A yearbook should represent life and events of the academic year in a timeless fashion. We feel that we've reached this goal by not only illustrating the current activities at UNC but also by providing a solid but brief background of the events leading up to this point in time. By examining the history of Chapel Hill and its institution of higher learning, one can fully realize the richness and essence of the University of North Carolina. Although 1986 did not represent any historic anniversaries, it did find a renewed enthusiasm and spirit in its students, who will appreciate the fine education received in their years at Carolina.

The original seal of the University. The seal was designed in 1791 by a trustee-appointed committee. Dr. Kemp P. Battle wrote, "They chose the face of Apollo, the God of Eloquence, and his emblem, the rising sun as expressive of the dawn of higher education in our State." This seal was recently adopted as the official seal of the 16-University System.

Person Hall, named for General Thomas Person of the Revolutionary War, was probably first used for the commencement exercises of 1798. The original construction included only the east wing of the building. The central section was added in 1886, and the west wing added in 1892. This is the second oldest state university building in America.

John Motley Morehead, a member of the class of 1817, was governor from 1841 to 1845. As governor, he is known for his support of the railroad system in North Carolina. From 1861 to 1864, he was a member of the Confederate Congress. He was also a University trustee from 1828 until his death in 1866.

President Swain's house was built in 1846, on the site of the current president's house on East Franklin Street. It was destroyed by fire on Christmas morning, 1886.

Samuel Field Phillips' law office, where he taught classes to University Students until 1859. The building still stands at the corner of East Franklin and Hillsborough Streets.

The annex to the University Inn, which stood on the present site of Graham Memorial Hall. The sign above the doorway reads, "Erected to receive President Polk when he revisited his Alma mater."

In 1858, at the suggestion of President Polk, a new marble obelisk was dedicated to Joseph Caldwell. Pres. Caldwell is buried on the east side of the monument with his wife and her son.

Early in the history of the University, students who became ill had to rely on the help of church ladies until their parents could come. "The Retreat," built in 1858, served as an infirmary for 36 years.

Managers of the Commencement Ball on June 7, 1866 named Confederate officers as honorary managers of the ball and engraved their names on the invitation above. President Swain and the trustees were surprised and worried about the reaction against the University (See Page 166).

Smith Hall has been used as a library, a chemistry laboratory, and a building for law classes. Now it is known as Playmakers Theater.

Cornelia Phillips Spencer wrote letters to state leaders and newspapers as part of her efforts to reopen the University. When she received notice in March 1875 of a legislative bill granting the University $125,000 to resume classes, she climbed the stairs of South Building to ring the bell announcing the good news.

A boarding house, about 1890. The house stood on the present site of the Carolina Inn and was owned by Mrs. Ralph H. Graves.

The first gymnasium, constructed in 1885, also served as a ballroom. Previously, Smith Hall had been used as a library and a dance hall, but there was a strong public opposition to dancing on the University campus. President Battle agreed that dancing in the library was improper, so the trustees arranged for the gymnasium to be built on private property, just east of the present site of Peabody Hall.

The Widow Puckett House, built in 1796, is located on East Franklin Street. Mrs. Puckett provided rooms, meals, and washed clothes for students when the student body became too large for Old East. The Reverend Dr. James Phillips, mathematics professor and father of Cornelia Phillips Spencer, resided here for many years.

The street through the old campus was known as College Avenue until about 1885, when it was renamed after Paul C. Cameron. It was not paved until 1927, and students complained of having to walk through the dust and the mud.

Old West in the 1890's after a new water system had been installed.

Memorial Hall, dedicated in June 1885 to President Swain and the sons of the University who died in the Civil War. By 1929, the building was declared structurally unsafe and abandoned.

THE TAR HEEL.

A weekly paper published at the University of North Carolina, under the auspices of the University Athletic Association, devoted to the interest of the University at large.

Issued every Thursday morning. It will contain a summary of all occurrences in the University and village of Chapel Hill.

Space will be assigned for the thorough discussion of all points pertaining to the advancement and growth of the University.

A brief account each week of the occurrences in the amateur athletic world, with especial attention to our own athletic interests, and progress in Football, Baseball, Tennis, etc.

All society news, personals and every subject of interest both to the students and citizens of the village, will be treated each week.

The columns will be open to discussion on all appropriate subjects with an endeavor to do full justice to every one. The chief and his assistants will decide as to appropriateness of articles; no anonymous articles will be accepted without authority known to the chief, which will be a confidence, if desired.

Advertisers will note that this is the best, quickest, and surest, means by which they can reach the students. For notes see or write "Business Manager of TAR HEEL" Chapel Hill N. C., or drop him a card and he will call.

Subscription one Dollar and a half per session. This spring 75cts.

SALUTATORY.

The growing demands of the University have shown the need of a weekly paper. The University Athletic Association regarding itself as the means by which such a need could be supplied, at a stated meeting elected a board of editors (chief and five subs.) and a business manager.

With this apology only, the first issue of the first volume of the TAR HEEL makes its appearance.

This new venture is necessarily entered upon by the present board with no little trepidation, nevertheless with a determination, to make a success which can only be done through the indulgence and assistance of our faculty and fellow-students. Therefore we invite honest criticism and aid in the advancement of this new project will be thoroughly appreciated.

THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE VISIT THE UNIVERSITY.

The following members of the legislature composing the visitation committee arrived at the University on a special train Friday morning, February 3rd:

Messrs. Battle, chairman; Cheek Aycoke, James, Pou, of the senate; and Messrs. Holt (chairman) Ense, Parker, Starnes, Walker, Ward, of the house.

After breakfasting, the regular chapel exercises were attended, then visits were made to the reading room, libraries and various lecture rooms where classes were assembled. The numerous laboratories were inspected as well as some of the students' rooms. In the afternoon meetings of both the societies were held and the gentlemen who were not alumni were made honorary members.

Just after prayers the boys called repeatedly for speeches from our visitors, a majority of whom responded most felicitously and gave words of encouragement for the future outlook of the university, from a legislative appropriation standpoint. All saw the need of a sufficient appropriation to fully equip, this the most useful and important of all the State properties, and give to the University of whose past brilliant record and whose future prospects are such as would make any State in the union proud to be the possessor of such an heritage to hand to posterity, a sufficient appropriation to put the university on a financial basis equal to its rapid expansion and growth. When some of the committee expressed their deep regret at not having had an opportunity of receiving an education, in their youth, we could not but feel that it was a duty that was owed to future generations, and which has been due to those that have passed away, that the supreme law making power in the State, ought to make tuition at the university free to North Carolinians as is done at the University of Virginia to Virginians and the only way to do this is to appropriate a sufficient amount to keep the university up, until resources from outside States and the technical courses shall make itself sustaining, and, too, we could not but think what a shame and loss it was to North Carolina, that it had failed, to open the doors of the university, in the past to such sterling manhood as represented the legislature on the committee. The body of the students were well pleased with our friends, if they are a fair sample of our legislators this year. North Carolina is in good hands. They know the needs of the University.

The Pickwick Theatre, 1912.

The Intimate Bookstore, early 1900s.

Franklin Street from the present site of Spanky's, 1914.

The Liberty Loan Parade of 1918.

President Kemp P. Battle standing beside Davie Poplar, Jr., newly planted by the class of 1918.

The class of 1918 was composed of soldiers and civilians, three women, and one Japanese student. Kameichi Kato, the Japanese student, founded a society designed to foster better relations between Americans and Japanese.

Aerial view of the campus, 1919.

Students reading on the front porch of a fraternity house.
left to right: Beemer C. Harrell, class of 1917; Thomas Wolfe, class of 1920, and James Newland Brand, class of 1922.

The north side of Franklin Street, 1919.

The intersection of Franklin and Hillsborough Streets, early 1920s.

University Inn, which stood on the present site of Graham Memorial Hall, burned in 1921.

The Carolina Inn was built in 1924 by John Sprunt Hill, a student of the University from 1885-1889, and a law student from 1891-1892. He built the Inn at his own expense and presented it as a gift to the University in 1935.

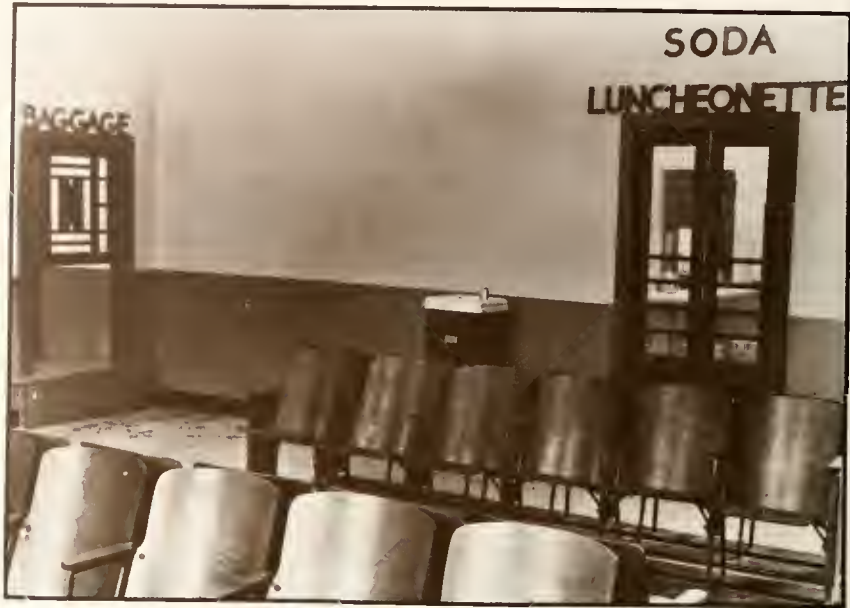

Franklin Street, 1925.

The Orange Electric Shoe Shop, 1925.

Construction of Columbia Street.

Chapel Hill bus station, early 1920s.

Summer school registration in Memorial Hall, mid-1920s.

Ice wagon, 1927.

Kenan Memorial Stadium was dedicated on November 24, 1927, to the parents of William Rand Kenan, Jr.

The Carolina Theater, 1937. Admission was 30 cents.

In the 1940s, students traditionally gathered on the lawn of President Graham's house for special occasions.

The main entrance to the North Carolina Memorial Hospital in 1953, after its opening in 1952. The front of the hospital pictured here is now the back, facing Berryhill and Carrington Halls.

Temporary housing at the edge of Victory Village, a community for World War II veteran students and their families. Victory Village was located in the woods behind the medical and public health buildings, but the housing units were later removed for the expansion of the hospital facilities.

University Day in 1954 was celebrated with a reenactment of the laying of the cornerstone of Old East in 1793.

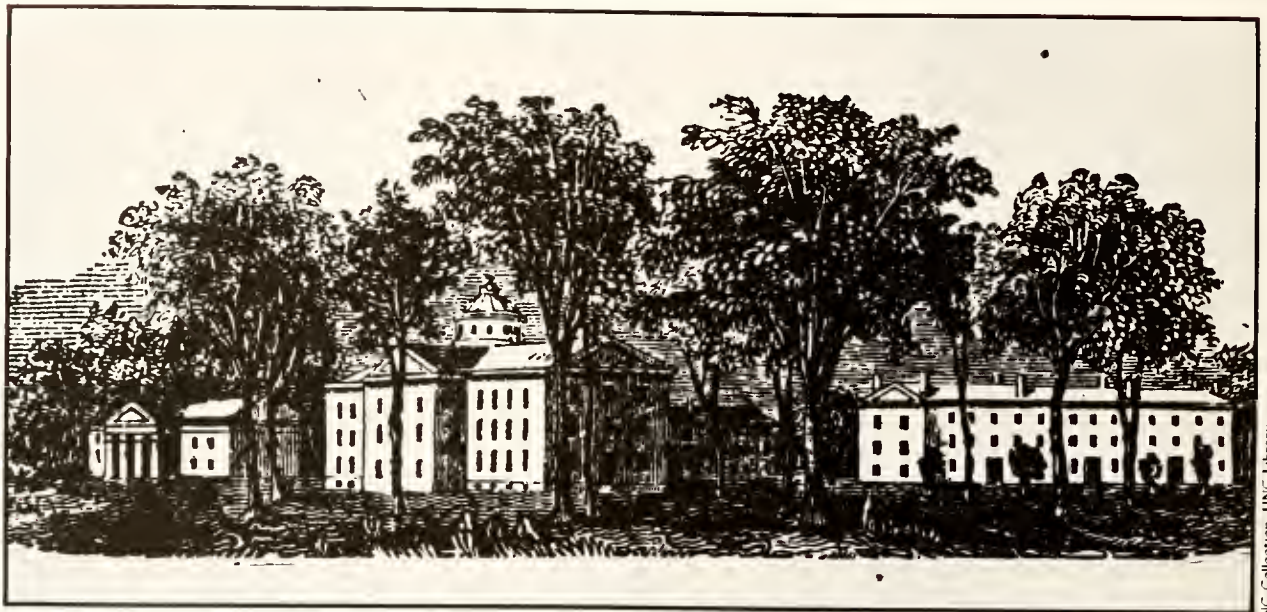

President Kennedy spoke in Kenan Stadium on University Day, 1961. Also pictured: Chancellor William B. Aycock, William C. Friday and Governor Terry Sanford.

Charlie Scott, the first black athlete in the history of the University played on the winning U.S. Olympic basketball team while he was a student in 1968. Scott led the Tar Heels to several winning seasons in Carmichael Auditorium.

More than 4,000 Students marched on South Building on May 6, 1970, to protest the killing of four Kent State students by the Ohio National Guard. The students were already aroused by the United States' invasion of Cambodia and by a UNC food service workers' strike.

"The cornerstone [of Old East] was vandalized sometime between 1865 and 1875 and the commemorative plate [sealed into the cornerstone by General Davie's silver trowel] was stolen. In 1916 it was discovered in a pile of scrap brass destined for melting at a foundry in Tennessee. The foundry's owner, who was an alumnus of UNC, recognizing the name Davie, had the plate cleaned and returned to its rightful place."

SENIORS

"Nine freshmen, appearing before the faculty on 14 April 1854, were charged with 'disturbing the recitation by groaning in concert and rolling marbles along the bench'. They confessed 'to more or less participation in the disorders,' the faculty minutes report, and the previous offenders among the group were suspended. The first offenders were treated more leniently — their parents were informed of their conduct."

"The faculty minutes of 1 June 1843 contain a record of the work of the members of the senior class of that year. The grading scale was 'vg' — very good, 'g' — good, 'vr' — very respectable, 'r' — respectable, 't' — tolerable, 'b' — bad, and 'vb' — very bad. None of the class merited the grade 'vb'."

"The minutes of a faculty meeting on 2 August 1844 contain a class schedule. Regular classes were also scheduled for 7 o'clock in the morning, Tuesday through Friday."

The Hellenian, published in 1890, "... was the nearest thing to the modern annual yearbook to be published for the students, but it was sponsored by the fraternities and featured them. There were no pictures at first, but before The Hellenian ceased publication in 1900, group pictures, a few ink and pen sketches, and an occasional special picture appeared. In 1901 the first Yackety Yack, representing all segments of the University, was published."

"Senior week in the 1930s and 1940s was a time when seniors might be recognized on campus and perhaps even envied by lower classmen. There were extra cuts from class, picnics, beer parties in Battle Park, and other carefree occasions including Barefoot Day when seniors were invited to go barefooted, perhaps symbolic of a last retreat to childhood before assuming a serious role in the world of adults."

"Miller Hall, at the intersection of McCauley and Pittsboro Streets, and nearby Nash Hall were built in about 1942 by the Navy for the V-12 program. After the war they housed veterans who had returned to the classroom. Later, with more dormitory space available, they were brick veneered, remodeled inside, and used by various departments as need for extra space arose."

"A popular tradition of long standing in Chapel Hill for many years was the Bull's Head Bookshop tea in the library. Usually on a monthly schedule, but whenever an author could be cornered long enough, tea and cookies would be served followed by a talk by the guest author. Afterwards, those present were free to chat with the author and with each other."

During the late 19th century "... anyone at UNC was eligible to play football, from president to janitor, and Howell [founder and presiding professor of the School of Pharmacy in the 1890s] starred for an undefeated eleven, making a fifty-five yard run, despite a broken finger and nose, to defeat Virginia 6-2 in the key game of 1898."

"Classic student pranks of [the late 18th century included] throwing frogs and terrapins into the Frenchmaster's room and carrying off carriages and gates . . . there were reports of gun fire, kegs of whiskey in students' rooms, stabbings with pen knives, breaking tutors' doors and threatening them with violence, toturing animals with flaming turpentine . . . attempting arson on a trustee's house, cutting the corn in a villagers' field, and stealing beehives."

"There was no heat in the chapel (Gerrard Hall), and during the winter (of the mid 1800s) there was considerable shivering at public events. Students usually donned their best clothes for Sunday because ladies were present, but for morning prayers often appeared in shirt and drawers covered by a bed quilt, it has been noted. In Gerrard Hall the applause of foot stamping was allowed but not the pounding of canes."

"A panic that could have been dangerous occurred at the commencement of 1846. All seats were filled and many spectators were standing. The galleries of [Gerrard] Hall were supported by slender pillars; someone in the audience, probably alarmed by the breaking of a stick outside, shouted, 'The gallery is falling.' There was a general rush to the doors, and young men had the pleasure of catching young ladies as they jumped from the windows. The president and governor finally calmed the crowd. Before the next commencement additional pillars were installed and the galleries were pronounced safe."

"Students at the University in the 1840s and 1850s engaged the poetic services of George Moses Horton, a slave belonging to a nearby Chatham County farmer. For 25 cents he would compose short poems that students sent to their sweethearts. For 50 cents Horton would compose an acrostic. He received early encouragement in his literary efforts from Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz and from President Caldwell. In addition to his earnings as a poet, he also sold fruit and vegetables around Chapel Hill. At the end of the Civil War, he went North with the Union Army."

"Professor Mitchell, who was superintendent of buildings and grounds [in the mid-1800s], convinced him [President Swain] that the rail fences that frequently fell or were knocked down, might be easily replaced by rock walls . . . The bountiful supply of large attractive rocks in the vicinity of Chapel Hill made it possible to enclose the campus with handsome and useful rock walls. Roaming livestock was then kept at proper distance from class and dormitory."

"In 1825 [Elisha] Mitchell became professor of chemistry, mineralogy, and geology . . . His curiosity about North Carolina took him frequently to the mountains where he was interested in establishing the fact that the highest mountain east of the Mississippi lay in this state and not in New Hampshire. In this he succeeded, but in his ramblings he slipped and fell to his death in a pool of water in June 1857. His body was recovered and later buried atop the peak he had discovered to be the highest in eastern America — now named Mount Mitchell."

"The 'unreconstructed Rebels' among the student body [of 1866] enjoyed one last bit of revenge. Without consulting anyone, the managers of the commencement ball on 7 June 1866 named former President Jefferson Davis, Generals W.R. Cox, J.C. Breckinridge, Robert D. Johnson, Robert E. Lee, and Governor Zebulon B. Vance as honorary managers. The names of these high officers in the Confederacy were engraved on the invitations and distributed before word of it got out."

John Motley Morehead "... made his most important scientific discovery less than a year after he graduated from UNC in 1891 ... 'We just got a lump of this stuff about the size of a coconut,' Morehead said in a campus interview shortly before his death. 'I took it back to the laboratory to analyze it. When we put it in water, it gave off clouds of gas, and when we lit the gas, it burned with clouds of smoke. Well, I didn't have any gas analyzing apparatus up there, so I sent a piece of the stuff down here to Dr. Venable, who said it was acetylene gas.' From this discovery grew the Union Carbide Corporation."

"Swain Hall was erected in 1913, on the former site of the first President's House, to serve as a dining hall with double the capacity of old Commons Hall across the street. "Head Cheerleader Vic Huggins in 1924 decided that the University should have a mascot such as State's wolf and Georgia's bulldog. Since Jack Merritt, a popular member of the football team, was known as 'The Battering Ram,' Huggins hit upon the idea of a ram as the Carolina mascot. He prevailed upon University Business Manager Charles T. Woollen to find $25.00 to buy one. Ordered from Texas, Rameses the Ram arrived in time for the UNC-VMI game at which the two teams battled to a standstill until late in the fourth quarter. Bunn Hackney then . . . made a perfect drop kick for a 3-0 victory.

One of the newest additions to the campus of UNC is the Dean E. Smith Student Activities Center. The SAC, as known by many students, is a 33.8 million dollar structure, seating 21,600, and including "... a 10-lane, 50-meter swimming pool, which will allow such events as NCAA championships and Olympic trials. The building also contains a memorabilia room, a donors' room, and athletic offices."

"The thing that makes Chapel Hill different is that it is a very old university and that it is set in the South. It has endured. It has suffered vicissitudes in its founding and in its middle years. In the twentieth century it has come to greatness. At the same time it has mellowed into charm. The years look down from its venerable walls onto a well-planted, well-tended campus garden that is renewed with each changing season and each successive generation."

Childress

Greetings to a special class!

The class of 1986 distinguished itself by exemplary performance in civic affairs, aggressive activity in establishing class benefactions, and by first-rate leadership in all aspects of campus life.

The noble tradition of giving oneself in bettering the life and well-being of another was enriched and you brought generations together by inaugurating a new and worthy event through the excellent class symposium at year's end. Happily, for the University, your presence was felt and the campus made a better place because you were here.

Now, you have taken your place in that historic succession of men and women of Chapel Hill, ready to assume your career responsibilities and your personal obligation as good citizens. Our state and our nation depend upon each of you to insure continuing, effective leadership and responsible citizenship. Economic growth, the global involvement of our country and its defense, and the improvement of our cultural and intellectual life depend upon intelligent and courageous men and women. And we all know that the protection and enhancement of the freedoms we enjoy is always a primary duty of each citizen. The demand for responsible leaders is great; alma mater is fully confident of the role each of you will now play in this exciting, demanding world.

Finally, I shall always treasure your action making me an honorary member of your class. Mrs. Friday and I earnestly hope that you will visit us when you return to Chapel Hill in the years to come.

THE ORDER OF THE GOLDEN FLEECE

THE EXALTED ORDER OF THE HASBEENS

A Toast For Status Quoism

I'd rather be a could be
If I could not be an are
For a could be is a maybe
With a chance of reaching par

But I'd rather be a hasbeen
Than a might-of-been by far
For a might-of-been has never been
While a hasbeen was once an are
