STATEMENT

For reasons given below, I consider my status as fulfilling the conditions set forth in Article 7 and 8, and as falling outside the purview of Article 3 pertaining to officers of Zaibatsu related companies.

1.- Re Article 7.

(1) Circumstances surrounding my appointment as director of the Tozan Noji K.K. and explanation of my discharge of responsibilities.

I was appointed director of the Tozan Noji K.K. at a meeting of shareholders held in January of 1943. I was designated as such by the then president, Mr. Masaharu Sakamoto, who presided as chairman. At the time I held the post of head of the General Affairs Division, where I was in a position to become fully conversant with the procedure followed in the appointment of directors. In such cases, when the appointment concerned a presidency or chairmanship, the names were always referred to the Iwasaki family for prior consultation, but when directors below the top level were involved, the president usually designated them of his own accord. Beyond that, to the best of my knowledge, there were no documents or agreements or the like, pertaining to this issue. In my particular case, therefore, it is hardly believable that the president consulted the Iwasaki family in advance. Aside from that, when I assumed office, I was given to understand by President Sakamoto that my promotion was in special recognition of my assiduity and loyalty to the company since employment and in view thereof, I was counselled to continue as before with unchanged feelings, and without relinquishing my former post of head of the General Affairs Division, a position usually held by staff employees. Accordingly, in the discharge of my duties, I continued to act as before, referring all matters, regardless of the substance, to my superiors, the executive director or the president, for sanction, without scope, therefore, for arbitrary action. Even for routine business trips or leave of absence, it continued to be my habit to obtain prior approval. This state of affairs has not undergone any change to this day. In actual fact, therefore, I did not possess authority or dominating power in excess of those of an executive director.

(2) Circumstances surrounding my appointment as director of the Tozan Sangyo K.K. and explanation of my discharge of responsibilities.

I was appointed director of the Tozan Sangyo K.K. in April 1944, at its inaugural meeting. The aforementioned Tozan Noji K.K. held controlling powers in the management of this company. With the enterprises of the Iwasaki family in the South Seas regions as the nucleus, its activities stemmed out to administration of properties entrusted to it by the army since outbreak of the war. Practically all the directors of the Tozan Noji K.K. were concurrently directors of this company, supplemented in considerable number by staff employees who were branch managers or the like, delegated by the army to administrate sundry undertakings. At the time I was assisting the inauguration routine work of the new company. In respect to the appointment of its directors, I was aware that the president and chairman were designated after consultation with the Iwasaki family, but there was no agreement whatever requiring prior approval of the family for the nomination of the other directors. As a matter of fact, it was Mr. Masaharu Sakamoto, presiding as chairman, who personally designated all the directors at the inaugural meeting, where the decision was confirmed. At a subsequent meeting of directors, the aforementioned Mr.Sakamoto was elected president of the company. On this occasion, I am inclined to believe that his name was referred to the Iwasaki family for approval in advance, while in the case of all the other representative directors, they were nominated in accordance with Mr. Sakamoto's designation. As stated already, in the case of directors selected from the ranks, a notice was served them in written form, specifying that the title of director had been bestowed on them to facilitate the company's external relations with the army and government field functionaries, financial institutions, etc. The promotion, therefore, was not to be accompanied by any change in their actual status, nor in their monetary allowances, which was to remain stationary. In my personal case, I was informed verbally that, as I had become a director of the new company by reason of being on the directorship board of the Tozan Moji K.K., my assignment and powers were to be the same as the parent company. I was thereupon assigned to the post of head of the General Affairs Division, a position usually held by a staff employee. There was no substantial change in my routine work, and I continued to discharge my duties in strict accordance with orders taken from my superiors, the executive director, the managing director and the chairman. There was never an instance where I transgressed powers of an executive director.

(Re Paragraph 2 and 3, Section 1 of Article 7)

(3) I have no kinship with anyone belonging to or of the Iwasaki family, by blood or by marriage.

(Re Paragraph 1, Section 1, Article 7)

(4) As is evident from the attached curriculum vitae, I have never held four positions or more as director of Mitsubishi Zaibatsu related companies.

(Re Paragraph 4, Section 1, Article 7)

2.- Re Article 6.

In July of 1944 I was elected a director of the Tozan Sangyo K.K. at a meeting of shareholders and remained in office until Jan. 15, 1946 when I resigned. Judging from circumstances surrounding my appointment and the actual state of my discharge of duties, I consider it gross injustice to be labelled as a Zaibatsu related director. As stated before, I was appointed director in July 1944, and immediately assigned for duty in the South Seas district.

Traffic disruption actually delayed my departure until September. Immediately upon appointment, I was informed by the president, Mr. Masaharu Sakamoto, and the managing director, Mr. Shin Kimizuka that I was being sent to Singapore with the title of executive director, ostensibly with representative powers, in order to facilitate financial negotiations and relations with the general army headquarters located there, and in general to render the company's position more advantageous. I was furthermore told verbally to look upon Mr. Kunitaro Tokuhiro, the executive director already stationed there as my senior, whom I was to consult in all company matters, and in no way was I to take arbitrary action. Aside from this, I was given two powers of attorney, one for myself and the other for Mr. Tokuhiro, by which we were authorized to refer all matters relating to inauguration or abolition of business, budget, settlement of accounts, personnel, salaries, etc. to the head office. In strict accordance with instructions I consulted Mr. Tokuhiro on all matters, without regard to their substance, and any issue that required approval of the head office, was always referred to Tokyo by cable or letters to our superiors, the managing director or the president, as the case might be. In more than one instance, we met with rejection and it was necessary to apply anew. On all such occasions, it was necessary to re-consider the issue in conference with Mr. Tokuhiro. This state of affairs continued until my resignation. Under the circumstances, although I was executive director, it was in name only, and as I always acted solely under instructions from the managing director or the president, I did not possess actual powers on a same or higher level as them, nor did I exercise similar control.

Yoshinobu Kashima.

To prove the foregoing facts, I attach a statement signed by Mr. Masaharu Sakamoto, who was director and president of both the Tozan Moji K.K. and the Tozan Sangyo K.K., and another by Mr. Shin Kimizuka, managing director of the Tozan Sangyo K.K.

The undersigned hereby corroborate the contents of the attached statement made by Mr. Yoshinobu Kashima and seek to amplify the same as follows.

(1) While the majority of the shares of the Tozan Noji K.K. and the Tozan Sangyo K.K. were owned by the Iwasaki family, synonym for the Mitsubishi Zaibatsu, not a single share of either company was held by the Mitsubishi Honsha, the Zaibatsu holding concern, which consequently had no voice whatever in the business affairs of these two companies nor in the appointment or dismissal of officers thereof.

(2) In respect to the appointment or dismissal of officers of these two companies, no agreement existed requiring approval of the Iwasaki family. It was the time-honored practice, however, to hold verbal consultation with the Iwasaki family only when changes in the presidency or chairmanship were contemplated. There was never an instance where the approval of the Iwasaki family was sought in advance, in respect to other directors. In accordance with custom, the president or chairman have always held themselves responsible for the conduct of the business in all its phases, and hence changes in the directorship were effected under their own judgment and responsibility.

(3) When a director has been newly nominated by the president or chairman, if he happens to be elevated from the ranks of the staff, he is specifically enjoined to take orders from his immediate superiors, the managing and executive directors, as well as from the president or chairman, and to refrain from transcending authority or to take arbitrary actions. In the case of directors stationed elsewhere than the Tokyo head office, they were usually furnished with limited powers of attorney.
