settlers of the place were mostly from the Eastern States. Population of the township, 3128.

PAINT, a township of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, about 38 miles N. E. from Butler. Population, 610.

PAINT, a township of Somerset co., Pa., 28 miles S. W. from Hollidaysburg. Pop., 878.

PAINT, a township in the N. part of Fayette co., Ohio. Population, 1253.

PAINT, a township in the N. E. part of Highland co., Ohio. Population, 2678.

PAINT, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Holmes co., Ohio. Pop., 1618.

PAINT, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Ross co., Ohio. Pop., 1123.

PAINT, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Wayne co., Ohio. Pop., 1627.

PAINT CREEK, of Ohio, rises in the S. W. central part of the state, and flows into the Scioto river, 3 miles below Chillicothe. Its principal affluents are the Rocky fork, Rattlesnake fork, and the North fork.

PAINT CREEK, of Oakland co., Michigan, flows into the Clinton river at Rochester.

PAINT CREEK, a post-office of Kanawha co., Virginia.

PAINT CREEK, a post-office of Washtenaw co., Michigan.

PAINTED POST, a post-township in the S. E. part of Steuben co., New York, contains the village of Corning. Population, 4372.

PAINTED POST, a post-village in the above township, on the Erie railroad, at the junction of the Tioga and Conhocton rivers, about 300 miles from New York, has 1 bank.

PAINTER CREEK, a post-office of Darke co. O.

PAINTERSVILLE, a post-village of Greene co., Ohio.

PAINT LICK, a small post-village of Garrard co., Kentucky, has between 100 and 200 inhabitants.

PAINT ROCK, a post-office of Cocke co., Tenn.

PAINT ROCK, a post-office of Allomakee co., Iowa.

PAINT ROCK RIVER, of Alabama, enters the Tennessee river from the N. E., about 20 miles S. from Huntsville.

PAINTVILLE, a post-village, capital of Johnson co., Kentucky, on Paint creek, 140 miles E. by S. from Frankfort. It has a brick court house, 5 stores, and about 200 inhabitants. Coal is abundant in the vicinity.

PAJARITO (páh-há-ree'to) village, on the right bank of Rio del Norte, in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico.

PAJARO (pah'há-ro) river, of California, rises on the slope of the Coast range, and flowing westerly falls into Monterey bay. It forms the boundary between Monterey and Santa Cruz counties.

PAKWAUKEE, Wisconsin. See PACKWAUKEE.

PALACIOS, a small village of Matagorda co., Texas, on a point which projects between Matagorda and Trespalacios bays, about 250 miles S. E. from Austin city.

PALATINE, a post-township of Montgomery co., New York, on the Mohawk river and Erie canal. Population, 2856.

PALATINE, a thriving post-village of Marion co., Virginia, on the right bank of Monongahela river, opposite Fairmont. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad crosses the river at this place on a fine suspension bridge.

PALATINE, a post-office of Cook co., Illinois.

PALATINE BRIDGE, a post-village of Montgomery co., New York, on the left or N. bank of the Mohawk, and on the Utica and Schenectady railroad, about 50 miles W. by N. from Albany. It has a bridge across the river.

PALENVILLE, a post-office of Greene co., N. Y.

PALERMO, a post-township in Waldo co., Maine, 10 miles E. N. E. from Augusta. Population, 1659.

PALERMO, a post-township of Oswego co., New York, 18 miles E. S. E. from Oswego. Population, 2053.

PALESTINE, a post-village in Greenbrier co., Virginia.

PALESTINE, a post-office of Benton co., Ala.

PALESTINE, a post-office of Adams co., Miss.

PALESTINE, a post-office of Washington co., Louisiana.

PALESTINE, a flourishing post-village, capital of Anderson co., Texas, 200 miles N. E. from Austin city, and 10 miles E. from the Trinity river. It is pleasantly situated in a fertile and undulating region, and is a place of active trade. The steamboats which navigate the Trinity river have ascended as high as Magnolia, the landing-place of Palestine. An active emigration has been directed to this vicinity since 1847. It contains 12 stores, 2 large seminaries, and 4 or 5 places of worship. A newspaper is published here. Palestine was commenced in 1846. Population in 1853, about 1000.

PALESTINE, a post-village of Hickman co., Tennessee, 68 miles from Nashville.

PALESTINE, a village of Clermont co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, 16 miles above Cincinnati, has a brick-yard and a few stores. Population, about 300.

PALESTINE, a small village of Columbiana co., Ohio, 165 miles N. E. from Columbus.

PALESTINE, a village of Darke co., Ohio, 100 miles W. from Columbus.

PALESTINE, a post-village of Pickaway co., Ohio, 20 miles S. S. W. from Columbus.

PALESTINE, a post-village of Shelby co., Ohio, 61 miles W. N. W. from Columbus.

PALESTINE, a post-village in Kosciusko co., Indiana, 160 miles N. by E. from Indianapolis.

PALESTINE, a small village of Monroe co., Indiana, 10 miles S. W. from Bloomington.

PALESTINE, a township in Cook co., Illinois. Population, 617.

PALESTINE, a post-village, capital of Crawford co., Illinois, 2 or 3 miles W. from the Wabash river, and 155 miles E. S. E. from Springfield. It is situated on the border of a prairie, and contains a United States land-office, several churches, and stores.

PALISADES, of Bergen co., New Jersey, a range of basaltic rocks, rising precipitously along the western shore of the Hudson river, to the height of 400 or 500 feet. They extend from Piermont southward about 20 miles.

PALL MALL, a post-office of Fentress co., Tennessee.

PALMER, a post-village in Hampden co., Massachusetts, 16 miles E. N. E. from Springfield. Population of the township, 3974.

PALMER, Michigan. See ST. CLAIR.

PALMER DEPÔT, a flourishing village and station of Hampden county, Massachusetts, on the Western railroad, at its junction with the New London Palmer and Willimantic railroad, 83 miles W. by S. from Boston.

PALMER'S, a post-office of Polk co., Texas.

PALMER'S SPRINGS, a post-office of Mecklenberg co., Virginia.

PALMER'S STORE, a post-office of Weakley co., Tennessee.

PALMER'S TAVERN, a post-office of Prince George's co., Maryland.

PALMETTO, a small river of Georgia, which flows through Laurens county into the Oconee from the right.

PALMETTO, a village in Campbell co., Georgia, on the Atlanta and La Grange railroad, 25 miles S. W. from Atlanta. Pop., 200.

PALMETTO, a post-office of Coweta co., Ga.

PALMETTO, a post-office of Pontotoc co., Miss.

PALMSTOWN, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

PALMYRA, a post-township of Somerset co., Maine, intersected by the Sebasticook river, about 44 miles N. E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 1625.

PALMYRA, a handsome post-village in Palmyra township, Wayne county, New York, on the Erie canal, and on Mud creek, half a mile from the Rochester and Syracuse Direct railroad, and 22 miles E. by S. from Rochester. It contains 1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 Methodist church, and a Friends' meeting house; a Union school-house, which cost $11,000; a bank, several manufactories, and about 16 stores of different kinds. Two weekly newspapers are published here. Population of the township in 1850, 3893; of the village in 1853, about 2800.

PALMYRA, a post-office of Burlington co., N. J.

PALMYRA, a post-township of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania. Population, 286.

PALMYRA, a post-village of Lebanon co. Pa., on the turnpike from Harrisburg to Lebanon, 15 miles E. from the former. Population in 1853, 400.

PALMYRA, a township of Pike co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles W. from Milford. Population, 447.

PALMYRA, a township of Wayne co., Pennsylvania. Population, 2015.

PALMYRA, a post-village, capital of Fluvanna county, Virginia, on the Rivanna river, 60 miles W. by N. from Richmond. It has a handsome bridge across the river, and contains a brick court house, 1 church, and 2 or 3 mills.

PALMYRA, a post-village of Halifax co., N. C., about 85 miles E. N. E. from Raleigh.

PALMYRA, a post-village in Lee co., Georgia, 125 miles S. W. by S. from Milledgeville.

PALMYRA, a post-office of Warren co., Miss.

PALMYRA, a small post-village of Montgomery co., Tennessee, on the Cumberland river, about 50 miles W. N. W. from Nashville.

PALMYRA, a post-office of Simpson co., Ky.

PALMYRA, a small village of Trimble co., Ky.

PALMYRA, a post-township in the S. E. part of Portage co., Ohio. Population, 1093.

PALMYRA, a post-village of Deerfield township, Warren county, Ohio, on the turnpike from Cincinnati to Columbus, 20 miles N. E. from the former. It contains 2 or 3 churches.

PALMYRA, a post-township in the S. part of Lenawee co., Michigan. Population, 1098.

PALMYRA, a post-village in the above township, on the Raisin river, and on the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad, 60 miles S. W. from Detroit. It contains a few stores and mills.

PALMYRA, a small post-village of Harrison co., Ind., about 16 miles N. from Corydon.

PALMYRA, a small village of Rush co., Indiana, 10 miles S. from Rushville.

PALMYRA, a flourishing post-village, capital of Marion county, Missouri, 100 miles N. E. from Jefferson City. The situation is high and healthy; the water is excellent. Marion City, the landing-place of Palmyra on the Mississippi, is 6 miles distant. The railroad which is in course of construction between Hannibal and St. Joseph will pass through Palmyra. The village contains 5 large brick churches, several respectable schools, a United States land-office, 1 or 2 newspaper offices, and 1 bank. Pop. in 1850, 1284; in 1853, about 2000.

PALMYRA, a post-office of Polk co., Iowa.

PALMYRA, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Jefferson co., Wisconsin. Population, 997.

PALMYRA, a post-village in the above township, on the Milwaukee and Mississippi railroad, about 40 miles W. S. W. from Milwaukee.

PALMYRA, a post-office of Utah co., Utah territory.

PALO, a post-office of Fayette co., Ala.

PALO, a post-village in Linn co., Iowa, 35 miles N. N. W. from Iowa city.

PALO ALTO, a new county in the N. W. part of Iowa, has an area of 550 square miles. It is intersected in the E. by the Des Moines river, and in the W. by Lizard river, an affluent of the first-mentioned stream, and also drained by two small tributaries of the Des Moines, one of which rises from a lake in the western part of the county. It is not included in the census of 1850. County seat not located.

PALO ALTO, a post-office of Highland co., Va.

PALO ALTO, a post-office of Onslow co., N. C.

PALO ALTO, a post-village of Jasper co., Ga., 44 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

PALO ALTO, a thriving post-village of Chickasaw co., Miss., 22 miles S. E. from Houston.

PALO ALTO, a post-office of Lawrence co., Tennessee.

PALO ALTO, a post-office of Hamilton co., Ill.

PALO ALTO, a post-village of Louisa co., Iowa, on the Iowa river, 48 miles S. S. E. from Iowa City.

PALONA, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

PALOS, a post-office of Miami co., Indiana.

PALOS, a post-township of Cook co., Illinois. Population, 336.

PALOXY CREEK, Texas, enters the Brazos from the W. in the N. central part of the state.

PAMAH, a village in Jones co., Iowa, 35 miles N. by E. from Iowa City.

PAMELIA, a township of Jefferson co., New York, on Black river, opposite Watertown. Population, 2528.

PAMELIA FOUR CORNERS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

PAMLICO LIGHTHOUSE, on a point of land on the S. side of the entrance to Pamlico river, about 35 miles S. from Washington, North Carolina. It contains a fixed light 30 feet above the level of the sea.

PAMLICO RIVER, of North Carolina, in the upper part of its course, is called TAR RIVER. It rises near the W. border of Granville county, and flowing south-easterly, passes by Tarborough, Greenville, and Washington, and enters the W. extremity of Pamlico sound, through an estuary which is several miles wide and nearly 40 miles long. It is navigable by small boats to Tarborough.

PAMLICO SOUND, situated on the E. coast of North Carolina, is a shallow body of water about 80 miles long, and from 10 to 25 miles wide, separated from the ocean by low and narrow islands. The general depth is about 20 feet, but numerous shoals occur in it. It communicates with Albemarle sound on the N., and receives the Neuse and Pamlico rivers at its W. extremity. It is slightly affected by the tide, which flows through Ocracoke Inlet.

PAMPAS, a township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 1038.

PAMREPAU, a small village of Bergen township, Bergen county, N. J.

PAMUNKEY RIVER, in the S. E. part of Virginia, is formed by the union of North and South Anna rivers, on the border of Caroline and Hanover counties, and flowing in a general S. E. direction, joins the Mattaponi to form the York river. Its whole length is probably not less than 75 miles. This river separates King William county from Hanover and New Kent counties.

PANAMA, a post-office of Chautauque co., New York.

PANAMA, a post-office of Defiance co., Ohio.

PANAMA, pan-ã-má', a fortified seaport and city of New Granada, on the S. (Pacific) coast of the Isthmus of Panama. Lat. 8° 56' N., lon. 79° 27' W. It stands on a tongue of land, across which the streets extend from sea to sea. It has a beautiful cathedral, a Jesuits' college, and several convents. It is the Pacific terminus of the Panama railroad, intended to connect this place with Aspinwall, on the Atlantic side of the isthmus. The railroad is open (September, 1853) from Aspinwall to Barbacoas, 20 miles.

PANCOASTBURG, a post-office of Fayette co., Ohio.

PANDORA, a post-office of Johnson co., Tenn.

PANOLA, a county in the N. W. part of Mississippi, has an area of about 800 square miles. It is intersected by Tallahatchie river, and bounded on the W. by Coldwater creek. The surface is partly level and partly rolling; the soil is fertile, especially in what are called the swamp lands. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 8913 bales of cotton; 451,909 bushels of corn, and 15,889 pounds of rice. It contained 20 churches and 1 newspaper office. Some parts of the county are covered with open groves of oak, hickory, &c. Small steamboats navigate the river when the water is high. This county forms part of the country ceded to the state by the Chickasaw Indians: it was organized in 1836. Capital, Panola. Population, 11,444, of whom 5024 were free, and 6420, slaves.

PANOLA, a county in the E. N. E. part of Texas, bordering on Louisiana, has an area of 840 square miles. It is intersected by the Sabine river, which flows south-eastward. The surface consists partly of prairies and partly of woodlands. Indian corn, cotton, sweet potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 108,870 bushels of corn; 660 of oats; 38,405 of potatoes; 887 bales of cotton; 24,319 pounds of butter, and 1145 of wool. It contained 79 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Carthage. Population, 1983, of whom 1933 were free, and 50, slaves.

PANOLA, a post-village, capital of Panola county, Mississippi, on the Tallahatchie river, 160 miles N. from Jackson. It is situated in a fertile and well-watered region. It has a newspaper office and several churches. Population, in 1853, estimated at 500.

PANTEGO, a post-office of Beaufort county, North Carolina.

PANTHER, a post-office of Polk co., Ark.

PANTHER CREEK, of Kentucky, rises near the N. E. border of Ohio county, and flowing in a north-westerly course through Daviess county, enters Green river about 14 miles W. S. W. from Owenborough.

PANTHER CREEK, a post-village of Surrey co., North Carolina.

PANTHER CREEK, a small post-village of Cass co., Illinois, about 2 miles S. from Sangamon river.

PANTHER CREEK, a post-office of Clayton co., Iowa.

PANTHER FORK, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

PANTHER'S CREEK, Ohio, falls into the W. branch of Miami river, in Miami county.

PANTHER'S GAP, a post-office of Rockbridge co., Virginia.

PANTHER SPRINGS, a thriving post-village of Jefferson county, Tennessee, is finely situated in a fertile valley, and on the road from Knoxville to Jonesborough, 220 miles E. from Nashville. Part of the village is in Granger county. It contains an excellent male and female academy. The East Tennessee and Virginia railroad, now in progress, will pass through the village.

PANTHERSVILLE, a district in De Kalb co., Georgia, has a post-office of the same name. Population, 1446.

PANTON, a post-township of Addison co., Vermont, between Lake Champlain and Otter creek, about 38 miles S. W. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 559.

PAOLI, a small post-village and railroad station of Chester county, Pennsylvania, 19 miles W. by N. from Philadelphia. Near this place General Wayne was surprised September, 1777, by a superior British force under General Grey, on which occasion a number of the Americans were massacred after they had laid down their arms. A monument has been erected on the spot to the memory of those who fell.

PAOLI, a post-township in Orange co., Indiana. Population, 1562.

PAOLI, a post-village, capital of Orange county, Indiana, on the turnpike from Vincennes to New Albany, 40 miles N. W. from the latter, was first settled in 1816. It contains good public buildings, 2 or 3 churches, a county seminary, and 2 newspaper offices.

PAPANA, a small village of Whitley co., Indiana, 10 miles N. W. from Columbia.

PAPER MILLS, a post-office of Baltimore co., Maryland.

PAPERMILL VILLAGE, a post-village in Cheshire co., New Hampshire.

PAPERMILL VILLAGE, a small village in Bennington township, Bennington co., Vermont, about 115 miles S. W. by S. from Montpelier. It contains 2 paper mills.

PAPERTOWN, a post-village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, 7 miles S. from Carlisle.

PAPERVILLE, a post-village in Sullivan co., Tenn., 290 miles E. by N. from Nashville.

PAPINSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Bates co., Missouri, on the Osage river, 120 miles in a straight line W. S. W. from Jefferson City.

PARACLIFTA, a post-township in Sevier co., Arkansas. Population, 144.

PARACLIFTA, a small post-village, capital of Sevier co., Arkansas, 165 miles S. W. from Little Rock.

PARADISE, a post-township of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Columbia railroad, 12 miles E. by S. from Lancaster. Population, 1828.

PARADISE, a post-village in the above township, on the Philadelphia and Lancaster turnpike, 10 miles E. from Lancaster.

PARADISE, a township of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, about 34 miles N. W. from Mauch Chunk. Population, 428.

PARADISE, a township of York co., Pa., 10 miles W. by S. from York. Pop., 2354.

PARADISE, a post-office of Rockingham co., Virginia.

PARADISE, a small village of Macon co., Tennessee.

PARADISE, a post-office of Muhlenburg co., Kentucky.

PARADISE, a small village of Ohio county, Kentucky.

PARADISE, a post-village in Coles co., Illinois, 80 miles E. S. E. from Springfield.

PARADISE FURNACE, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania.

PARADISE GROVE, a post-office of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

PARADISE VALLEY, a post-office of Monroe co., Pennsylvania.

PARADOX LAKE, in the S. part of Essex co., New York. Length, 4 miles.

PARAMUS, a village of Bergen co., New Jersey, about 7 miles N. W. from Hackensack, contains a church and a mill.

PARAN CITY, a village in Marion co., Iowa, 100 miles W. by S. from Iowa City.

PARCHELAGA CREEK. See PATSALIGA.

PARCHER'S CORNERS, a post-office of Fulton co., Ohio.

PARCIPANY, a post-village of Morris co., New Jersey, on the Parcipany river, about 7 miles N. from Morristown, contains 2 churches,

5 stores, and an academy. Population, estimated at 300.

PARDEVILLE, a post-village of Columbia co., Wisconsin, on the Neenah river, about 40 miles N. from Madison. Population, 81.

PARHAM'S LANDING, a post-office of Catahoula parish, Louisiana.

PARHAM'S STORE, a post-office of Sussex co., Virginia.

PARIDA, a village on the left bank of the Rio del Norte, in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico.

PARIS, a beautiful post-village and seat of justice of Oxford county, Maine, about 40 miles W. from Augusta. It is situated on a commanding elevation, in the midst of the most varied and picturesque scenery. The White Mountains, with their summits piercing the clouds, appear in full view. The village contains a handsome court house, 2 or 3 churches, an academy, and 2 newspaper offices. Pop. of the township, 2882.

PARIS, a post-township in the S. E. part of Oneida co., New York. Population, 4283.

PARIS, or PARIS HILL, a post-village in the above township, 8 miles S. from Utica. It has several churches.

PARIS, a post-office of Washington co., Pa.

PARIS, a post-village of Fauquier co., Virginia, is pleasantly situated at the S. E. foot of the Blue ridge, 131 miles N. by W. from Richmond.

PARIS, a post-office of Coweta co., Ga.

PARIS, a post-office of Lafayette co., Miss.

PARIS, a post-village, capital of Lamar co., Texas, is about 20 miles S. from Red river, and 300 miles N. N. E. from Austin city. A newspaper is published here. The village is situated in an extensive prairie, the soil of which is extremely fertile and durable.

PARIS, a post-village, capital of Henry co., Tennessee, 110 miles W. from Nashville. It is situated in a rich farming district, and has an active trade.

PARIS, a post-village, capital of Bourbon county, Kentucky, on Stoner creek, and on the Covington and Lexington railroad, about 40 miles E. from Frankfort. It is one of the principal stations on the railroad, and has an active trade. It contains a fine court house, a branch bank, 6 churches, an academy, a printing-office, and several mills. The "Western Citizen," one of the oldest newspapers of the state, is published here. The Maysville and Lexington railroad diverges from this point, 20 miles N. E. from Lexington. Pop. in 1853, estimated at 2500.

PARIS, a township in the E. central part of Portage co., Ohio. Population, 1018.

PARIS, a post-township forming the E. S. E. extremity of Stark co., Ohio. Pop., 2740.

PARIS, a thriving post-village in the above township, 130 miles N. E. from Columbus. It has 2 or 3 churches.

PARIS, a township in the S. part of Union co., Ohio. Population, 982.

PARIS, a post-township in the W. central part of Kent co., Michigan. Pop., 521.

PARIS, a pleasant post-village of Jennings co., Indiana, 17 miles N. W. from Madison.

PARIS, a small village of Posey co., Indiana, about 20 miles N. from Mount Vernon.

PARIS, a post-village, capital of Edgar county, Illinois, on the Alton and Terre Haute railroad, 114 miles E. from Springfield. A newspaper is published here. The village is situated on the border of a prairie, which is extensively cultivated.

PARIS, a thriving post-village, capital of Monroe co., Missouri, on the Middle fork of Salt river, 70 miles N. by E. from Jefferson City. It is situated in a rich farming district, which abounds in stone coal. It contains a court house and a newspaper office.

PARIS, a village in Linn co., Iowa, near Wapsipinicon river, 45 miles N. from Iowa City.

PARIS, a post-township of Kenosha co., Wisconsin. Population, 947.

PARIS, a post-village in the above township, 10 miles N. W. from Kenosha.

PARISBURG, a post-village, capital of Giles co., Virginia, on the left bank of New river, 240 miles W. from Richmond. It is surrounded by picturesque mountain scenery.

PARISH, a post-township near the centre of Oswego co., New York. It has a village of the same name. Population, 1799.

PARISH, a small village of Des Moines co., Iowa, near Skunk river, 65 miles S. by E. of Iowa City.

PARIS HILL, a village of Scriven co., Ga.

PARISHVILLE, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, in Parishville township, on St. Regis river, about 20 miles E. from Canton. It contains 2 or 3 churches, and several mills. Pop. of the township, 2132.

PARISHVILLE, a post-office of Portage co., O.

PARK, a post-township in the N. W. part of St. Joseph's co., Michigan. Pop., 825.

PARKE, a county in the W. part of Indiana, contains 440 square miles. It is drained by Sugar and Racoon creeks, affluents of the Wabash, which forms the W. boundary. The surface varies from level to undulating. The soil is mostly a black loam, very fertile, and easily cultivated. Indian corn, wheat, oats, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1,195,656 bushels of corn; 101,720 of wheat; 80,165 of oats; 60,743 pounds of wool, and 5548½ tons of hay. It contained 14 churches, 1 newspaper office, 1650 pupils attending public schools, and 45 attending academies or other schools. The county contains extensive beds of stone coal. Water-power is abundant. The Wabash and Erie canal passes along its W. border. A plank-road has been made through the county. Organized in 1821. Capital, Rockville. Population, 14,968.

PARKE, a township in Scott co., Arkansas. Population, 277.

PARKER, a township of Butler co., Pennsylvania, about 48 miles N. N. E. from Pittsburg. Population, 769.

PARKER, a small village of Butler co., Pa.

PARKERSBURG, a thriving post-village, capital of Wood county, Virginia, on the Ohio river, at the mouth of the Little Kanawha, 100 miles below Wheeling, and about 258 miles in a direct line W. N. W. from Richmond. It is pleasantly situated, and neatly built. Turnpike roads lead from this town to Staunton and Winchester, and the Northwestern railroad, a branch of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, terminates here. Another railroad is in course of construction from Parkersburg to Cincinnati. It contains a court house, churches of 4 or 5 denominations, a bank, a printing-office, and several steam mills. Pop. in 1853, about 3500.

PARKERSBURG, a post-office of Yell co., Ark.

PARKERSBURG, a small post-village of Montgomery co., Indiana, 12 miles S. from Crawfordsville.

PARKERSBURG, a post-village in Richland co., Illinois, 135 miles S. E. from Springfield.

PARKERSBURG, a post-office of Jasper co., Io.

PARKER'S CROSS ROADS, a small village of Bedford co., Tennessee.

PARKER'S HEAD, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

PARKER'S SETTLEMENT, a post-office of Posey co., Indiana.

PARKER'S STORE, a post-office of Franklin co., Georgia, 125 miles N. by E. from Milledgeville.

PARKERSVILLE, a post-office of Chester co., Pennsylvania.

PARKERSVILLE, a post-office of St. Tammany parish, Louisiana.

PARKERSVILLE, a post-office of Marion co., Oregon.

PARKESBURG, a post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, on the Philadelphia and Columbia railroad, 44 miles W. from Philadelphia. It is a depôt for lumber and coal, and contains a large hotel and machine shops belonging to the state. Population, in 1853, about 400.

PARKEVILLE, a post-office of Noxubee co., Mississippi.

PARKEVILLE, a small village of Parke co., Ind., 9 or 10 miles E. N. E. from Rockville.

PARK HALL, a post-office of St. Mary's co., Maryland.

PARKHEAD, a post-office of Washington co., Maryland.

PARKHURST, a post-village in Scott co., Iowa, on the Mississippi river, 65 miles E. by S. from Iowa City.

PARKISON, a small village of Beaver co., Pa.

PARKMAN, a post-township in Piscataquis co., Maine, 60 miles N. by E. from Augusta. Population, 1243.

PARKMAN, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Geauga co., Ohio. Pop., 1383.

PARKMAN, a thriving post-village in the above township, on a branch of Grand river, 16 miles S. E. from Chardon. It contains several mills moved by water-power.

PARK'S, a post-office of Edgefield dis., S. C.

PARK'S, a post-office of Scott co., Arkansas.

PARK'S BAR, a small mining settlement of Yuba co., California, has a post-office of its own name.

PARK'S BRIDGE, a post-office of Morgan co., Georgia.

PARK'S CORNERS, a post-office of Boone co., Illinois.

PARK'S MILLS, a post-office of Franklin co., Ohio.

PARK'S STORE, a post-office of Cabarrus co., North Carolina.

PARK'S STORE, a post-office of Jackson co., Alabama.

PARKSVILLE, a post-village of Sullivan co., New York.

PARKTON, a post-office of Baltimore co., Md.

PARKVILLE, a post-village of Platte co., Missouri, on the left bank of Missouri river, 30 miles below Weston. The surplus produce of the adjacent country is shipped here in steamboats. Population, about 500.

PARMA, a post-township of Monroe co., New York, on Lake Ontario. Pop., 2947.

PARMA, a post-village in the above township, on the Ridge road, about 10 miles W. N. W. from Rochester.

PARMA, a post-township in the central part of Cuyahoga co., Ohio. Population, 1329.

PARMA, a township in the W. part of Jackson co., Michigan. Population, 1081.

PARMA, a thriving village in the above township, about 90 miles W. from Detroit. It contains several flouring mills. Population, about 500.

PARMA CENTRE, a post-office of Monroe co., New York.

PARNASSUS, a post-village of Augusta co., Virginia, on the Warm Spring and Harrisonburg turnpike, 132 miles N. W. from Richmond.

PARNASSUS, a post-office of Wilcox co., Ala.

PAROVAN, a post-village of Iron co., Utah Territory, about 110 miles S. S. W. from Fillmore City.

PARRISH, a post-office of Des Moines co., Io.

PARROTSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Cocke co., Tennessee, on French Broad river, 50 miles E. from Knoxville.

PARRYSVILLE, a post-village of Carbon co., Pennsylvania, on the Lehigh river, 7 miles below Mauch Chunk. Large quantities of coal are shipped here.

PARSONAGE, a post-office of Williamsburg district, South Carolina.

PARSONFIELD, a post-township in York co., Maine, intersected by the Ossipee river, 80 miles W. S. W. from Augusta. Pop., 2322.

PARTLEY, a small village of Union co., Pa.

PARTLOW'S, a post-office of Spotsylvania co., Virginia.

PARTNERSHIP, a post-office of Charles co., Md.

PARTRIDGE ISLAND, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

PASCAGOULA, a river in the S. E. part of Mississippi, is formed by the Chickasawhay and Leaf rivers which unite in Greene county, and flowing southward, falls into Pascagoula bay, near the S. E. extremity of the state. Small boats can ascend more than 100 miles from its mouth.

PASCAGOULA, a post-village in Jackson co., Mississippi, on Pascagoula bay, at the mouth of Pascagoula river, 175 miles S. E. by S. from Jackson.

PASCAGOULA BAY, of the Gulf of Mexico, is situated at the S. E. extremity of the Mississippi, and at the mouth of Pascagoula river. Low narrow islands separate it from the Gulf.

PASCO, a post-office of Dallas co., Missouri.

PASCOAG, a post-village in Burrillville township, Providence county, Rhode Island, about 20 miles N. W. by W. from Providence. It contains 8 woollen mills, employing 500 hands; 6 stores, 5 shingle mills, 1 spindle mill, 1 bank, 7 saw mills, and 5 grist mills. The construction of a reservoir is contemplated, which will greatly increase its water-power. Amount of goods manufactured per annum, and sales of merchandise, $900,600. Population, about 1500.

PASHAWN, a post-office of La Grange co., Indiana.

PASKACK, a post-village of Bergen co., New Jersey, on the Hackensack river.

PASQUOTANK river, of North Carolina, rises in the Dismal Swamp, near the N. border of the state. Flowing south-eastward, it forms the boundary between Camden and Pasquotank counties, until it enters Albemarle sound. A canal extends from this river to Elizabeth river in Virginia, by which boats can pass from Albemarle sound to Chesapeake bay.

PASQUOTANK, a county in the N. E. part of North Carolina, bordering on the N. side of Albemarle sound: area estimated at 300 square miles. The Pasquotank river forms the entire boundary on the N. E. The surface is nearly level, and in some parts marshy. Indian corn is the staple. In 1850 this county produced 624,575 bushels of corn; 19,436 of wheat, and 22,946 of oats. There were 3 ship-yards, 1 grist mill, 1 agricultural implement manufactory, and 1 saw mill. It contained 14 churches, 3 newspaper offices; 640 pupils attending public schools, and 185 attending academies or other schools. Pasquotank river is navigable by small vessels to Elizabeth, the county seat. Pasquotank was originally a part or division, termed the precinct of Albemarle county. Formed in 1729. Population, 8950; of whom 5845 were free, and 3105, slaves.

PASQUOTANK BRIDGE, a small village of Pasquotank county, North Carolina.

PASSADUMKEAG, a post-township in Penobscot co., Maine, on the E. side of the Penobscot river, 90 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 295.

PASSAIC river, of New Jersey, rises in Morris county, flows first nearly southward for a few miles, then pursues a general north-easterly direction on the boundary of Morris and Essex counties, and crosses Passaic county. A short distance below Paterson, it changes its course to the S., and forms the boundary between Passaic and Essex counties on the right, and Hudson county on the left, until it enters Newark bay, 3 miles below Newark. The whole length is near 100 miles. Near Paterson, it has a perpendicular fall of 50 feet, furnishing an immense water-power.

PASSAIC, a county in the N. N. E. part of New Jersey, has an area of about 270 square miles. It is partly bounded on the E. by the Passaic, and on the S. W. by the Pequannock river, and is intersected by the Ringwood, Ramapo, and Passaic rivers, which afford valuable water-power. The surface W. of the Ramapo is broken and mountainous; E. of that river the country is more level, and better adapted to cultivation. The soil in the more level portions is fertile, but in the W. part is better adapted to grazing than tillage. Indian corn, rye, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 140,213 bushels of corn; 41,509 of rye; 79,169 of potatoes; 11,025½ tons of hay, and 238,470 pounds of butter. There were 10 cotton factories, 1 carpet factory, 1 card factory, 4 woollen factories, 7 forges, 2 foundries, 1 furnace, 2 locomotive manufactories, 11 flour mills, 3 paper mills, 2 calico print works, 15 saw mills, 1 iron-rolling mill, 2 sewing-silk manufactories, and 3 tanneries. It contained 27 churches, and 2 newspaper offices; 1157 pupils attending public schools, and 960 attending academies and other schools. Magnetic iron ore is found among the hills in the W. part of the county, and limestone is abundant in the valleys. The Morris canal, and the Ramapo and Paterson railroad intersect this county. Organized in 1837, having been formed from portions of Bergen and Essex counties, and named from the Passaic river. Capital, Paterson. Population, 22,575.

PASSAIC VALLEY, a post-office of Morris co., New Jersey.

PASSAMAQUODDY BAY, at the S. E. extremity of Maine, receives the St. Croix river. The extent from N. to S. is about 13 miles.

PASS CHRISTIAN, a post-village in Harrison co., Mississippi, 165 miles S. S. E. from Jackson.

PASSUMSIC river, of Caledonia co., Vermont, falls into the Connecticut.

PASSUMSIC, a post-village of Barnet township, Caledonia co., Vermont, at the northern terminus of the Connecticut and Passumpsic Rivers railroad, 30 miles E. from Montpelier.

PASSYUNK, a township of Philadelphia co., Pennsylvania, joining the S. W. part of the city of Philadelphia. Population, 1607.

PATAPSCO, a river of Maryland, rises in Carroll county, in the northern part of the state. It flows southward until it passes the mouth of the Western branch, then pursues a south-easterly course, forming the boundary between Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties, and passing by the city of Baltimore, opens into a bay several miles wide. Fourteen miles below the city it enters Chesapeake bay, after an entire course of near 80 miles. This river passes through a hilly country, and the rapidity of its current renders it of great value for manufactories. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad is constructed along its bank from Elkridge Landing to the mouth of the Western branch, and then follows the valley of the latter to its source. The Western branch rises near Ridgeville, Carroll county, flows eastward, and forms the boundary between Carroll and Anne Arundel counties until it unites with the main stream. The Patapsco is navigable for the largest merchant vessels to Baltimore.

PATASKALA, a post-office of Licking co., O.

PATAULA creek, of Georgia, flows S. W. through Randolph county into the Chattahoochee, several miles above Fort Gaines.

PATAULA, a village of Randolph co., Ga., 42 miles in a direct line S. from Columbus.

PATCH GROVE, a post-village of Grant co., Wis., about 25 miles N. by W. from Potosi.

PATCHIN, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

PATCHOGUE, a post-village of Suffolk co., New York, near the S. shore of Long Island, about 60 miles E. from New York. It contains several churches and manufactories of cotton, paper, &c.

PATERSON, a city, capital of Passaic co., New Jersey, is situated on the right bank of the Passaic river, immediately below the falls, 13 miles N. from Newark, and 17 N. W. from New York. Lat. 40° 55' N., lon. 74° 10' W. It is the second city of the state in population and manufactures. By means of the Morris canal it communicates with the Atlantic ports and with the Delaware river. The Union railroad, formerly the Paterson and Hudson railroad, connects it with New York city on one hand, and with the Erie railroad at Sufferns on the other. The Passaic has here a perpendicular fall of 50 feet, and a total descent of 72 feet, affording an immense water-power, which has been improved by a dam and canals. The scenery in the vicinity of the falls is highly picturesque. The streets of Paterson are generally straight, well paved, and lighted with gas. It contains about 18 churches, belonging to the Reformed Dutch, the Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Episcopalians, Independents, Primitive Methodists, Catholics, &c.; also 1 bank, 2 newspaper offices, several large hotels, an academy, a philosophical society, with a library, and a society for the advancement of the mechanic arts. The number of cotton factories in operation is over 20. It has 2 large manufactories of locomotives, and several of carriages, guns, machinery, paper, and other articles. Two bridges across the river connect this town with the village of Manchester. Paterson was founded in 1791, by an incorporated company, with a capital of one million dollars, the object of which was to manufacture cotton cloth. The movement, however, was found to be premature, and was abandoned in 1796. Population in 1840, 7596; in 1850, 11,338, and in 1853, about 13,000.

PATMOS, a post-office of Mahoning co., Ohio.

PATOKA creek, of Indiana, rises in Orange county, and flowing westward about 100 miles, enters the Wabash a little below the mouth of White river, and opposite Mount Carmel, in Illinois. It is navigable for 60 miles during a few months of the year.

PATOKA, a township of Dubois co., Indiana. Population, 1565.

PATOKA, a small post-village of Gibson co., Indiana, on the Evansville and Illinois railroad, 4 miles N. from Princeton.

PATOKA, a township in Pike co., Indiana.

PATON, a small post-village in Cape Girardeau co., Missouri.

PATRICK, a county in the S. part of Virginia, bordering on North Carolina, has an area of 500 square miles. It is drained by the Dan, Smith's, North Mayo, and South Mayo rivers, which all rise within its limits, on the south-east declivity of the Blue Ridge. The surface is mountainous, and remarkable for romantic scenery. Several spurs of the Blue Ridge project partly across the county, one of which is called Bull mountain. Much of the soil is productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, tobacco, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 248,868 bushels of corn; 12,755 of wheat; 90,441 of oats; 429,699 pounds of tobacco, and 66,957 of butter. There were 2 flour and grist mills, 18 tobacco factories, 2 tanneries, 1 iron furnace, and 1 iron forge. It contained 13 churches, and 826 pupils attending public schools. Iron ore abounds in it. Formed out of part of Henry county in 1791, and named in honor of the illustrious orator, Patrick Henry. Capital, Taylorsville. Pop., 9609, of whom 7285 were free, and 2324, slaves.

PATRICK COURT HOUSE, or TAYLORSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Patrick county, Virginia, on the Mayo river, 226 miles S. W. from Richmond, and 8 miles from the Tennessee line. It contains a few stores and about 50 dwellings.

PATRICKTOWN, a post-township in Lincoln co., Me., 13 miles E. from Augusta. Pop., 552

PATRIOT, a post-office of Perry co., Tenn.

PATRIOT, a small post-village of Gallia co., O.

PATRIOT, a post-village of Switzerland co., Indiana, 48 miles below Cincinnati, contains several churches, and about 500 inhabitants.

PATSALIGA, also called PARCHELAGA, a creek of Georgia, flows into the Flint river from the right, about 12 miles N. from Lanier.

PATSALIGA, a small river of Alabama, rises towards the S. E. part of the state, and enters the Conecuh near Montezuma.

PATTEN, a post-township of Penobscot co., Maine, about 95 miles N. N. E. from Bangor. Population, 470.

PATTEN'S HOME, a post-office of Rutherford co., North Carolina.

PATTEN'S MILLS, a post-office of Washington, New York.

PATTENVILLE, a township in Grant co., Wisconsin. Population, 2171.

PATTERSON, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Putnam co., New York. Population, 1371.

PATTERSON, a post-village in the above township, on the Harlem railroad, and on Croton river, 63 miles N. N. E. from New York.

PATTERSON, New Jersey. See PATERSON.

PATTERSON, a township of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, on the right side of the Beaver river, 28 miles N. W. from Pittsburg. Population, 251.

PATTERSON, a thriving post-village of Juniata county, Pennsylvania, on the Juniata river, and on the Central railroad, 49 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It was commenced in 1850. It contains a depôt and machine shops of the railroad company. Population in 1853, near 400.

PATTERSON, a thriving post-village of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river, 68 miles N. E. from Harrisburg. It is supported chiefly by the operations in coal. Population, about 500.

PATTERSON, a township in Darke co., Ohio. Population, 319.

PATTERSON, a post-village of Delaware co., Ohio, on the Scioto river, about 32 miles N. N. W. from Columbus.

PATTERSON, a post-village of Hardin co., Ohio, on the Mad River and Erie railroad, 68 miles S. W. from Sandusky.

PATTERSON, a village in St. Genevieve co., Missouri, 60 miles S. from St. Louis.

PATTERSON, a post-office of Wayne co., Mo.

PATTERSON'S BLUFF, a post-office of Ark.

PATTERSON'S CREEK, in the N. part of Virginia, rises in Hardy county, flows north-eastward through Hampshire co., and enters the North branch of the Potomac, about 8 miles S. E. from Cumberland, in Maryland. It furnishes extensive water-power.

PATTERSON'S DEPÔT, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.

PATTERSON'S MILLS, a post-office of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

PATTERSON'S STORE, a post-office of Alabama co., North Carolina.

PATTERSONVILLE, a post-village of St. Mary's parish, Louisiana, on the River Teche, 15 miles below Franklin, has a steamboat landing and several stores. Pop., about 600.

PATILLOS, a post-office of Jefferson co., Texas.

PATTON, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania. Population, 881.

PATTON, a township of Centre co., Pennsylvania, about 36 miles S. W. from Lockhaven. Population, 453.

PATTONSBURG, a thriving post-village of Botetourt co., Virginia, on the James river, 181 miles W. from Richmond, is connected by a handsome bridge with the village of Buchanan.

PATTONSBURG, a post-office of Daviess co., Missouri.

PATTONSVILLE, a post-office of Scott co., Va.

PATTONSVILLE, a post-office of Hocking co., Ohio.

PATTONSVILLE, a post-office of Bedford co., Pennsylvania.

PATUXENT, a river of Maryland, rises about 18 miles E. from Fredericktown. Pursuing a south south-easterly course, it forms the boundary between Montgomery, Prince George's, and St. Mary's counties on the right, and Anne Arundel and Calvert counties on the left, and flows through an estuary 2 or 3 miles wide into Chesapeake bay. The valley of this river is about 90 miles long, and remarkably narrow. Small vessels ascend 40 or 50 miles from its mouth.

PATUXENT, a post-office of Anne Arundel co., Maryland.

PAULDING, a county in the W. N. W. part of Georgia, bordering on Alabama, has an area of 540 square miles. The Tallapoosa river rises in the county, which is also drained by the sources of the Euharlee, Cedar, Pumpkinvine, and Sweetwater creeks. The surface is elevated, and is traversed from E. to W. by a range of highland, called the Dug Down mountains. The valleys of the creeks are mostly fertile, and are separated by sterile and pine-clad ridges. Indian corn, oats, sweet potatoes, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 256,019 bushels of corn; 24,062 of oats; 44,378 of sweet potatoes; and 1439 bales of cotton. There were 12 grist mills and 4 tanneries. It contained 15 churches, and 324 pupils attending public schools. Limestone is abundant in the N. W., and freestone in the S. E. part of the county; it also contains iron and other valuable minerals. Organized in 1832, and named in honor of John Paulding, one of the captors of Major André. Capital, Van Wert. Pop., 7039; of whom 5562 were free, and 1477, slaves.

PAULDING, a county in the W. N. W. part of Ohio, bordering on Indiana, contains 414 square miles. It is intersected by the Maumee and Auglaize rivers, and also drained by the branches of Little Auglaize, and by Blue and Crooked creeks. The surface is level, and mostly covered with dense forests. The county forms part of the tract known as the Black Swamp, which is more than 100 miles in length. The soil is a black vegetable mould, remarkably fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 41,699 bushels of corn; 10,704 of wheat; 4509 of oats; 4214 of potatoes; and 362 tons of hay. It is intersected by the Wabash and Erie canal, and by the Miami Extension canal. Organized in 1820. Capital, Charloe. Population, 1766.

PAULDING, a small post-village, capital of Jasper co., Mississippi, about 100 miles E. by S. from Jackson. It contains a court house and 1 newspaper office.

PAULDING, a post-office of Paulding co., O.

PAULINA, a village of Delaware co., New York, on or near the Erie railroad, about 160 miles N. W. from New York.

PAULINA, a post-office of Warren co., N. J.

PAULINSKILL, a small river in the N. W. part of New Jersey, rises in Sussex county, crosses Warren county in a S. W. direction, and falls into the Delaware at Columbia. It is a valuable mill stream.

PAUWAICUN, PAUWAGUN, or PEWAUGONEE lake, Wisconsin, in the W. part of Winnebago co., is an expansion of Wolf river. Entire length, about 10 miles; greatest breadth, 4 miles.

PAVLION, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Genesee co., New York, contains a village of the same name. Pop., 1640.

PAVLION, a post-township in the S. part of Kalamazoo co., Michigan. Population, 495.

PAVLION, a post-village of Kendall co., Illinois, about 50 miles W. S. W. from Chicago.

PAVLION CENTRE, a post-office of Genesee co., New York.

PAWCATUCK river, of Washington co., Rhode Island, formed by the junction of Wood and Charles rivers, falls into Long Island sound, after constituting part of the boundary between Rhode Island and Connecticut. It is navigable about 6 miles from its mouth.

PAWLET, a post-township in Rutland co., Vermont, 77 miles S. W. by S. from Montpelier. Population, 1843.

PAWLET, a post-village in the above township, on the Rutland and Washington railroad, contains an academy.

PAWLET RIVER, a fine mill stream, rises in Bennington co., in the S. W. part of Vermont, and running through Rutland county, unites with Wood creek, in New York.

PAWLINGS, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Dutchess co., New York. Population, 1720.

PAWLINGS, a post-village in the above township, on the Harlem railroad, 67 miles N. N. E. from New York. It contains a bank and several stores.

PAWPAW, a small river of Michigan, rises in Van Buren co., and flowing nearly S. W., enters the St. Joseph's 1 mile from its mouth. It is navigated by small boats for 75 miles.

PAWPAW, a post-office of Morgan co., Va.

PAWPAW, a flourishing post-village, capital of Van Buren co., Michigan, is situated at the junction of the East and West branches of Pawpaw river, 70 miles W. S. W. from Lansing. The surrounding region possesses great resources for farming and the lumber business, and is settling rapidly. Pawpaw has abundant hydraulic power, and contains 2 flouring mills, 2 iron foundries, 1 wouleeu factory and 2 distilleries. Two newspapers are published here. Population in 1853, about 1500.

PAWPAW, a post-office of Miami co., Ind.

PAWPAW, a township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 653.

PAWPAW, a small village of De Kalb co., Ill.

PAWPAW GROVE, a post-office of Lee co., Illinois, about 75 miles W. by S. from Chicago.

PAWTUCKET, a small river of New England, forming part of the boundary between Massachusetts and Rhode Island, falls into Narragansett bay. At Pawtucket it has a fall of 50 feet. See PAWTUCKET. Above the falls it is called Blackstone river; below, it takes the name of Seekonk.

PAWTUCKET, a township of Bristol co., Massachusetts, on the E. side of Blackstone river, about 40 miles S. W. by S. from Boston. Population, 3753.

PAWTUCKET, a flourishing post-town, situated 4 miles N. N. E. from Providence, partly in Providence co., R. I., and partly in Bristol co., Mass., and on both sides of the Pawtucket river, which here falls some 50 feet in a short distance, affording an extensive hydraulic power. The first cloth manufactory operated by water-power ever established in this country was commenced at Pawtucket in 1790, and for more than 40 years it held the first rank among the manufacturing towns of New England. In 1823, the village and vicinity contained, besides numerous other manufactories, 10 cotton mills, 2 casting furnaces, 2 screw factories, 2 anchor establishments, and 6 machine shops. The manufactures at the present time are very extensive, consisting principally of cotton goods and machinery, though boots, shoes, cabinet ware, and carriages are produced to some extent. Pawtucket also has an important commerce. During the year 1852, 141 vessels arrived at its wharves, laden with coal, lumber, &c. to the amount of 12,798 tons. The village is pleasantly situated, and contains 8 or 9 churches. Among the public buildings the Masonic temple and Manchester Hall may be mentioned as good specimens of architectural beauty. Three newspapers are published here. Pawtucket has communication with Worcester by the Providence and Worcester railroad, and with Boston by the Boston and Providence railroad. The town contains 3 banks. Pop. in 1853, about 10,000.

PAWUXET river rises in the N. part of Rhode Island, and after forming part of the boundary between Kent and Providence counties, unites its waters with Narragansett bay about 5 miles S. of Providence. It is a fine mill stream.

PAWTUXET, a thriving post-village of Kent county, Rhode Island, situated partly in Warwick and partly in Cranston townships, on both sides of Pawtuxet river, near its mouth, 5 miles S. from Providence. It has a fine harbor, and is the seat of extensive cotton and woollen manufactories. Population in 1853, about 1800.

PAWTUXET, a post-office of Wakulla co., Fla.

PAXON'S, a post-office of Northumberland co., Pennsylvania.

PAXTON, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts. Population, 820.

PAXTON, a post-village in the above township, 50 miles W. from Boston.

PAXTON, a small village of Columbia co., Pa.

PAXTON, a township in the S. W. part of Ross co., Ohio. Population, 930.

PAXVILLE, a small village of Sumter district, South Carolina.

PAY DOWN, a post-office of Osage co., Mo.

PAYNE'S DEPÔT, a post-office of Scott co., Ky.

PAYNE'S POINT, a village in Ogle co., Illinois, 95 miles W. by N. from Chicago.

PAYNESVILLE, a post-village in Sumter co., Alabama.

PAYNESVILLE, a post-village of Pike co., Mo., 92 miles E. N. E. from Jefferson City.

PAYSON, a post-township in Adams co., Illinois. Population, 1494.

PAYSON, a post-village of Adams co., Illinois, 92 miles W. from Springfield.

PAYSON, a post-office of Utah co., Utah Territory.

PEACHTDALE, a post-village in Washington co., Rhode Island, 30 miles S. by W. from Providence.

PEACHAM, a post-township in Caledonia co., Vermont. Population, 1377.

PEACHAM, a post-village in the above township, 20 miles E. by N. from Montpelier, contains an academy.

PEACH BOTTOM, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of York co., Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna river. Pop., 1409.

PEACH BOTTOM, a post-office of Grayson co., Virginia.

PEACH CREEK, of Texas, flows into Montgomery co., and enters the San Jacinto river in Harris county.

PEACH CREEK, of Gonzales co., Texas, flows south-westward into Guadalupe river.

PEACH CREEK, a post-office of Panola co., Mississippi.

PEACH GROVE, a post-office of Fairfax co. Va.

PEACH ORCHARD, a post-office of Lawrence co., Kentucky.

PEACHTREE, a post-office of Cherokee co., North Carolina.

PEACHTREE, a small village of Horry district, South Carolina.

PEACHTREE CREEK, of North Carolina, flows into Tar river, near the S. E. border of Nash county.

PEACHTREE CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Chattahoochee in De Kalb co., a few miles N. W. from Atlanta.

PEACHTREE GROVE, a post-office of Nash co., North Carolina.

PEAKS OF EAGLETAIL, in the eastern part of Utah Territory, near the source of Eagletail river, are in lat. about 38° 40' N., lon. 106° 50' W.

PEAKS OF OTTER, Virginia, between Bedford and Botetourt counties, 30 miles W. by N. from Lynchburg. Their summits are about 4260 feet above the level of the sea.

PEAKSVILLE, a post-office of Bedford co., Va.

PEALER'S, a post-office of Columbia co., Pa.

PEAPACK, or PEPACK, a post-village of Somerset co., New Jersey, about 11 miles N. N. W. from Somerville. Population, 100.

PEA RIDGE, a post-village of Union dis., S. C.

PEA RIDGE, a post-office of Benton co., Ark.

PEA RIDGE, a small village of McNairy co., Tennessee.

PEA RIDGE, a post-village of Montgomery co., Tenn., 53 miles N. W. from Nashville.

PEA RIVER, a small river of Alabama, rises near the S. line of Macon co., and enters the Choctawhatchee at the boundary between Alabama and Florida.

PEA RIVER, a post-office of Pike co., Ala.

PEARL CREEK, a post-office of Wyoming co., New York.

PEARLINGTON, a post-village of Hancock co., Mississippi, on Pearl river, about 200 miles S. by E. from Jackson.

PEARL RIVER, of Mississippi, rises in Winston county, in the N. E. central part of the state, and flows south-westerly to the city of Jackson. It then flows south-south-eastward till it strikes the boundary between Mississippi and Louisiana. From this point it pursues a southerly course, and flows through Lake Borgne into the Gulf of Mexico. Its whole length exceeds 250 miles. The navigation is impeded by sandbars and driftwood, but small boats sometimes ascend as high as Jackson.

PEARL RIVER, a post-office of Copiah co., Mississippi.

PEARL RIVER ISLAND, a post-office of St. Tammany parish, Louisiana.

PEARL VALLEY, a post-office of Neshoba co., Mississippi.

PEASE, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Belmont co., Ohio. Pop., 3515.

PEATSTONE SHOALS, a small village of Newton co., Georgia.

PEAVINE, a post-village of Walker co., Ga.

PECAN BAYOU, of Texas, a small stream which enters the Colorado from the N. W. in Travis county.

PECAN CREEK, Texas, is formed by Chambers and Waxahachi creeks, which unite in Navarro county. It flows south-eastward, and enters Trinity river in Freestone county.

PECAN GROVE, a post-office of Carroll parish, Louisiana.

PECAN POINT, a post-office of Mississippi co., Arkansas.

PECCAN, a township in Mississippi co., Arkansas. Population, 167.

PECKATONICA. See PEKATONICA.

PECKSBURG, a post-office of Hendricks co., Indiana.

PECK'S RUN, a post-office of Barbour co., Va.

PECKSVILLE, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

PECOPSEN, a township of Chester co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 592.

PECOS, pá'koce, a large river of New Mexico and Texas, rises in the Rocky mountains, near 36° N. lat. and 105° 30' W. lon. Flowing at first southerly, and then southeasterly, it falls into the Rio Grande, in about 29° 40' N. lat. and 102° W. lon. The entire length is estimated at 700 miles.

PEDEE, a post-village in Cedar co., Iowa, 20 miles E. from Iowa City.

PEDEE, GREAT, a river of South Carolina, which rises in the N. W. part of North Carolina, where it is called the Yadkin, until it approaches or crosses the boundary between the two states. It enters South Carolina several miles above Cheraw, in the N. E. part of the state, which it traverses in a general S. S. E. direction, and enters the Atlantic near 33° 10' N. lat., through an estuary called Winyaw bay. It is navigable for sloops about 130 miles. The Little Pedee rises in Richmond county, North Carolina, and flowing southward, falls into the main stream at the S. extremity of Marion district, South Carolina.

PEDERNALES, pá-der-ná'lés, a small river of Texas, which rises in Gillespie co., and flowing easterly, enters the Colorado in Travis county.

PEDLAR'S CREEK, a small village of Iowa co., Wisconsin.

PEDLAR'S HILL, a post-village of Chatham co., North Carolina.

PEDLAR'S MILLS a post-office of Amherst co., Virginia.

PEDRICTON, a post-village of Salem co., New Jersey, on Oldman's creek, contains 2 churches and 2 stores. Pop., about 240.

PEEBLES, a township of Alleghany co., Pa., about 5 miles E. of Pittsburg. Pop., 2168.

PEEDEE, a post-office of Anson co., N. C.

PEEKSKILL, a post-village of Cortland township, Westchester county, New York, on the E. bank of the Hudson river, and on the railroad of that name, 100 miles S. from Albany. It is situated a little below the Highlands, and has considerable business. There are Dutch Reformed, Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyterian, and Friends' churches. It contained a bank, a newspaper office, an academy, and several iron foundries. Population in 1840, 2000; in 1853, estimated at 2500.

PEELED OAK, a post-office of Bath co., Ky.

PEELSVILLE, a small village of McDowell co., North Carolina.

PEELTREE, a post-office of Harrison co., Va.

PEPEE, a township in the central part of Pike co., Ohio. Population, 1321.

PEERY'S STORE, a post-office of Tazewell co., Virginia.

PEIRCEVILLE, a post-office of Dane co., Wis.

PEKATONICA, a river of Wisconsin and Illinois, is formed by two branches which unite at Wiota, in Wisconsin. It flows south-eastward into Illinois, and afterwards turns to the N. E. and enters Rock river at Rockton, in Winnebago county. It passes through a fertile valley which is bordered by high bluffs, and is navigable for small boats from its mouth to Wiota. The E. and W. branches rise in Iowa county in Wisconsin; the former is sometimes called Wassemou river.

PEKIN, a post-office of Niagara co., N. Y.

PEKIN, a post-office of Jackson co., Tenn.

PEKIN, a post-office of Jessamine co., Ky.

PEKIN, a post-village of Carroll co., Ohio, on the Sandy and Beaver canal, 138 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

PEKIN, a post-office of Washington co., Ind.

PEKIN, a thriving post-village of Tazewell county, Illinois, on the left bank of Illinois river, 12 miles below Peoria, and about 60 miles N. from Springfield. It is the largest place in the county, and has an active business. Large quantities of produce are shipped here by steamboats. Pekin contains a number of churches, an academy, 2 newspaper offices, and several steam mills. The value of the produce received here in 1852 was estimated at $1,500,000. Population, in 1853, about 2000.

PELHAM, a post-township of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire, 38 miles S. E. from Concord, contains a village of its own name. Population, 1071.

PELHAM, a post-township in Hampshire co., Mass., 77 miles W. from Boston. Pop., 983.

PELHAM, a post-township in the S. part of Westchester co., New York, on Long Island sound, and on the New York and New Haven railroad. Population, 577.

PELHAM, a post-village of Grundy co., Tenn.

PELLA, a post-village of Marion co., Iowa, 88 miles W. by S. from Iowa City. It was settled mostly by the Dutch. Population, in 1853, about 500.

PELL'S LANDING, a small village of Hardin co., Illinois, on the Ohio river.

PELTONVILLE, a post-village of Steuben co., New York, about 18 miles N. by E. from Bath.

PEMBERTON, or NEW MILLS, a post-village of Burlington county, New Jersey, on the Rancocas creek, 20 miles E. by S. from Trenton. It contains 3 churches, several manufactories, and stores. Population, about 700.

PEMBERTON, a post-office of Goochland co., Virginia.

PEM'BINA, a lake in the N. part of Minnesota Territory, about 10 miles long. Its outlet flows into Red river.

PEMBINA, a very large county of Minnesota, comprises nearly half of the territory extending from Itasca lake to the Missouri river, and from lat. 45° 25' to lat. 49° N. It is drained principally by the Red river of the North, and by Rivière à Jacques. The surface is elevated, and in some parts hilly. The greater part of this region is possessed by the Sioux and Chippewa Indians. The population in 1850 was 1134.

PEMBINA, a settlement in Pembina co., Minnesota Territory, on Red river of the North, where it crosses the northern boundary of the United States. It contains about 1000 inhabitants, who subsist chiefly on the produce of the chase.

PEMBROKE, a post-township of Washington co., Maine, about 155 miles E. N. E. from Augusta. Population, 1712.

PEMBROKE, a post-village of Merrimack co. New Hampshire, on the Merrimack river, near the Portsmouth and Concord railroad, 7 miles S. E. from Concord. It contains an academy. Population of the township, 1733.

PEMBROKE, a post-township in Plymouth co., Massachusetts, 27 miles S. E. from Boston. The village contains an academy. Population, 1388.

PEMBROKE, a post-township of Genesee co., New York, about 250 miles W. by N. from Albany. Population, 2279.

PEMBROKE, a post-office of Giles co., Va.

PEMBROKE, a post-village in Christian co., Kentucky, 197 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

PEMADUMCOOK, a lake of very irregular shape, in the E. part of Piscataquis co., Maine, receives the waters of Chesuncook lake. Its outlet joins the Penobscot river.

PEMIGEWASSET river, near the centre of New Hampshire, is formed by three principal branches which rise and unite in Grafton county. It joins Winnipiseogee river, on the borders of Merrimack county, to form the Merrimack river.

PEMISCOT, a lake near the S. E. extremity of Missouri, lies in the S. part of Pemiscot county, scarcely two miles from the Mississippi river, from which it probably receives supplies during high water. It communicates with Whitewater river by a short outlet. Length about 18 miles, greatest breadth 5 or 6 miles.

PEMISCOT, a county forming the S. E. extremity of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas and on the Mississippi river, which separates it from Tennessee, has an area estimated at 300 square miles. The surface is level, and mostly occupied by swamps and shallow lakes, among which the largest is Lake Pemiscot, situated in the S. part. Formed in 1851, out of the S. part of New Madrid county. Capital, Gayoso.

PENNAQUID, a post-office of Lincoln co., Me.

PENNAQUID POINT, on the W. side of the entrance to George's river, Lincoln co., Maine. On its extremity is a fixed light, 75 feet above the level of the sea, serving both for Bristol and Waldoborough rivers. Lat. 43° 48' N., lon. 69° 29' W.

PENATAQUIT, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

PENCHANT, a small bayou of Louisiana, commences in Terre Bonne parish, and flows north-westward into Bayou Chene.

PENDARVIS'S STORE, a post-village of Wayne co., Georgia.

PENDLETON, a county in the N. central part of Virginia, has an area of 620 square miles. It is intersected by the South or principal branch of Potomac river, and by two affluents of the same, called the North and South forks. The surface is very mountainous, and densely covered with timber. The main Alleghany mountain forms its boundary on the N. W., the North mountain on the S. E., and Jackson's mountain extends across the county. The mean height of the land is estimated at 2060 feet above the sea. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 109,838 bushels of corn; 44,137 of wheat; 29,930 of oats; 7664 tons of hay, and 69,306 pounds of butter. There were 20 flour and saw mills, 7 wool-carding mills, and 7 tanneries. It contained 12 churches, and 225 pupils attending academies and other schools. Organized in 1788, and named in honor of Edmund Pendleton, a distinguished statesman of Virginia. Capital, Franklin. Pop., 5795; of whom 5473 were free, and 322, slaves.

PENDLETON, a former district of South Carolina, forming the N. W. extremity of the state, has been divided into two parts constituting the present districts of Pickens and Anderson.

PENDLETON, a county in the N. part of Kentucky, has an area of 300 square miles. The Ohio river forms its N. E. boundary, separating it from the State of Ohio: it is intersected by the Licking river, navigable by small steamboats, and also drained by the South Licking river. The surface is undulating, and extensively covered with forests of oak, ash, &c.: the soil is fertile, both on the bottoms and uplands. Indian corn, oats, tobacco, grass, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 429,855 bushels of corn; 44,207 of oats, and 253,827 pounds of tobacco. It contained 14 churches, 380 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending an academy. The surface rock of this county is the blue limestone. It is intersected by the Covington and Lexington railroad. Formed in 1798. Capital, Falmouth. Population, 6774; of whom 6265 were free, and 509, slaves.

PENDLETON, a post-township of Niagara co., New York, on the Tonawanda creek, about 17 miles N. N. E. from Buffalo. Pop., 2166.

PENDLETON, a post-village of Anderson district, South Carolina, on Eighteen Mile creek, about 120 miles W. N. W. from Columbia. It contains several churches, academies, and a newspaper office.

PENDELTON, a small village of Hamilton co., Ohio, is a suburb of Cincinnati.

PENDELTON, a post-office of Putnam co., O.

PENDELTON, a thriving post-village of Madison co., Indiana, on Fall creek, and on the Belfontaine and Indiana railroad, 26 miles E. N. E. from Indianapolis. The creek affords excellent water-power. There are quarries of fine limestone and marble in the vicinity. Population, 386.

PENDELTON CENTRE, a post-office of Niagara co., New York.

PENDELTON HILL, a post-office of New London co., Connecticut.

PENDELTON'S RIVER, of Georgia, a small stream which flows S. E., and enters the Ochoopee river in Tatnall co., near Reidsville.

PENEUACH, a village in Dallas co., Iowa, 145 miles W. by S. from Iowa City.

PENFIELD a post-township in the E. part of Monroe co., New York. Population, 3185.

PENFIELD, a post-village in the above township, on Irondequoit creek, 7 miles E. from Rochester. It contains several churches, factories, and mills. Pop., about 800.

PENFIELD, a post-village of Greene co., Georgia, 47 miles N. from Milledgeville, was first settled in 1836. It is the seat of the Mercer University, under the direction of the Baptists. Population, near 400.

PENFIELD, a post-township forming the S. S. E. extremity of Lorain co., Ohio. Pop., 672.

PENFIELD, a township in the N. W. part of Calhoun co., Michigan. Population, 598.

PENFIELD, a post-office of Kane co., Ill.

PENINSULA, a small post-village of Summit co., Ohio, 136 miles N. E. from Columbus.

PENN, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, 12 miles N. W. from Reading. Pop., 1476.

PENN, a township of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 40 miles W. S. W. from Philadelphia. Population, 738.

PENN, a township of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Huntingdon and Broadtop railroad route, 12 miles S. W. from Huntingdon. Population, 839.

PENN, a post-township of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. by W. from Lancaster. Population, 1909.

PENN, a township of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania about 22 miles E. by N. from Williamsport. Population, 578.

PENN, a township of Perry co., Pennsylvania, on the right side of the Susquehanna river, 40 miles S. S. W. from Sunbury. Population, 1109.

PENN, a township in the S. W. part of Morgan co., Ohio. Population, 1370.

PENN, a township in the N. E. part of Cass co., Michigan. Population, 698.

PENN, a township in Jay co., Indiana. Population, 810.

PENN, a township in St. Joseph co., Indiana. Population, 1622.

PENNAHATCHEE CREEK, of Georgia, enters Flint river near Drayton, in Dooly county.

PENNELVILLE, a post-office of Oswego co., New York.

PENNEY'S a post-office of Randolph co., Mo.

PENNFIELD, a post-office of Clearfield co., Pa.

PENNFIELD, a post-office of Davidson co., North Carolina.

PENNFIELD, a post-office of Calhoun co., Michigan.

PENN FOREST, a township of Carbon co., Pennsylvania, about 33 miles N. N. W. from Allentown. Population, 413.

PENN HILL, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

PENNINGTON, a post-village of Mercer co., New Jersey, 8 miles N. from Trenton, contains 2 churches, and 2 seminaries. Pop., 500.

PENNINGTON, a township in Bradley co., Arkansas. Population, 1216.

PENNINGTON, a township in Licking co., Ohio. Population, 1145.

PENNINGTONVILLE, a thriving post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, on the railroad between Philadelphia and Columbia, 48 miles W. from the former. It is a depôt for coal and lumber, and contains several large stores.

PENN LINE, a post-village of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, on the W. boundary of the state, 24 miles W. from Meadville.

PENN RUN, a post-office of Indiana co., Pa.

PENNSBOROUGH, a post-office of Ritchie co., Virginia.

PENNSBOROUGH, a post-office of Irwin co., Ga.

PENNSBURG, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

PENNSBURY, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Chester co., Pennsylvania, on Brandywine creek. Population, 761.

PENN'S COVE, a thriving village, or settlement, capital of Island county, Washington Territory, situated near the centre of Whidby's island. It has one of the finest harbors in the world, completely sheltered from all the winds that prevail in this quarter.

PENN'S CREEK rises in the centre part of Pennsylvania, and flows into the Susquehanna a few miles below Sunbury.

PENN'S CREEK, a post-office of Union co., Pennsylvania.

PENN DISTRICT, formerly PENN TOWNSHIP, is situated N. of Philadelphia, and adjoining the district of Spring Garden; intersected by the Reading railroad. The N. part of Penn township has been cut off, forming now the township of North Penn.

PENNSGROVE, a thriving post-village of Upper Penn's Creek township, Salem county, New Jersey, is situated on the Delaware river, about 12 miles N. from Salem. It has 1 church, 3 stores, and a steam saw mill with a ship-yard attached. There are also 2 hotels, which are much frequented in summer by citizens of Philadelphia.

PENNSGROVE, a post-village of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, on Chester creek, 3 miles S. W. from Media.

PENN'S NECK. See WILLIAMSBURG.

PENN'S NECK, a former township of Salem county, New Jersey, now divided into Lower Penn's Neck and Upper Penn's Neck. The former is situated on the Delaware river, about 5 miles N. W. from Salem. Population, 1429. The latter is also bordering on the Delaware, about 11 miles N. from Salem. Population, 2422.

PENN'S SQUARE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

PENN'S STORE, a post-office of Patrick co., Virginia, 224 miles S. W. from Richmond.

PENNSVILLE, a small village of Chester co., Pa., about 8 miles S. from Westchester.

PENNSVILLE, a small village of Penn township, Clearfield co., Pennsylvania.

PENNSVILLE, a post-office of Fayette co., Pa.

PENNSVILLE, formerly HICKSVILLE, a village of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania, 3 miles N. from Muncy.

PENNSVILLE, a post-village of Morgan co., Ohio, 34 miles S. by E. from Zanesville.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the Middle United States, and the second in population of the confederacy, is bounded N. by Lake Erie and New York; E. by New York and New Jersey, from which it is separated by the Delaware river; S. by Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia; and W. by Virginia and Ohio. It lies between $39^{\circ} 43'$ and $42^{\circ} 15'$ N. lat., and between $74^{\circ} 42'$ and $80^{\circ} 36'$ W. lon., being about 310 miles in length, and 160 in width, (except at the angle at Lake Erie, where it is 175,) and containing an area of 46,000 square miles, or 29,440,000 acres, of which only 8,628,619 were improved in 1850.

Population.—Pennsylvania was originally settled by English and Welsh Friends, or Quakers, but the population afterwards received large additions of Germans and Irish, and some other foreigners. In some of the middle and eastern counties, the Germans still keep up their own language and customs, and have papers printed and schools taught in their own tongue. By the census of 1790, there were 434,373 inhabitants; 602,365 in 1800; 810,091 in 1810; 1,049,458 in 1820; 1,348,233 in 1830; 1,724,033 in 1840; and 2,311,786 in 1850; of whom 1,142,863 were white males; 1,115,600 females; 25,037 colored males, and 28,266 females. This population was divided into 408,497 families, inhabiting 386,216 dwellings. Of the population, 1,844,672 were born in the state; 169,947 in other states of the Union; 38,048 in England; 151,728 in Ireland; 16,212 in Scotland and Wales; 2500 in British America; 78,592 in Germany; 4083 in France; 7796 in other countries; and 2296 whose places of birth were unknown—giving nearly 13 per cent. of foreign birth.—See Table of Nativities, APPENDIX. In the twelve months preceding June 1, 1850, there occurred 28,318 deaths, or rather more than 12 in every 1000 persons. In the same period, 11,551 paupers received aid, of whom 5653 were foreigners, at an expense of about $20 for each pauper. Of 1004 deaf and dumb, 18 were colored; of 829 blind, 31 were colored; of 1891 insane, 49 were colored; and of 1448 idiotic, 62 were colored.

Counties.—This state is divided into 64 counties, viz. Adams, Alleghany, Armstrong, Beaver, Bedford, Berks, Blair, Bradford, Bucks, Butler, Cambria, Carbon, Centre, Chester, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Columbia, Crawford, Cumberland, Dauphin, Delaware, Elk, Erie, Fayette, Forest, Franklin, Fulton, Greene, Huntingdon, Indiana, Jefferson, Juniata, Lancaster, Lawrence, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, Lycoming, McKean, Mercer, Mifflin, Monroe, Montgomery, Montour, Northumberland, Northampton, Perry, Philadelphia, Potter, Pike, Schuylkill, Somerset, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Venango, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Westmoreland, Wyoming, and York. Capital, Harrisburg.

Cities and Towns.—The principal city, the metropolis of the state, and only second in the Union in importance, is Philadelphia, population in 1850, 408,762; besides which, there are Pittsburg, 46,601, (by a local census in 1853, Pittsburg and its environs numbered 110,000 inhabitants;) Alleghany City, 21,261; Reading, 15,743; Lancaster, 12,360; Harrisburg, 7834; Pottsville, 7515; Easton, 7250; York, 6863; Norristown, 6000; Erie, 5858; Birmingham, Carlisle, Columbia, Chambersburg, Gettysburg, Westchester, Tamaqua, Allentown, Carbondale, Beaver, and some others, between 3000 and 5000; and Hollidaysburg, Union, Bristol, Phoenixville, Wilkesbarre, Bethlehem, Minersville, Meadville, Brownsville, Marietta, Lebanon, Lewiston, Port Carbon, Washington, and Honesdale, between 2000 and 3000.

Face of the Country.—No state in the Union presents a greater variety of surface than Pennsylvania. Though they do not rise to any great elevation, (seldom above 2000 feet,) its mountains spread over about one-fourth of the state in parallel ridges, in a direction generally from N. E. to S. W., and occupy the southern central and eastern counties. Though all forming parts of the great Appalachian chain, they are known by various local appellations. Commencing below Easton, on the Delaware, we have the South mountain; then in order, proceeding W. or N. W., the Blue or Kittatinny mountains, (both entering the state from New Jersey, and passing S. W. into Maryland,) and the Broad mountain, which lies south of the N. branch of the Susquehanna. We now cross the river just mentioned, but still have with us the Broad mountain, under the name of the Tuscarora; passing which, we come upon another ridge, lying mostly S. of the Juniata river, known as Sideling hill; which is succeeded in turn by the Alleghany mountains proper, the dividing ridge between the Atlantic slope and the Mississippi valley. Descending the very gradual Ohio slope, we cross two inferior but well-defined chains, known as Laurel and Chestnut ridges. As before stated, these mountains do not rise to a great height: the South mountain is within 1000, and the Blue mountain within 1500 feet. Broad mountain is said to rise higher above its immediate base than the Alleghany range, but to be inferior to them in elevation above the sea. These different ridges are separated by valleys, now contracted within narrow limits, and now spreading out to a width of from 15 to 30 miles. The entire belt in Pennsylvania spreads over a space of 200 miles—the greatest breadth the Alleghany range attains in its whole course from Maine to Alabama. In the northern part of the state the mountains become high and rugged hills; the W. is also hilly, and the S. E. and N. W. moderately so, but occasionally level. The rivers of the western part of the state, cutting their way through the table-land, present sometimes precipitous shores of several hundred feet in height, and many valleys bear evident marks of their having been formed by running water.

Geology.—We condense from Trego's work on Pennsylvania, a brief sketch of the geology of the state. The S. E. portion of Pennsylvania, including the southern parts of Bucks and Montgomery, the whole of Philadelphia and Delaware, with the southern parts of Chester, Lancaster, and York counties, is occupied by rocks belonging to the stratified primary class: irregular veins of unstratified rocks, such as granite, sienite, &c., traverse parts of the primary range. North of this triangular belt is the limestone and marble of Chester and Montgomery counties, and still more northward a considerable extent of gneiss, with talc and mica slate. Proceeding farther north, we come to the red sandstone, which stretches across the state from the Delaware river, above Treuton, to the Maryland line, passing through Bucks, Montgomery, Chester, Berks, Lancaster, Dauphin, York, and Adams counties. The red sandstone is traversed by numerous dikes of trap rock or greenstone. This rock is generally composed of feldspar and hornblende, and is an igneous production. Just below Easton commences another belt of primary rock, which (like nearly all the other formations in the E. and middle of Pennsylvania) stretches S. W. to the Maryland line, having Allentown, Reading, and Gettysburg near its north-western limit. This formation is generally here called the South mountain. Overlying the primary rocks is a belt of white sandstone, and above this is another broad belt of limestone, occasionally appearing in Northumberland, Lehigh Berks, Lebanon, Dauphin, Lancaster, York, Adams, Cumberland, and Franklin counties. The same limestone appears in the counties of Centre, Mifflin, Huntingdon, and Bedford. The rock next in order overlying the limestone is the slate: this belt crosses Northampton, Lehigh, Berks, Lebanon, Dauphin, Cumberland, and Franklin counties. Next above the slate is a formation composed of hard white and gray, or sometimes reddish or greenish, silicious sandstones, frequently containing large pebbles. This rock constitutes the Kittatinny or Blue Ridge; is seen in the rugged sandstone ridges of Juniata, Mifflin, Centre, Huntingdon, and Bedford counties, in the Tuscarora mountains, and in Montour's Ridge, from Bloomsburg to near Northumberland. Upon the sandstone just described rests, generally near the base of the mountains, a series of red and variegated shales. This formation contains the fossiliferous iron ore, extensively worked in Columbia county, near the Juniata, and in other parts where this formation exists. This group of rocks extends from Danville into Union county. Next in position we have an argillaceous blue limestone, rather slaty, and of moderate thickness, with thin bands of slaty shale. Some bands contain abundance of fossil organic remains, and occasionally iron ore. This rock is found as far N. E. as the neighborhood of Berwick, and in Perry, Juniata, Mifflin, Union, Huntingdon, and Bedford counties. It is also found along the West branch of the Susquehanna, from Muncy to Bald Eagle creek. The formation next in the ascending order is a coarse-grained yellowish-white sandstone, abounding in fossils. It will be generally found accompanying the limestone in Juniata, Mifflin, Union, Huntingdon, and Bedford counties—some iron is found in the range. We now come to a group of alternating strata of dark-gray, greenish, and olive-colored slates, interstratified with greenish argillaceous sandstones, sometimes with thin layers of limestone. Many of the strata abound in fossil shells, encrinites, and trilobites. This rock covers a large portion of Monroe, Pike, and Wayne counties, extending to the Susquehanna, between Kittatinny and Second mountain. Above the formation last described, we find a series of brown red shales and sandstones, interspersed with layers of gray and buff, and forming a good building material. This formation extends from the Susquehanna, above the Blue mountain, through Monroe county, spreading out in Pike, Wayne, Susquehanna, Luzerne, and Bradford counties; also appearing on the Juniata and in Bedford county. Over the red shales and sandstone rest massive beds of coarse, hard gray sandstones, sometimes containing pebbles, with occasional bands of dark greenish slates intermixed. We are now approaching the coal-bearing rocks, and occasionally find black carbonaceous slate, and sometimes even scales of coal itself: still we are several hundred feet below the true coal-bearing series. This formation encloses all the anthracite and bituminous coal region; but having on top and between it and the coal a series of red shales and sandstones—the strata more or less calcareous. Immediately underneath the coal is a group of massive strata, of coarse silicious conglomerates, with light-colored sandstones. All search below this last formation for coal must be fruitless. The seams of coal are separated by soft, argillaceous, bluish clay, or light-gray sandstone, or by dark-colored slates and shales.

Minerals.—Pennsylvania stands first among the United States in the abundance of her coal and iron. Though not possessing a great variety of rare minerals, and none of the precious metals, she has those which have made England the wealthiest and most powerful nation on the globe, while Spain and Portugal, with their gold, silver, and diamond mines, have become poor in national wealth, and have sunk to a low degree of political influence. Owing no doubt to her homely but useful minerals, Pennsylvania has advanced, between 1840 and 1850, in a greater ratio in population than even the Empire State, (New York,) or that vigorous and youthful giant of the West, Ohio. The vast anthracite coalfields of Pennsylvania lie mostly between the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers, about the head waters of the Lehigh, Schuylkill, and Lackawana. In 1852 this region sent to market 5,018,346 tons of coal. In 1851 the Lehigh mines yielded 989,251; the Schuylkill, 2,178,584; the Lackawana, 788,485, and the Susquehanna, about 400,000 tons. At Blossburg, in Tioga county, and in Clinton county, are mines of bituminous coal, said to be equal, if not superior, to the Newcastle coal, of England; while the region around Pittsburg, the commencement of the coalfield of the Mississippi valley, abounds in coal of the same kind, but little inferior in purity. Cannel coal of fine purity is found in Beaver county. The best evidence of the quantity and excellence of the iron of Pennsylvania, is the fact, according to the census report of 1850, that nearly half of the pig, cast, and wrought iron manufactured in the Union, was from her forges and furnaces. Pennsylvania also abounds in lime, marble, slate, and stones suitable for building. Marble is particularly abundant in Chester and Montgomery counties, which supply the beautiful material that shows so conspicuously in the private and public buildings of Philadelphia. Copper exists extensively in Adams county, and is found also in Chester, Montgomery, and other counties on the Atlantic slope. Zinc is mined in the vicinity of Bethlehem, plumbago in Bucks county, and lead in Chester and Montgomery counties. A bed of this mineral of great richness is reported to have been discovered recently in Blair county. Chrome exists in Lancaster county in abundance, and to some extent in Chester and York. Scattered over the state are some of the following minerals: titanium, plumbago, magnetic iron ore, iron pyrites, magnesia, talc, asbestos, barytes, zircon, tourmalin, marl, &c. Salt springs exist on the Monongahela, Kiskiminitas, and Beaver rivers, and in other parts of the state. Large quantities of salt are manufactured here. There are several medicinal springs, generally chalybeate, the most noted of which are Bedford, in the county of the same name; York, in Adams county; Doubling Gap, in Cumberland; Yellow Springs, in Chester, and Ephrata, in Lancaster county.

Rivers, Lakes, &c.—The only lake of importance in this state is Lake Erie, which forms its N. W. boundary for about 50 miles. The Delaware, which rises in the S. E. part of New York, and flows southerly, separates New York and New Jersey from Pennsylvania and Delaware, and empties into Delaware bay. It is navigable for large ships to Philadelphia, about 96 miles from the sea, and for sloops and steamboats to Trenton, 30 miles farther up. The Susquehanna, the largest river in the state, enters Pennsylvania from New York, and flowing southerly for 500 miles, crosses the entire state, dividing it into two unequal portions, having the larger part on the W. This river is not navigable, except at high water in the spring and autumn, when large quantities of timber are floated down it in rafts, and produce in rough boats called arks. Owing to its rapid descent to within a few miles of the Chesapeake bay, into which it flows, it is but little affected by the tides. Its principal tributaries are the West Branch and Juniata from the W., and the Swatara and Conestoga from the E. Between the Susquehanna and the Delaware are the Lehigh and Schuylkill, affluents of the Delaware, and each about 100 miles in length. The Ohio, which is formed by the union of the Alleghany from the N., and the Monongahela from the S., drains the western part of the state, having about 50 miles of its course in Pennsylvania. It is navigable for large steamers to its head at Pittsburg. The Alleghany is about 300, and the Monongahela 200 miles in length, and both, at high water, are navigable, the former 200, and the latter 60 miles, for small steamers. The Youghiogheny, a branch of the Monongahela, and the Beaver, a branch of the Ohio, are small rivers. Canals coast most of these rivers, except the Monongahela and Youghiogheny, to a greater or less extent.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—Justice has never been done to the picturesque beauty and grandeur of the scenery of Pennsylvania, because it has been hitherto difficult of access to those who will not travel except in luxurious cars or steamboats; but now that railroads are beginning to traverse her interior, to make accessible the romantic shores of the Juniata, Susquehanna, Schuylkill, and Lehigh rivers, we may expect to hear others exclaim, as did an English tourist, (Hon. C. A. Murray,) "To my shame be it spoken, I never heard of the Juniata till this day!" Though there is not in Pennsylvania any grand object to overpower the senses as at Niagara, the traveller has a succession of fine views in traversing the state, which fill the mind with tranquil delight. The passages of the Delaware, Lehigh, and Schuylkill rivers through the Blue Ridge—the first two called the Delaware and Lehigh Water Gaps—are well worthy a visit from the lover of fine scenery. The Delaware Water Gap, situated to the N. of Easton, is the most renowned of these. The river here breaks through the mountains, in a gorge about 2 miles in length, walled in by precipices from 1200 to 1600 feet in height, scarcely leaving space for a road between their base and the water. The mountains on the shores of the Juniata rise to about 1500 feet. The banks of the Susquehanna are interesting in almost every part of its course, and often grand. The celebrated Wyoming valley, on the N. branch, needs only to be named. The Pennsylvania canal passes through a tunnel of 1000 feet, near Blairsville; the Union canal through one of 729 feet; the Danville and Pottsville railroad through one of 700 feet; the Reading railroad through 4, severally of 960, 172, 1934, and 1300 feet long. The Pennsylvania railroad will pass through the summit of the Alleghany mountain by a tunnel 3570 feet long, at an elevation of about 2200 feet above the sea. The Portage railroad crosses the mountain by 10 inclined planes. All the railroads named above pass through successions of wild and picturesque scenery. Bedford springs are imbedded in picturesque scenery which interests the mind, while the pure air of the mountains aid the medicinal waters in their restorative qualities. For the geologist and mineralogist the coal and iron beds of Pennsylvania abound in sources of entertainment and study. A descent into one of the coal mines at Pottsville, or in its vicinity, will well repay one who is not afraid of wet and mud. Falling spring, in Luzerne county, above Pittston, and Swatara falls, 9 miles from Pottsville, present wild and romantic scenes, and are especially interesting when the streams are full. The Sawkill falls, in Pike county, near Milford, descends 80 feet by two leaps of 20 and 60 feet, into a narrow and rocky gorge as interesting as the falls themselves. The Youghiogheny descends 60 feet in a mile in a wild pass through the mountains in Fayette county. The falls of the Wallenpaupack, in Wayne county, descend 150 feet, 70 of which are perpendicular, in a rocky channel.

Climate.—The climate of Pennsylvania is variable, and liable to sudden extremes, having sometimes the heat of the Carolinas, and at others the cold of Canada, but in periods generally of only three days, intermingled in summer with sharp winds from the N. W., and mitigated in winter by the milder breezes from the S. W. Periods of warm weather sometimes occur in January and February, when the buds begin to swell. The mountainous region has a greater degree of cold, and the snows are deeper and lie longer than in other portions. In the W. the climate is milder and less variable than in the E. According to observations kept at Philadelphia in 1852, the greatest average cold was in January—mean temperature, 31°.9; the greatest average heat in July—mean temperature, 77°. The hottest day was June 16, 94°; the most intense cold was January 20, 2° below zero. The mean temperature of the winter months during 26 years was 33°; spring months, 51°.8; summer, 73°.3, and autumn, 54°.5. The average amount of rain for 15 years, 44.6 inches. The average for 14 years gives August the greatest, (5.13 inches;) February the least, (2.92 inches.) The greatest amount in any one month was 11.80 inches, in July, 1842; and the least, 5 inches, in September, 1846.

Soil and Productions.—Pennsylvania, though destitute of the luxuriant prairies of the West, is eminently an agricultural state, producing more wheat, rye, and grass-seeds than any member of the confederacy, more Indian corn than any Northern or Middle State, and more buckwheat, orchard fruits, butter, hay, oats, and slaughtered animals, than any state except New York. She is the third in the value of her live stock, and in the amount of her wool and Irish potatoes. The best soils are in the limestone and river valleys, and in the depressions among the mountains, which have a rich alluvion of 2 or 3 feet deep. There are large tracts of excellent land in the bituminous coal region of Western Pennsylvania; but the northern counties are more bleak and rugged, and not quite so productive. In many places even the mountains are valuable for pasture. Perhaps in no part of the United States is there more skilful farming than in some of the older counties of Pennsylvania. The staple articles are wheat and Indian corn, but large quantities of oats, rye, barley, buckwheat, grass-seeds, live stock, orchard fruits, butter, cheese, wool, peas, beans, Irish potatoes, market produce, tobacco, hay, flax, beeswax, honey, maple sugar, with some molasses, silk, hops, hemp, wine, and sweet potatoes, are produced. According to the census of 1850, there were in Pennsylvania 127,577 farms, containing 8,628,819 acres of cultivated land, producing 15,367,691 bushels of wheat; 4,805,161 of rye; 19,830,214 of Indian corn; 21,538,156 of oats; 55,231 of peas and beans; 5,980,732 of Irish potatoes; 165,584 of barley; 2,193,692 of buckwheat; 125,030 of clover-seed; 53,953 of other grass-seeds; 41,723 of flax-seed; 912,651 pounds of tobacco; 4,481,570 of wool; 39,878,418 of butter; 2,505,034 of cheese; 530,307 of flax; 2,326,425 of maple sugar; 839,509 of beeswax and honey; 1,842,970 tons of hay; value of live stock, $41,500,053; orchard fruits, $703,339; market products, $688,714; and slaughtered animals, $8,219,848.

Forest Trees.—The forest-trees of Pennsylvania consist of several varieties of oak, walnut, hickory, maple, dogwood, magnolia, cucumber, papaw, American poplar, gum, sycamore, catalpa, crabapple, birch, locust, sassafras, wild cherry, persimmon, aspen, chestnut, chinquin, beech, hornbeam, mulberry, ash, willow, elm, linden, several species of pine, spruce, hemlock, larch, cedar, &c.

Animals.—Among the mammalia are the bear, wildcat, panther, wolf, otter, red and gray fox, racoon, marten, mink, weasel, skunk, opossum, beaver, (rare,) muskrat, porcupine, ground-hog; flying, red, and gray squirrel; hare, rabbit, deer, and elk. Among birds are the bald eagle, fish-hawk and other varieties of hawk, owl, whippoorwill, night-hawk, swallow, Indian hen, woodcock, wild turkey, partridge, pheasant, wild goose and duck, and a great variety of small birds.

Manufactures.—Pennsylvania ranks among the first of the states of the Union in the extent and variety of her manufactures, for the fabrication of which she has great facilities in the cheapness and proximity of her coal and iron, as well as in the abundance of her water-power. This state manufactured nearly half the iron made in the United States in 1850. According to the census of 1850, there were in Pennsylvania 22,036 establishments, producing each $500 and upwards annually; of these, 208 were engaged in the manufacture of cotton, employing $4,528,925 capital, and 3564 male, and 4099 female hands, consuming raw material worth $3,152,530, and producing 45,746,790 yards of stuffs, and 5,308,561 pounds of yarn: total value, $5,322,262; 380 in wool, employing $3,005,064 capital, and 3490 male, and 2236 female hands, consuming raw material worth $3,282,718, and producing 10,099,234 yards of stuffs, and 1,941,621 pounds of yarn, worth a total value of $5,321,866; and 631 forges and furnaces, employing $19,613,415 capital, 20,831 male hands, consuming raw material worth $11,593,285, and producing 285,702 tons of pig, 182,506 of wrought, and 57,810 of cast iron, worth a total value of $20,329,301. There was also at the same census, $1,719,966 invested in the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors, employing 911 hands, consuming 2,575,540 bushels of grain, and producing 188,581 barrels of ale, &c., and 6,555,310 gallons of whiskey, wine, &c. Homemade manufactures valued at $755,104 were also fabricated.

Internal Improvements.—Pennsylvania early entered with spirit upon the work of improving her internal communications. The first great road made in the United States was the turnpike connecting Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and (till the opening of the Hudson and Erie canal in 1825) the great connecting link between the East and the West, on which might be seen at any time long lines of Conestoga wagons, heavily laden with merchandise and produce, wending their tardy way over hill and valley, and occupying a much greater length of time in the transit than is now necessary for a voyage to Europe. But the days when the Conestoga wagons were the pride of Pennsylvania are gone for ever, and with them are passing away much of that patient pains-taking industry which led her so safe, if not so brilliant, a course. May her people, in adopting the active spirit of the age, still hold on to the homely integrity of the days of the Conestoga wagon! Pennsylvania commenced in 1825 her extensive system of canals, (but too extensive, unfortunately,) as it led to locating them in places uncalled for by the demands of the time, which clogged the state with a heavy debt, under which she still labors, while, by the unproductiveness of some of them, she is deprived of the income from whence to liquidate the debt, or even pay its interest, unaided by taxation. But part of this unproductiveness is no doubt caused by the then unforeseen, but now general introduction of railways. Pennsylvania is saddled with a debt of $40,000,000, incurred mainly for purposes of internal improvement, on which an annual interest of over $2,000,000 accrues, while the revenue of the public works in 1852 was but $1,896,811.42, part of which is required to repair damages from freshets, &c. Some of her works that have long lain unfinished, will soon be completed, when it is expected they will add to the resources of the state, instead of, as heretofore, requiring constant outlay, or at best producing no return in the way of revenue for the capital expended on them. Pennsylvania has now a line of canal connecting Pittsburg and Harrisburg; one, nearly completed, along the whole course of the Susquehanna within the state, and also on the West branch; one from Beaver to Erie, one along the Delaware from Bristol to Easton, and thence up the Lehigh to the mines; one up the Schuylkill to Pottsville; one along the Lackawana to the Delaware and Hudson canal, and one uniting the Schuylkill with the Pennsylvania canal, at Middletown—making in all about 1030 miles of canal completed, or nearly so, within the state. On the 1st of January, 1853, Pennsylvania had 1244 miles of railway in operation, and 903 in course of construction. Only 82 miles of this, however, belong to the state. It has been the fashion to decry the tardiness of Pennsylvania in constructing public works. Let the $40,000,000 expended for them, and the 2200 miles of completed railways and canals, with nearly as much more projected, vindicate her. Her commercial metropolis is connected by railway with New York, with Baltimore, with Pittsburg, with Pottsville, with Columbia, York, Chambersburg, and Hagerstown in Maryland. Her western metropolis is united to Cleveland, to Cincinnati, and to other points in Indiana and Ohio; and in a short time it may be possible for a passenger to come from St. Louis to Philadelphia without changing cars for the entire distance. The railroads now constructing, or in contemplation, will connect Wheeling with the Pennsylvania road, Philadelphia with Easton and Belvidere, Pittsburg with Cumberland, Maryland, Westchester (a second road) with Philadelphia, Pittsburg with Erie and Steubenville, and Philadelphia with Erie and intermediate places.—See Table of Canals and Railways, APPENDIX. The receipts from the public works in 1852, were $1,896,811.42; the expenditures, $1,029,341.23, and net revenue, $867,470.19. Pennsylvania holds stocks in internal improvements to the amount of $32,770,061.21, of which $31,137,064.49 are in state railroads and canals, and the rest in turnpikes, navigation stocks, &c.

Commerce.—Though Pennsylvania has lost her comparative importance as a commercial state, yet her increase in the last 30 years, in foreign commerce, has been steady; while in her coasting, lake, and Ohio river trade, her advances have been immense. The completion of the Pennsylvania railway, the most direct and shortest route from the Eastern and Middle States to the great Mississippi valley, has greatly increased the transit trade across her territory. In the first five months of 1853, the receipts of toll on this road amounted to \$1,292,588. A reference to the article on the commerce of Philadelphia, will show the great increase of her coasting trade. In 1852, Pennsylvania owned 301,722 $\frac{8}{9}$ tons of shipping, of which 83,763 was steam tonnage. The same year 188 vessels were built, with an aggregate tonnage of 31,220 $\frac{3}{4}$. The imports were, for the fiscal year, terminating June 30, \$14,785,917; the exports, consisting mostly of flour, wheat, Indian corn, provisions, tobacco, quercitron bark, lard, butter, &c., amounted to \$5,823,571. Tonnage entered, 178,364; cleared, 139,932.—See PHILADELPHIA. Large quantities of lumber are floated down the Susquehanna and Delaware rivers in the spring and fall. The amount on the former river alone for 1852, brought down by canal and rafts, has been estimated at 250,000,000 feet. A large amount is also sent down the Alleghany.

Education.—The first general free-school system in Pennsylvania was adopted in 1834, which has since been remodelled and improved; but still much room is left for amendment before it can fully meet the requirements of the age—though comparatively the system is probably equal to any out of New England, and in Philadelphia equal, if not superior, to any in the United States. The number of school districts in 1851 was 9462. (exclusive of Philadelphia city and county,) open on an average 5 months in the year, and attended by 460,086 pupils—12,090 of whom were learning German. In the same year, $930,221.84 was raised by taxation, and $161,697.50 appropriated by the state, for educational purposes. The city and county of Philadelphia are under a separate management, and have one high-school, one normal, 53 grammar, 34 secondary, 142 primary, and 39 unclassified schools, with an aggregate of 48,056 pupils. This district received in 1851, a state appropriation of $31,307.30. The medical schools of Pennsylvania are first in reputation of any on the Western continent, and are attended yearly by about 1400 students. This state had in 1852, nine colleges, with an aggregate of 952 students, and 58,100 volumes in their libraries; 7 theological, with 213; 1 law, with 9; and 5 medical schools with 1163 students.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX. Another college has just gone into operation at Lancaster, called the Franklin and Marshall, of which the Hon. James Buchanan is president.

Religions.—Pennsylvania seems to have used to the full extent the privilege so strenuously contended for by her illustrious founder—that of each one worshipping according to his inclination; as there are no less than 47 different sects, occupying 3523 places of worship, of which the Baptists own 252; Freewill, 9; Disciples, 28; and Seventh Day Baptist, 4; Church of God, 27; Christians, 19; Covenanters, 18; Episcopalians, 135; Free Church, 22; Friends, 142; German Reformed, 206; Lutherans, 497; Mennonites, 86; Methodists, 882; Moravians, 84; Presbyterians, 751; Roman Catholics, 139; Union, 80, and Universalists, 19. The rest are occupied by Africans, Congregationalists, Dutch Reformed, Independent, Jewish, Seceders, Tunkers, Unitarians, United Brethren in Christ, and many other smaller sects, for which, see Table of Religions, APPENDIX. There is one church for every 658 inhabitants. Value of church property, $11,551,885.

Public Institutions.—Pennsylvania has always been noted for her charitable institutions, and even in her penal establishments she looks rather to mercy and reformation than to punishment. There are two great penitentiaries in the state, one at Philadelphia, and another at Pittsburg, both on the solitary system; but only solitary so far as communication with their fellow-prisoners is concerned, as they are weekly visited by the members of that self-sacrificing body, the Prison Discipline Society, who endeavor to cheer, encourage, and instruct them, both in morals and religion, as well as in school learning. During the year 1852, 126 convicts were received in the Eastern Penitentiary, and 153 discharged, leaving in confinement, December 31, 1852, 283 convicts, of whom 52 were colored: total number received since the opening of the prison in 1829, 2689; received into the Western Penitentiary in 1852, 187 convicts: total, in 26 years of its existence, 1648. The convicts of the Western Penitentiary more than supported themselves by the proceeds of their labor. Expenses, $86,341; of which a portion was met by a state appropriation, $16,330 by the labor of the prisoners, and the rest by the counties. Montgomery county has withdrawn its prisoners. The two houses of refuge for juvenile delinquents, (white and colored,) the deaf and dumb asylum, and blind asylum, all in Philadelphia, receive state appropriations. An appropriation of $20,000 has been made by the state for the establishment of an asylum for idiots, on condition of a like sum being subscribed by individuals. Incited by the benevolent exertions of that most noble woman, Dorothea Dix, the state has just completed, [1853,] at Harrisburg, a state lunatic asylum, at a cost of $50,000, embracing in the structure of the building, and in its discipline, most of the improvements of the age in the treatment and accommodation of the unfortunate class of beings for whom it is intended. During the year 1852, 118 patients were received, and 48 discharged; of whom 13 were restored, 16 improved, 10 unimproved, 2 eloped, and 7 died; remaining in the institution, January 1853, 106. Expenditures for the year, $38,385; of which more than $10,000 was defrayed by board received from patients, and a considerable portion of the remainder was expended for liabilities of the preceding year, from furniture, building, &c., that will not be required when the hospital is fairly in operation. The appropriations for charitable purposes in 1853, amounted to nearly $77,000.

Government, Finances, &c.—The governor of Pennsylvania is elected by the people for 3 years, but cannot be chosen more than 6 out of any 9 consecutive years, and receives a salary of $3000 per annum. The senate consists of 33 members, elected for three years, and a house of representatives of 100 members, elected annually. One-third of the senate must be chosen each year. The judiciary consists—1. Of a supreme court, composed of five judges, elected by the people at large for 15 years, but so that one judge shall be elected every third year, and the one having the shortest term to serve shall be chief justice. The jurisdiction of this court extends over the state, and the judges, by virtue of their offices, are judges of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery for the several counties. 2d. Of 24 courts of common pleas, each presided over by one judge, elected for 10 years, and one or more associates to each county, elected for 5 years.

The judges of the common pleas of each county are also justices of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery. 3. Of a district court for Philadelphia county, and one for Alleghany county. The judges of the supreme court and the county courts receive $1600 per annum, and those for Philadelphia and Pittsburg from $2000 to $2500 per annum. Every white freeman of the age of 21 years, having resided in the state one year, and in the election district where he offers to vote ten days immediately preceding such election, and within two years paid a state or county tax, which shall have been assessed at least ten days before the election, shall enjoy the rights of an elector. The state debt of Pennsylvania was, in 1853, $40,263,633; annual interest, over $2,000,000; productive property, $31,639,321; unproductive, $321,082; and ordinary expenses, exclusive of debt and schools, about $350,000 annually. Assessed value of property for 1851, $492,898,829. Banking institutions, 54, with an aggregate capital of $18,966,351, and circulation of $12,000,000; $6,200,000 in coin. Revenue from permanent sources in 1852, $4,428,096.20.

History.—Pennsylvania is the only instance of an American colony founded without bloodshed. The benevolent Penn, when he settled the state in 1682, with his peaceful associates, the Friends, conciliated the natives by the purchase of their territory, and by the kindness and good-will manifested towards them secured their friendship during 70 years. Pennsylvania was granted to William Penn in liquidation of a debt due his father, Admiral Penn, by the Government of Great Britain. In 1699, Delaware, which had before been united to Pennsylvania, was allowed a distinct legislature, but remained subject to the same governor. Previous to the old French and Indian war in 1755, the contests waged between the English and French colonies had not reached Pennsylvania; but in that year occurred the disastrous defeat of Braddock, near Pittsburg, in which Washington, then a young man, distinguished himself. In 1763 occurred the massacre of the Conestoga Indians, in Lancaster county, by the Paxton boys. In 1767 was run the famous Mason and Dixon's line, (39° 43',) the southern boundary of Pennsylvania, and which has become proverbial as the dividing line between the North and the South. Pennsylvania took an active part in the Revolutionary contest, and on her soil occurred the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, September and October, 1777, and the massacres of Wyoming and Paoli, and the suffering winter encampment at Valley Forge in 1777 and '8. In her metropolis, too, met the first congresses of the Revolution, and here was the seat, for nearly ten years, of the newly-organized government of 1789. Within her limits, in 1794, occurred the bloodless resistance to the General Government, in Washington's administration, called the Whiskey Insurrection; but notwithstanding this defection of a small part of her citizens, no state in the confederacy has been more loyal to the constitution of the federal government in all times of trial than Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania gave Franklin, Rush, Thompson, and Robert Morris to the councils of the nation in the Revolution, and the former two, besides Rittenhouse, Fulton, Say, and Morton, to science. Pennsylvania formed a constitution in 1776 suited to her changed character of an independent republican state. A new constitution was formed in 1790, and again in 1838; several alterations have since been made, as a provision in the constitution enables amendments to be made by the enactments of two legislatures, with the sanction of the people. Benjamin Franklin was president of the executive council, i. e. governor, from 1785 to 1788.

PENNSYLVANIABURG, a village of Ripley co., Indiana, 16 miles N. E. from Versailles, has near 200 inhabitants.

PENN TOWNSHIP, see PENN DISTRICT.

PENNVILLE, a post-office of Jay co., Ind.

PENN YAN, a thriving post-village of Milo township, capital of Yates county, New York, on the outlet of Crooked lake, and on the Canandaigua and Elmira railroad, 192 miles W. from Albany, and 43 miles N. by W. from Elmira. The Crooked Lake canal, connecting the Crooked with Seneca lake, passes through the village, and furnishes abundant water-power, having 27 locks in the distance of 7 miles. Penn Yan contains, besides the county buildings, 7 churches, 2 banks, several academies and union schools, 2 newspaper offices, 70 stores. 1 iron furnace, 1 plough factory, and several flouring and saw mills. Population in 1853, about 3000.

PENNYPACK CREEK, in the S. E. part of Pennsylvania, flows through Philadelphia county, and enters the Delaware river near Holmesburg.

PENNY'S FERRY, a post-office of Henry co. Ill.

PENOBSCOT river, the largest river in Maine, is formed by two branches, the East and the West, which unite in Penobscot county, near the centre of the state, and flowing in a general S. S. W. course, it meets the tide-water at Bangor, about 60 miles from its mouth. It is navigable for large vessels to Bangor, where the tide rises 20 feet, which extraordinary rise is probably produced in part at least by the wedge-shaped form of the bay, and the current from the Gulf stream. About 12 miles above Bangor there are several islands, owned by the Penobscot tribe of Indians, the principal of which is Oldtown. This river, particularly in its upper portions, affords very valuable water-power. Its length from the junction of its two branches is about 135 miles, or measuring from the source of the West and largest branch, (which is regarded by some geographers as the true Penobscot,) it amounts to 275 miles. Branches.—The West branch rises near the W. boundary between Maine and Canada, in Somerset county, and flowing through Chesuncook and Pemadumcook lakes, in Piscataquis county, unites with the East branch, in Penobscot county, near the centre of the state. The East branch, also called the Seboois river, forms the outlet to the Seboois lakes, in Penobscot county, and flowing southerly, joins the West branch.

PENOBSCOT, a county extending from the centre of Maine to its northern border, has an area of about 3200 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the St. John's river: the central and southern parts are drained by the Penobscot and its numerous tributaries, which afford valuable water-power. It is intersected in its northern part by the Aroostook river. The greater portion of this county is still unsettled, though much timber is cut in it and rafted down the Penobscot and its branches. The surface is uneven, with some mountains in the northern part. The soil is fertile, and adapted to cultivation. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 119,584 bushels of corn; 310,184 of oats; 221,248 of potatoes; 51,758 tons of hay, and 784,155 pounds of butter. There were 4 flannel and 2 woollen factories, 2 foundries, 7 grist mills, 2 paper mills, 130 saw and planing mills, 1 ship-yard, and 12 tanneries. It contained 65 churches, 6 newspaper offices; 22,919 pupils attending public schools, and 775 attending academies and other schools. The Penobscot river is navigable for large vessels 50 miles, to Bangor, and for boats some distance farther. The railroad connecting Bangor (the head of ship navigation) with Oldtown is included within this county. Organized in 1816. Capital, Bangor. Population, 63,089.

PENOBSCOT, a post-township in Hancock co., Maine, on the E. side of the Penobscot bay, and 57 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 1556.

PENOLA, a post-office of Sumter co., Ala.

PENORA, a post-office of Guthrie co., Iowa.

PENSACOLA, a port of entry and capital of Escambia county, Florida, is situated on the W. shore of Pensacola bay, about 10 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, 64 miles E. from Mobile, and 180 miles in a direct line W. from Tallahassee. The harbor has 21 feet water on the bar at low tide and it is one of the safest in the Gulf. The shore, which is low and sandy, rises gently to the height of about 40 feet. The plan of the town is regular, and the streets are wide. It contains several churches, a market house, custom house, and 3 newspaper offices. The United States Government has established a naval station here. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 1465 $\frac{4}{5}$ tons enrolled and licensed, of which 1331 $\frac{3}{5}$ tons were employed in the coast trade. The foreign arrivals for the year were 20, (tons, 3885,) of which 19 were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 19, tons 3996, of which 3459 were in American bottoms. Population, in 1850, 2164.

PENSACOLA, a post-village of Leake co., Miss.

PENSACOLA BAY, in the N. W. part of Florida, at the mouth of the Escambia river. Length, 27 miles; greatest breadth, 12 miles.

PENSAUCOLA LIGHTHOUSE, on an eminence about 40 feet high, at the E. side of the entrance of Pensacola harbor, Florida, about 2 miles N. from Fort McCrea. The light is 80 feet above the level of the sea, and revolves once in 70 seconds. Lat. 30° 19' N., lon. 87° 18' 54" W.

PENSAUKEE, a small river of Oconto county, Wisconsin, enters Green bay, about 6 miles S. from Oconto river.

PENSAUKIN CREEK, in the S. W. part of New Jersey, forms part of the boundary between Burlington and Camden counties, and enters the Delaware 5 miles above Camden.

PENTRESS, a post-office of Monongalia co. Va.

PEOLA MILLS, a post-office of Madison co. Va.

PEOLI, a post-office of Tuscarawas co., O.

PEOLIA, a small village of Washington co. Ky.

PEOPLESVILLE, a post-office of Carter co., Tennessee.

PEORIA, a county in the N. W. central part of Illinois, has an area of 650 square miles. The Illinois river and Peoria lake form the S. E. boundary. It is drained by Spoon river, and by Kickapoo, Elbow, and Copperas creeks. These streams are bordered with tracts of timber, which are separated from each other by beautiful undulating prairies. The soil is uniformly and highly productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, pork, potatoes, and wool are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 1,013,289 bushels of corn; 185,157 of wheat; 138,718 of oats; 12,553 tons of hay, and 40,225 pounds of wool. It contained 19 churches, 3 newspaper offices, and 3260 pupils attending public schools. Valuable mines of stone coal have been opened. The Illinois river is navigable by steamboats along the border. The county is intersected by the Peoria and Oquawka railroad. Organized in 1825, and named from the tribe of Indians who possessed the soil. Capital, Peoria. Population, 17,547.

PEORIA, a post-office of Wyoming co., N. Y.

PEORIA, a post-office of Franklin co., Ind.

PEORIA, a handsome and flourishing city, capital of Peoria county, Illinois, on the right or W. bank of Illinois river, at the outlet of Peoria lake, 70 miles N. from Springfield, and 151 S. W. from Chicago. It is the most populous town on the river, and one of the most important and commercial in the state. The river is navigable by steamboats in all stages of water, and is the channel of an immense trade in grain, lumber, pork, &c. A number of steamboats make regular passages between St. Louis and Peoria, which also communicates with Chicago, by means of the Illinois and Michigan canal. The Peoria and Oquawka railroad connects this place with Burlington, Iowa, and will be extended eastwardly to Middleport. The town is regularly laid out, and well built. It has, besides the county buildings, about 10 churches, several seminaries, a telegraph office, a bank, and 5 newspaper offices. We quote the following description from the letter of a recent traveller:—"Peoria is the most beautiful town on the river. Situated on rising ground, a broad plateau extending back from the bluff, it has escaped the almost universal inundation. Indeed the river here expands into a broad, deep lake, that embosoms the rising flood. This lake is a most beautiful feature in the natural scenery of the town, and as useful as beautiful, supplying the inhabitants with ample stores of fish, and in winter with abundance of the purest ice. It is often frozen to such a thickness that heavy teams can pass securely over it. A substantial drawbridge connects the town with the opposite shore of the river. The city is laid out in rectangular blocks, the streets being wide and well graded. The schools and churches are prosperous, and the society good. A public square has been reserved near the centre. Back of the town extends one of the finest rolling prairies in the state, which already furnishes to Peoria its supplies and much of its business." The number of steamboat arrivals in 1850 was 1286. La Salle, the Frenchman, established a post at this place in 1680. The rise of the present town dates from April, 1819. It was incorporated as a city in 1844. Population on January 1, 1851, 6212, in 1853 about 8000.

PEORIA LAKE, Illinois, an expansion of the Illinois river, on the E. border of Peoria county. Length, 22 miles; greatest breadth, about 3 miles.

PEORIARVILLE, a post-office of Peoria co., Ill.

PEPACK, New Jersey. See PEAPACK.

PEPACTON, a post-office of Delaware co., N. Y.

PEPACTON RIVER. See POPACTON RIVER.

PEPOKATING, a post-office of Sussex co., N. J.

PEPPERELL, a post-township in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on Nashua river, on the Worcester and Nashua railroad. Pop., 1754.

PEPPERELL, a post-village in the above township, on the railroad, 37 miles N. W. from Boston, contains 2 or 3 churches.

PEPPER'S FERRY, a post-office of Pulaski co., Virginia.

PEQUANNOCK river, is a small stream of Fairfield co., Conn., falls into Bridgeport harbor. The Housatonic railroad follows its course for nearly its whole length.

PEQUANNOCK. See POQUANNOCK.

PEQUANNOCK, a township of Morris co., New Jersey, about 57 miles N. N. E. from Trenton. Population, 4116.

PEQUANNOCK CREEK, in the N. part of New Jersey, rises in Sussex co., flows south-eastward along the boundary between Passaic and Morris counties, and unites with the Ringwood and Ramapo, near Pompton, to form Pompton river.

PEQUEA, or PECQUEA CREEK, of Lancaster co. Pennsylvania, flows into the Susquehanna.

PEQUEST CREEK, in the N. W. part of New Jersey, rises in Sussex county, flows south-westward through Warren county, and falls into the Delaware at Belvidere. It is a rapid stream, draining a limestone valley, and affording abundant water-power.

PEQUOT, a village in New London co., Connecticut, 8 miles N. E. by E. from New London.

PEQUOT, a post-village of Calumet co., Wisconsin, on the E. shore of Winnebago lake, about 100 miles N. E. from Madison.

PERALTO, a village of Valencia co., New Mexico, on the left bank of the Rio Del Norte, about 70 miles S. S. W. from Santa Fe.

PERCH RIVER, of Jefferson co., New York, flows south-westward, and enters Black river near its mouth.

PERCH RIVER, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, about 175 miles N. W. from Albany.

PERCY'S CREEK, a post-office of Wilkinson co., Mississippi.

PERDIDO, a small river of Alabama and Florida, rises near the N. W. extremity of Florida, and forms the boundary between Alabama and West Florida, until it empties itself into Perdido bay.

PERIN'S MILLS, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

PERKINS, a post-township in the N. W. part of Erie co., Ohio. Population, 1207.

PERKIN'S GROVE, a post-village of Bureau co., Illinois, 68 miles N. N. E. from Peoria.

PERKINSVILLE, a post-village of Windsor co., Vermont, on Black river, has an academy, and a number of manufactories.

PERKINSVILLE, a post-office of Goochland co., Virginia.

PERKINSVILLE, a post-village in Burke co., North Carolina.

PERKINSVILLE, a post-village of Madison co., Indiana, on White river, 10 miles W. N. W. from Anderson, has several mills, and about 200 inhabitants.

PERKIOMEN creek, of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, flows into the Schuylkill river, about 7 miles above Norristown.

PERKIOMEN, a township of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, about 27 miles S. from Allentown. Population, 1622.

PERKIOMEN BRIDGE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

PEROT, a small bayou in the S. E. part of Louisiana, is connected on the N. with Lake Washa, and on the S. with Little lake.

PEROTE, a small village of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

PEROTE, a post-office of Pike co., Ala.

PEROTE, a post-office of Ashland co., Ohio.

PERQUIMANS, a river which rises near the N. border of North Carolina, in the vicinity of the Dismal Swamp, and flows south-eastward through the middle of Perquimans county, into Albemarle sound. Length, about 60 miles. The largest vessels that navigate the sound can ascend the river about 45 miles from its mouth.

PERQUIMANS, a county in the N. E. part of North Carolina, bordering on the N. side of Albemarle sound: area estimated at 250 square miles. Perquimans river flows through the middle of the county into the sound. The surface is nearly level; the soil from the sound to the middle is fertile, adapted to wheat, Indian corn, and grass: the other portion is more sandy, and is covered with forests of pine. In 1850 this county produced 418,355 bushels of corn; 45,943 of wheat, and 1565 tons of hay. There were 3 saw mills, 2 grist mills, and 1 tannery. It contained 12 churches, 375 pupils attending public schools, and 105 attending academies or other schools. The Scupernong grape is said to succeed well here. The Perquimans river is navigable by vessels of medium size for a distance of about 45 miles. There are profitable shad and herring fisheries on this river. The earliest permanent settlement of the state was made in this county in 1662. The name was derived from the tribe of aborigines who possessed this portion of the province. Capital, Hertford. Population, 7332; of whom 4080 were free, and 3252, slaves.

PERRIN, a township of Union co., Pennsylvania. Population, 2736.

PERRINE, a small post-village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

PERRINEVILLE, a post-village of Monmouth co., New Jersey.

PERRINTON, or PERRINGTON, a post-township of Monroe co., New York, on the Erie canal, 12 miles E. S. E. from Rochester. Population, 2891.

PERRY, a county in the S. E. central part of Pennsylvania, has an area of 540 square miles. The Susquehanna river forms its entire E. boundary; the N. part of the county is intersected by the Juniata river, and the S. part by Sherman's creek. The surface is mountainous; the Blue mountain extending along the southern border, and Tuscarora mountain along the north-western. The soil of the arable land is excellent. Grain, cattle, iron, and leather are the chief articles of export. In 1850 this county produced 190,697 bushels of wheat; 155,271 of Indian corn; 144,142 of oats; 16,690 tons of hay, and 302,139 pounds of butter. There were 43 flour and grist mills, 45 saw mills, 1 rolling mill, 10 cabinet-ware shops, 5 woollen factories, 1 nail factory, 4 iron foundries, and 25 tanneries. It contained 49 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 6373 pupils attending public schools, and 25 attending an academy. Limestone and slate are the principal rocks; the hills contain an abundance of iron ore. The county is intersected by the Pennsylvania canal and Central railroad; another canal extends along the E. border. Organized in 1820, and named in honor of Commodore Oliver H. Perry, of the United States navy. Capital, Bloomfield. Population, 20,088.

PERRY, a county in the W. central part of Alabama, has an area of 950 square miles. It is intersected by the Cahawba river, an affluent of the Alabama. The surface is hilly and undulating; the soil is highly productive. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 24,524 bales of cotton; 934,116 bushels of corn, and 184,616 of sweet potatoes. There were 6 grist and saw mills, 3 tanneries, 1 iron foundry, and 1 castor-oil mill. It contained 20 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 714 pupils attending public schools, and 548 attending other schools. The Cahawba river is navigable by steamboats in this county. Capital, Marion. Population, 22,285; of whom 8368 were free, and 13,917, slaves.

PERRY, a county in the S. E. part of Mississippi, has an area of about 1040 square miles. It is intersected by Leaf river, a branch of the Pascagoula. The surface is uneven; the soil is rather light, and produces pine timber, Indian corn, and pasture for cattle. In 1850 this county yielded 58,360 bushels of corn; 44,980 of sweet potatoes, and 88,000 pounds of rice. Capital, Augusta. Population, 2438; of whom 1689 were free, and 749, slaves.

PERRY, a county in the W. central part of Arkansas; area, 580 square miles. The Arkansas river bounds it on the N. E., and it is drained by the Fourche La Pave. The surface is diversified by hills, which contain marble and other valuable materials for building. The soil near the streams is fertile, adapted to grass and corn, which are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 31,770 bushels of corn, and 6778 pounds of butter. It contained 2 saw mills, and 45 pupils attending public schools. White oak, hickory, pine, cedar, and ash abound in the county. Capital, Perryville. Population, 978; of whom 963 were free, and 15, slaves.

PERRY, a county in the W. central part of Tennessee, has an area of about 600 square miles. The Tennessee forms its entire W. boundary, and it is intersected by Buffalo river. The surface is moderately uneven, and partly covered by forests. Indian corn, oats, and grass are cultivated. Pork is also exported. In 1850 the county produced 395,535 bushels of corn; 23,484 of oats, and 41,686 pounds of butter. There were 685 pupils attending public schools. Tennessee river is navigable by steamboats on the border, and flat-boats descend Buffalo river in high water. The county has a turnpike leading to Nashville. Capital, Linden. Population, 5822; of whom 5508 were free, and 314, slaves.

PERRY, a county in the S. E. part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 700 square miles. It is drained by the North and Middle forks of Kentucky river. The surface is diversified by valleys and mountains; the land is mostly too rugged for cultivation, but adapted to wool-growing. In 1850 this county produced 124,296 bushels of corn, and 4758 of oats. It contained 1 church. Horses, cattle, pork, and salt are exported. Coal is abundant in the county. The forks above named are navigable for descending boats in high water. Capital, Hazard. Population, 3092, of whom 2975 were free, and 117, slaves.

PERRY, a county in the S. E. central part of Ohio, contains about 400 square miles. It is drained by Rush and Jonathan creeks. The surface is undulating or hilly; the soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, wool, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 428,903 bushels of corn; 160,043 of wheat; 101,591 of oats; 9887 tons of hay, and 261,806 pounds of butter. It contained 61 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 100 pupils attending an academy. The Zanesville, Wilmington, and Cincinnati railroad passes through the county. Capital, Somerset. Population, 20,775.

PERRY, a county in the S. part of Indiana, contains about 400 square miles. The Ohio river bounds it on the S. and S. E. The surface is very hilly, excepting the river bottoms. Indian corn, oats, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 232,835 bushels of corn; 33,475 of oats; 999 tons of hay, and 10,581 pounds of wool. It contained 8 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 476 pupils attending public schools. The hills produce valuable timber, and contain large beds of coal, both of which are extensively used in the steamboats on the Ohio. The county also contains quarries of fine sandstone, which afford a good material for building. Capital, Rome. Pop., 7268.

PERRY, a county in the S. part of Illinois, has an area of 420 square miles. It is intersected by Beaucoup creek, which flows southward into the Big Muddy river. The county consists partly of prairies and partly of timbered land; the soil is represented to be fertile. Indian corn, oats, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 363,300 bushels of corn; 66,363 of oats, and 119,079 pounds of butter. It contained 5 churches, and 340 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Pinckneyville. Population, 5278.

PERRY, a county in the E. S. E. part of Missouri, has an area of 430 square miles. The Mississippi river, which separates it from Illinois, forms the boundary on the E. and N. E.; it is also drained by Apple, Saline, and Cape Cinque Homme creeks. The surface is somewhat diversified; the soil is generally fertile, especially on the river bottom, which is about 3 miles wide. Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 349,280 bushels of corn; 65,395 of wheat; 42,916 of oats, and 73,845 pounds of butter. It contained 14 churches, 360 pupils attending public schools, and 95 attending other schools. Lead and iron abound in the county; marble also is found in it, and blue limestone is the principal rock. The streams are said to furnish ample water-power. Capital, Perryville. Population, 7215, of whom 6421 were free, and 794, slaves.

PERRY, a post-township in Washington co., Maine, 154 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 1824.

PERRY, a post-township in the E. part of Wyoming co., New York. Pop., 2832.

PERRY, a post-village in the above township, at the outlet of a beautiful pond called Perry lake, near 2 miles in length, about 50 miles E. by S. from Buffalo. It contains 4 churches, 1 furnace, 2 flour mills, and 1 hotel. A newspaper is published here. Population in 1853, estimated at 1500.

PERRY, a township of Armstrong co., Pa., on the right side of the Alleghany river, about 50 miles N. N. E. from Pittsburg. Population, 799.

PERRY, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1320.

PERRY, a township of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, about 55 miles N. N. E. from Pittsburg. Population, 1394.

PERRY, a township of Fayette co., Pennsylvania. It is intersected by the Youghiogeny river, 30 miles N. E. from Waynesburg. Population, 1272.

PERRY, a township of Greene co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles S. S. E. from Waynesburg. Population, 1090.

PERRY, a township in Jefferson co., Pennsylvania, 15 miles S. from Brookville.

PERRY, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Lawrence co., Pa. Pop., 528.

PERRY, a township of Union co., Pa., 40 miles S. from Williamsport. Pop., 1341.

PERRY, a small village of Union co., Pa.

PERRY, a post-office of Venango co., Pa.

PERRY, a thriving post-village, capital of Houston co., Georgia, on Indian creek, an affluent of the Ocmulgee, about 33 miles S. by W. from Macon. It is surrounded by rich plantations of cotton, and has an active business. Perry contains 3 neat churches, 2 large schools, 5 dry-goods stores, 5 other stores, and 2 carriage shops. Pop. in 1853, about 1200.

PERRY, a township in Johnson co., Arkansas. Population, 603.

PERRY, a township in the S. E. part of Allen co., Ohio. Population, 923.

PERRY, a township in the N. E. part of Ashland co., Ohio. Population, 1788.

PERRY, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Brown co., Ohio. Pop., 2464.

PERRY, a township in the S. part of Carroll co., Ohio. Population, 1277.

PERRY, a township in the N. part of Columbiana co., Ohio. Population, 2731.

PERRY, a township in the S. W. part of Coshocton co., Ohio. Population, 1340.

PERRY, a township in Fayette co., Ohio. Population, 955.

PERRY, a township in the N. W. part of Franklin co., Ohio. Population, 1169.

PERRY, a township in the central part of Gallia co., Ohio. Population, 1208.

PERRY, a township in the W. part of Hocking co., Ohio. Population, 1066.

PERRY, a post-township in the N. E. part of Lake co., Ohio. Population, 1131.

PERRY, a township in the S. part of Lawrence co., Ohio. Population, 924.

PERRY, a township in the E. part of Licking co., Ohio. Population, 1371.

PERRY, a township in the E. central part of Logan co., Ohio. Population, 1230.

PERRY, a township in the S. part of Monroe co., Ohio. Population, 1459.

PERRY, a township in the W. central part of Montgomery co., Ohio. Population, 1906.

PERRY, a township in the N. E. part of Morrow co., Ohio. Population, 846.

PERRY, a township in Muskingum co., Ohio. Population, 1016.

PERRY, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Pickaway co., Ohio. Pop., 1120.

PERRY, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Pike co., Ohio. Population, 519.

PERRY, a township in the W. part of Putnam co., Ohio. Population, 262.

PERRY, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Richland co., Ohio. Pop., 924.

PERRY, a township in the S. E. part of Shelby co., Ohio. Population, 899.

PERRY, a township in the S. W. part of Stark co., Ohio. Population, 4667.

PERRY, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Tuscarawas co., Ohio. Pop., 1396.

PERRY, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Wood co., Ohio. Population, 888.

PERRY, a post-township in the S. W. part of Shiawassee co., Michigan. Pop., 313.

PERRY, a post-township in Allen co., Indiana. Population, 842.

PERRY, a township in Clay co., Indiana. Population, 691.

PERRY, a township in Delaware co., Indiana. Population, 1091.

PERRY, a township in Lawrence co., Indiana. Population, 1457.

PERRY, a township in Marion co., Indiana. Population, 1803.

PERRY, a township in Martin co., Indiana. Population, 1517.

PERRY, a township in Miami co., Indiana. Population, 1176.

PERRY, a township in Monroe co., Indiana. Population, 1004.

PERRY, a township in Noble co., Indiana. Population, 1104.

PERRY, a township in Tippecanoe co., Indiana. Population, 1036.

PERRY, a township in Vanderburg co., Indiana. Population, 693.

PERRY, a township in Wayne co., Indiana. Population, 710.

PERRY, a neat and thriving post-village of Pike co., Illinois, 62 miles W. from Springfield. It is situated in a fertile prairie. Population in 1853, about 500.

PERRY, a township in Dane co., Wisconsin. Population, 121.

PERRY CENTRE, a post-village of Wyoming co., New York, about 50 miles E. by S. from Buffalo.

PERRY COURT HOUSE, a post-village in Perry co., Kentucky.

PERRYMANVILLE, a post-village in Harford co., Maryland.

PERRY MINE, a post-village of St. Francis co., Missouri.

PERRYOPOLIS, a post-village of Fayette co., Pennsylvania, on the Youghiogheny river, about 35 miles S. from Pittsburg. It has a glass factory, and 1 newspaper office.

PERRYOPOLIS, a small village of Noble co., O.

PERRY'S BRIDGE, a post-village of Vermilion parish, Louisiana.

PERRYSBURG, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Cattaraugus co., New York, on the Erie railroad. Population, 1861.

PERRYSBURG, a small village of Ashland co., Ohio.

PERRYSBURG, a flourishing post-village, capital of Wood co., Ohio, on the right bank of the Maumee river, opposite Maumee City, 140 miles N. N. W. from Columbus. The situation is elevated and beautiful. During a large part of the year, steamboats ascend the river to this point. It is on the Dayton and Michigan railroad, and is the terminus of several plank-roads. A hydraulic canal has recently been made here, by which a fall of 18 or 20 feet is obtained in the space of 2 miles. The sickness which formerly prevailed in the Maumee valley has disappeared since the land has been cleared and cultivated. Perrysburg has a bridge across the river, and contains 3 or 4 churches and 2 newspaper offices. Population in 1850, 1199, in 1853, about 1600.

PERRYSBURG, a small post-village of Miami co., Indiana, 78 miles N. from Indianapolis.

PERRY'S CORNER, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

PERRY'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

PERRY'S MILLS, a small post-village of Clinton co., New York, about 170 miles N. by E. from Albany.

PERRY'S MILLS, a post-office of Tatnall co., Georgia, 85 miles W. by S. from Savannah.

PERRYVILLE, a post-village in Washington co., Rhode Island.

PERRYVILLE, a post-village of Madison co., New York, 20 miles E. by S. from Syracuse.

PERRYVILLE, New Jersey. See PERRYVILLE.

PERRYSVILLE, or PERRYVILLE, a post-village of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, 8 miles N. by W. from Pittsburg.

PERRYSVILLE, a village of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania, 18 miles S. from Brookville. Population in 1853, 300.

PERRYSVILLE, a small village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

PERRYSVILLE, a village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, about 30 miles E. by N. from Pittsburg.

PERRYSVILLE, a village of Ashland co., Ohio, about 72 miles N. N. E. from Columbus.

PERRYTON, a post-village of Licking co., Ohio, 50 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

PERRYTON, a post-office of Mercer co., Illinois, about 66 miles N. E. from Nauvoo.

PERRYVILLE, or PERRYSVILLE, a small post-village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, about 33 miles N. N. W. from Trenton.

PERRYVILLE, a thriving post-village of Juniata co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Juniata river, and on the Central railroad, 2 miles below Mifflintown. The river is crossed here by a handsome bridge.

PERRYVILLE, or PERRYSVILLE, a thriving village of Mifflin co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. from Lewistown.

PERRYVILLE, a small post-village of Cecil co., Maryland, on the Philadelphia and Baltimore railroad, 40 miles E. N. E. from Baltimore.

PERRYVILLE, a post-village of Perry co., Alabama, about 10 miles E. from Marion.

PERRYVILLE, a small post-village, capital of Perry co., Arkansas, on the Fourche La Pave river, 30 miles from its entrance into the Arkansas river, and 40 miles W. N. W. from Little Rock.

PERRYVILLE, a post-village of Decatur co., Tennessee, on the W. bank of Tennessee river, 100 miles W. S. W. from Nashville. About 3000 bales of cotton are annually shipped here. Population, about 250.

PERRYVILLE, or PERRYSVILLE, a post-village of Boyle co. Kentucky, 42 miles S. from Frankfort. It has 2 churches and a woollen factory.

PERRYVILLE, or PERRYSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Vermilion co., Indiana, on the right bank of the Wabash river, and on the Wabash and Erie canal, 89 miles W. N. W. from Indianapolis. It is favorably situated for business, and is the largest village in the county. A plank-road is in progress from this place to Georgetown, in Illinois. A newspaper is published here. Pop., about 1000.

PERRYVILLE, a post-village, capital of Perry co., Missouri, about 10 miles W. from the Mississippi river, and 75 miles S. S. E. from St. Louis. It contains a court house, jail, and a few stores.

PERSIA, a post-township in the N. W. part of Cattaraugus co., New York, on the Erie railroad. Population, 1955.

PERSIFER, a post-office of Knox co., Ill.

PERSIMMON CREEK, a post-office of Cherokee co., North Carolina.

PERSON, a county in the N. part of North Carolina, bordering on Virginia; area estimated at 370 square miles. It is intersected by the Hycootee, an affluent of Dan river, and the Neuse river rises within its limits. The surface is diversified by hills of moderate size; the soil is generally fertile. Tobacco and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 259,072 bushels of corn; 49,802 of wheat, and 1,562,119 pounds of tobacco. There were 3 grist mills, 3 corn and flour mills, and 4 tobacco manufactories. It contained 18 churches. Formed in 1791, and named from General Thomas Person, of Granville county, North Carolina. Capital, Roxborough. Population, 10,781; of whom 5888 were free, and 4893, slaves.

PERTH, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Fulton co., N. Y. Pop., 1140.

PERTH AMBOY, a post-village and port of entry of Middlesex county, New Jersey, at the head of Raritan bay, and at the mouth of Raritan river, 36 miles N. E. from Trenton, and 25 miles from New York. It is situated in Perth Amboy township, on the left or N. bank of the Raritan river, and at the southern end of Staten Island sound. The harbor is good and easily accessible. The village contains 4 churches, an academy, a lock factory, and a stoneware pottery. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 21,651 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed, of which 20,852 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 4758 $\frac{7}{8}$ tons in steam navigation. During the year, 8 vessels, with an aggregate burthen of 1273 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons, were admeasured. Incorporated in 1784. Population of the township, 1865.

PERU, a post-township in Oxford co., Maine, 33 miles W. by N. from Augusta. Pop., 1109.

PERU, a post-township in Bennington co., Vermont, 80 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 567.

PERU, a post-township in Berkshire co., Mass., 112 miles W. from Boston. Pop., 519.

PERU, a post-village of Peru township, Clinton county, New York, on the Au Sable river, 4 miles W. from Lake Champlain, and about 10 miles S. S. W. from Plattsburg. It contains several churches and mills. Pop. of the township, 3640; of the village, about 900.

PERU, a township of Clearfield co., Pennsylvania. Population, 528.

PERU, a village of Juniata co., Pennsylvania, 20 miles S. W. from Mifflintown. It was commenced in 1848, and has near 150 inhabitants.

PERU, a post-office of Haywood co., N. C.

PERU, a post-township in the N. W. part of Huron co., Ohio. Population, 1632.

PERU, a post-village in the above township, on a branch of Huron river, 94 miles N. by E. from Columbus. It has several stores and mills. Population, near 400.

PERU, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Morrow co., Ohio. Pop., 876.

PERU, a thriving post-village, capital of Miami county, Indiana, is situated on the right bank of the Wabash river, and on the Wabash and Erie canal, 68 miles N. from Indianapolis. It is the terminus of the Peru and Indianapolis railroad, which is expected to be completed in 1854, is on the Lake Erie, Wabash, and St. Louis railroad, not yet finished. Another railroad is projected from Peru northward, to connect with the North Indiana railroad at Elkhart. Miami county formed part of the Miami reserve, which passed from aboriginal hands a few years ago. Since that event the population has increased rapidly by immigration. Peru contains 1 Catholic, and 5 Protestant churches, and 1 newspaper office. Laid out in 1825. Pop. in 1850, 1266; in 1853, about 1700.

PERU, a flourishing post-village of La Salle county, Illinois, is situated on the Illinois river, 63 miles above Peoria, and 100 miles S. W. from Chicago. This village, which is near the terminus of the Illinois and Michigan canal, and at the head of natural navigation on the river, has an active trade, and is rapidly increasing. The river affords extensive water-power, and is navigable by steamboats in all stages of water. Stone coal is abundant in the vicinity. The Chicago and Rock Island railroad intersects the Central railroad at this point. The trade of Peru in 1852 was estimated by Governor Matteson, in his late message, at $1,100,000. It contains 2 banks. Two newspapers are published weekly. Pop. in 1853, about 3000.

PERU, a small village of Lawrence co., Ill.

PERU, a village in Dubuque co., Iowa, on the W. bank of Mississippi river, 7 miles N. from Dubuque.

PERU BLUFF, a small village of Jefferson co., Arkansas.

PERU MILLS, a post-office of Juniata co., Pa.

PERUVILLE, a post-village of Tompkins co., New York, about 14 miles N. E. from Ithaca.

PESHAW or CLEAR CREEK, of Missouri, flows N. E. through Bates co., and enters Osage river in St. Clair county.

PESHTEGO river, of Wisconsin, rises in Oconto co., and flowing south-eastward, enters Green bay, about 6 miles below the mouth of the Menomonee river.

PETALUMA creek, a small stream in the N. N. W. part of California, forms part of the boundary between Marin and Sonoma counties, and falls into San Pablo bay.

PETALUMA, a post-office of Sonoma co., Cal.

PETAULA, a post-office of Randolph co., Ga.

PETERBOROUGH, or PETERSBOROUGH, a post-township in Hillsborough co., New Hampshire, 34 miles S. W. from Concord. Population, 2222.

PETERBOROUGH, a post-village in Smithfield township, Madison co., New York, about 110 miles W. N. W. from Albany. It has several churches and stores.

PETERS, a township of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, about 48 miles W. S. W. from Carlisle. Population, 2310.

PETERS, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, about 15 miles S. S. W. from Pittsburg. Population, 924.

PETERS, a small village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

PETERSBURG, a post-township in the E. part of Rensselaer co., N. Y. Pop., 1908.

PETERSBURG, a post-office of Cape May co., New Jersey.

PETERSBURG, a new township of Adams co., Pennsylvania. Population, 356.

PETERSBURG, a post-village of Adams co., Pennsylvania, on a turnpike 13 miles S. from Carlisle. It contains a church, academy, and several stores.

PETERSBURG, a post-borough of West township, Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, on the Juniata river, and Central railroad, 97 miles W. N. W. from Harrisburg. Pop. in 1850, 264.

PETERSBURG, a village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, 4 or 5 miles N. N. W. from Lancaster.

PETERSBURG, a township of Perry co., Pennsylvania. Population, 680.

PETERSBURG, a post-borough of Penn township, and the largest town of Perry co., Pennsylvania, on the W. bank of the Susquehanna river, 1 mile below the mouth of the Juniata, and 15 miles above Harrisburg. It is a place of active trade, which is facilitated by the Pennsylvania canal, and Central railroad. The Duncannon iron-works at this place, consisting of a nail factory and rolling mill, are capable of giving employment to 500 men. Population in 1853, about 1000.

PETERSBURG, a post-village of Somerset co., Pennsylvania, on the National road, 154 miles W. by S. from Harrisburg. The name of the post-office is ADDISON.

PETERSBURG, a handsome and flourishing post-town and port of entry of Dinwiddie county, Virginia, on the right or S. bank of the Appomattox river, at the crossing of the Great Southern railroad, 22 miles S. from Richmond, and 10 miles from the James river, at City Point. Lat. 37° 14' N. lon., 77° 20' W. It is the third town of Virginia in respect to population, and possesses extensive facilities for business. Vessels of 100 tons ascend the river to the town, and those of larger size to Waltham's landing, 6 miles below. The South Side railroad has its eastern terminus at this place, and the Appomattox railroad connects it with City Point, at the mouth of the river. The larger vessels engaged in the trade of Petersburg discharge their cargoes at City Point. Large quantities of flour and tobacco are exported from this place. Petersburg is well built, and contains 2 churches of the Presbyterians, 2 of the Methodists, 2 of the Episcopalians, 1 of the Baptists, 1 of the Catholics, besides several places of worship for colored people. It has also 3 banks, several cotton factories,

1 woollen factory, 2 rope-walks, 1 iron furnace, 6 forges, and numerous mills of various kinds. Three newspapers are published here. The falls of the river, which arrest the ascent of the tide immediately above Petersburg, furnish extensive water-power. Around these falls a canal has been constructed, by which means small boats ascend the river for the distance of about 100 miles. The limits of the borough include the decayed village of Blandford, in Prince George county, which was once superior to Petersburg in some respects. The remains of its church are among the most interesting and picturesque ruins of Virginia. In 1815 a great fire occurred here, by which near 400 houses were consumed. The shipping of this port, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 484 $\frac{1}{8}$ tons registered, and 2109 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 2030 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 322 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 16, (tons, 10,147;) of which 5 (tons, 2773) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 10, (tons, 5102;) of which 3906 were in foreign bottoms. Pop. in 1850, 14,010; in 1853, about 15,000.

PETERSBURG, a decayed post-town of Elbert county, Georgia, on the Savannah river, at the mouth of Broad river, about 62 miles N. W. from Augusta, was once an important place. It has now only 3 families.

PETERSBURG, a post-village of Lavacca co., Texas, on the left bank of the Lavacca river, 100 miles S. E. from Austin City. It was once the county seat.

PETERSBURG, a post-village in Lincoln co., Tennessee, 72 miles S. by E. from Nashville.

PETERSBURG, a thriving post-town of Boone county, Kentucky, on the Ohio river, 25 miles below Cincinnati, has a good landing, an active trade, and contains 2 churches, and a flouring mill. Incorporated in 1820. Population in 1853, about 500.

PETERSBURG, a small village of Ashland co., Ohio.

PETERSBURG, a post-village of Mahoning co., Ohio, 16 miles S. E. from Canfield, and close to the E. line of the state.

PETERSBURG, a small village or railroad station of Monroe co., Mich., on the Southern railroad, 20 miles W. from Monroe City.

PETERSBURG, a post-village, capital of Pike county, Indiana, is finely situated on an elevated plain, 1 mile S. from White river, and 110 miles S. S. W. from Indianapolis. The Wabash and Erie canal passes through it. Population, 500.

PETERSBURG, a thriving post-village, capital of Menard co., Illinois, on the Sangamon river, 22 miles N. W. from Springfield. The river is navigable for small boats to this place.

PETERSBURG, a post-village of Boone co., Missouri, 50 miles N. from Jefferson City.

PETERSBURG FOUR CORNERS, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

PETERS' CREEK, a post-office of Stokes co., North Carolina.

PETERS' CREEK, a post-office of Barren co., Kentucky.

PETERSHAM, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 67 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population, 1527.

PETERS' MOUNTAIN, Virginia, is situated on the boundary between Monroe and Giles county.

PETERSTOWN, a post-village of Monroe co., Virginia, on Rich creek, 247 miles W. from Richmond, has a water-power and several mills.

PETERSVILLE, a small village of Washington township, Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, contains about 50 inhabitants.

PETERSVILLE, a small post-village of Northampton co., Pennsylvania, 15 miles in a direct line W. by N. from Easton.

PETERSVILLE, a post-village of Frederick co., Md., 57 miles N. by W. from Washington.

PETIT CAILLOU BAYOU, a small stream of Terre Bonne parish, Louisiana, flows southward, into the Gulf of Mexico. It is bordered by rich plantations of sugar.

PETIT JEAN river, of Arkansas, rises in the W. part of the state, and flowing eastward enters the Arkansas near the N. extremity of Perry county.

PETIT JEAN, a small post-village of Yell co., Arkansas.

PETIT MENAN, a small island in the S. part of Washington co., Maine. On the S. end is a fixed light, 53 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 44° 22' N., lon. 67° 52' W.

PETRA, a post-village of Saline co., Missouri, 75 miles N. W. from Jefferson City.

PETTIS, a county in the W. central part of Missouri, has an area of 650 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of La Mine river, namely, Flat creek, Muddy creek, and Heath's fork, which unite near the N. E. border. Black river, an affluent of La Mine, flows through the N. W. part. The general surface is rolling, and presents extensive prairies, with groves of timber distributed along the large streams. The soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, cattle, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 519,439 bushels of corn; 20,000 of wheat; 89,915 of oats; 1244 tons of hay, and 61,398 pounds of butter. It contained 15 churches, and 700 pupils attending public schools. Extensive beds of stone coal are found in it. Named in honor of Spencer Pettis, secretary of the State of Missouri, killed in a duel by Major Biddle. Capital, Georgetown. Population, 5150; of whom 4266 were free, and 884, slaves.

PETTIS, a township in Platte co., Missouri. Population, 2954.

PETTIS STAND, a small village of Polk co., Tennessee.

PETTY, a post-office of Lawrence co., Ill.

PEWAUGONEE RIVER, of Wisconsin. See WOLF RIVER.

PEWAUKEE, a post-township in Waukesha co., Wisconsin. Population, 1106.

PEWAUKEE, a post-village in the above township, on the plank-road from Milwaukee to Watertown, 6 miles N. W. from Waukesha. It has 2 churches, 2 stores, and 2 mills. Population, 120.

PEWAUKEE LAKE, Wisconsin, in Waukesha county, is 4½ miles long, and about a mile wide. It is called by the Indians Peewau-kee wee-ning, or "lake of shells," from the great number of small shells found in the sand along its shores.

PEYTONA, a post-office of Boone co., Va.

PEYTONA, a small village of Stewart co., Tennessee.

PEYTON'S, a small village of Barnwell district, South Carolina.

PEYTONSBURG, a post-village of Pittsylvania co., Virginia, 145 miles S. W. from Richmond.

PEYTON'S CREEK, a post-office of Smith co., Tennessee.

PEYTONSVILLE, a post-village in William-son co., Tennessee.

PEZEKO RIVER. See PISECO.

PHALIA, a small bayou of Tammany parish, Louisiana, flows into the Chefonty river.

PHARISHANG, a post-village of Union co., O.

PHARR'S MILLS, a post-office of Moore co., North Carolina.

PHARSALIA, a post-township of Chenango co., New York, 12 miles W. N. W. from Norwich. Population, 1185.

PHARSALIA, a village in Panola co., Mississippi, about 150 miles N. from Jackson.

PHIASANT BRANCH, a post-office of Dane co., Wisconsin.

HELPS, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Ontario co., New York, intersected by the Auburn and Rochester railroad. The post-office is in the village of VIENNA. Population, 5542.

HELPS, a post-township in the S. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio.

HELPS TOWN, a post-township in the N. E. part of Ingham co., Michigan. Pop., 393.

PHENIX, a post-office of Kent co., R. I.

PHILADELPHIA, a county in the extreme S. E. part of Pennsylvania, contains 120 square miles. It is bounded on the S. E. by the Delaware river, and intersected by the Schuylkill, and by the Pennypack, Tacony, and Wissahiccon creeks. Darby creek flows along the W. border. The surface is level near the Delaware, and hilly in the other parts. In 1850 the county produced 294,891 bushels of Indian corn; 121,204 of wheat; 117,024 of oats, and 385,347 of potatoes. It contained 245 churches, and 65 newspaper offices. The manufactories and railroads of this county will be noticed in the article PHILADELPHIA CITY.

PHILADELPHIA, a post-village of Philadelphia township, Jefferson co., New York, on Indian river, and the Potsdam and Watertown railroad, about 20 miles N. E. from Watertown. Pop. of the township, 1915.

PHILADELPHIA, a port of entry, the second city in the United States, and the metropolis of Pennsylvania, is situated between the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, about 6 miles above their junction, and (following the river and bay) 96 miles from the ocean. It is in 39° 57' N. lat., and 75° 11' W. lon., being about 130 miles N. E. of Washington City, and 87 S. W. of New York.

Population.—If we except Paris, Philadelphia nearly equals the largest capitals on the continent of Europe in population, and, at its present rate of increase, will soon surpass them. In 1684 it had 2500 inhabitants; 21,767 (exclusive of the army and strangers) at a census taken by order of Lord Cornwallis in 1777 or '8; 42,520 in 1790; 70,287 in 1800; 96,287 in 1810; 119,325 in 1820, (up to which period it was the largest city in the United States;) 167,325 in 1830; 258,037 in 1840, and 408,762 in 1850, showing an increase of 58½ per cent. in the ten years preceding the census of 1850, and 95½ per cent. in the 60 years since the first national census. In the same ratio of increase, its population in July, 1853, would be about 480,000; but as the 3 years since the census has been a period of great prosperity, and of an unexampled increase in the number of dwellings erected, the population was undoubtedly, in 1853, considerably over 500,000. These populations include the county. The peculiar divisions of Philadelphia are such that its suburbs have a greater population than the city proper, (i. e. the portion between Vine and Cedar streets, and extending from the Delaware river to the Schuylkill,) which had in 1850, 121,377 inhabitants, while the districts of Northern Liberties, Spring Garden, Kensington, Southwark, and Moyamensing, had respectively, in the order named, 58,894, 47,223, 46,774, 38,799, and 26,879 inhabitants. Besides these, there are several other suburbs only separated by a street, or a small open space, or in one instance by the narrow Schuylkill river. In speaking of Philadelphia, unless the distinction is made, we refer to the city and suburbs united. Opposite to Philadelphia, in New Jersey, are Camden and Gloucester, which bear about the same relation to it that Jersey City and Hoboken do to New York, and add, in 1853, from 15,000 to 20,000 to its population.

General Aspect.—The approach to Philadelphia on the Delaware side is not apt to inspire much enthusiasm, as the site of the city is level, and there are not so many steeples and towers looming over it as is usual in cities of its size. The view that is most likely to impress a stranger is that which meets him on approaching from the N. W., particularly from the summit of the inclined plane on the old Columbia railroad. The roof of Girard College, or the basin at Fairmount, gives a good bird's-eye glance at the city and its environs. The ground immediately N. of the city begins to rise, and furnishes beautiful drives, and fine sites for villas and cottages, particularly on the banks of the Schuylkill and Wissahickon, whose beauties have been sung by Tom Moore and Fanny Kemble. The suburbs of West Philadelphia, Hamilton and Mantua villages, W. of the Schuylkill, and the vicinity of Germantown, N. of the city, are thronged with cottages and villas, surrounded by beautiful grounds, pleasantly shaded, and inhabited by persons doing business in the city, who retire thither from the heat and din of the town after the cares of the day are over. Philadelphia occupies the narrowest part of the peninsula (where it is only two miles wide) between the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, but widening, somewhat in the form of a druggist's mortar, N. and S. of High, its central street. The plan of this city as laid out by Penn. is exceedingly regular, (Dickens said, distractingly so, though it met the unequalled approbation of his scientific and talented countryman, Sir Charles Lyell,) consisting, according to the original plan of its founder, of ten streets, running from river to river, and crossed by twenty-five others, at right angles to them. High or Market, and Broad street, the former running E. and W., and the latter (on the highest ground between the rivers) N. and S., divides the plot into four nearly equal portions, (the longest and most populous, however, E. of Broad street.) About the centre of each of these divisions, the wisdom of Penn reserved an open space for parks or public squares, as well as one at the intersection of Broad and High streets, which is subdivided by that intersection into four smaller squares. Broad street is 113 feet wide, Market street 100, and the other principal streets from 50 to 66 feet in width. A number of new streets have been opened of various lengths, between the original streets, mostly short and often narrow. The cross streets number from the Delaware to Schuylkill and are named Front, 2nd, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, &c. The plan of the city is continued into the districts, both north and south, but with considerable variations, caused in part by the widening of the space between the rivers, and partly by caprice having marked out the highways before the city had extended itself beyond the original limits. There are, however, in the suburbs some very spacious avenues and streets, particularly in the northern districts. The densely inhabited portion of Philadelphia extends about 4 miles on the Delaware, from Southwark N. to Richmond, (formerly Port Richmond,) and 2 miles on the Schuylkill, with an area of about 8 square miles. Some portions W. of Broad street are not yet entirely built upon, but other portions beyond the limits named make up the deficiency. The great bulk of the business is transacted between Vine and Spruce streets, on the Delaware front, E. of Sixth street, but the focus of this business is in Market and Chestnut, E. of Fifth street, and here, or in their immediate neighborhood, are the Exchange, Custom House, the most important banks, insurance offices, warehouses, stores, &c. Third street now rivals Market street both in the extent of business done, and in its noble stores, offices, and warehouses. This street, between Market and Walnut, is the brokers' and money dealers' quarter. Here, too, are issued most of the periodicals published in Philadelphia. The fashionable quarter, "par excellence," is south of Market street and west of Seventh street; but Walnut street is the "ton" street of the quarter. This region is thronged with spacious and elegant residences, built of sandstone, granite, marble, and fine-pressed or stuccoed brick, giving abundant evidence of affluence, taste, and luxurious ease, and comfort. Arch street, north of Market, is one of the widest streets in the city, and is not inferior to any in point of architecture and the respectability of its residences.

Public Squares.—There is but one park (Independence square, in the rear of the State House) or public square in the dense part of the city (besides the five enumerated in the general plan) of much importance. In the immediate vicinity of Fairmount water-works (themselves forming a fine promenade, with an extensive view from the basin) is Lemon Hill, formerly Pratt's Garden, and once the residence of Robert Morris, of Revolutionary fame. These grounds are very extensive, covered with fine old trees, possess great variety of surface, and descend on the W. and S. W. by steep banks to the Schuylkill river. The squares within the city cover each an extent of from 5 to 7 acres, are enclosed by tasteful iron railings, are beautifully laid out, and planted with a great variety of trees. Squirrels, peafowls, and deer are domesticated in them. Five of these squares are named Washington, Rittenhouse, Penn, Logan, and Franklin. The latter has a fine fountain and basin, with 40 jets of water.

Public and other Buildings remarkable for their Architecture.—Philadelphia possesses in Girard College, situated about 2 miles N. W. from the State House, the finest specimen of Grecian architecture in the United States, if not of modern times. It is in the Corinthian style, the cella or main body of the building being 169 feet in length by 111 in width, surrounded by a magnificent colonnade of 34 columns 55 feet high and 6 feet in diameter. This colonnade extends the building to a length of 218 feet and a breadth of 160 feet. The height is 97 feet. This edifice is entirely fireproof, the outer walls, staircases, floors, and roof being constructed of marble, and the inner of brick. There are two additional buildings on each side of the main structure, all of marble, and each 125 feet long by 52 wide, and two stories high. A sixth building has recently been erected for water purposes, baking, washing, drying, and as a laboratory. The whole is surrounded by an ugly stone wall 10 feet high, and enclosing 41 acres of land, half of which is laid out in gardens, &c., and the rest in grass-plots, play-ground, and gravel-walks. The entire cost of buildings, wall, and embellishments of the grounds was $1,933,821.78, or $66,000 less than was donated by Stephen Girard for the erection and endowment of the institution. Mr. Girard, who made this magnificent bequest, was a native of France who came poor and friendless to Philadelphia in boyhood, and by industry and good management accumulated a fortune of several millions, the greater portion of which he left to the city for the erection and endowment of the Girard College for Orphans, and for improving the city in various ways. The next most prominent public building is the Custom House, (formerly the United States Bank,) a noble Doric structure, extending from Chestnut to Library streets, and situated midway between 4th, and 5th, streets. The Custom House is built on a raised platform, (ascended by 20 steps,) is 161 feet long by 87 wide, and ornamented on both the Chestnut and Library street fronts by a noble colonnade of 8 fluted Doric columns 27 feet high and 4½ in diameter. This edifice cost about $500,000. The great hall is 81 feet long by 48 wide, ornamented by Ionic columns supporting a semi-cylindrical dome or ceiling. The Custom House, by the aid of "the pale moonlight," presents a most chaste and classic appearance. There are a number of other buildings connected with the collection of the customs, warehousing, &c., on Second, Dock, and Granite streets. The United States Mint occupies a plot of ground lying adjoining to, and W. of Juniper street, and extending from Chestnut street to Olive street. It fronts 120 feet on Chestnut street, the centre of which is occupied by a portico 62 feet long, supported by six beautiful Ionic columns. There is a similar portico on Olive street. The entire depth to Olive street is about 220 feet, the whole enclosing a square or oblong court. The building was erected at a cost of $200,000. There were coined in this establishment—

	Silver.	Gold.
In 1850.....	$409,600.....	$27,757,000
" 1851.....	446,800.....	52,143,000
" 1852.....	846,400.....	51,506,000
For 8 mos. of 1853.....	3,592,366.....	32,916,706

The Merchants' Exchange, at the intersection of Walnut, Third, and Dock streets, is a beautiful building, constructed of white marble, and is about 114 feet long on Walnut street, and 95 feet on Third street. The Third street front has a recessed portico with 4 Corinthian columns resting on the basement story. Towards Dock street is a semi-circular colonnade of 8 noble pillars in the same style, presenting a magnificent aspect to one approaching from the east. In the basement story are the post-office and several insurance offices. The semi-rotunda, with a part of the main building, constitutes the great hall of the Exchange, which is also a reading-room, "where merchants most do congregate." The remainder of the building is let out for offices, &c. The State House, a plain brick edifice of small architectural pretensions, but of venerable aspect, situated on the Chestnut-street front of Independence Square, between Fifth and Sixth streets, is among the first places sought out by intelligent visitors to Philadelphia. It was erected between the years 1729 and 1734. In the E. room of this structure sat the Congress that issued, July 4, 1776, that great American Magna Charta, the Declaration of Independence, which has made this hall historical—a cherished object with Philadelphians, and a national political shrine. Though plain in its exterior, its heavily wainscoted walls and quaint carvings, give it an interest in our country, where every thing is so new, independent of its historical interest. It is surmounted by a steeple, in which are a clock, and a bell, rung on the occurrence of fires and remarkable events. This building is occupied by courts, except Independence Hall, and has two wings in which are the county offices. In the same square, on Sixth and Chestnut streets, is a brick building, (in which Congress met upon the adoption of the present constitution,) now occupied as court rooms. At the other extremity of the square, in Fifth and Chestnut streets, is an exactly similar building, in which are the mayor's and other city offices. The Museum, a very large but plain stuccoed building, at the corner of Ninth and George streets, was formerly occupied by the Philadelphia and Chinese Museums, but is now devoted to public meetings, concerts, lectures, fairs, &c. The Musical Fund Hall is a capacious building in Locust street, said to be the best adapted to concerts of any room in the country. It will seat about 2500 persons. Concert Hall, in Chestnut street, west of Twelfth, devoted to similar purposes, has a fine front of sandstone Sanson-street Hall, a very large structure with a brownstone front, the Assembly Buildings, and Franklin Hall, all have spacious rooms let out for concerts, fairs, and public meetings. Each particular district has its commissioners' hall, with its police-office, lock-up house, &c. The Commissioners' Hall, Spring Garden, the finest building of the kind in Philadelphia, is constructed of brick stuccoed, and has a fine portico of 6 Corinthian columns, surmounted by a steeple ornately carved, and containing a fire-bell and clock. On the Delaware river, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. E. of the State House, is the United States Navy Yard, occupying an area of 12 acres. In this yard are two large ship houses, respectively 210 and 270 feet long, in which have been built some of the finest vessels in the navy; among others, the Pennsylvania, (the largest man-of-war in the world.) There is a Sectional Floating Dock at this yard, which cost \$813,742. Nearly opposite to the Navy Yard, on the Schuylkill river, is the United States Marine Hospital, or Naval Asylum, a fine structure of white marble, composed of a centre and two wings, the whole presenting a front of 380 feet. The centre building, which is 175 by 142 feet, is ornamented by an Ionic colonnade of 8 columns. The whole is surrounded by beautifully laid out grounds, occupying an area of 25 acres. In 1852 there were in this institution 146 pensioners. Near the Naval Asylum is an extensive pile of brick buildings, formerly used as a United States arsenal.

Theatres.—There are in Philadelphia four regular theatres, the oldest of which, on Chestnut street, is the only one with any architectural pretensions. It has a front of marble, with 5 arcades for entrances, surmounted by a colonnade fronting the second story. It is capable of holding 2000 spectators. The Walnut-street theatre, though it has a plain exterior, is at present the most fashionable in Philadelphia. The Arch-street theatre, the most recently erected, has a good front, with marble columns to the entrance portico. The National theatre, in Chestnut street, below Ninth, is a plain but large building, sometimes used as a circus.

Banking Houses.—Philadelphia has long been celebrated for its elegant banking houses, prominent among which is the Pennsylvania bank, in Second street, near Walnut, a beautiful edifice of white marble, in the Grecian style, with a Doric colonnade of six columns on each front. On the west front are beautifully laid out grounds, surrounded with a semicircular iron railing. Near this, on Third street, at the head of Dock street, stands a large building, with a white marble front, and a Corinthian portico of six columns. This was the banking house of the first United States bank, afterwards Stephen Girard's, and at present occupied by the Girard bank. This building is city property. The Philadelphia and Western banks are in the upper part of a fine marble structure on Chestnut street, immediately east of the Custom House. This edifice has a Corinthian colonnade of six columns resting on the basement story, which is occupied by insurance offices and stores. The Bank of North America, the first established in the United States, (through the exertions of Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution,) occupies a chaste building of brownstone, in Chestnut street, above Third. In its neighborhood is the banking house of the Commercial Bank of Pennsylvania, with a front of Quincy granite. The Mechanics' bank and the old Savings' bank have each tasteful fronts of white marble. The Bank of Commerce occupies a neat brownstone building, and a fine edifice for the Farmers and Mechanics' bank is now erecting in Chestnut street, below Fifth.

Stores, Warehouses, &c.—To omit all notice of the structures devoted in this commercial country to purposes of trade, would be to do great injustice to some of its finest architectural ornaments. Philadelphia and New York abound in edifices of this character, such as astonish foreigners accustomed to the gloomy and dingy warehouses of Europe, often in narrow and dark lanes and alleys. As the stranger approaches Philadelphia on the Delaware side, one of the first objects that strikes his attention is the tower (133 feet high) of Jayne's eight-story Quincy granite building, with a front of mixed Moorish and Spanish orders, in Chestnut street, below Third. Immediately adjoining it are four six-story stores of the same material, belonging to the same proprietor. Within a little more than a square of these are Vandyke's buildings, the city Girard stores, the North American Insurance office, the Farquhar buildings and Thomas' auction store, all of brown or light sandstone. The Girard stores have their Chestnut-street front finely ornamented in the Byzantine, and their Third-street front in the Italian style. We are now in Chestnut street by Third, the commencement of the fashionable promenade in this street of fashionable stores. We will proceed west, passing in our way a succession of plate-glass windows in stores with façades of every degree of taste, from the sombre granite and the light sandstone down to the flaring, fragile stucco, so ill-adapted to our climate of alternate freezings and thawings. The windows of these shops are crowded with jewelry and every article of fashionable or costly fabric to tempt the fancy of the purchaser. Proceeding in our promenade, we will name some of the more prominent buildings. We at once pass the bank of North America, Commercial and Philadelphia banks, and the Custom House, already named, the latter having opposite to it the United States hotel and an elegant building for the Farmers and Mechanics' bank, now erecting. On the left of the next square is the State House, and on the right the American hotel. In the next block are the Chestnut-street Theatre, with its marble front, the Arcade, with a front of the same material, Jones's and the Columbia hotels, Fisher's elegant stores of red sandstone, and Swaim's buildings of Quincy granite. In the next square, we have Jules Haul's perfumery, with a beautiful sandstone façade, the Washington hotel, the Masonic Hall, (now erecting of red sandstone in a fine style of Gothic,) and another group of beautiful granite stores. Going up the street, we pass in succession the Girard hotel, with its imposing sandstone front of six stories; the Art Union; the National theatre; the Markoe house; another group of granite stores; the Assembly buildings; Parkinson's ice-cream saloons and gardens; the Academy of Fine Arts; the Sunday-school Union's new building, with its ornamental front of Quincy granite; Simes' tasteful structure of Pictou stone; Concert Hall, and the United States Mint—which brings us to Broad street, (probably in another generation the finest promenade in this or any American city,) which terminates our fashionable lounge. We now pass from the fashionable to the business street, and retrace our steps toward the Delaware on Market street, in the lower part of which, in the throng of business, we find a great number of substantial and tasteful stores of every size, varying from three to eight stories, and from 50 to 300 feet in depth. The most noted among these are Hoskins & Hieskell's immense store, with perhaps the finest front of iron in the country; Caleb Cope & Co.'s and Morris L. Hallowell & Co.'s silk stores, the former of granite in the Italian style, and the latter of light sandstone of mixed Grecian orders, in our opinion the most tasteful store-front in this city, if not in America. The interior accommodations of these stores are not inferior to their external beauty. But our limits will not permit us further to particularize. We will merely say that granite, sandstone, iron, marble, and stucco fronts of commanding appearance abound in all the great business streets of Philadelphia.

Hotels.—Philadelphia has always been celebrated for the comfort, neatness, and excellence of the fare of her hotels; though till recently more attention has been paid to internal comforts than to external display. The Girard house ranks among the first hotels in the Union, and extends about 200 feet on Chestnut street. The Washington house, Jones's hotel, the Columbia, the American, the United States, Franklin, and Markoe houses, all in Chestnut street, the Union and Ashland in Arch, La Pierre (a new and splendid edifice) in Broad street, the Merchants' in Fourth, may all be termed first-class hotels. Besides which, there are about twenty second-class hotels.

Churches and Religious Institutions.—Philadelphia city and county abound in places of worship, and in 1852 they contained about 230 edifices devoted to religious services, of which the Baptists owned 22; the Covenanters, 2; the Dutch Reformed, 2; Episcopalians, 30; Friends, 15; German Reformed, 5; Jews, 3; Lutherans, 11; Methodists, 53; Moravians, 1; Presbyterians, 53; Roman Catholics, 23; Universalists, 4; Unitarians, 1, and Mariners, 1; besides a number belonging to minor sects. Deriving her character, to a considerable extent, from that of her founders, the Friends, Philadelphia long preserved great simplicity in her church architecture; but of late a gradual change has taken place in the style of the religious as well as of the private edifices of the city. Recently a number of costly and highly ornamented churches have been and are now being erected. The largest and most costly of these will be the Catholic church of St. Peter and St. Paul, on Logan Square, which is of the Roman style, in the form of a cross, and constructed of red sandstone; the front on 18th street has 4 Corinthian columns, 60 feet high and 6 feet in diameter, with a tower at each angle of 110 feet; the whole to be crowned with a dome, swelling up to the height of 210 feet from the ground, and surrounded by a colonnade 30 feet high. Next to this in point of architectural beauty, is perhaps the church of St. Mark's, (Episcopal,) in Locust street, near Sixteenth street constructed of a light-red sandstone, with a tower and steeple of exquisite proportions, and of the same material; this church is 150 feet long by 91 wide, including the tower, and is without paint or plaster, the little woodwork being of solid oak; connected with this is a parochial school, in the same style. Christ church, with a lofty steeple and chime of 8 bells, is very interesting to Philadelphians, from its antique and quaint style; though of brick, its architecture is quite elaborate, and peculiar to the period of its erection. The Presbyterians have recently built a magnificent Gothic church in Locust street, near Fifteenth street of sandstone; two towers adorn the Locust-street front. Among the most remarkable of the remaining churches is the Tabernacle, a new Baptist church, in Chestnut street, which has a semicircular front of red sandstone, with a colonnade, and a graceful steeple which towers to the height of 210 feet. The Episcopal church of St. Stephen's has a granite front, and 2 towers 86 feet in height. St. Jude's Episcopal church, in Franklin street, is of sandstone. The Catholic Church of the Assumption, in Spring Garden street, has 2 towers, each crowned with a graceful spire, and a front of sandstone, in the Gothic style. There are many other churches, capacious and elegant within, but whose exterior has nothing particular to arrest attention. The Presbyterians and Baptists are each erecting churches on Arch street, one on and the other W. of Broad street; the former to be stuccoed, and have a dome and cupola 144 feet high, and 2 bell-towers 46 feet each above the roof: and the latter to be built of brownstone, with a high tower and spire. The Presbyterian Board of Publication occupy an elegant store, of light sandstone, at No. 265 Chestnut street. This building contains also the offices of the Board of Domestic Missions, the Board of Education, store rooms, workshops, &c. The American Baptist Publication Society, in Arch street, occupies a store of brown sandstone; the receipts for 1851 were $40,597.71 from the sale of books and periodicals. The American Sunday-school Union, the Pennsylvania Bible Society, the Philadelphia Bible Society, the Female Bible Society, the Friends' Bible Society, and a number of similar societies in the districts, are the principal religious institutions.

Cemeteries.—The environs of Philadelphia abound in places of sepulture, foremost among which, for beauty of position, are the two cemeteries of North and South Laurel Hill, situated on the Schuylkill river, 4 miles N. W. from the State House. The shores of the river are here highly picturesque, commanding extensive and beautiful views. The slopes and precipices on the Schuylkill are thickly wooded, while trees are more or less densely scattered over the plain. The oldest of the two, North Laurel Hill, occupies about 25 acres, and is crowded with splendid mausoleums. It is entered by an imposing gateway, in the Doric style, immediately in front of which, on a rising ground, in an alcove, is Thom's group, representing Old Mortality, his pony, and Sir Walter Scott. South Laurel Hill is very similar in the character of its grounds; it contains about thirty acres. It is separated by an intervening country seat from North Laurel Hill. Woodland Cemetery is located on the W. side of the Schuylkill, between Market street and Gray's Ferry bridges, and occupies an area of about 80 acres, adorned most pleasantly with alternate hill and vale, and with a variety of trees of venerable growth and umbrageous extent. Besides these are the Odd Fellows' Cemetery, of 32 acres, with an imposing Egyptian gateway, 2 miles N. of the city; Glenwood, adjoining it, of 21 acres; the Monument Cemetery, on Broad street, within a mile of the city, and a number of smaller cemeteries beyond the bounds of the dense population.

Water Works.—Fairmount Water Works, situated in the district of Spring Garden, on the Schuylkill river, about 2 miles N. W. of the State House, were, previous to the erection of the Croton works in New York, the envy of the other cities of the Union—Philadelphia having been for a long time the only city in the United States supplied with water in this way—and are still justly the pride and boast of Philadelphia, not more for their utility than for the picturesque attractions of the place. It would perhaps be difficult to point out anywhere a spot concentrating in the same space so many elements of the beautiful and picturesque. The ruggedness of the native rock; the view of the adjacent river and falls; Fairmount with its four reservoirs resembling so many silver lakes; the flowers and rich verdure of the level plat and of the hillsides, added to the sparkling play of numerous fountains with which the grounds are adorned, all combine to form a landscape of exquisite and almost unequalled beauty. The present works were commenced in 1819, by the erection of a dam across the Schuylkill, 1248 feet in length, and in some places 30 feet deep below high water. This water is turned into a forebay 419 feet long and 90 feet wide, from whence it falls upon and turns 8 wheels, from 16 to 18 feet in diameter, (and 1 turbine wheel,) each having its separate pump, with power sufficient to raise 1,500,000 gallons in 24 hours. The water is elevated 92 feet, into 4 reservoirs, on the top of a partly natural elevation (but in some parts raised 40 feet above the original hill) immediately at the works, and which gives them their name. These reservoirs contain in the aggregate 20,031,976 gallons, and when full have 12½ feet depth of water, and have supplied as much as 8,850,000 gallons in one day. The city proper and districts south of it (in which are laid 117½ miles of pipe) are supplied from these works. The total cost, including laying pipes, &c., up to 1851, was $1,615,169.82; and yielding $138,874.42 in water rents. Spring Garden and Northern Liberties (N. of the city proper) are supplied from steam works, located about a mile above Fairmount. The reservoir, which is adjacent to the N. W. angle of the grounds of Girard College, is capable of containing 9,800,000 gallons of water, and has supplied more than 4,000,000 gallons in 24 hours. These works were erected in 1845, at a cost of $159,074.65. Kensington, another northern suburb, has similar works on the Delaware river. A large additional reservoir near Girard college, connected with the Fairmount works, has just been completed.

Gas Works.—The gas works are only surpassed by the water works in the increased comfort they bestow on the city. The city gas works, located on the Schuylkill river, at the termination of Market or High street, were commenced in 1835, and occupy an area of about 7½ acres. There are 8 gas-holders of 50, two of 80, and one of 140 feet diameter, with an aggregate capacity for about 1,500,000 cubic feet of gas, which is distributed through the city and southern districts by 113 miles of pipe. The greatest amount consumed in 24 hours in 1852 was 1,123,000 cubic feet. The city is erecting new additional gas works below Gray's Ferry, the gasometer of which (the largest in the world) is 160 feet in diameter and 90 feet high, and will contain 1,900,000 cubic feet of gas. The northern districts each have their own separate gas works. In 1852 there were in the streets, squares, and market houses of the city proper alone, 1718 lamps. The same proportion to the districts would give upwards of 6000 public lamps.

Prisons and Penal Institutions.—The Eastern State Penitentiary is situated on Coates' street, about 1¾ miles N. W. of the State House, and occupies an area of about 11 acres, enclosed by a wall 30 feet high; the front of which is in castellated style, built of dressed stone, and contains the apartments of the officers of the prison. An octagonal building occupies the centre of the grounds, from which radiate wings, with a row of cells on each side, and a passage-way which traverses the whole length of each wing. For statistics of the penitentiaries, see Public Institutions of Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia County Prison is situated in the district of Moyamensing, about 1½ miles S. W. of the State House, and has a massive front of Quincy granite, in the Tudor style of English gothic. Adjoining is the female department, with a front of sandstone, in the Egyptian style. The male department has 408 separate cells, and the female 100, besides an infirmary, and apartments for the keepers. This prison is used for the purposes of a penitentiary as well as a county jail and workhouse. Of 11,172 commitments in 1852, 971 were for vagrancy, 1662 for drunkenness, and 4215 for disorderly conduct. There are two houses of refuge in Philadelphia for the reformation of juvenile delinquents, one for white, and the other for colored children. New and separate edifices, embracing most of the improvements desirable in such structures, have recently been erected near Girard College; the white refuge, with accommodations for 500 youths, and the colored, for 250. In 1852, 164 white boys and 60 girls were admitted into the white department; and 169 boys and 58 girls discharged, 142 of whom were indentured. During the same period, 36 boys and 44 girls were admitted into the colored department; and 43 boys and 37 girls discharged, 45 of whom were indentured: leaving 322 in both institutions, January 1st, 1853. Total number received into the white department since its establishment in 1828, 3238; and into the colored department, (founded in 1850,) 329. Expenses for 1852, for both departments, $25,045; receipts from boys' labor, $6654.

Almshouses.—The almshouse for the city and county of Philadelphia is situated S. of Market-street bridge, on the W. side of the Schuylkill river, to which its grounds extend. This immense pile of buildings is of stone, roughcast, constructed in a rectangular form, with a front of 500 feet on the Schuylkill, and occupying and enclosing about 10 acres of ground. The Schuylkill front has a centre building, ornamented by a Tuscan portico of six columns, 30 feet high and 5 in diameter. The average number of inmates for 1852 was 1961; greatest number in any one month, (in February,) 2323; smallest, (in September,) 1805. The expenses for 1851 were $97,925.55. The manufactory, house labor, and the farm yielded more than $36,000. The children's asylum, attached to this institution, had, in 1851, 1860 children; the insane department, 390; and the hospital wards, 349 patients. The entire cost of supporting the poor in the city and districts for 1851 was $228,977.11. The Moyamensing almshouse, under the control of the district in which it is situated, is for the support of the poor of Moyamensing only, whose inhabitants in consequence pay no county poor tax. The Friends' almshouse is supported by the society whose name it bears, for the use of its own poor; it has, however, few inmates.

Benevolent and Charitable Institutions.—Among the benevolent institutions, the Pennsylvania Hospital claims a prominent place. It was founded in 1751, and occupies a square of ground between Pine and Spruce street, and between Eighth and Ninth. The buildings are of brick, plain but tasteful, consisting of a centre, connected with two wings by long wards. The entire length of the main building is 282 feet, besides which there are various out-buildings, and much open space, shaded by lofty sycamores and planted with flowers. In the centre of the grounds, in the south front, is a bronze statue of William Penn. In 1841, the insane patients were removed to a newly erected hospital, two miles W. of the Schuylkill river, since which time the city hospital has been wholly devoted to those afflicted with bodily ailments. Of such, 1862 were treated in 1852, 1093 of which were surgical cases. Of 1707 patients admitted in 1852, 1089 were foreigners. Admitted since the establishment of the hospital, 54,469. Expenses for the year 1852-3 were \$31,777, and receipts, \$32,105, of which \$7241 was from pay patients, and the rest from interest of loans, donations, contributions, &c. Clinical lectures are regularly delivered here to a class of more than 300 students. The hospital is open for the reception of persons who have been injured by accidents, if brought to the house within 24 hours, provided they have occurred within the State of Pennsylvania. Ten physicians are in daily attendance, four of whom are surgeons, and three reside in the house. Not among the least of the advantages of this institution are the clinical lectures, which are delivered twice a week, and to which students may have access, on paying a fee of \$10, which goes to increase the library of the hospital, already numbering about 10,000 volumes. About 300 students annually avail themselves of this invaluable means for acquiring surgical skill. The insane department, before referred to, is located on a fine farm of 111 acres, and comprises a centre building and two wings, constructed of stone, rough cast, and presenting a front of 436 feet. Besides this, in different parts of the grounds, which are ornamented and furnished with arbors, circular railroads, ten-pin alleys, &c., are lodges for the more noisy and violent patients. Since its separate establishment in 1841, this department has received 2266 patients. The number received in 1852-3 was 223; expenses for the same year, \$54,131; receipts, \$56,994, of which \$48,605 accrued from the board and care of patients. Wills Hospital, for diseases of the eye and limbs, is finely located, opposite Logan square, (park,) and has extended relief to 2000 persons since going into operation in 1834, besides relieving a much larger number at their homes. The Preston Retreat was built from a fund left by Jonas Preston, M.D., in 1836, to found a Lying-in Hospital, but the funds not being at present available, it is occupied as a Foster Home, where 74 poor children are clothed, fed, and instructed; this hospital is located near Fairmount, and has a white marble front ornamented with a portico. The Lying-in Charity, in 1851, extended medical aid and nursing to 69 obstetric cases. The Society for the Employment and Instruction of the Poor furnished, in 1851, temporary boarding and lodging to 622 persons. This society occupies a building called the Moyamensing House of Industry, in which 3450 free baths were furnished during the year, and the Soup Society, from the same house distributed 12,200 gallons of soup to a daily average of 2970 persons; and from its dispensary medical relief was given to 1392 invalids. Connected with the institution are temporary lodgings, a ragged school, work-rooms, and a store for the sale of provisions at cost prices. There are 4 dispensaries in Philadelphia and the districts, viz. the Philadelphia Dispensary, (which had 7362 patients under care in 1852;) the Northern Dispensary in Spring Garden, (with which is connected a lying-in department;) the Moyamensing Dispensary, and the obstetric department of the City Dispensary. The Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind, in Race street, near the Schuylkill, occupies plain but commodious buildings, erected with special reference to their present uses; the number of pupils in 1852 was 93, 45 of whom were supported by the State of Pennsylvania, 6 by New Jersey, 5 by Maryland, 1 by Delaware, 15 by the institution, 15 by their own industry, and 6 by their friends. The Orphans' Asylum in Cherry street was erected in 1818, at an expense of \$26,675; this building was destroyed by fire in 1822, when 23 of the little inmates perished. The present structure, 110 feet long by 53 wide, is fire proof. About 100 orphans are carefully instructed. Adjoining the Orphans' is the Widows' Asylum, which has about 60 inmates. This institution depends upon contributions mainly. It has recently received \$14,000, from a bequest of the late Nathan Dunn. The Home Missionary Society, in 1850, extended aid to 1567 families. The Pennsylvania Deaf and Dumb Asylum is located in a commodious stone edifice, at the corner of Broad and Pine streets. It is ornamented with a Doric portico of 4 columns. There were in the institution on the 31st of December, 1852, 143 pupils, of whom 78 were boys, and 65 girls; 97 were supported by the State of Pennsylvania, 14 by Maryland, 10 by New Jersey, 4 by Delaware, and 18 by their friends or by the institution. The Temporary Home in Zane street, since its commencement in 1850, has boarded, lodged, and found places for 768 women and children. An intelligence office connected with it has procured employment for 2392 persons. A similar office attached to the Rosine Asylum found employment for 1687 women. The City Hospital at Bush Hill, near Fairmount water works, was established in 1818, by act of assembly, as a Pest Hospital. It is always in order, and ready to receive persons afflicted with infectious diseases. The St. Joseph's Hospital, (Catholic,) near Girard College, has capacity for 60 patients. The Hospital of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in Kensington, receives patients irrespective of sect. Friends' Asylum for the Insane, near Frankford, is supported by contributions from members of the society. Christ Church Hospital in Cherry street is for the relief of indigent females of the Episcopalian church. The St. John's Orphan Asylum, (Catholic,) $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. W. of Market-street bridge, consists of a centre building and wings, forming together a front of 220 feet. This asylum is in the Tudor style of Gothic, and has accommodations for 250 orphans. The St. John's Female Orphan Asylum, (also Catholic,) corner of Spruce and Seventh streets, accommodates about 100 orphans. There are three Magdalen Asylums in Philadelphia and districts. First, the Magdalen Asylum, in Twenty First St. above Race street, founded in 1800, and which has received about 1000 magdalens, of whom 500 have been reclaimed. 2. The House of the Good Shepherd, (Catholic); and 3. The Rosine Asylum, at No. 204 North Eighth street, established in 1849. Since its opening, 280 women have been inmates of the house, of whom many have been restored to their friends, others furnished with places, and some married respectably. The Colored Orphan Asylum, in Thirteenth street, maintains and educates about 70 colored orphans. The Union Benevolent Association divides itself into committees, which search out the abodes of wretchedness, and administer relief, so far as they can, according to the merit of the applicants. Besides those mentioned, are the Provident Society, the Northern Association for the Relief and Employment of Poor Women, the Soup Societies and City Trusts, various Beneficial Associations, the Humane Society for the Recovery of Drowned persons, the Prison Society, the Colonization Society, various Abolition Societies, Odd Fellows' and Free Masons' Associations, St. George's, St. Andrew's, St. Patrick's, St. David's, and other foreign benevolent associations, St. Ann's Widows' Asylum, (Catholic,) Roman Catholic Benevolent Society, (an association of ladies,) and various Temperance societies.

Libraries, Colleges, Schools, and Literary Institutions.—Philadelphia had long the honor of possessing the largest library in the United States. But now the Philadelphia Library, to which we allude, is surpassed in this respect by the library of Harvard College, and the Astor Library in New York. It occupies a plain brick edifice in Fifth street below Chestnut, and was founded through the influence of Dr. Franklin, (whose statue adorns a niche in front,) in 1731. The Philadelphia and Loganian libraries are in the same building, and owned by and loaned to the same stockholders. They have, united, about 70,000 volumes. The income of the library is $6300. Strangers are allowed the use of books while in the building, but they are not to be taken out except by stockholders, or on deposit of their value. Opposite to the Philadelphia Library, in a building on Independence Square, are the rooms of the American Philosophical Society, which also owed its origin to Dr. Franklin. It has enrolled among its members the names of some of the most distinguished men in the United States, and has had Franklin and Jefferson for presidents. It has a library of 20,000 volumes, and an extensive cabinet of medals, coins, &c., and a large collection of maps, charts, and engravings. The Historical Society of Pennsylvania holds its meetings in the third story of the Athenæum building. It has a library of near 2000 volumes, and a collection of coins, &c. The Athenæum library and reading room occupies a beautiful building of light sandstone, in the Italian style, on Sixth street, opposite Washington Square. It has about 12,000 volumes on its shelves, and is extensively supplied with maps, charts, and periodicals. The Mercantile Library, situated in Fifth street, opposite Independence Square, was established in 1821, for the benefit of merchants' clerks and other young men. It occupies a chaste building with a marble basement and upper stories of brick finely stuccoed. The Fifth street front has a colonnade of 6 Corinthian columns. The library occupies the second floor, which is most appropriately fitted up, and furnished with numerous periodicals, both European and American, and with maps, engravings, &c. There are nearly 12,000 volumes on the shelves, which are loaned to stockholders and subscribers. In 1852 nearly 36,000 volumes were loaned. The Apprentices' Library has over 14,000 volumes; loaned in 1852 to 937 boys and 670 girls. Books loaned during the same year, 43,005. The Friends have an extensive library in Arch street above Third, and one in Race below Fifth. There are a number of associations, with considerable libraries, in different parts of the city. The Academy of Natural Sciences, located on Broad street, near Chestnut, has the largest museum of natural history in America. There are 25,000 specimens in ornithology alone, and 30,000 in botany. The mineralogical and geological cabinets are also full. The institution possesses Dr. Morton's celebrated collection of crania. The library (chiefly works of science) numbers over 26,000 volumes, besides charts, maps, serials, &c. Many of these volumes are full of plates, scarce and expensive. Professor Agassiz pronounced this institution the best out of Europe in its collections of subjects of natural history. The Franklin Institute, for the promotion of manufactures and the useful arts, occupies a large building, with a marble front, in Seventh street, above Chestnut. It holds an annual exhibition of American manufactures, and has a library of 6000 volumes, chiefly on scientific subjects. Lectures are delivered at cheap rates every winter, on chemistry, mechanical philosophy, &c. A monthly journal, issued by the Institute, is the oldest in the country of a similar character. The Institute has a valuable cabinet of models and minerals. The Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, located in Chestnut street, is the oldest institution of the kind in the United States, and was established in 1807. The Academy holds annual exhibitions in May and June, though it is open at other times. The Art Union, an association for the promotion of art, has rooms open to the public, where are exhibited annually about 1000 paintings. In medical science, Philadelphia stands first of the cities of America, and her medical schools are attended by students from not only every portion of the Union, but even from Canada, Mexico, and South America. The medical department of the Pennsylvania University, in Ninth street above Chestnut, is the oldest medical college in the United States, having been established in 1765, and has numbered among its professors some of the most distinguished names in medical science. The faculty consists of 7 professors, and the class for the course of 1852-3 numbered 431 students. There is an anatomical museum connected with this institution, rich in illustrative aids for the student. Total number of graduates up to 1852, 5316. The collegiate department of this university was established in 1755, and has 4 professors of the faculty of arts, and 6 not of the faculty. Its alumni numbered 5142 in 1852, and the students that year, 88. The library has 5000 volumes. Connected with this university is also a law department, with 3 professors, and 52 students in the class of 1853. The academical department had, in 1853, 74 pupils, and the charity school connected with the foundation of the university, 160 scholars. The medical branch of Jefferson College, which has the largest class of any medical school in America, is located in Tenth street, above Walnut, in a commodious building, ornamented by a portico of six Composite pillars. It was established in 1825. In the clinic connected with and for the sole benefit of this institution, were treated, in the clinic year terminating April, 1851, 2029 cases, 1103 of which were surgical. The faculty consists of 7 professors, and the class of 1852-3 numbered 556 students; the whole number of graduates, 2592. The Pennsylvania College, located in an imposing building in Ninth above Spruce street, is a flourishing medical institution. Its faculty is composed of 7 professors, and the class of 1852-3 numbered 150 students. The Philadelphia College of Medicine, incorporated in 1847, has its lecture rooms in Fifth street below Walnut. This college gives two courses a year, one called the winter and the other the spring course. The faculty consists of 5 professors, and the total number of students, up to 1852, was 799. The Homœopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania was instituted in 1846. Its faculty consists of 7 professors, and the class of 1852-3 had 108 students. Total number of graduates, 142. There is a Homœopathic hospital, at which the students attend clinical lectures. The Female Medical College of Pennsylvania, founded in 1849, has had a very prosperous commencement; 52 students attended the class of 1851-2. The Eclectic Medical College of Pennsylvania was chartered in 1850. The Philadelphia College of Pharmacy has its rooms in Zane street. This institution has 3 professors, and was established for the instruction of druggists and apothecaries, and its diploma is considered necessary for a reputable pursuit of the business of druggist in Philadelphia. Total number of students attending the different medical colleges, nearly 1400.

Public Schools.—The public schools of Philadelphia city and county form a separate district, with a distinct organization, which is under the direction of a board of controllers, elected by the several local governments. This district is subdivided into 11 sections, each of which is subject to directors appointed by their respective governments, viz. the councils in the city, and the commissioners in the districts. On the 30th of June, 1852, there were 54 grammar, 40 unclassified, 34 secondary, 149 primary, 1 high, and 1 normal school. Total in the first district, 279 schools, attended by 49,635 pupils, and taught by 83 male, and 741 female teachers. There were on register 3946 children who could not be admitted for want of accommodations. The number of buildings occupied for schools—many of which are fine structures, and built with especial reference to complete adaptation for places of instruction—is 180, of which 73 belong to the controllers, and 107 are rented. In 1849, night schools, for minors over 14 years of age and for adults, were first opened; and were attended in the winter of 1851–2 by 7961 pupils, (4063 of whom were of foreign birth.) These schools were open for about 4½ months. The total expenditure for all purposes in the first school district, for 1851–2, was $446,199.59, of which sum $199,230.69 was paid to teachers, who received salaries varying from $150 to $1000, the latter sum being generally the salary of the principal male teachers of the grammar schools, while the female principals received $500 to $600. At each extreme of this system of schools, so to speak, is the normal school, for the preparation of teachers, and the high-school, to complete the education of the most gifted of the pupils sent up from the grammar schools. The normal school, at present located in Chester street, above Race, is under the direction of a male principal, who receives $1200 salary, and 5 assistant female teachers, with salaries of from $225 to $300, besides drawing and music teachers. In the same building is a grammar school of practice, with 230 girls, and a secondary boys' school, with 150 pupils. The high-school, the crown of the system, has been in operation since 1838, and has sent forth to the world nearly 3000 young men, some with high qualifications for contributing to the advancement of society. This institution is in fact a college, but giving a more practical training than colleges usually do. The high-school is at present located opposite Penn square, south of Market street, but a large building in Broad street, near Green, better suited to the increased number of candidates seeking its advantages, is now (1853) being erected. An observatory, furnished with a powerful telescope, transit instrument, &c., is connected with the high-school, which has also 10 professors and 3 assistants. The professors receive from $1200 to $1500 salary, and the principal $2000. The class of 1851–2 had 514 students.

Philadelphia abounds in private schools of a high character, of which we have no statistics. There are a few educational institutions of a semi-public character. Among which we may mention, the Academy of the Protestant Episcopal Church, established in 1785, and which now occupies an elegant building in the Elizabethan style, in Locust street near Broad street, constructed of sandstone. The Theological Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, corner of Schuylkill Fifth and Race streets, is a Catholic institution. The Philadelphia Academy of the Visitation, corner of Broad and Poplar streets, is also a Catholic institution for the education of girls. Each division of Friends has a central school in Cherry street. The Presbyterians have a union school in Market street. We place last the Girard College, as peculiar in its nature, partaking of the character of an asylum for orphans, and partly of a school and college. Orphans are admitted between the ages of 6 and 10, and remain (according to merit) in college until between the ages of 14 and 18, when they are to be bound out to some useful occupation. In the principal department the pupils are taught the usual branches of an English education, the French and Spanish languages, and, as they are prepared for them, higher branches are introduced. The primary classes, numbers 1 and 2, receive instruction in the usual elementary branches. The principal department had 88 pupils in 1852, and the primaries 213. Of these, 246 were born in the City of Philadelphia, and 55 in other parts of the state. Total expenses for the year 1852, $60,512.37; of which $11,140.38 was for instruction. The college officers are a president, 5 male, and 6 female instructors, and a matron. The affairs of the college are managed by a board of directors appointed by the city councils.

Banks, Insurance Offices, &c.—There were in Philadelphia city and county, November, 1852, 16 banks, with an aggregate capital of $10,758,000, a circulation of $4,979,790, and $5,459,335 in specie. In the spring of 1853 there were 30 insurance companies, of which 8 were life insurance. The paid-in capital of these institutions amounted, in 1853, to $3,200,000; of which $1,200,000 was life insurance: the chartered capital, however, is much greater. Besides these, there are several new companies chartered and about going into operation. There are three savings' institutions, one of which is an old and long-tried institution, which has done a vast amount of good in the encouragement it has given to thrift among the poor.

Manufactures.—According to the report of the marshal of the district, at the taking of the census in 1850, Philadelphia had $33,737,911 capital, and 43,296 male, and 15,803 female hands employed in manufactures, yielding products valued at $64,114,112—but no particular statistics are given. Philadelphia is celebrated for the speed and excellence of her locomotives, and two establishments turned out 134 in 1852, and expect, during the present year, (1853,) to make 200. They have sent 260 to Europe since 1833; one house alone has built 723 locomotives in the same period. The Messrs. Horstman employ 300 hands in the manufacture of military and ladies' dress trimmings, and Cornelius, Baker & Co. nearly 1000 in the fabrication of chandeliers and gas fixtures. Both these establishments, we believe, are unequalled, in their several branches of manufacture, in the United States, and occupy immense buildings in Cherry street, in a good style of ornamental brickwork. Forges, foundries, and almost every species of iron manufacture, abound in the suburbs of Philadelphia, producing immense numbers of steam engines, water and gas pipes, &c. Sugar-refining is a very extensive business in Philadelphia. The suburb of Manayunk is almost wholly engaged in manufactures, principally of cotton and woollen goods, and carpets. In every part of the suburbs is heard the sound of the loom; and in the same quarters, in private families, are manufactured more shoes for the S. and W. than in any other town or city in the United States. This fact makes the census reports an unfaithful representation of the manufactures of Philadelphia, as that only professes to give reports of establishments producing each $500 and upwards. Great quantities of umbrellas and parasols are made, one house alone claiming to turn out 1000, and another 700 a day. Carts, wheelbarrows, and other vehicles, and cabinet furniture are made and exported extensively to the South, to the West Indies, and California. Ship-building, to a large extent for other ports, is carried on here, especially in steam propellers. In 1852, 20 vessels were launched, whose aggregate tonnage was 5246, and 27 were on the stocks, with a tonnage of 11,416. An immense number of hands are employed in book-binding, printing, &c., and the upper stories of warehouses, and buildings back from the streets are thronged with industrious artisans that the stranger wists not of, while the employees of commerce are mostly visible to the traveller.

Commerce.—Though Philadelphia ranks at present but fourth among the commercial cities of the United States in foreign trade, she is steadily on the increase even in this respect, while her coasting trade is extending beyond all parallel. The least number of foreign arrivals in the last 22 years was 372, (in 1843,) and the greatest, 679, (in 1852.) In the coasting trade the arrivals have grown from 2573 (in 1833) to 30,175, (in 1852); and if we include the coal trade of Port Richmond, (a suburb,) it is 38,505. The imports for the fiscal year ending June, 1852, amounted to $14,785,917, and the exports to $5,828,571; but the imports for the ordinary year amounted to $16,455,708, and exports to $5,994,564; duties collected the same year, $4,033,909; tonnage entered, 173,364; cleared, 139,932. Of the exports to foreign countries for the fiscal year 1852, there were—

	Greatest in 22 yrs.	Least in 22 yrs.
Wheat flour, 341,453 bbls.	420,684 in 1847.	33,680 in 1827.
Rye " 6,285 "	36,471 " 1840.	6,285 " 1852.
Indian meal, 68,182 "	300,531 " 1847.	42,798 " 1836.
Wheat, 494,163 bus.	523,538 " "	2,258 " 1834.
Indian corn, 113,993 "	1,102,210 " "	17,087 " 1833.

Among the leading articles of imports were cotton, woollen, and silk goods, raw cotton, hides, manufactured iron, molasses, sugar, naval stores, salt, tobacco, rice, oranges, and lemons. There were exported in the year ending September 30th, 1852, wheat flour, 368,386 barrels; rye flour, 6536; Indian meal, 72,440; bread, 22,211; pork, 7595; beef, 5617; bread, 8856 kegs; naval stores, 19,255 barrels; wheat, 495,424 bushels; Indian corn, 130,979; domestic goods, 5424 packages; cotton, 6375 bales; coal, 16,316 tons; manufactured iron worth $336,989; tallow candles, 1,038,656 pounds; tallow, 835,026; hams, 624,029; lard, 2,789,353; butter, 436,307; cheese, 165,487; soap, 1,082,922; sperm candles, 34,727; manufactured tobacco, 269,612; nails, 409,050; bark, 2704 hogheads; tobacco, 876; rice, 3661 tierces; sperm lard and whale oil, 66,761 gallons; besides some fish, (pickled and dried,) potatoes, beer, ale, cider, vinegar, gunpowder, lard oil, turpentine, gold, and silver, (to the amount of $324,584,) apples, peas, onions, and grass-seeds. In 1852 there were inspected 4344 hogheads of tobacco. The coal trade of Philadelphia has become an immense item of its coasting trade. At Richmond, or (Port Richmond) the depot of the Reading railroad, 7830 vessels arrived to load with coal in 1852. The total amount sent down by the Schuylkill and Lehigh canals, and Reading railroad, amounted to 3,577,109 tons in the same year; of which, probably more than 3,000,000 tons were either reshipped at Philadelphia, or consumed in it, and the money transactions of nearly the whole, it is presumed, were negotiated in the offices at Philadelphia. The import of hides from foreign countries (chiefly South America) amounted to 120,154, and coastwise to 37,154. A revival in the commerce of this city has recently taken place, and regular lines of steamships have been established to Liverpool, Savannah, Charleston, Richmond, New York, and Boston.* A brisk trade with California has sprung up, and fine clipper ships, which Philadelphia capitalists had formerly run from New York, now trade directly from their own port. The opening of the Pennsylvania railroad to Pittsburg has also given Philadelphia the most direct communication with the Mississippi valley, and greatly increased her trade with the West. The number of passengers arriving from foreign ports in 1852 amounted to 18,081, all of whom, with the exception of a very small fraction, were foreigners. Philadelphia is either directly or indirectly connected by railway with the most important places in the United States, N. and E. of Alabama. Immediately terminating at this city are railways connecting her with New York city, Wilmington, Baltimore, Lancaster, Harrisburg, York, Carlisle, Pottsville, Pittsburg, and Cincinnati. Others are in course of construction to unite her with Easton, Erie, and other interior towns. In 1853, $57,110.76 were paid in for auction duties.

Miscellaneous Statistics.—Philadelphia has 13 markets, mostly located in the middle of the wider streets, and extending from a fourth to two-thirds of a mile. New market houses, however, have been, and others are about to be erected on a different plan, in place of those in Market street, which the demands of commerce, it is thought, will soon require to be removed. The markets of Philadelphia are the admiration of foreigners for the extent, variety, freshness, and excellence of their supplies. There arrived from the West in 1852, (exclusive of those brought by butchers,) 71,200 beeves; 14,420 cows; 49,200 swine, and 81,200 sheep.

The Philadelphia Fire Department is at present composed of 27 volunteer engine, the same number of hose, and 4 hook and ladder companies. In consequence of the contentions between these companies, leading to riots and breaches of the order of the city, their dissolution has been for some time agitated, and the substitution of a paid department proposed.—During the year 1852 there occurred in Philadelphia city and county, 10,245 deaths, of which 1204 were by consumption; 558 by dysentery; 499 by convulsions; 444 by inflammation of the lungs; 433 by scarlet fever; 426 by small-pox; 354 by marasmus; 345 by debility; 329 by cholera infantum; 258 by inflammation of the brain; 248 by dropsy of the brain; 208 by inflammation of the bronchiæ; and 208 by croup. Of these, nearly half were under 5 years of age.—Ferry-boats run every five minutes to Camden; every half-hour to Gloucester and Red Bank; every hour to Tacony, Richmond, and Bridesburg; several times a day to Wilmington, Bristol, Burlington, Bordentown, and other points on the river; and once a day or three times a week to places near the Delaware bay. There are 3 fine bridges crossing the Schuylkill at Philadelphia. There are in the city and districts 310 licensed omnibuses; about 3416 cars, drays, &c.; 380 hacks and cabs; 430 wheel and hand barrows; 22 pawn-brokers; and 7657 licensed stores.

Philadelphia has (1853) 12 daily papers, 32 weekly, (14 of a religious character,) and 4 Sunday newspapers; 12 scientific and literary monthly magazines, besides a number of scientific and other periodicals.

The value of real estate in Philadelphia city and county was assessed in 1853, at $128,218,658; the real value may be stated at above $170,000,000.

Government.—Philadelphia, as has been before stated, (following the divisions of London, from which city and its vicinity its early settlers came,) has been divided into a number of distinct governments, composed first of the city proper as laid out by Penn, and then of the districts of Northern Liberties, Kensington, Richmond, Spring Garden, Penn district, &c. on the N.; Southwark, Moyamensing, and Passyunk on the S.; and West Philadelphia, separated by the Schuylkill river from of the city proper. The latter is governed by a mayor and council. The council is divided into select and common, the former consisting of 12 members, elected for 3, and the latter of 20, for 1 year, by popular vote. According to "Philadelphia as it is," the mayor, who is the head of the police department, is elected annually, and has to aid him a clerk of police, 4 special, and 4 high constables, 34 day-policemen, 4 captains, 4 lieutenants, 200 watchmen, and 57 lamplighters. There are 4 police districts, each having a station house. Over the whole police of the city and districts is a marshal, elected by the people for 3 years, and has powers, as far as concerns the police, the same as the mayor of the city and sheriff of the county. The marshal has 12 lieutenants and 168 policemen. The board of health, consisting of 18 members, is appointed by the councils and the commissioners of the adjoining districts. The quarantine ground is about 10 miles below the city, and is called the Lazaretto. The city is defended by Fort Mifflin, 6 miles below the city. A new fortress, called Fort Delaware, is now in course of construction on Peapatch Island, opposite Delaware City.

History.—Philadelphia was planned and settled by William Penn and a colony of English Friends or Quakers in 1682, after a regular purchase from the Indians, ratified by treaty in due form, under an elm-tree in the present district of Kensington. The name of Philadelphia (brotherly love) was given by Penn, both in reference to the ancient city of that name in Asia Minor, and from its embodying principles he had so much at heart. Though there was considerable contention between Penn and his colony, no very striking events occurred even down to the Revolution. The first Congress preparatory to that event met in Carpenter's Hall, (a building still standing,) in a court back of Chestnut street, between Third and Fourth streets, September 4, 1774. How great the change, from that meeting in doubt and uncertainty, of our patriotic and anxious fathers, in a provincial town of less than 30,000 inhabitants, to the metropolitan city of half a million, (equal, perhaps, to the Paris of that day in population,) inhabited by a wealthy, proud, and confident people, fearless of any power on earth! Here met also most of the Congresses of the Revolution, and from hence went forth in doubt and forebodings on the part of many, and confident reliance on the part of others, that world-renowned instrument, the Declaration of Independence, which was read from a stand in the State-house yard, by Captain John Hopkins, July 8, 1776. The convention that formed the present constitution of the United States met in Philadelphia, May, 1787. Here resided the President of the United States, (in a building in Market street, one door E. of Sixth street, S. side;) and here Congress assembled for nearly 10 years after the adoption of the present constitution. In consequence of the disastrous battles of Brandywine and Germantown, the British army had possession of this city from September, 1777, to June, 1778. In the autumn of 1793, the yellow fever visited Philadelphia, and carried off more than 4000 persons out of a population of a little over 40,000, of whom half, it was thought, had fled the city. This pestilence again visited Philadelphia in 1798, but though it numbered many victims, was not so fatal as in 1793. The Asiatic cholera ravaged the city in the summer of 1832, and swept off about 2000 victims. In 1849 it renewed its ravages; but as in the case of the yellow fever, was much less fatal on its second occurrence. In 1838 the Pennsylvania Hall, belonging to the Abolitionists, was attacked by a mob and burned, the Shelter for Colored Orphans fired, and the negro quarters attacked. In 1844 the city was disquieted for several days by riots in the northern suburbs, caused by jealousies between the Protestants and Catholics, in which several Catholic churches were burned. The mobs were renewed in July of the same year in the southern suburbs. On both occasions the military were called out, and several lives were lost.

PHILADELPHIA, a post-office of Darlington district, South Carolina.

PHILADELPHIA, a post-village, capital of Neshoba co., Mississippi, about 80 miles E. N. E. from Jackson.

PHILADELPHIA, a post-village of Monroe co., Tenn., 160 miles E. S. E. from Nashville.

PHILADELPHIA, a post-village in Hancock co., Indiana.

PHILADELPHIA, a post-village of Marion co., Mo., about 95 miles N. N. E. of Jefferson City.

PHILADELPHIA, a small post-village of Van Buren co., Iowa, on the Des Moines river, about 8 miles N. from Keosauque.

PHILADELPHUS, a post-village in Robeson co., North Carolina.

PHILANTHROPY, a post-office of Butler co., O.

PHILIPPI, a post-village, capital of Barbours co., Virginia, on Tygart's Valley river, about 210 miles N. W. from Richmond. The surrounding country contains coal and iron.

PHILIPS, a county in the E. part of Arkansas, bordering on the Mississippi river, which separates it from Mississippi; area 725 square miles. It is drained by St. Francis river. The surface is level, and the soil fertile. The southern part is liable to inundation, and is partly occupied by swamps, but there is a prospect that these will be reclaimed, as Congress has made a grant of land for that object. Corn and cotton are the chief products. In 1850 there were raised 281,889 bushels of corn; 20,895 of sweet potatoes; 5165½ bales of cotton, and 20,340 pounds of butter. There were 5 saw mills, and 1 tannery. It contained 4 churches, 3 newspaper offices, and 95 pupils attending academies or other schools. Capital, Helena. Population, 6935; of whom 4344 were free, and 2591, slaves.

PHILIPSBURG, a village of Warren county, New Jersey, on the left bank of the Delaware river, opposite Easton in Pennsylvania. The Morris canal terminates here, and a substantial stone bridge crosses the Delaware.

PHILIPSBURG, a post-village of Centre co., Pennsylvania, on the Erie turnpike, 28 miles W. from Bellefonte. Population, about 300.

PHILIPSBURG, a post-village of Jefferson co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, 75 miles N. E. by N. from Marietta.

PHILIPSBURG, a small village of Montgomery co., Ohio.

PHILIP'S RIVER, of Coos co., in the N. part of New Hampshire, a small branch of Upper Ammonoosuck river.

PHILIPSVILLE, a post-village of Amity township, Alleghany county, New York, on the Genesee river, where it is crossed by the New York and Erie railroad, 375 miles from New York city. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the lumber trade. Philipsville derives its name from the Hon. Philip Church. Population in 1853, about 800.

PHILIPSVILLE, a small village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

PHILIPS, a post-township in Franklin co., Maine, on the N. side of Sandy river, about 55 miles N. W. from Augusta. Pop., 1673.

PHILIPSBURG, a post-village of Orange co., New York, 110 miles S. S. W. of Albany.

PHILLIPSBURG, a post-borough of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, on the left bank of Ohio river, opposite the mouth of Beaver river, 28 miles below Pittsburg. Steamboat building is carried on here. Population in 1850, 473.

PHILLIP'S CREEK, a post-office of Alleghany co., New York.

PHILLIPSPORT, a post-village of Sullivan co., New York, on the Delaware and Hudson canal, about 90 miles S. S. W. from Albany.

PHILLIPSTON, a post-township in Worcester co., Mass., intersected by Miller's river, 60 miles N. W. by W. from Boston. Pop., 809.

PHILLIPSTOWN, a township of Putnam co., New York, on the Hudson river, 90 miles S. from Albany. The Hudson River railroad passes through it. Population, 5063.

PHILLIPSTOWN, a post-village in White co., Illinois, 165 miles S. E. from Springfield.

PHILLIPSVILLE, a village in the S. W. part of Oswego co., New York, on Oswego river.

PHILLIPSVILLE, a post-office of Erie co., Pa.

PHILO, a post-office of Muskingum co., O.

PHILOMATH, a post-office of Oglethorpe co., Georgia.

PHILOMATH, a post-office of Union co., Ind.

PHILOMONT, a post-village of Loudon co., Virginia, 12 miles S. from Leesburg, is situated in a rich farming district.

PHILOPOLIS, a post-office of Baltimore co., Maryland.

PHIPPSBURG, a post-township in Lincoln co., Maine, at the mouth of the Kennebec river, on the W. side, 40 miles S. from Augusta. Population, 1805.

PHIPPS' MILLS, a post-office of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

PHENICIA, a post-office of Ulster co., N. Y.

PHENIX, a post-village of Oswego co., New York, on the Oswego river and canal, about 150 miles W. N. W. from Albany.

PHENIX, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pa.

PHENIX, a post-office of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

PHENIXVILLE, a post-office of Windham co., Connecticut.

PHENIXVILLE, a flourishing post-borough of Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Schuylkill river, at the mouth of French creek, and on the railroad between Philadelphia and Reading, 27 miles from the former, and 31 miles from the latter. The canal of the Schuylkill Navigation Company passes through the place. It is one of the most populous towns in the county, and is the seat of extensive manufactures of iron and cotton. The rolling mill of Reeves, Buck, & Co. is supposed to be the largest in the Union. A large quantity of nails and railroad iron is made here annually, the material for which is obtained in the vicinity, and is of superior quality. Valuable mines of copper and lead have also been opened in the township. Near this town the railroad passes through a tunnel of solid rock about 2000 feet in length. Phenixville contains several handsome churches, a lyceum, and a printing-office. Population in 1850, 2670; in 1853, above 3000.

PIASA, a post-office of Macoupin co., Ill.

PIATT, a county in the E. central part of Illinois, has an area of 270 square miles. It is intersected by the North fork of Sangamon river, which flows in a S. W. direction. The surface is nearly level, and the soil fertile. The county consists partly of prairie and partly of timbered land, the former being the more extensive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 430,655 bushels of corn; 5769 of wheat; 29,115 of oats, and 37,950 pounds of butter. It contained 2 churches, and 300 pupils attending public schools. Named probably in honor of Colonel Piatt, a Western pioneer. Capital, Monticello. Pop., 1606.

PICAYUNE, a post-office of Henderson co., Illinois, 45 miles N. E. from Nauvoo.

PICKAWAY, a county in the S. central part of Ohio, has an area of 510 square miles. It is traversed from N. to S. by Scioto river, and also drained by Darby, Deer, and Walnut creeks. The surface is level, diversified by forests and prairies. The celebrated Pickaway plains, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. from Circleville, are said to be the richest in Ohio. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 2,672,303 bushels of corn; 144,377 of wheat; 55,494 of oats, and 131,261 of potatoes. It contained 47 churches, 4 newspaper offices, and 8625 pupils attending public schools. This county is intersected by the Ohio canal, and by the Zanesville, Wilmington, and Cincinnati railroad, not yet finished. Pickaway is a corruption or misspelling of Piqua, the name of an Indian tribe. Capital, Circleville. Population, 21,008.

PICKAWAY, a township in the S. E. part of Pickaway co., Ohio. Population, 1425.

PICKAWAY PLAINS, a post-office of Monroe co., Virginia.

PICKENS, a district forming the N. W. extremity of South Carolina, bordering on North Carolina and Georgia, has an area of 1060 square miles. The Chattooga river forms its boundary on the N. W., the Tugaloo, a branch of Savannah river, on the S. W., and the Saluda on the N. E.; it is drained by the sources of the Kiowee river, and by numerous creeks. The surface is elevated, and in some parts mountainous, the district occupying the south-eastern declivity of the Blue Ridge. Table Rock mountain, in the N. part of the district, rises 4000 feet above the sea, and is a place of great resort. A large portion of the soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, grass, sweet potatoes, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 the district produced 634,011 bushels of corn; 42,052 of wheat; 125,405 of oats; 102,886 of sweet potatoes, and 1357 bales of cotton. There were 2 grist, and 2 saw and planing mills, 12 distilleries, and 4 tanneries. It contained 54 churches, 1 newspaper office, 355 pupils attending public schools, and 15 attending an academy. Limestone is among the most valuable and abundant minerals of the district. The streams furnish extensive water-power. Named in honor of General Andrew Pickens, an officer in the War of the Revolution. Capital, Pickens Court House. Population, 17,004; of whom 13,325 were free, and 3679, slaves.

PICKENS, a county in the W. part of Alabama, bordering on Mississippi, has an area of 1020 square miles. It is intersected by the Tombigbee and Sipsey rivers, which unite on the S. border. It is also drained by Lub-bub creek. The surface is hilly or undulating; the soil generally fertile. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 12,305 bales of cotton; 868,705 bushels of corn; and 157,537 of sweet potatoes. There were 8 saw mills, 3 grist and saw mills, and 3 tanneries. It contained 44 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 718 pupils attending public schools, and 336 attending academies and other schools. The Tombigbee is navigable by steamboats through this county. Capital, Pickens Court House.

Population, 21,512; of whom 10,978 were free, and 10,534 slaves.

PICKENS COURT HOUSE, capital of Pickens district, South Carolina, 144 miles W. N. W. from Columbia. It is situated near Kiowee river, a branch of the Savannah, in a hilly district, which abounds in valuable minerals. The village contains a court house, jail, an academy, and a newspaper office.

PICKENSVILLE, a post-village of Pickens district, South Carolina, 120 miles W. N. W. from Columbia.

PICKENSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Pickens co., Alabama, on the Tombigbee river, about 180 miles W. N. W. from Montgomery. Cotton is shipped here in steamboats. The village contains 2 flourishing seminaries, named the Pickensville Female Institute, and Pickensville High School. Population in 1850, 276.

PICKERELTOWN, a post-office of Logan co., O.

PICKERING, a post-office of Chester co., Pa.

PICKERING CREEK, of Chester co., Pennsylvania, flows into the Schuylkill river about 1 mile below Phoenixville.

PICKERINGTON, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, about 15 miles S. E. from Columbus. Population, near 200.

PICKET'S CORNERS, a post-office of Cass co., Michigan.

PICOLATA, a post-office of St. John's co., Fla.

PIEDMONT, a village of Hampshire co., Virginia, on the North branch of the Potomac river, and on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, 215 miles N. W. from Richmond. It contains machine shops of the railroad company.

PIEDMONT, a post-village in Harris co., Georgia, 115 miles W. S. W. from Milledgeville.

PIEDMONT STATION, a post-village of Fauquier co., Virginia.

PIERCE, a new county in the W. part of Wisconsin, contains about 570 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the St. Croix river, on the E. by Red Cedar river, on the S. W. by the Mississippi, and drained by the Rush and Menomonie rivers. The surface is diversified by prairies and forests. It was formed in 1851, by a division of St. Croix county. Capital, Prescott.

PIERCE, a county in the S. E. central part of Minnesota, contains about 2900 square miles. The Minnesota or St. Peter's river forms its boundary on the S. W., and the North fork of Crow river on the N. E., and it is drained by the Manya Wakan, and the South fork of Crow river. The surface is elevated and rolling; the soil is generally fertile. A range of wooded highlands, called Coteau Grand du Bois, extends across the county. This county was formed since 1851.

PIERCE, a new county in the N. W. part of Washington Territory, on the E. side of Puget sound, named in honor of the present chief magistrate of the United States. The census of 1850 gives us no information respecting this county, it having been formed since that time. Capital not yet established.

PIERCEVILLE, a small village of Washtenaw co., Michigan.

PIERCEVILLE, a post-village of Dane co., Wisconsin, 13 miles E. N. E. from Madison.

PIERMONT, a post-township in Grafton co., New Hampshire, 60 miles N. N. W. from Concord. Population, 948.

PIERMONT, a post-village of Orangetown township, Rockland co., New York, on the Hudson river, at the terminus of the Erie railroad, 24 miles above New York. It is pleasantly situated at the N. extremity of the Palisades, with high hills in the rear, and has a pier 1 mile long extending into the river. Here is an extensive depôt and machine shops of the railroad company. The adjacent hills are dotted with cottages or country seats. Population, estimated at 1200.

PIERPONT, a post-township in the central part of St. Lawrence co., New York. Population, 1459.

PIERPONT, a post-township in the E. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Population, 999.

PIERPONT, a post-village of Ashtabula co., Ohio, 218 miles N. E. from Columbus.

PIERPONT PLACE, a post-office of De Witt co., Texas.

PIERRE BAYOU, a small stream of Mississippi, rises in Copiah co., and flows into the Mississippi near the S. W. extremity of Claiborne county.

PIERREPOINT MANOR, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York. It is the S. terminus of the Sackett's Harbor and Ellisburg railroad.

PIERSON, a township in Vigo co., Indiana. Population, 642.

PIFFARD, a post-office of Livingston co., N. Y.

PIGEON, a township in Vanderburgh co., Indiana. Population, 201.

PIGEON, a township in Warrick co., Indiana. Population, 715.

PIGEON CREEK, of Indiana, rises in Gibson co., and enters the Ohio at Evansville.

PIGEON CREEK, a post-village of Ralls co., Missouri, 80 miles N. E. by N. from Jefferson City.

PIGEON FORGE, a post-office of Sevier co., Tennessee.

PIGEON GROVE, a post-office of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

PIGEON RIVER, of Alabama, rises in Butler co., and enters Sepulga river near Brooklyn.

PIGEON RIVER, of Indiana and Michigan; rises in Steuben county of the former, and enters the St. Joseph's river in the south-east corner of Cass county, Michigan. Its direction is W. N. W. It furnishes valuable water-power.

PIGEON RIVER, a post-office of Haywood co., North Carolina.

PIGEON ROOST, a post-office of Choctaw co., Mississippi.

PIGEON RUN, a post-office of Campbell co. Va.

PIKE, a county in the E. N. E. part of Pennsylvania, bordering on New Jersey, has an area of 600 square miles. The Delaware river forms its entire boundary on the N. E. and on the S. E.; it is drained also by the Laakawaxen and Shohola creeks. Bushkill creek forms part of the S. boundary. The surface is uneven and hilly; the soil is generally thin and stony. A large part of the county is a wilderness of scrubby oaks. The river bottoms, however, produce a larger growth of pine and hemlock. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 33,608 bushels of corn; 16,374 of oats; 52,059 of potatoes, and 99,517 pounds of butter. There were 4 flour and grist mills, 28 saw mills, 1 farming implement manufactory, and 5 tanneries. It contained 5 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 955 pupils attending public schools. Sandstone and slate are the principal rocks. The Delaware and Hudson canal traverses the northern part, and the New York and Erie railroad passes along the N. E. border. Organized in 1814, and named in honor of General Zebulon Pike. Capital, Milford. Population, 5881.

PIKE, a county in the W. central part of Georgia, has an area of 390 square miles. It is traversed in the N. W. part by the Flint river, which afterwards forms its western boundary; and also drained by the Big Potato, Elkin's, Flat, Rose, and South Towaliga creeks. The southern part of the county is hilly; the soil is moderately fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 8002 bales of cotton; 418,990 bushels of corn; 46,442 of oats, and 85,558 of sweet potatoes. There were 3 flour mills, 5 saw mills, and 4 tanneries. It contained 28 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 354 pupils attending public schools, and 184 attending academies or other schools. The rocks which underlie the surface are primary, containing iron ore. It is intersected by the Macon and Western railroad. Organized in 1822. Capital, Zebulon. Population, 14,306; of whom 8748 were free, and 5558, slaves.

PIKE, a county in the S. E. part of Alabama, has an area of 1330 square miles. Conecuh river rises in the county, and the Pea river flows through it. The surface is undulating or nearly level, and extensively covered by forests of pine. The soil is moderately fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, swine, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 8679 bales of cotton; 531,192 bushels of corn; and 151,657 of sweet potatoes. There were 3 tanneries, and 2 grist and saw mills. It contained 18 churches; 498 pupils attending public schools, and 177 attending other schools. Capital, Troy. Pop., 15,920; of whom 12,126 were free, and 3794, slaves.

PIKE, a county in the S. part of Mississippi, bordering on Louisiana, has an area of about 780 square miles. Bayou Chitto flows nearly through the middle of the county. The soil is sandy and not very rich. Indian corn, oats, sweet potatoes, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 this county yielded 245,751 bushels of corn; 27,366 of oats; 64,040 of sweet potatoes; 4128 bales of cotton, and 290,550 pounds of rice. It contained 15 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 458 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Holmerville. Population, 7360, of whom 4258 were free, and 3102, slaves.

PIKE, a county in the S. W. part of Arkansas; area, about 660 square miles. It is drained by the Little Missouri river. The surface is partly occupied by mountains and hills, in which silver, iron, lead, zinc, cobalt, stone coal, and alabaster are found. These highlands are well adapted to the pasturage of sheep, and the lowlands to the growth of grain. In 1850 this county produced 58,826 bushels of Indian corn; 4878 of sweet potatoes, and 301 bales of cotton. It contained 1 flour and grist mill, 1 saw mill, 5 churches, and 214 pupils attending public schools. The streams of the county furnish extensive water-power. Capital, Murfreesborough. Population, 1861, of whom 1751 were free, and 110, slaves.

PIKE, a county forming the E. extremity of Kentucky, bordering on Virginia, contains an area estimated at 400 square miles. It is drained by the forks of the Big Sandy river. The surface is hilly and broken, having the Cumberland mountain near the E. border. Indian corn, wheat, rye, and oats are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 198,764 bushels of corn; 2454 of wheat; 18,501 of oats, and 4401 pounds of tobacco. It contained 180 pupils attending public schools. Extensive beds of bituminous coal, from 5 to 8 feet thick, have been opened, and some iron is found. The Big Sandy river is navigable for boats as high as Pikeville. Formed in 1821. Capital, Pikeville. Population, 5365, of whom 5267 were free, and 98, slaves.

PIKE, a county in the S. part of Ohio, has an area of about 445 square miles. It is intersected by the Scioto river and by the Ohio canal, and also drained by Beaver and Sunfish creeks. The surface is generally hilly, and the soil fertile. Indian corn, wheat, grass, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 797,655 bushels of corn; 16,725 of wheat, and 121,597 pounds of butter. It contained 47 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 1478 pupils attending public schools. The Cincinnati and Parkersburg railroad is in course of construction through this county. Capital, Picketon. Pop., 10,953.

PIKE, a county in the S. W. part of Indiana, contains about 300 square miles. It is intersected by Patoka creek, and bounded on the N. by White river. The surface is nearly level, and the greater part of the soil is fertile. The exports consist of Indian corn, wheat, oats, pork, and beef. In 1850 this county produced 407,231 bushels of corn; 15,128 of wheat; 27,394 of oats, and 733 tons of hay. It contained 14 churches, and 375 pupils attending public schools. Coal of good quality is abundant. The county is intersected by the Wabash and Erie canal. Organized in 1817. Capital, Petersburg. Population, 7720.

PIKE, a county in the W. part of Illinois, bordering on Missouri, has an area of about 750 square miles. It extends from the Illinois river on the E. to the Mississippi, which forms its south-western boundary. It is traversed by a side-channel of the Mississippi, called Snycartee slough, and also drained by McKee's, Bay, and Little Muddy creeks. The surface is rolling, and consists of prairies and forests, the proportions of which are nearly equal. The soil is extremely fertile, and extensively cultivated. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, pork, and butter are the staples. In 1850 it produced 1,375,045 bushels of corn; 194,051 of wheat; 130,267 of oats, and 119,741 pounds of butter. It contained 16 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 3241 pupils attending public schools, and 30 attending an academy. Stone coal is abundant. The rivers afford great facilities for exporting produce to the Northern or Southern markets. Pike county is among the most populous in the state. Capital, Pittsfield. Population, 18,819.

PIKE, a county in the E. part of Missouri, bordering on the Mississippi river, which separates it from Illinois, contains about 600 square miles. It is intersected by Salt river, and also drained by Cuivre river, and by Spencer's, Ramsey's, and Buffalo creeks. The county consists partly of prairies. The forests originally covered about two-thirds of the surface. The soil is generally good. Indian corn, wheat, oats, tobacco, butter, and pork are the staples. In 1850 it produced 748,540 bushels of corn; 106,241 of wheat; 85,060 of oats, and 848,830 pounds of tobacco. It contained 15 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 2730 pupils attending public schools, and 110 attending other schools. Limestone and sandstone underlie the surface. Capital, Bowling Green. Population, 13,609, of whom 10,334 were free, and 3275, slaves.

PIKE, a post-office of Washington co., Me.

PIKE, a post-village in Pike township, Wyoming county, New York, about 45 miles E. S. E. of Buffalo. It contains several mills, a water-cure establishment, 3 churches, and 3 taverns. Population of the township, 2003.

PIKE, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles E. N. E. from Reading. Population, 883.

PIKE, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles W. from Montrose. Population, 1747.

PIKE, a township of Clearfield co., Pennsylvania, about 44 miles N. W. from Hollidaysburg. Population, 1249.

PIKE, a township of Potter co., Pennsylvania, 55 miles N. W. from Williamsport. Population, 200.

PIKE, a township in the W. part of Brown co., Ohio. Population, 1022.

PIKE, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Clark co., Ohio. Pop., 1315.

PIKE, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Coshoccon co., Ohio. Pop., 1081.

PIKE, a township in the E. central part of Fulton co., Ohio. Population, 485.

PIKE, a township in the N. part of Knox co., Ohio. Population, 1720.

PIKE, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Madison co., Ohio. Pop., 423.

PIKE, a post-township in the central part of Perry co., Ohio. Population, 2147.

PIKE, a township in the S. part of Stark co., Ohio. Population, 1447.

PIKE, a township in Jay co., Indiana. Population, 786.

PIKE, a township in Marion co., Indiana. Population, 1928.

PIKE, a township in Warren co., Indiana. Population, 555.

PIKE, a township in Stoddard co., Missouri. Population, 1053.

PIKE, a post-office of Muscatine co., Iowa.

PIKE, a township in Kenosha co., Wisconsin. Population, 680.

PIKE CREEK, a post-office of Ripley co., Mo.

PIKE MILLS, a post-office of Potter co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles E. from Coudersport.

PIKE POND, a post-office of Sullivan co., New York.

PIKE RUN, a post-office of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

PIKE'S PEAK, one of the highest summits of the Rocky Mountains, near 38° 25' N. lat., and 105° W. lon. Height, 12,000 feet.

PIKESVILLE, Maryland. See PIKEVILLE.

PIKETON, Kentucky. See PIKEVILLE.

PIKETON, a post-village, capital of Pike co., Ohio, on the E. bank of Scioto river, 25 miles from its mouth, 65 miles S. from Columbus, and 2 miles E. from the Ohio canal. The Cincinnati and Parkersburg railroad, now in progress, is designed to pass through Pike-ton. It contains 3 churches, 1 academy, 1 newspaper office, and a number of stores. Laid out in 1814. Population in 1850, 690.

PIKETON, a post-village in Marion co., Indiana, 10 miles N. W. from Indianapolis.

PIKETON, a post-office of Stoddard co., Missouri.

PIKE TOWNSHIP, a post-office of Berks co., Pennsylvania.

PIKE VALLEY, a post-office of Potter co., Pennsylvania.

PIKEVILLE, or PIKESVILLE, a post-village of Baltimore co., Maryland, 10 miles N. W. from Baltimore.

PIKEVILLE, a post-village, capital of Marion co., Alabama, 3 miles E. from the Butta-hatchee river, 68 miles N. N. W. from Tuscaloosa.

PIKEVILLE, a post-village of Chickasaw co., Mississippi, on the road from Houston to Aberdeen, 14 miles from each.

PIKEVILLE, a post-village, capital of Bledsoe co., Tennessee, 112 miles E. S. E. from Nashville. It is situated on high ground, and has abundance of stone coal in the vicinity. Population, about 400.

PIKEVILLE, or PIKETON, a post-village, capital of Pike co., Kentucky, on the W. fork of Big Sandy river, 160 miles E. S. E. from Frankfort. The river is navigable for boats from this point downward. The village contains numerous stores. Population, estimated at 500.

PILAHATCHIE, a post-office of Rankin co., Mississippi.

PILATKA, a post-village, capital of Putnam co., Florida, on the left bank of St. John's river, about 200 miles E. S. E. from Tallahassee. Cotton and sugar are shipped here in steamboats which run to Savannah and Charleston.

PILCHER, a post-office of Belmont co., Ohio.

PILESGROVE, a township of Salem co., New Jersey. It is intersected by Salem creek. Population, 2962.

PILLAR POINT, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

PILLOW, a post-office of Dauphin co., Pa.

PILLOWVILLE, a post-office of Weakley co., Tennessee.

PILLSBOROUGH, a small village of Pitt co., North Carolina.

PILÖT, a post-village of Vermilion co., Illinois, about 42 miles N. by W. from Paris.

PILOT GROVE, a post-office of Grayson co., Texas.

PILOT GROVE, a post-office of Hancock co., Illinois.

PILOT GROVE, a post-village of Cooper co., Missouri, about 52 miles N. W. by W. from Jefferson City.

PILOT GROVE, a post-office of Lee co., Iowa.

PILOT HILL, a post-office of Fulton co., Ark.

PILOT HILL, a post-office of Mason co., Ill.

PILOT KNOB. See MISSOURI.

PILOT KNOB, a post-office of Todd co., Ky.

PILOT KNOB, a post-office of Crawford co., Indiana.

PILOT MOUNTAIN, called also ARARAT, a mountain of Surry co., North Carolina, between the Ararat and Dan rivers. It is of a pyramidal form, and $\frac{1}{3}$ of a mile in height.

PINCKNEY, a post-township forming the W. extremity of Lewis co., New York. Population, 1208.

PINCKNEY, a small village of Rutherford co., North Carolina, about 200 miles W. by S. from Raleigh.

PINCKNEY, a post-village in Williamson co., Tennessee.

PINCKNEY, a post-village of Putnam township, Livingston co., Michigan, on a branch of Huron river, 45 miles S. E. from Lansing. It has some water-power, a flouring mill, and a few stores. Pop. in 1853, about 500.

PINCKNEY, a post-village in Warren co., Missouri, on Missouri river, 55 miles E. by N. from Jefferson City.

PINCKNEYVILLE, a post-village in Union district, South Carolina, on Broad river, 70 miles N. N. W. from Columbia.

PINCKNEYVILLE, a post-village in Gwinnett co., Georgia, near Chattahoochee river, 90 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

PINCKNEYVILLE, a small post-village of Tallapoosa co., Alabama.

PINCKNEYVILLE, a post-village in Wilkinson co., Mississippi, 135 miles S. W. from Jackson.

PINCKNEYVILLE, a post-village, capital of Perry co., Illinois, on Big Beaucoup creek, 134 miles S. from Springfield. It contains, besides the county buildings, several stores.

PINDERTOWN, a village in Lee co., Georgia, on Flint river, 110 miles S. W. by S. from Milledgeville.

PINE, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, about 14 miles N. from Pittsburg. Population, 2109.

PINE, a township of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles S. from Clarion. Population, 2288.

PINE, a township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, about 52 miles S. S. W. from Erie. Population, 702.

PINE, a township of Indiana co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1367.

PINE, a township in Warren co., Indiana. Population, 942.

PINEAPPLE, a post-office of Wilcox co., Ala.

PINE BARREN CREEK, Alabama, flows north-westward, and enters Alabama river on the boundary of Wilcox and Dallas counties.

PINE BLUFF, a post-office of Copiah co., Miss.

PINE BLUFF, a small post-village of Red River county, Texas, on Red river, about 360 miles N. E. from Austin city. It has 2 or 3 stores, and a steamboat landing.

PINE BLUFF, a thriving post-village, capital of Jefferson county, Arkansas, on the right bank of Arkansas river, 48 miles S. E. from Little Rock. It is situated in a rich cotton-planting region, and contains a newspaper office and several stores. About 20,000 bales of cotton are shipped here annually in steamboats. Population, about 500.

PINE BLUFF, a post-village of Callaway co., Kentucky.

PINE BLUFF, a post-village of Pulaski co., Missouri, on Big Piney fork of Gasconade river, 53 miles S. by E from Jefferson City.

PINE BLUFF, a post-office of Dane co., Wis.

PINEBOROUGH, a post-office of Marion co., Florida.

PINEBROOK, a post-village of Morris co., New Jersey.

PINE CREEK rises in the N. part of Penn sylvania, and enters the West Branch of the Susquehanna, near Jersey Shore.

PINE CREEK, of Crawford co., Arkansas, enters Arkansas river from the N.

PINE CREEK, of Berrien co., Michigan, enters St. Joseph's river, 2 miles from its mouth.

PINE CREEK, of Indiana, rises in Benton co., and flows into the Wabash, opposite Attica. Stone coal and pine timber are abundant on its banks.

PINE CREEK, a township of Clinton co., Pennsylvania, on the left side of the Susquehanna river, about 22 miles W. from Williamsport. Population, 774.

PINE CREEK, a township of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania, 22 miles S. by E. from Clarion.

PINE CREEK, a post-office of Tioga co., Pa.

PINE CREEK, a post-office of Gilmer co., Va.

PINE CREEK, a post-office of Calhoun co., Michigan.

PINE CREEK, a post-township in the S. W. part of Ogle co., Illinois. Population, 924.

PINE FLAT, a post-office of Bossier par., La.

PINE GROVE, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

PINE GROVE, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, about 15 miles S. W. from Carlisle.

PINE GROVE, a village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles E. S. E. from Mercer.

PINE GROVE, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania. Total population, 2611.

PINE GROVE, a post-borough in the above township, on Swatara creek, at the head of navigation of the Union canal, 40 miles N. E. from Harrisburg. It is the principal shipping point for the coal which is obtained from the extensive mines of the Swatara coalfield. The strata vary in depth from 5 to 30 feet. A railroad has been constructed from the town to the mines. Population in 1850, 646; in 1853, about 700.

PINE GROVE, a township of Venango co., Pennsylvania, 60 miles S. S. E. from Erie. Population, 690.

PINE GROVE, a township of Warren co., Pennsylvania, 8 miles N. from Warren. Population, 1531.

PINE GROVE, a post-office of Wetzel co., Va.

PINE GROVE, a post-office of Franklin co., Mississippi.

PINE GROVE, a post-office of St. Tammany parish, Louisiana.

PINE GROVE, a post-office of Clarke co., Ky.

PINE GROVE, a post-office of Gallia co., O.

PINE GROVE, a town of Sierra co., California. Population, 504.

PINE GROVE MILLS, a post-village of Centre co., Pennsylvania, 90 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It contains three stores.

PINE HILL, a post-office of Washington co., Rhode Island.

PINE HILL, a village in Elba township, Genesee co., New York. It contains three churches, and several stores.

PINE HILL, a post-office of Ulster co., N. Y.

PINE HILL, a post-office of York co., Pa.

PINE HILL, a small village of Jefferson co., Georgia, 4 miles from Louisville.

PINE HILL, a post-village of Talbot co., Ga., about 25 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

PINE HILL, a post-office of Wilcox co., Ala.

PINE HILL, a post-office of Washita parish, Louisiana.

PINE HILL, a post-office of Rusk co., Texas.

PINE LAKE, Wisconsin, in Waukesha co. Length, two miles and a quarter; breadth, three quarters of a mile.

PINE LAKE, a post-office of Oakland co., Michigan, 28 miles N. W. from Detroit.

PINELAND, a post-office of Meigs co., Tenn.

PINE LEVEL, a post-office of Montgomery co., Alabama.

PINE LICK, a post-office of Clark co., Ind.

PINE LOG, a post-office of Cass co., Ga.

PINE MEADOW, a post-office of Litchfield co., Connecticut.

PINE PLAIN, a post-township in Allegan co., Michigan. Population, 34.

PINE PLAINS, a post-township in the N. part of Dutchess co., New York. Pop., 1416.

PINE PLAINS, a post-village in the above township, about 50 miles S. by E. from Albany. It contains a bank, and has several hundred inhabitants.

PINE PLAINS, a post-office of Ocean co., N. J.

PINE RIDGE, a post-office of Decatur co., Ga.

PINE RIVER, a small stream of Carroll co., in the E. part of New Hampshire, falls into the Ossipee lake.

PINE RIVER, of Michigan, rises near the border of Gratiot co., and flowing north-eastward, enters the Tittibawassee, in Midland co.

PINE RIVER, a small stream of Richland co., Wisconsin, flows into Wisconsin river.

PINE RIVER, a post-township of Waushara co., Wisconsin.

PINER'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Kenton co., Kentucky.

PINE RUN, a post-office of Genesee co., Mich.

PINE'S BRIDGE, a post-office of Westchester co., New York.

PINE STREET, a post-office of Elk co., Pa.

PINETOWN, a post-office of Cherokee co., Tex.

PINETREE, a post-office of Upslur co., Tex.

PINE VALLEY, a post-office of Chemung co., New York.

PINE VALLEY, a post-office of Warren co., Pa.

PINE VALLEY, a post-office of Yallabusha co., Mississippi.

PINE VALLEY, a township of La Crosse co., Wisconsin.

PINEVIEW, a post-office of Fauquier co., Va.

PINEVILLE, a post-office of Gloucester co., New Jersey.

PINEVILLE, a post-village of Bucks co., Pa.

PINEVILLE, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., North Carolina.

PINEVILLE, a post-village in Charleston district, South Carolina, 75 miles S. E. from Columbia.

PINEVILLE, a small post-village of Marion co., Ga., about 30 miles S. E. from Columbus.
 PINEVILLE, a post-village in Marengo co. Ala.
 PINEVILLE, a post-office of Bossier par., La.
 PINEVILLE, a post-office of Hocking co., O.
 PINEVILLE, a post-village of McDonald co., Missouri, on Elk river, which is navigable for small boats.

PINEWOODS, a post-office of Madison co., N. Y.
 PINEY, a post-township of Clarion co., Pennsylvania. Population, 910.

PINEY, a post-township in Johnson co., Arkansas. Population, 290.

PINEY CREEK, of Arkansas, rises near the N. extremity of Pope county, and flows into the Arkansas river from the left, on the W. border of the same county. Little Piney creek unites with it about 10 miles S. E. from Clarksville.

PINEY CREEK, a post-office of Carroll co., Maryland.

PINEY FORK, a township in Lawrence co., Arkansas. Population, 438.

PINEY GREEN, a small post-village of Onslow co., North Carolina.

PINEY GROVE, a post-office of Sampson co., North Carolina.

PINEY GROVE, a post-office of Hardeman co., Tennessee.

PINEY HEAD, a post-office of Appling co., Ga.

PINEY POINT, at the E. side of the Potomac river, about 14 miles from its mouth. On it is a fixed light, 25 feet high.

PINEY RIVER, a small stream in the W. central part of Tennessee, flows into Duck river, from the right, in Hickman county.

PINEY RIVER, or BIG PINEY, of Missouri. See GASCONADE.

PINGREE GROVE, a post-office of Kane co., Ill.

PINHOOK, a small village of Wayne co., Tenn.

PINHOOK, a post-office of Fleming co., Ky.

PINHOOK, a post-office of Lawrence co., Ind.

PINK HILL, a post-village of Lenoir co., N. C.

PINK HILL, a post-office of Marshall co., Miss.

PIN ISLAND BAYOU, Texas, flows into the Neches river from the W., a few miles N. from Beaumont.

PINKNEY, see PINCKNEY.

PINNELLVILLE, a post-office of Jones co., Miss.

PINOAK, a post-village in Dubuque co., Iowa, 80 miles N. E. by N. from Iowa City.

PINTLALA, or PINTELALALA, creek of Alabama, flows into Alabama river, from the S. E., 16 miles below Montgomery.

PINTLALA, a post-office of Montgomery co., Alabama.

PINTLER'S CORNERS, a post-office of Ottawa co., Michigan.

PINTUCKY, a post-office of Hancock co., Miss.

PINY. See PINEY.

PIONEER, a post-office of Williams co., Ohio.

PIONEER, a post-office of Greene co., Ill.

PIONEER GROVE, a post-village in Cedar co., Iowa, 25 miles N. E. from Iowa City.

PIONEER MILLS, a post-office of Cabarrus co., North Carolina, 155 miles from Raleigh.

PIPE CREEK, in the N. part of Maryland, rises in Carroll county, flows westward and south-westward, and enters the Monocacy river, in the N. central part of Frederick county. Little Pipe creek enters the stream just described, a few miles from its mouth.

PIPE CREEK, of Erie co., Ohio, flows into Sandusky bay, near Sandusky.

PIPE CREEK, of Indiana, a good stream for mills, flows from the S. into the Wabash river, 7 miles above Logansport.

PIPE CREEK, of Indiana, an affluent of White river in Madison county.

PIPE CREEK, a post-township in Madison co., Indiana. Population, 1502.

PIPE CREEK, a township in Miami co., Indiana. Population, 504.

PIPER'S GAP, a post-office of Carroll co., Va.

PIPERSVILLE, a post-office of Bucks co., Pa.

PIPESTONE, a post-office of Berrien co., Mich.

PIQUA, a flourishing post-town of Washington township, Miami county, Ohio, is beautifully situated on the right (W.) bank of the Great Miami river, 76 miles W. from Columbus, and 78 miles N. from Cincinnati. It is laid out with broad streets and uniform blocks. The Miami river describes a curve at this place leaving a level plateau between its margin and the town, while the opposite bank presents a somewhat abrupt acclivity. The town contains about 10 churches, a bank, and a town hall. Three newspapers are published here. The Miami canal connects it with Cincinnati and Toledo; and the river affords abundant water-power. A large amount of produce is shipped at this place. There are numerous mills and factories of various kinds in operation here, in some of which steam-power is used. The Dayton and Michigan railroad intersects the Columbus Piqua and Indiana railroad, at this place. Two bridges across the river connect Piqua with Rossville and Huntersville. Population in 1850, 3277; in 1853, about 4000.

PIQUEA, a post-village of Lancaster co., Pa.

PISCASSICK river, a small stream of Rockingham and Strafford counties, in the S. E. part of New Hampshire, falls into Lamprey river.

PISCATAQUA river is formed by the waters of the Salmon falls, the Coheco, and several other streams in Strafford county, New Hampshire, and running a S. S. E. course, falls into the Atlantic ocean, about 3 miles below Portsmouth. Through its whole length it forms the boundary between Maine and New Hampshire.

PISCATAQUIS RIVER, a good mill stream of Maine, rises in Somerset county, and flowing easterly through Piscataquis county, falls into the Penobscot river, in Penobscot county, near the centre of the state. Its length is about 65 miles.

PISCATAQUIS, a county forming the N. extremity of Maine, has an area of about 5500 square miles. It contains numerous lakes, the principal of which are Moosehead lake, the source of the Kennebec river, and Chesuncook lake. It is drained by the head waters of the St. John's and Piscataquis rivers, and traversed by the Penobscot. Most of the northern part of the county is still a densely wooded wilderness. The surface is generally undulating, with some mountains, of which the principal is Mount Katahdin. The soil is fertile, especially along the Piscataquis river. Lumber, Indian corn, potatoes, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 48,925 bushels of corn; 147,034 of potatoes; 171,220 of oats; 21,746 tons of hay, and 349,576 pounds of butter. There were 2 flannel factories, 1 woollen factory, 1 iron foundry, 3 grist mills, 14 saw and planing mills, and 2 slate quarries. It contained 19 churches, 6055 pupils attending public schools, and 303 attending academies or other schools. Organized in 1838. Capital, Dover. Population, 14,735.

PISCATAQUOQ river, of Hillsborough co., in the S. part of New Hampshire, falls into the Merrimack river.

PISCATAWAY, a township of Middlesex co., New Jersey, distant from New Brunswick about 5 miles. Population, 2875.

PISCATAWAY, a village in the above township, formerly the county seat for Somerset and Middlesex counties, contains 12 or 15 dwellings.

PISCATAWAY, a post-village of Prince George's co., Maryland, on the Piscataway river, 16 miles S. from Washington.

PISCOLA, a post-office of Lowndes co., Ga.

PISECO, or PIZECO, a small village of Hamilton co., New York, at the N. E. end of the lake of its own name, 73 miles N. N. W. from Albany.

PISECO, PIZECO, or PEZEECO LAKE, New York, in the S. part of Hamilton county, is 6 miles long, and from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 miles wide: it is the source of Sacondaga river.

PISGAH, a post-office of Butler co., Ohio.

PISGAH, a post-office of Cole co., Mo.

PISGAH, a village in Union co., Iowa, 150 miles S. W. by W. from Iowa City.

PISHON'S FERRY, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

PISHTAKA. See FOX RIVER.

PITCAIRN, a post-township of St. Lawrence co., New York, 31 miles S. S. W. from Canton. Population, 503.

PITCHER, a post-township on the W. border of Chenango co., New York. Pop., 1403.

PITCHER, a post-village in the above township, on Otselic river, 16 miles W. N. W. from Norwich.

PITCHER SPRINGS, a post-village of Chenango co., New York, about 125 miles W. from Albany.

PITCH LANDING, a post-village in Hertford co., N. C., 110 miles N. E. by E. from Raleigh.

PITMAN, a post-office of Schuylkill co., Pa.

PITT, a county in the E. central part of North Carolina: area estimated at 650 square miles. It is intersected by Tar river and Contentuey creek. The surface is nearly level; the soil is generally sandy. Indian corn, potatoes, and pork are the staples. Tar, turpentine, and other products of the pine are exported. In 1850 this county produced 458,478 bushels of corn, and 165,352 of sweet potatoes. There were 12 corn and flour mills, 23 tar and turpentine manufactories, and 1 turpentine distillery. It contained 13 churches; 1035 pupils attending public schools, and 56 attending other schools. The Tar river is navigable for small boats. Capital, Greenville. The county was formed from Beaufort as early as 1760, and named in honor of the celebrated William Pitt, afterwards Earl of Chatham. Population, 13,397, of whom 6764 were free, and 6633, slaves.

PITTMANSVILLE, a small village of Taylor co., Kentucky.

PITT'S LAKE, in the S. part of Oregon, near 118° W. lon. and 42° 10' N. lat. Length, about 40 miles; greatest breadth, 10 miles.

PITT RIVER rises in Shasta county, in the N. part of California, near the foot of the Sierra Nevada, and running in a general S. W. course, falls into Sacramento river, about 10 miles N. of Shasta city.

PITTSBOROUGH, a post-village, capital of Chatham county, North Carolina, 34 miles W. from Raleigh, and a few miles W. from Haw river. It contains a court house recently built, 2 or 3 churches, an academy, and several stores.

PITTSBOROUGH, a small post-village of Hendricks co., Indiana, on Whitelick creek, 19 miles N. W. from Indianapolis.

PITTSBURG, a post-township in Coos co., New Hampshire, 135 miles N. by E. from Concord. Population, 425.

PITTSBURG, a city, port of entry, and seat of justice of Alleghany county, Pennsylvania, is situated at the confluence of the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, which here form the Ohio, 357 miles W. from Philadelphia; 477 N. E. by E. from Cincinnati; 1174 E. N. E. from St. Louis, and 2025 miles N. E. from New Orleans. Lat. 40° 32' N., lon. 80° 2' W. The site comprises the triangular plain enclosed by the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, Grant's Hill, and several other elevations, which terminate the plain on the E. The general outline and many other features of this city bear a striking resemblance to the lower part of New York. Along the Monongahela the streets were laid out at right angles to each other, and extend either parallel or perpendicular to the river. The same plan was also adopted on the Alleghany side, by which arrangement the cross streets meet obliquely a few squares S. from the latter stream. The space included within these limits was found insufficient to meet the requirements of the rapidly increasing population, which soon extended itself to the opposite shores. Here have sprung up several large and flourishing towns, the most important of which are Alleghany City and Manchester, situated directly opposite the junction of the Alleghany river with the Ohio, and Birmingham, on the left bank of the Monongahela. In commercial and social interests, all these are identical with the city proper, and we should do Pittsburg injustice not to consider them as a part of the same community. The site of the city is a natural amphitheatre, being environed on all sides by beautiful hills, rising from 400 to 500 feet above the level of the Ohio, and filled with coal, iron, and limestone, the working of which into articles of utility constitutes the chief occupation of the inhabitants. These hills are not, except in a few instances, precipitous, and from their slopes and peaks afford a series of rich and varied landscapes. The scenery is in a most interesting manner strengthened in color by the fertility of the soil, which continues to the very summits. There is nothing of barrenness visible; vegetation in the forests, meadows, fields, orchards, and gardens, exhibits one panorama of abundance and beauty.

Pittsburg is handsomely built, principally of brick, and in the eastern section contains many beautiful residences. Indeed, no more delightful place of residence could be found than this, were it not for the disagreeable inconveniences arising from the use of bituminous coal. From innumerable chimneys are belched forth dense volumes of smoke, which fills the air for miles around, soiling the garments of persons in the streets, and discoloring the buildings, giving them a dark and sooty appearance.

Many of the public edifices of this city are splendid specimens of architecture. Of these, however, our limits will permit us to mention only a few. The court house, occupying the summit of Grant's Hill, is a massive stone structure of the Grecian Doric order, 165 feet long and 100 feet deep, adorned in front with a portico. The dome, which is 37 feet in diameter at the base, and 148 feet from the ground, affords a view in the highest degree varied and picturesque. The entire cost of the building was about $200,000. The new custom house, at the corner of Smithfield and Fifth streets, is a very large and costly building of freestone. It is now nearly completed, and contains an apartment for the city post-office, in addition to those appropriated to the business of the United States customs. Pittsburg has one of the finest hotels—the Monongahela House—in the United States, or perhaps in the world. It is a costly brick edifice, square, six stories high, and extends from Smithfield street to Water street, fronting the Monongahela river. Two fine market houses are now nearly completed, one of which is to contain a hall for public use, from 200 to 250 feet long, and about 100 feet wide. There are numerous other buildings deserving of notice, among which is the Pittsburg Theatre, a large edifice, with a very handsome front. The Western Penitentiary of Pennsylvania is located in Alleghany City, fronting on Ohio street. It is an immense stone building, in the ancient Norman style, and cost, at the time of its erection in 1827, $188,000. In front is a fine lawn. The United States Arsenal at Lawrenceville, on the left bank of the Alleghany river, about 2½ miles above Pittsburg, is an elegant edifice of stone, enclosed by spacious and beautifully ornamented grounds.

Pittsburg and its suburbs contain about 90 churches, of which upwards of 50 are in the city proper. Many of these are choice specimens of architectural beauty. The Catholic cathedral, at the corner of Grant and Fifth streets, near the court house, is a magnificent brick edifice, adorned with a lofty spire. St. Peter's church, (Episcopal,) also situated on Grant street, opposite the court house, is a fine Gothic structure, similar to St. Mark's church, Locust street, Philadelphia. Occupying the summit of Grant's Hill, these churches and the court house are imposing objects to one approaching the city from the Ohio. The First Presbyterian church, now being erected of freestone, on Wood street, when completed, will be one of the finest church edifices, it is said, in the United States.

The principal benevolent institutions are the Mercy Hospital, on Locust street; the Western Pennsylvania Hospital, a fine brick edifice, between Fisk and Ferguson streets, near Smith street, in the eastern part of Alleghany City, and two orphan asylums.

Among the literary and educational institutions may be mentioned the Theological Seminary of the Associate Reformed Church, founded at Pittsburg in 1823, and the Western Theological Seminary, in Alleghany City, both of which are in a highly prosperous condition. The latter, also established in 1828, under the direction of the Presbyterians, is situated on a prominent elevation commanding a view of the river and surrounding scenery. The edifice is 140 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 4 stories high, with wings three stories high. There are also several literary associations, of less prominence, most of which have fine libraries. The Western University of Pennsylvania, formerly located here, was destroyed by the great fire of 1845, since which it has ceased to exist. Within a few years past, an increased interest has been manifested in the subject of popular education. There are now upwards of 50 schools in the city, and nearly an equal number in the suburbs annually attended by about 12,000 pupils. The periodical press of Pittsburg is remarkable, especially for a city of such recent origin. There are now about 25 offices issuing newspapers and other publications, 11 of which are dailies. Three or four newspapers are also published in Alleghany City.

The commerce of the port is very extensive, and deserving of particular attention. The principal harbor is furnished by the Monongahela river, which has a greater depth of water than the Alleghany. The Ohio is navigable to the confluence of these streams for boats of light draught, except at short periods of very dry seasons, and a few days of the severest winters. It is not navigable, however, for boats of the largest class during any considerable portion of the year. The steamboats, therefore, constructed at Pittsburg, are adapted to the lowest possible draught of water, in order that they may transact business most of the entire year. Communicating with the Ohio and Mississippi valleys by means of the navigable waters of the Ohio river, and connected by railways and canals with the great lakes on the one hand, and with Philadelphia and the Atlantic on the other, Pittsburg is not only the great entrepôt of the entire trade of Pennsylvania with the West, but merchandise to a large amount from New York, destined for the cities along the Ohio and Mississippi, annually passes through this emporium. Besides its other great advantages, Pittsburg is about to derive important benefits from numerous railways which will soon go into operation in various portions of Western Pennsylvania. One of the most important of these is the Pittsburg and Olean railroad, which will communicate with some of the best agricultural counties in the state. To connect with this route, another road is about to be constructed from Buffalo to Olean, thereby connecting the western termini of the Pennsylvania canals with the western termini of the New York canals, and the head of Ohio navigation with the great port at the eastern terminus of navigation on Lake Erie.

The enrolled and licensed tonnage of the district, June 30, 1852, according to the custom-house returns, amounted to an aggregate of 64,156 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons, of which 57,782 $\frac{3}{4}$ were employed in steam navigation. In steam tonnage, therefore, Pittsburg is the third city in the Union, being surpassed only by New Orleans and New York.

The following comparative statement exhibits a few of the leading articles imported into Pittsburg by canal during the three years named, each ending December 31:—

ARTICLES.	1852.	1847.	1846.
Produce not specified, lbs...	858,231	1,257,620	871,500
Oats, bushels.....	43,087	21,360	19,000
Leather, lbs.....	237,616	312,239	386,325
Coffee, lbs.....	17,102,061	9,927,605	10,290,993
Dry goods, lbs.....	36,117,244	23,201,074	12,651,818
Groceries, lbs.....	17,883,792	7,833,925	6,923,856
Hardware, lbs.....	17,457,733	14,301,693	10,322,463
Iron, pig, lbs.....	20,225,538	21,979,353
" castings, lbs.....	814,500	124,662	15,410,661
" blooms, lbs.....	14,232,688	14,942,330	13,890,707
" bars and sheet, lbs.....	15,292,015	4,307	2,833,879
Nails and spikes, lbs.....	156,500	15,858,611	575,402
Fish, bbls.....	32,644	19,926	19,600

A comparative statement exhibiting a few of the leading articles exported from Pittsburg by canal during the three years named:—

ARTICLES.	1852.	1847.	1846.
Cotton, lbs.....	1,670,922	1,056,138	1,000,971
Hemp, lbs.....	1,165,031	3,311,618	1,287,886
Tobacco, unmanufactured, lbs	79,430,918	14,777,059	24,629,742
Groceries, lbs.....	1,724,070	1,978,822	1,571,859
Hardware, cutlery, lbs.....	433,669	246,897	239,353
Iron, pig, lbs.....	16,557,572	66,537	2,675,341
" castings, lbs.....	607,995	250,910
" blooms, lbs.....	411,629	13,836	333,702
Cast steel, lbs.....	7,964,436	54,416	319,736
Lead, lbs.....	5,000	188,078	325,085
Nails and spikes, lbs.....	3,083,636	81,769	82,732
Racon, lbs.....	39,586,694	12,713,427	21,061,236
Beef and pork, bbls.....	10,367	41,225	19,620
Butter, lbs.....	434,495	747,643	890,265
Flour, bbls.....	297,940	297,940	156,412
Lard and lard oil, lbs.....	5,995,693	5,319,378	2,929,284
Tallow, lbs.....	865,569	62,946	291,313

On the average, these figures indicate a very gratifying increase in the canal commerce of the city, but especially in the iron trade for 1852. In this fact, and in the greatly increased importations of dry goods and groceries, may be seen the evidence of the stimulation which the advanced prices have already imparted to the iron manufactures.

The receipts at Pittsburg by the Pennsylvania railroad, for the year 1851, amounted to 15,259,619 tons, and for 1852, 36,378,281 tons, of which 19,947,103 were dry goods, against 8,578,985 tons of similar commodities the previous year.

The extent of the steamboat commerce carried on through the Ohio, or the entire value of the exports and imports of Pittsburg, we are unable to determine, not having been able to procure statistics upon these subjects. We are assured, however, by intelligent gentlemen of that city, that the trade of 1853 will show an increase of at least 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ per cent. over that of any previous year. Should this seem exaggerated, some idea of the rapid growth in the river trade may be gained from the fact that during the year 1852 there were constructed at the various yards of Pittsburg no less than 69 steamers, with an aggregate burthen of 15,000 tons, all of which found sufficient and lucrative employment. Statistics also show that as many as one boat a week on the average has been completed at these yards for several years past. Owing to the increased facilities of communication, the trade with the lakes has doubled itself every year since 1844.

The manufactures of Pittsburg are immense, and capable of being extended almost indefinitely. Indeed there is no known limits to the elements necessary to their augmentation. Wood, coal, ores, and agricultural resources, all abound in the utmost profusion and at the greatest possible convenience. According to a memorial presented to Congress on behalf of the ironmasters of Pennsylvania, there were in the city and vicinity, in 1850, 16 establishments for the manufacture of iron, comprising 129 puddling furnaces, 85 heating furnaces, 59 trains for rolling iron, and 246 nail machines. Number of hands employed, 2161. Material annually consumed, 4,152,300 bushels of bituminous coal; 900 cords of wood; 50,366 tons of pig iron; 10,780 tons of bloom, and 4750 tons of scrap iron. Annual produce, 52,932 tons, consisting of bar, rod, hoop, boiler, and sheet iron, sheet steel, bar steel, nails, spikes, rods, shafts, anchors, and axles. All these works are operated by steam-power. Among the above, the rolling-mill of G. & J. H. Shoenberger may be mentioned as one of the most extensive. It comprised 14 puddling furnaces, 12 heating furnaces, 5 trains for rolling, 50 nail machines, and consumed annually 410,000 bushels bituminous coal, 5000 tons pig iron, and bloom and scrap 1000 tons each—producing 5500 tons of manufactured iron. Gaff, Lindsay & Co., Lyon, Shorb & Co., and Bailey, Brown & Co., also have large establishments, each producing from 4000 to 5000 tons of manufactured iron annually.

There were also in Pittsburg, in 1850, 30 large foundries and several smaller ones, with a capital of $2,000,000, yielding goods to the value of $2,000,000 annually; 33 manufactories of glassware, 8 of which produced flint glass annually amounting to $400,000; 5 white-lead factories, turning out 150,000 kegs, worth $200,000; 5 large cotton factories, and a number of smaller ones—capital, $1,500,000, yielding goods to the value of about $1,600,000 yearly; 1 copper-rolling mill and 1 copper-smelting establishment, annually producing $400,000 worth of various kinds of copper. Besides these, there were 7 vial furnaces, 2 extensive manufactories of locks, coffee-mills, scales, &c., and several for the production of various articles of steel manufacture, such as springs, saws, axes, anvils, and vices; and others for making gun-barrels and agricultural utensils. About 12,000,000 bushels of coal were annually consumed, and an equal quantity exported to neighboring markets, furnishing employment to 4000 persons. By the census of 1850, there were 819 manufactories in Pittsburg, and 120 in Alleghany city, employing 10,253 hands, and producing goods to the value of $11,883,427. There is, however, but little room to doubt that this is greatly understated. All statistics since compiled show very different results; and it is not improbable that the manufactories of 1853 will exceed $25,000,000. In 1840 there were in operation in Pittsburg and Alleghany city 32 furnaces and forges, with a capital of $1,437,000; the total capital then employed in manufactures was stated at $2,784,594.

There are 4 banks in Pittsburg, the condition of which, in November, 1852, was as follows:—Bills discounted, $3,670,248; specie and treasury notes, $495,433; due by other banks, $743,726; notes and checks of other banks, $122,309; real estate and personal property, $114,669; bonds and mortgages, and other securities, $78,727; stocks, $500; total resources, $6,010,769.

Pittsburg communicates with Alleghany city by means of three substantial bridges on piers and one wire suspension-bridge, and by a suspension-bridge and steam-ferry with Birmingham. Water of the purest quality is introduced from the Alleghany river. The reservoir, occupying an eminence N. E. of the court house, has a greater elevation probably than that of any similar reservoir in America, being 396 feet above the level of the Ohio. It is of great capacity, and supplied by steam-power. Gas, manufactured from bituminous coal, is furnished at a comparatively trifling cost, for lighting the city. The Alleghany cemetery, on the Alleghany river, 2 miles above Pittsburg, is one of the most beautiful places of the kind in the world. It comprises 110 acres, tastefully adorned, and enclosed by a wall of stone masonry.

Pittsburg is divided into 9 wards, and Alleghany City into 4, each town being governed by a mayor and common council.

History.—Fort Du Quesne, a French trading post, erected in 1754, formerly occupied the site where Pittsburg now stands. In 1758 an English expedition marched against this post, which was then regarded by the youthful Washington as the key of the West. An advanced detachment under Captain Grant having encamped on what is still known as Grant's Hill, was attacked and defeated by a party of French and Indians. But on the approach of General Forbes, with a force of 6200 men, the disheartened garrison set fire to the fort and descended the Ohio. The victorious troops, on entering, November 25th, by general acclamation called the place Pittsburg, in honor of Pitt, then prime minister. Pittsburg was founded in 1765. It became a county town in 1791, was incorporated a borough in 1804, and chartered as a city in 1816. April 10th, 1845, a great fire consumed a large part of the town, causing a destruction of property to the amount of $9,000,000. Notwithstanding this terrible calamity, the city has continued to increase in wealth and population almost beyond parallel. Population in 1810, 4768; 1820, 7248; 1830, 12,542; 1840, 21,115—Alleghany City, 10,089—Birmingham, 1554; city proper, in 1850, 46,601—Alleghany City, 21,261—Birmingham, 3742. By a local census, in January, 1853, Pittsburg and its suburbs contained a population of 110,241.

PITTSBURG, a post-village in Johnson co., Arkansas.

PITTSBURG, a flourishing village of Carroll county, Indiana, on the Wabash river, opposite Delphi. It has great water-power, produced by a dam across the river, and contains a foundry, woollen factory, and several mills. Population, 336.

PITTSBURG, a post-village of Hickory co., Mo., about 85 miles S. W. from Jefferson city.

PITTSBURG, a small post-village of Van Buren co., Iowa, on the right bank of Des Moines river, 78 miles S. S. W. of Iowa City.

PITTSFIELD, a post-township of Somerset co., Maine, about 35 miles N. E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 1166.

PITTSFIELD, a post-village in Merrimack co., New Hampshire, 12 miles N. E. from Concord, has 1 bank. Pop. of township, 1828.

PITTSFIELD, a post-township in Rutland co., Vermont, 40 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 512.

PITTSFIELD, a flourishing post-town of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, on the Western railroad, at the northern terminus of the Housatonic railroad, and southern terminus of the Pittsfield and North Adams railroad, 151 miles W. from Boston, and 49 miles E. S. E. from Albany. Lat. $42^{\circ} 26' 55''$ N., lon. $73^{\circ} 15' 36''$ W. It is delightfully situated at an elevation of upwards of a thousand feet above the level of the sea, and is handsomely laid out with streets intersecting each other at right angles. In the centre is a fine public square, on which front the principal hotels, the Berkshire Medical School, a flourishing institution founded in 1823, and the First Congregational church, completed in 1853. The latter is an elegant stone edifice, in the Gothic style. The South-street Congregational church is also a fine building. Pittsfield contains 8 churches, viz. 3 Congregational, 2 Methodist, 1 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, and 1 Roman Catholic; a bank, 3 newspaper offices, 3 railroad depôts, and about 60 stores. The Young Ladies' Institute, a very flourishing institution, occupies 3 handsome edifices, situate in the midst of spacious and beautifully ornamented grounds. The manufactures of Pittsfield are extensive, employing a large amount of capital. The leading articles are cotton and woollen goods, machinery, railroad cars, fire-arms, &c. Incorporated in 1761, and named in honor of William Pitt, Earl of Chatham. Population of the township in 1840, 3747; in 1850, 5872; and in 1853, about 6500.

PITTSFIELD, a post-township of Otsego co., New York, on the left bank of the Unadilla river, 86 miles W. from Albany. Pop., 1591.

PITTSFIELD, a post-township of Warren co., Pennsylvania, about 40 miles S. E. by E. from Erie. Population, 756.

PITTSFIELD, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the Big Brokenstraw creek, 220 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It has been built since 1840.

PITTSFIELD, a small village of Henry co., Ga., 75 miles W. N. W. from Milledgeville.

PITTSFIELD, a post-township in the S. W. part of Lorain co., Ohio; intersected by the West branch of Black river. Pop., 1088.

PITTSFIELD, a post-township in Washtenaw co., Michigan. Population, 1232.

PITTSFIELD, a post-village of Washtenaw co., Mich., about 40 miles W. by S. from Detroit.

PITTSFIELD, a neat and thriving post-village, capital of Pike county, Illinois, is situated on a prairie, 70 miles W. by S. from Springfield. It is surrounded by a rich farming country, diversified by prairies and timbered lands. It contains a court house, several churches, and 2 newspaper offices. Population in 1853, about 800.

PITTSFIELD, a township in Brown co., Wisconsin. Population, 198.

PITTSFORD, a post-village of Rutland co., Vermont, 45 miles S. W. from Montpelier, on the Rutland and Burlington railroad, contains several churches. Pop. of the township, 2026.

PITTSFORD, a post-village in Pittsford township, Monroe county, New York, on the Erie canal and the Rochester and Syracuse railroad, 10 miles S. E. from Rochester. It contains 2 or 3 churches, and several warehouses. Population of the township, 2061.

PITTSFORD, a township in the S. E. part of Hillsdale co., Michigan. Population, 1223.

PITTSFORD, a post-township of Salem co., New Jersey, about 55 miles S. W. by W. from Trenton. Population, 1151.

PITT'S POINT, a post-office of Bullitt co., Ky.

PITSTON, a post-township in Kennebec co., Maine, on the E. side of Kennebec river, about 15 miles S. by E. from Augusta. It is noted for its shipbuilding. Pop. 2823.

PITSTON, a post-township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. E. from Wilkesbarre. Population, 4049.

PITSTON, a flourishing post-village in the above township, on the North branch of the Susquehanna, just below the mouth of the Lackawanna river, 9 or 10 miles above Wilkesbarre. It is situated in the Valley of Wyoming, and in the vicinity of rich mines of anthracite coal. The village owes its rapid growth chiefly to the mining operations of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the iron business. Coal and produce are shipped at this place on the West Branch canal. A newspaper is published here. A new plank-road connects Pittston with Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Population in 1853, about 2000.

PITSTON FERRY, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

PITSTOWN, a post-township of Rensselaer co., New York, 22 miles N. E. from Albany. Population, 3732.

PITSTOWN, a post-village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, about 8 miles N. W. from Flemington.

PITSTOWN, a village of Bullitt co., Kentucky, at the junction of Salt river with its Rolling fork, 60 miles W. S. W. of Frankfort.

PITTSYLVANIA, a county in the S. part of Virginia, bordering on North Carolina, has an area of about 1000 square miles. The Staunton river forms its N. boundary; the Banister river flows through the middle, and the S. border is crossed several times by the meanderings of the Dan. The surface is diversified by valleys and hills, and the soil is excellent. Tobacco, Indian corn, and wheat are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 4,700,757 pounds of tobacco; 653,815 bushels of corn, and 123,934 of wheat. There were 25 flour, grist, and saw mills, 43 tobacco factories, 7 tanneries, and 3 distilleries. It contained 50 churches, 1 newspaper office; 697 pupils attending public schools, and 112 attending other schools. A mine of iron ore has lately been opened here, and is said to be very rich. Limestone is abundant. The rivers furnish extensive motive-power. A railroad has been partly constructed from Richmond to Danville, the chief town of the county. Organized in 1767. Capital, Competition. Population 28,796, of whom 15,998 were free, and 12,798, slaves.

PITTSYLVANIA COURT HOUSE. See COMPETITION.

PISECO VILLAGE, New York. See PISECO.

PLACER, plâ-sair', a county toward the N. part of California, bordering on Utah, has an area of about 1200 square miles. It is bounded on the S. by the Middle fork of American river, and on the N. by Bear river, which afford valuable water-power. The surface in the E. part is uneven, being traversed by the Sierra Nevada, or Snowy Range. But little attention has yet been paid to agriculture. Barley, oats, horses, and pork are the principal productions. In 1852 there were raised 14,290 bushels of barley and 610 of oats. There were 648 horses, and 1261 hogs. The number of acres under cultivation was 679. Gold is abundant in this county, and capital amounting to upward of $1,400,000 is invested in mining, principally for this precious metal. Capital, Vernon. Population, 10,784.

PLACER MOUNTAIN, in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico, about 20 miles S. W. from Santa Fe. Its latitude is about 35° 25' N., and its lon. 106° 20' W.

PLACERES, a village in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico, on the left bank of the Rio del Norte.

PLACERVILLE, a post-village of Eldorado co., California, about 90 miles E. N. E. from Vallejo. It is chiefly a mining settlement. Population of the village and vicinity, in 1850, 5623.

PLAIN, a post-office of Greenville dis., S. C.

PLAIN, a township forming the N. extremity of Franklin co., Ohio. Pop., 1393.

PLAIN, a township in the central part of Stark co., Ohio. Population, 2211.

PLAIN, a post-township in the S. W. part of Wayne co., Ohio. Population, 2375.

PLAIN, a township in the W. central part of Wood co., Ohio. Population, 492.

PLAIN, a township in Kosciusko co., Indiana. Population, 868.

PLAINFIELD, a post-township in Sullivan co., New Hampshire, 50 miles N. W. from Concord. Population, 1392.

PLAINFIELD, a post-township in Washington co., Vermont, 8 miles E. from Montpelier. Population, 808.

PLAINFIELD, a post-village in the above township, near Onion river, contains several churches.

PLAINFIELD, a post-township in Hampshire co., Massachusetts, 110 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population, 814.

PLAINFIELD, a post-village in Windham co., Connecticut, on the Norwich and Worcester railroad, 45 miles E. from Hartford, contains an academy. Pop. of the township, 2732.

PLAINFIELD, a post-township of Otsego co., New York, 15 miles N. W. from Cooperstown. Population, 1450.

PLAINFIELD, a post-village in Westfield township, Essex co., New Jersey, on Green brook and on the Central railroad, 20 miles W. S. W. from Newark, and 11 N. from New Brunswick. It is pleasantly situated, and surrounded by a rich farming country. It contains 7 or 8 churches, belonging to the Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Friends, and Seventh-day Baptists; 2 boarding-schools, a mutual insurance company, and several hat factories. Two newspapers are published here. Laid out in 1735. Population in 1853, estimated at 2000.

PLAINFIELD, a post-office of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

PLAINFIELD, a township of Northampton co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles N. by W. from Easton. Population, 1753.

PLAINFIELD, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

PLAINFIELD, a post-village of Coshocton co., Ohio, on Wills creek, 80 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

PLAINFIELD, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Allegan co., Michigan. Pop., 659.

PLAINFIELD, a township in the N. W. part of Kent co., Michigan, intersected by the Grand river.

PLAINFIELD, a post-office of Livingston co., Michigan.

PLAINFIELD, a post-village of Hendricks co., Indiana, on the Terre Haute and Indianapolis railroad, where it crosses White Lick creek, 14 miles S. W. from Indianapolis. Population, 251.

PLAINFIELD, a post-township in Will co., Illinois. Population, 1093.

PLAINFIELD, a post-village in the above township, 155 miles N. E. by N. from Springfield.

PLAIN GROVE, a post-office of Lawrence co., Pennsylvania.

PLAINSBOROUGH, a small village of Middlesex co., New Jersey, 14 miles N. E. from Trenton, contains a grist mill and 10 or 12 dwellings.

PLAINS OF DURA, a post-office of Sumter co., Georgia, 110 miles S. W. from Milledgeville.

PLAINSVILLE, a post-village of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna river, about 6 miles above Wilkesbarre.

PLAINVIEW, a post-office of King and Queen co., Virginia.

PLAINVIEW, a post-office of Macoupin co., Illinois.

PLAINVILLE, a village of Providence co., Rhode Island, 20 miles N. W. from Providence. It contains 1 cotton mill, with 2232 spindles and 52 looms. Pop., about 100.

PLAINVILLE, a post-village of Hartford co., Connecticut, on Farmington river, and at the intersection of the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill railroad with the New Haven and Northampton railroad, about 15 miles S. W. from Hartford. It contains 2 churches, 2 stores, and a lumber-yard.

PLAINVILLE, a post-village of Onondaga co., New York, about 18 miles W. N. W. from Syracuse.

PLAINVILLE, a village of Somerset co., New Jersey, 20 miles N. E. from Trenton.

PLAINVILLE, a post-village and railway station of Hamilton co., Ohio, on the Little Miami railroad, 10 miles E. by N. from Cincinnati.

PLAINWELL, a post-office of Allegan co., Mich.

PLAISTOW, a post-village in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, on the Boston and Maine railroad, 35 miles S. E. from Concord. Population of the township, 748

PLANK RIDGE, a small village of Camden co., North Carolina.

PLANK-ROAD, a post-office of Onondaga co., New York.

PLANK-ROAD, a post-office of Wayne co., Michigan.

PLANO, a post-office of Collin co., Texas.

PLANTERS, a post-village of Attala co., Miss.

PLANTERS, a township in Chicot co., Arkansas. Population, 497.

PLANTERS, a post-township in Phillips co., Arkansas. Population, 687.

PLANTER'S HALL, a post-office of Breckenridge co., Kentucky, about 125 miles W. S. W. from Frankfort.

PLANTER'S HILL, a post-office of Jennings co., Indiana.

PLANTER'S STAND, a post-office of Madison co., Georgia.

PLANTERSVILLE, a post-village of Perry co., Alabama, 77 miles S. from Tuscaloosa.

PLANTERSVILLE, a small village of Georgetown district, South Carolina, near Great Pedee river, about 20 miles N. by E. from Georgetown. It is a place of summer resort.

PLANTSVILLE, a railroad station in Branford township, New Haven county, Connecticut, on the New Haven and New London railroad, 7 miles E. by S. from New Haven.

PLAQUEMINE, plak'meen', a parish forming the S. E. extremity of Louisiana, bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, at the mouth of the Mississippi, by which it is intersected. Area about 900 square miles. The surface is level, and elevated only a few feet above the gulf. A large part of the parish, near the Balize, is occupied by extensive marshes, which produce nothing but tall reeds. The soil of the higher portions is fertile. Sugar, rice, and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this parish produced 16,835 hogsheads of sugar; 589,130 gallons of molasses; 149,090 bushels of corn, and 1,536,740 pounds of rice, being the greatest quantity of that article raised in any parish of the state. It contained 2 churches, 280 pupils attending public schools, and 83 attending academies or other schools. Population, 7590, of whom 2611 were free, and 4779 slaves.

PLAQUEMINE, a post-village and former capital of Iberville parish, Louisiana, on the right bank of Mississippi river, at the egress of Plaquemine bayou, 112 miles above New Orleans. It has a steamboat landing and an active business in shipping cotton.

PLAQUEMINE BAYOU, Louisiana, an outlet of Mississippi river, commences at Plaquemine, on the right bank, and flowing S. W., unites with Atchafalaya bayou. The Mississippi flows into this bayou only in the highest stages. Its whole length is perhaps 10 or 12 miles.

PLAQUEMINE BRULEE, a bayou of Louisiana, commences near Opelousas, and flowing S. W., unites with the Mermentau.

PLAQUEMINE, a post-office of St. Landry co., Louisiana.

PLATEA, Pennsylvania. See LOCKPORT.

PLATO, a post-village of Cattaraugus co., N. Y., about 40 miles S. by E. from Buffalo.

PLATO, a post-office of Lorain co., Ohio.

PLATO, a post-village of Iroquois co., Illinois, on the Iroquois river, about 75 miles S. by W. from Chicago.

PLATO, a township in Kane co., Illinois. Population, 813.

PLATTE river, of Michigan, rises in the N. W. part of the peninsula, and flows into Lake Michigan in lat. 45° N.

PLATTE river, of Iowa and Missouri, rises in the S. part of the former state, and enters Missouri near the N. W. corner of Gentry county. Below this point its general course is southward; it falls into Missouri river in Platte county, 12 miles above the mouth of Kansas river. It is sometimes called Little Platte. Branches.—Smith's fork enters the Platte from the left, in Platte county, several miles N. E. from Platte City. Third fork enters the main stream on its left bank, in Buchanan county.

PLATTE, a small river of Wisconsin, flows through Grant county, and enters the Mississippi about 9 miles above Dubuque. Rich mines of lead are opened along its banks.

PLATTE, or NEBRASKA, the longest of the affluents of the Missouri, rises in the Rocky mountains, by two branches, termed the North and South forks, which unite about 800 miles from the source of the former, or principal branch. It flows in a general easterly course, and empties itself into the Missouri in about 40° 50' N. lat., and 96° W. lon. The whole length, including that of the North fork, is about 1200 miles. As its name Platte (i. e. "shallow") signifies, it has little depth of water, and except in floods, can be forded in almost every part. During the dry season, the channel of this river is said to exhibit nothing but a succession of shallow pools. It is full of islands, some of which are many miles in length, and in some places it is three miles wide.

PLATTE, a county in the W. N. W. part of Missouri, has an area of 416 square miles. It is bounded on the S. W. by the Missouri river, and traversed from N. to S. by Little Platte river, from which it derives its name. The surface is diversified by forests and undulating prairies; the soil is very productive, and extensively cultivated. Hemp, tobacco, Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, and pork are the staples. By the census of 1850 Platte county produced more hemp than any other county in the Union, more wheat and butter than any other in Missouri, and more corn than any other in the state excepting Buchanan. The produce of that year was 1,814,287 bushels of corn; 129,067 of wheat; 127,392 of oats; 4355 tons of hemp; 3551 of hay, and 959,811 pounds of butter. It contained 15 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 1784 pupils attending public schools, and 200 attending other schools. Platte county is the most populous in the state excepting St. Louis. The inhabitants carry on a profitable trade with the Indian tribes. Capital, Platte City. Population, 14,845; of whom 14,047 were free, and 2798, slaves.

PLATTE, a township in Andrew co., Missouri. Population, 2290.

PLATTE, a township in Buchanan co., Missouri. Population, 881.

PLATTE CITY, a post-village, capital of Platte county, Missouri, is situated on the river of the same name, 200 miles W. N. W. of Jefferson City, and 7 miles E. of the Missouri river. Population, in 1853, about 600.

PLATTEKILL, a post-township in the S. E. part of Ulster county, New York, contains a village of the same name. Population, 1998.

PLATTE RIVER, a post-office of Buchanan county, Missouri.

PLATTEVILLE, a thriving post-village of Grant county, Wisconsin, on a small affluent of Platte river, about 22 miles N. from Galena, and 78 miles W. S. W. from Madison. It is surrounded by extensive lead mines, and is one of the principal places in the county. The land in the vicinity is excellent, and much improved. Platteville was incorporated in 1841. It has an academy, several churches, and two smelting furnaces. Population in 1853, about 1200.

PLATTSBURG, a post-village in Plattsburg township, and capital of Clinton county, New York, is situated on both sides of the Saranac river, at its entrance into Cumberland bay of Lake Champlain, about 160 miles N. by E. from Albany. The Plattsburg and Montreal railroad connects it with Montreal, and steamboats ply to the several ports on Lake Champlain. The village contains churches of four or five denominations, 2 banks, an academy, and two or three newspaper offices. The shipping of the port, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 6258 $\frac{1}{5}$ tons enrolled and licensed, of which 1701 $\frac{1}{5}$ tons were employed in steam navigation. It is a place of active trade, and has manufactories of cotton, wool, machinery, &c. The river furnishes extensive water-power. A battle was fought on the bay in September, 1814, which resulted in the capture of the British fleet. Population of the township, 5618.

PLATTSBURG, a post-village, capital of Clinton co., Missouri, on Smith's fork of Platte river, about 175 miles W. N. W. from Jefferson City.

PLATTVILLE, a post-office of Kendall co., Ill.

PLAZA ARRIBA, a village on the left bank of the Rio del Norte, in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico.

PLEASANT, a township of Warren co., Pennsylvania, 63 miles S. E. by E. from Erie. Population, 240.

PLEASANT, a post-office of Claiborne co., Tennessee.

PLEASANT, a township in the S. part of Brown co., Ohio. Population, 1456.

PLEASANT, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Clark co., Ohio. Pop., 1349.

PLEASANT, a township in the N. part of Fairfield co., Ohio. Population, 2011.

PLEASANT, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Franklin co., Ohio. Pop., 962.

PLEASANT, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Hancock co., Ohio. Pop., 522.

PLEASANT, a township in the central part of Hardin co., Ohio. Population, 1059.

PLEASANT, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Henry co., Ohio. Pop., 338.

PLEASANT, a township in the S. part of Knox co., Ohio. Population, 909.

PLEASANT, a township in Logan co., Ohio. Population, 806.

PLEASANT, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Madison co., Ohio. Pop., 1184.

PLEASANT, a township in the S. E. part of Marion co., Ohio. Population, 1198.

PLEASANT, a post-township in the S. E. part of Putnam co., Ohio. Population, 714.

PLEASANT, a township in the N. part of Seneca co., Ohio; intersected by the Sandusky river. Population, 1592.

PLEASANT, a township in the central part of Van Wert co., Ohio. Population, 619.

PLEASANT, a post-office of Kent co., Mich.

PLEASANT, a township in Allen co., Indiana. Population, 658.

PLEASANT, a township in Grant co., Indiana. Population, 1082.

PLEASANT, a township in Johnson co., Indiana. Population, 1270.

PLEASANT, a township in La Porte co., Indiana. Population, 632.

PLEASANT, a township in Porter co., Indiana. Population, 311.

PLEASANT, a post-township in Switzerland co., Indiana. Population, 2211.

PLEASANT, a township in Wabash co., Indiana. Population, 1312.

PLEASANT BROOK, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

PLEASANT CREEK, a post-office of Taylor co., Virginia.

PLEASANT DALE, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.

PLEASANT EXCHANGE, a small post-village of Henderson co., Tennessee, 110 miles W. S. W. from Nashville.

PLEASANT FLAT, a post-office of Mason co., Virginia.

PLEASANT GAP, a post-office of Centre co., Pa.

PLEASANT GAP, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

PLEASANT GAP, a post-office of Cherokee co., Alabama.

PLEASANT GAP, a post-village of Bates co., Mo., 65 miles S. S. W. from Independence.

PLEASANT GARDEN, a small village of McDowell co., North Carolina.

PLEASANT GREEN, a small village of Daviess co., Kentucky.

PLEASANT GREEN, a post-village of Cooper co., Missouri, about 90 miles E. by S. from Independence.

PLEASANT GROVE, a small post-village of Morris co., New Jersey, 21 miles W. from Morristown, contains a church.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Alleghany co., Maryland.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Lunenburg co., Va., 89 miles S. W. from Richmond.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Alamance co., North Carolina.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Effingham co., Georgia.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Pickens co., Alabama.

PLEASANT GROVE, a small village of Macon co., Mississippi.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-village of Madison co., Mississippi.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of De Soto parish, Louisiana.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Maury co., Tennessee.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Ohio co., Ky., about 155 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Jasper co., Indiana.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Macoupin co., Illinois.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-village in Keokuk co., Iowa, near Skunk river, 40 miles S. W. from Iowa City.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Kenosha co., Wisconsin.

PLEASANT GROVE, a post-office of Utah co., Utah Territory.

PLEASANT GROVE MILLS, a post-office of Fleming co., Kentucky.

PLEASANT HALL, a village of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, 45 miles W. S. W. from Harrisburg. It has about 100 inhabitants.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of New Castle co., Delaware.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Fayette co., Virginia.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Northampton co., North Carolina.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-village of Lancaster district, South Carolina.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Talbot co., Georgia, 44 miles N. E. from Columbus.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Dallas co., Alabama.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of De Soto co., Mississippi.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of De Soto parish, Louisiana.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Hopkins co., Texas.

PLEASANT HILL, a small post-village of Franklin co., Arkansas.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Mercer co., Kentucky.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Miami co., O.

PLEASANT HILL, a finely situated post-village of Montgomery co., Indiana, 58 miles W. N. W. from Indianapolis.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-village of Pike co., Ill., about 80 miles W. S. W. from Springfield.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-village of Cass co., Mo., about 36 miles S. W. from Lexington.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Van Buren co., Iowa.

PLEASANT HILL, a post-office of Lane co., Oregon.

PLEASANT HOPE, a post-office of Polk co., Missouri.

PLEASANT LAKE, New York. See LAKE PLEASANT.

PLEASANT LAKE, a post-office of Steuben co., Indiana.

PLEASANT LANE, a post-office of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

PLEASANT LEVEL, a post-office of Lee co., Georgia.

PLEASANT MILLS, a village of Atlantic co., New Jersey, on the Little Egg Harbor river, 15 miles nearly N. from May's Landing, has a small Roman Catholic church.

PLEASANT MILLS, a post-township in Adams co., Indiana. Population, 71.

PLEASANT MOUNT, a post-office of Wayne co., Pennsylvania.

PLEASANT MOUNT, a post-office of Panola co., Mississippi.

PLEASANT MOUNT, a post-office of Miller co., Missouri.

PLEASANT OAKS, a post-office of Brunswick co., Virginia.

PLEASANT OAKS, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., North Carolina.

PLEASANTON, a post-village of Itawamba co., Mississippi.

PLEASANTON, a post-office of Athens co., O.

PLEASANT PARK, a small post-village of Carroll co., Missouri.

PLEASANT PLAIN, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

PLEASANT PLAIN, a post-village of Jefferson co., Iowa, 45 miles S.S.W. from Iowa City.

PLEASANT PLAINS, a post-village of Dutchess co., New York, 66 miles S. from Albany.

PLEASANT PLAINS, a post-office of Cumberland co., North Carolina.

PLEASANT PLAINS, a small post-village of Independence co., Arkansas, about 15 miles S. from Batesville.

PLEASANT PLAINS, a post-office of Lincoln co., Tennessee.

PLEASANT PLAINS, a post-office of Sangamon co., Illinois.

PLEASANT PLAINS, a post-village of Scott co., Missouri, about 30 miles W. from the mouth of the Ohio river.

PLEASANT PRAIRIE, a post-village of Greene co., Mo., 22 miles E. N. E. from Springfield.

PLEASANT PRAIRIE, a post-township of Kenosha co., Wisconsin. Population, 959.

PLEASANT PRAIRIE, a post-village in the above township, 7 miles S. W. from Kenosha.

PLEASANT RETREAT, a post-office of Lumpkin co., Georgia.

PLEASANT RETREAT, a post-office of Scotland co., Missouri.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a post-office of Greene co., Alabama.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a post-office of Tippah co., Mississippi.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a post-office of Bracken co., Kentucky.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a post-office of Hamilton co., Ohio.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a post-office of Greene co., Indiana.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a small post-village of Rock Island co., Illinois.

PLEASANT RIDGE, a small village of Lee co., Iowa, about 28 miles N. from Keokuk.

PLEASANT RUN, a creek of Texas, flows into the Trinity river from the W. in Dallas co.

PLEASANT RUN, a post-office of Dallas co. Tex.

PLEASANT RUN, a small village of Montgomery co., Kentucky.

PLEASANT RUN, a post-office of Hamilton co., Ohio.

PLEASANT RUN, a township in Lawrence co., Indiana. Population, 1342.

PLEASANTS, a new county in the N. W. part of Virginia, bordering on the Ohio river, which separates it from the State of Ohio. The surface is hilly, the soil generally fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and cattle are the staples. This county is not named in the census of 1850, having been formed since that year out of parts of Wood, Tyler, and Ritchie counties. Capital, St. Mary's.

PLEASANT SHADE, a post-office of Smith co., Tennessee.

PLEASANT SHADE, a post-office of Perry co., Illinois.

PLEASANT SITE, a post-office of Franklin co., Alabama.

PLEASANT SPRING, a post-office of Kemper co., Mississippi.

PLEASANT SPRING, a post-office of Howard co., Indiana.

PLEASANT SPRING, a township in Dane co., Wisconsin. Population, 732.

PLEASANT SPRINGS, a post-office of Lexington district, South Carolina.

PLEASANT UNITY, a post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 38 miles E. S. E. from Pittsburg.

PLEASANT VALE, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

PLEASANT VALE, a post-village in Pike co., Ill., 90 miles W. by S. from Springfield.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Chittenden co., Vermont.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-village in Litchfield co., Connecticut.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-village of Pleasant Valley township, Dutchess co., New York, on Wappinger's creek, 7 miles N. E. from Poughkeepsie. It has several churches and mills. Population of the township, 2226.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Sussex co., New Jersey.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a township of Potter co., Pennsylvania. Population, 73.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Fairfax co., Va., 30 miles W. from Washington.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-village of Lancaster district, South Carolina.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Washington co., Alabama.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Yell co., Arkansas.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Wayne co., Tennessee.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a village of Madison co., Ohio, has 200 inhabitants.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Morgan co., Ohio.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Jo Daviess co., Illinois.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-office of Wright co., Missouri.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a small post-village of Scott co., Iowa.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a post-township in Marquette co., Wisconsin. Population, 766.

PLEASANT VALLEY MILLS, a post-office of Nicholas co., Kentucky.

PLEASANT VIEW, a post-office of Juniata co., Pennsylvania.

PLEASANT VIEW, a post-office of Jackson co., Virginia.

PLEASANT VIEW, a post-office of Darlington district, South Carolina.

PLEASANT VIEW, a thriving post-village of Shelby co., Indiana, on the Lawrenceburg and Mississippi railroad, 15 miles S. E. from Indianapolis.

PLEASANT VIEW, a small post-village of Schuyler co., Illinois, on the road between Rushville and the Illinois river.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-village of Westchester co., N. Y., 122 miles S. from Albany.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-office of Bucks co., Pennsylvania.

PLEASANTVILLE, a small village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-office of Harford co., Maryland.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-village in Rockingham co., North Carolina.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-village in Hickman co., Tennessee.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, 30 miles S. E. from Columbus.

PLEASANTVILLE, a small village of Cumberland co., Illinois.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-village of Fulton co., Illinois, near Spoon river, about 50 miles N. W. from Springfield.

PLEASANTVILLE, a post-village in Marion co., Iowa, 100 miles W. S. W. from Iowa City.

PLEASANT WOODS, a post-office of Delaware co., Indiana.

PLEASURESVILLE, a post-village of Henry co., Kentucky, on the railroad from Louisville to Frankfort, 45 miles E. from the former.

PLEMMON'S MILL, a small village of Carroll co., Missouri.

PLENTITUDE, a post-office of Anderson co., Texas.

PLESIS, a post-village of Jefferson co., N. Y., about 38 miles S. W. by S. from Ogdensburg.

PLINY, a post-office of Putnam co., Va.

PLINY, a post-office of Greenville dis., S. C.

PLOVER, a post-township in Portage co., Wisconsin. Population, 451.

PLOVER, a post-village, capital of Portage county, Wisconsin, is situated on the Wisconsin river, at the mouth of Plover river, 125 miles N. from Madison. The Wisconsin river is bordered by large forests of pine, and the lumber business is carried on here. Settled about 1836. Plover contains 2 hotels and 2 stores. Population in 1853, 300.

PLOWDEN'S MILLS, a post-village of Sumter district, South Carolina.

PLUCKEMIN, a post-village of Somerset co., New Jersey, about 6 miles N. N. W. from Somerville. Population, 200.

PLUM, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, about 16 miles E. from Pittsburg. Population, 1241.

PLUM, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Venango county, Pennsylvania. Population, 835.

PLUM, a post-office of Cook co., Illinois.

PLUMAS, a small town of Sutter co., California, is situated on the right bank of Feather river, nearly opposite the mouth of Bear river, about 40 miles N. from Sacramento City.

PLUM BAYOU, a post-township in Jefferson co., Arkansas. Population, 756.

PLUM BAYOU, a small post-village of Jefferson co., Arkansas.

PLUMB BROOK, a post-office of Macomb co., Michigan.

PLUMB CREEK, Pennsylvania, flows into Crooked creek, in Armstrong county.

PLUMB CREEK, a post-office of Caldwell co., Texas.

PLUMB ISLAND, in Long Island sound, near its eastern entrance. It contains a revolving light 63 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 41° 10' 18" N., lon. 72° 13' 12" W.

PLUM CREEK, of Texas, flows into San Marcos river from the N., at the S. extremity of Caldwell county.

PLUM CREEK, a township of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania, about 38 miles S. by E. from Clarion. Population, 2220.

PLUM CREEK, a post-office of Clinton co., Mo.

PLUMER, a post-office of Venango co., Pa.

PLUM GROVE, a post-office of Fayette co., Texas.

PLUM HILL, a post-office of Washington co., Illinois.

PLUMMER'S MILL, a post-office of Fleming co., Kentucky.

PLUM RIVER, a post-village in Jo Daviess co., Illinois, 145 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

PLUMSTEAD, a township of Ocean co., New Jersey. Population, 1613.

PLUMSTEAD, a post-township of Bucks co., on the right side of the Delaware river, 10 miles N. from Doylestown. Pop., 2298.

PLUMSTEADVILLE, a post-office of Bucks co., Pennsylvania.

PLUMVILLE, a village of Indiana co., Pennsylvania, 170 miles W. by N. from Harrisburg. It has 2 stores.

PLUNKETT'S CREEK, a township of Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, 19 miles N. W. from Williamsport. Population, 189.

PLUNKETT'S CREEK, a township of Sullivan co., Pennsylvania, about 45 miles N. E. by E. from Lockhaven. Population, 199.

PLYMOUTH, a county in the E. part of Massachusetts, has an area of about 720 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Atlantic ocean and Cape Cod bay, and is drained by the Taunton and North rivers and other smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. It has a seacoast of upwards of 30 miles, indented with numerous bays, which afford excellent harbors. The industry and enterprise of the county are chiefly directed to the coasting trade and the fisheries. The soil is generally poorer than in the other counties of the state. Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 105,243 bushels of corn; 208,402 of potatoes; 28,532½ tons of hay, and 374,816 pounds of butter. There were 6 cotton and 2 woollen factories, 10 nail manufactories, 12 tack establishments, 18 iron foundries, 5 iron forges, 8 manufactories of edge tools, 116 of boots and shoes, 5 of farming implements, 4 of straw braid and bonnets, 16 of wooden ware, 6 tanneries, 8 tin and sheet-iron works, 20 grist mills, and 31 saw mills. It contained 109 churches, 4 newspaper offices; 10,667 pupils attending public schools, and 513 attending academies and other schools. Plymouth county abounds in iron ore of excellent quality. It is intersected by different railroads centering in Boston. Organized in 1835, and named from Plymouth, a town of England. Capital, Plymouth. Population, 55,697.

PLYMOUTH, a county in the W. N. W. part of Iowa, has an area of about 930 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Sioux river, and drained by Floyd's river, an affluent of the Missouri, with its tributaries. Plymouth county is not included in the census of 1850. County seat not located.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township in Penobscot co., Maine, 45 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 925.

PLYMOUTH, a post-village and semi-capital of Grafton county, New Hampshire, near the confluence of Pemigewasset and Baker's rivers, and on the Boston Concord and Montreal railroad, 51 miles N. by W. from Concord. Population of the township, 1290.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township in Windsor co., Vt., 55 miles S. from Montpelier. Pop., 1226.

PLYMOUTH, a post-town, port of entry, and seat of justice of Plymouth county, Massachusetts, is situated on Plymouth bay, at the southern terminus of the eastern branch of the Old Colony railroad, 37 miles S. by E. from Boston. Lat. 41° 57' 26" N., lon. 70° 40' 19" W. It is well laid out, and for the most part compactly built, principally of wood. Although it is the oldest town in New England, being the first settled by the Pilgrims, yet it is entirely modern in the style of its buildings: not a single antique dwelling now remains. The most remarkable public edifice is Pilgrim's Hall, erected by the Pilgrim Society in 1824-5, and situate on Court street, a little N. of Court square. It is constructed of granite, 70 feet by 40, with a Doric portico in front. In the interior is a large hall, containing the society's cabinet of curiosities, and numerous historical paintings. The Pilgrim Society was organized in 1820, the object of which was to commemorate the landing of the pilgrim fathers. The "Forefathers' Rock," or that on which the 101 persons, disembarking from the Mayflower, December 22, 1620, first set foot, lies at the head of Hedges' wharf. The rock is now only about 6½ feet across its broadest part, with a thickness of 4 feet, so much of it having been removed; it is almost entirely buried in the ground, its surface only being visible. The town contains 6 or 7 churches, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, and several good hotels. Among the churches deserving of notice may be mentioned the Gothic edifice of the First Society, and the Church of the Pilgrimage, erected in 1840, near the site occupied by the church first built by the pilgrims. Plymouth is the seat of various manufactures, principally cotton, and it is also extensively engaged in the fisheries. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 3368½ tons registered, and 9365½ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 2538½ tons were employed in the coast trade, 5169½ tons in the cod fishery, and 1494½ tons in the mackerel fisheries. The foreign arrivals for the year were 5 vessels; clearances the same. During the period above specified, 2 ships and 4 schooners, with an aggregate burthen of 1443½ tons, were admeasured. Population of the township in 1830, 4758; 1840, 5281, and in 1850, 6024.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township of Litchfield county, Connecticut, intersected by the Shepang river and Naugatuck railroad, 29 miles N. by W. from New Haven. It contains a flourishing village of its own name, and two others in which are extensive manufactories of brass clocks, cotton and woollen goods, pocket cutlery, musical instruments, carriages, and various articles of hardware. Population, 2568.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1473.

PLYMOUTH, a post-village in the above township, on the right bank of the Susquehanna river, 3 or 4 miles below Wilkesbarre. It is situated in a good farming district, in the vicinity of rich coal mines.

PLYMOUTH, a township of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, about 15 miles N. W. from Philadelphia. Population, 1453.

PLYMOUTH, a post-village, port of entry, and capital of Washington county, North Carolina, 150 miles E. from Raleigh, and about 8 miles S. from Roanoke river, where it enters Albemarle sound. It is connected with the sound by a small inlet, called Nag's Head. It has an active trade and is rapidly increasing. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 2726½ tons registered, and 1346½ tons enrolled and licensed. All of the latter was employed in the coast trade, and 86½ tons in steam navigation. During the year, 4 schooners, with an aggregate burthen of 284½ tons, were admeasured. If the above inlet should be opened by the government, Plymouth will become an important place. A newspaper is published here. Population in 1850, 951.

PLYMOUTH, a small post-village of Lowndes co., Mississippi, about 140 miles N. E. from Jackson.

PLYMOUTH, a township in the N. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Population, 752.

PLYMOUTH, a village of Fayette co., Ohio, on a branch of Paint creek, 46 miles S. W. from Columbus. Laid out in 1845.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Richland co., Ohio. Population, 1663.

PLYMOUTH, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the railroad from Sandusky to Newark, 36 miles S. from the former. Population in 1853, estimated at 700.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Wayne co., Michigan. Population, 2431.

PLYMOUTH, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the W. branch of the Rouge river, 25 miles W. by N. from Detroit.

PLYMOUTH, a post-village, capital of Marshall county, Indiana, on the Yellow river, and on the Michigan road, 112 miles N. from Indianapolis. It is situated in a fine farming district, and has an active business. A plank-road connects it with Michigan City. It has several churches and a bank. Settled in 1834. Population, estimated at 700.

PLYMOUTH, a post-village in Hancock co., Ill., 85 miles N. W. by W. from Springfield.

PLYMOUTH, a township in Rock co., Wisconsin. Population, 581.

PLYMOUTH, a post-township of Sheboygan co., Wisconsin.

PLYMOUTH, a post-village in the above township, on the plank-road from Fond du Lac to Lake Michigan, 16 miles W. from Sheboygan. It has several mills.

PLYMOUTH HOLLOW, a small post-village in Litchfield county, Connecticut, on the Naugatuck River railroad, about 25 miles S. W. by W. from Hartford, contains several factories.

PLYMOUTH MEETING, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

PLYMPTON, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts, on the Old Colony railroad, 30 miles S. E. from Boston. Population of the township, 927.

POAST TOWN, a post-office of Butler co., O.

POCAHONTAS, a county in the N. W. central part of Virginia, has an area of about 600 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of the Elk, Gauley, and Greenbrier rivers. The surface is mountainous, and one of the most elevated parts of the state. The Greenbrier mountain extends across the county, while the main Alleghany forms its S. E. boundary. A large portion of the land is rocky and sterile, and covered with forests; but the southern part is more productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 51,949 bushels of corn; 11,806 of wheat; 52,998 of oats; 5911 tons of hay, and 76,080 pounds of butter. It contained 1 flour mill, 1 wool-carding mill, and 1 tannery; 7 churches, 200 pupils attending public schools, and 40 attending another school. A cave has lately been discovered in the Elk mountain, which, in the number and magnitude of its apartments, is said to be scarcely inferior to the celebrated Weir's cave. It is called Skeen's cave. Organized in 1821, and named in honor of the Indian princess Pocahontas. Capital, Huntersville. Population, 3598, of whom 3331 were free, and 267, slaves.

POCAHONTAS, a new county towards the N. W. part of Iowa, contains about 550 square miles. It is intersected by Lizard's river, and also drained by two other smaller affluents of the Des Moines. This county is not included in the census of 1850. County seat not located.

POCAHONTAS, a post-office of Somerset co. Pa.

POCAHONTAS, a small post-village, capital of Randolph county, Arkansas, on the right bank of Black river, about 145 miles N. E. from Little Rock. The river is navigable by steamers from this point to its junction with White river, a distance of about 100 miles.

POCAHONTAS, a small post-village of Bond co., Illinois, near Shoal creek, 10 miles S. W. from Greenville. It has an academy, a few shops, and saw mills in the vicinity.

POCASSET, a post-village in Barnstable co., Mass., about 60 miles S. S. E. from Boston.

POCHISHATCHEE CREEK, Alabama. See SOCHAPATOWY.

POCKET, a post-office of Moore co., N. C.

POCOMOKE, a river which rises near the northern border of Worcester county, Maryland, and after traversing that county, flows into Pocomoke bay, an arm of the Chesapeake. General course S. S. W.; length, about 60 miles. Sloops ascend with the tide about 2 miles above Snow Hill.

POCONO, a township of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, about 28 miles N. W. by N. from Easton. Population, 925.

POCOTALICO, a river of Kanawha co., Virginia, falls into the Great Kanawha. It is navigable for boats at high water.

POCOTALICO, a post-office of Kanawha co., Virginia, 318 miles W. by N. from Richmond.

POCOTALICO, a post-village in Beaufort district, South Carolina, 100 miles S. by E. from Columbia.

POESTENKILL, a small river of Rensselaer co., New York, falls into the Hudson at Troy.

POESTENKILL, a post-township of Rensselaer co., New York, 11 miles E. from Albany. Population, 2092.

POGLAND, a post-office of Jefferson co., N. Y.

POHATCONG, or POHATCHUNK CREEK, of Warren co., New Jersey, flows south-westward and enters the Delaware river 8 miles below Easton.

POINDEXTER, a post-office of Marion co., Georgia, about 45 miles E. from Columbus.

POINDEXTER'S STORE, a post-village of Louisa co., Virginia, 68 miles N. W. from Richmond.

POINSETT, a county in the N. E. part of Arkansas, contains about 1300 square miles. The St. Francis river, navigable by steamboats, washes the entire eastern border. The surface is level, and the soil fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, and tobacco flourish. In 1850 this county produced 98,746 bushels of Indian corn; 270 bales of cotton, and 23,194 pounds of butter. It contained 5 churches, and 220 pupils attending public schools. A large part of the county is occupied by swamps and forests, which contain the cypress, ash, walnut, and other good timber. Capital, Bolivar. Population, 2308; of whom 2029 were free, and 279, slaves.

POINT, a township of Northumberland co., Pennsylvania, on the point formed by the two branches of the Susquehanna, about 4 miles N. from Sunbury. Population, 876.

POINT, a township in Posey co., Indiana. Population, 479.

POINT, a township in Calhoun co., Illinois. Population, 812.

POINT ADAMS, Oregon. See ADAMS' POINT.

POINT À LA HACHE, a post-office of Plaquemine parish, Louisiana.

POINT AU FER, on the E. side of the entrance to Achafalaya bay, Louisiana. On it is a fixed light, about 70 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 29° 19' N., lon. 91° 22' W. A floating light is also moored at the entrance to the bay, about 12 miles E. by S. from Point au Fer.

POINT BAUSSE, a small village of Portage co., Wisconsin.

POINT CEDAR, a post-office of Hot Spring co., Arkansas.

POINT COMMERCE, a thriving post-village of Green county, Indiana, at the junction of Eel river with the W. fork of White river, about 80 miles S. W. from Indianapolis. The Wabash and Erie canal passes near it.

POINT CRAWFORD, a small village of Barnwell district, South Carolina.

POINT DOUGLAS, a post-village of Washington county, Minnesota, on the point formed by the confluence of the St. Croix with the Mississippi, 26 miles below St. Paul. It has 1 hotel, a steam mill, several stores, and a good landing for steamboats.

POINTE COUPÉE, a parish in Louisiana, situated on the W. bank of the Mississippi river, in the S. E. central part of the state, contains about 600 square miles. The Atchafalaya bayou, an outlet of Red river, commences near the N. extremity of the parish and forms the entire W. boundary. The surface is low and subject to be overflowed by the river. The soil is fertile, especially along the river banks. Sugar, molasses, maize, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 8560 hogsheads of sugar; 321,546 gallons of molasses; 199,790 bushels of Indian corn, and 43,643 of sweet potatoes. It contained 2 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 160 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Pointe Coupée. Population, 11,339; of whom 3528 were free, and 7811, slaves.

POINTE COUPÉE, a post-village, capital of Pointe Coupée parish, Louisiana, on the Mississippi river, 25 miles N. N. W. from Baton Rouge. It contains 2 newspaper offices.

POINT INDUSTRY, a small village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

POINT ISABEL, a post-village and port of entry of Cameron county, Texas, on a point of land projecting into the Laguna del Madre, opposite an inlet called the Barra, or Brazos Santiago, about 30 miles E. N. E. from Brownsville. It has a custom house, and a lighthouse. The shipping of the port, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 1065½ tons enrolled and licensed, all of which was employed in steam navigation.

POINT ISABEL, a small village of Pulaski co., Kentucky, on Cumberland river, at the mouth of the S. fork, 97 miles S. from Frankfort.

POINT ISABEL, a post-office of Clermont co., Ohio.

POINT ISABELLE, a post-office of Wapello co., Iowa.

POINT JEFFERSON, a post-office of Morehouse parish, Louisiana.

POINT JUDITH, the W. side of the entrance to Narragansett bay, Rhode Island. It contains a revolving light, 60 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 41° 21' 35" N., lon. 71° 29' 18" W.

POINT LOOKOUT, on the N. side of the entrance to Potomac river, Chesapeake bay. On it is a fixed light.

POINT MAGRE, a post-office of Avoyelles parish, Louisiana.

POINT MEERS, a post-office of Johnson co., Arkansas.

POINT MONTEREY, a post-office of Cass co., Texas.

POINT OF ROCKS, a post-village in Frederick co., Maryland, on the Potomac and on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, 65 miles N. W. by W. from Annapolis.

POINT PENINSULA, a post-village and shipping place in Sackett's Harbor district, Jefferson co., New York, on Lake Ontario.

POINT PETER, a post-office of Oglethorpe co., Georgia.

POINT PETER, a post-office of Searcy co., Arkansas.

POINT PLEASANT, a post-office of Ocean co., New Jersey.

POINT PLEASANT, a small post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, about 120 miles E. from Harrisburg.

POINT PLEASANT, a post-village, capital of Mason co., Virginia, on the Ohio river just above the mouth of the Kanawha river, 358 miles W. N. W. from Richmond. It contains a court house, and several stores and mills.

POINT PLEASANT, a post-office of Upshur co., Texas.

POINT PLEASANT, a post-village of Clermont co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, 25 miles above Cincinnati.

POINT PLEASANT, a thriving post-village in New Madrid co., Missouri, situated on the Mississippi river, 8 miles S. of New Madrid.

POINT PLEASANT, a post-village in Mahaska co., Iowa, 65 miles S. W. from Iowa City.

POINT PRAIRIE, a small post-village of Franklin co., Arkansas.

POINT REMOVE, a township of Conway co., Arkansas. Population, 294.

POINT REMOVE CREEK, of Arkansas, flows into Arkansas river from the N. a few miles above Lewisburg, in Conway county.

POINT REPUBLIC, a post-office of La Salle co., Illinois.

POINT WORTHINGTON, a post-office of Washington co., Mississippi.

POKAGON, a township in the N. W. part of Cass co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Central railroad. Population, 994.

POKE BAYOU, a small post-village of Independence co., Arkansas, about 16 miles N. from Batesville.

POKE RUN, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania.

POKONO CREEK, of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, falls into Brodhead's creek.

POKONO MOUNTAIN, Pennsylvania, situated chiefly in the N. E. part of Carbon and the N. W. central part of Monroe county. The Pokono ridge may, however, be traced across Monroe into Pike county, where it rises into an elevation called High Knob.

POLAND, a post-township in Cumberland co., Maine, on the W. side of the Androscoggin river, 36 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 2660.

POLAND, a township in the S. E. part of Chautauque co., New York. Pop., 1174.

POLAND, a post-village of Herkimer co., New York, on West Canada creek, 15 miles N. E. from Utica. Cotton goods and edge-tools are manufactured here.

POLAND, a post-township in the E. part of Mahoning co., Ohio, intersected by the Mahoning river, and Pennsylvania and Ohio canal. Population, 2126.

POLAND, a neat post-village in the above township, on Yellow creek, 174 miles N. E. from Columbus. The adjacent country is rich and populous, and is amply supplied with iron and coal. Poland contains 2 churches, 1 academy, 1 iron foundry, and mills of various kinds.

POLAND, a post-office of Clay co., Indiana.

POLAND CENTRE, a post-office of Chautauque co., New York.

POLAND CENTRE, a post-office of Mahoning co., Ohio.

POLK, a new county in the N. W. part of Georgia, formed since 1851.

POLK, a county situated towards the E. part of Texas, has an area of about 1200 square miles. It is intersected by the Trinity river, navigable for steamboats. The surface is nearly level. Much of the soil is fertile, especially in the valley of Trinity river. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 60,065 bushels of corn; 13,881 of sweet potatoes; 582 bales of cotton, and 20 hogsheads of sugar. There were 60 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Livingston. Population, 2349; of whom 1544 were free, and 805, slaves.

POLK, a county of Arkansas, situated in the W. part of the state, bordering on the Indian Territory, contains about 1150 square miles. It is drained by the sources of the Washita river. The surface is mountainous, and traversed by numerous streams which furnish water-power. The soil and climate are adapted to the growth of wheat, maize, and grass. In 1850 this county produced 43,405 bushels of Indian corn; 1892 of wheat; 4084 of oats, and 5388 of sweet potatoes. It is stated that the highlands of Polk county are rich in minerals, among which are iron, lead, silver, &c. It contained 89 pupils attending public schools, and 28 attending other schools. Capital, Dallas. Population, 1263; of whom 1196 were free, and 67, slaves.

POLK, a county forming the S. E. extremity of Tennessee, bordering on North Carolina and Georgia: area estimated at 300 square miles. It is intersected by the Hiawassee and Amocce rivers. The surface is mountainous, and mostly covered with forests. In 1850 this county produced 299,917 bushels of corn; 51,572 of oats; 14,727 of wheat, and 46,923 pounds of butter. It contained 19 churches, 700 pupils attending public schools, and 65 attending academies and other schools. It is stated that a copper mine has been found in it. Capital, Benton. Population, 6338; of whom 5938 were free, and 400 slaves.

POLK, a county in the S. W. central part of Missouri, has an area of 625 square miles. It is traversed from S. to N. by Pomme de Terre river, intersected in the S. W. part by the East fork of Sac river, and also drained by Lindley's creek. The general surface is undulating or level, and is diversified by prairies and forests. The soil is fertile, and abounds with springs of limestone water. Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 308,000 bushels of corn; 14,360 of wheat; 104,925 of oats, and 60,212 pounds of butter. It contained 11 churches, and 864 pupils attending public schools. Iron and lead abound in it. The rivers and creeks afford extensive water-power. Capital, Bolivar. Population, 6186; of whom 5817 were free, and 369, slaves.

POLK, a county in the central part of Iowa, has an area of 720 square miles. The Des Moines river flows through the middle in a S. E. direction; the Skunk river traverses the N. E. part; and the S. part is drained by Racoon, North, South, and Middle rivers. The soil is highly productive, and well watered. Indian corn and butter are the staples. In 1850, Polk county produced 211,677 bushels of Indian corn; 13,455 of wheat, and 41,058 pounds of butter. It contained 1 church, 2 newspaper offices, and 346 pupils attending public schools. Stone coal is found in several parts of the county. It is liberally supplied with water-power and timber. Capital, Fort Des Moines. Population, 4515.

POLK, a new county in the N. W. part of Wisconsin, contains about 2500 square miles. The St. Croix river forms its entire boundary on the W., separating it from Minnesota Territory, it is also drained by Shell river. The surface is uneven, and extensively covered with forests in which the pine is found. Polk county was formed in 1853, out of the N. part of St. Croix county. Capital, St. Croix Falls.

POLK, a county in the W. part of Oregon, has an area estimated at above 1000 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Pacific ocean, and on the E. by the Willamette river. Yaquima bay is situated on the W. coast. The soil in the E. part is fertile. Wheat, oats, wool, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 16,373 bushels of wheat; 1605 of oats; 1218 pounds of wool, and 36,090 of butter. There were 134 pupils attending academies and other schools. Population, 1051.

POLK, a township of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles N. W. from Easton. Population, 712.

POLK, a small post-village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

POLK, a post-office of Union co., Georgia, 160 miles N. by W. from Milledgeville.

POLK, a township in Arkansas co., Arkansas. Population, 322.

POLK, a township in Dallas co., Arkansas. Population, 429.

POLK, a township in Montgomery co., Arkansas. Population, 208.

POLK, a township in Newton co., Arkansas. Population, 137.

POLK, a post-office of Ashland co., Ohio.

POLK, a township in Crawford co., Ohio. Population, 1318.

POLK, a township in Monroe co., Indiana. Population, 431.

POLK, a township in Green co., Missouri. Population, 732.

POLK, a village in Lucas co., Iowa, near Chariton river, 110 miles S. W. by W. from Iowa City.

POLK, a village in Mahaska co., Iowa, near Des Moines river, 85 miles W. S. W. from Iowa City.

POLK, a township in Washington co., Wisconsin. Population, 1344.

POLK, a small post-village of Washington co., Wis., 36 miles N. W. from Milwaukee.

POLK CITY, a small village of Polk co., Iowa, 17 miles N. from Fort Des Moines.

POLK PRAIRIE, a small village of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

POLK RUN, a post-office of Clark co., Ind.

POLKSVILLE, a post-office of Hall co., Ga.

POLKTON, a post-township in the N. part of Ottawa co., Michigan. Population, 268.

POLKVILLE, a post-office of Warren co., N.J.

POLKVILLE, a small post-village of Columbia co., Pennsylvania.

POLKVILLE, a post-office of Cleveland co., North Carolina.

POLKVILLE, a small village of Whitefield co., Georgia.

POLKVILLE, a post-village of Benton co., Alabama, 5 miles E. from Coosa river, 15 miles S. W. from Jacksonville. Here is an iron furnace and forge.

POLKVILLE, a post-office of Smith co., Miss.

POLKVILLE, a small village of Bath co., Ky.

POLKVILLE, a small village of Macon co., Missouri.

POLLACASTY CREEK, of North Carolina, flows into Meherrin river, a few miles above Winton, in Hertford county.

POLLARD'S MILLS, a post-office of Greenup co., Kentucky.

POLLOCK'S, a small post-village of Randolph co., Illinois.

POLLOCKSVILLE, a post-village in Jones co., North Carolina.

POLVADERA, a village in the interior of New Mexico, on the right bank of the Rio del Norte.

POMARIA, a small village of Lexington district, South Carolina.

POMARIA, a post-office of Newberry district, South Carolina.

POMEROY, a post-village of Salisbury township, and capital of Meigs county, Ohio, on the Ohio river, 100 miles S. E. from Columbus. It is built on a narrow strip of land, which is enclosed between the river and a range of rugged and precipitous hills. Including the adjoining villages of Coalport, Minersville, Carltonville, and Middleport, which may be regarded as portions of the same town, it extends nearly three miles along the river. Pomeroy owes its rapid growth and prosperity chiefly to the abundance and superior quality of the stone coal found in the immediate vicinity. In 1851, about five million bushels were mined and exported from this place, and the trade is increasing. During the summer of 1851, a company was formed here for manufacturing salt, with a capital of $25,000. Two wells were sunk to the depth of 1000 feet, each of which discharges 50 gallons of water per minute, containing 9.5 per cent. of salt. The quality of the article produced is said to be very superior. Since the success of this attempt, five or six other companies have been formed, with a like capital, and it is confidently expected that in a short time the manufacture of salt will be carried on here more extensively than at any other place in the Western States. Pomeroy contains several churches, 1 or 2 newspaper offices, a telegraph office, and 2 foundries. Laid out in 1841. In 1850 it contained 1638 inhabitants, exclusive of the adjoining villages. Total population in 1853, estimated at 4000.

POMFRET, a post-township in Windsor co., Vermont, 45 miles S. by E. from Montpelier, intersected by the Vermont Central railroad. Population, 1546.

POMFRET, a post-village of Windham co., Connecticut, with a station on the Norwich and Worcester railroad, 33 miles N. by E. from Norwich. The township is celebrated as containing the cave in which Putnam killed the wolf. Population, 1848.

POMFRET, a township of Chautauque co., New York, on Lake Erie, contains Dunkirk, and is intersected by the Lake Shore railroad. Total population, 4483.

POMFRET LANDING, a post-office of Windham co., Connecticut.

POMME DE TERRE RIVER, of Missouri, rises in Green co., and falls into the Osage, in Benton co., a few miles S. W. from Warsaw. Its general course is N. by W.

POMONA, a post-office of St. Charles co., Mo.

POMONKEY, a post-office of Charles co., Md.

POMPANOSUC, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

POMPERUNG RIVER, in the W. part of Connecticut, rises in Litchfield co., and falls into the Housatonic river in New Haven co.

POMPEY, a post-township in the E. S. E. part of Onondaga co., N. Y. Pop., 4006.

POMPEY, or POMPEY HILL, a post-village of Onondaga county, New York, about 15 miles S. S. E. from Syracuse.

POMPEY CENTRE, a post-village in Pompey township, Onondaga co., New York, 146 miles W. from Albany. It is finely situated, and contains several churches.

POMPON, a small river in the N. E. part of New Jersey, formed by the Pequannock creek and Ringwood river, flows southward on the boundary of Passaic and Morris counties, and enters the Passaic river.

POMPTON, a post-township of Passaic co., New Jersey. Population, 1720.

POMPTON, a post-village in the above township, about 70 miles N. E. from Trenton, contains a church, and 15 or 18 dwellings.

POMPTON PLAINS, a post-office of Morris co., New Jersey.

POND CREEK, a post-office of Greene co., Mo.

POND CREEK MILLS, a post-office of Knox co., Indiana.

POND EDDY, a post-village of Sullivan co., New York, on the Delaware river, about 109 miles from New York city. The river at this place makes a sudden bend, forming one of those basins called ponds by the people here. Its depth is sufficient to float a man-of-war, yet a few hundred yards above or below, the river may readily be crossed by wading.

POND FORK, a post-office of Jackson co., Georgia.

POND HILL, a post-office of Gibson co., Tenn.

POND ISLAND, at the entrance of Kennebec river, Maine. On it is a fixed light, 52 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 43° 42' N., lon. 69° 44' W.

POND RIVER, a small stream in the W. part of Kentucky, flows northward, and forms the boundary between Hopkins and Muhlenberg counties, until it enters Green river. It is navigable for flat-boats. Length, about 50 miles.

POND RIVER MILLS, a post-office of Miller co., Kentucky.

POND SETTLEMENT, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

POND SPRING, a post-office of Walker co., Georgia.

POND TOWN, a post-village of Sumter co., Georgia, 48 miles S. E. from Columbus. Population, about 200.

PONTCHARTRAIN LAKE, Louisiana, situated about 5 miles N. from New Orleans. It communicates with Lake Maurepas on the W., with Lake Borgne and the Gulf of Mexico on the E., (through the Rigolets,) and with the Mississippi on the S. by St. John's bayou. The length is 40 miles, the greatest width, 24 miles, and the greatest depth from 16 to 20 feet. It is navigated by small steam-boats, and is accessible from New Orleans by means of a canal.

PONTIAC, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

PONTIAC, a post-office of Huron co., Ohio.

PONTIAC, a post-township in the S. E. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Pop., 2820.

PONTIAC, a flourishing post-village in the above township, and capital of Oakland county, Michigan, is situated on Clinton river, 25 miles N. N. W. from Detroit, at the terminus of the Detroit and Pontiac railroad. It is a place of active business, and one of the principal wool markets in the state. The water power of the river gives motion to a number of mills. Pontiac contains 6 churches, a large public school, 3 hotels, 14 dry-good stores, 20 other stores, and 2 newspaper offices. It is the E. terminus of the Oakland and Ottawa railroad, now in course of construction. Population in 1853, about 2500.

PONTIAC, a post-village, capital of Livingston co., Illinois, on Vermilion river, and on the Chicago and Mississippi railroad, 110 miles N. E. from Springfield.

PONTICO, a post-office of Cayuga co., N. Y.

PONTOOSUCK, a small manufacturing village of Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the West branch of the Housatonic river, about 115 miles W. by S. from Boston.

PONTOOSUCK, a thriving post-village of Hancock county, Illinois, on the Mississippi river, 215 miles above St. Louis. The adjacent country is very productive, and improving rapidly. Pontooosuck has grown up since 1846. Population, about 500.

PONTOTOC, a county in the N. E. part of Mississippi, has an area of about 950 square miles. It is watered by the Tallahatchee and Loosascoona rivers, and by Old Town creek, which rise near the borders of the county. The surface is gently undulating, and is partly covered with forests or groves of oak, hickory, &c., which are free from underbrush. The soil is fertile; cotton, Indian corn, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 9017 bales of cotton; 667,012 bushels of corn, and 116,371 of sweet potatoes. It contained 47 churches and 2 newspaper offices; 578 pupils attending public schools, and 90 attending academies or other schools. This county was once a part of the Chickasaw territory, and was settled by white people about 1836. Capital, Pontotoc. Population, 17,112; of whom 12,144 were free, and 4968, slaves.

PONTOTOC, a post-village, capital of Pontotoc county, Mississippi, 175 miles N. by E. from Jackson. It has a United States land-office, and several stores. Two newspapers are published here.

PONTOTOC, a post-office of Fulton co., Ky.

POOLE ISLAND, Chesapeake bay, 17½ miles E. by N. from Baltimore. On it is a lighthouse, exhibiting a fixed light.

POOLSVILLE, a post-village of Montgomery co., Maryland, 65 miles W. N. W. from Annapolis.

POOL'S MILLS, a post-office of Jones co., Miss.

POOLSVILLE, a post-village in Spartanburg district, South Carolina.

POOLSVILLE, a small village of Lincoln co., Georgia.

POOLSVILLE, a post-village in Warren co., Indiana.

POOLVILLE, a post-village of Madison co., New York, about 95 miles W. N. W. from Albany. It has several factories.

POOR FORK, a post-office of Harlan co., Ky.

POOR HILL, a post-office of Sullivan co., Tennessee.

POPACTION, or PEPACTON river, a branch of the Delaware, rises among the Catskill mountains, in Delaware co., New York, and flowing in a W. S. W. direction for about 60 miles, unites with the Coquago, the larger branch, at the village of Hancock or Chechocton, on the boundary between New York and Pennsylvania. It is a beautiful and rapid stream, and furnishes valuable motive-power. The New York and Erie railroad crosses this river near its junction with the Coquago.

POPE, a county in the S. part of Illinois, has an area of 370 square miles. The Ohio river, which separates it from Kentucky, forms the S. E. boundary. The county is also drained by Lusk and Big Bay creeks. The surface is rolling; the soil in some parts is fertile. Indian corn, oats, grass, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 it produced 223,592 bushels of Indian corn; 10,958 of oats, and 13,922 pounds of butter. It contained 29 churches, and 570 pupils attending public schools. The county contains a number of mineral springs, and abundance of iron and lead, but the mines have not yet been worked. Valuable quarries of sandstone are found near the Ohio river. Named in honor of Nathaniel Pope, a delegate to the United States Congress when Illinois was admitted as a sovereign state. Capital, Golconda. Population, 3975.

POPE CREEK, a post-office of Mercer co., Illinois.

POPE'S CORNERS, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

POPE'S MILLS, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

POPE'S MILLS, a post-office of Mercer co., Illinois.

POPLAR, a post-village of Orangeburg district, South Carolina.

POPLAR, a post-office of Crawford co., Ohio.

POPLAR BLUFF, a small post-village of Butler co., Missouri.

POPLAR BRANCH, a post-office of Currituck co., North Carolina.

POPLAR CORNER, a post-office of Madison co., Tennessee.

POPLAR CREEK, of Tennessee, rises in Anderson county, and enters Clinch river in Roane county.

POPLAR CREEK, a post-office of Choctaw co., Mississippi.

POPLAR FLAT, a small post-village of Lewis co., Kentucky.

POPLAR GROVE, a post-village of Iredell co., North Carolina.

POPLAR GROVE, a post-office of Gibson co., Tennessee, 144 miles W. from Nashville.

POPLAR GROVE, a post-office of Owen co., Ky.

POPLAR GROVE, a post-office of Boone co., Ill.

POPLAR HILL, a post-office of Giles co., Va.

POPLAR HILL, a post-office of Anson co., N. C.

POPLAR HILL, a post-office of Casey co., Ky.

POPLAR HILL, a post-office of Vigo co., Ind.

POPLAR MOUNT, a post-office of Greenville co., Virginia.

POPLAR NECK, a post-office of Nelson co., Ky.

POPLAR PLAINS, a post-village of Fleming co., Kentucky, 80 miles E. from Frankfort. Population, about 300.

POPLAR POINT, on the W. side of Narraganset bay, about 7½ miles N. W. from Newport, Rhode Island.

POPLAR RIDGE, or SMITH'S CORNERS, a post-village of Cayuga co., New York, 15 miles S. by W. from Auburn.

POPLAR RIDGE, a post-office of Maury co., Tennessee.

POPLAR RIDGE, a post-office of Darke co., O.
POPLAR SPRING, a post-office of Marshall co., Virginia.

POPLAR SPRING, a post-village of Fairfield district, South Carolina.

POPLAR SPRINGS, a post-office of Howard co., Maryland.

POPLAR SPRINGS, a post-office of Hall co., Georgia.

POPLAR SPRINGS, a post-village of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

POPLARTOWN, a thriving village of Worcester co., Maryland, about 12 miles N. E. from Snow Hill.

POPLIN, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 33 miles S. S. E. from Concord. Population, 509.

POQUANOC (or POQUONNOC) BRIDGE, a post-office of New London co., Connecticut.

POQUETANOC, a post-village of New London co., Connecticut.

POQUONNOC, or PEQUANNOCK, a post-village of Hartford county, Connecticut, on the N. side of Farmington river, about 12 miles N. by E. from Hartford. It contains 2 cotton mills; also a paper mill, said to be the largest in New England.

PORCUPINE RIVER, of Missouri Territory, falls into the Missouri river near 48° N. lat., and 104° 50' W. lon.

PORPOISE CAPE, Maine. See CAPE PORPOISE.

PORTAGE, a county in the N. E. part of Ohio, contains 480 square miles. It is drained by Cuyahoga and Mahoning rivers. The surface is nearly level. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The staples are wool, butter, cheese, and cattle. In 1850 this county produced 293,069 pounds of wool; 662,614 of butter; 137,147 bushels of wheat, and 46,189 tons of hay. It contained 60 churches, 4 newspaper offices; 11,024 pupils attending public schools, and 106 attending an academy. The county is intersected by the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad and by the Pennsylvania and Ohio canal. The rivers furnish large motive-power. Portage county was settled by natives of Massachusetts and Connecticut about the year 1799. Capital, Ravenna. Population, 24,419.

PORTAGE, a county in the N. central part of Wisconsin, contains 1600 square miles. It is intersected by Wisconsin river, and also drained by Plover river. These streams are bordered by extensive pine forests, forming part of the "Great Pinery" of North Wisconsin, from which many million feet of lumber are procured annually, and floated down the river to Galena and St. Louis. A strip of land 6 miles wide, along the Wisconsin, was surveyed and settled in 1836; and the remainder of the county passed from aboriginal hands in 1848, since which the land has been occupied by great numbers of "squatters." Capital, Plover. Population, 1250.

PORTAGE, a township in the S. W. part of Livingston co., New York, on the Genesee river. Population, 2478.

PORTAGE, a post-office of Cambria co., Pa.
PORTAGE, a township of Potter co., Pennsylvania, 50 miles N. W. from Lockhaven. Population, 34.

PORTAGE, a township in the N. part of Hancock co., Ohio. Population, 614.

PORTAGE, a township in Ottawa co., Ohio. Population, 377.

PORTAGE, a township in the S. part of Summit co., Ohio. The Pennsylvania and Ohio canal joins the Ohio canal at Akron, a village in this township. Population, 1160.

PORTAGE, a post-township in the central part of Wood co., Ohio. Population, 403.

PORTAGE, a thriving post-village in the above township, 20 miles S. from Perrysburg.

PORTAGE, a post-township in the central part of Kalamazoo co., Michigan, intersected by the Portage river. Population, 726.

PORTAGE, a township in Porter co., Indiana. Population, 266.

PORTAGE, a township in St. Joseph co., Indiana. Population, 2073.

PORTAGE, a village in St. Joseph co., Indiana, on St. Joseph's river, 150 miles N. from Indianapolis.

PORTAGE CITY, capital of Columbia co. Wis. on the La Crosse railroad (unfinished) and on the ship canal connecting the Wisconsin and Fox rivers, at the noted Winnebago Portage, 40 miles N. from Madison. It is at the head of navigation on the Wisconsin river, and is a dépôt for large quantities of pine lumber. Two steamboats ply constantly during the summer between this place and Galena. The improvement of Fox river, when finished, will open steamboat navigation from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. Portage City contains (in 1853) 15 stores, 7 hotels, 2 churches, 2 select schools, 1 iron foundry, 1 sash factory, and 1 chair factory. Pop. 2000. Here is the site of the old Fort Winnebago.

PORTAGE CREEK, of Jackson co., Michigan, enters Grand river, 4 miles below Jackson Court House.

PORTAGE DES SIOUX, a village in St. Charles co., Missouri, on Mississippi river, 115 miles E. N. E. from Jefferson City.

PORTAGE ENTRY, a post-office of Houghton co., Michigan.

PORTAGE FALLS. See GENESSEE RIVER and GENESSEE FALLS.

PORTAGE LAKE, of Keweenaw Point, Michigan, is very irregular in its form, and extends from Keweenaw bay across the point to within 2 or 3 miles of the shore of Lake Superior. The route of this lake has long been used by the traders and Indians as a portage, hence the name.

PORTAGE LAKE, a post-office of Jackson co., Michigan.

PORTAGE PRAIRIE, a township in Columbia co., Wisconsin. Population, 603.

PORTAGE RIVER, a small stream of Ohio, rises in Hancock county, and flows into Lake Erie at Port Clinton.

PORTAGE RIVER, of Michigan, a small stream which flows through Livingston county into Portage Lake and Huron river.

PORTAGE RIVER, of Michigan, a small stream which enters St. Joseph's river at the village of Three Rivers.

PORTAGEVILLE, New York. See GENESEE FALLS.

PORT ALLEGHANY, a post-village of McKean co., Pennsylvania, on the Alleghany river, about 200 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

PORT ALLEN, a post-village of Louisa co., Iowa, 28 miles S. by E. from Iowa City.

PORT BARNETT, a village of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania, on a branch of the Redbank creek, 168 miles W. N. W. from Harrisburg.

PORT BLANCHARD, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

PORT BYRON, a post-village of Mentz township, Cayuga county, New York, on the Erie canal, and on the Rochester and Syracuse railroad, 28 miles W. from Syracuse. It contains 3 or 4 churches, and several warehouses and mills. Population in 1853, estimated at 1400.

PORT BYRON, a post-village of Rock Island co., Illinois, on the Mississippi river, 18 miles above Rock Island City.

PORT CADDO, a post-office of Harrison co., Texas.

PORT CARBON, a thriving post-borough of East Norwegian township, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river, at the mouth of Mill creek, 65 miles N. E. from Harrisburg, and 3 miles N. E. from Pottsville. It is surrounded by rich coal mines, and carries on an active trade by means of the Schuylkill Valley railroad, which extends to the mines, and the Schuylkill Navigation, which terminates here. In 1829 there was only one house in the place. Population in 1850, 2142; in 1853, about 3000.

PORT CAVALLO, a small post-village of Calhoun co., Texas, is situated on a point of land at the entrance of Matagorda bay, about 30 miles S. W. from Matagorda.

PORT CHESTER, a post-village in Rye township, Westchester county, New York, on Byram river, and on the New York and New Haven railroad, 29 miles N. E. from New York. It contains 2 or 3 churches, and several seminaries and factories.

PORT CLATSOP, a post-office of Clatsop co., Oregon.

PORT CLINTON, a post-borough of Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river, at the mouth of the Tamaqua, 12 miles by land S. E. from Pottsville. The Reading railroad passes through it, and the Little Schuylkill railroad terminates here. Population in 1850, 374.

PORT CLINTON, a post-village, capital of Ottawa co., Ohio, is situated on a bay of Lake Erie, at the mouth of Portage river, 120 miles

N. from Columbus. It has a good harbor and a lighthouse.

PORT CLINTON, a post-office of Lake co., Ill.

PORT CONWAY, a post-village of King George co., Virginia, on the left bank of the Rappahannock, 60 miles N. by E. from Richmond.

PORT CRANE, a post-office of Broome co., N. Y.

PORT DEPOSIT, a thriving post-village of Cecil county, Maryland, on the left or east bank of Susquehanna river, at the lowest falls, 5 miles from the head of Chesapeake bay, and 37 miles N. E. from Baltimore. It is one of the principal depôts of the pine lumber which is rafted down the river. It is situated at the head of tide-water, and has facilities for shipping to the southern markets. The quantity of lumber received at this place annually is estimated at 50,000,000 feet. Large quarries of granite are worked in the immediate vicinity. It contains a bank and several churches. Laid out in 1800.

PORT ELIZABETH, a post-village of Cumberland co., New Jersey, about 36 miles E. S. E. from Salem, has an extensive glass manufactory, 2 or 3 churches, and about 1000 inhabitants.

PORTER, a county in the N. W. part of Indiana, bordering on Lake Michigan, contains about 400 square miles. The Kankakee river bounds it on the S., and it is drained by the Calumet river. The surface is undulating, and diversified with prairies and forests; the soil mostly fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 205,655 bushels of corn; 70,252 of wheat; 76,143 of oats, and 5896 tons of hay. It contained 6 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 1418 pupils attending public schools. It is traversed by the Michigan Central railroad, the Northern Indiana railroad, and the Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad, (unfinished.) Organized in 1836. Capital, Valparaiso. Population, 5234.

PORTER, a post-township in Oxford co., Me., 90 miles S. W. from Augusta. Pop., 1208.

PORTER, a township of Niagara co., New York, bordering on Lake Ontario, at the mouth of the Niagara river. Pop., 2455.

PORTER, a township of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, about 14 miles S. from Clarion. Population, 1907.

PORTER, a township of Clinton co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles S. S. W. from Lock Haven. Population, 968.

PORTER, a township of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, about 5 miles N. W. from Huntingdon, is intersected by the Juniata river, and by the Pennsylvania railroad. Pop., 1050.

PORTER, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Jefferson co., Pa. Pop., 728.

PORTER, a township of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna river, 17 miles W. from Williamsport. Population, 768.

PORTER, a township of Schuylkill co., Pa., intersected by the Bear Mount railroad route, 23 miles S. E. from Sunbury. Pop., 305.

PORTER, a post-township in the E. central part of Delaware co., Ohio. Pop., 1037.

PORTER, a small village of Gallia co., Ohio, 10 miles N. W. from Gallipolis.

PORTER, a township in the S. E. part of Scioto co., Ohio. Pop. 1671.

PORTER, a township in the S. E. part of Cass co., Michigan. Population, 1259.

PORTER, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Van Buren co., Mich. Pop., 443.

PORTER, a township in Porter co., Indiana. Population, 768.

PORTER, a township in Green co., Missouri. Population, 497.

PORTER, a township in Rock co., Wisconsin. Population, 882.

PORTERFIELD, a small post-village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

PORTER RIDGE, a post-office of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania.

PORTER'S, a post-office of Carroll co., Md.

PORTER'S CORNERS, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

PORTER'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Porter co., Indiana, 11 miles S. W. from Valparaiso, the county seat.

PORTER'S FALLS, a post-office of Wetzel co., Virginia.

PORTERSVILLE, a post-borough of Butler co., Pennsylvania, 220 miles W. by N. from Harrisburg. Population, 240.

PORTERSVILLE, a small post-village of Tipton co., Tenn., 25 miles N. E. from Memphis.

PORTERSVILLE, a post-office of Perry co., O.

PORTERSVILLE, a small village of Dubois co., Indiana, on the E. fork of White river, 8 miles N. by W. from Jasper.

PORTERVILLE, a post-office of De Kalb co., Alabama.

PORT GIBSON, a post-village of Ontario co., New York, on the Erie canal, 54 miles W. from Syracuse, has 1 or 2 churches, and several stores.

PORT GIBSON, a flourishing post-village, capital of Claiborne county, Mississippi, on Bayou Pierre, 28 miles from its mouth, and about 65 miles S. W. from Jackson. It is surrounded by a rich planting district, and has considerable business. A newspaper is published here. The cotton raised in the vicinity is shipped here in keel-boats. Population in 1850, 1036.

PORT GIBSON, a post-office of Gibson co., Indiana.

PORT GLASGOW, a post-office of Wayne co., New York.

PORT HENRY, a post-village of Essex co., New York, on the W. shore of Lake Champlain, about 110 miles N. by E. from Albany. It has a steamboat landing.

PORT HERMAN, a post-office of Cecil co., Maryland.

PORT HOMER, a post-office of Jefferson co., Ohio.

PORT HOPE, a post-township in the N. W. part of Columbia co., Wisconsin. Pop., 413.

PORT HOPE, a small post-village in the above township, at the head of steamboat navigation on the Neenah or Fox river, which affords good water-power. It has a hotel and 2 churches.

PORT HUDSON, a post-village of East Feliciana parish, Louisiana, on the left bank of the Mississippi river, at the terminus of the Clinton and Port Hudson railroad, 25 miles above Baton Rouge. It is a place of active business, about 30,000 bales of cotton, and 2000 hogsheads of sugar being shipped here annually. Population, 252.

PORT HURON, a post-township in St. Clair co., Michigan. Population, 1584.

PORT HURON, formerly DESMOND, a thriving post-village in the above township, on St. Clair at the mouth of the Black river, 2 miles from the S. end of Lake Huron, and 57 miles N. E. from Detroit. Port Huron is the terminus of the proposed northern railroad to Lake Michigan. It has an active trade in pine lumber, and contains 8 churches, 6 warehouses, 5 hotels, 2 tanneries, 2 livery stables, 2 newspaper offices, several steam mills, and near 50 stores. Population, in 1853, about 3000.

PORT JACKSON, a post-office of Montgomery co., New York.

PORT JEFFERSON, a post-village of Suffolk co., New York, on the N. side of Long Island, about 200 miles S. S. E. from Albany.

PORT JEFFERSON, a thriving village of Shelby county, Ohio, on the Miami river, 70 miles W. by N. from Columbus. A feeder of the Miami and Erie canal terminates here. Population, about 400.

PORT JERVIS, a thriving post-village of Orange county, New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 97 miles from New York city. Named in honor of John B. Jervis, engineer of the Hudson and Delaware canal, which passes through this place. It contains several churches, a bank, and large railroad depôts.

PORT KENDALL, a post-village of Essex co., N. Y., on the W. shore of Lake Champlain.

PORT KENNEDY, a post-village of Upper Merion township, Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river, and the Reading railroad, 4 miles above Norristown. Population in 1850, 449.

PORT KENT, a post-village of Essex co., New York, on Lake Champlain, about 150 miles N. from Albany.

PORTLAND, a city, port of entry, and seat of justice of Cumberland county, Maine, 60 miles S. S. W. from Augusta, and 105 miles N. E. from Boston. Lat. 43° 4' 25" N. lon., 70° 45' 50" W. It is pleasantly situated on a narrow peninsula or tongue of land projecting from the W. shore of Casco bay. This peninsula is about 3 miles in length from E. to W., and rises at each extremity into considerable elevations, giving the city a beautiful appearance as it is approached from the sea. Its breadth averages about three-quarters of a mile, though it is much wider than this at its eastern termination, and also at its junction with the mainland. The harbor is one of the best on the Atlantic coast, the anchorage being protected on every side by land, the communication with the ocean easy and direct, and the depth sufficient for the largest ships. Although in a northern latitude, it is never closed by ice except in the most extreme cold weather, and then only for a few days. The principal entrance lies between the mainland on the S. W., and House island on the N. E., and is defended by Fort Preble on the former, and Fort Scammel on the latter. The city, with but few exceptions, is regularly laid out, and handsomely built, chiefly of brick. Several of the streets are remarkable for their elegance. Main street is the principal thoroughfare, and extends from Munjoy's hill on the E. to Bramhall's hill on the W., following the ridge of the peninsula throughout its entire length. In hardly any other city are to be found so many beautiful shade-trees. It is estimated that there are not less than 8000 of these scattered throughout the various parts of the town.

Among the public buildings of Portland, the custom house, situate at the corner of Exchange and Middle streets, is perhaps the most prominent. It is constructed of sienite, 136 feet in length, 72 feet in breadth, and three stories high. The principal front on Middle street is adorned with a colonnade, consisting of eight beautifully fluted columns, (each a single stone,) supporting an Ionic entablature at the top. From the centre of the edifice rises a copper-covered dome, the base of which is 62 feet in diameter, and the summit 75 feet above the pavement. There are also the city hall, and the court house, (formerly occupied as the state house,) both large and imposing structures. The latter is very pleasantly situated. The churches are as follows, viz. 5 Trinitarian Congregationalists, 2 Unitarian Congregationalists, 4 Methodist Episcopal, 3 Calvinists, 2 Protestant Episcopal, 1 Christian Society, 1 Freewill Baptist, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Swedenborgian, and several others—in all 26. Of the buildings, 1 is of granite, 9 of brick, and the remainder of wood.

Portland contains several flourishing scientific and literary institutions, among which may be mentioned the Portland Society of Natural History, having for its object to create an interest and diffuse information in regard to the natural sciences. It has a valuable cabinet of natural history, consisting of specimens of the ornithology of the state; shells of more than 4000 different species; mineralogical and geological specimens, fishes, reptiles, &c. It numbers about 275 members. Organized in 1843. The Portland Athenæum, incorporated in 1826, has about 140 proprietors, and a library of 8000 volumes. Besides the above, may be named the Mercantile Association, with a rapidly increasing library, and the Portland Sacred Music Society. The number of public schools in the city and its environs is 25: teachers, 57; average number of pupils in attendance, 3000; amount of money appropriated for school purposes for the year 1852-3, $20,510.72. The school houses are generally substantial brick edifices, constructed upon the most approved plan. A commodious building is now being erected for the state reform school, and is calculated to accommodate all the unfortunate boys in the state who may need such a place of discipline. There are 11 newspapers published in Portland, 2 of them daily, and 9 weekly.

Portland enjoys excellent facilities both for ocean commerce and inland trade. In addition to its superior harbor advantages it has railway communication with the seaboard for many hundred miles, and with the various important sections of the interior. The Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad, now about to be completed, will connect Portland with Montreal in Canada, and thereby form a direct channel for the introduction of the rich commerce of the river St. Lawrence, and of the great lakes to this Atlantic city. There are also several other railroads radiating from this point now in process of construction. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 77,575 $\frac{9}{16}$ tons registered, and 28,403 $\frac{4}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 19,688 $\frac{7}{8}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, 8157 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons in the cod and mackerel fisheries, and 1290 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 384, (tons, 57,610,) of which 186 (tons, 38,512,) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 443, (tons, 69,893,) of which 50,742 tons were in American bottoms. One of the chief articles of import is molasses, of which there were landed upon the wharves in 1852, upwards of 7,000,000 gallons. The receipts of this article for 1850 were 104 cargoes, consisting of 35,788 hogsheads, 1660 tierces, and 771 barrels; and for the first four months of 1853 the receipts of molasses was greater than for the whole year 1850. The imports of sugar for 1851 amounted to 2,057,633 pounds; of salt, 150,000 bushels; of railroad iron, 9,856,496 pounds; of flour, about 161,000 barrels, and of corn, 200,000 bushels. The total value of the imports for 1852 amounted to about \$1,000,000; and of the exports, \$800,000.

The manufactures of Portland are peculiar to a commercial city. Ship-building has been long and successfully carried on. During the year ending June 30, 1852, 44 vessels, (30 of them ships,) with an aggregate burthen of 16,293 $\frac{6}{8}$ tons were admeasured. The most important establishments are the Portland Company, for making locomotives, railroad cars, &c., chartered in 1846, with a capital of \$250,000, and the Portland Sugar House. The latter is owned by a single individual, Mr. J. B. Brown, and conducted upon an extensive scale. The first building was erected in 1845; since then, additions have been made, so that the whole now cover nearly $1\frac{1}{2}$ acres of ground. Sugar of every quality is manufactured, employing about 200 hands, and consuming from 150 to 180 hogsheads of molasses daily. The financial institutions are six banks, with an aggregate capital of \$1,500,000, and an insurance office. The city is lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with pure water. It is considered as remarkably healthy, never having been visited by the cholera, even when that disease raged fearfully in other neighboring cities.

Portland was settled from England in 1632. Its Indian name was Machigonne. During the wars in which the colonies were involved with the Indians, the French, and the mother country, this town suffered the severest disasters: three times it was entirely destroyed. Since the Revolution, its increase in wealth and population has been constant, and for the most part uniform. The city charter was granted in 1832. Population in 1830, 12,601; in 1840, 15,218; in 1850, 20,879; in 1853, about 22,500.

PORTLAND, a thriving post-village of Middlesex county, Connecticut, on the left bank of Connecticut river, nearly opposite Middletown, about 15 miles S. E. by S. from Hartford. Near by, and bordering the river, are the famous Portland quarries, from which building material is annually exported to the value of half a million of dollars. About 2000 men are here employed within an area not exceeding 100 acres. The stone is of a beautiful reddish color, and of a very superior quality; being soft, it is easily worked, and yet is remarkable for its durability, as it increases in hardness with time. Named from the celebrated English quarries. Population of the township, 2836.

PORTLAND, a post-township of Chautauque co., New York, on Lake Erie, intersected by the Lake Shore railroad. Population, 1905.

PORTLAND, a post-village in Dallas co., Alabama, on Alabama river, 60 miles W. S. W. from Montgomery.

PORTLAND, a post-village of Jefferson county, Kentucky, on the Ohio river, 3 miles below Louisville, and at the foot of the rapids. It is at the lower termination of the canal made around the rapids, and has considerable business. Population in 1853, about 800.

PORTLAND, a township in the N. W. part of Erie co., Ohio, intersected by the Lake Shore, Mansfield and Sandusky, and the Mad River and Lake Erie railroads. Population in 1850, including Sandusky city, 5088.

PORTLAND, a small village of Jefferson co., Ohio.

PORTLAND, a post-township in the S. E.

part of Ionia co., Michigan; intersected by the Grand river. Population, 763.

PORTLAND, a post-village in the above township, on Grand river, 21 miles W. N. W. from Lansing.

PORTLAND, a post-village of Fountain co., Indiana, on the Wabash river and canal, 7 miles above Covington.

PORTLAND, a post-village, capital of Jay co., Indiana, on the Salamonie river, and on the plank-road from Winchester to Fort Wayne, 90 miles E. N. E. from Indianapolis. Laid out in 1837. Population, estimated at 300.

PORTLAND, a thriving village of Putnam co., Indiana, on Raccoon creek, 15 miles N. W. from Greencastle. Population, 300.

PORTLAND, a post-village in Whitesides co., Illinois, on Rock river, 140 miles N. by W. from Springfield.

PORTLAND, a post-village of Callaway co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, 30 miles below Jefferson City. It has a good landing, and several stores.

PORTLAND, a small post-village of Van Buren co., Iowa, on the River Des Moines, about 72 miles S. S. W. from Iowa City.

PORTLAND, a post-town of Oregon Territory, on the Willamette river, at the head of ship navigation, 15 miles from its mouth. It is the largest and most commercial town in Oregon. It contains the territorial penitentiary, and 1 or 2 newspaper offices. Population in 1853, estimated at 6000.

PORTLAND HEAD, a small point of land on the W. side of the entrance to Portland harbor. A lighthouse, 85 feet high, containing a fixed light, stands near its extremity. Lat. $43^{\circ} 36' N.$, lon. $70^{\circ} 12' W.$

PORTLAND MILLS, a post-office of Parke co., Indiana.

PORTLANDVILLE, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

PORT LAVACCA, a post-village, capital of Calhoun co., Texas, on the W. side of Lavacca bay, about 160 miles S. S. E. from Austin.

PORT LAWRENCE, a township in the N. E. part of Lucas co., Ohio, on the left side of the Maumee river, and on the Wabash and Erie canal. Population, exclusive of Toledo, 134.

PORT LEON, a port of entry of Wakulla co., Florida, on the E. side of the Wakulla river, about 15 miles S. S. E. from Tallahassee. The shipping, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of $118\frac{3}{5}$ tons enrolled and licensed, all of which was employed in the coast trade.

PORT LEYDEN, a post-office of Lewis co., New York.

PORT LOUISA, a post-village of Louisa co., Iowa, 40 miles S. E. from Iowa City.

PORT MERCER, a post-office of Mercer co., New Jersey.

PORT MITCHELL, a village of Noble co., Indiana, on the South fork of the Elkhart river, 123 miles N. N. E. from Indianapolis, was formerly the seat of justice.

PORT NORRIS, a village of Cumberland co., New Jersey, on the right side of Maurice river, about 80 miles S. by W. from Trenton.

PORT OLIVER, a small village of Simpson co., Kentucky.

PORT ONTARIO, a post-village of Oswego co., New York, on Lake Ontario, at the mouth of Salmon river, 170 miles W. N. W. from Albany. It has an improved harbor.

PORT ORFORD CITY, a village of Umpqua co., Oregon, about 200 miles S. S. W. from Salem.

PORT PENN, a village of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania, on the West branch of the Susquehanna river, 13 miles E. from Williamsport. The West Branch canal passes through it, and boat-building is carried on.

PORT PENN, a post-village of Newcastle co., Delaware, on Delaware bay, opposite Reedy Island, about 30 miles N. from Dover. It has 1 hotel and 4 or 5 stores.

PORT PERRY, a post-office of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania.

PORT PERRY, a small post-village of Perry co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river, about 60 miles S. S. E. from St. Louis.

PORT PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

PORT REPUBLIC, formerly GRAVELLY LANDING, a post-village of Atlantic co., New Jersey, on Nacote creek, about 15 miles E. N. E. from May's Landing.

PORT REPUBLIC, a post-village in Calvert co., Maryland.

PORT REPUBLIC, a post-village in Rockingham co., Virginia, on the Shenandoah, about 100 miles W. N. W. from Richmond.

PORT RICHMOND, a post-village of Richmond co., New York, on the N. side of Staten Island.

PORT RICHMOND, Pa. See RICHMOND.

PORT ROYAL, a post-village of Juniata co., Pennsylvania, on the Tuscarora creek, 3 miles S. from Mifflintown.

PORT ROYAL, a post-village of Caroline co., Virginia, on the right bank of Rappahannock river, 22 miles below Fredericksburg. Grain and tobacco are shipped here in steamboats, for which there is a good landing. Population, about 600.

PORT ROYAL, a post-village of Montgomery co., Tennessee, on Red river, about 40 miles N. W. from Nashville.

PORT ROYAL, a post-village of Henry co., Kentucky, about 50 miles E. N. E. from Louisville, has 2 stores.

PORT ROYAL, a small village of Morgan co., Indiana, on White river, 16 miles S. S. W. from Indianapolis.

PORT SHELDON, a village in Ottawa co., Michigan, on Lake Michigan, about 200 miles W. N. W. from Detroit.

PORTSMOUTH, a city, port of entry, and semi-capital of Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 54 miles N. by E. from Boston, is situated on the right bank of the Piscataqua river, about three miles from the ocean, and at the terminus of the Eastern, the Concord, and the Portland and Saco railroads, by which it has communication with nearly every section of New England. Lat. 43° 4' 35" N., lon. 70° 45' 50" W. This city, the commercial metropolis and only seaport of the state, is built on a beautiful peninsula, formed by the Piscataqua, and connected by bridges with Kittery in Maine, and with Newcastle on Grand Island. The harbor which lies between the town and the mouth of the river is capacious, deep, easy of access, and much frequented by vessels in bad weather: 480 have been counted here at one time; and it is estimated that 2000 could easily find convenient anchorage. The formation of sandbars or ice is rendered impossible by the rapid tides, which centuries since have carried every earthy substance out to sea, leaving a smooth rock bottom, with a depth of water varying from 35 to 75 feet. The principal entrance is between the mainland and the E. side of Great island, and is defended by Fort McClary on the former, and Fort Constitution on the N. W. point of the latter. The city stands on a gentle acclivity overlooking the harbor, and is remarkable for its healthy atmosphere and fine gardens. Many of the streets are adorned with a profusion of shade-trees. The principal public buildings are the State Lunatic Asylum, the State Arsenal, the Athenæum, and two market houses. Besides these, there are eleven churches, some of which are elegant structures. The chief object of interest, however, is the United States navy-yard, situated on an island near the E. side of the river. Among other things, it contains three immense ship-houses, and a floating balance-dock, constructed at a cost of about $800,000. It is 350 feet by 105, and has 24 pumps, worked by two steam-engines. The North America, the first ship of the line launched in the western hemisphere, was built on Badger's island in this harbor, during the Revolution. The literary advantages of Portsmouth are highly respectable. Besides the Athenæum, which has a well-selected library of about 10,000 volumes, and a cabinet of curiosities, there are several libraries belonging to church societies. The schools are numerous, and conducted upon the most approved system. The building erected in 1849 for the Haven School cost $12,000. Nine newspapers are published, 2 or 3 of which are issued daily.

Portsmouth has less commerce now than formerly, though it is still the centre of an important trade, both foreign and coastwise. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 16,654 $\frac{1}{4}$ tons registered, and 8237 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 5723 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and the remainder in the cod and mackerel fisheries. The foreign arrivals for the year were 78, (tons, 8493,) of which 2823 were in American bottoms. The clearances for foreign ports were 64, (tons, 7466.) The imports amounted to \$99,605; the exports, to \$66,927; and the duties collected, to about \$30,000. During the same year, 14 vessels, (10 of them ships,) with an aggregate burthen of 9515 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons, were admeasured. Some of the finest-built ships, both for the mercantile and naval service, have been supplied from the yards of Portsmouth.

Manufacturing is extensively carried on. Among the most important corporations may be mentioned the Portsmouth Steam Factory, giving employment to about 400 hands, who produce 3,000,000 yards of the finest quality of lawns annually, and the Sagamore Manufacturing Company. The leading articles of manufacture are ropes, spool cotton, hosiery, iron castings, shoes, &c. The city is supplied by means of pipes with excellent water, from a fountain in the suburb. It contains 3 banks, with an aggregate capital of $491,000. Portsmouth has a large amount of capital invested in railroads, navigation, manufactures, &c. in other places; and though it has suffered in former years from disastrous fires, and has been compelled to relinquish to the larger cities some of its former extensive trade, still it has steadily increased in wealth and population. Population in 1850, 9739; in 1853, about 11,000.

PORTSMOUTH, a post-township in Newport co., Rhode Island, 6 miles N. N. E. from Newport. Population, 1833.

PORTSMOUTH, a post-township of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania. Population, 882.

PORTSMOUTH, a seaport and important naval depôt of the United States, and capital of Norfolk county, Virginia, on the left bank of the Elizabeth river, opposite the city of Norfolk, 8 miles from Hampton Roads, and 160 miles by water S. E. from Richmond. Lat. 36° 50' N., lon. 76° 19' W. The river, which is about half a mile wide, forms a safe and excellent harbor, accessible to vessels of the largest size, in which several ships of war are usually lying at anchor. The General Government has at Gosport, a suburb of Portsmouth, a large and costly dry-dock, which is capable of admitting the largest ships. More than 1000 hands are sometimes employed in the construction of vessels at the navy-yard. Besides the United States naval hospital in the vicinity, a large and showy building of stuccoed brick, Portsmouth contains a court house, 6 churches, a branch of the Bank of Virginia, and the Virginia Literary, Scientific, and Military Academy. The town is situated on level ground, immediately below the junction of the southern and eastern branches of the river. The streets are straight and rectangular. Portsmouth is the terminus of the Seaboard and Roanoke railroad, which, with connecting lines, opens a communication with Charleston, South Carolina. Since the reconstruction of this railroad the town has increased considerably in population and business. Ferry-boats ply constantly from Portsmouth to Norfolk, and a daily line of steam-boats communicates with Richmond. Five newspapers are published here. Founded in 1752. Population, 8626.

PORTSMOUTH, a post-village of Carteret co., North Carolina, on the S. side of Ocracoke Inlet, about 65 miles E. from Newbern.

PORTSMOUTH, a flourishing post-village, capital of Scioto county, Ohio, is beautifully situated on the Ohio river, just above the mouth of the Scioto, and at the terminus of the Ohio and Erie canal, 115 miles above Cincinnati, and 90 miles S. from Columbus. It stands on a plain of moderate extent, partly enclosed by hills. Steamboats ply regularly between this town and Cincinnati and other river ports. Portsmouth is a place of considerable activity in business, and is steadily increasing in population and importance. The Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad terminates here. The village contains a court house, 1 bank, 6 or 8 churches, 2 large and commodious school houses, with 13 teachers and about 700 pupils, 2 iron foundries, 1 nail factory, and 1 forge; 4 newspapers are published here. Iron ore, stone coal, and fine building stone are abundant in the vicinity. Population in 1850, 4011; in 1853, about 5000.

PORTSMOUTH, a thriving village of Saginaw co., Michigan, on the right bank of Saginaw river, 6 miles from its mouth, and 110 N. N. W. from Detroit. Large quantities of pine lumber are sawed here and exported.

PORTSMOUTH, a small village of Carroll co., Illinois, on the Mississippi river, about 180 miles N. by W. from Springfield.

PORT TOBACCO, a post-village, capital of Charles co., Maryland, is situated at the head of a bay which sets up from the Potomac river, about 30 miles S. from Washington. It contains a court house, jail, and a newspaper office.

PORT TOWNSEND, a thriving settlement, capital of Jefferson co., Washington Territory, on Puget sound. From its position, it will doubtless become a port of entry. The present collector (Mr. Ely) has recommended the custom house to be removed to this place. It has a post-office of its own name.

PORT UNION, a post-office of Butler co., O.

PORTVILLE, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Cattaraugus co., New York. Population, 747.

PORT WASHINGTON, a small village of Washington co., Mississippi.

PORT WASHINGTON, a thriving post-village of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, on the Tuscarawas river, and on the Ohio canal, 90 miles N. E. from Columbus. Pop. in 1853, about 400.

PORT WASHINGTON, or OZAUKEE, capital of Ozaukee co., Wisconsin, on the W. shore of Lake Michigan, 31 miles N. from Milwaukee, and 90 miles E. N. E. from Madison. The name of the post-office is Ozaukee. The produce of the county is mostly shipped here in steamboats. The village contains 1 or 2 newspaper offices, several churches, 3 mills, 4 wheelwright shops, 1 iron foundry, 2 breweries, and about 10 stores. Population in 1846, 50; in 1850, 756; in 1853, about 2500.

PORT WILLIAM, a post-village of Clinton co., Ohio, 9 miles N. from Wilmington.

PORT WILLIAM, a post-office of Franklin co., Missouri, 45 miles W. by S. from St. Louis.

POSEY, a county forming the S. W. extremity of Indiana, contains 390 square miles. The Ohio river bounds it on the S., and the Wabash on the W. The surface is mostly undulating, excepting the broad and extensive bottom lands, which are subject to annual inundation and are extremely fertile. The uplands also produce abundant crops of corn and wheat. In 1850 this county produced 895,794 bushels of corn; 21,245 of wheat; 30,209 of oats; and 846 tons of hay. It contained 18 churches, 1 newspaper office; 1000 pupils attending public schools, and 50 attending other schools. Coal is abundant. The timber lands occupy about three-fifths of the surface. A plank-road, 16 miles long, extends from New Harmony to Mount Vernon, the county seat. Organized in 1814, and named in honor of General Thomas Posey, governor of Indiana Territory. Pop., 12,549.

POSEY, a post-office of Madison co., Ky.

POSEY, a township in Clay co., Indiana. Population, 1218.

POSEY, a township of Clinton co., Indiana. Population, 893.

POSEY, a township in Fayette co., Indiana. Population, 1185.

POSEY, a township of Franklin co., Indiana. Population, 940.

POSEY, a township in Rush co., Indiana. Population, 870.

POSEY, a township in Switzerland co., Indiana. Population, 2395.

POSEY, a township in Washington co., Indiana. Population, 1817.

POSEYVILLE, a thriving post-village of Posey co., Indiana, about 20 miles N. N. E. from Mount Vernon. It has several stores.

POST CREEK, a post-office of Chemung co., New York.

POST MILL VILLAGE, a post-village in Orange co., Vermont.

POST OAK, a post-office of Iredell co., N. C.

POST OAK, a post-office of Yallobusha co., Mississippi.

POST OAK, a post-township in Johnson co., Missouri. Population, 908.

POST OAK, a small post-village of Johnson co., Missouri, about 55 miles S. E. from Independence.

POST OAK SPRINGS, a post-office of Roane co., Tennessee.

POST OF ARKANSAS. See ARKANSAS POST.

POSTVILLE, a post-village of Herkimer co., New York, 20 miles N. N. E. from Utica.

POSTVILLE, a small post-village of Logan co., Illinois, about 30 miles N. E. from Springfield.

POSTVILLE, a post-village in Allomakee co., Iowa, 105 miles N. from Iowa City.

POTATO CREEK, of Upson co., Georgia, flows S. W. into Flint river.

POTATO CREEK, a post-office of Ashe co., North Carolina.

POTAWATAMIE, or POTTAWATTOMIE, a county in the W. S. W. part of Iowa, bordering on the Indian Territory, has an area of 700 square miles. The Missouri river, navigable by steamboats, forms the boundary on the W.; the W. branch of Nishnabotona river flows through the E. part, and Boyer river through the N. W. part. The surface is diversified with fine scenery, and presents a fair proportion of prairie and timber. The soil is fertile, adapted to grain and grass. Indian corn and butter are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 31,955 bushels of Indian corn; 9117 of wheat, and 8940 pounds of butter. It contained 1 newspaper office. This county is the most populous in the western part of the state, and is settling rapidly. Named from the Pottawattomie Indians, who were removed from the territory about the year 1845. Capital, Kanesville. Population, 7828.

POTAWATAMIES, a tribe of Indians formerly dwelling about Lake Huron and in Indiana. They have been removed to the west of the Mississippi.

POTEAU RIVER, Arkansas, rises in Scott co., and falls into the Arkansas river at Fort Smith.

POTECASI, a post-office of Northampton co., North Carolina.

POTOMAC, a large river of Virginia and Maryland, is formed by the North and South branches, which unite on the northern border of Virginia, about 20 miles S. E. from Cumberland. It flows first north-eastward to Hancock, passing through several ridges of mountains. It pursues a south-easterly direction, and receives from the right its largest affluent, the Shenandoah, just before its passage through the Blue Ridge at Harper's Ferry. The volume of the Shenandoah at their confluence is but little inferior to that of the main stream. Flowing thence south-eastward nearly 100 miles to Georgetown, it falls over the edge of the primitive formation, and changes its course to the south and south-west for a distance of about 50 miles. Again resuming its general direction, it expands in an estuary of 6 or 8 miles in width, and flows into Chesapeake bay about 38° N. lat., and 76° 10' W. lon. The length, exclusive of the branches, is estimated at 350 miles. The tide ascends to Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, 120 miles from its mouth.

The principal towns on its banks are Cumberland, Georgetown, Washington, and Alexandria. It is navigable for the largest vessels to Washington City. The Chesapeake and Ohio canal extends along this river from Cumberland to Georgetown. The Potomac, through its whole course, forms the boundary between Maryland and Virginia. For a description of the Potomac Falls, see page 668.

POTOMAC CREEK, in the E. part of Virginia, flows through Stafford co., into the Potomac river. It is navigable by schooners for several miles.

POTOSI, a post-village, capital of Washington county, Missouri, about 70 miles S. S. W. from St. Louis. It contains, besides the county buildings, several churches, and an academy. Rich mines of lead (in the form of sulphuret) and of iron are worked in the vicinity. The lead ore yields 70 or 80 per cent. of metal.

POTOSI, a small village of Crawford co., Wisconsin.

POTOSI, a flourishing town of Potosi township, Grant county, Wisconsin, on Grant river, near its entrance into the Mississippi, 15 miles above Dubuque. It is situated in a narrow, deep, and picturesque valley or ravine, about 3 miles in length, through which a stream of good water flows. The town is divided into three portions or villages, namely, Dublin, Lafayette, and Van Buren. It is the largest and most commercial place in the county, and is likely to become more important as the principal depôt of the mineral region of Wisconsin. Large quantities of lead are mined in the county, and shipped at Potosi in steamboats. The principal part of the town is about 2 miles from the steamboat landing, which is at the mouth of Grant river. A weekly newspaper is published here. The town is incorporated. Population in 1853, estimated at 2500.

POTSDAM, a thriving post-village of Potsdam township, St. Lawrence county, New York, on Racket river, and on the route of the Potsdam and Watertown railroad, 11 miles E. N. E. from Canton. It contains several churches, a large academy, a bank, 2 newspaper offices, and extensive iron works, machine shops, and mills. Population of the village estimated at 1500. Potsdam township is traversed by the Northern railroad. Population of the township, 5349.

POTTER, a county in the N. part of Pennsylvania, bordering on New York, has an area of 1100 square miles. This county is one of the most elevated in the state, forming part of the dividing ridge between the waters which flow into the Ohio on the S., and the St. Lawrence on the N. The Genesee river rises in it and flows northward; the Alleghany rises near the middle and flows westward; it is also drained by Pine, Oswayo, and Kettle creeks. The surface is uneven, and mostly covered by thick forests.

The soil is well adapted to grazing. Oats, hay, butter, maple sugar, and pine lumber are the chief articles of export. In 1850 it produced 80,314 bushels of oats; 8717 tons of hay; 168,677 pounds of butter, and 134,887 of maple sugar. There were 50 saw mills, 3 flour and grist mills, and 2 pot and pearl asheries. It contained 1 church, 2 newspaper offices, 1020 pupils attending public schools, and .20 attending another school. Stone coal and iron ore are found. Formed in 1804, and named in honor of General James Potter, an officer in the war of the Revolution. Capital, Coudersport. Population, 6048.

POTTER, a post-township in the N. part of Yates co., New York. Population, 2194.

POTTER, a township of Centre co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles S. S. E. from Bellefonte. Population, 2216.

POTTER'S CREEK, a post-office of Ocean co., New Jersey.

POTTER'S HILL, a post-office of Washington co., Rhode Island.

POTTER'S HILL, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

POTTER'S HOLLOW, a post-village in the S. W. part of Albany co., New York.

POTTER'S MILLS, a post-village of Centre co., Pennsylvania, 73 miles N. W. from Harrisburg, contains a woollen factory and a grist mill.

POTTERSVILLE, a post-office of Cheshire co., New Hampshire.

POTTERSVILLE, a post-village of Warren co., New York, on Schroon river, about 25 miles N. by W. from Caldwell.

POTTERSVILLE, a post-village of Hunterdon co., N. J., about 33 miles N. from Trenton.

POTTSVILLE, a post-office of Mahoning co., Ohio.

POTTSVILLE, a post-office of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

POTTS' CREEK, in the S. W. central part of Virginia, rises in Monroe co., flows north-eastward, and enters Jackson's river near Covington, in Alleghany county.

POTTS' CREEK, a post-office of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania.

POTTS GROVE, Pa. See POTTSTOWN.

POTTS GROVE, a township of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Schuylkill river, and intersected by the Reading railroad. Population, 3353.

POTTS GROVE, a small post-village of Northumberland co., Pennsylvania, 66 miles N. from Harrisburg.

POTTS' MILLS, a post-village of Jessamine co., Kentucky.

POTTSTOWN, or POTTS GROVE, a thriving post-borough of Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Schuylkill river, at the mouth of Manatawney creek, 37 miles W. N. W. from Philadelphia. The Philadelphia and Reading railroad passes through it, and the Schuylkill canal runs on the other side of the river, which is crossed here by a bridge. Pottstown contains several churches, an academy, a newspaper office, and many neat dwellings of brick and stone. There are several manufactories in the vicinity. Incorporated in 1815. Pop. in 1850, 1664; in 1853, about 2000.

POTTSVILLE, a handsome town of Norwegian township, capital of Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, at the terminus of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, 93 miles N. W. from Philadelphia, and 35 miles from Reading. It is situated on the Schuylkill river, just above its passage through Sharp mountain, and at the mouth of Norwegian creek. It is remarkable on account of the rapidity of its growth, the picturesque beauty of its situation, and the immense trade in coal of which it is the centre. The ground is uneven, and rises so abruptly in some places that sites for building could only be obtained by levelling the mountain or walling the bank of the river. Above the junction of the streams, the valley widens, and affords space for several streets, some of which are nearly level. The principal business is transacted on Centre street, which extends along the right bank of Norwegian creek. The town is generally well built, and contains a large proportion of brick houses. The principal public buildings are the court house, the town hall, the jail, a bank, and about 15 churches. The jail is a new and costly edifice, faced with sandstone. Pottsville has a large and respectable academy, besides many private seminaries. Gas is used to light the streets. Among the manufactories are 5 machine shops, 1 rolling mill, 1 woollen factory, and 1 carpet factory. Five or six newspapers are published here. The coal is conveyed to this place from numerous mines in the vicinity by branch railroads. The greater part of it is sent to market by the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, and the other part by the Schuylkill navigation. The coal trade increases rapidly from year to year. The produce of the Schuylkill coalfield in 1851 was 2,184,240 tons; in 1852 it amounted to near 3,000,000 tons. The mountain ridges which surround Pottsville are too rugged and sterile for cultivation, but this region has become by means of its mineral resources one of the most populous parts of the state, and already presents a large number of thriving towns and villages. Pottsville was commenced in 1825. The seat of justice was established here in 1847. Population in 1840, 4345, and in 1850, 7515; in 1853, about 10,000.

POTTSVILLE, a small post-village of Washington co., Iowa.

POUCH CREEK, a post-office of Campbell co., Tennessee.

POUGHKEEPSIE, a handsome city, capital of Dutchess co., New York, on the E. bank of the Hudson river, and on the railroad of that name, 75 miles N. from New York, and 70 miles S. from Albany. Lat. 40° 41' N., lon. 73° 55' W. It is situated on a plain, and regularly laid out, the principal street extending eastward from the river. It is the largest town between New York and Albany. It contains about 16 churches, belonging to the Dutch Reformed, Episcopalians, Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Friends, Universalists, and Catholics; a collegiate school, the Dutchess academy, and several seminaries for girls. Three or four newspapers are published here weekly. The collegiate school of this place is a large and costly building, situated on College hill. A number of steamboats and sailing vessels are owned here. Poughkeepsie has a variety of manufactories, the most important productions of which are cotton-goods, machinery, farming implements, carriages, iron ware, guns, carpets, earthen ware, flour, leather, and beer. The city contains 4 banks. Incorporated in 1801. Pop. of Poughkeepsie township in 1850, 13,944; of the city, in 1853, is estimated at 14,000.

POUGHKEEPSIE, a post-village in Allen co., Indiana.

POUGHQUAG, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

POULTNEY, a village in Rutland co., Vermont, 65 miles S. W. from Montpelier, contains 2 or 3 churches and an academy. Population of the township, 2329.

POULTNEY, a post-office of Delaware co., Iowa.

POULTNEY RIVER, a fine mill-stream of Rutland co., Vermont, falls into an arm of Lake Champlain.

POUND, a post-office of Russell co., Va.

POUNDRIDGE, a post-township in the E. part of Westchester co., N. Y. Pop., 1486.

POVERTY HILL, a post-office of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

POWAICKUN, a post-office of Winnebago co., Wisconsin.

POWDER RIVER, in the E. central part of Missouri Territory, rises among the Black hills, and flowing in a general northerly direction, falls into the Yellowstone river.

POWDER RIVER, a small stream of Oregon Territory, falls into the S. branch of Snake river.

POWDER SPRING GAP, a post-office of Grain-ger co., Tennessee.

POWDER SPRINGS, a post-village of Cobb co., Georgia, 12 miles S. W. from Marietta, has 2 churches, and 300 inhabitants.

POWELL, a township in Green co., Arkansas. Population, 552.

POWELL'S CREEK, of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania, flows into the Susquehanna river from the left.

POWELL'S CREEK, of Ohio, enters the Auglaize river near its mouth, about 2 miles from Defiance.

POWELL'S MOUNTAIN, a post-office of Lee co., Virginia.

POWELL'S POINT, a post-office of Currituck co., North Carolina.

POWELL'S RIVER rises among the Cumberland or Alleghany mountains, in Lee co., in the S. W. part of Virginia, and flowing S. W. into Tennessee, unites with Clinch river, in Anderson county.

POWELL'S TAVERN, a post-office of Goochland co., Virginia, 15 miles W. from Richmond.

POWELLTON, a post-office of Brunswick co., Virginia.

POWELLTON, a post-village in Richmond co., North Carolina.

POWELLTON, a post-office of Harrison co., Texas.

POWELTON, a small post-village of Hancock co., Ga, 38 miles N. E. from Milledgeville.

POWERSVILLE, a post-village in Bracken co., Kentucky.

POWERVILLE, a post-village of Morris co., N. J., 12 miles N. E. by N. from Morristown.

POWESHIEK, a new county in the S. E. central part of Iowa, has an area of 576 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of English river, and by Beaver and Prairie creeks, affluents of Iowa river, which touches its N. E. extremity. The North fork of Skunk river flows through the S. W. part. The soil is fertile. In 1850 this county produced 26,455 bushels of Indian corn; 3011 of wheat, and 1253 pounds of wool. Named from an Indian chief. Capital, Montezuma. Population, 615.

POWHATTAN county, situated in the S. E. central part of Virginia, contains 280 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the James river, and on the S. by the Appomattox. The surface is generally level. Some portions of the soil have been exhausted by long cultivation. This can be bought at a mere nominal rate. Other parts are fertile, especially near the streams. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 215,155 bushels of corn; 115,437 of wheat; 89,189 of oats; and 1,000,490 pounds of tobacco. It contained 19 churches, and 305 pupils attending academies and other schools. The James River canal passes along the border. Organized in 1777. Capital, Scottsville. Population, 8178, of whom 2896 were free, and 5282 slaves.

POWHATTAN, a post-office of Union co., North Carolina.

POWHATTAN, a small post-village of Lawrence co., Arkansas, about 9 miles N. by E. from Smithville.

POWHATTAN COURT HOUSE, see SCOTTVILLE.

POWHATTAN POINT, a post-office of Belmont co., Ohio.

POWL'S VALLEY, a post-office of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania.

POWNAL, a post-township in Cumberland co., Maine, 34 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 1074.

POWNAL, a post-township in Bennington co., Vermont, 130 miles S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 1742.

POWOW RIVER, a fine mill-stream rising in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, and falling into the Merrimack a few miles above Newburyport.

POYNETTE, a post-village of Columbia co., Wisconsin, 21 miles N. from Madison. It has good water-power, and about 150 inhabitants.

POY SIPPI, a post-office of Waupacca co., Wis.

PRAIRIE, a county in the E. central part of Arkansas, contains about 1060 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by White river, navigable by steamboats at all seasons, and on the N. by Cypress and Des Arc bayou. The surface is nearly level, and diversified by extensive prairies, and by forests which contain the oak, ash, walnut, cypress, and cedar. The soil is generally fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, grass, butter, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 54,905 bushels of corn; 6519 of sweet potatoes; 246 bales of cotton, and 18,887 pounds of butter. There were 100 pupils attending public schools, and 20 attending another school. Capital, Brownsville. Population, 2097, of whom 1824 were free, and 273, slaves.

PRAIRIE, a township in Arkansas co., Arkansas. Population, 338.

PRAIRIE, a township in Carroll co., Arkansas. Population, 1214.

PRAIRIE, a township in Franklin co., Arkansas. Population, 497.

PRAIRIE, a township in Madison co., Arkansas. Population, 836.

PRAIRIE, a township in Marion co., Arkansas. Population, 397.

PRAIRIE, a township in Newton co., Arkansas. Population, 176.

PRAIRIE, a township in Prairie co., Arkansas. Population, 696.

PRAIRIE, a township in Washington co., Arkansas. Population, 1830.

PRAIRIE, a township in the S. W. part of Franklin co., Ohio, intersected by the Columbus and Xenia railroad. Pop., 1043.

PRAIRIE, a township in the N. part of Holmes co., Ohio. Population, 1451.

PRAIRIE, a township in Henry co., Indiana. Population, 1340.

PRAIRIE, a post-office of Henry co., Ill.

PRAIRIE, a post-office of Lewis co., Mo.

PRAIRIE, a township in Randolph co., Missouri. Population, 1764.

PRAIRIE BIRD, a post-office of Shelby co., Ill.

PRAIRIE BLUFF, a post-office of Wilcox co., Alabama.

PRAIRIE CREEK, of Alabama, enters the Tombigbee on the N. border of Marengo co.

PRAIRIE CREEK, of Indiana, flows through Daviess co. into the W. fork of White river, about 6 miles from Washington.

PRAIRIE CREEK, Iowa, rises in Benton co., and flows into Red Cedar river in Linn co.

PRAIRIE CREEK, a post-office of Dallas co., Texas.

PRAIRIE CREEK, a small village of Yell co., Arkansas.

PRAIRIE CREEK, a post-office of Vigo co., Ind.

PRAIRIE CREEK, a post-office of Logan co., Illinois.

PRAIRIE DEPÔT, a post-office of Wood co., O.

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, a beautiful post-village, capital of Crawford co., Wisconsin, is finely situated on the Mississippi, 4 miles above the mouth of Wisconsin river, and about 100 miles W. from Madison. It is one of the oldest towns of the state. It is the W. terminus of the Milwaukee and Mississippi railroad, in course of construction. The site is a level plain or prairie, 6 or 8 miles long and 1 or 2 miles wide, enclosed on the E. by rocky bluffs. The village contains a newspaper office and several churches, one of which is Catholic.

PRAIRIE DU LONG, a post-office of St. Clair co., Illinois, 125 miles S. from Springfield.

PRAIRIE DU ROCHER, a post-village of Randolph co., Illinois, 14 miles N. W. from Kaskaskia. The name is derived from a rocky bluff which rises behind the village.

PRAIRIE DU SAC, a post-village of Sauk county, Wisconsin, on the Wisconsin river, 25 miles N. W. from Madison. It is situated on the border of the prairie.

PRAIRIE FARM, a post-office of Macoupin co., Illinois.

PRAIRIE FIELD, a post-office of Rock Island co., Illinois.

PRAIRIE FORK, a post-office of Montgomery co., Missouri.

PRAIRIE GROVE, a post-office of Clark co., Io.

PRAIRIE LEA, a post-office of Caldwell co., Texas.

PRAIRIE MER ROUGE, a post-office of Morehouse parish, Louisiana.

PRAIRIEMOUNT, a post-village of Chickasaw co., Mississippi, 18 miles N. E. from Houston. It is situated in a highly productive country.

PRAIRIE PLAINS, a post-office of Grimes co., Texas.

PRAIRIE POINT, a post-office of Noxubee co., Mississippi.

PRAIRIE RIDGE, a post-office of White co., Indiana.

PRAIRIE RIVER, a post-office of Branch co., Michigan.

PRAIRIE RONDE, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Kalamazoo co., Michigan. Population, 690.

PRAIRIETON, a small post-village of Vigo co., Indiana, on the border of Honey Creek prairie, 7 miles S. S. W. from Terre Haute.

PRAIRIETON, a small village of Lawrence co., Illinois.

PRAIRIEVILLE, a post-village of Barry co., Mich., about 58 miles W. S. W. from Lansing.

PRAIRIEVILLE, a post-village of Clinton co., Indiana, on the railroad from Lafayette to Indianapolis, 12 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

PRAIRIEVILLE, a small post-village of Pike co., Mo., about 66 miles N. W. from St. Louis.

PRAIRIEVILLE, a township in Milwaukee co., Wisconsin.

PRAIRIESVILLE, a post-village of Hunterdon county, New Jersey, on the Delaware river, about 5 miles above Lambertville, has 2 or 3 stores. There is a fine bridge across the river at this place.

PRATT, a post-office of Shelby co., Ohio.

PRATTSBURG, a post-township in the N. part of Steuben co., New York. Pop., 2786.

PRATTSBURG, a post-village in the above township, about 50 miles S. S. E. from Rochester.

PRATTSBURG, a post-village in Orange co., North Carolina.

PRATTSBURG, a post-village of Talbot co., Georgia, 45 miles N. E. from Columbus.

PRATTSBURG, a post-office of Ripley co., Ind.

PRATT'S HOLLOW, a post-office of Madison co., New York.

PRATT'S LANDING, a village of Perry co. Mo., on the Mississippi, 60 miles S. by E. St. Louis.

PRATTSVILLE, a thriving post-village in Prattville township, Greene co., New York, on Schoharie creek, about 50 miles W. S. W. from Albany. It contains 3 churches, an academy, a newspaper office, and factories of various kinds, including several glove factories. It was formerly the seat of the most extensive tannery in the United States, belonging to Zadock Pratt, Esq. Population of the township, 1889; of the village, about 1800.

PRATTSVILLE, a small village of Alleghany co., Md., 13 miles E. from Cumberland.

PRATTSVILLE, village, Monroe co., Ga., on the Central railroad, 16 miles N. W. of Macon.

PRATTSVILLE, a handsome and thriving post-village of Autauga co., Alabama, on a small affluent of the Alabama river, 14 miles N. W. from Montgomery. The village contains 3 churches, 4 stores, 2 schools, 65 dwellings, 1 cotton mill, and 1 manufactory of cotton gins. The cotton mill is 150 feet long and 4 stories high. The other factory produces annually 600 cotton gins, which are regarded as superior articles. Population in 1853, estimated at 1000.

PRATTSVILLE, a post-office of Vinton co., O.

PREBLE, a county in the W. S. W. part of Ohio, bordering on Indiana, has an area of 430 square miles. It is drained by Franklin, St. Clair's, and Fourmile creeks, affluents of the Great Miami. The surface is level or undulating; the soil is of limestone formation, and very productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1,175,391 bushels of corn; 228,435 of wheat; 181,926 of oats, and 10,221 tons of hay. It contained 51 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 3120 pupils attending public schools. The county has large quarries of good limestone, and is liberally supplied with water-power. It is intersected by the Dayton and Richmond railroad, and the Hamilton, Eaton, and Richmond railroad. Capital, Eaton. Population, 21,736.

PREBLE, a post-village in Preble township, Cortland co., New York, about 130 miles W. from Albany. Pop. of the township, 1312.

PREBLE, a small village of Choctaw co., Alabama.

PREBLE, a township in the N. part of Pike co., Ohio. Population, 914.

PREBLE, a township in Adams co., Indiana. Population, 547.

PRECINCT, a small post-village of Boone co., Illinois, on the railroad from Beloit to Chicago, 80 miles W. N. W. from the latter.

PRE-EMPTION, a post-office of Mercer co., Illinois, 155 miles N. N. W. from Springfield.

PRENTISS VALE, a post-office of McKean co., Pennsylvania.

PRESCOTT, a post-township in Hampshire co., Massachusetts, 74 miles W. from Boston. Population, 737.

PRESCOTT, a post-village, capital of Pierce county, Wisconsin, at the confluence of the St. Croix with the Mississippi river, about 260 miles above Dubuque. It contains several taverns and stores.

PRESIDENT FURNACE, a post-office of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

PRESQUE ISLE, presk'eel', an unorganized county in the N. E. part of Michigan, bordering on Lake Huron; area, estimated at 700 square miles. The surface has but little elevation above the lake. The census of 1850 furnishes no return of this county, which has but few inhabitants.

PRESQUE ISLE, a post-office of Aroostook co., Maine.

PRESTON, a county in the N. W. part of Virginia, bordering on Pennsylvania and Maryland, contains nearly 800 square miles. It is drained by the Cheat river. The surface is mostly occupied by a valley which is enclosed by Chestnut ridge on the W., and the Alleghany ridge on the E. The soil produces excellent pasture, and in some parts grain succeeds well. The principal exports are lumber, Indian corn, oats, pork, and butter. In 1850 this county produced 144,276 bushels of corn; 153,496 of oats; 36,769 of wheat; 179,836 pounds of butter, and 7765 tons of hay. There were 4 tanneries, 1 woollen factory; 28 churches, 840 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending other schools. Limestone, sandstone, and slate, alternate with beds of coal; iron ore is abundant. The streams afford a vast amount of water-power. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which has recently been opened through this section, has given an impulse to the improvement of the county. Formed in 1818, and named in honor of James B. Preston, at that time governor of Virginia. Capital, Kingwood. Population, 11,708, of whom 11,621 were free, and 87, slaves.

PRESTON, a post-township in New London co., Connecticut, 44 miles E. S. E. from Hartford. Population, 1842.

PRESTON, a post-village in the above township, contains several churches.

PRESTON, a post-township near the centre of Chenango co., New York, on Chenango river. Population, 1082.

PRESTON, a post-township of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles N. by W. from Honesdale. Population, 875.

PRESTON, a post-village of Wayne co., Pa., about 200 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

PRESTON, a post-office of Yallobusha co., Mississippi.

PRESTON, a thriving post-village of Grayson co., Texas, on Red river, about 18 miles N. from Sherman, the county seat. It is at the head of steamboat navigation, and is the principal shipping point for the county.

PRESTON, a village of Wharton co., Texas, 41 miles N. from Matagorda.

PRESTON, a post-office of Pulaski co., Ark.

PRESTON, a village of Carroll co., Kentucky, on the Ohio river, just below the mouth of the Kentucky river, which separates it from Carrollton.

PRESTON, a post-office of Hamilton co., O.

PRESTON, a township in Platte co., Missouri. Population, 1270.

PRESTON, a township in Washington co., Wisconsin. Population, 504.

PRESTONBURG, a post-village, capital of Floyd co., Kentucky, on the W. fork of Big Sandy river, about 120 miles E. S. E. from Lexington. Population, about 200.

PRESTON HOLLOW, a post-village in the S. W. part of Albany co., New York, about 30 miles W. S. W. from Albany.

PRESTONVILLE, a post-office of Carroll co., Kentucky.

PREWITT'S KNOB, a post-office of Barren co., Kentucky.

PRICE, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Monroe co., Pa. Pop., 428.

PRICE, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Ind.

PRICEBURG, a post-office of Monroe co., Pa.

PRICETOWN, a small post-village of Berks co., Pa., 10 miles N. E. from Reading.

PRICETOWN, a post-office of Highland co., O.

PRICEVILLE, a post-office of Wayne co., Pa.

PRIDE'S CHURCH, a post-office of Amelia co., Virginia.

PRILLAMAN'S, a post-office of Franklin co., Virginia.

PRIMROSE, a post-village in Lee co., Iowa, 80 miles S. by W. from Iowa City.

PRIMROSE, a post-township in Dane co., Wisconsin. Population, 334.

PRIMROSE, a post-village in the above township, about 24 miles S. W. from Madison. It has 2 churches, and about 250 inhabitants.

PRINCE EDWARD, a county in the S. S. E. part of Virginia, has an area of about 300 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by Appomattox river, and drained by Harris, Briery, Bush, and Sandy creeks. The surface is somewhat diversified; the soil is naturally good, but impoverished in some degree by a bad system of cultivation. Tobacco, Indian corn, wheat, and oats are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 2,571,850 pounds of tobacco; 214,350 bushels of corn; 75,762 of wheat, and 87,229 of oats. There were 9 flour and grist mills, 6 tobacco factories, 3 tanneries, and 1 iron foundry. It contained 24 churches, 1 newspaper office, 377 pupils attending public schools, and 117 attending other schools. Copper, stone coal, and marl are found. The county is intersected by two lines of railway leading to Richmond, Danville, and Lynchburg. Capital, Prince Edward Court House. Population, 11,857, of whom 4665 were free, and 7192, slaves.

PRINCE EDWARD, a post-office of Gilmer co., Ga., 160 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

PRINCE EDWARD COURT HOUSE, a small post-village, capital of Prince Edward co., Virginia, 75 miles W. S. W. from Richmond. It contains, besides the county buildings, 1 or 2 churches and 2 academies.

PRINCE FREDERICKTOWN, a post-village, capital of Calvert co., Maryland, 35 miles S. by W. from Annapolis.

PRINCE GEORGE, a county in the S. part of Maryland, bordering on the District of Columbia, and on the Potomac river, which separates it from Virginia, contains about 600 square miles. The Potomac washes its western border, the Patuxent forms its boundary on the E. and N. E.; it is also drained by the West branch of Patuxent river, and by Anacosta and Piscataway creeks. The surface is moderately hilly; the soil is generally productive. Tobacco, Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and butter are the staples. According to the census of 1850, this county produced more tobacco than any other in the Union, and more Indian corn than any other in the state. There were raised in that year 1,590,045 bushels of corn; 231,687 of wheat; 5557 tons of hay; 8,380,851 pounds of tobacco, and 100,917 pounds of butter. There were 2 cotton factories, 1 woollen factory, 1 iron furnace, 1 machine shop, 2 manufactories of farming implements, and 4 flour and grist mills. It contained 31 churches, 1 newspaper office; 240 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending other schools. The underlying strata are shell, marl, and cemented sand resembling sandstone; large quantities of iron are found. The county is intersected by the Baltimore and Washington railroad. Organized in 1695. Capital, Upper Marlborough. Population, 21,549, of whom 10,039 were free, and 11,510, slaves.

PRINCE GEORGE, a county in the S. E. part of Virginia, has an area of about 300 square miles. James river forms its northern boundary, the Appomattox flows along its north-western border until it enters the former stream, and it is also drained by the sources of Blackwater river. The surface is moderately hilly; the soil of middling quality. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 261,510 bushels of corn; 81,042 of wheat; 23,600 of oats, and 32,988 pounds of butter. There were 19 manufactories of wooden ware, besides other establishments; 14 churches, and 198 pupils attending public schools. The Appomattox railroad passes along the border of the county, and James river is navigable by steamboats in this part of its course. Capital, Prince George Court House. Population, 7596, of whom 3188 were free, and 4408, slaves.

PRINCE GEORGE COURT HOUSE, a post-village, capital of Prince George co., Virginia, 24 miles S. S. E. from Richmond.

PRINCESS ANNE, a county forming the S. E. extremity of Virginia, bordering on North Carolina and the Atlantic. The area is about 420 square miles. The Chesapeake bay washes its N. border; Cape Henry forms the N. E. extremity. The surface is level; the soil sandy. Large quantities of firewood and lumber (pine and cypress) are procured from the forests for the Norfolk market. Indian corn is the staple product of the farms. In 1850 there were raised 347,141 bushels of corn; 60,024 of oats, and 1593 tons of hay. There were 4 grist and saw mills, and 2 farming implement manufactories; 17 churches, and 819 pupils attending public schools. Formed from Norfolk in 1691. Capital, Princess Anne Court House. Population, 7669, of whom 4539 were free, and 3130, slaves.

PRINCESS ANNE, a post-village, capital of Somerset county, Maryland, on Manokin river, near the head of tide-water and navigation, 18 miles from its mouth, and about 100 miles S. E. from Annapolis. It contains a brick court house, a jail, bank, 2 newspaper offices, and several churches.

PRINCESS ANNE COURT HOUSE, a post-village, capital of Princess Anne county, Virginia, 137 miles S. E. from Richmond. It contains 2 churches.

PRINCETON, a post-township in Washington co., Maine, 140 miles N. E. by E. from Augusta. Population, 280.

PRINCETON, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 45 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population, 1318.

PRINCETON, a post-township of Schenectady co., New York, 20 miles N. W. from Albany. Population, 1031.

PRINCETON, a pleasant post-borough of Princeton township, Mercer county, New Jersey, 40 miles N. E. from Philadelphia, and 10 miles N. E. from Trenton. It is situated on an elevated ridge which rises by long and gradual acclivity, and commands an extensive prospect towards the E. The New Jersey railroad and the Delaware and Raritan canal pass about 1 mile S. E. from the town. It is the seat of the Princeton college, which ranks among the first literary institutions of the country, and was founded by the Presbyterians at Elizabethtown in 1746, and removed to Princeton in 1757. The college edifice, called Nassau Hall, is 176 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 4 stories high. Princeton contains several churches, a bank, and a theological seminary of the Presbyterian church, founded about the year 1813. A weekly newspaper and the Princeton Review, a literary and religious periodical of high character, are published here. A battle was fought here, January 3, 1777, between Washington and Col. Mawhood. Pop. of township, 3021; of the borough, 2500.

PRINCETON, a post-office of Lawrence co., Pa.

PRINCETON, a post-village, capital of Mercer co., Virginia, 270 miles W. from Richmond. It has 2 churches.

PRINCETON, a post-office of Jackson co., Ala.

PRINCETON, a post-borough, capital of Washington co., Mississippi, on Mississippi river, 90 miles N. W. from Jackson.

PRINCETON, a township in Dallas co., Arkansas. Population, 1163.

PRINCETON, a post-village, capital of Dallas co., Arkansas, about 75 miles S. by W. from Little Rock.

PRINCETON, a post-village, capital of Caldwell county, Kentucky, about 230 miles W. S. W. from Frankfort. It is surrounded by a fertile region, and it has considerable trade. It is the seat of Cumberland College, founded in 1825, and contains 4 churches, an academy, and a bank. Two newspapers are published here. Population in 1853, about 1500.

PRINCETON, a post-village of Butler co., Ohio, 21 miles N. by E. from Cincinnati.

PRINCETON, a small village of Mahoning co., Ohio.

PRINCETON, a thriving post-village, capital of Gibson county, Indiana, on the Evansville and Vincennes railroad, 28 miles S. from Vincennes. The situation is fine, and the surrounding country is highly productive. Princeton has 5 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 2 seminaries. Population in 1850, 806; in 1853, about 1000.

PRINCETON, a post-village, capital of Bureau county, Illinois, on the Military Tract railroad, 65 miles N. from Peoria. It is situated on a fertile prairie, 1 or 2 miles E. from Bureau cr. Two newspapers are issued here.

PRINCETON, a small village of Cass co., Illinois, 30 miles W. by N. from Springfield.

PRINCETON, a small post-village, capital of Mercer co., Missouri, near Weldon river, about 160 miles N. N. W. from Jefferson City.

PRINCETON, a small post-village of Scott co., Iowa, on the Mississippi river, about 21 miles above Davenport.

PRINCETON, a post-village of Marquette co., Wis., 38 miles W. by N. from Fond du Lac.

PRINCEVILLE, a thriving post-village of Peoria co., Illinois, 20 miles N. W. from Peoria. Population in 1853, about 500.

PRINCE WILLIAM, a county in the N. E. part of Virginia, contains about 325 square miles. The Potomac river forms its boundary on the S. E., the Occoquan on the N. E.; it is also drained by Cedar Run, Broad Run, and Quantico creek. The surface is hilly, especially near the Potomac; the soil is sandy. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 it produced 161,248 bushels of corn; 57,728 of wheat; 57,717 of oats; 2309 tons of hay, and 79,079 pounds of butter. There were 19 flour, grist, plaster, and saw mills, 5 wool-carding mills, 1 cotton factory, and 1 woollen factory. It contained 13 churches, and 316 pupils attending public schools. The Occoquan river furnishes motive-power for mills. The county is intersected by the Orange and Alexandria railroad, and in part by the Manassa's Gap railroad. Formed in 1730. Capital, Brentsville. Population, 8129, of whom 5631 were free, and 2498, slaves.

PRINCE WILLIAM, a post-office of Carroll co., Indiana.

PRINCEIPO FURNACE, a post-office of Cecil co., Maryland.

PRINGLE'S CROSS ROADS, a small village of Lauderdale co., Mississippi.

PRIVATEER, a post-village of Sumter district, South Carolina.

PRIZE HILL, a small village of Johnson co., Missouri.

PROCTOR, a post-office of Wetzel co., Va.

PROCTOR, a thriving post-village of Owsley co., Kentucky, on the Kentucky river, at the mouth of the South fork, about 100 miles S. E. from Frankford. Bituminous coal found in the adjoining hills is exported by the river. The village has also an active trade in lumber. A newspaper is published here.

PROCTOR, a post-office of Allegan co., Mich.

PROCTOR'S CREEK, a post-office of Chesterfield co., Virginia.

PROCTORSVILLE, a post-village in Windsor co., Vt., on the Rutland and Burlington railroad, contains several churches, and 1 bank.

PROCTORSVILLE, a village of St. Bernard parish, La., on Lake Borgne, at the E. terminus of the Mexican Gulf railroad.

PROCTORSVILLE, a village in Crawford co., Indiana, on Great Blue river, 110 miles S. by W. from Indianapolis.

PROMPTON, a post-borough of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, on the Lackawaxen creek, 4 miles above Honesdale. Incorporated in 1844. Population in 1850, 306.

PROPHETSTOWN, a post-village of Whitesides co., Illinois, on Rock river, 15 miles from its mouth. Its prosperity is derived from the water-power of the river.

PROSPECT, a post-township in Waldo co., Maine, on the E. side of the Penobscot river, 52 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Pop., 2427.

PROSPECT, a post-township in New Haven co., Connecticut, 15 miles N. by W. from New Haven. Population, 666.

PROSPECT, a post-village of Oneida co., New York, on West Canada creek, about 100 miles W. N. W. from Albany.

PROSPECT, a post-borough of Butler co., Pennsylvania, 220 miles W. by N. from Harrisburg. Population, 254.

PROSPECT, a post-office of Prince Edward co., Virginia, 80 miles S. W. from Richmond.

PROSPECT, a post-office of Burleson co., Tex.

PROSPECT, a post-office of Giles co., Tenn.

PROSPECT, a post-township in Marion co., Ohio. Population, 697.

PROSPECT FERRY, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

PROSPECT GROVE, a post-office of Scotland co., Missouri.

PROSPECT HALL, a post-office of Bladen co., North Carolina, 82 miles S. from Raleigh.

PROSPECT HARBOR, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

PROSPECT HILL, a post-office of Fairfax co., Virginia, 9 miles W. from Washington.

PROSPECT HILL, a post-office of Caswell co., North Carolina, about 60 miles N. W. from Raleigh.

PROSPECT HILL, a small post-village of Ray co., Missouri, 26 miles N. N. E. from Independence.

PROSPECT HILL, a post-village of Waukesha co., Wisconsin, on the Milwaukee and Janesville plank-road, 70 miles S. E. from Madison.

PROSPECT LAKE, a post-office of Van Buren co., Michigan.

PROSPERITY, a small post-village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

PROSPERITY, a post-office of Moore co., N. C.

PROSPERITY, a post-village of Newberry district, South Carolina. See FROG LEVEL.

PROVIDENCE, a county forming the N. W. extremity of Rhode Island, has an area of about 380 square miles. It is bounded in part on the E. by Blackstone river, and on the S. by Pawtuxet river, and is principally drained by these streams and their branches, which afford extensive water-power. The commercial facilities of this county are great, and the inhabitants are largely engaged in manufactures. The surface is rough and uneven. The soil is generally fertile and well-cultivated. Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 157,070 bushels of corn; 308,379 of potatoes; 33,205 tons of hay, and 476,343 pounds of butter. The quantity of corn, potatoes, hay, and butter was each greater than that produced by any other county in the state. There were 98 cotton and 18 woolen factories, 8 calico-printing mills, 5 iron and 2 brass foundries, 5 chandleries, 6 currying establishments, 36 manufactories of silver ware and jewelry, 2 of hardware, 2 of India rubber, 2 of steam-engines, 3 of screws and nails, 4 of dyestuffs, 12 of coaches, 11 of clothing, 2 of chemicals, 8 of cabinet ware, 3 of farming implements, 26 machine shops, 13 grist, 3 paper, and 38 saw and planing mills. It contained 101 churches, 11 newspaper offices; 13,370 pupils attending public schools, and 1004 attending academies and other schools. The Providence river is navigable for ships along the border of this county to Providence. The county is intersected by the Stonington, and the Providence and Worcester railroads, and by the Blackstone canal. Capital, Providence. Population, 87,526.

PROVIDENCE, a city, port of entry, and seat of justice of Providence county, Rhode Island, and semi-capital of the state, is situated at the head of navigation on the north-western arm of Narraganset bay, or Providence river, as it is called, 35 miles from the ocean, 43 miles S. S. W. from Boston, and about 175 miles N. E. from New York. Lat. 41° 49' 22" N., lon. 71° 24' 48" W. The river divides the city into two nearly equal parts, which are connected by several substantial bridges, one of which is 90 feet wide. The site is very irregular, portions of it rising into prominent elevations, the highest of which on the W. is 78 feet, and on the E. 204 feet above the level of the harbor. On account of the inequalities of the surface, but little regard was paid to regularity in laying out the streets, though from time to time many of them have been variously improved. Near the centre of the business portion of the city is a delightful sheet of water, of an elliptic form, about a mile in circumference, constituting the head waters of Narraganset bay. Around this basin, which is enclosed by a wall of stone masonry, the city authorities have recently laid out a fine public park or promenade, 80 feet in width, and adorned it with a variety of shade-trees, gravelled walks, &c. The private edifices are built mostly of wood, though in the construction of a few, brick, granite, and other material, have been used. The latter are for the most part spacious and elegant dwellings, finely situated.

Many of the public buildings are extensive and costly structures. The Arcade, a beautiful granite edifice, situated on the W. side of the river, cost at the time of its erection, in 1828, $130,000. It is 226 feet long, 80 feet deep, and three stories high, extending from Broad street to Westminster. Each front is adorned with a Doric portico, consisting of six massive granite pillars, each a single block. The building is divided into three stories, containing upwards of 80 shops, the whole lighted by a glass roof. "What Cheer" building, recently erected at the corner of North and South Mine streets, is a fine freestone edifice, chiefly occupied with public offices. The title ("What Cheer") is derived from the first salutation which the natives made to Roger Williams and his party of settlers on landing at Slate rock. Among the other public buildings may be mentioned the State House, a brick structure, the Museum and Howard Hall, two handsome edifices on Westminster street, and the market house, on Market square. The latter is a plain brick building, containing in the second story various offices of the city government, and in the third a hall owned and occupied by the Freemasons. The railroad depôts in Providence, both for passengers and merchandise, are extensive and commodious buildings, situated in the business portion of the city, near each other, and so arranged that passengers or freight can pass from one to the other without changing cars. The most remarkable church edifices are the First Congregational church, built of granite, Grace church, a Gothic structure, St. John's, a stone building, the Beneficent Congregational, the Westminster Congregational, and St. Peter's and St. Patrick's churches. The First Baptist society, the oldest religious organization in Providence, have a beautiful wood edifice. The whole number of churches of the various denominations in the city at present is about 35, 5 or 6 of which belong to colored congregations.

The benevolent and disciplinary institutions of Providence are numerous, and conducted upon the most approved systems. The Butler Hospital for the Insane, incorporated in 1844, under the title of the Rhode Island Hospital for the Insane, is situated on the western bank of Seekonk river, which here expands to near a mile in breadth, affording a delightful prospect. Attached to the institution are extensive grounds, comprising about 60 acres under cultivation and 55 of native woodland. The number of patients in the hospital at the commencement of 1853 was 127. Admitted during the year, 68; discharged, 38; died, 16. The entire sum contributed towards the erection and support of the hospital up to 1851, amounted to near $150,000, of which $30,000 was bequeathed by the late Nicholas Brown, of Providence, and $40,000 by Cyrus Butler, Esq., from whom the institution derives its name. The building was first opened for the reception of patients December 1, 1847. Annual expenses, from $20,000 to $25,000. The Dexter Asylum, for the accommodation of the poor, is located on an elevated range of land E. of the river. It is a substantial brick building, 170 feet long, including the wings, and three stories high. The grounds, comprising some 40 acres, are enclosed by a stone wall 10 feet high and 3 feet thick at the base, costing upwards of $20,000. The Reform School, established in 1850, for the discipline of juvenile offenders between the ages of 8 and 18, occupies the building formerly known as the Sockwotton House, situated in the south-eastern section of the city. It is under the direction of a board of trustees, elected annually by the city council, and provides accommodations for about 190 inmates. Admissions the first year, 52, of whom 49 were boys. Providence is also the seat of the state prison, which, in October, 1850, contained about 40 convicts.

Providence is highly distinguished for its literary and educational institutions. Brown University, (under the direction of the Baptists,) originally founded at Warren, in 1764, and removed to Providence in 1770, is situated on the highest ground E. of the river, commanding an extensive, varied, and beautiful prospect. It comprises 4 principal buildings, viz. Manning Hall, appropriated to the use of the library, Rhode Island Hall, containing the cabinet, chemical and philosophical apparatus, and lecture rooms, and University Hall and Hope College, two large edifices occupied by the students. Connected with the university is a scientific school, established for the benefit of such as do not choose to pursue a classical course. This department is arranged for a residence either of one or two years. For statistics, see Table of Colleges, APPENDIX. The Athenæum, incorporated in 1836, has a reading room, and a valuable library of about 12,000 volumes. The building, an elegant stone structure, was erected in 1837, at the corner of College and Benefit streets. The Yearly Meeting Boarding School (belonging to the Friends) occupies a lot of 43 acres, lying in the eastern part of the city, a short distance N. of the Dexter Asylum. Belonging to it are two buildings, one consisting of a centre 54 feet square and 3 stories high, with 2 wings each 84 feet by 42, and another 50 feet by 40, and 2 stories high. The institution is liberally endowed, and in a prosperous condition. A legacy of $100,000 was bequeathed it by the late Obadiah Brown, Esq. This city has the merit of being first in the state to take the lead in favor of popular education. The schools at present are about 50 in number, comprising four grades, viz. the high-school, grammar, intermediate, and primary schools. Number of pupils in attendance, from 6000 to 6500. Amount annually appropriated for school purposes, about $45,000, of which nearly one-fourth is received from the state. Eight or nine newspapers are published in the city, 3 of which are dailies. The inflammable material of which most of the buildings are constructed renders necessary a very strong and efficient fire department. This organization is maintained at an annual expense of about $20,000, and is probably not inferior to that of any city in the Union. Numerous railroads also communicate with the interior, besides which are several others either in process of construction or projected.

Providence is advantageously situated for commerce. Its harbor is safe, and admits vessels of 900 tons. Formerly the port carried on an extensive trade with Canton and the East Indies; but since the introduction of manufactures its foreign commerce has considerably decreased. The foreign arrivals for the year ending June 30, 1852, were 57, (tons, 7944,) of which 30 (tons, 5150) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports during the same period were 60, (tons, 9876,) of which 34 (tons, 7263) were by American vessels. The coastwise arrivals for the year 1852 were 4861 vessels. The principal articles of foreign merchandise now imported are molasses, sugar, coal, salt, and iron, with an occasional cargo from Africa, consisting of ivory, gum, tortoise shell, cloves, dates, &c. The principal articles received coastwise during the year 1852 were cotton, 100,378 bales, an increase of 30,498 bales over any former year; flour, 144,930 barrels, against 116,045 barrels the previous year; grain, 835,988 bushels; hay, 587 tons, and coal, 134,191 tons, being an increase of 26,677 tons over any former year. The total value of foreign imports for the year 1852 amounted to \$175,220, and of domestic produce exported to foreign countries, \$41,576. Amount of duties collected, \$38,489. The shipping of the port, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 9095 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons, registered, and 7326 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the former, 864 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons were employed in the whale fishery; and of the latter, 1003 $\frac{2}{5}$ tons in the coast trade, and 395 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons in steam navigation. During the year, 8 vessels, with an aggregate burthen of 1699 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons, were admeasured.

The manufactures of Providence and its vicinity are very extensive, and employ a capital of about $6,000,000. They consist chiefly of cotton and woollen goods, machinery, castings, various articles of hardware, power-loom pickers, furniture, carriages, jewelry, &c. There are several large establishments for grinding grain, sawing and planing lumber, and working in marble. In addition to the water-power, which is extensively employed, upwards of 50 steam-engines are kept in constant operation.

According to the returns made to the General Assembly of Rhode Island, at the October session, 1852, the city of Providence at that date contained 26 banks, with a capital stock actually paid in amounting to \$10,362,610; bills in circulation, \$1,880,697; specie actually in bank, \$271,576.94. The average semi-annual dividend was 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ per cent. The amount of deposits in the Providence Savings Institution, as reported to the same session of the General Assembly, was \$1,127,007.67. Thompson's Bank-note Detector for October, 1853, gives 31 banks in Providence.—The annual expenses of the government amount to about \$170,000.

The city is divided into 6 wards, and governed by a mayor, board of aldermen, and common council composed of 24 persons, 4 from each ward, elected annually.

Providence was settled by Roger Williams in 1635. A local government was organized in 1640, and in 1649 the settlement was incorporated as a town. The first houses were erected near St. John's church, on what is now North Main street. A spring in that vicinity still bears the name of the founder, and it is supposed that his remains were interred near by, though no stone marks their last resting-place. Providence suffered severely during King Philip's war. At one time it was nearly destroyed by fire, and almost entirely deserted of its inhabitants. Since the Revolution, its prosperity, with very slight exceptions, has been uninterrupted. In wealth and population it has long been the second city in New England. For the last ten years its growth has been remarkably rapid. Population in 1830, 15,941; 1840, 23,170; 1850, 41,512; and in 1853, about 47,500.

PROVIDENCE, a post-township on the W. border of Saratoga co., New York. Population, 1458.

PROVIDENCE, a post-township of Luzerne co., Pa., about 20 miles N. E. from Wilkesbarre. Pop., exclusive of the borough, 466.

PROVIDENCE, a thriving post-borough in the above township, on the right bank of Lackawanna river, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles above Scranton, and 19 miles N. E. from Wilkesbarre. It is situated in a rich farming district, and in the vicinity of rich coal mines. The manufacture of axes is carried on here extensively. It is connected by a plank-road with Wilkesbarre and Carbondale. Pop. in 1853, about 2000.

PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Halifax co., Va.

PROVIDENCE, a post-village in Mecklenburg co., North Carolina.

PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Sumter district, South Carolina.

PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Sumter co., Ga.

PROVIDENCE, a post-village in Pickens co., Alabama.

PROVIDENCE, a post-office of Carroll co., Mississippi.

PROVIDENCE, a small post-village, capital of Carroll parish, Louisiana, on the Mississippi, and on a small lake of its own name, 420 miles above New Orleans.

PROVIDENCE, a post-village of Hopkins co., Kentucky, about 216 miles W. S. W. from Frankfort.

PROVIDENCE, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Lucas co., Ohio. Pop., 467.

PROVIDENCE, a small post-village in the above township, on the Maumee river, and on the Wabash and Erie canal, 25 miles S. W. from Toledo.

PROVIDENCE, a post-village of Bureau co., Illinois, 42 miles N. from Peoria.

PROVIDENCE, a village of Boone co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, 27 miles above Jefferson City. It is the landing-place for Columbia.

PROVIDENCE HILL, a post-office of Tyler co., Texas.

PROVIDENCE LAKE, of Carroll parish, Louisiana, lies about 1 mile W. from Mississippi river, which perhaps once flowed through the bed of the lake. Length, about 6 miles.

PROVINCETOWN, a post-township in Barnstable co., Massachusetts. This is a noted fishing place, on the extreme point of Cape Cod, 50 miles E. S. E. from Boston. Population, 3157.

PROVINCETOWN, a post-village in the above township, contains 3 or 4 churches. Inhabited chiefly by fishermen.

PROVISO, a post-office of Cook co., Illinois.

PROVO CITY, a small village of Utah co., Utah, about 60 miles S. S. E. from Salt Lake City.

PRUNTY'S, a post-office of Patrick co., Va.

PRUNTYTOWN, Va. See WILLIAMSPORT.

PRYOR'S VALE, a post-office of Amherst co., Virginia.

PUBLIC SQUARE, a post-office of Greene co., Ga., 50 miles N. E. from Milledgeville.

PUBOTINE, a small village of Clarke co., Ill.

PUCAWA LAKE, Wisconsin, an expansion of Neenah river, in the S. central part of Marquette co., is about 7 miles long and 2 miles wide.

PUCKETAS, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania.

PUEBLA, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, on the Pennsylvania canal, 28 miles N. from Greensburg.

PUEBLA, a post-office of Brown co., Ohio.

PUEBLA PEAKS, in the northern interior of the Territory of New Mexico, are in lat. about 36° 25' N., lon. 105° 40' W.

PUEBRO, pwër'ko, a river of New Mexico, rising near 36° 20' N. lat., and 107° 15' W. lon. It flows southerly, and joins the Rio Grande in about 34° 22' N. lat. Length, about 200 miles.

PUGET SOUND is the name of a bay of very irregular shape, at the N. W. extremity of Washington Territory, communicating through Admiralty Inlet with the straits of Juan de Fuca.

PUGH'S, a post-office of Madison co., La.

PUGH'S HILL, a post-office of Franklin co., North Carolina.

PUGHTOWN, a small post-village of Chester co., Pa., 68 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

PUGSEY'S DEPÔT, a post-office of Tompkins co., New York.

PULASKI, a county in the S. S. W. part of Virginia, contains about 250 square miles. It is intersected by New river, which also flows along the eastern border; Little river, an affluent of the former, forms part of its eastern boundary. The county occupies a part of the great valley between Walker's mountain on the N. W., and the Blue ridge on the S. E. The soil is generally good, adapted to grain and grass. Cattle are raised for exportation. In 1850 this county produced 175,510 bushels of Indian corn; 35,284 of wheat; 63,367 of oats, and 2639 tons of hay. There were 4 grist mills, 5 saw mills, 1 flour mill, 4 wool-carding mills, and 5 tanneries. It contained 9 churches, and 292 pupils attending academies and other schools. The county contains abundance of iron and stone coal. It is intersected by the Virginia and Tennessee railroad. Organized in 1839, and named in honor of the Polish count, Pulaski. Capital, Newbern. Population, 5118, of whom 3647 were free, and 1471, slaves.

PULASKI, a county in the S. central part of Georgia, has an area of 540 square miles. It is intersected by the Ocmulgee river, and also drained by Cedar, Cypress, and Reedy creeks. The surface of the upper part is rolling, and of the lower part level. The soil is generally inferior. Cotton, Indian corn, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 5501 bales of cotton; 229,815 bushels of corn, and 60,976 of sweet potatoes. There were 2 saw mills, 13 churches, and 127 pupils attending public schools. Soft limestone underlies the surface. Pine timber is abundant. Organized in 1808. Capital, Hawkinsville. Population, 6627, of whom 3823 were free, and 2804, slaves.

PULASKI, a county in the central part of Arkansas, contains about 1200 square miles. It is intersected by the Arkansas river, navigable by steamboats, and also drained by Big Mammelle creek, and by Fourche and Meto bayous. The surface is level in the S., and hilly in the northern and western part; the soil is moderately fertile. Indian corn, grass, sweet potatoes, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 it produced 191,085 bushels of corn; 12,127 of sweet potatoes; 478 bales of cotton, and 49,277 pounds of butter. There were 3 manufactories of cabinet ware and 3 saw mills. It contained 6 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 247 pupils attending public schools, and 195 attending academies or other schools. A rich mine of lead and silver has been opened 10 miles N. from Little Rock. In the vicinity of this town are valuable quarries of slate, and of granite very like the Quincy granite, but not so hard. A company has been formed by a number of gentlemen from Cincinnati to work the slate quarry. Little Rock is the county seat and capital of Arkansas. Population, 5658, of whom 4539 were free, and 1119, slaves.

PULASKI, a county in the S. central part of Kentucky, contains an area estimated at 650 square miles. The Cumberland river bounds it on the S., and Rock Castle river on the E. The surface is hilly or mountainous, excepting the N. part, which is gently undulating. In 1850 this county produced 558,864 bushels of corn; 13,385 of wheat, and 125,002 of oats. It contained 35 churches, and 1220 pupils attending public schools. Pulaski abounds in minerals, the most valuable of which are iron, lead, and stone coal. About 400,000 bushels of coal are annually exported by the Cumberland river, which is navigable for small steam-boats. Formed in 1798. Capital, Somerset. Population, 14,195, of whom 12,388 were free, and 1307, slaves.

PULASKI, a county in the N. W. part of Indiana, contains about 430 square miles. It is intersected by Tippecanoe river, an affluent of the Wabash. The surface is mostly level, with a few low sandy ridges. About one-half of the county is prairie, and the other portion produces a scattered growth of oak and hickory, usually termed "oak openings." The soil is productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 95,915 bushels of corn; 27,593 of wheat; 15,050 of oats, and 2276 tons of hay. It contained 1 church, and 161 pupils attending public schools. A railroad is projected through the county from Chicago to Logansport. Organized in 1839. Capital, Winamac. Population, 2595.

PULASKI, a county in the S. part of Illinois, contains about 180 square miles. The Ohio river, which separates it from Kentucky, forms its boundary on the S. E., and Cash river on the N. W. The surface is partly covered with forests; the soil of the river bottoms is fertile. Indian corn, oats, cattle, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 87,145 bushels of corn; 16,326 of oats, and 25,695 pounds of butter. It contained 2 churches, and 149 pupils attending public schools. It is intersected by the Illinois Central railroad. Capital, Caledonia. Population, 2265.

PULASKI, a county in the S. central part of Missouri, has an area of about 1000 square miles. It is intersected by the Gasconade river flowing in a N. E. direction, and also drained in the S. part by the Robidoux and Big Piney fork, and Little Piney creek, which flow into the Gasconade. The surface is hilly; the soil generally fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, grass, cattle, pork, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 246,430 bushels of corn; 11,352 of wheat; 32,838 of oats, and 54,827 pounds of butter. There were 75 pupils attending public schools. Limestone underlies a part of the land. The county is copiously supplied with water-power. Capital, Waynesville. Pop., 3998; of whom 3885 were free, and 113, slaves.

PULASKI, a post-village, semi-capital of Oswego county, New York, situated in Richland township, on Salmon river, 4 miles from Lake Ontario, and 150 miles W. N. W. from Albany. It contains a court house, several churches, 2 newspaper offices, and manufactories of iron, wool, and other materials. Population, estimated at 1000.

PULASKI, a post-township forming the W. extremity of Lawrence co., Pa. Pop., 1721.

PULASKI, a post-village in the above township, on the Shenango river, and on Beaver and Erie canal, 56 miles N. N. W. from Pittsburg.

PULASKI, a post-office of Scott co., Miss.

PULASKI, a small post-village of Panola co., Texas, on the Sabine river, a few miles E. from Carthage.

PULASKI, a thriving post-village, capital of Giles co., Tennessee, is situated on a branch of Elk river, 75 miles S. from Nashville. It is a place of active business, and contains a cotton factory moved by steam, a bank, and several flourishing schools. A newspaper is published here. Pop. estimated at 1400.

PULASKI, a post-office of Williams co., O.

PULASKI, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Jackson co., Mich. Pop., 760.

PULASKI, a post-office of Pulaski co., Ind.

PULASKI, a post-village in Hancock co., Illinois, 85 miles N. W. from Springfield.

PULASKI, a post-office of Davis co., Iowa.

PULASKI, a post-township in Iowa co., Wisconsin. Population, 181.

PULASKI, a post-village in the above township, on Wisconsin river, about 28 miles N. N. W. from Mineral Point.

PULASKI CREEK, of Pulaski co., Georgia, flows into the Ocmulgee from the right.

PULASKIVILLE, a post-village of Morrow co., Ohio.

PULNEY, a township of Steuben co., New York, on the W. side of Crooked lake. Population, 1815.

PULNEY, a township in the E. part of Belmont co., Ohio, on the W. side of the Ohio river. Population, 1816.

PULNEYVILLE, a post-village of Wayne co., New York, on Lake Ontario, 28 miles E. N. E. from Rochester. It has a landing and warehouses.

PULVER'S CORNERS, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

PUMPKIN, a post-office of Southampton co., Virginia.

PUMPKINPILE, a post-office of Paulding co., Georgia.

PUMPKINTOWN, a post-village in Pickens district, South Carolina, 125 miles W. N. W. from Columbia.

PUMPKINTOWN, a post-office of Randolph co., Georgia.

PUMPKINVINE, a post-office of Paulding co., Georgia.

PUMPKINVINE CREEK, of Georgia, flows into the Etowah, a few miles S. from Cartersville, in Cass county.

PUNCHEON, a post-office of Allen co., Ky.

PUNGO CREEK, a post-office of Beaufort co., North Carolina.

PUNGO RIDGE, a post-office of Princess Anne co., Virginia.

PUNGOTEAQUE, a post-village of Accomack co., Virginia, 12 miles S. W. from Accomack Court House. It has 2 churches and a mill.

PUNKUTAWNEY, a post-village of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania, 130 miles W. N. W. from Harrisburg.

PURCELLSVILLE, a post-office of Loudon co., Virginia.

PURDY, a post-village, capital of McNairy co., Tenn., 138 miles W. S. W. from Nashville.

PURDY CREEK, a post-village of Steuben co., N. Y., about 22 miles W. S. W. from Bath.

PURDY'S STATION, a post-village of Westchester co., New York, on the Harlem railroad, 50 miles N. N. E. from New York.

PURGITSVILLE, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.

PURVIS, a post-office of Sullivan co., N. Y.

PUSEYVILLE, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

PUSHMATAHA, a post-office of Choctaw co., Alabama.

PUTA, a small town of Yolo co., California.

PUTA RIVER, California, rises in Napa county, runs in an E. direction through the beautiful Berryessa valley, thence through the mountains into the Sacramento valley, forming part of the N. boundary of Solano county, and at last wastes its waters in the Tule marshes.

PUTNAM, a county in the S. E. part of New York, has an area of about 230 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the State of Connecticut, and on the W. by the Hudson, and is principally drained by Croton river and Peekskill creek, which afford some water-power. The surface is uneven and hilly, and in the W. part mountainous, the elevated ridge called the Highlands passing through it. The soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 132,376 bushels of corn; 79,535 of oats; 99,821 of potatoes; 25,140 tons of hay, and 785,330 pounds of butter. There were 15 flour mills, 1 steam-engine factory, 2 paper mills, 16 boot and shoe factories, and 4 tanneries. It contained 29 churches, 1 newspaper office, 3017 pupils attending public schools, and 180 attending other schools. Iron ore of excellent quality is abundant, and large quantities are manufactured. The West Point foundry is one of the most extensive in the United States. Plumbago, sulphur, and iron pyrites are also found. The Hudson river is navigable for ships along the entire western border. The Harlem railroad and the Hudson River railroad traverse the county from N. to S. Organized in 1812, and named in honor of General Israel Putnam, an officer in the Revolution. Capital, Carmel. Population, 14,138.

PUTNAM, a county in the W. part of Virginia, touching the Ohio river, contains 350 square miles. It is intersected by the Great Kanawha river, navigable by steamboats. The surface is occupied by valleys and hills; the soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, oats, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 249,040 bushels of corn; 50,079 of oats, and 59,862 pounds of butter. There were 6 grist mills, 8 saw mills, and 11 cooper shops. It contained 13 churches, 65 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending other schools. The hills contain immense beds of iron ore and bituminous coal. It is intersected by the Covington and Ohio railroad, not yet finished. It was organized in 1848, including parts of Mason and Kanawha counties. Capital, Winfield. Population, 5335, of whom 4703 were free, and 632, slaves.

PUTNAM, a county in the central part of Georgia, has an area of about 360 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Oconee river, intersected by Little river, and also drained by Crooked, Indian, and other creeks. The surface is somewhat diversified, and partly covered with forests of oak, pine, and other trees. The soil is of the description called "mulatto," well adapted to cotton, but impoverished by a bad system of cultivation. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 8621 bales of cotton; 392,821 bushels of corn; 45,205 of oats, and 63,689 of sweet potatoes. It contained 1 cotton factory, 6 flour mills, 2 grist mills, 6 saw mills, 4 tanneries; 12 churches, 197 pupils attending public schools, and 134 attending other schools. Copper and iron have been found, and granite is abundant. A railroad has been opened from Eatonton to the Central railroad at Gordon. Organized in 1807. Capital, Eatonton. Population, 10,794, of whom 3326 were free, and 7468, slaves.

PUTNAM, a county in the N. E. part of Florida, bordering on the Atlantic, has an area of 840 square miles. It is intersected by St. John's river, and also drained by the Ocklawaha. The surface is but little higher than the sea, and consists mostly of marshes, grassy plains, and pine forests. The soil is sandy. Indian corn, sugar-cane, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 it produced 4610 bushels of corn; 32 bales of cotton; 74 hogsheads of sugar, and 7030 gallons of molasses. Capital, Pilatka. Population, 687, of whom 483 were free, and 204, slaves.

PUTNAM, a county in the N. E. central part of Tennessee; area, estimated at 500 square miles. It is drained by small affluents of Cumberland river. The surface is uneven, and partly covered with forests. The county was formed since 1850 out of parts of Jackson and White counties. Capital, Monticello.

PUTNAM, a county in the N. W. part of Ohio, has an area of about 480 square miles. It is intersected by the Auglaize river, and also drained by Blanchard's fork and the Ottawa river, affluents of the former. The surface is level and extensively covered with good timber. A large part of the county is occupied by the Black Swamp; the soil, when drained, is very productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, grass, cattle, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 189,165 bushels of corn; 68,853 of wheat; 31,723 of oats, and 4478 tons of hay. It contained 11 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 3063 pupils attending public schools. It is intersected by the Miami Extension canal and by the route of the Dayton and Michigan railroad. Capital, Kalida. Population, 7221.

PUTNAM, a county in the W. central part of Indiana, contains 486 square miles. It is drained by the Eel river, an affluent of White river. The surface is partly level and partly undulating. The soil is mostly a black loam, and in some parts calcareous, and is well adapted to grain or grass. Wheat, corn, oats, pork, fruit, and cattle are the chief productions. In 1850 this county yielded 1,313,209 bushels of corn; 82,965 of wheat; 81,423 of oats; 5015 tons of hay, and 85,837 pounds of wool. The quantity of wool was the greatest produced by any county in the state. It contained 62 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 4311 pupils attending public schools. Quarries of valuable limestone have been opened. It is intersected by the Indiana and Illinois canal, the Indianapolis and Terre Haute and the New Albany and Salem railroads. Capital, Greencastle. Population, 18,615.

PUTNAM, a county in the N. central part of Illinois, has an area of 200 square miles. It is intersected by the Illinois river, navigable by steamboats. The surface is nearly level or undulating; the soil is highly productive and easily cultivated. The county contains extensive prairies, and is liberally supplied with timber. Indian corn, wheat, grass, and pork are the staples. In 1850 it produced 279,260 bushels of corn; 88,771 of wheat; 48,494 pounds of butter, and 3732 tons of hay. It contained 8 churches, 880 pupils attending public schools, and 110 attending other schools. Stone coal is found in this county. It is intersected by the Illinois Central railroad. Organized in 1831. Capital, Hennepin. Population, 3924.

PUTNAM, a new county in the N. part of Missouri, bordering on Iowa, has an area of about 290 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by Chariton river, flowing from N. to S., and intersected by Shoal creek. The surface is diversified with prairies and woodlands. Indian corn, wheat, oats, grass, cattle, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 49,940 bushels of corn; 680 of wheat; 2020 of oats, and 9843 pounds of butter. There were 200 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Putnamville. Population, 1636, of whom 1617 were free, and 19, slaves.

PUTNAM, a post-township forming the N. extremity of Washington co., New York, bordering on Lakes George and Champlain. Population, 753.

PUTNAM village, Ohio. See ZANESVILLE.

PUTNAM, a township in the S. W. part of Livingston co., Michigan. Population, 977.

PUTNAM VALLEY, a post-township of Putnam co., New York, 50 miles N. by E. from New York. Population, 1626.

PUTNAMVILLE, a post-village of Putnam co., Indiana, is pleasantly situated on the National road, 40 miles W. S. W. from Indianapolis. The extension of the Albany and Salem railroad passes through this village. Population in 1850, 251.

PUTNAMVILLE, a small post-village, capital of Putnam co., Missouri, about 150 miles N. N. W. from Jefferson City.

PUTNEY, a post-township in Windham co., Vermont, on the N. side of the Connecticut river, 105 miles S. by E. from Montpelier. Population, 1425.

PUTNEYVILLE, a small post-village of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

PUTTSVILLE, a post-office of Essex co., N. Y.

PYLESVILLE, a post-office of Harford co., Maryland.

PYMATUNING, or PAYMATOONING, a township of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. W. from Mercer. Population, 2161.

PYRAMID LAKE is situated near the W. border of Utah Territory, and lies partly in Fremont and partly in Tooele counties. It derives its name from a remarkable rock in the shape of a pyramid, which forms an island near its E. shore.

PYRMONT, a post-village of Montgomery co., Ohio.

Q

QUAKAKE CREEK, of Carbon county, Pennsylvania, flows into the Lehigh river.

QUAKER BOTTOM, a post-office of Lawrence co., Ohio.

QUAKER HILL, a post-village of Dutchess co., New York.

QUAKER SPRINGS, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

QUAKER SPRINGS, a village in Columbia co., Ga., 80 miles N. E. by E. from Milledgeville.

QUAKER STREET, a post-office of Schenectady, New York.

QUAKERTOWN, or FAIRVIEW, a post-village of Hunterdon county, New Jersey, is situated about 7 miles W. by N. from Flemington. It has 2 churches, 7 stores, 1 iron foundry, and a machine shop for making stoves, ploughs, &c. Population, 850.

QUAKERTOWN, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, 100 miles E. from Harrisburg. Population, 242.

QUALLATOWN, a post-village in Haywood co., N. C., 300 miles W. from Raleigh.

QUANTICO, a post-village in Somersset co., Maryland, 93 miles S. E. from Annapolis.

QUABLES, a post-village of Racine co., Wisconsin, about 90 miles S. E. from Madison.

QUARRYVILLE, a post-office of Tolland co., Ct.

QUARRYVILLE, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

QUARTZBURG, a post-office of Mariposa co., California.

QUASQUETON, a small post-village of Buchanan co., Iowa, on Wapsipinicon river, 55 miles N. by W. of Iowa City.

QUAY, a post-office of Claiborne co., La.

QUECHEE, OTTA QUECHEE, or WATER QUECHEE river, of Windsor co., Vermont, falls into the Connecticut river.

QUECHEE VILLAGE, a manufacturing post-village in Windsor co., Vermont, 50 miles S. by E. from Montpelier.

QUEEN ANNE, a county in the E. part of Maryland, bordering on Delaware, has an area of about 400 square miles. It lies on the eastern shore of Chesapeake bay, bounded on the N. W. by Chester river, and on the S. E. by Tuckahoe river, no part being more than 12 miles from navigable water. The surface is gently rolling, and free from rocks; the soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, rye, and pork are the staples. The bay and inlets abound in fish and oysters. In 1850 the county produced 697,159 bushels of corn; 173,003 of wheat; 59,885 of oats, and 97,183 pounds of butter. There were 8 grist mills, 3 saw mills, 5 wheelwright shops, and 2 coach factories. It contained 23 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 729 pupils attending public schools, and 75 attending academies and other schools. Marl is abundant, and is used to fertilize the land. The creeks furnish motive-power for mills. Formed in 1706. Capital, Centreville. Population, 14,484, of whom 10,214 were free, and 4270, slaves.

QUEEN ANNE, a post-village of Prince George co., Maryland, on the Patuxent river, 14 miles W. S. W. from Annapolis.

QUEEN'S, a county in the S. E. part of New York, has an area of about 420 square miles. It is situated in the western part of Long island, and is bounded on the N. by Long Island sound, and on the S. by the Atlantic ocean. Its shores are indented with numerous bays and inlets, which afford some excellent harbors, and great facilities for navigation and for fisheries. The surface is slightly uneven: Harbor hill, in North Hempstead, is the greatest elevation. The soil, when well cultivated, is very productive, and supplies large quantities of fruit and vegetables to the New York markets. Wheat, Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 124,494½ bushels of wheat; 403,705 of corn; 307,551 of potatoes; 48,027½ tons of hay, and 561,230 pounds of butter. There were 36 flour mills, 4 woollen factories, 5 paper mills, 4 tin-ware manufactories, 5 coach factories, and 1 ship-yard. It contained 60 churches, 4 newspaper offices; 5254 pupils attending public schools, and 349 attending academies or other schools. The Long Island railroad traverses this county from E. to W. Organized in 1683. Capital, North Hempstead. Population, 36,833.

QUEENSBOROUGH, a post-village in Anderson district, South Carolina, 110 miles W. N. W. from Columbus.

QUEENSBURY, a post-township of Warren co., New York, on the Hudson river, 48 miles N. from Albany. Population, 2597.

QUEENSDALE, a post-village in Robeson co., N. C., 110 miles S. S. W. from Raleigh.

QUEEN'S RIVER, a small stream of Washington co., Rhode Island, falls into Charles river.

QUEEN'S RUN, a small village of Clinton co., Pennsylvania, on the W. branch of Susquehanna river, 3 miles above Lock Haven. Coal is mined here, and exported by canal.

QUEENSTOWN, a small post-village of Queen Anne co., Maryland, about 30 miles E. from Annapolis.

QUEENSVILLE, a small village of Jennings co., Indiana, on the Madison and Indianapolis railroad, 28 miles N. W. from Madison.

QUEMAHONING creek, of Somerset co., Pennsylvania, flows into Stony creek.

QUEMAHONING, a township in the N. central part of Somerset co., Pennsylvania.

QUEREBUS GROVE, a post-office of Switzerland co., Indiana.

QUIBBY CREEK, of Sumter co., Alabama, flows into the Tombigbee river from the right.

QUICK'S RUN, a small village of Lewis co., Kentucky.

QUIET DELL, a post-office of Harrison co., Virginia.

QUILLNSVILLE, a post-village in Scott co., Virginia, 320 miles W. by N. from Richmond.

QUINCY, a post-township of Norfolk county, Massachusetts, bordering on Quincy bay, in Boston harbor, and intersected by the Old Colony railroad, 8 miles S. by E. from Boston. It is celebrated for its quarries of granite, commonly known as Quincy granite, which is exported in great quantities to all parts of the Union. About 1000 persons are constantly employed in working it. Blocks have often been quarried weighing as high as 300 tons. The first railroad ever constructed in America was here put in operation in 1826, for the purpose of transporting the granite from its bed to tide-water, in Neponset river, a distance of 3 miles. The village, which is considered remarkably beautiful, is situated on an elevated plain near the centre of the township. In a stone church, completed in 1828, at a cost of $40,000, is a beautiful marble monument, erected to the memory of John Adams and his wife. The town house, a fine granite edifice, 85 feet by 55, is deserving of notice. One newspaper is published in the village, which also contains 2 banks. Quincy is celebrated as the birthplace of several of the most eminent men who have borne a part in the affairs of the nation. Among these may be mentioned John Hancock, Josiah Quincy, Jr., and the two Adams'. The estate of the Quincy family in this town is one of the finest in New England. Incorporated in 1792. Population in 1830, 2201; in 1840, 3486; in 1850, 5017.

QUINCY, a township in the S. E. part of Franklin co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 2336.

QUINCY, a post-village in the above township, 12 miles S. E. from Chambersburg. Population in 1853, 400.

QUINCY, a post-village, capital of Gadsden county, Florida, is on the main road from Pensacola to Tallahassee, 22 miles N. N. W. of the latter. It has an active trade in tobacco. Its flourishing condition is caused partly by the excellence of its schools, by its healthy situation, and the mildness of the climate, which attracts invalids from the more Northern States. Within the last three years the number of such visitors has greatly increased. The distance from the Gulf (30 miles) is such that the sea-breeze is tempered and agreeably modified. It contains 3 churches, 1 academy, 1 select school, 2 hotels, 2 cabinet shops, 1 gin shop, (to supply cotton gins.) Population in 1853, near 1000.

QUINCY, a post-village of Monroe co., Mississippi, about 12 miles N. E. from Aberdeen.

QUINCY, a post-village in Gibson co., Tennessee, 145 miles W. S. W. from Nashville.

QUINCY, a flourishing post-village of Logan co., Ohio, on the Bellefontaine and Indiana railroad, 68 miles W. N. W. from Columbus. The Miami river here furnishes fine water-power. Population, 500.

QUINCY, a post-township in the N. E. part of Branch co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Southern railroad. Pop., 1111.

QUINCY, a handsome town, capital of Adams county, Illinois, on the Mississippi river, 170 miles above St. Louis, and 104 miles W. from Springfield. It is finely situated on a limestone bluff, 125 feet above the river, of which it commands an extensive view. It has a large public square, a good court house, 18 churches, a United States land-office, and 3 banks. Seven newspapers and periodicals are published here, two of which are dailies. Quincy carries on an active trade by steamboats on the Mississippi. It is the terminus of the Military Tract railroad, now in course of construction, which leads to Chicago. The country in the vicinity is a rich and rolling prairie, and one of the most highly cultivated parts of the state. Quincy contains (in 1853) 5 lumber-yards, 2 large distilleries, 4 large foundries, 6 machine shops, 5 or 6 steam mills for grain, 2 steam saw mills, 2 planing machines, 3 door sash and blind manufactories, 3 carriage furniture manufactories, 1 cotton mill, besides numerous other establishments. Coopering is carried on very extensively. Pop. in 1840, about 2000; in 1850, 6901; in 1853, 11,000.

QUINCY, a small post-village of Hickory co., Missouri.

QUINCY POINT, a beautiful post-village of Norfolk county, Massachusetts, at the confluence of Town and Weymouth rivers, 2 miles E. from Quincy, and about 9 miles S. by E. from Boston. It has an excellent harbor, and is engaged in the fisheries and in ship-building.

QUINEBAUG river, of Connecticut, rises in Tolland county, and flows N. into Massachusetts, when, after running some distance, it re-enters Connecticut, and unites with the Shetucket river, in New London county.

QUINEBAUG, a manufacturing post-village in Pomfret and Thompson townships, Windham county, Connecticut, on the Quinebaug river, and on the Norwich and Worcester railroad, about 45 miles N. E. by E. from Hartford. It contains 2 churches, and 12 stores. Population, 1500.

QUINEPIACK, or QUINNPIAC river, of Connecticut, rises in Hartford county, and falls into Long Island sound at New Haven, after a course of about 30 miles. The railroad between New Haven and Hartford follows its course for about 12 miles.

QUITMAN, a post-village, capital of Clarke co., Mississippi, 140 miles E. by S. from Jackson. It contains a few stores.

QUITMAN, a post-village, capital of Wood co., Texas, about 275 miles N. E. from Austin.

QUITMAN, a small village of Van Buren co., Ark., about 70 miles N. from Little Rock.

QUITO, a post-office of Talbot co., Georgia, about 36 miles N. E. from Columbus City.

QUITO, a post-office of Polk co., Arkansas.

QUITQUIOC, a village in Plymouth township, Sheboygan co., Wisconsin, on the Mullet river, 85 miles N. E. from Madison. It contains a fine hotel, a saw mill, and several stores.

QUIVER, a post-office of Mason co., Ill.

QUOGUE, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

QUONCHONTAUG, a post-office of Washington co., Rhode Island.

R

RABBIT RIVER, of Allegan co., Michigan, flows into the Kalamazoo river, 7 miles from its mouth.

RABBITSVILLE, a small post-village of Logan co., Kentucky.

RABBIT TOWN, post-office of Benton co., Ala.

RABUN, a county forming the N. E. extremity of Georgia, bordering on North Carolina, and separated from South Carolina by the Chattooga river, which forms the S. E. boundary: area, about 330 square miles. It is drained by the sources of the Little Tennessee and Tallulah rivers. The surface is mountainous and mostly covered with forests. The principal peaks of the Blue ridge in this county are named the Pinnacle, Tallulah, and Bald mountains. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and potatoes are staples. In 1850 it produced 64,699 bushels of corn; 9771 of oats, and 9868 of sweet potatoes. It contained 13 churches, 644 pupils attending public schools, and 65 attending an academy. Iron is abundant, and gold has been found. The Rabun Gap railroad is projected through the county. Named in honor of William Rabun, formerly governor of Georgia. Capital, Clayton. Population, 2448; of whom 2338 were free, and 110, slaves.

RACINE, răs-seen', a county in the S. E. part of Wisconsin, bordering on Lake Michigan, contains about 350 square miles. It is intersected by the Root and Pishtaka rivers. The surface is nearly level, and is mostly occupied by prairies, which are interspersed with oak openings, or plains producing a scattered growth of oak and hickory. The soil is calcareous and fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 218,149 bushels of wheat; 78,847 of corn; 175,665 of oats, and 232,466 pounds of butter. It contained 18 churches, 5 newspaper offices, 3756 pupils attending public schools, and 205 attending academies and other schools. Limestone is the principal rock. The Pishtaka river furnishes motive-power for mills. Racine county was separated from Milwaukee and organized in 1836. The name is derived from Root river, which in French is Racine. It is intersected by the Chicago and Milwaukee railroad. Capital, Racine. Pop., 14,973.

RACINE, a post-office of Meigs co., Ohio.

RACINE, a township in the E. part of Racine co., Wisconsin, on the W. side of Lake Michigan. Population, 777.

RACINE, a city of Wisconsin, and capital of Racine county, is situated on the W. shore of Lake Michigan, at the mouth of Root river, 25 miles S. by E. from Milwaukee, and 70 miles N. from Chicago. It is the second city of the state in population and commerce, and has one of the best harbors on the lake, formed by the mouth of the river, which admits vessels drawing 12 feet of water. The city is built on a plain elevated about 40 feet above the surface of the lake. It is laid out in regular blocks, with wide streets, and contains a number of fine public buildings; among which is the Racine college, founded by the Episcopal Church. Racine contains 12 Protestant, and 2 Catholic churches, a central high-school, and a bank in successful operation. Several newspapers are published here. The commercial advantages of this port have attracted considerable capital, and there are 10 warehouses and 126 mercantile houses in various branches of business. Over $60,000 have been expended by the citizens of Racine in the construction of a harbor. From 30 to 40 vessels are owned here, with a tonnage of over 4000 tons. The exports and imports for 1851 amounted to $2,507,715. There are 3 ship-yards, and several furnaces, machine shops, and flouring mills. Three plank-roads extend from Racine into the interior, and railroads are in course of construction to Chicago, Milwaukee, and Janesville. First settled in 1835; incorporated as a city in 1848. Pop. in 1840, 337; in 1850, 5111; in 1853, about 7500.

RACKET RIVER forms the outlet of Long lake, in Hamilton county, New York, and pursuing a winding course through Franklin and St. Lawrence counties, falls into the St. Lawrence river about 30 miles N. N. E. from Potsdam. Its whole length is about 120 miles.

RACKET RIVER, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

RACoon, a small village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

RACoon, a post-office of Preston co., Va.

RACoon, a township in the N. part of Gallia co., Ohio. Population, 1473.

RACoon, a post-office of Marion co., Ill.

RACoon CREEK, of Gloucester co., New Jersey, enters the Delaware river about 18 miles below Camden. Sloops ascend 8 miles to Swedesborough.

RACoon CREEK, rises in the S. W. part of Pennsylvania, and joins the Ohio river a little below Beaver.

RACoon CREEK, of Ohio, rises in Hocking co., and falls into the Ohio river about 8 miles below Gallipolis.

RACoon CREEK, of Indiana, rises in Boone county, and falls into the Wabash, about 7 miles W. from Rockville, in Parke county, after a course of nearly 70 miles. It flows through a rich and beautiful farming region, and furnishes extensive water-power. The Little Racoon enters it from the N. E., 15 miles from its mouth.

RACoon CREEK, of La Crosse co., Wisconsin, flows into the Mississippi.

RACoon FORD, a post-village of Culpepper county, Virginia, on the Rapidan river, 90 miles N. N. W. from Richmond, contains several mills.

RACoon FORK of Licking river, Ohio, joins the main stream at Newark.

RACoon ISLAND, a post-office of Gallia co., O.

RACoon RIVER, Iowa, rises near the N. border of Dallas co., and empties itself into Des Moines river at Fort Des Moines.

RACoon VALLEY, a post-office of Knox co., Tennessee.

RADFORDSVILLE, a post-office of Perry co., Alabama.

RADNOR, a post-township of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Philadelphia and Columbia railroad, 8 miles S. from Norristown. Population, 1334.

RADNOR, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Delaware co., Ohio. Population, 1204.

RAGGED MOUNTAINS, an elevated range on the border between Grafton and Merrimack counties, New Hampshire. Height, about 2000 feet.

RAGLESVILLE, a post-office of Daviess co., Indiana.

RAHWAY, a small river in the N. E. part of New Jersey, rises in Essex co., flows nearly southward to Rahway, and then forms the boundary between Essex and Middlesex counties until it enters Staten Island sound. Vessels of 80 tons ascend it to Rahway.

RAHWAY, a post-township of Essex co.,

New Jersey, on the Morris and Essex railroad, 45 miles N. N. E. from Trenton. Population, 3306.

RAHWAY, a post-village of Essex and Middlesex counties, New Jersey, is situated on the Rahway river, and on the New Jersey railroad, 10 miles S. S. W. from Newark, and 38 miles N. E. from Trenton. It is divided by the river into Upper and Lower Rahway, the former of which is in Rahway township, and the latter (formerly called Bridgeton) in Woodbridge township, Middlesex county. It contains 9 churches, belonging to the Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Friends, and colored people; also a bank, an insurance office, and 2 newspaper offices. There is a flourishing boarding school for girls, named the Rahway Female Institute, and a classical boarding school for boys. Rahway derives its support chiefly from the manufacture of carriages, hats, stoves, stone ware, and other articles. It is said that 3000 carriages are made here annually for the Southern market. It has a large muslin-printing establishment, an iron foundry, and a manufactory of felt cloth. Schooners ascend the river to this place. Settled about the year 1720. Population in 1853, about 7000.

RAIBORN'S CREEK, a post-office of Laurens district, South Carolina.

RAILROADS. A general account of these will be found under the head of the different states in which they are situated. For further particulars, see Table of Railroads, APPENDIX.

RAINBOW, a post-office of Hartford co., Connecticut.

RAINIER, a post-office of Washington co., Oregon.

RAINE'S TAVERN, a post-office of Cumberland co., Virginia.

RAINSBOROUGH, a post-village of Highland co., Ohio, 69 miles E. from Cincinnati.

RAINSBURG, a post-village of Bedford co., Pennsylvania, on Cove creek, about 8 miles S. from Bedford.

RAINSVILLE, a small post-village of Warren co., Indiana, on Pine creek, 87 miles N. W. from Indianapolis.

RAISIN, a post-township in the N. E. part of Lenawee co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Southern railroad. Pop., 1267.

RAISIN RIVER, of Michigan, rises in Hillsdale county. Its general direction is nearly eastward, and its whole length is probably 140 miles. The water-power on this river is very extensive. The current is rapid, the banks are high, and the valley through which it flows is noted for fertility. After passing by Adrian and Monroe, it enters Lake Erie 2 miles from the latter place.

RAISINVILLE, a township in the E. part of Monroe co., Michigan, intersected by the Raisin river, and by the Michigan Southern railroad. Population, 967.

RALEIGH, a new county in the W. S. W. part of Virginia, contains about 330 square miles. It is traversed in the E. part by New river, and also drained by the head streams of Coal river. The slope of the county is toward the N. W. The surface is mountainous, and mostly overspread with forests. Indian corn, oats, wheat, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 49,511 bushels of corn; 19,253 of oats, and 31,289 pounds of butter. The route of the projected Covington and Ohio railroad passes along the N. E. border. It was formed out of part of Fayette county, and named in honor of the celebrated Sir Walter Raleigh, who planted a colony on the Roanoke about 1585. Capital, Beckley. Population, 1765; of whom 1742 were free, and 23, slaves.

RALEIGH, a city, capital of North Carolina, and seat of justice of Wake co., a few miles W. from Neuse river, 148 miles N. by W. from Wilmington, 60 miles N. N. E. from Fayetteville, and 286 miles from Washington. Lat. 35° 47' N., lon. 78° 48' W. The situation is elevated and healthy. An open area of ten acres, named Union Square, occupies the centre of the city, from which four principal streets, 99 feet wide, extend in different directions. The state house, situated in Union square, is among the largest and most splendid capitols in the United States. It is built of granite, and surrounded with massive columns of the same material, after the model of the Parthenon, and surmounted by a handsome dome. The dimensions are 166 feet long by 90 wide, and the cost above $500,000. The former state house, which contained a marble statue of Washington, by Canova, was destroyed by fire in 1831. The North Carolina Institution for the Deaf and Dumb has recently been established at this place. The foundation has also been laid of the State Lunatic Asylum, on Dix's Hill, in the W. part of the town. Raleigh also contains a court house, a market house, two banks, and churches of the Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, Methodists, and Roman Catholics: 13 or 14 newspapers are published here. It is the terminus of the Raleigh and Gaston railroad, which, with other lines, forms a direct communication with Richmond and Norfolk, Virginia. The North Carolina railroad, now in progress, passes through this city, connecting it with those of South Carolina on one hand, and with the seaports of North Carolina on the other. Population in 1850, 4518.

RALEIGH, a post-village, capital of Smith co., Mississippi, about 50 miles E. by S. from Jackson. It is surrounded by pine barrens.

RALEIGH, a post-village, capital of Shelby county, Tennessee, on Wolf river, 200 miles W. S. W. from Nashville, and 9 or 10 miles N. E. from Memphis. It is situated in a fertile cotton-growing district, on the railroad route from Memphis to Nashville. Population, about 300.

RALEIGH, a small post-village of Union co., Kentucky, on the Ohio river, 215 miles W. by S. from Frankfort.

RALEIGH, a post-village of Rush co., Indiana, 10 miles N. N. E. from Rushville.

RALEIGH, a post-township in Saline co., Illinois. Population, 1092.

RALEIGH, a post-village, capital of Saline co., Illinois, on the Middle fork of Saline creek, 175 miles S. S. E. from Springfield.

RALEIGH COURT HOUSE, Virginia. See BECKLEY.

RALLS, a county in the E. N. E. part of Missouri, contains about 430 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Mississippi, which separates it from Illinois, traversed from W. to E. by Salt river, and also drained by Spencer's and Lick creeks. The surface is somewhat diversified, and the soil generally good. Originally, about three-fourths of the surface was covered with forests of hard wood. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 495,435 bushels of corn; 61,427 of wheat; 49,603 of oats; 2291 tons of hay, and 78,274 pounds of butter. There were 15 churches, and 1428 pupils attending public schools. Limestone underlies the greater part of the county. Stone coal and iron ore are found in it. Capital, New London. Population, 6151; of whom 4783 were free, and 1368, slaves.

RALLY HILL, a post-office of Maury co., Tennessee.

RALSTON, a post-village of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania, on Lycoming creek, and on the railroad between Williamsport and Elmira, 25 miles N. from the former.

RAMAPO, a small river rising in Orange county, New York. It flows southward through Bergen and Passaic counties of New Jersey, and enters Pompton river, about 8 miles N. W. from Paterson. It is a good mill stream.

RAMAPO, a township of Rockland co., New York. Population, 3197.

RAMAPO WORKS, a post-village in the above township, on Ramapo river, and on the Erie railroad, 44 miles N. by W. from New York. It has a rolling mill and a manufactory of files and other articles.

RAMER, a post-office of Montgomery co., Alabama.

RAMESSES, a post-office of Darlington district, South Carolina.

RAMSAYSBURG, a post-village of Warren co., New Jersey, 5 miles N. from Belvidere.

RAMSAYTOWN, a post-office of Yancey co., North Carolina.

RAMSEY, a county in the E. part of Minnesota, has an area estimated at 2800 square miles. The Mississippi river forms its boundary on the N. and on the S. W., and it is drained by the sources of Rum and Snake rivers. Spirit lake is situated in the N. part. The surface is elevated, and consists of prairies and forests. The soil in some parts is productive. Lumber, wheat, Indian corn, oats, grass, and beans are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 1615 bushels of corn; 390 of wheat; 6260 of oats; 9585 of beans and peas, and 100 tons of hay. Steamboats navigate the Mississippi on the border of the county. Capital, St. Paul's. Population, 2227.

RANALEBURG, a post-village of Mecklenburg co., North Carolina, 174 miles S. W. from Raleigh.

RANCOCOS, or RANCOCAS creek of New Jersey, is formed by the North and South branches, which unite about three miles W. from Mount Holly. Flowing westward and north-westward, it enters the Delaware, seven miles below Burlington. Small vessels ascend from its mouth to Mount Holly on the North branch, and to Lumberton on the other.

RANCOCUS, a post-office of Burlington co., New Jersey.

RANDALLSTOWN, a village of Baltimore co., Maryland, 15 miles W. N. W. from Baltimore.

RANDALLSVILLE, a post-village in Robeson co., North Carolina, 85 miles S. S. W. from Raleigh.

RANDOLPH, a county in the N. part of Virginia, bordering on Maryland, is about 80 miles in length, and 35 miles wide; area, about 2800 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of the Buchanan, Cheat, and Tygart's Valley rivers, branches of the Monongahela; it is traversed in the S. W. part by Elk river. The surface is hilly and mountainous, the county occupying the north-western declivity of the Alleghany range. The soil is generally fertile, adapted to pasturage of cattle and sheep. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, and wool are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 87,468 bushels of corn; 11,740 of wheat; 44,789 of oats; 6480 tons of hay, and 56,339 pounds of butter. It contained 10 churches, and 380 pupils attending public schools. Stone coal, iron, limestone, sandstone, and slate are abundant. Salt is procured from some of its springs. Named in honor of John Randolph, of Roanoke. Capital, Beverly. Population, 5243; of whom 5042 were free, and 201, slaves.

RANDOLPH, a county in the central part of North Carolina: area estimated at 880 square miles. It is intersected by Deep and Uharie rivers. The surface is diversified by hills and valleys; the soil is generally fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, tobacco, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 83,634 bushels of wheat; 440,086 of corn, and 1915 pounds of tobacco. There were 5 cotton mills, 1 woollen factory, 17 corn and flour mills, 3 grist mills, and 5 tanneries. It contained 49 churches, 1 newspaper office; 1550 pupils attending public schools, and 48 attending other schools. Extensive beds of slate underlie a part of the surface. Deep river furnishes valuable water-power. The county is intersected by the Fayetteville and Salem plank-road. Formed in 1779. Capital, Ashborough. Population, 15,832; of whom 14,192 were free, and 1640, slaves.

RANDOLPH, a county in the W. S. W. part of Georgia, bordering on the Chattahoochee, which separates it from Alabama, contains about 800 square miles. It is intersected by Patawla creek, and also drained by the Hodchodkee and Pachitla creeks. The surface is nearly level, and partly covered with pine timber; the soil is fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, oats, sweet potatoes, and sugar-cane flourish in this region. In 1850 this county produced 10,533 bales of cotton; 454,533 bushels of corn; 56,959 of oats, and 151,132 of sweet potatoes. There were 8 grist mills, 12 saw mills, 1 woollen factory, and 2 tanneries; 44 churches, and 715 pupils attending academies and other schools. The county contains several extensive caves. The Patawla creek furnishes fine water-power at Lowell, and the Chattahoochee is navigable by steamboats along the western border. Organized in 1828. Capital, Cuthbert. Population, 12,868; of whom 7860 were free, and 5008, slaves.

RANDOLPH, a county in the E. part of Alabama, bordering on Georgia, has an area of 970 square miles. The Tallapoosa river, flowing through the county, is joined by the Little Tallapoosa, near the centre. The surface is uneven; the soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, cotton, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1986 bales of cotton; 319,183 bushels of corn, and 60,930 of sweet potatoes. There were 5 potteries and 3 tanneries. It contained 40 churches, and 1829 pupils attending public schools. A gold mine is worked in the county. Capital, McDonald. Population, 11,681, of whom 10,645 were free, and 936, slaves.

RANDOLPH, a county in the N. E. part of Arkansas, bordering on Missouri, contains about 880 square miles. It is intersected by Black river, and drained by the Eleven Points and Current rivers, affluents of the former. The surface is undulating; the soil on the river bottoms is very fertile, producing cotton, Indian corn, and tobacco. Many cattle and horses are raised. In 1850 it yielded 176,669 bushels of corn; 17,596 of oats; 36,530 pounds of butter, and 22,732 of tobacco. It contained 1 saw mill, 1 tannery, 1 church, and 157 pupils attending public schools. Steamboats can ascend, during more than half the year, to Pochontas, the county seat. Population, 3275, of whom 3032 were free, and 243, slaves.

RANDOLPH, a county in the E. part of Indiana, bordering on Ohio, contains 440 square miles. It is drained by the Whitewater, Mississinewa, and White rivers, of which the first and second rise within it. The surface is nearly level; the soil is fertile, and adapted to grass and grain. There are a few wet prairies in the county. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 526,197 bushels of corn; 67,048 of wheat; 75,290 of oats, and 7361½ tons of hay. It contained 32 churches, and 1 newspaper office. It is intersected by the Bellefontaine and Indianapolis, the Cincinnati, Union and Fort Wayne, and other railroads. Capital, Winchester. Population, 14,725.

RANDOLPH, a county in the S. W. part of Illinois, bordering on Missouri, has an area of 600 square miles. It is bounded on the S. W. by the Mississippi, and intersected by the Kaskaskia, which enters the first-named stream on the southern border of the county. The surface is undulating and hilly; the soil is fertile and well timbered. Indian corn, wheat, oats, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 443,491 bushels of corn; 60,914 of wheat; 125,130 of oats, and 1296 tons of hay. It contained 24 churches, 3 newspaper offices, and 1414 pupils attending public schools. Fine marble is found in it. Randolph is among the oldest counties of the state. La Salle established a post at Kaskaskia, in this county, in 1673. Capital, Chester. Population, 11,079.

RANDOLPH, a county in the N. central part of Missouri, has an area of 430 square miles. It is intersected by the East fork of Chariton river, and also drained by the Elk fork of Salt river, by the sources of Bonne Femme river, and by Silver creek. The surface is undulating, and diversified by prairies and forests; the soil is remarkably fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, tobacco, butter, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 668,195 bushels of corn; 35,483 of wheat; 109,880 of oats; 2,262,796 pounds of tobacco, and 138,768 of butter. It contained 14 churches, 607 pupils attending public schools, and 24 attending another school. Limestone is abundant, and coal is found. A plank-road extends from the Missouri to Huntsville, the capital. Pop. 9439, of whom 7283 were free, and 2156, slaves.

RANDOLPH, a post-township in Coos co., New Hampshire, 89 miles N. by E. from Concord. Population, 113.

RANDOLPH, a post-township in Orange co., Vt., 25 miles S. from Montpelier. Pop., 2666.

RANDOLPH, a post-village in the above township, on the Vermont Central railroad, contains 1 or 2 churches, and an academy.

RANDOLPH, a post-township in Norfolk co., Mass., on the Fall River railroad, 13 miles S. from Boston, contains a bank. Pop., 4741.

RANDOLPH, a post-township in the S. W. part of Cattaraugus co., N. Y. Pop., 1606.

RANDOLPH, a township of Morris co., New Jersey, about 7 miles N. W. from Morristown. Population, 2632.

RANDOLPH, a post-township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles E. from Meadville. Population, 1260.

RANDOLPH, a post-office of Bibb co., Ala.

RANDOLPH, a decayed post-village of Tipton co., Tennessee, on the Mississippi river, 33 miles N. from Memphis.

RANDOLPH, a post-office of Barren co., Ky.
 RANDOLPH, a township in the N. part of Montgomery co., Ohio. Pop., 1883.

RANDOLPH, a post-township in the S. W. part of Portage co., Ohio. Population, 1732.

RANDOLPH, a village in Randolph co., Indiana, 85 miles E. N. E. from Indianapolis.

RANDOLPH, a township in Tippecanoe co., Indiana. Population, 1105.

RANDOLPH, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

RANDOLPH, a post-village in the above township, 44 miles N. W. from Madison.

RANDOLPH CENTRE, a post-office of Broome co., New York.

RANDOLPH CENTRE, a post-office of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

RANDOLPH MACON COLLEGE, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., Virginia.

RANDOLPH'S GROVE, a post-office of McLean co., Illinois.

RANDON CREEK, of Monroe co., Alabama, flows into the Alabama.

RANEYSBURG, a small post-village of Washington co., Illinois.

RANGE, a township in the S. W. part of Madison co., Ohio. Population, 988.

RANKIN, a county in the S. W. central part of Mississippi, has an area of about 640 square miles. The Pearl river washes its N. W. border for a distance of more than 50 miles. The surface is mostly covered with pine forests. The soil is generally fertile, producing cotton and Indian corn. In 1850 this county yielded 2676 bales of cotton; 217,673 bushels of corn; and 68,206 of sweet potatoes. It contained 1 newspaper office, and 349 pupils attending academies and other schools. A railroad extends from the county seat to Vicksburg, and is to be continued eastward. Named in honor of Christopher Rankin, member of Congress from Mississippi. Capital, Brandon. Population, 7227, of whom 3951 were free, and 3276, slaves.

RANSOM, a post-township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania. Population, 797.

RANSOM, a post-township in Hillsdale co., Michigan. Population, 549.

RANSOM'S BRIDGE, a post-office of Nash co., N. C., 56 miles from Raleigh.

RANSOMVILLE, a post-village in Porter township, Niagara co., New York, about 25 miles N. N. W. from Buffalo. It contains 2 stores and 2 churches. Pop., about 200.

RANTOROLLES, a post-village of Colleton district, South Carolina.

RAPHOE, a township of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. W. from Lancaster. Population, 3160.

RAPIDAN river, of Virginia, rises on the S. E. base of the Blue Ridge. Flowing southward and then eastward, it forms the boundary between Green and Orange counties on the right, and Madison and Culpepper on the left; and unites with the Rappahannock about 10 miles above Fredericksburg. Its length is estimated at 80 miles.

RAPID ANN, a post-village of Madison co., Virginia, 102 miles N. W. from Richmond. It contains 3 churches and several stores.

RAPIDES, a parish in the W. part of Louisiana, bordering on Texas, has an area of about 2100 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by Little river, and intersected by Calcasieu and Red rivers. The surface is nearly level; the soil near the streams is very productive. A large part of the parish is covered with forests of pine. Cotton, sugar, Indian corn, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this parish produced 4222 bales of cotton; 4613 hogsheads of sugar; 438,170 gallons of molasses, and 357,480 bushels of corn. There were 4 saw and planing mills, and 2 tanneries. It contained 10 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 590 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending academies or other schools. Red river is navigable by steamboats through the parish at all stages of water. Capital, Alexandria. Population, 16,561, of whom 5221 were free, and 11,340, slaves.

RAPIDS, a post-office of Niagara co., N. Y.

RAPIDS, a post-office of Portage co., Ohio.

RAPIDS, a post-office of Whitesides co., Ill.

RAPIDS, a post-office of Boone co., Iowa.

RAPPAHANNOCK, a river in the E. part of Virginia, is formed at the eastern extremity of Culpepper county, by the confluence of North and Rapidan rivers. Flowing in a south-easterly course, it falls over the primitive ledge, and meets the ocean tides at Fredericksburg, where it affords extensive water-power. It now becomes a navigable stream, and after forming the boundary between several counties on each hand, enters Chesapeake bay between Windmill and Stingray points. Its general direction is south-eastward, and its whole length about 125 miles. A canal, 45 miles long, has within a few years been opened along the river, above the falls, to the mouth of Carter's creek.

RAPPAHANNOCK, a county in the N. E. central part of Virginia, is situated on the S. E. declivity of the Blue Ridge. The area is about 240 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by a branch of the Rappahannock, (sometimes called North river,) from which it derives its name; and Hazel river flows along the S. border. The soil is generally fertile. Wheat and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 157,699 bushels of wheat; 281,216 of corn; and 3273 tons of hay. There were 15 flour, grist, and plaster mills, 3 distilleries, and 5 tanneries. It contained 11 churches, 437 pupils attending public schools, and 30 attending other schools. The county is traversed by several turnpike-roads. Formed from Culpepper in 1831. Capital, Washington. Population, 9782, of whom 5938 were free, and 3844 slaves.

RAPPAHANNOCK ACADEMY, a post-office of Caroline co., Virginia.

RAPP'S BARREN, a post-office of Fulton co., Arkansas.

RARDEN, a post-office of Scioto co., Ohio.

RARITAN, a river of New Jersey, is formed by the North and South branches, which unite in Somerset county, about 5 miles W. from Somerville. It flows in a general easterly direction, passes by New Brunswick, crosses Middlesex county, and empties itself into Raritan bay at Amboy. The main stream is about 33 miles long, and is navigable by steamboats 15 miles to New Brunswick. Branches.—The North branch rises in Morris county, and flows southward. The South branch also rises in Morris county, and flows in a circuitous course through Hunterdon county. It is rather longer than the main stream.

RARITAN, a township of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, on the South branch of the Raritan river, about 23 miles N. by W. from Trenton. Population, 3066.

RARITAN, a township of Monmouth co., New Jersey. Population, 4165.

RARITAN, a manufacturing post-village of Somerset county, New Jersey, is situated on the Raritan river and on the New Jersey Central railroad, about 1 mile W. from Somerville. This village has sprung up within the last ten years, and has now (1853) 2 churches, 3 stores, 1 hame factory, 1 gutta-percha factory, and 2 grist mills. Population, 900.

RARITAN BAY, at the mouth of Raritan river, is situated between Staten Island, New York, and Monmouth co., New Jersey. Length, near 15 miles. Greatest breadth, about 10 miles.

RARITAN LANDING, a village of Middlesex co., New Jersey, on the Raritan river, 27 miles N. E. from Trenton. The Raritan is crossed at this place by a wooden bridge. Population, about 200.

RATCLIFFSBURG, a post-office of Vinton co., Ohio.

RATHBONEVILLE, a post-village of Addison township, Steuben county, New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 317 miles from New York city. It is the depôt of the district lying south, and takes its name from the principal proprietor. Pop., about 500.

RATHBUN, a post-village in Mitchell township, Sheboygan co., Wisconsin, 86 miles N. E. from Madison.

RATON MOUNTAINS, in the eastern interior of the Territory of New Mexico, in latitude about 37° N., lon. 104° 30' W.

RATTLESLAKE, a post-office of White co., Illinois.

RATTLESLAKE CREEK, of Owen co., Indiana, flows into White river.

RATTLESLAKE FORK, of Paint creek, Ohio, joins the main stream on the S. W. border of Ross county.

RAVEN CREEK, a post-office of Harrison co., Kentucky.

RAVENNA, a post-township in the S. central part of Portage co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad. Population, 2240.

RAVENNA, a handsome post-village of Ravenna township, capital of Portage county, Ohio, on the railroad between Cleveland and Pittsburg, 38 miles S. E. from the former. The completion of the railroad has recently contributed much to the prosperity of the village, and business is very active. Large quantities of butter, cheese, wool, and grain are shipped here. The Pennsylvania and Ohio canal connects Ravenna with Pittsburg and Cleveland, and affords water-power at this place. The village contains a handsome stone court house, 1 bank, 1 academy, and 3 newspaper offices. The manufacture of carriages is carried on extensively. Settled in 1799. Population in 1853, about 3500.

RAVENNA, a post-township of Ottawa co., Michigan. Population, 77.

RAVEN'S NEST, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

RAVENSWOOD, a village of Queen's co., New York, on East river, opposite Blackwell's island.

RAVENSWOOD, a thriving post-village of Jackson co., Virginia, on the Ohio river, at the mouth of Sand creek, 15 miles N. W. from Ripley. Population, 200.

RAWLINGSBURG, a post-village in Rockingham co., North Carolina, 103 miles N. W. from Raleigh.

RAWLINGSVILLE, a post-village of De Kalb co., Alabama, 180 miles N. by E. from Montgomery.

RAWLINSVILLE, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

RAWSON, a post-office of Cattaraugus co., New York.

RAWSONVILLE, a village in the E. part of Fulton co., New York, in Broadalbin township. It contains several churches and factories.

RAWSONVILLE, a post-office of Lorain co., O.

RAWSONVILLE, a post-village in Wayne co., Michigan, 36 miles W. from Detroit.

RAY, a county in the W. N. W. part of Missouri, contains about 560 square miles. The Missouri river forms the entire southern boundary, and it is traversed by Fishing and Crooked creeks. The surface is undulating, and consists partly of prairies and partly of forests. The soil is fertile both on the river bottoms and on the uplands. Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, tobacco, and hemp are the staples. Many cattle, horses, and swine, are reared. In 1850 it produced 655,020 bushels of corn; 48,003 of wheat; 183,641 of oats; 183,137 pounds of butter; 516,906 of tobacco, and 431 tons of hemp.

It contained 8 churches, 500 pupils attending public schools, and 123 attending other schools. Limestone and bituminous coal are abundant. Named in honor of — Ray, a member of the convention to form the state constitution. Capital, Richmond. Population, 10,373, of whom 8859 were free, and 1514 slaves.

RAY, a post-township in the N. part of Macomb co., Michigan, intersected by the N. branch of Clinton river. Population, 1232.

RAY, a township in Franklin co., Indiana. Population, 1231.

RAY CENTRE, a post-office of Macomb co., Michigan.

RAYMERTOWN, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

RAYMOND, a post-township in Cumberland co., Maine, 44 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 1142.

RAYMOND, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, contains a village situated on the Concord and Portsmouth railroad, 23 miles S. E. from Concord. Population, 1256.

RAYMOND, a post-village, capital of Hinds county, Mississippi, 16 miles S. W. from Jackson, and 8 miles S. from the Vicksburg and Jackson railroad, with which it is connected by a branch railroad. One or two newspapers are published here.

RAYMOND, a post-office of Union co., Ohio.

RAYMOND, a post-township in the E. central part of Racine co., Wisconsin. Pop., 820.

RAYMOND, a thriving post-village in the above township, about 90 miles S. E. from Madison, and 10 miles W. from Lake Michigan. It contains 2 churches, and about 150 dwellings.

RAYMONDVILLE, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

RAYNE, a township of Indiana co., Pennsylvania, about 42 miles N. W. by N. from Greensburg. Population, 1184.

RAYNHAM, a township in Bristol co., Massachusetts, intersected by the Taunton railroad, 33 miles S. from Boston. Pop., 1541.

RAYNORTOWN, a village of Queen's co., New York, near Hempstead bay.

RAY'S FORK, a post-office of Scott co., Ky.

RAY'S HILL, a small mountain ridge extending across the Maryland line into the S. part of Bedford co., Pennsylvania.

RAY'S HILL, a post-office of Bedford co., Pennsylvania.

RAYSTOWN BRANCH, Pennsylvania. See JUNIATA RIVER.

RAYSVILLE, a post-office of Columbia co., Georgia, 35 miles W. by N. from Augusta.

RAYSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Henry county, Indiana, on the Blue river, where it is crossed by the Central railroad, 33 miles E. from Indianapolis. It has a fine and improved water-power.

RAYTOWN, a post-village of Taliaferro co., Georgia, 52 miles N. N. E. from Milledgeville.

RAYVILLE, a post-office of Lawrence co., Mississippi.

RAYWICK, a post-village of Marion co., Kentucky, on the Rolling fork of Salt river, 72 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

REABURN'S CREEK, of Laurens district, South Carolina, flows into Reedy river from the left, a few miles from its entrance into Saluda river.

READFIELD, a post-township of Kennebec co., Maine, about 10 miles N. W. of Augusta, intersected by the Androscoggin and Kennebec railroad. Contains a village on the above railroad. Population, 1895.

READFIELD, or REDFIELD, a township in the N. E. part of Oswego co., New York. Population, 752.

READFIELD DEPÔT, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

READING, a post-township in Windsor co., Vermont, 54 miles S. from Montpelier. Population, 1171.

READING, a post-township in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 13 miles N. from Boston, intersected by the Boston and Maine railroad. It contains 2 thriving villages, one in the N. and the other in the S. part. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes. Population, 3108.

READING, a township in Fairfield co., Connecticut, intersected by the Saugatuck river, 25 miles W. New Haven. Population, 1754.

READING, a village in the above township, contains several churches.

READING, a post-township in the N. E. part of Steuben co., New York, on Seneca lake. Population, 1434.

READING, a township of Adams co., Pennsylvania, about 13 miles N. E. from Gettysburg. Population, 1252.

READING, a handsome city of Pennsylvania, and capital of Berks county, on the left, or east bank of Schuylkill river, and on the Philadelphia, Reading, and Pottsville railroad, 52 miles E. from Harrisburg, and 52 miles N. W. from Philadelphia. This flourishing town, the third of the state in respect to population and manufactures, is beautifully situated on a plain, which rises gradually from the river, and is enclosed on the E. by an eminence named Penn's Mount. The city is compactly built, and intersected by straight and rectangular streets, which are remarkably clean and smooth. The most frequent of these are covered with a hard, white gravel, derived from the sandstone of the adjacent hill, forming a compact and durable road. Among the conspicuous public buildings, are the court house, which occupies a commanding situation, and has a handsome portico of sandstone; the German Lutheran church is capable of containing about 1500 persons, and is remarkable for its steeple, about 200 feet in height, and the German Reformed church, a brick building, which has a steeple 150 feet in height. In addition to these, Reading has about 20 churches, 1 academy, 2 market houses, 2 banks, and several public libraries. Nine or ten weekly papers are published here, of which 3 are in the German language. The streets and many of the buildings are lighted with gas, and supplied with spring water, conveyed through iron pipes. The river is crossed here by 2 bridges, one of which is about 600 feet in length. Reading is a place of active trade, and is the market for a rich and populous agricultural district. The Schuylkill canal and the railroad above named open a ready communication with Philadelphia, on the one hand and with the coal region of Schuylkill county on the other, and the Union canal extends westward to the Susquehanna river. A railroad is also in progress from Reading to Harrisburg. This town is largely engaged in the manufacture of iron, hats, shoes, steam engines, and various other articles. The machine shops of the railroad company employ several hundred men. It has also 2 large rolling mills, 4 foundries, 1 anthracite furnace, a nail factory, a first-class cotton mill, and 2 flouring mills, in all of which steam-power is used. Reading was laid out by Thomas and Richard Penn, in 1748, and named from the town of Reading, in England. It was incorporated as a borough in 1783, and as a city in 1847. Population in 1840, 8410; in 1850, 15,743; in 1853, about 17,000.

READING, a post-village of Hamilton co., Ohio, 10 miles N. E. from Cincinnati.

READING, a township in the N. W. part of Perry co., Ohio. Population, 2744.

READING, a post-township in the W. part of Hillsdale co., Michigan. Pop., 956.

READING, a small village of Lawrence co., Indiana, 82 miles S. by W. from Indianapolis.

READING, a post-office of Livingston co., Illinois.

READING CENTRE, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

READINGTON, a post-township of Hunterdon co., New Jersey. It is intersected by the South branch of the Raritan river, 8 miles N. E. from Flemington. Population, 2836.

READINGVILLE, a small village of Washtenaw co., Michigan.

READSBOROUGH, a post-township in Bennington co., Vermont, 120 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 857.

READ'S CREEK, of North Carolina, enters the Neuse river at the N. extremity of Wake county.

READ'S CREEK, a township in Lawrence co., Arkansas. Population, 567.

READSVILLE, a village of Albany co., New York, 16 miles S. W. from Albany.

READYVILLE, a post-village of Rutherford co., Tenn., 42 miles E. S. E. from Nashville.

REAGANSVILLE, a small village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 16 miles S. from Greensburg.

REAMSTOWN, a post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, 42 miles E. by S. from Harrisburg.

REAVILLE, a post-office of Hunterdon co., New Jersey.

REBERSBURG, a small post-village of Centre co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles E. from Bellefonte.

RECKLESSTOWN, a post-village of Burlington co., New Jersey, 5 miles S. E. from Bordentown, contains 1 or 2 stores, and about 80 inhabitants.

RECOVERY, a township in the S. W. part of Mercer co., Ohio. Population, 596.

RECTORTOWN, a post-village of Fauquier co., Va., 130 miles N. by W. from Richmond.

RED BANK, a small village and steamboat landing of Gloucester co., New Jersey, on the E. bank of the Delaware river, 5 miles below Philadelphia.

RED BANK, a post-village of Monmouth county, New Jersey, 45 miles E. from Trenton, contains about 10 stores, several factories, 1 or 2 churches, and about 100 dwellings. There is a great deal of coasting trade done at this place.

RED BANK, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1980.

RED BANK, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Clarion co., Pa. Pop., 1225.

RED BANK, a post-office of Lawrence co., Arkansas.

RED BANK CREEK, in the W. central part of Pennsylvania, flows nearly westward, along the boundary between Clarion and Armstrong counties, until it enters the Alleghany river.

RED BANK CREEK, of Mississippi, enters Coldwater river, in De Soto county.

RED BANK FURNACE, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

RED BANKS, a post-office of Marshall co., Mississippi.

RED BARN, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

RED BEACH, a post-office of Washington co., Maine.

RED BIRD, a post-office of Dallas co., Ark.

RED BLUFF, a post-office of Wythe co., Va.

RED BLUFF, a post-office of Marion district, South Carolina.

RED BOILING SPRING, a small post-village of Macon co., Tennessee.

RED BRIDGE, a post-office of Ulster co., New York.

RED BUD, a post-office of Gordon co., Ga.

RED BUD, a post-office of Randolph co., Ill.

RED BUD, a post-office of Ozark co., Mo.

RED CEDAR, a village in Cedar co., Iowa, 20 miles E. from Iowa City.

RED CEDAR RIVER, of Michigan, rises in Livingston co., and falls into the Grand river at Lansing, where it is about 35 yards wide. Small boats can ascend 25 miles.

RED CEDAR RIVER, of Minnesota and Iowa, rises in the S. part of the former, and flows south-eastward into Mitchell co., Iowa. From this point its general direction is S. S. E., nearly parallel with the Wapsipinicon river, which in several places is about 12 miles distant. It passes almost entirely across the state, and approaches within 10 miles of the Mississippi, when it turns to the S. W., and falls into the Iowa river, about 15 miles above Wapello. Its whole length is probably above 300 miles. It furnishes considerable water-power.

RED CEDAR RIVER, of Wisconsin, rises near the N. W. extremity of the state, and flowing southward, forms the boundary between Chippewa and St. Croix counties, and enters the Chippewa river, (of which it is the largest affluent,) 36 miles from its mouth. The channel is said to be deep from the mouth to the lower rapids, about 50 miles.

RED CLAY, a post-village of Whitefield co., Georgia, 245 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

REDCLAY CREEK, rises in Chester co., Pennsylvania, flows south-eastward, and unites with Whiteclay creek, in New Castle co., Delaware, to form the Christiana.

RED CREEK, of Mississippi, flows into Black creek, in Jackson county.

RED CREEK, in the N. part of California, after separating Shasta and Colusi counties through its whole length, falls into the Sacramento river, about 40 miles below Shasta City.

RED CREEK, a flourishing post-village in Wolcott township, Wayne county, New York, on a creek of its own name, about 160 miles N. W. by W. from Albany. It contains 3 churches, 1 incorporated academy, with 400 pupils, 3 stores, and several factories. Population, about 500.

REDDING, a post-office of Fairfield co., Conn.

REDDING, a township in Jackson co., Indiana. Population, 1325.

REDDING RIDGE, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

REDDINGTON, a neat post-village of Jackson co., Indiana, near the E. fork of White river, and 16 miles N. E. from Brownstown, contains 1 church, and 3 stores. Pop., about 300.

RED FALLS, a post-office of Greene co., N. Y.

REDFIELD, a post-township of Oswego co., New York.

REDFORD, a post-village of Clinton co., New York, on the Saranac river, about 180 miles N. from Albany. It has a glass factory and several stores.

REDFORD, a post-township in the N. E. part of Wayne co., Michigan. Population, 1645.

REDFORD, a post-village of Wayne co., Michigan, on the N. branch of Rouge river, 13 miles N. W. from Detroit. It has several mills and stores.

RED FORK, a post-office of Desha co., Ark.

RED HILL, a post-office of Kershaw district, South Carolina.

RED HILL, a post-office of Murray co., Georgia, 240 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

RED HILL, a small village of Clarke co., Alabama.

RED HILL, a post-office of Marshall co., Ala.

RED HILL, a post-office of Wayne co., Miss.

RED HILL, a post-office of Grainger co., Tennessee, 230 miles E. from Nashville.

RED HILL, a post-office of Hardin co., Ky.

RED HOOK, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Dutchess co., New York, on the Hudson river. It contains the villages of Lower and Upper Red Hook, about 50 miles S. from Albany. Population of the township, 3264.

RED HOUSE, a post-office of Charlotte co., Virginia, 112 miles S. W. from Richmond.

RED HOUSE SHOALS, a post-office of Putnam co., Virginia.

RED JACKET, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

RED LAKE, in the N. part of Minnesota Territory, is about 37 miles in length, and 16 miles in its greatest breadth. The 48th parallel of N. latitude grazes its southern edge; and it is intersected by the 96th meridian of W. longitude. It resembles two lakes joined together by a narrow strait of water.

RED LAKE, a post-office of Minnesota co., Minnesota Territory.

REDLAND, a post-office of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

REDLAND, a post-office of Bossier par., La. REDLAND, a township in Hempstead co., Arkansas. Population, 516.

RED LION, a small village of Burlington co., N. J., 9 miles S. W. from Mount Holly.

RED LION, a hundred and post-village of New Castle co., Delaware, on the New Castle and Frenchtown railroad, 12 miles S. W. from Wilmington. Population of the hundred, 1105.

RED LION, a post-office of Warren co., O.

REDMAN, a post-office of Jackson co., Ala.

RED MILLS, a post-office of Putnam co., New York.

RED MOUND, a post-office of Henderson co., Tennessee, 114 miles from Nashville.

RED MOUNTAIN, a post-office of Orange co., North Carolina.

RED OAK, a post-office of Fayette co., Ga.

RED OAK, a post-office of Ellis co., Texas.

RED OAK CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Flint river, in Merriwether county.

RED OAK CREEK, of Ellis co., Texas, flows eastward into Trinity river. It is also called Bois d'Arc creek.

RED OAK GROVE, a post-office of Burlington co., New Jersey.

RED OAK GROVE, a post-office of Charlotte co., Virginia.

RED PLAINS, a post-office of Yadkin co., North Carolina.

RED RIVER, one of the largest affluents of the Mississippi, is formed by the Salt fork and South fork, which unite near 34° N. lat. and 100° W. lon. It flows first eastward, forming the boundary between Texas and the Indian Territory, and enters the State of Arkansas. Near the village of Fulton it bends towards the S., and passes into Louisiana, in the vicinity of the Great Raft. Below this point, its general direction is south-eastward, and after traversing a region which is intersected by numerous lakes and bayous formed by the overflowings of its waters, it enters the Mississippi in Louisiana, near 31° N. lat., about 200 miles above New Orleans. A new channel, called the "Red River Cut-off" has been opened at this place, by cutting a short trench through a neck of land formed by a bend of the Mississippi. The length of the main stream is estimated at above 1200 miles. During eight months of the year, steam-packets regularly navigate it from its mouth to Shreveport, a distance of about 600 miles, and the navigation is good in all stages of water to Alexandria. The portion of this river above the Raft is also navigable by small boats for about 300 miles, except in low water. The width of the river above the Raft is said to vary from 200 to 400 yards. The Great Raft, which is the most serious drawback to the prosperity of the upper part of the Red River valley, consists of an immense mass of driftwood and trees, which have been brought down several hundred miles by the current and lodged here, obstructing the channel for a distance of 70 miles, and inundating the adjacent country. In 1834-5, it was removed by the General Government at an expense of $300,000, but another has since been formed. The lower part of the Raft is now about 30 miles above Shreveport. During high-water small boats pass round the raft by means of the lateral channels or lakes which are then formed. Branches.—The Salt fork, which is the principal branch, rises near the E. border of New Mexico, and flows in an E. S. E. direction. Its whole length probably exceeds 250 miles. The South fork rises in the N. W. part of Texas, and flows eastward till it unites with the former on the N. boundary of the state.

RED RIVER, in the N. part of Middle Tennessee, rises near the E. border of Robertson co., and flowing westward, enters the Cumberland river at Clarksville.

RED RIVER, of Kentucky, a small stream which rises in Morgan county, and flowing westward, forms the boundary between Clark and Estill counties, until it enters the Kentucky river.

RED RIVER, of Michigan, rises in Oakland co., and flows into Clinton river, six miles above Mount Clemens.

RED RIVER of the North, rises in Elbow lake, of Minnesota Territory, in about 47° 7' N. lat., and 95° 25' W. lon., and flowing in a general southerly, then in a south-westerly, and afterwards in a north-westerly direction, at last runs nearly northward, and crossing the northern boundary of the United States, falls into Lake Winnipeg, in Canada. Entire length, about 550 miles. In the first 100 miles of its course it forms the line of connection between a multitude of small lakes, which seem to be disposed along this stream like beads upon a thread.

RED RIVER, a county in the N. E. part of Texas, bordering on the Indian Territory, contains 1100 square miles. The Red river bounds it on the N., and the Sulphur fork washes its S. border. The valley of the Red river is occupied by extensive prairies, among which tracts of fine timber are distributed: the soil is scarcely surpassed in fertility and durability. Cotton, Indian corn, and grass are the staples. Many cattle and horses are reared here for exportation. In 1850 the county produced 95,510 bushels of corn; 16,090 of oats; 579 bales of cotton, and 56,465 pounds of butter. It contained 2 churches, 1 newspaper office, 257 pupils attending academies or other schools. Red river is navigable by steamboats along the northern border. Capital, Clarksville. Population, 3906; of whom 2500 were free, and 1406, slaves.

RED RIVER, a township in Lafayette co., Arkansas. Population, 623.

RED RIVER, a township in Van Buren co., Arkansas. Population, 294.

RED RIVER, a township in White co., Arkansas. Population, 190.

RED RIVER, a post-office of Robertson co., Tennessee, 36 miles from Nashville.

RED RIVER IRON WORKS, a post-village of Estill co., Kentucky, about 40 miles S. E. from Lexington. A large quantity of bar-iron and nails is manufactured here.

RED RIVER LANDING, a post-office of Pointe Coupée co., Louisiana.

RED ROCK, a post-office of Upshur co., Tex.

RED ROCK, a thriving post-village of Marion co., Iowa, on the Des Moines river, 94 miles W. S. W. from Iowa city. Population, 350.

RED ROCK, a post-village of Ramsey county, Minnesota, on the left bank of the Mississippi river, 6 miles below St. Paul. It derives its name from a granite boulder, which the Indians have painted red. The place was settled in 1837.

RED SHOALS, a post-office of Stokes co., North Carolina.

RED SPRING, a post-office of Polk co., Tenn.

RED SPRINGS, a post-office of Robeson co., North Carolina.

REDSTONE, a post-township of Fayette co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. W. from Uniontown. Population, 1287.

REDSTONE CREEK, of Fayette co., Pennsylvania, falls into the Monongahela river near Brownsville.

RED SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-village of Monroe county, Virginia, on Indian creek, 240 miles W. from Richmond, and 38 miles S. W. from White Sulphur Springs. It is situated in a small valley among the Alleghany mountains, and is a place of fashionable resort, having been improved by the erection of expensive buildings. The temperature of the water is 54°.

RED SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Hardin co., Tennessee.

RED SWEET SPRINGS, a post-office of Alleghany co., Virginia.

RED WING, a post-village, capital of Goodhue co., Minnesota, on the right bank of the Mississippi, at the upper extremity of Lake Pepin, about 50 miles below St. Paul.

REDWOOD, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, about 24 miles N. N. E. from Watertown.

RED WOOD, a post-office of Granger co., Ten.

RED WOOD, a post-office of San Francisco co., California.

REE BLUFF, a post-office of De Soto parish, Louisiana.

REED, a township of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania. Population, 408.

REED, a township in the E. part of Seneca co., Ohio. Population, 1494.

REED, a township in Will co., Illinois. Population, 183.

REED CREEK, a post-office of Randolph co., North Carolina.

REED ISLAND, a post-office of Pulaski co., Va.

REEDSBURG, a post-village in Wayne co., Ohio, on the State road from Wooster to Mansfield, 10 miles from the former. Population, near 200.

REEDSBURG, a post-township in the N. part of Sauk co., Wisconsin.

REEDSBURG, a post-village of Sauk co., Wisconsin, 50 miles N. W. from Madison, has 4 stores, 4 mills, and about 60 dwellings.

REED'S CORNERS, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.

REED'S CREEK, a small post-village of Lawrence co., Arkansas, several miles S. W. from Smithfield.

REED'S FERRY, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

REED'S GROVE, a small post-village of Will co., Illinois.

REED'S LANDING, a post-office of Wabashaw co., Minnesota Territory.

REED'S MILLS, a post-office of Vinton co., O.

REED'S SETTLEMENT, a post-office of Panola co., Texas.

REEDSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Mifflin co., Pennsylvania, on the turnpike between Lewistown and Bellefonte, about 8 miles N. from the former.

REEDTOWN, a post-office of Seneca co., O.

REEDY BRANCH, a post-office of Moore co., North Carolina.

REEDY CREEK, a post-office of Marion district, South Carolina.

REEDY CREEK, a post-village of Jefferson co., Georgia, 50 miles in a direct line N. E. from Milledgeville.

REEDY CREEK, a small village of Sullivan co., Tennessee.

REEDY FORK of Cape Fear river, North

Carolina, flows through Guilford co., and unites with the main stream in Alamance co.

REEDY ISLAND, at the head of Delaware bay. At its extreme southern point is a fixed light, elevated 55 feet above the sea.

REEDY ISLAND RIVER, in the S. S. W. part of Virginia, rises in the Blue Ridge, flows north-westward through Carroll county, and enters the New river. Length, about 70 miles; greatest width, 125 yards. It furnishes immense water-power.

REEDY RIPPLE, a post-office of Wirt co., Va.

REEDY RIVER, a small stream of South Carolina, rising a few miles from Greenville, near the N. W. border of the state, flows nearly S. by E., and enters the Saluda on the line between Laurens and Abbeville districts.

REEDYVILLE, a post-office of Wirt co., Va.

REEDYVILLE, a post-village of Cameron co., Texas, on the Rio Grande, above Brownsville, contains (in 1853) about 400 inhabitants.

REEL FOOT, a post-office of Obion co., Tenn.

REELSVILLE, a post-office of Putnam co., Ind.

REEM'S CREEK, a post-office of Buncombe co., North Carolina.

REES' CORNER, a post-office of Kent co., Md.

REESE'S MILL, a post-office of Boone co., Ind.

REES' STATION, a post-office of Cambria co., Pennsylvania.

REEVE, a township in Daviess co., Indiana. Population, 1000.

REFORM, a post-office of Pickens co., Ala.

REFUGIO, a county in the S. S. E. part of Texas, bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, has an area of about 1485 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Guadalupe river, on the S. W. by the Arkansas, and intersected by the San Antonio and Mission rivers. The county contains a large proportion of prairie. The soil produces Indian corn, which crop in 1850 was 6290 bushels. It contained 1 church, 18 pupils attending public schools. The name is derived from a Mexican missionary establishment. Capital, Refugio. Population, 288; of whom 269 were free, and 19, slaves.

REFUGIO, a small post-village, capital of Refugio co., Texas, on Mission river, about 40 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, contains but few houses.

REGNIER'S MILLS, a post-office of Washington co., Ohio.

REHOBOTH, a post-township in Bristol co., Massachusetts, intersected by the Warren river, 41 miles S. by W. from Boston. Population, 2104.

REHOBOTH, or REHOBOTH VILLAGE, a post-village in the above township, 44 miles S. by W. from Boston.

REHOBOTH hundred, Del. See LEWES.

REHOBOTH, a post-village in Lunenburg co., Virginia, 85 miles S. W. from Richmond.

REHOBOTH, a post-village in Edgefield district, South Carolina, 80 miles W. from Columbia.

REHOBOTH, a post-village of Wilkes co., Georgia, 75 miles N. E. from Milledgeville.

REHOBOTH, a post-office of Wilcox co., Ala.
 REHOBOTH, a post-village of Perry co., O.
 REHOBOTH BAY, in the S. E. part of Delaware, extends from the Atlantic into Sussex county.

REHOBOTHVILLE, a small village of Morgan co., Georgia, 57 miles N. by W. from Milledgeville.

REHRERSBURG, a small village of Berks co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles N. W. from Reading.

REID, a township in the E. part of Seneca co., Ohio. Population, 1494.

REIDSBURG, a post-village of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, on Piney creek, 4 or 5 miles S. from Clarion.

REIDSVILLE, a post-office of Albany co., N. Y.

REIDSVILLE, a post-village in Rockingham co., North Carolina.

REIDSVILLE, a small post-village, capital of Tatnall co., Georgia, is situated on a sandy hill, 65 miles W. from Savannah.

REIGLE'S MILLS, N. J. See RIEGLESVILLE.

REIGLESVILLE, a village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, 8 miles below Easton. It has a bridge over the river.

REILY, a post-office of Butler co., Ohio.

REINDEER, a post-office of Nodaway co., Missouri.

REINHOLDSVILLE, a post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, 41 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

REINSE creek, of Tennessee, rises in Wayne county, and flows through Hardin county into the Tennessee river.

REISTERSTOWN, a post-village of Baltimore co., Maryland, 17 miles N. W. from Baltimore.

RELFE, a post-office of Puzlaski co., Mo.

REL'S BLUFF, a post-office of Drew co., Ark.

REMINGTON, a post-office of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania.

REMSEN, a post-village in Remsen township, Oneida co., New York, 18 miles N. by E. from Utica. It contains several churches and mills. Pop. of the township, 2407.

RENAULT, a small village of Monroe co., Illinois, 128 miles S. by W. from Springfield.

RENICK MILLS, a post-office of Lafayette co., Mississippi.

RENROCK, a post-office of Morgan co., Ohio.

RENSELAE, a county in the E. part of New York, has an area of about 630 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Hudson, and is drained by the Hoosick and Kinderhook rivers, with several smaller streams, which turn numerous grist and saw mills. The surface is generally hilly and broken, and in the E. part mountainous, often thickly covered with pine and other timber. In its numerous valleys, which are sometimes very extensive, the soil is generally of excellent quality. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 469,877 bushels of corn; 762,734 of oats; 602,595 of potatoes, (the greatest quantity raised in any county in the state;)

84,642 tons of hay, and 1,336,281 pounds of butter. There were 30 flour and grist mills, 5 breweries, 6 paper mills, 13 cotton and 3 woollen factories, 2 nail factories, 8 iron foundries, 1 carpet factory, 6 stove and furnace foundries, and 12 brush manufactories. It contained 63 churches and 8 newspaper offices; 13,166 pupils attending public schools, and 2529 attending academies or other schools. Iron ore, roof slate, and Epsom salts are found, but they are not very abundant. Public Works: Hudson River railroad, Albany Northern, Troy and Boston, Troy and Greenbush, and Western railroads. Organized in 1791, and named in honor of the Van Rensselaer family. Capital, Troy. Population, 73,363.

RENSELAE, a village of Sand Lake township, Rensselaer co., New York, 12 miles E. by S. from Albany. It has 3 churches.

RENSELAE, a post-village, capital of Jasper co., Indiana, at the rapids of Iroquois river, 100 miles N. N. W. from Indianapolis. It is situated in the Sevenmile Prairie. The river affords good water-power.

RENSELAE FALLS, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

RENSELAEVILLE, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Albany co., New York. Population, 3629.

RENSELAEVILLE, a post-village in the above township, on Fox's creek, 24 miles W. S. W. from Albany. It has churches of 4 or 5 denominations, and several factories and mills.

REPUBLIC, a post-office of Surry co., N. C.

REPUBLIC, a post-office of Walker co., Ala.

REPUBLIC, a thriving post-village of Scipio township, Seneca co., Ohio, on the Mad River and Lake Erie railroad, 29 miles S. W. from Sandusky. It has an academy, a machine shop, and is an important depôt for produce. Population in 1853, about 1200.

REPUBLICAN, a post-office of Columbia co., Georgia.

REPUBLICAN, a post-office of Darke co., O.

REPUBLICAN, a township in Jefferson co., Indiana. Population, 1405.

REPUBLICAN, a post-office of Coles co., Ill.

REPUBLICAN GROVE, a post-office of Halifax co., Virginia.

REPUBLICAN MILLS, a post-office of Fairfax co., Virginia.

RESACA, a small village of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, on Bushkill creek, 132 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

RESACA, a post-office of Murray co., Geo.

RESERVE, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the Ohio river, contains Alleghany city.

RESERVE, a post-office of St. Joseph co., Michigan.

RESERVE, a post-office of Miami co., Ind.

RETINA, a post-office of Hopkins co., Tex.

RETREAT, a post-office of Franklin co., Va.

RETREAT, a post-office of Grimes co., Tex.

REVILLE, a post-office of Scott co., Ark.

REXFORD FLATS, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

REYNALL'S BASIN, a post-office of Niagara co., New York.

REYNOLDS, a new county in the S. E. part of Missouri, has an area of 660 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of Big Black river. The surface is uneven, and partly covered with forests of pine. Indian corn, wheat, oats, cattle, and butter and the staples. In 1850 this county produced 75,925 bushels of corn; 2882 of wheat; 7551 of oats, and 10,900 pounds of butter. It contained 2 churches, and 465 pupils attending public schools. Named in honor of Thomas Reynolds, a former governor of Missouri. Capital, Lesterville. Population, 1849; of whom 1824 were free, and 25, slaves.

REYNOLDS, a post-office of Taylor co., Ga.

REYNOLDSBURG, a village of Humphreys county, Tennessee, on the E. bank of the Tennessee river, 75 miles W. from Nashville. It was formerly the county seat.

REYNOLDSBURG, a thriving post-village of Franklin county, Ohio, on the National road, 10 miles E. from Columbus. The Central Ohio railroad passes through or very near it. Population in 1853, about 600.

REYNOLDSVILLE, a village in Norfolk township, near Racket river, St. Lawrence, N. Y.

REYNOLDSVILLE, a post-village of Tompkins co., New York, about 16 miles W. by N. from Ithaca.

REYNOLDSVILLE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania.

REYNOLDSVILLE, a post-office of Harrison co., Virginia.

REYNOLDSVILLE, a post-office of Houston co., Georgia.

REYNOLDSVILLE, a small village of Pike co., Ohio, 8 miles E. from Piketon.

REYNOSA, a post-office of Laurens dis., S. C.

RHEA, a county in the S. E. central part of Tennessee: area estimated at 500 square miles. The Tennessee river, navigable by steamboats, forms the S. E. boundary. The county is traversed by a ridge of the Cumberland mountains. Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 231,124 bushels of corn; 41,777 of oats, and 34,537 pounds of butter. It contained 3 churches, 40 pupils attending public schools, and 90 attending academies or other schools. Extensive beds of stone coal are found. Capital, Washington. Population, 4415; of whom 3979 were free, and 436, slaves.

RHEATOWN, a post-village in Green county, Tennessee, 240 miles E. from Nashville.

RHETT LAKE is situated in the N. part of California, in about 41° 50' N. lat., and 121° 30' W. lon. It is perhaps 12 miles long by 8 wide. Its outlet unites with the Klamath river.

RHINE, a township in the N. W. part of Sheboygan co., Wisconsin.

RHINEBECK, a post-village in Rhinebeck township, Dutchess county, New York, 55 miles S. from Albany, and 2 miles E. from Hudson river. It contains 3 or 4 churches, an academy, a newspaper office, several factories, and 1 bank. Pop. in 1853, estimated at 1300. Population of the township, 2816.

RHINEBECK LANDING, a village of Dutchess county, New York, on the E. bank of the Hudson river, 91 miles N. from New York.

RHOADS POINT, a post-office of Macoupin county, Illinois.

RHODE ISLAND, one of the original states of the American confederacy, and the smallest, is bounded on the N. and E. by Massachusetts, on the S. by the Atlantic, and W. by the State of Connecticut. It lies between 41° 18' and 42° N. lat., and between 71° 8' and 71° 52' W. lon., being about 47 miles in extreme length from north to south, and 37 in greatest breadth from east to west, including an area of 1306 miles, or 835,840 acres, 356,487 of which were improved in 1850. One-tenth of the state is occupied by Narraganset bay.

Population.—In 1790, there were 69,110 inhabitants; 69,122 in 1800; 77,031 in 1810; 83,059 in 1820; 97,199 in 1830; 108,830 in 1840; 147,544 in 1850; of whom 70,417 were white males; 73,583 white females; 1600 colored males; 1884 colored females. There were in the same year, 28,216 families, occupying 22,379 dwellings. Of the entire population, 102,641 were born in the state, 21,658 in other states, 4490 in England, 15,944 in Ireland, 1000 in Scotland and Wales, 230 in Germany, 80 in France, 343 in other countries, and 135 whose places of birth were unknown—nearly 15 per cent. of foreign birth. 64 were deaf and dumb, of whom 3 were colored; 64 blind, of whom 3 were colored; 252 insane, of whom 4 were colored, and 107 idiots, of whom 3 were colored. There occurred in the twelve months preceding June 1st, 1850, 2241 deaths, or about 15 in every one thousand persons; in the same time, 2560 paupers received aid, of whom 1445 were foreigners, at an expense of nearly $18 for each pauper.

Counties.—Rhode Island is divided into 5 counties, viz. Bristol, Kent, Newport, Providence, and Washington. Block island, in the Atlantic, and several small islands in Narraganset bay, are included in Newport county. Capitals, Providence and Newport alternately.

Cities and Towns.—Providence, with a population of 41,512, is the largest town in the state, besides which there are Newport, 9563; Bristol, 4616; Smithfield, Pawtucket, East Greenwich, Warren, Slatersville, and several smaller places, whose populations are so blended with the towns (townships) in which they are situated, as to make it difficult to separate them.

Face of the Country.—Rhode Island is generally hilly and rough, but has no elevations approaching to what is generally understood by mountains. Mount Hope, in the eastern part of the state, Woonsocket Hills in the N., and Hopkins' Hill, near the middle of the state, are the most considerable elevations, but even they are of no great height. Near the Atlantic, and on the borders of Narraganset bay, is considerable level land.

Minerals.—Anthracite coal, to some extent, has been found, but either because inferior in quality or quantity, has not been extensively mined. Iron too is found, and limestone, marble, and serpentine, but this state is not remarkable for mineral productions.

Rivers, Bays, and Islands.—There are no large rivers in Rhode Island; the principal streams are the Pawtucket and Pautuxent, the first entering the N. E. of the state from Massachusetts, and both emptying into Narraganset bay. The Pawcatuck and its branches, flowing into the Atlantic, drain the S. W. part of the state. Narraganset bay, a noble sheet of water crowded with picturesque islands, projects into the state for 30 miles in a northerly direction. Its width is about 12 miles, including the islands. It has several arms, mostly on the E. side, bearing different names, as Bristol bay, Providence bay, &c. It is navigable to Providence for large vessels, and the harbor of Newport is one of the deepest and best in the United States. Though the rivers of this state are small, their rapid descents furnish great water-power, which has built up several manufacturing towns, such as Pawtucket, Slatersville, &c., on their banks.

Islands.—Rhode Island has several islands, the principal of which has an area of about 37 square miles, and gives its name to the state. Block island, in the Atlantic, about 10 miles from the state, and Conanicut and Prudence islands, both in Narraganset bay, are the other most important islands.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—On the S. W. shore of the island of Rhode Island, stands Newport, the most fashionable bathing-place on the Atlantic coast, though the number of visitants is not so great as at Cape May. The island affords fine rides and fine views, and the bay excellent fishing. It is said 60 varieties of fin and shell fish are caught here. On Conanicut island are the ruins of a circular fort, occupying an eminence at the entrance of the bay.

Climate, Soil, and Productions.—The proximity of Rhode Island to the sea has the effect to temper the severity of winter, as well as to mitigate the heats of summer. Its climate is very similar to Massachusetts and Connecticut. The soil is moderately fertile, but rough and difficult of cultivation in many parts. The soil upon the islands is better than on the mainland. The island of Rhode Island is particularly noted for its cattle, sheep, butter, and cheese. The farmer in all parts of the state devotes his attention more to grazing and the dairy than to tillage.

According to the census of 1850, there were in the state 356,487 acres of improved land, divided into 5385 farms, and producing 539,201 bushels of Indian corn; 215,232 of oats; 651,029 of Irish potatoes; 5036 of grass seeds; 129,692 pounds of wool; 995,670 of butter; 316,508 of cheese, and 74,818 tons of hay; besides considerable quantities of rye, peas, beans, barley, beeswax and honey, and small quantities of wheat, buckwheat, wine, hops, and flax. Value of orchard fruits, $63,994; (Rhode Island is celebrated for its apples;) market products, $98,298; live stock, $1,532,637, and slaughtered animals, $667,486. There are no extensive forests in Rhode Island. The principal forest-trees are oak, chestnut, and walnut, with some pine and cedar—the latter rare.

Manufactures.—Rhode Island, from its abundant supply of water-power, has become extensively engaged in manufacturing, and the first cotton mill in the United States was erected within her limits. There were in 1850, 1144 manufacturing establishments in the state producing $500 a year and upwards. In proportion to her population, this state ranks first in the product of her cotton, and second in that of her woollen manufactures. According to the census of 1850, she had 158 cotton factories, employing $6,675,000 of capital, and 4959 male and 5916 female hands, consuming $3,484,579 worth of raw material, and producing 96,725,612 yards of stuffs, and 1,902,980 pounds of thread and yarn, valued at $6,447,120; 45 woollen factories, employing $1,013,000 of capital, and 987 male and 771 female hands, consuming $1,463,900 worth of raw material, and producing 8,612,400 yards of cloth, and 46,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $2,381,825; 21 forges, furnaces, &c., employing $636,000 of capital, and 1020 male hands, consuming $370,017 worth of raw material, and producing 11,208 tons of castings and wrought iron, &c., valued at $951,105; $17,000 invested in the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors, consuming 12,500 bushels of barley, and 6 tons of hops, employing 6 hands, and producing 3900 barrels of ale, &c.; and 10 tanneries, employing $42,900 capital, consuming raw material worth $40,615, and producing manufactured leather valued at $75,040. Homemade manufactures valued at $26,495 were also produced.

Commerce.—Rhode Island is actively engaged in the coasting trade, and has besides some foreign commerce. Her tonnage in 1852 was 41,049 $\frac{3}{4}$; foreign imports, \$201,680; exports, \$179,175; tonnage entered, 20,350; cleared, 16,929; and number of vessels built, 14, with a tonnage of 3204 $\frac{3}{4}$. Of the tonnage, 7470 $\frac{2}{3}$ was engaged in the whale, 198 $\frac{2}{3}$ in the cod, and 361 $\frac{1}{2}$ in the mackerel fishery. Her exports are principally manufactured cottons and woollens, some butter, cheese, and apples.

Internal Improvements.—In January, 1853, there were in Rhode Island 56 miles of railway completed, and 32 in course of construction. Providence is connected with Boston and Stonington by direct lines of railway, and also with Worcester, in Massachusetts. The Blackstone canal is now, we believe, the track of the Worcester and Providence railroad. A road is projected and nearly finished which will unite Providence with Hartford, and from thence directly with New York, Fishkill, and various other places.

Education.—Great attention has been paid to education in this state. Brown University, at Providence, is a flourishing institution, and has made some important changes in the system of instruction and mode of conferring degrees, with the intent of allowing young men to select their studies with reference to future plans or tastes.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX. The school fund of the state, invested in bank stock, amounts to $56,314. Annually, $35,000 is paid from the state treasury for public instruction. In 1852 the average attendance of scholars was 19,719, and number registered, 26,712. Total amount expended for schools, $109,767, of which $55,488 was raised by towns. Male teachers, 256; female teachers, 313.

Religious Denominations.—Of 221 churches in Rhode Island in 1850, the Baptists owned 100; Christians, 7; Congregationalists, 21; Episcopalians, 26; Friends, 18; Methodists, 23; Roman Catholics, 7; Union Church, 4; Unitarians, 4; and Universalists, 4. The rest were divided among the Free Church, Jews, Mariners, Second Adventists, and Swedenborgian sects—giving 1 church to 667 inhabitants. Value of church property, $1,252,900.—See Table of Religions, APPENDIX.

Public Institutions.—The state prison at Providence had 47 inmates, all males, in September, 1851. The expenses in 1851 were $9851.27, and the receipts only $2761.41. The convicts are mostly employed in shoemaking. There are contributed annually by the legislature $2500 for the benefit of the blind, deaf, dumb, and idiotic, and $1000 for the benefit of the Butler Hospital at Providence. But the most important of these institutions (inasmuch as prevention and reform are better than punishment) is the Providence Reform School for juvenile offenders, opened November, 1850. There were committed to this institution 59 boys and 3 girls in the year 1851, of whom 45 remained in November of that year. The inmates devote 7½ hours to labor, and 5 to school exercises, of each 24 hours.

Government, Finances, &c.—The executive power is lodged in a governor and lieutenant-governor, elected annually by the people, and receiving, the former $400, and the latter $200 per annum. The legislative power consists of a senate of 31, and a house of representatives of 72 members, both elected annually by the people. The secretary of state, treasurer, and attorney-general are all elected annually by popular vote. The governor and lieutenant-governor are ex officio members of the senate. The judiciary consists of a supreme court, composed of 1 chief and 3 associate judges, one of whom holds a court of common pleas in each county. The judges hold office until removed by a joint resolution of both houses. The chief justice receives $900 per annum, and the associates $550 each. Rhode Island has no state debt, except the portion of her loan of the United States surplus fund, which amounts to $382,335.23. Ordinary expenses, $50,000, exclusive of debt and schools. School fund, $56,314.37. Assessed value of property in 1850, $77,758,974. Number of banks in September, 1852, in the entire state, 71, with an aggregate capital of $14,037,441, a circulation of $3,322,314, and $414,970 in coin.

History.—Rhode Island was first settled at Providence, in 1636, by the enlightened Roger Williams, who had been banished from the Massachusetts colony, for alleged religious and political heresies. To Lord Baltimore, Penn., and Williams is generally accorded the honor of being the first to establish governments admitting the principles of religious toleration. In 1638 William Coddington and 17 others being persecuted in Massachusetts, on account of their religious tenets, followed Roger Williams and settled at Newport. A third settlement was formed at Warwick in 1642, by a party under Samuel Gorton. Each of these companies purchased their lands of the Narragansets, and continued an independent association until united by a civil charter in 1643, under the title of "Providence Plantations." In 1663, Charles II. granted a new charter, which, with a few changes, formed the basis of the government until the adoption of the present constitution in May, 1843. In the early part of 1842, the "suffrage party," as it was termed, proceeding illegally, framed a new constitution, and adopted it as the basis of legislation. Having elected a senate, house of representatives, and Thomas W. Dorr a governor, they attempted to maintain their authority by force of arms, but were dispersed by the military of the state. A convention, legally called, assembled in the September following, and after consultation agreed upon the present constitution, which, being submitted to the people, was adopted almost unanimously. Rhode Island early took an active part in the cause of American independence. The Stamp Act was resisted by her with great firmness, and when the importation of military stores was prohibited by the English government, the inhabitants seized the cannon in the public batteries, and the general assembly passed resolutions for arming the people. In December, 1776, Rhode Island was invaded by the British, under General Clinton, who occupied it till near the close of the war. General Sullivan, aided by the French war ships, made several unsuccessful attempts to dislodge the enemy, and in the autumn of 1778 laid siege to Newport, but was finally obliged to abandon the project.

Towards the close of 1779 the British troops were withdrawn from Rhode Island, and in 1780 Rochambeau arrived with a force of 6000 French auxiliaries. The Providence Plantations joined with the other colonies in holding the old Continental Congress, and was among the first to direct her delegates to sign the Articles of Confederation, to which she adhered with great pertinacity. But at length, after all her associates had adopted the Constitution of the United States, she yielded, and was admitted as the thirteenth state, May 29th, 1790.

RHODE RIVER, a post-office of Anne Arundel co., Maryland.

RIBLER's, a post-office of Richland co., O.

RICE, a county in the S. E. part of Minnesota, bordering on Iowa, contains about 3120 square miles. It is drained by the sources of Root, Red Cedar, and Upper Iowa rivers. The surface is undulating or level; the soil in some parts is fertile. This county was formed in 1852 or '53, by a division of Wabashaw county. County seat not yet located.

RICE, a post-office of Cattaraugus co., N. Y.

RICE, a township in Sandusky co., Ohio. Population, 483.

RICEBOROUGH, a post-village of Liberty county, Georgia, on North Newport river, 32 miles S. S. W. from Savannah. It is the principal shipping port of the county, and contains 3 or 4 stores.

RICE CITY, a post-village in Kent co., Rhode Island, 19 miles W. by S. from Providence.

RICE CREEK, of South Carolina, flows eastward into the Wateree, a little above Camden.

RICE CREEK, of Michigan, flows into the Kalamazoo at Marshall, in Calhoun county.

RICE CREEK, a post-office of Calhoun co., Michigan.

RICE DEPÔT, a post-office of Prince Edward co., Virginia.

RICE'S LANDING, a post-office of Greene co., Pennsylvania.

RICE'S STORE, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Virginia.

RICEVILLE, a post-office of Monmouth co., New Jersey.

RICEVILLE, a post-village of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, on Oil creek, 20 miles N. E. from Meadville. It is well supplied with water-power. Population, near 150.

RICEVILLE, a thriving post-village of Pittsylvania county, Virginia, on Banister river, about 150 miles S. W. from Richmond. It has 2 stores.

RICEVILLE, a small village of Hancock county, Mississippi.

RICHARDSON, a post-office of Vermilion co. Illinois.

RICHARDSON, a post-office of Montgomery co., Tennessee.

RICHARDSON'S CREEK, of North Carolina, flows through Anson county into Rocky river, from the S. W.

RICHARDSON'S CREEK, a post-office of Union co., North Carolina, 167 miles from Raleigh.

RICHARDSONVILLE, a post-village of Edgefield district, South Carolina, 55 miles W. from Columbia.

RICHARDSONVILLE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania.

RICHARDSVILLE, a post-village of Culpepper co., Virginia, 95 miles N. N. W. from Richmond.

RICHBOROUGH, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, 114 miles E. from Harrisburg.

RICHBURG, a post-office of Alleghany co., New York.

RICH CREEK, a post-office of Logan co., Virginia.

RICHELIEU, or St. JOHN'S river, the outlet of Lake Champlain, commences at the N. E. extremity of New York, and flowing N. falls into the St. Lawrence. Length, about 100 miles.

RICHELIEU, a post-office of Logan co., Ky.

RICHFIELD, a post-township forming the N. extremity of Otsego co., New York. Population, 1502.

RICHFIELD, a post-office of Juniata co., Pa.

RICHFIELD, a township in the S. E. part of Henry co., Ohio. Population, 136.

RICHFIELD, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Lucas co., Ohio. Pop., 399.

RICHFIELD, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Summit co., Ohio. Population, 1268.

RICHFIELD, a small post-village of Summit co., Ohio, 134 miles N. E. from Columbus.

RICHFIELD, a post-township in Genesee co., Michigan. Population, 482.

RICHFIELD, a township in the W. part of Lapeer co., Mich., intersected by Flint river.

RICHFIELD, a post-township in Adams co., Illinois. Population, 820.

RICHFIELD, a small village of Clay co., Mo.

RICHFIELD, a township of Washington co., Wisconsin, 23 miles N. W. from Milwaukee. Population, 869.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, a post-village of Otsego co., New York, about 75 miles W. from Albany. It has a sulphur spring, and contains 2 churches.

RICHFORD, a post-township in Franklin co., Vermont, on the E. side of Missisque river, 50 miles N. by W. from Montpelier. Pop., 1074.

RICHFORD, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Tioga co., New York. Population, 1208.

RICHFORD, a post-village in the above township, on East Owego creek, about 140 miles W. by S. from Albany. Pop., about 300.

RICH FORK, a post-office of Davidson co., N. C.

RICH HILL, a township forming the N. W.

extremity of Greene co., Pennsylvania. Population, 2135.

RICH HILL, a post-office of Maury co., Tenn.

RICH HILL, a post-township in the S. E. part of Muskingum co., Ohio. Population, 1495.

RICHLAND, a district in the central part of South Carolina, has an area of 465 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Wateree, and on the S. W. by Broad and Congaree rivers. The first and last of these unite at the S. E. extremity of the district. The surface is moderately hilly, and partly covered with pine forests. The soil is mostly excellent. Cotton, Indian corn, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this district produced 11,365 bales of cotton; 433,998 bushels of corn; 34,267 of oats, and 94,364 of sweet potatoes. There were 18 grist, and 14 saw and planing mills, 3 cotton-gin factories, and 1 iron foundry. It contained 22 churches, 8 newspaper offices; 212 pupils attending public schools, and 691 attending academies and other schools. The Congaree and Wateree rivers are navigable by steamboats on the borders of the district. Three railway lines terminate at Columbia, in this district, namely, the Columbia Branch, the Greenville and Columbia, and the Charlotte and South Carolina railroad. Capital, Columbia. Population, 20,343, of whom 7265 were free, and 12,978 slaves.

RICHLAND, a county in the N. or N. central part of Ohio, contains about 450 square miles. It is drained by the Black and Clear forks of the Walhonding river, which rise within its limits. The surface is partly level and partly undulating; the soil is generally excellent and well timbered. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, butter, wool, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 347,487 bushels of wheat; 495,253 of corn; 301,858 of oats; 2779 tons of hay; 587,705 pounds of butter, and 194,573 of wool. It contained 71 churches, 5 newspaper offices, and 15,397 pupils attending public schools. The county is intersected by 3 railroads, viz. the Cleveland and Cincinnati, the Sandusky and Newark, and the Pennsylvania and Ohio. Organized in 1813. Capital, Mansfield. Population, 30,879.

RICHLAND, a county in the E. S. E. part of Illinois, has an area of about 310 square miles. The Little Wabash river touches the S. W. extremity, and Fox creek flows through the county from N. to S.; it is also drained by Bonpas creek. The surface is undulating; the soil is productive. The county contains a large proportion of prairie. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, and pork are the staples. In 1850 it produced 113,205 bushels of corn; 5836 of wheat, and 25,848 of oats. It contained 4 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 360 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Olney. Population, 4012.

RICHLAND, a post-township of Oswego co.,

New York, on Lake Ontario. It contains Pulaski, the county seat. Population, 4079.

RICHLAND, a post-village in the above township, on the Rome and Watertown railroad, 42 miles N. W. from Rome.

RICHLAND, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, about 14 miles E. S. E. from Allentown. Population, 1734.

RICHLAND, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Cambria co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1278.

RICHLAND, a township of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles W. from Clarion. Population, 1360.

RICHLAND, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Venango co., Pa. Pop., 1008.

RICHLAND, a small village of Venango co., Pa.

RICHLAND, a post-office of Tazewell co., Va.

RICHLAND, a post-village of Stewart co., Ga., 150 miles S. W. from Milledgeville.

RICHLAND, a post-village of Holmes co., Miss.

RICHLAND, a post-township in Jefferson co., Arkansas. Population, 1134.

RICHLAND, a township in Madison co., Arkansas. Population, 736.

RICHLAND, a township in Newton co., Arkansas. Population, 96.

RICHLAND, a township in Phillips co., Arkansas. Population, 851.

RICHLAND, a township in Searcy co., Arkansas. Population, 128.

RICHLAND, a township of Washington co., Arkansas. Population, 489.

RICHLAND, a post-village in Giles co., Tenn.

RICHLAND, a village in Henderson co., Kentucky, near Green river, 165 miles W. by S. from Frankfort.

RICHLAND, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Allen co., Ohio. Pop., 989.

RICHLAND, a township in the E. central part of Belmont co., Ohio. Population, 3351.

RICHLAND, a township in the N. E. part of Clinton co., Ohio. Population, 1975.

RICHLAND, a township in the N. E. part of Darke co., Ohio. Population, 798.

RICHLAND, a township in Defiance co., Ohio. Population, 702.

RICHLAND, a township in the N. E. part of Fairfield co., Ohio. Population, 1776.

RICHLAND, a township in the S. E. part of Guernsey co., Ohio. Population, 1438.

RICHLAND, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Holmes co., Ohio. Pop., 1439.

RICHLAND, a township in the N. W. part of Logan co., Ohio. Population, 1169.

RICHLAND, a flourishing village in the above township, on the railroad from Cincinnati to Sandusky, 126 miles from the former. Population in 1853, 200.

RICHLAND, a post-office of Richland co., O.

RICHLAND, a township in the S. W. part of Vinton co., Ohio. Population, 1193.

RICHLAND, a township in the W. part of Wyandott co., Ohio. Population, 615.

RICHLAND, a post-township in the N. E. part of Kalamazoo co., Mich. Pop., 795.

RICHLAND, a township in Adams co., Indiana. Population, 190.

RICHLAND, a township in De Kalb co., Indiana. Population, 653.

RICHLAND, a township in Fountain co., Indiana. Population, 1725.

RICHLAND, a township in Fulton co., Indiana. Population, 597.

RICHLAND, a township in Grant co., Indiana. Population, 878.

RICHLAND, a township in Green co., Indiana. Population, 1483.

RICHLAND, a township in Jay co., Indiana. Population, 339.

RICHLAND, a township in Madison co., Indiana. Population, 805.

RICHLAND, a township in Miami co., Indiana. Population, 1176.

RICHLAND, a township in Monroe co., Indiana. Population, 966.

RICHLAND, a post-township in Rush co., Indiana. Population, 1214.

RICHLAND, a small post-village of Rush co., Ind., 9 or 10 miles S. S. E. from Rushville.

RICHLAND, a township in Steuben co., Indiana. Population, 393.

RICHLAND, a post-village in Sangamon co., Ill., 12 miles N. W. by W. from Springfield.

RICHLAND, a township in Gasconade co., Missouri. Population, 238.

RICHLAND, a small post-village of Greene co., Mo., about 10 miles N. by W. from Springfield.

RICHLAND, a thriving post-village of Keokuk co., Iowa, 50 miles S. S. W. from Iowa City. It is situated in a fertile farming district, which is improving rapidly, and it has several stores. Population, about 600.

RICHLAND, a post-village, capital of Richland co., Wisconsin, 128 miles W. N. W. from Milwaukee. It is situated on Pine creek, and on a prairie surrounded by beautiful shade-trees. It has abundant water-power, and several mills are being erected.

RICHLAND CENTRE, a post-office of De Kalb co., Indiana.

RICHLAND CITY, a post-village in Richland co., Wisconsin, at the mouth of Pine creek.

RICHLAND CREEK, of Navarro co., Texas, rising in the W. part of the county. It enters Pecan creek, near the eastern border.

RICHLAND CREEK, in the S. part of Tennessee, flows southward, and enters Elk river, in Giles county, at the village of Elkton.

RICHLAND CROSSINGS, a post-office of Navarro co., Texas.

RICHLAND GROVE, a post-village of Mercer co., Ill., 13 miles S. S. E. from Rock Island.

RICHLANDS, a post-office of Onslow co., N. C.

RICHLANDTOWN, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, 105 miles E. from Harrisburg.

RICHMOND, the most southern county of New York, has an area of about 60 square miles. It comprises the whole of Staten island, and is divided into four townships. It is bounded N. by Newark bay and the Kills, W. by Staten Island sound, S. by Raritan bay, and E. by the Hudson river, all of which afford great facilities for navigation and the fisheries. The surface is uneven and hilly; Richmond hill is the greatest elevation. The soil is generally good, and has a great advantage in being so near the New York market. Wheat, Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 15,388 bushels of wheat; 46,195 of corn; 28,871 of potatoes; 5642 tons of hay, and 34,792 pounds of butter. There were 2 flour mills, 1 silk-printing mill, 2 ship-yards, 1 manufactory of whitelead, 2 of cabinet ware, and 1 of animal carbon. It contained 24 churches, 1 newspaper office; 1407 pupils attending public schools, and 510 attending academies and other schools. Iron ore and some other minerals have been found. This county was named from Richmond, a town of England. Capital, Richmond. Population, 15,061.

RICHMOND, a county in the E. part of Virginia, has an area of 140 square miles, and a length of 30 miles. The Rappahannock river forms its entire boundary on the S. W. The surface is nearly level. The soil has lately been improved by the use of guano. Indian corn, wheat, potatoes, and cotton are cultivated. Firewood is one of the chief articles of export, and large numbers of the inhabitants find lucrative employment in the oyster business. In 1850 this county produced 185,800 bushels of corn; 42,404 of wheat; 7178 of sweet potatoes; 26,390 pounds of butter, and 6458 of wool. There were 2 coach manufactories, and 1 saw mill. It contained 9 churches, and 220 pupils attending public schools. Organized in 1692. Capital, Warsaw. Population, 6448; of whom 4171 were free, and 2277, slaves.

RICHMOND, a county in the S. part of North Carolina, bordering on South Carolina: area estimated at 900 square miles. Lumber river forms its boundary on the E., and the Yadkin on the W., and Little river flows through a part of the county. The surface is undulating. The line which divides the tertiary formation from the granitic and hilly region of the state, passes through the county. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 3810 bales of cotton; 225,017 bushels of corn, and 56,804 of sweet potatoes. It contained 1 cotton factory, 17 churches, 903 pupils attending public schools, and 25 attending an academy. It is traversed by a number of small streams which furnish fine motive-power. Formed in 1779. Capital, Rockingham. Population, 9818; of whom 5114 were free, and 4704, slaves.

RICHMOND, a county in the E. part of Georgia, bordering on the Savannah river, which separates it from South Carolina, contains about 340 square miles. It is drained by Brier, Butler's, McBean's, and Spirit creeks. The surface is uneven; the dividing line between the primary and tertiary formations passes through the county, near Augusta. Excepting in the vicinity of the river, the soil is generally poor. Cotton, Indian corn, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1087 bales of cotton; 297,780 bushels of corn; 27,458 of oats, and 51,045 of sweet potatoes. There were 2 woollen factories, 1 cotton mill, 2 foundries, 1 car factory, 3 saddle manufactories, 1 machine shop, 3 flour mills, and 19 saw mills. It contained 14 churches, 10 newspaper offices; 720 pupils attending public schools, and 415 attending academies or other schools. Granite, sienite, novaculite, and burrstone are found. The Savannah river affords extensive water-power at Augusta, and is navigable by steam-boats from that point to its mouth. The county is intersected by the Georgia railroad. This division of the state was formerly called Augusta district: the present name was given in 1777, in honor of the Duke of Richmond, a warm friend of American liberty. Capital, Augusta. Population, 16,246; of whom 8434 were free, and 7812, slaves.

RICHMOND, a post-village in Lincoln co., Maine, on the Kennebec and Portland railroad, 17 miles S. from Augusta. Population of the township, 2056.

RICHMOND, a post-township in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, 53 miles S. W. from Concord. Population, 1128.

RICHMOND, a post-village in Chittenden co., Vermont, on the Vermont Central railroad, and Onion river, 23 miles N. W. from Montpelier. Population of the township, 1453.

RICHMOND, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the Western railroad, and the Housatonic river, 159 miles W. from Boston. Population of the township, 907.

RICHMOND, a township in Washington co., Rhode Island, on the Stonington and Providence railroad, 28 miles S. S. W. from Providence. Population, 1784.

RICHMOND, a township of Ontario co., New York, 15 miles W. S. W. from Canandaigua. Population, 1852.

RICHMOND, a beautiful post-village, capital of Richmond co., New York, is situated on Staten island, about 160 miles S. by W. from Albany. Sloops from the sound come within three-quarters of a mile.

RICHMOND, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, about 13 miles N. E. from Reading. Population, 2056.

RICHMOND, a township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. E. from Meadville. Population, 1139.

RICHMOND, a post-village of Northampton co., Pennsylvania, 2 miles W. from the Delaware river, and 12 miles N. from Easton. It contains several stores.

RICHMOND, a township of Tioga co., Pennsylvania, about 43 miles N. by W. from Williamsport. Population, 1231.

RICHMOND, a small village of Tioga co., Pa.

RICHMOND, or PORT RICHMOND, a suburb of Philadelphia, on the Delaware river, 2 miles above the city proper. It is a dépôt for the coal brought down the Reading railroad. In 1852 the number of vessels loaded with coal at this port amounted to 9047, viz. 8 ships, 94 barks, 571 brigs, 5482 schooners, 334 sloops, and 2759 barges. Population, in 1850, 5750.

RICHMOND, a city, port of entry, capital of Virginia, and seat of justice of Henrico county, is situated on the left or N. E. bank of James river, at the lower falls, and at the head of tide-water, about 100 miles in a straight line S. by W. from Washington. The distance by railroad is 130 miles from Washington; 168 from Baltimore, and 22 N. from Petersburg. Lat. of the capitol, 37° 32' 17" N., lon. 77° 27' 28" W. It is the largest town in Virginia, and one of the most beautiful in the Union. The situation of the city and the scenery of the environs are much admired, combining, in a high degree, the elements of grandeur, beauty, and variety. The river, winding among verdant hills which rise with graceful swells and undulations, is interrupted by numerous islands and granite rocks, among which it tumbles and foams for a distance of several miles. The city is built on several hills, the most considerable of which are Shockoe and Richmond hills, separated from each other by Shockoe creek. It is laid out with general regularity in rectangular blocks. About 12 parallel streets, nearly 3 miles in length, extend N. W. and S. E. and were originally distinguished by the letters of the alphabet, A street being next the river: other names, however, are now generally used. The principal thoroughfare of business and fashion is Main, or E street. Those which intersect it are named from the ordinal numbers, First, Second, Third, &c. The capitol and other public buildings are situated on Shockoe hill; the top of which is an elevated plain in the western part of the city. This is the fashionable quarter, and is considered the most desirable for private residences. The capitol, from its size and elevated position, is the most conspicuous object in Richmond. It stands in the centre of a public square, of about 8 acres, is adorned with a portico of Ionic columns, and contains a marble statue of Washington, by Houdon, taken from life, and considered a perfect likeness. The City Hall is an elegant and costly building in the Doric style, at an angle of Capitol square. A short distance from the capitol is the governor's residence. The penitentiary, which stands near the river in the western suburbs of the city, has a front 300 feet in length, and is 110 feet deep. The number of prisoners in September, 1853, was 270. The city contains also a court house, a jail, an armory 320 feet long by 280 wide, 2 market houses, a theatre, an orphan asylum, and a Masonic hall.

There are 3 banks, with an aggregate capital of $2,114,000, and several insurance offices. The public press consists of 16 or 17 papers and periodicals, 6 or 7 of which are issued daily. There are about 30 churches, belonging to the Baptists, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Friends, Lutherans, Campbellites, Universalists, and Catholics; also 2 Hebrew synagogues. The Monumental church (Episcopal) occupies the site of the theatre which was burned in 1811, on which occasion the governor of Virginia and more than 60 others perished. Among the institutions of this city may be mentioned the Virginia Historical and Philosophical Society, Richmond College, founded by the Baptists in 1832; St. Vincent's College, under the direction of the Catholics, and the Medical Department of Hampden and Sydney College, established here in 1838; the edifice of the latter is a fine specimen of the Egyptian style of architecture. The water of the river is raised by forcing pumps into 3 reservoirs, containing 1,000,000 gallons each, and thence distributed over the city. Three bridges across the river connect the city with Manchester and Spring Hill.

For some years past Richmond has rapidly increased in population and business. The James River and Kanawha canal, of which this is the eastern terminus, is completed to Buchanan, about 200 miles, and is progressing to Covington, on Jackson's river. It was commenced in 1834, and had cost, in 1852, $10,714,306. The Richmond and Petersburg railroad connects here with the Richmond and Fredericksburg railroad, forming part of the great southern mail route. The Central railroad, after leaving Richmond, makes an extensive detour to the N., and then turning westward, penetrates the central part of the state. It is completed to Staunton, about 125 miles, and is to be extended to the Ohio river, at Guyandotte; and the Richmond and Danville railroad, of which 73 miles were completed in 1853, extends south-westward, connecting with the railroad systems of Tennessee and Georgia. The river is navigable to this port for vessels drawing 10 feet of water, and those drawing 15 feet come within 3 miles of the town. Semi-weekly lines of ocean steamers communicate with New York and Philadelphia, and steamboats ply daily to Baltimore and Norfolk.

The following table exhibits the amount of tonnage, estimated value thereof, and freight paid on the same, imported into Richmond, by canal and railroad, during the year 1852:

	Tons.	Estimated value.	Freight and toll.
James River canal.....	153,377	$7,145,857	$220,947
Richmond and Fredericksburg railroad.....	4,807	285,000	19,252
Richmond and Petersburg railroad.....	27,932	1,262,248	24,752
Richmond and Danville railroad.....	53,421	967,326	37,919
Virginia Central railroad.....	17,450	1,000,000	55,989
	256,987	$10,660,422	$358,861

The chief articles of export are tobacco, wheat, and flour. The quantity of tobacco inspected here in 1851 was 15,678 hogsheads, and in 1852 it amounted to 24,119 hogsheads. The exports of that year were 13,771 hogsheads, viz. to Great Britain, 5416 hogsheads; France, 3558; Italy, 1910; Bremen, 1432; Holland, 1025; Belgium, 430. The shipping of the district, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 3077 $\frac{3}{5}$ tons registered, and 6099 $\frac{3}{5}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter all were employed in the coast trade, and 1119 $\frac{2}{5}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 35, (tons, 7120,) of which 14 (tons, 2606) were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 71, (tons, 22,803,) of which 36 (tons, 11,872) were by American vessels. During the year 2 schooners, with an aggregate burthen of 5147 $\frac{2}{5}$ tons were admeasured.

Richmond possesses an immense water-power derived from the falls of James river, which, from the commencement of the rapids, a few miles above the city, descends about 100 feet to the tide level. Few places in the state, or in the whole country, possess greater natural advantages for productive industry, which has recently attracted much attention. The principal articles produced here are flour, tobacco, cotton and woollen goods, paper, machinery, and iron ware. The brand of the City Flour Mills has acquired, perhaps, more celebrity than any other in the country. The Gallego and Haxall Mills are 5 or 6 stories high, 94 feet long, and about 80 feet wide. Richmond contains about 40 tobacco factories, some of which are very extensive, and several rolling mills and cotton factories. This city was founded by an act of Assembly in May, 1742, and became the capital of the state in 1779-80, at which period it was an insignificant place, having scarcely any thing to interest except the grandeur of its scenery. In 1787 it contained about 300 houses. Population in 1800, 5737; in 1810, 9785; in 1820, 12,067; in 1830, 16,060; in 1840, 20,153; in 1850, 27,570, of which 17,643 were free, and 9927, slaves.

RICHMOND, a post-village of Dallas co., Alabama, about 100 miles S. by E. from Tuscaloosa.

RICHMOND, a post-office of Itawamba co., Mississippi.

RICHMOND, a post-village, capital of Madison parish, Louisiana, on Roundaway bayou, 300 miles by water N. from Baton Rouge, has a court house and a newspaper office.

RICHMOND, a post-village, capital of Fort Bend co., Texas, on the right bank of the Brazos river, 170 miles S. E. from Austin City. The river is navigable up to this point in high water.

RICHMOND, a township in Desha co., Arkansas. Population, 216.

RICHMOND, a township in Prairie co., Arkansas. Population, 165.

RICHMOND, a post-village of Bedford co., Tennessee, 70 miles S. S. E. from Nashville.

RICHMOND, a handsome post-village, capital of Madison county, Kentucky, 50 miles S. S. E. from Frankfort. It is surrounded by a beautiful and fertile country, and contains a court house, 4 churches, an academy, a public library, 1 newspaper office, and a branch bank. Settled in 1785. Population in 1853, estimated at 1500.

RICHMOND, a township in the E. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Population, 706.

RICHMOND, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Huron co., Ohio. Pop., 609.

RICHMOND, a post-village of Salem township, Jefferson co., Ohio, 11 miles N. W. from Steubenville. It contains 3 churches, 1 classical academy, and a newspaper office.

RICHMOND, a small village of Lake county, Ohio, on Grand river, 1 mile from Lake Erie. A large village sprang up here suddenly, about 1836, in opposition to the laws of trade, and soon rapidly declined. Many of the buildings have since been taken down or removed to Painesville, 2 miles above.

RICHMOND, a post-township forming the N. E. part of Macomb co., Michigan. Population, 1000.

RICHMOND, a village of Decatur co., Indiana, 55 miles S. E. from Indianapolis.

RICHMOND, a flourishing post-village of Wayne township, Wayne county, Indiana, is pleasantly situated on the East fork of White-water river, where it is crossed by the National road and Central railroad, 68 miles E. from Indianapolis, and 64 miles N. N. W. from Cincinnati. It is the centre of an active trade, and remarkable for its flourishing manufactures of cotton, wool, paper, flour, and iron, for which the river affords abundant motive-power. It is believed that no town in the state employs more labor in this branch of industry. The Central railroad extends to Indianapolis on one hand, and connects on the other with the railroads of Ohio. Here also commences the Richmond and Newcastle railroad, extending towards Chicago. Richmond contains 1 bank, 1 public library, 10 churches, 2 printing offices, 2 fire companies and engines, and 60 stores. The Indiana yearly meeting of the Society of Friends is held here. There are 2 large boarding schools in the vicinity. The township contained in 1851, 3 cotton factories, 4 woollen factories, 1 paper mill, 13 flouring mills, 3 oil mills, 11 saw mills, and 2 iron foundries. The manufacture of carriages, threshing machines, and farming implements is carried on here extensively. The surrounding country is the most populous and highly cultivated part of the state. Population in 1853, by a local census 3800.

RICHMOND, a small post-village of Brown co., Illinois, about 3 miles W. from Illinois river, and 70 miles W. by N. from Springfield.

RICHMOND, a small village of Coles co., Ill.

RICHMOND, a thriving post-village of McHenry co., Illinois, on the Nippersink creek, about 60 miles N. W. from Chicago. It contains several mills. Pop., about 400.

RICHMOND, a flourishing post-village, capital of Ray co., Missouri, 150 miles N. W. from Jefferson City, and 7 miles N. from Missouri river. It is surrounded by a very fertile region. Population, estimated at 1000.

RICHMOND, a small post-village of Washington co., Iowa.

RICHMOND, a township in the S. E. part of Richland co., Wisconsin, and N. of the Wisconsin railroad.

RICHMOND, a township in the W. central part of Walworth co., Wisconsin. Pop., 756.

RICHMOND, a small post-village in the above township, 49 miles W. S. W. from Milwaukee.

RICHMOND CENTRE, a post-office of Ashtabula co., Ohio.

RICHMOND CORNER, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

RICHMOND DALE, a post-village of Ross co., O., 13 miles S. E. from Chillicothe. Pop., 350.

RICHMOND FACTORY, a post-office of Richmond co., Ga., 10 miles S. from Augusta.

RICHMOND HILL, a post-office of Surry co., North Carolina.

RICHMOND MILLS, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.

RICHMOND VALLEY, a post-office of Richmond co., New York.

RICHMONDVILLE, a post-village in Richmondville township, Schoharie co., New York, about 48 miles W. from Albany. Population of the township, 1666.

RICH PATCH, a post-office of Alleghany co., Virginia.

RICH SQUARE, a post-office of Northampton co., North Carolina.

RICH VALLEY, a post-office of Wythe co., Va.

RICH VALLEY, a post-office of Bedford co., Tennessee.

RICH VIEW, a post-village of Washington co., Illinois, 8 miles N. E. from Nashville.

RICHVILLE, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, near the Potsdam and Watertown railroad, 18 miles S. W. from Canton.

RICHWOOD, a post-township in Izard co., Arkansas. Population, 332.

RICHWOOD, a township in Lawrence co., Arkansas. Population, 343.

RICHWOOD, a post-village of Union co., Ohio, 44 miles N. W. from Columbus. Population in 1853, about 250.

RICHWOOD, a township in the S. part of Richland co., Wis., N. of the Wisconsin river.

RICHWOODS, a post-office of Washington co., Maine.

RICHWOODS, a small post-village of Izard co., Arkansas, 120 miles N. from Little Rock.

RICHWOODS, a post-office of Delaware co., Indiana.

RICKOE'S BLUFF, a post-office of Gadsden co., Florida.

RICKREAL, a post-office of Polk co., Oregon.
 RIDGE, a post-office of Livingston co., N. Y.
 RIDGE, a post-office of St. Mary's co., Md.
 RIDGE, a post-office of Edgefield dist., S. C.
 RIDGE, a post-office of Coshocton co., Ohio.
 RIDGE, a township in the central part of Van Wert co., Ohio. Population, 400.
 RIDGE, a township in the N. W. part of Wyandott co., Ohio. Population, 501.
 RIDGEBURY, a post-village in Fairfield co., Connecticut, 35 miles W. by N. from New Haven.
 RIDGEBURY, a post-village of Orange co., N. Y., about 110 miles S. S. W. from Albany.
 RIDGEBURY, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles N. N. W. from Towanda. Population, 1616.
 RIDGE FARM, a post-village of Vermilion co., Illinois, 16 miles S. from Danville.
 RIDGEFIELD, a post-village of Fairfield co., Connecticut, about 35 miles W. of New Haven, contains several churches, an academy, and a number of manufactories. Population of the township, 2237.
 RIDGEFIELD, a township in the N. W. part of Huron co., Ohio, intersected by the Mansfield and Sandusky railroad, and the Cleveland, Norwalk, and Toledo railroad. Population, 1944.
 RIDGE GROVE, a post-office of Macon co., Ala.
 RIDGE HALL, a post-office of Baltimore co., Maryland.
 RIDGELAND, a post-office of Henry co., Ohio.
 RIDGELEY, a post-office of Macon co., Ala.
 RIDGELY, a post-village of Madison co., Illinois, 64 miles S. by W. from Springfield.
 RIDGE POST, a post-office of Davidson co., Tennessee.
 RIDGE PRAIRIE, a post-office of Saline co., Missouri.
 RIDGE SPRING, a post-village of Pitt co., North Carolina.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-village of Carroll co., Md., on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-village of Colleton district, South Carolina, on the South Carolina railroad, 31 miles N. W. from Charleston.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-village of Butler co., Alabama, 50 miles S. W. from Montgomery.
 RIDGEVILLE, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Henry co., Ohio. Pop., 148.
 RIDGEVILLE, a township in the N. E. part of Lorain co., Ohio. Population, 1212.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-village of Warren co., O., about 38 miles N. N. E. from Cincinnati.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-office of Randolph co., Indiana.
 RIDGEVILLE, a post-township in Cook co., Illinois. Population, 441.
 RIDGEVILLE CORNERS, a post-office of Henry co., Ohio.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-township in the W. part of Orleans co., New York, on the Erie canal. Population, 4591.

RIDGEWAY, a small village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.
 RIDGEWAY, a township of Delaware co., Pennsylvania.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-village, capital of Elk co., Pennsylvania, on the Clarion river, and on the Sunbury and Erie railroad, 160 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It was laid out in 1843, and is rapidly improving. The chief business of the place is the manufacture and transportation of lumber. Population in 1853, 500. It contains 1 newspaper office.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-office of Henry co., Va.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-village of Fairfield district, South Carolina.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-office of Muskingum co., Ohio.
 RIDGEWAY, a township in the E. central part of Iowa co., Wisconsin. Pop., 704.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-township in the N. E. part of Lenawee co., Michigan. Population, 633.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-village of Warren co., North Carolina, on the Gaston and Raleigh railroad, 58 miles N. N. E. from Raleigh. The Roanoke Valley railroad terminates here.
 RIDGEWAY, a post-village of Lenawee co., Michigan, about 50 miles S. W. from Detroit. Population, about 300.
 RIDGEWAY, a small post-village of Iowa co., Wisconsin, 32 miles W. by S. from Madison, has 2 churches.
 RIDGEWOOD, a post-office of Fairfield district, South Carolina.
 RIDGEWORTH, a small village of Colleton district, South Carolina.
 RIDGLEY, a post-village of Platte co., Wisconsin, 32 miles N. N. W. from Independence.
 RIDLEY, a township of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles S. from Norristown. Population, 1389.
 RIDLEYSVILLE, a post-office of Gadsden co., Florida.
 RIDOTT'S, a post-village in Stephenson co., Illinois, 110 miles N. W. by W. from Chicago.
 RIEGLESVILLE, or RIEGLE'S MILLS, a flourishing village of Warren co., New Jersey, nearly 40 miles N. N. W. from Trenton.
 RIEGELSVILLE, a post-office of Bucks co., Pennsylvania. See REIGLESVILLE.
 RIENZI, a post-village of Tishomingo co., Mississippi, 240 miles N. N. E. from Jackson. It has 3 or 4 stores.
 RIFLE POINT, a post-office of Concordia parish, Louisiana.
 RIGA, a township of Monroe co., New York, 18 miles W. S. W. from Rochester, intersected by the Rochester and Buffalo railroad. Population, 2159.
 RIGA, a post-office of Lucas co., Ohio.
 RIGA, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Lenawee co., Michigan. Pop., 208.
 RIGG'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Williamson co., Tennessee.
 RIGOLETS BAYOU, of Jefferson parish, Louisiana, flows between Lake Washa and Little Lake.

RIGOLETS BAYOU, of Rapides parish, Louisiana, unites with Red river a little above Alexandria.

RIGOLETS DE BON DIEU, of Louisiana, is a lateral channel of Red river, which leaves the river about 3 miles N. from Natchitoches, and after a south-eastward course of perhaps 50 miles, rejoins the main stream on the S. E. border of Natchitoches parish.

RILEY, a township in Oxford county, Maine, 66 miles W. by N. from Augusta.

RILEY, a township of Yell co., Arkansas. Population, 199.

RILEY, a township in the S. E. part of Putnam co., Ohio. Population, 849.

RILEY, a township in the N. E. part of Sandusky co., Ohio. Population, 483.

RILEY, a post-township in the S. W. part of Clinton co., Michigan. Population, 191.

RILEY, a township in St. Clair co., Michigan. Population, 311.

RILEY, a post-township in Vigo co., Indiana. Population, 1004.

RILEY, a post-township in McHenry co., Illinois. Population, 445.

RILEY, a post-village in the above township, 65 miles N. W. by W. from Chicago.

RILEY CENTRE, a post-office of Sandusky co., Ohio.

RILEYVILLE, a post-village of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, 191 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

RILLOUGHS, a district in Lumpkin co., Georgia. Population, 288.

RIMERSBURG, a post-office of Clarion co., Pennsylvania.

RINDGE, a post-township in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, 45 miles S. W. from Concord. Population, 1274.

RINGGOLD, a new county in the S. S. W. part of Iowa, bordering on Missouri, has an area of about 540 square miles. It is traversed from N. to S. by the W. fork of Grand river. The soil is stated to be fertile, but deficient in timber. County seat is not yet located. Population in 1850, 96.

RINGGOLD, a post-township of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania. Population, 665.

RINGGOLD, a small village of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, on the Little Schuylkill railroad.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Washington co., Maryland.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Cherokee co., Ala.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Bienville parish, Louisiana.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Montgomery co., Tennessee.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Morgan co., O.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of La Grange co., Indiana.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Cook co., Illinois, 33 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of Platte co., Mo.

RINGGOLD, a post-office of El Dorado co., Cal.
RINGGOLD, a post-village of Walker co., Georgia, on the Western and Atlantic railroad, 287 miles from Augusta.

RINGOES, a post-village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, 6 miles S. from Flemington, has several stores.

RING'S MILLS, a post-office of Belmont co., O.

RINGVILLE, a post-office of Hampshire co., Massachusetts.

RINGWOOD, a small river which rises in Orange county, New York, flows southward through Passaic county, New Jersey, and unites with the Pequannoc near Pomton.

RINGWOOD, a village of Passaic co., New Jersey, on the Ringwood river, 24 miles from Hackensack, contains a store and several forges.

RINGWOOD, a post-office of Halifax co., North Carolina.

RINGWOOD, a post-office of McHenry co., Ill.

RINOSA, a post-village of Iroquois co., Illinois, on the Iroquois river, about 60 miles S. S. E. from Chicago.

RIO, a post-office of Coweta co., Georgia, 126 miles W. by N. from Milledgeville.

RIO, a post-office of Vermilion co., Illinois.
RIO, a post-office of Columbia co., Wis.

RIO ARRIBA, ree'o ar-ree'ba, a large county in the N. and N. W. part of New Mexico, bordering on Utah and California. It is drained by the Rio Colorado and the Rio del Norte, with their numerous tributaries. The Sierra Madre range of mountains traverses the E. part of the county. The western and central portion is inhabited only by savage tribes of Indians. Indian corn, wheat, and wool are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 56,483 bushels of corn; 31,163 of wheat, and 15,070 pounds of wool, the greatest quantity of that article produced by any county of the state. It contained 14 churches. Capital, Cuchillo. Population, 10,668.

RIO COLORADO. See COLORADO RIVER.

RIO COLORADO CHIQUITO, ree'o ko-lo-rá'do che-kee'to, (i. e. the "Little Colorado,") of New Mexico, rises in about 35° N. lat., and 108° W. lon. Flowing westerly, it falls into the Colorado in about 35° 15' N. lat., and 113° 20' W. lon. Entire length, near 500 miles.

RIO DEL NORTE, Texas. See RIO GRANDE.

RIO DE LOS MARTIRES, ree'o dá loce mar-te-rès, rises in the S. E. part of California, near the border of New Mexico, and flowing in a general S. W. course, falls into the Pacific ocean near the N. boundary of San Diego county, in about 33° 20' N. latitude.

RIO DE SAN JUAN, of New Mexico, rises in New Mexico, near 37° N. lat. and 107° 30' W. lon. Flowing westwardly it joins Grande river, the principal branch of the Colorado. Entire length, about 350 miles.

RIO FRIO, ree'o free'o, a river of Texas, which flows S. E. through a part of Bexar county, and enters Rio Nueces at the N. extremity of Nueces county.

RIO GRANDE, or RIO BRAVO DEL NORTE, (Spanish pronunciation, ree'ò grân'dá, ree'ò brá'vo del nor'tá), an important river which forms the boundary between Texas and Mexico, rises in the Rocky mountains near lat. 38° N., and lon. 106° 30' W. Its general course is at first S. E., then easterly and S. S. E., and lastly nearly E. It falls into the Gulf of Mexico near 25° N. lat. and 97° W. lon. The length is estimated at 1800 miles. The Rio Grande is for the most part very shallow, and navigation is impeded by rapids and sandbars. Small steamers have ascended to Kingsbury's rapids, about 450 miles from the sea. Near 900 miles from its mouth is the "Grand Indian Crossing," where the Apaches and Comanches ford the river (here only 3 or 4 feet deep) in their predatory incursions into Mexico.

RIO GRANDE, a post-office of Gallia co., O.

RIO GRANDE CITY, a post-village, port of entry, and capital of Starr county, Texas, on the left bank of the Rio Grande, about 550 miles S. by W. from Austin City. Steamboats run regularly between this place and the mouth of the river. It has considerable trade, and contains a custom house. Population in 1853, about 1000.

RIO LEONA, a small stream of Texas, flows S. E. and enters Rio Frio in the S. part of Bexar county.

RIO LLANO, a small river of Texas, rises in Bexar co., and flows eastward through Gillespie co., into the Colorado.

RIO SAN PEDRO, a small river of Texas, flows southward into Rio Grande, at the N. W. extremity of McKinley county.

RIO VIRGEN, ree'ò veer'hên, of Utah and New Mexico, rises at the southern base of the Wahsatch mountains, flows southerly, and falls into the Colorado near lat. 35° 30' N.

RIPLEY, a county in the S. E. part of Indiana, contains about 450 square miles. It is drained by Laughery creek, and Graham's fork of White river. The surface is nearly level, except some steep hills near the watercourses. A portion of the land is of limestone formation, and is well adapted to grain. Wheat, Indian corn, pork, sheep, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 464,904 bushels of corn; 39,587 of wheat; 89,826 of oats, and 10,306 tons of hay. It contained 37 churches, 1 newspaper office, 3519 pupils attending public schools, and 40 attending another school. Named in honor of General Ripley, an officer in the war of 1812. Capital, Versailles. Population, 14,820.

RIPLEY, a county in the S. S. E. part of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas, has an area of 990 square miles. It is traversed from N. to S. by Current river, and also drained by Little Black river, Fourche, Dumas, and Davis's creek. The surface is uneven and hilly; the soil near the streams is moderately fertile. Indian corn, oats, butter, and pork are the staples. Lumber is an article of export. In 1850 this county produced 115,241 bushels of corn; 8603 of oats, and 24,225 pounds of butter. It contained 2 churches, 20 pupils attending a public school, and 75 attending other schools. The highlands produce yellow-pine timber. Capital, Doniphan. Population, 2830; of whom 2744 were free, and 86, slaves.

RIPLEY, a post-township in Somerset co., Maine, about 55 miles N. E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 641.

RIPLEY, a post-township in the W. part of Chautauque co., New York, on Lake Erie. Population, 1732.

RIPLEY, a village, capital of Jackson co., Virginia, on Mill creek, 350 miles W. N. W. from Richmond. Population, about 200.

RIPLEY, a thriving post-village, capital of Tippah county, Mississippi, 210 miles N. by E. from Jackson. It is situated in a rich farming district, near the Mobile and Ohio railroad, not yet finished. It contains several churches and seminaries, and a newspaper office.

RIPLEY, a small post-village, capital of Lauderdale co., Tennessee, 195 miles W. from Nashville. It contains a court house, jail, academy, and a few stores.

RIPLEY, a flourishing post-village of Union township, Brown county, Ohio, is beautifully situated on the Ohio river, 56 miles above Cincinnati. It is the largest town in the county, and is the centre of an active trade. It is built on a narrow strip of land which is confined between the river and a steep declivity. A plank-road has been laid from this town to Locust Grove. Ripley contains 6 churches, 1 printing office, 1 female seminary, and a high-school for both sexes, styled Ripley College; also, 1 foundry a few mills and 1 bank. Settled in 1812, and originally called Staunton. Population in 1850, 1780.

RIPLEY, a township in the N. W. part of Holmes co., Ohio. Population, 1330.

RIPLEY, a township in the S. E. part of Huron co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland Columbus and Cincinnati railroad. Population, 1230.

RIPLEY, a post-township in Montgomery co., Indiana. Population, 1250.

RIPLEY, a township in Rush co., Indiana. Population, 1908.

RIPLEY, a post-village of Brown co., Illinois, about 8 miles N. E. from Mount Sterling.

RIPLEY'S, a post-office of Tyler co., Va.

RIPLEYVILLE, a post-office of Huron co., Ohio.

RIPON, a post-village in Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin, on the inlet of Green lake, 77 miles N. W. by W. from Milwaukee. Brockway College, a Presbyterian institution, is located at this place. It contains sash, chair, cabinet, and woollen factories.

RIPON, a post-office of Jefferson co., Va.

RIPTON, a post-township in Addison co., 993

Vermont, about 28 miles S. W. by S. from Montpelier. Population, 567.

RISDON, a thriving post-village of Washington township, Hancock county, Ohio, 93 miles N. by W. from Columbus. It is situated partly in the counties of Seneca and Wood. Population, 500.

RISDON, a post-village in St. Clair co., Illinois, near Kaskaskia, 115 miles S. by W. from Springfield.

RISING FAWN, a small post-village of Dade co., Ga., 352 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

RISING SUN, a post-village of Philadelphia co., Pa., 3 miles N. from Philadelphia.

RISING SUN, a post-office of Cecil co., Md.

RISING SUN, a handsome post-village, capital of Ohio county, Indiana, is finely situated on a high bank of the Ohio river, 36 miles below Cincinnati. It contains good public buildings, several churches, an academy, and 2 newspaper offices. It carries on an active trade, and has 1 iron foundry, 1 woollen factory, and 1 cotton factory which employs about 100 operatives. Population in 1850, 1672: in 1853, about 2000.

RISING SUN, a post-office of Montgomery co., Illinois.

RISLEY COUNTY, Iowa. See WEBSTER.

RITCHIE, a county in the N. W. part of Virginia, has an area of 480 square miles. It is traversed by Hughes river, and its North fork. The surface is hilly and broken, and mostly covered with forests. Indian corn, oats, hay, butter, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 it produced 101,884 bushels of corn; 24,336 of oats; 2503 tons of hay, and 41,978 pounds of butter. There were 2 saw mills, 1 grist mill, 1 wool-carding mill, and 1 tannery. It contained 5 churches, and 376 pupils attending public schools. The county is traversed by the north-western turnpike, and by the Parkersburg branch of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Formed in 1843, and named in honor of Thomas Ritchie, Esq., editor of the Richmond Enquirer. Capital, Harrisville. Population, 3902; of whom 3886 were free, and 16, slaves.

RITCHIE COURT HOUSE, Virginia. See HARRISVILLE.

RITCHEVILLE, a post-village of Dinwiddie co., Virginia, 41 miles S. from Richmond.

RITTENHOUSE, a small village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, about 4 miles N. W. from Norristown.

RITTENHOUSERTOWN, a small village of Philadelphia co., Pennsylvania, about 2 miles W. from Germantown, has a valuable stone quarry. The celebrated astronomer, David Rittenhouse, was born here in 1732.

RITTERSVILLE, a post-office of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania.

RIVANNA, a small river in the E. central part of Virginia, rises at the foot of Blue ridge, in Albemarle county, flows south-eastward through Fluvanna county, and enters the James river at Columbia. By means of dams and locks it is navigable to the South-west mountain in Albemarle co., a distance of above 30 miles.

RIVER, a post-office of Clarion co., Pa.

RIVERHEAD, a post-village in Riverhead township, and capital of Suffolk county, New York, at the head of Peconic bay, and on the Long Island railroad, 74 miles E. by N. from New York. It contains several churches and an academy. Population of the township, 2540: of the village, estimated at 500. The post-office is called Suffolk Court House.

RIVER HILL, a small village of White co., Tennessee.

RIVERROAD FORKS, a post-office of Livingston co., New York.

RIVERSIDE, a post-office of Ulster co., N. Y.

RIVERSIDE, a post-office of Cumberland co., North Carolina.

RIVER STYX, a post-office of Medina co., O.

RIVERTOWN, a post-village in Campbell co., Georgia, on Chattahoochee river, 105 miles N. W. by W. from Milledgeville.

RIVES, a small post-village of Richland co., Ohio, 79 miles N. N. E. from Columbus.

RIVES, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Jackson co., Michigan. Pop., 518.

RIVESVILLE, a post-village of Marion co., Virginia, 282 miles N. W. from Richmond.

RIVIÈRE À JACQUES, ree've-air' à zhâk, a river of Minnesota, rises in Pembina county, and flowing S. falls into the Missouri. Entire length, about 400 miles.

RIVIÈRE AU CUIVRE, or COPPER RIVER, of Missouri, rises in Audrain county, and flowing in an E. S. E. direction, enters the Mississippi, between Lincoln and St. Charles county. It is a good stream for mills. The Eagle fork enters it from the right, on the boundary between the counties above named.

RIVIÈRE AU BŒUF, a small stream in the E. part of Missouri, flows through Franklin county, and enters the Missouri river from the right hand, near Newport. It affords motive-power for a few mills.

RIVIÈRE DES ACADIENS, of Louisiana, flows eastward through Ascension parish, into Lake Maurepas.

RIX, a post-office of Ionia co., Michigan.

RIXEYVILLE, a small post-village of Culpeper co., Virginia, 100 miles N. N. W. from Richmond.

RIX'S MILLS, a post-office of Muskingum co., Ohio.

ROAD HALL, a post-office of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania.

ROADSTOWN, a post-village of Cumberland co., New Jersey, about 6 miles W. from Bridgeton, contains 2 stores, a church, and about 40 dwellings.

ROADVILLE, a post-village of Charleston district, S. C., 110 miles S. E. from Columbia.

ROADVILLE, a post-office of Anderson co., Texas.

ROANE, a county in the E. central part of Tennessee; area estimated at 600 square miles. It is intersected by the Tennessee river and its two branches, the Clinch and Holston, which unite at Kingston. The Cumberland mountain extends along or near the W. border. The soil is fertile, adapted to Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass. In 1850 this county produced 595,296 bushels of corn; 137,440 of oats; 20,026 of wheat; and 137,519 pounds of butter. It contained 37 churches, 4182 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending academies and other schools. Extensive beds of stone coal and iron ore are found. The rivers above named are navigable by steamboats. Capital, Kingston. Population, 12,185, of whom 10,641 were free, and 1544, slaves.

ROANE, a township in Lafayette co., Arkansas. Population, 989.

ROAN MOUNTAIN, a post-office of Carter co., Tennessee.

ROANOKE, a river of Virginia and North Carolina, is formed by two principal branches, the Staunton and Dan, which rise in the southern part of Virginia, and unite at Clarksville, in Mecklenburg county, constituting the lower Roanoke. Flowing in an E. S. E. direction, it enters North Carolina and meets the tide water at Weldon, after passing over a series of rapids. Below this point its general course is south-east, and it enters the western extremity of Albemarle sound at the mouth of Chowan river. It is a remarkably rapid stream, the fertile bottoms of which are subject to frequent inundations. The length of the main stream is estimated at 250 miles; but if we include the Staunton, which by some geographers is regarded as the Roanoke proper, it will probably exceed 450 miles. The lower falls of this river at Weldon, which form the limit of steamboat navigation, are about 150 miles from its mouth. By means of a canal around these falls, bateaux can ascend to Danville, on the Dan river.

ROANOKE, a county in the S. S. W. part of Virginia, has an area of 180 square miles. It is intersected by the Staunton river. The county forms part of the great valley of Virginia, situated between the Blue Ridge on the S. E. and another ridge of the Alleghanies on the N. W. The soil is highly productive. Indian corn, wheat, hemp, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 235,760 bushels of corn; 104,134 of wheat; 103,643 of oats; and 362,682 pounds of tobacco. There were 2 flour mills, 1 tinware manufactory, and 1 tannery. It contained 12 churches, 185 pupils attending public schools, and 137 attending other schools. The rock which underlies the surface is a fine limestone. The Virginia and Tennessee railroad (unfinished) passes through the county, and a turnpike connects it with the James River canal. Formed in 1838. Capital, Salem. Population, 8477, of whom 5967 were free, and 2510, slaves.

ROANOKE, a post-village of Genesee co., New York, on Allen's creek, about 30 miles W. S. W. from Rochester.

ROANOKE, a post-village in Randolph co., Alabama.

ROANOKE, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Indiana.

ROANOKE, a post-village of Randolph co., Missouri, 75 miles N. N. W. from Jefferson City.

ROANOKE BRIDGE, a post-village of Charlotte co., Virginia, 89 miles S. W. from Richmond.

ROAN'S CREEK, a post-office of Carroll co., Tennessee.

ROARING CREEK, of Pennsylvania, falls into the North branch of the Susquehanna, a few miles above Danville.

ROARING CREEK, of North Carolina, enters the Yadkin from the N., in Wilkes county.

ROARING CREEK, a post-township of Montour co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles S. by W. from Pottsville. Population, 1991.

ROARING CREEK, a post-office of Randolph co., Virginia.

ROARING SPRING, a post-office of Trigg co., Kentucky.

ROARK, a township in Gasconade co., Missouri. Population, 1007.

ROBB, a township in Posey co., Indiana. Population, 1376.

ROBBIN'S REEF, New York bay, off the upper end of Staten Island, contains a light-house.

ROBBINSON, a post-township in Washington co., Maine, 140 miles N. E. by E. from Augusta. Population, 1028.

ROBERSON'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Bledsoe co., Tennessee.

ROBERT BAYOU, of Louisiana, is connected with Red river near Alexandria.

ROBERTS' CORNERS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

ROBERTSON, a county in the N. part of Tennessee, bordering on Kentucky; area estimated at 500 square miles. It is intersected by Red river, and also drained by Sycamore creek. The surface is uneven; the soil produces grain and tobacco. In 1850 there were raised 858,615 bushels of corn; 115,304 of oats; 36,837 of wheat; and 1,445,670 pounds of tobacco. The streams furnish motive-power for mills. The turnpike-road leading from Nashville to Louisville, Kentucky, passes through the county. Capital, Springfield. Population, 16,145, of whom 11,529 were free, and 4616, slaves.

ROBERTSON, a county in the E. central part of Texas, contains about 840 square miles. The Brazos river forms its boundary on the S. W., and the Navasoto on the E. The surface is undulating. Cotton, Indian corn, sweet potatoes, grass, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 41,395 bushels of corn; 6865 of sweet potatoes, 429 bales of cotton; and 18,470 pounds of butter. It contained 4 churches, 45 pupils attending public schools, and 40 attending other schools. Named in honor of Sterling C. Robertson, an empresario of Texas. Capital, Franklin. Population, 934, of whom 670 were free, and 264, slaves.

ROBERTSON, a district in Lumpkin co., Georgia. Population, 532.

ROBERTSON'S STORE, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

ROBERTSVILLE, a small village of Indiana co., Pennsylvania, about 70 miles N. E. from Pittsburg.

ROBERTSVILLE, a post-village in Beaufort district, South Carolina.

ROBERTSVILLE, a post-office of Panola co., Mississippi.

ROBERTSVILLE, a post-village of Anderson co., Tennessee, 166 miles E. from Nashville.

ROBERTSVILLE, a village of Stark co., Ohio, 68 miles S. S. E. from Cleveland.

ROBESON, a county in the S. part of North Carolina, bordering on South Carolina; area estimated at 900 square miles. It is intersected by Lumber river and its affluents. The surface is nearly level; the soil is generally sandy. Indian corn and cotton are cultivated. In 1850 this county produced 327,257 bushels of corn, and 2299 bales of cotton. It contained 1 woollen factory, 2 saw mills, 7 tar and turpentine manufactories, and 1 turpentine distillery. There were 17 churches, 1415 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending other schools. Lumber, turpentine, and other products of the pine are exported in large quantities. A plank-road has lately been laid through the county, by which produce is exported to Fayetteville. Formed in 1786, and named in honor of Colonel Robeson, of North Carolina. Capital, Lumberton. Population, 12,806, of which 8461 were free, and 4365, slaves.

ROBESON, a post-township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles S. from Reading. Population, 2404.

ROBESON, a post-office of Brunswick co., North Carolina.

ROBIDEAUX, a small village of Texas co., Mo.

ROBIDOUX FORK, Missouri, an affluent of the Gasconade, flows northward, and enters that river in Pulaski co., near Waynesville.

ROBINA, a post-office of Panola co., Miss.

ROBIN'S NEST, a post-office of Peoria co., Ill.

ROBINSON, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, about 8 miles W. from Pittsburg. Population, 1917.

ROBINSON, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles S. S. W. from Pittsburg. Population, 843.

ROBINSON, a small village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

ROBINSON, a township in Posey co., Indiana. Population, 1619.

ROBINSON, a post-village of Crawford co., Illinois, about 140 miles S. E. from Springfield.

ROBINSON, a township in Green co., Missouri. Population, 1157.

ROBINSON CREEK, a post-office of Pike co., Kentucky.

ROBINSON'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Benton co., Arkansas.

ROBINSON'S MILLS, a post-office of Menard co., Illinois.

ROBINSON'S RIVER, a small stream in the N. E. central part of Virginia, rises in Madison co., flows south-eastward, and enters Rapidan river on the boundary between that county and Orange.

ROBINSON'S SPRING, a post-office of Autauga co., Alabama.

ROBINSON'S STORE, a post-office of Lincoln co., Tennessee.

ROBINSON'S, a post-office of Darke co., Ohio.

ROBINSONVILLE, a post-office of Bedford co., Pennsylvania.

ROB ROY, a post-office of Jefferson co., Ark.

ROB ROY, a post-village of Fountain co., Indiana, on Shawnee creek, 12 miles N. E. from Covington.

ROCHE PERCÉE, a small river of Boone co., Missouri, which flows into Missouri river from the left near Providence. It is a valuable stream for mills. The name signifies "pierced rock."

ROCHEPORT, a post-village of Boone co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, at the mouth of Manitou creek, 40 miles N. W. from Jefferson City. It has a steamboat landing. Stone coal is found in the bank of the river.

ROCHESTER, a post-village and semi-capital of Strafford county, New Hampshire, about 30 miles E. by N. from Concord. It contains a bank, and is the seat of various manufactures. The Cochecho railroad and the Great Falls and Conway railroad, through which it communicates with various sections of the state, add much to its importance. Population of the township in 1840, 2431; in 1850, 3006.

ROCHESTER, a township in Windsor co., Vermont, 32 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 1493.

ROCHESTER, a post-village of Plymouth co., Massachusetts, near the head of Rochester harbor, in Buzzard's bay, on the Cape Cod Branch railroad, 50 miles S. by E. from Boston. It has considerable ship building, and several vessels engaged in the whale fisheries. Population of the township, 3808.

ROCHESTER, a city, capital of Monroe county, New York, is situated on both sides of Genesee river, 7 miles from its entrance into Lake Ontario, 230 miles by railroad W. by N. from Albany, and 68 miles E. N. E. from Buffalo. Lat. 43° 8' N., lon. 77° 51' W. Rochester is the largest town on the great thoroughfare above alluded to, excepting Albany and Buffalo, and is a place of rapid growth, and remarkable for its extensive manufactories of flour and other articles. The site of this city is nearly level. The streets vary from 60 to 80 feet in width, and are generally straight and well paved. The principal street, extending E. and W. through the centre of the town, and crossing the river by a bridge, is called Main street on the E., and Buffalo street on the W. side of the river. The greater number of public buildings and many of the residences are handsomely built of brick or of limestone quarried in the immediate vicinity. The streets are generally bordered with shade-trees, and lighted with gas, and many of the dwellings have gardens and ornamental grounds attached. The city has several public squares, and the two divisions are connected by 4 or 5 bridges. The corporate limits occupy an area of 7 square miles, but it is not very compactly built.

The new court house and city hall on Buffalo street is a large and beautiful structure, with a granite front—cost $80,000. The Arcade is a handsome building occupied partly by the post-office department. The Western House of Refuge for juvenile offenders is a fine large brick building, finished in 1851 at a cost of $65,000; it is 382 feet long, 3 stories high, and contains 190 delinquents. The main edifice of the Rochester University is 100 feet by 60, and 4 stories high, with a wing 75 feet by 50. Many of the churches and hotels are large and handsome buildings. The university was organized in November, 1850, with an endowment of $150,000, and is under the direction of the Baptists. The Baptist Theological Seminary of this place was founded in 1850, with an endowment of $75,000. The Rochester Athenæum has 3000 members, with a library of 7100 volumes, and an annual course of lectures. The Rochester Sunday School Union is composed of 335 schools, with 4347 pupils, and 8000 volumes in the libraries. There are 2 orphan asylums. The public press consists of 4 daily and tri-weekly and 7 weekly newspapers, 1 monthly agricultural, and 1 monthly horticultural journal. Rochester contains 44 churches, among which there are 9 Presbyterian, 9 Methodist Episcopal, 4 Baptist, 3 Episcopal, 6 Catholic, and 13 others of various denominations. Among the principal hotels are, the American, the Eagle, the Waverly, the Clinton, Blossom's Hotel; the Mansion House, the Rochester, and Congress Hall. The city contains 6 banks. The Rochester Gas Light Company, with a capital of $125,000, have 10 miles of "mains," 140 city lamps, and 1100 private consumers. The Erie canal, passing through the central part of the city, crosses the river by a beautiful stone aqueduct about 800 feet long. The trade of Rochester is facilitated by the following improvements, besides the canal above named:—The Genesee Valley canal extends southward to the Alleghany river; four different sections or branches of the Central railroad passing E. and W. meet here, and the Rochester and Lake Ontario railroad joins them at this point. Steamboats ascend the river to Carthage, about 2 miles below the city, and smaller boats navigate the same above the falls. The shipping of the district, June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 686,375 tons enrolled and licensed, all of which was employed in the coast trade, and 429,423 tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 264, (tons, 38,903,) of which 200 (tons, 33,027) were by foreign vessels, and clearances for foreign ports for the year were the same. The above does not include the canal tonnage which is doubtless much greater.

The unlimited water-power derived from the Genesee river has been a principal cause of the prosperity of Rochester, the flouring mills of which are probably the most extensive in the United States. The river within a course of 3 miles has a total descent of 226 feet, with three perpendicular falls of 97, 20, and 105 feet. The first of these is within the limits of the city, a little N. of the centre, and is considered one of the most beautiful cataracts in the state. Below the upper falls the broad river flows through a ravine more than 100 feet deep. The total amount of flour manufactured here annually is estimated at 600,000 barrels, which, computing 5 bushels to each barrel, would require 3,000,000 bushels of wheat. The quantity received by canals and railroads in 1852 was 1,640,454 bushels, leaving 1,359,546 to be made up from receipts by wagons. The following table exhibits the quantity of flour shipped for a series of 6 years:—

	Barrels.		Barrels.
1847.....	631,574	1850.....	552,729
1848.....	584,426	1851.....	500,330
1849.....	570,757	1852.....	538,680

Various other manufactures are carried on, the chief productions of which are machinery, farming implements, stoves and other iron castings, cotton and woollen goods, paper, lumber, leather, cabinet ware, and edge tools.

Rochester is remarkable for the extent and character of its fruit nurseries. According to the estimate of a gentleman residing in the vicinity and thoroughly acquainted with the subject, there are within 10 miles of the city not less than 1000 acres devoted to this branch of business. One firm alone, that of Elwanger & Barry, have 200 acres closely and richly cultivated, employing from 80 to 150 hands.

Mount Hope Cemetery, near the E. bank of the river, and 2 miles S. from the railroad depôt, is remarkable for the natural adaptation of the grounds to the object for which they have been selected, and for the picturesque beauty of its situation.

Rochester was settled in 1812 by Nathaniel Rochester and others, incorporated in 1817, and chartered as a city in 1834. Population in 1820, 1502; in 1830, 9269; in 1840, 20,191; in 1850, 36,403, and in 1853, about 42,000.

ROCHESTER, a township of Ulster co., N. Y. 16 miles S. W. from Kingston. Pop., 3174.

ROCHESTER, a post-township of Beaver co.,

Pennsylvania, on the Ohio river, opposite the borough of Beaver. Population, 1421.

ROCHESTER, a post-village in the above township, on the left bank of Beaver river, at its entrance into the Ohio, and on the Ohio and Pennsylvania railroad, 25 miles N. W. from Pittsburg. A good bridge across Beaver river connects this village with Bridgewater. Population in 1853, about 1200.

ROCHESTER, a post-office of Jackson par., La.

ROCHESTER, a post-office of Butler co., Ky.

ROCHESTER, a thriving village of Columbiana co., Ohio, on the Sandy and Beaver canal, 140 miles N. E. from Columbus.

ROCHESTER, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Lorain co., Ohio. Pop., 896.

ROCHESTER, a post-village in the above township, on the railroad between Cleveland and Columbus, 95 miles N. N. E. from the latter.

ROCHESTER, a small village of Noble co., O.

ROCHESTER, a thriving village of Stark co., Ohio, on the Tuscarawas river and the Ohio canal, about 110 miles N. E. from Columbus. The adjoining village of Navarre has a post-office of its own name.

ROCHESTER, a post-village of Warren co., Ohio, on the railroad between Cincinnati and Wilmington, about 30 miles N. E. from the former. Population in 1853, about 400.

ROCHESTER, a thriving post-village of Avon township, Oakland county, Michigan, on Paint creek, at its entrance into Clinton river, 28 miles N. from Detroit. It contains 2 churches, 4 stores, 2 flour mills, 1 foundry, and a large public school-house.

ROCHESTER, a small village of Franklin co., Indiana, on the Whitewater canal, 76 miles E. S. E. from Indianapolis.

ROCHESTER, a post-township in Fulton co., Indiana. Population, 1401.

ROCHESTER, a post-village, capital of Fulton county, Indiana, on the Michigan road, and on Mill creek, 92 miles N. from Indianapolis. It has 2 churches and several stores.

ROCHESTER, a thriving post-village of Noble co., Indiana, on the Elkhart river, about 130 miles N. N. E. from Indianapolis. It has an excellent water-power, and a forge in which bar iron is made.

ROCHESTER, a post-village of Sangamon co., Illinois, on the Sangamon river, 6 miles S. E. from Springfield. The river affords water-power for mills.

ROCHESTER, a post-township in Andrew co., Missouri. Population, 1603.

ROCHESTER, a small post-village of Andrew co., Missouri, on the Platte river, 62 miles N. by W. from Independence.

ROCHESTER, a thriving village of Cedar co., Iowa, on the Cedar river, 20 miles E. from Iowa City. It contains 5 stores and 200 inhabitants.

ROCHESTER, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Racine co., Wisconsin. Population, 1672.

ROCHESTER, a thriving post-village in the above township, is situated on the Pishtaka or Fox river, at the mouth of the Muskego, and on the plank-road between Racine City and Elkhorn, 24 miles W. from the former. It has a fine water-power, which is employed in flouring mills. It contains also 2 manufactories of ploughs, 2 of harness, 1 of carriages, 5 stores, 3 hotels, an iron foundry, and a fanning-mill factory. Population in 1853, about 500.

ROCHESTER COLONY, a thriving village of Clinton co., Michigan, on the Maple river, about 28 miles N. by E. from Lansing. It has 1 flouring mill and 1 saw mill, and 2 or 3 stores.

ROCHESTER DEPÔT, a post-office of Lorain co., Ohio.

ROCHESTER MILLS, a post-office of Wabash co., Illinois.

ROCK, a county in the S. part of Wisconsin, bordering on Illinois, contains about 770 square miles. It is traversed from N. to S. by Rock river, into which several large streams empty. The surface is undulating, and the soil highly productive. Rock Prairie, the largest in the state, occupies nearly half of the county, extending from the river eastward. The staples are wheat, maize, oats, wool, potatoes, pork, and butter. In 1850 the county produced 784,278 bushels of wheat; 300,143 of Indian corn; 487,880 of oats, and 410,881 pounds of butter. It contained 17 churches, 3 newspaper offices; 5186 pupils attending public schools, and 194 attending academies and other schools. The most abundant rock of the county is the blue limestone. Rock river is a fine stream flowing through a valley remarkable for beauty and fertility, and affording abundant water-power. The public improvements are the Fond du Lac and Rock River railroad, the Beloit and Madison railroad, the Racine and Janesville railroad, and the Milwaukee and Mississippi railroad. Organized in 1839, and named from its principal stream. The settlement began in 1836, and has progressed with great rapidity. Capital, Janesville. Pop., 20,750.

ROCK, a post-office of Plymouth co., Mass.

ROCK, a small post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

ROCK, a township in the central part of Rock co., Wisconsin. Population, 553.

ROCKAWAY, a post-village of Queen's co., New York, on Rockaway bay, near the sea, about 24 miles E. S. E. from New York.

ROCKAWAY, an important post-town of Rockaway township, near the centre of Morris county, New Jersey, is situated on the Rockaway river and on the Morris canal, about 7 miles N. of Morristown. This town is situated in the richest iron region of the state, and has extensive manufactories of that useful metal. There are several forges, rolling mills, foundries, and steel furnaces. The Mount Hope mining property, near this place, was sold a short time since for $80,000.

The Morris and Essex railroad passes through this town.

ROCKAWAY BEACH, of Queen's co., New York, is a peninsula extending between Jamaica bay and the ocean. Here is a fashionable watering place, with hotels and boarding houses, about 20 miles S. E. from New York.

ROCKAWAY RIVER, of New Jersey, rises in Morris county, flows southward and eastward, and enters the Passaic on the boundary between Essex and Morris counties, about 5 miles S. S. E. from Boonton.

ROCK BLUFF, a post-office of Clinch co., Ga.

ROCK BOTTOM, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

ROCKBRIDGE, a county in the central part of Virginia, has an area of about 780 square miles. It is intersected by North river, which flows into James river, near the S. extremity of the county, at the foot of the Blue Ridge. The county forms part of the great valley of Virginia, which is bounded on the S. E. by the Blue Ridge. The soil has a basis of fine limestone, and is highly productive. Grain and grass are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 372,705 bushels of Indian corn; 198,553 of wheat; 162,752 of oats, and 7626 tons of hay. There were 3 grist and saw mills, 13 flouring mills, 4 iron furnaces, 3 iron forges, and 1 iron foundry; 18 churches; 239 pupils attending public schools, and 314 attending academies and other schools. The James River canal passes through the S. part of the county. Formed in 1778, and named from the natural bridge of rock, a description of which will be found under the head of VIRGINIA. Population, 16,045, of whom 11,848 were free, and 4197, slaves.

ROCKBRIDGE, a post-village of Gwinnett co., Georgia, 15 miles S. from Lawrenceville.

ROCKBRIDGE, a post-office of Greene co., Ill.

ROCKBRIDGE, a small post-village, capital of Ozark county, Missouri, on Bryant's fork of White river, 150 miles S. from Jefferson City. It is situated in a hilly region, in which pine timber is abundant.

ROCKBRIDGE, a township in the N. part of Richland co., Wisconsin.

ROCK CAMP, a post-office of Braxton co., Virginia.

ROCK CASTLE, a county in the S. E. central part of Kentucky, contains an area of about 300 square miles. It is drained by Dick's and Rockcastle rivers, from the latter of which the name is derived. The surface is hilly, and the soil mostly poor. The staples are Indian corn, wheat, and oats. In 1850 this county produced 177,974 bushels of corn; 3715 of wheat, and 28,853 of oats. It contained 14 churches, and 425 pupils attending public schools. Coal is found in several parts of the county, but not used to much extent. Organized in 1810. Capital, Mount Vernon. Population, 4697; of whom 4322 were free, and 375, slaves.

ROCK CASTLE, a post-village in Patrick co.,

Virginia, 190 miles S. W. by W. from Richmond.

ROCK CASTLE, a small post-village of Trigg co., Kentucky, on Cumberland river, about 240 miles W. S. W. from Frankfort.

ROCKCASTLE, a small river in the S. E. part of Kentucky, forms the boundary between Laurel county on the one hand, and Rockcastle and Pulaski counties on the other, and enters the Cumberland river. Its general course is S. S. W.

ROCK CITY, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

ROCK CITY MILLS, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

ROCK CREEK, of Pennsylvania, rises in Adams co., and flows into the Monocacy river.

ROCK CREEK rises in Montgomery co., Maryland, flows southward, and falls into the Potomac, at Georgetown, in the District of Columbia.

ROCK CREEK, of Texas, flows through the Upper Cross Timbers into the Brazos.

ROCK CREEK, of Indiana, enters the Wabash on the left bank, 10 miles above Delphi.

ROCK CREEK, a post-office of Somerset co., Maryland.

ROCK CREEK, a post-office of Orange co., North Carolina.

ROCK CREEK, a small village of Murray co., Georgia.

ROCK CREEK, a post-office of Franklin co., Alabama.

ROCK CREEK, a post-office of Yell co., Ark.

ROCK CREEK, a small village of Bedford co., Tennessee.

ROCK CREEK, a post-village of Lewis co., Kentucky, 125 miles E. N. E. from Frankfort.

ROCK CREEK, a thriving village of Ashtabula co., Ohio, on Rock creek, about 200 miles N. E. from Columbus. It has 2 or 3 churches and several mills.

ROCK CREEK, a post-township in Bartholomew co., Indiana. Population, 819.

ROCK CREEK, a township in Wells co., Indiana. Population, 599.

ROCK CREEK, a post-office of Carroll co., Illinois, 45 miles S. E. from Galena.

ROCK CREEK, a post-office of Cedar co., Io.

ROCKDALE, a post-office of Chenango co., New York.

ROCKDALE, a post-township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, about 15 miles N. W. by N. from Meadville. Population, 1086.

ROCKDALE, a small village of Newton co., Georgia.

ROCKDALE, a post-office of Randolph co., Alabama.

ROCKDALE, a post-office of Scott co., Ky.

ROCKFISH, a village of Cumberland co., North Carolina, on Rockfish creek, 7 miles S. from Fayetteville. It contains a cotton factory.

ROCKFISH CREEK, of Cumberland co., North Carolina, enters Cape Fear river from the W., about 10 miles below Fayetteville.

ROCKFORD, a post-village, capital of Surry co., North Carolina, on the Yadkin river, 145 miles W. by N. from Raleigh. Pop., 639.

ROCKFORD, a small post-village, capital of Coosa county, Alabama, 40 miles N. by E. from Montgomery. The surrounding country is hilly, and amply supplied with water-power, and contains valuable quarries of granite, marble, &c.

ROCKFORD, a flourishing post-village of Jackson county, Indiana, on the Driftwood or E. fork of White river, and on the Jeffersonville and Columbus railroad, 60 miles S. from Indianapolis. The river affords valuable water-power at this place.

ROCKFORD, a village of Wells co., Indiana, 100 miles N. E. from Indianapolis.

ROCKFORD, a post-township in Winnebago co., Illinois. Population, 2093.

ROCKFORD, a flourishing post-village, capital of Winnebago county, Illinois, is finely situated on the left (E.) bank of Rock river, and on the Chicago and Galena railroad, 97 miles W. N. W. from Chicago. Rockford is the centre of an active business, and has abundant water-power. It has nearly all been built since 1836. Its growth was constant and moderate until 1850, when it began to increase with great rapidity. This was mainly caused by a prospect of the early completion of the railroad from Chicago to this point. Rockford has 5 churches, 1 bank, and 1 or 2 newspaper offices. Population in 1853, about 3500.

ROCK GROVE, post-office, Richmond co., N. C.

ROCK GROVE, a post-township in Stephenson co., Illinois. Population, 727.

ROCK GROVE, a small post-village in the above township, about 55 miles E. by N. from Galena.

ROCK HALL, a post-village in Kent co., Maryland, on the E. shore of Chesapeake bay, 25 miles N. E. from Annapolis.

ROCK HAVEN, a post-village of Meade co., Kentucky, is situated at the Narrows on the Ohio river.

ROCKHILL, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles S. by W. from Easton. Population, 2448.

ROCKHILL, a small village of Greene co., Pennsylvania.

ROCKHILL, a post-office of York dis., S. C.

ROCKHILL, a post-village of St. Louis co., Missouri, 10 miles W. by S. from St. Louis.

ROCKHILL, a post-village of Marquette co., Wisconsin, 38 miles W. S. W. from Fond du Lac.

ROCKHOLDS, a post-office of Sullivan co., Tennessee.

ROCKHOLDS, a post-office of Whitley co., Ky.

ROCKHOUSE, a post-office of Sumner co., Tennessee.

ROCKHOUSE, a post-office of Hocking co., O.

ROCKHOUSE PRAIRIE, a post-village of Buchanan co., Missouri, 44 miles N. N. W. from Independence.

ROCKINGHAM, a county forming the S. E. extremity of New Hampshire, has an area of about 750 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the ocean, being the only county of New Hampshire which has any extent of seacoast. It is watered by the Lamprey, Beaver, and Exeter rivers, which afford motive-power to numerous grist and saw mills. Great bay, connecting with Piscataqua river and Massabesic lake, are the principal collections of water; besides which, however, there are numerous small lakes or ponds. The surface is uneven, and somewhat hilly in the northern part. The soil is productive, and under good cultivation. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 201,359 bushels of corn; 62,407 of oats; 668,395 of potatoes; 72,185 tons of hay, and 736,222 pounds of butter. There were 480 boot and shoe manufactories, 6 cotton and 9 woollen factories, 3 foundries, 5 machine shops, 35 flour mills, 3 paper mills, 77 saw and planing mills, 20 tanneries, and 2 ship-yards. It contained 103 churches, 5 newspaper offices; 11,045 pupils attending public schools, and 1072 attending other schools. This county is intersected by the railroads connecting Boston with Manchester, Portland, and Portsmouth, and by that connecting Portsmouth and Concord. County towns, Portsmouth and Exeter. Population, 49,194.

ROCKINGHAM, a county in the N. E. central part of Virginia, has an area of 900 square miles. It is intersected in the S. E. part by the Shenandoah river proper, and also drained by the North fork of that river, and by Dry and North rivers, which rise within its limits. The county occupies part of the Great Valley, which is bounded on the S. E. by the Blue Ridge, and on the N. W. by the North mountain; the soil is generally very fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, cattle, and butter are the staples. According to the census of 1850 this county produced more wheat and more hay than any other county in the state. In 1850 there were raised 608,350 bushels of wheat; 448,585 of corn; 164,976 of oats; 16,067 tons of hay, and 254,834 pounds of butter. It contained 41 flour mills, 22 saw mills, 1 iron furnace, 1 iron forge, 4 wool-carding mills, and 16 tanneries; 30 churches, and 1970 pupils attending public schools. A quarry of marble has been opened near the county seat, and limestone is abundant. The North river furnishes extensive water-power. Organized in 1788. Capital, Harrisonburg. Population, 20,294; of whom 17,963 were free, and 2331, slaves.

ROCKINGHAM, a county in the N. part of North Carolina, bordering on Virginia; area estimated at 350 square miles. It is intersected by the Dan river, and also drained by the sources of Haw river, a branch of the Cape Fear. The surface is elevated and hilly; the soil is generally productive. Indian corn, oats, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 377,604 bushels of corn; 101,804 of oats, and 908,729 pounds of tobacco. There were 5 saw mills, 1 corn and flour mill, 1 cotton factory, 1 woollen factory, and 27 tobacco manufactories. It contained 18 churches, 1015 pupils attending public schools, and 45 attending academies or other schools. Iron ore is found in the county. Formed in 1785. Capital, Wentworth. Population, 14,495; of whom 9166 were free, and 5329, slaves.

ROCKINGHAM, a post-village of Windham co., Vermont, on Williams' river, and on the Rutland and Burlington railroad, 82 miles S. by E. from Montpelier. It contains a newspaper office and a bank. Population of the township, 2857.

ROCKINGHAM, a small post-village, capital of Richmond co., North Carolina, 5 miles E. from the Yadkin river, and 105 miles S. W. from Raleigh. It has good water-power in the vicinity, which is employed in a cotton factory and several mills.

ROCKINGHAM, a village in Scott co., Iowa, on the W. bank of the Mississippi river, 55 miles E. S. E. from Iowa City.

ROCK ISLAND, an island in the Mississippi river, nearly opposite the city of Rock Island, in Illinois. Fort Armstrong is situated on the southern extremity.

ROCK ISLAND, a county in the W. N. W. part of Illinois, bordering on the Mississippi, which separates it from Iowa, has an area of about 350 square miles. It is situated on both sides of Rock river, which forms part of the S. E. boundary. It derives its name from an island in the channel of the Mississippi. The greatest length is about 70 miles, following the course of the river; the breadth varies from 3 to 15 miles. The surface is diversified: the soil is good. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and hay are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 215,255 bushels of corn; 83,076 of wheat; 31,041 of oats, and 7443 tons of hay. There were 4 churches, 1 newspaper establishment, and 180 pupils attending public schools. The county contains abundance of stone coal and limestone. Rock river affords immense water-power near its mouth. The Chicago and Rock Island railroad has its western terminus in this county. Capital, Rock Island City. Population, 6937.

ROCK ISLAND, a post-office of Austin co., Texas.

ROCK ISLAND, a post-office of Warren co., Tennessee.

ROCK ISLAND CITY, capital of Rock Island county, Illinois, on the Mississippi river, 2 miles above the mouth of Rock river, and 178 miles W. by S. from Chicago. It is situated at the foot of the upper rapids, which extend nearly 15 miles, and in low stages of water obstruct the passage of loaded vessels. The place derives its name from an island 3 miles in length, the southern extremity of which is nearly opposite the town. The main and navigable channel is on the W. side of the island, while that on the E. has been dammed so as to produce an immense water-power above, and a good harbor below. The island presents a perpendicular front of limestone 20 or 30 feet high, and is partly covered with woods, which afford an agreeable retreat in the heat of summer. Rock Island is remarkable for its flourishing manufactures, and seems destined to become one of the most considerable towns of Illinois in this respect. It is the western terminus of Chicago and Rock Island railroad, now in progress of construction. It contains a bank, and 1 or 2 newspaper offices. Population estimated at 4000.

ROCK ISLAND RAPIDS, of Illinois, extend up the Mississippi river, from the city of Rock Island, about 15 miles. See ROCK ISLAND CITY.

ROCK LAKE, Wisconsin, a small lake in the township of Lake Mills, in Jefferson county. Length, 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ miles; breadth, 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles. It derives its name from a great number of rocks along the shore, thrown up by the expansion of the ice in winter into a ridge, which is in many places several feet high.

ROCKLAND, a county in the S. E. part of New York, has an area of about 470 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Hudson river, and on the S. W. by New Jersey, and is principally watered by the Hackensack and Passaic rivers, which afford some water-power. It contains several small ponds well stocked with fish. The surface is uneven, and in some parts mountainous, on account of the elevated range called the Highlands, passing through the county. The soil of the valleys is rich and productive, and on the uplands often fertile and well adapted to grazing. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 73,628 bushels of corn; 39,844 of oats; 46,570 of potatoes; 11,712 tons of hay, and 219,283 pounds of butter. There were 21 flour mills, 2 hardware manufactories, 3 iron forges, 2 cotton and 3 carpet factories, 1 calico-printing establishment, and 2 car manufactories. It contained 35 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 2742 pupils attending public schools, and 207 attending academies and other schools. Iron ore and sandstone are abundant in the county. The Hudson river is navigable for ships along its entire border. The New York and Erie railroad passes through the western part of the county. Organized in 1798, having previously formed part of Orange county. Capital, Clarkstown. Population, 16,962.

ROCKLAND, (formerly East Thomaston,) a flourishing post-village of Lincoln county, Maine, 40 miles S. E. from Augusta. It has an excellent harbor, and is noted for a superior quality of lime which is obtained in vast quantities from quarries in the vicinity.

About half a million casks are exported annually, chiefly in vessels owned in the place. The village contains 3 banks and 1 newspaper office. Steamboats plying between Boston and Bangor touch at its wharves. Incorporated in 1848, and includes the peninsula of Owl's Head. Population of the township, 5052.

ROCKLAND, a post-township forming the N. extremity of Sullivan co., New York. Population, 1175.

ROCKLAND, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, about 14 miles E. by N. from Reading. Population, 1369.

ROCKLAND, a post-township of Venango co., Pennsylvania, on the left side of the Alleghany river, 12 miles S. E. from Franklin. Population, 1409.

ROCKLAND LAKE, of Rockland co., New York, about 30 miles N. from New York. It is 4 or 5 miles in circumference. Its waters are very pure, and it furnishes large supplies of the finest ice to New York city.

ROCKLAND LAKE, a post-office of Rockland co., New York.

ROCKLAND MILLS, a post-office of Augusta co., Virginia.

ROCK MILLS, a post-office of Rappahannock co., Virginia.

ROCK MILLS, a post-village of Anderson district, South Carolina.

ROCK MILLS, a post-office of Hancock co., Georgia.

ROCK MILLS, a post-office of Randolph co., Alabama.

ROCK MOUNTAIN. See STONE MOUNTAIN.

ROCKPOINT, a post-office of Independence co., Arkansas.

ROCKPORT, a post-office of Waldo co., Me.

ROCKPORT, a post-village of Essex county, Massachusetts, 32 miles N. E. from Boston. It contains several churches, and a bank with a capital of $100,000. The fisheries are carried on to some extent. The township, which until 1839 was a part of Gloucester, abounds with quarries of fine granite. Population of the township, 3274.

ROCKPORT, a post-office of Carbon co., Pa.

ROCKPORT, a small village of Attala co., Mississippi.

ROCKPORT, a post-village, capital of Hot Spring county, Arkansas, on the Washita river, about 50 miles W. S. W. from Little Rock, and at the head of navigation. A well-built lattice bridge, 300 feet long, has been thrown across the river here, at a cost of $20,000.

ROCKPORT, a small village of Allen co., Ohio, 10 miles N. N. E. from Lima.

ROCKPORT, a post-township of Cuyahoga co., Ohio, bordering on Lake Erie. Pop., 1441.

ROCKPORT, a village and station in the above township, on the Cleveland and Columbus railroad, 7 miles S. W. from Cleveland.

ROCKPORT, a post-village, capital of Spencer county, Indiana, is situated on a high bluff of the Ohio river, 50 miles above Evansville. The name was derived from a hanging rock, known as Lady Washington's rock. Rockport has 1 or 2 churches, a county seminary, and a newspaper office. Population in 1853, estimated at 800.

ROCKPORT, a post-village of Pike co., Illinois, on Snycartee Slough, a side-channel of the Mississippi river, 80 miles W. by S. from Springfield.

ROCK PRAIRIE, a post-office of Dade co., Mo.

ROCK PRAIRIE, a small post-village of Rock co., Wis., about 8 miles E. from Janesville.

ROCK QUARRY, a post-office of Pope co., Illinois, 25 miles S. W. from Shawneetown.

ROCK RIFT, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

ROCK RIVER, of Wisconsin and Illinois, rises in Fond du Lac county, of the former state, 8 or 10 miles S. from Lake Winnebago, and flowing first southward and afterwards southwestward, it enters the State of Illinois at Beloit, and falls into the Mississippi a little below the town of Rock Island. Its whole length is estimated at about 330 miles. The current is obstructed by rapids in several places, but it might be made navigable at a moderate expense. Small steamboats have ascended as far as Jefferson, Wisconsin, 225 miles. The river passes by the towns of Janesville, Beloit, Rockford, and Dixon, and flows through a valley, or, to speak more properly, an extensive plain, which is noted for its fertility and beautiful scenery. The whole descent of the current is ascertained to be about 379 feet.

ROCK RIVER, a post-office of Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin.

ROCKROE, a township in Monroe co., Arkansas. Population, 312.

ROCK RUN, a post-office of Harford co., Md.

ROCK RUN, a post-township in Stephenson co., Illinois. Population, 1037.

ROCK RUN, a small village of Will co., Ill.

ROCKSBURG, a post-office of Warren co., N. J.

ROCKSFORD, a post-office of Tuscarawas co., Ohio.

ROCK SPRING, a post-office of Orange co., North Carolina.

ROCK SPRING, a post-office of Walker co., Ga.

ROCK SPRINGS, a post-office of Cecil co., Md.

ROCK STREAM, a post-village of Yates co., New York, on the Canandaigua and Elmira railroad, 27 miles N. from Elmira.

ROCKTON. See LITTLE FALLS.

ROCKTON, a post-township in Winnebago co., Illinois. Population, 1010.

ROCKTON, a flourishing post-village in the above township, on Rock river, 16 miles N. from Rockford. The water-power of Rock river gives motion to a large flouring mill, 1 paper mill, and other machinery. Population, about 600.

ROCKTOWN, a small village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, about 7 miles S. from Flemington.

ROCKVALE, a post-office of Grant co., Wis.
 ROCK VALLEY, a post-office of Hampden co., Massachusetts.

ROCK VALLEY, a post-office of Marshall co., Virginia.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village in Norfolk co., Massachusetts, 26 miles S. from Boston.

ROCKVILLE, a post-office of Washington co., Rhode Island.

ROCKVILLE, a flourishing post-village in Vernon township, Tolland co., Connecticut, on Hockanum river, about 12 miles N. E. from Hartford. It contains 4 churches, 7 stores, and 2 excellent academies. Capital invested in woollen and cotton manufactures, $500,000.

ROCKVILLE, a post-office of Alleghany co., New York.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village of Chester co., Pa., 53 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village, capital of Montgomery co., Maryland, 16 miles N. N. W. from Washington City. It contains a court house, jail, and several stores. A newspaper is published here.

ROCKVILLE, a post-office of Hanover co., Va.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village in Rowan co., North Carolina.

ROCKVILLE, a post-office of Lexington district, South Carolina.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village of Putnam co., Georgia, 11 miles E. from Eatonton. It has 1 church and 2 stores.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., Tennessee, 164 miles E. S. E. from Nashville.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village of Adams co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, about 90 miles above Cincinnati. It has mills for sawing stone, which is quarried in the vicinity.

ROCKVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Parke co., Indiana, is pleasantly situated on the plank-road from Indianapolis to Springfield, Illinois, 60 miles W. from the former and on the Indiana and Illinois Central railroad, (unfinished.) It is surrounded by a rich farming district, which contains extensive beds of coal. It has several churches, 2 seminaries, and 2 newspaper offices. Pop. in 1853, 1500.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village of Will co., Ill., on the Kankakee, 162 miles N. E. of Springfield.

ROCKVILLE, a post-village in Delaware co., Iowa, 60 miles N. N. E. from Iowa City.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, a post-office of Queen's co., New York.

ROCKWELL, a post-office of Pickens dis., S. C.

ROCKWELL, a post-village of Bond co., Ill., on the W. branch of Shoal creek, 70 miles S. from Springfield, has 2 newspaper offices.

ROCKWOOD, a post-office of Fulton co., N. Y.

ROCKY BAYOU, a post-township in Izard co., Arkansas. Population, 587.

ROCKY BAYOU, a post-village of Izard co., Arkansas, about 10 miles E. from Mount Olive.

ROCKY BRANCH, a post-office of Greenup co., Kentucky.

ROCKY COMFORT, a post-office of Sevier co., Arkansas.

ROCKY COMFORT CREEK, of Georgia, flows into the Ogeechee river near Louisville.

ROCKY CREEK, of Chester district, South Carolina, enters the Wateree river, on the right, near Rocky Mount.

ROCKY CREEK, of Tatnall co., Georgia, flows into Ohoopsee river.

ROCKY CREEK, a post-office of Iredell co., North Carolina.

ROCKY CREEK, a post-office of Pike co., Miss.

ROCKY FORD, a post-office of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

ROCKY FORK, of Paint creek, Ohio, joins that stream on the line between Highland and Ross counties.

ROCKY GAP, a post-office of Tazewell co., Va.

ROCKY HILL, a post-township in Hartford co., Connecticut, on the W. side of the Connecticut river, 7 miles S. from Hartford. Population, 1042.

ROCKY HILL, a post-village of Somerset co., New Jersey, on the Millstone river and the Delaware and Raritan canal, 4 miles N. from Princeton, contains 2 stores, 3 mills, and about 25 dwellings.

ROCKY HILL, a post-office of Fayette co., Va.

ROCKY HILL, a post-office of Lavacca co., Texas.

ROCKY HILL, a post-office of Barren co., Ky.

ROCKY HILL, a post-office of Jackson co., O.

ROCKY MOUNT, a post-village, capital of Franklin co., Virginia, about 180 miles W. by S. from Richmond. It has several stores, and an extensive iron furnace in the vicinity. Population, about 300.

ROCKY MOUNT, a post-village in Edgecombe co., North Carolina, 56 miles E. from Raleigh.

ROCKY MOUNT, a post-village of Fairfield district, South Carolina.

ROCKY MOUNT, a post-village in Meriwether co., Georgia, 95 miles W. from Milledgeville.

ROCKY MOUNT, a post-office of Kemper co., Mississippi.

ROCKY MOUNT, a post-village of Miller co., Missouri, 30 miles S. W. from Jefferson City.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS, called also the CHIPPEWAYAN MOUNTAINS, a chain towards the western part of North America, commencing in the N. part of Mexico, near 35° 30' N. lat., a few miles S. E. of Santa Fe, and running nearly N. N. W. through the northern portion of the continent to the polar ocean. This chain, although forming a part of the vast mountain system which extends through the whole length of America, is not, as was formerly supposed, entirely continuous with the Cordilleras of Mexico. With a large part of the Rocky Mountains we are but imperfectly acquainted. The range varies from 10,000 to 14,000 feet in height; a few of the peaks however attain a much greater elevation. Mount Brown and Mount Hooper, near 53° N. lat., and between 115° and 119° W. lon., are among the highest summits of this chain that have been measured. The former is about 16,000 feet, the latter 15,690 feet high.

The Rev. Mr. Parker, however, in his "Exploring Tour beyond the Rocky Mountains," states that some of the highest mountain peaks have been found, by measurement, to be 18,000 feet above the level of the sea. Between 42° and $42^{\circ} 40'$ N. lat., and near 110° W. lon., there is a break in this great chain, called the South Pass, or Fremont's Pass, through which there is an easy road, the ascent and descent being so gradual that it is scarcely perceived.

Of the geological structure of the Rocky Mountains as yet very little is known. The highest parts visited by Fremont were composed of rocks of granite and gneiss, shooting up into sharp and jagged peaks. Volcanic rocks are known to exist in several places on the slopes or sides of these mountains. According to the most recent reports there is, between the head of Madison river and the upper waters of the Yellowstone, a volcanic region of perhaps 100 miles in extent, in which some of the volcanoes are said to be now in a state of eruption. Hot springs are found, not only in this region, but in various other places on the eastern and western declivities of the Rocky mountain range. Near $42^{\circ} 37'$ N. lat., and $111^{\circ} 45'$ W. lon., there are a number of fountains, the waters of which effervesce with the carbonic acid that they contain. From this circumstance they have received the name of "Beer, or Soda Springs." The most remarkable of these throws up a jet d'eau of about three feet high, accompanied with a subterranean noise, which, together with the rushing of the water, resembles the sound of a steamboat in motion, whence it has been termed the "Steamboat Spring." (Fremont.)

ROCKY NARROWS, a post-office of Monroe co., Ohio.

ROCKY PLAINS, a post-office of Newton co., Georgia.

ROCKY POINT, a thriving village of Monroe co., Virginia, 240 miles W. from Richmond.

ROCKY POINT, a post-office of Scott co., Va.

ROCKY POINT, a post-office of Attala co., Mississippi.

ROCKY POINT, a small post-village of Independence co., Arkansas, about 8 miles S. E. from Batesville.

ROCKY POINT MILLS, a post-office of Botsourt co., Virginia.

ROCKY RIDGE, a post-office of Anderson district, South Carolina.

ROCKY RIVER, of North Carolina, a small stream which flows through Cabarrus county, and then turning eastward, forms the boundary between Stanley and Anson, until it enters the Yadkin.

ROCKY RIVER, of Chatham co., North Carolina, enters Deep river from the north-west.

ROCKY RIVER, of South Carolina, a small stream which rises in Anderson district, and flowing southward, enters the Savannah.

ROCKY RIVER, a small stream in the E.

central part of Tennessee, forms the boundary between Warren and Van Buren counties, and enters the Caney fork of Cumberland river.

ROCKY RIVER, Ohio, a small stream which rises in Medina co., and enters Lake Erie about 10 miles W. from Cleveland.

ROCKY RIVER, of Michigan, a small stream which falls into the St. Joseph's, in St. Joseph county.

ROCKY RIVER, a post-office of Warren co., Tennessee.

ROCKY RUN, a post-office of Hancock co., Illinois.

ROCKY RUN, a post-office of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

ROCKY SPRING, a post-village of Jackson co., Ala., 188 miles N. E. from Tuscaloosa.

ROCKY SPRING, a post-village of Claiborne co., Mississippi.

ROCKY SPRING, a post-office of Granger co., Tennessee, 229 miles E. from Nashville.

ROCKY WELL, a post-office of Lexington district, South Carolina.

RODMAN, a post-village in Rodman township, Jefferson county, New York, on Sandy creek, about 10 miles S. from Watertown. It has several churches and mills. Population of the township, 1784.

RODNEY, a post-village of Jefferson co., Mississippi, on the Mississippi river, 40 miles above Natchez. It has several stores and warehouses, and a newspaper office.

RODNEY, a post-office of Gallia co., Ohio.

RODUSTER, a small village of Butler co., Kentucky.

ROESFIELD, a post-office of Catahoula parish, Louisiana.

ROGERS' BRIDGE, a post-village of Spartanburg district, South Carolina.

ROGERS' FARM, a post-village of McLane co., Illinois, 66 miles N. E. from Springfield.

ROGERS' LANDING, a small village of Perry co., Missouri.

ROGERS' STORE, a post-office of Wake co., North Carolina.

ROGERSVILLE, a post-office of Greene co., Pa.

ROGERSVILLE, a post-office of Halifax co., Va.

ROGERSVILLE, a post-village of Anderson district, South Carolina, 181 miles W. N. W. from Columbia. The name of the post-office was recently changed to Evergreen.

ROGERSVILLE, a post-village of Lauderdale co., Alabama, 24 miles E. from Florence. Population, about 300.

ROGERSVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Hawkins county, Tennessee, is situated near the Holston river, 255 miles E. from Nashville. Steamboat navigation has lately been opened on the Holston from Knoxville to Kingsport, which is above Rogersville. The village contains a bank, and a collegiate institute under the control of the Odd Fellows, having about 200 pupils. The building is 200 feet long, and 3 stories high. A newspaper is published here.

ROGERSVILLE, a small village in the S. E. part of Madison co., Kentucky.

ROGERSVILLE, a small village of Ohio co., Kentucky.

ROGERSVILLE, a post-village of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, about 90 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

ROGERSVILLE, a post-office of Henry co., Indiana.

ROHRERSVILLE, a post-village in Washington co., Maryland, 80 miles W. N. W. from Annapolis.

ROHRSBURG, a post-village of Columbia co., Pa., 88 miles N. N. E. from Harrisburg.

ROKEBY, a post-office of Morgan co., Ohio.

ROLESVILLE, a post-village in Wake co., North Carolina, 16 miles N. E. from Raleigh.

ROLLERSVILLE, a post-village of Sandusky co., Ohio, 42 miles N. from Columbus.

ROLLIN, a post-township in the N. W. part of Lenawee co., Michigan. Pop., 1080.

ROLLING FORK, a small village of Casey co., Kentucky.

ROLLING FORK, a post-office of Nelson co., Kentucky.

ROLLING PRAIRIE, a post-office of Marion co., Arkansas.

ROLLINGSFORD, a new township of Strafford county, New Hampshire, on the Salmon Falls river, and on the Boston and Maine railroad, 71 miles N. E. from Boston, contains 1 bank. The Great Falls branch railroad partly intersect it. Population, 1862.

ROLLIN'S STORE, a post-village of Moore co., North Carolina.

ROMA, a post-village and port of entry of Starr county, Texas, on the left bank of the Rio Grande, about 550 miles S. by W. from Austin City. It is the head of regular steam navigation, and contains a custom house. Population, about 300.

ROMANCE, a post-office of Bad Axe co., Wis.

ROMANSVILLE, a small village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles W. from West Chester.

ROME, a post-township of Kennebec co., Maine, 18 miles N. by W. from Augusta.

ROME, a post-borough in Rome township, and semi-capital of Oneida county, New York, on the Mohawk river, the Erie canal, and the Utica and Syracuse railroad, 109 miles W. N. W. from Albany, and 14 miles N. W. from Utica. It is the southern terminus of the Black River canal, and of a railroad leading to Watertown and Sackett's harbor. It contains, besides the county buildings, churches of several denominations, 3 banks, an United States' arsenal, 2 newspaper offices, and manufactories of cotton, iron, and other articles. Plank-roads extend from Rome to Oswego, Taberg, Madison county, and Utica. Population of the township, 7918; that of the borough in 1853 is estimated at 4000.

ROME, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, about 9 miles N. N. E. from Towanda. Population, 1308.

ROME, a small post-village in the above township, about 12 miles N. E. from Towanda.

ROME, a township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, 25 miles S. E. by S. from Erie. Population, 940.

ROME, a flourishing city, capital of Floyd county, Georgia, at the confluence of the Etowah and Oostenaule, which form the Coosa river, 170 miles N. W. from Milledgeville. It is situated on several hills, which command an extensive view of mountain scenery. Steamboats of moderate size navigate the Coosa river, and can ascend as far as this place. A branch railroad, about 20 miles long, was opened from Rome to the Western and Atlantic railroad, at Kingston, in 1847, since which event the town has rapidly increased. About 20,000 bales of cotton are shipped here annually. Rome was chosen as the county seat in 1884, and incorporated as a city in 1847. It contains 2 newspaper offices. Pop. in 1853, about 3000.

ROME, a post-office of Clark co., Ark.

ROME, a post-village of Smith co., Tennessee, on the Cumberland river, 45 miles E. from Nashville.

ROME, a post-village of Adams co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, 84 miles above Cincinnati, has an active trade in lumber. Mines of iron ore have been opened in the vicinity.

ROME, a post-township in the S. W. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio, intersected by the Grand river. Population, 744.

ROME, a small post-village of Ashtabula co., Ohio, 190 miles N. E. from Columbus.

ROME, a township in the E. part of Athens co., Ohio. Population, 1309.

ROME, a township in the S. E. part of Lawrence co., Ohio. Population, 1134.

ROME, a small village of Richland co., Ohio, 12 miles N. from Mansfield.

ROME, a flourishing village of London township, Seneca county, Ohio, 110 miles N. from Columbus. A plank-road connects it with the mouth of Sandusky river. Population, about 550.

ROME, a post-township of Lenawee co., Michigan. Population, 1525.

ROME, a pleasant post-village, capital of Perry county, Indiana, on the Ohio river, 100 miles below Louisville, and 100 miles above Evansville, has 1 bank. First settled in 1811. Pop. in 1853, about 600.

ROME, a small post-village of Jefferson co., Illinois, a few miles N. from Mount Vernon.

ROME, a village in Peoria co., Illinois, on the W. bank of Peoria Lake, 85 miles N. by E. from Springfield.

ROME, a post-village of Henry co., Iowa, on Skunk river, 36 miles W. N. W. from Burlington.

ROME, a post-village of Jefferson co., Wisconsin, on Duck creek, about 10 miles E. from Jefferson. It has 2 mills, 2 stores, and about 30 dwellings.

ROMEO, a post-village in Green co., Tenn.
 ROMEO, a thriving post-village of Macomb county, Michigan, 1 mile from the N. branch of Clinton river, and 20 miles N. W. from Mount Clemens, with which it is connected by a plank-road. It has an academy, a newspaper office, an iron foundry, and several stores. Population in 1853, about 1200.

ROMEO, a post-office of McHenry co., Ill.

ROMINE'S MILLS, a post-office of Harrison co., Virginia.

ROMNEY, a post-village, capital of Hampshire co., Virginia, on the S. branch of the Potomac, 190 miles N. W. from Richmond, contains 1 bank.

ROMNEY, a post-village of Tippecanoe co., Indiana, on the New Albany and Salem railroad, 12 miles S. from Lafayette.

ROMULUS, a post-township in the central part of Seneca co., New York, extending from Cayuga to Seneca lake. Population, 2050.

ROMULUS, a post-office of Tuscaloosa co., Alabama.

ROMULUS, a post-township in the S. part of Wayne co., Michigan. Population, 621.

ROMULUS CENTRE, a post-office of Seneca co., New York.

ROMULUSVILLE, a post-village of Seneca co., New York, 10 miles S. from Waterloo. It has 2 meeting houses, 2 stores, and about 150 inhabitants.

RONALD, a post-township in the N. E. part of Ionia co., Michigan. Population, 452.

RONALD CENTRE, a post-office of Ionia co., Michigan.

RONDO, a post-office of Lafayette co., Ark.

RONDOUT, a post-village in Kingston township, Ulster county, New York, on Rondout creek, 1 mile from its entrance into the Hudson river, 90 miles N. from New York. Large quantities of coal are received here by the Delaware and Hudson canal, which terminates about a mile below. Rondout contains several churches, two banks, and a newspaper office. Boat building is carried on here. Population estimated at 2000.

RONDOUT CREEK, in the S. E. part of New York, rises in Sullivan county, flows through Ulster co., and enters the Hudson river at Eddyville. The Delaware and Hudson canal follows the valley of this stream.

RONKONKOMA, a beautiful pond of Suffolk co., Long Island, New York, near the Long Island railroad. It is nearly circular, and one mile and a quarter in diameter.

ROOK'S CREEK, a small post-village of Livingston co., Illinois.

ROOK, a post-township of Montgomery co., New York, on the Erie canal, 40 miles W. by N. from Albany. Population, 2736.

ROOK, a township of Adams co., Indiana. Population, 1099.

ROOK, a post-village in Allen co., Indiana, on St. Mary's river, 110 miles N. E. by N. from Indianapolis.

ROOK CREEK, a post-office of Milwaukee co., Wisconsin, about 11 miles S. W. from Milwaukee.

ROOT RIVER, of Wisconsin, rises a few miles W. of Milwaukee, in Waukesha county, and after a south-easterly course of about 35 miles, enters Lake Michigan at Racine City. The rapids near this place afford a valuable water-power.

ROOTSTOWN, a post-township in the S. W. part of Portage county, Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad. Population, 1308.

ROSA TURNOUT, a railroad station in Pike county, Pennsylvania, on the New York and Erie railroad, 108 miles from New York city.

ROSBOROUGH, a small village of Lawrence co., Tennessee, 83 miles S. S. W. from Nashville, is the seat of a cotton factory.

ROSCOE, a post-office of Todd co., Ky.

ROSCOE, a flourishing post-village of Coshocton county, Ohio, on the Muskingum river, opposite Coshocton, the county seat, and 75 miles N. E. from Columbus. Grain and other articles are shipped on the Ohio canal at this place.

ROSCOE, a post-township in Winnebago co., Illinois. Population, 1050.

ROSCOE, a thriving post-village in the above township, on Rock river, 12 miles above Rockford. It has water-power, and contains a large woollen factory and several stores. Population, about 500.

ROSCOE, a small post-village of Henry co., Mo., 130 miles W. by S. from Jefferson City.

ROSCOMMON, an unorganized county in the N. central part of Michigan, contains 576 square miles. It is drained by the sources of Maskegon and Au Sable rivers. This county is not named in the census of 1850.

ROSE, a post-township of Wayne co., New York, 8 miles N. E. from Lyons. Pop., 2264.

ROSE, or ROSE VILLAGE, a thriving village in the above township, about 165 miles N. W. by W. from Albany. It contains 3 churches, 2 stores, 1 steam saw mill, 2 hotels, 1 tannery, and 2 stove factories.

ROSE, a township of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania, about 72 miles N. E. from Pittsburg, contains Brookville, the county seat.

ROSE, a post-township in the W. central part of Carroll co., Ohio. Population, 1537.

ROSE, a post-township in the N. W. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Population, 886.

ROSEBOOM, a post-office of Otsego co., N. Y.

ROSEBURG, a post-village of Perry co., Pennsylvania, 38 miles W. from Harrisburg.

ROSE CREEK, a post-office of McNairy co., Tennessee.

ROSEDALE, a post-office of Kennebec co., Me. ROSEDALE, of Ohio. See LIVERPOOL.

ROSE HILL, a post-office of Seneca co., N. Y.

ROSE HILL, a post-office of Lee co., Virginia, near 400 miles W. S. W. from Richmond.

ROSE HILL, a post-office of Amite co., Miss.

ROSE HILL, a post-office of Harris co., Tex.

ROSE HILL, a post-office of Laurel co., Ky.

ROSE HILL, a small post-village of Jasper co., Illinois, on the Embarras river, 7 miles N. by W. from Newton.

ROSE HILL, a small village of Johnson co., Missouri.

ROSE HILL, a thriving post-village of Mahaska co., Iowa, 10 miles E. N. E. from Oskaloosa.

ROSELAND, a post-office of Nelson co., Va.

ROSELAND, a post-office of Collin co., Texas.

ROSE MILLS, a post-office of Amherst co., Va.

ROSENDALE, a post-village in Rosendale township, Ulster county, New York, on Roundout creek, about 60 miles S. by W. from Albany. It contains mills for preparing hydraulic cement, which is found in the vicinity. Population of the township, 2418.

ROSENDALE, a township in the N. W. part of Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin. Pop., 714.

ROSENDALE, a post-village in the above township, 77 miles N. W. from Milwaukee. It contains 3 stores, 2 hotels, and 5 manufacturing. Population in 1853, about 200.

ROSENEATH, a post-office of Halifax co., North Carolina, 112 miles N. E. from Raleigh.

ROSE POINT, a post-office of Lawrence co., Pennsylvania.

ROSETREE, a post-office of Delaware co., Pa.

ROSEVILLE, a post-office of Franklin co., Ark.

ROSEVILLE, a post-village of Muskingum co., Ohio, 65 miles E. from Columbus.

ROSEVILLE, a post-office of Macomb co., Michigan.

ROSEVILLE, a post-village of Parke co., Indiana, on Racoon creek, 70 miles W. from Indianapolis, has a flouring mill.

ROSEVILLE, a post-office of Warren co., Ill.

ROSICLARE, a post-village of Hardin co., Illinois, about 1 mile from the Ohio river, and 22 miles S. W. from Shawneetown.

ROSLIN, a post-village in Marquette co., Wisconsin, 97 miles N. W. from Milwaukee.

ROSLYN, a post-office of Queen's co., N. Y.

ROSLYN, a post-office of Montgomery co., Md.

ROSS, a county in the S. central part of Ohio, contains 730 square miles. It is intersected by the Scioto river, and also drained by Paint creek. The surface is finely diversified by hills and valleys; the soil is rich and well cultivated. The valley of the Scioto in particular is noted for its fertility and beauty. The staples are wheat, Indian corn, and oats. In 1850 this county produced 2,840,443 bushels of corn; 141,131 of wheat, and 80,926 of oats. The quantity of corn was the greatest produced by any county in the United States excepting Sangamon county, Illinois. Many cattle are also exported. There were 7324 pupils attending public schools, and 365 attending academies or other schools. The Scioto and its affluents afford abundant motive-power. It is intersected by the Marietta and Cincinnati railroad, and by the Ohio canal. Ross county was settled in 1796, by emigrants from Virginia and Kentucky. Capital, Chillicothe. Pop., 32,074.

ROSS, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, 6 miles N. N. W. from Pittsburg. Population, 1442.

ROSS, a township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles W. N. W. from Wilkesbarre. Population, 709.

ROSS, a township forming the S. extremity of Monroe co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1373.

ROSS, a post-office of Anderson co., Tenn.

ROSS, a post-township in the S. W. part of Butler co., Ohio. Population, 1648.

ROSS, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Greene co., Ohio, and intersected by the Columbus and Xenia railroad. Pop., 1367.

ROSS, a township in the N. W. part of Jefferson co., Ohio. Population, 1144.

ROSS, a township in Clinton co., Indiana. Population, 1075.

ROSS, a township in Lake co., Indiana. Population, 747.

ROSSBURG, a small post-village of Decatur co., Ind., 55 miles S. E. from Indianapolis.

ROSS' CORNER, a post-office of York co., Me.

ROSSSEAT, a post-office of Morgan co., Ohio.

ROSS' FERRY, a post-office of Livingston co., Kentucky.

ROSS GROVE, a post-village in De Kalb co., Illinois, 70 miles W. by S. from Chicago.

ROSS HILL, a small village of Walker co., Georgia.

ROSSIE, a post-village in Rossie township, St. Lawrence co., New York, on Indian river, 25 miles S. S. W. from Ogdensburg. It contains establishments for smelting and forging iron, and a machine shop. Mines of iron and lead are worked here. Population of the township, 1471.

ROSSLAND, a post-office of Monroe co., Pa.

ROSSTOWN, a post-office of Shelby co., Tenn.

ROSSVILLE, a post-village of Richmond co., New York, on Staten Island sound, about 20 miles S. W. from New York.

ROSSVILLE, a small post-village of York co., Pennsylvania, 14 miles N. W. from York.

ROSSVILLE, a post-village in Baltimore co., Maryland.

ROSSVILLE, a post-office of Chester dis., S. C.

ROSSVILLE, a post-village in Walker co., Ga., about 200 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

ROSSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Butler co., Ohio, on the W. bank of Miami river, and on the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton railroad, 20 miles N. from Cincinnati. A bridge across the river connects it with Hamilton, the capital of the county. It is situated in a rich farming district, and has abundant water-power, which is employed in machinery for various purposes. A railroad has recently been opened from this place to Eaton, and is to be extended to Richmond, in Indiana. A newspaper is published here. Population in 1853, about 2500.

ROSSVILLE, a small village of Miami co., Ohio, on the Miami river, opposite Piqua.

ROSSVILLE, a post-township in Clinton co., Indiana. Population, 160.

ROSSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Clinton co., Indiana, on Middle fork of Wildcat river, 53 miles N. W. from Indianapolis.

ROSTRAVER, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1689.

ROSWELL, a post-village of Cobb co., Georgia, on Vickery's creek, 13 miles N. E. from Marietta. Here is a cotton factory which employs 150 operatives.

ROTHERWOOD, a post-office of Watauga co., North Carolina.

ROTHERWOOD, a post-office of Carroll co., Georgia, about 130 miles W. by N. from Milledgeville.

ROTHSVILLE, a small post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

ROTHWICK'S MILLS, a small village of Mifflin co., Pennsylvania.

ROTTERDAM, a post-township of Schenectady co., New York, on the Mohawk river, 20 miles N. W. from Albany. Pop., 2446.

ROUGE BAYOU, of Louisiana, traverses parts of Avoyelles and St. Landry parishes, and communicates with Atchafalaya bayou.

ROUGE RIVER, of Michigan, is formed by three branches, the N., W., and S., which rise in Oakland and Washtenaw counties, and unite about 10 miles W. from Detroit. The river then flows into the Detroit river, 5 miles below the city just named. It is navigable for small vessels to Dearbornville about 10 miles.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-office of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-village of Fayette co., Georgia, on the Macon and Western railroad, 11 miles S. from Atlanta.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-office of Chambers co., Alabama.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-office of Warren co., Tennessee.

ROUGH AND READY, a small post-village of Anderson co., Kentucky, on the turnpike from Louisville to Crab Orchard.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-village of Hancock co., Ill., 33 miles N. E. from Quincy.

ROUGH AND READY, a post-town of Nevada co., California. Pop. in 1853 about 800.

ROUGH AND READY MILLS, a post-office of Henry co., Virginia.

ROUGH CREEK, in the W. part of Kentucky, rises near the boundary between Hardin and Grayson counties, and flowing in a direction W. by S., enters Green river on the boundary between Ohio and Daviess counties. Length, about 100 miles.

ROUGH CREEK, a post-village of Charlotte co., Virginia, 105 miles S. W. from Richmond.

ROUGH CREEK, a post-office of Grayson co., Kentucky.

ROULETTE, a post-township of Potter co., Pennsylvania, about 8 miles W. from Coudersport. Population, 222.

ROUNDABOUT BAYOU, of Louisiana, traverses Madison parish a few miles W. from the Mississippi, with which it communicates in high water. It is connected towards the S. with Bayou Vidal.

ROUND BOTTOM, a post-office of Wayne co., Virginia.

ROUND GROVE, a small post-village of Carroll co., Missouri.

ROUND GROVE, a township in Marion co., Missouri. Population, 1107.

ROUNDHEAD, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Hardin co., O. Pop., 655.

ROUNDHEAD, a small post-village in the above township, 14 miles S. W. from Kenton. Population, about 200.

ROUND HILL, a post-village in Fairfield co., Ct., 50 miles S. W. by W. from New Haven.

ROUND HILL, a post-office of Orange co., North Carolina.

ROUND HILL, a post-office of Lumpkin co., Georgia.

ROUND HILL, a post-office of Tallapoosa co., Alabama.

ROUND HILL, a post-office of Cooper co., Mo.

ROUND LAKE, a small lake in Hamilton co., New York, has its outlet into Lake Pleasant.

ROUND POND, a post-office of Lincoln co., Me.

ROUND POND, a small village of Wayne co., Mississippi.

ROUND POND, a township in Independence co., Arkansas. Population, 346.

ROUND PRAIRIE, a small village of Shelby co., Illinois.

ROUND PRAIRIE, a small village of Andrew co., Missouri.

ROUND PRAIRIE, a post-village of Dallas co., Mo., 82 miles S. W. from Jefferson City.

ROUND PRAIRIE, a small village of Badaxe co., Wisconsin.

ROUND TOP, a post-office of Fayette co., Tex.

ROUSE'S POINT, a flourishing post-village of Clinton co., New York, at the head of Lake Champlain, in the extreme north-eastern corner of the state. The Vermont Central, the Northern, and the Champlain and St. Lawrence railroads all meet at this point. The cars of the former road here cross the lake by a bridge upwards of 5000 feet long, the centre of which, about 200 feet in length, consists of a species of boat or floating bridge, so arranged that the passing of the cars is not affected by any rise or fall in the water. Except while the cars are crossing, it is kept open or swung round, so as not to interrupt navigation on the lake. The cost of the bridge, independent of the floating portion, was about $300,000. The depôt in which all these roads terminate is an immense building, the upper part of which is occupied as a hotel. It stands mostly over the lake.

ROUSSEAU, a post-village of Morgan co., Ohio, 35 miles S. from Zanesville.

ROVER, a post-office of Bedford co., Tenn.

ROWAN, a county in the W. central part of North Carolina; area, estimated at 600 square miles. The Yadkin river forms the boundary on the E., and South Yadkin on the N. The surface is hilly; the soil is generally fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 86,613 bushels of wheat; 540,637 of corn, and 141,482 of oats. There were 28 corn and flour mills, 25 saw mills, 1 cotton and 1 woollen factory, and 7 tanneries. It contained 32 churches, 1 newspaper office, 2362 pupils attending public schools, and 40 attending an academy. The Yadkin furnishes extensive motive-power on the border of the county. The Western turnpike, now in progress, extends from Salisbury westward to Georgia, and the route of the Central railroad of North Carolina passes through the county. The S. part of the county is comprised in the gold region. Formed in 1753. Capital, Salisbury. Population, 13,870, of whom 10,016 were free, and 3854, slaves.

ROWANTEE, a post-office of Dinwiddie co., Va.

ROWE, a post-village in Franklin co., Mass., 108 miles N. W. from Boston, contains 3 or 4 churches. Population of the township, 659.

ROWENA, a post-office of Russell co., Ky.

ROWESVILLE, a post-village of Bedford co., Tenn., 68 miles S. by E. from Nashville.

ROWLAND'S SPRINGS, a fashionable watering-place of Cass county, Georgia, situated 56 miles N. W. from Atlanta, and 6 miles from the Western and Atlantic railroad.

ROWLANDSVILLE, a post-village in Cecil co., Maryland, 73 miles N. E. from Annapolis.

ROWLANDSVILLE, a post-office of Stanley co., North Carolina.

ROWLESBURG, a village and station of Preston county, Virginia, is finely situated on the Cheat river, where it is crossed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, 126 miles from Wheeling. The river is navigable 40 miles above this village, and it also affords abundant water-power.

ROWLEY, a post-village in Essex co., Massachusetts, on the Eastern railroad, 29 miles N. N. E. from Boston, contains several churches. Pop. of the township, 1075.

ROW'S or ROWSBURG, a post-village of Ashland co., Ohio, 94 miles N. N. E. from Columbus, contains about 50 houses.

ROXAN, a post-office of Woodford co., Ill.

ROXANA, a post-office of Eaton co., Mich.

ROXBOROUGH township, of Philadelphia co., Pennsylvania, about 7 miles N. by W. from Philadelphia. Population, 2660.

ROXBOROUGH, a post-village, capital of Person co., North Carolina, is near the source of Neuse river, 60 miles N. N. W. from Raleigh. It contains a court house, a jail, a few stores, and about 350 inhabitants.

ROXBURY, a post-township in Oxford co., Maine, 44 miles N. W. by W. from Augusta. Population, 246.

ROXBURY, a post-township in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, 37 miles S. W. from Concord. Population, 260.

ROXBURY, a post-village in Washington co., Vermont, on the Vermont Central railroad, 17 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population of the township, 967.

ROXBURY, a beautiful city of Norfolk county, Massachusetts, 3 miles S. from Boston, with which it is connected by what is termed "Boston Neck." Leading over this neck are three broad avenues, which are traversed by numerous lines of stages plying between the two cities. Much of the site now occupied by Roxbury was originally rocky and very irregular, but of late has been greatly improved. Portions of it are quite elevated, affording fine views of Boston and the surrounding scenery. It would perhaps be difficult to find concentrated in any city of equal extent such a diversity of surface, or so many elements of the picturesque. The private edifices, all of which are neat, and some very elegant, are, for the most part, enclosed by spacious grounds adorned with flower gardens and a profusion of shrubbery; indeed, few places have been more improved by the horticulturist. For several years past the city has been very flourishing, owing in part to its having become a favorite place of residence to persons doing business in Boston. Its wealth and interests are closely connected with that city, and it might with propriety, perhaps, be regarded as a suburb of the metropolis. It has, however, considerable trade of its own, and is also extensively engaged in manufacturing. The most important articles produced are steam engines, steam boilers, fire engines, iron castings, chemical preparations, carpetings, various kinds of fringe, tassels, cordage, leather, &c. It has 2 banks, with a circulation of $160,000, and 20,000 of specie; a savings' institution, and 2 insurance companies. Three newspapers are published here. A beautiful burial place, called the Forest Hills Cemetery, has recently been laid out on the Dedham turnpike, a short distance back of the city. It comprises an area of about 70 acres, diversified with nearly every variety of surface, and variously adorned with winding pathways, plants, shrubbery, &c. The entrance to the grounds is by a fine Egyptian gateway. Boston and Roxbury were both incorporated the same year, 1630. The latter was chartered as a city in 1846. Population in 1790, 2226; 1810, 3669; 1830, 5247; 1840, 9089; 1850, 13,273, and in 1853, about 22,000.

ROXBURY, a post-village in Litchfield co., Connecticut, about 35 miles S. W. by W. from Hartford, contains 2 or 3 churches. Population of the township, 1114.

ROXBURY, a post-township forming the E. extremity of Delaware co., New York. Population, 2853.

ROXBURY, a post-township of Morris co., New Jersey, 47 miles N. from Trenton. Population, 2269.

ROXBURY, a village of Warren co., New Jersey, 4 miles S. from Belvidere, contains 3 mills and a foundry.

ROXBURY, a post-village of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, 14 miles N. from Chambersburg. Population, near 200.

ROXBURY, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Washington co., Ohio. Pop., 1093.

ROXBURY, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Dane co., Wis. Pop., 274.

ROXO, a post-village in Marquette co., Wisconsin, 79 miles N. W. from Milwaukee.

ROXOBEL, a post-office of Bertie co., N. C.

ROYAL, a township in White co., Arkansas. Population, 224.

ROYAL CENTRE, a post-village of Cass co., Indiana.

ROYAL OAK, a post-office of Talbot co., Md.

ROYAL OAK, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Oakland co., Michigan, and intersected by the Michigan Southern railroad. Population, 1092.

ROYAL OAK, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the railroad from Detroit to Pontiac, 12 miles N. W. from the former. It has a steam saw mill, and several stores.

ROYAL OAKS, a post-office of Cumberland co., Virginia.

ROYALSTON, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, on the Vermont and Massachusetts railroad, 65 miles W. N. W. from Boston. Population of the township, 1546.

ROYALTON, a post-village in Windsor co., Vermont, on White river, and on the Vermont Central railroad, 34 miles S. from Montpelier, contains 1 or 2 churches, and an academy. Population of township, 1850.

ROYALTON, a post-township in the S. E. part of Niagara co., New York, intersected by the Erie canal. Population, 4024.

ROYALTON, a township in the S. W. part of Cuyahoga co., Ohio. Population, 1253.

ROYALTON, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, about 24 miles S. E. from Columbus. Population in 1853, about 400.

ROYALTON, a township in the N. part of Fulton co., Ohio. Population, 570.

ROYALTON, a post-township in the W. part of Berrien co., Michigan.

ROYALTON, a post-village of Boone co., Indiana, 14 miles N. W. from Indianapolis.

ROYER'S FORD, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

ROYSTON, a small village of Randolph co., Indiana, on the railroad from Bellefontaine to Indianapolis, 70 miles N. E. from the latter. Laid out in 1850.

ROYTON, a post-office of Delaware co., Ind.

RUARK, a small post-village of Lawrence co., Illinois.

RUBICON, a small river of Wisconsin, rises in Washington co., and enters Rock river in Dodge county.

RUBICON, a post-township in the S. E. part of Dodge co., Wisconsin. Population, 827.

RUCKER'S REPOSE, a post-office of Bath co., Virginia.

RUCKERSVILLE, a post-village of Greene co., Virginia.

RUCKERSVILLE, a post-village of Elbert co., Georgia, 97 miles N. by E. from Milledgeville.

RUCKERSVILLE, a post-village of Tippah co., Mississippi, 230 miles N. from Jackson, contains 2 or 3 stores.

RUCKERVILLE, a post-office of Clark co., Ky.

RUCKMANVILLE, a post-office of Highland co., Virginia.

RUDELL, a township in Independence co., Arkansas. Population, 1174.

RUDELL'S MILLS, a post-village of Bourbon co., Kentucky, on Hinkston creek, 42 miles E. from Frankfort. It contains 2 churches and several stores.

RUDE'S MILLS, a post-office of Lewis co., Va.

RUGGLES, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Ashland co., Ohio. Pop., 1168.

RUMA, a post-village of Randolph co., Illinois, 14 miles N. from Kaskaskia.

RUMFORD, a post-township in Oxford co., Maine, 35 miles W. N. W. from Augusta, intersected by Androscoggin river. Pop., 1375.

RUMFORD CENTRE, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

RUMFORD POINT, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

RUMLEY, a township in the N. E. part of Harrison co., Ohio. Population, 1088.

RUMMERFIELD CREEK, a post-office of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

RUMNEY, a post-village in Grafton co., New Hampshire, on the Boston, Concord, and Montreal railroad, 59 miles N. N. W. from Concord. Pop. of the township, 1109.

RUMSEY, a post-village of Muhlenburg co., Kentucky, on Green river, about 160 miles in a direct line S. W. from Frankfort. It has 1 church, several stores, 2 saw mills, and 2 grist mills. Population, about 500.

RUNAWAY CREEK, of Mississippi and Alabama. See NOXTREE RIVER.

RUNDELL'S, a post-office of Crawford co., Pa.

RUNNING WATER RIVER, of Missouri Territory, rises in the Black Hills, and flowing at first south-easterly and then easterly, falls into the Missouri river in about 42° 40' N. lat., and 98° 30' W. lon.

RUPERT, a post-village in Bennington co., Vermont, on the Rutland and Washington railroad, 86 miles S. W. from Montpelier. Population of the township, 1101.

RURAL, a small post-village of Clermont co., Ohio, on the Ohio river.

RURAL, a post-office of Jasper co., Mo.

RURAL HALL, a post-office of Forsyth co., North Carolina.

RURAL HILL, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

RURAL HILL, a post-office of Conecuh co., Alabama.

RURAL HILL, a post-office of Wilson co., Tenn.

RURAL RETREAT, a post-office of Wythe co., Virginia.

RURALVALE, a post-office of Whitefield co., Ga.

RURALVALE, a post-office of Lapeer co., Mich.
RURAL VALLEY, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

RURAL VILLAGE, a post-village of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania, 12 or 13 miles E. from Kittanning.

RUSCOMB MANOR, a township of Berks co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. E. from Reading. Population, 1235.

RUSH, a county in the S. E. central part of Indiana, contains 410 square miles. It is drained by Blue river and Flat Rock creek. The surface is level, or gently undulating, and the soil is uniformly fertile. In a state of nature the county was occupied by dense forests. The staples are wheat, Indian corn, oats, and tobacco. In 1850 this county produced 1,685,994 bushels of corn; 133,473 of wheat; 64,203 of oats, and 6520 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons of hay. The quantity of corn was the greatest produced by any county in the state except Tippecanoe. It contained in that year 63 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 1376 pupils attending public schools, and 53 attending an academy. The streams afford considerable motive-power. Three railroads meet at Rushville in this county. Organized in 1822, and named in honor of Dr. Benjamin Rush, of Pennsylvania. Capital, Rushville. Population, 16,445.

RUSH, a post-township in the S. part of Monroe co., New York, on Genesee river. Population, 2015.

RUSH, a post-village in the above township, on Honeoye creek, 12 miles S. by W. from Rochester.

RUSH, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Centre co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 371.

RUSH, a township of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles N. E. from Harrisburg. Population, 325.

RUSH, a township of Northumberland co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles E. by N. from Sunbury. Population, 1178.

RUSH, a township of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, 39 miles N. from Reading. Population, 670.

RUSH, a post-township of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania, about 11 miles S. by W. from Montrose.

RUSH, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Champaign co., Ohio. Pop., 893.

RUSH, a post-township in the S. E. part of Tuscarawas co., Ohio. Population, 1373.

RUSH, a post-office of Shiawassee co., Mich.

RUSH, a post-village in Jo Daviess co., Illinois, 150 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

RUSH, a township in Buchanan co., Missouri. Population, 557.

RUSHAWAY, a post-office of Menard co., Ill.

RUSHBOTTOM, a post-office of Holt co., Mo.

RUSH CREEK, of Fairfield county, Ohio, flows into the Hockhocking river, below Lancaster.

RUSH CREEK, Ohio, an affluent of Scioto river, which it enters in Marion county.

RUSH CREEK, a township in the E. part of Fairfield co., Ohio. Population, 1218.

RUSH CREEK, a post-township in the N. E. part of Logan co., Ohio. Population, 1458.

RUSH CREEK, a post-office of Union co., O.

RUSHFORD, a post-village in Rushford township, Allegheny co., New York, about 50 miles S. E. from Buffalo. It contains several churches and mills. Population of the township, 1816; of the village, estimated at 850.

RUSHFORD, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Winnebago co., Wisconsin. Population, 514.

RUSH LAKE, Wisconsin, near the S. W. extremity of Winnebago county, in Rushford township, is about 5 miles long and 2 wide.

RUSH LAKE, a post-office of Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin.

RUSH RIVER, of Wisconsin, a small stream which rises in St. Croix co., and flows southward into Lake Pepin.

RUSH RIVER, a post-township in the S. part of St. Croix co., Wisconsin.

RUSHSYLVANIA, or RUSHYLVANIA, a small post-village of Rush Creek township, Logan co., Ohio, 125 miles N. N. E. from Cincinnati, is on the Bellefontaine and Indiana railroad.

RUSH TOWER, a small village of Jefferson co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river, 36 miles S. by W. from St. Louis.

RUSHTOWN, a post-village of Northumberland co., Pa., 65 miles N. from Harrisburg.

RUSHVILLE, a post-village of Yates co., New York, on West river, 205 miles W. from Albany. It is situated on the border between Yates and Ontario counties, and contains 2 churches, 1 academy, 15 stores, and several steam mills. Population in 1853, about 1000.

RUSHVILLE, a post-village of Susquehanna co., Pa., 159 miles N. N. E. from Harrisburg.

RUSHVILLE, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, 150 miles E. N. E. from Cincinnati. The Zanesville and Cincinnati railroad passes very near it.

RUSHVILLE, a post-township in Rush co., Indiana. Population, 1598.

RUSHVILLE, a thriving town in the above township, capital of Rush co., Indiana, on Flatrock creek, and at the terminus of the Shelbyville and Rushville railroad, 40 miles E. S. E. from Indianapolis. It has an active trade, and is rapidly improving since the completion of the above-named railroad. Another railroad is in progress, which, when finished, will connect this town with Cincinnati, 70 miles distant. Rushville is noted for its fine public buildings, among which are a court house and 3 or 4 churches. Two newspapers are published here. Pop., 1500.

RUSHVILLE, a post-township in Schuyler co., Illinois. Population, 2609.

RUSHVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Schuyler county, Illinois, is pleasantly situated on the border of a prairie, 60 miles W. N. W. from Springfield, and 10 miles N. W. from the Illinois river. It is the centre of active trade. It contains 4 or 5 churches, and 1 newspaper office.

RUSHYLVANIA. See RUSHSYLVANIA.

RUSK, a county in the E. part of Texas, has an area of about 1000 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the Sabine river, and drained by the Angelina river. The surface is diversified with prairies and woodlands; the soil is productive. Cotton, Indian corn, sweet potatoes, grass, cattle, and horses are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 270,353 bushels of corn, (more than any other county in the state excepting Harrison;) 66,078 of sweet potatoes; 9260 of oats; 2659 bales of cotton; 1715 pounds of tobacco; 76,458 of butter; 4632 of wool, and 101 hogsheds of sugar. It contained 6 churches, 3 newspaper offices; 117 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending academies or other schools. Rusk county is the most populous in the state excepting Harrison. It was named in honor of General Thomas J. Rusk, United States senator from Texas. Capital, Henderson. Population, 8148, of whom 6012 were free, and 2136, slaves.

RUSK, a post-office of Surrey co., N. C.

RUSK, a thriving post-village, capital of Cherokee county, Texas, 233 miles N. E. from Austin. It is situated in a fertile farming region, and is a place of active business, containing a court house, several churches, and 1 newspaper office.

RUSK, a post-office of Haywood co., Tenn.

RUSSDALE STAND, a small village of Lauderdale co., Mississippi.

RUSSELL, a county in the S. W. part of Virginia, bordering on Kentucky, has an area of 1225 square miles. It is intersected by Clinch river, and also drained by the sources of the West fork of Sandy river. Guest's river forms part of the S. W. boundary. The Cumberland mountain forms its boundary on the N. W., and Clinch mountain extends along the S. E. border. A large portion of the county is mountainous and sterile, but the valleys contain some good land. Indian corn, oats, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 378,919 bushels of corn; 154,305 of oats, and 162,478 pounds of butter. There were 2 flour, grist, and saw mills, 5 tanneries, and 1 wool-carding mill. It contained 14 churches, 517 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending other schools. Iron ore, stone coal, and marble are found. Large quantities of maple sugar are made in the county. Named in honor of General William Russell, one of its principal citizens. Capital, Lebanon. Population, 11,919, of whom 10,937 were free, and 982, slaves.

RUSSELL, a county in the E. part of Alabama, bordering on Georgia, has an area of about 900 square miles. The Chattahoochee river forms the entire E. boundary: the county is also drained by the Uchee, Wacochee, and Cowekee creeks. The surface is uneven, and presents almost every variety of soil.

Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850, Russell county produced 21,088 bales of cotton; 683,164 bushels of corn; 181,651 of sweet potatoes; 97,450 of oats, and 119,150 pounds of rice, the greatest quantity of that article produced in any county of the state. There were 2 tanneries and 1 machine shop; 26 churches; 600 pupils attending public schools, and 163 attending academies or other schools. Steamboats navigate the river on the border. The Montgomery and West Point railroad traverses the N. W. part, and another railroad has been surveyed through the county from the river to Mobile. Formed from part of the Creek Indian territory, and organized in 1833. Capital, Crawford. Population, 19,548, of whom 8437 were free, and 11,111, slaves.

RUSSELL, a county in the S. part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 240 square miles. It is intersected by Cumberland river, navigable by keel-boats. The surface is hilly, and the land mostly too rough for cultivation, excepting the river bottoms, which are very fertile. Indian corn, tobacco, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 316,165 bushels of corn; 51,416 of oats, and 40,757 pounds of tobacco. It contained 12 churches, and 863 pupils attending public schools. The county is amply supplied with water-power. Organized in 1825, and named in honor of Colonel William Russell, a member of the Kentucky legislature. Capital, Jamestown. Population, 5349, of whom 4914 were free, and 435, slaves.

RUSSELL, a post-village in Hampden co., Massachusetts, on the Western railroad, 116 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population of the township, 521.

RUSSELL, a post-township in the central part of St. Lawrence co., New York. Population, 1818.

RUSSELL, a post-village in the above township, on Grass river, about 14 miles S. from Canton.

RUSSELL, a post-township in the W. part of Geauga co., Ohio. Population, 1083.

RUSSELL, a township in Putnam co., Indiana. Population, 1386.

RUSSELLBURG, a small post-village of Warren co., Pennsylvania, on the Conewango creek, 7 or 8 miles N. from Warren.

RUSSELL HILL, a post-office of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania.

RUSSELL PLACE, a post-office of Kershaw district, South Carolina.

RUSSELL'S, a district in Muscogee co., Georgia. Population, 1424.

RUSSELL'S CORNERS, a post-office of Sauk co., Wisconsin.

RUSSELL'S MILLS, a post-office of Tyler co., Virginia.

RUSSELL'S MILLS, a post-office of Parke co., Indiana.

RUSSELL'S PLACE, a post-office of Lawrence co., Ohio.

RUSSELLVILLE, a small post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, 65 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., Georgia, 24 miles W. from Macon.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village, capital of Franklin county, Alabama, on Cedar creek, about 220 miles N. N. W. from Montgomery. It contains a court house, a jail, and several stores.

RUSSELLVILLE, a village in Claiborne parish, Louisiana, 210 miles N. W. by N. from Baton Rouge.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-office of Pope co., Arkansas.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village of Jefferson county, Tennessee, is situated in the New Market Valley, on the route of the E. Tennessee and Virginia railroad, 230 miles E. from Nashville.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village, capital of Logan co., Kentucky, on the State road from Louisville to Nashville, 180 miles S. W. from Frankfort. It is surrounded by a beautiful and fertile country, and contains 3 churches, 1 academy, above 25 stores, 1 newspaper office, 1 oil mill, and 1 bank. Laid out in 1810. Population in 1853, about 1600.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village of Brown county, Ohio, about 100 miles S. by W. from Columbus, and 10 miles from the Ohio river. It contains seven churches.

RUSSELLVILLE, a township in Clinton co., Indiana. Population, 77.

RUSSELLVILLE, a small post-village of Putnam co., Indiana, 17 miles N. W. from Greencastle.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village of Lawrence co., Illinois, on the Wabash river.

RUSSELLVILLE, a post-village of Cole co., Missouri, 15 miles W. S. W. from Jefferson City.

RUSSELLSBURG, a post-office of Warren co., Pennsylvania.

RUSSIA, a post-village in Russia township, Herkimer co., New York, about 14 miles N. E. from Utica. Pop. of the township, 2349.

RUSSIA, a township in the W. central part of Lorain co., Ohio. Population, 2061.

RUSSIAN RIVER rises on the border between Mendocino and Sonoma counties, California, and flowing in a general southerly course, after forming the boundary between the above-mentioned counties for its whole length, falls into the Pacific in about 38° 38' N. lat.

RUSSEVILLE, a post-village of Clinton co., Indiana, on Honey creek, 18 miles N. E. from Frankfort. It contains 3 stores, 1 steam-saw mill, and 1 flouring mill. Population in 1853, 400.

RUTERSVILLE, a post-village of Fayette co., Texas, about 6 miles N. E. from the Colorado river at La Grange.

RUTHERFORD, a county in the S. W. part of North Carolina, bordering on South Carolina: area estimated at 870 square miles.

It is drained by Broad river, a branch of the Congaree. The surface is hilly or mountainous, especially near the W. border, which extends along the Blue Ridge; a part of the soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, and oats are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 472,335 bushels of corn; 29,384 of wheat, and 76,681 of oats. There were 7 corn and flour mills, 2 saw mills, and 6 tanneries. It contained 46 churches, 1 newspaper office; 4800 pupils attending public schools, and 75 attending academies or other schools. Formed in 1779, and named in honor of General Griffith Rutherford, of North Carolina. Capital, Rutherfordton. Population, 13,550; of whom 10,645 were free, and 2905, slaves.

RUTHERFORD, a county in the central part of Tennessee, has an area estimated at 600 square miles. It is intersected by Stone's river, an affluent of the Cumberland. The surface is agreeably diversified; the soil is highly productive, well watered, and extensively cultivated. Indian corn, oats, tobacco, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1,667,320 bushels of corn; 181,461 of oats; 83,123 of potatoes; 14,070 bales of cotton, and 184,536 pounds of butter. It contained 53 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 1673 pupils attending public schools, and 509 attending academies and other schools. The county is liberally supplied with water-power. It has a turnpike-road leading to Nashville, and is intersected by the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad. Rutherford is among the most populous and wealthy counties in the state. Capital, Murfreesborough. Population, 29,122; of whom 17,144 were free, and 11,978, slaves.

RUTHERFORD, a township in Martin co., Indiana. Population, 603.

RUTHERFORD, a post-office of Switzerland co., Indiana.

RUTHERFORDTON, a post-village, capital of Rutherford co., North Carolina, 216 miles W. from Raleigh. It contains a court house, an academy, a newspaper office, and several stores. Population in 1853, about 600.

RUTHERGLENN, a post-office of Caroline co., Virginia.

RUTHERVILLE, a small village of St. Lawrence co., New York, 15 miles N. of Canton.

RUTHSBURG, a small village of Queen Anne co., Maryland, 42 miles E. from Annapolis. It has 1 iron foundry.

RUTLAND, a county in the S. W. central part of Vermont, has an area of about 960 square miles. It is in part bounded on the W. by Lake Champlain, and is drained principally by Otter creek and its branches, which supply water-power for numerous mills. It contains several small lakes and ponds, among which may be mentioned Lake Austin and Bombazine lake. The surface is elevated, and in the E. part mountainous. The soil is fertile, especially along the valley of Otter creek. Potatoes, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 416,000 bushels of potatoes; 103,950 tons of hay; 1,120,814 pounds of butter; 1,930,047 of cheese, and 623,199 of wool. The quantity of wool was the greatest produced by any county in the United States, except Washington county, Pennsylvania. There were 2 cotton and 11 woollen factories, 5 foundries, 2 furnaces, 9 grist mills, 33 saw mills, 4 marble quarries, 16 marble sawing establishments, 1 iron-rolling mill, and 18 tanneries. It contained 60 churches, 4 newspaper offices; 9395 pupils attending public schools, and 1020 attending other schools. This county abounds in iron ore and excellent marble. Lake Champlain is navigable along the W. border. The railroad connecting Bellow's Falls and Burlington traverses this county, which is also partly intersected by those connecting Rutland with Troy, Saratoga, and Bennington. Organized in 1781. Capital, Rutland. Population, 33,059.

RUTLAND, a handsome post-village and seat of justice of Rutland county, Vermont, on the Otter creek, and on the line of three important railroads, viz. the Rutland and Burlington, the Rutland and Washington, and the Western Vermont railroad, 67 miles S. S. E. from Burlington, and about 55 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. It is pleasantly situated, and contains, besides the county buildings, several churches, a bank, 2 newspaper offices, a flourishing academy, a splendid railroad dépôt, and the machine shops and engine houses of the Western Vermont railroad. It is also the centre of trade to a large section of country. There are in the township 5 churches, 23 stores, and 16 manufactories and mills, one of which, for the sawing of marble, is very extensive, and propelled by steam. Three new villages have sprung up in the township since 1846. Population in 1840, 2708; 1850, 3715.

RUTLAND, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 50 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population, 1223.

RUTLAND, a post-township of Jefferson co., New York, 8 miles S. E. from Watertown. Population, 2265.

RUTLAND, a post-township of Tioga co., Pennsylvania, 20 miles E. N. E. from Wellsborough. Population, 1006.

RUTLAND, a post-office of Harrison co., Ky.

RUTLAND, a post-township in the central part of Meigs co., Ohio. Population, 1748.

RUTLAND, a post-village in the above township, on Leading creek, about 95 miles S. E. from Columbus.

RUTLAND, a township in the N. W. part of Barry co., Michigan. Population, 177.

RUTLAND, a township in Kane co., Illinois. Population, 2359.

RUTLAND, a post-township in the S. E. part of Dane co., Wisconsin. Population, 759.

RUTLEDGE, a village in the W. part of Cataugaus co., New York.

RUTLEDGE, a post-village, capital of Gran- ger co., Tennessee, in Richland valley, near the foot of Clinch mountain, 216 miles E. from Nashville. It contains an academy. The valley is fertile, and the mountain contains abundance of iron and other ores.

RUTLEDGE, a small post-village, capital of McDonald co., Missouri, on Elk river, 225 miles S. W. from Jefferson City.

RYAN'S STORE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Tennessee.

RYANSVILLE, a small village of Tioga co., Pa.

RYAN'S WELL, a post-office of Itawamba co., Mississippi.

RYE, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, on the Atlantic coast, 47 miles E. S. E. from Concord. Pop., 1295.

RYE, a post-village in Rye township, West- chester co., New York, on the New York and New Haven railroad, 27 miles N. E. from New York. It contains 3 churches. Population of the township, 2584.

RYE, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Perry co., Pennsylvania, on the right side of the Susquehanna river, intersected by the Pennsylvania railroad. Population, 696.

RYE COVE, a post-office of Scott co., Va.

RYEGATE, a post-village in Caledonia co., Vermont, on the Connecticut and Passumpsic Rivers railroad, 23 miles E. by S. from Montpelier. Population of the township, 1606.

RYERSON'S, a village of Passaic co., New Jersey, on the Pequannock river, about 9 miles N. W. from Paterson, contains 2 stores, a furnace, 3 mills, a church, and an academy.

RYERSON'S STATION, a small village of Greene co., Pennsylvania.

RYE VALLEY, a post-office of Smyth co., Va.

RYLAND'S DEPÔT, a post-office of Greenville co., Virginia.

S

SABATUS, a post-office of Lincoln co., Me.

SABBATH REST, a post-office of Blair co., Pa.

SABILLSVILLE, a post-village in Frederick co., Maryland, 95 miles N. W. from Annapolis.

SABINA, a small post-village of Clinton co., Ohio, 62 miles S. W. from Columbus.

SABINA, a village in the interior of the Ter- ritory of New Mexico, near the right bank of the Rio del Norte.

SABINE (sâ-been') river rises in Hunt co., Texas, and flows in a E. S. E. direction, until it strikes the E. boundary of the state. From this point it passes a general southerly course, forming the boundary between Texas and Louisiana, and pursues through Sabine lake into the Gulf of Mexico. The whole length is estimated at 500 miles. It is said to be very shallow at its mouth, but is navigable by small boats in high water in some parts of its course.

SABINE, a parish in the W. part of Louisiana, bordering on Texas, has an area of about 1300 square miles. The Sabine river forms the entire W. boundary. The surface is nearly level, and is mostly occupied by prairies. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1107 bales of cotton; 89,514 bushels of corn, and 43,622 of sweet potatoes. It contained 1 saw and planing mill, and 1 tannery; 6 churches, and 1051 pupils attending public schools. Seat of justice, Manny. Population, 4515; of whom 3347 were free, and 1168, slaves.

SABINE, a county in the E. part of Texas, bordering on the Sabine river, which separates it from Louisiana; area, about 600 square miles. It is drained by Patroon and Palo Gucho bayous. The soil is mostly very fertile, producing cotton and Indian corn, which are exported by steamboats on the Sabine river during high water. In 1850 it produced 752 bales of cotton; 61,619 bushels of corn; 19,920 of sweet potatoes, and 13 hogs-heads of sugar. It contained 4 churches, and 92 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Milan. Population, 2499; of whom 1556 were free, and 943, slaves.

SABINE, a township in Washtenaw co., Michigan. Population, 1631.

SABINE CITY, a small post-village of Jefferson co., Texas, at the outlet of Sabine lake, about 75 miles E. N. E. from Galveston.

SABINE LAKE is an expansion of Sabine river, about 5 miles from its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, at the S. W. extremity of Louisiana. Length, about 18 miles; greatest breadth, about 9 miles.

SABINETOWN, a post-village of Sabine co., Texas, on the river of the same name, 10 miles E. from Milan. It is the principal shipping point for the cotton raised in the county.

SABINO, a village on the left bank of the Rio del Norte, in the interior of New Mexico.

SABINSVILLE, a post-office of Tioga co., Pennsylvania.

SABLE RIVER, of Mich. See SANDY RIVER.

SABLE RIVER, of Mich., rises in the N. part of the peninsula, and flowing in a direction E. S. E., enters the lower part of Saginaw bay.

SABOUGLY, a small post-village of Yallobusha co., Mississippi.

SABULA, a post-village of Jackson co., Io., on the Mississippi, 32 miles below Galena.

SAC, a new county in the W. N. W. part of Iowa, has an area of about 576 square miles. It is drained by the sources of Soldier and Boyer rivers, affluents of the Missouri. This county is not included in the census of 1850. The name is derived from one of the aboriginal tribes which possessed the soil.

SACARAPPA, or SACCARAPPA, a post-village in Cumberland co., Maine, on the Presumpscot river, and on the York and Cumberland railroad, about 50 miles S. W. by W. from Augusta, contains numerous saw mills and manufactories.

SACHEM'S HEAD, a noted watering place of New Haven co., Connecticut, 3 miles W. S. W. from Guilford, and 13 miles E. by S. from New Haven. In early times an Indian chief was captured here, from which circumstance the place derived its name. The New Haven and New London railroad passes about half a mile north of the hotel.

SACKETT'S, a post-office of Macomb co., Mich.

SACKETT'S HARBOR, a post-village and port of entry of Jefferson co., New York, is situated in Houndsfield township, on the S. shore of Black River bay, 10 or 12 miles E. from Lake Ontario; and about 170 miles W. N. W. from Albany. Lat. 43° 55' N., lon. 75° 57' W. It has an excellent harbor, one of the most secure on the lake, and carries on an active trade. The Sackett's Harbor and Ellisburg railroad, of which it is the northern terminus, connects it with the Central railroad. It contains 1 bank, a newspaper office, and several machine shops and mills propelled by water-power. The enrolled and licensed tonnage of this port in 1852 amounted to 7082 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons, all of which was employed in the coasting trade. The number of arrivals from foreign ports during that year was 206, (143,107 tons.) The value of imports in 1851 was \$553,927, and of exports, \$325,238. Here is a military post of the United States, named Madison Barracks, not garrisoned at present. Population, near 2000.

SACO (sau'ko) river, an important river of New England, rises among the White mountains, in Coos county, New Hampshire, and flowing through Oxford county, Maine, falls into the Atlantic ocean in Cumberland county. There are several falls on this river, the principal of which are the Great Falls, of 72 feet, and Saco Falls, at the town of Saco, about 4 miles from the ocean, where the water descends 42 feet, affording a valuable water-power. This river is subject to freshets, the ordinary rise in the spring being from 10 to 15 feet, and it has been known to rise much higher, occasioning great loss of life and property.

SACO, a thriving post-town and port of entry of York county, Maine, on the E. or left bank of the Saco river, about 6 miles from its mouth, and on the Eastern railroad, 13 miles S. W. from Portland. The industry of this place and of Biddeford, a flourishing village on the opposite side of the river, is chiefly directed to the lumber trade and to cotton manufactures, each of which employs a large amount of capital. A fall of about 42 feet in the Saco river, here furnishes excellent water-power, which is extensively used for sawing and driving machinery. There are now 10 large cotton mills in operation at these falls—5 on the Saco and 5 on the Biddeford side—containing about 55,000 spindles and 2800 looms. The York Manufacturing Company, incorporated in 1831, have a capital of \$1,500,000, and produce annually \$6,200,000 yards of cloth. The most extensive corporation, however, is the Saco Water-power Company, organized in 1839, with a capital of \$1,500,000, since increased to \$2,000,000. The operations of this company, till 1848, were confined to the erection of factories. That year they commenced the first of 4 mills, to be erected with all possible despatch, for their own use, each to be 240 feet long, 75 feet wide, and 5 stories high; the largest, probably, in the state. Their machine shop is 271 feet long, 46 wide, and 5 stories high. The Laconia Company have \$1,500,000 capital, and employ near 2000 hands. There are also various manufactories of woollen goods, hardware, &c. One of the largest foundries in the state is that of Jarvis Williams, Esq., in which upwards of 1000 tons of pig iron are annually consumed. About 5,000,000 feet of boards, shingles, laths, heading, and other kinds of lumber are annually turned out at the various saw mills here in operation. The shipping of the district, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 379 $\frac{7}{8}$ tons registered, and 1657 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 1458 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 188 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons in the mackerel fishery. The foreign arrivals for the year were 4 vessels; clearances, the same. During the period above specified, 1 ship and 1 schooner, with an aggregate burthen of 532 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons, were admeasured. There are here 3 banks—2 in Saco, and 1 in Biddeford—a savings' institution, an insurance company, 10 churches—7 in Saco, and 3 in Biddeford—3 literary associations, viz. the Mechanics' Institute, (Saco,) organized December 9, 1841, volumes in the library, 3500; the Saco Athenæum, with a library of 1000 volumes, and the York Library, also containing about 1000 volumes; a liberally endowed academy, and 3 newspaper offices—2 in Saco, and 1 in Biddeford. Since 1844 a new cemetery, called the "Laurel Hill Cemetery," has been laid out upon the Mount Auburn plan near the village of Saco. Population of Saco township in 1840, 4408; in 1850, 5794: of Biddeford in 1840, 2574; in 1850, 6095: of both villages in 1853, about 11,500.

SACOMANGO river, rises in Warren co., New York, and winding through Hamilton and Fulton counties, falls into the Hudson river, about 15 miles S. W. of Lake George.

SACRAMENTO river, one of the most important of California, rises in the N. part of the state, on the slope of a mountain ridge extending from the Coast Range north-eastward to the Sierra Nevada. It flows at first south-westerly and afterward southerly, and joins the San Joaquin at the head of Suisoon bay. Length, about 370 miles. It is navigable to near 40° 15' N. lat., or above 200 miles. The waters of this river abound in fine fish, the catching of which forms an important item of business, in which a great number of hands and boats and an immense aggregate capital are employed. The valley of the Sacramento is one of the most beautiful and fertile portions of California.

SACRAMENTO, a county in the N. central part of California, has an area of about 900 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Sacramento river, on the S. by the San Joaquin and Moquelumne rivers and Dry creek, and intersected by the American river. The soil of this county is generally fertile, and, in proportion to its size, perhaps more extensively cultivated than that of any other county in the state. Barley, wheat, potatoes, hay, cattle, horses, swine, and garden produce are the staples. In 1852 there were raised 157,071 bushels of barley; 14,290 of wheat; 28,204 of potatoes; 10,042 tons of hay; and $339,682 worth of garden products. There were 3945 cows, 3718 beef cattle, and 4617 hogs. The amount invested in quartz mining was $124,165; in placer mining, $89,808; the value of stock was $1,335,698, and the value of agricultural products, $737,643. Gold is found, but not in great abundance. Capital, Sacramento City. Pop., 12,589.

SACRAMENTO, a post-village, capital of Waushara co., Wisconsin, on Fox river, about 80 miles N. by E. from Madison. It is the principal shipping point in the county. Laid out in 1851. It contains 3 stores, 3 hotels, a warehouse, and about 250 inhabitants.

SACRAMENTO CITY, a port of entry and important commercial town in California, situated on the left bank of Sacramento river, a little below the mouth of the American river, in the midst of a level and extremely fertile country, 140 miles by water N. E. from San Francisco. It is regularly laid out, the street nearest the river being called Front street, the next Second, and so on; these are crossed by others at right angles, distinguished by the letters of the alphabet. J and K streets are the principal business streets of the city. Till within a year or two nearly all the houses were of wood, but recently a more substantial mode of building is coming into use. Since the inundations of 1849 and 1850, a good strong levee has been constructed around the town. In Sacramento and its vicinity are perhaps the finest gardens in California. As a centre of commerce, Sacramento City possesses great advantages. It is accessible for steamers and sailing vessels of a large size, at all seasons of the year; while not only the Sacramento river itself, but its important affluent, the Feather river, is navigable for small steamboats far above, into the interior of the country. These advantages have rendered this town the principal entrepôt for supplying with provisions the great mining region of the north. Five or six newspapers are issued here. Population estimated at 20,000. The recent vote polled in Sacramento was 5536—an increase of 538 on that of Nov. 2d, 1852, 10 months previous.

SAC RIVER, of Missouri, rises in Lawrence county, and flowing northward, falls into the Osage, near the middle of St. Clair county, a little above Osceola. The East fork rises in Green county, and enters the river from the right in Cedar county.

SACS (pronounced, and often written SAUKS) AND FOXES, kindred and associated tribes of Indians, formerly dwelling in the S. part of Iowa, now occupying lands in the Indian Territory.

SACTON, a post-office of Clarke co., Illinois.

SADAQUADA, or SAUQUOIT CREEK, of Oneida co., New York, enters the Mohawk river at Whitesborough.

SADDEBACK MOUNTAIN, Franklin county, Maine. Height, about 4000 feet.

SADDLE MOUNTAIN, Massachusetts, in Berkshire co., the highest mountain in the state, has an elevation of about 3500 feet.

SADDLE RIVER, of New Jersey, falls into the Passaic in Hudson county.

SADDLE RIVER, a post-township of Bergen co., New Jersey, on the left side of the Passaic river, about 70 miles N. E. by N. from Trenton. Population, 816.

SADDLE'S CREEK, a post-office of Anderson co., South Carolina.

SADLERSVILLE, a small village of Queen Anne co., Maryland.

SADSBURY, a post-township of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 19 miles W. from West Chester. Population, 2767.

SADSBURY, a township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, 12 miles S. by W. from Meadville. It is intersected by the Beaver and Erie canal. Population, 982.

SADSBURY, a township of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles S. S. E. from Lancaster. It is intersected by the Columbia railroad. Population, 1529.

SADSBURYVILLE, a small post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, on the Lancaster turnpike, 39 miles W. from Philadelphia.

SAEGERSTOWN, a post-borough of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, on French creek, 5 miles N. from Meadville. It is rapidly improving, by means of the water-power and navigation of French creek. The route of the Pittsburg and Erie railroad passes through the place. Pop. in 1853, about 500.

SAEGERSVILLE, a post-village of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, on Jordan creek, 69 miles N. N. W. from Philadelphia.

SAFE HARBOUR, a post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna, 10 miles S. W. from Lancaster. Here are extensive iron furnaces and rolling mills, producing railroad iron.

SAGE HILL, a post-village of Graves co., Ky.

SAGEVILLE, a post-office of Hamilton co. N. Y.

SAGEVILLE, a post-village of Lauderdale co., Mississippi.

SAGG VILLAGE, a village of Suffolk co., New York, near the sea, about 100 miles E. by N. from New York.

SAG HARBOUR, a post-village and port of entry of Suffolk county, New York, is situated in Southampton township, and on a small bay which communicates with Gardiner's and Great Peconic bays, about 100 miles E. by N. from New York. It contains 4 or 5 churches, a bank, 2 newspaper offices, and 2 windmills. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in trade and in the whale fishery. The shipping of this port, June 1852, amounted to 9292 $\frac{3}{5}$ $\frac{1}{5}$ tons registered, and 3458 $\frac{5}{5}$ $\frac{5}{5}$ enrolled and licensed—total, 13,041 $\frac{7}{5}$ $\frac{5}{5}$; of which 6042 $\frac{3}{5}$ $\frac{3}{5}$ were employed in the whale fishery, and 3432 $\frac{4}{5}$ $\frac{3}{5}$ in the coasting trade. During that year 2 ships were built, carrying 918 tons. Estimated population, 3600.

SAGINAW river, of Michigan, is formed in the county of the same name, in the E. central part of the state, by the confluence of the Flint and Shiawassee. It flows nearly N., and empties itself into the head of Saginaw bay. Its branches and tributaries, flowing from all the cardinal points, drain a large portion of the peninsula. The main stream is about 30 miles long, and its depth varies from 25 to 30 feet. Large steamers ascend this river from the lake to Saginaw City, 24 miles from its mouth.

SAGINAW, a county in the E. part of Michigan, bordering on the bay of the same name, contains about 1030 square miles. It is traversed by the Saginaw and its branches, the Flint and Shiawassee rivers. It is also drained by the Cass, Tittibawassee, and Mishtegayoc rivers, and by Beaverdam and other creeks. The surface is level and undulating; the soil is a dark sandy loam, nearly 2 feet deep. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, and potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 4420 bushels of wheat; 13,935 of corn; 4225 of oats, and 1084 tons of hay. It contained 2 churches and 1 newspaper office. Nearly all of the surface a few years ago was covered with dense forests of the pine and other trees. Pine lumber and fish are the principal exports. Water-power is abundant, and the Saginaw river is navigable for large steamboats. Capital, Saginaw City. Population, 2609.

SAGINAW, a post-township in the N. part of Saginaw co., Michigan. Population, 917.

SAGINAW BAY, of Lake Huron, the largest body of water which indents the peninsula of Michigan, is situated in the E. part of the state. It is about 60 miles in length and 30 in its greatest breadth, and affords good navigation and safe harbors for large vessels.

SAGINAW CITY, of Michigan, capital of the county of this name, is on the left bank of Saginaw river, 22 miles from its mouth, and 95 by the usual route N. N. W. of Detroit. It is elevated about 30 feet above the water, and commands a beautiful prospect of the river. It possesses advantages for commerce, as the river is large, and navigable for vessels drawing 10 feet of water. The four branches of this river, which unite 4 miles above Saginaw, converge towards this place from all the cardinal points, and afford intercourse by boats with a large portion of the state. A newspaper is published here. Founded about 1830. Pop., near 1200.

SAGO, a post-office of Lewis co., Virginia.

SAGONE, a post-office of Dupage co., Ill.

SAIL CREEK, a post-office of Hamilton co., Tennessee.

SAILORS' REST, a post-office of Montgomery co., Tennessee.

ST. ALBAN'S, a post-township of Somerset co., Maine, about 50 miles N. E. of Augusta. Population, 1792.

ST. ALBAN'S, a flourishing post-village and seat of justice of Franklin county, Vermont, on the Vermont Central railroad, about 3 miles E. from Lake Champlain, and 24 N. by E. from Burlington. The site is elevated, and in the centre is a handsome public square. Besides the county buildings, the village contains 3 or 4 churches, a bank, and 2 newspaper offices.

ST. ALBAN'S, a township in the W. central part of Licking co., Ohio. Pop., 1429.

ST. ALBAN'S, a post-village in Hancock co., Ill., 100 miles N. W. by W. from Springfield.

ST. ALBAN'S BAY, a post-village of Franklin co., Vermont, on Lake Champlain, about 24 miles N. from Burlington. It has a good wharf, and is a place of considerable trade.

ST. ANDREW'S, a post-office of Orange co., N. Y.

ST. ANDREW'S, a pleasant post-village of Washington co., Florida, on the bay of the same name, about 10 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, into which the bay opens. The situation is very healthy and pleasant. The bay, which is almost entirely landlocked, forms a fine harbor, with 12 feet of water over the bar. The place is frequented in summer by planters, on account of its salubrity and the beauty of the bay. The post-office is called St. Andrew's bay.

ST. ANDREW'S BAY, a bay of very irregular shape, situated in Washington co., on the S. coast of Florida. Length, near 25 miles.

ST. ANTHONY, a thriving post-town of Ramsey county, Minnesota, is finely situated on the left bank of the Mississippi river, at the Falls of St. Anthony, 8 miles by land above St. Paul. Lat. 44° 48' 40" N., lon. 93° 10' W. The Mississippi here has a perpendicular fall of about 18 feet, the first which occurs in ascending the river. The site of the village is an elevated prairie, rising by a gradual acclivity, and commanding a fine view of the falls. Situated at the head of navigation on the Mississippi, and in the immediate vicinity of an unlimited water-power, St. Anthony can scarcely fail to become an important commercial and manufacturing city. The university of Minnesota is established here. The town contains several houses of worship, from 8 to 10 stores, 2 newspaper offices, and numerous saw mills, besides other mills and manufacturing establishments. The postoffice is called St. Anthony's Falls. Population in 1850, 750; in 1853, about 2000.

ST. ARMAND, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Essex co., N. Y. Pop., 210.

ST. AUBERT, a post-office of Callaway co., Mo.

ST. AUGUSTINE, a city, port of entry, and capital of St. John's co., Florida, 200 miles E. by S. from Tallahassee, and 160 miles S. from Savannah. Lat. 29° 48' 30" N., lon. 81° 35' W. It is one of the largest places in the state, and has the distinction of being the oldest town in the United States. It is situated on the northern shore of Matanzas sound, 2 miles from the sea, from which it is separated by the island of Anastasia. The site is a plain only a few feet higher than the level of the ocean. The streets vary from 10 to 18 feet in width; the houses have mostly two stories, the upper projecting over the street. It contains, besides the county buildings, 1 Roman Catholic and 3 Protestant churches, 1 newspaper office, 1 United States land-office, and about 500 dwellings, some of which are in a dilapidated state. The harbor is safe and commodious, but the bar at the entrance prevents the approach of large ships, having only 9 or 10 feet of water at low tide. The mildness of the climate, and the refreshing breezes from the sea, render this a favorite winter residence for invalids. The orange, lemon, olive, and date-palm flourish in this vicinity, and fish and game are abundant. The town is defended by Fort Marion, erected by the Spaniards more than 100 years ago, and formerly called the Castle of St. Mark. Steamboats ply frequently between this place and Savannah. It was settled by the Spaniards about 1565. Pop., nearly 2000.

ST. AUGUSTINE, a small post-village of Fulton co., Illinois, 49 miles W. from Peoria.

ST. AUGUSTINE LIGHTHOUSE, on the N. end of St. Anastasia island, E. of St. John's co., Florida. It is 70 feet high, exclusive of the lantern, which is 7 feet, and shows a fixed light. Lat. 29° 52' 10" N., lon. 81° 25' W.

ST. BERNARD, a parish of Louisiana, situated in the S. E. part of the state, on the Gulf of Mexico. The area is 620 square miles. Lake Borgne washes the N. W. border. The surface is level; the soil of the higher portions is fertile, producing sugar and molasses. In 1850 there were made 4367 hogsheads of sugar, and 173,000 gallons of molasses. It contained 1 church, and 150 pupils attending public schools. Pop., 3802, of whom 1479 were free, and 2323, slaves.

ST. CATHARINE'S ISLAND, off the coast of Liberty co., Georgia, separated from the mainland by St. Catharine's sound. Length, near 11 miles; greatest breadth, about 5 miles.

ST. CHARLES, a parish in the S. E. part of Louisiana, about 10 miles W. from New Orleans, contains 340 square miles. It is intersected by Mississippi river, and bounded on several sides by Lakes Pontchartrain, Des Allemands, and Washa. The surface is flat; the soil of the higher parts is productive. Sugar, rice, and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 it produced 10,206 hogsheads of sugar; 531,300 gallons of molasses; 619,000 pounds of rice, and 178,980 bushels of corn. It contained 1 church, and 55 pupils attending public schools. Seat of justice, St. Charles Court House. Population, 5120, of whom 988 were free, and 4132, slaves.

ST. CHARLES, a county in the E. part of Missouri, occupies a neck of land formed by the confluence of the Missouri with the Mississippi river; area, about 480 square miles. The Mississippi river forms the boundary on the N. E., and separates it from Illinois. It is also drained by Cuivre river, and by Dardenne, Peruque, and Femme Osage creeks. The surface is alternately hilly, rolling, and level. A range of highlands terminates about 3 miles below St. Charles, in a beautiful and romantic pile of naked bluffs, called the "Mammelles." The soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 658,001 bushels of corn; 122,902 of wheat; 114,658 of oats; 122,390 pounds of butter, and 210,712 of tobacco. It contained 24 churches, 1 newspaper office; 788 pupils attending public schools, and 200 attending academies and other schools. Limestone generally underlies the county. Extensive mines of stone coal are worked in several places. Capital, St. Charles. Population, 11,454, of whom 9505 were free, and 1949, slaves.

ST. CHARLES, a post-village of Johnson co., North Carolina.

ST. CHARLES, a small post-village of Arkansas co., Arkansas.

ST. CHARLES, a post-office of Butler co., O.

ST. CHARLES, a post-township in Kane co., Illinois. Population, 2132.

ST. CHARLES, a handsome and flourishing post-village in the above township, on Fox river, 42 miles W. from Chicago. It is pleasantly situated on the inclined planes which rise gently from each side of the river. The latter is a beautiful and rapid stream, with a prairie on the W. side, and woodlands on the other. This is the largest village in the county, and is a place of rapid growth. One or two newspapers are published here. A branch railroad connects this place with the Chicago and Galena railroad. Since the completion of this road, St. Charles commands the trade of the country between the Fox and Rock rivers. The route of the Air-line railroad from Chicago to the Mississippi river passes through St. Charles. The extensive water-power of the river gives motion to numerous paper mills, flouring mills, and other manufactories, which line the banks for the space of about half a mile. Laid out in 1836. Population in 1853, estimated at 3500.

ST. CHARLES, a thriving post-town, capital of St. Charles county, Missouri, on the left bank of Missouri river, 22 miles from its mouth, 144 miles below Jefferson City, and about 6 miles by land S. from the Mississippi river. The situation is elevated and beautiful. The rocky bluffs in this vicinity present delightful views of the two great rivers above named. Quarries of limestone and sandstone and mines of stone coal have been opened near the town. It contains several churches, 1 newspaper office, and is the seat of St. Charles College, under the direction of the Methodists. Population in 1853, estimated at 3000.

ST. CLAIR, a county towards the N. E. part of Alabama, has an area of 725 square miles. The Coosa river forms its entire S. E. boundary for a distance of about 50 miles. The county is also traversed by Canoe creek. The surface is mountainous, and mostly covered with forests of oaks and other timber. The soil is adapted to grain and grass. In 1850 this county produced 283,377 bushels of corn; 38,054 of sweet potatoes; 22,913 of oats, and 1434 bales of cotton. It contained 26 churches, and 120 pupils attending public schools. Extensive beds of bituminous coal are found, but they have not yet been worked to much extent. Small steamboats navigate the Coosa from this county upwards to Rome, in Georgia. Capital, Asheville. Population, 6329, of whom 5508 were free, and 1321, slaves.

ST. CLAIR, a county in the E. part of Michigan, bordering on Lake Huron and St. Clair rivers, which separate it from Canada West: area, about 900 square miles. It is intersected by Belle and Black rivers, washed on the S. by Lake St. Clair, and also drained by Mill creek. The surface is undulating, and in part heavily timbered with pine and other trees. The soil is fertile in the S., and sandy in the N. and W. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and hay are the staples. Pine lumber is exported. In 1850 it produced 42,742 bushels of corn; 20,391 of wheat; 61,833 of oats, and 8068 tons of hay. It contained 7 churches and 2 newspaper offices. Organized in 1821. Capital, St. Clair. Pop., 10,420.

ST. CLAIR, a county in the S. W. part of Illinois, bordering on Missouri, has an area of 630 square miles. It is situated on the Mississippi river, opposite St. Louis, and intersected in the S. E. part by Kaskaskia river, and in the N. W. part by Cahokia creek: it is also drained by Silver and Richland creeks. The surface is undulating, and in some places level, consisting partly of prairie and partly of timbered land. The soil is excellent, and generally cultivated. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, hay, cattle, pork, and butter are the staples. Large quantities of provisions are raised in the county for the markets of St. Louis. In 1850 it produced 1,102,563 bushels of corn; 224,049 of wheat; 263,197 of oats; 3596 tons of hay, and 243,976 pounds of butter. It contained 15 churches, and 4 newspaper offices. The route of the Cincinnati and St. Louis railroad passes through the county. Coal mines are numerous, and are rich and extensively worked, particularly along the Mississippi river. A large part of the population consists of Germans. Named in honor of General Arthur St. Clair, governor of Ohio when it was a territory. Capital, Belleville. Population, 20,181.

ST. CLAIR, a county in the W. S. W. part of Missouri, has an area of about 650 square miles. It is intersected by the Osage river, and also drained by Sac river, and by Warblow, Peshaw, and Monaghan creeks. The surface is somewhat diversified, and consists partly of prairies, and partly of timbered land: the soil produces Indian corn, wheat, oats, and hay. In 1850 there were raised 126,615 bushels of corn; 13,208 of wheat; 56,282 of oats, and 638 tons of hay. It contained 4 churches, 1 newspaper office; 120 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending an academy. Capital, Osceola. Population, 3556; of whom 3108 were free, and 448, slaves.

ST. CLAIR, a township of Bedford co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. by W. from Bedford. Population, 1612.

ST. CLAIR, a flourishing post-borough of Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, 62 miles N. E. from Harrisburg, 98 miles N. W. from Philadelphia, and 4 miles N. from Pottsville. It owes its existence and prosperity to the rich mines of anthracite coal which surround it. The origin of the town is quite recent, and its growth has been very rapid. The population in 1845 was 605; in 1850 it amounted to 2016, and in 1853 about 3000.

ST. CLAIR, a village in Burke co., Georgia, 65 miles E. by N. from Milledgeville.

ST. CLAIR, a post-office of Hawkins co., Tennessee.

ST. CLAIR, a post-township in the central part of Butler co., Ohio, intersected by the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton railroad. Population, 1150.

ST. CLAIR, a post-township in the S. E. part of Columbiana co., Ohio, intersected by the Sandy and Beaver canal. Population, 1153.

ST. CLAIR, a township in the S. E. part of St. Clair co., Michigan, intersected by Pine river. Population, 1729.

ST. CLAIR, formerly PALMER, a post-village, capital of St. Clair county, Michigan, on the river of the same name, at the mouth of Pine river, 50 miles N. E. from Detroit. It contains a court house, a newspaper office, a number of stores, and several flouring and saw mills.

ST. CLAIR CITY, a village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, on the Pennsylvania railroad, 44 miles E. from Pittsburg, and 12 miles from Greensburg, the county seat.

ST. CLAIR LAKE, on the S. E. border of Michigan, receives the river of its own name from the N., and discharges its waters through Detroit river. Extent from E. to W. 28 miles, from N. to S. about 24 miles.

ST. CLAIR RIVER, of Michigan, is the outlet of Lake Huron, which gradually contracts towards its southern extremity, until it assumes the form of a river, with an average width of half a mile. After a southerly course of about 40 miles, forming part of the boundary between Canada West and the United States, it enters Lake St. Clair. It is navigable by large vessels.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, a post-office of Bedford co., Pennsylvania.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, a handsome post-village, capital of Belmont county, Ohio, on the National road, 11 miles W. from Wheeling, and 116 miles E. from Columbus. It is situated on hilly ground, in the midst of a rich farming country. The Central railroad, now in course of construction, passes near or through the place. It contains 6 places of worship, 3 newspaper offices, and 1 seminary for girls. Population in 1853, about 1500.

ST. CLEMENT'S BAY, a post-office of St. Mary's co., Maryland.

ST. CLOUD, a post-office of Heard co., Ga.

ST. CROIX, (sent-kroi,) also called PASSAMAQUODDY and SCHOODIC RIVER, rises from Grand lake, on the border between Maine and New Brunswick, and flowing in a general S. S. E. direction, although in a very winding course, falls into Passamaquoddy bay. It forms the boundary for its whole course between the United States and New Brunswick. The whole length is about 75 miles.

ST. CROIX river rises in La Pointe county, Wisconsin, near the W. end of Lake Superior, and flows south-westward until it reaches the E. line of Minnesota. From this point it pursues a general southerly course, forming the boundary between that territory and the State of Wisconsin, and falls into the Mississippi river 38 miles below St. Paul's. The whole length is about 200 miles, and it is 100 yards wide at its mouth. St. Croix lake, an expansion of this river, is 36 miles long, and 3 or 4 miles wide; it is not more than 1 mile from the mouth of the river. Several falls occur in the St. Croix, about the middle of its course.

ST. CROIX, a county in the N. W. part of Wisconsin, bordering on Minnesota, contains an area of about 750 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by St. Croix river and lake, which separate it from Minnesota Territory, and drained by Willow and Rush rivers. The surface is mostly overspread with forests of pine. The county is copiously supplied with water-power. Indian corn, oats, and barley are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 700 bushels of oats; 1100 of corn; 750 of barley, and 1850 pounds of butter. It contained 1 newspaper office, and 19 pupils attending a school. Capital, Hudson. Population, 624.

ST. CROIX FALLS, a post-village, capital of Polk co., Wisconsin, on St. Croix river, at the head of steamboat navigation, about 240 miles in a direct line N. W. from Madison. It is estimated that 4,000,000 feet of pine lumber are made here annually.

ST. DENNIS BAYOU, of Louisiana, traverses the parish of Jefferson, and flows into Barataria bay.

SAINTFIELD, a post-office of Muskingum co., Ohio.

ST. FRANCIS, a county in the E. part of Arkansas, between the White and St. Francis rivers, contains about 900 square miles. It is drained by the Cache river. The surface is nearly level, the soil fertile. The staple products are Indian corn, cotton, cattle, and pork. In 1850 there were raised 181,442 bushels of corn; 54,493 of oats, and 1540 bales of cotton. It contained 5 churches, 305 pupils attending public schools, and 45 attending an academy. The White and St. Francis rivers are navigable along the borders. Capital, Mount Vernon. Population, 4479; of whom 3772 were free, and 707 slaves.

ST. FRANCIS COUNTY, Missouri. See ST. FRANCIS.

ST. FRANCIS, a township in Green co., Arkansas. Population, 453.

ST. FRANCIS, a township in Phillips co., Arkansas. Population, 1376.

ST. FRANCIS, a small post-village of St. Francis co., Arkansas, on the river of its own name, 115 miles E. N. E. from Little Rock.

ST. FRANCIS RIVER, of Missouri and Arkansas, rises in the county of its own name, in Missouri, and flows southward to the N. E. corner of Arkansas. Entering this state, it falls into the Mississippi river, about 10 miles above Helena. In the lower part of its course it passes through extensive tracts, which are subject to inundation, and partly occupied by cypress swamps. The whole length is estimated at more than 450 miles, for 150 of which it is navigable in some seasons of the year. Trout and other fish are abundant in this river.

ST. FRANCISVILLE, capital of West Feliciana parish, Louisiana, 30 miles N. from Baton Rouge, and 1 mile E. from the Mississippi river, with which it is connected by Bayou Sarah. It has a newspaper office. A railroad 26 miles long extends northward to Woodville, in Mississippi.

ST. FRANCISVILLE, a post-village of Lawrence co., Illinois, on the Wabash river, about 170 miles S. E. from Springfield.

ST. FRANCISVILLE, a thriving post-village of Clark co., Missouri, on the Des Moines river, about 10 miles W. N. W. from Keokuk.

ST. FRANCOIS, a county in the E. S. E. part of Missouri, has an area of about 350 square miles. It is traversed from S. to N. by Big river, an affluent of the Maramec river, and also drained by the sources of St. Francis river, flowing southward. The surface is hilly and broken, and partly covered by forests of pine and other timber. The soil is moderately fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 226,759 bushels of corn; 14,741 of wheat, and 32,191 of oats. It contained 7 churches, and 277 pupils attending public schools. The celebrated Iron mountain is partly included within it. Extensive iron works are in operation near the mines, and a plank-road extends from them to the Mississippi river. Capital, Farmington. Population, 4964; of whom 4284 were free, and 680, slaves.

ST. FRANCOIS RIVER rises in Canada, and flows S. until it meets the N. W. boundary of Maine, when it turns and runs easterly, and it unites with the Wallowoostock river to form the St. John's. It constitutes the N. boundary of the state for most of its length.

ST. GENEVIEVE, a county in the E. S. E. part of Missouri, has an area estimated at 400 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Mississippi river, which separates it from Illinois, and drained by Rivière aux Vases, Isle au Bois, Saline, and Establishment creeks. The surface is hilly and broken; the soil of the river bottoms and valleys is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass are cultivated. Limestone, lead, and white sand are extensively exported. In 1850 the county produced 195,214 bushels of corn; 30,183 of wheat, and 34,413 of oats. It contained 8 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 260 pupils attending public schools, and 145 attending academies or other schools. Extensive mines of lead and copper, and quarries of marble are worked. A plank-road about 40 miles long extends from the county seat to the Iron mountain. Capital, St. Genevieve. Pop., 5313, of whom 4697 were free, and 616, slaves.

ST. GENEVIEVE, a post-village, capital of St. Genevieve county, Missouri, on the Mississippi river, 61 miles below St. Louis. Some improvement has taken place recently since it became the shipping point for the products of the iron works at Iron mountain. A plank-road, 42 miles long, has been commenced between these works and the town. St. Genevieve exports large quantities of copper, lead, limestone, and white sand, the last of which is used in the glass works of Boston and Pittsburg, and is a very superior article. Two newspapers are published here. Settled about 1755. Population, about 1500.

ST. GEORGE, a post-township of Lincoln co., Maine, on the Atlantic, 45 miles S. E. from Augusta. Population, 2217.

ST. GEORGE, a post-township of Chittenden co., Vermont, 35 miles W. N. W. from Montpelier. Population, 127.

ST. GEORGE'S, a post-village of Newcastle county, Delaware, on the Delaware and Chesapeake canal, 16 miles S. S. W. from Wilmington. It has 3 churches and 2 hotels. Population in 1853, estimated at 300.

ST. GEORGE'S, a post-office of Colleton district, South Carolina.

ST. HELEN, a small post-village of Cedar co., Mo., about 117 miles S. W. from Jefferson City.

ST. HELEN, a post-office of Washington co., Oregon.

ST. HELENA, a parish of Louisiana, bordering on Mississippi, contains about 540 square miles. It is drained by Tickfah river, and bounded on the W. by the Amite. The surface presents no great elevations; the soil along the streams is fertile. Cotton and Indian corn are the staple products. In 1850 there were raised 1284 bales of cotton; 109,751 bushels of corn, and 44,225 of sweet potatoes. There were 6 saw and planing mills, 1 tannery, and 1 agricultural implement manufactory; 11 churches, and 355 pupils attending public schools. The parish is traversed by the New Orleans & Northern Railroad. Capital, Greensburg. Pop. 4561, of whom 2365 were free, and 2196, slaves.

ST. HELENA, a post-village in St. Helena parish, Louisiana, 35 miles N. E. by E. from Baton Rouge.

ST. HELEN'S MOUNTAIN, Oregon, a peak of the Cascade range, N. by E. from Fort Vancouver. Height, about 13,300 feet. It is a volcano, and has recently been in a state of eruption.

ST. HENRY'S, a post-office of Mercer co., O.

ST. IGNACE, a village of Mackinac co., Michigan, on the Straits of Mackinac, is inhabited mostly by fishermen.

ST. ILLA, a post-office of Ware co., Ga.

ST. INGOES, a post-village in St. Mary co., Maryland, 60 miles S. by E. from Annapolis.

ST. JACOB, a post-office of Madison co., Ill.

ST. JAMES, a parish in the S. E. part of Louisiana, on both sides of the Mississippi, contains 330 square miles. Lake Maurepas touches the N. E. extremity of the parish. The surface is flat; the soil alluvial and fertile, producing sugar, molasses, and Indian corn. The plantations are chiefly confined to the banks of the river. Sugar, molasses, and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 21,670 hogsheads of sugar; 926,438 gallons of molasses, and 334,480 bushels of corn. There were 2 saw and planing mills; 2 churches, 1 newspaper office; 238 pupils attending public schools, and 148 attending an academy. Capital, Bringiers. Population, 11,098, of whom 3347 were free, and 7751, slaves.

ST. JOHN, a post-office of Hertford co., N. C.

ST. JOHN, a village in Lake co., Illinois, on the W. shore of Lake Michigan, 26 miles N. by W. from Chicago.

ST. JOHN, a post-office of Dodge co., Mo.

ST. JOHN BAPTISTE, a parish in the S. E. part of Louisiana, bordering on Lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain, contains about 200 square miles. It is intersected by the Mississippi. The surface is flat; the arable land is confined to the margins of the river.

Sugar, rice, and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this parish produced 11,935 hogsheads of sugar; 638,230 gallons of molasses; 314,200 pounds of rice, and 188,390 bushels of corn. There were 2 saw and planing mills; 1 church, and 452 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Bonnet Carré. Pop., 7317, of whom 2777 were free, and 4540, slaves.

ST. JOHN'S, a county in the N. E. part of Florida, bordering on the Atlantic, contains about 990 square miles. It is intersected by the navigable river of the same name. The surface is level and but little elevated above the sea; the soil sandy and poor. A large part of the county is occupied by marshes and pine barrens. The live oak, orange, and lemon flourish in this region. The sugar-cane and Indian corn are cultivated. In 1850 it produced 14,390 bushels of corn; 290 hogsheads of sugar, and 6325 gallons of molasses. It contained 1 saw mill, 1 turpentine distillery, and 1 tobacco factory. There were 4 churches, 1 newspaper office; 50 pupils attending a public school, and 160 attending academies or other schools. Capital St. Augustine. Population, 2525, of whom 1532 were free, and 993, slaves.

ST. JOHN'S, or ST. JOHNSTOWN, a village in Sussex co., Delaware, 28 miles S. from Dover.

ST. JOHN'S, a post-village of Auglaize co., O., about 90 miles W. N. W. from Columbus.

ST. JOHN'S, a post-township in Lake co., Indiana. Population, 469.

ST. JOHN'S, a post-village of Lake co., Indiana, 145 miles N. W. by N. from Indianapolis.

ST. JOHNSBURY, a post-township of Caledonia co., Vermont, about 35 miles N. E. from Montpelier. The village is the N. terminus of the Connecticut and Passumpsic Rivers railroad. It contains 1 bank, and an extensive manufactory of weighing scales. Population of the township, 2758.

ST. JOHNSBURY CENTRE, a post-office of Caledonia co., Vermont.

ST. JOHNSBURY EAST, a post-office of Caledonia co., Vermont.

ST. JOHN'S CREEK, of Franklin county, Missouri, enters the Missouri river from the right, 1 or 2 miles above Washington. It is a good mill stream.

ST. JOHN'S LIGHTHOUSE, at the entrance of St. John's river, Florida, exhibits a fixed light 65 feet high. Lat. 30° 21' N., lon. 81° 33' W.

ST. JOHN'S LIGHTHOUSE, Lake Pontchartrain, at the entrance of the Bayou St. John, 5 miles N. from New Orleans. It shows a fixed light 48 feet above the level of the lake.

ST. JOHN'S RIVER is formed by the junction of the Waloostook and St. François river, on the limits between Maine and Canada, and flowing in a general easterly direction, marks the border between the United States and Canada till its intersection with the E. boundary of Maine, where it passes into New Brunswick and falls into the Bay of Fundy, after a course of about 350 miles. It is navigable for boats 200 miles, and for sloops of 50 tons burthen 80 miles.

ST. JOHN'S RIVER, Florida, has its sources in a marshy tract, in the central part of the peninsula. It pursues a north-westerly course to the mouth of the Ocklawaha, after which it flows nearly northward to Jacksonville. Turning thence toward the E., it enters the Atlantic in lat. 30° 20' N. Its whole length is estimated at above 200 miles. Steamboats regularly navigate this river from its mouth to Pilatka. Vessels requiring 8 feet of water can ascend to Lake George, a distance of 107 miles. The country through which it passes consists chiefly of pine barrens and cypress swamps.

ST. JOHNSTOWN, Delaware. See ST. JOHN'S.

ST. JOHNSVILLE, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Montgomery co., New York, on the Mohawk river and Erie canal. Population, 1627.

ST. JOSEPH, a county in the S. S. W. part of Michigan, bordering on Indiana, contains 528 square miles. It is intersected by the St. Joseph's river, (of Lake Michigan,) and also drained by Portage, Prairie, Pigeon, and Fawn rivers, which terminate in it. The surface is gently undulating, and is diversified by prairies and "oak openings," the soil of which is extremely fertile. Grain, potatoes, wool, pork, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 431,337 bushels of corn; 265,011 of wheat; 99,404 of potatoes; and 12,678 tons of hay. It contained 14 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 4338 pupils attending public schools. Timber is plentiful in the W. part of the county. The St. Joseph's river is navigable for keel-boats, and some of the streams furnish extensive water-power. The county is intersected by the Michigan Southern railroad. Capital, Centreville. Population, 12,725.

ST. JOSEPH, a county in the N. part of Indiana, bordering on Michigan, contains 470 square miles. It is drained by the St. Joseph's and Kankakee rivers. The surface is nearly level, and is diversified by prairies, oak openings, and forests. The soil is extremely fertile and easily cultivated. The staple productions are wheat, Indian corn, oats, grass, and fruits. In 1850 this county produced 346,841 bushels of corn; 161,956 of wheat; 109,516 of oats, and 5904 tons of hay. It contained 17 churches, 1 newspaper office; 1413 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending academies or other schools. The county contains marl, and abundance of iron ore, and is liberally supplied with water-power. It is intersected by the Northern Indiana railroad. Organized in 1830. Capital, South Bend. Pop., 10,954.

ST. JOSEPH, a post-village, capital of Tensas parish, Louisiana, on the right bank of the Mississippi river.

ST. JOSEPH, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Williams co., Ohio, intersected by St. Joseph's river of the Maumee. Population, 589.

ST. JOSEPH, a post-township in the N. W. part of Berrien co., Michigan, and on the E. shore of Lake Michigan.

ST. JOSEPH, a post-village in the above township, on Lake Michigan, at the mouth of St. Joseph's river, 194 miles W. of Detroit. It carries on an active trade in lumber and fruit to supply the boats of the lake and the Chicago market. The bridge which crosses the river at this place cost $15,000. Population, in 1853, 800.

ST. JOSEPH, a post-township in Allen co., Indiana. Population, 748.

ST. JOSEPH, a flourishing town, capital of Buchanan co., Missouri, is situated on the left (E.) bank of the Missouri river, 340 miles above Jefferson City, and 496 miles by water from St. Louis. It is the most commercial and populous town of Western Missouri, and one of the points of departure in the emigration to Oregon, California, &c. St. Joseph is surrounded by an extremely fertile region, in which wheat, tobacco, and hemp are cultivated. A company has been formed to construct a railroad about 200 miles long from this town to Hannibal, on the Mississippi. The town was laid out in 1843, and became the county seat in 1845. It contains 7 churches, several steam flouring and saw mills, and manufactories of bagging, &c.; 2 or 3 newspapers are published here. Population in 1853, about 5000.

ST. JOSEPH'S, a post-office of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania.

ST. JOSEPH'S, a post-village, capital of Calhoun co., Florida, on St. Joseph's bay, of the Gulf of Mexico.

ST. JOSEPH'S, a post-office of Champaign co., Illinois.

ST. JOSEPH'S BAY, an arm of the Gulf of Mexico, is situated in Calhoun co., on the S. coast of Florida. It is formed by a narrow, crooked peninsula, extending from the mainland to Cape St. Joseph, the S. extremity of which forms Cape St. Blas. Length, near 25 miles; greatest breadth, about 10 miles.

ST. JOSEPH'S GROVE, a village in Dubuque co., Iowa, 10 miles S. W. from Dubuque.

ST. JOSEPH'S RIVER, of Michigan and Indiana, rises in Hillsdale county, Michigan, and after making a circuit into Indiana, it turns towards the N. W. and enters the former state, and flows through Berrien county into Lake Michigan. at the village of St. Joseph. Its general direction is nearly westward, and its course is very serpentine. The length is estimated at 250 miles, which is greater than that of any stream in the state except Grand river. It has an equable current, and is navigated by small steamboats from its mouth to Constantine, about 120 miles. The chief towns on its banks are Constantine, Elkhart, South Bend, and Niles. The country through which it flows is undulating and extremely fertile. There is a good harbor at its mouth, where the river is one-fourth of a mile wide, and from 9 to 14 feet deep.

ST. JOSEPH'S RIVER, of the Maumee, rises in Hillsdale co., Michigan, and flowing in a general S. W. course across the N. W. corner of Ohio, unites with the St. Mary's river to form the Maumee, at Fort Wayne, in Indiana.

ST. JULIAN, a post-office of Linn co., Iowa.

ST. LANDRY, a parish in the S. W. part of Louisiana, contains 2200 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by Atchafalaya, and drained by the Cortabeanu and Teche bayous. The parish has a high, rolling, and picturesque surface, and a very productive soil. Sugar, cotton, and Indian corn are the staples. Many cattle are raised for exportation. In 1850 this parish produced 5961 hogsheds of sugar; 317,970 gallons of molasses; 3920 bales of cotton; 372,180 bushels of corn, and 69,361 of sweet potatoes. There were 6 saw and planing mills, 6 tanneries, and 3 coopers' shops. It contained 6 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 900 pupils attending public schools, and 204 attending academies or other schools. The Atchafalaya and Cortabeanu are navigable by steamboats in high water. A railroad is in course of construction from New Orleans to Opelousas, the capital of the parish. Population, 22,253; of whom 11,382 were free, and 10,871, slaves.

ST. LAWRENCE, one of the largest rivers of North America, which issues from Lake Ontario, in about 44° 10' N. lat., and 76° 30' W. lon., and flowing north-easterly, falls into the Gulf of St. Lawrence in about 49° 30' N. lat., and 64° W. lon. Viewing this river in connection with the great Western lakes, of which it forms the outlet, it may be said to rise at the sources of the St. Louis, which flows into Lake Superior. Receiving different names in different parts of its course, between Lake Superior and Huron it is called the St. Mary; between Lake Huron and Erie, the St. Clair and Detroit; between Lake Erie and Ontario, the Niagara; between Lake Ontario and the sea it takes the name of St. Lawrence. Its whole length, including the chain of lakes, is estimated at 2200 miles. The distance from Lake Ontario to the Gulf of St. Lawrence is about 750 miles. Between the lake and Montreal, the navigation of the river is somewhat impeded by rapids, the most important of which are the Cedar and the Lachine rapids. The latter are 9 miles above Montreal. Steamboats can descend, but they are obliged to be towed up in a side-canal. The breadth of the St. Lawrence is very unequal, varying from less than a mile to 3 or 4 miles. Towards its mouth it gradually widens to an estuary from 10 to 15 or 20 miles wide. This river contains numerous islands; near its egress from Lake Ontario there is a multitudinous group, called the "Thousand Islands," presenting to the traveller an endless variety of charming scenery.

ST. LAWRENCE, a county in the N. N. E. part of New York, has an area of about 2900 square miles, being the largest county in the state. It is bounded on the N. W. by the St. Lawrence, and is drained by the Oswegatchie, Grass, Racket, and St. Regis rivers, and other smaller streams, which supply motive-power to numerous mills. It has several small lakes, the principal of which is Black lake. A large part of this county is still but thinly settled and heavily wooded. In the town of Canton, a natural canal, about 6 miles in length and navigable for boats, connects Oswegatchie and Grass rivers. The surface is uneven, and in the S. W. part hilly. The soil is generally fertile. Wheat, wool, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 289,956 bushels of wheat; 122,688 tons of hay; 2,876,918 pounds of butter; 1,596,450 of cheese; 287,900 of wool, and 1,236,504 of maple sugar, the greatest quantity produced by any county in the United States. There were 27 flour and grist mills, 125 saw mills, 4 furnaces, 6 woollen factories, 2 distilleries, 3 iron forges, and 9 iron foundries. It contained 94 churches, 7 newspaper offices; 23,050 pupils attending public schools, and 972 attending academies and other schools. Iron ore, lead, and marble are abundant. The St. Lawrence river, by means of canals around the different falls and rapids, is navigable along the border. The county is traversed by the railroad connecting Ogdensburg with Rouse's Point, and partly intersected by the Watertown and Potsdam railroad. Capital, Canton. Pop., 68,617.

ST. LAWRENCE, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

ST. LAWRENCE, a post-village of Chatham co., North Carolina.

ST. LEGER, a post-office of Ozark co., Mo.

ST. LEON, a post-office of Dearborn co., Ind.

ST. LEONARD'S, a post-village in Calvert co., Maryland, 45 miles S. from Annapolis.

ST. LOUIS, a county in the E. part of Missouri, occupies a point of land formed by the confluence of the Missouri with the Mississippi river, the latter of which separates it from Illinois on the E. The Maramec river traverses the southern part, and enters the Mississippi on the boundary of this county. It is also drained by River des Peres, and by Gravois and Bonhomme creeks. The surface is pleasantly diversified; the soil has a substratum of good limestone, and is highly productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 668,210 bushels of corn; 98,420 of wheat; 138,837 of oats; 14,169 tons of hay, and 203,482 pounds of butter. The produce of hay was greater than that of any other county in the state. It contained 53 churches, 31 newspaper offices; 2514 pupils attending public schools, and 3992 attending academies and other schools. Extensive mines of stone coal and quarries of marble are worked, and iron is found in the W. part. Several railways are in progress of construction through the county. This is by far the most populous and wealthy county in the state. Capital, St. Louis. Pop., 99,978; of whom 94,011 were free, and 5967, slaves.

St. Louis, a small village of Bartholomew co., Indiana, 11 miles N. E. from Columbus, the county town, has about 100 inhabitants.

St. Louis, a city, port of entry, and seat of justice of St. Louis county, Missouri, is situated on the right bank of the Mississippi river, 20 miles below the entrance of the Missouri, 174 above the mouth of the Ohio, 744 below the Falls of St. Anthony, 1194 above New Orleans, and 128 miles E. from Jefferson City. Lat. 38° 37' 28" N., lon. 90° 15' 16" W. The site rises from the river by two plateaux of limestone formation, the first 20 and the other 60 feet above the floods of the Mississippi. The ascent to the first plateau, or bottom as it may be termed, is somewhat abrupt; the second rises more gradually, and spreads out into an extensive plain, affording fine views of the city and river. St. Louis extends in all nearly 7 miles by the curve of the Mississippi, and about 3 miles back; the thickly settled portion, however, is only 2 or 2½ miles in length, following the river, and about 1¼ miles in breadth. The city is well laid out, the streets being for the most part 60 feet wide, and, with but few exceptions, intersect each other at right angles. Front street, extending along the levee, is upwards of 100 feet wide, and built up on the side facing the river with a range of massive stone warehouses, which make an imposing appearance as the city is approached by water. Front, Main, and Second streets, parallel to each other and to the river, are the seat of the principal wholesale business. The latter is occupied with heavy grocery, iron, receiving and shipping houses. Fourth street, the fashionable promenade, contains the finest retail stores. The streets parallel to Front and Main streets are designated Second street, Third, Fourth, Fifth, and so on; and those on the right and left of Market street, extending at right angles with the river, are mostly named from various forest trees, similar to the streets of Philadelphia. Large expenditures have been made from time to time in grading and otherwise improving the streets and alleys of St. Louis; and it is stated that at the present time a greater amount of work of this kind is under contract than has ever been undertaken by the city in any former year. As yet, but slight provision has been made for public squares, but immediate attention to this subject is earnestly recommended by the mayor in his late message of October, 1853. One handsome enclosure, called Lafayette Square, is now being laid out in the southern section of the city, about 2 miles S. W. from the court house. St. Louis is handsomely built, especially the new portion of the city; the principal material is brick, though limestone is employed to some extent.

It may be doubted whether any city of the Union has improved more rapidly than this in the style of its public buildings. But twenty-four years ago a court house was erected at a cost of $14,000; it was then considered a handsome edifice, and sufficient for all future purposes. Within a few years, however, this building has given place to a new structure, now nearly completed, the cost of which will scarcely fall short of half a million of dollars. It is constructed of Genevieve limestone, and occupies an entire square bounded by Market, Chestnut, Fourth, and Fifth streets. The style of architecture somewhat resembles that of the capitol at Washington. The fronts are adorned with porticos, and in the interior is a rotunda, lighted from the dome. The "Market and Town House," erected at a cost of $20,000, has been pulled down, and the "Centre Market Buildings," a handsome block, now occupies their place. The old City Hall, at the foot of Market street, is still standing. Its speedy demolition, however, is regarded by the citizens as already decreed, and at the present time even, negotiations are pending for the purchase of a site at the corner of Thirteenth and Olive streets, upon which to erect a new edifice, of a size and style corresponding to the present prospects of the city. Of the four churches—the Catholic, the Presbyterian, the Episcopal, and the Baptist—which were all the town contained in 1829, not a vestige now remains; but in their stead had arisen in 1850, 49 others, viz. 12 Catholic, 12 Methodist, 8 Presbyterian, 5 Episcopal, 2 Unitarian, 2 Evangelical, and 1 Boatmen's, besides 2 Jewish synagogues. At the present time the number of churches in St. Louis is probably not less than 60, several of which have cost above a hundred thousand dollars. Of these, St. George's, (Episcopal,) at the corner of Locust and Seventh streets, the Catholic cathedral, on Walnut street, between Second and Third, and the Church of the Messiah, a magnificent Gothic edifice recently erected by the Unitarians, at the corner of Olive and Ninth streets, are regarded as the finest. The Cathedral is 136 feet long and 84 feet wide, with a front of polished freestone 58 feet high, adorned with a Doric portico. In the tower is a chime of bells, the heaviest of which weighs 2600 pounds. The United States arsenal, situated on Arsenal street, in the extreme south-eastern section of the city, is a large and imposing edifice enclosed by handsomely ornamented grounds. Jefferson barracks are located about 13 miles below, on the bank of the Mississippi.

The principal hotels in St. Louis, are the Planters' House, on Fourth street, between Pine and Chesnut; the United States Hotel, at the corner of Market and Third streets; the Virginia Hotel, corner of Main and Green streets; the Missouri Hotel, corner of Main and Morgan streets, and the Monroe House, at the corner of Second and Olive streets. The Planters' House is one of the largest and finest hotels in the West, and occupies the entire front between Pine and Chestnut streets. Another first-class hotel is also being erected.

Institutions.—Among the benevolent institutions may be mentioned the City Hospital, the Marine Hospital, 3 miles below St. Louis, the Sisters' Hospital, the Home for the Friendless, and the Orphan Asylums. The Home for the Friendless, designed for the benefit of aged indigent females, and opened October 4th, 1853, is situated on the Carondelet road, about 4 miles from the court house. The edifice, formerly "Swiss College," consists of a stone centre, 75 feet in length, and two frame wings, each from 30 to 40 feet in length—the whole two stories high. The premises comprise about 8 acres of ground, variously diversified with walks and shade-trees. About $40,000 have been raised for the support of the institution. The City Hospital has long been distinguished for the excellent accommodations which it affords to the sick, but of late has been found inadequate to the wants of the rapidly increasing population. Its extension, therefore, as well as the erection of new and suitable buildings for the quarantine, is earnestly recommended in the mayor's message. A new edifice, intended as a House of Refuge, has been completed the present month. The building formerly occupied as the "Smallpox Hospital," situated on land in the St. Louis Common, known as the Old County Farm, is now being fitted up for the reception of a juvenile reform school. The repairs are to be completed, and the institution opened about the 1st of December.

The literary and educational institutions of St. Louis have, considering their recent origin, attained a high degree of excellence. The University of St. Louis, organized in 1832, under the direction of the Catholics, is a well-ordered, well-sustained, and most efficient institution. The medical college connected with it is also very flourishing. During the term for 1852-3 it was attended by 72 students; and on the first of October, 1853, it is said that the number of matriculants enrolled for the ensuing season, was four times greater than that of any previous year. The medical department of the Missouri University is also located here. It was founded in 1840, and during the winter of 1852-3, 92 students attended its lectures. The members of both these colleges enjoy excellent advantages for practice in the City Hospital. The Mercantile Library Association of St. Louis was organized in 1846, and incorporated in 1851. The building, now about to be completed, is of brick, in the Italian style, 105 feet by 127, and 4 stories high. The united size of the library and reading room is 80 feet by 64. The lecture room, 80 feet by 44, is in the second story, and in the third is a grand hall, the largest and finest probably in the whole West, being 105 feet long and 80 feet wide. The entire cost of the building, including the site, is estimated at $95,000. The library contains upwards of 7000 volumes, besides 59 magazines and other periodicals, apart from its newspapers. Two thousand volumes were added to its shelves during the past year. Any person of mercantile pursuits is admitted as a member of the association—clerks paying $2 initiation fee and 75 cents quarterly, and proprietors $5 initiation fee and $2.50 quarterly. Present number of members, about 800. The citizens of St. Louis have given especial attention to the cause of popular education. Their schools are the pride of the city, and attended by upwards of five thousand pupils; the property is valued at half a million of dollars, and the income last year amounted to $43,250. A large number of pupils are also educated in the private seminaries of the city, and in the convents. The buildings of the latter are conspicuous and handsome edifices.

St. Louis has about 25 publication offices, issuing newspapers and other periodicals. Seven or eight newspapers are published daily; and several have weekly, and two—the Times and the Republican—have tri-weekly and weekly editions. Four or five are printed in the German language. The press is generally characterized by ability, and several of its issues have a wide circulation.

Real Estate, Improvements, &c.—The value of real estate in St. Louis has advanced at an astonishingly rapid rate. In 1822 the Trustees of the First Presbyterian church purchased a lot fronting 150 feet on Fourth street, and 90 feet on Washington avenue and St. Charles street, for $300. In April, 1853, the ground was leased for a term of 50 years, at the rate of $4000 per annum. Since then seven splendid stores have been erected on it, at a cost of $50,000. The lot at the corner of Third and Chestnut streets, extending 120 feet on the former, and 150 feet along the latter, was sold in 1826 for $400. It is now valued at $30,000, exclusive of the improvements. In 1831, Judge Lucas conveyed to Samuel Wiggins a lot 90 feet front and 135 deep, at the corner of Fifth and Chestnut streets, upon which Christ Church now stands, for the sum of $1600. The value of the same ground is now estimated at $22,000. In 1833, a block situate between Fourth and Fifth streets, and Locust and St. Charles streets, was sold for $6000. It is now said to be worth $182,000. In 1835, the Trustees of the Unitarian church purchased a lot at the corner of Fourth and Pine streets, 127 feet deep, and 60 feet front on Fourth street, for $2000, or $33.33 per front foot. Two years ago it was sold for $24,000, or $400 per front foot, and in 1853 it was supposed to be worth $600 per front foot. In 1844, a meadow belonging to Judge Carr was laid off into lots, and sold at auction, on ten years' credit, at prices varying from $8 to $18 per lot. What was then a meadow, now contains a population of not less than 4000 souls, and the lots are valued at four times their original cost. Real estate investments on Front and Mainstreets vary from $700 to $800 per front foot; and, on Second street, lots which five years ago could be bought for $100 or $150 per front foot, now sell for $500.

There has also been a corresponding advance in real estate lying without the city. Land which in 1842-3 sold at prices varying from $75 to $150 per acre, now brings from $1200 to $2000. In 1847-8, two estates in the southern part of the city were disposed of in lots; the sales of which ranged from $1.50 to $4 per front foot. Now the same property sells as high as $40 per foot. And finally, six years ago land that could be purchased in the common, south of the city, for about $75 per acre, now commands $1000, and but little is to be obtained, even at that price. St. Louis owns 600 acres of these lands, and has claims upon as much more.

The revenue of the city twenty years ago, as ascertained from the assessment list, was $4765.98. Now the assessed valuation of property, though falling far below its real value, is $89,397,186, upon which a tax of $413,670 is collected, independent of $46,000 arising from the sale of licenses. The assessed value of merchandise amounted to $8,744,786.64, an increase of $2,299,606.57 over 1852. The highest tax paid by any individual in 1829 was $532; now, one gentleman, J. H. Lucas, Esq. pays in his own name a city tax of $14,000; nor does this include the whole of his assessment, as much of his property is held conjointly with others.

The water-works, which in 1829 were of very inconsiderable importance, now embrace 35½ miles of pipe. The main reservoir, built four and a half years ago, is capable of containing 5,000,000 gallons of water, being 250 feet square, and 15 feet deep. It occupies the S. W. quarter of an enclosure, 660 feet on a side, situated at the head of Olive street, to which water is forced from the river by stationary engines, a distance of 1¾ miles. In addition to this, arrangements are about being made for constructing a new reservoir on the E. half of the same square, to be 540 feet in length, 250 in breadth, and 25 feet deep, having a capacity for 52,000,000 gallons. The cost of the work is estimated at $100,000, and the time required for its completion, two years. It is also contemplated to erect a water-tower on the site of the old reservoir on Broadway of sufficient capacity to be a valuable adjunct in the event of large fires. Gas works have been put in operation within the past six years, and their magnitude may be inferred from the fact that thirty-three miles of street pipe are now laid throughout the city.

The Levee, which, twenty years ago, was a mere mud bank, with transverse ways to the water's edge, has since undergone very important changes. Great expenditures have been made in filling up and otherwise improving it directly in front of the city; and at a session of the governmental authorities last spring, an appropriation of $200,000 was made, one half to be expended N. of Cherry, and the other half S. of Plum street. Extensive improvements in the harbor are also being made. The expenditures for this purpose, from April 11 to October, 1853, amounted to $50,256. A roadway, which, for some time past, has been in process of construction from the Illinois shore to and across Blood Island, is now approaching its completion. When finished, it will be three feet above high-water mark. The cost of this work, thus far, has amounted to $130,000.

Shipping, Commerce, &c.—Each stream which contributes to the commerce of St. Louis has its regular packets, and for the most part a separate place of landing. The Missouri, the Illinois, and the Upper Mississippi have as fine craft as float on the Western waters, while the down-river, or New Orleans traders, are scarcely excelled in size, equipment, speed, and construction. The St. Louis boats also visit the Ohio, the Wabash, the Tennessee, and other streams. With such an immense inland navigation, the commerce of the port requires a large number of steamers, and its tonnage in this respect exceeds that of every other Western city. The following table exhibits the monthly arrival of steamboats at St. Louis from the various rivers and places specified, for 1852:—

MONTHS.	New Orleans.	Ohio River.	Illinois River.	Upper Miss.	Missouri.	Calro.	Other Ports.
January.....	20	12	1	1	2	10	9
February.....	24	25	88	17	7	21	10
March.....	27	47	80	45	34	17	9
April.....	32	64	78	72	37	18	16
May.....	37	74	94	82	57	25	30
June.....	25	44	73	57	38	27	25
July.....	35	35	72	77	33	20	15
August.....	21	34	37	56	27	18	20
September.....	22	42	78	80	26	22	34
October.....	34	55	94	101	34	20	30
November.....	26	40	97	68	19	18	23
December.....	27	48	66	49	13	7	12
Total.....	330	520	858	705	317	223	231

The aggregate arrivals of steamboats at St. Louis during the year 1850, was 2907; 1851, 2625, and 1852, 3184. The shipping owned in the district, June 30, 1852, according to the custom-house returns, amounted to an aggregate of 37,861⁸/₇ tons enrolled and licensed, of which 32,646³/₇ were employed in steam navigation.

A statement of the imports at St. Louis for the year ending December 31, 1852, as compared with previous years, will show a large falling off, particularly in regard to grain. The cause of this is no doubt attributable in a great measure to the almost unprecedented low stage of the rivers; from June to December the Mississippi and its tributaries in that section barely contained sufficient depth of water for the smallest class of boats, and on the Illinois barges had to be resorted to for the usual transportation of produce. The principal deficit will be found in hemp, lead, flour, wheat, corn, and oats; and the following comparative table, prepared by a committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce at St. Louis, will exhibit a few of the leading articles of import for three consecutive seasons, ending December 31st, 1852.

ARTICLES.	1852.	1851.	1850.
Pork, bbls. and tierces	69,010	118,806	82,173
Beef, " "	17,709	14,482	7,987
Lard, " "	42,515	52,208	54,960
Lard, kegs	11,815	14,450	33,069
Bacon, casks and hds	11,283	16,791	26,797
Bacon, pieces	18,800	6,629	58,689
Flour, bbls.	135,333	198,892	292,718
Wheat, bushels	1,591,886	1,700,708	1,900,088
Corn, "	689,440	1,800,900	968,028
Oats, "	646,162	794,431	697,432
Hemp, tons	8,187	10,908	10,146
Rope, coils	44,121	34,791	26,507
Tobacco, hds.	14,053	11,038	9,216
Lead, pigs	469,514	540,000	567,496
Sugar, hds.	35,283	29,276	25,796
Sugar, bbls. and boxes	27,672	36,687	16,359
Coffee, bags	96,240	101,904	73,673
Molasses, bbls	54,938	40,281	29,518
Salt, sacks	266,616	266,953	261,330
Salt, bbls	42,251	46,250	19,158

There were also received at St. Louis during the year 1852, 97,148 hides; 46,446 barrels of whiskey; 47,264 sacks of barley and malt; 3650 pieces of bagging; 42,201 kegs of nails, and 16,810,575 feet of lumber. The quantity of wood received by water from June 6 to September 24, 1853, amounted to 13,769 cords. The other principal articles of domestic import are butter, cheese, tallow, hay, furs, fruits, beans, seeds, potatoes, onions, feathers, and beeswax. St. Louis is one of the most important ports in the West for the shipment of cattle. It is estimated that 300 head per week during the past year have been sent to Southern markets, making in all over 15,000.

The annexed table exhibits the kind and value of the foreign merchandise entered at the St. Louis custom house during the two years ending December 31, 1852:—

ARTICLES.	1852.	1851.
Sugar and Molasses	$413,172	$289,753
Hardware, cutlery, &c.	118,276	133,401
Railroad iron	132,694	100,211
Earthen and glass ware	80,729	98,786
Tin-plate, tin, iron, copper, &c.	59,826	31,482
Dry and fancy goods	110,814	24,287
Brandy, wine, gin, cordials, &c.	32,985	24,712
Burr stones	420	2,257
Drugs and medicines	756	2,618
Cigars	5773
Total	$954,946	$757,509
Duties collected	290,168	239,318

Of the above, $481,843 value were from England, $262,886 from Spain and dependencies, $93,086 from Brazil, and $75,258 from France. The importations of dry goods for the year were estimated at $7,000,000, (an increase of nearly one million over the previous year,) and the sales at $8,500,000. This, however, only has reference to the wholesale business. Including the retail trade of the city, the entire imports were estimated at $10,500,000, and the sales at $13,000,000. The business of the heaviest wholesale houses amounts to from half a million to eight hundred thousand dollars annually.

The manufactures of St. Louis, although in their infancy, are hardly less important than her commerce. The flouring business is carried on here more extensively than in any city of the West. The product of the various mills for 1852 amounted to 393,184 barrels, and their daily capacity is estimated at 3000 barrels. At Belcher's sugar-refinery, which is one of the most extensive in the Union, the yield for the same year amounted to 16,563 boxes, 7658 hogsheads, 12,457 barrels, and 29,848 bags of refined sugar, besides 103,560 packages and 10,567 barrels refined from molasses and cane syrup. There are also several other sugar refiners. The manufacture of different kinds of chemicals and oils is extensively carried on. The quantity of oil produced from lard in 1852 was estimated at between 4000 and 5000 barrels—an increase of 1000 barrels over the previous year. There are in St. Louis 10 establishments for the manufacture of tobacco, several of which are on a large scale; these yielded in 1852, 8000 packages, consuming 700 hogsheads of raw material. The manufacture of hemp into bale-rope and bagging, and the distilling of whiskey, also employ a large amount of capital. But however important these several interests may be in themselves, they can hardly be regarded as the most important to St. Louis. Indeed there can be no doubt that the development of the vast mineral resources of the region tributary to her, is destined to exert a controlling influence upon the future of this metropolis. Her manufactures of iron already exceed those of any other city on the Mississippi, if not in the West. Numerous foundries annually turn out stoves and other castings to a large amount. Railing, machinery, and steam-engines are extensively manufactured. A large establishment for the production of locomotives has gone into operation the present season. Mining operations have already been commenced at Iron Mountain: from this source, Messrs. Chouteau, Valli & Harrison obtain the material for their extensive rolling mill. Coopering and the packing of meat are likewise important branches of business: the latter, for 1852, comprised 47,000 hogs, and about 3000 barrels of beef. The above statements indicate only a few of the leading manufactures of St. Louis. According to the census returns of 1850, the number of establishments in operation in the city exceeded 13,000, comprising about 100 different manufactures, which amounted in value to upwards of $15,000,000. Since then nearly every branch of this species of industry has been greatly extended, so that the business of 1853 will probably exceed $24,000,000.

The Bank of the State of Missouri is the only chartered banking institution in St. Louis, or in Missouri. It has five branches, viz. one at Fayette, one at Jackson, one at Lexington, one at Palmyra, and one at Springfield. The condition of the institution at the commencement of 1852, was as follows: bank capital, $1,028,751; circulation, $2,400,000; coin in bank, $1,500,000. The whole number of bonds outstanding against the city in October, 1853, amounted to $2,735,296, and the interest on the same for the year, to $165,103.75. The entire revenue of the city, from April 11 to October 4, 1853, amounted to $414,252.32, and the expenditures for the same period, to $412,914.22. Of the latter sum, $44,938.92, was for improving and cleaning the streets; $24,475.64, for wharf improvements; $19,611.54, the cost of the police department; $17,583.60, for lighting the city; $11,879.99, for the City Hospital, and $7302.30, the expenses of the fire department.

The natural advantages which St. Louis enjoys as a commercial emporium are probably not surpassed by those of any inland port in the world. Situated midway between two oceans, and near the geographical centre of the finest agricultural region on the globe, almost at the very focus towards which converge the Mississippi, the Missouri, the Ohio, and the Illinois rivers, there can be no doubt that she is destined at no distant period to become the great receiving and distributing depôt of most of the vast region drained by these streams. Having already reached an enviable position among her sister cities, she is looking westward, with a system of railways intended not only to bring to her markets the agricultural and mineral treasures of the Missouri basin, but eventually to extend beyond the Rocky mountains to the valley of the Great Salt Lake, and finally to the golden shores of the Pacific ocean. Her connection with the Atlantic cities, through Cincinnati and Chicago, is already secured beyond contingency. The construction of railroads penetrating various sections of her own state, designed ultimately to communicate with New Orleans, are also about to be undertaken. Of these, the Iron Mountain, the North Missouri, and the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroads are already chartered, and soon to be commenced. The Pacific Company proposes to take the St. Louis representatives to Jefferson City at the next session of the legislature, and the Ohio and Mississippi road is to be completed as far as the Illinois Central railroad by January next, and to Vincennes in the July following. The opening of these various railways, and others proposed, will give St. Louis ready access to immense deposits of iron, coal, lead, and copper ores, within a circuit of 90 miles, equal to the wants of the whole Mississippi valley for centuries to come, and which have not to this time been brought into use, simply because of the difficulty and expense of reaching a market. Therefore, with all the commercial facilities which this metropolis now enjoys—facilities which have hitherto been productive of prosperity almost beyond example—what may she not become when the vast system of railways here contemplated shall have gone into operation!

History.—Among the many sites which the vast domain of uninhabited territory in the Mississippi valley presented for founding a city, that on which St. Louis now stands was selected by Laclède on the 15th of February, 1764, as one possessing peculiar advantages for the fur trade and for defence against the Indians. The confluence of the different rivers in the immediate neighborhood was a desideratum in the estimation of the trapper: it has become of vast importance to the place in establishing it as a centre for agricultural and manufacturing enterprises. The statistics of these early times show that for 15 successive years ending in 1804, the annual value of the furs collected at this port amounted to $203,750. The number of deer skins was 153,000; of beaver, 36,900; of otter, 8000; of bear, 5100, and of buffalo, 850. The population at this period was between 1500 and 2000, one-half of whom were absent a great part of each year as trappers and voyagers. It will readily be perceived that the elements which gave the settlement existence were not of a character adequate to foster it beyond the limits of a frontier village; and accordingly, as late as 1820, we find the accession of population had not swelled the original very materially. Up to this date the census only shows an advance to 4598. Military expeditions and establishments, together with a sparse immigration, confined to those peculiar temperaments which delight in the wild and adventurous, still kept up a progressive improvement, which centring here for personal security as well as for trade, still fixed it as the seat of a commercial and manufacturing metropolis, destined in a few years to become an object of interest throughout the world. On the 11th of August, 1763, a Spanish officer by the name of Rious, with a company of Spanish troops, took possession of St. Louis and Upper Louisiana, as it was termed, in the name of his Catholic majesty, under whose government it remained until its final transfer to the United States, March 26, 1804. In 1813 the first brick house was erected; in 1817 the first steamboat arrived—both important events, but neither of which became frequent until several years after. In 1822, St. Louis was chartered as a city, under the title given by Laclede, in honor of Louis XV. of France. From 1825 to 1830, the influx of population from Illinois began to be of importance. From this state the commerce of St. Louis received its first great impulse, and from this state it still derives a large portion of its support. With 1829 the keel-boat entirely disappeared. The steamer Yellowstone about this time ascended to the great falls, and was succeeded by the Assinaboine and others. Dry-goods houses were already established, and these sent out retail branches to Springfield and other places in Illinois. Extensive warehouses began to be erected, some of which are still standing, having survived the great fire. They rose from their solid limestone foundations, built on a scale which shows that the impressions of the present were vividly portrayed to the minds of the people of that day.

The population of St. Louis in 1830 was 6694, showing an increase of only 2096 in ten years. In 1840 it had much more than doubled, having reached 16,469. Between these periods, therefore, we are to look for the commencement of that vast increase which has so distinguished the growth of this city. Population in 1850, 75,204 free, and 2650 slaves: total, 77,850. Of these, 23,774 were born in Germany; 11,257 in Ireland; 2933 in England, and 2450 in other foreign countries—making an aggregate of 40,414 natives of foreign countries, and 37,436 natives of the United States. By a local census of 1852, St. Louis contained a population of 94,819, and if to this we add the population of the suburbs, it would swell the number to upwards of 100,000 souls, being an increase of about 20,000 since 1850, and of nearly 84,000 since 1840.

ST. LOUIS RIVER rises in Itasca county, Minnesota, and falls into the W. extremity of Lake Superior. It forms part of the boundary between Minnesota and Wisconsin. The navigation is much impeded by cascades and rapids. Length about 200 miles.

ST. LOUISVILLE, a post-village of Licking co., Ohio, on the railroad between Sandusky and Newark, 7 miles N. from the latter.

ST. LUCIE, a county of Florida, in the S. E. part of the peninsula, bordering on the Atlantic. It is intersected by Kissinee river, and contains Lake Okechobee, which is about 30 miles in diameter. St. Lucie sound washes the eastern border of the county. The surface is flat, and but little higher than the sea. The county contains extensive forests of pine. The census of 1850 furnishes no statistics of this county except the population, which was 139.

ST. LUKE, a post-office of Dallas co., Mo. ST. MARIE, a small post-village of Jasper co., Illinois, on the Embarras river, 120 miles S. E. by E. from Springfield.

ST. MARK, a post-office of Greene co., Mo. ST. MARK'S, a post-village, port of entry, and capital of Wakulla county, Florida, on St. Mark's river, near its junction with the Wakulla, 6 miles from Appalachee bay, and 22 miles S. from Tallahassee, with which it is connected by railroad. Vessels drawing 7 or 8 feet can ascend from the Gulf to this place, which is the port of Tallahassee. June, 1852, 118 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons of shipping were owned in the dist.

ST. MARK'S LIGHTHOUSE, showing a fixed light 73 feet high, is on the E. side of the entrance to St. Mark's harbor, Appalachee bay, Florida. Lat. 30° 4' N., lon. 84° 20' W.

ST. MARK'S RIVER, a small stream of Florida, rises in Leon co., flows S. E., and enters the Appalachee river, an arm of Appalachee bay. It is navigable by small boats.

ST. MARTIN'S, a parish in the S. part of Louisiana, bordering on Grand (Chetimaches) lake, contains 750 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by Grand river, and intersected by Atchafalaya and Teche bayous. The surface is level; the soil along the streams is very productive. Sugar, cotton, and Indian corn flourish here, and many cattle are exported. In 1850 this parish produced 4188 hogsheds of sugar; 237,160 gallons of molasses; 4073 bales of cotton, and 517,401 bushels of Indian corn, being the greatest quantity of that article raised in any one parish of the state except Assumption parish. It contained 4 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 350 pupils attending public schools, and 28 attending an academy. The bayous above named are navigated by large steamers. The railroad which has been commenced from New Orleans to Opelousas is expected to pass through this parish. Capital, St. Martinsville. Pop., 11,761, of whom 5272 were free, and 6489, slaves.

ST. MARTIN'S, a post-village of Worcester county, Maryland, on the river of its own name, about 120 miles S. E. from Annapolis. Grain and lumber are shipped here in sloops.

ST. MARTIN'S, a small village of Orangeburg district, South Carolina.

ST. MARTIN'S RIVER, a small stream in the S. E. part of Maryland, traverses part of Worcester county, and flows into Sinepuxent sound. It is navigable for sloops 12 miles.

ST. MARTINSVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of St. Martin's parish, Louisiana, on the right bank of the River Teche, 125 miles W. S. W. from Baton Rouge. Large steamers ascend the river 200 miles. Pop. in 1853, 1400.

ST. MARY, a thriving post-village of Mills co., Iowa, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. of the left bank of the Missouri, on a fine level prairie, 230 miles nearly W. from Iowa City. Here is a steam ferry to Bellevue, the best crossing place on the river above St. Joseph. A weekly paper, the St. Mary Gazette, is published here.

ST. MARY'S, a county in the S. part of Maryland, bordering on Chesapeake bay, at the mouths of Potomac and Patuxent rivers, has an area of about 250 square miles. It occupies the southern extremity of the division of the state called the Western Shore, and consists of a neck of land between the Patuxent on the N. E., and the broad estuary of the Potomac, which separates it from Virginia on the S. W. It is indented in every direction by navigable creeks or inlets, so that every part is within a few miles of the tide-water. The surface is nearly level; the soil moderately fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 378,461 bushels of corn; 156,369 of wheat, and 71,950 pounds of butter. There were 9 grist mills and 1 cotton factory. It contained 21 churches, 1 newspaper office; 494 pupils attending public schools, and 115 attending academies or other schools. Settled about the year 1634. Capital, Leonardtown. Population, 13,698, of whom 7856 were free, and 5842, slaves.

ST. MARY'S, a parish in the S. part of Louisiana, bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, contains about 860 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by Lake Chetimaches, and watered by the Atchafalaya and Teche bayous. The surface is flat; the soil is alluvial and fertile. Sugar, cotton, and beef are the principal exports. In 1850 this parish produced 24,765 hogsheads of sugar, (being the greatest quantity made in any one county of the United States;) 897,660 gallons of molasses, and 305,290 bushels of Indian corn. It contained 3 churches, 1 newspaper office, 98 pupils attending public schools, and 15 attending another school. Teche bayou is navigable by large steamboats for 200 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. Capital, Franklin. The New Orleans and Opelousas projected railroad will pass through this parish. Population, 13,697, of whom 3847 were free, and 9850, slaves.

ST. MARY'S, a post-office of Chester co., Pa.

ST. MARY'S, a village of Elk co., Pennsylvania, 155 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

ST. MARY'S, a post-office of Wood co., Va.

ST. MARY'S, a post-village and port of entry of Camden county, Georgia, is beautifully situated on St. Mary's river, 9 miles from the sea. The harbor is accessible to the largest vessels. The situation is healthy, and the climate is favorable to persons of weak lungs. It is the chief town of the county, and contains a court house, an academy, 5 churches, and 10 stores. The shipping of the port, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 160 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons registered, and 502 $\frac{3}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, 428 $\frac{1}{8}$ tons were employed in the coast trade. Population about 800.

ST. MARY'S, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Auglaize co., Ohio, intersected by the Miami canal. Population, 694.

ST. MARY'S, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the Miami canal, 105 miles W. N. W. from Columbus. St. Mary's river flows through the place. It was formerly the capital of Mercer county. About 3 miles W. from the village is an artificial lake or reservoir, 9 miles long and 3 or 4 broad, formed in 1845, to supply the canal. It lies on the summit level between the Ohio river and Lake Erie. The roofs of deserted cabins and the forests of dead trees which appear above the water, present a very singular spectacle. Certain citizens of the county, whose property was thus invaded, a few years ago assembled vi et armis and opened a passage through the embankment. Population, 873.

ST. MARY'S, a township in Adams co., Indiana. Population, 611.

ST. MARY'S, a post-office of Vigo co., Ind.

ST. MARY'S, a post-office of Hancock co., Ill.

ST. MARY'S, a post-village in Linn co., Iowa, about 20 miles N. by E. from Iowa City.

ST. MARY'S, a post-office of Lafayette co., Wis.

ST. MARY'S LANDING, a post-village of St. Genevieve co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river, 70 miles below St. Louis.

ST. MARY'S LIGHTHOUSE, on the N. point of Amelia island, at the entrance to St. Mary's river, Florida. It shows a revolving light 50 feet high. Lat. 30° 40' N., lon. 81° 36' W.

ST. MARY'S RIVER, of Georgia and Florida, rises in the S. E. part of the former state, and flows southward to the border of Florida. During the whole of its subsequent course, it forms the boundary between the two states until it enters the Atlantic. Its whole length is about 100 miles. Its mouth forms a good harbor, with 13 feet of water over the bar at low tide.

ST. MARY'S RIVER rises in the W. part of Ohio, and flowing into Indiana, unites with the St. Joseph's river at Fort Wayne to form the Maumee.

ST. MARY'S STRAIT separates Canada West from the upper peninsula of Michigan, and connects Lake Superior with Lake Huron. It commences at the S. E. extremity of the former lake, and after a general south-easterly course of about 60 miles, enters Lake Huron by three channels. The rapids at Saut Ste. Marie have a descent of 22 feet within three-fourths of a mile. A ship-canal, now constructing around these rapids, forms the last link in the chain of communication between the great lakes.

ST. MATTHEWS, a post-village of Orangeburg district, South Carolina.

ST. MATTHEWS, a post-office of Jefferson co., Kentucky.

ST. MAURICE, a post-office of Winn parish, Louisiana.

ST. MICHAEL'S, a post-village of Talbot co., Maryland, on St. Michael's river, a navigable inlet of Chesapeake bay, 57 miles S. E. from Annapolis, and 12 miles W. from Easton. It is a place of active trade. Pop., 863.

ST. MICHAEL'S RIVER, of Talbot county, Maryland, flows first S. S. W., and then curving, takes a northerly course, falling into Chesapeake bay nearly opposite the S. end of Kent island.

ST. OMER, a post-township of Decatur co., Indiana. Population, 336.

ST. OMER, a pleasant post-village of Decatur co., Indiana, on the Michigan (plank) road, 36 miles S. E. from Indianapolis. Population, about 400.

ST. OMER, a post-office of Coles co., Ill.

ST. PARIS, a thriving post-village of Champlain county, Ohio, on the railroad from Urbana to Piqua, 52 miles W. from Columbus, is situated in a rich farming district, and has an active trade. Pop. in 1853, about 800.

ST. PAUL, a post-office of Clarke co., Ala.

ST. PAUL, a post-office of Madison co., Ark.

ST. PAUL, a post-office of Greene co., Mo.

ST. PAUL, a flourishing city, port of entry, capital of Minnesota Territory, and seat of justice of Ramsey county, on the left bank of the Mississippi, 2070 miles from its mouth, and 9 miles by land below the Falls of St. Anthony. Lat. $44^{\circ} 52' 46''$ N., lon. $93^{\circ} 5'$ W. It is situated on a bluff 70 or 80 feet high, and presents a striking view from the river. The hills or bluffs which partly encircle the town abound in excellent springs. It is at the head of steamboat navigation, and is a place of active business. It was first settled about 1840, and in 1849 it contained 1 church, 2 printing offices, 3 hotels, 10 stores, 4 warehouses, 2 drug stores, and 1 school house. A fine state house, 140 feet long and 53 feet wide, surmounted by a handsome dome, has just been erected. St. Paul now contains 5 or 6 churches, 4 hotels, 2 or 3 printing offices, 1 book store, 2 drug stores, numerous other stores, and several saw mills. The Baldwin school of this place is a well conducted and flourishing institution. The population in 1850 was 1294; in 1853, it is estimated at 6000.

ST. PAUL'S, a post-office of Robeson co., North Carolina.

ST. PETER'S, a post-office of Chester co., Pennsylvania.

ST. PETER'S, a post-office of Franklin co., Indiana.

ST. PETER'S, or MINNESOTA RIVER, a river of Minnesota Territory, having its source in a group of small lakes in about $45^{\circ} 40'$ N. lat., and $97^{\circ} 15'$ W. lon. It flows in a general E. S. E. direction till it receives the waters of Blue Earth river, in about $44^{\circ} 12'$ N. lat., and $94^{\circ} 6'$ W. lon., where it changes its course to N. N. E., and afterwards to E. and N. E., falling at last into the Mississippi river at Fort Snelling. The entire length is estimated at about 450 miles. It is navigable in high water for steamboats, near 60 miles from its mouth.

ST. REGIS RIVER rises in Franklin county, New York, and flowing through St. Lawrence county, falls into the St. Lawrence river near its intersection with the boundary line between the United States and Canada.

ST. SIMOND'S ISLAND, Atlantic ocean, S. side of the entrance to the Altamaha. On its S. point is a fixed light, having an elevation of 75 feet. Lat. $31^{\circ} 8'$ N., lon. $81^{\circ} 36'$ W.

ST. STEPHEN, a post-office of Fauquier co., Virginia.

ST. STEPHEN'S, a post-village of Washington co., Alabama, on the Tombigbee river, 100 miles by water N. from Mobile.

ST. TAMMANY, a parish in the S. E. part of Louisiana, bordering on the Mississippi and Lake Pontchartrain, contains about 1200 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by Pearl river, and drained by Chifuntee river and Bogue Chitto. The surface is uneven, and partly occupied by pine barrens. Sweet potatoes, rice, and Indian corn are among the staple products. In 1850 there were raised 22,352 bushels of sweet potatoes; 17,849 of corn, and 97,793 pounds of rice. There were 21 saw and planing mills and 15 brick-yards. It contained 13 churches, 1 newspaper office, 500 pupils attending public schools, and 170 attending academies or other schools. Covington is the seat of justice. Pop., 6364; of whom 4001 were free, and 2363, slaves.

ST. TAMMANY'S, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., Virginia.

ST. THOMAS, a post-township of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles W. from Chambersburg. Population, 1957.

ST. THOMAS, a post-village in the above township, 52 miles S. W. from Harrisburg. Population in 1853, 500.

ST. WENDELL'S, a post-office of Posey co., Indiana.

SALADO, a post-office of Bell co., Texas.

SALADO CREEK, of Bexar co., Texas, enters San Antonio river from the N., about 15 miles S. S. E. from the town of San Antonio.

SALAMONIA, a post-office of Jay co., Ind.

SALAMONIE river, of Indiana, rises in Jay county, and flowing north-eastward, enters the Wabash river opposite Lagro. In width and volume of water it is nearly equal to the Wabash at their confluence. It furnishes excellent water-power.

SALEM, a county in the S. W. part of New Jersey, has an area of about 540 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Delaware river, on the N. E. by Oldman's creek, and on the E. and S. E. by Maurice river and Stow creek, and is drained by Salem and Alloway's creeks, which afford valuable water-power. The surface is level; the soil in the northern and western portions is clay or loam, more or less sandy, and generally productive. In the S. E. part the soil is sandy or gravelly and less fertile; it yields, however, much timber of oak and pine, which are said to succeed each other alternately when a clearing is made. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 825,622 bushels of corn; 173,871 of wheat; 226,918 of oats; 190,745 of potatoes; 27,882 tons of hay, and 399,097 pounds of butter. There were 15 flour mills, 16 saw mills, 2 chandleries, 1 cordage manufactory, 3 coach manufactories, 1 pottery, 2 ship-yards, and 5 tanneries. It contained 41 churches, and 2 newspaper offices; 3263 pupils attending public schools, and 125 attending academies or other schools. Marl is abundant in various places, and is used as a manure; iron ore is also found, but not in great quantities. A short canal of 3 or 4 miles connects Salem creek, navigable for shallops, with the Delaware, saving a distance to the craft which navigate the creek of about 20 miles. Organized in 1710, when it included the whole of the present county of Cumberland, and named from Salem, the seat of justice, which was founded by John Fenwicke in 1675. Population, 19,467.

SALEM, a post-township of Franklin co., Maine, about 50 miles N. W. by N. from Augusta. Population, 454.

SALEM, a post-village in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, on the Manchester and Lawrence railroad, 35 miles S. E. by S. from Concord. Population of the township, 1555.

SALEM, a township in Orleans co., Vermont, on the S. E. shore of Lake Memphremagog, 50 miles N. E. from Montpelier. Pop., 455.

SALEM, a city, port of entry, and one of the capitals of Essex county, Massachusetts, is situated chiefly on a tongue of land formed by two inlets of the sea, called North and South rivers, 14 miles N. by E. from Boston. Lat. 42° 31' 18" N., lon. 70° 53' 53" W. It extends nearly 2 miles in length, and three-quarters of a mile in breadth, occupying the peninsula from shore to shore. The streets are generally irregular. Chestnut street is considered the handsomest. It is finely shaded with elms, and on either side are rows of elegant mansions. In the eastern section of the city is a beautiful public ground, containing 8½ acres. Salem is for the most part well built, largely of wood, but partly also of brick and stone. The principal public buildings are the city hall, erected in 1837; the court house, a new and handsome edifice; Marine Hall, Mechanic Hall, and the churches, of which there are 19 or 20. Salem is distinguished for the number and standing of its scientific and literary institutions; among which may be mentioned the East India Marine Society, formed in 1799 by those who, acting either as captains or supercargoes, had made one or more voyages around the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn. The museum comprises a highly interesting and valuable cabinet of natural and artificial curiosities, collected from all parts of the world. The Essex Institute, organized in 1848, by the union of the Essex Historical and Essex County Natural History societies, has a library of about 8000 volumes, and a good cabinet of natural history. The Salem Athenæum, formed in 1810, by the union of the Social and Philosophical libraries, contains 12,500 volumes. The Essex Agricultural Society, organized in 1818, has a library of agricultural works deposited in the city hall. By the census of 1850, there were in Salem 10 public libraries, with an aggregate of 23,300 volumes; 27 private libraries, of over 1000 volumes each, with an aggregate of 55,650 volumes; public school libraries, 3995 volumes, and Sabbath-school libraries, 3700 volumes, making a total of 86,645 volumes. The benevolent institutions are a hospital and an almshouse. Salem has excellent public schools. In 1852 there were in the city 1 Latin and 2 high schools; 7 grammar, and 17 intermediate and primary schools, attended by 3058 pupils. The total amount of money expended for school purposes during the year 1851-2 was $82,741.60. Six newspapers are published in the city.

Salem has a convenient harbor, affording good anchorage and extensive railroad communication with the interior. In commercial importance it has always held a high rank among the cities of New England. In 1818 it had 53 vessels, with an aggregate burthen of 14,272 tons, engaged in the East India trade. This branch of industry has of late years considerably declined—many of the cargoes formerly received here being discharged at the ports of Boston and New York. December, 1852, there were owned in Salem 22 ships, with an aggregate burthen of 15,196 tons; 40 barques, 11,235 tons; 33 brigs, 5416 tons; 4 whalers, and several other vessels, besides 17,500 tons employed in the coast trade and the fisheries—making a total of 50,455 tons. The foreign arrivals for the year ending June 30th, 1852, were 448, (tons, 40,721,) of which 367 (tons, 26,040) were by foreign vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 437, (tons, 40,084,) of which 26,206 were in foreign bottoms.

Manufacturing is carried on to a considerable extent. The Naumcag Steam Cotton Company, incorporated in 1839, have a building 405 feet by 65, and 4 stories high, and run 32,768 spindles. The Salem Laboratory Company manufacture sulphuric acid and other chemicals to the amount of about $100,000 annually. Another establishment yearly turns out 1,500,000 pounds of cleaned copal. Besides the above, there are manufactories of machinery, black and white lead, sperm oil, candles, cordage, twine, &c. The annual receipts for tanning and currying is about $650,000, and for boots and shoes upwards of $200,000. Salem has 7 banks with an aggregate capital of $1,750,000, a savings institution, and 6 or 7 insurance companies. An aqueduct supplies the city with excellent spring-water. Two bridges, one for ordinary travel, 1481 feet in length, and the other for the passage of railroad cars, span the North river and communicate with Beverly Next to Plymouth, Salem is the oldest town in New England, having been first settled in 1626. In 1629, eleven ships arrived from England, bringing out 1500 persons, by whom settlements were commenced at Charlestown, Boston, and other places: 200 of these settlers died the first winter. During this year, (1629,) the first complete church organization ever effected in North America was founded at Salem, with the Rev. Francis Higginson as its pastor. About the year 1692 prevailed the famous "witchcraft" delusion, through which 19 persons in this and the neighboring towns were condemned and executed. The house in which the accused had their trials is still standing, and the place of their execution, a beautiful eminence overlooking the city, is now known as "Gallows Hill." Salem was distinguished for its patriotic zeal during the Revolutionary war. It is said that 60 armed vessels, manned by 4000 men, were fitted out from this port as privateers. Incorporated as a town in 1630, and as a city in 1836. The Indian name was Naumag. Population in 1840, 15,082; in 1850, 20,263, and in 1853, about 22,500.

SALEM, a post-township in New London co., Connecticut, 33 miles S. E. from Hartford. Population, 764.

SALEM, a village of Chautauque co., New York, near Lake Erie, about 50 miles W. S. W. from Buffalo.

SALEM, a post-village in Salem township and semi-capital of Washington co., New York, on White creek, and on the Rutland and Washington railroad, 48 miles N. N. E. from Albany. It contains several churches, an academy, and a newspaper office. Population of the township, 2904.

SALEM, a thriving post-town, capital of Salem co., New Jersey, is situated on a creek of its own name, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from its mouth, about 65 miles S. W. from Trenton. It contains several fine churches and public schools, a bank, 2 newspaper offices, and many beautiful private residences. The building for the county offices is a handsome structure. This town owes its prosperity chiefly to the agricultural resources of the county, which are very great and still increasing. It has a daily communication by steamboat with Philadelphia, and a branch of the proposed railroad between Camden and Cape May will probably extend to Salem. Salem creek is navigable for vessels of 50 tons burthen to this place. Population, in 1853, near 4000.

SALEM, a township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania, on the North branch of the Susquehanna, and on the North Branch canal, 20 miles W. S. W. from Wilkesbarre. Pop., 1130.

SALEM, a post-township of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, intersected by Shenango creek, 15 miles N. N. W. from Mercer. Pop., 2196.

SALEM, a township of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles W. S. W. from Honesdale. Population, 1454.

SALEM, a township of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Pennsylvania or Central railroad, 10 miles N. from Greensburg. Population, 2065.

SALEM, a post-village of Fauquier co., Virginia, 114 miles N. N. W. from Richmond. The situation is high and pleasant. The village contains 1 church, an academy, and several stores. The post-office is called Salem Fauquier.

SALEM, a neat post-village, capital of Roanoke co., Virginia, is situated on the Roanoke river, and on the Virginia and Tennessee railroad, 180 miles W. from Richmond. It stands in the great valley between the Blue Ridge and North mountain. It contains 1 bank, 3 churches, and several mills.

SALEM, a thriving post-village of Forsyth co., North Carolina, on Muddy creek, an affluent of the Yadkin river, 120 miles W. by N. from Raleigh. The Moravian Female Seminary of this place is one of the largest in the state, occupying 4 large brick buildings, with about 200 pupils. Salem contains a bank, 2 cotton factories, 1 woollen factory, and 1 paper mill, and is noted for the number and skill of its mechanics. Winston, the county seat, was laid out immediately N. from Salem when the county was organized in 1850. Population, in 1853, about 1200.

SALEM, a post-village in Sumter district, South Carolina, 91 miles E. from Columbia.

SALEM, a post-village of Clarke co., Georgia, 53 miles N. from Milledgeville.

SALEM, a post-village in the N. E. part of Russell co., Alabama. It contains several stores, and about 400 inhabitants.

SALEM, a thriving post-village of Tippah co., Mississippi, 18 miles W. from Ripley. It is near the route of the Memphis and Charleston railroad, now in progress, and is surrounded by fine cotton lands. It contains 2 seminaries, and 6 or 8 stores. Population, in 1853, about 800.

SALEM, a post-office of Newton co., Texas.

SALEM, a small post-village, capital of Fulton co., Arkansas, about 140 miles N. by E. from Little Rock.

SALEM, a post-village in Franklin co., Tennessee, 90 miles S. by E. from Nashville.

SALEM, a post-village of Livingston co., Kentucky, about 230 miles W. S. W. from Frankfort. It was formerly the county seat.

SALEM, a village of Pendleton co., Kentucky, on the Licking river, which is navigable to this place for small steamboats. It is a depôt for tobacco, which is produced in the vicinity.

SALEM, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Auglaize co., Ohio, intersected by the Miami canal. Population, 400.

SALEM, a township in the N. part of Champaign co., Ohio, intersected by the Mad River and Lake Erie railroad. Population, 1634.

SALEM, a post-township in the central part of Columbiana co., Ohio. Population, 1960.

SALEM, a beautiful and thriving post-town of Perry township, Columbiana co., Ohio, on the Ohio and Pennsylvania railroad, 167 miles N. E. from Columbus, and 66 miles N. W. from Pittsburg. It is surrounded by a rich farming community, and is one of the most flourishing and important commercial towns in the E. part of Ohio. The village contains 4 churches, 2 Friends' meeting houses, about 20 stores, 1 academy, 1 bank, 3 foundries, and 2 woollen factories. Three newspapers are issued here. Pork to the amount of 700,000 lbs. was sold in Salem in 1852. Population, in 1853, about 2500.

SALEM, a township in the W. part of Highland co., Ohio. Population, 813.

SALEM, a township in the W. part of Jefferson co., Ohio. Population, 2191.

SALEM, a township in the W. part of Meigs co., Ohio. Population, 1415.

SALEM, a township in the E. part of Monroe co., Ohio. Population, 1111.

SALEM, a small village of Montgomery co., O.

SALEM, a township in the N. E. part of Muskingum co., Ohio. Population, 1111.

SALEM, a township in the S. part of Ottawa co., Ohio. Population, 187.

SALEM, a township in the E. part of Shelby co., Ohio. Population, 1210.

SALEM, a township in the S. W. part of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, intersected by the Ohio canal. Population, 1853.

SALEM, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Warren co., Ohio. Pop., 2755.

SALEM, a township in the N. E. part of Washington co., Ohio. Population, 1246.

SALEM, a township in Wyandott co., Ohio. Population, 738.

SALEM, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Washtenaw co., Michigan. Population, 1343.

SALEM, a small post-village in the above township, 30 miles W. by N. from Detroit.

SALEM, a township in Delaware co., Indiana. Population, 843.

SALEM, a township in Pulaski co., Indiana. Population, 168.

SALEM, a small village of Randolph co., Indiana, 83 miles N. E. from Indianapolis.

SALEM, a township in Steuben co., Indiana. Population, 550.

SALEM, a thriving post-village, capital of Washington co., Indiana, on the New Albany and Salem railroad, 36 miles N. W. from New Albany. It is pleasantly situated on rolling ground, near the source of the Blue river, and in the midst of a rich farming district. A plank-road connects it with Brownstown, and the above railroad is in process of extension to Chicago. Salem contains, besides the county buildings, churches of various denominations, 3 or 4 newspaper offices, a county academy, and many handsome residences. It has also manufactories of cotton, wool, and flour. Population in 1850, 1224; in 1853, estimated at 2000.

SALEM, a township in Carroll co., Illinois. Population, 272.

SALEM, a thriving post-village, capital of Marion co., Illinois, on the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, 75 miles E. from St. Louis. Population in 1853, estimated at 800.

SALEM, a small village of Dent co., Mo.

SALEM, a post-village of Henry co., Iowa, about 30 miles W. from Burlington.

SALEM, a township in the W. central part of Kenosha co., Wisconsin. Population, 1123.

SALEM, a post-office of Racine co., Wis.

SALEM, a post-town, seat of justice of Marion county, and capital of Oregon Territory, on the right (E.) bank of Willamette river, 50 miles above Oregon city. It is beautifully situated in a rich prairie country, and is one of the most flourishing towns in the territory. Population in 1853, estimated at 1000.

SALEM CENTRE, a post-office of Westchester co., New York.

SALEM CENTRE, a post-office of Steuben co., Indiana.

SALEM CHURCH, a post-village in Randolph co., N. C., 121 miles W. from Raleigh.

SALEM CREEK, of Salem county, New Jersey, rises in the S. part of the county, and flowing at first N. N. W., and afterwards southerly, falls into Delaware bay, $2\frac{3}{4}$ miles below the town of Salem. There is a bar at the mouth, over which vessels cannot pass except at high tide. Above this it is navigable for about half its course, which is perhaps 30 miles.

SALEM CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Chautauque co., New York.

SALEM CROSS ROADS, a post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 180 miles W. from Harrisburg.

SALFORDVILLE, a small post-village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, about 13 miles N. N. W. from Norristown.

SALINA, a post-village in Salina township, Onondaga co., New York, on the E. shore of Onondaga lake, and on the Oswego canal, 2 miles N. by W. from Syracuse. It contains several churches, a bank, a large machine-shop, and extensive manufactories of salt, which produced in 1850, 2,175,711 bushels. The salt springs of this vicinity are the most valuable in the Union. See SYRACUSE. Two plank-roads terminate in Salina. Population of the township, 2142.

SALINA, a post-village in Jefferson co., Kentucky, 65 miles W. from Frankfort.

SALINA, a post-office of Jefferson co., Iowa.

SALINA RIVER, California. See SAN BUENAVENTURA RIVER.

SALINE, a county of Arkansas, situated near the centre of the state: area, 950 square miles. It is drained by Saline river. The surface in the N. W. is hilly, and in the S. nearly level; the soil is fertile, adapted to cotton, Indian corn and grass. In 1850 this county produced 1287 bales of cotton; 186,305 bushels of corn; 14,190 of sweet potatoes, and 29,855 pounds of butter. There were 4 tanneries, 1 flour and grist mill, and 1 saw mill. It contained 15 churches, and 500 pupils attending public schools. The streams furnish extensive water-power. Fine marble, soapstone, and quartz are abundant in the hilly section. Capital, Benton. Population, 3901; of whom 3398 were free, and 503, slaves.

SALINE, a county in the S. E. part of Illinois, bordering on Indiana and Kentucky, has an area of about 370 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Ohio and Wabash rivers, and intersected by Saline creek, from which its name is derived. The county is well timbered; the soil is fertile. Indian corn, oats, cattle, horses, swine, and lumber are the chief articles of export. In 1850 the county produced 341,900 bushels of Indian corn; 23,858 of oats, and 4799 of wheat. It contained 12 churches, and 410 pupils attending public schools. Salt is procured from springs on Saline creek, near the W. border. Formed a few years ago out of part of Gallatin. Capital, Shawneetown. Population, 5588.

SALINE, a county in the N. W. central part of Missouri, has an area of 750 square miles. The Missouri river forms the boundary on the N. and E.; and the county is traversed by the Black and Salt forks of La Mine river, which unite near the S. E. border. The surface consists chiefly of undulating prairies, the soil of which is productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, tobacco, and hemp are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 539,030 bushels of corn; 42,146 of wheat; 65,347 of oats, and 287,533 pounds of tobacco. It contained 11 churches, 1057 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending other schools. The deficiency of timber is partly compensated by extensive beds of stone coal. There are valuable lead mines, and quarries of limestone and sandstone. Salt is procured from numerous Saline springs, from which the name is derived. Capital, Marshall. Population, 8843; of whom 6124 were free, and 2719, slaves.

SALINE, a post-office of Bienville par., La.

SALINE, a township in Hempstead co., Arkansas. Population, 1184.

SALINE, a post-township in Sevier co., Arkansas. Population, 410.

SALINE, a township in the N. E. part of Jefferson co., Ohio. Population, 1090.

SALINE, a post-township in the S. part of Washtenaw co., Michigan. Pop., 1631.

SALINE, a post-village in the above township, on Saline river, 40 miles W. by S. from Detroit. It is situated in a rich farming district, and has several stores and mills. The salt springs in the vicinity are said to be valuable.

SALINE, a township in Saline co., Illinois. Population, 1176.

SALINE, a small post-village of Ralls co., Mo., 93 miles N. E. from Jefferson City.

SALINE, a township in St. Genevieve co., Missouri. Population, 837.

SALINE BAYOU, of Louisiana, commences at Catahoula lake, and flowing south-eastward, enters Red river, near the S. extremity of Catahoula parish.

SALINE BAYOU, of Louisiana, commences in Claiborne parish, and flowing southward, unites with a lateral channel of Red river, about 7 miles E. from Natchitoches.

SALINE CREEK, of Arkansas, rises in the W. part of the state, and flows southward into Little river, a few miles from its mouth.

SALINE CREEK, near the S. E. extremity of Illinois, is formed by two branches, termed the South and North forks. It falls into the Ohio river, about 10 miles below Shawneetown.

SALINE CREEK, or LITTLE SALINE, of Cooper county, Missouri, flows into the Missouri river from the right.

SALINE MILLS, a post-office of Natchitoches parish, Louisiana.

SALINE MINES, a post-office of Gallatin co., Illinois.

SALINE RIVER, of Arkansas, is formed by three small branches, which unite in Saline county, a few miles N. W. from Benton. It flows thence S. E. and S., and enters the Washita river, near the E. extremity of Union county. Its length is estimated at 200 miles. Branches.—The North fork rises near the N. border of Saline county. The Middle fork rises near the W. border of the same county, and flows south-eastward. The South fork rises in Hot Spring co., and flows eastward.

SALINE RIVER, of Michigan, a small stream which flows into the Raisin river, in Monroe co.

SALINEVILLE, a post-village of Columbiana co., Ohio, 140 miles N. E. from Columbus. Population in 1853, 350.

SALIQUEY, a post-office of Cass co., Ga.

SALISBURY, a post-township in Merrimack co., New Hampshire, intersected by Blackwater river and the Northern railroad, 18 miles N. N. W. from Concord. Pop., 1228.

SALISBURY, a post-township in Addison co., Vermont, intersected by the Rutland and Burlington railroad, 37 miles S. W. from Montpelier, contains a village of the same name, and a station on the above railroad. Population, 1027.

SALISBURY, a post-township in Essex co., Massachusetts, intersected by the Eastern railroad, 38 miles N. by E. from Boston, contains several villages, a bank and a savings' institution. Pop., 3100.

SALISBURY, a post-township in Litchfield co., Connecticut, intersected by the Hudson and Berkshire railroad, 50 miles W. N. W. from Hartford. It contains extensive beds of excellent iron ore, and several large establishments for working iron. Pop., 3103.

SALISBURY, a post-village in Salisbury township, Herkimer co., New York, 7 or 8 miles N. by E. from Little Falls. It has 2 or 3 churches. Population of the township, 2035.

SALISBURY, a post-township of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Columbia railroad, about 20 miles E. from Lancaster. Population, 3646.

SALISBURY, a post-village of Lancaster co., Pa., 51 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

SALISBURY, a township of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, on the S. bank of the Lehigh river, contains the county seat, Allentown. Population, 5663.

SALISBURY, a thriving post-village and port of delivery of Somerset and Worcester counties, Maryland, is situated on the Wicomico river, 95 miles S. E. from Annapolis. It appears to be the most flourishing village on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Large quantities of grain and lumber produced in the vicinity are shipped here on the river. It has several churches and a bank. Population in 1853, estimated at 1500.

SALISBURY, a thriving town, capital of Rowan county, North Carolina, about 10 miles W. from the Yadkin river, and 118 miles W. from Raleigh. It is one of the most important places in Western North Carolina, and is at the E. terminus of the Western turnpike, recently commenced, which extends to the N. E. border of Georgia. The Central railroad of North Carolina, now in progress, passes through this town. The natural walls of Rowan, or trap dikes of this vicinity, were for a long time supposed to be artificial constructions, the origin and purpose of which gave rise to various absurd conjectures. Salisbury contains 1 bank and 1 newspaper office. Population, about 2000.

SALISBURY, a post-township in the central part of Meigs co., Ohio. Population, 2921.

SALISBURY, a post-office of Greene co., Ind.

SALISBURY, a village of Harrison co., Indiana, 8 or 9 miles N. by E. from Corydon.

SALISBURY, a township in Coles co., Illinois. Population, 1426.

SALISBURY, a small village of Jersey co., Illinois, near the E. bank of Illinois river.

SALISBURY, a post-village of Sangamon co., Illinois, 9 miles N. W. from Springfield.

SALISBURY, a small village of Washington co., Wisconsin.

SALISBURY CENTRE, a post-village of Herkimer co., New York, on Spruce creek, about 25 miles E. by N. from Utica.

SALISBURY COVE, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

SALISBURY MILLS, a post-village of Orange co., New York, on the Newburg branch railroad, 9 miles S. W. from Newburg.

SALMAGUNDI, a post-office of Washita par., Louisiana.

SALMON CREEK, of Cayuga co., New York, falls into the Cayuga Lake at Ludlowville.

SALMON CREEK, of Monroe co., New York, enters Lake Ontario at Braddock's bay, about 14 miles N. W. of Rochester.

SALMON CREEK, a post-village of Wayne co., N. Y., about 30 miles E. by N. from Rochester.

SALMON FALLS, a thriving post-village of Stafford co., New Hampshire, on the Salmon Falls river, 2 miles below the Great Falls and on the Boston and Maine railroad.

SALMON FALLS, a post-office of El Dorado co., California.

SALMON FALLS RIVER rises in Carroll co., New Hampshire, and flowing south-easterly, unites with the Cochecho, and several other smaller streams, to form the Piscataqua river. It runs on the boundary between Maine and New Hampshire, for nearly its whole extent. There are considerable falls in different parts of its course.

SALMON RIVER, a fine mill stream in the central part of Connecticut, rises in Tolland county, and falls into the Connecticut river, in Middlesex county.

SALMON RIVER, New York, rises in Franklin co., and flowing north-westward, falls into the St. Lawrence river, in Canada.

SALMON RIVER, a post-office of Oswego co., New York.

SALOMA, a post-village of Taylor co., Kentucky, 71 miles S. S. W. from Frankfort, has 2 stores.

SALONA, a post-village of Clinton co., Pennsylvania, 104 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

SALT CREEK, of Hocking and Ross counties, Ohio, flows into the Scioto river, about 14 miles S. E. from Chillicothe.

SALT CREEK, of Muskingum co., Ohio, flows into the Muskingum river.

SALT CREEK, of Gratiot co., Michigan, flows into Maple river.

SALT CREEK, of Indiana, rises in Brown county, and flowing south-westward, enters the East fork of White river, near Bedford. It is navigable in high water for nearly 30 miles.

SALT CREEK, in the N. central part of Illinois, flows westerly into the Sangamon river, forming, in the latter part of its course, a part of the boundary between Menard and Mason counties.

SALT CREEK, of Tama co., Iowa, flows into Iowa river.

SALT CREEK, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Hocking co., Ohio. Pop., 1094.

SALT CREEK, a township in the N. E. part of Holmes co., Ohio. Population, 1699.

SALT CREEK, a post-township in the S. E. part of Muskingum co., Ohio. Pop., 1012.

SALT CREEK, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Pickaway co., Ohio. Population, 1332.

SALT CREEK, a township in the S. E. part of Wayne co., Ohio. Population, 1669.

SALT CREEK, a township in Decatur co., Indiana. Population, 774.

SALT CREEK, a township in Franklin co., Indiana. Population, 807.

SALT CREEK, a township in Jackson co., Indiana. Population, 1105.

SALT CREEK, a township in Monroe co., Indiana. Population, 406.

SALT CREEK, a post-village in Davis co., Iowa, 75 miles S. W. by S. from Iowa City.

SALT CREEK, a post-office of Utah.

SALT CREEK, a post-office of Polk co., Oregon.

SALTERSVILLE, a post-office of Hudson co., New Jersey.

SALT FORK, Missouri. See BLACK RIVER.

SALTILLA, a small village of Washington co., Indiana, on the New Albany and Salem railroad, 10 miles W. from Salem.

SALTILLO, a post-office of Itawamba co., Mississippi.

SALTILLO, a post-village of Hardin co., Tennessee, on the left bank of the Tennessee river, 12 miles N. from Savannah, the county seat, is a place of brisk business, and a depôt for cotton and staves, which are shipped by the river.

SALTILLO, a small post-village of Jasper co., Indiana, on the Iroquois river, 10 miles above Rensselaer.

SALTRETCHESTER BRIDGE, a post-village of Colleton district, South Carolina.

SALT KEY BANK, about 90 miles S. by E. from Florida, between the Grand Bank of Bahama and Cuba island, is 62 miles long and 36 wide, at its greatest breadth. Its western border is a chain of barren rocks, called the Double Headed Shot Key, the north-westernmost of which, commonly called the Elbow Key, contains a fixed light, 54 feet from the base of the tower, and 100 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 23° 56' 24" N., lon. 80° 27' 35" W.

SALT LAKE, Utah. See GREAT SALT LAKE.

SALT LAKE, a county in the E. N. E. part of Utah Territory. It is bounded on the E. by the Rocky mountains, and partly on the W. by the Great Salt lake, from which it derives its name, and is drained by Green and Bear rivers, and other smaller streams. The surface in the W. and central parts is mountainous. The soil is generally fertile, and in the vicinity of the lake of a superior quality. In 1850 the county produced 58,492 bushels of wheat; 5220 of Indian corn; 4906 of oats; 25,859 of potatoes; 5379 pounds of wool; 37,592 of butter, and 2205 tons of hay. The amount of its agricultural products was greater than that of any other county in the territory. It contained in that year 1 church, 12 public schools, and 1 academy. Capital, Salt Lake City. Population, 6157.

SALT LAKE CITY, capital of Salt Lake co., Utah Territory, is situated near the E. bank of the Jordan river, which connects Great Salt Lake with Utah Lake, about 22 miles S. E. from the Great Salt lake, and 4200 feet above the level of the sea. It was laid out in July, 1847, by a company of 143 Mormons. The city contains 260 blocks of 10 acres each, separated by streets which are 128 feet wide. There are 8 houses in each block, so arranged that no two houses front each other. The houses are built of adobes or sun-dried bricks.

The 4 public squares of the city are to be adorned with trees from the four quarters of the globe, and supplied with fountains. On one of these a magnificent temple is now being erected; and a gorgeous banner, constructed of the flags of all nations, is ere long to be unfurled from "Ensign Mount," which overlooks the new city of the "Saints." Salt Lake city contains a handsome theatre, which cost above $20,000.

The climate of the valley in which the city stands is very salubrious, and the soil where it can be irrigated is extremely fertile. Wheat is said to produce, under favorable circumstances, a hundred fold. The mountains which enclose the valley on the eastern side are covered with perpetual snow. Their summits are said to be about 10,000 feet (nearly 2 miles) above the level of the sea. Population, in 1853, estimated at 10,000.

SALT LICK, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Fayette co., Pennsylvania. Population, 879.

SALT LICK, a small village of Macon co. Tenn.

SALT LICK, a township in the S. part of Perry co., Ohio. Population, 1747.

SALTLICK FALLS, a post-office of Preston co., Virginia.

SALTPETRE, a post-office of Washington co. O.

SALT POINT, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

SALT POND, a small village of Saline co., Mo.

SALT RIVER, of Kentucky, is formed by two principal branches, Salt river proper, and the Rolling fork, which unite on the boundary between Meade and Bullitt counties. The main stream flows north-westward and enters the Ohio 22 miles below Louisville. Salt river rises in Boyle county, and flows first northward, and then westward. The Rolling fork rises near the W. border of Lincoln county, and its general course is W. N. W. Another stream, called Chaplin's or Beech fork, unites with the Rolling fork on the W. boundary of Nelson county. Named from salt springs which abound near it.

SALT RIVER, of Missouri, is formed by three branches, the North, Middle, and South forks, which unite near Florida, in Monroe county. It flows thence eastward, and after a serpentine course of about 85 miles, enters the Mississippi in Pike county, 1 or 2 miles above Louisiana village. Small steamboats can ascend from its mouth to Florida. Branches.—The North fork is the principal branch, rising near the N. boundary of the state, and flowing in a south-easterly course. The Middle fork rises in Macon county, and pursues a south-easterly course. The South fork rises near the S. border of Audrain county, and flows northward into the Middle fork a little above Florida. The Elk fork is a small creek, which enters the Middle fork, about 7 miles E. from Paris, in Monroe county. Long Branch flows along the S. border of Monroe county into the South fork.

SALT RIVER, a post-village of Audrain co., Missouri, 40 miles N. from Jefferson City.

SALT RIVER, a township in Knox co., Missouri. Population, 411.

SALT RIVER, a township in Randolph co., Missouri. Population, 692.

SALT ROCK, a township in the N. W. part of Marion co., Ohio. Population, 347.

SALTSRING, a post-office of Campbell co. Ga.

SALTSRING, a post-office of Bienville parish, Louisiana.

SALT SPRING, a township in Randolph co., Missouri. Population, 1134.

SALT SPRINGVILLE, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

SALT SULPHUR SPRINGS, a village of Monroe county, Virginia, 230 miles W. from Richmond, and 25 miles S. W. from the White Sulphur Springs. It is surrounded by beautiful mountain scenery, and is frequented by a large number of invalids and others. The water contains various salts of soda, magnesia, and lime.

SALTVILLE, a post-village of Washington county, Virginia, on the N. fork of the Holston river, about 20 miles N. E. from Abington. It has 2 extensive salt-works.

SALTZBURG, a post-borough of Indiana county, Pennsylvania, on the Conemaugh river and Pennsylvania canal, 32 miles in direct line E. from Pittsburg. The manufacture of salt is carried on largely in this vicinity. Population, in 1850, 623.

SALUBRIA, a post-village in Catherine township, Chemung co., New York, on the Chemung branch of the New York and Erie railroad, near the S. end of Seneca lake, 20 miles N. from Elmira.

SALUBRITY, a post-office of Pickens dis. S. C.

SALUDA river, of South Carolina, a branch of the Congaree, rises in the Blue Ridge, near the N. W. border of the state, and pursues a south-easterly course until it unites with the Broad river, at Columbia. The length is estimated at 200 miles. It flows through a hilly and fertile district, in which cotton is the staple product.

SALUDA, a post-office of Middlesex co., Va.

SALUDA, a post-office of Coweta co., Ga.

SALUDA, a post-township in Jefferson co., Indiana. Population, 1335.

SALUDA MILLS, a post-office of Newberry district, South Carolina.

SALUNGA, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pa.

SALURIA, a post-village of Calhoun co., Texas, on Matagorda island, at the terminus of the San Antonio railroad, not yet finished.

SALVISA, a handsome post-village of Mercer co., Kentucky, 20 miles S. from Frankfort. It contains 4 churches, 1 woollen factory, and several stores.

SAMANTHA, a post-office of Highland co., O.

SAMMON'S POINT, a post-office of Iroquois co., Illinois.

SAMMONSVILLE, a post-office of Fulton co., New York.

SAMPSON, a county in the S. E. central part of North Carolina: area estimated at 940 square miles. It is drained by Black river and its branches, and the South river forms the W. boundary. The surface is nearly level. The soil is generally sandy, and partly covered with forests of pitch pine. Indian corn, potatoes, tar, and turpentine are the chief products. In 1850 there were raised 426,805 bushels of corn, and 239,557 of sweet potatoes. There were 51 tar and turpentine manufactories, 1 saw mill, and 2 turpentine distilleries. It contained 24 churches, 3317 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending academies or other schools. Formed in 1784, and named in honor of Colonel John Sampson. Capital, Clinton. Population, 14,585; of whom 8900 were free, and 5685, slaves.

SAMPSON, a post-office of Darke co., Ohio.

SAMPSONDALE, a village of Rockland co., New York, about 100 miles S. from Albany.

SAMPSONVILLE, a post-office of Ulster co., New York.

SAMPTOWN, a village of Middlesex co., New Jersey, on Cedar creek, 8 miles N. from New Brunswick.

SAM'S CREEK, a post-office of Carroll co., Md.

SAN ANDERS, a post-office of Milam co., Tex.

SAN ANDREAS, a town of Calaveras county, California, is situated toward the western part of the county, between the N. and S. branches of the Calaveras river. The surrounding ravines are rich in gold, and fine for winter mining: average wages, 8 dollars a day.

SAN ANTONIO, a river of Texas, which rises in Bexar county, and flowing in a general south-easterly course, empties itself into a lagoon at the E. extremity of Refugio county, and opposite Matagorda island. The upper portion is called Medina river until it passes the mouth of Leon creek, a few miles S. from San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, a village in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico, near the Sandia mountains, about 45 miles S. S. W. from Santa Fe.

SAN ANTONIO, a village of New Mexico, on the right bank of the Rio del Norte, 150 miles S. S. W. from Santa Fe.

SAN ANTONIO, a missionary settlement of Monterey county, California.

SAN ANTONIO CREEK, a small stream of Marin county, in the W. N. W. part of California, flows into the Pacific ocean.

SAN ANTONIO DE BEXAR, a thriving post-town, capital of Bexar co., Texas, on San Antonio river, 110 miles S. W. from Austin City. This wealthy town has been much improved within a few years, and the population of the adjacent country has increased rapidly. Many of the residences are truly beautiful, particularly around Fort Alamo, which is in the immediate vicinity. See FORT ALAMO. San Antonio contains a United States arsenal, and several churches and seminaries. Two newspapers are published here. It is one of the termini of the San Antonio and Mexican Gulf railroad, (projected.) Population in 1850, 3396; in 1853, estimated at 6000.

SAN AUGUSTINE, a county in the E. part of Texas, contains about 620 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Attoyac and Angelina rivers, and drained by Ayish bayou. The greater part of the county is included in the tract known as the "Red Lands," which is extremely fertile and noted for its fine cotton. The county is liberally supplied with timber. In 1850 it produced 1020 bales of cotton; 23 hogsheds of sugar; 115,284 bushels of corn, and 32,400 of sweet potatoes. There were 6 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 198 pupils attending public schools. Capital, San Augustine. Population, 3647, of whom 2086 were free, and 1561, slaves.

SAN AUGUSTINE, a handsome and thriving post-village, capital of San Augustine county, Texas, is situated on Ayish bayou, 310 miles E. N. E. from Austin City. The main road from Natchitoches, in Louisiana, to Houston passes through the place. It is surrounded by a highly productive cotton-growing region. It contains the University of Eastern Texas, 1 Methodist and 1 Episcopal church, and a newspaper office. Population in 1853, estimated at 1000.

SAN BERNARD, a small river of Texas, rises near the N. extremity of Colorado county, and flows south-eastward into the Gulf of Mexico, about 10 miles S. W. from the mouth of Brazos river.

SAN BERNARDINO, sán ber-nar-dee'no (formerly a Catholic mission) a post-town of Los Angeles co., Cal., in a rich and well timbered valley, about 60 miles E. from Los Angeles.

SAN BERNARDINO, a new county in the S. E. part of California, formed since 1852 from Los Angeles county.

SAN BERNARDINO MOUNTAIN, a lofty mountain of Los Angeles county, California, about 60 miles E. from Los Angeles.

SANBORNTON, a township in Belknap co., New Hampshire, 23 miles N. from Concord, contains a village near the Boston, Concord, and Montreal railroad. Population, 2695.

SANBORNTON, a village in Clinton co., Iowa, on Wapsipinicon river, 45 miles N. E. by E. from Iowa City.

SANBORNTON BRIDGE, a post-village in Belknap co., New Hampshire, on Winnipiseogee river, and on the Boston, Concord, and Montreal railroad, 18 miles N. from Concord.

SAN BUENAVENTURA, sán bwá-ná-vên-too'râ, or bo'ná-ven-too'râ, called also SALINAS (sá-lee'nás) RIVER, in the W. part of California, rising on the slope of the Coast Range, in the E. part of San Luis Obispo county, flows in a general N. W. course to near the centre of Monterey co., when it turns towards the Pacific and falls into Monterey bay, in about 36° 45' N. lat.

SAN BUENAVENTURA river, a small stream of Santa Barbara county, California, falls into the Pacific ocean, in about 34° 20' N. lat.

SAN BUENAVENTURA, a town, formerly a missionary station, near the boundary between Santa Barbara and Los Angeles counties, is situated on the main road from San José and Los Angeles, and on a river of its own name, about 300 miles in a straight line S. E. from San Francisco.

SAN CARLOS, California. See CARMEL.

SAN COSME, a post-office of Rusk co., Tex.

SANCOTY HEAD, the S. E. point of Nantucket island, Massachusetts, has a fixed light 150 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 41° 17' N., lon. 69° 59' W.

SANDEBANK, a post-office of Oswego co., N. Y.

SANDBURG, a post-office of Sullivan co., N. Y.

SAND CREEK, Indiana, rises in Decatur co., and flowing south-westward, enters Driftwood fork of White river, a few miles above Rockford, in Jackson county.

SAND CREEK, a township in Bartholomew co., Indiana. Population, 1071.

SAND CREEK, a township in Decatur co., Indiana. Population, 1908.

SAND CREEK, a township in Jennings co., Indiana. Population, 705.

SAND CREEK, a small post-village of Shelby co., Illinois.

SANDERSVILLE, a post-village in Chester district, South Carolina, 66 miles N. from Columbia.

SANDERSVILLE, Georgia. See SAUNDERSVILLE.

SANDERSVILLE, a village of Fayette county, Kentucky, on the turnpike from Lexington to Georgetown. It contains a large manufactory of cotton jean. Population, near 300.

SANDERSVILLE, a small post-village of Vanderburg co., Indiana, on the railroad from Evansville to Vincennes, 10 miles N. from the former.

SANFIELD, a small village of Fairfield district, South Carolina.

SANFORD, a post-township in the S. E. part of Broome co., New York. The Erie railroad passes through it. Pop., 2508.

SAND FORT, a post-office of Russell co., Ala.

SANDGATE, a post-township in Bennington co., Vermont, 103 miles S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 850.

SAND HILL, a post-office of Scotland co., Mo.

SAND HILLS, a small village of Burlington co., New Jersey, about 8 miles S. E. from Trenton, contains 15 or 20 dwellings.

SANDIDGES, a post-office of Amherst co., Va.

SAN DIEGO, sán-de-á'go, a large county forming the S. E. extremity of California, has an area of above 15000 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Pacific ocean, and on the E. by the Rio Colorado, and is drained by the San Diego river, the San Luis Rey, and the Santa Marguerita, and other small streams. The soil in the more level portions is fertile. Barley, Indian corn, wheat, cattle, horses, and sheep are the staples. In 1852 this county produced 1221 bushels of barley; 1205 of corn, and 1056 of wheat. There were 5164 beef cattle; 1767 horses, and 1580 sheep. The county contains a number of old Spanish Missions, among which may be named San Diego, Santa Maria, and San Luis Rey. Population, 2932.

SAN DIEGO, a post-town, port of entry, and capital of San Diego county, California, on a bay, and on the main road from Sacramento City, about 470 miles in a straight line nearly S. E. from San Francisco. Lat. $32^{\circ} 44' 41''$ N., lon. $117^{\circ} 8' W$. The harbor afforded by San Diego bay is said to be the best on the coast after Acapulco. The bay is about 6 miles long and from 1 to 2 wide. The foreign arrivals at San Diego for the year ending June 30th, 1852, were 29, (tons, 19,016,) 28 of which were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports for the same period were 13, (tons, 5169,) 12 of which were American vessels.

SAN DIEGO, (NEW,) a village of San Diego co., California, founded in the year 1850. It is built on a plain at the base of the hills, on E. side of San Diego bay, about $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. S. W. from the old town of San Diego. It consists of a few American-built houses, and a large storehouse for the quartermaster's department. The United States military dépôt is established here. In coming up the bay, vessels can carry from 6 to 7 fathoms water to the village.

SANDIFER'S MILLS, a post-office of Copiah co., Mississippi.

SANDIFER'S STORE, a post-office of Carroll co., Kentucky.

SANDFIELD, a post-township in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, 122 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 1649.

SAND ISLAND LIGHTHOUSE, on Sand island, 3 miles S. S. W. from Mobile Point, Alabama. It shows a fixed light 50 feet high.

SANDISTON, a township of Sussex co., New Jersey, on the left side of the Delaware river, 75 miles N. from Trenton. Population, 1327.

SAND LAKE, a post-township of Rensselaer co., New York. Population, 2559.

SAND LAKE, a post-village in the above township, about 10 miles E. by S. from Albany. Cotton and iron are manufactured here.

SANDOVER, a post-village in Abbeville district, S. C., 81 miles W. from Columbia.

SANDOWN, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 34 miles S. E. from Concord. Population, 566.

SAND PLAINS, a small village of Polk co., North Carolina.

SAND PRAIRIE, a post-office of Richland co., Wisconsin.

SANDRIDGE, a village in Des Moines co., Iowa, near Mississippi river, 75 miles S. S. E. from Iowa City.

SANDRUN, a post-office of Nicholas county, Virginia.

SAND'S MILLS, a post-office of Westchester co., New York.

SAND'S POINT LIGHT, on the E. side of the entrance to Cow Bay, Long island.

SAND SPRING, a post-office of Wood co., Tex. SANDSTONE, a township in the W. part of Jackson co., Michigan. Population, 823.

SANDSTONE CREEK, of Jackson co., Michigan, flows into Grand river.

SANDTOWN or BERKELEY, a village of Gloucester co., New Jersey, on Mantua creek, 5 miles S. W. from Woodbury, contains a store and 12 or 15 dwellings.

SANDTOWN, a post-village of Campbell co., Georgia, about 11 miles W. from Atlanta.

SANDTOWN, a small village of Jasper co., Ga.

SANDTOWN, a village of Meriwether co., Georgia, 118 miles W. from Milledgeville. The post-office is called Woodbury.

SANDTOWN, a small village of Newton co., Ga.

SANDUSKY river, of Ohio, rises near the line between Crawford and Richland counties, and flowing in a general northerly direction, empties itself into Sandusky bay.

SANDUSKY, a county in the N. N. W. part of Ohio, bordering on Sandusky bay of Lake Erie, contains 420 square miles. It is intersected by the river of its own name, and also drained by Portage river, and by Toussaint, Muddy, and Sugar creeks. The surface is generally level; the soil is good. The western part of the county is occupied by the famous Black Swamp, which is covered with dense forests: this tract, when cleared and drained, is very productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 312,689 bushels of corn; 160,393 of wheat; 97,251 of oats, and 62,037 of potatoes. It contained 4 churches, 3 newspaper offices, 3531 pupils attending public schools, and 150 attending academies or other schools. Limestone underlies a part of the county. The streams afford motive-power for factories and mills. The county is intersected by the Cleveland, Norwalk, and Toledo, and the Sandusky and Indiana railroads. Capital, Fremont. Population, 14,305.

SANDUSKY, a post-village of Cattaraugus co., N. Y., about 40 miles S. E. from Buffalo.

SANDUSKY, a township in the E. part of Crawford co., Ohio. Population, 822.

SANDUSKY, a flourishing city, port of entry, and capital of Erie co., Ohio, is delightfully situated on the southern shore of Sandusky bay, 3 miles from Lake Erie, 110 miles N. by E. from Columbus, and 210 miles N. N. E. from Cincinnati. Lat. $41^{\circ} 27' N.$, lon. $82^{\circ} 45' W$. The bay is about 20 miles long and 5 or 6 miles wide, and forms a capacious and excellent harbor, into which vessels of all sizes can enter with safety in the severest storms. The average depth of water is 12 feet. In all seasons except winter the wharves are thronged with steamboats and other vessels. The ground on which the city stands rises gradually from the shore.

and commands a beautiful view of the bay, enlivened with the arrival and departure of vessels. The city is built on an inexhaustible bed of the finest limestone, and adorned with many elegant churches, dwellings, and warehouses constructed of this material. The greater number of the buildings are of stone or brick. The city contains churches of 6 denominations, 2 banks, 5 newspaper offices, several iron furnaces, and machine shops for the manufacture of railroad cars. Sandusky is one of the principal entrepôts of the vast and increasing commerce of the lakes, and is steadily advancing in population and importance. It was the pioneer of the railway enterprise in Ohio, and is now the terminus of two extensive lines, intersecting one of the most beautiful and opulent farming regions of the West, viz. the Mad River and Lake Erie railroad, which connects it with Cincinnati, and the Sandusky, Mansfield, and Newark, which meets the Central railroad at Newark. The former was completed about the year 1847. The Junction or Lake Shore railroad, now in progress, will form part of a chain reaching from New York to Chicago, a distance of 1000 miles. The number of arrivals in 1851 was stated to be 1998; in 1852, 3242. The value of imports in 1851 was $16,258,201; of exports, $6,558,747—total, $22,816,948.

Imports in 1852.....	$40,896,085
Exports ".....	18,789,814
Total.....	$59,685,899

Statement of the quantities of leading articles shipped at this port in the years 1850 and 1851:—

ARTICLES.	1850.	1851.
Wheat, bushels.....	1,552,699	1,922,069
Flour, barrels.....	78,902	147,951
Corn, bushels.....	288,742	712,121
Wool, pounds.....	1,609,667	1,690,557
Butter, pounds.....	754,588	382,240
Tobacco, pounds.....	316,000	549,046
Hogs, number.....	34,751	105,026
Lard, pounds.....	860,798	229,712
Furs, pounds.....	61,126	109,125

The shipping owned in the district, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 5887 ⁷/₅ tons, enrolled and licensed. The foreign arrivals for the year were 62, and the clearances for foreign ports 31.

Population in 1840, about 1200; in 1850, 5087; in 1853, about 10,000.

SANDUSKY, a township in Richland co., Ohio. Population, 617.

SANDUSKY, a township in Sandusky co., Ohio. Population, 782.

SANDWICH, a post-village in Barnstable co., Massachusetts, on Cape Cod bay, at the terminus of the Cape Cod Branch railroad, 56 miles S. E. from Boston, contains 5 or 6 churches and an academy. Population of the township, 4368.

SANDWICH, a post-township in Carroll co., New Hampshire, 50 miles N. from Concord. The village contains 1 bank. Pop., 2577.

SANDY, a post-office of Jackson co., Va.

SANDY, a post-office of Columbiana co., O.
SANDY, a township in the S. E. part of Stark co., Ohio. Population, 1270.

SANDY, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Tuscarawas co., O. Pop., 1227.

SANDY BAY, a village of Essex co., Massachusetts, about 35 miles N. E. from Boston.

SANDY BOTTOM, a post-office of Middlesex co., Virginia.

SANDY BRIDGE, a post-office of Carroll co., Tennessee.

SANDY CREEK, Jefferson county, New York, is formed by the junction of two branches, the North and the South, which unite within 2 miles of its mouth. It falls into the E. end of Lake Ontario.

SANDY CREEK, of New York, falls into Lake Ontario, in Monroe co., about 20 miles N. W. of Rochester.

SANDY CREEK, of Pennsylvania, enters the Alleghany river in Venango county.

SANDY CREEK, in the S. part of Virginia, enters Banister river from the right hand, near Meadsville, in Halifax county.

SANDY CREEK, of Randolph co., North Carolina, enters Deep river from the N., a few miles E. from Ashborough.

SANDY CREEK, or BIG SANDY, of Wilkinson co., Georgia, enters the Oconee from the right, at the S. E. extremity of the county.

SANDY CREEK, of Morgan co., Georgia, unites with Labor creek, a few miles from its mouth.

SANDY CREEK, of Alabama, flows into the Tallapoosa, a few miles W. from Dadeville.

SANDY CREEK, of Gillespie co., Texas, flows into Colorado river, near the E. border of the county.

SANDY CREEK, of Texas, an affluent of the Navidad, enters that river from the N., in Jackson county.

SANDY CREEK, of Ohio, rises in the E. part of the state, and joins the Tuscarawas river near Bolivar.

SANDY CREEK, a post-township in the N. part of Oswego co., New York, on Lake Ontario. Population, 2456.

SANDY CREEK, a post-village in the above township, on the Watertown and Rome railroad, 47 miles N. W. from Rome.

SANDY CREEK, a township of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, about 14 miles N. by E. from Mercer. Population, 2865.

SANDY CREEK, a small village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

SANDY CREEK, a township of Venango co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Alleghany river, 36 miles N. from Butler. Population, 957.

SANDY CREEK, a small village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

SANDY CREEK, a post-office of Randolph co., North Carolina.

SANDY FLATT, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

SANDY FORD, a post-office of Jefferson co. Fla.

SANDY FOUNDATION, a post-village of Lenoir co., North Carolina.

SANDY GROVE, a post-office of Chatham co., North Carolina.

SANDY GROVE, a post-office of Sumter district, South Carolina.

SANDY HILL, a post-village and semi-capital of Washington county, New York, on the left bank of the Hudson river, 52 miles N. by E. from Albany, and 1 mile W. from the Champlain canal and Saratoga and Washington railroad. It contains a court house, several churches, 2 newspaper offices, and a few factories. A little below the village the river has a perpendicular fall of 50 feet.

SANDY HILL, a post-village of Worcester co., Maryland, is situated about 7 miles from the Atlantic and 109 miles S. E. from Annapolis. It has 3 churches and 3 stores.

SANDY HOOK, a manufacturing village of Fairfield co., Connecticut, about 2 miles from the Housatonic river, and 21 miles N. W. by W. from New Haven.

SANDY HOOK, a low sandy beach, about 6 miles long and from half a mile to a mile wide, on the Jersey shore, at the entrance to New York bay. On the N. point is a fixed light, 90 feet above the level of the sea. It also contains two beacons. Lat. 40° 27' 35" N., lon. 74° 0' 48" W.

SANDY HOOK, a post-village of Harford co., Maryland.

SANDY LAKE, a post-township of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. E. from Mercer. Population, 1100.

SANDY LEVEL, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

SANDY MUSH, a post-office of Buncombe co., North Carolina.

SANDY NECK, on the W. side of the entrance to Barnstable bay, Massachusetts, has a fixed light, erected on a dwelling-house, 16 feet above the ridge. Lat. 41° 44' N., lon. 70° 15' W.

SANDY PLAINS, a post-office of Patrick co., Virginia.

SANDY PLAINS, a post-office of Rutherford co., North Carolina.

SANDY POINT. See GREAT POINT.

SANDY RIDGE, a post-office of Henry co., Ga., about 60 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

SANDY RIDGE, a post-office of Lowndes co., Alabama.

SANDY RIDGE, a post-office of Steuben co., Indiana.

SANDY RIVER, a fine mill stream in the N. W. part of Maine, rising in Franklin co., falls into the Kennebec in Somerset county.

SANDY, or BIG SANDY RIVER, of Virginia and Kentucky, is formed by the E. and W. forks, which unite at Louisa, in Lawrence county, Kentucky, on the eastern border of that state. Flowing northward, it forms the boundary between Wayne county, of Virginia, and Lawrence, Carter, and Greenup counties, of Kentucky, until it enters the Ohio river, nearly opposite Burlington, in Ohio. The distance from its mouth to Louisa is perhaps 40 or 50 miles. Branches.—The East fork, otherwise called the Tug fork, rises in Tazewell and Wyoming counties, of Virginia, flows north-westward, and, after passing through the Cumberland mountain, forms the boundary between the two states to its junction with the other branch. The West fork, or, in popular language, the Louisa fork, rises in Russell county, of Virginia, and flowing north-westward and then northward, makes a circuit through several counties of Kentucky. The length of each branch is estimated at 150 miles. The Sandy is a fine stream for navigation, and flows through extensive beds of stone coal. Steamboats ascend the river and its West fork more than 100 miles.

SANDY RIVER, of South Carolina, a small stream which enters Broad river at the S. W. extremity of Chester district.

SANDY RIVER, of Michigan, a small stream which rises in the W. part of the peninsula, and flowing westward, enters Lake Michigan in Mason co.

SANDY RIVER, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

SANDY RUN, a post-office of Cleveland co., North Carolina.

SANDY RUN, a post-office of Lexington district, South Carolina.

SANDY SPRING, a post-village of Montgomery co., Maryland, about 30 miles W. S. W. from Baltimore.

SANDY SPRING, a post-office of Fayette co., Tennessee.

SANDYSTON, New Jersey. See SANDISTON.

SANDYVILLE, a post-village of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, on the Sandy and Beaver canal, 112 miles E. N. E. from Columbus. Pop., 300.

SAN ELAZARIO, a post-office of El Paso co., Texas.

SAN FELIPE, usually pronounced san fil'ip, a small post-village of Austin co., Texas, on the Brazos river, 150 miles E. S. E. from Austin City, was formerly the county seat.

SAN FERNANDO, a small town of Los Angeles co., California, is situated on the main road from Sacramento City to Los Angeles, 27 miles in a direct line N. W. from the latter.

SANFORD, a post-township in York co., Maine, intersected by the route of the York and Cumberland railroad, 86 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 2330.

SANFORD, New York. See SANFORD.

SANFORD, a post-office of Ingham co., Michigan.

SANFORD'S CORNERS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

SAN FRANCISCO, a county in the western part of California, has an area of about 270 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Pacific, on the N. E. by San Francisco bay, and on the S. E. by San Francisquito creek, which affords some water-power. The Sierra Morina, or Brown mountains, are the principal elevations. The most important of these commence about 10 miles S. of San Francisco city, and run along the coast until they unite with another range of the same name in the county of Santa Clara. These mountains are upwards of 2000 feet in height, and serve to protect the inhabitants of the valley from the coast winds. Excellent redwood grows in some parts of the county. The soil is rich and productive. It has heretofore been but little cultivated, but much more attention is now being paid to agriculture. Barley, wheat, potatoes, cattle, and horses are the staples. In 1852 this county produced 18,450 bushels of barley; 10,050 of potatoes, and 5300 of wheat. There were 3419 beef cattle, 1342 cows, and 2215 horses. It had 3 saw mills, and 2 other saw mills and 1 grist mill were being built. Gold is found in small quantities. The route of the proposed railroad from San Francisco to San José passes through this county. Capital, San Francisco. Pop. in 1852, 36,151.

SAN FRANCISCO, the commercial metropolis of California, and the queen city of the "far West," is situated on the western shore of the magnificent bay from which it derives its name. It stands in a plain about half a mile wide, gently inclined towards the bay, with numerous hills behind it. The soil on which this city is built is very sandy; and in the vicinity, more particularly toward the north, are a number of sandhills. It is regularly laid out, the streets crossing each other at right angles. The houses till recently were mostly frame, but since the destructive fires that have occurred several times, laying the greater part of the town in ruins, brick and iron are becoming more extensively used. The city now contains many well-built fire-proof stores and banking houses. The better class of frame houses are painted white, with green blinds, presenting the appearance of the houses in New England.

The city was originally built around a semicircular bay, having Rincon Point on the south, and Clark's Point on the north—these two points being about a mile apart. All the space between is now built up, the warehouses and wharfs being supported by piles driven into the water. Clark's Point is the termination of Telegraph Hill, having an elevation of 1000 feet or upwards, and from the summit of which a very extensive view may be had of the surrounding country. Directly in front of the city, but distant 5 or 6 miles, is Goat island, which is nearly a mile in length. It is a barren, rocky place, except on the east side, where there is some cultivation among the valleys. The wholesale business part of San Francisco is toward the city front. Davis street is next to the bay; then advancing west, one meets Front, Battery, Sanson, Montgomery, Kearny, Dupont, Stockton, and Powell streets; Vallejo, Broadway, Pacific, Jackson, Washington, Clay, Commercial, or Long Wharf, Sacramento, California, Pine, Bush, and Market streets, running east and west, are included within the business section of the city. Montgomery street is a wide, handsome street. On it are situated the establishments of the bankers and brokers, and nearly all the newspaper offices in the city. It is also the fashionable promenade. On Stockton and Dupont streets, towards the southern part of the city, are many fine residences built of brick; west of Stockton, and on the surrounding hills, are many handsome houses of wood, but being separated from the rest of the city, they are comparatively secure in case of fire. Most families have their residences in the outskirts, or in the rear of the town. The principal streets and sidewalks are paved with plank and heavy timber. In the centre of the city is a public square or plaza. A railroad has recently been projected from this city to San José.

San Francisco has a custom house, and a branch mint now in course of construction, a splendid musical fund hall, and several theatres. There are from 15 to 20 churches, and 8 or 10 banking houses in the city. Ten or twelve newspapers are issued, of which eight are dailies.

Arrangements have recently been made for supplying San Francisco with water from Mountain Lake, situated about 3½ miles W. of the city. From this source the water can be introduced into the town on its own level, at an elevation of about 130 feet above the sea. The work is now advancing rapidly, the most important portion, viz., that designed to supply the densely populated sections of the city, will, it is expected, be completed by the 1st of January, 1854. It is estimated that the entire work will cost near $800,000.

San Francisco has regular communication by steamers every two weeks with Panama, while several lines of steamboats are constantly running between this city and Sacramento and Marysville; there is also a line plying between it and San José, Santa Clara, and Alviso.

The following table shows the arrival, tonnage, and average passage of vessels at San Francisco from the various ports specified, for 8 months ending September 1st, 1853:—

Ports.	Vessels.	Tonnage.	Average Passage.
Ports in Chili.....	87	24,150	62½ days.
" China.....	44	19,421	68 " "
Manila.....	3	804	76 " "
Other Eastern ports.....	6	2,473	79½ " "
London.....	12	4,201	209 " "
Liverpool.....	28	13,383	" "
Cardiff.....	16	7,253	208½ " "
Glasgow.....	4	1,255	191 " "
Other ports in Great Britain.....	5	2,262	224½ " "
Bordeaux.....	16	4,691	169 " "
Havre.....	9	3,979	162½ " "
Marseilles.....	2	463	207½ " "
Hamburg.....	9	2,123	172½ " "
Ports in Holland.....	6	3,597	194½ " "
Bremen and Assens.....	2	577	211 " "

Number of American vessels entered during the period above specified, 21 steamers, 195 ships, 44 barques, 22 brigs, and 16 schooners—total, 298; burthen, 209,330 tons. American vessels from foreign ports, 46 steamers, 15 ships, 22 barques, 27 brigs, and 27 schooners—total, 131; burthen, 79,405 tons. Foreign vessels from foreign ports, 59 ships, 127 barques, 74 brigs, and 19 schooners—total, 297; burthen, 87,975 tons. Foreign vessels entered coastwise, 6 steamers and 2 ships; burthen, 5143 tons. American whale ships arrived, 3; burthen, 542 tons. Total of all the arrivals, 719; aggregate burthen, 382,395 tons. Clearances for the same period: American vessels for coastwise ports, 63 steamers, 23 ships, 25 barques, 66 brigs, and 352 schooners—total, 529; burthen, 108,379 tons. American vessels for foreign ports, 43 steamers, 174 ships, 61 barques, 27 brigs, and 11 schooners—total, 316; burthen, 222,034 tons. Foreign vessels from foreign ports, 59 ships, 127 barques, 74 brigs, and 19 schooners—total, 303; burthen, 96,098 tons. Total of all the clearances, 1153; aggregate burthen, 427,891 tons. The shipping of the port, June 30, 1852, according to the custom-house returns, amounted to an aggregate of 55,534 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons registered, and 42,165 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons enrolled and licensed; total, 97,699 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons. Of the enrolled and licensed tonnage, 37,534 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 4524 $\frac{5}{8}$ tons in steam navigation.

The shipment of bullion from San Francisco for the first 8 months of 1853 amounted to $37,837,735—an increase of $10,752,245 over the corresponding period of the previous year. The assessed value of real and personal property in San Francisco, September 1, 1853, amounted to $28,802,000, being an increase of upwards of $10,000,000 over the previous year. Of this sum, $6,158,350 consisted in improvements, and $4,032,009 in personal property, leaving $17,389,856 as the value of real estate.

Population.—The inhabitants of San Francisco have been variously estimated from 50,000 to 60,000; but there is so large a mass of floating population that it would be impossible, even by taking a census, to state the number with any exactness. The vote polled September 7, 1853, was 10,113, being an increase of 2127 on that of November 2, 1852. In the Atlantic states, the votes polled do not generally exceed one-sixth or seventh of the entire population; but in California, where a much greater number of the inhabitants are adult males, it may be estimated that the votes will generally amount to one-fifth or one-fourth of the whole population. And although at first sight this may seem a very small proportion, it will scarcely appear too small when we take into consideration the immense number of those who are newly arrived, and are thereby excluded from the right of suffrage, (the law requiring a residence of six months in the state,) and the other vast multitudes who, having come to California for the sole object of accumulating gold, are unwilling that any political considerations, in which they expect to have at best but a temporary interest, should divert them from the great object of their desires. That the above estimate is not very far from the truth, is shown by the fact that it nearly corresponds with other estimates founded on different data, and made, in fact, previous to the recent election. All the estimates which we have seen, give the present population of San Francisco at near 60,000, and some above that number—that is, about six times the entire number of votes. As, however, all the passengers from abroad land at San Francisco, which is indeed the great centre towards which all the floating population is chiefly directed, it is but reasonable to suppose that those having a right or inclination to vote, would constitute a smaller proportion of the whole number of inhabitants in this city, than in the other towns of California. We have, therefore, in respect to most places in this state, estimated the entire population at about four times the number of votes. In California a census enumeration would be but an approximation to the actual number of inhabitants. The following statement will give some idea of the immense influx of strangers, as well as of the instability of the population:—The total number of passengers by sea that arrived at San Francisco from January 1st to August 27th, 1853, was 26,722, of whom 21,886 were males, 4138 females, and 698 children. The total number that left within the same time was 18,083, nearly all males. The addition to the population from abroad amounted, therefore, during the first eight months of the present year, to only 8639. From July 27th to August 27th, the total arrivals were 1435; the departures, 1932—showing a falling off in the last month of 497. The following table shows from what points the emigrants came:—

Passengers arriving by Sea, from January 1st to August 27th, 1853.

From Panama.....	12,200	France.....	1,824
San Juan.....	6,295	Sandwich Islands.....	208
Realego.....	25	Australia.....	196
United States ports....	960	Holland.....	9
Mexican ports.....	415	Vancouver's Island... 3
Chilian ports.....	633	Sitka.....	4
Peruvian ports.....	5	Genoa.....	9
Chinese ports.....	3,623	Society Islands.....	10
Philippine Islands....	7
England.....	153	Total.....	26,717
Hanse Towns.....	133

Passengers leaving by Sea from January 1st to August 27th, 1853.

For Panama.....	6,648	Australian ports.....	3,445
San Juan.....	6,035	Sandwich Islands.....	49
United States ports....	4	Chinese ports.....	1,500
Mexican ports.....	144	Other foreign ports....	19
Chilian ports.....	189
Peruvian ports.....	1	Total.....	13,034

History.—The first settlement at San Francisco was made by the Spaniards about the year 1776. The place was then called Yerba Buena, or "good herb," because an herb of this name, supposed to possess great medicinal virtues, was found growing abundantly on the neighbouring hills. The first houses were built of adobes, or sun-dried bricks. In 1839 it was laid out as a town, the few houses having previously been scattered without regularity. It contained in 1845 about 150 inhabitants. About this time it began to attract the attention of some adventurous Americans, and the population increased in two years to nearly 500. It retained the name of Yerba Buena until it was occupied by the Americans. The first discovery of gold was made at Sutter's settlement, then called New Helvetia, in December, 1847. Early in 1848 the news spread to the four quarters of the globe, and immediately adventurers from every land came thronging to this new El Dorado. The magnificent harbor of San Francisco made this port the great rendezvous for the arriving vessels, and from this period dates the extraordinary increase and prosperity of the Californian metropolis. In the first two months of the golden age, the quantity of precious dust brought to San Francisco was estimated at $250,000, and in the next two months at $600,000. In February, 1849, the population of the town was about 2000; in August it was estimated at 5000. From April 12, 1849, to the 29th of January, 1850, there arrived at this port by sea 39,888 emigrants, of whom 1421 were females. In the year ending April 15, 1850, there arrived 62,000 passengers. In the first part of 1850, San Francisco became a city. The population then was from 15,000 to 20,000. According to the census of 1852, it was 34,870.

SAN FRANCISQUITO (frân-sis-kee'to) CREEK, a small stream of California, rises in the Sierra Morina, and running in a general E. course between San Francisco and Santa Clara counties, falls into San Francisco bay. Gold in small quantities has been found on this creek.

SAN GABRIEL, a small river of Texas, rises near the W. extremity of Williamson county, and flowing eastward, enters Little river, in Milam co., a few miles S. W. from Cameron.

SAN GABRIEL river, a small stream of Los Angeles co., in the S. S. E. part of California, falls into the Pacific ocean.

SAN GABRIEL, a post-office of Williamson co., Texas.

SAN GABRIEL, a small town of Los Angeles county, California, is situated on the main road from Sacramento city to San Diego, on a small stream of its own name, 18 miles E. by N. from Los Angeles.

SANGAMON river, in the W. central part of Illinois, is formed by the union of two branches, termed the North and the South, which unite in Sangamon county. Its general course is first N. W., then N., and lastly W.; it falls into the Illinois river, about 10 miles above Beardstown. Length above 200 miles. It is navigable in high water for small steam-boats.

SANGAMON, a county in the S. W. central part of Illinois, has an area of 750 square miles. It is intersected by Sangamon river, from which the name is derived, and also drained by the South fork of that river, and by Sugar, Lick, Brush, and Spring creeks. The general surface is level, diversified with extensive and beautiful prairies, and with forests of good timber. Indian corn, wheat, oats, wool, pork, beef, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 3,318,304 bushels of corn, (a greater quantity than any other county in the United States;) 104,126 of wheat; 335,008 of oats; 120,868 pounds of wool, and 377,272 of butter. The above quantity of wool is the greatest produced by any one county in the state. It contained 27 churches, 7 newspaper offices, 3220 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending another school. Bituminous coal is abundant. The county is intersected by the Chicago and Mississippi railroad. The Sangamon and Morgan railroad connects the county seat with the Illinois river, and is to be extended in the opposite direction. Sangamon county is one of the most populous in the interior of the state. Seat of justice, Springfield, which is also the capital of Illinois. Population, 19,228.

SANGERFIELD, a post-village in Sangerfield township, Oneida co., New York, 15 miles S. W. from Utica. Population of the township, 2371.

SAN GERONIMO, a small stream of Marin co., California, flows into the Pacific. It is noted for its salmon fisheries.

SANGERVILLE, a post-township in Piscataquis co., Maine, 70 miles N. N. E. from Augusta. Population, 1267.

SANGSTER'S STATION, a post-office of Fairfax co., Virginia.

SANILAC, a county in the E. part of Michigan, bordering on Lake Huron, contains about 700 square miles. It is drained by the sources of Cass and Black rivers. The surface is gently undulating, and well timbered with maple, beech, pine, &c. The soil is moderately fertile. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, grass, and potatoes are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 7627 bushels of wheat; 6369 of corn; 7836 of oats, and 1214 tons of hay. It contained 3 churches, and 414 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Lexington. Population, 2112.

SANILAC MILLS, a post-office of Sanilac co., Michigan.

SAN JACINTO, a small river of Texas, which rises near the W. border of Walker county and flows into Galveston bay, 25 miles E. from Houston. It is navigable for 15 miles.

SAN JACINTO, a small village of Harris co., Texas, on Buffalo bayou, near its entrance into Galveston bay, about 18 miles E. from Houston. An important battle was fought here, April 21, 1836, which resulted in the defeat of the Mexicans, the capture of Santa Anna, and the undisputed independence of Texas.

SAN JACINTO, a post-office of Jennings's co., Indiana.

SAN JOAQUIN, (sǎn ho-á'keen', or wah-keen',) an important river of California, which, rising in the Sierra Nevada mountains, flows first southerly and then south-westerly till it joins the outlet of Tule lake, when it changes its course to N. N. W., and after traversing perhaps the most beautiful and fertile region in all California, at last joins the Sacramento in about 38° 10' N. lat. The entire length is estimated at 350 miles. It is navigable for moderate sized steamboats to within a few miles of Fort Miller, near the foot of the Sierra Nevada.

SAN JOAQUIN, a county in the N. W. central part of California, has an area estimated at above 1600 square miles. It is bounded on the north by Moquelumne river and Dry creek, partly on the W. by the San Joaquin river, and on the S. by the Stanislaus river, and is intersected by the Moquelumne, San Joaquin, and Calaveras rivers. The surface is generally level. This county is chiefly agricultural, being located in the heart of a valley, hundreds of miles in extent, with a fertile soil, and fine grazing. A large portion of the land on the San Joaquin and Moquelumne rivers, consisting of overflowed, or "tule," is being rapidly improved. These tule lands are principally covered with grass, and cannot be reclaimed to cultivation except by great labor. The soil is generally very fertile, often producing 80 bushels of barley to the acre. The timber is principally oak. Game of almost every kind is found on the plains; fish are abundant in the streams, and many persons are engaged in catching and curing salmon. Barley, wheat, hay, cattle, horses, and swine are the staples, and garden produce, melons, &c. are raised in abundance. In 1852 this county produced 111,489 bushels of barley; 5145 of wheat; 84,001 tons of hay: there were 3403 horses; 5397 beef cattle, and 2295 hogs. Mining is but little carried on. Gold placers on the Stanislaus average 4 dollars per man per day. The San Joaquin river is navigable for moderate sized steamboats through this county. The roads are generally level and in good order. The county is partly intersected by the route of the proposed railroad from Stockton to the mining region in Calaveras county. Named from San Joaquin river. Capital, Stockton. Pop., 5029.

SAN JOAQUIN, a small town in the S. part of San Joaquin county, California, is situated on the left bank of the San Joaquin, and on the road from San José to Stanislaus, 77 miles E. by S. from San Francisco.

SAN JOSÉ, sǎn ho-say', the former capital of California, and the present seat of justice of Santa Clara county, is beautifully situated in Santa Clara valley, 7 or 8 miles from the head of San Francisco bay, and about 50 miles S. E. from San Francisco. Although snow-capped mountains may be seen in the distance during the whole year, the climate of this place is perhaps the most delightful in California. A railroad has recently been projected from San José to San Francisco. Population in 1853, about 3500.

SAN JUAN, (Spanish pronunciation, sǎn hoo-án, almost sǎn hwán,) a post-town of Monterey county, California, is situated on the left bank of the Pajaro river, and on the road from San José to Monterey, 80 miles in a straight line S. E. from San Francisco.

SAN JUAN BAUTISTO, sǎn hoo-án bow-tees'to, a post-village, formerly a missionary settlement, in the N. part of Monterey co., California, about 100 miles S. S. E. of Benicia.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, a small town near the boundary between Los Angeles and Diego counties, California, is situated near the seacoast on the main road from Sacramento city to San Diego, 32 miles in a straight line S. E. from Los Angeles.

SAN LOUIS, a post-office of Brazoria co., Tex.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, a county in the W. S. W. part of California, has an area estimated at above 2500 square miles. It is bounded on the S. W. by the Pacific ocean, on the N. E. by the Coast Range of California, and on the S. by the Santa Maria creek, and is drained by the San Buenaventura and Nacimiento rivers, and by the Arroyo Grande (i. e. Big creek.) The surface in the N. E. part is level, and in the S. E. portion uneven and mountainous. The principal timber of the uplands is pine, which is of large size and superior quality, and the river bottoms are well wooded with sycamore, oak, and alamaia, (a species of cottonwood.) The soil for the most part is fertile, especially along the streams. Barley, wheat, potatoes, cattle, horses, and sheep are the staples. In 1852 it produced 3845 bushels of barley; 1210 of wheat, and 2275 of potatoes. There were 18,299 cows; 9333 beef cattle; 1146 horses, and 3000 sheep. Wild horses are found in great numbers on the plains in the N. E. part of the county, and are worth about 15 dollars per head. The vineyard of San Miguel is extensive but much neglected. The missionary settlement of San Luis Obispo is mostly in ruins, but has still remaining some fine olive, peach, pear, fig, and apple trees, and a small vineyard. The mineral, agricultural, and commercial resources of this county are great. There are some rich mines of silver, and a mine of excellent coal is situated near the Bay of St. Simeon. Copper and iron are supposed to exist, and limestone is very abundant. A warm sulphur spring, the panacea of the natives, is situated about 10 miles S. of San Luis Obispo. There are numerous bituminous springs, some of which are of a large size. The principal ports are San Luis Obispo, 9 miles from the town of that name, and San Simeon, 40 miles N. W. of the same town. There is a fine harbor at the rancho of John Wilson, known as the "Moro." Capital, San Luis Obispo. Population, 984.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, a town, formerly a missionary settlement, capital of San Luis Obispo county, California, is situated on the main road from San José to Los Angeles, 215 miles in a direct line S. E. by S. from San Francisco.

SAN LUIS REY, sán loo-is ray, a small town of San Diego co., California, is situated on the seacoast and on the main road from Sacramento City to San Diego, 84 miles in a straight line S. E. from Los Angeles.

SAN MARCO, a post-office of Travis co., Tex.

SAN MARCOS, a small river of Texas, rises near the N. border of Comal county, and flowing south-easterly, enters the Guadalupe a little above Gonzales.

SAN MARCOS, a small village, capital of Hays co., Texas, 30 miles S. S. W. from Austin.

SAN MIGUEL, a small river of Texas, which rises in Medina co., and flowing south-eastward, falls into Rio Frio.

SAN MIGUEL, sán me-ghe'l, a county in the E. part of New Mexico. It is intersected by the Pecos and Canadian rivers. Indian corn and wheat are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 33,862 bushels of corn, and 11,281 of wheat. It contained 11 churches. Population, 7074.

SAN MIGUEL, a town, formerly a missionary settlement of San Luis Obispo county, California, is situated on the main road from San José to Los Angeles, 156 miles in a straight line S. E. by S. from San Francisco.

SAN PASQUAL, a small village of San Diego co., California, 97 miles nearly S. E. from Los Angeles.

SAN PATRICIO, a county in the S. part of Texas, bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, has an area of about 2000 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by Aransas river, on the S. W. by the Nueces. The surface has but little elevation; the land near the rivers is said to be fertile. In 1850 this county produced 50,050 bushels of corn. It contained 30 pupils attending a public school. Capital, San Patricio. Population, 200; of whom 197 were free, and 3, slaves.

SAN PATRICIO, a post-village, capital of San Patricio co., Texas, on the left bank of Nueces river.

SAN PEDRO, a post-office of Houston co., Texas.

SAN PETE, a large county in the E. part of Utah Territory, has an area estimated at above 15,000 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Rocky mountains, and is intersected by Green and Grand rivers, by whose tributaries it is chiefly drained. In 1850 this county produced 3210 bushels of wheat; 967 bushels of potatoes, and 439 tons of hay. It contained 1 church and 1 public school. Capital undetermined. Population, 365.

SANPETE, a post-office of Utah Territory.

SAN RAFAEL, a post-town in the E. part of Marin co., California, of which it is the capital, is situated on the San Pablo bay, about 25 miles W. of Benicia.

SAN RAMON, a post-office of Contra Costa co., California.

SAN SABA, a small river of Bexar county, Texas, flows into Colorado river, which is here the E. boundary of the county.

SANTA ANNA, a post-office of De Witt co., Illinois, 70 miles N. E. from Springfield.

SANTA ANNA, or ANA, a small town of Los Angeles county, California, is situated on a small stream of its own name, and on the main road from Sacramento city to San Diego, 28 miles in a straight line S. E. from Los Angeles.

SANTA ANNA river, a small stream of Los Angeles co., in the S. S. E. part of California, falls into the Pacific.

SANTA ANNA, a county in the central part of New Mexico, has an area estimated at above 2000 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Rio Grande, and is drained by the Puerco and other streams. The Sierra Madre range of mountains traverses the western part of the county. Indian corn, wheat, wool, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 24,373 bushels of corn; 9740 of wheat; 2825 pounds of wool, and 6911 of tobacco. It contained 7 churches. Capital, Jemez. Pop., 4645.

SANTA BARBARA, a county in the S. W. part of California, has an area estimated at above 3000 square miles. It is bounded on the W. and S. by the Pacific, on the E. and N. E. by the Coast Range, and partly on the N. by the Santa Maria creek, and is drained by the Santa Clara and San Buenaventura, and other small streams, which flow into the Pacific ocean. The Coast Range in some parts attains the height of 4000 feet. A large portion of the county is suitable for grazing, but the soil of about one-third is well adapted to the cultivation of grain. Along the streams it is very fertile, with facilities for irrigation. Agriculture is in a very rude state, and material for fencing scarce. Beans, barley, Indian corn, potatoes, fruit, cattle, horses, and sheep are the staples; many melons are also raised. In 1852 this county produced 6083 bushels of beans; 4748 of barley; 2316 of corn; 3323 of potatoes, and about 10,000 pounds of grapes. There were 1560 tame cows, 30,055 wild cows, 50,297 beef cattle, 2990 horses, and 7391 sheep. The waters of the coast abound in mackerel, blackfish, crawfish, sardines, clams, and other excellent species of fish. Large quantities are taken in April and May at the mouths of the river.

A bed of oysters, about 150 yards in length and 9 in width, and of the finest quality, has been discovered near the town of Santa Barbara. Gold is found in the southern part of the county. There is a hot sulphur spring near the town of Santa Barbara, with a basin large enough to bathe in. Temperature about 100° Fahrenheit. Salt is abundantly supplied from the Salinas, where it is gathered in August and September by cartloads. There are one or two tar springs in the neighborhood of Santa Barbara. Bitumen is thrown up by the sea for leagues along the shore. The islands on the seacoast are a rendezvous of otters, seals, sea-elephants, and beavers. Capital, Santa Barbara. Population, 2131.

SANTA BARBARA, a post-town, capital of Santa Barbara county, California, is situated near the seacoast on the main road from San José to Los Angeles, 279 miles in a straight line, nearly S. E. from San Francisco.

SANTA BARBARA ISLANDS. These islands, nine in number, consist of San Miguel, Santa Rosa, Santa Cruz, Anacapa, Santa Barbara, Santa Catalina, San Clemente, San Nicholas, and San Juan. They lie along the southern coast of California, and opposite to the shores of Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and San Diego counties, extending in a direction from N. W. to S. E., about 175 miles, and at a distance from the land of from 20 to 65 miles. The Santa Barbara islands are but imperfectly known, and have never been accurately surveyed. Several harbors have been examined by officers of the United States Coast Survey in the Pacific; the principal of these are Prisoner's harbor, on the N. side of Santa Cruz, Cuyler's harbor, on the N. E. side of San Miguel, and Santa Cataline harbor on the W. side of the island of the same name. The four first named islands are separated from the main land by Santa Barbara channel, a sound of from 20 to 30 miles wide.

SANTA CLARA river, a small stream of Santa Barbara county, California, rises among the mountains, and flowing in a general westerly course, falls into the Pacific.

SANTA CLARA, a county in the W. central part of California, has an area estimated at above 1200 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Coast Range, and is drained by the Guadalupe river and several other smaller streams flowing into San Francisco bay, which extends a few miles into the county. Soil well adapted to cultivation, and very fertile along the streams. Barley, wheat, potatoes, hay, onions, cattle, and horses are the staples. In 1852 this county produced 415,340 bushels of barley; 122,192 of wheat; 656,700 of potatoes; 3175 tons of hay, and 8,356,600 pounds of onions. There were 4201 cows, 16,020 beef-cattle, and 4371 horses. The county is partly intersected by the route of the proposed railroad from San Francisco to San José, the capital. Population, 6664.

SANTA CLARA, a post-town of Santa Clara county, California, is situated on a small stream flowing into the head of San Francisco bay, and on the main road from San José to San Francisco, about 10 miles from the former town.

SANTA CRUZ, sán'tá crooze, a county in the W. part of California, has an area of above 500 square miles. It is bounded on the S. W. by the Pacific, and is separated on the S. from Monterey county by the Rio Pajaro, flowing into that ocean. The surface is generally uneven or hilly, with a range called the Santa Cruz mountains running on the N. E. border. The soil in the more level portions is usually fertile, and well cultivated. Barley, wheat, potatoes, cattle, and horses are the staples. In 1852 this county produced 60,149 bushels of barley; 7028 of wheat, and 156,202 of potatoes. There were 8062 beef cattle, 1582 cows, and 1029 horses. Gold is found, although not in great abundance. The streams of this county afford valuable water-power. Capital, Santa Cruz. Population, 1219.

SANTA CRUZ, a post-town, capital of Santa Cruz county, California, is situated on the Pacific, 59 miles in a straight line S. S. E. from San Francisco. A road extends from this town to San José.

SANTA FE, (Spanish pronunciation. sán'tá fay,) a county in the N. central part of New Mexico, has an area estimated at about 2000 square miles. It is partly bounded on the W. by the Rio Grande, and is drained by several small affluents of that river. The surface in the S. part is mountainous. Indian corn, wheat, and wool are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 26,962 bushels of corn; 11,499 of wheat, and 6506 of wool. It contained 13 churches and 2 newspaper offices. Capital, and seat of justice of the state, Santa Fe. Population, 7713.

SANTA FE, a small river in the N. part of Florida, forms the boundary between Alachua and Columbia counties, and enters the Suwanee river.

SANTA FE, a post-office of Poinsett co., Arkansas.

SANTA FE, a post-office of Maury co., Tenn.

SANTA FE, a post-office of Bracken co., Ky.

SANTA FE, a post-office of Miami co., Indiana, about 60 miles N. from Indianapolis.

SANTA FE, a post-office of Alexander co., Illinois, on the Mississippi river, about 220 miles S. from Springfield.

SANTA FE, a thriving village of Monroe county, Missouri, on the South fork of Salt river, about 60 miles N. from Jefferson City. It has fertile farms, and rich beds of coal in the vicinity.

SANTA FE, the capital and largest town of New Mexico, is situated on the Rio Chichito, or Santa Fe river, an affluent of the Rio Grande, from which it is distant about 20 miles in a direct line. Lat. 35° 41' N., lon. about 106° 10' W. It is the great emporium of the overland trade which, since 1822, has been carried on with the State of Missouri. Each of the houses, which are principally built of dark-colored adobes, or unburnt brick, usually forms a square, with a court within, upon which nearly all the apartments open from the street. There is generally but one entrance, which is wide and high enough to admit animals with their packs. Much of the ground in and around Santa Fe is extremely sandy; and in dry weather, when the wind is high, this is a source of great annoyance. The place is well supplied with cool water from springs within its limits, and also from fountains above the city near the mountain side. Numerous azequias, or small canals, are led through the streets, and afterwards serve to irrigate the gardens and fields below the town for several miles. On the whole, the appearance of Santa Fe is very uninviting, and the population is exceedingly depraved. It stands on a plateau, which is elevated about 7000 feet above the sea, and a short distance S. W. of the base of Snow-capped mountain, which rises 5000 feet above the level of the town. One or two newspapers are issued here. Pop. in 1850, 4846.

SANTA INEZ river, of Santa Barbara co., California, rises among the mountains of the Coast Range, and flowing in a general westerly course, falls into the Pacific ocean, about 10 miles N. of Cape Conception.

SANTA INEZ, a town of Santa Barbara county, California, is situated on the main road from San José to Los Angeles, and on a river of its own name, 265 miles in a straight line S. E. by S. from San Francisco.

SANTA LUCAH, a post-office of Gilmer co., Georgia.

SANTA MARIA, a small stream in the S. W. part of California, forms part of the boundary between San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties, and falls into the Pacific about 40 miles N. of Cape Conception.

SANTA RITA, a village of Cameron co., Texas, on the Rio Grande, about 10 miles W. by N. from Brownsville, and 300 miles in a direct line S. from Austin. It communicates by steamboats with Brownsville, and has some trade. Population in 1853, about 1200.

SANTA ROSA, a county in the W. part of Florida, bordering on Alabama and on the Gulf of Mexico, contains about 1480 square miles. It is intersected by the Yellow-water and Blackwater rivers, and bounded on the W. by the Escambia. Pensacola bay washes its S. W. border. The surface is nearly level, and the soil unproductive. Indian corn and sweet potatoes are cultivated. In 1850 this county produced 10,328 bushels of corn, and 12,790 bushels of sweet potatoes. There were 22 saw mills, 1 cotton mill, 1 brick-yard, 3 ship-yards, and 1 wooden-ware manufactory. It contained 3 churches, 100 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending other schools. Capital, Milton. Population, 2883; of whom 2099 were free, and 784, slaves.

SANTA ROSA, a post-office of Sonoma co., Cal.

SANTEE, a river of South Carolina, formed by the Congaree and Wateree, which unite at the S. E. extremity of Richland district, near the middle of the state. Flowing in a general south-easterly course, it falls into the Atlantic by two mouths, near 33° 6' N. lat. The length of the main stream is estimated at 150 miles. Steamboats ascend to Columbia on the Congaree, and to Camden on the Wateree. In the lower part of its course it flows through a sandy region, which is occupied by forests of pitch pine and swamps, where rice is produced.

SANTEE, a post-village of Covington co., Mississippi.

SANTILLA, or SATILLA, a small river of Georgia, rises in Irwin county, and flows into the Atlantic through St. Andrew's sound, after a winding course, of which the general direction is E. S. E. The Little Satilla unites with the above in Wayne county.

SANTYAM river rises in the E. part of Linn co., Oregon, and flowing westerly, falls into the Willamette river, about 20 miles above Salem.

SANTYAM CITY, a post-village of Linn co., Oregon, on Santyam river, about 5 miles above its junction with the Willamette.

SAPLING GROVE, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

SAPPAH RIVER, Wisconsin. See BLACK RIVER.

SAPINGTON, a post-village in St. Louis co., Missouri, 15 miles W. S. W. from St. Louis.

SAPP'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Blount co., Alabama.

SARA BAYOU, of Louisiana, flows southward through West Feliciana parish, and enters the Mississippi at Bayou Sara.

SARAH, a post-office of Blair co., Pa.

SARAH ANN FURNACE, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SARAHSBURG, a new township of St. Lawrence co., New York, on the Oswegatchie river, 24 miles S. from Canton.

SARASVILLE, a post-village, capital of Noble county, Ohio, on Wills creek, near its source, 85 miles E. by S. from Columbus. It is situated on an eminence in a fertile farming district, which contains beds of stone coal and quarries of good building stone. The village contains 8 stores and about 60 dwellings. Population, about 500.

SARASVILLE, a post-village of Franklin co., Illinois.

SARAHVILLE, a small village of Williamson co., Illinois.

SARANAC river forms the outlet of Saranac lake, in Franklin county, New York, and after running a north-easterly course through Essex and Clinton counties, falls into Lake Champlain near Plattsburg.

SARANAC, a post-township of Clinton co., New York, drained by Saranac river, 15 miles W. from Plattsburg. Pop., 2582.

SARANAC, a township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 704.

SARANAC HOLLOW, a post-village in Saranac township, 17 miles W. from Plattsburg. Population, 500.

SARANAC LAKE, in the S. part of Franklin co., New York. Length about 10 miles.

SARATOGA, a county in the E. part of New York, has an area of about 780 square miles. It is bounded on the E. and partly on the N. by the Hudson, while the Mohawk forms part of its southern border; and is drained by these rivers, together with the Sacondaga river, and several smaller streams, which supply valuable water-power. The famous watering place of Saratoga springs is situated near the centre of this county. The surface in the N. W. part is mountainous, but in the southern and central portions much more level. The soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 488,413 bushels of corn; 702,338 of oats; 596,494 of potatoes, (the greatest quantity produced by any county in the state except Rensselaer;) 67,538 tons of hay, and 1,388,594 pounds of butter. There were 21 flour and grist mills, 92 saw mills, 8 cotton and 11 woollen factories, 7 iron foundries, 3 machine shops, 7 paper mills, and 16 tanneries. It contained 97 churches, and 8 newspaper offices; 10,060 pupils attending public schools, and 1013 attending academies or other schools. Iron ore, sandstone, and limestone are found in considerable abundance. The Champlain canal passes along its eastern, and the Erie canal along its southern border. Three lines of railroad meet at Ballston, connecting it with Troy, Schenectady, and Rutland in Vermont. Saratoga was organized in 1791, having previously formed part of Albany county. Capital, Ballston. Population, 45,646.

SARATOGA, a township of Saratoga co., New York, on the Hudson river, 30 miles N. by E. from Albany. Population, 3492.

SARATOGA, a township in Grundy co., Illinois. Population, 200.

SARATOGA LAKE, New York, in Saratoga county, 5 miles E. of Ballston Spa. Length about 7 miles; greatest breadth, near 2 miles. It contains fine fish, and is much resorted to by visitors from the neighboring watering-places. Its outlet, Fish creek, flows into the Hudson.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, situated in Saratoga township, Saratoga county, New York, 38 miles by railroad N. of Albany, and 32 N. of Troy. This is the most fashionable watering-place on the American continent, as well as the most in repute for the medical virtues of its waters. Here assemble from every quarter of the Union the devotees of pleasure and the victims of disease; the passé belle, bedecked in jewellery and artificials, the wornout roué, in search of an heiress—the gambler, seeking his prey, and the brainless, bedizened fop, his easy victim, all are here. The visitors, however, are not confined to these extremes of society; the merchant, the statesman, the divine, and the man of letters, here seek health or recreation, and the pleasures of mutual intercourse. Here are formed acquaintances by persons, from different portions of the Union, that tend to obliterate sectional prejudices, and cement the bonds of our political, by strengthening those of our social union.

Saratoga owes its celebrity almost solely to its mineral springs, the surrounding scenery possessing few, if any, extraordinary attractions. Saratoga lake, however, a beautiful sheet of water, is within a pleasant morning's or evening's drive; and Glen's falls, in the Hudson, and Lake George, are within two or three hours' travel by railway and plank-road. In the vicinity of the springs were fought the battles of Saratoga and Stillwater, in 1777; and near Lake George occurred the massacre of Fort William Henry, in 1757. The village itself consists mainly of a single street, lined with spacious hotels, boarding houses, some stores, and the private residences of the stationary population. Among the most fashionable hotels are "the United States," an immense building, with finely ornamented grounds, and capable of lodging 300 or 400 persons; "Congress Hall," near Congress spring, with a spacious piazza the length of the building; and Union Hall, opposite the latter, the resort of those who prefer quiet and retirement. Most of the hotels have spacious grounds, tastefully laid out. Beside these, there are a number of smaller hotels and boarding houses, all of which are thronged to overflowing in the months of July and August, with visitors from every part of the Union, and some from Canada, Europe, Mexico, South America, and the West Indies. It is stated that in the present season, (1853,) before the end of August, more than 30,000 strangers had already visited these springs.

This spot is said to have been visited by invalids as early as 1773, but Congress spring, whose waters are now in the greatest request, was not discovered till 1792. High rock, a conical deposit of limestone, in the shape and about the size of a haycock, with a cylindrical opening down the middle, from which issues water strongly charged with carbonic acid gas, and Flat rock, another limestone deposit, naturally attracted the attention of the first settlers, and these springs were for a period the only ones known. Among the more recently discovered springs are the Empire and Iodine springs. The following results were obtained from an analysis of the waters of three of the principal springs. According to Dr. Chilton, a gallon of Congress spring water, in 1843, yielded chloride of sodium, 363.83 grains; carbonate of soda, 7.20; carbonate of lime, 86.14+; carbonate of magnesia, 78.62; carbonate of iron, .84; sulphate of soda, .65; iodide of sodium and bromide of potassium, 5.92; silica, 47+; alumina, .82. Total, 544 grains. Carbonic acid, 284.65; atmospheric air, 5.41=290.06 inches of gaseous contents. Professor Emmons' analysis of a gallon of the Empire water yielded chloride of sodium, 269.69+; bicarbonate of lime, 141.82+; bicarbonate of magnesia, 41.98+; bicarbonate of soda, 30.85; hydriodate of soda or iodine, 12.00; solid contents of a gallon, 496.35 grains. Dr. Allen's analysis of a gallon of the water of the Iodine spring, gave 147.66+ grains chloride of sodium; 73.35 carbonate of magnesia; 28.95+ carbonate of lime; 3.00 carbonate of soda; .90 carbonate of iron; 3.56+ hydriodate of soda; solid contents, 257.43+; carbonic acid gas, 344.30; atmospheric air, 2.50 cubic inches; total gaseous contents, 346.5 inches. The springs are readily reached by railway from all the great cities and towns of the North and West, and from most at the South. These waters have been found very beneficial in affections of the liver, in some cases of chronic dyspepsia and chronic diseases of the bowels. Besides other qualities, they appear to possess the virtues of a tonic united with those of a gentle cathartic. Great quantities of the waters are bottled, especially of the Congress and Empire springs, and exported. The village has a bank and 2 newspaper offices.

SARCOXIE, a post-township in Jasper co., Missouri. Population, 1009.

SARCOXIE, a post-village in Jasper co., Missouri, 170 miles S. W. from Jefferson City.

SARDINIA, a post-village in Sardinia township, Erie co., New York, about 30 miles S. E. from Buffalo. It contains several mills and factories. Pop. of the township, 1761.

SARDINIA, a post-office of Macon co., N. C.

SARDINIA, a post-village of Brown co., Ohio, 90 miles S. S. W. from Columbus. Population in 1853, about 250.

SARDINIA, a post-office of Decatur co., Ind.

SARDIS, a post-office of Harrison co., Va.

SARDIS, a post-office of Panola co., Miss.

SARDIS, a small post-village of Mason co., Kentucky, 14 miles S. from Maysville.

SARDIS, a post-village in the E. part of Monroe co., Ohio. Population, 150.

SARECTA, a post-village of Duplin co., North Carolina, on Goshen creek, about 90 miles S. E. from Raleigh.

SAREPTA, a post-village of Lafayette co., Mississippi, 28 miles S. E. from Oxford.

SARGEANSTVILLE, a post-village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, 6 miles S. W. from Flemington, contains 10 or 12 dwellings.

SARIETTA, a post-office of Marion co., Va.

SARTWELL, a post-office of McKean co., Pa.

SARVERSVILLE, a small post-village of Butler co., Pennsylvania.

SASSAFRAS HILL, a post-office of Washington co., Illinois.

SASSAFRAS RIVER, in the N. E. part of Maryland, flows westward along the boundary between Cecil and Kent counties, and enters Chesapeake bay.

SATARTIA, a post-village of Yazoo co., Mississippi, on the Yazoo river, about 40 miles N. W. from Jackson.

SATILLA. See SANTILLA.

SATILPA CREEK, of Clarke co., Alabama, enters the Alabama a few miles below Coffeeville.

SATTERFIELD, a post-office of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

SAUCELITO, sau-sè-lee'to, a station for shipping of California, on the E. side of San Francisco bay, about 12 miles N. W. from San Francisco. Here are kept the United States naval stores, and here the war ships come to anchor.

SAUCON, a township of Northampton co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of Lehigh river, 11 miles S. W. from Easton. Population, 2905.

SAUCON CREEK, of Northampton co., Pennsylvania, falls into the Lehigh river near Easton.

SAUCON VALLEY, a post-office of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania.

SAUGATUCK RIVER, a small stream of Fairfield co., Connecticut, falls into Long Island sound.

SAUGATUCK, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

SAUGATUCK, a post-office of Allegan co., Michigan.

SAUGERTIES, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Ulster co., New York, on the Hudson river. Population, 8041.

SAUGERTIES, or ULSTER, a flourishing post-village in the above township, on the W. bank of the Hudson river, near the mouth of Esopus creek, about 100 miles above New York. The creek furnishes water-power, which is used in extensive manufactories of various kinds, including several bloomeries. It contains a bank and a newspaper office. There is a steam ferry across the river.

SAUGUS, a post-township in Essex co., Massachusetts, intersected by the Eastern railroad, 11 miles N. from Boston. Pop., 1552.

SAUK, a county in the S. W. central part of Wisconsin, contains about 800 square miles. It is intersected by the Baraboo river, and bounded on the S. and S. E. by the Wisconsin. The surface is undulating and hilly; and the soil productive. Timber is abundant in some parts. The county contained in 1850, 5 churches and 1 newspaper office. The Milwaukee and La Crosse railroad, now in progress, will pass through the county. Organized in 1844. Capital, Baraboo. Pop., 4371.

SAUK CITY, a post-office of Sauk co., Wis.

SAUK RAPIDS, a post-village, capital of Benton county, Minnesota, on the Missis-ssippi, near the mouth of Sauk river, 76 miles by land N. W. from St. Paul. It has several stores, 1 hotel, and over 200 inhabitants.

SAUK RIVER, in the E. central part of Minnesota Territory, unites the waters of several small lakes, and flowing easterly, falls into the Mississippi river, opposite to Saute Rapids.

SAUK VILLAGE, a post-office of La Porte co., Indiana.

SAUKVILLE, a post-township in the E. central part of Ozaukee co., Wisconsin, intersected by the Milwaukee railroad. Population, 1796.

SAUKVILLE, a post-village in the above township, on Milwaukee river, 26 miles N. from Milwaukee city, and 5 miles W. from Lake Michigan.

SAUT DE ST. MARIE. See SAUT STE. MARIE.

SAUNDER'S FORK, a small village of Cannon co., Tennessee.

SAUNDERSVILLE, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

SAUNDERSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Washington county, Georgia, is situated on the ridge between the Oconee and Ogeechee rivers, 28 miles E. from Milledgeville, and 3 miles N. from the Central railroad. It contains 1 church, 2 flourishing academies, 1 newspaper office, 6 dry-goods stores, and 1 Masonic lodge.

SAUVOIT, a post-village in Paris township, Oneida co., New York, on Sadaquada creek, 8 or 9 miles S. from Utica. Cotton goods, paper, and flour are made here.

SAUTA, a post-office of Jackson co., Ala.

SAUT SAINTE MARIE, (commonly pronounced Soo Saint Mary,) a post-village, capital of Chippewa county, Michigan, on St. Mary's river or strait, 400 miles N. N. W. from Detroit, and 15 miles from the outlet of Lake Superior. The rapids at this place have a descent of 22 feet within the distance of a mile, and form the limit of steamboat navigation. The village is pleasantly situated, and contains, besides the county buildings, churches for the Baptists, Methodists, and Catholics, and 1 newspaper office. Steamboats frequently visit this place in summer, with parties of pleasure. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fur trade and the fisheries. An appropriation has lately been made by the government for the purpose of cutting a canal around the rapids of the river. See ST. MARY'S STRAIT. The resident population is probably near 1000. The value of imports in 1851 was estimated at $151,134; of exports, $340,800.

SAVAGE, a post-office of Howard co., Md.

SAVAGE GRANT, a post-office of Wayne co., Virginia.

SAVAGE MOUNTAIN, a ridge extending from Alleghany county, Maryland, into the S. E. part of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, where it unites with the Little Alleghany. Between these two mountain ridges is the Cumberland or Frostburg coal basin, yielding bituminous coal of a very superior quality. The beds vary from three to eight feet in thickness.

SAVANNAH, an important river of South Carolina and Georgia, is formed by the Tugaloo and Kiowee, two small streams which rise near the S. frontier of North Carolina, and unite on the boundary between Anderson parish, South Carolina, and Franklin county, Georgia. Flowing in a general S. S. E. direction, it forms the boundary between those two states through the whole of its subsequent course, and enters the Atlantic, near 32° N. lat., and 81° W. lon., and 18 miles below Savannah city. The length of the river, exclusive of branches, is estimated at 450 miles. The navigation is good from November to June, about 8 months in the year. Large vessels ascend to Savannah, steamboats of 150 tons to Augusta, about 230 miles, and smaller boats 150 miles higher. A canal 9 miles long was constructed in 1845, around the falls at Augusta, by which abundant water-power is produced. The river is about 300 yards wide at the latter city. The Savannah, in connection with its right branch, forms the entire boundary between South Carolina and Georgia.

SAVANNAH, a post-village in Savannah township, Wayne co., New York, on the Syracuse and Rochester railroad, about 36 miles W. from Syracuse. Population of the township, 1700.

SAVANNAH, a flourishing city and port of entry of Georgia, capital of Chatham county, and the largest and most commercial town of the state, is situated on the right bank of Savannah river, 18 miles from its mouth, 90 miles W. S. W. from Charleston, and 188 miles E. S. E. from Milledgeville. Lat. 32° 5' N., lon. 81° 8' W. The site of the city is a sandy plain, elevated about 40 feet above low-water mark. It is regularly laid out with wide, sandy, and unpaved streets. At every other corner there is a public square, usually circular or oval in shape, planted with the Pride of India tree. The number of these squares is 24. Broad and Bay streets have grassy promenades in the middle, with carriage-ways on each side. Many of the private dwellings are handsomely built of brick. Among the public buildings may be noticed the City Exchange, theatre, court house, jail, state arsenal, artillery armory, Lyceum, Oglethorpe Hall, St. Andrew's Hall, market house, Chatham Academy, and the new custom house. The latter, which is 110 feet long by 52 wide, is built of granite, and is estimated to have cost $173,400. The Independent Presbyterian church is a fine granite building, which cost nearly $120,000. St. John's (Episcopal) church is also a handsome edifice. The city has 14 Protestant and 1 or 2 Catholic churches, 1 Hebrew synagogue, 5 banks, 1 savings' institution, a fire company, an historical society, several reading rooms, and a public library of near 6000 volumes. The private schools are numerous, and liberal provision is made for the education of the poor. Among the numerous charitable institutions may be mentioned the Orphan Asylum, the Savannah Hospital, the Georgia Infirmary, the Union Society, the Widows' Society, the Savannah Free School, Hibernian Society, and Seamen's Friend Society. Five daily newspapers are published here. A monument has been erected in Johnson's square to the memory of General Greene, and another (a very imposing edifice) is now in course of erection to the memory of Pulaski, who gallantly fell in an attack on the city when held by the British, in October, 1779. The city is lighted with gas, and there are water-works in course of construction.

Savannah is the centre of a very extensive system of railroads, which, directly or indirectly, must contribute greatly to her commercial importance and prosperity. The names, connections, and length of the lines which converge to this point, or are tributaries to the trade of Savannah, are as follows:

	Miles.
1. The Central railroad, connecting Macon with Savannah.....	192
2. The Waynesborough and Augusta, (recently completed,) extending from the Central railroad to Augusta	53
3. The Milledgeville and Eaton, connecting with the Central railroad.	39
4. The South-Western railroad, which connects with the Central at Macon, and is to be extended to the Chattahoochee river.....	50
5. The Muscogee railroad, (recently completed,) extending from Columbus to the South-Western railroad.	71
6. The Macon and Western, which connects the Central railroad with the Georgia railroad at Atlanta.	101
7. The Western and Atlantic, leading from Atlanta to Chattanooga, in Tennessee.....	140
8. The Georgia railroad, connecting Augusta with the two lines last mentioned	170
9. The Athens Branch of the Georgia railroad	40
10. The Washington Branch (lately completed) of the Georgia railroad.....	17
11. The Rome Branch (lately completed) of the Western and Atlantic.....	20
12. The Atlantic and Lagrange railroad.	80
13. The E. Tennessee and Georgia, (not yet completed,) connecting Savannah with Knoxville.....	82

Total length, 1055

The railroads mentioned as unfinished will probably all be completed within a few months from the present date, (November, 1853.)

An air-line railroad is projected from this city to Albany, on Flint river, the corporation having subscribed $600,000 for its construction, provided that an equal sum shall be subscribed by individuals. It will probably be extended to Pensacola.

The commerce of Savannah is already very flourishing, and is rapidly increasing. The harbor is one of the best on the southern coast, and the river is navigable by steamboats to Augusta, about 230 miles from its mouth. Vessels of 14 feet draught can come up to the wharves, and those of larger size to Five Fathom Hole, 3 miles below the city. A lighthouse has been erected on Tybee island, at the mouth of the river. A semi-weekly line of steamships has been established between Savannah and New York, consisting of vessels of about 1200 tons each, and 2 steamers of the same class make regular passages once a week to Philadelphia. The city communicates daily by steamers with Charleston, and twice every week with Augusta, excepting a few months in the dry season. The British steamer Conway runs to the West Indies. Regular lines of sailing vessels also communicate with New York and Boston.

The receipts of cotton by railroad, river, and other sources, for several years, were as follow:—

	Bales.		Bales.
1845.....	189,076	1849.....	340,025
1846.....	236,029	1850.....	312,294
1847.....	245,496	1851.....	351,566
1848.....	406,906	1852.....	353,068

The following table exhibits the exports of rice and lumber for the year ending September 1, 1852.

	Casks of Rice.	Feet of Lumber.
To foreign ports,	9,937.....	15,804,500
American do.,	29,992.....	9,704,000
Total.....	39,929.....	25,508,500

The shipping of the port June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 13,052 $\frac{1}{2}$ tons registered, and 10,909 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons enrolled and licensed. Of the latter, all was employed in the coast trade, and 8295 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons in steam navigation. The foreign arrivals for the year were 117, (tons, 49,270,) of which 61 were by American vessels. The clearances for foreign ports were 147, (tons, 61,516,) of which 38,882 were in foreign bottoms. During the year, 1 schooner and 1 steamer, with an aggregate burthen of 322 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons, were ad-measured.

Of the five banks in Savannah, three were reported, in 1852, as follows:

	1852.	Planters' Bank.	Mechanics' Bank.	Central Bank.
Capital	$555,440	$500,000	$350,000	$350,000
Circulation	1,100,000	828,000	251,000	251,000
Specie.....	222,000	158,000	105,000	105,000
Loans	1,425,000	1,568,000	493,000	493,000
Deposites.....	327,000	411,000	102,000	102,000

Savannah enjoys a better reputation for salubrity than it formerly did; a result which may be ascribed partly to the improved method employed in cultivating the rice lands in this vicinity. The city was founded by General Oglethorpe, in 1732 or '33. It was occupied by the British in December, 1778, and restored to the Americans in July, 1783. In 1820 a large part of the city was destroyed by fire, and in rebuilding the burnt district, great improvement has been made in the material and in the style of construction. Population in 1840, 11,214; in 1850, 16,060, and in 1853, 23,458, of which 13,714 were free, and 9744, colored.

SAVANNAH, a post-office of Red River co., Texas.

SAVANNAH, a flourishing post-village, capital of Hardin co., Tennessee, on the E. bank of Tennessee river, 120 miles S. W. from Nashville. It is a place of active business, and has improved much in the last 6 years. Cotton and staves are shipped here in steamboats. Population in 1853, about 800.

SAVANNAH, a post-village of Ashland co., Ohio, 7 miles N. W. from Ashland.

SAVANNAH, a flourishing post-village of Carroll co., Illinois, on the Mississippi river, 33 miles below Galena. It has a good landing, and is a depôt for produce. A branch railroad is projected to Freeport. One paper is issued here. Pop. in 1853, about 800.

SAVANNAH, a post-village, capital of Andrew co., Missouri, about 6 miles E. from the Mississippi river, and 215 miles N. W. from Jefferson City. It is situated in a fertile farming district, and contains several stores.

SAVANNAH, a post-office of Davis co., Iowa.

SAVERN, a post-office of Owen co., Kentucky.

SAVERTON, a village of Ralls co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river, about 125 miles above St. Louis, has a landing for steamboats.

SAVILLE, a township of Perry co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles S. from Mifflin. Population, 1501.

SAVONA, a post-village of Steuben co., New York, on the Buffalo and Corning railroad, 6 miles S. E. from Bath.

SAVOY, a post-township in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, 125 miles W. N. W. from Boston. Population, 955.

SAWARCARNA RIVER, of Missouri Territory, one of the smaller tributaries of Missouri river, which it enters about 45° 40' N. lat., and 100° 30' W. lon. Length, near 200 miles.

SAWDUST, a post-office of Columbia co., Ga.

SAWKEHATCHEE Creek, Alabama, flows into Tallapoosa river from the E., in Tallapoosa county.

SAW MILL, a post-office of Dale co., Ala.

SAWYER'S CREEK, a small village of Camden co., North Carolina.

SAWYER'S MILLS, a post-office of Lexington district, South Carolina.

SAWYER'S RIVER, New Hampshire, rises in Grafton co., and forms one of the head branches of the Saco river.

SAWYERSVILLE, a post-office of Randolph co., North Carolina.

SAXENBURG, a small post-village of Butler co., Pennsylvania, 8 or 9 miles S. S. E. from Butler.

SAXE'S MILLS, a post-office of Franklin co., Vermont.

SAXEVILLE, a post-office of Waushara co., Wisconsin.

SAXONVILLE, a post-village in Middlesex co., Mass., 22 miles N. W. from Boston.

SAXTON'S RIVER, post-office, Windham co. Vt. SAXTONVILLE, a small village, Hunterdon co. N. J., about 6 miles S. W. from Flemington.

SAYBROOK, a post-township of Middlesex co., Connecticut, on the W. bank of Connecticut river, above 35 miles S. S. E. from Hartford, contains the village of Deep River. OLD SAYBROOK, bordering on Long Island sound, was separated from this township in 1852. It was formerly the seat of Yale College. The shad fisheries at this place are more valuable than at any other point on the river. The village of Saybrook has a steamboat landing, 2 churches, 6 stores, and a depôt on the New Haven, and New London railroads. The passengers by the cars cross the river by a steam ferry at the village of Saybrook Ferry, 17 miles W. by S. from New London. Pop. of Saybrook, about 1300; of Old Saybrook, 3000.

SAYBROOK, a post-township in the N. W. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Pop., 1374.

SAYLOESBURG, a post-village of Monroe co., Pa., 112 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

SAYLORVILLE, a post-village in Polk co., Iowa, near Des Moines river, 125 miles W. from Iowa City.

SAYVILLE, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

SCALP LEVEL, post-office, Cambria co., Pa.

SCANTIC RIVER rises in the S. part of Massachusetts, and falls into the Connecticut river in Hartford co., Conn., about 7 miles N. of Hartford. It is a good mill-stream.

SCARBOROUGH, a post-village in Cumberland co., Maine, on the Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth railroad, 60 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population of the township, 1837.

SCARBOROUGH, a post-office of Scriven co., Georgia, on the Central railroad, 70 miles N. W. from Savannah.

SCARSDALE, a village in Scarsdale township, Westchester co., New York, on the Harlem railroad, 22 miles N. N. E. from New York. Population of the township, 342.

SCHAGHTICOKE, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Rensselaer co., New York, on the Hudson river. Population, 3290.

SCHAGHTICOKE, a post-village in the above township, on the Hoosic river and on the Albany Northern railroad, 21 miles N. N. E. from Albany. It contains 3 or 4 churches, and several cotton factories and mills.

SCHIELLSBURG, a post-borough of Bedford co., Pennsylvania, on the turnpike from Bedford to Pittsburg, 9 miles W. from Bedford. Population in 1850, 360; in 1853, about 500.

SCHENECTADY, a county in the E. part of New York, has an area of about 190 square miles. It is intersected by the Mohawk river, by which and its tributaries, with the head branches of Norman's kill, it is chiefly drained. These streams afford some water-power. The surface is generally uneven, and in the S. part hilly. The alluvial flats along the Mohawk are very fertile; and on the uplands the soil is usually a light sandy loam. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 116,413 bushels of corn; 331,027 of oats; 138,285 of potatoes; 24,269 tons of hay, and 509,970 pounds of butter. There were 3 flour and grist mills, 4 iron founderies, 1 cotton mill, 1 carpet factory, 36 manufactories of brooms, 2 of cement, 1 of steam engines, 3 of hats, and 2 tanneries. It contained 28 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 3609 pupils attending public schools, and 230 attending academies or other schools. This county is traversed by the Erie canal, and by several railroads named in the ensuing article. Organized in 1809, having previously formed part of Albany county. Capital, Schenectady. Population, 20,554.

SCHENECTADY, a city, capital of Schenectady county, New York, on the right bank of Mohawk river, and on both sides of the Erie canal, 16 miles N. W. from Albany. Lat. 42° 48' N., lon. 73° 55' W. It is the seat of Union College, founded in 1795, and contains a city hall, 2 banks, a market house, and a Lyceum. Two newspapers are published here. There are churches of 9 or 10 denominations. Cotton goods, machinery, iron-ware, flour, and other articles are manufactured here. This city is the terminus of 4 railroads—the Albany and Schenectady, the Utica and Schenectady, the Troy and Schenectady, and the Saratoga and Schenectady railroad. Settled by the Dutch, about the year 1620. Population in 1840, 6784; in 1850, 8921.

SCHLEISINGERVILLE, a post-village in Polk township, Washington co., Wisconsin, 83 miles N. W. from Milwaukee. It contains 3 stores, 3 hotels, 1 tannery, and 1 church. Pop., 125.

SCHNECKSVILLE, a small post-village of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, 63 miles N. N. W. from Philadelphia.

SCHODAC, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Rensselaer co., New York, on the Hudson river. Population, 3509.

SCHODAC CENTRE, a post-village in the above township, about 10 miles S. by E. from Albany.

SCHODAC DEPÔT, Rensselaer co., New York, on the Western railroad, 8 miles S. by E. from Albany.

SCHODAC LANDING, a post-village of Rensselaer co., New York, on the Hudson river, 12 miles below Albany. The Hudson river railroad passes through it. Pop., about 400.

SCHOENECK, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pa.

SCHOHARIE creek, rises in the E. part of Greene co., New York, and after flowing through Schoharie county, enters the Mohawk in Montgomery county.

SCHOHARIE, a county in the E. part of New York, has an area of about 650 square miles. It is drained by the Schoharie creek, which intersects it and by Cobuskill and Catskill creeks, and other smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. The surface is uneven, and in the western part mountainous. The Catskill range passing through the county. The alluvial flats along the river are very rich and productive; in the more elevated portions the soil is better adapted to grazing. Wheat, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 63,241 bushels of wheat; 514,807 oats; 215,318 of potatoes; 52,759 tons of hay, and 1,603,063 pounds of butter. There were 16 flour and grist mills, 103 saw mills, 4 paper mills, 9 carding and fulling mills, 1 cotton and 1 woollen mill, 5 iron foundries, and 20 tanneries. It contained 80 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 8370 pupils attending public schools. Iron ore, water limestone, and sandstone are found; the Sharon sulphur springs in the N. W. part are somewhat celebrated. The county is intersected by the Albany and Susquehanna railroad now in course of construction. Organized in 1795, having been formed out of portions of Albany and Otsego counties, and named from the Schoharie creek. Capital, Schoharie. Population, 33,548.

SCHOHARIE, a post-village in Schoharie township, and capital of Schoharie county, on a creek of the same name, and on the Albany and Susquehanna railroad, 30 miles W. from Albany. It is pleasantly situated on the right or E. bank of the creek, and contains, besides the county buildings, an academy, 2 newspaper offices, and several mills.

SCHOLLYVILLE, a small village of Clarke co., Kentucky.

SCHOODIC LAKES, of Maine, a chain of lakes lying chiefly in Washington co., have their outlet into the St. Croix river.

SCHOODIC RIVER, (by some considered a branch of the St. Croix,) forms the outlet of the above lakes in Washington county, and unites with the St. Croix river about 50 miles from its mouth.

SCHOOLCRAFT, an unorganized county of Michigan, in the middle part of the upper peninsula, borders on Lake Superior. The area is estimated at 2600 square miles. It is drained by the Manistee and Whitefish rivers, which flow southward to Lake Michigan. The surface is uneven, and mostly covered with forests. The underlying rocks are limestone and sandstone. This county contains the "Pictured Rocks," on the southern shore of Lake Superior, presenting a perpendicular wall from 200 to 300 feet in height, and many miles in extent. The census of 1850 furnishes no statistics of this county, except the population, which was only 16. Named in honor of Henry R. Schoolcraft, Esq., distinguished for his Indian researches.

SCHOOLCRAFT, a post-township in the S. W. part of Kalamazoo co., Michigan. Pop., 1101.

SCHOOLCRAFT, a post-village in the above township, 15 miles S. S. W. from Kalamazoo. It is situated in the midst of Prairie Ronde, the soil of which is excellent. The village contains a number of stores.

SCHOOLEY'S MOUNTAIN, a post-village and celebrated watering-place of Morris co., New Jersey, 45 miles N. from Trenton. The mountain has an elevation of about 1100 feet above the level of the sea. The spring is situated near the top of the mountain, and discharges about 25 gallons an hour. It contains carbonated oxide of iron, lime, soda, and magnesia. There are at this place 2 or 3 hotels, besides a number of private boarding houses, for the accommodation of visitors, who resort here to enjoy the pure air and mountain scenery of this vicinity.

SCHRALENBURG, a post-village of Bergen co., New Jersey, about 5 miles N. E. from Hackensack, contains 2 churches, a store, and 8 or 10 dwellings.

SCHROEPEL, a township in the S. part of Oswego co., New York, on the Oswego and Oneida rivers. Population, 2386.

SCHROON, a township in the S. part of Essex co., New York, drained by Schroon river. Population, 2031.

SCHROON LAKE, New York, situated in Essex and Warren counties, is 8 or 10 miles long.

SCHROON LAKE, a post-village of Essex co., New York, on the north end of Schroon lake, about 95 miles N. from Albany.

SCHROON RIVER rises in Essex co., New York, and running in a southerly course through Schroon lake, falls into the Hudson river in Warren county.

SCHROON RIVER, a post-office of Essex co., New York.

SCHULTZVILLE, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

SCHUMLA, a post-office of Ritchie co., Va.

SCHUYLER, a county in the W. central part of Illinois, has an area of 420 square miles. The Illinois river forms the S. E. boundary of the county, which is intersected by Crooked creek. The surface is undulating, and consists partly of prairie and partly of timbered land; the soil is excellent, and a large part of it is under cultivation. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, potatoes, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 398,160 bushels of corn; 79,930 of wheat; 56,570 of oats, and 136,823 pounds of butter. It contained 12 churches, 1 newspaper office, and 100 pupils attending academies and other schools. The Illinois river is navigable by steamboats on the border. The Central Military Tract railroad passes through the county. Capital, Rushville. Population, 10,573.

SCHUYLER, a county in the N. N. E. part of Missouri, bordering on Iowa, has an area of 324 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by Chariton river, and drained by the three forks of Fabius river, and the North fork of Salt river. The surface is diversified by prairies and woodlands; the soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 221,786 bushels of corn; 7395 of wheat; 21,996 of oats, and 37,738 pounds of butter. It contained 5 churches, and 240 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Lancaster. Pop., 3287; of whom 3232 were free, and 55, slaves.

SCHUYLER, a township of Herkimer co., New York, on the Mohawk river, 6 miles E. from Utica. Population, 1696.

SCHUYLER'S FALLS, a post-township of Clinton co., New York, on Saranac river, 7 miles W. from Plattsburg. Population, 2110.

SCHUYLER ISLAND, a small island near the W. side of Lake Champlain, nearly opposite Burlington, belonging to Essex co., New York.

SCHUYLER'S LAKE, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

SCHUYLERSVILLE, a post-village in Saratoga township, Saratoga county, New York, on the Hudson river, and on the Champlain canal, at the mouth of Fish creek, 35 miles N. by E. from Albany. It has several iron foundries, machine shops, mills, and factories. A newspaper is published here.

SCHUYLKILL river, of Pennsylvania, rises in the carboniferous highlands of Schuylkill county, near Pottsville, and flowing in a S. E. direction, breaks through the Blue Ridge at Port Clinton, passes by Reading, Norristown, and Philadelphia, and enters the Delaware 5 miles below the latter city. Its whole length is estimated at 120 miles. It is navigable for sloops to Philadelphia, and by means of lockage, dams, and side-cuts, boats may ascend to Port Carbon, 3 miles above Pottsville. The Indian name of this river was Manaiunk.

SCHUYLKILL county, Pennsylvania, situated towards the E. part of the state, contains 750 square miles. It is drained by the Schuylkill river and Swatara creek, which rise within its limits. The surface is mountainous. The Kittatiny or Blue mountain forms the S. E. boundary of the county; the ridges which traverse it are called Broad, Sharp, and Mahanoy mountains, and the soil, with small exceptions, is too thin and sterile for cultivation. Anthracite coal is the principal production of the county, nearly the whole area of which is occupied by beds of this mineral, varying from 3 to 30 feet in thickness. In 1851, 2,178,584 tons were mined, and exported chiefly by the Reading railroad. Indian corn, wheat, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 it produced 165,556 bushels of corn; 64,928 of wheat; 136,380 of potatoes; 16,644 tons of hay, and 324,143 pounds of butter. There were 37 flour and grist mills, 103 saw mills, 104 collieries, 11 machine shops, 2 iron furnaces, 2 forges, 4 woollen factories, 5 powder mills, 1 rolling mill, and 14 tanneries. It contained 85 churches, 10 newspaper offices; 8993 pupils attending public schools, and 701 attending academies and other schools. Extensive beds of iron ore are found near Pottsville. The Philadelphia, Reading and Pottsville railroad terminates at Pottsville, and numerous short lines extend from the mines to Pottsville, Schuylkill Haven, &c. The Schuylkill river has been made navigable to Port Carbon. Organized in 1811, and named from its principal river. Capital, Pottsville. Population, 60,713.

SCHUYLKILL, a post-township of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 13 miles N. N. E. from Westchester. Population, 1403.

SCHUYLKILL, a township of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Catawissa railroad, (not yet completed,) about 12 miles E. by N. from Pottsville. Population, 1742.

SCHUYLKILL BEND, a post-office of Berks co., Pennsylvania.

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN, a thriving post-borough of Manheim township, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, is situated on the Schuylkill river, and on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, 5 miles S. from Pottsville. It is a place of active business, and a shipping point for large quantities of coal, which is mined in the vicinity, and transported by the railroad, and also by the navigable waters of the river. The Mine Hill railroad extends westward 12 miles to the coal mines. Two bridges connect the opposite banks of the river at this place. A newspaper is published in the town, which also contains 1 bank. Pop. in 1850, 2071; in 1853, about 2500.

SCHWENCK'S STORE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

SCIENCEVILLE, a village of Greene co., New York, about 44 miles S. W. from Albany.

SCIENCEVILLE, a post-office of Stewart co. Ga. SCIO, a post-village in Scio township, Alleghany co., New York, on the Erie railroad, about 80 miles S. S. W. from Rochester. Population of the township, 1922.

SCIO, a post-office of Harrison co., Ohio.

SCIO, a post-township in the central part of Washtenaw co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Central railroad. Pop., 1196.

SCIO, a post-village in the above township, on the Central railroad, 5 or 6 miles W. N. W. from Ann Arbor.

SCIOTO, a beautiful river of Ohio, and one of the largest streams which intersect the state, rises in Hardin county, near the head waters of the Miami. It flows south-easterly to Columbus, where it receives its principal affluent, the Olentangy river, after which its direction is almost due south, until it enters the Ohio at Portsmouth. Its length is estimated at about 200 miles. The valley through which it flows is extremely fertile, and much improved. The Ohio and Erie canal is constructed along the lower parts of this river, for a distance of 90 miles. Its largest tributaries besides the Olentangy river, are Darby, Walnut, and Paint creeks.

SCIOTO, a county in the S. part of Ohio, bordering on the Ohio river, which separates it from Kentucky, contains about 630 square miles. The Scioto, from which the name is derived, flows from N. to S., through the middle of the county, which is also drained by the Little Scioto river and Brush creek. The surface is hilly; the soil fertile, particularly in the alluvial bottoms of the river. Indian corn, oats, hay, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 921,811 bushels of corn; 83,984 of oats, and 5123 tons of hay. It contained 21 churches, 5 newspaper offices, and 1650 pupils attending public schools. The red sandstone underlies part of the surface. Extensive mines of iron ore are worked in the eastern part of the county. The Ohio canal has its southern terminus at Portsmouth, and the county is intersected by the Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad. Capital, Portsmouth. Population, 18,428.

SCIOTO, a post-office of Clinton co., N. Y.

SCIOTO, a township in the W. part of Delaware co., Ohio. Population, 1126.

SCIOTO, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Jackson co., Ohio. Pop., 1347.

SCIOTO, a township in the N. part of Pickaway co., Ohio. Population, 1347.

SCIOTO, a township in the S. E. part of Ross co., Ohio. Population, 1596.

SCIOTO, a post-village of Scioto co., Ohio.

SCIOTO, a township in the S. W. part of Shiawassee co., Michigan. Population, 191.

SCIOTO BRIDGE, a post-office of Delaware co., Ohio.

SCIOTOVILLE, a post-office of Scioto co., O.

SCIPPIO, a post-township of Cayuga co., New York, 10 miles S. from Auburn, intersected by the Auburn and Ithaca railroad. Population, 2135.

SCIPPIO, a township in the N. W. part of Meigs co., Ohio. Population, 1405.

SCIPPIO, a township in the E. part of Seneca co., Ohio, intersected by Mad river, and Lake Erie railroad. Population, 2322.

SCIPPIO, a township in the N. W. part of Hillsdale co., Michigan. Population, 864.

SCIPPIO, a township in Allen co., Indiana. Population, 173.

SCIPPIO, a small village of Franklin co., Indiana, 11 miles E. from Brookville.

SCIPPIO, a thriving post-village of Jennings co., Indiana, on the Madison and Indianapolis railroad, 31 miles N. W. from Madison.

SCIPPIO, a township in La Porte co., Indiana. Population, 767.

SCIPPIO CENTRE, a post-office of Hillsdale co., Michigan.

SCIPPIOVILLE, a post-village of Cayuga co., New York, 12 miles S. S. W. from Auburn. It contains 2 stores.

SCITICO, a post-office of Hartford co., Conn.
 SCITUATE, a post-township in Plymouth co., Massachusetts, 22 miles S. E. by S. from Boston. Population, 2149.

SCITUATE, a township in Providence co., Rhode Island, 12 miles W. by S. from Providence, contains 1 bank. Population, 4582.

SCONONDOA, or SKANONDOA, a post-village of Oneida co., New York, on a creek of the same name, 22 miles W. from Utica.

SCOOPER, a post-office of Kemper co., Miss.

SCOTCH GROVE, a post-office of Jones co., Iowa.

SCOTCH HILL, a post-office of Clarion co., Pennsylvania.

SCOTCH PLAINS, a post-village of Essex co., New Jersey, about 40 miles N. N. E. from Trenton, contains 2 stores, 7 mills, including an oil and a straw-paper mill, 1 church, and about 75 dwellings.

SCOTCH RIDGE, a post-office of Wood co., O.

SCOTCHTOWN, a post-village of Orange co., New York, 107 miles S. from Albany.

SCOTIA, a post-village of Schenectady co., New York, 18 miles N. W. from Albany.

SCOTIA, a post-village of Pope co., Arkansas, 83 miles N. W. from Little Rock.

SCOTLAND, a county in the N. N. E. part of Missouri, bordering on Iowa, has an area estimated at 450 square miles. It is traversed by the Wyaconda and the North Fabius and Middle Fabius rivers. The surface is undulating, and consists partly of prairies; the soil is fertile, and adapted to pasturage or the production of grain. Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 236,370 bushels of corn; 14,461 of wheat; 40,345 of oats, and 53,375 pounds of butter. There were 247 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Memphis. Population, 3782; of whom 3631 were free, and 151, slaves.

SCOTLAND, a post-office of York co., Me.

SCOTLAND, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

SCOTLAND, a post-village in Windham co., Conn., 35 miles E. by S. from Hartford.

SCOTLAND, a post-office of Franklin co., Pennsylvania.

SCOTLAND, a post-village of Jefferson co., Mississippi.

SCOTLAND, a post-office of Union co., Ark.

SCOTLAND, a small post-village of Greene co., Indiana, 10 miles S. from Bloomfield.

SCOTLAND NECK, a post-office of Halifax co., North Carolina, about 100 miles E. N. E. from Raleigh.

SCOTT, a county situated in the S. W. part of Virginia, and bordering on Tennessee, contains 620 square miles. It is drained by Clinch river, and by the N. fork of Holston river. The surface is traversed by several parallel mountain ridges, one of which is called the Clinch mountain. The soil is mostly fertile, and adapted to grazing. Wheat, Indian corn, and other kinds of grain also flourish. In 1850 this county produced 319,240 bushels of corn; 15,722 of wheat; 106,342 of oats, and 74,086 pounds of butter. There were 20 flour and grist mills, 7 wool-carding mills, and 2 tanneries. It contained 20 churches, and 1000 pupils attending public schools. Bituminous coal and iron ore are abundant. About 3 miles from the Clinch river is one of the most remarkable natural objects of the state, known as the "Natural Tunnel." An affluent of the Clinch river, after flowing through a deep ravine enclosed by stupendous walls of stratified rocks, is confronted by a transverse ridge, about 300 feet in height, which has been perforated at its base by an arched tunnel to admit the passage of the stream. The spectator standing by the margin of the stream, sees before him an enormous arch, rising 70 or 80 feet, surmounted by strata of limestone which measure more than 100 feet in a vertical direction, while the view on either side is bounded by gigantic ramparts of perpendicular rock. The county was formed in 1814, and named in honor of General Winfield Scott. Population, 9829; of whom 9356 were free, and 473, slaves.

SCOTT, a county in the S. central part of Mississippi, has an area of about 600 square miles. It is drained by Tuscalameta creek, an affluent of Pearl river. The soil is sandy and sterile; a large part of the county is covered with forests of pine. Cotton and corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 881 bales of cotton; 95,500 bushels of corn, and 57,590 pounds of rice. It contained 7 churches, 157 pupils attending public schools, and 25 attending an academy. Named in honor of Governor A. M. Scott, of Mississippi. Capital, Hillsborough. Population, 3961; of whom 2779 were free, and 1182, slaves.

SCOTT, a county situated in the W. part of Arkansas, contains 870 square miles. It is drained by the Fourche La Fave and the Petit Jean rivers. The surface is diversified. The soil is adapted to the production of grain and for pasture. Indian corn, oats, cotton, and butter are the staples. In 1850 it produced 128,460 bushels of corn; 18,156 of oats; 368 bales of cotton, and 33,593 pounds of butter. There were 6 cotton-ginning mills, and 5 grist and saw mills. It contained 250 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Boonsville. Population, 3083; of whom 2937 were free, and 146, slaves.

SCOTT, a county in the N. N. E. part of Tennessee, bordering on Kentucky, area estimated at 300 square miles. It is drained by Clear fork of Cumberland river, and by Powell's river. The surface is traversed by Cumberland mountains, and mostly covered with forests. Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 66,421 bushels of corn; 5895 of oats, and 28,962 pounds of butter. It contained 3 churches. Capital, Huntsville. Pop., 1905; of whom 1868 were free, and 37, slaves.

SCOTT, a county in the N. part of Kentucky, has an area estimated at 240 square miles. It is intersected by the North Elkhorn, affluent of the Kentucky river, and also drained by the South Elkhorn and Eagle creek. The surface is diversified,—level, undulating, and hilly; the southern part has a deep, black soil, based on limestone, and remarkable for fertility. Indian corn, hemp, and grass are cultivated. The exports consist chiefly of cattle, horses, mules, and swine. In 1850 this county produced 1,089,109 bushels of corn; 156,368 of oats, and 1612 tons of hemp. There were 26 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 30 pupils attending public schools, and 785 attending academies and other schools. The county contains an abundance of fine blue limestone. It is intersected by the turnpike from Lexington to Covington. Formed in 1792, and named in honor of Governor Charles Scott, of Kentucky. Capital, Georgetown. Population, 14,946; of whom 9110 were free, and 5836, slaves.

SCOTT, a county in the S. E. part of Indiana, contains about 180 square miles. It is drained by Graham's fork of White river. The surface is nearly level, excepting some hills in the W. part, called the "Knobs," which are among the highest elevations in the state. The staples are wheat, corn, oats, pork, and beef. In 1850 this county produced 251,375 bushels of corn; 20,417 of wheat; 65,855 of oats, and 2451½ tons of hay. It contained 16 churches, and 3226 pupils attending public schools. The county is intersected by the Jeffersonville railroad. Organized in 1820. Capital, Lexington. Population, 5885.

SCOTT, a county in the W. part of Illinois, has an area of 255 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Illinois river, navigable by steamboats, and intersected by Plume, Sandy, and Movestar (Mauvaiseterre) creeks. The surface is nearly level, and partly covered with forests of good timber. The soil is exceedingly rich, and is well cultivated. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 762,950 bushels of corn; 84,232 of wheat; 39,917 of oats; 3823 tons of hay, and 112,436 pounds of butter. It contained 15 churches, 1 newspaper office; 1844 pupils attending public schools, and 67 attending academies or other schools. Stone coal and good limestone are abundant. Sandy creek furnishes valuable water-power at the county seat. Capital, Winchester. Pop., 7914.

SCOTT, a county in the E. S. E. part of Missouri, has an area of 370 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Mississippi river, which separates it from Illinois, and on the W. by Castor river and Castor lake. The surface is uneven, and some parts broken; a portion of the soil is productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 169,100 bushels of corn; 3700 of wheat, and 9365 of oats. It contained 9 churches, and 225 pupils attending public schools. Extensive cypress swamps occur in the S. part. Capital, Benton. Population, 3182; of whom 2789 were free, and 393, slaves.

SCOTT, a county in the E. part of Iowa, bordering on Illinois, has an area of 450 square miles. The Mississippi forms its boundary on the E. and S. E., and the Wapsipicon on the N. The surface is high and undulating. The soil is good, and easily cultivated. A great part of the county is destitute of timber, but this deficiency is partly compensated by the abundance of stone coal. Indian corn, wheat, and grass are the staples. In 1850, Scott county produced 153,915 bushels of corn; 120,034 of wheat; 84,494 pounds of butter, and 6034 tons of hay. It contained 11 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 2041 pupils attending public schools, and 75 attending academies or other schools. Limestone is the principal rock. Named in honor of General Winfield Scott. Capital, Davenport. Pop., 5986.

SCOTT, a county in the S. E. part of Minnesota, has an area of about 680 square miles. The St. Peter's, or Minnesota river forms its N. W. boundary, and it is drained by the sources of Vermilion and Cannon rivers. The surface is undulating, and diversified with prairies and forests. The soil is productive. Lumber is the chief article of export. This county is not included in the census of 1850, having been formed since that date. Capital, Shokapee.

SCOTT, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Cortland co., New York. Population, 1290.

SCOTT, a township of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania, about 25 miles N. E. from Wilkesbarre. Population, 1268.

SCOTT, a post-township forming the N. extremity of Wayne county, Pa. Pop., 617.

SCOTT, a township in Mississippi co., Arkansas. Population, 157.

SCOTT, a post-township in the N. W. part of Adams co., Ohio. Population, 1270.

SCOTT, a township in the central part of Brown co., Ohio. Population, 930.

SCOTT, a township in the N. E. part of Marion co., Ohio. Population, 717.

SCOTT, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Sandusky co., Ohio. Pop., 792.

SCOTT, a township in Kosciusko co., Indiana. Population, 255.

SCOTT, a post-office of La Grange co., Ind.

SCOTT, a township in Montgomery co., Indiana. Population, 1209.

SCOTT, a township in Steuben co., Indiana. Population, 490.

SCOTT, a township in Vanderburg co., Indiana. Population, 1162.

SCOTT, a post-office of La Salle co., Ill.

SCOTT, a post-village in Mahaska co., Iowa, 75 miles S. W. by W. from Iowa City.

SCOTT, a township in the N. E. part of Columbia co., Wisconsin. Population, 395.

SCOTT, a post-township in the S. W. part of Sheboygan co., Wisconsin.

SCOTT, a post-village in the above township, 44 miles N. by W. from Milwaukee.

SCOTTSBOROUGH, a small village of Baldwin co., Georgia, on the railroad from Milledgeville to Gordon, 4 miles S. from the former.

SCOTTSBURG, a post-office of Livingston co., New York.

SCOTTSBURG, a small post-village of Halifax co., Virginia, 119 miles S. W. from Richmond.

SCOTTSBURG, a post-village of Umpqua co., Oregon, on the right bank of the Umpqua river, 100 miles S. S. W. from Salem.

SCOTT'S CREEK, a post-office of Haywood co., North Carolina.

SCOTT'S HILL, a post-office of New Hanover co., North Carolina.

SCOTT'S HILL, a post-office of Union co., Ga.

SCOTT'S HILL, a post-office of Henderson co., Tennessee.

SCOTT'S MILLS, a village in Linn co., Iowa, 25 miles N. from Iowa City.

SCOTT'S MOUNTAIN, of Warren county, New Jersey, forms part of South mountain. It is from 700 to 800 feet above tide. It abounds with iron ore of several varieties.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., New York, near the Genesee river, and on the canal of that name, 13 miles S. W. from Rochester. It has 3 or 4 churches and several mills.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-office of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania.

SCOTTSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Albemarle county, Virginia, is situated on the left bank of James river, 79 miles W. from Richmond. The navigation of the James River canal renders it a place of active and extensive trade, and an important depôt for produce. The village, which is built chiefly of brick, contains 3 churches. Population in 1853, about 1200.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Powhatan co., Virginia, 32 miles W. from Richmond.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-village of Bibb co., Alabama, 30 miles E. S. E. from Tuscaloosa, contains several stores and 350 inhabitants.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-office of Claiborne parish, Louisiana.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Allen co., Kentucky, about 148 miles S. W. from Frankfort. Besides the usual county buildings, it contains 3 or 4 churches and 4 stores.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-office of Warren co., O.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-office of Macomb co., Michigan.

SCOTTSVILLE, a village in Lee co., Illinois, 140 miles N. by E. from Springfield.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-village of Macoupin co., Ill., about 78 miles S. E. from Galena.

SCOTTSVILLE, a post-village of Sullivan co., Missouri, 130 miles N. N. W. from Jefferson City.

SCOTTSVILLE, a small village of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, at the southern base of Jack's mountain, 87 miles W. from Harrisburg.

SCRABBLE, a post-office of Berkeley co., Va.

SCRABBLETOWN, a small village of Burlington co., New Jersey, 12 miles E. from Mount Holly.

SCRANTON, formerly LACKAWANNA, a flourishing post-borough of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Lackawanna river, about 7 miles from its mouth, 16 miles N. E. from Wilkesbarre, and 14 miles S. W. from Carbondale. The Lackawanna and Western railroad extends from Scranton to Great Bend, on the New York and Erie railroad, and the Pennsylvania Coal Company's railroad extends eastward about 28 miles, to the Lackawaxen canal. The plank-road from Wilkesbarre to Carbondale passes through Scranton. These improvements, together with the rich mines of coal which are worked in the vicinity, render it a place of active business, and an important depôt of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. It contains extensive iron furnaces, foundries, and rolling mills. The population has rapidly increased for a few years past; it is composed chiefly of Welsh, Irish, and English. Iron ore is abundant in the vicinity. Roaring creek enters the river about half a mile below Scranton. One paper is published here. Population in 1853, about 3000.

SCREAMERSVILLE, post-office, Maury co., Ten.

SCRIBA, a post-township of Oswego co., New York, on Lake Ontario and on the Oswego river, about 34 miles N. N. W. from Syracuse. It contains a village of its own name. Population, 2738.

SCRIVEN, a county in the E. part of Georgia, bordering on South Carolina, contains 540 square miles. The Savannah river bounds it on the E., and the Ogeechee on the S. W. The surface is mostly level, and the soil sandy. Cotton, Indian corn, rice, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 it produced 3936 bales of cotton; 510,550 pounds of rice; 264,860 bushels of corn, and 131,620 of sweet potatoes. It contained 13 churches; 280 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending other schools. The forests afford pine lumber for exportation. The river and the Central railroad afford easy access to the Savannah market. Organized in 1793, and named in honor of Colonel James Scriven, an officer of the Revolution, and a native of South Carolina. Capital, Sylvania. Population, 6847, of whom 3174 were free, and 3673, slaves.

SCROGGIN'S MILLS, a post-office of Dale co., Alabama.

SCROGGSFIELD, a post-office of Carroll co., Ill.

SCRUBGRASS, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

SCRUBGRASS, a township of Venango co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Alleghany river, 26 miles E. by S. from Mercer. Population, 1143.

SCRUGGSVILLE, a small village of Monroe co., Alabama.

SCUFFLETOWN, a post-village in Laurens district, S. C., 70 miles N. W. from Columbia.

SCULL CAMP, a post-village of Surry co., North Carolina.

SCULL'S CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Ogeechee at the E. end of Emanuel county.

SCULL SHOALS, a small post-village of Greene co., Georgia, on the Oconee river, 54 miles N. from Milledgeville, contains a cotton factory.

SCULLTOWN, formerly LOCKERTON, a post-village of Salem county, New Jersey, on Oldman's creek, 18 miles from its mouth, contains a church, 3 stores, and about 40 dwellings.

SCUPERNONG creek, of Wisconsin, enters Bark river in Jefferson county.

SCUPPERNONG, a post-office of Washington co., North Carolina.

SEABROOK, a post-village in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, near the Atlantic coast, on the Eastern railroad, 45 miles S. E. from Concord. Population of the township, 1296.

SEAFORD, a post-village of Sussex county, Delaware, on Nanticoke river, (navigable for schooners,) 45 miles S. by W. from Dover. It is the southern terminus of the Dona and Seaford railroad, and is a place of active trade. It contains 2 or 3 churches, 1 hotel, and about 10 stores. Population in 1853, about 800.

SEAGRAVE'S MILLS, a manufacturing village of Providence co., Rhode Island, about 25 miles N. W. from Providence. It contains 1 woollen mill. Population, about 60.

SEAL, a township in the S. E. part of Pike co., Ohio. Population, 2210.

SEAL, a post-office of Wyandot co., Ohio.

SEAL COVE, a post-office of Hancock co., Me.

SEAL ISLANDS, a small cluster W. by S. from Grand Menan Island, Maine. On the western island are two fixed lights, about 140 feet from each other, and 50 feet above high-water mark. Lat. 44° 29' N., lon. 67° 5' 30" W.

SEARCY, a county in the N. part of Arkansas, contains about 930 square miles. It is intersected by Buffalo fork of White river. The surface is hilly or rolling; the soil is adapted to the production of wheat, Indian corn, and grass. In 1850 there were raised 123,618 bushels of Indian corn; 14,302 of oats, and 4878 of wheat. It contained 3 churches, and 120 pupils attending public schools. A large portion of the county is overspread with forests. Capital, Lebanon. Population, 1979; of whom 1950 were free, and 29, slaves.

SEARCY, a township in Phillips co., Arkansas. Population, 573.

SEARCY, a small post-village, capital of White co., Arkansas, about 50 miles N. E. from Little Rock.

SEARIGHT'S, a post-office of Fayette co., Pa. SEARSBURG, a post-township in Bennington county, Vermont, 112 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 201.

SEARSBURG, a post-office of Tompkins co., New York.

SEARSMONT, a post-township in Waldo co., Maine, 35 miles E. by S. from Augusta. Population, 1693.

SEARSPORT, a post-township of Waldo co., Me., on Penobscot Bay, about 50 miles E. by S. from Augusta, contains 1 bank. Pop., 2207.

SEARSVILLE, a post-office of Orange co., N. Y.

SEARSVILLE, a post-village in Stewart co., Georgia, 110 miles S. W. from Milledgeville.

SEATTLE, or SEATTLE, a thriving post-village and settlement of Pierce co., Oregon, at the mouth of Duwamish river, and at the head of Elliott bay, which is on the E. side of Admiralty Inlet. The valley of the Duwamish is an extensive and rich tract of country, which is now rapidly being settled.

SEATUCK, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

SEAVILLE, a township in Hancock co., Maine, 77 miles E. by S. from Augusta. Population, 139.

SEAVILLE, a post-office of Cape May co., New Jersey.

SEBAGO, a post-township of Cumberland co., Maine, 55 miles S. W. by W. from Augusta. Population, 850.

SEBAGO POND, or LAKE, in Cumberland co., Maine. Length, 12 miles; greatest breadth, from 7 to 8 miles.

SEBASTIAN, a new county in the W. part of Arkansas, contains 825 square miles. The Arkansas river forms the entire N. boundary. The surface is partly occupied by high mountains belonging to the Ozark range, which are thought to be rich in minerals. The soil and climate are adapted to the production of wheat, Indian corn, cotton, and pasturage. The county contains an abundance of stone coal. The Arkansas is navigable by steamboats in this part of its course. This county is not included in the census of 1850. Capital, Jenny Lind.

SEBASTICOOK RIVER, a fine mill stream, rises in Penobscot county, Maine, and flowing through Somerset county, falls into the Kennebec river in Kennebec county. Its whole length is about 50 miles.

SEBEC, a post-township in Piscataquis co., Maine, on the N. side of Piscataquis river, 70 miles N. N. E. from Augusta. Pop., 1223.

SEBEWA, a post-township in the S. E. part of Ionia co., Michigan. Population, 247.

SEBEWA CREEK, of Michigan, enters Grand river in Ionia county.

SECILLIA, a post-office of Calhoun co., Michigan.

SECOND CREEK, a post-office of Greenbrier co., Virginia.

SECOND FORK, a post-village of Elk co., Pa., 157 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

SECOND LAKE. See FOUR LAKES.

SECOND TURNOUT, a post-office of Louisa co., Virginia.

SECTION TEN, a township in Van Wert co., Ohio. Population, 402.

SECTION TEN, a post-village of Ohio. See DELPHOS.

SEDGWICK, a post-township in Hancock co., Maine, 60 miles E. by S. from Augusta. Population, 1235.

SEDLEY, a post-office of Bullitt co., Ky.

SEEKONK, a post-village in Bristol co., Massachusetts, near Blackstone river, on the Boston and Providence railroad, 6 miles E. by N. from Providence. Pop. of the township, 2243.

SEELY CREEK, a post-office of Chemung co., New York.

SEELYSBURG, a post-village of Cattaraugus co., New York, 50 miles S. from Buffalo.

SEELVILLE, a village of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, 1 mile from Honesdale, and 161 miles from Harrisburg. Pop., about 350.

SEGO, a post-office of Perry co., Ohio.

SEGUIN, a small island off the mouth of Kennebec river, Maine. On it is a lighthouse, 200 feet above the level of the sea, containing a fixed light. Lat. 43° 41' 40" N., lon. 69° 44' W.

SEGUIN, a post-village capital of Guadalupe co., Texas, on the Guadalupe river, 70 miles S. from Austin City. It has improved rapidly since the completion of the college buildings, which are an ornament to the place. This institution comprises a male and female department, and occupies two stone buildings 60 feet in length and 2 stories high.

SEIBERLINGVILLE, a post-office of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania.

SEIDERSVILLE, a post-office of Northampton co., Pennsylvania.

SEISHOLTZVILLE, a post-office of Berks co., Pennsylvania.

SELBSPORT, a post-village of Allegheny co., Maryland, on the Youghiogheny river, about 40 miles W. by N. from Cumberland.

SELBYVILLE, a post-office of Sussex co., Delaware.

SELDEN, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

SELINSGROVE, a post-borough of Penn township, Union county, Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Susquehanna, at the mouth of Penn's creek, 50 miles N. from Harrisburg. It is situated in a rich farming district. The grain and flour exported from the vicinity are shipped here by canal.

SELKIRK, a post-office of Marion dis., S. C.

SELLERSBURG, a small village or station on the Jeffersonville railroad, in Clarke co., Indiana, 9 miles N. from Jeffersonville.

SELLERS' TAVERN, a post-office of Bucks co., Pennsylvania.

SELMA, a thriving post-village of Dallas co., Alabama, on the right bank of the Alabama river, about 70 miles below Montgomery. It is the southern terminus of the Alabama and Tennessee River railroad. The cars are now running on this end of the line.

The Central railroad of Alabama extends westward. Selma is surrounded by a rich and populous district, and has an active business. It contains several churches, and a newspaper office. Population estimated at 1500.

SELMA, a post-office of Clark co., Ohio.

SELMA, a post-office of McLean co., Ill.

SELMA, a post-village in Jefferson co., Missouri, on the Mississippi river, 35 miles S. by W. from St. Louis.

SELTZERSVILLE, a post-office of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania.

SEMERONE, or CINARRON, see-mě-rōn', a considerable river of Indian Territory, rises in the Rocky Mountains, in 37° N. lat., and flowing nearly E. falls into the Arkansas in about 97° 30' W. lon. Length estimated at 600 miles. It is not navigable.

SEMINARY, a post-office of Washita co., Ark.

SEMINOLE INDIANS, a once powerful tribe dwelling in Florida. Most of them have been removed to the W. of the Mississippi.

SEMPRONIUS, a post-township in the S. E. part of Cayuga co., New York, 18 miles S. E. from Auburn. Population, 1266.

SENECA, a county near the centre of New York, has an area of about 330 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by Cayuga lake and Seneca river, and partly on the W. by Seneca lake, and is principally drained by Seneca and Clyde rivers, which intersect it, affording valuable water-power. The surface is undulating, being most elevated about midway between the two lakes. The soil is principally a calcareous loam, well adapted to both grain and grass. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 527,697 bushels of wheat; 260,271 of corn; 315,026 of oats; 29,763 tons of hay, and 123,358 pounds of wool. There were 22 flour and grist mills, 24 saw mills, 4 pump factories, 5 iron foundries, 1 cotton and 1 woollen mill, 1 shawl factory, 3 distilleries, and 2 chandleries. It contained 46 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 6628 pupils attending public schools, and 520 attending academies and other schools. Iron ore and gypsum are found, and near the village of Canoga is a spring which rises with such force as to supply mill-power within a few rods. The Central railroad, and the Cayuga and Seneca canal traverse this county, and the Erie canal passes through its N. E. corner. Named from a tribe of Indians who formerly inhabited this part of the country. Seats of justice, Ovid and Waterloo. Population, 25,441.

SENECA, a county in the N. part of Ohio, has an area of 540 square miles. It is traversed from S. to N. by Sandusky river, and also drained by Honey and Green creeks. The surface is nearly level, with a moderate declivity towards the N. The soil is excellent, well timbered, and under good cultivation. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 632,879 bushels of corn; 474,737 of wheat; 237,112 of oats; 25,580 tons of hay, and 581,656 pounds of butter. It contained 49 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 6451 pupils attending public schools, and 100 attending an academy. The county is intersected by the Mad River and Lake Erie railroad, and has one or two plank-roads. Capital, Tiffin. Population, 27,105.

SENECA, a new county in the S. W. part of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas. It is drained by the Elk or Cowskin river, which flows westward. Capital, Looniesville.

SENECA, a township of Ontario co., New York, on the W. shore of Seneca lake. It is intersected by several railroads, and contains the village of Geneva. Population, 8505.

SENECA, a post-office of Tompkins co., N. Y.

SENECA, a post-office of Anderson dis., S. C.

SENECA, a township in the S. E. part of Guernsey co., Ohio. Population, 1411.

SENECA, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Monroe co., Ohio. Pop., 1803.

SENECA, a township in the S. W. part of Seneca co., Ohio, intersected by Mad river and Lake Erie railroad. Pop., 1662.

SENECA, a post-township in the S. W. part of Lenawee co., Michigan. Pop., 1092.

SENECA, a township in McHenry co., Illinois. Population, 836.

SENECA, a post-office of Whitesides co., Ill.

SENECA CASTLE, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.

SENECA CREEK, of Montgomery co., Maryland, flows south-westward, and enters the Potomac.

SENECA CREEK, of Ohio, rises in Monroe co., and enters Wills creek, near Cambridge.

SENECA FALLS, a post-township of Seneca co., New York, about 160 miles W. by N. from Albany. Population, 4296.

SENECA FALLS, a thriving post-village in the above township, is situated on the outlet of Seneca lake, and on the Central railroad, 43 miles W. S. W. from Syracuse. It contains churches of 5 or 6 denominations, an academy, 2 newspaper offices, and many handsome dwellings and gardens. The Cayuga and Seneca canal passes through the village. It has abundant water-power, and a variety of manufactories. The principal articles produced are flour, cotton goods, machinery, paper, window sash, and farming implements. Incorporated in 1831. Population in 1853, about 3600.

SENECA INDIANS, a tribe formerly inhabiting the western part of New York, but now occupying a tract lying between the Neosho river and the W. border of Missouri.

SENECA LAKE, in the W. central part of New York, lies between Tompkins and Seneca counties on the E., and Steuben, Yates, and Ontario counties on the W. It is about 35 miles long, and from 2 to 4 miles wide. It is very deep, and is never frozen over. The surface is stated to be 216 feet above Lake Ontario, or 447 feet above the Atlantic. The steamboat at present (June, 1853) leaves Jefferson daily at about 9 A. M. for Geneva, and returns at 3½ P. M. The outlet of Crooked lake enters Seneca lake, about 12 miles from its N. extremity.

SENECA MILLS, a post-office of Montgomery co., Maryland.

SENECA RIVER, New York, forms the outlet of Canandaigua, Cayuga, Owasco, and Skaneateles lakes, and after receiving the waters of Onondaga lake, takes the name of Oswego river.

SENECA RIVER rises in the Blue Ridge, near the S. boundary of North Carolina, and flowing southerly, falls into the Tugaloo river, in Anderson district, South Carolina.

SENECA RIVER, a post-office of Cayuga co., New York.

SENECAVILLE, a post-village of Guernsey co., Ohio, near Seneca creek, 10 miles S. E. from Cambridge, contains 2 or 3 churches.

SENECA, a post-office of McLean co., Ill.

SENETT, a post-village in Sennett township, Cayuga co., New York, on the Syracuse and Rochester railroad, 4 miles N. E. from Auburn. Population of the township, 2347.

SENTELL'S STORE, a post-office of Bossier parish, Louisiana.

SEPULGA, a small river of Alabama, rises in Butler co., and flowing southward, enters Conecuh river, in Conecuh county.

SEPULGA, a post-office of Conecuh co., Ala.

SEQUATCHIE, or SEQUATCHY, a small river of Tennessee, rises in Bledsoe county, and flowing S. W., enters the Tennessee river in Marion county, about two miles from the frontiers of Georgia and Alabama. Length estimated at 100 miles.

SERENA, a post-office of La Salle co., Ill.

SEREPTA, a small post-village of Warren co., New Jersey, about 6 miles N. E. from Belvidere.

SERGEANT, a township in the S. part of McKean co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the route of the Sunbury and Erie railroad. Population, 172.

SERGEANTSVILLE, a small post-village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, about 5 miles S. W. from Flemington.

SERUYS, a village in Lake co., Illinois, 35 miles N. W. from Chicago.

SERVICE, a small post-village of Beaver co., Pennsylvania.

SETAUKET, a post-village of Brookhaven township, Suffolk county, New York, on the N. side of Long Island, 58 miles E. by N. from New York. It has a good harbor, and contains several churches and stores.

SETZLER'S STORE, a post-office of Chester co., Pennsylvania.

SEVEN ISLANDS, a post-office of Fluvanna co., Virginia.

SEVEN ISLANDS, a post-office of Butts co., Ga.

SEVEN LEAGUES, a post-office of Smith co., Texas.

SEVENMILE, a small post-village of Butler co., Ohio, 6 miles N. from Hamilton.

SEVENMILE CREEK, a post-office of Sauk co., Wisconsin.

SEVENMILE FORD, a post-office of Smyth co., Virginia.

SEVENMILE PRAIRIE, a post-office of Darke co., Ohio.

SEVEN MOUNTAINS, Pa., a series of elevations or mountains, situated on the S. W. border of Mifflin co., dividing it from Centre county.

SEVENTY-EIGHT, a post-office of Johnson co., Iowa.

SEVENTY-SEVEN, a post-village in Johnson co., Iowa, on Iowa river, 16 miles S. by E. from Iowa city.

SEVENTY-SIX, a small post-village of Beaver co., Pennsylvania.

SEVENTY-SIX, a post-office of Clinton co., Kentucky.

SEVEN VALLEYS, a post-office of York co., Pennsylvania.

SEVERN, a small river of Maryland, rises in Anne Arundel co., flows south-eastward, passes by Annapolis, and enters the Chesapeake, 3 miles below.

SEVIER, a county in the S. W. part of Arkansas, bordering on Texas and the Indian Territory, contains about 1300 square miles. It is intersected by Little river, and bounded on the S. by Red river. The surface of the N. part is hilly. The staples are Indian corn and cotton. In 1850 it produced 142,030 bushels of corn; 21,073 of sweet potatoes; 2254 bales of cotton, and 47,684 pounds of butter. There were 3 tanneries, and 1 saddle and harness manufactory. It contained 8 churches, and 264 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Paraclifta. Pop., 4240; of whom 2868 were free, and 1372, slaves.

SEVIER, a county of E. Tennessee, bordering on North Carolina: area estimated at 520 square miles. It is drained by French Broad and Little Pigeon rivers. The surface is elevated and mountainous; the soil of the valleys is fertile and well watered. Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 375,940 bushels of Indian corn; 63,339 of oats, and 62,571 pounds of butter. It contained 9 churches, 1000 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending other schools. Iron ore and limestone are abundant. The French Broad river is navigable by steamboats from this county to its mouth. Capital, Sevierville. Pop., 6920; of whom 6517 were free, and 403, slaves.

SEVIERVILLE, or SEVIER COURT HOUSE, a post-village, capital of Sevier co., Tennessee, on Little Pigeon river, about 20 miles E. S. E. from Knoxville.

SEVILLE, a post-office of Madison co., Va.

SEVILLE, a village of Medina co., Ohio, 104 miles N. N. E. from Columbus.

SEWARD, a post-township of Schoharie co., New York, 48 miles W. from Albany. Population, 2203.

SEWARD, a township in Winnebago co., Illinois. Population, 330.

SEWARD'S POINT, a post-village of Montgomery co., Ill., 50 miles S. from Springfield.

SEWEE, a post-office of Meigs co., Tenn.

SEWELL MOUNTAIN, a post-office of Fayette co., Virginia.

SEWELLSVILLE, a post-office of Belmont co. O.

SEWICKLY, a township of Beaver co., Pennsylvania. See NORTH SEWICKLEY.

SEWICKLY, a township of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, about 11 miles S. by W. from Greensburg. Population, 1470.

SEWICKLY BOTTOM, a post-office of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania.

SEWICKLEYVILLE, a post-village of Ohio township, Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the Ohio river and on the Ohio and Pennsylvania railroad, 12 miles N. W. from Pittsburg. It contains seminaries for boys and girls. Population in 1853, 800.

SEXTON'S, a post-village of Boone co., Mo., 40 miles N. N. W. from Jefferson City.

SEXTON'S CREEK, a post-office of Clay co., Kentucky.

SEXTONVILLE, a post-village in Richland co., Wisconsin, 56 miles W. from Madison. It contains 2 stores, 1 hotel, 2 mills, and has excellent water-power. Population, 130.

SEYMONVILLE, a post-office of Hardy co., Va.

SEYMOUR, a new township in New Haven co., Connecticut, on the Naugatuck river and railroad, about 10 miles N. W. from New Haven, contains 1 bank. Population, 1667.

SHABONA, a township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 360.

SHACKELFORD'S, a post-office of King and Queen co., Va., 67 miles E. from Richmond.

SHADE, a township of Somerset co., Pa., 16 miles N. E. from Somerset. Population, 1266.

SHADE, a post-office of Athens co., Ohio.

SHADE CREEK, Pennsylvania, rises in the E. part of Alleghany co., and falls into Stony creek.

SHADE CREEK, of Ohio, enters the Ohio river in Meigs county.

SHADE FURNACE, a post-office of Somerset co., Pa., 78 miles E. S. E. from Pittsburg.

SHADE GAP, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania.

SHADE MILL, a post-office of Alleghany co., Maryland.

SHADE MOUNTAIN, Pennsylvania, extends N. E. from the Juniata, along the S. E. boundary of Mifflin, which it separates from Juniata county, and into Union county, nearly to the Susquehanna river.

SHADEWELL, a post-office of Albemarle co., Virginia.

SHADY, a post-office of Johnson co., Tenn.

SHADY DALE, a post-village of Jasper co., Georgia, 117 miles W. by S. from Augusta. It contains 2 churches and an academy.

SHADY GROVE, a small post-village of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, about 60 miles S. W. from Harrisburg.

SHADY GROVE, a post-office of Franklin co., Virginia.

SHADY GROVE, a small village of Union district, South Carolina.

SHADY GROVE, a small village of Forsyth co., Georgia.

SHADY GROVE, a post-office of Union co., Georgia.

SHADY GROVE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Alabama.

SHADY GROVE, a small village of Copiah co., Mississippi.

SHADY GROVE, a post-office of Washington parish, Louisiana.

SHADY GROVE, a thriving post-village of Gibson co., Tennessee, 116 miles W. from Nashville.

SHADY GROVE, a post-office of Crittenden co., Kentucky.

SHADY GROVE, a small post-village of Dallas co., Missouri.

SHADY HILL, a post-office of Henderson co., Tennessee.

SHADY SPRING, a post-office of Raleigh co., Virginia.

SHAFFERSTOWN, a post-borough of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania, 34 miles E. from Harrisburg. It contains several churches and stores. Population in 1850, 616.

SHAFTSBURY, a post-village in Bennington co., Vermont, on the Western Vermont railroad, 100 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population of township, 1896.

SHAKELFORD'S, a post-office of King and Queen co., Virginia.

SHAKER VILLAGE, a post-village in Merrimack co., New Hampshire, 12 miles N. by E. from Concord.

SHALER, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. from Pittsburg. Population, 2002.

SHALER'S MILLS, a post-office of Knox co., Ohio.

SHALERSVILLE, a small mining village of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on Sawmill river, about 2 miles W. from Pittsburg.

SHALERSVILLE, a post-township in the N. central part of Portage co., Ohio, intersected by Cuyahoga river. Population, 1190.

SHALLOTTE, a post-office of Brunswick co., North Carolina.

SHALLOW FORD, a post-office of Orange co., North Carolina.

SHAMOKIN creek, of Pennsylvania, falls into the Susquehanna near Sunbury.

SHAMOKIN, a post-township of Northumberland co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Philadelphia and Sunbury railroad, (unfinished,) about 12 miles E. by S. from Sunbury. Population, 2191.

SHAMOKIN, a flourishing post-village of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, on Shamokin creek and on the railroad from Sunbury to Pottsville, 18 miles E. S. E. from the former. The Shamokin coalfield (anthracite) is said to be as rich and extensive as any in the state. One of the veins is stated to be about 40 feet in thickness. Iron ore is also abundant in the vicinity, and the manufacture of iron has been commenced. The village contains several hotels, which are doing an excellent business: a new one is now in course of erection, at a cost of $14,000.

SHAMOKIN DAM, a small post-village of Union co., Pennsylvania.

SHAMONY, a post-office of Burlington co., New Jersey.

SHAMROCK, a new and thriving village of Adams co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, 88 miles above Cincinnati. It has stone quarries and mills for sawing stone.

SHAMROCK, a post-village of Callaway co., Missouri, 48 miles N. E. from Jefferson City.

SHAMROCK MILLS, a post-office of Washington co., Rhode Island.

SHANANDOAH, a post-office of Richland co., Ohio.

SHANDAKEN, a post-township of Ulster co., New York, 56 miles S. S. W. from Albany. Population, 2307.

SHANE'S CROSSINGS, a post-office of Mercer co., Ohio.

SHANESVILLE, a post-office of Berks co., Pa.

SHANESVILLE, a village of Mercer co., Ohio, on St. Mary's river, 124 miles W. N. W. from Columbus.

SHANESVILLE, a thriving post-village of Sugar Creek township, Tuscarawas co., Ohio, 90 miles E. N. E. from Columbus. It has several stores, and about 600 inhabitants.

SHANKSVILLE, a post-village of Somerset co., Pa., 77 miles E. S. E. from Pittsburg.

SHANNON, a new county in the S. S. E. part of Missouri, has an area of 1080 square miles. It is traversed in a S. E. direction by the Current, an affluent of the Big Black river, and also drained by Jack's fork and by Big and Sinking creeks. The surface is uneven, and partly covered with forests of pine. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 56,713 bushels of corn; 2248 of wheat, and 4639 of oats. Mines of copper are found. Formed out of a part of Ripley county, and named in honor of George Shannon, a member of Lewis and Clarke's company to the Columbia river. Capital, Eminence. Population, 1199, of whom 1190 were free, and 9, slaves.

SHANNON, a post-office of Muskingum co., O.

SHANNONDALE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Indiana.

SHANNONDALE SPRINGS, Jefferson county, Virginia, on the Shenandoah river, 5 miles from Charlestown, and 160 miles N. from Richmond. This beautiful and fashionable watering-place is more easily accessible from the Atlantic cities than any in Virginia. The water is impregnated with the salts of lime, maganesia, and soda.

SHANNON HILL, a small post-village of Goochland co., Va., 25 miles W. from Richmond.

SHANNON'S, a small village of Yallabusha co., Mississippi.

SHANNON'S, a post-office of Montgomery co., Texas.

SHANNONSVILLE, a village in Perry co., Tennessee, on the Tennessee river, 90 miles S. W. from Nashville.

SHANNONVILLE, a small post-village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, about 5 miles W. from Norristown.

SHAPLEIGH, a post-township in York co., Maine, 77 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 1348.

SHARK RIVER, a post-office of Ocean co., New Jersey.

SHARON, a township in Hillsborough co., New Hampshire, 35 miles S. W. from Concord. Population, 226.

SHARON, a post-village in Windsor co., Vermont, on White river, and the Vermont Central railroad, 28 miles S. by E. from Montpelier. Population of the township, 1240.

SHARON, a post-village in Norfolk co., Massachusetts, on the Boston and Providence railroad, 17 miles S. by W. from Boston. Population of the township, 1128.

SHARON, a post-township in Litchfield co., Connecticut, on the W. side of Housatonic river, about 40 miles W. by N. from Hartford. Population, 2507.

SHARON, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Schoharie co., New York. Population, 2632.

SHARON, a thriving village of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of Beaver river, about 1 mile from the Ohio river, and 26 miles N. W. from Pittsburg. It has an iron foundry and several boat-yards.

SHARON, a thriving post-borough of Mercer county, Pennsylvania, on Shenango creek and the Erie canal, 16 miles W. from Mercer, and very near the boundary of Ohio. It has several stores and mills. Pop. in 1850, 541.

SHARON, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Potter co., Pa. Population, 501.

SHARON, a post-village in Wythe co., Virginia, 245 miles W. by S. from Richmond.

SHARON, a post-village in Mecklenburg co., N. C., 165 miles W. S. W. from Raleigh.

SHARON, a post-office of Chambers co., Ala.

SHARON, a post-village in Madison co., Mississippi, 30 miles N. from Jackson.

SHARON, a small village of Tipton co., Tenn.

SHARON, a township in the N. part of Franklin co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati railroad. Population, 1025.

SHARON, a township in the E. part of Medina co., Ohio. Population, 1519.

SHARON, a thriving post-village of Noble co., Ohio, about 30 miles S. E. from Zanesville.

SHARON, a township in the N. W. part of Richland co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati, and the Mansfield and Sandusky railroads. Pop., 1950.

SHARON, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Washtenaw co., Michigan. Population, 868.

SHARON, a post-village in the above township, on the North branch of Raisin river, about 60 miles W. by S. from Detroit.

SHARON, a post-village in Whitesides co., Illinois, 135 miles N. by W. from Springfield.

SHARON, a post-village in Appanoose co., Iowa, on Chariton river, 100 miles S. W. from Iowa City.

SHARON, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Walworth co., Wisconsin. Population, 1169.

SHARON, a post-village in the above township, 65 miles E. S. E. from Madison, has about 100 inhabitants.

SHARON CENTRE, a post-village of Schoharie co., New York, 46 miles W. from Albany.

SHARON CENTRE, a post-village of Potter co., Pa., 192 miles N. N. W. from Harrisburg.

SHARON CENTRE, a post-village of Medina county, Ohio, 112 miles N. N. E. from Columbus. The township contains beds of mineral fireproof paint, which is used extensively in the United States and in Europe.

SHARON SPRINGS, a post-village and watering-place of Schoharie county, New York, about 50 miles W. from Albany. Here are springs impregnated with sulphur, and a large hotel called the Pavilion House. The scenery in the vicinity is very interesting.

SHARONVILLE, a post-office of King William co., Virginia.

SHARONVILLE, a post-village of Hamilton co., Ohio, 13 miles N. E. from Cincinnati.

SHARONVILLE, a village of Pike co., Ohio, on the Scioto river, and Ohio canal, 55 miles S. from Columbus. Population, about 200.

SHARPE'S STORE, a post-office of Lowndes co., Georgia.

SHARPESVILLE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Alabama.

SHARP MOUNTAIN, Pennsylvania, called also THIRD MOUNTAIN, extends from N. E. to S. W. throughout nearly the whole extent of Schuylkill county. On the sides of this mountain the river Schuylkill has many of its sources: here also are found inexhaustible beds of anthracite coal.

SHARPSBURG, a post-village of Indiana township, Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Alleghany river, 5 miles above Pittsburg. Boat building is the principal business of the place. Population in 1853, near 2000.

SHARPSBURG, a small village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, on the Beaver and Erie canal, 11 miles W. by N. from Mercer.

SHARPSBURG, a small post-village of Washington co., Md., 16 miles S. from Ilagerstown.

SHARPSBURG, a thriving post-village of Bath co., Kentucky, 38 miles S. from Maysville, with which it is connected by turnpike. It contains 3 churches, and 2 woollen factories.

SHARPSBURG, a small village of Hamilton co., Ohio.

SHARPSBURG, a post-village in Marion co., Mo., 90 miles N. N. E. from Jefferson City.

SHARP'S FORK, a post-office of Athens co., O.
SHARP'S ISLAND, in Chesapeake bay, off the entrance to Pautuxent river. On the N. end is a lighthouse showing a fixed light.

SHARP'S MILLS, a post-office of Harrison co., Indiana.

SHARPSVILLE, a post-office of Highland co., Ohio.

SHARPSVILLE, a post-village of Tipton co., Indiana, on the Peru and Indianapolis railroad, 48 miles N. from the latter.

SHARP TOP, a post-office of Cherokee co., Georgia.

SHARTOWN, a post-village of Salem co., New Jersey, on Salem creek, 10 miles N. E. from Salem, contains a church, 1 mill, and about 50 dwellings.

SHARTOWN, a post-office of Somerset co., Maryland.

SHARTLESVILLE, a post-village of Berks co., Pennsylvania, 65 miles E. from Harrisburg.

SHASTA, a large county in the N. part of California, bordering on Utah Territory and separated from Oregon by the new county of Siskiyou, has an area estimated at above 6000 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Coast Range of mountains, and partly on the S. by Red creek, and is drained by the Sacramento and Pitt rivers, with Cottonwood, Antelope, and Clear creeks, and several other streams, tributaries of the Sacramento river. The surface is uneven, and in the N. and N. E. parts mountainous. Soil fertile along the streams. Barley, oats and hay are the staples. In 1852 it produced 1430 bushels of barley; 1200 of oats, and 3000 tons of hay. There were 1036 mules, and 415 horses. The capital employed in quartz mining amounted to $94,700; in placer mining, $90,950, and in other mining, $92,800. The whole product of gold was about $2,500,000. The mines of this county are very numerous. There is hardly a river, creek, gulch, or ravine that does not contain gold. Shasta county has many mineral springs strongly impregnated. The Soda springs, the most celebrated, are situated near the Sacramento river, about 60 miles N. of Shasta city. There are twelve or fourteen salt springs, which are capable of producing sufficient salt to supply the whole state. Capital, Shasta. Pop., 4050.

SHASTA, or SHASTA CITY a post-town, capital of Shasta county, California, is situated on the Sacramento river, about 200 miles above its junction with Feather river, and on the main road from Sacramento City to Klamath, 225 miles nearly N. of San Francisco.

SHASTE, shas'tee, or SHASTA, a mountain peak of the Cascade range, in the N. part of California, in lat. about 41° 20' N., lon. 122° W. Height, about 14,000 feet.

SHAUCKS, a post-office of Morrow co., O.

SHAUMBURG, a post-office of Cook co., Ill.

SHAVER'S CREEK, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, 95 miles W. by N. from Harrisburg.

SHAVERTOWN, a post-village of Delaware co., New York, on the Popacton river, 15 miles S. by E. from Delhi.

SHAWANGUNK (shong'gum) river rises in Orange co., New York, and after forming part of the boundary between Ulster and Orange counties, enters the Walkill river, in Ulster county, about 14 miles W. S. W. of Poughkeepsie. Its whole length is nearly 80 miles.

SHAWANGUNK, a host-township in the S. part of Ulster co., New York, intersected by the Delaware and Hudson canal. Pop., 4036.

SHAWANGUNK, a post-village in the above township, about 85 miles S. S. W. from Albany. It has several mills and stores.

SHAWANGUNK MOUNTAINS, a portion of the Appalachian system, lying in the E. part of New York, and extends through Orange and Sullivan counties into Ulster.

SHAWANO, or SHOWANNO LAKE, Wisconsin, in Oconto county, is about 6 miles long. Its outlet joins Wolf river.

SHAWNEE, a post-village of Niagara co., New York, about 18 miles N. by E. from Buffalo.

SHAWNEE, a post-office of Monroe co., Pa.

SHAWNEE, a township in the S. part of Allen co., Ohio. Population, 716.

SHAWNEE, a township in Fountain co., Indiana. Population, 1103.

SHAWNEE INDIANS, a tribe now dwelling W. of the Mississippi, near the Kansas river.

SHAWNEE MOUND, a post-office of Tippecanoe co., Indiana.

SHAWNEE PRAIRIE, a post-office of Fountain co., Indiana.

SHAWNEETOWN, a thriving post-town of Gallatin co., Illinois, on the Ohio river, 9 miles below the mouth of the Wabash, and 260 miles below Louisville, Kentucky. It derives its name from the Shawnee tribe of Indians, who once occupied this site. The landing is frequently visited by the steamboats which navigate the Ohio and Mississippi, and large quantities of produce are shipped from the place, which is one of the most commercial in the S. part of the state. It was formerly the county seat. A newspaper is published here. Population in 1853, about 2000.

SHAW'S MILLS, a post-office of Guilford co., North Carolina.

SHAW'S POINT, a post-office of Macoupin co., Illinois.

SHAWSVILLE, a post-office of Broome co., New York.

SHAWSVILLE, a post-office of Harford co., Md.

SHAWSVILLE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Virginia.

SHAWSWICK, a township in Lawrence co., Indiana. Population, 2934.

SHAYUEN river, in the N. part of Minnesota, rises in a small lake, and flowing first easterly, then southerly, then easterly, and lastly towards the N., it falls into the Red River of the North. Its whole length is estimated at above 300 miles.

SHEARERSBURG, a post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, 25 miles N. from Greensburg. The post-office is Shearer's Cross Roads.

SHEBOYAN, or CHEBOYAN, a river of Michigan, rises in the N. part of the lower peninsula, and flowing nearly N., enters the strait of Mackinaw, about 12 miles from the town of Mackinaw.

SHEBOYAN river, of Wisconsin, rises in Fond du Lac county, near the S. end of Winnebago lake. After passing through the lake and county of its own name, it enters Lake Michigan at Sheboygan, the county seat. The aboriginal name of this river was Shaw-wa-way-gun, i. e. "the river that comes out of the ground." A fall six miles from the mouth affords a fine water-power.

SHEBOYAN, a county in the E. part of Wisconsin, bordering on Lake Michigan, has an area of about 500 square miles. It is drained by the Sheboygan, Onion, and Mullet rivers. The surface is nearly level, and the soil fertile. A few years ago the whole county was covered by a dense forest of pine and other timber. Wheat, oats, potatoes, butter, and lumber are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 29,437 bushels of wheat; 36,979 of oats; 52,885 pounds of butter; 37,206 bushels of potatoes, and 1757 tons of hay. It contained 7 churches, 3 newspaper offices, and 624 pupils attending public schools. The rock which underlies the county is limestone of good quality. The county is liberally supplied with water-power. It is intersected by a plank-road from Fond du Lac to Lake Michigan, and by the Milwaukee and Green Bay railroad, in progress. The settlement began in 1836; it was organized in 1839, and named from its principal river. Capital, Sheboygan. Population, 8379.

SHEBOYAN, a post-township in the N. E. part of Sheboygan co., Wisconsin.

SHEBOYAN, a thriving town, capital of Sheboygan county, Wisconsin, is situated on Lake Michigan, at the mouth of a river of its own name, 62 miles N. from Milwaukee, and 110 N. E. from Madison. The Milwaukee and Green Bay railroad, in progress, passes through it, and a plank-road about 40 miles in length has been completed to Fond du Lac. Sheboygan was settled in 1836, abandoned in 1840, and in 1845 it had 150 inhabitants. It now contains churches of 7 denominations, 4 newspaper offices, and about 2000 inhabitants: $30,000 have been expended in improving the harbor within the past year. Large quantities of lumber and other articles are shipped here in steamboats.

SHEBOYAN FALLS, a post-township in the central part of Sheboygan co., Wisconsin.

SHEBOYAN FALLS, a thriving post-village in the above township, on Sheboygan river, 6 miles from its entrance into Lake Michigan, and 56 miles N. from Milwaukee. The plank-road leading from Fond du Lac to Lake Michigan passes through the village. The river furnishes abundant water-power, which gives motion to mills of various kinds. Lumber is manufactured here from pine and other timber. The village has 3 churches, 12 stores, 1 foundry, and 200 dwellings. Population in 1853, about 800.

SHEEPSCOTT river, of Maine, rises in Waldo county, and falls into the Atlantic in Lincoln county. Length, about 60 miles.

SHEEPSCOTT BRIDGE, a post-village in Lincoln co., Maine.

SHEETZ'S MILLS, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.

SHEFIELD, a post-township in Caledonia co., Vermont, 37 miles N. E. from Montpelier. Population, 797.

SHEFFIELD, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the Housatonic river and railroad, about 120 miles S. W. by W. from Boston. Population of the township, 2769.

SHEFFIELD, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Warren co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the route of the Sunbury and Erie railroad. Population, 317.

SHEFFIELD, a post-village in Newton co., Georgia, 65 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

SHEFFIELD, a post-office of Fayette co., Ala.

SHEFFIELD, a township in the N. E. part of Ashtabula co., Ohio. Population, 845.

SHEFFIELD, a post-township in the N. part of Lorain co., Ohio. Population, 906.

SHEFFIELD, a mining village of Meigs co., Ohio, on the Ohio river, about 2 miles below Pomeroy.

SHEFFIELD LAKE, a post-office of Lorain co., Ohio.

SHEHOLA, a post-office of Pike co., Pa.

SHEILVILLE, a post-office of Hamilton co., Indiana.

SHELBURN, a post-village in Chittenden co., Vermont, near Lake Champlain, on the Rutland and Burlington railroad. Population of the township, 1257.

SHELBURN, a post-office of Lee co., Ill.

SHELBURNE, a post-village in Coos co., New Hampshire, on the Androscoggin river and on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad, 91 miles N. E. from Concord. Population of the township, 480.

SHELBURNE, a post-township in Franklin co., Massachusetts, on Deerfield river, 95 miles W. by N. from Boston. Pop., 1239.

SHELBURNE FALLS, a flourishing manufacturing post-village in the above township, on the N. side of Deerfield river, about 90 miles N. W. by W. from Boston. It contains 1 or 2 churches, an academy, and 1 large scythe manufactory. Population, about 1000.

SHELBY, a county in the N. central part of Alabama, has an area of 970 square miles. It is intersected by the Cahawba river; the Coosa forms its entire boundary on the E. The surface is diversified by hills and valleys; the soil is fertile, well supplied with springs, and finely adapted to the production of grain, cotton, and pasture. In 1850 there were raised 3737 bales of cotton; 384,389 bushels of Indian corn; 67,763 of sweet potatoes, and 51,909 of oats. It contained 3 grist and saw mills, 1 tannery, and 1 iron foundry; 992 pupils attending public schools. A part of the surface is covered with forests of oak, pine, &c. Extensive beds of stone coal and iron ore are found. The county contains several mineral springs. It is intersected by the route of the Selma and Tennessee River railroad. Capital, Columbiana. Population, 9536; of whom 7160 were free, and 2376, slaves.

SHELBY, a county in the E. part of Texas, bordering on Louisiana, contains 850 square miles. Its E. border is washed by the Sabine, and its W. by the Attoyac river. The surface is nearly level, and the soil fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, grass, and sweet potatoes are the staples. The county a few years ago was mostly covered with forests. In 1850 it produced 99,518 bushels of corn; 40,784 of sweet potatoes; 790 bales of cotton, and 63,435 pounds of butter. It contained 6 churches, and 213 pupils attending public schools. Named in honor of the late Judge Shelby, of Texas. Capital, Shelbyville. Population, 4239; of whom 3278 were free, and 961, slaves.

SHELBY, a county forming the S. W. extremity of Tennessee, bordering on Mississippi: area estimated at 510 square miles. The Mississippi river forms its entire W. boundary, and it is intersected by Wolf and Loosahatchy rivers and Nannonnah creek. The surface is nearly level. The soil is fertile, and is extensively occupied by plantations of cotton and Indian corn, which are the staples. In 1850, Shelby county produced 837,827 bushels of corn; 107,328 of sweet potatoes; 76,108 of oats; 20,741 bales of cotton, and 163,042 pounds of butter. It contained 43 churches, 11 newspaper offices, and 1810 pupils attending public schools. The Memphis and Charleston railroad (unfinished) terminates in this county at the city of Memphis. Capital, Raleigh. Population, 31,157; of whom 16,797 were free, and 14,360, slaves.

SHELBY, a county towards the N. part of Kentucky, has an area of 465 square miles. It is drained by Beech, Clear, Brashears, Fox, and Sixmile creeks. The general surface is undulating, and adorned with forests of fine timber; the soil has a substratum of red clay, and is friable and remarkably fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hemp, and grass are the staples: horses, cattle, mules, swine, bagging, and ropes are the chief articles of export. In 1850 this county produced more corn than any other in the state, and more wheat than any other, excepting Jefferson. There were raised in that year 1,731,740 bushels of corn; 83,931 of wheat; 188,956 of oats, and 1022 tons of hemp. It contained 45 churches, 1 newspaper office, 813 pupils attending public schools, and 446 attending academies or other schools. The principal rock which underlies the surface is limestone. The county is intersected by the Louisville and Frankfort railroad, and by several turnpike-roads. Shelby county is among the most populous and wealthy divisions of the state. Organized in 1792, and named in honor of Governor Isaac Shelby. Capital, Shelbyville. Population, 17,095; of whom 10,478 were free, and 6617, slaves.

SHELBY, a county in the W. part of Ohio, has an area of 425 square miles. It is intersected by the Miami river, and also drained by Loramies creek. The southern part is undulating, and in some places hilly; the northern is flat table-land, forming part of Loramies summit, 378 feet higher than Lake Erie. The soil has a substratum of clay, and is productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 439,798 bushels of corn; 89,109 of wheat; 108,870 of oats, and 7205 tons of hay. It contained 25 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 2597 pupils attending public schools, and 154 attending an academy. The county is intersected by the Miami canal, the Bellefontaine and Indiana railroad, and the Dayton and Michigan railroad. Organized in 1819. Capital, Sidney. Population, 13,958.

SHELBY, a county in the S. E. central part of Indiana, contains about 400 square miles. It is drained by the Blue river and Sugar creek. The surface is nearly level; the soil is fertile, especially after it has been drained. The staples are wheat, Indian corn, oats, &c. In 1850 this county produced 1,231,884 bushels of corn; 118,820 of wheat; 54,776 of oats, and 3892½ tons of hay. There were 28 churches, 1 newspaper office; 5938 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending an academy. It contains extensive forests of the oak, beech, ash, walnut, &c., and is amply supplied with water-power. It is intersected by the Lawrenceburg and Mississippi railroad, and three short lines meet at Shelbyville, the capital. Organized in 1822. Population, 15,502.

SHELBY, a county in the S. E. central part of Illinois, has an area of 790 square miles. It is intersected by the Kaskaskia river, dividing it into nearly equal parts, and also drained by the Little Wabash, and by the South Fork of Sangamon river. The surface is moderately undulating, and diversified by prairies and forests; the soil is fertile, well watered, and easily cultivated. A portion of the Grand Prairic is included in this county: the timber is mostly distributed along the rivers and creeks. Indian corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, pork, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 757,382 bushels of corn; 21,998 of wheat; 96,504 of oats, and 124,943 pounds of butter. It contained 10 churches, and 869 pupils attending public schools. The Illinois Central, and the Alton and Terre Haute railroads are located through the county. Capital, Shelbyville. Population, 7807.

SHELBY, a county in the E. N. E. central part of Missouri, contains about 500 square miles. It is drained by the South Fabius, Salt, and North rivers, affluents of the Mississippi river. The surface is undulating, and the soil in general is fertile. Rather more than half of the county is occupied by prairies, which are based on limestone, and usually contain no swamp or stagnant water. The deficiency of timber is partly compensated by the abundance of stone coal, which is found here. Indian corn, wheat, and oats, are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 278,435 bushels of corn; 22,477 of wheat; 33,718 of oats, and 67,655 pounds of butter. It contained 5 churches, and 1051 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Shelbyville. Population, 4253; of whom 3755 were free, and 498, slaves.

SHELBY, a new county in the W. part of Iowa, contains about 550 square miles. The Boyer river, an affluent of the Missouri, flows through the county in a S. W. direction. It is not yet organized, and has few inhabitants.

SHELBY, a post-township of Orleans co., New York, on the Erie canal, 16 miles E. from Lockport. Population, 3082.

SHELBY, a post-village, capital of Cleveland co., North Carolina, on an affluent of Broad river, 190 miles W. by S. from Raleigh. The seat of justice was established here in 1841.

SHELBY, a post-office of Austin co., Texas.

SHELBY, a thriving post-village of Richland county, Ohio, on the railroad between Sandusky and Mansfield, at the junction of the Cleveland and Columbus railroad, 68 miles N. by E. from Columbus. Population in 1853, about 700.

SHELBY, a township in the S. W. part of Macomb co., Michigan. Population, 1482.

SHELBY, a township in Jefferson co., Indiana. Population, 1637.

SHELBY, a township in Tippecanoe co., Indiana. Population, 741.

SHELBY'S BASIN, a post-village of Orleans co., New York, on the Erie canal, 15 miles E. from Lockport.

SHELBY'S CREEK, a post-office of Tippah co., Mississippi.

SHELBY SPRINGS, post-office, Shelby co., Ala.

SHELBYVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Shelby co., Texas, 325 miles by the usual route E. N. E. from Austin city. It contains a court house and six stores. The situation is high and healthy. Settled about 1836.

SHELBYVILLE, a post-village, capital of Bedford county, Tennessee, on Duck river, 59 miles S. S. E. from Nashville, contains a court house, a bank, newspaper office, and several churches. A branch of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad terminates here. Population, estimated at 1000.

SHELBYVILLE, a flourishing post-village, capital of Shelby county, Kentucky, on Clear creek, and on the turnpike from Louisville to Frankfort, 30 miles E. from the former. It is situated in a beautiful and fertile country. Shelby College, of this place, was founded in 1836, and has near 100 students. The village contains a large new court house, 8 or 9 churches, 3 flourishing seminaries for young ladies, 1 or 2 newspaper offices, and several manufactories. Pop. in 1853, about 2000.

SHELBYVILLE, a flourishing post-village, capital of Shelby county, Indiana, is pleasantly situated on the left bank of the Blue river, 26 miles S. E. from Indianapolis. Three railroads meet at this point, viz. the Shelbyville and Knightstown, the Rushville and Shelbyville, and the Shelbyville Lateral. One newspaper is published here. Population in 1853, about 1500.

SHELBYVILLE, a post-village, capital of Shelby county, Illinois, on the Kaskaskia river, at the crossing of the Alton and Terre Haute railroad, 60 miles S. E. from Springfield. It contains a brick court house and numerous stores.

SHELBYVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Shelby county, Missouri, is pleasantly situated on the border of a beautiful prairie, 90 miles N. N. E. from Jefferson City. The railroad extending from Hannibal to St. Joseph will probably pass through Shelbyville.

SHELDON, a post-village in Franklin co., Vermont, near the Missisque river, 54 miles N. W. from Montpelier, contains one bank. Population of the township, 1814.

SHELDON, a post-village in Sheldon township, Wyoming county, New York, 15 miles W. from Warsaw. It has 2 or 3 churches. Population of the township, 2527.

SHELDONVILLE, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

SHELDRAKE, a post-office of Seneca co., New York.

SHELEMAH, a post-office of Cecil co., Md.

SHELL BLUFF, a small village of Burke co., Georgia.

SHELL POINT, a post-office of Wakulla co., Florida.

SHELL RIVER, of St. Croix co., Wisconsin, enters the St. Croix river at the N. W. extremity of the county. The Indian name is Kaysisikang.

SHELL ROCK CREEK, of Iowa, rises near the N. border of the state, and unites with Lime creek in Floyd co., to form the English river.

SHELLTOWN, post-village of Ocean co., New Jersey, on Crowswick's creek, 10 miles S. by E. from Trenton.

SHELOCTA, a post-village of Indiana co., Pennsylvania, 165 miles W. by N. from Harrisburg.

SHELTER ISLAND, a post-township of Suffolk co., New York. It lies between Great Peconic and Gardiner's bays, about 100 miles E. from New York. Population, 386.

SHELTON, a township in Warrick co., Indiana. Population, 532.

SHELTONVILLE, a post-village of Forsyth co., Georgia.

SHENANDOAH river, of Virginia, the largest affluent of the Potomac, is usually described as formed by the North and South forks, which unite near Front Royal in Warren county. The South fork, or Shenandoah proper, rises in Augusta and Rockingham counties, by three branches, called North, Middle, and South rivers, which unite at Port Republic in the county last named. It pursues a north-easterly course, nearly parallel with the Blue Ridge, which is only a few miles distant, and falls into the Potomac at Harper's Ferry, just above its passage through the mountain. The distance by the windings of the river, from its mouth to Port Republic, is estimated at 170 miles. This river flows through the great valley of Virginia, an excellent tract for the growth of grain. It affords an ample supply of water-power at numerous points, and also extensive facilities for navigation. Small boats called gondolas ascend the main stream about 100 miles above Front Royal.

SHENANDOAH, a county in the N. E. central part of Virginia, forming part of the great limestone valley which extends along the W. base of the Blue Ridge. The area is about 500 square miles. It is drained by the N. fork of the Shenandoah river, from which the name is derived. The surface is diversified by valleys and ridges. The soil is generally productive. Wheat, corn, oats, hay, butter, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 196,338 bushels of wheat; 167,025 of Indian corn; 34,963 of oats; 4641 tons of hay, and 79,196 pounds of butter. There were 19 flour mills, 3 saw mills, 1 wool-carding mill, and 8 tanneries. It contained 10 churches, and 130 pupils attending public schools. The rocks which underlie the county are blue limestone, slate, and sandstone. Iron ore is abundant, and affords an article of export; lead and copper also are found. There were in 1852, 4 iron furnaces and 4 forges in operation. A railroad extends from Strasburg in this county to Alexandria. Capital, Woodstock. Pop., 13,768; of whom 12,857 were free, and 911, slaves.

SHENANDOAH, New York. See SHINANDOAH.

SHENANDOAH IRON WORKS, a post-office of Page co., Virginia.

SHENANDOAH SPRINGS, a post-office of Shenandoah co., Virginia.

SHENANGO creek, rises in the N. W. part of Pennsylvania, and after flowing in a southerly direction, unites with the Mahoning in Lawrence co., and forms the Beaver river.

SHENANGO, a township of Lawrence county, Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Ohio river, about 30 miles N. from Beaver. Population, 2476.

SHENANGO, a township forming the S. W.

extremity of Mercer county, Pennsylvania, intersected by the Shenango creek, and the Beaver and Erie canal. Population, 1574.

SHENEVAS, a post-office of Otsego co., N. Y. SHENEVAS CREEK, of Otsego co., near the centre of New York, flows into the E. branch of the Susquehanna.

SHEPAUG RIVER, a fine mill stream of Connecticut, rises in Litchfield co., and falls into the Housatonic in New Haven county.

SHEPHERD'S GROVE, a post-office of Culpeper co., Virginia.

SHEPHERDSTOWN, a small post-village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, 8 miles S. W. from Harrisburg.

SHEPHERDSTOWN, a post-town of Jefferson county, Virginia, on the Potomac river, near the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, 12 miles above Harper's Ferry. It is a place of considerable trade. A small stream which passes through the town affords motive-power for several flouring mills. Shepherdstown has 4 churches, and 3 newspaper offices. Population estimated at 1600.

SHEPHERDSTOWN, a post-village of Belmont co., Ohio, 7 miles N. W. from St. Clairsville.

SHEPHERDSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Bullitt county, Kentucky, on Salt river, 18 miles S. from Louisville. It has 1 church and an academy. The Louisville and Nashville railroad passes through it.

SHEPPARDTOWN, a village and steamboat landing of Alabama, on the Black Warrior river, below Tuscaloosa.

SHERBURNE, a township in Rutland co., Vermont, 46 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 578.

SHERBURNE, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 22 miles S. W. by W. from Boston, contains several churches. Population of the township, 1043.

SHERBURNE, a post-village in Sherburne township, Chenango county, New York, on the Chenango river and canal, 43 miles S. S. W. from Utica. It contains Baptist, Episcopal, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches, an academy, a furnace, and several warehouses. Population of the township, 2623.

SHERBURNE, a township in Will co., Illinois. Population, 453.

SHERBURN MILLS, a post-village of Fleming county, Kentucky, on Licking river, about 10 miles S. W. from Flemingsburg. It has 200 inhabitants.

SHERBURNVILLE, a post-office of Will co., Illinois.

SHERIDAN, a post-township of Chautauque co., New York, on Lake Erie, intersected by the Erie railroad. Population, 2173.

SHERIDAN, a township in the E. part of Calhoun co., Michigan, on the Michigan Central railroad. Population, 972.

SHERMAN, a post-township in Fairfield co., Connecticut, 50 miles S. W. from Hartford. Population, 984.

SHERMAN, a post-township of Chautauque co., New York, 10 miles S. W. from Maysville. Population, 1292.

SHERMAN, a thriving post-village, capital of Grayson co., Texas, is about 270 miles N. from Austin City, and 12 miles S. from Red river. It is situated in a large and fertile prairie. Laid out about 1845.

SHERMAN, a post-township in the N. W. part of Huron co., Ohio, intersected by the Mansfield and Sandusky railroad. Pop., 1134.

SHERMAN, a post-township in the S. E. part of St. Joseph co., Mich. Pop., 364.

SHERMAN, a post-office of Cook co., Ill.

SHERMAN'S CREEK, of Perry co., Pennsylvania, flows into the Susquehanna river.

SHERMANSDALE, a post-office of Perry co., Pennsylvania.

SHERMAN'S HOLLOW, a post-office of Yates co., New York.

SHERMANVILLE, a village in Burrillville township, Providence co., Rhode Island, on the route of the proposed Woonsocket and Union railroad, about 20 miles N. W. of Providence. It contains 1 large woollen mill, recently erected, employing 175 hands, and 1 store. Value of goods manufactured per annum, $810,000. Pop., about 400.

SHERODSVILLE, a post-office of Carroll co. O.

SHERRILL'S FORD, a post-office of Lincoln co., N. C., 159 miles W. from Raleigh.

SHERWOOD, a post-office of Henry co., Tenn.

SHERWOOD, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Branch co., Michigan. Population, 686.

SHERWOOD'S CORNERS, a post-village of Cayuga co., New York, 14 miles S. by W. from Auburn.

SHESEQUIN, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, 7 miles N. from Towanda. Population, 1455.

SHETUCKET river, a fine mill stream in the E. part of Connecticut, is formed by the union of several branches in Tolland and Windham counties, and flowing S. E., unites with the Yantic at Norwich, to form the Thames.

SHIAWASSEE river, of Michigan, rises in Oakland county, flows N. W. and then N., and unites with the Flint to form the Saginaw river, near the centre of Saginaw county.

SHIAWASSEE, a county in the central part of Michigan, contains 544 square miles. It is intersected by the Shiawassee river, and also drained by the sources of the Maple and Looking-glass rivers. The surface is partly level and partly undulating. Dense forests overspread the north part, and the other portions consist of timbered openings. The soil is a fertile, sandy loam. The county is well adapted to the dairy business, and to wool growing. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, potatoes, hay, wool, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 71,337 bushels of wheat; 57,065 of corn; 33,137 of oats, and 7422 tons of hay. It contained 1 church, 1 newspaper office, and 1562 pupils attending public schools. A mine of stone coal has been opened near Corunna, the county seat. Population, 5230.

SHIAWASSEE, a post-township in the S. E. part of Shiawassee co., Mich. Pop., 810.

SHIAWASSEE, a small post-village in the above township, on the river of its own name, 30 miles N. E. from Lansing, contains a store and 1 or 2 mills.

SHICKSHINNY, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

SHIELD, a township in Lake co., Illinois. Population, 554.

SHIELDSBOROUGH, a thriving post-village, capital of Hancock county, Mississippi, on St. Louis bay, which opens into Lake Borgne, 212 miles S. by E. from Jackson. It contains, besides the county buildings, 1 or 2 churches, a newspaper office, and several stores. Population in 1853, about 1200.

SHIELVILLE, a village of Hamilton co., Indiana, 35 miles N. from Indianapolis.

SHIENNE RIVER, of Missouri Territory, flows easterly, and falls into Missouri river, in about 44° 20' N. lat. Length, 200 miles.

SHIAGUA RIVER, Iowa. See SKUNK RIVER.

SHILOH, a post-village of Cumberland co., New Jersey, 5 miles N. W. from Bridgeton, contains a church and about 25 dwellings.

SHILOH, a post-office of King George co., Va.

SHILOH, a post-village in Camden co., North Carolina, 226 miles N. E. by E. from Raleigh.

SHILOH, a post-village of Sumter dist., S. C.

SHILOH, a post-office of Marengo co., Ala.

SHILOH, a post-office of Union parish, La.

SHILOH, a post-office of Gibson co., Tenn.

SHILOH, a post-village of Callaway co., Ky.

SHINANDOAH, or SHENANDOAH, a post-village of Dutchess co., New York, 12 miles S. E. from Poughkeepsie.

SHIN CREEK, a post-office of Sullivan co. N. Y.

SHINGLE CREEK, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

SHIN HOLLOW, a railroad station in Orange co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 92 miles from New York city.

SHINNECOCK BAY, Suffolk co., New York, on the south side of Long Island, is 10 or 12 miles long, and separated from the sea by a narrow sandbeach.

SHINNSTON, or SHINNSTOWN, a post-village in Harrison co., Virginia, 225 miles N. W. from Richmond.

SHIPPEN, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of McKean co., Pennsylvania. Population, 369.

SHIPPEN, a township of Tioga co., Pennsylvania, about 8 miles W. from Wellsborough. Population, 298.

SHIPPEN, a small village of Tioga co., Pa.

SHIPPENSBURG, a new post-township of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1766.

SHIPPENSBURG, a post-borough of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, on the Cumberland Valley railroad, 21 miles S. W. from Carlisle. This is the oldest town in the county, and the largest except Carlisle. It is surrounded by a rich farming district, and has an active business. A turnpike from Carlisle to Chambersburg passes through the place. A newspaper is published here. Incorporated in 1819. Pop. in 1850, 1568.

SHIPPENSVILLE, a post-village of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, on the Bellefonte and Erie turnpike, 5 miles N. W. from Clarion. It has 1 church and several stores.

SHIPPINGPORT, a village of Jefferson co., Kentucky, on the Ohio river, 2 miles below Louisville.

SHIREMANTOWN, a post-village of Cumberland co., Pa., 4 miles W. from Harrisburg.

SHIRLAND, a post-office of Alleghany co. Pa. SHIRLAND, a township in Winnebago co., Illinois. Population, 353.

SHIRLEY, a post-township in Piscataquis co., Maine, 85 miles N. by E. from Augusta. Population, 250.

SHIRLEY, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on the Fitchburg railroad, at the terminus of the Peterborough and Shirley railroad. Population of the township, 1128.

SHIRLEY, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y. SHIRLEY, a township of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, about 17 miles E. S. E. from Huntingdon. Population, 1615.

SHIRLEY, a post-office of Tyler co., Va. SHIRLEY MILLS, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

SHIRLEYSBURG, a post-village of Shirley township, Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, on Aughwick creek, 85 miles W. from Harrisburg, contains several stores, and has rich iron mines in the vicinity. Pop., about 500.

SHIRLEY VILLAGE, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 41 miles N. W. from Boston.

SHIRLEYVILLE, a post-village of Abbeville district, South Carolina.

SHOAL CREEK, of Tennessee and Alabama, rises in the former, and flows through Lauderdale co., Alabama, into Tennessee river, a few miles above Florence.

SHOAL CREEK, in the W. S. W. part of Illinois, is formed by the union of two branches called the East and West forks. It flows southerly into the Kaskaskia.

SHOAL CREEK, of Missouri, flows eastward through Caldwell co., and enters Grand river near the middle of Livingston county.

SHOAL CREEK, a post-office of Benton co., Alabama.

SHOAL CREEK, a post-office of Clinton co., Illinois.

SHOAL CREEK, a post-office of Newton co., Missouri.

SHOAL FORD, a post-office of Limestone co., Alabama.

SHOALS OF OGEECHEE, a manufacturing post-village of Hancock co., Georgia, on the Ogeechee river, 38 miles E. N. E. from Milledgeville.

SHOAL SPRING, a post-office of Giles co., Tennessee.

SHOALWATER BAY, on the W. coast of Washington Territory, forms part of the boundary between Lewis and Pacific counties.

SHOBEE'S MILLS, a post-office of Carroll co., Ohio.

SHOCCO SPRINGS, a post-office of Warren co., North Carolina.

SHOCKEY'S PRAIRIE, a post-office of Lamar co., Texas.

SHOEMAKER'S, a railroad station in Alleghany co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 362 miles from New York city.

SHOEMAKERSTOWN, a pleasant village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, on the Philadelphia and Doylestown turnpike, 9 miles N. from Philadelphia.

SHOENECK, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SHOKAN, a post-office of Ulster co., N. Y.

SHOKAPEE, a small village, capital of Scott co., Minnesota, on the right bank of St. Peter's river, about 25 miles in a direct line S. W. from St. Paul.

SHOKOKON, a post-office of Henderson co., Illinois.

SHONEAW, a post-office of Columbia co., Wisconsin.

SHONGALO, a small post-village of Carroll co., Miss., 15 miles S. E. from Carrollton.

SHONGO, a post-office of Alleghany co., N. Y.

SHOOBATA, a post-office of Clark co., Miss.

SHOOLING CREEK, a post-office of Cherokee co., North Carolina.

SHOPIERE, a post-village in Turtle township, Rock co., Wisconsin, 60 miles S. W. by W. from Milwaukee. It contains 3 stores, 1 hotel, 2 mills, and a plough manufactory. Population, 200.

SHOP SPRING, a post-office of Newberry district, South Carolina.

SHOP SPRING, a post-office of Wilson co., Tennessee.

SHOREHAM, a post-township of Addison co., Vermont, on the E. side of Lake Champlain, about 50 miles S. W. of Montpelier. The village contains an academy.

SHORT BEND, a post-office of Dent co., Mo. SHORT CREEK, of Ohio, falls into the Ohio river in Jefferson county.

SHORT CREEK, a post-office of Brook co., Va.

SHORT CREEK, a small village of Lincoln co., Tennessee.

SHORT CREEK, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Harrison co., Ohio. Population, 1490.

SHORT MOUNTAIN, a small village of Cannon co., Tennessee.

SHORT TRACT, a post-village of Alleghany co., New York, 10 miles N. from Angelica.

SHOSHONEES, or SNAKE INDIANS, a large tribe inhabiting the central part of Oregon Territory, on both sides of Snake or Lewis river.

SHOWSTOWN, a flourishing post-village of Moon township, Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Ohio, 17 miles below

Pittsburg. The chief business of the place is steamboat building. Pop. in 1853, 1000.

SHRAKLEYVILLE, a small village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

SHREVE, a post-office of Wayne co., Ohio.

SHREVEPORT, a thriving post-village, capital of Caddo parish, Louisiana, on the right (W.) bank of Red river, about 300 miles by land or 550 miles by water N. W. from Baton Rouge, and about 30 miles below the "Great Raft," which is the limit of navigation for large steamboats. It is advantageously situated for trade, being in the midst of a rich planting region, and the only accessible point on the W. side of the river for more than 100 miles. Five or six steam packets regularly navigate the river between this town and New Orleans, during about 8 months of the year. About 40,000 bales of cotton are received here annually, and immense numbers of cattle from Texas are shipped to the New Orleans market. Shreveport contains 3 churches, 40 stores, 1 newspaper office, and several steam mills. A railroad has been surveyed from Vicksburg to Shreveport. Population, about 3000.

SHREWSBURY, a post-township in Rutland co., Vermont, intersected by the Rutland and Burlington railroad, 59 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 1268.

SHREWSBURY, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 38 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 1596.

SHREWSBURY, a post-township of Monmouth co., New Jersey. It is intersected by the Nevisink and Shrewsbury rivers. Pop., 3180.

SHREWSBURY, a post-village in the above township, on the Nevisink river, 42 miles E. by N. from Trenton, contains 4 churches, 2 stores, an academy, and about 30 dwellings.

SHREWSBURY, a township of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles E. by N. from Williamsport. Population, 225.

SHREWSBURY, a township of Sullivan co., Pennsylvania, about 26 miles E. N. E. from Williamsport. Population, 195.

SHREWSBURY, a post-township of York co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1659.

SHREWSBY, a post-village in the above township, on the York and Baltimore turnpike, 14 miles S. from York. Pop., 472.

SHREWSBURY, a post-office of Kanawha co., Virginia.

SHREWSBURY RIVER, in the N. E. part of Monmouth co., New Jersey, is a continuation of Sandy Hook bay, separated from Nevisink river by a narrow neck.

SHRUB OAK, a post-office of Westchester co., New York.

SHUFORDVILLE, a post-office of Buncombe co., North Carolina.

SHULLSBURG, a post-village of Shullsburg township, and capital of Lafayette county, Wisconsin, 15 miles N. E. from Galena. It is a depôt for large quantities of lead mined in the vicinity, and is a place of rapid growth.

It contains a brick court house, 4 or 5 churches, 15 stores, 5 hotels, 4 mineral warehouses, and several manufactories. Population of the township, 1678; of the village in 1853, about 2500.

SHUNK, a post-office of Sullivan co., Pa.

SHUNK, a post-office of Henry co., Ohio.

SHUSAN, a post-village of Washington co., New York, on the Albany and Rutland railroad and on Battenkill river, 43 miles N. N. E. from Albany.

SHUTESBURY, a post-township in Franklin co., Massachusetts, 76 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population, 912.

SHUTTER'S CORNERS, a post-office of Schoharie co., New York.

SHY POST, a post-village of Audrain co., Mo., about 48 miles N. E. from Jefferson City.

SIAM, a post-office of Leon co., Texas.

SIASCONSET, a village at the S. E. extremity of the Island of Nantucket, Massachusetts, contains a fine hotel, and about 70 houses, usually occupied only in the warm season. It is a place of fashionable resort, celebrated for its fine sea air and ocean scenery.

SI-AS-LAW, a post-office of Lane co., Oregon.

SIBILA, a post-office of Washington parish, Louisiana.

SIBLEY, a county in the E. S. E. part of Minnesota, contains about 650 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the North Fork of Crow river, on the S. E. by the St. Peter's, and intersected by the South Fork of Crow river. Minnetonka lake, near 30 miles long, extends across the county. The surface is generally undulating, and diversified by prairies and woodlands; the soil is productive. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. This county is not named in the census of 1850, having been formed since that year. Capital, Henderson.

SIBLEY, a small post-village of Jackson co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, 16 miles N. E. from Independence. It is a shipping point for produce.

SIBLEY'S MILLS, a post-office of Wilkinson co., Mississippi.

SICLY, a small post-village of Highland co., Ohio, 16 miles W. of S. from Hillsborough.

SIDDONSBERG, a post-village of York co., Pennsylvania, 12 miles S. W. from Harrisburg.

SIDELING HILL, Pennsylvania, a mountain ridge extending from the Maryland line across Bedford county, into Huntingdon as far as the Juniata river, nearly parallel to Cove or Tuscarora mountain.

SIDELING HILL CREEK rises in Bedford co., Pennsylvania, and passes through Maryland into the Potomac river.

SIDNEY, a post-township in Kennebec co., Maine, on the W. side of the Kennebec river, and intersected by the Androscoggin and Kennebec railroad. Population, 1955.

SIDNEY, a post-village in Sidney township, Delaware co., New York, near the Susquehanna river, about 24 miles W. by N. from Delhi. Population of the township, 1807.

SIDNEY, a post-office of Hunterdon co., N. J.

SIDNEY, a handsome post-village, capital of Shelby county, Ohio, is situated in Clinton township, on the Great Miami river, 72 miles W. by N. from Columbus. The Bellefontaine and Indiana railroad intersects the Dayton and Michigan railroad at this point. The site is an elevated plateau on the W. bank of the river, having a public square in the centre. The river affords a fine water-power and a navigable feeder of the Miami canal passes through the place. The village contains about 6 churches, 1 of which is Catholic, 2 newspaper offices, a bank, and numerous mills of different kinds. Laid out in 1819. Pop. in 1850, 1802; in 1853 it is estimated at 2000.

SIDNEY, a post-village in Marshall co., Indiana, 115 miles N. from Indianapolis.

SIDNEY, a small village of Champaign co., Illinois, on the Salt Fork of Vermilion river, about 10 miles S. E. from Urbana.

SIDNEY, a small post-village of Fremont co., Iowa.

SIDNEY CENTRE, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

SIDNEY PLAINS, a small post-village of Delaware co., New York, on the Susquehanna river, about 100 miles W. S. W. from Albany.

SIDON, a post-office of Carroll co., Miss.

SIRGEL'S STORE, a post-office of Lincoln co., N. C., 180 miles W. by S. from Raleigh.

SIERRA, se-er'ra a county toward the N. E. part of California, bordering on Utah Territory. It is drained by the Yuba river, and other smaller streams. The surface is uneven, with some considerable elevations, among which may be mentioned Saddle Peak, 7200, Table Mountain, 8000, and Buttes, at the head of the South fork of Yuba river, 9000 feet in height. In 1853 there were raised 2100 bushels of potatoes, and 610 of turnips. This county contained 249 mules, 25 horses, and 38 cows. The number of acres under cultivation was 168. The capital employed in quartz mining amounted to $9109, and in placer mining, $134,051. Gold is abundant in this county, and excellent limestone occurs. Capital, said to be Downieville. Pop., 4855.

SIERRA BLANCA, a mountain, in the southern interior of the Territory of New Mexico, in lat. about 33° 50' N., lon. 108° 40' W.

SIERRA DE CABALLO, a mountain range in the southern interior of New Mexico, in lat. about 33° 10' N., lon. 106° 40' W.

SIERRA DE LA LANTERNA, a mountain range in the N. part of the Territory of New Mexico, lat. about 36° 20' N., lon. 112° 15' W.

SIERRA DE LA PLATTE, a mountain range extending through the eastern part of Utah Territory, in lat. about 38° 5' N., and from lon. 107° 30' to 109° 10' W.

SIERRA DEL CARRIZO, se-er'ra del ka-ree'so, a detached range of mountains, New Mexico, in lat. about 36° N., lon. 111° W.

SIERRA DE LOS JUMANES, a portion of the Sierra Madre range in the south-eastern part of the Territory of New Mexico, in lat. about 33° 50' N., lon. 106° 20' W.

SIERRA DE LOS ORGANOS, se-er'ra dá loce or'ga-noce, a range of mountains in the south-eastern part of the Territory of New Mexico, in lat. about 32° 5' N., lon. 106° 25' W.

SIERRA DE SAN JUAN, a mountain range extending through the north-western part of the Territory of New Mexico, and the south-eastern part of Utah, from lat. about 36° 30' to 38° 30' N., and from lon. 106° 45' to 107° 30' W. Its length, following the curves, is about 150 miles.

SIERRA MORINA, se-er'ra mo-ree'n,â or BROWN MOUNTAINS, of California, commence about 10 miles S. from San Francisco, and run through San Francisco county into Santa Clara. The most elevated peaks are above 2000 feet high.

SIERRA NEVADA, se-êr'ra ná-vá'dâ, California, an important mountain range extending from a point a little N. from the town of Los Angeles northward, through the state, into Oregon, where it terminates in the Cascade range, which indeed may be regarded merely as a continuation of the former. The highest summits of the Sierra Nevada have an elevation of near 16,000 feet. The San Joaquin, the Sacramento, and several other smaller rivers, have their sources in this mountain chain.

SIERRA SOLEDAD, a range of mountains in the southern part of the Territory of New Mexico, in lat. about 32° 40' N. lon., 106° 30' W.

SIGOURNEY, a thriving post-village of Keokuk county, Iowa, 45 miles S. W. from Iowa City. It is the largest place in the county, of which it was formerly the capital. It is stated that the seat of justice will again be established here. Pop. in 1853, about 800.

SILL'S CREEK, a post-office of New Hanover co., North Carolina.

SILLOAM, a post-village of Madison co., New York, 110 miles W. by N. from Albany.

SILOAM, a post-village in Surry co., North Carolina, 141 miles W. N. W. from Raleigh.

SILOAM, a post-office of Oktibbeha co., Mississippi.

SILVAN, a township in the W. part of Washtenaw co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Central railroad. Population, 924.

SILVAN, a post-village in the above township, on the Central railroad, about 60 miles W. from Detroit.

SILVER CREEK, of Mississippi, flows into Sunflower river, in Washington county.

SILVER CREEK, of Indiana, rises in Clark county, and enters the Ohio river, about 1 mile above New Albany.

SILVER CREEK, in the W. S. W. part of Illinois, falls into the Kaskaskia river.

SILVER CREEK, a thriving post-village of Chautauque county, New York, on Lake

Erie, and on the Buffalo and State line railroad, 31 miles S. W. from Buffalo. It has a steamboat landing; also a bank, 2 newspaper offices, as well as several factories. The exports and imports in 1851 were stated at $312,905.

SILVER CREEK, a post-office of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania.

SILVER CREEK, a small village of Lawrence co., Mississippi.

SILVER CREEK, a post-office of Maury co., Tennessee.

SILVER CREEK, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Greene co., Ohio. Pop., 2565.

SILVER CREEK, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Cass co., Michigan. Population, 491.

SILVER CREEK, a township in Clarke co., Indiana. Population, 880.

SILVER CREEK, a post-township in Stephenson co., Illinois. Population, 603.

SILVER CREEK, a township in Randolph co., Missouri. Population, 1300.

SILVER CREEK, a post-office of Potawatamie co., Iowa.

SILVER GLADE, a post-office of Anderson district, South Carolina.

SILVER HILL, a post-office of Davidson co., North Carolina.

SILVER LAKE, in the E. part of Wyoming co., New York, is connected by an outlet with Genesee river. Length, 3 miles.

SILVER LAKE, a post-township of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania, about 9 miles N. by W. from Montrose.

SILVER LAKE, a post-office of Washtenaw co., Michigan.

SILVER LAKE, a post-office of Waushara co., Wisconsin.

SILVER RUN, a post-office of Talladega co., Alabama.

SILVER RUN, a post-office of Meigs co., O.

SILVER SPRING, a township of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, on the Cumberland Valley railroad, about 10 miles W. from Harrisburg. Population, 2308.

SILVER SPRING, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

SILVER SPRING, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SILVER SPRING, a post-office of Fayette co., Tennessee.

SILVER SPRING, a post-office of St. Francois co., Missouri.

SILVER SPRINGS, a post-office of Marion co., Florida.

SILVERTON, a post-village in Barnwell district, S. C., 96 miles S. W. from Columbia.

SILVER TOP, a post-office of Obion co., Tenn.

SILVERVILLE, a post-office of Lawrence co., Indiana.

SIMMONS, a post-office of Lawrence co., O.

SIMMS' PORT, a post-village in Avoyelles par., La., 237 miles N. W. from New Orleans.

SIMONSVILLE, a post-village in Windsor co., Vermont, 89 miles S. from Montpelier.

SIMPSON, a county in the S. central part of Mississippi, has an area of about 725 square miles. Pearl river forms its W. boundary, and it is intersected by Strong river. The soil is sandy and sterile, mostly covered with pine woods. Cotton and Indian corn are cultivated. In 1850 this county produced 1851 bales of cotton; 165,099 bushels of corn, and 83,207 pounds of rice. It contained 1 church, 220 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending other schools. Named in honor of Judge Simpson. Capital, Westville. Population, 4734; of whom 3193 were free, and 1541, slaves.

SIMPSON, a county in the S. part of Kentucky, bordering on Tennessee: area, estimated at 375 square miles. It is drained by Drake's creek. The surface is nearly level; the soil is highly productive. The staples are Indian corn, oats, and tobacco. In 1850 this county produced 516,168 bushels of corn; 145,855 of oats; 1,221,314 pounds of tobacco, and 521 bales of cotton. It contained 11 churches, 833 pupils attending public schools, and 98 attending academies or other schools. The rock found next to the surface is generally limestone. Formed in 1819, and named in honor of John Simpson, a member of Congress from Kentucky. Capital, Franklin. Population, 7733, of whom 5798 were free, and 1935, slaves.

SIMPSON'S, a post-office of Floyd co., Virginia, 211 miles W. from Richmond.

SIMPSON'S CREEK, a post-office of Taylor co., Virginia.

SIMPSON'S MILL, a post-office of Laurens district, South Carolina.

SIMPSON'S STORE, a small post-village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

SIMPSONVILLE, a post-office of Howard co., Maryland.

SIMPSONVILLE, a thriving post-village of Shelby co., Kentucky, on the turnpike from Louisville to Frankfort, 30 miles W. from the latter. It has 3 churches, several stores, and a steam mill. Population, 225.

SIMSBURY, a post-village in Hartford co., Connecticut, on the New Haven Northampton, or Canal railroad, 11 miles N. W. from Hartford. Population of the township, 2737.

SINCLAIR'S BOTTOM, a post-office of Smyth co., Virginia.

SINCLAIRSVILLE, a village of Chautauque co., N. Y., about 50 miles S. W. from Buffalo.

SINEPUXENT BAY, of Worcester co., Maryland, a long, narrow bay, situated on the Atlantic coast, has an inlet of its own name, which is in about 38° 10' N. lat.

SING SING, a post-village of Mount Pleasant township, Westchester county, New York, on the left or E. bank of the Hudson, and on the Hudson River railroad, 33 miles N. from New York. The village is situated on an acclivity which rises to the height of about 200 feet. On its summit is a range of elegant villas extending in the rear of the village nearly its whole length. The river here reaches its greatest breadth, being nearly 4 miles across, and the scenery in every direction is exceedingly beautiful and picturesque. Sing Sing is distinguished for its boarding schools. Mount Pleasant Academy, an incorporated institution, has a fine marble edifice, delightfully situated, and enclosed by spacious and highly ornamented grounds. The number of students is limited to fifty, for whom six instructors are employed. Horsemanship and military tactics are taught in addition to the branches usually pursued in such an institution. There is also another excellent boarding school for boys, occupying a large brick edifice, and a female seminary of high reputation, besides several other flourishing institutions. Sing Sing contains 4 churches, viz., an Episcopal, a Presbyterian, a Methodist, and a Baptist; a bank, and 2 newspaper offices. The Croton aqueduct, which passes through the village, is here an object of much interest, being carried over the Sing Sing hill by an arch of stone masonry, 88 feet between the abutments, and 100 feet to the water. Sing Sing is the seat of one of the New York state prisons. It is situated immediately on the bank of the Hudson, about three-quarters of a mile S. from the village. The buildings are of marble or limestone, and form three sides of a square. The main edifice is 484 feet long, 44 feet wide, and 5 stories high, containing 1000 cells for prisoners. In 1852 the number of criminals confined was 869. The greater number of the convicts are engaged in the various mechanic arts, but no inconsiderable portion are employed in working the extensive marble quarries in the immediate vicinity of the prison. The female convicts occupy a fine marble building, 30 or 40 rods E. from the male department. These prisons are not enclosed by walls, but are guarded by sentinels. Sing Sing is the centre of an active trade. Steamboats plying between New York and places along the Hudson touch at this point. Population, about 3000.

SINKING CREEK, a post-office of Botetourt co., Virginia.

SINKING SPRING, a post-village of Berks co., Pennsylvania, 50 miles E. from Harrisburg. Population, 364.

SINKING SPRING, a thriving post-village of Highland co., Ohio, 75 miles E. from Cincinnati. Population, about 300.

SINKING VALLEY MILLS, a post-office of Blair co., Pennsylvania.

SINNEMAHONING creek, of Pennsylvania, enters the W. branch of the Susquehanna, in Clinton county.

SINNEMAHONING, a post-office of Clinton co., Pennsylvania.

SINTA BAYOU, of Alabama, flows into the Tombigbee near Coffeeyville.

SIoux, (usually pronounced soo,) a new county in the W. N. W. part of Iowa, has an area of about 1100 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Sioux river, and also drained by the head waters of Floyd's river, an affluent of the first-mentioned stream. This county is not included in the census of 1850. County seat not located.

SIoux INDIANS, a numerous and powerful tribe, inhabiting the territory between the Missouri and Mississippi rivers.

SIoux RIVER, Minnesota Territory, rises in a little lake in about 45° 20' N. lat., and 97° 20' W. lon. Its general course is nearly S. by E. It unites with the Missouri river in about 42° 30' N. lat., and 96° 20' W. lon. The whole length is estimated at 300 miles.

SIPESVILLE, a post-office of Somerset co., Pa. SIPPICAN, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts, on Buzzard's bay, 55 miles S. by E. from Boston. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the manufacture of salt.

SIPSEY RIVER, of Alabama, called also NEW RIVER, rises near the E. border of Marion co., and flowing nearly southward and then south-westward, enters the Tombigbee at the N. extremity of Sumter co., about 12 miles N. from Gainesville.

SIPSEY RIVER, of Alabama, rises near the N. border of Walker co., and flowing south-easterly, enters the Mulberry fork of Black Warrior.

SIPSEY TURNPIKE, a post-office of Tuscaloosa co., Alabama.

SIR JOHN'S RUN, a post-office of Morgan co., Virginia.

SIRONA, a township in La Salle co., Illinois. Population, 370.

SISKIYOU, usually pronounced sis'e-kew, a county in the N. part of California, bordering on Oregon and Utah. The surface is mountainous, drained by the Klamath and Pitt rivers. Area about 7000 square miles. In 1853 it contained 1193 mules; 1071 beef cattle, and 552 horses. There were raised 4715 bushels of potatoes; 1408 of oats, and 340 of barley. Acres under cultivation, 309. Pop., 2240.

SISSONVILLE, a post-village in Kanawha co., Va., 333 miles W. from Richmond.

SISTERDALE, a post-office of Comal co., Tex.

SISTER'S CREEK, a small stream of Erie co., New York, falls into Lake Erie.

SISTERVILLE, a thriving post-village of Tyler county, Virginia, is pleasantly situated on the Ohio river, about 35 miles below Wheeling, and 9 miles W. from Middlebourn, the county seat. It has a good landing for steamboats, and it is the terminus of several turnpike-roads extending toward the interior. These advantages, together with the navigation of the Ohio, render this a place of active trade, which is rapidly increasing. Coal and iron ore are found in the vicinity. Population in 1853, 1000.

SIX CORNERS, a post-office of Richland co., Ohio.

SIXMILE, a post-office of Jennings co., Ind.

SIXMILE FALLS, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

SIXMILE RUN, a post-village on the line between Somerset and Middlesex counties, New Jersey, contains a store, and 10 or 12 dwellings.

SIXMILE RUN, a post-office of Bedford co., Pennsylvania.

SIX RUNS, a post-office of Sampson co., North Carolina.

SKANEATELES, or SKENEATELES, (skan-e-at-less) a post-township in the W. part of Onondaga co., New York. Population, 4081.

SKANEATELES, a beautiful post-village in the above township, is situated at the foot or N. end of Skaneateles lake, 7 miles E. N. E. from Auburn. A branch railroad, 5 miles long, connects it with the Central railroad. It contains churches belonging to the Baptists, Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, and Friends, and several seminaries. Three newspapers are published. The village contains iron foundries, machine shops, flour mills, and manufactories of woollen goods, carriages, and other articles.

SKANEATELES LAKE, in the central part of New York, is about 16 miles long and from a third to three-fourths of a mile wide. The northern portion is included within the limits of Onondaga county; the southern lies between Onondaga and Cayuga counties. The scenery along its banks is highly picturesque and romantic.

SKHEEL'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Jefferson co., Ohio.

SKEGG'S CREEK, a post-office of Barron co., Kentucky.

SKENEATELES. See SKANEATELES.

SKILESVILLE, a small village of Muhlenburg co., Kentucky, on Green river, 156 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

SKILTON, a township in Warrick co., Indiana. Population, 532.

SKINNER'S, a post-office of Benton co., Ogn.

SKINNER'S EDDY, a small post-village of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna river, about 150 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

SKINQUARTER, a post-office of Chesterfield co., Virginia.

SKIPPACK township, Pa. See PERKIOMEN.

SKIPPACK, or SKIPPACKVILLE, a post-village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, 86 miles E. from Harrisburg.

SKITT'S MOUNTAIN, a post-office of Hall co., Georgia.

SKOMYWONG, a small river of Marathon co., Wisconsin, flowing S. W. into Wisconsin river.

SKOWHEGAN, a post-township of Somerset co., Maine, about 30 miles N. from Augusta. Population, 1756.

SKOWHEGAN, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the Kennebec river, opposite Bloomfield, with which it is connected by a bridge, about 30 miles N. by E. from Augusta. It contains 3 newspaper offices, several shoe manufactories, and 2 churches.

SKUNK RIVER, of Iowa, rises in Risle county, near the centre of the state, and flowing south-eastward, falls into the Mississippi, about 8 miles below Burlington. Its whole length is estimated at 250 miles. It flows through a fertile farming country, and furnishes extensive water-power. The basin of this river is so near to those of the Des Moines and Iowa, that its volume is small compared with its length. It is sometimes called Shikagua.

SLABTOWN, a village of Burlington co., New Jersey, contains 10 or 12 dwellings.

SLABTOWN, a small village of Montour co., Pennsylvania, about 15 miles S. E. from Danville.

SLABTOWN, a post-village in Anderson district, South Carolina, 130 miles W. N. W. from Columbia.

SLACK, a post-office of Mason co., Ky.

SLADE, a post-office of Lee co., Georgia.

SLADESVILLE, a post-office of Hyde co., North Carolina.

SLAGLE CREEK, a post-office of Polk co., Mo.

SLASH, a post-office of Grant co., Indiana.

SLASH COTTAGE, a small post-village of Hanover county, Virginia, on the railroad from Richmond to Fredericksburg, about 20 miles N. from the former. The railroad company have machine shops here. The great orator, Henry Clay, was born near this place, in the "Slashes of Hanover."

SLATE, a post-office of Bath co., Kentucky.

SLATE, a post-office of Jennings co., Ind.

SLATEFORD, a post-office of Northampton co., Pennsylvania.

SLATE HILL, a post-office of Orange co., New York.

SLATE HILL, a post-office of York co., Pa.

SLATE LICK, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

SLATE MILLS, a post-office of Rappahannock co., Virginia.

SLATE RIVER, of Virginia, a small stream rising in Buckingham county, and flowing north-eastward, enters the James river on the N. E. border of that county. It is navigable for boats to Maysville, 27 miles from its mouth.

SLATERSVILLE, a manufacturing post-village in Smithfield township, Providence county, Rhode Island, about 13 miles N. W. by N. from Providence. It contains 2 or 3 churches, 3 cotton mills, with 16,000 spindles, and 500 looms, employing 320 hands; also 1 saw mill, 1 grist mill, and 1 bank. Value of goods manufactured annually, $288,000. A reservoir has recently been constructed, at a great expense, materially increasing the water-power of this place. Pop., about 1500.

SLATERVILLE, a post-village of Tompkins co., N. Y., 10 miles E. S. E. from Ithaca.

SLATINGTON, a post-office of Lehigh co., Pa.

SLAUGHTER'S CREEK, Texas, enters the Colorado in the lower part of Travis county.

SLEEPY CREEK, a post-office of Wayne co., North Carolina.

SLEEPY CREEK, a post-office of Edgefield district, South Carolina.

SLEEPY CREEK BRIDGE, a post-office of Morgan co., Virginia.

SLIGO, a post-village of De Kalb co., Tennessee, on the turnpike from Cumberland river, and on the turnpike from Lebanon to Sparta, 70 miles E. by S. from Nashville.

SLIGO, a small post-village of Henry co. Ky.

SLIGO, a small post-village of Clinton co., O.

SLIPPERY ROCK, a post-township in Butler co., Pennsylvania, about 44 miles N. by W. from Pittsburg. It includes the borough of Centreville. Total population, 1768.

SLIPPERY ROCK, a township in the N. E. part of Lawrence co., Pa. Pop., 1344.

SLIPPERY ROCK CREEK rises in the W. part of Pennsylvania, and flows into the Beaver river.

SLOANSVILLE, a post-village of Schoharie co., N. Y., about 35 W. by N. from Albany.

SLOATSBURG, a post-office of Rockland co., New York.

SLOYERSVILLE, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

SLURMANS, a village in Madison co., Iowa, 135 miles W. by S. from Iowa city.

SMACKOVER, a township in Ouachita co., Arkansas. Population, 612.

SMEED'S FERRY, a small village of Onslow co., North Carolina.

SMELSER'S MILLS, a post-office of Rush co., Indiana.

SMELTZER, a township in the S. E. part of Grant co., Wisconsin.

SMELTZER'S GROVE, a post-office of Grant co., Wisconsin.

SMETHPORT, a post-borough of Keating township, capital of McKean county, Pennsylvania, on Potato creek, an affluent of the Alleghany river, 196 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It has some trade in pine lumber, which is floated down the Alleghany. The town contains a brick court house, an academy, 2 printing offices, and several mills. Large coal mines have been opened in the county.

SMICKSBURG, a post-village of Indiana co., Pennsylvania, on Little Mahoning creek, 174 miles W. N. W. from Harrisburg.

SMILEY'S CORNERS, a post-office of Franklin co., Ohio.

SMITH, a county in the S. central part of Mississippi, has an area of about 620 square miles. It is watered by Leaf river. The surface is undulating or nearly level; the soil is sandy, sterile, and covered with pine woods. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1111 bales of cotton; 128,641 bushels of corn, and 46,450 of sweet potatoes. It contained 10 churches, 174 pupils attending public schools, and 75 attending an academy. Named in honor of Major Smith, a soldier of the Revolution. Capital, Raleigh. Pop., 4071; of whom 3073 were free, and 998, slaves.

SMITH, a county towards the N. E. part of Texas, has an area of about 990 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the Sabine river, on the W. by the Neches, and drained by the sources of the Angelina. The county includes a large proportion of prairie land; the soil produces Indian corn, sweet potatoes, and cotton. In 1850 this county yielded 125,565 bushels of corn; 30,820 of sweet potatoes; 115 bales of cotton, and 29,920 pounds of butter. It contained 7 churches, and 130 pupils attending public schools. Named in honor of General James Smith, a resident of the county. Capital, Tyler. Population, 4292; of whom 3575 were free, and 717, slaves.

SMITH, a county in the N. part of Tennessee: area estimated at 360 square miles. It is traversed by the Cumberland river. The surface is uneven and rather rough, but the soil is generally rich. Indian corn, tobacco, cattle, and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1,066,410 bushels of Indian corn; 97,755 of oats; 2,377,394 pounds of tobacco; 122,972 of butter, and 30,881 of wool. It contained 50 churches, 1718 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending academies and other schools. The Cumberland river is navigable by small boats in this part of its course. Capital, Carthage. Population, 18,412; of whom 13,895 were free, and 4517, slaves.

SMITH, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, about 24 miles W. by S. from Pittsburg. Population, 1462.

SMITH, a township of Bradley co., Arkansas. Population, 697.

SMITH, a township in the S. E. part of Belmont co., Ohio. Population, 1641.

SMITH, a township in Greene co., Indiana. Population, 313.

SMITH, a township in Poesy co., Indiana. Population, 765.

SMITHBOROUGH, a post-village of Tioga co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 256 miles from New York city. The village is connected with the opposite side of the Susquehanna by a wooden bridge.

SMITH BRIDGE, a post-office of Robeson co., North Carolina.

SMITHDALE, a post-village in Amite co., Mississippi, 82 miles S. by W. from Jackson.

SMITHFIELD, a post-township of Somerset co., Maine, about 25 miles N. of Augusta. Population, 873.

SMITHFIELD, a township of Providence co., Rhode Island, bordering on the Blackstone river, and the Providence and Worcester railroad, about 12 miles N. from Providence. The manufacture of lime from the extensive limestone quarries of this place, affords employment to a large number of the inhabitants. This township is one of the largest in the state, and contains several manufacturing villages, the most important of which are Woonsocket, Slatersville, and Valley Falls. Population, 11,500.

SMITHFIELD, a township of Madison co.,

New York, 28 miles E. S. E. from Syracuse. Population, 1669.

SMITHFIELD, a township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. W. from Towanda. Population, 1948.

SMITHFIELD, a small village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

SMITHFIELD, a post-village of Fayette co., Pa., 190 miles W. by S. from Harrisburg.

SMITHFIELD, a township of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Delaware river, 22 miles N. from Easton. Population, 1283.

SMITHFIELD, a handsome post-village, capital of Isle of Wight county, Virginia, is finely situated on a navigable creek which opens into the James river a few miles from its mouth, 80 miles S. E. from Richmond. It contains 3 churches and several high schools. Population, from 900 to a 1000.

SMITHFIELD, a small village of Monongalia co., Va., 10 miles N. W. from Morgantown.

SMITHFIELD, a small post-village, capital of Johnson county, North Carolina, on the left bank of the Neuse river, 27 miles S. E. from Raleigh. The North Carolina railroad will probably pass through this place.

SMITHFIELD, a post-office of Polk co., Tex.

SMITHFIELD, a post-office of Henry co., Ky.

SMITHFIELD, a post-township in the S. W. part of Jefferson co., Ohio. Pop., 1882.

SMITHFIELD, a post-village in the above township, 14 miles S. W. from Steubenville. It has 2 or 3 churches.

SMITHFIELD, a township in De Kalb co., Indiana. Population, 661.

SMITHFIELD, a post-village of Delaware co., Indiana, on White river, 64 miles N. E. from Indianapolis. It contains a church and 2 mills.

SMITHLAND, a small village of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, on Red Bank creek, 15 miles S. from Clarion.

SMITHLAND, a post-office of Cass co., Tex.

SMITHLAND, a post-village, capital of Livingston co., Kentucky, on the Ohio river, just below the mouth of the Cumberland, 215 miles in a direct line W. S. W. from Frankfort. The trade of this village is said to be declining on account of the channel changing to the other side of the Ohio river. It contains a bank.

SMITHLAND, a post-village in Randolph co., Mo., 65 miles N. N. W. from Jefferson City.

SMITHPORT, a village of De Soto parish, Louisiana, on Bayou Pierre lake, about 12 miles N. E. from Mansfield.

SMITH's, a post-office of Gallia co., Ohio.

SMITH's BASIN, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

SMITHSBOROUGH. See SMITHBOROUGH.

SMITHSBURG, a post-village of Washington co., Maryland, 106 miles N. W. from Annapolis. Population, 366.

SMITH'S CORNERS, N. Y. See POPLAR RIDGE.

SMITH'S CREEK, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

SMITH'S CREEK, of Warren co., North Carolina, flows into the Roanoke river a little N. from the line between North Carolina and Virginia.

SMITH'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Morgan co., Virginia.

SMITH'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Rhea co., Tennessee.

SMITH'S FERRY, a post-office of Beaver co., Pennsylvania.

SMITH'S FORD, a post-office of York district, South Carolina.

SMITH'S FORD, a post-village of Hardin co., Kentucky.

SMITH'S GAP, a post-office of Hampshire co., Virginia.

SMITH'S GROVE, a post-village of Davie co., North Carolina.

SMITH'S GROVE, a post-office of Warren co., Kentucky.

SMITH'S ISLAND, a small island in the Delaware river, opposite Philadelphia.

SMITH'S ISLAND, an island of New Hanover co., North Carolina, at the mouth of the Cape Fear river. The S. extremity is called Cape Fear. It has a lighthouse, for which see CAPE FEAR.

SMITH'S LANDING, a small post-village of Atlantic co., New Jersey, about 4 miles S. from Absecom, has one church.

SMITH'S MILLS, a post-office of Chautauque co., New York.

SMITH'S MILLS, a post-office of Clearfield co., Pennsylvania.

SMITH'S MILLS, a post-office of Carroll co., Mississippi.

SMITH'S MILLS, a post-office of Henderson co., Kentucky.

SMITH'S MILLS, a post-office of Morrow co., Ohio.

SMITH'S POINT, Chesapeake bay, the southernmost point of land at the entrance of the Potomac river. On it is a lighthouse showing a fixed light 85 feet above the level of the sea.

SMITH'S RIDGE, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

SMITH'S RIVER, a small stream of Grafton co., near the centre of New Hampshire, falls into the Connecticut river.

SMITH'S RIVER, a small stream which rises in Patrick co., in the S. part of Virginia, and flowing south-eastward into North Carolina, falls into the Dan river near Leakesville.

SMITH'S STORE, a post-village of Spartanburg district, South Carolina.

SMITH'S TURNOUT, a post-office of York district, South Carolina.

SMITHTOWN, a post-township and village of Suffolk co., New York, bordering on Long Island sound, 45 miles E. by N. from New York. Population, 1972.

SMITHTOWN BAY, New York, a small part of Long Island sound extending into Suffolk county.

SMITHTOWN BRANCH, a post-office of Suffolk co., New York.

SMITHVILLE, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

SMITHVILLE, a township of Chenango co., New York, 14 miles S. W. from Norwich. Population, 1771.

SMITHVILLE, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, on the railroad from Sackett's Harbor to Ellisburg, 5 miles S. from the former.

SMITHVILLE, a small post-village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, 46 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

SMITHVILLE, a post-village in Powhattan co., Virginia, 39 miles W. from Richmond.

SMITHVILLE, a small post-village, capital of Brunswick county, North Carolina, on the right (W.) bank of Cape Fear river, 1 or 2 miles from its entrance into the Atlantic. It has a safe harbor, and contains several stores. Population, estimated at 500.

SMITHVILLE, or SMITHSVILLE, a post-village in Abbeville district, South Carolina, 94 miles W. from Columbia.

SMITHVILLE, a post-office of Lumpkin co., Ga.

SMITHVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., Mississippi, on Bull Mountain creek, 190 miles N. N. E. from Jackson. Laid out in 1846. It has several stores.

SMITHVILLE, a small post-village, capital of Lawrence co., Arkansas, 8 miles N. W. from Black river, and about 125 miles N. N. E. from Little Rock.

SMITHVILLE, a post-village, capital of De Kalb co., Tennessee, 65 miles E. from Nashville. The situation is high and healthy.

SMITHVILLE, a post-village in Wayne co., Ohio, on the road from Wooster to Akron, 92 miles N. E. from Columbus. Pop., 260.

SMITHVILLE, a post-office of Peoria co., Ill.

SMITHVILLE, a small post-village of Clay co., Missouri, on Smith's fork of Platte river, 15 miles N. W. from Liberty.

SMITHVILLE FLATS, a post-village of Chenango co., New York, on Geneganslet creek, about 125 miles W. by S. from Albany. It has several mills and factories.

SMOKE'S CREEK, of Erie co., New York, falls into Lake Erie.

SMOKY HOLLOW, a post-village of Columbia co., N. Y., about 36 miles S. S. E. from Albany.

SMOKY ORDINARY, a post-office of Brunswick co., Virginia.

SMOOTH PRAIRIE, a small village of Madison co., Illinois.

SMUT EYE, a post-office of Coffee co., Ala.

SMYRNA, a post-office of Aroostook co., Me.

SMYRNA, a post-township of Chenango co., New York, about 100 miles W. from Albany. Population, 1940.

SMYRNA, a rapidly improving post-village of Kent county, Delaware, near Duck creek, 36 miles S. from Wilmington, and 10 miles W. from Delaware bay. Next to Wilmington it is the most commercial place in the state. It contains 3 or 4 churches, a newspaper office, a bank, 2 large hotels, and several carriage factories. Pop. in 1853, estimated at 2000.

SMYRNA, a post-office of Barnwell district, South Carolina.

SMYRNA, a post-office of Rutherford co., Tennessee.

SMYRNA, a post-village of Harrison co., Ohio, 40 miles W. S. W. from Steubenville.

SMYRNA, a post-office of Ionia co., Mich.

SMYRNA, a township in Jefferson co., Indiana. Population, 1124.

SMYRNA, a small village of Bureau co., Ill.

SMYSER'S DEPÔT, a thriving village of York co., Pennsylvania, on the railroad from York to Baltimore, at the junction with the Hanover branch, 10 miles S. from York.

SMYTH, a county in the S. S. W. part of Virginia, has an area of 625 square miles. The three branches of Holston river, named the North, Middle, and South forks, rise near the N. E. border of the county, and flow through it in a S. W. direction. The Iron Mountain range forms the southern boundary, and Walker's mountain extends along the N. W. border; the surface between these is an elevated valley. The river bottoms are very fertile. Indian corn, hay, oats, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 201,222 bushels of corn; 34,742 of wheat; 139,580 of oats, and 100,410 pounds of butter. There were 7 saw mills, 3 iron furnaces, 1 iron foundry, 1 salt furnace, and 2 tanneries. It contained 12 churches and 600 pupils attending public schools. Limestone and gypsum are abundant in the county; and the latter is used to fertilize the land. Extensive manufactories of salt are in operation on the S. W. border. Smyth county is intersected by the Virginia and Tennessee railroad, not yet finished. Named in honor of General Alexander Smyth, member of Congress from Virginia. Capital, Marion. Population, 1162, of whom 7098 were free, and 1064, slaves.

SMYTHFIELD, a post-village of Somerset co., Pennsylvania, on the Youghiogheny river, where it is crossed by the national road, 158 miles W. by S. from Harrisburg. The post-office is called Somersfield.

SNAPPING SHOALS, a post-village of Newton co., Georgia.

SNEAD'S FERRY, a post-office of Onslow co., North Carolina.

SNEEDSBOROUGH, a village in Anson co., North Carolina, on Yadkin river, 110 miles S. W. from Raleigh.

SNEEDSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Hancock co., Tennessee, 275 miles E. by N. from Nashville, and 1 mile from Clinch river. It became the county seat about the year 1848.

SNICKERSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Loudon co., Virginia, on the turpikie from Winchester to Washington, 165 miles N. by W. from Richmond.

SNIDER'S, a post-village of Washington co., Ky., 25 miles E. S. E. from Independence.

SNODDYVILLE, a village in Jefferson co., Tennessee, 226 miles E. from Nashville.

SNOOKVILLE, a post-office of Defiance co., O.
SNOW CAMP, a post-office of Orange co., N.C.
SNOW CREEK, a post-office of Franklin co., Virginia.

SNOW CREEK, a post-office of Iredell co., N.C.
SNOW CREEK a post-office of Pickens district, South Carolina.

SNOW CREEK, a post-office of Marshall co., Mississippi.

SNOWDEN, a township of Alleghany co., Pa., 11 miles S. from Pittsburg. Population, 1225.

SNOW FALLS, a post-office of Oxford co., Me.

SNOW HILL, a port of entry, capital of Worcester co., Maryland, is situated on the left bank of Pocomoke river, 20 miles from its mouth, and 100 miles S. E. from Annapolis. It is pleasantly situated, near the head of navigation, and has an active business. Large quantities of corn, pine lumber, and firewood are shipped at this place. It contains good county buildings, 5 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 2 large hotels. Tonnage in 1852, 9680 $\frac{1}{2}$; 29 schooners, with a tonnage of 997 $\frac{3}{4}$, were built during the year. Population in 850, 714; in 1853, about 1200.

SNOW HILL, a post-office of Nicholas co., Va.

SNOW HILL, a post-village, capital of Greene co., North Carolina, on Contentned creek, an affluent of the Neuse river, 70 miles S. E. from Raleigh. Pop., from 100 to 200.

SNOW HILL, a post-village of Walker co., Georgia, 14 miles N. from Lafayette.

SNOW HILL, a post-village of Wilcox co., Alabama, about 55 miles S. W. from Montgomery.

SNOW HILL, a post-office of Hamilton co., Tennessee.

SNOW HILL, a post-village of Clinton co., Ohio, 74 miles S. S. W. from Columbus.

SNOWSHOE, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Centre co., Pa. Pop., 432.

SNOWSHOE, a small post-village in the above township, about 17 miles N. W. from Bellefonte.

SNOW'S STORE, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

SNOWVILLE, a post-village in Choctaw co., Mississippi, 110 miles N. N. E. from Jackson.

SNUFFLETOWN, a small village of Sussex co., New Jersey, 15 miles N. E. from Newton, contains a store, tannery, church, and 10 or 12 dwellings.

SNYBAR, a post-office of Lafayette co., Mo.

SNYDER, a township forming the N. extremity of Blair co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1090.

SNYDER, a new township forming the S. E. extremity of Forest co., Pennsylvania.

SNYDER, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Jefferson co., Pa. Pop., 306.

SNYDERSTOWN, a small village of Columbia co., Pennsylvania.

SNYDERSTOWN, a post-village of Northumberland co., Pennsylvania, on Shamokin creek, 8 miles E. from Sunbury.

SNYDESVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., Pa., about 112 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

SNYDERTOWN, a little village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, contains a few dwellings.

SOAP CREEK, of Iowa, flows into Des Moines river from the W., near the S. border of Wapello county.

SOAP CREEK, a post-office of Davis co., Io.

SOAPSTONE MOUNT, a post-office of Randolph co., North Carolina.

SOCAPATOY, a post-village of Coosa co., Ala., 36 miles N. by E. from Wetumpka.

SOCIAL CIRCLE, a thriving post-village of Walton co., Georgia, on the Georgia railroad, 120 miles W. from Augusta. It is a depôt for the produce of the county. Incorporated in 1831.

SOCIAL HILL, a post-office of Muhlenberg co., Kentucky.

SOCIALITY, a post-village of Cattaraugus co., New York, about 40 miles S. from Buffalo.

SOCIETY HILL, a post-village of Darlington district, South Carolina, about 100 miles E. N. E. from Columbia. It is near the W. bank of the Great Pedee river, and contains a few churches and stores.

SOCIETY HILL, a post-village in Macon co., Alabama, 167 miles S. E. from Tuscaloosa.

SOCORRO, a large county forming the S. W. extremity of New Mexico, has an area estimated at above 60,000 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Rio Grande, on the W. and partly on the N. by the Rio Colorado, and the Gila river forms part of its southern border. But little is known of the surface excepting the portion near the Rio Grande, which is uneven and broken by the Sierra Madre. The census of 1850 gives no returns for this county.

SOCORRO, a post-village of Socorro co., New Mexico, on the right bank of the Rio del Norte, about 135 miles S. S. W. from Santa Fe.

SODA LAKE, near the N. W. extremity of Louisiana, is connected with Lake Caddo on the W., and with Cross lake on the S., and communicates with Red river, near Shreveport, by a short outlet. Length, about 15 miles; greatest breadth, above 6 miles. It is navigable by steamboats for about nine months in the year.

SODOM, a post-village of Warren co., New Jersey, 12 miles from Belvidere, contains 2 mills and 6 or 8 dwellings.

SODOM, a small village of Burke co., Ga.

SODUS, a post-township of Wayne co., N. Y., on Lake Ontario and Sodus bay. Pop., 4598.

SODUS, a post-village in the above township, on the Sodus Point and Southern railroad, about 36 miles E. by N. from Rochester. It has 3 or 4 churches.

SODUS BAY, New York, 35 miles E. by N. from Rochester, extends from Lake Ontario southward into Wayne county. Length, about 5 miles; greatest breadth, 3 miles. It forms an excellent harbor, the entrance of which has been protected by substantial piers built by the United States.

SODUS CENTRE, a post-village of Wayne co., N. Y., about 190 miles W. by N. from Albany.

SODUS POINT, a post-village of Wayne county, New York, is situated at the entrance of Sodus bay, and on Lake Ontario, 30 miles W. S. W. from Oswego, and about 210 miles by railroad from Albany. It has a good harbor, and is favorably situated for trade, being at the terminus of the Sodus canal, which connects with the Erie canal, and of the Sodus Point and Southern railroad, which joins the Erie railroad at Elmira.

SODY, a post-office of Autauga co., Ala.

SOLANO, a county toward the N. W. part of California, has an area estimated above 900 square miles. It is bounded on the S. and S. E. by Sacramento river, the Strait of Carquinez, and Suisun bay. It contains several beautiful and fertile valleys, among which may be named Suscol valley, which is situated W. of the Suscol hills, and runs from the city of Vallejo to the northern part of the county; length, about 8 miles, and breadth, 3 miles; Napa bay washes it on the W.; this valley is well adapted to farming: Green valley, so called because a large portion is always green, lies E. of the Suscol hills, about 4 miles from Suscol valley; it is about 6 miles in length by $1\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth; the S. end is the terminus of the Great Sacramento valley, and is covered with wild oats, evergreen, grass, and red clover: Suisun valley, situated N. of Suisun bay, and E. of Green valley, is about 6 miles square; it opens out on the E. into the Sacramento valley, and is watered by the navigable river, Suisun; large quantities of hay, chiefly wild oats and clover, are raised: Ullatis valley lying farther to the N. E., is about 5 miles in length by $1\frac{1}{2}$ in width; it runs N. W., and opens out into the Sacramento valley; this valley is a great thoroughfare, and the admiration of all travellers: Sacramento valley extends as far as the eye can reach; it is covered with wild oats, and is not subject to inundation. The western part of the county is mountainous, and very interesting; there are many small valleys suitable for stock raising. The principal elevation, which is very conspicuous, is a double peak situated near the head of Green valley; the next in magnitude is another double peak, between Green valley and Suscol. Barley, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and horses are the staples. In 1852 it produced 105,630 bushels of barley; 13,870 of oats; 25,905 of potatoes, and 2146 tons of hay. There were 2185 cows; 1085 beef cattle, and 1936 horses. The capital employed in quartz mining amounted to \$8000, and in other mining \$24,000. Gold is found in this county, but not in great abundance. About 4 miles N. of Vallejo is a large soda spring, the stream from which runs through Suscol valley to Napa bay. There are several other valuable mineral springs (some of them warm springs) in different parts of the county. It is intersected by the route of the proposed railroad from Benicia to Marysville. Capital, Benicia. Population, 2835.

SOLDIER RIVER, of Iowa, rises toward the W. part of the state, and flowing south-westerly, enters the Missouri river, in Harrison county.

SOLENN GROVE, a post-village of Moore co., North Carolina.

SOLESBURY, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, about 32 miles N. from Philadelphia. It contains the borough of New Hope. Total pop., 3778.

SOLIDAD, a missionary settlement of Monterey co., California.

SOLON, a village of Somerset co., Maine, on the E. side of Kennebec river, about 45 miles N. of Augusta. Pop. of the township, 1415.

SOLON, a post-township of Cortland co., New York, 35 miles S. by E. from Syracuse. Population, 1150.

SOLON, a township in the E. part of Cuyahoga co., Ohio. Population, 1034.

SOLON, a post-village in Johnson co., Iowa, 12 miles N. by E. from Iowa City.

SOLON MILLS, a post-village in McHenry co., Ill., 55 miles N. W. by N. from Chicago.

SOLESVILLE, a post-office of Madison co., N. Y.

SOMERFIELD, a post-office of Somerset co., Pennsylvania.

SOMERFORD, a post-township in Madison co., Ohio. Population, 616.

SOMERFORD, a post-village of Madison co., Ohio, 27 miles W. from Columbus, has about 150 inhabitants.

SOMERS, a manufacturing post-village in Tolland co., Connecticut, 23 miles N. E. of Hartford. Population of the township, 1508.

SOMERS, a post-village in Somers township, Westchester co., New York, about 110 miles S. from Albany. It contains a bank. Population of the township, 1722.

SOMERS, a township in the S. part of Preble co., Ohio. Population, 2085.

SOMERS, a township in the E. central part of Kenosha co., Wisconsin. Pop., 680.

SOMER'S CENTRE, a post-office of Westchester co., New York.

SOMERSET, a county forming the N. N. W. extremity of Maine, has an area of about 4000 square miles. It is drained by the head waters of the St. John's and Penobscot rivers, but principally by the Kennebec, above 70 miles of whose course is comprised within this county. The greater part is heavily wooded, and immense quantities of lumber are annually rafted down the Kennebec. The surface is hilly and undulating, with occasional mountain ridges and peaks. The soil is generally fertile. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 183,780 bushels of corn; 56,595 of wheat; 328,630 of oats; 327,557 of potatoes; 66,183 tons of hay, and 757,624 pounds of butter. The quantity of wheat, oats, and wool was each greater than that produced by any other county in the state. There were 15 grist mills, 28 saw and planing mills, 1 wool-len factory, 1 foundry, 20 tanneries, and 13 shingle manufactories. It contained 33 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 12,253 pupils attending public schools, and 522 attending academies or other schools. Organized in 1809. Capital, Norridgewock. Pop., 35,581.

SOMERSET, a county in the N. central part of New Jersey, has an area of about 370 square miles. It is partly bounded on the E. by Raritan river and Bound brook, on the N. E. by the Passaic river, and on the W. by Lamington river, and is drained by the N. and S. branches of Raritan river, and by Millstone river, which afford valuable water-power. The surface is various; the N. W. portion being mountainous, and the centre and S. E. either level or slightly undulating. The soil of the hills is generally clay or stiff loam, that of the level portions sandy loam formed of shale, and the mountain valleys are of limestone. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 685,673 bushels of corn; 109,367 of wheat; 498,922 of oats; 26,631 tons of hay, and 564,573 pounds of butter. There were 3 woollen factories, 31 flour mills, 8 saw mills, 8 tanneries, and 19 boot and shoe manufactories. It contained 33 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 4203 pupils attending public schools, and 70 attending other schools. The range of hills about 2 miles north of Somerville have been perforated by many mining shafts in search of copper ore; one of these shafts is 1300 feet in length. As yet, no company have succeeded in making their operations remunerative, although the ore is said to contain not only a large proportion of copper, but to be worth working on account of the gold which it yields. The Bridgewater mineral paint mines are situated near the centre. Somerset county is distinguished as the birthplace of Samuel L. Southard, Peter D. Vroom, Commodore Stockton, William L. Dayton, and Theodore Frelinghuysen. The New Jersey Central railroad traverses this county, which is also partly intersected by the Delaware and Raritan canal. Organized in 1688, having previously formed part of Middlesex county. Capital, Somerville. Population, 19,688; of whom 27 were slaves.

SOMERSET, a county in the S. part of Pennsylvania, bordering on Maryland, contains 1050 square miles. It is watered by Castleman's river, and by Laurel Hill and Stony creeks. The surface is diversified, having the Laurel Hill on the W. boundary, and the Alleghany ridge near the eastern part. The soil is adapted to pasturage and dairy-farming, and butter is the chief article of export. In 1850 this county produced 471,312 bushels of oats; 777,204 pounds of butter, and 373,798 of maple sugar, being the greatest quantity of that article produced by any one county of the state. There were 16 flour and grist mills, 23 saw mills, 6 woollen factories, 2 iron foundries, 1 furnace, 1 coal mine, and 21 tanneries. It contained 59 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 4149 pupils attending public schools, and 103 attending academies or other schools. Beds of excellent coal, which in some places are 8 feet thick, extend over nearly the whole area of the county; iron ore is also abundant. A plank-road connects it with Cumberland, in Maryland. Capital, Somerset. Population, 24,416.

SOMERSET, a county in the S. E. part of Maryland, bordering on Delaware, has an area of about 500 square miles. It is situated on the eastern shore of Chesapeake bay. The Nanticoke river forms its boundary on the N. W., the Pocomoke river and bay on the south; the county is also penetrated by two navigable inlets of the Chesapeake, called Wicomico and Manokin rivers. The surface is level, and partly covered with forests of oak, hickory, chestnut, pine, cedar, cypress, &c. The soil in some parts is sandy, and in others clayey, generally fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and tobacco are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 718,073 bushels of corn; 58,248 of wheat; 71,776 of oats, and 1,763,882 pounds of tobacco. There were 5 boat-yards, 2 woollen factories, 31 flour and grist mills, 31 saw mills, and 4 coach factories. It contained 57 churches, 1 newspaper office, 821 pupils attending public schools, and 270 attending academies and other schools. The rivers and bays, above named, afford great facilities for navigation. Capital, Princess Anne. Pop., 22,456; of whom 16,868 were free, and 5588, slaves.

SOMERSET, a township in Windham co., Vermont, 100 miles W. by S. from Concord. Population, 321.

SOMERSET, a post-village in Bristol co., Massachusetts, on the northern side of the Staunton river, near the Fall River railroad, 50 miles S. by W. from Boston. Population of township, 1166.

SOMERSET, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Niagara co., New York, on Lake Ontario. Population, 2154.

SOMERSET, a township of Somerset co., Pennsylvania, contains Somerset, the county seat. Population, 2420.

SOMERSET, a post-borough in the above township, and capital of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, on the plank-road from Cumberland, in Maryland, to West Newton, in Pennsylvania, 70 miles E. S. E. from Pittsburg. Since the plank-road was opened the town has rapidly increased in business and population. Mines of excellent coal have been opened near this place, and in many parts of the county. Somerset contains several churches, 2 newspaper offices, and an academy. Incorporated in 1804. Population in 1850, 866.

SOMERSET, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, about 24 miles W. by S. from Pittsburg. Population, 1512.

SOMERSET, a post-village, capital of Pulaski county, Kentucky, is situated 6 miles N. from the Cumberland river, and 90 miles S. from Frankfort. The surrounding country contains coal and iron ore. The village has 3 churches, 10 dry-goods stores, a branch bank, and 1 iron foundry.

SOMERSET, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Belmont co., Ohio. Pop., 1943.

SOMERSET, a post-village in Reading township, and capital of Perry county, Ohio, on the Zanesville Wilmington and Cincinnati railroad, about 20 miles W. S. W. from Zanesville. It contains a court house, an academy, and 2 newspaper offices. Pop. in 1850, 1250.

SOMERSET, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Hillsdale co., Michigan. Population, 913.

SOMERSET, a post-office of Wabash co., Ind.

SOMERSET, a post-office of Saline co., Ill.

SOMERSET, a post-office of Monroe co., Missouri, on Salt river, about 80 miles N. N. E. from Jefferson City.

SOMERS POINT, a post-village of Atlantic county, New Jersey, on Great Egg Harbor bay, about 16 miles S. E. from May's Landing, is resorted to for bathing in the summer, and gunning in the fall. A mariner's church has been erected near the place.

SOMERSVILLE, a post-office of Tolland co., Connecticut.

SOMERSWORTH, a township in Strafford co., New Hampshire, bounded on the E. by Salmon Falls river, 30 miles E. S. E. from Concord. It contains the village of Great Falls, which see. The Great Falls branch railroad here connects with the Boston and Maine railroad. Population, 4943.

SOMERTON, a post-office, Philadelphia co. Pa.

SOMERTON, a small post-village of Nansemond co., Virginia, about 100 miles S. E. from Richmond.

SOMERTON, a post-village of Belmont co., Ohio, 107 miles E. from Columbus. Population, about 250.

SOMERVILLE, a post-township of Middlesex county, Massachusetts, intersected by three important railroads, about 3 miles N. N. W. from Boston. It is the seat of the McClean Asylum for the Insane, (see BOSTON,) and of various manufactories, among which may be mentioned an extensive establishment for bleaching. Tuft's college, an institution chartered in 1852, is located on grounds lying partly in this township and partly in Medford. The village of Somerville is situated on the Boston and Maine and on the Boston and Fitchburg railroads, 2 miles from Boston. The township was incorporated in 1842. Population, 3540.

SOMERVILLE, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, about 175 miles N. W. from Albany.

SOMERVILLE, a flourishing post-village, capital of Somerset county, New Jersey, is situated on the Raritan river, and on the New Jersey Central railroad, about 26 miles N. N. E. from Trenton. It is the principal village in the county, and has 14 stores, 5 churches, and 1 bank. It owes its prosperity chiefly to its fine location and its facilities for the disposal of produce. Two newspapers are published here. Pop., 1300.

SOMERVILLE, a post-village of Fauquier co., Virginia, 85 miles N. by W. from Richmond.

SOMERVILLE, a post-village, capital of Morgan co., Alabama, 125 miles N. N. E. from Tuscaloosa, and about 5 miles S. from the Tennessee river. It contains a court house, and several hundred inhabitants.

SOMERVILLE, a post-village, capital of Fayette county, Tennessee, on the Loosahatchy river, 43 miles E. from Memphis. It is situated in a populous and fertile region. The proposed railroad from Memphis to Nashville will pass through the town. A plank-road has been commenced between Memphis and Somerville. It has 4 or 5 churches, 2 academies, and a bank. Population in 1853, 1500.

SOMERVILLE, a post-village of Butler co., Ohio, on the Eaton and Hamilton railroad, 14 miles N. N. W. from Hamilton.

SOMONAUK, a small post-village of De Kalb co., Illinois, on Somonauk creek, 55 miles W. by S. from Chicago.

SONOMA, a county towards the N. W. part of California, has an area estimated at about 1200 square miles. It is bounded partly on the S. W. by the Pacific, intersected by the Russian river, and is drained by several small streams flowing into San Pablo bay, which lies on its S. border. The surface is uneven, having a mountain range passing nearly through the centre. The soil is fertile, especially along the streams, and in the southern portions well cultivated. Barley, wheat, potatoes, hay, onions, cattle, horses, and poultry are the staples. In 1852 it produced 87,851 bushels of barley; 23,108 of wheat; 278,542 of potatoes; 1266 tons of hay, and 491,671 pounds of onions. There were 4335 beef cattle; 3120 cows; 4400 horses, and 11,050 poultry. It contained 5 threshing machines, 6 blacksmith shops, and 1 tannery. Capital, Sonoma. Population, 2337.

SONOMA, a post-town and port of entry, capital of Sonoma county, California, is situated on Sonoma creek, about 18 miles from its mouth. It is about 34 miles from Vallejo by land, and 50 miles from San Francisco by water. The shipping of the district, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 6395 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons registered, and 7027 $\frac{6}{8}$ tons enrolled and licensed; total, 13423 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons. Population, in 1853, estimated at 1200.

SONOMA CREEK, of Sonoma county, on the W. N. W. part of California, rises among the mountains of the coast range, and flowing first south-easterly, and then southerly, falls into San Pablo bay. It is navigable for small boats to the town of Sonoma.

SONORA, a post-town, capital of Tuolumne county, California, is situated on Woods creek, a tributary of Tuolumne river, 130 miles E. of San Francisco. Roads from Sacramento City and San José terminate in this town. In 1849 it was named Stewart by the legislature, but the inhabitants prefer the former appellation, which it still retains. Two newspapers are issued. Population in 1853, from 3000 to 4000.

SOOKALENA, a post-office of Lauderdale co., Mississippi.

SOOY'S INN, a post-office of Burlington co., New Jersey.

SOPCHOPPY, a post-office of Wakulla co., Fla.

SORLEY, a post-office of Wayne co., Tenn.

SORREL HORSE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

SOUCHAHATCHEE, a post-office of Tallapoosa co., Alabama.

SOUCOOK RIVER rises in Belknap county, New Hampshire, and falls into the Merrimack river, in Merrimack county, about 3 miles S. E. of Concord.

SOUDERSBURG, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, on the Philadelphia and Lancaster turnpike, 9 miles E. from Lancaster.

SOUHEGAN river rises in the N. part of Massachusetts, and running first north-easterly and then easterly, falls into the Merrimack, in Hillsborough county, in the S. part of New Hampshire.

SOUTH ABINGTON, a post-village of Abington township, Plymouth co., Massachusetts, on the Old Colony railroad, 21 miles S. S. E. from Boston.

SOUTH ACTON, a post-village of Acton township, Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on the Boston and Fitchburg railroad, 25 miles N. W. from Boston.

SOUTH ACWORTH, a post-office of Sullivan co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH ADAMS, a manufacturing post-village of Adams township, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, on the Pittsfield and North Adams railroad, 13 miles N. by E. from Pittsfield. The Housick river passes near the village.

SOUTH ADDISON, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

SOUTH ALABAMA, a post-office of Genesee co., New York.

SOUTH ALBION, a post-village in Kennebec co., Me., 22 miles N. E. by E. from Augusta.

SOUTH ALBION, a post-office of Oswego co., New York.

SOUTH ALBION, a post-office of Calhoun co., Michigan.

SOUTH ALDEN, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

SOUTH ALTON, a post-village in Belknap co., New Hampshire, near the Cocheco railroad, 20 miles N. E. by E. from Concord.

SOUTH AMBOY, a post-village in South Amboy township, Middlesex county, New Jersey, on the S. side of Raritan bay, at the mouth of Raritan river, 27 miles S. W. from New York. The Camden and Amboy railroad terminates here, and connects with the New York steamboats. The village contains an academy and a manufactory of stone ware. Population of the township, 2266.

SOUTH AMENIA, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

SOUTH AMHERST, a post-office of Hampshire co., Massachusetts.

SOUTHAMPTON, a county in the S. S. E. part of Virginia, bordering on North Carolina, has an area of about 600 square miles. It is intersected by the Nottaway river, bounded on the S. W. by the Meherrin, and on the E. by the Blackwater river. The surface is nearly level, and extensively covered with forests of pine and cypress. The soil is alluvial, light, and moderately fertile. Indian corn, potatoes, hay, cotton, and pork are the staples. Tar and turpentine are also exported. In 1850 the county produced 869 bales of cotton; 564,183 bushels of corn; 235,337 of sweet potatoes, and 3321 tons of hay. The quantities of cotton and potatoes were the greatest produced in any one county of the state. There were 2 grist mills, 2 manufactories of coaches, and 1 of saddles. It contained 23 churches, 288 pupils attending public schools, and 68 attending academies or other schools. It is intersected by the Portsmouth and Roanoke railroad. Organized in 1748, and named from a town of England. Capital, Jerusalem. Population, 13,521, of whom 7766 were free, and 5755, slaves.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. H. See SOUTH HAMPTON.

SOUTHAMPTON, a village in Hampshire co., Massachusetts, 95 miles W. by S. from Boston, contains 1 or 2 churches, and an academy. Population of the township, 1060.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y. See SOUTH HAMPTON.

SOUTHAMPTON, a township of Bedford co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles S. from Bedford. Population, 1347.

SOUTHAMPTON, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles N. N. E. from Philadelphia. Population, 1416.

SOUTHAMPTON, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania. It is intersected by the Cumberland Valley railroad. Population, 1651.

SOUTHAMPTON, a township of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. E. from Chambersburg. It is intersected by the Cumberland Valley railroad. Population, 1795.

SOUTHAMPTON, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Somerset co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1396.

SOUTHAMPTON, a post-office of Peoria co., Ill.

SOUTH ANDOVER, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

SOUTH ANNA, a small river in the eastern part of Virginia, rises near the north-western extremity of Louisa county, and flowing easterly unites with the North Anna, forming the Pamunkey river. The whole length is probably 75 miles. It affords abundant water-power.

SOUTH ANNA, a post-village in Louisa co., Pa., 67 miles N. W. from Richmond.

SOUTH ANVILLE, a township of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania, about 7 miles S. W. from Lebanon. Population, 887.

SOUTH ARGYLE, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

SOUTH ASSYRIA, a post-office of Barry co., Michigan.

SOUTH ATTLEBOROUGH, a post-village of Bristol co., Massachusetts, about 40 miles S. S. W. from Boston.

SOUTH AUBURN, a post-office of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania.

SOUTH AUGUSTA, Iowa. See AUGUSTA.

SOUTH AVON, a post-village of Avon township, Livingston co., New York, on a branch of the Genesee river, 26 miles W. from Canandaigua, and 20 miles S. by W. from Rochester.

SOUTH BAINBRIDGE, a post-village of Chenango co., New York, on the Susquehanna river, 110 miles W. S. W. from Albany.

SOUTH BARRE, a post-village in Washington co., Vt., 7 miles S. E. from Montpelier.

SOUTH BARRE, a post-village of Orleans co., New York, 6 or 7 miles S. from Albion.

SOUTH BAY, Washington co., New York, is a branch of Lake Champlain. Length, about 4 miles.

SOUTH BEAVER, a township of Beaver co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles N. W. by W. from Beaver. Population, 1155.

SOUTH BELLINGHAM, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH BEND, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

SOUTH BEND, a post-office of Arkansas co., Arkansas.

SOUTH BEND, a flourishing post-town of Portage township and capital of St. Joseph county, Indiana, is finely situated on St. Joseph's river, and on the Northern Indiana railroad, 85 miles E. by S. from Chicago. It is one of the principal stations on the railroad which connects Chicago with Lake Erie, and it is the northern terminus of the Michigan road, which is one of the greatest thoroughfares of the state. The river is navigable for small steamboats from its mouth to Constantine, which is above South Bend. A dam across the river at this place produces a vast hydraulic power, which is employed in manufactures of various kinds; among which are 2 flouring mills, 1 woollen factory, 1 oil mill, 1 edge-tool factory, and several machine shops. The village contains a bank and 3 newspaper offices. The University of Notre Dame (Catholic) is situated 1 mile from the town, on the border of a small lake. Population in 1853, estimated at 2000.

SOUTH BENTONSPORT. See BENTONSPORT.

SOUTH BERLIN, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

SOUTH BERNE, a post-office of Albany co., New York.

SOUTH BERWICK, a post-village in York co., Maine, about 90 miles S. W. by S. from Augusta, near Salmon Falls river, at the junction of the Portland and Portsmouth, and the Boston and Maine railroads, contains one bank. Population of the township, 2595.

SOUTH BLOOMFIELD, a post-office of Somerset co., Maine.

SOUTH BLOOMFIELD, a township in the N. E. part of Morrow co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati railroad. Population, 1268.

SOUTH BLOOMFIELD, a post-village of Pickaway co., Ohio, between the Scioto river and the Ohio canal, about 15 miles S. from Columbus.

SOUTH BLOOMFIELD, a post-office of Walworth co., Wisconsin.

SOUTHBOROUGH, a post-village of Worcester co., Massachusetts, 25 miles W. from Boston, on the Boston and Worcester railroad. Population of the township, 1347.

SOUTH BOSTON, a post-office of Ionia co., Michigan.

SOUTH BOSTON, a post-office of Washington co., Indiana.

SOUTH BRADFORD, a post-office of Merrimack co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH BRADFORD, a post-office of Orange co., Vermont.

SOUTH BRADFORD, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

SOUTH BRAintree, a post-village of Braintree township, Norfolk co., Massachusetts, at the junction of the Old Colony and Fall River railroads, 11½ miles S. by E. from Boston, and 25½ miles N. N. E. of Plymouth.

SOUTH BRANCH, a post-office of Somerset co., New Jersey.

SOUTHBRIDGE, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, near Quinnebaug river, 60 miles S. W. from Boston, contains 2 or 3 churches, and 1 bank. Population of the township, 2824.

SOUTH BRIGETON, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

SOUTH BRIDGEWATER, a post-village of Bridgewater township, Plymouth county, Massachusetts, on the Fall River railroad, 20 miles S. by E. from Boston, and 34 miles N. N. E. from Fall river.

SOUTH BRISTOL, a post-township of Ontario co., New York, on the W. side of Canandaigua lake. Population, 1129.

SOUTH BRISTOL, a post-office of Racine co., Wisconsin.

SOUTH BRITAIN, a post-village of Southbury township, New Haven county, Connecticut, on the Pamperaug river, which affords water-power, 20 miles N. W. from New Haven. It contains 2 churches, 3 or 4 stores, and several manufactories. Considerable preparations are now being made in the construction of dams and races to increase the business of the village.

SOUTH BROOKFIELD, a post-office of Madison co., New York.

SOUTH BROOKS, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

SOUTH BROWN, a township in the E. part of Vinton co., Ohio. Population, 648.

SOUTH BRUNSWICK, a post-township of Middlesex co., New Jersey, 14 miles N. W. from Trenton. Population, 3368.

SOUTH BUFFALO, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Alleghany river; the S. part of the township is intersected by the Pennsylvania canal. Population, 1266.

SOUTHBURY, a post-village of New Haven county, Connecticut, 22 miles N. W. by N. from New Haven. On the main street, which is beautifully shaded, are situated 2 churches, an academy, a hotel, and several fine residences. Pop. of the township, 1484.

SOUTH BUTLER, a thriving post-village in Butler township, Wayne county, New York, about 158 miles N. W. by W. from Albany. It contains 2 stores, 3 churches, 1 steam grist and saw mill, and 1 tannery.

SOUTH BUTLER, a township of Butler co., Pennsylvania, 4 miles S. by W. from Butler. Population, 1209.

SOUTH BUTLER, a post-office of Butler co., Alabama.

SOUTH BYRON, a post-village of Genesee co., New York, on the Buffalo and Rochester railroad, 25 miles W. S. W. from Rochester.

SOUTH CAIRO, a post-office of Greene co., New York.

SOUTH CANAAN, a post-office of Essex co., Vermont.

SOUTH CANAAN, a post-village of Litchfield co., Connecticut, about 50 miles N. W. from Hartford.

SOUTH CANDOR, a post-village of Tioga co., New York, on the railroad between Owego and Ithaca, 5 miles N. by W. from the former.

SOUTH CAROLINA, one of the original states of the American confederacy, is bounded on the N. and N. E. by North Carolina, S. E. by the Atlantic ocean, and S. W. by Georgia, from which it is separated by the Savannah river. It lies between 32° and 35° 10' N. lat., and between 78° 35' and 83° 30' W. lon. This state is triangular in shape, having a coast line of about 200 miles for its base, with an extreme length and breadth each of about 210 miles, including an area of about 24,500 square miles, or 15,680,000 acres; of which 4,072,651 only were improved in 1850. Governor Seabrook states the area at 30,213 square miles.

Population.—Among the original settlers of South Carolina—generally English—were some Scotch, Germans, and French Huguenots, from the latter of whom are descended some of the most respectable families in the state. The people of South Carolina are noted for frankness of speech, courteousness of manner, and especially for that free hospitality which is a general characteristic of the inhabitants of the southern states. Eloquence is one of the marked attributes of her public men, and she has produced some of the most eminent orators that have shed lustre upon the national councils of our country. In 1790 there were in South Carolina 249,073 inhabitants; 345,591 in 1800; 415,115 in 1810; 502,741 in 1820; 581,185 in 1830; 594,398 in 1840, and 668,507 in 1850; of whom 137,736 were white males; 136,831 white females; 4149 free colored males; 4807 colored females; 187,756 male slaves, and 197,222 female slaves. This population was divided into 52,937 families, occupying 52,642 dwellings. Representative population, 514,513. Of the white population, 262,160 were born in the state; 12,653 in other states; 921 in England; 4051 in Ireland; 661 in Wales and Scotland; 57 in British America; 2180 in Germany; 274 in France; 518 in other countries, and 48 whose places of birth were unknown—giving about 3¼ per cent. of the white population of foreign birth. Of the entire population, 145 were deaf and dumb, of whom 1 was free colored, and 15 slaves; 222 blind, of whom 14 were free colored, and 56 slaves; 204 were insane, of whom 3 were free colored, and 9 slaves; and 295 were idiotic, of whom 3 were free colored, and 50 slaves. In the twelve months preceding June 1st, 1850, 1642 paupers received aid, of whom 329 were foreigners, at an expense of about $30 each; and in the same period occurred 7997 deaths, or nearly 12 in every 1000 persons.

Districts.—South Carolina is divided into 29 districts, viz. Abbeville, Anderson, Barnwell, Beaufort, Charleston, Chester, Chesterfield, Colleton, Darlington, Edgefield, Fairfield, Georgetown, Greenville, Horry, Kershaw, Lancaster, Laurens, Lexington, Marion, Marlborough, Newberry, Orangeburg, Pickens, Richland, Spartanburg, Sumter, Union, Williamsburg, and York. Capital, Columbia.

Cities and Towns.—Charleston is the largest town in the state, population, 42,985. The other principal towns are Columbia, population, 6060; and Georgetown, Camden, Hamburg, Cheraw, Beaufort, and Greenville.

Face of the Country, and Geology.—This state is about equally divided between the alluvial and primitive formations; the former, extending along the coast for about 80 to 100 miles inland, is interspersed with extensive swamps. The primitive occupies the central and north-western parts, with the exception of the alluvion bottoms of the rivers. On leaving the alluvions, we enter upon a sandy tract, called the "Middle Country," which is terminated in its turn by a belt called the "Ridge," an abrupt elevation, beyond which the country continues to ascend till it terminates, in the extreme north-west, in the Blue Ridge mountains, which attain, in Table mountain, an elevation of about 4000 feet above the sea. King's mountain is on the boundary line between North and South Carolina. Along the coast is a chain of low islands, separated from the mainland by a series of lagoons or sounds, through which a coast navigation is carried on, defended from the agitations of the ocean.

Minerals.—The primitive portion affords great abundance of building material, in the granites and sienites of Richland, Kershaw, Lexington, Fairfield, and Abbeville districts, in the marbles of Spartanburg and Laurens, and in the gneiss of Pickens and York. The other earthy minerals are mica slate, soapstone, porcelain clay of a very fine quality, red and yellow ochres, limestone, and talc-micaceous slates suitable for whetstones; but no coal—nor is it likely, from its geological formation, that this valuable fuel will ever be found, if found at all, in any considerable quantity. Of the metallic minerals, gold in considerable abundance, iron of the best quality, and lead are among the treasures of South Carolina. The mines of Mr. William Dorne, in Abbeville and Edgefield districts, yielded gold of the value of $300,000 in the 15 months preceding July, 1853. This precious metal is found in the same belt (reaching from the Rappahannock river, in Virginia, to the Coosa, in Alabama) in which the gold of Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia exists. The South Carolina portion of this great belt promises to make the richest returns of any mines in the United States, out of California. The introduction of the quartz-crusher, it is estimated, will enable the Dorne mines to produce $4000 a day. Two Chilian mills in operation, says a correspondent of the New York Tribune, produce nearly $1000 a day. Between February, 1852, and February, 1853, the value of $202,000 was mined, at the trifling expense of $1200.

Rivers, Bays, &c.—From the mouth of the Great Pedee river to that of the Savannah, the coast of South Carolina is lined with a series of bays, sounds, and lagoons, which, though mostly shallow, have sufficient depth to allow of an extensive coasting navigation. Commencing at the Great Pedee, and proceeding south, we have Winyaw bay, at the mouth of that river; then, in order, Bull's bay, Charleston harbor, St. Helena sound, and Port Royal entrance, with a number of smaller inlets. The harbor of Beaufort is much the best of these, and will admit vessels of the largest size; Charleston harbor is obstructed by a dangerous bar; St. Helena sound is the most capacious of these inlets, but is beset with shoals. Georgetown, at the head of Winyaw bay, can only be reached by vessels of small draught; and Stono inlet, S. of Charleston, has but 10 feet water on the bar. The Santee river, with its main affluents, the Congaree and Wateree, passes almost directly through the middle of the state. It is about 100 miles from the junction of the Congaree and Wateree to the mouth of the Santee, and about 300 miles from their confluence to their sources in North Carolina. The Great Pedee enters the state from North Carolina, (where it bears the name of Yadkin,) and courses through the N. E. part of South Carolina, about 150 miles into Winyaw bay; the Saluda and Broad rivers drain the N. W. of the state, and unite to form the Congaree; the Broad river rises in the W. of North Carolina; the Edisto and Combabee drain the S. W. of the state, and flow into the Atlantic after courses of 150 to 200 miles; Lynch's creek is a tributary from the W., and Wacamaw and Little Pedee from the E. of the Great Pedee; all have their sources in North Carolina. The larger streams run in a S. E. direction, and furnish an inland navigation of about 2400 miles, apart from the creeks and inlets of the sea. The Savannah river can be navigated by steamboats to Hamburg, and for smaller boats still higher. The Wacamaw may be ascended 12 miles, the Great Pedee 200 miles, the Congaree 200 miles, and the Wateree 200 miles, by steamboats. All these rivers are boatable, above the distances mentioned, for keel-boats. Greenville is the only district in the state without the advantage of navigation. Watercourses abound in all the districts favorable for mill sites.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—One of the most interesting natural objects in South Carolina is Table Mountain, or Table Rock, as it is generally called, an elevation of 4000 feet above the sea, which presents, in one direction, a perpendicular face of 1100 feet above the surrounding country. This mountain is a place of great resort in summer, having a house of entertainment at its base. Cæsar's Head, in the same vicinity, is so called from its resemblance to a human cranium; this is also a place of summer resort, and has a hotel on its summit, which is visible at a great distance. Glenn's Spring, in Spartanburg district, is a watering-place of some repute, containing magnesia and sulphur in its waters. Limestone Spring, in the same district, is less frequented than formerly, and its spacious hotel is now converted into a female college, which is said to be in a very flourishing condition. According to Professor Tuomey, the falls of the Saluda, among the mountains, have a descent of from 300 to 400 feet. "They," says the professor, "who imagine that by skipping to the top of Table Rock, and from thence run across to Cæsar's Head, they have exhausted the beauties of this region, commit a great mistake."

Climate.—South Carolina, though in the latitude of the Barbary States, has more the climate and productions of Southern Europe. Yet many of the productions peculiar to its latitude on the Eastern continent flourish here, such as cotton, and rice, and some of the tropical fruits; but the irregularity of the seasons, and early and late frosts, render the latter a somewhat precarious crop.

Soil and Productions.—There are, according to Ruffin and Tuomey, (the agricultural surveyors of the state,) six varieties of soil in South Carolina:—1. Tide swamp; devoted to the culture of rice. 2. Inland swamp; to rice, cotton, corn, peas, &c. 3. Salt marsh; to long cotton. 4. Oak and pine; to long cotton, corn, potatoes, &c. 5. Oak and hickory; to short cotton, corn, &c.: and, 6. Pine barren; to fruits, vegetables, &c. The swamps near the coast, covering 2000 square miles, are capable of drainage, and are of inexhaustible fertility. The pine lands, forming a belt across the state next succeeding to the alluvion, have been heretofore considered of but little value except for timber; but Governor Seabrook is of opinion that its agricultural capabilities have been much underrated, and "that in all its relations it is of immeasurable value to our community." On the islands is produced the largest quantity of the much valued variety of cotton called sea-island, whose production is in fact limited to the coasts of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and perhaps Texas. With the exception of the rich alluvions of the lower region, the best land in the state is in the hilly country, above the Ridge, which is favorable to corn, potatoes, &c. Cotton grows in all the divisions of the state, with different degrees of productiveness. Cotton is the great staple of South Carolina; and though the fourth among the states in the actual amount of this commodity produced, yet, if we regard only area, she stands first in the relative amount; while in the product of rice, her other great staple, she is first in absolute amount. Indian corn, wheat, butter, sweet and Irish potatoes, and wool are extensively produced; while rye, oats, barley, tobacco, hay, wine, cheese, and sugar are cultivated to some extent. The climate is suited to indigo and hemp, but they are not, at present, profitable crops. In short, South Carolina can produce, side by side, the wheat of the north, and the olive, sugar-cane, and (with care) the orange of the south; and, when she institutes a more careful system of culture, will be able to produce as large an amount, and perhaps a greater variety of products, acre for acre, than any of her sister states. Wheat grows as low as 32° 30' N. lat., and Indian corn everywhere, except in a small district north of the mountains, which is too bleak for it. The 4,072,651 acres of improved land in South Carolina at the census of 1850 were divided into 29,969 farms of about 135 acres each, producing 1,066,277 bushels of wheat; 43,790 of rye; 16,271,454 of Indian corn; 2,322,155 of oats; 1,026,900 of peas and beans; 136,494 of Irish, and 4,337,469 of sweet potatoes; 159,930,613 pounds of rice; 74,285 of tobacco; 120,360,400 of cotton; 487,233 of wool; 2,981,850 of butter; 671,000 of cane sugar; 216,281 of beeswax and honey, and 20,925 tons of hay. Value of live stock, $15,060,015; of market produce, $47,286; of orchard products, $35,108; of slaughtered animals, $1,302,637.

Forest Trees.—On the islands are found the live-oak, pine, palmetto, and laurel; in the lower and pine barren district, pitch pine, and in the middle and upper regions, oak, hickory, and pine. The winter voyager between Charleston and Savannah, on the inlets or sounds of the coast, sails amid foliage as green as that of a summer forest at the North; with here the evergreen live oak, draped with the gracefully-hanging long moss, and there the white flowers of the laurel, (sometimes a foot in circuit,) while the shores are lined with thousands of waterfowl, and nothing to mar the scene, unless it may be an unsightly alligator basking in the sun.

Manufactures.—South Carolina has not yet become extensively engaged in manufacturing, but her attention is now much turned in that direction, and already she exports, to the North, cotton yarns and coarse cotton stuffs. In 1850 there were in the state 1473 manufacturing establishments, producing each $500 and upwards annually. The same year home-made manufactures to the amount of $909,546 were fabricated. There were in 1850, 18 establishments engaged in the manufacture of cotton, employing capital to the amount of $857,200, and 399 male and 620 female hands, consuming raw material worth $295,971, and producing 6,563,737 yards of stuffs, and 1,348,343 pounds of yarn, valued at $748,338; 6 furnaces, &c., employing $185,700, and 153 male and 2 female hands, consuming raw material worth $29,128, and producing 1286 tons of castings, &c., valued at $87,683; 91 tanneries, with a capital of $184,335, and producing leather to the amount of $261,332; and $3475 invested in the manufacture of malt and spirituous liquors, employing 33 hands, consuming 18,100 bushels of Indian corn, and producing 43,900 gallons of whiskey, wine, &c. South Carolina reports no woollen factories. The South Carolina Industrial Institute holds annually fairs, in which great interest is taken by its citizens, and displays are made of manufacturing and agricultural improvement, marking an advancing state in the mechanic arts and tillage of the soil.

Internal Improvements.—In January, 1853, South Carolina had 559 miles of railroad completed, and 296 in course of construction. Those already constructed unite Charleston with Hamburg, (and from thence by connection with the Georgia railroad with various points in Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama,) with Columbia, Abbeville, Laurensville, and other intermediate points in South Carolina, and with Charlotte and Wilmington in North Carolina. From the latter place (with a short exception on and near the Potomac, below Washington City) the connection with the great Northern cities is unbroken. When the present lines projected shall have been completed, Charleston will have communication with Richmond through the central counties of North Carolina.

Commerce.—South Carolina exports largely of cotton, rice, (of the latter more than all the other states of the Union together,) lumber, and naval stores. Her exports for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1852, amounted in value to \$11,670,021, all in domestic products, and her imports for the same period to \$2,175,614. Nearly three-sevenths of the foreign commerce of South Carolina is carried in other than American bottoms. Tonnage of the state for the fiscal year 1852, 46,635 $\frac{1}{5}$, of which more than 22,000 tons were employed in the coasting trade, and more than 7000 in steam navigation. Seven vessels were built in the same year, with a tonnage of 939 $\frac{1}{5}$. Tonnage entered, 101,977, and tonnage cleared, 142,261. The exports of cotton for the year ending August 31, 1853, were 19,976 bales of sea-land, and 446,610 of upland cotton; 126,742 tierces of rice, 363,862 bushels of rough rice, and 20,637,525 feet of lumber. The railway communications opened between Charleston and Tennessee have diverted a large northern trade, with the latter state, into this channel to the great advantage of Charleston and Tennessee as well. Soon, Charleston will hold direct communication with Memphis, on the Mississippi, by railways, which will become one of the great routes between the Mississippi valley and the Atlantic coast, and even with the Ohio valley.—See CHARLESTON for further particulars.

Education.—South Carolina University is an institution of high reputation, and has among its faculty some distinguished names, but the education of the masses in this state has been much neglected. The number of schools in 1849 was 1023, and the number of scholars in a white population of about 250,000 was only 9112. Public schools reported by census of 1850, 670, and academies, 261. Amount expended by the legislature in 1848 for educational purposes, was $40,561.53. There are two colleges, three theological seminaries, and one medical school in the state. Splendid buildings for a college at Spartanburg village are now (1853) being erected by the Methodists, ample funds having been supplied by the bequest of Benjamin Wofford. The income from the pupils of the South Carolina College is spent in improvements and other contingent expenses, the college being supported by appropriations from the state. Each student, it is said, costs the state $1000. The legislature of 1853 appropriated $39,600 for the support of this college.—See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX.

Religious Sects.—Of the 1163 churches in South Carolina in 1850, the Baptists owned 413; the Episcopalians, 71; Lutherans, 41; Methodists, 467; Presbyterians, 125; Roman Catholics, 14, and Seceders, 11. The remainder were divided among the Congregationalists, Free Church, Friends, Jews, Unitarians, Universalists, and other minor sects, making one church to every 574 inhabitants. Value of church property, $2,140,346.

Public Institutions.—There is a state lunatic asylum at Columbia, which had 127 patients in November 5th, 1851. Of these, 70 were paupers. The previous year, 22 had been discharged cured, and 18 improved. Receipts during the year, $26,501; expenditures, $23,702. This institution is richly endowed, and is under the control of the state. The deaf and dumb asylum at Cedar Springs, in Spartanburg district, was founded by the Rev. N. P. Walker, in 1849, but is now under the care of the state, and had 27 pupils in November, 1851. New buildings for this institution are in progress of erection. The orphan house not being supported by the state, will be found described under CHARLESTON. There is no penitentiary or house of refuge in South Carolina.

Government, Finances, &c.—The governor, lieutenant-governor, and presidential electors are chosen by the legislature. The governor and lieutenant-governor are elected for two years, the former receiving $3500 per annum. The senate consists of 45 members, chosen by the people for 4 years, one-half being elected every second year. The house of representatives, consisting of 124 members, is chosen in the same manner for two years. In those districts having parishes, the representation is by parishes. The present constitution was framed in 1790. The members of both branches receive $3 per diem, and 10 cents for every mile of travel. The judiciary consists—1. Of courts of equity, presided over by four chancellors; 2. Of courts for the correction of errors, consisting of all the judges in law and equity, to try constitutional questions; 3. Of courts of common pleas and general sessions; 4. Of the city court of Charleston, (an inferior court;) 5. Of an ordinary's court, in each district, to grant letters of administration, probate of wills, &c.; and, 6. Of a court of magistrates and freeholders for the trial of slaves and free persons of color. The chancellor, and judges of sessions and common pleas, receive $3000 per annum. South Carolina has 7 members in the national house of representatives, and 9 electoral votes for president of the United States.

The state debt in 1852 was $3,144,931, of which $1,051,422 was contingent debt; productive property, $5,000,000; ordinary expenses, exclusive of debt and schools, $115,000. Appropriations for 1853, more than $500,000; assessed value of property in 1850, $283,867,709; number of banks in June, 1853, 11, with an aggregate capital of $10,330,225. The state bank of South Carolina has a capital of $3,450,000, which the governor recommends to be increased. This is reported to be a very sound institution.

History.—South Carolina was first settled at Port Royal in 1670 by the English. A constitution for this colony was formed by the celebrated John Locke, somewhat on the plan of Plato's Model Republic, which, however, signally failed. South Carolina was a proprietary government until 1719, when it became a royal colony. In 1690, a number of French Huguenots, driven from France by the revocation of the Edict of Nantez, settled in this state, and subsequently a number of Swiss, Irish, and Germans. South Carolina was engaged with Georgia under Oglethorpe in some contests with the Spanish in Florida, and she also suffered much from Indian depredations in the early times of her settlement, particularly from the Yamasses, who were expelled in 1715. This colony took an active part in exciting and carrying on the revolt of the colonies, and furnished above 6000 troops to the federal forces. Many bloody struggles took place within her limits at Fort Moultrie, Charleston, Monk's Corner, Camden, King's mountain, Eutaw Springs, and Cowpens, with varying success, now the British and now the Carolinians having the advantage. The state was occupied by the enemy the greater part of 1780 and 1781. South Carolina has taken an active part in the affairs of the national government, and has furnished some of the most distinguished American statesmen, being generally ably represented in the national councils. She has gone further than any other state in the assertion and vindication of the rights of the sovereign states, as opposed to the powers of the federal government. Among her distinguished statesmen have been Lowndes, Pinckney, Hayne, Legare, Poinsett, and Calhoun.

SOUTH CARROLL, a post-office of Carroll co., Tennessee.

SOUTH CARROLLTON, a post-village of Muhlenburg co., Kentucky, on Green river, 160 miles S. W. from Frankfort. It has several stores and warehouses.

SOUTH CARTHAGE, a post-office of Franklin co., Maine.

SOUTH CARVER, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH CASS, a post-office of Ionia co., Mich.

SOUTH CASS, a township in Orange co., Indiana. Population, 1501.

SOUTH CHARLESTON, a beautiful post-village of Madison township, Clarke county, Ohio, on the Columbus and Xenia railroad, 35 miles W. S. W. from Columbus, has 2 or 3 churches. Population in 1850, 414.

SOUTH CHARLESTOWN, a post-office of Sullivan co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH CHESTERVILLE, a post-office of Franklin co., Maine.

SOUTH CHINA, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

SOUTH CODORUS, a township of York co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Baltimore and Susquehanna railroad, 14 miles W. by S. from York. Population, 1135.

SOUTH COLUMBIA, a post-office of Herkimer co., New York.

SOUTH CORINTH, a post-village of Saratoga co., New York, 16 miles N. from Ballston Spa.

SOUTH CORTLAND, a post-village of Cortland co., New York, 4 or 5 miles S. W. from Cortland Village.

SOUTH COVENTRY, a post-office of Tolland co., Connecticut.

SOUTH COVENTRY, a township of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 16 miles N. by W. from West Chester. Population, 711.

SOUTH CRAFTSBURY, a post-office of Orleans co., Vermont.

SOUTH CREEK, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, about 23 miles N. W. from Towanda. Population, 709.

SOUTH CREEK, a post-office of Beaufort co., North Carolina.

SOUTH DANBY, a post-office of Tompkins co., New York.

SOUTH DANSVILLE, a post-village of Steuben co., New York, 24 miles N. W. from Bath.

SOUTH DARTMOUTH, a post-office of Bristol co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH DEDHAM, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH DEERFIELD, a post-village in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 15 miles S. E. from Concord.

SOUTH DEERFIELD, a post-village in Franklin co., Massachusetts, on the Connecticut River railroad, 80 miles W. by N. of Boston.

SOUTH DEER ISLE, a post-office of Hancock co., Maine.

SOUTH DENNIS, a post-office of Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH DICKINSON, a post-office of Franklin co., New York.

SOUTH DORSET, a small post-village in Dorset township, Bennington co., Vermont, about 80 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. The inhabitants are principally engaged in quarrying and dressing marble.

SOUTH DOVER, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

SOUTH DOVER, a post-village of Dutchess co., New York, on the Harlem railroad, 73 miles N. N. E. from New York.

SOUTH DRESDEN, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

SOUTH DURHAM, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

SOUTH DURHAM, a post-office of Greene co., New York.

SOUTH-EAST, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Putnam co., New York, intersected by the Harlem railroad. Population, 2079.

SOUTH EASTON, a post-office of Bristol co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH EASTON, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

SOUTH EASTON, a flourishing town of Easton township, Northampton county, Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Lehigh river, at its entrance into the Delaware, 1 mile S. from Easton. It contains manufactories of iron, cotton, flour, and lumber. These are propelled by the water-power furnished by the Lehigh canal.

SOUTH EDMESTON, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

SOUTH EDWARDS, a post-office of St. Lawrence co., New York.

SOUTH EGREMONT, a post-village in Berkshire co., Mass., 120 miles W. by S. of Boston.

SOUTH ENGLISH, a post-village in Keokuk co., Iowa, near the S. fork of English river, 35 miles S. W. by W. from Iowa City.

SOUTH ERIN, a post-office, Chemung co. N.Y. SOUTHERN STATES. See UNITED STATES.

SOUTH FAIRFAX, a flourishing village of Franklin co., Vermont, on the Lamoille river, which affords excellent water power, 35 miles N. E. by E. from Montpelier. It has several handsome churches, a large flouring mill, and 6 stores. A fine building, 140 feet by 50, has been erected for the New Hampton Academical Institute, removed from New Hampton.

SOUTH FARMS, a post-village in Litchfield co., Connecticut, 35 miles W. by S. from Hartford.

SOUTH FAYETTE, a township of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles S. W. from Pittsburg. Population, 1118.

SOUTHFIELD, a post-office of Berkshire co., Massachusetts.

SOUTHFIELD, a township of Richmond co., New York, bordering on New York bay, 12 miles S. W. from New York city. Pop., 2709.

SOUTHFIELD, a post-township in the S. E. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Pop., 1658.

SOUTH FLORENCE, a post-village in Franklin co., Alabama.

SOUTH FORD, a post-village in New Haven co., Connecticut.

SOUTH FORK, a post-office of Ashe co., N.C.

SOUTH FORK, a township in Clark co., Arkansas. Population, 223.

SOUTH FORK, a township in Fulton co., Arkansas. Population, 205.

SOUTH FORK, a post-office of Owsley co., Ky.

SOUTH FORK, a post-office of Wayne co., Io.

SOUTH FOSTER, a post-office of Providence co., Rhode Island.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH FRANKLIN, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH FRANKLIN, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

SOUTH FREEDOM, post-office of Waldo co., Me.

SOUTH GALWAY, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

SOUTH GARDINER, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH GATE, a post-office of Franklin co. Ind.

SOUTH GENESEE, a post-village in Genesee township, Waukesha co., Wisconsin, 21 miles W. by S. from Milwaukee.

SOUTH GIBSON, a post-office of Gibson co., Tennessee, 15 miles S. E. from Trenton.

SOUTH GILBOA, a post-office of Schoharie co., New York.

SOUTH GLASTENBURY, a post-village in Hartford co., Connecticut, on Connecticut river, about 10 miles S. from Hartford.

SOUTH GLENN'S FALL, a post-office of Saratoga co., New York.

SOUTH GRANBY, a post-office of Oswego co., New York.

SOUTH GRANVILLE, a post-office of Washington co., New York.

SOUTH GREECE, a post-office of Monroe co., New York.

SOUTH GROTON, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH GROVE, a post-township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 147.

SOUTH GROVE, a small post-village of De Kalb co., Illinois, about 70 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

SOUTH GROVE, a post-village in Walworth township, Walworth co., Wisconsin.

SOUTH HADLEY, a post-township in Hampshire co., Mass., on the E. side of Connecticut river, 85 miles W. by S. from Boston. Pop. 2495.

SOUTH HADLEY, a post-village in the above township, on Connecticut river, contains 2 or 3 churches, and an academy.

SOUTH HALIFAX, a post-office of Windham co., Vermont.

SOUTH HAMMOND, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, about 38 miles W. S. W. from Canton.

SOUTH HAMPDEN, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

SOUTH HAMPTON, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 45 miles S. E. from Concord. Population, 472.

SOUTH HAMPTON, a post-township of Suffolk co., New York, immediately S. E. from Riverhead. It is washed by the Atlantic on the S., and Great Peconic bay on the N. Pop., 6501.

SOUTH HAMPTON, a post-village in the above township, near the S. side of Long Island, about 100 miles E. from New York. It contains an academy, and 1 or 2 churches.

SOUTH HANOVER, a township of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania, 12 miles E. from Harrisburg. Population, 617.

SOUTH HANOVER, a post-village of Jefferson co., Indiana, 6 or 7 miles W. S. W. from Madison. It has an institution styled South Hanover College. A plank-road extends from this village to Madison. Population, 447.

SOUTH HANSON, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH HARDWICK, a post-office of Caledonia co., Vermont.

SOUTH HARPETH, a post-office of Davidson co., Tennessee.

SOUTH HARRISBURG, a post-office of Lewis co., New York.

SOUTH HARTFORD, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

SOUTH HARTFORD, a post-village of Washington co., New York, about 50 miles N. N. E. from Albany. It has 2 churches.

SOUTH HARTWICK, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

SOUTH HARWICH, a post-village in Barnstable co., Mass., 80 miles S. E. from Boston.

SOUTH HAVEN, a post-township in the W. part of Van Buren co., Mich. Pop., 220.

SOUTH HAWLEY, a post-village in Franklin co., Mass., 105 miles W. by N. from Boston.

SOUTH HENRIETTA, a post-office of Jackson co., Michigan.

SOUTH HERMITAGE, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SOUTH HERO, an island in Lake Champlain, constituting the post-township of South Hero, which is a part of Grand Isle co., Vermont. Length, about 10 miles. Population, 705.

SOUTH HILL, a post-office of Steuben co., N. Y.

SOUTH HILL, a post-village of Bradford co., Pa., 150 miles N. by E. from Harrisburg.

SOUTH HILL, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., Virginia.

SOUTH HINGHAM, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts, 15 miles S. E. from Boston.

SOUTH HOLLOW, a post-village in Jo Daviess co., Illinois, near Mississippi river, 180 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

SOUTH HOPE, a post-office of Waldo co., Me.

SOUTH HUNTINGDON, a township of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, about 15 miles W. S. W. from Greensburg. Population, 862.

SOUTHINGTON, a post-village in Hartford co., Connecticut, 16 miles S. W. from Hartford, on the New Haven and Northampton or Canal railroad, contains 4 or 5 churches, and an academy. Pop. of the township, 2135.

SOUTHINGTON, a post-township in the W. part of Trumbull co., Ohio. Pop., 1013.

SOUTH JACKSON, a post-office of Waldo co., Me.

SOUTH JACKSON, a post-village in Jackson co., Michigan, 75 miles W. by S. from Detroit.

SOUTH KEENE, a small village in Keene township, Cheshire co., New Hampshire, on the Cheshire railroad, about 44 miles S. W. from Concord.

SOUTH KENT, a post-village in Litchfield co., Conn., 55 miles W. by S. from Hartford.

SOUTH KILLINGLY, a post-village in Windham co., Conn., 50 miles E. from Hartford.

SOUTH KINGSTON, a post-office of Rockingham co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH KINGSTON, a township in Washington co., Rhode Island, on the Stonington and Providence railroad, 22 miles S. from Providence, contains 1 bank. Population, 3807.

SOUTH KIRTLAND, a post-office of Lake co., O.

SOUTH KORTWRIGHT, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

SOUTH LANSING, a post-office of Tompkins co., New York.

SOUTH LEBANON, a township of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania, contains Lebanon, the county seat.

SOUTH LEE, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the Berkshire railroad, 125 miles W. by S. from Boston, contains a number of mills.

SOUTH LEEDS, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

SOUTH LINCOLN, a post-village in Penobscot co., Maine, 100 miles N. E. from Augusta.

SOUTH LIVONIA, a post-office of Livingston co., New York.

SOUTH LODI, a post-office of Seneca co., N. Y.

SOUTH LONDONDERRY, a post-office of Windham co., Vermont.

SOUTH LOWELL, a small village of Johnson co., North Carolina.

SOUTH LOWELL MILLS, a post-village of Orange co., North Carolina.

SOUTH LYME, a post-village in New London co., Connecticut, on the New Haven and New London railroad, about 40 miles E. from New Haven.

SOUTH LYNDEBOROUGH, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH LYON, a post-office of Oakland co., Michigan.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, a post-office of Hartford co., Connecticut.

SOUTH MARCELLUS, a post-office of Onondaga co., New York.

SOUTH MAXFIELD, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

SOUTH MERRIMACK, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH MIDDLEBOROUGH, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH MIDDLETON, a township of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, 7 miles S. from Carlisle. Population, 2252.

SOUTH MILFORD, a post-village of Worcester co., Mass. 30 miles S. W. of Boston.

SOUTH MILFORD, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

SOUTH MILFORD, a village of Sussex county, Delaware, on the right bank of Mispillion creek, opposite Milford, 21 miles S. S. E. from Dover. Ship building constitutes the chief business of the village. It has 1 church, 3 stores, and about 350 inhabitants.

SOUTH MILFORD, a post-office of Cecil co., Maryland.

SOUTH MILFORD, a post-office of La Grange co., Indiana.

SOUTH MILLS, a post-office of Camden co., North Carolina.

SOUTH MILTON, a post-office of Strafford co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH MOLUNCUS, a post-office of Aroostook co., Maine.

SOUTH MONTVILLE, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

SOUTH NASHVILLE, a flourishing town of Davidson county, Tennessee, on the left bank of Cumberland river, may be regarded as a suburb of the city of Nashville, although it was separately incorporated in 1850. Since that time it has rapidly increased in population and importance. It has 3 churches, and several male and female schools; one of these is a free school, supported by a public tax, and attended by 150 pupils of both sexes--probably the only school of the kind in Tennessee. The ground was presented to the public by John Trimble, Esq. Population in 1853, about 3000.

SOUTH NATICK, a post-village in Middlesex co., Mass., 16 miles S. W. by W. from Boston.

SOUTH NEW BERLIN, a post-village of Chenango co., New York, about 100 miles W. from Albany.

SOUTH NEWBURG, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

SOUTH NEWBURY, a post-office of Merrimack co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH NEWBURY, a post-office of Orange co., Vermont.

SOUTH NEWCASTLE, a post-office of Gallia co., Ohio.

SOUTH NEWMARKET, a post-office of Rockingham co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH NEWPORT, a small post-village of McIntosh co., Georgia, 40 miles S. W. from Savannah.

SOUTH NEWRY, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

SOUTH NORWALK, formerly OLD WELL, a seaport and post-village of Fairfield co., Connecticut, on the right bank of the Norwalk river, near its mouth, and on the New York and New Haven railroad, 33 miles W. S. W. from New Haven. The inhabitants are largely engaged in the manufacture of felt beaver hats. Steamboats ply between the village and New York. May 6th, 1853, a locomotive and two passenger cars were here precipitated through an open drawbridge, and 47 lives lost.

SOUTHOLD, a post-township of Suffolk co., New York, borders on Long Island sound and Great Peconic bay. Population, 4723.

SOUTHOLD, a post-village in the above township, on the Long Island railroad, 91 miles E. by N. from New York. It contains several churches.

SOUTH OLIVE, a post-office of Morgan co., O.

SOUTH ONONDAGA, a post-office of Onondaga co., New York.

SOUTH ORANGE, a post-office of Essex co., New Jersey.

SOUTH ORLEANS, a post-office of Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH ORNEVILLE, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

SOUTH ORRINGTON, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

SOUTH OTSELIC, a post-office of Chenango co., New York.

SOUTH OWEGO, a post-office of Tioga co., New York.

SOUTH OXFORD, a post-office of Chenango co., New York.

SOUTH OYSTER BAY, a post-office of Queen's co., New York.

SOUTH PARIS, a thriving post-village in Paris township, Oxford co., Maine, on the Little Androscoggin river, and St. Lawrence and Atlantic railroad, about 38 miles S. W. by W. from Augusta. It contains 2 churches, an academy, 6 stores, 1 woollen mill, 2 saw mills, and 2 grist mills.

SOUTH PARKMAN, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

SOUTH PARSONFIELD, a post-office of York co., Maine.

SOUTH PERRY, a small post-village of Hocking co., Ohio, 16 miles S. W. from Logan.

SOUTH PITTSBURG, a borough of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the left or south bank of the Monongahela river, opposite Pittsburg, and immediately above the confluence of that river with the Alleghany. It is connected with the city by a bridge 1500 feet long. Here are extensive manufactures of iron and glass. Pop. in 1850, 1883; in 1853, about 2500.

SOUTH PLYMOUTH, a post-office of Plymouth co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH PLYMOUTH, a post-office of Chenango co., New York.

SOUTH PLYMOUTH, a post-office of Fayette co., Ohio.

SOUTH PLYMOUTH, a post-office of Wayne co., Michigan.

SOUTH POINT, a post-office of Lincoln co., North Carolina, 177 miles W. from Raleigh.

SOUTH POINT, a small village of Franklin co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, 60 miles from its mouth, has a good landing.

SOUTH POMFRET, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

SOUTHPORT, a township in Lincoln co., Maine. Population, 543.

SOUTHPORT, a beautiful post-borough in Fairfield township, Fairfield co., Connecticut, on the coast, and on the New York and New Haven railroad, 24 miles S. W. from New Haven. It contains 3 churches, 1 bank, 1 academy, and a school house, erected at a cost of about $7000. It has a good harbor (which has been improved by appropriations from Congress) for vessels of 100 tons. The tonnage belonging to this port amounts to 25,000 tons, probably the greatest in proportion to its size owned in any place in the United States. Within the borough limits is a portion of the swamp where the Pequots, in 1637, made their last stand, and were exterminated by the whites, commanded by Mason. Population in 1853, about 1200.

SOUTHPORT, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Chemung co., New York, intersected by the Erie railroad. Pop., 3184.

SOUTHPORT, a post-village in the above township, 2 miles S. from Elmira.

SOUTHPORT, a post-village of Marion co., Indiana, on the railroad between Madison and Indianapolis, 6 miles S. from the latter, contains 2 or 3 churches.

SOUTHPORT, a post-office of Peoria co., Ill.

SOUTHPORT, a township in the E. part of Kenosha co., Wisconsin. Population, 363.

SOUTHPORT VILLAGE, Wis. See KENOSHA.

SOUTH PRAIRIE, a post-village in Boone co., Illinois, 80 miles W. N. W. from Chicago.

SOUTH PROSPECT, a post-office of Waldo co., Maine.

SOUTH PULTNEY, a post-village of Steuben co., New York, about 210 miles W. by S. from Albany.

SOUTH QUAY, a post-office of Nansemond co., Virginia.

SOUTH RAYMOND, a post-office of Rockingham co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH READING, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

SOUTH READING, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 11 miles N. from Boston, on the Boston and Maine railroad, contains 2 or 3 churches and an academy. Population of the township, 2407.

SOUTH RICHLAND, a post-office of Oswego co., New York.

SOUTH RIDGE, a post-office of Ashtabula co., Ohio.

SOUTH RIVER, New Jersey. See MANALAPAN BROOK.

SOUTH RIVER, of Virginia, a small branch of the Shenandoah, rises in Augusta county, flows in a north-easterly course, and unites with the other main branch at Port Republic, in Rockingham county.

SOUTH RIVER, of North Carolina, forms the boundary between Bladen and New Hanover counties, and enters Cape Fear river about 10 miles N. W. from Wilmington.

SOUTH RIVER, of Iowa, enters Des Moines river near the E. line of Polk county.

SOUTH RIVER, a post-office of Middlesex co., New Jersey.

SOUTH RIVER, a post-office of Anne Arundel co., Maryland.

SOUTH RIVER, a township in Marion co., Missouri. Population, 757.

SOUTH ROYALSTON, a post-office of Worcester co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH ROYALTON, a post-office of Windsor co., Vermont.

SOUTH ROYALTON, a post-office of Niagara co., New York.

SOUTH RUTLAND, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

SOUTH RYEGATE, a post-office of Caledonia co., Vermont.

SOUTH ST. GEORGE, a post-office of Lincoln co., Maine.

SOUTH SALEM, a post-village of Westchester co., N. Y., about 120 miles S. from Albany.

SOUTH SALEM, a post-village of Ross co., Ohio, 16 miles S. W. from Chillicothe.

SOUTH SALUDA, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

SOUTH SANDFORD, a post-office of York co. Me.

SOUTH SANDWICH, a post-village in Barnstable co., Mass., 60 miles S. E. from Boston.

SOUTH SANGERVILLE, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

SOUTH SCHODAC, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

SOUTH SCITUATE, a post-village in Plymouth co., Massachusetts, 25 miles S. E. from Boston. Population of the township, 1770.

SOUTH SCITUATE, a post-office of Providence co., Rhode Island.

SOUTH SEBEC, a post-office of Piscataquis co., Maine.

SOUTH SEEKONK, a post-village of Bristol co., Mass., 45 miles S. S. W. from Boston.

SOUTH SHAFTSBURY, a post-office of Bennington co., Vermont.

SOUTH SHENANGO, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, intersected by Shenango creek. Population, 1664.

SOUTH SHREWSBURY, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 35 miles W. by S. from Boston.

SOUTH SIDE, a post-office of Richmond co., New York.

SOUTH SODUS, a post-village of Wayne co., New York, about 190 miles W. by N. from Albany.

SOUTH SOLON, a post-office of Somerset co., Maine.

SOUTH SOLON, a small post-village of Madison co., Ohio, 56 miles W. from Columbus.

SOUTH STEPHENTOWN, a post-office of Rensselaer co., New York.

SOUTH STERLING, a post-office of Wayne co., Pennsylvania.

SOUTH STODDARD, a post-office of Cheshire co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH STOW, a small village in Stow township, Lamoille co., Vermont, about 18 miles N. E. by N. from Montpelier.

SOUTH STRABANE, a township of Washington co., Pennsylvania, about 24 miles S. S. W. from Pittsburg. Population, 1391.

SOUTH STRAFFORD, a post-office of Orange co., Vermont.

SOUTH TANWORTH, a post-office of Carroll co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH THOMASTON, a post-township of Lincoln co., Maine, on Penobscot bay, 40 miles S. E. by E. from Augusta. Pop., 1420.

SOUTH THOMPSON, a post-office of Geauga co., Ohio.

SOUTH THURSTON, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

SOUTH TRENTON, a post-office of Oneida co., New York.

SOUTH TYRINGHAM, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, 120 miles W. by S. from Boston.

SOUTH UNION, a small post-village of Logan co., Ky., 165 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

SOUTH VALLEY, a post-village of Otsego co., N. Y., about 12 miles E. from Cooperstown.

SOUTH VASSALBOROUGH, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

SOUTH VERNON, a village in Windham co., Vt., on Conn. river, at the junction of the Conn. River and the Brattleborough Branch railroads, 100 miles S. by E. from Montpelier.

SOUTHVILLE, a post-village of Litchfield co., Conn., on the left bank of Housatonic river, 30 miles N. W. from N. Haven. Pop. about 200.

SOUTHVILLE, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, on St. Regis river, about 220 miles N. N. W. from Albany.

SOUTHVILLE, a post-village in Shelby co., Kentucky, 31 miles W. N. W. from Frankfort.

SOUTH WALDEN, a post-office of Caledonia co., Vermont.

SOUTH WALDEN, a post-office of Middlesex co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH WALES, a post-village of Erie co., New York, 21 miles S. E. from Buffalo.

SOUTH WALLINGFORD, a post-office of Rutland co., Vermont.

SOUTH WALPOLE, a post-office of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

SOUTHWARK, a district of Philadelphia co., and suburb of Philadelphia, on the Delaware river, immediately S. of the city proper, from which it is separated by Cedar or South street. It extends from the river westward to the Passyunk road. It contains an extensive navy-yard of the United States, several ship-yards, a shot-tower, and other manufactories. The district is governed by a board of commissioners. Pop. in 1850, 38,799.—See PHILADELPHIA.

SOUTH WARREN, a post-office of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

SOUTH WARSAW, a post-office of Wyoming co., New York.

SOUTH WATERFORD, a post-office of Oxford co., Maine.

SOUTH WEARE, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

SOUTH WELLFLEET, a post-office of Barnstable co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH-WEST, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Warren co., Pa. Pop., 390.

SOUTH WESTERLOO, a post-village of Albany co., New York, 20 miles S. W. from Albany.

SOUTH-WEST HARBOR, a post-village in Hancock co., Me., 114 miles E. by S. from Augusta.

SOUTH-WEST OSWEGO, a post-office of Oswego co., New York.

SOUTH WESTPORT, a post-village in Bristol co., Massachusetts, 60 miles S. from Boston.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, a post-village of Norfolk co., Massachusetts.

SOUTH WHITEHALL, a post-township of Lehigh co., Pennsylvania, on the right side of the Lehigh river, about 6 miles N. W. from Allentown. Population, 2913.

SOUTH WHITLEY, a post-office of Whitley co., Ind. about 95 miles N. by E. from Indianapolis.

SOUTHWICK, a post-township in Hampden co., Massachusetts, 100 miles W. by S. from Boston. Population, 1120.

SOUTH WILBRAHAM, a post-village of Hampden co., Massachusetts, has 2 churches.

SOUTH WILLIAMSTOWN, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, 130 miles W. by N. from Boston, contains 1 or 2 churches.

SOUTH WILSON, a post-office of Niagara co., New York.

SOUTH WINDHAM, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

SOUTH WINDHAM, a post-office of Windham co., Vermont.

SOUTH WINDHAM, a post-office of Windham co., Connecticut.

SOUTH WINDSOR, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

SOUTH WINDSOR, a new post-township in Hartford co., Connecticut, on the E. side of Connecticut river, 8 miles N. E. from Hartford. Population, 1638.

SOUTH WOLFBOURGH, a post-village in Carroll co., N. H., 35 miles N. E. from Concord.

SOUTH WOODBURY, a township of Bedford co., Pennsylvania, 22 miles S. from Hollidaysburg. Population, 1847.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK, a post-village in Windsor co., Vermont, 50 miles S. by E. from Montpelier.

SOUTH WORCESTER, a post-village of Otsego co., N. Y., about 60 miles W. by S. from Albany.

SOUTH WRENTHAM, a post-village Norfolk co., Mass., 25 miles S. W. from Boston, contains a bank, and about 500 inhabitants.

SOUTH YADKIN, a small stream of North Carolina, which enters the Yadkin from the right, about 9 miles N. from Salisbury.

SOUTH YAM HILL, a post-office of Polk co., Oregon.

SOUTH YARMOUTH, a post-village in Barnstable co., Mass., 80 miles S. E. from Boston.

SOUTH YUBA RIVER, Cal. See DEER CREEK.

SOUVIE'S ISLAND, a post-office of Clark co., Oregon.

SOWHATCHEE CREEK, of Early co., Georgia, flows into the Chattahoochee river.

SOXVILLE, a post-village of Monroe co., Pa., 131 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

SPADRA, a township in Johnson co., Arkansas. Population, 1209.

SPADRA BLUFF, a small post-village of Johnson co., Arkansas.

SPAFFORD, a post-township of Onondaga co., New York, on the E. side of Skaneateles lake. Population, 1903.

SPAFFORD HOLLOW, a post-village of Onondaga co., New York, about 140 miles W. from Albany.

SPAFFORDSBURG, a post-office of Benton co., Kentucky.

SPANGSVILLE, a post-office of Berks co., Pa.

SPANISH BLUFFS, a small village of Bowie county, Texas, on Red river, about 12 miles N. from Boston, has a landing for steamboats.

SPANISH CREEK, of Pike co., Ohio, flows into the Scioto river.

SPANISH LAKE, of Louisiana, is connected with the right bank of Red river, a few miles above Natchitoches. Length, about 12 miles.

SPANISH PRAIRIE, a post-village of Crawford co., Missouri, about 48 miles S. E. from Jefferson City.

SPARTA, a post-township in the S. part of Livingston co., New York. Population, 1372.

SPARTA, a new township in the S. E. part Sussex co., New Jersey. Population, 1919.

SPARTA, a flourishing post-village of Sussex county, New Jersey, about 66 miles N. by E. from Trenton, contains 2 churches, 2 seminaries, 5 stores, 6 iron forges, 6 mills, and 1 shingle manufactory. Population, about 500.

SPARTA, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Crawford co., Pa. Pop., 884.

SPARTA, a post-office of Washington co., Pa.

SPARTA, a post-office of Caroline co., Va.

SPARTA, a post-village in Edgecomb co., North Carolina, 84 miles E. from Raleigh.

SPARTA, a thriving post-village, capital of Hancock county, Georgia, 24 miles N. E. from Milledgeville. It is distinguished for activity of business, and for its excellent schools. It contains 3 churches, 2 academies, and 1 cotton factory. Population, about 800.

SPARTA, a post-village, capital of Conecuh county, Alabama, on a small affluent of Conecuh river, 100 miles S. S. W. from Montgomery. The railroad projected from Mobile to Columbus, in Georgia, will pass through or near this village. It contains a court house, a jail, Masonic hall, 3 stores, and about 200 inhabitants. It became the county seat in 1822.

SPARTA, a post-village of Chickasaw co., Mississippi, 140 miles N. N. E. from Jackson.

SPARTA, a pleasant and thriving post-village, capital of Bienville parish, Louisiana, is situated on a level plain, having a sandy soil, and watered by never-failing springs. Groves of holly and sweet bay, in the vicinity, present at all seasons a green and spring-like appearance. The village contains a flourishing seminary.

SPARTA, a post-village, capital of White co., Tennessee, on the route of the South-western railroad, about 85 miles E. by S. from Nashville, with which it is connected by a turnpike-road. It has a court house, jail, a bank, 1 newspaper office, and several stores.

SPARTA, a thriving village of Owen county, Kentucky, on Eagle creek, about 35 miles N. from Frankfort. It has an extensive flouring mill, and a saw mill.

SPARTA, a post-village of Morrow co., Ohio, 35 miles N. N. E. from Columbus.

SPARTA, a village of Stark co., Ohio, on the Nimishillen creek, 68 miles S. from Cleveland.

SPARTA, a post-office of Hillsdale co., Mich.

SPARTA, a township in the N. W. part of Kent co., Michigan. Population, 309.

SPARTA, a post-township in Dearborn co., Indiana. Population, 1598.

SPARTA, a township in Noble co., Indiana. Population, 590.

SPARTA, a thriving post-village of Randolph co., Ill., on the route of the Illinoistown and Massac railroad, 113 miles S. from Springfield. It has 4 newspaper offices.

SPARTA, a small post-village of Buchanan county, Missouri, about 200 miles N. W. of Jefferson City. Since the removal of the county seat to St. Joseph, Sparta has declined.

SPARTA, a post-office of La Crosse co., Wis.

SPARTA CENTRE, a post-office, Kent co., Mich.

SPARTANBURG, a district in the N. W. part of South Carolina, bordering on North Carolina, has an area of 950 square miles. It is bounded on the S. W. by the Ennoree river, on the N. E. by Broad river, and intersected by the Tiger and Pacolet rivers, all of which flow south-eastward. The surface is hilly. The soil is productive, and well watered. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this district produced 873,654 bushels of corn; 112,993 of wheat; 153,562 of oats, and 80,429 of sweet potatoes. There were 2 iron foundries, 5 saw and planing mills, 1 yarn manufactory, 12 machine shops, and 9 tanneries. It contained 60 churches, 1 newspaper office, 1000 pupils attending public schools, and 175 attending academies or other schools. Gold mines are worked in the district, and yield large profits. Iron ore of the finest quality, and in immense quantities, is found, and it also contains extensive quarries of limestone. Glenn spring, of this district, has become a fashionable watering-place. It is said to contain sulphur and magnesia. A railroad is projected from Spartanburg, the seat of justice, to the Greenville and Columbia railroad. Population, 26,400; of whom 18,361 were free, and 8039, slaves.

SPARTANBURG, or SPARTANBURG COURT HOUSE, a thriving post-village, capital of Spartanburg district, South Carolina, 98 miles N. N. W. from Columbia. Splendid buildings for a college, under the direction of the Methodists, are going up at this place; ample provision having been made by the bequest of Benjamin Wofford. The Spartanburg and Union railroad is in course of construction, from this point to the Greenville and Columbia railroad, a distance of 66 miles.

SPARTANBURG, a post-village of Randolph co., Indiana, 20 miles N. from Richmond.

SPARTANBURG, a post-office of Crawford co., Pennsylvania.

SPARTAPOLIS, a post-village in Rockingham co., Va., 142 miles N. W. from Richmond.

SPAVA, a post-office of Fulton co., Illinois.

SPAVINAU, a post-office of Benton co., Ark.

SPEAR'S STORE, a post-office of Union parish, Louisiana.

SPECKLED MOUNTAIN, in Oxford co., Maine, near the boundary line of New Hampshire, is about 4000 feet high.

SPEEDSVILLE, a post-village of Tompkins co., New York, near West Owego creek, 16 miles S. E. from Ithaca. It has several factories and stores.

SPEEDWELL, a post-office of Wythe co., Va.

SPEEDWELL, a post-village in Barnwell district, South Carolina, 115 miles S. S. W. from Columbia.

SPEEDWELL, a post-village of Claiborne co., Tennessee, 210 miles E. by N. from Nashville.

SPEEDWELL, a post-office of Madison co., Ky.

SPEEDWELL, a small village of St. Clair co., Missouri.

SPEER'S LANDING, a post-office of Shelby co., Ohio.

SPEERTOWN, a village of Essex co., New Jersey, 7 miles N. from Newark.

SPEERVILLE, a post-village of Fulton co., Pa., 83 miles W. S. W. from Harrisburg.

SPEIGHT'S BRIDGE, a post-village in Greene co., North Carolina, 79 miles E. S. E. from Raleigh.

SPEIR'S TURNOUT, a post-village of Jefferson co., Georgia.

SPENCER, a county in the N. part of Kentucky, contains an area estimated at 280 square miles. It is drained by the Salt river, and by Brashear's creek. The surface is undulating and hilly, and the soil fertile. The staples are corn, wheat, oats, hemp, tobacco, and grass. In 1850 this county produced 775,878 bushels of corn; 55,614 of wheat, and 109,215 of oats. It contained 10 churches, 139 pupils attending public schools, and 107 attending academies or other schools. The rock which is commonly found near the surface is limestone. The water-power of the river has recently been improved by the erection of cotton and woollen factories. Organized in 1824, and named in honor of Captain Spear Spencer, who fell at the battle of Tippecanoe. Capital, Taylorsville. Population, 6842; of whom 4691 were free, and 2151, slaves.

SPENCER, a county in the S. W. part of Indiana, bordering on the Ohio river, contains 390 square miles. It is drained by Little Pigeon and Crooked creeks. The surface is level in the S., and hilly in the N. and E.: the soil is mostly fertile. Wheat, corn, oats, tobacco, and pork are the chief productions. In 1850 the county yielded 598,135 bushels of corn; 19,777 of wheat; 36,916 of oats, and 1697 tons of hay. It contained 13 churches, 1 newspaper office; 980 pupils attending public schools, and 280 attending academies or other schools. The county contains abundance of bituminous coal. Organized in 1818. Capital, Rockport. Population, 8616.

SPENCER, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, on the Western railroad, 62 miles W. S. W. from Boston, contains 2 or 3 churches. Population of the township, 2244.

SPENCER, a post-village in Spencer township, Tioga co., New York, about 20 miles S. from Ithaca. It contains 2 or 3 churches, and several mills. Population, estimated at 500; of the township, 1782.

SPENCER, a post-village in Davidson co., North Carolina, 190 miles W. from Raleigh.

SPENCER, a small post-village, capital of Van Buren co., Tennessee, 90 miles S. E. from Nashville.

SPENCER, a small village of White co., Tenn.

SPENCER, a thriving post-village of Allen co., Ohio, on the Miami Extension canal, about 110 miles N. W. from Columbus. Laid out in 1845. The canal furnishes extensive water-power. Population in 1853, near 500.

SPENCER, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Guernsey co., Ohio. Pop., 1847.

SPENCER, a township in the S. E. part of Hamilton co., Ohio, on the right bank of the Ohio river, and on the Little Miami railroad. Population, 1656.

SPENCER, a township in Lucas co., Ohio. Population, 273.

SPENCER, a post-township in the W. part of Medina co., Ohio. Population, 1336.

SPENCER, a township of Jennings co., Indiana. Population, 1390.

SPENCER, a post-village, capital of Owen county, Indiana, on the W. fork of the White river, 54 miles S. W. from Indianapolis. Grain and other articles are shipped from this place by the river. Spencer contains a court house, 2 or 3 churches, and several warehouses.

SPENCERPORT, a post-village of Monroe co., New York, on the Erie canal, 12 miles W. from Rochester. It has several mills and stores.

SPENCERSBURG, a post-village in Pike co., Missouri, 80 miles N. E. from Jefferson City.

SPENCERTOWN, a post-village of Columbia co., New York, 30 miles S. S. E. from Albany.

SPENCERVILLE, a post-office of Marengo co., Alabama.

SPENCERVILLE, a post-village in De Kalb co., Indiana, on an affluent of the Maumee river, 135 miles N. E. by N. from Indianapolis.

SPEONK, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

SPERRYVILLE, a small post-village of Rappahannock co., Virginia, about 120 miles N. W. from Richmond. A turnpike extends from this village to the Rappahannock river.

SPICELAND, a post-township in Henry co., Indiana. Population, 1344.

SPICELAND, a post-office of Henry co., Ind.

SPICERVILLE, a small village of Gloucester co., New Jersey, on Racoon creek.

SPICE VALLEY, a township in Lawrence co., Indiana. Population, 946.

SPIGGOT (or SPICKET) RIVER, a small stream, rises in Rockingham co., N. H., and falls into the Merrimack river in Massachusetts.

SPINNERSTOWN, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, 91 miles E. from Harrisburg.

SPIRIT CREEK, of Richmond co., Georgia, flows E. into the Savannah river.

SPIRIT LAKE, or MILLE LACS, a lake in Ramsey co., Minnesota Territory. It is about 18 miles long and 14 wide. It discharges its waters through Rum river into the Mississippi.

SPIRIT LAKE, in Dickinson co., Iowa, is the largest lake in that state. Length, near 10 miles; greatest breadth, about 7 miles.

SPLUNG, a post-office of Monroe co., Miss.

SPOON RIVER, Illinois, rises in the W. N. W. part of the state, and flowing southerly, falls into the Illinois river, near Havauna, in Mason county. Its entire length considerably exceeds 100 miles.

SPORTING HILL, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

SPORTING HILL, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SPOTTEDVILLE, a post-village of Stafford co., Virginia, 69 miles N. from Richmond.

SPOTTSVILLE, a small village of Henderson co., Kentucky, on Green river, 6 miles from its mouth. Tobacco and corn are shipped here.

SPOTTSWOOD, a post-village of Middlesex county, New Jersey, on South river, and on the Camden and Amboy railroad, 26 miles E. N. E. from Trenton, contains 3 stores, 2 churches, 2 mills, 2 tobacco manufactories, and 60 dwellings.

SPOTTSYLVANIA, a county in the E. part of Virginia, has an area of 400 square miles. The Rappahannock forms the boundary on the N. E., the North Anna river on the S. W., and the Mattaponi rises within its limits. The surface is pleasantly diversified by hill and dale. The soil is generally fertile in the vicinity of the streams. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, and pork are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 265,753 bushels of corn; 102,953 of wheat; 47,347 of oats; 1279 tons of hay, and 52,056 pounds of butter. It contained 2 flour mills and 2 tanneries; 20 churches, 6 newspaper offices, 300 pupils attending public schools, and 461 attending academies and other schools. Two gold mines were worked in this county in 1850; granite and freestone are abundant. A canal about 45 miles long has been opened along the Rappahannock, above the falls, and the county is intersected by the Richmond and Potomac railroad. The Rappahannock affords valuable water-power at Fredericksburg. Organized in 1720, and named in honor of Alexander Spotswood, at that time governor of Virginia. Capital, Spottsylvania Court House. Population, 14,911; of whom 7430 were free, and 7481, slaves.

SPOTTSYLVANIA COURT HOUSE, a post-village, capital of Spottsylvania co., Virginia, on the Po river, 65 miles N. from Richmond.

SPOUT SPRING, a post-office of Appomattox co., Virginia.

SPRAGG'S, a post-office of Greene co., Pa.

SPRAGUE'S FALLS, a post-office of Washington co., Maine.

SPRAGUEVILLE, a post-village in Jackson co., Io., 70 miles N. E. by E. from Iowa City.

SPRAKER'S BASIN, a post-village of Montgomery co., New York, on the Erie canal, 48 miles W. by N. from Albany.

SPREAD EAGLE, a post-village of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles W. N. W. from Philadelphia.

SPREAD OAK, a post-village of Jefferson co., Georgia.

SPRING, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Adams co., Ohio. Pop., 2684.

SPRING, a township of Centre co., Pennsylvania, 4 miles S. from Bellefonte. Pop. 2280.

SPRING, a post-township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Beaver and Erie canal. Population, 1836.

SPRING, a post-borough in the above township, on Conneaut creek, and on the Beaver and Erie canal, 18 miles N. W. from Meadville. Population, about 300.

SPRING, a township of Perry co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1282.

SPRING, a post-office of Henry co., Georgia.

SPRING ARBOR, a post-township in the S. W. part of Jackson co., Michigan. Pop., 1075.

SPRING BAY, a post-village of Woodford co., Illinois, on the E. shore of Peoria lake, about 12 miles above Peoria. It has a steamboat landing and an active business in shipping produce.

SPRINGBOROUGH, a post-village of Clear Creek township, Warren co., Ohio, on Clear creek, 37 miles N. by E. from Cincinnati. It contains a woollen factory, and 2 flouring mills. Population in 1853, about 600.

SPRINGBOROUGH, a post-office of White co., Indiana.

SPRINGBROOK, a post-office of Erie co., N. Y.

SPRINGBROOK, a post-village in Jackson co., Iowa, 70 miles N. E. by E. from Iowa City.

SPRING CHURCH, a post-office of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania.

SPRING COTTAGE, a post-office of Marion co., Mississippi.

SPRING CREEK, of Centre co., Pennsylvania, flows into Bald Eagle creek.

SPRING CREEK, of Georgia, flows southward, and enters Flint river a few miles from its mouth.

SPRING CREEK, an affluent of San Jacinto river, Texas, forms the boundary between Harris and Montgomery counties.

SPRING CREEK, of Travis co., Texas, flows into the Colorado river, opposite Austin City.

SPRING CREEK, of Missouri, flows S. E. into Chariton river, in Adair county.

SPRING CREEK, a village of Dauphin co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles E. from Harrisburg, has about 200 inhabitants.

SPRING CREEK, a post-township of Warren co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles W. from Warren. Population, 601.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of Greenbrier co., Virginia.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of Brunswick co., North Carolina.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of Early co., Ga.

SPRING CREEK, a township in Phillips co., Arkansas. Population, 483.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of Randolph co., Arkansas.

SPRING CREEK, a township in Yell co., Arkansas. Population, 606.

SPRING CREEK, a post-village of Madison co., Tennessee, 137 miles W. S. W. from Nashville, has 3 stores, and about 75 inhabitants.

SPRING CREEK, a township in the N. E. part of Miami co., Ohio. Population, 1249.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of Berrien co., Michigan.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of Cass co., Ind.

SPRING CREEK, a post-office of McDonough co., Illinois.

SPRINGDALE, a small village of Lafayette co., Mississippi, 167 miles N. from Jackson.

SPRINGDALE, a post-office of Scott co., Ky.

SPRINGDALE, Ohio. See SPRINGFIELD.

SPRINGDALE, a township in Ottawa co., Michigan. Population, 545.

SPRINGDALE, a post-office of Harrison co., Indiana.

SPRINGDALE, a post-office of Cedar co., Io.

SPRINGDALE, a post-township in the S. W. part of Dane co., Wisconsin.

SPRINGERSVILLE, a post-village in Fayette co., Ind., 64 miles E. by S. from Indianapolis.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township in Penobscot co., Maine, 115 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 583.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in Sullivan co., New Hampshire, 38 miles N. W. from Concord. Population, 1270.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township in Windsor co., Vermont, on the W. side of Connecticut river, 73 miles S. from Montpelier. Population, 2762.

SPRINGFIELD, a city and seat of justice of Hampden county, Massachusetts, is situated on the left bank of the Connecticut river, at the intersection of the Connecticut Valley, and the New Haven Hartford and Springfield railroads with the Western railroad, 98 miles W. by S. from Boston, 58 miles S. from Brattleborough, Vermont, 102 miles E. S. E. from Albany, and 138 miles N. N. E. from New York. Lat. $42^{\circ} 6' 4''$ N., lon. $72^{\circ} 35' 45''$ W. This is one of the handsomest and most flourishing inland towns in the state. The various railways centring here bring to it an immense amount of travel; its natural advantages also render it one of the most important commercial depôts on the Connecticut. The city is pleasantly situated in the midst of varied and delightful scenery. The site comprises the level along the river bank, and the western portion of an elevated plain extending several miles eastward. Main street, the principal thoroughfare and seat of business, is a broad, handsome avenue, nearly 3 miles in length. This and other streets, parallel, or nearly parallel to it and the river, are intersected by those extending from the Connecticut to the plain above mentioned. In the centre is a beautiful enclosure, adorned with walks and shade trees. The buildings are generally constructed of brick. Among the public buildings may be mentioned the City Buildings, now in course of erection, and the churches, of which there are 12 or 13 of the various denominations. The condition of the 5 banks of the city, (September, 1852) was as follows:—Amount of circulation, \$895,483; amount of specie, \$55,060.59; proportion of circulation to one dollar of specie, \$16.66; amount of circulation and deposits, \$1,142,445.58; proportion of circulation and deposits to one dollar of specie, \$21.06.6. There are a large number of hotels in Springfield, affording excellent accommodation to the traveller. The means of education are liberally provided, especially in the public schools. Two newspapers are issued here. The United States arsenal, established at Springfield in 1795, is the most extensive in the Union. It is chiefly situated on an elevation called Arsenal Hill, about half a mile E. from Main street. The buildings are of brick, and arranged around a fine square of about 20 acres, presenting a handsome appearance. A cupola on one of them commands a beautiful view of the city and surrounding country. The machine shops occupy three different sites on Mill river, called the Upper, Middle, and Lower Water shops. These comprise near 20 waterwheels and about 30 forges. The entire establishment furnishes employment to from 250 to 300 hands, who annually turn out about 15,000 muskets. About 175,000 stand of arms are constantly stored in the arsenal. The water-power on Mill river is also employed for the manufacture of paper and iron, for various mechanic works, mill seats, &c. Besides these there are establishments in the city for the production of locomotives, railroad cars, and various kinds of machinery. Springfield is rapidly improving, especially the western section near the railroad depôt. Within a few years gas has been introduced for lighting the streets. Two bridges, one for the Western railroad, and another, 1324 feet in length, for ordinary travel, span the Connecticut at this point, communicating with West Springfield. Several ferries also ply between the two places, and during the season of navigation, a steamboat communicates with Hartford. Settled in 1635, under its Indian name, Agawam. In 1640 it received the name of Springfield. Incorporated a town in 1646, and as a city in 1852. Population in 1820, 3970; in 1830, 6784; in 1840, 10,958; in 1850, 11,766. Within the last ten years, however, the township of Chicopee, with a population of 8291, has been set off from Springfield. The population of the two places in 1850 amounted to 20,057, thus sustaining a uniform ratio of increase for 30 years. Population of Springfield in 1853, about 14,000.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township of Otsego co., New York, on Otsego lake, 11 miles N. E. from Cooperstown. Population, 2322.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of Burlington co., New Jersey, about 18 miles S. S. E. from Trenton. Population, 1827.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township of Essex co., New Jersey, on the New Jersey railroad, about 45 miles N. E. from Trenton. Pop., 1945.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village in the above township, on the Rahway river, near the Morris and Essex railroad, 8 miles W. from Newark, contains 10 paper, 1 saw, and 2 grist mills, 2 churches, 5 stores, and a number of hat and shoe manufactories. Pop., about 1400.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, about 16 miles W. N. W. from Towanda. Population, 2710.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, 20 miles N. N. W. from Doylestown. Population, 2259.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles W. S. W. from Philadelphia. Population, 1033.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the S. W. part of Erie co., Pennsylvania, on the lake, intersected by the Cleveland and Erie railroad. Population, 1946.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village in the above township, on the Ridge road, 21 miles S. W. from Erie, and about 3 miles from Lake Erie. It is well built, and is surrounded by a rich country.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the N. E. part of Fayette co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 1080.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, about 26 miles S. from Huntingdon. Population, 593.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of Mercer co., Pennsylvania, contains Mercer, the county seat. Entire population, 2279.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village of Mercer co., Pennsylvania.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, 14 miles N. N. W. from Philadelphia. Population, 743.

SPRINGFIELD, a township of York co., Pennsylvania, about 9 miles S. from York, intersected by the Baltimore and Susquehanna railroad. Population, 1345.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village of Hampshire co., Va., 197 miles N. W. from Richmond.

SPRINGFIELD, a village of Monroe co., Virginia, on Indian creek, about 245 miles W. from Richmond.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-office of Richmond co., North Carolina.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village, capital of Effingham co., Georgia, 27 miles N. W. from Savannah. It contains a court house, 3 churches, an academy, which is well endowed, and 2 stores.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village of Greene co., Ala., 112 miles W. N. W. from Montgomery.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village of Choctaw co., Mississippi.

SPRINGFIELD, a village in Madison co., Miss., 40 miles N. E. by N. from Jackson.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village of De Soto parish, Louisiana, on a small lake about 15 miles N. E. from Mansfield.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village, capital of Livingston parish, Louisiana, about 50 miles E. from Baton Rouge, and 10 miles N. from Lake Maurepas.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village, capital of Limestone co., Texas, on the Navasoto river, about 140 miles N. E. from Austin City.

SPRINGFIELD, a thriving post-village, capital of Conway co., Arkansas, about 40 miles N. by W. from Little Rock. Laid out in 1850. It contained, in 1851, a court house and 2 stores.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village of Scott co., Arkansas.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village, capital of Robertson co., Tennessee, on Sulphur fork of Red river, 25 miles N. from Nashville, with which it is connected by turnpike. Population, about 500.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village of Bath co., Ky. SPRINGFIELD, a post-village, capital of Washington county, Kentucky, 40 miles S. W. from Frankfort. It is surrounded by a fertile country, and has considerable business. It contains a court house, 3 churches, and about 700 inhabitants.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township in the S. central part of Clarke co., Ohio, contains the city of Springfield. Population, exclusive of the city, 2206.

SPRINGFIELD, a beautiful city, capital of Clarke county, Ohio, is situated on the National road, at the confluence of Mad river with Lagonda creek, 43 miles W. from Columbus, and 84 miles N. N. E. from Cincinnati. It is considered one of the most beautiful towns in Ohio, and is surrounded by a rich, populous, and highly cultivated country. Six macadamized roads terminate at this point, and railroads radiating in various directions connect it with the principal towns of the state: the four following lines are completed, viz. the Columbus and Springfield, 65 miles long; the Dayton and Springfield, 24 miles long; the Mad River and Lake Erie, 134 miles long, and the Springfield and Xenia, 20 miles long. Two others are in course of construction, which extend toward Mansfield, Mount Vernon, and Pittsburg. Wittenberg College, of this place, under the direction of the Lutheran Church, is situated a short distance without the town, and is surrounded by spacious grounds. Springfield contains about 10 churches, 2 banks, a flourishing seminary, a Lyceum, and 1 or 2 public libraries; 4 or 5 newspapers are published here. The Mad river and Lagonda creek are excellent streams for propelling machinery, affording permanent water-power here for 30 pair of stones. Within a distance of 3 miles there are more than 20 mill seats. A charter has been obtained for a hydraulic improvement, which it is estimated will be sufficient for 120 run of stone, besides the 30 which are now in operation. There are in the vicinity manufactories of cotton, wool, paper, and machinery, 1 or 2 iron foundries, besides numerous flouring mills. Laid out in 1803. The famous Indian chief Tecumseh was born about 5 miles W. from Springfield. Population, in 1840, 2094; in 1850, 5108, and in 1853, about 7000.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the N. E. part of Gallia co., Ohio. Population, 1230.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township in the central part of Hamilton co., Ohio, intersected by the Cincinnati Hamilton and Dayton railroad. Population, 3632.

SPRINGFIELD, or SPRINGDALE, a post-village in the above township, on the turnpike from Cincinnati to Hamilton, 15 miles N. from the former.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the N. W. part of Jefferson co., Ohio. Population, 1298.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the central part of Lucas co., Ohio. Population, 782.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the S. E. part of Mahoning co., Ohio. Population, 2385.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the S. W. part of Muskingum co., Ohio. Population, 1592.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the W. central part of Richland co., Ohio, intersected by Mansfield and Sandusky railroad. Population, 2100.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the E. central part of Ross co., Ohio, intersected by the Scioto river. Population, 1162.

SPRINGFIELD, a village in the above township, on the Zanesville and Maysville turnpike, 4 miles N. from Chillicothe.

SPRINGFIELD, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Summit co., Ohio. Pop., 1907.

SPRINGFIELD, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Williams county, Ohio. Pop., 782.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-township in the N. W. part of Oakland co., Michigan. Pop., 956.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in Allen co., Indiana. Population, 702.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village in Franklin co., Indiana, about 80 miles E. S. E. from Indianapolis.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in La Grange co., Indiana. Population, 760.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in La Porte co., Indiana. Population, 430.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village of Whitley co., Indiana, on Eel river, 95 miles N. by E. from Indianapolis. The post-office is South Whitley.

SPRINGFIELD, a flourishing post-town, capital of the State of Illinois, and seat of justice of Sangamon county, is situated 3 miles S. from Sangamon river, 96 miles N. N. E. from St. Louis, 70 miles S. from Peoria, and 230 miles S. W. from Chicago. Lat. 39° 48' N., lon. 89° 33' W. It is regularly planned, with wide, straight streets, having a public square in the centre, on which is situated the state house and other public buildings. The town contains a court house, 3 banks, a United States land-office, churches of various denominations, several academies, and hotels. Five or six newspapers are published here. Since the seat of government was established here in 1840, it has become a flourishing commercial town. At this point the Chicago and Mississippi railroad intersects the Great Western Central railroad, which extends from the Mississippi river across the state to Indiana. The western division of this line, extending from Springfield to the Illinois river, 55 miles, has been in operation several years, under the name of the Sangamon and Morgan railroad; the Eastern division is now in progress of construction. The Chicago and Mississippi road is completed for a distance of 130 miles, from Alton to Bloomington, where it intersects the Illinois Central railroad. This city is surrounded by rich and extensive prairies, which contain large quantities of bituminous coal. Laid out in 1822. Pop. in 1840, 2579; in 1853, about 6500.

SPRINGFIELD, capital of Greene county, Missouri, on the S. W. branch of the Pacific railroad, 130 miles S. W. from Jefferson. The situation is high and healthy, and the water excellent. Springfield has a city charter, and is the most important and flourishing town in S. W. Missouri. It contains a court house, a United States land-office, 2 newspaper offices, and 1 bank. Population in 1850, 415; in 1853, estimated at above 1000.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village in Keokuk co., Iowa, near the North fork of Skunk river, 55 miles S. W. from Iowa City.

SPRINGFIELD, a village in Muscatine co., Iowa, on Cedar river, 25 miles S. E. from Iowa City.

SPRINGFIELD, a small village, capital of Wayne co., Iowa, was laid out in 1851.

SPRINGFIELD, a township in the N. W. part of Dane co., Wisconsin.

SPRINGFIELD, a post-village of Dodge co., Wisconsin, about 14 miles S. from Fond du Lac.

SPRINGFIELD CENTRE, a post-office of Otsego co., New York.

SPRINGFIELD CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Erie co., Pennsylvania.

SPRINGFIELD FURNACE, a post-office of Blair co., Pennsylvania.

SPRINGFIELD MILLS, a post-office of Noble co., Indiana, on the Elkhart river, 134 miles N. N. E. from Indianapolis.

SPRING FORGE, a post-office of York co., Pa.

SPRING FORK, post-office, Pettis co., Mo.

SPRING GARDEN, a district of Philadelphia co., and suburb of Philadelphia, situated on the N. side of the city proper, and extending from Delaware Sixth street westward to the Schuylkill river, and from Vine street northward to a line running between Girard avenue and Poplar street. It contains the Eastern Penitentiary and the Fairmount Water-works. It is separately incorporated and is governed by a board of commissioners. Population in 1850, 58,894. See PHILADELPHIA.

SPRING GARDEN, a township of York co., Pennsylvania, contains York, the county seat. Entire population, 9298.

SPRING GARDEN, a post-village in Pittsylvania co., Virginia, 135 miles S. W. by W. from Richmond.

SPRING GARDEN, a post-office of New Hanover county, North Carolina.

SPRING GARDEN, a post-office of Cherokee co., Alabama.

SPRING GARDEN, a post-village of Jefferson co. Illinois, 145 miles S. by E. from Springfield.

SPRING GREEN, a township in Sauk co., Wisconsin.

SPRING GROVE, a small village of Iredell co., North Carolina.

SPRING GROVE, a post-village of Rowan co., North Carolina.

SPRING GROVE, a post-office of Laurens district, South Carolina.

SPRING GROVE, a post-office of Warren co., Illinois.

SPRING GROVE, a post-office of Linn co., Iowa.

SPRING GROVE, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Greene co., Wis. Pop., 703.

SPRING HILL, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Fayette co., Pennsylvania, on the left bank of Cheat river. Population, 1685.

SPRING HILL, a small village of Lenoir co., North Carolina.

SPRING HILL, a small village of York district, South Carolina.

SPRING HILL, a post-office of Hernando co., Florida.

SPRING HILL, a post-village of Marengo co., Alabama, 71 miles S. by W. from Tuscaloosa. It is the seat of a Catholic college of its own name, with a library of 7000 volumes.

SPRING HILL, a small post-village of Tip-pah co., Mississippi, on the Wolf river, 25 miles N. W. from Ripley.

SPRING HILL, a post-office of Union par., La.

SPRING HILL, a post-office of Navarro co., Texas.

SPRING HILL, a township in Drew co., Arkansas. Population, 627.

SPRING HILL, a decayed post-village of Hempstead co., Arkansas, 14 miles S. from the county seat.

SPRING HILL, a thriving post-village of Maury co., Tennessee, 30 miles S. from Nashville. It is situated in the midst of a populous and fertile district. Pop., about 500.

SPRING HILL, a small village of Calloway co., Kentucky.

SPRING HILL, a post-village of Decatur co., Indiana, 52 miles N. from Madison.

SPRING HILL, a post-village of Whitesides co., Ill., about 65 miles S. S. E. from Galena.

SPRING HILL, a post-village of Livingston co., Missouri.

SPRING HILL FURNACE, a post-office of Fayette co., Pennsylvania.

SPRING HILLS, a thriving post-village of Champaign co., Ohio, 14 miles N. from Urbana. Population in 1853, about 400.

SPRING HOUSE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania.

SPRING HOUSE, a post-office of Grainger co., Tennessee.

SPRING LAKE, a post-office of Williams co., O.

SPRING LAKE, a small village of Tazewell co., Illinois.

SPRING LAKE, a post-office of Washara co., Wisconsin.

SPRING MILL, a post-village of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Schuylkill river, 12 miles N. W. from Philadelphia, with which it is connected by railroad. It has 2 blast furnaces in active operation.

SPRING MILL, a post-office of Lawrence co., Indiana.

SPRING MILLS, a post-office of Alleghany co., New York.

SPRING MILLS, a village of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, 18 miles S. from Belvidere.

SPRING MILLS, a post-village of Centre co., Pennsylvania, on Penn's creek, 82 miles N. W. from Harrisburg. It contains several stores and mills.

SPRING MOUNTAIN, Pennsylvania, is situated in the W. part of Carbon county.

SPRING PLACE, a post-village, capital of Murray county, Georgia, 230 miles N. W. from Milledgeville. It is situated in the midst of mountainous country, with grand and beautiful scenery on every side. There are 40 springs of good water in the compass of half a mile. The village contains an academy and several stores.

SPRING PLACE, a post-village in Marshall co., Tenn., 66 miles S. from Nashville.

SPRINGPORT, a township of Cayuga co., New York, on the E. side of Cayuga lake, 10 miles S. W. from Auburn. Population, 2041.

SPRING PORT, a post-office of Panola co., Mississippi.

SPRINGPORT, a post-township in Jackson co., Michigan. Population, 759.

SPRING PRAIRIE, a post-township in the N. E. part of Walworth co., Wis. Pop., 1344.

SPRING PRAIRIE, a post-village in the above township, 31 miles S. W. from Milwaukee. It contains 3 stores, 1 hotel, and 1 Baptist church. Population, 200.

SPRING RIDGE, a post-office of Hinds co. Miss.

SPRING RIVER, a township in Lawrence co., Arkansas. Population, 966.

SPRING RIVER, a post-township in Lawrence co., Missouri. Population, 684.

SPRING RIVER, a small post-village of Lawrence co., Missouri, about 140 miles S. by E. from Independence.

SPRING RIVER, of Missouri and Arkansas, rises in the S. part of the former state, and flowing S. E. into Arkansas, enters Black river near the S. W. border of Randolph county.

SPRING ROCK, a post-office of Whitley co., Ky.

SPRING ROCK, a post-office of Clinton co., Io.

SPRING RUN, a post-village of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, is pleasantly situated in Path valley, 166 miles W. from Philadelphia.

SPRING RUN, a post-office of Louisa co., Io.

SPRING'S, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

SPRINGTOWN, a small village of Morris co., New Jersey, on the New Jersey Central railroad, about 45 miles N. from Trenton.

SPRINGTOWN, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, about 45 miles N. N. W. from Philadelphia.

SPRINGTOWN, a post-office of Polk co., Tenn.

SPRINGTOWN, a post-office of Hendricks co., Indiana, 26 miles S. W. from Indianapolis.

SPRINGTOWN, a post-office of Cole co., Mo.

SPRINGVALE, a post-village in York co., Maine, 86 miles S. W. from Augusta.

SPRINGVALE, a post-office of Fairfax co., Virginia.

SPRINGVALE, a post-office of Sampson co., North Carolina.

SPRINGVALE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Tennessee.

SPRINGVALE, a post-township in the E. central part of Columbia co., Wis. Pop., 471.

SPRINGVALE, a township in the N. W. part of Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin. Pop., 558.

SPRING VALLEY, a post-office of Rockland co., New York.

SPRING VALLEY, a post-office of Bergen co., New Jersey.

SPRING VALLEY, a small village of Morris co., N. J., 4 miles S. E. from Morristown.

SPRING VALLEY, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SPRING VALLEY, a thriving post-village of Greene county, Ohio, on the Little Miami railroad, 58 miles N. E. from Cincinnati. It has 1 woollen factory and a carding mill. Population in 1853, about 400.

SPRING VALLEY, a post-office of Marion co., Indiana.

SPRING VALLEY, a post-township in the S. W. part of Rock co., Wisconsin. Pop., 766.

SPRING VALLEY, a post-office of Polk co., Oregon.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village in Concord township, Erie county, New York, on Spring creek, 30 miles S. S. E. from Buffalo. It is situated in a rich farming district, and contains 3 or 4 churches, and several factories and mills. Population, estimated at 1000.

SPRINGVILLE, a thriving post-village of Chester county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river and canal, 33 miles N. W. from Philadelphia. It owes its existence to the large iron-works which were established here a few years since. Population, about 800.

SPRINGVILLE, a small village of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-township of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Lackawana and Western railroad, about 11 miles S. from Montrose. Population, 1148.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village in the above township, about 10 miles S. from Montrose, the county seat, and 155 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-office of Tazewell co., Virginia.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village of St. Clair co., Alabama, 140 miles N. from Montgomery.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village of Greenup co., Kentucky, on the Ohio river, opposite Portsmouth, in Ohio. It has a foundry, plough factory, and tannery.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village of Lenawee co., Michigan, 12 miles N. W. from Adrian.

SPRINGVILLE, a village of Laporte co., Indiana, on the plank-road from Michigan City to Niles, 10 miles E. from the former.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village of Lawrence co., Indiana, 11 miles N. W. from Bedford.

SPRINGVILLE, a small post-village of Coles co., Illinois, about 10 miles S. W. from Charleston.

SPRINGVILLE, a small village of Wayne co., Missouri, about 110 miles S. by W. from St. Louis.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-office of Linn co., Iowa.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-village of Bad Axe co., Wisconsin, on Bad Axe river.

SPRINGVILLE, a post-office of Utah co., Utah Territory.

SPRINGWATER, a post-township in the S. E. part of Livingston co., New York. Population, 2670.

SPRINGWATER, a post-village in the above township, on the Buffalo and Corning railroad, 50 miles S. E. from Batavia.

SPRINGWELL, a post-office of Chester district, South Carolina.

SPRING WELLS, a village of Wayne co., Michigan, on Detroit river, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. W. from the centre of Detroit. It may properly be regarded as a suburb of that city. Population in 1853, about 2000.

SPROUT BROOK, a post-office of Montgomery co., New York.

SPROUT CREEK, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

SPRUCE, a small post-village of Bates co., Missouri, about 65 miles S. S. E. from Independence.

SPRUCE CREEK, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania.

SPRUCE GROVE, a post-office of Monroe co., Pennsylvania.

SPRUCE HILL, a post-office of Juniata co., Pa.

SPRUCE HILL, a post-office of Highland co., Virginia.

SPRUCE MILLS, a post-office of Jackson co., Iowa.

SQUAM BAY, of Essex co., Massachusetts, extends up into the land about 4 miles.

SQUAM GROVE, a township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 341.

SQUAMLAKE, New Hampshire, between Grafton and Carroll counties. Extreme length, 7 or 8 miles; greatest breadth, about 4 miles. It is a beautiful sheet of water, surrounded with picturesque scenery. It contains a number of islands. The outlet called Squam river flows into the Pemigewasset.

SQUAN, a village of Ocean co., New Jersey, on the Atlantic coast, between Manasquan inlet and Metecunk rivers, contains a neat church, 2 stores, and several boarding houses for the reception of visitors. This place is often visited in the summer months for sea bathing. Population, about 200.

SQUANKUM, a post-village of Ocean co., New Jersey, on Manasquan river, 38 miles E. by S. from Trenton, contains a church and 2 mills.

SQUANSCOT RIVER. See EXETER RIVER.

SQUARE POND, a post-office of Tolland co., Connecticut.

SQUATTERVILLE, a town of Contra Costa co., California.

SQUAWBETTY, a post-office of Bristol co., Massachusetts.

SQUIRREL RIVER, of Marathon co., Wisconsin, flows into the Little Wisconsin river from the right.

STAATSBURG, a post-village and station of Dutchess co., New York, on the Hudson River railroad, 60 miles S. from Albany.

STAFFORD, a county in the E. part of Virginia, bordering on the Potomac river, which separates it from Maryland, has an area of 250 square miles. It is bounded on the south-west by the Rappahannock river, and also drained by Aquia, Potomac, and Accokeek creeks. The surface is hilly; the soil near the Potomac river is a light loam, moderately fertile; other parts are sandy and poor. Indian corn, wheat, oats, tobacco, and hay are the staples. In 1850 it produced 178,651 bushels of corn; 58,923 of wheat; 38,750 of oats, and 2018 tons of hay. There were 2 flour mills, 3 grist mills, 2 saw mills, and 2 cotton factories. It contained 12 churches, and 245 pupils attending public schools. Quarries of granite and freestone, suitable for building, have been opened, and gold has been found in small quantities. The Rappahannock affords excellent water-power at Falmouth. The county is intersected by the Richmond Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad. Organized in 1675, and named from Stafford, a county of England. Capital, Stafford Court House. Population, 8044; of whom 4733 were free, and 3311, slaves.

STAFFORD, a post-township of Tolland co., Connecticut, intersected by the New London, Willimantic, and Palmer railroad, 28 miles N. E. from Hartford. It contains three thriving manufacturing villages, viz. Staffordville, Stafford Hollow, and Stafford Springs. Stafford Springs, situated on the Willimantic river, and on the New London, Willimantic, and Palmer railroad, 50 miles N. by W. from New London, is celebrated for the medicinal properties of its waters, and is visited by persons from all parts of the Union. One of them contains a solution of iron, sustained by carbonic acid gas, some earthy substances, and an element called natron. This is regarded by chemists as one of the most efficacious chalybeate springs in the United States. The other, as analyzed by Professor Silliman, contains a large portion of hydrogen gas and sulphur, and a small proportion of iron. A splendid hotel has been erected here for the accommodation of visitors. The village of Stafford Springs has 2 churches, and 3 woollen manufactories. Population of the township, 2941.

STAFFORD, a post-village in Stafford township, Genesee co., New York, on the railroad from Batavia to Corning, 6 miles E. from the former. It contains 3 churches. Population of the township, 1974.

STAFFORD, a township of Ocean co., New Jersey, on Little Egg Harbor bay, about 53 miles S. E. from Trenton. Population, 1384.

STAFFORD, a post-office of Monroe co., Ohio.

STAFFORD, a township in De Kalb co., Indiana. Population, 372.

STAFFORD, a township in Greene co., Indiana. Population, 438.

STAFFORD COURT HOUSE, a small post-village, capital of Stafford co., Virginia, 76 miles N. from Richmond.

STAFFORD SPRINGS, a post-village in Stafford township, Tolland co., Connecticut, on the Willimantic river, near the New London Willimantic and Palmer railroad, about 30 miles N. E. from Hartford. It contains 5 stores, 3 cotton and woollen mills, and 2 churches. The medicinal springs situated at this place are much resorted to by invalids and tourists.

STAFFORD VILLAGE, a post-village in Stafford township, Genesee co., New York, contains 3 stores and 7 churches.

STAFFORDVILLE, a post-village in Stafford township, Tolland co., Connecticut, about 30 miles N. E. from Hartford. It contains 2 stores, 2 cotton mills, 1 machine shop, 1 foundry, and 1 church.

STAGEVILLE, a small village of Orange co., North Carolina.

STAGGVILLE, a post-village in Orange co., North Carolina.

STAHLSTOWN, a small post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, about 50 miles S. E. from Pittsburg.

STAIRWAY BROOK, a little village of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, on the New York and Erie railroad, 107 miles from New York city.

STAMFORD, a post-township in Bennington co., Vermont, 116 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 833.

STAMFORD, a flourishing post-borough of Fairfield co., Connecticut, near the mouth of Mill river, and on the New York and New Haven railroad, 40 miles S. W. from New Haven, and 36 miles N. E. from New York. A canal 180 rods in length, 30 feet in breadth, and 7 feet deep, has been constructed, extending to the bay, which sets up from Long Island sound, between Greenwich and Shipman's Points, affording a fine harbor for vessels drawing 8 feet of water. The borough has entirely changed in appearance during the last 10 years. It contains several fine churches, and many of the dwellings are very elegant. During the summer months it is much resorted to as a watering-place. Stamford has some trade with the ports along the coast; and its manufactures, particularly those of iron, are extensive. A bank is established here, and there is also an institution for savings, with $19,276 on deposit. The Stamford Advocate is published weekly. Population of the township in 1840, 3516; in 1850, 5000.

STAMFORD, a post-township in the N. E. part of Delaware co., New York. Pop., 1708.

STAMPER'S CREEK, a township in Orange co., Indiana. Population, 777.

STAMPING GROUND, a post-village of Scott co., Kentucky, 21 miles N. W. from Lexington, has 2 churches and several stores. The herds of buffalo which formerly resorted to this place for salt water, tramped down the underbrush—hence the origin of its name.

STANARDSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Greene co., Virginia, 92 miles N. W. from Richmond, and 5 miles S. E. from the Blue Ridge. The village has been much improved within a few years. It became the county seat in 1838.

STANDARDVILLE, a post-office of Carroll co., Tennessee.

STANDING ROCK, a post-office of Stewart co., Tennessee.

STANDINGSTONE, a post-township of Bradford co., Pennsylvania, on the North Branch canal, and the left bank of the Susquehanna river, 7 miles E. from Towanda.

STANDINGSTONE CREEK, of Pennsylvania, enters the Juniata, in Huntingdon county.

STANDISH, a post-township in Cumberland co., Maine, 58 miles S. W. from Augusta. Population, 2290.

STANFORD, a township in the N. part of Dutchess co., New York. Population, 2158.

STANFORD, a post-village, capital of Lincoln county, Kentucky, is situated 50 miles S. from Frankfort, and 1 mile from Logan's Old Fort. The village has a turnpike to Frankfort, and contains 2 or 3 churches, 1 academy, and about 10 stores. Population, near 800.

STANFORD, a small post-village of Monroe co., Ind., 60 miles S. W. from Indianapolis.

STANFORDVILLE, a post-village in Stanford township, Dutchess co., New York, on Wappinger's creek, about 20 miles N. E. from Poughkeepsie. It contains 2 or 3 places of worship.

STANFORDVILLE, a post-village of Putnam co., Georgia, about 22 miles N. W. from Milledgeville. It has 1 church, and 2 stores.

STANHOPE, a post-village of Sussex county, New Jersey, on the Morris canal and Musconetcong river, 52 miles N. by E. from Trenton, contains a mill, 2 stores, 3 iron forges, and from 50 to 60 dwellings.

STANHOPE, a post-village of Monroe co., Pa., 128 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

STANHOPE, a post-village of Nash co., North Carolina, 32 miles E. by N. from Raleigh.

STANISLAUS river, of California, rises on the slope of the Sierra Nevada, near the boundary between Tuolumne and Calaveras counties, and flowing first in a S. W. and then in a W. S. W. course, falls into the San Joaquin river, on the border between the county of that name and Tuolumne county, about 25 miles above Stockton.

STANLY, a county in the S. W. central part of North Carolina; area estimated at 280 square miles. The Yadkin river forms the entire boundary on the E., and Rocky river on the S. The surface is mountainous. The soil of the valleys produces wheat and Indian corn. In 1850 there were raised 31,267 bushels of wheat; 203,281 of corn, and 22,877 of oats. It contained 2 tanneries, 6 grist mills; 21 churches, 660 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending other schools. Numerous veins of gold are worked in the N. W. part of the county, yielding sometimes large profits, and a very valuable silver mine has recently been discovered. The Yadkin affords abundant motive-power in the vicinity of the Narrows. Formed in 1842, from a part of Montgomery. Capital, Albemarle. Population, 6922; of whom 5486 were free, and 1436, slaves.

STANTON, a post-office of Hunterdon co., New Jersey.

STANTON, a small post-village of New Castle co., Delaware, on the Philadelphia and Baltimore railroad, 6 miles W. by S. from Wilmington.

STANTON, a post-office of Bracken co., Ky.

STANTON CORNERS, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.

STANTONSBURG, a post-village in Edgecombe co., North Carolina.

STANTONVILLE, a post-village in Anderson district, South Carolina.

STANTONVILLE, a post-office of McNairy co., Tennessee.

STANTONVILLE, a post-office of Calumet co., Wisconsin.

STANWICH, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

STANWIX, a post-office of Oneida co., N. Y.

STAPLES' BRANCH, a post-office of San Joaquin co., California.

STABLETON, a post-village of Richmond co., New York, on the N. E. side of Staten Island, 7 miles S. by W. from New York. It contains the Seaman's Retreat, a hospital for sick or disabled sailors, supported by a tax paid by the masters and crews of vessels. The building is about 200 feet long by 50 wide, and 3 stories high, and is said to have cost $100,000.

STAR, a post-office of Assumption par., La.

STARFIELD, a post-office of Peoria co., Ill.

STAR FURNACE, a post-office of Carter co., Kentucky.

STARK, a county in the N. E. part of Ohio, has an area of about 570 square miles. It is traversed from N. to S. by the Tuscarawas river, and Nimishillen creek, and also drained by Sugar and Sandy creeks. The surface is rolling. The soil is a sandy loam, remarkably fertile and highly cultivated. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, wool, butter, cattle, and swine are the staples. Stark county has the distinction of producing more wheat and butter than any other county in the state. In 1850 there were raised 590,594 bushels of wheat; 578,171 of corn; 414,334 of oats; 41,746 tons of hay; 275,664 pounds of wool, and 1,211,021 of butter were made. It contained 98 churches, 6 newspaper offices, 12,726 pupils attending public schools, and 807 attending academies or other schools. Limestone underlies a large portion of the surface. Stone coal of good quality abounds in the S. E. part, and fine building stone is quarried near Massillon. The farmers find a ready market on the Ohio canal, which runs through the county. It is also intersected by the Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad, and by the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad. Nimishillen creek furnishes excellent water-power. Capital, Canton. Population, 39,878.

STARK, a county in the N. W. part of Indiana, contains 432 square miles. It is drained by the Yellow and Kankakee rivers. The surface is level, and mostly occupied by marshes, prairies, and small lakes. A part of the land is adapted to the rearing of cattle. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 11,170 bushels of corn; 3153 of wheat; 1160 of oats, and 698 tons of hay. There were 15 pupils attending public schools. Organized in 1849. Capital, Knox. Population, 557.

STARK, a county in the N. W. central part of Illinois, has an area of 290 square miles. It is intersected by Spoon river, an affluent of the Illinois. The county is divided between prairie and timbered land. The soil is good. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and hay are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 312,475 bushels of corn; 54,327 of wheat; 50,703 of oats, and 5630 tons of hay. It contained 1 church, and 483 pupils attending public schools. Named in honor of General Stark, of the Revolutionary war. Population, 3710.

STARK, a post-township in Coos co., New Hampshire, on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad, 90 miles N. from Concord. Population, 418.

STARK, a township of Herkimer co., New York, 10 miles S. from Little Falls. Population, 1576.

STARK, a township in Monroe co., Ohio. Population, 1109.

STARKEY, a post-township of Yates co., New York, on the W. side of Seneca lake. Population, 2675.

STARKEY, a post-village in the above township, on the Canandaigua and Elmira railroad, 32 miles N. from Elmira.

STARK'S, a post-township in Somerset co., Maine, on the W. side of Sandy river, about 33 miles N. by W. from Augusta. Pop., 1447.

STARKEBOROUGH, a post-township in Addison co., Vermont, 24 miles W. by S. from Montpelier. Population, 1400.

STARKEVILLE, a village in the N. E. part of Rensselaer co., New York.

STARKEVILLE, a post-village of Herkimer co., New York, about 60 miles W. N. W. from Albany.

STARKEVILLE, a post-village, capital of Lee co., Ga., 115 S. W. by S. from Milledgeville.

STARKEVILLE, a small post-village, capital of Oktibbeha co., Mississippi, 125 miles N.

E. from Jackson. It contains a court house and a few stores.

STARLINGTON, a post-office of Butler co., Alabama.

STARR, a county in the S. part of Texas, has an area of 4420 square miles. The Rio Grande forms its entire south-western boundary, separating it from the Mexican state of Tamaulipas. The county contains extensive prairies, which produce pasture, and support large droves of wild horses and cattle. The land is adapted to cotton, sugar-cane, and maize, but it is not cultivated to much extent. Named in honor of James H. Starr, secretary of the treasury of the republic of Texas. Capital, Rio Grande City.

STARR, a post-township in the S. E. part of Hocking co., Ohio. Population, 1045.

STARR'S POINT, a post-office of Benton co., Oregon.

STARSVILLE, a post-village of Newton co., Ga., about 60 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

STARUCCA creek rises in Wayne co., Pennsylvania, and enters the Susquehanna.

STARUCCA, a post-village of Wayne co., Pa., on Starucca creek, 180 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

STATE BRIDGE, a post-office of Oneida co., New York.

STATEBURG, a post-office of Sumter district, South Carolina.

STATE CENTRE, a small village of Marquette co., Wisconsin.

STATELAND, a small post-village of Choctaw co., Mississippi.

STATE LINE, a village and station of Columbia co., New York, on the line between New York and Massachusetts, and on the Western railroad, 38 miles S. E. from Albany.

STATE LINE, a village on Poultney river, Washington co., New York. The railroad from Rutland to Whitehall crosses the river at this village.

STATE LINE, a post-office of Franklin co., Pa.

STATE LINE, a post-office of Heard co., Ga.

STATE LINE, a post-office of Trumbull co., O.

STATE LINE, a post-office of McHenry co., Ill.

STATE LINE, a post-office of Walworth co., Wisconsin.

STATEN ISLAND, in New York bay, 5 or 6 miles S. W. from the city, is separated from New Jersey by Staten Island sound, and from Long Island by the Narrows, is about 14 miles long, and from 4 to 8 miles wide, constitutes the county of Richmond, and forms the southern extremity of the state. (See RICHMOND COUNTY, N. Y.) The northern portion of it, denominated Richmond Hill, rises from either shore into a beautifully rounded elevation, 307 feet above the level of the sea. This is occupied with many splendid mansions, and surrounded with the most enchanting scenery. A marine telegraph has been erected on a hill, near the Narrows. On a bluff, the E. side of the island, 10 miles N. N. W. from Sandy Hook, stands the Prince's Bay lighthouse, exhibiting a fixed light having 11 lamps, 29 feet 11 inches from its base, and 106 feet 11 inches above the level of the sea. Steam ferries connect Staten island with New York, and boats from Newark touch at different landings on the N. side.

STATE RIGHTS, a post-office of Oglethorp co., Ga., about 60 miles N. from Milledgeville.

STATE ROAD, a post-office of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania.

STATE ROAD, a post-office of Surry co., N.C.

STATESBOROUGH, a small post-village, capital of Bullock co., Georgia, 53 miles N. W. from Savannah. The village contains a court house, jail, and 2 stores.

STATESBURG, a post-village of Sumter district, South Carolina, about 35 miles E. by S. from Columbia.

STATESVILLE, a post-village, capital of Iredell co., North Carolina, on the Western turnpike, 27 miles W. by N. from Salisbury, and 145 miles W. from Raleigh.

STATESVILLE, a post-village of Wilson co., Tennessee, 17 miles S. E. from Lebanon, has a few stores, and about 300 inhabitants.

STATION, a post-office of Thomas co., Ga.

STAUNTON, a river in the S. part of Virginia, rises in Montgomery county, among the Alleghany mountains; flowing eastward and south-eastward, it passes through the Blue Ridge, falling nearly 1000 feet in a distance of 20 miles. After a very rapid and tortuous course of about 200 miles, it unites with Dan river at Clarksville, Mecklenburg county, constituting the Roanoke. The latter name is also applied by highly respectable writers to the whole stream just described. See ROANOKE RIVER.

STAUNTON, a flourishing town, capital of Augusta county, Virginia, is situated on a small branch of Shenandoah river, near its source, and on the Central railroad of Virginia, 120 miles W. N. W. from Richmond. The Central railroad, which is nearly completed from Richmond to Staunton, and will be extended to the Ohio river, will doubtless bring large accessions to the trade and population of this place. Staunton is the seat of the Western Lunatic Asylum, and of the Virginia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and blind. The blind are in the same building with the deaf and dumb, but under a separate instructor. It contains 4 or 5 churches, 2 academies, 2 female seminaries, and 2 banks. Three newspapers are published here. The surrounding country is highly productive, and beautifully diversified, forming part of the great valley of Virginia. In the limestone formation of this region extensive caverns occur, among which the most celebrated is Weyer's cave, about 18 miles N. E. from Staunton. Pop., about 2500.

STAUNTON, a post-village in Granville co., North Carolina.

STAUNTON, Ohio. See RIPLEY.

STAUNTON, a post-village of Fayette co., Ohio, near Sugar creek, 42 miles S. W. from Columbus. Laid out in 1851.

STAUNTON, a township in the E. central part of Miami co., Ohio. Population, 1475.

STAUNTON, a post-township in Macoupin co., Illinois. Population, 102.

STAUNTON, a post-village of Macoupin co., Illinois, 26 miles from the Mississippi river, at Alton.

STEADY RUN, a post-village in Keokuk co., Iowa, 45 miles S. W. by S. from Iowa City.

STEAM CORNER, a post-office of Fountain co., Indiana.

STEAM FACTORY, a post-office of Muscogee co., Georgia.

STEAM MILL, a post-office of Warren co., Pennsylvania.

STEAM MILL, a post-office of Decatur co., Georgia.

STEAMPORT, a small post-village of Henderson co., Kentucky, on Green river, about 20 miles S. E. from Henderson. It has 2 stores, and 1 tobacco factory.

STEARNSVILLE, a manufacturing village in Pittsfield township, Berkshire co., Massachusetts, about 115 miles W. of Boston.

STEEDMAN'S, a post-office of Lexington district, South Carolina.

STEELE CREEK, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., North Carolina.

STEELE, a township in Daviess co., Indiana. Population, 495.

STEELE'S, a post-office of Anderson district, South Carolina.

STEELE'S, a post-office of Rush co., Indiana.

STEELE'S LANDING, a post-office of Ottawa co., Michigan.

STEELE'S MILLS, a post-office of Randolph co., Illinois.

STEEL'S TAVERN, a post-office of Augusta co., Va., 138 miles W. N. W. from Richmond.

STEELSVILLE, a village of Ottawa co., Michigan, on Grand river, 75 miles W. N. W. from Lansing. Produce is shipped here in steamboats.

STEELSVILLE, a post-village of Crawford co., Missouri, near the Maramec river, 90 miles S. W. from St. Louis. It has a large academy and 5 or 6 stores. Population, 300.

STEELVILLE, a post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, on Octorara creek, 20 miles W. by S. from West Chester.

STREN'S CREEK, a post-office of Rankin co., Mississippi.

STEP BOTTOM, a post-office of Beaufort district, South Carolina.

STEEP CREEK, a post-office of Lowndes co., Alabama.

STEEPE'S FALLS, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

STEER CREEK, a post-office of Gilmer co., Virginia.

STEILACOOM, a post-village of Pierce co., Oregon, on Puget sound, 14 miles N. E. from the mouth of Nesqually river, about 120 miles

N. E. from Pacific City. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in fishing and the lumber business.

STEINBURG, a post-office of Bucks co., Pa.

STEINERSVILLE, a small village of Belmont co., Ohio.

STEMBERSVILLE, a post-office of Carbon co., Pennsylvania.

STEPHENSBURG, a small post-village of Hardin co., Kentucky, about 90 miles S. W. from Frankfort.

STEPHENS' CREEK, a small village of Atlantic co., New Jersey, on a small creek of its own name, about 5 miles S. from May's Landing, has 1 church.

STEPHENS' CHAPEL, a post-office of Bledsoe co., Tennessee.

STEPHENSON, a county in the N. N. W. part of Illinois, bordering on Wisconsin, has an area of 550 square miles. It is intersected by the Pekatonica river, and also drained by Yellow and Richland creeks. The surface is undulating, and the soil is excellent. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, pork, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 228,267 bushels of wheat; 303,285 of Indian corn; 227,310 of oats; 16,023 tons of hay, and 288,567 pounds of butter. It contained 4 churches 3 newspaper offices; 1800 pupils attending public schools, and 100 attending other schools. Lead is found in the W. part. The Central railroad joins the Galena and Chicago railroad at Freeport the county seat. Named in honor of Colonel Benjamin Stephenson, one of the early delegates from Illinois Territory to Congress. Population, 11,666.

STEPHENSON'S DEPÔT, a post-office of Frederick co., Virginia.

STEPHENS' POINT, a township in the N. E. part of Portage co., Wisconsin.

STEPHENS' POINT, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the Wisconsin river, about 130 miles N. from Madison, and 5 miles above Plover, the county seat. The surrounding country abounds in pines, and the lumber business is carried on here extensively. Plank-roads are projected from Green bay and Berlin to this place. The river affords extensive water-power. It contains 9 stores, 4 hotels, 3 mills, 1 manufactory of harness, 1 of sashes, 1 of wagons, and 2 blacksmith shops. Population, 500.

STEPHENSPORT, a post-village in Breckenridge co., Kentucky, on the Ohio, 110 miles W. by S. from Frankfort.

STEPHENSVILLE, a post-office of Wilkinson co., Georgia.

STEPHENTOWN, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Rensselaer co., New York. Population, 2622.

STEPNEY, a post-village in Fairfield co., Connecticut, on the Housatonic railroad, about 20 miles W. from New Haven.

STEPNEY DEPÔT, a post-office of Fairfield co., Connecticut.

STERLING, a township of Lamoille co.,

Vermont, about 28 miles N. W. of Montpelier. Population, 233.

STERLING, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, on the Fitchburg and Worcester railroad, near its junction with the Worcester and Nashua railroad, 40 miles W. by N. from Boston, contains 2 or 3 churches. Population of the township, 1805.

STERLING, a post-township in Windham co., Connecticut, 46 miles E. by S. from Hartford. Population, 1025.

STERLING, a post-village in Sterling township, Cayuga co., New York, on Little Sodus creek, 30 miles N. from Auburn. It contains several mills. Pop. of the township, 2808.

STERLING, a post-township forming the S. extremity of Wayne co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1033.

STERLING, a post-office of Montgomery co., Georgia.

STERLING, a post-office of Phillips co., Ark.

STERLING, a township in the N. W. part of Brown co., Ohio. Population, 981.

STERLING, a township in the S. W. part of Macomb co., Michigan. Population, 876.

STERLING, a post-township in Crawford co., Indiana. Population, 893.

STERLING, a post-village, capital of Whitesides co., Illinois, is beautifully situated on the right bank of Rock river, 150 miles N. from Springfield. The river falls 9 feet in about half a mile, and affords abundant water-power.

STERLING, a post-office of Jackson co., Iowa.

STERLING BOTTOM, a post-office of Meigs co., Ohio.

STERLING BUSH, a post-office of Lewis co., New York.

STERLING GROVE, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

STERLING HILL, a post-office of Windham co., Connecticut.

STERLINGTON, a post-office of Crawford co., Pennsylvania.

STERLINGVILLE, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, 155 miles N. W. from Albany.

STERLINGVILLE, a post-office of Wyoming co., Pennsylvania.

STERRETTANIA, a post-office of Erie co., Pa.

STERRETT'S GAP, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

STETSON, a post-township in Penobscot co., Maine, 56 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 885.

STUBEN, a county in the S. W. part of New York, bordering on Pennsylvania, has an area of about 1500 square miles. It is partly bounded on the E. by Crooked lake and Seneca lake, and is drained by the Conhocton, Canishto, Tioga, and Chemung rivers, and other smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. The surface is broken and hilly. The alluvial flats along the rivers are very fertile, and the soil on the uplands generally of a good quality. Wheat, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 653,484 bushels of wheat; 913,948 of oats; 360,726 of potatoes; 111,869 tons of hay, and 1,918,465 pounds of butter. There were 34 flour and grist mills, 266 saw mills, 3 carding and fulling mills, 9 iron foundries, 2 woollen factories, 31 boot and shoe manufactories, and 21 tanneries. It contained 91 churches, 5 newspaper offices, 17,792 pupils attending public schools, and 900 attending academies or other schools. Bog iron ore, alum, and building stone are the principal minerals. The Conhocton and Canisteo rivers, branches of the Chemung river, are navigable for boats respectively to Bath and Hornellsville. The New York and Erie railroad traverses this county, which is also partly intersected by the railroads connecting Corning with Rossburg, Pennsylvania; Canandaigua with Elmira, and Corning with Buffalo. Capital, Bath. Population, 63,771.

STEBEN, a county occupying the N. E. corner of Indiana, bordering on Ohio and Michigan, contains 314 square miles. It is drained by the Pigeon and St. Joseph's rivers. The surface is diversified by woodlands and prairies; the soil is mostly fertile. The staples are wheat, corn, and grass. In 1850 this county produced 101,190 bushels of corn; 73,141 of wheat; 38,734 of oats, and 5389 tons of hay. It contained 4 churches, 1600 pupils attending public schools, and 60 attending academies or other schools. Organized in 1837. Capital, Angola. Population, 6104.

STEBEN, a post-township in Washington co., Maine, 110 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 1125.

STEBEN, a post-township of Oneida co., New York, 18 miles N. from Utica. Population, 1744.

STEBEN, a post-office of Crawford co., Pa.

STEBEN, a post-village of Huron co., Ohio, about 30 miles S. S. E. from Sandusky city.

STEBEN, a township of Steuben co., Indiana. Population, 645.

STEBEN, a township in Warren co., Indiana. Population, 741.

STEBEN, a post-office of Marshall co., Ill.

STEBENVILLE, a flourishing post-town and river port, capital of Jefferson county, Ohio, on the Ohio river, 22 miles above Wheeling, Virginia, 35 miles in a direct line W. by S. from Pittsburg, and 141 miles E. by N. from Columbus. The course of the Ohio is here nearly due S., and the width about one-third of a mile. The town stands on an elevated plain, and is surrounded by a beautiful country. Steubenville is the centre of an extensive trade, and is the seat of flourishing manufactories of various kinds. The latter are supplied with fuel from the inexhaustible mines of coal in the vicinity. The town contains, besides the county buildings, about 12 churches, 2 banks, an academy for boys, and a female seminary, which is highly flourishing, and has a widely extended reputation.

This establishment, which cost $40,000, is pleasantly situated on the bank of the river, and has usually about 150 pupils. Four newspapers are published here. There are 5 manufactories of wool, 2 of cotton, 1 of paper, 2 of glass, several machine shops, 3 iron foundries, a number of flouring mills, and large manufactories of copperas. About 1000 persons are employed here in manufactories. A railroad is in course of rapid construction from Pittsburg to this place, and the Steubenville and Indiana railroad, when finished, will connect it with Columbus and other towns of Ohio. First settled in 1798. Population in 1850, 6139.

STEBENVILLE, a small village of Randolph co., Indiana, about 12 miles N. W. from Winchester.

STEVENSBERG, a post-office of Culpepper co., Virginia, on the road from Fairfax to Fredericksburg, about 95 miles N. W. from Richmond, contains 1 or 2 churches, a hotel, and several stores.

STEVENS' CREEK, of Edgefield district, South Carolina, flows into Savannah river, several miles above Hamburg.

STEVENS' CREEK, New Jersey. See STEPHEN'S CREEK.

STEVENS' MILLS, a post-office of Union co., North Carolina.

STEVENSON'S, a post-office of Jackson co., Alabama.

STEVENS' PLAINS, a post-office of Cumberland co., Maine.

STEVENS' POINT, Wis. See STEPHENS' POINT, STEVENSVILLE, a post-office of Sullivan co., New York.

STEVENSVILLE, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

STEVENSVILLE, a post-village of King and Queen co., Virginia, 31 miles N. E. from Richmond.

STEWART, a county in the W. S. W. part of Georgia, contains about 700 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Chattahoochee river, which separates it from Alabama, and drained by the Hannahatchee, Kinchafoonee, and Pataula creeks. The soil is fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 it produced 19,165 bales of cotton; 684,449 bushels of corn, and 171,791 of sweet potatoes. There were 9 manufactories of farming implements, 4 flour and grist mills, 7 saw mills, and 3 tanneries; 33 churches, 660 pupils attending public schools, and 138 attending other schools. Capital, Lumpkin. Population, 16,027; of whom 8654 were free, and 7373, slaves.

STEWART, a county in the N. N. W. part of Tennessee, bordering on Kentucky, has an area estimated at 700 square miles. It is intersected by Cumberland river, and bounded on the S. W. by the Tennessee; the declivity of the surface is towards the N. W. The soil produces Indian corn, tobacco, and pasture. There were raised, in 1850, 584,050 bushels of corn; 290,320 of sweet potatoes; 43,225 of oats, and 92,625 pounds of butter were made. It contained 42 churches, 248 pupils attending public schools, and 20 attending other schools. Capital, Dover. Population, 9719; of whom 7144 were free, and 2575, slaves.

STEWART, a post-office of Erie co., Pa.

STEWARTSBURG, a post-village of Rutherford co., Tennessee, on the turnpike from Nashville to Murfreesborough, 20 miles S. E. from the former.

STEWART'S DRAFT, a post-office of Augusta co., Virginia.

STEWART'S FERRY, a post-office of Davidson co., Tennessee.

STEWART'S FORK, Texas, rises in Cook co., and enters the West fork of Trinity river in Tarrant county.

STEWART'S MILLS, a small village of Crawford co., Illinois.

STEWARTSON, a township forming the S. E. extremity of Potter co., Pennsylvania. Population, 58.

STEWART'S RUN, a post-office of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

STEWART'S SPRINGS, a post-office of Polk co., Arkansas.

STEWARTSTOWN, a post-township in Coos co., New Hampshire, 130 miles N. from Concord. Population, 747.

STEWARTSTOWN, a flourishing village of Shaler township, Alleghany co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Alleghany river, 5 miles above Pittsburg. It contains several rolling mills. Population in 1853, 1500.

STEWARTSTOWN, a post-office of York co., Pa.

STEWARTSTOWN, a small post-village of Monongalia co., Virginia.

STEWARTSTOWN, a post-village in Richmond co., North Carolina, 137 miles S. W. from Raleigh.

STEWARTSVILLE, a flourishing post-village of Greenwich township, Warren co., New Jersey, is situated on Merritt's brook, about 10 miles S. from Belvidere. It has 3 stores, an extensive tannery—which, in the perfection and variety of its machinery, is said to be second to none in the state—and a large brick-yard. Besides a large and beautiful Presbyterian church, and a Lutheran church recently erected, it has an academy, with a classical department. The Morris canal passes through this town. Population, about 500.

STEWARTSVILLE, a post-village of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania, on the turnpike leading from Pittsburg to Greensburg, 19 miles E. S. E. from the former.

STEWARTSVILLE, a post-village in Richmond co., North Carolina, 107 miles S. W. from Raleigh.

STEWARTSVILLE, a post-office of Posey co., Indiana.

STICE'S SHOAL, a post-office of Cleveland co., North Carolina.

STICKLEYVILLE, a post-office of Lee co., Va.

STIKOIH, a post-office of Cherokee co., N. C.

STILES, a post-office of Davis co., Iowa.

STILESBOROUGH, a post-office of Cass co., G., about 150 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

STILESVILLE, a pleasant post-village of Hendricks co., Indiana, on the National road, and on Mill creek, 27 miles S. W. from Indianapolis.

STILL VALLEY, a flourishing post-village of Greenwich township, Warren co., New Jersey, near Pohatcong creek, about 13 miles in a direct line S. by W. from Belvidere.

STILLWATER, a village in Orono township, Penobscot co., Maine, near the Oldtown and Piscataquis railroad, 5 miles N. from Bangor.

STILLWATER, a post-township of Saratoga co., New York, on the W. side of Hudson river. Population, 2967.

STILLWATER, a post-village in the above township, on the Champlain canal and Hudson river, 24 miles above Albany.

STILLWATER, a post-township of Sussex co., New Jersey, about 60 miles W. by N. from Trenton. Population, 1742.

STILLWATER, a post-village in the above township, on the Paulinskill river, contains a church, 2 stores, 2 mills, and an academy.

STILLWATER, a post-office of Columbia co., Pennsylvania.

STILLWATER, a post-office of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, about 100 miles E. N. E. from Columbus.

STILLWATER, a thriving post-village, capital of Washington co., Minnesota, on the W. bank of Lake St. Croix, 20 miles E. by N. from St. Paul. It is the seat of the penitentiary recently established, and contains a court house, church, 3 hotels, a land-office, several stores and mills. Large quantities of pine lumber are procured in the vicinity. First settled in 1843. Population in 1853, about 1500.

STILLWATER CREEK, in the W. part of Ohio, rises in Darke co., flows S. E. and unites with Greenville creek in Miami county.

STILLWATER CREEK, Ohio, an affluent of Tuscarawas river, rises in Belmont county.

STILLWELL, a post-office of Wood co., Va.

STILLWELL, a post-office of Butler co., Ohio.

STIPPS' HILL, a post-office of Franklin co., Indiana, 12 miles W. from Brookville.

STILLVILLE, a post-office of Oneida co., N. Y.

STOCK, a township in the N. part of Harrison co., Ohio. Population, 888.

STOCKBRIDGE, a post-township in Windsor co., Vermont, 36 miles S. by W. from Montpelier. Population, 1327.

STOCKBRIDGE, a post-village in Berkshire co., Massachusetts, on the Housatonic river and railroad, 120 miles W. by S. from Boston, contains 2 or 3 churches, a bank, and an academy. Population of the township, 1941.

STOCKBRIDGE, a township of Madison co., New York, about 25 miles W. S. W. from Utica. Population, 2081.

STOCKBRIDGE, a post-office of Henry co., Georgia, 80 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

STOCKBRIDGE, a post-township in the S. E. part of Ingham co., Michigan. Pop., 657.

STOCKBRIDGE, a post-village in the above township, about 30 miles S. E. from Lansing.

STOCKBRIDGE, a post-township in the S. central part of Calumet co., Wisconsin.

STOCK CREEK, a post-office of Scott co., Va.

STOCKERTOWN, a post-office of Northampton co., Pennsylvania.

STOCKHOLM, a post-township of St. Lawrence co., New York, 18 miles E. N. E. from Canton, intersected by the Northern railroad. Population, 3661.

STOCKHOLM, a post-office of Sussex co., N. J.

STOCKHOLM DEPÔT, a post-village of St. Lawrence co., New York, on the Northern railroad, 26 miles E. from Ogdensburg.

STOCKINGTON, a small village of Salem co., New Jersey, about 9 miles E. of Salem.

STOCKPORT, a post-township of Columbia co., New York, on the Hudson river. Pop., 1655.

STOCKPORT, a post-village in the above township, on the Hudson river, 24 miles S. from Albany. Here is a station on the Hudson River railroad.

STOCKPORT, a thriving post-village of Wayne county, Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river and on the Erie railroad, 159 miles from New York city. It is a depôt for lumber, which is procured in the vicinity.

STOCKPORT, a post-office of Morgan co., O.

STOCKPORT STATION, a post-village of Delaware co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad.

STOCKTON, a post-township of Chautauque co., New York, 14 miles S. from Dunkirk. Population, 1640.

STOCKTON, a post-village of Baldwin co., Alabama, on the Tensaw river, 30 miles N. N. E. from Mobile.

STOCKTON, a township in Greene co., Indiana. Population, 840.

STOCKTON, a post-town and capital of San Joaquin county, California, is situated on a slough or channel of its own name, about 3 miles from its junction with the San Joaquin river. This place, one of the most important in the state, is on the main road from Sacramento city to Los Angeles, about 125 miles E. S. E. from Benicia. It was first settled in 1844 by C. M. Weber, but was abandoned by him in 1846. In 1848 a settlement was successfully established, and since that time its growth has been rapid. The channel is navigable for steamboats and vessels of 400 tons burthen at all seasons, affording a ready communication with the Pacific. A hospital is erecting at Stockton, which will be an ornament to the state. The town is a place of great activity and a depôt for the southern mines. Resident population, about 4000, which is sometimes increased by a floating population to 6000 or 8000.

STOCKVILLE, a post-village in Buncombe co., North Carolina.

STODDARD, a county in the S. E. part of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas, has an area of 900 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the St. Francis river, on the E. by the Castor and Whitewater rivers. The northern part is hilly, but the greater portion of the surface is level, and extensively occupied by swamps and shallow lakes. The largest among the latter are Lake Stoddard, Lake Castor, Lake Micota, and Lake Nicormy. The last is represented by the maps to be about 25 miles long and 4 or 5 miles wide. The earthquakes of 1811 and 1812 injured this county perhaps more than any other in the state. For particulars, see the article NEW MADRID. The county contains extensive prairies and forests of cypress; the soil of the prairies is moderately fertile. In 1850 it produced 151,094 bushels of Indian corn; 5972 of wheat; 17,260 of oats, and 33,174 pounds of butter. It contained six churches. Capital, Bloomfield. Population, 4277, of whom 4227 were free, and 50, slaves.

STODDARD, a post-township in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, 35 miles W. S. W. from Concord. Population, 1105.

STODDARD, a small village of Cape Girardeau co., Missouri.

STODDARTSVILLE, a post-village of Pennsylvania, on the line between Luzerne and Monroe counties, and on the Lehigh river, 18 miles S. E. from Wilkesbarre.

STOKES, a county in the N. part of North Carolina, bordering on Virginia: area estimated at 550 square miles. It is intersected by Dan river and its affluents. The surface is elevated and hilly; the soil produces wheat, Indian corn, and oats. In 1850 there were raised 16,004 bushels of wheat; 223,000 of corn, and 42,636 of oats. There were 6 iron forges, 3 saw mills, 3 tanneries, and 15 tobacco manufactories, and 1035 pupils attending public schools. Iron ore is found in large quantities. Formed from Surry in 1789, and named in honor of John Stokes, a colonel in the war of the Revolution. Capital, Germantown. Population, 9206, of whom 7413 were free, and 1793, slaves.

STOKES, a post-office of Oneida co., N. Y.

STOKES, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Logan co., Ohio. Population, 489.

STOKES, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Madison co., Ohio. Pop., 591.

STOKESBURG, a small village of Stokes co., North Carolina.

STONE ARABIA, a post-village of Montgomery co., New York, about 50 miles W. N. W. from Albany. It has 2 churches.

STONE CHURCH, a post-office of Genesee co., New York.

STONE CHURCH, a post-office of Northampton co., Pennsylvania.

STONE CREEK, a post-office of Tuscarawas co., Ohio.

STONEHAM, a township in Oxford co., Me., 50 miles W. by S. from Augusta. Pop., 484.

STONEHAM, a post-village in Middlesex co.,

Massachusetts, on the Boston and Maine railroad, 8 miles N. from Boston, contains 1 or 2 churches. Pop. of the township, 2085.

STONE LICK, a post-office of Randolph co., North Carolina.

STONE LICK, a township in the central part of Clermont co., Ohio. Population, 1840.

STONELICK CREEK, of Ohio, enters the East fork of Little Miami river, in Clermont county.

STONE MILLS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

STONE MOUNTAIN, a post-village of McDowell co., North Carolina.

STONE MOUNTAIN, a post-village of De Kalb county, Georgia, on the Georgia railroad, 160 miles W. from Augusta. At this place is an isolated, dome-shaped granite rock, which is visited annually by several thousand persons, and is considered as one of the most magnificent natural objects in the state. The height is near 1000 feet. A tower 180 feet high has been erected on the summit, commanding a prospect of great extent and picturesque beauty. The village contains 4 hotels and about 300 inhabitants.

STONE, a post-office of Seneca co., N. Y.

STONE RIDGE, a post-village of Ulster co., N. Y., about 60 miles S. S. W. from Albany.

STONER'S CREEK, of Bourbon county, Kentucky, flows in a N. N. W. direction, passes Paris, and enters the South Licking river, near the northern boundary of the county.

STONER'S PRAIRIE, a post-office of Dane co., Wisconsin.

STONER'S STORE, a post-office of Roanoke co., Virginia.

STONERTOWN, a post-village of Bedford co., Pa., 100 miles W. by S. from Harrisburg.

STONERSVILLE, a post-office of Berks co., Pa.

STONESPORT, a small village of Boone co., Missouri, on the Missouri river, about 6 miles above Jefferson City.

STONES RIVER, a small stream of Middle Tennessee, rises in Cannon county, and flowing N. W., enters Cumberland river, about 6 miles N. E. from Nashville. The length is estimated at about 80 miles. It affords motive power to numerous mills and factories.

STONESVILLE, a post-village in Greenville district, S. C., 97 miles N. from Columbia.

STONE TAVERN, a small village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania.

STONEWALL MILLS, a post-village of Appomattox co., Virginia, on James river, 108 miles W. by S. from Richmond.

STONINGTON, a post-borough and port of entry of New London county, Connecticut, on the seacoast, at the southern terminus of the Stonington railroad, 63 miles E. from New Haven, and 50 miles S. S. W. from Providence. It is built on a peninsula somewhat more than half a mile in length from N. to S., and contains 5 churches of the various denominations, several flourishing schools, 2 banks, with an aggregate capital of \$160,000; a savings' institution, with \$46,182 on deposit, and about 20 stores. Manufactures have recently been introduced; one large establishment has gone into operation here the present season, (1853.) Stonington is much resorted to during the summer months as a watering-place, and a first-class hotel has been erected for the accommodation of visitors. The harbor of Stonington is capacious, and partly protected by a national breakwater, constructed at a cost of \$100,000. Previous to 1835, the inhabitants were extensively and profitably engaged in various enterprises of navigation, principally in the sealing and whaling business. Some years as many as 100,000 seal skins were brought into port. The fleet of whalers at one time numbered 27 ships and barques. Sealing has of late been discontinued, but the whale fishery is still carried on to advantage. The borough has also an important coast trade. The shipping owned in the district which includes Stonington borough, Pawcatuck, and Mystic, June 30th, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 15,106 $\frac{4}{5}$ tons registered, and 8055 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons enrolled and licensed—total, 23,162 $\frac{7}{5}$ tons. Of the registered tonnage, 10,031 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons were employed in the whale fishery, and of the enrolled and licensed, 5798 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons were employed in the coast trade, and 1784 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons in the codfishery. The foreign arrivals for the year were 10, (tons, 2489;) and the clearances for foreign ports, 19, (tons, 5329,) of which 18 (tons, 5248) were by American vessels. During the year, 15 vessels, (3 of them ships,) with an aggregate burthen of 3259 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons, were admeasured. The Stonington railroad, which commenced its operations in 1835, was the first constructed in the state. Stonington has steamboat communication with New York, Providence, and other places along the coast. The town is celebrated for the spirited and successful resistance it made against the attack of Sir Thomas Hardy, during the war of 1812. Settled in 1649, and incorporated as a borough in 1801. Population of the township in 1840, 3898; in 1850, 5431, and of the borough in 1853, about 2800.

STONINGTON, a post-office of Christian co., Illinois.

STONINGTON, a small village of Grundy co., Mo.

STONINGTON LIGHTHOUSE, exhibiting a fixed light, is at the southern extremity of the Stonington peninsula, New London county, Connecticut.

STONY BROOK, of New Jersey, rises in Hunterdon county, crosses Mercer county near Princeton, and enters the Millstone river.

STONY BROOK, a post-village of Brookhaven township, Suffolk county, New York, on the N. side of Long Island, 50 miles E. by N. from New York. It has a good harbor and a ship-yard.

STONY CREEK, of Pennsylvania, falls into the Conemaugh near Johnstown.

STONY CREEK, of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, flows into Susquehanna river.

STONY CREEK, in the S. S. E. part of Virginia, rises in Dinwiddie county, and falls into Nottaway river in Sussex county.

STONY CREEK, of Clinton county, Michigan, enters Maple river 2 miles from its mouth.

STONY CREEK, of Monroe co., Michigan, flows into Lake Erie 6 miles from Monroe.

STONY CREEK, of Oakland co., Michigan, falls into Clinton river.

STONY CREEK, a small seaport of Branford township, New Haven county, Connecticut, on Long Island sound, 11 miles E. by S. from New Haven. A cluster of beautiful islands, called Thimble islands, lie scattered along between this place and Indian Neck. The New Haven and New London railroad passes a little N. of the village.

STONY CREEK, a post-office of Warren co., New York.

STONY CREEK, a post-township of Somerset co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles E. from Somerset. Population, 1396.

STONY CREEK, a post-office of Scott co., Va.

STONY CREEK, a post-office of Ionia co., Michigan.

STONY CREEK, a post-village of Oakland co., Michigan, on a creek of its own name, 26 miles N. W. from Detroit. It contains 1 church, and mills of various kinds.

STONY CREEK, a township in Henry co., Indiana. Population, 1029.

STONY CREEK, a township in Madison co., Indiana. Population, 291.

STONY CREEK, a township in Randolph co., Indiana. Population, 1153.

STONY FORK, a post-office of Amherst co., Va.

STONY FORK, a post-office of Watauga co., North Carolina.

STONY HILL, a small village of Madison co., Virginia, on the Blue Ridge turnpike.

STONY HILL, a post-office of Richmond co. Va.

STONY MOUNT, a post-office of Brunswick co., Virginia.

STONY POINT, Orange co., New York, on the W. bank of Hudson river, at the head of Haverstraw bay, 42 miles N. from New York. The capture of the fort at this place by General Wayne, July 16th, 1779, is justly considered one of the most brilliant exploits performed during the Revolutionary war.

STONY POINT, a post-office of Albemarle co., Virginia.

STONY POINT, a post-office of Alexander co., North Carolina.

STONY POINT, a post-office of Abbeville district, South Carolina.

STONY POINT, a post-office of East Baton Rouge parish, Louisiana.

STONY POINT, a small post-village of White co., Arkansas.

STONY POINT, a post-office of Bradley co., Tennessee.

STONY POINT, a post-office of Jackson co., Mo.

STONY POINT MILLS, a post-village of Cumberland co., Virginia, 61 miles W. S. W. from Richmond, contains a flouring mill.

STONY RIDGE, a post-office of Surry co., N. C.

STONY RIDGE, a post-office of Wood co., O.

STONY RUN, a post-office of Genesee co., Michigan.

STOREVILLE, a post-village in Anderson dis., S. C., 117 miles W. N. W. from Columbia.

STORMVILLE, a post-office of Dutchess co., New York.

STORR's, a post-township of Hamilton co., Ohio, on the Ohio river. Population, 1675.

STORY, a new county near the centre of Iowa, has an area of 576 square miles. It is traversed from N. to S. by Skunk river, an affluent of the Mississippi. The surface is diversified by prairies and groves; the soil is productive, but mostly uncultivated. The census of 1850 gives no returns for this county. Extensive beds of stone coal are found. Seat of justice is not yet established.

STORX, a post-office of Ogle co., Illinois.

STOUCHBURG, a post-village of Berks co., Pa., 34 miles E. by N. from Harrisburg.

STOUGHSTOWN, a post-village of Cumberland co., Pennsylvania, on the Cumberland Valley railroad, 13 miles S. W. from Carlisle.

STOUGHTON, a post-village in Norfolk co., Massachusetts, at the terminus of the Stoughton branch of the Boston and Providence railroad, 19 miles S. by W. from Boston, contains 4 churches and numerous shoe factories. Population of the township, 3494.

STOUGHTON, a thriving post-village of Dane co., Wisconsin, on the Catfish river, and on the Milwaukee and Mississippi railroad, 16 miles S. E. from Madison. Pop., 150.

STOUT's, a post-office of Northampton co., Pennsylvania.

STOUT's, a post-office of Adams co., Ohio.

STOUT's GROVE, a post-office of McLean co., Illinois.

STOUT's LANDING, a small village of Lewis co., Kentucky.

STOUTSVILLE, a village of New Jersey, on the boundary between Somerset and Hunterdon counties, 13 miles S. W. from Somerville.

STOVER, a post-office of Dallas co., Ark.

STOVER's PLACE, a post-office of Centre co., Pennsylvania.

STOVERTOWN, a post-office of Muskingum co., Ohio.

Stow, a post-township of Oxford co., Maine, 65 miles W. by S. from Augusta.

Stow, a post-village in Lamoyille co., Vermont. It contains 3 churches, 3 stores, and 2 taverns. Population of the township, 1771.

Stow, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on the Lancaster and Sterling branch of the Fitchburg railroad, 27 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population of the township, 1455.

Stow, a post-township in the E. part of Summit co., Ohio. Population, 1701.

STOW CREEK, New Jersey, forms a considerable part of the boundary between Cumberland and Salem counties, and falls into Delaware bay 4 miles N. W. from the mouth of Cohansey river. It is navigable for sloops 18 miles.

STOW CREEK, a township of Cumberland co., New Jersey, 7 miles N. W. from Bridgeton. Population, 1093.

STOWELL'S CORNERS, a post-office of Jefferson co., New York.

STOW'S FERRY, a post-office of Tallapoosa co., Alabama.

STOW'S SQUARE, a post-office of Lewis co., New York.

STOWSVILLE, a post-village in Gaston co., N. C., 180 miles W. by S. from Raleigh.

STOVES TOWN, a post-borough of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, on Stony creek, and on the turnpike from Pittsburg to Bedford, 70 miles E. S. E. from the former. It has several stores and mills. Coal and iron are abundant in the vicinity. Pop. in 1850, 321.

STRABANE, a post-township of Adams co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. E. from Gettysburg. Population, 1188.

STRABANE, a post-office of Washington co. Pa.

STRABANE, a post-village in Lenoir co., N. C., 78 miles S. E. from Raleigh.

STAFFORD, a county in the E. S. E. part of New Hampshire, has an area of about 350 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Salmon Falls river, and is drained by the Coheco, Lamprey, and Isinglass rivers, which afford valuable water-power. The surface is rough and uneven, and the soil, although difficult of cultivation, generally fertile. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 100,260 bushels of corn; 23,453 of oats; 309,998 of potatoes; 40,233 tons of hay, and 417,294 pounds of butter. There were 3 cotton and 7 woollen factories, 3 foundries, 1 paper mill, 19 saw and planing mills, 1 oilcloth manufactory, 256 boot and shoe manufactories, 14 tanneries, 2 agricultural implement manufactories, and 8 tin and sheet-iron works. It contained 42 churches, 8 newspaper offices; 5769 pupils attending public schools, and 295 attending academies or other schools. The Piscataqua river is navigable for sloops to South Berwick, and the Coheco to Dover. This county is partly intersected by the railroad connecting Alton and Dover, and by that connecting Portland and Boston. Capital, Dover. Population, 29,374.

STAFFORD, a post-township in Strafford co., New Hampshire, 20 miles E. N. E. from Concord. Population, 1920.

STAFFORD, a post-township in Orange co., Vermont, 33 miles S. S. E. from Montpelier. Population, 1540.

STAFFORD CORNER, a post-office of Strafford co., New Hampshire.

STRAIGHT CREEK, of Brown co., Ohio, flows into the Ohio river near Ripley.

STRAIT CREEK, a post-office of Jackson co., Alabama.

STRAIGHT CREEK, a post-office of Brown co., Ohio, 105 miles S. S. W. from Columbus.

STRAIGHT FORK, a post-office of Campbell co., Tennessee.

STRAIT'S LAKE, a post-office of Oakland co., Michigan.

STRAITSVILLE, a post-office of New Haven co., Connecticut.

STRAITSVILLE, a post-office of Perry co., O.

STRASBURG, a post-township of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles S. E. from Lancaster. Population, including that of the borough, 2604.

STRASBURG, a pleasant post-borough in the above township, 46 miles S. E. from Harrisburg, and 8 miles E. S. E. from Lancaster, contains 3 churches, an academy, and several stores. Population in 1850, 880.

STRASBURG, a thriving post-village of Shenandoah co., Virginia, on the North fork of the Shenandoah river, and on the Manassas Gap railroad, 18 miles S. W. from Winchester. It has 3 churches. Population, about 650.

STRASBURG, a post-village of Tuscarawas co., Ohio, on Sugar creek, about 110 miles N. E. from Columbus, has 109 inhabitants.

STRATA, a post-office of Montgomery co., Alabama.

STRATFORD, a post-township in Coos co., New Hampshire, on the E. side of the Connecticut river, 117 miles N. from Concord. Population, 552.

STRATFORD, a post-township of Fairfield co., Connecticut, at the mouth of Housatonic river, about 15 miles S. W. from New Haven. Population, 2040.

STRATFORD, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Fulton co., New York. Population, 801.

STRATFORD, a post-village of Delaware co., Ohio, near the Cleveland and Columbus railroad, 27 miles N. from Columbus.

STRATFORD POINT LIGHTHOUSE, at the entrance to Stratford harbor, Connecticut. The light revolves in such a manner as to be seen once in 90 seconds. Lat. 41° 9' N., lon. 73° 6' 36" W.

STRATHAM, a post-township in Rockingham co., New Hampshire, 39 miles S. E. by E. from Concord, intersected by the Portsmouth and Concord railroad. Population, 840.

STRATTON, a post-township in Windham co., Vermont, 90 miles S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 286.

STRATTON'S FALL, a post-office of Delaware co., New York.

STRATTONVILLE, a thriving post-village of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, on the Bellefonte and Erie turnpike, 3 miles E. from Clarion.

STRAUSTOWN, a post-office of Berks co., Pa.

STRAW, a village of Warren co., New Jersey, 5 miles S. E. from Philipburg.

STRAWBERRY, a township in Lawrence co., Arkansas. Population, 709.

STRAWBERRY HILL, a post-office of Muscatine co., Iowa.

STRAWBERRY PLAINS, a thriving post-village of Jefferson co., Tennessee, on Holston river, 18 miles N. E. from Knoxville. The East Tennessee and Virginia railroad terminates at this village, and connects with another leading to Knoxville.

STRAWBERRY POINT, a post-office of Clayton co., Iowa.

STRAWBERRY RIVER, of Arkansas, rises in Fulton co., and flows into Black river, on the S. line of Lawrence county.

STRAWBRIDGE, a post-office of York co., Pa.

STRAW HAT, a post-office of Jefferson co., Arkansas.

STRAWNTOWN, a village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles S. by E. from Easton.

STRAWTOWN, a thriving post-village of Hamilton co., Indiana, on the White river, 28 miles N. N. E. from Indianapolis. Pop., 200.

STRAWTOWN, a post-village in Hendricks co., Indiana, on the W. fork of White river, 30 miles N. E. by N. from Indianapolis.

STREETSBOROUGH, a post-township in the W. part of Portage co., Ohio, intersected by the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad. Population, 1108.

STREET'S RUN, a post-office of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania.

STRICKERSVILLE, a post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 40 miles W. S. W. from Philadelphia.

STRICKLAND, a post-village of Ware co., Ga.

STRICKLAND'S DEPÔT, a small post-village of Duplin co., North Carolina, on the railroad from Weldon to Wilmington, 47 miles N. from the latter.

STRIKERSVILLE, or STRYKERSVILLE, a post-village of Wyoming co., New York, on Buffalo creek, 30 miles E. S. E. from Buffalo.

STRINESTOWN, a post-office of York co., Pa.

STRING PRAIRIE, a post-office of Burleson co., Texas.

STRING PRAIRIE, a post-office of Lee co., Io.

STRINGTOWN, a post-office of Ripley co., Ind.

STRINGTOWN, a post-office of Richland co., Illinois.

STRODE'S MILLS, a post-office of Mifflin co., Pennsylvania.

STROMBOLI FURNACE, a post-office of Stewart co., Tennessee.

STRONG, a post-township in Franklin co., Maine, on the E. side of Sandy river, about 35 miles N. E. from Augusta. Pop., 1008.

STRONG RIVER, of Mississippi, a small stream which flows through Simpson county into Pearl river.

STRONG'S LANDING, a small village of Marquette co., Wisconsin.

STRONGSTOWN, a post-village of Indiana co., Pennsylvania, on the turnpike from Ebensburg to Indiana Court House, about 15 miles S. E. from the latter.

STRONGVILLE, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Cuyahoga co., Ohio. Population, 1199.

STRONGVILLE, a post-village in the above township, 14 miles S. by W. from Cleveland. Including the adjoining village of Albion, it has 3 or 4 churches, several stores, and 1 woollen factory.

STROUD, a township in Monroe co., Pennsylvania, about 22 miles N. by W. from Easton, contains Stroudsburg, the county seat. Population, 1419.

STROUDSBURG, a post-borough, capital of Monroe county, Pennsylvania, on Broadhead's creek, about 4 miles from the Delaware river, and 118 miles N. E. from Harrisburg. It is situated in a pleasant valley, and gradually improving. There are several flour mills in the vicinity. The town has an academy, a public library, and 4 or 5 churches. Two or three newspapers are published. Population in 1850, 811.

STROUD'S GLADES, a post-office of Nicholas co., Virginia.

STRYKERSVILLE. See STRIKERSVILLE.

STUBANSVILLE, a post-office of Wayne co., Kentucky.

STUMP BRIDGE, a post-office of Madison co., Mississippi.

STUMP GROUND, a small village of Onslow co., North Carolina.

STURBRIDGE, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 60 miles W. S. W. from Boston, contains several churches. Population of township, 2119.

STURGEONVILLE, a post-village of Brunswick co., Virginia, about 60 miles S. S. W. from Richmond.

STURGES RAPIDS, a village in Black Hawk co., Iowa, on Wapsipinicon river, 80 miles N. N. W. from Iowa City.

STURGIS, a post-township in the S. part of St. Joseph co., Michigan. Population, 840.

STURGIS, a thriving post-village in the above township, on the Michigan Southern railroad, 115 miles W. from Monroe. It is situated on a fertile prairie of its own name, and has a steam flouring mill, a furnace, and other factories. Population in 1853, about 700.

STUYVESANT, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Columbia co., New York, on the Hudson river. Population, 1766.

STUYVESANT, formerly KINDERHOOK LANDING, a post-village in the above township, on the Hudson River railroad, 18 miles S. from Albany.

STUYVESANT FALLS, a post-village of Columbia co., New York, on Kinderhook creek, about 25 miles S. from Albany. It contains several mills.

SUBLETTE'S LAKE is in the western part of Missouri Territory, in lat. about 43° 30' N., lon. 110° W. It is the source of the Yellowstone river.

SUBLETT'S TAVERN, a post-office of Powhatan co., Virginia.

SUBLIGNA, a post-office of Chattooga co., Georgia.

SUBLIMITY, a post-office of Marion co., Ogn.

SUCCESS, a post-township in Coos co., New Hampshire, 115 miles N. E. from Concord.

SUCCESS, a post-office of Suffolk co., N. Y.

SUCKASUNNY, a post-village of Morris co., New Jersey, about 22 miles N. by E. from Trenton, contains a church.

SUCKERNOCHEE, called also TUGALOO CREEK, of Mississippi and Alabama, rises near the W. border of Noxubee county, in the former state, and flowing south-easterly into Alabama, falls into the Tombigbee at Moscow. It is navigable by small boats about 35 miles.

SUDBURY, a post-township in Rutland co., Vermont, 45 miles S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 194.

SUDBURY, a post-township in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 23 miles W. by N. from Boston. Population, 1578.

SUDBURY RIVER, a small stream of Middlesex co., in the N. E. part of Massachusetts, unites with Asabet river to form Concord river at Concord.

SUDLERSVILLE, a post-village in Queen Anne co., Maryland, 55 miles E. by N. from Annapolis.

SUFFERN'S, a post-village of Rockland co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, at the junction with the Union Ramapo and Paterson railroad, 32 miles from New York. Here is an important railroad station at the entrance of a mountain pass.

SUFFIELD, a post-village in Hartford co., Connecticut, 16 miles N. from Hartford, near the W. side of the Connecticut river, contains 2 or 3 churches, and the Connecticut Literary Institution, founded by the Baptists. Population of the township, 2962.

SUFFIELD, a post-township forming the S. W. extremity of Portage co., O. Pop., 1281.

SUFFOLK, a county in the E. part of Massachusetts, has an area of about 15 square miles, being the smallest county in the state. It is bounded on the E. and S. by Massachusetts bay. It consists of only two towns, Boston and Chelsea, but on account of its containing the chief city of New England, (Boston,) it may be regarded as the most important county in the state. Indian corn, potatoes, and grass are the principal productions. In 1850 it yielded 2691 bushels of corn; 10,069 of potatoes, and 2446 tons of hay. There were 40 machine shops, 3 ship-yards, 10 ship-joining, 14 ship-smithing, and 15 shipwright establishments, 7 brass foundries, 6 iron foundries, 1 rolling mill, 8 type and stereotype foundries, 9 distilleries, 6 breweries, 22 book binderies, 30 manufactories of stoves and ranges, 4 of lamps, 14 of trunks, 27 of saddles and harness, 15 of coaches, 78 of cabinet ware, 156 of clothing, 90 of boots and shoes, 3 silver-plating and 194 carpenter establishments, 3 glass-works, 9 upholsterers, 23 curriers, 5 manufactories of chemicals, 6 of whale oil, and 15 of piano-fortes. It contained 96 churches, 115 newspaper offices; 17,230 pupils attending public schools, and 1800 attending academies and other schools. This county is intersected by railroads, radiating from Boston, in almost every direction. Organized in 1643—then comprising the whole of the present county of Norfolk, and a small part of Plymouth, and named from Suffolk, a county in England. Capital, Boston. Pop., 144,517.

SUFFOLK, the most eastern county of New York, has an area of about 950 square miles. It forms the eastern extremity of Long Island, and is bounded on the N. by Long Island sound, and E. and S. by the Atlantic ocean. Its coast is indented with numerous bays and inlets, affording excellent harbors, and great advantages for navigation and for fisheries. It is drained by Peconic river, and other smaller streams, which afford some water-power. The surface in the N. part is hilly and uneven, and along the seacoast nearly level. The soil is generally sandy; that bordering on the sound is more fertile than in the interior and southern portions. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 128,237 bushels of wheat; 377,985 of corn; 178,549 of potatoes; 33,080 tons of hay, and 459,293 pounds of butter. There were 7 flour mills, 4 cotton factories, 12 ship-yards, 2 earthenware manufactories, 1 brick factory, and 5 tanneries. It contained 99 churches, 7 newspaper offices; 8115 pupils attending public schools, and 570 attending academies and other schools. The Long Island railroad passes through this county. Organized in 1683. Capital, Riverhead. Pop., 36,922.

SUFFOLK, a post-village, capital of Nansemond county, Virginia, on the Nansemond river, and on the Portsmouth and Roanoke railroad, 85 miles S. E. from Richmond. The river is navigable for small vessels. It contains, besides the county buildings, 4 churches and 1 or 2 newspaper offices. Founded in 1742. Population, estimated at 1500.

SUFFOLK COURT HOUSE, New York. See RIVERHEAD.

SUGAR CREEK, of Pennsylvania, enters the Susquehanna near Towanda.

SUGAR CREEK, of North Carolina, rises in Mecklenburg county, and flowing southward enters Catawba river on the E. border of York district, South Carolina. Little Sugar creek unites with it near the boundary of these states.

SUGAR CREEK, of Georgia, flows through Telfair county into the Little Ocmulgee river.

SUGAR CREEK, of Alabama, flows into Elk river, in Limestone county, about 10 miles N. W. from Athens.

SUGAR CREEK, of Ohio, flows into the Portage river in Ottawa county.

SUGAR CREEK, an affluent of Tuscarawas river, Ohio, rises in Wayne county, and enters the Tuscarawas at Dover.

SUGAR CREEK, Indiana, rises in Clinton county, and enters the Wabash on the E., about 3 miles S. E. from Newport. Its general course is S. W., and its whole length about 100 miles.

SUGAR CREEK, of Indiana, an affluent of Blue river, rises in Henry county, and falls into the river about a mile below Edinburg.

SUGAR CREEK, in the N. central part of Illinois, falls into Salt creek. Another little stream of this name falls into the Sangamon a few miles E. of Springfield.

SUGAR CREEK, a township of Armstrong co., Pennsylvania, about 18 miles E. N. E. from Butler. Population, 1688.

SUGAR CREEK, a township of Venango co., Pennsylvania, on French creek and Alleghany river. Population, 875.

SUGAR CREEK, a small village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

SUGAR CREEK, a post-office of Telfair co., Georgia.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Benton co., Arkansas. Population, 580.

SUGAR CREEK, a post-office of Lawrence co., Tennessee.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in the N. part of Allen co., Ohio. Population, 756.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in the W. part of Greene co., Ohio. Population, 3082.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in the S. W. part of Putnam co., Ohio. Population, 550.

SUGAR CREEK, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Stark co., Ohio. Pop., 1743.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in the N. W. part of Tuscarawas co., Ohio. Population, 1400.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in the S. E. part of Wayne co., Ohio. Population, 2321.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Clinton co., Indiana. Population, 477.

SUGAR CREEK, a post-township in Hancock co., Indiana. Population, 793.

SUGAR CREEK, a post-village of Hancock co., Ind., 15 miles E. by S. from Indianapolis.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Montgomery co., Indiana. Population, 777.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Parke co., Indiana. Population, 1355.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Shelby co., Indiana. Population, 743.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Vigo co., Indiana. Population, 1180.

SUGAR CREEK, a post-office of Williamson co., Illinois.

SUGAR CREEK, a township in Randolph co., Missouri. Population, 965.

SUGAR CREEK, a post-township in the W. central part of Walworth co., Wisconsin.

SUGAR CREEK, a small post-village in the above township, 41 miles W. S. W. from Milwaukee.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-township of Warren co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1523.

SUGAR GROVE, a thriving post-village in the above township, 15 miles N. W. from Warren. It is pleasantly situated, and has several stores.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-office of Pendleton co., Virginia.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-office of Ashe co., N. C., 232 miles W. by N. from Raleigh.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-office of Butler co., Ky.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-village of Fairfield co., Ohio, on the Hocking Valley canal.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-office of Tippecanoe co., Indiana.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-township in Kane co., Illinois. Population, 734.

SUGAR GROVE, a post-village of Poweshiek co., Iowa, about 70 miles W. from Iowa City.

SUGAR HILL, a post-office of Grafton co., New Hampshire.

SUGAR HILL, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

SUGAR HILL, a post-office of McDowell co., North Carolina.

SUGAR HILL, a post-office of Marion dis., S. C.

SUGAR HILL, a post-office of Hall co., Ga.

SUGAR HILL, a post-office of Panola co., Tex.

SUGAR LAKE, a post-office of Crawford co., Pennsylvania.

SUGAR LAND, a post-office of Matagorda co., Texas.

SUGARLOAF, a post-village of Orange co., New York, about 50 miles N. N. W. from New York city.

SUGARLOAF, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Columbia co., Pa. Pop., 1316.

SUGARLOAF, a small village of Columbia co., Pennsylvania.

SUGARLOAF, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Luzerne co., Pa. Pop., 1023.

SUGARLOAF, a township in Carroll co., Arkansas. Population, 310.

SUGARLOAF, a township in Crawford co. Arkansas. Population, 911.

SUGARLOAF, a township in Marion co., Arkansas. Population, 343.

SUGARLOAF, a post-office of Sebastian co., Arkansas.

SUGARLOAF, a township in Van Buren co., Arkansas. Population, 260.

SUGAR POINT, a post-office of Barren co., Ky.

SUGAR RIVER, of Sullivan co., New Hampshire, forms the outlet of Sunapee lake, and falls into the Connecticut river.

SUGAR RIVER, of Wisconsin, rises in Dane county, and flowing in a S. E. direction through Green county, passes into Illinois and enters the Pekatonica about 7 miles from its mouth.

SUGAR RUN, a small post-village of Bradford co., Pennsylvania.

SUGAR RUN, a post-office of Wetzel co., Va.

SUGARTOWN, a post-office of Cattaraugus co., New York.

SUGARTOWN, a small post-village of Chester co., Pennsylvania, 79 miles E. S. E. from Harrisburg.

SUGAR TREE, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

SUGARTREE RIDGE, a small post-village of Highland co., Ohio, 10 miles S. from Hillsborough.

SUGAR VALLEY, a post-office of Clinton co., Pennsylvania.

SUGAR VALLEY, a post-office of Murray co., Georgia.

SUGAR VALLEY, a post-village of Preble co., Ohio, 100 miles W. from Columbus.

SUGGSVILLE, a post-village in Clarke co., Alabama, 110 miles S. W. from Montgomery.

SUISOON creek, of California, falls into Suisoon bay.

SUISOON, (soo'e-soon') or SUISUN, a small bay of California, E. of San Pablo bay, with which it is connected by the straits of Karquenias. Length, about 15 miles; greatest breadth, 6 or 7 miles.

SULACOE CREEK, of Georgia, flows into the Coosawattee a few miles from its mouth. It is called also Pine Log creek.

SULLIVAN, a county in the W. S. W. part of New Hampshire, has an area of about 570 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Connecticut, and is drained by the Ashuelot and other smaller streams. It contains several small ponds; Sunapee lake forms part of its eastern border. The surface is generally elevated, with occasional mountain ridges and peaks, of which Croydon mountain and the Sunapee mountains are the principal. The soil is fertile, especially along the valleys of its numerous streams. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 122,609 bushels of corn; 98,003 of oats; 182,720 of potatoes; 54,038 tons of hay, and 580,875 pounds of butter. There were 3 cotton and 11 woollen factories, 10 flour mills, 1 paper mill, 26 saw and planing mills, 16 tanneries, 1 cutlery and 15 boot and shoe manufactories. It contained 6 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 5103 pupils attending public schools, and 416 attending other schools. The Connecticut river is navigable for boats along the border of this county. It is intersected by the Sullivan railroad. Organized in 1827, having previously formed part of Cheshire county. Capital, Newport. Population, 19,375.

SULLIVAN, a county in the south-eastern part of New York, has an area of about 890 square miles. It is partly bounded on the S. E. by the Shawangunk river, and on the W. by the Delaware, which separates it from Pennsylvania. It is drained by Neversink, Mongaup, and Beaverkill rivers, and other smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. It has several small lakes or ponds. The surface is generally uneven and mountainous, although the valleys are sometimes quite extensive. The soil along the streams is fertile; on the more elevated portions better adapted to grazing than tillage. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 94,529 bushels of corn; 110,456 of oats; 122,980 of potatoes; 22,001 tons of hay, and 732,691 pounds of butter. There were 23 flour mills, 207 saw mills, 29 tanneries, 18 boot and shoe factories, 2 woollen factories, 1 iron foundry, and 24 turning establishments. It contained 38 churches, 3 newspaper offices; 5894 pupils attending public schools, and 160 attending academies or other schools. There is a lead mine at Wartzborough, in the S. E. part. The Delaware and Hudson canal and the New York and Erie railroad traverse this county. Capital, Monticello. Population, 25,088.

SULLIVAN, a county in the N. N. E. part of Pennsylvania, has an area of about 430 square miles. It is traversed by Loyalsock creek, an affluent of Susquehanna river, and drained also by Muncy and Little Loyalsock creeks. The surface is elevated, and mostly covered with forests. The Alleghany mountain crosses the county in an E. and W. direction, having a very gradual descent towards the N. Lumber is the chief article of export. Indian corn, wheat, hay, and butter are the staple productions. In 1850 there were raised 21,437 bushels of corn; 11,959 of wheat; 4719 tons of hay, and 90,250 pounds of butter were made. There were 17 saw mills, 5 flour and grist mills, 1 woollen factory, and 1 tannery. It contained 46 churches, and 899 pupils attending public schools. Formed out of part of Lycoming in 1847. Capital, Laporte. Population, 3694.

SULLIVAN, a county in the N. E. part of Tennessee, bordering on Virginia: area, estimated at 300 square miles. It is drained by the Holston and Watauga rivers, which unite near its S. border. The surface is diversified by high ridges and valleys connected with the Alleghany chain. The soil is fertile, well timbered, and plentifully supplied with springs. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 373,698 bushels of corn; 69,937 of wheat; 162,914 of oats, and 99,299 pounds of butter. It contained 28 churches, 825 pupils attending public schools, and 24 attending academies and other schools. Iron ore is found. The East Tennessee and Virginia railroad passes through this county. Capital, Blountsville. Population, 11,742; of whom 10,738 were free, and 1004, slaves.

SULLIVAN, a county in the W. part of Indiana, bordering on Illinois, contains 430 square miles. It is drained by Busseron creek, and bounded on the W. by the Wabash river. The surface is mostly level, and the soil productive. Wheat, maize, oats, and grass are the staples. Cattle, horses, and swine are also exported. In 1850 this county produced 742,136 bushels of corn; 56,725 of wheat; 75,879 of oats, and 3751 tons of hay. There were 21 churches, and 2047 pupils attending public schools. The county contains extensive beds of bituminous coal. The Wabash is navigable for steamboats in high water. Organized in 1817, and named in honor of Daniel Sullivan, who was killed by Indians while employed in the public service. Capital, Sullivan. Population, 10,141.

SULLIVAN, a new county in the N. part of Missouri, has an area of 650 square miles

It is traversed from N. to S. by Locust creek, by the E. fork of Medicine creek, and by Yellow and Wolf creeks. The slope of the county is towards the S. Prairies of considerable extent occur in it. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 176,789 bushels of corn; 11,482 of wheat; 15,974 of oats; 1201 tons of hay, and 35,648 pounds of butter. Named in honor of John C. Sullivan, member of the convention to form the constitution of Missouri. Population, 2983, of whom 2895 were free, and 88, slaves.

SULLIVAN, a post-township in Hancock co., Maine, 90 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 810.

SULLIVAN, a post-township in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, 38 miles W. S. W. from Concord. Population, 468.

SULLIVAN, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Madison co., New York, on Oneida lake. Population, 4764.

SULLIVAN, a post-village in the above township, on Canaseraga creek, about 120 miles W. by N. from Albany.

SULLIVAN, a post-township of Tioga co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles E. from Wellsborough. Population, 1757.

SULLIVAN, a small post-village of Tioga co., Pennsylvania.

SULLIVAN, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Ashland co., O. Pop., 1099.

SULLIVAN, a small post-village of Ashland co., Ohio, 99 miles N. N. E. from Columbus.

SULLIVAN, a post-village, capital of Sullivan co., Indiana, 100 miles S. W. from Indianapolis. Laid out in 1842. It contains a court house, a county seminary, and 2 churches.

SULLIVAN, a small post-village of Moultrie co., Ill., about 10 miles W. by N. from Auburn.

SULLIVAN, a post-village in Dubuque co., Iowa, near the Mississippi river, 70 miles N. E. from Iowa City.

SULLIVAN, a post-township in the S. E. part of Jefferson co., Wisconsin. Population, 872.

SULLIVAN'S MILLS, a post-office of Jennings co., Indiana.

SULLIVANVILLE, a post-village of Chemung co., New York, 10 miles N. E. from Elmira, has 2 stores.

SULPHUR BLUFF, a post-office of Hopkins co., Texas.

SULPHUR FORK, of Red river, rises in Fannin co., Texas, and flowing eastward into Arkansas, falls into Red river, on the boundary between the latter state and Louisiana.

SULPHUR FORK, a township in Lafayette co., Arkansas. Population, 218.

SULPHUR HILL, a post-office of Shelby co., Indiana.

SULPHUR LICK, a post-village of Monroe co., Kentucky.

SULPHUR LICK, a post-office of Lincoln co., Missouri.

SULPHUR MILLS, a small village of Jessamine co., Kentucky.

SULPHUR ROCK, a post-office of Independence co., Arkansas.

SULPHUR SPRING, a post-village of Buncombe co., North Carolina, 260 miles W. from Raleigh, is much frequented as a summer resort.

SULPHUR SPRING, a township in Montgomery co., Arkansas. Population, 552.

SULPHUR SPRING, a township in Polk co., Arkansas. Population, 247.

SULPHUR SPRING, a small village of Pope co., Arkansas.

SULPHUR SPRING, a post-office of Crawford co., Ohio.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Benton co., Alabama.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-village of Madison co., Mississippi.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Cherokee co., Texas.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Rhea co., Tennessee.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Henry co., Indiana.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Williamson co., Illinois.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, a post-office of Jefferson co., Missouri.

SULPHUR WELL, a post-office of Shelby co., Tennessee.

SULPHUR WELL, a post-office of Jessamine co., Kentucky.

SUMANTOWN, or SUMNEYTOWN, a post-village of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, on Perkiomen creek, 98 miles E. from Harrisburg. It has several stores and a newspaper office.

SUMMERFIELD, a post-village in Guilford co., N. C., 99 miles W. N. W. from Raleigh.

SUMMERFIELD, a post-office of Dallas co., Ala.

SUMMERFIELD, a post-village of Noble co., Ohio, 100 miles E. by S. from Columbus. Population, about 200.

SUMMERFIELD, a post-township in the S. W. part of Monroe co., Mich. Pop., 472.

SUMMERFORD, a post-office of Madison co., O.

SUMMER GROVE, a post-office of Smith co., Texas.

SUMMER HILL, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Cayuga co., New York. It is said that Ex-President Fillmore was born in this township. Population, 1251.

SUMMER HILL, a post-township of Cambria co., Pennsylvania. Population, 1497.

SUMMER HILL, a post-village in the above township, 23 miles W. by S. from Hollidaysburg.

SUMMER HILL, a township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Beaver and Erie canal, about 10 miles W. N. W. from Meadville. Population, 1160.

SUMMER LAKE is in the southern interior of Oregon Territory, in lat. about 42° 40' N., lon. 120° 40' W. Length, about 10 miles.

SUMMERS, a post-office of Rockbridge co., Va.

SUMMERS, a township in Saline co., Illinois. Population, 672.

SUM

SUMMERSET, a post-office of Hancock co., Ill.
 SUMMERSET, a post-village in Polk co., Iowa, 115 miles W. by S. from Iowa City.

SUMMERSVILLE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Pennsylvania.

SUMMERSVILLE, a small village of Noxubee co., Mississippi.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village of Butler co. Pa.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village, capital of Nicholas co., Virginia, 286 miles W. by N. from Richmond.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village of Cumberland co., N. C., 30 miles S. from Raleigh.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village on the line between Charleston and Colleton districts, South Carolina, and on the South Carolina railroad, 22 miles N. W. from Charleston.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village, capital of Chattooga county, Georgia, on Chattooga river, 195 miles N. W. from Milledgeville. It is pleasantly situated in a fertile valley, and contains a handsome court house, 2 or 3 churches, and 5 or 6 dry-goods stores.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village of Greene co., Ky., about 85 miles S. S. W. from Frankfort.

SUMMERVILLE, a village of Union co., Ohio, about 50 miles N. W. from Columbus.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village of Cass co., Michigan, on the Dowagiac river, 11 miles W. from Cassopolis.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village in Cook co., Illinois, on the Illinois and Michigan canal, 12 miles S. W. from Chicago.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-office of Boone co., Mo.

SUMMERVILLE, a post-village of Rock co., Wisconsin, 15 miles S. E. from Janesville. It contains about 20 dwellings.

SUMMIT, a county in the N. E. part of Ohio, has an area of 400 square miles. It is intersected by the Cuyahoga river, and also drained by the head streams of the Tuscarawas river, and by Wolf creek. It comprises the highest land on the line of the Ohio canal, which is about 400 feet above the level of Lake Erie, and is sometimes called the Portage Summit. The name of the county was derived from this circumstance. The surface is undulating, and in some parts level; the soil is excellent, and in good cultivation. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, hay, wool, apples, butter, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 365,762 bushels of corn; 325,642 of wheat; 225,998 of oats, and 37,793 tons of hay. It contained 33 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 9614 pupils attending public schools, and 280 attending academies or other schools. Large beds of stone coal and of mineral fireproof paint have been discovered, and are exported extensively. It is copiously supplied with water-power. The Pennsylvania and Ohio canal connects with the Ohio canal at Akron. The county is intersected by the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad, and by the Cleveland and Zanesville railroad, now in course of construction. Capital, Akron. Pop., 27,485.

SUM

SUMMIT, a railroad station of Broome co., New York, on the New York and Erie railroad, 194 miles from New York city. Near this place the railroad passes through a cut in the rock nearly 200 feet in depth.

SUMMIT, a post-township of Schoharie co., New York, about 50 miles W. by S. from Albany. Population, 1800.

SUMMIT, a post-office of Essex co., N. J.

SUMMIT, or SUMMITVILLE, a thriving post-borough of Cambria county, Pennsylvania, on the Portage railroad, where it crosses the summit of the Alleghany mountain by several inclined planes, 104 miles E. from Pittsburg, and about 2500 feet above the level of the sea. The Pennsylvania railroad passes near the place. Incorporated in 1850. Population in 1853, about 800.

SUMMIT, a township of Crawford co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Beaver and Erie canal, about 10 miles W. by N. from Meadville. Population, 1074.

SUMMIT, a township of Somerset co., Pennsylvania, about 14 miles S. by E. from Somerset. Population, 959.

SUMMIT, a post-office of Northampton co., North Carolina.

SUMMIT, a post-office of Blount co., Ala.

SUMMIT, a post-office of Summit co., Ohio.

SUMMIT, a post-office of Oakland co., Mich.

SUMMIT, a post-office of Whitley co., Indiana, 8 miles W. from Columbia.

SUMMIT, a village of Cook co., Illinois, on the Des Plaines river, and on the Illinois and Michigan canal, about 12 miles W. S. W. from Chicago.

SUMMIT, a post-township in the N. W. part of Waukesha co., Wisconsin. Pop., 1008.

SUMMIT, a post-village in the above township, about 30 miles W. from Milwaukee.

SUMMIT BRIDGE, a post-village in New Castle co., Delaware, about 30 miles N. by W. from Dover.

SUMMIT HILL, a post-village of Carbon co., Pennsylvania, 9 miles W. from Mauch Chunk. Immense quantities of coal are mined here, and conveyed by railroad to the canal at Mauch Chunk.

SUMMIT MILLS, a post-office of Somerset co., Pa., about 150 miles W. from Harrisburg.

SUMMIT POINT, a post-office of Jefferson co., Virginia.

SUMMITVILLE, Pennsylvania. See SUMMIT.

SUMMITVILLE, a post-office of Alleghany co., Maryland.

SUMMITVILLE, a post-office of Madison co., Indiana.

SUMMITVILLE, a post-village of Lee co., Iowa, about 15 miles N. N. W. from Keokuk.

SUMNER, a county in the N. part of Tennessee, bordering on Kentucky, has an area estimated at 600 square miles. The Cumberland river forms its entire boundary on the S., and it is also drained by creeks which flow northward into Big Barren river. The surface is undulating; the soil excellent. Indian corn, oats, tobacco, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1,375,590 bushels of corn; 209,077 of oats; 809,517 pounds of tobacco, and 197,213 of butter. It contained 21 churches, 1 newspaper office; and 1542 pupils attending academies and other schools. The Cumberland river is navigated by steamboats on the border. The county is intersected by the Louisville and Nashville railroad, now in course of construction. Capital, Gallatin. Population, 22,717; of whom 14,711 were free, and 8006, slaves.

SUMNER, a post-township in Oxford co., Maine, 35 miles W. from Augusta. Population, 1151.

SUMNEYTOWN, Pa. See SUMANYTOWN.

SUMPTER, a post-office of Trinity co., Texas.

SUMPTION'S PRAIRIES, a post-office of St. Joseph co., Indiana.

SUMTER, a district towards the S. E. part of South Carolina, has an area of about 1500 square miles. It is bounded on the W. by the Wateree and Santee rivers, on the S. by the Santee, on the N. E. by Lynch's creek, and drained by the head streams of Black river. The surface is level or undulating, and partly covered with pine woods. The soil is generally productive. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, oats, sweet potatoes, and rice are the staples. In 1850 this district produced 18,779 bales of cotton; 750,520 bushels of corn; 7410 of wheat; 44,465 of oats, and 376,555 of sweet potatoes. There were 37 grist, and 7 saw and planing mills, 3 tanneries, and 1 cotton-gin factory. It contained 62 churches, 1 newspaper office; 504 pupils attending public schools, and 304 attending academies and other schools. The Santee is navigable by steamboats on the border of the district, which is intersected by the Wilmington and Manchester railroad. Capital, Sumterville. Population, 33,220; of whom 10,155 were free, and 23,065 slaves.

SUMTER, a county in the W. S. W. part of Georgia, has an area of 590 square miles. It is bounded on the E. by the Flint river, and traversed by Muckalee and Kinchafoonee creeks, affluents of that river. The surface is level, or rather flat, and partly covered with forests. The soil is productive, especially along the river and creeks. Cotton, Indian corn, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 7535 bales of cotton; 354,842 bushels of corn, and 120,333 of sweet potatoes. There were 3 grist mills, 8 saw mills, 1 woollen factory, and 4 tanneries. It contained 25 churches; 265 pupils attending public schools, and 30 attending an academy. It is contemplated to extend the South-western railroad through the county. Organized in 1831. Capital, Americus. Population, 10,322; of whom 6487 were free, and 3835, slaves.

SUMTER county, Florida. Organized since 1850.

SUMTER, a county in the W. part of Alabama, bordering on Mississippi, has an area estimated at 800 square miles. It is bounded on the E. and N. E. by Tombigbee river, intersected by the Noxubee river, and also drained by Tugaloo creek. The surface is somewhat uneven; the soil fertile, especially near the rivers. Cotton, Indian corn, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 14,066 bales of cotton; 926,826 bushels of corn; 62,359 of oats, and 182,007 of sweet potatoes. There were 2 saw and grist mills, 2 manufactories of cabinet ware, and 1 of machinery. It contained 27 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 433 pupils attending public schools, and 160 attending academies or other schools. The Tombigbee is navigable by steamboats on the border. The county is intersected by the Alabama and Mississippi railroad, now in course of construction. Capital, Livingston. Pop., 22,250; of whom 7419 were free, and 14,831, slaves.

SUMTER, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Wayne co., Michigan. Pop., 434.

SUMTERVILLE, a post-village, capital of Sumter district, South Carolina, on the Wilmington and Manchester railroad, 63 miles E. by S. from Columbia. It contains a bank, several churches, and 2 newspaper offices.

SUMTERVILLE, a post-village in Lee co., Ga., 100 miles S. W. by S. from Milledgeville.

SUMTERVILLE, a post-village of Sumter co., Alabama, near Tombigbee river, 64 miles S. W. from Tuscaloosa.

SUN, a post-office of St. Tammany par., La.

SUNAPEE LAKE, New Hampshire, between Sullivan and Merrimack counties, is near 10 miles long, and from 1 to 2½ miles wide. It is said to be elevated more than 1000 feet above the level of the sea. The outlet discharges its waters through Sugar river into the Merrimack.

SUNBURY, a small village of Butler co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles N. from Butler.

SUNBURY, a flourishing and beautifully situated town, capital of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, on the left (E.) bank of the Susquehanna river, 1 mile below the junction of its branches, 56 miles N. from Harrisburg, and 134 miles N. W. from Philadelphia. It contains several churches, and 3 newspaper offices. At this point the Sunbury and Erie railroad, now in progress, connects with the Susquehanna railroad, leading from Harrisburg to Elmira, and with the Philadelphia and Sunbury railroad. A canal, belonging to the state, crosses the river a little below the town, at the Shamokin dam, which is 2783 feet long. A bridge across the North branch connects Sunbury with Northumberland. Stone coal is procured in the county, and shipped here. Population in 1850, 1218.

SUNBURY, a small post-village of Gates co., N. C., about 150 miles N. E. from Raleigh.

SUNBURY, a decayed town of Liberty co., Georgia, on the Medway river, about 30 miles S. S. W. from Savannah. It was built in 1778, and immediately after the Revolution was a flourishing seaport. It now has only about 6 or 8 families.

SUNBURY, a thriving post-village of Delaware co., Ohio, 20 miles N. N. E. from Columbus. Population, about 500.

SUNBURY, a township in the N. part of Monroe co., Ohio. Population, 1237.

SUNBURY, a small village of Montgomery co., Ohio.

SUNBURY, a small post-village of Livingston co., Illinois, 110 miles N. E. by N. from Springfield.

SUNCOOK, a post-office of Merrimack co., New Hampshire.

SUNCOOK RIVER, of New Hampshire, rises in Strafford co., and flowing through Belknap county, falls into the Merrimack about 15 miles S. S. E. from Concord.

SUN CREEK, of Mississippi, flows S. E. through Covington co., into Bowie river.

SUNDAY CREEK, of Ohio, enters the Hocking river a few miles above Athens.

SUNDAY CREEK CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Perry co., Ohio.

SUNDERLAND, a post-village in Bennington co., Vermont, on the Western Vermont railroad, 95 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population of the township, 479.

SUNDERLAND, a post-village in Franklin co., Massachusetts, on the E. side of Connecticut river, 82 miles W. by N. from Boston. A bridge crosses the river at this place. Population of the township, 792.

SUNFIELD, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Eaton co., Mich. Pop., 122.

SUNFISH, a post-office of Monroe co., Ohio.

SUNFISH, a township in the W. part of Pike co., Ohio. Population, 371.

SUNFISH CREEK, of Monroe co., Ohio, flows into the Ohio river.

SUNFLOWER, a county in the W. N. W. part of Mississippi, has an area of about 1000 square miles. It is intersected by the Sunflower river, from which it derives its name, and is bounded on the S. E. by the Yazoo. The surface is a level, alluvial plain or swamp, the soil of which is very fertile. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1900 bales of cotton, and 33,390 bushels of corn. The Yazoo is a deep and sluggish stream, navigable by steamboats in nearly all stages of water. Formed from Bolivar county. Capital, McNutt. Population, 1102, of whom 348 were free, and 754, slaves.

SUNFLOWER river, a small stream of Mississippi, rises in Coahoma co., and flows southward until it enters the Yazoo near the N. border of Warren county.

SUNKHAZE, a post-office of Penobscot co., Maine.

SUNNYSIDE, a post-office of Lowndes co., Ala.

SUN PRAIRIE, a post-township in the N. E. part of Dane co., Wisconsin.

SUNRISE, a post-office of Bath co., Va.

SUNVILLE, a small post-village of Venango co., Pennsylvania.

SUPERIOR, LAKE, the largest and most westerly of the five great lakes of North America, lying on the northern border of the United States, is situated between 46° 35' and 49° N. lat., and 84° 30' and 92° 20' W. lon. The length, following the bend of the lake, is about 400 miles; greatest breadth, above 160 miles; area, estimated at 32,000 square miles. The surface is about 630 feet above the Atlantic. The mean depth is stated at 900 feet. Lake Superior is probably the largest body of fresh water on the globe. The waves on this lake are said to be as high as those on the Atlantic, and the storms equally severe and violent. Its waters are remarkably clear: they abound with fish, particularly with white fish and trout. The former frequently weigh 20 pounds or upwards, and the latter are said sometimes to weigh 50 pounds. Sturgeons are also found. Lake Superior receives a great number of small streams, among which the St. Louis, entering at its W. extremity, is perhaps the most deserving of notice. It discharges its waters into Lake Huron by the channel or river named St. Mary's strait. The coasts of Lake Superior are in many places rocky and bold. The pictured rocks on the S. E. shore are regarded as among the most interesting natural curiosities in the United States. They form a perpendicular wall about 300 feet high, and extending near 12 miles along the shore. Lake Superior is noted for the extensive deposits of copper, found both along the American and Canadian shore, and also in Isle Royale, situated near its northern side. See MICHIGAN, pp. 692-3, and KEWEE-NAW POINT.

SUPERIOR, a township in the central part of Williams co., Ohio. Population, 723.

SUPERIOR, a post-township in the E. part of Washtenaw co., Michigan. Pop., 1127.

SURGEON'S HALL, a post-office of Alleghany co., Pennsylvania.

SURRENEY'S, a post-office of Tatnall co., Ga., about 135 miles S. E. from Milledgeville.

SURROUNDED HILL, a post-office of Monroe co., Arkansas.

SURRY, a county in the S. E. part of Virginia, has an area of 340 square miles. James river forms the boundary on the N. E., and Blackwater river on the S. W. The surface is moderately uneven; the soil is generally sandy. Indian corn is the staple product. In 1850 there were raised 204,975 bushels of corn. There were 5 saw mills, and 11 churches. Formed in 1652, and named from Surry, a county in England. Capital, Surry Court House. Pop., 5679, of whom 3200 were free, and 2479, slaves.

SURRY, a county in the N. N. W. part of North Carolina, bordering on Virginia: area, estimated at 900 square miles. It is bounded on the S. by Yadkin river, and intersected by the Ararat and Fisher's rivers. The surface is hilly or mountainous. The famous Pilot mountain of this county is remarkably symmetrical in its form, which resembles a cylinder. The soil is mostly fertile. Indian corn, oats, and pork are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 552,454 bushels of corn, and 145,472 of oats. There were 3 cotton factories, 7 iron forges, 1 iron foundry, 5 corn and flour mills, 4 saw mills, and 11 distilleries. It contained 30 churches, 2098 pupils attending public schools, and 140 attending academies or other schools. Iron ore is abundant. Formed in 1770 from Rowan county. Capital, Rockford. Population, 9206, of whom 7413 were free, and 1793, slaves.

SURRY, a post-township in Hancock co., Maine, on the W. side of Union river, 65 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Pop., 1189.

SURRY, a post-township in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, 45 miles S. W. from Concord. Population, 556.

SURRY COURT HOUSE, a small post-village, capital of Surry co., Virginia, about 5 miles from James river, and 60 miles S. E. from Richmond.

SUSCOL, a town of Napa co., California, 15 miles N. W. of Benicia, is situated on the Napa river, about 6 miles from its mouth.

SUSPENSION BRIDGE, a flourishing post-village of Niagara county, New York, is situated on the Niagara river, 2 miles below the cataract, of which it commands a fine distant view. At this point the International Railroad Suspension Bridge has been thrown across the river, to connect the Great Western railroad of Canada with the several railways of New York, viz. the Rochester and Niagara Falls railroad, (one of the western termini of the Central railroad,) and the Canandaigua and Suspension Bridge railroad, which is a branch of the New York and Erie road, diverging from Elmira. Another line extends northward to Youngstown, and southward to Buffalo, connecting with the steam navigation of Lake Ontario and Erie. The width of the Canadian track is different from that of the New York roads, in consequence of which freight is transhipped at this place. The bridge is a single span of 800 feet in length, raised 230 feet above the water, and supported by 4 wire cables $9\frac{1}{2}$ inches diameter, with an ultimate capacity of sustain-10,000 tons. There are two floors, the upper for the railroad track, and the lower for wagons. The eastern end of the bridge commands a fine view of the falls and of the rapids under and below the bridge, for three-fourths of a mile to the whirlpool. The water of these rapids runs at the rate of 25 miles per hour, with breakers dashing from 10 to 20 feet in height. Viewed from the shore, they present one of the grandest sights of the kind in the world, and the tourist has not seen Niagara until he has stood on the shore 150 rods below the bridge. During the season of travel, a small steamer makes trips from the village to the foot of the falls, from the deck of which the most magnificent view of the cataract is obtained. The late Hon. Samuel Deveaux bequeathed about \$150,000 for the erection and support of a collegiate institute, to be called by his own name. It is to be situated half a mile north of the village, and to be under the direction of the Episcopalians. The village contains (1853) 3 or 4 hotels, a number of stores, and about 800 inhabitants.

SUSQUEHANNA, a beautiful river of Pennsylvania and Maryland, is formed by the union of two principal branches, which unite at Northumberland, 60 miles above Harrisburg. From this point the river flows nearly S. to the mouth of the Juniata, and turning towards the S. E., it passes Harrisburg, Columbia, and Port Deposit, and falls into the N. extremity of Chesapeake bay, at Havre de Grace, in Maryland. The main stream is about 150 miles long, and has a very unequal breadth, which in some places exceeds a mile, and at others is less than one-fourth of a mile. It is adorned by numerous beautiful islands, and the channel is frequently obstructed by rocky rapids, which prevent navigation in low stages of water. A canal has been constructed along the river from its mouth to Columbia, 45 miles, and another from Columbia to Northumberland, about 80 miles. This river, which is the largest stream in Pennsylvania, flows through a populous and highly cultivated country, which is diversified by fertile limestone valleys, and by mountain ridges in which iron is abundant.

Branches.—The East branch, called also the North branch, rises in Otsego lake, in the S. E. central part of New York. Its course is very tortuous, and its general direction is south-westward. The whole length of this branch is estimated at 250 miles. It flows through the beautiful valley of Wyoming, and the rich coalfields of Luzerne county. A canal has been opened along this stream, about 124 miles above Northumberland. The W. branch rises in Cambria county, Pennsylvania, on the W. declivity of the Alleghany mountain, and has a very serpentine course of more than 200 miles, the general direction of which is eastward. The navigation of this branch is improved for 75 miles. The region through which it flows abounds in pine timber and stone coal, and large quantities of the former are transported by the canal.

SUSQUEHANNA, a county in the N. N. E. part of Pennsylvania, bordering on New York, has an area of 800 square miles. The N. branch of the Susquehanna crosses the northern border of the county, and then returns to New York, forming what is called the "Great Bend." It is drained also by the Meshoppen, Tunkhannock, Choconut, and Wyalusing creeks. The surface is hilly, and in some places almost mountainous; the hills are generally neither high nor steep. Elk mountain, in the S. E. part, rises about 2000 feet above the sea. The land is particularly adapted to grazing and the dairy business. Indian corn, oats, wheat, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 it produced 237,343 bushels of corn; 365,640 of oats; 83,783 of wheat; 50,105 tons of hay, and 1,020,578 pounds of butter. There were 122 saw mills, 30 flour and grist mills, 6 wool-carding mills, 4 woollen factories, 4 iron foundries, and 25 tanneries. It contained 4 churches, 2 newspaper offices, 8091 pupils attending public schools, and 160 attending academies or other schools. Extensive forests of beech, sugar maple, pine, hemlock, &c. overspread part of the county, and lumber is an article of export. The county is traversed by the Lackawanna and Western railroad, and by the Erie railroad of New York. Organized in 1810, and named from its principal river. Capital, Montrose. Population, 28,688.

SUSQUEHANNA, a post-office of Broome co., New York.

SUSQUEHANNA, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Cambria co., Pa. Pop., 640.

SUSQUEHANNA, a post-township of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna river. It is intersected by the Pennsylvania canal and by the Pennsylvania railroad, and partly by the Lancaster and Harrisburg railroad. Contains Harrisburg, the capital of the state. Total population, 9479.

SUSQUEHANNA, a township of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania, on the S. bank of the Susquehanna river, about 7 miles W. S. W. from Williamsport. Population, 406.

SUSQUEHANNA, a flourishing post-village of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, is finely situated on the river of the same name, and on the Erie railroad, 23 miles S. E. from Binghamton. It has grown up since the opening of the railroad in 1848, and contains an important station, with an engine house and shops for the repair of engines and cars. The Starucca viaduct, which is perhaps the greatest structure on the Erie railroad, crosses Starucca creek about 3 miles above this village. It is 1200 feet long, 110 feet high, having 18 arches with spans of 50 feet. The post-office is Susquehanna Depôt. Population in 1853, about 1500.

SUSSEX, the most northern county of New Jersey, has an area of about 600 square miles. It is bounded on the N. W. by the Delaware, and partly on the S. by the Musconetcong, and is drained by Flatkill, Paulinskill, and Pequest rivers, flowing into the Delaware, and by several branches of Walkill river, an affluent of the Hudson. These streams afford valuable water-power. Besides Hopatcong lake, on its S. E. border, which supplies the summit level of the Morris canal, there are numerous ponds, the chief of which are Swartwout's and Culver's ponds. The surface is undulating and hilly, with the Blue mountains in the N. W., and the Hamburg and Wawayanda mountains in the S. E. part. The soil between the two mountain ranges is very fertile, and everywhere highly cultivated. Indian corn, wheat, rye, oats, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 459,254 bushels of corn; 66,006 of wheat; 229,795 of rye; 151,011 of oats; 37,711 tons of hay, and 1,816,610 pounds of butter. The quantity of rye and butter was each the greatest produced by any county in the state. There were 13 forges, 6 foundries, 3 furnaces, 25 flour mills, and 11 saw mills. It contained 44 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 7196 pupils attending public schools, and 166 attending academies or other schools. Franklinitic, (a compound of iron, zinc, and manganese), red oxide of zinc, and magnetic iron ore are abundant and extensively worked; besides these, the county furnishes a great variety of remarkable and interesting minerals to the mineralogist. Limestone is also found in the N. W. part. The Delaware river is navigable for small boats along the W. border. Formed from Morris county in 1753, and named from Sussex, a county of England. Capital, Newton. Population, 22,989.

SUSSEX, the southernmost of the counties of Delaware, borders on Maryland, the Atlantic, and on Delaware bay: area, about 1000 square miles. It is drained by the sources of the Nanticoke, Pocomoke, and Indian rivers, and by Missillion, Cedar, and Deep creeks. The surface is nearly level; the soil is generally good and well cultivated. Indian corn, wheat, potatoes, hay, and butter are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 1,180,086 bushels of corn, (more than any other county in the state;) 43,725 of wheat; 50,796 of potatoes, and 108,489 pounds of butter. There were 29 grist mills, 60 saw and planing mills, 8 tanneries, 3 bark mills, 1 iron foundry, and 1 forge. It contained 59 churches, 4874 pupils attending public schools, and 80 attending other schools. It is partly intersected by the Dona and Seaford railroad. Capital, Georgetown. Population, 25,936, of whom 24,387 were free, and 1549, slaves.

SUSSEX, a county in the S. S. E. part of Virginia, has an area of 400 square miles. It is intersected by the Nottaway river, and bounded on the N. E. by Blackwater river. The surface is moderately uneven; the soil produces cotton, Indian corn, and forests of pine. In 1850 there were raised 356,171 bushels of corn; 35,133 of wheat, and 780 bales of cotton. There were 20 flour, grist, and saw mills, 2 coach manufactories, and 1 tannery. It contained 24 churches, and 249 pupils attending academies and other schools.

The railroad from Petersburg to Weldon passes through the county. Formed from Surry in 1754. Capital, Sussex Court House. Population, 9820, of whom 3828 were free, and 5992, slaves.

SUSSEX, a post-village in Lisbon township, Waukesha county, Wisconsin, 16 miles N. W. from Milwaukee. It contains 1 wagon shop, 1 saw mill, 1 school house, and an Episcopal church. Population, 100.

SUSSEX COURT HOUSE, a post-village, capital of Sussex co., Virginia, 50 miles S. by E. from Richmond.

SUTHERLAND SPRINGS, a post-office of Bexar co., Texas.

SUTTER, a county towards the N. part of California, has an area estimated at above 500 square miles. It is bounded on the W. and S. W. by the Sacramento river, and on the E. by Feather river, by which it is also intersected. The surface in some parts is uneven and mountainous. Sutter's Buttes are the principal elevations. The soil is generally very fertile. Barley, potatoes, hay, cattle, and hogs are the staples. In 1852 it produced 50,927 bushels of barley; 1930 of potatoes, and 1488 tons of hay. There were 1075 beef cattle; 2389 work oxen, and 2333 hogs. The proposed railroad from Benicia to Marysville intersects the county. Named from Captain Sutter, of Missouri, one of the earliest settlers in California. Population, 1207.

SUTTER CREEK, a post-office of Calaveras co., California.

SUTTERSVILLE, a small village of Sacramento co., California, on the right bank of the Sacramento river, below and adjoining the city of that name.

SUTTON, a post-township in Merrimack co., New Hampshire, 20 miles W. N. W. from Concord. Population, 1387.

SUTTON, a post-township in Caledonia co., Vermont, 40 miles N. E. from Montpelier. Population, 1001.

SUTTON, a post-village in Worcester co., Massachusetts, near the Blackstone river and canal, and the Providence and Worcester railroad, 42 miles W. S. W. from Boston. Population of the township, 2595.

SUTTON, or BRAXTON COURT HOUSE, a small post-village, capital of Braxton co., Virginia, on the Elk river, 289 miles W. N. W. from Richmond.

SUTTON, a township in the S. part of Meigs co., Ohio, on the Ohio river. Pop., 1596.

SUTTON'S, a post-office of Williamsburg district, South Carolina.

SUTTON'S MILLS, a post-office of Essex co., Massachusetts.

SUTTON'S POINT, a small post-village of Clay co., Illinois.

SUWANEE river, rises in the Okefinokee swamp, Ware county, Georgia, and passing through Florida, enters the Gulf of Mexico, at the S. extremity of Madison county.

SUWANEE, a post-village of Guinnett co., Georgia, about 100 miles N. N. W. from Milledgeville.

SUWANEE SHOALS, a post-office of Columbia co., Florida.

SUWANOCHEE creek, of Ware co., Georgia, flows S. E. into the Suwannee river.

SWAIN, a township in Mississippi co., Arkansas. Population, 198.

SWAINSBOROUGH, a small post-village, capital of Emanuel co., Georgia, 98 miles N. W. from Savannah.

SWAIN'S MILLS, a post-office of Rush co., Ind.

SWAMPSCOTT, a post-township in Essex co., Massachusetts, on the coast, about 12 miles N. E. from Boston, set off from Lynn in 1852.

SWAN, a post-township in the N. E. part of Vinton co., Ohio. Population, 1154.

SWAN, a post-township in Noble co., Indiana. Population, 568.

SWAN CREEK, of Lucas co., Ohio, falls into the Maumee river, near Toledo.

SWAN CREEK, of Michigan, enters St. Joseph's river near the W. line of Branch county.

SWAN CREEK, of Monroe co., Michigan, flows into Lake Erie.

SWAN CREEK of Taney co., Missouri, flows into White river at Forsyth.

SWAN CREEK, a post-office of Warren co., Kentucky.

SWAN CREEK, a township in the S. E. part of Fulton co., Ohio. Population, 621.

SWAN CREEK, a post-office of Gallia co., O.

SWAN CREEK, a post-village of Warren co., Illinois, about 25 miles S. E. from Quincy.

SWANCY'S FERRY, a post-office of Abbeville district, South Carolina.

SWANGSTOWN, a post-village in Cleveland co., N. C., 197 miles W. by S. from Raleigh.

SWAN LAKE, Wisconsin, an expansion of Neenah river, in Columbia co., is $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles long, and half a mile wide. The water is pure and very deep, and abounds in fish.

SWAN LAKE, a post-office of Arkansas co., Arkansas.

SWANNANO, a post-office of Buncombe co., North Carolina.

SWAN POND, a post-office of Wilkes co., N. C.

SWAN QUARTER, a small post-village, capital of Hyde co., North Carolina, on a bay of its own name, half a mile from Pamlico sound, and 170 miles E. by S. from Raleigh.

SWAN RIVER, or AITKIN'S FERRY, a post-village of Benton co., Minnesota, on the Mississippi river, 130 miles by water above St. Paul, is a noted trading post.

SWANSBOROUGH, a small post-village of Onslow co., North Carolina, near the mouth of Whittock river, which flows through Bogue inlet into the Atlantic, 160 miles S. E. from Raleigh.

SWANSEY, Massachusetts. See SWANZEY.

SWAN'S ISLAND, a post-township of Hancock co., Maine. Population, 423.

SWANSONVILLE, a post-office of Pittsylvania co., Virginia.

SWAN STATION, a post-office of Erie co., Pa.

SWANTON, a post-village in Swanton township, Franklin county, Vermont, on the Missisque river, and Vermont Central railroad, near Lake Champlain, about 55 miles N. W. by N. from Montpelier. It contains several manufactories, 1 church, 1 academy, and 1 bank with a capital of $75,000. Population of the township, 2824.

SWANTON, a post-village of Lucas co., Ohio, 139 miles N. W. by N. from Columbus.

SWANTON CENTRE, a post-office of Franklin co., Vermont.

SWANVILLE, a post-township in Waldo co., Maine, 44 miles E. by N. from Augusta. Population, 944.

SWANVILLE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Indiana.

SWANZEY, a post-village in Cheshire co., New Hampshire, on Ashuelot river, and the Ashuelot branch of the Connecticut River railroad, about 45 miles S. W. of Concord. Population of the township, 2106.

SWANZEY, a post-township in Bristol co., Massachusetts, 46 miles S. by W. from Boston. Population, 1554.

SWARTSWOOD, a post-office of Sussex co., New Jersey.

SWARTWOUT, a post-village of Polk co., Texas, on the Trinity river, about 240 miles E. from Austin City. It has several stores, and a steamboat landing.

SWARTZ CREEK, a post-office of Genesee co., Michigan.

SWATARA creek, of Pennsylvania, rises in Schuylkill county, and flowing in a S. W. direction, enters the Susquehanna, 9 miles below Harrisburg. Length, about 60 miles.

SWATARA, a township of Lebanon co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles N. by W. from Lebanon, intersected by the Union canal. Population, 1843.

SWATARA, a post-office of Schuylkill co., Pennsylvania.

SWEARINGEN'S, a post-office of Austin co., Texas.

SWEDEN, a post-township in Oxford co., Maine, 55 miles W. S. W. from Augusta. Population, 696.

SWEDEN, a post-township of Monroe co., New York, 18 miles W. from Rochester, intersected by the Erie canal and Central railroad. Population, 3623.

SWEDEN, a post-township of Potter co., Pennsylvania, about 10 miles E. from Coudersport. Population, 254.

SWEDSBOROUGH, a post-village of Gloucester county, New Jersey, situated at the head of sloop navigation, on Raccoon creek, about 12 miles S. W. from Woodbury. It contains 2 churches, 6 stores, an extensive woollen factory, and about 100 dwellings.

SWEDLINHILL, a post-office of Pendleton co., Virginia.

SWEET AIR, a post-office of Baltimore co., Maryland.

SWEET HOME, a post-office of Lavacca co., Texas.

SWEET HOME, a post-office of Nodaway co., Missouri.

SWEET LAND, a post-office of Muscatine co., Iowa.

SWEET SPRINGS, a post-village of Monroe county, Virginia, is pleasantly situated near the foot of the Alleghany mountain, 204 miles W. from Richmond. This is one of the oldest and most fashionable watering-places of the state.

SWEET VALLEY, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

SWEETWATER, a post-office of Autauga co., North Carolina.

SWEETWATER, a post-village of Gwinnett co., Georgia, 95 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

SWEETWATER, a post-office of Marengo co., Alabama.

SWEETWATER, a post-office of Monroe co., Tennessee.

SWEETWATER, a post-office of Menard co., Ill.

SWEETWATER CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Chattahoochee river, a few miles N. E. from Campbellton.

SWEETWATER FACTORY, a post-office of Campbell co., Georgia.

SWEET CREEK, in the S. E. part of Virginia, flows through Chesterfield county, and unites with the Appomatox river, a few miles below Petersburg.

SWIFT CREEK, of North Carolina, an affluent of Tar river, which it joins a few miles N. from Tarborough.

SWIFT CREEK, of Craven co., North Carolina, enters the Neuse river, from the left, about 5 miles above Newbern.

SWIFT CREEK, of South Carolina, flows into the Wateree river, near the N. W. extremity of Sumter district.

SWIFT CREEK of Hardin co., Tennessee, flows into Tennessee river.

SWIFT CREEK, a post-office of Darlington district, South Carolina.

SWIFT CREEK BRIDGE, a post-office of Craven co., North Carolina.

SWIFT ISLAND, a post-office of Montgomery co., North Carolina.

SWIFT RIVER, of New Hampshire, rises in Grafton county, and falls into the Saco river, in Carroll county. It is, as its name implies, a very rapid stream.

SWIFT RIVER, a small stream of Hampshire county, Massachusetts, formed by the junction of the East and Middle branches of the Chickopee river, itself uniting with the West branch to form that river.

SWINEFORDSTOWN, Pa. See MIDDLEBURG.

SWINEHART, a post-office of Rush co., Ind.

SWINEYARD, a post-office of Charles City co., Virginia.

SWINGLEVILLE, a post-office of Washington co., Tennessee.

SWINTON, a post-village of Kane co., Illinois, about 50 miles W. by N. from Chicago.

SWITZERLAND, a county forming the S. E. extremity of Indiana, bordering on Kentucky, contains 220 square miles. The Ohio river washes its eastern and southern borders. The surface is diversified by a range of hills about 400 feet high, which are separated from the river by a strip of flat land, near 3 miles wide. The soil is good, both on the hills and bottoms. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 401,884 bushels of corn 78,169 of wheat; 44,455 of oats, and 9769 tons of hay. It contained 27 churches, and 1 newspaper office. The blue or Trenton limestone underlies part of the county. A company of Swiss settled here in 1802, and the county was organized in 1814. Capital, Vevay. Population, 12,932.

SWITZERLAND, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Monroe co., Ohio. Pop. 1216.

SYBERTSVILLE, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

SYCAMORE, a post-office of Claiborne co., Tennessee, 226 miles from Nashville.

SYCAMORE, a township in the N. E. part of Hamilton co., Ohio. Population, 3781.

SYCAMORE, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Wyandott co., Ohio. Population, 880.

SYCAMORE, a post-village in the above township, about 45 miles S. W. from Sandusky city.

SYCAMORE, a post-township in De Kalb co., Illinois. Population, 975.

SYCAMORE, a post-village, capital of De Kalb county, Illinois, 208 miles N. by E. from Springfield. It is situated in a fertile prairie, near Sycamore creek. A railroad is projected through this place from Chicago to the Mississippi.

SYCAMORE ALLEY, a post-office of Halifax co., N. C., 85 miles N. E. from Raleigh.

SYCAMORE CREEK, in the N. part of Middle Tennessee, rises in Robertson co., and flows into the Cumberland river in Davidson county.

SYCAMORE CREEK, of Michigan, rises in Ingham county, and enters Red Cedar river at its confluence with Grand river.

SYCAMORE CREEK or SLOUGH of California, rises in Colusi county, and falls into the Sacramento river, about 60 miles below Shasta City.

SYCAMORE MILLS, a post-office of Davidson co., Tennessee.

SYDNORSVILLE, a post-village in Franklin co., Va., 160 miles S. W. by W. from Richmond.

SYKESVILLE, a post-village of Carroll co., Maryland, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, 32 miles W. from Baltimore.

SYLACAUGA, a post-village of Talladega co., Alabama, about 65 miles N. from Montgomery.

SYLCO, a post-office of Polk co., Tenn.

SYLLAMORE, a post-township in Izard co., Arkansas. Population, 257.

SYLVA, a post-office of Washington co., Ark.

SYLVAN, a post-office of Franklin co., Pa.

SYLVAN, a post-township in the W. part of Washtenaw co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Central railroad. Pop., 924.

SYLVAN DALE, a post-office of Hancock co., Illinois.

SYLVAN GROVE, a post-office of Jefferson co., Ga., 54 miles E. by N. from Milledgeville.

SYLVAN GROVE, a post-office of Clark co., Indiana.

SYLVAN GROVE, a small village of Clarke co., Illinois.

SYLVANIA, a post-office of Bradford co., Pa.

SYLVANIA, a small post-village, capital of Scriven co., Georgia, 60 miles S. by E. from Augusta.

SYLVANIA, a post-office of Licking co., Ohio.

SYLVANIA, a township in the N. part of Lucas co., Ohio, intersected by the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad. Population, 751.

SYLVANIA, a post-office of Parke co., Ind.

SYLVANIA, a post-office of Racine co., Wis.

SYLVANUS, a post-office of Hillsdale co., Michigan.

SYLVESTER, a post-township in the S. central part of Greene co., Wisconsin. Pop., 712.

SYLVESTER, a post-village in the above township, 25 miles S. W. from Madison. It contains 70 dwellings, 1 store, and 1 hotel. Population, 300.

SYLVIA, a post-village of Hardin co., Ohio.

SYMMES, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Hamilton co., Ohio. Pop., 1115.

SYMMES, a township in the N. part of Lawrence co., Ohio. Population, 487.

SYMMES' CORNERS, a small post-village of Butler co., Ohio, 4 miles S. from Hamilton.

SYMMES' CREEK, of Ohio, rises in Jackson co., and enters the Ohio river, about 5 miles above Burlington.

SYMMES' CREEK, a post-office of Muskingum co., Ohio.

SYMSONIA, a post-village of Graves co., Ky.

SYRACUSE, a flourishing city of Central New York, and capital of Onondaga county, is situated on the S. end of Onondaga lake, and on a creek of that name, 148 miles by railroad W. by N. from Albany, 80 miles E. by S. from Rochester, and 35 miles S. S. E. from Oswego. Lat. 43° 4' N., lon. 76° 12' W. The site is nearly level. The city is regularly laid out, with wide, straight streets crossing each other at right angles. The principal avenues of business are lined with handsome blocks of brick and stone buildings. The city contains a public hall, which will seat 2500 persons, and is one of the best in the state. The situation being more central than that of any other large town in New York, nearly all the state conventions of the political and other associations are held here. The principal hotels are the Globe Hotel, the Syracuse House, and the Onondaga House. There are 4 Roman Catholic, and 19 Protestant churches, among which are 4 remarkable for architectural beauty, erected at a cost of $125,000. Eight handsome buildings have been erected for the public schools, at an aggregate expense of $30,000. The city contained, July, 1852, 8 banks, with an aggregate capital of $885,000. The public press consists of 4 daily and 6 weekly newspapers, besides several monthly periodicals. Some of these are devoted to religious and literary subjects.

From its position, Syracuse enjoys great facilities for trade. The Erie canal, completed in 1825, passes through the central part of the city, E. and W., and is intersected at right angles by the Oswego canal, extending northward to Lake Ontario. The Central railroad of New York, forming the great thoroughfare from Albany to Buffalo, here divides into two branches, one leading directly to Rochester, and the other pursuing a more circuitous route via Auburn and Geneva. The Oswego and Syracuse railroad, and the Syracuse and Binghamton railroad, also terminate at this place, connecting it with the towns indicated by their names. Two other railroads are projected to Sackett's harbor and to Newburg. Plank-roads diverge to various points in Onondaga, and in the adjoining counties. Here terminates the long level of the Erie canal, 69½ miles in length.

Syracuse is remarkable as the seat of the most extensive and valuable salt manufactories in the United States. The land containing the saline springs is owned by the state, and is leased free of rent, to be used only for this manufacture. The wells are dug and the water pumped at the expense of the state, and the manufacturer pays a duty of 1 cent per bushel. Originally the duty was 12½ cents; then for many years prior to 1846 it was 6 cents per bushel. Some of the wells are sunk to the depth of 400 feet. Fine salt is prepared by boiling, and coarse by solar evaporation. In 1850 the number of manufactories of salt in this vicinity was 192. The whole quantity produced in 1851 was stated at 4,614,117 bushels; and in 1853 it amounted to more than 5,000,000 bushels. An experiment has recently been made, by the order of the secretary of war, for the purpose of testing the relative value of the Onondaga and Turk's island salt, the result of which proved that the salt of home manufacture was fully equal to the foreign. Syracuse also contains a variety of other manufactories, the most valuable productions of which are machinery, steam-engines, farming implements, stoves, woollen goods, paper, leather, and flour.

History.—The township of Salina, in which Syracuse was situated, was formed in 1809. A post-office was established here in 1820, prior to which time the place was called Cossil's Corners, and then Corinth. In 1820 the village contained 3 stores, 2 taverns, and 250 inhabitants. On April 13th, 1825, it was incorporated as a village, and in 1848 as the city of Syracuse, including the contiguous village of Salina, situated on the margin of Onondaga lake, about 1 mile N. from the centre of the city. Salina village was incorporated in 1824. It appears that the growth of this town was never more rapid than at the present time. Pop. of Salina township in 1840, 11,013, of whom 6500 were in Syracuse; in 1850, 22,271; in 1853, estimated at 27,000.

SYRACUSE, a post-village of Kosciusko co., Indiana, at the outlet of Turkey lake, 128 miles N. by E. from Indianapolis.

SYRACUSE, a post-village in De Kalb co., Illinois, 70 miles W. from Chicago.

T

TABB'S CREEK, a post-office of Granville co., North Carolina.

TABERG, a post-village of Oneida co., New York, on Fish creek, and on the Rome and Watertown railroad, 25 miles W. N. W. from Utica. It has several mills, and a plank-road to Rome.

TABERNAACLE, a village of Burlington co., New Jersey, about 12 miles S. E. from Mount Holly, contains a church, and 10 or 12 houses.

TABERNAACLE, a post-office of Marion district, South Carolina.

TABLE GROVE, a post-office of Fulton co., Illinois.

TABLE MOUNTAIN, in Pickens district, South Carolina, regarded as one of the most remarkable natural curiosities in the state, has an elevation of about 4000 feet above the sea. In one part of it there is a precipice of near 1100 feet perpendicular.

TABO, a post-village of Lafayette co., Missouri, about 36 miles E. by S. from Independence.

TABOR, a post-office of Roane co., Tenn.

TABOR, a post-office of Tuscarawas co., O.

TACALUCHE, a post-office of Marshall co., Mississippi.

TACHORA, a post-office of Marquette co., Wisconsin.

TACKETT'S MILLS, a post-office of Stafford co., Virginia.

TACOA, a post-office of Gilmer co., Ga.

TACONY, a small village of Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, 10 miles above Philadelphia. It contains a depôt of the Philadelphia and Trenton railroad, at which passengers going eastward are transferred from the steamboat to the cars.

TACONY CREEK, also called FRANKFORD CREEK, of Pennsylvania, rises in Montgomery county, flows southward, and passing the borough of Frankford, enters the Delaware river at Bridesburg. It is an excellent mill stream.

TAPTON, a post-village of Pike co., Pennsylvania, 175 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

TAFTSVILLE, a post-village of Windsor co., Vermont, 54 miles S. from Montpelier.

TAGHANIC, a post-township of Columbia co., New York, 10 miles S. E. from Hudson. Population, 1539.

TAGHANIC MOUNTAINS, a range extending from the Green mountains along the eastern border of New York to the Highlands.

TALHEQUAH, a post-office of Cherokee co., Arkansas.

TAHUACANO CREEK, of Freestone co., Texas, flows into the Trinity river from the west.

TAILS CREEK, a post-office of Gilmer co., Georgia.

TALAHATAH, a small village of Newton co., Mississippi.

TALASHA, a post-village of Newton co., Mississippi.

TALBOT, a county of Maryland, situated on the eastern shore of Chesapeake bay, contains 250 square miles. The Choptank river washes the E. border, and several navigable creeks extend from the bay inland. The surface is nearly level; the soil is fertile, and in a high state of cultivation. Wheat, Indian corn, and butter are the staples. The county produced in 1850, 272,963 bushels of wheat; 621,980 of corn, and 97,585 pounds of butter. There were 6 manufactories of farming implements, 1 of cabinet ware, 3 ship-yards, 6 flour mills, and 5 saw mills. It contained 28 churches, and 2 newspaper establishments. There were 985 pupils attending public schools, and 78 attending academies and other schools. Capital, Easton. Population, 13,811; of whom 9677 were free, and 4134, slaves.

TALBOT, a county in the W. part of Georgia, has an area of 524 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by Flint river, and drained by the Parchelaga, Beaverdam, and Upatoi creeks. The surface is very broken; the highlands in the north part are called the Oak mountains. The soil is partly derived from primary rocks, and is moderately productive. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, and oats are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 13,732 bales of cotton; 655,802 bushels of corn; 89,185 of oats, and 162,819 of sweet potatoes. There were 11 flour mills, 5 saw mills, 1 woollen factory, and 10 tanneries. It contained 25 churches, 492 pupils attending public schools, and 195 attending academies or other schools. Capital, Talbotton. Population, 16,534; of whom 7811 were free, and 8723, slaves.

TALBOTTON, a pleasant post-village, capital of Talbot county, Georgia, 32 miles N. E. from Columbus. It has a brick court house, 2 academies, 3 churches, and a Masonic hall. The Episcopal church of this place is a fine specimen of the Gothic style.

TALIAFERRO, (pronounced tol'-e-ver,) a small county in the N. E. central part of Georgia, has an area of 185 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of the Ogeechee and Little rivers. The surface is undulating or hilly; the soil in some parts productive. Cotton, Indian corn, wheat, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 5170 bales of cotton; 193,327 bushels of corn; 28,690 of oats, and 29,061 of sweet potatoes. There were 2 grist mills, 2 saw mills, 2 manufactories of agricultural implements, and 2 tanneries. It contained 7 churches, 180 pupils attending public schools, and 30 attending another school. Granite and gneiss are among the rocks which underlie the county. Sulphuret of iron and magnetic ore are found in several places, and some gold is said to have been discovered. The county is intersected by the Georgia railroad. Named in honor of Benjamin Taliaferro, formerly member of Congress from Georgia. Capital, Crawfordsville. Population, 5146; of whom 2102 were free, and 3044, slaves.

TALIBENELA, a post-office of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

TALKING ROCK, a post-office of Gilmer co., Georgia, 18 miles S. S. W. from Ellijay.

TALKING ROCK CREEK of Georgia, enters the Coosawattee from the left at the N. E. extremity of Cass co.

TALLADEGA, a county in the N. E. central part of Alabama, has an area of 1260 square miles. The Coosa river washes the W. border for a distance of 50 miles, exclusive of the windings; the county is drained also by the Chocologoco and other creeks. The surface is diversified by hills and valleys; the soil in some parts is fertile. Cotton, Indian corn, and grass are the chief products. In 1850 there were raised 8509 bales of cotton; 715,584 bushels of corn; 115,105 of sweet potatoes, and 114,550 of oats. There were 5 grist and saw mills, 1 carding and fulling mill, 3 stone-cutting establishments, and 5 tanneries. It contained 47 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 715 pupils attending public schools, and 370 attending academies or other schools. Marble of fine quality, and other valuable minerals, are abundant. The railroad, which is in progress from Selma to the Tennessee river, will pass through the county. Capital, Talladega. Population, 18,624; of whom 11,653 were free, and 6971, slaves.

TALLADEGA, a post-village, capital of Talladega county, on the Alabama and Tennessee railroad, (in progress,) about 95 miles N. by E. from Montgomery. The plank-road extending from Montgomery to Tennessee river passes through this place. It contains a court house, several churches, 2 newspaper offices, and a number of stores.

TALLADEGA, a township in Jefferson co., Arkansas. Population, 440.

TALLAHALA creek, of Mississippi, enters Bayou Pierre from the N. E., near the N. W. corner of Copiah county.

TALLAHASSEE, a city, capital of Florida, and seat of justice of Leon county, 194 miles E. from Mobile, 130 miles from Pensacola, and about 25 miles N. from the Gulf of Mexico.

Lat. 30° 28' N., lon. 84° 36' W. The site is comparatively elevated. The city is laid out in rectangular blocks, with several public squares. It contains the state house, court house, jail, a United States land-office, and churches of the Presbyterians, Methodists, and Episcopalians; 2 newspaper offices, and several seminaries. Springs of good water abound in the vicinity. The adjacent country is very productive, and is the most populous part of the state. Tallahassee is connected by a railroad about 26 miles long with the seaport of St. Marks.

TALLAHATCHIE, a river in the N. part of Mississippi, the principal branch of the Yazoo, rises near the boundary between Tappah and Pontotoc counties, and flows in a circuitous course, the general direction of which is S. W., to the mouth of Coldwater creek. Below this point it pursues a southerly course until it unites with the Yalabusha river to form the Yazoo at Leflore, on the W. border of Carroll county. The whole length is estimated at 250 miles. In ordinary stages, steamboats ascend to the mouth of Coldwater creek, about 100 miles, and in high water (about four months of the year) they extend their trips to Wyatt, in Lafayette county.

TALLAHATCHIE, a county in the N. W. part of Mississippi, has an area of about 930 square miles. It is intersected by the Tallahatchie river, (navigable by steamboats,) from which it derives its name. The surface is a level and alluvial plain, sometimes called swamp land. The soil is said to be fertile, but the greater part is uncultivated. Its principal products are Indian corn, sweet potatoes, and cotton. In 1850 this county yielded 190,930 bushels of corn; 10,962 of oats; 38,052 of sweet potatoes, and 4977 bales of cotton. There were 200 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Tillatoba. Population, 4643; of whom 2096 were free, and 2547, slaves.

TALLAHOMA, a small river of Mississippi, enters Leaf river from the N. near the centre of Perry county.

TALLALOOSA, a small post-village of Marshall co., Mississippi, 8 miles S. W. from Holly Springs.

TALLAPOOSA, a river of Georgia and Alabama, a branch of the Alabama river, rises in Paulding county, Georgia, and unites with the Coosa, about 10 miles N. from Montgomery, in Alabama, after a very tortuous course of about 250 miles. Its general direction is south-westward. Small steamboats ascend 40 miles from its junction with the Coosa. The Little Tallapoosa rises in Georgia, and flowing S. W., enters the main stream near the middle of Randolph county, in Alabama.

TALLAPOOSA, a county in the E. part of Alabama, contains about 700 square miles. It is intersected by the Tallapoosa river, from which the name is derived, and drained also by Hileebee and Sawkehatchee creeks. The surface is hilly or undulating; the soil in some parts is productive. Cotton, Indian corn, oats, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 it produced 6589 bales of cotton; 462,276 bushels of corn; 60,423 of oats, and 102,371 of sweet potatoes. It contained 1 woollen and 2 cotton factories, 7 flour and grist mills, and 1 saw mill. The Tallapoosa is navigable in the lower part of the county, and the Montgomery and West Point railroad passes along the southern border. Capital, Dadeville. Population, 15,584; of whom 11,511 were free, and 4073, slaves.

TALLAPOOSA, a post-village of Carroll co., Georgia, on the river of the same name, 160 miles N. W. from Milledgeville.

TALLAPOOSA, a post-office of Greene co., Alabama.

TALLASAHATCHEE creek, of Benton co., Alabama, enters the Coosa river from the left, near the Ten Islands.

TALLASSEE creek of Alabama, enters the Coosa in Talladega county.

TALLASSEE, a post-village in Tallapoosa co., Alabama, 134 miles S. E. from Tuscaloosa.

TALLEYVILLE, a post-office of New Castle co., Delaware.

TALLMADGE, a post-township in the S. E. part of Summit co., Ohio, intersected by the Ohio canal. Population, 2456.

TALLMADGE, a post-township in the E. part of Ottawa co., Michigan, intersected by Grand river. Population, 534.

TALLMADGE CENTRE, a post-village of Summit co., Ohio, 129 miles N. E. from Columbus.

TALLOKAS, a post-office of Lowndes co., Ga.

TALLULAH creek, of Georgia, forms the boundary between Rabun and Habersham counties, and enters the Tugaloo river.

TALLULAH, a post-village, capital of Issaquena county, Mississippi, on the Mississippi river, about 70 miles N. W. from Jackson. The county seat was located here only a few years since.

TALLYHO, a post-office of Granville co., North Carolina, 43 miles N. from Raleigh.

TAMA, a new county in the E. central part of Iowa, has an area of 720 square miles. The S. part is intersected by the Iowa river, and the N. part by Wolf creek, it is also drained by Salt and Deep creeks. The surface is undulating or nearly level; the soil is mostly fertile. The name is derived from an Indian chief.

TAMAQUA, a thriving post-borough of Schuylkill township, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, on the Tamaqua or Little Schuylkill river, 15 miles E. N. E. from Pottsville, and 73 miles N. E. from Harrisburg. A branch railroad connects it with the Pottsville and Reading railroad at Port Clinton. It is beautifully situated in a hilly region, which contains abundance of excellent coal. It is an important point on the Catawissa railroad, now in progress, from Milton to Easton. Tamaqua contains 3 or 4 churches, and a newspaper office. Laid out in 1829. Population in 1850, 3080.

TAMARAWA, a post-village in Monroe co., Illinois, on Kaskaskia river, 120 miles S. by W. from Springfield.

TAMERACK creek, of Necosta co., Michigan, flows into the Maskegon river.

TAMPA, a small post-village, capital of Hillsborough co., Florida, at the head of Tampa bay, (navigable by large vessels,) about 40 miles E. from the Gulf of Mexico.

TAMPA BAY, formerly ESPIRITU SANTO BAY, of Florida, is situated on the W. side of the peninsula, and opening into the Gulf of Mexico, about 27° 45' N. lat. Towards the interior it divides into two branches, one of which is called Little Tampa, and the other Hillsborough bay. It is about 40 miles long, and forms a good harbor for large vessels.

TAMPICO, a post-office of Oktibbeha co., Mississippi.

TAMPICO, a post-office of Granger co., Tenn.

TAMPICO, a post-office of Darke co., Ohio.

TAMPICO, a small village of Jackson co., Indiana.

TAMWORTH, a post-township in Carroll co., New Hampshire, 52 miles N. N. E. from Concord. Population, 1766.

TAMWORTH IRON WORKS, a post-office of Carroll co., New Hampshire.

TANCOCK PRAIRIE, a post-office of Winn parish, Louisiana.

TANEY, a county in the S. S. W. part of Missouri, bordering on Arkansas, has an area of 1540 square miles. It is intersected by White river, and also drained by James fork, and Bull, Swan, Beaver, and Long creeks, affluents of the White river. The surface is uneven and broken; the soil of the valleys is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, cattle, pork, and butter are the staples. The county is plentifully supplied with springs of good water. In 1850 it produced 301,116 bushels of corn; 11,557 of wheat; 38,826 of oats, and 78,585 pounds of butter. The county was named in honor of Roger B. Taney, chief justice of the United States. Capital, Forsyth. Population, 4373; of whom 4274 were free, and 99, slaves.

TANEY, a post-office of Washington co., Arkansas.

TANEYTOWN, a post-village of Carroll co., Maryland, 71 miles N. W. from Annapolis. Population, 279.

TANGIER'S ISLANDS, of Virginia, in Chesapeake bay, nearly opposite the mouth of the Potomac river.

TANGIPAHIA, a small river of Louisiana, flows southward along the boundary between Tammany and Livingston parishes, and enters Lake Pontchartrain.

TANGIPAHIA, a post-office of St. Helena parish, Louisiana.

TANNER'S CREEK, of Indiana, flows through

Dearborn county into the Ohio river, near Lawrenceburg.

TANNER'S FORD, a post-office of Walker co., Georgia.

TANNER'S STORE, a post-office of Mecklenburg co., Virginia.

TANNERSVILLE, a post-village of Greene co., New York, about 45 miles S. S. W. from Albany.

TANNERSVILLE, a small post-village of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, 118 miles N. E. from Harrisburg.

TANSBOROUGH, a village of Gloucester co., New Jersey, about 35 miles S. by W. from Trenton, contains 6 or 8 houses.

TAOS, a county forming the N. E. extremity of New Mexico, drained by the Rio Grande and Canadian rivers, and by several tributaries of the Arkansas. The surface in the W. part is mountainous, being traversed by several ranges, continuations of the Rocky mountains. Wheat and Indian corn are the chief productions. In 1850 there were raised 72,049 bushels of wheat, and 26,633 of corn; the quantity of wheat was the greatest produced by any county of the territory. It contained 11 churches, and 40 pupils attending public schools. Named from the Taosa Indians, a tribe who formerly inhabited this part of the country. Capital, Taos. Population, 9507.

TAOS, a small post-village of Navarro co., Texas, on the W. bank of Trinity river, about 200 miles N. N. E. from Austin City. It is pleasantly situated on a bluff, and contains 2 dry-goods stores.

TAOS, a post-office of Cole co., Missouri.

TAOS, a post-village, capital of Taos county, New Mexico, is about 12 miles E. of the Rio Grande, and 66 miles nearly due N. from Santa Fe. It is situated in a valley of the same name, one of the most romantic and fertile spots in the territory, being finely watered by several small affluents of the Rio Grande, and surrounded on three sides by lofty mountains. Taos is more properly a collection of small hamlets contiguous to one another than a single village; of these Don Fernandez de Taos is the largest: it contains a church and a school. This place was first settled by a white population about the middle of the last century.

TAPLEVILLE, a post-office of Essex co., Massachusetts.

TAPPANNOCK, a port of entry and capital of Essex county, Virginia, on the right bank of the Rappahannock river, 50 miles N. E. from Richmond. It contains a custom house, 1 church, 2 flourishing seminaries, and 5 stores. The shipping of this port June 30, 1852, amounted to an aggregate of 5621 $\frac{3}{4}$ tons, of which 5039 $\frac{3}{4}$ were employed in the coasting trade. Population, about 350.

TAPPAN, a post-office of Harrison co., Ohio.

TAPPAN BAY, New York, an expansion of Hudson river, between Rockland and Westchester counties. Length, nearly 12 miles; greatest breadth, near 4 miles. The lower end is 24 miles N. from New York.

TAPPANTOWN, a post-village of Rockland co., New York, about 130 miles S. from Albany. Here Major Andre was executed in October, 1780.

TARBOROUGH, a post-village, capital of Edgecombe county, North Carolina, on the Tar river, 76 miles E. from Raleigh. It is at the head of navigation, and has a considerable trade by means of small boats. Turpentine and lumber are among the exports. The village contains 1 bank, and an academy. Two newspapers are published here. Population estimated at 1000.

TARDYVILLE, a post-village of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

TARENUM, a post-village of East Deer township, Alleghany county, Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Alleghany river, 20 miles above Pittsburg. Boat building is carried on here. It contains also large manufactories of salt and soda. Population in 1853, about 1200.

TARIFF, a post-office of Butler co., Ohio.

TARIFFVILLE, a manufacturing post-village of Simsbury township, Hartford county, Connecticut, on the left bank of the Farmington river, and near the New Haven and Northampton railroad, 45 miles N. by E. from New Haven. It is celebrated for the manufacture of carpets: one establishment here cost $900,000, and employs from 650 to 800 operatives. In 1840 this village contained less than 400 inhabitants; in 1853, the population is near 2000.

TARKEO creek, of Missouri, rises near the N. W. extremity of the state, and flowing southward, enters the Missouri in Holt county. Little Tarkeo creek traverses Holt county, and enters the Missouri at the S. E. extremity of the same.

TARKILN creek, near the S. E. extremity of Cumberland co., New Jersey, falls into Delaware bay.

TARKOE, a post-village of Holt co., Mo., about 110 miles N. W. from Independence.

TARLTON, a post-village of Pickaway co., Ohio, 35 miles S. S. E. from Columbus. It contains 3 churches, several stores, and about 600 inhabitants.

TARPAULIN COVE LIGHTHOUSE, at the entrance of the harbor, on the E. side of Naushton Island, the largest of the Elizabeth islands, Massachusetts. It shows a fixed light, 80 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 41° 26' 10" N., lon. 70° 46' 5" W.

TARRANT, a county in the N. N. W. part of Texas, contains about 960 square miles. It is intersected by the West fork of Trinity river, and also drained by the Clear fork and by Mary's creek. The surface consists partly of prairies, the soil of which is productive. Indian corn, grass, cattle, and horses are the staples. Capital, Birdsville.

TARRANT, a thriving post-village, capital of Hopkins co., Texas, on the road from Austin City to Clarksville, 300 miles N. E. from the former. It is situated in a fertile farming country. It has been built since 1845.

TARRANT COURT HOUSE. See BIRDSVILLE.

TAR RIVER, of North Carolina. See PAMLICO RIVER.

TAR RIVER, a post-office of Granville co., North Carolina.

TARRYTOWN, a post-village in Greenburg township, Westchester county, New York, on the Hudson River railroad, 27 miles N. from New York. It contains several churches, and 1 or 2 academies. It is beautifully situated on the E. bank of the Hudson, here called Tappan bay. The scene of Rip Van Winkle's story is laid in this vicinity.

TARSCINTO, a post-office of Neshoba co., Mississippi.

TARVERS CROSS ROADS, a small village of Jefferson co., Georgia.

TARVERSVILLE, a post-office of Twiggs co., Georgia, about 30 miles S. E. from Macon.

TASSINONG GROVE, a post-office of Porter co., Indiana.

TATE, a township in the S. E. part of Clermont co., Ohio. Population, 2901.

TATESVILLE, a small post-village of De Soto co., Miss., 14 miles S. from Hernando.

TATESVILLE, a post-office of McNairy co., Tennessee.

TATEVILLE, a small village of Washita co., Arkansas, at the junction of Little Missouri and Washita rivers, about 85 miles S. S. W. from Little Rock.

TATNALL, a county in the S. E. part of Georgia, contains about 1200 square miles. It is bounded on the S. by the Altamaha, on the N. E. by the Cannouchee, and intersected by the Ochopee river. The surface is nearly level; the soil sandy and rather sterile, excepting in the vicinity of the rivers. Cotton, Indian corn, and sweet potatoes are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 321 bales of cotton, 71,740 bushels of corn, and 46,227 of sweet potatoes. It contained 2 churches, and 130 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Reidsville. Pop., 3227; of whom 2396 were free, and 831, slaves.

TAUNTON, a post-town and semi-capital of Bristol county, Massachusetts, is situated at the head of navigation on Taunton river, and on the New Bedford and Taunton railroad, 35 miles S. from Boston, and 30 miles E. N. E. from Providence. Lat. 41° 54' 11" N., lon. 71° 5' 55" W. It is handsomely built, and contains a beautiful enclosure in the centre, called "Taunton Green." Besides the court house and jail, there are in the place 10 or 11 churches, a handsome town house, several fine hotels, and 3 banks. Three newspapers are issued here. A beautiful cemetery, called the Mount Pleasant Cemetery, has been laid out a short distance from the green, upon the Mount Auburn plan. The manufactures of Taunton are extensive and various, consisting of paper, leather, nails, steam engines, and hardware of various kinds. One of the most extensive locomotive and steam-engine establishments is that of Messrs. Mason & Co. Upon the completion of the extensive additions now being made to their shops, the company will be prepared to turn out on an average one engine a week throughout the year. There are two print-works, which turn out about 2,500,000 yards of cloth annually. The Taunton river furnishes excellent water-power. It is navigable for small vessels, and some coast trade is carried on. Pop. in 1840, 7645; in 1850, 10,481; in 1853, about 11,800.

TAUNTON RIVER rises in Plymouth county, in the E. part of Massachusetts, and flowing through Bristol county, falls into Mount Hope bay, in Rhode Island. This river is remarkable for its valuable water-power, and for the great number of alewives (a kind of fish resembling herring) in its waters.

TAVERN CREEK, of Miller co., Missouri, flows northward into the Osage river.

TAWAWA, a post-office of Shelby co., Ohio.

TAWAW, a post-office of Allen co., Ind.

TAXAHAW, a small village of Lancaster district, South Carolina.

TAYCHEEDA, a post-township in the E. central part of Fond du Lac co., Wisconsin. Population, 798.

TAYCHEEDA, a flourishing post-village of Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin, is situated at the S. extremity of Lake Winnebago, 3 miles E. from Fond du Lac. It has a steam-boat landing, and a plank-road extending to Sheboygan, on Lake Michigan.

TAYLOR, a county in the N. N. W. part of Virginia, has an area of 130 square miles. It is intersected by the Tygart's Valley river, a branch of the Monongahela, and also drained by Sandy and Elk creeks. The surface is hilly. The soil in some parts fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, butter, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 101,118 bushels of corn; 23,995 of wheat; 41,499 of oats; 4051 tons of hay, and 87,110 pounds of butter. There were 5 flour and grist mills, 4 saw mills, 5 tanneries, 1 manufactory of cabinet ware, and 1 of earthen ware, and 11 churches. The county contains iron ore and stone coal. It is intersected by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and the North-western railroad has its eastern terminus near the county seat. Formed in 1844, out of parts of Harrison, Barbour, and Marion, and named in honor of John Taylor, of Caroline county. Capital, Pruntytown, sometimes called Williamsport. Population, 5367; of whom 5199 were free, and 168, slaves.

TAYLOR, a new county in the central part of Georgia, formed since the census of 1850 was taken.

TAYLOR, a county in the S. central part of Kentucky. It is drained by several small affluents of Green river. The surface is undulating and hilly; the soil is fertile. Indian corn, wheat, oats, tobacco, cattle, horses, and swine are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 365,085 bushels of corn; 10,087 of wheat; 91,639 of oats, and 592,106 pounds of tobacco. It contained 17 churches, 461 pupils attending public schools, and 65 attending an academy. A railroad is projected through the county from Danville to Nashville. Formed a few years ago out of the N. part of Greene county. Capital, Campbellsville. Population, 7250; of whom 5610 were free, and 1640, slaves.

TAYLOR, a new county in the S. S. W. part of Iowa, bordering on Missouri, has an area of about 560 square miles. The river One Hundred and Two rises in the county, and the West fork of Grand river drains the E. part. The land is said to be fertile, but not heavily timbered. Indian corn, wool, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 10,000 bushels of Indian corn; 785 of oats; 1008 pounds of wool, and 4215 of butter. County seat not yet located. Pop., 631.

TAYLOR, a new post-township of Cortland co., New York. Population, 1232.

TAYLOR, a township of Centre co., Pennsylvania, about 26 miles S. W. from Bellefonte. Population, 349.

TAYLOR, a post-office of Harford co., Md.

TAYLOR, a post-office of St. Charles par., La.

TAYLOR, a township in Hardin co., Ohio. Population, 531.

TAYLOR, a township in Union co., Ohio. Population, 400.

TAYLOR, a township in the S. E. part of Wayne co., Michigan. Population, 308.

TAYLOR, a township in Greene co., Indiana. Population, 1255.

TAYLOR, a township in Howard co., Indiana. Population, 572.

TAYLOR, a township in Owen co., Indiana. Population, 535.

TAYLOR, a small post-village of Ogle co., Illinois, 172 miles N. by E. from Springfield.

TAYLOR, a township in Greene co., Missouri. Population, 1380.

TAYLOR, a post-office of Davis co., Iowa.

TAYLOR'S, a post-village in Sumter dis., S. C.

TAYLOR'S, a post-office of Jefferson co., Ala.

TAYLOR'S, or TAYLORSVILLE, a township in Hardin co., Ohio, intersected by the Mad River and Lake Erie railroad. Pop., 531.

TAYLOR'S BRIDGE, a post-office of Sampson co., N. C., 106 miles S. S. E. from Raleigh.

TAYLORSBURG, a post-office of Bartholomew co., Indiana.

TAYLOR'S CORNERS, a post-office of De Kalb co., Indiana.

TAYLOR'S CREEK, of Georgia, enters the Cannouchee near Bryan Court House.

TAYLOR'S CREEK, a post-village of Liberty co., Georgia.

TAYLOR'S CREEK, a post-office of St. Francis co., Arkansas.

TAYLOR'S FALLS, a small village of Chisago co., Minnesota, on the right bank of the St. Croix river, 30 miles above Stillwater, and at the head of steamboat navigation. It has several mills, and is engaged in the lumber trade.

TAYLOR'S ISLAND, a post-office of Dorchester co., Maryland.

TAYLORSFORD, a village of Boone co., Kentucky, on the Ohio river, 12 miles below Cincinnati. It has a good landing.

TAYLOR'S STAND, a post-office of Crawford co., Pennsylvania.

TAYLOR'S STORE, a post-office of Franklin co., Va., 173 miles W. S. W. from Richmond.

TAYLOR'S STORE, a post-office of Knox co., Missouri.

TAYLORSTOWN, a post-office of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-office of Ontario co., New York.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, 116 miles E. from Harrisburg. It has a bridge across the river.

TAYLORSVILLE, a small village of Anne Arundel co., Maryland, on South river, an arm of the Chesapeake, 5 miles S. W. from Annapolis. The river here is crossed by a bridge.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-village in Hanover co., Virginia, on the Richmond Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad, 20 miles N. from Richmond.

TAYLORSVILLE, of Patrick co., Virginia. See PATRICK COURT HOUSE.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Alexander co., North Carolina, 160 miles W. from Raleigh. Population, about 300.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-office of Madison co., Georgia.

TAYLORSVILLE, a small village of Newton co., Georgia.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-office of Smith co., Mississippi.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Johnson co., Tennessee, 350 miles E. by N. from Nashville. It stands at the W. base of the Stone or Iron Mountain, which contains inexhaustible mines of iron ore. Water-power is abundant in the vicinity, and there are several iron works in operation.

TAYLORSVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Spencer co., Kentucky, is situated in a beautiful valley, at the confluence of Salt river and Brashear's creek, 30 miles S. W. from Frankfort. It possesses a valuable water-power, which is used in manufactories of cotton and wool, and contains 4 churches and a seminary. Pop., estimated at 800.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-office of Montgomery co., Ohio.

TAYLORSVILLE, a thriving post-village of Muskingum co., Ohio, on the W. bank of Muskingum river, 9 miles below Zanesville. There is a dam across the river here, by which large water-power is applied to mills for grinding and carding. The village of Duncan's Falls is on the opposite bank of the river. Laid out in 1832. Population, near 1000.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-office of Oakland co., Michigan.

TAYLORSVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Christian co., Illinois, on the S. fork of the Sangamon river, 26 miles S. E. from Springfield. The adjacent country is fertile, and contains extensive beds of coal. Population in 1853, about 1000.

TAYLORSVILLE, a post-office of Andrew co., Missouri.

TAYLORTON, a post-village of Wayne co., Mississippi.

TAYLORVILLE, a small village of Bartholomew co., Indiana, on the Madison and Indianapolis railroad, 35 miles S. S. E. from Indianapolis.

TAYMOUTH, a township in Saginaw co., Michigan. Population, 58.

TAZEWELL, a county in the S. W. part of Virginia, bordering on Kentucky, is 60 miles in length, and has an area of 1300 square miles. The Clinch and Bluestone rivers rise in the county; the Tug fork of Sandy river forms part of its northern boundary, and it is also drained by the Dry fork of the latter stream, and by Wolf creek. Clinch mountain extends along the S. E. border, and other mountain ridges pass across the county. The highlands produce good timber and pasture; the soil of the valleys is highly productive. Indian corn, wheat, oats, butter, cattle, horses, and swine are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 235,126 bushels of corn; 21,327 of wheat; 125,214 of oats, and 135,910 pounds of butter were made. There were 6 tanneries, 3 cabinet ware manufactories, and 1 saddlery. It contained 15 churches, and 654 pupils attending public schools. Limestone, iron ore, and stone coal are abundant in the county; the mines of the latter are thought to be inexhaustible. The county is plentifully supplied with water-power. Formed in 1799, and named in honor of Henry Tazewell, who represented Virginia in the United States Senate about that period. Capital, Jeffersonville. Population, 9942; of whom 8882 were free, and 1060, slaves.

TAZEWELL, a county in Illinois, is situated a little N. W. from the centre of the state, has an area of 550 square miles. The Mackinaw creek flows through it from E. to W. until it enters the Illinois river, which forms the entire N. W. boundary. The surface is nearly level, and the soil fertile. The county contains large prairies, which are mostly under cultivation. Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, pork, and butter are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 1,114,640 bushels of corn; 144,241 of wheat; 146,922 of oats; 9986 tons of hay, and 186,350 pounds of butter. It contained 17 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 2941 pupils attending public schools. A railroad is projected through the county, from Peoria to Bloomington. Capital, Tremont. Pop., 12,052.

TAZEWELL, a decayed post-village of Marion co., Georgia, about 35 miles E. from Columbus, was formerly the county seat. Population, near 100.

TAZEWELL, a thriving post-village, capital of Claiborne co., Tennessee, 250 miles E. by N. from Nashville. It is situated in a hilly region, which abounds in iron, zinc, and lead ores, the first of which only is worked.

TAZEWELL COURT HOUSE, Virginia. See JEFFERSONVILLE.

TEHULA, a post-village of Holmes co., Miss., on the Yazoo river, 70 miles N. from Jackson.

TEACHEY'S, a post-office of Duplin co., N. C.

TEARQUE, a village in the Territory of New Mexico, about 70 miles S. from Santa Fe.

TEAZE'S VALLEY, a post-office of Kanawha co., Virginia.

TEBO, a post-office of Henry co., Missouri.

TEBO CREEK, of Missouri, flows through Henry co., and enters Osage river in Benton county.

TECHE bayou, Louisiana, commences in St. Landry parish, a few miles from Opelousas, and after flowing south-eastward in a very tortuous course of about 200 miles, unites with Atchafalaya bayou near the S. E. extremity of Lake Chetimaches. The chief towns on its banks are St. Martinsville and Franklin. It is bordered by fertile prairies and plains, in which cotton and sugar flourish. During high water, steamboats ascend this bayou for a distance of near 200 miles from the Gulf of Mexico.

TECOLÓTA, a post-office of San Miguel co., New Mexico.

TECUMSEH, a post-township in the N. E. part of Lenawee co., Michigan, connected with the Michigan Southern railroad by the Tecumseh branch. Population, 2678.

TECUMSEH, a post-village in the above township, on Raisin river, 10 miles N. E. from Adrian. It has an excellent water-power, on which a number of mills have been erected. A newspaper is published here. This place was the county seat previous to 1838. Population in 1851, about 1000.

TEDROW, a post-office of Fulton co., Ohio.

TEE, a township in the S. E. part of Carroll co., Ohio. Population, 1220.

TEGERA, a village in New Mexico, near the southern extremity of the Sandia mountains: it is about 50 miles S. from Santa Fe.

TEHAMA, a post-town of Colusi co., Cal.

TEHONSHA, a post-township in the S. part of Calhoun co., Michigan. Population, 651.

TELFAIR, a county in the S. part of Georgia, has an area of 925 square miles. It is intersected by the Ocmulgee river, and also drained by the Little Ocmulgee, and Sugar and Hurricane creeks. The surface is level and covered with extensive forests of pine. The soil is sandy, but productive in the vicinity of the streams. Indian corn, sweet potatoes, cotton, and sugar-cane are the staples. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the lumber business. In 1850 this county produced 77,805 bushels of corn; 44,250 of sweet potatoes, and 572 bales of cotton. It contained 14 churches; 243 pupils attending public schools, and 16 attending another school. Laid out in 1807, and named in honor of Edward Telfair, governor of Georgia in 1786. Capital, Jacksonville. Population, 3026, of whom 2096 were free, and 930, slaves.

TELFAIR CREEK, Georgia. See HURRICANE CREEK.

TELL, a township of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, about 24 miles W. S. W. from Huntingdon. Population, 983.

TELLICO, a small river which rises in Cherokee county, North Carolina, and flowing into Tennessee, enters the Little Tennessee river on the N. border of Monroe county.

TELLICO PLAINS, a post-office of Monroe co., Tennessee.

TELOGA SPRINGS, a post-office of Chattooga co., Georgia.

TEMPERANCE, a post-office of Amherst co., Virginia.

TEMPERANCE, a post-village of Telfair co., Georgia, about 90 miles S. from Milledgeville.

TEMPERANCE HALL, a post-office of De Kalb co., Tennessee.

TEMPERANCE HILL, a post-office of Marion district, South Carolina.

TEMPERANCEVILLE, a thriving post-borough of Chartier township, Alleghany county, Pennsylvania, on the left or S. bank of the Ohio river, one and a half miles below Pittsburgh. It has a great variety of manufactures, including glass, iron, edge tools, &c., and has an active trade in coal. Population in 1853, about 2500.

TEMPERANCEVILLE, a post-office of Accomack co., Virginia.

TEMPERANCEVILLE, a post-village of Belmont co., Ohio.

TEMPE VALE, a village of Scioto co., Ohio, 2 miles W. from Portsmouth.

TEMPLE, a post-township of Franklin co., Maine, about 150 miles N. W. from Augusta. Population, 785.

TEMPLE, a post-township in Hillsborough co., New Hampshire, 33 miles S. S. W. from Concord. Population, 579.

TEMPLE MILLS, a post-office of Franklin co., Maine.

TEMPLE OF HEALTH, a post-office of Abbeville district, South Carolina.

TEMPLETON, a post-township in Worcester co., Massachusetts, 55 miles W. by N. from Boston. The Vermont and Massachusetts railroad crosses the N. E. part of the township. Population, 2173.

TEMPLETON, a post-village of Prince George co., Virginia, 36 miles S. E. from Richmond.

TEMPLEVILLE, a small post-village of Queen Anne co., Maryland.

TENALLYTOWN, a post-office of Washington co., District Columbia.

TENMILE, a post-office of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

TENMILE, a post-office of Macon co., Mo.

TENMILE CREEK, of Greene county, Pennsylvania, flows into the Monongahela river.

TENMILE SPRING, a post-office of Cattaraugus co., New York.

TENMILE STAND, a post-office of Meigs co., Tennessee.

TENMILE VALLEY, a small village of Greene co., Pennsylvania.

TENNESSEE river, the largest affluent of the Ohio, is formed by two branches, the Clinch and Holston, which rise among the Alleghany mountains of Virginia, and unite at Kingston, in Tennessee. It flows first south-westward to Chattanooga, near the S. boundary of the state, where it turns towards the N. W. and W., but its progress being opposed by the Cumberland mountains, it changes its course to the S. W., makes an extensive circuit of near 300 miles through Northern Alabama, and touches the State of Mississippi at its N. E. extremity. Here it again enters the State of Tennessee, traverses its whole breadth from S. to N., and gradually curving towards the W., crosses Kentucky, and enters the Ohio river at Paducah, 48 miles from its mouth, near 37° N. lat., and 88° 35' W. lon. The length of the Tennessee proper is estimated at 800 miles, and if we include the Holston, its longest branch, it will measure about 1100 miles. The chief towns on its banks are Knoxville and Chattanooga, in Tennessee; Tusculumbia and Florence, in Alabama, and Paducah, in Kentucky. The whole descent of the river and branches is computed to be about 2000 feet. The channel is obstructed by no considerable falls or rapids, excepting the Muscle shoals, in Alabama, where the river runs over flint and limestone rocks for more than 20 miles, affording immense motive-power.—See MUSCLE SHOALS. Steamboats ascend the river from its mouth to Florence, at the foot of the Muscle shoals, about 280 miles. Above these rapids it is also navigable by steamboats at all seasons as far as Knoxville, on the Holston, a distance of near 500 miles. The navigable portions of the river are connected by a railroad. The region through which this river flows is generally fertile, and in the upper part of its course is beautifully diversified with mountains and valleys. The Little Tennessee, which by some writers is described as the main stream, rises at the base of the Blue Ridge, near the frontier of North Carolina and Georgia, and flowing N. W. into Tennessee, unites with the Holston, about 25 miles S. W. from Knoxville, after a tortuous course of more than 150 miles. The area drained by this system of rivers is estimated by Darby at 41,000 square miles. In the winter of 1831-2 this river was frozen over, even in the State of Alabama, an event of very rare occurrence.

TENNESSEE, one of the Western States of the American confederacy, is bounded N. by Kentucky and Virginia, E. by North Carolina, from which it is separated by the Alleghany mountains; S. by Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, and W. by Arkansas and Missouri, from which it is separated by the Mississippi river. It lies between 35° and 36° 36' N. lat., and between 81° 40' and 90° 15' W. lon.; being about 430 miles in its greatest length from E. to W., and 110 in breadth, including an area of about 45,600 square miles, or 29,184,000 acres; of which only 5,175,173 were improved in 1850. The state is commonly divided into three sections. The part E. of the Cumberland mountains is called East Tennessee; between the Cumberland mountains and the Tennessee river, it takes the name of Middle Tennessee; and W. of the river just named, that of West Tennessee.

Population.—Though not the largest in area, Tennessee is the second state in point of population in the great Mississippi valley. Her sons partake of the same parentage as those of Kentucky, her original settlers having been mostly from North Carolina and Virginia; and they share with the Kentuckians a manly frankness of character, courage, and loyalty to the federal constitution. At the first national census, in 1790, her inhabitants numbered 35,791; 105,602 in 1800; 261,727 in 1810; 422,813 in 1820; 681,904 in 1830; 829,210 in 1840, and 1,002,625 in 1850; of whom 392,214 were white males, 374,539, white females; 3108, free colored males, 3293, colored females; 118,780, male, and 120,680, female slaves. This population was divided into 130,005 families, occupying 129,420 dwellings. Representative population, 906,830. Of the free population, 585,084 were born in the state; 150,571 in other states of the Union; 706 in England; 2640 in Ireland; 344 in Scotland and Wales; 1168 in Germany; 245 in France; 76 in British America; 561 in other countries, and 1759 whose places of birth were unknown—giving about one per cent. of the free population of foreign birth. In the year ending June 1, 1850, there occurred 11,759 deaths, or nearly 112 persons in every thousand. In the same period, 1005 paupers, of whom 11 were of foreign birth, received aid, at an expense of about $30 for each pauper. Of the entire population, 377 were deaf and dumb, of whom 2 were free colored, and 40 slaves; 468 were blind, of whom 10 were free colored, and 73 slaves; 478 were insane, of whom 4 were free colored, and 21 slaves, and 854 idiotic, of whom 4 were free colored, and 61 slaves.

Counties.—Tennessee is divided into 79 counties, viz. Anderson, Bedford, Benton, Bledsoe, Blount, Bradley, Campbell, Cannon, Carroll, Carter, Claiborne, Cocke, Coffee, Davidson, Decatur, De Kalb, Dickson, Dyer, Fayette, Fentress, Franklin, Gibson, Giles, Granger, Greene, Grundy, Hamilton, Hancock, Hardeman, Hardin, Hawkins, Haywood, Henderson, Henry, Hickman, Humphreys, Jackson, Jefferson, Johnson, Knox, Lauderdale, Lawrence, Lewis, Lincoln, Macon, Madison, Marion, Marshall, Maury, McMinn, McNairy, Meigs, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Obion, Overton, Perry, Polk, Rhea, Roane, Robertson, Rutherford, Scott, Sevier, Shelby, Smith, Stewart, Sullivan, Sumner, Tipton, Van Buren, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Weakley, White, Williamson, and Wilson. Capital, Nashville.

Cities and Towns.—Nashville is the capital and largest town in the state—population, in 1850, 10,478; the other principal towns are Memphis, population, 8841, and Knoxville, 3690; Chattanooga, Columbia, Murfreesborough, Jackson, Clarksville, Bolivar, Charleston, and Carthage.

Face of the Country.—Tennessee is very agreeably diversified with mountain, hill, and plain, containing within its limits fertility of soil, beauty of scenery, and a delightfully temperate climate. In the E. it is separated from North Carolina by different ridges of the Appalachian chain, passing under the various local names of Stone, Iron, Bald, and Unaka mountains. Then follow the valleys of the Holston and other rivers, forming the head waters of the Tennessee. Next succeed the Cumberland mountains, an outlying ridge of the Alleghanies, which enter the state from Kentucky, and crosses it in a S. W. direction into Alabama. The height of these mountains, which spreads over about 50 miles, is variously estimated at from one to two thousand feet. They are wooded to the tops, and embosom delightful and fertile valleys. Their summits are often rounded and cultivated, while others are too rugged for tillage. Middle Tennessee, lying between these mountains and the Tennessee river, is moderately hilly, while the section between the river last named and the Mississippi, called West Tennessee, is either level or gently undulating.

Minerals, Mineral Springs, &c.—Gold has been found in the S. E. part of the state; the other metallic minerals are iron, in abundance; in East and Middle Tennessee, some lead, silver, zinc, manganese, and magnetic iron ore. Of the earthy minerals, coal, the most abundant and valuable, is found in large quantities in the counties among the Cumberland mountains; there is also gypsum of a fine quality, beautiful varieties of marble, nitre, slate, (suitable for roofing,) alum, burrstones, and limestone, which forms the bed of a large portion of the state. Salt springs exist, but not of a very rich quality; there are also some valuable mineral springs. The iron business is beginning to attract the attention of capitalists. According to a recent statement, there were on the Cumberland river, in the early part of 1853, 21 furnaces, 9 forges, and 2 rolling mills, employing $1,216,000 capital, and manufacturing 44,500 tons of metal, and 1400 kettles, valued together at $1,678,000. Rich deposits of copper are found in the S. E. part of Tennessee, in Polk and Monroe counties, which are now extensively worked. A plank-road is nearly finished from the Hiwassee mines to the Chattanooga railroad. This must add greatly to the value of the mines, which will thus be made readily accessible from a shipping port. The Potomac Company recently (in 1853) took out 100 tons in a week, and the Hiwassee Company had 150 tons on the surface.

Rivers.—Tennessee is bounded on the W. by the great Mississippi, and twice crossed by the river whose name it bears. The Cumberland makes a bend into the N. of the state, through which it courses for about 150 miles before it returns to Kentucky, thus giving that portion of the state water communication with the other parts of the great Mississippi and Ohio valleys. The Tennessee enters the S. E. of the state from North Carolina, receives the Holston and its tributaries from Virginia, and the Hiwassee from Georgia, then turns to the S. W. into Alabama at its N. E. angle, and leaves it at its north-western to re-enter Tennessee, which it crosses in a course almost directly north into Kentucky. The Hatchee, a tributary of the Mississippi; Duck river, of the Tennessee from Middle Tennessee, and the Holston, Powell's, and Clinch tributaries, of the same rivers in East Tennessee, are the other principal streams. The Tennessee has a total course of nearly 900 miles, about 400 of which are within the state, and 700 navigable for steamboats (with the exception of that portion in Alabama called the Muscle shoals) to its junction with the Holston in East Tennessee. The Cumberland is navigable 400 miles for steamboats to Carthage, about 50 miles above Nashville, in a direct line. The tributary streams are all more or less navigable, either for steam or keel boats, during high water. All the waters of this state ultimately reach the Mississippi, though generally by a circuitous course. The Forked Deer river is navigable 150, the Big Hatchee above 100, and the Obion 60 miles, for steamboats.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—In common with other limestone regions, Tennessee has numerous caves, several of which are at least a hundred feet below the surface, and a mile in extent. Some are several miles in length. One has been descended for about 400 feet below the surface, where was found a stream of sufficient force to turn a mill. Another, on the top of Cumberland mountain, has a cave of perpendicular descent, whose bottom has never been sounded. Big Bone cave is so called from the bones of the mastodon found within it. These caves are all in the Cumberland mountains. In a spur of the same mountains, called the Enchanted Mountain, are found the impressions of the feet of men and animals in the hard limestone rock, whose appearance has never been accounted for. Near Manchester, in Coffee county, is an old stone fort, situated between two rivers, and including 47 acres, enclosed by a wall on which trees are growing, believed to be 500 years old. In Franklin county is a railway tunnel through a spur of the Cumberland mountains, 2,200 feet long.

Climate, Soil and Productions.—The climate of Tennessee is mild; considerable snow sometimes falls in the winters, which, however, are generally short. The summers are free from the intense heat of the Gulf States. The temperature of that portion of the state among the Cumberland mountains is particularly agreeable. Most parts of the state are healthy, except on the alluvions of the great rivers. The soil of Tennessee is generally arable, and of a good quality. In East Tennessee much of the land among the mountains is poor and ill adapted to cultivation, but even here the valleys are very fertile. This section is favorable to grazing, and great numbers of live stock are exported from thence to the Atlantic States. A greater number of mules are raised in Tennessee than in any other state in the Union. Middle Tennessee has much good land. Western Tennessee has a rich black mould, and on the shores of the Mississippi and Tennessee are extensive brakes of gigantic cane. Indian corn, tobacco, and cotton are the great staples. In 1850, Tennessee produced more hogs than any state in the Union, was fifth in the amount of Indian corn produced, fourth in that of tobacco, and fifth in cotton. The other articles cultivated are wheat, rye, oats, buckwheat, barley, potatoes, sweet and Irish, wool, maple sugar, flax, hemp, hay, cheese, butter, wine, whiskey, and fruits. Of the latter, apples, pears, and plums. According to the census returns of 1850, there were in Tennessee 5,175,173 acres of improved land, producing 52,276,223 bushels of Indian corn; 7,703,086 of oats; 1,619,381 of wheat; 89,163 of rye; 1,067,844 of Irish, and 2,777,716 of sweet potatoes; 369,321 of peas and beans; 14,214 of grass seed, and 18,906 of flaxseed; 20,148,932 pounds of tobacco; 8,139,585 of butter; 77,812,800 of cotton; 1,364,378 of wool; 1,036,571 of beeswax and honey; 177,681 pounds of cheese; 368,131 of flax; 248,000 of cane, and 158,557 of maple sugar; 258,854 of rice, and 74,092 tons of hay; live stock valued at $29,978,016; market goods, $97,183; orchard products; $52,894, and slaughtered animals, $6,401,765.

Forest Trees.—The forest-trees are pine, (in East Tennessee,) sugar-maple, juniper, red cedar, and savin, (on the mountains,) poplar, hickory, walnut, oak, beach, sycamore, locust, cherry, &c.

The animals are the same as are found in the adjacent states of Kentucky, Virginia, &c., viz., deer, racoons, foxes, squirrels, and sometimes, although rarely, bears, in the wilder sections of the state.

Manufactures.—The natural water-power, especially of East Tennessee, combined with its abundance of coal and other fuel, must, as soon as the railway connections with the Atlantic States are completed, make this a great manufacturing section; for in addition to the advantages mentioned, she has in her neighborhood the staple raw materials, cotton, wool, and hemp. There were in Tennessee in 1850, 2789 establishments, each producing $500 and upwards annually; among these, 33 cotton factories, employing $669,600 of capital, and 310 male and 581 female hands, consuming raw material worth $297,500, and manufacturing 363,250 yards of stuffs, and 2,326,250 pounds of yarn, worth a total value of $510,624; 4 woollen establishments, employing $10,900 capital, and 15 male and 2 female hands, consuming raw material worth $1675, and manufacturing 2220 hats, worth $6810; 81 furnaces, forges, &c., employing $1,915,950 capital, and 2705 male hands, consuming raw material worth $730,551, and manufacturing 44,152 tons of wrought, cast, and pig iron, worth a total value of $1,611,043; invested in manufacturing spirituous and malt liquors, $66,125, employing 159 hands, consuming 3000 bushels of barley, 258,400 of corn, and 5480 of rye, and producing 657,000 gallons of whiskey, wine, &c., and 364 tanneries, employing $490,320 capital, consuming raw material worth $396,159, and producing leather valued at $746,484. Homemade manufactures were produced of the value of $3,137,810—the highest in the Union.

Internal Improvements.—There were in Tennessee, January 1, 1853, 185 miles of completed railway, and 509 miles in course of construction. A railway, (already nearly finished to Nashville,) connecting Savannah and Charleston with some point on the Ohio river, will pass through this state. Another, in a great state of forwardness, will connect the same points with Memphis, thus opening uninterrupted lines of railway between the Atlantic ocean and the great Mississippi and Ohio valleys. Charleston and Savannah are also connected (with the exception of 28 miles in course of construction) with Knoxville, at which point the East Tennessee and Virginia railway will also terminate.—See Table of Railroads, APPENDIX.

Commerce.—Tennessee has but little foreign commerce, though very favorably located for domestic trade, being washed on the W. by the Mississippi river, twice crossed by the Tennessee river, and its northern portion traversed for more than 100 miles by the Cumberland, all of which are navigable for steamboats. The exports are mainly live stock, pork, bacon, lard, butter, ginseng, cotton bagging, flour, Indian corn, fruits, tobacco, cotton, hemp, feathers and salt-petre, which find their way mostly to New Orleans, and thence either to Northern or foreign ports; but new exits are about being opened for the products of East and Middle Tennessee, the one through Virginia, and the other through Georgia and South Carolina, both by railway. Five steamers were built in the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1852, the total tonnage of which was only 479 $\frac{1}{2}$; tonnage of the state, 4082 $\frac{3}{4}$. Foreign imports, 1852, \$256,504.

Education.—In 1850, Tennessee had 9 colleges, with an aggregate of 551 students, and 27,056 volumes in their libraries; 1 theological, with 24, 1 law, with 56, and 2 medical schools, with 590 students. Number of children in the state, 288,454; number of public schools, 2713, and of academies, 278. Amount of school fund, $1,321,655; annual expenditure, $114,718; vols. in school libraries, 5100.

Religious Denominations.—Of the 1939 churches in Tennessee in 1850, the Baptists owned 611; Christians, 57; Episcopalians, 17; Free Church, 28; Lutherans, 12; Methodists, 831; Presbyterians, 357; Roman Catholics, 3; and Union Church, 15. The remaining churches belonged to the Africans, the Friends, the Protestant Evangelical, and the Tunkers—making 1 church to every 517 inhabitants. Value of church property, $1,208,876.

Public Institutions.—There is a state penitentiary at Nashville, on the Auburn or silent system, and a deaf and dumb asylum at Knoxville. There were, in 1850, 21 public libraries, with an aggregate of 47,356 volumes.

Government, Finances, &c.—The governor of Tennessee is elected by the people for 2 years, and receives $2000 per annum. The senate consists of 25, and the house of representatives of 75 members, both elected by the people for 2 years. The judiciary consists—1. Of a supreme court, presided over by 3 judges, elected by a joint vote of the two houses of the legislature for 12 years; 2. Of a court of chancery, presided over by 4 chancellors; and 3. Of 14 circuit courts, presided over by as many judges. The judges of the inferior courts are elected by the legislature for 8 years. Davidson county, in which is the city of Nashville, has a special criminal court, and the city of Memphis has a common law and chancery court. Salaries of the judges, from $1500 to $1800. The actual state debt of Tennessee, in January, 1853, was $3,901,856.66; loan debt, $915,000; endorsed debt, $675,000; total, $5,491,856.66. School fund, $1,346,068; other productive property, $4,837,430; property not productive, $1,101,390. Annual expenses, exclusive of debt and schools, about $165,000. In January, 1852, Tennessee had 23 banks, with an aggregate capital of $8,405,197; circulation, $5,300,000; and coin, $1,900,000.

History.—Tennessee was the first state settled by Anglo-Americans west of the Alleghannies, emigrants from North Carolina having built Fort Loudon, in East Tennessee, as early as 1757. But this settlement was attacked by the savages, and the inhabitants either murdered or driven off. Colonization, however, was recommenced in a few years afterwards in the same section of the state. This colony was also harassed by the Indians till after the Revolutionary war. Originally, Tennessee formed a part of the possessions of North Carolina, which state ceded it to the General Government in 1784, but afterwards revoked the grant, when the inhabitants attempted to form an independent state under the name of Franklinia. It was finally ceded to the United States government, and formed a part of the S.W. Territory till its admission as a sovereign state in 1796, forming the sixteenth state of the confederacy. Tennessee took an active part in the war of 1812, and sent several distinguished leaders to its armies; prominent among whom was General Andrew Jackson, since so celebrated for his administration of the affairs of the central government during his presidency. James K. Polk, the eleventh president of the United States, was also a citizen of this state.

TENNESSEE COLONY, a post-office of Anderson co., Texas.

TENNESSEE LANDING, a post-village of Issaquena co., Mississippi.

TENNESSEE RIVER, a post-office of Macon co., N. C., 341 miles W. from Raleigh.

TENNILLE, a post-village of Washington co., Georgia, on the Central railroad, 136 miles N. W. from Savannah.

TEN POUND ISLAND, in Ann harbor, Massachusetts, seven-eighths of a mile S. from Gloucester, contains a fixed light 45 feet above the level of the sea. Lat. 42° 35' N., lon. 70° 40' W.

TENSAS, or TENSAW, a river of Louisiana, rises in Carroll parish, near the W. bank of the Mississippi, and pursues a tortuous course, the general direction of which is nearly parallel with that river, until it unites with the Washita at Trinity. The river thus formed is usually called Black river. Steamboats can ascend about 150 miles from its mouth, during at least 6 months of the year. The whole length is estimated at 250 miles.

TENSAS, a parish in the E. N. E. part of Louisiana, on the right bank of Mississippi river, has an area of 680 square miles. It is drained by the Tensas river and Macon bayou. The surface is level and low; the soil fertile. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 21,665 bales of cotton, (a greater quantity than was produced in any other parish of the state,) and 338,725 bushels of Indian corn. It contained 3 churches, and 55 pupils attending a public school. The Tensas river is navigable by steamboats through this parish. Formed since 1840, from the N. part of Concordia. Capital, St. Joseph. Population, 9040, of whom 902 were free, and 8138, slaves.

TENSAW, a post-office of Baldwin co., Ala.

TEONISTA CREEK rises in the N. W. part of Pennsylvania, and falls into the Alleghany in Venango county.

TEONISTA, or TEONESTA, a post-village of Venango co., Pennsylvania, at the confluence of Teonista creek with Alleghany river, about 20 miles N. E. from Franklin.

TEOTSA, a small post-village of Rock co., Wisconsin, on Rock river, 30 miles S. E. from Madison.

TERRE AUX BŒUFS, a post-office of St. Bernard parish, Louisiana.

TERRE BONNE, a parish in the S. E. part of Louisiana, bordering on the Gulf of Mexico: area, 1640 square miles. It is drained by the Terre Bonne, Black, and Caillou bayous, which are navigable. The surface is low and level, subject to inundation. A large part of it is occupied by "floating prairies," or shallow lakes. The numerous watercourses are bordered with rich plantations of sugar-cane, and tracts of good timber, including the live oak and cypress. Sugar and molasses are the staples. In 1850 the parish produced 9171 hogsheads of sugar; 435,290 gallons of molasses; 187,420 bushels of corn, and 466,900 pounds of rice. There were 4 saw and planing mills, 3 churches, and 270 pupils attending public schools. The New Orleans & Opelousas railroad will pass through the parish. Capital, Houma. Population, 7724, of whom 3396 were free, and 4328, slaves.

TERRE BONNE, a small bayou of Louisiana, flows through the parish of the same name into the Gulf of Mexico. It is navigable for small boats.

TERRE COUPÉE, a post-village in St. Joseph co., Indiana, 150 miles N. by W. from Indianapolis.

TERRE COUPÉE STATION, a post-village of Berrien co., Michigan, on the Central railroad, 11 miles W. from Niles.

TERRE HAUTE, a post-village of Champaign co., Ohio, 50 miles W. from Columbus.

TERRE HAUTE, a flourishing town of Harrison township, capital of Vigo county, Indiana, on the E. bank of the Wabash river, and on the Wabash and Erie canal, 73 miles W. S. W. from Indianapolis, and 69 miles N. from Vincennes. The bank on which the town is built is elevated about 60 feet above the river, and the situation is remarkably beautiful. The plan of the town is rectangular; the streets are wide, and bordered with numerous shade-trees and gardens. About half of the houses are built of brick, and the others of wood. The public buildings include a fine court house, a town hall, 3 banks, a large academy, and about 12 churches, some of which are spacious and ornamental edifices. Six newspapers are published here. The opposite banks of the river are connected by a fine bridge, over which the National road passes. Fort Harrison prairie, on the W. border of which the town stands, is noted for the fertility of its soil and the beauty of its landscapes. Terre Haute is the centre of an active, increasing trade, and one of the principal shipping points on the Wabash and Erie canal. Large quantities of pork, grain, and flour are exported from this place. It is the terminus of the following railroads: the Terre Haute and Indianapolis; the Alton and Terre Haute; the Evansville and Illinois, (unfinished;) the Terre Haute and Joliet, (unfinished;) and the Atlantic and Mississippi, (unfinished.) Population in 1853, about 7000.

TERRE HILL, a post-office of Lancaster co., Pennsylvania.

TERRE NOIR, a township in Clarke co., Arkansas. Population, 220.

TERRY, a post-office of Carroll co., Tenn.

TERRYVILLE, a small village of Abbeville district, South Carolina.

TERRYTOWN, a post-village of Bradford co., Pa., 149 miles N. by E. from Harrisburg.

TERRYVILLE, a post-village in Plymouth township, Litchfield co., Connecticut, about 25 miles S. W. from Hartford. The manufacture of wooden clocks in the United States was first commenced at this place, by Mr. Terry, about 30 years ago.

TETERSBURG, a post-office of Tipton co., Ind.

TEUTONIA, a small village of McKean co., Pa., 190 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

TEUTOPOLIS, a thriving post-village of Effingham county, Illinois, on the National road, and on the Alton and Terre Haute railroad, 88 miles S. E. from Springfield. It has a Catholic chapel and a windmill.

TEWOCKONY SPRINGS, a post-office of Limestone co., Texas.

TEWKESBURY, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 20 miles N. W. by N. from Boston, on the Lowell and Lawrence and Boston and Lowell railroads. Population of the township, 1044.

TEWKESBURY, a township of Hunterdon co., New Jersey, about 40 miles N. from Trenton. Population, 2300.

TEXANA, a post-village, capital of Jackson county, Texas, on the Lavaca river, near its junction with the Navidad, 150 miles S. E. from Austin city. It is the head of steam navigation, and is increasing in trade and population.

TEXAS, a recently admitted member of the United States, was formerly in conjunction with Coahuila, a territory of Mexico; it now forms (with the exception of Florida) the most southern portion of the United States. It is bounded on the N. by New Mexico, Indian Territory, and Arkansas; on the E. by Arkansas and Louisiana; on the S. E. by the Gulf of Mexico; and on the S. W. and W. by Mexico and New Mexico. The Red river separates it in part from Indian Territory and Arkansas, the Sabine from Louisiana, and the Rio Grande from Mexico. This state lies between 25° 50' and 36° 30' N. lat., and between 93° 30' and 107° W. lon. Its shape is very irregular, but its extreme length from S. E. to N. W. is more than 800 miles, and its greatest breadth from E. to W. about 750 miles, including an area of 237,321 square miles; an amount of territory five times that of the state of Pennsylvania, the greater part of which is composed of soil of great agricultural capabilities.

Population.—Texas had, according to the late census, 212,592 inhabitants in 1850, of whom 84,863 were white males; 69,237 females; 171 free colored males; 160 females; and 28,700 male and 29,461 female slaves. This population was divided into 28,377 families, occupying 27,988 dwellings; representative population, 189,327. There were 3046 deaths, or more than 14 in every 1000 persons in the year ending June 1, 1850. In the same period, only 7 paupers received aid from the public funds. Of the free population, 49,160 were born in the state; 87,893 in other states; 1002 in England; 1403 in Ireland; 278 in Scotland and Wales; 137 in British America; 8191 in Germany; 647 in France; 5117 in other countries; and 604 whose places of birth were unknown—making more than 11 per cent. of the free population of foreign birth. Of the entire population, 58 were deaf and dumb, of whom 9 were slaves; 76 blind, of whom 3 were free colored, and 14, slaves; 41 were insane, of whom 1 was free colored, and 1 a slave; and 108 idiotic, of whom 1 was free colored, and 10, slaves.

Counties.—Texas is divided into 88 counties, Anderson, Angelina, Austin, Bastrop, Bell, Bexar, Bowie, Brazoria, Brazos, Burleson, Burnet, Caldwell, Calhoun, Cameron, Cass, Cherokee, Collin, Colorado, Comal, Cook, Dallas, Denton, De Witt, El Paso, Falls, Fannin, Fayette, Fort Bend, Galveston, Gaudalupe, Gillespie, Goliad, Gonzales, Grayson, Grimes, Harris, Harrison, Hays, Henderson, Hill, Hopkins, Houston, Hunt, Jackson, Jasper, Jefferson, Kaufman, Lamar, Lavaca, Leon, Liberty, Limestone, Madison, Matagorda, McLennan, Medina, Milam, Montgomery, Nacogdoches, Navarro, Newton, Nueces, Orange, Panola, Polk, Red River, Refugio, Robertson, Rusk, Sabine, San Augustin, San Patricio, Shelby, Smith, Starr, Titus, Travis, Tyler, Upshur, Uvalde, Vanzandt, Victoria, Walker, Washington, Webb, Wharton, Williamson, and Wood. Capital, Austin.

Cities and Towns.—Texas has no very large towns; the principal are Galveston, the commercial depôt of the state, population in 1850, 4127; in 1853, about 6000; Houston, and San Antonio, each 6000 in 1853; Washington, San Augustin, Brownsville and New Braunfels.

Face of the Country, Geology, &c.—This great state embraces every variety of surface, mountain, plain, hill, and desert, within its limits. In the S. E., along the coast is a level belt of land from 30 to 60 miles in breadth, which is succeeded by an undulating and prairie country, occupying another belt, of from 150 to 200 miles in width, which is followed in the W. and N. W. by the mountainous region and the table-lands. The extreme N. is invaded by the Great American desert, which extends perhaps about 60 miles within the boundary of Texas. The rivers have generally alluvial bottoms of from 3 to 20 miles in width, which are of great fertility, and heavily timbered. The belts referred to above run across the state in a direction nearly N. E. and S. W., so that almost all the N. part of Eastern Texas is included in the second division, or the undulating country. Little is known of the table-lands, as they are yet the home of few white men except the hunters, who pursue its buffaloes and other wild animals. It is, however, represented as being a well-watered and fertile region. A low range of mountains, called the Colorado Hills, runs in a N. and S. direction, E. of the Colorado river, indeed the whole section of the state in the same parallel, between the Colorado and Brazos rivers, is broken with low mountains. Between the Colorado and the Rio Grande, and N. of the sources of the Nueces and San Antonio, the country is crossed by broken ranges of mountains, running in various directions, but of whose altitude and character we have little reliable information. They appear, however, to be outlying ridges of the great Rocky mountain chain.

Texas abounds in minerals. Lying as she does, in close proximity to the gold and silver regions of Mexico and New Mexico, it is probable that she may develop in future rich supplies of the precious metals. This, however, is not left entirely to conjecture, as rich silver mines are known to have been worked at San Saba, and recent discoveries of the same metal have been made upon the Bidais river. In the spring of 1853 the country was agitated by the report of the discovery of gold mines W. of the Colorado river, and between it and the San Saba mountains, and N. of the Llano river, but these reports have not been confirmed, at least as to its existence in any considerable quantities. Iron is found in various parts of the state, and salt (from salt lakes and springs) is furnished in great abundance; bituminous coal, (upon the Trinity and Brazos rivers,) copper, copperas, alum, lime, agates, chalcedony, jasper, white and red sandstone, and a white building stone, similar to that in the Louvre at Paris, are found in abundance. An immense bed of gypsum, said to be the largest in the world, extends into the N. W. of this state from Indian Territory, reaching from the Arkansas river to the Rio Grande. Mineral springs abound; among the most important are the Salinilla springs, (both white and salt sulphur,) near the Trinity river in Walker county, a spring similar to White Sulphur in Virginia, near the Bidais river; a blue sulphur spring, also in Walker county; a mineral spring near the Chilo, 30 miles from Bexar, formerly of great repute among the Mexicans for its medical properties, and a white sulphur spring near Carolina in Montgomery county.

Rivers, Bays, Sounds.—The coast of Texas is lined with a chain of low islands, which form a series of bays, sounds, and lagoons; the most important of which are Galveston, Matagorda, Espiritu, Santo, and Corpus Christi bays, and Laguna del Madre. Commencing at Galveston bay in the N. E. they lie along the Gulf of Mexico in the order in which they are named. Galveston bay, the largest of these, extends about 35 miles inland from the Gulf of Mexico, in a direction nearly N. Matagorda bay and Laguna del Madre are sounds rather than bays, and run nearly parallel with the shore. The inlets to these are much obstructed by bars; Galveston inlet, the best, is said to have but 12 feet water, the entrance of Matgorda bay 11 feet, and that of San Luis but 10 feet. A writer in De Bow's Resources of the South and West, however, says—"Steamships of 1200 to 1500 tons, and sail vessels of 1000 tons, can enter the port of Galveston." Texas is crossed by several long rivers, generally rising in the table-lands of the W. and N. W., and pursuing a S. E. course, discharge their waters into the Gulf of Mexico. Commencing with the Rio Grande, the largest river in Texas, 1800 miles long, and which forms its S. W. boundary, and proceeding along the coast, we have the Nueces, San Antonio, Guadalupe, Colorado, Brazos, Trinity, Neches, and Sabine; whose lengths in the order named are about 300, 250, 275, 550, 500, 400, 300, and 350 miles, as estimated by measurements on the map. The Red river rises in the N. W. of the state, and forms a large part of the N. boundary line. The Canadian, a branch of the Arkansas, crosses the northern projection of the state. All of these are navigable to a greater or less extent, (depending on the wetness or dryness of the season, and on local obstructions,) the Sabine for about 150, the Trinity for 300, the San Jacinto 50, the Brazos 150, the Nueces 100, the Rio Grande 400, the Red river 300 miles above the Raft, (in the N. W. of Louisiana,) but owing to that obstruction, for only three months in the year. The Colorado is also obstructed by a raft ten miles from its mouth; but when this is removed, which it doubtless will be ere long, it will give a navigation of several hundred miles. There are a number of small rivers or tributaries, navigable to some extent, and besides their value as channels of commerce, they afford in many instances excellent sites for mill seats. There are no known lakes of importance in Texas. Sabine lake, an expansion of the river of that name, near its mouth, 20 miles long, is on the boundary of Texas and Louisiana. There is a salt lake near the Rio Grande, from which large quantities of salt are annually taken.

Objects of Interest to Tourists.—There are no doubt many wild scenes among the hitherto but little explored mountains of the W. of Texas; but no very striking natural objects are as yet known in this region, unless it be the wide sweep of its prairies, enamelled with flowers, and the deep barrancas, cañons, or gullies, which are either worn by water, or rent asunder by earthquakes, to a depth of many hundred feet, in its high table-lands. Captain Marcy represents the Red river, near its source, as cutting its way through the solid rock in the N. of Texas, in a cañon or gorge of 800 feet in depth. A fall of 120 feet in perpendicular pitch is reported to have been recently discovered in one of the branches of the Colorado river, which falls in one unbroken sheet of 100 feet in width.

Climate.—Texas seems to partake of a climate free from the extremes of both the torrid and temperate zones, producing in the N. many of the products of the temperate, and in the S. many of those of the torrid zone. While it shares the genial climate of Louisiana, it is freed from its unhealthy swamp exhalations. The heats of summer are much mitigated by the refreshing breezes from the gulf, which blow with great steadiness during that season. In November, however, the N. winds set in and sweep down the plains, with but little variation, during the months of December and January. These winds have doubtless a purifying effect on the atmosphere, by sweeping off the exhalations of the river bottoms and the newly broken soil; the settler on the prairies of the interior is thus freed from the miasma that exerts usually so pestilential an influence on the "clearings" of new countries and in marshy districts. Ice is seldom seen in the southern part; and during the summer months the thermometer averages about 80°, and in winter from 60° to 75°.

Soil and Productions.—The soil is equally favorable with the climate; for while every variety is found, from the cheerless desert to the exuberantly fertile river bottoms, the general character is that of great fertility. Cotton, the great staple, grows well in almost every part of the state, and that grown near the gulf is considered equal to the celebrated sea-island. Indian corn, the other great staple, is also readily raised in almost every part of the state. Two crops a year are planted, one in February, and the other about the middle of June, yielding often 75 bushels to the acre of shelled corn. In the undulating country, wheat, rye, oats, buckwheat, and the other small grains flourish. The level country is well adapted to the production of sugar, though it is not yet extensively cultivated. Tobacco, of a quality claimed to be equal to that of Cuba, flourishes with little care, and is doubtless destined to form one of the staples of Texas. Indigo, of a superior kind, is indigenous to the state. Rice can be cultivated to any extent, and the soil is well adapted to flax and hemp. According to the census of 1850, there were in Texas 639,107 acres of improved land, producing 41,689 bushels of wheat; 5,926,611 of Indian corn; 178,883 of oats; 179,332 of peas and beans; 93,548 of Irish potatoes; 1,323,170 of sweet potatoes; 4776 of barley; 87,916 pounds of rice; 66,897 of tobacco; 131,374 of wool; 23,038,400 of cotton; 2,326,556 of butter; 94,619 of cheese; 7,351,000 of cane sugar; 380,532 of beeswax and honey; 8279 tons of hay; 441,638 gallons of molasses; live stock, valued at $10,266,880; orchard products, $12,605; market products, $12,254; slaughtered animals, $1,106,032; besides some rye, buckwheat, wine, grass-seeds, hops, flax, and silk. The grape, mulberry, and the delicious vanilla are indigenous and abundant. The nopal, (famous for the production of the cochineal insect,) the musquit-tree, (a species of locust, very valuable for fencing and building,) and the tea-tree, (a good substitute for the Chinese shrub,) are all native to Texas. Cayenne pepper is grown in vast quantities. The fruits are no less abundant and various than its other products: here we have a peach superior to that of the North, the nectarine, the quince, the fig, the plum, the crab-apple, and a great variety of berries. Oranges, lemons, limes, and melons grow well, as do all the garden vegetables. Hickory, walnut, and pecan nuts are plentiful. Shrubs and flowers are in profusion, and of great beauty and variety, and many of our Northern exotics and hothouse plants are indigenous to Texas; such, for example, as the gaudy dahlia. Here bloom asters of every variety, geraniums, lilies, trumpet flowers, cardinal flowers, wax plants, mimosas, &c. &c. In short, a Texas prairie in spring is the very paradise of a botanist, or indeed of any lover of the beauties of nature.

The forest-trees are live-oak, and other varieties of that noble tree, cedar, pine, ash, walnut, hickory, pecan, mulberry, cypress, elm, and sycamore. The eastern portion and the river bottoms are the most densely timbered. "Cross Timbers" is a wooded section, stretching N. from near the sources of the Trinity, across the Red, and on to the Arkansas, having a probable length of 200, and a breadth varying from 5 to 10 miles. The limits of this forest are very abrupt, and form, as it were, a wall against the further progress of the prairies.

Animals.—Texas abounds in wild animals of different kinds. The buffalo still roams N. of the Red river, and the wild horse or mustang feeds in its undulating prairies. Here, too, are deer, black bears, wolves, foxes, some pecaries, racoons, opossums, rabbits, and abundance of squirrels. Among the mountains of the West are found the graceful antelope, the mountain goat, and the moose, (the largest of the deer kind.) Of the feathered tribes there are many varieties to tempt the cupidity of the hunter, such as prairie hens, wild geese, wild turkeys, brant, teal, canvass-back and common duck, pheasants, quails, grouse, partridges, woodcock, pigeons, turtle-doves, snipes, plovers, and rice-birds. Of birds of prey are the baldheaded and Mexican eagles, vultures, hawks, and owls. Of waterfowl, besides those mentioned above, are cranes, swans, pelicans, kingfishers, and water-turkeys. Of small birds, crows, blackbirds, starlings, bluejays, woodpeckers, redbirds, martens, swallows, and wrens. Of the birds noted for beauty of plumage are the paroquet, the oriole, the whippoorwill, the cardinal, and the sweet-toned mocking-bird. Of fish and reptiles there are also a great variety, and of excellent quality; among the former are the red fish, (a delicious fish, weighing 50 pounds,) the yellow, white, and blue cod-fish, sheepshead, mullet, flounders, perch, pike, suckers, and trout; and of the latter, alligators, gareels, rattle, water, moccasin, coachwhip, copperhead, chicken, and garter snakes, and horned frogs and lizards. Of shell-fish are crabs, oysters, clams, muscles, crayfish, shrimps, and hard and soft shelled turtles. Among the insects are the gaddy gnat, the cantharides or Spanish fly, the honey-bee, (in a wild state,) and a huge spider called the tarantula.

Manufactures.—Texas, as a new state, has but few manufactures; nor till her rich and beautiful prairies and fertile bottoms are occupied, will capitalists be likely to turn their attention much to this branch of industry. According to the census of 1850, there were 307 manufacturing establishments producing each $500 and upwards annually. The homemade manufactures produced the same year were valued at $265,526. There were, in 1850, no cotton factories, and but one woollen establishment, employing only $8000 capital, and 4 male and 4 female hands, and producing $15,000 worth of cloth and yarn; and two furnaces, forges, &c., employing $16,000 capital, and 35 male hands, and producing $55,000 worth of castings, pig iron, &c.

Internal Improvements.—In so recently settled a state, little advance can be expected to have been made in this respect, beyond opening ordinary roads; however, Texas, young as she is, has begun to turn her attention in that direction, and in January, 1853, 32 miles of railway were in operation. A road is projected, to be called the Texas Central railway, and another is in course of construction from Vicksburg, Mississippi, to Marshall, in Texas, perhaps to be continued to Austin. A road is in contemplation from San Antonio to Saluria, one from Galveston to Austin, and several others.

Commerce.—This state has facilities for both internal and foreign commerce. Her most fertile districts are crossed by large rivers, more or less navigable by steamboats and by smaller boats, while her numerous bays form harbors for transacting her foreign commerce. It is true, her rivers are obstructed by sandbars and rafts in some instances; but these admit of removal. Although bars obstruct the inlets of her harbors, vessels of from 1000 to 1500 tons may enter the port of Galveston. The exports of the state are principally cotton. The value of exports for 1852 were $713,075; of imports, $77,892: tonnage entered, 6557; cleared, 7388, and owned in the state, 7119½. In the year ending August 31, 1853, there had been brought to the shipping ports of the state, 84,905 bales of cotton; an increase of 22,107 over 1852. Of this, 16,346 were exported to European ports.

Education.—“Primary and common schools are established in the chief towns and counties, and education is becoming universal and easily attained.” (De Bow’s Industrial Resources of the South and West.) According to the census, there were 356 public schools in 1850, and 82 academies. There is a college at Ruterville, liberally endowed by the state. Galveston University is also in operation. See Table of Colleges, APPENDIX.

Religious Denominations.—Of 164 churches in Texas in 1850, the Baptists owned 30; the Episcopalians, 5; the Free Church, 7; the Methodists, 88; the Presbyterians, 15, and the Roman Catholics, 13. The remaining churches were owned by the Christians, German Protestants, Mormons, and the Union Church—giving one church to every 1296 persons. Value of church property, $200,530.

Public Institutions.—The state penitentiary is located at Huntsville. According to the census returns, there were 37 newspapers published in 1850.

Government.—The executive power of Texas is intrusted to a governor and lieutenant-governor, elected by the people, each for two years, the former receiving $2000 per annum salary, and the latter, who is ex officio president of the senate, $3 per day during the session of the legislature. The latter body is constituted, as usual in the United States, of a senate, composed of 21 members, elected for 4, and a house of representatives, of 75 members, elected for 2 years, both chosen by popular vote. The sessions of the legislature are biennial. The judiciary consists—1. Of a supreme court, composed of a chief and 2 associate judges; and 2. Of district courts, held twice a year in each county. All the judges of Texas are elected by the people for 6 years, but the governor can, on address from two-thirds of each house, remove the judges of both courts. The judges of the supreme court receives $2000, and the district judges, each $1750 per annum. The state debt of Texas in 1852 was $12,436,991; ordinary expenses, exclusive of debt and schools, $100,000. In January, 1852, Texas had but one bank, capital, $300,000; circulation, $400,000; coin, $200,000.

History.—The present state of Texas formed, previous to the revolution of 1836, the whole of the Mexican province of Texas, together with portions of the States of Tamaulipas, Coahuila, Chihuahua, and New Mexico. In consequence of the inducements held out to settlers, an extensive emigration to this region from the United States commenced in 1821, which had swelled to sufficient amount in 1832 to induce the inhabitants to demand admission as an independent member of the Mexican confederacy; which being refused, resulted in a declaration of independence, that, after various contests in arms, was completely achieved, by the defeat and capture of the Mexican president, Santa Anna, at San Jacinto, in 1836. Up to 1845, Texas remained an independent republic, modelled after the governments of the United States. In 1846 it was admitted a member of the North American confederacy; reserving the right to be divided into five states, with the institution of negro slavery. Disputes arising with Mexico as to the boundary, (Mexico claiming to the Nueces, and the United States to the Rio Grande del Norte,) war ensued, in which General Taylor gained two battles within the limits of the present state of Texas. The treaty with Mexico, at the close of this war, assigned to Texas the Rio Grande as its S. W. boundary. By the compromise act of 1850, the boundaries of Texas were somewhat modified, she conceding to New Mexico a portion of her northern territory, in consideration of $10,000,000, to be paid by the United States Government.

TEXAS, a new county in the S. part of Missouri, has an area of 1250 square miles. It is traversed from S. to N. by Big Piney and Robidoux forks, affluents of Gasconade river, and also drained by the sources of Current, an affluent of the Big Black river. The surface is hilly, and covered with extensive forests of yellow pine, which here grows to a great size; the soil is said to be generally good. Indian corn, wheat, oats, and cattle are the staples. Lumber is the principal export. In 1850 the county produced 112,042 bushels of corn; 2848 of wheat, and 5957 of oats. It contained 3 churches, and 20 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Houston. Population, 2312, of whom 2270 were free, and 42, slaves.

TEXAS, a post-village of Oswego co., New York, on Salmon creek, near its entrance into Lake Ontario, above 38 miles N. from Syracuse. Produce is shipped here in steamboats.

TEXAS, a small village of Lancaster co., Pa., about 25 miles S. S. E. from Lancaster.

TEXAS, a post-office of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania.

TEXAS, a township of Wayne co., Pennsylvania, on the Lackawaxen creek, contains the county seat, which is the eastern terminus of the Carbondale and Honesdale railroad. Population, 2843.

TEXAS, a post-office of Meriwether co., Ga., about 14 miles N. E. from Greenville.

TEXAS, a village of Champaign co., Ohio, on the turnpike from Urbana to Columbus.

TEXAS, a township in Crawford co., Ohio. Population, 545.

TEXAS, a post-office of Henry co., Ohio.

TEXAS, a township in the W. part of Kalamazoo co., Michigan, intersected by the Michigan Central railroad. Population, 410.

TEXAS, a post-office of Washington co., Ind.

TEXAS, a small village of Iroquois co., Illinois, on the Iroquois river.

TEXAS, a post-office of Randolph co., Ill.

TEXAS, a small village of Washington co., Io.

TEXAS HILL, a post-office of Sacramento co., California.

TEXAS VALLEY, a post-office of Cortland co., New York.

THAMES river, of Connecticut, is formed by the junction of the Quinebaug, Shetucket, and Yantic rivers, near Norwich, in New London county, and flows S. about 14 miles into Long Island sound. It is navigable throughout its whole length, and forms an excellent harbor at its mouth.

THATCHER, a post-office of Jo Daviess co., Illinois.

THEBES, a post-village, capital of Alexander co., Illinois, on the Mississippi river, 144 miles below St. Louis.

THE CORNER, a post-office of Ulster co., N.Y.

THE FORK, a post-office of Somerset co., Me.

THE GLADES, a post-office of Carroll co., Va.

THE GLEN, a post-office of Warren co., N.Y.

THE GULF, a post-office of Chatham co., North Carolina.

THE NARROWS, a post-office of Crawford co., Arkansas.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, a post-office of Fairfax co., Virginia.

THE PLAINS, a post-office of Fauquier co., Virginia.

THE PURCHASE, a post-village of Westchester co., New York, about 130 miles S. from Albany.

THERESA, a post-village in Theresa township, Jefferson co., New York, on Indian river, 18 or 20 miles N. N. E. from Watertown. Population of the township, 2342.

THERESA, a post-township in the N. E. part of Dodge co., Wisconsin. Population, 764.

THETFORD, a post-village in Orange co., Vermont, on the W. side of the Connecticut, and on the Connecticut and Passumpsic Rivers railroad, 33 miles S. S. E. from Montpelier, contains 1 or 2 churches and an academy. Population of the township, 2016.

THETFORD, a post-office of Genesee co., Michigan.

THE SQUARE, a post-office of Cayuga co., N.Y.

THE UNION, a post-office of Powhattan co., Virginia.

THE VILLAGE, a post-office of Pointe Coupée parish, Louisiana.

THIBODEAUX, or THIBODEAUXVILLE, tib'o-dōvil, a post-village, capital of La Fourche Interior parish, Louisiana, on Bayou La Fourche, on the New Orleans and Opelousas railroad, about 100 miles W. S. W. from New Orleans. Steamers navigate the bayou from this village to New Orleans. A newspaper is published here.

THICKETY CREEK, of South Carolina, flows through Union district into Broad river, a few miles above the mouth of Pacolet river.

THICKETY FORK, a post-office of Spartanburg district, South Carolina.

THIRD LAKE, Wisconsin. See FOUR LAKES.

THIVENER, a post-office of Gallia co., Ohio.

THLONOTO CREEK, of Dooly co., Georgia, flows westward into Flint river.

THOMAS, a county in the S. W. part of Georgia, bordering on Florida, contains 920 square miles. It is drained by the head streams of the Ochlockonee river. The surface is level; the soil sandy and productive. Cotton and Indian corn are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 7667 bales of cotton; 353,920 bushels of corn, and 146,022 of sweet potatoes. There were 3 saw mills, 2 tanneries, and 1 woollen factory. It contained 16 churches, 376 pupils attending public schools, and 50 attending other schools. It is intersected by the Brunswick and Florida railroad, (unfinished.) Organized in 1825, and named in honor of General Jett Thomas, of Georgia. Capital, Thomasville. Population, 10,103; of whom 4947 were free, and 5156, slaves.

THOMAS' POINT, on the N. side of the entrance to South river, Chesapeake bay, contains a fixed light in a tower 30 feet high, and aids vessels bound to Annapolis.

THOMASTON, a post-township of Lincoln county, Maine, bounded on the W. by St. George's river, 80 miles E. N. E. from Portland. It contains extensive beds of limestone, from which a superior quality of lime is manufactured and exported in large quantities. The Maine state prison is situated in this township, on the bank of the river, and is enclosed by a tract of ten acres. The plan of the building and system of discipline are similar to those of the Auburn prison. The convicts are principally employed in cutting granite, which is extensively quarried on the banks of the river, a few miles below. When wrought into various forms for buildings, it is exported to different parts of the United States. The village of Thomaston, situated on the E. bank of the St. George's, 12 miles from the ocean, contains 2 banks and a newspaper office. Population of the township, 2723.

THOMASTON, a neat post-village, capital of Upson county, Georgia, 75 miles W. by S. from Milledgeville. It has a handsome brick court house, 2 churches, 2 academies, and 5 stores. There is a cotton factory on Pototo creek, 1 mile from the village, which employs 50 operatives. Incorporated in 1825.

THOMASTOWN, a post-village in Leake co., Miss., 55 miles N. E. by N. from Jackson.

THOMASVILLE, a thriving post-village, capital of Thomas county, Georgia, on the Brunswick and Florida railroad, 200 miles S. by W. from Milledgeville. It contains a court house which is creditable to the county, and a school called the Fletcher institute, under the direction of the Methodists. Population, about 500.

THOMASVILLE, a post-office of Robertson co., Tennessee.

THOMASVILLE, a village in Washington co., Tennessee, 290 miles E. from Nashville.

THOMASVILLE, a post-office of Oregon co., Mo.

THOMPSON, a post-township of Windham county, Connecticut, intersected by the Norwich and Worcester railroad, and drained by the Quinebaug and French rivers, which furnish abundant water-power, 35 miles N. by E. from Norwich. It contains several manufacturing villages, the principal of which are Masonsville, Fishersville, and Wilsonsville, on the Norwich and Worcester railroad, and New Boston, in the N. W. corner of the township. The thriving village of Thompson is situated centrally on elevated ground, and has communication with the above railroad. It contains 2 or 3 churches, several stores, and a bank. Pop. of the township, 4638.

THOMPSON, a post-township of Sullivan co., New York, contains Monticello, the county seat. Population, 3198.

THOMPSON, a new township forming the S. E. extremity of Fulton co., Pennsylvania. Population, 672.

THOMPSON, a post-township of Susquehanna co., Pennsylvania, about 20 miles E. from Montrose. Population, 509.

THOMPSON, a post-village in Columbia co., Georgia, on the Georgia railroad, about 60 miles N. E. by E. from Milledgeville.

THOMPSON, a township in Pike co., Arkansas. Population, 548.

THOMPSON, a township in the W. part of Delaware co., Ohio. Population, 732.

THOMPSON, a post-township in Geauga co., Ohio. Population, 1211.

THOMPSON, a township forming the N. E. extremity of Seneca co., Ohio, intersected by Mad River and Lake Erie railroad. Population, 1668.

THOMPSON'S, a post-office of Fairfield district, South Carolina.

THOMPSON'S CREEK, of South Carolina, rises a few miles N. W. from Chesterfield Court House, and flowing S. E. enters Great Pedee river, about 5 miles below Cheraw.

THOMPSON'S CREEK, of Mississippi, enters Leaf river from the N., in Perry county.

THOMPSON'S CREEK, of Louisiana, forms the boundary between East and West Feliciana parishes, and enters the Mississippi about 2 miles above Port Hudson.

THOMPSON'S CROSS ROADS, a post-office of Louisa co., Virginia, 45 miles N. W. from Richmond.

THOMPSON'S LANDING, a small village of Hancock co., Kentucky.

THOMPSON'S RIVER, of Missouri Territory, falls into the Missouri river in about 108° 20' W. lon.

THOMPSON'S STAND, a post-office of Suffolk co., New York.

THOMPSON'S STORE, a small village of Guilford co., North Carolina.

THOMPSONTOWN, a thriving post-village of Juniata co., Pennsylvania, on the left bank of the Juniata river, and on the Pennsylvania canal, 38 miles N. W. from Harrisburg.

THOMPSONVILLE, a manufacturing post-village of Enfield township, Hartford co., Connecticut, on Freshwater river, near its confluence with the Connecticut, and on the New Haven Hartford and Springfield railroad, 17 miles N. by E. from Hartford. It contains a bank, and a carpet factory employing about 500 hands. Population in 1840, 800; in 1853, about 2000.

THOMPSONVILLE, a post-village of Sullivan co., New York, about 100 miles S. S. W. from Albany.

THOMPSONVILLE, a small post-village of Washington co., Pennsylvania.

THOMPSONVILLE, a post-village of Culpeper co., Virginia, 104 miles N. N. W. from Richmond. It has 2 churches.

THOMPSONVILLE, a post-office of Rockingham co., North Carolina.

THOMPSONVILLE, a post-office of Washington co., Kentucky.

THOMPSONVILLE, a post-village in Racine co., Wisconsin, 92 miles S. E. from Madison. It contains 1 store and 2 hotels.

THORN, a township forming the N. W. extremity of Perry co., Ohio. Pop., 1890.

THORNAPPLE, a township in the N. W. part of Barry co., Michigan. Population, 336.

THORNAPPLE RIVER, of Michigan, rises in Eaton county, and flows westward through Barry county, where it turns toward the N., and enters Grand river in Kent county, about 10 miles E. from Grand rapids. Its length exceeds 80 miles.

THORNBURG, a post-village of Spottsylvania co., Virginia, on the Po river, 69 miles N. from Richmond.

THORNBURY, a post-township of Chester co., Pennsylvania, about 24 miles W. from Philadelphia.

THORNBURY, a township of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, about 22 miles W. by S. from Philadelphia. Population, 876.

THORNDIKE, a post-township in Waldo co., Maine, 38 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 1029.

THORNDIKE, a post-office of Hampden co., Massachusetts.

THORN HILL, a post-office of Orange co., Virginia, 92 miles N. W. from Richmond.

THORN HILL, a small village of Marion co., Alabama.

THORN HILL, a post-office of Walker co., Ala.

THORN HILL, a post-office of Granger co., Tennessee.

THORNSLEYSVILLE, a post-village of Boone co., Indiana, 7 miles S. E. from Lebanon.

THORNTON, a post-township in Grafton co., New Hampshire, 54 miles N. by W. from Concord. Population, 1011.

THORNTON, a post-village of Cook co., Illinois, about 25 miles S. from Chicago.

THORNTON, a post-village of Delaware co., Pa., 87 miles E. by S. from Harrisburg.

THORNTON'S FERRY, a post-office of Hillsborough co., New Hampshire.

THORNTON'S MILLS, a post-office of Rappahannock co., Virginia.

THORNTON'S RIVER, in the N. E. part of Virginia, rises from the Blue Ridge, near the W. border of Rappahannock county, and flowing south-eastward through Culpepper county, unites with Hedgman's river, forming the North fork of the Rappahannock.

THORNTOWN, a pleasant post-village of Boone county, Indiana, on the Lafayette and Indianapolis railroad, and on Sugar creek, 36 miles N. W. from Indianapolis. It contains 4 churches, and about 600 inhabitants.

THORNVILLE, a post-village of Perry co., Ohio, about 33 miles E. by S. from Columbus.

THOROUGHFARE, a post-village of Prince William co., Virginia, 124 miles N. from Richmond.

THOUSAND ISLANDS, of New York, are situated in the St. Lawrence river, near Lake Ontario, and opposite Jefferson county. See ST. LAWRENCE RIVER.

THREE FORKS, a post-office of Taylor co., Virginia.

THREE FORKS, a post-office of Wilson co., Tennessee.

THREE FORKS, a post-office of Barren co., Kentucky.

THREEMILE BAY, a post-village of Jefferson co., New York, on a bay of Lake Ontario, about 16 miles W. N. W. from Watertown.

THREE RIVER POINTS, a post-office of Onondaga co., New York.

THREE RIVERS, a post-village in Hampden co., Massachusetts, on Chickopee river, and the Amherst and Belchertown railroad, 65 miles W. S. W. from Boston.

THREE RIVERS, a thriving post-village of Lockport township, St. Joseph county, Michigan, on the St. Joseph's river, near the months of Portage and Stoney creeks, 86 miles S. W. from Lansing. The creeks furnish extensive water-power, which is improved. Population in 1853, about 900.

THREE RIVERS, a post-office of Polk co., Iowa.

THREE ROADS, a post-office of Cambria co., Pennsylvania.

THREE RUNS, a post-office of Butler co., Alabama.

THREE SPRINGS, a post-office of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania.

THREE SPRINGS, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

THREE SPRINGS, a post-office of Hart co., Kentucky.

THROG'S POINT LIGHTHOUSE, on the S. E. point of Throg's Neck, Long Island, near Hell Gate. It contains a fixed light.

THRONATEESKA RIVER. See FLINT RIVER.

THROOPSVILLE, a post-village of Cayuga co., New York, on the Owasco outlet, 5 miles N. N. W. from Auburn.

THUNDER BAY, in the N. E. part of Michigan, on the coast of Alpena county, is an arm of Lake Huron. Length, near 13 miles, greatest breadth, about 10 miles.

THUNDER BAY RIVER, of Michigan, rises in the N. part of the peninsula, and flowing eastward, enters the upper part of Thunder bay.

THURMAN, a post-office of Gallia co., Ohio.

THURSTON, a new county in the W. part of Washington Territory. It has been formed since 1850, and, consequently, the census of that year gives us no information respecting it. Capital, Olympia.

THURSTON, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

TIBBATT'S CROSS ROADS, a post-village of Campbell co., Kentucky.

TICKFAW RIVER, of Louisiana, rises near the N. border of St. Helena parish, and flows southward, through Livingston parish, into Lake Maurepas.

TICONDEROGA, a post-township forming the S. E. extremity of Essex co., New York, bordering on Lakes Champlain and George. Population, 2669.

TICONDEROGA, a post-village in the above township, on the outlet of Lake George, about 95 miles N. by E. from Albany. It has a steamboat landing, and contains several mills. Two or three miles below this village are the ruins of the old Fort Ticonderoga, on the W. shore of Lake Champlain, at the entrance of the above outlet. The fort was surprised by Colonel Ethan Allen, in the Revolutionary war.

TIDIOUTE, a post-village of Warren co., Pennsylvania, on the Alleghany river, 20 miles below Warren.

TIFFIN, a township in the S. part of Adams co., Ohio. Population, 1523.

TIFFIN, a township in the N. E. part of Defiance co., Ohio. Population, 709.

TIFFIN, a thriving town of Clinton township, capital of Seneca county, Ohio, on the E. bank of Sandusky river, and at the junction of the Mad River and Lake Erie railroad with the Sandusky and Indiana railroad, 180 miles N. N. E. from Cincinnati, and 33 miles S. W. from Sandusky city. It is situated on level ground, and is compactly built. Besides the county buildings, it contains 8 churches, 1 bank, and 1 iron foundry. Four newspapers are published here. Tiffin is surrounded by a rich and well cultivated district. Laid out in 1821. Population, in 1853, about 4000.

TIFFIN'S RIVER, of Michigan and Ohio, rises in the former state, and flowing southward into Ohio, enters the Maumee at Defiance. It is sometimes called Bean creek.

TIGER, a post-office of Rabun co., Georgia.

TIGER CREEK, a post-office of Claiborne parish, Louisiana.

TIGER RIVER, of South Carolina, a small stream rising in Greenville district, near the N. W. frontier of the state: it flows south-eastward, and enters Broad river at the S. E. extremity of Union district.

TIGERVILLE, a small post-village of Terre Bonne parish, Louisiana, on Bayou Black. It has a steamboat landing, and is a shipping point for the parish.

TILLER'S FERRY, a post-office of Kershaw district, South Carolina.

TILTON, a post-office of Murray co., Ga.

TILTONSVILLE, a village of Jefferson co., O., about 16 miles S. by W. from Steubenville.

TIMBALIER BAY, of Louisiana, situated at the mouth of Bayou La Fourche, is partially separated from the Gulf of Mexico by long and narrow islands.

TIMBER, a post-village of Peoria co., Illinois, about 15 miles W. S. W. from Peoria.

TIMBER CREEK, a post-office of Hunt co., Texas.

TIMBER CREEK, a post-village in Marshall co., Iowa, on a small creek of its own name, about 80 miles W. N. W. from Iowa City.

TIMBER GROVE, a post-office of Washington co., Virginia.

TIMBER RIDGE, a post-office of Rockbridge co., Virginia.

TIMBER RIDGE, a post-village of Union district, South Carolina.

TIMBER RIDGE, a post-office of Greene co., Tennessee.

TIMBERVILLE, a post-village in Rockingham co., Virginia, about 150 miles N. W. from Richmond.

TINICUM, a township of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Delaware river, about 13 miles N. by E. from Doylestown. Population, 2407.

TINICUM, a township of Delaware co., Pennsylvania, on the right bank of the Delaware river, about 11 miles S. W. by S. from Philadelphia, intersected by the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad. Pop., 178.

TINICUM ISLAND, a small island in the Delaware river, belonging to the above township.

TINKER KNOB, a post-office of Botetourt co., Virginia.

TINKER RUN, a post-office of Westmoreland co., Pennsylvania.

TINKER'S CREEK, of Ohio, flows into the Cuyahoga river about 12 miles from Cleveland.

TINKER'S CREEK, a post-office of Barnwell district, South Carolina.

TINMOUTH, a post-township in Rutland co., Vermont, 70 miles S. S. W. from Montpelier. Population, 717.

TINNEY'S GROVE, a post-office of Ray co., Missouri.

TINTON FALLS, a post-village of Moumouth co., New Jersey, on a branch of Nevisink river, 48 miles E. from Trenton, contains a church, a furnace, 2 stores, 2 grist mills and about 25 dwellings.

TIOGA river, rises in the N. part of Pennsylvania, and flowing in a northerly direction, unites with the Conhocton river, to form the Chemung, in Steuben county, New York.

TIOGA, a county in the S. part of New York, bordering on Pennsylvania, has an area of about 480 square miles. It is intersected by the North branch of the Susquehanna river, and is drained by Owego and Cayuta creeks, and some smaller streams, which furnish abundant water-power. The surface is hilly, uneven, and sometimes mountainous. The soil is generally good, and a large portion is excellent farming land. Wheat, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 121,891 bushels of wheat; 286,061 of oats; 137,344 of potatoes; 39,524 tons of hay, and 856,140 pounds of butter. There were 16 flour and grist mills, 160 saw mills, 3 woollen factories, 4 carding and fulling mills, 2 iron foundries, 2 machine shops, and 10 tanneries. It contained 30 churches, 2 newspaper offices; 8647 pupils attending public schools, and 248 attending academies or other schools. The North branch of the Susquehanna is navigable through this county, and large quantities of lumber are annually rafted down it. The New York and Erie railroad traverses the county, and the Cayuga and Susquehanna railroad terminates at Owego, the capital. Population, 24,880.

TIOGA, a county in the N. part of Pennsylvania, bordering on New York, has an area of about 1100 square miles. It is drained by the sources of the Tioga river, from which the name is derived, and by Pine and Cowanesque creeks. The surface is uneven and hilly, and extensively covered with forests. The water-courses flow in deep channels, bounded by steep acclivities. The soil is mostly of slate and sandstone formation, and is better adapted for pasturage than tillage. Pine lumber, cattle, the different kinds of grain, potashes, and maple sugar are the chief exports. In 1850 this county produced 147,140 bushels of Indian corn; 141,896 of wheat; 300,017 of oats; 158,289 of potatoes; 37,614 tons of hay; 724,281 pounds of butter, and 202,851 of maple sugar. There were 102 saw mills, 2 coal mines, 1 iron mine, 18 flour and grist mills, 3 wool-carding mills, 2 iron foundries, 1 furnace, 3 woollen factories, and 12 tanneries. It contained 22 churches, 4 newspaper offices, 6278 pupils attending public schools, and 160 attending academies or other schools. Extensive mines of bituminous coal are worked near Blossburg, in the S. E. part. The creeks afford valuable motive-power. The county is partly traversed by the Corning and Blossburg railroad. Organized in 1804. Capital, Wellsborough. Population, 23,987.

TIOGA, a post-village of Tioga county, New York, on the Susquehanna river, below Owego, near the New York and Erie railroad, 252 miles from New York city. There are several manufactories in its vicinity. Population of the township, 2839.

TIOGA, a post-township of Tioga co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Blossburg and Corning railroad, about 15 miles south from Corning. Population, 1157.

TIOGA, a post-village in the above township, on the river of its own name, at the mouth of Crooked creek, and on the Corning and Blossburg railroad, about 150 miles N. by W. from Harrisburg.

TIOGA CENTRE, a post-village of Tioga township and county, on the Susquehanna river and the Erie railroad, 5 miles S. W. from Owego.

TIONESTA, a new township in the N. part of Forest co., Pennsylvania. Pop., 106.

TIONESTA, a post-township forming the N. E. extremity of Venango co., Pennsylvania, intersected by the Alleghany river. Population, 1185. See TEONISTA.

TIOUGHNOGA (pronounced te-oh'ne-au'gä) river, in the central part of New York, rises in Madison county, and flowing in a southerly course through Cortland and Chenango counties, enters the Chenango river at Chenango Forks, in Broome county.

TIPPAH, a county in the N. part of Mississippi, bordering on Tennessee, has an area of about 1050 square miles. The Wolf and Tallahatchie rivers, and Tippah creek, rise in the county; and the Hatchie river crosses nearly the whole of the E. border. The surface is agreeably diversified with small elevations; the soil is fertile, especially along the river bottoms. Indian corn, cotton, cattle and swine are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 865,131 bushels of corn; 83,440 of oats; 125,675 of sweet potatoes, and 12,098 bales of cotton. It contained 30 churches, 1 newspaper office, 202 pupils attending public schools, and 257 attending academies or other schools. The rivers afford valuable motive-power, which is used in flouring mills. The route of the Memphis and Charleston railroad passes through the county. This part of the state was ceded by the Chickasaw Indians to the whites, and divided into counties in 1836, since which it has been settled rapidly, and this county is now among the most populous in the state. Capital, Ripley. Population, 20,741; of whom 15,813 were free, and 4928, slaves.

TIPPAH CREEK, of Mississippi, rises in Tippah county, and flowing south-westward, enters the Tallahatchie river, at Milton, in Lafayette county.

TIPPECANOE river, Indiana, rises in a lake of the same name in Kosciusko county, and enters the Wabash river, 9 miles above Lafayette, after a very tortuous course of about 200 miles. Its general direction is south-westward. For more than 100 miles from its mouth the stream is 60 feet wide and 3 feet deep at all seasons. The aboriginal name is Keth-tip-pe-ce-nunk.

TIPPECANOE, a county in the W. N. W. part of Indiana, contains about 500 square miles. It is drained by the Wabash and Tippecanoe rivers, from the latter of which it derives its name. The surface is nearly level, excepting numerous hills which occur along the rivers. About half of the county is occupied by prairies, which have a rich, black soil, 2 or 3 feet deep, with a substratum of clay. Some of them are beautifully undulating. The staples are wheat, Indian corn, oats, hemp, pork, wool, cattle, and horses. In 1850 this county yielded 1,833,311 bushels of corn; 68,259 of wheat; 95,038 of oats, and 6871½ tons of hay. The quantity of corn was the greatest produced by any county in the state. It contained 32 churches, 5 newspaper offices, 2042 pupils attending public schools, and 489 attending academies or other schools. The public improvements are the Wabash and Erie canal, the Lafayette and Indianapolis, the New Albany and Salem, the Lake Erie Wabash and St. Louis, and the Lafayette and Warsaw railroads, the last two being unfinished. Capital, Lafayette. Pop., 19,377.

TIPPECANOE, a post-office of Fayette co., Pa.

TIPPECANOE, a post-office of Henderson co., Tennessee.

TIPPECANOE, a post-office of Ohio co., Ky.

TIPPECANOE, a post-village of Harrison co., Ohio, on Stillwater creek, 17 miles W. from Cadiz.

TIPPECANOE, a township in Carroll co., Indiana. Population, 657.

TIPPECANOE, a township in Kosciusko co., Indiana. Population, 620.

TIPPECANOE, a small village of Marshall co., Indiana, 15 miles S. E. from Plymouth.

TIPPECANOE, a township in Pulaski co., Indiana. Population, 412.

TIPPECANOE, a post-township in Tippecanoe co., Indiana. Population, 1273.

TIPTON, a county in the W. S. W. part of Tennessee, bordering on the Mississippi river: area estimated at 370 square miles. The Hatchee river, navigable by steamboats, forms its entire N. boundary. The surface is level, the soil productive. Cotton, Indian corn, and pork are the staples. In 1850 there were raised 439,785 bushels of corn; 43,429 of potatoes; 6611 bales of cotton, and 84,756 pounds of butter were made. It contained 13 churches, and 295 pupils attending public schools. Capital, Covington. Population, 8887; of whom 4695 were free, and 4192, slaves.

TIPTON, a county in the N. central part of Indiana, contains 280 square miles. It is drained by Cicero and Buck creeks. The surface is level, and the soil fertile. The staples are wheat, Indian corn, oats, and grass. In 1850 this county produced 151,961 bushels of corn; 8487 of wheat; 7715 of oats, and 913 tons of hay. It contained 1 church, and 264 pupils attending public schools. This county, which formed part of the Miami Reservation, was organized in 1844, and is settling rapidly. It is traversed by the Peru and Indianapolis, and by the Chicago and Cincinnati railroads. The name was given in honor of General John Tipton, United States senator from Indiana. Capital, Tipton. Population, 3532.

TIPTON, a post-office of Lenawee co., Mich.

TIPTON, a township in Cass co., Indiana. Population, 2883.

TIPTON, a thriving post-village, capital of Tipton county, Indiana, on a branch of Cicero creek, and on the Peru and Indianapolis railroad, 40 miles N. from Indianapolis. Laid out in 1845. Population in 1850, 197.

TIPTON, a post-village, capital of Cedar county, Iowa, 25 miles E. N. E. from Iowa City. It is pleasantly situated on an undulating upland prairie, having groves of timber in the vicinity. Tipton is a place of active business, containing 6 stores, and 1 steam mill. Population in 1853, about 800.

TIPTONSPORT, a small village of Carroll co., Indiana, on the Wabash river, 6 miles above Delphi.

TIRADE, a post-office of Walworth co., Wis.

TIRO, a post-office of Marshall co., Miss.

TIRO, a post-office of Crawford co., Ohio.

TIRO, a small village of Richland co., Ohio.

TISHEMINGO, a county forming the N. E. extremity of Mississippi, bordering on Tennessee and Alabama, has an area of about 1400 square miles. The Tombigbee river rises in the county, the Tennessee flows along its N. E. border, and it is drained by Tuscumbia creek. The surface is diversified by small hills; the soil is fertile, especially in the valleys, and generally has a substratum of sand. Indian corn, and cotton are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 526,769 bushels of corn; 50,704 of oats; 73,990 of sweet potatoes, and 3945 bales of cotton. It contained 47 churches, 2 newspaper offices, and 490 pupils attending public schools. A large part of the county is covered with forests of the oak, hickory, walnut, and pine. The head stream of Tombigbee river furnishes valuable motive-power. The route of the Mobile and Ohio railroad intersects the Memphis and Charleston railroad at Jacinto, the capital. Organized in 1836. Population, 15,490; of whom 13,529 were free, and 1961, slaves.

TISBURY, a township in Duke's co., Massachusetts, on Martha's Vineyard, about 70 miles S. E. by S. from Boston. Pop., 1803.

TISKILWA, a post-village of Bureau co., Illinois, about 45 miles N. by E. from Peoria.

TITTIBAWASSEE river, of Michigan, rises in the N. central part of the state, and flowing south-eastward, falls into the Saginaw river, (of which it is the largest affluent,) 2 or 3 miles above Saginaw City. It is navigable for boats, perhaps 70 or 80 miles, and flows through a region which is covered with dense forests.

TITTIBAWASSEE, a township in the N. W. part of Saginaw co., Michigan. Pop., 341.

TITSWORTH, a post-office of Madison co., Arkansas.

TITURGY, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

TITUS, a county in the N. E. part of Texas, contains about 1100 square miles. It is bounded on the N. by the Sulphur fork of Red river, on the S. by Big Cypress bayou, and is drained by White oak bayou. The surface is diversified by prairies and forests of good timber; the soil is highly productive. Cotton, Indian corn, grass, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 the county produced 292 bales of cotton; 66,000 bushels of corn; 8088 of oats, and 39,175 pounds of butter. There were 4 churches, 50 pupils attending public schools, and 128 attending academies or other schools. Titus county was established in 1846, and is settling rapidly. Named in honor of James Titus, of Texas, a prominent man in his section of the state. Capital, Mount Pleasant. Population, 3536; of whom 3169 were free, and 467, slaves.

TITUSVILLE, a post-village of Mercer co., New Jersey, on the Delaware, 10 miles above Trenton, has a church, and 10 or 12 dwellings.

TITUSVILLE, a thriving post-borough of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, on Oil creek, 28 miles E. from Meadville. It is well supplied with water-power, and has an active trade. Population in 1850, 243.

TIVERTON, a manufacturing post-village in Newport co., Rhode Island, near Narraganset bay, 18 miles S. E. by S. from Providence, contains a bank. Pop. of the township, 4699.

TIVERTON, a post-township forming the N. W. extremity of Coshocton co., Ohio, intersected by Walhonding river. Pop., 842.

TIVERTON FOUR CORNERS, a post-village of Newport co., Rhode Island, 28 miles S. E. from Providence.

TIVOLI, a post-village of Dutchess county, New York, on the Hudson river, and on the railroad of that name, 100 miles N. from New York. It has a ferry across the river, and contains several mills.

TIVOLI, a post-village in Dubuque co., Iowa, 20 miles W. by N. from Dubuque.

TOBACCO PORT, a post-village of Stewart co., Tennessee, on Cumberland river, 85 miles W. N. W. from Nashville.

TOBACCO ROW, a post-office of Amherst co., Virginia.

TOBACCO STICK, a post-office of Dorchester co., Maryland.

TOBESOFKA CREEK. See CHUPEE.

TOBIN, a township in Perry co., Indiana. Population, 1725.

TOBINSPOET, a village of Perry co., Indiana, on the Ohio river, 11 miles below Rome.

TOBOYNE, a township forming the S. W. extremity of Perry co., Pennsylvania. Population, 707.

TOBY, a township of Clarion co., Pennsylvania, about 12 miles W. S. W. from Clarion. Population, 2234.

TOBYHANNA creek, of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, flows into the Lehigh river.

TOBYHANNA, a township of Monroe co., Pennsylvania, about 16 miles W. by N. from Stroudsburg. Population, 550.

TOBY'S RIVER, of Pa. See CLARION RIVER.

TOCCOA FALLS, a post-office of Habersham co., Georgia.

TOCCOFOLA, a post-village of Pontotoc co., Mississippi.

TOCHOCUNO CREEK. See ECHACONNEE.

TOCOA, a small river of Georgia and Tennessee, rises in Union county of the former, and flowing N. W. through Polk county of Tennessee, enters the Hiwassee. It is sometimes called the Aquokee.

TOCOA, a post-office of Gilmer co., Ga., 16 miles N. E. from Ellijay, the county town.

TODD, a county in the S. W. part of Kentucky, bordering on Tennessee, contains about 350 square miles. It is drained by Pond river, and by Elk, Whippoorwill, and Clifty creeks. The surface is generally undulating or hilly; the soil in some parts is of limestone formation, and is fertile. Indian corn, oats, tobacco, and live stock are the staples. In 1850 it produced 803,941 bushels of corn; 203,027 of oats, and 3,739,685 pounds of tobacco. It contained 21 churches, 409 pupils attending public schools, and 115 attending other schools. Stone coal abounds in the county. A railroad is projected from Nashville to Elkton, the county seat. Named in honor of Colonel John Todd, of Kentucky. Population, 12,268, of whom 7458 were free, and 4810, slaves.

TODD, a post-township of Huntingdon co., Pennsylvania, about 22 miles S. by W. from Huntingdon. Population, 1222.

TODD, a township in Crawford co., Ohio. Population, 578.

TODD'S, a post-office of Spottsylvania co. Va. TODD'S CREEK, of Ohio, rises in Clinton co., and enters the Little Miami in Warren co.

TODDSVILLE, a post-office of Otsego co., N. Y. TOGAS SPRINGS, a post-office of Kennebec co., Maine.

TOHICKON CREEK, of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, flows into the Delaware.

TOLAND'S PRAIRIE, a post-village in Erie township, Washington co., Wisconsin, 50 miles E. by N. from Madison.

TOLEDO, a city and port of entry of Lucas county, Ohio, on the left bank of the Maumee river, 4 miles from its mouth, 134 miles N. N. W. from Columbus, and 66 miles S. S. W. from Detroit. Lat. 41° 39' 30" N., lon. 83° 32' W. It is the terminus of the Wabash and Erie canal, the longest in the Union, and is one of the most flourishing and important entrepôts in the commerce of the great lakes. The river flows through Maumee bay into the W. end of Lake Erie, and forms an excellent harbor, which admits the largest class of steamboats. Toledo is connected by railroad with Chicago on the one hand, and with Cleveland, Buffalo, &c., on the other. It is one of the principal thoroughfares of the emigration passing from New York to the Western States. It communicates daily by steamboat with Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, &c. The number of steamboat arrivals in 1852 was 926, and of sail vessels, 1127—total, 2053. The Wabash and Erie canal, completed in 1852, extends to the Ohio river at Evansville, and attracts an immense trade to this port. Grain, flour, and pork are the chief articles of export. It appears that more grain and flour is received at this port than at any other on the lakes. The receipts of wheat in 1852 were 2,812,616 bushels; of corn, 4,107,839 bushels; besides 383,877 barrels of flour. The value of imports in 1852 was $37,565,029, and of exports, $19,738,923. It contains 8 churches, 3 banks, and 5 or 6 newspaper offices. Two daily papers are published here. The railroads which meet at this place are the Cleveland Norwalk and Toledo, the Erie and Kalamazoo, and the Dayton and Michigan. Several others are in progress, viz. the Air-line to Chicago, the Toledo and Illinois, extending to Danville, the Jackson branch of the Michigan Southern, and the Junction road to Cleveland. Toledo extends along the river more than a mile, and has two principal centres of business, called the upper and lower landings. The upper presents a fine view of the harbor and river for a distance of several miles. There were originally two distinct settlements, called Port Lawrence and Vistula. Within a few years nearly $100,000 have been expended in grading the streets, and in other permanent improvements. It was incorporated as a city in 1836

TOL

Population in 1840, 1322; in 1850, 3829; and on January 1, 1853, it amounted to 6412.

TOLEDO, a post-village of Union co., Illinois, 144 miles S. from Springfield.

TOLBER'S, a post-office of Amite co., Miss.

TOLERSVILLE, a post-village in Louisa co., Virginia, on the Virginia Central railroad, 45 miles N. W. by N. from Richmond.

TOLESBOROUGH, a post-office of Lewis co., Ky.

TOLLAND, a county in the N. N. E. part of Connecticut, has an area of about 440 square miles. It is drained by the Willimantic and Hop rivers, and other smaller streams, which furnish valuable water-power. The surface in the W. part is level or slightly uneven, and the soil fertile; while in the eastern portions the surface is hilly and mountainous, and the soil of inferior quality. The E. part is generally well wooded. Indian corn, oats, potatoes, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 127,873 bushels of corn; 81,429 of oats; 204,353 of potatoes; 38,992 tons of hay; 381,165 pounds of butter, and 264,698 of cheese. There were 14 cotton, 19 woollen factories, 1 calico-printing works, 5 foundries, 1 glass, 3 hardware, and 38 hat and cap manufactories, 8 machine shops, 7 grist, 4 paper, and 4 saw and planing mills, 9 sewing silk, and 2 thread manufactories, and 9 tanneries. It contained 41 churches, 4346 pupils attending public schools, and 35 attending an academy. The New London Willimantic and Palmer, and the Hartford Providence and Fishkill railroads traverse this county. Organized in 1786, having been formed from portions of Hartford and Windham counties. Capital, Tolland. Population, 20,091.

TOLLAND, a post-township in Hampden co., Massachusetts, 112 miles W. S. W. from Boston. Population, 594.

TOLLAND, a post-village and seat of justice of Tolland county, Connecticut, near the New London Willimantic and Palmer railroad, 45 miles N. N. W. from New London. It is pleasantly situated on an elevated plain, and contains, besides the county buildings, churches of the Congregational, Baptist, and Methodist denominations, a bank, a savings' institution, and an insurance company. Population of the township, 1410.

TOLL GATE, a post-office of Marion co., Ala.

TOLL'S CREEK, a small stream of Yuba co., towards the N. part of California, flows into Indiana creek, about 1 mile from its mouth. Gold is found on this stream.

TOMAHAWK, a post-township in Searcy co., Arkansas. Population, 296.

TOMAHAWK SPRING, a post-office of Berkeley co., Virginia.

TOMBIGBEE, or TOMBECKBEE, a river of Mississippi and Alabama, rises in Tishomingo county, which forms the N. E. extremity of Mississippi, and flows southward to Columbus. It then inclines to the E., and passing into Alabama, its general direction is S. S.

TOM

E., until it is joined by the Black Warrior at Demopolis. Below this point it flows nearly southward, and passing through fertile, alluvial plains and savannas, which are mostly occupied by plantations of cotton, it unites with the Alabama about 45 miles above Mobile. The river thus formed is called the Mobile. The length of the Tombigbee is estimated at 450 miles. The largest towns on its banks are Aberdeen, Columbus, Pickensville, Gainesville, and Demopolis. It is navigable for large steamboats to Columbus, which is about 366 miles from the mouth of Mobile river, and smaller boats can ascend 40 or 50 miles farther to Aberdeen. It is familiarly called Bigbee river.

TOMBS' RUN, a post-office of Lycoming co., Pennsylvania.

TOME, a village of New Mexico, on the left bank of the Rio del Norte, about 75 miles S. W. from Santa Fe.

TOMHANNOCK, a post-village of Rensselaer co., New York, 15 miles N. N. E. from Troy.

TOMLINSONVILLE, a small village of Scott co., Missouri.

TOMOKA creek, of Ohio, flows into the Muskingum river at Dresden.

TOMOTLA, a post-office of Cherokee co., North Carolina.

TOMPKINS, a county near the centre of New York, has an area of about 550 square miles. It is partly bounded on the W. by Seneca lake; Cayuga lake extends nearly to its centre, and it is drained by Fall creek and several smaller streams, affording abundant water-power. The surface is undulating, and in some parts hilly. The soil is fertile, and under good cultivation. Wheat, Indian corn, oats, and grass are the staples. In 1850 this county produced 421,302 bushels of wheat; 340,612 of corn; 686,257 of oats; 67,981 tons of hay, and 1,635,789 pounds of butter. There were 39 flour and grist mills, 143 saw mills, 2 leather dressers, 5 woollen factories, 4 coach factories, 9 iron foundries, 1 paper mill, and 21 tanneries. It contained 77 churches, 3 newspaper offices; 13,103 pupils attending public schools, and 460 attending academies or other schools. By means of Cayuga and Seneca lakes this county has a water communication with the Erie canal. The Cayuga and Susquehanna railroad connects with the Lake Ontario Auburn and Ithaca railroad at Ithaca. Organized in 1817, having been formed from portions of Cayuga and Seneca counties, and named in honor of Daniel D. Tompkins, governor of New York. Capital, Ithaca. Population, 38,746.

TOMPKINS, a township in the S. W. part of Delaware co., New York, on the Coquago river. The Erie railroad passes through it. Population, 3022.

TOMPKINS, a post-office of Hamilton co., O.

TOMPKINS, a post-township in the N. W. part of Jackson co., Mich. Population, 623.

TOMPKINS, a post-village of Jackson co., Michigan, 90 miles W. from Detroit.

TOMPKINSVILLE, a post-village in Castleton township, Richmond county, New York, on New York harbor, and on the N. E. side of Staten Island, 6 miles S. by W. from New York. It contains a marine hospital belonging to the United States, and the quarantine buildings.

TOMPKINSVILLE, a post-office of Choctaw co., Alabama.

TOMPKINSVILLE, a small village of Cumberland co., Kentucky.

TOMPKINSVILLE, a post-village, capital of Monroe co., Kentucky, 140 miles S. S. W. from Frankfort, and about 10 miles from Cumberland river. It has a court house, 2 churches, and near 200 inhabitants.

TOM'S BROOK, a post-office of Shenandoah co., Virginia.

TOM'S CREEK, a post-village of Surry co., North Carolina.

TOM'S CREEK, a post-office of Franklin co., Georgia.

TOM'S RIVER, in the eastern part of New Jersey, rises in Monmouth county, and flows south-eastward through Ocean county, into Barnegat bay. Sloops ascend to the village of Tom's River, about 10 miles. A creek called the South branch unites with the main stream, 10 miles from its mouth.

TOM'S RIVER, a post-village, capital of Ocean county, New Jersey, on the river of the same name, at the head of navigation, about 40 miles S. E. from Trenton. It contains a brick court house, 2 churches, a bank, 2 large hotels, 7 stores, and 1 or 2 newspaper offices. A bridge crosses the river here. About 25 sloops loaded with firewood and lumber ply to New York. Population in 1853, about 800.

TOMSTOWN, a village of Franklin co., Pennsylvania, 15 miles S. E. from Chambersburg. It has about 150 inhabitants.

TOMSVILLE, a post-village in Chester district, S. C., 74 miles N. from Columbia.

TONAWANDA, or TONEWANTO creek, in the western part of New York, after forming the boundary between Erie and Niagara counties, falls into Niagara river, about 12 miles N. of Buffalo. The Erie canal enters this creek, 10 miles above its mouth, and leaves it again about 100 rods from Niagara river.

TONAWANDA, a port and post-village of Tonawanda township, Erie county, New York, at the intersection of Tonawanda creek with the Niagara river, opposite Grand island, and on the Erie canal, where it is crossed by the Buffalo and Niagara Falls railroad, 12 miles N. from Buffalo. It is a place of considerable business importance, and contains 8 or 10 spacious warehouses, recently erected, 6 or 7 stores, and 2 churches. Many of the lake craft deposit their cargoes here, to be forwarded by the canal. Among the articles received at this port by lake in 1852, were flour, 188,523 barrels; wheat, 235,888 bushels; corn, 237,720 bushels; lumber, 4,310,000 feet; staves, 4,077,000. The total value of property arriving at Tonawanda, for the year ending December 31, 1852, was $1,988,079. Population, about 1000.

1156

TONSON, a village in the interior of the Territory of New Mexico, nearly S. from Santa Fe, from which it is about 70 miles distant.

TONGUE RIVER, of Missouri Territory, rises in lat. about 42° 30' N., lon. 106° 30' W., flowing at first N. E. and then nearly N. it falls into the Yellowstone river, after a course of about 300 miles.

TOOELE, a county in the W. part of Utah Territory, has an area estimated at above 12,000 square miles. It is bounded on the N. E. by the Great Salt lake, and is drained by Humboldt or Mary's river, with a number of smaller streams. Several lakes, of which Pyramid lake is the most remarkable, are included within its limits. In 1850 it produced 730 bushels of wheat, and 335 of potatoes. Capital, undetermined. Pop., 152.

TOOELE, a post-office of Tooele co., Utah Territory.

TOOLEY'S, a post-office of Concordia parish, Louisiana.

TOOLSBOROUGH, a post-village of Louisa co., Iowa, on the Iowa river, about 2 miles from its mouth, and 8 miles S. E. from Wapello. It has several stores.

TOOMBS, a post-office of Richmond co., Ga.

TOOMSBOROUGH, a post-office of Wilkinson co., Georgia.

TOPSAIL SOUND, a post-office of New Hanover co., North Carolina.

TOPSFIELD, a post-township in Washington co., Maine, 132 miles N. E. from Augusta. Population, 268.

TOPSFIELD, a post-village of Essex co., Massachusetts, about 20 miles N. E. by N. from Boston, contains 1 or 2 churches and an academy. Population, 1170.

TOPSHAM, a post-village, one of the capitals of Lincoln co., Maine, on the Kennebec and Portland railroad, where it crosses Androscoggin river, 32 miles S. by W. from Augusta, contains 1 bank. Pop. of township, 2010.

TOPSHAM, a post-township in Orange co., Vermont, 20 miles S. E. from Montpelier. Population, 1618.

TORAH, a post-office of Linn co., Iowa.

TORBIT'S STORE, a post-office of Chester district, South Carolina.

TORCH, a post-office of Athens co., Ohio.

TORO, a post-office of Sabine parish, La.

TORONTO, a post-village of Vermilion co., Indiana. It has an iron foundry.

TORRESDALE, a village of Bucks co., Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, 14 miles above Philadelphia. Here is a station on the Philadelphia and Trenton railroad.

TORRINGFORD, a post-village in Litchfield co., Conn., 25 miles W. by N. from Hartford.

TORRINGTON, a post-township of Litchfield co., Connecticut, about 22 miles N. W. by W. from Hartford; intersected by the Naugatuck railroad. Population, 1916.

TOTTON'S WELLS, a post-office of Obion co., Tennessee.

TOTTONVILLE, a post-office of Richmond co., New York.

TOTTY'S BEND, a post-office of Hickman co., Tennessee.

TOULON, a post-village, capital of Stark co., Illinois, about 35 miles N. W. from Peoria.

TOUSSAINT CREEK, of Ohio, flows through Ottawa county into Lake Erie.

TOWALIGA creek, of Georgia, rises in Henry co., and flowing S. E., enters the Ocmulgee about 12 miles N. E. from Forsyth. It furnishes excellent water-power in Monroe county.

TOWALIGA, a post-office of Butts co., Ga.

TOWAMENSING, a township in the N. E. central part of Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, on Towamensing creek, an affluent of Skip-pack creek. Population, 904.

TOWANDA creek, of Pennsylvania, joins the N. Branch of the Susquehanna near the borough of Towanda.

TOWANDA, a post-borough in Towanda township, and capital of Bradford county, Pennsylvania, is situated on the right bank of the North branch of the Susquehanna, near the mouth of Towanda creek, about 120 miles N. by E. from Harrisburg. The North Branch canal passes through it. The houses are mostly of wood, and painted white. The town has an academy, several churches, a bank, and 3 newspaper offices. Incorporated in 1828. Population in 1850, 1171. Population of the township, 2309.

TOWEE FALLS, a post-office of Monroe co., Tennessee.

TOWER HILL, a post-village in Washington co., Rhode Island, near Narragansett bay, 25 miles S. by W. from Providence.

TOWERTOWN, a post-office of Cumberland co., Illinois.

TOWLESVILLE, a post-office of Steuben co., New York.

TOWN BLUFF, a post-office of Tyler co., Tex.

TOWN COVE, a small village of Walker co., Georgia.

TOWN CREEK, of Alabama, flows through Lawrence co., into Tennessee river.

TOWNERS, a post-village of Putnam co., New York, about 90 miles S. from Albany.

TOWN HILL, a post-office of Luzerne co., Pennsylvania.

TOWN HOUSE, a post-office of Smyth co., Virginia.

TOWN LINE, a post-village of Erie co., New York, on the Buffalo and Rochester railroad, 15 miles E. from Buffalo.

TOWNSBURY, a post-office of Warren co., New Jersey.

TOWNSEND, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, 40 miles N. W. by W. from Boston, on Squanticook river, and the Peterborough and Shirley railroad, contains 2 or 3 churches. Pop. of the township, 1947.

TOWNSEND, a post-office of Chemung co., New York.

TOWNSEND, a township in the N. E. part of Huron co., Ohio. Population, 1333.

TOWNSEND, a post-township in the E. part of Sandusky co., Ohio. Population, 969.

TOWNSEND HARBOR, a post-village in Middlesex co., Massachusetts, on the Peterborough and Shirley railroad, 42 miles N. W. from Boston, contains a number of mills.

TOWNSEND'S INLET, a post-office of Cape May co., New Jersey.

TOWNSENDVILLE, a post-village in Lodi township, in the S. part of Seneca co., New York. It contains 2 meeting houses, and 2 stores. Population, about 200.

TOWNSEND, a post-village in Windham co., Vermont, on West river, 90 miles S. from Montpelier, contains several churches, and an academy. Population of township, 1354.

TOWNSHIP, a post-office of Albany co., New York.

TOWNVILLE, a post-office of Anderson district, South Carolina.

TOWSONTOWN, a post-village of Baltimore co., Maryland, 7 miles N. from Baltimore.

TOXAWAY river, of Pickens district, South Carolina, is a small branch of the Kiowee.

TRACY, a post-village of Huntington co., Indiana, on the Wabash river, 10 miles S. E. from Huntington.

TRACY'S LANDING, a post-office of Anne Arundel co., Maryland.

TRACYVILLE, a flourishing village of Wayne county, Pennsylvania, on the Honesdale and Delaware plank-road, 1 mile E. from Honesdale. It contains 1 glass manufactory, the first in which anthracite coal was successfully used.

TRADE, a post-office of Johnson co., Tenn.

TRADER'S HILL, a post-office of Camden co., Georgia.

TRADERSVILLE, a post-village of Madison co., Ohio, a few miles N. from London.

TRADE'S HILL, a post-office of Chatham co., North Carolina.

TRADEWATER CREEK, in the W. part of Kentucky, flows N. W., and forms the boundary between the counties of Hopkins and Union on the right, and Caldwell and Crittenden on the left, until it enters the Ohio river.

TRADING POINT, a post-village of Potawatomi co., Iowa, on the Missouri river.

TRAFALGAR, a post-office of Johnson co., Indiana.

TRAMMEL'S CREEK rises in Sumner co., Tennessee, and flowing north-westward into Kentucky, enters Big Barren river in Warren co., a few miles above Bowling Green.

TRAMPAS, a small village in the E. part of Rio Arriba co., New Mexico, about 40 miles N. by E. from Santa Fe.

TRANQUILLIA, a post-village of Jones co., Ga.

TRANQUILLITY, a post-office of Sussex co., New Jersey.

TRANQUILLITY, a post-office of Granville co., North Carolina, 29 miles N. from Raleigh.

TRANQUILLITY, a post-office of Adams co., O.

TRANSIT, a post-office of Genesee co., New York.

TRANSIT BRIDGE, a post-office of Alleghany co., New York.

TRANSPARENT LAKE, towards the N. E. part of New York, between Hamilton and Herkimer counties is about 7 miles long and 3 miles wide. It is the principal source of West Canada creek.

TRANTER'S CREEK, of North Carolina, flows along the E. border of Pitt co., and enters the Tar river a little above Washington.

TRAP, a small village of Monmouth co., New Jersey, on the Atlantic coast, 42 miles E. from Trenton, contains 10 or 12 houses.

TRAP HILL, a post-office of Wilkes co., North Carolina.

TRAPPE, a post-village of Upper Providence township, Montgomery co., Pennsylvania, 10 miles W. N. W. from Norristown. It contains a German Lutheran church, built in 1743, by the Rev. H. M. Muhlenburg.

TRAPPE, a post-village of Talbot co., Maryland, 9 miles S. from Easton. Population, about 300.

TRAPPE TOWN, a thriving village of Worcester co., Maryland, on the Pocomoke river, 107 miles S. W. from Annapolis. It has 1 church, and 2 stores.

TRAVELLER'S REPOSE, a post-office of Pochontas co., Virginia.

TRAVELLER'S REPOSE, a post-village of Franklin co., Missouri, about 50 miles W. S. W. from St. Louis.

TRAVELLER'S REST, a post-office of Greenville district, South Carolina.

TRAVELLER'S REST, a village in Dooley co., Georgia, near Flint river, 80 miles S. W. by S. from Milledgeville.

TRAVELLER'S REST, a post-office of Coosa co., Alabama.

TRAVERSE DES SIOUX, a post-village, capital of Nicollet co., Minnesota, on the left bank of the St. Peter's river, 50 miles in a direct line S. W. from St. Paul.

TRAVIS, a county in the central part of Texas: area about 1000 square miles. It is intersected by the Colorado river. A considerable part of the surface is hilly. The soil is very fertile, excepting the northern portion. Cotton, Indian corn, grass, and cattle are the staples. In 1850 it produced 234 bales of cotton; 149,365 bushels of corn, and 41,102 pounds of butter. It contained 1 church, 2 newspaper offices; 183 pupils attending public schools, and 83 attending academies or other schools. It is liberally supplied with water-power. Steamboats ascend the river as far as Austin City during high water. Named in honor of Colonel Travis, massacred at Fort Alamo, in 1836.

Austin City is the county seat and capital of the state. Population, 3138; of whom 2347 were free, and 791, slaves.

TRAVIS, a post-office of De Soto co., Miss.

TRAVIS, a post-office of Austin co., Texas.

TRAYLORSVILLE, a post-village of Henry co., Va., 200 miles W. S. W. from Richmond.

