POETRY.

The Parson.

BY G. H. CLARK.

When I was young and full of noise,
And wore my first gray homespun jacket;
And fought stout battles with the boys,
And filled my father's house with racket;
Our well beloved pastor died,
And left behind him scores of weepers—
Stout pillars of the church, long tried,
As well as lesser props—and sleepers.

He was a patriarch, wise and gray,
One of the old time Christian scholars;
Who cheered affliction's weary way,
And gave th' oppressed advice—a dollars.
The matron's love for him, at last,
Sublimed almost to veneration,
For he'd baptized one-half the past,
And all the present generation.

Outside the church, the good man held
A comprehensive supervision,
And village quidnuncs were compelled,
To bow before his calm decision.
Though party strife might rage and swell,
Or skeptics raise some knotty question,
There came no storm he could not quell,
No doubt too grave for his digestion.

I do remember well the scene,
When, all the congregation seated,
He closed the book with reverent mein,
And twice the pregnant text repeated;
And then, as influenced from above,
His heart with holy themes expanding,
Appealed to Faith and Christian Love,
As well as human understanding.

His looks, his tones, his earnest ways,
From one of memory's pleasing pictures,
As he in strong but homely phrase,
Imparted hope, or uttered strictures.
The velvet cap he always wore,
When'er he thumped the velvet cushion,
Loomed like a beacon from the shore,
To warn us sinners from perdition.

The best of men a cross must bear—
So Providence or Fate contrive it;
Of private griefs he had his share,
And some that were not quite so private.
He might conceal the smouldering fire
Of mental or domestic trial,
But troubles with the wrangling choir
Were patent as their own base-viols.

Of course there was among his charge,
One busy, meddling, ancient maiden,
Who, like a fire-ship, roamed at large,
With fustive stores of scandal laden,
She scattered brands of discord free,
She slandered and annoyed the parson,
Till all agreed she ought to be
Indicted for constructive arson.

On Wednesday nights he always made
To us a quiet pastoral visit:
So, when the bell his touch betrayed,
My mother never asked, "Who is it?"
But wheeling out the easy chair,
With his inviting arms of leather,
She laid his pipe, with thoughtful care,
And steel tobacco-box together.

Those genial times were mellow ripe,
When folks were not inclined to bicker,
If ministers enjoyed a pipe
And sipped a social glass of liquor;
So while his cheerful features glowed,
And smoke-wreaths circled to the ceiling,
His talk in streams of wisdom flowed,
Like waters from a fount of healing.

We loved the man, revered him, too—
As who did not that ever knew him?
His piety and kindness drew,
With cords of love, all classes to him.
His praise by men need not be lipped,
To make our sorrowing hearts beat faster,
For memory holds a secret rapt,
Wherein is shrined our Sainted Pastor.

What's the Use of Fretting?

BY M. M. GARDNER.

Why will our poets sigh and moan
O'er withered hopes and flowers,
When fresh joys spring again as soon
As sunshine after showers?

Our dullest hours, if rightly spent,
Will quickly pass away,
And pleasant smiles from those we love
Will cheer the darkest day.

'Tis all in vain to mourn and weep
O'er milk that has been spilled,
And just as vain to idly wait
To have the pail refilled.

I never drop my buttered toast
Upon the sanded floor,
And if I did I'd leave it there,
And calmly butter more.

Nor do I find this world so cold,
Or friends so hard to win,
And where we have so much to love,
To grumble is a sin.

How to do up shirt bosoms.—We often hear ladies express a desire to know how the glass is produced on new linen Bosoms, &c., and in order to gratify them, subjoin the following recipe:

Take two ounces of whit gum arabic powder, put it in a pitcher, and pour on a pint or more boiling water, according to the strength you desire; let it stand all night, and in the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clear bottle, and cork it for use. A tablespoonful of this gum water, stirred into a pint of starch, will give lawns, either white or colored, a look of newness, to which nothing else can restore them after they have been washed.

For washing fine and elegant colors, the Scientific American advises ladies to boil some bran in rain water, and use the liquor cold. Nothing can equal it for ease upon color and for cleaning clothes.

A word of kindness is seldom spoken in vain. It is a seed which, even when dropped by chance, springs up a sweet flower.

The Shadow We Cast.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

A child was playing with some building blocks and as the mimic castle rose before his eyes in graceful proportions, a new pleasure swelled his heart. He felt himself to be the creator of a "thing of beauty," and was conscious of a new-born power. Arch, well, buttress, gateway, drawbridge, lofty tower and battlement, were all the work of his hands. He was in wonder at his own skill in thus creating, from an unseemly pile of blocks a structure of such a rare design.

Silently he stood and gazed upon his castle with something of the pride of an architect who sees, after months and years of skillfully applied labor, some grand conception in his art, embodied in his imperishable stone. Then he moved around, viewing it on every side. It did not seem to him a toy, reaching only a few inches in height, and covering but a square foot of ground, but a real castle, itself hundreds of feet upwards to the blue sky; and spreading wide upon the earth its ample foundations. As the idea grew more and more perfect, his strange pleasure increased. Now he stood with folded arms, wrapped in the overmastering illusion—now walked slowly around, viewing the structure on all sides and noting every minute particular, and now sat down, and bent over it with the fondness of a mother bending over her child. Again he arose, purposing to obtain another and more distinctive view of his work. And his foot struck against one of the buttresses, and instantly with a crash, wall, tower, and battlement fell in hopeless ruin.

In the room, with the boy, sat his father, reading. The crash disturbed him; and he uttered a sharp, angry rebuke; glancing for a moment, towards the startled child, and then returning his eyes to the attractive pages before him, unconscious of the shadow he had cast upon the heart of his child. Tears came into those fair blue orbs, dancing in light a moment before. From the frowning face of his father, to which his glance was suddenly turned, the child looked back to the shapeless ruins of the castle. Is it any wonder that he bowed his face in silence upon them and wet them with his tears?

For more than five minutes he sat still, as if sleeping; then in a mournful kind of way yet almost noiselessly, he commenced restoring to the box, from which he had taken them, the many shaped pieces that, fitly joined together, had grown into a noble building. After the box was filled, he replaced the cover, and laid it carefully upon a shelf in the closet.

Poor child! That shadow was a deep one, and long in passing away. His mother found him half an hour afterwards, asleep on the floor, with his cheeks flushed to a unusual brightness. She knew nothing of that troubled passage in his young life; and the father had forgotten, in the attractions of the book he read, the momentary annoyance expressed in the words and tone, with a power in them to shadow the heart of his child.

A young wife had busied herself for many days in preparing a pleasant surprise for her husband. The work was finished at last, and now she awaited his return, with a heart full of warm emotions. A dressing gown and a pair of elegantly embroidered slippers wrought by her own skillful fingers, were the gifts with which she meant to delight him.

What a troop of fancies was in her heart! How almost impatiently did she wait for the coming twilight, which was to be drawn, not approaching darkness to her!

At last she heard the step of her husband in the passage, and her pulses leaped with fluttering delight. Like a bird upon the wing, she flew to meet him, impatient for the kiss that awaited her. To meet in the world of business, a few days without their disappointments and perplexities. It is men's business to bear this in a manly spirit. They form but a portion of life's discipline, and should make them stronger braver, and more enduring. Unwisely, and we may say, unjustly, too many men fail to leave their business cares and troubles in their stores, workshops or counting rooms, at the day's decline. They wrap them in bundles and carry them and shadow their household.

It was so with my young husband on this particular occasion. The stream of business had taken an eddying whirl and thrown his vessel backwards, instead of onwards, for a brief space, and though it was still in the current, and gliding safely onward against it, the jar and disappointment had fretted his mind severely. There was no heart in the kiss he gave his wife, and because he had let care over-shadow love. He drew his arms around her; but she was conscious of a diminished pressure in that embracing arm.

"Are you not well?"

With what tender concern was this question asked!
"Very well."

He might be in body, but not in mind; that was plain; for his voice was far from being cheerful.

She played and sang her favorite pieces, hoping to restore by the charm of music, brightness to the spirit. But she was conscious of only partial success. There was still a gravity of manner never perceived before. At tea-table she smiled upon him so sweetly across the table, and talked to him on such attractive themes, that the right expression returned to his countenance; and he looked as happy as she could desire.

From the tea-table they returned to their pleasant parlor. And now the time has come for offering her gift, and receiving the coveted reward of glad surprise, followed by sweet kisses and loving words.

"I will be back in a moment," she said, and passing from the room, she went lightly up the stairs. Both tone and manner betrayed her secret, or rather the possession of a secret with which her husband was to be surprised. Scarcely had her loving face faded from before his eyes, when the thought returned, with a single bound, to an unpleasant event of the day; and the waters of his spirit was again troubled. He had actually arisen and crossed the floor once or twice, moved by a restless concern, when his wife came down with the dressing-gown and slippers. She was trying to force her countenance into a grave expression, to hold back the smiles that were continually striving to break in truant circles around her lips, when a single glance at her husband's face told her that the spirit driven away by the exorcism of her love, had returned again to his bosom. He looked at her soberly, as she came forward.

"What are these?" he asked, almost coldly repressing surprise, and affecting an ignorance in regard to the beautiful present she held in her hands, that he did not feel.

"They are for you, dear. I made them."

"For me? Nonsense! What do I want with such jimerackery? This is woman's wear. Do you think I would disfigure my feet with embroidered slippers, or dress up in a calico gown? Put them away, dear; your husband is too much of a man to robe himself in gay colors, like a clown or actor." And he waved his hand with an air of contempt. There was a bold, sneering manner about him, partly affected and partly real, born of his uncomfortable state of mind. Yet he loved his sweet wife, and would not, of set purpose, have wounded her for the world.

This unexpected repulse—this cruel reception of her present, over which she had wrought patiently, in golden hope, for many days—this dashing to earth of this brimful cup of joy, just as it touched her lips, was more than the fond young wife could bear. To hide the tears that came rushing to her eyes, she turned away from her husband; and, to conceal the sobs she had no power to repress, she went almost hurriedly from the room; and going back to the chamber from whence she had brought the present, she laid it away out of sight in a closet.— Then covering her face with her hands, she sat down and strove with herself to be calm. But that shadow was too deep—the headache too heavy.

In a little while her husband followed her, and discovering, something to his surprise, that she was weeping, said, in a slightly reproving voice: "Why, bless me, not in tears! What a silly little puss you are! Why did't you tell me you thought of making a dressing gown and a pair of slippers, and I would have vetoed the matter at once? You couldn't hire me to wear such flaunting things. Come back to the parlor"—he took hold of her arm and lifted her from the chair—"and sing and play for me. 'The Dream Waltz,' or 'The Tremolo,' 'Dearest May,' or 'The Stilly Night,' are worth more to me than forty dressing-gowns, or a cargo of embroidered slippers."

Almost by force, he led her back to the parlor, and placed her on the music stool. He selected a favorite piece, and laid it before her. But tears were in her eyes, and she could not see a note. Over the keys her fingers passed in skillful touches; but when she tried to keep up the song, utterance failed, and sobs broke forth instead of words.

"How foolish!" said the husband, in a vexed tone. "I'm surprised at you!" And he turned from the piano, and walked across the room.

A little while the sad young wife remained where she was left thus alone, and in partial anger. Then rising, she went slowly from the room—her husband not seeking to restrain her—and going back to her chamber, sat down in darkness. The shadow which had been cast upon her spirit was a very deep one; although the hidden sun came out again right early, it was a long time before his beams had power to scatter the clouds that floated in love's horizon.

The shadow we cast! Father, husband, wife, sister, brother, son, neighbor—are we not all casting shadows daily on some hearts that are pining for the sunlight of our faces? We have given you two pictures, not as a mirror, but as a kaleidoscope. In all their varied relations, men and women selfishly or thoughtlessly—from design, weakness or ignorance—are casting their shadows on hearts that are pining for sunlight. A word, a look, a tone, an act, will cast a shadow and sadden a spirit for hours and days. Speak kindly, act kindly, be forgetters of self, and you will cast but few shadows along the path of life. The true gentleman is always tender of the feelings of others—always watchful lest he wound unintentionally—always thinking, when with others, of their pleasure instead of his own. He casts but few shadows.—Be gentlemen—ladies, or—in a word, that which includes all graces and excellencies—Christians, for it is the Christian who casts fewest shadows of all.

A BARONET STEALING HIS OWN SHIRT.—Some years ago a Hampshire Baronet was nearly driven to distraction by the fact that, that every night he went to bed in a shirt, and every morning awoke naked, without the smallest trace of the missing garment being discovered.

Hundreds of shirts disappeared in this manner and as there was no fire in the room, it was impossible to account for the mystery. The servants believed their master to be mad, and even he began to fancy himself bewitched. In this conjuncture, he implored an intimate friend to sleep in the room with him, and ascertain by what manner of midnight visitor his garment was so strangely removed. The friend accordingly took up his station in the haunted chamber; and lo! as the clock struck one, the unfortunate Baronet, who had before given audible intimation of being fast asleep, rose up from his bed, rekindled with a match the candle which had been extinguished, deliberately opened the door and quitted the room. His astonished friend followed, saw him open in succession a variety of doors, pass along several passages, traverse an open court, and eventually reach the stable yard, where he divested himself of his shirt and disposed of it in an old dung heap, into which he thrust it by means of a pitch fork.

Having finished this extraordinary operation, without taking the smallest heed of his friend who stood looking on, and plainly saw that he was walking in his sleep, he returned to the house, carefully re-closed the doors, re-extinguished the light and returned to bed, where the following morning he awoke as usual, stripped of his shirt.

The astonished eye witness of this extraordinary scene, instead of apprising the sleep-walker of what had occurred, insisted that the following night a companion should sit up with him; choosing to have additional testimony to the truth of the statement he was about to make; and the same singular events were renewed, without the slightest change or deviation. The two witnesses, accordingly, divulged all they had seen to the Baronet; who, though at first incredulous, became, of course, convinced, where on proceeding to the stable yard several dozen of shirts were discovered; though it was surmised that as many more had been previously removed by one of the helpers, who probably looked upon the hoard as stolen goods concealed by some thief.

CHOOSING HUSBANDS.—When a girl marries why do people talk of her choice? In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred has she any choice? Does not the man, select her the last she would have chosen, probably her? A lady writer says:

I have been married many years; the match was considered a very good one, suitable in every respect—age, position and fortune. Every one said I had made a good choice. I loved my husband when I married him because he had, by unwearied assiduity, succeeded in gaining my affection; but, had choice been my privilege, I certainly should not have chosen him. As I look at him in his easy chair, sleeping before the fire, a huge dog at his feet, a pipe peeping out of many pockets of his shooting coat, I cannot but think how different he is from what I would have chosen. My first paragon was for a fashionable clergyman—he was a flatterer, and cared but little for me, though I have not yet forgotten the pang of his desertion. My next was a barrister—a young man of immense talent, smooth, insinuating manners; but he, too, after walking, dancing and flirting, left me. Either of these would have been my choice, had I so chosen; but my present husband choose me, and therefore I married him; and this, I cannot help thinking, must be the way with half the married folks of my acquaintance.

DISTRICT COURT.—On Monday next, the District Court will meet at Cacheville. Hon. B. F. Myers Judge.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.—The Board of Equalization of Yolo County, will meet at the Court House in Cacheville on Monday next, the 13th instant.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING AT KNIGHT'S LANDING.—There will be a Democratic meeting held at this place on Thursday evening next, the 16th instant. Zac. Montgomery, of Sutter county, will address the meeting. We understand that several other speakers will be present.

CATHOLIC CHURCH.—We understand that a Catholic Church is about to be erected in this place and that about $500 is already subscribed.

ARRIVAL OF COL. FREMONT.—On the 31st ult., at Los Angeles, fifteen guns were fired in honor of the arrival of Col. Fremont.

It is reported that rich gold discoveries have been made 25 miles south of San Bernardino, and many are leaving for the mines from Los Angeles.

On Tuesday last, at Genoa, about 1 o'clock p. m., Ex-Lieut. Gov. R. M. Anderson was shot through the right breast, by a man named Henry Lufkins. His recovery is considered doubtful.

THE STEAM WAGON A FAILURE.—The steam wagon is a perfect failure, having stuck in the sand between Los Angeles and San Pedro.

WASHOE SILVER.—The amount of silver ore exported from San Francisco to New York and Europe for the last six months, amounts to 1,982 packages, valued at $162,874 85.

The following is from the St. Louis correspondent of the Bulletin:

PONY EXPRESS.—The Pony Express, I suppose, will now jog along for a considerable time, as Russell, Majors & Co., the proprietors, received on the 18th a warrant on the U. S. Treasury for $67,000, the money being, says the paragraph announcing it, "in consideration of post mail service." Whether the payment is made on account of the Pony enterprise itself, or the mail contract between St. Joseph and Placerville (which they bought out from Hockaday & Co. and Chorpensing,) does not appear. Russell & Co. are said to have other large claims against the Government for trains of merchandise destroyed on the Plains by Indians, during the Utah rebellion, in consequence of a failure on the part of Government to furnish the necessary escorts authorized by the contract.

Friends of the Defaulting Postmaster Fowler Paying up to Government.—George Law and the other security of Postmaster Fowler, you have already heard, have been released from liability by the action of the Federal Court in New York, which ruled that the Government knew of the defalcation long before its publicity, and failed to compel Fowler to make regular quarterly settlements as required by the Postoffice laws. It appears, however, by the following from the N. Y. Tribune that the Government will be partly, if not wholly repaid by the defaulter's friends:

"The Fowler Committee, consisting of Isaac Bell, Hiram Cranston, Elijah F. Purdy, Dr. Crane and Dr. W. W. Sanger, now holding their weekly sessions at the New York Hotel, are doing even better than they had reason to expect. Already they have collected over $60,000 toward reimbursing the Government for Mr. Fowler's deficiency. We are informed that numbers of the persons to whom Mr. Fowler in his palmy days lent large sums of money, without taking any memorandum or written acknowledgement, have generously come forward and paid into the hands of the committee the entire amounts due. This makes us think better of human nature."

The New Orleans Postmaster a Default.—A hitch in the affairs of the New Orleans postoffice was discovered a few days ago; the postmaster was at once removed, and a special agent of the Department sent down to examine the accounts. He reports a defalcation of $60,000, but whether it has been attributed to the postmaster or to some of his employees, has not been reported.

The Defaulting Secretary of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.—The trial of Fredrick Hoffman, the alleged defaulting Secretary of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, has been concluded in New York. The examining justice ordered him to give bail in the sum of $22,000 to await trial on four distinct charges—two for forging and two for illegals issues of the Company's stock.

Murders.

Murders come like an epidemic in its visits to a territory of country; confine itself within certain limits; all classes of the community are affected by the devastation while it lasts, and after the virulence of the attack has passed over it is succeeded by a season of quiet and calm. We are led to these reflections from the increased amount of crime in its worst form, which has been perpetrated in this circuit of country within the past four weeks. First came Well's murder of Mathias Wetzel, then followed the triple murder of Timothy Wharton, W. C. Stoddard and Henry Armstrong, by the same outlaw. Next followed the murder of a young man by Thos. Lofton. This week we hear of the murder of another quiet citizen, near Sacramento, named A. Blanchard, by Wm. Williams and Jos. Blake, besides several other instances of deadly assaults, some with, and others without fatal results. We hope the worst has passed and the calm soon to follow. And, while on this subject we cannot help thinking that courts and juries are too lenient, and are apt to put too mild a construction on our statute laws for the prevention of crime of this character. If courts were severe and jurors would lay aside sympathies and act with unbending justice towards all of this class of criminals, and show that whoever violated the law must, without doubt, pay the penalty attached to such violation, we believe murders would be few, and crime of all classes be materially diminished.

Late from Europe.

In the House of Lords, on the 5th July, Lord Wodehouse laid on their lordships' table the copy of a treaty between Her Majesty and the Government of Honduras.

The Earl of Malmesbury wished to know what had become of the treaty of Nicaragua, which ought to have preceded the treaty of Honduras, and asked whether the Government intended to produce the correspondence relating to the three treaties, which he believed Her Majesty's Government had concluded, expressing at the same time a hope that no gap would be left between the correspondence already laid on the table and the last correspondence previous to the conclusion of the treaties.

Lord Wodehouse said the treaty with Nicaragua was not negotiated before, but after the treaty with Honduras. The reason that the Government had not been able to lay the two treaties on the table at the same time was, although the treaty of Nicaragua had been concluded and ratified by Her Majesty's Government, the ratifications had not yet been exchanged. He was not aware of the cause of the delay. With regard to the correspondence, he wished to have an opportunity of examining it before he answered the question of the noble Earl.

Colored Passengers and the Cunard Steamer.—By the Europa, from Boston, four colored persons took passage to Liverpool. Prior to leaving they received their following notice from the agent of the steamer:

For your information, we desire to inform you that a separate table will be provided for yourself and party on board the Europa, hence to Liverpool, where everything will be furnished you that first cabin passengers are entitled to; the person who applied for your tickets did not state the fact that the party were colored, otherwise we should have informed you. Should this interfere with your expectations, please apply at this office at once, and we will refund you your passage money.

The colored people brought this matter up at an anti-slavery gathering at Bristol, England. It was thence brought to the notice of Sir Samuel Cunard, who responded to the letters addressed to him as follows:

I do not see that any advantage would result from discussing the subject matter of your letters, therefore I must decline entering into any correspondence on the subject.

A Broker's Pocket Picked of a Fortune.—At Liverpool, two experienced London thieves picked the pocket of a broker of £11,000 (or $55,000) in large notes, just as he was entering the bank. An hour later, a London detective who happened to be in town, recognized one of them at the postoffice, where he was found to have registered a letter to a lady in London. Following the man up they arrested both; following the letter they recovered the entire amount of money; and in almost as little time as it takes to say it, the pickpockets were exported for ten and seven years respectively.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—Board met August 6th.—Present, Sill and Morris, and J. T. Daly, Clerk.

In the matter of the Willow Slough Road, passed to the next meeting of Board.

In the matter of the Sycamore Slough Bridge, $800 appropriated for building bridge.

LETTER FROM SACRAMENTO.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

SACRAMENTO, August 8, 1860.
The only local excitement in town this week has been in the Fire Department. The annual election of Chief Engineer took place on Monday, and resulted in the re-election of Brickman. His friends were so jubilant over the result that they "celebrated" all of Monday night by the firing of cannon, bonfires, and the consumption of large quantities of fluids. Last night, John C. Keenan was chosen President of the Board of Delegates of Fire Department, and as soon as the result was announced, the cannon commenced to roar, and the friends of the successful candidate manifested their enthusiasm by running all night, serenading Mr. Keenan with the Union Brass Band, and other demonstrations of joy.

The papers of Monday contained the details of another horrid murder and the arrest of the murderers, an account of which you will doubtless publish, so that I need not further allude to it here.

In the way of bloody events, however, I might as well mention that the telegraph from Genoa, yesterday, gave an account of the shooting of Ex-Lieut. Gov. Anderson by a man named Lufkins. It seems that Judge Child and Anderson had some angry words about the vote for Recorder not being counted. Anderson says that he told Child that if he did not have those votes counted he ought to be hung. Upon which, Lufkins, who is a brother-in-law of Child, interfered and told Anderson that he (Anderson) had better undertake to do the job himself. To this Anderson replied that he was not directing his conversation to Lufkins. Upon this the latter remarked: "I'll fix you," and then went to Child's house and returned with a revolver and immediately shot Anderson in the side. The physician in attendance thought the wound would prove mortal.

The Union's St. Louis correspondent predicted, in a letter published last Thursday, that the Pony which brought through that letter, had made his last trip; but thanks to the owners of the Pony, two trips have made since the prediction, and let us hope that the Pony never will let up! There is no doubt the Pony Express was started with the hope that Congress would give a mail contract to the Central Route which would place it on a footing with the Southern Route. But after the Pony had astonished the country with his trips, and even elicited some admiration in the "circumlocution office" at Washington. Congress adjourned without doing anything for the Pony or the Central Route. The Administration was never more eminently successful in trying "how not to do it," than in this instance.

The opera company are still playing at the Metropolitan Theatre, though it is said the management had to have a certain amount guaranteed to him, or he would not have let his company perform this week.

Politics are waxing warm. The fight in the County Committee is now over; but the angry feelings engendered in the Committee rooms will not be cooled off until after the Presidential election is over. I have heard a committee man charged on the street with being bribed and of having changed his Presidential proclivities altogether within the two previous days! John Nugent, as of course you have seen, has retired from the San Francisco Herald, and that paper runs up the names of Breckenridge and Lane. Nugent announces his intention of taking the stump for Douglas. Gen. Denver's coming out for Douglas, astonished many of the "natives."

Other matters are so dull that I will not inflict you longer this time.
Yours,
P.

CITIZENSHIP.—D. W. Perley, formerly Judge Terry's law partner, was admitted to citizenship in the United States District Court on Wednesday last.

HAZARD VS FREMONT.—The suit of R. G. Hazard vs J. C. Fremont and others, for the foreclosure of a mortgage for $10,000, was argued in the 12th District Court. A stay was granted to file briefs on Monday last.

SENATOR LATHAM.—It is stated by his friends that Senator Latham contemplates retreating to Washington with his family by the Overland Mail route, and that he will commence the journey by the 1st of September. Should this statement correspond with his arrangements, but little time will be left him, from his private business, to devote to political matters in the State.—Union.

ANOTHER MURDER.—The Sac. Union

of August 6th, gives the following account: A Blanchard, blacksmith, was found murdered in a field near the Elk Grove House, on the Upper Stockton road, about sixteen miles from the city, in San Juan township, on Sunday morning. The last seen of Blanchard, alive, was when he started on Saturday night for the house where he was to sleep, from Jaminson's blacksmith shop. To reach this house he had to cross an open field, and about the center of this lot his body was discovered on Sunday morning, the head having been crushed in by a club or heavy instrument. When found, the hogs had commenced a mutilation of the face. Blanchard was a quiet, industrious and respectable citizen. Irwin, who brought the news of the murder, came in for Coroner Murray, who left for the purpose of holding an inquest on the body at one o'clock, and who had not returned at near twelve o'clock, last night. The murderer was not positively known when informant left, but we shall be disappointed if he is not brought into the city today.

Since writing the above, Coroner Murray—at half-past twelve o'clock A.M.—arrived with the two murderers, one of whom is the man we were assured was he. It appears, however, that the murderers had an accomplice by the name of Joseph Blake, who was not suspected by Mr. Irwin. The murder, it will be seen, is confessed, though one of the most diabolical characters. The principal, in this bloody transaction, was William Williams, with whom the deceased, Blanchard, had been a partner in the ownership of a farm. The difficulty originated between the parties in an effort of Williams to get possession of a ranch which had been jointly taken up under possessory right. In the absence of Blanchard from the country, Williams, when the land was offered in the market, and contrary to a stipulated agreement, entered the tract in his own name. This proceeding led to a suit in the District Court, which was tried during the last term, and which Blanchard won, gaining possession of half the land. Since then the parties have had a suit before a Justice in San Joaquin township, in relation to a horse. This, however, was postponed from last Saturday to next Saturday. It seems, then, that Williams, in pure malice, has murdered the old man Blanchard. The full particulars will be found in the Confession below, which was made before the Coroner's Jury. We also publish the inquest.

David M. Osborne sworn.—This morning, between nine and ten o'clock, I was going to Mr. Thomas Mahan's, and saw this body lying close by the road: it was near the corner of Mr. Mahan's field; south of east of Buckner's ranch, and about one-half mile distant; the position of the body when I first saw it, was lying upon the ground face downward, the head toward the south; I approached to within about four feet of the body and saw that it was dead; then started toward Mr. Mahan's house and went in that direction a few paces, then turned and walked back to the body, and took another look in order to satisfy myself that the man was dead; on examining him the second time I saw that the head was much mutilated, and saw portions of the skull bone lying near by; I then went and informed Mr. Watt and others of what had occurred, and returned with others to where the body was lying; I think that the body now before the jury is that of A. Blanchard, and thought so on seeing it the second time; I have known deceased since 1856; have always known him as a peaceable, quiet and industrious man; I think his age is between fifty and sixty years; have heard him speak of his son in town.

Solomon Waterman sworn.—I first heard of the killing of Blanchard about one o'clock this afternoon at Buckner's; I went to where the corpse was lying, and recognized it as that of Blanchard; I did not closely examine the body, but saw that the head was much mutilated; so much so that the head was nearly gone; I think the hogs had access to the body; I suspected who had done the killing, and proposed to others to go to Williams' house and search it for I suspected Williams from the time I first heard of the murder; my reasons for so suspecting him were on account of a difficulty existing between Williams and deceased in a lawsuit, and warned deceased to be on his guard for Williams some days since; on arriving at Williams' house, I informed him of our business, and wished to examine his premises and his boots, and stated to him that a murder had been committed and suspicion rested on him; he showed his foot on which he wore a shoe; I asked him if he wore that shoe last evening; he answered yes; I then went with him into the cellar to look for boots, but found only old ones, and none of which had been worn recently; after some time he acknowledged that he wore boots last evening, he then directed me into a room to get the boots; found a pair of old ones, which had the appearance of not being worn for some time; I told him they were not the ones we were looking for; he denied having any others; we afterwards found the boots in the well, on the information of Jos. Blake; I have heard the statement of Joseph Blake, which corroborates the statement that he made to myself and others in regard to the killing; I have known deceased about one year; he told me that his age was 57 years, and that he formerly resided in Muscatine, Iowa.

Joseph Blake sworn.—I recognize the body present; it is that of Blanchard; I was present last night when he was killed; it was about nine o'clock, and at the corner of Thomas Mahan's field, about one-half mile southeast of this Buckner's; I went to the place described in company with William Williams, immediately after dark, and we set in the ditch near the corner of the field for fifteen or twenty minutes, when Blanchard came along the road from the direction of Buckner's; Williams and myself jumped out of the ditch and towards Blanchard, when he, Blanchard, hallooed, as one in flight; Williams then struck deceased a blow on his head with a pick handle which he held in his hands, which brought Blanchard to the ground; I held in my hand a small spoke of a wagon wheel, with which I struck deceased as he was falling, and immediately left and went across Buckner's pasture to the Stockton road, where I struck about one-fourth of a mile south of Buckner's; I crossed the road and went in the direction of Williams' house, to the west of Buckner's house; when I reached the house, Williams was in bed; we started from the scene of the murder at the same time; do not know which way he took; the direction I went home would require some ten or fifteen minutes longer time to reach the house than if I had gone direct; I ran a part of the way to the house; Williams and myself agreed to go to the place described, and there lay in wait for Blanchard and kill him; we knew that deceased lodged at Mahan's house (which is about one-half mile east from where the murder was committed); we (Williams and myself) went down the road towards Sacramento in order to meet him, as we knew that deceased had gone to the city, and we expected him to return last evening; not meeting him, we then turned and went across the fields to the place described at the corner of Mahan's field; I did not see Williams strike but the one blow, as described; there was no one in the secret but Williams and myself; the arrangement between Williams and myself to kill Blanchard was made on Wednesday or Thursday last; I held no ill feeling against deceased; he had never harmed me in any way; Williams and Blanchard had not been on good terms for some time past, and were arrayed against each other in lawsuit concerning property; I was to receive no reward from Williams, and only wished to render Williams a service; Williams first proposed the killing to me on last week, as stated; the boots present belong to William Williams, and were worn by him last night; I was present to-day when they were taken out of Williams' well; Williams told me that he had put the boots in the well and had hid the pick handle in a straw pile; I have been in Williams' employment for eleven months past.

We, the jury, find that A. Blanchard came to his death on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1860, at the place above described, from blows inflicted by a pick handle and wagon spoke in the hands of Wm. Williams and Joseph Blake.

Two Days Later Intelligence.

Dates to the 27th July.

From the Union's Telegraphic Report.

General Intelligence.

St. Louis, July 27th.

The Republicans of the Second District in Illinois have nominated Isaac N. Arnold for Congress, in place of John W. Farnsworth.

The Breckinridge and Lane General Committee of New York, July 26th, organized at the Irving House. Gustavus A. Smith was in the chair. Primary meetings are ordered to choose delegates to the Breckinridge State Convention called to assemble at Syracuse August 7th. A resolution was passed requiring all members of this Committee to retire from both the Mozart and Tammany Hall, or from any other organization that sustained Stephen A. Douglas.

The New York Tribune announces as bogus the letter purporting to be from Seward in answer to Horace Greeley.

The Douglas New Jersey Convention adopted resolutions in favor of Douglas and Johnson, and in reprobation of the proscriptive policy of the present Administration; also condemning the personal interference of the President in the choice of his successor, and adjourned sine die.

The Breckinridge Convention adopted a resolution recommending a union of all parties opposed to Lincoln and Hamblin—the whole electoral vote of the State to be cast for either candidate whom it will elect.

The Bell and Everett Convention also nominated a full electoral ticket.

The ticket nominated by the Breckinridge Convention consists of two Douglas, two Breckinridge, and one Bell and Everett man.

The Democratic State Central Committee of Massachusetts voted to call a State Convention at Springfield, September 6th. A resolution endorsing Breckinridge and Lane was defeated by the vote.

The opinion of the Douglas State Convention at Pitsburg, Pennsylvania, was divided about the policy of nominating a straight ticket of Douglas electors.

At Washington, July 26th, the treaty with Japan was officially published. One article provides that the President, when required by the Japanese Government, should act as a friendly mediator in such matters of difference as may arise between Japan and any European power.

It is stated that some private letters received at Washington from the city of Mexico express fears, amounting almost to a certainty, that Spain is about to make a decent on Mexico. Spanish authorities declare that the American bluster about the Monroe doctrine will amount to nothing, and they will soon put it to the test. They only awaited the arrival of the Belgian Minister and a Spanish fleet, which is coming to take Vera Cruz, in order to commence operations in the interior. They claim that France will back up Spain, and England will not interfere. Spain, as being the next most aggrieved party, will make the attack, as they hold that after the rejection of the McLane treaty by the Senate, the United States Government is debarred from interfering to prevent other nations from redressing their grievances.

Miscellaneous.

Lieutenant Cushman, recently tried at Boston, was sentenced to dismissal, but the President modified the sentence to suspension for twelve months.

A letter from Vera Cruz to the Mexican Consul at New Orleans, July 26th, says the Knights of the Golden Circle have granted their assistance to the Constitutional Government, but that Jaurez rejected their offer.

The New York Times has information from a person in the confidence of General Walker, who states that the real destination of the filibuster chief is at Nicaragua, which he proposes to reach by crossing Honduras to the Pacific. He has already issued a proclamation announcing a peaceful policy of amnesty for past offenses.

The barns and stables of Baldwin's Hotel, Poughkeepsie, were burned July 26th; loss $12,000.

The steamer S. P. Hibbard, for Memphis, from Louisville, Kentucky, July 26th, near New Albany, was sunk by coming in collision with the steamer Chancellor. Three persons were drowned. Loss $50,000.

CONCORD, N. H., July 27th.—This morning, about five o'clock, Joseph S. Williams, a merchant, of Warren, New Hampshire, stepped up to Mr. Wyatt and shot him through the heart with a revolver. He died instantly. Williams is under arrest.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27th.—The factory of Potts & Keitt, at Cooper's Point, near Camden, was demolished during the thunder storm yesterday afternoon. Eight men took shelter from the rain therein, of whom three were killed, and three seriously injured. The building was two hundred feet long. Loss $40,000.

NEW YORK, July 27th.—The rain storm yesterday afternoon did considerable damage in this vicinity. Several houses were inundated in Williamsburg, one struck by lightning, and the inmate Mrs. Perry, killed. A barn at New Lots was also struck and burned.

A New Yorker was stabbed with a bowie-knife at the St. Nicholas Hotel last night, by a Philadelphian named Hyman.

Great excitement exists at Occoquan,

Va, near Alexandria, in consequence of the Republicans raising a banner bearing the names of Lincoln and Hamblin. The citizens have attempted to abolish it. The Republicans resisted, and dispatched messengers to the neighboring towns for arms and ammunition. Governor Letcher ordered General Hatten to call out his troops to protect the Republicans. But the General preferred resigning his command. At last accounts it was expected that the military at Alexandria would be called out. Occoquan contains three hundred Republicans, and was the residence of Underwood, the ostracised Republican.

Arrived at New York, July 22d, ship Great Republic, from San Francisco.

Arrived St. Joseph, July 26th, the Pony Express with San Francisco dates to July 11th.

Hints on Marriage

If you don't know what to do with yourself, and feel like committing suicide, get married in a hurry.

If you are broken-hearted because the girl of your fancy has married "that conceited fool, Jones," don't despair. A man's heart is like a lobster's claw—when the latter is broken, another immediately sprouts forth, and grows up in its place.

If you intend marrying for love, pay your addresses to the lovely one; but if for money, court the old folks the hardest.

It would be well, before becoming desperately enamored of a pretty face, to see it at the breakfast table.

It is slightly doubtful whether, if a lady takes no care of her person before marriage, her husband will be safe from buttonless shirts and undarned stockings ever afterwards.

If you are a little "green-eyed," marry a woman whom all the world praises for her beauty. She will have a troop of gay, dashing young fellows about her, and be kept in a most delightful state of "hot water."

If you would have a monopoly of your wife's affection, and your motto is—
"Like Alexander I would reign,
And I would reign alone,"

"go in"—not for stary eyes and a Greek nose, and lips that "seem on roses fed," and a' that, but for a pug nose, a mouth charmingly awry, and teeth divinely not in rows. You will need no dragoon to guard your "golden fruit."

If you are not fastidious about cooking matters, and don't like to see a house look too neat, marry a woman whom everybody extols for her talents.

Second marriages are not always like second thoughts.

Marriage and single-blessedness are like two roads to a place, of which the Yankee said, "Take which you please, you'll wish you had taken the other.

If your wife cries or pouts often without reason, don't fall on your knees to her, and pour out your sympathy on every such occasion; but dance a popular jig, or whistle some merry tune—anything to show you are unconcerned.

Don't be surprised if, after you have sailed smoothly eight or ten months on the voyage of matrimony, you are suddenly overturned by squalls.

If your wife is continually telling you that she is miserable, and must leave you, affect to leave her, and she will chase you to the end of the world.

SENSATIONAL ELOPEMENT.—A day or two since, a beautiful and accomplished young lady, one of the reigning belles of Louisville, Kentucky, and a member there of the beau monde, appeared here at the Spencer House with a middle-aged gentleman of German extraction, a well known music teacher in that city. They were traveling companions, it was evident; but the extreme affection they manifested for each other indicated a closer relationship than the disparity of their circumstances seemed to admit.

The only daughter and heiress of a druggist in Louisville, worth at least half a million, she was possessed of youth, beauty, culture, accomplishment, and the grace, refinement and elegance of mind and manner that render position brilliant and circumstances poetical. He was a very good natured and amiable person, but without fortune, a professor of music, by which honorable though not lucrative calling he had supported himself comfortably in the city of his adoption. Without apparently personal attractions, and in his fortieth year, it was hardly to be supposed he could so captivate the fancy or intoxicate the senses of a young and romantic girl as to induce her to see in him the ideal hero of which feminine hearts at eighteen usually dream, until fact and reason arouse them to the practical inexorabilities of life.

But so it was. He had been her music teacher, and by that mysterious eroticism, which, either from the peculiar eloquence of the man or the peculiar weakness of the woman, effects miracles, he won her heart, and made her completely his. Her romance, which ordinarily would have rejected him as her lover, transmuted by a flash of sentiment, rendered him the "marvelous proper man," destined to win and wear her. If he was poor so much the better, for she was rich; if he was not handsome his heart was good, and that outweighed all beauty; if his profession was humble, was it not the province of love to lift him to equality with kings? Then she thought of "Jane Eyre," the noble, suffering and peculiar Jane, and her stern, strange "Rochester," with his withered limbs and sightless orbs—and the heiress was conquered by the woman. The beloved, petted, spoiled daughter, reared in the midst of luxury, forgot all but him who had filled her soul with a divine emotion, and she placed her hand in his for guidance through the world. One morning at early dawn the fair girl was missing, and a note informed her parents of the steps she had taken. They were mortified and grieved, of course; but they had no remedy. The bird had flown; they could not call her back without her mate; and they wished her mateless or not at all. The elopement created a sensation in Louisville, and caused as much surprise as indignation among many of the young gallants there who had aspired to her hand.—Cincinnati Press, June 22d.
