ON THE FARM

This column is worth more than $2.00 a year to you. Subscribe for the Gazette.

We are glad to note that several hundred boys and girls in our school have taken an interest in the farm work as proposed by Mr. Pearson, superintendent of schools, and entered the field of competition for prizes for best results and we will add two prizes to them—$50.00 to the boy who makes the best exhibit and $20.00 for the second winner. Now is the time to get a move on if you expect to raise anything this year. All conditions were never better and much depends on the next two weeks. A cool warm sun after the rains we have had will just make things grow.

Neighbor Coldfeet seems to think that when the crops stop growing he might as well stop work—and there are others.

The best way to soil fruit is straight to the man who wants it. If you can not do this, then a reliable middleman is next best.

Keep a lot of bag strings hanging in the granary; and, many times, some in the barn come handy. A broken harness strap is a good thing to hang them on.

A man with only one cow or one sheep should care for that one—see that it has plenty of fresh water and good feed—as if he had a hundred. That's where the honest pennies come in.

If your trees and shrubs are infested with the San Jose scale and you don't have them sprayed with the proper mixture before "Patriots' day," it will be too late for this year.

A neighbor who now has two dozen hens expects to have a thousand next year by this time, so profitable is her flock now. There is no danger of the market being glutted with poultry products and the person who intelligently increases a flock will be on the winning side next year.—Journal of Agriculture.

The occupation of farming overcrowded not one bit of it. There will always be room for good farming and every young man starting in the business should inscribe on his banner: "There is room at the top," and do his very best to get there.

A hen may leave a nest of eggs for more than a day and the eggs still hatch if they have not been subjected to freezing temperature. In very warm weather a hen may be away from her eggs for two days and the eggs still hatch. If you find a hen has left her nest and the eggs cold, give the eggs to another hen.

The digestive organs of animals that chew their cud are so formed as to require comparatively juicy and bulky food. The cow can not thrive on dry food as well as the horse. The ideal food for the dairy cow is good pasture, but for a large part of the year, green pasture is not available. The best substitutes to furnish this succulent feed during this period are root crops and corn silage.

If your hens are inclined to lay out in the henhouse or other places where the eggs can not be found, see to it that they have plenty of secluded nests where you wish them to lay. Artificial eggs placed on the henhouse floor have a tendency to prevent hens from eating eggs. The reason is apparent. They become used to seeing the artificial eggs, and perhaps can not tell the difference between them and real eggs.

To maintain the fertility of the soil, to cultivate it to the best advantage, to raise its products at the least expense, to secure the best farming implements, to select the best live stock, to feed them in the most intelligent manner and to build up a permanent system of agriculture should be the end and aim sought by a system of mixed or diversified farming.

The corn is often damaged by the roots being broken in deep cultivation. This is not the case to a serious extent early in the season, when the corn is small, but the check to the crop may be quite marked if cultivated deep late in the season, when the corn has reached a height of 2 to 3 feet or more particularly if the previous cultivation has been shallow or neglected. If dry weather happens to follow such treatment the damage to the crop is much increased.

Cultivation should begin as soon as possible after the crop is up or after a rain, so as to preserve the soil moisture. Neglecting to cultivate in wet weather will allow the roots to develop very near the surface. Then a sudden change to dry weather and extra cultivation will cut off so many roots that the crop will be liable to suffer from blight or other diseases. It is just as necessary to cultivate in wet as in dry weather; plants when young need but very little water, but their demand for it increases until near maturing.

Opinion is divided and probably always will be on the question which is the most profitable farm animal to raise. Many believe the horse brings the greatest profit others their faith to the beef breeds, still others to the dairy breeds of cattle, but it seems that the friends of the hog are in the majority. A hog requires more care at times than do some other animals but it is wonderfully prolific, and if the quality and breeding are right it is easy to make a market for the animals produced, and the farmer has the advantage of turning his money over more rapidly and more profitably in hog breeding than in perhaps any other kind of animal production.

Celery should be started in the cold frame some time during the Spring. It can follow some early crop, such as lettuce, radishes or early peas. The plants

GATHERED UP.

Lots of men enjoy getting the short end of it so they will have something to kick about.

Ten long years ago an Olds girl married a rich old man with one foot in the grave—so she thought—but he is still buying his shoes by the pair.

When a man feels that he's appreciated it means he has been over-estimated by others.

If a boy couldn't have both, but could choose the one or the other, he would be better equipped for life with a well-endowed self respect and moral backbone than by having a percentage endowed with a fat bank account only.

Doctor—Ah, I see that my medicine has worked a wonderful change in you. You are another man today?
Patient—All right, doctor; see you send your bill to the other man.—Pete Mele.

The committee in charge of a recent entertainment sent in a notice for us to print free, and then gave the printing else here. It's fortunate we are good natured, but it is "skinny" work, just the same.—E.V.

A young officer who was drilling the assembly just delivered himself of this command: "Now, my men, listen to me. When I say 'Halt' put the foot that's on the ground beside the one that's in the air, and remain motionless."

In spite of the Declaration of Independence we are not all equal. Different men can do different things. And among those who can do the same thing some can do it better than others. The problem of the world is to get each man to do the thing that he can best do, and to get the best man at each thing to take the lead.

No matter who you are, where you are or how old you are, it is your duty to save money. Are you rich now? You may become poor if you don't save. Are you poor? You may become rich if you save money and invest it wisely.

JUST A SHOW DOG.

First Boy—Is that a good house dog?
Second Boy—No.
"Good bird dog?"
"No."
"Good for rabbits?"
"No."
"Knows some tricks, perhaps?"
"No."
"What's it good for?"
"Nothing, only to take prizes at shows."

THE GOLDEN RULE.

The Golden Rule is not peculiar to Christianity. It is found among the various peoples, as follows: "Do as you would be done by"—Persian. "Do not that to a neighbor which you would take ill from him"—Ancient Greek. "What you would not that men should do to you, take care and do not to them"—Chinese. "One should seek for others the things one desires for one's self"—Buddhist. "Seek for others the good you seek for yourself"—Egyptian. "Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated"—Mohammedan. "Whatsoever you do not wish your neighbor to do to you, do not unto him"—Jewish.—New York American.

HONESTY.

I was sitting at my desk when black Sam, who sometimes waits on me at my restaurant, entered my office.
"What can I do for you, Sam?" I asked.
"Ah got a chance to change mah situation, Missch Clahk," he said. "Yo' kin see a good w'd fo' me, can't yo'?"
"Of course," I hesitated, "you are a good w'd for Sam, but I don't know anything specially about your honesty."
"Well, tell 'em dat, an' say yo' thinks Ah'm honest. Dat'll be enough."
"So I promised I would."
"Thank yo', thank yo', Missch Clahk," he said, with a deep bow. "When yo' come over tomorrow, sit at mah table an' Ah'll give yo' a sho't check."

SAVED A STAMPEDE.

It was at this juncture that the clever little Murray Crane loomed up larger than Boles Benrose and called a halt. "You are getting too nervous," said Crane. "I see because a half a dozen had men and eight or ten more pretty good ones want a few little changes made in this bill, you think the country is going to pieces. Listen! It is not. We shan't have that call on Roosevelt in 1912 and we won't elect too many democrats next fall if you gentlemen just keep your nerve and help us pull this thing through. Now line up for Taft, the republican party and the sanctity of your homes, and let me count you."

are usually set in trenches, although this is not absolutely necessary. They are set about six inches apart in rows three feet apart. Celery needs a rich soil and plenty of shallow cultivation. After the plants are well grown, the stems should be drawn up tightly together and banded up with dirt in order to bleed the stalks and make them tender. This banding up should be done gradually, adding a little more dirt each time.

Twenty Nine Years Old.

The South Weymouth Improvement Association was organized twenty nine years ago with forty members and the late Dr. C. C. Tower was its first president. It was not like many other organizations of its kind, a thing of a day, but it has grown and is now growing in numbers and each year doing what the word improvement implies and can now invite the world to one of the prettiest villages on the map.

The twenty ninth anniversary of this organization was observed and celebrated in a large opera house, Wednesday evening, and like the other efforts of the association was a success.

A large group of ladies under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Nash, Mrs. A. B. Taylor, Mrs. G. W. Conant and Miss Lizzy Moore served an excellent supper at the hall of the opera house, and after a few minutes of singing and a few minutes of dancing, the program was over.

An orchestra composed of P. Finnara, violin, H. E. Marshall, piano, J. P. Gaskell, cello, and Kenneth Torrey, clarinet, gave a fine concert program before and during the banquet which concluded at 8 o'clock when H. B. Reed, the president, opened the program with a few words and after a few minutes of singing and a few minutes of dancing, the program was over.

Obituary, Edmund G. Bates.
We stated briefly last week that the threads of life which connected Edmund G. Bates to earth had parted and the end of the journey was reached. With more time to write a sketch we now give some details of that life.

Mr. Bates was one of thirteen children born to Jacob and Nancy L. Bates and began his life in June 1833. At the early age of 14 years he left school and entered on his life work in the general store of Weymouth. For a few years his work was general and then he was placed in charge of the Dry Goods department and made a specialty of it remaining in charge for about 15 years when he embarked in a similar business for himself and conducted it most successfully until over 40 years of age when he was afflicted with paralysis.

While devoting himself, perhaps too closely, to his business, society was not without interest in his social, political and social affairs. Brought up in the Congregational church he was always a worker for it and a liberal contributor to its financial needs. Mr. Bates took special interest in the Weymouth Savings Bank, a member of its Board of Trustees and Board of Investment.

Deceased was a member of Crescent Lodge, O. E. F., Orlinpha Hope Lodge, F. & A. M., Temple Chapter R. A. M., South Shore Commandery K. T. and Alpha Temple Mystic Shrine A. A. O. N. M. S. of Boston and was for nearly forty years treasurer of South Shore Commandery.

Funeral and burial took place Sunday afternoon with a brief service at the house after which the remains were conveyed to the Congregational church where extended exercises were held.

Rev. Edward Norton, the acting pastor, and Rev. E. L. Bradford officiating. South Shore Commandery and Crescent Lodge attended as organizations and at the close of the other services the Commandery ritual was rendered by Em. Com. Arthur W. Burr, Prelate Levent W. Bates and Rev. Edward H. Cain. The Temple quartet of Boston, assisted in all the services and following are their several selections: "Eternal Goodness," "Some Blessed Day," "Calvary" and "My Heavenly Home." The burial was at Fairmount Cemetery and the bearers were N. D. Canterbury, G. M. Hoyt, W. P. Denbroeder, C. H. Rice, B. P. French and H. E. Raymond.

Mr. Bates married Jane B. Bicknell of East Weymouth with whom he spent nearly forty-four years of life and she with other of the thirteen brothers and sisters survive him, viz., Deacon David W. and Samuel N. Bates of East Weymouth and Helen, wife of Marcellus Clouman of Boston.

Shoe Industry.
Every ray of sunshine is valuable to the retail shoe dealer for it encourages customers to believe that there will be days ahead when the natty new oxford shoes can be worn, and as the trend of taste is strongly toward the low-cut shoe there are large quantities of them in the stores to be sold.

Salmon-fish that the situation improves but little. The weather is the controlling influence. Retailers had in large supplies of summer goods and the season opened early and promised well. The emphatic reversal of normal conditions in April and the early part of this month put such a damper on the sale of low shoes that the dealers have had little heart to think of the next season, and still less of any duplications or re-orders for the present season. The balance of trade has been upset, and the volume of business done is very disappointing.

Other factors are favorable to trade, and dealers are feeling the effects of the stagnant market and few are well-provided with orders. Mail orders and salesmen's results are being received, but the quantities are small, and the hand-to-mouth method of conducting business seems to be increasing among shoe men.

Production of medium and staple grades of men's shoes is quiet, and the situation of women's and children's lines is much the same. Samples now being shown by salesmen are for next spring, and dealers are ordering samples, but going no further. On the other hand, the better grades of men's shoes in demand in both men's and women's lines. The business situation in the middle part of the country has bettered as the prospects of good crops have improved. Factories are becoming more active, but have not yet reached their limits. There is a belief in better things ahead.

A comparison of cash-shippments from Boston shows that more shoes were sent out in 1902 than during the corresponding period in 1910. The purchase of shoes in 1902 was more liberal than it is today. Prices were lower and the people could afford more shoes per capita. The cost of shoes having largely increased, dealers now take them largely as they believe they can dispose of them, and consumers have learned to get more wear out of their shoes. This is possible because shoes have to be more durably made than a few years ago.

Another factor is the increased number of shoes produced in the country, the possible output today being greater than in 1902, but, with the wear of shoes more carefully guarded, factories are not producing to capacity and large investments in idle machinery must be covered by the production which necessarily shows a larger cost.

The whole industry being conducted on more conservative lines, though the number of shoe-wearers in this country is increasing in spite of the fact that the shipments of shoes from Boston are smaller. The boot and shoe industry is affected by the blighting influence of the cost of high living and the corresponding restricted use of leather—Boston Transcript.

A Surgeon's Story
He Saw the First Part of a Drama and Was an Actor in the Second Part.
By BEVERLY WORTHINGTON.
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I am a surgeon, and my home is in Florence, Italy. As a young man I studied at a college of physicians and surgeons in my native country, America, but, possessing a taste for art, concluded to change my profession.

Coming here to Florence, I studied art for awhile, but soon saw that I did not possess the talent necessary to make an artist. Having fallen in love with this delightful city, I remained here, and my study was painting.

One night I attended a ball at the Pitti palace. It was my first appearance among the aristocracy of Florence, and I was much interested in watching the people there. A young girl with a gentleman attendant on each side of her walked by me. The appearance of the three told a story. The man on her left was young, handsome, in every way attractive. He on her right was past middle age and disagreeable looking as the other was engaging. As they passed me he gave the younger man a malignant look. The girl appeared to be much troubled.

It was plain that her heart was with the man on her left, that she was constrained to choose the man on her right, and that the two men hated each other on her account.

"Everywhere," I remarked to myself, "the stream of life is troubled. To be rich, to be prominent, does not render one any stronger or more disagreeable. Happy love has evidently come to this young girl, to be interfered with by one who, judging from her expression, has some claim upon her. How I should like to know the story!"

As I thought the last words I little dreamed that within a few hours a climax would come in the drama being enacted by these three persons and that I would come upon the stage for a minor part. When I left the palace I went directly to my room.

The business situation in the middle part of the country has bettered as the prospects of good crops have improved. Factories are becoming more active, but have not yet reached their limits. There is a belief in better things ahead.

A comparison of cash-shippments from Boston shows that more shoes were sent out in 1902 than during the corresponding period in 1910. The purchase of shoes in 1902 was more liberal than it is today. Prices were lower and the people could afford more shoes per capita. The cost of shoes having largely increased, dealers now take them largely as they believe they can dispose of them, and consumers have learned to get more wear out of their shoes. This is possible because shoes have to be more durably made than a few years ago.

Another factor is the increased number of shoes produced in the country, the possible output today being greater than in 1902, but, with the wear of shoes more carefully guarded, factories are not producing to capacity and large investments in idle machinery must be covered by the production which necessarily shows a larger cost.

The whole industry being conducted on more conservative lines, though the number of shoe-wearers in this country is increasing in spite of the fact that the shipments of shoes from Boston are smaller. The boot and shoe industry is affected by the blighting influence of the cost of high living and the corresponding restricted use of leather—Boston Transcript.

Weymouth Remembers Those Who Rallied in Defence of the Flag.

The presidential campaign of the year 1850 was the most stirring in the history of the country. It was in fact the great fight between the slavery and anti-slavery factions of the country with the anti-slavery factions the winners and Abraham Lincoln elected and on the following fourth of March he was duly installed but that was not all.

Many southern members of Congress withdrew and went home; secession was in the air and one state after another followed South Carolina in the movement. The first gun of the fearful war of '61 to '65 was fired on Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor, early in April and war was on. Lincoln called for defenders and the North was at once in arms with the belief that the strife would be but a brief one, but before its end more than a million and a half of the best men of the North saw service in many a hard fought battle and thousands gave their lives in defence of the flag.

Victory and peace at last came and the tired and worn remnant of the army returned to their homes but not to forget those who had left behind nor the ties which had bound the living together for all time; and by which has been secured the most noble fraternal organizations in existence and the sponsor for "Memorial Day."

"Memorial Day" for the current year has never been a deeper interest taken in it throughout the land than that of the past. The Grand Army has as co-workers, the Women's Relief Corps No. 102, James W. Bates Camp Sons of Veterans, Ladies Auxiliary to S. V., Dorothea Dix Tent, D. of V., the entire school boys, teachers and scholars, and many in general. Preparations were early made by Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R. and none of their will had plans went astray. Beginning with Friday last, the schools took the leading part with exercises at the Athens school at North Weymouth; the Adams at the Heights; the High school, Jefferson, Washington, and the Hunt, Lincoln and Tufts at the Landing; the Shaw at Natick Corner; the Pratt in Ward 4 and the Bates, Howe, Pond and Hollis at South Weymouth.

By invitation of Rev. H. H. Cochrane of the Union church of Weymouth and Braintree the usual Sunday Grand Army services were held in that church and Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R. turned out in one of its largest representations for the occasion. Special cars were necessary to convey the veterans and their escorts from the other parts of Weymouth, who formed a most impressive line as they marched into the church. The members of the G. A. R. were escorted by the James W. Bates Camp, No. 26, Sons of Veterans; the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary, No. 21, at North Weymouth; the D. V. Tent, No. 32, Daughters of Veterans and Reynolds Corps, No. 102, Women's Relief Corps. The veterans with their escorting bodies made a brave sight, and one that appealed to every heart, and made every heart beat proudly throughout the morning's services, and the gallant survivors of the Civil War, and had sent one man out of every seven of the population into the army for the defence of the Union.

The church was packed with these patriotic organizations and the friends who had gathered to do them honor. The church was packed with these patriotic organizations and the friends who had gathered to do them honor. The church was packed with these patriotic organizations and the friends who had gathered to do them honor.

Among the most appropriate musical selections rendered were, "Welcome Grand Army," composed by Miss Annie F. Lound of Weymouth, sung as an anthem by the entire choir and quartette, and also Kyling's Recessional, "Let us forget" sung at the close of the address. The two selections by the quartette and Mr. Murphy's solo, "My Own United States," were also very much appreciated.

The pastor's text was from Ex. 12:14—"This day shall be unto you for a memorial; and when you shall keep it, you shall keep it forever." And after welcoming the G. A. R. and touching upon the paths of their rapidly thinning ranks (a veteran of forty seven years of age, who had served for nearly four years in the war of 1861 to '65) he spoke of the awful price paid for freedom and the glorious results achieved. The volume of prayer was melodious and well rendered, and also Kyling's Recessional, "Let us forget" sung at the close of the address. The two selections by the quartette and Mr. Murphy's solo, "My Own United States," were also very much appreciated.

The grand finale of the day was a soul stirring one. "The Star Spangled Banner," Miss Dean on the solo, quartette, band and packed audience in the grand chorus. Long live the "Star Spangled Banner" and memory of the men who wore the Blue from '61 to '65.

The dress parade which was held in the athletic field as viewed from the balcony of the building and surrounding view points was a beautiful affair and then then open air work of the officers and men was done and all adjourned to the hall for the final program which was a brief address by Commander Drake in which he spoke of "The Grand Army of the Republic which had no counterpart among the nations of the world and no nation could produce a more noble and patriotic people." A quartette composed of Miss Annie F. Lound, I. A. Bicknell, J. M. Whitcomb and Oliver Burdell sang "America" with telling effect and were followed by P. I. Waldo Turner who read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. W. R. C. President Mrs. Loring gave that popular poem by Moses Owen "Return of the Battle Lines" and then came a short address by Mr. Bradford, who again welcomed the people to the building and grounds spoke feelingly of the interest Mr. Clapp took in the G. A. R. and the boys and young men who were growing up around him and urged a hearty cooperation in the work mapped out.

BANKER BANK ACCOUNTS.

In Schoenberg, a suburb of Berlin, every baby is born with a banking account. No Schoenberg baby can help this even if it wants to. The municipal regulations provide that whenever the birth of a child is recorded the officials of the municipal savings bank shall issue a bank book in the said baby's name. The city itself then deposits 1 mark (about 25 cents) and immediately allows interest. With this nest egg the authorities believe that the parents of the child will be encouraged in thrift and that the baby will have a fair start on the road to wealth. No withdrawals are allowed in less than two years, and the ordinance applies to all children, whether they are members of poor families or descended from millionaires. Babies are popular in Schoenberg.

VICTOR HUGO'S EARLY DAYS.

Victor Hugo was at the time of his death the wealthiest of 19th century authors. In his younger days, however, he knew the pangs of poverty, as after a quarrel with his father, General Hugo, he and his brother had their allowances stopped. One chop would serve for luncheon three days in succession; on the first day we would eat the lean, on the second day the fat and the third day we would such the bone. We discovered a place in the Quartier Latin where for 15 sous (15 cents) we obtained a four-course savoury dinner and as much as we could eat. For another son we obtained the sweetest of smiles from the pretty girl who looked after us. This regime does not appear to have spoiled Hugo's digestion, for at the age of 83 he cracked nuts with his teeth and ate oranges as some people eat apples—peel and all.—Chicago News.

Mighty In Titles.

The ruler of Turkey, in addition to the titles sultan and kha-khan (high prince and lord of lords), also claims sovereignty over most districts, towns, cities and states in the orient, specifying each by name and setting out in each of his various titles "all the forts, citadels, palaces and neighborhood thereof" in regular legal form. His official designation ends, "Sovereign also of diverse nations, states, peoples and races on the face of the earth." All this is in addition to his high position as "head of the faithful" and "supreme lord of all the followers of the prophet," "direct and only lieutenant on earth of Mohammed."

ON THE FARM

This column is worth more than $200 a year to you. Subscribe for the Gazette.

The State Board of Agriculture includes in its crop report for May, recently issued, an article on "Corn Selection for Seed and for Show," by Prof. William D. Hurd of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. There is to be a great corn exposition at Worcester, November 7 to 12, 1910, the first exclusive corn show ever held in New England. Owing to the interest in this show and also in the question of corn growing from a commercial standpoint the Board has thought best to publish this article at this time. Copies can be obtained by applying to J. Lewis Ellsworth, Sec. State Board of Agriculture, Boston, and those requesting it will have their names placed on the permanent mailing list to receive these reports in future.

"The renewed interest in corn growing is a significant thing in New England agriculture. When corn could be laid down 'on track' in the east for 20 cents a bushel there may have been some excuse for the New England farmer depending on the 'corn belt' for this important product. For the past ten years, however, the price in the eastern States has ranged from 70 to 90 cents a bushel. Careful calculations show that corn can be raised on New England farms at a cost of from 30 to 45 cents per bushel (shelled), hence it is a profitable crop to raise. The fact that corn is adapted to almost any rotation, that it is indispensable in feeding a dairy herd, that this crop is extensively used in the arts and manufactures, always finding a ready market, and its being a native of New England are further reasons why this most important crop in this country should be more extensively grown here."

Prof. Hurd then proceeds to emphasize the point that there is a wide difference between average yields and those obtained by careful growers. This he attributes in a large measure to seed selection, and proceeds to show how seed should be selected, with what points in mind and for what purposes. Methods of improving the quality of the corn crop, of curing and storing for seed, and testing for germination are described. He further says that the fact that this year a great corn exposition will be held in New England, where selection and preparation for samples will count, is a sufficient reason for emphasizing these points.

He gives score cards for both Flint and Dent varieties. Weight in varying proportions is given in these cards to the following points,—maturity and seed condition, uniformity, kernels, weight of ear, length of ear and proportion, butts, tips, space between the rows, and color. What should be sought for under each of these heads is fully explained.

Prof. Hurd says in closing that it is just as allowable to "groom" an exhibit of corn and otherwise make it look well for exhibition purposes as it is to place animals in "show condition," and gives a short explanation of how this should be done.

There should be a good showing of Weymouth grown corn at Worcester, Ed.

Parly's Fate on One Vote.

Instances are common enough in elections when a single vote turns the scale, but few are so dramatic as that of Parly's fate on one vote. A majority of one in parliament, which may logically depend on a majority of one in the election, has decided some of the most important results possible. The classic example is the act of union of 1706, certainly among the largest, most important and most remarkable changes ever accomplished by a legislative body. One hundred and six voted for it and 105 against. Then a majority of one carried the great reform.

Parly writes only a little bigger have again and again been responsible for far-reaching consequences. A majority of five threw out the Melbourne government in 1829. By the same figure Lord John Russell's government was defeated in 1855. Gladstone went out of office in 1873 because he lacked one vote, and the public education passed, was placed on the statute book by a majority of two.—London Chronicle.

Wild Dogs of Asia.

The whole tribe of wild dogs, which in closely allied forms are to be found in the widest jungles and woods of Asia, from the Himalayas to Ceylon and from China to the Taurus—unless the "golden wolves" of the Roman empire are now extinct in the forests of Asia Minor—show an individual and a high place among the most daring of wild creatures. The "red dogs," to give them their most characteristic name, are neither large in size nor do they assemble in large packs. Those which have been from time to time measured and described seem to average some three feet in length from the nose to the root of the tail. The pack seldom numbers more than nine or ten, yet there is sufficient evidence that they are willing and able to destroy any creature that inhabits the jungle, except the adult elephant and perhaps the rhinoceros, creatures whose great size and leathery hide make them almost invulnerable to such enemies as dogs.—London Spectator.

London's Big Ben.

Why is the large bell in the tower of the house of parliament in London called Big Ben? The average Londoner himself seems to have no idea how it got its name. When the building was designed Sir Benjamin Hall had a great deal to do with carrying out the great deal of the architects, being high commissioner of public works, and his coworkers appreciated the fact that to him the city of London was largely indebted. So when the question came up in parliament as to the name of the enormous bell that was to be hung in the tower a member shouted, "Why not call it Big Ben?" This suggestion was received with much applause as well as with roars of laughter, for Sir Benjamin was an enormous man, both in height and girth, and had often been called Big Ben. From that day on the bell whose peal every Londoner knows has been known only as Big Ben.

THIRTY YEARS AGO. Grand parade of the Weymouth Fire Department, June 5. Reception and trial of the new Eaton Steamer No. 1. April was Weymouth featured with a lovely day, when the sun rose Saturday morning, the 5th, to irradiate many a shirt of red and white on leathern helm and burnished brass. Oppressed by no undertone of sadness as was Saturday a week before, the voice of the people on this day could be raised in jubilation over an event which for its period covered the exciting topic of the Chicago Convention clean out of sight. In accordance with the program of the Board of Engineers, published last week, a procession was the first thing in order, and the fire engines and companies were assembled at the Weymouth railway station on time, and a train to casual and the usual delays incident to parades in general, the column did not move till after 11 A. M., when the line proceeded in the following order: Chief Marshal, J. T. Pease. "Old Mortality" and "Old Engine" 21 pieces. Hardscrabble Hook and Ladder Co. Conqueror Engine Co. Resolute Hook and Ladder Co. Gen. Putnam Engine and Company Temple Drum Corps. Gen. Bates Engine and Company Hingham Brass Band "Old Mortality" Co. Eureka Hose and Ladder Co. Active Engine. Marlin's Band. Steamer No. 1, and Company. Two officials, invited guests, and Citizens generally. The machines were beautifully decorated with bouquets and garlands. "Old Mortality" and "Old Engine" were in the lead, followed by the fire engines, and the whole fire department by its derivative mottoes, viz., "Hands off, newly varnished," "Always ready, but not reliable," "Our first investment, old junk," "Win or bust," and the banner, "Active only in appropriating property." The tub of "Old Engine" was full of water, and unable to join in the procession, the horses suddenly taking flight at the depot, when the bands struck up, and running across the track the pole was broken, discharging the engine. A good number of dwellings and business places were decorated with flags, etc., and as the procession passed over the designated route the scene presented was one of peculiar brilliancy. Moving through Commercial street and Washington square, up front to Summer and Federal streets, thence down Washington street, the procession counter-marched in the Square, where it was met by the Board of Engineers and invited guests, who were stationed on the steps of the Catholic church, returned to Lincoln Square, where a collation had been prepared in Clapp's Hall, about 500 plates being laid in the main hall, gallery and banquet room. Mr. John B. H. Williams was chairman of the collation committee, and the other members and assistants were Mrs. Harrington Smith, Mrs. J. R. H. Williams, Miss Nettie Busby, Mattie Wood, Harriet White, Susie Cushing, Messrs. Darius Smith, Capt. A. Lane, Harrington Smith, Albert Smith, N. O. Smith, Henry Stoddard, A. O. Smith, W. F. Hines and Oscar Tower. THE TRIAL. This was the next event of the day, and the steamer being taken from the house to the reservoir in Lincoln Square, at 2:21 the fire was lighted. At 2:26 three lbs. of steam was indicated, at 2:27 five lbs., at 2:28 water appeared at the pipe, with twenty lbs. pressure, and playing proceeded. At 2:31 there was thirty-five lbs. pressure, at 2:32 sixty lbs., at 2:33 eighty lbs., at 2:35 ninety-five lbs., the water pressure being 35 to 42 lbs. The scene was a novel one for this town as the steamer, puffed, snorted, and belched forth a cloud of smoke that enveloped in its dense folds the front of the adjacent engine house; but the water came fast and furious, first through 2000 feet of hose, then through two lines of 1000 feet each, closing with playing four streams, two nozzles being attached to each line. In the latter trial water from each of the four nozzles was delivered over the engine house, and had not the reservoir emptied just as the steamer was ready to do her prettiest, the four streams would have overtopped the highest on the house. More water being needed for further test, the steamer was transferred to the reservoir at Stetson street, and another play made, which was highly satisfactory. About 4:10 P. M. the General Bates engine, which had been parked with the other tubs in the schoolhouse yard, was hauled to the street, and took the steamer's water, the hose being attached to the work with extra vim and getting away in good shape with the torrent of water which deluged the tub continually, the engine playing three streams. But muscle and steam is a hopeless contest when the brawny arms become fatigued, and as no other company appeared to continue the contest, the famous "Old Engine" being up in a rag for fear of injury to the variator. Mr. Button desired to further instruct the engineer, Mr. Michael Griffin, in his duty, and remained in town until Monday afternoon. The Steamer was taken to the wharf known as Jackson's, Monday forenoon, and fixed up for a play, Mr. Griffin taking charge under direction of Mr. Button, and convincing the latter that Mr. G. is the right man in the right place. One of the agreeable incidents of the afternoon was the appearance of Z. L. Bicknell, Esq., Chief Engineer, with a check for the full amount of charge for the engine, $83.00, which Mr. Button accepted with thanks for this assurance of perfect satisfaction with his machine on the part of the Board of Engineers, and he departed. Firemen's Relief Memorial. The Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association will observe next Sunday as a Memorial Day to the departed members of the order. In the early part of the forenoon graves of the dead of Ward 2 will be decorated by detail from their several localities and at 9 o'clock all will assemble at the Engine House in Ward 2 where a line will be formed and proceed to Fairmount Cemetery and pay tribute to those whose mortal remains are resting there, after which a line of march will be taken for the Methodist church where memorial exercises will be held with sermon by the pastor, Rev. G. D. Scribner. Flowers for decoration may be left at any of the Engine Houses, Saturday evening or early Sunday morning and any for special graves will be so placed if properly marked. How's This? A Psychological Wonder Or Was it a Matter of Contagious Disease? By GEORGE L. BYINGTON Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"How did the window get broken, sir?" "I don't know. I didn't know it was broken." "I saw the blood on the right arm of your nightshirt." "I saw the broken window and the blood and was taken all aback." "What does it mean?" I asked. "The sack was nailed, sir," was the only reply. I arose, dressed myself and went straight down to my uncle, finding him at breakfast. He looked astonished to see me, and I told him that I had not gone home, but had slept in the hexagonal house. He started. "Well," he asked eagerly, "I gave him my experience. When I had finished he arose from the table and paced the floor." "What do you think about the broken window and blood on my night-shirt?" I asked. "Have you the nerve to hear how you have narrowly escaped death?" "Yes, I have." "Well, then, listen. The last man who lived in the hexagonal house was one who had lost his reason. He fancied himself to be Napoleon I. One morning his body was found under the window of the house you slept in." "Great heavens!" I exclaimed, with a shudder. "My uncle went to the telephone and called up Professor Starkweather of the University of D., located a few miles distant, and conversed with him, after which I was informed that several of the professors would be down within an hour to take my statement." "I was too shaken up to eat any breakfast, so I went and walked in the garden till the professors arrived. They took me into a room and heard my story from beginning to end. Then Professor Starkweather asked me some questions. "Have you read much of Napoleon's life?" he asked. "Nothing but a little history, which I have forgotten." "Did you know that Napoleon believed that the English were poisoning him while he was at St. Helena?" "No." "Did you know who was with him there?" "No." "Did you know that Constant was Napoleon's valet and that he carried a bag supposed to contain poison with which Napoleon tried to commit suicide just before his abdication at Fontainebleau?" "No." "Did you know that in 1840 King Louis Philippe brought Napoleon's body to France from St. Helena and that the Napoleon enthusiasm excited largely by the revolution which dethroned that king and made Louis Napoleon president?" "No." "You know that Napoleon's shooting at the Duke d'Enghien concentrated the European powers against him?" "No." "Gentlemen," said Professor Starkweather to his colleagues, "it's a clear case of reincarnation." "Rather," said Professor Markland, dean of the medical college, "it proves that insanity may be certain, and a brain disease and that the germs of the patient who had formerly inhabited the room worked upon this young man." "Why, then, has he recovered so suddenly?" "Insanity in any event is affected by pure air, sunlight and other revivifying causes. The young man had not exposed long enough to enable the germs to get a permanent foothold." "But how do you account for the knowledge the young man did not previously have of events in the life of Napoleon?" "Psychologically considered, I admit my position is weak, but you must remember that there is such a thing as a traumatic neurosis. Lowering the part of the problem is in your field rather than in mine. We study the body, you the soul." "There is one point in the story that looks suspicious," said Professor Bunker. "Napoleon calls on Constant. Constant was not at St. Helena." "That may be explained," replied Professor Starkweather, "by the fact that Napoleon was near his end and likely delirious. He had formerly called on Constant for everything." "While they were wrangling four members of the faculty of the university arrived, and all agreed that my statement should be taken down at once while the impression was fresh on my mind. They were wrangling out an order that I would have countermanded had I known in time. They were always in a hurry to obey me when I wished them to be slow. Go back, I say, or if you must haunt your stayers turn to him who blundered, I hate him, as you do. In shooting you will be concentrated Europe and cost me my throne. It put me here on this desolate island to die a lingering death." "Gone! I can't stand this. I must end it. How? My razor? My razor has it. A rope? I have none. With a knife I must die. I will try the knife I have. Shall I get it? Twice I tried when about to fall from the top of my self built pyramid, and twice I failed. Fate has never deceived me. Fate has never deceived my case on consecutive days. Fate will not let me take my own life. Nevertheless I can try." "Constant will get the knife for me." "None answered." "I lay deliberating whether I should end it all or let my disease finish me till I fell asleep." "Then I dreamed that it was all over. I was in a casket perched upon an immense funeral car, passing down the Champs d'Elysee. The sidewalks, the windows, the house-tops were all crowded with vast throngs of people who as I passed uncovered, some of them waving, some crossing themselves, all excitedly lamenting. Ah, my French people, without your native enthusiasm I could not have navigated Europe!" "But this Bourbon king! Fool! How dare he reawaken that spirit which has been slowly dying? Let him look out for his throne. It is more tottering than this casket away up where it sways with every rut in the street. Well, my body is in the invalids. Now I may rest." "I was awakened by a slight noise and opened my eyes. It was morning. The caretaker had come into my room and was setting down a pitcher of hot water. I was myself. But I had a crazy feeling from the crown of my head to the sole of my feet as if I had been kept hauled." "Not feelin' very well this mornin', sir," remarked the caretaker. "No, I've had an ugly dream."

Our Washington Letter. Washington, June 6, 1910. Charles Dyer Norton of Chicago, President Taft's new private secretary, is proving himself to be equal to the situation. His strength is attributed to the fact that he combines a faculty for mastering details with an ability to see a subject in its broad general outlines. He has a keen mind and retentive memory. His diplomacy is of the kind that is firmly rooted in the conviction that it is better to persuade a man to act as one wishes than to force him to do so. There is in his keen glance an undisturbed self-poise that suggests that he has the vinegar in liberal quantities, but not until his entire stock of molasses is exhausted will he make use of it. At present he realizes that what the Taft administration needs is friends, not enemies, and no official is credited with making more converts for the administration. As soon as Congress met Mr. Norton was almost daily at the capital explaining legislation drafted by the administration to the Treasury Department. His arguments were telling, too. Twice he appeared before the Senate committee on finance, of which Senator Nelson W. Aldrich is chairman. Here again he "made good." Ex-Gov. John L. Bates of Massachusetts made a long argument Friday, before the house committee on the industrial and foreign commerce in opposition to the bill creating a department of public health. The sundry civil bill, carrying appropriations of more than $10,000,000 was passed by the house the same day. Interstate Commerce, Commissioner Prouty, for information of the public, June 22 in the complaints filed with the commission some time ago by the W. L. Douglas Shoe company against the Adams Express company. Representative Weeks will have a hearing in a few days before the rules committee on his resolution providing that the forestry bill shall be made a special order for consideration in the house at an early date. Mr. Weeks says he expects to get a rule and pass the bill before congress adjourns. The resolution recently introduced in the house, calling on the War Department for information as to the military strength of the coast defenses, may find its answer in the report which the army general staff, after nearly two years' work has prepared. The report has not yet been made public, but it may be said without fear of contradiction that it will declare that "the army of the United States is too small and totally unprepared for war and the nation's elaborate system of coast forts is practically useless owing to lack of adequate provision for defence of the rear of the fortifications. For the first time since the present session of Congress began, the "regular" Republican leaders of the House are confident that they will be able to put an important piece of legislation through the House without amendment. They announce that they are assured of sufficient votes on the majority side to bring in a special rule for the passage of the postal savings bank bill, practically in the same form that it came from the Republican caucus. A credit caucus has been formed of the Republican side by the organization leaders and it is stated positively that such "regulars" and "insurgents" would support such a rule to secure its adoption. Obituary, Martin Derby. After a short illness Mr. Martin Derby, one of South Weymouth's oldest and most respected citizens quietly passed away at his home on Pond street last Friday afternoon. Mr. Derby was born in South Weymouth on October 13, 1829 and was the son of Captain Martin Derby and Mary (Burrell) Derby. In 1853, manufactured boots and shoes in Dover, Massachusetts, with Mr. Nichols, the firm being known as Derby and Nichols and in later years had been employed in the shops of his native town. He was a man who had little to say and was well liked by all with whom he came in contact, either in business or in home life. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Ann Francis (Battelle) Derby, one son and one daughter, Alvin Prescott Derby of Natick and Mrs. Isabelle Francis Burrell of this town, also two sisters, Mrs. Charlott Burne Wales of Pasadena, California and Mrs. Mary Francis Doble of Riverside, California. Funeral services were held at his late home on Pond street, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. Harold C. Gale of Boston. Miss Annie Deane of this place sang "Face to Face" and "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. Relatives were present from Dover, Brookline, Needham, Campello, Bridgewater and all the neighboring towns. The pall bearers were Ellis J. Pitcher, Leonard Curtis, Charles Humble and Leonard Shaw all residents of this place and E. H. Reynolds of Mr. Derby. Deane's Rheumatic Pills for Rheumatism and Neuralgia. Entirely vegetable. Safe.

THE MONTENEGRIN.

He is Hospitable, but Dearly Loves the Weep. To listen to a Balkan singing is to make one's flesh creep or want to weep. The centuries of cruel oppression are only too manifest in Bulgarian music and words, but a Montenegrin grows restless over his songs and curses the powers that be for his condition. He is a man of the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes.

—The Montenegrin goes riding across the border it is really a more sporting affair than the well equipped and organized outfits of the Balkan "Comitachis." With him it is usually a life time of revenge or vendetta to which he invites one or two friends. Then they steal across the border at night, and then, man and dog, they begin to kill and then take to the hills. The Montenegrin is a man of the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes.

THE HORSE.

His Appeal to His Master For Humane Treatment. To thee, my master, I offer my prayer. Feed me and take care of me. Be kind to me and I will be kind to thee. Do not whip me when going uphill.

—Never strike, beat or kick me when I fall to understand what you want of me, but give me a chance to get up. Stand by me when I am down, and if I refuse to do your bidding seek my horse, I will do something wrong with my harness.

—Do not give me too heavy loads. Never over-hitch me where water will drip on me and with the wheels. Examine my teeth when I fall to eat. I may have an ulcerated foot. That, you know, is very painful. I am unable to tell you in words when I am sick, so when you are in a hurry, I will tell you by signs.

—Pet me sometimes. I enjoy it, and I will learn to love you. Protect me in summer from the hot sun. Keep me in a stable on me in winter weather, and never put a frosty bit in my mouth, but hold it in your hands a moment first.

—I cannot tell you when I am thirsty; give me clean, cool water often in hot weather. Finally, when my strength is gone, instead of turning me over to a human brute to be tortured and starved, take my life in the easiest, quickest way, and your God will reward you in the next life. Amen.

—The Swedish in "Our Dumb Animals."

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Weymouth Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness, when in reality it is a kidney trouble. It is well known that a weak back is a sign of kidney trouble. It is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Weymouth people testify to the value of Doan's Kidney Pills.

—Peter E. Burns, 21 Granite street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "I was a great sufferer from backache and had to give up work for more than six weeks for me to get on my feet. It was hard for me to assume an erect position either after stooping or sitting for some time and I also had trouble from the kidney troubles, the everything being too frequent. Although I tried everything I heard of, I received no permanent relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from the Weymouth Pharmacy. At the end of three weeks not a single symptom of kidney complaint remained. I cannot praise Doan's Kidney Pills too highly in return for the benefit I have derived from their use."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

ON THE FARM
This column is worth more than $2.00 a year to you. Subscribe for the Gazette.
The farmer now gets for his hogs, alive and including the hoof, just double the amount that he was very glad to get a few years ago.
As high as $25 per 100 is sometimes paid for live toads by English and French gardeners. The toad is a highly appreciated personage in foreign gardens. Shelters are made for the toads—shallow holes in the ground, covered with flat stones or boards. The toads will retire into these in the daytime and come forth at dusk for their nightly insect forays.
Splendid prospects for fruit in New England and the Pacific Coast States are most comforting to the poor showing of the Central States, where early frost got in some telling work, according to a report made public by the Department of Agriculture on general crop growth.
It is more important to know that there is little difference between successful alfalfa growing and the successful growing of other crops. Poor farming, never brings big crops nor will poor land produce as big yields as the more fertile. Failure to restore to the soil the necessary elements of which it has been robbed means the same in New York, Kansas, Virginia or anywhere else.
The high price of pork has stimulated interest in raising all over the country. Many Eastern farmers that have had no hogs on their farms for years are looking around for pigs and improved stock for breeding purposes. Even village people are turning their attention to hog raising as a backyard industry.
Oats make mussels and at the same time supplies vim and vigor, some heat and some force, while a surplus is capable of being stored up in the tissues as fat and nitrogenous matter to be drawn upon under extra stress. Corn, on the other hand, is in the animal economy mainly for the manufacturing of heat and the surplus all goes to form heat fat.
It is a fact that it is better to tend a small piece of ground and tend it well than to plant large fields and only half cultivate them. This principle can also be applied to pig raising. It is better to feed ten pigs and feed them well than it is to feed twenty and only half feed them. The pig that makes profitable gains is the one that has all the feed that can consume and grows vigorously without stint or check from start to finish.
A heavy draft horse should be long-ribbed. If a horse is short-ribbed, he is light in his middle and nearly always a poor feeder. His stomach is too small to contain enough feed to serve him from meal to another. When put into hard work he generally has a fagged-out appearance. A light-centered horse seldom weighs well and weight in a draft horse, if it comes from bone, sinew and muscle, goes a long way toward determining his commercial value.
The new paper book for milk is attracting some attention. It is shaped something like a jelly glass and made of stiff paper paraffined and waterproof, and folded in such a way as to protect parts through which leakage could occur. Cost is expected to be small and the bottles are to be thrown away after once being used thus saving labor of cleaning and insuring a fresh bottle each time.
To feed newly hatched chickens all they will eat will nearly always result in bowel or other trouble. Their digestive organs are very small, and it does not take much feed to overload them. A teaspoonful of food for from a dozen to twenty chicks is enough at one time. Never give them all they will eat but just enough so that they will still be hungry and be active in scratching around for more.
The poultry house should be only high enough for the keeper to stand erect, any greater space being a waste and making the house colder in winter. The house floor space per hen if the fowls are yarded well the fowls on free range may get on with somewhat less space. The milder the climate the less indoor accommodations will be required by the hen.
After fruit trees come in bearing, the best fertilizer is some form of potash. Wood ashes cannot be excellent for fruit trees as they also contain large proportions of lime. Orchards that are in grass should be plowed occasionally and some kind of hoe crop grown therein, in order to keep the ground clean and loosen the soil; but the land should be heavily manured or fertilizer liberally applied as the soil cannot provide for two crops—fruit and grass or grain—without an abundance of plant food.
There is no better fodder ration for dairy cows than clover and corn. In determining the amount of grain to feed, two factors must be taken into account. One is the extent to which clover (or alfalfa) is fed; and the other is the production of the cow. It is a more or less common rule to feed 1 pound of grain for every 3 pounds of milk produced. When clover or alfalfa form a large part of the ration, it is reasonable to suppose that a less quantity of grain will suffice than the amounts named.

A STORY OF REAL LIFE
By WARRINGTON ABERT

curate with nothing but a petty salary to make love to a girl with a fortune in her own right. I should expect to be turned out of the house and probably my parastate at such a presumption.
I received a call that would give me the no more salary, but I considered the field a better one than the one I occupied. I wished to be a worker as well as a preacher. In the parish where I was there were few poor people and consequently little good to be done among those who had shown so much appreciation of my intellectual endeavors. I had some new and, as I thought, original points to bring up which I hoped to leave a firm impression.
In the midst of my presentation of my views my friend rose and asked to be excused for a few moments. I was a trifle put out, for I had never seen a man in a single look. I should expect to be turned out of the house and probably my parastate at such a presumption.

In the midst of my presentation of my views my friend rose and asked to be excused for a few moments. I was a trifle put out, for I had never seen a man in a single look. I should expect to be turned out of the house and probably my parastate at such a presumption.

The Ring of the Maharajah

To One Man It Seemed to Cause Many Deaths.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1919, by American Press Association.

"Yes," said Bentley, pulling at his cigar and looking thoughtfully at a white line that marked the center of the floor. "It is where I used to wear the ring of the maharajah—no matter what."

"And there hangs a tale, as I can guess," said Laidlaw, with a laugh. "Out with it, man!"

"The maharajah was a friend of mine. I hunted tigers with him, and once I saved his life from the beast whose skin is under our feet."

"Three men looked down at the splendid tiger skin at their feet, and they then the cruel head, with his snarling lips and deadly fangs."

"I saved his life, and he was very grateful to me for it. He gave me presents, and then one day in spite of my protests he insisted upon my accepting the ring. It is a wide band of gold with a carved amethyst sunk deep in the setting. 'Sahib Bentley,' said the maharajah, 'this will bring good fortune, the blessing of heaven and protection from your enemies. Come tomorrow and I will tell you the story of the ring and how you may use it to advantage.'"

"The next day," prompted Laidlaw, "you went and?"

"I went to the palace and found that the maharajah had died suddenly in the night."

"And so you never knew the history of the ring?" remarked Eastman.

"Not until it made new history after it came into my possession. At first I did not wear it through some dislike for barbarous jewelry, and then one day after I had been thinking of a white old heathen he had slipped it on my finger, and so I grew into the habit of wearing it."

A Suggestion

It is a fact that every day we must have bread to eat. And then a simple luxury. Would make each meal complete.

On Monday, have a Jelly Roll, On Tuesday, some Raisins; On Wednesday, a Nice Marble Cake, On Thursday, Chocolate Squares.

On Friday, a White Mountain Cake, Some Hermit's Saturday; And Sunday have the best of all. A Sponge Cake would say.

This will make a good suggestion For everyone to try. And George L. Whitcomb's is the place Where these things you can buy.

LET GEORGE DO IT.
