Japanese Cabinet Being Reorganized After Hara Murder

Ministers, Led By Viscount Uchida, Held Meeting To-day and Afterwards Resigned Office, Says Dispatch From Tokio.

Tokio, Nov. 5.—The Japanese Cabinet resigned office after a meeting of the members held this morning.

Tokio, Nov. 5.—The Japanese Ministry, deprived of its head by the knife of an assassin yesterday when Premier Hara was stabbed to death by a demented youth, was continuing to function to-day under Viscount Uchida, the Foreign Minister, to whose designation as Acting Premier the imperial approval was given at the palace shortly after the tragedy.

Within an hour after the assassination of M. Hara the Cabinet met in extraordinary session, Viscount Uchida presiding. Immediately upon the conclusion of the Cabinet session, Viscount Uchida, accompanied by Minister of the Interior Tokomami, went to the palace and secured the imperial approval of the designation of the Viscount as temporary premier, which had been decided upon at the Cabinet session.

A Fanatic. Scant information was available at first regarding the identity of the youth at whose hands Premier Hara fell, but it became known to-day that the assassin was a member of the Samurai, or soldier class, constituting the lower nobility under the Japanese feudalism, who had been a member of the staff of the restoration period. The son, it appears, was of an erratic nature, and is regarded as a political fanatic. He was arrested immediately after the stabbing.

PLAN ADOPTED IS TEMPORARY

It seems generally assumed that the designation of Viscount Uchida as Premier was only a temporary expedient and there seems little doubt that the Cabinet will be re-constituted within a few days. Considerable speculation as to the probable new Premier is voiced in to-day's Tokio newspapers. The probabilities, according to the newspaper views, appeared to point to Baron Kenjiro Den, Governor-General of Formosa, as the selection for the premiership.

The Nichi-Nichi Shimbun says it understands that the Cabinet will continue to function pending its re-organization probably calling a Cabinet council for November 7, the date previously arranged for consideration of the budget for the fiscal year.

Did Not Speak. Premier Hara, it develops from details of Friday's tragic events, never spoke after the first onset of the assassin. M. Hara arrived at the station, where he was to take a train for Kyoto, ten minutes before the train was due to leave and the stationmaster invited the Premier and his party to rest in the station for a moment. He was seen to approach this office and the gate through which passengers reach the platforms in the station blackboard, and it was explained by the stationmaster that the assassin was lurking as the Premier emerged from the office and approached the gate.

Stabbed. Darting out from behind his shelter, the youth came immediately into contact with his victim and thrust his knife into the Premier's breast, close to the heart. The Premier collapsed instantly, falling to the ground without uttering a word. He was carried to the stationmaster's office and a physician who was a member of the party gave him immediate medical attention. M. Hara, however, could not be revived and died within an hour without regaining consciousness. His wife, who had been summoned directly after the attack, reached the station too late to see him alive.

BONFIRES AND LANTERNS SEEN

Shortly afterward the body was removed to his home, around which torch bonfires and lanterns lighted the streets, while officials and friends streamed to the residence to offer condolences. The tragedy was described by The Daily Mail as a grave misfortune on the very eve of a conference where it was believed M. Hara's steady leadership would be on the side of peace.

No Disorders. The assassination of Premier Hara, he dispatch said, had caused nothing approximating disorders or disturbances in the Japanese capital.

Kato Resigns. Washington, Nov. 5.—Admiral Baron Kato, one of the Japanese delegates to the disarmament conference here, yesterday announced that he had tendered his resignation as Minister of Marine to Tokio. The resignation of the Admiral was explained by Japanese here, was wholly a matter of form and without significance.

The American Embassy in Tokio, in a cablegram dated 11 a. m. Saturday and received by the State Department, said the Japanese Cabinet planned to meet Saturday and that Admiral Uchida would succeed the late Premier at least temporarily.

NATIONS REGRET MURDER OF HARA

Cablegrams Pour into Tokio Government Offices

Messages Express Horror of World's Leaders

Youth Who Killed Him Is Demented

Tokio, Nov. 5.—Cablegrams expressing horror over the assassination yesterday of Takashi Hara, the Premier, poured into Tokio to-day from the capitals of virtually all nations. The attack on M. Hara was made by a demented youth, and there is no definite knowledge as yet that it had its genesis in the political rancor which actuated bitter assaults upon M. Hara and his Government in the recent past.

Viscount Uchida, former Japanese Minister to the United States and Foreign Minister in M. Hara's Cabinet since 1918, has assumed the post of Acting Premier, pending a possible reconstruction of the Government.

CONSIDER EFFECT ON CONFERENCE

British Papers Discuss Killing of Japanese Premier

London, Nov. 5.—Public interest in the assassination of Premier Hara of Japan was intensified in London by consideration of the influence his removal might have upon Japan's attitude toward the Washington conference. Newspapers here to-day displayed Tokio dispatches regarding the tragedy with great prominence and in their editorial columns expressed deep sympathy for Japan in the loss of a Minister who was regarded here as an enlightened democrat. In the absence of full details of the crime, of which accounts are meagre, and in some respects contradictory, comment upon the incident was somewhat restrained.

"If the assassination of M. Hara proves not to have been the deed of an irresponsible madman," said the London Times, "it will evoke grave apprehensions over the possible reasons which promoted such a horrible expedient. Elucidation on this point may well lead to a clear understanding of certain perplexing tendencies in Japanese politics of which we are broadly aware rather than accurately appraised."

Gloomy Omen. The Daily News declared the assassination was "a very gloomy omen just when the affairs of Japan are approaching what may be the crisis in her history." The tragedy was described by The Daily Mail as a grave misfortune on the very eve of a conference where it was believed M. Hara's steady leadership would be on the side of peace.

KING SPOKE IN LONDON, ONTARIO

Addresses by Liberal Leader; Meighen in Montreal

Candidates Nominated in Several Constituencies

Political News From Canadian Centres

London, Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press)—The real issue before the electors of Canada was the right of self-government, which right Mr. Meighen had taken away, Hon. Mackenzie King, Leader of the Liberal Party, declared in an address at a largely attended meeting here last night.

"The question of autocratic government in future," said Mr. King, "if you tolerate such methods now."

Publicity. "Publicity and not secrecy was the absolute essential in the conduct of public affairs," exclaimed the Liberal Leader, "has ideas of government wholly foreign to the spirit of social justice and the cost."

The cost of Government, directly or indirectly, said Mr. King, was nearly $1 a day for every family, an amount which represented the difference between a mortgaged home and one free from encumbrance; an amount sufficient to secure protection against sickness and accident. The present Government had become extravagant, so accustomed to spending not millions, but billions of dollars, that it could not take small expenses into consideration. Economy and retrenchment, King said, were the first reforms necessary.

Navy. The autocratic methods of the Meighen Government had been well exemplified by its action in regard to the navy. Hardly had the Minister of Marine informed Parliament that nothing was to be done until after an Empire Conference had been held to decide Canadian obligations relatively with those of the rest of the Empire, when an announcement was made that a small fleet of warships had been accepted from Great Britain. This gift had been accepted on condition that the ships be manned and kept in commission. Mr. King said he had nothing against Canada doing her part in the defence of the seas as well as of the land. The people, however, had the right to be consulted before such obligations were assumed.

ULSTER DELEGATES AT CONFERENCE

Ready to Attend When Ulster Affairs Debated

Craig Talked With Lloyd George To-day

Austen Chamberlain Present During Interview

London, Nov. 5.—Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, not long after his arrival in London to-day had a long interview with Premier Lloyd George at the latter's official residence in Downing Street. Austen Chamberlain, Government Leader in the House of Commons, also was present at the interview.

After Sir James had left the Premier's residence he was quoted by a representative of The Belfast Telegraph as saying that he had spoken to Premier Lloyd George and Sir Robert Horne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, as the result of an invitation received to-day, Sir James according to the newspaper representative's version, added: "I have arranged that if and when Ulster's interests are reached in the Irish conference all the Ulster representatives will be asked to attend. In the meantime nothing will be settled behind our backs."

It was announced to-day that the week-end party at Chequers Court, the Prime Minister's country home, would consist of the immediate members of his family, as he was extremely tired after a very busy week.

No Appointment. London, Nov. 5.—Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, arrived here this morning from Belfast. When it was first understood that Sir James would come to London there was a belief he would have important conferences with Premier Lloyd George and Sir Edward Carson, former Ulster leader in the House of Commons, but this was denied by the Ulster Premier upon his arrival.

"I have no appointment to see the Premier of any political engagement of any kind," he declared. His visit to London was not the result of a summons or any invitation from anyone. He had come with his wife to meet their sons, students at Eton, who would spend the week-end in this city. Whether he would see Premier Lloyd George or make any political engagements, he indicated remained to be determined.

Colonel Spender, secretary of the Ulster Cabinet, accompanied Sir James to London, while the Lord Mayor of Belfast, an Ulster member of the Ulster Unionist Party, was a passenger on the same train. It was learned that a formal invitation had not been extended Sir James by the Government, but that words had been conveyed to him that Mr. Lloyd George desired to see him during his visit to the city.

He was in charge of the British press statements issued in Paris during the last war, and has been the mouthpiece of the Government at all the important conferences held recently in England. He is one of the closest friends of Premier Lloyd George.

Franklin Peterson, of London Times, En Route

"A fervent desire to co-operate in all movements which tend to better conditions generally and the newspaper profession in particular was strongly in evidence at the Conference. It was one of the most successful gatherings of newspapermen I have ever attended, and should have a lasting effect on those who were privileged to attend," stated Lt.-Col. E. F. Lawson, assistant managing proprietor of The London Daily Telegraph, who reached here on the Niagara after attending the International Press Conference at Honolulu, accompanied by Mr. Peterson, of the London Times, en route to London.

Col. Lawson commented on the large attendance of Oriental newspaper representatives. Although it is impossible to judge by the representatives of the Far East as to the advancement being made in Japan and China along the press lines, he stated that the delegates were greatly impressed by some of the Oriental newspapermen.

Franklin Peterson, of The London Times, was a passenger by the liner from Honolulu, en route to London. Others returning were E. Barrow, of La Presse, Montreal, and Hon. M. Cohen, of New Zealand. Hon. Mr. Cohen is on his way to Washington to attend the Disarmament Conference.

BORDEN GOES TO WASHINGTON

Canada's Delegate to International Conference

Lloyd George to Sail Two Weeks Hence

Conference Declared to Be World's Hope

New York, Nov. 5.—Sir Robert Borden, Canadian delegate to the conference on limitation of armaments, left this morning for Washington.

Sir Robert will represent Canada at the ceremonies in connection with the burial of the Unknown Soldier of the United States at Arlington Cemetery on Armistice Day.

Mr. Lloyd George. Washington, Nov. 5.—Premier Lloyd George hopes domestic affairs will be adjusted so as to permit him to leave Great Britain within a fortnight for Washington to attend the armament conference. Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, has informed Secretary Hughes.

A dispatch from London yesterday said two weeks hence was the earliest date considered possible for Premier Lloyd George to go to Washington for the disarmament conference, according to his secretary, who stated almost every preparation for the actual booking of passages had been made, and should the present obstacles be cleared the Prime Minister would make quick work of his leave-taking.

Best Hope. In the House of Commons Lord Robert Cecil said he regarded the conference as likely to be of very great assistance to the efforts being made by the League of Nations. The conference was by far the best hope the world had for an immediate reduction of the burden of armaments, he added, and on its success or failure depended the immediate hopes of the future of mankind.

Others returning were E. Barrow, of La Presse, Montreal, and Hon. M. Cohen, of New Zealand. Hon. Mr. Cohen is on his way to Washington to attend the Disarmament Conference.

NEW BRITISH POLITICAL GROUP

Irish Negotiations Reported Causing Realignment

London, Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The recent rumor that Lord Birkenhead, the British Lord Chancellor, was not unlikely to break away from the Coalition Government on the Irish question is now more definitely crystallizing. The Saturday Evening Post intimates that Unionists who supported Colonel J. Grettton's recent motion of censure of the Government for negotiating with Sinn Fein representatives here have decided to form a separate group.

The Review adds that the chances of a rapprochement between Lord Robert Cecil and the Conservative Party are becoming remote as they remain in sympathy with the Conservatives, their opposition to the Government being merely dictated by the fact that Premier Lloyd George and lack of confidence in Austen Chamberlain, the Leader of the Government in the House of Commons. These sentiments are spreading among the coalition Conservatives and in the event of a breakdown of the Coalition Government there is every prospect of a strong unified Conservative Party headed by Lord Birkenhead and supported by Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Australia Seeks Solution to All Pacific Problems

Assurances of Internal Safety of Racial Integrity Wanted By Australasia, Declare British Empire Delegates to Washington Conference.

There is no country in the world to which the prospect of permanent peace would be more welcome than to Australia. We have a vast continent to develop; we desire no expansion of territory overseas, and if we can be assured that our safety and the maintenance of our racial integrity is menaced by none, we would welcome any equitable plan that will save us from the awful waste of warlike preparations.

This was the message of Australia brought by Senator Hon. George Foster Pearce, Minister of Defence for the Commonwealth of Australia, and official delegate for Australasia to the Washington conference on the limitation of armaments, who, accompanied by Sir John Salmond, Judge of the Supreme Court of New Zealand, and former Solicitor-General, the New Zealand representative to the disarmament conference, arrived here this morning from Australasia on board the Canadian-Australasian liner Niagara.

Food Laws of Dominion to Be Standardized

Milk From Diseased Cows Also to Be Controlled

Hon. J. D. MacLean, Provincial Secretary, under whose administration the Department of Health functions, stated this morning that resolutions were considered recently at Ottawa by the Dominion Council of Health, are adopted they will materially affect health work in British Columbia.

The Minister referred to the recent visit of Dr. H. E. Young, superintendent of health, to Ottawa, and spoke of some of the matters discussed. One pertains to the standardization of Federal and Provincial regulations relating to food, and particularly affects the sale of tubercular beef and milk from tubercular cows.

The endeavor is to have the administration of this left to the Provincial authorities, explained Hon. Dr. MacLean, so that there will be any conflict between Victoria and Ottawa as there has been in the past. Dr. Young introduced the resolution, which was accepted and passed by the Council of Health. It is expected this will be adopted by the Federal Department of Health.

It is also expected that the Federal regulations regarding dairies will be adopted as applying to dairies under municipal control.

The standardization of laws regarding the shipment of dead bodies was dealt with, and hereafter it is the aim of the Council of Health to have uniform rules; so that the demands of one Province will meet the requirements of another.

The question of quarantine regulations was discussed and hereafter it will be arranged that these will be uniform throughout the Dominion; so that a man subject to quarantine in one Province, through having been in contact with a person suffering from an infectious disease, may not escape quarantine by moving quickly to another Province.

URGES AGREEMENT ON OIL QUESTION

London Times Gives Views Regarding Nations

London, Nov. 5.—One danger to a final and satisfactory agreement at the approaching Washington conference lies in the present conflict of British and United States interests on the oil question, says a lengthy article in The London Times.

"It may fairly be advanced," says the article, "that if Great Britain is not prepared to make concessions on this vital question the conference is likely to break down."

The writer advocates abandonment by the British Government of its present policy of participation in oil production and supply, and adds that if the British Government renounces its control of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company and produces evidence of its complete dissociation from active participation in the oil industry it can "justly demand, whether in California or the Philippines, continuance of the United States 'old and sound policy of the open door.' It is the only policy which will make for world peace, the paper says."

British Laborites Support Ministry of Transport

London, Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The Ministry of Transport, which many regarded as a superfluous Government organization evolved, and until recently controlled by Sir Eric Geddes, has found unexpectedly strong backing in labor quarters.

Heads of labor organizations marshal a number of arguments in a letter to Premier Lloyd George appealing for retention of the ministry and contending that it serves the useful purposes outlined by the Government when the Ministry was established. They declare that the suggested closing down of the Ministry would inevitably lead the country into being less able to face continental competition in the absence of the elementary large scale industrial organization which foreign countries have adopted.

The signatories, who include J. R. Clynes, Arthur Henderson and C. W. Bowserman, all Labor members of the House of Commons, deprecate abolition of the ministry as part of the anti-waste campaign and condemn the idea that the control of the railways should be entrusted to the Board of Trade.

The resignation of Sir Eric Geddes as Minister of Transport was announced on October 17.

WAR BURIAL IN OTTAWA SUGGESTED

The Halifax Herald Urges Unknown Warrior Ceremony

Halifax, Nov. 5.—Discussing the act of the United States in bringing from France the body of an unknown soldier, The Halifax Herald in an editorial said:

"Sixty-two thousand four hundred and ninety-six Canadians lie dead in Europe. The forests of crosses that mark the graves of those thousands of Canadians who have sacrificed mutually to this overwhelming sacrifice. The story of Canada's achievement in the world war is written in the names of the unknown soldiers. But it is a portion only of that story, that adhere to the ploughs of the Flemish farmers, in the scattered fragments of humanity protruding through the earth, in the stained and broken relics gathered in the fields by little children, relics that may in after years serve no loftier purpose than to be exhibited to the flippant and curious."

Why should Canada do what has been done in Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States? Why should not this country endeavor to bring a gleam of hope into the barren lives of those to whom it means so much? To bring to Canada on a Canadian warship all that is availed of some nameless hero to enter him in Ottawa, the capital city of the country, would be an act of grace that would express all sympathy and feeling regarding those thousands of Canadians whose graves have not been and never will be identified.

WESTERN CANADA COLONIZATION ASSOCIATION MAKES PLANS

Regina, Nov. 5.—Following a meeting here yesterday of the Western Canada Colonization Association, a statement was issued declaring that while present conditions made the work of the association most difficult, the program for the next six months will necessarily be limited to keeping with the course pursued by leading business enterprises everywhere, the directors have definitely concluded to prosecute with vigor at the earliest possible moment the plans originally contemplated.

A management committee was chosen to direct the affairs of the association for the next six months.

SHANTUNG PLAN IS NOT ACCEPTED

China Replies to Proposals of Japan

Tokio Nov. 5.—China's reply to the recent proposals of the Japanese Government regarding the return of the Province of Shantung to China, received here to-day, reiterates the Chinese Government's "unchanged view," and declares the proposed basis of settlement is too far from the hopes and expectations of the Chinese people.

The note denies that the recent conversation of Japanese Minister Ohashi with certain officials of the Chinese Government constitutes a just basis for Japan's claim that China has reversed her attitude toward settlement of the Shantung question.

The note sets forth at great length China's claims for the unconditional return of the province, including the participation in the war and her refusal to ratify the Versailles Treaty. The note expresses hope of the early recall of Japanese troops from the province.

LIQUOR NOT TO BE SHIPPED IN U.S.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Permits for the transportation of liquor except into five states will be denied by state federal prohibition directors under instructions sent out yesterday by Commissioner Haynes. The states excepted are California, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Maryland and Rhode Island.

Calling attention to the fact that the Reed "bone-dry" amendment prohibits the transportation of liquors into a "dry" state, the commission said that all except five states have laws which bring them within that category.

SOME WIVES ARE HOUSEHOLD HEADS

Ruling is Made by Toronto Court

Toronto, Nov. 5.—That a wife may be the head of a house was a ruling made by the court of revision here yesterday in an appeal by Mrs. Edmund Phillips against an income assessment of $1,500.

"I set the head of the house," said Mrs. Phillips, "I pay all the expenses of the house and am entitled therefore to the exemption."

The court made the exemption.

MEN SENTENCED FOR STEALING RIDES

Vancouver, Nov. 5.—Jail for two months, in default of a fine of $50 was the sentence passed upon seven men who were convicted of stealing rides on the Canadian Pacific Railway. They pleaded guilty to "beating their way" from the Prairies.

TO BE SENTENCED

Toronto, Nov. 5.—A jury late last night returned a verdict of manslaughter against Ernest Howard, a young man who on July 19 last while driving his car at a high rate of speed struck a milk wagon, killing the driver, Norman Oliphant. Sentence will be passed later.

FAMOUS CHEF GOES HOME

British Breakfasts Too Much For Chester and He Returns to His Dear Paris

London, Oct. 30.—(By Mail).—"Chester," the French chef who became famous as a result of his portrait painted by Sir William Orpen, has left his employment in the Royal Palace Hotel, Kensington, and returned to Paris. The reason, according to The Daily News, was his inability to endure the British breakfast. His artist-soul could only tolerate the thought of coffee and rolls, and perhaps a delicate omelette, for the early morning meal.

Porridge, haddock, kippers, bacon and eggs, marmalade—all these things became anathema to him. He could not bear it, and so he left the Royal Palace to return to his beloved Paris and the Chatham grill.

"Chester" was a popular figure. He said the manager of the hotel. "He was not principal chef; his work was more that of a 'grand maitre de salon.'"

"He advised people what to eat. Of course, he cooked his own special dishes himself, including the 'saucé Chester,' but he couldn't bear the breakfasts, and so he has left us!"

The breakfast rite may be taken as representative of the British habits, which the famous chef disliked. He preferred Paris to London, and was able to indulge his preferences.

It is interesting to note, however, that the principal chef of the Royal Palace Hotel is a 'frenchman'; he has been there sixteen years, and so apparently has "swallowed" the English breakfast, figuratively and literally.

ENGLISH HANDBELL BANDS COMPETE

Players so Skilled They Are as Deft as Pianist at Keys

London, Oct. 20.—(By Mail).—Handbell ringing may be likened to a pianoforte recital on bells, writes James Hodson in The Daily Mail. The musical wools workers, miners and artisans of the West Riding of Yorkshire about Huddersfield, Huddersley, Dewsbury, Mirfield, Liveredge, Lepton and Dalton have practiced the art for generations. A few bells a century or so old are still in existence.

In a handbell band every note on the piano is represented by a bell—some notes by two, three or even four bells. A full peal used by a first-class band may number 150 bells—from tiny treble ones, just over one inch across the bell mouth, to big bass ones fourteen inches or more across weighing fifteen or twenty pounds.

Each bell has a leather thong handle, and the "chapper" inside which does the striking, is rimmed with felt—the same felt as is used on a piano.

In ringing a tune like the overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," a ringer may handle twenty or thirty bells. A band of twelve ringers would consist of five treble, four tenor and three bass ringers.

Perhaps the best time to see the bands is at a handbell ringing contest where ten or fifteen bands compete. For three or four months the bands will have rehearsed, say, "William Tell," the test piece.

On the final rehearsal day they have probably rung through the piece for ten hours while an audience of 1,000 or 2,000 people have sat on the hillside listening and talking over the band's record and its chances.

To the contest itself 200 supporters have come by train. Photographs of the bands on cottage walls often show them in evening clothes wearing the medals they have won, but they rarely ring when dressed like that. At the contest they take off jackets, collars and ties, loosen their shirt necks and roll up their sleeves.

Next they range themselves under a conductor round a rectangular table measuring about 12 feet by 6 feet. Very carefully are the bells arranged on the table. A player must be able to pick up his bell just as a pianist strikes his ivory key. Excitement runs through the crowd as well as the band. "That'll see," says one man, closing an argument and pocketing his sandwiches. "Lancashires never were any class at ringing."

They begin. Wonderfully deft and certain, twenty-four hands move like lightning among the bells, now ringing them above the shoulder, now but a few inches above the table. You have an odd feeling that they are plucking music from the air. The bass ringers handling ponderous bells—no weak man can do it—are speaking heavily. And the tenor is full of glorious melody, sweet, rich and ringing.

Supple wrists are essential and the best ringers start young men as early as fifteen or sixteen. An expert pianist is not always a success, but a ringer is often a flute or violin or brass instrument player as well. The hands frequently send parties to play for dancing, visit friends' houses at Christmas time and occasionally play in the public parks.

Almondbury, near Huddersfield, a very famous band before the war, paid two visits to the United States, the first time alone touring in all 18,000 miles.

A peal of 150 bells cost before the war about £120.

THE Greeks were probably the first to learn from the Egyptians the secret of "leavened bread." A piece of fermented dough left over from the previous baking was the leavening agent. Its use involved a process calling for great skill and care. Unremitting attention was essential, or it was easy for a whole baking to turn out a disappointing failure. How sharply contrasted with the time and labor-saving convenience of Shelly's 4X Bread, delivered to you daily—always light, always tender, always risen high and always with crust baked evenly "golden-brown!"

THAT TAX PROPOSAL.

The Government, we understand, has not decided its policy in regard to the personal property tax proposal, and before coming to a decision has been desirous of learning the views of the various elements and organizations of the Province most intimately affected. It must now be convinced by the expression of opinion the municipalities to levy this tax has aroused, that such a course would be both ineffective and widely unpopular, and therefore would prove a very doubtful measure of assistance to the communities whose necessities it would be designed to relieve. It would involve fresh taxation directly upon business and industry, and indirectly upon the consumer, at a time when such an addition to their burdens can least comfortably be borne, while its application would occasion actual hardship and injustice in many instances which must readily occur to everyone. In such circumstances it might really in purpose, rather than assist, the purpose for which it was proposed.

"WEAK GROUND."

A contemporary thinks Mr. Crerar is on very weak ground in his reference to the 750,000 people who have left Canada during the last decade as an argument against protection and "in favor of free trade." Apart altogether from the fact, published freely in its own columns, that Mr. Crerar is not advocating free trade, our contemporary has wandered into the wrong field, as it invariably does in its discussion of Federal political fiscal issues, in its conception of what Mr. Crerar's contention actually is. The Progressive Leader was replying to Mr. Meighen's assertion that the protective policy had made Canada prosperous and the implication that it had been such a boon to this country that if he were returned he would give us more of the same medicine. Mr. Crerar pertinently wants to know, if Mr. Meighen's statement is correct, why 750,000 people have left Canada during the last ten years and why there are from 150,000 to 175,000 unemployed in the Dominion to-day. As a matter of fact, we are convinced Mr. Crerar has understated the loss of population this country has sustained, for he gives only the number who entered the United States as disclosed by the Washington Immigration Department statistics and does not consider those who emigrated elsewhere. His argument is at least as sound as that of Mr. Meighen to which it is an obvious reply. After all, what else than such a loss need be expected under a policy which handicaps the settlement and development of the unexploited, resourceful areas of the Dominion?

LEGISLATIVE SUBJECTS.

It is by no means too late for the legislators of British Columbia to remember that there are a number of vital matters outside of the purchase of automobiles and the disposal of beaver skins to which they might devote some attention with profit to themselves and benefit to the people of the Province as a whole. Judging from the Order Paper and the contents of speeches already delivered there does not appear to be the slightest evidence of interest in the case which this Province is conducting in behalf of a reduction of freight rates. Surely this is a matter of sufficient importance to every member of the House to warrant some reference. We venture to believe that if the people of this Province really understood how Western industry is hampered and penalized by what is known in freight rate parlance as the "mountain haul" there would be a good deal more interest taken in the case for which the public treasury of this Province is finding the money. At least a legislative debate develops the layman's point of view in a manner which appeals to and instructs those who are unfamiliar with the intricate compilation of a freight rate schedule.

IT WILL HAVE TO WAIT.

While the forces antagonistic to the findings of the Finlay Commission are doing their level best to prevent the removal of the British embargo on Canadian cattle The Daily Telegraph confirms our suggestion of a few days ago that—despite demands for instant treatment by one section of the Canadian press—legislation will be required to alter the existing arrangement. In view of the fact that the present session is expected to conclude its business in a day or so, it is hardly likely that anything will be done until early next year. In the meantime the stock breeding industry of this country has the satisfaction of knowing that it has made out a good and successful case. It cannot do anything to counteract the propaganda of the objectors.

AN INDUSTRIAL HOME.

There is much to commend the suggestion contained in a resolution adopted by one of the local benefit organizations which advocates the establishment of something in the nature of an industrial home to which youths who have made their first false step might be sent and taught useful trades under conditions that would combine commercial tuition with the fundamental teachings of morality. It is not enough to provide a Magistrate with powers to send the teenage erring one to a farm and place him under probation. Many youngsters between the ages of sixteen and twenty have developed certain qualities which should be converted into technical value for their own and the country's benefit. Many boys are totally unfitted for rural life and to waste the impressionable years in an attempt to make them agriculturists is to court an economic loss. Hard cases there will be among the youth of this and other countries until the crack of doom; but that is no argument against a genuine endeavor to separate the "wheat" from the "tares," at the stage which has most promise of success, in the dual operation of saving the youngster morally and converting him from a liability into an asset. The Attorney-General will no doubt give the suggestion careful and sympathetic consideration.

CANTEEN FUNDS.

In view of the dissatisfaction among the various ex-service men's associations in relation to the distribution of canteen profits, the decision to hold a referendum among all those men and women directly interested seems to be the best way out of a difficulty which the Dominion Government created by allocating a portion of the fund to one Association. It is not enough to refer a matter of this kind to the established organizations alone. There are many men and women in this country who returned from service overseas to get into civil life as quickly as possible and put every reminder of the war behind them. In these cases—and they are numerous—there is possibly no connection with either of the recognized associations; none the less they have just as much interest in the disposal of a fund to whose profits their purchases overseas contributed equally with those of the "organized" returned man. In the meantime the organizations themselves may be dependent upon to recognize the case of the disabled veteran whose future must be linked to the enterprise of the Red Cross Society as long as it is able to discharge an obligation rightly belonging to the Government of the country. As long as the "special case" is not adequately provided for by statute voluntary contributions will have to be collected in his behalf. The canteen fund offers a solution to much of the difficulty with which the Red Cross is faced in its desire to make life bearable for the veteran who cannot enter the competitive labor market.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Great Britain has heard that a number of her subjects who enlisted in the Spanish army for service against the Moroccans are quite annoyed with the treatment to which they have been subjected. The business of a soldier of fortune in these highly civilized times is apparently not what "it was cracked up to be" by the Spanish recruiting agents.

NONAGENARIAN PIONEER PASSES

Was Probably Oldest Odd Fellow in City

At his residence, 7 Erie Street, another of Victoria's fast dwindling pioneers, in the person of Capt. Henry Glide, passed away last evening. Nearly seventy years ago Mr. Glide sailed into this port on the old Hudson's Bay Co. steamer Otter. The late Capt. Glide was in his 87th year, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. A. R. Brown, of 7 Erie Street, and Mrs. Frederick Caselton, of 1037 Meares Street, also one son, Andrew Glide, of Victoria, and seven grandchildren and four great grandchildren. He was a member of Victoria Lodge No. 1, I.O.O.F. The funeral has been arranged to take place from the residence on Tuesday next at 2 p.m. and fifteen minutes later from the Reformed Episcopal Church, where service will be conducted by Rev. A. de B. Owen. The remains will be laid to rest in Ross Bay Cemetery. Mr. Glide preceded his wife twenty-four years ago, and a nephew, Robert Scott, also a pioneer of this city, died only a few days ago here.

Came Out on Otter.

Mr. Glide was born in Kent, England, and in 1850 he began an apprenticeship with the Hudson's Bay Company on the bark Prince of Wales, and was transferred from there to the steamer Otter in 1852, coming to the Pacific with her the following year as ship's boy.

A Narrow Escape.

Although the vessel left England in December, 1852, it was not until the following August that she entered the Straits. Here she narrowly escaped destruction, being caught by a strong tide and swept through between Tootoosh and the mainland, for nearly a month, and on August 4 she reached Victoria. Mr. Glide continued in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company after his arrival and received the first pilot's certificate granted in British Columbia. It is dated 1858 and was issued by Sir James Douglas, and Capt. Prevost of the H. M. S. Plumper. On August 5 of that year he sailed eight barques and two schooners into Victoria Harbor, all from San Francisco; and when they were discharged he took them out again, there being no coasts in those days. In 1861 he married a daughter of the late Robert Lang, who had joined her father in Victoria in 1854. Mr. Glide worked in the Hudson's Bay depot here for about 40 years after retiring from the sea and spent his declining years with his daughter, Mrs. A. R. Brown. He was the oldest Oddfellow in the North Pacific area, it is believed, having been initiated 55 years ago in Victoria.

USE RELIEF MONEY WHERE MOST NEEDED

City's Flood Grant Not Confined to Britannia

The city's vote of $2,500 for the relief of mainland flood sufferers will not be spent alone only at Britannia Beach, but will be used where it is most needed. Mayor Porter announced to-day.

"Our idea is to have the money spent where it will do the most good," the Mayor explained. "We understand that suffering is by no means confined to Britannia Beach, but is also acute in the flooded areas along the Fraser. It is our wish to help the people living along the Fraser as well as those at Britannia Beach. I will get in touch with the chairman of the committee which is handling the flood relief at the beginning of next week and find out exactly where money is needed. I understand that the immediate needs of the flood victims have been met that next week will be quite soon enough for our contribution. We are taking precautions in order to avoid overlapping in the relief work. If precautions were not taken trouble certainly would arise as it did at Halifax following the explosion a few years ago. Such a large relief fund was created there that people poured into the city to secure what they could of it and a serious situation developed." The City Council yesterday decided to allow the Mayor and Alderman E. B. Andros, Chairman of the civic Finance Committee, to spend up to $2,500 for the relief of flood sufferers. The money received by the city as a result of the registration of large numbers of householders for the civic election probably will be used for this purpose.

POLITICS

Facing the Facts. Oil-and-Water Alliances. A Peevish Premier. New Brunswick Humiliated. Women Voters Bored. Foreign Voters Look Good to Meighen.

We might as well face the facts. It is recognized by everyone who has acquaintance with actual conditions, The Toronto Globe proceeds, that there must be co-operation between the Liberals and Farmers or between the Liberals and Conservatives in the carrying on of the government of the country during the life of the Parliament to be elected December 6. And, The Globe adds, co-operation between the Conservatives and the Farmers is not possible because of the very wide divergence of opinion of the two groups on the tariff issue.

Thirty Conservative members is the utmost that Mr. Meighen can expect from Ontario, The Globe predicts, and there will not be more than thirty-five Conservative members elected outside Ontario. Mr. Meighen, therefore, will head the smallest group in the new House. Mr. King will head the largest of the three groups but he will have to arrange some sort of alliance to make possible the formation of a government. There have been suggestions from Montreal that an alliance could be arranged between the Liberals of Quebec and the Conservatives, Mr. Meighen withdrawing from the Premiership and Sir Thomas White and Sir Lomer Gouin becoming the joint leaders of a coalition. The object of this coalition would be the isolation of the Farmers and the removal of the tariff from politics by the adoption of protection as the economic basis of the alliance.

"An alliance between Liberalism and the archaic Toryism of which Mr. Meighen is the mouth-piece is utterly impossible." The Globe warns, "and if favored by any considerable number of Quebec Liberals would split the party wide open and bring about its destruction as a force in national politics. Only a political adventurer bent upon office at any cost would think of the desperate expedient of hitching Liberalism and Toryism as a team to carry him thither."

Mr. Meighen is losing his temper. He has dropped the good manners that he has been practising with so much restraint, The Montreal Herald observes. He calls Mr. Crerar, his late colleague, a coward for charging the Government with dishonesty and with allying itself with big interests, without pointing out any specific instance or making any definite charge. He calls his utterances demagogic cant. They seem to hurt him. Well, if the Government has not allied itself with the big interests, the big interests and their organs have very unanimously and effectively allied themselves with it. Mr. Crerar has very pointedly challenged the Meighen National Liberal and Conservative party to expose the sources of its party funds and the uses to which these have been put. It is an act in Canadian politics when a leader is able with clean hands to make that challenge.

New Brunswick is especially worked up over the present election. There appears to be great dissatisfaction with the Conservative choice of candidates. After mentioning the names of Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, George B. Jones and B. Frank Smith, the St. John Telegraph says:

"There are many Conservatives who will be inclined to ask themselves why politicians whose record in the Provincial field have not strengthened their party should be endorsed for public service in the Federal sphere. Everybody remembers the investigations referred to, and also the action taken by the party members in the Legislature when certain gentlemen were censured by their colleagues. In the face of this it is presumptuous to say the least for politicians whose acts have been so severely condemned to place themselves in a position where they must appeal to the public for support as candidates for Federal honors." And The St. John Globe agrees that, "The presentation as party candidates for Ottawa of those who assisted in dragging the good name of New Brunswick through the meanest of all political scandals is a humiliation New Brunswickers, regardless altogether of their political affiliations, should vigorously resent."

Women voters are not measuring up to the expectations of Conservative campaigners one would judge from the following in The Brandon Sun: "The influence of women, which was to have been so great a feature in our politics, is not up to specifications. There was at first some novelty that kept up enthusiasm, but to-day the votes of women are not particularly worrisome even to the political prophet. A woman member or candidate would no longer rouse hysterical support and opposition, and, therefore, would be commonplace and likely unsuccessful. Most of the reasoning for women taking a major part in public life was illogical, impulsive and emotional. Now it is not even a dangerous experiment, it is uninteresting—the agitation has defeated itself without any hullo-balloo."

Mr. Meighen may consider the people of the prairies "foreigners" but he is not averse to getting the vote of the most foreign elements in the West, a staff correspondent of The Manitoba Free Press, who is touring Saskatchewan, finds. Coincident with the arrival of Hon. James Calder in Regina there came a very definite impression that a determined effort was going to be made by the Government to annex the large Ukrainian vote in Saskatchewan, the correspondent writes. It is stated that two main lines of attack are to be made.

"It is to be pointed out," the writer explains, "that Sir Charles Borden and the Hon. Charles J. Doherty labored long hours to ensure the national rights of the people of Ukraine, more particularly against the encroachment or infringement by the Poles. 'We voted for you in Europe— you vote for us in Canada,' is to be the appeal. "Then again the attitude is taken that the strong supporters of the Polish national aspirations which were, and are, strong enough in all conscience, were the French. 'The French vote in Canada is a Liberal vote,' say the government supporters. 'They voted against you in Paris; you can't vote for them here.'"

Mr. Crerar must have some friends besides the farmers. Evidently one of his supporters is a compositor in the offices of The Guelph Herald. The editor of The Herald had penned a biting attack upon the Progressive leader and, with a smile of satisfaction, had headed it "Mr. Crerar Balks." Instead the compositor balked and this was the result:

"Mr. Crerar likes to declaim against the big interests which are behind the Government—although he is silent as to what these interests are—but he balks when his own big interest seems to be in danger of investigation along with the others. Engaged in the grain business, Mr. Crerar may defend himself before the farmers, who as they did in North Dakota, swallowed all their leader told them, but he cannot defend himself before the whole people of Canada."

NEW BRITISH POLITICAL GROUP

The Westminster Gazette says that in the warm debate in the House of Commons on Thursday night over the resignation of Sir Basil Thompson as Director of the special British branch at detective headquarters, connected with the earlier attack on the Government's Irish policy, the statement of Edward Shortt, K.C., Home Secretary, that he had invited Brigadier-General Sir Joseph A. Byrne, Inspector-General of the Royal Irish Constabulary, to succeed Sir Basil Thompson, evoked a remarkable outburst of indignation from the same group which had previously been baiting Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland. The Unionist rebels mustered in greater force yesterday. The Gazette says, and apparently included members of the party who had supported the Government, last Monday. Everything yesterday, The Gazette adds, showed that the breach between the Government and the Unionist Party is widening.

There is a well-defined rumor in circulation here to the effect that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has become alarmed because of the agitation of Victoria business men for better railway communication, and that it will make a strong effort to secure and retain the Victoria trade. It is understood that the Canadian Pacific Railway is negotiating for permission to run its cars over the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Company's line. The scheme contemplated involves the construction of a ferry boat capable of carrying cars between the island and Vancouver.

Miss Flora Boyko Tells How Cuticura Healed Her Pimples

"My face was very itchy at first, and after that it was covered with pimples that disfigured me badly. The pimples were hard and red and they were small, and they were scattered all over my face and were so itchy I had to scratch and I could not sleep.

"These bothered me nearly a year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and when I had used five boxes of Cuticura Soap and five boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Flora M. Boyko, Gardenton, Man., Dec. 26, 1918.

Having obtained a clear healthy skin by the use of Cuticura, keep it clear by using the Soap for all toilet purposes, assisted by touches of Ointment as needed. Do not fail to include the exquisitely scented Cuticura Talcum in your toilet preparations. Splendid after bathing.

NIAGARA MADE GOOD TIME ON PACIFIC VOYAGE

Canadian-Australasian Liner Reached Port This Morning From Antipodean Ports

Seventeen days steaming from Auckland, the Canadian Australasian liner Niagara, Capt. J. T. Rolis, made port at 9 o'clock this morning, bringing a total of 225 passengers from Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii.

"We had excellent weather all the way," Capt. Rolis summed up the voyage. "It was ideal for a winter passage."

"It was necessary to check her speed," commented Chief Engineer T. Peterson in discussing the fast time made by the liner on the last lap of her passage from Australia. "Had it been necessary we could have made port last night."

Ship Was Light.

The Niagara ran light in both passengers and cargo. She carried 100 passengers in the saloon, 75 in the second cabin and 50 in the third-class accommodation. Her passenger list indicated the slack travel season from the Antipodes.

The big ship was riding high in the water. Her total cargo amounted to but one thousand tons, and consisted largely of wool, gum and hides.

Disarmament Party.

The most notable party on board was the Australasian delegation to the disarmament conference. Hon. Senator G. F. Pearce, Minister of Defence, representing Australia, and Sir John Salmond, official delegate from New Zealand.

Sir John Salmond was formerly Solicitor-General for New Zealand.

TO EXTEND DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIP

Chamber of Commerce Canvas Carried Into Next Week

The drive for membership in the Victoria Chamber of Commerce has been extended to include Wednesday and Thursday of next week. It was announced this morning. Interest in the campaign has developed to such an extent that this was considered advisable, and it was found that it will also be necessary to call on some of the faithful members who worked so diligently on the previous membership campaign to come to assist this campaign.

The captains and teams have been working hard, and a lot of work has developed which will require more assistance. The Chamber is, therefore, soliciting the aid of more members to carry out the work that has become necessary through the campaign which has been launched.

No Monday Luncheon.

Owing to the fact that Monday will be Thanksgiving Day there will be no directors' luncheon, but announcement will be made in Monday's Times regarding arrangements. It is possible that a joint luncheon may be held with the team captains to discuss details of the membership campaign.

KEYSTONE STATE BOUND TO ORIENT

The Admiral liner Keystone State will leave port late this afternoon on her return voyage to the Orient.

She left Seattle at 11 o'clock this morning.

Some 250 Chinese steerage passengers will embark on the Keystone State here.

anal was appointed to the Supreme Court last May.

From Honolulu.

Col. E. Lawson, D. S. O., of the London Telegraph, and Franklin Peterson, of the London Times, were passengers by the Niagara from Honolulu where they have been covering the Press Conference. Col. Lawson was met at the wharf by H. E. Beasley, superintendent of the E. and N. Railway.

W. Carmichael, Sydney representative of the Powell River Pulp and Paper Company, returned by the liner.

R. Blake, member of the Uniform Railway Gauge Commission, who has been in Australia in connection with the adoption of standard gauge railways, returned by the Niagara.

The Niagara sailed from Sydney, October 13; Auckland, November 18; Suva, October 22, and Honolulu, October 23.

SAYS CANADA IS LAND OF LIBERTY

No Place in World Where So Much Freedom as in Britain and Canada, Says American

"I have traveled since I was twenty-one years of age and I have no hesitation in stating that, although I am an American, there is no place in the world where there is so much freedom as in Great Britain and Canada.

"The United States, sometimes heralded as the land of liberty, cannot be compared with Canada in this regard," stated J. J. Killele, a prominent importer and exporter of New York, who was a passenger on the Niagara.

He stated that conditions in both New Zealand and Australia are none too bright. Business is at a low ebb and the money market is tighter than for many years. He is a veteran of the road, being over 70 years of age.

"We in the United States," he continued, "are tending to become fanatics on many subjects. It seems that any new idea that comes along is done to death. We go to extremes. I am not a drinking man, but I can see an instance right here in British Columbia of where broadmindedness is exemplified. If one requires liquor he can go and buy it. United States has gone to extremes in this question and there will be a reaction some day."

We have too many motor cars, too many telephones, too many aeroplanes. I can't cross the street without having to dodge a motor car. The age of civilization is becoming an age of extremes. Too much haste, and bustle; too little plain living."

EXPECTS GREATER TRADE IN PAPER WITH AUSTRALIA

W. Carmichael, representative of the Powell River Pulp and Paper Company at Sydney, Australia, was a passenger arriving by the Canadian-Australasian liner Niagara today.

"I see no reason why British Columbia cannot continue to maintain an even greater trade with Australia in the paper business," said Mr. Carmichael. "Conditions generally in Australia are good, although the money market is of course tight."

Mr. Carmichael stated that on account of the somewhat unsettled condition of the market, he preferred not to discuss in detail the paper situation.

Affected by Exchange.

"It is known, however, that the rate of exchange is interfering to a serious extent with the shipment of paper to the Antipodes. Foreign paper concerns, chiefly in Norway, Sweden and other countries, whose rate of exchange is favorable, are getting into the market and placing big orders.

Wood is moving well, stated Mr. Carmichael, and the lumber market is looking up. Australia is slowly but steadily recovering from the shipping slump and much of the idle tonnage which has been tied up in the various harbors is beginning to move. "I look for greatly improved business conditions in the Antipodes," concluded Mr. Carmichael.

POPULATION OF KINGSTON PRISON IS INCREASING

"Kingston, Ont., Nov. 5.—The population at the Portsmouth penitentiary on Thursday was 814. The authorities state prisoners are being brought in so rapidly that it keeps them hustling to find accommodation.

RHEUMATISM? Health is the Most Valuable Asset You Have. You cannot Afford to Neglect It.

Crofton, B. C.—"I was troubled for years with inflammatory rheumatism and rheumatic fever. I tried several cures for rheumatism, but did not receive any of them. I had been in the hospital for months, being unable to walk. A friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets.

After taking the first bottle I began to improve, and after taking six bottles I had no more rheumatism. I think Dr. Pierce's Anuric is the most wonderful medicine that any one can take for rheumatism. I have recommended these tablets to several of my friends and they, too, have all been benefited by them."

Melville Collinson.

People are realizing that the kidneys, just as do the bowels, need to be flushed occasionally. The kidneys are an eliminative organ and are constantly working, separating the poisons from the blood. Uric acid backs up into the system, causing rheumatism, neuralgia, dropsy and many other serious disturbances.

This can be avoided by stimulating the kidneys to increased action, and because of its tonic effect on these organs any one would do well to get Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets which are to be had nowadays at almost any drug store or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont., for trial package and write for free, confidential medical advice.

IMPORTER WILL BE HERE TO LOAD WITHIN TEN DAYS

Within ten days the S.S. Canadian Importer, which is having repairs effected at Vancouver, will be ready for sea and will come direct to Victoria to commence loading her cargo for Australia, according to B. C. Keely, manager for the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Ltd., at Vancouver, who arrived in the city this morning from the mainland to complete arrangements for the loading of the ship.

The contract for the repair of the Canadian Importer was let to the B. Marine Engineers & Shipbuilders, Ltd. of Vancouver, at a sum of approximately $12,000. It is reported that the ship-repair concern will lose money on the contract, as the work on the vessel has been very considerable.

Immediately the Canadian Importer is ready to sail the Government agents, she will be brought to this port and will go on berth at the Ogden Point docks to load the freight she carried during her arrival from her adventurous Pacific passage.

The lumber to be loaded amounts to 2,500,000 feet. The cause of the loss has not been officially disclosed. It is still probable that an official investigation will be held to determine the cause of the trouble.

PHILLIPS MILITARY SOLES AND HEELS

For Boys

Boys are hard on shoes—just count up the cost of your youngster's boots—what you spend for soiling and healing.

You can cut that bill in half by attaching Phillips' Military Soles and Heels to his boots.

They're made of solid rubber—tough as a pig's nose—non-slipping—can't mar the floor. They lift the leather sole clear of the wet—and you know what wet means to the life of a leather sole.

Your boy will be tickled—he'll be wearing just what the soldiers wore at the front.

You'll be pleased when you come to figure up what his shoes are costing.

STERN REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

The Trouble Must Be Treated Through the Blood.

Every rheumatic sufferer should realize that rheumatism is rooted in the blood. In order to get rid of it must be treated through the blood. The old belief that rheumatism was caused by cold, damp weather, is now exploded. Such weather conditions may start the pains, but it is not the cause. Liniments and outward applications may give temporary relief, but that is all they can do because they do not reach its sources in the blood. The sufferer from rheumatism who experiments with outward applications is only wasting time and money in depending upon such treatment; the trouble still remains and it is all the time becoming more firmly rooted. Treat this disease through the blood and you will soon find relief. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on impure, weak blood; they purify and strengthen it, and so act on the cause of the rheumatism. Mr. P. J. MacPherson, R. R. No. 5, Cardigan, P. E. I. says: "About three years ago I was attacked with rheumatism. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and soon the trouble disappeared and I am in better health than before. I also know of an old lady acquaintance who was badly crippled with rheumatism in her arms and legs, and who suffered very much. She, too, took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and is now able to do her housework. I tell you this in the hope it may be of benefit to some other sufferer."

You can procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or they will be sent you by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. (Adv't.)

MORE SALES—BETTER BUYING WILL HELP UNEMPLOYMENT MOST

By William H. Rankin

Nearly every business man is asking what can I do to help business and unemployment. Here is the remedy: Advertising is more necessary today to Manufacturers and Retailers than ever before. It can be used to help restore the proper balance of trade, produce more work through emptying the dealers' shelves. The sooner any business—and especially the retail business—price their present goods so that the public will buy, the sooner salesmen who now have goods to sell will have an opportunity to get real substantial orders from the Retailers. Orders from Retailers will help the

Manufacturers make up their minds to help sell their goods to the Consumer through advertising. Such advertising—provided the price and the quality of the merchandise is right—will help the Retailer sell the Consumer at less cost than through any other means. Consumer buying will help the Retailer—when the Retailer's shelves are cleared—then the Manufacturer's salesmen will have the opportunity not only to book orders for immediate delivery—but for future delivery as well. These orders will start the smoke in many factories which will give employment to thousands that are now unemployed—and to get the net of things—advertising can and will start this wheel of employment and prosperity if it is only given the chance. I know of a dozen of instances where advertising is doing and has done during the past six months, just what I have described in this article and any good advertising man will be glad to give names and show plans that have worked out successfully according to the advertising and sales plan referred to herein. When you stop to consider that an advertiser may use a national magazine campaign at cost of 0.0555 cents per page per home delivered or Farm papers 0.0333 cents per page or a national or local newspaper campaign at a cost of 1-10 of a cent per home reached and the average cost per page per dealer in trade papers cost but 0.078 cents you can readily understand why newspaper, magazine, farm paper and trade paper advertising pays so well. If advertising can be used to restore proper buying by the Consumer—and I know it can if properly used—then automatically the unemployment problem will be solved and solved quickly. So let us set about to see what we can do to help solve this unemployment problem by getting behind a campaign—to help the Retailers clear their shelves through energetic and persistent advertising and Salesmanship, and thus create orders for the Manufacturer which in turn will put the unemployed to work.

lack in manufacturing, with the natural advantages already referred to. If it is the case that you are dead against the introduction of manufacturing concerns, so be it; but to talk of starting concerns, minus a fair measure of protection and free trade lines is, I repeat, worse than folly. Nor can I, for the life of me, see what is to prevent both flourishing on the lines indicated. Are you afraid of becoming a second Vancouver or what? To my mind Vancouver need never have been allowed to occupy the leading position, even with all its advantages as a railway terminus. My point is that whereas Vancouver has been quick to take advantage Victoria has quickly gone to sleep and thereby missed many other advantages not enjoyed by Vancouver. Perhaps free trader can enlighten me.

we lack—she has proved her citizenship and her working capabilities in a way we are fast learning to appreciate; that is by bringing ideals, by scattering British seeds of thought that are taking root somewhere, and by strengthening the bonds of Empire, which is best of all. At this juncture it is wrong to allow any suggestion that Canada "must" have population at all costs. There is much unemployment. Only women emigrants having some means of livelihood, or some working knowledge, should be invited to come, and it reflects rather badly on Canada and its manhood, to ask women from the British Isles to come out here—look the men over—then go back if things do not appeal to them, at the expense of the government! I protest with all the power of my pen against any such idea being attempted. I protest, not only in the name of British manhood, but in the name of Canadian common-sense. I think, perhaps, Mrs. McClung's humor (which is perennial) must be at work "over there." MARY MARKWELL, Victoria, B. C. Bill: "Uho, Enery! Got that crate of chickens you sent the wife all right but next time I wish you'd fasten 'em up a bit more careful. Comin' from the station the beastly things got out. I spent hours scourin' the neighborhood, and then found only ten of 'em." Enery: "Ush, Bill; I only sent six."—Tit-Bits.

PROTECTION VS. FREE TRADE.

To the Editor:—In your issue of yesterday's date "Free Trader," writes of the "Protectionist Errors" as if he himself were immune.

With no axe to grind, may I be permitted to remind him of the good old saying, humanum est errare? As a Britisher, I venture to suggest what you need in Canada is a measure of fair trade. To go to either extreme is only courting failure. You cannot afford to indulge in either luxury, either free trade or rabid protection. To talk of free trade is, from a manufacturers point of view, utter nonsense.

To start up industries here, and you are too sound asleep as it is, without a fair measure of protection would be madness indeed. Free trader is altogether too sweeping in his assertions. I cannot follow him, but in his mind and this lecture I did not hear. With the natural advantages you possess here I am amazed to find you so very backward in many ways.

It seems to me that opinion in Victoria and neighborhood is too much divided. On the one hand, you have a residential centre plus the tourist traffic, a big asset, I admit, but on the other hand there is a great

HITS THE FARMER.

To the Editor:—In Canada, according to the figures of a Professor of our Federal revenues are raised by taxes on such things as are used by those engaged in the wealth-producing occupations—there is no other way. Of that amount fifty per cent is paid by the farmer class, and the balance by the labor classes employed in the different wealth-producing occupations. That leaves twenty per cent to be raised by the non-producing class—and that is simply absorbed wealth. Quite a difference between the two, the reader will observe.

And to enable the farmer to meet his share—the lion's share of the Federal tax, protection probably adds twenty per cent to the value of his product. So that the difference between the twenty per cent increase in the value of his products, or, in other words, his purchasing power, due to the tariff, represents the so-called benefits the farmer gets out of protection.

FRUITGROWER.

STATE MATRIMONIAL BUREAU.

To the Editor:—Mrs. Nellie McClung's "State Matrimonial Bureau" as suggested by her in England, is to my mind an unfortunate thing. The class of British women Canada wants and wants badly, is not the husband-hunting sort. In fact, any such suggestion coming from a Canadian or English soil, is apt to kill women-emigration altogether.

Unless Canada has something to offer the British woman in the shape of work—work suited to her ability—then, both Canada and the British woman are both better off apart. We do not want the incapable kind, either as wives or workers; but we do want women capable of helping us where help is needed.

I had some years' experience in emigration work in Great Britain, doing press and potterium work in England and Ireland, and I found no difficulty whatever in obtaining the very best kind of material, without offering offensive rewards in the shape of "Bureau husbands." I can assure you, Mr. Editor, the suggestion, to the average British woman, is enough to kill any prospect of her coming. She has come to us in numbers already—she has brought with her much that

Are You "TOO OLD" at Fifty?

How to Regain Health In Later Years

IN the past, it has been customary to expect certain afflictions with advancing years, and it was believed there was no remedy for them. Such ideas are fast changing, as a result of the wonderful accomplishments of medical science. When a man or woman nears the age of 50, their vital force often depends upon the proper action of the kidneys. Many people are inclined to regard backache, headaches, painful urination, swollen joints and pains in the sides as a sign of age—and something of little importance. Yet, these complaints can be remedied by affording the kidneys some assistance to enable them to properly perform their natural functions. That is the reason so many people of middle life write telling us they would not be without

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

The letter of Mrs. Hugh McLeod is typical of thousands of others reaching us from all parts of Canada. She says: "I am 51 years old, and the mother of eight children. Five years ago, I was troubled with backache and dull pains across the abdomen. I used a box of Gin Pills, and feel so much better that I will continue to use Gin Pills."

Mr. E. G. Woodford writes: "Your remedy I find, at 60 years of age, to give me perfect relief."

You should give Gin Pills a trial. They will bring you surprising relief from many of the troubles of age, by helping to keep the kidneys and bladder in good condition. Try a sample, and you will never want to be without them. On sale everywhere—50c a box—remember, you get your money back, if they do not relieve you. A sample can be obtained by writing:—

Slim Halderson and Frederickson Will Play With Victoria

Lester Patrick Puts Fans Right In Regard to Saskatoon's Holler Over Halderson; "Freddie" Now Making Preparations to Leave Winnipeg For Coast; Fans Will Welcome Him Back.

Frank Frederickson and "Slim" Halderson will both play for Victoria this winter. Not even the carrying away of railway bridges by floods or the freezing of locomotive wheels to the rails will keep this pair away from the Capital. If all means of transportation fail they will don their skates, skiddaddle up the rivers and lakes and walk across the areas they can't skate upon. If they're a little late for the opening they'll be along before the season finishes.

Lester Patrick announced upon his return yesterday from the annual meeting of the P. C. H. A. that both the former Falcon stars would appear on the ice in the blue and gold uniforms this winter. "Freddie" will be available for centre and Halderson is slated for right wing.

No Faith Broken.

Lester was put out over the item which emanated from Calgary to the effect that the Coast mogul had broken faith through signing Halderson.

"We have broken faith with no one," remarked Lester. "We never have in the past and never will in the future. We signed Halderson in accordance with our rights and he will play in Victoria this winter. He has already wired for his transportation. I announced to the public that Halderson would play here I knew what I was talking about."

Lester then went on to explain that Saskatoon was laboring under a misapprehension.

Saskatoon an Outsider.

The P. C. H. A. entered into an agreement with the Alberta "Big Four" in August last and it was agreed that all players then held by each league should be recognized as the property of those leagues. Since that time Saskatoon has been taken into the "Big Four," which has been renamed the "Western Big Five."

"FREDDIE"

Frederickson as clear as crystals in order to save him from running his string up further.

A Nice Scoring Machine.
Whether the inclusion of Halderson in the Aristocrats line will increase Freddie's effectiveness is not known. Halderson was always close runner-up to Frederickson in their amateur days and if he is as deadly now with his shots, the Aristocrats will have a great scoring machine.

Both Frederickson and Halderson will be out here within two weeks and will start getting into shape for the opening of the season. Moose Johnson will be along here very shortly and Eddie Oatman is already getting limbered up at the Arena.

England Will Battle With Scotland Monday

With both sides equally confident, England will face Scotland at the Stadium on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to decide the first game played in the new International Football League.

Nearly every team in the city will be represented in the battle. The Metropolitan squad have not a face on either line-up, due to the fact that all their players are "natives."

The International Football League was formed last week. The Native Sons constitute the third team and will be featured in future holiday games.

The International Soccer Association attraction the Wednesday Football League has arranged two games for Monday morning. The officials of the league are anxious to give the football fans a chance to see the brand of play staged in the Wednesday League. The fixtures in this circuit are always played on Wednesday and consequently many enthusiasts never get a chance to see them.

The games arranged in the Wednesday League for Monday are as follows:
Kirkham's vs. Garrison at Beacon Hill, Referee, Payne.
Retta, Weller's at Royal Athletic Park, Referee, R. A. Wilcox.
The kickoff will be at 10:30 o'clock.

Big Year in Amateur Hockey, Predicts Dan

President O'Sullivan Thinks That Race Will Be Particularly Keen and That League Attendance Records Will Be Shattered replied Dan O'Sullivan, president of the Victoria Amateur Hockey Association when questioned this morning as to whether he thought the brand of senior hockey here this winter would surpass that of last season.

"I think you will find that all the teams will be better balanced," he continued. "It will not be a runaway race. Last year interest lagged a lot through the Senators having things their own way but things will be much different this winter. From what I can gather the Elks, Garrison and War Vets have strengthened their clubs and it may be that some of last year's players will not be good enough for the league this year.

Much New Blood.
"It is good to know that so many new players have either arrived in town or have developed sufficiently in our midst to be fit for senior company. It behooves all those interested in the senior game here to take a hand in helping along the youngsters who are anxious to play hockey but have no one to guide them along."

WINNIPEG ANXIOUS TO HAVE DEMPSEY FIGURE IN FIGHT

Winnipeg, Nov. 5.—The Winnipeg Sporting Club has made an offer of $150,000 to Jack Dempsey to meet an opponent in Winnipeg next summer. Manager Kearns said he would withhold his decision for a few weeks.

MRS. WILSON IS NEW CAPTAIN AT OAK BAY

Ladies' Golf Club Holds Annual Meeting; Miss Peters Wins Tombstone Competition.

The tombstone competition played yesterday by the ladies of the Victoria Golf Club for the prizes presented by Mrs. Philbrick, the retiring ladies captain, resulted as follows: In the "A" division Miss Peters was first and Mrs. B. Wilson second, and in the "B" division Mrs. Seale was first and Miss K. Neame second.

LOOKING THINGS OVER

(BY ARCHIE WILLS)

What a Price Willard Wants to Pay.
Jess Willard wants a return but with Jack Dempsey for the sole purpose of securing balm for his wounded pride. My what this man's pride must be worth. He's willing in money and oil down south and yet he wants to be turned loose with the Utah slugger in a canvas ring. After his last milling with Dempsey he was dragged out between the ropes the goriest hunk of pulp that ever left a prize ring. It would take a lot of balm to cover all Willard's bruises, but evidently he figures he's good enough to collect it. But from this distance it looks as though Dempsey will knock the "L" out of Willard's "balm." It would just be a bambasting battle with Dempsey giving and Jess taking all the "bam." If Willard is wise he'll use his oil wells to soothe his wounded pride.

Let's Look at the Scottish Football Tour Funds.

Footballers all over Canada as well as the thousands of fans who tossed their dollars at the ticket-sellers when the Scottish internationals made their tour last spring, are entitled to know what happened to the "profits." It is no use President McNeill and Secretary Roy saying there were no profits. Anyone in Victoria who attended the banquet tendered the visiting players at the Dominion Hotel know different. President McNeill told everyone that all the money taken in at games played after the one here would constitute "profits." A number of games were staged and some thousands of dollars must have passed into the hands of the Dominion Football Association. There should be no unwillingness on the part of the officials to present the financial statement. There must be one. If there isn't the men who are now running the D. F. A. have no right to be in office. Enough time has elapsed since the Scottish team left to prepare a dozen statements. So, Messrs. McNeill and Roy, come on and show your cards.

Looking for Irish Champions.

Jack McAuliffe, undefeated lightweight champion, is going over to Ireland to try and dig up two new champions. He wants an Irish lightweight and a Shamrock heavy that will mop up anything in the United States. The Irish have certainly had plenty of training, having been fighting for about five centuries. If McAuliffe can bring back two men labelled as the Sinn Fein champions of the world, he may be able to achieve a lot in the States. Any ordinary fighter stacking up against a Sinn Fein champion would be worried to death through the fact that he would not know what to expect. He would be double-crossed on every punch.

Make Way for the Amateur Hockeyists.

Just put down December 1 in your "date-book." That's the night the Victoria Amateur Hockey League will open at the Arena. A crowd of at least 2,000 fans is expected at the opening games in order to give the youngsters a good send-off. The hockey this year will be far superior to anything known in the past. Many new players are in town and the four teams will be more evenly balanced than last year, which will result in interest being maintained until the last game is played.

Don't Forget This Date Either.

Here's another date to keep clear. It is Friday, December 3. On that night the first professional hockey game will be played at the Arena. Seattle will be the guests of Victoria. The schedule is getting under way much earlier this year, but none too soon for the thousands of fans who find the long winter evenings beginning to drag on their hands. During December, January and February folks can fill at least two evenings each week with hockey fixtures, the amateurs having the Arena reserved on Mondays while the pros will cavort about on Fridays.

Amateur Hockey to Open Up Dec. 5 With Fine Doubleheader

Elks and Garrison to Meet in Opening Tussle and Senators and War Vets Will Mingle in Second; Club Managers Are Busy Getting Their Teams Into Shape; Encourage Juniors and Commercial Leagues.

Amateur hockey will be ushered in on Monday evening, December 5.

Two games will be played. The Elks and Garrison will meet in the first tussle and the Senators and War Vets, ancient rivals, will provide the second battle.

These important decisions were made at a meeting of the executive of the Victoria Amateur Hockey Association held last evening. The officials were anxious to get the league underway as early as possible, but wished to give the athletes every chance to get into shape. The first Monday in December proved satisfactory to the club managers and was set aside for the inauguration of the 1921-22 season.

Cumberland Club Guilty of Offense and Manager and Players Suspended

Entire Schedule Must Be Re-played; President Brown Resigns; A Night Raid

Nanaimo, Nov. 5.—The suspension of two players and the manager of the Cumberland football team was the result of a meeting of the Upper Island Football League delegates on Thursday night.

The president of the league, James Brown, who is also Cumberland's manager, resigned, and J. C. McGregor was elected to his place. The trouble arose over a complaint of the Nanaimo club that Cumberland had sent Brown, Irvine and Conti, the suspended men, down here in the middle of the night recently and persuaded Kenny, a man just signed up by the locals, to move to Cumberland. The Cumberland club were found guilty of violating rule 24 of the B. C. F. A.

REGINA DETHRONED AS RUGBY CHAMPS

Saskatoon Benefits by Replay, Winning Saskatchewan Title Yesterday

Saskatoon, Nov. 5.—Regina as Saskatchewan rugby champions are no more. After having ruled over the Western Canadian football world for the last ten years without a break, the Southerners yesterday fell victims to the Saskatoon huskies and lost the replay of the protested match by 19 to 6. Saskatoon's protest of a doubtful result has been converted into a clear-cut victory. There was no disputing the fact that Saskatoon was by far the better team yesterday, and their superiority was just enough to give them their first provincial championship since the game was introduced in the city.

How They Scored.

Saskatoon took an early lead. A touchdown was scored in the first quarter and this was converted. Regina evened the score in the third, a touchdown and a convert doing the trick. Two runs and a kick to the line completed the scoring for the locals.

By their win yesterday Saskatoon will play the Winnipeg Victorias on Thanksgiving Day in Victoria, for the right to meet the Edmonton Eskimos in the final for the Western Canada title.

New York, Nov. 5.—In an effort to recover money said to have been loaned Tex Rickard for promotion of the Johnson-Jeffries bout in 1919 and other big sporting events, Frank D. In his complaint, Armstrong stated he advanced Rickard $10,000 to aid in promoting the Johnson-Jeffries contest, also that he helped the promoter when he managed the Gans-Neisener bout in Goldfield, Nevada, and when he obtained the lease on Madison Square Garden. The two corporations named in the complaint, Armstrong said, owed Rickard $250,000, but Rickard had told him he had no money to pay his debts. The complaint was filed in the Supreme Court.

ANNOUNCEMENT PLEASES GOOD ROAD ENTHUSIASTS

Trans - Provincial Highway Now Promises to Be Reality

The announcement by Hon. J. H. King, Minister of Public Works in the Provincial Government that a decision had been made with regard to the construction of the necessary link to give highway connection between the coast of British Columbia and the interior section of Canada has given great satisfaction to officials of the Canadian Highway Association, the Good Roads League, the Victoria Automobile Club and the various organizations which have been striving to induce the Government to make a start on this important phase of the province's highway system.

The fact that a start is likely to be made shortly is further good news for good roads advocates, and it is believed that the route chosen—that out of Hope—will meet with the approval of the majority of those interested in seeing the necessary link built. Dr. King explained that of the four routes which figured as possibilities the Hope-Allison, or Dewdney-False route is the most feasible from the standpoint of economy, service, and every other consideration.

Discussing the matter with Stephen Jones and Alderman A. E. Todd, two of the leaders of the Canadian Highway Association, these gentlemen agreed that the completion of the link would later lead to the building of some of the other links which when completed will give further complete trans-provincial highway routes for the benefit of settlers, miners, tourists and others. The association has been very active since its organization on the one specific aim of getting a start made on the construction of the highway link, the cost of which is estimated at $200,000.

The Good Roads League has been working on this proposition for some years and after a great deal of difference of opinion as to choice of routes it was finally decided that the government engineers would be the best judges of the most satisfactory route. The choice made, therefore, meets with the approval of many who Paris, Nov. 5.—Indignation which is likely to be shared in the United States, is being aroused throughout Italy by the news that the municipality of Venice has decided to build a bridge across the lagoon for motor traffic to connect with the mainland.

Car Insurance Is Divided Into Five Categories as Risks

Not everyone realizes the enormous amount of money invested in automobiles in this city. Provincial statistics indicate that the motor-owning proportion of the population is one person in every seventeen. In Victoria and vicinity, owing to the density of population, the proportion is much greater.

As an asset, an automobile may be safely regarded at its present cost value, less reasonable depreciation, say 15 to 20 per cent. per annum. However, it can only be regarded as an asset just so long as it is intact, and a fire, theft or collision, if of a serious character, can easily convert the best of cars into a dead loss, or even a liability. Therefore, to preserve the asset, and avoid the dangers and liability, insurance protection becomes absolutely necessary.

It is a far cry from the days of the early Phoenicians, those hardy traders who first conceived the idea of protecting themselves against losses through a system of insurance, to the present day scope and efficiency of the insurance business. With the ascent of the motor car as a means of transportation, the insurance companies have kept pace with the requirements of the industry and are now able to offer protection and assume losses arising through any or all of the dangers that daily menace the auto owners. In order to completely insure against all risks, the companies have segregated their coverings as follows:

(1) Fire—including transportation assuming owner's risk of loss from fire or transportation arising through any cause whatsoever.

(2) Theft—Assuming owner's risk of loss from theft, robbery or pilferage, and including damage to cars while in the hands of thieves.

(3) Collision—Assuming owner's risk of loss through collision with any object, moving or stationary.

(4) Property damage—Assuming owner's legal liability for damage to property of other persons or of the public resulting from collision with any object, moving or stationary.

(5) Public liability—Assuming owner's legal liability for personal injuries or death to persons of the public up to $5,000 for one person or $10,000 for more than one.

A great many motor owners overlook the fact that their responsibility is imposed by law. Damages, in the event of a suit, are awarded by a jury and cannot be evaded. In covering these risks the insurance companies also assume the legal costs incurred.

The average person of intelligence makes it a first consideration to protect his furniture, piano or personal property against financial loss through causes over which he has no control, such as fire, lightning, theft, burglary, etc. The owner of an automobile, which represents no mean portion of his capital and should be regarded as an asset, in many cases, is content to run the chances of having an accident which may cost him anywhere from a trivial sum to, from $100 to $10,000. For insurance protection, such people actually place their financial position in jeopardy and arrogantly neglect to assume their own legal responsibilities as a motor owner.

The new year will witness radical changes in the present traffic regulations owing to the alteration of the rule of the road and although the risks of car operation cannot be increased, the danger of accidents will be many times multiplied. The authorities, automobile associations and other interested parties are urging numerous precautions on motor owners and citizens in order to minimize the inevitable collision and large increase in accidents which is bound to attend the change. Unfortunately, even the most reputable and careful drivers will in no manner be able to consider themselves exempt from danger.

Serious consideration of this matter should convince the uninsured motorist, or car owner, that his first duty to himself, as well as to the public, is to obtain adequate protection against losses and the only certain available protection is insurance. It guarantees the permanency of a car as an asset and protects against all losses.

Improved Motor Gears Dispel Need For Coarse Grease to Insure Silence

Some years ago grease was the most desirable lubricant for transmission and differential gears. That was before the stub-tooth gear became the standard for transmission use, and before the spiral bevel gear was almost universally adopted for the final drive. It was at the time when automotive engineers were "cutting" gears rather than "generating" them.

The methods that pointed the way to silence in gear action had not, at that time, been clearly defined. The automobile engineer turned to the use of grease, not because it was a superior lubricant, but because its character and consistency exerted a cushioning effect which tended to quiet noisy gears. Also, being non-filmy, it was less likely to seep through housings that were not perfectly leak-proof.

To-day conditions are entirely different. Carefulness in gear design, in gear production and in gear mounting and in the choice of materials from which housings are made, have played a big part in producing quiet running gear-sets.

Silence Attained.

The wide use of ball and roller-type anti-friction bearings has done much in the attainment of silence. In present day transmission and differential cases, the lubricant is used, not as a silencer, but strictly as a lubricant. Grease, with its large soap stock content and its relatively small percentage of mineral oil—the actual lubricant—falls short of the mark.

The modern transmission and differential require a lubricant possessing the following characteristics:

1. It must be of a character and consistency to coat, follow, cushion and provide adequate lubrication for the gear mesh.
2. It must be capable of thorough distribution to any ball, roller or plain bearings provided in the construction, and must be of such a character that it will exert absolutely no corroding effect on the highly polished steel balls or rollers and their raceways.
3. It must contain no insoluble matter, however finely divided or of whatever lubricating value, since due to difference in densities and heavy pressures encountered, precipitation and separation of the heavier matter is bound to occur.
4. It should be of a body and character to minimize resistance and power loss due to the churning action of the gears on the body of the lubricant, and, in the case of the transmission, to offer the least possible resistance to the manual act of gear-shifting.
5. It should be capable of carrying off the greatest amount of heat, and of exerting a washing action on the gear tooth and bearing surfaces, thereby keeping them free from sediment and small particles incidental to wear.
6. It should be of a body to forestall leakage from the gear case of the differential case under all operating conditions likely to be encountered.

From a consideration of these points, a straight mineral oil of heavy body stands out pre-eminently as the correct lubricant for the greater number of present-day transmissions and differential gears.

Most manufacturers are now fitting fillers to the transmission and differential housings which are of a type best adapted for use with a fluid lubricant. These fillers are so located as to determine the proper oil-level within the case.

Serves Two Purposes.

The tendency is also, in the case of the transmission, to make this lubricant serve for the lubrication of the clutch release bearing and the clutch release collar. For this purpose the clutch shaft is provided with a drilling. Thus this drilling, which is packed with felt to regulate the oil flow, the transmission lubricant is conducted to the clutch release bearings. It is not unusual also for the transmission manufacturer to provide a small drilling to drain back to the case any excess oil working through the ball or roller bearings on which the mainshaft is carried.

If grease is used in a transmission and differential housings should be cleaned and supplied with new lubricant after the first 500 miles. The transmission and differential housings on all cars should be inspected at regular intervals to determine if sufficient supply of lubricant is present. All transmission and differential housings should be drained, thoroughly cleaned and refilled with the correct lubricant to the proper level every 2,000 miles.

WILL LINK REVELSTOKE BY ROAD WITH NELSON

With the completion of the Rossland-Cascade link of the trans-provincial highway, and a two mile gap in the road connection between Okanagan and Revelstoke motorists will be able to travel from Nelson, according to William Ramsey, district engineer of the provincial department of public works. Mr. Ramsey returned from Revelstoke on Wednesday, where he inspected the progress of the Revelstoke-Sicamous link.

He stated that within three weeks, the Revelstoke-Cascade link will be carried westward to within two miles of Taft, at which point, the road East from Sicamous terminates. There is also a little finishing work on the road South of Sicamous to be completed in the vicinity of Mara Lake, this Fall. From that point, the system will connect with the Okanagan Valley system through Vernon, Kelowna, Penticton and thence Eastward along the Rossland-Cascade link to Nelson. The whole system will be of standard roads—sixteen feet wide.

Said the pretty young teacher: "Now, children, if you want to subtract one think from another, both must be of the same denomination. You cannot take three apples from four peaches, or two marbles from nine buttons. You must take three apples from four apples, and so on. Do you understand?"

Most of the children understood, or said they did. But little Dick, who lives in the country, raised his hand timidly and said: "Yes, but teacher, couldn't you take three quarts of milk from four cows?"—Tit-Bits

Bobby's Adventures In Swan-Land

By Geoffrey T. Butler—Copyright Applied for

CHAPTER VII.

AFTER proceeding for a short distance, and crossing a low hill, they came into a steaming valley, which was known as the Hot Spring country. Here they found hot springs on every side. In fact they were so numerous that the ground everywhere was quite warm. The vegetation here was very rank, flowers and berry bushes growing everywhere, so that Bobby and Bunny had no trouble in getting plenty of fruit. After they had eaten sufficient, they chose a nice mossy bank under a wide spreading tree, and lay down for the night.

Next morning when they awoke they found that the steam had settled down like a bank of fog during the night, and the sun's rays was now turning it into gold and rose. "This is all very beautiful," remarked Bobby; "but I am afraid we will not be able to make much headway, if the steam does not go away. However, we will see about finding something to eat, and by that time, maybe it will have gone."

After they had made another meal of fruit and wild celery, the atmosphere was somewhat clearer, so they started once more on their journey.

Suddenly, Bobby exclaimed, "What ever is that I see?"

"Where?" cried Bunny.

"Over there." And looking in that direction, Bunny saw a great stream of hot water shooting up to the sky.

"Oh, that must be a geyser," said Bobby.

"I don't think I would like it to spurt over me," remarked the rabbit. Just then another spring erupted, then another, and another until they seemed to be on every side. The steam now began to settle down in great clouds about them.

"Come on Bunny," cried Bobby, "we must get out of here." So taking hold of Bunny's paw he led his little friend back by the way they had come. The two groped along in the fog for some distance, coming at length to the edge of the hot spring belt. Here they passed out of the steam and along the edge of the hot water pools, coming to terraces of beautifully colored mud, some being still quite warm, but most of them had cooled off and run down the rocks like a lot of many colored giant ribbons. After passing these, they changed their course to the east, because Bobby said, "he thought that Violet River must lay in that direction." Which proved to be correct, for when they had traveled in this direction for a short distance, they came to the banks of the river. Here a wonderful sight met their gaze. As far as they could see, on both banks of the river, was one gigantic bed of violets, while the air was filled with their fragrance. Even the waters of the river seemed to be of violet hue. Ducks with violet colored backs, swam gracefully to and fro. In fact every thing about the river reminded one of violets.

"I think we had better keep along the top of the bank, so as not to crush the flowers," said Bobby. So, skirting the edge of the violet-covered bank, they soon came to the Fairy Dell. What a beautiful sight was before them. For a moment they both stood and gazed. Then both with one breath exclaimed, "O-o-o!"

"Well, I am glad we came," said Bobby. "I would not have missed this for anything."

"Nor I, either," replied Bunny.

The Fairy Dell had the appearance of a huge out-door theatre, the lower part being level, while on three sides the sloping banks were covered with giant, feathery-like ferns. Beautiful flowers peeped their heads up on all sides, graceful little bluebells peeped out from amidst the ferns, and nodding their little heads in the summer breeze, seemed to say, "Welcome to our Dell." Wide spreading reeds grew everywhere, and as the sunbeams made their way through the green foliage, little golden-haired Fairies could be seen swinging in cobweb hammocks, suspended from the huge ferns.

Bobby and Bunny descended the sloping bank, and found the low land covered with a deep, soft moss, in which were growing many giant toad stools. Upon these toad stools were seated many golden-haired Fairies, while overhead little red squirrels chattered in the trees.

In the centre of the Dell they came to a beautiful little lake surrounded by mossy banks, while many lovely white water lilies floated gracefully upon its surface. Here and there little green frogs could be seen peeping out from amongst the white petals. Above in the sunlight, brightly colored butterflies flitted to and fro.

At one end of the lake a small brook flowed out to Violet River.

"Let's rest here," said Bunny.

"Yes," answered Bobby, "I think we have gone far enough for to-day. After we have rested a bit, we must see what we can find for a boat to carry us down the river to Song Bird land."

They both lay down on the soft moss, and soon were fast asleep. As evening came on they were awakened by the croaking of the frogs, and looking up, they saw the Fairies all about them. The Fairy Queen came forward with her magic wand in her hand, and addressing Bobby, said, "Where do you mortals come from?"

"Oh, we came from the outside world," answered Bobby.

"But how did you get to this land?" she asked.

Then Bobby told her the whole story of how the swans had brought them, while all the Fairies sat round and listened. When he had finished his story, the Queen wanted to know what they were doing in her Dell.

"We want to go to Song Bird land," said Bobby, "but we have no boat."

"Well," said the Queen, "you shall have one of my lilies," and waving her wand over one of the lilies growing near the edge of the lake, it at once became much larger, and addressing Bobby and Bunny, she said,

"Now climb into this lily and watch the dance, for to-night all my Fairies are going to dance on the lake. To-morrow morning I will start you on your way to Song Bird land. The two did as they were told, and made themselves very comfortable between the petals of the lily. Soon all the frogs commenced to croak, and one by one the little Fairies came out and danced upon the water, while overhead the fire flies darted about like hundreds of tiny electric lights illuminating the Fairy Dell.

Their little friends watched until their eyes grew weary, and they dropped off to sleep.

When they awoke in the morning they found that they had already passed out of the Fairy lake, and were now floating down the Violet River in their great lily boat. Can you imagine their surprise when they discovered that the good Fairies had placed fruit and honey in their boat while they slept?

Hikes and Rides Planned For Thanksgiving

WITH a week of general excitement, in which numerous Hallowe'en stunts played an important part on Monday last, the Junior and Preparatory grades of the Y. M. C. A. have had a busy period in the last seven days. Yesterday the junior division held their annual club banquet, in the boys' department of the institution, eleven clubs sitting down to an excellent repast, in a gaily decorated assembly room.

Each club had its own leaders and its own original stunts, and the evening of merriment which followed showed a rare fund of active enjoyment present in the junior section of the institute. The proceedings were staged by the boys themselves, under the assistance of Harold C. Cross, Delmar Battrick, and James McEwan.

On Monday next the Preparatory squads, five in number will parade for a hike in the morning, assembling at 9.30 a.m., and taking in a good section of the district in the course of their rambles, with Delmar Battrick as their leader. At ten o'clock the juniors will indulge in a bicycle ride to Goldstream, where the remainder of the day will be spent in a number of interesting ways.

This has been a record year in the junior and preparatory departments, it is stated, with 103 renewals of members in the last month alone, 87 of which were for new members. The juniors are now engaged upon a keen series of basketball events, while the preparatory grades are organized into five squads for the purpose of games and club meetings. Each group on both classes have their own leaders and manage their own affairs.

Naval Brigade Delighted With New Drill Quarters

FOLLOWING active representations to the Provincial Government the Boys' Naval Brigade are now installed in the Old Drill Hall on Menzies Street, which building had been loaned to them by the Provincial Government for their training. Gone is the ship's office on Broad Street, and the entire brigade headquarters is now snugly ensconced in the Old Drill Hall, where facilities for training are infinite.

The band has been allotted a special room for practice, in one of the balcony sets of the Old Drill Hall, while another has been relegated to the Petty Officers of the corps as a mess room. The wide and spacious building affords an ample room for signalling and drill that could not have been secured under the old circumstances, and the training of the brigade has been greatly aided by the acquisition, even if but temporary of the former military training centre, it is stated.

The use of the entire building has been lent to the Navy League for the Boys' Naval Brigade, which has now grown to such proportions that the training in seamanship carried on all during the year was difficult in the cramped quarters available before. Under their instructors the boys have taken on a new zest in their work greatly encouraged by the kind offer of the Provincial Government.

The brigade is now proud in a Canadian record for 56 boys at sea, out of the single training centre of Victoria and district. Two lads got away to their posts this week, being Cadets Murray and J. Kelly, who will ship immediately on the C.G.M.M. Canadian Transporter from Vancouver, their voyage including a call at Oriental ports in China and Japan.

With the new and adequate quarters now at their command the local division of the Boys' Naval Brigade is settling down to a winter of happy training in congenial surroundings, the like of which they have not before dreamed possible in this connection.

DO UNTO OTHERS

Daddy had just returned home from a hard day at the office, to be told that his little girl would not go to sleep until he had said good night to her. Accordingly he dragged himself upstairs to the nursery, and all was quiet for perhaps some twenty minutes. Mother, in the sitting room below smiled softly to herself, the child must be going to sleep now she thought.

Presently a pitter-patter sounded softly on the stairs and a little white clad figure glided into the room, finger on lip. "What? You here," began the astonished parent. "Hush, hush, Mummy, I've got Daddy to sleep."

SEA LIONS UPON THE ICE

Children Not To Blame For Damage

HALLOWE'EN has come and gone, and in spite of a volume of damage done, who is there who will say that the children of this city did not behave themselves on that great occasion? A large number of gates were found in strange places the following day, many fire-crackers found their way in through open windows, but through it all, the real damage was not done by the children of the community, but by older and less honest groups—youths and lasses—who have grown too old for such pranks.

In very few cases can real damage be laid to the doors of the younger members of the district, who almost without exception had their fun, and frolic, but did little real harm. Boys gathered in gangs and held mock fights with fire-crackers, but seldom did they molest others. Girls, little bands of ghosts paraded the streets with here and there a timid "Boo" to heighten the affect of the costume, but damage as far as the younger people was concerned there was little.

Damage was done, however, and serious damage too, by ill-behaved groups of more advanced years. Boys of eighteen and nineteen wrecked property and placed the lives and houses of people in danger with lighted fuses and crackers, but it stands as credit to our readers that they were not concerned in all this, and that they, though less advanced in years, were more highly developed in honor and sense.

Nature Has Fireworks In Store For Us Twice This Month

IF little reader, you have occasion to be abroad after dusk on the night of November 13 or again on the night of November 27 do not fail to look for shooting stars. Shooting stars are meteoroids which are little bodies all of their own, and they, too, have a regular course around the sun. The meteors, however, travel in one huge train, as if they were running a race, and take a long time to make a circuit of the sun.

Once in every thirty-three years or so the earth crosses the path of the meteors around the sun about the same time as the meteor express is at the particular point in its orbit, and then it is that we may expect to see the greatest display of shooting stars. The last great shower of meteors was in the year 1899, so that the next may not be expected until the year 1932, and in August and November of that year.

The August meteors are seen radiating from a point in the constellation of Perseus, and are called Perseids, while the November display are seen on November 13, called Leonides, seen radiating from the constellation Leo, or on November 27 from the constellation of Andromeda, or Andromedes. Of course these dates are not fixed and the display may be a day earlier or later. The gigantic exhibition comes to us only every thirty-three years, but as the earth crosses the meteor-track at least once in the year, a few stragglers are sure to be seen at these times.

The meteors are like contestants in a foot race, they start together, but the fastest runners draw ahead, while the main body travels in a pack and the stragglers fall behind—the lazy ones these. It so happens that everytime we get close enough to the meteor track the atmosphere of the earth is sure to ensnare one or more, and it is then that we are permitted to see this wonderful sight.

The meteors are travelling at a tremendous pace in the freedom of the heavens and when they run against the resistance of our atmosphere they become very angry, and get indeed white hot.

The atmosphere of our planet offers such a firm resistance to the impetuous path of the meteors that they are quite burned up in anger, and we see them at the point of extinction. You may have noticed at a firework display how the rocket will burst and its sparks glimmer for a moment falling and trailing off in darkness again. It is just so with the meteors and the little meteoroids, which you know as shooting stars.

You can't easily tell from this that the display of shooting stars is well worth seeing, for every little gem you see is in the very act of being obliterated, and each one of them might have been travelling around the sun on its peaceful path for generations before the earth came to interfere with its course in this disturbing manner.

Here, then, is another thing to remember, were it not for the earth's atmosphere, which burns up the shooting stars the surface of the earth would be continually pelted with large and small lumps of metallic substance, any one of which would be sufficient to kill a man and the largest of which would make shoft work of our largest buildings. The atmosphere then is our safeguard, or else we would have been dead long, long ago.

If you have felt a rifle bullet which has been fired against a block of lead, you will understand how the heat of the resistance offered to the meteors by the air can burn them up.

Do not fail to be on the watch on both November 13 and again on November 27, and your interest is bound to be repaid. There is an old legend which says that the beholder of a shooting star will have one wish granted for every shooting star he can see, so save your wishes for the two nights in this month when you are most likely to see this wonderful sight.

Monster Kings In The Arctic Circle

AWAY in the North of us, in the great Arctic Circle, and in the Behring Straits live a race of monsters of the deep that have in turn been called "Sea-horses, Sea-cows, and Sea-elephants," and each with some right, for the creatures are weird looking and have habits and manners of living that resemble all three animals on this dry land. The Morse is the correct name for the monster which is thus described, and as a full-grown specimen will often be twenty-five feet long, he has some claim to the names he has been called.

As we might expect to find, seeing that he lives in the coldest and hardest of all climates the morse has a thick hide, which is corrugated and covered with a short growth of hair. Under the skin is a thick layer of fat, and this enables him to live in comfort in the cold of the Arctic Circle, and indeed he would die a very quick death in warmer climates. His eyes are small, but for all that are very keen.

The morse is armed with two long tusks growing out of his strong jaws, the tusks being bent backwards like the head of a pick axe. The morse uses these tusks for fighting, and for hunting and grubbing for his food, often tearing up the bottom of the ocean floor in his search for something really good to eat. But that is not all, the morse has grinders, and such grinders.

We are accustomed to feel some degree of wonder at the immense teeth of the ordinary bull dog, but the morse has a set of teeth that would make the self-respecting bull dog green with envy. The upper jaw have spear-shaped teeth which fit into hollow-topped teeth in the lower, as a pestle in a mortar, and it must be a strong substance which would withstand the terrific crunching that it gets from the average morse.

In fine weather many of these weird monsters of the deep may be seen gambolling in the water, they call one to the other with roars not unlike a bull. Others may be seen dozing and basking in the sunshine, with a very evident enjoyment for this blessing of nature. If you see a band of morse asleep, you will not have to look far for a sentinel that is very much awake, and at the first sign of war on your part, the whole troop will be roused to do battle, or to flee as the circumstances prompt, but it is not often that they will flee without doing battle, with all but vastly superior force.

Pecculiarly enough the morse is not fierce, or as daring as the common seal, but when attacked will do battle with indomitable courage. In battle they are led by the oldest and strongest member of the tribe, he in fact is their king and will continue in that high office until a younger morse vanquish him, when the new king will be as readily followed as the deposed monster.

There is an authentic report on record of a party of sailors who shot a morse sleeping in a group of others, the whole herd charged the sailors who carried old-fashioned muskets and could not reload in time to be of use in the struggle that followed. The lives of the party were in danger when the purser of the group discharged his musket which he had retained for such an event and shot the leader of the infuriated morse.

The whole band gathered around the dying leader and broke off the battle with their men forces, and two of the largest bulls placed their huge tusks underneath the dying warrior to keep him from sinking. In the end the leader died and the remainder of the band turned and dived into the depths of the sea again, evidently distressed at the loss of their leader and uncertain how to proceed.

AND SO IT DID

"Don't you know this is a private office? How much did you pay the office boy to let you in?" asked the irate boss.
Lady caller: "Nothing, it says 'no admission' on the door."

IMPERIOUS VICTORIA QUEEN AND WOMAN

Prince Was Un-English.
 This was a serious matter. It was not merely that Albert was laughed at by fine ladies and sneered at by fine gentlemen; it was not merely that Victoria, who before her marriage had cut some figure in society, had, under her husband's influence, almost given it up. Since Charles the Second the sovereigns of England had, with a single exception, always been unfashionable, and the fact that the exception was George the Fourth seemed to give an added significance to the rule. What was grave was not the lack of fashion, but the lack of other and more important qualities. The hostility of the upper classes was symptomatic of an antagonism more profound than one of manners or even of tastes. The Prince, in a word, was un-English. What that word precisely meant it was difficult to say; but the fact was patent to every eye. Lord Palmerston, also, was not fashionable; the great Whig aristocrats looked askance at him, and only tolerated him as an unpleasant necessity thrust upon them by fate. But Lord Palmerston was English through and through; there was something in him that expressed, with extraordinary vigor, the fundamental qualities of the English race. And he was the very antithesis of the Prince. By a curious chance it so happened that this typical Englishman was brought into closer contact than any other of his countrymen with the alien from over the sea. It thus fell out that differences which, in more fortunate circumstances, might have been smoothed away and obliterated, became accentuated to the highest pitch. All the mysterious forces in Albert's soul leapt out to do battle with his adversary, and, in the long and violent conflict that followed, it almost seemed as if he, was struggling with England herself.

Palmerston's whole life had been spent in the government of the country. At twenty-two he had been a Minister; at twenty-five he had been offered the Chancellorship of the Exchequer, which, with that prudence which formed so unexpected a part of his character, he had declined to accept. His first spell of office had lasted, unintermittently, for twenty-one years. When Lord Grey came into power he received the Foreign Secretaryship, a post which he continued to occupy, with two intervals, for another twenty-one years. Throughout this period his reputation with the public had steadily grown, and when, in 1846, he became Foreign Secretary for the third time, his position in the country was almost, if not quite, an equality with that of the Prime Minister, Lord John Russell. He was a tall, big man of sixty-two, with a jaunty air, a large face dyed with whiskers, and a long sardonic upper lip. His private life was far from respectable, but he had greatly strengthened his position in society by marrying, late in life, Lady Cowper, the sister of Lord Melbourne, and one of the most influential of the Whig hostesses. Powerful, experienced, and supremely self-confident, he naturally paid very little attention to Albert. Why should he? The Prince was interested in foreign affairs; very well, then; let the Prince pay attention to him—to him, who had been a Cabinet Minister when Albert was in the cradle, who was the chosen leader of a great nation, and who had never failed in anything he had undertaken in the whole course of his life. Not that he wanted the Prince's attention—far from it; so far as he could see, Albert was merely a young foreigner, who suffered from having no views, and whose only claim to distinction was that he had happened to marry the Queen of England. This estimate, as he found out to his cost, was a mistaken one. Albert was by no means insignificant, and, behind Albert, there was another figure by no means insignificant either—there was Stockmar.

Masterful Palmerston.
 But Palmerston, busy with his plans, his ambitions, and the management of a great department, brushed all such considerations on one side; it was his favorite method of action. He lived by instinct—by a quick eye and a strong hand, a dexterous management of every crisis as it arose, a half-unconscious sense of the vital elements in a situation. He was very bold; and nothing gave him more exhilaration than to steer the ship of state in a high wind, on a rough sea, with every stitch of canvas on her that she could carry. But there is a point beyond which boldness becomes rashness—a point perceptible only to intuition and not to reason; and beyond that point Palmerston never went. When he saw that the case demanded it, he could go slow—very slow indeed; in fact, his whole career, so full of vigorous adventure, was nevertheless a masterly example of the proverb, "tout vient à point à qui sait attendre." But when he decided to go quick, nobody went quicker. One day, returning from Osborne, he found that he had missed the train to London; he ordered a special, but the stationmaster told him that to put a special train upon the line at that time of day would be dangerous, and he could not allow it. Palmerston insisted, declaring that he had important business in London, which could not wait. The stationmaster, supported by all the officials, continued to demur; the company, he said, could not possibly take the responsibility. "On my responsibility, then!" said Palmerston, in his off-hand, peremptory way; whereupon the stationmaster ordered up the train, and the Foreign Secretary reached London in time for his work, without an accident. The story is typical of the happy valiance with which he conducted both his own affairs and those of the nation. "England," he used to say, "is strong enough to brave consequences." Apparently under Palmerston's guidance, she was. While the officials protested and shook in their shoes, he would wave them away with his airy "My responsibility!" and carry the country swiftly along the line of his choice, to a triumphant destination—without an accident. His immense popularity was the result partly of his diplomatic successes, partly of his extraordinary affability, but chiefly of the genuine intensity with which he responded to the feelings and supported the interests of his countrymen. The public knew that it had in Lord Palmerston not only a high-mettled master, but also a devoted servant—that he was, in every sense of the word, a public man. When he was Prime Minister, he noticed that iron hurdles had been put on the grass in the Green Park; he immediately wrote to the Minister responsible, ordering, in the severest language, their instant removal, declaring that they were "an intolerable nuisance," and that the purpose of the grass was "to be walked upon freely and without restraint by the people, old and young, for whose enjoyment the parks are maintained." It was in this spirit that, as Foreign Secretary, he watched over the interests of Englishmen abroad. Nothing could be more agreeable for Englishmen; but foreign governments were less pleased. They found Lord Palmerston interfering, exasperating, and alarming. In Paris they spoke with bated breath of "ce terrible mild Palmerston"; and in Germany they made a little song about him—

"Hat der Teufel einen Sohn,
 So ist er selber Palmerston."
 But their complaints, their threats, and their agitations were all in vain. Palmerston, with his upper lip sardonically curving, braved consequences, and held on his course.

Diplomatic Crisis.
 The first diplomatic crisis which arose after his return to office, though the Prince and the Queen were closely concerned with it, passed off without serious disagreement between the Court and the Minister. For some time past a curious problem had been perplexing the chancelleries of Europe. Spain, ever since the time of Napoleon on a prey to civil convulsions, had settled down for a short interval to a state of comparative quiet under the rule of Christina, the Queen Mother, and her daughter Isabella, the young Queen. In 1846, the question of Isabella's marriage, which had for long been the subject of diplomatic speculations, suddenly became acute. Various candidates for her hand were proposed—among others, two cousins of her own, another Spanish prince, and Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, a first cousin of Victoria's and Albert's; for different reasons, however, none of these young men seemed altogether satisfactory. Isabella was not yet sixteen; and it might have been supposed that her marriage could be put off for a few years more; but this was considered to be out of the question. "Vous ne savez pas," said a high authority, "ce que c'est que ces princesses espagnoles; elles ont le diable au corps, et on a toujours dit que si nous ne nous hâtons pas, l'héritier viendrait avant le mari." It might also have been supposed that the young Queen's marriage was a matter to be settled by herself; her mother, and the Spanish Government; but this again was far from being the case. It had become, by one of those periodical revisions to the ways of the eighteenth century, which, it is rumoured, are still not unknown in diplomacy, a question of dominating importance in the foreign policies both of France and England. For several years, Louis Philippe and his Prime Minister Guizot had been privately maturing a very subtle plan. It was the object of the French King to repeat the glorious coup of Louis XIV, and to abolish the Pyrenees by placing one of his grandsons on the throne of Spain. In order to bring this about, he did not venture to suggest that his younger son, the Duc de Montpensier, should marry Isabella; that would have been too obvious a move, which would have raised immediate and insurmountable opposition. He therefore proposed that Isabella should marry her cousin, the Duke of Cadiz, while Montpensier married Isabella's younger sister, the Infanta Fernanda; and pray, what possible objection could there be to that? The wily old King whispered into the chaste ears of Guizot the key to the secret; he had good reason to believe that the Duke of Cadiz was incapable of having children, and therefore the offspring of Fernanda would inherit the Spanish crown. Guizot rubbed his hands and began at once to set the necessary springs in motion; but, of course, the whole scheme was very soon divulged and understood. The English Government took an extremely serious view of the matter; the balance of power was clearly at stake, and the French intrigue must be frustrated at all hazards. A diplomatic struggle of great intensity followed; and it occasionally appeared that a second War of the Spanish Succession was about to break out. This was avoided, but the consequences of this strange imbroglio were far-reaching and completely different from what any of the parties concerned could have guessed.

Matrimonial Intrigue.
 In the course of the long and intricate negotiations there was one point upon which Louis Philippe laid a special stress—the candidature of Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg. The prospect of a marriage between a Coburg Prince and the Queen of Spain was, he declared, at least as threatening to the balance of power in Europe as that of a marriage between the Duc de Montpensier and the Infanta; and, indeed, there was much to be said for this contention. The ruin which had fallen upon the House of Coburg during the Napoleonic wars had apparently only served to multiply its vitality, for that princely family had by now extended itself over Europe in an extraordinary manner. King Leopold was firmly fixed in Belgium; his niece was Queen of England, and another nephew was the husband of the Queen of England, and another nephew was the husband of the Queen of Portugal; yet another was Duke of Wurtemberg. Where was this to end? There seemed to be a Coburg Trust ready to send out one of its members at any moment to fill up any vacant place among the ruling families of Europe. And even beyond Europe there was signs of this infection spreading. An American who had arrived in Brussels had assured King Leopold that there was a strong feeling in the United States in favor of monarchy instead of the misrule of mobs, and had suggested, to the delight of His Majesty, that some branch of the Coburg family might be available for the position. That danger might, perhaps, be remote; but the Spanish danger was close at hand; and if Prince Leopold were to marry Queen Isabella the position of France would be one of humiliation, if not of positive danger. Such were the observations of Louis Philippe. The English Government had no wish to support Prince Leopold, and though Albert and Victoria had some hankers for the match, the wisdom of Stockmar had induced them to give up all thoughts of it. The way thus seemed open for a settlement; England would be reasonable about Leopold, if France would be reasonable about Montpensier. At the Chateau d'Eu, the agreement was made, in a series of conversations between the King and Guizot on the one side, and the Queen, the Prince, and Lord Aberdeen on the other. Aberdeen, as Foreign Minister, declared that England would neither recognize nor support Prince Leopold as a candidate for the hand of the Queen of Spain; while Louis Philippe solemnly promised, both to Aberdeen and to Victoria, that the Duc de Montpensier should not marry the Infanta Fernanda until after the Queen was married and had issue. All went well, and the crisis seemed to be over, when the whole question was suddenly re-opened by Palmerston, who had succeeded Aberdeen at the Foreign Office. In a despatch to the English Minister at Madrid, he mentioned, in a list of possible candidates for Queen Isabella's hand, Prince Leopold of Coburg; and at the same time he took occasion to denounce in violent language the tyranny and incompetence of the Spanish Government. This despatch, indiscreet in any case, was rendered infinitely more so by being communicated to Guizot. Louis Philippe saw his opportunity and pounced on it. Though there was nothing in Palmerston's language to show that he either recognized or supported Prince Leopold, the King at once assumed that the English had broken their engagement, and that he was therefore free to do likewise. He then sent the despatch to the Queen Mother, declared that the English were intriguing for the Coburg marriage, bade her mark the animosity of Palmerston against the Spanish Government, and urged her to escape from her difficulties and ensure the friendship of France by marrying Isabella to the Duke of Cadiz and Fernanda to Montpensier. The Queen Mother, alarmed and furious, was easily convinced. There was only one difficulty; Isabella loathed the very sight of her cousin. But this was soon surmounted; there was a wild supper-party at the Palace, and in the course of it the young girl was induced to consent to anything that was asked of her. Shortly after, and on the same day, both the marriages took place.

The news burst like a bomb on the English Government, who saw with rage and mortification that they had been completely outmanoeuvred by the crafty King, Victoria, in particular, was outraged. Not only had she been the personal recipient of Louis Philippe's pledge, but he had won his way to her heart by presenting the Prince of Wales with a box of soldiers and sending the Princess Royal a beautiful Parisian doll with eyes that opened and shut. And now insult was added to injury. The Queen of the French wrote her formal letter, calmly announcing, as a family event in which she was sure Victoria would be interested, the marriage of her son, Montpensier—"qui ajoutera à notre bonheur intérieur, le seul vrai dans ce monde, et que vous, madame, savez si bien apprécier." But the English Queen had not long to wait for her revenge. Within eighteen months the monarchy of Louis Philippe, discredited, unpopular, and fatally weakened by the withdrawal of English support, was swept into limbo, while he and his family threw themselves as suppliant fugitives at the feet of Victoria.

II. Trouble With Palmerston.
 In this affair both the Queen and the Prince had been too much occupied with the delinquencies of Louis Philippe to have any wrath to spare for those of Palmerston; and, indeed, on the main issue, Palmerston's attitude and their own had been in complete agreement. But in this case was unique. In every other foreign complication—and they were many and serious—during the ensuing years, the differences between the royal couple and the Foreign Secretary were constant and profound. There was a sharp quarrel over Portugal, where violently hostile parties were flying at each other's throats. The royal sympathy was naturally enlisted on behalf of the Queen and her Coburg husband, while Palmerston gave his support to the progressive elements in the country. It was not until 1848, however, that the strain became really serious. In that year of revolutions, when, in all directions and with alarming frequency, crowns kept rolling off royal heads, Albert and Victoria were appalled to find that the policy of England was persistently directed—in Germany, in Switzerland, in Austria, in Italy, in Sicily—so as to favor the insurgent forces. The situation, indeed, was just such an one as the soul of Palmerston loved. There was danger and excitement, the necessity of decision, the opportunity for action, on every hand. A disciple of Canning, with an English gentleman's contempt and dislike of foreign potentates deep in his heart, the spectacle of the popular uprisings, and of the oppressors bundled ignominiously out of the palaces they had disgraced, gave him unbounded pleasure, and he was determined that there should be no doubt whatever, all over the Continent, on which side in the great struggle England stood. It was not that he had the slightest tincture in him of philosophical radicalism; he had no philosophical tinctures of any kind; he was quite content to be inconsistent—to be a Conservative at home and a Liberal abroad. There were very good reasons for keeping the Irish in their places; but what had that to do with it? The point was this—when any decent man read an account of the political prisons in Naples his gorge rose. He did not want war; but he saw that without war a skillful and determined use of England's power might do much to further the cause of the Liberals in Europe. It was a difficult and a hazardous game to play, but he set about playing it with delighted alacrity. And then, to his intense annoyance just as he needed all his nerve and all possible freedom of action, he found himself being hampered and distracted at every turn by... those people at Osborne. He saw what it was; the opposition was systematic and informed, and the Queen alone would have been incapable of it; the Prince was at the bottom of the whole thing. It was exceedingly vexatious; but Palmerston was in a hurry, and could not wait; the Prince if he would insist upon interfering, must be brushed on one side.

Albert was very angry. He highly disapproved both of Palmerston's policy and of his methods of action. He was opposed to absolutism; but in his opinion Palmerston's proceedings were simply calculated to substitute for absolutism, all over Europe, something no better and very possibly worse—the anarchy of faction and mob violence. The dangers of this revolutionary ferment were grave; even in England Chartism was rampant—a sinister movement, which might at any moment upset the Constitution and abolish the Monarchy. Surely, with such dangers at home, this was a very bad time to choose for encouraging lawlessness abroad. He naturally took a particular interest in Germany. His instincts, his affections, his prepossessions, were ineradicably German; Stockmar was deeply involved in German politics; and he had a multitude of relatives among the ruling German families, who, from the midst of the hurly-burly of revolution, wrote him long and agitated letters once a week. Having considered the question of Germany's future from every point of view, he came to the conclusion, under Stockmar's guidance, that the great aim for every lover of Germany should be her unification under the sovereignty of Prussia. The intricacy of the situation was extreme, and the possibilities of good or evil which every hour might bring forth were incalculable; yet he saw with horror that Palmerston neither understood nor cared to understand the niceties of this momentous problem, but rushed on blindly, dealing blows to right and left, quite—so far as he could see—without system and even without motive—except, indeed, a totally unreasonable distrust of the Prussian State.

But his disagreement with the details of Palmerston's policy was in reality merely a symptom of the fundamental differences between the characters of the two men. In Albert's eyes Palmerston was a coarse, reckless egotist, whose combined arrogance and ignorance must inevitably have their issue in folly and disaster. Nothing could be more antipathetic to him than a mind so strangely lacking in patience in reflection, in principle, and in the habits of ratiocination. For to him it was intolerable to think in a hurry, to jump to slapdash decisions, to act on instincts that could not be explained. Everything must be done in due order, with careful premeditation; the premises of the position must first be firmly established; and he must reach the correct conclusion by a regular series of rational steps. In complicated questions—and what questions, rightly looked at, were not complicated!—to commit one's thoughts to paper was the wisest course, and it was the course which Albert, laborious though it might be, invariably adopted. It was as well, too, to draw up a reasoned statement after an event, as well as before it; and accordingly, whatever happened, it was always found that the Prince had made a memorandum. On one occasion he reduced to six pages of foolscap the substance of a confidential conversation with Sir Robert Peel, and, having read them aloud to him, asked him to append his signature; Sir Robert, who never liked to commit himself, became extremely uneasy; upon which the Prince understanding that it was necessary to humor the singular susceptibilities of Englishmen, with great tact dropped that particular memorandum into the fire. But as for Palmerston, he never gave one so much as a chance to read him a memorandum; he positively seemed to dislike discussion—and, before one knew where one was, without any warning whatever, he would plunge into some hare-brained violent project, which, as likely as not, would logically involve a European war. Closely connected, too, with this cautious painstaking reasonableness of Albert's, was his desire to examine questions thoroughly from every point of view, to go down to the roots of things, and to act in strict accordance with some well-defined principle. Under Stockmar's tutelage—he was constantly engaged in enlarging his outlook and in endeavoring to envisage vital problems both theoretically and practically—both with precision and with depth. To one whose mind was thus habitually occupied, the empirical activities of Palmerston, who had no notion what a principle meant, resembled the incoherent vagaries of a tiresome child. What did Palmerston know of economics, of science, of history? What did he care for mortality and education? How much consideration had he devoted in the whole course of his life to the improvement of the condition of the working-classes and to the general amelioration of the human race? The answers to such questions were all too obvious; and yet it is easy to imagine, also, what might have been Palmerston's jaunty comment. "Ah! your Royal Highness is busy with fine schemes and beneficent calculations—exactly! Well, as for me, I must say I'm quite satisfied with my morning's work—I've had the iron hurdles taken out of the Green Park."

"Exasperating Man."
 The exasperating man, however, preferred to make no comment, and to proceed in smiling silence on his inexhaustible way. The process of "brushing on one side" very soon came into operation. Important Foreign Office despatches were either submitted to the Queen so late that there was no time to correct them, or they were not submitted to her at all; or, having been submitted, and some passage in them being objected to and an alteration suggested, they were after all sent off in their original form. The Queen complained, the Prince complained; both complained together. It was quite useless. Palmerston was most apologetic—could not understand how it had occurred—must give the clerks a wiggling—certainly—Her Majesty's wishes should be attended to, and such a thing should never happen again. But, of course, it very soon happened again, and the royal remonstrances redoubled. Victoria, her partisan passions thoroughly aroused, imported into her protests a personal vehemence which those of Albert lacked. Did Lord Palmerston forget that she was Queen of England? How could she tolerate a state of affairs in which despatches written in her name were sent abroad without her approval or even her knowledge? What could be more derogatory to her position than to be obliged to receive indignant letters from the crowned heads to whom those despatches were addressed—letters which she did not know how to answer, since she so thoroughly agreed with them? She addressed herself to the Prime Minister. "No remonstrance has any effect with Lord Palmerston," she said on another occasion, "has as usual pretended not to have had time to submit the draft to the Queen before he had sent it off." She summoned Lord John to her presence, poured out her indignation, and afterwards, on the advice of Albert, noted down what had passed in a memorandum. "I said that I thought that Lord Palmerston often endangered the honor of England by taking a very prejudiced and one-sided view of a question; that his writings were always as bitter as gall and did great harm, which Lord John entirely assented to, and that I often felt quite ill from anxiety." Then she turned to her uncle. "The state of Germany," she wrote in a comprehensive and despairing review of the European situation, "is dreadful, and one does feel quite ashamed about that once really so peaceful and happy country. There are still good people there I am sure, but they allow themselves to be worked upon in a frightful and shameful way. In France a crisis seems at hand. What a very bad figure we cut in this meditation! Really it is quite immoral, with Ireland quivering in our grasp and ready to throw off her allegiance at any moment, for us to force Austria to give up her lawful possessions. What shall we say if Canada, Malta, etc., begin to trouble us! It hurts me terribly." But what did Lord Palmerston care?

Lord John's position grew more and more irksome. He did not approve of his colleague's treatment of the Queen. When he begged him to be more careful, he was met with the reply that 28,000 despatches passed through the Foreign Office in a single year, that, if every one of these were to be subjected to the royal criticism, the delay would be most serious, that, as it was, the waste of time and the worry involved in submitting drafts to the meticulous examination of Prince Albert was almost too much for an overworked Minister, and that, as a matter of fact, the postponement of important decisions owing to this cause had already produced very unpleasant diplomatic consequences. These excuses would have impressed Lord John more favorably if he had not himself had to suffer from a similar neglect. As often as not Palmerston failed to communicate even to him the most important despatches. The Foreign Secretary was becoming an almost independent power, acting on his own initiative, and swaying the policy of England on his own responsibility. On one occasion, in 1847, he had actually been upon the point of threatening to break off diplomatic relations with France; without consulting either the Cabinet or the Prime Minister. And such incidents were constantly recurring. When this became known to the Prince, he saw that his opportunity had come. If he could only drive in to the utmost the wedge between the two statesmen, if he could only secure the alliance of Lord John, then the suppression or the removal of Lord Palmerston would be almost certain to follow. He set about the business with all the pertinacity of his nature. Both he and the Queen put every kind of pressure upon the Prime Minister. They wrote, they harangued, they relapsed into awful silence. It occurred to them that Lord Clarendon, an important member of the Cabinet, would be a useful channel for their griefs. They commanded him to dine at the Palace, and directly the meal was over, "the Queen," as he described it afterwards, "exploded, and went with the utmost vehemence and bitterness into the whole of Palmerston's conduct, all the effects produced all over the world, and all her own feelings and sentiments about it." When she had finished, the Prince took up the tale, with less excitement, but with equal force. Lord Clarendon found himself in an awkward situation; he disliked Palmerston's policy, but he was his colleague, and he disapproved of the attitude of his royal hosts. In his opinion, they were "wrong in wishing that courtiers rather than Ministers should conduct the affairs of the country," and he thought that they "labored under the curious mistake that the Foreign Office was their peculiar department, and that they had the right to control, if not to direct, the foreign policy of England." He, therefore, with extreme politeness, gave it to be understood that he would not commit himself in any way. But Lord John, in reality, needed no pressure. Attacked by his Sovereign, ignored by his Foreign Secretary, he led a miserable life. With the advent of the dreadful Schleswig-Holstein question—the most complex in the whole diplomatic history of Europe—his position, crushed between the upper and the nether millstones, grew positively unbearable. He became anxious above all things to get Palmerston out of the Foreign Office. But then—supposing Palmerston refused to go?

THE LAWYER'S LAMENT.
 The visitor to the lawyer's office stood in amazement.
 "I say, old man," he explained, "what on earth has happened to you? Had a motor smash, or what?"
 The lawyer shook his head.
 "No. You remember that case the other day when I defended a man charged with assault? Well, I made a strong plea for him on the ground that he was a fool rather than a criminal."
 "Yes, but—"
 "I did it so well that he was acquitted, and he waited for me outside the court."
 "Tit-Bits."
 Mrs. Casey: "Birds are intelligent; ye can teach 'em anything. My sister has one as lives in a clock, and when it's time to tell the time it comes out and says 'Cuckoo' as many times as the time is."
 Mrs. Branigan: "How wonderful! Mrs. Casey: 'It is, indeed. And the most wonderful part of it all is, it's only a wooden bird.'"—Tit-Bits.

Potentialities of British-American Friendship

An address by Mr. Lindley Creswell at the Luncheon of the British-American League last Thursday.

It is impossible to reflect upon the cumulative power possessed by the two great aggregations of the human race, which are now labelled the British Empire, and the United States of America without realizing that the highest ideals of humanity are committed to their charge, and that the welfare of mankind is largely wrapped up in, and dependent upon the cordial relations existing between these two great bodies.

If we go far enough back in history we find that Europe, Asia, and even Africa are responsible for the peopling of the British Isles. The composite population of England became blended until its national traits were clearly enough developed to be recognized, and the same process went on in Scotland, Ireland and Wales. The British Isles still possess the faculty of absorbing a continual stream of immigrants from other countries, who become assimilated with the population without changing its traits by any perceptible degree. The borders of the British Isles have in the course of years expanded until the British Empire—or as it is better called the British Commonwealth of Nations—now contains a variety of races, white, black, and yellow, and speaking a variety of tongues, but the English speech predominates as the vehicle of expression of the ideals which form the basis upon which that Empire rests.

The British Empire is now composed of, besides the Motherland and the overseas Dominions, some forty-three Crown Colonies, and Protectorates, comprising over eleven million square miles of the earth's surface, and occupied by it is computed by some 450 millions of human souls, distributed as follows:

In Europe—In the British Isles, the Channel Islands, Gibraltar, Malta, etc.

In Africa—in the United States of South Africa, Rhodesia, Nigeria, Gold Coast, British East and Central Africa, not overlooking those extensive areas in regard to which the British Empire has special duties, namely, the ancient kingdom of Egypt, the Sudan, Somaliland, and what was German East and West Africa.

In Asia—The Empire of India, Ceylon, Burmah, Singapore, and Hongkong, besides the mandatory in Palestine, and Mesopotamia.

In Australasia—Australia, Tasover all other languages, and the amalgamated peoples becoming, as they did in the British Isles, the repositories and guardians of those same high moral and national principles, as well as those amenities of civilized life, which place the stamp of true greatness upon both peoples.

We freely acknowledge the blemishes, defects and shortcomings of our peoples, both nationally and individually; and we do not suggest that either possesses all the virtues to the exclusion of other nationalities, but the circumstance remains that the United States, having first spread from ocean to ocean in this western hemisphere, and filled her home spaces with a beaming population of great variety of origin, does now in the main stand, as the British Empire, in the main stands, for the great verities in life.

Having consolidated her strength at home, the United States, has likewise been constrained to extend her "Empire" beyond her borders. She has acquired Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Philippines are also under her flag. The Panama Canal is under her control, and Cuba is under her influence.

In this expansion she is following the same course as the British in administering regions inhabited by men of foreign race and language, but at the same time breathing into their institutions that spirit of justice, fair dealing, and liberty, which our two peoples in the bottom of their hearts prize so deeply.

There can be no doubt that in the last analysis the feature which so marks the life and character of the two peoples is the product of the esteem in which that Liberty, commonly known as the Bible, written in the English tongue, and read by both peoples with that religious fervor which both possess. It is the very foundation of their liberties and source of their higher national aspirations. Both peoples are moving for a more enlightened sentiment of international concerns than has heretofore prevailed among foreign powers.

These considerations which may be expressed by different persons in different ways, are of the utmost importance in assessing the potentiality of British-American friendship.

In no other grouping of nations is the same unanimity attainable.

One reason is that no other nations have to that extent the same unity of language; or the same unity of national aspirations, based on the ethics of Christianity, however much they may be hidden down by material considerations.

In a young nation it is of paramount importance that its people should possess and develop a strong sense of its nationality, a faith in its destiny, and a confidence in its superiority, in at least some of its ingredients.

We venture to put forward the suggestion that the early founders and leaders of the United States believed it to be necessary to counteract any tendency of the British born among them to look back to the British Isles. This could be effected by perpetuating the bitterness or hostility of the War of Independence, and by seizing every opportunity to keep wide the breach between the peoples.

This was done with the patriotic desire to build up and strengthen their own nationhood, and to aid in the task of assimilating the immigrants who flowed in from abroad, in a flux of so many immigrants of British extraction created a national problem in the peculiar circumstances of the United States, which may well be believed, to have had a distinct influence in her relations with the British Empire, and in combination with other factors have contributed to the maintenance of some antagonism to the British.

But now this course, as far as it has been followed, has served its purpose, and not only have other reasons arisen for departing from it, but international events have shown to an intelligent people that it is attended by results to the highest degree, and what they prize most, and moreover, is liable to be detrimental to the world.

The rugged common sense of both peoples dictates, that retaining complete practical independence of each other, neither should permit anything to impair their mutual regard and good fellowship.

The United States has now attained such power and wealth that she need not fear any attraction of the British Empire to her own people, especially to those of British origin; or that the strength and solidity of her national life can be affected by the untrained exchange of confidence and cordiality between our nations and our peoples.

But both peoples have reason to fear the insidious growth of poisonous influences within their body politic, as well as dangers from without to their enjoyment of peace, good order, and well regulated liberty.

If our two peoples, listening to the voice of the mischief-maker and of folly, should cease to live in concord and mutual confidence, born of mutual comprehension and goodwill, then indeed the torch of liberty will flicker, and it may be, become extinguished by their noxious vapors of Bolshevism or its like poisons, or by the rude blasts of other nations which do not share our common language, our common literature, our common traditions, or our common ideals of law, order, and liberty.

"Your Daily Bread"

Take off your hat to the golden-crusted loaf of Bread.

Your "daily bread" is really something to "shout about"—to be thankful for—especially in these days of soaring table costs.

Bread is more than a highly nutritious food—it's economical—the only really economical food to-day.

Since the beginning of civilization, bread has never been equalled as a food for the human race. Think of it.

Bread is nature's one complete food. It strengthens your muscles. It restores worn tissues. It is a regular dynamo of energy.

Also remember this. A pound-and-a-half loaf of Bread will do the same work as six pounds of beefsteak or eight eggs.

Doubling your daily Bread-eating means doubling your health, the size of your purse and the joy of living.

By using pure ingredients and advanced methods of baking, we are going to bring you Bread so rich and delicious that you just can't help eating more of it.

VICTORIA-baked Bread is your best food—always wholesome, tempting and highly nutritious. Eat it.—

Perhaps the greatest animal and human interest story ever screened is the picture version of James Oliver Curwood's "Kazan," which will be shown for the last time today at the Royal Victoria Theatre.

As was the case in "Back to God's Country" and "Nomads of the North," the locale of "Kazan" is in the Far North, and "Kazan" is a half-savage dog who turns against all men after the murder of his master...

In "The Rider of the King Log," the Associated Exhibitors ensure that the Variety Theatre to-day for the last time, pictured from Holman Day's novel, under the artist's personal supervision.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat, tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

A Close-Up View Of Unemployment

The letters from the trenches used to bring home to us the realities of war more strongly than pages of official reports. Neither can the whole truth about unemployment be learned from columns of Labor Department statistics, reports of the Unemployment Conference, or even from the formal statements of such well-informed men as Herbert Hoover and Samuel Gompers.

While the editor of a trade union paper in Bridgeport or South Omaha may not be able to make an elaborate analysis of nation-wide unemployment, he does have something to tell us about the proportion of jobs to workers in his own city. And this editor is also likely to have a very definite idea of what ought to be done about it.

VETERANS FORM AMALGAMATED ASSOCIATION

Inaugural Meeting With Membership of 1,150
Good Progress is Made by Ex-service Organizations

The Amalgamated Veterans' Association, with an initial membership of 1,150, came into being last night as the result of concerted action taken by representatives of every service organization in the city. The decision was reached at the mass meeting at the Trades and Labor Hall, at a meeting attended by 450 to 500 men, all of whom had served in former wars or the Great War. A number of ladies were present, including Red Cross nurses and Women's Auxiliaries.

Representatives from the Army and Navy Veterans, British Campaigners, G. A. U. V. G. W. V. A. (general and naval), Pacific Coast Officers' Association, Veterans of France, Amputation Club and all auxiliaries to such organizations were present at the session in strength.

Amalgamation was adopted unanimously, upon a recommendation of the provisional amalgamation committee, but not before some discussion upon the various projected rules to be observed in enlisting membership in the new body. An executive of ten members, to appoint their own provisional chairman, will be formed by nomination at a further meeting to be held in two weeks' time.

The Amalgamated Veterans' Association is dispensing with a president, vice-presidents and all the usual officers, with the exception of a paid secretary, who, however, will not have a vote on the executive council. The executive council of ten are to be appointed, eight from the general membership, and two from the naval service at least. The council will manage the affairs of the united body, and will appoint their own chairman as occasion requires.

The meeting last night was opened by Robert MacIntosh, who officiated as chairman, being in that capacity on the provisional amalgamation committee, which since the Pantages meeting last September has been at work on the plans for this amalgamation. In opening the meeting the speaker rehearsed the work done by the amalgamation committee and gave a report of its activities.

Progress of Movement. Some 2,500 membership forms had been circulated, of which 1,150 had been returned signed prior to last night. Others were still in circulation, stated the speaker, while all of the G. W. V. A. Island branches were willing to come in at once, with Nanaimo still to be heard from in this connection.

Comrades H. W. Hart and H. D. Twigg, stated the speaker had pressed for amalgamation at the Dominion conventions of the G. W. V. A. and Army and Navy Veterans respectively. Comrade Hart had met with much opposition, and Comrade Twigg had reported things more satisfactory.

ASK AND OWNERS TO PAY PART OF NEW BRIDGE COST

City Negotiates With Tax-payers on Rock Bay Scheme

If property owners interested in the installation of a bridge at Rock Bay will pay part of the cost of this work the city may decide to go ahead with the project. This became clear yesterday afternoon when the City Council in Streets Committee considered a report on the Rock Bay Bridge scheme from City Engineer E. M. Preston as follows: "We expect to be ready to remove the old E. and N. Railway span about April next year, and if it is the Council's wish that it be replaced in Rock Bay, steps should be taken now to prepare the necessary plans and make the requisite application for permission to the Dominion authorities.

The estimated cost of a concrete centre pier in the Rock Bay site would be as follows: Pier Complete $ 9,000 Dismantling, moving and re-erecting old E. and N. span; this item to be credited to the Johnson Street Bridge by-law 6,000 Total $15,000

On the other hand, if the Council decided to dispose of the old span, it would be as well to commence calling for tenders without much further delay. Sees Land Owners. It was explained to the Council that Alderman George Sangster, Chairman of the Streets Committee, had interviewed property owners this week to see if they would be willing to pay part of the cost of a Rock Bay Bridge. The Council decided to defer action on the bridge plan until Alderman Sangster could complete his negotiations with the property owners.

As a tax-payer, I'm glad to know that there can't be a local improvement by-law in this matter," said Alderman Todd. "It would be folly to put in a span without the approaches," Mayor Porter warned. "We haven't money for this purpose and can't get it out by a by-law. I thought that such a by-law would pass."

"I suppose if the property owners will put up money for the part of the work outlined in this report it would be all right," Chairman Sangster suggested. "I don't think so," Alderman Todd observed. "They probably would give $10,000 and we would have to put up the balance. It probably would cost us $70,000 altogether."

The total figure of $50,000 includes filling which will be put in gradually, would cost nothing," Alderman Woodward observed. Alderman Sangster stated that the city had $4,000 under the credit of the Rock Bay Bridge project.

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE MINES. White Lake Mine. The White Lake Collieries, Ltd., owning the large coal area at White Lake, fifteen miles south of Penitence, held an important directors' meeting at Summerland recently. This company was organized by G. R. Hookham and the property has been prospectively by him for some seasons, resulting in important discoveries.

The company recently engaged Glenville A. Collins, consulting mining engineer of Vancouver, to expert the property, with the result that the White Lake Collieries, Ltd., is now preparing to go ahead with the project in a more active manner. The company has engaged the services of the firm of Glenville A. Collins Engineers, Ltd., to open up and operate the mine. Diamond drilling will start soon, to be followed by preparations for active mining on a commercial scale.

Mr. Collins stated that in his opinion the property would become a valuable asset to the valley, and that the company would be able to offer good coal at competitive prices within six months. A Stewart Property. John Howland left recently for his property, near the junction of Fish and Skookum creeks, to resume development work and actual mining operations on small scale, with a view to taking out ore from the two high-grade shoots, which he partially opened up during the Summer, and work on which he had to leave stand over until now owing to the necessity of doing assessment work on some of his other holdings, says the Portland Canal News. He expects by the time sleigh transportation becomes good to have a respectable tonnage of ore sacked and ready for shipment. It will be necessary to pack ore a distance of about one and a quarter miles in order to reach the Salmon river wagon road, which will be done at a point about four miles from the wharf.

W. J. Scroggie and Archie Ewing, two Rossland miners, have secured a contract to drive fifty feet of tunnel and 250 feet of a raise on the Granite-Poorman property. The contractors, who have been spending a few weeks in this city, have gone out to the property to commence operations. They will employ about four men and will probably be engaged

BABY FIRES. "Life Despaired Of."

38, De Burgh Street, Cardiff, South Wales. 30/3/20. Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in forwarding a photo of my son. He was so small at birth and such a weakling that his life was despaired of. He was tried with several of the widely advertised foods but rapidly went almost to a skeleton, limp and hardly any life in him. In a very few days after trying him with Virol an immediate change for the better was apparent, and he is now a plump, happy, strong child without a blemish, and is always taken to be quite a year old.

He is a splendid example of the truth of the claims you advertise for "Virol." Please make any use you like of this testimonial. Yours very sincerely, (Sgd.) Mrs. F. FRIES.

CITY INDUSTRIAL SCHEME HELD UP
Plans for installing a soda water factory here on property known as the "Woodlands" were halted yesterday afternoon when Alderman John Harvey's Industrial Committee took up the matter with the City Council.

We had everything lined up but it now appears that we can't sell the soda water company the land they wish without a by-law," Alderman Harvey explained to the Council. "As the company wishes to go right ahead with its plans and commence the manufacture of soda water immediately, it is a serious matter."

Giving the Children a Chance
Canada's bright spot and hope of the future is the two million children now being fitted for life in her schools; for, according to statistics, a child without education has only one chance out of 150,000 of rising to prominence. The work of providing schools, paying salaries of the teachers and carrying on the system of training is partly due to the activities of the life insurance companies. They have invested millions of dollars to assist in providing the means for your children to get an education. The Trust Fund formed by the payment of your premiums is thus "at work." Every time you see boys and girls coming from school you should think of your life insurance. Children are also kept at school by life insurance money which thoughtful parents have provided. Life Insurance helps to give your child a chance in life. It is your friend and also the friend of the children. Life Insurance Service "CONSERVE THE HOME AND STABILIZE THE NATION"
