FOREWORD

When President Roosevelt sent General Arnold to Great Britain early in 1941 he empowered him to offer help in many forms to the then sorely pressed single-handed champion of democracy. One type of help offered—and eagerly accepted—was permission to set up "Contract Schools with civilian flying school operators in this country. At a recent meeting in Dallas, Major W. F. Long was referred to by General B. K. Yount of the U. S. A. A. F. Flying Training Command as "one of the pioneer operators," and it was fitting that this, No. 1 British Flying Training School, should in June 1941 have been started at Dallas Aviation School with Major Long. Since then a subsidiary company, Terrell Aviation School, Ltd., has been the civilian contracting company and Mr. L. H. Luckey has from the start been the School Director.

For the first year of its operation the School had a R. A. F. staff of two and a half officers and one N. C. O.—the "half officer" spending half his time at another B. F. T. S., and the solitary N. C. O. being Sergeant Moffat who is still with us. In those days they had a feeling of remoteness from the rest of the R. A. F.—hence the title of "Detached Flight" for this publication. (Pay no attention to our artist's idea of the title on the front page!)

Facing this page is ample evidence that the products of this—however detached—R. A. F. School are taking a worthy place (as we always knew they would) in the Services' effort. It is with particular pride that we record Flight Sergeant A. L. Aaron's Victoria Cross, since this award gives the School the honour of having nurtured one of the few—possibly a dozen—R. A. F. V. C.s of this war.

This is now a "mixed" school, and we have among us for training U. S. A. A. F. flying cadets as well as R. A. F. cadets. I use the term "mixed" as I see, and am glad to see, that British and American cadets do mix together well. To me there is no difference between you; and I hope that your getting together and learning to understand each other will have all the effect on the future of the world after the war that I think it could.

As I am at the moment of writing engaged in handing over the School to Wing Commander F. B. Tomkins, A. F. C., preparatory to returning to England, I should like to thank all the instructors, maintenance crews, and staff personnel for their splendid help and cooperation. My time as Commanding Officer at this school has been made enjoyable as well as fruitful through this fine school spirit, and I am sure that my successor can look forward to its continuance.

* * * * *

The R. A. F. and American civilian staffs have always been proud of the pilots the school produces. The justification of our earlier pride is evident in reports from fighting fronts throughout the world; and it is our real conviction that further and greater proofs can and will be given by you of the soundness of your training here.

You are going out to an intensely interesting and most crucial stage of the war. Keep in touch with us and let us know how you get on. The very best of luck to you all. Good hunting and happy landings.

A MESSAGE FROM MAJOR W. F. LONG, THE OPERATOR, AND MR. L. H. LUCKEY, THE DIRECTOR, TO THE GRADUATES OF NO. 16 COURSE:

You have learned that there is no royal road to knowledge and success, and those of you who had illusions that learning to fly was an easy thing now know that it takes all you have to give—mentally and physically. The Wings you have earned mean a great deal more than just the designation of a pilot. You are now being accepted into the ranks of the Royal Air Force and the U. S. Army Air Force as pilots, and we feel confident that you will do everything in your power to carry on the traditions of these two Services.
