LOSSES IN THE DARDANELLES.

The severe losses by the allies in the Dardanelles were not unexpected, although the sinking of three battleships in one day was a heavy blow, notwithstanding the fact that the vessels could be replaced without difficulty.

Although the admiralty was unable to say last night just what damage was done on the forts guarding the narrows it is practically certain that a ten-hour bombardment by the big-gun warships, including a super-dreadnought and a battle cruiser, worked tremendous havoc.

"REGULATING" THE JITNEY.

The Vancouver city council is about to take under consideration a draft of thirty regulations dealing with the jitney traffic.

"No jitney routes to be specified on streets now occupied or hereafter occupied by electric railway lines."

Jitneys certainly require regulation for the protection of the public. This is particularly the case in regard to overcrowding, speed and driving.

be snuffed out, what the public wants it always gets. Some day, maybe, the jitney, too, will meet competitors and will demand the imposition of restrictions upon what its operators may regard as unfair competition.

IT WILL BE "SOME CAMPAIGN."

According to present indications the ballot paper upon which the worthy elector of Vancouver will be expected to make his mark will be about a yard long.

Step by step with the multiplication of candidates marches the generous production of newspapers. There are the Province, Sun, News-Advertiser, World (proper), Taylor's World (from the presses of the News-Advertiser), Journal (Friend Joe's), and several weeklies in being and in prospect.

THE EITEL AND THE FRYE.

The Toronto Star thinks that "a German ship coming into an American port for safety after sinking an American ship, and carrying on deck the officers and crew of her victim to give evidence against her, is surely a comic opera situation."

"In these times when international law is being rewritten almost with every revolution of the earth on its axis, the problems raised in the case of the German cruiser Prinz Eitel might well be settled by the use of a little elementary common sense.

Prinz Eitel is now within our jurisdiction. We presumably will make claim for reparation and perhaps for further satisfaction in the form of some penalty on her commander. Does not common sense dictate that the Prinz Eitel should be detained as guaranty that satisfaction will be had?

SUFFRAGETTES PLEASD.

British suffragette leaders are said to be jubilant over the recent announcement of the Board of Trade that owing to the shortage of male labor women are to be registered for war services.

If the suffragettes show the same ingenuity in the production of explosives and peace disturbing devices that they exhibited in their militant campaign for political equality the unhappy Germans might as well throw down their arms and call the war off.

FIGHTING EXCESSIVE COMPLA- CENCY.

Earl Kitchener's grave warning regarding the seriousness of the military supplies question undoubtedly will have a salutary effect, but according to cabled advices unceasing efforts are being made in London to impress upon the public the gravity of the situation.

The authorities realize the necessity of breaking down this slackness as well as removing the obstacles in the way of a greater output of war supplies.

The efficiency of the Russian and French people as a result of the drastic measures against vodka and absinthe has increased wonderfully. It required no little courage on the part of the authorities to enforce the regulations.

ITALY'S ATTITUDE RULED BY BRITAIN

If She Cannot Get Coal She Has No Recourse but War

Rome, March 20.—The attempted German blockade of the British coasts is seriously preoccupying the Italian government since, besides the danger to which Italian ships are exposed from this ineffective, invisible blockade, Italy will suffer the consequences of high freights for the importation of coal from Great Britain.

The Italian government demanded explanations of Germany, and the German reply is considered unsatisfactory. So far no further action has been taken, as the blockade is proving a failure in practice; but a "friendly" warning has been conveyed to Germany that Italy will not tolerate the serious consequences of having her coal supply entirely cut off.

Such a warning implies that Italy will have to resort to energetic measures which in the present case can only mean war. Still another question of equal if not greater importance than that of the coal supplies, calls for a solution.

Italy is threatened with a wheat famine and the only remedy so far adopted consists in economizing the consumption of flour in breadmaking in order to make the available stock last until next summer.

Do not practice false economy by buying WET MILL WOOD in your kitchen stoves because it is cheap. Any kind of mill wood is expensive if you consider the damage that it will do to your stoves.

WASHED NUT COAL

This Coal will give you a better, quicker, brighter and more economical fire than any wood you ever used without any damage to your stoves whatever.

pected to discourage acrimony, induce deliberation and wisdom and, as a logical sequence, ensure brevity of speech. Precedents for this may be found in the early records of New Amsterdam, where the sage burgomaster, Wouter van Twiller, and his councillors were known to smoke throughout entire sessions and say nothing at all.

Apparently a large proportion of the population of Vancouver is anxious to turn its talents loose in the field of statesmanship. Nearly everybody wants to run for the legislature. We are not quite sure whether this remarkable development of our own times is due to dissatisfaction with the McBride government in general or to dearth of remunerative employment during the remarkable "era of prosperity" which we have enjoyed since Toryism began to dominate Ottawa as well as Victoria.

If the parliamentary committee inquiring into the boot question finds that contractors deliberately supplied defective footwear to our soldiers, the government will be false to its duty if it does not take steps to have the culprits dealt with to the fullest extent of the law.

Russian troops have occupied Memel, the most northerly German naval base on the Baltic. If the Muscovites are forced to clear out we may be sure they will take with them everything not spiked down.

Constantinople says the bombardment in the Dardanelles by the allied fleets did no damage. This is a typical German bluff and stupidly overdone. Had the report stated that a few guns were put out of action its moderation might have claimed belief.

There must be some truth in the rumor that the Kaiser's throat needs an operation. The veracious Berlin Overseas News Agency has contained no reports of speeches by him for some weeks.

of economical bread to be used in future, and the government will then regulate breadmaking by law. Italians will have to submit to so-called "war bread" despite their country's neutrality. Strangely enough, no mystery is made about the causes of the wheat famine, since it is a well known fact that the present scarcity of wheat is due to the flourishing contraband trade with Germany and Austria during the first three months of the war, which was stopped, despite its increasing profits, when Britain and France threatened to seize every ship carrying wheat to Italy.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT
AUTHOR OF WAR BOOK

Story of Belgians' Gallant
Struggle and Pitiful Plight of Those Interned in Antwerp

Mr. J. H. Whitehouse, M. P. for Mid-Lanark, is the author of "Belgium in War" (Cambridge University Press) in the course of which he gives a vivid picture of what he has seen with his own eyes.

Mr. Lloyd George has written a preface, in which he expresses his thanks for a clear expression of the truth as seen by an English member of parliament, who tells nothing except what has actually come under his personal notice.

The member for Mid-Lanark states that "the tragedy of Belgium, with the infinite suffering involved for some millions of non-combatants, has not been realized by the world. He adds that Antwerp seems to have been very little disturbed until the end of the siege; and indeed, the great towns of Belgium have been carefully protected by the German invaders. The life of the town is still a normal one, with its lawless architecture, and the farms of prosperous tenants had no seeming wealth, so they were destroyed.

Unexampled misery. Conditions of unexampled misery have been set up for the civilian population throughout the occupied territory. Until the fall of Antwerp comparatively only a few refugees had reached England. The others remained wandering about Belgium, flocking into other towns. Times when a town was bombarded the Germans have gone out of it and let the civilians come back to their homes, only to flee again when new attacks came.

History Cannot Offer a Parallel. The following are two pictures of Belgium's sacrifice: First, inside Antwerp cathedral: "The vast congregation was composed largely of the German soldiers in deep mourning. Many of them seemed very old; they wept for sons." Secondly: "A few days later mourning women, old and young, bearing in primitive bundles all their household goods, formed part of the procession from the city of its entire population. History can scarcely offer a parallel to a spectacle so charged with human suffering. Five hundred thousand peaceful inhabitants, homeless, helpless, fled from the homes of the Scheidt amid flashes of fire.
