Her public benefactions and her private bills relieved me of a further large amount, but to compensate for this we were introduced to "society." I was elected to several clubs, and vouchers for the "royal inclusion" were accorded to us.
 —An impetuous but important politician later proposed for a baronetcy—for a consideration, part of which was for the purposes of the government and part retained for himself. He is an inveterate opponent of corruption in municipal corporations. There appears to be no inclination to interfere with free trade in titles, for subsequently I was offered, and I accepted, a peerage in return for a substantial contribution to the funds of the party.
 —Ability, industry and enterprise made me rich. Bribery has made me respected.
 —Without fees to the fashionable I should be still but a local celebrity, severely ignored by the neighboring magnates. Directly and indirectly it has cost me some $200,000 to obtain social respectability.—London Truth.

CHAPTER XXXI

"I've been so frightened," Alice said to him. "The man said you wanted me, and I came at once, but in the automobile I felt something was wrong, and you know it was outside."

"Doesn't that know about this?" She shook her head. "The man came for me first. They went off together. I'm afraid it was a trick. Then about twenty minutes later the same man came back and said M. Pougot was with you and that he had been sent to bring me to you. He showed me your ring and—"

"Yes, yes, I understand," interrupted Coquelin. "My poor child! He muttered. Taking the candle, Coquelin went through the arched opening, into the larger chamber and made a hurried inspection. The room was about fifteen feet square and ten feet high, with everything of stone—walls, floor and arched ceiling. Save for the passage into the smaller room there was no sign of an opening anywhere except two small square holes near the ceiling, probably ventilating shafts.

Around the four walls were logs piled evenly to the height of nearly six feet, and at the archway the pile ran straight through into the smaller room. The logs were in two foot lengths, and as the archway was about four feet wide the passage between the two rooms was half blocked with wood.

Coquelin walked slowly around the chamber, peering carefully into cracks between the logs, as if searching for something hidden in the wall. He looked lower and lower and presently got down upon his hands and knees and crept along the base of the pile.

"What are you doing?" asked Alice, watching him in wonder from the archway.

Without replying, the detective rose to his feet and, holding the candle high above his head, examined the walls above and below and presently he reached up and scraped the stones with his finger nails in several places and then held his fingers close to the candle light and looked at them and smiled. His fingers were black with soot.

"M. Paul, won't you speak to me?" begged the girl.

"Just a minute, just a minute," he answered absently. Then he spoke with quick decision. "I'm going to set you to work," he said. "By the way, have you any idea where we are?"

She looked at him in surprise. "Why, don't you know?"

"I think we are on the Rue de Valenciennes—a big hotel back of the high wall."

"That's right," she said.

"Ah, he didn't take me away!" reflected M. Paul. "That is something Pougot will scent danger and will move heaven and earth to save us. He will get Tignol, and Tignol knows I was here. But that is not all. Suddenly he said to the girl: 'I may as well tell you our lives are in danger. He's going to set fire to this wood and—'"

"Oh!" she cried, her eyes starting with terror.

"See here," he said sharply. "You've got to help me. We have a chance yet. The fire will start in this big chamber, and I want to cut it off by blocking the passageway. Let's see!" He searched through his pockets. "He has taken my knife. Ah, this will do! And, lifting a plate from the table, he broke it against the wall, and there he saw through the hole. Use the jagged edge—like this. That cuts it. Try over there."

Alice fell to work eagerly, and in a few moments they had freed a section of the wood piled in the smaller chamber from the restraining ropes and stakes.

"Now, then," directed Coquelin. "You carry the logs to me, and I'll make a barricade in the passageway."

The word passageway was somewhat misleading. There was really a distance of only three feet between the two chambers, this being the thickness of the massive stone wall that separated them. Half of this opening was already filled by the wood pile, and Alice succeeded in cutting it off by half, leaving logs on the floor lengthwise in the open part of the passage from chamber to chamber and then laying other logs on top of those, and so on as rapidly as the girl brought wood.

They worked with all speed. Soon the passageway was solidly walled with closely fitted logs to the height of six feet. Above this, in the arched part, Coquelin worked more slowly, selecting logs of such shape and size as would fill the curve with the fewest number of cracks between them. There was danger in cracks meant the obstructing logs, for cracks meant a draft, and a draft meant the spreading of the fire.

"Now," said M. Paul, surveying the blocked passageway, "that is the best we can do—with wood. We must stop what did you say?" He glanced at the chair where Alice had thrown her things. "A white cloak and a straw hat with a white veil and black sash—tear off the ribbon and—we can't stand on ceremony. Here are my coat and vest. Rip them into strips and—Great God! There's the smoke now!"

As he spoke a thin grayish feather curled out between two of the upper logs and faded away; another came below it. Somewhere De Hodelmann struck had pressed an electric button, and under the logs deadly sparks had jumped in the waiting under.

They were prisoners in a huge, slowly heating iron stack packed with tons of dry wood.

"We must stop this," he cried, and tearing the shirt from his shoulders,

"There it is, on that shelf," she went on positively and, following her finger, Coquelin saw what he had not noticed before, a massive stone shelf jutting out from the wall just over the wood pile. "You must get my dolly," she ordered.

"Certainly, I'll get it," soothingly she stammered her foot in displeasure. "I don't like this place." She caught Coquelin's hand. "Well go out where the fairies are. That's a much nicer place to play, Willie."

Here there came to M. Paul an urging of mysterious guidance, as if an inward voice had spoken to him and said that God was trying to save them; that he had put wisdom in this girl's mouth and that he must listen.

"All right," he said, "but—how do we get there?"

"Through the door under the shelf! You know perfectly well, Willie!"

"Yes," he agreed. "I know about the door, but I forget how to get it open."

"Silly!" She stamped her foot again. "You push on that stone thing under the shelf!"

Coquelin looked at the shelf and saw that it was supported by two stone brackets.

"You mean the thing that holds the shelf up?"

"Yes; you must press it."

"But there are two things that hold the shelf up. Is it the one on this side that you press or the one on that side?"

"Dear me, what an aggravating boy! It's the one on this side, of course."

"Good!"

He found her suddenly limp in his arms. Having spoken these strange words of wisdom or of folly, she had gone back into unconsciousness.

Coquelin believed that they were words of wisdom, and without a moment's hesitation he acted on that belief. The wall underneath the shelf was half covered with piled up logs, and these must be removed in spite of the flames.

It was the work of a madman or of one inspired. Three things Coquelin felt to the door, gasping for breath. The skin on his arms and neck was hanging away in shreds.

At last the space was cleared, and Paul Coquelin stumbled forward and seized the left hand bracket and pressed it with all his might.

Instantly a door underneath, cunningly hidden in the wall, yawned open on a square black passage.

"With a bound he was back at the shelter and had Alice in his arms, smiling again, as she slept—as she dreamed. And a moment later he had carried her safely through flames that actually smoldered but did not burn and actually smoldered but did not burn.

"Then he went back to the door. But first he reached up inside that fiery furnace and, groping over the hot stone shelf, brought down a scorched and battered and dust covered little figure that had lain there for many years.

It was the lost dolly!

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

After considerable negotiations, the management of the Weymouth Light & Power Co. has been able to secure a proposition from a firm of very reliable electric contractors to wire a certain number of houses at a figure much below that which has been previously charged by the State for doing the same work. This will give many people who have wanted to use electricity an opportunity to have their houses wired at a considerable saving to them. It has been demonstrated that the careful house-keeper can secure more light for the same money by lighting the houses by electricity than by kerosene and everyone appreciates the great saving in labor which is made. The more modern fashioned kerosene lamps are done away with.

Mr. Morrell passed away last Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ois Belmont of the State for doing the same work. This will give many people who have wanted to use electricity an opportunity to have their houses wired at a considerable saving to them. It has been demonstrated that the careful house-keeper can secure more light for the same money by lighting the houses by electricity than by kerosene and everyone appreciates the great saving in labor which is made. A Fire In The Woods

When It Was Over There Was a Change of Heart

By CLARRISA MACKIE

Copyright, 1914, by American Press Association.

The Sunday dinner was over, and Robert was washing dishes in the big kitchen. Henry Miles and his wife came out dressed in their best clothes and got into the waiting buggy. Every since they had been married twenty-five years before the Sunday afternoon ride had been a regular proceeding. Their daughter Beth waved them a farewell as they drove out of the big gate.

Beth looked anxiously away toward the clouds that bordered the distant horizon. Behind them rose a pale gray cloud now and then thickened by flying cinders. Rain had not fallen for several weeks, and the woods were like tinder, and the paths were thickly carpeted with dry leaves fallen from last year.

The kitchen windows faced the wheatfields, and Rebecca's red face pressed anxiously to the pane. Then she saw Beth and came to the door.

"The woods are afire, Miss Beth," she said excitedly. "Your pa's wheat will be done for if the wind don't change pretty soon."

The wheatfield was an undulating sea of pale green blades six inches high. The dry wheat stalks slightly parted the leaves, and Beth bent down to assure herself that the grain was too green to be affected by the fire even if it should reach the fields. When she looked up again several men were running across the field. One of them saw her, paused and turned back.

Through the Wall

By CLEVELAND MOFFETT Copyright, 1909, by D. Appleton & Co.

CHAPTER XXII AT THE TRIAL THE details of the hours that followed remained blurred memories in the mind of Alice and her rescuer. They wandered in a strange subterranean region of passages and cross passages that widened and narrowed, that ascended and descended, that were sometimes smooth and rough, and always black as night. Surely no more pathetic pair than these two ever braved the mazes of the Paris catacombs.

monster headed at once for him, and as he was about to dive to escape its clutch another shark dashed in. As the first shark turned over on its side in order to bite Clark drove below the surface, then up under the side, and drove the knife time after time into its vitals, and it sank to the bottom. As he came to the surface gasping for breath a yawlbout manned by excited sailors from the navy yard ran alongside, and he was pulled aboard just in time to escape the second shark. -Detroit Free Press.

THE PEANUT.

It Starts Growing In the Open, but Finishes Under Ground. Most people of the north suppose that peanuts grow like potatoes, on the roots of the vine. Others with equal confidence state that they hang from the branches like pea pods. Both are right, and both are wrong.

Norfolk Club Outing.
Two years ago the Norfolk Club of South Weymouth, which has a long history among the social organizations of the town, conceived the idea of a summer outing and the committee formed an outing party of 25 persons which was called for and held last Saturday at the Rockland House, New Bedford.

OH Colony Driving Club.
Regular and other patrons of the Saturdays of the old Colony Gentleman Driving Club, had their annual meeting last Saturday afternoon.
The committee had a list of 12 classes and arranged them in 11 classes.
(Class 1) proved of special interest as it was the first time that the club divided honors even in three heats which were held at a fourth circuit of the track.
Following are the results:
Class A. Mixed.
Young Hayward (George Beal) 1 10
Burdette (J. W. Lindeham) 3 2
Widow (T. A. Cushman) 2 3
Time 1:11, 1:14, 1:19.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
NORFOLK, SS. PRONOTE COURT.
To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, creditors and all persons interested in the estate of MARY ELIZABETH HOLLES,
late of Weymouth, in said County, deceased, do hereby certify that a Probate Court was held at Weymouth, in said County, on the seventh day of September, A. D. 1910, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which said Court the will of the said deceased was proved and the same was admitted to be the last will and testament of the said deceased. The said will was read aloud and its contents were explained to the jury. The said jury returned a verdict that the said will was the last will and testament of the said deceased and that the same should be admitted to probate. The said Court then declared the said will to be the last will and testament of the said deceased and appointed the said executor of the said will.

It was at the height of the season at the seashore. Aunt Charlotte, my sister Ruth and I were enjoying the sea air, and I especially was enjoying the sea water. My aunt had charged me with the care of her trunk which she had with her. She used to sit on the beach watching us.

DO IT NOW
Weymouth People Should Not Wait
Until It Is Too Late.

The appalling death-rate from kidney disease is in most cases, due to the fact that the little kidneys become so badly neglected until they become chronic.
The slight symptoms give place to serious disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, or some other serious form of kidney complaint.

THE GRADUATE.
These summer days he struts about,
The graduate from college,
Academy or variety.
Puffed up with stores of knowledge,
A class pin glittering on his coat
Or in his tie of satin
He only thinks in algebra
And speaks in Greek or Latin
He states that he is open now
To take a good position—
Bank president, but nothing less,
Will suit his proud ambition.
But when the year rolls round again,
To him will find him meekly
Engaged in humble office work
For seven dollars weekly.

When Things Go Wrong

There are some days when things go wrong. We cannot understand it. Even though we try to do our best we cannot prevent it. Perhaps we overslept awhile. And this began the morning. With worry, fret and haste until the face had no adorning. A frown had driven the smiles away. Until we were complaining. Then Whitcomb's team stopped at the door. With many things sustaining. Mince, Apple, Squash and Berry Pie, Marble, Nut and Frosted Cake, Coffee Rolls and Hermit, Doughnuts, too. Enough the evil spell to break.

"So your wife is suffragette?"
"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton.
"Why does she want to vote?"
"I don't think Henrietta really desires to vote. She's merely tired of talking to me. She wants a larger and more intelligent audience."
—Modern Society.
"What you want to do is to have that mud hole in the road fixed," said the visitor.
"That goes to show," replied Farmer Cornusson, "how little you reformers understand local conditions. For purely selfish part of a mortgage with the money I made handling automobiles out of that mud hole!"
The Springfield Union is of the opinion that the Massachusetts minister who professed that hell-hell will be played in Heaven, did not get his idea from listening to what the fans say, and of the nuptials.
A Foxboro school teacher received a note from the mother of one of her pupils and it ran thus: "Please excuse Willie as he has lost his trousers on a nail. Hoping you will do the same, I am yours truly."
"I'm going to the dentist's to have this tooth out. Just mind baby'll come back."
"Husband (with a sneer)—You mind the baby, des! It'll go and get a tooth pulled out!"
Organized charity has not reduced the toll of the poor, but rather increased them, for many who would have refused to give because they could not do it intelligently are now among the most liberal because they know that their money will not be wasted.
An Illinois city council has passed a stringent saloon ordinance, which provides that if any saloon keeper expels an intoxicated person from his saloon the license may be revoked. It shall be the duty of the saloon keeper to take good care of the intoxicated person until he is perfectly sober, and that a place shall be provided for him to sleep.
THE DEADLY D. S.
"Harry, love," exclaimed Mrs. Knowall to her husband on his return one evening from the office, "I have been dreadfully insulted!"
"Insulted?" exclaimed Harry, love.
"By whom?"
"By your mother," answered the young wife, bursting into tears.
"My mother, Florz? Nonsense! She's miles away on a visit to poor Tom!"
"Flora died her tears."
"I'll tell you about it, Harry, love," she said. "A letter came to you this morning, addressed in your mother's writing, so, of course, I opened it."
"Of course," repeated Harry, love, dryly.
"It was written to you all the way through. Do you understand?"
"I understand. But where does the insult come in?"
"—It came in the postscript," cried the wife, bursting into fresh floods of briny, "It said:—P. P. S.—Dear Harry, don't fail to give this letter to Harry. I want him to have it."
THERE ISN'T ANY ONE FOR ME TO PLAY WITH ANY MORE.
(The last words of Mark Twain.)
The glow is fading from the western sky. And one by one, my comrades, as of yore, have given up their play and said good-bye.
"There isn't any one for me to play with any more."
"No longer have I laggards in my store; Ken love's best gifts to me I could not hold."
"There isn't any one for me to play with any more."
I miss the hand-clasp of old friends. The kisses of the loved ones gone before.
"Is lonely, when the heart first comprehends."
There isn't any one for me to play with any more.
I need these loving hearts, so fond and true. I want them in my arms, as heretofore; When they are reached, I shall no longer feel.
There isn't any one for me to play with any more.

ON THE FARM

As germs are carried through the air on dust particles it is not good to throw down from the mow during or just before milking time.
There is more profit in one hen that lays eggs in November and December than in one dozen that lay their best in April and May and none in the fall. Push your early pullets for all that is out, so as to get them to laying this fall.
With every ton of grain sold on the market the farmer sells from $6 to $9 worth of soil fertility. When the grain is fed on the farm and the product is sold in butter, less than $1 worth of soil fertility is sold.
A newly stirred soil admits air to the roots, conserves moisture and prevents growth of weeds. Every shower tends to seal up the surface and exclude the air. So aim to stir up the soil after every rain.
Cleanliness is a mighty factor in taking care of poultry in hot weather. Let's do the best we can cleaning up and keeping clean about the coops and yards these days, when animal and vegetable matter decomposes so quickly and vermin multiply with lightning rapidity.—Inland Farmer.
Some people judge a farmer by the fences he keeps. The wise man looks over the fence and sees the crops in field. There are put your work on your fields though the fences have to grow and croak.
In the last census the apple production of the United States was placed at 175,000,000 bushels a year. The world would be glad to get twice as many and is willing to pay good prices.
Coarse wheat bran made into a crumbly mass into which is incorporated chopped kumquat, plantain, pig's purslane, onion tops or lettuce makes a fine non-meat Green feed. It is a necessity for chicks for their well-being and rapid growth.
For the prevention of gray rot of grape an investigator recommends a treatment which he claims is a very simple and efficient. This consists of trifling the leaves on the north side of the vines and spraying with Bordeaux mixture, to which soap is added to make it more adherent. The treatment should be made about July 25, or at the stage when the grapes have just about reached their full size.
The dairy cow is either a money maker or a money loser. If she is in good healthy condition and her milk supply promptly counteracts her actual expense of keeping, she is worth the time and trouble but, on the other hand, should she consume more feed than her profit warrant, get rid of her. There are too many producers to be obtained to waste time in experimenting.
Poultry keeping as a main-line industry is better now than plowing corn or pitching hay, and for this reason it is well suited to those who can not bear a strenuous life. If the poultryman will work as hard with his hens as he does with his hay and corn he can make a fortune, with poultry products. It is all that they are at present. Good common sense mixed with the work will help.
Manures, like everything else, may do harm. They can not do harm, however, when ordinary intelligence is employed in the use of them. All manures should be used in moderate quantities, as it is well known that to get the best results from manures they should be applied often and in small quantities. Too liberal a supply will have a tendency to produce an acid condition in the soil, which in turn has somewhat of a deadening effect on the soil.
If you love your cows and want them to produce well you must swat the fly. It is not always an easy matter to swat the fly in the dairy barn, but you can keep the pest out by keeping the barn clean. When you bring in the cows for milking, first darken the barn by hanging cloths at the windows, and if you will tack some gunnybags over the entrance so that it will break the cows as they come in, you will minimize the fly pest at milking time.—Missouri Dairyman.
In pruning fruit the location of the fruit buds must be borne in mind. The peach forms fruit buds on new wood that is, the wood growing in 1909 bears the fruit of 1910. The chief aim of the peach grower is to keep the tree trimmed back so that the bearing wood is as close to the branches as possible. The grapes are pruned back each year to new buds, or branches, called canes, for the fruit is borne on shoots which grow from buds borne on previous year's growth. Apple, pear and cherry and most plums bear their fruit buds upon very short lateral branches called fruit spurs. These spurs are formed on wood older than one year.

Old Colony Driving Club.
Saturday was an ideal day for the races at the Fair Grounds at South Weymouth and the Old Colony Gentlemen's Driving Club had a record-breaking crowd of people to see the following classes of horses go for red and blue ribbons.
The blue ribbon went comparatively easy in classes C, E, F, H and K, but it took a third heat every time to decide the red ribbon or second place.
There was a marked interest in class A which was a close fight between Young Bayard and Canterbury girl in three heats with Young Bayard a winner by only a nose. Races and results:

Shoe Industry.
The promise of a fair harvest of staple crops has improved sentiment among shoe manufacturers and dealers, and prospects of a good fall trade have brightened materially during the past week. Wholesalers are calling for immediate deliveries of fall goods, and mail orders are being received, some of encouraging size, so that full-time work seems to be assured in the factories for several weeks.
Manufacturers of all kinds of men's wear are reporting an improved business. Staple lines and better grades are in especial demand, and large orders have been placed. Activity in women's and children's goods is not so marked, but there has been an increased number of small orders.
In some places the sale of fall goods in retail stores has begun, and the trade is ready for such business. The anxiety of retailers to obtain their supplies for fall stock with which to start this season's conservative buying by retailers has become a habit the last two or three seasons, so by the time the clearance sales have been completed, the old stock has been well worked off. It is thought that some dealers will be obliged to carry over more spring and summer goods than they expected, on account of the short season, and as a result will be less than usual ready for some time on fall goods, before starting on spring work.
Indications now point to a considerable sale of tan goods for fall wear as retailers are ready to encourage such business, and these shoes will be supplied in both high and low patterns.
While the tan shoe belongs more particularly to the summer season, it is not entirely out of place as an early autumn shoe. The color is in keeping with the prevailing hues of nature, and is less affected by the dust so common at that time. Settling aside all precedents and customs the brown shoe is probably as appropriate for all-year-round outdoor wear as any color, leaving the black leather shoe for indoor and dress occasions. The tendency of the times in various lines of effort, is toward colors that are inconspicuous and less disfigured by dust. Dress and dust are incompatible, but the active person recognizes that apparel must be suited to the requirements of life. It takes a long time to change the taste of a people, but the brown shoe is winning its way.
As usual the price is a stumbling block between shoe buyer and manufacturer, and business is retarded. The manufacturer is buying good leather, and the tanners are holding their plants down closely, and some are even closing. Second rate leather finds a market at reduced prices but high-grade stock is being held heavily. Hides in the leading markets are firm, and with the increase in the demand for shoes, strength will ensue in the leather markets.—Boston Transcript.

IN ALEXANDRIA, VA. Written for the Gazette and Transcript by Mrs. Grace (Coby) DeWolf. Alexandria, Va., a few miles below Washington on the other side of the Potomac, was a thriving and beautiful town when the site of the capital city was covered with forest, broken here and there by the cultivated fields of the native original owners from whom, together with the state of Maryland, the Federal Government obtained title. In 1799, Captain Robert Hoxson was given possession by colonial land agent of 5,000 acres of land in Virginia with nine miles of river front. A month later he sold his grant to John Alexander, for six households of tobacco. This was a quick real estate deal for those times and the first on record in the vicinity, although that side of the Potomac has both transferred in large slices several things since and may be again.

The house stands high above the river and was formerly surrounded by a garden which sloped to a boat landing on the river side. A street has been laid out since then at the foot of the garden and coal sheds and like buildings shut out this view. There is also a secret underground passage to the river. This hidden way was probably belonged to the old fort to be used as a last refuge from Indian attacks. In the lower part of the Carlyle house and within the walls of the fort is a brick passage with several brick cells have been pierced in the walls since those good old days, but the strong looks in the ceiling remain and are pointed out as proof of the story told visitors, that from the roof they used to hang slaves and the Indian captives for misdeed.

E. Clapp & Son Co. Outing. Several years ago, the late Edwin Clapp inaugurated an annual outing for the employees of his factory and those guests taken at different places proved to be of special interest to the men and women employed by the firm and for one day in the year at least, they all met together for mutual enjoyment and recreation. The outing as well as the business established by Mr. Clapp has been continued and no longer is there a necessity for going abroad for the outing, as the Davis Bates Clapp memorial building and grounds furnish ample facilities for a social enjoyment as was evidenced by the annual outing which was held there last Saturday afternoon and evening; in fact it was the largest gathering and most extensive line of recreation which they have ever had.

Garden Party for St. Jerome's Church. The garden party for the benefit of the building fund of St. Jerome's church, North Weymouth, which was held on the grounds of Mr. William J. Coleman, Bridge street, last Wednesday evening, was a most decided success. During the afternoon children were admitted free, and music, games, races and dancing were enjoyed by a large number of children. The winners of the various races were as follows: Sack race—for girls—Miss Mary Carter; for boys—Thomas McDonald first and Russell Tufts second. Three-legged race—Russell Tufts and Maurice Condon first; Michael Dwyer and Everett Wise second. Girls running race—Miss Clara Tandy first; Miss Marion Gibson second. Boys' running race—Joseph McDonald first; Russell Tufts second. Potato race—for girls—Miss Gertrude Gibson first; Miss Nolla Gordon second; for boys—Thomas McDonald first; Everett Gibson second. Ice cream eating contest—for Miss Helen Morrison first; Mrs. J. J. McCarthy second; for boys—Everett Gibson first; Michael Dwyer second. A large dance board was erected on the lawn and Captain's orchestra furnished music for the dancing throughout the evening.

When Things Go Wrong. There are some days when things go wrong. We understand it; For though we try to do our best, We cannot command it. Perhaps we overstep awhile, And this began the morning, With worry, fret and haste untill, The face had no coloring. A frown had driven the smiles away, Until we were complaining, Then Whitecomb's team stopped at the door, With many things sustaining. Mine, Apple, Squash and Berry Pies, Marble, Nut and Frosted Cake, Corned Beef and Hermit's Doughnuts, too, Enough the evil spell to break.
