PROEME

TO THE

THIRD PART of the INSTITUTES.

N the Second Part of the Institutes we have spoken only of acts of parliament, (viz.) of Magna Carta, and many ancient and other acts of parliament, which we have explained, and therein observed which of them are declaratory of the ancient lawes of this realme, which are introductory of new, and which mixt: all of them (excepting a very few) concerning common pleas, and these two great pronouns, meum and tuum.

In this Third Part of the Institutes, we are to treat de malo, See the 1. part viz. of high treason, and other pleas of the crowne, and criminall feet. 500. causes, most of them by act of parliament, and some by the common law: in which cases the law of all other is most neces- Malum non babet fary to be knowne, because it concerneth the safety of his maficientem, seddeficientem causam. jestie, the quiet of the common-wealth, and the life, honour, an efficient, but fame, liberty, blood, wife, and posteritie of the party accused, a deficient cause, by reason of the besides the forfeiture of his lands, goods, and all that he hath: for it is truly faid of these laws, Reliquæ leges privatorum ho- ble good. minum commodis prospiciunt, hæ regiæ majestati, subditorum vitæ, ac publicæ tranquillitati consulunt. against the lawes of England, that they are darke and hard to be understood, we have specially in these and other parts of the Inflitutes opened fuch windowes, and made them so lightsome, and easie to be understood, as he that hath but the light of nature, (which Solomon calleth the candle of Almighty God, Prov. 20. 27.) adding industrie and diligence thereunto, may eafily discerne the same. And that may be verified of these lawes, that lex est lux, Prov. 6. 23, the law itselfe is a light. See Rom. 2. 14. And when we consider how many acts of parliament (pùblished in print) that have made new treasons and other capitall offences, are either repealed by generall or expresse words, or expired: how many indictments, attainders of treafons, felonies, and other crimes, which are not warrantable by law at this day: and how few book-cases there have been published of treasons, (though a subject of greatest importance) and those very slenderly reported: we in respect of the places which we have holden, and of our own observation, and by often conferences with the fages of the law in former times concerning criminall causes or pleas of the crowne, have thought good to publish this third part of the Institutes, wherein we follow that old and sure rule, Quod judicandum est legibus, et non exemplis. A worke arduous, and full of fuch difficultie, as none can either feele or beleeve, but he onely which maketh tryall of it. albeit it did often terrifie me, yet could it not in the end make. me defift from my purpose; (especially in this worke) so farre hath the love and honour of my country, to passe through all labours, doubts, and difficulties, prevailed with me.

This, as other parts of the Institutes, wee have set forth in our English tongue, not onely for the reasons in the preface to the first part of the Institutes alledged, which we presume may fatisfie any indifferent and prudent reader: but specially this treatise of the pleas of the crowne, because, as it appeareth by that which hath been faid, it concerneth all the subjects of the realme more neerly by many degrees, then any of the other. Bal. sent. 3. fo. Hereunto you may adde that which Robert Holcoth an English man man furnamed Theologus magnus, upon the fecond chapter of the book of Wisdome, in or about the 20. yeare of king E. 3. wrote to this effect. Narrant historiæ quod cum Willielmus dux Normannorum regnum Angliæ conquisivisset, deliberavit quomodo linguam Saxonicam possit destruere, et Angliam, et Normanniam in idiomate accordari, et ideo ordinavit, quod nullus in curia regia placitaret nisi in Gallico, et iterum quod puer quilibet ponendus ad literas addisceret Gallicum, et per Gallicum Latinum, quæ duo usque hodie observantur. Hæc ille. statute of 35 E. 3. cap. 15. made not long after Holcoth wrote, 35 E. 3. ca. 15. hath taken these edicts of a conqueror away, and given due honour to our English language, which is as copious and fignificant, and as able to expresse any thing in as sew and apt words, as any other native language, that is spoken at this day. And (to speake what we think) we would derive from the Conqueror as little as we could.

When Henry the first died, all the issue male of the Conqueror, and of his fonnes were dead without iffue male.

The wife of king H. 1. was Mawde daughter of Malcolme king of Scotland firnamed Canmor, and of Margaret his wife, who was the granchild of Edmond Ironfide king of England, viz. the faid king Edmond had iffue Edward firnamed the Outlaw, because he lived a long time beyond sea with Salamon king of Hungary out of the extent of the lawes of this realme. Edward had iffue the faid Margaret his eldest daughter, famous for her piety and vertue; she had issue Mawde wife of king H. 1. who by her had iffue Mawde, of whose English blood by Geffery Plantagenet earle of Anjou all the kings of England are lineally descended.

We have in this Third Part of the Institutes cited our ancient authors, and bookes of the law, viz. Bracton, Britton, the Mirror of Justices, Fleta, and many ancient records, never (that we know) before published, to this end, that seeing the pleas of the crown are for the most part grounded upon, or declared by flatute ftatute lawes, the studious reader may be instructed what the common law was before the making of those statutes, whereby he shall know, whether the statutes were introductory of a new law, declaratory of the old, or mixt, and thereby perceive what was the reason and cause of the making of the same, which will greatly conduce to the true understanding thereof.

We shall first treat of the highest, and most hainous crime of high treason, Crimen lasa majestatis; and of the rest in order, as they are greater and more odious then others.

C A P. I.

HIGH TREASON.

BY the flatute of 25 E. 3. de proditionibus, is declared in 25 E. 3. cap. 26 certaine particular cases, what offences shall be taken to be treason, with this restriction, that if any other case supposed to be treason should happen before any justices, the justices should tarry without going to judgment of the treason, till the case be shewed before the king and his parliament, whether it ought to be adjudged treason or other felony: therefore we will lay our foundation upon, and begin with that act of parliament, the letter whereof in proprio idiomate ensueth.

III. Inst. Item,

Divers opinions. Ad fait declarise-Nota, This is a law for the most part declaratory, but addeth also divers things to the ancient law. * Lusheburghs, alias Luxenburghs were a kinde of base coine to the likeneffe of our English money, fo called, because they were coined in Lusheburgh, which fometime was an after a dukedome. See Chaucer in the Prothe host speaking to a lufty monk, ment make ye that is not full and currant. ipse regi illata, maxime si fiat, in exercente officium.

Item, TATHEREAS divers opinions have been before this time, in what case treason shall be said, and in what not; the king at the request of the lords and of the commons, hath made a declaration in the manner as hereafter followeth: that is to fay, when a man doth compasse or imagine the death of our lord the king, of my lady his queene, or of their eldest sonne and heire: or if a man doe violate the kings compagnion, or the kings eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the kings eldest sonne and heire: or if a man doe levie warre against our lord the king in his realme, or be adherent to the kings enemies in his realine, giving to them aide and comfort in the realme or elsewhere, and thereof be provably attainted of open deed by people of their condition. And if a man counterfeit the kings great or privie seale, or his money: and if a man bring falfe money into this realme counterfeit to the money of England, as the money called Lusheburgh, or other like to the said money of England, knowing the money to be falle, to merchandize or make payment, in deceipt of our faid lord the king and of his people. And if a man flay the chancellor, treasurer, or the kings justices of the one bench or the other, justices in eire, or justices of affize, and all other justices assigned to heare and determine, being in their place doing their offices. it is to be understood, that in the cases above rehearsed, it ought to be judged treason, which extend to our lord the king and his royall majestie; and of such treason the forfeiture of the escheates pertaineth to our lord the king, as well of the lands and tenements holden of others, as of himself.

And albeit nothing can concerne the king, his crowne, and dignity, more then crimen læsæ majestatis, high treason: yet at the request of his lords and commons, the bleffed king by authority of parliament made the declaration, as is above-faid: and therefore, and for other excellent lawes made at this parliament, this was called benedictum parliamentum, as it well For except it be Magna Charta, no other act of parliament hath had more honour given unto it by the king, lords spiritual and temporall, and the commons of the realme for the time being in full parliament, then this act concerning treason hath had. For by the statute of 1 H. 4. cap. 10. reciting that where at a parliament holden 21 R. 2. divers paynes of treason were ordained by statute, in as much as there was no man did know how to behave himselfe, to doe, speak, or fay, for doubt of fuch paines: It is enacted by the king, the lords and commons, that in no time to come any treason be judged otherwise, then it was ordained by this statute of 25 E. 3. The like honour is given to it by the statute of 1 E. 6. cap. 12. and by the statute of I Ma. cap. 1. sess. 1. different times, but all agreeing in the magnifying and extolling of this bleffed act of 25 E. 3. Of this act of 1 Mariæ, we shall speak more

H. 4. cap. 10.

1 E. 6. cap. 12. 1 Mar; cap. 1. hereafter. But to proceed to give a light touch how other acts of parliament have been called. The parliament holden at Oxford, an. 42. H 3. was called infanum parliamentum. 12 E. 2. the parliament of whitebands, albarum fibularum or metellarum. 5 E. 3. parliamentum bonum. 10 R. 2. parliamentum quod fecit mirabila, that wrought wonders. 21 R. 2. magnū parliamentū. 6 H. 4. parliamentū indoctū, lack-learning parliament. 4 H. 6. pariiamentu fustiu, the parliament of bats. The session of parliament in an. 14. H. 8. called the black parliament. The act of I E. 6. was called parliamentu pium, the pious parliament. And the faid act of I Mar. parliamentu propitium, the merciful parliament. The parliaments of queen Elizabeth stiled pia, justa, et provida. The parliament holden anno 21 of king James, called fælix parliamentum, the happy parliament. And the parliament holden in the third yeare of our soveraigne lord king Charles, benedictum parliam ntum, the bleffed parliament. The feverall reasons of these former appellations appeare of record and in history, and the latter are yet fresh in memory. At the making of the statute of 25 E. 7. the high courts of justice were furnished with excellent men, viz. Sir William Shardshill knight (shortly written in bookes Shard) lord chiefe justice of the kings bench, and his compagnions justices of that court; Sir John Stonor knight, commonly written in books Stone, lord chief justice of the court of common pleas, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Gervasius de Wilford, lord chiefe baron of the exchequer, men famous in their profession, and excellent in the knowledge of At the making of the statute of 1 H. 4. were Sir the lawes. Walter Clopton knight, lord chiefe justice of the kings bench, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Sir William Thirning knight, lord chief justice of the court of common pleas, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Sir John Cassie knight, lord chiese baron of the exchequer; men equall to any of their predecessors in the knowledge of the lawes. At the making of the statute of 1 E. 6. were Sir Richard Lifter knight, lord chiefe justice of the kings bench, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Sir Edward Montague knight, lord chiefe justice of the court of common pleas, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Sir Roger Cholmeley knight, lord chiefe baron of the exchequer; men of that excellency, as they were worthy of the name of The worthies of the law. At the making of the statute of 1 Mar. were Sir Thomas Bromley knight, lord chiefe justice of the kings bench, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Sir Richard Morgan, knight, lord chiefe justice of the court of common pleas, and his compagnions justices of that court; and Sir D. Brook knight, lord chiefe baron of the exchequer, men renouned for their great knowledge and judgement in their profession. All these we have named in the honour of them,

them, and of their families and posterities, for that they in their severall times were great furtherers of these excellent lawes concerning treason. In memoria æterna erit justus. And all this was done in severall ages, that the faire lillies and roses of the crowne might flourish, and not be stained by severe and sanguinary statutes. But let us come to the act it selfe, and for the better understanding thereof, and of the bookcases, and other records grounded upon the same: let us divide this act concerning high treason into severall classes or heads, and then prosecute the same in order.

By compassing King, and declaring the or imagining Queene, fame by some the death of the Prince, overt deed. The first con-Chancellor. cerneth death, Treasurer. Justices of the one In their Bench or other. places Justices in eyre. By killing and doing Lmurderingof the \ Justices of assize. their Justices of oier offices. and terminer,

The third is levying war against the king.

[4] The fourth is adhering to the kings enemies within the realme, or without, and declaring the same by some overt act.

The fifth is counterfeiting of the privie seale. the king's coyne.

So as treason is membrum divisum, and these severall classes or heads are membra dividentia. And if the offence be not within one of these classes or heads, it is no treason.

(1) Treason] is derived from [trahir] which is treacherously to betray. Trahue, betrayed, and trahison, per contractionen, treason, is the betraying it selfe.

Detegit imbelles animos, nil fortiter audens Proditio.

Inter leges Canuti, fo. 118. ca. 61. Proditiones (hlapono ppice)

numerabantur inter scelera jure humano inexpiabilia. Treason is divided into two parts, viz. high treason, alta proditio, and into petit treason, proditio parva. The Latin word used in law is proditio fà prodere) and thereof cometh proditorie, which of necessity must be used in every indictment of treason, and cannot be expressed by any other word, periphrasis, or circumlocution.

(2) Ad fait declarisement.] This law is for the most part declaratory of the ancient law, and therefore this word (declarisement) is used. But yet the studious reader shall observe, that in divers clauses it addeth to the former law, whereunto this word (declarifement) will fufficiently extend.

(3) Quant home, &c.] This extendeth to both fexes, home including both man and woman. This act is generall, and therefore extendeth to some persons which claimed a priviledge to be exempted from secular jurisdiction. (For example,) * Adam de Orleton bishop of Hereford was indicted of high treason for aiding the Mortimers, &c. with men, and armour against king E. 2, &c. Whereupon he was arraigned, and alledged se absque offensa Dei, et sanctæ ecclesiæ, et absque licentia domini summi pontificis non posse nec debere re-Spondere in hac parte. And thereupon the archbishop of Canterbury, York, and Dublin, and their suffragans came to the barre, claimed his priviledge, and took him away; and he was fo far from punishment, as he was after translated to Worcester, and after to Winchester. But this statute (to cleare all doubts) extendeth to all persons, * as well ecclesiasticall as temporall, and so hath it ever fince been put in execution, as hereafter in divers cases it appear-See hereafter cap. Murdre et Larceny.

A man that is non compos mentis, as shall be said more fully hereafter in the next section, or an infant within the age of discretion is not (un home) within this statute; for the principall end of punishment is, that others by his example may feare to offend, ut pæna ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat: but such punishment can be no example to mad-men, or infants that are not of the age of And God forbid that in cases so penall, the law should discretion. not be certaine; and if it be certaine in case of murder and selony, à fortiwi, it ought to be certaine in case of treason.

If a man commit treason or felony and confesseth the same, or be thereof otherwise convict, if afterward he become de non sane memorie (qui patitur exilium mentis) he shall not be called to answer: or if after judgement he become de non sane memorie, he shall not be executed, for it cannot be an example to others.

And all aliens that are within the realme of England, and whose foveraignes * are in amity with the king of England, are within the protection of the king, and doe owe a locall obedience to the king, (are homes within this act) and if they commit high treason against the king, they shall be punished as traytors, but otherwise it is of an enemy, whereof you may reade at large, lib. 7. fame by fome open deed tending to the execution of his intent, or which might be cause of death, as justice Spigurnel reporteth a case adjudged; that a man's wife went away with her avowterer, and they d compassed the death of the husband, and as he was riding towards the fessions of oier and terminer and gaole-delivery, they affaulted him and stroke him with weapons, that he fell downe as dead, whereupon they fled; the husband recovered and made hue and cry, and came to the fessions and shewed all this matter to the justices, and upon the warrant of the justices, they were taken, indicted, and arraigned; and all this speciall matter was found by verdict; and it was adjudged that the man should be hanged, and the woman burnt. And Sir William Beresford, chiefe justice of the common pleas faid, that before him and his compagnions justices of oier and terminer and gaole-delivery, a youth was arraigned, for that he would have stolue the goods of his master, and came to his masters bed, where he lay asseepe, and with a knife attempted with all his force to have cut his throat; and thinking that he had indeed cut it, he fled, whereupon the master cried out, and his neighbours apprehended the youth; and all this matter being found by special verdict, in the end he was adjudged to be Quia * voluntas reputabitur pro facto. So as it was hanged, &c. not a bare compassing or plotting of the death of a man, either by word, or writing, but fuch an overt deed, as is aforefaid, to manifest the same. So as if a man had compassed the death of another, and had uttered the fame by words or writing, yet he should not have died for it, for there wanted an overt deed tending to the execution of his compassing. But if a man had imagined to murder, or rob another, and to that intent had become infidiater viarum, and assaulted him, though he killed him not, nor took any thing from him, yet was it felony, for there was an overt deed, But in those days, in the case of the king, if a man had compassed, or imagined the death of the king (who is the head of the commonwealth) and had declared his compassing, or imagination by words or writing, this had been high treason, and a sufficient overture by the ancient law. And herewith agree all our ancient books, Glanvil saith, oum quis de morte regis, &c. infamatur, &c.

(5) Fait compasser on imaginer.] So as there must be a compassfing or imagination, for an act done per infortunium, without compassing, intent, or imagination, is not within this act, as it appeareth by the expresse words thereof. Et actus non facit reum, nist Regula. mens sit rea. And if it be not within the words of this act, then by force of a clause hereafter, viz. Et pur ceo que plusors auters, &c. It cannot be adjudged treason, untill it be declared treason by parliament, which is the remedie in that case, which the makers of the law provided in that case. This compassing, intent, or imagination, though fecret, is to be tryed by the peers, and to be difcovered by circumstances precedent, concomitant, and subsequent, with all endeavour evermore for the fafety of the king. was the case of Sr. Walter Tirrel a French knight, who the first day of August ann. 13 Williel. 2. ann. dom. 1100 being a hunting Mat. Par. pa. 51. with the king in the new forest, was commanded by the king to floot at a hart, exist ergo telum volatile, et obstante arbore in obliquum reflexum faciens, per medium cordis regem sauciavit, qui subito mortuus corruit.

It appeareth also by the Custumer of Normandy, treating of Custum de Nor. treason, and the exposition of the same, that this act was not trea-To calculate or feek to know by fetting of a figure or witchcraft, how long the king shall raigne or live, is no treason, for it is no compassing, or imagination of the death of the king, within this statute of 25 E. 3. and this appeareth by the judgment of the parliament in 23 Eliz. whereby this offence was made felony during the life of queen Eliz. which before was punishable by fine and imprisonment.

The ancient law was, that if a mad man had killed or offered to kill the king, it was holden for treason; and so it appeareth by king Alfred's law before the conquest, and in lib. 4. in Beverlyes case, But now by this statute and by force of these words, fait compasser ou imaginer la mort, he that is non compos mentis and totally deprived of all compassings, and imaginations, cannot commit high treason by compassing or imagining the death of the king: for furiofus solo furore punitur: but it must be an absolute madnesse, and a totall deprivation of memorie. And this appeareth by the statute of 33 H. 8. for thereby it is provided, that if a man being compact mentis commit high treason, and after accusation, &c. fall to madnesse, that he might be tryed in his absence, &c. and suffer death, as if he were of perfect memory: for by this statute of 25 E. 3. a mad man could not commit high treason. It was further prowided by the faid act of 33 H. 8. that if a man attainted of treason became mad, that notwithstanding he should be executed; which cruell and inhuman law lived not long, but was repealed, for in that point also it was against the common law, because by intendment of law the execution of the offender is for example, ut pana ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat, as before is said: but so it Glanv. lib. 1. is not when a mad man is executed, but should be a miserable cap. 2. spectacle, both against law, and of extreame inhumanity and Fleta, lib. 1. cruelty, and can be no example to others.

(7) Nrē seignior le roy.] These words extend to all his successors, as it hath been alwayes taken.

(8) Le roy.] Is to be understood of a king regnant, and not of one that hath but the name of a king, or a nominative king, as it was resolved in the case of king Phillip, who married queen Mary, and was but a nominative king, for queen Mary had the office and dignity of a king, so as she that wanted the name of a king, but had the office and dignity, was within this act of 25 E. 3. And hee that had the name, and not the office and dignity of the king was not within it. And therefore an act was made, that to compasse or imagine the death of king Phillip, &c. during his marriage with the queen, was treason. A queen regnant is within these words (arē seignior le roy) for she hath the office of a king.

This act is to be understood of a king in possession of the crowne, and kingdom: for if there be a king regnant in possession, although he be rex de facto, et non de jure, yet is he feignior le roy within the purvien of this statute. And the other that hath right, and is out of possession, is not within this act. Nay if treason be committed against a king de facto, et non de jure, and after the king de jure commeth to the crowne, he shall punish the treason done to the king de facto: and a pardon granted by a king de jure, that is not also de facto, is voyde.

If the crown descend to the rightfull heire, he is rex before coronation: for by the law of England there is no interregnum: and coronation is but an ornament or solemnity of honour. And so it was resolved by all the judges Hil. 1 Ja. in the case of Watson and Clarke seminary priests; for by the law there is alwayes a king, in whose name the lawes are to be maintained, and executed, otherwise justice should faile. Divers kings before the conquest voluntarily renounced their kingly office: and so did king H. 2. in the 16, yeare of his reigne, and Henry his sonne was created and crowned.

It appeareth by Britton, that to compasse the death of the father of the king, is treason, and so was the law holden long after that a for after king E. 2. had dismissed himselfe of his kingly office, and duty, and his sonne by the name of E. 3. was crowned, and king regnant, those cursed caitifs, Thomas Gourny, and William Ocle, and others were attainted of high treason for murthering the king's sather, who had been king by the name of E. 2. and had judgement to be drawne, hanged, and quartered.

*The like judgement was given against Sir John Matrevers knight, and others, as being guilty of the death of the king's uncle, Edmond earl of Kent, which at that time (being so neer of the bloud royall) was by some holden also treason. But now this act of 25 E. 3. hath restrained high treason in case of death (al nr feignior le roy. Sa compaigne, et al eigne sitz, et heire le roy.

To whom the faid John answered, that he would answer him in the king's court, as the court should confider, &c. and thereupon gave him his faith. After Nich. withdrew himselfe from the king's host, and from the king's aid, leaving the king amongst his enemies, in periculo hostium fuorum, and adjourned the faid John to defend himself in the court of the king of France, and prefixed him a certaine day, et fic quantum in eo fuit, subjiciens, et submittens dominium regis, et regni subjectioni dni. regis Francia, ad hoc faciendum, iter suum arripuit usque Dovorsam, ad transfretandum, &c. So piracy by any of the king's subjects upon another, was taken to be treason before this act, for so is the book to be intended, because a pirat is hostis humani generis. But by this act it is not now to be judged treaton. See hereafter in the chapter of Piracy.

One doth marie a queen regnant, if the husband compasse the death of the queene, and declare the fame by overt act, he is guilty of treason, and punishable by this act, for to this and many other purpofes she is a distinct person by the common law. And so if a queene wife of a king regnant, compasse the death of the king, and declare the same by overt act, she is guilty of treason, and punishable by this act. So as (that we may speak it once for all) by these and many others that might be cited, (some whereof shall hereafter Britton, cap. 8. be touched) the preamble of this act appeareth to be true, that di- and other ancient vers opinions had been before the making of this act, what offences authors ubi supra. should be adjudged high treason, and what not.

This statute having restrained the compassing, &c. of death to the king, queen, and prince, it came to passe after the making of See placita cothis act, that in 3 R. 2. two citizens of London, John Kerby, mer- ram rege Hill. cer, and John Algore, grocer conceiving malice against John Impe- an. 3 R. 2. In the 22 years of E. 3. which was about 3 years before the making of this act, one John at Hill had murdered A. de Walton the king's ambassadour, nuncium dni. regis miss. ad mandatum regis exequendum: this was adjudged high treason, for which he was drawne. hanged, and beheaded, &c. For true it is, quod legatus ejus vice fun-gitur, a quo destinatur, et honorandus est sicut ille cujus vicem gerit, et legatos violare contra jus gentium eft. But by this act of 25 E. 3. it is restrained to the death de nre. seignior le 10y, and therefore prorex is not within this statute.

(9) Sa compaigne.] This word compaigne, (which is all one with confort or wife) was used, that compassing, &c. must be during the marriage with the king, for after the king's death she is not sa compaigne, and therefore it extendeth not to a queene dowager, and for this cause this word compaigne was used in this act.

(10) Le fitz eigne et heire le roy.] The eldest sonne and heire of a queen regnant is within this law. Before this statute some did hold, that to compasse the death of any of the king's children, was treason. But by this act it is restrained to the prince, the king's fonne, being heire apparant to the crowne for the time being: and he need not be the first begotten sonne, for the second after the decease of the first begotten without issue, is fitz eigne within this statute, et sic de ceteris. If the heire apparant to the crowne be a collateral heire apparant, he is not within this statute, untill it be declared by parliament, as it was in the duke of York's case.

Roger Mortimer, earle of March, was in anno domini 1487 Anno 30 H. 6. Richard (11 R. 2.) proclaimed heire apparant. duke of York was likewise proclaimed heire apparant. And so was John de la Poole earle of Lincolne, by R. 3. And Henry marquisse of Exeter, by king Henry the eighth. But none of these or of the like, are within the purvieu of this statute. And now that we have handled compassings and imaginations, let us proceed to the refidue which concerne acts and deeds.

Heire is here taken for heire apparant, for he cannot be heire in

(14) Ou si home leva guerre enconter nostre seignior le rey.] * This was high treason by the common law, for no subject can levie warre within the realme without authority from the king, for to him it only belongeth, See F. N. B. 113. a. Le roy de droit doit Javer et defender son realme vers enemies, &c.

b A compatting or conspiracy to levie war, is no treason, for there must be a levying of war in facto. But if many conspire to levie war, and some of them do levie the same according to the conspiracy, this is high treason in all, for in treason all be principals, and war is levied.

If any levie war to expulse strangers, to deliver men out of prisons, to remove counsellors, or against any statute, or to any other end, pretending reformation of their own heads, without warrant; this is levying of war against the king: because they take upon them royall authority, which is against the king. There is a diversity betweene levying of war and committing of a great riot, a rout, or an unlawfull affembly. For example, as if three, or foure, or more, doe rise to burne, or put down an inclosure in Dale, which the lord of the manor of Dale hath made there in that particular place; this or the like is a riot, a rout, or an unlawfull affembly, and no treason. But if they had risen of purpose to alter religion established within the realme, or laws, or to go from riots in some town to town generally, and to cast downe inclosures, this is a levying of war (though there be no great number of the conspirators) within the purvien of this statute, because the pretence is publick and generall, and not private in particular. And so it was resolved in the case of Richard Bradshaw, miller, Robert Burton, mason, and others of Oxfordshire, whose case was, that they conspired and agreed to assemble themselves with so many as they could procure at Enflowe-hill in the faid county, and there to rife, being attourney. and from thence to go from gentlemans house to gentlemans generall, and house, and to cast downe inclosures, as well for inlargement of present. high-wayes as of errable lands. And they agreed to get armour and artillery at the lord Norrys his house, and to weare them in going from gentlemans house to gentlemans house for the purpose aforesaid, and to that purpose they perswaded divers others: and all this was confessed by the offenders. And it was resolved, that this was a compassing and intention to levie war against the queen, because the pretence was publick within the statute of 13 Eliz.

13 Eliz. cap. 1.b. The indictments and attainders of treason by force of this statute are not more to be followed, because the statute which made them good, is expired. Dier, 3 & 4 Ph. and Mar. 144. 10 E.4. 6. 1 Mar. Treaton, Br. 24. Ter. Mic. 8 H. 8. Mich. 7 H. 5. Coram rege. Heref. Rot. 20.

By the faid statute of 13 Eliz. cap. 1. it is enacted, declared, and established, that during the natural life of queene Elizabeth, if any within the realme or without, should compasse, imagine, invent, devise, or intend to levie war against her majesty, within this realme, or without, and the same declare by writing, or word, &c. that it should be high treason: so during the life of the queen, a conspiracy to levie war was high treason, though no war were levied; and upon that law, Bradshaw, Burton, and others, were attainted of high treason, for conspiracy only to levie war. it was refolved by all the justices, that it was no treason within the The words in this law are statute of 25 E. 3. as hath been said. [levie guerre] an actuall rebellion or infurrection is a levying of war within this act, and by the name of levying war is to be expressed in the indictment. If any with strength and weapons invasive, and defensive, doth hold and defend a castle or fort against the king and his power, this is levying of war against the king within this statute of 25 E. 3.

It was refolved by all the judges of England in the reigne of king H. 8. that an infurrection against the statute of labourers, for the inhansing of salaries and wages, was a levying of war against the king, because it was generally against the kings law, and the offenders took upon them the reformation thereof, which subjects by gathering of power ought not to do. It was specially found, that divers of the kings subjects did minister and yeeld victuals to Sir John Oldcastle, knight, and others, being in open war against the king, and that they were in company with them in open war; but all this was sound to be pro timore mortis, et quod recesserum, quam cito potuerum: and it was adjudged to be no treason, because it was for seare of death. Et assus non facit reum, nissuens sit rea. And therefore this in them was no levying of war against the king within this act.

And by the preamble it appeareth, that it could not be tryed by the common law, but by the civill law before the lord admirall. See hereafter in the exposition of the statute of 28 H. 8. cap. 15. et infra, cap. 49.

(16) Et de ceo provablement soit attaint per overt fait per gents de lour condition.] In this branch four things are to be observed, & .rft this word [provablement] provably, that is, upon direct and manifest proof, not upon conjecturall presumptions, or inferences, or straines of wit; but upon good and sufficient proofe. And herein the adverb [provablement] provably, hath a great force, and fignifieth a direct and plain proof, which word the king, the lords, and commons in parliament did use, for that the offence was so hainous, and was fo heavily, and severely punished, as none other the like. and therefore the offender must provably be attainted, which words are as forcible, as upon direct and manifest proof. Note, the word is not (probably) for then commune argumentum might have served, but the word is [provable,] be attainted.

2. This word (attaint) necessarily implyeth that he be proceeded with, and attainted according to the due course, and proceerings of law, and not by absolute power, or by other meanes, * as in former times had been used. h And therefore if a man doth adhere to the enemies of the king, or be flaine in open warre against the king, or otherwise die before the attainder of treason, he forfeiteth nothing, because (as this act saith) he is not attainted: wherein this act hath altered that, which before this act, in case of treason, was taken for law. And the statute of 34 E. 3. cap. 12. saves nothing to the king, but that which was in effe, and pertaining to the king at the making of that act. And this appeareth by a judgement in parliament in anno 29 H. 6. cap. 1. that * Jack Cade being flaine in open rebellion could no way be punished, or forfeit any thing, and therefore was attainted by that act of high treason.

3. Per overt fait,] per apertum factum. This doth also strengthen the former exposition of the word (provablement,) that it must be provably, by an open act, which must be manifestly proved. As if divers doe conspire the death of the king, and the manner how, and thereupon provide weapons, powder, poison, assay harness, fend letters, &c. or the like, for execution of the conspiracy. preparation by some overt act, to depose the king, or take the king by force, and strong hand, and to imprison him until he hath yeelded to certaine demands, this is a sufficient overt act to prove the compassing, and imagination of the death of the king: for this upon the matter is to make the king a subject, and to dispoyle him of his kingly office of royall government. And so it was refolved by all the judges of England. Hill. 1 Jac. regis, in the case of the lo. Cobham, lord Gray, and Watson and Clarke seminary priests: and so had it been resolved by the justices, Hill. 43. Eliz. in the case of the earles of E. and of S. who intended to goe to the court where the queen was, and to have taken her into their power, and to have removed divers of her counsell, and for that end did affemble a multitude of people; this being raifed to the end aforefaid was a fufficient overtact for compassing the death of the queen. And so by woful experience in former times it hath fallen out, in the cases of king E. 2. R. 2. H. 6. and E. 5. that were taken, and imprisoned by their subjects. And this is made more plain by the legall forme of an inditement of treason: for first it is alledged according to this act, quod * proditorie compassavit, et imaginatus fuit mortem et destructionem dni. regis, et ipsum dom. regem interficere, &c. in the second part of the inditement is alledged the overt act, et ad illam nephandam, et proditoriam compassationem, imaginationem, et propositum suum persiciend' et perimplend' and then certainly to set downe the overt fact for preparation to take, and imprison the king, or any other sufficient overt act, which of necessity must be set downe in the inditement. Hereby it appeareth how infufficient many inditements were of high treason, wherein it was generally alledged, that per apertum factum compassavit et imaginatus fuit mortem dom. regis, &c. * For example termo. Mic. anno 5 E. 6. Edward duke of Somerset was indited before commissioners of over and terminer in London, quod iffe deam præ oculis suis non habens, sed instigatione diabolica t seductus, apud Holborne in parochia Sancti Andreæ infra civitatem London, viz. 20 die Aprilis anno regni domini regis Edw. sexti quinto, et diversis diebus et vicibus antea et postea false, maliciose, et proditorie * per apertum factum circumivit, compassavit, et imaginavit cum diversis aliis personis prædictum dominu regem de statu suo regali deponere et deprivare, &c. Which indictment, and all others of like forme were against law, as hath been faid, and of the matter of this indictment that noble duke generall indictwas by his peers found not guilty. But then it may be demanded, for what offence he had judgement of death, and 2. what law made it an offence. The offence appeareth in his indictment, for the former part thereof contained high treason, whereof he was acquitted, and the latter part contained one only offence of felony (whereof he was found guilty) in these words, et ulterius juratores præd præsentant, quod præsatus Edwardus dux Somerset deu præ oculis suis non habens, sed instigatione diabolica seductus 20 Maii an. regni dicti dom. regis Edwardi sexti quinto supradicto, ac diversis aliis diebus et vicibus antea et postea apud Helborn in præd. paroch. Sancti Andreæ in civitate London, et apud diversa alia loca infra civitatem London præd. felonice ut felo dicti dom, regis per aperta verba et facta procuravit, movit, et instigavit complurimos subditos ipsius domini regis ad in-Jurgendum, et apertum rebellionem et infurrectionem infra hoc regnum Angliæ movend' contra ipsum diminum regem, et ad tunc et ibid. felonice ad capiendum et impriscnandum prænobilem Johannem comitem Warwick de privato confilio domini regis ad tunc ex ften', contra pacem dicti domini regis coronam et dignitatem suam, et contra formam statuti in hujusmodi casu editi et provisi. The statute whereupon this indictment was intended to be grounded, was the branch of the statute of 3 and 4 E. 6. by which it is provided, "That if any person or persons by ringing of any bel, &c. or by malicious speaking or uttering of any words, or making any outcry, &c. or by any other deed or act shall raise or cause to be raised or assembled any persons to the number of 12 or above, to the intent that the same persons should do, commit, or put in ure any of the acts and things above mentioned (whereof to take and imprison any of the kings most honourable privie counsell was one) and the persons to the number of 12 or above so raised and assembled after request and commandement (in fuch fort as in that act is prescribed) shall make their abode and continue together, as is aforesaid, (in the act) or unlawfully perpetrate, doe, commit, or put in ure any of the acts or things abovefaid, that then all and fingular persons by whose speaking, deed, act, or any other the meanes above specified any persons to the number of 12 or above, shall be raised or affembled for the doing, committing, or putting in ure any of the acts or things above mentioned, shall be adjudged for his so speaking or doing a felon, and fuffer execution of death as in case of felony, and shall lose his benefit of sanctuary and clergy." Hereby it doth manifestly appeare, that the truth concerning this nobleman's attainder, and execution in divers things, is contrary to the vulgar opinion, and some of our chronicles, and in some points contrary to law. First, that for the felony made by the said branch of the faid act he could not have had his clergie, for clergy in that . case is expresly ousted by the said act. 2. That he was not indicted for going about, &c. the death of the earle of Warwick then of the kings privie counsell, but only for his taking or imprifonment, and therefore could not be indicted upon the statute of 3 H. 7. as some have imagined. 3. That the indictment is altogether infufficient, for it pursueth not the words or matter of the faid branch of the said act, as by comparing of them it manifestly appeareth; which (we being defirous that truth may appeare in all things) we have thought good upon this occasion to adde for 4. That being but attainted of felony, he advancement of truth. could not by law be beheaded, as elsewhere we have shewed. And this act that created the felony faith, that such a felon shall fuffer execution of death, as in case of felony. 5. Lastly, this whole act was justly holden to be a doubtful and dangerous statute, and therefore was deservedly repealed. And after the fall of this duke, see the preamble of the statute of subsidie of 7 E. 6.

If a man be arraigned upon an indictment of high treason, and stand mute, he shall have such judgement, and incurre such forfeiture, as if he had been convicted by verdict, or if he had confessed it. For this standeth well with this word provablement, for fatetur facinus, qui judicium fugit: but otherwise it is in case of petit treason, murder, or other selony.

If a subject conspire with a foraine prince beyond the seas to invade the realme by open hostility, and prepare for the same by some overtact, this is a sufficient overtact for the death of the king, for by this act of parliament in that case there must be an overtact. be an overt act for another. As for example: a conspiracy is had to levie warre, this (as hath been faid and fo refolved) is no treason by this act untill it be levied, therefore it is no overt act or manifest proofe of the compassing of the death of the king within this act: for the words be (de ceo, &c.) that is, of the compassing of For this were to confound the severall classes, or membra dividentia, et sic de cæteris, &c.

(17) Si home counterface le grand scale.] All our ancient authors agree that this was high treason by the common law, and for this offence his judgement was to be drawn, hanged, and quartered, at the common law, as in other cases of high treason, (the counterfeiting of the kings mony excepted.) See the second part of the Institutes. W. 1. cap. 5.

In ancient time every treason was comprehended under the name of selony, but not decontra: and therefore a pardon of all selonies was sometime allowed in case of high treason. But the law is, and of long time hath been otherwise holden: and if the inditement were felonice, and not proditorie, (for the king may lessen the stence, if it please him) then the pardon of selonies is good at this defence, if it please him) then the pardon of selonies is good at this day, or no inditement can be of high treason without this word (proditorie:) and in qualibet proditione implicatur felonia, quia in qualibet brevi de extrendo super qualibet indictamento de proditione proclamator sacit sic, I. B. an exigent on thy head of treason and selony.

A compassing, intent, or going about to counterfeit the great feale is no treason, but there must be an actuall counterfeiting, also it must be to the likenesse of the kings great seale, the words be, counterface le grand seale le rey.

Now it is to be seen what shall be said a forging, or counterfeiting of the great seale. If the lord chancellor, or lord keeper put the great seale to a charter &c. without warrant, this is no treason, because the great seale is not counterfeited. But it seemeth by Briton so. 10. b. that it was treason at the common law, and of that opinion is Fleta so. 29. a. but it is no treason now (without question) by the negative clause of this act.

If a man take wax lawfully imprinted with the great feale from one patent, and fix it to a writing purporting a grant from the king, there have been divers opinions in this case what the offence is, which we will rehearfe.

In 40 Ass. which was about 15 years after the making of this act, it was not holden high treason, but a great misprission, for that it is no counterseiting of a new, but an abuse of the true great seale.

In 42 E. 3. the abbot of Bruer caused Rob. Rigge his commoigne to rase a charter of R. 1. and put out the mannor of Fissetruda, and in place thereof put in Esleghe. And this offence was heard, and sentenced before the king and his counsell in the star-chamber, as a great offence and misprission: for if it had been high treason, it should have had another tryall, and yet this was a great abuse of the great seal.

2 H. 4. The taking of the great feale from one patent and fixing it to a commission to gather mony, &c. was adjudged to be such an offence, as the offender had judgement to be drawne, and hanged. The record of which case we have perused, and the effect thereof is this. The partie is indited generally for counterfeiting of the great seal, whereunto he pleaded not guilty, and the jury sound him not guilty of the counterfeiting of the great seale, as was supposed by the inditement, and found further specially, that he tooke the great seale from one patent, and put it to the commission, and that the party put the same in execution, and there judgement was given, that he should be drawne and hanged: which (whatsoever the offence was) ought not to have been given upon this

Errores ad sua principia referre, est refellere. To bring errors to their beginning, is to see their last. this verdict, the jury finding him not guilty of the offence alledged in the inditement: and besides the judgement is such, as is given in case of petit treason, and not of high treason. Hereby it appeareth how dangerous it is for any to report a case by the ear, specially concerning treason, unlesse he had advisedly read the record: for (as I take it) the misreport of this case hath hatched errors, and he mistooke the judgment, if it had been high treason, for then it should have been drawne, hanged, and quartered.

This statute naming the great seale and privie seale, the forging and the counterfeiting of the privie fignet, or of the figne manuell was not within this statute. But by the statute of Mar. it is made high treason in both cases. Albeit that in this act there is no mention made of * ayders and consenters to this counterfeiting, yet they are within the purvieu of this flatute, for there be no ac-

And it is to be knowne, that if any doe counterfeit the kings coyne contrary to this statute of 25 E. 3. he shall have the punishment of his body, but as in case of petit treason, that is, to be drawne and hanged till he be dead, but the forfeiture of his lands is as in other cases of high treason, for this statute is but a declaration of the common law, and the reason of his corporall punishment is, for that in this case he was only drawne and hanged at the common law, but a woman in that case was to be burnt.

Fifthly, uttering of salse money in England, though he know it to be salse and counterseit to the likenesse of the coyne of England, is no treason within this statute, unless he brought it from a foraine nation, for the words be, shome apport four money en cest realme. Si home tuast chancelour, tresurer, ou justice nostre seigniour le roy det un banke ou det auter, justice in eire, ou dassises et touts auters justices affignes doier et terminer esteant en lour place seasant bour office.

In this case albeit one intend to kill any of these here named in their place, and doing their office, and thereupon strike or wound any of them, this is no treason: for our statute saith, si home tuass chancelor, &c. If a man kill the chancellour, &c. For if it be treason, death must ensue. And the reason wherefore it is treason in these cases is, because sitting judicially in their places, (that is, in the kings courts) and doing their office in administration of justice, they represent the kings person, who by his oath is bound that the fame be done. And this act extends only to the persons here particularly named, and to no other: and therefore extendeth not to the court of the lord steward, or of the constable and marshall, nor to the court of the admiralty, or any other, nor to any ecclesiasticall court. Nay, it extends not to the high court of parliament, if any member of the lords house, or house of commons be flaine in his place, and doing his office, because it is cosus omissus, and not mentioned in this act. But in all those cases it is wilfull murder, for the law implyeth malice.

(20) * Des tres. et tenements tenus des auters come de luy mesme.] This is an assirmance of the common law, and the reason thereof is, for that the offence is committed against the soveraigne lord the king, who is the light and the life of the common-wealth: and therefore the law doth give to the king in satisfaction of his offence. all the lands, &c. which the offender hath, and that no subject should be partaker of any part of the forseiture for this offence.

And where the words be [lands and tenements holden, &c.] yet the forfeiture extends to * rents charges, rents feck, commons, corrodies, and other hereditaments which are not holden, for in case of high treason the tenure is not materiall.

OF PETIT TREASON.

Tovesque ceo il y ad un auter manner de treason, cestassavoir, Britton, ca. 8. quant un servant tua son maister (1) ou un seme tua son Baron (2), ou quant home seculer ou de religion tua son prelate a que il doit foye et obedience (3). Et de tiel manner de treason la forfeiture des escheats appertenent a chescun seignior de son fee proper, &c.

And moreover there is another manner of treason, that is to fay, when a servant slayeth his master, or a wife her husband, or when a man fecular or religious flayeth his prelate to whom he oweth faith and obedience. And of such treason the escheats ought to pertain to every lord of his own see, &c.

It was called high or grand treason in respect of the royall majesty against whom it is committed, and comparatively it is called petit treason (whereof now this statute speaketh) in respect it is committed committed against subjects and inseriour persons, whereof this act doth enumerate three kinds.

(1) Quant un fervant tua fon maister.] This was petit treason by the common law, for so it appeareth by the a book of 12 Ass. that a woman servant killed her mistris, wherefore she had judgement to be burnt, which is the judgement at this day of a woman for petit treason. And herewith agreeth 21 E. 3. where the reader must know, that in stead of mere in that case you must read maister.

b And upon this act, if the fervant kill the wife of his master, it is petit treason, for he is servant both to the husband and wife.

* If the child commit parricide in killing of his father or mother (which the law-makers never imagined any childe would doe) this case is out of this statute, unlesse the childe served the father or mother for wages, or meat, drink or apparell, for that it is none of these three kinds specified in this law. And yet the offence is far more hainous and impious in a child then in a servant, for peccata contra naturam sunt gravissima: but the judges are restrained by this act, to interpret this act, à simili, or à minore ad majus, as hereaster shall be said. And * some say that parricide was petit treason by the common law.

d A fervant of malice intended to kill his master, and lay in wait to doe it whilest he was his servant, but did it not till a year after he was out of service, and it was adjudged petit treason within this

(2) Un feme tua f.n baron.] * This was petit treason by the common law, as it appeareth in our books. If the wife procure one to murder her husband, and he doth it accordingly, in this case the wife being absent is but accessory, and shall be hanged and not burnt, because the accessory cannot be guilty of petit treason, where the principall is not guilty but of murder: and the *accessory must follow the nature of the principall: but if he that did the murder had been a servant of the husband, it had been treason in them both, and the wife should have been burnt. And so it is in the case before of a servant, and in the case hereaster of a clerk.

If the wife and a stranger kill the husband, it is petit treason in the wife, and murder in the stranger, and so it is in the case of the servant next before, and of the clerk next after.

Before this statute it was petit treason, st quis falfaverit figillum domini sui de cujus familia suit. Britton agreeth herewith. But these are taken away by this act, and all other saving these, that are here expressed.

(3) Quant home seculer ou de religion tua son prelate a que il doit foy et obedience.] This clause is understood only of an ecclesiasticall person, be he secular, or regular, if he kill his prelate, or superiour, to whom he oweth faith, and obedience, it is petit treason: and so it was at the common law. And petit treason doth presuppose a trust, and obedience in the offender, either civill, as in the wise and servant, or ecclesiasticall, as in the ecclesiastical person.

Aidors, abettors, and procurers of any of these petit treasons, are within this law.

If the fervant kill his mistris, viz. his masters wise, this is treason (as hath been said) not by equity, for that is denied as well in petit specially observed, for it is as much to say, as particularized, or fet downe particularly: so as nothing is left to the construction of the judge, if it be not specified and particularized before by this act. A happy fanctuary or place of refuge for judges to flye unto. that no mans blood and ruine of his family do lie upon their consciences against law. And if that the construction by arguments à fimili, or à minori ad majus had been left to judges, the mischiefe before this tlatute would have remained, viz. diversity of opinions. what ought to be adjudged treason, which this statue hath taken away by expresse words: and the statute of 1 Mar. doth repeale all treasons, &c. but only such as be declared and expressed in this act of 25 E. 3. wherein this word [expressed] is to be obferved.

In the parliament holden anno 5 H. 4. the earle of Northumberland came before the king and lords in parliament, and by his petition to the king, acknowledged to have done against his allegiance: and namely, for gathering of power and giving of liveries. whereof he prayeth pardon: and the rather, that upon the kings letters he yeelded himselfe, and came to the king unto Yorke, where he might have kept himselfe away. The which petition the king delivered to the justices by them to be considered. Whereupon the lords made protestation, that the order thereof belonged to them, as peers of the parliament, to whom fuch judgement belonged in weighing of this statute of 25 E. 3. &c. and they judged the same to be no treason, nor felony, but only trespasse finable at the kings will. And the opinion in 27 Ass. is dehied, that if one of the indicters discover the counsell of the king, that it should be treason; because it is not specified before in this act, and therefore neither high treason, nor petit treason.

(5) Tanque per devant le roy et son parliament. By this it is apparent, that any like or other case ought to be declared by the whole parliament, (and not by the king and lords of the upper house only, or by the king and the commons, or by the lords and commons.) And so was it done by the whole court of parliament in 3 R. 2. ubi supra. 5 Eliz. 18 Eliz. ubi supra, and many other acts of

Rot. Par. 17 R. 2. nu. 20.

John duke of Gwyen and of Lancaster, steward of England, and Phomas duke of Glocester, constable of England, the kings uncles, complained to the king, that Thomas Talbot knight, with other his adherents, conspired the death of the said dukes in divers parts of Cheshire, as the same was confessed and well knowne, and prayed that the parliament might judge of the fault (which petition was just, and according to this branch of the statute of $5 E. 3.) but the record faith further: whereupon the king and fords in the parliament adjudged the same fact to be open and high treason: which judgement wanting the affent of the commons, was no declaration within this act of 25 E. 3. because it was not by the king and his parliament according to this act, but by the king and lords only.

(6) Soit le case monstre et declare, &c.] This declaration may be absolute, or fub modo, for a time.

By this which hath been faid it manifestly appeareth, what damhable and damned opinions those were concerning high treason, of Trefilian chiefe justice of the kings bench, Sir Robert Belknap chiefe justice of the common bench, Sir John Holt, Sir Roger Fulthorp, and Sir William Burghe, knights, fellowes of the said Sir Robert Belknap, and of John Lockton one of the kings ferjeants, that were given to king R. the 2. at Nottingham, in the eleventh yeare of his reigne. But more detestable were the opinions of the justices in 21 R. 2. and of Hanckford and Brinchley the kings ferjeants, (and the rather, because they took no example by the punishment of the former) which affirmed the faid opinions to be good and lawfull, faving Sir William Thirning chiefe justice of the common bench gave this answer: That declaration of treason not declared belongeth to the parliament; but to please, he faid, that if he had been a lord or a peer of parliament, if it had been demanded of him, he would have made the like answers. And therefore not only that parliament of 21 R. 2. and 1 H. 4. cap. 4. the circumstances and dependances thereupon, are wholly reversed, revoked, voided, undone, repealed, and adnulled for ever, but also the parliament holden in 11 R. 2. by authority of which parliament, Trefilian, Belknap, and the rest of those false justices and serjeants aforesaid were attainted, is confirmed, for that it was fas there the parliament affirmeth) for the great honour and common profit of the realme.

Aliter in antiquo
MS.
Inprimis ut justa

For the better instruction of the reader to discerne what offences be high treason or petit treason at this day, it shall be necessary to adde hereunto the statute of 1 Mar. whereby it is enacted, [That no act, deed, or offence, being by act of parliament or statute made treason, petit treason, or misprission of treason, by words, writing, ciphering, deeds, or otherwise whatsoever, shall be taken, had, deemed, or adjudged to be high treason, petit treason, or misprision of treason, but only such as be declared and expressed to be treason, petit treason, or misprission of treason, in or by the act of parliament or statute made in the 25 yeare of the raigne of the most noble king of famous memory, king Edward the third. touching or concerning treason, or the declaration of treason, and none other, &c. any act or acts of parliament, statute, or statutes, had or made at any time heretofore or after the faid 25 year of king E. 3. or any other declaration or matter to the contrary in any wife notwithstanding.]

Before this act so many treasons had been made and declared by act of parliament fince this act of 25 E. 3. some in particular, and some in generall, and in such sort penned, as not only the ignorant and unlearned people, but also learned and expert men were many times trapped and fnared: and fometimes treasons made or declared in one kings time, were abrogated in another kings time, either by speciall or generall words: so as the mischief before 25 E. 4. of the uncertainty what was treason, and what not, became to be so frequent and dangerous, as the fafest and furest remedy was, by this excellent act of 1 Mar. to abrogate and repeale all, but only fuch as are specified and expressed in this statute of 25 E. 3. By which law, the fafety both of the king and of the subject, and the preservation of the common-weale is wisely and sufficiently provided for, in such certainty, as nihil relietum est arbitrio judicis. And certainly the two rules recited in the preamble of the faid act of 1 Mariæ, are affuredly true. The first, [that the state of a king standeth and consisteth more affured by the love and favour of the subject toward their soveraigne, then in the dread and fear of lawes made with rigorous pains and extreme punishment for not obeying their foveraigne. And the other, [that lawes justly made for the prefervation of the common-weale without extreme punishment or penalty, are more often, and for the most part better obeyed and kept, then lawes and statutes made with great and extreme punishment.] Mitius imperanti melius paretur.

In which act five notable things are to be observed. First, it extendeth (without exception) to all high treasons made by any act of parliament since the said act of 25 E. 3. Secondly, to all declarations of high treasons by any act of parliament since the said act of 25 E. 3. (as of the said declaration in 3 R. 2. of killing an ambassadour and the like.) Thirdly, to all petit treasons made or declared by any act of parliament since the said act of 25 E. 3. Fourthly, albeit misprission of treason is not mentioned in the act of 25 E. 3. yet every misprission of any treason made or declared since that act by any act of parliament, is abrogated. Fifthly, no offence to be treason, petit treason, or misprission of treason, but only such as be declared and expressed to be treason, petit treason, or misprission of treason by the said act of 25 E. 3. Here three things are to be observed: first, that this word [expressed] excludeth all implications or inferences whatfoever. Secondly, here misprission of *That is, of such treason is taken for concealement of high treason or petit treason. and only of high treason or petit treason specified and expressed in the act of 25 E. 3. Thirdly, that no former judgement, attainder, president, resolution, or opinion of judges or justices of high treason, petit treason, or misprision of treason, other then such as are specified and expressed in the said act of 25 E. 3. are to be followed or drawne to example: for the words be direct and plaine, [that from henceforth, no act, deed, or offence, &c. shall be taken, had, deemed, or adjudged to be treason, petit treason, or a misprision of treason, but only such as be declared and expressed in the faid act of 25 E. 3. &c. any act of parliament or statute after 25 E. 3. or any other declaration or matter to the contrary notwithstanding.] So as there is no high treason, petit treason, or misprision of any treason made or declared by any act of parliament or otherwise since the act of 25 E. 3. but only such as have been made fince the faid act of 1 Mariæ, and of those only fuch as were made b perpetuall, and not during the life of queen Mary or of queen Elizabeth, whereof there be divers which now are expired, which you may reade being all in print. But there wanted nothing to the perfection of the statute of 25 E. 3. but a limitation of some certaine time wherein the offender should be accused. Post intervallum temporis accusator non erit audiendus, nisi docere po test se fuisse justis rationibus impeditum.

Or the declaration of treason, &c. d Declarations made during the naturall life of queen Elizabeth ceased by her death: for declarations may have limitations as well as statutes introductory of new lawes.

There is another excellent branch of a statute made • in 1 & 2 Ph. & Mar. in these words. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all trials hereafter to be had, awarded, or made for any treason, shall be had and used only according to the due order and course of the common law.]

All trials.] f Upon these words many things have been observed by others. First, that the letter of this act extendeth only to triall of high treasons, or petit treasons, and not to misprisson. Secondly, for aine treasons are to be tried by the statute s of 35. H. 8. cap. 2. and so it was resolved by all the justices of England in Orurks case, and had been so resolved before. But for trials of treasons to be had in Wales, or where the kings writ runneth not, in such shires as the king shall affigne by his commission by the * statute of 32 H. S. ca. 4. are abrogated by this act, because they point. are triable by the law.

h It hath been holden, that upon the triall of misprission of treason there must be two lawfull witnesses, as well upon the triall, as upon the indictment, as it was refolved by the justices in the lord Lumleyes case, Hil. 14. Eliz. reported by the lord Dier, under 101, &c. his own hand, which we have feen, but left out of the print, which for other purposes is cited hereafter. Thirdly, it hath beene holden, that this act extendeth not to the indictment of any treason, but to the triall by peers, if the offender be noble: or by freeholders, if the offender be under the degree of nobility: and therefore upon the indictment which is in manner of an accusation, by the statutes of 1 E. 6. and 5 E. 6. two lawfull witnesses are requisite:

treason, high or petit, as is expressed in the act of 25 E. 3. and of no other trea-

1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. c. 11. Supra.

And by 5 E. 6. ca. 11. it is provided by the last clause save one. I that none shall be indicted, arraigned, condemned, convicted, or attainted for any of the treasons or offences aforesaid, or for any * other treasons that now be, or hereafter shall be, which shall hereafter be perpetrated, committed, or done, unlesse the same offender be thereof accused by two lawfull accusers, &c. unlesse the said party arraigned shall willingly, without violence confesse the same.] Here two things are to be observed. 1. The particular penning of both these acts, viz indicted, arraigned, convicted, &c. and the words of 1 & 2. of Ph. & Mar. extend to tryalls only, and not to the indictment. 2. Two lawfull accusers in the act of 5 E. 6. are taken for two lawfull witnesses, for by two lawfull accusers, and accused by two lawfull witnesses (as it is said 1 E. 6.) is all one ! which word (accusers) was used, because two witnesses ought directly to accuse, that is, charge the prisoner, for other accusers have we none in the common law, and therefore lawfull accusers must be such accusers as law allow. And so was it resolved in the Lo. Lumleys case by the justices: for if accusers should not be so taken, then there must be two accusers, by 5 E. 6. and two witnesses by I E. 6. And the strange conceit in a Mar. that one may he an accuser by hearfay, was utterly denied by the justices in the Lo. Lumleys case. And this word (awarded) in the statute of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. extendeth to the tryall upon the arraignment, and not to the indicament, for that is not faid to be awarded.

And it was refolved by all the justices in a Rolstons case upon the rebellion in the north, that these words [shall willingly without violence confesse the same] are to be understood where the partyaccused upon his examination before his arraignment, willingly confessed the same without violence, that is, willingly without any torture: and is not meant of a confession before the judge, for he is never prefent at any torture, neither upon his arraignment was ever any torture offered. And here commeth another b statute made in 1 & 2 Mar. to be considered, by which it is provided, that treason for the counterseiting and impairing of the coin currant in this realm, &c. the offender therein, &c. shall be indicted, arraigned, tried, convicted, or attainted by fuch like evidence, and in fuch manner and form, as hath been used and accustemed within this realm, at any time before the first year of king E. 6. &c. W herein

Wherein the speciall penning of this act is to be observed, which in case of treason concerning the counterfeiting or impairing of coin, &c. hath by particular words restored the evidence requisite by the common law, before the statute of 1 E. 6. as well upon the indictment as the triall. But the act of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. cap. 10. extends to trials only in other cases of high treason, and therefore that act extendeth not to the indictment of other high treasons. Also it is most necessary (as many doe hold) that there should be two lawfull accusers, that is, two lawfull witnesses at the time of the indictment, for that it is commonly found in the absence of the party accused, and it may be when the party suspected is beyond fea, or in remote parts, and may be outlawed thereupon; and there- a Pat. 25 E. 3. fore feeing tue indictment is the foundation of all, it is most necesfary to have substantial proof in a cause so criminall, where probationes oportent effe luce clariores. Lastly, * if the indictment were part of the tryall, then ought he that is noble, and a lord of parliament be indicted of high treason, &c. by his peers: for the tryall of him (without question) must be by his peers: but the indictment of peers of the realm is always by free-holders, and not by their peers, as hereafter shall appear. We have been the longer herein in respect of some variety of opinion (for want of due and intire consideration had of all and every part of that which hath been faid) earl of Ormond's upon ferious study touching this point, without respect of a common wandring opinion.

And it feemeth that by the ancient common law one accuser, or witnesse was not sufficient to convict any person of high treason: • for in that case, where is but one accuser, it shall be tried before the conftable and marshall by combat, as by many records appear-But the constable and marshall have no jurisdiction to hold plea of any thing, which may be determined or discussed by the common law. And that two witnesses be required, appeareth by our books, and I remember no authority in our books to the con trary: and the common law herein is grounded upon the law of Mirror, ca. 3 &-God expressed both in the old and new Testament: d in ore ducrum aut trium testium peribit qui interficietur: nemo occidatur uno contra se

And this feemeth to be the more clear in the triall by the peers, or nobles of the realm, because they come not de aliquo vicineto, whereby they might take notice of the fact in respect of vicinitie, as other jurors may doe.

Having now rehearfed what others have faid and holden, we upon due confideration had of the whole matter will fet down our own opinion, and reasons, in these four points following. First, that the statute of ° 5 E. 6. cap. 11. is a generall law, and extends to all high treasons, as well by the common law declared by the statute of 25 E. 3. as to any other statute made or to be made, the and to extend to negative words of which statute be: [no person shall be findicted, all high treasons, arraigned, convicted, condemned, or attainted for any treason, that now is, or hereafter shall be, &c.] Which words without all ques- f Note as well tion are generall, and so to be taken. The words of that statute be upon the indictfurther, [unlesse the same offender be accused by two lawful accuiers,] these two lawful accusers are in judgement of law taken for treason there two lawful witnesses, and that for two causes: first, they must be ought to be two lawful, that is, allowed by the laws of the realm: and by the law, accusers. 1 E. 6. cap. 12.

3. That the statute of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. cap. 10. doth not abrogate the said act of 1 E. 6 or of 5 E. 6. For that act of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar extends only to trialls by the verdict of twelve men de vicineto, of the place where the offence is alleadged, and k the indictment is no part of the triall, but an information or declaration for the king, and the evidence of witnesses to the jury is no part of the triall, for by law the tryall in that case is not by witnesses, but by the verdict of twelve men, and so a manifest diversity between the evidence to a jury, and a tryall by jurv. And the word [awarded] in that statute doth prove that that act extended only to the venire facias for trial, for neither the indictment nor the evidence can be said to be awarded: veritas que minime desensatur, opprimitur, et qui non improbat, approbat. Et sai libere animam meam liberavi.

^a The tryall against an aliennee, that lived here under the protection of the king, and amity being between both kings, for high treason, shall by force of this act of 1 & 2 Ph. & Mar. be tried according to the due course of the common law, and therefore in that case he shall not be tried per medictatem lingue, as he shall be in case of petit treason, murder, and felony, if he prayeth it.

4. That a tryall in a forein county upon examination before in doctor Foster's three of the councell, &c. by the statute of 33 H. 8. cap. 23. is abrogated by this act. of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. being a tryall contrary to the due course of the common law, which is to have it tryed by jurours of the proper county, e but the indictment being found in the proper county, it may be by speciall commission heard and determined before commissioners in any forein county, but the tryall must be by jurours of the proper county; and this is warranted by the course of the common law. And albeit when the term begins, all commissions of oier and terminer in the county where the kings bench fit, be suspended during the term, yet if an indictment be found before such commissioners before the tearm, there may be a speciall commission made to commisfioners in the fame county, fitting the kings bench in that county, to

to hear and determine the same during the tearm: for the kings bench. hath no power to proceed thereupon, till the indictment be before And it is the better, if the special commission bear teste after the beginning of the tearm. Note a diversity between generall commissions of oier and terminer, and such a special commission; and the court of kings bench may be adjourned, and in the mean time the commissioners may sit there.

d And where it is provided by the statute of 33 H. 8. cap. 23., d 33 H. 8. c. 23. that peremptory challenge should not from thenceforth be admitted or allowed in cases of high treason, or misprission of trea-, son: This branch is abrogated by the faid act of 1 Mar. Lastly, all statutes made before the said act of 1 & 2 Ph. & Mar. for tryall of high treason, petit treason, or misprission of treason, contrary to the due course of the common law, are abrogated by the faid act of 1 & 2 Ph. & Mar. and tryalls by the due course being taken out of the common law, with challenges incidents in those cases are of fanctuary in a restored.

If a man be indicted of high treason, he may at this day plead a forein plea, as he might doe by the common law, and shall be See hereafter, tryed in the forein county; but otherwise it is in cases of petit cap. Sanctuary, treason, murder, or felony, for there it shall be tryed in the county where the indictment is taken.

And forasmuch as the proceeding against a noble peer of the realm, being a lord of parliament in some points agrees, and in other points differeth from the proceeding against a subject under the degree of nobility: it shall be necessary to shew wherein they agree, and wherein they differ.

1. The noble peer of the realme must be indicted before commissioners of oier and terminer, or in the kings bench, if the treafon, misprission of treason, felony, or misprission thereof be committed in that county where the kings bench sit, as it was resolved in the case of Tho, d. of N. in an, 13. Eliz. And this is common to both degrees to be indicted by jurors of that county where the offence was committed.

2. When he is indicted, then the king by his commission under 1 H. 4. This commission reciteth the indictment generally as it is found: and power given to the lord steward to receive the indictment, &c. and to proceed, secundum legom et consuctudinem Angliæ. And a commandement is given thereby to the peers of the realme, to be attendant and obedient to him: and a commandement to the lieutenant of the Tower to bring the prisoner before him.

3. A certiorari is awarded out of the chancery to remove the indictment it selfe before the steward of England indilate, which may either beare date the same day of the stewards commission, or any day after.

4. The steward directs his precept under his seale to the commissioners, &c. to certifie the indictment such a day and place.

5. Another writ goeth out of the chancery directed to the lieutenant of the Tower, to bring the body of the prisoner before the steward at such day and place as he shall appoint.

6. The lord steward maketh a precept under his seale to the lieutenant of the Tower, &c. and therein expresset a day and place when he shall bring the prisoner before him.

y. The steward maketh another precept under his seale to a serjeant at armes, to summon tot et tales dominos, magnates, et proceres hujus regni Angliæ prædicti R. comitis E. pares, per quos rei veritas melius sciri poterit, quòd ipsi personaliter compareant coram prædicto sensitis forent facienda, &c. Wherein sour things are to be observed. First, that all these precepts most commonly beare date all in one day. Secondly, that no number of peers are named in the precept, and yet there must be twelve or above. Thirdly, that the precept is awarded for the returne of the peers before any arraignment or plea pleaded by the prisoner. Fourthly, that in this case the lords are not de vicineto, and therefore the sitting and triall may be in any county of England. And herein are great differences between the case of a peer of the realme, and of one under the degree of nobility.

8. At the day, the steward with fix serjeants at armes before him takes his place under a cloth of estate, and then the clerk of the crown delivereth unto him his commission, who redelivereth the fame unto him. And the clerk of the crown causeth a serieant at armes to make three oves, and commandement given in the name of the lord high steward of England to keep silence: and then is the commission read. And then the usher delivereth to the steward a white rod, who re-delivereth the same to him againe, who holdeth it before the steward. Then another oves is made, and commandement given in the name of the high steward of England, to all justices and commissioners to certifie all indiffments and records, &c. Which being delivered into court, the clerk of the crown readeth the return. Another oves is made, that the lieutenant of the Tower, &c. returne his writ and precept, and to bring the prisoner to the bar: which being done, the clerk reads the retorne. Another oves is made, that the ferjeant at armes return his precept with names of the barons and peers by him fummoned, and the return of that is Another oyes is made, that all earles, barons and peers alfo read. (which by the commandement of the high steward be summoned) answer to their names, and then they take their places and fit down, and their names are recorded; and the entry of the record is, that they appear, ad faciendum ea quæ ex parte domini regis eis injungentur. And when they be all in their places, and the priloner at the bar, the high steward declares to the prisoner the cause of their assembly, and perswades him to answer without feare, that he shall be heard with patience, and that justice shall be done. Then the clerk of 1 H 4 L the crown reades the indictment, and proceeds to the arraignment of the prisoner, and if he plead not guilty, the entry is, et de hoc de bono et malo ponit se super pares suos, &c. Then the high steward giveth a charge to the peers, exhorting them to try the prisoner indifferently according to their evidence.

9. The peers are not fworn, but are charged, super fidelitatibus, et ligeantiis domino regi debitis: for so the record speaketh.

10. Then the kings learned councell give evidence, and produce their proofes for the king against the prisoner.

11. But the prisoner, when he pleadeth not guilty, whereby he denieth the fact, he needs have no advice of councell to that plea. But if he hath any matter of law to plead, as Humfrey Stafford in 1 H. 7. had, viz. The priviledge of fanctuary, he shall have councell assigned to him to plead the same, or any other matter in In Scotland in all law: as to plead the generall pardon, or a particular pardon, or criminal cases, the like. And after the plea of not guilty, the prisoner can have no councell learned affigned to him to answer the king's councell learned, nor to defend him. And the reason thereof is, not be- have councell cause it concerneth matter of fact, for ex facto jus oritur: but learned. the true reasons of the law in this case are: First, that the testimonies and the proofs of the offence ought to be so clear and manifest, upon the statute of 31 Elis, conas there can be no defence of it. Secondly, the court ought to be in stead of councell for the prisoner, to see that nothing be urged see. against him contrary to law and right; nay, any learned man that *See more hereof is present may inform the court for the benefit of the prisoner, of any thing that may make the proceedings erroneous. 13. After all the evidence given for the king, and the prisoners answers, and proofs at large, and with patience heard: then is the prisoner withdrawn from the bar to some private place under the custody of the lieutenant, &c. And after that he is withdrawn, the lords that are tryers of the prisoner go to some place to consider of their evidence: and if upon debate thereof, they should doubt of any matter, and thereupon fend to the high steward, to have conference with the judges, or with the high steward, they ought to have no conference, either with the judges or the high steward, but openly in court, and in the presence, and hearing of the prisoner; as it was resolved by all the justices of England in the reign of king H. 8. in the case of the lord Dacres of the North. And this was a just resolution; for when the lords should put a case, and ask advice thereupon, the prisoner ought by law to be present, to fee that the case or question be rightly put: and therefore that nothing be done in his absence, untill they be agreed on their ver-Hereupon it followeth, that if the peers of the realm, who are intended to be indifferent, can have no conference with the judges, or with the high steward in open court in the absence of the prisoner: à fortiori, the king's learned counsell should not in the absence of the party accused, upon any case put, or matter shewed by them, privately preoccupate the opinion of the judges: and upon to just a resolution the case succeeded well, for the peers tound the lord Dacres not guilty.

14. A noble man cannot waive his triall by his peers, and put himselfe upon the triall of the country, that is, of twelve freeholders: for the statute of Magna Carta is, that he must be tried per pares. And so it was resolved in the lord Dacres case,

15. * The peers ought to continue together (as juries in case of other subjects ought to do) until they be agreed of their verdict; and when they are agreed, they all come again into the court, and take their places, and then the lord high steward publicly in open court, beginning with the puisse lord, (who in the case of the lord Dacre was the lord Mordant,) said unto him: My lord Mordant, is William lord Dacre guilty of the treasons, whereof he hath been indicted or arraigned, or of any of them? And the lord stending up said, Not guilty: and so upward of all the other lords seriatim: who all gave the same verdict: In which case the entry is, super quo W. 16. The peers give their verdict in the absence of the prisoner, and then is the prisoner brought to the bar again: and then doth the lord steward acquaint the prisoner with the verdict of his peers, and give judgement accordingly, either of condemnation or acquitall. But it is not so in the case of another subject: for there the verdict is given in his presence.

17. Every lord of parliament, and that hath voice in parliament, and called thereunto by the king's writ, shall not be tried by his peers, but only such as sit there ratione nobilitatis, as dukes, marquisses.

And so it is of the sonne of a duke, marquisse, earle, &c. he is noble, and called lord: and yet because he is no lord of parliament, he shall be tried as one under the degree of a peer, and lord of parliament.

20. No peer of the realm, or any other subject shall be convicted by verdict, but the faid offences must be found by above four and twenty, viz. by twelve, or above, at his indictment, or by twelve peers, or above, if he be noble, and by twelve, and not above, if he be under the degree of nobility.

21. A peer of the realme being indicted of treason, or felony, or of misprission, as is aforesaid, and duly transmitted to the lords, may be arraigned thereof in the upper house of parliament, as frequently in parliament rolls it doth appeare: but then there must be appointed a steward of England, who shall put him to answer: and if he plead not guilty, he shall be tried per pares fuos, and then the lords spiritual must withdraw, and make their proxies: but no appeal of treason can be in parliament, a but is ousted by the statute of 1. 25. And when the service is performed, then is an oyes made for the dissolving of the commission; and then is the white rod, which hath been borne and holden before the steward, by him taken in both his hands, and broken over his head.

Lastly, the indictments together with the record of the arraignment, triall, and judgement, shall be delivered into the king's bench, there to be kept and inrolled.

Hitherto we have spoken when a noble man doth appear, and plead not guilty, and put himself upon his peers: Now let us see what shall be had against him when he is indicted and appears not, and cannot be taken: and generally he shall be outlawed, per judicium corronatorum. But how doth that stand with Magna Charta. nec super eum ibimus, nec super eum mittemus, nist per legale judicium parium fuorum? That is to be intended, when he appears and pleads not guilty, and puts himself upon his peers: but when he absents himself, and will not yield himself to the due tryall of his peers, then he shall be outlawed per judicium coronatorum, or else he should take advantage of his own contumacy, and flying from judgement. For proces to be awarded upon the indictment or appeal of treason, felony, or trespass, either against a nobleman or any other, see the statute of 6 H. 6. and 8 H. 6. and if the proces and order prescribed by those statutes be not pursued, the outlawry may be reversed by writ of error, which writ ought to be granted to him ex merito justitiæ, as it was adjudged in Ninian Menvils case: and those statutes doe extend as well to the kings bench, as to other courts having by commission power to hear and determine the same, and very few outlawries of treason or felony, are of force and validity in law, for that thefe acts are not purfued.

And these acts are well expounded by our * books, and therefore they shall not need to be recited at large. This is necessary to be added, that the opinion of Stanf. Pl. Cor. 182. l. upon the statute of 33 H. 8. c. 20. is, where the attainder is not erroneous, but lawfull by the course of the law: and so it was resolved, Tr. 28 Eliz. and thereupon e the statute of 28 Eliz. ca. 2. was made, that no attainder that then was for any high treason should be reversed for error where the party was executed. But that act extendeth only to attainders before that act, and where the party at-tainted suffered pains of death, as hath been said.

But admitting the proces be awarded according to these statutes, and the truth is, that the party indicted of high treason (be he noble or other) at the time of the outlawry pronounced, is out of the realm, &c. whether may he avoid the fame by writ of error? The answer is, that he might have avoided the same by writ of error at the common law: but now in case of high treason he is barred of his writ of error by the statutes of 26 H. 8. and 5 E. 6. which statutes are expounded to extend generally to all treasons, but those statutes extend not to any other offence than high treason only, and therefore all other offences remain as they did at the common law for that point.

The body of this act confisteth upon two distinct purviens or branches, the one to remedy a mischief past, the other to provide for the time to come. The first branch consisteth of a preamble, and a purvien: and the preamble containeth these eight parts. First it sheweth divers inquests had been taken at Westminster by perfons named to the justices. Secondly, without due return of the Thirdly, of which some were outlawed before the faid justices of record. Fourthly, some sled to sanctuary for treason, and fome for felony. Fifthly, by whom many offenders were indicted. Sixthly, some not guilty. Seventhly, by conspiracy, &c. Eighthly, that all this was against the course of the common law. By the body of the act, it is enacted that the same indictment, with all the dependance thereof, be revoked, and made void. Then followeth the second branch or purvien for the time to come, and this purvien consisteth of divers parts: First, in describing by what persons indictments ought to be found, and therein 1. privarive, that is, not by any such persons, having reference to the preamble, which persons we have before particularly distinguished: 2. Positive, that all indictments must be found by persons of these 1. They must be the kings lawfull liege people. 2. Returned by sherifs, or baylifs of franchises, and other officers to whom it pertaineth. 3. Without any denomination to the sherifs, baylifs, or other officers: and this purvien is in affirmance, and declaratory of the common law.

The second part of the purvien is introductory of a new law, viz. that if any indictment be made hereafter in any point to the contrary, that the same indictment be void, revoked, and holden for none. It was resolved and adjudged that this case was within the statute, for that he was not returned by the sherif. Secondly, that where the rest of the great inquest giving faith to him indicted seventeen honest and good men upon divers penall statutes, which was done by the said Robert Scarlet maliciously. It was resolved and adjudged, that albeit he * alone was fworn without the return of the sherif, and all the rest duly returned, yet this case was within this statute, and all the indictments found by him and the rest were void by this statute: for hereby it appeared what mischief such a one might doe. Thirdly, that Robert Scarlet upon this case had offended against the said act, and might be indicted thereupon: and accordingly he was upon sufficient proof of the fact, as aforesaid, indicted upon the said act, and pleaded not guilty, and was found guilty. Fourthly, that this act extended not only to indictments of treason and felony. but of all other offences and defaults whatfoever, according to the generality of the words. Fifthly, confideration was had of the act of 3 H. 8. cap. 12. and resolved clearly that this statute had not altered the act of 11 H. 4. in any thing concerning the offence of Scarlet, as upon that, which shall be said of the act of 3 H. 8. shall appear. And upon hearing of councell learned what they could fay in arrest of judgement, at last judgement was given, that he should be fined and imprisoned, and ordered by the court that no proces should goe out upon the faid indictments found by the faid great inquest, whereof Scarlet was one.

Nota Lector, that the aforesaid parliament of 11 H 4. begun in quindena Hillarii, anno 11 H. 4. and the same tearm, viz. Hil. 11 H. Hil. 11 H. 4. 4. fo. 41. it was according to the faid act of 11 H. 4. resolved by f. 41. Gascoign chief justice, and all the rest of the justices, that an indictment of felony found by an inquest before 5 H. 4. whereof one was outlawed of felony, and another was acquitted by the generall pardon, so as they were not probi et legales homines to enquire as the law willeth, and after the party had pleaded not guilty to the felony, it was awarded, that all the indictments by them found, were adnulled and made void. Herewith agreeth Stanford in his pleas of Stanf. Pl. cor. the crown, fo. 87. and 88. Vide F. tit. Indictment 25. and Coron. 89. and Brook tit. Indictment 2. Note the act faith, that Indictment 25. and Coron. 80. they were outlawed before themselves, so as the court may take Br. tit. indict. 2. knowledge thereof of themselves, or of any other, as amicus curiæ: but the fafest way for the party indicted is to plead, upon his arraignment, the speciall matter given unto him by the statute of 11 H. 4. for the overthrow of the indictment, with such averments, as by law are required, (agreeable to the opinion of the Lord Brook. Ubi supra:) and to plead over to the felony, and to require councell learned for the pleading thereof, which ought to be granted, and also to require a copy of in much of the indictment, as shall be necessary for the framing of his plea, which also ought to be granted. And these laws made for indifferency of indicters, ought w. 2. ca. 13. to be construed favourably, for that the indictment is commonly I E. 3. stat. 2. found in the absence of the party, and yet it is the foundation of all ca. 17. the rest of the proceeding.

To draw to an end concerning tryals: it is regularly true, that be duly had, by the common law the tryall shall be in the county, where the Dier 3 Mar. indictment is taken: and by the aforesaid act of 35 H. 8. treasons 131, 132. and misprissions of treasons committed or done out of the realm, &c. shall be enquired of, heard, and determined before the justices of ca. 2. the king's bench, &c. Now the case fel out upon this statute to be thus: * one was indicted before the justices of the kings bench, * Mich. 35 & at the tearm holden at Hertford, by a jury of the county of Hertford, 36 El. in the case for divers high treasons committed out of this realm, and after the of Francis Datearm was adjourned to Westm. in the county of Midd. The cres. question was, by which of the counties the party indicted should be tried: and it was resolved, that he should be tried by men of that county where the indictment was taken. But otherwise it is upon the statute of 5 El. ca. 1. the case being, that Horn bishop of Winch. tendred to Edmond Bonner late bishop of London, in the county Mich. 6 & 7 EL of Surrey, within his dioces the oath of supremacy according to Dier fo. 234 the act I Eliz. which Bonner refused, and this was certified by the Bonner's case. bithop of Winch. into the kings bench, then fitting at Westminster in the county of Midd. Now, by the statute of 5 El. he that refuseth the oath is to be indicted of a premunire by a jury of Midd. as a jury of that county might doe for any offence done in that county, and extendeth only to the indictment, where the words of the act of 35 H. 8. be, [shal be enquired of, heard, and determined,] the question upon the statute of 5 Eliz. was, if Bonner should appear and plead not guilty, by what county he should be tried, whether by a jury of Midd. where the indictment was, or by a jury of Surrey, where the offence was committed; and resolved that he should be tried by a jury of Surrey: for the statute of 5 Elextendeth to the indictment only, and leaveth the triall to the common law, which appointed the tryall to be, where the offence is committed, and so a manifest diversity between the two cales: for regularly by the common law in all pleas of the crown, debet quis juri subjecte, ubi deliquit.

fit, It is now necessary to be known, how prisoners (to speak once for all) committed for treason, or any other offence ought to be demeaned in prison. To the fecond upon this occasion, Sir John Fortescue chiefe justice of England, wrote his book in commendation of the lawes 22. fo. 24. of England, and therein preferreth the same for the government of this countrey before the civil law; and particularly that all tortures and torments of parties accused were directly against the common lawes of England, and shewed the inconvenience thereof by fearfull example, to whom I refer you being worthy your reading. So as there is no law to warrant tortures in this land, nor can they be justified by any prescription being so lately brought in.

And accordingly all the faid ancient authors are against any paine, or torment to be put ipso? or inflicted upon the prisoner before attainder, nor after attainder, but according to the judgement. And there is no one opinion in our books, or judiciall record (that we have feen and remember) for the maintenance of tortures or torments, &c.

And now, to conclude this chapter of treason. It appeareth in the holy scripture, that traytors never prospered, what good soever they pretended, but were most severely and exemplarily punished: As Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, by miracle: dirupta est terra sub Athalia the pedibus eorum, et aperiens os suum devoravit illos, &c. daughter of Amri, interfecta eft gladio. MISPRISIO commeth of the French word mespris which properly fignifieth neglect or contempt: for [mes] in composition in the French fignifieth mal as mis doth in the English tongue: as mischance, for an ill chance, and so mesprise is ill ap-prehended or known. In legall understanding it signifieth, when one knoweth of any treason or felony, and concealeth it, this is misprission, so called, because the knowledge of it is an ill knowledge to him, in respect of the severe punishment for not revealing of it: for in case of misprission of high treason he is to be imprisoned during his life, to forfeit all his goods, debts, and duties for ever, and the profits of his lands during his life: and in case of felony, to be fined and imprisoned. And in this sense doth the said statute of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. speak, when it faith, Be it declared, and enacted, by the authority aforefaid, that concealement or keeping fecret of any high treason be deemed and taken only misprisson of treason, and the offenders therein to forfeit and suffer, as in cases of misprission of treason hath heretofore been used. * But by the common law concealment of high treason was treason, as it appeareth in the case of the lord Scrope, an. 3 H. 5. and by Bracton, lib. 3. fo. 118. b. and 119 a.

* It is misprission of high treason, for forging of money, which neither is the money of this realme of England, nor currant within

b Misprisson of high treason in concealing of a bull, &c. See the statute.

It is faid in 2 R. 3. that every treason or felony includeth in it a misprission of treason or felony. Therefore if any man knoweth of any high treason, he ought with as much speed as conveniently he may to reveale the same to the king, or some of his privie councell, or any other magistrate. And misprission in a large sense is taken for many great offences which are neither treason nor felony, whereof we shall speak more hereaster, being in this place restrained to misprisson of treason.

CAP. IV.

Felony by compassing or conspiring to kill the King, or any Lord, or other of the King's Counsell.

NEXT hereunto we have thought good to speak of the statute of 3 H. 7. cap. 14.

Item, FORASMUCH as by quarrels made to fuch as have been in great authority, office, and of counfell with kings of this realme, hath enfued the destruction of kings, and the undoing of this realme; so as it hath appeared evidently, when compassing of the death of such as were of the kings true subjects was had, the destruction of the prince was imagined thereby: and for the most part it hath growne, and been occasioned by envie, and malice of the kings own housholdfervants; as now of late fuch a thing was likely to have enfued: * and for so much as by the law of this land, if actuall • Nota. deeds be not had, there is no remedy for such false compasfings, imaginations, and confederacies had against any lord, or any of the kings counsell, or any of the kings great officers in his houshold, as steward, treasurer, and comptroller: and so great inconveniencies might enfue, if fuch ungodly demeaning should not be straitly punished before that actuall deed were done. Therefore it is ordained by the king, the lords spirituall and temporall, and the commons of the faid parliament affembled, and by authority of the same, That from hence forward, the ffeward, treasurer, and comptroller of the kings house for the time being, or one of them, have full authority and power to enquire by twelve fad men, and discreet persons of the chequer roll of the kings honourable houshold, if any servant admitted to be his fervant fworne, and his name put into the chequer roll of his houshold, whatsoever he be, serving in any manner, office, or roome, reputed, had and taken, under the state of a lord, make any confederacies, compassings, conspiracies, or imaginations with any person or persons, to destroy or murder the king, or any lord of this realme, or any other person sworne to the kings counsell, steward, treasurer, or comptroller of the kings house; that if it be found before the said steward for the time being, by the faid twelve fad men, that any fuch of the kings servants as is abovesaid, hath confederated, compassed, conspired, or imagined, as is abovesaid, that he so found by that inquiry, be put thereupon to answer. And the steward, treasurer, and comptroller, or two of them have power to determine termine the same matter according to the law. And if he put him in triall, that then it be tried by other twelve sad men of the fame houshold: and that such misdoers have no challenge, but for malice. And if such missoers be found guilty by confession, or otherwise, that the said offence be judged felony, and they to have judgement and execution as felons attainted ought to have by the common law.

This act divideth itself into two generall parts, viz. the preamble, and the body of the act. In the preamble three things are to be observed.

1. That by quarrels made to such, as are in great authority, office, and of counsell with the kings of the realm, have ensued the destruction of the kings, and the undoing of the realm, as in the records of parliament, and histories of king E.2. R. 2. king H. 6. &c. you may read. And as king William Rufus was flain in the new forest by the glance of an arrow, so the overthrow of the king, &c. hath followed by glances, and consequents, when the tow of destruction hath been aimed at the overthrow of those, who were in great authority neer about, and dear to the king, not daring in direct manner to aim at the king himself. Therefore, the first conclusion is, that when the compassing of the death of such, as were of the king's true subjects was had, the destruction of the prince was imagined thereby,

2. That for the most part, it hath grown by envy and malice by the king's own houshold servants: and the reason thereof is, for that they being of the kings houshold, have greater and readier means either by night, or by day to destroy such as be of great authority, and neer about the king: and fuch an attempt and conspiracy was before this parliament made by some of this kings houshold servants, and great mischief was like thereupon to have enfued, which was the cause of the making of this act.

2. The conclusion of the preamble is, that by the law of the land, if actuall deeds be not had, there is no remedy for such false This is a true declaration: for the bare conspicompaffings, &c. racy of the death of any lord or other of the king's councell, or of the steward, treasurer, or comptroller, unlesse they had been slain indeed, was no felony before this act, and fo resolved upon the contempt and conspiracy aforesaid.

In the body of this act, fix things are enacted. First, that the offender must have three qualities. 1. He must be the kings servant sworn. 2. His name must be put in the cheque roll of the kings houshold. 3. He must be under the state of a lord: and if he conspire with any other, that is not of the kings houshold, yet is the conspiracy within this act, but he of the king's houshold is only the felon within the purvien of this statute, as it appeareth by the words of the statute.

Secondly, against what persons the offence made felony by this act is to be committed: and in number they be four. destroy or murder the king. By this act it expressly appeareth by the judgement of the whole parliament; that besides the confederacy, compassing, conspiracy, or imagination, there must be some other overt act or deed tending thereunto, to make it treason within the statute of 25 E. 3. And therefore the bare confederacy, compassing, conspiracy, t conspiracy, or imaginations by words only, is made felony by But if the conspirators doe provide any weapon, or other thing, to accomplish their devilish intent; this and the like is an overt act to make it treason. 2. Any lord of this realme being sworn of the kings councell: for by the purvien of this act, he must be also of the kings councell: this is understood of the kings privy councell, and fo throughout the act. other of the kings councell (that is, the kings privy councell) being under the degree of a lord. 4. The steward, treasurer, and comptroller of the kings houshold, being great officers, though they be not of the king's councell.

Thirdly, the third generall part expresseth the persons to whom power is given to enquire and determine this felony. The steward, treasurer, and comptroller, or any one of them may enquire. And they or two of them have power by this act to hear and determine the fame: and though the words be for the inquiry, that they three, 23 Aff. 17. or any of them, &c. yet an indictment taken before two of them 27 H. 6. 8. is good, because it is for advancement of justice. And this act is 27 H. 8. 13. in nature of a commission to them, for other commission they need not to have: and this you may see in divers other acts of parliament of like nature. If any the houshold servants conspire the death of the steward, treasurer, and comptroller, yet by force of this act they are judges of the cause, and none other can be, and in that case, they will affish themselves for their direction, with some grave and learned men in the laws. But if the death of any one of them be compassed, then it is more convenient that it be heard and determined before the other two.

Fourthly, the fourth part setteth forth, first, how the inquiry, and after, the trial shall be made, that is, that the inquiry must be made by twelve fad men and discreet persons of the cheque roll of the kings houshold: and when the offender hath pleaded not guilty, the tryall shall be by the like persons. And here though this act limiteth the inquiry to be by twelve, yet if it be inquired of by more than twelve, the presentment is good, but the tryall must be by twelve only.

Fifthly, no challenge shall be made, but for malice.

Sixthly, by the context of the whole act, the conspiracy, that Vide lib. Placis to be heard and determined by this act, must be plotted to be done within the kings houshold.

The offender against this statute shall have the benefit of his clergy: for whenloever felony is made by any statute, and the benefit of clergy is not expressly taken away, the offender shall have his clergy.

See the statute of 3 & 4 E. 6. whereby amongst other things in 3 & 4 E. 6. ca. 5. some case it was high treason, and in some case felony, to intend, or goe about to kill, or imprison any of the kings privy councell, &c. from which felony, the benefit of fanctuary, and clergy was taken away: but these treasons and selonies are repealed by the statute of 1 Mar.

OF HERESIE.

CONCERNING heresie five things fall into consideration, First, who be the judges of heresie. Secondly, what shall be adjudged heresie. Thirdly, what is the judgement upon a man convicted of heresie. Fourthly, what the law alloweth him to save his life. Fifthly, what he shall forseit by judgement against him.

Touching the first, an heretique may be convicted a before the archbishop and other bishops, and other the clergy at a generall synod, or convocation, as it appeareth both by our books, and by history. See the statute of 25 H. 8. cap. 19. revived by 1 El. cap. 1.

Now that statute doth provide, that the diocesan of the same place, such person or persons, &c. may cause to be arrested, and under safe custody in his prisons to be detained. From this act and other acts and authorities quoted in the margent, these two conclusions are to be gathered. First, that the diocesan hath jurisdiction of herefy, and so it hath been put in ure in all queen Elizabeth's reign: and accordingly it was resolved by Flemming chief justice, Tansield chief baron, Williams, and Crook justices, Hil, 9. Ja. R. in the case of Legate the heretique, and that upon a conviction before the ordinary of herefy, the writ of de hærerico comburendo doth lie. Secondly, that without the aid of that act of 2 H. 4. the diocesan could imprison no person accused of heresv, but was to proceed against him by the censures of the church. And now feeing, that not only the faid act of 2 H. 4. but 25 H. 8. c. 14. are repealed, the diocesan cannot imprison any person accused of heresy, but must proceed against him, as he might have done before those statutes, by the censures, of the church, as it appeareth by the faid act of 2 H. 4. c. 15. Likewise the supposed statute of 5 R. 2. c. 5. and the statutes of 2 H. 5. c. 7. 25 H. 8. c. 14. 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. c. 6. are all repealed, so as no statute made against heretiques standeth now in force :

force: and at this day no person can be indicted, or impeached for herefy before any temporall judge, or other, that hath temporall jurisdiction, as upon perusall of the said statutes appeareth.

Every archbishop of this realme may cite any person dwelling 23 H. 8. ca. 9. in any bishops dioces within his province for causes of heresy, if the bishop, or other ordinary immediate thereunto consent, or if that the same bishop, or other immediate ordinary, or judge doe not his duty in punishment of the same.

2. Touching the fecond point, if any person be charged with herefy before the high commissioners, they have no authority to adjudge any matter or cause to be heresy, but only such, as hath been so adjudged by the authority of the canonicall scripture, or by the first four generall councells, or by any other generall councell, wherein the same was declared heresie by the expresse and plain words of the canonicall scripture, or such as shall hereafter be determined to be herefy by parliament, with the affent of the convocation: for fo it is expresly provided by the said act of r El. And albeit this proviso extendeth only to the said high commissioners, yet seeing in the high commission, there be so many bishops, and other divines, and learned men, it may serve for a good direction to others, especially to the diocesan, being a fole judge in so weighty a cause.

No manner of order, act, or determination for any matter of 1 El. ca. 1. religion, or cause ecclesiasticall, had or made by the authority of the parliament in anno I El. shall be accepted, deemed, interpreted, or adjudged herefy, schism, or schismaticall opinion, any order, decree, sentence, constitution, or law (whatsoever the

It is ordained and affented in this present parliament, that, &c.

And so it was, being but by the king and the lords.

It is to be known, that of ancient time, when any acts of parliament were made, to the end the fame might be published, and understood, especially before the use of printing came into England, the acts of parliament were ingrossed into parchment, and bundled up together with a writ in the king's name, under the great seal to the sherif of every county, sometime in Latin, and sometime in French, to command the sherif to proclaim the said statutes within his bayliwick, as well within liberties, as without. And this was the course of parliamentary proceedings, before printing came in use in England, and yet it continued after we had the print, till the reign of H. 7.

Now at the parliament holden in 5 R. 2. John Braibrook bishop of London being lord chancellor of England, caused the said ordinance of the king and lords to be inferted into the parliamentary writ of proclamation to be proclaimed amongst the acts of parliament: which writ I have seen, the purclose of which writ, after the recitall of the acts directed to the fherif of N. is in these words. Nos volentes dictas concordias, sive ordinationes in omnibus et singulis suis articulis inviolabiliter observari, tibi præcipimus quod pradictas concordias, sive ordinationes in locis infra balivam tuam, ubi melius expedire volueris, tam infra libertates, quam extra, publicé Teste rege apud proclamari, et teneri facias juxta formam prænotatam. Westm. 26 May, anno regni regis R. 2. 5. But in the parliamentary proclamation of the acts passed in anno 6 R. 2. the said act of 6 R. 2. whereby the said supposed act of 5 R. 2. was declared to be void, is omitted: and afterwards the said supposed act of 5 R. 2. was continually printed, and the faid act of 6 R. 2. hath by the prelates been ever from time to time kept from the print.

Certain men called Lollards were indicted for herefy, upon the said statute of 2 H. 4. for these opinions, viz. Quod non est meritorium ad Sanctum Thomam, nec ad Sanctam Mariam de Walsingham peregrinari. 2. Nec imagines crucifixi et aliorum sanctorum adorare. 3. Nulli sacerdoti consiteri nisi soli Deo, &c. Which opinions were so far from heresy, as the makers of the statute of 1 Eliz. had great cause to limit what herefy was.

And afterwards they thought not good to contain these opinions in any indictment, but indicted them in general words, one of which indictments as to lollardry and herefy followeth. dicunt super eorum sacramentum, quod A. The archbishop denying these words to be within the said act of 2 H. 4. did by his warrant in writing comprehending the said cause, by pretext of the said act commit the body of the faid Keyser to the gaol at Maidstone, for that (saith he) in respect of the publishing of the said words, dictum Iohannem non immeritò habemus de hæresi suspectum. By reason whereof the faid John Keyfer was imprisoned in Maidstone gaol, and in prison detained under the custody of the keeper there, untill by his counsell he moved fir John Markham then chief justice of England, and other the judges of the king's bench, to have an Habeas corpus, and thereupon (as it ought) an Habeas corpus was granted: upon which writ the gaoler returned the faid cause, and speciall matter, and withall, according to the writ, had his body there. The court upon mature deliberation perusing the said statute, (and upon conference with divines) resolved, that upon the said words Keyser was not to be suspect of heresy, within the said statute, as the archbishop took it. And therefore the court first bayled him, and after he was delivered: for that the archbishop had no power by the faid act for those words to commit him to prison.

beration it was by Brian chief justice, and the whole court of common pleas adjudged, that the said opinion was not within the said statute of 2 H. 4 for that it was an error, but no herefy. Which I have the rather reported, for that the reporter of this case did not only misreport the time of the bringing of the action, but the statute, which was the ground of the matter in law, and leaveth out the judgement. The record it self is worthy the reading.

Upon that which hath been faid touching the faid statute of 2 H. 4. four conclusions doe necessary follow. First, that seeing, that many opinions were by the bishops taken to be herefy, which in troth had no shadow of herefy, and so mistaken, and unjustly extended by the bishops further than the purvien, and true intention thereof, as by that which hath been, and might be faid, appeared, the makers of the faid act of parliament of 1 El. had great reason to limit (as hath been said) what opinions should be judged herefy by authority of that commission grounded upon that act. Secondly, that if any ecclefiafticall judge or commissioner shall by pretext of any statute, or other cause, commit any man to prison, upon motion in court on the behalf of the party imprisoned, the judges of the common law ought to grant an Habeas corpus for him: upon the retorn of which writ, if it shall appear to the judges, that the imprisonment is well warranted by law, the party shall be remanded: and if the imprisonment be without warrant of law, then the party ought to be delivered. Thirdly, if the imprisonment be not warranted by law, the party imprisoned may have his action of false imprisonment, and recover his damages. Fourthly, that when an act of parliament is made concerning matter meerly spirituall, as herefie, &c. yet that act being part of the lawes of the realm, the same shall be construed and interpreted by the judges of the common lawes, who usually confer with those that are learned in that profession. But let us now descend to the third point.

3. To the third. ^a It appeareth by Bracton, Britton, Fleta, Stanford, and all our books, that he that is duly convict of herese,

4. To the fourth. b The ecclefiafticall judge at this day cannot commit the person that is convict of heresie to the sheriffe, albeit he be prefent, to be burnt; but must have the king's writ de haretico comburendo, according to the common law: for now all acts of parliament (as hath been faid before) against hereticks are re-And the reason wherefore heresie is so extremely and fearfully punished, is, for that gravius est æternam, quam temporalent lædere majestatem: and hæresis est lepra animæ. The party duly convicted of heresie, may recall, and abjure his opinion, and thereby fave his life, but a relapse is fatall: for as in case of a disease of the body, after recovery, recidivation is extremely dangerous: so in case of heresie (a disease of the soule) a relapse is irrecoverable. And as he that is a lener of his body, is to be removed from the fociety of men, lest he should infest them, by the king's writ de leprofo amovendo: so he that hath lepram anime, that is, to be convicted of herefie, shall be cut off, lest he should poyson others, by the king's writ de hæretico comburendo. But if the heretick will not after conviction abjure, he may by force of the faid writ de haretice comburendo be burnt without abjuration.

3. As to the fifth. The flatute made in the 2 year of H. 5.

cap. 7. whereby the forfeiture of lands in fee-simple, and goods, and Br. tit. Forfeichattels was given in case of heresie, standeth repealed by the act of ture 112 1 Eliz. cap. 1. The books that speak of this forfeiture are grounded I. 2 Mar. Br. upon the said act of 2 H. 5. which then stood in force, saving tit. Heresie. 5 R 2. which was before that statute: for there, though Belknap Iwore, per ma fey si home soit miscreant, sa terre est forfeitable, et le feigniour avera ceo p. voy descheate; yet was his op n.on never holden for law: for neither lands, nor goods f before the making of f Vid hereafter that statute of 2 H. 5. were forfeited by the conviction of heresie, in case of piracy. because the proceeding therein is meerely spirituall, pro salute anima, and in a court that is no court of record. And therefore the conviction of herefie worketh no forfeiture of any thing that is temporall, viz. of lands or goods. For what cause the said heretickswere called Lollards you may read in Caudries case, and Linwood thereto agreeth. * And it is to be observed, that in proceeding against Lollards, the prelats, besides their opinions, did charge them with hainous offences: as conspiracy with multitudes of people, infurrection, rebellion, or some other treason, or great crimes.

We have spoken thus much of this argument, because there be divers wandring opinions concerning some of these points, that are not agreeable to the law, as it standeth at this day. See the fourth part of the Institutes, cap. Chancery, in the articles against Cardinal Woolsey, artic. 44.

CAP. VI.

Of Felony by Conjuration, Witchcraft, Sorcery, or Inchantment.

THE first act of parliament that made any of these offences felony, was the statute a of 33 H. 8. which was repealed by the statutes of 1 E. 6. cap. 12. and 1 Mariæ. But before the conquest it was severely punished: sometimes by death, sometimes by exile, &c. And after, it was made felony by the statute of 5 Eliz. and againe by 1 Jac. which repealeth 5 Eliz.

A conjurer is he that by the holy and powerfull names of Almighty God invokes and conjures the devill to confult with him, or scribed.

monis. Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live. Non est augurium in Jacob, nec divinatio in Israel. And the Holy Ghost hath compared the great offence of rebellion to the finne of witchcraft.

And here it justly may be demanded, what punishment was against these devilish and wicked offenders before these statutes, which were made of very late time.

And it appeareth by our ancient d books that these horrible and devilish offenders, which left the everliving God, and sacrificed to the devill, and thereby committed idolatry, in feeking advice and aide of him, were punished by death. * The Mirror saith, Que sorcery et devinal sont members de heresie. And there he describeth. herefie. Heresie est un mauuase et faux creance surdant de error en la F. N. B. 269. b. in centre. And herewith agreeth Britton: Sorcerers, forcereffes, &c. droit foy Christien: and after faith, Le judgement de hereste est dee arse et miscreants soient arses. And Fleta: Christiani autem apostatæ, sortilegi, et hujusmodi detractari debent, et comburi. And burning then was, and yet is the punishment for hereticks. So as the conusance of these offences, if they be branches of heresie, (as the law was then taken) belonged (as to this day herefie doth) to ecclefiafticall judges. In which case when they have given sentence, there lieth a writ de hæretico comburendo.

I have seen a report of a case in an ancient Register, that in Oc-*Some think that tober anno 20 H. 6. Margery Gurdeman of Eye, in the county of Suffolk, was for witchcraft and confultation with the devill, after fentence and a relapse, burnt by the king's writ de hæretico comburendo. e And this agreeth with antiquity, for witches, &c. by the laws before the conquest were burnt to death.

A man was taken in Southwark with a head and a face of a dead man, and with a book of forcery in his male, and was brought into the king's bench before Sir John Knevett then chief justice: but feeing no indictment was, against him, the clerks did swear him, that from thenceforth * he should not be a forcerer, and was delivered out of prison, and the head of the dead man and the book of forcery were burnt at Tuthill at the costs of the prisoner. So as the head and his book of forcery had the fame punishment, that the forcerer should have had by the ancient law, if he had by his forcery praied in aid of the devill.

The holy history hath a most remarkable place concerning the reprobation and death of king Saul. Mortuus eft ergo Saul propter iniquitates suas, ed quod prævaricatus sit mandatum Domini, et non custodierit illud, . sed insuper Pythonissam consulverit, nec speraverit in Domino, propter quod interfecit eum, et transtulit regnum ejus ad David filium Isai. So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the Lord, even against the word of the Lord which he kept not: and also for asking counsell of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it, and enquired not of the Lord; therefore he fle w him, and turned the kingdome unto David the fonne of Isai.

Therefore it had been a great defect in government, if so great an abomination had passed with impunity. And this is the cause, that we have proved how and in what manner conjuration, witchcraft, &c. were punished by death, &c. before the making of the faid late statutes.

But now let us peruse the statute made in the first year of king James,

1 Jac. cap. 12.

James, which only standeth in force, and divideth itself into five feverall branches.

1. If any person or persons shall use, practise, or exercise any invocation or conjuration of any evill and wicked spirit.

Here the devill by the holy, and powerfull names of Almighty God is invoked (as hath been faid:) and this invocation, or conjuration of a wicked spirit is selony, without any other act or thing, save only the apparition of the spirit. See W. 1. cap. 41. in the oath of the champion, &c.

2. Or shall consult, covenant with, entertaine, employ, feed, or reward, any evill or wicked spirit, to, or for any intent or purpose.

By this branch, if any confult, &c. (howfoever the wicked spirit appeareth and commeth) these actions (here mentioned) with or to that wicked spirit, to or for any intent or purpose, is felony without any other act or thing.

3. Or take up any dead man, woman, or childe, out of his, her, or their grave, or any other place where the dead body resteth, or the skin, bone, or any part of a dead person, to be imployed or used in any manner of witchcraft, forcery, charme, or inchantment.

Albeit the offender that commits these barbarous and inhumane dealings with the bodies of the dead, do not actually imploy or use them in witchcraft, sorcery, charme, or inchantment: yet if he did them of purpose to use therein, it is felony, for the words of this branch be, [to be imployed or used in any manner of witchcraft, &c.]

4. Or shall use, practise, or exercise any witchcrast, inchantment, charme or forcery, whereby any person shall be killed, destroyed, wasted, consumed, pined, or lamed, in his, or her bodie, or any part thereof.

By this branch, no other witchcraft, inchantment, charme, or forcery (then is before specified) is felony, unlesse by means thereof some person be killed, destroied, wasted, consumed, pined or lamed, &c. Which words have reference only to this last generall clause.

5. That then every such offender or offenders, their aiders, abetters, and counsellors, being of any the said offences duly and lawfully convicted, and attainted, shall suffer paines of death, as a selon, or selons, and shall lose the priviledge, and benefit of clergie, and sanctuary.

Albeit

Conjuration, Witchcraft, &c. Cap. 6.

Albeit accessories before be here specially named, yet accessories after may be of this felony, as afterwards is said upon the statute of 3 H. 7. for taking away of women, and upon the statute of 8 H. 6. for stealing of records.

The second part of this act concerneth felony in a second degree; and the branches thereof are also in number five.

1. If any person or persons take upon him or them by witchcraft, inchantment, charme, or forcery, to tell or declare, in what place any treasure of gold or silver should or might be found, or had in the earth, or other secret places.

The mischiefs before this part of the act was: That divers impostors, men and women would take upon them to tell, or do, these five things here specified, in great deceipt of the people, and cheating and cousening them of their money, or other goods. Therefore was this part of the act made, wherein these words [take upon him or them] are very remarkable. For if they take upon them, &c. though in truth they do it not, nor can do it, yet are they in danger of this first branch.

2. Or where goods, or other things loft, or stoln should be found or become.

Herein they become offenders, if they take upon them as aforefaid. And note, the taking upon them, to tell and declare, governe both thefe branches.

3. Or to the intent to provoke any person to unlawfull love.

Herein also they become offenders, by taking upon them, as is aforesaid. Here is the change of a new verbe, viz. [to provoke] so as the sense is, if any person or persons shall take upon him or them by witchcraft, inchantment, charme or sorcery, to the intent, to provoke any person to unlawfull love.

4. Or whereby any cattel or goods of any person shall be de-stroyed.

The letter of this branch is this: If any person shall take upon him by witchcraft, inchantment, charm, or sorcery, whereby any cattell or goods of any person should be destroyed. Although this be not sententious, yet the meaning thereof is to be taken, by supplying these words after sorcery [any thing] and not to turn [destroyed] into the infinitive mood, as the rest be; for then it satisfied not the meaning of the makers: for a taking upon them to destroy cattel, &c. if they be not destroyed, is not within the danger of this act, and therefore must be supplied as is aforesaid.

5. Or to hurt or destroy any person in his or her body, although the same be not effected or done.

As

Conjuration, Witchcraft, &c. Cap. 6.

As in the case of cattel or goods, the destruction must be (as is aforesaid) effected and done: so in case of the person of man, woman, or childe, though the hurt be not effected, or done; yet is the taking upon him, &c. to hurt or destroy any person, &c. within this branch.

Being therefore lawfully convicted.

Here [convicted] is taken in a large sense for attainted, and the rather, for that after in this act the words be flawfully convicted and attainted, as is aforefaid.]

Shall for the faid offence, &c.

Here are expressed the punishments inslicted upon these impostors, mountebanks, and cheating quacksalvers, viz. 1. To suffer imprisonment by the space of a whole year without bail or mainprize. 2. Once every quarter of the year these mountebanks are to mount the pillory, and to stand thereupon in some market towne six houres, and there to confess his or her error, and offence.

And if any person being once convicted of the same offences, &c.

Here is also [convicted] taken for attainted, for he shall not be drawn in question for the second offence, to make it selony, till judgement be given against him for the first; for the indictment of felony recites the former attainder, and the second offence must be committed after the judgement. And so it is in the case of forgery 5 Eliz. cap. 14. upon the statute of 5 Eliz. and in case of conveighing of sheep alive 8 Eliz. cap. 3. out of this realme, and some others.

Saving to the wife of such person as shall offend in any thing contrary to this act, her title of dower, and also to the heire and successor of every person, his or their titles of inheritance, succession, and other rights, as though no such attainder of the ancestor or predecessor had been made.]

The judgement against a felon is, that he be hanged by the neck until he be dead : and albeit nothing else is expressed in the judge- See the 1. part of ment, yet by the common law many things are therein implied; as the Inflitutes. the losse of his wives dower, the losse of his inheritance, corrup- sea. 747. tion of his blood, forfeiture of his goods, &c. Now a faving will ferve for any thing, that is implied in the judgement, as in this case for the wives dower, and also for the heirs inheritance, and for all the rest of the things implied in the judgement. But a saving will Vide lib. x. in not serve against the expresse judgement in case of selony, for that the case of Alton should be repugnant; as faving the life of the offender should be void, because it is repugnant to the expresse judgement, viz. that he be hanged by the neck until he be dead. Also where the faving is to the heir, it is well faved by the name of the heir, because notwithstanding the forfeiture implied in the judgement, his inheritance is faved, and by consequent the blood not corrupted, for if the blood were corrupted, he could not inherit as heir, but notwithflanding this faving the lands are forfeited during his life.

5 El. cap. 14.

The statute of 5 Eliz. for preservation of the wives dower, and the heirs inheritance, in case of forgery, is penned in this form. Provided alway, that such attainder of felony shall not in any wise extend to take away the dower of the wise of any such person attaint: nor to the corruption of blood, or disherison of any heir or heirs of any such person attaint.

The words of the statute of 8 Eliz. be, Provided always that this act shall not extend to corruption of blood, or be prejudiciall or hurtfull to any woman claiming dower by or from any such offender, &c. Wherein it is to be observed, that by the avoidance of corruption of blood, the inheritance is impliedly saved. See the manner of the penning of the act of 31 Eliz. concerning this matter and divers others.

See the statute of 3. Ja. ca. 4.

And furely it is very convenient that when new felonies be made by act of parliament, that fuch favings or provisions be made both for the wives dower, and the heirs inheritance, as were had and made in these presidents.

HAVING a now passed High Treason, Petit Treason, Misprisson of Treason, Felony by the statute of 3 H. 7. Heresy, and Conjuration, Witchcrast, &c. we are next in order to treat of selonies in general: and of all selonies, murder is the most hainous. Inter leges Canuti, ca. 61. so. 118. Cades manifesta numerantur inter scelera nullo humano jure expiabilia. See here, ca. Pardon. And of all murders, murder by poysoning is the most detestable. Therefore first of murder. Murdrum is derived of the Saxon word mord.

b Murder is when a man of found memory, and of the age of discretion, unlawfully killeth within any county of the realm any reasonable creature in rerum natura under the king's peace, with malice fore-thought, either expressed by the party, or implied by law, so as the party wounded, or hurt, &c. die of the wound, or hurt, &c. within a year and a day after the same.

Hereof we will speak, together with some things concerning the accessories to the same, and leave the residue to others, that have written thereof. Now let us examine the principal parts of this de-fcription.

Poyson, (Venenum, à venis, quia à venis permeat) is, as hath been faid, the most detestable of all, because it is most horrible, and fearfull to the nature of man, and of all others can be least prevented, either by manhood, or providence: and that made Fleta to fay, Item nec per patriam se defendere debet quis de veneno dato, sed tantum per corpus suum, eo quod initium facti non fuit tam publicum, quod sciri poterit à patria. &c. but that is not holden for law at this day.

This offence was fo odious, that by act of parliament it was made high treason, and inflicted a more grievous and lingring death then the common law prescribeth, viz. That the offender should be boyled to death in hot water: upon which statute b Margaret Davy a voung woman was attainted of high treason for poysoning of her mittris, and some others were boyled to death in Smithfield the 17 day of March in the same yeer. But this act was too severe to live long, and therefore was repealed by 1 E. 6. cap. 12. and 1 Mar. cap. 1.

All the ancient authors, ubi fupra, of old time defined murder to be, occulta hominis occisio, &c. when it was done in secret, fo as the offender was not known: but now it is taken in a larger [49] 18 E. 3. 32. 9 H. 6. 63. 3 H. 7. 12. 4 H. 7. 18. 6 H. 7. 10. a man had been feloniously stricken, or poysoned in one county, and after had died in another county, no sufficient indictment could thereof have been taken in either of the said counties, because by the law of the realm, the jurors of one county could not inquire of that, which was done in an other county. It is provided by that act that the indictment may be taken, and the appeal brought in that county, where the death doth happen. Before the making of this statute, the appeal might have been brought in either of the said counties, but the triall must have been out of both: but when both counties could not joyn, then both appeal and indictment sailed at the common law.

But here be two things to be observed: first, that in case of treafon or misprision thereof, or of felony, or misprision of the same within the realm, the party ought to be indicted within the same county, where the sact is done, and it cannot be alledged in any other county, then in truth where it was done. And therefore in the case above said, neither the stroke, nor poysoning, nor the death, though they be transitory, can be alledged in the indictment or appeal, but where in truth they were done. Secondly, the statute of 2 E. 6. extendeth not where one is stricken or poysoned on the sea, or in any forain kingdome, and dieth in England, but where one is stricken or poysoned in one county, and dieth in another.

This act extendeth, where the murder, or felony is done in one county, and another shall be accessory in another county: whereof

Lib. 9. fo. 117,

Richard Weston being Sir Thomas Overburies keeper in the Tower of London, did poyson him in that part of the Tower which is within London. R. earl of S. and F. his wife, James Franklin and Anne Turner were accessories before the fact in the county of Midd. and Sir Gervase Helwys lieutenant of the Tower was accessory before the fact in London. Now upon this statute of 2 E. 6. ca. 24. divers questions were resolved: first, if the acceffory be in Midd. where the kings bench fit, and the principall is attainted in another county, the kings bench may try the acceffory, as it was resolved in the lord Sanchars case, ubi supra. 2. If the indictment of the accessory be taken in the kings bench, the justices shall not by force of the statute of 2 E. 6. write in their own names, quia placita sunt coram rege, & non coram justiciariis, but remove the record by the kings writ of certiorari. 3. Divers presidents were shewn, that where accessories before the fact were in Midd. where the kings bench did fit, &c. and the attainder of the principall had been in another county, the justices of the kings bench have removed the attainder by writ of certiorari before them. the lord Sanchars case, ubi supra, and another case where the principall was attainted in the county of Oxon, before justices of oier and terminer, and the accessory was in Midd. where the kings bench fate. 4. Richard Weston being attainted as principall in the city of London, proceeding was to be had against James Franklin and Anne Turner in the kings bench where they were indicted. The question was, if the kings bench should remove the record of the attainder of the principall by certiorari before them, and after the faid earl and his wife should be tried by their peers before the lord steward, whether the Lord steward might write to the kings bench for the record of the attainder: for the words of 2 E. 6. be, Shall write to the cuftos rotulorum, or keepers of the record where fuch principall shall hereaster be attainted or convict. And to prevent all doubts, a special writ was directed according to the words of the act, to the commissioners of oier and terminer, to certifie whether the principall was attainted, convicted, or acquitted, and they made a particular certificate accordingly: so as the record of the attainder remained still with the commissioners of oier and terminer in London. 5. It was resolved upon consideration had of the whole act, that the words of the act being, the justices of good delivery, or of oier and terminer, or other there authorized, shall proceed, &c. the same extend to the high steward to write, &c.

The indictment of Richard Weston was, that he o die Maii anno 11 regis Jacobi, &c. gave to Sir Thomas Overbury a poyson called roseacre in broth, which Sir Thomas Overbury not knowing it, received, et ut idem Ri. Weston præfatum Thomam Overbury magis celeriter interficeret, et murdraret, 1 Junii anno 11 Jac. regis, gave unto him another poyson called white arsenick. And that Richard Weston, 10 Julii, anno 11. Jac. regis, gave unto him poyfon, called mercury sublimat, in tarts, &c. ut prad. Thomam magis celeriter interficeret, & murdraret. And that a person unknown, by the procurement, and in the presence of Richard Weston, 14 Septemb. 11. supradicto, gave to the said Thomas a glyster with poyfon in it, called mercury sublimat, &c. ut prad. Thomam magis celeriter interficeret et murdraret. Et prædict. Thomas Overbury de separalibus venenis prædict. et operatione inde à prædict. separalibus temporibus, &c. graviter languebat usque 15 diem. Septemb. anno 11. supradicto, quo quidem 15 die Septembris, &c. prædictus Thomas de separalibus venenis prædictis obiit venenatus. And this was resolved to be a good indictment by all the justices of the king's bench, although it doth not appeare in particular, of which of the faid poyfons he died. For the substance of the indictment was, whether he was poyfoned or no, by the faid Richard Weston. And upon this indictment he was arraigned, pleaded not guilty, and had judgement given against him. And afterward Anne Turner, Sir Gervase Helwys lieutenant of the Tower, and Richard Franklin the physitian, were indicted as accessories before the fact, and arraigned. and pleaded not guilty: and it fell out in evidence, that Franklin had prepared divers other poylons, then were contained in the indictment, as the powder of diamonds, the powder of spiders, lapis causticus, and cantharides, over and besides the poysons in the in-And it was refolved, that any of these was sufficient to dictment. prove the indictment; for the substance of the indictment was poyloning, which (as hath been faid) is fecret: fee Machallis cafe ubi fuora, and after verdict, judgement was given against all these accessories. And after, the faid earle and the countesse his wife were indicted as accessories before the fact, and were arraigned before the lord chancellor of England, and hac vice, lord high steward of England: and upon the arraignment of the countesse, she confessed the indictment: and when the clerk of the crown did ask her, What she could say why judgement of death should not be given against her? she said, That she could say much against her selfe, but nothing for her selfe. And then the lord steward gave judgement of death against her, viz. That she should be hanged by the neck till she were dead: and adjourned his commission, (as it was resolved he might do by law) untill the next day: and then the faid earle was arraigned, and pleaded not guilty, and put himfelf upon his peers, who found him guilty: and thereupon the lord steward gave the like judgement against him. Which case we have recited the more largely for two causes. First, for that we remember not any of the nobility of this realm to have been attainted in former times for poyloning of any. Secondly, for that it is the first case that fell out upon the said act of 2 E. 6. in case of triall by peers of any that was noble, and the proceeding herein was by great advisement. But now let us return where we left.

Reasonable creature, in rerum natura.] As man, woman, childe, subject born, or alien, persons outlawed, or otherwise attainted of treason, felony, or premunire, Christian, Jew, Heathen, Turk, or other Infidel, being under the kings peace.

A master of a ship and divers mariners, &c. were attainted of murder before justices in eire, for drowning of many Jewes with-

b If a woman be quick with childe, and by a potion or otherwife killeth it in her wombe; or if a man beat her, whereby the childe dieth in her body, and she is delivered of a dead childe, this is a great misprission, and no murder: but if the childe be born alive, and dieth of the potion, battery, or other cause, this is murder: for in law it is accounted a reasonable creature, in rerum natura, when it is born alive. And the c book in I E. 3. was never holden for law. And 3 Ass. p. 2. is but a repetition of that case. And so horrible an offence should not go unpunished. And fo was the law holden d in Bractons time, Si aliquis qui mulierem præg. nantem percusserit, vel ei venenum dederit, per quod fecerit abortivum, si puerperium jam formatum fuerit; et maxime fi fuerit animatum, facit homicidium. And herewith agreeth Fleta: and herein the law is grounded upon the law of God, which faith, Quicunque effuderit humanum sanguinem, fundetur sanguis illius, ad imaginem quippe Dei creatus est homo. If a man counsell a woman to kill the childe within her wombe, when it shall be born, and after she is delivered of the childe, she killeth it; the councellor is an accessory to the murder, and yet at the time of the commandement, or councell, no murder could be committed of the childe in utero matris: the reafon of which case proveth well the other case.

Malice prepensed. First let us see what this malice is.

Malice prepensed is, when one compasseth to kill, wound, or beat another, and doth it sedate animo. This is faid in law to be malice forethought, prepenfed, malitia præcogitata. This malice is so odious in law, as though it be intended against one, it shall be extended towards another. * Si quis unum percufferit, eum alium percutere vellet, in felonia tenetur.

Mandata recipiunt strictam interpretationem, sed illicita latam et extenfivam. But herein there is a diversity between the principall and the accessory. For if A command B, to kill C, and B by mistaking killeth D in stead of C, this is murder in B because he did the act: and it sprang out of the root of malice, and the law shall couple the event to the cause: but A is not accessory, because his commandement was not purfued; and his confent, which must make him accessory, cannot be drawne to it, for he never commanded the death of D. But where death ensueth upon that act which is commanded.

commanded, though death it selfe be not commanded, there he is accessory to it, for there the commandement is the cause of death. As if A command B to beat C, and he beat him, whereof he dieth: the commander is accessory, and therefore the diversity is apparent. as to the accessory. Where death is pursuant, and followeth upon the act commanded, there the confent of the commander may well be drawn to it, for that the commandement is the mean of the death. But where death ensueth upon another distinct cause, there the confent of the accessory cannot be drawn to it, et sic de

Another diversity there is, when the commandement extends expresly to the killing of another, and for the better accomplishment thereof prescribeth a mean; that is, to kill him by poyson, and he killeth him with a gun, he is accessory: for the commandement was to kill, which enfued, though the mean was not followed, et finis rei attendendus est. And the substance of the commandement. viz. [to kill] is purfued; and the fame offence that was commanded, is committed. But otherwise it is, if the same offence which is commanded be not committed. As if one command one to rob the vintners man of plate, as he is to come to a gentlemans chamber to his supper with wine; and he breaketh the taverne in the night, and stealeth the plate there; the commander is not acceffory to this burglary, for this is another offence then he commanded, and the confent of the accessory must be drawn to the murder or felony committed.

2. It must be malice continuing untill the mortall wound, or the like be given. Albeit there had been malice between two, and after they are pacified and made friends, and after this upon a new occasion fall out, and the one killeth the other; this is homicide, but no murder, because the former malice continued not.

If A command B to kill C, and before the act be done, A repenteth and countermand his commandement, and charge B not to do it: if B after killeth him, A is not accessory to it: for the malicious minde of the accessory ought to continue to do ill untill Pl. Com. ubi the act done.

If two fall out upon a sudden occasion, and agree to fight in fuch a field, and each of them go and fetch their weapon, and go into the field, and therein fight, the one killeth the other: here is no malice prepenfed, for the fetching of the weapon and going into the field, is but a continuance of the fudden falling out, and the blood was never cooled. But if they appoint to fight the next day, that is malice prepented.

Malice implyed, is in three cases.] First, in respect of the manner As if one killeth another without any provocation of the part of him, that is slain, the law implieth malice: whereof you may read lib. 9. fol. 67. 2. In respect of the person slain. As if a magistrate or known officer, or any other, that hath lawfull warrant, and in doing, or offering to doe his office, or to execute his warrant, is slain, this is murder, by malice implied by law, as the sherif, justice of the peace, undersherif, chief constable, petit constable, or any other minister of the king. If a man kill a watchman doing his office, it is murder: so it is, if any, that come in aid of the kings officer, &c. to doe his office, be slain, it is murder.

3. In respect of the person killing. If A assault B to rob him and in resisting A killeth B this is murder by malice implied, albeit he never saw or knew him before. If a prisoner by the dures of the gaoler, commeth to untimely death, this is unurder in the gaoler, and the law implieth malice in respect of the cruelty. And this is the cause, that if any man dieth in prison, the coroner ought to sit upon his body, to the end it may be inquired of, whether he came to his death by the dures of the gaoler, or otherwise: all which appeareth in Britton: and this sitting of the coroner continueth till nis day.

If the sherif, or other officer, where he ought to hang the party attainted, according to his judgement and his charge, will against the law, of his own wrong, burn or behead him, or à corroerso; the law in this case implieth malice in him. Neither can the king by any warrant under the great seal alter the execution, otherwise then the judgement of law doth direct: for it is a maxime in law, non alio modo puniatur quis, quam secundum quod se habeat condemnatio.

And it is to be known, that in case of treason and felony, there is an expresse judgement, and an implied judgement: expresse, when upon appearance, &c. an expresse judgement is given against him, quod suspendatur per collum. Implied, when the offender makes default, and is outlawed, where the judgement is, ideo utlagetur; or in case of abjuration, quia abjuravit regnum: and yet the like execution shall be in case of outlawry or abjuration, as in case of an expresse judgement: and so it was adjudged in case of a person outlawed for selony, he ought to be hanged untill he be dead, and cannot be beheaded, * and the like is in case of abjuration. But in case of high treason, because beheading is parcell of the judgement, the king may pardon all the refidue of the execution except that: for feeing the king may pardon the whole execution, he may pardon any part, or all, faving part. If a lieutenant, or other that hath commission of marshall authority, in time of peace hang, or otherwise execute any man by colour of marshall law, this is murder, for this is against Magna Charta cap. 29. and is done with fuch power and strength, as the party cannot defend himself; and here the law implieth malice. Vide Pasch. 14. E. 3. in Scaccario the abbot of Ramseys case in a writ of error in part abridged by Fitzh. tit. Scire fac. 122. for time of

CAP. VIII.

HOMICIDE.

JOMICIDIUM ex vi termini comprehendeth petit treason. murder, and that which is commonly called manflaughter: for homicidium est hominis cadium, and homicidium est hominis oc-esso ab homine fasta. Therefore the right division of homicide is: that of homicides, or manflaughter, fome be voluntary, and of malice forethought; as petit treason, and murder of another, and murder of himself. Of the two former we have spoken; and of murder of himself we shall speak hereafter. Of manslaughters, fome be voluntary, and not of malice forethought: of these some be felony (as shall be shewed hereafter) and some be no felony; of which, some be in respect of giving back inevitably in defence of himself, upon an assault of revenge: and some without any giving back; as upon the affault of a thief or robber upon a man in his house, or abroad: Some upon the affault of one, that is under custody; as the sherif, or gaoler assaulted by his prisoner. Some in respect that he is an officer or minister of justice, without any affault in execution of his office, or lawfull warrant. And laftly, fome homicides, that be no felony, be neither forethought, nor voluntary; as mantlaughter by misadventure, per infortunium, or cafu. Felo de se is a man, or woman, which being compos mentis, of found memory, and of the age of discretion, killeth himself, which being lawfully found by the oath of twelve men, all the goods and chattels of the party so offending are forfeited.

Now let us peruse the severall branches of this description, majus est delictum seinsum occidere, quam alium.

Being compos mentis.] * If a man lose his memory by the rage of fickness or infirmity, or otherwise, and kill himself while he is not compos mentis, he is not felo de fe: for, as he cannot commit murder upon another, so in that case he cannot commit murder upon himself. b If one during the time that he is non compos mentis give himself a mortall wound, whereof he, when he hath recovered his memory, dieth, he is not felo de fe: because, the stroke which was the cause of his death, was given when he was not compos mentis: et aclus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea. If a man give himself a wound, intending to be felo de fe, and dieth not within the year and day after the wound, he is not felo de se.

Of the age of discretion.] Hereof we have spoken before treating of murder.

And this is the reason, that no man can prescribe to have felous goods, because they are not forfeited, until it be found of record, that he is felo de se.

b If a man be felo de fe, and is cast into the sea, or otherwise so b Hil. 37 Eliz. fecretly hidden, as the coroner cannot have the view of the body, and by consequence cannot inquire thereof: in this case it may be whole court, in inquired thereof by the justices of peace of that county; for they the case of one have power by their commission to inquire of all felonics. There is no difference between murder, and manflaughter; but that the one is upon malice forethought, and the other upon a fudden occasion; and therefore is called chancen edley. As if two meet together, and striving for the wall the one kill the other, this is manilaughter and felony. And so it is, if they had upon that fudden occasion gone into the fields and fought, and the one had killed the other: this (as hath been faid) had been but manslaughter, and no murder; because all that followed, was but a continuance of the first sudden occasion, and the heat of the blood kindled by ire was never cooled, till the blow was given, et he de fimilibus.

Manslaughter i is felony, and hereof there may be accessories after the fact done: but of murder, there may be accessories, as well before, as after the fact.

Some be k voluntary, and yet being done upon an inevitable cause are no felony. As if A. be assaulted by B. and they fight together, and before any mortall blow given A. giveth back, untill he commeth unto a hedge, wall, or other strait, beyond * which he cannot passe, and then in his own defence, and for safeguard of his owne life killeth the other: this is voluntary, and yet no felony, and the jury that finde, it was done fe defendendo, ought to finde the speciall matter. And yet such a precious regard the law hath of the life of man, though the cause was inevitable, b that at the common law he should have suffered death: and though the statute of Glocester save his life, yet he shall forseit all his goods and · Hereof there can be no accessories, either before or after the fact, because it is not done felleo animo, but upon inevitable neceffity fe defendendo. If A. affault B. fo fiercely and violently, and in fuch a place, and in fuch manner, as if B. fliould give back, he should be in danger of his life, he may in this case defend himselfe; and if in that defence he killeth A, it is fe defendendo, because it is not done felleo animo: for the rule is, when he doth it in his own defence, upon any inevitable cause, Quod quis ob tutelam corporis sui Lib. 4. fo. 44. fecerit, jure id feciffe videtur.

Some without any giving back to a wall, &c. or other inevitable cause. d As if a thiefe offer to rob or murder B. either abroad, or in his house, and thereupon affault him, and B. defend himselfe without any giving back, and in his defence killeth the thief, this is no felony; for a man shall never give way to a thief, &c. neither shall he forfeit any thing. • And so it is declared by the statute of 24 H. 8. Likewife f if a prisoner assault the gaoler, the gaoler is not by law inforced to give back: but if in defence of himfelfe he 8 So if any officer, or minister of justice, that hath lawfull warrant, and the party affault the officer or minister of justice, he is not bound by law to give back, but to carry him away: and if in execution of his office he cannot otherwife avoid it, but in striving kill him, it is no felony. There is an homicide, that is neither forethought, nor voluntary. 1 As if a man kill another per infortunium, feu casu, that is homicide by misadventure. De amoutatore arborum, qui cum ramum projiceret, inscius occidit transuntem : aut cum quis pilam percusserit, &c. ex cujus ictu occifus est, tales de homicidio non tenentur. Homicide by misadventure, is when a man doth an act, that is not un- Brit. ca. 7. fo. lawfull, which without any evill intent tendeth to a man's death.

Unlawfull.] in If the act be unlawful it is murder. As if A. meaning to steale a deere in the park of B, shooteth at the deer, and by the glance of the arrow killeth a boy that is hidden in a bush: this is murder, for that the act was unlawfull, although A. had no intent to hurt the boy, nor knew not of him. But if B. the owner of the park had shot at his own deer, and without any ill intent had killed the boy by the glance of his arrow, this had been homicide by misadventure, and no felony.

* So if one shoot at any wild fowle upon a tree, and the arrow killeth any reasonable creature afar off, without any evill intent in him, this is per infortunium: for it was not unlawful to floot at the wilde fowle: but if he had shot at a cock or hen, or any tame fowle of another mans, and the arrow by mischance had killed a

Without any evil intent.] If a man knowing that many people come in the threet from a fermon, throw a stone over a wall, in- Marlbr. ca. 25. tending only to feare them, or to give them a light hurt, and thereupon one is killed, this is murder; for he had an ill intent, though that intent extended not to death, and though he knew not the party flaine. Nec veniam effuso sanguine casus habet.

Nota, Homicide is called chancemedley, or chancemelle, for that it is done by chance (without premeditation) upon a fudden brawle, shuffling, or contention: for meddle or melle (as some say) is an ancient French word, and fignifieth brawle, or contention. But I take it that the French word is meffe, which fignifying shuffling or contending, and by corruption we changing the S to D, doe call it medle, the S being not pronounced, whereof we have made medletum. So as killing of a man by chance-medle, is killing of a man upon a fudden brawle or contention by chance, for the word [medle or melle,] whereof we have made a Latin word medletum or melletum, see Glanvill, lib, 1. cap. 2. cognoscere de med- De Medletie. letis, de verberibus, de plagis: that is, of brawling, or brabling, of

And it is to be observed, that there is a diversity, as concerning the deodand, when the party slain is within the age of discretion, viz. of 14. years, and when he is above the age of discretion. For when he is slain by fall from a cart, horse, mill, &c. and is within the age of discretion, there is no deodand, as it is adjudged in 8 E. 2. tit. coron. 389. But otherwise it is, if an oxe, horse, bull, or the like, doe kill any within the age of discretion, there the

And this law concerning deodands, is grounded upon the law of God, Exodus 2. verf. 28. Si bos connu percufferit virum, aut mulierem, et mortui fuerint, lapidibus obructur. See justice Stanford, lib. 1. cap. 12. which need not here to be recited. But now that we have cited, and referred you to our books of law already known, and published: let us cast our eye upon some records of parliament concerning deodands, of, or out of thips or other vessels upon rivers, or waters, fresh or salt, the law being clear that in aqua dulci there may be decidands, but in the sea, or in aqua salfa, being any arm of the sea, though it be in the body of the county, there can be no deodand of the ship, or any part thereof, though any be drowned out of it; because, though the arm of the sea be within the body of the county, the ship or other veffel is subject to such dangers upon the raging waves in respect of the wind and tempest. And this diversity doth notably appear in the parliament roll. Amongst the petitions in parliament it is desired, that if it happen any man, or boy to be drowned by a fall out of any ship, boat, or vessel, they shall be no deodands. Whereunto the king upon great advice, and conference with his judges and councell

F any person shall commit buggery with mankind, or beast: by authority of parliament this offence is adjudged felony without benefit of clergy. But it is to be known, (that I may observe it once for all) that the statute of 25 H. 8. was repealed by the statute of 1 Mar. whereby all offences made felony or premunire by any act of parliament made fince 1 H. 8. were generally repealed, but 25 H. 8. is revived by 5 Eliz.

The act of 25 H. 8. hath adjudged it felony, and therefore the judgement for felony doth now belong to this offence, viz. to be hanged by the neck till he be dead. He that readeth the preamble of this act, shall find how necessary the reading of our ancient authors is: the statute doth take away the benefit of clergy from the delinquent. But now let us peruse the words of the said description of buggery.

Detestable and ab.minable.] Those just attributes are found in the act of 25 H. 8.

Amongst Christians not to be named.] These words are in the usuall indictment of this offence, and are in effect in the parlament roll of 50 E. 3. ubi fupra, nu. 58.

By carnal knowledge, &c.] The words of the indictment be, contra ordinationem creatoris, et natura ordinationem creatoris, et natura ordinationem creatoris, et natura ordinationem, rem habit veneream, distumque puerem carnaliter * cognovit, &c. So as there must be penetratio that is, res in re, either with mankind or with beast, but the least penetration maketh it carnall knowledge. * See the indictment of Stafford, which was drawn by great advice for committing buggery with a boy, for which he was attainted and hanged.

b The fodomites came to this abomination by four means, viz. by pride, excesse of diet, idlentsse, and contempt of the poor. Otiosus nihil cogitat, niss de ventre et venere. Both the agent and contentient are selons: and this is consonant to the law of God. Qui dormicit cum masculo coitu fæminco, uterque operatus est nesas, et morte moriatur. And this accordeth with the ancient rule of law.

Emission smaketh it not buggery, but is an evidence in case of buggery of penetration: and so in rape the words be also, carnaliter cognovit, and therefore there must be penetration; and emission swithout penetration maketh no rape. Vide in the chapter of Rape. If the party buggered be within the age of discretion, it is no felony in him, but in the agent only. When any offence is felony either by the common law, or by statute, all accessories both before and after, are incidently included. If so if any be present, abetting and aiding any to do the act, though the offence be personall, and to be done by one only, as to commit rape, not only he that doth the act is a principall, but also they that he present, abetting, and aiding the missioer, are principalls also, which is a proof of the other case of Sodomy.

Or ly woman.] This is within the purvien of this act of 25 H. 8. For the words be, if any person, &c. which extend as well to a woman, as to a man, and therefore if she commit buggery with a beast, she is a person that commits buggery with a beast, to which end this word [person] was used. And the rather, for that somewhat before the making of this act, a great lady had committed buggery with a baboon, and conceived by it, &c.

CAP. XII.

Felony for carrying away a Woman against her Will, &c.

Exod. 21. 16. Deut. 24. 7. # 1 Tim. 1. 10.

E have thought good next after Buggery and Rape, to speak of the stealing of women, because the * apostle doth rank, after the sodomite, him that is plagiarius, so called, because lege Flavia plagis damnaretur. And we will begin with the statute of 3 H. 7. cap. 2.

3 H. 7. c. 2. 39 El. cap. 9.

Where women, as well maidens, as widows and wives, having substances, some in goods moveable, and some in lands and tenements, and some being heirs apparant unto their ancestors, for the lucre of such substances, been oftentimes taken by misdoers, contrary to their will, and after married to fuch mildoers, or to other by their affent, or defoyled, to the great displeasure of God, and contrary to the kings laws, and disparagement of the said women, and utter heavinesse, and discomfort of their friends, and to the evill ensample of all other; it is therefore ordained, established, and enacted by our foveraign lord the king, by the advice of the lords spiritual and temporall, and the commons in the faid parliament affembled, and by authority of the same, That what person or persons from henceforth that taketh any woman so against her will unlawfully, that is to fay, maid, widow, or wife, that fuch taking, procuring, and abetting to the same, and also receiving wittingly the fame woman fo taken against her will, and knowing the same, be felony. And that such misdoers, takers, and procurators to the same, and receytors, knowing the said offence offence in form aforesaid, be henceforth reputed and judged as principall felons. Provided alway that this act extend not to any person taking any woman, only claiming her as his ward, or bondwoman.

This act on the offenders part doth extend to all degrees, and to all persons, but extendeth not to all women; for on the womans part four things are necessarily required to make the offence felony. First, that the maid, wife, or widow have lands or tenements, or moveable goods, or be an heir apparent. Secondly, that she be taken away against her will. Thirdly, that she be married to the miscoer, or to some other by his consent, or be defiled, (that is, carnally known) for if these concurre not, the misdoer is no felon within this statute, but otherwise to be punished. And so it was refolved, 3 & 4 Ph. and Mar. And after refolved by all the judges Mar. justice Daof England upon advised consideration of this act of 3 H. 7. and lifons report. upon confultation, and conference between them, as the lord Dier Dier manuscript. hath reported under his own hand, which I have feen, but the report thereof is omitted in the print; and the indiffments grounded by parliament. moon this statute, are according to this resolution. Fourthly, that in anno 39 EL she be not ward, or bondwoman to the person that taketh her, or cap. 9. causeth her to be taken only as his ward, or bondwoman.

By this act, not only the takers, but the procurers, abetters of Nota, quia rare. the felony, and receivers of the faid woman wittingly, knowing the same, be all adjudged as principall felons: the like whereof we finde not in any other statute, that we remember. But by a construction of the common law, they that receive the misdoers, and not the woman, are accessories; for this act maketh the receivers of the woman, &c principals.

CAP. XIII.

Of Felonie for cutting out of Tongues, and putting out of Eyes, &c.

JF any man doe cut out the tongue, or put out the eyes of any of the kings lieges, of malice prepented, it is felony.

The mischiese before this statute was, that when one had been beaten, wounded, maimed, or robbed, &c. the misdoers, to the end that the party grieved might not be able to accuse them, did cut out their tongues, or put out their eyes, pretending the same to be no selony: and therefore it is ordained and established to be felony by this act.

Here it is to be observed, that where it doth appear by the preamble of this law, that this offence had been before this act daily done: this law did so terrifie offenders, as we remember not, that we have read in any book or record, any to be indicted, &c. upon this law, above one at the most. And of all statutes these are to be preferred, which prevent offences before they be done, before those which punish them after they be done. And therefore in the making of this law there was falutaris severitas, et beats securitas.

Malice prepensed.] That is, voluntary and of set purpose, though it be done upon a sudden occasion; for if it be voluntary, the law in be done upon a fidden occasion; for it it be voluntary, the law implyeth malice.

We read in Bracton, that the cutting off of a mans privie members was felony by the common law: for he faith, Quid dicitur si quis alterius virilia absciderit, et illum libidin's causa vel conviti

castraverit? tenetur sive hoc volens fecerit, vel invitus, et sequitur pana aliquando capitalis, aliquando perpetuum exilium cum omni bonorum ademptione. And agreeable thereunto, I finde a record in Bracton's time to this effect: Henricus Hail et A. uxor ejus capti et detenti sunt in prisona de Evilchester, eò quòd restati suerunt quòd issi absciderunt virilia Johannis M. nachi, quem idem Henricus deprehendit cum prædista A. uxore ejus, &c. Fleta saith, Si quis eastratus sucrit, talis pro mahemiato poterit adjudicai. And, therewith agreeth old justice Sennal in the Mirror; and so is the law holden at this day. And in the Ap-peale and Indictment of Mayhem it is faid, felonice mayhemavit: whereof we shall speak more hereafter in his proper place. Cutting off of eares is no felony, as it appeareth by the statute of 37 H.8. Vid. Stans. Pl. cor. 27. a. The offender shall have the benefit of

OF BURGLARIE.

BURGLAR (or the person that committeth burglary) is by *Inter leg. Edm. This word burglar, is derived of these two words, viz. burgh, b Lib. 4. fo. 34. Agnifying an house, and laron signifying a thief, as it were an Brooke's case. house-thiefe. • The Saxons called it hurbnec, inter scelera inexpia-

In the night.] f The word in the indictment or appeale, is, notionter, id eft, notion. The natural day is divided in lucem, light, which is dies folaris, and in tenebras, which is night. And therefore as long as the day-light continues, whereby a mans countenance may be discerned, it is called day: and when darknesse comes and day-light is past, so as by the light of day you cannot discerne the countenance of a man, then it is called night. h Pofuisti tenebras, et facta est nox, in qua pertransciint bestiæ silvæ; sol oritur et congregatæ sunt, exit homo ad opus et operationem suam, et redit This doth aggravate the offence, fith the night is the time wherein man is to rest, and wherein beasts runne about seeking

Break and enter. The words of the indictment be, Fregit et intravit: and this is understood of an actuall breaking of the house. and not of a breaking in law: for every entry into the house by a trespasser, is a breaking in law; but in case of a burglary, every entry is not a breaking of the house, for the words of the indictment be, Felonice et burglariter fregit, &c. As if the doore of a mansion house stand open, and the thief enter into the house with a purpose to steale, this is a breaking of the house in law, and vet no burglary, because there must be an actuall breaking. it is if the window of the house be open, and a thiefe with a hook or other engine draweth out some of the goods of the owner: this is no burglary, because there is no actuall breaking of the house. But if the thiefe breaketh the glasse of the window, and with a hook or other engine draweth out some of the goods of the owner. this is burglary, for there was an actuall breaking of the house. It is deemed an entry, when the thiefe breaketh the house, and his body, or any part thereof, as his foot, or his arme, is within any part of the house: or when he putteth a gun into a window which he hath broken, or into an hole of the house which he hath made, of intent to murder or kill; or as hath been faid, a hook or other engine into any part of the house which he hath broken, of intent to steale: this being put by him into the house, is an entry and breaking of the house. But if he doth barely break the house without any fuch entry at all, that is no burglary, for it must be fregit et intravit.

Stanf. pl. cor. 30. a. Dier 1 Mar. 99. a. 22 Aff. p. 39. 95. • 13 H.4. 13.

If divers come in the night to do a burglary, and one of them break and enter, the rest of them standing neere to the doore, or about other parts of the house, or at a lanes end, or some orchard gate, or sield gate, or the like, to watch that no help shall come to defend and aide the owner or dweller; this is burglary in all.

That which is done in fraudem legis, the law giveth no benefit thereof to the party. As if thieves come in the night with hue and cry, pretending that they be robbed, and shall require the constable to fearch for the felons, and whilest he goeth with them into some mans house, they binde and rob the constable, and dweller, this is burglary: for in judgement of law it is their act.

manfion or dwelling house.

2 E. 6. Br. cor. 180. Britton, fo. 17. * Domus mansionalis is divided into two branches, viz. to inset edifices, as hall, parler, buttry, kitching, and lodging chambers, &c. and the outset buildings, as barnes, stables, cowhouses, dairies, &c. all these are parcels of the mansion-house, and will passe by the name of domus mansionalis. And albeit every mansion-house hath not all these buildings, yet every house for the dwelling and habitation of man is taken to be a mansion-house, wherein burglary may be committed.

b Lib. 4. fo. 40. in Brocks cafe. Hil. 38 Eliz. per les justices, ibid.

23 H. 8. cap. 2. 5 E. 6. cap. 9. See inter leges Alveredi, c. 6, If a man hath a mansion house, and upon some accident he and all his samily some part of the night are out of the house, and in the mean time a thief break and enter into the house, of intent to steale; this is burglary, although neither the owner nor any of his samily is in the house: for the indiament of burglary is, domum mansionalem, &c. fregit, &c. and this is domus mansionalis. See hereafter the statutes of 23 H. 8. and 5 E. 6.

If a man do break and enter a church in the night, of intent Britton. fo. 17. to steale. &c. this is burglary, for ecclesia est domus mansionalis omnipotentis Dei. • Frustra legis auxilium invocat, qui in legem commit- 264. tit. I Domus mea domus orationis vocabitur, vos autem fecifiis illam 22 Aff. p. 95. seluncam latronum. Sacrilegium derivatur à sacro et legere, id est, 26 Ass. 19. furari.

A tent or booth in fair or market, is not domus manfionalis, 20 E.2. Cor. 283. but of another name or kind; 8 but that is provided for by the statute of 5 E. 6. cap. 9. whether the robbery be done in the night, or in the day, the owner, &c. being within the fame, fleeping or waking. But a shop wherein any person doth converse may allow clergy being parcell of a mansion-house, or not parcell, is taken for a mansion-house.

Likewise a chamber or room, be it upper or lower, wherein any person doth inhabit or dwell, is domus mansionalis, in law.

Our ancient authors and old records did expresse burglary under this word, hamfuckne, or hamfokne. The first is derived from two Saxon words, viz. of ham, that fignifieth a mansion-house, domus mansionalis, which to this day we call our home: and suckne or fuccen, that is, feeken, as much to fay, as to feek a man in his house to flav or rob him.

It is to be noted that our ancient authors, nor our old bookcases do distinguish between the day and the night, when the offence should be committed in the house, save only the Mirror.

Si quis hamfockne, quæ dicitur invasio domus contra pacem domini Bracton, lib. 3. regis in domo sua se defenderit, et invasor occisus est, impersecutus et inultus remonebit, si ille quem invasit aliter se desendere non poi uit: dicitur enim quod non est dignus habere pacem, qui non vult observare eam. And the Mirror faith, Hamsockne de auncient ordinance est peche mortel, car droit est que chescun eyt quiet en son hostel, q. a la ley est.

Others derive hamsockne from ham, which of both sides is confessed to be a mansion-house, and fockne which signifies a court, as Exposit, vocabmuch to fay, as to have jurisdiction, or to hold plea of offences inter statuta.

The ancient article of the eire was, De incendiariis no Turnis vel diurnis, et combustionibus tempore pacis nequiter terpetratis.

b Hereof Bracton saith, Si quis turbata seditione incendium secrit nequiter et in selonia, vel ob inimicitiam, vel alia de causa, capitali sententia punietur. Nequiter dico, quia incendia sortuita, vel per negligentiam sasta, et non mala conscientia, non sic puniuntur, quia civiliter agitur contra tales.

Britton saith, Soit inquise de ceux que feloniousment en temps de peace aient auters blees, ou auters mensons arses, et ceux que serr de ceo attaint, soient arses, issint que ils soient punies per mesme le chose dont ilz pecherent.

So hainous was this offence, that in anno 3 E. 1. it was declared by parliament, Que ceux queux font prifes pur arfon feloniousment fait, ne soient en ascun manner replevisables. Adjudicantur suspendi, qui ex malitia præcogitata combusserunt magnam partem de Lynne in com. Ta rege Rot. 24.

Upon dispersing of bills, threatning burning of houses, &c. was made high treason, whereof more hereafter: but that act is repealed by 1 E. 6. cap. 12. and 1 Mar. Now upon that which hath been faid, our purpose is to frame a description of this selony, as may also be warranted by our year-books, and the common opinion and experience at this day.

Burning is a felony at the common law, committed by any that maliciously and voluntarily, in the night or day, burneth the

Now let us peruse this description, by all his material parts. Burning.] Putting of fire into any part of a house, whereby that part burneth. For it is necessary, that there be a burning, but 3 H. 7. 10. it is not necessary, that all or any part be wholly burnt, nor 11 H. 7. 1. that the fire hath any continuance, but the intent only sufficeth not. As if one put fire into any part of a house, and it burneth 5 & 6 E. 6. ca. g. not, this is no felony, for the words of the indictment be, incendit, et combussit. Again, if it doth burn, though it goeth out of it itself,

By the common law.] This is proved by all the ancient authors, acts of parliament, and books aforefaid. And the reason thereof is, for that burning of houses being an hostile action, is pre-supra. fumed in law to be done maliciously for revenge, and as an enemy, to consume the same by fire in time of peace. It was made in [67] speciall manner high treason, (as before is said) viz. if any 8 H. 6. sa. 6, threatned by casting of bils, to burn an house, if money be 3 H. 7. 10. per not laid in a certain place, and after did burn the house: but Brian. this treason is repealed by 1 E. 6. ca. 12. and 1 Mar. but yet the High treason. felony remaineth still: for in proditione (as hath been said) implicatur felonia.

Malicioufly and voluntarily. Proved also by the words of the indictment, which be, voluntarie, ex malitia sua præcogitata, et felonice. For if it be done by mischance, or negligence, it is no felony, as before it appeareth.

The law doth fometime imply, that the house was burnt maliciously and voluntarily. As if one intend to burn the house of A only, and not the house of B. and vet in burning the house of A. the house of B. is burnt; in this case the burning of the house of Pl. Com, so. 2792 B. is felony, because it proceeded of the malicious and voluntary burning of the house of A. and the event shall be coupled to the cause, which was voluntary, and malicious: and therefore in the indictment for the burning of the house of B. it shall be said, weluntaridex malitia fua præcogitata, et felonice, &c.

The house of another.] This is not only intended of inset houses, parcell of the mansion-house, but to the outset also, as barn, stable, III. INST.

ROBBERY is a felony by the common law, committed by a violent affault, upon the person of another, by putting him in fear, and taking from his person his money or other goods of any value whatsoever. * See inter leges Canuti, apertae compilationes numerantur inter scelera hominum inexpiabilia.

Robbery.] b It is derived de la robe, both because in ancient times (as sometime yet is done) they bereave the true man of some of his robes or garments, and also for that his money or other goods are taken from his person, that is, from or out of some part of his garment, or robe about his person. And is ranked in this place, for that it concerneth not only the goods, but the person of the owner. We call it, roberia et rapina, and the theef raptor. Whereof Bracton saith, Est enim quasi furtum rapina, qua idem est, quantum ad nos, quod roberia, et est genus contrectationis contra voluntatem domini, et similis pana sequitur utrunque delictum, unde prædo dicitur fur improbus: quis enim magis contrectat rem alienam invito domino, quam ille qui rapit?

Felony by the common law.] This is agreed of, of all, both ancient and late, without any question. And it is deemed in law to be amongst the most hainous felonies, crimen imprehistimum.

Violent

Violent affault.] This agreeth with the indictment, violenter et fe- Braft. li. 3. fo. bnice cepit, &c.

By putting him in fear.] This agreeth also with the indictment: and this circumstance maketh the difference between a robber and a cutpurse: both take it from the person, but this takes it clam et fecret, without affault or putting in fear, and the robber by violent affault, and putting in fear. If one cut a purie, with money in it above twelve pence, he shall be hanged, and the benefit of clergy is taken from him. But of ancient time the punishment was otherwise. S. captus in London cum bursa quam scidit cum tribus 434. folidis, et hoc non potuit dedicere, et ideo amittat dextrum pollicem. Brit- Britton, fe. ton saith. deniers, eyent judgment de mort.

By taking] The words of the indictment be, violenter et felonice cepit. Hic opus est interprete. For it must be understood, that there is an actuall taking in deed, and a taking in law, and that may be, when a thief receiveth, &c. For example: if thieves rob a true man, and find but little about him, take it, this is an actuall taking; and by menace of death, compell him to fwear upon a book to fetch them a greater fum, which he doth, and deliver it unto them, which they receive, this is a taking in law by them, and adjudged robbery: for fear made him to take the oath, and the oath, 44 E. 3. 14: and fear continuing, made him bring the money, which amounteth 4 H. 4. 2. to a taking in law, and in this case there need no special indict. ment, but the generall indictment (quod violenter et felonice cepit,) is fufficient. And so it is, if at the first, the true man for fear deliver his putie, &c. to the thief.

This word [cepit] necessarily implieth, that the thief must be in possession of the thing stoln: for example, if the bag or purse of the true man be fastned to his girdle, &c. and the thief the more eafily to take the bag or purfe, doe cut the girdle, whereby the bag or purse falleth to the ground, this is no taking, for the thief had never any possession thereof, et sic de similibus: but if the thief had taken up the bag, or purfe, and in striving had let it fall, and never took it again, this had been a taking, because he had it in his possession; for the continuance of his possession is not re-

From his person. The words of the indictment be, a persona, &c. If the true man feeking to escape, for the safeguard of his mony, cast it into a bush, which the thief perceiving, takes it; this is a taking in law from the person, because it is done at one time. If the true man had cast off his surcote, or other uppermost garment, and the same lying in his presence, a thief assault him, &c. and take the furcote, this is robbery; for that which is taken in his presence, is in law taken from his person: and so it is of the horse of a true man, which stands by him, et sic de similibus.

In ancient authors and records, in pleas of the crown, you shall read of sakebere, &c. whom we will derive and explain. factere, or sacturgh, sac, or sak is an ancient French word, and signifieth a bag, purse, or powch. So that fackbere is he that did bear the bag, &c. and in legall understanding, is he that was robbed of his mony in his bag. And this agreeth with the interpretation there-

The mischiefe before this statute was, That whereas records are of such high nature and credit, as they import in themselves absolute verity without contradiction; to the end, that there might be an end of contention and controversie, and men might rest in safety and repose, certains clerks and other persons did oftentimes imbesell records, or some parcell of them, and sometime a writ, writ, retorne, panell, proces, or warrant of attorney; or rase or vitiate the same; by reason whereof divers judgements were avoided, or reversed, whereby no man (as the statute saith) had any thing in surety. This was a great misprission, for the which the offenders therein might be punished, either at the suit of the king by indictment, or at the suit of the party by an action upon his case. See the record concerning this matter following. Placita coram justiciariis de banco termino Trinitatis anno 19 E. 1. Rot. 57. indors.

Which remedie and punishment were thought too weak against clerks and other persons, which (committing such things) commonly were of small ability: therefore this act, considering the danger of the offence, maketh the same felony, as by the letter thereof appeareth.

(1) Si ascun * record.] A record is regularly a monument or act judiciall before a judge, or judges, in a court of record, entred in * parchment in the right roll. It is called a record, for that it recordeth or beareth witnesse of the truth, and is derived of the verb recordor, whereof the poet speaketh,

Si rite audita recordor.

It hath this foveraigne priviledge, that it is proved by no other but by itselfe. Monumenta (quæ nos recorda vocamus) funt vetustatis et veritatis vestigia. And albeit the cause adjudged be particular, yet when it is entred of record, it is of great authority in law, and serves for perpetuall evidence, and therefore ought to be common to all, yea, though—it be against the king: as it is declared by act of parliament in anno 46 E. 3. which you may reade in the preface to the third book of my reports.

(2) Breife, retorne, panel, proces, ou garr' d'attornie.] All these are sufficiently known, and yet have we treated of the same in the first part of the Institutes.

(3) En les courts le roy.] Here are expressly named four of the kings courts, viz. the chancery, the exchequer, the kings bench, and the court of common pleas, and hereunto is added the kings treasury: so as this act extendeth not to any other court or place, then is here named.

(4) Chancery.] This must be understood of the court of chancery, which proceedeth according to the course of the common law, as in case of priviledge, of scire facias upon recognizances, traverses of offices, and the like: for as to these it is a court of record, but as to the proceeding by English bill in course of equity, it is no court of record, for thereupon no writ of error lieth, as in the other cases.

(5) Ou sa treasorie.] The kings treasury is called the sauraria regir, the place where the kings treasure is kept. This treasure is twofold, viz. his money or coine: and another, that is far more precious and excellent, and those be the sacred judgements, records, and other judicial proceedings under the safe custody of the treasurer.

B. 244. d. there be ancient rolls of the treasury remaining in the towre. And therefore this act intending to include both the one, and the other, faith generally, en fa treaforie.

(6) Soit voluntarement emblee, emport, retreit, ou avoid: In the indictment upon this statute besides felovice, this word [v. lumarie] must of necessity be used, to agree with this act. Here be four words used, emblee stolne, emport carried away, retreit withdrawne, ou avoide or avoided. So as the tense is, if any record or part of it, writ, retorne, panell, proces, or warrant of attorney, &c. be stolne, carried away, withdrawn, or avoided, &c. And this word [avoided] is a large word, and doth include, rafing, or clipping, or 2 R. 3. 10. cutting off of the fide, or other part of the roll, or any other kind of avoiding the same.

(7) Per ascun clerk ou auter person.] This act doth not extend to 2 R. 3. 10. any judge of the court; both because it beginneth with a clerk. &c. and for that by the statute of 8 R. 2. a penalty is inflicted 8 R. 2. cap. 4. upon a judge, &c. for making any false entry, rasing any roll, or changing any verdict. See the statute; for it extendeth also to clerks. Only this is to be observed in that statute, that where it is faid [the king and his councell,] it is intended of the court of justice where the matter dependeth; for the judges are the kings 2 R. 3. 10. councell for judicature and proceedings according to law and iustice.

Justice Ingham paid in the raigne of E. 1. eight hundred marks 2 R. 3. 10. for a fine, for that a poore man being fined in an action of debt at thirteen shillings foure pence, the said justice moved with pity caused the roll to be rased, and made it six shillings eight

This case justice Southcot remembred, when Catlyn chiefe justice of the kings bench in the raigne of queen Elizabeth, would have ordered a rasure of a roll in the like case, which Southcot, one of the judges of that court, utterly denied to affent unto, and faid openly, that he meant not to build a clock-house: for (faid he) with the fine that Ingham paid for the like matter, the clockhouse at Westminster was builded, and furnished with a clock, which continueth to this day.

(8) A cause de quel ascun judgement soit revers.] This act extendeth only to records, whereupon judgement is given. But whether judgement be given in causes criminall at the suit of the king upon an indictment, or at the fuit of the party in an appeale, or in actions, reall, personall, or mixt, or of the like nature, this act extends thereunto, if judgement be afterwards given, and to outlawries, for there judgement is given per juaicium coronatorum. For 2 R. 3. 10. it is not materiall whether the act be done against this statute, either before or after judgement, so judgement be given.

(9) Revers] is here taken, not only where the judgement is made erroneous, and to be reverfed by writ of error. but where the judgement is so annihilated, and made voide, as it bindeth not, or may be reversed or avoided by plea. See the book in 2 R. 3. fol. 10. which expoundeth well this statute.

(10) Que tiel embleor, emporter, &c. lour procurers, counsellors et abettors, &c.] This act expressy extendeth to accessories before, and leaveth accessories after to the construction of law, yet may

And the justices of either bench have a concurrent authority, and which of them enquire first shall proceed: but if the felony be committed in another county, then where the benches fit (as for example in Surry, Hertfordshire, &c.) there the justices ought to have a commission. But if the bench fit in Middlesex, and the selony is done in London, in which case a commission is requisite, as is aforesaid. But then some have said, that by the charters of London confirmed by parliament, the major ought to be principall in the commission, and the major is none of the judges authorized by this act to heare and determine this felony, but the justices of the one bench or the other; and therefore the statute being penall, and to be taken strictly, no proceeding can be. Sed salva res est: for the charters of the city of London extend only to fuch offences committed in London, whereof the major with others by commission may enquire of, heare, and determine, and not to such offences so annexed by authority of parliament to other persons (as in this case to the justices of the one bench or the other) as the major is not warranted by the faid act to enquire, &c. And therefore a commission in this case may be made to the justices of the one bench or the other, omitting the major, ne curia regis deficeret in juftitia exhibenda.

CAP. XX.

Of Felony in such as use the Crast of Multiplication.

ONE from henceforth shall use to multiply gold or silver, 5 H. 4 a. 4. or use the crast of multiplication (1): and if any the fame doe, he shall incur the pain of felony.

This is the shortest act of parliament that we remember; before the making whereof, divers of the nobility, gentry, and others did wast and consume a great part of their inheritance, and wealth, about the art of multiplication, by the fubtile and finister perswafion of certain impostors, and deceivers, which took upon them to be skilfull therein, and to be able to multiply gold and silver, being themselves for the most part very poor and indigent persons, as whom it was said, Qudd pollicentur aliis ingentes divities, et ips petunt parvas drachmas. See Chaucer our English poet, who wrote about the time of the making of this act, in the tale of the Channons Yeoman, fo. 63. (in libro meo,) that the end of this fliding and curfed craft (so full of imposture and deceit) is extream beggery: he is worth the reading, for he discovereth the secrets of this craft, as our act tearms it.

Now seeing the end of this seigned art of multiplication is meer deceit, and tendeth to the undoing of many; at this parliament the use of this craft of multiplication is made selony. For the better understanding of that which shall be said, it is to be known, that there are fix kinds of metalls, viz. awum, argentu, es, five cuprum (quia inventum fuit in Cypro) stannum, plumbum, et ferrum. That is to say, gold, silver, copper, tynne, lead, and iron; for chalybs steel is but the harder part of iron, and wichalcum, aurichalcum, viz. lattyn or braffe, is compounded of copper and other things.

(1) The craft of multiplication.] That is, to change other metals into very gold or filver. And this they pretend to doe by a quine effence, or a fifth essence. Four essences, or elements we know, fire, aire, water, and earth, but fay they, this quint effence is a certain fubtill, and spirituall substance extracted out of things by separation from the four elements, differing really from their elsence, as aqua onta, the spirit of wine, or the like, and this is called elixar, or the philosophers stone, and it is part of alchemie, or chemie, in Latine ars chemica. The offenders therein are called multipliers, chemists, alchemists, &c. There may be access fories to this new selony, both before and after. King Henry the 88 Ros. By these letters patents this act is more explained, then by any record we have seen.

How these several kinds of metalls, as is supposed, proceed oriaginally from sulphur * and quicksilver, as from their father and mother, and other things concerning the same, you may at your leisure read in George Agricola, lib. 10. ca. 1. Encelms, li. 1.

Now let us peruse the words of this new and ill penned law.

(1) By night, or with painted faces.] That is to say, either by night, or in the day with painted faces, for that doth equall the cale of the night, in respect the offenders cannot be known, or discerned, in regard of such disguisings. And albeit the body of the act speaketh only of painted faces, yet it extendeth to visors and other disguisings, for those words are in the preamble rehearling the mischief, and the remedy must be appliable thereunto, and the last branch of this act doth make this point clear.

(2) As information shall be made, &c. of any person to be suspect. Hereby it appeareth, that a bare information without shewing just cause of suspition at the least, is not sufficient to ground a warrant according to this act, for the words be, [of any person to be sufpected.] And this act is generall, and extends to all persons of what estate or degree soever, and as well to women, as to men: for the words be [if any person] and generalia verba sunt generaliter intel-And it is necessary for him that taketh the information. to take it in writing, because it is the ground of his warrant.

(3) Of any unlawfull huntings in any forest, park, or warren.] This 21 B. 1. tit. Foact doth not extend to any chase of the king, or of any other rests, Rast, 19. person, neither doth it extend to any forests, parks, or warrens in use or reputation, and which are not forests, parks, or warrens in law. See the 1. part of the Institutes, sect. 378. what a forest, a chase, and a park, &c. is.

(4) To any of the kings councell.] This is understood of the kings privy councell; and any one will serve, but he must be dwelling in the county where such offence is committed.

(3) Or

(5) Or to any the justices of the kings peace, &c.] And likewise any one justice of the peace will serve.

(6) Warrant.] This warrant ought to be in writing under the feal of him that maketh it.

(7) Before the maker of the same warrant, or any other, &c.] So as the officer may carry the party arrested before any privy counsellor, or justice of peace within that county, and to that effect must the warrant be made.

(8) By his discretion have power to examine him or them so brought of the said hunting, and of the doers in that behalf.] So as the examination must consist upon two parts. First, of the hunting by the party himself. Secondly, of other doers in that behalf.

(9) And if the faid person wilfully conceal the said hunting, or any person with him defective therein.] This branch being in the disjunctive, if he conceal either his own offence, or of the other misdoers with him therein, the letter of this act is that it is felony, but by confiruction. upon the whole statute, it is no felony: and a hunting without killing of any game, is within the danger of this statute.

This act is to be taken strictly; for it is the first law that was made for the making of any hunting selony, against that excellent and equall branch of carta de firesta. Nullus de cætero vitam vel membra pro venatione nostra, &c. See the statutes of 21 E 1.1 E. 3. stat. 1. cap. 8. 7 R. 2. ca. 4. Westm. ca. 8. Regist. fol. 9. F. N. B. fo. 67. Vet. N. B. 41. 45 E. 3. 7. 33 H. 8. Dier. 50.

The old statutes concerning the forests are called the good old laws, and customes, and commanded to be observed; and therefore this new act of H. 7. is too severe for beasts that be fire natura, whereof there can be no felony by the common law, and that in case of the forests, parks, &c. of subjects, which never was before: and therefore the judges have made a favourable construction, as hereaster in this chapter you shall find.

(10) And if he confess the truth, and all that he shall be examined of, and knoweth in that behalf.] That is of his own guiltinesse, and of other misdoers with him, then this act makes it no selony, but trespasse sinable, as it was before: but it must be a wilfull concealment; therefore if he knew not the names of the other misdoers, or knew not whether they were there or no, it is no offence, for the concealment must be wilfull. And seeing there is no time limited by this act, and the concealment ought to be wilfull, it were reason, that the information should be made in convenient time after the fact done.

authority to do execution of justice by any such warrant by any person, the which so should be arrested, so that execution of the same warrant be not had, that then the same rescous and disobedience be felony. Here it is to be observed that the hunting being as yet no selony, the rescons could not be felony, if this branch had not been. Herein two things are to be considered; first, that it extendeth not but to the rescous, or disobessame, that is committed by the party himself, that is to be arrested, and not to any other. Secondly, that if the party rescue himself, yet if he be pursued and taken, so as execution of the warrant be had, it is no selony, as it is manifest by the letter of this branch.

they should have, as if they were convict of felony.]

Gerrard the queens attorney general (who was a grave and reverend man) said openly in the kings bench, that it had been refolved by the justices upon this statute, that if a man in the night, or by day with painted face doe hunt, &c. and being examined according to the act and concealeth it, this is (upon the construction of the whole act) no felony; for the first clause concerning concealment, and this clause which now we handle, must be coupled or iovned by construction together, viz. if any person be convict of fuch hunting with painted face, or of unlawfull hunting in the night, this conviction must be upon not guilty pleaded, which the inflices expounded to be the * concealment intended in the first branch, for they held that it ought to be a judiciall concealment, and not an extrajudiciall concealment, before one of the privy councell, or a justice of peace which may lie in averment, so as before it be felony, he must be convicted of such hunting, &c. upon not guilty pleaded first: and after such conviction then must he be indicted again, super tota materia, that he felonice did conceal, &c. against the form of the statute: and if the offender upon the first indictment confesseth the indictment, then it is such a judiciall confession as this act intendeth, and no felony within this statute. And this we heard the attorney report, and then observed it, which concurring with our own opinion we thought good to publish, and the rather for that in master Lambards book of Justice of Peace amongst his precedents of indictments an erroneous precedent of an indictment is of felony for the concealment, &c. upon examination before justices of

Of Felony for imbefiling the Kings Armour, Ordnance, &c. or Victuall, to the Value of Twenty Shillings, provided for Souldiers.

31 El. cap. 4.

BE it enacted by the authority of this present parliament, that if any person, or persons, having at any time hereafter the charge or cultody of any armour, ordnance (1), munition, thot, powder or habillements of war (2) of the queens majesties; her heirs, or successors, or of any victuals provided for the victualling of any fouldiers, gunners, mariners, or pioners, shall for any lucre, or gain, or wittingly, advisedly, and of purpose to hinder or impeach her majesties fervice, imbefill, purloin, or convey away any the same armour, ordnance, munition, thot, or powder, habillements of war, or * victualls, to the value of twenty shillings, at one or severall times: that then every such offence shall be judged felony, and the offender and offenders therein to be tried, proceeded on, and suffer as in case of selony. or ordinance anciently made, of what bore, fize, or bulk the same should be. And albeit the ordinance (that we can finde) is not extant, yet the name remaineth.

(2) Habillements of warre. Habillement is properly apparell or clothing: but in legall understanding it doth not only extend to harnesse and armour, but to all utenfils that belong to war, without which men have not ability to maintain war.

This act making a new felohy, hath five excellent provisions, Bonum eft scire worthy to be imitated in all like cases of new felonies. First, that et segui. none shall be impeached for this new felony, but within a year vid hereafter. after the offence done. Secondly, that the offender should not lose cap. of felony his lands any longer than during his life. Thirdly, this act makes not for any having any corruption of blood, but that his heire shall inherit. Fourthly, a plague fore: more special not to make the wife lole her dower. Fifthly, that fuch persons 28 provision. shall be impeached for any offence made felony by this act. shall be admitted to make any lawfull proofe a by witnesse, or otherwise a Nota. for his discharge and desence in that behalfe.

In the statute of 4 Jacobi regis, there is also a good president, 4 Jac regis viz. CAP. XXIII.

Of Felonie in such as passe the Sea to serve Forain Princes, &c. or do serve Forain Princes. &c. without taking the Oath of Obedience.

3 Tac. eap. 4.

EVERY subject of this realm (1) that shall goe or passe out of this realm to ferve (2) any foraign prince (3), state (4), or potentate (5), or shall passe over the seas, and there shall voluntarily serve (6) any such foraine prince, state, or potentate, not having before his or their going or paffing, as aforesaid, taken the oath of obedience (7) (prescribed by that act) before the customer and controller of the port, haven, or creek, or one of them, or their or either of their deputy or deputies. Thall be a felon.

Some have objected, that the going or passing out of this realm, to serve, &c. cannot be tried; for that offences done out of the realme, cannot without a speciall provision be tried within the realme. And it is a sure rule, that in criminall causes concerning life or member, ubi deliquit, ibi punietur: the offence is locall, and cannot be tried, but where it is committed, nor cannot be alleaged to be in any other place then where in truth it was done. To this it is answered, that by a latter clause in this act, this felony shall be tried in the town wherein the haven or port is, wherein he went or passed over; which clause is, And be it further enacted, that all and every offence to be committed or done against this present act, shall and may be inquired of, heard, and determined before the justices of the kings bench, justices of affize and gaole-delivery in their several assises; and all offences, other than treason, shall be inquired of, heard, and determined before the justices of peace in their quarter fessions, to be holden within the shire, division, li-See 33 H. 8. ca. mit, or liberty, where such offence shall happen. So as by the purvien and meaning of the makers of this act, this felony must be tried in the county where he went or passed over, and confequently in that town where part of the act was done. And these words and wherein such offence shall be committed must be construed in this case, where part of the offence is committed. For sic interpretandum est, ut verba accipiantur cum effectu: and by the expresse words, all and every offence to be committed or done against this present act must be inquired of, heard, and determined, &c. And therefore the felony cannot passe away with impunity, and that which is done out of the realme shall be proved to the jury in evidence. Note where a forain treason by this act is made, it is enacted to be tryed where the offender is taken.

(1) Every

(1) Every subject of this realme.] This branch extends to all persons of what estate, degree, or profession soever.

(2) To ferve.] Albeit the party did not serve, yet if the offender went or passed over to serve without taking the oath, he is in danger of this statute. And this extendeth to any kind of service, either in campe or army, or in house or otherwise.

(3) Any for aine prince.] [Princeps] Prince is here taken for the Prince person that is primus, i. e. Qui primum locum, et gradum obtinet, whether he be king, or any other that hath soveraigne authority, by what name or title soever. The word hath other significations, but not pertinent to the exposition of this act.

(4) State.] The former word [prince] includeth any, that is a monarch, or in nature of a monarch, or an absolute prince. This word [state] extends to any state, either aristocraticall, where sew be in authority, or democraticall, where the people have the chiefe government without any superiour, saving such as they elect and choose.

(6) Or shall passe, &c. and there shall voluntarily serve.] Although he went not over of purpose to serve, but upon some other occasion: yet if he after voluntarily serve any such foraine prince, state, or potentate, and have not taken the oath, he is a felon.

(7) The oath of obedience.] This is particularly set downe in the faid act.

And that if any * gentleman or person of higher degree, or any person or persons, which have borne, or shall beare any office or place of captaine, lieutenant, or any other place, charge, or office in campe, army, or company of souldiers, or conducter of souldiers, shall after goe or passe voluntarily out of this realme to serve any such foraine prince, state, or potentate, or shall voluntarily serve any such prince, state, or potentate, before he and they shall become bound by obligation with two such sureties, as shall be allowed by the officers, &c. shall be a felon.

* Vid. hereafter cap. 34. in fine. Second part of the Institutes. The statute of additions.

1 H. 5. cap. 5.

By this branch, if he be a gentleman, or of higher degree, or any fuch military man, as here is described; because he is able to do more harme, if he be so disposed, he must not only take the oath by the former branch, but he must become bound by this branch with two sureties, &c. The forme of the obligation is set downe in this act. The exposition of the former branch given light to the understanding of the residue of this clause.

There is a provifo, that no attainder of felony, made felony by this act, shall take away dower, nor make, or work, any corruption of blood, or difficult to the heire. The offenders in any of the faid cases of felony may have the benefit of their clergie.

At a parliament hoiden 4 Jacobi regis.

Upon a grievous complaint made at the parliament holden in the fourth year of our late foveraign lord king James, by the commons of the realm concerning many grievances suffered by his tub. jects in the execution of a commission granted to certain persons for getting of falt-peter, his majesties answer (amongst other things) was,

was, that he had never an intention to make any application of his Salt peter, quaprerogative therein, further then might stand with the lawfull. and fi, salis petra, necessary use thereof. And further his majesty was pleased out of materia quam his gracious care, and goodnesse to revoke and annull all commisfions, or grants made to any person or persons, for and concerning rupes, et saxa exdigging, and working of falt-peter, intending to confider of fuch a course afterwards, as the same might be made without any just terra salfuginosa cause of complaint, as by the said royall answer (amongst other stabulis animalithings) more at large appeareth. In pursuance whereof, by the um prinam ad faid kings commandment, Popham chief justice, and all the justices multos annos exof England, and barons of the exchequer, were affembled at Ser- cepit, Latine nijeants-Inne in Fleetstreet, in December, in the said fourth year, to refolve and certifie, what prerogative the king had for digging, and taking of falt-peter in the houses, buildings, or grounds of his fubjects, that thereupon a new commission might be made accordingly, who upon often conferences, and mature confideration refolved as followeth.

The other commission was generall, made unto George Evelyn, Richard Hils, and John Evelyn, and extended throughout the realms of England and Ireland, and all other the dominions of the fame, as well within our own proper lands, grounds, and possesfions, as also within the lands, grounds, and possessions of any of our subjects, with the like clause of the erection and reparation, as is aforefaid, without naming of mansion houses by expresse words, and without any prohibition to the subject to dig for falt-peter in their own buildings or grounds.

of falt-peter, was for the necessary defence, and fafety of the realm that the king had a right of purveyance of it; and should not be driven to buy it in forain parts, which forain princes might restrain, and so this realm might want sufficient for the defence thereof, to the great perill, and hazard of the same: but the king was to take it, for the necessary defence of the realm, according to the limitations hereafter expressed; and it is no prejudice to the owners of the foyl, for the place that is digged must be made up 2. again, and repaired in as good plight as it was beefore. Secondly, that this taking of falt-peter in the buildings or grounds of the subject, being a purveyance as is aforefaid, is an incident infeparable to the crown, and cannot be granted, demifed, or transferred to any other, but ought to be taken only by the kings ministers, as other purveyances ought, and cannot be converted to any other use, then for the defence and safety of the realm, for which purpose only the law doth give to the king this prerogative; and it is not like to a mine of gold or filver in the ground of the subject, for there the king hath an interest in those metals, and not purveyance only. And if the powder which is so made by the kings ministers begin to decay, as it will doe within two or three years, then this either ought to be changed for other, or fold, and the money thereof comming to be employed for powder for the defence of the realm, and the kings ministers ought to make great provision of falt-peter, for that will last a long time, and when need is to make thereof gun powder, which will be made before 3. the navy can be put in readinesse, &c. Thirdly, the ministers of the king cannot in digging for falt-peter undermine, weaken, or impair any of the walls or foundations of any of the houses of the subject, be they mansion houses, or out-houses, as barns, stables, dove-houses, mills, or the like, neither can they dig the floor of any mansion-house, which serves for the habitation of man, because his mansion is the safest place of refuge, and safety of himself and his family, as well in ficknesse, as in health, and his defence, as well in the night, as in the day, against felons, and misdoers, neither can the kings ministers dig the floor of any barn of the subject employed for the fafe keeping of corn, hay, &c. for the floor of a barn cannot be made dry, or ferviceable again in a long time, but they may dig in the floors of flables, and oxehouses, so that they leave sufficient room there for the horses, and other beasts of the owner, and so that they repair the same again in convenient time, as well as it was before. They may also dig in the floors of cellers, and vaults, so that the wine, beer, or other necessary provision of the owner be not removed, or in any fort impaired: and they may dig any mud wals, which be not the wals of any manfion house, and in the ruines and decayes of any houses which be not preserved for the 4. necessary habitation of man. Fourthly, they ought to make the places as well, and commodious for the owner, as they were be-5. fore. Fifthly, they ought not to work in the possessions of the subject, but between the rising of the sun, and the going down of the same, so as the owner may make fast the doors of his house,

6. and put it in defence against misdoers. Sixthly, they ought not to place or fix any furnace, vessell or other necessaries in any house or building of the subject, without his consent, nor so neer any mansion as he by it may receive any prejudice or disquiet.

venthly, they ought not to continue in one place above a convenient time, nor return thither but after a long time. Lastly, that the owner of the foyle cannot be restrained from digging, or taking of falt-peter, for the property thereof is in the owner of the foyl, and the king hath but the purveyance thereof, and that every man might work that would, and then there should be more plenty of powder, and at a cheaper rate. And these resolutions are agreeable with that maxime, * That the common law hath so admeafured the prerogatives of the king, that they should neither take away nor prejudice the inheritance of any. And these monopolies being malum in fe, and against the common laws, are consequently against the prerogative of the king, for * the prerogative of the king is given to him by the common law, and is part of the laws of the realm. Which resolutions were delivered in writing by Popham chief justice unto the kings privy councell, as the unanimous resolution of all the judges, and barons of the exchequer, and were by his majesties privy councell well allowed of, and approved, as Popham chief justice reported. Upon these resolutions these consequents do follow. First, if a man of his own authority. or by colour of any commission, licence, or grant, doth take upon him to take any falt peter in the buildings, or grounds of any other subject to make thereof gunpowder, in any fort to his own use. albeit he covenanteth, or agreeth to serve the king of so many lasts of powder: yet feeing it is but a purveyance, he cannot fell any powder thereof made to any of the kings subjects, or make any private benefit thereof: and if he doe, he may be indicted of digging, and taking of the falt-peter at the kings fuit, and be grievously fined and imprisoned, for that it is a grand trespas with an high Secondly, the party grieved may have his action of trefpasse, and recover damages for the trespasse, &c. according to the quality of the trespasse.

Of Felony in wandring Souldiers and Mariners.

1. A LL idle and wandring fouldiers or mariners, or idle 39 El. ca. 17. persons wandring as souldiers or mariners, shall be reputed felons, and suffer as in case of selony.

So as not only he that is a fouldier, or mariner in deed, but he that is an idle wanderer, and takes upon him to be a fouldier or mariner, though in troth he be none, is in danger of this law: for, as the preamble faith, they abuse the name of that honourable profession.

2. Every idle, and wandring fouldier or mariner, which comming from his captain from the feas, or from beyond the feas, that shall not have a testimoniall under the hand of some one justice of peace of, or neer the place where he landed, setting down therein the time and place when, and where he landed, and the place of his dwelling and birth, unto which he is to passe, and a convenient time therein limited for his passage, is by this act adjudged a felon.

3. Or if he hath fuch a testimoniall, and shall exceed the time therein limited above fourteen days, he is by this act a felon, unlesse he fall fick by the way, so as after his recovery he setleth himself in some lawfull course of life, or resort to the place where he was born, or was last abiding: but in both these two cases he must be a fouldier or mariner in deed.

4. If any fuch idle, and wandring fouldier, or mariner, or other idle person wandring as souldier or mariner, shall forge or counter-feit such testimoniall, he is by this act a selon.

5. Or if he shall have with him or them any such testimoniall forged or counterfeit, knowing the same to be counterfeit or forged, he is also by this act a felon. And in both these last cases, as well he that is a fouldier or mariner in deed, as he that is none, is in danger of this act.

And the offender against any of the articles of this statute shall not have the benefit of his clergie.

Justices of affife, justices of gaole delivery, and justices of peace, have power by this act to heare and determine the faid felonies.

But if some honest person valued in the last subsidie to ten pounds in goods, or forty shillings in lands, or some honest free-holder, as by the said justices shall be allowed, will be con-tented before such justices to take him or them into his service for one whole yeare, and will become bound by recognizance, as the statute doth appoint, then they shall not proceed any further against him, unlesse such person retained depart within the year, without the licence of him, that fo retained him; and then he is to be indicted, tried, and judged as a felon, and not to have the benefit of his clergie,

C A P. XXVI.

Of Felonie in Souldiers that depart from their Captaines without License.

HIS statute is become of little force or use: for the an- 18 H. 6. cap. 19. cient manner of retainer of fouldiers whereunto that act referreth, is utterly altered: for then knights or gentlemen expert in war, and of great revenues and livelihood in their countrey, covenanted with the king to serve him in his war for such a time with fuch a number of men: and the fouldiers made their covenant with their leaders or masters, and then they were mustered before the kings commissioners, and entred of record before them; and that was certified into the * exchequer, and thereupon they took their wages of the king, as it appeareth by many prefidents of the exchequer, and may be gathered by the preamble and body of the act, and by the Register, where it appeareth, that a writ was framed upon that statute directed to a serjeant at armes ad capiend' conductos ad proficiscend' in obsequium, &c. And this was thought an excellent military policy, that the fouldiers, (part whereof were of their own tenants) should be chosen and led by knights and gentlemen of quality of their owne countrey, with whom they must fight in war, and live withall in peace, when they returned into their countrey, in respect whereof, the fouldier would the more cheerfully and obediently follow his leader, and the leader would the more respectfully and lovingly use his souldier when he is abroad. See the ancient forme of commissions for arraying and mustering of men in 5 H.4.

By this act the benefit of clergie was not taken away from the delinquent.

The statute of 2 E. 6. cap. 2. extendeth only when the fouldier departs after that he hath ferved the king in his war; and fuch an offender shall not enjoy the benefit of his clergie.

If any foldier being no captain, immediately retained with the king, which shall be in wages and retained, or take any prest to serve the king upon the sea, or upon the land beyond the sea, depart out of the kings service without licence of his captain (1), that fuch departing be, taken, deemed, and adjudged felony. And that all the justices in every shire of England, where any such offenders be taken (2), have power to enquire of the faid offences, and the fame to hear, and determine, as they doe and may doe of felony, &c. expressed in the kings commission to them made, as though the same offences were done in the same shire; and also that the departing of fuch foldiers, and also their retainers, if it be traversed, be H 4 tried

And if the offender be taken in the county where the kings bench set, he may be indicted. &c. there: but this clause in 3 H. 8. is restrained to justices of peace. This clause in both the said statutes is cumulative, and for more speedy proceeding with the offender. But admit the offender be never taken, vet may he be indicted of felony in the county where the departure was, and if he appear not, he may be outlawed, for by the first clause, the offence is made felony, and the second clause is affirmative, and not privative,

CAP. XXVII.

Of Felony to marry a fecond Husband or Wife. the former Husband or Wife living.

F any person (1), or persons within his majesties dominions 1. Ja cap. 15. of England and Wales, being married (2), doe at any time after marry any (3) person or persons, the former husband or wife being alive, that then every such offence shall be felony, &c.

This is the first act of parliament that was made against polygamy. Polygamia est plurium finul virorum, uxorumve comubium.

The difference between bigamy, or trigamy, &c. and polygamy is, quia bigamus seu trigamus, &c. est qui diversis temporibus, et successive duas, seu tres, &c. uxores habuit. Polygamus, qui duas vel plures fimul duxit uxores.

(1) If any person.] This law is generall, and extendeth to all persons, of what estate, or degree soever.

If the man be above the age of fourteen, which is his age of See the 1. part consent, and the woman above the age of twelve, which is her age of confent, though they be within the age of one and twenty, are within the danger of this law, which appeareth by this, that this act extendeth not to a former marriage made within the age of confent, as hereafter shall appear.

Being married, &c.] This extendeth to a marriage de facto, or voydable by reason of a precontract, or of consanguinity, or of affinity, or the like: for it is a marriage in judgement of law untill it be avoided, and therefore though neither marriage be de jure, yet they are within this statute.

(3) Doe at any time marry.] This fecond marriage is meerly void, and yet it maketh the offender a felon.

And the party and parties so offending, shall receive such and the like proceeding, triall and execution in fuch county, where such person or persons shall be apprehended, as if the offence had been committed in fuch county, where fush person or persons shall be taken or apprehended.

See before the exposition of the statutes of 7 H. 7. and 3 H. 8.

Out of the generality of this law, there be five exceptions: First, it extendeth not to any person or persons, whose husband or wife be continually remaining beyond the feas, by the space of seven the doctors years together. By this branch notice is not materiall, in respect of Pains case lib. 9. the commorancy beyond fea.

Secondly, it extends not, when the husband or wife shall absent him or herfelf, the one from the other, by the space of seven years in any parts within his majesties dominions, the one of them not of the Institutes,

See 22 E. 4. Consultation. 5. The opinion of knowing the other to be living within that time. Here notice is materiall, in respect the commorance is within the realm.

* Thirdly, nor to any person or persons, that at the time of such marriage be divorced by any sentence had in the ecclesiasticall court.

There be two kinds of divorces, the one that dissolveth the marriage à vinculo matrimonii; as for precontract, confanguinity, &c. and the other à mensa et thoro; as for adultery, because that divorce by reason of adultery, cannot dissolve the marriage à vinculo matrimonii, for that the offence is after the just and lawfull marriage. This branch in respect of the generality of the words, priviledge the offender from being a selon, as well in the case of the divorce à mensa et thoro, as where it is à vinculo matrimonii, and yet in the case of the divorce à mensa et thoro, the second marriage is void, living the former wife or husband. And if there be a divorce à vinculo matrimonii, and the adverse party appeal, which is a continuance of the former marriage, and suspend the sentence, yet after such a divorce, the party marrying is no selon within this statute, in respect of the generality of this branch, although the marriage be not lawfull.

Fourthly, nor to any person or persons, where the former marriage is by sentence in the ecclesiasticall court declared to be void

Fifthly, nor to any person or persons, for or by reason of any former marriage made within age of consent: hereby it appeareth that the makers of the law intended that this act should extend to every person above the age of consent.

If the man be above fourteen, and the wife under twelve, or if the wife be above twelve, and the man under fourteen, yet may the husband or wife so above the age of consent, disagree to the espowsals, as well as the party that is under the age of consent; for the advantage of disagreement must be reciprocal. And so it was resolved by the judges and civilians, Trin. 42 Eliz. in the kings bench, in a writ of error between Babington and Warner. So as if either party be within age of consent, it is no former marriage within this act.

The offender against this statute may have the benefit of his clergy.

If he be a nobleman and lord of parliament, he shall be tried by his peers, albeit there be no provision speciall for it: for of common right, (that we may say it once for all) in case of treason, felony, and misprision of treason or of selony (as hath been said before) he is to be tried by his peers.

I find that by the ancient law of England, that if any Christian man did marry with a woman that was a Jew, or a Christian woman that married with a Jew, it was felony, and the party so offending should be burnt alive.

Of Felony for any having a Plague fore upon him, contrary to Commandment goeth abroad, &c.

IF any person insected with the plague, commanded (by 1 Jac. ca. 31. such persons as are appointed by the act) to keep house, shall contrary to fuch commandment wilfully and contemptuously goe abroad, and shall converse in company, having any infectious fore upon him uncured, such person shall be adjudged a felon.

This is felony, albeit no other person by such means be infected, Levit. cap. 12. for this statute was made to prevent the most horrid and searfull Numb. cap. 5. infection of the plague. The law was generall, and extended to all estates and degrees whatsoever, and was grounded upon the proso amovende law of God: and the reason of the law of the realme is, that the Brack lib. 5. infectious fick should be removed from the whole. The party of- f. 421. a. fending might have had the benefit of his clergy.

Here is a rare proviso, That no attainder of selony by vertue of Fleta, li. 6. ca. is act, shall extend to any attainder of selony by vertue of Fleta, li. 6. ca. this act, shall extend to any attainder, or corruption of blood, or Rot. Claus. forfeiture of goods, chattels, lands, tenements, or heredita-parte, nu. 14.

In this proviso these things are to be observed: first, that by the avoyding of the corruption of blood, the wives dower is impliedly faved: for where the heir shall inherit, the wife shall be endowed against the heir. Secondly, that there shall be * no for- * Nota. feiture of goods, or chattels, which is rare, and the like we have not observed before, and by consequent the offender may make his will and testament, and if he doe not, the ordinary ought to grant administration of the goods and chattels, as he ought to doe in other cases.

These words [to any attainder or] must be omitted, and the fense to be, to any corruption of blood, for (as it is printed) it is, that no attainder of felony shall extend to any attainder, &c.

This act is become of no force for want of continuance, and is expired fince we wrote this chapter, therefore to be put out of the charge of the justices of peace.

Before the making of this statute, if a jayler had by dures of imprisonment made his prisoner become an approver, to appeal honest men for his own private, of intent to have of their goods, when they were committed to his custody, and to retain them in prison without being let to mainprise, and the appellees upon his appeal be hanged: this is felony in the jayler by the common law: but if the appellees were acquitted, then it was no felony, but a great misprission in the jayler, which was one of the causes of the making of this act: for by this act, if the prisoner become an approver against his will, whether the appellees be acquited, or attainted, or after the approvement not proceeded with, and whether the approvement be true or false, so it be by dures of imprisonment, and against the will of the prisoner, it is felony. is not lawfull for any man to excite or stir any other to a just accufation, complaint or lawfull fuit, for culpa est se immiscere rei ad se non pertinenti; (and so was a it resolved Mich. 7. And they were called blanks or whites in respect of the colour, because at the same time he coyned also a salus in gold, the salus, being of the value of twenty two shillings, was of the allay of sterling: but the blanks, which were much more common, being each of them valued at eight pence, were not of the allay of sterling, and therefore they only were decried by the faid act of 2 H. 6.

By the expresse letter of the body of this law, the forfeiture of life and member is ousted de tout in the statute: therefore it is holden, that the felony is taken away throughout the statute, but the forfeiture of lands and goods remaineth by the expresse letter of this act.

C A P. XXXIV.

Of Felony for stealing of a Faulcon.

FVERY person (1) that findeth (2) any falcon (3), tercelet (4), lannner, or laneret (5), or any other falcon, that is lost of his lords (6), that forthwith he shall bring it to the sherif of the county, and that the sherif make proclamation (7), &c. and if any steal any hawk (8), and the same carry away not doing the ordinance aforefaid, it shall be done of him as of a thief that stealeth a horse (9) or other thing.

The statute of 34 E. 3. inflicted the penalty for the concealing 34 E. 3. cap. 22. and taking away of the hawk, two years imprisonment, and the price of the hawk to the lord, if he hath wherewith, and if not, he shall the longer abide in prison. This act of 37 E. 3. maketh the offence felony.

The new printed book of the statutes at large, in stead of these Printed for the words, (or any other falcon) hath, or any other hawk.

I have feen fome manuscripts (in these words) in the original tongue, wherein the statute was published. Que quecunque person que trove faucon, tercelet, lanier, ou langret, austor ou auter faucon. And both these differ from the truth of this law. For the first extendeth this act to any hawk whatfoever. And the manuscript to auffor or autor, a goshawk, whereas in truth, this law extendeth only to such verb. Personall as be of the kinde of faulcons, being long winged hawks, which goods, &c. many times by flying far off are loft, and not to any short-winged hawk, as the goshawk, the tercel of the goshawk, the sparhawk, &c. And in the body of the act this word (faulcon) is ever used, and not this word (hawk) as hereafter appeareth. We would have been glad to have cleared this point by the record of the parliament roll, but the roll of this act is not to be found, and yet be- Lib. 8. fo. 27, ing a generall law, the judges are to take notice thereof: and that 28. In casu which I have fet down, as the words of the law, agreeth with the principis. first impression thereof, and with all succeeding impressions saving the laft.

(1) Every person. This is a generall law, and extendeth to all persons of what degree or sex soever.

(2) That findeth.] Note by the common law the felonious taking of any hawk long-winged, or short-winged, from the peark, &c. or from the person of any man, with a mind to steal her, is robbery: but the finding of a faulcon, though he concealed, denied, or fold her, was no felony, but by this act.

(3) Any faulcon.] By this and the last words, or any other faulcon, it appeareth that only faulcons are within this law, as besides those that are here named, the gerfaulcon, girofalco, or ardearius, and the tercell, which is called a jerkin; and the lanner is called falcunculus. But the merlyn, which is called a falo, and the hobby which is called alaudaria, though they be long-winged hawks, yet being not of the kind of faulcons they are not within this statute, neither is any short-winged hawk, as the goshawk, the tercell of the goshawk, or the sparhawk, &c. as has been said, within. this act.

(4) Tercelet.] This is the tercell of the faulcon, called a tercell gentill, the male of the faulcon called terciolus, quia tertia parte minor sit femella, because the tercell is a third part lesse then the female.

(5) Lanner and laneret.] These (as hath been said) are of the kind of faulcons, which appeareth not only by the name falcunculus, but by the words of the act, for having named the lanner and laneret, it is faid, or any other faulcon.

Albeit these hawks, that shall be so lost, have no vervels, yet fociety of fationers, 1618.

See hereafter. cap, Larceny, must the finder carry them to the sherif, for vervels are not required by this act. The only thing that the finder is to doe, to save himself from selony, is forthwith (the word in the originall is maintenant) after his finding to carry the hawk to the sherif.

(6) That is lost of his lords.] Lords are taken here for the owners, the word in the original is feignion, which fignifieth as well a proprietary, as a lord.

10 E. 4. 1. 7 R. 2. barre 241. Lib. 5. fo. 103. Sir Hen. Couftables cafe. (7) To prove reasonably.] This is not intended according to the generall sense of this word (proof) that is, by a jury of twelve men, but (reasonably,) that is, by vervels, or by marks, or by other proof to the sherif.

(8) And if any fleal any hawk, &c.] The concealing and carrying away of the hawk, not bringing the same to the sherif according to this ordinance, is adjudged a stealing by this act. And yet if a man finde goods, and conceal or deny them, it is no felony.

(9) As of a thief that stealeth a horse.] But yet by the common law one hath not as good and absolute a property in hawks, being feræ natura, and reclaimed for delight and pleasure (for they may become wild again, and return to their naturall liberty) as in a horse, or any other thing of profit: but the concealing and carrying away of the hawk reclaimed, being sound was no felony before this statute, no more then any thing of profit, because the party came to the hawk by finding. See more hereof in the chapter of larceny. A hawk that is not reclaimed is nullius in bonis, but occupanti conceditur, and he that first getteth the hawk enjoyeth it.

In this act four things are to be observed. First, that the sherif must make proclamation in all the good towns of the county that he hath such a faulcon in keeping. Secondly, if none come to challenge the faulcon within four months, if the finder be under the degree * of a gentleman (which here is called un simple home) the sherif shall have the falcon, paying reasonable costs, &c. Thirdly, if the finder be a gentleman, and no challenge by the owner within four months, then he shall have the faulcon, paying reasonable costs, &c. Fourthly, it is to be observed, that in these two latter branches, the last printed book hath this word (hawk:) but in the originall, and all the other printed books, the word is (falcon) under which word, all the rest mentioned in this act are included.

For this offence of felony the offender shall have the benefit of his clergy, for at the time of the making of this act he that had stoln a horse should have had his clergy. See Stanf. Pl. Coron. so. 37.

So as provisions, &c. were, as by these writs it appeareth, against the common law of the realm, but sufficient punishment was not thereby inslicted: therefore this, and other statutes were made.

And here it is worthy of confideration, how the laws of England are not derived from any forain law, either cannon, civil, or other, but a special law appropriated to this kingdome, and most accommodate and apt for the good government thereof, under which it hath wonderfully flourished, when this law hath been put in due execution: and therefore as by situation, so by law it is truly said,

22 H. 8. ca. 11. 2 & 3 Ph. and Mar. cap. 19.

EVERY perverse and malitious cutting down and breaking up of any part of the new dike called the Powdike in Marshland in the county of Norss. or of the broken dike called Oldfield Dike by Marshland in the Isle of Ely in the county of Cambridge, or of any other bank being parcell of the Rinde, and uttermost part of the faid country is adjudged felony.

The justices of peace have power to enquire of, and to hear and determine this felony. The offender may have the benefit of his

Some say that this is a private act, but it is publicum in private, for the danger is publike though the place be private, and doth concern multitudes of people, and the sea is such an immense creature, as who can withstand it without length of time, infinite dammage,

Of one of the Grand Enquest being one of the Indictors of any Person or Persons of Treason or Felony, and discover openly what Persons were so indicted. &c.

THIS by fome opinion in our books was holden for treason, or felony, and hereof divers reasons were yeelded.

First, that such discovery was against his oath, but that could not be the reason, for perjury was neither treason nor felony.

Secondly, others did hold, that by this discovery the parties indicted of treason or felony might flee, or escape, but that can be no reason; reason; for this discovery without more, can neither make him principall nor accessory.

Thirdly, others that endeavour to confesse and avoid the autho- 18 E. 3. Georges criminalibus voluntas reputabatur pro facto, and that by this open discovery, &c. his intent appeared, that they might flee or escape. And now it is agreed on all parts, that at this day fuch discovery is neither treason nor felony: and the rather, for that no person ever died for fuch discovery. In Georges case, in anno 27 lib. C A P. XLVII.

Of Larceny or Theft by the Common Law.

HAVING thus far proceeded, we are now come to larceny, which commeth from latrocinium, and from latrocinie, by contraction, or rather abuse, to larceny.

The Mirror first describeth larceny, and then explaineth it. Lar- Mirror, cap. 1. eine est prise d'autre moeble corporelle trecherousment contre la volunt de § 10. De Lasceluy a q. il est p. male egaigne de la possession, ou del use. Then doth cenie. he explaine and shew the reason of the principal words thereof.

Prise est dit, car baile nest my title de laroun, ne livery en le case. Moeble corporelle est dit pur ceo q. en biens nient moebles, ou nient corporels, sicome de tre', rents, et des advorvsons de esglises, ne se fait nul lar cenie.

Trecherousment est dit pur ceo q. si lesloignour entende les biens estre fiens, et que il les poet bien prender, en tiel case ne se fait my ceste peche, nec en case ou len prent l'autrui p. la ou len entend, que il pleist al seigniour des biens, que il les prendera, mes a ceo covient enseigner apparant presumption et evidence.

Et sciendum, quod furtum est, secundum leges, contrectatio rei alienæ Bracton, lib. 3. fraudulenta, cum animo surandi, invito illo domino, cujus res illa suerat, sol. 150. And then he also explaineth it. Cum animo dico, quia fine animo furandi non committitur. Bracton useth not the word latrocinium, but furtum, and so doth Granvile. See Britton a whole chapter de Lar-And Fleta hath it thus, Est autem furtum contrectatio rei alienæ fraudulenta cum animo furandi invito dno cujus res illa fuerit, following Bracton totidem verbis. These descriptions are generally of cyns. f thest, comprehending robbery, burglary, when any thing is taken, Fleta, and all other latrocinies. But here larceny for distinction sake is ca. 36. taken in a narrower sense, viz. for single thest or thievery, and may be described thus.

Larceny, by the common law, is the felonious and fraudulent Larceniedefined. taking and carrying away by any man or woman, of the meere personall goods of another, neither from the person, nor by night in the house of the owner.

Glanvil. lib.7. c. 17. & lib. 10. cap. 15. Britton. cap. 15. de Larcyns. fo. 22. Fleta, lib. 1.

Now

Now let us peruse the principall parts of this description.

See tit. Piracv. Butlers cafe. 28 Elie.

Felonious taking. First it must be selonious, id est, cum anima furandi, as hath been faid. Actus non facit reum, nife mens fit rea. And this intent to steale must be when it cometh to his hands or possessions: for if he hath the possession of it once lawfully, though he hath animum furandi afterward, and carrieth it away, it is no larceny: but this receiveth fome distinction, as hereafter thall appeare.

Secondly, it must be an actuall taking: for an indictment, quad felonice abduxit equum, is not good, because it wanteth, cepit. taking, and not bailment or delivery, for that is a receipt, and not a taking: and therewith agreeth Glanvil. Furtum non est ubi initium habet detentionis per dominum rei.

Glanvil, lib. 10. cap. 13. 13 E. 4. 9.

But herein the law doth distinguish. For if a bale or pack of merchandize be delivered to carry to one to a certaine place, and he goeth away with the whole pack, this is no felony: but if he open the pack, and take any thing out animo furandi, this is larceny. wife if the carrier carry it to the place appointed, and after take the whole pack animo furandi, this is larceny also: for the delivery had taken his effect, and the privity of the bailement is determined. And so it is of a tun of wine, or the like, mutatis mutandis.

Charge.

3 H. 7. 12. 21 H. 7. 15.

Also there is a diversity betweene a possession, and a charge; for when I deliver goods to a man, he hath the possession of the goods, and may have an action of trespasse, or an appeale, if they be taken or stolne out of his possession. But my butler or cook, that in my house hath charge of my vessel or plate, hath no possession of them. nor shall have an action of trespasse or an appeale, as the bailer shall: and therefore if they steale the plate or vessel, it is larceny. And so it is of a shepherd, for these things be in onere, et non in pos-Sessione promi, coci, pastoris, &c.

13 E. 4. 9. Speciall use.

If a taverner fet a piece of plate before a man to drink in it, and he carry it away, &c. this is larceny: for it is no bailement, but a speciall use to a speciall purpose.

22 Aff. pl. 99. 22 E. 3. cor. 265.

Thirdly, nor by trover or finding. If one lose his goods, and another finde them, though he convert them, animo furandi, to his own use, yet is it no larceny, for the first taking is lawfull. one finde treasure trove, or waife, or stray, and convert them ut fupra, it is no larceny, both in respect of the finding, and also for that dominus rerum non apparet.

See cap. de Treason. Verb. quant. home, &с. Et cap. Murder. 27 Aff. 40. 2 E. 3. cor. 160. Lex Inæ cap. 50. accord. Stanf. 26. c. 15 E. 2. Cor. 383. Mic. 37 E. 3. coram rege. Rot.

Felonious implyeth, that though the taking be actuall, yet must it be done by fuch persons as may commit felony. A mad man that is non compos mentis, or an infant that is under the age of discretion, cannot commit larceny, as in another place we have faid.

A feme covert committeth not larceny, if it be done by the coertion of her husband: but a feme covert may commit larceny, if she doth it without the coertion of her husband: and there it appeareth, that a man may be accessary to his wife, but the wife cannot be accessary to her husband, though she know that he committed larceny, and relieve him, and discover it not: for by the law divine, the is not bound to discover the offence of her husband.

Felons came to the house of Richard Dev, and Margery his wife: the wife knew them to be felons, but the husband did not, and both of them received them, and entertained them, but the wife consented not to the felony. And it was adjudged, that this' made not the wife accessary, Quia ipsa in vita mariti sui de aliquo re-

Felonious and fraudulent taking. If a man feeing the horse of B. in his pasture, and having a minde to steale him commeth to the sheriffe, and pretending the horse to be his, obtaineth the horse to be delivered unto him by a replevyn, yet this is a felonious and fraudulent taking, as it was refolved by the judges, as Catlin chiefe justice reported in the kings bench, Pasch. 15 Eliz. for the Replevyn Pasch. 15 Eliz.

Carrying away.] For the indictment faith, felonice cepit et aspor-The removing of the things taken, though he carry not 22 Aff. pl. 39. them quite away, satisfieth this word asportavit. As if a guest take the coverlet or sheets of his bed, and rising before day, take the coverlet or sheets out of the chamber, where he lay, into the hall, to the intent to steal them, and went to the stable to fetch his horse, and the oftler apprehended him, and this was adjudged larceny: and the coverlet or sheets were carried away being removed from the chamber to the hall, albeit they were still in the house of the out of the close, yet this is sufficient to make it larceny.

Of mere personall goods.] It is said (mere) for though they be personall goods, yet if they savour any thing of the realty, no larceny can be committed of them; as any kind of corn or grain growing upon the ground is a personall chattell, and the executors of the owner shall have them, though they be not severed, but yet no larceny can be committed of them, because they are annexed to the realty. So it is of grasse standing on the ground, or of apples, or 12 E 32 Cor. any other fruits upon trees, or bushes, or of woods growing; but if 199. 22 E. 3. the owner cut the grasse, or gather the fruit, or cut the wood, then Ibid. 256. larceny may be committed of them.

A man hath a mere property in some things that are tame by nature, and yet in respect of the baseness of their nature, a man shall not commit any larceny, great or small, though he steal them, as of mastifs, bloud hounds, or of other kind, dogs or of cats, nor of some things that be wild by nature, and made tame, as bears, foxes, apes, monkies, polcats, ferrets, and the like, and yet no manner of felony can be committed on them, in respect of their wild and savage nature, and therefore no person shall die for them: and likewise it is of their whelps, or calves, or young; for it is a rule in law, that if no felony can be committed of any thing that is ferum natura, and of age being reclaimed, or made tame, that no felony can be of the young in the nest, kennell or den.

b So as a man may have property in many things, and yet in respect of their nature there can be no selony of them. On the other side, of some things that be feræ natura, being reclaimed, selony may be committed in respect of their noble and generous nature and courage, serving ob vitæ solatium of princes, and of noble, and generous persons, to make them sitter for great employments: As all kind of saulcons, and other hawks, if the party, that steals them know they be reclaimed.

Of another.] • No larceny can be committed of wild beafts, or of fowls that be wild, or of fishes that be at their naturall liberty in rivers, or great waters, because these be nullius in bonis: but larceny may be committed of young pigeons in dovehouses, or of young hawks in the nest. But if any person upon the ground of any other, doe take the egs of any faulcon, goshawk, lanner, or swan out of the nest, this is not felony, d but he shall be imprisoned by the space of a year and a day, and fined at the kings will, the one half to the king, and the other to the owner of the ground. But larceny may be committed of the egs of such as be domite natura, as of hens, turkies, pehens, and the like. And larceny may be committed of sisses in a trunk or pond, because they are not at their naturall liberty, but as it were beasts in a pownd.

b But if fuch as be wild, that ferve for the food of man, be made tame, as deer, wild bore, conies, cranes, phesant, partridge, or the like, larceny may be committed of them, so as he that stealeth them know that they be tame. But the deer, &c. being wild, yet when he is killed larceny may be committed of the stess, and so of phesant, partridge, or the like: and so note a diversity between such beasts as be feræ natura, and being made tame, serve for pleafure only, and such as be made tame and serve for food, &c. which diversity being not observed, hath made many men to erre.

The offenders not to be admitted to have the benefit of clergy.

The mischief before this statute was (as it appeareth by the preamble) that traitors, pirates (1), thiefs, robbers, murderers, and confederators upon the sea many times escaped unpunished, because the common law of this realm extended not to these offences, but were judged, and determined before the admirall, & c. after the course of the civil laws, the nature whereof is, that before any judgement of death be given against the offenders, either they must plainly confesse their offences (which they never will do without torture or pains)

Where divers did in the reign of the late queen Elizabeth commit piracy and robbery upon the high sea, of divers merchants of Venice, in amity with the faid queen, and after the pirats, being not known, obtained a pardon, granted at the coronation of king James, whereby the king pardoned them all felonies (inter alia) First, that before this statute piracy, or robbery on the high sea was no felony, whereof the common law took any knowledge, for that it could not be tried, being out of all towns and counties, but was only punishable by the civil law, as by the preamble it appeareth; the attainder by which law wrought no forfeiture of lands, or corruption of bloud. Secondly, that this statute did not alter the offence, or make the offence felony, but leaveth the offence as it was before this act, viz. felony only by the civil law, but giveth a mean of triall by the common law, and inflicteth fuch pains of death, as if they had been attainted of any felony, &c. done upon the land. But yet (as hath been faid) the offence is not altered, for in the indictment upon this statute, the offence must be alledged upon the fea; fo as this act inflicteth punishment for that, which is a felony by the civill law, and no felony, whereof the common law taketh knowledge. Thirdly, although the king may pardon this offence, Vide fimilia, yet being no felony in the eye of the law of the realm, but only 19 E. 3. Upon this resolution these consequents do follow. 1. That by the attainder upon this act, though there be forfeiture of lands, and goods, yet there is no corruption of blood. 2. Seeing the offence is not made felony by the laws of this realm, there can be no accesfory of any felony by the laws of the realm in this case, either before or after the offence, because the principall is no sclon by our law, neither doth this act speak of any accessory. 3. If there be an accessory upon the sea to a piracy, that accessory may be punished by the civill law before the lord admirall, but cannot be punished by this act, because it extendeth not to accessories, nor makes the offence felony. * Lastly, the statute of 35 H. 8. ca. 2. taketh * See the fourth not away this statute for treasons done upon the sea for the cause part of the Insti-Which resolution I have thought good to report, because it openeth the windows of this statute.

Anno 28 Eliz. Butlers case. accessory offended, and there both the principall and the accessory may be indicted, and tried, ut per flatutum, anno 5 & 6 E. 6. quære. Hæc * ille. So as this quære is now cleared by the resolution of the judges: and questionlesse the statute (intended of 2 & 3 E. 6. for there is none such in 5 & 6 E. 6.) extendeth only, when a murder or felony is committed in one countie, and another person is accessorie in another countie (as hath been said before:) but in that case the offence was committed upon the sea, and not in any countie, and so out of that statute: and therefore this part of the manuscript of the lord Dier was not thought sit to be printed.

Butler and other pirats in fummer vacation robbed divers of her majesties subjects, upon the coast of Northfolk, upon the high sea; and brought divers of the goods so taken into the county of Northfolke, and there were apprehended with the goods: The question moved to Wray chiefe justice, and justice Peryam, justices of assis in Northfolk, was, whether they might be indicted of selony in Northfolk, as if one steale goods in one county and carry them into another county, he may be indicted in either county and it was resolved by them, that they could not be indicted for selony in Northfolk; because the originall taking was no felony, whereof the common law took conusance, because it was done upon the sea; out of the reach of the common law: and therefore not like the case, where one stealeth in one county and carrieth the goods into another, for there the originall act was felony where of the law took conusance.

But now let us peruse the words of the statute:

(1) Where traytors, pirats.] This word pirat, in Latine pirata, is derived from the Greek word σειράτης, which againe is fetched from πειράι, à transeundo mare, of roving upon the sea: and therefore in English, a pirat is called a rover and a robber upon the sea.

(2) Treason, &c.] Note, treason done out of the realme, is declared to be treason by the statute of 25 E. 3. and yet at the making of this act of 28 H. 8. it wanted triall, (as by the preamble of this statute it is rehearsed) at the common law. And therefore to establish a certainty therein, the statute of 35 H. 8. was made, as is aforesaid in the exposition of the statute of 25 E. 3. See Pasch.

Before the statute of 25 E. 3. if a subject had committed piracie upon another (for so is the book to be intended upon a sact done before 25 E. 3.) this was holden to be petit treason, for which he was to be drawne and hanged: because pirata of hossis humani gentris, and it was rontra ligeancia sua debitum: but if an alien, as one of the Normans, who had revolted in the reigne of king John, had committed piracy upon a subject, this offence could be no treason, for though he were hossis humani generit, yet the crime was not contra ligeancia sua debitum, because the offender was no subject, but since the statute of 25 E. 3. this is no treason in the case of a subject.

(3) Upon the sea, or in any other haven, river, creek, or other place, where the admirall hath, or pretends to have power, authority, or jurif-distion.] These words [or pretends to have, &c.] are thus to be understood, between the high-water-mark, and the low-watermark; for though the land be infra corpus comitatus, at the reslow; yet

yet when the sea is full, the admirall hath jurisdiction super aquam as long as the sea flowes: so as of one place there is divi/um imperium at severall times: but extend not to any haven, river, creek, or other place, that is infra corpus comitatus: for offences there committed were triable by the common law, and out of the mischiese and purvien of this statute: for in the preamble, the sea is only mentioned, and in the body of the act it is said, in like forme and condition, as if any fuch offence had been committed upon the

(4) As shall be named by the lord chancellor of England. A nomination by the lord keeper of the great feale of England was taken to be within this act by the greater opinion of the justices: but the statute of 5 Eliz. hath made a declaration of the common law concerning the power and authority of the lord keeper of the great feale, which hath cleared that, and all other like questions.

(5) To heare and determine such offences after the common course of the lawes of this land used for treasons, felonies, &c. done and committed upon the land.] If the offender upon his arraignment before com- alias Cobham, missioners by force of this statute stand mute, he shall have judgement de peyne fort et dure, by force of this generall branch, but it is out of the latter words of the act, viz. and fuch as shall be convict of any fuch offence by verdict, confession, or proces. that standeth mute is not convict of the offence, but suffereth for his contumacy. Also it is neither by verdict, confession, or proces.

The foundation of the abjuration was the fanctuary of the church or church-vard. For he or she, that was not capable of this fanctuary, could not have the benefit of abjuration. And therefore it is faid, that he that committed facriledge, because he could not take the priviledge of fanctuary, could not abjure. For the forme of abjuration see the statute of abjuration, Vet. Magna Carta, part 1. fol. 167. b. The b common law herein was very ancient, and had faved the life of many a man; and continued without change untill an act made in the twenty second year of H. 8. cap. 14. whereby it was provided, that the party abjured should not be banished out of the realm, but to some other sanctuary within this kingdom: and to fay the troth, abjuration was exceedingly intricated and perplexed by the faid act of 22 H. 8. cap. 14. and other statutes: for which causes all statutes made before the thirty fifth yeare of queen Elizabeth, concerning abjured persons, stand repealed by the statute of 1 Jac. cap. 25. whereby the ancient common law concerning abjuration for felony was revived.

4 But by an act made in the twenty first year of king James it is enacted, that no fanctuary or priviledge of fanctuary should be admitted or allowed in any case. By which act, such abjuration as was at the common law, founded (as hath been faid) upon the priviledge of fanctuary, is wholly taken away: and the writ in the Register 69. a. De restitutione extracti ab ecclesia is become of

And yet the abjuration by force of the statute of 35 Eliz. ca. 1. before justices * of peace, or justices of affize, or by force of an act made at the same parliament, cap. 2. before two justices of peace or the coroner by a recusant, remaineth still; because such abjuration hath no dependancie upon any fanctuary. Which being sufficient to show how the law standeth at this day, both concerning fanctuary and abjuration, might fuffice.

CAP. LII.

De Huteho et Clamore.

Of HUE and CRY.

HE one being an expression of the other. For huer in French (unde hutefium) is to hoot or shoute: in English to crie. There be two kindes of hues and cries, the one by the common law, and the other by statute. Thereupon there are two purfuits, the one for the king, the other for the party by private fuit.

Hue and cry by the common law, or for the king, is, when any felony is committed, or any person grievously and dangerously wounded, or any person assaulted and offered to be robbed either in the day or night; the party grieved, or any other may refort to the a constable of the town, and acquaint him with the causes, describing the party, and telling which way the offender is gone, and require him to raife hue and cry. And the duty of the constable is, to raise the power of the towne, b as well in the night as in the day, for the profecution of the offender, and if he be not found there, to give the next constable warning, and he the next, untill the offender be found, and this was the law before the conquest. e Si quis latroni obviam dederit eumque nullo edito clamore abire permiserit, quanticunque fuerit latronis vita æstimata extremum solvat denariolum, aut pleno, perfectoque jurejurando de facinore se nihil habuisse cogniti confirmato. Sin quis proclamantem exaudierit, neque vero fuerit insequutus, suæ in regem contumaciæ (ni omnem criminis suspicionem diluerit) pænas dato.

In antiquo M. S. si quis furi obviaverit, et sine vociferatione gratis eum dimisit, emendet secundum weram ipsus furis, vel plena lada se adlegiet, quòd cum eo falsum nescivit: si quis audito clamore supersedit, reddat over/amessa regis aut plene se laidiet. And so note a diversity between a hue and cry at the common law, or for the king, and a hue and cry by statute where the party grieved is to have his remedy by private action. Note also a diversity in the prosecution at the common law, or for the king, and by the statutes which give the party remedy, for a profecution to the next constable is good by the common law, but so it is not by the said statutes which give the party grieved his action. FIRST because it is shewed to our lord the king by the grievous and clamorous complaints of the great men and commons aforesaid, how that divers of the people be, and have been drawne out of the realme to answer of things, whereof the cognisance pertaineth to the kings court: and also that the judgements given in the said court be impeached in another court in prejudice and disherison of our lord the king, and of his crowne, and of all the people of his faid realme; and to the undoing and destruction of the common law of the same realme at all times used. Whereupon, upon good deliberation had with the great men and other of his faid councell, it is affented and accorded by our lord the king, and the great men and commons aforesaid, that all the people of the kings ligeance, of what condition that they be, which shall draw any out of the realme in plea, whereof the cognisance pertaineth to the kings court, or of things whereof judgement is given in the kings court, or which doe fue in any other court to defeat or impeach the judgements given in the kings court, shall have day, &c.

The effect of the statute of 16 R. 2. is, if any pursue or cause 16 R. 2. cap. 5. to be purfued in the court of Rome, or elsewhere, any thing which toucheth the king, against him, his crowne and regality, or of the kings protection.

Fourth part of the Institutes, ca. 8. artic, 1. Die D. cemb. anno 21 H. 8. against cardinall Woo!fey. Vet, N. B. 143, • In this act is declared the soveraignty, prerogative, and freedome of the crowne of England, and the first article exhibited by the lords of the councell, (whereof sir Thomas More chancellor was one) and the principall judges concerning this matter, is worth your reading.

This offence is called a premunire of the words of the writ, grounded upon this and other statutes for punishment thereof. For the words of the writ be, Rex vicecomiti, &c. Pramunire fac. A. B. &c. And rightly it is so called, for he that is pramonitus is træmunitus.

Before the making of this statute of 27 E. 3. there were three great mischiefs. First, that the kings subjects have been drawn out of the realme, to the answer of things, whereof the conusance pertained to the kings court. Secondly, of things whereof judgements have been given in the kings courts. And thirdly, that after judgements given in the kings courts of the common law, of matters determinable by the common law, suits were commenced in other courts within the realme, to defeat or impeach those judgements. And these three mischiefs had three unsufferable effects: first, the prejudice and disherison of the king and of his crowne. Secondly, the disherison of all his subjects. And thirdly, the undoing and destruction of the common law of this realm: all which appeare in the preamble of this act.

They are called (other courts,) either because they proceed by the rules of other lawes, as by the canon or civill law, &c. or by other trials, then the common law doth warrant. For the triall warranted by the law of England for matters of fact, is by verdict of twelve men before the judges of the common law of matters pertaining to the common law; and not upon examination of witnesses in any court of equity: so as alia curia, is either that which is governed per aliam legem, or which draweth the party ad aliud examen. For if the freehold and inheritances, goods, and chattels, debts, and duties, wherein the king or subject hath right or property by the common law, should be judged per aliam legem, or be drawne ad aliud examen, the three mischiess aforesaid expressed in the preamble and in this act should follow, viz. disherison of the king and of his crowne, the disherison of all his people, and the undoing and destruction of the common law at all times used: by which words of this act it appeareth, that all these mischiefs were against the ancient common lawes at all times used. that also appeareth by the ancient writs of the common law, called ad jura regia, whereof some touch hath been given before, and which are worthy the reading: and also by divers acts of parliament; as the statute of Carlile, anno 35 E, 1. whereof we have treated before in the second part of the Institutes: and by the statute of 25 E. 3. De provisoribus. And it is observed, that in 29 E. 3. within two yeares after the said act of 27 E. 3. that they that were called in question upon the statute of premunire, invenerunt manucaptores sufficientes, et sacramentum præstiterunt, quòd non attemptabunt, citra mare vel ultra, qued in præjudicium regis, legum, seu corona, seu judiciorum in curia regis reddit', tendere valeat quoquo modo, Gc. judgements ought not to be questioned citra mare, in any court, unlesse it be according to the course of the lawes of the realme.

By the statute of 4 H. 4. cap. 23. it is ordained and stablished, 4 H. 4. ca. 23. that after judgement given in the courts of our lord the king, the parties and their heirs shall be thereof in peace, untill the judgement be undone by attaint, or by error, if there be error, as hath been used by the lawes in the times of the kings progenitors.

Also that which hath been said appeareth by our books and ancient records, as hereafter shall appeare.

And so it is of the constable and marshall, if they hold plea of a matter determinable by the common law.

Isabel Winnington exhibited a bill of premunire against William Powdich upon the statute of 16 R. 2. cap. 5. for suing in the admirall court before John earle of Huntington, admirall of Raft. pl. 23. England, for a cause which belonged to the common law, whereunto the defendant pleaded not guilty.

And the reason of all these cases is, because they draw matters triable by the common law, ad aliud examen, and to be discussed per aliam legem.

But some have made a question, whether since the ecclesiasticall jurisdiction was acknowledged to be in the crowne, an ecclesiasticall judge holding plea of a temporall matter belonging to the common law, doth incurre the danger of a premunire. Though hereof there is no question at all, yet lest any man might be led into an errour in a case so dangerous, we will clear this point by reason, prefident

In 25 H. 8. Richard Nick bishop of Norwich was attainted in a premunire at the kings suit, and his case was this. towne of Thetford there then was a custome, that all ecclesiasticall causes arising within the said towne should be determined before the deane there, having a peculiar ecclesiasticall jurisdiction, and that no inhabitant of the same town should be drawn before any other ecclefiasticall judge, and that every person suing contrary to that custome, the same being presented before the major of Thetford, should forfeit six shillings eight pence; and that an inhabitant of Thetford for an ecclefiastical cause rising within Thetford, fued another before the bishop of Norwich within his confistory court at Norwich: and this was presented before the major of Thetford according to the custome, whereby he forfeited six shillings eight pence. The said bishop cited the said major for taking of the faid presentment pro salute animæ to appear before him at his house at Hoxon in Suffolke, where the major appeared, and there the bishop ore tenus injoyned him, upon pain of excommunication to adnull the faid prefentment before a day. And for this offence he was attainted in a premunire upon his confession before Fitz James chief justice, and the court of kings bench, upon the statute of 16 R. 2. the record whereof we have seen. which judgement two points are cleared; first, that the statute of premunire extends to ecclefiafticall courts within the realme. Secondly, that after the king was in possession of his supremacy, the bishops incurred the danger of premunire.

doth concerne matter of premunire, but that so much of that which concerneth any matter or cause of premunire, should stand in force and effect. And that clause of the statute of 1 and 2 Ph. and Mar. is this. That who oever shall by any proces obtained out of any ecclefiasticall court, within the realme or without, by pretence of any spirituall jurisdiction, or otherwise, contrary to the lawes of the realme, inquiet or molest any person, &c. for any mannors, &c. parcell of the possessions of any religious house, &c. shall incurre the danger of the act of premunire, in auto 16 K. 2.

act of premunire, and is revived by 1 Eliz.

Thomas Stoughton parson of N. in Suffolke, brought a writ of Trin. 20 Eliz, in premunire against R. T. upon this statute of 27 E. 3. for suing in communi banco the court of audience of the archbishop of Canterbury, to impeach Rot. 747. Tho. a judgement given in a quare impedit, before the justices of affize in Stoughtons case the county of Suffolk, &c. the defendant pleaded not guilty, &c. And this (omitting many other things for this matter) shall suffice. And now let us peruse the body of the act.

(1) Trake nulluy hors de realme. Of this there is no question, being against the ancient law of the realme always in use: as by this act appeareth. And this was a remedie for the first mis-

(2) Ou des choses dont judgements fuer' rendus, &c.] This branch prohibiteth all forain fuits, viz. in the court of Rome, &c. for any thing whereof judgement was given in the kings court. And this was a remedie for the fecond mischiefe.

(3) Ou que suont en autre court a defaire ou impeacher les judgements rendue in le court le rey. This is a remedy for the third mischief. For having by the second branch provided against forain suits to undoe, or impeach judgements in the kings court, this branch doth (as hath been faid) extend to all courts, which proceed by the rule of another law, or draw the party ad aliud examen, and therefore this branch doth extend to ecclefiafticall courts, to the court of the constable, and marshall, to the court of the admiralty, and to the court of equity proceeding in course of equity: for it had been to no effect to have provided against forain suits, which were troublesome, tedious, and chargeable, and to have suffered the party to have attempted and profecuted any thing at home within this realm, to the prejudice and disherison of the king, and his crown, and all his subjects, and to the subversion of the common law. And first we will speak of the court of equity. This court cannot proceed in course of equity after judgement at the common law, for three reasons. First, for that it draweth the matter triable, and determinable by the common law, ad aliud examen, viz. to a triall by witnesses, which (as hath been said) is contrary to the ancient law of the realm, and against the purvien of this statute. Secondly, after judgment the parties ought to be at peace and quiet, for judicia funt tanquam juris dicta, and if the party against whom judgement is given, might after judgement given against him at the common law, goe into court of equity for matter in equity, there either should be no end of suits, or every plaintif would leave the common law, and begin in the court of equity, whither in the end he must be brought, and that should tend to the utter subversion of the common law, as it is faid in the act. Thirdly, the court of equity in the proceeding in course of equity is no court of re- 37 H. 6. 14.

cord, and therefore it cannot hold plea of any thing, whereof judgement is given, which is a judiciall matter of record. And this is the ancient law at all times used, as this act speaketh. As taking some few examples for many, both before, and after this statute.

Anno 6 E. r. the earl of Cornwals cafe. Lanceston in Thesaur.

In the case of Edmond earl of Cornwall in anno 6 E. 1. it appeareth, that after judgement given before Roger Loveday and Walter Winborn justices of oler and terminer, against Walter bishop of Exeter and his tenants, the said bishop procured the bishop of Landass in the parish churches of Cornwall and Devonthire to pronounce fentence of excommunication by the fentence of the archbishop of Canterbury (which sentence was had by the procurement of the faid bishop of Exeter) against all persons of what estate, degrees or dignity soever, that dealt in the proceedings, &c. against the said bishop and his tenants before the said justices: and in this part of the record being in French, it is faid La corone, et la dignity nostre seigniour le roy ne doit per autre estre justice ne guyne, &c. Et les choses que sont passes en su court per judgement, ou en auter manner, ne devient eftre en autri court recrecees. Ec. Out of this record we may observe three things. First, what the ancient law of this realm was, before the making of this act. Secondly, that [en autri court] which are the words of this act, was taken to be another court within the realm. Thirdly, that the mischief before this act, was for suits in other courts within this realm, after judgements given in the kings courts. the whole record, which beginneth thus. Cornub. dominus rex mandat, &c.

And in 13 E. 3. there was a fuit in the court of Rome after judgement in the kings court, and in that record it is said, In regi contemptum, et corone sue prejudicium, ac judicii predicti enervatione manifestam, Gc. Ac quod judicia in curia regis rite reddita frustra redderentur, nisi debitum sortirentur effectum.

* Fleta who wrote before this statute, saith, Judicia debent rata permanere, et sirma consistere, usque ad condignam satisfactionem inviola-

And as a maxime of the common law in the judiciall Register, fo. 12. 35. 41, &c. it is often faid, Ea quæ in curia domini regis rite acta funt, debitæ executioni demandari debent.

Now let us see what hath been done since the act. b The statute of 4 H. 4. cap. 23. hath been recited before, which is a judgement of parliament. c A judgement was obtained by covin and practice against all equity and conscience in the kings bench: for the plaintif retained by collusion an attorney for the defendant, (without the knowledge of the defendant, then being beyond sea) the attorny consesses the action, whereupon judgment was given; the defendant sought his remedy in parliament, and by authority of parliament power was given to the lord chancellor by advise of two of the judges to hear, and order the case according to equity: which proveth that the chancellour could not do it of himself without higher authority.

• No injunction after verdict at the common law is to be granted in chancery, and if the lord chancellor should grant an injunction in that case the judges said, that if the chancelor imprisoned the party

And the councell of Heal took two exceptions, one, that the court of chancery was not within the statute of 27 E. 3. another, that one of the parties to the fuit in chancery was named in one place by one name of baptisme, and in another part of it by another. court resolved that the court of chancery was within the statute of 27 E. 3. but found the other exception concerning misnaming to be true. And amongst others, the judges gave this reason, that if the party against whom judgement was given, might after judgement given against him at the common law, draw the matter into the chancery, it would tend to the subversion of the common law, for that no man would sue at the common law, but originally begin in chancery, seeing at the last he might be brought thither, after he had recovered by the common law, and thereupon they all certified, that the demurrer was good, and that Sir Movl Finch the defendant ought not to answer.

(4) Eient jour contenant le space de 2 moys per garnishment a faire a eux, &c.] By this it appeareth that a premunire lyeth as well for the party, as for the king, and they both may join in one writ.

* If the defendant come not at the day, &c. by the expresse letter of the law judgement shall be given against him according to this act. This suit need not be against them by original writ, but if the defendant be in custodia mareschalli, the suit may be against him by bill, because the end of the giving of the two months was, that they should have notice, which is satisfied, and therewith agreeth the presidents; and the desendant cannot be sued in any other court, when they are in custodia mareschalli. See the statute of 18 El. cap. 5. but that statute extends to common informers, and not when the suit is commenced by the party grieved.

And so it was resolved by the judges in the case of Trudgyn of Devonshire, who was attainted of a premunire upon the statute of 13 El. cap. 2.

Nota, this is a new kind of forfeiture given by this law, and is penall, and cannot by equity extend further then the records, and therefore this act extendeth not to the forfeiture of fairs, markets, rents charges, rent feck, warrens, annuities, or any other here-penned against offenders. For first it extendeth to all persons of what quality, or fex foever, the words be [if any]. 2. To all courts of what jurisdiction soever, and whether holden by right or wrong, in curia Romana, seu alibi, which word (alibi) is a word of a large extent, as before it appeareth. 3. To all things whatfoever. [Where any thing,] which words be as generall as can be.

4. Not only against the king, his crown and dignity, but against the kingdome also: against the king, his crown, and regalty, or realm. 5. This act extendeth not only to procurers, abetters, maintainers, counfellors, &c. which are known words in law, but to favourers, fautores, which word was largely extended in the reign of H. 8. whereby it is to be observed how dangerous it is to bring new or unusuall words into any act of parliament, especially into fuch as be so penned: for there it appeareth that Cliff being a parson of a church granted to the cardinall an annuity, so long as he should be legate, ut decentius et sublimius se gereret in authoritate sua legantina, which the cardinall had by bull, and paid to him ten marks in name of feafon, and he was adjudged a fautor. But fuch evalions were found out of this and other statutes, as were made against usurpations and incrochments upon the good and ancient common law, as divers and many flatutes were made from time to time to meet with fuch evafions, which being many, (and others which concern the offence of premunire) we will but name, and leave the reader to perufe the same at large, wherein (as we conceive it) he shall find a great light, by that which hath been said, viz. 25 E. 3. ca. 22. 25 E. 3. Note, queen Mary repealed all offences made to be in the case of premunire since the first day of the first year of H. 8. but some of them are revived by the flatute of z El. ca. 1. But in all queen Maries time, the statutes made concerning the offences of premunire before the reign of H. 8. were neither repealed nor altered, but (as hath been faid) allowed of in queen Maries time. 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. ca. 8. 1 El. ca. 1. 5 El. ca. 1. 13 El. cap. 1, 2. 8. 27 El. ca. 2. 21 Jac. ca. 3. And where the statute of 25 E. 3. de provisoribus provideth, that certain offenders against that act, shall before they be delivered, make full renunciation, &c. because we desire that our student may in all things understand what he reads: it is to be known, that as well before that statute, viz. in the reigns of E. 1. and E. 2. as after, the form of renunciation was to this effect. I renounce all the words comprised in the popes bull to me made of the bishoprick of A. (or the like) the which be contrary, or prejudiciall to the king our soveraign lord, and to his crown, and of that I put my self humbly in his grace, praying to have refficution of the temporalities of my said church, &c. Whereby it may appear what the law was in that case before 25 E. 3. And albeit these laws be very severe, especially against the buls, &c. of the pope, and forain jurisdiction, and though queen Mary restored his supremacy in such sort as hereafter appeareth, yet would she not repeal the said statutes of provision and premunire, but provided that they should stand in force. See the statute of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. whereby it 1 & 2 Ph. and is enacted, That who foever should by any proces obtained out Mar. ca. 8. of any ecclesiasticall court within this realm, or without, or by pretence of any spiritual jurisdiction, * or otherwise, contrary * Nota. to the laws of this realm, inquiet, or molest any person, &c. should incur the danger of the act of premunire made in the fixteenth year of the reign of king R. 2. &c. And by another branch in the same act it is enacted, That all buls, dispensations, and privileges not containing matter contrary, or prejudiciall to the authority, dignity or preheminence royall of the realm. or to the laws of this realm now being in force, and not in this present parliament repealed, may be put in execution. And lastly, by the same act, it is declared and enacted, That neither any thing contained in the body of the said statute, or in the preamble thereof, shall be construed, or expounded to diminish, or take away any of the liberties, priviledges, prerogatives, preheminences, authorities or jurisdictions which were in the imperiall crown of this realm, or belonged to the same before the twentieth year of H. 8. and the popes holines to have such authority, preheminence, and jurisdiction, as his holinesse used, or might lawfully have used by authority of his supremacy the said twentieth year of H. 8. within this realm of England, without diminution or enlargement of the fame, and none other. Whereby it appeareth how carefull the state was in queen Maries time to preserve the prerogative of the crown, and the ancient laws of the realm, and did at that time so cautiously restore the supremacy of the pope, fecundum quid, but not fimpliciter, and bounded his supremacy within strait and legall limitations, as by the said act appeareth.

See the statutes which inflict the punishment of premunire, viz. 2 R. 2. c. 12. 3 R. 2. ca. 3. 7 R. 2. ca. 12. 24 H. 8. ca. 12. 25 H. 8. ca. 19, 20. 1 El. cap. 1. 26 H. 8. cap. 15. 28 H. 8. ca. 16. 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. cap. 1. 8 El. cap. 1. 5 El. ca. 1. 13 El. ca. 2. 8. 39 El. ca. 18. 27 El. ca. 2. POPHESIES upon declaration of armes, fields, names, cognifances, or badges, were made felony without the benefit of clergy: but this act is twice repealed by generall words of all felonies made by any statute since the first year of H. 8.

In anno & Eliz. a more moderate flatute was made against prophefies by writing, finging, or other open speech, or deed, by the occasion of any armes, fields, beasts, badges, or other like things accustomed in armes, cognisances, or signets; or by reason of any time, year, or day, name, bloodshed or warre. * to the intent thereby to make any rebellion, infurrection, diffention, losse of life, or other disturbance within this realm, or other the queens dominions. And for the second offence imprisonment during life without baile, and forfeit to the queen all his goods and chattels, reall and personall; but he must be therefore impeached or accused within fix moneths next ensuing the offence by him A just and necessary limitation, and the rather, for that the offence may be committed by bare words. This offence is to be heard and determined before justices of assise, justices of oier and terminer, and justices of peace.

See hereafter the chapter of Newes, and the second part of the Institutes, W. 1. cap. 33. He that hath read our histories shall finde, what lamentable and fatal events have falue out upon vain prophesies carried out of the inventions of wicked men, pretended to be ancient, but newly framed to deceive true men: and withall, how credulous and inclinable our countreymen in former times to them have been, we will set down the truth concerning the same.

August. in lit.

Certaine it is, that to foretell of things to come, is a prerogative appropriated to the Holy Ghost; and that the devill cannot pradicere, foretell of things to come, which notwithstanding, S. Austin did sometime hold that he could. But afterwards justly retracted it in these words, Rem dixi occultissimam audaciore assertione, quam debui, &c. certissimum est dæmones non præscire.

Now for the predictions and foretellings of the Sibyls being Gentiles, so long before the incarnation of our Saviour Christ; and more directly and particularly, of those high mysteries of the incarnation and passion of Christ, the coming of Antichrist, the subversion of Rome, and the end of the world, they are by the true prophets of Almighty God, who spake by the Holy Ghost, well discovered; that while the church was in her cradle, these predictions were invented and fathered upon the Gentiles; to the intent to make the doctrine of the said high mysteries of the gospel the more credible amongst the Gentiles. And if any such predictions had been by the said Sibyls, out of question those great lights of pature amongst the Gentiles, Plato, Aristotle, Theophrastus, or some fome other of those great philosophers, that with great alacrity ² Casaubone dived into the secrets of all kinds of learning, would have found them out, and made some mention of them. But besides the said lium. can. a discovery, such predictions by the Gentiles and heathen persons are b against the word of God.

Also predictions either of the time or end of the world, or that it is at hand, is not lawfull. For the first, c fee the first of the Acts, It is not for us to know the times and feafons which the Father hath put in his own power, &c. For the second, see the second epistle to the Thessalonians. I beseech you brethren, &c. that you be not shaken in mind, or troubled, &c. as though the day of Christ were at hand, let no man deceive you by any means.

We have the rather faid hereof thus much, for that we have heard divers men boldly and confidently upon their numerall calcu-

APPROVER.

PROVER, or approver, in Latin probator, is a person indicted of treason or felony in prison for the same, and not disabled to accuse: he may a upon his arraignment, before any plea pleaded and before competent judges b confesse the indictment, and take a corporall oath to reveale all treasons and felonies, that he knows, and pray a coroner, before whom he is to enter his appeale or accusation against all those that are participes criminis, or of his fociety in committing of treason or felony contained in the indictment, those partners being within the realme: and if upon his appeale call those partners he convicted, the king ex merito justitia, is to pardon him. But it is in the discretion of the court, either to fuffer him to be an approver, or after his approvement to respite judgement and execution, untill he hath convicted all his partners.

A prover.] d He is by Bracton called probator, by Britton, provor, by the Mirror provor and approver: and his name putteth him in minde of his duty, viz, to prove and approve his accusation or appeale in every point, for e any fayler of truth disableth him in And as he must affirme the truth, and the whole truth, before the coroner in his appeale: so in the rehearfall of the appeale before the justices, it must agree with the appeale, 26 Ass. p. 19. and Bracton ubi supra. f In one record I finde him called ap-

Person. This extendeth not to a peer or a lord of parliament, for it is against Magna Carta, cap. 29. for him to pray a coroner.

A man attainted of treason or felony cannot become an approver, because (as the book faith) he is hors de la ley. Also though he be indicted, yet if he be out of prison, he cannot approve.

APPEALS.

O F appeals we have fpoken in the first and second parts of the First part of Institutes, and you may reade thereof in my reports, lib. 4. fo. 40, 41, 42, &c. lib. 5. fo. 105. 111. lib. 6. fo. 44. 80. lib. 7. fo. 13. 30. lib. 9. fo. 13. 119. Whereunto we will adde a b case which was adjudged in an appeal, where the case, as touching the point of the appeal, was thus. Thomas Burghe, brother and heire of Henry Burghe brought an appeale of murder against Thomas Holcrost, of the death of the said Henry: the de-b Pasch. 20 fendant pleaded, that before the coroner he was indicted of manflaughter, and before commissioners of oier and terminer, he was upon that indictment arraigned, and confessed the indictment, and Holcrofts case, prayed his clergie, and thereupon was entred curia advisare vult, and concluded, and demanded judgement, if that appeal the plaintife against him ought to maintain; whereupon the plaintife demurred in law. And in this case three points were adjudged by fir Christopher Wray, fir Thomas Gawdie and the whole court.

First, that the matter of the barre had been a good barre of the appeale by the common law, as well as if the clergie had been allowed: for that the defendant upon his confession of the indictment had prayed his clergy, which the court ought to have granted, and the deferring of the court to be advised, ought not to prejudice the party defendant, albeit the appeale was commenced before the allowance of it.

The fecond point adjudged was, that this case was out of the statute of 3 H. 7. for that the words of that act are.

If it fortune that the same selons and murderers, and acces- 3 H. 7. cap. r. fories so arraigned, or any of them to be acquited, or the principall of the faid felony, or any of them to be attainted, the wife or next heire of him so slaine, &c. may have their appeal of the fame death and murder against the persons so acquited, or against the said principals so attainted, if they be alive, and that the benefit of his clergie thereof before be not had.

And in this case the defendant Holcroft, was neither acquited nor attainted, but convicted by confession, and the benefit of clergy prayed, as is aforefaid. So as the statute being penall concerning the life of man, and made in restraint of the common law, was not to be taken by equity, but is casus omissus, and left to the common law.

As to the third it was objected, that every plea ought to have an apt conclusion, and that the conclusion in this case ought to have beene, Et petit judicium si prædiet. Thomas Holcroft iterum de eadem morte, ae qua semel convictus fuit, respondere compelli debeat. But it was adjudged that either of both conclusions was sufficient in law: and therefore that exception was difallowed by the rule of the court.

Nota, the ancient law was, that when a man had judgement to be hanged in an appeal of death, that the wife, and all the blood of the party flaine should draw the defendant to execution, and

Thefaurus inventus.

REASURE trove is when any gold or filver, in coin, Custum de Nor. plate, or bullyon hath been of ancient time hidden, wherefo- ca. 18. ever it be found, whereof no person can prove any property, it doth belong to the king, or to some lord or other by the kings grant, or prescription.

The reason wherefore it belongeth to the king, is a rule of the common law; that fuch goods whereof no person can claim property belong to the king, as wrecks, strays, &c. Quod non capit Christus, capit siscus. It is anciently called * fynderinga, of finding the treasure. And now let us peruse this description.

Gold or filver.] For if it be of any other metall, it is no treafure; and if it be no treasure, it belongs not to the king, for it must be treasure trove.

It is to be observed, that veyns of gold and silver in the grounds of subjects belong to the king by his prerogative, for they are royall mines, but not of any other metall whatfoever in subjects grounds.

Wheresoever.] * Whether it be of ancient time hidden in the ground, or in the roof, or walls, or other part of a castle, b house, building, ruines, or elsewhere, so as the owner cannot be known.

Whereof no person can prove any property.] For it is a certain rule, Quod the saurus non competit regi, nisi quando nemo scit qui abscondit thefaurum.

Of ancient time hidden.] d Est autem thesaurus vetus depositio pecuniæ, &c. cujus non extat modo memoria, adeo ut jam dominum non habeat.

Belong to the king.] • Where of ancient time it belonged to the finder, * as by the faid ancient authors it appeareth. And yet I find that before the conquest, Thesauri de terra domini regis sunt, nisi in ecclesia, vel cometerio inveniantur; et licet ibi inveniatur auru, regis est, et medietas argenti est medietas ecclesia, ubi inventum fuerit, quacunque ipsa fuerit, vel dives, vel pauper.

The punishment of him that concealeth, &c. it.] It appeareth by Glanvill, and Bracton also, that occultatio the sauri inventi fraudulosa was such an offence, as was punished by death. CAP. LX.

Of False Tokens, or Letters in other Mens Names.

IF any person falsily and deceitfully obtain into his hands any moneys, goods, chattels, jewels, or other things of any person or persons, by colour or means of any false or privy tokens, or counterfeit letters made in any other mans name, &c. he shall suffer such correction by punishment of his body, setting upon the pillory, or other corporall pain (except pains of death) as shall be to him adjudged by the person and persons before whom he shall be convicted, with a saving to the party grieved by such deceit, such remedy by way of action, or otherwise, as he might have had by the common law.

Here it is to observed, that upon this statute, for this offence the offender cannot be fined, but corporall pain only inslicted.

OF THEFTBOTE.

Stat. Wall. anno 12 E. 1. Vet. Mag. Cart. pt. 2. fo. 6.

THEFTBOTE (described by act of parliament) est emenda furti capta fine consideratione curiae domini regis: and so much the word signifieth, base being taken for amends: the fibrie, that is, amends for thest.

And so note a diversity, quando proprietarius recipit latrocinium, et quando latronem, But if a man take his goods again that were stollen, it is no offence, unlesse he favour the thief, as is aforesaid.

The punishment of theftbote is ransome and imprisonment: and 3E. 3. OF INDICTMENTS.

ONCERNING Indictments we have spoken somewhat in the first part of the Institutes. Sect. 194. 208. And you may read in my Reports many resolutions concerning indictments, viz. lib. 4. fo. 40, 41, 42. &c. lib. 5. fo. 120, 121, 122, 123. li. 7. fo. 5, 6. 10. li. 8. fo. 57. 36, 37. li. 9. fo. 62, 63. 116. 118.

See the 1 pt, of the Institutes, fect. 194, 195.

We will add one point adjudged in the case between Burgh and Holcrosts case. Holcroft before mentioned in the chapter of Appeals, which was, Artic. super Cart. ca. 10. that where it is provided by the statute de Artic Super Cartas, cap. 3. En case de mort del home (deins le verge) ou office del coroner appent as views, et enquests de ceo faire, soit maunde al coroner del pais que emsembliment ove le coroner del hostel le roy face lossice que appent, &c. And in that case one man was coroner both of the kings house, and of the county, and the indictment of manslaughter was taken before him as coroner both of the kings house, and of the county. And it was adjudged that the indictment was good, because the mischief expressed in the statute was remedied, as well when both offices was In one person, as when they were in divers: and therefore in this case the rule did hold, Quando duo jura concurrunt in una persona, equum eft, ac si effet in diversis.

The (ame was again refolved in Wrots case, ubi

Richard Weston, yeoman, late servant of Sir Gervase Elwys, lieutenant of the Tower, and under the lieutenant, keeper of Sir Thomas Overbury then prisoner in the Tower, was indicted: for Mich. 13 Jac. that he the said Richard the 9 day of May an. 11. Ja. regis, in See before, ca. 7.

[135] Sir Tho. Overthe Of murder more of this case.

the Tower of London, gave to the faid Sir Tho. Overbury poyfon called rofeacre in broth, which he the faid Sir Thomas received. Et ut ide Rich. Weston præfatum Tho. Overbury magis celeriter intersiceret et murdraret, I Junii anno 11 Ja. regis supradict. gave to him another poyson called white arsenick, &c. and that 10 Julii an. 11. fuprad. gave to him a poyfon called mercury fublimat' in tarts, ut pradiel' Tho. Overbury magis celeriter interficeret et murdraret : and that a person unknown in the presence of the said Richard Weston. and by his commandment and procurement, the 14 of Septemb. anno 11. supradict. gave to the said Sir Thomas a glyster mixt with poyson called mercury sublimat, ut prædictum Thomam magis celeviter interficeret et murdraret. Et prædictus Thomas Overbury de feteralibus venenis prædictis et operationibus inde, à prædictis seperalibus temporibus. Sc. graviter languebat usque ad 15 diem Septemb. anno 11. supradicto, quo die dicius Thomas de prædictis seperalibus venenis obiit venenatus, &c. And albeit it did not appear of which of the faid poyfons he died, yet it was resolved by all the judges of the kings bench, that the indictment was good; for the substance of the ingictment was, whether he was poyfoned or no. And upon the evidence it appeared, that Weston within the time aforesaid had given unto Sir Thomas Overbury divers other poyfons, as namely the powder of diamonds, cantharides, lapis causticus, and powder of spiders, and aqua fortis in a glyster. And it was resolved by all the faid judges, that albeit these faid poysons were not contained in the indictment, yet the evidence of giving them was fufficient to maintain the indictment: for the substance of the indictment was (as before is faid) whether he were poyloned or no. But when the cause of the murder is laid in the indictment to be by poyfon, no evidence can be given of another cause, as by weapon, burning, drowning, or other cause, because they be distinct and feveral causes: but if the murder be laid by one kind of weapon, as by a fword, either dagger, styletto, or other like weapon is sufficient evidence, because they be al under one classis or cause. And afterwards, Ann Turner, Sir Gervase Helwys, and Richard Franklyn a physitian, (purveyor of the poylons) were indicted as accelfories before the fact done: And it was resolved by all the said judges, that either the proofs of the poyfons contained in the indictment, or of any other poyfon were fufficient to prove them accesfories: for the substance of the indictment of them as accessories was, whether they did procure Weston to poyson Sir Thomas Overbury: and because that not only Ann Turner, and Richard Franklyn, but some of the degree of nobility were indicted as accessories in another county, viz. in the county of Midd. divers notable points were resolved upon the statute of 2 E. 6. First, if the accessory be in the county of Midd, where the kings bench is, and the principall did the felony, &c. in another county, that the court of the kings bench is within the words of that act, viz. (and that the juftices of gaol-delivery, or oier and terminer, or two of them, &c.) for the causes and reasons given in the lord Zanchers case, lib. 9. to. 117, 118. &c. Secondly, if the indictment be taken in the kings bench, then the justices shall not write in their own names, quia placita funt coram rege. Thirdly, divers presidents were shewed where the accessory was in the county of Midd. where the kings bench fat, and the principall was attainted in another county, that

Vid. li. 9. fo. 67. Mackallies cafe

the justices of the kings bench have removed the record of the attainder of the principall before them by certiorari, and so it was done in the lord Zanchers case, ubi supra. The like president was shewed in a case where the principall was attainted in the county of Oxon, and the accessory was in Midd. and the kings bench sitting there, the justices of the same court removed the attainder before them by Fourthly, it was refolved, that the lord steward of England, who is a judge in case of high treason, or felony committed by any of the peers of the realm, is within these words, justices of gaol-delivery, or oier and terminer, because he is a justice of oier and terminer, for his authority is by commission, and the words of his commission be after divers recitals, Et superinde, audiend, examinand', et respondere compellend', et sine debit' terminand.: so as he hath power to heare and determine. And where the words be for any two of them] that is to be intended, where there be two or more justices, and yet where there is but one, it extendeth to him. As the statute of Merton, cap. 3. power being given to the sheriffe 39 H. 6.42. in case of redisseisin, the words be, assumptis tecum coronatoribus 23 Ast. p. 7. placitorum coronæ, &c. in the plurall number. And yet where there is but one coroner in the county the statute extends thereunto, and the sheriffe shall take that one. Also the words of the statute are further, That then the justices of gaol-delivery or of oier and terminer, or other there authorized: within which words, [or other there authorized] the lord steward is included. Fifthly, if the record of the attainder were by writ of certiorari removed out of London into the kings bench, then there arose another doubt upon the said statute, if afterward any proceeding should be had against any peer, for that the words of the statute be, The justices, &c. shall write to the custos rotulorum or keeper of the record where such principall shall hereafter be attainted; and the attainder in this case was in Londop, and the kings bench was in Middlesex: so as if the record should be removed into the kings bench in Middlesex, the record should not be where the attainder was had; and consequently, the lord steward could not write to the kings bench. And therefore to prevent all questions, it was resolved, that in this case of the lord steward, no certiorari should be granted, but a speciall writ should be directed according to the words of the said act to the commissioners of oier and terminer in London, to certifie whether the principal was convict or acquitted: and they made a particular certificate accordingly, fo as the record of the attainder of the principall, did notwithstanding that certificat, remain with the commissioners of oier and terminer in London: so as if any surther proceeding should be had, the lord steward might write to them, as after he did in the case of R. earl of S. and F. his

And it is to be observed, that the ancient wall of London (a mention whereof doth yet remain) extended through the Tower of London; and all that which is on the west part of the wall, is within the city of London, viz. in the parish of All Saints Barking, in the ward of the Tower of London: and all that is on the east part of the wall is in the county of Middlesex; and the chamber of Sir Thomas Overbury was within the Tower on the west part of the faid wall, and therefore Weston was tried within the city of London.

TATHERE any person is indicted of treason or selony, and plead. eth to the treason or felony, not guilty, which goeth to the fact best known to the party; it is holden that the party in that case shall have no councell to give in evidence, or alleage any matter for him: but for as much as ex facto jus oritur it is necessary to be explained, what matters upon his arraignment, or after not guilty pleaded, he may alleage for his defence, and pray councell learned to utter the fame in forme of law.

And first upon the arraignment what advantage he may take in case of high treason by the common law. If it be for compassing the death of the king, he may alleage, that in the indictment there is no fuch overt or open act fet down in particular, as is fufficient in law or the like. For it is to be observed, that in no case the party arraigned of treason or felony, can pray councell learned generally, but must shew some cause.

Secondly, in case of high treason by force of any statute, he may alleage, that the indictment being grounded upon a statute, the statute is either mistaken or not pursued.

3. Thirdly, of what matters he may take advantage equally concerning them both. He may alleage, that there was not at the time of the indictment of high treason, two lawfull accusers, that is, two

Fifthly, after he hath pleaded not guilty, what advantage he may take upon the evidence: he may alleage, that he ought to have two lawfull witnesses in case of high treason to prove the fact against

Sixthly, he may take advantage in arrest of judgement, if the verdict be found against him, that the triall came not out of the right place: as it fell out in Arundels case, convicted by a jury of Arundels case. wilfull murder; he informed the court that the jury that tried him came out of a wrong place, and thereupon he had councell learned assigned him; who indeed found, that the venire facias was misawarded, and the court thereof by the councell being informed, judgement was stayed. And that the prisoner may alleage these or the like matters, it is evident, because for every matter in law rifing upon the fact, the prisoner shall have councell learned assigned Also it is lawfull for any man that is in court, to informe the court of any of these matters, lest the court should erre, and the prisoner unjustly for his life proceeded with. And the reason wherefore regularly in case of treason and felony, when the party pleads not guilty, he was to have no counsell, was for two causes. First, for that in case of life, the evidence to convince him should be so manifest, as it could not be contradicted. Secondly, the court ought to fee, that the indictment, triall, and other proceedings be good and fufficient in law; otherwife they should by their erroneous judgement attaint the prisoner unjustly.

Of Principall and Accessory.

A LBEIT justice Stanford hath well collected the books concerning principall and accessory, yet diversa desiderantur: and necessary it is, that some things touching the same should be added, which are very necessary to be knowne.

It is a fure rule in law, that in alta proditione nullus potest esse accessorius, sed principalis solummodo. This rule being well understood, will open the reason of divers cases, which yet are involved in High treason is either by the common law, or by act of parliament: we will fet downe examples (which ever do illustrate) of both.

* 19 H. 6. 47.

A. doth counterfeit the kings coine, viz. shillings, and C. knowing the same doth receive A. and comfort and aide him: this counterfeiting is high treason by the common law in A, as hath been faid: and yet it hath beene holden that in this case C. hath not committed treason: for fay they, in case of felony, a receiver of a felon after the felony done, knowing him to be a felon, is no principall, but an accessory: and for that there is no accessory in treafon, therefore C. in the case before committeth no treason; for then in judgement of law he must be a counterfeiter of the kings coine within our statute of 25 E. 3. which he is not: and therefore they fay, this is casus omissus, and not within any of the classes or heads of the said act of 25 E. 3. But all agree, that procurors of fuch treason to be done before the fact done, if after the fact be done accordingly, in case of treason, are principals, for that they are participes criminis in the very act of counterfeiting.

But faving reformation we hold, that if any man committee high treason, and thereby becommeth a traytor, if any other man knowing him to be a traytor, doth receive, comfort, and aide him, he is guilty of treason, for that there be no accessories in high treason. And so it was resolved in the case of Abingdon, who received, comforted, and aided Henry Garnet superior of the jesuits, knowing him to be guilty of the powder treason, and accordingly Abing-

And where it is faid, that the faid offence in Conyers case was misprisson of treason, that cannot be, because there was a consent, and not a concealment only: otherwise, high treason being the highest offence, should have more favour, then selony: for the receiver and comforter in case of selony is punished by death, and so is not he that committee misprisson of treason. And lastly, this is no new treason, but a partaking and a maintaining of the old.

In case of felony there are principals and accessories, and accesfories be of two forts, either before the offence be committed, or See the second part of the Institutes, W. 1. cap. 14. And concerning this, there be also certaine rules, d Nullus dicitur felo principalis, nisi actor, aut qui præsens est abettans, aut auxilians actorem ad feloniam faciendam. But this rule hath his exception: for e in case of poysoning, if one layeth poyson for one, or insuse it into broth, or the like, albeit he be not present when the same is taken; and either the party intended, or any other is poysoned, yet is he a principall: and in that case, both the principall and procurer, or accessory may be absent. CAP. LXV.

Of Misprisions divers and severall: and first of Misprision of Felony, &c.

F misprission of treason we have already spoken, and of the etymologie of the word. It remaineth now that we speak of other misprisions.

Misprisson is twofold: one is erimen omissionis, of omission, as in concealement, or not discovery of treason or felony: another is crimen commissionis, of commission, as in committing some heynous offence under the degree of felony.

Or misprission is of two forts, viz. passive and active: passive is of the nature of concealment, whereof fome be by the common law, and some by statute. By the common law, as passive misprision, that is concealement of high treason whereof we have spoken; and passive misprission, that is concealement of felony, whereof we are now in this chapter to speak. Some by statute: as if any be moved to make commotion or unlawfull affembly, and do not within twenty four houres declare the same to a justice of peace, 1 Mar. I. Parl. theriffe, major, or bailiffe, &c. concealement by juries, 3 H. 7. ca. ca. 12. 1. 33 H. 8. ca. 6, &c.

Now are we speak of concealement or not discovery of felony. As in case of high treason, whether the treason be by the common law, or statute, the concealment of it is misprission of treason. So in case of felony, whether the felony be by the common law, or by statute, the concealement of it is misprission of felony.

If any be present when a man is slaine, and omit to apprehend & E. 2. cor. 305. the flayer, it is a misprission, and shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

And as the concealment of high treason is higher by many de- W. 1. ea. 9. See grees then the concealment of felony, so the punishment for the the exposition concealment of the greater is heavier then of the leffer, and yet thereof, ubi sup. M 2 the concealment of felonies in sherifs, or bailiffs of liberties is more severely punished then in others, viz. by imprisonment by one year, and ransome at the will of the king. From which punishment • if any will save himself he must follow the advice of Bracton, to discover it to the king, or to some judge or magistrate, that for administration of justice supplies his place, with all speed that he can.

B. act. lib. 3. fo. 118. a.

Non enim debet morari in uno loco per duas nocies, vel per duos dies, nec debet ad aliqua negotia. quamvis urgentissima, se convertere, quia vix permittitur ei ut retrospiciat.

And this is intended of a concealment, or not discovery of his meer knowledge: for if in case of high treason, he that knoweth it, before it be done, and affenteth to it, is particeps criminis, and guilty of treason: and in case of felony, he that receiveth the thief, and affenteth to it, is accessory.

See before in the chapter of misprision of treason, that every treasonand felony dothinclude in it misprision of treason and felony. See the statute of 23 El. ca. 1. of misprision, that is, crimen commissionis.

Compassings, or imaginations against the king, by word, without an overtact, is an high misprission, as before is said. * In cogitatione tua ne detrahas regi, &c. quia aves cæli portabunt vocem tuam, et qui habet pennas annunciabit sententiam. If any man in Westminster hall, or in any other place, sitting the courts of chancery, the exchequer, the kings bench, the common bench, or before justices of affise, or justices of oier and terminer, (which courts are mentioned in the statute of 25 E. 3. De preditionibus) shall draw a weapon upon any judge, or justice, though he strike not; this is a great misprission, b for the which he shall lose his right hand, and forfeit his lands and goods, and his body to perpetuall imprisonment: the reason hereof is, because it tendeth ad impedimentum legis terræ. So it is, if in Westminster hal or any other place, fitting the faid courts there, or before juftices of affife, or oier and terminer, and within the view of the same, a man doth strike a juror, or any other with weapon, hand, shoulder, elbow, or foot, he shall have the like punishment; but in that case, if he make an assault, and strike not, the offender shall not have the like punishment.

d If any strike in the kings palace, where the kings royall perfon resideth, he shall not lose his right hand, unlesse he draw blood; but if he draw blood, then his right hand shall be strucken off, he perpetually imprisoned, and fined and ransomed.

Note the law makes a great difference between a stroke or blow, in or before any of the said courts of justice, where the king is representatively present, and the kings court, where his royall perfen resideth. For in the kings house (as hath been said) blood must be drawne, which needeth not in or before the courts of justice, but a stroke only sufficeth. Again, the punishment is more severe in the one case, then in the other: such honour the law attributeth to courts of justice, when the judges or justices are doing of that which to justice appertaineth: and the reason is, Quia justica firmatur solium.

But note that by the ancient laws of this realm, striking only in the kings court was punished by death. Vide Lambard inter leges Ina ca. 6. Of CONSPIRACIE.

CONSPIRACIE • is a confultation and agreement between two or more, to appeale, or indict an innocent falfely, confpiratoribus, and maliciously of felony, whom accordingly they cause to be indicted or appealed; and afterward the party is lawfully acquited by the verdict of twelve men: the party grieved may be relieved, and the offender punished two wayes. First, by a writ of conspiracy, which is a civill or common action at the fuit of the party, wherein the plaintife shall recover damages, and the defendant shall be imprisoned. Secondly, by indictment at the fuit of the king, the judgement whereof is criminall: of which we are now to fpeak.

b Upon this fuit of the king, if the offenders be convicted, the judgement is grievous and terrible, viz. That they shal lose the freedom or franchise of the law, to the intent that he shall not be put or had upon any jury or affife, or in any other testimony of truth: and if they have any thing to do in the kings courts, they shall come e per folem, id eft, by broad day, and make their attorny, and forthwith return by broad day: and their houses, lands, and goods. shall be seised into the kings hands, and their houses and lands estrepped and wasted, their trees rooted up and errased, and their bodies to prison: all things retrograde, and against order and nature, in destroying all things that have pleasured or nourished them; for that by falsehood, malice, and perjury, they sought to attaint and overthrow the innocent. Which judgement in our books is called, a villanous judgement. First, in respect of the villainy and shame, which the party hath which receiveth it. Secondly, for that by the judgement he lofeth the freedom and franchise of the law, and therefore undergoeth a kinde of bondage and villany. And the reason of this heavy and terrible judgement is: 1. For that the offenders have conspired and plotted the death and shedding of the blood of an innocent. 2. That they do it under faire pretence of justice and by course of law, which was instituted for the protection and defence of the innocent. 3. That if they had attainted the in ocent, he should have lost his life, (by an infamous death) his lands, his goods, and his posterity: for his blood thereby should have been corrupted, &c. 4. All this falshood, malice, and perjury is committed in placito coronæ, in a fuit for the king, which aggravateth and increaseth the offence; for that the king is the head of justice, and a protector of the innocent: and therefore at the kings fuit, and not at the fult of the party, this villanous judgement shall be given. So as the law hath excellently distributed the remedies; the private action of the party to give him damages, &c. and the fuit of the king for exemplary punishment. And it is to be observed, that this villanous judgement is given by the common law, (as in the case of attaint) and not by force of any statute.

Of Bribery, Extortion, Exaction, &c.

And first of Bribery.

BRIBERY is a great misprission (1), when any man in Fortescue, ca.58. judiciall place (2) takes any fee or pension, robe, or livery, gift, reward (3) or brocage (4) of any person, that hath to do before him any way (5), for doing his office, or by colour of his office, but of the king only, unlesse it be of meat and drink, and that of small value, upon divers, and grievous punishments.

This word [bribery] commeth of the French word briber, which fignifieth to devoure, or eat greedily, applyed to the devouring of a corrupt judge, of whom the Pfalmist speaking in the person of Psalm 13.40 God, saith, Qui devorat plebem meam ficut cfcam panis. Qui cognoscit Prov. 28. 21. faciem in judicio, non bene facit: iste pro buccella panis descrit veri-

But let us peruse the branches of this description.

(1) A great misprission.] But it may be objected, that bribery in Rot. Pat. anno a judge was sometime adjudged a higher offence. For whereas at the affizes holden at Lincolne in the 23 years of E. 3. an exiper was to have been awarded against Richard Saltey, Hildebrand Boresward, Guilbert Holliland, Thomas Derby, and Robert Rot. This president is not to be followed at this day for divers causes. First, it seemeth by the violation of the kings oath, and of this word [rebelliter] and by the forfeiture of all his lands and tenements to the king, that this offence should be treason against the king, and then it being either high treason, or petit treason, it is taken away by the statute of 25 E. 3. De proditionibus, the same being none of them, that are there expressed. And in all the records this word [felonice] is not to be found, as it ought to have been,

25. to the lords, and affirmed by them.

Neither by the words of the oath, or of the supposed act of 20 E. 3. can the judgement (quod fuspendatur) be warranted: for these words [to be at the kings will for body, &c.] cannot be extended to losse of life, no more then the statute of Carlisle (sub forisfaciura omnium, que in potestate sua obtinet) extendeth not to forfeiture of life, but to imprisonment, &c. viz loffe of liberty, &c.

But at this parliament, viz. in anno 20 E. 3. taking in hand of quarrels, other then their own, and maintenance of them is prohibited upon the paines aforefaid, viz. the paines contained in the faid supposed act of 20 E. 3. cap. 1. upon paine to be at our will, body, lands, and goods, to do thereof as shall please us: which without question was never extended to losse of life, &c. but to imprisonment, as common experience daily teacheth. For hac est voluntas regis, viz. per justiciarios suos et per legem, &c. Therefore as by the record appeareth, sir William Thorpe was pardoned and restored to all his lands. And we were desirous to see the record of the act of 20 E. 3. cap. 1. but there is no record of any fuch act in the parliament roll. And the very frame and composition of it feemeth to be but a rehearfall of a commandment from the king: for the letter of it beginneth. First, we have commanded all our justices.

justices, that they shall from thenceforth do equal law, &c. and therefore justly omitted out of the parliament roll of acts of parliaments: and yet the imprinting of it necessary, for that the fourth chapter of this parliament hath reference to the paynes contained in it.

It is enacted by Parliament anno 11 H. 4. in these words.

Vid. 1 H. 4 nu. 99. & Nota,

Item, Que nul chancelor, treasorer, garden del privie seal Rot. 11 H. 4. nu. 28,

By this act of parliament, which is the judgement of the whole parliament, it appeareth, that, if that which is imprinted as the first chapter of 20 E. 3. had been an act of parliament, then this flatute of 11 H. 4. would never have inflicted this kinde of punishment, which is other, and farre less, then that which is mentioned in 20 E. 3. and where it is said in this act of 11 H. 4. (et punis al volunt le roy) that is, by fine and imprisoment by the court where the conviction shall be; for, as hath been said, hac est voluntas regis, viz. per justiciarics suos, et legem suam, et non per dominum regem in camera sua, vel aliter.

So as by warrant of this act of parliament we have faid, that bribery is a misprission; for that it is neither treason, nor felony; and it is a great misprission, for that it is ever accompanied with

True it is, that fir Thomas Weyland, chief justice of the court of common pleas, was attainted of felony, but it was not for bribery, but being guilty of + being accessary to murder, for the which by the common law he was abjured the realm.

Likewise Adam de Stratton chief baron of the Exchequer a man of great possessions and riches was attainted of felony by him committed, all which I collect upon records of parliament the furest guides. For in the parliament holden in 18 E. 1. in the same year when he was attainted, I find two petitions, one preferred by himself in these words, Adam de Stratton petit gratiam regis, quod restituatur ad aliquam partem terrarum suarum, et de bonis suis quæ habuit tempore quo fuit.* viz. 26000 li.

The other by Margaret de Boteler in these words, Margareta quæ fuit uxor Joh. de Boteler, de qua Adam de Stratton tenuit 12 li. 10. s. in London, clamat habere ut eschaet'. Responss. Rex non concessit; quia in civitate nulla est eschaeta nisi regis. And at the same parliament, fo. 3. it is resolved, non sunt nist tres formæ brevis de eschaeta;

Rot. Parl. 20 E. 1, fol. 5.

The rest of the justices were removed, fined, and imprisoned, faving Johannes de Mettingham, and Elias de Beckingham, who to their eternall memory and honour were found upright, and free from all bribery and corruption.

TO R. 2. nu. 24.

It was petitioned in parliament, that the statutes whereby the justices of the one bench or the other should take no reward, ne be of any mans fee, may be observed. The kings answer was, I the king hath and will charge fuch justices to minister right, and will punish the contrary, and therefore willeth that all statutes made touching them and the barons of the exchequer, be made void.

(2) When any man in judiciall place, &c] For the difference between bribery and extortion is, that bribery is only committed by him, that hath a judiciall place, and extortion may be committed both by him that hath a judiciall place, or by him that hath a ministeriall office.

And this offence of bribery may be committed by any that hath . any judiciall place either ecclefiafticall or temporall. Non accipies personam nec munera, (and the reason is expressed by the Holy Ghost) quia munera excæcant oculos sapientum, et mutant verba

If bribery hath so great force, as to blinde the eyes of the wife judge, and to change the words of the just, Beatus ille, qui excutit manus suas ab omni munere. Judex debet habere duos sales; salem sapientiæ, ne sit insipidus, et salem conscientiæ, ne sit diabolus.

Though the bribe be small, yet the fault is great: and this appeareth by a record in the reign of E. 3. Quia diversi justiciarii ad audiendum et terminardum assignat' ceperunt de Johanne Berners qui indictatus fuit, 4. li. pro favore habendo die deliberationis sua, finem fecerunt domino regi per iiii M. marcas, so as they paid for every pound a thousand marks. See before sir William Thorps case. Rot. In ancient time a great revenue by reason of the usury of the Jewes came to the crown: for between the 50 year of H. 3. and the 2 years of E. 1. which was not above seven years compleat, there was paid into the kings coffers four hundred and twenty thoufand pounds of and for the usury of the Jews. And yet that excellent king for divers weighty seasons worthy to be written in letters of gold, did by authority of parliament utterly prohibit the fame, in these words. Forafmuch as the king hath perceived that many evils and disherisons of the good men of his land had come to passe by the usuties which the Jews have done in times past, and that many sins and offences have risen thereupon: albeit he and his auncesters have had great profit thereby of the Jews; notwithstanding for the hohour of God, and for the common profit of his people, the king hath ordained, and established, that no Jew shall take usury, &c. Before this time Jews were divers times banished this realm, but still they returned again. But this wife and worthy king by authority of parliament banishing their usury, put the Jews into perpetuals exile into forain countries, where usury was tolerated. By which act it appeareth that the suppression of usury tendeth to the honour of God, and the common profit of the people.

will or canon law; whereof the judges of the common law in these cases take no notice.

This is the text of this part of the act, now let us proceed to the exposition hereof, being a necessary law to be put in execution.

(1) Present or collate.] This is not onely intended, where the person presenting or collating hath right to present, or collate; but also where any person or persons, bodies politique and corporate, doe usury, and have no title to present or collate. (2) Shall be utterly voide and of none effect.] But here is to be obferved a diversity between a presentation, or collation made by a rightfull patron, and an usurper. For in case of a rightfull patron, which doth corruptly present, or collate, by the expresse letter of this act the king shall present: but where one doth usurp, and corruptly present or collate, there the king shall not present, but the rightfull patron: for the branch that gives the king power to prefent, is onely intended, where the rightfull patron is in fault, but where the rightfull patron is in no fault, there the corrupt act, and wrong of the usurper maketh the benefice, &c. voide, but taketh not away the lawfull title to present from the rightfull patron, and so it was adjudged in the case abovesaid.

Also upon these words, [If any patron without the notice of the person so presented, or collated, doth take reward, &c.] yet by the expresse letter of this branch the church, &c. is voide, for both the letter and intention of this act is to make the admission, institution, and induction of any presentee, that commeth in by a corrupt patron voide. And so was it resolved in the case abovesaid, as it hath been formerly adjudged in the common place. But where the presentee is not privy, nor consenting to any such corrupt contract, as is prohibited by this act, because it is no simony in him, there the presentee shall not be adjudged a disabled person within this act: for the words of that branch be, And the person so corruptly giving, &c. fo as he shall not be disabled, unlesse he be privy to the corrupt contract: and upon the feverall penning of these several branches, the diversity abovesaid was resolved Mich. 13 Jac. ubi fupra.

King

* King James referred this case unto Sir Thomas Egerton lord * Anno 12 Jac. chancellor of England, and to the chiefe justice of the kings bench. Sir Robert Vernon being coferer of the kings house, by reason of which office, he hath the receipt and payment of 40,000 li. of the kings treafure yearely, and paveth the wages beneath the stayres, &c. did bargaine and sell the said office for a great summ of money, and for certaine annuities to be paid, to Sir Arthur Ingram knight. The first question was whether the said office were void by force of the statute of 5 E. 6. ca. 16. The second was, seeing the words of this act be [shall be adjudged a disabled person in law, to all intents and purposes to have and occupy any such office, &c.] whether the king might dispense with that [disabled] and upon mature deliberation and hearing of counsell learned, they resolved, and so certified the king, that the faid office was void by the faid bargaine and fale, and that the king could not dispense with the said disability, for the reason and cause above said; and thereupon Sir Marmaduke Darrell was preferred to that office.

regis Sir Arthur Ingrams cale upon the statute of 5 E. 6.

Likewise by the statute of 5 Eliz. every person which shall be 5 Eliz. cap. 1. elected a knight, citizen, burges, or baron of the cinque ports for any parliament, before he shall enter into the parliament house, shall take the oath of supremacy appointed by the act of I Eliz. and that he that entreth into the parliament without taking the faid oath, shall be deemed no knight, citizen, burges, or baron, nor shall have any voice, but shall be, as if he had been never returned, or elected. Here be words that amount to a disability, and therefore that according to the former resolutions the king cannot dispense with the same,

It is further enacted, that if any person shall for any sum of money, reward, &c. (ut fupra) other then for usuall fees, admit, institute, install, induct, invest, or place any person in or to any benefice with cure of fouls, dignity, prebend, or other living ecclefiafticall: that then every person so offending shall forfeit and lose double value, ut Jupra; and that thereupon immediately from and after the investing, installation, or induction thereof had, the same benefice, &c. shall be eftsoons meerely void, &c.

The reason of this clause (for I was of this parliament, and obferved the proceedings therein) was to avoid hasty and precipi-tate admissions, institutions, &c. to the prejudice of them that had right to present, by putting them to a quane impedit, and no fuch hast or precipitation is used, but for reward, &c. as it is to be prefumed.

There be two great enemies to justice and right, viz. pracipitatio,

And albeit the church is full by the institution, &c. against all, but the king, yet the church becommeth not void by this branch of this act, untill after induction.

And that the patron, &c. shall and may present, &c.] This is intended of the rightfull patron, or of him that hath right to present.

And be it further enacted, that if any incumbent of any benefice with cure of foules shall corruptly refigne, or exchange the same, or corruptly take for or in respect of the refigning or exchanging of the same, directly or indirectly, any pension, sum of mony, or benefit whatsoever: That then as well the giver as the taker, &c. shall lose double the value of the money so given, and double the value of one years profit.

. By another branch of this act it is provided,

That if any person or persons shall or doe receive, or take any money, reward, &c. ut supra, (ordinary and lawfull sees only excepted) for or to procure the ordaining or making of any minister, or giving any orders, or licence to preach, shall for every offence forseit and lose the summe of forty pound, and the party so corruptly made minister, shall forseit and lose the sum of ten pound, and if at any time within seven years after such corrupt entring into the ministry, he shall accept or take any benefice, living, or promotion ecclesiasticall, that then immediately, from and after the induction, investing, or installation thereos, or thereunto had, the same benefice, living, and promotion ecclesiasticall shall be estsoons meerly void, &c.

And it appeareth in our * books that deaneries, archdeaconries, prebends, &c. are benefices with cure of fouls; but they are not comprehended under the name of benefices with cure of fouls within the statute of 21 H. 8. by reason of a speciall proviso; which they had been, if no such proviso had been added, viz. deans, archdeacons, chancellours, treasurers, chanters, prebend, or a parson where there is a vicar indowed.

If any person or persons, bodies politique or corporate, which have election, nomination, voice, or assent in the choice, election, presentation, or nomination of any scholar, sellow or any other person to have room, or place in any church collegiat or cathedrall, colleges, schools, hospitals, halls, or societies, shall take or receive any money, see, or reward, &c. the place, room, office, &c. of the offender shall be void, &c.

Like cases in Placem, 176, upon the statute of 32 H, 8, of Cond. Dier, 20 Eliz, upon the statute of 27 H. 28. Of Utes.

Which have election, presentation, &c.] This act being a law perpetuall, these words extend not only to such person and persons, &c. as at that time had election, presentation, &c. but to all and every person and persons, that at any time hereaster should have election, presentation, &c. otherwise the law should be but temporary, which should be directly against the meaning of the makers of the act. And by the same reason this act extendeth not only to churches, churches, colledges, schools, hospitals, hals, and societies founded at the time of the making of the act, but to all such as should be erected or founded after.

And if any fellow, officer, or scholar in any of the churches, colleges, &c. ut supra, contract or agree for any money, reward, &c. for the leaving, or resigning up of the same his room or place to any other, &c. shall forfeit and lose double the sum of money, &c. so received, and every person by whom or for whom any money, &c. shall be given, &c. shall be incapable of that place or room for that time or turn, &c. And it is further enacted, that at the time of every such election, presentation or nomination, as well this present act, as the orders, and statutes of the same places concerning such election, presentation or nomination shall then and there be publiquely read, upon pain to forfeit and lose the sum of forty pound, &c. whereof, the one molety to him that will sue, and the other molety to the church, colledge, &c.

I have read ancient verses concerning simony, and other corruptentries into churches, which are not unnecessary, in detestation of them, to remember, > Quatuor ecclesias portis intratur in omnes, Cæsaris et simonis, sanguinis, atque Dei. Prima patet magnis, nummo patet altera, charis Tertia, sed paucis quarta patere solet.

Four doors hath every church, and all but one forebod, (Whereof unfeen tome may be peradventure)

Of Cefar, fimonie, of kindrec, and of God:

And each church man by one of these doth enter.

Great mens command doth open wide the first,

At next by money enter many one,

The third to weak allies, but (for the church the worst),

Gods dore doth open to a few or none,

To conclude this chapter with this, that fimony is odious in 7 E. 3. 39. a. the eye of the common law: for a garden in focage of a mannor, 27 E. 3. 89. whereunto an advowson is appendant, shall not present to the church, because he can take nothing for the presentation, for the which he may account to the heir; and therefore the heir in that case shall present of what age soever. And if an heir of tenant in capite, hath livery cum exitubus, yet shall the heir not present to an advowson, because no issues or profit can be taken thereof.

* Latro est qui aurum ex religione sectatur.

And the common law would have the patron so far from simony, as it denied him to recover damages in a quare impedit, or usifice of darrein presentment, before the statute of W. 2. cap. 5.

* Simony is the more odious, because it is ever accompanied with perjury, for the presentee, &c. is sworn to commit no simony.

C A P. LXXII.

Of Monomachia, Single Combate, Duell, Affrays, and Challenges, and of Private Revenge.

THIS fingle combat between any of the kings subjects, of their own heads, and for private malice, or displeasure is prohibited by the laws of this realm: for in a settled state governed by law, no man for any injury whatsoever, ought to use private revenge; for revenge belongeth to the magistrate, who is Gods lieutenant. And the law herein is grounded upon the law of God. Vindista est mini, et ego retribuam, dicit Dominus. Vengeance is mine, and I will repay it, saith the Lord. Qui vindistar valt, inveniet vindistam à domino, et peccata illius servans servabit. He that will revenge, shall finde vengeance from the lord, and he will surely keep his sins in remembrance.

It is also against the law of nature and of nations, for a man to be judge in his own proper cause, judex in propria causa, especially in duello, where sury, wrath, malice, and revenge are the rulers of the judgement. See more of private revenge, cap. Misprision, in revenge, and preservation of the honour of the party grieved.

But it is objected, that this fingle combat may be undertaken for

The honour or estimation of the party may more justly and notoriously be revenged, and repaired by the magistrate in publique, then by the party in private. 2. There is nothing honourable, that is against the laws of his country, and the law of nature and nations. 3. Whatsoever is against the law of God is impious and dishonourable. 4. The eminent danger of the parties seeking private revenge. First, concerning the soules of both of them, as well of him that killeth (who is vir fanguinis) as of him that is flain, and dieth in his malice: and as to the world, he that flayeth is in worse case, then he that is slain. For the murderer lofeth not only his lands and goods, but his life also and his honour, which he so much respected: for by his attainder his blood shall be corrupted, and if he were noble, or gentle before, he thereby becomes ignoble and base, and he that is stain by law loseth none of them: so as hereof it is truly faid, Infælix pugna, ubi majus periculum incumbit victori, quam victo. 5. Not only the foul of man, but the body also, was originally made to the image of God, Quicunque effuderit humanum sanguinem, fundetur sanguis illius, ad imaginem quippe Die factus est homo. Who so theddeth mans blood, by man shall his blood be shed, for in the image of God made he man. Solus Deus, qui vitam dat, vitæ est dominus; nec totest quisquam eam juste auserre nist Deus, vel gerens authoritatem Dei, ut judex. And this was the reason, that amongst Christians it was not lawfull for the lord to kill his villain.

In ancient time so much the law did respect honour, and order, as hear what Britton saith, Si trespas soit fait en temps de peace a chivaliers, ou a auters gents honorables per ribandes ou auters viles per- 49. b. sons, si le ferue soit per felony, &c. sauns desert del chivalier, que le ribaude perdra son poigne dount il trespassa.

And many ordinances, laws, and acts of parliament, which doe prohibit the pardon of wilfull murder, are also grounded upon the law of God, to the end none should offend in hope of pardon. * Non accipies precium ab eo qui reus est sanguinis, statim enim et ipse morietur. Ne polluatis terram habitationis vestra, qua cruore maculatur; nec aliter expiari potest, nist per ejus sanguinem, qui alterius sanguinem effuderit. Ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murtherer, which is guilty of death, but he shall be furely put to death: so ye shall not pollute the land wherein you are, for bloud defileth the land, and the land cannot be cleanfed of the bloud that is shed therein, but by the bloud of him, that shed it.

And this law is confirmed by Christ himself in the Gospel, and by the last book of holy scripture. Omnes qui acceperint gladium Apocal. 13.19, Qui in gladio occiderit, oportet eum gladio occidi. gladio peribunt.

But albeit upon the fingle combate no death enfue nor blood drawn, yet the very combate for revenge is an affray, and a great Trin. 10 E. 3. breach of the kings peace, an affright and terrour to the kings Coram rege, subjects, and is to be punished by fine and imprisonment, and to Rot. 87. An affray is a publique offence to the terrour of the kings fub- 4 H. 6. fo. 10. jects, and is an English word, and so called, because it affrighteth and maketh men attraid, and is enquirable in a leet as a common nusans. See the statute of 2 E. 3. c. 3. where it is; (en effraier de la pais,) and the writ grounded upon that statute saith, In quorundam de populo terrorem, as it appeareth in F. N. B. fo. 249. f. and the Register agreeth with the originall, and therefore the printed book (en affray de la peace) must be amended.

And if any subject by word, writing, or message challenge another to fight with him, this is also an offence before any combate be performed, and punishable by law, and it is contra pacem, coronam, et dignitatem. For quando aliquid prohibetur, prohibetur et omne, per Regulaguod devenitur ad illud. Or fuch offenders may be punished in the star-chamber, whereof there be many prefidents. Now when an affray is made by fingle combat, any stander by, that is no officer, may endeavour to part them, and prevent further danger, and the law doth incourage them hereunto; for if they receive any harm by the affrayours, they shall have their remedy by law against them, and if the affrayours receive hurt by the endeavouring only to part them, the standers by may justifie the same, and the affrayours have no remedy by law. But if either of the parties be flain, or 8 E. 2. cor. 295. wounded, or so stricken, as he falleth down for dead, in that case 22 Ast. pl. 56. the standers by ought to apprehend the party so slaying, wounding, or striking, or to endeavour the same by hue and cry, or else for his escape they shall be fined and imprisoned. There is a duellum allowed by law depending a fuit for the triall of truth, whereof we have spoken in another place, and as here it appeareth, there is a duellum against law: of both these an ancient authour saith thus, and first of the lawfull: Duellum est singularis pugna inter duos ad probandum veritatem litis, et qui vicerit probasse intelligitur, et quanwis judicium Dei expectetur ibidem, quicunque tamen monomachiam, i. e. singularem pugnam sponte susceptivel vel optulerit, homicida est, et contrahit mortale peccatum. And if the appellant after battail waged become blinde upon any occasion, the appellee in favorem vitæ shall goe quit. When issue is joyned to be tried by battail, and the triall by battail is become impossible by the act of God, or by the default of the appellant, the appellee goeth free.

And this kind of battail, in case of appeals and writ of right, is by publique authority and course of law, whereunto all the people by an implied consent are parties; and (as some hold) hath his warrant by the word of God by the single battail between David and Goliah, which was strucken by publique authority.

Upon this statute two things fall into consideration. First, what the common law was before the making of this statute. Secondly, the true sense and exposition of this act. By any writ, action, bill, complaint, or information.] Out of these words are perjury, and subornation of perjury upon an indictment for the king (for example of riot) as it was refolved in Flowers cafe, because that perjury upon an indictment is not within the statute. But feeing perjury was an offence punishable by the common law, though the indictment of Flower grounded upon this statute was overthrown, yet is such perjury upon an indictment punishable, and most commonly punished in the star-chamber.

Information.] By this it appeareth, that perjury committed in an information exhibited by the kings attorny, or any other for the king, by any witnes produced on the behalf of the king, is punishable either by this act or by the common law. And so it was refolved in the faid case of Rowl. Ap Eliza, which was this. kings attorny preferred an information in the exchequer against Hugh Nanny esquire the father, and Hugh Nanny the son, and others for intrusion and cutting down a great number of trees, &c. in Penrose in the county of Merioneth. The defendant pleaded not guilty, and the tryall being at the bar, Rowl. Ap Eliza was a witnesse produced for the king, who deposed upon his oath to the jury, that Hugh the father and Hugh the son joyned in sale of the said trees, and commanded the vendees to cut them down: upon which testimony the jury found for the king, and affessed great damages; and thereupon judgement and execution was had. Hugh Nanny the father exhibited his bill in the star-chamber at the common law. and charged Rowland Ap Eliza with perjury, and affigned the perdury, in that he the said Hugh the father never joined in sale, nor commanded the vendees to cut down the trees, &c. And it was resolved, first, that perjury in a witnesse was punishable by the common law. Secondly, that perjury in a witnesse for the king was punishable by the common law, either upon an indictment, or in an information, or by this act in an information. And the faid Rowland Ap Eliza was by the sentence of the court convicted of wilfull and corrupt perjury.

But for our more orderly proceeding, let us define, or describe what perjury is in legall understanding, both upon this statute, and at the common law.

Now let us peruse the branches of this description.

A lawfull oath. This word oath is derived of the Saxon word eoth; and is expressed by three feverall names, viz. 1. Sacramentum, à facra, et mente, because it ought to be performed with a sacred and religious mind. Quia jurare, est Doum in tostem vocare, et est acus divini cultus. 2. Juramentum à jure, which fignifieth law and right, because both are required and meant, or because it must be done with a just and rightfull mind. 3. Jusjur and um, compounded of two words, à jure, et jurando. In the common law sacramentum is most commonly used: in our books and ancient statutes published in French, ferement, of the French word ferment, is ufed.

And falfely.] Herein the law taketh a diversity between falfehood in expresse words, and that is only within this statute, and falsehood in knowledge or minde, which may be punished though the words be true. For example, damages were awarded to the plaintife in the star-chamber according to the value of his goods riotously taken away by the defendant: the plaintiffe caused two men to sweare the value of his goods, that never saw nor knew them; and though that which they sware was true, yet because they knew it not, it was a false oath in them, for the which both the procurer and the witnesses were sentenced in the starchamber.

For (as Fleta saith) Ad rectum juramentum exiguntur tria, veritas, conscientia, et judicium: truth and conscience in the witnesse, and judgement in the judge. And herewith agreeth Bracton, that a man may sweare the truth, and yet be perjured. Dicunt quidam verum, et mentiuntur, et pejerant, eo quod contra mentem vadunt. Ut si Judæus juraverit Christum natum ex virgine, perjurium committit, qula

Or by the subornation of other.] Subornation is derived of sub and orno, and ornare in one of his fignifications is to prepare, so as fubornare is as much to fay, as to prepare secretly, or underhand. Eft autem subornare quasi subtus in aure insum male ornare, unde subornatio dicitur de falsi expressione, aut de veri suppressione. And it was ruled by the whole court, that the count was vicious and insufficient for two causes. First, for that in this act of 5 Eliz. as here it appeareth, there be two distinct clauses, one if he be perjured of his own proper act: the other if he be perjured by subornation, &c. and the plaintife ought to declare in certainty, within which of them the defendant is perjured. The second cause was, where the act saith [wilfully and corruptly commit any wilfull perjury, &c.] and the words of the count be falso dixit et deposuit: and saith not, voluntarie et corrupte; and the said clause, et sic commiste voluntarium et corruptum perjurium, falveth not the former infufficiency, because it is but a conclusion upon the former matter.

We have the more willingly repeated these ancient punishments, to shew how in part, (viz. concerning the eares and pillory,) this act for the first offence concurreth with the ancient pu-

(1) Forge.] To forge is metaphorically taken from the fmith, who beateth upon his anvill, and forgeth what fashion or shape he will: the offence (as it appeareth before) is called crimen fals, and the offender falsarius, and the Latin word to forge is falsare or far bricare. And this is properly taken when the act is done in the name of another person.

26 H. 6. forger 8. 27 H. 6. 3. The statute of 1 H. 5. hath these words [forge of new any salse deed.] And yet if A make a seossement by deed to B, of certaine land, and after A maketh a seossement by deed to C of the same land with an antidate before the seossement to B; this was adjudged to be a forgery within that statute, and by like reason within this statute also: and the rather in respect of the words subsequent, [or make, &c.]

(2) Or make, &c. These be larger words then to forge: for one may make a falle writing within this act, though it be not forged in the name of another, nor his seale nor hand counterseited. As if A make a true deed of seossement under his hand and seale of the manner of Dale unto B, and B or some other rase out D the first letter of Dale, and put in S, and then where the true deed was of the manner of Dale, now it is faisely altered and made the mannor of Sale. This is a false writing under seale within the purview of this statute. And so it is if a rent charge of one hundred pounds by the year be granted out of land in fee or for life, &c. and the grantee or any other rafe out one, and in stead thereof writeth two: this is a false writing within the danger of this

(3) Or fubrilly cause, or wittingly assent. To cause, is to procure or counsell one to sorge, &c. To assent, is to give his assent or agreement afterwards to the procurement or counfell of another; to confent, is to agree at the time of the procurement or counfell.

(4) Deed, charter, or writing fealed.] It is required, that the deed, charter, or writing must be sealed; that is, have some impression upon the wax, for figillum est cera impressa, quia cera fine impressione non eft figillum; and no deed, charter, or writing, can have the force of a deed without a seale.

(5) Writing [coled.] These are large words: for the making of a falle customary of a mannor in writing under seale, containing di- In camera Relvers false customes tending to the disherison of the lord of the man-lata. nor, and that the fame had been allowed and permitted by the lords of the mannor, &c which was also false, was resolved to be within these words, [a false writing sealed.]

(6) Court roll, or the will of any person or persons in writing.] Here be two kind of muniments that need not be sealed, because they may take effect without any feal, for that they be deeds; as court rols concerning grants, furrenders, admittances, &c. of copy or customary lands: and the last will in writing. If any person which writeth the will of a fick man inserteth a clause in his last will, concerning the devise of any lands or tenements, which he had in fee-simple, falsly without any warrant, or direction of the divisor: albeit he did not forge, or fally make the whole will, Dier 12 El. f. yet is he punishable by this statute, as it hath been often holden 238. Sir James in the star chamber against the opinion reported by my lord Dier.

(7) To the intent that the state of freehold or inheritance, of or in any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, freehold or copyhold, shall or may be molested, troubled, defeated, recovered, or charged] The great doubt upon this branch, and of the branch hereafter ensuing, was, for that it is not expressed by this act, what estate, or interest should be mentioned to passe by the deed, charter, &c. whereby the estate of . the freehold or inheritance should or might be molested, &c. or charged; whether if one did forge, &c. a deed, charter, &c. of an interest, or tearm of a hundred or a thousand years, &c. of lands, which are the freehold or inheritance of another, whereby the fame shall or may be molested, &c. And the same question of a rent charge for years in the like case: and the doubt was the greater in respect of the clause hereafter ensuing, which is, To the intent that any person or persons shall or may have or claim any estate or interest for tearm of years of in or to any mannors, &c. And it was refolved, that a leafe or charge for years of any lands being the freehold or inheritance of any person, was within this branch, for the clause is generall, not mentioning any estate or interest, &c. whereby the moleftation, &c. should grow: and it was requisite it should extend to leases or charges for years, for otherwise mens citates of freehold or inheritance, &c. might be of little or no value:

and accordingly it was resolved, Pasch. 38 Eliz. in the star-chamber between the lady Gresham plaintif, and Roger Booth scrivener of London, Markham and others defendants, for the forging of a grant of a rent charge, by deed bearing date anno 21 Eliz. for ninety nine years to the faid Markham out of all fir Thomas Greshams lands of inheritance, and for publication thereof; and fentence given upon the faid branch accordingly against Roger Booth for publication of the same.

And the faid branch after enfuing, is to be understood when the forgery, &c. is to the molestation of a termor. As if A. be posfessed of a lease of lands for years, and B. in his name doth forge an affignment to C. of his tearm, this is directly within the letter and meaning of this branch, and the rather in respect of those

Vide 4 H. 6. 25. 8 H. 6. 33. 20 ti. 6. 33 H. 6. 23. 15 E. 4. 24. Pi. com. 88.

(8) Or the right, title, or interest of any person or persons in or to the me.] These words were added, for that the statute of 1 H. 5. being to undoe, and trouble the possession and title (in the conjunctive) of the faid kings liege people: doubt was made whether a forgery to bar one that had but a bare right or title, and no poffession, was within that statute: and therefore this clause of & Eliz. added this clause in the disjunctive, as here it appeareth. But now by a speciall branch of this act the statute of i H. c. cap. 3. being doubtfully penned, is repealed by a clause in this act, and greater punishment inflicted by this statute.

(9) Or shall pronounce, publish, or shew forth in evidence any such false and forged deed, &c. as true knowing the same to be forged.] Here be two things to be explained: first, what it is to pronounce, or publish as true. Secondly, what knowledge is sufficient.

To pronounce or publish is, when one by words or writing pronounceth or publisheth the deed, &c. to any other as true.

(10) Knowing the fame to be forged.] This knowledge may come by two means, either of his own knowledge, or by the relation of As if A. telleth B. that such deed is false and forged, and yet B. will after pronounce or publish this to be a true deed, and afterwards it falleth out by proof that the relation of A. was true, and the deed in truth was forged, B. is in the danger of this statute; and so was it resolved in the abovesaid case of the lady Gresham, against Roger Booth, &c. ubi fuera, and sentence given accord-

Dier 15 Eliz. Taverners cafe. ubi fupra.

(11) And that the defendant shall suffer upon the pillory the corporall penance, &c.] And there is a clause that the plaintif should not release nor discontinue the punishment, &c. but only costs and damages: and yet it was refolved that the queen might pardon the corporall punishment, which trencheth to common example.

Pasch. 34 E. 3. Coram rege, Rot. 30. Kanc' the case of Goditha Waldish. Dier 7 El. 231.

And upon the statute of W. 2. ca. 25. which giveth two years imprisonment in the ravishment of ward, the king may pardon the faid corporall punishment of imprisonment. And the punishment of finding of furety, and forjuring the realm, &c. upon the statute of W. 2. cap. 28. De malefactoribus in parcis may be pardoned by the king.

(12) Any fa'se charter or deed.] This must be intended to be f aled according to the former clause, though it be not here 1, ecified.

Pl. com. 80, b.

(13) To the intent that any person or persons shall or may have or claim any effate or interest for tearm of years.] This branch hath been explained before in the former part of this statute

(14) Not being copy hold.] This needeth no explication.

(15) Or annuity. This is evident.

(16) Any obligation, or bill obligatory.] These must be intended F. N.B. 96. L. to be sealed: it a man forge a statute staple, or a recognisance in c. & 10. a. the nature of a statute staple; that is, acknowledge them, or either of them in the name of another; these are obligations within this act, for each of them hath the feal of the party. But otherwise it is 15 H. 7. 15, &c. of a statute merchant, or of a recognisance, because they have not the feal of the conutor.

This extends to a testament in writing, Dier, 13 Elis. (17) Or writing.] whereby the tearm for years or goods and chattels be devised, and 302, b. the former branch extendeth to a will in writing, concerning freehold and inheritance.

(18) Acquitance, release or discharge. Lodowick Grevil esquire Mich. 13 & 14 was bound by recognifance of two hundred pound, to Rowland El. in camera Hinde of the Inner Temple, for payment of one hundred pound. Hinde and Hinde wrote a letter to Grevil, and writ his name in the lowest Grevill. part of the letter; (as many use when they write to men of great calling) Grevil caused the letter to be cut off, and a generall release in few words to be written above Hindes name, and took off Hindes feal, and fixed it under the release: so there was Hindes hand and feal to this release. Hinde being not paid his hundred pound, brought a scire fac' upon the recognisance, whereunto

Grevill pleaded this release, Hinde pleaded non eft factum, and tried his deed, whereupon judgement was given against him, whereby

Hinde was barred of his debt. For this forged release Grevil was fentenced in the star-chamber upon this statute.

(19) Shall pay to the party grieved, his double damages.] Upon these words in the case aforesaid, between Hinde and Grevill, the question was, whether Hinde should have double damages in respect of the penalty, viz. the two hundred pound, or of the hundred pound, the due debt appearing in the condition of the recognifance. And it was resolved, that damages should be affessed by the court to double the penalty, for the penalty should be recovered by law if the forged release had not been: and this was reported by the lord Dier, and imprinted, and fince omitted out of the print.

(20) Being hereafter convicted or condemned of any of the offences aforefaid, shall, &c. eftsoons commit, &c. any of the said offences.] Here be four kind of offences; the first concerning molestation, &c. of freehold and inheritance. Secondly, the publication of the fame knowing, &c. The third concerning a tearm for years, annuities, and demands personals. Fourthly, the publication thereof.

Now the question upon this branch concerning felony, was, that Pach, 7 Ja. In-whereas the said Roger Booth was convicted in the star-chamber ter fir Will. for the publishing of the forged grant by deed of a rent charge Reade pl. and Rogerum Booth of a hundred pound per annum, as is aforesaid; afterwards the said estation of the station of Roger and others were charged in the star-chamber with the forging camera stellate. of a deed of feoffment in the name of fir Thomas Gresham bearing date 20 Eliz. but forged long after: whether this fecond forgery was felony, or no, within this branch; and the doubt did arise upon the said words [eftsoms] commit any of the said offences. And it was objected, that by reason of this word [eftsons] iterum, the second offence must be of the same nature as the first offence was; as the first offence being for publication of a forged deed, &c. the second offence must be for the publication of another forged deed, &c. and upon that branch whereupon the first offence was grounded, or else it was faid, it was not iterum, which word was in fignification quasi iter unum, that is to say, per idem iter, and it is so taken for the second time. Primo quidem decipi, incommodum oft, iterum fultum, tertio turpe: which doubt was referred to the confiderations of the two chief justices, and chief baron, who upon hearing of councell learned of both fides, and upon conference, and confideration had of this act, resolved, that the second offence was felony within the words, and meaning of this act, for the words be express, being condemned of any of the said offences, estsoons commit any of the said offences. So as by reason of these words, any of the said offences, this word [efifons] is well satisfied, if he commit the fecond time any of them; and so these words any of the faid offences extend to any of the faid four offences before mentioned. And it was also resolved by them, that by reason of this word [estsoons] the second forgery, &c. must be committed after the first conviction, or else it is no felony,

Provided always, &c. that if any person, &c. hath of his own head, &c. forged or made, &c. or if any person, &c. hath heretofore published or shewed forth any false deed, &c.

Hanford before this statute forged a lease for years of the land of the lord Williams of Tame, which lease after by Weynman (which hath married one of the daughters and heirs of the said lord Williams) was impeached, but not as forged, and by composition for two hundred pound was redeemed by Weynman, and the lease was cancelled. And after Weynman perceiving the lease to be forged, sued Hanford in the chancery to have restitution of the two hundred pound, and there Hanford after this statute of 5 Eliz. maintained the lease as good and true: whereupon Weynman sued Hanford in the starchamber, where by the opinion of the chief justices it was holden, that it was not within this statute, because that the deed was cancelled, and Hanford made no title to the interest of the tearm.

Provided always, &c. that this act or any thing therein contained, shall not extend to any person that shall plead or shew forth any deed or writing exemplified under the great seal of England, or under the seal of any other authentique court of this realm, nor shall extend to any judge or justice, or other person that shall cause any seal of any court to be set to such deed, charter or writing enrolled, not knowing the same to be salle or forged.

Mich. ro Jacobi regis in communi banco in a prohibition between Tho. Read pl. and Avis Hide, and Rich. Hide defendants.

This must be intended of a deed or writing, which by law may be exemplified: for the knowledge whereof we will report a resolution of the whole court of the common pleas. The issue between the said parties to be tried at the bar was, whether the last abbot of Abbingdon, and all his predecessors, & c. held certain lands in the parish parish of Saint Ellens, &c. discharged of the payment of tithes; and the plaintif offered to shew in evidence to prove the said land to be discharged of payment of tithes, a vidimus, or innotescimus under the great seal in these words: Vidimus quendam antiquum librum in pergameno intitulatum volumen de copiis munimentorum seu diverforum gestorum, et actorum monasterii de Abbingdon. In which book was a copy of a bull of the pope, for the discharge of the said land for payment of tithes, which was but part (amongst other things) of the faid book. And by the opinion of the whole court, hearing of the counsell of both parties, it was resolved that the said exemplification ought not to be given in evidence to the jury for these causes: first, because that which was exemplified, was not of record; for neither deed, charter, or other writing, either sealed, or without seal, ought to be exemplified under the great seale, or any other seal in court of record, for seals of courts of record ought not to exemplifie any thing but that which is of record, because records be publique, whereunto every subject may have recourse to confer the exemplification with the record itfelf, and records be in the custody of sworn officers, and therefore no inconvenience can follow upon the exemplification of them. But a deed, charter, and other writings are private, and remain in the custody of the party, and may be rased, interlined, or corrupted in points materiall, and if they should be exemplified, the rasure, interlineation, and corruption shall not appear therein. Also the deed, charter, or other writing may be forged, and if they should be exemplified, then the exemplification might ever be shewed in evidence, and not the deed, &c. it felf, and so the forgery, and falfity should never upon the view of the deed, or of the feal, or other things rifing upon the view, be discovered. Moreover if a forged deed should be exemplified, then the effect of this statute concerning publication should be taken away; for then the forged deed, &c. it self might never be published, or given in evidence, but the exemplification, and so this statute in that point deluded: and therefore where this statute, or any other statute or Mich. 29 & 39 book speaks of an exemplification, vidimus or innotescimus of a deed, Elis. lib. 5. fo, &c. it must be intended of a deed inrolled, viz. the exemplification, vidimus, or innetescimus of the involment thereof, which is of cale. record. It was further resolved that no record, or inrolment of any record, may be exemplified under the great feale, but of a record of the court of chancery, or other record duly removed thither by certiorari, &c. Furthermore it was resolved, that no exemplification ought to be of any part of a letters patents, or of any other record, or of the incolment thereof, but the whole record or the inrolment thereof ought to be exemplified, fo that the whole truth may appeare, and not of fuch part, as makes for the one party and nothing that make against him, or that manifesteth the truth. Lastly, in the case at the barre, the said book was intituled, Volumen de copiis munimentorum, et diversrum gestorum. as feeing the bull itselfe (being no matter of record) could not be exemplified; à foetiori, no exemplification could be had of the copie of the fame. And if bulls, &c. might be exemplified, then there might be an evalion to make the statute of 28 H. 8. cap. 16. 28 H. 8. cap of small force, which prohibiteth pleading, or alledging of bulls, & Mar cap. 8. &c, under paine of a premunire, as by that act appeareth.

Against Fugitives, or such as depart out of the Realme without License, and such as are beyond Sea, and returne not upon Command.

T is first to be seen of acts in parliament published in print, which of them are abrogated and repealed, and which of them stand in force. The statute of 5 R. 2. cap. 2. is repealed by the statute of 4 Jac. cap. 1. And the statutes of 13 Eliz. cap. 3. & 14 Eliz. cap. 6. are expired. The statute of 12 R. 2. such as 12 R. 2. ca. 15. passe the sea, or send out of the realme to provide or purchase any benefice of holy church, with cure or without cure, are in danger of a premunire. No person resiant within any of the kings do- 25 H.8. cap. 19. minions, shall depart out of any of those dominions, to any visita- 1 Eliz. c. 1. tion, congregation, or assembly for religion.

1 Jac. cap. 4.

Anno 1 Jac. cap. 4. and 3 Jac. cap. 5. Against going or sending of children to any seminary beyond sea, and against the departure out of the realme (without license) of any children not being souldiers, mariners, merchants, or other apprentifes, or factors, for any cause whatsoever. And anno 3 Ja. ca. 4. against imposing felony upon any subject that shall depart this realme, to serve any prince, state, or potentate: or shall passe over the seas, and there shall voluntarily serve any such foraine prince, state, or potentate; not having before his or their going or passing, taken the oath mentioned in that act. And likewise imposing felony upon any gentleman or person of higher degree, or any person which hath borne or shall beare any office, or place of captaine, lieutenant, or any other place, charge, or office in campe, army, or company of fouldiers, or conducter of fouldiers, that shall goe, or passe voluntarily out of this realme, to serve any such foraine prince, state, or potentate, or shall voluntarily serve any such foraine prince, state, or potentate, before he be bound by obligation with two furcties, as in that act But it is provided that upon the attainder of any fuch felony, no forfeiture of dower or corruption of blood shall Reade over these statutes, for they are so plainly penned, as they need no exposition.

Next unto this, two things fall into confideration, first, what acts of parliament not published in print in our books of statutes do prohibit men to passe the seas without license. And fecondly, what may be done therein by the common law of England.

At the parliament holden at Clarendon, anno 10 H. 2. called the affise of Clarendon, Facta est recognitio cujusdam partis consuetudinum et libertatum antecessorum regis, et ca. 4. sic recognitum est. copis, episcopis, et personis regni non licet exire regnum absque licentia domini regis, et si exicrint, si regi placuerit, securum eum facient, quòd nec in eundo nec in redeundo, nec moram faciendo perquirent malum seu damnum domino regi vel regno.

This appeareth in it felfe to be but a recognition, or declaration of the common law: and this is manifestly proved by the writ in the Register at the common law, pursuing in effect the very words of the said act of 10 H. 2. Breve de securitate invenienda, quod se non divertat ad partes exteras fine licentia regis.

And hereupon there ariseth a diversity between one of the clergie, and one of the laity: for a man of the church may be compelled to put in furety, that he should not depart the realme without the kings license, nor shall there attempt any thing in contempt or prejudice of the king or of his people. And this writ is directed to the sheriffe, and faith, Quia datum est nobis intelligi, quòd A. B. clericus versus partes exteras ad quam plura nobis et quam pluribus de populo nostro præjudicialia et damnosa ibid. prosequend., &c. Whereby it appeareth, that this writ lyeth only in the case of an ecclefiasticall person, or a man of the church, and that for three reasons. First, for that they had the cure of soules, and therefore ought to be refident. Secondly, for that they, maintaining foraine authority, impugned many of the kings lawes, to the great prejudice of the laity. Thirdly, they had no temporall lands, therefore

There is another writ in the * Register, and that is to be directed to the party himselfe, viz. either to the clerk, or to the layman, wherein the king reciting, Quod datum est nobis intelligi, quod tu vers. partes exteras absque licentia nostra clandestine te divertere, et b quamplurima nobis et coronæ nostræ prejudicialia ibid. prosequi intendas, &c. sub periculo quid incumbit prohibemus, ne vers. partes exteras absque licentia nostra speciali aliqualiter te divertas, nec quicquam ibid. prosequi, &c. And upon this writ the party is not to finde any furety, for there is no word of furety in this writ. And if the c subject cannot be found, the king may make a proclamation under the

Now let us peruse such authorities as we finde in records or books of law in ferie temporis, taking some few examples for many

By this it appeareth, that these are prohibited to goe beyond sea without licence: but others of the inferiour laity may go without license, if they travell not to the abovesaid prohibited ends. But those of the laity and men of the church also being beyond sea, may be commanded by the kings writ, either under the great seale, or privile seale, in side et ligitantia, &c. to returne into the kingdome (though he be not there to any of the abovesaid prohibited ends;) and if he returne not, for his contempt his lands and goods shall be seised, quantique, &c. Herein it is to be observed, that seeing by law, no earle, baron, or knight (as Britton saith) nor religious, &c. ought to goe out of the realme, a generall proclamation declarative will serve to aggravate their offence: but otherwise it is of those, that are not prohibited by law, they must have such a particular writ or proclamation as is abovesaid.

1 Sir Matthew Gourny knight was prohibited by the kings writ to depart the realm, and to serve in wars expressly inhibited by the king: which notwithstanding he did. Now the record saith, Quia Mathæus Gourny miles contra defensionem regis transfrctavit, et se guerris sibi per regem inhibitis immiscuit, tam in corpore, quam in bonis forissecit regimanerium de Corimollet simul cum una carucat terræ, &c.

Note that ecclefiasticall persons could not goe beyond sea on pilgrimage without licence, nor to doe any thing in prejudice of the

And it is to be observed that the king may grant licence to travail beyond the seas, either under the great seal, privy seal, or privy signet, but he cannot recall one that is beyond sea, but by the great seale, or privy seal.

But for avoiding of tediousnesse, and heaping many to one end, let us descend to later times.

Against Monopolists, Propounders, and Projectors.

T appeareth * by the preamble of this act (as a judgement in * The flatute of parliament) that all grants of monopolies are against the ancient 21 Jac. ca. 3. and fundamentall laws of this kingdome, and therefore it is necessary to define what a monopoly is.

A monopoly is an institution, or allowance by the king by his grant, commission, or otherwise to any person or persons, bodies politique, or corporate, of or for the fole buying, felling, making, working, or using of any thing, whereby any person or persons, bodies politique, or corporate, are fought to be restrained of any freedome, or liberty that they had before, or hindred in their law- & 30. in the fecond pt. of the full trade.

For the word monopoly, dicitur, ἀπὸ τῦ μόνυ, i. folo, καὶ πω-Mouns, i. vendere, quod est, cum unus folus aliquod genus mercatura universum vendit, ut solus vendat, pretium ad suum libitum statuens: hereof you may read more at large in that case. And the law of the realm in this point is grounded upon the law of God, which saith, Non accipies loco pignoris inferiorem et superiorem melam, Deut. 42. 24. quia animam suam apposuit tibi. Thou shalt not take the nether or v. 6. upper milstone to pledge, for he taketh a mans life to pledge: whereby it appeareth that a mans trade is accounted his life, because it maintaineth his life; and therefore the monopolist that taketh away a mans trade, taketh away his life, and therefore is fo much the more odious, because he is vir sanguinis. Against these inventers and propounders of evill things, the Holy Ghost hath Rom, 1. 10. spoken, inventores malorum, &c. digni funt morte.

That monopolies are against the ancient and fundamentall laws Commercium jurg of the realm (as it is declared by this act) and that the monopolist gentium commune was in times past, and is much more now punishable, for obtaining and procuring of them, we will demonstrate it by reason, and prove it by authority.

Whatsoever offence is contrary to the ancient and fundamentall laws of the realm, is punishable by law; but the use of a monopoly is contrary to the ancient and fundamentall laws of the realme, therefore the use of a monopoly is punishable by law.

That offence which is contrary to the ancient and fundamentall laws is malum in fe. The minor is proved by this declaration in parliament.

The liberty that the subject hath to goe to any clerk in the W. I. cap. 47,

The judgement in the said safe of monopolies cited before, Trin. 44 Eliz. was the principall motive of the publishing of the kings book mentioned in the preamble of this act, and that book was a great motive of obtaining the royall affent to this act of parliament, whereof we are now to speak. This act moved from the house of commons: the act is long and in print, and need not here to be rehearsed: yet will we peruse and explain the words in the severall branches of the act

By his grant, commission, or otherwise.] These words [or otherwise] are of a large extent, and are well warranted by this act, the words whereof extend not only to all proclamations, inhibitions, restraints, and warrants of assistance of the king, but all inhibitions, restraints and warrants of assistance of all or any of the privy councell or any other: and all other matters or things whatsoever either of the king, or of all or any of his privy councell to the instituting, erecting, strengthening, furthering, or countenancing of the sole buying, selling, &c. or any of them, are declared to be altogether contrary to the laws of this realm, &c. ut in statute. This act herein, and in the residue thereof, is forcibly and vehemently penned for the suppression of all monopolies: for monopolies in times past were ever without law, but never without friends.

Sole.] This word [sole] is to be applied to five severall things, viz. buying, selling, making, working, and using; four of which are speciall, and the last, viz. (sole using) is so generall, as no monopoly can be raised, but shall be within the reach of this statute, and yet for more surely these words [or of any other monopolies]

fions are made by this act, as hereafter shall appear.

Of any thing.] As the words before were generall, so these words [of any thing] are of a large extent. Resemin generalem habet significationem, quia tam corporea, quam incorporea, cujuscunque sunt generis, natura. sive speciei, comprehendit: and this word causeth some exceptions hereafter to be made, whereof we shall speak in their proper place.

Whereby any person or persons, &c.] For this see the statute of Magna Carta, ubi supra: and this clause is impliedly warranted by these words [or of any other monopolies] in the first clause of the

Shall be for ever hereafter examined, h. ard, tried, and determined by and according to the common laws of this realm, and not otherwise.] This act having declared all monopolies, &c. to be void by the common law, hath provided by this clause, that they shall be examined, heard, tried, and determined in the courts of the common law according to the common law, and not at the councell table, starchamber, chancery, exchequer chamber, or any other court of like nature, but only according to the common laws of this realm, with words negative, and not otherwise: for such boldnesse the monopolists took, that often at the councell table, star-chamber, chamber, and exchequer chamber, petitions, informations, and bils were preferred in the star-chamber, &c. pretending a contempt for not obeying the commandements and clauses of the said grants of monopolies, and of the proclamations, &c. concerning the same: for the preventing of which mischief this branch was added.

That all person and persons, bodies politique, and corporate what sever, which now are, or hereaster shall be, shall stand, and be disabled, and uncapable, &c.] This branch for further extirpation of all monopolies, disableth all men, &c. to have, that is, to take any monopoly, or to use, exercise, or put in ure any monopoly, &c. where-

Agento mutat dum monopola piper.

If any person or persons after the end of forty dayes next after the end of this present session of partiament shall be hindred, grieved, disturbed, or disquieted, Gc.]

By this branch fix things are provided and enacted. 1. Remedy is given to the party grieved at the common law, by action or actions to be grounded upon this flatute. 2. This remedy may be had in the court of the kings bench, common pleas, and exchequer, or any of them, at the election of the party grieved. 3. The party grieved shall recover treble damages, and double costs.

A. No essoin, protection, wager of law, aid prayer, priviledge, injunction, or order of restraint to be allowed in any such action. By (aid prayer) is intended as well the writ de domina rege inconsulto, as the usual form of aid prayer, for both are to one end, and (order of restraint) was added, for the councell table, star-chamber, chancery, exchequer chamber, and the like.

5. If any person or persons shall after notice given, &c. cause or or procure any fuch action to be flayed or delayed before judgement, by colour or means of any order, warrant, power or authorrity, fave onely of the court wherein fuch action shall be brought and depending, the person or persons so offending shall incur the danger of premunire, &c.

This clause extends to the privy councell, star-chamber, chancery, exchequer chamber, and the like, and likewise to those that shall procure any warrant, &c. from the king, &c. and so it was resolved by a committee of both houses before this bill passed; but it extendeth not to the judges of the court before whom any such action shall be brought, for before judgements, days must be given by orders of court, &c.

6 Or after judgement had upon fuch action shall cause or procure execution of or upon any such judgemen, to be stayed by colour or means of any order, warrant, power or authority, save only by writ of error and attaint, the person or persons so offending shall

This clause is more generall then the former, being the fifth clause, for this extendeth also to the judges of the court where the action is brought or depending, if any stay or delay be used by them after judgement, and so it was resolved as is aforesaid.

Pasch. 15 Eliz. in the exchequer chamber Bircots case.

Rot. parl. 23 E. 4. nu. 29. 22 E. 4. ca. 5. 7 E. 6. ca. 6. 3 Jacobi, ca. 5.

There be in this act concerning monopolies or fole buying, &c. many provisoes. The first is, that this act shall not extend to any letters patents or grants of priviledge heretofore made of the fole working or making of any manner of new manufacture: but that new manufacture must have seven properties. First, it must be for twenty one years or under. Secondly, it must be granted to the first and true inventer. Thirdly, it must be of such manufactures, which any other at the making of fuch letters patents did not use: for albeit it were newly invented, yet if any other did use it at the making of the letters patents, or grant of the priviledge, it is declared and enacted to be void by this act. Fourthly, the priviledge must not be contrary to law: such a priviledge, as is confonant to law, must be substantially and effentially newly invented; but if the substance was in effe before, and a new addition thereunto, though that addition make the former more profitable, yet is it not a new manufacture in law: and fo was it resolved in the exchequer chamber, Pasch. 15 Eliz. in Bircots case for a priviledge concerning the preparing and melting, &c. of lead ore: for there it was faid, that that was to put but a new button to an old coat; and it is much easier to adde then to in-And there it was also resolved, that if the new manufacture be fubstantially invented according to law, vet no old manufacture in use before can be prohibited. Fifthly, nor mischievous to the flate by raifing of prices of commodities at home. In every fuch new manufacture that deserves a priviledge, there must be urgens necessitas, and evidens utilitas. Sixthly, nor to the hurt of trade. This is very materiall and evident. Seventhly, nor generally in-There was a new invention found out heretofore, that bonnets and caps might be thickned in a fulling mill, by which means more might be thickned and fulled in one day then by the labours of fourfcore men, who got their livings by it. was ordained that bonnets and caps should be thickned and fulled by the strength of men, and not in a fulling mill,, for it was holden inconvenient to turn so many labouring men to idlenesse. If any of these seven qualities fail, the priviledge is declared and enacted to be void by this act: and vet this act, if they have all these properties, set them in no better case, then they were before this act.

The second provise concerneth the priviledge of new manuface. Concerning new tures hereafter to be granted: and this also must have seven pro- manufactures perties, first it must be for the tearm of fourteen years or under: hereaster to be the other fix propercies must be such as are aforesaid, and yet this granted, &c. act maketh them no better, then they should have been, if this act had never been made, but only except and exempt them out of the purvien, and penalty of this law.

The cause wherefore the priviledges of new manufactures either before this act granted, or which after this act should be granted, having these seven properties, were not declared to be good, was, for that the reason wherefore such a priviledge is good in law is, because the inventor bringeth to and for the common wealth a new manufacture by his invention, cost and charges, and therefore it is reason, that he should have a priviledge for his reward (and the incouragement of others in the like) for a convenient time; but it was thought that the times limited by this act were too long for the private, before the common wealth should be partaker thereof, and fuch as ferved fuch priviledged persons by the space of seven years in making or working of the new manufacture (which is the time limited by law of apprenticehood) must be apprentices or fervants stil during the residue of the priviledge, by means whereof fuch numbers of men would not apply themselves thereunto, as should be requisite for the common wealth, after the priviledge ended. And this was the true cause wherefore both for the time passed, and for the time to come, they were left of such force, as they were before the making of this act.

The third provise is, that this act shall not extend or be prejudicial to any grant or priviledge, power or authority heretofore made, granted, allowed, or confirmed by any act of parliament now in force, so long as the same shall so continue in force. was added for that the city of London and other cities and boroughs, &c. have some priviledges for buying, selling, &c. by acts of parliament. For example, the statute of 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. giveth a priviledge to cities, boroughs, towns corporate, and market towns, for the sale by retale of certain wares and merchandizes, and some other acts of parliament in like case; all which do prove, that such priviledge could not be granted by letters pas tents. But specially this clause was added in respect of the gene-

The fourth proviso. Provided also, and it is hereby further intended, declared, and inacted, that this act, &c. shall not in any wife extend, or be prejudiciall unto the city of London, &c.

By this provide, not only the grants, charters, and letters patents to any city or towne corporate, &c. but also the customes used within the same, are excepted out of this act: which seemeth to be more than need, because the first clause of the purvien of this act doth extend but to commissions, grants, licences, charters, and letters patents.

The lifth provise doth except out of the purvien and penalty of this statute four things, but leaveth them of the like force and effect, and no other, as this act had never been made. First, the priviledge concerning printing made, or hereafter to be made. Secondly, commissions, grants, and letters patents made or hereafter to be made for or concerning the digging, making, or compounding of falt-petre or gunpowder. Thirdly, or the casting or making of ordnance, or thot for ordnance. Fourthly, grants and letters patents heretofore made, or hereafter to be made of any office or offices heretofore erected, made, or ordained, and now in being, and put in execution, (other then fuch offices as have been decried by any his majesties proclamations.) So as to the thing by this branch excepted, four things are required. First that it be an office. This extendeth only to lawfull offices for divers causes. . 1. It was necessary to except lawfull offices in respect of these words [sole using.] 2. Offices are duties, so called, to put the officer in minde of his duty. 3. That which is voide and against law, is no duty, unlesse it be not to use them. 4. Such as are erected against law, are monopolies and oppressions of the people, and no offices. 5. In acts of parliament lawfull offices are intended, as in like cases hath been often adjudged; therefore unlawfull offices are all taken away by this act, and lawfull offices remain and con-

Secondly, that it be an office heretofore erected. By this act the erection of all new offices, which were not erected before this act, are wholly taken away.

Thirdly, that it be now in being, and put in execution. Though the office were erected before this act, yet if it were not in being and put in execution the 19 day of February in the 21 year of the reigne of king James (at what time this parliament begun) it is cleerly taken away by this act.

Fourthly, that it be such an office, as hath not been decried (for so is the record of parliament, and not [decreed] as it is in the printed book) by any of his majesties proclamations: for all such offices as be decried, that is, either forbidden, or prohibited by any of his majesties proclamations, or where the party grieved is left to his remedy at the common law by any proclamation, they be also decried; for being contrary to the lawes of this realme, as it is declared and enacted by this act, they are also decried with a witnesse, and can never be granted hereafter.

The fift proviso concerning the making of allom, or allome-wines, needed not, for they belong to the subject in whose ground soeven the oare is: and therefore any priviledge thereof cannot be granted,

The fixth proviso concerns the hostmen of Newcastle, &c. This clause was inserted in respect of these words [sole using].

The rest of the provisoes concerne particular persons, and do exempt and except certaine supposed priviledges out of the purvien and penalty of this law, but leaveth them of like force and effect, as they were before the making of it.

But it is to be observed, that all the provisoes after the fixth, extend only to the supposed priviledges therein particularly mentioned, already granted, and not to any to be granted hereafter.

This

This act moved from the house of commons. Now let us peruse, first, the words of the purvien of this act, and secondly, of this proviso.

In and by the purvien five things are declared and enacted to be void, and contrary to the ancient fundamentall lawes of this realme. First, all commissions, licenses, charters, and letters patents of any power, liberty, or faculty, or to give license or toleration to do, use, or exercise any thing against any law or statute. The reason hereof is notably expressed by the resolution of all the judges of England, in the case of penall statutes, whereunto we refer you,

2. Or to give or make any warrant for any fuch dispensation, license, or toleration.] For this branch also, see the said case of penall statutes,

3. Or to agree or compound with any others for any penalty or forfeitures limited by any statute.] By this branch, all commissions to agree or compound with any others for any penalty or forfeiture limited by any statute, are declared to be void, and against the ancient fundamentall lawes of the realme. The great inconvenience hereof appeared in the proceedings of Empson and Dudley, in the reigne of king H. 7. who had the office of masters of the forseitures: and by colour of their commission and office, did most intolerably and unlawfully oppresse, burden, and depauperate the subjects. Let them which follow their steps be asraid of their fearfull end: Qui eorum vessigia sequentur, eorum exitus perhorrescant. The like oppression was used by certain commissioners for compositions to be made for offences committed against penall statutes, in the reigne of queen Mary. This branch hath strucken at the root, and prevented this mischief for ever hereaster.

4. Or of any grant or promise of the benefit, profit, or commodity of any forseiture, penalty, or sum of money, that is or shall be due by any statute before judgement thereupon had. This branch declareth not only the grant to be void, and against the lawes of this realme, (for the which, see the resolution of all the judges in the suid case of penall statutes, ubi supera,) but the promise thereof also. And the reason that the judges yield there, is notable in these words. For that in our experience it maketh the more violent and undue proceeding against the subject to the scandall of justice, and offence of many. So as the grant or promise of any sorseiture before judgement, is both against law, and inconvenient. And if it be so in case of a forseiture or penalty; much more in case of life and death, for the forseiture, &c. of any man to be begged, before he beduly and lawfully attainted. For, as the judges say, there is the more violent and undue proceeding against the subject to the scandall of justice, and the offence of many: and therefore such beggers are

ing, erecling, firengthening, &c.] This is the like clause, and is fo to be expounded, as before hath been in the chapter of Mono-

Concerning the faid proviso, the judges before whom the cause dependeth, and that have power to hear and determine the same. who are prefumed to be indifferent between the king and the fubject, may by warrant or privie seale, &c. compound, &c. for the king only, after plea pleaded by the defendant.

There is another proviso concerning letters patents, or commisfions for licenting of keeping of any tavern, or felling, &c. of wines, &c. or for the making of any compositions for such licenses, so as the benefit of such compositions be reserved, and applyed to or for the use of his majestie, his heirs or successors and not for the private use of any other person or persons.

The report of the faid case of penall statutes was a principall motive of the kings book, mentioned in the preamble of this act: and that book amongst other just and weighty causes moved the king to give his royall affent to this act of parliament, &c. whereof we have

Against Conceasours (turbidum Hominum Genus) and all Pretences of Concealements what soever.

HAT the kings majestie, his heirs, or successors, shall Statut de anne not at any time hereafter sue, impeach, question, or 21 Jac. cap. 24 implead any person or persons, bodies politick, or corporate, &c.

Before the making of this statute, in respect of that ancient prerogative of the crowne, that mullum tempus occurrit regi, the titles of the king were not restrained to any limitation of time: for that no statute of limitation that ever was made, did ever limit the title of the king to any mannors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to any certaine time. And where many records and other muniments, making good the estate and interest of the subject, either by abuse or negligence of officers by devouring time were not to be found; by means whereof, certain indigne and indigent perfons prying into many ancient titles of the crown, and into fome of later time concerning the possessions of divers and fundry bishopricks, dean and chapters, and the late monasteries, chauntries, &c. of persons attainted, and the like, have passed surreptitiously in letters patents, oftentimes under obscure and generall words, the mannors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of long time enjoyed by the subjects of this realm, as well ecclesiasticall as temporall:

now to limit the crown to some certaine time, to the end, that all the subjects of this realme, their heirs and successors, may quietly have, hold, and enjoy, all and singular mannors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, which they, their ancestors, or predecessors, or any other, by, from, or under whom they claime, have of long time enjoyed; this act was made and moved from the house of commons, the body whereof consistent of three parts. First, that part which above is in part rehearsed, consistent on three branches.

First, That the king, his heirs or successors, shall not at any time hereafter, sue, impeach, question, or implead any person or persons, bodies politick or corporate, for, or in any wise concerning any mannors, &c. Secondly, Or for or concerning the revenues, issues, or profits thereof. Thirdly, Or make any title, claime, challenge, or demand, &c.

This part is exclusive and negative: and herein fix things are to be observed.

1. This clause extendeth to all maner of suits, &c. either in law, or in equity. 2. To all manner of courts whatfoever. 3. It extendeth not only to all manner of fuits, but to all impeachments, questionings, impleadings, making of title, claimes, challenges, or demands. 4. Under these words [right, and title] not only bare rights and titles are comprehended, but reall estates also. 5. Not only fuits, &c. for or concerning any mannors, &c. but for or concerning the revenues, issues, or profits, &c. and this extendeth to the ancient demeans of the crowne, which are mentioned to be restrained by an act of 11 H. 4. 6. So as all writs of scire fac' or other proces upon any record; all informations of intrusion, or charging any man as bayliffe: all finding of offices, either of intitling the king, or of information, are restrained, not only within these words [impeach or question] but also within these words [or make any title, claime, challenge, or demand] which are large and beneficial words, and all other fuits, &c. of what kind or nature soever. But this negative clause must have four incidents. 1. The kings right and title must accrew unto him above threescore years past before the nineteenth day of February, in the 2r year of king James, which was the day of the beginning of this The reason hereof was, that if any title of eschear. forfeiture, &c. accrewed within threescore years, then it should be out of this act: for generally the time of limitation to bar the king was threefcore years, but such right or title must now be in ese. a. Unlesse the king or his progenitors, &c. or any under whom he or they claim, have been answered by force and vertue of any such right or title to the same, the rents, revenues, issues, or profits thereof within threescore years, &c. In this branch these words [by force and vertue of any fuch right or title] were materially added, for otherwise if the king had been answered the rents, revenues, &c. by reason or pretext of wardship, primer seison, extent, or the like, it might have made a doubt whether such an answering of the revenues, &c. had been within this act; which doubt is cleared, that it must be by-force or vertue of any such right or title, whereby the king impeacheth the state of the subject. 3. Or that the same have been duly in charge to his majesty, or to the late queen Elizabeth within the space of threescore years. Duly in charge in judgement of law, is the roll of the pipe: for although a note before the auditor or any other may be a mean to bring it in question, and to be put in charge, yet that is not in judgement of law faid to be duly in charge, unlesse it be in charge in the pipe. 4. Or have stood in super of record within the said space of threescore years. It cannot stand in super, unlesse the thing in question

But there is a good proviso added towards the end of this act. viz. that no putting in charge, or super, or answering of the farm rents, revenues, or profits, &c. in four cases shall be within this act, viz. by force, colour or pretext of any letters patents of concealments: they were called letters patents of concealments, because either they had a clause before the habendum: quæ quidem maneria nuper fuerunt à nobis concelata, subtracta, vel insuste detenta, or to the like effect; or else a proviso after the habendum to the like effect. Letters patents of concealment were granted in queen Maries time; and the first that I find, were granted to Sir George Howard: and in all succeeding acts of parliament of confirmation of letters patents, letters patents of concealments are ex-

2. Or defective title. By letters patents passed by the warrant of certain commissioners under the great seal for compositions of defective titles, pretending the same to be for the kings benefit, and fafety of the subject, in which letters patents no words of concealment, &c. are mentioned, but yet upon the matter, they were

3. Or of lands tenements or hereditaments out of charge. was a new device to have a certificate, that they were not in charge, and then to take a grant from the king, for a very small composition, &c. And these were but inventions and subtill devices to deceive the king, to rob him of his tenures, and to the infinite vexation and trouble of the subject, all which mischiefs are now remedied by this act.

4. Or by force, colour or pretext of any commission or other authority to find out concealments, defective titles, or land, &c. out of charge. This was a necessary clause to be added, for of this kind

Out of this first part all liberties and franchises be excepted.

And that every person and persons, bodies politique and The second part. corporate, their heirs and fuccessors, and all claiming from, by, or under them, or any of them, for and according to their severall estates and interests, which they have, or claim to have in the same respectively, shall hereaster quietly and freely have, hold and enjoy against his majesty, his heirs and fucceffors, &c.

This is the second part of the body of the act, and as the first part is negative and exclusive of the right and title of the king, so this part is affirmative, and establishing the estate of the lubject,

The

The mischief before this statute was in two forts, viz. either when the king had any estate vested, or continued in him; or where the king had but a bare right. For example, the kings renant seised of lands, &c. in fee is attainted of felony, and dieth, the king hath a real estate in him: but if before the felony the kings tenant were diffeised, and after is attainted, and dieth, now hath the king but a bare right. In both these cases, et Ac in finitibus, the subject is provided for by this act, both by the first part, and by this also: for where in this part it is faid, according to their and every of their several estates and interests which they have or claim. If they have an estate, and the king but a bare right or title, then are they within these words [which they have] and if the king hath a reall estate in him, then are they within these words [or claim] fo as the remedy is applied to both the mischiefs. the words in this part are further, have held, or enjoyed. is, where the subject hath an estate, and the king but a bare right or title.

Or taken the rents, issues, revenues, or profits thereof.] These words extend to all cases where the reall estate is in the king: hereby is understood the a qualitaking of the rents, issues, revenues, or profits by one that claims an interest in the land; for albeit the king may in law charge him as bailif, yet without question, de facto, he did take the rents, issues, revenues and profits, and that sufficeth to answer the letter and meaning of this act.

Moreover, the words of this part are, [Against him, his heirs or successors.] So admit in the case put before, the kings tenant being disseised, as is aforesaid, before his attainder of selony, that that disseisor had been disseised, or had morgaged the land before this statute, this act in this case barreth the king of his right and title, and to that end worketh upon the estate of the disseisor or morgagee; but yet the first disseisor or the morgagee for the condition performed or broken may re-enter; for the words of this part be [against the king, his heirs, and successors] so as the bar is only against them: and every subject shall take benefit of this act, for the kings right and title is thereby utterly barred: and there is a saving hereaster in this act to all persons, &c. other then the king, &c. all such right, &c. as they ought to have had before this act.

This part extendeth not to liberties and franchifes, Now followeth the third part of the purvieu of this act.

The third part.

And furthermore, that every person and persons, bodies politique and corporate, their heirs and successors, &c. shall quietly and freely have, hold, and enjoy all such mannors, &c. as they now have, claim, and enjoy, &c. against all and every person and persons, their heirs and assigns having, claiming, or pretending to have any estate, right, title, interest, claim or demand whatsoever, &c. by reason, or colour of any letters patents, or grants upon suggestion of concealment, or wrongfull detaining, or not being in charge, or desective titles, or by, from, or under any patentees, &c. of or for which mannors, &c. no verdict, &c.

Thin

This part secures the subject against the subject, viz. against patentees and grantees of concealments, defective titles, or lands not in charge, and all claiming under them. A beneficiall law both for the church and common wealth, in respect of the multitude of letters patents and grants of these natures and qualities, and many of them of large extents and in generall words, and had passed through the hands of many indigent and needy persons, &c.

The two first provisoes are plain, and in effect are included in the body of the act. The fecond proviso was necessary to preferve tenures: the faving needeth no explanation. The third proviso is particular and evident. The fourth proviso, Provided also, and be it enacted, that where any fee farm rent, &c. This was added for the preserving of the kings fee farms and rents out of such manners, &c. which are established and made sure by this act. For example: king E. 6. did grant the mannor of D. which came to him by the statute of Chanteries, to I. S. and his heirs, referving a fee farm, or any other rent, which grant for some imperfection was infufficient in law to passe the said mannor, and yet is established and made sure by this act. This proviso maketh good the fee farm or rent to the king, if he hath been answered the same by the greater part of sixty years last past.

Of the benefit of this act the poor doe participate, as well as the rich, for hereby (amongst other things) above an hundred lay ho-spitals having had priests within them in those days to pray and fing for fouls, &c. (if need were) are established against all vexa-

See an excellent act made against these harpyes or heluones, See 39 El. ca. 22 that under obscure words endeavoured surreptitiously in a patent which is worthy of concealment to have swallowed up the greatest part of the posfessions of that ancient and famous bishoprick of Norwich, which large in the by the industry and profecution of the then attorney generall was fourth part of overthrown, and yet for more furety in a matter of fo great weight the Inflitutes preferred a bill in parliament for establishing of the bishoprick, which cap. Against Vexatious Relators, Informers, and Promooters upon Penall Statutes.

Statutum de 21 Jac. 1eg. c. 4. THAT all offences hereafter to be committed against any penalt statute, for which any common informer or promooter may lawfully ground any popular action, bill, plaint, suit or information, &c. shall be commenced, sued, prosecuted, &c. before the justices of assis, justices of nist prius, &c. in the counties where the offences were committed, and not elsewhere.

28 EL ca. 5.

Whereas a good and profitable law was made in the 18 year of queen El. for the ease and quiet of the subject, and for the regulating of informers upon penall statutes, inslicting corporal punishments in certain cases upon them. And whereas two other good laws were made for the same ends, the one in the 28 year, and the other in the 31 year of the said late queens reign, which yet stand and remain in force: yet these acts did not meet with all the mischiefs and grievances offered to the subject by the relators, informers and promooters, (turbidum hominum genus) but these sour mischiefs and grievances remained still.

28 El. ca. 5. 31 El. ca. 10.

First, many penall laws obsolete, and in time grown apparently impossible, or inconvenient to be performed, remained as snares, whereupon the relator, informer or promooter did vex and entangle the subject: fuch as were the statutes made anno 37 B. 3. cap. 3. concerning the prices of poultry, and 34 E. 3. ca. 20. concerning transportation of corn, and 3 E. 4. cap. 2. concerning corn not to be brought into the realm, and 4 H. 7. ca. 9. concerning the prices of hats and caps, and 14 R. 2. cap. 7. concerning the palfing of tyn out of the realm, and 15 R. 2. cap. 8. concerning the carriage of tyn to Calys, and 4 H. 5. eap. 3. concerning making of patterns of asp, and 4 H. 7. ca. 8. concerning the prices of broadcloath, &c. and 11 H. 7. cap. 2. concerning vagabones, unlawful games, and alehouses, &c. and one other statute in the 19 year of H. 7. ca. 12. concerning those matters, and 11 H. 6. ca. 12. concerning waxchandlers, and the price of candles, and 34 H. 8. cap. 7. concerning the sale of wines, and 28 H. 8. cap. 14. concerning the prices of wines, and 27 H. 8. stat. de monasteriis, concerning keeping of house and housholds upon scites of monasteries, &c. and 4 H. 7. cap. 19. concerning houses of husbandry and tillage, and 7 H. 8. ca. 1. concerning letting down of towns, and 27 H. 8. cap. 22. concerning decay of houses and inclosures, and 5 E. 6. ca. 5. for the maintenance of tillage, &c. and 5 Eliz. cap. 2. for maintenance and increase of tillage, and 14 R. 2. ca. 4. 8 H. 6. ca. 23. and 5 E. 6. cap. 7. concerning the buying of wooll, woollen yarn, &c. and 33 H. 8. cap. 5. concerning the keeping of great horses, the statute of Winchest, in the time of 13 E. z. stat. de E. 1. concerning harnesse and arms, Artic. super Cart. ca. 20. concerning making of rings, crosses, and locks, and 37 E. 3. cap. 7. that makers of white vessell should not guild, and 2 H. 5. ca. 4. stat. 2. that goldsmiths should not take more then forty six shillings eight pence for a pound of troy silver guilt, and 2 H. 6. ca. 14. that no filver shall be bought for more then thirty shillings the pound of troy, and 2 H. 4. ca. 6. against the bringing in of coin of Flanders, Scotland, and other forain coin, and 13 R. 2. ca. 8. and 4 H. 4. cap. 25. concerning the prices of hay and oats fold by hostlers, and 4 & 5 Ph. and Mar. ca. 5. concerning the putting to fale of coloured cloth: and another part of the same statute concerning the mystery of making, weaving, or rowing of woollen cloth, &c. and 18 El. ca. 16. for toleration of certain clothiers to dwell out of towns corporate, and many other unnecessary statutes unfit for this time, about the number of threescore are repealed by an act made at this parliament in the 21 year of the reign of king James, as by that act appeareth: and many like acts are not continued, as by the conference between that act and other former acts of continuance may appear: so as these snares that might have lien heavy upon the subject, by this and other former statutes either are repealed, or not continued.

The fecond mischief was; that common informers, and many times the kings attorny drew all informations for any offence, in any place within the realm of England against any penall law to some of the kings courts at Westminster, to the intolerable charge, vexation, and trouble of the subject; and it was feared that Westminiter hall would labour of an apoplexy by drawing up all fuits unto it, as the natural body doth tabescere, when the humours of the body are drawn up unto the head, which in the end (if it be not

The third mischief was, that in informations, &c. the offence supposed to be against the penall law, and to be committed in one county, was at the pleasure of the informer, &c. alledged in any county where he would, where neither party nor witnesse was known, against the right institution of the law, that the jury (for their better notice) should come de vicineto of the place where the fact was committed.

The fourth mischief was, that in divers cases the party defendant in informations or actions upon the statute, were driven to plead specially, which was both chargeable and dangerous to him, if his plea were not both substantial and formal also.

These three mischies last mentioned are expresly and absolutely provided for by this act, which moved from the house of com-And so did the act of continuing and reviving of divers 21 Jac. cap. $8. statutes, and repeale of divers others.

Before what judges; this act appoints no new judges, but such as former penall lawes appointed, viz. the justices before mentioned, or any of them actually the formula of the property of them actually the formula of the property of the pro

The second part is restrictive, restraining any information, &c. to be commenced, such acceptance, such any officer, common informer, or any other person whatsoever, in any of the kings courts at Westminster. So as the kings beach, star-chamber, chancery, common-pleas, exchequer, or exchequer, chancery, common-pleas of any information, &c. upon any penall statute, either by the kings attorny, any common informer, or any other person whatsoever: but the matter shall be heard and determined before such justices as are foresaid in the proper county where the offence was committed.

The third part giveth the like proces upon every popular action, bill, plaint, information, or fuit to be commenced or profecuted by force, of, or according to the purport of this act, as in an action of trespasse, vi et armis, at the common law: but upon no other popular action, bill, &c. which is not fued, &c. by force of

The second part of this act doth meet with the second of the faid three mischiefs, and standeth upon three branches.

First, that in all informations, exhibited, &c., either so

First, that in all informations, exhibited, &c. either for the king or any other, &c. the offence shall be layed and alledged, &c. in the said county where such offence was in truth committed, and not elsewhere.

The fecond branch is, that if the defendant pleadeth the generall iffue, the plaintiffe or informer upon evidence to the jury must prove two things: first, the offence laid in the information, &c. Secondly, that the offence was committed in that county, otherwife the defendant shall be found not guilty.

The third branch is, that for more surety that the offence shall be alledged truly in the proper county where in truth it was committed, no information, &c. shall be received, filed, or entred of record, untill the informer, or relator hath first taken a corporall oath before some of the judges of that court, which confisteth on two parts: first, that the offence or offences laid in such information, &c. were not committed in any other county, then where the same are alledged in the information, &c. Secondly that he believeth in his conscience, that the offence was committed within a year before the information or suit. And this oath is to be entred of record. And all this is to be done before the information be received, filed, or entred of record.

The third part of this act meeteth with the last mischiese: for by this part the defendant may plead the generall issue, and give any speciall matter in evidence to the jury: which matter being pleaded, had been a good and sufficient matter in law, to have dis-

This is a very beneficiall clause, and cleereth many questions at the common law. And where it may be objected, that for want of sufficient clerks, the proceeding according to this statute will be erroneous, and to be reversed by writ of errour, so as it will deterninformers to informe, &c. and in effect, lay asseptial penalt laws.

To this it may be answered, First, that it shall be the fault of the informer himselfe; for if he informe before justices of assis or nise prius, they * have fufficient clerks. Secondly, I persuade my selfe, that the other justices will in discharge of their conscience and duty, provide sufficient clerks. And lastly, that few or no errours shall fall out in respect of the general pleading.

The last clause of this act is this, Provided alwayes that this act or any thing therein contained, shall not extend to any infor-

By this clause this act extends not to penall statutes of these forts: concerning 1. Popith recufants for not comming to church. 2. Maintenance, champerty, or buying of titles. 3. The subsidie of tonnage and poundage, wooll, &c. 4. The defrauding the king of any custome, tonnage, poundage, subsidie, impost, or prisage. 5. Transportation of gold, filver, powder, shot, munition of all forts, wooll, woolfels, or leather, but that every of these offences may be layed or alledged to be in any county at the pleafure of any informer. But yet the informer cannot informe, &c. for any of these offences in any of the courts at Westminster, but before the justices appointed by this act: for this clause extendeth only for the laying or alledging of any of these offences in any county that he will.

Inter Wideston and Clark major of Nottingham, the case was Mic. 20. & this. Wideston being arrested in Nottingham by precept in 30 El. ceramithe nature of a capias, he was imprisoned in the custody of the rege. maior being keeper of the gaol within the fame towne, and before the returne of the precept Wideston offered to the major sufficient furety to appeare, &c. and he refused to accept the same: whereupon Wideston brought his action by bill upon the statute of 23 H. 6. cap. 10. whereunto the defendant pleaded the generall issue; and it is found by verdict against the defendant. In arrest of judgement it was shewed, that by the said statute of 18 Eliz. cap. 18 Eliz. cap. 4. 5. it is provided, that none shall be admitted or received to pursue Vi. lib. 6. fo. 19. against any person upon any penall statute, but by way of infor- b. Gregories mation or originall action, and not otherwise: in respect of the sale. faid negative words it was adjudged, that, for that the faid action was brought by bill, and not by information or originall, qued querens nihil capiat per billam. See the rest of the statute of 18 Eliz. concerning informers.

You have heard of four viperous vermin, which endeavoured to have eaten out the fides of the church and common-wealth: three whereof, viz. the monopolist, the dispencer with public and profitable penall lawes for a private, and the concealers are blowne up, and exterminated: and the fourth, viz. the vexatious informer well regulated and restrained, who under the reverend mantle of law and justice instituted for protection of the innocent, and the good of the common-wealth, did vex and depauperize the subject, and commonly the poorer fort, for malice or private ends, and never for love of justice. And these are worthily placed amongst the pleas of the crowne, because it is for the honour and benefit of the crowne, when the church and common-wealth doe flourish in peace and plenty: for the king can never be poore, when his fub-

And there is an a For the word ingrosser by the common lawes, who is hereafter described. And [Ingrossor,] see there is an ingrosser by act of parliament, and he is described by the fat. 1. 37 E. 3. 6. 5. ftat. 1. 37 E. 3. there is an ingroffer by act of parliament, and he is described by the statute of 5 E. 6. But in ancient time both the in- [Regrator,] see groffor and regrator were comprehended under forestaller.

It was gresolved by the justices and barons of the exchequer upon conference betwixt them, that falt is a victuall, and the buying and felling thereof was within the statute of 5 E. 6. for it was not only of necessity of itselfe for the food and health of man, but Regretors or it feasoneth and maketh wholesome beese, pork, &c. butter, cheese, &c. and other viands. And Peryam justice said, h Hil. 26 Eliz. in

Mich. 6 Jac, in scaccario, in an information by Baron against Boy, upon the statute of 5 E. 6. cap. 14. of ingrossers for buying and felling of apples; the defendant pleaded not guilty, and was found guilty. But the barons gave judgement against the informer, and caused an entry to be made in the margent of the record, that the judgement was given upon matter apparent to them, that apples were not within the faid act, for that the act is to be intended of victuall necessary for the food of man, the words of the act being [corne, graine, butter, cheefe, fish, or other dead victuall] which is as much as to fay, (of other dead victual of like quality: id est, of like necessary and common use.) And therefore apples being rather of pleasure then necessity, are not within the said statute no more then plumbs, cherries, or other fruit; and no information hath ever been exhibited for ingroffing of apples, plumbs, cherries, or other fruit: but the statute of 2 E. 6. cap. 15. doth forbid conspiracy of costermongers and fruterers, and maketh such conspiracie unlawfull. And the faid judgement of the barons was affirmed in a writ of errour in the exchequer chamber,

Venditio brafei non est venditio vistualium, nec debet puniri sicut venditio panis, vini, et cervisia, et hujusmode, contra formam statuti. But ram rege Rot. the act of 5 E. 6. hath made corne, graine, &c. to be victuall within that act. Vide Vet. N. B. 2. part 23. h. stat. de pistor., bracea-

It was upon conference and mature deliberation resolved by all the justices, that any merchant, subject, or stranger, bringing victuals or merchandize into this realine, may fell them in groffe; but that de touts les vendee cannot fell them againe in groffe, for then he is an * ingroffer according to the nature of the word, for that he buy ingrosse, and sell ingrosse, and may be indicted thereof at the common law, as for an offence that is malum in se. 2. And every practife or device by act, conspiracy, words or newes, to inhaunce the price of victuals or other merchandize, was punishable by law; and they relied much upon the statute aforesaid, nullus forstallarius, &c. which see before in this chap er: and that the name of an ingroffer in the reigne of H. 3. and E. They had also in confideration the book in 43 Ass. where it was prefented, that a Lombard did procure to promote and inhaunce the price of merchandize, and shewed how: the Lombard demanded judgement of the presentment for two causes. 1. That it did not found in forestalling. 2. That of his endeavour or attempt by words, no evill was put in ure, (that is) no price was inhaunced, et non allocatur, and thereupon he pleaded not guilty: whereby it appeareth, that the attempt by words to in-haunce the price of merchandize was punishable by law, and did found in forestalment: and it appeareth by the book that the punishment was by fine and ransome. And in that case Knivet reported that certaine people (and named their names) came to Cotefwold in Herefordshire, and said in deceipt of the people, that there were fuch wars beyond the feas, as no wooll could passe or be carried beyond fea, whereby the price of wools was abated: and upon prefentment hereof made, they appeared; and upon their confession they were put to fine and ransome. See the statute of 25 H. 8. cap. 2. whereby the lords of the councell, justices, &c. or any feven of them, &c. have power to fet prices on victuals, and the same to be proclaimed under the great seale.

For preventing of all ingrossing and forestalling, it was the ancient law before the conquest, Decrevinus porro, ne quis extra oppidum quicquam 20 denariis carius assimatum emat, verum intra portum prafente oppidi prassecto, aliove viro sidele, aut inso denique prasposito regio,

THERE was an ordinance made by king E. 2. by advice of his councell against the excesse of diet, but because it had not the strength of an act of parliament, it wrought no effect.

It is provided by statutes made in the reigns of E. 6. and queen Elizabeth, that no steff shall be eaten on fish-days, viz. Friday, Saturday, embring days and vigils, and the time of * Lent; c and for licences to eat steff on fish-days, &c. See the preamble of the

Empring days, so called because in former times when they sasted they put ashes or embers on their heads. Job 2. 12. Jer. 6. 26. 2 Sam. 13. 19. And as the naturall conversion of the sless of the body is to dust, so the sins of the soul (unrepented) are turned to fire, and this was shadowed under embers that ever keep fire.

*These embring days are the week next before Quadragesima, so called, for that it is the fortieth day before Easter, and is the first Sunday in Lent. So Quinquagesima the Sunday sifty days before Easter, Sexagesima sixty days before Easter, and Septuagesima seventy days before Easter.

But there is no act of parliament against excesse of diet, for it is known to be so hurtfull for mans body, and so obscureth the faculties of the mind, as the understanding, memory, &c. as to men, specially to Christian men, there needeth no law at all to be made, ever being mindfull of that caveat, described autem vobis, ne forte graventur corda vestra in crapula, et ebrictate, &c.

King

King Edgar permitting many of the Danes to inhabite here (s who first brought into this realm excessive drinking) was in the end constrained to make a law against this excesse (which never commeth alone) driving certain nails into the sides of their cups, as limits, and bounds, which no man upon great pain should be so troops of idle ferving men

William of Malmesbury, comparing Englishmen and Normans together, saith, that in his time, the English manner was to sit bibbing whole houres after dinner, h and that the Norman fashion was to walk the streets with great troops, with idle and loose servingmen following them, both which were causes of many disorders and

i If the excesse of drinking extend to the loathsome and odious vice of drunkennesse, it is punishable by act of parliament. And lutem. to say the truth the ancient Britains were free from this crime.

Ecce Britannorum mos est landabilis iste, Ut bibat arbitrio pocula quisque suo.

Nothing is here faid against that great peacemaker, and branch of liberality, orderly hospitality, but against the dainty and disorderly excesse of meats and drinks, which is a species of prodigality: for it is provided by act of parliament that the grace of hospitality shall not be withdrawn from the needy.

See the statute of 37 E. 3. ca. 8. against excessive apparell and liet; but it was repealed in the next parliament, 38 E. 3. ca. 2.

OF BUILDINGS.

E have not read of any act of parliament now in force made against the excesse of building, or touching the order or manner of building; but it is a wasting evill, whereunto some wise men are subject.

But the common law doth prohibit any subject to build any castle, or house of strength imbatteled, &c. without the kings licence, for the danger that might ensu. Also the common law prohibiteth the building of any edifice to a common nusance, or to the nusance of any man in his house, as the stopping up of his light, or to any other prejudice or annoyance of him. Adificare in two proprios folonon licet, quod alteri noceat.

reus, labente alio, et in præceps ruente.

I like well the counsell to a nobleman, whosoever gave it. Si vis (ait ille) ædificare domum, inducat te necessitas, non voluptas; cupiditas ædificandi ædificando non tollitur; nimia et inordinata cupiditas ædificandi expectat ædificii venditionem; turris completa, et area quaeuqta faciust tarde bominem sapientem.

But by the common law, and generall custome of the realm, it was lawfull for bishops, earls, and barons to build churches, or chappels within their fees: and hereof king John informed pope Innocentius the Third (naming only, honoris causa, the bishops and baronage of England, albeit this liberty extended to all) with request that this liberty to the baronage might be confirmed. these letters the pope made this answer, Quod enim de consuctudine regni Anglorum procedere regia sevenitas per suas literas intimavit, ut liceat tam episcopis, quam comitibus, et baronibus ecclesias in feudo suo fundare, laicis quidem principibus id licere nullatenus denegamus, dummodo diocejani episcopi cis suffragetur assensus, et per novam structuram veterum ecclefiarum justitia non lædatur. Whereas the baronage had absolute liberty before, now the pope addeth the consent of the bishop: but that addition bound not, seeing it was against the liberty of the baronage warranted by the common law: and we would not have rehearfed this epissie, but that it is a proof what the generall custome of the realm was concerning the building of churches by the baronage of England. And albeit they might build churches without the kings licence, yet could they not erect a spirituall politique body to continue in succession, and capable of indowment without the kings licence: but by the common law before the statutes of mortmain, they might have indowed this spiritual! body once incorporated, perpetuis futuris temporibus, without any licence from the king, or any other.

And as the law is in cases of devotion and religion, so it is in cases of charity: any man may erect and build a house for an * hospitall, school, workinghouse, or house of correction, or the like, without any licence, for that is but a preparation, and may be done as owner of the soyl; but by the common law could not incorporate any of them without licence, but now he may, and indow them with lands in certain cases, * by the statutes of 39 Eliz. cap. 5. and 3 Car. ca. 1. as in the second part of the Institutes in the exposition

Concerning the building or erecting of b tombs, fepulchers or monuments for the deceased in church, chancell, common chappell, or churchyard in convenient manner, it is lawfull, for it is the last work of charity that can be done for the deceased, who whiles he lived was a lively temple of the Holy Ghost, with a reverend regard, and Christian hope of a joyfull resurrection. And the defacing of them is punishable by the common law, as it appeareth in c the book of 9 E. 4. 14. a. And so was it agreed by the whole court, Mich. 10 Jac. in the common place, between Corven and Pym. And for the defacing thereof, they that build or erect the same shall have the action during their lives, (as the lady Wiche had in the case of 9 E. 4.) and after their deceases, the heir of the deceased shall have the action. But the building, or erecting of the sepulcher, tomb, or other monument ought not to be to Barth. Cassaneus the hinderance of the celebration of divine fervice. And in that fo. 13. Conclus case of Corven it was resolved, that albeit the freehold of the church be in the parson, yet if a lord of a mannor, or any other, that aliquo loco pohath an house within the town or parish, and that he, and all those sita delevit, seu whose estate he hath in the mansion house of the mannor, or other abrasit, &c. house, hath had a seat in an isle of the church, for him and his family only, and have repaired it at his proper charges, it shall be intended that some of his auncestors, or of the parties whose estate he hath, did build and erect that ifle for him and his family only: and therefore if the ordinary endeavour to remove him, or place any other there, he may have a prohibition. d It was further re- d 8 H. 7. 12. 2. folved, that if any man hath a house in a town or parish, and that per Hussy accord. he and those whose estate he hath in the house, hath had time out of mind a certain pew, or feat in the church maintained by him Stellatæ, inter and them, the ordinary cannot remove him, (for prescription Huffy plaintiff. maketh certainty, the mother of quietnesse) and if he doe, a prohi- & Kath, Layton. bition lyeth against him. ^e But where there is no prescription, there the ordinary that hath the cure, and charge of souls may for avoiding of contention in the church or chappel, and the more quiet, and better service of God, and placing of men according to acc. 12 H. 7. their qualities and degrees, take order for the placing of the pa- 12. per Huffye. rishioners in the church or chappell publique, which is dedicate and confecrate to the service of God.

Nota, funerall expences according to the degree and quality of the deceased, are to be allowed of the goods of the deceased, before any debt or duty whatfoever, for that is opus pium, or chari-

Amongst the people of Almighty God, as it appeareth in the holy history, sepulture was ever had in great reverence, not only of kings, but of other men; as (amongst many others) good old Barzillai, when he had excused himself for not going with the king to serusalem, he concluded, Obsecro ut revertar servus tuus, et moriar in civitate mea, et sepeliar juxta sepulchrum patris mei, et matris meæ, &c.

And also the morall heathens had building and erecting of sepulchers, or monuments in great account, as it doth appear by the feven wonders of the world, which for memory may be expressed in these few verses.

1. Pyramides Memphis, 2. Babylonis mænia celsæ, 3. Templum ingens Ephefi virgo Diana tuum,

4. Mausoli Cariæ monumentum, 5. Raraque Pharo Turris, 6. Olympiaci splendida imago Jovis,

7. Denique apud Rhodios splendentis statua Phæbi: Hec septem mundus mira, viator, habet.

Besides the religious, and Christian regard abovesaid, these monuments do serve for four good uses and ends. First, for evidence, and proof of descents, and pedegrees. Secondly, what time he that is there buried deceased. Thirdly, for example, to follow the good, or to eschew the evill. Fourthly, to put the living in mind of their end, for all the sons of Adam must die. Statutum est hominibus Semel mori. Monumentum

In the year of our Lord 1586, and in the 28 year of the reign of that glorious queen Elizabeth, was the old gate called Ludgate in the city of London (as Stow saith) taken down to be new builded: there was found couched within the old wall thereof a stone, wherein was graven in the Hebrew tongue and characters, * an epitaph, signifying in English: This is the tomb of Rabbi Moses son of the illustrious Rabbi Isaac: which certainly was before the 23 year of the reign of H. 2. anno Domini 1177, for before that time all the Jews in England were buried within the city of London, and in that year, saith Hovenden, Dominus rex pater dedit licentiam Judæisterræ suæ habendi cæmeterium in qualibet civitate Angliæ, extra muros civitatum, ubi possum commercium competenti loco omere, ad sepeliend' mortuos suos: prius enim omnes Judæi mortui Londonia serebantur sepeliendi.

And albeit churches or chappels may be built by any of the kings subjects, (as hath been said) without licence, yet before the law take knowledge of them to be churches or chappels, the bishop is to consecrate or dedicate the same: and this is the reason, that a church or not a church, a chappel, or not a chappel, shall be tryed,

CAP. XCIX.

De Assentatione, Fucologia, Pseudologia, Flattery.

Int. leges Canuti, fo. 106. c. 7. Lam. Fatalis magnarum potestatum pestis, adulatio. Semper affentor id, quod is ad cujus voluntatem dicitur, este magnum; ut in Terentio: magnas vero agere gratias mihi, &c. fatis erat respondiffe magnas, ingentes inquit.

TATE find a law before the conquest against flatterers in these words, Liccenar y Leozonar nepenar ly nearanar zober Znaman habban, &c. which Dr. Lambard translateth thus, Affentatores, mendaces, prædones, et rapaces offenfionem Dei gravissimam incurrant, &c.

The ancient manuscript translateth it thus, Seductores, mendaces, rapaces et raptores Dei gravamen habeant. And both translations do in effect agree, for a flatterer is a seducer for some private end, by fained praise and humouring of another, whereby he hath an oultrecuidance of himselfe, his state, and actions, ifti ducunt et seducunt.

The occasion of making this law was, that king Canutus had been feduced by flatterers, who had shewed him his face and state in a false glasse, making too great a shew of his own parts, actions, and state, to the end to make him conceit himselfe to be better and greater then he was, and his adversaries lesse, then in truth they were. Nay, this king by wicked flatterers affumed to him divine power and honour: for comming from sea, he set his feet on the fea strond, as the sea was flowing, and commanded the sea not to rife to wet his lordly and majestick seet nor clothes: the sea keeping on his accustomed course, both wet his feet and thighs also: whereat being fore amazed repented his prefumption (which he had undertaken by wicked flattery.)

And well is the flatterer marshalled in this law with lyers, thieves, and raveners; for the divine described flatterers to be those, Qui colunt aliquem, et auferunt ab eo aliquid temporarii boni. So as it is peccatum viscatum, it getteth away much and giveth

And the Holy Ghost hath styled flattery oleum peccatoris, that is, the oile of the finner, xar' iξοχη, that is, of him that exceedeth others in sinne, and doth affect greatnesse, that is the head, making it greater and more prosperous then it is, as you may reade in the prophet David: Corripiet me justus in misericordia, et increpabit me, oleum autem peccatoris non impinguet caput meum. Whereby he being both a king and a prophet, preferreth the reproofe, nay the fharpe rebuke of the just and vertuous, before the smooth humouring of the the flatterer (per nomen) of the finner. This oleum peccatoris is mel venenatum, et venenum mellitum, and commonly affecteth greatnesse, and is called lordbane.

And againe, David speaking of the flatterer saith, his words are Pfal. 55. 22. smoother then oile, and yet are they very swords. Hee dicit Domi- Ezech. 12. 18. nus Deus, Va qui consuunt pulvilles sub omni cubite manus, et faciunt cervicalia sub capite universa ætatis ad capiend' animas, &c. faith the Lord God, Woe to them that fow pillowes under all armeholes, and put kerchifes upon the heads of every age to hunt foules. They make the king glad with their wickednesse, and the princes Ofee 7. 3. with their lyes. In malitia sua lætissicaverunt regem, et in mendaciis suis principes.

The flattering mouth worketh ruine. And more kings and Prov. 26. 28. kingdomes have been overthrown by the means of flattery, then by Qu. Curtius, publick hostility. And this is the cause that we have mentioned the faid ancient law for their punishment, they be lawfully banished

But that right be done to him, who was a faithfull favorite and counseller to this king, we have seen a manuscript that relateth, that Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk a wife and warlike person, was for many years before his decease the greatest favourite the king had, upon whom he chiefly relied in all his weightiest affairs. This noble duke deceased in August in the 37 year of the reign of king H. 8. After whose death the next time the king sat with his councell, and missing the good duke, grievously lamented for him, and said, that when I was offended with any (as often I was) and acquainted him therewith, that he ever endeavoured to mitigate my displeasure, and never spake to me evill of any of them. And the king looking upon the lords of his councell one after another, faid, and fo (my lord) cannot you fay, perufing them all throughout. A royall commendation of this great Duke, and a great argument of his piety and honour, that no fubject had ever the indignation or displeasure of his foveraign, by any private whifpering of his.

CAP. C.

Of false Imprisonment.

S E E the second part of the Institutes, the statute de 1 E. 2. de frangentibus prisonam, and the exposition upon the same.

See the Petition of Right 3 Car. regis, and Mag. Cart. ca. And it is to be observed that before the conquest it was thus Int. leges Alve-Qui hominem paganum immerentem vinculis constrinxerit, redi cap. 31. 10 folidis noxiam farcito; eum fi verberibus affecerit, 20 folidorum pæna esto; si suspensum in sublime rapuerit, 30 solidis culpa pensatur; si contumeliose capillum ejus morionis in morem totonderit, 10 solid præstato; sin caput in morem sacerdotis raserit, nec ipsum ligaverit, 30 solidos numerato; si barbam illi resecarit, 20 solidorum compensatio sequitor; si denique ei vinculis confiricio capillos in morem sacerdotum abraserit, 60

By way of addition, here it is necessary to be known, how and by what means one that is in prison may be discharged. Every man that is in prison, either is imprisoned without lawfull mittimus (whereof we have spoken before uhi supra, and how he may be freed from imprisonment in that case) or with lawfull mittimus. He, that is lawfully imprisoned, is either imprisoned by lawfull commandement, and order or warrant, or by the kings writ: by commandment and order of any court of record; and this commandment, warrant or writ is either for causes not being treason or felony, misprission of the same, nor other publique offence or cause, or inferiour causes to these; as contempts, private actions or If any court of record commit a man for a contempt done in court, they may discharge him by like order at their pleasure: but if they having authority, doe commit him for treason, felony, or other crime, or for suspition of the same, they cannot discharge him, untill he be inquired of, and either indicted and acquited, or ca. 15. and the an ignoramus found, and delivered by proclamation. * And so it is if any be taken and imprisoned by lawfull warrant, or the kings writ for treason, felony, or other crime, &c. he cannot be discharged by any without legall proceeding (but by the king only.)

If a vagrant, refusing to serve, had been committed to prison upon the statute of 23 E. 3. of labourers by the lord of the town, or justice of peace, they might have discharged him, even as the chancellour, &c. may commit a man for a contempt before him in court, and discharge him again at his pleasure.

If a man be taken by the kings writ in an action of debt or another private action, the plaintif may discharge the gaoler of him, and fet him at liberty, though he be in execution: but if he be taken in an appeal of death, robbery, rape, * &c. the plaintif cannot discharge him, because it is a publique offence, wherein the king hath an interest, and he may after nonsuit by the plaintif be arraigned at the kings fuit.

CAP. CI.

Of Judgements and Execution.

JUDICIUM is derived à jure, et dicto, et est quasi juris dictume and therefore if the judgement be erroneous, both the judgement and execution thereupon, and all the former proceedings shall be reversed by writ of error; but if the former proceeding and judgement be good, if the execution be erroneous, the execution shall only be reversed: and because the judgement is the guide and direction of the execution, we shall treat principally of the judgement, and incidently of execution.

Of judgements, some be by the common law, and some by

Of judgements by the common law, some be in criminall causes, or pleas of the crown, concerning the life of man (whereof we are principally to intreat,) and of these some be expressed, and some implied. Other judgements at the common law be in actions reall and mixt, of which, some be judicia interlocutoria, and some ultima seu principalia: and again, de principalibus, quadam surt sinalia, et quadam non sunt sinalia. Of judgements by statutes, some be in criminall causes, and some in common pleas: but judgements by custome are only in common pleas.

All pleas of the crown, concerning the life of man, are divided into treason and selony; and treason, into high treason, and petit treason; and felony into all the severall branches abovesaid. And as in the case of high treason, (as it hath before appeared) some be far more horrible and odious then other, yet (one case excepted, as before hath appeared) one and the same judgement is given for all. So in cases of petit treason, one judgement is given in all, nay in all the severall cases of felony, though some be far more hainous then other, yet all being but selony, one and the same judgement is given. See the judgement and forfeiture in cases of treason, selony, etc. in the severall titles thereof, these we will adde.

Et super hoc visis, &c. ut supra, consideratum est qued prædictus R. suspendatur per collum, quousque mortuus suerit. Bracton, lib. 3 so. 104. b. speaketh, de laqueo.

And it is a maxime in law, that execution must be according to the judgement, Ea quæ in curia nostra rite acta sunt, debit' executioni demandari debent: * and for expresse authority, non licet selonem pro selonia decollare; and yet some examples are to the con-

True it is that the lord of Hungerford of Heytesbury was in 32 H. 8. attainted of buggery, and had judgement to be hanged by the neck. untill he was dead; and yet on the twenty eight day of July in the same year was beheaded at the Tower Hill. But as true it is, that Thomas Fines lord Dacres of the South, in anno 33 H. 8. was attainted of murder, and had judgement to be hanged by the neck, untill he was dead, and according to the judgement was hanged at Tiborn the twenty eight of June in the same year, And true it is, that Edward duke of Somerset was attainted of selony in anno 5 E. 6, and had judgement to be hanged by the neck untill he was dead, and on the twenty second of February in the same year was beheaded at the Tower Hill. And as true it is, that 3 & 4 Ph. and Mar. the lord Stourton was attainted of murder, and had judgement to be hanged by the neck untill he were dead, and according to the judgement, the sixth of March in the same year was hanged.

In case of high treason, beheading is part of the judgement, and therefore the king may pardon all the rest saving beheading, as is usually done in case of nobility. But if a man being attainted of selony, be beheaded, it is no execution of the judgement, because the judgement is, that he be hanged, untill he be dead. In this case the judgement doth belong to the judge, and he cannot alter it, the execution belongs to the sherif, &c. and he cannot alter it. And if the execution might be altered in this case, from hanging to beheading, by the same reason it might be altered to burning, stoning to death, &c. To conclude this point, Judicandum est legibus, non exemplis, and judicium est juris dictum, et executio est executio juris

The forfeiture in case of petit treason and felony (which is implied in the judgement) is all one, which you may read in the first part of the Institutes. sect. 747. Quando peccaverit homo, avod me

Quando peccaverit homo, quod morte plettendus est, et adjudicatus morti appensus suerit in patibulo, non permanebit ejus cadaver in ligno, sed in eadem die sepelictur. And the reason that divines yeeld hereof is, for that by the execution of the judgement by death, the law is satisfied, and abhorreth cruelty, and in that case, mors dicitur ultimum supplicium.

And herein this is observable, that in treason and selony, the judge-

In case of treason or felony, if any person be outlawed, the judgement upon the exigent at the fift county court upon default of the party is, Ideo, &c. per judicium coronatoris domini regis comi- Regist. 164. b. tatus prædict, utlagatus est. And note that in these words (ideo utlagatur) both the corporall punishments and forfeiture also are implied: and if the proceeding therein, or the judgement be erroneous, and upon his appearance upon the capias utlagatum, if it appear to the court (whereof any man, as amicus curiæ, may inform the court) that the party may either avoid the outlawry against him by writ Error Fi. 26. of error, or by plea, the court ought not to award execution 28 E. 3.91. a. against the party, but affign him or her councell learned, and require him or her by their advice, either to bring a writ of error or plead: but if the party refuse to bring his writ of error or plead after convenient time be given, if the utlawry be erroneous and not void, the court may award execution. And so it was resolved, termino Hil. anno 3 Jacobi regis, by the whole court in the kings bench, and divers prefidents thereof shewed in the reigns of H. 6. E. 4. and one in the reign of queen Eliz. which we saw; for as long as the attainder by outlawry standeth in force, the party outlawed cannot be drawn in question by any new indictment or appeal for de mesme le ofthe treason, or felony, for the which he was outlawed: for auter- fence. foitz attaint for the same offence is a good plea to free him from answer in that cause, albeit the record be erroneous. But if the Vide 6 E. 3. 55. attainder or outlawry be void against him, then may he be either in Aiel. arraigned upon the former indictment, or appeal, or newly indicted, 12 E. 2. Ekst. &c. if there be cause. And therefore the judges are to take due Cor. 387. confideration of the whole record of the attainder or outlawry, that they may be truly informed of the true state of the cause, before they award execution of death against him upon the outlawry. Autersoitz attaint de murder is a good plea to an indictment, &c. of petit treason of the same death, for in effect it hath the same judgement, and the self same forseiture. By the common law if a man were attainted of a felony done. by him, and admitting he were after pardoned, he cannot at the fuit of the king be impeached for any felony whatfoever before his faid attainder by him committed, for by the attainder he was mort in ley; and in that case he had the judgement due for selony, viz. fuf. per col. But the party may have his appeal of robbery, for a robbery done before the felony, whereof he was attainted, because in the appeal he is to have restitution of his goods, besides judgment of death. * And if the party attainted of felony had committed high treason before his attainder, he shall answer to the treason notwithstanding his attainder of felony, because the king by the treason was intitled to have the forfeiture of all his lands, of whomfoever they were holden. Also for high treason there is another judgement being an offence of an higher nature: but being attainted of felony, if he commit treason afterwards, he shall answer thereunto, because it is of higher nature then the felony, but it shall not devest the right of escheat, which lawfully was by the felony vested in the lords, contrary to the opinion of justice Stanford in that case, for the act and offence of the party shall not devest the lawfull escheat of the lords: but if a man be attainted of treason, he cannot be after attainted of a former treason, causa qua supra.

Where a little before it is faid, that a felon by his attainder is mort in ley, it is to be understood of such former offences as require pænam mortis: for notwithstanding the attainder, his body remains subject to arrests and execution for debts, &c. Vide hic paulo post, Trussels and Prestals case in margine. Albeit for felony a man be adjudged to his penance, pain fort et jure, yet he may be impeached for any former felony, because, the judgement is not given for the

Judgement to reverse an Outlawry for Treason or Felony.

The judgement to reverse an outlawry of A. B. in case of treason or felony in a writ of error is: Ideo confideratum est quod utlagaria prædicta ob errorem prædict' et alios in recordo et process' prædict. compert', revocetur, adnulletur, et penitus pro nullo habeatur, et quod prædiet. A. B. ad communem legem, et omnia que occasione utlagarie prediet. amifit, restituatur, &c. et quod ipse eat sine die.

If the outlawrie be avoided by plea, then the judgement is, Ideo

If A. B. be indicted of treason or felony in the kings bench, or if he be indicted before commissioners of oier and terminer, or any other, and the indictment of treason or felony is removed into the kings bench: and by proces out of the kings bench he is erroneously outlawed and so returned, a writ of error may be brought in the kings bench for reverfall thereof.

And where it is holden by some, that if any person be attainted of high treason by the common law, that no writ of error should be brought for the reverfall of that attainder by reason of these words of the statute of 33 H. 8. cap. 20. viz. And if any person or persons shall be attainted of high treason by the course of the common law, &c. that every fuch attainder by the common law shall be of as good strength, value, force, and effect, as if it had been done by authority of parliament. But the contrary hereof was resolved at a parliament holden anno 28 Eliz. that a writ of error should be maintained for the reversall of erroneous attainders of high treason by the common law: for that statute of 33 + H. 8. is to be intended of lawfull attainders by the due course of the common law, and not of erroneous or void attainders. And thereupon at that parliament holden anno 28 Eliz. an act was made, That no record of attainder of any person or persons, of or for any high treason, where the party so attainted ‡ is or hath been executed for the same treason, shall be, &c. in any wise hereaster reversed, undone, avoided, or impeached by any plea, or for any error whatfoever.

 And albeit judgement be given against a man in case of treafon or felony, yet his body is not forfeited to the king, but untill execution remains his own. And therefore before execution, a if he be slain without authority of law, his wife shall have an appeal; for notwithstanding the attainder he remained her husband. after such attainder his body may at the suit of a subject be taken in execution upon a judgement or statute, &c. And he may be executed for treason or felony, notwithstanding such execution had against him. And in an action of debt, or other action brought against a person attainted, he cannot plead the attainder, and demand judgement, if during the attainder he shall be put to answer: for upon consideration had of the books in 11 Ass. 27. 2 E. 4. 1. 4 E. 4. 8. 6 E. 4. 4. 6 H. 4. 6. 8 Eliz. Dier 245, &c. c it was adjudged that the person attainted should not plead the said plea, but should be put to answer. And there is a great diversity between an attainder of treason or felony, and an entry into religion; for he that is attainted of treason or felony hath capacity, and a may purchase lands to him and his heirs, but so cannot he that is entred into religion. And it is against a rule in law, that any man of full age should be received in any plea by the f law to disable his own person, s or take advantage of his own wrong. And if the person attainted be beaten or maimed, or a woman attainted be ravished, after pardon, they shall have an action of battery, appeale of mayme, or rape. See Lib. Intr. Co. 247, 248. In h In antient time a man indicted or appealed of life or member, or imprisoned, &c. should not be compelled to answer at other a $ Encusement mens suits, but (as before it appeareth) these opinions have been justly changed.

i There was a notable case adjudged in the kings bench Mic. 26 & 27 Eliz. wherewith I was well acquainted concerning the matters of outlawry and errors before spoken of, which was in effect as followeth.

Ninianus Menvile nuper de Stedwich in com' Dunelm. ar' anno 1 & 2 Ph. and Mar. was indicted in the kings bench of high treason, and upon proces he was outlawed, and fo retorned, and his daughter and heire brought a writ of error in the kings bench, wherein two errors were assigned. 1. That before the exigent the 2 capias with a proclamation was awarded to the sheriffe of the county palatine of Durham, where it ought to have been directed to the chancellour of that county. For that point 30 H. 6. 6. 36 H. 6. 35. & See the flat. of 1 E. 4. 10. the book of entries Rast. fo. 52. Stanf. pl. cor. 68, 69. 8 H. 6. cap. 10. & 70. Vid. 19 H. 6. 2. 31 H. 6. 11. but the court gave no opinion concerning this error. The other error that was affigned, was that the theriffe retorned upon the faid capias, that at his court holden at the city of Durham the eight day of July in the second and third yeares of the reigne of king Philip and queen Mary he made the proclamation, &c. and there were no fuch years: for queen Mary began her reigne the 6 day of July, and the 25 day of July in the 2 year of her reign she maried king Philip: so as between the 2 day of July, and the 25 day of July, the queen wrote two years before the king. And therefore there could be no fuch years as 8 July armo 2 & 3, but should have been 2 & 4. And so was the clear opinion of the whole court. But then it was objected, that by the said act of 35 H. 8. and Stanfords opinion thereupon, that the attainder by outlawry being an attainder by the common law, it could not be reverfed by writ of error, for that the faid act of 35 H. 8. was to be intended of lawfull attainders: and after great deliberation the outlawry of treason was reversed. And I take it, it shall not be altogether impertinent, sure I am it shall not be unprofitable, to report the consequent of this reversall. the next terme, sc. term. Hil. anno 27 Eliz. for that queen Eliz. had the lands whereof the faid Ninian was seised in see: his wife by petition of right, which comprehended the title of the wife, and the title of the queen, claimed her dower, which in effect was this: that her husband was seised of certain lands in fee, and took her to wife; and before his treason committed anno i Maria levied a fine with proclamation to another, whose estate the queen had by lawfull conveyance therein expressed; and that afterward her said husband was attainted of high treason by outlawry, ut supra, and died in anno 4 Eliz. which outlawry was the last terme reversed in a writ of error, as is abovesaid: which petition being indorsed by the queen, Soit droit fait al partie, and delivered into the chancery, Sir Thomas Bromley a man of great gravity and judgement in law, then being lord chancellor of England, by advice of all the judges resolved these sour points following. First, that the petitioner need not to have any office to finde her title, because her title standeth with the title of the queen, and the queen is not intitled by office (which she might traverie.

Fourthly, albeit an attainder reverted by a writ of error, is as concerning restitution to the party by relation from the beginning become of no force, and the record so annihilated thereby, as nul tiel record may be pleaded thereunto: yet this relation shall never work a bar, and consequently a wrong to a stranger, but that the truth of the matter may be shewed. viz. the record, and the reverfall of the fame: and the rather (as fome faid) because the wife could not have any writ of error to reverse the outlawry, b so as the had no mean to pursue her right fo long as the outlawry remained in force, which it did, untill it But admit the wife had been (in a remote was reverled by error. degree of consanguinity) heir to her husband, so as she might within five years after the death of her husband have had her writ of error after the death of her husband to reverse the outlawry, and to enable herselfe to pursue for her dower, and reverseth not the outlawry within the five years: I hold in this case that she shall have five years after this reverfall, and that within the faid faving of the statute of 4 H. 7. for then did her title of dower (as hath been faid) first grow unto her, and it was not in her power to reverse the outlawry when she would. And in this term of S. Hillary, Popham attorny generall, according to the faid resolution of the lord chancellor and judges, confessed the petition to be true; and thereupon judgement was given, that the should be indowed, and was indowed accordingly.

e By the statute of 26 H. 8. and 5 E. 6. it is enacted, that all process of outlawry against any offenders in treason, being out of the realm, or beyond the seas, at the time of the outlawry pronounced, shall be as good and effectuall as if the offenders had been within the realme at the time of the outlawry pronounced. See the said statute of 5 E. 6. cap. 11. that, if the party outlawed shall within one year after the outlawry pronounced, yeild himselfe to the chief justice in England, and traverse the said indistrment, &c. and thereupon be sound not guilty by verdict, he shall be

Judgement in case of Abjuration for Felony, whiles it was of Force.

After the flying of a felon for any kinde of felony whatsoever, facriledge excepted, (but in case of high treason or petit treason a man could never abjure, because the coroner is not allowed by law law to be a judge of those heynous crimes) into a church, &c. for *6 E. 3. 53. in safegard of his life: and upon his prayer of a coroner *, * and his Ajell Mallome voluntary and particular confession of the felony before the coroner, naming the certain time, the judgement was, Idem A. petit de præfato coronatore regnum dom. regis Angliæ abjurare: super quo tradito b ei libro p. præfat' coronatore, idem A. regnum prædict. cora' præfato coronatore pradiel' die, &c. in ecclesia pradictà abjuravit, in idem regnum nunquam rediturus absque speciali licentia, et reconciliatione regis Anglia, et assignatus est eidem A. pro transitu suo extra regnum pradictum portus de Yarmouth e cruce in manu sua dextra posita, prout lex Anglie eft et consuetudo. Nothing is expressed in this judgement but abjuravit regnum, but therein is implied, that all his lands, which he had at the time of the felony committed, d (and therefore the time of the felony was fet down in his confession particularly) or at any time after, escheated to the lords of the sees, and forfeited to the king all his goods which he had at the time of his attainder, • the time whereof also was expressed certainly, and his blood corrupted, and other incidents, as in other attainders of felony, only by his voluntary and particular confession. And the law was so favourable for the preservation of sanctuary, that if the felon had been in prison for the felony, and before attainder or conviction, s had escaped and taken fanctuary in church or church-yard, &c. and the gaolers or others had purfued him, and brought him again to prison, upon his arraignment he might have pleaded the same, and should have been restored again to the fanctuary: see more concerning abjuration, Mic. 9 E. 3, coram rege rot 84. extra legem positus, &c. To conclude this judgment of abjuration, we take it, that for felony h abjuration is utterly taken away. For abjuration of reculants and of hunters in parks, &c. we have given but a light touch, because they belong not to our treatife of the pleas of the crown, nor have we spoken any thing of abjuration in case of heresv, quia spectat ad aliud forum.

Thus have we spoken of judgments, and attainders in cases of 6 H 4 6. high treason, upon verdict, confession, or nihil dicit, and by outlawry: in case of petit treason, upon verdict, confession, or by outlawry: and in case of felony, upon verdict, or confession, or by outlawry, or by abjuration; for none can be attainted of petit treason or felony upon a nihil dicit, or refusal to answer, but in that case the delinquent is to have his punishment of peine fort et dure, & Lib. int. Now for that the judgement to the pillory or tumbrell (as it hath appeared before) doth make the delinquent infamous, and that the rule of law is, Judicium de majore poena quam quod legibus statutum est non infamum facit, sed per breve de errore adnullare potest, and again, fæna gravior ultra legem posita æstimationem conservat, that the justices of affile, oier and terminer, gaol-delivery, and justices of peace, would be well advised before they give judgment of any person to the pillory or tumbrell, unlesse they have good warrant for their judgment therein. If it be found by verdict, that the party (indicted or appealed for the death of A) A attempted to have murdered or a robbed him in or nigh any common high way, cart-way, horse-way, or footway, or in his mansion or dwelling house; or for the killing of him which attempteth burglary to break his dwelling house in the night; the judgement upon such a verdict shall be, that he shall be acquited of the death of such a person paying his sees, and he shall forseit nothing. And so it is declared and enacted by the statute of 24 H. 8.

And if all the circumstances be proved to the jury in evidence required by this act in these cases, the jury may finde a generall verdict of not guilty. And where it is rehearfed in the faid act of 24 H. 8. that before that act it was a question and ambiguity whether evill disposed persons so attempting, ut supra, should forfeit their goods and chattels: the reason of that question and ambiguity was in none * of those cases mentioned in that act, no robbery, murder, or burglary was done, but an attempt only to do it. was no question at the common law, that if a robbery, murder, burglary, or other felony was done, and pursuit made after the offender, who either by refistance or flight could not be apprehended without killing of him by inevitable necessity, the party so purfuing and killing should not forfeit his goods or chattels; for in those cases every man may arrest the felon by a warrant in law. But there is a diverfity between a warrant in deed, and a warrant in law, in this, that if a man be indicted of murder, robbery, burglary, or other felony, and the sheriffe by vertue of a capias offer to arrest him, and he refisteth and flye, ut fupra, the sheriffe may kill him, if otherwise he cannot arrest him, although in truth the party be not guilty, nor any felony done But in the case of the abovesaid warrant in law, there must be a selony done, and this diversity appear-* And fo it is, if after arrest for felony the party eth in our books. arrested resisteth or flyeth, and in pursuit is slaine by inevitable ne-

An approver that kils the party accused in battell, or a champion that killeth the other champion in a writ of right, or the plaintise or desendant in an appeale that killeth the other in duello, according to the common law, or in combat awarded by the constable and marshall in the court of chivalry, the party killing shall forseit nothing; for these combats or duels are such trials as the law appoints in such cases. For saith Fleta, Duellum est singularis pugna inter dues ad probandum veritatem litis; et qui vicerit probasse intelligitur: et quamvis judicium Dei expectatur ibid. quicunque tamen monoachiam, i. singularem pugnam sponte susceptiat, aut obtulerit, homicida est, et mortale contrahit peccatum. But before we leave these champions, it is to be observed that whosoever taketh upon him to be a champion for another (the forme and b oath whereof you may reade in the second part of the Institutes, W. 1. cap. 40. and Glinvil.

So as no man by the ancient common law could be a champion, but he that knew the right, and was a witnesse thereof: and therewith agreeth the statute of W. 1. cap. 40. wherein observe what the oath was by the common law. Aliquando patria stat pro campione et aliquando in bre. de rectio campio stat pro patria. Campio is derived à campo, because it is publickly stroken in the field, and is called camp-fight: and is taken in the common law for one that striketh a legal camp fight or combat in another mans quarrel: in Latin he is called * pugil à pugna. But the defendant merito incur-in an appeal that is to combat, is not called a champion, because sunt. be fighteth for himselfe. And these combats in cases whereof the conusance belongs to the common law, are to be directed by the judges of the common law fecundum legem et consuetudinem Anglia, and not by the constable and marshall by the civill law, as all our ancient authors and bookes abovefaid do agree, which also is apparant by the statute of 13 R. 2. ca. 2.

That they for ever shall lose the freedome and franchise of the law. That is, first, they shall never be of any jury or recognitors of assisting. Secondly, nor ever be received for a witnesse in any case. Thirdly, that they shall never come into any of the kings courts, but make attornies, if they have any thing to do there. And this is called a villanous judgement, because of the villany and infamy which they deserve against whom it is given: And all is inflicted by the common law, for that the offenders by salse conspiracy under the pretext of law, by indictment of treason or selony and legall proceeding thereupon, sought to do the greatest injustice by salse conspiracy to shed his blood,

judgement is, damages to the party, fine to the king, and impri-forment. And the reason thereof is, first, for that when they are indicted at the fuit of the king, the judgement is so severe, for that they fallely conspired in the kings name, and at the kings suit by indictment, &c. to do so horrible injustice: therefore at the kings fuit they shall be heavily punished. Secondly, for that as it is said in 15 E. 2. De exilio Hugonis, &c. the law which was instituted for the maintenance of peace and of good men, and the punishment of the evill, is turned to the disheritance of the great men, and destruction of the people. Thirdly, for that the judgement at the kings fuit is by the common law, and the action of the party is given by statute, which giveth no such punishment: but the party in his action, in respect of the danger of his life, is to recover answerable damages. It ought to have been printed amongst the statutes of the realm, and the title of them is, Here followeth the oath of the justices made in the same eighteenth year, but saith not at the parliament, &c. but after it became to be printed; and that which is printed in anno 20 E. 3. ca. 1. is but a recitall made by the king alone, and no act of parliament: for it appeareth by that which precedeth, and by the oath it felf, that it was the act only and commandement of the king, for it beginneth: first, we have commanded all our justices, &c. which former part was but a recitall of some precedent act: and then followeth, we have ordained and caused our said justices to be sworn, &c. so as the oath was devised by the king, and the justices sworn before this parliament. And it appeareth by Fleta, that the punishment of a corrupt judge, that receiveth gift or reward was, Si inde convictus fuerit, quòd imperpetuum à concilio regis excludatur; terrasque, res, redditus, et proventus bonorum suorum amittat per unum annum: qui, si proventus non habuerit, puniatur per discretionem regni et consiliariorum regis. And that which Fleta calleth facramentum justic', in Vet. losse in the reign of E. r. as in the chapter of Extortion and Bribery before appears: only Sir Thomas Weyland chief justice of the common pleas, took fanctuary, and before a coroner confessed himself guilty of murder, and according to the course of the common law abjured the realm, so as indeed he was attainted of felony, (which case had been vehemently urged) but it was not for bri-

Vide Vet. Mag. parliament. First, with the statute of 8 R. 2. wherein it is recited, that whereas in the time of king E. 3. it was ordained, that justices as long as they should be in office, should not take gift or reward, and so forth, as in Veteri Magna Carta (without the said fatall clause) that act provideth, that the oath without that fatall clause should extend as well to the barons of the exchequer, as to the justices, and expressed the penalty of all to be (according to the common law) viz. losse of office, fine and ransome. But at printed. Vid. the next parliament, viz. 9 R. 2. the said act of 8 R. 2. for that it was a very hard, and needed declaration, was made of no force till it be declared in parliament. b Afterwards at the parliament holden 11 H. 4. it was debated what punishment great officers there named counsellors of the king, and judges, &c. should have, which should take any gift, reward, or brocage for doing of their offices or fervices: in the end it was declared and enacted by authority of parliament, in these words following. Item que nul chancelor, treasorer, garden del privy seal, counsellier du roy servientes a counsiell du roy, ne nul autre officer, * jugge ne minister du roy pernont fees ou gages de roy pur lour dites offices ou service, preigne en nul manner, en temps avenir ascun manner de c done ou brocage de nulluy pur lour ditz offices et services affaire, sur peine de 1 responder a roy de la treble de ceo, que † issi preignont, 2 et de satisfier la party, 3 et punis al volunt le roy, et 4 soit discharges de son office, service, et counsell pur touts jours, et que chescun que verra pursuer en la dit mattier eit la sute sibien pur le roy come pur luy mesme, et eit la tierce part del summe de que la partie soit duement convict. Respons. Le roy le voet.

^a This act being by authority of parliament, hath limited the punishment (amongst others) of corrupt judges, of whom now we entreat, so as the former example of Sir William Thorp is not now to be followed, which we affirm not in favour of fordid bribery, (which we hate, as in the proper chapter thereof before appeareth) but in advancement of justice and right, which is the end of our ful clause is Labour in this and other of our works; b and therefore have caused that good act that hath lived fo long in obscurity, for the better notice and observation thereof, to be put to the press, which never was yet printed; and the cause thereof was, for that in the margent of the parliament roll of this act, it is written, respectuatur per dominum principem et concilium: a strange presumption without warrant of the king his father, and of the parliament, to cause

refere a prisoner, one of his unshrifty minions indicted and arraigned at the kings bench bar for selony, was prevented of his purpose by the perswasion and commandement of the chief justice, for which the chief justice committed the prince to the kings bench, whereof some of his followers instantly complained to the king his sather: who informing himself of the true state of the case, gave God infinite thanks, that he had given him such a judge, as feared not to minister justice, and such a son, as could suffer semblably and obey justice. And this is that prince, who abandoning his former company and counsell, and following the advice of grave, wise, and expert men, whom he made choice of to be of his councel, became a victorious and vertuous king, and prosperous in all that he took in hand, at home and abroad.

For the duty of judges, it is truly faid (as before hath been faid) that judex debet habere dues sales, viz. salem scientiæ, ne sit instridus, et sulem constitutiæ, ne sit diabetus. To these we will add, that upon the conclusion of a marriage then to be had between Philip the son of the emperour, and prince of Spain, it was nobly and wisely provided by the queen, the lords spirituall and temporall, and the commons by authority of parliament (amongst many other excellent provisions worthy of observation) that the said prince should not promote, admit, or receive to any office, administration or benefice in the realm of England, and the dominions thereunto belonging, any stranger, or persons not born under the dominion and subjection of the most noble queen of England: and that the said most noble prince should doe nothing whereby any thing might be innovated in the state or right, either publique or private, or in the lawes and customes of England; or the dominions thereunto belonging, but shall contrariwise consimum and keep, to all estates and orders, their rights and priviledges.

And it is there further provided for the future, &c. that if the faid prince should have issue male or semale, the order of succession is there declared, but with this proviso. Provided neverthelesse, and expressly reserved in all and singular the above declared cases of succession, that whatsoever he or she be, that shall succeed in them, they shall leave to every of the said realms, lands and dominions whole and entire their priviledges, rights, and customes, and the same realms and dominions shall administer, and cause to be administred by the naturall born of the said realms, dominions, and

By this, Philip (after king of Spain) could not prefer any firanger born to any office of judicature, &c. within the realm of England, or dominions of the same, nor all the time he was within this realm, ever attempted the same.

And in the articles, De matrimonio prælocuto inter reginam Elizabetham et ducem de Alonson, amongst others it was expresly provided, Quod dux villum extraneum ad aliquod officium in Anglia promovebit, et nihil in jure mutabit, &c.

So as (Super tota materia) these two conclusions are manifestly proved. First, that before indictment, the goods or other things of any offender cannot be fearched, inventoried, or in any fort seised; nor after indictment seised, and removed, or taken away regi secta contra before conviction or attainder. Secondly, that the begging of the goods or state of any delinquent accused or indicted of any trea-son, felony, or other offence before he be convicted and attainted, is utterly unlawfull, because before conviction and attainder, as hath been faid, nothing is forfeited to the king, nor grantable by him. And besides it either maketh the profecution against the delinquent more precipitate, violent, and undue, then the quiet and equall proceeding of law and justice would permit, or else by some underhand composition and agreement stop or hinder the due course of justice for exemplary punishment of the offender. And lastly, when the delinquent is begged, it discourageth both judge, juror, and witnesse to doe their duty.

Syers cafe, anno 32 Eliz.

T twelfe sessions of the peace holden at Norwich for the county of Norfolk, anno 32 Eliz. one Syer was indicted of burglary, supposed to be committed I Augusti anno 31 Eliz. whereunto Syer pleaded not guilty. And upon the evidence it appeared that the burglary was committed 1 Septemb. anne 31 Eliz. so as at the time alledged in the indictment there was no burglary, done:

done: and it was conceived that the very true day in the indictment was necessary to be set down in the indictment, for that the judgement doth relate to the day in the indictment, and so avoid feoffements, leafes, &c. for that as it was also conceived) the seoffee, lessee, &c. when the attainder is upon a verdict, should not fallifie in the time of the felony: and thereupon the jury found Syer not guilty. And at the fame sessions Syer was again indicted for the same burglary done a Septembris anno 31 Eliz. when in truth it was done. And he that gave the charge at that fessions doubted, whether upon this matter Syer might plead auter foitz acquite for the same burglary, (for seeing the offender is allowed no counfell, the court ought to do him justice and assigne him counfell in fastorem vite, though he demand it not, to plead any matter in law appearing to the court for his discharge;) and thereupon he stayed the proceeding against him, and the assises being at hand he At the assises in acquainted the justices of affize, Wray chief justice, and justice Lent, 32 Eliz. ia Peryam with this case, and with the doubts conceived thereupon; com. Norff. who answered him, that the like case had then been lately propounded by justice Peryam to all the justices of England; and by them Nota, The refothree points were resolved. 1. That the crown was not bound to set lution of all the down the very day when the treason, selony, &c. was done, but judgesthe day let down in the indictment being before or after the offence done, the jury ought to finde him guilty, if the truth of the case be so; and if it be alledged before the offence done, to finde the day when it was done in rei veritate, for they are sworn ad veritatem dicendam, and then the forfeiture shall relate but to the day in the verdict, which was the day of the offence done, and not to the day in the indictment. 2. That if the triers finde the offender guilty generally, yet the feoffee or lessee, &c. if the offence be alledged in the indictment before it was done to their prejudice, may fallshie in the time, but not for the offence. For feeing the crown is not bound to fet down the very just day when the treason or felony, &c. is done, and that the triers have chief regard and respect of the offence it selfe, God forbid, but that the subject might. fallifie as concerning the time of the offence. 3. If the offender the found not guilty, he in that case might plead upon a new indictment, auterfoits acquite: and so Syer in the case aforesaid did, and was thereupon discharged according to the said resolutions. Note three notable points resolved, that never were resolved in any book that we have read, and remember.

If a man infeoffeth another of his land, and after is indicted of a felony supposed to be committed before the feoffment, and thereupon he is outlawed; the party himself is bound hereby, and cannot traverse the felony, but the feoffee, &c. may; because he is an estranger thereunto: for a false indictment without any tryall by verdict shall not binde the feoffee, &c. but that he may falfifie, either by traverse of the felony it selfe, or of the time of the

And so it is if a man maketh a feoffement of his land, and after taketh fanctuary, and confesse the felony before the coroner by 11 H. 4. 94. him to be done before the feossement, and abjureth the realm; the 2H. 5. Estop. 91. feoffee shall falsifie the attainder by traversing of the felony. And so it is if a man be indicted of felony, and is attainted by his own soulestion, the feoffee shall falsifie the attainder by denying the felony.

Where the case in effect is, that 19 Januarii anho 1 Maria, a commission of oier and terminer in Loudon was directed to Sir Thomas White the lord major of London, and to divers others, reciting, that where Sir Robert Dudley knight, 9 Januarii anno 1 Maria was indicted of high treason before Thomas duke of Norff. and 14 others commissioners of oier and terminer in the county of Norff. (where in truth that commission was directed to so many, but the indictment was taken but before 8 of them only) granting to them or any four of them, authority to receive the indictment taken before 15 commissioners, and to proceed thereupon as speciall justices of oier and terminer, &c. By pretext whereof they proceeded: and upon the confession of the said Sir Robert Dudley, gave judgement against him in case of high treason. * In this case it was adjudged, that Sir Robert Dudley, then earl of Leic. might falsifie the said attainder by plea, because it was void, and coram non judice: for that the faid latter commissioners b had no power to proceed upon an indictment taken before 8, but before 15, and so the judgement was void, and coram non judice: for wherefoever the judgement is void or coram non judice, the party is not driven to his writ of error, but may falfifie the attainder by plea, shewing the special matter which proveth it void, or coram non judice. In which case the party forseiteth neither lands nor goods. By which case it appeareth how necessary it is for judges, especially in cases of treason and felony, to look into the whole record, and the proceedings thereupon, before they give judgement, lest they give an unlawfull and unjust judgment, by means whereof the party may lofe his life, &c.

e A and B were indicted, A as principall of felony, and B a accessory for receiving him. A fled and was attainted of the felony by outlawry. B the accessory (being seised of lands in see holden of C) was arraigned upon the indictment and found guilty by verdict, and had judgement, and was hanged: C the lord entreth as lord by escheat: A the principall reverseth the outlawry, and to the felony pleaded not guilty, and by verdict was found not guilty, and thereupon was by judgement acquited. The heir of B. brought an affife of mordancestor against C the lord by escheat, who pleaded the outlawry of the principall, and the attainder of the accessory, his season in see, and the execution, and his entry as lord by escheat. In The plaintife shewed the reversall of the outlawry by the principall, and his acquittall by verdict and judgement, whereupon the lord demurred in judgement. And it was adjudged that the plaintife in the writ of mordancestor should recover against the lord by escheat. Upon which judgement we obferve these five conclusions. 1. . That the attainder of the accesfory hath a kinde of dependancy upon the attainder of the principall. For it is a maxime in law, that the accessory ought not to be put to answer before the principall be attainted; and by the reverfall and acquitall of the principall, the dependant judgement against the accessory cannot stand. 2. That this attainder of the accessory may be falsified and avoided by the heir by plea, and is not driven to his writ of error; for that the attainder of the acceffory is by matter in law avoided by record of as high nature as the attainder of the principall was. For in this case it is impossible that there should be an accessory where there was no principall, of the fame felony. 3. That the escheat of the land lawfully once vested shall by this matter ex post facto, be devested. 4. Though there were no immediate discent to the heir, yet upon the judgement of the acquitall of the principall the writ of mordanceffor Lastly, that albeit the attainder of the acwas maintainable. ceffory is avoided by judgement of law, yet the lord by escheat remain tenant of the land, until it be evicted from him by action or entry. And fo it is if the principall be attainted of 18 E. 4. 9. b. felony, and after the accessory is also attainted, if the principall reverseth his attainder by writ of error, the attainder of the accessory dependant thereupon is reversed.

A man commits treason or felony, and is thereof attainted in Dier 20 Eliz. due form of law, and after this treason or felony is pardoned by a generall pardon; hereby the foundation it felf, viz. the treason dels case. or felony being by authority of parliament discharged and pardoned, the attainder (being builded thereupon) cannot stand, but may be falfified and avoided by plea, for he hath no other remedy

In the county of Warwick there were two brethren, the one having iffue a daughter, and being feifed of lands in fee devifed the government of his daughter and his lands, untill she came to her age of fixteen years, to his brother, and died. The uncle brought up his niece very well both at her book and needle, &c. and the was about eight or nine years of age: her uncle for fome offence correcting her, the was heard to fay, Oh good uncle kill me not. After which time the childe after much inquiry, could not be heard of: whereupon the uncle being suspected of the murder of her, the rather for that he was her next heir, was upon examination anno 8 Jac. regis committed to the gaol for suspicion of murder, and was admonished by the justices of assise to find out the childe, and thereupon bailed him untill the next affifes. Against which time, for that he could not finde her, and fearing what would fall out against him, took another childe as like unto her both in person and years as he could find, and apparelled her like unto the true child, and brought her to the next affifes, but upon view and examination, she was found not to be the true child; and upon these presumptions he was indicted and found guilty, had judgement, and was hanged. But the truth of the case was, that the child being beaten over night, the next morning when she should go to schoole, ran away into the next county: and being well educated was received and entertained of a stranger: and when the was fixteen years old, at what time the should come to her land, she came to demand it, and was directly proved to be the Which case we have reported for a double caveat: true child. first to judges, that they in case of life judge not too hastily upon bare prefumption: and fecondly, to the innocent and true man, that he never feek to excuse himself by false or undue means, lest thereby he offending God (the author of truth) overthrow himself, as the uncle did.

If A be indicted before the coroner for the death of another, and that A fled for the same; hereby are all the goods and chattels of A forfeited which he had at the time of the verdict given; and this cannot be falfified by traverse. For if the party be arraigned upon the same indictment before justices of gaole delivery, and is by verdict acquitted of the felony, and that he did not flee for the same; yet he shal forfeit his goods and chattels, but yet, a such a fugam fecit may be falsified by matter in law; for if the indictment be void or infufficient, there is no forfeiture. But if a man be indicted before justices of oier and terminer, and is acquited by verdict, and they finde further that he fled for the same, his goods are forfeited which he had at the time of the verdict given; and it being also found in particular what goods he then had, that may be traverfed by any that had property in those goods.

There is also a fugam fecit in law. As if a man be indicted or appealed of felony and proces continued against him, upon his default of appearance, and an exigent awarded against him, whereupon he appeareth, albeit he be after acquited of the felony, yet all his goods and chattels are forfeited by the awarding of the exigent upon this fugam fecit in law. But this may be falsified by matter in law: for if the indictment or writ of appeal be infufficient, or error be in the proces or exigent the fame may be avoided by exception, and no forfeiture of goods. And there is no book to warrant the opinion of justice Stanford * in this case: for in 43 E. 3. the original writ was good, quod adnoto, non ut arguam, sed ne ipse arguar. And also by matter in deed or record he may excuse his absence, as if he were in prison or beyond the sea, at the time 45 E. 3. Aff. 9. of the exigent awarded, or if the king before the exigent doth pardon him.

> A is indicted of petit larceny, and upon his triall is found not guilty, and that he did flye for the fame, he shall forfeit his goods. And so it is if an exigent be upon such an indictment awarded against him: but he may falsifie the same to free him of the forfeiture of his goods by fuch means as is aforesaid. CAP. CV.

OF PARDONS.

W E have spoken of the royall and establishing vertue of justice: royall and establishing I say, because justica for- Prov. 16. 12. matur folium, by justice the royall throne is established. We are now to speak of his mercy: for the same Holy Spirit Saith, Misericordia et veritus custodiunt regem, et roboratur clementia Prov. 20. 28. chronus ejus. Mercy and truth preserve the king, and by clemency is his throne strengthened. And hereupon is the law of England grounded. Non folum sapiens debet effe rex, sed et misericors, ut cam Bract. lib. 2. fo. sapientia miscricorditer sit justus, &c. Quibus tamen et qualiter est miferendum, doceant eum merita vel immerita personarum, &c. Of this royall vertue we shall speak the more willingly, for that (as it hath appeared before in the chapter of Sanctuary) all fanctuaries and places of refuge for fafegard of life are taken away. And where Bracton in the same place speaking of the kings mercy saith, Nihil tam proprium est imperii quam legibus vivere, it is to be observed, that the lawes of this realm have in fome fort limited and bounded the kings mercy, as shall appear hereafter. And for as much as his mercy is conveyed unto his subjects by his pardons, we shall now speak thereof, being led thereunto by the book in 9 E. 4. where it is holden a chescun roy appent per reason de son office 9 E. 4. 2. 2. a faire justice et grace; justice in execution des leyes, &c. et grace de granter pardons, &c.

* A pardon is a work of mercy, whereby the king either before attainder, sentence, or conviction, or after, forgiveth any crime, offence, punishment, execution, right, title, debt or duty, temporall or ecclesiasticall: b all that is forfeited to the king by any attainder, &c. he may restore by his charter: but if by the attainder the blood be corrupted, that must be restored by authority of parlia-

All pardons of treason or felony are to be made by the king. and in his name only, and are either generall or speciall. All pardons either generall or speciall, are either by act of parliament (whereof the court in some cases shall take notice) or by the charter of the king, (which must always be pleaded.) And these 17 H. 6. proagaine are either absolute, or under condition, exception, or qualifi- tect. 57. cation: for some of those pardons last mentioned the party may have a writ of allowance, or take an averment in certain cases, in others the party may be aided by averment only, where no writ of allowance doth lie.

court must take notice of them, though the party plead it not, but would wave the same. But in these dayes the generall pardons have so many qualifications and exceptions of offences and things. and of persons also, that the court cannot take notice of them. neither can the party take benefit or advantage thereof, unlesse he plead it: and for that it may concern the fafety and quiet of many a subject, we have expressed the form of the pleading of a generall pardon, and have it set down here in Latin: but if the offence be objected in the star-chamber, or any other English court, then it

By the generall pardon of 28 El. all felonies are pardoned, burglary excepted. Hil. 29 El. it was refolved by all the justices, that a man being attainted of burglary was excepted, for the burglary remains, and is made more apparant by the attainder, and the offence of burglary is the foundation.

The most beneficiall generall pardons for the subject were those of the fift, and thirteenth years of the reign of queen Elizabeth, as by comparison of those with others, will to the judicious reader easily appear. The best generall pardon in all king James time, was that of the 21 year of his reign, as by comparison of that with any of his former, will evidently appear, and were too long here to be rehearfed.

And now of particular pardons. No particular pardon, be it at Hil. 26 E. 3, the coronation, or any other, of any offence or offences whatfoever, that is absolute without any * condition, &c. need any writ of al- 21. Wiltes. lowance, but when the pardon is conditional by force of the act of 10 E. 3. cap. 2. there a writ of allowance out of the chancery testifying that the condition is performed, viz. surety found according to that act may be had, or the party may plead the finding of furety, &c. and vouch the record.

The most large and beneficiall pardons by letters patents, that we have read, and doe remember, were that to William Wickham bishop of Winchester (for good men will never refuse God and the kings pardon, because every man doth often offend both of them) and that other to Thomas Woolsey cardinall, which are

But let us turn our eye to ancient charters of pardon, and con-

ei inde concedimus. This fella pacis is by indictment, which is the kings suit, and, as it were, his declaration. Thirdly, that the king of ancient time did not pardon homicidium, &c. but fellam pacis westra qua ad nos pertinet de homicidiis, &c. yet when he pardoned, and released the suit or mean, viz. fellam pacis, &c. the offender was discharged of the homicide it self, in diebus ilis, but at this day the offence it self is pardoned, which is the surest way.

The king brought an action of debt upon an obligation, the defendant pleaded non est factum, and at a nist prius it was found the deed of the defendant; and before the day in bank, the king pardoned the defendant all debts, querels, &c. and after the king had judgement, and fued out execution, and the defendant came and pleaded the pardon, and it was adjudged that in the kings case, he might plead the fame, though he had no day in court, because he could not have an audita querela, or a scire fac' against the king, and therefore if he could not plead it, he should be without remedy, but against a common person he could not plead it, because he ought to have an audita querela, or a scire fac'. And in this case it is observable, that albeit by the judgement a new title to the said debt is accrewed to the king of record after the pardon, the obligation at the time of the pardon being but a matter in fact, yet for that the obligation was the * foundation of the debt, and the matter whereupon judgement was given, and by the pardon the debt due by the obligation was extinct, the judgement thereupon cannot bind, but is to be avoided by pleading the pardon.

In case of death of man, robberies, and selonies against the peace, divers acts of parliament have restrained the power of granting charters of pardons. First, that no such charters shall be granted but in case where the king may doe it by his oath. Secondly, that no man shall obtain charters out of parliament, and accordingly in a parliament roll it is said; sfor the peace of the land it would much help, if good justices were appointed in every county, if such be let to mainprise doe put in good sureties, as esquires or gent. and that no pardon were granted but by parliament. Thirdly, for that the king hath granted pardons of selonies upon salfe suggestions, it is provided, that every charter of selony which shall be granted at the suggestion of any, the name of him that maketh the suggestion shall be comprised in the charter, and if the suggestion be sound untrue, the charter shall be disallowed. And the like provision is made by the statute of 5 H. 4. cap. 2. for the pardon of an approver,

4 Fourthly, it is provided that no charter of pardon for murder, treason, or rape, shall be allowed, &c., if they be not specified in the same charter.

Before this statute of 13 R. 2. by the pardon of all selonies, treason was pardoned, and so was murder, &c. At this day by the pardon of all selonies, the death of man is not pardoned. These be excellent laws for direction, and for the peace of the realm. But it hath been conceived, (which we will not question) that the king may dispense with these laws by a non obstance, be it generall or speciall, (albeit we find not any such clauses of man obstance, to dispense with any of these statutes, but of late times) these these statutes are excellent instructions for a religious and prudent king to follow, for in these cases, ut summæ potestatis regis est posse quantum velit, sic magnitudinis est velle quantum possit. Hereof you may read more in justice Stanford, lib. 2. cap. 35. in divers places of that chapter, of his grave advice in that behalf. Most certain it is, that the word of God hath fet down this undisputable generall rule, h Quia non profertur cito contra mulos sententia, filii h minum sine h Eccles. 8. 11. timore ullo perpetrant mala. And thereupon the rule of law is grounded. Spes impunitatis continuum affection tribuit delinquendi. Regulæ. Et veniæ facilitas incentivum est delinquendi. This is to be added, Maledictus est that the intention of the faid act of 13 R. 2. was not that the king fpe. should grant a pardon of murder by expresse name in the charter, but because the whole parliament conceived, that he would never pardon murder by speciall name for the causes aforesaid, therefore was that provision made, which was (as in other cases I have observed) grounded upon the law of God, Quicunque effuderie huma- Genes, o. 6. num sanguinem, fundetur sanguis illius; ad imaginem quippe Dei creatus Num. 35. 33. est homo. Nec aliter expiari potest, nisi per esus sanguinem, qui alterius Sanguinem effuderit. And the words of every pardon is after the recitall of the offence, Nos pietate moti, &c. See before in the chapter of Murder, and in the second part of the Institutes, stat. de Glouc. ca. 9. and the Register, so. 309. pardon of the king, de morte per infortunium, se defendendo, vel per lunaticum, vel per furiosum.

In an appeal of death, robbery, rape, &c. the king cannot pardon the defendant, for the appeal is the fuit of the party, to 11 R. 2. For example, in an at- 13 E. 4, 5. 2. taint by A. against the party, and the petit jury; against the party to save reflitution, this the king cannot pardon: against the petit jury, by the common law that they should lose liberam legem, their wives and children cast out of their houses, their houses wasted, their trees prostrated, their meadows ploughed up, their goods and chattels feifed, and their bodies taken, this the king may pardon, because it is a punishment exemplary to deter others, and tendeth not to the restitution or satisfaction of the plaintif.

Now to take an example upon a statute: De pueris masculis sive W. 2. ca. 35. jemellis (quorum maritagium ad aliquem pertineat) raptis et abduesti, anno 13 E. 1. I ille qui rapuit non habens jus in maritagio, licet postmodum restituat perum non maritatum, vel de maritagio, satisfecerit, puniatur tamen p. transgressione per prisonam duorum annorum. The defendant in an appeal of murder upon not guilty pleaded, was found guilty of manslaughter: and it was resolved by the justices upon conference between them, that the queen might pardon the burning of the hand, for that is no part of the judgement at the suit of the party plaintif in the appeal, but it is a collaterall, and exemplary punishment inflicted by the statute of 4 H. 7,

In some actions wherein the subject is sole party (as appeareth by that which hath been said) some things the king may pardon: so on the other side, where the king is sole party, yet some things there be, that he cannot pardon. As for example; for all common nusances, as for not repairing of bridges, high ways, &c. the suit (for avoiding of multiplicity of suits, which the laws abhorre, and that nulli magis tueri rempublicam creditum est quam regi) is given to the king only, for redresse, and reformation thereof, but the king cannot pardon, or discharge either the nusance, or the suit for the same; for, as Braston saith, Non poterit rex gratiam facere cum injuria et damna allorum. See Glanvill li. 7. cap. 17 vers. sinem.

The customer albeit the bond and surety be made to him for the importing of bullion according to the statute of 14 E. 3. cap. 1. yet cannot he release it, quia pro bono publico. If one be bound in a recognisance, &c. to the king to keep the peace against another by name, and generally all other lieges of the king; in this case, before the peace be broken, the king cannot pardon or release the recognisance, although it be made onely to him, because it is for the benefit and safety of his subjects.

After an action popular be brought, tem pro domino rege, quem pro feipfo, according to any statute, the king cannot discharge but his own part, and cannot discharge the informers part, because by the bringing of the action he hath an interest therein: but before action brought, the king may discharge the whole, (* unlesse it be provided to the contrary by the act) because the informer cannot bring an action or information originally for his part only, but must put

All fuits in the star-chamber, though exhibited by the party, are informations for the king, and the king may pardon them, but after judgement (and dammages, if any be given) and costs taxed, the king cannot pardon them.

A man commits felony, and is attainted thereof, or is abjured for the same, the king pardoneth him the felony without any mention of the attainder, or abjuration, the pardon is void. But if a man be attainted of burglary, and by the generall pardon all felonies, &c. are pardoned (except all burglaries) the attainder and burglary be excepted, as before is faid.

The king pardoneth to A. a felony whereof he standeth indicted, F. N. B. 225. C. or indicted and attainted, &c. and in truth he is not indicted, nor attainted, &c. this is expression falsi, and maketh the pardon void. 9 H. 5. 14, 15. A is outlawed, and the king pardons him the outlawry, and all his goods; it is void for the goods, for he must have a grant

If a man be indicted of felony, and the king reciteth the same, and pardoneth the felony contained in the indictment, and all outlawries thereupon, if any be, this is a good pardon of the outlawry, though it be doubtfully alledged, and the king not certainly informed.

The king may pardon one convict of herefie, or of any other offence punishable by the ecclesiastical law. In all proceedings in the ecclesiastical court ex officio, the king may pardon the offence. The king may also pardon piracy upon the sea; but by what word, and in what manner, see before in the chapter of

All the justices of England being affembled at Serjeants Inne in Fleetstreet, when I served queen Eliz. as her attorney generall, I moved this case unto them. But if the pardon or license had been affirmative and direct without the clause, ut dicitur, it had been a conclusion, and so had the pleading thereof been also. Lastly, it was resolved, that in case of the pardon or license with the clause, ut dicitur; if the party consesse the tenure that plead the same: as to say, bene et verum est, that the land is holden by knights service in capite, and plead the pardon or license, this shall conclude: and some of the barons said, that according to these resolutions it hath been used in the exchequer, and many presidents be there accordingly: and by these resolutions the books abovesaid shall the better be understood.

A man is indicted of trespasse and outlawed at the suit of the king. Rex pardonavit utlegariam in eum promulgar, et quicquid ad eum portinet, and notwithstanding the desendant shall make sine, for it seemeth that these words, quicquid ad eum pertinet, without any re-

We finde also a discharge of further proceeding directed to the judges of the court, &c. Stephen Gravesend bistrop of London was charged with the same offence in parliament, anno 3 E. 3. whence by order of parliament the matter was referred to the kings bench to be tried, where he pleaded not guilty, and after was discharged ut supra, by the same writ. These men (it may be) thought that the taking of the pardon should Paích. 4 E. 3. Coram rege, soc. 53. should be an implyed confession of the fault, and therefore went a new way: but no man that is wife and well advised will refuse God and the kings pardon how often so ever he may have it; for there is no man but offendeth God and the king almost every day, and

If a man be indicted of felony, and found guilty, and being in prison the king may under the great seale reciting the offence, &c. retain him to serve in his wars on this fide or beyond the seas: this Pasch. 22 E. 3. charter he may plead, and the court ought to allow it. As for example: Quidam indictatus de felonia, et inde culp. dicit quòd rex ram rege. eum conduxit, et inde producit cartam, quod rex eum conduxit in vasc. in exercitu, et dicta carta allocata fuit per curiam. But a protection lyeth not in that case: because a protection is a formed writ, and cannot have such a recitall of the truth of the case: and a writs of protection lye not in case of felony, nor is it to be allowed to any that is prisoner to the court.

One indicted of felony, without any learned councell, shewed forth a charter of pardon which was discordant to the indictment, and also to his name; and because the court perceived that it was the kings meaning he should be pardoned, he was remanded to get

When the parties defendants appeared to the court to be poore, and were to be amerced or fined, the entry of ancient time was, perdonantur per justic' quia pauperes.

• It is observed that repeals by parliament of pardons lawfully and duly obtained, have been feeds of great discontentment, and

f Generall pardons have been often granted at the petition of the commons, for they know best, where the shooe wringeth them, and wherein, and how they are to be eased.

So odious was perjury, that by the law of God it was not to be pardoned: Non misereberis ejus, Gc.

OF RESTITUTIONS.

HERE is another work of grace and mercy, that is, when apy man or woman being attainted of high treason, petit treason, or felony, (whereby the blood is corrupted, &c.) or his or her heir is restored.

And feeing we have formerly spoken how far, and to what in- See the first part tent in those cases, the king of his grace may by his charter of of the Inflitutes, pardon reftore the party: we shall now treat of the restitution of the delinquent, or of his or her heirs by parliament. Of restitutions by parliament some be in blood only, (that is to make his resort as heir in blood to the party attainted and other his ancestors, and not to any dignity, inheritance of lands, &c.) and this is a restitution secundam quid, or in part. And some be generall restitutions, to blood, honours, dignities, inheritance, and all that was lost by the attainder: and that is restitutio in integrum, with an addition sometimes, that it shall be lawfull for the party restored and his heirs, to enter, &c. Of the first you may reade in Dier 10 Eliz. fo. 274. in Petition: and Rot. Par. 23 Eliz. of the earl of Arundel, &c. Of the second you may reade 15 E. 3. tit. And the reason wherefore the king may by his charter pardon the execution, and restore the party or his heirs to the lands forfeited by the attainder, and remaining in the crown is, for that no person hath thereby any prejudice; but to make * restitution of his blood he cannot do it, but by act of parliament, because it

In cartis benigna facienda est interpretatio, in fundationibus domuum religiofarum, bospitalium, et aliorum operum charitatis benignior, iu testamentis magis benigna, in restitutionibus benignissima. * For it is holden in our books, that in restitutions the king himself hath no favour, nor his prerogative any exemption, but the party restored is favoured.

king H. 3. was intitled, &c. to the lands of William de Albo Monasterio by his attainder, and granted the same to Robert de Mares and his heirs, donce eas reiddiderit rectis haredibus per voluntatem suam, vel per pacem. And albeit at the making of this grant William de Albo Monasterio (being dead) could have in respect of the attainder and corruption of blood no right heir; yet because it was to make restitution, it had a most benigne interpretation.

e William Lo. Zouche of Mortimer and Flianor his wife prayed to be restored to their land of Glannor and Morgannon in Wales, the mannor of Haveley in the county of Worcester, the mannor of Teukesbury in the county of Glocester, being the inheritance of the said Elianor: who by the extort means of Roger late earle of March, were inforced to passe the same to the king by sine, in consideration of ten thousand pounds the king restored them thereto as in their former estate.

* Henry Courtney marquisse of Exeter and earl of Devon, having issue Edward Courtney, his only sonne, was attainted of high treason by the course of the common law in anno 31 H. 8. and in the same year was also attainted by act of parliament. Queen Mary by her letters patents bearing date 18th Sept. anno 1. regni su granted the mannors of P and O, &c. in the county of Devon, &c. to the faid Edward Courtney and his heirs: and afterwards & Octobris in the same year, at a parliament then holden, the said Edward and his heires were from thenceforth by authority of that act restored and inabled only in blood, as well as sonne and heir of the said lord marquisse his father, as to all and every other collaterall and lineall ancestor and ancestors of the said Edward. And that the severall attainders against the said lord marquisse for the attainder of the faid lord marquisse be not in any wise prejudiciall or hurtfull to the faid Edward or his heirs for the corruption of the blood only of the faid Edward, but that the severall attainders and either of them be against him and his heirs for the corruption of blood only, utterly void. Provided always that the faid act, ne any thing therein contained, should not in any wife extend to give any benefit or advantage to the faid Edward, ne to his heirs, to demand, claime, or challenge any honors, castles, &c. ne any other hereditaments whatsoever whereunto H. 8. and E. 6. or either of them was entituled, or ought to have and enjoy by reason of the said several attainders of the faid late lord marquisse, or of either of them. Edward Courtney died seised of the said mannors without issue, 18 Septemb. annis 3 and 4 Ph. & Mar. and Reinold Mohun, Alexander Arundell, John Vinian the younger, John Trelawny Esq. Mic. 35 & 36 El. and Margaret Buller widow, were his collateral coufins and heirs: and whether the faid restitution extended to the heirs collaterall of the faid Edward, was by the queens commandment referred to the confideration of the two chief justices Popham and Anderson, Peryam chief baron, and to Egerton attorny, and to the folicitor generall. And it was refolved, that by reason of the attainder of the lord marquisse, if there had been no act of restitution, the heirs collaterall of the said Edward could not have inherited to the said Edward, in respect of the corruption of the blood wrought by the faid attainder only: hereupon it was objected, that when it was enacted by the faid act of restitution, that the said Edward and his heirs should be restored and inabled in blood only as sonne and heir to his faid father, as all his ancestors lineall and collaterall, that the faid restitution extended only to his heirs lineall, for other heirs he could not have as long as the faid attainders of the marquisse stood in force, and the words of the act of restitution to Edward and his heirs, might be fatisfied with the heirs lineall. And upon due consideration had of the case, it was (una voce) resolved by them all, that corruption of blood is a distinct penalty inslicted by law; and that the faid act of restitution did extend to the heirs collaterall of the said Edward, (having no heirs lineall) as to the cleering and restoring of the blood, and avoiding of the corruption thereof: and that it had been sufficient if the act had restored and enabled him in blood only as heir to his father, thereby he and his heirs, as well collaterall as lineall, might make their descent or refort from the marquisse (for there was the stop and corruption) and from all other the ancestors of the said Edward, lineall or collaterall, and ex abundanti the other clause also is added, for the more manifestation hereof.

cannot give restitution or possession, where the party indicted hath been in quiet possession by the space of three whole years. Notes. this act of 21 Jac. extends not to a garden in foccage, nor to a garden or keeper of a park: neither (as some hold) doth it extend to him, that by a last will hath an interest in lands or tenements untill debts and legacies be paid, because certain tenants be particularly nominated, and this is casus omissus. But this being a beneficiall law to restore him, that right hath, to his possession of lands, &c. whereof he was wrongfully by force dispossest, or by force withholden, &c. and being in like case in equal mischief, others do hold, that this act extendeth to this case of such a devisce, &c. and so it is for a tenant for a year, or for an halfe, or three quarters of a year.

THE EPILOGUE.

THUS have we by the great goodnesse of Almighty God, per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum, brought this work concerning high treason, and other pleas of the crowne, or criminall causes, and of pardons, and restitutions, to a conclusion: wherein (as we are verily perswaded) we have made it apparent from the lively voice of the lawes themselves, that no country in the Christian world have in criminall cases, of highest nature, laws of fuch expresse and defined certainty, and so equal between the king and all his subjects, as this famous kingdome of England hath, being rightly understood, and duly executed, to the great honour of the king, and of the laws, and the happy safety of all his loving and lovall fubjects.

Now seeing justitia est duplex, viz. severe puniens, et vere præveniens : Justice divided. that is, justice severely punishing, whereof we have spoken, and truly preventing, or preventing justice, (quæ adhuc defideratur) for we have spoken onely of the former; wee will therefore at this place (for a conclusion) point at the other with a direction how it may be effected.

True it is, that we have found by wofull experience, that it is not frequent and often punishment that doth prevent like offences. Melior est enim institua vere praveniens, quam severe puniens, agreeing with the rule of the physician for the safety of the body, Prastat cautela, quam medela: and it is a certain rule, that Videbis ea fape committi quæ sæpe vindicantur; those offences are often committed, that are often punished: for the frequency of the punishment makes it so familiar as it is not feared. For example, what a lamentable case it is so see so many Christian men and women strangled on that curfed tree of the gallows, infomuch as if in a large field a man might see together all the Christians, that but in one year, throughout England, come to that untimely and ignominious death, if there were any spark of grace, or charity in him, it would make his heart to bleed for pity and compassion. (But here I leave to divines to inform the inward man, who being well informed, verbo informante, the outward man will be the easilier reformed, virga reformante.)

This preventing justice consisteth in three things. First, in the good education of youth, and that both by good instruction of them in the grounds of the true religion of Almighty God, and by learning some knowledge or trade in their tender years, so as there should not be an idle person, or a * begger, but that every childe, male or female, whose parents are poor, might at the age of seaven years earn their own living: for ars fit quod à teneris primum conjungitur annis: and this, for the time to come, would undoubtedly by preventing justice avoid idlenesse in all, (one of the foul and fatall channels that lead into mare mortuum) and by honest trades cause them to become good members in the common-wealth.

Secondly, in the execution of good laws: True it is that there be good laws already to punish idlenesse, but none of sufficient force or effect to fet youth, or the idle on work.

Thirdly, that forafmuch as many doe offend in hope of pardon, that pardons be very rarely granted, for the reasons in the chapter of pardons expressed.

But the consideration of this preventing justice were worthy of the wisdome of a parliament, and in the mean time expert and wise men to make preparation for the same, as the text saith, ut benedicat Blessed shall he be that layeth the first stone of this eis dominus. building, more bleffed that proceeds in it, most of all that finisheth it, to the glory of God, and the honour of our king and nation.
