REPORT OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE SENATE, Jan. 20th. 1812.

The suggestions above are tar result of a periodic consideration of the numerous propositions that have been made, and the arguments by which they have been supported. It is a middle ground, that may be occupied in safety. We would however further suggest, that the fixing of the days on which the operations of the links are to be changed, should be made with reference to the known business transactions of the city. The public supports and levers are teeming with produce of the future.

The the arguments to the Lower House, and the laws of the State hands are the suffered and cornect examination, they have not been able to precise any remely for present evils, or any guards.

to perceive any remedy for present evils, or any guards of the future.

By the effects of the suspension of 1837, of species by succepts, the banks have gradually brought the whole commercial agricultural and industrial indebtings.

There is no country in the world, however wealthy so, may be, that could resist such a state of things.

There is no country in the world, however wealthy so, may be, that could resist such a state of things.

There is no country in the world, however wealthy on the state has declined 30 to 618 per cent. Produce has been accumulating these last two months without finding purchasers. If may be said, that this bill contained only one section, to wit: the lat. For nearly the whole of the other servines are with a view to the execution of the lat. which is intended to not, hereafter as the regulating power in effect. ower in effect:

The 1st, section revives the charters of the banks

The last, section revives the charters of the banks and lays down fundamental rules for their future guidance. The impulse cannet be suddenly given, time is therefore allowed, that every bank that can work under their, may preprise accordingly. The moment they regain their proper banking condition, the 1st, section becomes their only regulator. The board of currency have nothing to do with the capital of the banks, ji is private properly, and so it remains under the direction of such agents as the stockholders may appoint. Their mission is confined to the deposits and the circulation of paper money based thereupon. This is the only department where the interference of the State is provided for.

The second section creates the board of currency with a view to the jet section and lays down their duties.
